FIRST ANNUAL BANQUET.

Class of 1913 Weymouth High School Entertain in Pythian Hall, Weymouth, Last Monday Evening With Banquet, Entertainment and Dancing.

In Pythian hall, Weymouth, on Monday evening, the first annual banquet and reunion of the class of 1913, Weymouth High school was held, with many of the class present, as well as several friends.

The first part of the program was devoted to appeasing the appetites of the guests, a fine supper being served by Bates & Humphrey, caterers.

At the banquet Roland Haviland presided, and at the close Louis Nolan was toast master. Harold Gloster responded to the sentiment "Our Alma Mater." "The Faculty" brought a reply from Mr. Hilton, principal of the high school. "The Past of the Class of 1913" was responded to by Miss Mildred Newcomb, "The Future" by Miss Alice Bentley and "Our Successes," by Urban Nolan.

After this, a mock trial, in which three of the high school (Miss Helen Curtis, Miss Alice Dwyer and Miss Audrey Duffey) were charged with defrauding George Beane, janitor at the high school, out of his just due the past month. Clifton Healy was judge, Urban Nolan, clerk of court, George Webber and Bowdoin Smith, court officers, Louis Nolan the prosecuting officer and Miss May L. Sheehy, counsel for the defense.

The witnesses were Fred Philbrick, Elbridge Gardner, Miss Edith Blecknell, Roland Haviland, Miss Alice Bentley and Miss Una Carleton. The case became so muddled, no verdict could be rendered by the court.

The closing features were orchestral music and dancing.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Urban Nolan, president; Harry Burrell, vice-president; Miss Alice Bentley, secretary; Miss Martha Tirrell, treasurer.

The committee in charge of the reunion was Miss Martha Tirrell, Miss Helen Lincoln, Miss Mildred Newcomb, Miss Alice Bentley, Roland Haviland, Louis Nolan, Clifton Healy, Carleton Murphy and Urban Nolan.

Grocery Wagon Wrecked.

Last Monday morning about 9.25, the grocery wagon owned by Bates and Humphrey of Central square, and the street car from Braintree, due at Jackson square at 9.30, collided on Broad street, East Weymouth, as the grocery wagon was coming out of the side street, just west of Center street. Irving Nightingale was driving the wagon at the time, and did not see the car in time to stop his horse or to get across the track. The street car was in charge of Motorman William Wilder and Conductor William Green, and Mr. Wilder was unable to stop his car in time to avoid hitting the wagon. Three wheels on the wagon were demolished, and it was tipped completely over, driver, groceries and dirt being all mixed together. Mr. Nightingale was slightly dazed and received several injuries to his arms and hips. The horse was uninjured.

Church Services on Christmas Day.

Special services and extra music were held in several of the churches about town on Christmas Day.

At the Immaculate Conception church in East Weymouth, Rev. James W. Allison rector, Rev. James Hurley, assistant; Masses were held at 8 and 10.30 a. m. with Rosewig's musical vespers at 8 in the evening. A chorus choir with Miss Nellie F. Noonan as organist and director rendered the music. The soloists were Mrs. W. J. Fitzsimmons, Mrs. Margaret Melville, P. J. Fenell and Edward F. Sheehy.

At St. Francis Xavier church in South Weymouth, Masses were held at 8.30 and 10 a. m. At 7.45 p. m. there was a vesper service. Miss Helen M. Roche organist and chorus choir provided the music.

At the Church of the Sacred Heart in Weymouth, Rev. John B. Holland rector Masses were held at 5.30, 7.30 and 10 a. m. and a vesper service was held at 7.30 p. m. The music was by a chorus choir and Mrs. John W. Hanley, organist. Miss Helen Hanley, Miss Florence Kelley, Miss May Daley, Miss Mary Gallardet, William Whyte and Thomas Boyle were soloists.

At the Trinity Episcopal church in Weymouth, Rev. William Hyde, pastor, special services were held at 10.30 a. m. The choir sang "Come All Ye Faithful," "Veni," "Te Deum," "Jubilate," "Kyrie," "Sing, O Daughter of Zion," "Gloria Tibi," "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," "We Have Seen the Star," "Sanctus," "I am not Worthy" and "Gloria in Excelsis."

CHRISTMAS AT THE TOWN HOME.

The Aged, Unfortunates and Shut Ins Made Happy With Gifts and Entertainment.

Through the kindness of the Weymouth King's Daughters' Union, the inmates of the Weymouth Town Home were tendered a Christmas party on the afternoon of the holiday. The affair was in the immediate charge of Miss Josie M. Cummings of the Golden Rule circle, and she was assisted by members of her circle. An entertainment was provided, consisting of cornet solos by Miss Theodora Keith, readings by Mrs. Fannie Orr, tambourine solos by Charles M. Kilburn, a vocal duet by Mrs. Orr and Mrs. Helen Sanders, and selections on the phonograph by Henry S. Jewett. An opportunity was then given for all present to join in singing old familiar songs. Miss Marjorie Keith was the accompanist. After this, a social hour was enjoyed by all, during which time punch and wafers were served, and selections were rendered on the phonograph. Aprons and potted plants in bloom were given to the ladies, handkerchiefs to the men, and a box of home-candy to all. The superintendent and matron cooperated heartily with the visitors, the spirit of Christmas cheer prevailed, and the happy faces of the inmates showed how thoroughly the afternoon was appreciated and enjoyed by all.

Red Letter Day D. A. R.

The regular meeting of the Susannah Tufts Chapter, D. A. R. of Weymouth was held with Mrs. F. O. Wellington at her home on Quincy avenue East Braintree Monday afternoon at 2.30 with Mrs. Alice G. Senior, Regent presiding.

It was a red letter day for the chapter as Mrs. Wellington past Regent of the Susannah Tufts Chapter gave a reception in honor of the visiting officers.

In the receiving were: Mrs. Geo. O. Jenkins state regent, Mrs. C. G. Chick state vice regent, Mrs. Hodge state rec. sec., Mrs. Allyn state auditor and Mrs. Alice G. Senior regent of Susannah Tufts Chapter. Mrs. Alice Jewel and Miss Hawthorne Cate acted as ushers.

After the reception a delightful musical program was rendered by Miss Anna Cady who presided at the organ, Mrs. Lena Thompson as violinist and Miss Catherine Saville who rendered several songs very delightfully.

The hostess then made a very cordial speech of welcome to the visiting officers and then called upon the following state officers for after remarks: Mrs. Geo. O. Jenkins state regent; Mrs. C. G. Chick state vice regent; Mrs. Hodge state rec. sec.; Mrs. Allyn state auditor; Mrs. S. C. Seavy regent of the Cohasset chapter; Miss Willard past regent of the Hingham chapter; Miss Mary Ann Ford past regent of the Scituate chapter; Mrs. Mary Powers regent of the Scituate chapter and Mrs. Walter F. Jones past regent of the Quincy chapter.

The guests were then invited into the dining-room where a Christmas tree in the centre of the table twinkled its welcome with tiny electric bulbs of red and blue. Mrs. Alice G. Senior, Mrs. C. T. Crane and Miss Lucy Crane were seated at the table and served the guests bountifully.

Among those present were: Mrs. G. O. Jenkins state regent; Mrs. C. G. Chick state vice regent; Mrs. Hodge state rec. sec.; Mrs. Allyn state auditor; Mrs. L. B. Lennity, Mrs. Mary L. Powers regent of the Scituate chapter; Mrs. Mary Ann Ford past regent of the Scituate chapter; Mrs. Walter F. Jones past regent of the Quincy chapter; Mrs. S. C. Leary regent of the Cohasset chapter; Miss Willard past regent of the Hingham chapter; Mrs. F. O. Stirling past regent of the Susannah Tufts chapter; Mrs. Fred Cate, Miss Emma Clapp, Mrs. Harriet B. Bachelder, Mrs. Fred Hall, Mrs. Walter Thompson, Mrs. Louis Bates, Mrs. David Pierce, Mrs. John Aldrich, Mrs. Newman, Miss Hattie Nash, Mrs. Edward W. Gutterston, Mrs. Dobson past regent of Paul Revere Chapter Boston; Mrs. F. H. Morgan, Mrs. W. J. Jordan, Miss Anna Hayward and Mrs. Nathan Crane.

Oldest Epigram.

An epigram must pass through many hands and get much polishing before it is a perfect jewel. You may remember how Oscar Wilde sent (on the stage) the man of the world through the drawing room door with the epigram. "There is one thing I never could resist; that is temptation." But you may trace it from the Garden of Eden, where the masculine plea for mercy was that the "woman tempted me."

Railroad News.

Ambrose Boyle, the popular motorman, has been confined to his home by illness. "Jim" Murphy has been off duty the past ten days on account of sickness.

James Collinane, the motorman, who has been confined to his home for several months with blood poisoning, is able to be around again, but has not returned to work yet.

The new bridge at Weir River is completed and the cars from East Weymouth to the beach are now running over the new concrete structure.

Another of the local young railroad men has decided that living in one or two rooms and dining in lunch rooms isn't what it is cracked up to be, hence the engagement is announced of Edward F. Kingsland and Miss Margaret P. Stratton of Hingham. Kingsland is a motorman and one of the most popular "up and coming boys" in the East Weymouth barn.

At the recent election of officers in the union for the ensuing year, William Gould of the East Weymouth and Quincy line was elected president, succeeding John Faircloth. The three representatives from the local barn elected on the executive board are Harold Gould, Morris Mullen and Alfred Sanberg.

There is a rumor about town that a double track is to be laid under the Weir River steam railroad bridge in the spring, thus connecting the double rail each side of the recently built overhead crossing.

A passenger on one of the local lines asked the other day "Where is Ben Ross now days?" On inquiry it was discovered that little Benny has deserted railroading for a few weeks to take up the pastime of gunning at Leary's gunning stand at Whitman's pond. Remember the fate of other boys all over the country, Ben, and don't forget the gun is loaded.

While rounding the slight curve just south of Poulin's turn-out at North Weymouth last Friday morning the car due at East Weymouth at eleven fifteen broke an axle. Motorman William Gould quickly stopped the car and no damage was done. A wrecker from Quincy assisted by a crew from the East Weymouth car barn towed the car to the Quincy car barn, after the loose wheels had been chained together.

Under the new pick held recently, the night runs on the local lines are in charge of the following crews: East Weymouth and Braintree, Lester Waite and Charlie Kimball, Leon Lovering and Paul B. Mulready; East Weymouth and Quincy, Frank Horte and James Pratt; Rockland and Braintree, James Flaherty and Minchin, Morris Mullen and William Benner, George Pratt and John Clapp; South Weymouth depot and East Weymouth, Otis Soule and Clarence Sturtevant, P. Kearns and David Kearns; East Weymouth and Nantasket, Frank Russell and Fitzgerald; Queen Ann's Corner to Hingham, James Casey and Arthur Orcutt.

Keep a Thankful Heart.

The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and as the magnet finds the iron, so will it find in every hour some heavenly blessings; only the iron in God's sand is gold.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Bowling Notes.

The two men league candle pin tournament at the Clapp Memorial nearly finished, and team 1, Lewis D. Loring and Thomas Noonan were in the lead up to Saturday night, December 27th. Team 2, Arthur Cunningham and Dr. F. L. Duce are coming fast however, and may wrest the lead from Lou and his teammates before the league season ends, on January 14.

In the bottle pin league at the Norfolk club, Bill Moore's team and Prince Tirrell's five are having a merry fight for first place. Moore has Sam Robinson, Fred Polley, E. C. Lond and W. Brown for teammates, and W. Blanchard, Beaudry, Lond and Abbott are lined up with Tirrell. The league scheduled ends in a few weeks now, and then the candle pin tournament will start.

Sam Robinson, the Norfolk club star is hitting the bottle pins at a terrific clip this season. Sam is also a crack candle pin man, and if he keeps after the candles as he has the bottle pins, records will be smashed right and left before the bowling season closes.

Lou Loring's 117 in the C. M. A. two men league looks good for the high single prize. Arthur Cunningham is next with 115 and "Sav" Nolan surprised himself and the fans with 111 in one of the matches, so now Fred is third in the single string race.

At the Norfolk club last Friday night team 2, Elliott Veazie captain, and team 4, Harry Raymond captain, broke even, each securing two points. Team 2 got two strings and team 4 got one string and a total 2257 to 2154. Carl Gridley was high man of the evening with a three string total of 550 pins, while Elliott Veazie got the high single with 193 to his credit.

On Dec. 27th, Lou Loring's team had won 22 points and lost 6, while Arthur Cunningham's team was second with 23 won and nine lost.

At the Norfolk club on Monday night, team 7, Charles Clapp captain, won from team 1, Green Philbrick captain, taking two strings and a total with a pinfall of 2134 to 2073. Warren Philbrick was high roller, with a single of 183 and three strings of 506.

The tournament at the Norfolk club on Christmas Day was well contested and very interesting. The following program captured the prizes offered: High single, Warren Philbrick, 223; high three consecutive strings, Sam Robinson, 591; most spares in one string, Warren Simpson, 7 in total of 176; most consecutive strikes, Charles Brown, 3 in string of 193; most strikes not consecutive, Harrison Cole, 6 in string of 192; high five consecutive strings, Elliott Veazie 857.

Our Junior Senator.

Washington, Dec. 25.—Just watch John W. Weeks of Massachusetts. In a year and a half he will be the leader on the republican side of the senate.

This statement actually was made by a republican senator from the west, a progressive, too, while the currency bill was going through the senate and Weeks was working day and night to make it the best measure possible with all the radicals of both parties trying to spoil it in both senate and house.

If the letters Sen Weeks is receiving from Massachusetts are a fair indication and so many people up there are proud of him for defying expectations and supporting a measure which even the president of the National City bank of New York when it was still the unperfected Glass bill, had characterized as "80 per cent good." Whatever may be thought of the action of Sen Weeks in Massachusetts, sober second thought has convinced a good many people here that the republicans would have shown good judgment. If, after voting for good and against bad amendments to the banking bill, they had voted for it on its final passage, if for no other reason than to disprove the favorite charge of the democratic leaders that the republican party is opposed to currency reform.

A very important effect of the vote of Senator Weeks will be to reassure the country as to the unfortunate results that may be expected under the new federal reserve system. As the bill came from the house it is unquestionably a fact that many of the important national banks would have remained outside the system had the bill become law without amendment; enough, it is altogether likely, to have made the system a failure, and thus have precipitated a financial situation which might have gone from bad to worse.

From the day the bill went to the senate banking and currency committee, Sen Weeks went to work to improve it, with the result that it was made at least safe, although it might be much more scientific. The senator said long ago that he expected the bill would be so amended that he could vote for it, and though he would have made several more changes had he been able, it had been pretty ably tinkered up when the senate got through with it.

Here comes the importance of the Weeks vote. It served notice upon the bankers of the country that if they knew what is good for them they will pull together and make the new currency system a success.—Practical Politics

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Fogg Dead.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Fogg, aged 81 years, widow of Alexander R. Fogg, died at her home, 623 Pleasant street, South Weymouth, last Thursday. Funeral services were held from the home on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Henry C. Alvord of the Old South church in South Weymouth conducted the services. The interment was in the Mt. Wollaston cemetery at Quincy.

CARD OF THANKS.

Our thanks are due Mrs. Lizzie B. Barker, 61 Middle street, for two beautiful and appropriate pictures contributed to help decorate the chapel at the Town Home, also members of the Sunday school of the Universalist church, North Weymouth, for dainty boxes of candy and magazines for each inmate; to the different circles of the King's Daughters' Union for boxes of assorted candy and handkerchiefs for the men, potted plants, aprons, and candy for the women. Also the splendid entertainment, followed by a treat of fruit punch and wafers, given in the chapel Christmas afternoon by the Golden Rule circle. We wish to impress on all that these diversions make a pleasant break in the monotony of life, and were much appreciated by each one of the inmates.

MR. AND MRS. ELDRIDGE.

ANNUAL GENTLEMEN'S NIGHT.

Old Colony Ladies' Club Entertain in Fogg's Opera House, South Weymouth on Wednesday Evening.

One of the most enjoyable events of the season in the social circle of the town occurred on Wednesday evening when the annual gentlemen's night of the Old Colony Ladies club was held in Fogg's opera house, South Weymouth. The fine weather and the last chance to celebrate the old year, brought out a large number of the members of the club, with their husbands and other gentlemen friends, and all enjoyed themselves to the utmost all the evening.

The hostess of the occasion was Mrs. Arthur B. Tirrell. She had as ushers the following: Miss Florence K. Howe, Mrs. Frank W. Holbrook, Mrs. Raymond Proctor, Mrs. Charles Heald, Mrs. Charles Brown, Miss Winifred Conant, Miss Hester Swan, Miss Madeline Gale and Miss Margaret Heald.

A eight o'clock the entertainment of the evening was presented, under the direction of Miss Edith Freeman Raymond, who gave the gathering the opportunity of listening to the well known and ever popular Adelphi quartet of Boston. This quartet composed of Robert MacKenzie, George W. Kells, A. Victor Crawford, and Oscar L. Hunting gave the following program, assisted by Mace Gay's orchestra of six pieces, which later furnished music for the dancing:

Selection, "The Sunshine Girl" (Ruens) Orchestra
"On the Sea" (Buck)
"Hunting Song" (Bullard)
Mr. Crawford, Mr. Kells
a "Rocking In the Wind" (Niedlinger)
b "Bonnie Doom" (Scott)
Adelphi Quartet
"Come Into the Garden, Maud" (Balfe)
Mr. MacKenzie
a "The Drum" (Gibson)
b "Reveries" (Storch)
Adelphi Quartet
"King Charles" (White)
Mr. Buatring
"Waltz Song" (Lamothe)
Adelphi Quartet
Selection "Oh, Oh Delphine" (Caryll) Orchestra.

Miss Edith F. Raymond was accompanist.

After the entertainment refreshments were served. The pourers were Mrs. Arthur Linton, Mrs. Wendall Joy and Mrs. Forest Torrey. A corps of ladies of the club acted as servers.

After the refreshments dancing was enjoyed until twelve o'clock, when Miss Annie Deane charmingly sang "Ring Out, Wild Bells," "Happy New Years" were wished one and all and then special cars, autos and carriages conveyed the merry-makers to their several homes to begin the year of 1914.

Mahan—Hart

Miss Loretta Hart a popular young lady of this town and John Mahan chorister and organist at St. John's church Quincy were married at the church of the Sacred Heart Monday afternoon at 3.15 o'clock by Rev. Fr. Beardon of Newton a cousin of the groom, assisted by Rev. J. B. Holland pastor of the church of the Sacred Heart.

The ceremony was witnessed by their immediate relatives and personal friends of the couple. The wedding was a quiet affair on account of a recent death in the family and no cards were issued.

Mrs. Anna Tracy White of Wollaston was matron of honor and the groom's brother Marcus Mahan of Quincy best man. The bride was attired in a charming costume of changeable amethyst velvet, with white moire hat and carried a rosary. The matron of honor wore a dress of taupe broadcloth. The usher was Francis White of Wollaston.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the brides grand mother Mrs. Maria Hart of 12 Hart avenue and was attended by the immediate relatives of the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahan were the recipients of many handsome and costly gifts. They left on an evening train on their wedding trip and on their return will reside on Revere road Quincy.

Monday Club.

The next regular meeting of the Monday club will be held on Monday afternoon January 5th, in the Masonic Temple, East Weymouth. The club will present the Eberle Musical Club of Boston, a well known and highly artistic club of entertainers. This is to be an open meeting. All members having Red Cross seals and money for the sale of them, are requested to bring money and stamps to the next meeting of the club.

An Estate in the Moon.

After the Franco-German war, in which Camille Flammarion, the famous astronomer, fought as a captain, he settled down to his astronomical labors in Paris and later founded an observatory at Juvisy specially to study the planets. On the occasion of his scientific jubilee he was presented with a silver medal depicting him standing on a cloud, flanked on one side by the planet Mars and on the other by his Juvisy observatory. A region on the moon has been named after him, but in whispering this fact to an interviewer M. Flammarion hoped it would not be published. "The budget commission," he added humorously, "may want to tax it as being landed property."—Westminster Gazette.

His Golden Rules.

A Toronto banker hangs up these golden rules of conduct: "Have something to say. Say it. Stop talking." These are the rules for special occasions and places, but not for general application. They make no allowance for the necessities of conversation nor for the helpfulness of intercommunication. They recall with their taciturn suggestion the golden rules that hung over the desk of a western mine owner: "State your business. Shut up. Get out!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wanted Them All.

Julia Ward Howe was once talking with a dilapidated bachelor, who retained little but his conceit. "It is time now," he said pompously, "for me to settle down as a married man, but I want so much. I want youth, health, wealth, of course; grace?" "Yes," said Mrs. Howe sympathetically, "you poor man, you do want them all!"

FAMOUS SLOVENS

They Had a Fine Contempt For Personal Appearance.

GENIUS IN UNCOUTH ATTIRE.

Turner, the Artist, Dressed Like an Old Time Cab Driver—Dr. Johnson Was Grotesque, and "Old Fitz" Outraged All the Sartorial Conventions.

It is surprising how outrageously careless of their personal appearance many famous men have been. Genius may or may not be allied to madness, but it has certainly very often been linked with an utter disregard for clothes and cleanly habits.

It is said of Turner, the great landscape painter, that his hands were "the smallest and dirtiest hands on record." Perhaps that is an exaggeration, but he was certainly very slovenly in his dress. He wore a black swallowtail dress coat, very much in need of a "brushing" vigorously used, and in the warmest as well as in the coldest weather he wore round his throat a sort of wrap or muffler, which he would unloose, letting the ends dangle down in front and dip into the colors of his palette. He always worked either with his old hat on his head or with this same large muffler over his head. His appearance was more like that of an old time coachman than of a famous Royal Academician, for he was short and stout, with a red and blotchy face.

Dr. Johnson's slovenliness has at most passed into a proverb. There are many contemporary accounts of his turning out of his house in Bolt court with his wig back to front and his stockings down. When Boswell visited him at 1 Inner Temple lane he records: "His brown suit of clothes looked very rusty; he had on a little, old shrivelled, unpowdered wig, which was too small for his head; his shirt neck and the knees of his breeches were loose; his black worsted stockings ill drawn up, and by way of slippers he had on a pair of unbuckled shoes." When it is added that this great man was constantly twitching, grunting, shaking his head, pulling his cheeks and blinking his eyes, it must be admitted that his appearance was not only uncouth but grotesque.

Thomas Carlyle, coming of a peasant race, never conformed to society garb. He was always the inspired peasant. He would sometimes go out in his old dressing gown, over which he buttoned a big coat, gray with age. When he was left alone in the house he delighted in swilling his flagstones with pails of water, and many a distinguished friend found him thus engaged with a kind of smooch on and his bushy hair all tousled. He went about all the summer among the highest aristocracy in a frizee jacket which was part of an old dressing gown. All he cabmen and bus drivers Chelsea way knew him. One said, "He may wear a queer at, but what would ye give for the 'eadpiece inside of it'?"

It would not be seemly to describe Tennyson as slovenly in any real sense. He was a singularly noble looking man, but he did not care a jot what he wore. His old slouch hat had seen unnumbered years and flapped about at all angles, and the Inverness cape which he invariably wore was about as old as his hat. People who met him without knowing his immense distinction would have regarded him as a rather quaint character, and a tailor's cutter would not have assessed him at half a dollar, all told.

This is a description of the daily appearance of Edward Fitzgerald, the immortal translator of "The Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam: "Straggling gray hair and slovenly in dress, wearing an ancient, battered, black banded, shiny edged tall hat, round which he would in wintry weather tie a handkerchief to keep it in place; his clothes of baggy blue cloth, as though he were a seafarer; his trousers short and his shoes low, exhibiting a length of white or gray stockings. With an unbuttoned shirt front, high, crumpled, standup collar, a big black silk tie in a careless bow; in cold weather trailing a green and black and gray plaid shawl, in hot weather even walking barefoot with his boots slung to a stick." Surely "Old Fitz," as Tennyson called him, took the cake for slovenliness of all the immortals!—Pearson's Weekly.

A Useful Army.

Completing the improvements in a conquered town, says Popular Mechanics, is an unusual occupation for an invading army but this is what happened in Uskub, Macedonia. When the Balkan war broke out the electric street lighting system was almost complete. The town was then taken by the Serbian army, and the engineering staff completed the system and put it in working order.

Dore's Musical Rebus.

Gustave Dore, the famous painter and engraver, once bought a villa on the outskirts of Paris and wrote over the entrance this musical rebus. Do mi, si, la, do, re. This, properly interpreted, is "Domestic a Dore," or in plain English "Home of Dore."

An Invitation.

"What are you thinking of, Miss Wombat?" "Of your name, Mr. Huggins." "My name?" "Yes, as Shakespeare says, is there anything in a name?"—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

I have often wondered how every man loves himself more than all the rest of men. Antonius.

ON THE FARM

Washington, D. C., Jan. 1, 1914. The Department of Agriculture today issued a special caution to all American potato growers against the use of any second hand British or European potato sacks, unless such sacks have been thoroughly sterilized, since they had contained or come in contact with foreign potatoes.

Dust plaster on floors to keep the odors down. Fumes of ammonia from reeking piles of manure will injure a horse's eyes.

Much benefit is likely to result without any possible harm, if the hens are compelled to work in clean litter for their grain at all seasons.

The hen that scratches is the one that has the quick move, the brightest comb, the happy air, and the best egg record. She is business clean through. The idle hen should not be tolerated.

Don't allow young horses to wear a set of shoes more than a month. Have them removed, the hoofs leveled, and the shoes reset if they are worth it.

Young animals must receive careful attention. If stunted in food, and exposed to the elements, they will scarcely ever assume those full, plump and handsome proportions so desirable, do what you will for them afterward.

Arrange your poultry house so that most of the cleaning can be done with a broom. To do this, keep the floor well covered with dry earth, and when the house is to be cleaned, simply sweep off the floor and scatter fresh earth, using an extra quantity under the roosts.

Whatever ground you sow or plant, see that it is in good condition. We want no pennyroyal crops. "A little farm well tilled" is to the farmer the next best thing to "a little wife well willed." Cultivate your garden. Be sure to produce sufficient quantities of useful vegetables. A man may half support his family from a good garden.

If there be any one subject that demands the attention of the Massachusetts farmer more than any other, it is, "the preparation and application of manures;" the means whereby the recuperative energies of the soil can be restored. We have no lands on which crops can be grown year after year, without the application of fertilizing ingredients.

Leaving out of consideration dairy products, milk and cream, cattle slaughtered, fowls, eggs, swine and classifications of combined crops, and coming right down to simple farm crops, it was shown that Massachusetts produced hay and forage to the amount of $11,280,989; potatoes, $1,993,323; apples, $1,780,290; corn, $1,372,144; tobacco, $1,318,060, and cranberries, $1,062,205, above the million-dollar mark. The figures on onions, which have become one of our big crops, were not obtainable. That doesn't look as if Massachusetts were going down hill in agriculture.

In all parts of the United States where silo has come into general use the principal silage is corn. One reason for this is that ordinarily, corn will produce more food material to the acre than any other crop which can be grown. It is more easily harvested and put in the silo than any of the hay crops, such as clover, cowpeas or alfalfa. These crops are much more difficult to handle after being cut. Furthermore, corn makes an excellent quality of silage. Sorghum makes a sour silage, and the legumes, such as clover and alfalfa, are liable to rot unless special care is taken to thoroughly pack the silage and force out the air. The fermentations which take place in leguminous silage are more extensive, and in consequence the loss of food materials is greater than with corn.

LONG WINTER EVENINGS.

Writers have deplored the long winter evening, when the farmer and his family must of necessity be shut in from the outside world, but these winter evenings are the greatest blessing that can be recorded, writes L. M. Thornton.

They unite the family. They are each an opportunity for good. They are opportunities for character building. How many farmers' boys who have risen to posts of honor and trust in the world can look back and say that they attribute much of their success to the lessons learned and the resolves made during the long winter evenings in the little country kitchen or sitting room.

Winter evenings should bring the family closer together, and this is best done if they can come to have one aim, one form of recreation. Magazines and good books supply an endless fund of material for the home reading circle.—From the Michigan Farmer.

Winning Dorothy

"The Only Fortunate One"

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Bert Chesney arose from his seat at the head of the table and lifted his glass.

"Gentlemen," he said with flashing eyes. "I propose the health of the loveliest girl in the world!"

The toast was drunk in silence. It was a singular coincidence that each one of the seven friends who had gathered to celebrate Chesney's birthday was silently drinking to the same girl, beautiful Dorothy Fair.

There was a little confusion of voices after that. It was time to go home, and some of the young men were making their farewells.

"Thanks, old man—glad of it—surely I am to be congratulated!"

"Good night, Chesney. Many happy returns of the day and congratulations, you know!"

"Thanks, Jasper. Yes, there isn't another girl in the world like her, is there, old man?" Chesney's eyes searched Jasper's grim face.

"There is only one girl in the world for each man," said Jasper soberly and went his way.

"What the deuce did that fellow mean?" he muttered savagely.

"Who is it? Whom did you say? Oh, Jasper! What is the matter?"

"Only this, Dorothy. I've been to Chesney's dinner party and—"

"Dorothy's voice broke in pettishly. 'Jasper Dane, do you know that you are the seventh man who has called up to congratulate me on my engagement to Bert Chesney? Won't tomorrow do? Really, I should like to snatch a few hours' sleep.'"

"I am sorry," said Jasper quietly. "Goodby."

"He moved away from the desk, his hands deep in his pockets. He paced the floor moodily."

"This was the end of his steadfast wooing of Dorothy Fair! Only last night she had given him every encouragement, had even given him permission to come again tomorrow evening and impart some especially 'wonderful' tidings of which she could not help guessing the import, and now, twenty-eight hours later, to be exact, she had calmly admitted her engagement to Bert Chesney."

young men who want to go into the jungle—that is, unless they have a reputation as big game hunters. Lots of men are driven to travel and adventure because they can't get the particular girl they want, and they usually come home to find her grown fat and dumpty or plain and scrawny and then they wonder why they ever left the comforts and pleasures of civilization for the primitive forests of the tropics. Don't be offended at my frankness, but take my advice, Dane, and stay at home. You won't regret it."

"I am the best judge of that," said Jasper haughtily.

"Very true," said Professor Digby urbanely. "Well, suppose you leave the matter open for one week, Mr. Dane. If at the end of that time you are still of the same mind I shall be happy to have you join my party as special photographer."

"I see no reason to change my mind," muttered Jasper as he returned to his office and flung open his desk. He spent the remainder of the day in going over his affairs and in planning how he could leave his practice in the hands of a brother lawyer.

"That very evening Dorothy Fair was surprised to receive a visit from her mother's cousin, Professor Digby of the Fanshawe museum."

"My dear Dorothy," began the professor in his stilted way, "I must beg of you to be a little more merciful."

"Merciful?" echoed Dorothy, her hazel eyes wide with astonishment. "What do you mean, Cousin Peter?"

"You know, I am organizing a special expedition to central Africa, and of course I have had many applications from men who desire to belong to the party. It usually happens that way when any expedition is going out, but in this particular instance I have been overrun with applications."

"But what has that to do with me, Cousin Peter?" asked Dorothy, fearful of the wizened little man's snail.

"This, my dear. These eight applications all arrived on the same day—that is, this very day. All of these young men are well known to me as being suitors for the hand of my lovely young cousin. Don't blush, Dorothy, you naughty child!"

"Of these eight applications only seven can be accepted. I am asking you to help me make a choice."

"Cousin Peter, I cannot," cried Dorothy, with tears in her eyes. "I haven't really encouraged them, and if they are so silly to like a girl because of her eyes or the color of her hair I can't help it. There is only one—and, Cousin Peter, I never believed you could be so unkind!"

Professor Digby suppressed a little smile that trickled around his lips.

"There was one chap in particular that I wanted for my right hand man. He has plenty of nerve and grit. I've watched him since he was a boy, but he's sensitive. I told him to wait a day. To begin with, there was Bert Chesney, society man and all around sport. He might do in some minor capacity or just as a guest. Finley Blingham, Rob Blake, young Dicher, Judge Harker's boy, Robinson and Medway. Seven of 'em, my dear, and a very handsome coterie, I may say."

"And the eighth one, Cousin Peter?" whispered Dorothy.

"Jasper Dane," said Professor Digby quietly.

The next morning Jasper Dane found on his desk a letter from Professor Digby. It read:

My Dear Dane—I am sorry to say that it will be impossible for me to consider your application to join my expedition to central Africa. I received eight applications for membership in the party, and as I could accept only seven I placed the list of eight names in the hands of an expert in such matters. Inclosed is the list, and you will see that my expert has drawn a line through your name, thus definitely deciding that you are not to be of my party. This I regret exceedingly, as you would have been my personal choice, but I hope that you will not take this disappointment to heart. The seven chosen men sail with me tomorrow, and I cannot help but consider that the one who is left at home is the only fortunate one. Faithfully yours, PETER DIGBY.

Below was a typewritten list of eight names, headed by that of Bert Chesney and ending with Jasper's own name. A heavy black line was drawn through Jasper's name, and he smiled bitterly as he saw it. Then a puzzled look came into his eyes as he scanned the names of the successful seven and realized that they represented the entire party which had gathered at Bert Chesney's birthday dinner.

Why were they all going to central Africa? Why was he left behind?

A line of crabbed handwriting straggled across the bottom of the page. He bent closely and read it with difficulty:

"I forgot to mention that the expert who decided that you must remain at home is my little cousin, Dorothy Fair."

Jasper caught up the telephone receiver and called for a number.

"Professor Digby?" he asked excitedly. "This is Jasper Dane. Bon voyage, and thank you, may I say, Cousin Peter?"

The professor's dry cackle came over the wire:

"You are quite safe in calling me that, Jasper. By the time the expedition gets home I suppose it will be a fact. Good luck!"

And Jasper flung down the receiver and raced out of the office like a boy. Dorothy Fair had elected that he, out of the eight, should remain at home, and it meant only one thing, and he was going to make sure of it now.

SENSITIVE PLANTS.

Junshure at Night Doesn't Fool the Flowers in the Arctic.

The sensitiveness of plants is a never failing interest to all lovers of the woods and fields. Like a human being sensing a fall in the barometer and the coming of a rainstorm, so the clover in the meadow feels and shuts its leaves. A close observer says that a field that was white with blossoms has suddenly become quite changed by the approach of a heavy cloud or the falling of a light shower.

The common chickweed opens its blossom only when the sun is shining and counts on only the bright hours. When it closes its blossoms rain invariably follows. The sea purslane has the same habit. It never opens in cloudy weather and closes when the sun is low, about to sink. The scarlet pimpernel never exposes its flowers to a shower.

One of the naturalists in an arctic expedition noticed that, although the summer sun shone through the nights, the plants made no mistake, but when the sun got round to the west they closed up as if the sun had really set.

The common "four o'clock" almost always closes its flowers at that hour, and so many plants have that instinct that Linnaeus made a floral clock of flowering plants, each of which had its time for closing. The wood sorrel not only drops its leaves and shuts its purple veined flowers when it rains, but does the same if the ground near by is struck with a stick. The family of the oxalis has the same habit.—New York Sun.

EGGS THAT CROAK.

Young Crocodiles Are Heard Before They Are Hatched.

That young unhatched crocodiles utter an audible croaking cry within the eggs in which they are laid is averred by Knowledge, and it adds the cry is so loud and distinct that it can be heard when the eggs are buried under one or two yards of sand.

Dr. W. A. Lamborn tested the fact at Lagos on the West African coast. He heard a croaking noise from below a dry path, and, digging in the path to investigate the cause, he discovered thirteen crocodile's eggs at a depth of about eighteen inches. All the young crocodiles hatched out within half an hour of being dug up.

So far back as 1890 Dr. Voeltzkow noticed that unhatched Madagascar crocodiles uttered a cry from the egg at a depth of two yards and that any shock, as of a heavy tread, near the egg caused the baby crocodiles to produce this sound "with the mouth closed, as we produce hiccup sounds." In this way they inform the female crocodile when she visits the nest that they want her aid, whereupon she scrapes the sand away and they emerge.

Apples With Worms.
 May it not be that we get a keener pleasure out of eating an imperfect apple than a perfect one? It is neither the best possible apple, which would be perfect, nor the worst possible apple, which would have a kind of negative perfection; it has a worm at the core. But I wonder whether we do not enjoy it more because we have to eat the more carefully to keep from eating him. Besides, he arouses in our mind all sorts of questionings. Why is he there? What kind of worm is he? How did he get in? How would he have got out if we had not ousted him? And—note this—what sort of apple would it have been if he had taken up his residence elsewhere? The perfect apple could have roused no queries which the defective apple does not. The same subtle influences went to make both—the same elements, the same forces, the same chemical processes. But the defective apple has in addition to all these—the worm—Robert M. Gay in Atlantic.

Cocaine and Crime.
 Police authorities have come to regard cocaine as one of the recognized sources of crime. The cocaine fiend seems to have his moral sense destroyed. The morphia devotee is often a man of refined and elevated thought, with delicate perceptions and with a keen sense of honor and obligations, except that he will always lie and deceive to get possession of his needed "dope." In his sober moments the alcohol fiend is often a man of conspicuous honor. The cocaine fiend seems different. It is believed that cocaine directly stimulates to evil passions and evil deeds.—Family Doctor.

Hollow Tooth Ache.
 If you have a hollow tooth and it aches cut a piece of clove to fit the cavity and put it in lightly, allowing the upper part to stick out like a cork in a bottle. It will soon swell, keeping the air from the nerve, and the pain will cease until the clove drops out, when it may be replaced by another.—Exchange.

Steady Employment.
 "It's lucky I should meet you, Smith. There's a little bill you owe Timkins, the tailor. He's commissioned me to collect it."

"Has he, old man? Well, I'm glad you've got a permanent job at last!"—London Tatler.

Impertinent.
 "I remember very well the first dollar I ever put in the bank."

"The first? Then you've put in more than one?"—New Orleans Plebeian.

Just a Deduction.
 "What is his sphere in life?"

"Well, judging from the circle of his acquaintances, I'd say he was a rounder."—California Pelican.

Person's Laugh Tells Much.

The manner of laughing is a reliable indication of a person's depth of thought and self-control. For instance, the chronic giggler usually is a person of shallow thought, while the quiet person, who seldom laughs and only rarely smiles, has a great intensity of feeling and thoughtfulness.

FRIDAY, JAN. 2, 1914.

The Gazette & Transcript is printed and mailed Friday afternoons, and is for sale at all News-stands in the Weymouths and at the South Terminal, Boston.

All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpublished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.

Notices of all local entertainments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 10 cents per line in the reading matter, or regular rates in the advertising columns.

Before another issue of this paper, the 1914 administration of the Commonwealth will be fully in action with the Legislature in session, the Governor inaugural and other matter before it.

Already the veteran and worthy clerk Kimball has several hundred bills on hand, many of them for the purpose of revising the work of 1913, and whatever is done in the revision, can not make the acts any worse than they now are, and let us hope for more common sense in the 1914 acts.

Town Business.

The somewhat protracted request on account of opposition, of the Electric Light & Power Co. for permission to erect 21 poles on Lake street has come to a close and the petition granted; also permission to erect six poles on Leonard street and three on Phillips street.

There is now standing in favor of the Tufts fund for free public lectures in Weymouth $1600 and the matter of a course of lectures this winter is being discussed by the board but owing to the small attendance at the last course an effort will be made to produce something which appeals more loudly to the people.

The selectmen have formulated five charges against Officer Walsh now under suspension. The charges embrace absence from duty, conduct unbecoming an officer and in violation of accepted rules and regulations. Mr. Walsh takes exceptions and through his counsel, W. P. Kelley, Esq., asks for a hearing which will be given him, Jan. 9th at 7:30 p. m.

The Selectmen are in receipt of a communication from the Mayor of Weymouth, England, asking that the town be represented at that place in June, next, where the sailing of John Endicott, the first Governor of Massachusetts, from that port will be celebrated. John Endicott sailed from Weymouth, England, in the ship Abigail in 1628 and in connection with the celebration a memorial will be erected at the quay from which the ship sailed.

T. Gammon, Div. Supt. of the Bay State S. R. appeared in defence of the action of the Company in taking off some of the through trips from South Weymouth to Braintree and said the traffic did not justify their continuance. In regard to taking off the 8:31 a. m. and the 2:31 p. m. trips from East Weymouth to South Weymouth he considered the matter and will report to the general management for action.

The matter of soldier board, at the Town Home was discussed and the price was fixed at $4.00 per week which sum will come from the soldiers' relief fund. Officer A. H. Pratt has been appointed keeper of the new lockup and police station.

Clapp Wins 44 to 31.

In the Clapp Memorial gymnasium in East Weymouth last Saturday evening, the Tilton A. C. basketball five of Wintthrop was easy picking for the Clapp Memorial team, the East Weymouth aggregation winning out by the score of 44 to 31.

Arthur Schutz, the right forward of the C. M. A. was the star of the game with six baskets to his credit. Bumpus and Fraher also played well for the winners. Gorham and Stevenson excelled for the losing team. The summary: Clapp Memorial Tilton A. C. Schultz, rf lb. Gorham; Curtin, rf rb. Knudson; Baker, lf c. Stevenson; Bumpus, c lf. —Arthur Culley of Miami, Fla., formerly of this place, has been sending grape fruit from his own tree to some of his friends in town.

—The N. D. U. club held a very enjoyable Christmas party at the home of Mrs. George Ames last Saturday evening. All being dressed as children they gathered around the Christmas tree and received their gifts from Santa in true childish fashion. The luncheon for the evening was daintily prepared in individual lunch boxes and placed on the tree, and they made merry with sticks of candy, boy doughnuts and lolly pops. After lunch, the evening was spent in playing games until a late hour, when the party broke up thanking their hostess for the pleasantest evening the club had ever spent.

Sixtieth Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. James S. Hancock were married 60 years yesterday, and they celebrated the event in an informal manner at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Frederick H. Hall, 345 Front street, where they have made their home for some time. A large number of the friends of the couple called and extended their congratulations. They were also the recipients of handsome gifts. Mr. Hancock was born in Conasset and Mrs. Hancock in North Weymouth, being a daughter of the late Quincy Hunt. The couple were married Jan. 1st, 1853, by Rev. Jonas Perkins, at that time pastor of the Union Congregational church of Weymouth and East Braintree. They have besides their daughter, a son, James Hancock of California, five grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Dr. John T. Kelley, Dead.

Dr. John T. Kelley died Monday afternoon at his home in Bridgewater after a long illness, aged 37 years, 7 months.

Dr. Kelley was born in East Braintree and located in Bridgewater 13 years ago. He was a graduate of Jefferson college, Philadelphia, Pa., and was for several years in Emergency hospitals in Haverhill and Woburn. Besides his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth E. Kelley, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kelley and two brothers, William P. and George Kelley all of East Braintree. He had been in failing health for several months and took to his bed about 16 weeks ago. He was a member of Pioneer lodge of Odd Fellows of Bridgewater.

Dr. Kelley was one of the most popular practicing physicians in Bridgewater and had built up a large practice. He always took a prominent part in athletics and as ball player he was considered one of the best out fielders in that section. He was manager and left fielder on the Bridgewater team in the old Trolley league and last summer managed the Bridgewater Independents. He took a deep interest in sports at the Bridgewater high school and coached the high school baseball team for several years.

LOVELL'S CORNER

—The Sunday school board held a special meeting after prayer meeting in the vestry Thursday evening.

—Harry Clark of South Boston spent Sunday with his aunt, Mrs. George Smith.

—Miss Viola Martin has returned to her home after a sixteen months' visit with relatives in Cape Britlan.

—The Brooks Epworth league celebrated their twenty fourth anniversary, Wednesday evening. Invitations were extended to all the leagues on the Old Colony circuit and to the people of this place. The address was given by Rev. Thomas Burden of Rockland. Special music by the choir in charge of Mrs. Amy MacFawn.

—The boy scouts have leased the meadow near the Porter church and they have been successful in raising funds to flow and light it. The weather bureau joined in their work and froze it and it is now the scene of more enjoyment than any other park in town.

The Day We Celebrate

An Account of Christmas Day In Costa Rica.

By O. HENRY. Copyright, 1911, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

"In the tropics," "Hop-along" Bibb, the bird fancier, was saying to me, "the seasons, months, fortnights, week ends, holidays, dog days, Sundays and yesterday get so jumbled together in the shuffle that you never know when a year has gone by until you're in the middle of the next one."

"Hop-along" Bibb kept his bird store on lower Fourth avenue. He was an ex-seaman and beach comber who made regular voyages to southern ports and imported personally conducted invoices of talking parrots and dialectic parrots. He had a stiff knee, neck and nerve. I had gone to him to buy a parrot to present at Christmas to my Aunt Joanna.

"This one," said I, disregarding his homily on the subdivisions of time—"this one that seems all red, white and blue, to what genus of beasts does he belong? He appeals at once to my patriotism and to my love of discord in color schemes."

"That's a cockatoo from Ecuador," said Bibb. "All he has been taught to say is 'Merry Christmas.' A seasonable bird. He's only $7, and I'll bet many a human has stuck you for more money by making the same speech to you."

And then Bibb laughed suddenly and loudly.

"That bird," he explained, "reminds me. He's got his dates mixed. He ought to be saying 'E pluribus unum,' to match his feathers. Instead of trying to work the Santa Claus graft. It reminds me of the time me and Liverpool Sam got our ideas of things tangled up on the coast of Costa Rica on account of the weather and other phenomena to be met with in the tropics."

"We were, as it were, stranded on that section of the Spanish main with no money to speak of and no friends that should be talked about either. We had stoked and second cooked ourselves down there on a fruit steamer from New Orleans to try our luck, which was discharged, after we got there, for lack of evidence. There was no work suitable for our instincts, so me and Liverpool began to subsist on the rum of the country and such fruit as we could reap where we had not sown. It was an alluvial town, called Soledad, where there was no harbor or future or recourse. Between steamers the town slept and drank rum. It only woke up when there were bananas to ship. It was like a man sleeping through dinner until the dessert.

"When me and Liverpool got so low down that the American consul would not speak to us we knew we'd struck bedrock."

"We boarded with a snuff brown lady named Chica, who kept a rumshop and a tam."

"It looks to me," says I, "like Great Britain ought to be made to keep such gin swilling, scurvy, unbecoming mudlarks as you at home instead of sending 'em over here to degrade and taint foreign lands. We kicked you out of America once, and we ought to put on rubber boots, and do it again."

"Oh, you go to the deuce," says Liverpool, which was about all the repartee he ever had.

"Well, Soledad looked fine to me after Don Jaime's plantation. Liverpool and me walked into it side by side from force of habit, past the calabosa and the Hotel Grande, down across the plaza toward Chica's but, where we hoped that Liverpool, being a husband of hers, might work his luck for a meal."

"As we passed the two story frame house occupied by the American club we noticed that the balcony had been decorated all around with wreaths of evergreens and flowers and the flag was flying from the pole on the roof. Stanzey, the consul, and Arkright, a gold mine owner, were smoking on the balcony. Me and Liverpool waved our dirty hands toward 'em and smiled real society smiles, but they turned their backs to us and went on talking. And we had played whist once with the two of 'em up to the time when Liverpool held all thirteen trumps for four hands in succession. It was some holiday, we knew, but we didn't know the day nor the year."

"A little farther along we saw a reverend man named Pendergast, who had come to Soledad to build a church, standing under a cocoanut palm with his little black alpaca coat and green umbrella."

"Boys, boys," said he through his blue spectacles, "is it as bad as this? Are you so far reduced?"

"We're reduced," says I, "to very vulgar fractions."

"It is indeed sad," said Pendergast, "to see my countrymen in such circumstances."

"Cut 'arf of that out, old party," says Liverpool. "Cawn't you tell a member of the British upper classes when you see one?"

"Shut up," I told Liverpool. "You're on foreign soil now or that portion of it that's not on you."

"And on this day, too," goes on

Englishman—why, firedamp is what he's got to look out for. Being a natural American, that's my personal view. But Liverpool and me had much in common. We were without decorous clothes or ways and means of existence, and, as the saying goes, misery certainly does enjoy the society of accomplices.

"Our job on old McSpinos's plantation was chopping down banana stalks and loading the bunches of fruit on the backs of horses. Then a native dressed up in an alligator hide belt, a machete and a pair of AA sheeting pajamas, drives 'em over to the coast and piles 'em up on the beach."

"You never been in a banana grove? It's as solemn as a ratskeller at 7 a. m. It's like being lost behind the scenes at one of these mushroom musical shows. You can't see the sky for the foliage above you, and the ground is knee deep in rotten leaves, and it's so still that you can hear the stalks growing again after you chop 'em down."

"At night me and Liverpool herded in a lot of grass huts on the edge of the lagoon with the red, yellow and black employees of Don Jaime. There we lay fighting mosquitoes and listening to the monkeys squalling and the alligators grunting and splashing in the lagoon until daylight, with only snatches of sleep between times."

"We soon lost all idea of what time of the year it was. It's just about 80 degrees there in December and June and on Fridays and at midnight and election day and any other old time. Sometimes it rains more than at others, and that's all the difference you notice. A man is liable to live along there without noticing any fugiting of tempus until some day the undertaker calls in for him just when he's beginning to think about cutting out the gang and saving up a little to invest in real estate."

"I don't know how long we worked for Don Jaime, but it was through two or three rainy spells, eight or ten hair cuts and the life of three pairs of sailcloth trousers. All the money we earned went for rum and tobacco, but we ate, and that was something."

"All of a sudden one day me and Liverpool find the trade of committing surgical operations on banana stalks turning to aloes and quinine in our mouths. It's a seizure that often comes upon white men in Latin and geographical countries. We wanted to be addressed again in language and see the smoke of a steamer and read the real estate transfers and gents' outfitting ads. In an old newspaper. Even Soledad seemed like a center of civilization to us, so that evening we put our thumbs on our nose at Don Jaime's fruit stand and shook his grass burs off our feet."

"It was only twelve miles to Soledad, but it took me and Liverpool two days to get there. It was banana grove nearly all the way, and we got twisted time and again. It was like pacing the palm room of a New York hotel for a man named Smith."

"When we saw the houses of Soledad between the trees all my disinclination toward this Liverpool Sam rose up in me. I stood him while we were two white men against the banana brindles, but now, when there were prospects of my exchanging even cuss words with an American citizen, I put him back in his proper place. And he was a sight, too, with his rum painted nose and his red whiskers and elephant feet with leather sandals strapped to them. I suppose I looked about the same."

"It looks to me," says I, "like Great Britain ought to be made to keep such gin swilling, scurvy, unbecoming mudlarks as you at home instead of sending 'em over here to degrade and taint foreign lands. We kicked you out of America once, and we ought to put on rubber boots, and do it again."

"We're reduced," says I, "to very vulgar fractions."

"It is indeed sad," said Pendergast, "to see my countrymen in such circumstances."

"Cut 'arf of that out, old party," says Liverpool. "Cawn't you tell a member of the British upper classes when you see one?"

"Shut up," I told Liverpool. "You're on foreign soil now or that portion of it that's not on you."

"And on this day, too," goes on

Pendergast, grievous—"on this most glorious day of the year when we should all be celebrating the dawn of Christian civilization and the downfall of the wicked."

"I did notice bunting and bouquets decorating the town, reverend," says I, "but I didn't know what it was for. We've been so long out of touch with calendars that we didn't know whether it was summer time or Saturday afternoon."

"Here is two dollars," says Pendergast, digging up two Chile silver wheels and handing 'em to me. "Go, my men, and observe the rest of the day in a befitting manner."

"Me and Liverpool thanked him kindly and walked away."

"Shall we out? I asks."

"Oh, the deuce!" says Liverpool. "What's money for?"

"Very well, then," I says, "since you insist upon it we'll drink."

"So we pull up in a rumshop and get a quart of it and go down on the beach under a cocoanut tree and celebrate."

"Not having eaten anything but oranges in two days, the rum has immediate effect, and once more I conjure up great repugnance toward the British nation."

"Stand up here," I says to Liverpool, "you scum of a despot limited monarchy, and have another dose of Bunker Hill. That good man, Mr. Pendergast," says I, "said we were to observe the day in a befitting manner, and I'm not going to see his money misapplied."

"Oh, you go to the deuce," says Liverpool, and I started in with a fine left hander on his right eye."

"Liverpool had been a fighter once, but dissipation and bad company had taken the nerve out of him. In ten minutes I had him lying on the sand waving the white flag."

"Get up," says I, kicking him in the ribs, "and come along with me."

"Liverpool got up and followed behind me because it was his habit, wiping the red off his face and nose. I led him to Reverend Pendergast's shack and called him out."

"Look at this, sir," says I—"look at this thing that was once a proud Britisher. You gave us $2 and told us to celebrate the day. The star spangled banner still waves. Hurrah for the stars and angles!"

"Dear me," says Pendergast, holding up his hands. "Fighting on this day of all days! On Christmas day, when peace on—"

"Christmas? Holy smoke!" says I. "I thought it was the Fourth of July."

"Merry Christmas!" said the red, white and blue cockatoo.

"Take him for $6," said "Hop-along" Bibb. "He's got his dates and colors mixed."

Our Eyes Waste Light.

Not all the radiant energy which enters the eye is active in the process of producing the sensation of light. No doubt it is fair to assume that at least this "inactive" energy is absorbed by the eye media and transformed into heat. This should cause an increase in temperature in the eye, which has led some to hold that this is the cause of irritation and fatigue. There is a general feeling that artificial light is more fatiguing than daylight, which contains far less energy a lumen second than the light from ordinary artificial illuminants. Of course, if it be true that artificial light under the same conditions of diffusion, intensity, surroundings, retinal adaptation, etc., is really more irritating and fatiguing than daylight, it is wise to look to the spectral character of the radiation as a probable cause. However, there are no actual data which prove that artificial light is more discomforting than daylight when all conditions excepting the spectral character of the radiation are the same.—Electrical World.

"That's a fine looking old gentleman! Bleader's father, isn't it?" asked a collegian of a friend.

"Yes," was the answer, "but he is a champion at breaking his word."

"You don't say so?"

Story of a Plain Man Who Became a Hero.

By LAWRENCE BOONE

Copyright by International Literary and News Service.

It may sound like a contradiction, but I shall always maintain that Eben Frazier was a hero because he did not enlist. We wanted to enlist. He was urged to enlist. He was ashamed not to enlist. He was exposed to the most seductive and perilous temptation that earth can offer to a slow, big limbed, big hearted fellow, such as he was—and is, for he was—and is—in love. And his love bade him go. It was merely duty that bade him stay.

It is often much easier to march in the middle of the procession, even to the cannon's mouth, than to swallow the bitterness of undeserved reproaches and trudge on alone in the rough, homely path of duty. This is no disparagement to Claude Livingstone and the rest, who faced the deadly volleys at El Caney without flinching. But really it is sometimes harder to live humbly than to die nobly.

Eben and Claude had long been rivals, and Lola Fanning was the prize to win which Eben toiled and Claude schemed. They hated each other very cordially. And who shall blame them? It is too much to expect Christian charity from lovers.

And Lola was in truth an attractive girl. Even I, who did not love her in the least, must concede that. She was tall and fair and graceful. Her eyes were pale blue, like a misty sky, and her hair pale golden, like a watery sunset. It was not peroxide, though, but for the kindness of nature it might have been. She was fond of dress, which is commendable; was perhaps a little overdressed, which was inexcusable. Inborn frivolity betrayed it in a superfluity of gauds and trimmings, yet her beauty irradiated all her frippery. That her fair head was empty and her soft heart shallow I will not presume to add, for I may be prejudiced. You shall judge for yourself.

Yet I thought it much to her credit that of the two supplicants at her shrine she chose Eben. I must own that I was surprised when the engagement was announced.

That Eben was such a handsome young giant may in part explain the mystery of her unexpected wisdom. He could have tossed the lively Claude up into a tree to roost among the branches, and he was sometimes tempted to try it.

When six feet three of crimson blooded, manly beauty is kneeling at your feet in tongue-tied adoration, it is possible to forgive a poverty of words. It is even possible to forgive another sort of poverty that expresses itself in hardened palms and coarse clothes, if you happen to be rich enough for two and so run no risk of deprivation. In the country, at any rate, this is possible. And I have often noticed that those who cannot love a lover may lose his love.

That Lola's father was outspoken in Eben's favor may have been a factor, too—though a dangerous one, perhaps better dispensed with. Hard headed Squire Fanning had forbidden Claude, who was the village scapegrace, to approach the house; and what was a vacillating, pleasure-loving girl to do? Of course she must have a beau. And Eben was altogether devoted and very nice.

So she condescendingly wore the ring that he had chopped cordwood to buy, and he was permitted to call twice a week and sit by her side in awe and palpating reverence, while she chattered away in a fashion that ought to have opened his eyes, but didn't.

Meanwhile Claude was "lively" after the manner of his kind. His liveliness was decidedly loud, in speech, in dress and in action. It seemed to consist very largely in dissipating his money; for he had inherited a large farm, which he promptly mortgaged. It was, moreover, a breed of liveliness distinctly rustic. He sought out the most unsavory dens in the village, where he drank and joked and gambled and was fleeced by cheap local sharps. He had his laugh, and so had they. For variety he occasionally raided the slums of a neighboring city and was fleeced again. Such exploits made him something of a hero in the eyes of those of the "fast" gang who didn't dare or couldn't afford the like. He still managed to cut quite a figure in "society," though there was plenty of scandal. But scandal is so romantic!

"I do wish, Eben, you had a little more spunk and spirit," remarked Lola one day as Claude flashed past behind a trotter on which it was rumored that he had lately lost $800.

"Do you mean that you'd like me to drive fast horses?" exclaimed Eben, surprised and a little shocked. "You know I can't afford it. If I wanted to, and I'm trying to save"—

"You might at least drive something faster than that old plug of a plow horse," she interrupted petulantly. "What's the good of savoring and savoring when there's money coming? If I were a man like you I'd make a stir in the world some way. But I don't believe you do anything but chop wood and hoe potatoes."

Yet I would be a mistake to conclude that Claude was wholly bad. He was not a sneak; indeed, his brazen frankness was startling. His "liveliness" was at least spontaneous, and exuberant vitality, even though vented in vice, is potentially a virtue.

It is said that the microbes of disease, as they multiply, poison themselves as well as their victim and so, if the patient is vigorous, finally effect a cure. It is much the same with the microbes of vice.

What Claude most needed was less money and a proper outlet for his restless, reckless temper. The first of these conditions was not far to seek. His farm was forfeit; his debts were urgent; his creditors were already beginning their remorseless man hunt.

Then came the war with Spain. What was more natural than that he should enlist? He did more. He raised a company and was chosen captain. Some shook their heads, but he had a strong following, and those who flinched at his follies still rather admired his dash. It was admitted that he had at last done something to redeem himself—and he had.

Eben, as you are aware, did not enlist, and thereat everybody seemed surprised. This must have been because he was so big and strong. Men who look as if they could pull down mountains get harsh judgments without common equity. Otherwise it could hardly have been ignored that Eben's mother was a helpless invalid, entirely dependent upon his daily wages. And his cousin Jennie, who cared for her night and day, was also dependent, though far from helpless. This patient, energetic little miss was quite competent to take care of herself, but not to take care of herself and a querulous paralytic too.

"You can't go, Eben, dear," she said. "You mustn't think of it. Your mother would simply shut her eyes and die in spite of me."

But Lola, a trifle weary perhaps of mute Sunday evening worship, was disappointed and indignant. She first taunted her lover with cowardice—"and you big enough to take Havana all by yourself!"—and then taxed him with a yet meaner motive.

"It's just your jealousy because you can't be captain," she cried spitefully. "And you might have been, too. If Lola. She tilted her red parasol toward him and passed without as much as a look. With her was the hero from Santiago, returned on furlough with honorable wounds. His ring was now on her third finger.

Farther up the street Eben encountered her dog—a huge wolfhound that she petted and pampered because it was the fashion. Almost unconsciously Eben reached out his hand to caress the creature. It shrunk away as if he had been a stranger. There was a yelp and a snap. The snaking teeth barely missed his fingers.

"Her very dog has turned against me," he thought bitterly.

The animal gave a long drawn, eerie howl. Then it rolled in the dust and pawed at its mouth.

"I believe the beast is going mad! And if Lola should attempt to fondle it!"

He was weaponless, and he might be mistaken. But he could at least caution her. He ran down the road. "Lola," he cried, panting, as he overtook her, "Leo, your dog!"

"Are you running away from my dog?" she sneered. And the bystanders tittered.

Eben glanced back. The wolfhound was indeed following. Again sounded that dismal howl. Suddenly, coiling like a snake, the frantic animal buried its fangs in its own flesh. Then, with a savage snarl, it sprang toward them, its distended jaws dripping foam and blood.

There was a crazy rush for the nearest shelter—every man for himself. Even the hero of El Caney forgot his laurels and his lady. Do not reproach him. You and I would have done the same. A mad dog is too much for human nerves and human nature. As for Lola, she spun round, tripped and fell screaming. The rabid beast was upon her.

But a burly form towered in his path—grim, red and dusty. Even as it leaped stout hands no longer slow gripped the venomous creature by its very jaws and wrenched them asunder as Samson rent the lion. A writhing carcass fell to the ground, a heavy heel crushed its ribs and stamped out its quivering life.

Then the vanished crowd swarmed back, dropping from trees, emerging from behind fences, hurrying down from verandas. They cheered, they howled, they caught up a new found hero to bear him in triumph on their shoulders. But they bore him no farther than to the village drug store. There the procession suddenly halted, for it was perceived that the rescuing hands were frightfully mangled and their owner had become unconscious.

For several minutes Lola was left lying in the middle of the road. At last her escort betought himself and picked her up.

"I suppose everybody will expect me to marry him now on account of that miserable dog," she grumbled some weeks later. "And like as not he may run mad himself. I just won't do it."

Strange to say, no one has ever suggested her doing it. She married Claude, per original program, without the smallest protest. That gallant officer received the reward of his recent valor or the punishment of his former sins—as to which public opinion is divided.

Eben spent weeks in a city hospital. He did not "run mad," however, for the best treatment that money could buy was secured for him by Squire Fanning and other townsmen.

Nor did he go back to his old drudgery of cordwood and potatoes. And there was another chapter to the story of his love. As to this I can only refer you to "that red headed Jen," whose rich bronze tresses are really of the hue that country folk scoff at, but city belles imitate and envy. And her eyes—they are like the sky as you see it from a mountain top. The good people of Westport had discovered a new beauty as well as a new hero.

Discoverer of Appendicitis.

The late Dr. Reginald Heber Fitz of Boston, a physician and surgeon of international reputation in appendicitis, was graduated from Harvard college in 1864 and from the Harvard Medical school in 1868. Then he studied abroad for two years. On his return he became an instructor and later a professor in the Harvard Medical school and was also attached to the Massachusetts General hospital. In 1891 he read a paper before the Association of American Physicians on the diagnosis and treatment of perforating inflammation of the vermiform appendix. He ascribed the well known fatal inflammation of the bowels to infection from inflammation arising in the appendix and said that the proper treatment for such cases was removal of the appendix. The importance of his conclusions was at once recognized, and it was suggested that the disease that he had localized be called for him. He objected, and it was at his wish that the scientific name of appendicitis was given to it—Youth's Companion.

Forgetful People.

"That letter I gave you this morning, did you mail it?" asked the suspicious wife, looking at her husband out of the corner of her eye.

"No, dear, I did not," replied the man boldly.

"Of course you didn't. And I told you it was important that it should go today."

"Yes, dear, you did."

"And of course you had to forget to mail it. If that's not just like a man."

"But, dear—"

"Don't 'but' me. I'm angry at you."

"But, dear, look here at the letter. You forgot to address it!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Japanese Fashions.

A Japanese woman of fashion is by no means a drain on her husband's finances. The cost of her wearing apparel is very small indeed when compared to her sister of the occident. She wears $13.80 worth of clothing under her kimono, the latter costing about $25. The obi costs another $25. Numerous tying paraphernalia sum up to $17.25, and a set of footwear amounts to about $9. Combs and hairpins ornamented with gems cost $245, a shawl $7.50, a diamond neck clasp $150, a total of a little more than $900 for a season. This is a very modest outlay when compared to the enormous cost of apparel for the woman of fashion in New York and Paris.—New York Sun.

A Lesson in Spelling.

The lawyer was Scotch, and the judge was English. The case in argument concerned certain water rights, and the lawyer had frequently to use the word "water," which he pronounced very broad.

"Mr. So-and-so," at last interrupted the judge, "do you spell water with two 't's in your country?"

"Na, na, my lord," quickly retorted the lawyer, "but we spell manners w' twa 'n's!"

Mixed Odors.

"My wife was to give a rose tea—everything scented with roses."

"A delicate conceit."

"Yes; but things went wrong. The people in the next flat took that occasion to have onions and cabbage."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Man of His Word.

Wife—"You've changed dreadfully. Before we were married you said that you'd lay down your life for me. Hub—Well, I did—my life of single blessedness."—Exchange.

It is vain to put wealth within the reach of him who will not stretch out his hand to take it.—Samuel Johnson.

Sudanese Products.

Sudan is the chief source of the world's supply of two important products—gum arabic and ivory. About 30 per cent of the ivory and 15 per cent of the gum is shipped to the United States direct. The better qualities of the gum are used abroad by confectioners in making candy and the lower grades in the manufacture of glue and mastic.

Simple Cement.

For mending ornaments and delicate china there is nothing better than china-flour cement. It is very easily made, it being only necessary to mix rice flour or ground rice thoroughly with cold water, simmering gently over a slow fire until it thickens, thereby forming a most durable adhesive substance which can be used hot or cold, in the usual way.

ELBRIDGE TORREY DEAD.

Native of South Weymouth Passes Away at His Home in Dorchester On Friday Last.

Elbridge Torrey, one of the most successful and finest men this town ever produced, passed away last Friday at his home in Dorchester, at the age of 77 years.

Mrs. Torrey was the son of Joseph and Harriet (Wade) Torrey and was born in South Weymouth September 17, 1837. His early education was received in the Weymouth schools, after which he took a classical course at Pierce Academy at Middleboro and at the State Normal School at Bridgewater.

After leaving school, he spent a few years teaching, after which he went abroad, studying in Berlin and Paris, and traveling through Switzerland, Italy and other European countries.

On his return from abroad he entered the business world in Boston.

In 1876 he was elected a corporate member of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions and at the same time was made a member of the prudential committee, on which he served for 17 years, resigning in 1893. While a member of this committee he was one of a delegation of three who were sent out by the board in the spring of 1883 to visit the churches and missionary stations of the Turkish missions. For several years he was one of the trustees of the Jaffa College in Ceylon.

On October 14, 1862, Mr. Torrey was married to Alice White Shaw, daughter of Theron Vinson and Rebecca T. (Colburn) Shaw of Weymouth.

Burial of Mrs. Florence Loud.

The funeral of Mrs. Florence Loud took place from the chapel in the Village cemetery, Wednesday afternoon, and was private, only the relatives and a few friends attending. The casket was almost hidden from view by the many beautiful floral tributes. The service was conducted by Rev. L. W. Attwood, a former pastor of the Second Universalist church, South Weymouth, of which deceased was for years an attendant. Miss Alice M. Belcher of Randolph sang "Sometime We'll Understand" and "There Will Be No Sorrow There." The interment was in the family lot.

Joint Installation.

Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R. and Relief Corps 102 will join a public installation of officers at Grand Army hall, Tuesday evening, Jan. 13th. Officers of affiliated orders are invited.

Officers of Post 58 will be installed by Adjutant Witherell and those of Corps 102 by Dept. President, Mrs. Marie Kendall. Supper at 6:30 p. m.

High School Notes.

The honor list, for the month ending Jan. 1st, 1914, contains the following names: freshmen, Velma Abbott, Napoleon Bergeron, and Malcolm Canterbury; sophomores, Fred Abel, Ruth Ford, and Dorothy Halnan; juniors, Olive Sylvester; seniors, Helen Hunt, Ruth Powers and Margaret Reidy.

Richard Lyons '13, of University of Maine, John Dizer '13, of Amherst, and Bowdoin Smith '13, of Amherst, visited school this week.

At a meeting of the football squad last Wednesday, Cascese '15, was elected captain of next year's team. Also, it was voted to drop Quincy from our football schedule. Several reasons were given for this. One was, that Quincy is unwilling to play us at Weymouth. Another, that they are too heavy opponents for an early game.

The annual senior dance will come on Jan. 23rd, this year. About four hundred invitations have been issued, and a large attendance is expected. The music will be furnished by Shaw's orchestra. Don't forget to get your ticket before it is too late.

Although Weymouth has one of the finest basketball teams in the history of the school, there is never an excessively large crowd out to see it play. Accordingly, steps are being taken by both faculty and students, to put more enthusiasm into the crowd, and more crowd into the seats.

The faculty and student managers of the baseball team are hard at work, arranging a suitable schedule for the coming season. Twelve games, with the fastest teams in the state have been arranged. These games will all be with such high schools as Brookline, Medford, Everett and Boston College. Some of the more important will be played on Saturday afternoons at Clapp's field, and will give the citizens of Weymouth a good chance to see what a fine team the high school really has.

Talbot '15.

Board of Trade.

The Board of Trade closed another year of its work last night, with a very interesting meeting, held as usual at the Clapp Memorial building, in East Weymouth.

The president, E. W. Hunt, was in the chair, report of last meeting read and approved.

Fred S. Sampson, for the committee on transportation, reported progress on petition for double tracking Washington street, from Washington square to Lincoln square, and asked for further time, which was granted.

Joseph A. Cushing, for committee on additional town by-laws in regard to disorderly conduct, submitted an addition to the town by-laws, which was accepted and referred to the committee now at work revising the town by-laws and to report at the town meeting.

A request was read from the town clerk of Weymouth, England, for this town to be represented at a celebration to be held at that place, in June, next, when a monument will be erected to commemorate the sailing of the ship Abigail, which brought to our shores the first governor of the Massachusetts colony, and many people who settled in Weymouth. Referred to L. A. Cook, D. M. Easto, F. S. Sampson, G. E. Bicknell and W. W. Pratt for action.

A request was received, asking that Weymouth send the Panama Exposition an illustrated work on Weymouth, setting forth its industries and other features of interest. Referred to Robert S. Hoffman, Charles Abbott, W. W. Pratt, A. L. Barnes and Peter F. Hughes.

Election of officers for the ensuing year was discussed and A. P. Worthen, A. C. Gerstley and M. E. Hawes were appointed a committee to prepare and present at the next meeting a double list of names for the various offices.

Niagara to the Sea.

The regular meeting of the Men's club of the Clapp Memorial association was held in the auditorium of the building on Wednesday evening and was largely attended there being about ninety at the tables for the banquet which was served at 6:45. Ralph Curtis, Leo Fraher, Arthur Schutz, John Reis, Cornelius Condrick, Harold Cross, William Flannery, Tony Cassesse, Elmer Sampson and Russell Riley looking after the welfare of the several tables.

At the conclusion of the last course President Wheaton extended greetings to the members and guests and introduced Geo. E. B. Putnam as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Putnam's theme was "From Niagara to the Sea." Mr. Putnam by way of prelude said that the course of the river ran 2,240 miles and emptied more water into the ocean than any other river with a single exception.

The lecturer took his audience through many miles of the river and showed many of its attractions with views of river, islands, villages, towns and cities, also historic spots where many a battle was fought in the early history of the country.

Especially interesting were the stories told of the thousand islands and the immense wealth which has been spent there by New York and other capitalists in the erection of homes, camps and other places for recreation.

Annual Election of Officers?

The annual election of officers of the Universalist Sunday school in North Weymouth took place last Sunday with the following results: Supt., Mrs. E. R. Sampson; ass't. supt., Miss Bertha F. Estes; secretary, Miss Marion L. White; treasurer, Mrs. R. F. Vining; librarian, Edgar W. Stiles, ass't. librarian, Russell A. Stiles; supt. Cradle roll, Miss Mabel Sampson; executive committee, Miss Margaret Collyer, Miss Ruth Thayer, Miss Margaret Dingwall.

Annual Meeting of E. W. V. A.

The East Weymouth Veteran Firemen's Association and the owners of the hand engine Defender met in the Defender club rooms Commercial square last Monday night. At the business meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Ira Sturtevant president; George M. Keene, Harry Lovell, George McCaulay vice presidents; W. J. Dunbar, treasurer; Frank Orcutt secretary; Peter Gallant, George McCaulay, A. G. Orcutt executive committee; Charles Sturtevant, James Hannaford, Peter Gallant and John Fogarty, house committee.

"Are you good friends of the Browns?" "I should think so. We take care of their canary, bulldog and goldfish while they're away on their vacation."

INSTALLATION EXERCISES.

Officers of Gen. James L. Bates Camp S. of V. and Ladies Auxiliary Installed Last Friday Night.

In Grand Army hall, East Weymouth, last Friday night, the installations of the newly elected officers of the Ladies Auxiliary of Gen. James L. Bates Camp S. of V. and Gen. James L. Bates Camp S. of V. were held, with delegation present from Post 58, G. A. R., Reynolds W. R. C. and Dorothea L. Dix Tent Daughters of Veterans.

The officers of the Ladies Auxiliary were installed by Mrs. Lizzie C. Flavel, P. D. P. of Marshfield, assisted by Mrs. Lottie L. Ford as guide. The officers of the S. of V. were installed by J. Irving Bunting, P. C. of Hingham, assisted by Herbert C. Jones as guide.

Preceding the installation exercises, the members and guests enjoyed a delicious banquet, served in the lower hall of the building. The committee in charge of the banquet consisted of Mrs. George F. Farrer, Mrs. Elmer E. Lunt, Mrs. Charlotte Stoddard, B. T. Hobart, L. C. White, E. E. Lunt, Mrs. Benjamin Wrightington, Mrs. Charles Abbott, Mrs. Frank E. Briggs, Mrs. Estelle W. Richards, Harry W. Vogel, Ernest A. Smith and Joseph A. Sherman.

The retiring president, Mrs. Blanche Briggs, received a gold neck chain, and a past president's badge, while the installing officer, Mrs. Flavel, was presented with hand painted china.

Monday Club.

The Monday club of Weymouth, held its regular meeting on Monday afternoon, January 5th, in the Masonic Temple, East Weymouth.

The president, Mrs. Arthur V. Harper presided at the business meeting, presenting several new subjects for discussion, among them being the question of the Club in furnishing a district nurse for Weymouth. The committee is in hopes by further investigation, and perhaps cooperation with other societies, to come to some plan of action in that direction in the near future.

Mrs. Edward R. Sampson has been appointed chairman of the social and industrial committee. Mrs. Eugene Carter and Mrs. George L. Haupt, on account of ill health, have been obliged to withdraw from that committee. Caras from the Boston Council of Jewish Women, who by the courtesy of the management, are to present the remarkable film, "Les Miserables," on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 20th, in Tremont Temple, were given the club members, hoping to interest the members and their friends in the worthy charity of helping destitute children.

The executive board are in hopes to give the club an extra meeting during the year, to present either a dramatic reading or an illustrated lecture.

The club sent a New Year's greetings to Mrs. Elizabeth B. Pratt, a former president, who is ill at her home in North Weymouth.

At the close of business session, Mrs. Harper introduced the Eberle Musical club of Boston, who gave one of the finest concerts of the season. The program included Miss Agnes Bachelder Edwards, soprano soloist; Miss Kate Merrill Thomas, violin; Miss Marion Lawrence Moorehouse, violin cello, with Miss Marlon Webster Hyde at the piano.

Village Study Club.

At the meeting last Monday night in the Fogg Library building, South Weymouth, of the Village Study club, Bates Torrey presided. The evening's program, in charge of Mrs. William A. Wagner, consisted of the reading of "Twelfth Night." The parts were taken by Arthur Ballen, Miss Jennie Joy, Mrs. Frederick Bauer, Carl W. Gridley, Mrs. A. V. House, Mrs. L. A. Cook Jr., Mrs. Arthur C. Heald, Mrs. Henry B. Reed, Charles F. Brown, Miss Hester Swan, Mrs. Prince H. Tirrell, Mrs. Marshall Abbott and Mrs. Mary H. Courtney.

A paper on "The Supremacy of Shakespeare" was read by Henry B. Reed.

Weymouth Choral Society.

The Weymouth Choral society at its regular meetings is having very animated rehearsals. The conductor, Mr. Calderwood, has a strong chorus, several fine soloists and a well balanced orchestra.

Two events are now in preparation a concert at Bates opera house, Friday, the 16th of this month which promises to be a season of rare enjoyment to concert goers and later a cantata which in its several features should compare favorably with the days of long ago when Weymouth was looked upon as among the leading musical towns of the State.

"Me and Another Gentleman."
A little boy, spending the summer in the country, dictated this letter to his father: "Dear pa you ought to be here with us. It's fine here. We went out on the lake yesterday. Me and another gentleman oared the boat."

MURDER AND ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

Eugene C. Loud of South Weymouth Takes Wife's Life and Attempts to End His Own Last Sunday Night

Maddened with rage, due to alleged home troubles, Eugene C. Loud, age 34, fatally slashed his wife's throat with a razor, and then attempted to end his own life with the same weapon, at their home, 51 Torrey street, South Weymouth, early last Sunday night.

Mrs. Loud passed away about an hour after the deed was done. Loud was worked over by several doctors, and then rushed to the Quincy hospital, where he is said to be recovering.

The tragedy was the culmination of a series of domestic troubles of the past few months. Last Sunday, an altercation began early in the morning, until about five o'clock, Loud who had worked himself into a frenzy, went into the bathroom, and returned with a razor. Without a word of warning he attacked his wife, who was sitting in the parlor. After slashing Mrs. Loud's throat, Loud rushed to one of the chambers and cut his own throat, inflicting a painful, but not dangerous wound.

After the tragedy, Weston, the oldest child, rushed to the home of neighbors, and told of the deed of his father. A hurry call was sent in for physicians, and Mrs. Karl H. Granger, Edwin N. Mayberry, Vincent Tirrell and George E. Emerson were soon on the spot, working first on Mrs. Loud, and later on Loud himself.

Mr. and Mrs. Loud were married about thirteen years ago, and had three children, Weston, aged 12, Gwendolin, aged 4, and Emerson, aged 8 months. The two older children were taken to the home of Mrs. Loud's brother, Russell Niles, of Rockland, and the baby is at the home of George C. Torrey, in charge of a nurse.

Burial of Dr. John T. Kelley.

The funeral of Dr. John T. Kelley took place last Thursday afternoon, from his late home, on Bedford street, Bridgewater. The service was conducted by Rev. W. B. Williams, pastor of the Congregational church. Pioneer Lodge of Odd Fellows attended in a body, and the ritual of the order was performed by Noble Grand Robert Hanlen and Chaplain Albert Chubbuck. There were many beautiful floral tributes. Four past grands of Pioneer Lodge were bearers. The remains were brought here, and interred in Village cemetery.

Quick Work of Fire Auto.

The alarm from box 35 at shortly before noon Wednesday was for a fire at at the barn and shed of Patrick Coyle situated in the rear of his house on Webb street. The fire which is supposed to have been caused from spontaneous combustion gutted the buildings. The fire was discovered by a neighbor, Mrs. Charles Goff, who rung in the alarm and although quite a distance from the engine house the auto combination in charge of Chauffeur Harry S. Dinsmore, was at the fire in less than two minutes. The auto was on the way to the fire just as the alarm began to strike the second round of the box. It was by far the quickest run that has been made with the auto. Patrick H. Sullivan attempted to board the auto as it was leaving the engine house and was thrown to the ground. He was bruised quite severely and had his clothing torn.

Mrs. Sarah C. Bicknell, Dead.

Although in somewhat impaired health incident to her advanced years the end came to Mrs. Sarah C., widow of the late Z. L. Bicknell, quite suddenly at her home on Broad street, East Weymouth, last Saturday.

Mrs. Bicknell was born of a long line of historic ancestry in Marshfield, 88 years ago. During her East Weymouth life she took a deep interest in local affairs notably so the work of the Methodist church and that of the Women's Christian Temperance union and in both of these she will be much missed.

Funeral services were held at the late home of the deceased Monday afternoon and were conducted by Rev. George A. Grant of the Methodist church at which there was a large attendance of her fellow workers in the church and temperance cause. There were many very rich floral tributes testifying to the affection and high esteem in which Mrs. Bicknell was held.

The remains were placed temporarily in the receiving tomb at Fairmount cemetery but later will rest with her Pilgrim ancestors at Marshfield.

Curtis Shaud at Rest.

Curtis Shaud, a popular young man of East Weymouth, died at his home on Pleasant street, last Saturday morning at the age of 22 years. He was an active member in social events about town and carried on the business recently owned by the late Wallace Whitton.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon in the Methodist church in East Weymouth. The services were conducted by Rev. George A. Grant, pastor. Miss Ethel F. Raymond presided at the organ. "Passing Out of the Shadow," "Abide With Me" and "Nearer My God to Thee" were sung by Mrs. Harold W. Joy, soprano and Miss Ethel F. Raymond, contralto. The bearers were Harry Purchase, Franklin N. Pratt, Lyman F. Pratt and Harry Mattson. Interment was in the Fairmount cemetery in East Weymouth.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

It pays to fuss a little with the cows, and they relish a little change in diet, with some dainties added, as well as we do.

It is a wise precaution to fumigate your incubator with formaldehyde before placing your eggs in it for hatching.

Every unkind treatment to the cow poisons the milk—even talking unkindly to her.

Milking should be done as nearly at the same hour of the day as possible. Cows do better when trained to regularity in milking.

Watch the hired man with your horses if they cringe, dodge or show signs of fear while with him, take my advice and "fire" him. A good horse is spoiled when he is a victim of fear.

Poultry diseases, just like other diseases, are favored by unsanitary surroundings, spoiled food, stale and dirty drinking water, and poorly ventilated and insufficiently lighted coops.

The very first law of animal health is pure water and pure air and a reasonable amount of exercise, and no animal can be properly developed in all of its organs and functions unless it is provided with these three essentials.

Now is a very good time to save out the best pullets to take the place of the discarded hens this fall. It pays to keep the best stock in order to get good results, and this can be done in no other way any better than by constantly culling and picking.

The best compost for "all fruit tree," (without endeavoring to suit the specific wants of each particular fruit), is a compost of peat, or swamp muck, reduced, or rendered available to plants, by unleached wood ashes. The peat should, if possible, be dug and carted out in winter, though it will answer if dug in the spring.

With all animals, upon the first year's growth, depends in a large measure their future size and usefulness. If they grow well during the first months of their life they will turn out to be good animals; while if they are carelessly handled and half starved they will become stunted and will not mature into valuable animals.

Farm implements—should all be put in perfect order, ready for use in the spring; if any need painting, a coat applied now will get hardened through the winter, and thus last twice as long as when applied just before the implement is wanted for use. Everything of the kind should be placed under cover.

When woodland is to be cleared for permanent pasture, do not clear too much in one winter. If more land is cleared in proportion to the animals to graze on it, sprouts and other undesirable growth will take the land before a good stand of grass can be secured, and much hard labor will be required to subdue the growth. Make the animals, as far as possible, eat off and kill the sprouts.

It is impossible for us to raise a crop of any kind, without exhausting the soil. The greater the crop the more the soil must be exhausted. If we use anything to make the substance of the soil more active, the consequence must be the exhaustion of the soil, unless plants can grow out of nothing; as well as out of good soil.

When we see a farmer bending all his energies to improve his farm, and making inquiries as to the best methods of husbandry, patronizing agricultural papers, and taking due interest in agricultural fairs, associations, etc; when we hear him inquiring for improved stock, seeds, and fruit trees, we say that this man is bound to prosper.

A horse's stomach is small; a colt's is smaller. Compelling a colt to subsist on coarse, bulky dry feed alone can not possibly supply its growing demands. It should have choice hay and grain. Good clover or alfalfa hay is best, as either of these supply protein and mineral matter for the building of bone and muscle. Of grains, oats are the best. If clover or alfalfa hay is fed, a mixture of oats and corn may be used. Bran is also a good feed for the colt, and it may be mixed with either oats or corn.

The hen house that is to give laying hens in winter the best protection must have a tight ceiling or roof. In most houses the ceiling and roof are one and the same thing. The best roof that can be used on the low down poultry house is one made of tight-fitting boards, covered with heavy roofing material. This kind of a roof keeps out the cold and keeps the heat of the birds above their backs. The birds are comfortable all over.

Where hilly land is used for orchard purposes, it should first be cleared and either pastured or cultivated till all the sprouts and wild growth have been killed out. Fighting sprouts in an orchard is slow expensive and vexatious work. Where rocks and sprouts are mixed, the owner must have the strength of a lion, the patience of Job, and the sweet temper of an angel—a worthy combination of virtues—in order to retain a happy frame of mind and to gather choice fruits after a term of years. It is better to plant the orchard on good, tillable land and turn the rocky, brushy land to some other purpose.

ALASKA'S MIGHTY RIVER.

The Yukon is Navigable For a Stretch of Over 2,100 Miles.

Dismiss from your mind any notion that the Yukon river is a puny stream fed by eternal glaciers and trickling away to the sea. It is a river so mighty that it can spread out over a width of sixty miles on the Yukon flats and still have depth enough in the main channel to float heavily laden freight steamers. From its mouth near St. Michael at the Bering sea it is navigable all the way to White Horse, in the Yukon territory of Canada, an unbroken stretch of over 2,100 miles—two-thirds of the distance from New York to San Francisco. Add to this the navigable water of its tributaries—370 miles on the Inukok river, 320 on the Iditarod, 620 on the Koyukuk and 392 miles on the Tanana—and you will begin to have a fair idea of what a big river we have in our great empire beneath the Northern Lights.

The valley drained by this wonderful river system of the north is the hope of Alaska. The wealth of the past and of today has come from mines and fisheries, and the lifetime of all mining regions is briefer even than human life. It has been only a few years, you remember, since the Klondike was the most active mining camp in the world. Today it is a valley long since deserted by the individual miner and turned over to two big dredging companies, which work the low grade tailings. And these also must shortly pass.—Edgar Allen Forbes in Leslie's.

SKIN OF A SABLE.

It Takes Lots of Treading to Make It Soft and Fluffy.

"Otter hunts are fashionable in England," said the manicurist, "and I call that a sensible kind of hunt. Look at the otter skins the girls can collect—and otter coats so fashionable now too!"

"I wouldn't mind collecting an otter coat myself. But how would you like to belong to a sable hunt, girls, and collect a sable coat?"

"A customer of mine, though, a fur dealer, told me I wouldn't know a sable if I saw one. I thought, of course, they'd be soft, fluffy little fellows, but he says they have a hide as flat as a rat's. He says that when the skins are taken from the animals they are so hard that they are placed in a tub and a barefooted man steps in and begins to tread on them to soften them. The tub is tilted so that at each step the man takes the skins slide down the slope and are kept moving. The man treads for hours and hours before any pile appears. When it begins to rise the skins are oiled and the treading begins again. This is continued until the skins are as supple as chamois and the pile has become so high that the fur has that soft depth and beautiful rich gloss which we see in Fifth avenue.

"I always thought a sable was a pretty creature, with fluffy fur like a kitten, didn't you?"—New York Tribune.

A Way to Distinguish Twins.

Twin brothers who have been called up for service in a Paris regiment are so alike that it is impossible to distinguish between them. The other day one was confined to barracks, and by changing his cap, with its regimental number, for that of his brother he was able to pass the guard whenever he wished to go out. The colonel has now issued the following order to obviate such tricks: "The soldier bonhomme (even number) will wear his hair as long as the regulations, construed with the utmost leniency, will allow and will shave his beard and mustache. The soldier bonhomme (odd number) will allow his beard and mustache to grow full and will have his hair regularly cut as closely as possible by the regimental barber."—London Mail.

Out It Went.

"Good night, my sweet; farewell, my love; my soul goes out to thee! But time is speeding fast, my love, and I must quickly see! 'Tis but a few short hours, my love, and you must think of me till we meet again tomorrow, love! My soul goes out to thee!"

Thus spoke a lover to his lass. Deep in her eyes gazed he. Now, one fond kiss, one fond embrace—how sweet it was to see!

Oh, horror! Then her pa appeared. "What means this, sir?" said he. Then, with an angry snarl, he roared, "My sole goes out to thee!"—London Mail.

Beauty and The Beast

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

A scientist has made the statement that, while beauty in women is highly prized by men, beauty in men is not prized by women. Whether or no this is true, the fact remains that a great many very pretty women have married painfully ugly men. It does seem to be the case that women are captured by men in an entirely different way from what men are captured by women. Perhaps if the subject were followed out scientifically it would be found in the fact that the man is snared by weakness, while the woman is snared by strength.

Rosalind Thurber was a very pretty country girl at the age of eighteen when most girls are at their prettiest and was a great favorite with the young farmer boys, who were her natural associates. She was about to please her father and mother by accepting Gus Walker, the son of one of the most prominent farmers in the neighborhood and commonly considered rich. Young Walker was as handsome as Rosa was pretty. Indeed, he was considered the best looking young fellow in all that region.

Farmer Gordon, about that time having crops to get in, hired a hand, Joe Green, a man about thirty years old, who was a sight to behold. He had a birthmark on his neck and when a baby had fallen into a fire which had scarred his whole face. Added to this, he was freckled, and his hair was a sort of red sorrel. One night at a barn dance this scarecrow was present. The girls would not dance with him. He invited Rosa among the first, and she turned her back on him without even deigning him an answer. That ended his invitations for partners. One of the young men asked him why he didn't go through the whole list, and he replied that since Rosa Thurber would not dance with him he would never dance with any other girl. Of course this was repeated to Miss Thurber, who said that she was pleased to save the other girls the pain of being invited to dance by such a scarecrow.

The next thing that Rosa heard about Joe Green was that when twitted about finding, or rather not finding, a girl to marry him he had said that the only girl in the world he would care to marry was Rosalind Thurber. On hearing it she said that he had as much chance of marrying her as he had of marrying the empress of Germany.

One day when Rosa was walking on the road she met Joe. Her only notice of his presence was to make a face at him. He lifted his hat politely.

Joe used to hang around the Thurber farm in hopes of getting a sight of Rosa. All the family noticed this and used to twit her about it. One day when Joe had been sitting on a fence for an hour, looking up at the house where she lived, she astonished all present by going out on the porch and throwing some feed to the chickens.

Even then no one suspected that the girl had been touched by Joe's devotion and had gone out to reward him with a sight of her. But under Joe's womanliness was a keen insight into a woman's nature, and with great satisfaction he got down from the fence and went away.

The next time she met Green was in the evening when he was taking the horses to water.

"When are you going to stop making a guy of yourself about me?" she asked.

"I'm not making a fool of myself," he replied. "Of all the men hereabouts I'm the only one that appreciates you. You can't stop me from loving you, no matter what you do."

"What do you love me for?"

"Cause you're the only girl in the world worth loving."

"How long have you loved me?"

"Since the first night I ever saw you at the barn dance."

"How long are you going to love me?"

"Till the day of judgment."

There being no more information on the subject to be derived, Rosa passed on, leaving Joe to attend to the rest of his chores. After awhile Joe Green and Rosa Thurber were seen occasionally walking together. Then they began to be spoken of as beauty and the beast Gus Walker, who had been expecting soon to be engaged to her, met her one evening on the road with Joe. Joe attempted to smile and made such a horrible face of it that Gus forgot to bow to Rosa. The next time Gus and Rosa met he asked her where was her scarecrow lover and received a reply that some persons were scarecrows on the outside and some persons were scarecrows on the inside. Then she turned on her heel, and that was the last there was of courtship between the two.

One day it became reported that the pretty Rosa Thurber was going to marry that homely Joe Green. No one would believe it at first, but after several of Rosa's friends had asked her about it and she had admitted it it was accepted as a fact. They were married, and the most astonishing part of the matter followed in a crop of beautiful children. Most of them resembled the mother with her raven tresses and rosy complexion, and the "red headed ones," as those who inherited from the father were called, fortunately did not fall in the line as had been done and were there as without his birthmark in this respect and without his outlook.

Ezra Dalton's Will

For Reasons of Modesty the Widow Did Not Have It Filed.

By ELLIOTT FLOWER

Copyright by S. S. McClure company.

When Kittle Wigram married Ezra Dalton it was generally understood to be a financial transaction of the kind customary in the polite world. Kittle was young and pretty, while Ezra was old and rich. But Kittle was not one of these unbusinesslike girls who leave everything to chance. No, indeed; she was a thoughtful and worldly maiden, who knew how to look out for herself and her future. She insisted that his will must be made out in her favor in the way that she should decree and left in her charge.

"Everything must be left to me," she said, "and the will must be absolutely in my keeping. Too many girls in our set have been fooled by colluders and other changes."

To this he agreed, and the day after the wedding she demanded the fulfillment of his promise.

"I will have the new will drawn up and executed today," he said, "and tonight I will give it to you. I regret to have to cut off one or two relatives who have been kind to me, but you shall have everything."

"It is because I know you will regret that," she replied, "that I shall not be satisfied with any will that I cannot have always with me. No safe deposit box would give me the sense of security that I need in order to rest easy."

"Surely you cannot be in earnest," he protested. "You cannot carry it about with you. It would be lost or stolen."

"The way that I intend to carry it," she answered, "will preclude the possibility of loss or theft, and, furthermore, will make it impossible for you to get hold of it and change it. I shall have it tattooed on my arm."

She laughed in a triumphant way as she said this, while Ezra gasped. She was not unmindful of the fact that he still might make a new will, but she thought the circumstances would deter him, especially as the destruction of the other would be impossible.

"On your arm?" he repeated, as soon as his astonishment would let him speak.

"On my arm," she said, with determination.

"You are prepared, then, to give up the wearing of short sleeve gowns?" he suggested, whereat she grew suddenly pale.

"Good heavens!" she cried. "I never thought of that!"

"You have a beautiful arm!" he went on insinuatingly.

"True," she admitted, "and it's beauty must be preserved. I have no right to deprive society of so fair an arm. I will have the will tattooed on my shoulder."

"Would your ball gowns conceal it?" he asked solicitously.

Again she was startled by the suggestion, for in truth there was very little of the shoulder that a ball gown would conceal. This, of course, was due to the fact that she belonged to the world of fashion, and in consequence it would be manifestly absurd and provocative of comment to withdraw the shoulders from exhibition.

"Well," she said, after a thoughtful pause, "perhaps it would be better to have the will tattooed where I am vaccinated."

Now she thought the matter settled, but this was because she was unacquainted with the legal requirements in such affairs. He looked at her and smiled in a way she did not like.

"As you please," he returned disinterestedly, and then he added, as if it were a matter of slight importance, "I presume you do not forget that the will must be signed by two witnesses and attested by a notary."

Her perturbation was great, but in a minute or two she recovered her composure.

"In that case," she asserted, "I shall have the will tattooed just beneath the shoulder blade, and the notary and witnesses shall be women. Thank heaven that women have invaded some departments of the business world."

It was there, for when she became disheartened and dissatisfied (as is frequently the case with modern views of ancient husbands) she had only to remove her waist and arrange the mirrors to experience a feeling of placid contentment.

But soon she became an enigma to her friends. She did such strange things and made such extraordinary remarks. For instance, she gave up the use of rocking chairs entirely.

"I have noticed," she said, "that no matter how gently one rocks the motion results in a sort of rubbing of one's back by the back of the chair."

"What of it?" asked the friend to whom this remark was made.

"Don't you wish you knew?" she retorted.

Then she evinced a strong repugnance to massage, which she previously held to be conducive to beauty and health. Indeed, when the subject was mentioned she shuddered and once exclaimed, "Heavens, it might rub out!"

In a crowd, too, she exhibited great distress. If any one brushed roughly by her so as to touch her right shoulder she became perceptibly pale and promptly endeavored to back into some corner where she would be reasonably safe. Naturally there was speculation, then gossip.

"That old brute of a husband beats her," some one suggested.

"Why, of course," another exclaimed. "That explains everything, doesn't it? Her back is probably a mass of bruises."

Just as this was satisfactorily settled by the gossips and every one was wondering how long her pride would keep her out of the divorce court she still further puzzled them by a remark of an entirely different nature. Something was said about the value of a beautiful skin to a woman, a particularly fair debutante being under discussion.

"It is priceless," one of the party asserted. It cannot be put in figures."

"Oh, I don't know," returned Mrs. Ezra Dalton in a dreamy way. "A few square inches of mine are worth $8,750,000."

On another occasion she asked if she walked straight.

"Certainly," was the reply. "Why?"

"I feared I might sag a little on the right side," she answered. "I am carrying a fortune there, you know."

She also told a gallant young man who had said that woman was worth her weight in gold that, if she cured to do it, she could demonstrate that she was worth a good deal more than that.

"She said she was worth more than her weight in gold."

But she instantly regretted this, for he demanded the proof, and her confusion was such that the gossips were more excited than ever.

The time came, however, when curiosity was satisfied, for old Ezra Dalton died. No will was filed for probate, but application was made direct to the judge to settle the estate.

"Is there a will?" he demanded.

"There is," replied Mrs. Dalton's attorney, "but—"

"Has it been filed?" asked the judge.

"Filed?" ejaculated Mrs. Dalton with a shudder. "Why, it would be barbarous to file it. Think how it would hurt!"

"It has not, your honor, answered the attorney. "You see?"

"Then file it," broke in the judge, "and notify all the parties in interest."

"There are no parties in interest except my client," explained the lawyer. "It leaves everything to her."

"Well?" said the judge impatiently at last.

"Your honor," replied the lawyer "the only other possible heirs have agreed to sign a release of all claims whatsoever and let the entire estate go to the widow just as soon as we can draw up a little agreement for her signature."

"Thank heaven!" sighed the judge. "My wife is a very jealous woman."

"Power Going Upward." Water power, as everybody knows is obtained by the fall of water, whether it is the fall of water on an old fashioned over-shot water wheel in a New England mill stream or to the bottom of great steel pipes, as at Niagara falls.

An Australian community has now reversed the standard practice and is lighting the village by power obtained from water that is not falling but is going up. For water supply purposes a deep well was drilled at Thargomindah, in western Queensland, and a spouter resulted. Water shot up with a rush and still keeps a pressure of above 200 pounds, flowing 670,000 gallons a day. The pressure is just as good to turn wheels as if it were caused by falling water, so turbines were installed and the power used to generate electricity.—Saturday Evening Post.

"Starved to Death." Under the headline "All Died of Starvation" the Geographische Zeitschrift tells this gruesome story: "Four years ago a Russian fisherman were landed on the Russian island of Nowaja Semlja. Ships called there at irregular intervals for the catch and left supplies in exchange. The last winter, however, was so severe that vessels could not reach the settlement, and the heavy ice precluded fishing even for nourishment. The colony were left to their fate in the hope that relief might come to them. When a scientific expedition reached the place recently the skeletons of the people who died of starvation were discovered in the open. The huts, partly demolished by the elements, were empty."

Character in the Face.

A great deal of a woman's character is reflected in her face. Those who have studied physiognomy can tell, almost at a glance, a woman's disposition, her talents and occupation. Eyes that are not afraid to meet yours speak for the honesty of their owner. A strong mouth shows a firm character. Expression tells its own tale in regard to the thoughts which are passing through the mind. It is true that appearances are deceitful sometimes, but sooner or later habits and temperament are bound to leave their mark upon the face.

Small Boy's Essay.

A youthful American citizen for the time being resident in Germany was asked to observe Independence day by writing "a patriotic American composition." Bobby chose "The Cow" for his subject, and this was the essay he turned out: "The cow is an animal. She has two horns and four legs and a tail. Sometimes this tail waves. 'Long may it wave o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!'"

Save Money and Disposition. Use Gas.

Last week we published a tabulation of the results of a series of tests showing that GAS saves food, as well as Saving Over Eleven Cents Per Meal.

Have you ever stopped to consider the economic waste of a coal range? Have you ever thot of the hard usage it gives your home furnishings? Of the labor spent in carry-coal and ashes? Of the effect on your disposition poking, shaking, worrying over the balky fire?

If you have no other heat in your kitchen, try using your coal range for heat only and gas for cooking. At the end of a month you will be surprised to find that you have saved money as well as disposition. Give it a trial.

Taft Lectures.

Mr. Editor of the Gazette and Transcript Dear Sir:

In your regular and interesting "Town Business" article of last week you spoke of the Taft Lecture fund and a popular demand for something new and more novel, now let us look at the past and express a hope for the future.

In the past, illustrated lectures were a novelty and a delight. Now the movies have become so common that illustrated lectures no longer attract the crowd and to many owners of tired eyes the pictures are a weariness.

But can we not have educational lectures courses of at least four lectures on a subject—not ten lectures on different subjects each lecture driving out the memory of the preceding one—choosing subjects which would appeal to out students and our mature citizens?

We send forth annually large classes from our High school and do nothing to further the education of the graduates. Why not try a course of lectures on literature by a professor from one of our universities; or a course in science or social science; or in domestic science, for our housewives; or citizenship (for our men, we started to write but of course the women would flock to that); or even on psychology or religion, for there have been lecturers who could make those subjects interesting; or music; or art? Choosing in each case the best lecturer to be had, making it similar to the university extension movement.

Could the tickets for these courses be distributed as are those of the Lowell Institute in Boston? i. e. The time and place for distribution well advertised and only one ticket given to an applicant, who must be an adult. If the owner of the ticket wishes to pass it on to a child there would be no objection but this method would do away with the horde of restless, unappreciative children who have driven the adults from these lectures.

We are educating the children in our schools, giving them the best we can; isn't it fair to do something for our adult population, especially as the latter class is bound to be increased by those now children by the aid of Father Time? Many of us are hungry for the courses we see advertised in Boston but are unable to attend. How we would welcome such courses here in our town!

Another possibility is a Summer Institute on a modest scale. Suppose we should have a course of lectures given within two weeks during July or August? Weymouth is becoming a summer resort; would such a course add to her attractions? To sum up these suggestions:—

1. Courses on literature, science, art, social science, history, etc. by the best possible authorities.
2. Tickets distributed so that a person coming from a distant part of the town may be assured of a seat.
3. Subjects of the courses to appeal to adults; and children, if admitted, to be accompanied by parent or guardian.
4. The Summer Institute idea; which might have possibilities if people are too busy during the winter to attend these lectures.

Hoping that some arrangement may be made so that the townspeople may derive the benefit from the fund which the donor intended, I am, Mr. Editor,

Very respectfully yours,
 A CITIZEN.

Mr. Editor:

Will you kindly give the following a place in your issue of this week.

Since the town election of March 1913 I have stated to a number of people and to the press, that with the present year I expected to close my service as a Selectman and Overseer of the Poor of the town of Weymouth and should not be in the field for another election.

The above statement was made in perfectly good faith and without anticipation of any difficulty in the way of carrying it out. I felt that, on the one hand, the town should be privileged to select a younger man without me being in the way; and on the other hand, that twenty years continuous service on the board entitled me to withdraw to private life. I have, however, within the last few weeks received so many urgent requests that I permit my name to be again used that proper regard for what seems to be the wish of many of my fellow-citizens has compelled me to reconsider my decision made early in the season.

In view of the foregoing, if I am nominated in the coming caucuses for the positions named I shall not feel at liberty to decline the nomination. It is a part of my political faith, that if a person accepts a public office it is his duty to give the best service of which he is capable, regardless of pecuniary considerations.

During the years of my connection with town offices it has been my aim to live up to this faith and if I am called to serve another year, I can only say, that I shall endeavor to serve the interests of the town to the best of my ability.

F. hall in South Braintree tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Miss Mary Cutler, proprietor of the Winthrop Gardens, will give an address on "Village Improvement, and the Back Yard That Could Be." The committee in charge of the affair consists of H. W. Spear, W. W. Pratt and J. G. Spear.

—Miss Sophia Sylvester of Franklin has been visiting Miss Ruth Sargent.

—A very interesting illustrated address was given in the Universalist church auditorium last Sunday night by Rev. William W. Rose, pastor of the church, on "The Glory of Old Fellowship." Members of the I. O. O. F. lodges about town were special guests.

—The staff of Wilder Lodge I. O. O. F. of South Weymouth, conferred the second degree on a class of candidates from Old Colony Lodge of Hingham and Crescent Lodge of East Weymouth, in the local I. O. O. F. hall, last Monday evening.

—The Norfolk club has selected Friday evening, January 23rd, for the date of its annual ball, in Foga's Opera House.

—The next meeting of the Village Study club will be held on the evening of Jan. 19th, when "Othello" will be read by the members of the club.

—Mrs. Mary A. Holbrook of this place will install the officers of McPherson W. R. C. in Abington, next Monday evening.

—The Old Colony Ladies club met yesterday afternoon in the Union church. Mrs. J. Harry Poole gave an address on "Current Events," and music was furnished by Miss Madeline Gale.

—The newly elected officers of South Weymouth Grange P. of H. were installed in Clapp's hall last Tuesday night, by Past Master James Estes of Hanson, assisted by Mrs. Almy Holbrook as chaplain.

—At the Hose 5 forty-five party in Engine hall, last Wednesday evening, the prizes were captured by E. S. Wright and J. Leahy.

Union Church Notes.
 Services as usual next Sunday, with Sunday school and Christian Endeavor.

Topic for Endeavor meeting at 6—"Purpose, Persistence, and Power in Prayer." Matthew 7: 7-11. Leader, Miss Jessie Morrill.

The Camp Fire Circle, in charge of Mrs. F. A. Northrop, will give the "Pedlars Parade" in the vestry, Saturday evening, Jan. 17th, to raise money for their work. Come prepared to buy of the different pedlars. See fliers for further information.

Brown Eyes.
 Brown eyes are indications of deep feeling and quick susceptibility to individuals of the other sex. They usually mean liberality of feeling, a warm, clinging nature and a freedom from Puritanical prudery.

Cemetery Advertisement.
 Advertising a cemetery is something not generally encountered, but this recently has occurred at Sydney, N. S. Wales, Australia. A newspaper advertised a local cemetery as "commanding so beautiful a view of the bay that people who have tried it cannot be persuaded to go elsewhere."

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

Forty-five years ago.

The silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Goodspeed of East Weymouth, occurred on Wednesday evening last and was attended by a large number of their friends. Many presents of value were given, among them a silver pitcher and salver, presented to the couple by the Sabbath school class under charge of Mr. G., also a silver basket, a large entry lamp and numerous other articles.

Within the year an excellent parsonage has been erected by the Methodist church of East Weymouth, at the expense of $4,000, and has been elegantly furnished throughout by the ladies of the society. This house is commodious and convenient, just such as a minister needs and is an ornament to the village and a credit to the church that has erected it. Their pastor, Rev. W. V. Morrison, has removed to it the present week.

The bottomers in the employ of M. C. Dizer & Co., refused to go to work at a reduction, and held a meeting last Saturday evening, at which some who did not work there, signed a paper not to interfere, but afterward took out work, and the old hands have commenced work at reduced price, which was a smaller reduction than that made by other manufacturers.

Thirty years ago.

Surveyor Ford scattered the "beautiful snow" in lively manner last Wednesday, the plow being run all through the day, and thus pedestrians were enabled to move round comfortably.

George A. Hunt has purchased the livery stable stock of Peter Cushing, and will carry on that business at the old stand. His experience in that line warrants success to Mr. Hunt.

An injunction was put on our streets Wednesday by old Boreas, but yesterday our assistant highway surveyor mustered all the force he could raise and before night the injunction was removed and public travel was again resumed. The cost will be settled by the Town Treasurer.

Messrs. Canterbury and Haskell furnished teams Wednesday night and Thursday morning, to convey their female help to and from their homes.

On Sunday last Howard H. Joy was elected superintendent of the Universalist Sunday school. J. M. Whitcomb, who has served in that capacity for nearly twenty years, declined re-election.

Twenty-four years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Hunt are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a boy.

Mild weather still continues, and the ice dealers are beginning to be anxious regarding a supply of their commodity for the next warm season. The absence of snow up to the present time is a marked peculiarity of this season, and it is stated that on Thursday week not a flake of snow or drop of rain fell in the entire United States.

At the regular meeting of Hose 2, held last Monday evening, the fire alarm line was formally given over to the company, who appointed Henri Humphrey as Sup't of Fire Alarm. They also voted to place a box in Strong & Carrel's manufactory, for the benefit of firemen employed there, a box having been placed in M. C. Dizer & Co's. manufactory for the same purpose.

The officers of Weymouth Council 747, Royal Arcanum, were installed last Friday evening by Deputy Daniel H. Huxford and Grand Guide Lyons, as follows:—Regent, C. T. Crane; Vice do., C. C. Webster; Orator, F. O. Whitmarsh; P. R., A. L. Hobart; Sec'y, R. H. Loud; Treas., G. E. Bicknell; Col., B. Y. Knight; Chaplain, W. F. Sauborn; Guide, T. D. Bagley; Warden, Geo Ludden; Sentry, Thos. South, Jr.

Philately and History.

An interesting chapter in philatelic history, and in the history of Europe, is closed by the decision to suppress the foreign postal agencies in Crete as the result of the union of that island with Greece. Austria, Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy have all maintained post offices in Crete, as in Turkey, and there is at the moment much speculation in philatelic circles as to whether the Levantine post offices maintained by the powers, among which Germany is also included, will not be closed as well.

Day by Day.

We live by days. They are the leaves folded back each night in the great volume that we write. They are our autobiography. Each day takes us not newly, but as a tale continued. It finds us what yesterday left us; and as we go on, every day is telling to every other day truths about us, showing the kind of being that is to be handed on to it, making of us something better or something worse, as we decide.—J. F. W. Ware.

Town Clerk's Notice

TO

Physicians, Midwives and Parents

BIRTH RETURNS

Town Clerk's Office,

Weymouth, Jan. 1, 1914.

Attention is called to the following law in relation of births which was passed by the Legislature for 1912.

JOHN A. RAYMOND, Town Clerk.

[CHAP. 280, ACTS OF 1912]

AN ACT RELATIVE TO REPORTS AND RECORDS OF BIRTHS.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

SECTION 1. Physicians and midwives shall, within forty-eight hours after the birth of every child in cases of which they were in charge, mail or deliver to the clerk or registrar of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a notice stating the date and place of the birth, giving the street and number, if any, the number of the ward in a city and the family name. Failure to mail or deliver the said notice shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each offence. The notice required by this section need not be given if the notice required by the following section is given within forty-eight hours after the birth occurs.

SECTION 2. Physicians and midwives shall make and keep a record of the birth of every child in cases of which they were in charge and shall, within fifteen days after the birth, mail or deliver to the clerk or registrar of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a report of the birth, stating the date and place, the name, if any, of the child, its sex and color, and the names, ages, places of birth, occupations and residence of the parents, giving the street number, if there be any, and the number of the ward in a city, the maiden name of the mother, and whether or not the physician or midwife signing the birth return personally attended the birth. If the child is illegitimate, the name and other facts relating to the father shall not be stated except at the request in writing of both the father and mother filed with the return. The record to be kept by the physician or midwife, as above provided, shall also contain the facts hereby required to be reported to the city or town clerk. The fee of the physician or midwife shall be twenty-five cents for every birth so reported, which shall be paid by the city or town where the report is made, upon presentation to the city or town treasurer of a certificate from the city or town clerk stating that the said birth has been properly reported to him. The report required to be made by this section is in addition to the report required to be made by the preceding section, and as above provided, if made within forty-eight hours of the birth, the report required by the preceding section shall not be required. A physician or midwife who neglects to make and keep the record hereby required, or who neglects to report in the manner specified above, each birth within fifteen days thereafter, shall for each offence forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars. The city or town clerk or registrar shall file daily with the local board of health a list of all births reported to him, giving the following facts: date of birth, sex, color, family name, residence, ward, physician or midwife.

SECTION 3. Section three of chapter twenty-nine of the Revised Laws, as amended by chapter ninety-three of the acts of this year nineteen hundred and ten, is hereby repealed. [Approved March 21, 1912.] 42-45

BIG CATS AND CATNIP.

Leopard and Tiger Fairly Revealed in the Odorous Plant.

Some one at the Washington zoological park obtained the permission of the authorities to try the effect of catnip on the animals there. So far as known catnip does not grow in the native homes of these animals, and this was the first time they had ever smelled it.

The scent of the plant filled the whole place, and as soon as it reached the parrots' corner the two gaudily attired macaws set up a note that told fearfully on the nerves of all and made for that side of their cage, poking their beaks and claws through it. When the catnip was brought near them they became nearly frantic. They were given some and devoured it, stem, leaf and blossom, with an eagerness that equaled the noise of their cries.

Next trial was made on an African leopard. Before the keepers had reached the front of the cage he had bounded from the shelf where he lay, apparently asleep, and stood expectant. A double handful of catnip was passed through to the floor of the den.

Never was the prey of this spotted African in his wild state pounced upon more savagely or with such absolute enjoyment. First the leopard ate a mouthful of the stuff, then lay flat on his back and wiggled through the green mass until his black spotted yellow hide was filled with the odor, just as you have seen a cat act when it receives some catnip.

Then he sat on a bunch of the catnip, caught a leaf laden stem up in either paw and rubbed his cheeks, chin, nose, eyes and head. He ate an additional mouthful or two and then jumped back to his shelf, where he lay the rest of the afternoon, the very picture of contentment.

In one tiger's cage there is a very young but full grown animal. When this great, surly beast inhaled the first sniff of the catnip he began to mew like a kitten. Up to this time the softest note of his voice had been one which put the roar of the big maned lion near him to shame.

That vicious tiger fairly reveled in the liberal allowance of the plant which was thrust into his cage. He rolled about in it and played like a six-weeks-old kitten. He mewed and purred, tossed it about, ate of it and after getting about as liberal a dose as the leopard had, likewise jumped to his shelf and blinked lazily the rest of the day.—New York Herald.

HIS MOST ANXIOUS MOMENT.

When Dewey Feared He Might Be Branded as a Coward.

Admiral Dewey tells in his autobiography the story of his most anxious moment. It was when he was executive officer of the warship Mississippi. After passing the forts at New Orleans his ship was about to sink under fire, and the crew had to be taken off in boats. There were not enough boats, and the danger of a magazine explosion became so great that the crews showed increasing hesitation in returning for another load. On a sudden impulse Dewey jumped into one of the boats to go after the rowers and compel them to return. He continues:

"Not until we were free of the ship did I have a second thought in realization of what I had done. I had left my ship in distress when it is the rule that the last man to leave her should be the captain, and I as executive officer should be next to the last."

"That was the most anxious moment of my career. What if a shot should sink the boat? What if a rifle bullet should get me? All the world would say that I had been guilty of about as craven an act as can be placed at the door of an officer. This would not be pleasant reading for my father up in Vermont. He would no longer think that I had done the 'rest' reasonably well. If the ship should blow up while I was away and I should appear on the reports as saved probably people would smile over my explanation."

As it turned out, however, the magazine did not explode, and Dewey's presence was needed to bring the boat crews back and save the men still on the sinking ship.

A Famous Year.

It is contended that the year 1800 gave more celebrities and persons of genius to the world than any other year of the nineteenth century. Among those who were born in that memorable year were Abraham Lincoln, Edgar Allan Poe, Oliver Wendell Holmes, William Ewart Gladstone, Charles Darwin, Lord Houghton, Alfred Tenyson, Edward Fitzgerald, Professor Blackie, Mary Cowden Clarke and Felix Mendelssohn.

Alike.

A convivial correspondent wrote to an eastern paper complaining of the condition of the village streets, closing with the statement that "the water lies in the ditch for days at a time."

The editor printed the letter, with the following "Ed. Note": "So does our esteemed correspondent."—Omaha World-Herald.

Doctors' Fees.

"They talk about lawyers' dishonest accumulations, but look at doctors." "What's the matter with doctors?" "Are not all of their earnings ill got ten gains?"—Baltimore American.

Cured.

"And has this famous doctor cured your friend of the hallucination that she was sick?" "Oh, completely. She's really sick now."—Fliegende Blätter.

The Case of Peter Grant

By ELLA WHEATON

Peter Grant emigrated to the plains when hundreds of thousands of buffaloes were tramping over them, and he went there to hunt them. His oldest boy, Oscar, was nearly grown, and the two together collected the buffalo hides, that were tanned into robes, which at that time were largely used in winter in place of the present more expensive skins.

The father of the family, being a poor sleeper, was accustomed to sleep in a room built as an addition or wing of his house, where he would be undisturbed by any sound. Since he was accustomed to come and go at will the key to the door of his room was kept under the doorstep, that whenever he wished to go to bed he might do so without awakening the rest of the household.

The Grant domicile was located not far from the foothills of the Rockies near where now stands the city of Denver, which was then a village. The Indians inhabiting that region were the Utes and the Arapahoes. Both these tribes, especially the latter, were friendly to the whites, but were not very kindly disposed to each other. As late as 1868 the Utes sallied forth from their hunting grounds in the mountain tains on the warpath to fight their copper colored enemies.

One autumn Peter Grant went on a hunting expedition to get meat for the family use during the winter. He said that he would be gone not over a week, and his destination was that beautiful region since called the Garden of the Gods, in which Colorado City now stands. The week passed, and every day the Grant family expected its head to reappear. But day after day passed, and nothing was heard from him.

When two weeks from the time of his appointed return had passed and he did not turn up his son started southward to look for him. Oscar traced his father to the foot of Pikes peak, where he lost track of him. But, hearing from settlers that a tribe of Indians from New Mexico had raided that part of Colorado while his father was hunting there, the boy was forced to believe that his father had been captured. He went on southward as far as Pueblo and, hearing nothing of a captured white man, returned northward.

Oscar knew that it was the habit of the Indians on capturing a white man to torture him and then kill him, so he said nothing to his mother of what he had learned. He simply told her that he had heard nothing of his father and hoped that some day he would return to them.

The winter passed without Grant's reappearance. Oscar continued to hunt the buffalo. He desired to complete the amount of money his father had fixed upon before returning to the east, and his mother would not leave the place so long as there was any hope that her husband might be restored to her. A year passed, during which Oscar added considerably to the family assets by the sale of buffalo skins, and he suggested that they go back to the east. The children needed to be educated, and the older girls were now of an age when it was not best that they should remain on the frontier. But Mrs. Grant had faith that her husband would return, and she could not bear to think of his doing so to find his former home deserted. So she kept putting off her children from month to month, from season to season. Finally, when two years had gone by since Grant's departure and there was no news of him, her children persuaded her not to spend another winter on the plains.

The family were preparing for their departure when one day a tribe of Indians from the south came up on a foray. They were not hostile, had no revenge to take on the whites of the region and seemed bent only on appropriating to themselves what they could find. They encamped near the Grant home and stole everything that was not under lock and key, cleaning out all the outhouses, especially the smoke house, in which hung considerable smoked game, consisting of antelope and venison.

The Indians remained but one day and night and then turned to retrace their steps to their southern camping grounds. During the night that they were about the place Mrs. Grant thought she heard a sound in the little wing of the house in which her husband used to sleep. The key to the door remained where it had always been kept, and she wondered if any of the prowling redskins had found it and gone into the room. If so, doubtless all the bed-clothing and smaller articles would be appropriated. In the morning after the Indians had gone she looked for the key, but it was not there. She tried the door and found it locked. While she stood wondering at the meaning of this, she heard a voice say:

"Who's there?" "Who's inside?" "Have the Indians gone?" "Yes."

The bolt was shot back and the door partly opened, revealing a man dressed and painted like an Indian. Mrs. Grant recoiled, but the man caught her in his arms. He was her husband. He had been captured by this tribe, adopted and carried into New Mexico. When the tribe came north he came with them and found a convenient hiding place in his own room.

A Monster Of the Deep

Tale of the Sea Serpent That Appeared Off Quincy Harbor.

By J. LEROY BARSTOW

Quincy Harbor was in an uproar. The wind was blowing half a gale from the northwest, and great waves came tumbling in from the sound to break with angry roars on the pebbly beaches.

I was standing on the front porch of Captain Barnabas Fish's snug cottage on the west beach, watching for that gallant sailorman to return from his schooner Indus, where he had been to see that everything was snug and shipshape aboard.

Maria Fish came out and stood beside me, her arms wrapped in her blue gingham apron, her hair whipped back by the wind.

"Captain coming?" she asked. "Yes; he has just left the schooner. See, Maria; there's a motorboat coming in. I wonder if it has been outside."

"Looks like Ananias Sline's boat," remarked Maria. "He goes out into the sound in all kinds of weather. Ananias is as good a sailor as he is a story teller."

"Then he must be an excellent sailor!" was my laughing response.

We watched the motorboat approach the captain's dory and then saw it lead the smaller boat to the steamboat wharf, where they made a difficult landing at the slippery wooden steps. But there were many hands to help them.

"What the land are they all gabbing about?" wondered Maria as she squinted through her cupped hands at the dock. "They're all gathered around Ananias and the captain, and Ananias is waving his arms—good land, my pies will be burnt to a crisp!" Maria darted into the house, and I buttoned my sweater closely around my throat and went for a walk along the beach.

When I returned I met Captain Barnabas at the gate.

"Get me a bite to eat as soon as you can, Maria," said the captain as he sat down in his favorite rocking chair in the south window. "I'm going out again."

"Where?" demanded Maria crisply. "Around to High point. Ananias has been out, and he's seen a sea serpent, and—"

Maria turned a baleful eye upon her husband.

"Sea serpent?" she repeated scornfully. "Barnabas Fish, tell me the truth—do you really believe there is such a thing as a sea serpent?"

"Maria, I do," returned the captain solemnly. "I never saw one, but I have met many deep sea captains who claimed to have seen sea serpents, and 'tain't for me to gainsay them, for I know there are more wonders about, and so we beat our way around the beach to the steamboat dock.

The news of Ananias' discovery had come around the village, and when we set forth we were accompanied by a fleet of boats filled with the hardy boatmen of Quincy Harbor, for that old port has been the home of scores of sailors, and shipbuilding is still its chief industry.

Naturally, our boat led the way. Mr. Sline hovered over the wheel, his wiry little form enveloped in a pea jacket and a nautical cap pulled low over his scanty tow hair. Now and then he turned a cold blue eye in my direction, and I knew that Ananias wished that I was ashore with the other women of Quincy Harbor. Somehow Ananias Sline and I never seemed to hit it off. There was a carefully concealed mutual dislike between us.

Yet Ananias had many admirers among the fairer sex in Quincy Harbor, and there were several widows who would gladly have risked another matrimonial venture with the little story teller at the helm.

How the wind blew that October morning! How the salt water whipped our faces as the little boat breasted the waves and made for the harbor's mouth! Beyond that narrow opening all we could see was the lift of white foam from the sound.

"You'll git enough of it outside!" barked Ananias over his shoulder at me.

I made some careless reply, but the wind tore the words from my lips, and he never heard. There was a look of smug satisfaction on his mean little face as he bent over the wheel again. There was no doubt that Ananias felt that he had entirely routed me.

I was a good sailor, for I loved the salt water and had been on it more or less all my life, so I was not afraid. I was more fearful that the sea serpent would have vanished and that I would lose my only chance of ever seeing one.

Captain Barnabas sat in the bow, drinking in the wind and the spray and sunshine of the day with a sailor's love of a nor'wester.

It was not until we were well into the sound and had turned to the east, where High point jutting a pine crown-ed summit into the blue of sea and sky. The beach curved in sharply here, and once in the shadow of the point we were in the lee of the wind and the going was a little better.

Behind us the other boats rose and fell on the great waves like bobbing corks.

Ananias began to take an almost human interest in the affair at this point. He turned the wheel over to Captain Barnabas and stood in the bow, one hand bent above his brow.

He peered to the right and he scowled to the left, and suddenly he lifted his voice and bawled lustily:

"There she blows!"

Captain Barnabas motioned me to the wheel and he joined Ananias Sline.

"Where's the critter?" demanded the captain skeptically.

"Jest about two pints south of east," explained Ananias, pointing with a stubby forefinger. "See that dark spot—and that? Jipity Crusoee, but she's thirty feet long—what say, cap'n?"

Regardless of the wheel, my curiosity got the better of me, and I, too, arose and gazed in the direction toward which all of them were now gazing.

Then with a final heave and roar of water, as if the sea was weary of its denizen and would gladly shift the responsibility upon the broad shoulders of mother earth, the sea serpent came rolling in—bobbing in—growing bigger and blacker and snakier looking as it unreeled its length from the sea and was tossed on the beach.

And the doughty Ananias, upon whom I had just gazed as upon another Jonah, had come in in triumph bestride the thing stretched its prosaic length on High point beach.

Little by little I began to realize the significance of the scene. I saw Captain Barnabas land with the other boatmen. I caught great snatches of their laughter. Some of the men rolled on the beach in an excess of merriment. I saw Ananias stiffly descend from the head of his charger and tear off his pea jacket and coat, displaying narrow, sloping shoulders and puny fists to the biting wind.

Then I ran down to the stranded sea thing. I placed my foot boldly on its head, and I, too, laughed. Ananias turned upon me so fiercely that my laughter died in an apologetic gurgle.

Stretched on the beach was a long string of empty oil barrels, fifty in all. And fastened to the end barrel was a short spar, and draped on the spar was a great ragged mass of seaweed—the maned and bearded head of the serpent!

Of such things are many of our terrors made. Captain Barnabas and I could not make peace with Ananias. He returned alone in his motorboat, and we were taken back to Quincy Harbor in the big skiff of Sylvester Beebe. And all the way home we laughed at the way in which we had been taken in once again by the vivid imagination of Ananias, even while we speculated upon the reason for the casting overboard of the oil barrels with the bit of spar at one end that so cleverly masqueraded as a sea serpent.

When we reached home Captain Barnabas solemnly laid at his wife's feet an empty oil barrel and handful of seaweed.

"Maria," said he gravely, "as I promised, I have brought you the tip end of the sea serpent's tail and a lock of his hair—for remembrance!"

Maria gazed scornfully upon the souvenirs.

"If that ain't just like Ananias!" she sniffed, and then she laughed.

the glasses I could witness its capture even better than if I had been aboard the boat.

I climbed a great gray rock and perched myself there with the waves breaking about the base in splashing roars that drowned all other sounds. Therefore the capture of the sea serpent appeared to me merely as a pantomime.

I saw the motorboat nearing the harbor, and I saw the other boats draw closer together as if their occupants had planned concerted action in case the serpent should make a savage charge upon them. Many of them had guns, and one or two old whalers had harpoons like those Ananias had prepared.

I saw Ananias in the bow of the boat, one foot poised on the gunwale, the harpoon lifted for action.

Then something unexpected happened. I believe that the sea serpent had set some sort of a lashing upward blow beneath the boat, for it suddenly heaved upward and then down again, and Ananias pitched forward, as it appeared, straight into the place where the sea serpent's head should have been.

I closed my eyes then, for I knew that the water should be drenched with an ugly red after Ananias and the sea reptile met beneath the waves.

When I opened my eyes again they looked upon the strangest sight imaginable.

Ananias Sline riding triumphantly in, astride of the sea monster!

All the men were shouting together, and their voices broke above the clamor of wind and wave, but I could not understand a word they were saying.

All I knew was that the sea serpent was headed straight for the pebbly beach at my feet and that presently an incoming wave would toss it into my arms if I did not escape.

I escaped at once. With all haste I scrambled down the rock and flew up the sandy beach to an ancient cedar tree, where I clung breathlessly.

Then with a final heave and roar of water, as if the sea was weary of its denizen and would gladly shift the responsibility upon the broad shoulders of mother earth, the sea serpent came rolling in—bobbing in—growing bigger and blacker and snakier looking as it unreeled its length from the sea and was tossed on the beach.

BOLIVIA'S SACRED LAKE.

Over a Billion in Treasure Said to Be Sunk in Its Muddy Bed.

Legend has it that for more than 500 years the lake of Guativilta, at an elevation of 10,000 feet in Bolivia, has not only been held sacred to the gods of the Indian tribes, but into its waters the natives, with solemn ceremony, used to cast their gold and silver ornaments, gems and other valuables as an offering to propitiate the evil spirits. It has been estimated that in this manner treasure to the amount of $1,500,000,000 found its way to the bottom of the lake.

Many attempts were made to recover the treasure. The first was by the Spaniards 250 years ago. They tried to drain off the waters of the lake, but their engineering skill was not equal to the task. When they had drawn off all but ten feet of the water they were compelled to give up their project and take to dredging instead. They did succeed in recovering a small part of the treasure in this way.

The most modern attempt was made twenty years ago by a company of Colombians and Englishmen. By digging a tunnel 1,100 feet long down the side of the mountain they succeeded in draining the lake, but then they found to their dismay, instead of a clear bottom, twenty-five feet of mud covering the treasure. In all this company spent $75,000 and recovered but $10,000 worth of gold and jewels before they, too, abandoned the search.—Argonaut.

A VERSATILE MONARCH.

Peter the Great of Russia Was a Real Jack of All Trades.

All historians agree that Peter the Great of Russia was a man of various accomplishments. After he became emperor he worked as a shipbuilder in Amsterdam. His object was to study the construction of ships that the information gained as an ordinary workman might aid him in establishing a first class navy in his own country. He also studied anatomy and seemed to delight in dissecting human bodies. He is said to have acted as executioner on several occasions, one being when, after the siege of Narva, certain soldiers disobeyed orders, whereupon he sentenced them to death and killed them himself. He was also wont to flog criminals with his own hands.

He practiced as a surgeon in his own country, where he was accustomed to perform amputations as well as to bleed persons and draw teeth. In his pockets he usually carried a case of surgical instruments. His versatility is indicated by the relics preserved in Peter's museum, St. Petersburg, where there are ship models, a chandelier and other iron articles and ivory figures, all his own construction. In the same place there is at present on exhibition a wax model of the great emperor wearing a pair of shoes and a wig made by himself.—London Standard.

Willing to Oblige.

Brilliant sunshine made the garden party enjoyable. The garden really was a garden, and, though most of the guests clustered on the lawn, one or two wiser people sauntered around the rose bordered paths.

Two of these were seated in a quiet part of the garden enjoying the scent of the flowers and the solitude. They were engaged. Presently a mutual friend sauntered down the path and noticed them.

"You two seem to be enjoying yourselves over here all alone," said he.

"We are," said the girl and, being a girl, managed to look pleased to see him. "Won't you join us?"

"Sorry, I can't," answered the friend, "not being a clergyman. But I'll go and find one if you say so."—New York Mail.

Couldn't Afford to Run.

When Jacob M. Dickinson, formerly secretary of war, as a member of the Alaskan boundary tribunal was called upon suddenly to make his argument because Sir Edward Carson had concluded his remarks one day ahead of time he began by telling a story: "So far from feeling any sense of confidence," he said to the president of the court, "I am in a position very deeply to sympathize with the feeling of the Confederate soldier who, when the battle line was sweeping forward in the last fearful charge at Chickamauga and a rabbit jumped up and ran through to the rear, cried out: 'Run, s'ontontall! If I did not have any more character at stake than you have I would run too!'"

Remembered It.

"What," said a teacher to a boy with a slow memory, who had tried in vain to tell the name of the schoolmaster; "can't you remember your master's name?"

"N-no, sir."

"My name is Brown, blockhead!"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, now see if you can repeat it. What is my name?"

"Brown Blockhead, sir."—Exchange.

Youth and Age.

Boys leave the farm perhaps because they want to see more of the world than 100 acres, though when most men are fifty years old they'd be quite willing to trade the world for 100 acres.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Bunched Them.

During a Catholic convention O'Sullivan got a job as a taxi driver. One day at the hotel he got a party of four that wanted to go to four different churches immediately. One wanted to go to St. Joseph's another to St. Paul's, another to St. Peter's, and the other to St. Mary's. O'Sullivan drove them to All Saints' church.

No Doubt About That. "I wouldn't say she is pretty," said the Simple Mug, as the light-haired woman of doubtful age handed her money to the conductor, "but she is passing fare."

Queerest of Trades.

Mr. Chesterton once wrote a book called "The Club of Queer Trades." One of the queerest trades in real life is that of the elderly South London man who stands daily at a very congested crossroad and assists children over the thoroughfare. Some 16 years ago he started this occupation out of sheer benevolence, and has been doing it ever since. The small sums and the Christmas gifts he receives from the parents of the children serve to eke out his pension.

Big Show Saturday Night

1623 Old Weymouth 1914

As we enter upon our 22nd year of Service as distributors of High Class Foods to the Public, we take this occasion to thank the people of "Old Weymouth," and all others for their ever increasing Good Will.

HUNT'S MARKET GROCERY, WASHINGTON SQ. WEYMOUTH.

TO WISH YOU WELL

we publish this, our New Year's greetings to you

We feel that this is a time when we should all pause in the hurry and strain of active life and think for a moment of the human side of business.

And so we publish this for the very human reason that we want to say a friendly "hello" to you and with heart-deep sincerity extend the happiest greetings of the season and wish you the pleasantest of good things for the year ahead.

We believe in making friends as well as customers in business, and we try to make our store service exhibit that spirit distinctly by being just as sincerely helpful and pleasant as we can make it.

So here's a handclasp across the newspaper to those we can't reach in person.

May you win more friends, prosperity and happiness in 1914 than ever before!

PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

Reynolds Post 58 G. A. R. and Reynolds Relief Corps 102 Jointly Install Officers.

The zero weather of Tuesday night did not prevent about 200 people assembling at G. A. R. hall to join in or witness the installation of officers for the ensuing year.

Interesting events previous to the installation were the afternoon meeting of the corps, a grand reception of officers and guests and a well served supper with nearly 200 people at the tables.

Adjutant Withereff was the installing officer for the Post with Mr. Montgomery O. D. and the installed were: Andrew Culley, Commander; I. H. Walker, S. V. C.; L. W. Cain, J. V. C.; Oliver Burrell, Adj.; Elbridge Nash, Q. M.; W. B. Denton, surgeon; J. Q. Spear, chaplain; Bradford Hawes, S. M.; A. H. Belcher, Q. M. S.; J. M. Whitcomb, P. L.; David Dunbar, O. D.; W. H. Moran, O. G.

The charter members of Post 58 were: Gen. James L. Bates, John H. Whelan, Francis B. Pratt, John D. Rea, Geo. A. Holbrook, Andrew J. Garey, Geo. W. French, Geo. R. Davis, Geo. F. Maynard and Charles W. Hastings and on the 14th of July, 1914 the Post will be forty six years old. *Dead

Owing to delay of trains Dept. President Mrs. Maria Kendall, who was booked as installing officer for the corps did not arrive in time and the work was performed by Mrs. Harriet Tuttle with Miss Hattie Callahan as conductor and the installed were:

Agnes F. Baldwin, president; Annie E. Jordan, S. V. P.; Ida L. Keene, J. V. P.; Eliza Ferris, chaplain; Mary E. Smith, treasurer; Charlotte B. Stoddard, conductor; Isabel Woolaver, assistant conductor; Angie Bouldry, guard; Ellen E. Kidder, assistant guard; Estelle W. Richards, secretary; Margaret Culley, patriotic instructor; Marion F. Bailey, press correspondent; Mary R. Flint, musician; color bearers, No. 1, Mary Trainor; No. 2, Sadie Wolfe; No. 3, May Barrows; No. 4, Alice Hellbeck.

Among the pleasing events of the hour was the presentation of a beautiful basket and gold thimble to Mrs. Baldwin, a silver plate to Dept. President Kimball and a gold star to Commander Culley. The latter was presented in verse by one of Commander Culley's grandchildren.

Commander Culley was born in Milksham, England, in 1844 but came to this country when a lad of 12 years and after two years residence in Lowell came to Weymouth which has since been his home. He enlisted early in the Civil War in Co. G, 4th Mass. Heavy Artillery and saw active service in the several fortifications in and around Washington, D. C. Received honorable discharge June 17th, 1865 and since that time has been a respected citizen of North Weymouth taking a deep interest in all which pertained to the good of that place.

Elbridge Nash's installation as Quartermaster was his 44th consecutive and he has handled large amounts of charity and other funds to his honor and credit to the Post he represents.

B. H. A. A. Dancing Party.

An invitation dancing party was held last Saturday evening, in Pythian hall, by the B. H. A. A. A very good gathering was present to enjoy the evening. At the end of the hall, which was handsomely decorated with evergreen and hemlock, a large, smiling moon was skillfully arranged. The committee in charge consisted of Howard Richards, Edward Drown and Edward Sweet. The matrons were Mrs. Grundstrom, Mrs. Richards and Mrs. Drown. Richards' orchestra furnished excellent music, playing twenty dances and encores. Much praise was given Miss Nellie Howe on account of her remarkable ability at the piano.

C. M. A. Wins 49 to 34

Boy Scouts of America Troop No. 2.

The regular meeting of the troop was held Tuesday evening. The manager of the basketball team reported new games added to the schedule. Here is the schedule of games still to be played: Jan. 17, Cunningham gym at Milton; Jan. 24, Quincy Y. M. C. A. at Quincy; Jan. 31, Maverick Boys' club of East Boston at Clapp Memorial gym; Feb. 7, Episcopal church boys at Hingham; Feb. 14, Malden Y. M. C. A. at Clapp Memorial; Feb. 21, Wakefield Y. M. C. A. at Clapp Memorial. It is expected that the remaining games still unscheduled will be played at home.

A letter from former Scout Master Commons was read by Scout Master MacFann in which he wished the Scouts success for the new year. Mr. Commons expects to take up scout work next summer at Whitinsville, where he is now pastor of the Congregational church.

An invitation has been extended to the troop by the management of the Clapp Memorial association to hold their meetings at the building where a room will be furnished for their own use. It was unanimously voted to accept the invitation and to extend a vote of thanks to the management for their kindness and generosity.

It was voted to hold a public meeting the last of January. Parents, friends and all interested in the scouts will be welcome. An address will be given by a member of a troop committee a musical program will be furnished and refreshments will be served.

Plans are being made for the presentation of a play in the early spring. Mrs. Robert S. Hoffman has kindly offered her services as coach and playwright. The play will be a practical demonstration of scout work arranged in dramatic form.

It is expected that the next meeting will be held at the Clapp Memorial next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is desired as matters of importance will be brought before the meeting.

Clapp Memorial Wins At Braintree.

The Clapp Memorial association basketball team of East Weymouth, journeyed to Braintree last Thursday night, and downed their nearest rivals, the Braintree A. A., in Long's hall, by the score of 49 to 34. Schutz and Bumpus played extremely well for the East Weymouth quintet, while Scollard and Ness excelled for the losing aggregation.

Monday Club.

The regular meeting of the Monday club will be held on Monday afternoon, January 19th, in the Masonic Temple, East Weymouth.

The Hon. Harvey H. Baker will be the speaker of the afternoon, his subject being "Juvenile Court."

Mrs. Gad Robinson is to sing and Mrs. John W. Thomas will be the hostess.

Reception and Ball.

The Davis Bates Clapp Memorial Friday evening dancing class held a most successful reception and ball at the Clapp Memorial hall in East Weymouth, last Friday evening, January the ninth, under the direction of Miss Zella Hall of Boston the class instructor. Refreshments were served during the evening, by the ushers. The guests were received by Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Fraser and Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Chase Jr. Earl Bates, Thayer McBride, Lewis Loring and Wendall Totman were ushers.

Bowling at the Clapp Memorial.

On the Clapp Memorial alleys last Monday evening, in the two men candle pin tournament, team 9, Rev. E. J. Yaezer and Albert M. Newcomb, won from team 11, William M. Reamey and W. A. Hodges, taking two out of three strings, with a total of 545 pins to 491. Rev. E. J. Yaezer was high man of the match, with a three string total of 279 pins. In the other match of the evening, Lou Loring and Tom Noonan won from Harry Bates and Louis Carter, by capturing all three strings and total 512 to 468. Lou Loring was high man, with a single of 109 and three strings of 278. By winning last Monday evening, Loring and Noonan are assured of the championship of the two men league of the association.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

Hiram B. Raymond Installed for 43rd Consecutive Year as Treasurer of Crescent Lodge I. O. O. F. Last Thursday Night.

District Deputy Grand Master Andrew S. Johnston, accompanied by George C. Ela as grand marshal, Theodore C. Hay as grand chaplain; Charles B. Houghton as grand secretary, J. L. Smith as grand treasurer, Harry H. Legg as grand guardian, James F. Baker as financial secretary, George D. Bagley as grand herald and Harry A. Collette as grand warden paid an official visit to Crescent Lodge I. O. O. F. at the Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth last Thursday night and installed the following officers-elect and appointed of Crescent lodge:

Henry C. Pratt, Noble Grand; Oliver J. Horton, vice grand; Clement Gardner, warden; Irving H. Tirrell, conductor; Burleigh G. French, chaplain; James Andrews, left scene supporter; James Munroe, right scene supporter; C. Lewis French, right supporter to noble grand; Archie French, left supporter to noble grand; George Abbott, right supporter to vice grand; William Diersch, left supporter to vice grand; Charles Phillips, inside guardian; George Simmons, outside guardian; Clayton Merchant, recording secretary; James B. French, financial secretary; Hiram B. Raymond, treasurer.

Mr. Raymond's installation as treasurer makes his 43rd consecutive occasion of being inducted into the treasurers' office. After the installation exercises, a collation was served in the banquet hall and a program of music and speechmaking was held.

Norfolk Club Splits Honors With Union Glee Club.

Honors were even in the pool, billiard and card tournament games between the Norfolk club of South Weymouth, and the Union Glee club, at the latter's quarters in Rockland, last Thursday evening, each making four points. In the series to date, the Norfolk boys are leading 14 to 10 points.

Last Thursday evening at pool, Albert Billings of the Glee club, defeated Elliott Veazie of the Norfolk club, 60 to 56, but Frank Loud of the South Weymouth squad came back strong in his match, and won over Emery Gorham 60 to 57. Both billiard games went to the Union club teams. Walter Winslow won from Arthur Reed 100 to 75, and J. F. Anderson won from Charles Merritt 100 to 50.

At the whist, Frank and Richie Howe of the Norfolk aggregation downed John J. Owens and Nathaniel Groce 8 points to 2, and Fred Rivinius and Thomas V. Nash of South Weymouth lost to their opponents, F. C. Lewis and S. E. Eastman, 7 points to 6.

At cribbage, E. Thayer and Louis Jones upheld the honor of the South Weymouth club, by winning from Charles F. Stetson and Edward Alken, 3 games to 2, and C. Shaw and Samuel Robinson of Norfolk, triumphed over M. L. Poole and James S. Gray, by taking two out of the three games.

The Norfolk teams and about fifty rooters enjoyed the trip to Rockland in a special car.

Some Charges Sustained.

The office of the Selectmen was the center of attraction to as many people as could occupy the room on Saturday. The attraction being a hearing asked for by Officer John D. Walsh on the several charges filed against him reflecting on his standing as an officer.

There were five charges with which the public must be quite familiar by this time. The hearing began early in the day and continued until quite dark. A. P. Worthen Esq., represented the town and Wm. P. Kelley Esq. was counsel for Mr. Walsh.

There were many witnesses put on the stand and as usual however much talk either or any of them may have made previous to taking the witness stand their memories became sadly deficient while on the stand.

The Selectmen held an executive session on Monday and after a review of the evidence sustained Mr. Walsh's suspension as made by Chief of Police Butler, found him guilty on three of the five charges.

Patrolman Walsh remains suspended from the Weymouth police force without pay till Feb. 1.

He was exonerated on the charges of being under the influence of liquor while on duty and of soliciting money from the management of Cedarcrest Inn. He was found guilty on the charges of being away from his post of duty on the nights of Nov. 13 and 14, and violating police rules and regulations number 19 and being in a mutual assault on Nov. 15, with an officer of a neighboring town.

Masonic Temple Dedicated

Large Gathering of the Masonic Fraternity Joins in Dedicatory Exercises

MASONIC TEMPLE, EAST WEYMOUTH

The waited for event in the history of the new Masonic Temple at East Weymouth took place last night and will be recorded as the most brilliant, impressive and instructive affair in connection with Masonry in the South Shore district.

It was early evident that there would be no lack of numbers to lend enthusiasm to the occasion as all parts of the building were thronged with people who were loud in their praise of it and its equipments.

A 6.30 a line was formed and marched to the banquet hall and shortly 300 people were seated at the tables where an hour was spent in discussing the menu served.

At the conclusion of the banquet all repaired to the main hall where most of the dedicatory exercises were performed by officers of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts.

Town Business.

At the Monday meeting of the Selectmen a request was received from the North Weymouth Improvement association asking that a town way be laid out from Lovell to North street. The Board reviewed the proposed route on Tuesday and will report later.

Helen G. Powers and others of the Waikover club asked for a permit to hold a dancing party in the Town hall, Feb. 19th and the permit was granted.

A petition was received from the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. for three catch basins in Independence square and action was postponed on the same until spring time.

A number of the residents of East street asked that the Town Warrant contain an article for the proper lighting of that street.

On petition of Charles R. Greeley and others for a new town way at South Weymouth to be known as Lavewood avenue a hearing will be granted on January 26th.

Again a complaint was made to the Board in regard to the building known as the "herring house" on Commercial street in East Weymouth and action will be taken for its repair or removal.

The Quincy hospital authorities sent in an inquiry as to who is responsible for the expense incident to the care and treatment of Eugene C. Loud at that place.

The Bay State Street Railway Co. will be asked to improve the condition of Washington street from Lincoln square to Washington square.

Burial of Mrs. Lucia A. Nash.

The funeral of Mrs. Lucia Ann Nash, widow of William Nash, took place at her home, 857 Front street, last Saturday afternoon. The services were conducted by Rev. Albert V. House, pastor of the Union Congregational church. Delegations were present from Abigail Rebeckah Lodge I. O. O. F., Reynolds W. R. C., Old Colony Women's club, Mayflower Chapter O. E. S., and the D. A. R. The bearers were Theron L. Tirrell, J. Ellis Gardner, N. R. Ellis and Marshall P. Sprague. Interment was in the Highland cemetery.

Weymouth Wins Again.

The East Bridgewater high school basketball team was easily defeated in the Clapp Memorial gym in East Weymouth, last Tuesday afternoon, by the Weymouth high school five. The score was 54 to 18.

Score, Weymouth 54, East Bridgewater 18. Goals from floor, Richardson 5, Rieley, Deane 6, Condrick 5, Rosnell, Baker 2, Frahar 6, Murphy 4, Kavaney, Hennessy, Dechaubeau. Goals from fouls, Rieley 2, Murphy 4. Referee, Fabyan. Umpire, Jones. Scorer, Sampson. Timer, Newhall. Time, 15m halves.

NORTH WEYMOUTH CHURCH BURNED.

St. Jerome's Church a Total Ruin. Loss About $8,000.

At an early hour last Sunday morning, St. Jerome's Catholic church in North Weymouth, was totally destroyed by fire, together with the organ, altar, and all other fixtures and furniture.

The fire was discovered shortly after 3 o'clock, by Patrolman George Nash, who pulled in an alarm from box 18. When the fire department arrived, the entire building was in flames.

The fire is supposed to have started from an over heated furnace, and in all probability had been burning for considerable time. The loss is estimated at about $8,000, and is covered by insurance.

Some time ago the parish purchased a lot of land on River and Bridge streets, and it is expected that the new church will be built on that site.

The building which was destroyed, had a seating capacity of about 300, and the matter of a new building has been considered for some time.

The auto combination from Ward 3, with J. Ralph Bacon at the wheel, made the run from Lincoln square to the fire in four minutes. The firemen were badly hampered in fighting the blaze, by the cold and also lack of water.

The hall of the Engine house in Ward 1 was utilized by the people for church services last Sunday.

Dead By Roadside.

The body of Patrick O'Leary a carpenter, residing at 54 Parnell street, employed for 30 years by the American Agricultural and Chemical Company, was found last Monday evening about 8 o'clock on Cliff road by Michael and Jerry Dwyer and Fred Sorbren of North Weymouth.

They took the body to a boarding house on Rose Cliff where Medical Examiner J. C. Fraser of East Weymouth examined it and pronounced death due to natural causes. O'Leary had been working on the company's new building at Fort Point and was evidently returning to his board-place on Parnell street. It is thought he has a sister living in Chelsea.

Poultry Keeping Competition For Boys and Girls.

During the past year, there were very nearly 20,000 boys and girls under 18 years of age in Massachusetts, who were engaged in some phase of agricultural or horticultural club work, under the direction of Prof. O. A. Morton of the Extension Service of the Massachusetts Agricultural college, working in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. There were seven divisions made last year, and the boy and girl making the highest score in each, was awarded a free trip to Washington, D. C., the second highest received a week's trip to points of interest in New England, and the third one, a free week at the Agricultural college. Now is to be added the eighth section, the boys' and girls' poultry clubs. The first contest in this section will begin February 1st, 1914, and continue for six months. It is open to any and all boys and girls in Massachusetts, who are between the ages of 10 and 18 years of age. Contestants are at liberty to compete with either 6, 12, 25 or 50 hens or pullets. Record must be kept of the kind and amount of all feed, of labor, cost of house and repairs, value and weight of fowls at beginning and end of contest, number and value of eggs gathered, incidental expenses, total income, total outlay and profit. Record cards will be furnished by the college. The boy or girl who has had no experience with hens, need not hesitate to enter this competition, for a "Primer of Instruction," giving full directions as to construction of house, fittings and yard, feeds and feeding, poultry hygiene and poultry management, has just been printed, and a copy will be sent to each contestant. This primer has been prepared by Prof. J. C. Graham, of the college, and the directions are just as plain as it was possible to make them. The first prize for the State will be a trip to Washington, D. C. Then for each county there will be two prizes, the first a New England trip, and the second a week at the college. In addition to this, where there are a sufficient number in a town, ribbons and settings of eggs from pure-bred stock will be awarded. Every boy and girl who reads this article, should write at once to Prof. O. A. Morton, Amherst, Mass., asking for an application blank.

Gas Output.

The Old Colony Gas company reports output for the six months ended December 31st, 1913, 31,985,000 cubic feet, compared with 22,009,500 cubic feet for the same period last year, showing an increase of over 45 per cent.

Essential Problem of State Appears to Be Financial

KEEPING DOWN OF TAX RATE

Governor Will Give Immediate Attention to the Matter—Battle Over Proposed Central Purchasing Agency—Flood of Petitions For Legislation—Civil Service Extension

Governor Walsh had hardly got through three days of his administration before he turned to Lieutenant Governor Barry and remarked that, stripped of all political fog, the real essential problem of a state administration is the financial side of it.

The attention of the governor had been called to the fact that the requests from heads of departments had mounted up to about $22,000,000, and that other requests were coming into the legislature which were pulling that figure up to around $30,000,000.

And in this connection the governor was obliged to reflect that the state had raised last year the sum of $8,000,000 only by taxation, and that if the state tax goes above that this year there will be a disagreeable noise from the people that pay the taxes.

The governor wants to arrive at permanent economy by a substantial cut in the number of commissions and a central purchasing agency. This, of course, is all for the future. The immediate problem is to keep down the tax rate for the current year.

Chairman Cole of the commission on economy and efficiency has advised the governor that this can be done by sinking the knife into the appropriations for new buildings, by cutting appropriations for maintenance and by holding down salary bills.

The Unpaid Boards' Fight

One of the prettiest fights in the line of public service is bound to come over the suggestion of a central purchasing agency and the abolition of the unpaid boards.

The principle of unpaid boards is well established in the state and in cities and towns. Upon them are many worthy people, some of whom pay a great deal of attention to the institutions which they serve, and some of whom pay very little, if any.

The commission on economy and efficiency has criticized them rather severely, but they have strong friends in the legislature, and are showing signs of preparing for a hard campaign.

White Slave Reports

The commission for the study of the so-called white slave question has asked for more time to report and has been granted more time, so that the white slave report will not be sent to the legislature until about the first of February.

The medical side of the question is being covered by Dr. Walter Fernald of Waverley, while the legal and court side of it is in the hands of Edwin Mulready of the probate commission in Boston.

While the commission is saying very little about itself it is understood that the reason for the delay is due to the study of many cases of social evil.

New Immigration Law

Drastic laws against the exploitation of immigrants is to be the keynote of the report of the immigration commission. This prevention is to be accomplished through the medium of a permanent immigration commission similar to the one which has existed in the state of New York for a number of years. All persons doing a promotion business with immigrants must be licensed, just as the foreign banking institutions are chartered by the state. The commission finds that the most fruitful source of trouble comes from the sellers of fake real estate transactions and small stores.

Get Your Bill Ready

Next Saturday is the last day for filing legislation for the coming year. It is well that this warning should be sounded, because there are annually scores of people who walk laboriously up Beacon hill with some pet measure, only to find that the time for the admission of new legislation has expired.

After the time limit bills can be introduced only under a suspension of the rules, and that somebody having no sufficient excuse for forgetting the rules suspended. It seems that not many people are forgetting, however, inasmuch as the number of petitions for legislation are several hundred higher than they were last year at this time. The last time is Jan. 17 at 5 if you want your grievance solved by this legislature.

Stretching Civil Service

Last year the legislature extended the cloak of the civil service law over the assistant assessors. Some of the politicians did not like the bill, but those who happened to be holding the assessing jobs liked it very well. Now along come the officers, attendants and employes of state institutions for the care of the insane.

The state institutions have been among the last to be caught up in the civil service snowball, which, in the course of the next few years, will have touched practically every branch of the public service. Senator McCarthy of Marboro presents the bill.

Again the Massachusetts Association of Chiefs of Police petition that the civil service act and rules shall be extended to superintendents, chiefs of police or city marshals outside of Boston.

Eighty Percent From Massachusetts

Ten states besides this one are represented in the freshman class at Amherst agricultural college this year. It is of interest to note that 80 percent of the class comes from Massachusetts, but the number of non-residents is increasing in spite of the tuition fee which has been charged the last two years.

All the counties in Massachusetts, except Dukes and Nantucket, are represented in the class. Over 80 percent of those who have entered intend to follow some form of agriculture or horticulture, and most of the students who have stated their vocation intend to engage in agriculture.

New Telephone Bill

Representative William N. Cronin of South Boston has a cute little telephone bill that ought to make as much history as the lifting jack bill or the drinking cup bill for railroad trains. The Cronin bill provides that each telephone shall be provided with an indicator to show the number of calls that have been used. Inasmuch as service is measured now like light or water, the bill ought to make quite a little trouble for the telephone companies.

Carr a Record Orator

Representative Edward Carr of Hopkinton so far has made a record as a house orator. He has spoken several times on every phase of every question before the house and gives promise of putting the record of such prolific orators as Thomas J. Giblin completely in eclipse. Carr is a progressive and a leader. He presided over the caucus of his party members and tried hard to keep the six erring sheep in the fold. When that effort failed he told Speaker Cushing that the Progressive organization did not want to be represented by any of the six on important committees of the legislature.

Under Suspicion

Edward N. Dahlberg of Brockton is a seventh Progressive that is being closely watched as a probable heretic. Dahlberg had the temerity to remark once that he thought Cushing ought to be elected. Since then he has been caught talking openly with prominent Republicans and some that were not so prominent. While he has voted right, his actions have left him open to grave suspicion.

An Open Council

For the first time in the history of the state the meetings of the legislative council have been open newspaper men. This step should be regarded as sufficiently progressive to please the most particular and regarded by those who are anxious for the opening as but only a minor of the abolition of the secret sessions.

Lieutenant Governor Barry should be the motion for public session and he ought to know whether they should be public or not because he has been a member of the council and used to talk of its deliberations sometimes to the discomfiture of his colleagues.

If the council should ultimately be abolished it would mean the conferring of some of its powers upon the senate and abolishing others outright. The power of appointment would not be subject to confirmation. Pardons would be heard in the senate. This is the procedure in a number of states.

Against Board of Health

The state board of health, which underwent a hot fire last year from those who wanted to reorganize it along political lines, fared very well at the hands of the tuberculosis committee, which has made its report. But there is still another fight coming over the Haines bill to reorganize the board.

There are not the same forces lined up behind the Haines bill that were behind the bill of last year, however. The trouble with the state board undoubtedly is that it needs a publicity expert to tell the people how many valuable things it really does. Outside of Massachusetts the state board has about as high a reputation as any in the country. And so it has abroad.

The Pardon Policy

Governor Walsh has taken up his first pardon case, and the wonder grows as to how his record on pardons will compare with that of Governor Foss. Year before last there were ninety-eight pardons granted, and the conservative members of the council and the conservative papers treated the policy as too liberal. Last year the pardons fell in number to sixty-eight. Mr. Walsh has been lieutenant governor with Mr. Foss and has paid a great deal of attention to the work of the institutions, particularly the prisons. He is well qualified, if anybody is, to say whether the liberal policy of pardons shall continue, or whether we shall go back to the close view of pardons that was formerly held by the governors. It is a fair guess that the policy will be liberal.

Distributes Forest Fire Cost

George Webster of Boxford has filed a bill that will make him popular with towns whose valuation exceeds $1,750,000 and whose danger from forest fires is a real one. The Webster bill provides that these towns shall be reimbursed to the extent of one-half what they expend for putting out forest fires. This bill really spreads out over the state the cost of fighting forest fires, and results in the populous cities paying the tax as well as the towns which are directly affected. As a state tax raiser it will meet with careful consideration from the legislative ways and means committee.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

Cabbage makes a good green food for ducks in winter.

There is nothing better than well cured clover grown or second growth clover hay for chickens. This should be cut up fine and steamed.

Be generous to the colts. Give them plenty of oats, plenty of good hay and plenty of exercise, and they will repay it all in good scriptural measure, heaped up, pressed down, shaken together and running over.

With the opening of the New year and the approach of spring, the farmer will find himself busier than at any other time before the ground is ready, and among the most important matters to be considered is the improvement of the live stock and the varieties of crops.

So much is said nowadays about pure bred poultry, that some may begin to think that there is no use of keeping any other. This is not true, as a common hen well cared for, will do as well as a pure bred neglected. Our aim should be to make the most of what we have, to improve it, to care for it and get out of it all that is possible.

The days are short at this season, and if hens are not active and do not work a full day, they are not apt to secure enough food and drink to keep them in good flesh and furnish material for eggs. As soon as they come off the perches in the morning, they should be furnished with warm water or warm milk, at least a drink that is not ice cold.

Every man owning a lot, however small, should embrace the earliest opportunity to plant apples, pears, plums, cherries, grapes, etc., carefully selected for their rich qualities and productiveness. They are sources of pleasure and profit too; they are healthful necessities of life, and they are luxuries within the reach of all.

With the large number of kinds of choice fruit that is now competing with the fruit grown in New England, the pear seems to be less in demand than formerly. Fewer varieties also are found available than a few years ago. Of those that stand at the head of the list, the Sweet, Bosc, Sheldon, Seckle and Hovey are the most generally grown and bring the highest prices.

Last year only eight states raised more bushels of corn per acre than Vermont. For the past four years the average number of states raising more corn per acre than Vermont was six. Vermont's average yield for the four year period mentioned was nearly twice the average yield for the whole country. The average price in Vermont, paid farmers Dec. 1st, for the past four years, was 43.6 per cent greater than the average price paid throughout the United States.

It is quite important in the feeding of cattle that the ration include some succulent material, such as fresh grass, root crops or silage. A feed containing a large amount of natural water is not only more easily digested, but is also more palatable, and besides, serves the useful purpose of keeping the whole system of the animal in a state of healthy activity. A silage fed animal is rarely troubled with constipation or other digestive disturbances, the coat is noticeably sleek and soft, and the skin is soft and pliable. It is a well known fact, that a cow reaches her maximum production when she has access to a good pasture. The cheapest and best substitute for fresh pasture grass during the fall and winter is silage.

According to R. V. Mitchell of New Hampshire State college, the present methods of fattening birds for market, used by many poultrymen, are not economical. Most farmers of today, if they attempt to fatten their birds to sell, use whole corn. By this method the fattening is slow, and the cost in many cases amounts to an expenditure of 30 cents for every pound gained in weight. Mr. Mitchell says, however, that by the proper method, the fowls may be made to gain from 25 to 40 per cent of their weight in two weeks, at an expenditure of from 5 to 7 cents a pound—which means profit, whereas the other method means merely breaking even or loss. Finely ground meals, such as corn meal, poor grade flour and ground oats, act as great fatteners according to his experience.

Removing a Cork.

To take a cork out of a bottle when there is neither a corkscrew nor a knife at hand, stick two safety pins together diagonally through the cork, opposite to each other. By pulling on the upper part of the two pins you can remove the cork easily.

An Abduction
 It Proved a Quicker Process Than Extradition
 By HELOISE BRAYTON

Evelyn Wheaton lost her mother when Evelyn was a baby, and her father died when she was seventeen. She was heir to a large fortune, and everybody knows that a rich minor under a natural protector is an object of plunder on the part of all unscrupulous persons. Mr. Wheaton had placed great confidence in one Peter Whitbeck and his wife, Mary, and, knowing that his days were numbered, made a will appointing the Whitbecks Evelyn's guardians with the management of her property till she should become twenty-one years old.

Mrs. Whitbeck was a covetous woman. It is quite probable that if it had not been for her the incidents contained in this story would not have taken place. Wheaton's confidence in Peter Whitbeck's integrity might have been justified had not the latter fallen under the influence of his wife. As it was, no sooner had Wheaton passed away than Mrs. Whitbeck began to plot to get possession of Evelyn's fortune. The will gave her every opportunity, inasmuch as in addition to giving her husband the care of the estate it gave her the care of Evelyn herself, for by its terms the heiress was to live with the Whitbecks till she attained her majority.

The residence of these persons was in Vermont. At the time of her father's death Evelyn was attending school at Northampton, Mass., and desired to finish the academic year there. To this the Whitbecks made no objection. Mrs. Whitbeck was anxious to get her bearings as to the will and study out the best way of getting the fortune or as much of it as possible into her possession.

But, though Evelyn had but a few months left at school, that happened which later gave her a champion. She met Arthur Pendleton, then a law student, and the two became engaged. Pendleton was not looking for a fortune by marriage. Indeed, he did not know that Evelyn had any property until some time after she had returned to her home and written him concerning some suspicions she had gathered as to the disposition of it by her guardian. From certain moves made by the Whitbecks which Evelyn could not understand it was evident to Pendleton that something was wrong with the administration of the estate.

Evelyn had not been intimate with the Whitbecks before her father's death and was not disposed to communicate the fact of her engagement to them. At any rate, she put it off from time to time. But certain well filled envelopes coming to the home addressed in a man's hand made Mrs. Whitbeck suspicious, and, steaming the paste on one of them, she read the inclosure to learn that Pendleton was explaining to Evelyn that from information she had given him he was sure her guardian was acting contrary to law.

Mrs. Whitbeck resealed the envelope and returned it as she had found it to Evelyn. The former was in frequent consultation with David Miller, a lawyer who gave his services on promise of being well paid in case he could secure the property for her without subjecting her to criminal procedure. After opening Evelyn's letter she went to this attorney and told him what Pendleton had said. Miller advised her to change her residence to Canada. This would be advantageous in case her husband or she should be proceeded against criminally, and it would also be of benefit in enabling her to keep possession of Evelyn herself, for it might in time be necessary for them to take the ground that the heiress was incapable of managing her property.

When it was announced to Evelyn that Mr. Whitbeck's affairs needed a change of residence to Canada, and that the removal was to be made at once, she was appalled. She refused to go, but was informed that by the terms of her father's will she must live with the Whitbecks until she attained her majority. This and the fact that she had no other home won her over.

The Whitbecks took up their residence in a small town not far north of the boundary line between the United States and Canada. It was not long before Evelyn learned that they were giving out reports that she had been acting queerly. She determined to leave them at once, and without communicating her design, made her preparations for flight. But Mrs. Whitbeck, who was watching her, suspected her intention and, searching her room, discovered concealed a suit case containing such articles as one would need on a journey.

The town in which these persons lived was in the province of Ontario, some ten miles from the northern limit of New York. It had been chosen by the Whitbecks because it was the headquarters of a body of the mounted Canadian police, and should Evelyn attempt to escape them this force would be available to prevent her doing so.

When Mrs. Whitbeck learned of Evelyn's intended flight she notified the police that the girl had shown symptoms of insanity and she feared might attempt to take her life. If they saw her making for the St. Lawrence river, which was but a mile or two distant, they were to bring her back. The consequence was that Evelyn had not got out of town before a policeman stopped her and, not heeding her protest, took her to Mrs. Whitbeck, who, with a show of great concern and tenderness, took her in and locked her up.

The villainy of the game that was being played was now apparent to Evelyn, and she was filled with consternation. That which she most dreaded was being put in a lunatic asylum and kept there while her guardians appropriated her property. But such a course at present did not accord with their plans. They were working with their lawyer to shift about certain property by legal process with a view to finally getting it into the hands of a confederate. What most interested them was in keeping the heiress with them and under such strict duress that she could get no one to help her. Between her and Mrs. Whitbeck there was only the thin pretense of the latter that she believed Evelyn to be under such a nervous strain as to need constant watching.

Evelyn's letters were intercepted, but it is more difficult to prevent one from sending a letter than receiving one. Evelyn wrote her situation to Pendleton and dropped it, with a coin, to a boy passing under her window. He posted it for her, and the next day it was in her fiancé's hands.

Pendleton was now in possession of the facts of the case, but he was appalled at the difficulties in the way of saving his betrothed. Ordinary legal technicalities are often discouraging, but when to these is added a problem of extradition they are next to hopeless. Added to this, Pendleton had no fortune of his own, and Evelyn's was in the hands of her jailers.

There was but one hope—kidnaping. On this he resolved, but soon after entering upon his preparations learned that the town where Evelyn was held a captive was the headquarters of a Canadian police force. Nevertheless, since there was no other plan open to him, he resolved to undertake it.

Pendleton needed an assistant and looked among his acquaintances for a suitable person to aid him. His choice fell upon Walter Bankhead, a man of nerve and energy. Bankhead, having consented, went ahead and hired the fastest team he could find. The same evening Pendleton joined him, and they crossed the St. Lawrence river by ferry, hiring the ferryman for a good sum to be on the Canadian shore by midnight, ready to push off at a moment's notice. Midway between the river and the point of their attack they hired another team to act as a relay to be waiting in the road for them on their return.

The two young men entered the town at twelve o'clock at night, inquired the location of Whitbeck's house, and on finding it Pendleton went to the door and rang the bell. Bankhead stood behind him. Whitbeck opened the door, and Pendleton dashed upstairs. Bankhead held Whitbeck cowed behind a door, then another. A third door he opened and kicked it open. There he found Evelyn, who had not gone to bed. Taking her by the arm, he led her downstairs. Mrs. Whitbeck, in dishabille, opened her bedroom door and, seeing what was going on, ran to a front window and shouted for the police.

In a twinkling the two men got the girl into the conveyance and had covered a mile before Bankhead, looking back, announced that they were followed. Evelyn, whose surprise had worn off and who was eager for the success of her kidnaping, gave a little scream, but a word from Pendleton calmed her. At the same time he brought the whip down upon the horses' haunches.

Now commenced a race between the fugitives and the mounted police. The police gained and had diminished the distance between them and the fugitives by more than half when the latter reached the relay standing in the road. Not half a minute was consumed in making the transfer, and they were off again with a fresh team. By this time the horses of the policemen, having gone over five miles, were a trifle jaded, and the kidnapers began to draw away from them. A bullet whistled over the fugitives' heads.

"Good!" exclaimed Bankhead. "When a policeman resorts to firing he knows he's going to lose his quarry."
 "But we have a river to cross," suggested Pendleton.

A single horse was heard clattering ahead of the others, and a man slowly came nearer. Bankhead fired a shot over his head and he evidently feared being hit, for he fell back. After this the distance between the kidnapers and the police grew visibly less, though the latter kept on, doubtless hoping to take the party at the river. But the ferryman was ready, and the fugitives, abandoning their team, jumped into the stern of the boat, the oars bent and boat and load shot out into the broad river. When the police reached the bank the fugitives were more than halfway over.

Pendleton and Evelyn were married as soon as they reached the south bank of the river. Bankhead being best man. There were no flowers, no gifts, no bridal veil, no orange blossoms, and yet this simple wedding was full of happiness.

A Story of the Flying Dutchman
 By MARGARET C. DEVEAUX

The legend of the Flying Dutchman has come to us in various forms. One of them is that a seaman of Holland, Vanderdecken, sailed in his ship, doomed around the Cape of Good Hope to the east. He was never again seen alive. In attempting to weather the cape he met with head winds, losing his temper and defying heaven with a great oath. As a punishment for his blasphemous he was doomed to make unsuccessful attempts to weather the cape till the crack of doom.

Many years ago, before steam had taken the romance out of sailor life and before ships could go to China by way of the Mediterranean, the Suez canal and the Red sea, an American merchant sailed from New York for Bombay in the packet ship Albatross. The gentleman, whose name was Van Cortlandt, had descended from the Hollanders of that name who had settled on Manhattan Island in the seventeenth century.

His oldest daughter, between seven and eight years old, was a girl with an expressive face, which denoted a deep undercurrent of feeling. Her eyes were her most notable feature, being large brown ones, which gave one an impression that she was filled with wonder. And yet it would seem that this, instead of being remarkable, should be natural to any one contemplating the marvels by which we are surrounded. Perhaps these persons appear in a state of wonder because they are nearer by nature to the border which separates us from the infinite.

Maria Van Cortlandt would sit all day on deck peering out on the boundless ocean trying to form in her mind an image of its vastness, or looking upon the clouds drifting up in the heavens or the gulls soaring above the masts. Sometimes it seemed to her father, who adored her, that she was not thinking of the ocean or the heavens, but of that other spiritual world a vision of which is denied to ordinary mortals. Then he would sigh, for it seemed to him that the abode in mortality of such persons is more transient than in persons of a less spiritual nature.

One afternoon when the vessel had just begun to point her prow more easterly to round the cape a ship was seen astern coming in the same direction. The captain of the Albatross stood on the poop deck, his glass leveled at the stranger, surprised at the position of her sails. While those of his own ship were set to sail before the wind, the coming vessel had hers close hauled. The skipper had never before experienced in steady weather a wind blowing in two different directions.

It is a fact well known to navigators that a ship will move faster with the wind ahead than when dead aft. Obeying this law, the stranger was gaining on the Albatross. As she came on the face of the Albatross' master assumed a more amazed expression. There was an old fashioned look about the other ship that he had never before seen on any craft. Her sides bulged below her decks, which were narrower, she was very high astern and was built up curiously forward.

And now a few figures began to take form on deck going about upon their various duties—some coiling ropes, some mending sails, while others lay about smoking enormous pipes. When the vessel came abreast of the Albatross a man was seen standing on the high deck astern who seemed to be the master. His figure standing out against the sky showed him more plainly than the others. He wore a costume that had passed out long before; full breeches to the knee and a short coat with flaring skirt. His face was young, but there was an old look about it. His hair was long, his eyes were large and set deep in his head.

But the most remarkable feature of this strange craft and her antique looking crew was yet to come. Sailing much faster than the Albatross, the stranger passed her in a few moments. As she went by every eye on her was fixed on those on the Albatross as those on the Albatross were fixed on the vessel and her crew. The young master on the poop deck extended his arms to Maria Van Cortlandt with a mute appeal on his face. To the astonishment of those beside her, Maria's arms went out to the strange being.

Then there was a low swish of waters as the vessel drew away, leaving the Albatross in her wake, and Maria fell over in a swoon. Every eye of those near her was fixed upon her, and when they were raised for another glance at the receding vessel it had disappeared.

A man standing on the fore-castle of the Albatross when the strange ship sailed away and out of sight said that he read the name—"The Flying Dutchman."

In the log book of the Albatross when she was broken up was found the entry: "The Flying Dutchman passed us bound southeast by east half east."
 There is a story in the Van Cortlandt family of a Maria Van Cortlandt who went to China with her parents and met on the voyage a phantom lover in a phantom ship. On her return she is said to have died in the same latitude and longitude where the ghostly meeting took place. But the Flying Dutchman has appeared to so many persons at different times that there is nothing certain about this.

We have arranged to give to our readers each week a complete review of the previous weeks' doings on Beacon Hill during the present Legislature. This matter will be prepared by an expert man of large experience in doings of the Massachusetts legislature and every body interested in State affairs will be well paid in following the entire series.—See page 2 of this issue.

High School Notes.

Philip Miller '12, Eric Gardner '14 and Albert Ahearn visited school this week.

The omission of the name of Arthur White from the honor list in this column last week has been brought to our notice. White is a sophomore and the addition of his name to the list gives the class of 1916 the greatest number of honor list students for this term.

On account of the excessive cold, all recitations were called off on Tuesday and the students were allowed to go home.

There have been many rumors about school during the past week about forming a debating society. As this is about the time for the Senior-Junior debate the plan does not seem at all bad and should turn out well.

Some of the principal parts in the coming operetta have been assigned. Miss Cassesse '17, Miss McDonald '16 and Miss Helen Hunt '14 all have solo parts. Miss Marjorie Keith '15 is the accompanist. Rehearsals are held every week under the supervision of Miss Inez Wheaton '10 and James J. Calderwood.

Captain Cassesse of the football team has appointed Clarke Page of the class of 1915 as football manager for next fall.

Last Friday afternoon at Melrose Weymouth was defeated by the Melrose five, by a score of 20 to 26. Baker, Weymouth's best all around player had the misfortune of being knocked completely out. Although Weymouth was ahead at the time it materially weakened the team and Melrose just nosed out a win. The clever pass work of Weymouth had Melrose all at sea during the first half. Reilly starred for Weymouth.

To-morrow evening at 8 o'clock Weymouth plays Watertown in the Clapp Memorial gym. A record crowd is expected. Come and Watch Weymouth Win.

TALBOT '15.

HOMES OF THE SYRIANS.

Where It Is Little Trouble to "Take Up Thy Bed and Walk."

On the right as you enter the house stands a small structure of sun dried brick, called mekhdah. It is about five feet high, six feet long and a foot deep. On the inner side it is divided into openings of different sizes and serves the cosmopolitan purpose of a china closet, kettle cupboard, a place for father's Turkish pipe (margile) and tobacco and whatever other little articles it may be convenient for the moment to thrust into it.

The maulkedah (fireplace) is at the forward end of this structure. It is such a fireplace as you would build at a picnic-square, open at the top for the kettle to set in and at one side to admit the fuel. It is built of clay mixed with straw and fine quartz. There is no chimney. The smoke floats in the house with the suzerance of public opinion. The ceiling is black and shining, as if it had been varnished. The earthen floor is painted frequently with red mud and rubbed with a smooth stone until it shines. It is furnished with straw mats, cushions and in the winter season soft and fluffy sheepskins.

There are no chairs, no bedsteads. The family sit and sleep on the floor. The bed consists of a thick cushion for a mattress, stuffed with wool or cotton, a pillow of the same material and a quilt for a cover. So when Jesus said to the man he had healed, "Arise, take up thy bed and walk," the man did not have very much to carry. In the daytime the beds are either rolled up, each one, in a heap and left on the floor next to the wall or put in a recess in the wall, constructed for the purpose.—Atlantic Monthly.

TACT OF EUGENIE.

Diplomacy of the French Empress on a Question of Dress.

A curious instance of the diplomatic methods of the ex-Empress Eugenie is worth recalling.

When Queen Victoria, Prince Albert and the princess royal were about to visit Napoleon III, and the Empress Eugenie it was feared at the French court that the young princess royal would not be dressed in a style that would harmonize with French taste. The question was how to beguile her royal parents into dressing the child in a suitable manner.

In this difficulty the empress had a really brilliant idea. The height and other measurements of the princess royal were obtained and a doll of exactly the same size procured. The doll was provided with a large and exquisitely finished trousseau, and it was then dispatched to Buckingham palace as an imperial gift to the princess.

The expected happened. Queen Victoria, enchanted with the doll's wardrobe, transferred most of the outer garments to her daughter for use during their visit to the emperor and empress. The result was that the princess appeared at her best, and everybody was pleased.—London Spectator.

Not Just What She Meant.

One of our best-known novelists, the most sentimentally courteous of men, arriving very late at a dinner party, was overcome with confusion—"I am truly sorry to be so shockingly late." The genial hostess, only meaning to assure him that he was not the last, emphatically replied, "O, Mr. —, you can't come too late."

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

The Wessagett club have had a telephone installed in their club rooms on Bridge street.

Clifford Stiles is recovering from an attack of the gripe.

Mrs. George Redway and daughter, of Newark, N. J., are visiting Mrs. Redway's father, Mr. Andrew Colley of Pratt avenue.

Dr. R. O. Clark has closed his house at Wessagett for the winter, and with Mrs. Clark, has gone to Hotel Bellevue, Boston, and later will visit the South.

The regular meeting of the Universalist Men's club will be held in the church vestry, next Monday evening, Jan. 19th. Supper will be served at 7:45 o'clock.

Mr. S. O. Estes and family entertained Mrs. Roberts and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barr of Weymouth on Sunday.

The Vhemalidove club met with Miss Doris Torrey of Lovell street, on Monday evening of this week.

Electric lights have been installed in the houses of W. B. Dasha, J. W. Cushing and J. W. Grady recently.

Solomon Ford has been confined to his home on Bridge street the past week with bronchitis but is now improving.

Mrs. Edward Wyman and Miss Lucy Wyman of Ayer have been visiting Mrs. Wyman's mother, Mrs. J. W. Bartlett of North street.

Mrs. W. H. Wilda entertained a matinee whist party on Friday afternoon of last week, at her home on Bridge street.

The Universalist parish has offered the use of their church to the St. Jerome parish.

On Tuesday morning the roof of John H. Tower's house on Bridge street was set on fire by sparks from the chimney. The fire was quickly extinguished with but little damage and without calling the fire department.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Chubbuck will celebrate their golden wedding on Saturday, January 24th, from 8 to 10 p. m. at their residence, 16 Curtis street and will be pleased to receive all their friends.

Pilgrim Church Notes.

The last in the series of three concerts given under the auspices of the Parish committee of the Pilgrim Congregational church was held in the church on Tuesday evening of this week. The concert was given by the Jubilee Singers and all who attended were very much pleased with the program but the severity of the weather caused the audience to be rather small.

The ladies of the church gave a reception in honor of the new comers and elderly people of the church on Friday afternoon, January 9th to increase the interest in church affairs. A social afternoon was spent and all present were entertained by readings and musical numbers. Refreshments were served by some of the young ladies.

The Ladies' circle held an all day meeting on Wednesday of this week and are very busy preparing for their annual fair which will come in the last week of this month.

WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS.

A missionary service was held in the Old North church last Sunday evening. The Rev. Chas. K. Brown, a missionary from Harpoot, Turkey, gave a very interesting talk on his work as a missionary in Turkey. Special music was rendered by a men's chorus, accompanied by Mr. Philbrook and Edward Bates, cornet.

The annual meeting of the First church in Weymouth was held Thursday evening of this week. The list of officers elected will be given next week.

The annual business meeting of the L. B. S. was held with Mrs. James B. Jones last Wednesday, and the following officers and committees were elected for the ensuing year: president, Mrs. James Jones; vice-president, Mrs. E. A. Richards and Mrs. R. I. Steele; secretary, Miss Abbie Bates; treasurer, Mrs. Chas. Taylor; work committee, Mrs. Chas. Macker, Mrs. Wallace Bicknell, Mrs. Juliet C. Nash, Mrs. R. C. Steele, Mrs. Edwin Morphy and Miss Harriet Lincoln; visiting committee, Mrs. R. I. Steele, Miss Addie Taylor, Miss Louise Briggs and Mrs. Albert Newcomb; house committee, Mrs. Nelson Gladwin, Mrs. Wallace Bicknell, Mrs. Emer Lunt and Mrs. Juliet C. Nash.

Lambasted.

A new trainer was engaged for the circus and was told to put a lion and a lamb through an act. He seemed nervous, and the next his boss asked him how he got along with the savage lion. "Sure, the lion didn't bother me much," he said, "but that darned lamb butted the daylight out of me!"

SURGEON TO A TIGER.

An Exciting Operation That Was Repaid by Gratitude.

When one of the tigers in the zoological gardens in Dublin was treated for gangrene in its paw, Rev. Samuel Haughton, M. D., undertook to perform the dangerous experiment of operating on the animal.

The mate of the tiger was first secured in a side den. A net devised by Professor Haughton was thrown over the tiger, and he was drawn forward to the door of the cage. Four stout keepers then held the feet of the struggling animal, while Professor Haughton cut away the diseased claw.

The suffering beast furiously but vainly tried to get at him during the operation, but the rage of the tigress looking on through the bars of the side den was much more terrible to behold. She roared and violently flung herself against the barriers in her mad desire to go to the rescue of her mate.

When the tigress was admitted to the cage after the wound of her mate had been dressed she turned up the paw and examined it with touching solicitude and then licked her mate as a cat licks her kittens to soothe them, purring softly the while.

But perhaps the most extraordinary part of the affair was the sequel. A week later Professor Haughton was again at the zoo to see how his patient was getting on. When the animal espied him he began to purr like a cat, allowed him to examine the paw and seemed pleased that he should do so. Indeed, for years afterward the tiger and tigress showed themselves most friendly and grateful to Professor Haughton.—Westminster Gazette.

GRAVE OF EDNA LYALL.

Picturesque Spot Where the Noted Author Lies at Rest.

Few people perhaps know anything about the picturesque English village of Bosbury, lying almost beneath the shadow of the lengthy rampart of hills which divides the valley of the Severn from undulating orchard clad Herefordshire. It was to this garden of England, a veritable glory of apple blossom in the springtime, that Edna Lyall delighted to go for a few weeks in each year of her short life, and it was Bosbury churchyard that she chose for her last resting place.

Her grave beneath the shadow of an old churchyard cross is a very simple one—merely a plot of grass bordered by her favorite rose trees. Upon it stands a small Iona cross with the inscription:

ADA ELLEN BAYLY

(Edna Lyall).

February 8th, 1903.

"My trust is in the tender mercy of God for ever and ever."

"Won by Waiting" was Edna Lyall's first book. "The Autobiography of a Slanderer" reached its twenty-four thousandth edition soon after publication and was translated into several languages.—Great Thoughts.

Raphael.

At the age of twenty-on Raphael had done work that had well surpassed his master, who was then a man of fifty-eight.

By the time he was twenty-five Raphael's fame had so spread that Pope Julius II. summoned him to Rome to decorate certain chambers in the papal palace. From this time to his death, a period of twelve years, he remained the greater part of the time in Rome. Though most famous as a painter, he was sufficiently great in architecture also to be appointed at the age of thirty to succeed Bramante as the architect of the new St. Peter's. But his greatest commission remained still, that of decorating the walls of the Vatican. The remaining years of his life were crowded with an amazing amount of work—numbers of large and smaller paintings and numerous frescoes.—Woman's Home Companion.

Used to Her Yells.

The story of the lad who cried "Wolf!" to fool his neighbors had a modern version the other night in an uptown apartment house. Miss H. began taking music lessons. Everybody heard her and got more or less used to it. But the other night Miss H. started to yell—as usual, every one thought—and the neighbors went right on trying to pay no attention to it. As a matter of fact, Miss H. had found a burglar in her apartment, and he got away with Miss H.'s jewels just because every one did go right on paying no attention to her.—New York Tribune.

Hard Luck.

"I always have tough luck."
"What's the matter?"
"I paid Brown $5 that I borrowed from him several weeks ago."
"Where's the tough luck?"
"He said afterward that he'd forgotten all about it!"—Detroit Free Press.

Often the Case.

"It was a fair fight, wasn't it?"
"Sure it was. The under dog got whipped."
"Call that a fair fight?"
"Wait, now, let me explain. The under dog provoked it!"—St. Louis Republic.

Cheerful Postscript.

Jones—The Browns have bought a car. Wife—Can't you say something cheerful once in awhile? Jones—The funniest machine I ever saw and second hand at that!—Chicago News.

—On the Norfolk club alleys last Monday night, in the first match of the Boston pin tournament, team 2, Frank Loud captain, won from team 1, Samuel Robinson captain, taking all three strings and total, with a pinfall of 1309 pins to 1260 for the losers. Louis Beaudry was high man, with a three string total of 279 pins. "Billy" Nash got the high single with 106 pins.

—The tie between Prince H. Tirrell's team and William Moore's five, in the race for the championship of the bottle league, recently finished at the Norfolk club, will be rolled off at the club alleys this evening.

—The ice dealers in this village are preparing to harvest their crops for the season, the cold weather of the past week helping to make the ice gain in thickness very rapidly.

—The Fleischman Yeast business in this section, recently conducted by J. C. Howe, has been taken up by Henry Kohler.

—The annual meeting of the South Weymouth Cooperative, bank for the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, was held in Clapp's hall last Saturday evening.

Old South Church Notes.

Miss Sarah B. Tirrell will speak of her trip to Alaska, for the benefit of the Ladies Aid society, on Tuesday evening, at 7:30, in the vestry. This is cordially open to the public.

Missionary tea was held at the home of Mrs. A. O. Crawford on Central street, Friday afternoon. Miss Isabel Blake of Aintab, Turkey, was the Missionary speaker.

The annual business meeting was held on Thursday evening, at which reports were received, showing commendable work, and a gratifying financial condition. Clarence W. Fearling was chosen clerk; George C. Torrey, a trustee for three years; M. R. Loud, F. E. Loud and Miss L. M. White, auditors; Miss Francanna Blanchard, financial secretary, and F. E. Loud, superintendent of the Sunday school. The meeting was adjourned for one week.

Universalist Church.

Morning service at 10:30. Young Peoples at 5:45. Illustrated lecture at 7.

Singing by chorus choir. Sermon by pastor, "Unjust Stewards and Foolish Tenants," being Christian observations upon American municipal political tendencies.

Illustrated lecture at 7. Lecturer Hon. Arthur K. Peck. Subject, "Storm Heroes of Our Coast." Seats free.

Heard About the "XV." Furniture.

In the window of one of the large furniture stores last week was exhibited a magnificent Louis XV. bedroom set. Two women stopped and looked at it admiringly and one of them—she may have been Mrs. Wood B. Highbrow—exclaimed: "Oh, there is some of that 'ex-vee' furniture I've read so much about!"—Kansas City Star.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

Forty-six years ago. Soldiers' Monument. The soldiers' monument committee of North Weymouth have contracted for a granite monument to be erected by E. C. Sargent of Quincy, to be 25 feet high and to have tablets of the best Italian marble for the names of the "Immortal Dead." We understand that the monument will be drawn on the ground while it is frozen, as the stone cannot be drawn on the hill after the frost is out, that the foundation will not be laid until the frost is out and the ground settled, and that the whole will be completed on or before the first of June.

The Young Men's Christian Union of East Weymouth, composed of the young men of the Congregational and Methodist churches, re-organized last week by choosing Jacob F. Dizer, president; Eben Tirrell Jr., vice president and Eben Pratt, secretary.

At the annual meeting of the Stockholders of the Union National bank of Weymouth, held the 14th inst, the old board of directors were re-elected, viz.: Messrs. Minot Tirrell, James Jones, Gilman Burrell, Jonathan French, Joseph Loud, Albert Humphrey, Amos S. White, Thomas Humphrey and John W. Loud. Subsequently the Board was organized by the re-election of Minot Tirrell Esq, president.

Thirty years ago. The treers in the shop of E. A. Hunt, as we are told by one of the employees, are obliged to work evenings on account of the rush of work.

Our venerable resident, Thomas Humphrey, Esq., had his collar bone fractured last Monday afternoon, by being thrown out of his carriage, his horse starting suddenly as he was turning out of the Old North cemetery. Charles Humphrey, who was with him was also thrown out but sustained no serious injury.

The resignation of chief engineer Z. L. Bicknell, is a great loss to the fire department, and is much regretted by the remainder of the board. He has always taken a great interest in the department during his term of office, having a faculty of despatching business in rapid manner. At their next regular meeting the board will give a supper at the Masonic banquet hall, Ward 2, complimentary to the ex-chief.

It is hoped that the nailers' strike at the Iron Works in East Weymouth will soon be arranged and the wheels of business move on unimpeded, as the town cannot afford to lose any of its working force.

Twenty-four years ago. The Kimball C. L. S. C. met with Waldo Turner last Monday evening, when W. F. Winsor read an interesting paper upon the character of Robert Elsmere.

Harrison hall has undergone a complete change since the campaign; the walls have been papered and are now adorned with a number of handsome pictures, and an effort is to be made to form a permanent club.

Reynolds Post will reach its majority July 14 this year, having been organized July 14, 1868. It started with 10 charter members and now numbers about 300. The financial report of the year discloses the gratifying fact that the Post has $14,000 in cash and property on hand.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Union National bank of Weymouth, held the 15th inst., the former Board of Directors were unanimously re-elected—Albert Humphrey, Francis Ambler, William H. Clapp, Thomas H. Humphrey, John P. Lovell, Henry A. Nash, John B. Rhines, Amos S. White, Edwin P. Worster.

SUMMING UP THE EVIDENCE.

Many Weymouth People Have Been Called As Witnesses.

Week after week has been published the testimony of Weymouth people—kidney sufferers—backache victims—people who have endured many forms of kidney, bladder or urinary disorders. These witnesses have used Doan's Kidney Pills. All have given their enthusiastic approval. It's the same everywhere. 30,000 American men and women are publicly recommending Doan's—always in the home papers. Isn't it a wonderful, convincing mass of proof? If you are a sufferer your verdict must be "Try Doan's first."

Here's one more Weymouth case. John J. Norton, 58 Webb street, Weymouth, Mass., says: "One of my family had weak kidneys, accompanied by pains in the back. After one box of Doan's Kidney Pills was used the trouble left. My opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills has not changed since giving a statement some months ago, praising them. You may continue using that endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take it other.

we publish this, our New Year's greetings to you

We feel that this is a time when we should all pause in the hurry and strain of active life and think for a moment of the human side of business.

And so we publish this for the very human reason that we want to say a friendly "hello" to you and with heart-deep sincerity extend the happiest greetings of the season and wish you the pleasantest of good things for the year ahead.

We believe in making friends as well as customers in business, and we try to make our store service exhibit that spirit distinctly by being just as sincerely helpful and pleasant as we can make it.

So here's a handclasp across the newspaper to those we can't reach in person.

May you win more friends, prosperity and happiness in 1914 than ever before!

Town Clerk's Notice Physicians, Midwives and Parents BIRTH RETURNS

Town Clerk's Office, Weymouth, Jan. 1, 1914. Attention is called to the following law in relation of births which was passed by the Legislature for 1912.

JOHN A. RAYMOND, Town Clerk. [CHAP. 280, ACTS OF 1912] AN ACT RELATIVE TO REPORTS AND RECORDS OF BIRTHS.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows: SECTION 1. Physicians and midwives shall, within forty-eight hours after the birth of every child in cases of which they were in charge, mail or deliver to the clerk or registrar of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a notice stating the date and place of the birth, giving the street and number, if any, the number of the ward in a city and the family name. Failure to mail or deliver the said notice shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each offence. The notice required by this section need not be given if the notice required by the following section is given within forty-eight hours after the birth occurs.

SECTION 2. Physicians and midwives shall make and keep a record of the birth of every child in cases of which they were in charge and shall, within fifteen days after the birth, mail or deliver to the clerk or registrar of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a report of the birth, stating the date and place, the name, if any, of the child, its sex and color, and the names, ages, places of birth, occupations and residence of the parents, giving the street number, if there be any, and the number of the ward in a city, the maiden name of the mother, and whether or not the physician or midwife signing the birth return personally attended the birth. If the child is illegitimate, the name and other facts relating to the father shall not be stated except at the request in writing of both the father and mother filed with the return. The record to be kept by the physician or midwife, as above provided, shall also contain the facts hereby required to be reported to the city or town clerk. The fee of the physician or midwife shall be twenty-five cents for every birth so reported, which shall be paid by the city or town where the report is made, upon presentation to the city or town treasurer of a certificate from the city or town clerk stating that the said birth has been properly reported to him. The report required to be made by this section is in addition to the report required to be made by the preceding section, and as above provided, if made within forty-eight hours of the birth, the report required by the preceding section shall not be required. A physician or midwife who neglects to make and keep the record hereby required, or who neglects to report in the manner specified above, each birth within fifteen days thereafter, shall for each offence forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars. The city or town clerk or registrar shall file daily with the local board of health a list of all births reported to him, giving the following facts: date of birth, sex, color, family name, residence, ward, physician or midwife.

SECTION 3. Section three of chapter twenty-nine of the Revised Laws, as amended by chapter ninety-three of the acts of the year nineteen hundred and ten, is hereby repealed. [Approved March 21, 1912.] 42-45

Commonwealth of Massachusetts PROBATE COURT NORFOLK, ss. TO all persons interested in the estate of SAMUEL HEALEY late of Weymouth in said County, deceased. Whereas, Mary A. Williams, the administratrix of the estate of said deceased, has presented for allowance, the first and final account of her administration upon the estate of said deceased.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham in said County, on the fourth day of February, A.D. 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be allowed.

And said administratrix is ordered to serve this citation by delivering a copy thereof to all persons interested in the estate fourteen days at least before said Court, or by publishing the same once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Weymouth Gazette, a newspaper published in said Weymouth, the last publication to be on one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, prepaid, a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said Court. My Reimbursement It Was Not the Kind That Was Expected By F. A. MITCHEL

Not long before the revolution in Mexico that put Huerta in the saddle I was sent out by the house by which I had been employed for ten years—from the time I was sixteen till I was twenty-six—to establish a branch of the business at the capital of that country.

For awhile I was so busy getting a store, unpacking goods and attending to the various requirements of opening up a new business that the country, the people, their customs, manners, appearance, did not engage my attention, but when all was running smoothly I began to take notice of what was going on about me. Being young and a bachelor, it was natural that the first object to interest me was the señoritas.

It has been said that the women of tropical climates are attractive in appearance when very young, but their beauty soon fades and is replaced by extreme ugliness. But I found that those of Mexico differed much as they do in other countries. Their beauty and its continuance depended largely on their sphere in life. Their long lashes drooping over their liquid brown eyes and their luxuriant hair were to them their chief attractions.

The poor in Mexico are very poor, and the most prosperous, except in few instances, are not what we in the United States would call rich. In Mexico, as in other countries, there are ups and downs in families, some acquiring wealth, others sinking into poverty. Directly opposite the house in which I lived dwelt a family, from appearances, I judged belonged to the latter class. Not long after I came to live near them I saw a piano moved out, then a handsome mahogany desk. These were followed by other articles, most of them of a very antique pattern, in such regular succession that it excited my curiosity. I asked the lady with whom I lodged about it and she replied: "Oh, the Garcias! They have recently lost a great deal of money. For many years the family has owned stock in mines of this country, but since President Diaz has been deposed and our government has been unstable their mines have not been worked. They have been gradually selling off valuable articles that have been in the family many years. Some of them, they claim, were brought over by one of the conquerors from whom they claim descent."

The world may envy prosperous persons during their prosperity, but it sympathizes with them when their prosperity passes away from them. I was at an age to pity this unfortunate family, and my heart went out to them, especially since my father had failed in business just as I was about to enter college and I felt obliged to go into business instead. Conceita Garcia was a typical beauty of the tropics. Her face was oval, her complexion olive, with a tinge of red in her cheeks, while she possessed the liquid eyes, long lashes and wealth of glossy hair of which I have spoken. On several occasions when she had not taken the precaution to draw her window curtains I saw her standing before a mirror combing her hair and noticed that it swept the floor.

I had the advantage of the young lady—so far as I knew—in observing her, while she knew nothing about me, for even if she had under ordinary circumstances taken an interest in a young man opposite she now appeared absorbed in her troubles. Though I saw her go and come often from and to her home I never saw her smile. One morning I happened to start for my store just as Senorita Garcia left her house. She was unconscious of my presence on the street, though I saw no one else but her. I walked some distance behind her till, coming to the business part of the city, she entered a pawnshop. An impulse moved me to follow her inside. I was not led by a desire to pry into her affairs, but by an interest in her. She engaged the attention of the proprietor while I kept in the background. She produced a brooch with a handsome emerald setting and asked the shopman if he would buy it or loan on it. He said he would do whichever she preferred, offering to buy it for a much better price than he would loan. The señorita, remarking despondently that she would never be able to redeem it, concluded to sell it.

As she left the shop she glanced at me. I fancied, to see if the sale had been observed by any one she knew. At all events, she showed no further interest in me. As soon as she had left the shop I stepped forward and asked the proprietor if he had any unclaimed antique jewelry for sale. He brought out, among other articles, the emerald brooch. I bought it, but was obliged to pay him double what it had cost him. Why I bought it or what I would do with it I did not know. Perhaps it was in obedience to the same kind of impulse that had induced me to follow Senorita Garcia into the shop.

Now and again I happened to leave my lodging house at the same time as the young lady left her home, but did not follow her again into a store till one day I saw her enter a building from which hung a sign, "Manuel Gonzalez, Dealer in Human Hair." "Great heavens," I exclaimed, "is she going to sacrifice those splendid tresses?" Having delayed a few minutes, I entered a room in which there were cases filled with switches, wigs and other such articles. The señorita was there in the act of taking down her hair, the proprietor waiting to inspect it. Seeing me enter, she hesitated, and the proprietor led her into a rear room curtained from the other. But I could see between the curtains and hear the man bargaining for the hair. I stopped the proceedings by stepping to the curtain and pulling it aside. "Senor," I said, "I have caught a glimpse of this lady's hair and would like to buy it. If you conclude to purchase it I will take it off your hands at a reasonable profit."

Both the dealer and the lady were somewhat surprised at my intrusion, but the former said at once: "You are at liberty to make the señorita an offer. I have more stock on hand than I can use in these troublous times."

"Very well. Tell the lady what you would pay for my hair," I said. "I would pay the highest price—on account of the extreme length." He named a sum that the hair was worth. "If the lady will accept that amount," I said, "I will gladly pay it." "Are you a dealer in such goods, señor?" asked Senorita Garcia. "No," I stammered. "I am not." "Then may I ask for what you want it?"

"I have never been good at white lying. If a lie is excusable I would rather tell a big one than a little one." "I will explain," I said. "I am about to be married to a young lady who is recovering from a fever from which she lost her hair. It is growing again, but very thin. It occurs to me that I could make her no more valuable present than a switch made of your splendid hair."

She appeared to believe the statement, but I could see from her expression that she doubted the propriety of such a gift. However, after a regretful glance in a mirror at the treasure on her head, she accepted my offer. "Will you take it now, señor?" she asked. "No, señorita. I have not enough money with me, but I will pay you a sum to bind the bargain and you need not deliver the goods till the balance is discharged."

I went through my pockets and found enough money to pay 70 per cent on the purchase. "But, señor, you do not know me. You are taking a risk." "I know a lady when I see her." "I assure you, señor," said the proprietor, "you run no risk whatever; the señorita's family are well known in Mexico. They have in their veins the blood of one of the conquerors." "May I ask when the señor will call for my hair?" asked the girl. "I? Call for it?" I said to gain time to construct another lie. "The date of the wedding is not yet fixed."

The wearer of my property said nothing more, but from the curious way she looked at me it was evident that there was something in the transaction she did not understand. Writing her address on a card she handed it to me and left the store. I sent her the balance of the amount of the purchase money the same day, with a caution on no account to cut off her hair till I called for it. Senorita Garcia, not having any occasion for my address, had not asked for it. Since I had no use for her hair and had only bought it to save it for her, I did not care for it. Weeks passed before we met again. Meanwhile I wondered if she would recognize me at seeing me again. She had merely glanced at me in the pawnshop, and in the rear room at the hair dealer's there was not enough light for her to see me distinctly. Our third meeting was on the street. As I passed her she stared at me, as if uncertain whether I was or was not the owner of her hair. I looked straight ahead. But she stopped me and said: "Senor?" "I beg pardon," raising my hat. "Are you not the señor who—?" "Who what, señorita?" "Bought my hair?"

"I was fixing for another lie, but saw in her eye that it would not pass. I smiled. "Come, señor," she continued, with great seriousness. "There is something about this transaction that I do not understand. Several weeks ago you bought my hair for your fiancée, so you said. You have paid the price for it, but have not called for it. It is yours, and I insist on delivering it to you or returning the money."

"Senorita," I said, putting a slight tremor into my voice, "the lady for whom I made that purchase is no more." "Oh, señor, how I pity you!" "Do not talk about returning the money. I could not bear it. Let us rather find some other way, if you insist upon it, by which you may reimburse me. Will you permit me to call upon you and talk the matter over with you?" "I can understand your feelings, but I do insist on reimbursing you and will be glad to receive you for the purpose you mention." "You are very kind." If Senorita Garcia had known that the reimbursement I was after was her own sweet self she might not have insisted on reimbursing me. I called on her, not once, but many times, when I got the reimbursement I desired. I surprised her by turning over to her without any further payment the emerald brooch I had bought from the pawnbroker.

REBUKE BY SARCASM.

About the Poorest Place to Use It Is in the Classroom. In a well known Boston school there was a boy conspicuously dull at his Latin. He was a straightforward fellow and a gentleman by birth and breeding, but he was a bungler at syntax.

One morning he had tangled himself in a simple phrase. The teacher asked a question that should have cleared him. But the poor lad did not know the answer.

Then the teacher leaned back in his chair, rolled his gray eyes to the ceiling and said for all the class to hear: "I have been told that it is a hard thing to stuff a wildcat with butter, particularly if you have to do it with a hot awl, but that is child's play compared with putting Latin in a boy like this."

Of course the laugh came, but as the boys laughed they despised the teacher. "Sarcasm," said Carlyle, "is the language of the devil." Be that as it may, it has turned many a schoolroom into a place of torment.

A boy may be too dull to be in school, but while allowed to be there he can never be dull enough to justify a knife thrust from one whose first duty is to help and cheer him.—Boston Herald.

OYSTERS AND DYSPYPTICS.

When the Bivalves May and When They Should Not Be Eaten. It is popularly supposed that the oyster digests himself in the human stomach owing to the great size of the liver, which is crushed as mastication begins and is thought to digest the mollusk itself. As the oyster, moreover, contains some 10 per cent of extremely assimilable protein, together with phosphorized fats and glycogen, it has always been freely administered to convalescents, while dyspeptic bon vivants have never hesitated to eat it abundantly.

Dr. Pron expresses the opinion that the oyster may be allowed, therefore, to those dyspeptics whose gastric functions are deficient, in anorexia, gastric atony, ulcer and incipient cancer, and to convalescents from acute disease, as it is likely to improve the appetite and to excite the stomach to increased motor and chemical activity.

But to the large number of dyspeptics whose stomachs are hyperacid or hypersensitive Dr. Pron would forbid the oyster as well as all other stimulating foods. In many of these dyspeptics the gastric secretion is already sufficient, and it is unnecessary and unwise to increase it.—New York Press.

Made the Judge Perspire.

Sir John Charles Day, the English Judge who earned the title of the "hooligan's terror," died at the age of eighty-two. In the nineteen years Sir John was a judge of the high court—from 1882 to 1901—he was noted for his gift of solemn humor and for his drastic flogging sentences. In fourteen years he sentenced 137 criminals to 3,766 strokes of the cat. Once he said to a gang of Liverpool ruffians: "I am not going to give you men long terms of imprisonment, but when you go in you get twenty lashes of the cat; when you have been in nine months you get twenty lashes of the cat; before you come out you get twenty lashes of the cat. And then you can show what you have got to your friends." He was perhaps the only English Judge who ever did "hard labor." While on a visit to a prison he tried the treadmill, but when he asked to be set free the guard refused not to hear his request. The judge was perspiring freely by the time he was permitted to abandon his experiment.

Spread of the English Language.

The English language is the richest, most virile and most powerful of all the languages now to be found among men. The men who conceived and made good this nation were Englishmen, and of course they spoke the only language they knew anything about, the language of their ancestors, the English language. The great Dr. Dollinger said of this language that "to it is assigned in the coming age the intellectual supremacy that in ancient times belonged to the Greeks and afterward to the Romans." In 1700 English was the language of 9,000,000 people. Today it is the language of 175,000,000, and by the end of the century it will be the language of 800,000,000 people.—New York American.

Tactful.

"Miss De Vere," said the lady who was entertaining the popular actress, "would you mind telling me what your real name is?" "My real name? Oh, yes. It is Tubbs—Sylvia Tubbs. But I hope you will not introduce me to your guests by it."

"Oh, no; you needn't be afraid. I'm just as much ashamed of it as you are."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Pin Money.

It was the bride's first request for money. "I must have some pin money," said she. "Certainly," said the bridegroom. "Here's a quarter. That ought to buy five or six papers of pins."—Washington Herald.

Slow, but Not Sure.

"Your daughter is not engaged to young Johnson yet, then? I suppose it is a case of slow and sure?" "Well, yes—he is slow, and she is not at all sure."

Tillotson's Big Mystery

How He Became a Convert

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mr. David Tillotson elevated his neatly shod feet to the top of his desk and, leaning his head against the leather-cushioned back of his chair, permitted a smile to trickle around his straight cut, matter of fact mouth.

"Mystery?" he snifted scornfully. "I've often wondered why the dictionary makers give that much abused word any space in their dreary volumes. There is no such thing as a mystery, my dear Fanning. There is a perfectly good and entirely simple explanation for every so called mystery."

Egbert Fanning smiled in a superior manner, and, tossing the end of his cigar into the waste paper basket, he calmly proceeded to light another.

"I must go now," he said, rising and reaching for his hat, "but let me tell you, old man, that you may run across a mystery within the next twenty-four hours that even your cleverness cannot solve. This is not a threat, but a plain, matter of fact prediction of what is likely to happen to a scoffer of unknown forces."

"Fiddledee-likewise tommyrot!" ejaculated David as the door closed behind his smiling friend.

Dismissing the discussion of the last half hour thus lightly, Mr. Tillotson plunged into his afternoon mail with a mind untrammelled by thoughts of perplexing questions. His pleasant voice dictated letter after letter, while his quiet little stenographer took down his words with flying pencil and the rustle of turning leaves as her notebook filled up.

"That is all, Miss Dickson," said David at last, and he swung his chair to the window as the girl passed into the small inner office that was her own especial sanctum. The inner office possessed one window, opening on the courtyard ten stories below, and only one door, the one leading into David Tillotson's private office.

David swung idly in his chair for awhile, debating whether he would go for a spin in his fast motorcar or spend the remainder of the afternoon at his club.

While he pondered this important question he was smothered almost to somnolence by the muffled clicking of Miss Dickson's typewriter behind the closed door of her office. Some men would have objected to the noise of the machine, but not David Tillotson. He boasted that he had not a nerve in his big, strong body.

At last he realized that the clicking had ceased, and, having decided to take a ride, he telephoned for his car to be brought around and then pressed the button for Miss Dickson.

She did not respond to the summons. Again he pressed the button, and, meeting no response from the usually prompt and businesslike young woman, David went to the door of her office and looked in.

The room was empty. The neatly typed letters were on her desk awaiting his signature. Her hat was on its accustomed hook, and one of her dainty handkerchiefs was on the floor.

But there was no sign of Elsie Dickson.

David was disturbed. He had not heard Miss Dickson pass through his office, as she necessarily must in order to reach the outer door. He was unusually keen of hearing, and even her light footfall would have attracted his attention, for it was a fact that quite unknown to himself David Tillotson was deeply interested in the quiet, dove eyed girl who had so long and faithfully served him.

He did not realize that many of his cleverest transactions had been inspired by Elsie Dickson. He would have scoffed if any one, Fanning, for instance, had hinted that he was in love with his stenographer, but it was quite true that her presence always exerted a soothing influence upon her employer. He felt entirely contented if he knew that she was in the next room, and the delicate fragrance that clung to her little handkerchief was sweet incense to his critical nostrils.

As David, unsuspecting bachelor that he was, did not have an inkling of the state of his wayward heart, he could not in the least account for the violent thumping of that organ when he discovered that the window was wide open and that Elsie Dickson had disappeared.

In two strides he was at the window and peering fearfully down into the courtyard. It was quite empty save for the janitor's boy, who was sweeping the cement pavement.

He drew back and once more searched the room, but there was no sign of his missing secretary. With assumed nonchalance he went into the outer office and spoke to one of the clerks.

"Is Miss Dickson here?" he asked irritably.

The man glanced at him in surprise. "Why, no, sir. She is in her office, I believe. I talked with her over the phone a moment ago."

David returned to his own room more disturbed than he cared to acknowledge. He glanced inside Miss Dickson's office, but she was not there. Sitting down at his desk, he hesitated with the telephone receiver in his hand.

Practical person that he was, he would not imagine what had become of the girl. All he knew was that a half hour ago she was in her office.

David found that he could no longer think clearly, connectedly. Mingled with his uneasiness of what had happened to Elsie Dickson were a vague terror and an unaccountable depression of spirits.

Suddenly his fingers closed tightly around the telephone, and he lifted the receiver to his ear. He called Egbert Fanning's number and in five minutes that astonished young man was beside him listening to his story.

"It's a mystery," declared David emphatically. "You show a glimmer of sense now and then, Bert. Tell me what you think of the matter."

"O ho—a mystery!" crowed Fanning. "My dear David, why stir yourself up over such a simple matter? The girl has probably stolen a few moments to chat with the clerks in the outer office, and, fearful of your displeasure, they are shielding her absence."

"Miss Dickson is not that sort," retorted David hotly. "She is quite free to come and go as she chooses, but—his face was quite pale now, and the amusement died out of Fanning's gleeful countenance.

"Just let me look around her office, I'm something of a detective, you know. Perhaps I can solve the mystery."

"Go ahead, my dear boy. Of course there is a solution to the mystery—problem of her disappearance, but I'm too stupid to work it out now."

"Too rattled!" commented Fanning, with a keen glance at his friend.

Tillotson had turned back to the window and was staring at the wall of the opposite building with unseeing eyes.

"Have I your permission to investigate in all departments?" asked Fanning briskly.

"Yes. Anything. Only find her!"

"Ye gods!" muttered Fanning as he entered Miss Dickson's office. "My good David has struck the greatest mystery in the world if he only knew it. Poor beggar! Woman and her reasons for doing things!"

"Now, let me see. Letters all typed, handkerchief on floor and hat on nail. These are my clues. Let me think and prout and ponder!"

An hour later Egbert Fanning ceased his trotting to and fro from office to office, from room to corridor and back again.

He came into David's presence mopping his heated brow with a snowy handkerchief and wearing a triumphant smile.

"Well, what luck?" asked David, turning around.

"Mystery is solved," said Fanning. "You're at the bottom of it, Tillotson."

"Me? How?" stared the other.

"In the first place, for your careless methods in trying to maintain two lines of thought at one and the same time. When a man is dictating under such circumstances there is every likelihood that his lines of thought will become crossed and emit electric sparks that are!"

"Cut out all the funny business, Fanning!" interrupted David. "Can't you see that I?"

"Of course any one can see that you are ridiculously in love with that pretty, shy Miss Dickson!" put in Fanning. "Otherwise why should you dictate three out of ten letters to her today and open them with 'Dear Elsie' instead of 'Dear Sir'? Answer me that."

"I never was guilty of such wretched blunders," protested the crimson Tillotson. But Fanning was quite remorseless now.

"Listen to the result of my investigations. On top of the pile of typewritten letters, which I may assure you Miss Dickson had properly addressed, was an open letter to you. I read it. Here it is:

"Dear Mr. Tillotson—If you will take the trouble to have my notebook examined by an expert you will learn that for the past week you have dictated many letters which began in a very offensive scratched out; 'David' and 'unaccountable' substituted unaccountable manner. Today's experience is more than I care to repeat; consequently I herewith tender my resignation as your secretary, same to take effect at once.

"Thanking you for many courtesies received in the past and regretting the necessity for the step, very truly yours,

"ELSIE DICKSON."

"Impossible! Incredible!" cried Tillotson, red with mortification and vexation.

"Here is the report of the expert. I had mercy on you, old fellow, and took the book to the public stenographer in the next building. You are convicted of ten 'Dear Elsies' and four 'Dearest Elsies,' and I may as well confess, David, that you called me Elsie twice yesterday."

"How did Miss Dickson get away without my observing her?" interrupted Tillotson.

"I traced that mystery out, too," chuckled the amateur detective. "Found an empty bandbox in her office and concluded Miss Dickson had just purchased a new hat, which she wore home, leaving her old one here. Smith, your clerk at the outer door, now confesses that he was absent from his post a half hour this afternoon, and it was during that period that Miss Dickson went away, quite unconscious that her sudden departure was to form the nucleus of one of the most interesting mysteries that—"

"I wonder where Miss Dickson lives!" broke in David, pacing the floor restlessly.

"She thoughtfully left her address at the bottom of her letter in case you wanted to send an apology, dear boy! And don't forget your hat, David. Your motor is down at the curb, and—"

Fanning smiled as the door slammed behind his friend.

"And the greatest mystery of it all is that the beggar didn't know he was in love with her all the time!" he exclaimed.

SINGING TO A PHONOGRAPH.

One of the Most Trying Ordeals in an Opera Artist's Career.

Specially constructed violins, cellos, tubas, drums and reed instruments are required as accompaniment to the grand opera singer when he or she essays to waft the voice upon a phonograph record. And it is safe to say this singing to the phonograph is the most trying ordeal in the artist's career.

Singers like Caruso, Melba, Farrar, Amato and a host of others are united in declaring the singing for records is the hardest work they ever have undertaken. They are bereft of their audiences that inspire confidence, and they necessarily must be careful to avoid false notes or inflections. The slightest clearing of the throat or the unfiled shuffling of feet will spoil a record. And then it all has to be done over again.

The singer is ushered into a great barnlike room, curtained off at one end. Through this curtain protrudes a gigantic brass horn, suspended from the ceiling. It is attached to the phonograph record.

It is then the singer notices a bevy of musicians, but with instruments the like of which he never has seen in any theater. The violins are of different shapes from the instruments with which he is familiar. The horns are of varied shapes, and to each is attached a little funnel that points in the direction of the large receiving horn. This is to concentrate the sound.

The conductor sits on a platform high above his musicians and the singer. Thus he offers no obstruction to the free transmission of the sound waves. The singer is stationed upon a platform and close to the mouth of the horn.

A red light flashes, the musicians pour forth light, soft melody, for which their instruments are particularly designed, and the grand opera artist loosens his vocal cords. His tone must be steady and strong. The slightest variation is recorded upon the wax record, and a trivial noise may spoil the performance. Once he has finished, the record is placed upon a producing machine and played over to detect faults. These errors are pointed out and the singer rehearsed to prevent them. Again he repeats the song, and perhaps a dozen times he is forced to sing before a perfect wax impression is obtained.

Great grand opera artists are paid thousands of dollars for a series of records, and the sale of these brings millions to the manufacturers.—Indianapolis Star

Dueling Prime Ministers.

In the old days a number of British premiers figured on the dueling ground. John Wilson Croker wrote in 1841: "Within the last hundred years six persons have fought duels who have been prime ministers—Pulteney (Lord Bath), Lord Shelburne, Mr. Pitt, Mr. Fox, Mr. Canning and the Duke of Wellington. I might also add Peel, who twice challenged, and Castle-reegh, who was almost a first minister. Of late years the custom has certainly decreased, and the house of lords has not now, I dare say, above half a dozen who have actually fought."—London Standard Kansas in Rime.

I love the state of Kansas, with its fields of wheat and corn; I love the Kansas sunset and the Kansas dewy morn, and, speaking metaphorically, I grow fat on Kansas crops and never mind the absence of the field of rye and hops; I love the Kansas porker and the Kansas topnotch steer; I love the Kansas zephyrs and the Kansas atmosphere; I love the Kansas sermons, and I love the Kansas jokes, but the thing I love in Kansas most is the Kansas kind of folks.—Kansas City Republic.

The Organ.

Like most important inventions, that of the organ is veiled in mystery. The invention of the organ has been attributed to Ctesibius, a barber of Alexandria, about 250 B. C.; also to the celebrated Archimedes, 220 B. C. It is certain that the organ was brought to Europe from the eastern or Greek empire and was applied to religious devotions in churches about A. D. 650.

It is Different Now.

When the first Pullman car was put into operation on our railways the system of bookkeeping was very crude. The conductor collected the fare from the passengers and before he turned the money in to the company collected his own salary from the revenues. No receipts were given, no records kept.

Paid Her In Full.

Candid Hostess (on seeing her nephew's fiancée for the first time)—I never should have known you from your photograph. Reggie told me you were so pretty. Reggie's fiancée—No; I'm not pretty, so I have to try to be nice, and it's such a bore. Have you ever tried?—London Punch

LUCK AND LOVE.
First He Won the Father, and Then He Captured the Heiress.
A dozen years ago, fresh from the school of Versailles, came a young under lieutenant of artillery in his new uniform, returning from Normandy, where he had been to see his brother. On the train the young officer found himself seated beside an old man, who, like himself, was going to Paris. They entered into conversation. An amiable intimacy was established between the two travelers. At the west station the old gentleman, taking leave of the young officer, said, "I need a son-in-law like you."
Three months later the officer returned to Normandy. He narrated the incident of the journey to his brother and questioned him about the strange companion.
"I know this old fellow," responded the brother. "Do you know that he offered you a very pretty partner? His daughter possesses an income of 100,000 francs."
"Where is she? I'll go after her," said the officer.
The brother made a sorrowful gesture. "Alas! you are a little late."
"Ah, what! Is the young girl to be married?"
"No; her father was buried eight days ago."
The lieutenant was silent for a moment. "But I knew her father. A visit of condolence is imposed upon me."
Dressed in his best uniform, he called upon the lady. He spoke in the most tender terms of the old gentleman. Without doubt the prestige of the uniform was not without effect on the young provincial, and the story as in the pleasant dramas, ended with a marriage. The lieutenant is now a prominent member of the chamber of deputies.—Cri de Paris.

TALES OF TWO DANCES.
London Society at First Rebelled Against Waltz and Polka.
When the waltz first appeared in London it raised a social rumpus. The dance came from Poland to London by way of Portsmouth, where its advantages were at once apparent to the women, though the men did not much like seeing other men clasping their wives. It was first danced at Almack's in London by Lady Jersey and two or three of her friends, and society was riven from top to bottom into the waltzers and anti-waltzers. In spite of Lady Jersey's powerful influence, there seemed little chance of the acceptance of the waltz. In 1816 the allied sovereigns came to London and visited Almack's. There they joined in the waltz and removed it from the realm of discussion. The waltz needed but three sovereigns to make it respectable.
The polka excited almost as much controversy as the waltz on its first introduction into England. Lady Dorothy Nevill recalls a scene at a ball in the late thirties when a deputation of ladies begged the hostess, Mrs. Spencer Stanhope, to allow the polka to be danced by six ladies who understood it. Permission being accorded, the six stepped out with their partners, all of them, curiously enough, dressed in black, which caused people to say it was a chimney sweep's dance. Extraordinary excitement was created by the innovation, Lady Jersey, the Duchess of Bedford and a number of other women clambering up on the chairs and benches to gain a better view.

History of the Saw.
The earliest tool that has been traced in Egyptian history is the saw. It was found first in the form of a notched bronze knife in the third dynasty, or about 5,000 years before the Christian era, and was followed in the fourth and fifth dynasties by larger toothed saws, which were used by carpenters, but there are no dated specimens until the seventh century before the Christian era, when the Assyrians used iron saws. The first knives on record were made out of flint and were, in fact, saws with minute teeth. They probably were used for cutting up animals, as the teeth would break away even on soft wood. Rasps, which are but a form of saw, were first made of sheets of bronze punched and coiled round, but the Assyrians in the seventh century used the straight rasp made of iron similar to the modern type.
Figgerative.
"A schoolboy of eleven," said Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury, Yale's authority on English, "once gave an apt illustration of figurative usage. He gave it in a composition, writing: "'A figgerative saying is, 'to keep the wolf from the door.' It does not mean to keep a real live wolf from the door. A good instance is when the landlord comes for the rent. He knocks at the door and you keep awful quiet, in the hope that he will think there is nobody in and go away.'"—Washington Star.
The Paragon.
"Have you any employee who doesn't talk baseball, horse racing and prizefighting all the time, to the exclusion of business?"
"Yes."
"Where did you get him?"
"It isn't a him; it's a her."—Pittsburgh Post.
Was It?
"I gave Walter a beautiful necktie of my own make for a birthday present," said Mabel.
"Was he pleased?"
"Oh, yes; he said its beauty shall be for no other eyes than his own. Wasn't that lovely of him?"—Lippincott's.

What Hisses Sound Like to an Actor.
In the American Magazine David Warfield, giving his stage experiences, tells how terrible it is from the actor's point of view to be hissed:
"I next appeared at the Wigwam, telling stories and giving imitations. I came a terrible cropper, something fearful! I was second in the bill, which is the worst place but one. I shall never forget the anxiety I felt on that occasion as I stood in the wings waiting for my turn to go on. At last I appeared before the footlights. The audience was drifting in, shuffling in in a desultory way. I could not get its attention. It was awful, awful. The few friends I had there applauded me, but the others hissed. It sounded as if 10,000 steam pipes had burst. A hiss to a sensitive man—and all actors are sensitive since all are vain—is like the strike of a rattlesnake. It is so venomous, so cruel, so unnecessary! It is as if you had done the people out in front an injury with malice prepense instead of having sincerely tried to please them. You don't even dare to face your own mother; you're so dreadfully guilty."

Got on Dangerous Ground.
Telling of his experience in Jolo, in the Philippines, a writer in the New York Times says: "When I was first picking up some of their language there ran toward me one day a handsome dressed little boy, his mother following at a distance. I picked the boy up and asked his mother how much he was worth. I thought it an utterly harmless way of attempting a civility. But the scream the mother let out, followed by a quick rushing of men with knives from all the huts roundabout, soon convinced me I had offended seriously. A priest of their faith, who had been giving me language lessons, was luckily among the first to arrive. I explained to him I had meant nothing wrong. He in turn explained to me that bartering in children was very much of a reality among them and, more than that, that it was not the custom for any man ever to address a remark to their women at all. I had doubly offended, as the child was a datto's son, and only the children of the low and enslaved were for sale."

Wedded Eyebrows.
In Turkey meeting eyebrows are greatly admired, and the women use artificial means to bring the brows to this condition, and if art cannot induce thin eyebrows to grow they make up by drawing a black line with paste.
It would appear that the Greeks admired brows which almost met, and the fashionable inhabitants of Rome not only approved of them, but resorted to pigments to make up the lack which sometimes existed.
Some proverbs state that the person whose eyebrows meet will always have good luck, while others state exactly the reverse. The Chinese say that "people whose eyebrows meet can never hope to attain to the dignity of a minister of state," and in Greece to-day the man whose brows meet is said to be a vampire, while in Denmark and Germany it is said he is a werewolf.—London Spectator.

PRICE FIVE CENTS

Bowling Notes.

106 is some string. Good work Billy Nash, you are coming along wonderfully. A match with Paul Poehler for you soon!

The five men candlepin league at the Clapp Memorial will start next week on Monday evening with a probability of six teams in the race for the prizes.

Rather tough luck for Mr. Newcomb of East Weymouth to roll 118 for a new league high single record, the night before the closing match of the league and then have Fred Drinkwater sail in the very last match and cop the prize with 126. Newcomb beat Lou Loring by one pin but evidently the prize looked good to our Braintree lad.

For a consistent bowler, nobody in this town has anything on Sammy Robinson, the Norfolk club star. Bottle pins, Boston pins or candle pins—they all look alike to Sam, and he makes the records fly in every league at the South Weymouth club.

Charlie Farrar, the former Norfolk club pin artist, is bowling in two leagues in Boston this winter. He is hitting them like the Charlie of old, too, according to scores and averages.

A match is being arranged between five of the C. M. A. bowlers and a quintet from the Quincy Y. M. C. A. to be rolled on the C. M. A. alleys. A team from the Clapp Memorial alleys journeyed to Quincy one week under the personal supervision of Bennie J. Elkington and warmed the Quincy Y. M. C. A. pin artists two out of three strings and total, much to the disgust of the Granite City citizens. Arthur Cunningham was high man for the East Weymouth crew and Lou Loring also showed the Quincy cracks a few new angles of the pin game.

At the Norfolk club alleys last Thursday evening team 7, Randolph Lamphrey, captain defeated team 8, Frank Howe, captain, taking two strings and total 1278 to 1268. Lamphrey was high roller of the match with a single of 106 and three strings of 296.

Ladies' night at the Clapp Memorial alleys is proving one of the feature evenings of the week in bowling circles. A large number of ladies have joined the Ladies' Bowling club of the C. M. A. and the "fair sex" are showing their gentlemen friends considerable ability at pin chasing during the late weeks. Last Thursday night Mrs. Joseph Severance hit the maples for 107 in one string. Pretty fair, eh boys!

The Weymouth Junior bowling aggregation is a mighty classy combination of young candle-pin stars. This squad is cleaning up all the other young teams in eastern Massachusetts as fast as they come. Condrick, the anchor man is proving himself a tower of strength in every match.

Dorothea L. Dix Tent Daughters of Veterans.

At the meeting of Dorothea L. Dix Tent Daughters of Veterans in Grand Army hall, East Weymouth, last Thursday evening the following members were elected as delegates to the department convention: Mrs. Clara Wilder, Miss Josie Cummings, Miss Hannah Barnes, Mrs. Mary Brassill, Mrs. Helen Beach, Mrs. Nellie Loud, Mrs. Carrie Langhorst, Mrs. Sadie Wolfe and Mrs. Ida Belle Carter. The alternates chosen are: Mrs. Anna Williams, Mrs. Lucy Miller, Mrs. Mabel Ford, Mrs. Alice Miller, Mrs. Mary Barrows, Mrs. Laura Litchfield, Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Florence Gaillardet. The initiatory degree was exemplified on a class of candidates by the officers of the tent.

Hervey L. Cushing Dead.

Mr. Hervey L. Cushing died at his home on Athens street, Tuesday, Jan. 20, at an advanced age. Mr. Cushing was born April 27th, 1831 and was one of the oldest residents of North Weymouth. He leaves three sons, Frank, Nathan and Robert, who have always lived at home, and cared for their father in his declining years.

Funeral services were held from his late home this afternoon at 2 p. m., Rev. Charles Clark of the Pilgrim church officiating. The Polymnia Quartette rendered "Lead Kindly Light," "Abide With Me," and "Gathering Home." The interment was in the North Weymouth cemetery. Relatives and friends sent many beautiful floral tributes.

A REMARKABLE MOVEMENT.

Observance of Go-to-Church Day, Its Origin and Plan.

Weymouth is definitely to join in a movement, remarkable for the interest it has aroused and for the favorable response it has had, where it has been tried. Known as Go-to-Church Day, it began in an Illinois town a few months ago in a local agitation to get as many as possible of the residents to attend some church on a given Sunday. The invitations of the churches found a hearty response and large numbers attended. Since that day the plan has been tried in various cities and towns both East and West, and has attracted very widespread attention. The impressions left upon pastors and church workers as to the value have been notably favorable. Our neighbor, Quincy, tried it on Jan. 11 and there was a great attendance at the church services and the pastors were enthusiastic over the results.

Massachusetts is the first state to take it up as a state-wide movement. The Massachusetts Federation of Churches has recommended to the churches of the state that they adopt this plan, suggesting Feb. 8 as a fitting time for the state-wide observance. The idea seems, in a marked degree, to have appealed both to the churches and the people at large, and in every direction, apparently, the matter is being taken up, and plans adopted.

At a meeting of Weymouth ministers on Saturday at East Weymouth, it was unanimously decided to approve the recommendation of the State Federation, and call upon the Weymouth churches to join in energetic effort for the observance of such a day on Feb. 8, inviting and urging all the people of Weymouth to attend some church upon that day, thus leading to the increased use of Weymouth church privileges in the future. Special committees were appointed to secure proper printing and local publicity, but the larger amount of the work is committed to the officers and members of the churches in each constituent village, working, through their joint committees, as a groups, extending invitations, distributing card and circular notices, and enlisting the effective co-operation of the people, including the Sunday schools and young people's societies and all who have the welfare of the town at heart.

The movement is not in the interest of any one church or denomination, but of all. It seeks simply, but cordially and urgently, to call anew the attention of the people to church-going as a privilege for the individual, and a means of large usefulness for the home and community life. It furnishes a favorable opportunity, in the time of a widespread response, for making the renewed start church-ward, which many have often planned but have not quite carried out. A general interest in the movement is already apparent in Weymouth, and if the matter is pushed with system and energy, Weymouth doubtless will give an excellent account of herself on Feb. 8.

Norfolk and Pilgrim Branch Mission.

At the Congregational church, Braintree, Tuesday, Jan. 27th, Norfolk and Pilgrim Branch of the Women's Missionary Society will hold its winter meeting. In connection there will be held in the morning, an Institute of the Women's Board, to be presided over by Miss Calder, home secretary of the Woman's Board of Missions. A number of these institutes have been held in Massachusetts, in response to suggestions in the King's Business, the Interdenominational Study book for this year, and have been both interesting and helpful.

Miss Isabel M. Blake of Aintab, Turkey, will speak both morning and afternoon. Attention is specially called to the luncheon hour, when the toasts will be presented: Money Enough, Women Enough, Time Enough; to be responded to by Mrs. H. W. Boyd of East Bridgewater; Mrs. Tyler Gale of South Braintree; and Mrs. Frank L. Kelley of Brockton.

Ladies of all denominations will be welcome to this, even if unable to be present at other sessions. The morning session will open at ten o'clock.

Weymouth High Wins Again.

In the Clapp Memorial gymnasium in East Weymouth, last Saturday evening, the Weymouth high school basketball team pinned defeat on the Watertown high school quintet, by the score of 44 to 21. Richardson and Captain Deane excelled for the Weymouth boys. The score:

Weymouth H. S. 44, Watertown H. S. 21. Goals from floor, Richardson 6, Deane 6, Condrick 8, Fraher 2, Osborne 4, Sullivan 2, McNamara, Lafayette 2. Goals from fouls, Osborne 3. Referee, Fabyan. Umpire, Jones. Scorer, Sampson. Timer, Cutler. Time, 20 and 15m periods. Attendance, 150.

Away.

In loving memory of my mother, Mrs. Lydia M. Chessman.
"I cannot say, and will not say
That she is dead. She is just away!
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land.
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since she lingers there.
And you—oh you who the wildest yearn
For the old time step, and the glad return.
Think of her, faring on as dear
In the land of There as the land of Here.
Think of her still as the same, I say,
She is not dead—she is just away."

This little poem of James Whitcomb Riley's will express the thoughts left by my mother to her dear old friends in Weymouth, who were unable to attend the services at my home Saturday, Jan. 10th.

In earlier years my mother was an active member of various organizations in the town as well as a faithful worker in the Episcopal church, where she was always ready and willing to serve.

For the past ten years her life has been spent closely in the home owing to paralysis. During those years, the hours have been passed cheerfully and uncomplainingly, and much happiness has come each week, from the rich supply of literature from the Tufts Library. I wish to thank our Librarian, who were always so thoughtful and attentive to the selection of books sent for her to read.

At the Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter seasons she looked forward to the lovely baskets and potted plants sent by the Unity Circle of King's Daughters and the Mission Circle connected with the Universalist church. It made her feel, tho' she was shut in from the world, that her name was not forgotten.

She loved the friends, young and old, who were faithful and true in sending her cards, letters and flowers, and coming to chat for an hour with her, they always found her so interested to talk or to listen full of courage, perseverance and a brave spirit to the last.

God granted her prayer, that her life should have a peaceful ending, and after several days of unconsciousness she quietly passed away.

I wish to thank all, who have been near and so willing to serve and strengthen me at this time. My gratitude is the deepest and sincerest and I can say,
"God knows the best."
L. MAY CHESSMAN.

Weymouth Choral Society and Orchestra.

The Weymouth Choral society and orchestra gave a magnificent concert at Bates' opera house before a large and appreciative audience last Friday evening and fully sustained the prestige of former Weymouth musicians. They were ably assisted by Miss Harriett A. Shaw, harpist; Miss Edith Castle, contralto soloist and Mrs. William A. Hodges, accompanist. The whole affair was under the efficient leadership of James W. Calderwood to whom credit is due for its great success. The officers of the society are Elmer E. Leonard, president; W. H. Swan and Mrs. H. B. Bacheider, vice presidents; Mrs. E. C. Richards, secretary; W. H. Pratt, treasurer and Bela P. French, librarian.

Important To Buyers of Fertilizers and Lime.

The Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station has just issued its fertilizer bulletin No. 147. It contains the analysis of all fertilizers and lime compounds sold in the State during the year. Interesting data are given, regarding the economy of purchasing high grade fertilizers. A discussion is made of the quality of plant food found in the mixed goods, as well as in the unmixed materials. The bulletin also contains the results of a field experiment, to show the value of ground rocks as fertilizers. The bulletin will be sent to anyone upon request. Address communications to Director, Agricultural Experiment Station, Amherst, Mass.

Clapp Wins at Needham.

The Clapp Memorial Association basketball team journeyed to Needham last Thursday night and defeated the Needham Y. P. A. five 25 to 21. The game was close and exceedingly hard fought all the way through. Schutz and Bumpus excelled for the East Weymouth quintet. The summary:

Clapp Memorial Needham Y. P. A.
Schutz, rf lb, Carter
Calkins, rf rb, Whitney
Bumpus, c c, McIntosh
Warren, rb lf, Wilkinson
Abstead, lb rf, Brownville
Score—Clapp Memorial 25, Needham Y. P. A. 21. Goals from floor—Schutz 3, Bumpus 5, Warren, Whitney, Wilkinson 5, McIntosh, Abstead. Goals from fouls—Schutz 5, Brownville 5, Wilkinson 2. Referee—Gordon. Umpire—Rose. Scorer—Palmer. Timer—Keefe. Time—20m halves. Attendance—150.

1889 TOTMAN—McDONALD 1914

East Weymouth Couple Observe Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of Their Marriage.

Mr and Mrs. S. B. Totman of High street, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, last Friday evening. Friends were present from Boston, Framingham and the Weymouths. They were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Torrey, Mr. and Mrs. Burgess Spinney and Wendell Totman. The ushers were the Misses Florence, Edith and Carrie Williams of Boston, and Miss Mildred Gibson of East Weymouth.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with potted plants, cut flowers and white bells. The bride and groom, while receiving, stood beneath a white arch with their inscription 1889—1914, in silver. Tower's orchestra rendered beautiful and appropriate selections which were heartily appreciated by those present. The neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Totman presented them with a beautiful coffee percolator, and the presentation was made by Charles Gibson Jr. They also received other beautiful gifts. Some of the young people enjoyed dancing. Mr. Totman's mother was able to be present, after her long illness, and enjoyed the evening.

Silas Binney Totman, the groom, was a son of Richard and Lucinda (Pratt) Totman and was born in East Weymouth, Oct. 24th, 1867, with a long line of Totman, Binney, Pratt and Burrell ancestry. Mrs. Totman, the bride, was a daughter of John and Eleanor (Salisbury) McDonald and a native of Boston. Their marriage took place in the Old "White Church" East Weymouth, Rev. Merrill Blanchard, officiating.

The following original poem by Mrs. Elmer A. Stoddard, (Jennie F. Stoddard) was read by Mrs. W. M. Tirrell, and enthusiastically applauded.

TO MR. AND MRS. S. B. TOTMAN ON THE TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR MARRIAGE.

By Jennie F. Stoddard.

Swiftly, speeds life's current through
The little vein,
Swiftly, speed thoughts through
The busy brain.
But, swiftlier still, in every clime,
Is the wondrous flight of time.

These two friends have measured years,
Which number twenty-five;
Loving, peaceful; and with kindly deeds
The years are rife;
May their future seasons have no pain
Mixed with alloy,
May they live a lifetime of happiness
And joy.

Their home ties unbroken, friends their friendship giving,
Children and parents about them living;
Who can fathom this great mystery: this mystery of life?
Who can tell its mighty portents: with what glories it is rife?

Thus, from time's great spindle, life's uneven thread is spun, Measured by the seasons; by words spoken; actions done.
May these friends be ever blessed by His wondrous power above,

Nahant Tribe I. O. R. M. Installation

At the meeting last Thursday evening in East Weymouth, of Nahant tribe I. O. R. M., Deputy Great Sachem William Vining of Mattakesett tribe, with a full suite, installed the following officers: prophet, John Sullivan; sachem, Arthur Parsons; senior sagamore, Brother Williams; junior sagamore, Brother Adams; chief of records, T. F. Dalton; collector of wampum, William Brown; keeper of wampum, George Briggs.

Special guests were Past Deputy Otto Rymassie and fifteen members of Hedenosaunce tribe of Wollaston, several members of Poquamian tribe of Lynn, and Past Sachems Haywood and Parsons, of Sagamore tribe of Lynn.

After the installation exercises, a banquet was enjoyed. The tribe is arranging for a smoke talk the last of this month, to be attended by the great chiefs and the great council of Massachusetts.

The tribe received two new members, and two transfers from other tribes, during the month of December.

CAPTAIN HASTINGS 83 YEARS OLD

South Weymouth Veteran Remembered by Host of Friends on Anniversary.

Captain Charles W. Hastings of South Weymouth, attained his eighty-third year last Sunday, and in celebration of the event, there was a very happy family gathering at his home on Pleasant street.

Captain Hastings received the congratulations and well wishes of a host of neighbors and friends, and he was also remembered with several gifts.

He was born in Schenectady, New York, the ninth of a family of ten children, of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Hastings. At the age of 15, he came to Boston, where he found employment in the Dickenson type foundry, for several years. After this, he engaged in railroading in Springfield. He came to South Weymouth in 1851, and took a position with his brother-in-law, Alfred Tirrell, a prominent shoe manufacturer.

When the Civil War broke out, Mr. Hastings was representative to the general court from Weymouth, and resigned to go to the front. He enlisted April 25, 1861, in Company H, 12th Massachusetts regiment, made up principally of Weymouth men, and was made lieutenant. He served with honor throughout the war, and was promoted to the captaincy on the field.

He saw active service in the battles of Second Bull Run, Antietam, The Wilderness, Fredericksburg and Gettysburg. He was taken prisoner while on picket duty, the day of the battle of the Wilderness, and was confined for nine months in Libby, Macon Savannah and Charleston prisons.

After returning from the front, Capt. Hastings resumed his position in a shoe factory. When the Metropolitan police commission was established by the state, he was made clerk, and retained that position until its disbandment. After serving Secretary of State, Henry B. Pierce, a year as clerk, Mr. Hastings was appointed by Governor Talbot, as commissioner of state aid. In 1879, Governor Cranston consolidated the office with that of commissioner of pensions, and Mr. Hastings was continued in charge. In 1910 he resigned, and since then has done little active work.

Mr. Hastings is a member of the Loyal Legion and of Reynolds Post G. A. R.

He was married twice. His first wife was Miss Fannie Roger, and his second, Miss Marion E. Daggett, both of South Weymouth. He has two sons, Edward B. Hastings of Milton, and Alfred W. Hastings of South Weymouth; also a sister, Mrs. Alfred Tirrell of South Weymouth.

E. C. Loud, Dead.

Eugene C. Loud of South Weymouth, who two weeks ago last Sunday murdered his wife, Florence Loud, and then slashed his own throat, died at 6:30 o'clock last Monday morning at the Quincy hospital, following an operation last Sunday in hopes of saving his life. The warrant for murder, which has been issued against Loud was returned to the court Monday morning unreserved.

Loud was 38 years old. He leaves an aged mother, two sisters, a brother and three children, Weston, Gwendoline and Emerson, the latter a baby.

High School Notes.

The junior mathematics class will desert plane geometry next week, in favor of advanced algebra. The time-worn saying "Out of the frying pan into the fire," fits the incident completely, at least in the eyes of the students.

Those who are in charge of the senior dance, are not exactly satisfied over the number of tickets distributed. They think that more people should buy tickets than have bought them. They are right in feeling this way, because the dance comes but once a year, and should be patronized by graduates and under-graduates alike. Here's hoping that the affair is a success financially and otherwise. Join in the toast by purchasing a ticket.

Captain Casseuse and Manager Clark Page have already started work on next fall's football schedule. The season will be short, but extremely interesting, they say.

HOLY NAME MEN IN BIG MEETING.

Eight Hundred Attend Union Vespers at Immaculate Conception Church East Weymouth Last Sunday Evening.

The feast of the Holy Name of Jesus, the patronal feast of the Holy Name society, was celebrated at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in East Weymouth last Sunday evening. About eight hundred members from St. Francis Xavier church, Rev. Dennis J. Crimmins, pastor of South Weymouth; Church of the Sacred Heart, Rev. J. B. Holland, pastor of Weymouth Landing; Immaculate Conception church, Rev. James Allison, pastor of East Weymouth; St. Paul's church, Rev. Peter McCall, pastor of Hingham; St. Mary's church, Rev. Father Mulligan, of Hull and Nantasket and St. Anthony's church, Rev. Fr. Brogan, of Cohasset and Scituate.

A vesper service was held with Rev. James Allison as celebrant. The choir of the Immaculate Conception church, augmented by members of the choir of the churches rendered special music, in charge of Miss Nellie F. Noonan, organist and musical director of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

An interesting address was given by Rev. Fr. Conway S. J. of Boston.

Monday Club.

The Monday Women's club of Weymouth, held their regular meeting on Monday afternoon, Jan. 19th, in Masonic Temple, East Weymouth. Mrs. Arthur V. Harper presided.

The various committees reported progress in their work. Flowers were sent Mrs. Thomas A. Watson, who is ill at her home in Braintree.

At the close of the business session, Master Percy Amos, violinist, of North Weymouth, accompanied by Mrs. George Amos, gave several selections, much to the delight of his audience.

Judge Harvey H. Baker gave an address on "The Juvenile Court," showing the methods of handling the young in the best way possible, for the future good of the boy.

Mrs. John Thomas was hostess of the afternoon, her assistants being Mrs. George Beane, Mrs. Wilson Beane, Miss Lillian Curtis, Mrs. William Dasha, Mrs. Henry W. Dwyer, Mrs. Ashton Frothingham, Mrs. Harry Gould, Mrs. Ellen O'Neil, Mrs. William Scabury and Mrs. Raymond Lane. Her pourers were Mrs. Arthur Bartlett, Mrs. A. J. Sidelinger, Mrs. Arthur Allen and Mrs. William S. Drake.

Athletic Contests.

An athletic contest has been started at the Clapp Memorial Association, East Weymouth, under the direction of J. E. Faybhan, for the junior boys' class. The tests began last Saturday, with a standing broad jump, and different tests will be held each Saturday morning until April. The boys' bowling scores are also counted in the summary of points, and at the end of the gym season, the boy with the highest score will receive a prize. The results last Saturday in the standing broad jump were as follows: 1, Paul Humphrey, 7 ft. 10 in.; 2, George Clark, 7 ft. 14 in.; 3, Stanton Newcomb, 7 ft. 4; 4, Alton Easterbrook, 6 ft. 7 1/2 in.; 5, George Curtis, 6 ft. 7 in. In the bowling, E. Haggarty got 98; Easterbrook, 83; Stanton Newcomb and Clifton Harlow, 82; Leo Graney, 75, and John McCarthy 72. Tomorrow morning, the test for running high jump will be held.

Railroad News.

The scarcity of snow this winter, is proving a bonanza to the many railroad boys, who have to work night and day on the cold and unpleasant snow plows. Still, there are several of the men in the local barn at least, who would like to see some snow, as the extra wage rate for snow plow duty appeals to those with nothing hardy to do but keep warm in the lobby.

Foreman J. Walter Howley and Clerk Orin French, had a force of extra cars out last Friday night, to convey the large crowds going and coming to and from the Choral Society concert at Weymouth. As usual, the large crowd was handled quickly and well by the men in charge.

William Gould, president of the local union of street car employees, is to attend the annual ball this evening in Brockton, of the Brockton Division, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railroad Employees.

Special cars were run last Sunday evening, to convey the members of the Holy Name society, to the services in the Church of the Immaculate Conception in East Weymouth.

Pulmonol

(PAYNE)

PULMONOL is prescribed by Physicians, is endorsed by Ministers and Priests, is recommended by Druggists, and is given away to the sick by Officers of the Salvation Army.

IF you are troubled with Weak Lungs or subject to a Hacking Cough—if you have Bronchitis or are inclined to Tuberculosis, we ask you to try Pulmonol. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure"—a 12 oz. bottle of Pulmonol kept in the house may be worth more and do more for you than a long doctor's bill.

While Pulmonol is a great Preventative Remedy in building up your ability to ward off disease, it is just as great a remedy when disease overtakes you.

Pulmonol is a scientific preparation compounded by a well-known Physician whose whole life has been spent in the study of lung troubles. One trial will convince you of its worth.

If your druggist does not have it on sale you can get it direct from us by Parcel Post. Two Sizes—$1.00 & $2.00.

The Wild Boar.

The wild boar is a most courageous animal. The element of luck counts for a great deal in pig sticking, as in most other forms of sport, and it often happens that the foremost sportsman who by dint of hard riding or thanks to the fastest horse has come up with the quarry is deprived of the coveted honor of "first spear" by a sudden "jink" or turn of the pig. The boar, in spite of his clumsy appearance, is not only possessed of a great turn of speed, but is extraordinarily active. He will turn and twist like a hare, putting every obstacle in the shape of bushes, rocks, water, etc., between himself and his pursuers, but all the time making for the nearest patch of jungle and safety. The pace after a pig is faster than the best of runs with hounds, but is sooner over.

Canned Music In Scotia.

Early in the last century an old Forfarshire lady installed in the bedroom corridor of her castle an automatic organ. It was her delight of a morning to wake her guests with its strains. But it was not the delight of one of them, Miss Sophia Johnstone of Hilton, to be so awakened, and she said so.

"Ye dinna like the music? Ye shouldna say that, Soply," said the hostess. "Ye'll no' win to heaven an' ye dinna take pleasure in music. It's to be all music there, ye know."

"Deed," said the incorrigible one, "an' if heaven's a place w' and wives play'n on hand organs at 6 o'clock in the mornin' it's no the place I tak' it for, nor yet the place I want to be in."—New Witness.

MOODS OF THE RHINO.

Emotions It Exhibits at the Sight and Odor of Men.

The recognized presence of men rouses in the rhinoceros several emotions, which in the order of their intensity I should put as bewilderment, fear, dull curiosity and truculence. If the men are merely seen usually the only emotions aroused are bewilderment and curiosity; if smelled fear is the usual result, but in a certain number of cases even the sight or the smell of men arouses senseless rage.

Some rhinos are always cross and evil tempered, but many others which are normally good natured now and then have fits of berserker fury. Anything conspicuous which arouses their interest may also arouse their hostility. White has an evil attraction for them. My friends the McMillans while traveling through a rhino country found that the two white horses of their cavalcade were so frequently charged that they finally painted them khaki color. I have never seen them charge other game, and gazelles and hartebeests feed in their immediate neighborhood with indifference, yet I have been informed by trustworthy eyewitnesses of one rhinoceros charging a herd of zebra and another some buffalo.

The rhinoceros usually gets out of the way of the elephant. It will unquestionably on occasions charge men and domestic animals entirely unprovoked. Twice I have known of one charging an oxen wagon. In one case an ox was killed, in the other the rhino got entangled in the yokes and trestle, and the driver, an Africaner, lashed it lustily with his great whip until it broke loose and ran off, leaving the ox span tumbled in wild confusion.—Theodore Roosevelt in Scribner's.

TINY MEN AND WOMEN.

Some Noted Liliputians Who Were Exhibited in England.

Of dwarfs exhibited in England the most celebrated was the Pole, Borulwaski, who was born in 1739 and died in 1837. At six he measured seventeen inches and finally, in his thirtieth year, reached thirty-nine inches. He had a sister shorter than himself by head and shoulders. Borulwaski traveled all over Europe, and now lies buried at Durham.

In the year of his death his successor, Charles Stratton, known to fame as "General Tom Thumb," was born. When twenty-five he was thirty-one inches high.

In 1844 he appeared in England and had an extraordinary success. After extensive travel in both hemispheres the "general" again visited England in 1857, but the dwarf man, in spite of many personal and intellectual qualities, was less attractive than the dwarf boy. In the year 1853 he married the very minute American Lavinia Warren, and died in 1883.

Other well known dwarfs of the past have been:

Three children of a Scottish shepherd named McKinley, the shortest of whom was forty-five inches.

Don Francisco Hidalgo, a Spaniard, twenty-nine inches.

Jan Hannema, a Dutchman, twenty inches.

Mary Jane Youngman, an Australian, who at the age of fifteen was thirty-five inches high.—Pall Mall Gazette.

What Killed the Adjutant.

There is a story of an English officer, Colonel Fitzroy, that dates back to 1860. Fitzroy when in India was possessed of an air gun, and one afternoon he took a shot at an adjutant, a bird which, being an excellent scavenger, is protected from injury by a fine of 100 rupees. Several people saw the bird fall, but heard no report. There was, of course, a hubbub, and a court of inquiry was ordered to investigate the bird's death.

As luck would have it, Fitzroy was appointed president of the court, the finding of which was duly recorded as follows: "The court, having carefully investigated all the evidence brought before it, has come to the conclusion that the bird died of sunstroke. (Signed) Phil Fitzroy, Captain and President."

POLARIZED LIGHT.

Why the Rays of the Moon May Chemically Affect Foodstuffs.

Moon rays are said to make men go blind and mad, and to turn food stuff bad. There is even quoted by the London Lancet a death the cause of which was officially stated to be exposure to moonlight. Apparently the food most seriously affected by the moon's radiations is fish, and seemingly trustworthy statements have been made as to the ill effects produced in persons who had partaken of fish which had been freely exposed to moonlight.

E. G. Bryant, writing from Port Elizabeth, South Africa, suggests that a possible explanation might lie in the well known fact that the light of the moon, being reflected light, is more or less polarized, and possibly polarized light may exert a peculiar chemical action. Polarized light was obtained by him from a powerful metallic filament lamp, the light being polarized by means of a pile of sheets of plate glass backed with silver and placed at the correct angle.

The experiments showed certain marked results when fish were submitted to this light. When two slices cut from the same fish were hung, one in the direct light and the other in the polarized beam of light, the latter invariably began to decompose before the former, though the temperature of the polarized beam was several degrees lower than the direct light.—New York Press

TWO FACED RONCONI.

He Could Depict Tragedy on One Side and Comedy on the Other.

In "The Memoirs of an American Prima Donna," by Clara Louise Kellogg, there is a good story of Ronconi, who played second cobbler in "Crispino e la Comare." We are told that he was one of the finest Italian baritones that ever lived and succeeded in getting a degree of genuine high comedy out of the part that has never been surpassed.

"He used to tell of himself a story of the time when he was singing in the Royal opera at St. Petersburg. The czar—father of the one who was murdered—said to him once:

"Ronconi, I understand that you are so versatile that you can express tragedy with one side of your face when you are singing and comedy with the other. How do you do it?"

"Your majesty," rejoined Ronconi, "when I sing 'Maria de Rohan' tomorrow night I will do myself the honor of showing you."

"And accordingly the next evening he managed to turn one side of his face, grim as the tragic mask, to the audience, while the other, which could be seen from only the imperial box, was excessively humorous and cheerful. The czar was greatly amused and delighted with the exhibition."

Pelicans and Their Pouches.

The pelican is not an attractive bird, but both the eye and the nose are commendably regular in his features. The parent birds catch fish and after eating their fill deposit the others in their pouches under their bills and carry them to their young. These pouches will hold from three to eight pounds of fish. They are elastic and when distended to their utmost nearly touch the ground. When empty the pouch lies close up under the big bill and is merely a mass of wrinkles. It is this pouch that gives the pelican his characteristic and disagreeable odor, caused by particles of decaying fish. The pelican's legs are short and strong, and its feet have large webs. It is not a fast swimmer or a rapid flier, but it is practically tireless in both air and water. On land it is awkward and unwieldy.

The Actress' Retort.

Georgette Leblanc, the actress, wife of Maurice Maeterlinck, was on tour in a French town, where the local company "supported" her in one of her husband's plays.

But the support was weak and halting. The poet's lines were mangled, and several characters seemed unable to understand what they were saying. Mme. Leblanc sought out her manager and spoke to him.

"A writer like Maeterlinck should be treated with more respect."

"Madame," he answered, "M. Maeterlinck is not the first to suffer. Sophocles, Moliere, Racine, Shakespeare, Goethe and other great dramatists are daily murdered in the same way."

"Possibly, but they are not murdered alive, at any rate."

Anything to Please.

Speaking of accommodating hotel clerks, the best I ever saw was in a certain small town. I reached the hotel late in the evening. Just before I retired I heard a scampering under the bed and saw a couple of large rats just escaping. I complained at the office. The clerk was as serene as a summer breeze.

"I'll fix that all right, sir," he said. "Front! Take a cut up to room 23 at once." Exchange.

Expensive.

"No, I've decided never to accept friendly advice any more."

"Why not? It doesn't cost you anything."

"Well, I've found out that it almost invariably costs you your friends."—Exchange.

HE DIDN'T LIKE DRIPPING.

And No Wonder, After He Had Read About Its Strength.

What is dripping?

Everybody knows that dripping is supposed to be the juices, the savory essences, that fall from roasting meats.

That is the supposition. But what really is dripping the dripping that the poor of England buy by the pound and smear upon their bread in lieu of butter?

The question perhaps will never be answered, but a partial solution is given to it by the fact that a London paperhouse recently bought at $7 a ton thirty-two tons of dripping from a soap works.

Alfred Noyes used to tell a dripping story.

"A little boy," he would begin, "complained bitterly about the bread and dripping that formed his daily breakfast."

"I'll kill me," he whined at last. "I know I'll kill me."

"Kill you? What do you mean?"

"Why, I've been feeling pretty bad lately, and now I know it's all this dripping what's the cause of the trouble. I read it in a book."

"Some pure food rubbish, I dare say! And what, precisely, did you read in this vile book, silly?"

"I read whined the archin, that constant dripping wears away a stone."—Exchange.

HUMOR OF A CANNIBAL.

He Enjoyed It Himself, but It Didn't Tickle the Victim.

A number of natives came to greet us when we landed at Bau, a Fiji island, among them a few whom the consul seemed to know. They volunteered to act as escorts for us and by various expressions tried to convey the idea that they were glad to see us.

A school forms one side of the square. Across from this stands the council chamber, built on the trench where the bodies were roasted for their former feasts. The old headstone against which Caeban used to dash the brains of his victims still stands, and the anchor and rudder of a French ship wrecked near Bau lie beside it.

Beneath a picture of Queen Victoria I saw an old sword swinging. I examined it and found it was a French weapon, no doubt the arm of the unfortunate French vessel's commander.

During the time this was going on Jim, Ratu Kadavu's servant, who is a particularly good type of a large, muscular race, approached me, ran his hand around my waist and slowly down my thigh and snatched his lips with a wicked smile. I laughed at this display of aboriginal humor, but not very heartily, for the sword of the French captain still swung before my eyes.—Christian Herald.

Time For the Actor to Stop.

On the subject of playing the same part over and over an indefinite number of times David Warfield says:

"There is no such thing as playing a part too long. The mellowing process should never cease, but if it does, if spontaneously falls, if the actor feels that he is becoming at all mechanical in the part, he should abandon it at once—for his own salvation.

"The surest danger signal is half hearted applause. From this the actor knows that he has lost an essential quality of the character, and the tragedy of it is he cannot tell what that quality is or how he lost it. An actor may tell a joke a thousand times and provoke laughter, but suddenly it falls of response. That's the time for him to stop."—American Magazine.

A Cure For Mosquitoes.

The people of London have learned of an agreeable way to keep their houses free from flies and mosquitoes. They burn sandalwood, which has a pleasing odor, but one that the summer pests much dislike. The idea comes from the orient, where it has long been practiced.

The sandalwood can be bought at almost any Turkish or Japanese import house. You prepare it for burning by cutting it into pieces about half an inch thick and three inches long and then bake or dry it in a slow oven for twenty-four hours. You light a piece of the wood and put it in a metal urn or saucer. After it has ignited well blow out the flame and leave the red ember to smolder until the wood is wholly consumed.

Father's Ultimatum.

The father of a large family of children was trying hard to read the evening paper.

"What's that terrible racket in the hall, Martha?"

"One of the children just fell down stairs."

"Well," he replied, turning over another page of the paper, "you tell the children if they can't fall downstairs quietly they'll have to stop it."—Lippincott's.

Showing Him How.

"You young scoundrel!" said the father, seizing his disobedient son by the hand. "I'll show you how to treat your mother!"

And he gave him several bangs on the ears and then shook him until his hair began to fall out.

Her Little Slip.

Departing guest: "We've had a simply delightful time. Hostess: "I'm so glad." At the same time I regret that the storm kept all our best people away.—Brooklyn Life.

Ever Present Help.

"They say that a woman's tears come to her aid at any moment."

"Yes. Her tears are volunteers, so to speak."—Boston Transcript.

To our friend Robert Burns on this, his birthday.

"Should and acquaintance be forgot,
And never brought to min?
Should and acquaintance be forgot,
And days o' lang syne?"

"What tho' on hamely fare we dine,
Wear hoddens-grey, and a' that;
Gie fools their silks, and knaves their wine,
A man's a man, for a' that,
For a' that, and a' that,
Their tinsel show, and a' that;
The honest man, tho' er' sae poor,
Is King o' men for a' that."

The present Legislature of Massachusetts is confronted with a record breaking pile of bills to be considered. A leading Boston paper has classified them as Fool Bills, Fake Bills and Reasonable Bills, a large majority of which are in the first two classes. It is a pity that there is not a sound and conservative committee on bills with full power to take the whole commitment and consign the Fool and Fake Bills to oblivion without letting them reach the Senate or the House.

The "To Church on Sunday" movement which is getting to be wide spread has reached Weymouth and there will be something doing for the next two weeks. It is needless to say anything of the Catholic people of Weymouth; they are a church going people all the time and the seating capacity of their churches is for use and is used. On the other hand we have fourteen, so called, Protestant churches with a seating capacity of about 4400 people and yet the average total in these fourteen churches is less than one-half of the seating capacity and we hear talk of consolidation of some of them. Why consolidate? We have nearly of quite 8000 Protestant people and church seating capacity for only half. Why not fill the churches once and see how they will look.

Citizens' Association.

At the meeting of the Citizens' Association of Weymouth and East Braintree last Monday evening, Col. Henry L. Kincaid of Quincy gave an address on "The Boston Chamber of Commerce Trip to South America." Russell B. Worster presided. The committee on a new school-house for Ward Three submitted plans and estimates for a 14-room building, with all the modern conveniences, including playrooms, gymnasium, manual training quarters, up-to-date heating facilities, etc.

Simple Enough.

"How does your husband account for the high cost of living?" "Very simply. He just blames me for it."

Two at a Crack.

A good way to solve two of our modern problems would be to take all priors out of politics and put some politicians in prison.—Boston Transcript.

Best He Had Tasted.

Mark Twain was playing golf on a well known English course. In trying to make a very long brassie shot, Twain tore up considerable turf and a chunk of dirt hit him squarely in the face. The Englishman he was playing with, seeking to relieve the embarrassment of his guest, remarked: "By the way, Mr. Twain, how do you like our course?" "Fine," said Twain. "I think it is the best I have ever tasted."—From "Golf Yarns," by H. B. Martin.

Character Told by the Chin.

The shape of the chin is of considerable importance in reading character. A chin smooth and round denotes a childlike disposition and a yielding will. The oval chin is an indication of an artistic, sensitive nature, with some talent along those lines, while the angular chin denotes the scientific, practical nature. The protruding chin always means combativeness, determination and power, and the receding chin denotes the weak will, and the straight chin also denotes weakness.

Bill of Rights.

The bill of rights is a declaration of fundamental principles deemed basic to the Constitution itself and borrowed from the English bill of rights of 1689. When the Constitution of the United States was framed and submitted to the people it did not have a bill of rights and it was so harshly criticized on this account that its friends promised to incorporate or add such a declaration, and the first ten amendments to the Constitution, made after the main instrument was adopted, were in fulfillment of this promise. All the State Constitutions now have bills of rights, practically identical with one another.

Had the Last Word.

Two ladies, during a friendly meeting on the street, got to quarrelling about their ages, and used very strong language toward each other. At last, as if to end the dispute, one of them turned away and said in a very conciliatory tone of voice: "Let us not quarrel over the matter any more. I, at least, have not the heart to do it. I never knew who my mother was; she deserted me when a baby, and who knows but that you may have been the heartless parent?"

Owned Up.

"I hear you're writing books on sex hygiene." "Yes," replied the hack writer, with a chuckle. "I've struck pay dirt at last."—Judge

Boy Scouts of America Troop No. 2.

Three cheers for the Scout basket ball team which played such a good game at Milton last Saturday evening. Although they lost the game by the narrow margin of four points they deserve great credit for the way they played. They were up against one of the strongest teams in this section, the second team of the Cunningham gym whose average weight was 140 lbs. The Scout team was one point ahead when, with only four minutes to play their opponents scored two baskets. The score was 15 to 11. Studley threw 3 baskets and Sampson 4 and Sampson scored three points on fouls. The team was handicapped somewhat by the absence of Scout Rosnell, who was obliged to play on the High school team.

The next game will be played at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon. The opponents will be the Intermediates of the Y. M.

Hard Lesson.
A judicious reticence is hard to learn, but it is one of the great lessons of life.—Chesterfield.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH

—Miss Alma Holbrook is spending the winter in Denver, Colorado.

—John Collinane is quite ill at his home on Union street.

—Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Kingsley have moved to Hingham.

—Alfred T. Fuller of Pond street is slowly recovering from several painful injuries he received on Washington street, Boston, last week by being hit by District Chief Sennott's wagon while the latter was responding to a fire at Thompson's Spa.

—Raymond Sherman, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sherman is quite ill with scarlet fever.

—The following officers have been elected by Court Wessagusset F. of A. of this place: Joseph Keefe, chief ranger; Dennis F. Buckley, sub-chief ranger; Thomas F. Roche, financial secretary; John F. Kennedy, treasurer; George Ford, recording secretary; Frank Martin, senior woodward; Donald Keefe, junior woodward; Martin Zeoli, senior beadle; Charles Vining, trustee; Charles Clemons, lecturer.

—Stanley Hersey of this place has been appointed as a public weigher.

—In the Old South church vestry last Tuesday evening Miss Sarah B. Tirrell spoke on her trip to Alaska. The affair was held under the auspices of the Ladies Aid society.

—Rev. Albert V. House of the Union Congregational church, preached last Sunday evening at the Congregational church in Abington.

—Cornelius Tirrell, a former resident of this place, celebrated the 95th anniversary of his birth, at his home in Acushnet last Monday. Mr. Tirrell was born, and passed nearly all his life in this village. In his younger days, he took an active part in town affairs, and held many town offices. He was a shoe worker by trade.

—Representative Kenneth L. Nash has been appointed to the joint standing public lighting committee of the house.

—The Campfire circle, in charge of Mrs. F. A. Northrop, presented "The Pedlars' Parade," in the vestry of the Union church, last Saturday evening. The proceeds will be used in campfire work.

—The annual Norfolk club concert and ball will take place this evening, in Fogg's Opera House.

—The Village Study club of South Weymouth met last Monday evening in the Fogg Library building. Bates Torrey presided. After routine business the evening's program under the direction of Mrs. Fletcher W. Howe was presented. It consisted of the reading of Shakespeare's "Othello" with parts taken by H. H. Joy, S. R. Cook, M. R. Abbott, Rev. A. V. House, Frank Fernale, Miss Helen Richards, Miss Marjorie Wentworth, Mrs. Henry Sowers, Mrs. Roy E. Moore, Miss Florence M. Grant and Mrs. Walter R. Field.

—The Tuesday evening whist club met this week with Mrs. Louis K. Jones at her home on Main street.

—Mrs. Harvey N. Reed, a former resident of this place, now of North Abington, entertained the Wednesday afternoon whist club of this town this week.

—The illustrated lecture on "Storm Heroes of Our Coast" by Hon. Arthur K. Peck in the Universalist church last Sunday evening was attended by a large audience. The lecture was extremely interesting to all.

White Bread.

Hygienists have long called attention to the serious consequences of the increasing popular preference for white bread. At present dark colored bread is despised as "peasant's food." In the towns the meannest workman will eat only white bread. The flour used for making this bread is obtained by passing the meal through a very fine sieve, so that it contains hardly anything but starch and cellulose. White bread, which plays an important role with the French people, is thus extremely poor in really nourishing food, and it is to the increasing consumption of it that many hygienists ascribe in France the racial enfeeblement, the diminution of stature and even the present development of tuberculosis. Representations have frequently been widely made on this subject, but without effect, for the bakers can provide only what the public demands.—Paris Letter to London Lancet

Some Surprises For the Doctor.

There is a story current about a widely known London doctor. About 3 o'clock one morning he was ruing up by a wealthy patient and begged to come over at once. Turning out of bed he rushed off, expecting to find the man in extremis. Imagine his surprise at being ushered into a dining room where a gay supper party was assembled. The first remark made to him was: "Oh, doctor, I am so glad you have come. We wanted you to settle a bet as to exactly where the diaphragm is." He not only told them where the diaphragm was, but a good many other things. The patient tried to modify him by asking his fee. Still furiously angry, he named a staggering one, which, to his surprise, was paid on the spot.—London World.

Truth—and Then Some.

A Cleveland man visited the land of his fathers on a recent vacation and while in the Emerald Isle took a trip to the lakes of Killarney. His guide, of course, told the most wonderful stories and legends of the region.

"Pat," said the Clevelander, "do you ever lie about these things?"

"No, sir," asserted Pat, "I never lie about them. I always tell th' truth in t'very particular—only I adds to it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

There Were Others.

He was a rather persevering young man, and he had proposed to a beautiful girl something like a dozen times, and on each occasion the answer had been a negative one. Still he persevered, and one night on a moonlight walk with the soft south wind blowing caressingly he once more started to tell her of his wondrous love.

"Della, dear," he tenderly remarked, throwing away his cigarette to give his eloquence further play, "there is something that I must tell you before we return. You have heard it before, but—"

"Look here, Jimmy," impatiently interrupted the beautiful girl, "how many more times are you going to ask me to marry you?"

"Not many, I guess, Della, dear," answered the young man with great frankness. "One" of the other three girls that I am proposing to is beginning to show signs of weakening!"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Man's Best Education.

The best and most important part of every man's education is that which he gives himself.—Gibbons.

LOVELL'S CORNER

—A Sunday school board meeting was held in the church vestry Thursday evening to decide about the use of the grades' lessons for another year.

—The flag pole at the Pratt school was cut down since it was thought liable to fall at any time. It will probably be replaced by a new one in the spring.

—Extensive improvements have been made recently at the Plymouth quarry. A new engine room has been built for generating the compressed air by which all the drills are now run. Also a new derrick 75 foot high has been put up. Besides the regular force of about 30 men others are employed in cleaning up more land for further work.

—Thursday night a meeting of the official board was held after the prayer meeting.

—Rev. Joseph Reynolds, pastor of the Porter church has been preaching a special course of sermons on the silences of Jesus. The topic last Sunday was the "Silent Love of Jesus."

—A baked bean supper was held in the vestry Thursday evening in charge of the ladies aid.

—The regular meeting of Troop 3 Weymouth of the Boy Scouts was held at the home of their Scout Master F. W. Blanchard, Monday evening. Plans were made for raising money to go camping next summer. A debate was held the subject being "Is the Good Turn Necessary to Scout Work."

—Dr. Grant of East Weymouth will occupy the pulpit of the Porter M. E. church, Sunday morning.

—Mr. and Mrs. James B. Smith are the parents of a baby boy born Sunday morning, Jan. 10.

—The Improvement society of this place held its monthly meeting Tuesday evening. After the regular routine of business evidence of progress was shown by the exhibition of articles such as the tinder box for lighting a fire, the foot stove, the candle lantern, candle sticks, an old telescope, cradles, big cents, old pictures, old oil lamp, flax spun by hand, wool carded and knit by hand, bowl and stick for grinding spices, old dishes, hand needle work 100 years old, glasses for eyes, Boston Herald 1863, snuff box and other relics which the use of and improvements were discussed. Refreshments were served and a very pleasant hour was enjoyed.

Under the Ban of Death

A Story of Russian Nihilism

By PAUL SZENSKY

I was about twenty years old when the organizations which developed the late revolution began to exert an influence on Russian affairs. It is the young who are caught in such movements, and I was captivated especially by the secrecy assumed by the nihilists. I applied for admission in a circle of the brotherhood and was duly received as a member. The nihilists fulfilled the meaning of their name by assassinating those in power who stood in the way of their object. If a person was to be removed the circle drew lots to decide who should do the deed. I had scarcely joined when it was decided to dispatch the then minister of the interior, who was leaving no stone unturned to hunt out our members and send them either to Siberia or the gallows. When this move was decided upon and it was announced that one of our number was to be selected by lot to dispatch the minister I first fully realized that I had not got into a society of mysteries, but one of death, and when I drew the fatal number that compelled me to become an assassin, in all probability sacrificing my own life as well as that of the man I was appointed to kill. I saw that a choice of two methods of death was permitted me—either to gle doing my work or be hunted down by an emissary of the society and killed. I managed to keep up a show of resolution before my fellow members of the circle, appearing to accept the duty that had fallen to my lot. I went home conscious that I would be watched from the moment I left the meeting to see that I made no attempt to shirk my work. Once in my room I began to think what I should do. All my nature revolted against committing what to me was murder. I had joined the society, as I have said, not from a desire to emancipate Russia, but because I had been caught by the mystery surrounding it. I resolved at once that I would choose death rather at the hands of my companions than by being cut down as an assassin. Hope is never extinct in youth, and I hoped to get out of Russia by eluding those who were watching me. If I could do this I might reach some distant land—America or Australia—in which, by changing my name and altering my appearance, I might be able to elude them. To lay plans and take measures to assassinate a government official of high rank in Russia required time. What I decided upon was to pretend to enter upon the preliminaries of my work as though my intention was to carry it out. In this way I would attempt to disarm suspicion and have the better chance for flight. I took my father into my confidence, giving him to understand that he was to divulge the situation to no one, not even a member of the family. He was, of course, crushed by the news, but offered me what I needed—money to carry out my plan of flight and subsequent vanishment from the world. He was of assistance to me in another way. I had a sister a year younger than myself, who much resembled me. My father secured a passport for her to leave Russia on the ground that he intended to send her to Berlin to study music. Our plan was for me to pass the border dressed in her clothes and under her passport. I needed only to secure a woman's wig, which my father bought for me. My beard was scant and of so light a color that when closely shaved it was not noticeable, especially under a veil. Having purloined and put on my sister's clothes—fortunately she was just my height—and bid my father an affectionate adieu, I sallied forth in the middle of the afternoon and went by a roundabout route, doing some shopping by the way, to the railway station, reaching it just in time to make a through train. Knowing the watchfulness of the members of the nihilist circle appointed to see that I did not escape, I feared every moment to see some one of them spying upon me. But my plan of personating my sister was an admirable one, and I doubt not that though my home was being watched when I made my exit the watcher was deceived to think that it was she who was going out. I had no trouble in passing the border under my passport, but that I had chosen to go through in the night gave me a great advantage. I breathed freer when I found myself rolling along on German soil, but realized that a lifelong peril was in store for me. I had no baggage with me, so on reaching Berlin I provided myself with some before going to a hotel. I bought a portmanteau and filled it with new clothes, telling the store-keeper that they were for my brother, who was an invalid and could not therefore come for them himself. Having made my purchases, I hired a room in a hotel where I changed my apparel and walked out through a side door without attracting any attention, leaving my feminine garb in the room. Going straight to a railway station, I took a train for Hamburg, whence I sailed for the United States, under the

FACED A FOREIGN FLAG.

A British Seaman's Prank That Enraged the Brazilians.

The harbor of Rio de Janeiro is one of the wonders of the world. You enter a narrow strait guarded by a towering conical mountain and discover a glorious inland sea surrounded on every side by abrupt and precipitous mountains, many of them with the most fantastic outlines. I should imagine, says the Hon. Stephen Cole-ridge in "Memories," that all the fleets of the world might anchor there in safety. In the early seventies a couple of English bluejackets in search of adventure climbed to the top of the mountain that guards the entrance, hauled after them a flagstaff and a union jack, set up the pole on the summit and unfurled the flag to the breeze. The astounded and indignant Brazilians awoke one morning to find an alien bunting flying over their territory from its most conspicuous eminence. Protests were lodged with the English minister, who, with the utmost politeness, apologized for the thoughtless escapade of some entirely unknown persons and gravely told the Brazilian government that of course he would have no possible objection to the prompt removal of the flag and pole. The emperor, however, could find no subject in all his wide empire who would volunteer to make the ascent to the summit of the mountain, which the people of Rio de Janeiro considered unscalable. In this embarrassing dilemma the Brazilian government determined to knock over the staff by shooting at it. The Brazilian fleet was ordered to shoot the offending pole off the top of the mountain. Either they could not train their guns to the required angle of elevation or the target was too narrow for a successful shot. At any rate, the English flag flying over the proud Brazilian city remained, braving the battle and the breeze, till it rotted away.

“TENORS ARE QUEER.”

Old Time Opera Stars as Seen by Clara Louise Kellogg.

In "The Memoirs of an American Prima Donna," by Clara Louise Kellogg, the author tells of her triumph as Violetta in "Traviata." She argued that Violetta would probably love curious and exotic combinations, so she dressed the part in a gown of rose pink and pale primrose yellow that seemed to be altogether enchanting. "Apropos of the Violetta gowns, I sang the part during one season with a tenor whose hands were always dirty. I found the back of my pretty frock becoming grimmer and grimmer and greasier and greasier, and, as I provided my own gowns and had to be economical, I finally came to the conclusion that I could not and would not afford such wholesale and continual ruin. So I sent my compliments to monsieur and asked him please to be extra careful and particular about washing his hands before the performance, as my dress was very light and delicate, etc.—quite a polite message considering the subject. Politeness, however, was entirely wasted on him. Back came the cheery and nonchalant reply: "All right. Tell her to send me some soap. "I sent it and I supplied him with soap for the rest of the season. This was cheaper than buying new clothes. "Tenors are queer creatures. Most of them have their eccentricities, and the soprano is lucky if these are innocuous peculiarities. I used to find it in my heart, for instance, to wish that they did not have such queer theories as to what sort of food was good for the voice. Many of them affected garb. Strigelli usually exhaled an aroma of lazar beer, while the good Mazzolini invariably ate from one to two pounds of cheese the day he was to sing. He said it strengthened his voice. Brindini had been long enough in this country to become partly Americanized, so he never smelled of anything in particular."

Sharpening a Pocketknife. Cutlery have certain rules for sharpening razors, pocketknives, etc. "A razor," said one of the craft, "must be laid flat on the hone, because it is hollow ground and requires a fine edge. But a pocketknife requires a stiff edge, and the moment you lay it flat on a stone, so as to touch the polished side on the edge. It must be held at an angle of twenty to twenty-five degrees and have an edge similar to a chisel."

Helpful Words.

From a Weymouth citizen. Is your back lame and painful? Does it ache especially after exertion? Is there a soreness in the kidney region? These symptoms suggest weak kidneys. If so there is danger in delay. Weak kidneys get fast weaker. Give your troubles prompt attention. Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Your neighbors use and recommend them. Read this Weymouth testimony.

Mrs. James P. Burns, 21 Granite street, Weymouth, Mass., says: "I am the same strong friend of Doan's Kidney Pills at this time as when I gave a statement before, telling how they had helped me. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills, and I am always given prompt relief from backache and other symptoms of kidney complaint. You may continue to use my name."

Bicknell Family Reunion.

The Bicknell family reunion was held in the Park street church vestry, Boston, Jan. 15, at 2 p. m. Mrs. L. A. Dasha, Mrs. A. J. Sidelinger, and Mrs. E. R. O'Neill attended from North Weymouth.

Addresses were given by the president of the association, Thomas W. Bicknell, Rev. George W. Bicknell of Cambridge, Rev. John Bicknell of Mansfield and Dr. Emma B. Culbertson of Boston.

A book of the history, biography and genealogy of the family has been written by Mr. T. W. Bicknell, and those present enjoyed looking at the family portraits, and historic places in it, and are hoping some day to add it to their library.

A social hour at five o'clock with other colonial families, was followed by a banquet at 6 o'clock, with two hundred present.

Addresses were given in the evening, by Mr. Sherwin Cook and Mr. William H. Foster. Music was furnished by Mrs. Lora B. Riley and Mrs. Gertrude E. W. Young. Every one who attended enjoyed the afternoon and evening.

The publisher of the Bicknell family history, Mr. Thomas Bicknell, and his wife, who came from Cincinnati, Ohio, to attend the reunion of the Bicknell family in Boston, came to North Weymouth Friday. Mr. Bicknell was much interested in the old Bicknell homestead on Sea street, which is over two hundred years old, and is where his grandfather Benjamin was born.

They also visited Mrs. Elizabeth Shaw, who is 92, and the oldest Bicknell living. She had in her possession, a letter written 89 years ago, by Mr. Benjamin Bicknell, the publisher's grandfather, to her father Mr. Thomas Bicknell.

Mr. George Bicknell of Weymouth took Mr. and Mrs. Bicknell to the North Weymouth cemetery to see the monument of Zachary and Agnes Bicknell, the first of the name to settle in Weymouth.

Mrs. Sidelinger entertained the visitors at lunch.

Miss Annie Newton and Mrs. E. R. O'Neill were guests.

GROWING EVERY DAY.

The Go-to-Church Sunday, Feb. 8th, Fully Alive.

The "Go-to-Church Day" movement, explained in the Gazette last week, which contemplates the State-wide plan of "Everybody-at-Church" on Feb. 8th, is arousing much interest and a large response is probable. In Weymouth, the campaign is in charge of the pastors acting as a general committee, with Rev. H. C. Alvord as chairman and Rev. Albert V. House as secretary. The officers and Rev. Rufus H. Dix are a publicity committee, and Rev. William Hyde and Dr. George A. Grant are a committee on printing. Local joint committees from the churches will have charge of distributing large placards and circular invitations to the church services, the placards for public places to be put out this week, and the invitations for the homes next week. It is desired to supplement these with a great number of personal invitations and reminders unofficially expressed. Everybody is asked to help forward the movement. Twelve hundred special "Go-to-Church Day" buttons were distributed last Sunday in the churches and Sunday schools to help advertise the plan.

The South Weymouth churches each appointed a committee of ten, and the joint committee held a largely attended meeting at the Union church vestry last Sunday afternoon. Details of the campaign were considered and further plans formed. It is not intended to arrange programs of specially marked features, but provide good, helpful, attractive services of the usual character, at which everybody who will come, will be made to feel cordially welcome. The ideal is not a phenomenal service for one Sunday, but rather a service designed to lead, in its quiet, favorable influence, to the renewal of the church going habit in time to come.

D. A. R. Meeting.

The Susannah Tufts Chapter D. A. R. met at the home of Mrs. David Pierce, Webb street, Weymouth, Monday afternoon, Jan. 26th, at 2:30 o'clock, with Mrs. Alice Senior presiding.

The delegates chosen for the convention at Washington were: Mrs. Alice G. Senior, regent; Mrs. Harriet B. Voorhees, and the alternates were: Mrs. Harriet Bacheider, Mrs. Susan Thompson, Mrs. Louis Bates, Miss Hattie Nash, Mrs. W. B. Clapp, Miss Anna Hayward, Mrs. Marguerite Wellington, Miss Lucy Crane, Mrs. Cora Jordan, Miss Ursula Noyes. At the close of the meeting Rev. R. H. Dix gave a most interesting and instructive talk on the "Futility of War and the Great Peace Movement." He touched upon the Mexican question very largely and gave many thoughts to carry away.

Miss May Allen danced the minuet in costume and was very dainty and graceful. She was accompanied by Miss Bertha Johnson on the piano.

Dainty refreshments were served in the dining room by Mrs. Pierce, assisted by Mrs. Alice Jewell and Miss Hattie Nash. The meeting was unusually well attended and the afternoon was not only enjoyable, but very instructive.

The guests were Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Carleton Drown and her little daughter, Dorothy.

Monday Club.

The regular meeting of the Monday Women's club will be held on Monday afternoon, February 2nd, in Odd Fellow's hall, East Weymouth.

For the first time in the history of the club, the afternoon will be devoted to a debate, by members of the club, under the direction of Mrs. Jennie B. Worster. The question "Is Weymouth Progressive?" will be discussed and settled. This is to be an open meeting. Gentlemen friends of the club especially invited, Victrola music will be a feature of the afternoon. Tickets 25 cts.

Weymouth Loses to Rockland.

In the Rockland High school gymnasium last Friday the Rockland high basketball team five pinned defeat on the Weymouth high quintet 25 to 15.

R. Osgood and Dunn excelled for the winners and Fraher and Richardson starred for Weymouth high. The summary:

Goals from the floor—R. Osgood 4, Dunn 4, F. Osgood 2, N. Baker, Estes, Richardson 3, Fraher 2, J. Baker, Condrick. Goals from fouls—Dunn, Richardson. Referee—Baker. Score—Pickett, Timer—Barker. Time—15 and 20 min. periods.

Evidently Not.

The fellow who said, "One-half of the world does not know how the other half lives," evidently did not exist in a period of Ladies' Aid societies, Thursday Afternoon Whist clubs, Ladies of the Round Table, Sewing Circles and like organizations.—Judge.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Chubbuck Entertain Friends, Neighbors and Relatives Last Saturday Evening.

Fifty years ago last Saturday, Charles Henry Chubbuck and Miss Francis M. P. Hatch were married in the Unitarian parsonage at Cambridge by Rev. F. W. Holland. Last Saturday evening over a hundred guests from Pittsfield, Quincy, Neponset, Winchester, Ashmont and the Weymouths, gathered at the home of the couple on Curtis street, North Weymouth to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

From eight until eleven o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Chubbuck held a reception to their friends, neighbors and relatives. They were assisted in receiving by Miss Ruth Chubbuck Hunt and Miss Dorothy Richards Maybury, granddaughters of the couple.

The ushers were Arthur Russell Wolfe, Howard Chubbuck Maybury and Stuart Francis Maybury, grandsons of Mr. and Mrs. Chubbuck.

Music for the occasion was furnished by Miss Hazel F. Clark, violin; John H. Tower, viola and Miss Ethel F. Raymond, piano.

During the evening a luncheon was served by Bates and Humphrey, caterers, of East Weymouth.

Mr. and Mrs. Chubbuck were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, including a purse of gold, cut glass, china, silver ware and many bouquets of flowers.

Mr. Chubbuck was born in Quincy, July 13, 1839. He became a ship carpenter on a merchant vessel, sailing out of Boston to New Zealand, Austria and India.

When the Hancock Light Guards of Quincy were waiting for a train for Boston, Captain Curtis found the ranks were not full and called for volunteers. Young Chubbuck responded and became a member of the company, but while marching through the streets of Boston, the captain of the merchant vessel on which young Chubbuck had previously sailed, saw him and he was ordered to give his gun to the next man in the ranks and remain at home.

Later on, as ship's carpenter, he sailed all over the world, and was wrecked at one time in the Rangoon river in India.

In 1866 Mr. Chubbuck returned to North Weymouth, and as a member of the firm of Brown and Chubbuck, began building houses. After four years, he carried on the business alone and since that time he has built nearly eighty structures, among which are the Third Universalist church and the Bay Side Hotel.

Mrs. Chubbuck was born in Dedham, on July 4, 1842. Both Mr. and Mrs. Chubbuck are charter members of Monatiquot Colony Pilgrim Fathers and are connected with the Third Universalist church in North Weymouth.

We are in receipt of an original poem, read at the above occasion, and we will publish the same in next week's issue.

Mrs. Ann Miller.

Mrs. Ann Miller, widow of Thomas Miller, died at her home on Commercial street, East Braintree, Wednesday morning. Mrs. Miller was born in Scotland, September 19, 1827, and had lived in East Braintree for the past 58 years. She is survived by a son, George O. Miller, and two daughters, Miss Eliza Miller and Mrs. Peter Ness. The funeral will take place from her late home this afternoon.

Bowling Notes.

In the Boston pin tournament at the Norfolk club last Thursday eight team 7, Randolph Lamphray, captain and team 6, Stephen F. Pratt, captain, broke even at 2 points each. Team 6 got one and total 1322 to 1319, while team 7 got two strings. Stephen F. Pratt was high man with a single of 112 and three strings of 309 pins.

The five men candle pin league got under way at the C. M. A. this week with six teams. The lineup was as follows: team 1, Loring, Denbroeder, N. F. Pratt, Doucette and Gifford; team 2, Cunningham, H. L. Bates, Blackwell, Murray and McGrath; team 3, Elkington, Reamy, Hodges, Preston, and Nolan; team 4, Fred Nolan, Bumpus, White, L. W. Pratt and Whitton; team 5, Yaeger, Hilton, Dix, Newcomb and Newhall; team 6, Fred Drinkwater, Walker, L. W. Bates, Tirrell and Frank Drinkwater.

When the Eyes Are Gray.

Among the gray eyed there are few who retain any spiritual emotions. People with gray eyes are superficial, frivolous, given to embrace false idols, running down blind alleys, following false prophets, thoughtless, inconsiderate, wanting in sympathy, neurotic, unstable, not firm and deliberate, but rash and impetuous.

SUPPER AND INSTALLATION.

Wompatuck Encampment Installs Its Officers for the Year 1914.

On Wednesday evening, Wompatuck Encampment, No. 18, I. O. O. F. together with the Grand Encampment officers, district deputy and suite, ladies and invited guests sat down at about 7 o'clock to an old fashioned turkey and plum pudding supper, at the conclusion of which the company repaired to the encampment room above and witnessed the ceremony of installation of the officers elected for the current year. The installation was creditably performed by the following patriarchs: D. D. G. P. Edward B. Proulx, D. G. S. W. A. F. Briggs, D. G. H. P. Henry O. Turner, D. G. J. W. Arthur Whiting, D. G. T. H. J. Crocker, D. G. F. S. George Green, D. G. R. S. L. E. Davenport, D. G. I. S. Everett Wheeler.

The officers installed were: Chief Patriarch, Arthur N. Gardner; S. W., J. Alfred Monor; H. P., George H. Abbott; S., Joseph A. Cushing; Treas., George D. Bazley; J. W., Clement N. Gardner; guide, Charles H. Matthews; I. S., Burleigh W. French; F. W., Harry E. Barse; S. W., Charles Q. Marlon; T. W., Irving H. Tirrell; F. W., Oliver J. Horton; F. G. T., Henry Mallon; S. Q. T., J. Walter Curtis. Grand officers present were: Grand Patriarch Walter T. Johnson, A. G. I. Charles T. West, G. S. Benjamin L. Trull, G. M. George A. Gray and Grand Representative Sam Wood, Jr.

The turkey supper was in charge of the following committee: Charles Q. Marlon, chairman; Clement N. Gardner, John P. Hunt, George H. Abbott and Irving H. Tirrell assisted by the ladies.

Pastorate Accepted.

Franklin, N. H., Jan. 19, 1914. To the Union church and the Union Religious Society of Weymouth and Braintree, Mass.

Dear Sirs:—The letter of your committee, dated December 14, 1913, extending to me an invitation to become your pastor and teacher was duly received.

I regret exceedingly the necessity of keeping you waiting so long for my reply. But, on account of conditions existing in the church and parish I am now serving, I could not conscientiously make known my decision earlier. During these weeks of enforced waiting I have availed myself of the opportunity of giving the matter my most careful and prayerful consideration, and the decision to which I have come is therefore the result of the best wisdom and judgment at my command. I gladly accept your invitation, under the conditions specified in the same, believing with you that this is the call of our common Master to enter His service in the field which your church and parish presents. I trust I shall have your hearty and united cooperation and that our joint labors, under the guidance and blessing of God, may be abundantly fruitful in the things of the Kingdom of Heaven. I thank you for this invitation, for the honor it confers, for the confidences it expresses, and I pledge to you my best endeavors to prove myself worthy of the trust.

It is my purpose to begin my pastorate with you on the first of March in this year of our Lord, 1914. Wishing you grace, mercy and peace, I am Yours in Christian Fellowship, ALBERT P. WATSON.

LaPlant—Curtis.

Miss Helen Frances Curtis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Curtis of South Weymouth and Mr. Arthur R. LaPlant, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. LaPlant of Weymouth Landing were married at the new home of the couple on Pine street, South Weymouth, last evening. The parlor was prettily trimmed with ferns, flowers and potted plants and the couple stood beneath a large floral bell while the ceremony was performed by Rev. L. W. Atwood in the presence of the relatives and a few intimate friends. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Alice Curtis and Carl Oken of Roxbury was best man.

The bride was attired in a costume of white satin and carried a bouquet of brides' roses. The bridesmaid's dress was of pink satin, she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. A reception followed the ceremony. The couple were the recipients of many handsome and costly gifts. The bride is well known in social circles and the groom holds a responsible position with the Carpenter-Morton Company of Boston.

Donahue, president Division 5 of Quincy, Miss Mary A. O'Reilly of Ware, State vice-president of the Ladies Auxiliary, Mrs. Susan McNamee of Medford, State secretary, Mrs. Ellen M. Murphy of Boston, State treasurer of the Ladies Auxiliary.

After the exercises a delicious banquet was served by a Boston caterer.

W. R. C. Notes.

Post card showers have been sent this week to Mr. Everett Baldwin of Post 58, and Mrs. Caroline Sewall.

Mr. Bailey Gardner, whose home is with Mrs. Clara Gardner, is suffering from injuries due to a fall.

The next meeting will be February 10th; meeting at 2:30 p. m., and supper at six o'clock served by the East Weymouth Committee. A patriotic entertainment celebrating Lincoln's Birthday will be given in the evening under the direction of P. L. Mrs. Margaret Calley and Musician Mrs. Mary Flint; details to be announced next week.

The name of Mrs. Mary Trainor was unintentionally omitted from those who assumed office in Mayflower Chapter, O. E. S.

Several of the ladies will attend the musical show to be given by Tent 32, D. of V., next week.

Following is a list of committees for 1914:—

Possible Solution.

"Why do you suppose it is," she asked, "that nearly all the great men of this world have been married?" "I suppose," replied the old bachelor, "it's because they had to do something to get their minds off the troubles they had at home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mrs. Maria Tirzah Willey, Dead.

"Another star 'neath Time's horizon dropp'd," To gleam o'er unknown lands and seas! Another heart that beat for freedom stop! What mournful words are these!"

For nearly three quarters of a century the historic Colonial house, 17 Commercial street, Weymouth Landing, has been the home of Mrs. Maria Tirzah (Cowing) Willey and her nephew, Francis H. Cowing.

Although somewhat impaired in health on account of advanced age Mrs. Willey retired last Friday with no apprehension on the part of friends of a near end, but just after midnight Mr. Cowing became conscious of some disturbance in the house and on investigation found Mrs. Willey at the foot of the stairs and considerably bruised and suffering from a fall down a part or all of the flight of stairs. As best he could Mr. Cowing got the sufferer to her room above and summoned the aid of Dr. Bullock and other friends. All that medical skill and friendly hand could do to relieve the sufferer was done but on Saturday night she quietly passed to the great beyond.

Mrs. Willey was born in 1825, a daughter of Balch and Cynthia (Bates) Cowing and niece of Joshua Bates, a native of Weymouth but later a world wide financier with his home and principal business in London.

Mrs. Willey's primary education was received in the schools of Weymouth but this was supplemented by extensive reading and but few women of her day have been more conversant with the work and writings of great men and women than she. She married Henry Willey, a noted writer and scholar, who passed away at the home on Commercial street a few years ago.

The Universalist church of Weymouth was her church home and as long as physical conditions would permit she was an active worker in all of its departments never however losing sight of other interests of her native village and town.

The home of Mrs. Willey was the fountain from which flowed thousands of little charities to gladden the hearts of suffering and sorrowing people of whatever name or creed, wherever there was sorrow there was the floral tribute of affection, the tender word of sympathy or if need be a more substantial and material assistance from seventeen Commercial street.

The philanthropy of Mrs. Willey knew no bounds and in its day of need she joined Phillips, Garrison, Sumner and others in the Anti-Slavery movement, and contributed largely in time, money and work in promoting the cause of freedom.

Funeral services were held at the late home of the deceased Tuesday afternoon and were largely attended by friends and relatives. Rev. Rufus H. Dix, pastor of the Universalist church, Weymouth and Rev. Melvin S. Nash, a former pastor were the officiating clergymen with the eulogy by Mr. Nash in which a tribute was paid to her devotion to great principles and broad benevolence.

Miss Bessie Bates, soloist, added to the service a fine rendering of "Some Time We'll Understand" and "When the Mists have Cleared Away."

All which was mortal of Mrs. Willey is now at rest in the tomb near the old Joshua Bates home on Commercial street, East Weymouth.

Mrs. Josephine Geisler.

Mrs. Josephine Geisler, widow of Walter J. Geisler, died Tuesday night. She was born in Marshfield 60 years ago and was a daughter of Mrs. Eliza A. and the late James Partridge. Besides her mother she is survived by a sister, Mrs. Emma Foster of Boston and three brothers, Marshall and George Partridge of this town and Otis Partridge of Brockton. The funeral will be held from the chapel in the Village cemetery this afternoon at two o'clock.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

The column under this title will be given to the people for a free discussion of any and all subjects, the management of the paper distinctly disclaiming all responsibility for the opinions here expressed.

To the Voters of Weymouth.

Mr. W. J. Dunbar having stated that he is not a candidate for Selectman and Overseer of the Poor at our coming Town election, I wish to inform the citizens of Weymouth that I am a candidate in his stead and if I receive the nomination at the coming caucus will endeavor to secure my election in March.

BANQUET, RECEPTION AND INSTALLATION.

Impressive Services At Installation of Steadfast Rebekah Lodge I. O. O. F. Last Monday Evening.

With a banquet, reception and installation, the meeting last Monday evening of Steadfast Rebekah Lodge I. O. O. F. of East Weymouth, was one of the most enjoyable in the history of the order. One of the largest audiences ever in Odd Fellow's Hall, East Weymouth, was in attendance.

The work of installing the officers was performed by the district deputy grand master Mrs. Mary J. Hiltz of Dorchester, assisted by Mrs. Francis Douglass of Chelsea, grand marshal; Mrs. Sadie B. Patton of Dorchester, grand warden; Mrs. Antoinette Copenwath of Dorchester, grand chaplain; Mrs. Oressa Campbell of Malden, grand treasurer; Mrs. Ina McFarlane of Chelsea, grand recording secretary; Mrs. Maude Young of Dorchester, grand financial secretary; Mrs. Nettie McCool of Dorchester, grand herald and Mrs. Bertha M. Gayton of Malden, grand guard.

The officers installed included: Miss Helen J. Murray, noble grand; Miss Edna L. Sladen, vice-grand; Miss Doris Cushing, warden; Mrs. Maude Pratt, conductor; Mrs. Florence Corthell, chaplain; Mrs. Addie Hunt, right supporter to noble grand; Miss Mary Manuel, left supporter to noble grand; Mrs. Mary Pratt, right supporter to vice-grand; Miss Barbara Reis, left supporter to vice-grand; Miss Jennie Silva, inside grand; C. Lewis French, outside guardian; Miss Orilla J. Wade, treasurer; Mrs. Ida Farrington, recording secretary; Mrs. Marion French, financial secretary.

Previous to the installation exercises a banquet was served to the members of the order and the invited guests. After the banquet a reception to the special guests was held.

Special guests of the occasion were: William Hiltz P. G. of Victor Lodge of Dorchester; Arthur Douglass, P. G. of Faith Lodge of Chelsea; Mrs. Hattie Burke, P. G. of Victor Rebekah Lodge of Dorchester, and Harry McFarlane, P. G. of Faith Lodge of Dorchester.

Miss Helen Murray, the new noble grand, is the youngest person ever installed in that office in the history of Steadfast Lodge.

The retiring noble grand, Mrs. Jennie Humphrey was presented a past officer's jewel, while the installing officer and her marshal received beautiful bouquets.

ANNUAL CONCERT AND BALL.

Norfolk Club Entertains In Fogg Opera House, South Weymouth, Last Friday Evening.

The annual concert and ball of the Norfolk club of South Weymouth, was held in Fogg's Opera House, last Friday evening.

The reception committee consisted of Earle W. Bates, chairman; Ralph W. Thomas, Marshall R. Abbott, Jacob S. Wiebert and E. W. Thayer.

From eight until nine-thirty Mace Gay's orchestra gave a concert, assisted by Miss Edith Ellis, soprano, and Edwin Whitney, reader.

After the entertainment dancing was enjoyed. Walter R. Field was floor director, and the aids were Harold G. Soule, Arthur M. Hatt, Lewis D. Loring, Carl Trainor and Kenneth E. Brennan.

"Rex."

The pacer Rex, 2 1/3, owned by John R. Neal, dropped dead last week. He was raced for several years by Plin Collins, and later by Eddie Switzer. He was also well known in the Dorchester and Old Colony Driving clubs. His gameness and finishing qualities won him many friends, and he will long be remembered.

Gould—Fitzgerald.

Harold C. Gould and Miss Nellie F. Fitzgerald, both of East Weymouth were united in marriage at the parochial residence in East Weymouth on Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock by Rev. James Hurley of the Immaculate Conception church. The couple were attended by William F. Green and Miss Nellie Crane. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride on Broad street. A wedding lunch was served. Mr. and Mrs. Gould will reside at 975 Commercial street, East Weymouth.

Today and Tomorrow.

A true man finds so much work to do that he has no time to contemplate his yesterdays, for today and tomorrow are here with their important tasks. —M. J. L. L.

Pulmonol

(PAYNE)

PULMONOL is now the great remedy in the treatment of Tuberculosis. While fresh air is beneficial, experience has proven that it is not enough. It matters not what may have been thought or said in the past about the value of medicine, medicine is necessary; and we stand ready to have Pulmonol put to the most severe test in the treatment of this dread disease.

If you are in any way inclined to Tuberculosis write to us, and we will tell you what we have done for others. We can give you more hope and reasonable assurance of health than all the Sanitariums in the land.

Remember, Pulmonol is not only a relief, it is a REMEDY. For Weak Lungs and Bronchitis it has proven itself one of the best remedies ever offered to the public.

It contains no Alcohol, Morphine or other drugs. It is a REMEDY to upset the stomach. If your Druggist does not have it on sale, write us. PULMONOL CHEMICAL CO., N. Y.

Sunday Law Question Again Coming to the Front

HAINES IS A TOP NOTCHER

Holds Record For Introduction of Bills—Economy and Efficiency Committee Hands Out Big Dose of Reading Matter—Solons Not Impressed by Impending $10,000,000 State Tax

A disposition to tinker with the Sunday laws is being displayed throughout the legislature. For five years the Sunday law question has been allowed to sleep.

But now Representative Delafield of Lenox has a bill to legalize Sunday fishing, Representative Callahan of Boston wants no Sunday shows unless they are free, and Senator Clark of Brockton is willing to have an admission fee charged for Sunday shows but thinks that one-half the proceeds should go to some charity.

These three measures come very near to the point of major surgery on the Sunday laws. The old law used to be about as Senator Clark would now have it. But it was changed in such a way that the chief of the district police could grant a license to any show that he thought suitable for persons to witness on Sunday, and the proprietor of the show could keep the proceeds.

Chief Whitney announces now that he has permitted no Sunday dances on the stage and that he has given his O. K. only to conservative programs.

He declares that the old laws led to the formation of bogus charities which existed only for stage purposes.

The bill to legalize Sunday fishing is not likely to get far. Those who want to fish on Sunday are not seriously troubled anyway.

In fact it is about as easy to fish on Sunday as it is to play golf or tennis. The only requisite is that it must not be done in view of the public.

"Ben" Holds Record

Representative "Ben" Haines of Melford holds the record of the legislature for the introduction of bills. He has presented upon his own petition seventy measures, besides a number of measures on the petition of other people.

Mr. Haines finds now that he has bills in almost every committee that holds meetings at the state house. His legislative career for 1914 is very largely up stairs and down stairs. He starts early in the morning and when shadows begin to lengthen he finds himself still giving instruction in legislation.

Representative Edward Carr of Hopkinton, a Progressive on his first year, is a fairly good second, with nearly forty bills to his credit.

Senator Horgan of Boston is right along there too, with thirty-seven measures. This indicates why there is more business than ever this year.

The Toughest Yet

The toughest report to read that has been sent to the legislature for many a day is the first report of the committee on economy and efficiency. It deals with the financial condition of every department in the state administration.

Where an appropriation has been asked for the commission steps in with comment and correspondence either for or against. There is practically the correspondence of one year packed snugly in the report, which is set in nonpareil type, that is, newspaper size. For winter reading it cannot be surpassed.

The legislative committee on ways and means has had this dose of statistics handed to it in bulk and the members of the committee are really beginning to understand what their jobs are to be.

The State Has the Price

House Chairman "Tom" White of the ways and means committee announced with his customary drawl the other day that he guessed his literary efforts were not being appreciated.

What Mr. White meant was that his warning letter to the members of the house that there was a smart little state tax of $10,000,000 in sight had not made a wonderfully deep impression upon his colleagues.

Mr. White had been looking over one of the financial bills. Most of them are for salary increases and for new places in the public service. He says that in all the time he has been in the house there never have been so many bills of this character. There probably isn't a class of officials in the state that has forgotten to look for recognition from the legislature this year. And Mr. White himself is an offender, perhaps, for he favors an increase of salary for the governor from $8000 to $12,000 and for the secretary of the governor from $2500 to $4000.

Training Policy

There is a renewed demand for a state university. But it does not come from those who can boast of any expert knowledge upon the subject.

Few people who urge that there should be such an institution stop to realize what the educational facilities really are in Massachusetts. Besides the big colleges and universities there are evening classes for men who have no time nor money for day study. An application to the state board of education would prove helpful to any ambitious person.

Now the state board is studying out a policy of rearing teachers to teach industrial and trade subjects. The state agricultural college at Amherst provides the finest opportunity in the country for training for men who wish to settle in Massachusetts and raise provisions for the market in Boston and other big centres.

The new idea in this state now is to train and educate those who will be encouraged to develop the resources of the state. When Governor Walsh laid emphasis upon this thought a short time ago he drew from the state educators a wealth of favorable comment.

Gold Facts.

The attorneys for the plaintiff in a suit before Federal Judge Smith McPherson of Iowa were attempting to introduce into the record of the case the diary of the deceased mother of the defendant, which contained references to a love affair between her daughter, a widow, and the defendant, also dead, against whose estate the suit was brought. The court finally ruled that the diary might be admitted, but before so ruling he told the jury this story:

"Down in my country," said Judge McPherson, "Bill Leveridge was trying to keep from paying his landlord the rent due on the farm he had been working. It was necessary for Bill's attorneys to show that the winter had been an especially hard one. To prove the extent of the difficulties under which Bill had labored Bill's diary was introduced, and among other entries laid before the jury was this: 'Nov. 27—Ground froze on this date and stayed frozen all winter!'"—Saturday Evening Post.

But those who are working upon the question believe that this is best done without the establishment of a big institution.

As to the Reporters Speaker Cushing has been seriously worried by a stray complaint that there are men in the press gallery who ought to be excluded from talking with members during house sessions when those members are in their seats.

This complaint is one of the offspring of the New Haven incident, where it was found that there were several newspaper men on the New Haven payroll. It seems that there are legislators who are fearful of being subjected to undue influence. "Protect us," is what one man said to Mr. Cushing.

To the candid observer there is considerable hysteria in this. And it will wear off as the session progresses and it is found that no legislator is likely to degenerate into "damaged goods" by any conversation he may have with a legislative reporter.

But the new rule will stand that if a reporter expects to do any outside work he must receive the approval of the rules committee. It is not as harsh as the rule in Washington, where newspaper men are forbidden to take any other employment, but it is sufficiently rigid to prevent any further New Haven surprises.

Relieving Supreme Court

Putting business away from the supreme court is one of the practices of the lawyers this year. In all probability there will be a bill passed to have appeals in will cases go to the superior court. It is understood that the supreme court wants this done and that Chief Justice Aiken of the superior court is willing to have it done.

Then again Chief Justice Bolster of the Boston municipal court is pressing his measure to give the appellate division of his court, created two years ago, the right to take cases of law away from the supreme court. This is a real novelty and it seems likely to go through.

These measures would take away quite a bundle of matters from the supreme court.

Instalment Houses

The furniture instalment houses are quite in evidence at the state house this year and they want to be further protected. Their leases read to the effect that the lessee, if he moves property bought on the instalment plan, forfeits his right to it.

But the problem sometimes is to find the property. This has been increasingly difficult since the multiplication of the kitchenette apartment.

And so these houses are asking that every mover of furniture shall report to the city or town clerk every removal he makes, and that these reports shall be made public.

Hobbs Getting Discouraged

Senator Clarence Hobbs, who is looking out for things on the committee on judiciary, is getting discouraged. He says that there are more fantastic things in the committee than he has ever seen before. He was a great deal puzzled when the gravestone manufacturers came forward and asked that they be given a lien upon all unpaid for stones. While the manufacturers seem pretty well lined up for the bill there is precious little chance that it will go through the committee. The present laws forbid a person taking away any property from a cemetery. But this measure would give one the right to go to a grave and take the stone away. It is the oddest kind of a lien that was ever proposed in this state.

Another bill before Judiciary makes it impossible for a man who has been convicted of a crime after he is 21 years old to hold any public office.

This measure also is an innovation and is regarded as quite political. It probably will not be adopted. There are many more measures equally curious, as well as the broad range of questions which, if tested, would probably be found to be unconstitutional.

Progressives Are Observant

The Progressive members of the legislature are active and observant. They are keeping close watch upon their fellow members to see how the attendance runs at committee hearings, and how members stick to the sessions of the senate and house.

This, of course, is all right. But the idea is a little different from the idea of the past, when the utmost freedom of action was accorded.

Just the other day one of the Progressives expressed great astonishment at the fact that a member of one of the old parties had missed two consecutive committee meetings and three sessions of the branch to which he belonged. The committee meetings and the sessions happened to be of no great importance, inasmuch as only routine matters were dealt with, but there seemed to be a measure of indifference which disturbed the enthusiasm of the new member. The shock may wear off as the amount of talk increases.

Guileless Chinese Artist.

In the fourth century A. D. there lived in China an artist who was also a poet. His name was Ku K'ai Chih. In London there is a painting, a long scroll, which for at least a thousand years has been treasured as his work, and, though that cannot be proved, it is in all probability a painting by his hand. One day, we are told, he entrusted to a friend a chestful of paintings which he had collected. For better security he fastened the lid of the chest and sealed the fastening with a seal. The friend, however, coveted the paintings and hid on the simple expedient of removing the bottom of the box and so abstracting them. When the box was restored to Ku K'ai Chih he broke the seal and found it empty. But he suspected no theft and expressed no surprise. Beautiful paintings, he said, communique with supernatural beings. They had changed their form and flown away like men when they join the immortals.—Louis Binyou in Atlantic.

French Detective's Revenge.

M. Calchas, the famous French detective, was noted for his skill as a "shadower." Having quarreled for administrative reasons with M. Lepine during the latter's reign at the prefecture, he threatened to have his vengeance.

"It's no use trying to kill me," said the prefect genially. "I am too well looked after for that."

"I've a much better and less obvious plan than that," retorted the detective. "Just wait and see."

A week later M. Calchas appeared in the prefect's study and presented an ominous document. It was the record of M. Lepine's doings day by day, hour by hour, almost minute by minute, since their last interview, and it was with rather a wan smile that the prefect perused it. Satisfied with his characteristic vengeance, the detective assured M. Lepine that the "dossier" for that week would not be given to the world.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

A Bird With Hands.

In the forests of British Guiana, says the London Globe, lives the hoatzin, a singular bird, whose young possess a free claw at the end of each wing, which they use almost as the monkey uses his hands in tree climbing. The nest of the hoatzin is in a tree overhanging the water, and the young, unlike most birds, are active from the first. The outermost quill feathers of the wing, which might hamper the free use of the claws, do not grow much until the rest of the wing is strong enough to make climbing less necessary. Then they grow out, and the claws are absorbed. The adult bird does not need them. Should a young hoatzin fall into the water it makes for the shore and seizes a branch, up which it quickly climbs.

The Oldest Epigram.

An epigram must pass through many hands and get much polishing before it is a perfect jewel. You may remember, says the London Chronicle, how Oscar Wilde sent on the stage the man of the world through the drawing room door with the epigram, "There is one thing I never could resist; that is temptation." But you may trace it from the garden of Eden, where the masculine plea for mercy was that the "woman tempted me."

Earthquake Records.

An average of 186 earthquakes a year has been recorded at the seismological observatory of Rocca di Papa, near Rome, during the last twelve years. Of this number forty-four have originated within a distance of sixty-five miles, while eighty-five had their source more than 3,000 miles away.

More Appropriate.

"Shine 'em up, sir," cried the young bootblack. "I'll polish 'em so's you kin see yer face in 'em, sir."

"Thanks, my good lad, but I'm entirely satisfied to see my feet in them," replied Fogz, and on he went.—Boston Transcript.

Good Hindsight.

"Is Dibble a man who can be depended on to give a good account of himself in an emergency?"

"Yes, after the emergency has passed."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Jailbirds.

It is estimated that in the United States 132 persons out of 100,000 are in prison on any given day, in Italy 217, and in the United Kingdom 46.

Sacred Deer.

From time immemorial deer have been held in reverence by the Japanese. Herds are kept in compounds, and the highest respect is paid to the animals. In olden times the shogun gave the people such a strict order to protect the sacred animals that if any one happened to hurt or kill them he was put to death on the spot. It was a period of terror. Even at the present day the deer are so tame and abundant in the shrine grounds that they in fine weather stroll round to the streets by twos and threes and surround passersby, asking for food and even taking the persons' sleeves in their mouths affectionately. Once a year some of the deer are caught by means of a net with a handle by several tamers (in service of the Kasuga shrine office) and taken to an inclosure, where their splendid horns are cut off with a saw, while a crowd of spectators watch the work with breathless interest (admission 10 sen, equal to about 5 cents). This done, some of the sacred horns are, as a custom, awarded to the spectators by means of lottery.

Disillusion.

The unmarried woman who shall be the subject of this anecdote was fixing herself up to go out in the evening. A certain man was going to call for her, and though the occasion was somewhat spoiled by the fact that they would have to take her little niece along she nevertheless took the usual care of her complexion, hair and eyes, for the man was trembling on the verge of a proposal. The trio—niece, auntie's beau and auntie's niece—walked along the street until they came to one of those all night photograph galleries. You know how awful a person looks standing in the ghastly glare of the mercury tube lights that they put in the windows of such places? Well, they paused in that awful green-yellow light. And the little niece said to auntie's beau:

"Ooo-oh, look! Auntie looks just like she does when she first gets up in the morning!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sitting Cross Legged.

Fully 80 per cent of the men and women who travel in the trains and street cars sit cross legged, and this habit is responsible for many ills, according to a prominent London physician. The prime objection against this habit, he says, is that the return flow of blood from the leg is stopped at the knee, the result being that the veins in the leg swell up. All the weight is thrown on one side of the body, and the under leg goes to sleep owing to the pressure put on the sciatic nerve. The body should be equally balanced. Then there is another danger. Too much crossing of the legs is sure to bring lopsidedness. Let the legs rest limply. In that way the muscles become eased, while the flow into and the return of blood from the legs is naturally done and the body is equally balanced.

Rats as Food.

Rats form a favorite dish in China. Split open, dried, pressed and powdered with a finely ground white bark, they look somewhat like haddock's eyes they hang in long strings over butchers' stalls. Dr. Arthur Stradling once declared that "rats would be not only wholesome, but very nice, if properly prepared—not common sewer rats, but such as I ate, barn fed animals snared in a hop garden. The flesh, though perfectly white, was dry and tasteless. But then they were only skinned, cleaned and submitted to the fire without any of the et ceteras which make other meats savory. Admiral Beaufort and other arctic explorers speak highly of rats as a wholesome addition to their supply of food in those dreary latitudes."—Chicago News.

Easy Economy.

Speaking of economy in the home, a prominent charity worker said: "There was a lot of truth in the remark of the poor, harassed east side housewife whose husband complained: 'I wish you would be more economical. Mary. Look at the boss' wife, how economical she is!'"

"Yes," Mary replied. "It's easy enough for the boss' wife to be economical. She's got plenty to be economical with."—Exchange.

One In the Family Was Enough.

Brown insisted on returning the twenty dollar parrot he had bought a few days before.

"Why, what is the matter with it?" the dealer asked.

"W-w-w-y," replied Brown. "the d-d-darned c-c-critter s-s-s-stutters!"—Everybody's.

Different Methods.

One orator in New York says that his understanding about it is that if you "call a man a liar in the south he will shoot at you, in the west knock you down, but in the east he'll bet you a quarter you can't prove it."—Augusta Chronicle.

Clever Chap.

Mamma—Willie, didn't I tell you not to eat any more candy tonight? Small Willie—I'm not eating it, mamma; I'm just sucking the juice out of it.—Chicago News

The Impossible.

"Is he as important as he thinks he is?"

"My goodness, no! No man is as important as that."—Detroit Free Press

Sleep, riches and health to be truly enjoyed must be interrupted.—Rich-ter

The Luckless Procrastinator.

The procrastinator is always liable to be luckless. To postpone a duty that should be discharged at once is to invite trouble for all concerned. Many a man who is well disposed toward life insurance is still deferring the purchase of a policy which would be a boon to his family in the event of his death. The would be insurer is in good health today, but tomorrow he may be stricken with a disease that may bar him from the ranks of the insurable. His reason for putting off securing a policy may be that it is inconvenient at present to pay the premium. But he should consider carefully the fact that life insurance will never be cheaper for him than it is today. His yearly premium on a policy taken out now would be appreciably less than would be the premium on a policy of the same amount taken out when he is a year older. Delay, therefore, will add somewhat to the yearly burden he would have to carry. The best thing for any uninsured man to do is to insure at once.—Leslie's Weekly.

Wall Papers and Light.

"The good lighting of a room depends not only on the disposition of the lights so as to produce an adequate illumination and on the proper shielding of the lamps so as to avoid needless glare, but on the nature of the wall surface on which the light falls," said Professor Silvanus Thompson of London. "Even when the illumination that is received by the walls is ample the room may be badly lit if the walls absorb too much of that illumination instead of giving it back by diffuse reflection. Few people are aware how much light is thus wasted and thrown away.

"The deep scarlet and crimson wall papers now fashionable for dining rooms waste from 70 to 75 per cent; brown paper wastes about 85 to 88 per cent; even an ordinary yellow or buff wall paper wastes 50 to 60 per cent. On the other hand, white cartridge paper absorbs and wastes only about 20 per cent of the light, while a whitewashed wall absorbs from 30 to 40 per cent."

Thumbs of the Apes.

The gorilla and chimpanzee, which belong to the higher order of apes, have many points of resemblance to man, but there is one thing they cannot do—that is, twiddle their thumbs. In the gorilla the thumb is short and does not reach much beyond the bottom of the first joint of the forefinger. It is very much restricted in its movements, and the animal can neither twiddle his thumbs nor turn them round so that the tips describe a circle. There are the same number of bones in the hand of a gorilla as in the hand of a man, but the thumbs of the monkey have no separate flexor or bending muscle. This is why a monkey always keeps the thumb on the same side as the fingers and never bends it round any object that may be grasped. In the gorilla the web between the fingers extends to the second joint, the fingers taper to the tips, and there is a cleft on the knuckles on which the animal rests when walking on all fours.

History in July.

In at least four countries perhaps the most important event in their histories was recorded in July—namely, the establishment of their independence. In our own history we have the memorable Fourth of July, while the patriotic efforts of the liberator Simon Bolivar for the independence of Venezuela were consummated on July 5, Colombia ridding herself of the Spanish yoke on July 20. Then there is France, with her July 14, marking the date when the suffering French people stormed the famed and fearsome Bastille. The Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, capitulated on July 16.

Asking Him to Read the Future.

"I shall call upon a fortune teller this morning," said Mr. Blubb.

"Going to try to learn something about the future?" asked Mr. Wagles.

"Yes, I am going to ask him when he expects to pay the arrears of rent for that cottage of mine he is occupying as a school of astrology and institute for 'psychical research.'—Birmingham Age-Herald.

An Old Puzzle.

An excellent, if an old, puzzle is: How can a window having a height equal to its width be made twice as large without increasing its height or width?

Impossible! Oh, no! In the first instance it is shaped like a diamond; then it is changed to a square.

Keep on Fighting.

All work of man is as the swimmer's. A waste ocean threatens to devour him. If he front it not bravely it will keep its word. By incessant wise defiance of it, lusty rebuke and buffet of it, behold how it loyally supports him—bears him as its conqueror along!—Thomas Carlyle.

Shellfishness.

The oyster was bewailing its hard luck

"I don't mind being 'pickled' once in awhile," said the oyster, "or even being 'deviled' occasionally, but I'm tired to death of being called 'the luscious bivalve.'"—Chicago Tribune.

An Appetite Developer.

"What is the best way to develop an appetite?" asked the old fogey

"Being without the price of a meal is the best way I know of," replied the wise guy. Cincinnati Enquirer

Before you set your heart on anything maturely consider whether it will add to your ultimate happiness

Seville's Tower of Giralda.

From its great antiquity alone if from nothing else it is plain that the Giralda at Seville could not have been studied from the tower of the Madison Square Garden in New York, which the American will recall when he sees it. If the case must be reversed and we must allow that the Madison Square tower was studied from the Giralda, we must still recognize that it is no servile copy, but in its frank imitation has a grace and beauty which achieve originality. Still, the Giralda is always the Giralda, and, though there had been no Saint Gaudens to tip its summit with such a flying footed nymph as poises on our tower, the figure of Faith which crowns it is at least a good weather vane and from its office of turning gives the mighty bell tower its name. Long centuries before the tower was a belfry it served the mosque, which the cathedral now replaces, as a minaret to call the muezzin to call the faithful to prayer, but it was then only two-thirds as high.—Harper's Magazine.

Inconsistent Fractions.

FRIDAY, JAN. 30, 1914.

The Gazette & Transcript is printed and mailed Friday afternoons, and is for sale at all News-stands in the Weymouths and at the South Terminal, Boston.All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpublished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.Notices of all local entertainments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 10 cents per line in the reading matter, or regular rates in the advertising columns.There are many questions constantly coming up, in regard to the much discussed income tax. To what does the law apply? What is an income? etc. etc.Among the late decisions is one relating to the hen, and it matters not whether a person is in the poultry business on a large scale, with his whole time and capital invested in the business, or whether he is a farmer, or other person, with a few hens for domestic use, the product of the brood is an income and must be accounted for; the eggs which afford the morning meal or are beaten up for pies and cakes, the rooster or hen which is slaughtered for the table, must have a cash value placed upon it and included in the income of the person raising it.We are unable to state whether any deficit in the hen account may be charged up to the other income, in order to help out the tax payer.

GOOD LOGIC.

President Wilson's message on the question of dealing with "big business" has been most favorably received. It gives the impression—and the President evidently intends to give the impression —that we have reached the end of the strife between the government and big business interests. It is however no white flag which the President is waving.
He is not patting the trusts on the back and telling them that after all they are pretty good fellows. Far from it. He is serving firm notice that the laws governing big business are going to be strictly enforced, but—and here is the point of difference between the old and the new—they are going about it on the government side, not in a spirit of antagonism, but with a desire to help "to square business with both public opinion and the law." Then, too, the President expresses his intent that the Sherman law shall be made more definite in its terms. This is well, for it is the very indefiniteness of the law that has led to so much disturbance, uncertainty and antagonism. An over-stringent law is better, on the whole, than one that is so indefinite that those who wish to square themselves with it do not know how to go about it. The President's suggestions for legislation prohibiting interlocking directorates, holding companies and other devices for the centralization of financial power; the idea that individuals may use facts brought out in government suits in seeking redress of their own wrongs.—Banker and

TO WISH YOU WELL

we publish this, our New Year's greetings to you

We feel that this is a time when we should all pause in the hurry and strain of active life and think for a moment of the human side of business.

And so we publish this for the very human reason that we want to say a friendly "hello" to you and with heart-deep sincerity extend the happiest greetings of the season and wish you the pleasantest of good things for the year ahead.

We believe in making friends as well as customers in business, and we try to make our store service exhibit that spirit distinctly by being just as sincerely helpful and pleasant as we can make it.

So here's a handclasp across the newspaper to those we can't reach in person.

May you win more friends, prosperity and happiness in 1914 than ever before!

Keep the feet level and keep the shoes on the outside rim of the foot.

One of the best preventives of scratches in horses is to keep the feet clean. If mud is permitted to dry on the fetlock irritation is likely to ensue.

Trees should be made to send their roots deep into the soil, in order to fortify themselves against drought. This is done by draining the soil and by plowing the orchard rather deep.

When a stormy day comes, spend a few hours looking over the garden seeds for the coming season. See that they are not being affected by dampness nor by excessive heat. The mice may be helping themselves.

If desired, parsnips may be allowed to remain in the ground all winter. They should be covered in the fall with clean straw. After the early spring thaw they may be removed, washed, and stored in a cool place.

Cold and severe weather is hard upon animals as well as upon mankind. Men have the advantage in as much as they are able to take steps to make themselves comfortable, while animals are dependent entirely upon the kindness of others.

Always test the hen on china or nest eggs before setting. Use insect powder freely to exterminate lice when necessary. February, March and April are the best months for hatching. If several hens are set in one room, it is desirable to confine them in good nests. Straw and hay make good nesting material.

"Keep the nest clean, and provide one nest for every four hens," is the advice to farmers and poultrymen, by the department of agriculture. "Gather the eggs twice a day, and keep them in a cool, dry room or cellar, and market them at least twice a week.

The eggs of several orchard pests are quite conspicuous in winter, and they may be easily picked by hand and then burned. The hard gray mass of the tent caterpillar's eggs, the pendent cases of the bag worms, and the flat, white cluster of the Tussock moth's eggs, may be readily seen, and these pests are best controlled by such attention in winter.

Be sure that the male at the head of the flock is pure bred. Pure bred poultry means uniformity of products. Uniformity of products means increased profits, if products are carefully marketed," advises the United States department of agriculture to farmers and poultrymen, in order that they may get the most profitable results from poultry raising.

With almost all ground to be planted to corn, it is well to plow under some dead or green vegetable matter, and to work and mix the same well after plowing. Burning cornstalks, stubble, weeds and surface trash is running in the face of defeat with the summer corn crop. Corn stalks should be cut up fine and all plowed under, and the same should be done with all weeds and other trash. They will soon rot in the soil, and become available summer food for the corn roots, besides improving the general condition of the soil for easy working and better holding of moisture.

There is no one subject related to farming of greater interest and importance to the farmer, than the improvement of his general crops by seed selection and breeding. The study of these plants from the breeder's standpoint is not only intensely interesting, but it also usually results in awakening a keener interest in all phases of crop production, from the preparation of the soil for the seedbed and the cultivation of the growing plants, to the marketing of the products. This subject is of vital importance, commercially, from the fact that it usually costs no more to grow improved varieties of farm crops than unimproved sorts.

People Worth Watching.

There are certain persons whom physiognomists say should be avoided by certain other persons. Thus, the talker is warned to keep away from the person with the overhanging forehead, for he will prove exceedingly deep in argument. The business man is advised to watch carefully when dealing with the man with the receding forehead and chin, the large, curved and prominent nose, for he will prove shrewd in business.

Cultured Hindus.

In Bengal there are about 70,000,000 of people, and they boast of perhaps the best culture in India at the present time. The language as a written language is only fifty years old. Though for over a thousand years it has been a dialect, there is in Indian history unfortunately no trace of Bengali having been an important literary tongue. The language originates from Sanskrit, the mother tongue from which every other Indian language has borrowed its alphabet, grammar and vocabulary; but, unlike the others, Bengali never shrinks from gathering new materials. There are numerous Persian, French, Arabic and English words incorporated in it, and the wonder of it is that, instead of having been degraded into some vulgar form like pidgin English, Bengali has become the most literary, scientific and perhaps the most philosophic of modern Indian languages.

Shrewd Sexton.

Among the tourists who travel through France a considerable number visit the cathedral at Rheims, a magnificent example of gothic architecture. In the tower there is an enormous clock, and it is the sexton's business to wind it every day, a very thing job, as the weights are naturally extremely heavy.

The sexton, however, is a very shrewd fellow. Whenever he shows the trippers this wonderful piece of mechanism he remarks, "Ladies and gentlemen, if you do not believe me regarding the heaviness of the clock weights try for yourselves."

Each of the trippers immediately give a turn or two to the wheel, and as there are some 200 visitors a day the trippers unconsciously and eagerly wind the clock for him and in addition give him an extra tip for being allowed to do his work. —London Outlook.

Emily Bronte's Looks.

A discussion as to the personal appearance of Emily Bronte reveals the remarkable fact that no one knows anything about it since there is no authentic portrait in existence. When Charlotte Bronte first saw George Henry Leves she said that he was wonderfully like her sister Emily, but this is unfortunate for Emily since Leves was very much like a balloon. Possibly the comparison was due to a sisterly emotion that so seldom errs on the side of mercy. Thanks to photography, the historian of the future will not be in doubt as to the appearance of celebrities of the present generation, but he is likely to have his own opinion as to those worth knowing about. —Argonaut.

Screech Owl in Church.

A fine specimen of the screech or barn owl was seen in Castleacre Parish church in Norfolk, England, one Sunday morning, perched on one of the beams of the nave, just before the service began. While the officials were wondering how to get rid of it the owl alighted on the hat of a lady in the congregation, whence it was carried to the open air and set free. It is supposed that the bird descended the belfry stairs while an official was winding the church clock.

Kept It Dark.

Gerald—"A gentleman knows how to keep a secret." Geraldine—"If you are a gentleman you have kept it a secret, all right."

Posted on Autographs.

During an interval in London W. C. Scully, so he tells in "Further Reminiscences of a South African Pioneer," had rooms in Pimlico with a landlady of snobbish tendencies, who made a cult of "superior persons." He tells this amusing experience:

"I had been for a short visit to Rudyard Kipling at Rottingdean and had brought back a bunch of roses from his garden. Seeing that Mrs. Wand was so proud of her celebrities, I thought I would let her know that I, too, knew a celebrity, so when she came to set the breakfast table next morning I pointed to the flowers and said:

"There, Mrs. Wand, you would never guess where these roses came from. They came from the garden of the great Mr. Kipling."

"Mr. Kipling? 'Oo's 'e?"

"Good gracious!" I exclaimed. "Surely you know who Mr. Kipling is. Why, his autograph is worth a guinea!"

"Mrs. Wand left the room without replying. She returned a few minutes later with a look of skepticism on her face and, as she put down the toast rack, remarked:

"Well, 'e ought to be good lookin' at that!"

Monument to a Quack.

"That the men who make great medical discoveries and who perform wonderful surgical operations are honored in life and that imposing monuments to their memory are reared when they have passed away seems only fitting," says a writer in the Hamburg Fremdenblatt, "but that a quack whose name as such has for generations been known in Germany should be thus honored is remarkable. There are not many children in Germany who do not know the song which begins thus:

"I am the Dr. Eisenbart, Zwellwillewilkomosa! I cure the people by my art. Zwellwillewilkomosa! The blind I treat so that they walk. And the lame I teach to talk. Zwellwillewilkam—heirassa, Zwellwillewilkom—bom!"

"A stately monument showing Dr. Eisenbart extracting a tooth from a writing boy, the work of Professor Eberlein, has been erected at Hann-Munden, where the 'wonder doctor' was born."

Time's Changes.

Why is it that laws which worked very well fifty or sixty years ago are being discarded? Why is it that laws which a quarter century ago would have been laughed down are getting upon the books of every state in the Union? Why is it that there are new ideas in teaching, new ideas about the liberty of the individual, new ideas about a man's relationship with his neighbor? Why is it, in short, that there is a vast discontent with old institutions and old ways? It is because the world has outgrown the government, the ideas, the habits of thought that fitted easily and serenely enough into the lives of our great-grandparents, but which are creaking in their joints now. Life today is a very different thing from life fifty or sixty years ago.—Toledo Blade.

A Map That Failed.

The French National library in the Rue de Richelieu, Paris, is full of wonders for the lovers of history. One of its treasures is a map of North and South America as French possessions. The map is dated 1564, and here is the explanation of it: Catherine de Medici, the queen of Henry II. and mother of Francis II., Charles I. and Henri III., dreamed one of the conquest of the two Americas. She even named viceroys, one for North America and the other for South America. They were on their way to the new world when the queen's audacious plan fell through because of events at home. The queen, however, had a map made showing her projected possessions under the French flag.—New York Sun.

Car of the Czar.

The private car of the czar of Russia is said to be practically dynamite proof, and owing to its weight it could not be run on most of the European lines. The car is elegantly furnished and also contains a chapel, where prayers are offered for his safety. The czar travels with only one chef, who is well along in years and who served his father and for awhile the grandfather of the present German emperor.

Big Guns Bend.

One of the most serious problems of army and navy engineers is the bending of great guns by their own weight, wire wound guns being the worst offenders in this particular.

Ambiguous.

"You remember I missed you several times last year?" "Yes," said the guide. "Well, I'm a better shot now."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

There is a vast difference between those who have something to say and those who want to say something.—John Timothy Stone.

Glowworms Use Anaesthetics.

Before he begins to feast the glow-worm administers an anaesthetic. His chloroform his victim, rivaling in the process the wonders of modern surgery, which render the patient insensible before the surgeon operates on him. The usual game is a small snail, hardly the size of a cherry, which in hot weather collects in clusters on the stiff stubble and other long, dry stalks by the roadside, remaining there motionless. In profound meditation, throughout the scorching summer days. It is in some such resting place as this that I have often been privileged to light upon the lampyris banqueting on the prey which he had just paralyzed on its shaky support by his surgical artifices.

But he is familiar with other preserves. He frequents the edges of the irrigating ditches, with their cool soil, their varied vegetation, a favorite haunt of the mollusk. Here he treats the game on the ground and under these conditions it is easy for me to rear him at home and to follow the operator's performance down to the smallest detail.—Henri Fabre in Century Magazine.

Hooked Genius.

Once upon a time the city of London had to pay a county rate, but this was legally abolished many years ago. A certain attorney, who had at one time been connected with local taxation, hit upon the brilliant idea of relieving this obsolete rate and turning the proceeds to his own use. He got the proper demand notes printed, distributed them in the usual fashion and the recipients paid up like lambs. The swindler had a regular office, a collector and all the usual accompaniments. It is said that he made over $15,000 a year, and no one ever thought of questioning the legality of the rate. If the crooked genius had been satisfied with a couple of years' profit and then quietly discontinued the collection of the rate the chances are that no one would ever have been any the wiser. But he was greedy and kept on year after year, until by chance a demand note fell into the hands of some one who knew.—Pearson's Weekly.

One Man Applauded.

Camille Saint-Saens was present when Verdi's "Hymn of All Nations" was rendered for the first time at the opening ceremonies of the world's fair in London, and he gave this reason for the "failure" of the composition: "The hymn was arranged to introduce the national anthem of the various countries, and not knowing that the 'Marseillaise' was at that time in bad repute, it was used as representative of France. The Emperor Napoleon when he heard the strains turned pale, and the knowing ones in the audience were so greatly embarrassed that no one in the great throng dared applaud. Yes, one man did applaud, and that was I. Napoleon arose in his box and directed his opera glass toward me, and I looked at him through my glass. After a few moments the emperor hurriedly departed."

Gave Him a Christian Name.

Even the polyglot Swiss interpreter at the general postoffice admits that there are languages which would stump him. How would he have solved the problem once presented at the Hampstead Green postoffice and recorded in Baines' "On the Track of the Mail Coach?" "Two ladies wanted to send a money order to a foreign tradesman in Oxford street. 'What Christian name?' inquired the clerk. 'He is a Turk and has none.' 'We must have a Christian name,' the clerk insisted. 'But you can't. His bill merely says 'Kotzemollen.' 'Oh, very well,' decided the clerk. 'That will do. Cut his name in two and make the order payable to 'Kotze Mollen.' 'Solomon could not have done better.—London Chronicle.

The Parson's Soft Job.

"There is a prevalent idea among the criminal classes that the clergy have nothing whatever to do." The authority for this statement is the archdeacon of London, who has three large prisons in his archdeaconry. An old woman once said to a jail chaplain: "I wish you could find a job for my old man. He is not up to much and cannot do anything, but he wants a soft job like yours!"—London Globe.

Willing to Take a Tip.

"Look here," said the sophomoric father, "how do you expect to do any studying if you're going to be out tearing around every night until 11 to 12 o'clock?" "Darned if I know, dad. The Vegetable Caterpillar.

New Zealand's vegetable caterpillar is not vegetable at all. It is a grub about the length of the finger which has its habitat in friable mold at the roots of the rata vine. In many instances this grub, known to New Zealanders as the 'Moori' name, aweto, is infected by the spores of a fungus, Cordyceps (Sphaeria) robertsi. While the mycelium of this fungus is invading the tissues of the aweto it sends up a spore bearing stalk to the height of from four to eight inches just between the head and the first ring of the body of the grub. By the time the spores are ready to discharge the animal dies, and the whole body is found filled with vegetal material. The same spot of ground is the theater of a second drama of vegetable ferocity. While the fungus is destroying the insect at its roots the rata vine grows upward by twining about some tree of less rapid growth and in the end strangles its support and maintains thereafter a tree existence of its own.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned has been duly appointed Administrator of the estate of SARAH E. BAGLEY late of Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk, deceased, intestate, and has taken upon himself that trust by giving bond as the law directs.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
NORFOLK, SS. PROBATE COURT.
TO the heirs at law and all persons interested in the estate of

late of Weymouth in said County of Norfolk, deceased, testate:

Whereas, Thomas J. Evans, executor of the will of said deceased, has presented his petition for an order to mortgage certain real estate therein described, of the estate of said deceased, to raise the sum of thirteen hundred dollars for the following purposes, viz: to pay the bills against the estate, also a mortgage of $500 and accrued interest and the sum of $47.39 due the heirs of Stephen F. Turrell, who have never been paid.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham in said County of Norfolk, on the fourth day of February A. D. 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is ordered to serve this citation by delivering a copy thereof to each person interested, fourteen days at least before said Court, or by publishing the same once in each week for three successive weeks, in the Weymouth Gazette, a newspaper published in said Weymouth, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fourteenth day of January, in the year one thousand nine hundred and fourteen.
J. R. MCCOOLE, Register.

She Shuffled, He Cut.
At a country ball a farmer had engaged a pretty coquette for the next dance, but a gallant captain coming along persuaded the young lady to cancel her previous engagement in favor of himself.

A few minutes later the captain stepped up to the young lady to excuse himself, as he had forgotten that he was already engaged to another. Miss Coquette, much chagrined, then made tracks for the whist table, hoping to secure her first partner.

"No, Miss S. I mean to keep my present place. When ladies shuffle I cut."—Liverpool Mercury.

A Liberal Education.
That man, I think, has had a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will and does with ease and pleasure all the work that as a mechanism it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear, cold, logic engine, with all its parts of equal strength, and in smooth working order; ready, like a steam engine, to be turned to any kind of work and spin the gossamers as well as force the anchors of the mind; whose mind is stored with a knowledge of the great and fundamental truths of nature and of the laws of her operations; one who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art; to hate all villainy and to respect others as himself.

Such a man and no other, I conceive, has had a liberal education.—Thomas Henry Huxley in "Lay Sermons."

Trees and Fools.
Any fool can destroy trees. They cannot run away, and if they could they would still be destroyed—chased and hunted down as long as fun or a dollar could be got out of their bark hides, branching horns or magnificent bole backbones. Few that fell trees plant them. Nor would planting avail much toward getting back anything like the noble primeval forests.

Such a man and no other, I conceive, has had a liberal education.—Thomas Henry Huxley in "Lay Sermons."

White House Tragedy and Gayety.

The immortal discoverer of the law of the attraction of gravity was at one time beside himself.

A Mistake.
"I didn't know you had malaria here," said the visitor.

Pessimistic.
"In the long run it always pays to act decent," observed the sage.

No Room For It.
Her Partner—If you are tired of dancing, Mrs. Newrocks, we'll sit down and have a little tete-a-tete, shall we? Mrs. Newrocks—Oh, dear me, no, thank you. After such a big supper I really couldn't eat another thing.—Boston Transcript.

Many Big Suns.
According to an English astronomer in South Africa, there are 300 stars 100 times as large as the sun, 5,000 ten times as large, and about 200,000 of nearly the same size.

Lady ordering boots for her husband—Do you keep men's boots? Shopman—No, madam, but we keep up to date in women's.—London Opinion.

White House Tragedy and Gayety.
Between 1841 and 1844 the White House saw a greater mingling of tragedy and gayety than it ever did in any equal interval before or since.

Logic of Youth.
"Father," exclaimed John vigorously, "why don't Quakers take off their hats?"

Overstudy.
Books are pleasant, but if by being overstudied we impair our health and spoil our good humor, two of the best traits we have, let us give it over. I, for my part, am one of those who think that no fruit derived from them can recompense so great a loss.—Montaigne.

Lines on the Forehead.
The lines on the forehead are caused by perpetually raising the eyebrows, and no permanent help can be had until the habit is in some measure conquered.

About the Human Eye.
Greenish, hazel and spotted eyes are accompanied usually with shrewd, quick, nervous, restless temperaments.

Salt Germs.
"Salt, of all things, we deem germ proof; but, as a matter of fact, salt is one of the most germ ridden foods we eat."

Unexpected.
One of the dignitaries of the Church of Scotland was a minister of a remote parish before he leaped into fame, but was not considered a particularly eloquent preacher.

General View of it. Nothing so needs reforming as other people's habits.—Pudd'nhead Wilson.

To Stop a Leak. To stop a leak, mix whitening and yellow soap into a thick paste with a little water. Apply this to the place where the leakage is and it will be instantly stopped. A visit from the plumber will still be necessary, but there is no special hurry for more radical repairs.

Feared the Worst. Arthur suffered so severely from toothache, due to a bad tooth, that his father finally insisted upon the aching sinner's removal. The little lad bore up bravely under the operation, but seemed troubled on the way home. At last he voiced the cause of his anxiety. "Papa," he asked, pale and trembling, "am I a cripple now?"

Must Be Striven For. The old saw runs, "Sweetest nuts have hardest shells." This, we suppose, is a quaint way of saying that everything worth the having requires both pains and strains to acquire. The gold is not obtained until the rocks are crushed and the fires are applied. The best fruits of learning are obtained after great expense of time, labor and investigation.

Union at the Baptist church, Hingham, and on Friday evening they will hold a social in the home church, having as their guests the Epworth League of the M. E. church.

Daily Thought. Content thyself to be obscurely good.—Addison.

Children and Their Pets. Never give a child any pet and let things "sort themselves out." It is futile to think children can manage pets by their own instinct; they must be taught how to do things in the right way.

The Attraction. A rather eccentric man, calling on a family blessed by an observant little son, wore kid gloves that had been cleaned. The little boy, seeming to be much attracted by the visitor, stayed close at his side. "You like to stand by Mr. Blank and hear his funny stories, don't you, Jimmie?" presently asked Jimmie's father. "I don't care about his stories," replied the honest youngster, "but his hands smell just like our automobile."

Musician's Devotion to His Art. In 1838 Robert Schumann wrote to Clara Weick: "I have given several hours hard study every day to Bach and Beethoven, and to my own work, and conscientiously managed a large correspondence. I am a young man of twenty-eight, with a very active mind, and an artist, to boot; yet for eight years I have not been out of Saxony, and have been sitting still and saving money, without a thought of spending it on amusement."

Come today and listen to the greatest musical instrument in the world—the

Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph

Mr. Edison's personal invitation, in the Boston Globe of Sunday, Jan. 25th was extended to the music lovers of this town to hear his latest invention.

It took him three years to perfect it. It will take three minutes for you to realize what a wonderful thing it is, to appreciate its wonderful power of reproduction, its practically limitless possibilities.

Both Mr. Edison's and our invitations to you are most cordial. If you come today or any time, we shall be glad to play your favorite selections on the Diamond Disc Phonograph. It is easier to demonstrate this instrument than talk about it. You'll see why. We would be pleased to place one of these instruments in your home on approval, and if satisfactory, would sell on easy terms, if desired.
