INTRODUCTION

AT the date when the priory of St. Bees was founded the district in which it is situated was well organised according to Norman ideas in the ecclesiastical as well as in the civil sphere. The whole of the western portion of the modern county of Cumberland from the Wampool not far from Carlisle to the Duddon on the extreme south-west was composed of two great fiefs, the barony of Allerdale on the north of the Derwent in possession of Waldeve son of Earl Gospatric, and the barony of Coupland, sometimes called the barony of Egremont from the name of the baronial seat, on the south of the Derwent in possession of William Meschin, both fiefs being held by grant of Henry I. Though these two fiefs lay in different fiscal areas, they were under the same ecclesiastical government, both being in the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of York before the formation of the see of Carlisle in 1133.

The foundation of a religious house by William Meschin in his fief of Coupland is not surprising, for his brother Ranulf Meschin, lord of Cumberland, that is, of the old land of Carlisle, had previously established a similar institution at Wetheral not many miles to the north-east of Egremont. There is this difference, however, between the two foundations, if regard be had to the evidences which have survived. Ranulf's scheme was launched with much advertisement: it took place nearer the time of the Norman annexation of the district when the glory of the new masters had to be displayed: and a brilliant gathering of notabilities was associated with the venture. Henry I. took an interest in the work and gave it his patronage. Some ten or fifteen years afterwards when William Meschin followed his brother's example by founding a religious house on the western coast, there is no mention of royal patronage and no display at the initiation of the work. The lord of Coupland was satisfied with inviting his feudal dependents to assist him. Since the priory of Wetheral came into being, many things had happened in that portion of ancient Cumbria. Ranulf Meschin had left the district and no local potentate had been appointed to succeed him. The great province lately annexed to the English Crown had settled down as an integral portion of the English kingdom. The remote lordship of Coupland shared only indirectly with the political movements on the north of the Derwent. The sympathies of the inhabitants appear to have been more English than Scottish, so far as political influences moved them at all. When the scheme of founding St. Bees was started, no territorial owners assisted except those who held lands in the fief of the founder. All the early grants are confined to the barony of Coupland.

The earliest charters in connexion with the foundation show that the feudal system had a firm hold in the district. William Meschin endowed the new institution with ploughlands : gave the manerium, which William Bowman had, free of terrene service : and invited the knights of his fee to supplement his liberality by gifts of their own lands.¹ The nexus between lord and tenants was distinctly feudal. The witnesses of the earliest charter included Waldeve, lord of the neighbouring fee of Allerdale, who was also an extensive owner of land in Coupland, Reiner lord of Rotington, Godard lord of Millom, and Ketel lord of Workington, all of whom were benefactors of the priory at the outset. William son of Gilbert of Lancaster was also associated with the origination of the scheme by the gift of Preston near Whitehaven.¹ No charter of Henry I. has been preserved in the Register and no evidence has been discovered to show that he had a hand in the foundation. At a later date King Stephen² gave a charter, a copy of which was not in the muniment room of St. Bees when the Register was compiled, and during the Scottish occupation King David I. confirmed a grant made some years previously in the lordship of Millom.³ It would appear, therefore, that royal patronage only came when the scheme was well on its way to completion. At its origination the institution was dependent for its success on the founder and his feudatories.

The secret influences behind the foundation of St. Bees may be conjectured by a perusal of the early charters. The founder makes special mention of his wife Cicely and of Archbishop Thurstin by whose counsel the priory was bestowed on the monks of St. Mary's, York. A few years previously a similar institution had been founded by William and Cicely at Emmesey in Cicely's fee of Skipton in Craven, in which the Archbishop took a prominent part.⁴ The same three persons are now working on a kindred project at St. Bees. Archbishop Thurstin was present in person with William his archdeacon and Aufred and Richard his chaplains. The chaplain of the founder, with other ecclesiastical persons, is also mentioned. The dedication day of the priory church was a notable occasion in Coupland. In presence of the primate, Godard lord of Millom came forward and bestowed two churches of his fee with their parsonage houses, their whole parishes and tithes for the special purpose of providing lights in the priory church.⁵ This benefaction has great interest inasmuch as it is witnessed, like the early charters of the founder, by the principal persons, lay and ecclesiastical, who were assembled for the dedication. The purpose of the Archbishop's visit was more than functional: the legal aspects of the foundation were transacted in his presence. The new house was constituted as a cell of St. Mary's, York, the greatest Benedictine house in the northern province, the abbot and chapter of which undertook to put in it for the service of God a prior and six monks at least under their obedience.¹

The place selected by William Meschin for the new priory was determined more perhaps by local sentiment than by its nearness to his baronial seat of Egremont. From the phraseology of the early grants it seems plain that a parish church, entitled in the name of S. Bega, existed at Kirkeby for the use of the inhabitants before the priory church was built. The bounds of its parish were declared by trustworthy men and set out as the ambit of the new institution. The parish of Kirkeby embraced a strip of seaboard extending from Whitehaven on the north to the mouth of the Ehen on the south. Subsequent additions by successive grants, like the addition of Ennerdale² by Ranulf Meschin son of the founder, contributed to make the parish of St. Bees one of the most extensive ecclesiastical areas in the modern county of Cumberland. Though the original parish is called Kirkeby in the earliest charters, there is little doubt that the later name of Kirkebybecoc, or church town of Bega, was in familiar use when the parish church was raised to the dignity of a conventual church. One of the witnesses of the earliest charter is named Coremac Gille becoc, Coremac servant of Bega, which is evidence enough that the name of the saint was connected with the district before the foundation of the priory. In later charters the full name of Kirkebybecoc or its variants is quite common. It is the form found in the confirmation charter¹ of Henry II. which was issued before 1170 and also in that² of Richard I. To the local veneration of the saint may be ascribed the selection of the site on the coast which tradition had associated with her name.

It is not possible to fix the exact date of the foundation, but there are good reasons for believing that it took place about 1125. In the early charters it is assumed that Queen Maud and Prince William were dead, and therefore the grants must have been made after 1120, but Henry I. was alive and therefore before 1135. These dates give the extreme limits with tolerable certainty. If it be true that the abbey of Calder was founded in 1134, for which date there is early authority,³ it is clear that Ranulf Meschin the founder had succeeded to the barony of Coupland after the death of William his father. A considerable time must have elapsed between the foundation of two religious houses in the same lordship by father and son. Nine years do not seem a long period to place between them. Enterprises of this kind were not completed in a day or a year.

The founder of the priory increased his benefactions at the dedication of the priory church and one of his tenants did likewise in the presence of Archbishop Thurstin on the day of the dedication of the church of S. Bega.⁴ Nowhere has evidence been found to identify the day of dedication with the feast of S. Bega, but the identification is probable. It has no other rival except perhaps the feast of the Assumption⁵ which is sometimes mentioned in connexion with the endowments. The date of the feast of S. Bega, as observed in different places, varied very much. In this matter local custom is our safest guide. On what day did the monks of St. Bees observe it? There is some reason to believe that 31 October was the day of the feast in Coupland. It was recognised as a common term for the payment of rents and the discharge of obligations¹ like the feast of St. Martin in winter elsewhere. The feast must have fallen late in the autumn as seems to be implied by the stipulation made in a charter of Alan son of Richard de Coupland that a rent should be paid eight days before the feast of S. Bega or at any time between that date and Candlemas.² The author of the legendary Life, who must have been familiar with the day observed at St. Bees, seems to favour 31 October. It was on that day that he took up his pen to write the life of the saint and he closed his narrative on the day of her death (dies depositionis sue) which happened, he says, on the day before the kalends of November.³ This is the day calendared in the Aberdeen Breviary.

The patronage of the priory was vested in the founder and his successors in title as lords of Egremont till the dissolution of the house. In the feudal "extents" of that barony the advowson of the cell or priory of St. Bees always obtains a place. In 1322, after the death of Thomas de Multon, when a schedule of his knight's fees and advowsons was made that dower might be assigned to Eleanor his widow, the advowsons of the priory of St. Bees, the abbey of Calder and the church of Gosford were enumerated among his possessions in Egremont.⁴ The advowson of a religious house was in this respect like that of a parish church: it descended to heirs and was partible like real property. For instance, when John de Multon of Egremont died in 1334 and his possessions were divided between his three sisters, a third part of the cell of St. Bees and a third part of the abbey of Calder were assigned as the pourparty of each of them.¹ At that date the value of the revenues of St. Bees was appraised at 200 marks yearly.² What was the legal power of a lay patron over a religious house? When Thomas de Multon of Gillesland took forcible possession of the priory of Lanercost in 1261, the Bishop of Carlisle described his interference as laicalis insolentia and invoked the power of the Crown to expel him. Another lord of Gillesland reprimanded the prior of that house in 1524 for occupying himself too much with the temporal concerns of his office to the neglect of its more serious duties.³ It was laid down elsewhere in 1318, when the power of a patron over a priory was in dispute, that the patron, if he were of full age, ought not to receive any issues of the priory in time of vacancy, nor had his ancestors been accustomed to receive them, nor in any way to interfere with the priory, except to have a man within the priory during the vacancy, carrying a rod in his hand on behalf of the lord to guard the priory from damage.⁴ So far as we know the relations between the castle of Egremont and the priory of St. Bees were friendly. It is probable that many of the lords were buried like Richard de Lucy⁵ in the priory church. The stories related by the author of the *Miracles of S. Bega*⁶ about the unfriendliness of Ranulf Meschin and Godard the knight, his steward and castellan, are contradicted by charters given by them and recorded in the Register.

Little may be said about the great bulk of the charters issued during the process of endowment. The example set at the foundation was largely followed throughout the history of the priory. Most of the endowments were situated in Coupland and were given by local men. Several families in successive generations are conspicuous for their liberality to the institution and it is this feature that makes a collection of their charters so invaluable for the territorial history of the district. The lords of the great fiefs, Egremont, Cockermouth, Allerdale, Millom and Workington, of course, predominate, but within these feudal areas there was a multitude of owners of smaller tenements, lords and tenants of the manors, who figure prominently in the charters as donors and witnesses. As the influence of the priory was confined to so small an area, one charter serves as illustration of another, the donor of one being often found as a witness to the next in order. The whole collection makes a family group in which there is little variety of feature except what is produced by time. For this reason the Register may be regarded for the most part as its own interpreter. The history of manors, churches and families in this portion of Cumberland has been much neglected in the past, but it is hoped that the documents in this collection, when taken with the volumes of the public records now so easily accessible, will contribute something to the enlargement of our knowledge.

The endowments, however, were not altogether given by the feudatories of Coupland: some came from magnates who had only an indirect interest in the district. These perhaps call for a more extended notice than the benefactors at home. It was natural that after the Scottish occupation a close connexion should continue between Cumberland and the northern kingdom. So far as the religious houses are concerned, the intercommunication was more marked with Galloway and Annandale. It must have been while David reigned in Carlisle that Uctred son of Fergus, lord of Galloway, married Gunnild¹ daughter of Waldeve lord of Allerdale. Uctred and his son Roland and Alan son of Roland were benefactors of the monastery of Holmcultram.² During the latter part of the twelfth century, while the see of Carlisle was vacant, Bishop Christian of Whithern, a bishopric said to have been revived by Fergus, assisted the local authorities in the administration of the diocese,³ and when he died⁴ in

UCTREDUS filius Fergus et Gunnild filia Waldef sponsa ipsius, omnibus sancte matris ecclesie filiis, salutem. Sciant tam posterius quam presentes nos, consensu Lochlan heredis nostri, dedisse et hac karta nostra confirmasse ecclesiam de Torpennoth, cum terra et omnibus rectitudinibus ad eandem ecclesiam iuste pertinentibus, ecclesie Sancte Crucis de castello puellarum et canonicis ibidem deo servientibus in perpetuam elemosinam pro redemptione anime Waldevi et Fergus et omnium antecessorum nostrorum. Quare firmiter volumus ut idem canonici ecclesiam prenominatam habeant et possideant ita libere et quiete sicut aliqua ecclesia in toto episcopatu Karloliensi liberius tenetur et possidetur. Hiis testibus Galfrido abbate de Dunfermelin, Osberto abbate de Jedduurde, Aluredo abbate de Striuelin, Gillemure mac blancard, Gillemure albanach, Gilleberto mac gillefin, Serlone, Bernardo, Ricardo berthaburgensibus.

This charter (Liber Cartarum S. Crucis, pp. 19-20, Bann. Club) may be dated about 1163. It presupposes the death of Fergus, father of the grantor, which took place on 12 May 1161 (Chron. S. Crucis, p. 33, Bann. Club). As Uctred son of Fergus was murdered by Malcolm his nephew in 1174 and as Osbert the first abbot of Jedburgh, one of the witnesses, died in the same year, the date of the charter must lie between 1161 and 1174. But the exact year is probably 1163 when Uctred the grantor and Isaac de Torpennoc had pleas and agreements before the King's justice in Cumberland (Pipe Rolls, p. 5, ed. Hinde).

1186 he was buried in the abbey of Holmcultram, in which house he was afterwards regarded as a saint.¹ Roland son of Uctred, the acer atque industrius adolescens who resented his father's murder in 1174 and who died² in 1200, enfeoffed Thomas son of Gospatric, lord of Workington, with the lordship of Culwen in Galloway.³ In the light of such incidents, as illustrative of mutual intercourse, it need cause no wonder that Alan son of Roland, lord of Galloway and constable of Scotland, should have given a yearly rent charge of one mark to the monks of St. Bees.⁴

The priory had a rent issuing from the mill of Kirkandres, of the gift of Bernard de Ryppelay and Margaret his wife, which appears to belong to Galloway. There is no evidence that Bernard or his wife had any interest in either of the places of this name in Cumberland. Three at least of the witnesses, Roesya de Lascy, Patrick son of Thomas, and John de Suthak, had connexions with Galloway, the first-named being the widow⁵ of Alan son of Roland lord of the district who died in 1234. Bernard of Ripley was a Yorkshire squire,¹ whose floruit extended from 1200 to 1250, the latter part of his life being spent in Scotland. He was at the court of King Alexander at Forfar in 1246 and at Stirling² in 1249. The compiler of the Register was in doubt about the geography of the place, but it is almost certain that it was the Kirkandrews on Wigtown Bay, now merged in the parish of Borgue, to the south-west of Kirkcudbright, near to which there is a Netherhall mentioned in the marginal note³ to Bernard's charter in the Register. Other deeds⁴ in the collection, some of which are traceable to the influence of the house of Workington, show that the priory had at one time considerable property on the south coast of Scotland.

⁵ As the name of Alan's second wife is not generally known, a few facts about her may be given. In 1217 Walter de Lascy received in ward his niece, Roseia, daughter of Hugh de Lascy his brother (Pat. Rolls, 1216-25, p. 49): in 1229 Alan went to Ireland and married the daughter of Hugh de Lascy (Chron. de Lanercost, p. 40): in 1236, two years after Alan's death, Hugh de Lascy, whose daughter was Alan's widow, as M. Paris relates (Chron. Majora, iii. 364-6), created an insurrection in Galloway about the succession to Alan's estates: and in 1237 a protection without term was granted to Roesia, late the wife of Alan de Galweya (Cal. of Pat., 1232-47, p. 194). Alan's first wife, to whom he was married in 1209, was a daughter of Earl David, brother of King William (Chron. de Mailros, p. 108).

The Irish charters preserved on the Cotton Roll⁵ introduce to the history of Cumberland a famous soldier of fortune, John de Curci, the conqueror of Ulster, whose exploits fill a prominent page in the Anglo-Norman subjugation of Ireland. Gerald, the Welsh archdeacon,⁶ in a curious picture of his character, describes him as of fair complexion, tall with muscular limbs, powerfully made and of great daring, a brave soldier from his youth : in times of peace he was upright and modest, paying due reverence to the church and exemplary in his devotions and attendance at holy worship. Though he accuses him of parsimony, it cannot be said that such a quality was observable in his dealings with the church. The four monasteries that he founded in Ulster were affiliated to religious houses in the present diocese of Carlisle. The priory of St. Thomas the martyr at Tiberglorie in the suburb of Downpatrick was founded by him and made a cell of St. Mary's, Carlisle, out of respect to the canons there¹: Grey Abbey (de Jugo Dei) on Strangford Lough, where his wife was buried, was affiliated to the abbey of Holmcultram²: the abbey of Ines or Inch in the same vicinity was made a dependent of Furness in Lancashire³:

¹The grant of John de Curceio to the canons of Carlisle was recited and confirmed by Edward II. on 2 November 1318 (Pat. R., 12 Edw. II. pt. 1, m. 19: Dugdale, Mon., vi. 1146-7). On the redistribution of the conventual possessions between the priory and the bishopric in 1249, the prioratus Hibernensis was awarded to the canons (V. C. H. Cumberland, ii. 126). In 1319 a safe conduct was granted to Gilbert de Morlund, canon of the priory of Carlisle, going to the cell of St. Thomas the martyr in Dune on the business of the house there, at which date Alan was prior of Carlisle (Cal. of Pat., 1317-21, p. 270). Dr. Reeves says that nothing more is known of its site than what the founder stated in his charter, but it was probably at the north-east end of Downpatrick (Antiq. of Down, p. 231).

²It is stated in the Chronicle of Man, under date 1204, that John de Cursi had in marriage a daughter of Godred, King of Man, named Affreca, who founded the abbey of St. Mary de Jugo Dei where she was buried. In 1222 Ralf, abbot of the daughter house, succeeded to Holmcultram on the cession of Abbot Adam, and in 1237 Abbot John succeeded on the death of Abbot Gilbert at Canterbury on his way home from attendance at a general chapter of his order (Chron. de Mailros, pp. 140, 148, Bann. Club). About 1840 a leaden seal of Bishop Ralf de Ireton of Carlisle (1280-92) was found among the rubbish in the ruins of this abbey.

³On 30 May 1180 John de Curci founded the abbey of Ynes in the island of Ynescusere, for so was it then called, as a daughter house of Furness, and land was given to the monks whereon to erect their buildings (Coucher of Furness, pp. 12-13, Cheetham Soc.). Bishop Malachy of Down confirmed to Abbot Adam and the monks of St. Mary the insulam Uenseri for the purpose of building an abbey there according to the terms of the charter of John de Curci (D. of L. Charters, Box A, No. 310). Dr. Reeves suggests that Jocelyn, the monk of Furness, went over to Inch on the affiliation of that cell to his abbey and there wrote the life of and the priory which he founded on the island of Neddrum in Strangford Lough in 1178, perhaps the earliest of his foundations in Ireland, he gave to the monks of St. Bees. In this latter foundation he was assisted by his brother¹ Jordan de Curci and others. Such a record of benefactions is sufficiently remarkable to imply some predilection in favour of the north-western corner of England. But there is more : he must have had some personal influence in Cumberland. In 1207 Richard son of Truite, a well-known local notability, was indebted to the Crown in twenty marks for having his land in the bailiwick of the sheriff of Cumberland, of which he had been dispossessed by the King's order because he went into Ireland with John de Curci.² As Richard is one of the witnesses to John's charter of foundation of Neddrum, the forfeiture could not have taken place at so early a date. It arose probably from the fact that he was associated with John de Curci when he was in rebellion against King John in 1205.

From these repeated acts it may be reasonably inferred that John de Curci, the benefactor of St. Bees, was by descent connected with Cumberland. Though his wife Affreca, daughter of King Godred of Man, is said to have founded Grey Abbey and subjected it to Holmcultram, all the other Irish affiliations can scarcely be ascribed to the same influence. A family connexion with the county would seem to be the right solution. In none of his charters does John de Curci make allusion to his family relationships. His parentage, according to a good authority,¹ is a problem as yet unsolved, but he was certainly one of the well-known house of that name in Oxfordshire and Somerset. If that be the case he was a descendant of William Meschin,² lord of Coupland and founder of St. Bees. On this supposition his dealings with Cumberland are easily understood. In the early part of the twelfth century William Meschin and his brother Ranulf were lords of the whole district now known as the county of Cumberland together with the eastern half of modern Westmorland. The exact place, however, of John de Curci among the descendants of William Meschin has not been clearly ascertained, but it is probable that he was the grandson of Avicia de Romelli, his daughter. In any case there is no doubt of his family descent.

St. Patrick which he completed in 1183 (Antiquities of Down, p. 233).

² Rot. de Oblat. (Rec. Com.), pp. 376-7: Pipe Rolls of Cumb. (ed. Hinde), p. 126.

The political history of the Isle of Man receives illustration in this Register at some important epochs. There are charters of Kings Godred, Reginald and Olave³ which account for the origin of the property of the priory in the

² In the carta of 1166 for Somerset William de Curci states that he holds the barony which his father and grandfather had held and also a portion of the barony of William Meschin ex parte matris sue: again in the carta of Robert de Gant for Yorkshire at the same date, Avicia mother of William de Curci is returned as holding two knight's fees (Liber Rubeus, R. S., pp. 224-5, 433). William de Curci confirmed to the nuns of Arthington in the West Riding of Yorkshire the gift which Avicia de Rumelli his mother made to them (Dugdale, Mon., iv. 520). Avicia would, therefore, appear to be a daughter of William Meschin and Cicely de Rumelli. John de Curci and Jordan de Curci are witnesses of a charter of William de Curci to the monks of St. Andrew of Stoke for the souls of his grandfather William de Curci and his father William (Hist. MSS. Com. Rep. ix. pt. i. App. 353b). It can scarcely be doubted that the conqueror of Ulster belonged to the house of William Meschin. John de Curci died about 1219, for in that year dower out of his Irish estates was granted to Affreca his widow (Rot. Litt. Claus., i. 401b).

island. But it will be seen from the charter of King Godred that a previous grant had been made to the monks of St. Bees, of which no record has been preserved. By virtue of these possessions, small though they were, the prior of St. Bees was a spiritual baron of that kingdom. There were eight of these barons and in process of time they had exercised an exceptional influence in the affairs of the island. When Sir John Stanley undertook to restrain their power, regulations were made to equalize matters between the church and the state. In 1422 it was resolved at a Tynwald Court that the spiritual barons should do fealty to him and prove their titles to their lands in accordance with the legislation which was made a few years before. The Bishop of Man, the abbot of Rushen and the prioress of Douglas came, but "the prior of Whithorne in Galloway, the abbot of Furnace, the abbot of Bangor, the abbot of Saball, and the prior of St. Beade in Copeland were called in and came not: therefore they were deemed by the Deemsters that they should come in their proper persons within forty days, and if they came not, then to loose all their temporalities, to be ceised into the lord's hands in the same Court."¹ No mention is made of the Manx possessions of St. Bees in any of the surveys of the sixteenth century,² the English Act for the suppression of the monasteries not extending to the Isle of Man. The seizure was made by a mere arbitrary act on behalf of the Crown. Soon after 1540 the properties of the extra-insular houses are found in private hands. The tenure of the barony of St. Bees is still known in the island.³

² The rents of the abbey of Furness in Man are enumerated among the possessions of that house in the Valor Ecclesiasticus (v. 270) of 1535.

³ A. W. Moore, op. cit. pp. 351, 872.

The acquisition of the island by Scotland, after the death of King Magnus in 1265, is ascribed by the chronicles¹ to a treaty between the kings of Norway and Scotland in the following year, whereby Alexander III. agreed to pay an indemnity for the cession of Man. This arrangement could scarcely be effectual in view of the traditional designs of the English king. In the disturbed condition of the island Henry III. extended his protection to the Manx sovereign, King Reginald doing homage and service² in 1218 and 1219. It was by the power of King Henry that the heir to the throne of Man and the Isles went to Norway in 1253: the same king decorated King Magnus with the belt of knighthood in 1256 and shielded him against the murderers of his brother, King Reginald. On both occasions a request was sent to King Alexander of Scotland to further these projects.³ In these circumstances it is difficult to believe that the treaty of 1266 should have been accepted without demur. As a matter of fact the Scottish settlement was resisted from the outset. In 1267 King Alexander was obliged to quell a rebellion in the island, and Henry III. advised him not to go there till the times were more propitious because "fortune was not favourable to his ancestors⁴ when they went there some time ago." There was another rebellion in 1275 which resulted in the complete defeat of the Manx at Ronaldsway near Castletown, the wretched people turning their backs and perishing miserably.⁵

In this Register¹ there is independent corroboration of the insecurity of King Alexander's hold on the island after the treaty of 1266. It is stated in the depositions de quo warranto, taken at the church of St. Leu in Russchin on 16 January, 1302, before the justices and coroners of Man, while Bishop Bek of Durham was lord of the island, that Alexander late King of Scotland, qui Insulam de Manne per ensem conquestabatur, had enfeoffed the monks with the tenements in dispute and that the matter had been already determined by writ of the said Alexander before Maurice Acarsan,² the justice appointed for that purpose. From this statement it would appear that the feature of the Scottish acquisition of the Isle of Man at this period which dwelt in the minds of the English witnesses was one not of right but of might : that the Scottish title was per ensem, not per compositionem according to the Chronicle of Melrose nor per conventionem as stated in the Chronicle of Lanercost. There is little doubt that the battle of Ronaldsway was the determining factor of King Alexander's hegemony in the island.

Some other points in the Manx deeds may be mentioned. It is not known by what title Bishop Bek of Durham exercised the lordship of Man or at what date he was appointed, but it is certain that he held that position³ so early as 1298. In the Register there is a deed⁴ issued by him, dated 19 June 1301, and another⁵ dated 25 July

² This officer may be identified with the "Mauricius Okarefair" appointed by King Alexander as Bailiff of Man. The Chronicle of Lanercost (p. 64) gives a list of the bailiffs appointed by that king, viz., Godred MacMares, the first : after him, Alan son of the Count : then Maurice Okarefair : and lastly Reginald the king's chaplain. This order suits the requirements of the document in the Register of St. Bees.

1307: his lordship of Man is mentioned in a third¹ dated 7 February 1302. There is little doubt that he held office during the intervening period. Apparently King Edward was unaware of the Bishop's title to the island, for on 28 June, 1307, he issued a mandate, after scrutiny of the evidences, to Bishop Bek, who then held the island ut dicitur, to come before him and show cause why it should not be taken into the king's hand.² The Bishop, however, continued in office till his death in 1311. Thomas Randolph earl of Moray, lord of Wales, Annandale and Man, is represented by two deeds in the Register,³ the latter of which is dated on 2 May, 1329. Though he had used the style of lord of Man for several years before, his patent⁴ from King Robert, if genuine, shows that he was officially appointed on 20 December 1324. The Scottish suzerainty over the island before the treaty of 1328 meant very little, however highly the Scottish deputies regarded their office.

The Chronicon Cumbrie, a full text of which is recorded in the Register,⁵ has had varying fortunes in the estimation of local historians. In the early county histories it forms the basis from which the manorial history of a large portion of Cumberland takes its start. The authority of the compilation had been accepted without question. In recent years, however, faith in its historical value has undergone an eclipse. In 1847 the way was prepared by an onslaught upon it by a scholar⁶ who had not thoroughly sifted its contents. Others soon joined in the chorus of depreciation. From being regarded as an authoritative document it declined to the level of a monkish legend. Some years ago a caveat was entered by the present writer against indiscriminate denunciation of the document and an effort was made to explain its origin.¹ Further study tends to confirm the account there given. The compilation is nothing more or less than a lawyer's brief in which the claimants to the Honor of Cockermouth in 1316 traced the history of the baronies of Allerdale and Coupland, with their constituent manors, in order to establish their title to these estates. Other documents,² produced at different stages of the great lawsuit, belong to the same category. None of these compilations have equal authority with the feudal inquest³ of 1212 chiefly for the reason that their scope extends over a longer period. The jurors of the great inquest had only to account for a century's history, or perhaps less, and the tenants had no difficulty in producing evidence for the services imposed at the first enfeoffment. It was different with the task of the lawyers in 1316 and previous years: an additional century had elapsed and opportunities for collecting evidence were restricted to fewer sources.

What historical value, then, should there be acknowledged to these documents? A middle course between the two extremes of absolute authority and absolute worthlessness would seem to suit the circumstances of their origin. Documents like these in history correspond to what Francis Bacon calls clandestine instances in science: they exhibit history in its least intensity, that is, in a rudimentary state. There can be no doubt that they are useful helps in tracing the manorial history of the district to which they apply. Errors there are, many of them, but they are chiefly in the department of genealogy, or of history that lay outside the evidences used by the compilers. The body of the compilation was undoubtedly built up by the evidence of charters at that time in existence. It is stated, for instance, in the Chronicon Cumbrie that Alan son of Waldeve gave Brackenthwaite to Waldeve son of Dolfin: the futility of denying the statement is demonstrated by the discovery of a copy of the actual charter¹ of enfeoffment. Though the territorial settlement of these baronies took place before the date to which present evidence reaches, there are indications in subsequent history which tend to establish many of the infeudations as set out in these documents. It was unlikely that claimants to such extensive possessions should offer clumsy concoctions to the criticisms of the King's attorney.

¹ V. C. H. Cumberland, i. 297-8.

Another class of what may be described as clandestine documents is often found in connexion with religious houses, the trustworthiness of which as historical evidence is not merely suspicious but manifestly indefensible. But it does not follow that there was always intentional fraud in their composition. When, for instance, Gilbert fitz Reinfred included the church of Bromfield with other churches in his charter² of confirmation to the monks of St. Mary's, York, it is quite certain that neither he nor his wife had any right or title to deal with the advowson or revenues of that church. This flaw in the charter does not necessarily discount the value of its other provisions nor does it throw suspicion on the authenticity of the writing. It only demonstrates its clandestine nature. The circumstances of the grant are fairly obvious. The monks of York had possession of a number of churches in the neighbourhood of a great potentate, some of which had been bestowed on them by his predecessors in title: a recognition of these grants seemed to them desirable: and accordingly all the churches which belonged to them in that district were lumped together and included in the confirmation. The charter was perhaps obtained at a time of political unrest, occasions of which are not unknown in the reign of King John, when the protection of a local magnate was needed. Another transaction of the same nature is embodied in a charter¹ of King Stephen when that king professes to confirm William de Lancaster's gift of the vill of Mulcaster to the monks of Furness. If it be conceded that King Stephen had the same rights in Furness which he had while Earl of Mortain, thus giving the charter more credibility than it deserves, the addition of the clause about Mulcaster is so clearly clandestine that it destroys confidence in the whole document. One cannot help noticing that early charters of this class belong to periods of national unsettlement. It is quite possible that William de Lancaster actually made the grant to Furness, but there is no doubt whatever that the gift was abortive, that is, in other words, that he had no right to make it.

Though the Life of S. Bega² has little value as a historical document it is included here among the records of the priory in which it was probably written. The literary honesty of the anonymous author is praiseworthy. He complains of the dearth of materials : all the old evidences had perished : and he candidly acknowledges that the history of the venerable Bede was his chief authority. A cursory comparison of his narrative with what Bede has recorded of S. Begu will show how much he is indebted to him. There is every indication that his narrative is composite : that he has woven together the lives of two or three different saints whose names had some resemblance to each other. This appears evident from his retention of the name of Beghu while engaged in picking out what he wanted from Bede's Life of S. Hilda.³ The life here printed seems to have been known to Leland,⁴ though it is possible that he gleaned the information in his notes from the narrative of Bede. The second portion of the work is much more interesting. The traditions about the Miracles were more distinct than those about the Life. If he drew his account of the saint's life, as he confesses, from chronicles and histories, he heard the stories of the miracles from the lips of truth-speaking men. These narrations are all of the nature of folk-tales which grew up among the dependents of the monastery and mainly relate to its affairs. It will be observed that all the portents had taken place since the priory was founded, the chief actors in the episodes being well-known men. For this reason, some of the stories, notably that about Noutgeld, have considerable historical interest. Taking the work as a whole it will compare favourably with similar efforts in early hagiology. The date of the composition cannot be earlier than the first half of the thirteenth century.

The local charters of the priory reveal a marked inequality of parochial areas in the district, the parishes of Brigham, Crosthwaite and Millom embracing immense tracts of valley and upland like the parish of St. Bees. The parochial system was not quite complete in the first quarter of the twelfth century. In the Register¹ there is recorded an interesting series of deeds touching the formation of the parish of Corney in the lordship of Millom and the bestowal of its church on the monks. It is one of the few ancient churches in Cumberland or Westmorland, the name of whose founder is known. Copsi lord of Corney founded the church, we are told, and gave it to the priory of St. Bees during the pontificate of Henry Murdac, Archbishop of York, 1147-53. As the deed of foundation has not survived, perhaps none was ever made: but there are in existence several deeds of his immediate successors in confirmation of the founder's gift. The transaction may be accepted as illustrative of parochial endowment: the size of a parish depended on the extent of the territorial fief of the founder of the church. The gift of an oxgang of land to the chapel of St. Peter, Drigg, in the early part of the thirteenth century, will be read with interest. The two deeds which precede it show how the property came into the donor's possession.¹ The church of Whicham is an early instance of a parish church held in moiety by two incumbents while the advowson was in lay patronage. When it came into possession of the monks, the earliest opportunity was taken to terminate the abuse.²

Though some of the parishes were of extensive area, the inhabitants were not destitute of spiritual ministrations. Nearly every township had its chapel. In several of these townships the tradition of the former existence of a chapel has long since been obliterated. It is open to debate whether all these chapels were dependent on parish churches in the twelfth century. The chapel of Kirk-santon³ was dependent on the church of Millom, but the chapels of Wedaker⁴ and Lowswater, like that of Drigg, had their own endowments when they were annexed to St. Bees. There is also a doubt whether all these chapels were dedicated. In the cases of Lowswater, Ennerdale and Eskdale, the dedication of their chapels and burial grounds did not take place till a late date. In the Register will be found some deeds⁵ of extreme ecclesiastical interest which illustrate the constitutional development of parish churches from district chapels. The crucial test of parochial insignia was the right of burial in the chapel-yard dedicated for that purpose. The greatest care was taken to set out in unmistakable terms the new status and to fix the burden of maintenance on the right shoulders. The deeds in this collection are of considerable value for the ecclesiastical history of the district to which they relate in view of the prevalence of chapelries.

References to local industries, for some of which the district is still famous, will be found in many documents. The making of salt by evaporation of brine in pans (saline) on the seashore, now long extinct, was a common mode in the earlier centuries.¹ St. Bees was not exceptional in this possession. All the religious houses in the inland districts owned saline as an indispensable adjunct of their establishments. They were scattered over the whole seaboard from the Solway to the Duddon and several place-names have survived to recall their former existence. Iron mines have been worked and fisheries for salmon have been made in the lordship since the dawn of recorded history. So early as the days of Alice de Rumelli, daughter of William Meschin, and of her husband William fitz Duncan, the working of iron has been a staple industry in the neighbourhood of Egremont.² Coal mines were known at Whitehaven from an early date.³ Some of the earliest grants to the monks of St. Bees were rights of fishing with boat and net as well as tithe and toll of salmon. The good monks were keen fishermen. The whole county of Cumberland complained in 1278 that the prior of St. Bees had two engines called coops for catching salmon in his pool of Stainburn where in times past he had but one: the other was set up about six years previously without leave. The sheriff was ordered to remove the second coop at the prior's expense. This infraction of the law was taken as the occasion to make it more stringent. It was laid down that in each pool of the Eden, Esk and Derwent and in other waters where salmon may be taken, there should be by old custom a passage in mid-stream wide enough for a sow with her five pigs, and as the passages at Cockermouth, Camerton, Stainburn and Workington were unduly narrowed, the openings should be so enlarged at the cost of those who contracted them.

³ Nos. 181, 206.

The nets and engines found on the waters contrary to these provisions should be burned in the presence of the conservators of the rivers.¹

Opportunities for commerce were abundant in the neighbourhood of St. Bees and regulations as to toll by land and sea were in force. The chief ports were at Ravenglass and Whitehaven, the latter of which soon eclipsed in importance its more southerly rival. Whitehaven was designated a port, in which the monks had exclusive rights, soon after the foundation of the priory²: in official documents it is often called the port of St. Bees.³ The main outlet to the sea for the inhabitants of Coupland was at Ravenglass, in which Richard de Lucy⁴ had the grant of a weekly market and a yearly fair in 1208. In the thirteenth century⁵ grants of a similar nature were secured to Cockermouth in 1227, Millom in 1234, Egremont in 1267, Keswick in 1276, Seton near Workington in 1280, and at other places in later centuries. Whitehaven did not receive the privilege⁶ till 1660. The lord of Coupland had rights of toll for passage to and stallage in most of these markets. Some of the measures in use, though not unique, are worthy of mention: we have a cribla of grain, a ringa of oats, a tolfat of meal, a pacca of linen, a lasta of herrings, a dacra of hides, and a benda of iron.⁷ Some of the customs and services⁸ of Coupland, especially those relating to criminal administration, deserve close attention.

The lord of Millom as well as his feudal superior had the right of gallows. An efficient police system guarded the persons and property of the inhabitants of that remote region. The monks of St. Bees had their own bailiffs. On one occasion, however, neither the local government nor the pax sancte Bege saved the monks from molestation. In 1372 a gang of neighbours came armed to the priory, broke the gates and doors, carried away all the goods they could find, assaulted and maimed the servants, chased away the prior and many of the monks, and chased other monks into the priory church and besieged them there a long time, and so threatened the prior and monks, their men and servants, that the prior dare not return to his priory nor the monks leave the church.¹ One wonders whether Sir Walter Scott had this incident in mind when he made Wamba describe in Ivanhoe the plight of a prior of St. Bees. "Pray for them, with all my heart," says he, "but in the town not in the green wood, like the abbot of St. Bees whom they caused to say mass, with an old hollow oak tree for his stall." When he writes on another page of the robbing of the chapel of St. Bees of cup, candlestick and chalice, the wizard was probably referring to the raid of Douglas in 1315 when he spoliavit ecclesiam S. Bege,² a depredation with which he must have been familiar.

In addition to the great modes of service or tenure about which so much has been written, like Noutgeld and Drengage, of which the Register supplies some cardinal features,³ other kinds of service more or less nominal are often mentioned. Not unfrequently do we meet with the render of a pair of gloves, a clove of gillyflower, a root of ginger, a pound of frankincense, a rose at the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, three oysters at Christmas and gilt spurs. The exact import of the service of acconeuz in the Isle of Man has not been ascertained. The sale or manumission of serfs, neifs or natives was common in Coupland in the thirteenth century. So late as 1291 John son of John de Hodleston transferred a serf bag and baggage to the abbey of Calder and gave him his freedom on condition that he paid to the monks a yearly rent of two pence.¹ Gifts of serfs to the monks of St. Bees² are also recorded, one of which was by the famous William fitz Aldelm, sheriff of Cumberland, 1188-97.

Some of the religious phrases used in the Register are not without interest. Instead of the customary felicitation of salutem in domino, William de Irby, inceptor in decrees, official of the Archdeacon of Richmond, adopted the unique and attractive salutem in scinceris amplexibus dextere salvatoris,³ recalling the phrase in the Sarum collects for iii. Epiphany and iii. Lent. In 1287, when John de Hudleston made a gift to the monks of Calder, it was to be as free of all secular service, suit, custom or demand sicut sacrificium altaris.⁴ One of the obligations laid on the parishioners of Lowswater, when their chapel was raised to parochial dignity, was the provision of panis immolaticius,⁵ wine and wax for the church. The mode of taking an oath in the Middle Ages was not by kissing but by touching the Holy Gospels, tactis sacrosanctis Evangeliiis. This practice is illustrated by the additional information that contact was made with the right hand.⁶ Nicholas Staynlowe of Ponsonby took the precaution in 1441 to confirm all the gifts of his predecessors to Calder, St. Bees and Conishead, lest injury done by him to these houses should be avenged by the Supreme Judge in penis purgatorii.¹ It will be noticed that "the dead hand" occurs as a phrase in letters patent² of 1308. Acquittances "from the beginning of the world to this present day" were not uncommon in the settlement of accounts.³

No certain evidence has been found that the privilege of sanctuary was an appurtenant of the franchise of St. Bees. In nearly all the places where this immunity was enjoyed, the right to it was contested at some time or other in the courts, but we have failed to find in the records any mention of its existence at St. Bees. The probabilities, however, in its favour are very great. It was a cell of St. Mary's, York, which was endowed with all the dignities, liberties and free customs pertaining to the churches of St. Peter, York, and St. John of Beverley, two places specially associated with the right of sanctuary in northern England. In 1292 the abbot of St. Mary's pleaded these immunities in defence of certain feudal privileges which were claimed to belong to the daughter house of St. Bees.⁴ The bounds of the franchise, like the bounds of Wetheral, another cell of St. Mary's which undoubtedly possessed the right of sanctuary⁵ by grant of Henry I., were marked by crosses, one of which had the sign of S. Bega sculptured upon it.⁶ The pax sancte Bege is a special feature of the narrative which describes the portentous incidents connected with the influence of the saint within her franchise.⁷

All things considered, there is a strong presumption, short of actual proof, that the right of sanctuary was a privilege of St. Bees as well as of Wetheral.

There is little evidence in the Register of ecclesiastical oversight of the monks of St. Bees, thereby affording a strong contrast to their neighbours at Wetheral. The geographical situation may be accepted as a sufficient explanation. Wetheral was situated in the heart of the diocese of Carlisle within a few miles of the Cathedral church: St. Bees was on the extreme western side of the archdeaconry of Richmond, far removed from the centre of diocesan life at York. Ready access to it from Richmond or York was only possible from the west or south over wild mountains or by way of the valley of the Duddon. To the outside world the region of Coupland was chiefly famous by reason of its obstreperous climate. One of the justices itinerant in 1262 begged to be excused from going on circuit in parts of Cumberland as well on account of their remoteness as of the climate.¹ In the same year the Archdeacon of Richmond complained that he had no place of abode in Coupland for himself or his officials when they ventured, despite quicksands, thunderstorms and floods, to discharge their duties in that deanery.² When the Archdeacon, however, honoured the district with a visit, and this Register records very few of them, the monks of St. Bees joined with the neighbouring clergy in providing him with hospitality during his stay and in conducting him ad aquam on his departure.³

Only one archiepiscopal document finds a record in the Register. It is an important charter whereby Archbishop Roger of Pont l'Eveque (1154-81) confirmed to the monks all their spiritual possessions and discharged them from synodals and procurations, giving to them at the same time power of suspension and deprivation over the incumbents of their appropriate churches in certain contingencies.¹ From subsequent history, as intimated above, it may be inferred that the Archdeacon of Richmond had not acquiesced in their immunity from procurations, so far as he was concerned. But it must not be assumed that the monks of St. Bees saw little of their bishop and metropolitan: the isolation of the district did not prevent an occasional visit. On 10 May, 1281, Archbishop Wickwane, while on the circuit of his visitation, was at St. Bees, from which place he issued a licence to the Bishop of Whithern or other Bishop in communion with York for the dedication of the chapel and chapelyard of Lowswater propter vehementem sui distanciam from the parish church of S. Bega.² As the priory was subject to archiepiscopal discipline, we may be sure that its affairs were not neglected during the Archbishop's periodic visitations. Early in 1294 Archbishop John le Romeyn gave notice to hold a visitation of the priory on 3 April, the day following his visitation of the clergy of the deanery at the church of Egremont, but before the appointed day the notice was cancelled. The Archbishop had got so far as Kendal where he was on 30 March, but for some unknown reason he changed his plans and went to Hexham, breaking his journey at Orton, Lowther and Linstock. After a pleasant journey through the diocese of Carlisle, he arrived at Hexham where he held an ordination on 3 April, the day he had previously appointed for the visitation of the priory of St. Bees.³ The mention of the Bishop of Whithern in the licence for the dedication of the chapel of Lowswater, taken with the constant communication between West Cumberland and the Isle of Man, would seem to imply that the Archbishop sometimes discharged his pontifical duties by deputy. Bishop Richard of Sodor died at Langley in Coupland in 1275 and was buried at Furness.¹

The ecclesiastical executive in the deanery of Coupland in the twelfth century was mainly vested in the Archdeacon of Richmond, who had an unlimited ordinary jurisdiction. He appointed and removed rural deans at pleasure.² Not unfrequently there was a conflict between him and his metropolitan which will account for the Pope's intervention in trivial cases recorded in this Register. The rural chapters, held by the Archdeacon, were composed of laymen as well as priests. In certain inquisitions touching the church of Corney in 1185, the chapter of Coupland, consisting of clergymen only, reported to the Pope's delegates, but when Archdeacon Godard de Lucy assembled the chapter for the same purpose, it was composed of ten incumbents and six laymen with others more of both grades.³ The chapter was held at Egremont,⁴ not so much because it was the most central church of the deanery as because it was the church at the seat of the civil jurisdiction. When the Archdeacon was not present, his official presided. The deanery, which enjoyed immunity from the payment of Peter Pence,⁵ was sometimes called the deanery of Egremont.

There were at least three altars in the priory church, the great altar, the altar of S. Bega and the altar of the Blessed Mary. Lambert Scarlet of Annan gave a rent charge which he undertook to pay on the day of S. Bega upon the great altar of her church,⁶ and Benedict de Rotington made provision to sustain a light or lamp before the image of S. Bega near the great altar.¹ About the middle of the twelfth century Gospatric son of Orm made an offering on the altar of S. Bega on the day of the Assumption,² and later in the same century Gillomichael, prior of Conishead, did likewise.³ The altar of the Blessed Mary has frequent mention: it has the distinguishing mark that on it was celebrated daily mass in her honour.⁴ When Jurdan de Dreg made provision for the maintenance of a light before this altar, he urged the abbot and monks of York to excommunicate anybody who attempted to meddle with his gift.⁵ The mention of lights in the church as well of lights before the altars is of frequent occurrence.

The only chapel within the priory church, of which notice has been found, is that of S. Bega, the patroness of the monastery. Patric son of Thomas of Workington gave to the monks half a mark yearly to maintain a lamp burning in the chapel of S. Bega of the said church,⁶ and Adam son of Richard de Neuton gave a small endowment of land to sustain the light of the chapel of S. Bega the perpetual virgin.⁷ When the chapel of Lound was founded in the early part of the fourteenth century, it is distinctly stated that it was situated outside the cell of S. Bega in Coupland.⁸ The monks had chapels for their own convenience as well as that of their tenants on the most important of their estates.

The church of S. Bega was famous for its relics which exerted no small influence in the district. Bernard of Ripley gave a rent charge to maintain a lamp burning day and night before the relics in that church.¹ When an agreement was made, the sacred relics of S. Bega were touched to give greater sanctity to it.² An oath on the relics was reckoned the most sacred of all obligations.³ The chief of these relics was the bracelet of the saint, given to her in Ireland by some supernatural personage and left behind on her departure from Coupland. It had the sign of the cross plainly visible on the top. Some stories are told in her legendary life of the penalties which followed for forswearing on this relic.⁴ But testimony to the power of the bracelet is not confined to the author of the life of S. Bega: its sanctity was acknowledged for several centuries, not only in the district of St. Bees, but beyond it. Sometimes it is said that the relics of S. Bega were examined as well as touched.⁵ The bracelet had a covering (peplum) which was as efficacious in punishing wrong-doers as the holy relic itself. The fame of the bracelet was known far and wide. Robert de Veteri Ponte and Idonea his wife endowed the monks with certain rents out of respect for the church in which the bracelet of S. Bega was preserved.⁶ John de Hale, to make an obligation more binding upon him, not only touched the Holy Gospels, but took his corporal oath on the bracelet of S. Bega.⁷ When a husband made a grant to the priory of property which he held in right of his wife, the lady swore on the bracelet to hold the gift secure.⁸ It would be presumption to deny the personal existence of the saint in Coupland or to cast a slur on the piety of that age, but it cannot be held other than remarkable that language yields a common origin to the saint and her bracelet : sancta Bega is good ecclesiastical Latin for the Anglo-Saxon halgan beage or its English equivalent holy bracelet. The pagan custom of swearing on the bracelet or armlet is mentioned in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle¹ so early as 876 and was common among the Northmen. The sacred ring was preserved in the temple or worn as a bracelet by the priest.

Little is known of the priory at the time of its suppression. Some letters² have been preserved which reflect no discredit on the inmates. Only two monks were suspected of personal depravity.³ In view of the tainted methods employed to bring about the overthrow of the religious houses, St. Bees may be said to have had a clean record. Though the deed of surrender has not been discovered, there is some evidence that the number of monks on the establishment was sometimes greater than it was when the priory was founded. No doubt like other houses, St. Bees varied with the economic condition of the country. The magnificent cruciform church of the priory, with its incomparable west doorway, still stands as a monument of the greatness of the age in which it was built, but no ground plan of the monastic buildings has as yet been made. It is stated in the first lease⁴ of the priory possessions, made in 1540 after the dispersion of the monks, that the king had ordered all the buildings within the site and precinct of the monastery to be immediately thrown down and carried away. From this and similar sources⁵ it is known that the chief entrance to the precinct was by a tower covered with lead called the Gatehouse, thereby resembling the plan of the priory of Wetheral, a sister house, the Gateway of which still remains. The whole site was surrounded with a wall inclosing an area of an acre and a half, in which there were buildings, barns, stables, dovecotes, orchards and gardens. The survivals on the site seem to indicate that the monastic precinct lay on the south and west sides of the priory church, the north side being occupied by the parish cemetery.

The area occupied by the monastic buildings is a sure evidence that the establishment was relatively small. St. Bees at the time of dissolution ranked as one of the religious houses with a revenue of less than £200 a year. Its inmates did not make a great stir in the world. Few of the priors are known to have been promoted to higher monastic dignity: Alan de Nesse, in the fourteenth century, and Roger Kirkeby and Edmund Thornton, in the fifteenth, rose to be abbots of the mother house at York: but so far as we know these three names complete the list of promotions from St. Bees. There are only occasional notices of their employment in affairs outside their domestic concerns. In the thirteenth century they acted on papal commissions with the priors of Lancaster and Cartmel on certain local and monastic business.¹ In two or three instances royal letters of protection² were issued presumably when they were leaving the realm, but on these occasions perhaps they were going to Ireland on the affairs of their affiliated house there. Most of them, so far as we can judge from their names, were importations from the mother house of York, but Priors Stanlaw, Warthill, Alanby, and perhaps Kirkeby were apparently local men. On the eve of the suppression the lay officers of the convent consisted of a land steward, a steward of Stainburn, a steward of the court, a receiver of rents and three bailiffs, the allowances to the whole staff only amounting to £6 3s. 4d. yearly.¹

The forecast of the author of S. Bega's life has been realized. Generations may come and generations may go, he said, but as long as the land of S. Bega stands, her blessed memory will be cherished by posterity. In no part of her franchise is her name likely to continue longer than in the "dread cliff of Baruth, the towering headlands of St. Bees," which moved the imagination of Wordsworth and others of lesser fame. St. Bees Head owned to many curious place-names not now found on the map which will afford delightful exercise for the ingenuity of philologists. Like pule on the estuary of the Duddon, the suffixes, hou and hole, foth and berth, are predominant. It is believed that places terminating with hole, Astinhole, Brundhole, Pattering Hole et hoc genus omne have an antiquarian as well as an etymological interest. The cliffs have been celebrated for their breed of hawks² for more than four centuries. The slopes towards the east afforded pasture for large flocks of goats and sheep in the palmy days of the priory as they do in our own day, but the plough at some time or other must have reached the summit. Seaweed which was thrown up in abundance around the Heads was used as manure in the seaboard inclosures. The bay on the south Head, known as Kirkhaven or Kirkbyhaven, may have been used by the monks as an anchorage for small craft.

The editors of Dugdale³ have recorded all that is known

³ Mon., iii. 575. Bishop Tanner gives a similar history of the manuscript (Notitia Mon., p. 73, ed. 1744). As part of the muniments of title, the manuscript would descend with the lordship of St. Bees from Thomas Leigh, the first grantee after the dissolution of the priory, through the Chaloners and Wyberghs, to Sir John Lowther. But it was from Strype that Harley purchased it. Did Strype borrow the manuscript from Lowther of the vicissitudes of the only manuscript of the Register of the priory now extant. "It was formerly in the possession of Sir John Lowther of Whitehaven, afterwards in that of the Rev. John Strype, and is now preserved among the Harleian manuscripts in the British Museum, num. 434. It forms a volume of thickness in folio, written upon vellum apparently towards the latter end of the fourteenth century. A few instruments are inserted in it in a later hand." Students of the text of the manuscript will not agree with the date ascribed to the compilation of the Register: it is probably a century too early: deeds later than the fifteenth century embodied in the volume are without rubrics, written in a different hand and unnoticed in the elenchus contentorum or table of contents. In the Harleian Catalogue the manuscript is described as "Codex membranaceus in fol. minori, coemptus a M. Joh. Strype in quo conscribitur: Registrum Chartarum Monasterii Stae. Begae in agro Cumbriensi." The title on the binding of the volume reads: "Registrum Cartarum Monasterii S. Begae Co. Cumbr." In the manuscript itself there is no title except a scribble in a late hand: "Leiger Book of S. [Begas cancelled] Mary & S. Beghe in [York cancelled] Cumberland." It is very doubtful that John Denton ever saw the manuscript: at the places where he seems to be indebted to it, it is probable that he got his information from the original deeds of the priory after their dispersion among the muniments of the Lowthers and other families. The earliest local writer who appears to have consulted the manuscript was Bishop Nicolson, who states¹ "that in a cartulary of St. Begh's, in the Earl of Oxford's library, Thomas son of Gospatrick gives among other benefactions salinam in Culwen: this Culwen is on the seacoast in and forget to return it? He would naturally wish to see it while he was engaged on the Life of Archbishop Grindal.

Galloway," a clear reference to No. 61 in the printed Register.

No seal of the priory has been discovered except that described on p. 604 and illustrated by the present writer elsewhere.¹ If the editors of Dugdale were referring to the same deed in the office of the Duchy of Lancaster, to which the impression of the seal in wax is attached, the latter part of their report² of it, that "it is small and mean, consisting only of a plain cross without any charges in the shield, and a few words round it no longer legible," cannot be accepted as an accurate description.

The ancient arms of the monastery were noted by Tonge in his visitation of the Northern Counties in 1530 (Harleian MS. 1499. f. 80) before the dispersal of the monks. A print of the shield, showing the arms of William Meschin, the founder—a lion rampant—quartered with those of Lucy of Egremont—three lucas hauriant—has been described in the Surtees edition³ of Tonge's Visitation and reproduced as an initial letter by the editors of Dugdale. In giving the arms Tonge added: "Be yt notid that Wylllyam Myschen son of Ranolf, lord of Egremond, founded the monastery of Saint Beyse of blake monkes: and heyres to the sayd Mischen ys the Lord Fytzwatre, the Lord Haryngton and the Lord Lucy: and so restyth founders of the said monastery therle of Sussex, the Lord Marques Dorset, and therle of Northumberland as heyres to the lords aforsaid." The lion rampant is given as the arms of Ranulf Meschin, lord of Cumberland and afterwards earl of Chester, in Poulet's feodary⁴ of 1542.

Extenuation is pleaded for the omission of explanatory notes and for the contraction of many later charters in the Register. In the plan of the book the editor had to decide between footnotes and illustrative documents, and to the latter, for better or worse, the preference was given. It is claimed that the charters collected from private sources will be more useful to the student of the territorial history of Coupland than biographical disquisitions on persons and descriptive particulars of places as they occurred. The Register is so self-contained that it may be easily understood without adventitious help. No problem, however, likely to cause confusion has been consciously disregarded. In every instance where a difficulty presented itself, an attempt has been made to explain or failure has been frankly admitted. The abridgment of the later charters has been in all cases made by means of omission of stereotyped phrases : phraseology has not been altered. The place of omission has been always indicated, but care has been taken to retain every clause of historical value. The omitted words and phrases are common to similar documents of equal date. No charter of the twelfth or early thirteenth century has been touched. In a work of this kind, pursued under hampering disabilities, there must be many errors. For these and other shortcomings the indulgence of the generous reader is invoked.

It is pleasant to acknowledge obligation to the Lord Leconfield for access to his muniments at Cockermouth Castle : to Mr. William Stanley for putting his charter chest at Ponsonby Hall within easy reach : to Mr. Oswin J. Charlton for copying the Cumberland charters in possession of his kinsman at Hesleyside : to Mr. Alan Curwen for permission to go through his ancient evidences : to Mr. William Farrer for copies of charters in Hornby Chapel Library : to Mr. William Brown and to Mr. George Neilson for sundry kinds of help : and to Mr. Isaac H. Jayes for collating the editor's transcript with the original manuscript at the British Museum.

CARTE PRIORATUS DE SANCTA BEGA

1. CARTA PRIMA WILLELMI MESCHYN.

WILLELMUS filius Randulfi¹ omnibus has litteras videntibus et audientibus salutem. Notum vobis facio quod dedi Deo et sancte Marie et sancte virgini Bege, pro salute mea et uxoris mee et filiorum meorum et parentum meorum, vj carrucatas terre in Cherchebi², et ad incre-

1. ¹ William Meschin, founder of the priory, was a son of Ranulf, sheriff of Bayeux in Normandy, and brother of Ranulf Meschin, lord of Cumberland. The elder Ranulf, whom William of Malmsbury (Gesta Regum, ii., 286, R.S.) calls "Rannulfum vicecomitem Bajocensem," was one of the rebellious nobles defeated by William of Normandy in 1047 and to whom he alluded in retrospect on his death-bed (Orderic Vitalis, bk. vij., cap. 15). The connexion of the family with England must have commenced at an early date, for the names of Ranulf the father, Mahald or Maud his wife, Richard and Ranulf their sons, and Lucy the wife of the latter are entered on the beadroll of Durham (Liber Vitæ, 78). William son of Ranulf the sheriff took part in the first Crusade in 1097 (Orderic, bk. ix., c. 8). According to the inquest of 1212 Henry I. enfeoffed William Meschin with the lordship of Coupland between Derwent and Duddon, an extensive district in the south-west of the modern county in which the franchise of St. Bees is situated. He had also large estates in Lindsey before 1118 and in Leicestershire and Northamptonshire. William witnessed three charters of his brother Ranulf to the priory of Wetheral, which house Ranulf had founded. For the title of Meschin as the equivalent of "junior" or "younger," see Victoria Hist. of Cumb., i. 302.

² Kirkby, afterwards Kirkbybeghog (Nos. 186, 191, etc.), church town of Bega. Parishes which bear this prefix in Cumberland and Westmorland, Kirkby Kendal, Kirkby Lonsdale, Kirkby Stephen, are numerous in Northumbria, very extensive in area, and denote Norse settlements.

mentum predicte elemosine concedo manerium quod [h]abuit Willelmus balistarius in pura elemosina sine aliquo terreno servicio. Valet. ³ The names of Waldeve, Reiner, Godard and Ketel, tenants of William Meschin's lordship of Coupland, will be found in subsequent charters as benefactors of the priory. Coremac Gille becoc probably represents only one individual, Coremac servant of Bega: the name does not occur again.

4. ¹ This Ranulf Meschin founded the Cistercian abbey of Calder within the lordship of Coupland in 1134 (Dugdale, Mon., v. 340, 349). From Ranulf's mention of a deceased brother in this charter it may be taken that William Meschin had more than one son, unless indeed that fratris is a scribal error for matris. Whitaker without giving his authority puts Matthew as a brother of Ranulf in his short pedigree of William Meschin's descendants (Hist. of Craven, p. 297). In Nos. 1 and 2 William Meschin alludes to liberorum meorum, though the phrase may refer not to his sons but to his children.

² It is commonly supposed that Gospatric son of Orm was the first of this family settled at Workington. This deed is sufficient evidence that the vill was in possession of his grandfather Chetell.

³ Welingesmore, Welyngmore, Witemire, Quelingmore, now called Whillimoor (O. S., lxi., s.e.), lay athwart the river Keeke and was subdivided into three parts, Moricebymore, Welyngmore and Distinguonmore (No. 134). The bounds are set out in No. 496, as beginning from certain rings called le Wheles near Harrashowe, extending near the ditch of Moresby and Distinguon. The wheels are now probably represented by the house known as Standing Stones (O. S., lxxvii., n.e.).

14. CARTA ALICIE RUMELLY DE XIIIJ SALMONIBUS.

SCIANT omnes tam futuri quam presentes quod ego Aelicia de Romeli concedo et presenti carta mea confirmo ecclesie sancte Marie et sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus donacionem XIII^{cim} salmonum quam Alannus filius Waltheofi¹ fecit eis et concessit annis singulis

14. ¹ Alan son of Waldeve, lord of Allerdale. See his charters in this Register, Nos. 22, 49, 308, 454, the latter of which is the grant of salmon referred to here. Alice de Rumelli, the grantor, was lady of Cockermouth, daughter of William son of Duncan and the Alice de Rumelli of No. 13 his wife. The compiler of habendam in quadragesima. Preter haec volo et concedo quod ipsi predicti monachi pro salute animarum patris mei et matris mee et antecessorum meorum et pro salute anime mee habeant ex donacione mea singulis annis in quadragesima sex salmones. Et ne hec concessio et donacio mea in irritum possit revocari, sigilli mei testimonio confirmavi, sicut puram et perpetuam elemosinam. Hiis testibus Horm de Ireby, Willelmo de Bovill, Bartolomeo de Trivers, Simone de Roie, Willelmo filio Ade, Adam filio Alani, Adam de Crostweit clerico, Radulfo de Linford clerico, Willelmo de Kirleton et pluribus aliis.

15. CARTA ALICIE RUMELLY DE TERRIS ET LIBERTATIBUS, SALINIS, PANNAGIIS.

AELICIA de Rumelli omnibus hominibus Copelandie tam futuris quam presentibus salutes. Sciatis Deo et ecclesie sancte Marie et sancte Bege virginis libere et quiete in puram elemosinam me concessisse et perpetuo confirmasse omnem libertatem illam in boscis suis et pannagiis et salinis quam viz., dominus meus Willelmus¹ nepos regis Scocie eidem ecclesie pro salute anime sua (sic) donavit. Concessi enim, sicut et dominus meus, et perpetuo confirmavi quatinus nullus a Cuningeshou usque ad magnam gilam que est ultra Hothewait et juxta Hothewait sal possit facere nec salinam construere neque ad sal faciendum de bosco suo succidere nisi licencia prioris de sancta Bega qui insuper habebit redditus de omnibus salinis et pannagium de omnibus silvis in terra sua infra supradictas divisas. ecclesie, sicut et dominus meus, et perpetuo confirmavi omnium hominum suorum inter Derewent et Esc pannagium possidere, et ut tam porci hominum suorum inter Derewent et Esc quam domini sui in omnibus boscis et planis, de quibus ad dominium meum pertinet pannagium, pascua habeant absque ullo impedimento et redditu quem inde faciant. Necnon eidem ecclesie confirmavi donum domini mei de terra que vocatur Hothewait cum toto bosco et terra qui continentur inter supradictam gilam et rivum illum qui ante hanc donacionem terminus terre beate [Bege] esse solebat. Et sciendum est quod priori et monachis de sancta [Bega] concessi, sicut et dominus meus, potestatem excolendi et edificandi Hothewait cum predicta terra et in Welingsmora pasturam ad pecora sua pascenda et decimam molendini de Egremund. Testibus Robert priore,² Osbert archidiacono, Willelmo dapifero, Waltero Flandrensi fratre suo, Rogerio Tempestate, Rogerio Fasttun, Radulpho capellano, Roberto cementario, magistro Drogone, Drogone de Lindesaia, Edwardo camberlano.

16. ✓ CARTA WILLELMI NEPOTIS REGIS SCOCIE DE PANNAGIO DE COUPLAND.

WILLELMUS¹ nepos regis Scocie omnibus hominibus

² Prior Robert mentioned here should not be identified with the prior of the same name in No. 64 or No. 165. Leland says that Robert was the first prior so far as he knew (Collectanea, i. 25).

16. ¹ William son of Duncan was a conspicuous figure in northern history at this period. In this Register he is called Willelmus nepos regis Scocie (Nos. 15, 16, 39, 352) or Willelmus filius Duncani (Nos. 40, 166, 351, 490). King Duncan II., his father, was slain in 1094 (Chron. de Mailros, 60). Aelred of Rievaulx describes him as vir magni animi (Twysden, Decem Script., 345). By his marriage with Alice de Rumelli, daughter of William Meschin and Cicely daughter of Robert de Rumelli, he ultimately succeeded to the estates of Meschin and Rumelli.

Copelandie tam futuris quam presentibus salutem. Sciatis me Deo et ecclesie sancte Marie et sancte Bege virginis et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus libere et quiete in puram et perpetuam elemosinam concessisse totum pannagium de omnibus silvis que habentur in terra sua, scilicet, a Cuni[n]geshow usque ad magnam gilam que est juxta Howthwait et ultra Hothwait. Concessi eciam eidem ecclesie quatinus nullus infra supradictos terminos sal possit facere nec salinam construere neque ad sal faciendum de bosco suo succidere nisi priore de sancta Bega concedente, cujus insuper redditus de omnibus salinis in prefata terra fact' [] inperpetuum erunt mea largicione. Necnon et illud sciendum est quod cum supradictis beate Bege virgini in elemosinam dedi pannagium de omnibus hominibus inter Derewente et Esc ad eam pertinentibus hoc insuper predictę domine concedendo quatinus tam porci hominum suorum inter Derwent et Esc quam domini sui in omnibus boscis et planis de quibus ad me pertinet pannagium, pascua habeant absque ullo impedimento et redditu quem michi faciant. Illud eciam vobis notum sit quod predictę ecclesie in elemosinam concessi totam illam terram que vocatur Hothwait cum toto bosco et terra que continetur inter supradictam gilam que est ultra Hothwait et rivum illum qui terminus ante hanc donacionem terre beate Bege esse solebat. Et sciendum est quod prior et monachi de sancta Bega Hothwait cum predicta terra excolere et edificare poterunt et quod in Welingasmora ad peccora sua pascenda sine contradiccione pasturam habebunt quibus eciam in perpetuam elemosinam dedi et concessi decimam molendini de Egremund. Testibus Jurdano vicecomite, Johanne filio Puncun, Waltero Camberlano, Ricardo Mataf'lun. ✓

John of Hexham states that William son of Duncan was confirmed in the Honor of Skipton and Craven by King David in 1151 (Priory of Hexham, i. 163). See a charter of his given in facsimile by Whitaker (Hist. of Craven [1878], p. 448): the charter in Dugdale (Mon., vi, 203, No. iv.) is probably spurious.

17. CARTA WILLELMI COMITIS ALBEMARLIE DE VI VACCIS DE NOWTEGELD IN COUPLAND.

WILLELMUS, comes Albemarie¹, archiepiscopo Eboracensi et capitulo et omnibus matricis ecclesie filiis, salutem. Noverit paternitas vestra me dedisse et concessisse Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege in Copelandia et omnibus, vi vaccas in perpetuam elemosinam reddendas anno cuius quo meum Noutegeld debuerit fieri. Hanc autem donacionem feci pro animabus omnium antecessorum meorum et antecessorum uxoris mee Cecilie. Testibus Petro de Falchenb', Radulfo de Averi, Henrico Foliot, W. de Belnag', Heng' de Meneriis, Gilberto [blank], Willelmo camerario, et multis aliis apud Bincheham.

18. CARTA W. COMITIS ALBEMARLIE DE VI VACCIS.

WILLELMUS, comes Albemarie, omnibus hominibus suis tam futuris quam presentibus, salutem. Sciatis quod dedi et presenti carta confirmavi Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege et monachis de sancta Bega vi vaccas de meo Nautegild de Copuland unoquoque anno quando accipio Nautegild in Copuland: et volo et firmiter precipio ut illud sine impedimento habeant pro salute anime mee et uxoris mee et heredum meorum et pro animabus omnium amicorum et antecessorum meorum. Testibus hiis Helia de Mundevilla, magistro Rogerio, Willelmo camerario et multis aliis.

17. ¹William le Gross, earl of Albemarle or Aumâle, who married Cicely, daughter of William son of Duncan, died in 1179 (Benedict Abbas, Gesta Hen. II., i. 243). He must be distinguished from William de Fortibus, earl of Albemarle, in Nos. 19 and 21. For the significance of Nos. 17 and 18 on the character of the tribute called Noutgeld, see Victoria Hist. of Cumberland, i. 316.

19. CARTA W. FORC DE ANERDAL ET DE COUPLAND ET DE XIIIJ SALMONIBUS ET DIMIDIA CARUCATA TERRE IN ASPATRIK ET DE VJ ACRIIS TERRE IN EADEM VILLA ET DE VJ SALMONIBUS ET J MANSURA IN COKIRMOWTH ET XX S. IN RIBTON.

WILLELMUS de Forc', comes Albemarle¹, omnibus has litteras uisuris vel auditoris salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me concessisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Deo et ecclesie sancte Bege de Coupland et monachis Deo ibidem servientibus pro salute anime mee et antecessorum meorum omnes donaciones quas habent de antecessoribus meis in feodo meo de Allerdal et de Couplaund, scilicet, quatuordecim salmone quos habent de dono Alani filii Waldef² et de eadem donacione dimidiam carucatam terre in villa de Aspatrik et sex acras in alio loco in eadem sicut continetur in carta ipsius Alani.³ Preterea dedi et concessi eis et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi sex salmone et unam mansuram in villa de Cokerm[outh], illam, scilicet, quam dudum Huctredus de Derham⁴ [tenuit] et viginti solidos singulis annis recipiendos de Willelmo de Ribbeton de firma sua tantummodo, s[c]ilicet, decem solidos ad Pascha et decem

19. ¹ It is probable that the donor here is the second William de Fortibus, earl of Albemarle. Hawise, daughter of William le Gross and Cicely de Rumelli, was married, firstly, to William de Mandevill who died in 1189 (Hoveden, iii. 19) : secondly, to William de Fortibus, earl of Albemarle, who died in 1195 (Ibid., iii. 306) : and thirdly, to Baldwin de Betun who died in 1212. See her charter to the Abbey of Garendon in Monasticon, v. 334. The order of these marriages in the Chron. de Melsa (Rolls series), i. 91, is not trustworthy. William de Fortibus, son of the first William and Hawise, who succeeded his mother some time after 1212, died in 1241.

20. ¹ From the mention of William de Esseby as a witness to this deed, it is suggested that the donor was William le Gross who died in 1179. Esseby's name occurs in the Pipe Rolls of 1158-1160 and 1163.

WILLELMUS de Forz, comes Albemarle, omnibus hominibus has literas uisuris vel audituris, salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me concessisse et hac presenti carta confirmasse Deo et ecclesie sancte Bege de Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, pro salute anime mee et antecessorum et successorum meorum, omnes donaciones quas habent prefati monachi de an[te]cessoribus meis in focodo meo de Allerdal et de Coupland, scilicet, quatuordecim salmones quos habent de dono Alani filii Waldef, et de eadem donacione dimidiam carucatam terre in villa de Aspatrik et sex acras terre in alio loco in eadem villa, sicut continetur in carta ipsius Alani : et sex salmones quos habent de dono Alicie de Romely et dimidiam marcam argenti de eadem donacione, scilicet, in molendino fulon[um] de Cokerm[outh] et unam mansuram in eadem villa, illam, scilicet, quam dudum tenuit Huctredus de Derham, sicut in carta ipsius Alicie. Preterea dedi, concessi, et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Deo et ecclesie beate Bege de Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus unam marcam argenti in dicto molendino fulonum in puram et perpetuam elemosinam singulis annis reddendam, scilicet, medietatem ad Pentecosten et aliam medietatem ad festum sancti Martini recipiendam et per manum ballivorum meorum de eadem villa. Volo eciam ut hec omnia predicta habeant prefati monachi de me et heredibus meis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam sicut predictum est. 25. ¹In the manuscript this deed is recorded in duplicate, of which the above text is a collation.

CECILIA¹ comitissa Albamarlie, omnibus hominibus et amicis, Francis et Anglis, tam presentibus quam futuris, has literas audientibus vel videntibus, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et dedisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse, Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege virgini et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, quatuor carucatas terre inter Esc et Duden, scilicet, Kirkesantan et Haverigg cum omnibus pertinentiis suis et Thucites² cum omnibus pertinentiis suis in bosco et plano, in pratis et pascuis, in viis et semitis, in aquis et molendinis, et in omnibus ad easdem terras pertinentibus, solas, liberas, et quietas ab omni terreno servicio, quod michi et heredibus meis pertinet vel pertinere poterit, necnon et servicium Willelmi de Boivilla et heredum suorum de predictis terris inperpetuum. Et sciendum est quod concedo et confirmo donum patris mei et matris mee quod ipsi dederunt Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege uirgini, scilicet, quod prior et monachi de sancta Bega habebunt pasturam ad omnia peccora sua pascenda in Welingmora et in Brunrig³ sine contradiccione aliqua vel impedimento alicujus et quod possidebunt in perpetuam elemosinam decimam molendini mei de 27. ¹ Deeds in this collection (Nos. 17, 18, 27-28, 225), show that the barony of Coupland was in the administration of Cicely, eldest daughter of William fitz Duncan, and of her husband William le Gros, earl of Albemarle, for some time after the death of her parents. As countess of Albemarle and lady of Coupland (domina de Caupelanda), Cicely confirmed the monks of Calder in their possessions (Illus. Doc. No. xxxi.). In 1182 Arthur son of Godard, lord of Millom, rendered account for an enquiry into his right of one knight's fee against the countess (comitissam) of Coupland (V. C. H. Cumb., i. 353).

² The three townships of Kirksanton, Haverigg and Thwaites, in the parish of Millom, were afterwards demised to William de Boivill by Clement, abbot of York (No. 441), who died in 1184.

Insuper concedo et confirmo donum Cospatric filii Horm quod ipse dedit dictis monachis, scilicet, quod possidebunt villam de Salterge cum communi pastura de Arlokedene inperpetuum, sicut carta⁵ ejusdem Cospatric testatur. Et sciendum est quod concedo et confirmo donum Reineri Flandrensis de Prestegile et de Brunrig quod ipse dedit predictis monachis sicut in carta⁶ ejusdem Reineri continetur. Hanc autem elemosinam feci pro salute anime regis Henrici et pro salute anime Willelmi fratris mei et pro salute animarum Matildis regine et Matildis imperatricis et pro animabus omnium parentum meorum et pro vita domini mei regis Henrici et regine sue et prosperitate filiorum suorum et pro memetipsa et pro omnibus amicis meis vivis et mortuis ut simus participes omnium bonorum que fiunt vel facienda sunt in abbacia sancte Marie Eboraci et predicta domo sancte Bege et in omnibus locis prefate abbacie pertinentibus in vita et in morte. ELLA DE LOWSWATER ET IJ BOVATIS TERRE.

⁴ The charter of the "Boy of Egremont," brother of Cicely, is not extant.

⁵ Gospatric's charter will be found at No. 33.

⁶ Not extant.

CECILIA comitissa Albamarl omnibus tam presentibus quam futuris has literas audientibus vel videntibus salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et confirmasse Deo et sancte Marie et sancte beate Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus capellam de Lowswater¹ cum duabus bovatis terre eidem capelle pertinentibus, quam capellam et terram predicti monachi jam quinquaginta annis transactis tenuerunt et pasturam quantum pertinet ad duas bovatas terre avariis suis cum eisdem divisis quas in tempore Willelmi de Egremunt² fratris mei habuerunt. Testibus hiis Thoma filio Gospatric, Willelmo de Chirif, 28. ¹The original donors of this chapel are mentioned in No. 75. For its confirmation by Archbishop Roger of York (1154-1181), see No. 107. As the monks had possession of the chapel for fifty years before the countess Cicely's confirmation, it must have been bestowed soon after the foundation of the priory.

²In No. 27 the "young Romilly," celebrated by Wordsworth, is called by the countess Cicely "William my brother" and here "William de Egremunt my brother," but in No. 166 he appears as "William de Egren und son of William fitz Duncan." So early as 1223, he was known as the "Boy of Egremunt," when it is stated that he had been in the King's ward and had died in ward (Coram Rege R., 7 & 8 Hen. III. No. 17, m. 22d.). But from charters in this collection it is clear that he administrated the Meschin barony after his mother's death. As William de Agremont, he witnessed the deed of confirmation by Henry II. of the agreement between the monks of Furness and William de Lancaster on the division of Furness Fells. Eyton dates the deed in 1157 which cannot be far wrong. The identification of the Boy of Egremont with William Odling or William the Noble "whom all the Scots wished to have for their King," as commemorated in the Sagas (Orkneyinga Saga, p. 46, ed. J. Anderson), appears doubtful. William fitz Duncan seems to have had other sons, though not by Alice de Rumelli. One of these, Donald Bane, is said by Fordun to have caused an insurrection against William the Lion in 1179 (Chronica, i. 268, ed. Skene), and another, Gospatric, witnessed a charter to the monks of Durham by Gospatric brother of Dolfin (Raine, North Durham, App. p. 25).

29. CARTA RICARDI LUCY DE TERRA IN LOWESWATYR CUM PRATO ET CAPELLA.

SCIANT presentes et futuri quod ego, Ricardus de Lucy¹, pro salute Ade uxoris mee, antecessorum et successorum meorum, concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Deo et beate Marie Eboraci et sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram quam habent in villa de Louswater cum prato et capellam ejusdem ville ex dono Rann[ulfi] de Lyndesey et Hetrede sponse sue², ita tamen quod predicti monachi inveniant in eadem singulis diebus dominicis tantum unum capellanum celebrantem. Item concessi eisdem monachis unam placeam terre de quatuorviginti pedibus in longitudinem

29. ¹ Richard de Lucy, son of Reginald de Lucy and Amabilla daughter of William fitz Duncan, succeeded to the barony of Coupland in 1200 (Rot. de Oblat. et Fin., p. 45, Rec. Com.). Ada, his wife, one of the coheiresses of Hugh de Morville, lord of Burgh by Sands, had her inheritance and dower in 1213 after the death of Richard de Lucy of Egremunt her husband (Ibid., pp. 474-5). In addition to this group, see other charters of Richard de Lucy at Nos. 372-3, and at Illus. Doc. No. XXVIIJ.

² According to No. 498, Ranulf de Lyndesay married Ethereda sister of Alan son of Waldeve, lord of Allerdale, and had Blenerhasset and Ukmanby as her marriage portion. This identification of Ethereda or Hectreda is interesting. Ranulf, who was with King David at Lamplugh (Nos. 39, 352), held land also in Lorton and Arthuret which he gave to the canons of Carlisle. The property in Cumberland probably came to him with Hectreda. He was dead before 1158 when William de Eseby, who married his widow, appears in the Pipe Rolls. See note on No. 52. In 1188 William de Lindesey owed forty marks for proving right in the King's court against the countess of Albemarle for Loweswater and other places (V. C. H. Cumb., i. 364).

Concessi et quod predicti [monachi] habebunt in bosco meo de Lowswater ea que eis necessaria fuerint ad edificandum et arandum et quantum in planis et in pascuis et in assertis in utilitate eorundem vertere poterunt, et decimas omnium piscariorum nostrorum et omnium pullorum nostrorum et omnium rerum nostrarum quas habemus in confines Couplandie. Insuper concessi predictis et perpetue confirmavi omnium hominum suorum inter Derwent et Esc pannagium possidere, et ut tam hominum suorum inter Derwent et Esc quam domini sui in omnibus boscis et planis, de quibus ad me pertinet pannagium, pascua possideant absque ullo impedimento mei vel heredum meorum. Concessi eciam eisdem monachis omnes libertates ad me pertinentes tam in aquis dulcibus quam salsis et in portibus et in piscacionibus et piscariis et wrec et waf, ubicunque inventa fuerint infra divisas terrarum suarum, nec licebit alicui facere piscarias infra divisas suas sine consensu predictorum monachorum. Et omnes qui hanc elemosinam accreverint ejusdem participes fiant. Qui autem minuerit de Deo et sancta Maria et sancta Bega cui hec datur elemosina inperpetuum excommunicentur. As Chetell son of Eldred had been lord of Workington (No. 212), the descent of the manor seems to show that Lancaster had inherited from Chetell. 33. ¹It is suggested that claudere here means to inclose: fossare, to dyke: and censare, to sub-let to farm. For the latter word, see Twysden's Glossary, s.v. tassare. The word in the script might possibly be read as tensare, to tax, which is inapplicable here. Censare must come from census.

King David took up his residence in Carlisle, where he died on 24 May, 1153 (Priory of Hexham, i. 168, Surtees Soc.). See No. 352 for another text of this charter. Thomas Astle included all the Scottish deeds in this Register in his collections for Scottish history (Stowe MS., 552, ff. 94-100).

²A very early instance of iron-mining in Cumberland, on which see my narrative in V. C. H. Cumb., ii. 340-41. In the fourteenth century, when iron was still worked there, the place is called Thernby, Thirneby and Thirnby (Cal. of Close, 1337-9, pp. 476, 478, 486, 494), near the town of Egremont, perhaps now called Thornley or Thorny (O. 41. ¹The date of this charter belongs to the Scottish occupation under King David, 1136-53. It is not clear how Adam son of Suan had any right within the lordship of Millom unless he had custody of Godard's land and heir. Henry I. enfeoffed him with a large tract on the east of the Eden in the region of Melmerby and Kirkland which was in possession of his heirs at the time of the Inquest of Service in 1212. He had also possessions in Yorkshire and elsewhere. His name appears in the Pipe Roll of Cumberland for 1159 together with his brother Henry son of Suan who held for a time the lands of Langwathby and Edenhall. There is a pedigree of Adam son of Suan on the De Banco Roll, Michaelmas term, 8 Henry III. (Collect. Top. et Geneal., i. 266). ²Godard, the first lord of Millom on record, was one of the earliest benefactors of St. Bees. His charter of endowment is found at No. 76. See also Nos. 1-4. He is called Godard de Boivilla in a charter which he granted to the monks of Furness (Annales Furnes., p. 118). The family of Boyvill was afterwards known by the territorial name of Millom. The name of Arthur son of Godard appears in the Pipe Roll of 1182 as paying a debt to the Crown for recognition of his knight's fee against the countess of Coupland.

His father Roland son of Uctred son of Fergus seized Galloway in 1185 on the death of his uncle Gilbert son of Fergus, but he made his peace with Henry II. at Carlisle in the following year (Hoveden, ii. 299, 309). Roland died on 19 December, 1200, and was buried at Northampton (Ibid., iv. 145). In right of his mother Helena, daughter of Richard de Moreville, Alan became constable of Scotland and in 1209 married a daughter of David, earl of Huntingdon, brother of the Scottish King (Chron. de Mailros, Bann. Club, p. 108). In 1212 King John requested him to send 1,000 of his best and most active Galwegians to Chester for his expedition against the Welsh (Close R. 14 John, m. 7d.) Shortly after, Alan received from that King grants of large tracts of land in Ireland (Chart. R. 15

² The bad grammar of this sentence will be noticed.

47. ¹ Thomas Randolph, earl of Moray, had designs on the Isle of Man in 1317 (Bain, Cal. Scot. Doc., iii. No. 562): was keeper of Man in 1321 (Foedera, ii. 472) and in 1332 (Bain, op. cit., iii. No. 1048): in the latter year he died at Musselburgh—"a man he was, to be remembered while integrity, prudence and valour are held in esteem among men" (Hailes, Annals of Scot., ii. 146). He was Regent of Scotland after the death of King Robert Bruce during the minority of David II.

48. ¹ This famous prelate had ecclesiastical relations with Cumberland before and after his consecration. In 1278, before his elevation to the episcopate, he had been parson of the church of Brigham (Cal. of Pat., 1272-81, p. 254). In 1290 John de Baliol, heres regni Scocie, gave him the manors and lands which King Alexander held in Cumberland (B. M., Campbell Charter, xxx. 9). The church of Sowerby, the appurtenant of one of these manors, was often filled on the presentation of Bishop Bek (Carl. Epis. Reg. Halton, MS., ff. *8, 21, 46). The charter here was granted at Carlisle shortly after the death of Edward I., whose body the Bishop accompanied southwards (Chron. de Lanercost, p. 209).

²In the great confirmation charter of Henry II. to the canons of Carlisle, there is the recognition of Alan's gift of Little Crosby which is described as iuxta Scaddebothes sicam and of William Engainne's gift of a moiety of his land of Scadebothes and a moiety of his herring rent. A copy of Alan's charter to the canons is still extant. The place survives in the name of Scad Beck which passes to the sea near Maryport Cemetary (O. S., xxxv. s.w. : xlv. N.W.).

The manor of Egremont and the bulk of the lordship of Coupland were apportioned to Lambert and Amabit (Feet of Fines, Cumberland, 15 Hen. III., No. 12). The chroniclers have little good to say of Lambert, who died in 1246 (Inq. p.m., 31 Hen. III., No. 4). M. Paris says that by not a few presents to the pope, he obtained the singular privilege that nobody could excommunicate him for any fault except by special mandate of the pontiff himself, as if he might be allowed to sin with impunity (Chron. Majora, R. S., iv. 587-8).

57. CARTA ADE FILII HENRICI DE MILLUM DE SALINA IN EADEM.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus presens scriptum visuris vel audituris, Adam filius Henrici de Millum¹, eternam in domino salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me pro salute anime mee et omnium antecessorum et successorum meorum dedisse, concess[iss]e et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Deo et monasterio sancte Marie Eboraci,

57. ¹The family of Godard dapifer or Godard de Boivill, lords of Millom, were considerable benefactors of the religious houses of Furness, Conishead, Russhen in the Isle of Man, Holmcultram and the nunnery of Lekelay or Seton, as well as St. Bees. For Godard's grant to St. Bees, see No. 76. The following table will show the descent of the lordship :—

William de Millum appears to have succeeded soon after 1200, for on 25 Oct. 1202 he made an agreement with one of his tenants in Old Hyton in the parish of Bootle (Feet of F., Westmor., 4 John, No. 15). His wife Amice or Avice was a daughter of Richard son of Roger of Woodplumpton in Lancashire (Pipe Rolls, ed. Farrer, 203, 346-7). The church of Holy Trinity, Millom, was given to the monks of Furness by him before 1228 (West, Antiq. of Furness, App. xi., No. 62), but he must have died soon after, for on 23 Dec. 1230 the advowson was quit-claimed to the monks by Adam de Millum his brother (Anct. D., L., No. 459). Adam, however, was in possession in 1229 when he was party to a suit about a tenement in Whitbeck (Pat. R., 13 Hen. III., m. 5d.). John de Hodleston, with the consent of Joan his wife, daughter and heir of Adam son of Henry, lord of Millom, made certain confirmations to the monks of Holmcultram (Reg. MS., ff. 62-3). In this Register, see No. 367.

Preterea licebit predictis monachis omnia commoda sua facere de tota terra cum pertinenciis infra predictas divisas contenta et eandem sepire et fossatis includere. Et sciendum est quod prefati monachi sine contradiccione et impedimento mei et heredum meorum capient omnia estoveria sua predicte saline necessaria ubicunque voluerint in magna turbera inter Arnulpule et Slepul². Preterea habebunt pasturam infra divisas de Millum ad duos equos et octo boves et sex vaccas et viginti oves cum sequela duorum annorum. Et insuper licebit eis edificare salinam suam et alias domos eidem saline necessarias de bosco meo. Ego vero et heredes mei predictam salinam et predictam terram cum pertinenciis sicut supradictum est predictis monachis warantizabimus contra omnes homines imperpetuum. Et ut hec mea donacio et concessio stabilis et inconcussa imperpetuum permaneat presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. 58. CARTA JOHANNIS FILII JOHANNIS HODILSTON DE SALINA IN MILLUM.

SCIANT presentes et futuri quod ego, Johannes filius Johannis de Hodeliston, domini de Millum in Coupland, pro salute anime mee et omnium antecessorum et successorum meorum, concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Deo et mon[asterio] beate Marie Eboraci et celle sue de sancta Bega in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, quandam salinam in territorio meo de Millum, quam habent ex dono Ade filii Henrici de Millum, antecessoris mei, habendam et tenendam predictis monachis et eorum successoribus pro me et heredibus meis et meis assignatis, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, liberam et quietam ab omni seculari servicio, exaccione, et demanda, prout in carta predicti Ade, antecessoris mei, predictis monachis concessa plenius continetur. In cujus rei testimonium presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hiis testibus dominis Gilberto de Wyrkyngtona, Roberto de Haveryngton, Ricardo le Flammank, Johanne de Kyrkeby Irelyth, Richardo de Broctona, militibus, Willelmo de Thueytis, Willelmo de Waybyrthueyt, Willelmo de Morthyng, Waltero de Sennthoues, Roberto de Wilton, et aliis.

59. CARTA JOHANNIS FILII JOHANNIS DE HODISTON DE QUADAM PLACEA IN MILLUM.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus hoc scriptum visuris vel audituris, Johannes filius Johannis de Hodeleston, domini de Millum in Coupland, salutem in domino. Noveritis me, pro salute anime mee et omnium antecessorum et successorum meorum, dedisse et hac presenti carta mea concessisse, pro me et heredibus meis et meis assignatis, abbati sancte Marie Eboraci et suis successoribus et ecclesie beate Marie Eboraci et ecclesie sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo et beate Marie et sancte Bege virgini servientibus, inperpetuum in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, quandam placeam terre in territorio meo de Millum, jacentem inter salinam quam dicti monachi habent de dono Ade filii Henrici de Millum, antecessoris mei, et mangnam turbariam juxta Slepul, et quam placeam Thomas perpetuus vicarius de Millum¹ de me quondam habuit ad firmam et fossatis inclusit. Ita, scilicet, quod licebit predictis monachis et eorum successoribus omnia commoda sua infra predictam placeam terre omnibus temporibus anni facere, et predictam placeam prout melius vident expedire fossatis predictis et sepibus includere, tenendam et habendam pro me et heredibus meis et meis assignatis, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, predictis abbati et monachis et eorum successoribus. Reddendo inde annuatim michi, heredibus meis vel meis assignatis duodecim denarios, viz. medietatem ad festum Pasche et aliam medietatem ad festum sancti Michaelis, percipiendos de predicta placea terre pro omni servicio seculari, exactione, et demanda, forinseca vel intrinseca. 59. ¹The church of Holy Trinity, Millom, with its chapels, was given to the monks of Furness by William, lord of Millum, in the early part of the thirteenth century. See note on No. 57. In May, 1228, Archbishop Walter Gray issued his licence for its appropriation (D. of L., Box A., No. 395), and on 13 Nov. 1230, he assigned one moiety for the maintenance of three chaplains who should pray daily for the archbishops and canons in the church of York, their appointment and removal being retained by the archbishop with the consent of the chapter, and another moiety for the use of the convent of Furness. By another deed Abbot Robert of Furness confirmed the ordination and allotted a yearly sum of 34 marks for the portion of the chaplains (Annales Furnes., pp. 194-5). On 23 Dec. 1230, Adam de Millum, who succeeded his brother William to that lordship, quit-claimed the church and advowson to Furness (Anct. D., L., No. 459). There is much about the early history of this church in Archbishop Gray's Register (Surtees Soc., No. 56).

62. ¹ Roland son of Uctred, lord or prince of Galloway, the acer et industrius adolescens (William of Newburgh, i. 182, E. H. S.) who resented his father's murder in 1174, is a great political figure in Scottish history. His military activities greatly exasperated King Henry II., who summoned him to Carlisle in 1186 where peace was made between them (Benedictus Abbas, i. 348). Roland became justiciar as well as constable of Scotland. His mother Gunnild was a daughter of Waldeve, lord of Allerdale (Liber S. Crucis, p. 19, Bann. Club). Roland died at Northampton in 1200 (Hoveden, iv. 145).

² At the base of Criffel near the river of Southwick. Uchtred son of Fergus, father of Roland, gave to the canons of Holyrood the tithe of his venison from the Urr to the Nith (Liber S. Crucis, p. 19).

63. ¹ The grantor was a tenant of the Brus fee in Annandale and often occurs as a witness to the Brus charters about 1200, of which see those in the Duchy of Lancaster indexed by Bain (Cal. Doc. Scot., i. Nos. 606-7). The family of Heriz were benefactors of Holmcultram.

102-106), Reynpatrick occupies a prominent place. In the first of these William de Brus, for the health of King William of Scotland and Earl David his brother, gave the monks that place near the church of Rainpatrik to make a fishery: the place was between a quarry and the file of the water of Esk. He also gave a saltpan on the sands of Raynpatrik towards the east as the great way leads from Blawath to the church of Rainpatrik. In a subsequent charter Robert de Brus describes the file of the Esk as the boundary between his land and the county of Cumberland. Rainpatrick has long since disappeared: the position of the church is now indicated by Redkirk Point.

64. ¹ Prior Robert was engaged in a plea with Richard son of Peter in 1202 about land in Whitehaven (Feet of Fines, Cumb., p. 5, Rec. Com.), and was prior when Richard de Lucy founded the borough of Egremont. The charter is printed in facsimile in Cumb. and Westmor. Transactions, i. 281-5. For another Prior Robert, see No. 15, but the Prior Robert of No. 165 may be identified with the grantor of this deed.

Hemingburgh (E. H. S., i. 308) and Wykes (Annal. Mon., iv. 133, r.s.) tell that he took the side of the baronial party in the rebellion of Earl Simon of Montfort. On 7 Dec. 1261 he was invited to sign

On 16 Dec. 1263 he was ordered to deliver up the castles of Richmond and Bowes which he had in custody to another keeper (Ibid., p. 301), but he was dead before 7 June 1264, when the custody of his castles and lands in Westmorland was granted to John son of John during pleasure (Ibid., p. 322). On 30 June following an extent of his lands in Westmorland and eight other counties was ordered to be made (Ibid., p. 362). On 8 Aug. 1265 Roger de Clifford had wardship of the lands falling to Isabel first-born daughter of Robert de Veteri Ponte with her marriage, and at the same time Roger de Leyburn had the wardship of Idonea his second daughter (Ibid., p. 435). Remission of Robert's trespasses in adhering to Simon de Montfort was made on 15 Feb. 1266 at the instance of the two guardians (Ibid., pp. 555, 586), of whose military services to the King during the rebellion the chroniclers have much to say. Isabel was a widow on 4 Feb. 1283 (Cal. of Fine R., i. 179) and Idonea, aged 22, was a widow in the following year (Cal. of Inquis., ii. 315). Isabel and Idonea were daughters of the same mother, Isabel de Veteri Ponte wife of the above Robert (Ibid., iii. 282).

71. ¹The family of Moresby, whose name often appears in this Register, derives its origin from Dolfin son of Ailward who married Matilda or Maud sister of Waldeve son of Earl Gospatric, lord of Allerdale (No. 498). Waldeve son of Dolfin, to whom Alan son of the above Waldeve gave Brackenthwaite (No. 498 and Illus. Doc. No. XIII.), was the first to assume the territorial name of Moresby. Waldeve of Moresby appears as a witness in Nos. 223 and 341. In 1196 Hukeman or Hugh de Moresby paid a fine into the Exchequer (Pipe R., 7 Ric. I.) and in 1217 he contributed to the scutage (Close R., 2 Hen. III., m. 16d.). William de Fortibus, earl of Albemarle, confirmed to Hugh the grant of Brackenthwaite which had been made to Waldeve son of Dolfin, by Alan son of Waldeve his predecessor in the fee (Illus. Doc., No. XIV.). Hugh de Moresby was tenant in 1230 (Feet of F., Cumb., 15 Hen. III., No. 12) and Nicholas de Moresby in 1256 (Ibid., 40 Hen. III., No. 69). The manor of Moresby is on the coast near Whitehaven.

ploughland in Coupland called Fossa to the monks of Furness as freely as his father had held it (Anct. D., L. No. 131). From this it may be inferred that Godard was not the first of the family in possession of Millom. The gift of Annaside to St. Bees by Mahald, Matildis or Maud, wife of Godard, is mentioned in Nos. 39, 40 and 41. Several of Godard's immediate descendants are found as witnesses in this Register. For the story of Godard, a very powerful knight, qui munitionem custodiebat in Eggremonste, and of the miracle of his horses, see the Life of St. Bega in Illus. Doc., No. 1.

78. FINALIS CONCORDIA INTER PRIOREM ET RADULFUM CORBETH DE DONACIONE DE WHYTINGHAM.

HEC est finalis concordia, facta in curia domini regis apud Carliolum, die Sabbati proxima post festum sancti Bartholomei, anno regni regis Henrici secundi xxx^{mo} iij^o,

77. ¹ These six deeds, Nos. 76-81, form an interesting series in the early history of the church of Whicham. By No. 77 William Corbet, lord of the manor, and Denise his wife, confirmed the grant of Godard, their feudal superior. In 1187 it was agreed that the advowson belonged to the monks of St. Bees and that Ralf Corbet was entitled to the benefit of their prayers (No. 78). This church affords an early instance of holding a benefice in moiety. Abbot Clement of York (1161-84), of which house St. Bees was a cell, appointed two clerks to the church, each of whom was obliged to pay a yearly pension to St. Bees and discharge episcopal dues. Both appointments were for life (Nos. 79, 80). At a later date Abbot Robert appointed to one of the moieties with a reversion of the other when it became vacant (No. 81). The possession of this church by the monks of St. Bees was confirmed by Archbishop Roger of York (1154-81). See No. 107. The yearly pension of ten shillings continued to be paid by the incumbents of Whicham to the monks till the dissolution of the monasteries.

82. CARTA ROGERI FILII COPSI DE ECCLESIA DE CORNEIA CUM PERTINENCIIS SUIS.¹

² Perhaps Wlfi, but Robert son of Ulf seems more probable.

82. ¹These deeds, Nos. 82-87, afford a late instance of the foundation of a parish church in Cumberland. For similar instances, see V. C. H. Cumb., ii. 15-8. The gift of the church of Corney in the south west of the county, of which Copsi was the founder (No. 86), was made to St. Bees while Henry Murdac was Archbishop of York (1147-1153). The subsequent confirmations and inquisitions, which form this series, appear to have taken place in 1185, with which date all the parties and witnesses agree. Godfrey de Lucy (No. 87) was archdeacon of Richmond (Benedictus Abbas, i. 334) and a justice on circuit in Cumberland (V. C. H. Cumb., i. 357) in that year. Before him an agreement between Alexander (probably an error for Alan) son of Benedict and Christiane daughter of Copsi, the Cristine of Cauplande of No. 84, was made (V. C. H. Cumb., i. 358). At the time of the inquisitions, the church had been enjoyed by the monks during the pontificates of three Archbishops for thirty years and more (No. 87). This statement agrees with the dates above indicated. It will be observed that the members of the chapter of the deanery of Coupland did not change, the clergy being the same in all the deeds. The name of the founder was perpetuated in a parcel of meadow, called Copsiholm, till a late date (Dugdale, Mon., vi. 558).

83. ¹The feudal position of Benedict of Pennington, lord of Muncaster, in the manor of Corney is not quite clear. Corney is in the lordship of Millom, but Muncaster, being north of the Esk, is not. One would have expected the confirmation of the lord of Millom rather than of the lord of Muncaster. But the Penningtons had lands in Corney at this date, Langliferga, Langlivergh or Langley, a considerable estate in that parish belonging to them. Meldred, son of Gamel, mentioned in No. 87, gave to the canons of Conishead una mansura in Langliferga with the easements of that vill (Dugdale, Mon., vi. 556). For the later history of the Pennington connexion with Corney, see the calendar of Lord Muncaster's manuscripts in Hist. MSS. Com. Rep., x. App. iv. 223-5). It was at "Langalyver in Coplandia" that Bishop Richard of Sodor died about 1275 (Chron. Manniæ, p. 116, Manx Soc.) on his way from the Council of Lyons. The interest of the Penningtons in Corney may be explained by the next charter, where see the note.

84. ¹ Waldeve, husband of Cristine of Cauplande or Christiane daughter of Copsi, is almost certainly the Waltheve of Penicton who witnessed No. 81. The marriage of Waldeve and Christiane, together with the agreement in 1185 between Alan son of Benedict and Christiane, as stated in the note to No. 82, will explain the origin of the Pennington connexion with Corney, as well as Benedict's confirmation in No. 83.

85. ¹ It is probable that the heirs of Orm son of Roger adopted the name of Corney. Early in the thirteenth century the territorial name is often found. Edward of Corney was steward of Millom when Adam son of Henry was lord (No. 57): Cicely widow of Edward of Corney granted in fee to her son John of Corney all her land in the vill of Quitebec or Whitbeck which had been given to her in free marriage (D. of L. Box A. No. 327): Ives son of Arthur of Corney owed one mark to the Exchequer in 1235 for a false claim (Pipe Rolls, ed. Parker, p. 60). For the grants of Agnes and Amabel, daughters of Michael of Corney, see Nos. 443-4.

86. ¹ The names of Y. abbot of Jervaulx and William prior of Bolton do not occur in Dugdale's lists (Mon., v. 567, vi. 201-2).

⁴ There are no charters of Ketel son of Ulf in this Register, but his name occurs as a witness in Nos. 223, 382 and 384.

⁵ Alan the knight is a puzzle. The deed is too late to identify him with Alan son of Waldeve, lord of Allerdale, and perhaps too early for Alan son of Benedict, lord of Muncaster, to be a knight. Miles is probably a corruption of filius eius: if so, it is meant for Alan son of Ketel who had lands in Hensingham and Bolton. See his charter No. 226.

88. CARTA ROBERTI HAFRYNCTONA DE ECCLESIA DE HAFRYNGTON ETC.

SCIANT omnes tam presentes quam futuri, quod ego, Robertus de Hafrintuna,¹ cum consilio uxoris mee

⁶ John son of Puncon and Richard his brother often occur as witnesses about this date. To the grant of the land of the moor of Skeldhou to the monks of St. Mary in the Isle of Man by Benedict of Penigtona and Meldred his brother, among the witnesses are Ives dean of Coupland, Adam parson of Millum, Robert priest of Punzunebi, William de Essebi, John son of Ponce (filius Poncii) and William his son, Eward son of Ulf and Ketel his brother, Richard son of Ponce (Ric. filius Poncii), Hugh son of Eward and Alan son of Ketel (Anct. D., L. No. 546). To the confirmation of this grant by Arthur son of Godard, lord of Millom, the witnesses are Hardreus abbot of Caldra, Ives dean [of Coupland], Benedict de Millum, Robert priest of Poncioneby, John son of Ponce and William his son, Eward son of Ulf and Ketel his brother, Richard son of Ponce, Hugh son of Eward, Alan son of Ketel and others (D. of L. Cart. Miscell., ii. 11). John son of Puncon appears in the Pipe Rolls as in debt to the Exchequer from 1177 to 1185 when he got an acquittance after his last payment. He was lord of Ponsonby: there are several charters of his descendants in this Register.

useful table for the early descents of this family, all of whom except Osulph appear as grantors or witnesses in this Register. It is as follows :—

Osulph, sometimes called Aculf, held the lands in Flimby which Gospatric son of Orm gave to the priory of Carlisle—"totam terram quam Aculfus de eo tenuit iuxta Flemyngeby inter duas valles." The grants of Gospatric to the monks of Holmcultram and the claims of the Harringtons, the descendants of Aculf, form an interesting series of deeds in the Register of that House.

² By No. 32 Gospatric son of Orm confirmed the church Half-ringtuna, saving the incumbency of Elemer the clerk, his cognatus, during life, and by Nos. 34 and 36 the confirmation was renewed by Thomas son of Gospatric.

89. RECOGNICIO DE PASTURA IN COMMUNI DE MORETON ET WEDDAKER ETC.

92. CONCORDIA INTER ABBATEM MONASTERII BEATE MARIE EBORACI ET CONVENTUM DE CONIGHESHEVED DE QUINQUE SOLIDIS.

UNIVERSIS sancte matris ecclesie filiis, ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, R. de Longo Campo, abbas sancte Marie Eboraci, salutem in domino. Noverit universitas vestra, quod cum mota esset controversia inter nos et canonicos de Kuningesheved super ecclesia de Witebec, tandem considerantes et attendentes paupertatem predictae domus de Kuningesheved in hunc modum de communi consensu capituli nostri et predictorum canonicorum, mediante etiam magistro H. tunc temporis archidiacono Richemondie, talem fecimus compositionem, videlicet, quod nos concessimus memoratis canonicis omne jus quod habebamus in ecclesia de Witebec in perpetuum, sine ulluo (sic) impedimento. Reddendo inde annuatim ecclesie sancte Bege de Coupland quinque solidos ad duos terminos, medietatem ad festum sancti Martini, et medietatem ad Pentecosten. Ita quod nos nichil amplius ab eis de hac ecclesia poterimus exigere, nec ipsi per se vel per alios aliquid machinabuntur unde ecclesia nostra de sancta Bega de predicto censu aliquam sustineat jacturam. Et ad hujus rei majorem firmitatem presentem compositionem utriusque capituli sigilli appositione duximus roborandam. Noverit universitas vestra nos et successores nostros teneri inperpetuum in quinque solidis annuis solvendis ecclesie sancte Bege in Caupeland, nomine concordie facte inter nos et monachos sancte Marie Eboraci super ecclesia de Witebec. Ita quod nuncquam amplius nomine predictae ecclesie exigere possunt a nobis vel a nostris successoribus. Et ut hec solucio rata inperpetuum habeatur, eam sigilli nostri appositione corroboravimus. 94. RECOGNICIO DE X^s (sic) DE WHITEBEK.

PATEAT universis per presentes, quod nos, prior et conventus domus de Cunyngesheved, ordinis sancti Augustini, Eboracensis dioceseos, ecclesiam parochialem de Whitebec 1199, it is stated that he confirmed the church to the canons as Archbishop Roger had done before him (Anct. D., L. No. 291). There is little doubt that both houses had rights in the church as the composition, recorded in this deed, shows. The date is about 1199. The obligation is acknowledged in No. 93. The advowson of the church was in dispute in 1261 between William de Morthing, plaintiff, and John, prior of Conishead, defendant, but judgment was given in favour of the prior, and William was admitted to the benefit of the prayers of the house (Feet of F. Cumb., 45 Hen. III., No. 78). In 1291 the value of the benefice was taxed at £10, subject to a pension of five shillings to St. Bees (Pope Nich. Tax., pp. 308-9): and in 1535 the church appears as wholly appropriated to Conishead (Valor Eccl., v. 271).

93. ¹ Roger de Hoveden (R.S., iv. 52, 89, 158, 181-5) has much to say about Honorius, archdeacon of Richmond, who figures in this and the previous deed. Both deeds belong to the same period, about 1199.

³ William was at this date parson of Egremont as well as dean (No. 282), but was preferred to Workington on 26 November of that year (1387) by the Crown (Cal. of Pat., 1385-9, p. 369). As "persone of Wirkyngton," he was the victim of ill-usage by some of his neighbours in 1401 when he petitioned the Lord Chancellor for redress (Early Chancery Proc., File 3, No. 39). For a fuller account of this petition, see the original deed and my translation in Transactions of C. & W. Archæol. Soc., n.s. x. 139-42. As William was dean of Furness and Coupland in 1387, it is clear that the old deanery of Coupland, which included both districts in 1291 (Tax. Eccles., p. 308, Rec. Com.), had been divided at some intervening date. The new taxation was assessed on the single area in 1334 (Ibid., p. 328), but in the assessment schedules in Reg. Honor. de Richmond, App. pp. 76-7, they are distinct deaneries: also in 1535 (Valor Eccles., v. 264-72)—Furness appearing under the double name of Furness and Cartmell.

96. ¹ The date here printed, 3 Dec. 1258, agrees with the manuscript, but it is probably a scribal error for 1268. The earlier date, however, is consistent with the incumbency of St. Mary's, York, by Simon de Warrewik, who had the temporalities on 25 July, 1258 (Pat. Rolls, 1247-58, pp. 640, 642).

97. ¹The church of St. John the Baptist of Bechirmet was appropriated to the abbey of Caldra by licence of Archbishop Godfrey de Ludham of York on 19 Dec. 1262. The licence was to take effect on the death or cession of William the rector. The patronage was already in possession of the monks but as they alleged in their petition it was of little value to them inasmuch as they were not free to present a parson, for when they obliged one local potentate they incurred the displeasure of many. The Archbishop granted the petition on the ground that the church was near the house (domui) of Caldra and the parish of St. Bridget which was already appropriated to it (Dugdale, Mon., v. 341). By reason of this appropriation the jurisdiction of Calder extended to the borders of the parish of Egremont which belonged to the priory of St. Bees. The dispute between the two houses in 1327 over the tithe of sheaves and trespass in the park of Egremont was settled according to the terms of this interesting agreement.

quod ego, C., abbas sancte Marie Eboracensis, cum communi consilio et assensu capituli nostri, concessi et dedi Walthel¹ filio Thome clerici de Dene capellam de Cliftona, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, tenere de nobis in vita sua in perpetuam elemosinam. Reddet autem nobis pre-nominatus Walthel, singulis annis, duos solidos, dimidium ad Pentecosten, et dimidium ad festum sancti Martini, et onera episcopalia persolvat. Hoc ei concedimus quamdiu se legaliter erga nos habuerit, et predictam pensionem bene reddiderit. Si vero contingat eum vi vel racione prefatam capellam amittere, non dabimus ei excambium. Testibus hiis Deodato priore de sancta Bega et Willelmo priore de Wederale, Mudac decano, Roberto decano de Coupland, Walthel persona de Briggam, J. presbitero de Vochemanby, T. de Camertona, Adam persona et Adam presbitero de Morelund, Herberto de Thibei, Turgisio

100. ¹The date of Walthel's appointment to the chapel must lie between 1161 when Clement became abbot of St. Mary's, and 1184 when he died (Dugdale, Mon., iii. 538). But the mention of Herbert de Thibei as a witness, who succeeded to his land in Tibe in 1178 (Pipe Rolls, ed. Hinde, p. 164), narrows the date to 1178-84. Deodatus, prior of St. Bees, and William, prior of Wederale, are not found elsewhere. The witness, J. priest of Vochemanby, supplies proof of the existence of an early chapel of Uckmanby, now Allhallows, a township in the parish of Aspatria. The original deed of Bishop Barrow, dated 16 February, 1424-5, touching this chapel, printed by Nicolson and Burn (ii. 150-57), is now at Hesleyside, but the duplicate "in the archives of Rose" cannot now be found. An earlier appointment to the chapel of Clifton by Abbot Clement is at No. 363. The patronage of the chapel was confirmed to the monks of York by Archbishop Roger, 1154-81 (No. 177). In 1219 Thomas, rector of Dean, caused no small stir in that locality by persuading the inhabitants of the Two Cliftons to bury their dead in his churchyard, whereat the rector of Workington made a successful protest (Nos. 98 and 99). By a notarial instrument, dated 19 Oct. 1365, it was declared that the chapel was dependent on the mother church of Workington and was obliged to pay a yearly pension of two shillings to the abbey of St. Mary's, York (No. 216).

SCIANT omnes qui viderint vel audierint litteras has, quod ego, Robertus,¹ [abbas] ecclesie beate Marie Eboraci, cum communi consilio et assensu capituli nostri, concessi et dedi Willelmo,² clerico, filio Thome de Wirkinton, tenere de nobis in vita sua in elemosinam ecclesiam nostram de Wirkinton,³ cum omnibus pertinenciis suis.

101. ¹Robert de Longo Campo, elected in 1189 (Dugdale, Mon., iii. 538).

²William son of Thomas de Wirkinton, that is, son of Thomas son of Gospatric, lord of Workington, and, therefore, a brother of Patrick son of Thomas or Patrick de Wirkinton, who ultimately succeeded to the lordship. As Thomas son of Gospatric, the first of the witnesses and father of the presentee, died in 1201 (Rot. de Oblat., pp. 157, 194), William's presentation to the benefice must have taken place before that date. As parson of Workington and dean of Coupland, William is often found in this Register. In 1225 he proved before Archbishop Walter Gray that he did not succeed his father in Workington, because his father was only the "farmer" of that church and not the rector (Reg., p. 3, Surtees Soc.), and in 1227 he witnessed an agreement between Abbot Robert of York and Patric son of Thomas de Wirkinton about pasture in Staynburn (No. 338).

³The church of St. Mary (Nos. 432 6), Workington, was given to the monks of St. Mary, York, with two ploughlands and the mill of the town by Chetell or Ketel son of Eldred with the consent of Cristiane his wife and William his son (No. 212). As there is no mention of the priory of St. Bees in the grant, it was probably made before its foundation. The grant, however, was confirmed to the priory as well as the abbey by Ranulf Meschin, lord of Coupland, and by Gospatric son of Orm son of Chetell (Nos. 4, 32, 34): also by Archbishop Roger of York, 1154-81 (No. 107). Thomas son of Gospatric made several additions to the benefactions of his ancestors that he might be a participator in the prayers and masses sung in that church (Nos. 35 and 36). Though the ² The name of this rector occurs only in this deed and that which follows.

³ In this and the next deed, Forescales is probably a scribal error for Sorescales: the name occurs as Sorachegil in No. 230. It is now Sosgill. The two villis formed a small township in the parish of St. Bees between Dean and Loweswater. In 1208 Richard de Alneburg exchanged a ploughland in Saurescall and Moldcarkyn with Richard de Lucy, lord of Egremont, and in the same year Lucy settled certain claims of Alan de Pennington at Ravenglass by the grant of privileges in Saurescal and Moldcorkin (Pedes Finium, Cumb., pp. 10-13, Rec. Com.). Molkerkin tarn was known in 1230 as the lake called Thermeran (Feet of F. Cumb. 15 Hen. III. No. 12), and in 1343 as Ternmeran (Cal. of Close, 1343-6, pp. 237, 258). This isolated district is the centre of a group of Welsh legends which make Molkerkin the site of the city and castle of Morken, king of the Cumbri. Jocelyn of Furness (Vita Kentegerni, pp. 197-9, Hist. of Scot.) states that the King was buried in his royal town of Thorpmorken. The legends have gained in amplitude among the local inhabitants and given occasion to several ballads.

104 ¹ Roger de Insula as in No. 98.

² W. prior of Holy Trinity, York, does not appear in Dugdale's list of priors of this house. Stephen was admitted prior, he says, in 1231 (Mon., iv. 681), and was probably successor to W.

³ There is no list of priors of St. Andrew, York, in the Monasticon, vi. 962.

² Perhaps Lund or Lound, a hamlet of Murton or Mereton, in the parish of Lamplugh, where the monks of St. Bees had proprietary rights (Nos. 89, 173, 220). In 1374 the escheator in Cumberland was ordered to remove the King's hand from lands in Stayneburne, Hensyngham and other places because the ancestors of the Deyncourtes (antecessores de Deyncourtes) founded a chantry at the Lund by St. Bede, to which they gave divers lands in Stayneburne and elsewhere to find there one chaplain celebrating divine service for the souls of the king and his ancestors and the ancestors of the Deyncourtes (de les Deyncourtes), and though the said chantry was long time withdrawn and no chaplain was found there, the King reckoned the causes insufficient for him to seize the lands which were worth £10 a year (Cal. of Close, 1374-77, p. 53). There was a chapel or chantry at Dundragh and Neuton, founded by Gilbert de Dundragh, knight, in a similar predicament, with the same result. The chapel or oratory in Stainburne was the occasion of a dispute in 1407 (Illus. Doc. No. LXXXIV.).

³ Walter Dayncourt was rector of Plumland in 1277, when John de Arkilby arraigned against him an assize of novel disseisin touching common of pasture in Plumland (Dep. Keep. Rep., xlvj. App. ii. 254), and died in 1310 (Carl. Epis. Reg. Halton, MS. ff. 134-5).

⁶ When Abbot Gylling gave the bond, he had the fruits of the rectory in possession, for a vicar had been admitted under the new conditions on 12 January, 1304 (Carl. Epis. Reg. Halton, MS. f. 76).

109. ¹There are many deeds relating to the parish of Gosforth in this Register. In addition to the group here, Nos. 109-133, see also Nos. 308-326. The earliest grants the monks of St. Bees had in this parish were from Alan son of Waldeve, lord of Allerdale (No. 308), and Robert de Vallibus (No. 309), the latter of which had probably been given at a previous date by Hubert his father (see No. 314). These grants apparently refer to the same property which was leased to Richer son of Punzun by Abbot Savaric of York, 1132-61 (No. 323). In the first half of the thirteenth century, to which most of the deeds (Nos. 109-133) belong, the monks had considerably augmented their possessions in this district. Several of the deeds relate to small parcels, the names of which do not now survive. With very few exceptions, like Newton, Fleminghall and Bolton, places have been unidentified, but their relative positions are well known in respect of the principal sites.

² The church of St. Mary, Gosforth, was given to the monks of St. Bees by William, the Boy of Egremont, during minority, and was confirmed to them by his sister, Cicely countess of Albemarle (No. 27). The church is included among their spiritual possessions in the confirmation charter of Archbishop Roger of York, 1154-81 (No. 107). But there is no doubt that it remained rectorial and that the advowson was held by the lords of Egremont. A claim was made in 1256 to the advowson by John le Faucuyner against Thomas son of Lambert de Multon, when John acknowledged it to be the right of Thomas (Feet of F., Cumb., 40 Hen. III. No. 67). In the feudal " extents " of Egremont, the church of Gosforth always finds a place.

113. ¹Ada and Adam are difficult words in charters, sometimes representing the feminine Ada and sometimes the masculine Adam. The difficulty is made no easier by the contractions of the copyist. Unless the gender is in some way indicated by the terminals of the adjectives, the masculine has been always adopted. The compiler of the Register often contradicts himself.

Hiis testibus Ricardo de Cleter, Johanne de Flammaunc, Roberto de Goseford, Willelmo de Wayburthueit, Willelmo de Punzunby, Nicholao de Sevinhoues, Roberto de Frisington, Willelmo de Rotington, Willelmo clerico de sancta Bega, et aliis.

115. CARTA RICARDI WARDE DE DREG' DE UNA ACRA ET UNA RODA TERRE IN NEWTONA.

OMNIBUS Ricardus Ward de Dreg', salutem in domino. Noveritis me reddidisse, remisisse et hoc presenti scripto meo quietam clamasse, abbati sancte Marie Eboraci et monachis apud sanctam Begam commorantibus, totum jus et clamium, quod habui vel habere potui, in una acra et una roda terre, cum suis pertinenciis, super bancum et sub banco in Neuton in Goseford, quas habui de dono Ade filie Ricardi Tylliolf de Neuton. Ita quod nec ego Ricardus nec heredes mei nec aliquis per nos vel pro nobis jus aut clamium in predicta terra cum suis pertinenciis de cetero poterimus exigere vel clamare. In cujus rei testimonium presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. 116. CARTA ADE FIL[II] ADE FIL[IE] RICARDI DE TERRA IN NEWTON.

OMNIBUS Adam filius Ade fil[ie] Richardi, eternam in domino salutem. Noverit me dedisse, domino priori de sancta Bega et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, quandam terram meam in Neuton, que jacet inter sepem petrosam que descendit de le chance¹ et tendit usque Gretigate, et terram Johannis Kalewar, et sic totam aliam terram que jacet inter Gretigate et terram predicti Johannis ex parte occidentali et unam acram jacentem sub exitu versus occidentem propinquiorem terre domini de Goseford, cum libero exitu et introitu et cum omnibus pertinenciis et libertatibus et aisiamentis ad predictam terram de Neuton pertinentibus. Ita, scilicet, quod nec ego nec heredes mei aliquod jus vel clamium in predictam terram contra predictum priorem, dominum meum, et conventum inperpetuum vindicare poterimus. Ego siquidem et heredes mei predictam terram prefatis priori et conventui contra omnes homines inperpetuum waurantizabimus, et ab omni seculari servicio defendemus. In cujus rei testimonium huic scripto signum apposui. Hiis testibus domino Ricardo le Brun, 117. DIMISSIO EJUSDEM TERRE PER GWYDONEM PRIOREM.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus Gwydo,¹ prior, et monachi de sancta Bega, salutem in domino. Noverit nos demisisse, Willelmo filio Jordani et heredibus suis, quandam terram nostram in villa de Neuton, quam habuimus de dono Ade fil[i] Ade fil[ie] Richardi, illam, scilicet, terram que jacet inter sepem petrosam que descendit de le Chance² et tendit usque Gretigate et terram Johannis Calewar, et sic totam aliam terram que jacet

117. ¹For this prior of St. Bees, see No. 74. With Priors Ralf of Carlisle, William Rundel of Wetheral and Robert of St. Mary York, William de Ulvesby, official of Carlisle, and Richard de Hardres steward of the Bishop of Carlisle, Prior Guy of St. Bees witnessed a charter to the priory of Wetheral (Reg., p. 345), the date of which appears to be about 1231-9.

²Halliwell explains canch as "a trench, cut sloping to a very narrow bottom: a certain breadth in digging or treading land." It occurs again in No. 314 in reference to the same locality. The name seems to have been used in Cumberland for a hollow, slack or depression, low lying land. Early in the thirteenth century Nicholas of Braithwaite gave to the monks of Fountains all his arable land in Braithwaite iuxta le Chanche: Abbot Adam of Fountains (1259) demised one acre of meadow in Cance near the meadow of Nicholas de Insula: William son of William de Insula granted to the monks one acre of his meadow in le Chancey: this meadow is again referred to as being in a place called Chanze (Register of Fountains, MS. ff. 82-84, Cott. MS. Tib. c. xij.). In 1294 the bounds of Meterdale in Eskdale are described as from the place where Hollegill falls into the Irt, ascending to Wassewater on that side to the stream of Lesagh and along Lesagh ascending to Ederlangebeck, and along Ederlangebeck ascending to le Cance, and thus by the boundaries of the abbot of Furneys to the boundaries of John de Hodeleston (Cal. of Close, 1288-96, p. 402).

128. CARTA HUBERTI DE NEWTONA DE TERRA IN NEWTON.

HOC scriptum cirografatum testatur, quod Adam filius Huberti de Neutona concessit, dimisit, ac tradidit priori sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servantibus totam terram suam, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis tam cum firmis et redditibus quam cum aliis adjacentibus, quam habet in villa de Neutona ex dimissione et tradicionem predicti Huberti, patris sui, ad terminum sex annorum proxime subsequencium et plenarie completorum. Incipiente termino in festo sancti [Martini] in hyeme, anno regni regis Henrici filii Johannis¹ regis 1^ovj^{to}. Habendam donec predictus terminus plenarie fuerit completus : predictus autem Adam et heredes sui totam predictam terram, cum omnibus libertatibus suis, predictis priori et monachis pro quadam pecunie summa eidem Ade per predictos priorem et monachos in sua maxima necessitate pre manibus donata, donec sex vesturas plenarie inde receperint, contra omnes gentes warrantizabunt et defendent : et si Hubertum, patrem predicti Ade, ad partes Coupland infra terminum prenominatum accedere contigerit et terram predictam pro sua calumpniare voluerit ; et dictus Adam predictis priori et monachis warrantizare nequiverit, tunc predictus Adam concedit et statuit totam predictae pecunie summam eidem prius commissam, una cum toto custu suo quem ibidem miserint secundum provisionem virorum fidedignorum predictis priori et monachis, absque omni contradictione seu strepitu judiciali plenarie refundere : termino autem plenarie completo, tota predicta terra cum domibus superedificatis predicto Ade et heredibus suis in eodem statu quo eam dimiserit, salva vetustate, revertetur. In cujus rei testimonium presenti scripto ad modum cirografi confecto hinc et inde alternatim signa sua apposuerunt. Hiis testibus dominis Thoma de Cleter, Ricardo de Flemyng, Willelmo de Punsunby, Roberto de Willton, Roberto de Sevinhoues, et aliis.

129. CARTA ADAM DE NEWTON FILII HUBERTI DE TERRIS IN NEWTON DE SITU MOLENDINI.

UNIVERSIS Adam de Neutona filius Huberti de Neuton, salutem in domino sempiternam. Noverit . . . me concessisse et confirmasse Deo et beate Marie, Eboraci, et beate Bege de Coupeland et monachis apud sanctam Begam Deo et beate Bege servientibus, omnes terras et tenementa, quas Hubertus, pater meus, eis dedit in villa de Neutona et omnes terras et tenementa quas habent de dono et concessione Thome et Johannis, fratrum meorum, in eadem villa. Concessi eciam predictis monachis situm molendini et quod possint construere molendinum in villa de Neutona infra terram suam propriam, ubicumque sibi magis viderint expedire, stagnum facere et exaltare pro sue libito voluntatis, et aquam trahere ubicumque commodius facere poterint. Habendas prout carte predicti Huberti, patris mei, et predictorum T. et J., fratrum meorum, plenius testantur et porportant. Et preterea concessi quod annua firma¹ septem solidorum et octo denarios (sic) quas pater meus solebat solvere predictis monachis de terris et tenementis, quas de eis tenuit in eadem villa de Neutona, eisdem et eorum successoribus inperpetuum ad terminos consuetos plene et integre persolvatur de residuis terris meis et heredum meorum in eadem villa. . . . 132. CARTA PAVIE FILIE WILLELMI CAPELLANI DE PUNCHUNBY DE TOTA TERRA SUA IN NEWTONA.

OMNIBUS Pavia filia Willelmi, capellani de Punchunby, salutem in domino sempiternam. Noverit me dedisse, domino priori de sancta Bega et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram meam quam habui ex dono patris mei in Neutona in Coupland, que terra jacet inter terram dicti prioris et terram Radulfi hominis persone de Goseford, cum libero introitu et exitu, et cum pertinenciis, libertatibus, et aysiamendis ad predictam terram de Neutona pertinentibus. Ita, scilicet, quod nec ego nec heredes mei nec aliquis ex parte mea aliquod jus vel clamium in predictam terram contra predictum priorem, dominum meum, et conventum in perpetuum vindicare poterimus. . . . Hiis testibus dominis Ricardo de Cleter, Johanne de Langlivere, Roberto de Lanplou, Nicholao de Moriceby, Ricardo Flandrensi, Johanne de Hale, Johanne de Gosefort, Roberto de Wiltona, Willelmo de sancta Bega clerico, et aliis.¹

133. [CONFIRMATIO THOME DE SENHOWS DE TERRIS IN NEWTON.]

131. ¹ Meant for Robert le Riche. See John son of Robert de Bouilton in No. 293. The epithet is sometimes expressed as Dives. He appears as Robert le Rice in No. 124. On the other hand, if the doubtful letter in both words be read as 't' instead of 'c,' we should have le Rite in No. 124 and lee Rithe in this deed, both words being descriptive of the trade or calling of a wright.

132. ¹ This deed is in duplicate. The witnesses are from the second of the two copies. In the first, domino Roberto de Cleter is omitted. Other differences are Langlevere, Landplou, Goseford.

OMNIBUS Thomas de Senhows,¹ salutem in domino sempiternam. Noverit universitas vestra me cartam Ade de Newton filii² Huberti inspexisse in hec verba: Universis sancte matris filiis ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, Adam de Neuton filius Huberti de Neuton, salutem in domino sempiternam. Noverit universitas vestra etc., as in No. 129. Ego vero dictus Thomas de Senhows, ratum habens et gratum donum predictae Ade in forma predicta, cartam predictam confirmo et ratifico pro me et heredibus et assignatis meis in perpetuum. Ita videlicet quod si contingat predictum annum redditum septem solidorum et octo denariorum, in quibus dictus Adam et antecessores sui solvere tenebantur annuatim predictis monachis, apud sanctam Begam Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege servientibus, pro Flemynghall cum pertinentiis et aliis terris in villa de Newton, quas per cartas suas tenuerunt de abbate beate Marie, Eboraci, priori et monachis sancte Bege

133. ¹ Soon after the disappearance of the Neutons from Gosforth about 1271 (Nos. 129-131), the Sevenhoues or Senhouses, who probably took their name from Sevenhoues, now Hall Senna, a hamlet of Bolton in this parish and an early possession of the family, are found in possession of Neuton in Gosforth. Sevenhoues is met with as a place-name there so early as the beginning of the fourteenth century (Hist. MSS. Com. Rep., x. App. iv. 224). The cornage rent of Neuton was rendered in 1322 by Robert de Sevenhowes to Eleanor, widow of Thomas de Multon of Egremont (Close, 15 Edw. II., m. 8). In 1334 Nicholas de Sevenhoues was tenant (Inq. p.m. 8 Edw. III., 1st Nos. 73). The property remained with this family till 1707: their residences were at Hall Bolton and Seascale Hall. For a pedigree of the family, based on documents at Netherhall, see an interesting paper by Miss Senhouse in Transactions of C. & W. Archaeol. Soc., xii. 247-260.

² The carelessness of the scribe is again manifest in this deed, showing his inability to distinguish between Ada and Adam when copying his charters. In one instance we have fili fully written, denoting Adam, while lower down there is predictae Ade, denoting Ada.

164. PRO FALCONIBUS.

MEMORANDUM quod anno domini m^occcc^o lxxxvj^o controversia erat inter Edmundum Thornton,¹ priorem celle sancte Bege, et Christoferum Sandes² pro falconibus in lez berghe,³ et eodem anno vj^o die mensis Julij, Christoferus Sandes ostendebat evidencias suas in camera

164. ¹ Called Edmund Smyth in No. 451. Prior Thornton must have been absent from St. Bees in 1498 when William Sandes, son of Christopher Sandes, made an agreement with Thomas Barwyke, custos of the cell of St. Bees, touching the bounds of Rottington and St. Bees (No. 452). Thornton was promoted to the abbacy of St. Mary's, York, in 1507 (Dugdale, Mon., iii. 539).

² Early in the fifteenth century the family of Sandes succeeded the Rottingtons in the manor or township of Rottington (Feet of F. Cumb. 9 Hen. V., No. 8) and it remained with them till it was sold in 1579 by Robert Sandes to Henry Curwen knight (Ibid., 21 Elizabeth, Trinity).

prioris sancte Bege coram venerabili patre et domino, domino Willelmo Sevus,⁴ episcopo Karliolenci, et abbate monasterii beate Marie Eboraci, per quas procurabat de domino de Rotyngton capitalium situm de Rodyngton et diversos toftos cum lx acris terre et non plus in Rodyngton, non barghe neque vastum. Sed pro tenemento de Walton non ostendebat evidenciis, sed inter evidencias de Rodyngton erat interliniatus cum tenemento de Walton, et hoc erat false scriptum,⁵ quia dominus de Rotyngton nunquam habebat jus in Walton et propter hoc dominus episcopus precipiebat Christofero Sandes ut non amplius occuparet predictum tenementum de Walton, quia pertinebat ad cellam sancte Bege ut patet per cartam liberam, sed ad instanciam Christoferi Moresby militis et Edmundi Redman armigeri et justiciarii pacis et aliorum multorum ibi presencium, dominus episcopus ex speciali gracia sua licenciebat predictum Christoferum Sandes occupare predictum tenementum de Walton, sicut alii tenentes ad voluntatem occupabant et hoc ad placitum predictorum episcopi et successorum suorum abbatum et monachorum pro tempore.

⁴ The surname of this Bishop of Carlisle, 1495-1502, is found in various forms as Sever, Seueyer, Siveyr, Sveyet, with perhaps no original authority for the guesses. The text of this deed may be read as Senos or Senos and that of the duplicate (No. 451) as Seuus or Senus. Bishop Stubbs calls him Senhouse, thus favouring the reading of Senos or Senus. The point may be determined by the will of Sir Richard York, proved on 17 July 1498, in which the Bishop's full name is given as William Senose (Testamenta Ebor., iv. 135). It was natural that Bishop Senose should have been called in to adjudicate in a dispute at St. Bees, as he had been abbot of St. Mary's, York, before his consecration, and perhaps a member of the family of Seascale Hall. The bull for his translation from Carlisle to Durham in 1502 is printed in Hist. Dunelm. Scriptorum Tres, App. No. cccix.

174. ¹ His father seems to have been Durand the knight who was present at Lamplugh with David I. when that King granted a charter of confirmation to St. Bees (No. 39). The name of Anchetin son of Durand varies much in this Register as elsewhere. In No. 175 we have Alketill, and in other deeds Angetin, Ascatin, Asketill, Anketin, Achetin, and in Coram Rege Roll, 2 John, No. 41, m. 9, Anketell and Anketill. The names of Anchetin's wife and several of his children are given in this group of charters (Nos. 174-6). Richard his heir had apparently assumed the territorial name of Cleter: his name is often found in this Register. He was at one time forester of Cumberland (Reg. of Wetherhal, p. 200). Nicholas, another son, was parson of Cleter. Thomas de Cleter, often mentioned in this Register, was described in 1268 as one of the belted knights (gladio cinctos) of Cumberland (Inq. p. m. 51 Henry III., No. 30). The date of the deed is about 1200.

SCIANT omnes presentes et futuri quod ego, Alketillus filius Duranti, cum consilio et consensu Ricardi heredis mei, dedi et concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege virgini et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram meam de dominico meo in territorio de Clet[er] infra divisas subscriptas sine aliquo retinemento, scilicet, a magna via de sub¹ Dinet descendendo inter duos rivulos versus occidentem usque proximum brachium de Egre et abutissam super predictam viam versus orientem et super Egre versus occidentem. Et insuper communem pasturam, in boscis, in planis, in pratis et pascuis, in moris et muscis, et in omnibus aliis communibus aisiamentis prefate ville de Cletergh adjacentibus, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, liberam, quietam et absolutam ab omni servicio seculari. Hanc terram et hanc donacionem ego et heredes mei warantizabimus et defendemus contra omnes homines inperpetuum. Et ut hec concessio rata sit et illibata in omnibus inperpetuum, sigillo meo proprio ipsam corroboravi, liberam et quietam. Hiis testibus Radulfo tunc temporis senescallo, Michaelē capellano de Egremunt, Simone capellano, Henrico Matefelun, Ricardo de Cletergh, Nicholao persona fratre ejus, Ricardo filio Johannis de Puncunby, et multis aliis.

176. DIMISSIO ROBERTI ABBATIS DE TERRA IN CLETER.

SCIANT omnes qui viderint litteras has quod ego, Robertus de Longo Campo, abbas sancte Marie, Eboraci, cum communi consilio et assensu capituli nostri, dedi et concessi et hac presenti carta nostra confirmavi Ehtrede, uxori Anketini filii Durandi et heredibus suis, vel cui assignare voluerit, jure hereditario tenere totam terram nostram in territorio de Cleter, illam, scilicet, quam Anketinus filius Durandi dedit ecclesie sancte Bege in elemosinam, sicut carta predicti Anketini, quam inde habemus, testatur. Tenendam et habendam de nobis inperpetuum, libere et quiete ab omni servicio et exactione ad nos pertinente. Reddendo inde annuatim Deo et ecclesie sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus duodecim denarios, medietatem ad Pentecosten et medietatem ad festum sancti Martini. Et ut hec nostra concessio et donacio inconcussa permaneat inperpetuum, eam sigilli nostri munimine corroboravimus. Hoc eis concedimus quamdiu se erga nos legaliter habuerit et predictum censum bene reddiderit. et priori et monachis de Wedirhall¹ unam placeam in territorio de Ayringthwait² in puram et perpetuam elemosinam ad construendam ibi salinam sicut ibi viderint melius expedire cum libero introitu et exitu, per illud iter quod dedi priori et monachis de sancta Bega. Predictus autem prior et monachi et homines sui capient omnia estuveria³ sua et aisiamenta tam in terra quam in aqua sicut ibi viderint melius expedire ad predictam salinam tenendam sine contradiccione mei vel heredum meorum. Solvent autem michi et heredibus meis annuatim pro predicta salina sex denarios ad Natale domini in ecclesia sancte Bege pro omni servicio, consuetudine, et exaccione. Et ego et heredes mei hanc predictam elemosinam predictis monachis contra omnes homines warantizabimus. Set et hoc sciendum est quod si prior et monachi processu temporis dictam placeam ad opus suum habere voluerint amplius, sessabunt a solutione sex denariorum. Et ego et heredes mei de predicta placea commodum nostrum faciemus. In cujus rei testimonium presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. 178. CARTA CLEMENTIS ABBATIS DE TERRA IN HAYRINGTHWAIT.

CLEMENS,¹ Dei gracia, abbas sancte Marie Eboraci, omnibus litteras has visuris vel auditoris, salutem. Notum facio vobis me consilio et assensu fratrum nostrorum concessisse et dedisse Reginaldo filio Dermot² et heredibus suis tenere de nobis quandam terram in parochia sancte Bege que vocatur Hayringthwait cum istis divisis, scilicet, de Holgile usque ad Pol, de Pol usque ad mare: item de Holeyll usque ad Haigescoc et de Eikescoc per unam siketam usque ad mare.³ Et sciendum est quod predictus Reginaldus reddet annuatim priori sancte Bege novem solidos pro predicta terra, medietatem ad Pentecosten et medietatem ad festum sancti Martini. Preterea quocienscumque dominus abbas Eboraci habuerit auxilium ab hominibus suis, idem Reginaldus dabit quatuor solidos pro predicta terra. Idem vero Reginaldus propriam carucam suam liberam habebit de multura, et quando parochiani prioris invenient carucas suas ad precariam, ipse Reginaldus propriam carucam suam habebit liberam de precaria, nec dabit ova neque gallinas. Preterea idem R. de herba sua voluntatem suam per omnia faciet et licebit ei seminare quocumque voluerit infra predictas divisas. ³ The bounds of the portion of Arrowthwait, demised to Reynold son of Dermot, fix the parcel in the angle near the present harbour of Whitehaven. Holgile is represented on the map (O. S., lxxvij. Another of the same sort by Gilbert son of Reinfred and Helewise his wife, nearly a century later, which has been printed by Dugdale (Mon., iii. 566), exists at the British Museum with tags and fragment of a seal (Add. Chart. No. 17153). In both grants is included a group of churches over which the grantors of that time could have had little control. In the charter of Chetell the church of Brounefeld is grouped with those of Morlund and Wirkynton. It is difficult to explain Chetell's interest in Brounefeld. When we turn to the confirmation charters given to St. Mary's by Henry II. (Mon., iii. 548-50) and Richard I. (Cal. of Chart., iii. 116) we find the monks offering a charter for each church separately: Ketell son of Eltreth gave them the church of Morland: Waltheff son of Gospatric, the church of Brunnefeld: and Ketel son of Eltred, the church of Wirchintuna (Illus. Doc., No. ix). The inspection of the separate charters connotes true history, like the charters of William Meschin in the earlier portion of this Register which particularize the donors and the grants. Chetell son of Eltred, according to Nos. 2-3, was the donor of Preston near Whitehaven, not of Preston Patrick in Westmorland, to the monks of St. Bees: he was also a witness of the grant of the churches of Whicham and Bootle by Godard de Boivill when the church of the priory was dedicated (No. 76). That he was a benefactor of St. Bees, as distinct from the mother house, shows that Chetell was alive for some years after 1120. From other sources we know he was a large landowner in Kendal (Cal. of Chart., ii. 442) as well as in Coupland.

213. CARTA WILLELMI, RECTORIS DE WIRKINTON, DE PENSIONE EJUSDEM ET CETERIS ONERIBUS.

SCIANT omnes qui viderint vel audierint litteras has quod ego, Willelmus,¹ persona de Wirkinton, filius Thome de Wirkinton, teneor reddere pro ecclesia ejusdem ville abbati et conventui sancte Marie Eboraci dimidiam partem piscium et quatuor marcas argenti quas eis annuatim persolvam ad duos terminos, dimidiam ad Pentecosten et dimidiam in festo sancti Martini. Preterea sciendum est quod tam abbati quam omnibus monachis et eorum diucius servientibus, venientibus Wirkinton hospitandi gracia, hospicium et necessaria honeste exhibeo, et episcopalia jura persolvam, et omnia onera sustinebo. 213. ¹The church of Wirkinton had been bestowed on St. Mary's by Chetell son of Eldred and was associated with St. Bees in the charter of confirmation by Ranulf Meschin, son of the founder of the priory (No. 4) and confirmed by Gospatric son of Orm, the grandson of the grantor of the church (No. 32). But the monks of the mother house retained an arbitrary pension from it which they exacted of the incoming parson by means of a bond. It is an interesting provision which makes it appear that the incumbent held his church by a species of feudal tenure of the owners of the advowson. For a later mode of dealing with the pension see Nos. 216-217. As Thomas son of Gospatric, the first witness and father of the parson, died in 1201 (Rot. de Oblat., p. 157), the date of William's institution must have been previous to that year.

214. ¹It will be observed that the terms of Roger's bond differ somewhat from those of Parson William in No. 213: half part of Wirkinton (Nos. 166, 213). These designations go to prove that Workington was the residential seat of the head of the family in the latter part of the twelfth century. J. Denton must have been guessing when he stated that it was Patrick who "pulled down the manor house of Seaton and dwelt thenceforth at Workington" (Accompli, p. 36). There is no evidence at present known that any of the previous members of the family dwelt at Seaton. For Patrick son of Thomas, see note on No. 38.

218. ¹The succession of the Penningtons at the close of the thirteenth century is involved in some obscurity by reason of some of its members bearing the same name. We have in this charter and the next Alan son of Thomas the nephew, and Alan son of Alan the uncle, the former being in the direct male line. In Foster's pedigree, a careful compilation, there is a gap between Alan son of Thomas and William the next in succession. The link may be supplied by the evidence of an Assize suit in 1278, when an intricate marriage settlement was in dispute touching the manor of Muncaster. From this it would appear that William son of Alan de Penintone was to marry Alice daughter of Benedict de Molecastre (Bain, Cal. Doc. Scot., ii. pp. 29-30). In that case William would succeed on the death of Alan son of Thomas. The Fine Rolls and Inquisitions for 1293 record the death of an Alan de Pennington, but as no connexion with Muncaster has been observed it would be hazardous to identify the deceased with Alan son of Thomas. William de Penyton was in possession of Muncaster in 1301 when he had a grant of free warren in his demesne lands there (Charter R. 29 Edw. I., No. 94). Alan son of Alan de Pennington gave his villein, Adam son of Adam the smith, and Alan son of Thomas de Pennington gave another villein, Alan son of Waldev of Walthwayt, to the monks of Furness (Dep. Keep. Rep. xxxvi., App. i. 178).

220. ¹The family of Lamplugh occupies a prominent place in the history of Cumberland. As soldiers, knights of the shire, sheriffs, conservators of the peace and local commissioners the name is often found in local records. Sir John de Landplou, father of the donor, joined in the pursuit of Robert de Brus in 1307 (Bain, Cal. Doc. Scot., ii. 512). His son Ralf, for his good service in Scotland, was excused to take the order of knighthood against his will in 1342 and exempted from service on assizes, juries and other appointments (Cal. of Pat., 1340-43, p. 358). Nicholas fought in the retinue of Sire de Harrington at Agincourt in 1415 (Roll of Agincourt, p. 341). See another charter of Ralf son of John de Lamplugh at No. 172.

²In the extent of knights' fees held of John de Multon of Egremont at his death in 1334, Ralf de Lamplugh is returned as holding Brounrigg and Moreton (Inq. p. m. 8 Edw. III., 1st No. 73). For the apportionment of the Multon estates between John's sisters, when Moreton fell to Thomas de Lucy and Margaret de Multon his wife, see Cal. of Close, 1337-9, pp. 367, 488. 223. CARTA ROGERI FILII [GIBERTI] DE EADEM CUM PERTINENCIIS IN BOSCO, PLANO ET IN PASTURA.

ROGERUS filius Gilberti,¹ omnibus sancte ecclesie filiis,

223. ¹This deed is so like that which follows that they may be regarded as one.

223. ¹The deeds in this Register throw additional light on the early descendants of Chetell son of Eldred, lord of Workington (No. 212). He had at least four sons, William (No. 212) who apparently died without issue, Gilbert of Lancaster, father of the first William of Lancaster (No. 223), Robert (No. 232) and Orm father of Gospatric. In addition to Workington and Morland and Kendal, Chetell owned a large tract to the south and south east of Whitehaven. Chetell gave Preston to the monks of St. Bees (Nos. 2-9): William son of Gilbert of Lancaster gave Suarthow (No. 11): and Roger son of Gilbert gave Hensingham and Walton (Nos. 223, 232). As Roger's gift was confirmed by Lancaster, it is clear that William was the elder son of Gilbert. Roger married Sigerid, widow of Waldeve and mother of Alan son of Waldeve, lord of Allerdale (Nos. 22, 232), but it is probable that his son Robert (No. 232) was the issue of a previous wife. Evidence to make Gilbert the brother of Chetell and not his son is to be viewed with suspicion. Though Chetell was alive after 1120 (No. 212), his son Orm was old enough to witness a charter in 1094 (Farrer, Pipe Rolls of Lancs., pp. 289-90). Roger son of

Francis et Anglis, tam presentibus quam futuris, salutem in Christo. Sciatis me dedisse et presenti carta confirmasse Deo et beate Marie et sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus villam de Hunsingham, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis, in bosco et plano et in pastura, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, liberam et quietam ab omni terreno servicio, quam villam Alanus tenuit de me in drengagio.² Hanc donacionem feci pro anima mea et pro animabus patris et matris mee et Willelmi fratris mei et pro salute nepotis mei, Willelmi, et omnium parentum meorum. Testibus hiis Willelmo de Essauilla, Willelmo Leleu', Chetello filio Vlf, Benedicto nepote ejus, Waltheuo de Moresceby, Archillo et Willelmo filiis ejus, Henrico Elsi fabro, Gamello Seldswain, Nigello, Siwardo filio Ernis, Rodberto filio Rogeri, Jurdano filio Herni, et multis aliis.³

224. CONFIRMATIO WILLELMI COMITIS ALBEMARLIE DE HENSINGHAM ET WALTONA.

WILLELMUS comes Albemarie,¹ omnibus hominibus suis, Francis et Anglis, tam presentibus quam futuris, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et presenti mea carta confirmasse Deo et beate Marie et sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus villam de Helsingham in bosco et plano, cum terra de Waltona et omnibus pertinenciis suis, in puram et liberam et perpetuam elemosinam, Gilbert and William of Lancaster his brother were contemporaries of Gospatric son of Orm. To regard Gilbert as a brother of Chetell would put him a generation too early. The descent of Chetell's fees points in the same direction. See note on No. 32.

² For an account of tenure in drengage in Cumberland, see my article in V. C. H. Cumb., i. 332-3. The tenant of Hensingham seems to be Alan son of Ketel (No. 226).

225. CARTA CECILIE COMITISSE ALBEMARLIE DE HENSINGHAM.

CECILIA comitissa Albemarie,¹ omnibus hominibus tam presentibus quam futuris, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et dedisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse terram de Hensingham et de Waltona, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege virgini et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, liberam et quietam ab omni terreno servicio. Ita plenarie et libere sicut predicti monachi memoratam terram habuerunt de illo quando dominus meus, Willclmus comes Albemarie fuit vivus et mortuus et sicut idem comes eisdem monachis in carta sua confirmavit prenominatam terram. Hiis testibus Galfrido filio comitis Albemarie, Willelmo Corbett, Willelmo de Boyvilla, Roberto de Bonchil, Rad[ulfo] de Mora, Johanne filio Pu[n]cun, Waltero Camarario, Petro de Alnburc, Ricardo clerico, Willelmo filio Hugonis, Gilberto de Boyvilla, Ricardo de Mora, Willelmo filio Walteri, Ricardo Buche, Henrico juvene, et aliis.

227. CARTA ALANI FILII RICARDI DE COUPLAND DE JSKEP[PA] FRUMENTI PERCIPIENDA APUD BOTHILTON ET DIMIDIA SKEPPA FARINE DE MOLENDINO DE HENSYNGHAM.

OMNIBUS sancte matris ecclesie filiis ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, Alanus filius Ricardi de Coupland,¹

He may be identified with the Alan who held Hensingham of Roger son of Gilbert in No. 223. High Bolton, a township of Gosforth, which contains Bolton Hall, was in possession of Alan and his descendants: he probably also held a portion of Bootle. In 1200 he was one of the sureties of Richard de Luci, his lord, for his fine on succeeding to Coupland and Caldbeck (Rot. de Oblat., p. 45), and in 1209 he owed thirty marks and one palfrey that inquiry be made whether the said Alan removed the serjeants (servientes) who had charge of the King's Crown in Coupland and in 1210 he discharged the debt (V. C. H. Cumb., i. 405, 407). His father was known as Ketel de Cauplandia (Illus. Doc. No. xx.), a name adopted by his descendants. See next charter. From several deeds in the Duchy of Lancaster (Nos. 546, 585) it is known that Alan son of Ketell was a contemporary of Ketel son of Ulf as he appears in No. 223. This Register shows that Alan had several brothers.

² High Bolton in the parish of Gosforth.

227. ¹Following Alan son of Ketell, we have a charter of Richard son of Alan in No. 431 and of Richard de Coupland in No. 271. In this and the next charter we have Alan son of Richard de Coupland, the succession covering the thirteenth century.

salutem in domino. Noverit universitas vestra me concessisse, dedisse, et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse, pro me et heredibus meis, Deo et sancte Marie Eboraci et sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, unam sceppam frumenti percipiendam apud Bothilton annuatim et dimidiam sceppam farine annuatim percipiendam de molendino de Hensingham octo diebus ante festum sancte Bege² vel post quodocunq̄ue voluerint usque ad Purificacionem beate Marie virginis. Volo eciam et concedo quod omnes heredes mei teneantur in dicta solucione dicti frumenti et farine ad dictum terminum eisdem monachis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, sicut in hac presenti carta mea concessum est inperpetuum. Et ut hec mea donacio et concessio rata et perpetua permaneant presentem paginam sigilli mei impressione roboravi. Hiis testibus dominis Michaele de Fournays, Johanne de Kirkeby, Radulfo de Bethun, Nicholao de Moreceby, Ricardo de Flamang, Thoma de Cletergh, Roberto de Haverington, Willelmo de Morthing, Hugone de Moreceby, Roberto de Wilton, Johanne de Corbet, et aliis.

² The feast of St. Bega of Cumberland is traditionally associated with 6 September: the Aberdeen Breviary places it on 31 October: other martyrologies give various dates from 6 September to 17 December. The date of the feast is as difficult as the identity of the saint. This charter, however, makes the observance of the traditional date at St. Bees very unlikely. So long a grace for the payment of rent from 6 September to 2 February is scarcely conceivable in the business relations of the thirteenth century. If the monks observed 17 December as the day of Bega the abbess, the term would suit the requirements here. See No. 104.

Si vero dicta farrina in dicto festo, ut predictum est, in parte vel in toto non fuerit soluta, vult et concedit pro se et heredibus suis et assignatis suis quod liceat dictis religiosis ipsum, heredes suos, vel assignatos suos in dicto molendino distringere per qualemcunque districcionem sibi viderint expedire, quousque de dicta farina ad plenum eis fuerit satisfactum. Et idem Alanus, heredes sui, vel sui assignati dictam farrinam una cum districcione, ut predictum est, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam contra omnes homines warantizabunt, acquietabunt, et defendent in perpetuum. In cujus rei testimonium tam idem abbas, pro se et ecclesia sua sigillum capituli sui, quam idem Alanus, pro se et heredibus suis, sigillum suum presenti scripto cirographato aternatim apposuerunt. One of the earliest rectors that has been met with is Randulf who was a member of the chapter of Coupland at the beginning of the thirteenth century (Anct. D., L. No. 471). In 1260 Robert de Ulflayt received a licence to hold the church of Kirkbampton together with the rectory of Lamplugh (Cal. of Papal Lett., i. 373). In addition to John here mentioned in 1359 and 1365, there is a Robert who appears as a witness in No. 383.

246. ¹The name of this Prior is found in two other deeds (Nos. 258-9) also dated in 1379. The grave-cover of Prior Cotingham is still in existence at St. Bees, though much mutilated. Canon Knowles, writing in 1875, said that the "stone was found broken into more than seventy pieces, but has been very cleverly restored and is now safe within the College building," that is, within the building of the Theological College now defunct (Transactions of Cumb. and Westmor. Archæol. Soc., ii. 29). It is a fair example of a fourteenth century incised stone bearing in the centre a full-length figure of a monk tonsured and shaven. Around the edge of the slab runs a legend which may be thus extended:—HIC : IACET : [BONE : MEMORI]E : FRATER : THOMAS : DE : COTYNGHAM : QVONDAM : PRIOR : HVIVS : ECCLESIE : QVI : OBIIT : ANNO : DOMINI : M^oCCC : : CVIVS : ANIME : PROPICIETVR : DEVS. The latter part of the date was unfinished, a space being left for that purpose, from which it would appear that the slab was prepared during the Prior's lifetime and that the figure is a genuine portrait.

This Alexander de Seton exchanged with Alan de Coupland two acres in Hallebanck in Seton, held of the abbot of Caldra, for two acres in Cordhou (Ibid., A. 9338). William del Brotis granted to his brother John one acre in Seton called "le blackacre" in "le Brotis" next Hycemoor, rendering therefor to Richard de Kellet a rose at midsummer and to Alan de Coupland a penny on St. James' Day (Ibid., A. 9161). In 1391 William Hudleston and Mariota his wife were encoffed of tenements in Hycemoor in the vill of Seton, which they had previously demised to Thomas Mount, chaplain, with remainder after their decease to Robert Lowther, perpetual vicar of Wigton, and others (Ibid., A. 9574).

²The dates of these three deeds (Nos. 263-5) will fall between 1230 and 1240. On 2 May, 1236, Alexander de Morthing granted to John, the prior, and the convent of Kungesh' (Conished) two oxgangs of land in the vill of Wytebech to which grant Eward de Cornay, Alexander de Hitun and John de Boivilla were witnesses (Anct. D., L. No. 568). In Conished deeds touching Whitbeck about the same date, we have as witnesses Adam de Hyton, Simon de Ainresete, John de Boyvilla, Benedict de Ainersathe and Henry son of John, all of whom occur in these three charters (Ibid., No. 569-577).

266. ¹ This prior must be William de Rothewel as in Nos. 231 and 425, and therefore the date of the deed will fall about 1256. He must be distinguished from Prior William de Dereby in Nos. 71, 401 and 438, who falls later, about 1288-94. The witnesses, specially Elyas, bailiff of Egermond, agree with the date of Prior William de Rothewel. See No. 418.

267. ¹ William de Salcok was not sheriff, but under-sheriff of Cumberland, while John de BaylloI was sheriff. At Easter, 1251, he rendered account for the sheriff, John de BaylloI (Bain, Cal. Doc. Scot., i. 335), and at the following Michaelmas, Baillol was ordered to have William Salecoc, his under-sheriff, before the justices in eyre to show cause why he delivered certain malefactors out of prison (Cal. of Pat., 1247-58, p. 114). He is found as a witness to No. 409.

³ The lordship of Millom, embracing the south-western angle of Cumberland between the rivers Esk and Dudden, passed to Joan daughter and heir of Adam son of Henry de Millum who married John de Hodleston. To this John, Henry III. granted a weekly market and a yearly fair in 1251 at his manor of Millum (Chart. R., 35 Hen. III. m. 4). About the same date with the consent of his wife Joan, he confirmed some of the acts of his predecessors in that lordship (Reg. of Holmcultram, MS. ff. 62-3). See a charter of his, dated 1252, at No. 367. On the death of Joan who outlived her first husband, John de Hodleston, their son succeeded. John the elder was dead before 1256, when Joan was the husband of Robert de Lathom (Fees of F. Cumb., 40 Hen. III., No. 64).

268. ¹The names of nearly all the parties to this deed are only found here in the Register, and those that occur oftener are uncertain as to date owing to the succession of the same Christian name in the family. Robert de Bampton is met with in this Register in dated deeds throughout the fourteenth century. On 8 June 1383 he was named as a knight in a commission to inquire into illegal fishings in the Eden (Cal. of Pat. Rolls, 1381-5, p. 286). Similarly a John de Perdishow occurs in dated deeds from 1372 to 1404. From the type of names in the deed and seeing that Robert de Bampton is accompanied by Robert his son, the date of the deed will fall in the second half of the fourteenth century.

Thome Lambhyrd, Johanni de Caldra, Ricardo de Lokerig, Ingramo de Foresta, Willelmo Mageson, Johanni de Man, Johanni Forestario, Johanni de Berningham, Petro clerico, Willelmo del Brewhouse et Petro Plyn omnimodas accionum, transgressionum quorumcumque nobis factarum per predictos occasione quaruncumque contumeliarum inter nos et predictos a vigilia sancti Mathei apostoli ultra preteritum usque diem confectionis presencium. 269. CARTA ROGERI FILII EDWARDI DE TERRA VOCATA ELLERBANK.

UNIVERSIS sancte matris ecclesie filiis ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, Rogerus filius Edwardi,¹ salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Deo et beate Marie et beate Bege virgini et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus in puram et perpetuam elemosinam de dominio meo quandam terram que vocatur Ellerbank,² que jacet inter Wayburthwayt et Bretteby, sicut rivulus descendit inter illam terram et Manrighwayt et ex alia parte sicut quidam alius rivulus descendit inter predictam terram et Setforñ. Et ut hec mea donacio firma et inconcussa permaneat, sigilli mei eam appositione corroboravi. Hiis testibus Willelmo de Boyvill, Roberto de Wilton, Gerardo de Brainthwayt, Hugone de Moriceby, David de Kyrkby, et multis aliis.

269. ¹ Roger son of Edward granted a charter about land in Ravenglass at perhaps a later date (No. 481). As he was a contemporary of Gerard de Branthwaite (see note on No. 230), William de Boyvill and Hugh de Moriceby, the date must be in the first quarter of the thirteenth century.

270. CARTA ROBERTI DE TATESHALE DE X SOLIDIS RECEPTIS DE MOLENDINO DE WYTTON.

OMNIBUS sancte matris ecclesie filiis ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, Robertus de Tateshale,¹ salutem in domino. Sciat universitas vestra me dedisse, concessisse, et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, libere et quiete, redditum x solidorum in molendino meo de Wyttun² ad lumen eidem ecclesie inveniendum, pro anima patris mei et matris mee et pro animabus antecessorum meorum et pro salute mea et heredum meorum. Ego autem et heredes mei persolvemus annuatim prefatis monachis predictos x solidos ad unum terminum, scilicet, in festo sancti Michaelis. Et ut hec donacio mea firma et stabilis permaneat inperpetuum presens scriptum munimine corroboravi. Hiis testibus Aufrai de Huereby, Gilberto de Croft, Roberto de Hagthorpe, Gilberto filio Hervei, Roberto de Spandone, Ricardo prepositi (sic), Alexandro dispensatore, Thoma filio prepositi, et aliis multis.

270. ¹There is much about Robert de Tateshale in the public records for the reigns of Richard and John as a public servant and the owner of several knights' fees in Lincolnshire and elsewhere. He was sheriff of Cumberland in 1197 and of Lancashire in 1199, but he died in 1212 when the custody of his land and heirs, who were under age, was committed to William earl of Arundel, the marriage of Rose his widow being retained in the king's hand (Rot. Chart., p. 118b, Rec. Com.). His official connexion with Cumberland and Lancashire will account for his benefaction to St. Bees.

²Spelman gives a list of over a dozen places of this name in various counties, but the exact place here mentioned has not been identified. The manor of Wyttun, however, was in Yorkshire or Nottingham, touching which a subsequent Robert de Tateshale had pleas in 1267 (Abbrev. Placit., p. 162, Rec. Com.).

271. CARTA RICARDI DE COUPLAND DE J ACRA TERRE IN MORTHWAYT.

Ego vero, predictus Ricardus, et heredes mei prefatam terram cum tota pastura Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege et monachis prenomminatis warantizabimus imperpetuum. Et ut donacio ista rata permaneat et stabilis presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hiis testibus

271. ¹The grantor is witness to a deed of 1235 at No. 229 and must be distinguished from the person of the same name who witnessed No. 238 in 1365. He may probably be identified with Richard son of Alan, the grantor of No. 431.

UNIVERSIS Johannes filius Alexandri de Houen-oth,¹ eternam in domino salutem. Noveritis me dedisse, pro salute anime mee et patris mei Alexandri et Alani filii Ketelli et antecessorum meorum et heredum, Deo et abbacie sancte Marie, Eboraci, et monachis in cella de sancta Bega, Couplandie, Deo et predicte virgini servientibus, unam acram terre arabilis in territorio de Bouelton, scilicet, illam que jacet propinquior Seteknoc versus aquilonem cum communi pasture averiis hominis illius qui terram predictam tenebit pro tempore de dicta abacia beate Marie, Eboraci, et monachis de predicta cella cum omnibus aliis aisiamentis ad predictam villam de Bouelton pertinentibus in puram et perpetuam elemosinam. Ego vero et heredes mei warantizabimus Deo et abacie sancte Marie Eboraci, et predictis monachis de sancta Bega in Couplandia dictam terram cum pertinenciis

272. ¹Very few of the place-names mentioned in the deeds relating to Bolton in Gosforth appear now on the map: they are for the most part names of fields or very small parcels. Staynknoc is probably meant for Staynknoc, as Seteknoc, for Seteknoc in No. 273. Knot is a common name in Lakeland for a crag. The district of Bolton abounds in hows and crags. The date is probably the same as the next deed, that is, about 1240.

273. ¹John son of Alexander de Houenoth or Houthenou was apparently a nephew of Alan son of Ketel who held Bolton (No. 226), his father Alexander being one of the sons of Ketel (No. 471). The phrasing of John's charter favours this descent. The witnesses seem to agree on a date about 1240.

275. ¹ It has been suggested (Nos. 226-7) that the family of Coupland derived their descent from Alan son of Ketel. From the deeds here it may be surmised that the Waberthwaites were descended from Edward or Eward son of Ulf. In two charters of the Duchy of Lancaster (Dep. Keep. Rep., xxxvi. 190) we have as witnesses Eward son of Ulf and Ketel his brother with Hugh son of Eward and Alan son of Ketel. In the same collection, as in this Register, William son of Hugh often occurs. Here too we have the same relationships: Edward or Eward son of Ulf in Nos. 33, 232: Chetell or Ketel son of Ulf in Nos. 223, 382: and Chetell and Eward son of Ulf in No. 384. The partition of Bolton between these two families predicates a common ancestry, which would derive from Ulf thus:—

To an early charter of Godard de Boivilla (Anct. D., L. No. 131) Ketel de Cauplandia and Ewardus de Cauplandia are the first witnesses.

288. CARTA RICARDI FILII JOHANNIS DE PUNCUNBY DE TOTA TERRA IN WIDEKELDFLAT CUM ALIIS AISI[A]-MENTIS MULTIS.

SCIANT presentes et futuri quod ego, Ricardus filius Johannis de Puncunby,¹ dedi, concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Deo et beate Marie et sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram de 288. ¹This Register supplies valuable materials for the early history of the manor of Ponsonby. The names of John son of Puncun or Ponson and Richer son of Punzun appear often as witnesses (Nos. 87, 232, 323): in other places as John son of Ponce (Pontii) and Richer son of Ponce (Anct. D., L. No. 546: D. of L., Cart. Misc., ii. 11). In 1177 John was indebted to the Exchequer for a fine of forty marks for failing to produce his pledge before the justices, a circumstance which apparently indicates the date of his succession (V. C. H. Cumb., i. 347): he gave the church of Ponsonby to the hospital founded at Conishead, which gift was afterwards confirmed by Richard his son (Dugdale, Mon., vi. 556). Richard son of John son of Punzun endowed the same house with all the land by the brook of Saithegile near the stone-bridge and as the path leads from the bridge to the church and as the deep trench runs by the highway towards the west, and so beyond the meadow to the boundary which passes the fence of the churchyard towards the south, and then to the land of the church towards the west, and then to the middle of Crocland, as the furrow of the plough is marked by stones as it passes over Mosouflat to the peatmoss to the bounds of the land given by his father: thus their boundary reaches to the Calder, and so back to Saithegile, the file of the Calder being the boundary of the whole land. Permission was also given to the brethren to inclose the heath of Haukesker for the profit of the house (Ibid., vi. 558).

Widekeldeflat usque ad terram que fuit Pagani, et ita in ascensum usque ad Ulvescrophe descendit ad moram versus ecclesiam et per moram sicut descendit usque ad siketum, et de siketo usque ad fossatum ultra domum Willelmi et sicut fossatum ascendit versus grangiam Haymeri, et sicut idem fossatum tendit ad predictam terram Pagani, in liberam, puram et perpetuam elemosinam, cum communi pastura, in bosco et in plano, in pratis et pascuis et omnibus aliis aisiamentis eidem ville de Punchunby pertinentibus, scilicet, quatráginta averiis et centum ovibus et xij porcis et sex equis cum sequela omnium eorum unius anni, pro anima domini Ricardi de Lucy et pro salute anime mee et animabus patris et matris et omnium antecessorum meorum. Ita libere et quiete et honorifice sicut aliqua elemosina liberius tenetur et possidetur. Et hanc vero donacionem ego et heredes mei jam dictis monachis contra omnes homines warantizabimus inperpetuum. infra predictas acras pro anima domini mei Ricardi de Lucy et pro animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, liberam et quietam ab omni servicio seculari, consuetudine et exaccione, cum omnibus communibus aisiamentis ville de Punchunby et cum communi pastura dicte ville, scilicet, quatráginta averiis cum sequela unius anni et sexaginta ovibus cum sequela unius anni et decem suibus cum sequela unius anni et viginti capris cum sequela unius anni et quatuor equabus cum sequela unius anni. Hanc donacionem feci sepredictis monachis quando corpus domini mei Ricardi de Lucy translatum fuit in ecclesiam sancte Marie et sancte Bege virginis. Ego vero et heredes mei hanc terram cum supradictis aisiamentis et libertatibus prefatis monachis contra omnes homines inperpetuum warantizabimus. 289. ¹This deed is several years later than the last, though Anketin son of Durand is a witness of both. The date is almost certain to be 1212-3, when Richard de Lucy, his feudal superior, was buried in the church of St. Bees (Rot. Litt. Pat., p. 96^b: Rot. de Oblat., pp. 474-5, Rec. Com.). It was probably this Richard son of John, not the Richard son of William de Punchunby of No. 296, who may be identified with Richard de Puncunebi of the Duchy of Lancaster charter whereby he granted to Robert de Bastuntwait lands in the vill of Ponsonby in frank marriage with Godyt his daughter (Box A., No. 322). The witnesses of the grant, Lambert de Muleton, Richard de Caupilland, Ralf de Feritate, Richard Brun, Hugh de Moricebi, Alan de Penitun, Gilbert de Feritate, and William dean of Wirkingtun, all agree with the period of Richard son of John. These dower lands were afterwards bestowed in free alms on the canons of Conishead, comprising one ploughland and 24 acres (Dugdale, Mon., vi. 558).

Insuper quidem dedi et concessi predictis monachis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam in eadem villa pasturam ad centum oves cum sequela unius anni. The 40 acres of pasture were situated within the boundaries from Lower (minori) Staynpik eastward by the brook of Scalderscogh as far as Frithebek and thence to the Calder, and so downward to the place where Hologatebek falls into the Calder, and thence upward to Lower Staynpik. 295. ¹ John son of Puncun and William his son, Daniel son of Michael, Hugh son of Eward, William Chorbet, Peter de Kyrchesantun, and Agnes wife of Benedict de Penintuna are among the witnesses of a grant from Robert de Boivilla and Margaret his wife and their son William with his brothers to the monks of Furness of a moiety of Newby which Waldeve son of Ethmund gave to the said Robert in free marriage with his daughter. The grantor, his wife and children had therefor the right of sepulture in the cemetery of the abbey. When the monks took the land they gave Margaret six marks of silver and a gold ring, because the said land was her marriage portion (Anct. D., L. No. 475). This deed shows the relationships of the parties here and in the next charter.

299. CARTA ADE FILII KETELLI DE J ACRA TERRE IN HALE.

SCIANT omnes tam presentes quam futuri quod ego, Adam filius Ketelli,¹ cum consilio et assensu heredum meorum et amicorum meorum, dedi et concessi et hac mea presenti carta confirmavi Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus unam acram terre in Hale cum communi pastura, scilicet, decem averiis et triginta ovibus et duobus equis, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, ab omni terreno servicio et consuetudine liberam et quietam. 300. CARTA WILLELMI CAPELLANI FILII HENRICI DISPENSATORIS DE DIMIDIA RODA ET VIJ VIRGATIS IN HALE.¹

298. ¹From the grantor and witnesses, the date must be about the same as the foregoing.

299. ¹No evidence has been discovered in this Register to confirm the assumption that Adam son of Ketell was a brother of the more famous Alan son of Ketel, but the inference is probable. It is certain that Alan had three brothers, Benedict, Michael and William (Nos. 29, 31). Adam son of Ketell appears only in this charter and in No. 226. He is the first owner of Hale that has been met with, but see Adam son of Ywan in the next deed. The date here is about 1210.

300. ¹This is a shortened form of the deed that follows.

301. CARTA WILLELMI CAPELLANI FILII HENRICI DE EISDEM.

SCIANT presentes et futuri has literas visuri vel audituri quod ego, Willelmus capellanus, filius Henrici dispensatoris de Hale, dedi, concessi et presenti carta mea confirmavi et in ligia potestate mea assignavi Petro alumpno et assignato meo et heredibus suis de corpore suo provenientibus unam acram et dimidiam rodam et septem virgatas terre in Hale quas Adam filius Ywani¹ michi et assignatis meis dedit. Tenendas et habendas de sancta Bega et de priore et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus prenotato Petro et heredibus suis de corpore suo provenientibus, libere, quiete, pacifice, honorifice, in feodo et hereditate cum omnibus aisiamenis, libertatibus et communibus suis dicte terre pertinentibus que continentur in carta Ade filii Ywani quam michi dedit de predicta terra cum pertinenciis. Reddendo inde annuatim ecclesie sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus quatuor denarios in die sancte Bege pro omni servicio, consuetudine et seculari exaccione et demanda. Si vero dictus Petrus heredem de proprio corpore non habuerit, Adam frater dicti Petri heres ejus erit. Ita, videlicet, quod dictus Petrus predictam terram nec communia nec aisiamenta ad dictam terram pertinencia nunquam alienabit nec aliquo modo elongabit a predicto Ada fratre suo. Et

301. ¹ Adam son of Ywan cannot be identified with Adam son of Ketell in No. 299. To a charter of Richard de Boisvilla, by which ten acres of land in Culdretun were given to the abbey of Caldra, the two last witnesses are Adam son of Ketell and yuain de Hale (Illus. Doc. No. xxxiv). On Monday the feast of St. Clement the Pope, 33 Edw. I. (23 November, 1304), Quenilda, daughter of Adam son of Huyan de Hale, widow, released to Robert son of Sir Richard de Cletern her right in one acre of land in the town of Botil, which she had by the gift of John de Hale, and which used to pay to the true heirs of Hale a pair of gloves yearly (Anct. D., A. 12023).

ut hec mea donacio, concessio et presentis carte mee confirmacio et assignacio robur optineat perpetue firmitatis presens scriptum sigilli mei munimine roboravi. 307. ¹The last we hear of John de Hale is contained in an agreement, dated in 1301, between the monks of Furness, of the one part, and Adam, Robert and John, sons of John de Hale, and their sister Cicely, of the other part, witnessing that the said children quitclaimed all right of action against the convent for the death of their father, John de Hale, and that the convent granted to the said Adam de Hale the land his father held of them at farm in Arnolfby for the remainder of the term (Anct. D. L. No. 453). According to the valuation of the temporalities of Furness Abbey in 1292, the yearly rent of Arnolby in Coupland was ten shillings (Furness Coucher, ed. Atkinson, p. 634). It is now called Arnaby, a hamlet in the township of Millom Above (O. S., lxxxviiij. N.E.).

²The site of the mill near Mill-bridge is there, but Sourmire has not been identified.

308. ¹For Alan son of Waldeve, see the notes on Nos. 22 and 49. Emma his wife is only mentioned here. The witnesses of Alan's four deeds in this Register (Nos. 22, 49, 308, 454) should be compared Illus. Doc. No. XIII, when we get this pedigree of Walter, prior of Carlisle :

In No. 22 Walter is only styled presbyter, being the earliest grant by Alan in the Register. It is open to debate whether this person, being of local parentage, was the famous Walter the priest who endowed the priory of Carlisle with all his possessions when he took the religious habit in that house. Phintor, the steward of Cocker mouth, may be identified with the Finthor who paid five marks to the Exchequer in 1158 as recorded in the first extant Pipe Roll of Henry II. For Adelwald the clerk, see Alan's charter and compare it with that of his father Waldeve in Cart. Prior. de Gyseburne (Surtees Soc.), ii. 318-19.

Hiis testibus Hugone de Morevill, Ada de Ireby, magistro Nigello, Roberto capellano, Ricardo filio Ade, Ricardo de Beauchamp, Roberto clerico.²

309. ¹This Robert de Vallibus will be the Robert who succeeded his father Hubert as second lord of Gillesland about 1165 (Pipe Roll, 11 Hen. II.), and who died without issue in 1195 (Ibid., 6 Ric. I.) when his brother Ranulf succeeded him. It can scarcely be Robert son of Ranulf, the fourth lord of Gillesland, who was a minor and in Archbishop Hubert's ward on the death of Ranulf in 1199 (Ibid., 1 John). Though this Robert appears to have had full possession in 1206 when he was assessed to scutage, Hugh de Morevill, one of the witnesses here, will not admit of so late a date, as he died in 1202 (Ibid., 4 John). Adam de Ireby, another of the witnesses, who witnessed two of Hugh's charters to the canons of Lanercost (Reg. MS., ii. 12, 17), was dead before 1211 when Juliana his widow made an agreement with William de Thoresby touching land in Eistapelith and Blencarun (Pedes Finium, pp. 14-5, Rec. Com.). Hugh de Morvill and Richard de Bellocampo are witnesses to a charter of Thomas son of Gospatric in this Register (No. 61), and Richard son of Adam is associated with transactions in Gillesland (Reg. of Lanercost, MS., ii. 12, v. 21).

²The witnesses favour the identification of the grantor with the family of Gillesland, but the identification is established by an agreement made by Robert de Vallibus II., with the consent of Hubert his son and heir, with Bishop Walter of Carlisle in 1228, whereby the said Robert leased to the Bishop for sixteen years, beginning at Easter, 1228, all his lands in Cumberland together with the fee of Coupland at the yearly rent of 80 marks (Cal. of

311. ¹The family of Falconer, le Faukenere, or Falconar, has frequent mention in this Register. Geoffrey, the grantor, who flourished in the first half of the thirteenth century, is the earliest and called Geoffrey de Gosford the falconer in No. 312: he was succeeded by John his son, John falconar de Gosford, as named in his charter (No. 315). Benedict falconar is a witness to No. 283. John the falconer is best known in this Register as John de Gosford. In No. 318 we have a charter of Robert son of William son of Roger de Gosford, who must not be identified with the Robert de Goseford who is returned in 1295 as holding £10 of land by homage in Gosford (Inq. p. m. 23 Edw. I., No. 62). The inquest after Robert's death was taken on 1 April 1316 when the heirs to the manor of Goseford were declared as John son of Agnes de Estholm, a minor; Mariota, the wife of Alan Bad alias Badde, aged 30; Isabel, the wife of Henry Husecok alias Husecok, aged 26; Joan the wife of Adam de Garth, aged 24; and Ellen, late the wife of William de Kirkebi, aged 25, the daughters of the deceased (Inq. p.m. 9 Edw. II., No. 17).

314. CARTA EJUSDEM DE L. ACRI TERRE IN GOSFORD.

OMNIBUS . . . Grecia de Gosford,¹ quondam uxor Galfridi falconar[ii], salutem. Noverit . . . me, in viduitate et libera potestate mea concessisse . . . Deo et beate Marie et sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo et sancte Bege servientibus totam terram que Hubertus de Val² dedit predictis monachis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam in Gosford, scilicet, quinquaginta acras terre cum racionabili communa, ut carta predicti Huberti testatur, infra has divisas, scilicet, a secundo vado supra domum Ade filii Richeri³ et usque ad Crucem⁴ (scilicet,

314. ¹That Grecia de Gosford should confirm in her widowhood a grant of Hubert de Val suggests either that she was the lady of whom Hubert's land was held or that she was herself a descendant of the grantor. The former assumption cannot be entertained according to note 2 on No. 309: and the latter appears to be the case here. Grace of Gosforth, wife of Geoffrey the falconer, was probably Grecia sister of Robert de Vallibus the Second. When Robert was in prison in 1213, Alice de Vallibus, his mother, Grace his sister, Hubert his son and Roland his bastard brother were accepted as security for his liberation (Rot. Litt. Pat., p. 96, Rec. Com.). On 1 November, 1213, Grace, who was in ward, was delivered to Alice de Vallibus her mother (Ibid., p. 105). Geoffrey the falconer was a witness to a grant of land in Hayton near Brampton to the canons of Lanercost by Robert de Vallibus, son of Ranulf (Reg. of Lanercost, MS., ii. 5): if the above suggestion is well founded Geoffrey was Robert's brother-in-law.

² For Hubert de Val or Vallibus, see note on No. 323.

³ For Adam son of Richer, see notes on Nos. 166 and 286.

³ The lord of Gosford at this time was probably John the falconer or perhaps Robert de Gosford who appears as one of the witnesses. If the latter supposition be right the date of the deed will be late in the thirteenth century, but see note on the next deed.

⁴ Santon a hamlet of Irton near Gosforth.

317. ¹ Though styled Robert son of William son of Roger de Gosford in No. 318, he must be distinguished from Robert de Gosford, lord of the manor of Gosforth, who is a witness of both deeds. The latter was dead before 5 February, 1316, when his lands were taken into the King's hand (Cal. of Fine R., ii. 270). In the following September his lands were divided equally among his five daughters (Ibid., p. 302) whose names are given in note 1 to No. 311.

³Hubert de Vallibus, Vals, Vaus or Vaux, was enfeoffed of the barony of Gillesland by Henry II. in 1158 and died in 1165 when his son Robert de Vallibus succeeded him. See the facsimiles of the charters of enfeoffment in V. C. H. Cumb., i. 306, 320. It is not known how Hubert came to Gosforth, but it is possible that his fee there was an appurtenant of Gillesland though held of Egremont as it appears at a subsequent date (No. 309, note 2). In that case the grant would fall between 1158 and 1161. His charter has not been preserved. Hubert was at the Court of the Empress Maud before the accession of Henry II. (Cal of Doc. France, pp. 72, 208, ed. Round). Robert de Vals was an under-tenant at the time of Domesday Survey in Norfolk and elsewhere (Ellis, Introduction, ii. 307, 398) and another Robert de Vallibus was paying a fine in 1130 for having his wife's inheritance in that county (Pipe Roll, p. 92, Rec. Com.). The name is probably derived from the terram et feodum de Vallibus in Normandy which King John, on 14 July, 1199, confirmed to the abbey of St. Jean de Falaise (Rot. Chart., p. 5, Rec. Com.).

327. ¹This deed is the necessary sequel of the last and must be dated about 1390.

328. ¹The Stanleys were settled at Greysouthen in the lordship of Cockermouth as early as the middle of the thirteenth century. On 20 May 1354 Thomas de Auisthwait demised the manor of Auisthwait, now Dalegarth, in Eskdale, to Nicholas son of John de Stanlowe and Constance his wife, daughter of Adam son of Thomas de Auisthwait (Illus. Doc. No. LXXV.), a manor which had been granted to Benedict son of Ketel, ancestor of the said Thomas, by Henry son of Arthur, lord of Millom (Ibid., No. XXII.). In 1387 Nicholas enfeoffed trustees of the manors of Auisthwait and Ponsonby and about the same date settled certain lands in Embleton on his son Thomas de Stanlawe and Margaret his wife, and in 1425 Stanlawehall in Emmelton and the manors of Ponsonby and Auisthwait passed to Nicholas de Stanlawe, son and heir of Thomas de Stanlawe, who is the grantor of the two charters in this Register. Much more will be found about the succession of this family at Dalegarth and Ponsonby in the Illustrative Documents. The residential seat was at Dalegarth, and Ponsonby was utilized as the dower-house for the widowed members of the family.

330. ¹ Stainburn, a township in the parish of Workington (O. S., liii. s.E.), came to the monks by gift of Waldeve, lord of the neighbouring fee of Allerdale. The charter is not extant, but the gift was confirmed by William Meschin, lord of Coupland (No. 2), in whose fee it was situated, at the foundation of the priory. This series of deeds (Nos. 330-349) introduces the names of the earliest tenants of the township, among whom the family of Stainburn was predominant. In the early part of the thirteenth century the township was a fully organised territorial unit, with a park or demeſne lands in the hands of the monks, a mill, town-fields, meadow, country (territorium), common, and other adjuncts. The vill consisted of a street inclosed on either side with a gate, the usual form of villages in Cumberland, of which the towngate is a common feature in local folk speech. The gates served the twofold purpose of restraining cattle and protecting the inhabitants. The manor of Stainburn was burnt by Robert Bruce in 1315 (Leland, Collectanea, i. 24).

who witnessed a charter of Adam de Montebegon in the Reg. of Wetherhal, p. 368. Adam married a daughter of Adam son of Suan who confirmed "Enereseiset" to the monks as in No. 41. Simon de Aynnerset, Ainresete or Ainerset is often found as a witness in the Coupland deeds of the Duchy of Lancaster early in the thirteenth century. Clement abbot of York, the grantor, is dated 1161-84.

355. ¹ Gamel de Clifton witnessed the recognicio of the chapel of Clifton (No. 99) in the early part of the thirteenth century. A person of this name appears, with John de Dene, a witness to Alice de Romili's charter at No. 490. and in a transaction touching a ploughland in Helton (Flecket) in the parish of Askham, Westmorland, against Nicholas de Morevill in 1197-1202 (Pipe Rolls of Westmorland, pp. 177, 189). Though called Gamaliel in this charter, there is little doubt that Gamel is meant. This is the only deed in the Register by Michael, but his name as Michael de Clifton is found among the witnesses at Nos. 338, 343.

² The township of Clifton, though in the parish of Workington and subject to the parish church, was not parcel of the manor of Workington. It was one of the Five Towns, given by William Meschin to Waldeve son of Earl Gospatric (No. 498), which formed the Honor of Cockermouth. The manor of Clifton was a dependent of Lorton, parcel of the Honor. In a survey of 1578 the manor of Great Clifton with its members, Stainburn and Little Clifton, is set out in numerical order as the third of the Quinque Ville. The township had two villis, known as Great Clifton, High Clifton or Kirkclifton, and Clifton, Low Clifton or Little Clifton.

At the latter place Ranulf is probably an error for Michael. Compare the witnesses of the deeds and the property involved in this group of charters. Adam son of Ranulf does not occur again in the Register.

363. ¹ In the margin there is a note that the deed habetur sub cera. Contra Thomam clericum de Dene de capella de Clifton. Of the early history of this chapel there is much in the Register (Nos. 98-100, 107, 216). In addition it may be noted that in 1263 Bishop Robert of Carlisle had a plea in the King's Court against James, parson of Dene, "wherefore" he held a plea in the Court Christian of the advowson of the church of Clifton against the prohibition (Curia Regis R. No. 173, m. 5d.). It is known from a deed at Cockermonth Castle that James was presented to the church of Dean by William de Fortibus, earl of Albemarle, before this date, but the position of Bishop Robert is not so certain. The dispute can scarcely refer to the Clifton in Westmorland, over which the Bishop had jurisdiction, for that church belonged to the canons of Wartre, having been given to them by Ralf Engaine (Abbrev. Placit., p. 22, Rec. Com.). The pension due to the monks out of the chapel of Clifton was exacted so late as 1396 (Cal. of Papal Lett., v. 4).

364. ¹ Benedict de Rotington was the grantor of several deeds in this Register; among them, Nos. 414-24. He was lord of Rottington, a township near the village of St. Bees held by Reiner when the priory was founded (No. 2). Charters of Benedict son of Benedict de Rotington are at Nos. 425-6: of Ranulf de Rotington, who was a contemporary of Priors John and Daniel at the beginning of the thirteenth century, at Nos. 430, 437.

Sir John was at the siege of Caerlaverock in 1300 in the division of the earl of Lincoln (Roll of Caerlaverock, pp. 3-4, ed. Wright), when for arms rouge portoit frettez de argent, and joined in 1301 in the famous letter of the barons to the Pope to which his seal bearing a fret is attached (Palgrave, Parl. Writs, i. 103-4: Rep. on the Dignity of a Peer, iii. App. 126: The Ancestor, viii. 105). In 1303 he was commissioned as one of the arrayers of horse and foot in Cumb. and Westmor. for the defence of the march while the King was engaged beyond the Forth (Pat. 31 Edw. I. m. 20). ² Gilbert de Wirkinton or Corwen was sheriff from 1278 to Easter 1283, though ordered to be removed from office on 6 Dec. 1282 (V. C. H. Cumb., ii. 314). The date of the deed belongs to this period.

367. ¹ Adam de Millum, the last of the heirs male of Godard de Boivilla in possession of the lordship, released all his right in the advowson of the church of Millom to the monks of Furness by deed, dated at Millum on 23 Dec. 1230 (Anct. D., L. No. 459). He must have succeeded his brother William son of Henry son of Arthur some years before, for in 1229 he was party to a suit in company with John and Richard de Morthing about a tenement in Whitbeck (Pat. 13 Hen. III. m. 5d.). On Adam's death, the lordship passed to Joan his daughter and heir who married John de Hodleston, to whom Henry III. granted a weekly market and yearly fair at his manor of Millom in 1251 (Chart. R. 35 Hen. III. m. 4). With the consent of Joan his wife, daughter and heir of Adam de Milnum, he confirmed certain charters of his predecessors to the monks of Holmcultram (Reg. MS. ff. 62-3). John cannot have lived long after this, for Joan, then the wife of Robert de Lathum, had a suit with the lord of Egremont in 1256 about the liberties of Millom (Feet of F. Cumb. 40 Hen. III. No. 64).

It is a late transcript by a scribe imperfectly acquainted with Latin: in one place at least he got muddled and apparently did not follow his copy with accuracy. The most interesting feature is the record of the method used by the monks in marking the bounds with sculptured crosses. By diligent search some of these might be recovered. Several of the place-names are easily identified.

371. ¹William Thornton, the last abbot of St. Mary, York, 1530-39: previously prior of Wetheral: retired on a pension at the dissolution.

²By No. 9 Ranulf Meschin, son of the founder of St. Bees, enfeoffed the monks of the manor of Avenderdale: they had already the tithes of the whole chase of Coupland Fells. But no chapel of Ennerdale is mentioned in the charter of Archbishop Roger (1154-81) at No. 107. By the charter of Abbot William the chapel was raised to the rank of a parochial chapelry, the right of burial having been conceded. Taken with No. 389 we have two singularly interesting instances of the growth of dependent chapels to the status of parish churches. At an earlier date the chapel of Eskdale was treated in a similar way. In 1445 the inhabitants of the valley of Eschdale stated that the houses or farms (domus sive mansiones) which they inhabited were ten miles or more distant from the parish church of St. Bees (sancte Bigie) in the deanery of Coupland, and that there intervened two broad (grossis) waters and three streams (riuulis) which swelled in rainy and winter weather, so that they could not conveniently go thither for christenings, burials, divine offices, sacraments and sacramentals: adding that the rector of the said church had sufficient for his support, and that if the chapel of St. Catherine the Virgin, situate in the said valley, were erected into a parish church, and if they were allowed to have burials therein and in its cemetery, and a baptismal font, it would be a great benefit. The abbot of Caldyr, to whom the petition was referred, was instructed that if the facts were as stated and if the priest of the chapel was willing, he was to erect the said chapel into a parish church, with cemetery, font, bell-tower and bells and other parochial insignia, after due compensation had been made to the mother church (Cal. of Papal Lett., ix. 480-81).

²The baronial customs or services of cornage, noutgeld or horngeld, serjeants' food, witnessman and summoner secundum usum Caupeland are native customs of great interest too lengthy to be discussed here. For cornage, see my argument in V. C. H. Cumb., i. 312-331: for serjeants' food, which survived in Cumberland till a recent date, and for witnessman, compare this deed with Richard de Lucy's charter to Adam de Moserthe about the customs of Mosser and his pleas with Adam son John, Adam de Moserg and Adam de Lamplo about the customs of their respective tenements in Breseko, Moserg, and Morton (Illus. Doc. Nos. xxviii., xxix.). Mr. Farrer has printed abstracts from a charter at Hornby from Richard de Lucy to Reginald son of Adam touching Braithestaines of a similar nature as that to Adam de Moserthe (Transactions of C. & W. Archæol. Soc., n.s., ii. 331-2). In 1292 John de Hodeleston granted to the monks of Furness quittance of suit at his court of Millum, and of pannage for their hogs and puture of the foresters and of Bode and Wyttenesman, which services were formerly claimed from the monks in respect of their land of Botherulkill in Coupland (Anct. D., L. No. 458). The services of bode and wyttesman are mentioned in the famous English letter of Gospatrik in the eleventh century (Illus. Doc. No. iv.). For the customs of the liberty of Coplande, see Illus. Doc. No. xxx. Alan son of Waldeve gave to Uctred a ploughland in Aspatrike that he might be summonitor in Alledale (No. 498). One of Uctred's successors, called John le Servand, held that land in 1224 by service of making summonses (Coram Rege R., 9 Hen, III. No. 19, m. 33a.).

Et quod predicti Thomas et heredes sui et eorum ballivi de cetero non faciant aliquas districciones in predictis terris racione Cornagii, pastus serviencium, wittnesman, seu pro predictis summonitoribus inveniendis, nec racione alicujus alterius servicii inperpetuum. Set quod predictus abbas et omnes successores sui et monachi de sancta Bega et eorum tenentes habeant et teneant omnes predictas terras et tenementa cum omnibus pertinenciis suis in liberam, puram et perpetuam elemosinam, liberam et quietam ab omni seculari servicio et exaccione inperpetuum. Et adeo pure et libere sicut aliqua elemosina liberius concedi poterit et confirmari. 379. ¹ Among the witnesses of the next charter we have Henry de Eglesfeld and Robert his brother, which seems to connect the grantor with the previous charters. The dates also agree. The present charter is much later than Nos. 376-8, 380. From Gilbert de Wyrkyngton, the first witness, the deed cannot be much earlier than 1265.

am in domino salutem. Noverit me dedisse Deo et sancte Bege, Couplandie, et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus quandam rodam terre in Eglesfeld, scilicet, partem meam in curtis particulis del Gail. Tenendam Hiis testibus domino Roberto de Hautona, tunc ballivo de Cokyrn[outh], domino Ricardo le Brun, tunc ballivo de Egyrmund, Thoma, persona de Brigham, Johanne de Boyvill, Thoma de Watmirthac,¹ Henrico de Eglesfeld, Roberto fratre ejus, et multis aliis.

381. CARTA GODITHE FILIE MICHAELIS DE FURNESIA DE J BOVATA IN EADEM CUM PERTINENCIIS.

NOTUM sit tam presentibus quam futuris quod ego, Goditha¹ filia Michaelis de Furnessia, dedi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Deo et sancte Marie et sancte Bege virgini et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, pro salute anime mee, unam bovata[m] terre in Eglesfeld de dominio meo in vita mea, liberam et quietam ab omni servicio preter elemosinas et oraciones ad dominum. Et cum Deus omnipotens vocaverit de hoc mortali seculo me, famulam suam, concedo predictis monachis in memorata villa tres carrucatas terre, unam, videlicet, de meo dominio liberam et quietam ab omni terreno servicio, et alias duas carrucatas terre quas tenet de me Walterus,² homo meus, 380. ¹An error for Satmirthac. For the date, see note on No. 378, where the witnesses are about the same, of whom Michael de Eglesfeld, the grantor of the present deed, is one.

381. ¹For the grantor's family, see note on No. 68. Goditha was the second wife of William de Esseby. See note on William at No. 52. Her brother Marsilius witnesses the grant here and Ansellus or Anselm de Furneis, another brother, is the grantor of No. 466. Daniel son of Daniel, the grantor of No. 68, was her nephew. Much about Goditha's family will be found in the abstracts of the charters in the Duchy of Lancaster (Dep. Keeper, Rep. xxxvi. App. i. 161-205).

²Probably Walter son of Trothan as mentioned in Nos. 376-7.

liberas et quietas ab omni terreno servicio preter forense servicium quod idem monachi exinde facturi sunt. Has autem tres carucatas terre tenebunt de me et heredibus meis inperpetuum, ut Willelmus de Eseby, jamdudum dominus et sponsus meus, et ego et heredes mei et antecessores mei sumus participes omnium bonorum que fiunt in domo sancte Bege et in abbatia sancte Marie, Eboraci, eternaliter. 382. CARTA WILLELMI COMITIS ALBEM[ARLIE] DE DENE ET EGLISFELD.

WILLELMUS,¹ comes Alb[emarie], omnibus hominibus suis de Coupland, Francis et Anglicis, has literas audientibus vel audituris, tam presentibus quam futuris, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et presenti carta confirmasse Willelmo de Eseby² convencionem inter Rogerum filium Gileberti³ et Hodardum filium Roberti⁴ et ipsum Willelmum factam de terra de Dene et de Eglesfeld, quam de eis tenet, sic[ut] carta illorum testatur et ex mea parte ei dono et confirmo et heredibus suis. Tenendam et habendam de me et de heredibus meis, ³ This word is not certain : it cannot be Godardi or Odardi, but it might be uirdadi. The name does not appear again in the Register.

⁴ As iamdudum is taken in the sense of the present, William de Esseby will fix the date about 1170. If William was deceased, the deed will be later.

382. ¹This earl will be William le Gros, earl of Albemarle, who married Cicely, daughter of William fitz Duncan, and died in 1179. For two of his charters touching quittance of Noutegeld, see Nos. 17·8 and note to the former charter.

383. QUIETA CLAMACIO ROGERI FILII GERARDI DE MORTONA DE SALTER.

OMNIBUS Roger filius Gerardi de Mortona,¹ salutem in domino. Noverit me concessisse Deo et beate Marie, Eboraci, et beate Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, pro salute anime mee et successorum meorum, totum jus et clamium quod habui vel aliquo modo habere potui in toto manerio de Saltergh cum omnibus pertinentiis ad dictum manerium infra et extra pertinentibus. 384. GOSPATRICIUS FILIUS HORM DE OMNIBUS TERRIS SUIS IN SALTER CUM PARTINENCIIS.

⁵ Perhaps another form of, or an error for, Arturo. The witness must be Arthur son of Godard, lord of Millom.

383. ¹ The nature of this deed is explained by a note in the margin: reddicio Rogeri de Mortona de manerio de Salter: quinta de Salterhg: habetur sub cera: vide aliam cartam fo. 2 precedentem. Roger de Morton does not occur again in the Register, except as a witness to No. 171 which is dated 21 Sept. 1248. The deed here is perhaps a few years later.

384. ¹ For the grantor, see note on No. 32.

² This deed is a shortened form of No. 33 and has the same witnesses. The text at militibus Comitibus is undoubtedly wrong though written out. It should be, as suggested in No. 33, militibus Comitisse, knights of Cicely, countess of Albemarle. Frumbald the knight appears without Ralf as a witness to No. 53. It is suggested that Frumbald is the same as Girinbald who witnessed No. 233. Ralf de Cailly or Chailli and William son of Clerenbaud or Clerenbald were knights of the Honor of Skipton in 1166 (Liber Rubeus, R. S., p. 431) which would account for their presence in Coupland. On the other hand, see Pipe Rolls of Lancs., pp. 409-10, where Grimbald appears as a witness to a charter about this date, identified by Mr. Farrer as a Lancashire landowner, but why not in Skipton as well?

¹³ The deed, which has neither title nor testing clause, is not mentioned in the table of contents, but is inserted in the Register between books 1x. and x. Taken with No. 371, the two deeds throw a welcome light on the ecclesiastical status of chapels in Cumberland during the medieval period.

390. ¹ There is little doubt that the grantor came to Dearham by the instrumentality of the canons of Gisburne who had from an early date the rectory of the church and some land there. We have William de Corneburgh witnessing a charter in Westmorland to the monks of Byland (Hist. MSS. Com. Rep. x. App. iv. 323): he was probably father of Ingeram the grantor. It was ordered in 1202 that William de Corneburg was not to be impleaded for anything so long as Ingelram, his son and heir, was beyond the sea on the King's business with Robert de Turnham (Abbrev. Placit., Rec. Com. p. 37). Ingelram was alive in 1227 (Pat. Rolls, 1225-32, p. 131), but he was dead in 1228 when Mabel his widow was administering the affairs of Bennington in Yorkshire (Close Rolls, 1227-31, p. 107). We have not found the name again in Cumbrian record, but it is prevalent enough in Yorkshire evidences about Ingeram's period.

²The date of this deed cannot be far from the foregoing, as the grantor is a witness thereof and both deeds have several witnesses in common. Ysaac parson of Thorpenhou can scarcely be identified with the Isaac de Torpennoc who appears in the Pipe Roll of 1163. Similarity of territorial name does not always connote relationship. Men migrated from one place to another and became known by the places of their abode.

393. ¹Adam the Great occurs as Adam Grossus in No. 400. The identification displaces the possible reading of Adam le Grec or the Greek.

396. ¹ The relation of William de Derwentwater to Tallentire needs explanation. According to No. 498 the villis of Talintyre and Castebyrge (Castlerig) with the forest between Caltre and Greta were given by Waldeve son of Earl Gospatric to Oderd son of Liolfe. These parcels are found in the possession of the family of Derwentwater before the close of the twelfth century. In 1234, while the heir of Adam de Derwentwater was under age and in ward of the Earl of Albemarle his feudal superior, four oxgangs of land in Talentyr were forfeited by John son of Richard of Talentyr and restored to Adam's heir (Close Rolls, 1231-4, p. 511). Adam the deceased here was Adam son of William, and the heir was William son of Adam, the William de Derwentwater mentioned in the text. See the charters of Adam son of William de Derwentwater and of William son of Adam de Derwentwater to the monks of Fountains in the Register of that house (Cotton MS. Tib. C. xij. ff. 94-5). The vill was held in 1303 by William de Derwentwater from his kinsman Thomas de Derwentwater by the service of doing suit at the court of Derwentwater (Inq. p. m. 31 Edw. I., No. 15). Tallentire remained with that family and the Ratcliffes, its successors, till late in the sixteenth century.

² This must be an error for Robert de Mulcastre who was sheriff in 1260-61 which is the date of this deed. In other local evidences, some of the witnesses here are found in association with this sheriff.

397. CARTA EJUSDEM DE DIVERSIS TERRIS IN TALENTYR.

SCIANT quod ego, Ricardus filius Johannis divitis de Derham, remisi Deo et beate Marie, Eboraci, et sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servantibus totum jus et clamium quod habui vel habere potui in sex acris terre et decem perticatis in villa de Talentire in hiis divisis, scilicet, jacentibus; in Harkilflat due acre et viginti et octo pertice inter terram Alexandri Whitefote et terram Thome de Derwentwater,¹ et in Bighou una acra et triginta et tres pertice inter terram Willelmi filii Johannis et terram Johannis Qwitefote, et in banco quinque rode et decem et octo pertice, et in banco de Warthichole quinque rode et duodecim perticate. 397. ¹See the note on the Derwentwaters to the previous charter.

²This deed is in duplicate. From the grantor and the witnesses it cannot be many years later than No. 396.

398. ¹The danger of accepting territorial names at this period as a proof of relationship is shown by this group of deeds. In No. 397 we have Richard son of John de Derham and here we have the same person calling himself of Talantire. In the case of these mesne tenants, a man was known by the title of the property with which he was dealing. The same rule applies to parsons of parishes. The parish is often given as the surname without any indication that he was the parson.

² Those who wish to see a discussion of Henry son of Conan, knight, and his ancestry, should refer to Cartul. Priorat. de Gyseburne (Surtees Soc.), ii. 183-5, where Mr. W. Brown deals with a difficult pedigree. Henry or one of his ancestors probably got his footing in Talentire through his connexion with the above priory of which the family were benefactors. The name does not occur again in this Register. It would appear that Henry had property also in Westmorland, for in 1263 Henry son of Conan and Juliana his wife gave half a mark for an assize of novel disseisin taken before M. de Lytlebyr (Fine Rolls, ii. 400, Rec. Com.). He died before 19 Aug. 1285, being a tenant of Lucy daughter and heir of Robert de Twenge, a minor in the king's ward (Cal. of Fine, i. 219).

407. ¹ The deed whereby the monks were enfeoffed of this land in Milnethorp, in the parish of Heversham, Westmorland, has not been preserved, but there is a note in a later hand written over the title of the deed in the Register which probably refers to it: Memorandum de carta Willelmi de Wyndessoure de xij acris in Heuersham in communi pastura. As these (Nos. 407-8) are the only deeds touching this property in the Register, it may be assumed that they refer to the first dimission. In that case the place of William, the grantor, in the pedigree of Wyndessoure is certain. On the death of William de Lyndeseye, lord of this part of Westmorland, in 1282, the inquest reported that Heveresham, Grarig and Morlund were held by William de Windesouer (Cal. of Inquis., ii. 270). For this branch of the family, see Duchetiana, 267-312.

² The renewal of the lease on 11 November, 1282, after the accession of Prior Benedict is interesting. Prior Nicholas de Langton his predecessor (see next deed) must have vacated since 14 September. Benedict was still prior in 1286 (No. 106).

² See note 2 on previous deed.

OMNIBUS ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, Radulfus de Leuyngton,¹ salutem. Noveritis me dedisse, concessisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Deo et ecclesie sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, pro anima Ricardi de Leuyngton et pro animabus antecessorum et successorum meorum, duos solidos annuos per manum Henrici cissoris de Karliolo et heredum suorum fideliter percipiendos de firma illius terre quam dicto Henrico et heredibus suis ad feudofirmam tradidi in eadem villa, medietatem ad Pentecosten, et medietatem ad festum sancti Martini. 410. OBLIGACIO ABBATIS DE HOLMCOLTRAM DE VJ DENARIIS.

UNIVERSIS Christi fidelibus has literas visuris vel auditoris, frater Johannes¹ dictus abbas de Holmcoltram

409. ¹ Ralf de Levynghon, lord of Levinton, now Kirkclinton, on the north of Carlisle, succeeded his brother Richard in 1250 and died without male issue in 1253 (Fine Rolls, ii. 80, 176, Rec. Com.). For an account of his family and its descent from Richard the Knight who was enfeoffed of the manor by Henry I., see my article in The Ancestor, iii. 80-84. As the grant was made for the soul of Richard de Levington, the date must be between 1250 and 1253.

410. ¹ No deed has been found in the Register of Holmcultram to answer to this bond. It must, however, refer to John who was abbot from 1237 to 1255 (Chron. de Mailros, pp. 148, 182, Bann. Club). John had been previously abbot of Grey Abbey (de Jugo Dei) in the county of Down, Ireland, a dependent or cell et ejusdem loci conventus, salutem in domino. Noveritis nos teneri domino priori de sancta Bega ad solucionem sex denariorum argenti annuatim pro mina² nostra super terram suam apud Whithofthaven reponenda. Ita quod sulta³ convencio aliquando dicto domino priori displicuerit libere possit eam infringere et nos ab ipso loco amovere. Quod si nobis aliquando non placuerit prefatam convencionem observare libere nobis licebit ab eadem resilire. In cujus rei testimonium huic scripto sigillum nostrum apposuimus. Valete.

411. CARTA RICARDI DE PRESTON ET AMABILLE, UXORIS SUE, DE IJ ACRIS TERRE IN TERRITORIO DE STRILKLAND.

OMNIBUS hominibus suis has literas visuris vel audituris Ricardus de Preston¹ et Amabilla, uxor ejus, salutem in of Holmcultram. One of the acts of this abbot was under discussion in the King's court in 1269 (Coram Rege R. 53 Hen. III. No. 146, m. i.).

² For the history of mining at Whitehaven, see my article in V. C. H. Cumb., ii. 340-41.

³ The scribe has written sulta, but apparently in error for si ista or si illa or si dicta, probably the first-named.

411. ¹ A succession of Richards of Preston makes the identification of the grantor somewhat difficult. Amabilla his wife was a daughter of Walter de Stirkland as named in the next deed. There was a Richard de Preston in 1208 who, with Erneburg his wife, had an agreement with Gilbert son of Gilbert touching 40 acres of land in Kirkeby Lonesdal and 10 acres in Whitinton (Feet of Fines, Westmorl. 10 John, No. 30), and there was another Richard de Preston in 1256, who, with Alice his wife, had transactions with Henry of Nottingham touching two oxgangs of land, except a mill and 25 acres, in Preston, when the property was granted to Richard and Alice and the heirs of Alice for ever (Ibid., 40 Hen. III. No. 30). The witnesses to the deed in this Register, Patrick son of Thomas and Adam de Haverington, agree with the later date. Unless there is an error in the record of the fine, Alice for Amabilla, the chronology is not easy to explain. The date of 1256 would suit all the circumstances, but see note on No. 413.

domino. Noverit universitas vestra nos, caritatis intuitu, concessisse, dedisse et presenti carta nostra confirmasse Deo et ecclesie sancte Bege et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus duas acras terre in territorio de Stirkland in Aykstubbes cum pertinenciis ad perficiendum redditum duodecem denariorum per annum libere et quiete ab omni servicio seculari, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, imperpetuum et in auxilium sustentacionis luminare (sic) ad altare sancte Marie virginis imperpetuum. Et ut ista carta nostra firma sit et stabilis imperpetuum eam sigillorum nostrorum munimine corroboravimus. Hiis testibus domino Patricio filio Thome, Ada de Haverington, Gilberto de Kyrkslak, Gilberto de Whitby, clerico, et Johanne fratre ejus, et aliis.

412. CARTA WALTERI DE STRIKLAND DE IJ ACRI TERRE IN CROSRIG.

OMNIBUS sancte matris ecclesie filiis presens scriptum visuris vel auditoris, Walterus de Stirkland,¹ salutem in 412. ¹ At Midsummer 1208 Walter de Stirkland and Cristiane his wife had an agreement with Sigrid daughter of Uctred, tenant of a ploughland in Stirkland in Westmorland, whereby Walter and Cristiane acknowledged the land to be the right of Sigrid to hold of them and the heirs of Cristiane by the free service of a two shilling render yearly. For this acknowledgment Sigrid granted to them all her land from Aspelgile to Groshousic and from Groshousic to Bounwath, to hold to the same and the heirs of Cristiane (Feet of F. Westmor. 10 John, No. 28.) The purport of the fine suggests that Stirkland was of the inheritance of Cristiane, who is said to have been a daughter of Roger fitz Reinfred from whom she had Great Strickland in dower. Walter's heir, son or daughter, was given as a pledge for the loyalty of Gilbert son of Roger son of Reinfred in 1216 when that baron was restored to King John's favour (Rot. de Oblat., pp. 570-71). From 1228 to 1232 Walter was employed as one of the justices of Westmorland for gaol delivery or for taking assizes of novel disseisin (Pat. Rolls, 1225-32, pp. 418-9, 310, 412), and in 1235 he was one of the collectors of the aid to Henry III. (Close Rolls, 1234-7, pp.

domino. Noverit universitas vestra me, pro salute anime mee et Cristiane uxoris mei et pro salute animarum omnium antecessorum meorum et successorum meorum, dedisse et concessisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Deo et Beate Marie et celle sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus duos acras terre arabilis de dominico meo in Crodrig cum pertinentiis, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, libere et quiete ab omni terreno servicio et exactione ad lumen inveniendum ante altare beate Marie virginis. Et ego vero et heredes mei predictas duas acras terre prefatis monachis warantizabimus contra omnes homines imperpetuum. Confirmo insuper et concedo predictis monachis duas acras terre quas Ricardus de Preston et Amabilla filia mea uxor ejus, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, per cartam suam eis dederunt. Et ut hec mea donacio et concessio perpetuum robur optineat presenti scripto sigillum meum in testimonium apposui. 413. CARTA AMABILLE UXORIS RICARDI DE PRESTON DE TERRIS IN STRIKLAND ET IN AYKSTUBBES.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quos presens scriptum

189-91): his return is given in Testa de Nevill, p. 412. But he was dead before 12 Nov. 1246 when there was partition of a moiety of the manor of Stirkeland between Robert son of Robert de Stirkeland and Adam son of Walter de Stirkeland, in which Rowland de Revefyl and Ralf de Ayencurt were interested (Feet of F. 31 Hen. III. No. 14). See the Strickland grants in the Register of Wetherhal, pp. 321-7, specially that by William de Stirkeland, knight, whereby he confirms the grant to St. Bees in the vill of Great Strickland of Walter de Stirkeland his proavus. There are several pedigrees of this family in print more or less unsatisfactory. Walter's daughter is called here Amabilla or Mabel, wife of Richard de Preston, as well as in the previous and following charters.

pervenerit, Amabilla¹ quondam uxor Ricardi de Preston, salutem eternam in domino. Noverit universitas vestra me, divine pietatis intuitu, in libera potestate viduitatis mee, concessisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Deo et ecclesie sancte Bege in Coupland et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram quam dominus meus Ricardus de Preston dedit eisdem in territorio de Stirkland et Aykstubbles cum omnibus pertinentiis et aisiamentis dicte terre pertinentibus, libere et quiete ab omni servicio seculari, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam. Et ut ista mea concessio et confirmacio firma sit et stabilis imperpetuum presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hiis testibus

414. CARTA BENEDICTI DE ROTINGTONA DE X ACRIS ET IIJ PERTICIS IN ROTINGTONA.¹

413. ¹In 1292 William de Stirkeland knight confirmed to the monks of Wederhal and St. Bees of Coupland the lands and tenements they had of the gift of Walter de Stirkeland his proavus and of his other ancestors in the vill and territory of Great Stirkeland (Reg. of Wetherhal, pp. 326-7). By the deed here Amabilla, widow of Richard de Preston, confirms her deceased husband's grant in No. 411, but there are no witnesses to indicate an approximate date. So late as 1313-15, we have Amabilla, late the wife of Richard de Preston, making a fine with the King for acquiring certain tenements in Stirklaund (Inq. ad. q. d. 7 Edw. II. No. 32 : Originalia R. 8 Edw. II. m. 11). It is scarcely possible that this Amabilla could have been the daughter of Walter de Stirkland as in No. 412. Two successive Richards of Preston appear to have had wives named Amabilla. In 1281-2 the monks of Cockersand demised to Richard de Preston of Kendal the mill of Preston : at some later date this Richard granted to Richard his son and Anabilla his wife land at Preston : and Thomas de Egelesfeld conveyed to Richard de Preston son of Sir Richard and to Anabilla his wife a yearly rent in Sygiswych (Hist. MSS. Com. Rep. x. App. iv. 225).

is our chief evidence for the succession of the family which bore its name in the thirteenth century, but the deeds are not in chronological order. The place-names on St. Bees Head are full of interest, but few of them are now to be found on the map.

² It is probable that all the deeds of this group in the name of Benedict de Rotington refer to Benedict son of Benedict son of Ranulf de Rotington. See No. 426. In that case this portion of the collection would fall from about 1240 to 1265. Fortunately some of Benedict's grants are dated (Nos. 418, 420, 425, 427).

⁵ The site of the chapel of St. Michael of Rottington has not been identified, but it must have been between the village of St. Bees and Rottington Hall. The carved lintel opposite the west door of the priory church, showing the figure of a man with a sword attacking a dragon, supposed to be a legendary representation of St. Michael, is said to have been brought from the ruins of the chapel. In this neighbourhood stone fragments of ecclesiastical design have been found which may have had a similar origin. There must have been ruins here in the seventeenth century which caused T. Denton to guess that "this place was heretofore a nunnery" (Perambul. of Cumb. in 1687-8, MS. f. 29).

426. CARTA ALANI PENYTON DE TERRIS IN ROTINGTON.

424. ¹This is an ordinary grant or sale of villeins or serfs to the monks, common enough in the thirteenth century.

425. ¹William de Rothewel. See Nos. 231 and 266 with notes there. The date is 1256.

SCIANT quod ego, Alanus de Peniton¹ concessi Deo et beate Marie, Eboraci, et sancte Bege in Coup-land et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus inperpetuum, totam terram quam habent in Rotington ex dono Benedicti filii Benedicti filii Ranulphi de Rotington prout carte quas dicti monachi habent ex dono ejusdem Benedicti plenius purportant. Habendam Hiis testibus dominis Johanne de Hodelston, Thoma de Wirkyngton, Roberto de Haverington, Ricardo le Flammac, militibus, Roberto de Lamplogh, Hugone de Moreceby, Johanne fratre suo, Ricardo de Cletere, Willelmo clerico de sancta Bega, et aliis.²

427. HEC EST CONVENCIO INTER NICHOLAUM PRIOR-EM DE TOTA TERRA DE KERKEHAVEN USQUE KNAPHOW.

426. ¹The feudal or other claim that Alan de Peniton had on Rottington has not been ascertained. At a later period Robert de Rotington is found acting as attorney for one of this family (Furness Coucher, pp. 499-502). Alan's claim seems only to have been to confirm the acts of Benedict son of Benedict son of Ranulf de Rotington perhaps by reason of mortgage or in such like way. The manor of Rottington was held by Reiner the Fleming at the foundation of the priory, from whom probably the family of Rottington was descended: it was a fee of Beckermet and held of the Flemings. On the death of Thomas de Multon of Egremont in 1322, Bekermet with its dependents, Rotington and other hamlets, was held by John son of Rayner Fleming (Cal. of Inquis., vi. 200). J. Denton professes to have "read in a deed in King John's time Robert de Rotington to be a witness and one Reynold de Rotington in K. Hen. 2nd time" (Accompt, p. 25), but neither appears in this Register. The Robert mentioned above is often found in deeds of the fourteenth century: and Reynold may be another form of Ranulf who is known to have flourished in the reign of King John (Nos. 31, 430, 437).

²The witnesses here agree with a date between 1270 and 1280. Alan de Peniton was alive in 1291-2 (Furness Coucher, pp. 310-14, Chetham Soc.), but was dead in the following year (Abbrev. Rot. Orig., i. 77).

HEC est convencio facta inter Nicholaum¹ priorem de sancta Bega et monachos ibidem Deo servientes, ex una parte, et Benedictum de Rotington, ex alia parte, videlicet, quod ego, Benedictus de Rotington, dimisi et concessi dictis priori et monachis totam terram meam de Kirkehaven usque ad Knaphou in latitudine duarum rodarum, excepto Berh² ubi minus se extendit versus mare, et ita linialiter de Knaphou sicut meta jacet usque ad Raise ascendendo usque ad Astinhole,³ et ita de Rayse de Astinhole sicut meta jacet usque ad Brundeshole, et ita de Brunsdhole usque ad Potronkirke et ita de Potrokirke usque ad caprariam domini prioris, et ita de dicta capraria ascendendo sicut rana jacet usque ad terram ecclesie, et ita de terra ecclesie descendendo usque ad Grenehougap, et ita de Grenehougap usque in mare, usque ad terminum octoginta annorum plene completorum pro decem libris argenti quos ego, Benedictus de Rotington, cepi premanibus in meo urgenti negocio de dictis priore et monachis de bonis proprie domus sancte Bege. . . . 428. CARTA BENEDICTI DE ROTINGTON DE TOTA TERRA SUA DE KIRKEHAVEN USQUE KNAPHOW.

OMNIBUS Benedictus de Rotington, salutem in domino sempiternam. Noveritis me dedisse Deo et beate Marie, Eboraci, et sancte Bege in Couplandia et priori et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, totam terram meam de Kirkehaven usque ad Knaphou in latitudine duarum rodarum excepto Berh ubi minus se extendit versus mare, et ita linialiter de Knaphou sicut meta jacet usque ad Rayse ascendendo usque ad Astinhole, et ita de Rayse de Astinhole sicut meta jacet usque ad Brunildhole, et ita de Brunildhole usque ad Potronkirke, et ita de Poutronkirke usque ad caprariam domini prioris, et ita de dicta capraria ascendendo sicut rana jacet usque ad terram ecclesie, et ita de terra ecclesie descendendo usque ad Grenehougap, et ita de Grenehougap usque in mare.¹ Tenendam totam predictam terram Hiis testibus dominis Ricardo de Cletere, Johanne de Langliver, Roberto de Lamp-lou, Nicholao de Moreceby, Michaele de Haverington, Helia, tunc ballivo de Egermund, Roberto de Bramptwait, Johanne de Hale, Johanne de Gosford, Willelmo de Puncunby, et aliis.

429. CONVENCIO INTER NICHOLAUM PRIOREM ET BENEDICTUM ROTINGTON DE QUADAM BARCARIA.

Hoc scriptum testatur quod cum quedam convencio esset mota inter Benedictum dominum de Rotington et dominum N[icholaum] priorem de sancta Bega super quadam bercaria sita in campo de Rotington pertinente

428. ¹The territorial description, though the same as in No. 427, has been repeated here, owing to the variation in the spelling of important place-names. In the margin we have a note: Nota bene istam terram sepere per priores peragrata[m] p^t terre per r. Stanlay.

ibidem ad predictum priorem et libertatem domus sancte Bege, quamquidem bercariam¹ predictus B[enedictus] dicebat ad nocumentum liberi tenementi sui in eodem territorio esse levatam, pax in hunc modum conquievit, videlicet, quod dictus B[enedictus] concessit pro se et heredibus suis et pro salute sua et suorum predicto N[icholao] priori vel qui pro tempore fuerit ut ipse et successores sui habeant sine impedimento suo vel heredium suorum predictam bercariam cum libero introitu et exitu ad oves suas fugandas et sustinendas quando illam partem campi jacere contigerit incultam. Et sciendum est quod cum illa pars campi ad culturam redacta fuerit, ad predictam bercariam predictus prior et successores sui cum ovibus suis ullum habebunt ingressum vel egressum nisi cum blada fuerint asportata. Salva tamen potestate sibi, libera et quieta, blada sua ibidem cariandi et asportandi ubicumque in campo fuerint sine dampno dicti Benedicti vel hominum suorum, necnon omnes commoditates suas predictus prior et sui successores ibidem, ut predicatur, habeant potestatem faciendi Hiis testibus Nicholao de Moreceby, Michaele de Haverington, militibus, Gilberto de Sclegill, Henrico de Botell, Alexandro Matfelun, et aliis.

430. CONVENCIO INTER JOHANNEM PRIOREM ET RANULFUM ROTIGTONA DE DIM[IDIO] STAGNI MOLENDINI INTER KIRKEBY ET ROTINGTON.

430. ¹ Prior John here must be distinguished from the Prior John of No. 140 and from Prior John de Lestingham of No. 230, where see the notes. This Prior John is identified with the year in which Odo King of Germany came into England, that is, in 1207, which is the date of the deed. Matthew Paris has much sancta Bega et Ranulfum de Rotington² quod predictus J. prior cum consilio fratrum suorum dimisit predicto Ranulfo vel cui assignare voluerit dimidium stagni sui inter divisas de Kirkeby et de Rotington ad unum molendinum faciendum ad terminum trium annorum, scilicet, quod predictus R. reddet singulis annis domui sancte Bege vjd., medietatem in festo sancti Martini et aliam medietatem in Pentecosten. Et sciendum est quod predictus prior warrantabit medietatem predicti stagni predicto Ranulfo usque ad terminum trium annorum. Elapso vero termino predictus R. tradet medietatem predicti stagni in manu prioris nisi ex ejus permissione amplius habere possit. Preterea sciendum est quod sepe nominatus R. non accipiet aliquem ad molendinum suum de hominibus prioris nisi pro licencia ejus super folifactum (sic) unius multonis. Et ut hec pactio sit firma et inmolabilis tam sigillum J[ohannis] prioris quam sigillum ipsius Ranulfi huic scripto sunt appensa. Hec convencio anno illo incipit quo Odo rex Allemannie venit in Angliam. Hiis testibus Gilberto famulo prioris, Rogero diacono, Gilberto de Yreschal, Michaele filio Archilli, Willelmo fratre ejus, Ada preposito, R. de Rotincton, Henrico de Mort', Ricardo preposito, Willelmo filio Roberti, Ricardo de Hestholme, Michaele sac[erdote] de sancta Bega, Johanne Muchisda, et aliis multis.

to say about him and his visit (Chronica Majora, ii. 511). It was natural that the visit of King John's nephew, a possible claimant for the Crown, should be regarded as an event of great national importance.

² With the exception of Reiner the Fleming, Ranulf is the first lord of Rottington that appears in this Register. His name occurs in the Pipe Rolls of 1211 and 1213 as rendering account of half a mark for a fine. He is party to a deed with Prior Daniel at No. 437 and witnessed a charter of Richard de Lucy at No. 31. R. de Rotincton, one of the witnesses here, does not occur again. It is possible that he is the "Reynold de Rotington in K. Hen. 2nd time," of whom J. Denton speaks. See note 1 on No. 426.

437. CONVENCIO INTER RANULFUM ROTINGTON DE TOTA MULTURA HOMINUM OMNIUM SUORUM DE ROTINGTON.

NOTUM sit omnibus videntibus vel audientibus literas has quod hec est convencio facta inter Ranulffum de Rotington¹ et Daniele² priorem, et monachos de sancta Bega, quod predictus Ranulfus dimisit priori et monachis, caritatis intuitu et pro obsequio ei a priore et monachis prestito, totam multuram de omnibus hominibus suis de Rotington usque ad terminum trium annorum, et quod omnes homines sui de Rotington molent totum bladum suum ad molendinum prioris per annum ad xiiij^{tum} vas sicut alii homines prioris faciunt, excepto proprio blado predicti Ranulfi. Predictus vero prior quolibet anno ei pro multura xijd. persolvat, scilicet, ad festum sancti Martini. Post triennium vero elapsum si predictus Ranulfus predicto priori et monachis duas marcas quas ab eis recepit persolverit, predicta multura ei quieta remanebit a predicto priore et monachis. Quod si predictas duas marcas tunc non reddiderit, duo solidi annuatim computabuntur in solutione predictarum duarum marcarum, donec sic sint persolute. Et omnes homines predicti Ranulfi de Rotington molent ad molendinum predicti prioris et monachorum donec due marce sic sint persolute.

² 16 February, 1290.

437. ¹ For Ranulf, see note 2 on No. 430.

³ Prior Daniel is only authenticated in the Register by this solitary reference. The date is 1210.

Et sciendum est quod si homines predicti Ranulfi confessi vel convicti fuerint quod bladum suum alibi molerint vel multuram suam alibi dederint, forisfactum unius cujusque hominis erit duorum solidorum, quorum medietas remanebit predicto priori et altera medietas sepredicto Ranulfo. Hanc convencionem fideliter et sine omni fraude tenendam predictus Ranulfus fidem corporaliter prestitit et sigillo suo confirmavit. Preterea sciendum est quod homines predicti Ranulfi venient ad stagnum predicti molendini reparandum cum hominibus prioris cum opus fuerit. Hiis testibus W. de Boyvill, Willelmo filio Ketelli, Ada filio Alani, Henrico de Frisington, Ada de Neuton, Gilberto de Dundrage, Ada de Affrington, Ricardo de Boyvill, et multis aliis. 438. CONVENCIO INTER WILLELMUM BOYVILLE ET WILLELMUM PRIOREM DE MANERIO DE KIRKESANTON CUM PERTINENCIIS IN MOLENDINO ET ALIIS LIBERTATIBUS.

ANNO domini millesimo cc^o octogesimo octavo, ad festum sancti Martini in yeme, facta fuit hec convencio inter dominum Willelmum Boyville,¹ militem, ex parte una, et fratrem Willelmum,² priorem sancte Bege in Coupland, ³ This appears to be an error for festum.

⁴ According to Matthew Paris (Chron. Majora, ii. 531), when rightly interpreted, King John kept his Christmas at York in 1210, which agrees with the Itinerary of that sovereign compiled by T. D. Hardy and printed in his introduction to the Rot. Litt. Pat., of the Record Commission.

438. ¹ Constable of the Castle of Carlisle in 1282-3 (Cal. of Fine, i. 160, 183) : died in 1305 when John de Boyvill his son and heir succeeded (Ibid., i. 522, 524). When John died in 1319 it was reported that he held the manor of Kirkesanton of the abbot of St. Mary, York : there was no capital message in the manor because it had been burnt by the Scots : and that Edmund his brother, aged 30, was his heir (Inq. p. m. 13 Edw. II. No. 10).

ex altera, videlicet, quod idem dominus Willelmus, pro se et heredibus suis et assignatis, concessit et ad firmam dimisit predicto priori et suis successoribus universis totum manerium de Kirkesantan,³ cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, in molendinis, redditibus, boscis, planis, pasturis et pascuis, in omnibus exitibus ad dictum manerium pertinentibus, pro quadam summa pecunie quam idem prior dicto Willelmo dedit premanibus. Tenendum et habendum predicto priori et suis successoribus usque ad terminum decem annorum plenarie completorum, adeo libere et quiete sicut dictus Willelmus vel aliquis antecessorum suorum illud unquam liberius vel quociens tenuerunt. Et sciendum est quod dictus prior et sui successores totum manerium cum suis pertinentiis, sicut predictum est, in fine dicti termini in adeo bono statu quo illud recepit predicto Willelmo et heredibus suis, tam in homagiis quam serviciis et edificiis in dicto manerio constructis dimittent. Exceptis tamen hiis que per casus fortuiti eventum accidunt seu accidere poterunt in futurum. Dictus vero dominus Willelmus de Boyville et heredes vel assignati sui totum manerium predictum cum suis pertinentiis usque ad finem dictorum decem annorum contra omnes homines warantizabunt, adquietabunt et defendent. Et ut ista convencio rata et stabilis permaneat tam dictus dominus Willelmus quam predictus prior huic scripto sigilla sua alternatim apposuerunt. Hiis testibus dominis Johanne de Hodeleston, Thoma de Culwen, Roberto de Haverington, Ricardo le Flemyng, militibus, Willelmo de Bethum, Willelmo del Thaytes, Johanne de Morthyng, Ricardo de Cleter, Roberto de Frysyngton, Radulfo de Puncunby, Symone de Stotevile, tunc ballivo de Egremund, Willelmo clerico de sancta Bega, et multis aliis.⁴

SCIANT quod ego, Willelmus de Boivill,¹ reddam

439. ¹ Henry and Agnes only occur here in the Register, but John de Boyvill, to whom the grant was made, was dead before 1251, for early in that year Elen, his widow, quit-claimed to Michael de Corneye and John Morthing certain lands and rents in Stokbriggeholm, Fors, Botele, Hyton, Bothelton, Goseford and Egremund, with half a ploughland in Wytebec in exchange for an annuity during her life (Feet of F., Cumb. 35 Hen. III., No. 57). At an earlier date John de Bovilla acquired two oxgangs of land in Witbec from John de Morthing (Anct. D., L. No. 571). Guy de Boyvill, one of the witnesses, had an agreement with William son of Habrake in 1241 touching the manor of Swynesat, whereby the manor was acknowledged to belong to Guy, and William received ten acres per totum in campis remociores de sole (Feet of F., Cumb. 26 Hen. III. No. 32). The date of this deed will be, therefore, about the middle of the thirteenth century, or a few years earlier.

century. Robert gave his land of Kirksanton and Horrum to the church of Furness with all the liberties "quas Arturus cognatus meus eedem ecclesie concessit, eo intuitu pariter et tenore quatinus cum de peregrinatione rediero eam libere teneam. Huius donacionis testes sunt Arturus filius Godardi," etc. (Beck, Annales, pp. 128-9). This grant was afterwards confirmed by Pope Eugenius in 1152 (Ibid., pp. 135-6). By No. 27 the Countess Cicely, lady of Coupland, gave to St. Bees four ploughlands in Kirksanton, Haverigg and Thwaites with the service of William de Boyvilla and his heirs, and by No. 441 Abbot Clement of York demised the same to the said William at a yearly rent of half a mark. The present charter is the bond for payment. In 1202 Turstan de Bosco quit-claimed half a ploughland in Kirksanton to William de Beovill for a silver mark (Pedes Fin., p. 6, Rec. Com.). William de Boivilla gave to the monks of Furness the whole land de Melis de Kirkesantan, from Sandscarth on the sea to the syke in Sleuenmire, and so to the syke "inter duas leiriggas" (now two farmhouses a short distance apart), as far as Helupul and by the file of that water to the sea. Among the witnesses of the grant are Richard, Gilbert and Robert de Boivilla (Anct. D., L. 462), the two brothers and nephew mentioned in this deed. Robert de Boivilla son of this William confirmed his father's gifts to Furness for the soul of his brother Ralf, adding the holme near his garden and ten acres at the boundary between Kirksantan and Millom, for the use of the poor in the secular infirmary at the abbey. To these confirmations Henry son of Arthur, Alan son of Ketel, Anselm of Furness, Richard, Gilbert and Robert de Boivill are witnesses (Ibid., 463, 464). The right of common on the meles of Kirksanton involved the monks of Furness in a curious dispute with Roger son of Ralf de Hestholm (now Hestham), a tenant there. In 1279 Roger disputed the abbot's right to the common and appealed his opponent to the wager of battle. The judicial combat came off in area duelli before the justices in eyre at Appleby, but as the contest proceeded, the champions were withdrawn at the instance of Roger who acknowledged the abbot's claim and by charter renounced his right to the abbot's pasture. This deed (Anct. D., L. 465) with its unique endorsement, has been printed by Beck, Annales, pp. 224-5.

³ This property came to the monks of St. Bees by gift of the Countess Cicely as in No. 27, when William de Boivill was mesne tenant. The three townships lie around Millom in the south western angle of Cumberland. Kirchesantala (Kirkesantan in No. 27) is mentioned in Domesday Book (Illus. Doc. No. 111) under the name of Santacherche with one ploughland assessed to geld: it was included in the possessions of Earl Tostig and surveyed as part of the manor of Hougun under Agemundrenesse or Amounderness. The name has an ecclesiastical flavour. The grant of the church of Millom to the monks of Furness by William de Millom carried with it the chapels belonging thereto (West, Antiquities of F., App. xi. No. 62). When the rectory was appropriated in 1228, it was stipulated that Adam the parson should resign the chapel of Kirksanton to the abbot and convent, saving to the mother church of Millom only the bodies of the dead with the oblations, but the wills and chattels of deceased persons should remain as the perquisites of the chapel without reserve (Cotton MS. Claudius B. iii. 175: Reg. of Abp. Gray, Surtees Soc. p. 161). Haverigg and Kirksanton are now included in the modern township of Chapel Sucken (Sucken in 1641: Seuken in 1699: sometimes Sunken). Sunken Kirk is the popular name of a stone circle in that parish. It may be taken that they are all variants of the same territorial name. Kirksanton appears to connote the church of St. Sanctan, an Irish saint. The name is found in this connection both in the Isle of Man and in Ireland.

442. ¹ The earliest of this family we have found is William de Hyton, not mentioned in this Register, who quit-claimed two oxgangs of land in Old Hyton to William de Milnum, lord of the fee, in 1202, and was thereby reinstated in the tenancy (Feet of F., Westmor., 4 John, No. 15). Alexander de Hyton gave the canons of Conishead two acres in Hyton adjacent to the land of Adam de Hyton above Labote and part of a meadow in Hyton

Adam de Millum son of Henry de Millum gave to the monks of Furness a toft and croft in the vill of Botil, to which grant Thomas parson of Bootle, Edward de Cornay, Henry son of John (one of the witnesses here), Alexander de Hitun and Adam de Hitun (the grantor here) were witnesses (Anct. D., L. No. 473). As Alexander de Hyton is the same as Alexander son of Ulfh, a nephew of Anselm de Furness (Illus. Doc. Nos. xvj., xvij), it is probable that Adam belonged to the same stock.

of St. Bees is perhaps due, like that of Robert de Tateshale in No. 270, to the fact that he was sheriff of Cumberland from 1188 to 1197. He was dead in 1202, for in that year the heir of William fitz Aldelin is made responsible for certain sums due to the Crown as issues of the sheriff's office. Geraldus Cambrensis has drawn a curious picture of his person and character. For the historical value of this charter and that which follows, compare my note on "William fitz Aldelin" in The English Hist. Review, xxij. 730-31, with Round, Feudal England, pp. 516-18.

449. ¹ The barony of Burgh by Sands was carried successively in marriage to Richard de Lucy of Egremont and Thomas de Multon by Ada, the elder daughter of Hugh de Morvill. Richard, the first husband of Ada, was alive on 25 June, 1212, when the report of the great inquest of knights' fees in Cumberland was delivered into the Exchequer (V. C. H. Cumb., i. 141-2), but he had died before 11 July, 1213, when Ada his widow paid a fine for having her inheritance and dower out of her deceased husband's lands (Rot. de Oblat., pp. 474-5). Richard de Lucy left two daughters Amabil and Alice as his co-heirs. Thomas de Multon obtained the guardianship of Richard's lands and daughters in 1213 and followed up the advantage by marrying the widow without the King's leave. For this act the wardship of Egremont was taken from him and delivered to another, but he was reinstated in 1218 in the custody of Coplande with the castle (castro) of Egremunde and of all Ada's lands (Pat. Rolls, 1216-25, pp. 165-6). In a few years his sons, Lambert and Alan, were married to Richard's two daughters Amabil and Alice respectively, among whom the Lucy inheritance was apportioned. Thomas de Multon, who died in 1240, is described by M. Paris (Chron. Majora, iv. 49) as a knight of experience in warlike feats and a man abounding in possessions and well skilled in the law. For more about him, see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 567.

² The grantor had a son Alan, who married Alice, one of the coheireses of Richard de Lucy of Egremont as stated in the previous note, and a brother Alan, who does not often appear in Cumberland evidences. Both, however, appear as witnesses to one of the charters of this Thomas de Multon to the monks of Wetheral (Reg., pp. 193-4) where they are described as "Alano de Multon fratre meo, Thoma et Alano filiis meis" The date of this grant will fall about 1220.

450. ¹This deed, in which Ada is described as deceased, is much later than the foregoing in which it is implied that she was alive. At Easter 1232 there was an agreement between Thomas de Muleton and Ada his wife, the plaintiffs, and Richard Gernun and Joan his wife, defendants, touching land and woods in Ayketon, of the inheritance of Hugh de Morevill, father of the said Ada and Joan, whose heirs they were (Feet of F. Cumb., 16 Hen. III. No. 14). The date must, therefore, be between 1232 and 1240.

Hanc vero donacionem et concessionem ego et heredes mei de predicta Ada procreati predictis monachis warantizabimus contra omnes homines imperpetuum. Et in hujus rei testimonium presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. ² Skirbeck near Boston in Lincolnshire. Thomas de Multon, the rector, was a son of the grantor, who negotiated with the King for his father's release in 1216 for marrying Ada, widow of Richard de Lucy (Pat. Rolls, 1216-25, pp. 15-6, 69-70, 83).

³ In the lower margin of this deed we have Nota pro vjs. viijd. in Kirkeandres iuxta Burgh libro primo fo. xxvj: fiat inquisicio. This, no doubt, refers to the half-mark rent issuing out of the mill of Kirkeandres given by Bernard de Ryppelay and Margaret his wife to be paid yearly at the fair of Carlisle. The latter clause seems to show that the Kirkandrews near Carlisle is not meant.

1209-10 (Coram Rege R., 11 John, No. 41) and died soon afterwards, for in that year Alice his wife paid a fine of £500, ten palfreys and ten fillies to have her inheritance as she held it on the day of her marriage to Robert, as well as reasonable dower from Robert's land and the land of Gilbert Pipard her previous husband (Pipe R., 11 John). Alice was alive at the date of the great inquest of 1212 (V. C. H. Cumb., i. 421), but the custody of her land was in dispute in 1223 (Coram Rege R., 7 & 8 Hen. III. No. 17). Alice occupies a large place in the history of the county during the reign of King John. She was probably buried at the abbey of Fountains of which she was a munificent benefactor. Her grant of the mill of Bratheweit near Cockermouth to the monks was made "una cum corpore meo ibidem sepeliendo" (Cotton MS. Tib. C. xij. ff. 86-7). See note on No. 14.

Quare volo et precipio ut omnes heredes et successores mei hanc elemosinam manuteneant et semper pro salvacione mea et sua hilariter illam

The date will lie between 1195 and 1209.

454. ¹ For the grantor, see notes on Nos. 22, 49 and 308. By the latter deed it will be seen that Alan had lands in Gosford which will account for his address to his men of Coupland as well as of Allerdale.

² This phrase might give rise to an interesting discussion on the earliest capital messuage of the barony of Allerdale. J. Denton was of opinion that "Waldeof first baron of Allerdale seated himself first at Papcastle, where he had a mansion house but afterwards he moved to Cockermouth" (Accompt, p. 41). In support of this it may be added that Papcastle was regarded from a remote date as the chief manor of the barony. For example in 1286, after the death of Walter de Wigton, it was reported that he had held his fees in Allerdale of the countess of Albemarle by suit at the court of Papcastle (Inq. p. m. 14 Edw. I. No. 15). For several centuries afterwards the manor occupied the same feudal relation to Allerdale. Legends, however, have grown thick around this Roman site, like most of such sites in Cumberland. See Camden, Britannia (ed. Holland), p. 768. In any case, from the evidence of this deed, it seems clear that Alan was living at Cockermouth, from which Papcastle, on the other side of the Derwent, is only a couple of miles distant. According to No. 498 William Meschin, lord of Coupland, enfeoffed Waldeve, father of Alan, of the Quinque Ville between the Cocker and Derwent, now the Honor of Cockermouth.

² The grantor offered half a mark in 1204 for an inquiry whether he held land in Penwortham subject to tallage (Farrer, Pipe Rolls of Lancs., p. 181) : he was afterwards known as Gilbert de Kellet. At a later date Richard de Kellet enfeoffed Ellota de les Brotis of an acre in Seton in Coupland, called "Blakakir in les Brotis," which he had by reason of the contract of Alina his wife : to hold to her and her heirs, except the religious [of the nunnery of Seton] and the lords of the fee : at the rent to him of three oysters (ostrea) at Christmas, and of a penny to Alan de Coupland on St. James' Day. The deed is witnessed by Robert de Bevirlay, who was parson of Bootle about 1280 (see No. 479). The seal is an antique gem with the legend : S.RICARDI.DE.KEL. (Anct. D., A. 11632).

459. ¹ For the foundation of the claim of the monks of St. Bees, see the charter of Adam son of Henry, lord of Millom, at No. 57.

² The church of the Holy Trinity, Millom, with its chapels, was given to Furness by William lord of Millom, early in the thirteenth century (West, Antiquities, Ap. xi. No. 62). In 1228 Archbishop Walter Gray issued a licence for its appropriation to that house (D. of L., Box A. No. 395) and in 1230 by an ordination he assigned one moiety for the maintenance of three chaplains and another moiety for the use of the convent of Furness. By another deed Abbot Robert of Furness allotted a yearly sum of 34 marks for the portion of the chaplains (Beck, Annales, pp. 194-5). In 1230 Adam of Millom, who had succeeded his brother William in the lordship, quit-claimed the church and the advowson to Furness (Anct. D., L. No. 459). See the deeds in Reg. Abp. Gray (Surtees Soc.), s.v. Millom. When Sir John de Hudleston, son of Sir Richard, made a new fishery near Houberghe, now Hodbarrow, on the river Duddon in 1338, the monks of Furness, as rectors of Millom, claimed the tithe of fish and exacted a yearly tribute of two shillings from the owner (Anct. D., L. No. 461).

Nicholas de Stuteville, lord of Lydal, held Drigg of the lord of Egremont. From No. 466 it will be seen that Anselm of Furness was also an owner in Drigg. At a subsequent period the manor appears as divided between the Stutevilles and the Flemings. In an extent of the barony of Lydal, taken on 18

461. DIMISSIO C[LEMENTIS] ABBATIS DE EISDEM.

SCIANT omnes qui viderint vel audierint literas has quod ego, C[lemens], abbas sancte Marie Eboracensis, cum communi consilio et assensu capituli nostri, concessi et dedi Ketello Portejoie¹ et heredibus suis tenere de nobis

March, 1282, it is stated that William son of Thomas de Greystoke held half a knight's fee in Drigg in Coupland, and that the lady of Aldingham in Furness held a like amount (Inq. p. m. 10 Edw. I. No. 26). It is probable that the Stuteville portion was carried to the Greystokes by the marriage of Helewis de Stuteville with William son of Ranulf, grandfather of the owner in 1282. In agreement with this, Thomas son of William, who died in 1247, once laid claim to the patronage of the chapel of Drigg (Anct. D., L. No. 472). Turgis Brundas, to whom Ranulf Meschin, lord of Cumberland, gave the barony of Lydal, as stated in the inquest of 1212, is by some called a Fleming, and if so, Anselm's ancestor or Michael Flamengus his father may have been nearly related to the aforesaid grantee of Lydal. As the two oxgangs in the grant were afterwards demised by Abbot Clement (No. 461), the date of the benefaction must be before 1184, when the abbot died. The name of Nicholas the grantor appears in the Pipe Rolls of Cumberland from 1177 to 1204.

461. ¹The epithet portejoie here and overhaire and batwrikth in No. 465, the latter being called le batewrit elsewhere (No. 484), are manifestly descriptive of some personal characteristic, occupation or trade, but no satisfactory explanation can be offered.

² The witnesses suggest about 1290 as the date.

466. ¹ For Anselm's place in the family of Fleming of Furness, see notes on Nos. 68, 381. For the further endowment of the chapel of Dreg by Anselm de Furness and his son-in-law Thomas son of John, see the three interesting deeds in Illus. Doc. Nos. xvj.-xviij. Anselm seems to have been the founder of the chapel, which is entitled in the name of St. Peter. It was he who gave it to the canons of Conishead (Dugdale, Mon., vi. 558). Thomas son of William de Greistoc, knight (see note on No. 460), resisted the claim of John, rector of Goseford, to the patronage of the chapel on behalf of the canons (Anct. D., L. No. 472). The advowson was the subject of an agreement in 1255 between William de Furness and John prior of Conishead, whereby the chapel was acknowledged as the right of the priory and William received 25 marks in compensation (Feet of F. Cumb., 39 Hen. III., No. 58). This chapel was enumerated among the churches appropriated to the canons which were allowed in 1390 to be served by stipendiary chaplains removable at pleasure according to immemorial custom (Cal. of Papal Lett., iv. 367).

² This is William son of Ranulf of Greystoke who was assessed to the scutage in 1203 (Pipe R., 5 John): he held two villis in demesne and two in homage (Liber Rubeus, ii. 493, R.S.): but he must have died in 1209, for in that year his land and heir were given in ward with the marriage of Helewise de Stuteville his widow (Pipe R., 11 John), with whom he had received the fee of Drigg. The other witnesses agree that the date of the deed will fall at the opening of the thirteenth century.

467. ¹ The grantor may not be identified with Jordan, brother of Anselm de Furness (see note on No. 68), but with Jurdan son of Ketell in Nos. 462-3. The witnesses show that the deed cannot be earlier than the middle of the thirteenth century. Compare next deed.

470. [CARTA HUGONIS FILII EDWARDI DE IIJ ACRIS IN KELTON.¹]

² John clerk of Dreg who is a witness to Nos. 291, 294.

⁴ William parson of Wirkinton, 1201-1227. The other witnesses, taken with the grantor, agree with this period for a probable date.

² Hugh son of Eward, Eward, Eward or Edward, is the earliest mesne tenant in Kelton that has been met with. There is not sufficient evidence to identify him with Hugh son of Eward who gave a ploughland in Poulton, Lancs., to Walter de Parles in free marriage with Matilda his daughter (Farrer, Pipe Rolls of Lancs., pp. 84, 115), but the name appears often in early Coupland evidences. Eward son of Ulf and Ketel his brother, and Hugh son of Eward not infrequently occur together as witnesses of the same deed. Taken with the territorial descent of Kelton and of Bolton in Gosford, there can be no reasonable doubt that the grantor was one of the family which ultimately adopted the name of Waberthwaite. See note on No. 275.

⁴ The witnesses suggest a date about 1200 or a little earlier. The Latin name for Egremont, adopted by Richard the chaplain, has the support of Geoffrey de Monmouth (Hist. Britonum, p. 27), who speaks of the burgus de Acrimonte or mons dolosorum founded by the legendary Ebraucus. In the foundation charter of the borough by Richard de Lucy, the address is made burgensibus meis de Acrimonte and the witnesses are Adam abbot of Caldra, Robert prior of St. Bega, Henry son of Arthur, Alan son of Ketell, William his brother, Hugh son of Eward (the grantor here), Alan son of Benedict, Gilbert son of Gilbert, Robert de Haveringtun, Adam de Landplogh, Richard son of Anketill and Robert de Wiltona (Transactions of C. & W. Archæol. Soc., i. 282, facsimile). The etymologists were early at work on the place-names of the district.

471. ¹ William son of Hugh may be identified with William son of H. who with Alan de Peintone (Pennington) and Roger son of Edward had a complicated agreement with Richard de Lucy in 1208 touching Renglas. Alan, William and Roger acknowledged the fee of Ravenglas to be the right of Richard, and in return Richard gave them the whole land of Saurescal and Moldcorkin by a curious tenure graduating from Richard to William (Ped. Fin., pp. 10-11, Rec. Com.). The parcels of Sosgill and Mockerkin lay alongside Kelton. See note 2 on previous charter, and compare with the next.

481. CARTA ROGERI FILII EDWARD DE J DOMO ET IIIJ ACRIS IN RANGLASS.

OMNIBUS Roger filius Edwardi,¹ salutem in domino.

⁴ 23 April, 1533.

481. ¹ Roger son of Edward appears in No. 269 as the grantor of land in Waberthwaite. His plea with Richard de Lucy in 1208, touching the whole land and whole fee of Renglas, in which he was associated with William son of H[ugh son of Edward] and

Deo et beate Marie et celle sancte Bege de Coupelandia et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, unam domum juxta crucem² in Renglass et quatuor acras terre arabilis de dominico meo in eadem villa, unam, scilicet, acram propinquiorem terre que fuit Alexandri³ filii mei versus rivulum qui cadit in Esk⁴ fluvium juxta predictam crucem, et iii acras ex altera parte versus aquilonem inter terram que fuit predicti Alexandri et terram meam que terminatur in placea predicte ville et extendunt (sic) se ascendendo usque ad pratium, cum communi pastura et omnibus aisiamentis predicte ville pertinentibus. Hiis testibus Willelmo de Weiburethweit, Thoma de Yrton, Roberto de Branthwertwith, Waltero senescallo de Wirkyngtona, Jordano de Dreg, Michaele Newton, David de Kirkeby, et multis aliis.⁵

482. CARTA ALANI FILII ROGERI DE IJ ACRIS TERRE IN EADEM.

Alan of Pennington, has been referred to in a note under No. 471. To William remained a fishery in the Mighet or Mite which discharges into the sea at Ravenglass, where also some land belonging to Alan's fee was reserved to Roger (Pedes Fin., pp. 10-11, Rec. Com.). It is suggested that Roger was the elder son of Edward and lord of Waberthwaite, from which the territorial name was adopted by Edward's descendants.

² The cross in Renglass probably refers to the market-cross, the site of which is still preserved in the bottle-shaped street of that village. On 20 August, 1208, King John, while he was at Kyrkebi in Kendale, granted to Richard de Lucy a yearly fair on St. James' Day, and a weekly market on Saturday, at his manor of Renglas (Rot. Chart., p. 182, Rec. Com.), for which he gave one good palfrey (Pipe Rolls of Cumb., pp. 129, 135).

³ See his charter at No. 486.

⁴ The estuary of Ravenglass is formed by the confluence of the Esk, Irt and Nite, the latter occupying the central position.

⁵ The date seems to be about 1220-30.

SCIANT omnes tam presentes quam futuri quod ego, Alanus filius Rogeri,¹ dedi, concessi et hac mea presenti carta confirmavi Ivoni filio Michaelis et Alicie, cognate mee, duas acras terre mee in Ranglas pro homagio suo et servicio, scilicet, unam acram et dimidiam in crofto quem Robertus Logan tenuit, et dimidiam acram super Watsadding,² eis et heredibus suis tenendas et habendas de me et heredibus meis, in feudo et hereditate, libere et quiete [et] honorifice cum omnibus aisiamentis tante terre in eadem villa pertinentibus. Reddendo inde per annum duos denarios, scilicet, in die Pasche. Ego vero, Alanus, et heredes mei totam predictam terram cum omnibus pertinentiis contra omnes homines warantizabimus et ab omni forinseco servicio quasi liberum maritagium³ defendemus. Hiis testibus Adam filio Willelmi, Edwardo de Cornai, Rogero filio E[d]wardi, Ricardo filio Roberti.

483. CARTA ALANI FILII ROGERI DE IJ ACRIIS TERRE CUM PERTINENCIIS IN RANGLAS.

OMNIBUS . . . Alanus filius Rogeri de Renglas, salutem in domino. Noverit . . . me . . . dedisse . . . Deo et abbacie sancte Marie, Eboraci et celle sancte Bege in Couplandia et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, duas acras terre mee in Ranglas cum pertinentiis, unam, videlicet, acram et dimidiam in crofto quod Robertus Logan tenuit, et dimidiam acram super Watriding cum communi pastura omnimodis animalibus hominis illius qui predictam terram de predictis monachis tenebit et cum omnibus communibus aisiamentis predicte ville de Ranglass pertinentibus . . .

482. ¹ Son of the grantor of the previous charter.

² Watriding in next charter.

³ By this deed Alan son of Roger appears to convey some land in Renglas to Ives son of Michael as a marriage portion with his relative Alice: in the next deed the said land is bestowed on the monks of St. Bees.

Hiis testibus Roberto de Wilton, Adam filio Willelmi, Petro de Sevenhoues, Jordano de Dreg, Michaele de Neuton, David de Kirkeby, et multis aliis.

484. CARTA IVONIS DE RANGLAS DE TOTA TERRA CUM PRATO IN LIKOKERIDING.

SCIANT quod ego, Ivo faber de Ranglas,¹ dedi Deo et beate Marie, Eboraci, et sancte Bege in Coup-land et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, totam terram meam cum prato in Likokeryding, que, videlicet, terra jacet inter terram Richardi le Batwri² et rivulum descendentem de Heyriding in latitudine et extendit se a terra prioris de Conigsheved³ usque ad terram domini de Penigton⁴ in longitudine. Tenendam Hiis testibus dominis Johanne de Langliver, Nicholao Morisciby, Roberto de Lanplog', militibus, Waltero de Sevenhows, Willelmo de Waibirthwaith, Ricardo Flandrensi, Johanne de Hale, et aliis.

485. CARTA IVONIS DE J ACRA ET DIMIDIA CUM PERTINENCIIS IN RANGLAS.

484. ¹The grantor may apparently be identified with Ives son of Michael at No. 482.

²For this person, see notes on Nos. 461, 465.

³The canons of Conishead had several grants of land in Raven-glass. Roger de Ranglas (no doubt, Roger son of Edward, the grantor of Nos. 269 and 481) gave two acres in the vill of Ranglas lying above the fields called Grastamflet and Watelandes, between the land of Richard le Batewrit and the land of Hubert de Neuton: also 9½ acres there: the whole land upon Edithknot in the same vill. Richard son of Robert de Ranglas gave a fourth part of land in the same vill, bounded as Hulotbec falls on the sand, then up the beck to Aylficroft and thence to Kirksti and so to the King's highway (ad stratam regiam), and thus southward to the said Hulotbec (Dugdale, Mon., vi. 558).

⁴If the date of the deed be about 1250 or within ten years on either side, the lord of Penigton here mentioned will be Alan de Pennington, lord of Muncaster (Penningtoniana, pp. 9-11).

SCIANT quod ego, Ivo faber de Renglas remisi Deo et beate Marie, Eboraci, et beate Bege in Coup-land et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, totum jus et clamium quod habui vel habere potui in una acra et dimidia terre super Graftaneslete jacente inter croftum meum et croftum Gilberti filii Radulfi in latitudine et a magna via usque Todheleriding in longitudine cum toto gardino et omnibus domibus et edificiis in predicta terra constructis et dimidia acra terre mee et prati in Likekeriding inter terram Ricardi le Batwricte et rivulum descendentem de Heyeriding in latitudine et extendit se a terra prioris de Connisheved usque ad terram domini de Peniton in longitudine. Tenendam Hiis testibus dominis Johanne de Langlivere, Roberto de Lantploch, Nicholao de Moriceby, militibus, domino Gilberto rectore ecclesie de Botle, Johanne Falconario, Ricardo Flan-drensi, Rogero de Renglas, et aliis.

490. CARTA ALICIE DE ROMELEY DE TERRIS IN RIBTON.

SCIANT omnes tam futuri quam presentes quod ego, Alicia de Romili,¹ filia Willelmi filii Dunecani, quietum clamavi Willelmo de Ribton² et heredibus suis, pro homagio et servicio suo, drengagium³ quod clamavi in Ribelton quam Gamell, pater suus, tenuit de me. Et concedo et volo et hac presenti carta mea confirmo quod predictus Willelmus et heredes sui teneant predictam Ribelton cum omnibus pertinenciis suis de me et de heredibus meis 490. ¹ For the grantor, see the note on No. 453.

² William de Ribton is the second lord of Ribelton or Ribton, a township in the parish of Bridekirk, his father Gamell being the first, of whom there is charter evidence. According to No. 498, Waldeve, son of Earl Gospatric, lord of Allerdale, the predecessor of Alice the grantor here, enfeoffed Waldeve son of Gilemin of the villis of Broughton, Ribton and Little Broughton as a marriage portion with Ethreda his sister. No existing evidence connects Gamell with this grantee. But Gamell de Ribton was the contemporary of Alan son of Waldeve and was witness of a charter whereby he enfeoffed Waldeve son of Dolfin of the vill of Brachenthwaite (Illus. Doc. No. xiiij.). From the days of Gamel de Ribton in the middle of the twelfth century till the early part of the seventeenth, when it was alienated by William Ribton and Jane his wife, and George Ribton and Susan his wife, the manor was held by this family (Feet of F. Cumb., 9 James I. Trin.).

³ For the nature of this tenure, see note 2 on No. 223.

OMNIBUS Johannes Moresby,¹ dominus de Harres,

⁴ On "forinsec service" belonging to the King, see my narrative in V. C. H. Cumb., i. 322-4. In a charter in Reg. Epis. Glasg. (Bann. Club. i. 73), the service is thus defined: "Sepredictus enim Simo ibit mecum super [equum] suum ad forinseca regis servicia facienda. Ego vero dum mecum sit sibi et equo suo omnia necessaria inveniam. Et si equus suus in meo servicio moriatur, ego illi alium reddam. Et si contigerit quod ipse mecum ire non poterit alium in loco mihi inveniet."

Date about 1200-1210.

² The payment for a quarter of grain originated in a grant of Alyne de Caunsfeld who gave the monks unam cribram frumenti to be received yearly on 28 October at Aldyngham (Nos. 69, 70).

³ 10 December, 1485.

495. ¹ John Poule was prior in 1535 (Valor Eccles., v. 11). William, abbot of York, wrote early in 1537 to Cromwell that he had sent Dan Robert Paddy "to his room," but he was afraid what might befall him on the journey (Illus. Doc. Nos. xciv., xcv.). The memorandum here, which is entered on the fly-leaf of the Register, must have been one of the last of the official acts of a prior of St. Bees. The warrant for Paddy's yearly pension of £40, after the dissolution of the priory, is dated 3 June, 1538, that is, a few months before this memorandum was written.

MEMORANDUM¹ quod mora de Whelyngmore continetur infra bundas et divisas ut inferius declaratur, videlicet, a quibusdam circulis qui vocantur le Wheles juxta Harashowe, extendens juxta fossatum de Moresby et Distyngton usque ad fossatum de Substal, et sic per fossatum de Gylgarran usque ad quemdam lapidem stantem de Frothowe, et sic ascendendo versus orientem juxta Inweregh, et sic ascendendo per fossatum de Brownrig, descendendo versus austrum usque ad Arlokdenbek, et sic per Arlokdenbek usque ad fossatum de Wedaker, et sic per dicta fossata usque ad aquam de Kikill versus occidentem, et sic ex altera parte aque de Kikil ascendendo juxta rivulum de Prestgill, et sic a Prestgill versus Boriarn per medium de Withemyre, et sic ascendendo per siketam usque ad croftum Mauricii anglicè Croft morez.²

496. ¹ This document, which is written on the fly-leaf of the Register, may be referred to No. 492, when there was a dispute between John Moresby, lord of Harras, and the monks of St. Bees, touching a close near Whillyngmor, called Harres Close.

² All the place-names mentioned in these bounds are still found on the map, except le Wheles, which appears to connote a vanished stone circle, Frothowe and Inweregh: Substal is Stubsgill (O. S., lxi. N.E.): croftum Mauricii anglice Croft morez, now represented by Croftmorris (O. S., lxi. S.E.), is interesting. J. Denton surmised that "Morisceby or Mauriceby, now Moresby, took name first of one Maurice, who first seated himself there, the ruins of whose mansion house yet appearing approves the same" (Accompt, p. 31). If the etymology is no better than the identification of the ruins, by which, of course, the Roman camp, in which the church now stands, is meant, Denton's explanation of the origin of the place-name is somewhat fanciful. The manor of Moresby was bounded on three sides by moors, the fourth side being the sea. The situation apparently gave the place its name.

498. ¹The text of this compilation is written on paper quarto size, mounted on a guard and inserted in the Register after fol. 72, where it occupies fols. 73-6 of the manuscript. Fragments of the document have been often printed from untrustworthy sources during the past three centuries. The text here has not been printed before and the alternative readings are taken from the early copy of the Register of Wetheral (MS. ff. clxi.-clxii) recently restored to the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. These two copies are the earliest at present known. St. George made some extracts from a copy in the 'Liber Abbatie de Holme Coltraine in comitatu Cumbrie' (Add. MS. 10108, No. 64), but they are of little value. This document should be compared with Illus. Doc. No. vj. For the origin of both compilations, see my argument in V. C. H. Cumb., i., 297-8.

I. VITA ET MIRACULA S. BEGE VIRGINIS IN PROVINCIA NORTH-ANHIMBRORUM.¹ [Cott. MS. Faustina, B. IV. ff. 122-138b.]

Vita S. Bege et de Miraculis eiusdem.

Incipit prologus in vita sancte Bege virginis pridie Kalendas Novembris.²

Si essem scriba doctus in regno celorum, sciens et potens de thesauro meo proferre nova et vetera, profecto eructaret cor meum verbum bonum, dicens immo edicens ad honorem regis Christi prima et novissima beate Bege virginis opera. Sed eius vetera transierunt ex magna parte, elapsa a presentium noticia, eo quod non esset cuius pia lingua calamus scribe velociter scribens ea. Venerabilis tamen Beda quedam de eius actionibus in istoria sua tractatim tangit, et multo succintius, ut pluribus videtur, quam talis tantaque materia exposcit, stilo currente pertransiit. Nova vero eius opera et recentiora, que video sunt facta, non obliteravit omnino oblivio a posteriorum memoria, quia pro patribus filii, qui nati exsurrexerunt, enarraverunt ea filiis suis ut cognoscat generatio altera. Licet enim generatio adveniat et generatio pretereat, quamdiu tamen terra stat Bege virginis beate semper in benedictione memorande, memoria manet in generatione sanctorum, crebraque miracula in presentia hominum exhibita illam presentialiter cum sponso suo regnare comprobant in regno celorum. Ego vero, licet egenus et pauper scientia, incitante tamen devotione, exronicis et ystoriis authenticis, et virorum veridicorum narrationibus, que fide digna docebantur, diligenter collegi, et ad edificationem filiorum ecclesie in duos libellos vitam et miracula sancte virginis redegei. Explicit prologus.

¹ The date of this compilation has been ascribed by Sir Thos. Duffus Hardy to the latter part of the twelfth century (Descriptive Catalogue of Materials, R.S., i. 224), but it is quite certain from the internal evidence that it is much later. The manuscript volume, of which the Vita et Miracula forms a part, once belonged to the abbey of Holmcultum, as the inscription on its title-page shows:—"Liber sancte Marie de Holmcultum, lib. cxi." The manuscript, which is written in double column with red rubrication, was printed by S. Jefferson, Carlisle, in 1842, with a translation and notes by G. C. Tomlinson, F.S.A.

² This statement seems to show that the monks observed 31 October as the feast of St. Bege as it is calendared in the Aberdeen Breviary. See note 2 on No. 227 of the Register of St. Bees.

Incipit vita sancte Bege virginis.

Quomodo de Ybernia patrem clanculo fugiens primum ad Coplandium venit.

Regnabat quidam rex prepotens in Hybernia, qui predecessores suos reges precessit divitiis et gloria, qui licet ad votum in terra successibus polleret felicibus eo tamen estimatur principari felicius quo sub titulo nominis Christi, cui servire regnare est, semet ipsum divine legi mancipabat devotius. Suscipit itaque ex legitimo coniugio filiam, nomine Begam, Christiane fidei misteriis ex materno utero initiatam, que sane vestem nuptialem, quam in baptismo induit, immaculatam conservans, semetipsam sponso celesti sponsam non habentem maculam aut rugam exhibuit. Quantumcunque enim profecit etate tanto magis ut ei placeret, cui se probavit, crescere studuit sanctitate in puellari facie induit maternalem maturitatem et puerillem percurrens etatem nullam puerilitatis incurrit impuritatem: frequens namque erat in thalamo, rarissima in publico. Iam vitam suam informabat et preparabat sancte religionis quam arreptura erat proposito, et ne in conclavi inutile dissolveretur otio, aut oneroso torperet fastidio, ac sic dormitaret anima eius pre tedio, tempus redimebat sacras literas discendi studio, aut manibus suis aurifrisia operando vel gemmas auro intexendo miro et perpulchro satis artificio. Aliquando eciam manus suas misit ad forfices, aliquando digiti eius apprehendunt fusum, ne dies in vacuum consumeret, sed potius tempori illuderet, et ut huiusmodi disceret exercitium quandoque ornamentis ecclesie profuturum et haberet horum usum, aniles fabulas et ineptias et puellares lusus et iocos fugiebat. Quecunque sancta, quecunque honesta, audire ac loqui dulce habebat. Spiritus enim dilectionis a patre precedens unctione sua interius eam de omnibus, que ad salutem spectabant, docebat, fuitque Dominus cum ea et omnia opera eius dirigebat, per quem in cunctis virgo prospere agebat. Inspiravit enim Paraclitus spiritui eius vitiorum odium, amorem virtutum, mundi contemptum, conversationis celestis appetitum, virginee pudicitie affectum et effectum, et ante omnia immortalis sponsi amorem et desiderium.

Erat preterea speciosa forma pre cunctis filiabus regionis illius, tamen non solum pauperes et mediocres, verum eciam omnes magnates et divites plebis mirabantur, desiderabant, deprecabantur vultum eius. Cumque iam puerilibus annis evolutis ad mundum muliebrem pervenisset virgo generosa, et in facie eius vernarent velut verno tempore lilium et rosa, eius coniugium appetebant principum, ducum, tam extraneorum quam indigenarum, filii, mittentes ac secum afferentes armillas in aures, anulos, ciclades auro textas, gemmas, et alia ornamenta et munera preciosa. Beata vero Bega aurum amplexans ut paleas animo, argentum ut lutum platearum, gemmas ut stipulam aura raptam, armillas ut favillas, vestes olosericas, purpuram et bissum, ut pannum menstruaem, et quicquid honorum aut divitiarum huius mundi profert vel pollicetur iactantia pompatita, ob Christi amorem, quem sibi lucifacere omnimodis optabat, arbitrabatur ut stercorea.

Et quamvis aliquando pro tempore et loco, in vestitu deaurato circumamicta erat varietate, utpote puella natu nobilis, etate iam nubilis, constituta in regis laribus omnis tamen gloria filie regis erat ab intus. Ab ipso enim pubertatis primevo flore spiritu anelo desiderabat monasterium potius quam matrimonium, fieri magis monacham quam maritam, habitare in domo domini carne et mente virginem quam in solio regni matrem filiorum letantem. Considerabat virgo prudentissima curas multimodas carnales sequentes nuptias, qualiter cum labore incipiunt, in pudore persistunt, et cum dolore finiunt. Et sicut tribulationem carnis habent huiusmodi, teste apostolo: ita qui non nubunt neque nubuntur similes erunt angelis in celo. Distant namque virgo et angelus natura et felicitate sed non gracia vel virtute. Angeli namque integritas est felicitior, virginis vero fortior: fortis plane in continuo pene prelio et assiduo conflictu virginitas, que in corpore pene bestiali, et in hac regione dissimilitudinis assimilari illius forma, que de sursum est, cum gracia conatur, ymagini et celibatum civium celestis representare regionis. Cum enim quilibet gradus coniugatorum sive continentium habeat de perpetrata carnis corruptione, quo doleat, sancta et immaculata virginitas semper habet in salvatore suo unde gaudeat. Et licet quilibet iustus videatur sequi Deum via qua poterit, de illis tamen qui non inquinaverunt vestimenta sua legitur quod sequuntur agnum quocumque irit.

Quocirca beatissima Bega balatum agni celestis studebat audire aure audiendi, et de eius vellere sibi vestem nuptialem texere, ut ad eius nuptias posset pervenire, et quasi sponsa ornata monilibus suis, sponsum decoratum corona videre, et ab eo indui vestimento salutis, et circumdari mereretur indumento letitie sempiternae. Sprenens itaque cunctas mundi huius immundi illecebras, vanitates et insanias falsas, virgo venerabilis virgini-tatem suam die illo Deo offerens voto se contraxit non contracturam vel experituram sponte cum aliquo copulas nuptiarum, quatenus nesciens thorum in delicto haberet fructum in respectione animarum sanctarum.

Hec autem ea cogitante et in se de se statuente, quidam vir venusto vultu et habitu venerando coram astans ei apparuit, et quasi omnia interiora anime eius sciens, propositum illius aprobans, votum magnificans, tunicam talarem induere et capud hostie cum cauda immolare admonuit. Cumque plura concionaretur ad eamque confirmarent et corroborarent in ea celibatum, dedit ei armillam habentem signum sancte crucis in summitate eius evidenter expressum. Deinde subiungens, "Accipe" inquit, "eulogium istud a Domino Deo tibi missum, quo te illi subarratam agnoscas, illumque effici tibi sponsum. Pone ergo illud sicut signum super cor tuum et super brachium tuum ut nullum amatorem admittas preter ipsum."

Hec dicens disparuit, et virgo multiplices gracias agens fecit sicut edocta fuit et armillam super se fere indesinter portavit. Utrum autem illa persona fuerit angelus vel aliquis sanctus habetur incertum, sed tamen quod per armillam illam crebra miracula facta sunt et adhuc fiunt satis est compertum. Et non videatur cuiquam absurdum, Begam Domino ab angelo vel ab aliquo sancto obpignerari per armillam dum legamus a sancto Germano, Autisiodorensi episcopo, per nummum ereum consignari sanctam virginem genofevam. His ita gestis dum virgo genere et specie vernaret in Hibernia, degens in patris regis thalamo, procul et de ultimis finibus precium eius, procos regii germanis attrahebat, inter quos erat quidam adolescens illustris, filius regis Norwagensis, et heres regni, post modicum rex futurus. Cuiusdam fama formose et facete puelle, et regis patris illius potestas, honor regni, divitie et delicie filiorum hominum, pulsassent aures, consilio optimatum et amicorum suorum, qui erant ei a secretis, nuncios destinat in Hiberniam ad explorandum si rei veritas fame conquadraret. Si autem fama non volasset in vacuum, nec vero oppositum proferret testimonium, nomine eius appeterent Begham, filiam regis, sibi in coiugale consortium.

Nuncii vero, sicut erant docti, sibi iniuncta prosecuti sunt, et veritate rei opinione maiorem experti, gratiam in oculis regis et magnatum terre super petitione sua invenirent. Rex autem, qui predecessorum suorum plantationibus in Hibernia altas stirpis sue miserat radices, et quaquam versum in insula usque ad mare extenderat palmites prosapie, ex filia in successione nepotum ultra mare extendere suas proposuit propagines. Perpendit enim tale conubium sibi et suis ob varios vitree fortune rotatus, qui accidere solent, fore profuturum, et utrique regno et utriusque regionis incolis per illud firmari fedus pacis et mutue amicitie incrementum.

Nuncios itaque regiis muneribus, ut decebat, remuneratos ad propria remittens, regi iuveni denunciavit ut si suam presenciam illis in partibus exhiberet, et in conspectu suo et optimatum terre cum filia sua matrimonium contraberet, illi eam honorifice traderet. Alioquin non arbitratur tutum, comodum aut honestum puellam tam eximii decoris et generis sub alterius alicuius custodia quam sponsi proprii in regionem tam longinquam mittere ad thalamum collocandum. Nuncii vero repatriati postquam responsa que invenerant domino suo regi denudassent, bonus visus est sermo in oculis eius et consiliariorum eius Hiberniam adire, et cum virgine prenominata coniugium inire. Quid plura? Armamenta naute expediunt et ventis ad vota perflantibus vela committunt, optatisque Hibernie portibus allabantur. A rege autem et aulicis rex cum suis excipitur cum gaudio, et facta est letitia magna in populo illo. Sicut regiam ergo decebat magnificentiam extruitur convivium, et quum advesperascebat et inclinata erat iam dies, communi assensu deliberant mane maturare pro quo venerant negocium. Indulgebant interim, ut se habet seculi vanitas, calicibus, epotandis potentes ad potandum, et viri fortes ad miscendum ebrietatem, laurea se coronatum quilibet estimat qui vino posset sopire, immo quodammodo sepilire suum conbibitorem. Tali itaque ludo asuetos temulencia cunctos pene oppresserat, et iam plurima pars noctis expensa singulos ad lectos suos compellebat.

Beata vero Begha inter hec vehementer anxiabatur, formidans et ymaginans orti sui conclusi liliam iamque deflorandum et decolorandum, et thesaurum in vase fictili preciosum, immo ut ita dixerim vitreo, cum magna cautela et multo sudore servatum, e vicino surripiendum. Angustie enim fuerunt illi undique, et quid eligeret vel quo se verteret ignorabat. Si enim fuge remedium quereret, videbat ostia obserrata, exitus obstruos, vigiles qui custodiebant regiam excubantes. Plures namque ex fortissimis Hybernie ambiebant ex more non solum lectulum regis vel thalamum, sed eciam totum palacium, et uniuscuiusque sica super femur suum, et bipennis super humerum, et lancea in manu eius, propter timores nocturnos et casus inopinatos. Si vero aliquo casu exitum inveniret, et per medium vigillum transiret, non facile sibi a facie patris locum latendi aut evadiendi alicubi inveniret. Si posuisset tenebras latibulum pater eius quereret eam in milibus suis et invenire, inventam reduceret, reductam plagis vapularet multis, utpote scientem voluntatem eius et non facientem, necnon imperium eius prevaricantem. Si vero aliquid sanctimonialium ingrederetur cenobium, inde manus patris educeret eam, eciam ab altari evelleret illam. Quid ergo faciet? Mortali sponso que se immortalis voverat nubere nec licet nec libet. Patris iussioni obniti non prevalet, periit eciam fuga ab ea, et quo se abscondat non habet. Totum ergo refugium suum, solam spem in Domino Deo suo ponit, totam curam suam in Domino iactat, ut eam de laqueis mundi omnibus eripiat.

Consurgens igitur in nocte quando sopor solet occupare homines in principio vigiliarum suarum, effundebat sicut aquam cor suum ante conspectum Domini Dei sui, levans ad eam puras manus in oratione cum magno lacrimarum imbri, dicens, " Domine Iesu Christe, fili Dei et virginis, auctor et amator, inspirator et consecrator, conservator et coronator virginitatis, tu sicut scis, sicut tibi placet, sicut potes, custodi in me propositum quod tibi dedicavi illibatum in corde et in carne integritatis. Tu namque, nature conditor, tempore naturalis legis, opilionem tuum, Abel, duplici laurea, virginitatis, scilicet, et martyrii decorasti. Tu sub lege scripta, Heliam integritatis candidatu stolatum ad superiores rapuisti. Tu, Baptistam tuum et precursorem Johannem, nescientem labem, nivei pudoris, ante te misisti. Tu eciam unicum spem mundi, Dominam nostram, ad decus et decorem virginibus in speciosissimum et specialissimum speculum proposuisti, ex cuius utero induvias nostre nature assumens, tanquam sponsus procedens de thalamo suo, mundo salvator apparuisti. Tu quoque, dilectum tuum Johannem a nuptiis ad nuptias agni vocans, inmarcessibili virginitatis flore vernantem in evum conservasti, cui cellam aromatum tuorum, propiciatorium humane reconciliationis, custodiendam tradidisti. Tu, Agnem, Agatham, Luciam et Katerinam, aliasque per plures, in fide tui nominis propter pudicitiam agonizantes coronasti, et nomen tuum benedictum per harum triumphales titulos magnificasti. Horum ergo gracia queso ut inveniam ego, ancilla tua, gratiam in oculis tuis, quatinus assis mihi adiutor in oportunitatibus [mea] in tribulatione, ut, te datore, te duce, te rectore et protectore, reddam tibi vota mea que distinxerunt labia mea."

Multa in hunc modum perorans et Dominum exorans, ipsi virginitatem suam conservandam commendabat, quia violenciam patris eo quod esset homo austerius, et a sententia animi quodammodo inflexibilis valde formidabat. Dum ergo silentium tenerent omnia, et nox in suo cursu pene medium iter haberet, Omnipotentis sermo a regalibus sedibus ad virginem manentem in regalibus edibus descendit, et vox celitus ad eam facta, ipsa sola audiente, ita insonuit : “ Noli temere Begha, amica mea carissima, exaudita est deprecacio tua. Audi ergo, filia, et inclina aurem tuam ad me, et obliviscere populum tuum et domum patris tui, et habebis domum non manufactam in celis iam tibi preparatam. Oportet ergo te transire de regno ad regnum, de populo tuo ad populum alterum, de terra ad terram, de Hybernia ad Britanniam que vocatur Anglia, et ibi, consummatis in bono diebus tuis, te recipiam ad consortia angelica. Surge itaque et armillam, qua mihi subarrata es, accipe, descendensque ad mare navem invenies preparatam que te transveat in Britanniam.”

Virgo igitur Christi venerabilis iussioni patris celistis quam audivit, ut se filiam eius comprobaret, devote obedivit. Vidit enim cordis oculis credendo se percepturam bona domini in terra viventium, quia nimirum firmiter fuit in ea expectacio futurorum, dum vidit eciam corporaliter se percepisse solacium presentium munerum. Et ideo mandatis illius, ad faciendum ea, aurem suam inclinavit, quia omnes gloria mundialis fastu despecto, corque corpus suum divino obsequio, in omni humilitate et obediencia perseveranter mancipavit.

Et ecce sopor Domini super omnes infra et extra aulam regiam iacentes et excubantes irruit, et omnia claustra, ad tactum armille, clavis David, virgini egregie egredienti aperuit. Exiit itaque de terra sua et de cognacione sua et de domo patris sui, cum fidei Abraham, utpote filia Abrahe, ut veniret ad terram quam monstraverat ei Dominus.

Pergens igitur ad portum maris pervenit, navemque preparatam iuxta promissum invenit : illamque ingressa, prospero cursu et felici appulsu, in quendam provinciam Anglie, vocabulo Coup-landiam, devenit. Egressa vero de navi loca maritima circumivit et cetera finitima reperit que circumcirca nemora densissima et solitarie vite aptissima. Illa vero soli Deo vacare desiderans in loco tunc temporis satis nemoroso secus litus maris posito, cellam virgineam virgo sibi construxit, ibique districtissime conversationis agone Domino diu desudans multis annis deguit. Sedebat ergo solitaria, ac levans se supra se, vacabat et videbat quam Dominus ipse Deus, gustans frequenter quam suavis et dulcis est omnibus sperantibus in se. Ibi ergo dilectus suus sibi, et ad eam conversacio eius inter ubera sua commorantis, currensque in odore unguentorum eius, ab eo post eum tracta, et in amore eius liquefacta omnia caduca habens sub pedibus, pre desiderio illius eam crebro visitantis.

Cumque illo in loco in sanctitate et iusticia coram Domino vivens multo tempore maneret, cepit illa plaga regionis a piratis frequentari qui consueverant fines illos depredari. Dei ergo famula, a facie illorum verita, non formidabat mortem aut membrorum abscissionem aut rerum temporalium quarum preter solam armillam expers erat dissipolacionem, sed potius a sacrilegis sibi timebat violenter inferri preciosissimi sui thesauri direptionem, virginitatis videlicet sue deflorationem. Consuluit itaque super hoc Dominum, ipsoque revelante necnon iubente, ab illo loco maturabat discessum. Digrediens inde, armillam suam, nutu divino oblita, secum non tulit, quia multa inibi fieri miracula in testimonium et signum sancte conversationis eius benignitas Salvatoris providit.

Principatur in illo tempore regno Northanhimbrorum, Anglie decus, servus Christi, rex Oswaldus, post modicum proprio cruore laureandus. Pontificabatur tunc Lindisfarnensi ecclesie sanctus presul Aidanus, natione Hybernicus, Yensis cenobii monachus, a sancto Oswaldo ad illud officium vocatus, qui gradum sacerdocii sanctis adornabat moribus. Ad illum tanquam sponsi sui parannuphium Beghu sponsa Christi accedens, omne anime sue secretum et ea que circa se divina gerebantur, pietate aperuit, et ab eo, qualiter in amore et obsequio sponsi celestis arctius vinciretur, consilium perquisivit. Vir ergo Dei, utpote optimus custos murorum Jerusalem, quarentem dilectum suum et invenire desiderantem inveniens, divini amoris spiculo percussit amplius et vulneravit, auferensque expallium habitus hucusque portati, novo vestimento salutis illam induit. Sanctus namque pontifex, iuxta morem, virginem sanctam et incorruptam benedixit et consecravit in sponsam Christi et novam agni nuptam. Imposuit autem capiti eius velum pro regio diademate, pro purpura vestem pullam, antequam Northanhimbrorum regio, teste Beda, sanctimonialiam habuit nullam. Sane sanctus erga eam sano usus consilio, ut sanctitatem quam hactenus ex proprie deliberacionis servaverat proposito, extunc arcus custodiret facto solemni voto. Et quod in secreto tenendum arripuerat actu, iam in publicum exhiberet ipso eciam exteriori habitu. Deinde sanctus presul virginalem lampadem sue sancte adhortacionis flatu, ut magis ac magis luceret, inflammavit et que per se prius lucebat, ne extingui-bilis fieret ante adventum sponsi, ignem divine dilectionis, oleum sancte operationis, lichinum pie devotionis, illi predicando ministravit.

Sic sic venerabilis Begha in Northanhimbria, consecrante sancto Aidano, sanctimonialium effecta est prima, et ideo si rerum precia ex raritate pensamus, pre cunctis compatriotis virginibus colenda est veneratione precipua. Sed virgo beata tunc singularis, que consecrata est sola, non diu mansit solitaria. Ipsa namque, cum beato episcopo petente et impetrante, a rege sancto locum sibi prestitum, vocabulo Heriteseiam, que interpretatur insula cervi, accepit, religioni idoneum in quo construxit monasterium egregium, in quo plane cenobio adducebantur plures virgines post eam regi celesti, eius invitate et incitate hortatu et exemplo, sed et multe de coniugali gradu, et seculari conversatione penitentes converse offerebantur in leticia et exultacione in templum regi domino, illius subiugate servicio. Sic sic sponsa Christi, que in amore sponsi languebat, huiusmodi fulciri floribus, stipari malis, ardentem satagebat.

Prelata igitur sancto collegio, Beghu semetipsam cunctis exhibebat caritatis affectu matrem, officio ministram, nunquam dominam, sed potius exemplo prepositam, et si quandoque ut res poscebat disciplina vel eruditione magistram. In officinis autem monasterii construendis, magnam operam adhibens, manu sua cibos coquens, parabat, artificibus apponebat, et velud apis mellificata currens et discurrens ministrabat.

Ornamentis eciam ecclesie et sacris vestibus nendis et texendis et consuendis multociens insudabat, et discipulas suas propter ociositatem vitandam, certis temporibus occupari operibus similibus faciebat. In ieiuniis vero et vigiliis protelandis, in hymnis et psalmis et canticis spiritualibus canendis, et lectionis sacre studio, instabat ferventissime, ita ut admirationi esset congregationi universe. Sed inter ceteras dotes virtutum, quibus divina gracia ditaverat eam, humilitate pollebat supra modum nature vel consuetudinis humane.

Sic agebat Marthe negocium ut non negligeret Marie sanctum otium, nec rursus propter Marie sabbatum contempneret ministerium necessarium. Et quia accepta erat Deo et hominibus, monasterium suum datis sibi a principibus, scilicet, sancto Oswaldo prius et sancto Oswino postea, martire futuro, amplificabat possessionibus. Cumque aliquandiu taliter huic monasterio prefuisset, sancta Hilda, virgo Christi, que in religionis habitu uno anno in Francia in monasterio, nomine Cale, ob regularem disciplinam discendam, sponte pro Christo exulaverat, repatriata et a sancto Aidano episcopo invitata ad illas partes devenit, et mansionem sibi non longe a Tino flumine, ut Beda narrat, edificavit, ibique aliquandiu in magna sanctitate deguit.

Beata autem Begha que se exuit tunica mundane sollicitudinis, admirabatur sepe secum quomodo induerat illam sub specie regiminis, et que lavavit pedes suos ab omni pulvere terrene administrationis, anxiebatur in se quod iterum sibi videretur quasi inquinasse illos sub cura prelationis. Recordabatur vocis illius turturis, quam audire solebat in terra sua, illius aure lenis sibili, quam sibi sentiebat crebro spirasse in interiore cella sua, "quis," inquit, "dabit mihi ut sim iuxta dies pristinos, quando secreto erat Deus in tabernaculo meo, quando inebriabar ab ubertate domus sue, et torrente voluptatis sue potabat me."

Hec dum sepe animo revolveret, anxiebatur in se spiritus eius quia omne exterioris occupationis negotium et omne ministerium Marthe linquere deliberans, et illam partem Marie optimam que non auferetur sibi eligens, regimini monasterii, quod edificaverat, absque ulla retractacione renunciare sedit animo eius. Velle itaque illud sibi adiacens multociens sancto presuli Aidano indicavit: instans tandem, inoportune, oportune, absolvi a prelatione impetravit. Tunc omnium sororum votis, unanimi assensu, scilicet, pontificis et ipsius Beghu et universe congregationis benedicta Hilda in abbatissam eligitur; et licet diu multumque renitens, humilis tamen et obnixis Beghe precibus devicta, ei in regimine substituitur. Satis enim humilis et amica fuit inter illas Dei amicas altercatio; dum quelibet alterius vitam proprie preferret: nec minus lis inter illas versabatur de prelatione non suscipienda, quam oriri consuevit inter ambitiosos et simoniace heresis veneno potionatos super adipiscenda. Beghe tamen humilitas in hac parte vicit: et Hilde obediencia quamvis invite vinci sustinuit.

Sancta vero Begha ad civitatem Calcariam, que lingua Anglorum Helcacester vocatur, secedens, mansionem sibi construxit, ibique in magna perfectione multis diebus vitam duxit. Sancta vero Hilda susceptum monasterium strenue rexit, et cum religione, tum exteriori substantia in sublime provexit. Sed tunc precipue in altum locus ille excrevit, quin rex Oswinus filiam suam Elfedam satis parvulam illuc Deo in perpetua virginitate servituram tradidit, sicut Deo vovit quando tam splendide de Penda rege paganissimo triumphavit.

Tractu temporis aliquanti interiecto, eadem Christi famula, Hilda, a rege prefato Oswino locum vocabulo Streneshalch, qui modo vocatur Witebi, comparans nobile cenobium inibi edificavit, quod et in brevi rerum affluentia, et quod his magnificentius est, religione magna, virorum clarissimorum vita et doctrina, ac sanctissimarum ancillarum Dei sanctimonialium copia, nobilitavit. Licet eciam multi viri virtutum, velud celi sidera, in illo monasterio claruerint: quinque tamen, teste Beda, singularis meriti et doctrine ex eius disciplinatu et conventu in summum sacerdotium electi et proveci et super candelabrum positi, scilicet, Wilfridus, Johannes, Bosa, Ethla, Ostoforus, luxerunt quasi celi clarissima luminaria.

Manebat tamen inter sanctas Hildam et Beghu grata societas, specialis familiaritas et continua adinvicem materna vigeat caritas: quamvis locorum separatio teneret eas aliquandiu sequestratas, frequens erat adinvicem visitatio et crebra de celestibus collocutio circa salutem animarum devota collocatio. Altera alterius onera subportans, implendo legem Christi ad portandum pondus diei et estus sese mutua ammonitione animabatur, et ut accensis lampadibus vigilantes in adventu sponsi, et preparate ad intrandum cum eo ad nuptias apparerent, incitabant.

Sed sponsus supernus, qui dilectam suam non semper blandimentis permulcet, sed multociens terroribus pulsat, castigans castigavit Hildam, amicam suam, septenni egritudine decoquens eam, quia tanquam aurum probavit electam suam, et sicut holocausti hostiam acceptavit illam, et invenit eam se dignam. Ut enim virtus ei ex infirmitate proficeretur et corona augetur: et expiarentur si qua fortasse ex mundana conversatione peccata admisit, sex annis ante decessum suum continuis febribus, septimo vero dolore ad interanea converso, celestis aurifex illam torreret et torqueri permisit.

In quo tamen spacio non resonabat in ore eius murmur neque querimonia, sed semper vox laudis et graciaram actio, cunctis relinquens paciencie sue indicia. In quo plane tempore Begha, que illam amabat arctius, visitabat frequentius cum ea habitabat diutius.

Sed cum venisset hora ut ex hoc mundo beata Hilda transiret ad Patrem, et pertransito igne corporee egritudinis et aqua terrene tribulacionis, induceretur in sempiternae quietis refrigerium, divina providentia actum est ut ante paucos dies venerabilis Begha visitasset monasterium virginum, nomine Acconos, eodem anno a sancta Hilda constructum. Nocte vero eadem et hora, scilicet, circa gallicinium, quo filia lucis, Hilda, introducetur in splendoribus sanctorum, iacebat Begha pausans apud Acconos in dormitorio sororum. In visu itaque noctis videbatur sibi sive in excessu mentis audire se sonum campane illius qua ad congregandum conventum in obitu cuiuspiam de congregatione sanctarum solebat pulsari, ac deinde erectis oculis sursum subito se videre immensam lucem desuper fusam detecto culmine domus omnia replevisse, et sancte Hilde animam ab angelis lucis cum luce in lucidam regionem, dum luci sollicita intenderet, aspexit deferrī. Cumque ad se reversa et ceteras videret pausantes circa se sorores, intellexit vel in sompno vel in visione mentis ostensum sibi esse omne quod viderat. Que mox exurgens astrata cum timore, virginem, nomine Freitham, que monasterio illi vice abbatisse prefuit, evigilavit: eique seriatim ordinem visionis enarrans, matrem illarum omnium, Hildam, cum suspiriis et luctu multo obisse affirmavit. Deinde cum ceteris excitatis, vigiliis sacras nocturne laudis celebrantes, totam reliquam partem noctis insompnes ducebant, et psalmos et hymnos et oraciones pro anima sancte matris persolvebant. Mane vero, facto primo diluculo, advenientes fratres a loco quo defuncta fuit, eadem hora sanctam Hildam ex hoc mundo emigrasse nunciabant quam sancte Beghe revelatam per visionem agnoverant.

Post decessum sancte Hilde mansit beata Begha in illo monasterio de Acconos, sicut testantur illius provincie incole et monachi de Witebi usque ad diem depositionis sue, que evenit pridie Kalendas Novembris, ibique fuit funerata, quia non diu post obitum tante matris in corpore mortis in tabernaculis cedar a Domino est peregrinata. Utraque enim agno Dei, regi et sponso virginum, cum niveis choreis virginum iuncta est in celis, cui carne et mente incontaminata cum summa devotione obsequabatur in terris. Congrue satis dum vigilia Omnium Sanctorum recolitur ad consortium eorum transivit e mundo, ut hieme in terris intrante, illi exeunti hyems omnis transiret, et imber abiret et recederet ver eternum ei luceret, flores rosarum et lilia convallium apparent in celo.

Latuit ita tam preciosa margarita sub lapide in corde terre, ubi sepulta fuerat, quadringentis sexaginta circiter annis, et miracula quibus fulserat in carne degens, sive eciam vinculis carnis absoluta, Danica depopulatio delevit ab hominum noticia, et ideo omnia illa et eciam sepultura eius incognita fere fuerit cunctis. Anno autem incarnationis dominice millesimo centesimo [] divinitus revelatum est viris fidelibus et religiosis, ut in cimiterio de Acconos deberent querere et indagare sepulchrum sancte Beghe virginis et ad cenobium de Witebi transferre sacras exuvias suas. Qui profecto rem sibi revelatam non segniter exequentes ad locum venerunt et in altum fodiendo multam terre aggerem a loco eruentes, tantum sarcofagum, in cuius operculo exaratum erat, HOC EST SEPVLCHRVM BEGHV, invenerunt. Ammoventes ergo operculum illud, reppererunt sacri corporis glebam, et ad caput velum eius plurima ex parte integrum, hauseruntque inde emanentem odorem suavissimum. Deinde illam cum hymnis et laudibus processione facta ad cenobium prefatum transtulerunt et in loco condigno decenter reposuerunt.

Ego vero, quia de translatione et de miraculis inibi factis non plenam noticiam habeo, omnia illis illa qui viderunt et rei interfuerunt scribenda relinquo. Illa vero, que per eam Dominus operari dignatus est apud Kirkebibeghoc in Coupelandia, ubi prius solitaria deguit, et eius memoria cum magna veneratione habetur, de quibus certioratus esse potero, ad presentium et ad posterorum noticiam stilo elucidare pertemptabo.

De miraculis que apud Kirkebi in Copelande operata est sancta Bega.

Beata Bega rebus humanis corporaliter exempta, quam preciosa fuerit in conspectu Dei eius sanctissima anima, crebra diversis in locis attestantur miracula facta. In illo tamen loco quo de Hybernia transvecta Couplandie applicuit et diu solitaria deguit, ubi in sui memoriam armillam superius memoratam ad decus et indicium sanctitatis sue, quasi quoddam pinguis dilectionis et protectionis et visitationis sue erga locum illum reliquit, signorum multiplicium claritas fulgescit. Multi namque, variis infirmitatibus gravati aut spiritibus immundis vexati, optatam sospitatem ibi suffragantibus meritis et precibus eius receperunt : plures incarcerati, seu catenis vel compedibus astricti, per illam liberationem senserunt. Quicumque super armillam eius periuraverit velociter periurii penam gravissimam vel mortem celerem incurrit. Nullus eciam loci illius pacem impune temerare potuit, sed citam vindictam terribiliter ei inflictam ut ceteri metum haberent et loco deinceps deferrent in instanti sensit. De quibus omnibus quedam pauca ad agnitionem plurimorum calamo mandare dignum diximus : quorum veritas ut irrefragabilis omnibus audientibus eluscescat, tocius fere patrie omnium testimonia credibilia facta nimis in medium produximus.

De quodam Galwelense propter blasfemia occiso.

Fuit vir quidam Belial, nichil Christiani preter nomen habens, natione et habitacione Galwaithensis, letabundus cum male faceret, et exultans in rebus pessimis, qui ab adolescentia sua omnem operam dabat furtis et rapinis et aliis facinoribus atque flagitiis. Hic dum quadam vice cum suis consimilibus consuetum opus iterare maturasset et versus Coupelandiam ad iter esset accinctus, mater eius, que illum arctius amabat, convenit eum, dicens, " Materna te, fili, sedulitate commoneo et autoritate precipio ne in hoc negocio quod perpetrare proponis in terra sancte Beghe furtum vel rapinam seu violentiam aliquam aliquando committas, nec pacem eius ullatenus violare presumas." Ille vero, qui totus erat Sathane, matris exortantis verba salubria contempnebat et subsannans dicebat, " Quid mihi facere poterit vetula illa ? " et manum ad secretiores partes natium admovens, ore blasphemus, " Hic, hic," inquit " sagittabit me." Hec dicit et abiit in consilio et consortio impiorum : et tam de terra sancte Bege quam aliunde clam et palam, ubicunque coadunare cum ceteris poterat, predam abigebat, nam unum equum ipse de territorio sancte virginis abducens iam equitabat. Quidam vero pastorum aspicientes illos a longe in villam concurrerunt, et lituis personantes undique confluentem turbam congregaverunt, congregatis, que acciderat, rem retulerunt. Illi autem ocius insequerentur predones iam fugientes, et solum furciferum illum superius memoratum dispersis sociis eminus equitantem conspexerunt. Nam sodales eius dum cornicinium audirent et turbam copiosam conspicerent in suam interneccionem, relicta preda, animas tantum salvare cupientes fugerunt. Adolescentiores quidam cursu ceteris velociores sacrilego equitanti appropinquabant et versus eum sagittas emittebant. Dedignabatur homo ab equo descendere, sed quia in corde sagittari timebat, caput super collum equi inclinans, nates sursum erigebat. Hoc autem genus armorum Scotti Hybernie Galwathenses pre ceteris formidant, unde et sagittam demonem volantem vocant. Quidam autem adolescentulus sagittam, quasi in incertum, ut ipse postea referebat, iaciens, percussit illum in fronticulo fundamenti, quem locum ipse in proprio domo constitutus manu sua designaverat, et lingua blasphemum contra se sententiam mortis protulerat. Sagitta vero, celeri et libero meatu per vitalia transiecta, pectus etiam eius penetrabat, sicque usque ad pennicinas exterius prominentes in corpore eius fixa manebat. Sagittatus statim de equo corruit et vitales auras efflavit. Sic, sic, ulcio digna Dei, contumelias et iniurias virgini illatas inultas iri non sinens, percussit inimicum eius sacrilegum, violatorem pacis eius, in posteriora, et obprobrium sempiternum dedit illi, illiusque in tali presumptione secuturis vestigia, dum sagitta parvuli in tali loco facta est plaga eius mortifera. Divulgatum est verbum hoc per fines Galwathie, et timuerunt homines regionis illius deinceps iniuriam sancte virginis inferre aut pacem illius ulterius temerare.

Quod pulchro nivis miraculo terra beate Bege disternata est.

Dominabatur provincie Couplandie vir quidam magni nominis, iuxta nomen magnorum qui sunt in terra, vocabulo Ranulfus, cognomento Meschin. Is monachos de cenobio sancte Dei geni-triciſ Marie Eboracenſi finibus illis adduxit, villamque de Kirkebi cum omnibus appendiciis ſuis et alia plura Deo et benedicte Marie offerens et monachis libere ac liberaliter contradens, in loco quo ſancta Bega primo tempore peregrinationis ſue ſolitariam vitam ducens deguit, monachorum cellam conſtruxit. Proceſſu temporis quidam, religioni monaſtiche invidentes et derogantes, auribus predicti proceris inſtillaverunt monachos terminos poſſeſſionis ſue nimium dilatasse et terras ipſius indebite et iniuſte preoccupaſſe. Vir autem ille dilatationi aurem plus quam decuit inclinavit, quia fortasse facti ſui penitidine ductus, manum ſuam quam antea amplifice expanderat, ſicut ſe habet hominum conſueſta cupiditas, contrahere voluit. Sepius enim inveniuntur in fundatoribus aut patronis monaſteriorum et maxime heredibus eorum, qui poſſeſſiones cenobiorum ſatagunt minuere potius quam augmentare, et terrarum illorum terminos coartare conantur quam dilatare.

Quid plura? De poſſeſſionum monaſterii metis movetur controverſia; monachi in ius vocantur: lis conteſtatur: inſtrumenta a monachis ſufficienter producuntur; dies eciam plures ad determinandam cauſam conſtituuntur, nec tamen debito fine concluditur. Poſtremo poſt multos dies, et unus pro multis ad decisionem litis, quem iuriſperiti peremptorium nominare conſueſcunt, prefigitur, ad quem multitudo copioſa patriotarum convenire precipitur. Monachi interim quia pati formidabant preiudicium, ſedulibus precibus ad divinum confugiebant auxilium, beate Bege, advocatricis ſue, inſtantiffime poſtulantes ſuffragium.

Die vero prefixa convenerunt ad locum plures utriuſque partis ad cognoscendum et videndum qualiter metas metiri et terminos deberent dividere in funiculo diſtribucionis. Sed ſignum inſigne et admirabile in oculis omnium apparuit, quod antiquo miraculo tempore Gedeonis in vellere et rore perpetrato ex magna parte non degeneravit. Nix namque profunda univerſe circumiacentis terre ſuperficiem cooperuit; infra metas quas monachi eccleſie ſancte Bege virginis adiacere et ſibi competere aſtruxerant nec unius ſtille veſtigium apparuit. Sicut enim in ſigno reciprocato quod ſecundo Gedeon petiit in indicium triumphalis tituli de alienigenis univerſa terra rore maduit, ſet vellus ſolum ſiccum remanſit, ſic ad convincendos adverſarios ſancte huius, ad conſutandos teſtes falſidicos, ad litem denique determinandam de terminis eccleſie, ut perpetuo ſilencio obſtrueretur os loquentium iniqua, in hac parte tota terra nive canduit, totum territorium eccleſie aridum extitit.

Vellus itaque Gedeonis, prius madidum, poſtea aridum, virginis matris, divina gracia plene, et a contagio peccati aliene, ex cuius plenitudinis abundancia irrigatur latitudo terre, tipum pretendit. Siccitas in terra ista venerande virginis Bege, famule Dei genitricis, meritum liquido cunctis ostendit. Stupent igitur qui convenerant ad tam stupendum miraculum: laudes efferunt in celum: omniumque iudicio et favore remanserunt termini territorii ecclesie sancte Bege usque in presens, sicut eos designaverat descriptum celeste prodigium.

De miraculo equorum Godardi militis.

Erat quidam miles prepotens, Godardus nomine, qui munitionem custodiebat in Eggremonte. Hic habebat pratum territorio sancte Bege continguum, in quod misit quadam die autumpnali tempore equos suos ad pascendum, inter quos fuit sonipes peroptimus quem appreciabatur plurimum. Adiacebat autem ager monachorum prato collimitans, habens ordeum, quod iamiamque pre maturitati ad messoris manicabat manum. Equi vero soluti et effrenati, dum virecta carpentes huc illucque discurrerent, in agrum proruperunt et ordei recentis commasticatione illecti spicas avidè absumpserunt, et reliquas pedibus conculcantes non minimum dampnum agro intulerunt: nec tamen custodes iumentorum hec videntes sive ex negligentia seu ex dedignacione iumenta ab agro abigere voluerunt. Quod cum quidam de familia monasterii cerneret ocus accurrit, et ut equos ab agro admoverent et de illato dampno satisfacerent pueros admonuit.

Pueri vero de potencia domini sui confidentes, elati et inflati, homini iusta persuadenti et rationem poscenti verba contumeliosa reddiderunt, et peiora prioribus sese illaturos promiserunt. Vir vero ille, quid responderet vel quid faceret iniuriatoribus illis adversum se animo concitatis non inveniens, eo quod essent manumque numero robustiores, conticuit, et elevatis oculis ac manibus ad ecclesiam sancte Bege dixit, " Sancta Bega, fac iudicium, iniuriam patientibus servis tuis et vindica nos de iumentis istis." At pueri sensu puerili et ore impuro hominem deriserunt, immo in homine simplici et suplici sanctam despicientes subsannado dixerunt, " Veniat Bega, veniat, et quod potest faciat, forsitan de pedibus equorum nostrorum furabitur ferramenta aut ipsa nostra nobis auferet iumenta." Hec et his similia stulti chachinantes adinvicem protulerunt, et post modicum temporis intervallum domi reverti disposuerunt.

Cumque ad equos ut eos infrenarent venissent, invenerunt omnes omnium equorum ungulas a compage pedum calcaneo tenus solutas et a carne et nervis penitus et integre separatas: et quod magis stupendum est, ipsas omnes granis ordeiciis in concavitate viderunt esse plenas. Quod cernentes pueri super temeritate sua penituerunt et quod gestum fuerat circum circa divulgaverunt. Quo audito, utriusque sexus turbe catervatim ad miraculum tam insolitum conspiciendum confluerunt, et omnes qui viderunt vel audierunt mirabilem Domini in sancta sua mirabilia operantem glorificaverunt.

Supra memoratus autem Godardus cum cognovisset signum, quod factum est a domina Bege in nomine Domini et est mirabile in oculis omnium, magis applaudens miraculo quam de amissione equorum et maxime sonipedis quem pluris habebat dolens dampno, pratum illud monasterio sancte Bege obtulit, et carta sua inde facta in puram et perpetuam elemosinam eidem confirmavit. Ungule vero ordeo plene ad ecclesiam sancte virginis sunt deportate et ad indicium et testimonium miraculi huius diebus multis ibidem reservate. Et licet omnes fere patriote illud signum insigne predicent et clament, specialiter tamen illud protestantur pratum ecclesie collatum quod monachi in presenti possident et carta inde facta quam habent.

Quomodo quidam dives sacram armillam sancte Bege perieraverat.

Quidam de magnatibus Anglie, nomine Walterus de Spec, consilio instigatus Rogeri filii et heredis sui et importunitate, impetebat monachos sancte Dei genitricis Marie Eboraci, super quibusdam terris que ad ius spectabant monasterii sui. Post dies plures cognitioni cause constitutos, et post multiplices altercationum allegationes, tandem per iudices parti impie propitios et iniuste proclives, eo quod esset unus de capitaneis baronibus regis, definitum est, ut liberorum, et ut usualiter ac vulgariter loquar, hominum legalium iuramento probare Walterus deberet possessionem illam de qua controversia versabatur sibi de iure competere, sicque illam in posterum absque ulla contradictione possidere.

Monachi vero habent a summo pontifice sibi indultum et privilegium ut quocienscunque lis vertitur de aliqua possessione monasterii que iuramento debeat terminari, impetitores eorum tactis sacrosanctis reliquiis ecclesie sue, quas conventus dixerit preferendas, iuratoria astruccionem sint astringendi.

Quamvis ergo preiudicium paterentur, diffinitivam sententiam cassare non valentes, protulerunt tamen in medium sancte Bege virginis supra memoratam armillam, quia confidebant inultum non preterire periurium super illam perpetratum. In dampnum ergo et detrimentum cenobii, secundum iudicium diligentium commodum, Walteri iuramentum immo Deo et sancte virgini periurio iniuriatum est, et quod iuris erat ecclesie sub pretexto iusticie iniuste ab adversa parte possessum est.

Cumque post modicum reverteretur prefatus Walterus cum suis ad sua, letabundus quia in causa iuxta voluntatem obtinuerit, et filius eius, Rogerus, qui patrem suum ad hec instigaverat, perturbanti equo insederit, repente ultio divina fructum adinventionis eius in illum vindicavit, nam equus, cui insedit, in terram et ipse de equo consequenter corruit, fractisque cervicibus expiravit.

Verum tamen pater illius, quamvis nimio dolore anxietur super morte filii, semetipsum tamen accusans, terribile iudicium Domini reprehendere non audebat, sed penitens et satisfaciens terram, quam male adquisierat, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam prenominato cenobio dedit, cartaque sua confirmavit, vitamque suam in reliquum diligentius emendavit. Quia filium et heredem in terra amiserat, in hereditate sua multos filios Dei, qui dispersi fuerant ad serviendum Deo viventi, ut heredes eius fierent, coheredes autem Christi, in unum colligebat. Duo namque preclara cenobia, ordinis Cisterciensis, Rievallem, videlicet, et Wardunum, terciumque canonicorum, Kirkam nomine, in proprio allodio fundavit, diesque suos in bonum consumavit.

Item de alio qui similiter super eandem armillam perieravit.

Versabatur quodam tempore controversia inter eos qui dominabantur terre de Coupelandia et homines subditos sibi super quadam consuetudine qua boves solebant dominis pensari. Unde et Anglice pensio illa nuncupatur Noutegheld, quod Latine persolucio boum dicitur. Que consuetudo qua de causa quibus in locis inoleverit aut a quo tempore, non est huius temporis aut operis enodare. Impetebantur homines et cogebantur plus reddere quam arbitrabantur se solvere debere. Desudatum est diu tandemque definitum, ut quorundam iuramento probari deberet, que pars iustiore causam foveret, et quod sacramento corporaliter prestito probatum fuisset, ad tenendum inconcusse deinceps neutra pars supersederet.

Erat quidam Adam nomine filius Ailsii vocatus, homo alicuius momenti tunc temporis, qui ad hanc probationem fuerat assignatus concessu et consensu utriusque partis, eo quod crederetur equivocus amator et executor veritatis. Hic, fallacia spiritus mendacis qui erat in ore eius seductus, omnia videntis timore postposito, placere potentioribus desiderans, tacta armilla sancte virginis, iuravit, immo periuravit dominos quod iustum est exigere, et ab antiquis diebus homines illius terre quod exigebatur consuetos reddere. Tali itaque periurio superioribus emolumentum contulit, sed ab illo tempore magnum gravamen pauperioribus intulit.

Sed censura divine iusticie periurium inultum diu manere non permisit, quod super tam reverendas reliquias irreverenter commisit. Mente namque captus traditus est Sathane, torquendus et dilaniandus, ac novennio spiritus Domini malus continuo vexabat illum, ita ut esset in stuporem et sibilum omnibus videntibus illum.

Decimo autem anno vexacionis eius suorum manibus, licet invitus et renitens, ad ecclesiam virginis deducitur, illisque ibidem vigilantibus et orantibus pro eo, sopore diucius placido resolvitur. Excusso denique sompno, a demone expurgatus invenitur, sensuque recepto, compos sui cum multo imbre lacrimarum multimodas gracias Deo et sancte Bege agit, cuius se meritis sospitatem adeptum gratulatur. Toto igitur tempore quo advixit, ab huiusmodi demonica vexacione et oppressione liber permansit, ipse vero iugiter penituit de peccato periurii sui, seque gravissime deliquisse crebro confitebatur coram populo: nec tamen eius confessio, licet publica, plebem potuit absolvere ab impositae pensionis gravi iugo.

De peplo, quo armilla involvitur, furato et iterum restituto.

Quadam vice cum sacra sacre virginis armilla ob insigne sanctitatis offeretur in publicum et negligencius solito et incautius custodiretur, quidam homo pravus atque perversus, nomine N., pepulum quoddam preciosum a quadam devota femina oblatum, quo armilla ipsa obvolvebatur, mente ac manu sacrilega furari et in caliga abscondere non reverebatur, quia ibi scelus suum detegi facile non posse arbitrabatur. Queritur pannus preciosus nec invenitur. Auctor vel fautor sceleris verbis commonitoriis ut ablatum restituat convenitur nec agnoscitur.

Ad ultimum anathematis innodatio intentatur, sed nec sic redditur. Ultio denique aut denudatio manifesta huius rei a sancta Bega fieri ab omnibus exposcitur, cui iniuria specialiter facta videbatur. Sed in his omnibus dure cervicis homo et incircumcisis corde ad penitentiam non emollitur, sed quia multociens vexatio sola solet dare intellectum auditui, castigatur homo flagello competenti, verum tamen non ad insipientiam sibi. Statim ut gausape prenomiatum cruris illius nudum tetigit, quasi emortuum et ab omni vitali vigore totum femur effectum emarcuit, et a iunctura femoris illius usque ad extremas plantas pedis nichil movere aut sentire potuit.

In se ergo reversus homo peccatum cum lacrimis multis coram omnibus patefecit, et extrahens de caliga pannum loco suo restituit. Deductus demum ad basilicam beate Bege, cum luminaribus accensis ibidem pernoctavit in oracionibus: oratum est eciam pro eo ab omnibus circumstantibus, et misericordissime virginis, que misereri consuescit vere penitentibus, pietate restituta est homini pristina salus. Omnisque plebs ut vidit dedit laudem Deo, qui glorificavit sanctam suam signis tam evidentibus.

Quomodo tres viros de carcere liberavit.

Est villa in Coupelandia, vocabulo Wirkentunia, secus Derwenti flumen sita, in qua, die quadam dominica circa vesperum, quatuor viri post diurnam potacionem, dum domi reverterentur a taberna, in rixam nescio qua de causa exacerunt linguas suas, ac de lite ad ictus exercuerunt manus suas. Tres vero numero et fortitudine superiores in quartum irruerunt et non mirum sub se subruerunt. In quandam enim domunculam ad exsicandos fruges factam, que vulgo torrellum vocatur, trahentes hominem opprimendo forsitan cum prefocaverunt, aut manibus gutturi iniectis strangulaverunt. Quod ilico cum compertum esset, convicanei undique confluerunt, et de loco illo abdito extinctum efferentes, nullum vulnus in preempto repperunt. Consequenter clamor attolitur secundum consuetudinem patrie: patriote convicinio congregantur: tres illi homicide comprehenduntur, vinciuntur et a ministris tali officio deputatis usque ad castellum Egremontis deducuntur, ibique ergastulo detruduntur.

Cumque ibidem aliquanto tempore detinerentur, compedibus astricti, et tam squalore carceris quam timore mortis et penuria multiplici essent afflicti, vexacio iuxta propheticum eloquium dedit illis sui intellectum delicti. Reatum enim suum agnoscetes, sese graviter peccasse, iniuste egisse, iniquitatem fecisse, confessi sunt: et indulgenciam fuis lacrimis a Domino postulantes, animas suas illi humiliaverunt: crebro sanctam Begam in auxilium sue liberacionis invocaverunt. Cumque sacrificium spiritus contibulati in corde contrito et humiliato cotidie Deo non cessassent offere, et sancte Bege presidium petere, quadam die coram illis quedam femina multe venustatis et magne venerationis apparuit, illosque verbis consolatoriis permulcens, ait, "Videns vidi afflictionem vestram et gemitum vestrum audivi in tenebrosis et umbra mortis, et descendi liberare vos." At illi, "que estis," inquirunt, "domine, que nos indignos peccatores visitare et consolari dignaris." Et illa, "Ego sum," ait, "famula Christi, Bega, quam assidue invocastis in die tribulacionis vestre. Plane eripiam vos et de manu querentium animas vestras liberabo vos: surgite, exite, venite post me securi, ad asilum meum perducam vos." Illi vero nil cunctati, sed gracias multas agentes, illamque per viam subsecuti omnia prius obserata et repagulis dampnata sibi reserata repperunt, et licet compediti, viam tamen sine impedimento per medium custodum carpentes ad territorium sancte Bege pervenerunt.

Statim autem ut ecclesiam sancte virginis attigerunt visu, rumpebantur compedes eorum quasi fila stuppe ad odorem ignis. Sed visio sancte preambulantis ab illorum evanuit oculis. Illi vero concito gradu ad ecclesiam liberati porrexerunt, multisque lacrimis ibidem profusis et hostiis precum ac graciarum immolatis, compedes, quibus constringebantur, ad laudem Dei et sancte virginis preconium in testimonium sue liberationis illic reliquerunt. Signum illud per fines illos divulgatum est, et ut confiteantur Domino misericordias eius, et mirabilia eius filiis hominum, qualiter sancta Bega eduxerit eos de tenebris carceris et vincula eorum diruperit memorie multorum commendatum est.

De quodam qui alienam coniugem in pace virginis rapuit.

Juvenis quidam, Johannes nomine, sed anti-Johannes opere, veneris venatu venenatus in quandam mulierem Beatricem dictam, sponsam cuiusdam Willelmi cognomento leporis, que iuxta carnis putride putribilem pulchritudinem non illepide forme videbatur, oculos iniecit et in consensum complexus sui eius aurem et animum apellare diu desudavit. Mulier vero, coniugalis federis fidem fedare fedum ducens, illi consentire omnimodis supersedit, et tam fame lubrico quam conscientie sue sereno prospiciens, ab eo non solum assensum verum eciam alloquium et aspectum absentavit. Unde factum est ut iuvenis maiori urgeretur stimulo, et instar ignis qui flatu repressus acrius surgit, ex sui repulsa in eius desiderium copiosiori ureretur incentivo.

Advenerat annua revolutione quedam celebritas quam sacrosancto sabbato in vigilia Pentecosten homines illius terre ob quedam insignia sanctitatis sancte virginis tunc illic inventa, et signa ibidem perpetrata solent solempnizare, et ecclesiam illius visitando orationum et oblationum hostiis honorare.

Prefata femina, post sacras vigiliis iuxta morem in loco illo celebratas, dum domi die divinis muniis expletis reverteretur cum matre sua, invadit illam in valle cuiusdam alneti prenominatus iuvenis, ut lupus agnam, ut milvus columbam, abreptamque equo preparato violenter abvexit, abduxit et oppressit. Illa vero quod renitendo resistere non potuit, pacem Dei et sancte Bege crebro inclamitans, violenciam sibi inferri in nomine ipsius prohibuit.

Mater mulieris et alii, qui audierunt malum quod acciderat, circumcirca cum eiulatu annunciaverunt. Quod cum audissent fratres oppresse, assumptis armis, fugientem mechum persecuti sunt, sociumque eius invenientes decapitaverunt: illum comprehendere aut invenire non valuerunt. Sed licet invasor alieni thori, Dei iniuriator, et pacis sancte Bege violator, evaserit manus hominum, non tamen effugere potuit divine animadversionis gladium. Nam quum a facie querentium animam eius fugiens, in silva poneret tenebras latibulum suum, invasit eum spiritus malignus nec ab eius vexacione cessavit donec illius excuteret spiritum. Sic, sic ille illius effectus est usque ad vite terminum, continuus detentor, qui ad adulterium et pacis amice Dei temerande sacrilegum ausum fuerat assiduus et miserabiliter efficax intentor. Sicut enim plures referunt, cum vagabundus per diversa oberrando discurreret, prius vestes, quibus tegebatur, a ramis arborum minutatim discisse in ipsis pependerit: deinde carnes eius frustratim dilacerate spinis et vepribus adheserunt. Demum miserando spectaculo vitalem emisit flatum, cadaverque eius apud Holmcoltran in ventrem matris omnium est ingressum.

De duobus germanis apud sanctam Begam curatis.

Vir quidam Francigena, urbis Carnocensis indigena, duos filios habebat, sed patris nomen ut pluribus putabatur sinistro omine gerebat. Primogenitus namque eorum a nativitate paralyticus et mutus fuerat: iunior fistula laborabat que inveterata per multiplices meatus foraminum plurimorum saniei fluorem crebro distillabat. Miser prorsus pater prolis miserande multociens multari maluit orbitate quam cotidie continua torqueri calamitate. Frequentabat tamen ecclesiam, pressuram suam deplorans, levavitque oculos suos in montes celites, auxilium inde consolationis et remedii sibi affuturum sedulo implorans.

Nocte quadam ammonitus est in sompniis ut cum filiis Angliam adiret, sanctorum et memorias visitando regionem circumiret, et quod absque ambiguitate aliqua sibi solamen, suisque salus, in illa proveniret. Evigilans homo, et visionem amplexans, iter suum versus mare maturare disposuit: et quod non humeris pueros portare prevaluit, necessitate magistra, redulam quandam composuit eique natos imposuit: ipse vero aliquando antecedens, loco iumentis, illam tali sarcina onustam trahebat: quandoque retrogradiens quadam machina ante se propellebat.

Cum magna itaque difficultate transfretans in Angliam et incipiens a Cantuaria per diversa loca sanctorum circumivit terram et perambulavit eam donec aquilones fines adhiens deveniret Tynemutham. Quo dum pervenisset in ecclesiam sancti Oswini, regis et martiris, pernoctabat, sed nichil usquam adhuc consequeretur quod optabat. Cepit ergo homo nimio tedio et merore affici, et desperatione quadam effractus, quod sibi revelatum in propria patria fuerat deputabat seductorii spiritus illusorie vanitati, non veritati.

Hec diu secum cogitans et domi reverti deliberans, membra quieti soporis dedit, et ecce in visu noctis personam preclaram coram se asistentem atque dicentem aspexit, "Cur, homo, merore consumeris, cur desperatione et tedio depressus, promissioni divine incredulus existis. Constans esto, et noli esse incredulus sed fidelis. Surge velociter et perge Coupelandam ad ecclesiam sancte Bege virginis, ibique tibi pollicita et diu desiderata atque quesita, eius meritis, salus dabitur filiis tuis."

Hec dixit et apparentis et colloquentis visio disparuit. Expurgatus homo mane visionem quibusdam retulit viam versus Coupelandam diligenter perquirens iter arripuit, et quamvis cum gravi labore illuc pervenit, et sicut ei iussum fuerat pernoctavit. Cum autem aurora albesceret in diem, prior natu puerorum paralyticus et mutus repente totus dirigit et contremuit, quandamque lucifluam virginem leni tactu se atrectantem sensit. Et ecce, virtute divina, vis quedam occulta marcidis membris et medullis vividum succum infundit, ossa arida irrigat, naturalis sanguinis meatus competenti et contemperato cursu per fibras discurrit, et in corpore premortuo singulos artus reviviscere et revirescere, sua loca, suos motus, suaque officia exercere, facit.

Continuo consolidatis basibus et plantis surgens, supradictus puer supra pedes stetit, et linguam a nativitate obstrusam in nova verba resolvit. Duplicato ita miraculo et gressibus stabilitis ad altare processit et gratias multiples Deo et beate Bege persolvit. Et ut in oculis omnium miraculum multiplicius manifestaretur, nec solum Gallicia lingua, qua natus fuerat, sed etiam peregrina, videlicet Anglica expedite loquebatur. Sonuit ergo in ore omnium hec videntium vel audientium graciaram actio et vox laudis: benedictus Dominus Deus Israel, qui facit mirabilia magna solus, magnificatus, et meritum preciose virginis.

Secundo pro alterius filii sanitate vigilie in virginis ecclesia et preces iterantur: iterato beneficia divina secuntur, Nam fistula, cuius molestia puer laborabat, exsiccat: foramina divina virtute obstruuntur: cutis obducitur: et cum sospitate prestita etiam vigor restituitur, iterumque a cunctis Deo et sancte Bege, cum graciis exhibitis, laudacio libatur. Post aliquot dies abiit homo in viam suam cum filiis suis gaudens, redulamque illam, que filios advexit, in testimonium miraculi loco reliquit.

Multa quidem et alia signa fecit, Jesu Christi famula, virgo Bega, in nomine ipsius, que non sunt scripta in libello hoc. Hec autem scripta sunt, que clariora et multorum testimonio celebriora et ideo fide digniora cognovimus: cetera propter minorem certitudinem non adiacet animo relatu prosequi: et maxime ob vitandum fastidium infirmis lectoribus. Hic ergo narrandi finem ponimus, cum tamen non sit finis miraculorum eius. Quia enim cum illo, qui est finis infinitus sine fine, regnat in gloria perhenni: constat nimirum quod in eius nomine ubi et quando et in quibus et quociens oporteat possit, si velit, miracula operari usque ad consummacionem seculi. Sit ergo sancto sanctorum suorumque omnium sanctificatori, glorificatori, virtus, decus, et imperium per infinita secula seculorum. Amen.

de Curci, xv carucatas terre cum decimacione domus sue: Ex presentacione autem Helie de Cestria, ecclesiam de Balimor, in qua villa construitur castellum ejus, cum omnibus ecclesiasticis beneficiis ad eandem ecclesiam pertinentibus, et unam carucatam terre in eadem villa ex dono Baldwini: Ex presentacione autem Ricardi Masculi, omnes ecclesias et capellas tocius terre sue quas habet in Ultonia de dono domini sui, Johannis de Curci, et de dono aliorum virorum tam in Clenelhirech quam in Lesmochan et in aliis locis, cum omnibus ecclesiasticis beneficiis ad easdem ecclesias et capellas pertinentibus: et unam carucatam terre in Thweth quod vocatur Clenelperth, ex dono Stephani Locardi: Ex dono Rogeri de Croft et Gilberti fratris ejus, duas carucatas terre. Decernimus autem ne cui liceat personas vestras molestare, redditus, possessiones et cetera bona vestra minuere, subtrahere vel in aliquo perturbare, set omnia integra et illibata permaneant eorum per quorum gubernacione[m] et sustentacionem sunt collata usibus omnimodis pro futura. Indulgemus quoque vobis ut in terris in quibus de episcoporum concessione ecclesiastica beneficia canonice possidetis, liceat vobis ea per omnia libere tenere, salva in omnibus apostolice sedis auctoritate et diocesani episcopi canonica justicia. Nulli ergo hominum omnino liceat hanc nostre proteccionis et confirmacionis paginam infringere vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attemptare presumpserit, indignacionem Omnipotentis Dei et beatorum Petri et Pauli apostolorum ejus, domini pape, et nostram se noverit incursum. Anno domini m^o cc^o ij^o, hoc anno quinto pontificatus domini pape Innocentii tercii, mense Junii ix^o die stante. Data Dunens.

9. [BULLA HONORII PAPE.]

Honorius,¹ episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis abbati et conventui sancte Marie Eboracensis, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Cum a nobis petitur quod justum est et honestum tam vigor equitatis quam ordo exigit rationis ut id per sollicitudinem officii nostri ad debitum perducatur effectum. Eapropter dilecti filii in domino vestris justis precibus inclinati personas vestras et locum in quo divino estis obsequio mancipati cum omnibus bonis que in presenciarum rationabiliter possidetis aut in futurum justis modis prestante domino poteritis adipisci sub beati Petri et nostra proteccione suscepimus, specialiter autem cellam de Neddram, cumpella de villa Hugonis de Logan et terram

VI. MEMORANDUM ON THE DESCENDANTS OF WALDEVE SON OF EARL GOSPATRIC, LORDS OF ALLERDALE, C. 1275.¹ [Scottish Documents (Chancery), File 9, No. 3.]

Comes Cospatryk, qui fuit quondam Comes de Dunbar in Scocia, ¹ For the origin and nature of this document, see Victoria Hist. of Cumberland i. 297-8.

habuit quemdam fratrem nomine Dolfinum Comitem Norhumbrie, qui ambo bastardi habuerunt quemdam fratrem nomine Wald[evum] legitimum et habuerunt quandam sororem nomine Etheldredam legitimam. Et sciendum est quod Wald[evus] et Etheldr[eda] fuerunt ex uno patre et ex una matre.

Postea venit Ranulphus de Meschinis in Anglia cum Willelmo bastardo Conquestore et ipse Rex Willelmus conquestor dedit eidem Ran[ulpho] totam terram a loco qui dicitur Rere Crosse super Stayn moram usque flumen versus Scociam quod vocatur Sulewaht ad metas certas ibidem inter Angliam et Scociam. Ita scilicet quod idem Ran[ulphus] tunc temporis creatus fuit in Com[item] Karl[eoli]. Idem Ran[ulphus] de Meschinis attraxit secum Wald[evum] fratrem predicti Comitis Cospatryk in auxilium et propter guerram motam inter Scoticos et Anglicos ad succursum habendum de eo qui fuit de Scocia: et idem Ran[ulphus] dedit eidem Wald[evo] pro servicio suo totam Baroniam de Allerdal' de loco qui dicitur Wahtelpole usque Derwent cum pertinenciis, salva sibi venacione sua t[antu]m.

Et idem Wald[evus] sic feofatus dedit Odardo de Legys qui fuit senescallus Ran[ulphi] de Meschinis vavassorem de Wygeton' cum villatis et earum pertinenciis pro servicio suo, faciend[o] ei servicium Cornag[ii] et Foryns[eci] pannag[ii]. Et idem Odardus fundavit ecclesiam de Wygeton' in dicta foresta.

Et idem Wald[evus] dedit Melbeht servienti suo qui venit secum in patriam totam villam de Bramfeld, salva sibi advocacione ecclesie quam penes se retinuit.

Et successit eidem Wald[evo] Alanus filius eius et heres qui fuit infra etatem et in custodia Regis Davidis Scocie qui habuit terram Cumbrie eo quod guerra fuit inter Regem Henricum non adhuc Regem, qui fuit nepos Regis Davidis Scocie, filii (sic) imperatricis Matildis, et Stephanum Regem avunculum predicti Regis Henrici, qui optin[ui]t totam terram Wald[evi] patris sui in Allerdal' post etatem suam completam.

Et idem Alanus habuit quemdam fratrem bastardum ex patre suo procreatum nomine Cospatryk, cui dedit villatum de Bolton infra forestam et Bastenthwyte extra forestam et Hestholm in Derwentwater. Et idem Alanus dedit cum corpore² present[i] filii sui Crucem sanctam Karl[eoli] et ecclesiam de Aspatrik et servicium antecessorum Joh[annis] de Brayton' in eadem foresta et ecclesiam de Crosseby et quartam partem eiusdem ville quam Uhtredus quondam tenuit in foresta et extra forestam, ecclesiam de Hyrby et servicium antecessorum Ysac de Yrby in Ysaby. Idem Alanus superfecovavit Utredum filium Lyolfe militem suum de villa de Aylewardby quam Thomas de Louther' et Petrus de Dayncurt modo tenent.

Et successit eidem Alano Willelmus filius Duncan, quondam Com[es] de Murreve, nepos ipsius Alani, procreatus ex Ethedr-[eda] sorore Wald[evi] patris sui.

Idem Willelmus habuit totam Baroniam de Allerdale preter Palmecastr' que est landa in foresta ad presens propter guerram motam inter Regem Scocie et ipsum Willelmum filium Duncan qui desponsaverat Aliciam de Rumeley filiam Roberti de Rumeley domini de Scypton' qui quondam disponsaverat filiam Willelmi de Meschinis domini de Coupelande.

Idem Willelmus procreavit ex predicta uxore sua Willelmum puerum de Egermund' qui infra etatem obiit et tres filias quarum prima nomine Cicilia maritata fuit cum honore de Scypton' Willelmo Grosso, Comiti Albemarl', per predictum Henricum tunc Regem Anglye in custodia domini Regis infra etatem. Et secunda nomine Amabill' marita[ta] fuit Reginaldo de Lucy cum honore de Egermund' per predictum Regem infra etatem. Et tertia, scilicet, Alicia de Rumeley nomine, maritata fuit Gilberto Pypard ex familia Reg[is] cum honore de Cokermu per predictum Regem infra etatem.

Willelmus filius Duncan habuit quemdam filium qui obiit infra etatem et tres filias reliqu[it he]redes in custodia Henrici Regis avi Regis Henrici qui nunc ultimo fuit, quarum pr[ima] maritata fuit Willelmo Grosso, Comiti Albemarl', cui successit Hawysia filia eius et heres, et successit Hawyse Willelmus de Fortibus, Comes Albemarl', et postea successit ei Willelmus qui ultimo fuit, et successit ei Avelyna filia eius et heres quam disponsaverat dominus Edmundus frater illustris Regis Edwardi, et Avelyna mortua [est] sine herede.

Secunda Amabyll' maritata fuit per dominum Regem Reginaldo de Lucy et successit ei Ricardus de Lucy cui successerunt Amabill' et Alicia de Lucy.

Tercia maritata fuit per eundem Regem Gilberto Pypard et idem Gylbertus obiit sine herede, et dominus H[enricus] Rex obiit et successit ei Ricardus filius eius qui postea creatus est in Regem et iter suum arripuit versus terram sanctam. Et Regina Elyanor' mater ipsius Regis maritavit ipsam Aliciam Roberto de Curteney militi et cognato suo qui tenuit totam Baroniam de Allerdal tota vita Regis Ricardi predicti et tempore J[ohannis] Regis quousque idem Robertus obiit et sine herede.

VII. DEVOLUTION OF THE LORDSHIP OF COCKERMOUTH FROM THE TENURE OF WILLIAM FITZ DUNCAN UP TO 1316. [Manuscript at Cockermouth Castle.]

Decensus Albemarl, Multon et Lucy.¹

Willelmus filius Duncaui fuit dominus de Coupeland et Allerdale et Skypton et habuit tres filias, Ceciliam et Amabillam et Aliciam, inter quas partita fuit tota hereditas sua in hunc modum

Cecilia, primogenita, que maritata fuit Willelmo le Gros, habuit ad propartem suam Skipton cum pertinenciis per seruicium illi pertinens. De Cecilia venit Hawisia. De Hawisia, Willelmus de Fortibus, de quo alius Willelmus de Fortibus, de quo Willelmo Amabilla, (a) secunda filia, que maritata fuit Reginaldo de Lucy, habuit ad propartem suam Egremund et Coupeland per seruicium vnus antiqui feodi militis. De Amabilla venit Ricardus de Lucy. De Ricardo Alicia de Romely, tercia soror, habuit ad propartem suam Cokermouth et Allerdale tenendas per baroniam. Que quidem Alicia obiit sine herede de se et Willelmus de Fortibus, filius Hawisie et nepos Cecilie, seisiuit in maum suam totum Cokermouth et Allerdale quousque Amabilla et Alicia, filie Ricardi de Lucy, disracionauerunt inde medietatem eo quod fuit de hereditate Alicie de Romely, amite Ricardi de Lucy patris sui.

Willelmus Thomas Johannes Amicia Avelina, que maritata fuit domino Edmundo fratri Regis sine heredibus sine herede Amabilla inter quas partita fuit tota Coupeland incontinenti post decessum patris sui, et ille eedem postmodum disracionauerunt versus Willelmum de Fortibus medietatem de Cokermuth et Allerdale que fuit de hereditate Alicie de Romely, amite Ricardi de Lucy patris predictarum Amabile et Alicie. Unde bene constat quod dicte Amabilla et Alicia et heredes sui, videlicet, Thomas filius Lamberti de Multon et Thomas de Multon, tenuerunt et adhuc tenere debent de domino Rege totam Coupeland pro seruicio quod illi pertinet. Et nichilominus medietatem baronie de Allerdale. Et heredes Willelmi de Fortibus, si essent superstites, aliam medietatem baronie de Allerdale et Skypton.

(a) Ista maritata fuit Reginaldo de Lucy, de qua Ricardus de Lucy, de Ricardo

Amabilla, de qua Thomas de Multon de Egremund, de quo, alius Thomas, de quo, tercius Thomas qui nunc superstes est et petit

Alicia, de qua Thomas de Lucy, de quo Thomas

Thomas sine herede et Antonius qui nunc est et petit

¹ This document should be compared with the foregoing and also with a similar pedigree on the Plea Rolls touching the same dispute (Abbrev. Placitorum, p. 323, Rec. Com), as they all belong to the same group with No. 498 of the Register of St. Bees.

Et sciendum est quod tempore quo guerra mota fuit inter Regem Scocie et Willelmum filium Duncan qui fuit pater Cicilie, Amabill' et Alicie presentavit se Rogerus Goky qui fuit cum domino Rege et peciit ab eo pro servicio suo landam Sancte Hilde in Yngylwode et concessit eidem dominus Rex dictam landam de hereditate earundem sororum et tenuit eam fere per xxx annos et amplius. Et in extremis vite sue reddidit se conversum Abbacie de Holm et ante obitum suum adierunt dominum J[ohanne]m Regem Anglie et idem Rex concessit eiis sicut idem Rogerus Goky quondam tenuit vivente Roberto marito suo. Ita scilicet quod ad presens nullum ius debet preterire.

X. GRANT TO THE PRIOR OF THE HOSPITAL OF JERUSALEM IN ENGLAND TO ADAM CASSE SON OF ROBERT OF LAND CALLED DUBWRA, WHICH HAD BEEN GIVEN TO THE BRETHREN BY ADAM

¹This schedule of possessions had been recited by inspeximus and confirmed by Henry II. about thirty years before. The textual discrepancies between the two confirmations are not serious, but Regnaldus faber may be compared with Romaldus faber as the grant has not been preserved (Dugdale, Mon., iii. 550).

SON OF GAMEL DE EGGLESFELD. [From the original at Hornby Chapel.]

Omnibus sancte matris ecclesie filiis ad quos presens scriptum pervenerit, frater R.¹ thesaurarius fratrum Hospitalis Jerosol., prior in Anglia, salutem. Noverit universitas uestra nos de communi consensu et consilio fratrum Capituli nostri concessisse et presenti carta confirmasse Ade Casse filio Roberti totam terram de Dubwra quam habemus ex donacione Ade filii Gamelli de Egglesfeld per subscriptas diuisas, scilicet, a Hwitestan subtus molendinum per transuersam moram usque ad Cumelkeldefot et ab inde usque ad Normanneskoende: et inde ex transuerso usque ad predictum Dubwra: et ab inde sicut idem Dubwra diuidit sursum usque ad prefatum Hwitestan. Habendam et tenendam illi et heredibus suis inperpetuum de domo nostra, libere et quiete cum omnibus pertinenciis suis. Reddendo inde annuatim domui nostre duodecim denarios ad festum sancti Michaelis pro omni seruicio et exaccione inde ad nos pertinente. Ita tamen quod in obitu suo et heredum suorum similiter tercia pars catallorum suorum domui nostre remanebit. Quod ut firmitatem obtineat huic scripto sigillum curauimus apponere. Hiis testibus fratre Rogero, fratre Gilleberto capellanis, fratre Waltero de Stanford, fratre Johanne Ruffo, fratre Eudone de Bradele, fratre Alano de monte sancti Johannis, Waltero de Winton.

Unde assisa de morte antecessoris summonita fuit inter eos in predicta curia, scilicet, quod predictus Ricardus remisit et quietum clamavit totum jus et clameum quod habuit in predictis xxxij acris terre cum pertinentiis de se et heredibus suis predicto Roberto priori et successoribus suis in perpetuum. Et pro hac quieta clamancia, fine et concordia Robertus prior dedit predicto Ricardo vj marcas argenti.

XXVIII. GRANT BY RICHARD DE LUCY OF ALL MOSERTHE TO ADAM DE MOSERTHE, c. 1203. [From an early copy in the muniment room of Cockermouth Castle.]

Bundae et limites de Mosergh.

Sciant omnes presentes et futuri quod ego, Ricardus de Lucy, concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi Ade de Moserthe et heredibus suis totam Moserthe cum omnibus pertinenciis per istas divisas, scilicet, sicut divide inter Perdishau et Moserthe extunduntur versus orientem usque rivulum qui descendit de Ulnescarth et ascendendo per eundem rivulum usque ad divisas que sunt inter Thacthwayt et Moserthe per easdem divisas ad capud de Capeltrebek et inde descendendo de Capeltrebek usque Laweswatre. Et inde ascendendo per Lausewatre usque in Dubbes et inde ascendendo ad divisas que sunt inter Solrescales et Moserthe et per easdem divisas usque ad mussam que est divisa inter Perdishaw et Moserthe. Et quod predictus Adam et heredes sui debent colere et edificare et assartare boscum, atque vendere et donare, inter Raysethwaytbec et Perdishau et Ulnescarthbec. Ita quod predictus Adam et heredes sui et homines eorum, in villa de Moserthe manentes, infra istas divisas colere, assartare et edificare, vendere atque donare debeant. Predictus Adam et heredes sui et homines eorum in terra de Moserthe manentes non possunt nec debent colere aut edificare nec in bosco capere qui est inter Rayswaytbec et Capeltrebek, sed cum averiis suis tamen pasturare, ita quod nullus alius cum eis communicare debent. Si vero alii infra scriptas divisas presentis pagine intraverint, ego et heredes mei inde capiemus escapium. Et quod predictus Adam et heredes sui et homines eorum in terra de Moser' manentes debent pasturare subtus Layrocsyk usque Becsnari extra bladum et prata illis et heredibus suis. Habendum et tenendum de me et de heredibus meis in feodo et in hereditate, libere, quiete, integre, pacifice, salvo mihi et heredibus meis infra predictas divisas cervo et cerva, apri, leia, et aerio ancipitris qui ibi erunt. Et faciendum forinsecum servicium quantum pertinet ad terciam partem unius ville de Caupeland. Et ferendum mihi et heredibus meis singulis annis unam marcam argenti pro omni servicio ad me et ad heredes meos pertinente, scilicet, medietatem ad festum sancti Martini et medietatem ad Pentecosten. Preterea concessi et quietum clamavi de me et de heredibus meis predictos Adam et heredes suos et homines eorum in terra predicta manentes de Durtol et de pastu forestariorum. Homines vero Ade predicti et heredum suorum in dicta terra manentes invenire debent testem forestariis meis et heredum meorum secundum usum Caupeland malefacta testificanda fore quando fuerint inventa de propinquiore villa et prosequenda donec placita in curia mea sit finita [et] heredum meorum secundum usum Caupeland, Homines vero predicti Ade et heredum suorum in predicta [villa] manentes debent pascere unum landsergentem et virum suum et equum suum ad tornum suum cum communitate feodi mei et heredum meorum inter Egre et Derewent et debent invenire predicto landsergenti testem usque ad proximam villam secundum usum Caupeland cum omnibus aliis serviciis ad me et heredes meos pertinentibus. Homines vero predicti Ade et heredum suorum in predictis terris manentes debent dare mihi et heredibus meis toloneum de omnibus rebus quas vendunt in mercandiso. Hiis testibus Henrico filio Arturi, Ricardo filio Alani, Willelmo, Benedicto, Michaeli filiis Ketel, Ada de Lamplo, Gilberto filio Gilberti, Ada de Haverington, Ada filio Michaelis, et multis aliis.¹

XXIX. PLEAS TOUCHING THE CUSTOMS AND SERVICES OF THE BARONY OF COUPLAND, 1203. [Abbreviatio Placitorum, p. 42, Rec. Com.]

Ricardus de Lucy petit versus Adam filium Johannis quod faciat ei servicia et consuetudines quas ei facere debet de libero tenemento quod de eo tenet in Breseko, scilicet, quod debet receptare et hospitari et pascere v forestarios suos cum ad eum venerint et invenire eis sectam ad testandum malefacta foreste sue. Dicit etiam quod debet habere iiij landservientes, custodes, scilicet, pacis patrie, duos, scilicet, ex una parte aque de Egen' et duos ex alia parte illius aque de Egen', et illos duos, qui erunt ex illa parte aque ubi ipse manet, debet ipse hospitari et pascere, et invenire eis sectam ad testandum malefacta pacis. Et preterea petit de ipso et de hominibus terre sue de omnibus averiis suis et universis rebus unde theolonium debet surgere que vendite fuerunt ubicunque vendantur. Ita quod theolonium illud portari debet ad castellum suum de Egremunt infra diem dominicam proximam post vendicionem factam, et si ultra dominicam detentum fuerit ipsi erunt in forisfactura sua, et reddent ei theolonium. Et Adam venit et cognoscit ei servicia et consuetudines que terra sua debet et debuit a conquestu Anglie, scilicet, quod ipse debet esse forestarius suus se tercio ex feoffamento antiquo ad custum suum proprium, et debet receptare et hospitari et pascere unum landservientem ex una parte aque in communi, sicut ei acciderit, scilicet, ex illa parte aque ubi ipse manet. Cognoscit etiam quod de hominibus ejus debet ipse habere theolonium de omnibus rebus suis venditis unde theoloneum surgere debet, sed ipsemet de omnibus rebus suis propriis venditis quietus esse debet. Et

XCI. LETTER OF SIR GEORGE LAWSON TO CROMWELL ABOUT THE PRIORY OF ST. BEES, 28 OCTOBER, 1533. [Letters and Papers of Henry VIII. vol. VI. 1359.]

Right worchipfull Sir, after my full hertiest recommendacion, and as I am enformed ther hathe bene pursuit and labor maid unto you of late in the favo^r of Dan John Mathew, late prior of Saynt Bees, to haue the same in perpetuite undir the covent seale of Saynt Mary abbey, the whiche dan John, I assure yow, is a verey yll Husband as hathe bene well proved at Lincoln, Saynt Martyns and Seynt Bees, where he hathe bene prior: And now of late gret complayntes cumyng of extorcion and other gret urgent wronges done at Saynt Bees to the Tenantes and inhabitantes ther. Wherapon on Saynt Calixt daye last (14 Oct., 1533) at the generall chapitor yerely holden at Saynt Mary abbey, as the usuall custume is, where all the priours of the Celles and other hede officers of the said Monastierie dothe assemble to see and aview thestate and acomptes of the same, knowing the demeano^r and yll Husbandrye of the said Dan John exchanged and revoked hym from Saynt Bees. And yete where he shuld haue bene a conventuall, for your sake and favo^r of your former letter, named hym to be priour of Saynt Martynes, a propir Celle nye unto Richemond and a resonable good liffing. Whiche he cold never optayne but in your favour. And now it is reported unto you that he shuld be otherwise entreated, which of a surtie is not so, but my Lord abbot doth and woll do at your complementacion all that reasonably is to be done. And yete his brethren and covent is fore sett against the said dan John Mathew for his mysde-meanour many wayes. And it hath not bene sene that any perpetuite hath bene graunted undir covent seale to such like person w^tout a speciall and urgent cause and a man proved of good demeano^r and husbandrye for the well of his house. Wherefore I hertly pray you to take this mater as it is in dede, and to contynue your good frendship to my said Lord abbot, whom I assure you is all yours and at your commaundment in that thing that he can or may do. And that it may please you to geve no credens to any person that shall make suite or labo^t agaynst my said Lord abbott. Wherin if any suche shalbe, I doubt nott but he will make you suche aunsuer as shall stand w^t reason and content yo^r mynde at all tymes, whiche he moche desireth to do that thing that may be to yo^r pleasur

XCVII. LETTER OF SIR THOMAS CURWEN TO SIR THOMAS WHARTON ON THE UNSETTLED CONDITION OF WEST CUMBERLAND IN 1537. [Letters and Papers of Henry VIII. vol. XIJ. part i. 185.]

Broder, In my most hertly maner I recomende me to you, and as my most assewrede tryst ys in you to shew the kyngys hyghnes or hys most honorable consell the stayte of thes weste partes of Comberlande of my informacion to you by thes letter, wyche ys all trewe. The west partes of Comberlande from Plomlonde to Mongcaster ys all on flowghter, ande mor rebelles then euer thay war, bothe in thare wordes and dedys, nothyng regardyng the kynges most gracijs pardon wythe hyegh wordes of yt. On Setterday beyng the xiiij day of Jeneware a sarvande of Docter Lees callede Robert Wetlay ded come to Mongcastar and logede at Roger Fylbeces howse, and Parson Wodall w^t hym, and on the morow comyng hon hys way, all the holl contre thareabowte to the nomber of fyfe honderethe men ded ryse on hym ande towke hym ande browghte hym to Agremonde, wheth^r he was watchede lyke a theffe all y^e neyght, and so kepede hym to Monday ande browght hym to Cokkarmowthe in to the market, where dede assembyll all the holle contre of comonte. Som sayde, "stryke of hys hede," and sayde, "steke hym." Throthe was he was serchede yf he hayde browght onye letteres frome the kyng to oney gentyllman in the contre, and thare wase fownde hone hym dyveres letteres sent frome Docter Lee to gentyllmen and nothyng in thayme consernyng the kynges hyeghnes nor the comens, but all thay holle concludede to pute hym to dethe, sayng that no letters shwllde be browght in to the contre frome the kyng, but he that suche browght showllde be pute to dethe. By the menes of yong Johan Swenbwrne hys lyfe was saved for that day, on hys promys to bryng hyme to the hopen market at Cokarmothe the next monday and thare to be tryede by xxiiij men wheder he dede bryng any oder letturs as to the herle of Comberlande, you or me. Yff thay can prove honae lettures or masuges frome the kyng or hys consell browght by hym, thay ar concludede to put hym to dethe, and for to make serche thay haue mayde men in to all places as he come so fare as Skypton to inquere what he haithe done by the way. What shall become off hym Gode knowes. On Thwrsday beyng the xviiijth day of thys monethe, comonte dede assemble sertayne towneshypes in every quarter and ded spole all y^e tethe barnes on the west syde of Darwent: the same Thursday, beyng xviiij day of thys monethe, at Lanslot Hemares howse was the holde wyffe put forthe of hyr possesscion by Hyymar that makes tytyll to the lande. All the contrarye part dede assembyll w^t all thar partlakeres and all Heyghmer frends dyd assemble in lyke case, so that a gret fray wase lyke [to] grow. What shal become of all thys I shall sende you worde as sone as I knowe, for at my comyng away in to Yorkshyer wase all thys in honde. The cawse of my comyng in to Yorkshyer was I hayde war[ning] by dyveres that the comons ded assembyll, on Fryday the xiiij thys monethe, at Mewthow purposly oder to sett on Carlell or hels to take me and make me swere to take thare part or elles to pute m[e] to dethe, wyche I haide rather sofer then to be hontrew to hys hyeghnes. My lyfe shall ende in hys trew servyse. Broder, beyng alone, and no gentyllmen abowte me to tryst on, I am comen into Yorkeshyer to Sherofhoton where I have spoken wythe the Kynges tenandes, who haithe fully promysede me to take my part in the kynges qwarelys aganste hony that wyll rysse. I trwst to Gode to do the kyng goode servyse in thys partes. At my comyng to Rychmonde and logede at [Ra]wfe Gowares howse, thare come a byll to the towne of Rychmonde, [th]e pertyclys of the same byll I do sende you her inclosede. Dyverse of thaym ys sent abrode as Dorem and Barna Castell ande fere in to Comberlande and Westmerlande. I beseche you make my lorde of Northefolke grace and my lorde admyrall prevay to all thes. I have browght yo^r broder in to Yorkshyer w^t me, for yf he be in Cokermowthe, to Gode sende a better stay, yt wyll cost hym hys lyfe, albet the towne of Cokermowthe ys gode and trew subiectes to the kyng as yet. I have ben w^t thaym dyverse tymes, parswadede thame to the best of my power, wyche haithe as yet folowde my power adwyse. [There] ys no way to stay Comberlande, as I thynke, but houle garesons . . . will pese thaym nor nothyng but cwrracion: thay wyll here nor trwst no man that spekes contrary thayme. I tr[wst in] Gode yet to se a better worlde. The cawse I dede no sonar sende known . . . to you to informe the kynges hyeghnes as I wase lade for in every quarter of the contre that I shwllde not depart nor send no letteres forth to no man, so that I ded not wryte to come at Yorke. What shal become of my wyte and chylder Gode knowes: thay war in gode helthe at the making herof. All the comonte dothe thenke y^t my lorde of [N]orthefolke wyll not come in to thes northe partes, wyche makes all thys: yt ys brewted and spred abrode amonges the comons that y^e kyng ys in dysplesure w^t my lorde of Northefolke. I have shewede the contrary throught all the contre. Some gyfys credens to me and some sayede I do but desave thayme. Goode broder, do in all thys as yo^r wisdom shall thynke goode. [Endorsed]

The lord Whartton to the lord Chauncellor vij^o August 1544.

APPENDIX

A LIST OF THE PRIORS OF ST. BEES.

1. Robert is said by Leland to have been the first prior of St. Bees so far as he could find—"S. Bega: Robertus Prior ejusdem, ut colligo, primus" (Collectanea, i. 25). In point of date, a Robert is the first prior whose name appears in the Register: he is witness of a charter of Alice de Rumelli, daughter of William Meschin, the founder of the priory, and wife of William fitz Duncan (Register, pp. 43-4). One of his co-witnesses was Osbert the archdeacon who may perhaps be identified with Osbert de Baines, archdeacon of York, 1140-54 (Le Neve, iii. 131). Robert's date would therefore appear to be in the second quarter of the twelfth century.

2. Richard is the first witness of a grant made to the abbey of Caldra by William de Essebi and Hectred his wife for the health of William earl of Albemarle and the Countess Cicely his wife (Illus. Doc. No. xxxij.). As this Earl died in 1179 (Benedict Abbas, i. 243) and as the phraseology of the grant presupposes that he was then alive, the date of Prior Richard must fall before 1179. William de Essebi must have married Hectred, who was widow of Ranulf de Lyndesey and a daughter of Waldeve, lord of Allerdale (Register, pp. 57, 493), before 1158 when his name first appears in the Pipe Rolls of Cumberland. From this circumstance among others it may be taken that the floruit of Prior Richard was not long after the middle of the twelfth century.

3. William was prior when Godred father of Olave, king of the Isles, gave certain lands in the Isle of Man to the monks of St. Bees (Register, p. 489). The deed of gift, which is preserved in the Register (pp. 72-3), is witnessed by G[amaliel], Bishop [of the Isles]. As King Godred's reign lay between 1154 and 1187 and as Gamaliel's consecration took place between 1154 and 1161, an equation may be struck and William's priorate set down about 1170.

4. Deodatus is authenticated by a single mention in the Register (p. 137), when he witnessed a grant of the chapel of Clifton to Walthef, son of Thomas clerk of Dene, by Abbot Clement of York (1161-84). Among the other witnesses are William, prior of Wederale, who is not found elsewhere, and Herbert de Thibeï, who succeeded to his land in Tibeï in 1178 (Pipe Rolls, ed. Hinde, p. 164). The date of this prior will, therefore, fall between 1178 and 1184.

5. Waleran, according to Dugdale (Mon., iii. 574), occurs as prior of St. Bees about 1197, but his name has not been found elsewhere. About this date there was a Walrann prior of Neddrum in Strangford Lough, an affiliation of St. Bees (Illus. Doc. No. 11. 6, 7). The suggestion, therefore, is not improbable.

6. Robert, prior of St. Bees, made an agreement with Richard son of Pefer touching 32 acres of land in Hwithehavene on 23 September, 1202 (Illus. Doc. No. xxvii.), and about the same date he witnessed the foundation charter of the borough of Egremont given by Richard de Lucy (Transactions of the C. & W. Archaeol. Soc., i. 284). There are in this Register (pp. 94-5, 195) two charters given by this prior Robert, which, from the evidence of the witnesses, confirm the above date.

7. John, prior of St. Bees, made an agreement with Ranulf de Rotington touching the mill pool between Kirkeby and Rotington in the year when Odo, king of Germany, came to England (Register, pp. 428-30). This incident settles Prior John's date about 1207 (Walter of Coventry, ii. 199: Rotuli de Finibus, pp. 384-5, Rec. Com.).

8. Daniel, prior of St. Bees, had a lease of the multure of Rotington mill for three years from Ranulf de Rotington, the lease bearing date on the feast of the Purification after the Christmas which King John celebrated at York (Register, pp. 435-6). As the king was at York at Christmas 1210 (Matthew Paris, Chron. Majora, ii. 531), the date of the transaction at St. Bees was on 2 February, 1211.

9. Ralf, prior of St. Bees, made an exchange of lands with Richard son of John de Punchunby, the official witnesses to which show that the date cannot be much later than 1220 (Register, pp. 303-4).

10. Wydo, Gwydo or Guy, prior of St. Bees, was witness to a grant of land to his priory by Thomas de Neuton, having William parson of Workington as one of his co-witnesses: he also granted a lease of land in Neuton to one of his tenants (Register, pp. 104-5, 159-60). With Priors Ralf of Carlisle, William Rundel of Wederhal and Robert of St. Mary's, York, Prior Guido of St. Bees witnessed a deed preserved in the Register of Wetherhal, pp. 344-5. The official witnesses here suggest a date about 1230 or not long after.

11. John de Lestingham, prior of St. Bees, had an agreement on 31 August, 1254, with Robert de Braintwait touching the moor of Hensingham. As Prior John he is a witness to a deed of gift by Robert de Hothwait to Gilbert his brother. Both charters are in this Register (pp. 178, 255-6).

12. William de Rothewel, prior of St. Bees, made an agreement with John de Langliver touching a right of turbary on the moor of Hensingham, bearing date on 26 May, 1256. As Prior William he leased half an acre of land in Botel to one of his tenants and purchased a sheepgate for seven years, beginning at Whitsuntide, 1256, from Benedict son of Benedict de Rotington (Register, pp. 257-8, 282-3, 425).

13. Nicholas de Langton, prior of St. Bees, is represented by numerous charters in this Register, for references to which, see the index. Several of his acts are dated, a feature which makes the chronology of his priorate comparatively easy. One of the earliest of his recorded acts is dated on 25 April, 1258 (Register, pp. 180-81) and one of the latest on 14 September 1282 (Ibid., p. 410). This period probably covers the whole of his priorate. See the previous and following priors.

14. Benedict, prior of St. Bees, renewed a lease of some land in Milnethorp to Roger Croyser on 11 November, 1282, and had an agreement with Thomas de Lucy, son of Alan de Multon, touching an encroachment on the land of the monks at Lowswater on 10 May, 1286 (Register, pp. 144-6, 409-10). There is no certain evidence at present known to identify this prior with Benedict de Malton who became abbot of St. Mary's, York, in 1296, but as he had been prior of St. Mary's at the time of his election (Cal. of Pat., 1292-1301, p. 193), the inference is probable.

15. Absalon, prior of St. Bees, with the priors of Lancaster and Cartmel, as commissaries of Pope Honorius IV. (1285-7), confirmed a composition between the abbot and convent of Furness and the vicars of Dalton and Urswick relating to the chapel of Hawkshead (Anct. D., l. No. 282). Prior Absalon's seal is attached to the deed: a pointed oval showing the Lamb of God with the legend, + SIGILL: FRIS: ABSALON: PRIORIS: DE: BIGEE. A picture of this seal has been given by the present writer in Victoria Hist. of Cumberland, ii. 130. As the formation of the place-name on the seal is somewhat curious, it may be illustrated by other examples. In 1445 the inhabitants of the valley of Eschdale sent a memorial to Pope Eugenius IV., alleging that the houses they inhabited were ten miles or more distant from the parish church of S. Bigia (sancte Bigie) in the deanery of Coupland (Cal. of Papal Letters, ix. 480), and in the ecclesiastical valuation of the priory of nuns of Seton in 1535, it is stated that an ancient pension of xijd. was payable to the prior sancti (sic) Bigge by their house (Valor Eccles., v. 265). At the British Museum (Seals, 3953) there is a cast of an indistinct seal of St. Bees, showing what appears to be an ornamental cross, the legend of which is defaced.

16. William de Dereby, prior of St. Bees, is mentioned in this Register in dated deeds between 1288 and 1295. On 11 November, 1288, Prior William had an agreement with William Boyville, knight, touching the manor of Kirkesanton (pp. 436-7) and as William de Derby, prior of St. Bees, he witnessed a charter given at Distinton on 10 March, 1295 (pp. 101-2). William de Dereby, prior of St. Bees, purchased some tenements in Talentire (p. 405), and as Prior William issued a lease of land in 1290 (p. 410n.).

17. Hugh de Cumpton, prior of St. Bees, was appointed one of the attorneys of Abbot Benedict of York to give seisin of certain land to William de Walton, clerk. The deed of deputation is dated on 21 November, 1301 (Register, pp. 260-1). As Hugh, prior of St. Bees, he witnessed a charter relating to land in Gosford (Ibid., pp. 325-6).

18. Alan de Nesse, prior of St. Bees, is witness to a deed of gift by Robert de Qwenby to Henry his son (Register, p. 275) and he was prior when Robert son of William son of Roger de Gosford quit-claimed certain property in Gosford to J[ohn de Gylling], abbot of St. Mary's, York, and Brother Alan de Nesse, prior of St. Bees (Ibid., p. 326). As John de Gylling was abbot of St. Mary's from 1303 to 1313, Alan's priorate must fall between these years. But as Alan had been prior of St. Mary's when he was elected in 1313 to succeed John de Gylling in that house (Cal. of Pat., 1313-7, pp. 2, 13), the date of his priorate at St. Bees cannot be much later than 1310.

19. John, prior of St. Bees, witnessed a composition, dated at London on 10 December, 1330, between Anthony de Lucy, lord of Cockermouth, and Thomas de Burgh, rector of Brigham, touching the oblations in the chapel of Cockermouth Castle and the tithe of a water-mill in Cockermouth, both being within the bounds of his parochial church (Illus. Doc. No. LVJ.).

20. William de Seynesbury, on 27 June, 1360, had papal confirmation of the collation, by authority of the ordinary, of the priory of S. Bega, a dependent of St. Mary's, York (Cal. of Papal Petitions, i. 315-6, 357-8). Though the papal confirmation may imply a collation made several years before, there is still a long interval between Seynesbury and the previous prior.

21. Thomas de Brignal, prior of the cell of S. Bega, was a party to two indentures relating to a moiety of the manor of Walton, the first of which is dated on 21 September, 1370, and the second on 3 February, 1371 (Register, pp. 263-6).

22. Thomas de Cotingham, prior of St. Bees, is authenticated by three deeds in the Register (pp. 268-9, 276-7), all dated in 1379. For his grave-cover and the inscription thereon, see the note on p. 269.

23. Nicholas de Warthill, prior of the cell of S. Bega in Coup-land, acted as proctor for St. Mary's, York, in the autumn of 1387, in the adjudication of a dispute with the canons of Conyngeshed touching a pension due from the parish church of Whytebec (Register, pp. 124-8).

24. Roger Kirkeby, prior of Seynt Beys, was required in May, 1434, to take the oath enjoined by Act of Parliament not to maintain peace breakers referred to in the said Act (Cal. of Pat., 1429-36, p. 383). He remained prior of St. Bees till he was elected to be abbot of St. Mary's, York, early in 1437 (Ibid., 1436-41, pp. 56, 71). "Dom. Rog. Kyrkeby, monachus" was admitted a brother of the Guild of Corpus Christi in the City of York in 1417-8 (Surtees Soc. No. 57, p. 19).

25. Doctor Stanlaw, prior of St. Bees, acted with John Hudelston, knight, William Martindale, knight, Master Thomas Eglisfeld, parson of Dean, Christopher Culwen of Workington, Richard Eglisfeld and Robert Lamplwgh, esquires, in settling a dispute between John of Penyngton, knight, and Thomas Lamp-lwgh knight. The award, ordinance and "doome" is dated 12 March, 1465 (Hist. MSS. Com. Rep. x. App. pt. iv. 227, Lord Muncaster's MSS.). This prior may be alluded to in the obscure marginal note found in the Register of St. Bees, p. 428*n*, though it would be hazardous to identify him with the Thomas Stanley who was prior of Wedirhill in 1434 and the contemporary of Roger Kirkeby, prior of St. Bees (Cal. of Pat., 1429-36, p. 383).

26. John Warde, prior of S. Bega, was admitted a brother of the guild of Corpus Christi, York, in 1473 (Surtees Soc., No. 57, p. 84), and on 26 October, 1474, an award was made between him and Christopher Sandz, free tenant of Rodyngton, which defined the territorial bounds between them (Register of St. Bees, pp. 484-5).

27. Roger Armyrn, prior of St. Bees in Coup-land, gave a receipt, dated on 10 December, 1485, to William Haryngton for eight shillings, an ancient rent charge due to the priory from the manor of Aldingham (Register, pp. 485-6).

28. Edmund Thornton, prior of the cell of S. Bega, had a dispute with Christopher Sandes in 1496 about the hawks on St. Bees Head, and on 6 July of that year Christopher produced his evidences in the camera of the Prior of St. Bees in support of his claim (Register, pp. 193-4). In a duplicate of this deed in the Register (p. 449), this prior appears under the name of Edmund Smyth. As Edmund Thornton, he was confirmed abbot of St. Mary's, York, on 6 May, and received the temporalities on 28 May, 1507 (Dugdale, Mon., iii. 539), but it is doubtful that he was prior of St. Bees at the time of his election.

29. Thomas Barwyke, custos of the cell of S. Bega, had an agreement in 1498 with William son of Christopher Sandes about a piece of land on the boundary between the franchise of St. Bees and the land of Rodington. (Register, p. 449). From this deed it would appear that the priory was vacant in 1498 or that Edmund Thornton, the prior, had extended leave of absence from the house.

30. Edmund, prior of St. Bees, was a party with Richard, prior of St. Martin's near Richmond, to an indenture, dated 21 February, 1517, with John Heron relating to money connected with the government of the Border (L. & P. of Henry VIII., vol. iv. 2216). This prior is identical with Edmund Whalley who was elected abbot of St. Mary's, York, early in 1521 (Dugdale, Mon., iii. 539). On 16 July, 1526, Edmund Whalley, abbot of St. Mary's, had an acquittance of certain monies, one sum of which he had received when he was prior of St. Bees (Ibid., iv. 2322).

31. Dan Robert Alanby, prior of Sainct Bees, scriblyd in hast at Sainct Bees upon Sainct Luke day the evangelist, 1523, a letter to Lord Dacre reporting the appearance of hostile ships on the coast supposed to be of the Duke of Albany's company (Illus. Doc. No. LXXXVIJ.). On 20 October following, Dacre, in forwarding Alanby's report to the Earl of Surrey, described him as Robert Alanby, prior of St. Bees in Cowpland, late prior of Wedrall and of St. Mary's, York (Ibid., No. LXXXVIIJ.). He had been prior of Wetheral about 1494 (Reg. of Wetherhal, p. 511).

32. Dan John Mathew, prior of St. Bees, was removed from his priorate by the general chapter, held at the abbey of St. Mary, York, on 14 October, 1533, upon "gret complayntes cumyng of extorcion and other gret urgent wronges done at Saynt Bees to the tenauntes and inhabitantes ther." The charges and defence will be seen at length in Illus. Doc. Nos. xc., xcj. It is probable that it was about Prior Mathew that Cromwell wrote to Abbot William of York in 1531 (State Papers, Henry VIII., vol. v. 578).

At the dissolution of St. Mary's, the name of John Mathew, priest, appears as a member of that house, to whom a yearly pension of $vj^{\text{li}} \text{ xiiij}^{\text{s}} \text{ iiij}^{\text{d}}$ was given on 29 November, 1539 (Dugdale, Mon., iii. 569.)

33. John Poule is returned as incumbent (incumbens) of the cell of St. Bees in the ecclesiastical valuation of 1535 (Valor Eccles., v. 11). No doubt he was the lawful prior, for the same designation is given in the valuation to Richard Wederhall, who is known from other sources to have been prior of the cell of the Holy Trinity of Wederhall (Reg. of Wetherhal, p. 511.).

34. Dan Robert Paddy was the last of the priors of St. Bees. In January, 1537, when the northern counties were seething in rebellion, Abbot William of York reported to Cromwell that Dan Robert Paddy, prior of the cell of St. Bees, had been sent to his room and as it was surmised " he should be lettyd by ye commons in these parts in his riding thither un knowledge or writing to me " (State Papers, Henry VIII., vol. xij (1), 133, 640). On 29 September, 1538, he had a settlement with Christopher Lyster, one of the tenants of the priory, and gave him a discharge " for all maner [of] labor, dettes, paymentes, waigyth, covaunces frome ye begynnyng off ye worlde to this present day " (Register, p. 486). At the dissolution of the priory, a yearly pension of £40 was assigned to him on 3 June, 1538 (Augmentation Book, ccxxxiiij. f. 146b).
