PREFACE.

THIS second volume embraces the remaining plays of Terence, with the exception of the "Eunuchus," which was not included in the "Programme" of Weale's Series. What was said by way of preface to the first volume applies also, in a great measure, to this: and in finishing the work prescribed for him, the Editor has but to express his hope and trust that, if it bears no great evidence of originality (for which indeed an Edition of Terence affords little field, so often has the ground been pre-occupied), it may at least lay claim to care and accuracy, and diligent sifting of the labours of former editors and commentators, in number not a few. He has tried to award the meed of obligation to each editor, from whom any light has been derived upon each passage, as it passed under review; but indeed the task is not easy; for there is nothing in the way of quotation or interpretation, which has not come down to us through a long series, and which cannot boast an almost Welsh pedigree.

Yet to Mr. Parry's Terence some special acknowledgment is due for the statement of metres prefixed to each scene, of which free use has been made: as well as for the substance of casual observations on metre here and there. The Notes of Gronovius have been of great use, as have those of Stalbaum's edition; and Key's Grammar has been, to this second volume, of service, which the lack of it denied to the first. But the chief basis of illustration and criticism of the text of Terence has been Mr. Hildyard's "Aulularia" and "Menaechmei :" indeed, so frequent has been the Editor's recurrence to those most useful editions, that he has been obliged (he hopes, "pace viri tanti,") to abbreviate the words "Hildyard's Glossary" into "H. G." throughout the notes of the present volume. The study of these two plays, with the help of Hildyard's Notes and Glossary, is strongly commended to young students, who will thus acquire a clearer insight into Latin Philology, and a keener appreciation of Latin Comedy. They will also be more ready to welcome the publication, of which there is some hope, of other plays of Plautus, on the same plan, edited by the same hand, or, at least, under the same auspices.

Perhaps the Editor may venture to add, that in the following pages the possessor of the second volume is supposed to be possessed also of the first ; and thanks to the spirit of the Publisher of this series, this supposition is one which involves no costly outlay to realise.

POSTQUAM poeta sensit scripturam suam
Ab inquis obseruari et aduorsarios
Rapere in pejorem partem quam acturi sumus :
Indicio de sese ipse erit, uos judices,
Laudin au uitio duci id factum oporteat.
Synapothnescontes Diphili comediant :
Eam Commorientis Plautus fecit fabulam.
In Graeca adulescens est, qui lenoni eripit
Meretricem in prima fabula : eum Plautus locum
Reliquit integrum ; eum hic locum sumpsit sibi
In Adelphos ; uerbum de uerbo expressum extulit.
Eam nos acturi sumus nouam : pernoscite
Furtumne factum existumetis an locum

Quod illi maledictum uehemens esse existumant,
Eam laudem hic dicit maxumam, quom illis placet,
Qui uobis uniuorsis et populo placent,
Quorum opera in bello, in otio, in negotio

In agendo partem ostendent. facite æquanimitas

ACTVS I.—SCEN. 1.

MICIO.

STORAX. non rediit hac nocte a cena Æschinus
Neque seruolorum quisquam, qui aduorsum ierant.
Profecto hoc uere dicunt: si absis uspiam,
Aut ubi si cesses, euenire ea satius est
Quæ in te ~~uxor~~ dicit et quæ in animo cogitat
Irata, quam illa quac parentes propitii.
Uxor, si cesses, aut te amare cogitat
Aut tete amari aut potare atque animo obsequi,
Et tibi bene esse, soli sibi quom sit male.
Ego quia non rediit filius quæ cogito! 10
Quibus nunc sollicitor rebus! ne aut ille alserit
Aut ceciderit aliqua atque aliquid præfregerit.
Vah, quemquamne hominem in animum instituere aut sibi
Parare quod sit carius quam ipse est sibi!
Atque ex me hic natus non est, sed fratre ex meo. 15
Dissimili is studiost jam inde ab adulescentia.
Ego hanc clementem uitam urbanam atque otium
Secutus sum et, quod fortunatum isti putant,
Uxorem ~~n~~umquam habui. ille contra hæc omnia
Ruri agere uitam: semper paree ac duriter 20

Se habere : uxorem duxit : nati filii
 Duo : inde ego hunc maiorem adoptavi mihi :
 Eduxi a parvulo, habui, amavi pro meo ;
 In eo me oblecto : solum id est carum mihi.
 Ille ut item contra me habeat facio sedulo :
 Do, praeferim : non necesse habeo omnia
 Pro meo jure agere : postremo, alii clanculum
 Patres quae faciunt, quae fert adulescentia,
 Ea ne me celet consuefeci filium.
 Nam qui mentiri aut fallere insuerit patrem,
 Fraudare tanto magis audebit eeteros.
 Pudore et liberalitate liberos
 Retinere satius esse credo quam metu.
 Hæc fratri mecum non conueniunt neque placent.
 Venit ad me sæpe clamans ' quid agis, Micio ?
 Quor perdis adulescentem nobis ? quor amat ?
 Quor potat ? quor tu his rebus sumptum suggeris ?
 Vestitu nimio indulges : nimium ineptus es.'
 Nimium ipsest durus præter æquomque et bonum :
 Et errat longe mea quidem sententia,
 Qui imperium credit grauius esse aut stabilius,
 Vi quod fit, quam illud quod amicitia adiungitur.
 Mea sic est ratio et sic animum induco meum :
 Malo coactus qui suum officium facit,
 Dum id rescitum iri credit, tantisper cauet :
 Si sperat fore clam, rursum ad ingenium redit.
 Ille quem beneficio adjungas ex animo facit,
 Studet par referre, præscens absensque idem erit.
 Hoc patruius, potius consuefacere filium
 Sua sponte recte facere quam alieno metu :
 Hoc pater ac dominus interest : hoc qui nequit,
 Fateatur nescire imperare liberis.

ACT. I.—SCEN. 2.

DEMEA. MICIO.

DE. Ehem opportune : te ipsum quærito.
 MI. Quid tristis es ? DE. Rogas me ? ubi nobis Æschinust ?
Scin jam quid tristis ego sim ? MI. Dixin hoc fore ?
 Quid fecit ? DE. Quid ille fecerit ? quem neque pudet
 Quicquam, nec metuit quemquam, neque legem putat
 Tenere se ullam. nam illa quæ antehac facta sunt
 Omitto ; modo quid designauit ? MI. Quidnam id est ?

DE. Foris effregit atque in aëdis inruit
 Alienas : ipsum dominum atque omniem familiam
 Mulcauit usque ad mortem : eripuit mulierem
 Quam amabat. clamant omnes indignissime
 Factum esse : hoc aduenienti quot mihi, Micio,
 Dixere ! in orest omni populo. denique,
 Si conferendum exemplumst, non fratrem uidet
 Rei dare operam, ruri esse párcum ac sobrium ?
 Nullum huius simile factum. hæc quom illi, Micio,
 Dico, tibi dico : tu illum corrumpi sinis.

MI. Homine inperito numquam quicquam injustiust,
 Qui nisi quod ipse fecit nil rectum putat.

DE. Quorsum istuc ? MI. Quia tu, Demea, hæc male judicas.
 Non est flagitium, mihi crede, adulescentulum
 Scortari, neque potare : non est : neque foris

Effringere. haec si neque ego neque tu fecimus,
 Non siit egestas facere nos. tu nunc tibi
 Id laudi ducis, quod tum fecisti inopia ?
 Injuriumst: nam si esset unde id fieret,
 Faceremus. et illum tu tuom, si essemus homo,
 Sineres nunc facere, dum per aetatem licet,
 Potius quam, ubi te exspectatum ejecisset foras,
 Alieniore aetate post facheret tamen.

30

DE. Pro Iuppiter, tu homo adigis me ad insaniam.
 Non est flagitium facere haec adulescentulum ? MI. Ah,
 Ausculta, ne me obtundas de hac re saepius.

Tuom filium dedisti adoptandum mihi :
 Is meus est factus: siquid peccat, Demea,
 Mihi peccat: ego illi maxumam partem feram.
 Obsonat, potat, olet unguenta : de meo ;
 Amat: dabitur a me argentum, dum erit cominodum.
 Ubi non erit, fortasse excludetur foras.

Foris effregit: restituentur; discidit
 Vestem: resarcietur. et (dis gratia)
 Est unde haec fiant, et adhuc non molesta sunt.
 Postremo aut desine aut cedo quemuis arbitrum:
 Te plura in hac re peccare ostendam. DE. Hei mihi,
 Pater esse disce ab illis, qui uere sciunt.

45

MI. Natura tu illi pater es, consiliis ego.

DE. Tun consulis quicquam ? MI. Ah, si pergis, abiero.

DE. Sicine agis ? MI. An ego totiens de eadem re audiam ?

DE. Curaest mihi. MI. Et mihi curaest. uerum, Denlea, Curemus aequam uterque partem: tu alterum,
 Ego item alterum. nam curare ambos propemodum
 Reposcere illumist quem dedisti. DE. Ah, Micio.

MI. Mihi sic uidetur. DE. Quid istic ? tibi si istuc placet, Profundat, perdat, pereat, nil ad me attinet.

Jam si uerbum ullum posthac—Ml. Rursum, Demea, Irascere ? De. An non credis ? repeton quem dedi ?
*Æ*gest : alienus non sum : si obsto—hem, desino.
 Unum uis curem, curo. et est dis gratia,
 Quom ita ut uolo est ; iste tuos ipse sentiet
Posterius : nolo in illum grauius dice*e*. 50

Ml. Nec nil neque omnia hæc sunt quæ dicit : tamen
 Non nil molesta hæc sunt mihi : sed ostendere
 Me ægre pati illi nolui : nam itast homo :
 Quem placo, aduorsor sedulo et deterreo ;
 Tamen uix humane patitur : uerum si augeam 65
 Aut etiam adjutor sim ejus iracundiæ,
 Insaniam profecto cum illo. etsi *Æ*schinus
 Nonnullam in hac re nobis facit injuriam.
 Quam hic non amauit meretricem ? aut quo*i*n non dedit Aliquid ? postremo nuper (credo jam omnium Tædebat) dixit uelle uxorem ducere.
 Sperabam jam deferuisse adulescentiam :
 Gaudebam. Ecce autem de integro : nisi quidquid est
 Volo scire, atque hominem conuenire, si apud forumst. 70

SANNIO. ÆSCHINVS. (PARMENO. PSALTRIA.)

SA. Obsecro, populares, ferte misero atque innocentι auxilium :

Subuenite inopi. AE. Otiose, nunc jam ilico hic consiste.

Quid respectas ? nil periclist : numquam, dum ego adero, hic te tanget.

SA. Ego istam inuitis omnibus.

AE. Quamquamst scelestus, non committet hodie umquam iterum ut uapulet. 5

SA. Æschine, audi, ne te ignarum fuisse dicas meorum morum,

Leno ego sum. AE. Scio. SA. At ita, ut usquam fuit fide quisquam optuma.

Tu quod te posterius purges, hanc injuriam mihi nolle

Factam esse, hujus non faciam. crede hoc, ego meum jus persequar :

Neque tu uerbis solues umquam, quod mihi re male feceris. 10

Noui ego uostra hæc ‘nollem factum : dabitur jus jurandum, te esse

Indignum injuria hac, indignis quom egomet sim acceptus modis.

AE. Abi præ strenue ac foris aperi. SA. Ceterum hoc nil facis ?

AE. I intro nunc jam. SA. At enim non sinam. AE. Accede illuc, Parmeno :

Nimium istoc abisti : hic propter hunc adsiste : hem, sic uolo. 15

Cæue nunc jam oculos a meis oculis quoquam demoueas tuos,
Ne mora sit, si innuerim, quin pugnus continuo in mala hæreat.

SA. Istuc uolo ergo ipsum experiri. AE. Hem, serua : omitte mulierem.

SA. O indignum facinus. AE. Nisi caues, geminabit. SA. Hei misero mihi.

AE. Non innueram : uerum in istam partem potius peccato tamen. 20

I nunc jam. SA. Quid hoc reist ? regnumne, Aeschine, hic tu possides ?

AE. Si possiderem, ornatus esses ex tuis uirtutibus.

SA. Quid tibi rei mecumst ? AE. Nil. SA. Quid ? nostin qui sim ? AE. Non desidero.

SA. Tetigin tui quicquam ? AE. Si attigisses, ferres infor- tunium.

SA. Qui tibi magis licet meam habere, pro qua ego argentum dedi ? 25

Responde. AE. Ante ædis non fecisse erit melius hic con- uitium :

Nam si molestus pergis esse, jam intro abripiere atque ibi Usque ad necem operiere loris. SA. Loris liber ? AE. Sic erit.

SA. O hominem inpurum : hicin libertatem aiunt esse æquam omnibus ?

AE. Si satis jam debacchatus es, leno, audi si uis nunc jam. 30

SA. Egon debacchatus sum autem an tu in me ? AE. Mitte ista atque ad rem redi.

SA. Quam rem ? quo redcam ? AE. Jamne me uis dicere id quod ad te attinet ?

SA. Cupio, æqui modo aliquid. AE. Vah, leno iniqua me non uolt loqui.

SA. Leno sum, pernicies communis, fateor, adulescentium, Periurus, pestis : tamen tibi a me nullast orta injuria. 35

AE. Nam hercle etiam hoc restat. SA. Illuc quæso redi, quo cœpisti, Æschine.

AE. Minis uiginti tu illam emisti ; quæ res tibi uortat male.
Argenti tantum dabitur. SA. Quid ? si ego tibi illam nolo uendere,

Coges me ? AE. Minume. SA. Namque id metui. AE. Neque uendundam censeo,

Quæ liberast : nam ego liberali illam adsero causa manu. 40

Nunc uide utrum uis : argentum accipere an causam meditari
tuam.

Delibera hoc, dum ego redeo, leno. SA. Pro supreme Iuppiter, Minume miror qui insanire occipiunt ex injuria.

Domo me eripuit, uerberauit : me inuito abduxit meam :
Homini misero plus quingentos colaphos infregit mihi. 45

Ob malefacta hæc tantidem emptam postulat sibi tradier.

Verum enim quando bene promeruit, fiat : suom jus postulat.

Age jam cupio, modo si argentum reddat. sed ego hoc hariolor :

Ubi me dixero dare tanti, testis faciet ilico,

Vendidisse me, de argento somnium : ‘ mox : cras redi.’ 50

Id quoque possum ferre, modo si reddat, quamquam’ injuriumst.

Verum cogito id quod res est : quando eum quæstum occuperis,
Accipiunda et mussitanda injuria adulescentiumst.

Sed nemo dabit : frustra has egomet mecum rationes puto.

Certationem comparatam, quam hæc hodie inter nos fuit :

Ego uapulando, ille uerberando, usque ambo defessi sumus.

Sy. Tua culpa. SA. Quid facerem ? Sy. Adulescenti morem gestum oportuit.

SA. Qui potui melius, qui hodie usque os præbui ? Sy. Age, scis quid loquar ?

Pecuniam in loco negligere maxumum interdumst lucrum : hui,
Metuisti, si nunc de tuo iure concessisses paululum

Atque adulescenti morigerasses, hominum homo stultissime,

Ne non tibi istuc fæneraret. SA. Ego spem pretio non emo.

Sy. Numquam rem facies : abi, inescare nescis homines, Sannio.

SA. Credo istuc melius esse : uerum ego numquam adeo astutus fui,

Quia quidquid possem mallem auferre potius in praesentia.

Sy. Age noui tuom animum : quasi jam usquam tibi siut uiginti minæ,

Dum huic obsequare. præterea autem te aiunt proficisci Cyprum.

SA. Hem.

Sy. Coemisse hinc quæ illuc ueheres multa, nauem conduc-

Animus tibi pendet. ubi illinc spero redieris tamen hoc ages.

SA. Nusquam pedem. perii hercle : hac illi spe hoc incep-

Injeci scrupulum homini. SA. O scelera : illud uide,

Ut in ipso articulo oppressit. emptæ mulieres

Complures et item hinc alia quæ porto Cyprum.

Nisi eo ad mercatum uenio, damnum maxumumst.

Nunc si hoc omitto actum agam ; ubi illinc rediero,

Nil est ; refrixerit res : 'nunc deum uenis ?

Quor passu's ? ubi eras ?' ut sit satius perdere
 Quam aut nunc manere tam diu aut tum persequi.

Sy. Iamne enumerasti id quod ad te redditum putes ?

Sa. Hocine illo dignumst ? hocine incipere Æschinum ?

Per oppressionem ut hanc mi eripere postulet ?

Sy. Labascit. nūm hoc habeo : uide si satis placet :

Potius quam uenias in periculum, Sannio,

Seruesne an perdas totum, diuiduom face.

Minas decem conradet alicunde. Sa. Hei mihi,

Etiam de sorte uunc uenio in dubium miser ?

Pudet uil ? omnis dentis labefecit mihi :

Praeterea colaphis tuber est totum caput :

Etiam insuper defrudent ? nusquam abeo. Sy. Ut lubet :

Numquid uis quin abeam ? Sa. Immo hercle hoc quæso, Syre,

Ut ut hæc sunt acta, potius quam litis sequar,

Meum mihi reddatur, saltem quanti emptast, Syre.

Scio te non usum antehac amicitia mea :

ACT. III.—SCEN. 3.

DEMEA. SYRVS.

DE. Disperii : Ctesiphonem audiui filium
Una fuisse in raptione cum Aeschino.

Id misero restat mihi mali, si illum potest,
Qui aliquoi reist, etiam eum ad nequitiem abducere.
Ubi ego illum queram ? credo abductum in ganeum
Aliquo : persuasit ille inpurus, sat seio.
Sed ecce Syrum ire uideo : hinc scibo jam ubi siet.
Atqui hercle hic de grege illost : si me senserit

Eum quæritare, numquam dicet carnufex.

Non ostendam id me uelle. Sy. Omnem rem modo seni

19

Quo pacto haberet enarramus ordine.

Nil quicquam uidi lætius. DE. Pro Iuppiter,

Hominis stultitiam. Sy. Conlaudauit filium :

Mihi, qui id dedissem consilium, egit gratias.

DE. Disrumpor. Sy. Argentum adnumerauit ilico :

15

Dedit præterea in sumptum dimidium minæ :

Id distributum sanest ex sententia. DE. Hem,

Huic mandes, siquid recte curatum uelis.

Sy. Ehem Demea, haud aspexeram te : quid agitur ?

DE. Quid agatur ? nostra nequeo mirari satis

20

Rationem. Sy. Est hercle inepta, ne dicam dolo,

Atque absurdæ. piscis ceteros purga, Dromo :

Congrum istum maxumum in aqua sinito ludere

Tautisper : ubi ego rediero, exossabitur :

Prius nolo. DE. Hæcin flagitia ! Sy. Mihi quidem non placent, 25

Et clamo sæpe. salsa menta hæc, Stephanio,

Fac macerentur pulchre. DE. Di nostra fidem,

Utrum studione id sibi habet an laudi putat

Fore, si perdiderit gnatum ? uæ misero mihi.

Videre uideor jam diem illum, quom hinc egens

36

Profugiet aliquo militatum. Sy. O Demea,

Istuc est sapere, non quod ante pedes modost

Videre, sed etiam illa quæ futura sunt

Prospicere. DE. Quid ? istæc jam penes uos psaltriast ?

Sy. Ellam intus. DE. Eho, an domist habiturus ? Sy.

Credo, ut est

37

Dementia. DE. Hæcin fieri ! Sy. Inepta lenitas

Patris et facilitas praua. DE. Fratris me quidem

Pudet pigetque. Sy. Nimium inter uos, Demea,

(Non quia ades præsens dico hoc) pernimium inter est.

Sy. Vigilantiam tuam tu mihi narras ? DE. Sic siet Modo ut nunc est, quæso. Sy. Ut quisque suom uolt esse,

 Abigam hunc rus, jamdudum aliquid ruri agere arbitror
 DE. Satin scis ibi esse ? Sy. Oh, qui egomet produxi.
 DE. Optumest :

Metui ne hæreret hic. Sy. Atque iratum admodum.
 DE. Quid autem ? Sy. Adortus jurgiost fratrem apud forum

De psaltria istac. DE. Ain uero ? Sy. Ah, nil reticuit.
 Nam ut numerabatur forte argentum, interuenit
 Homo de improviso : cœpit clamare 'o Æschine,
 Hæcine flagitia facere te ! hæc te admittere
 Indigna genere nostro ?' DE. Oh, lacrumo gaudio.

Sy. 'Non tu hoc argentum perdis, sed uitam tuam.'
 DE. Saluos sit : spero, est similis majorum suom. Sy. Hui.
 DE. Syre, præceptorum plenust istorum ille. Sy. Phy :

Jubeo atque ex aliis sumere exemplum sibi.
 'Hoc facito.' Sy. Recte sane. DE. 'Hoc fugito.' Sy. Cal-

 Non facere uobis, quæ modo dixti : et, quod queo,
 Conseruis ad eundem istunc præcipio modum : 70
 ‘ Hoc salsumst, hoc adustumst, hoc lautumst parum :
 Illud recte : iterum sic memento :’ sedulo
 Moneo, quæ possum pro mea sapientia :
 Postremo tamquam in speculum in patinas, Demea,
 Inspicere jubeo et moneo quid facto usus siet. 75
 Inepta hæc esse, nos quæ facimus, sentio :
 Verum quid facias ? ut homost, ita morem geras.
 Numquid uis ? DE. Mentem uobis meliorem dari.

Sy. Tu rus hinc ibis ? DE. Recta. Sy. Nam quid tu hic
 agas,

Ubi siquid bene præcipias, nemo obtemperet 80
 DE. Ego uero hinc abeo, quando is, quamobrem huc ueneram,
 Rus abiit : illum curo unum : ille ad me attinet,
 Quando ita uolt frater : de istoc ipse uiderit.
 Sed quis illic est, quem uideo procul ? estne Hegio
 Tribulis noster ? si satis cerno, is est hercle : uah,
 Homo amicus nobis jam inde a puero : di boni, 85
 Ne illiusmodi jam magna nobis ciuium
 Penuriast : homo antiqua uirtute ac fide.
 Haud cito mali quid ortum ex hoc sit publice.
 Quam gaudeo ! ubi etiam huius generis reliquias
 Restare uideo, uiuere etiam nunc lubet. 90
 Opperiar hominem hic, ut salutem et conloquar.

ACT. III.—SCEN. 4.

HEGIO. GETA. DEMEA. PAMPHILA.

HE. Pro di immortales, facinus indignum, Geta,
 Quod narras. GE. Sic est factum. HE. Ex illan familia
 Tam inliberale facinus esse ortum ! o AEschine,
 Pol haud paternum istuc dedisti. DE. Videlicet
 De psaltria hac audivit : id illi nunc dolet
 Alieno. pater eius nili pendit : hei milii,
 Utinam hic prope adsit alicubi atque hæc audiat.

HE. Nisi facient quæ illos æquomst, haud sic auferent.

GE. In te spes omnis, Hegio, nobis sitast :
 Te solum habemus, tu es patronus, tu pater :
 Ille tibi moriens nos commendauit senex :
 Si deseris tu, periimus. HE. Cæue dixeris :
 Neque faciam neque me satis pie posse arbitror.

DE. Adibo. saluere Hégionem plurimum

Jubeo. HE. Oh, te quærebam ipsum : salue, Demea.

DE. Quid autem ? HE. Maior filius tuos AEschinus,
 Quem fratri adoptandum dedisti, neque boni
 Neque liberalis functus officiumst uiri.

DE. Quid istuc est ? HE. Nostrum amicum noras Simulum
 AEqualem ? DE. Quidni ? HE. Filium eius uirginem
 Vitiauit. DE. Hem. HE. Mane : nondum audisti, Demea, Quod est grauissimum. DE. An quid est etiam amplius ?

HE. Vero amplius : nam hoc quidem ferendum aliquo modost :

Persuasit nox, amor, uinum, adulescentia :
 Humanumst. ubi scit factum, ad matrem uirginis
 Venit ipsus ultro lacrumans, orans, obsecrans,
 Fidem dans, jurans se illam ducturum domum.

Ignotumst, tacitumst, creditumst. uirgo ex eo
 Compressu grauidast facta : hic mensis decumus est :
 Ille bonus uir nobis psaltriau, si dis placet,
 Parauit, quicum uiuat : illam deserit.

DE. Pro certon tu istaec dicis ? HE. Mater uirginis
 In mediost, ipsa uirgo, res ipsa, hic Geta
 Præterea, ut captus est seruorum, non malus
 Neque iners : alit illas, solus omnem familiam
 Sustentat : hunc abduce, uincei, quære rem.

GE. Immo hercle extorque, nisi ita factumst, Demea ;
 Postremo non negabit : coram ipsum cedo.

DE. Pudet : nec quid agam neque quid huic respondeam
 Scio. PA. Miseram me, differor doloribus.
 Iuno Lucina, fer opem : serua me obsecro. HE. Hem, Numnam illa quæso parturit ? GE. Certe, Hegio. HE. Hem :
 Illæc fidem nunc uostram implorat, Demea,
 Quod uos vis cogit, id uoluntate impetrat.

Hæc primum ut fiant deos quæso ut uobis decet.
 Sin aliter animus uoster est, ego, Demea,
 Summa ni defendam hanc atque illum mortuom.
 Cognatus mihi erat : una a pueris paruolis
 Sumus educti : una semper militiæ et domi
 Fuimus : paupertatem una pertulimus graueni.
 Quapropter nitar, faciam, experiar, denique
 Animam relinquam potius qnam illas desoram.
 Quid mihi respondes ? DE. Fratrem conueniam, Hegio.

Is, quod mihi de hac ro dederit consilium, id sequar.

HE. Sel, Demea, hoc tu facito cum animo cogites,
 Quam uos facillumo agitis, quam estis maxume
 Potentes dites fortunati nobiles,
 Tam maxume uos aequo animo aequa noscere
 Oportet, si uos uoltis perhiberi probos.

DE. Redito : fient quæ fieri æquomst omnia 66
 HE. Decet te facere. Geta, duc me intro ad Sostratam.
 DE. Non me indicente hæc fiunt : utinam hic sit modo
 Defunctum : uerum nimia illæc licentia
 Profecto evadet in aliquod magnum malum.
 Ibo ac requiram fratrem, ut in eum hæc euomam. 66

ACT. III.—SCEN. 5.

REGIO.

Bono animo fac sis, Sostrata, et istam quod potes
 Fac consolere. ego Micionem, si apud forumst,
 Conueniam atque ut res gestast narrabo ordine ;
 Si est, facturus ut sit officium suom,
 Faciat : sin aliter de hac re est eius sententia,
 Respondeat mi, ut quid agam quam primum sciam.

CTESIPHO. SYRVS.

Ct. Ain patrem hinc abisse rus ? Sy. Jamdudum. Ct.
Dic sodes. Sy. Apud uillamst :

Nunc quom maxume operis aliquid facere credo. Ct. Utinam

Quod cum salute eius fiat, ita se defatigarit uelim,

Ut triduo hoc perpetuo prorsum e lecto nequeat surgere.

Sy. Ita fiat, et istoc siquid potis est rectius. Ct. Ita :
nam hunc diem

Misere nimis cupio, ut cœpi, perpetuum in lætitia degere.

Et illud rus nulla alia causa tam male odi, nisi quia propest :

Quod si esset longius,

Prius nox oppressisset illic, quam huc reuorti posset iterum.

Nunc ubi me illic non uidebit, iam huc recurret, sat scio : 10

Rogitabit me, ubi fuerim : quem ego hoc toto non uidi die :

Quid dicam ? Sy. Nilne in mentem ? Ct. Numquam quicquam. Sy. Tanto nequior.

Cliens, amicus, hospes, nemost uobis ? Ct. Sunt : quid

Sy. Hisce opera ut data sit. Ct. Quæ non data sit ? non

Ct. Interdiu : sed si hic pernocto, causæ quid dicam, Syre? 15

Sy. Vah, quam uellem etiam noctu amicis operam mos esset dari.

Quin tu otiosus es : ego illius sensum pulchre calleo.

Quom feruit maxume, tam placidum quam ouem reddo. Ct.
Quomodo?

Sy. Fugo modo intro, ego uidero.

Ct. Siquid rogabit, nusquam tu me: audistin? Sy. Potin

ACT IV.—SCEN. 2.

DEMEA. CTESIPHO. SYRVS.

De. Næ ego homo infelix : primum fratrem nusquam inuenic gentium :

Præterea autem, dum illum quæro, a uilla mercenarium
Vidi : is filium negat esse ruri : nec quid agam scio.

Ct. Syre. Sy. Quid est? Ct. Men quærit? Sy. Verum.
Ct. Perii. Sy. Quin tu animo bono es.

De. Quid hoc, malum, infelicitatis? nequeo satis decer-nere : 5

Nisi me credo huic esse natum rei, ferundis miseriis.

Primus sentio mala nostra : primus rescisco omnia :
Primus porro obnuntio : ægre solus, siquid fit, fero.

Sy. Rideo hunc : primum ait se scire : is solus nescit omnia.

De. Nunc redeo : si forte frater redierit uiso. Ct. Syre, 10
Obsecro, uide ne ille luc prorsus se inruat. Sy. Etiam taces?
Ego caucho. Ct. Numquam hercle hodie ege istuc committam tibi :

Nam me jam in cellam aliquam cum illa concludam : id tutissimum sumst.

Sy. Age, tamen ego hunc amouebo. De. Sed eccum sceleratum Syrum.

Sy. Non hercle hic quidem durare quisquam, si sic fit, potest. 15

Scire equidem uolo, quot mihi sint domini : quæ hæc est miseria !

De. Quid ille gannit ? quid uolt ? quid ais, bone uir ? est frater domi ?

Sy. Quid malum ‘bone uir’ mihi narras ? equidem perii.
De. Quid tibist ?

Sy. Rogitas ? Ctesiphon me pugnis miserum et istam psaltriā

Usque occidit. De. Hem, quid narras ? Sy. Hem, uide ut discidit labrum. 20

De. Quamobrem ? Sy. Me impulsore hanc emptam esse ait.
De. Non tu eum rus hinc modo

Produxo aibas ? Sy. Factum : uerum uenit post insaniens :

Nil pepercit. non puduisse uerberare hominem senem !

Quem ego modo puerum tantillum in manibus gestauī meis.

De. Laudo : Ctesiphon, patrissas : abi, uirum te judico. 25

Sy. Laudas ? næ ille continebit posthac, si sapiet, manus.

De. Fortiter. Sy. Perquam, quia miseram mulierem et me seruolum,

Qui referire non audebam, uicit : hui, perfotiter.

De. Non potuit melius. idem quod ego, sensit te esse huic rei caput.

Sed estne frater intus ? Sy. Non est. De. Ubi illum inueniam cogito. 30

Sy. Scio ubi sit, uerum hodie numquain monstrabo. De.
Hem, quid ais ? Sy. Ita.

DE. Diminuctur tibi quidem jam cerebrum. SY. At nomen nescio

Illiū hominis, sed locum noui ubi sit. DE. Dic ergo locum.

SY. Nostin porticum apud macellum hanc deorsum ? DE.
Quidni nouerim ?

SY. Præterito hac recta platea sursum : ubi eo ueneris, 35
Clius deorsum uorsus est : hac te præcipitato ; postea
Est ad hanc manum sacellum : ibi angiportum propter est,

DE. Quanam ? SY. Illic ubi etiam caprificus magna est.
DE. Noui. SY. Hac pergit.

DE. Id quidem angiportum non est peruium. SY. Verum hercle : uah,

Censen hominem me esse ? erraui : in porticum rursum redi : 40
Sane hac multo propius ibis et miuor est erratio.

Scin Cratini huius ditis aedis ? DE. Scio. SY. Ubi eas præ-terieris,

Ad sinistram hac recta platea ; ubi ad Dianaē ueneris, Ito ad dextram : priusquam ad portam uenias, apud ipsum
lacum

Est pistrilla et exaduorsum fabrica : ibist. DE. Quid ibi facit ? 45

SY. Lectulos in sole ilignis pedibus faciundos dedit.

DE. Ubi potetis uos : benc sane. sed cesso ad eum pergere ?

SY. I sane : ego te exercebo hodie, ut dignus es, silicernium.
Æschinus odiose cessat : prandium corrumpitur :

Ctesipho autem in amorest totus. ego jam prospiciam mihi : 50
Nam jam adibo atque unum quicquid, quod quidem erit bellissumum,

Carpam, et cyathos sorbilans paulatim hunc producam diem.

ACT IV.—SCEN. 3.

MICIO. HEGIO.

M_I. Ego in hac re nil reperio, quamobrem lauder tanto opere, Hegio.

Meum officium facio : quod peccatum a nobis ortumst corrigo.
Nisi si me in illo credidisti esse hominum numero, qui ita putant,

Sibi fieri injuriam ultro, si quam fecere ipsi expostules,
Et ultro accusant: id quia non est a me factum, agis gratias ? ⁵

H_E. Ah, minume : numquam te aliter atque es in animum induxi meum.

Sed quæso ut una mecum ad matrem uirginis eas, Micio,
Atque istæc eadem quæ mihi dixti tute dicas mulieri ;
Suspitionem hanc propter fratrem ejus esse et illam psaltriam.

M_I. Si ita æquom censes aut si ita opus est facto, eamus.

H_E. Bene facis :

Nam et illi animum iam releuabis, quæ dolore ac miseria Tabescit, et tuo officio fueris functus. sed si aliter putas, Egomet narrabo quæ mihi dixti. M_I. Immo ego ibo. H_E.

Bene facis :

Omnes, quibus res sunt minus secundæ, magis sunt nescio quo modo

Suspitosi : ad contumeliam omnia accipiunt magis :

Propter suam inpotentiam se semper credunt negligi.

Quapropter te ipsum purgare ipsis coram placabilius est.

M_I. Et recte et uerum dicis. H_E. Sequere me ergo ha-intro. M_I. Maxume.

ACT. IV.—SCEN. 4.

AESCHINVS.

Disrucor animi :

Hocinc de improuiso mihi mali objici

Tantum, ut neque quid de me faciam nec quid agam certum
siet !

Membra metu debilia sunt : animus timore

Obstipuit : pectorc consistere nil consili

Quit. vah, quomodo me ex hac expediam turba ? tanta nunc

Suspicio de me incidit :

Neque ea immerito : Sostrata credit mihi me psaltriam hanc emisse :

Id anus mi indicium fecit.

Nam ut hinc forte ea ad obstetricem erat missa, ubi eam uidi,

Accedo : rogito, Paniphila quid agat, jam partus adsiet,

Eone obstetricem arcessat. illa exclamat ‘ abi, abi : jam,
Æschine,

Satis diu dedisti uerba : sat adhuc tua nos frustratast fides.’

“ Hem, quid istuc obsecro ” inquam “ est ? ” ‘ ualeas, habeas illam quæ placet.’

Sensi ilico id illas suspicari : sed reprendi me tamen,

15

Nequid de fratre garrulae illi dicerem ac fieret palam.

Nunc quid faciam ? dicam fratris esse hanc ? quod minumest opus

Usquam efferri : ac mitto : fieri potis est ut nequa exeat.

Ipsum id metuo ut credant : tot concurrunt uerisimilia :

Egomet rapui : ipse egomet solui argentum : ad me abductast domum.

Hæc adeo mea culpa fateor fieri. non me hanc rem patri,

Ut ut erat gesta, indicasse ! exorassem ut eam ducrem.

Cessatum usque adhuc est: nunc porro, Æschine, expergiscere:

Nunc hoc primumst: ad illas ibo, ut purgem me accedam ad
foris.

Perii: horresco semper, ubi pultare hasce occipio miser. 25

Heus heus: Æschinus ego sum. aperite aliquis actutum ostium.

Prodit nescio quis: concedam huc.

ACT. IV.—SCEN. 5.

MICIO. ÆSCHINVS.

Ml. Ita uti dixi, Sostrata,

Facite: ego Æchinum conueniam, ut quomodo acta hæc sunt sciat.

Sed quis ostium hoc pultauit? Æ. Pater hercle est, perii.

Ml. Æschine,

Æ. Quid huic hic negotist? Ml. tune has pepulisti foris?

Tacet. quor non ludo hunc aliquantisper? melius est, 5

Quandoquidem hoc nunquam mi ipse uoluit credere.

Nil mihi respondes? Æ. Non equidem istas, quod sciam.

Ml. Ita: nam mirabar, quid hic negoti esset tibi.

Erubuit: salua res est. Æ. Dic sodes, pater,

Tibi uero quid istic est rei? Ml. Nil est mihi quidem. 10

Amicus quidam me a foro abduxit modo

Huc aduocatum sibi. Æ. Quid? Ml. Ego dicam tibi:

Habitant hic quædam mulieres pauperculæ:

Ut opinor has non nosse te, et certo scio:

Neque enim diu huc commigrarunt. Æ. Quid tum postea? 15

Ml. Virgo est cum matre. Æ. Perge. Ml. Hæc virgo orbast patre:

Hic meus amicus illi generest proximus:

Huic leges cogunt nubere hanc. Æ Perii. Mi. Quid est ?

Æ. Nil : recte : perge. Mi. Is uenit ut secum auchat :
Nam habitat Miletii. Æ. Hem, uirginem ut secum auchat ? ²⁰

Mi. Sic est. Æ. Miletum usque obsecro ? Mi. Ita. Æ.
Animo malest.

Quid ipsæ ? quid aiunt ? Mi. Quid illas censes ? nil enim.

Commenta mater est, esse ex alio uiro

Nescio quo puerum natum : neque cum nominat :

Priorem esse illum, non oportere huic dari. ²⁵

Æ. Eho, nonne haec justa tibi uidentur postea ?

Mi. Non. Æ. Obsecro non ? an illam hinc abdueet, pater ?

Mi. Quid illam ni abdueat ? Æ. Factum a uobis duriter Inmisericorditerque atque etiam, si est, pater,
Dicendum magis aperte, inliberaliter. ³⁰

Mi. Quamobrem ? Æ. Rogas me ? quid illi tandem creditis
Fore animi misero, qui cum illa consueuit prior ?
Qui infelix haud seio an illam misere nunc amat,
Quom hanc sibi uidebit præsens præsentem eripi,
Abduci ab oculis ? facinus indignum, pater. ³⁵

Mi. Qua ratione istuc ? quis despondit ? quis dedit ?
Quoi quando nupsit ? auctor his rebus quis est ?
Quor duxit alienam ? Æ. An sedere oportuit
Domi uirginem tam grandem, dum cognatus hinc
Illinc ueniret exspectantem ? haec, mi pater,
Te dicere æquom fuit et id defendere. ⁴⁰

Mi. Ridiculum : aduorsumne illum causam dicerem,
Quoi ueneram aduocatus ? sed quid ista, *Æ*schine,
Nostra ? aut quid nobis eum illis ? abeamus. quid est ?
Quid lacrumas ? Æ. Pater, obseero, ausulta. Mi. *Æ*schine, audiui omnia ⁴⁵

Et scio : nam te amo : quo magis quæ agis curæ sunt mihi.

Æ. Ita uelim me promerentem ames, dum uiuas, mi pater,

Ut me hoc delictum admisisse in me, id mihi uehementer
dolet,

Et me tui pudet. Mi. Credo hercle; nam ingenium noui
tuom

Liberale: sed uereor ne indiligenſ nimium sies.

50

In qua ciuitate tandem te arbitrare uiuere?

Virginem uitiasti, quam te non jus fuerat tangere.

Jam id peccatum primum magnum, magnum, at humanum
tamen:

Fecere alii ſæpe item boni. at postquam id euenit, cedo

Numquid circumſpexti? aut numquid tute prospexti tibi,

55

Quid fieret? qua fieret? si te mi ipsum puduit dicere,

Qua resciscerem? haec dum dubitas, menses abierunt decem.

Prodidisti et te et iuam miseram et gnatum, quod quidem in te fuit.

Quid? credebas dormienti næc tibi confecturos deos?

Et illam sine tua opera in cubiculum iri deductum domum?

Nolim ceterarum rerum te socordem eodem modo.

Bono animo es, duces uxorem hanc. Æ. Hem. Mi. Bono, inquam, animo es. Æ. Pater,

Obsecro, num ludis tu nunc me? Mi. Ego te? quamobrem?

Æ. Nescio:

Quia tam misere hoc esse cupio uerum, eo uereor magis

Mi. Abi domum ac deos compreccare, ut uxorem arcessas:
abi.

65

Æ. Quid? eam uxorem? Mi. Eain. Æ. Jam? Mi. Jain quantum potest. Æ. Di me, pater,

Omnes oderint, ni magis te quam oculos nunc ego amo meos.

Mi. Quid? quain illam? Æ. Aequa. Mi. Perbenigne.
Æ. Quid? ille ubist Milesius?

Mi. Abiit, periit, nauem ascendit; sed quor cessas? Æ.
Abi, pater:

Tu potius deos comprecare : nam tibi eos certo scio,
Quo uir melior multo es quam ego, obtemperaturos magis. 70

Ml. Ego eo intro, ut quæ opus sunt parentur : tu fac ut dixi, si sapi.

Æ. Quid hoc est negoti ? hoc est patrem esse aut hoc est filium esse ?

Si frater aut sodalis esset, qui magis morem gereret ?

Hic non amandus ? hicine nou gestandus in sinust ? hem : 75

Itaque adeo magnam mi injicit sua commoditate curam

Ne forte imprudens faciam quod nolit, sciens cauebo.

Sed cesso ire intro, ne moræ meis nuptiis egomet siem ?

Monstratione magnus perdat Juppiter !

Vidisse se aibat quisquam. nunc uero domi
Certum obsidere est usque, donec redierit. 5

ACT V.—SCEN. 3.

MICIO. DEMEA.

Mi. Parata a nobis sunt, ita ut dixi, Sostrata,
 Ubi uis. Quisnam a me pepulit tam grauiter foris ?
 De. Hei mihi, quid faciam ? quid agam ? quid clamem aut querar ?

O cælum, o terra, o maria Neptuni. Mi. Hem tibi,
 Rescinit omnem rem : id nunc clamat scilicet ; 5
 Paratæ lites : succurrendumst. De. Eccum adest

De. Quor nunc apud te potat ? quor recipis meum ?
 Quor emis amicam, Micio ? Numqui minus
 Mihi idem jus æquomst esse quod mecumst tibi ? 15
 Quando ego tuom non euro, ne cura meum.

Mi. Non æquom dicis. De. Non ? Mi. Nam netus uerbum

 Communia esse amicorum inter se omnia.
 De. Facete : nunc demum istacc nata oratiost.

M₁. Ausculta paucis, nisi molestumst, Demea.
 Principio, si id te mordet, sumptum filii
 Quem faciunt, quæso hoc facito tecum cogites :
 Tu illos duos olim pro re tollebas tua,
 Quod satis putabas tua bona ambobus fore,
 Et me tum uxorem credidisti scilicet
 Ducturum : eandem illam rationem antiquam obtine :
 Conserua, quære, parce, fac quam plurimum
 Illis relinquas : gloriam tu istam obtine.
 Mea, quæ præter spem euenerit, utantur sine.
 De summa nil decedet : quod hinc accesserit,
 Id de lucro putato esse omne. Hæc si uoles
 In animo uere cogitare, Demea,
 Et mi et tibi et illis dempseris molestiam.

D_E. Mitto rem : consuetudinem ipsorum. M₁. Mane :

 Signa insunt, ex quibus conjectura facile fit,
 Duo quom idem faciunt, sæpe ut possis dicere

 Non quod dissimilis res sit, sed quod is qui facit.

ACT. V.—SCEN. 4.

DEMEA.

Numquam ita quisquam bene subducta ratione ad uitam fuit,
 Quin res, ætas, usus semper aliquid adportet noui,
 Aliquid moneat : ut illa quæ te scire credas nescias,
 Et quæ tibi putaris prima, in experiundo ut repudies.
 Quod nunc mi euenit : nam ego uitam duram, quam vixi usque
 adhuc,
 Prope jam excuso spatio mitto. Id quamobrem ? re ipsa repperi
 Facilitate nil esse homini melius neque clementia.
 Id esse uerum ex me atque ex fratre quoiuis facilest noscere.

Ille suam egit semper uitam in otio, in conuiuiis,
 Clemens, placidus, nulli lædere os, adridere omnibus : 19
 Sibi uixit : sibi sumptum feoit : omnes bene dicunt, amant.
 Ego ille agrestis, sæuos, tristis, parcus, truculentus, tenax Duxi uxorem : quam ibi miseriam uidi ! nati filii,
 Alia cura. Heia autem, dum studeo illis ut quam plurimum
 Facerem, contrui in quærundo uitam atque ætatem meam : 15
 Nunc exacta ætate hoc fructi pro labore ab his fero,
 Odium : ille alter sine labore patria potitur commoda.
 Illum amant, me fugitant : illi credunt consilia omnia,
 Illum diligunt, apud illum sunt ambo, ego desertus sum :
 Illum ut uiuat optant, meam autem mortem exspectant scilicet. 20
 Ita eos meo labore eductos maxumo hic fecit suos
 Paulo sumptu: miseriam omnem ego capio, hic potitur gaudia.
 Age age nunc jam experiamur porro contra, quid ego possiem
 Blande dicere aut benigne facere, quando hoc prouocat.
 Ego quoque a meis me amari et magni pendi postulo. 25

PUBLII TERENTII AFRI ADELPHI.

PROLOGUS.

OUR Author's prologue, in the present instance, touches on the same charges as those alluded to in the Prologues to the Eunuchus and Heautontimorumenos. As to the former, the charge of plagiarism, he freely admits that he has borrowed from Diphilus, whose play, the "Synapothnescontes," Plautus had translated under the title of "Commorientes," a scene of which Plautus had left untouched. For introducing this scene to the Latin stage, he claims credit, not blame. And as to the other charge, put forth by his old enemy (see the Prologus to the Andria and Heautontimorumenos), namely, that he is helped in the composition of his plays by the eminent Romans, Lælius and Scipio Africanus the younger, he asks, confidently, why he should be ashamed of aid from men to whom every Roman looks, in his need, "in bello, in otio, in negotio."

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Postquam. i. q. "quoniam," expressive of the cause. It is used in Adelph. v. 1, 3, "Sed postquam intus sum omnium rerum satur. Prodeambulare hoc lubitumst." Donatus notices the converse use of "quoniam" for "postquam," said of time in Plaut. Aul., Prol. 9, according to the text of some editions.

2. Observari, "is scrutinised." Cooper in his Thesaurus translates, "Scripturam alicujus observare," "to spie for faults in one's writing." The word is no doubt used here in a bad sense, though it is much more common in a good sense, e. g. Virg. Georg. iv. 212, &c. Ab inquis, "by unfavourable critics." Cf. Heaut. Prol. 27, "Ne plus iniquom possit quam æquom oratio."

3. Raperem in pejorem partem, "misrepresent;" "tachent de decrier." Madam Dacier. Ruhnken refers to a like phrase in Cicero ad Div. x. 33, "consilium raperent in contrarium partem." Quam (fabulam sc.) So "fabulas" is understood in Heaut. Prol. 17, 18; q. v.

4. Indicio de sese ipse erit, vos judices. Such is the reading of Bothe, adopted by Fleckhisen for the awkward "Indicio de se' ipse erit; vos eritis judices." Ritschl proposes to read "Indicio de se ipse, et vos eritis judices." See Proleg. ad Plaut. p. 119. We prefer the reading retained in the text, as leaving the verb to be supplied in the second clause, a simpler process. Construe "The author will give evidence against himself." For this use of the dative of that to which something serves and tends, see Madvig. § 249; and for "indictum" and "indico" in the same sense, see Lucret. iv. 1016. "Indicioque sui facti persæpe fuere," and Cic. pro Muræna, 25, "Non se purgavit, sed indicavit."

6. Synapothnescontes Diphili. The "Synapothnescontes" was one of the very numerous plays of Diphilus, an Athenian Comic Poet of Sinope, the native city of two other comedians, Diodorus and Dionysius. He was a little later in date than Philemon. Plautus seems to have translated several of his plays: among others, this one, which he called "Commorientes." He overlooked, however, or omitted, the scene alluded to in v. 8 infra, of which Terence availed himself for the Adelphi, which he made up (by the process "contaminatio," see Heaut. Prol. 17; Andr. Prol. 16, notes) of the Γεωργίδς of Menander, and Συναποθνήσκοντες of Diphilus.

8. Qui lenoni eripit. So Bentley read, rejecting "eripuit," which is found in some MSS. Parry defends "eripuit" on the analogy of "surripuit," and other similar abbreviations, "erpuit, surpuit." Most modern editors read "eripit." In primâ fabulâ, h. e. in primâ parte fabulæ. See Madvig, sect. 311, p. 273, and Ter. Heaut. v. 1, 29, note.

11. Verbum de Verbo expressum extulit, "Has brought it out translated word for word." Donatus remarks on the use of "extulit" instead of "transtulit," "he has more than merely translated, brought out in Latin, the whole force of the Greek original." This may be somewhat fanciful. Madame Dacier translates it barely "Terence l'a traduit mot à mot."

12. Novam: new to the Latin stage, not before translated. It is opposed to "vetus," i. e. the Greek original.—Pernoscite, "arrive at a decision" (after taking cognisance of the matter). Compare Andr. Prol. 25, Ut pernoscatis, and see note. Construe, "Decide whether ye think that a plagiarism has been committed, or a passage recovered and handled anew, which has been by carelessness overlooked." "Pernoscere" was the function of the umpires or "arbitri." Ruhnken parallels the use of "reprehensum" here, by Phædrus, V. viii. 3, "Elapsum semel Non ipse possit Jupiter reprehendere." For "neglegentiâ," cf. Andria, Prol. 20. In neither case does the poet imply anything more than an indifference to the passage or play in question, because not needful to the author's purpose.

15. Nam quod isti &c. For a parallel instance of "nam" ($\gamma\alpha\rho$), used in transitions, or to anticipate a supposed objection, see Plaut. Mil. Gl. I. i. 5, "Nam ego hanc machærām," &c. Construe "Now as to the saying of those ill-wishers," &c. On the whole subject of this second charge, see Ter. Heaut. Prol. 22—26, and notes. In the next line, the frequentative verb "adjudicare" implies the same habit as is indicated in the addition of "assiduè" to "scribere."

18. Eam is here attracted to "laudem;" whereas we might more naturally have expected "id" as antecedent to "quod."—Vobis universis, "the whole body of you, the audience;" populo, "the people," without the theatre. So Donatus explains.

20. Quorum operâ—superbiâ, "Of whose help in war, peace, business, each in his particular need, has not been too squeamish to avail himself." "Siue superbiâ" cannot, as Ruhnken would have it, be referred to Scipio, Lælius, and Furius, as if it had been "whose aid lent without pride." The collocation and sense alike forbid this.

23. Senes. Micio and Demea; who unfold the plot in a great measure in the first act. Hi partem aperient. Bentley reads "partim" here, and in the next line, quoting Heeyr. Prol. 6. For "hi," "ei," and "ii" are also read.

24—5. Facite æquanimitas Poetæ, &c. Bentley, to avoid the lengthened last syllable of "augeat," introduced a hotchpotch line. "Bonitasque vestra adjutrix nostræ industriæ," and then read "augeant" in the 25th line. But "industriæ," and "industriam" sound awkwardly together. Vestra is much more simply understood with "æquanimitas," and Mr. Parry in his Introduction, p. lv. accounts "augeāt" an instance of last syllables of polysyllabics lengthened by "ictus." Goveanus reads Vestra Poetæ at the beginning of v. 25, as does also Madame Dacier. There may however be a lacuna between the 24th and 25th verses.

ACTUS I.—Sc. I.

Micio is introduced in anxiety about the lateness of his nephew, and adopted son, Æschinus, in returning home. He soliloquises on the charge which he has taken upon himself, involving all these fears and fancies which belong to a real parent. He then goes on to contrast his own liberal notions and practice in regard to young men, with his brother Demea's strictness towards his son who lives under his own roof. His musing is interrupted by Demea's appearance.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Storax! "What ho, Storax!" a call to one of the attendants, who had been sent to see Æschinus home. No answer being made, Micio infers the rest of the sentence.

2. Adversum ierant, "had gone to meet him, and see him home." Such an office belonged to certain slaves, who were called (see Gesner's Thesaurus, l. 132, and Lambinus's Plaut. Mostell. iv. 1 and 2, notes) "adversitores." Indeed in the edition of Lambinus "Phaniscus, adversitor" is found as one of the Dramatis personæ. Lambin. explains "adversitor." "servus qui ire adversum hero jussus est, aut debet, aut solet."

4. Aut ubi si cesses, "Or if you tarry anywhere." Many MSS. appear to read "ibi," but the editors are in favour of "ubi"; and Servius, on Aen. iii. 430, quotes the passage "ubi si cesses." "Ubi si," is equivalent to "sicubi." Erasmus explained "ubi" as "alicubi."

6. Parentes propitii, "fond parents." "Propitii" is of course opposed to "irata;" the "scolding wife" to the "indulgent parent." Gronovius illustrates this antithesis of the two words by Cie. ad Att. viii. Ep. ult. "Hunc propitium sperant: illum iratum putant;" and Cornel. Nep. Dion. c. 9, "Illi ipsi custodes, si propitiâ fuissent voluntate," &c. The word is more usually used of the Gods than of men.

8. Animo obsequi, "are following your inclination." Cf. Heeyra iii. v. 9, "Homo voluptati obsequens." With the next verse, "Et tibi bene esse," &c. Compare Andr. ii. v. 16, "Omnis sibi malle melius," &c. Madame Dacier translates "Et que vous vous donnez du bon temps, pendant qu'elle n'a que de la peine," "And that all goes well with you, whereas 'tis only with herself that there's trouble."

10. Ego, quia non rediit, &c. This is incorrectly called an "anacoluthon." The sequence is, "Fond parents have more anxiety than scolding wives. Witness my case! See what is my state of mind, because my adopted son is not returned; And yet he is not my own son (v. 15): ergo, how much more would this be true, if he were."—Solicitor, "I am disturbed." Servius quotes this passage on Æn. iv. 379: "Ea cura quietos Sollicitat."—Ne aut ille alserit, &c. Liindenbr. quotes on this passage, Plaut. Mil. Gl. III. i. 124—6, "Pol si habuissem—cervices sibi."

12. The ordinary reading is, "Aut uspiam ceciderit, aut perfregerit Aliquid. Vah," &c. Ritschl alters this to "Aut ceciderit aliqua, aut aliquid perfregerit," objecting to the use of "uspiam" so soon after, v. 3; and deeming it a gloss of "aliquâ." If emendation be needed, we prefer Fleckeisen's "Aut ceciderit aliquâ, atque aliquid præfregerit," "Or shall have had a fall somewhere, and broken some limb." Besides, "præ" is preferable to "per" in composition, in this instance.

13. Vah, quemquamne, &c., "Bali! to think that any mortal," &c. For this construction, see note on Andr. i. v. 10, Adeone hominem esse invenustum, &c., and Madvig. Gr. § 399.—In animum instituere seems preferable to the reading "in animo" (Bentley's), though both have authority: the meaning seems to be, "should introduce into his heart," or "give a footing in his heart" ("placer dans son cœur").—Parare, "should acquire."

14. Atque ex mē. Bentley preferred reading "Atque," quoting Charisius, who explained it as "et," here. But "atqui" best agrees with the sense of the whole passage, see note on v. 10. Is, in v. 15, refers to Demea. Ritschl emends the usual reading in v. 14, sed ex fratre: is adeo Dissimilis, &c., by reading "Sed fratre ex meo. Dissimili is studio est." Parry defends the metrical irregularity of the usual reading, and justifies the "ictus" on "is" because emphatic. The narration flows most easily with Ritschl.

17. Clementem ritam urbanam, "this easy city life." Cf. Andr. I. i. 9, note. Cic de Off. i. 69, "Vita lenior." "Otium" i. e. "vitam non negotiosam." Cf. Phædr. V. i. 7, "Quinetiam resides et sequentes otium."—Qaod fortunatum isti putant, &c., "And I've never had a wife, a blessing in the estimation of my brother, and such as he." "Isti" = "those wretched fellows, who have put a halter round their necks." The sentence, "quod . . . putant," is in apposition with "uxorem." The proposed reading "infortunatum," is needless. Micio is sneering at Demea and the married men for their delusion. He, not they, holds "Melius nil cælibe vitâ," Hor. Ep. I. i. 88.

19. Ille, contra hæc omnia. We adopt here Bentley's punctuation as better than ille contra, hæc omnia, which is the reading of some editions. Construe, "He, doing the opposite to all these things."—Ruri, see Wordsworth, Lat. Gr. p. 155; Madvig. sect. 273, b.

21. Uxorem duxit. As Donatus remarked, the change to the perf. indic. is natural here. The infinitives preceding spoke of "habits," "duxit," of an act once for all. Inde. "of these," i. q. ex. iis. Compare "unde" for "E quibus" in Eun. I. ii. 85, "E prædonibus Unde emerat," &c.

23. Eduxi, often used in the sense of "educavi," by Plautus. Cf. Pl. Curcul. IV. ii. 32, "Bene ego istam eduxi domi meæ et pudicè."

Also by Virg. Aen. vi. 765: Educat silvis regem.—Amari pro meo, “I have loved him as my own child.” Cf. Andr. IV. i. 51, “Pro servitio,” and see Hildyard’s Menæchmei, Plaut. 213, “Pro sano.”

25. Ille ut item contra me habeat, &c. “I do my utmost to make him in return (contra) hold me in the same light” (item). For “contra” in this sense, see Plaut. Mil. II. i. 23, “Ut illa illum contra, qui est,” &c.; and for “item” = “similiter,” see Ter. Eun. II. ii. 33, “Parasiti item ut Gnathonici vocentur.” For “sedulo” see Andr. I. i. 119, note.

27. Pro meo jure, “on the strength of my authority,” delegated from Demea.—Clanculum Patres, “without their fathers’ knowledge.” This appears to be the only passage where “clanculum” (a diminutive of “clam”) is used as a preposition. Quæ fert, &c., see Ter. Andr. I. ii. 17, Heaut. II. i. 3, notes.

30. Nam qui mentiri, &c.—audebit cæteros. We have here retained the reading of Ritschl adopted by Fleckeisen. [See Prol. ad Plaut. p. 120.] The old reading was—

Nam qui mentiri, aut fallere insuerit patrem, aut
Audebit, tanto magis audebit cæteros.

Bentley proposed ita ut fit in place of insuerit, and omitted aut at the close of the verse. This removed the awkwardness of moods. Boecler and Madame Dacier read

Nam qui mentiri aut fallere insueverit
Patrem tanto, &c.

But the emendation retained in the text is most satisfactory, and needs no explanation.

32—3. Pudore et liberalitate, &c. Lindenbrog quotes from Meander, οὐ δεῖ λυποῦντα τὸ παιδάριον ὅρθοῦν, Ἀλλὰ πειθοῦντα τι. And Colman adds from Ben Jonson’s “Every man in his humour,” Act i., Sc. i., ad fin., “There is a way of winning more by love And urging of the modesty, than fear: Force works on servile natures, not the free.”

34. Hæc fra'ri mecum non convenient, “On these points my brother and I are not agreed.” The more ordinary construction is “inter me et fratrem.” Cf. Heeyra. IV. iv. 36, “Nec conventurum inter nos posthac arbitror.” For the use of “nobis,” in v. 36, (Why are you ruining our lad?) the ethic dative as it is called, see Madvig. Gr., sect. 248; Wordsworth, sect. 144, page 143, ad fin. Cf. also Adelph. III. iv. 30, below, “Ille bonus vir nobis psaltriam” &c. With “sumptuum suggeris” in v. 37, cf. Heaut. V. i. 57, (quoted by Parry) “Nam si illi pergo suppeditare sumptibus.” “Vestitu nimio,” is surely the ablative case, though taken by many editors as the dative for “vestitui.” We should understand “illi,” “You humour him with too much dress.”

39. Nimium ipsest durus. Micio had been representing Demea as saying, “Nimium ineptus es.” “You’re exceedingly foolish;” and he then goes on in his own person retorting on his brother, “Nimium ipsest durus,” &c. “Nay it’s himself who is exceedingly harsh” or “strict.”—Præter æquumque et bonum, “Beyond what is just and meet.” In Plaut. Menæch. 479, we have “Qui neque leges, neque æquum bonum usquam colunt." The phrase seems to convey the notion of "equity" opposed to "law." See also Curn. I. i. 65.

41. Qui imperium credit, "In thinking that the sway is of greater weight, or durability, which is effected by force, than that which is won to us by friendship." For "qui credit," cf. Wordsworth's Gr. p. 161, and notes on Andr. Prol. 6.—Gravius. Ruhnken illustrates this word by Plaut. Trinum. II. ii. 107, "Gravius erit tuum unum verbum," &c.—Mea sic est ratio, "Such is my way;" ratio = mos; as in III. iii. 20—21, "Vestram nequeo admirari satis Rationem."—Animum induco meum, i. o. "duco in animum meum." Cf. Ter. Hecyr. I. ii. 24; Plaut. Asin. V. i. 5, "Possum equidem inducere animum, ne aegrè patiar."

44. Malo coactus, &c., "Constrained by (fear of) punishment." For "malum" in this sense, Gronov. quotes, Cic. in Verr., Act ii., Lib. iii. c. 25, "Tu nisi malo coactus recte facere nescis;" and Ibid. ii. 59, "Omnes imperio, vi, metu, malo adductæ—pecuniam contulerunt." Seneca, Agam. 955, "Sed agere domitam fœminam disces malo." Plaut. Menæchm. 166, "Discaveas malo." With the whole sentence, compare Ben Jonson's "Every man in his humour," Act. i., sc. i. "He that's compell'd to goodness may be good," &c. So also, "Oderunt peccare mali formidine poenæ."—Dum—tantisper, see note at Heaut. I. i. 54. After cavet understand peccare. Ingenium in v. 46 = indolem, "natural bent." Compare Ter. Hecyr. I. ii. 38, "Ad ingenium redit." Ter. Andr. I. i. 50.

47. Ex animo facit (officium, sc.), "Does his duty freely," "sans aucune contrainte."—Madame Dacier. Cf. Heaut. II. i. 4, "Ex sua lubidine."—Studet par referre (pro pari, sc.), cf. Eun. III. i. 55. Studet, the last syllable of which Bentley considered short, is by Parry taken as a monosyllable.—Prasens absensque, &c., "He will be just the same out of your sight as in it," in contrast to v. 46.

50. Alieno metu, "from fear of others." A translation, Parry suggests, of ἀλλοτρίῳ φόβῳ. "Alius," the genitive, is understood in "alieno."—Hoc pater ac dominus interest, "Herein lies the difference betwixt a father and a master." Hoc is here the accusative of limitation (κατὰ, τοῦτο). Compare, Eun. II. ii. 2, "Stulto intelligens Quid interest." Commentators take this as a Græcism, translated from τούτῳ πατήρ καὶ δεσπότης διαφέρει. The simple construction would be, "Hoc interest inter patrem ac dominum."

52. Fateatur nescire, &c. Bentley, following Faernus (and indeed Donatus), omitted "se" before "nescire."—Ayebam, "I was speaking." Cf. Hecyr. III. v. 5, "Ipsus est de quo hoc agebam tecum."

55. Jurgabit, "He'll scold." Cf. Ter. Andr. II. iii. 15. Juryium and jurgare, were words used of the differences of friends and relations; lis and litigo denoted those of enemies. See Hildyard's Glossary at Menæchm. 51, and the authorities there quoted.

ACTUS I.—Sc. II.

Demea replies to the question of Micio as to the cause of his sadness, that it is the misconduct of his son Æschinus, who has just invaded another man's house, and carried off a music-girl. He contrasts his other son Ctesiphon's conduct, who lives a regular active life at home, and is never in scrapes. The blame lies, he says, on Micio, who spoils his adopted son. Micio reasons with his brother, upholding the plan of letting young men have a little indulgence. Better they should sow their wild oats betimes, than begin to be wild later in life. Besides, adds Micio, "I am responsible. You have made him over to me. It is my purse that suffers. Leave me to find fault." Demea retires in a rage, and Micio then admits, in a soliloquy, that his adopted son's goings-on do somewhat disturb him.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Opportune ("advenis" sc.). Madame Dacier makes sc. 2, begin after "Jurgabit," at "Salvoa," &c.

2. Rogas me, ubi nobis Æschinus Siet, quid tristis ego sim? If we retain the generally accepted reading, we must translate, "Do you ask me, when I have an Æschinus (for my son) why I am sad?" And there is no reason why "ubi" should not be used as simply "when" of time. See Andr. V. ii. 7, "Ubi voles, arcessere." Madame Dacier proposed another solution, understanding "ubi" as "apud quem," "Do you, at whose house Æschinus lives," &c. For "ubi," so used, see Virg. Georg. i. 505, "Quippe ubi fas," &c. But here "tu" should have been emphatically expressed, if "ubi" was to be as it were its relative. Fleckisen adopts Ritschl's reading, "Rogas me? Ubi nobis Æschinust? Scin jam quid tristis ego sim?" "Do you ask me? Where's my Æschinus? Now, don't you know why I'm sad?" This is perhaps admissible, and has certainly most force.

3—4. Quem neque pudet quicquam, "Who's ashamed of nothing." For this use of the neuter pronoun as subject to such verbs, as "libet," "licet," &c., see Madvig. Gr., sect. 218, a. obs. 2; and Adelph. IV. vii. 36, infra. With "metuit," we must supply "ille" from above. Menander's verses are imitated here.

ὅς δ' οὗτ' ἔρυθριῶν οἰδεν οὔτε δεδιέναι
τὰ πρῶτα πάσης τῆς ἀναιδελας ἔχει.

7. Modo quid designarit, "What is this new crime that he has perpetrated just lately?" The meaning of "designo" here seems to be derived from its sense of "to chalk out, to contrive;" hence, "to perpetrate." See Plaut. Mostell. II. i. 66, "Quæ designata sint et facta nequiter," on which passage Lambinus says, designare is, "novo more et exemplo malefacere." Nonius explains it, "cum notā et ignominia facere aliquid."

9. Familiam, "household." See Heaut. IV. v. 3; Plaut. M. G. II. ii. 11; Aul. Prol. 2; Cic. pro Cæcina. c. 19.—Mulcarit usque ad mortem, "Has well nigh beaten to death." Cf. Eun. IV. vii. 4, "Male mulcabo ipsum."

Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. ii. 8, "Ni usque ad mortem malè mulcassitis." In the 12th verse, Madame Dacier places the full stop after "hoc." "Factum esse hoc." Reading according to the ordinary punctuation, we construe it as the accusative after "dixere."

15. Rei dare operam, "attending to business."—Ruri esse, &c. Parry retains "esse," which Fleckeisen has omitted. He defends it by reference to Hecyr. IV. iv. 75, where, as here, occurring as the first syllable of an iambus, it is shortened in pronunciation.

16. Nullum hujus simile factum, sc. "videtas," or "est." There's no act on his part like this; "hujus," is the gen. after "simile." Cf. Heaut. III. ii. 40, quoted by Parry.—Illi = "in illum;" Tibi = "in te." In v. 17, tu is emphatic.—Corrumphi sinis. Cf. Andr. II. iii. 22, note. Parry adds a reference to Plant. Bacch. III. iii. 5—9; q. v.

18. Homine imperito, "Than a man without knowledge of the world." Cir. pro Rose. Com. c. 7, "Callidum imperitus fraudasse dicitur." —Nunquam is, i. q. "non," as in Virg. Ecl. iii. 49, "Nunquam hodie effugies."—Quorsum istuc (pertinet, sc.).

21. Non est flagitium, &c., "It is not a gross sin" (though it may be an error). Flagitia= "enormities," in Plaut. Meuæchm. 507, 621 (Hildyard's Glossary), and such too seems the force of the word here. Gesner, in his Thesaurus, on the word "flagitium" observes that Micio here understands it of "infamia civilis," while Demea, in v. 32, understands it of "res pudenda inter bonos viros." And this is perhaps the simplest explanation. Forcellini, in his Lexicon, followed by Parry at this passage, speaks of the first sense of "flagitium" being "noise," and quotes for that sense Plaut. Pænul. III. ii. 32, "Foras haec fecerunt magnum flagitium modo," &c. But, as Lambinus and other commentators show on that passage, the word only means "noise," in a comic sense, and with a connexion too (vid. loc.) with that of "shame," which is prior. The repetition of "non est," is emphatic, "It is not indeed." Ruhnken quotes Cic. pro Syllâ, c. 27, "Non cadit, non inquam cadit."

24. Non siit egestas facere nos. "Siit" for "sivit" is Bentley's emendation, from the Bembine MS.—Tibi id laudi ducis. For this double dative, one, of that to which a thing tends, the other, of the person whom it tends to benefit, cf. Madvig. Gram. sect. 249. And for the pluperfect sense of "esset" and "faceremus," see Andr. IV. iv. 54, "Prædiceres." Virg. Æn. viii. 643, and Madvig. 347. obs. 2.

28. Dum per etatem licet, &c. Old editions read "decet."—exspectatum ejecisset foras, "had thrust your body out of doors, after your death had long been looked for," or "waited for." Ejicere is "raptim exportare" here, as Gronovius observes. For the use of "exspecto," cf. infra V. iv. 20, "Illum, ut vivat, optant, meam mortem exspectant," and Hecyr. IV. ii. 20, "Mortemve exspectet meam." Parry adds Mostell. Plaut. II. ii. 13. For the orthography of "exspecto," vid. Hildyard's Glossary to Plaut. Meuæchm. 781. Donatus distinguishes between exspecto ("ante diem") and spero ("ad diem")—Si essem homo in v. 27 is, "If you had common sense." Cf. IV. ii. 40, "Censem' hominem me esse?" At "faceret" in v. 30, there is probably an ellipse of "sineres ut." Cf. Andr. IV. v. 3.

32. Non est, &c. Cf. note at v. 21. In the next verse for ne me obtundas, compare Andr. II. ii. 11; Heaut. V. i. 6, and notes.

36. Ego illi maximam partem feram, "In that I shall bear the largest share." Illi is the old form of "illic," which is found in Phorm. I. ii. 41, "Dum sedemus illi;" and Hecyr. V. iii. 4, "Dum illi sedeo." Compare also Plaut. Menæchm. 223, "Dii illos, qui illi habitant," &c., and Hildyard's Glossary ad loc. See also Virg. Æn. II. 548, and Servius's note there.—Mihi peccat above, is i. q. "it is to my cost that he errs."

37. Olet unguenta. Cf. Madvig. Gr. 223, obs. 2. Wordsw. Gr., sect. 146, p. 145.—Fortasse excludetur foras, "Peut-être que ses maîtresses le chasseron," Madame Dacier; rightly.

40. Fores effregit, &c. This and the following verse are quoted by Cicero Pro M. Cœlio. c. xvi., where see Long's note, Biblioth. Class. vol. iv. p. 61. For "Discidit vestem" cf. Eun. IV. iii. 4, "Vestem omnem miseræ discidit."

43. Cedo quemvis arbitrum, "let us have any umpire you will." For "cedo" compare Heaut. IV. viii. 5, note, and Hildyard's Glossary at Menæchm. 114; and for arbitrum, ("ad" and "bito" to go), Heaut. III. i. 91, "Me cepere arbitrum."

45. Qui vere sciunt. This is the reading of the MSS. and older editions. Bentley proposed "veri sient," i. e., "Learn to be a father, from those who are real fathers." The first reading is not objectionable, but that of Bentley seems best. Donatus read "aliis" for "illis," which however would diminish the force of the passage. In the next line, consiliis seems to mean, "by my plans for his welfare," as a retort upon which Demea says, offensively, Tun' consulis quicquam, "What! do you take any thought for him?" Madame Dacier and others seem to have understood "consiliis" "by the advice I give him;" but this is not suitable to the character of Micio.

47. Abiero, "I shall be gone," an archaism for "abibo."—Sicne agis? "Is this your way of proceeding?"—Curæst mihi (sc. Æschinus).

50. Curemus aequam uterque partem, "Let us attend each to his fair share; you to the one, I in my turn to the other."—Nam curare ambos: understand te as the accusative before curare. In v. 53, "Quid istic" = "Enough!" or "why say all that?" compare Andr. III. iii. 40, notes.

54. Profundat perat, pereat, "Let him squander, waste, go to the dogs, in short." Servius on Virg. Æn. iv. 381 ("I sequere Italiam ventis, pete regna per undas"), instances this passage as a case of "prohibitio per concessionem," where, by withdrawing your opposition, you effect your object of opposing. In the next verse, "Jam si verbum ullum posthac," is an example of the figure "aposiopesis," for which see Andr. I. i. 122 and 137, notes, and Virg. Æn. i. 135. We must suppose Demea to have intended to add, "addidero," "Now if ever another word."

56. An non credis? Repeton cum quem dedi? "Don't you think I've reason? What! I'm demanding back him I gave you, am I?" "Irasci" is understood, and in "repeton," &c., we must understand Demea as indignantly taking up his brother's words in v. 52, and going on to show that though he has delegated his authority to Micio, he cannot be indifferent to his own child—Alienus non sum, "I'm not uninterested in him, indifferent to him." Cf. Heaut. I. i. 25. We punctuate the following words thus: Si obsto—Hem, desino! "If I set my face against—Ah, well ! I'll leave off speaking." Demea discovers that he is prevailing nothing, and so stops short.

59. Iste tuos, "that hopeful ward of yours;" sentiet "will feel it to his cost." With the next verse Parry compares Andr. V. iii. 3; q. v.; and Westerh. from Menander—οὐδέποτ' ἀληθὲς οὐδὲν οὗθ' νιψ πατήρ εἰωθ' ἀπειλεῖν, οὕτ' ἐρῶν ἐρώμενη.

61. Nec nil neque omnia hæc sunt, &c. Colman has hit off this sentence very well—

"Tho' what he says be not entirely true, There's something in it, and it touches me."

Madame Dacier supposes a new scene to begin here. With the verses beginning "Nam itast homo," Parry compares aptly Plaut. Trinum. III. ii. 42-46.

65. Tamen vix humanè patitur, "Yet, even so, he scarcely brooks it like a reasonable being." Gronovius illustrates this phrase by Cicero. Tusc. Quæst. II. sect. 27. "Morbos toleranter atque humanè ferunt."

67. Insaniam profecto, &c. Compare Plaut. Amphit. II. ii. 73, "Bacchæ bacchanti si velis advorsarier Ex insanâ iusaniorem facies."

72. Sperabam jam defervisse, &c., "I was hoping that at length his hot youth had begun to cool down." For the force of "defervisse" here compare Cic. Tusc. Quæst. iv. 36; Cic. pro Cæl. c. 18, "Quum adolescentiae cupiditates defruiissent," where Long quotes Cic. de Sen. c. 13, "Erat quidam fervor ætatis, quā progrediente omnia fiunt in dies mitiora." Parry illustrates the force of "de" ($\lambda\pi\delta$) here by Hor. I. ix. 10; "Ventos Æquore servido Depræliaentes," which he explains, "ceasing their strife." But surely this was not the poet's meaning: and is against the "consensus" of all commentators.

73. Ecce autem, "When lo!" So the Greek dramatists used καὶ μὴν. It is used of some unexpected or marvellous occurrence or interposition. Cf. Ter. Eun. II. 3, 6, and Plaut. Menæchm. (Hildyard's Glossary), 637. For "de integro," see note on Andr. Prol. 26.—Nisi quicquid est, "Nisi" is i. q. "sed." See Andr. IV. i. 40, and Heaut. V. ii. 4, notes.

ACTUS II.—Sc. I.

THIS scene opens with Æschinus carrying off the music-girl from the house of Sannio, a procurer, to his own dwelling. Sannio is introduced as following him up with much clamour, and many appeals for justice, to the townsmen. Æschinus meets his threats to attempt the recovery of the girl by charging Parmeno to keep an eye on him, and to give him a sound dressing if he touches her. After a scuffle and much altercation, Æschinus proposes to pay for the girl, if Sannio chooses, or, if not, to claim her at a legal tribunal, as a free citizen.

Sannio, on reflection, thinks it wise to close with the young man's offer, if he can keep him up to it.

- Metre:—1—3, 6, 8, 11. Trochaic Tetrameters.
 7, 9, 10, 12—16. 43—54. Trochaic Tetram. catalectic.
 4. an Iambic Dimeter.
 5. 17—42. Iambic Tetrameter.

1. Populares, "Fellow-countrymen." Cf. Eun. V. viii. 1, "O populares." It must be understood that this is the second rencontre between Æschinus and Sannio.

2. Otiosè, "Calmly there," as if he had said, "Fear nothing."—Nunc jam ilico hic consiste, "Now then, take your stand here on this spot." All this is said to the music-girl, who is in terror, owing to the recent fracas. For "ilico," see Andr. I. i. 98, note. III. ii. 34, and Aulul. Plaut. (Hildyard's Glossary), 54.—Quid respectas? "Why are you looking behind you, in terror?" For this use of "respectas" compare Plaut. Men. 84, "Ne te sequatur uxor, respectas identidem." See Hildyard's Glossary, ad loc.—Nunquam = non: as in Virg. Ecl. iii. 49, "Nunquam hodie effugies." Cf. Ter. Adelph. IV. ii. 31, Virg. Æn. ii. 670, "Nunquam omnes hodie moriemur inulti." In v. 4, after "omnibus" supply "abducam."

5. Quanquamst scelestus, &c., "Rascal though he is, he won't expose himself to being beaten again to-day."—Committe — ut. Compare Cæsar de B. G. i. 13, "Ne committeret ut is locus ex calamitate populi Romani nonen caperet." For "hodie" used thus in threats, and "non-unquam," i. q. "nunquam" or "non," see Andria I. ii. 25, note, and above at v. 3. See too Conington's note at Virg. Eclog. iii. 49. For verbs like "vapulo" see Wordsw. Lat. Gram. sect. 155, 3.

7. At ita, ut usquam fuit, &c., "Yet of as good faith as any man alive." The order is, "At ita optimâ fide, ut quisquam usquam fuit."

8. Tu quod te posterius purges, &c., "As to your excusing yourself at an after date, by saying that you are sorry that this wrong has been done to me, I shall not value it this." For "quod" here, in the sense of "as to," "as to that which," "as to the excuse which you may make," see Plaut. Aulul. 52 (Hildyard's Glossary), "Quod quispiam ignem querat," "as to anyone asking a loan of fire." See also Cæsar, B. G. i. 14, "Quod suâ victoriâ tam insolenter gloriarentur," &c. Parry explains "quod" as i. q. "quamvis" here, and at Eun. V. viii. 34, where he quotes Plaut. Mil. G. II. ii. 7, and Propertins IV. (3) i. 49, in which place Paley englishes "quod" rightly, "as to the fact that." A due consideration of all the passages quoted will, we think, satisfy students that "quod" is not for "quamvis," but of the nature of a relative, wherever it is found in such collocation.—Hujus non faciam. For this genitive of the value, see Madvig. Gr. sect. 294, Obs. 1, Wordsworth, sect. 149, obs. 4. "Hujus" is used δεικτικῶς with a snapping of the fingers.

10. Neque tu verbis — re male feceris, "I'll take no verbal apology for actual wrongs." Note the antithesis of "verbis" and "re."—Novi ego rostra haec, &c., "I'm up to these speeches of yours; I regret that it was done," &c.—Jurandum dabitur, "I'm ready to make oath." In v. 12, the first syllable of "indignum" coalesces with the last of the preceding line, and the verse is Troch. Tetram. catalectic.

13. Abi p̄ae strenue, "Go forward quickly." "P̄ae" and "strenue" are properly separated, though in many editions they are read "præstrenue," which Goveanus explains "celerrimè," quoting Cicero ad Terentium "Exeuntibus Acastus præsto fuit cum literis uno et viescimo die; sādē strenue." Idem ad Q. Fratrem, "Domus aedificabatur strenue." But these illustrate either reading. The direction is given to Sannio to go open Micio's house-door.—Ceterum hoc nihil facis, "Nay, 'tis no use your doing this," h. e. "hoc quod facis nihil est." Others with Hare read "Nihili," i. e. "Nay, then, you treat my threats (hoc) as of no account." The former reading is best.

15. Nimium istoc abisti, "You've gone too far from yon knave." "Tu t' es trop éloigné de ce coquin," Madame Dacier.—Propter hunc, "near him." Cf. Virg. Georg. iii. 13, "Propter aquam."

17. Ne mora sit, &c., "That there may be nothing to hinder your fist finding a lodgment in his face, if I give you a nod." With the previous line Westerhov. compares Plaut. Aulul. IV. i. 13 (553 Hild.), "Herile imperium ediscat, ut quod frons velit, oculi sciant." Pseud. III. ii. 69, "Tum ut hujus oculos in oculis habeas tuis," &c.—Istuc volo, &c. "I'd like to see him try that game!"—Serva, "Look out," i. q. "observa." Cf. Andr. II. v. 5, note.

19. Nisi caves, geminabit (Parmeno plagam sc), "If you don't mind, he shall repeat it." Parmeno appears to have only listened as far as the penultimate of the verb "geminabit," and obeys the imperative "gmina"—an unbidden act, as Æschinus observes, but a fault in the right direction. Tamen i. q. δμως.

22. Si possiderem, ornatus, &c. Sannio, in sarcastic allusion to the boasted liberty of Athens, has asked Æschinus, "Have you absolute power? Are you tyrant here?" His answer in this verse is, "If I were, you should have been distinguished according to your merits," i. e. have been soundly dressed. There is a double meaning in "ornatus" here, "decked out," as in Heaut. V. i. 78, "Adeo exornatum dabo" (where see notes). In Plaut. Capt. V. iii. 20, "Sed ecum ineedit hic ornatus haud ex suis virtutibus," the words are used, not as here, in a good sense, as Gronovius observes. With the question of Sannio, in v. 21, compare (with Parry) Phormio II. iii. 58.

23. Nostin' qui sim? "Know you who I am?" Donatus says that this is a law phrase, equivalent to "Do I owe you aught?" But this is needless. The simple force is enough. Æschinus answers, "Non desidero," "No, nor do I want to know." Compare Plaut. Menæchm. 211, "Ego te non novi, neque novisse adeo volo."—Si attigisses, the compound verb here may have the same sense as in Hecyr. I. ii. 61.

26. Ante aedes non fecisse erit melius, "Twill be better for you not to make a row before the house." "Non melius erit," as Gronov. shows, implies a threat. See Livy iii. 41, where Appius says, "Non melius erit nisi de quo consulimus, vocem misisse." Compare for the form, "melius est," Adelph. IV. v. 5, and Plaut. Menæchm. 704 (Hildyard), "Melius sanam est, mulier, meutem sumere." "Convicium" = the noise of many voices together. Th. "vox," and see Cicero pro Archia, c. 6.

27. Abripiure. Cf. Andr. IV. iv. 47, "In cruciatum hinc abripi."

28. Loris liber? An illegal act at Athens, as at Rome. Cf. Acts xxii. 25, εἰ ἀνθρωπον Παρμαῖον καὶ ἀκατάκριτον ἔξεστιν ὑμῖν μαστίζειν.—

O hominem impurum, “O the disgraceful fellow.” Impurus = improbus. Cf. Heaut. IV. i. 16, “Anus haud impura.” — Hicme, h. e. “Athenis.” In v. 30 “satis jam debacchatus es,” = “you have raved enough.” Cf. “defervisse” in I. ii. 72, above.

33. Cupio æqui modo aliquid (dices, sc.) Vah leno, &c. Said ironically. Terence has imitated v. 34, “Leno sum,” &c., from Diphilus, from whom Westerhov quotes:—

οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδὲν τεχνίον ἐξωλέστερον τοῦ πορνοβόσκου.

36. Num hercle etiam hoc restat, “Why no! ‘faith! that’s yet to come.’” Madame Dacier, “Ah, vraiment il ne te manquerait plus que cela.” Parry shows that “redi,” with many other dissyllable imperatives, has the last syllable short. See Heaut. II. iii. 108.

37. Minis viginti tu illam emisti, quæ res tibi vortat male. Such is the reading generally accepted. Fleckisen reads Minis — emisti? Sa. — Loqueris (“even so!”) Æsch., “Tibi vortat male,” which is certainly an ingenious emendation, though not necessary. For the phrase “quæ res tibi vortat male” (“bad luck to your bargain”), see Virgil Ecl. ix. 6. “Hos illi, quod nèc vortat bene, mittimus hædos,” (at which passage see Conington’s note.) See also Ter. Phorm. IV. iii. 73, “Male tibi vertat,” and for the phrase in a good sense, Plaut. Aulul. IV. x. 58, “Bene feliciterque vortat.”

40. Nam ego liberali illam adsero causâ manu, “For I will claim her (‘assero manu’) for a free woman by a suit at law.” “Liberalis causa” = “a suit for a person’s freedom;” and the whole phrase is i. q. “ego illam in libertatem vindicabo.” Goveanus illustrates the phrase by a quotation from Cicero pro Flacco, c. 17, 40, “Quin in causâ liberali eum qui asserebatur cognatum suum esse diceret,” to which we may add Cic. in Cæcil. Divinat. c. 17, and for the whole process Smith’s Dict. Ant. 143; Livy. III. 44, &c. Assero is for “asseram,” pres. for fut. see Ter. Eun. IV. vii. 44. Plaut. Men. (Hildyard) Gloss. 148. — Meditari, in v. 41 = “to get up.” Cf. Virg. Ecl. 1, 2; Hor. Sat. I. ix. 2; Andr. Ter. II. iv. 3, (see note in v. 1); Cic. ad Att., “Meditare adversus Brutum causam meam.” At pro supreme Juppiter, in v. 42, Madame Dacier supposes a new scene to commence with the exit of Æschinus.

43. Minime miror (eos, sc.). This verse is illustrated by one from Menander:—

οἵμοι τὸ γὰρ ἄφνω δυστυχεῖν μανίαν ποιεῖ.

45. Homini misero plus—colaphos, &c. Later editions rightly read this verse before that commencing “Ob malefacta.” For plus with the ellipse of “quam,” see Madvig. Gram. sect. 305. obs. 1; Wordsworth’s Lat. Gr. 148. 3; Ter. Eun. III. i. 32. Misero, says Goveanus, is i. q. “innocenti.” In the next verse after tantidem emptam, supply “quanti a me empta sit.” Construe, “on the score of these wrongs he claims that she should be handed over to him for the sum she cost me.” For the form “tradier” see Wordsworth’s Lat. Gram. (K. Edw. VI.) p. 64, obs. 4. “Bene promeruit” in v. 47 is said ironically, “Since he has so well deserved it of me.” Cf. Virgil. Aen. iv. 334, “Promeritam.”

48. Aye jam cupio si modo, &c. “Well, well, I’m willing to agree, if only he pay the money."—Sed ego hoc hariolor, "But I'm dreaming as to this." Some read "ariolor," but "hariolor" seems the ancient mode of writing. Cf. Haruspex, &c. The word is derived from "fari," and sometimes written "fariolor." Cf. Hildyard Glossary to Plaut. Men. prol. 76. The word is used in the sense of "madness" in Phorm. ii. 2. 8.

49. Testes faciet, "He'll produce witnesses forthwith." Cf. Plaut. Cur. IV. iv. 9, "Ne facias testes;" see also "Antestari," Hor. Sat. I. ix. 76, and Smith's Gr. and R. Ant. II, a.

50. De argento somnium! "It's all moonshine about the money." Ruhnenk compares Heaut. IV. ii. 4. "quod de argento sperem, nihil est" (see note there), and for "somnium" used thus, see Phorm. V. vi. 34. "Mox?" "eras redi" represent the excuses of Æschinus, as foreseen by Sannio.—Id quod res est, "what's a fact." Cf. Andr. III. iv. 9, "Sic res est," and note.—Quæstum occuperis, cf. Andr. I. i. 52, note, "Dein quæstum occipit."

53. Mussitanda est, "must be hushed up." See Plaut. Mil. G. III. i. 120, "Ego hæc mecum mussito." "Mussito, musso, mutio, mutus, μύζω" are derived from μύ the sound of compressed lips.—Has egomet mecum rationes puto, "I make all these calculations with myself." The reading "egomet mecum has rationes puto" occurs in most editions. That here adopted is that of the Beinecke Codex. Parry well explains "rationes putare," to clear one's accounts,—"puto" meaning "to clear," "to trim," "to prune." "Rationes" = "rationes argentarias." Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. 123. Hildyard's note; and see also Aulul. 482, note (Hildy.), "Putatur ratio."

ACTUS II.—Sc. II.

SYRUS approaches Sannio, being armed with a "carte blanche" from Æschinus, who is somewhat uneasy as to the result of his violence, to make the best of matters with the procurer. By artfully leading Sannio to apprehend the dangers of delay to his projected journey to Cyprus from a lawsuit with Æschinus, to recover his money, he brings him to consent to take ten minæ instead of twenty.

Metre :—1—19. Iambic Tetrameter.

20—45. Iambic Trimeter.

1. Cupide accipiat faxo, "I'll make him eagerly accept" (sc. ut). Faxo = fecero. Cf. Plaut. Men. Gloss. Hildy. 37; Aul. 745; Ter. Heaut. II. iii. 100. Syrus comes on the stage finishing his words of encouragement to Æschinus, "Tace—ipsum."

2. Bene dicat secum eſe actum "admit that he has been lucky, that it has fared well with him." Westerhov. quotes Cic. ad. Fam. iv. 5, "Non pessime cum iis esse actum, quibus sine dolore licetum est mortem cum vitâ commutare." In Ter. Heaut. IV. v. 50, some read "omnes te in lautâ esse et bene actâ parte putant;" and if that reading be preferred to "auctâ re" which is Bentley's emendation, it may be adduced as a parallel to the phrase here used. Donatus notes that Syrus, in addressing a low fellow like Sannio by his name, means to treat him with courtesy, to get round him, no doubt, for his master's ends. Æschinus had called him "leno," and other opprobrious names, but not Sannio. Compare Eun. III. ii. 1—2, where Thraso before Thais sees him is called "miles," but when he is before her, and she wants to simulate great affection, she says "Salve mi Thraso." Nescio quid concertasse cum hero, "Have had a slight difference with my master."

4. Iniquius certationem comparatam, "a quarrel or contest in which the combatants were more unequally matched." For this sense of "comparo," "to pit one against another," see Eun. II. iii. 63, "Quod donum huic dono contra compareret;" Sueton. Calig. 35, "Hunc in arenam deductum Thraci comparavit." Gronovius adds to these illustrations Plaut. Asin. III. iii. 78, "Prehende auriculis, compara labella cum labellis," where "compara" is comically used in the same sense. The metaphor is from the gladiatorial combats. With the next line all the editors compare Juvenal Sat. iii. 289, "Si rixa est ubi tu pulsas, ego vapulo tantum."

6. Quid agerem. Language of excuse. Cf. Virg. Ecl. i. 41, "Quid facerem," &c.—Adulescenti morem gestum oportuit, "You ought to have humoured the young man." For "morem gerere," cf. notes on Andr. IV. i. 17; Plaut. Men. H. 690. And for the ellipses, "a te fuisse," compare notes on Heaut. I. ii. 26; Andr. I. v. 4.

7. Qui potui melius, &c., "How could I have done so more effectually, seeing that I've been all day long submitting to insult." This seems the force of hodie usque, for "usque" cannot mean anything else than "constantly" here. Gronov. illustrates "os præbui" by Cic. in Verr. Act II. iii. 16, "Qui testes interrogari—nolueris, et iis tacitum os tuum præbere malueris." Cf. Cic. ad. Att. i. 13. The metaphor is from comic actors, the frequent buffets bestowed on whom moved the laughter of an audience. See Martial, Ep. ii. 72, "Os tibi percisum, quanto non ipse Latinus Vilia Panniculi percutit ora sono;" and v. 61, 11, "O quam dignus eras alapis, Mariane, Latini," &c. See further examples of the phrase in Livy. iv. 35; Tac. Hist. iii. 32.

8. Pecuniam in loco negligere, &c. So Menander: βέλτιστον οὐ τὸ κερδός ἐν πάσιν σκοπεῖν; and Plaut. Capt. II. ii. 77, "Est etiam ubi profecto damnum præstet facere quam lucrum." For the phrase "in loco" "seasonably, in the right place," cf. V. iii. 41. "In loco vereri," Hor. Od. IV. xii. 28, Dulce est despere in loco.—De tuo jure concessisses paululum, "If you had abated a trifle of your right." Cicero, as Westerhov. observes, had this passage in view in Off. ii. 18, "Est enim non modo liberale, paulum nonnunquam de suo jure decedere, sed interlum etiam fructuosum." For morigeratus see Plaut. Capt. II. i. 4, and for the kindred adj. "morigerus" see Ter. Audr. I. v. 59; Plaut. Men. (Hildy. Gloss.) 119. See also note above at v. 6.

11. Ne non tibi istuc fæneraret, "That that course might not pay you." For the unusual sense of "fænero," "to bring in interest," see Phorm. III. ii. 8, "Fæneratum istuc beneficium tibi pulchre dices," "You shall say you're well repaid for this benefit." Akin to this is the use of "fænerato," "with interest," in Plaut. Men. 506 (Hildy. Gloss.), and in Asin. 876.—Numquam rem facies, "You will never grow rich." So in Plaut. Men. 475 we find "Res magis queritur." Plaut. Pseud. II. i. 12, "Facilem ego hanc rem meis civibus faciam."

12. Abi. A term of contempt,—“Pshaw,” “Away.” Cf. Ter. Phorm. I. ii. 9, “Abi sis, insciens.”—Inesearc nescis homines, “You’re no hand at trapping meu!” Metaphor from bird-catching. Cf. Plaut. Asin. I. iii. 63, “Hic noster quæstus aucupii simillimust,” &c. Istuc, “your way.” With v. 14, cf. our common proverb, “a bird in the hand,” &c. Westerhov, compares Plaut. Asin. I. iii. 50, “Semper oculatae nostræ sunt manus: credunt quod vident.” For the pleonasm in “malleum potius” cf. Madvig. L. G. sect. 308, obs. 2; Cic. de Or. ii. 74; Divin. in Cœcil. vi., “Se potius defensos malunt.” Something similar are such phrases in Greek, as μᾶλλον εὐτυχέστερος, Hec. Eur. 377.

15. Usquam, “in any account.” Bentley, remarking that “usquam” is nowhere else thus used, reads “quasi terunci tibi,” &c. But this is needless. Turneb. illustrates the phrase by the Greek οὐδαμοῦ λέγω. See also Eun. II. iii. 2. Construe—“As if twenty minæ were any object to you, provided you could oblige my master.”—Profligisci Cyprum. The common usage is to place the names of towns and smaller islands as objects of a motion in the accusative without a preposition. With countries and larger isles, we find “in” often used, as in II. iv. 14, below; and often without “in,” as here. Cf. Madvig. 232, obs. 3.

18. Animus tibi pendet, “You’re hesitating.” Plautus in Trinum. II. i. 19, uses “pendentem” in this sense, “Ibi illa pendentem ferit.” Cf. Andr. I. v. 31.—Hoc ages, “you’ll get this money,” you’ll settle the matter; tamen “notwithstanding” its being an old story then.—Nusquam pedem, aposiopesis, “I wont budge a foot.”

20. Injecti scrupulum homini, “I’ve suggested a difficulty to the fellow.” Compare notes on Andria. V. iv. 37; Phorm. V. ix. 30; V. viii. 61.—Illud vide! “See there! There now!” Ut in ipso articulo oppressit, “How he has surprised me at the very nick of time.” Understand “temporis” and see Plaut. Men. (H. G.) 64, “Commoditatis omnes articulos scio.” Westerhov. supplies the ellipse from Cic. pro. P. Quintio, c. 5, “In ipso articulo temporis.”—Ad mercatum, “to the fair,” perhaps “the slave market.” Cf. Livy. i. 30, “Frequens mercatus.”

24. Nam si hoc omitto, actum agam, “If I fail to get my money now, it will be all up with me!” “Actum agam”=“twill be labour in vain.” See note at Andr. III. i. 7, and see below at III. ii. 27, “Actum est;” Phorm. II. iii. 72, “Actum ajunt ne agas,” and Plaut. Cistell. IV. ii. 36, “actam rem ago.”—Ubi illine rediero, nihil cst, “On my return thence, ‘tis no use” (attempting to get paid). Cf. Phorm. V. ix. 6, “Nihil est,” “formula detrectantis.” Refriixerit res, “The matter will have grown cold and stale,” “in oblivionem venerit.” The opposite idea is found in Plaut. Pæn. IV. ii. 92, “At enim nil est, nisi, dum calet, hoc agitur.” Ter. Eun. III. iii. 11, “Ubi friget.” The metaphor is from the anvil. Cf. Cic. Philipp. V. 11, “Belli apparatus refrigerescent.”—Nunc demum—ubi eras: represent the taunting banter which Sannio expects to meet if he prosecutes his claim after his return.

27. Nunc, “While I ought to be on my voyage :” tunc, “On my return.”—Persequi (sc. jus meum). Cf. II. i. 9.

28. Quod ad te redditum putes. “What you calculate will be your profits.” Cf. Andr. IV. v. 4; Hecyra. I. ii. 97, (in which cases however heirship is concerned). The sense of “redeo” here is precisely that in which it is used in Corn. Nep. Themistoc. ii. "Pecunia, quæ ex metallis redibat." Cic. de Fin. ii. 78, "Nihil ad me redit ex his." The verb "putes" also is here used very appropriately. Cf. II. i. 54. Parry points out on "rediturum" the like use by the Greeks of the verb προσέρχομαι and πρόσοδος.

29. Hocine illo dignumst, &c., "Does this become that respectable young man? Can it be that Æschinus," &c. Donatus points out that Sannio is now having recourse to flattery. Illo and the proper name Æschinum denote his purpose to make much of Æschinus for the occasion. "Hocine incipere Æschium." For this construction see Andr. I. v. 10, note. For "incipere" Bentley read "inceptare," metri gratiā.—Ut hanc mi eripere postulet, viz.: "to desire to carry this girl off from me," &c. For this sense of "postulo" see notes at Andr. IV. i. 20, and Parry's note at the same passage.

31. Labascit, "He wavers" (aside to the audience). So in Plaut. Rud. V. iii. 38, "Leno labascit." Comp. Eun. I. ii. 98, "Labascit, victus't, uno verbo." Unum hoc habeo, "I can suggest but this one thing." Compare Andr. IV. ii. 21, "Quin jam habeo."—Servesne an perdas totum, dividuum fac! "Rather than run the risk of saving or losing the whole, halve it." So Plaut. Rudens. V. iii. 52, quoted by Stalbaum., "Dividuum talentum faciam."—Conradet, "He will scrape together." Heaut. I. i. 89, "Conrasi omnia." Plaut. Pæn. V. vi. 25, "Trecientos philippos, credo, corradi potest."

35. Etiam de sorte, &c., "Alas, wretch that I am, I'm now coming to jeopardy about even my principal :" (letting alone the interest). Sors is i. q. "caput;" (see Livy. vi. 15, "Sortem aliam fert: de capite deducite, quod usuris pernumeratum est," quoted by Gronovius), and is opposed to "scenus," "the interest," elsewhere called "usura." See Plaut. Mostell. III. i. 34, "Qui mihi neque scenus, neque sortem argenti danunt," where Gronov. quotes Martial. v. 42, "Debitor argentum pariter cum sorte negabit."

37. Præterea colaphis—caput, "Besides my whole head's one swelling with buffets:" or "my head's a swelling all over with buffets." Tuber is from "tumco," a swelling of any kind. The idea of "fungus," or "mushroom," seems to be only a secondary one. "Tuber" is used figuratively in Hor. Sat. I. iii. 73, in contradistinction to verrucis, "warts," i.e. "lesser vices."—Etiam insuper defrudet? "Is he to defraud me, over and above?" as a climax to his other wrongs. Many editors read "defrudat," Donatus, Bentley, &c., read "defrudet," which we have retained.—Nusquam abeo, "I'll go nowhither." "Nusquam" is so used of motion to a place, as Ruhnken shows, at Eunuch II. ii. 50, "Nusquam."; "Abeo" is the pres. for the future, of which see examples passim.—Ut lubet. Cf. Audr. II. i. 10, "Age, age, ut lubet."

39. Numquid vis, quin abeam. This is the "plena locutio" of the comic "formula" of departure. "Numquid vis?" "Have you any further commands, to delay my being off?" For good examples, see Eun. II. iii. 50; Hor. Sat. I. ix. 6, "Cum assetaretur, numquid vis? occupo." And see particularly Plaut. Menæchin. (Hildyard's Gloss.) 242; and Aulul. H. G. 219, "Ibo igitur, parabo: numquid me vis?" For "ut ut haec sunt acta, compare Heaut. I. ii. 26, "Ut ut erat, mansum tamen oportuit."—Potius quam lites sequar, "rather than engage in a lawsuit. Cf. notes at Audr. IV. v. 16; Phorm. II. iii. 61.

42. Scio te non usum, &c. Donatus aptly quotes, Virg. Aen. III. 602, "Scio me Danaïs e classibus unum, Et bello Iliacos fateor petuisse Penates," as an illustration of the figure ἀξιοτιστεῖα, which has for its object to inspire confidence, by admission. Scio=“I confess.” Compare also with Stalb. Ovid Trist. III. v. 1, “Usus amicitiae tecum mihi parvus.”—Sedulo (sine-dolo). See note on Andria, I. i. 119, and III. iv. 18; IV. i. 55.—Quid, quod te oro? “What, of my petition?”

ACTUS II.—SC. III.

ENTER Ctesiphon, Demea's supposed model-son; who cannot sufficiently praise his brother Æschinus, who has carried off the music-girl for him, and taken all the blame on himself.

Metre:—Iambic Tetrameter.

1. Gaudet, “One might rejoice.” Indef. Compare, Andr. I. i. 108 “ernerter.”—Verum enim vero id demum juvat, “But in good truth that is in the highest degree pleasing;” “demum” is an adv. properly of time, and here would seem to strengthen “enim vero,” and to mean “beyond all else,” “in the last or highest degree.” Ruhnken and Stalbaum illustrate the passage from Sallust, Catil. 2, “Verum enim vero is demum mihi vivere, et frui animâ videtur.” Facere (sc. bene).

5. Unam hanc rem—præter alios præcipuum, “This one blessing in an especial degree beyond other men.” Præcipuum, says Ruhnken, is said of what is not held in common with others; e. g. “the general's share of spoil.” It is explained by Festus: “quod ante capitum,” præcipitur.

6. Fratrem homini nemini—principem, “To wit, that no man has a brother more pre-eminent in first-rate qualities.” “Homini nemini,” Cf. Eun. III. v. 1, “Nemo homost;” Hecyr. III. i. 1; “Homini nemini,” Phorm. IV. ii. 1; “Homine in nemine in,” Madv. 301, c. obs. 2.—Primarum artium: “ars” means fitness or excellence bodily, mental, or, as here, moral; th. ἀρω, “apto,” probably. It is here, i. q. “virtus” in v. 4, though it does not seem to be connected with ἀπέτη.—Ellum = “ecce illum!” Cf. Andr. V. ii. 14, note.

8. Quid sit (quaris sc.) Cf. Act. I. sc. ii. 4, “Quid ille fecerit?”—Festivum caput, qui, “A dear fellow, who,” &c. For “festivum,” cf. V. ix. 26; for “caput,” Andr. II. ii. 34, note. For the relative “qui” agreeing with Æschinus implied in caput, by the fig. “synesis,” see Hor. Od. I. xxxvii. 21, “Fatale monstrum, quæ generosius.” The figure is very common in the Greek writers. Bentley, after Donatus, reads quin, i. e. “quine,” and “postputavit;” and “quine” is found in the Bemb. Cod. But the sense is better if we retain “qui” and explain as above.

9. Omnia sibi postputavit esse præ meo commodo, “Deemed that he must hold everything secondary, in comparison with my interest.” Postputavit, i. e. “postponenda duxit.” Cf. Heeyr. III. v. 33, “Cum te post putasse omnes res præ parente intelligo.” In v. 10, famam is i. q. “infamiam.”—Peccatum in se transtulit. Cf. Andr. II. iii. 5, “Culparam in te transferet.” Fleckeisen for “amorem” reads “laborem;” Bentley, “sese” for “se:” both in aid of the halting metre.

11. Nil pote supra (dici, sc.), "Nothing stronger can be said." Pote is a form of "potis," as "magis" of "magis," as Douatus observes. See note on Andr. II. vi. 6. See also Plaut. Men. 507, where "pote" and the substantive verb "esse," appear in "Potesse." See Hildyard's Glossary ad loc., and at Men. 368. For the "nam" in quidnam, see Virg. Georg. iv. 445. For foris crepuit cf. Andr. IV. i. 58, "Concrepuit a Glycerio ostium;" Heaut. I. i. 121; Plaut. Mil. G. II. i. 76, where "foris" the rare nominative singular, occurs as here.

ACTUS II.—Sc. IV.

ÆSCHINUS enters, to find Sannio more ready to come to terms. He is met by his brother Ctesipho, who is profuse in thanks for the service done him. The latter goes into the house of Æschinus to visit his rescued mistress, while Æschinus, Sannio, and Syrus, repair to the forum, to settle the payment.

1. Num quidnam. Cf. Audr. I. iv. 8; II. i. 25. Construe, "Is he bringing out any money!"—Oppportunè (advenis, sc.), cf. Heaut. I. ii. 5; Andr. II. ii. 8. "Opportunè" (adestis, sc.), "Well met!" In tutost omnis res, "It's all safe and sure!" Compare, Ter. Andr. V. ii. 4, "Omnès res est jam in vado;" Plaut. Mer. II. iii. 48, "Res adhuc quidem hercle in tutost."—Vero, in v. 3, seems to have the force of "nay" or "come."

4. Ego illam hercle vero omitto, "Well, in good faith, I am laying it aside, seeing that I have thee for my brother!"—Coram in os laudare, "to praise you openly to your face." In os = "presentem," κατὰ στόμα. Heaut. III. iii. 11, "Concedas ab ore eorum aliquantis per."

6. Assentandi (sc. gratiā; Gr. χάριν or ἔνεκα), "for flattery's sake." For the construction, see Madvig. 417, obs. 5, who considers it a genitive of definition; not, however, in the same sense as a genitive of definition is used by Prof. Key, 926. 1.—Quum quo habeam gratum, "than because I am grateful." "Habeo gratum" can hardly be other than a kindred phrase to "habeo gratias"—"gratum" being the neut. adj., used as a substantive. Editors refer to Plaut. Trucul. II. vii. 56, "Dona accepta et grata habeo;" and we might perhaps understand "beneficiū tuūm" here; but to consider gratum i. q. gratias, is simpler. Facere (me. sc.)

7. Hoc mihi dolet, "I'm pained at this." Impersonal verbs admit a nominative of neuter pronoun, see Key's Grammar, 872. 1; Ter. Ad. IV. vii. 36. "Nos paene sero scisse et in eum rem locum," is Bentley's reading in the rest of the line. He has the authority of three MSS. for reading "rem." Parry and Stalbaum, and Zeune, read "Nos paene sero scisse et paene in eum lucum;" and Fleckeisen suggests, "Nos sero redisse et paene in eum rem locum," which avoids the repetition of "paene," and makes room for "rem." But "rem" may be omitted, and "redisce" be construed as impersonal, "that matters had come to that pass." The illustration of the phrase given by editors (Heaut. II. iii. 118; Phorm. I. iii. 1; Phorm. IV. iv. 5), all have "res" expressed, and we therefore prefer Bentley, or Fleckeisen's reading. Sero is, i. q., nimirum sero.—Pudebat (fateri, sc.)—Rcm pñè ex patriâ. Aposiopesis. Cf. Audr. I. i. 137; Ad. I. ii. 55.

11. Deos quæso ut ista prohibeant. Cf. Heaut. V. iv. 15, “Di istæc prohibeant.”—Quid ait tandem nobis Sannio? “Prythee, what says our friend Sannio?” “Nobis” is the dat. ethic used ironically; cf. Madvig. Gr. 248; Key, 978. “Tandem” is used as here constantly. See Monachim. 614, Hildyard.—Jam mitis est, “He's tamed at last.” Cf. IV. i. 18. He had been “as savage as a bear,” a scene or two before.

13. Ut hunc absolvam, “to pay this fellow off.” It was usual to settle money matters in the forum (see Phorm. V. viii. 28), where the bankers had their mensæ and tabernæ. Ruhnken explains, “absolvam” “solutâ pecuniâ dimittam.” See Plaut. Epid. V. i. 25, “Age, age, absolve me atque argentum numera.” Cf. also, v. 18 below.

14. Ne tam quidem, “Nay, I'm not going off so,” (i. e. empty-handed). Cf. Plaut. Pers. IV. vi. 11, “Quid tam properas? Ita negotiumst.”—Quamvis etiam maneo otiosus hic, “Nay, here I'll stay, as much at leisure as you please.” “Quamvis” = “quantumvis,” as in Plaut. Men. 232, Hildyard's Gloss., “Quamvis ridiculus;” Pseud. IV. vii. 79. Parry dissents from this view of the sense of quamvis here.—At ut omne reddat (fac, sc.).

18. Quam primum absolritote, “Get quit of this most wretched knave as quickly as possible.” Gronovius illustrates this sense of “absolvo,” by Plaut. Epid. III. iv. 30, “Te absolvam brevi.” It is akin to the use of it in v. 13 above. See also Cureul. Plaut. III. i. 84, “*Sequere hac, te *absolvam”—Irritatus. See notes on Andr. III. iv. 18; Phorm. V. viii. 39.—Permanet, “should make its way; penetrate; reach.” Stalbaum quotes Plaut. Capt. II. i. 25, “Neu permanet palam hæc nostra fallaciâ.”—Atque ego tum perpetuo perierim, “And then I should be undone for ever.” “Perpetuo” is emphatic. Things are bad enough with Ctesipho now; but, in the event of his father's finding out all, irretrievable.

20. Te obleeta. Cf. Adelph. I. i. 24, “In eo me obleeto.” Lectulos, h. e. “triclinia,” cf. Plaut. Stich. V. iii. 5, “Lectis sternendis studimus.” Nobis, is said by Syrus, comically, “Bid our couches be spread,” &c.—Obsonio. Cf. Audr. (notes) II. ii. 23.

23. Hilarem hunc sumamus diem, “Let us spend this day in pleasure;” cf. below, at V. iii. 68, “Ei rei hunc sumamus diem.” Sumamus is, i. q. consumamus. Compare, Plaut. Pseud. V. i. 23, “Hanc diem sumpsimus prothyme.” Bentley here reads hilare (antiq. for “hilariter”), supporting his emendation by the authority of Charisius, the grammarian. Authorities are in favour of the reading “hilarem.”

ACTUS III.—Sc. I.

SOSTRATA, the mother of Pamphila, an Athenian damsel, beloved by Æschinus, talks with the nurse Sostrata, respecting her daughter's confinement, and the unusual absence to-day of her lover, whom she highly commends.

1. Quid nunc fiet! (ab illâ, sc.). Recte edepol spero, “All well, I trust, by Pollux.” For the exclamation “Edepol,” see Eun. V. ii. 28, Hildyard’s Plaut. Men. 130, “Ecastor,” and 16, “Edepol.” “Ecastor” was an oath of women only—“Edepol” or “Edepol” of both sexes.—Mea tu, words of endearment. “My good creature!”—Dolores, “pains of labour,” as in Plaut. Amph. V. i. 40, “Ubi utero exorti dolores, ut solent puerperæ.” Propert. V. i. 99 (Paley), “Cum Cinaræ traheret Lucina dolores.”

3. Adfueris (“parientibus,” sc.) “had been present at a labour.” Cf. Andr. IV. iv. 32. “In pariendo aliquot ad fuerunt laboræ.” With v. 4, cf. Eun. I. ii. 67, “Sola sum: habeo hic neminem.”

8. E re natâ, &c., “Under the circumstances, mistress, it could not have befallen (your daughter) better than it has.” This is the simple English of “e re natâ”—literally, “out of” or “after.” Gronov. illustrates the phrase by Plaut. Bacch. II. ii. 40, “Ut hanc rem natam intelligo.” Casin. II. v. 35, “Ita rem natam intelligo.” Pro re natâ is a common phrase in Cicero. Bentley follows most MSS. and editions in reading “E re natae;” in which case we should construe, “It could not have happened better for your daughter’s interests.” This was the reading of Goveanus among others, and it is approved by Ruhnken.—For vitium oblatum, cf. Hecyr. III. iii. 23; V. i. 14.—Vitium oblatumst. “Injuriam oblatam.”—Quod ad illum attinet potissimum, “Especially as far as relates to that young man.”

10. Tali genere atque animo. Bentley read “tali ingenio atque animo,” alleging that there is nothing in the distinction drawn by Donatus between “genus” and “familiâ.” He quotes V. iii. 42 below, and Andr. I. i. 86, for the juxtaposition of “animus,” and ingenium. It is a matter of little moment which we read.

ACTUS III.—Sc. II.

In this scene misapprehensions arise from Geta having seen Æschinus carrying off the music-girl. He inveighs against such conduct in the hearing of his mistress, in ignorance of the circumstances under which Æschinus did it. It all comes out from the indignant slave: and after various suggestions as to what had better be done, Geta is sent to fetch Hegio, the old friend of Simulus, Sostrata’s husband, who will be their only stay in their trouble. Canthara is sent for a midwife.

1. Nunc illud est, quod, &c. “Now is that crisis, as to which.” Quod appears to be the accusative of limitation, and “nunc illud est,” is equivalent to the phrase in II. iv. 7, in illum locum redisse, &c. But perhaps there is some ground for Fleckeisen’s reading, “quom” for "quod," ("Now things are at a point, when"); for in Plaut. Rud. III. iii. 1, we read, "Nunc id est quum omnium copiarum atque opum, Auxilii, praesidii viduitas nos tenet." Si is, i. q. etsi. For "Omnes omnia," cf. Hec. V. iv. 27, "Omnia omnes ubi resciscunt."—Huic mulo salutem querant. Cf. Andr. IV. i. 48.—Consilia conferant, "should lay all their heads together." So Heaut. III. i. 64, "Conferunt consilia."

4. Tot res repente circumvallant, &c., "So many difficulties on a sudden hem me in, out of which 'tis impossible to extricate myself." Such metaphors from military tactics are very common in Plaut. and Ter., cf. Heaut. IV. ii. 2 and 5, and notes thereupon; Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. ii. 64—69, "Viden hostes tibi adessc," &c. For "emergi," cf. Andr. III. iii. 30, "Sese emersurum," where, as here, it is used peculiarly. See notes.—Hocine saclum? "Is it such an age we live in!"

7. Timidum, "trembling or disturbed." Donatus illustrates this use of "timidus" by Bacchid. Plaut. I. i. 73, "Credo timida es," where "timida es" is explained "trepida," "sudore perfusa es."

8. Neque illum misericordia, &c. "Illum" here is elegantly pleonastic. Donatus illustrates this usage by Virg. Aen. v. 457, "Nunc dextrā ingeminans ictus, nunc ille sinistrā." See also Hom. Il. iii. 409; Callim. H. in Dian. 150; Hor. Od. I. ix. 15, 16, "Nec dulces amores sperne puer, neque tu choreas;" and Ovid. Fast. ii. 271. This usage is not uncommon in the Septuagint. For "vitium obtulerat," see Act. III. sc. i. 9, above.

13. Nihil est quod, &c. "There is nothing I should like better than that all that family should be thrown in my way," &c.—Iram hanc in eos evomam, "that I might vent all my wrath on them." Compare with "evomam," Hecyr. III. v. 65, "Atque in eam omne hoc, quod mihi ægrest, evomam." And see below at III. iv. 65. Westerhov. illustrates the phrase by the Greek ἐμέσται τὸν πονηρὸν χολῆς χυμόν. —Satis mihi id habeam supplici, "I'd be content with exacting this punishment," or "with this satisfaction." "Satis habeam" is, i. q. "putarem mibi satisfactum;" cf. Phorm. V. ix. 40, "Jam supplici satis est mihi." Andr. V. iii. 32, "Paulum supplici satis est patri."—Seni in v. 16, is of course "Demea."

16. Animam extinguarem. Cf. Virg. Aen. iv. 605, "Natumque patremque Cuius genere extinxem."—Scelus, i. q. "scelestum," the abstr. for concrete, as "arma" for "armati," &c. "Illud scelus" refers to Æschinus.—Impulsorem, "his instigator."

18. Sublimem medium arriperem, "I'd first snatch him up in the air by the waist." For "Sublimem arripere," cf. Andr. V. ii. 20, "Sublimem intro hinc rape." For "medium arripere," see Andr. I. i. 106, and the notes there; and the phrase ἀπτάζειν μέσον, quoted by Parry from Herod. ix. 107.—Capite in terram statuerem, "Pitch him on the ground headforemost." Ruhnen quotes Virg. Aen. i. 115, "Pro-nusque magister Volvitur in caput." Cf. Catull. xvii. 23. "Mittere prounum." Plaut. in Curelio II. iii. 8, has "Quin capite sistat de viâ, de semitâ" in the same sense as here.—Ut cerebro dispergat viam. In V. ii. 7, we find "An tibi jam mavis cerebrum dispergam hic;" from which it would seem that "dispergere viam cerebro," or "dispergere cerebrum in" or "per viam," would be good Latin. Stalbaum thinks this is not so; but the English idiom is similarly twofold.

20. Adolescenti ipsi ciperem oculos. For this dative of the person whose body is concerned, see Key's Grammar, sect. 972; Plaut. Aul. 146 (Hildyard), "Cui ego jam linguam præcidam atque oculos refodiam domi." Casina. 295, "Præcide os tu illi hodie."—Præcipitem darem, "I'd pitch him headlong." In the next verse, ruerem = "I would dash to the ground;" for which transitive force of the verb compare Plaut. Trin. IV. i. 18, "Imbres fluctusque — Ruere antennas." Virg. Georg. ii. 309, "Ruit atram Ad cœlum — nubem." Ibid. Æn. xii. 454, "Ruet omnia latè."—Agerem, "I'd assail him." For "tunderem," Guyet, followed by Bentley, reads "funderem," quoting the phrase "fusi hostes;" but tunderem, "I'd pummel him," is quite satisfactory.

22. Heram hoc malo impertiri, "To communicate this bad news to my mistress." The deponent form is not so common as the active "impartire" or "impertire," for which see Plaut. Aul. Prol. 19, "Impertire me honoribus." Mil. Gl. IV. ii. 68, "Non hic suo seminio quanquam porculam impertiturust."—Hem, quisquis es, sine me, "Harkye, whosoever you are, let me go on my way." Madame Dacier explains this rightly, by referring to the common joke of calling after or delaying a slave who was in a hurry, that he might get into a scrape.

24. Oppido opportunè, "Very opportunely." So in Pl. M. G. II. ii. 21, "Repente subito," and, elsewhere, "Insanè bene." For "oppido," see note Heaut. IV. ii. 2, Donaldson Varr., p. 93.

26. Animam recipe, "Take breath." Cf. Phorm. V. vi. 28. "Animam compressi." This reading is more correct than "animuni." The exhortation is paralleled by Heaut. II. ii. 12, "Respira" — Quid istuc 'prorsus' ergo'st? For instances of this taking up a word of a former speaker, see And. II. ii. 30. "Opinor, narras?" I. v. 29; II. i. 14, ibid. and the notes on these passages. For "actumst," in v. 27, cf. Andr. III. i. 7, notes.

28. Alienus est, &c., "Is estranged from," &c. Cf. below at v. 40, and at Hecyr. IV. iv. 36.

30. Neque id occulte fert, "Nor does he disguise it." The opposite phrase to "occulte fert" is "præ se fert."—Hisce oculis egomet vidi. Cf. Heaut. III. iii. 3. "Hisce oculis, ne nega." Mil. Gl. Plaut. II. iii. 19, "Egomet duobus his oculis meis."

33. Nostram omnium vitam. For similar instances of the adj. agreeing with the genitive of the personal pronoun understood in the possessive, cf. Madvig. Gr. 297, a. In some editions, "nostrarum" is read, which is equivalent to "nostrum" as "vestrarum" for "vestrum," in Hecyr. II. i. 44, "Nam vostrarum nulla est." For "spes" and "opes" thus coupled, see Phorm. III. i. 6, "Spes opesque sunt in te uno omnes sitæ." Plaut. Amph. V. i. 1. In v. 34, "Nunquam" is as often i. q. "non," cf. Virg. Ecl. iii. 49. Sine in this line must be pronounced as "se," according to Parry, who prefers this to the omission of "erant," which was Bentley's solution of the metrical difficulty.

35. In sui gremio—patris. Ruhnken refers to Hom. Il. ix. 454, for this ancient custom. In v. 36 we have followed Bentley's reading. "Ut liceret hanc se," &c., rather than the usual "Ut liceret sibi hanc," &c. Porro, in v. 37, = "in reliquum," "in futurum," as in Andr. IV. iii. 16.

40. Alieno animo a nobis, cf. above, v. 28.—Ille infitius ibit, "He will have recourse to subterfuges." Cf. Livy VI. 40. 4, "Neque neque infitias eo," and see Key's Grammar, sect. 886, and note, which he shows that "to deny," is not an adequate translation infitias ire. For the derivation and the preferable etymology of the word, see Hildyard Menæchm. 305, who prefers to read "inficias," and explains the verb inficiari, "quæ feceris, ea te non fecisse asseverare."

42. In dubium veniet, "Will be hazarded." Andr. II. ii. 10, "Cer in dubio vitast;" and see above, at II. ii. 35, "Venio in dubium miser —Maximè fateatur," "If he were to admit most fully" (his intimacy with Pamphila).—Tacitost opus. For this construction, see Key's Grammar sect. 1280; Madvig. 266, obs., and Andria III. ii. 10, notes.

46. Pejore loco, &c., "In a worse position." Cf. Heaut. II. iii. 11, "In eum jam res rediit locum, ut sit necessus."—Potis est esse. This is the reading of the Bembine Codex.

47. Quæ secunda ei dos erat, &c. Lindenbrog quotes here Plaut Amph. II. ii. 209, "Non ego illam dotem mi esse duco, quæ dos dicitur. Sed pudicitiam et pudorem," &c. Parry adds, Horace. Od. III. xxiv. 2, &c. "Dos est magna parentium, Virtus et — castitas."—Duri nuptu Cf. Plaut. Aul. (Hildyard), 338, 558; Madvig. sect. 411, obs. 1. In the next verse "mecum" is rightly explained as i. q. "penes me," as Eun. III. iii. 9, "I have in my keeping a ring as evidence."

50. Quando = "quoniam," as in III. iii. 81, and elsewhere.—Experi (jure, sc.), "I'll have the law of him." Ruhnken illustrates this phrase by Cicero pro Rosc. Com. c. 9, "Judicio gravi experiri nolebas?" and Cic. pro Cœl. 8, where experiri is used as here, simply. So also Plaut. Most. V. i. 41, "Quin cito illum in jus. Si veniat. Mane: Experiar."

52. Cedo ut melius dicas. So Bentley reads for "accedo" the common reading. He explains it, "I admit that you suggest what is best." Madame Dacier translates, "Je vous en prix, changez de sentiment," rendering of which the words are not susceptible.—Quantum potest? This is Fleckeisen's reading. Most editions have "potes." Both are admissible. For "Quantum potest," cf. Menæchm. (Hildyard), 340. Rem enarrato omnem ordine. Cf. below, III. iii. 10; Pl. Menæch (H.), 581; Virg. Æn. iii. 179.

54. Summus, h. e., "summus amicus," "our Simulus's nearest friend." Cf. Andr. V. vi. 6, "Pater amicus summus nobis;" Eun. II. ii. 4, "Summum suum." In v. 55, Respicit is said of the regard of a superior for an inferior. See notes on Andr. IV. i. 18. We adopt Bentley's reading "properè" instead of "propera." For the phrase "in morâ nobis siet," see Andr. II. v. 13.

ACTUS III.—Sc. III.

IN this scene Syrus is represented as trying to quiet Demea's suspicions, who has heard that Ctesipho had had a hand in the seizure of the girl by Eschinus. The slave, after detailing in Demea's hearing an account of Micio's treatment of his nephew's escapades, and of the supper he has bidden Syrus purchase in consequence, pretends surprise at finding Demea near him, and amusingly gives a careless asse-to his prosings about extravagance, at the same time with his directions about the cooking of the supper. In the course of the scene, Syrus relates to the old man what a rebuke Ctesiphon has given Æschinus on his misconduct, a story which much delights Demea. His good son, so the slave tells him, is gone to the farm, whither Demea resolves to follow him, leaving the scapegrace and his foolish uncle to themselves. As he is going, Demea spies an old friend, a pattern gentleman of the old school.

4. Qui aliquoi reist, “Who is good for something.” Ruhnken compares Plaut. Stich. V. iv. 38, “Nulli rei erimus postea.” For the construction, see Key’s Grammar, § 983. “Etiam eum ad nequitiam adducere.” Bentley: “nequitiem.” For “eum,” which is the reading of the Bemb. C., Fleckeisen cleverly suggests “meum,” h. e. “Ctesiphonem.”—“Abducere is i. q. “seducere.” See, in the next verse, “abductum.”

5. Abductum in ganeum aliquò. Festus derives “ganeum” from ὑπὸ γῆν, “sub terrâ?” See Hild. Gloss. on Plaut. Men., 605, “Immersit aliquo, credo, in ganeum.”

7. Hinc scibo, “From him I shall learn.” For “hinc” for “ab hoc,” compare Eun. III. v. 36. “Tabula ubi (i. e. in quā) inerat pictura hæc.” For the form “scibo,” see Plaut. Men. (H.), 295, 907; Madvig. Gr. § 115, c.—De grege illost, “He’s of that lot” or “gang.” Cf. Eun. V. viii. 54, “In vestrum gregem Recipiatis.” Hor. Ep. I. iv. 16, “Epicuri de grege porcum;” ix. 13, “Scribe tui gregis huic.”

11. Quo pacto haberet (se, sc.). Compare Livy xxii. 39, where there is a similar ellipse in the phrase “Sic res habet.”—Enarramus, the present for the perfect. Compare Men. Plaut. 1033, “vocat” for “vocavit.” Aulul. 423, “Capio” for “cepi,” see Hildyard’s notes.

15. Dirumpor, “I burst with rage.” So Cic. ad Att. vii. 12, “Dirumpor dolore.” Ad Fam. 12. 2, “Fratri tui plausu dirumpitur.”—Adnumerarit, “he counted down,” cf. Plaut. Merc. I. i. 88, “Talentum argenti ipsus suā adnumerat manu.”—Dedit in sumptum, “He gave me to spend.” Cf. Heaut. V. i. 57, “Nam si illi pergo suppeditare sumptibus.” Cic. ad Att. viii. 5, “Erogare in sumptum.”

17. Ex sententiâ, “As I pleased.” Cf. Heaut. IV. iii. 5; IV. v. 17; Plaut. Aul. (H. G.), 544, Men. 190, ibid.—Hem huic mandes—curatum velis, “So so! if you want anything thoroughly attended to, here’s the man to trust it to.” Ironically. So Phorm. IV. 4. 8, “Hem siquid velis Huic mandes;” Plaut. As. I. i. 107, “Eidem homini, siquid recte curatum velis, Mandes.”—Quid agitur, “How goes it with you?” a form of salutation, as in V. v. 2, below.

20. Quid agatur (“rogas,” sc.), as constantly above.—Rationem (agendi, sc.), “Your plan of action.” So below, V. iii. 26, “Fandem illam antiquam rationem obtine.”—Ne dicam dolo, “To say the truth,” or “and no mistako.” Cf. Plaut. Men. (H. G.), 145, “Non dicam dolo.” Trinumm. I. ii. 53, “Ædepol, hand dicam dolo.” Note here the indifference with which Syrus turns from his conversation with Demea to the cooking operations.

22. Purga, h. e. “desquama,” “Scale and cleanse.” Lulere is commented upon needlessly by editors: we use the very same metaphor in English, “of a fish playing.” For congrum, “the couger-eel,” see Plaut. Aul. 353 (Hildyard's Glossary) — Tantisper, here retained, is the reading of the C. Benibin. Other editors read " paulisper." — Exos-sabitur, " It shall be boued," Cf. Aulul. l. c. " Dromo, desquama pisces. Tu, Maehærio, Congrum, muraenam exossata fac sient." In which passage, however, Nonius read " exdorsna quantum potes."

26. Salsamenta hec—pulchre, " See that this salt-fish is well soaked." For " salsamenta," compare Plaut. Pœnul. I. ii. 31—34, " Quasi salsa muriatica esse perhibentur Sine omni lepore et sine suavitate Nisi multa aqua usque et diu macerantur," and ibid. 39, " Scit muriatica ut maceret." For " macerentur," compare Andr. IV. ii. 2, note; Pl. Trinumm. II. i. 2.

28. Utrum studione. Tmesis for " utrumne studio." Unless with Parry we take " utrum" as a pronoun here; and construe " which of the two things is it? Does he make that his aim," &c. We prefer the former explanation. — Videre videor. Cf. Cic. Catil. iv. 6; Hor. O. II. i. 21, " Videre magnos jam videor duces."

31. Profligat aliquo militatum. Cf. Heaut. I. i. 65, " In Asiam ad regem militatum abiit, Chreme." — Istuc est sapere, &c., " That's your true wisdom." — Ante pedes, τὰ πόδες ποστ, Soph. Aëd. T. 130. — Quæ futura sunt prospicere, h. e. " consulere in longitudinem," as in Heaut. V. ii. 10; q. v.

35. Ellum intus, " Ay ! Madam's within." Colman. For " ellam," see Andr. V. ii. 14, Ellum; and Plaut. Aul. 738. " Imo, eccliam domi:" where we have the uncontracted form.

39. Ades præsens, " You are here in person." Cf. Plaut. Amph. III. iii. 22. " Tametsi præsens non ades."

40. Tu quantus quantus nil nisi sapientia es, " You are wisdom, all over"—" from head to foot." For " quautus quantus," see Pl. Pœn. III. iv. 28, " Quantum quantum ad eum erit delatum;" Ter. Phormio V. viii. 10, " Heu, quanta quanta hæc mea paupertas est." The phrase seems to mean " entirely," " without exception." — Nil nisi sapientia vs. Lindenbr. compares Catull. xiii. 14, " Totum ut te faciant, Fabulla, nasum." — Somnium, h. e. " somniculosus," the thing for the person. Cf. II. i. 50, " De argento, somnium." Construe, " He's but a dotard."

42. Aut non sex totis mensibus Prius, &c., " Shouldn't I rather have snuffed it out six whole months before he began any mischief." " Sex totis mensibus," the definite for the indefinite, as in Plaut. Men. (H. G.) 795, " Sexcenties;" Aul. 275, " Sexenta sunt, quæ memorem;" Hor. Sat. I. v. 12, " Treccutos ingeñis; ohe !" Olfecissim, cf. Plaut. Aul., 173 (Hildy.), " Aurum huie olet," " He scents my gold." In the next verse the emphasis is on " mihi."

48. Oh! qui egomet produxi, " What ! when I myself set him on his way." Produxi = " porro duxi." Cf. IV. ii. 22, " Produxe aiebas." So " prosequi" is used Plaut. Cas. IV. ii. 3. Compare the use of προπεμφθῆναι in St. Paul's Ep. to Romans, xv. 24.

49. Hæreret, " Should stick fast," caught by the birdlime of his brother's bad example.—Atque iratum admodum, " And very angry he was too." " Iratum," agrees with the accusative, implied after the verb " produxi." — Apud forum. Cf. Andr. I. v. 19.

53. De improviso." Cf. Heaut. II. iii. 40, note; Andr. IV. ii. 18, note.—OÆschine, Hæine, &c. For this elliptical mode of expression, cf. Andr. L v. 10, note, " Ad oue hominem esse invenustum;" Madvig. Gr. § 399.

For "admittere, used as here, see Heaut. V. ii. 3, "Quid ego tantum sceleris admisi miser."

55. Lacrumo gaudio, "I weep for joy." Lindenbr. quotes Plaut. Stich. III. ii. 13, "Ut præ lætitia lacrimæ prosiliunt nihi." See also below, at IV. i. 20, "Lacrumæ cadunt Quasi puero gaudio."

58. Præceptorum plenus istorum ille, "Your excellent son is full of those precepts of yours." Note the force of the pronoun "iste" (is tu). Plaut. Epid. I. ii. 49, "Plenus consilii es."

59. Domi habuit unde disceret, "He had not to go from home for a teacher." Ruhnken quotes Plaut. Truc. II. v. 4, "Ego prima domi modo docta dictito." An expansion of the same proverbial expression occurs in Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. ii. 36—9, "Domi habet animum falsiloquum, falsificum, falsijurium, &c. Nam mulier olitori nuuquam supplicat siqua est mala. Domi habet hortum et condimenta ad omnes mores malos."

62. Ec aliis sumere exemplum sibi. Cf. Heaut. I. ii. 36, and notes there. Plaut. Pers. IV. iii. 70, "Sed te de aliis, quam alios de te suavius Fieri doctos." Parry adds to these, Epidic. III. iii. 1—5, q. v.; and Hor. Sat. I. iv. 105. The same simile of the mirror occurs also in Eurip. Hippol. 428, (Paley), προσθελς κάτοπτρον, κ. τ. λ.

64. Istæc res est, "That plan of yours is the right thing." Istæc, Demea's method as contrasted with Micio's.

67. Hi mihi ne corrumpantur cautiost, "I must take care that these be not spoiled." A hit perhaps at Demea's words, I. ii. 17, "Tu illum corrumpi sinis." Corrumpitur is so used again, IV. ii. 49, "Prandium corrumpitur." For the verbal noun cautiost (i. q. "cavendum est"), cf. Andr. II. iii. 26, where the same word occurs; and Hecyra IV. iv. 28, "Consultatiost." Plaut. Cas. ii. 6, 54, "Quid tibi istum tactiost." See also Prof. Key's Gramm., § 907.

71. Hoc salsumst, &c. A parody of v. 63, "Hoc facito," &c. "This is salt; this is burnt; this is not nicely cooked." For "lautum," Westerhov. cites Martial Ep. XI. xxxii. 20, "Hoc lautum vocat; hoc putat venustum Unum ponere ferculis tot assem." — Iterum sic memento, "Mind this another time." "S-dulo" &c., a joke upon Demea's words, in v. 59. "Pro mcā sapientiā," "As far as my poor wisdom suffices." Cf. Plaut. Aul. 496, H. G., "Pro re: pro copiā."

75. Quid facto usus siet, "What one must do," or "ought to do." For this construction, see Andr. III. ii. 10, note; Madv. 266 obs. And see Ter. Hecyr. III. i. 47; Key's Gr. § 1280, note; and ibid. 999. In 76 nos = "our people," i. e. Micio, Æschinus, and Micio's household. — Verum quod facias? "But what is one to do?" — Ut homost, &c. "As a man is, so you must humour him;" i. e. "You must take a man as you find him." Ruhnken quotes Plaut. Mostell. III. ii. 36, "Ut homines sunt, ita morem geras." — Numquid vis, cf. II. ii. 39, note. The reply of Demea, "Mentem vobis meliorem dari," is a surly "I wish you better brains—a stronger head." Ruhnken shows that "bona mens" = "sana mens" here and elsewhere.

81. Quando is, quamobrem, &c. For quando, see III. ii. 50, above. Quamobrem is, i. q. "cujus causa." Cf. Eun. I. ii. 65. So in Plaut. Aul. 359 (H.), "Quā gratiā" seems to be i. q. "cujus gratiā."

83. De istoc ipse viderit, "To that good-for-nothing Æschinus let my brother look himself." For "viderit" thus used, see Ovid. Ex.

Pont. I. ii. 9, "Viderit haec si quis," &c.; Epist. xii. 211, "Viderit hoc, siquam jam peperisse pudet;" Virgil Aen. x. 744, "Ast de me Divum pater atque hominum rex Viderit." See also Madvig. Gr. § 340, obs. 4. In the next verse Procul = "at a little distance," "prope ab oculis." See for this sense, Plaut. Men. (H. G.) 144. Virg. Ecl. vi. 16, "Serta procul tantum capiti sublapsa jacebant," &c. Plaut. Capt. IV. ii. 8.

85. Si satis cerno, "If I can believe my eyes." So Phorm. V. i. 8, "Nisi me animus fallit, aut parum prospicunt oculi." Plaut. Trin. IV. iii. 64, "Satin ego oculis plane vidi."—Næ illiusmodi—fide. The old man is, "Laudator temperis acti Se puerō." Hor. A. P. 173.—Antiqua, is, i. q. "simple," "old fashioned." Cf. Andr. IV. v. 22, "Pol, Crito, antiquom obtines;" Hecyra V. iv. 20; Plaut. Capt. I. ii. 20; Hor. Sat. II. vii. 23, "Fortunam et mores antiquæ plebis."—Publicè in v. 89, is, i. q., "In a public point of view."

90. Etiam hujus generis reliquias, &c. "Etiam" = "yet," "still." Cf. Andr. I. i. 89; III. ii. 2. See notes.

ACTUS III.—Sc. IV.

HEGIO enters, talking to Geta, and Demea overhearing their discourse at first supposes that it refers to the music-girl, but soon learns the affair and the troubles of Pamphila. Hegio urges him to do her that justice voluntarily, which otherwise the law will enforce—appealing to old friendship and to the character and standing of Demea's family. He will give no answer till he has seen Micio, whose fault it all is, and against whom he is prepared to launch out.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

2. Illiberale facinus, "An act unworthy of a gentleman." So below at IV. v. 30, we find "illiberaliter" used.—Pol haud paternum istuc dedisti. "Faith, this conduct which you've exhibited was not like your father." "This was not acting like your father," Colman. Note the use of "dedisti" i. q. "fecisti," and see Eun. V. ii. 60, "Dabit hic aliquam pugnam deuuo."

5. Id illi dolet. Impersonal verbs admit a nom. of neuter pronoun. See Key's Gr. 872. 1, and below IV. vii. 36, "Non te haec pudent." Pater is, "that so-called father," i.e. Micio.

8. Haud sic auferent, "They shall not carry off the matter thus." Cf. Andr. III. v. 4, "Sed inultum nunquam id auferet," and ibid. I. ii. 4, "Mirabar hoc si sic abiret." With v. 10, "Tu es patronus," &c., compare Andr. I. v. 60, "Te isti virum do, amicum, tutorem, patrem," &c., in which passage (see ibid. 50) as here, great stress is laid on a dying person's injunction.

12. Cave dixeris, "Don't name the word," ("deseris," sc., a word of ill omen) The old man deprecates the bare idea of a patron deserting his client in difficulties.—Satis, pie, "with due regard to family affection."

15. Salvere Hegionem plurimum Jubeo. Cf. Andr. III. iii. 1, "Jubeo Chremetem;" Plaut. Mostell. III. i. 41, "Salvere jubeo te, Misargyrides, benè." For v. 17, cf. above, I. ii. 34.—Functus officium est viri. For this use of the acc. after "fungor," cf. Heaut. I. i. 13; Andr. Prol. 5, notes.

20. Aequalem, "contemporary," cf. Heaut. III. i. 8; Andr. II. vi. 22, notes. Gr. ὁμήλικα.—Amplius, in v. 22 = "more aggravated." Ruhnenku illustrates the word by Heeyr. III. i. 9, "Iræ multo ampliores."

24. Persuasit nox, amor, &c. Asyndeton, cf. below at v. 28, and Andr. V. iv. 35. For the same causes for a like act mentioned together, Lindenbr. quotes Demosth. c. Midiam, τρεῖς εἶχε προφάσεις, μέθην, ἔρωτα, ἀγνοιαν διὰ τὸ σκότος, καὶ νυκτὸς τὸ πρᾶγμα γενέσθαι. Plaut. Bacch. I. i. 54, "Istoc illecebrosius Fieri nihil potest Nox, mulier, vinum, homini adolescentulo." Ovid. Am. I. vi. 59, "Nox et amor viuumque nihil moderabile suadent." With "lacrumans, orans, obsecrans," &c. Westerhov. compares Ennius Ann. I. i. 28, "Flentes, plorantes, lacrumentes, obtestantes."—Fidem dans. Cf. Andr. II. iii. 27.

29. Mensis hic decimus est, "The tenth lunar month," i.e. according to the computation of time before Julius Cæsar. See below IV. v. 57, "Menses abierant decem." Hec. V. iii. 24; Virg. Ecl. iv. 61, "Matri longa decem tulerunt fastidia menses."

30. Ille bonus vir nobis, &c., "Yon good gentleman of ours, Heaven bless the mark, hath gotten him a music girl," &c. For this ironical use of "bonus vir" and "si diis placet," see Eun. V. iii. 10, "Virum bonum eccum Parmenonem incedere Video: vide ut otiosus sit, si Diis placet," where Ruhnen observes that "si Diis placet" in such places refers to some conduct which must be displeasing to the gods. This must be taken with some reservation, for see Plaut. Capt. II. iii. 94. For the ironic "vir bonus," see too Andr. V. ii. 5, "O salve, bone vir."

32. In mediost, "is present," "is at hand," i. e. "can be produced," or "is before the world." This is better than to suppose it to mean "lives," comparing Phorm. V. viii. 74, "E medio excessit;" and V. ix. 30, with Westerhov. and Parry.

34. Ut captus est servorum, "As servants go," Colman. Literally, "according to the capacity of servants." The word "captus" is used by Cæsar, B. G. iv. 3, "Ut captus est Germanoruim;" Cic. Tuscul. II. ii. 27, "Ut est captus hominum."—Non malus, "a very decent fellow." Litotes. Cf. Eun. II. ii. 43, "Non malum hercle."—Solus omnem familiam sustentat, "He's the sole prop of the family." So Phorm. II. i. 57, "Columen vero familiæ;" Virg. AEn. xii. 59, "In te omnis dominus inclinata recumbit." In v. 36 we have another case of "asyndeton."—Quare rem implies "torture," as the means of eliciting the truth. Ectorque in the slave's reply does not blink the question, being i. q. "ay, wrack it out of me." With the form "abduce" in v. 34 compare Virg. AEn. xi. 463, "Edice maniplis."

38. Cedo, cf. Heaut. IV. viii. 5. note; Hildyard's Menæchm. 114, Gloss. With vv. 40—41 compare notes on Andria, III. i. 15, and Plaut. Aulul. 646. H. G., "Juno Lucina." With "differor doloribus" compare Plaut. Cistell. II. i. 5, "Differor, distrahor, diripior." Epid. I. ii. 15, "Clamore defatigor, differor."

43. Fidem nunc vestram implorat, "Imploringly asks your protection." Cf. Plaut. Rudens III. ii. 1, "Pro Cyrenenses populares, vostram ego imploro fidem."—Quod vos vis cogit, &c., "Let her obtain of your free will that which the compulsion of the laws enforces you (to grant to her, sc.). Bentley, followed by Rulinken and others, reads "vis" (legum, sc.), while in many MSS. "jus" is found. In Phorm. I. iv. 36, as Bentley shows, we have "vi coactum," (sc. legum), as here. Editors quote from Menander, τρία ἔστι δι' ὧν ἄπαντα γίγνεται, η κατὰ νόμους, η ταῖς ἀνάγκαις, η γε τρίτον ἔθει τινί. For the double accusative after "eogit," cf. Wordsworth's Gramm. K. Edward VI. § 146; Key's Grammar, § 902; Madvig. Gr. 228. c. obs.; and Virgil Æn. iii. 56.—Voluntate is i. q. "sponto vestra." Compare Ter. Phorm. V. iii. 2, "Ut suâ voluntate id quod est faciundum faciat." Similarly in Andr. II. v. 11, "Cum gratiâ" is used for "willingly." Gronovius compares Livy. xxxv. 22, "Castella multa expugnavit: alia voluntate ad eum defecerunt."

45. Ut vobis decet (facere, sc.), a Græcism i. q. ὑμῖν πρέπει. Cf. below at V. viii. 5. "Decet" is used with a dative in like manner, in Plaut. Amph. II. ii. 188, "Istuc facinus—nostro generi non decet." But see Key's Grammar, § 964 on this.—Sin aliter animus vester est. Compare Heccyr. V. ii. 19, "De hâc re animus meus ut sit." Our own idiom is nearly similar.

48. Cognatus mihi erat, cf. Andr. V. iv. 23; Phorm. II. iii. 44; and below at V. viii. 24.—Militiae et domi. See for this construction Madvig. Gr. 296. b. 1.; Plaut. Capt. Prol. 68, "Domi bellique duellatores optumi"—Experiar in v. 51, is used as in III. ii. 52 above.

54. Is quod mihi de hac re dederit consilium, id sequar. This line, which is found in Phorm. II. iv. 21, does not appear in the Codex Beobinus, and it is omitted by the latest editor to whom we have access. Fleckeisen, Parry, and others retain it.

55. Cum animo cogites. Westerhov. illustrates this phrase from Plaut. Mostell. III. ii. 13, "Quo magis cogito ego eum animo meo;" Cic. Agrar. ii. 24, "Cum animis vestris cogitare;" Ter. Eun. I. i. 19, "Tecum iratus cogitas." For tam—quam with the superlatives, (a Greek construction) in the next verses, see note on Heaut. V. ii. 43, and Parry's note on the passage before us. Construe, "The more comfortably you live, the more influential, rich, fortunate, noble you are, the more bounden are you in fair dealing to exercise fairness," (or, to act fairly), &c. — With quam facillimè agitis, Westerhov. quotes Plaut. Cureul. V. ii. 6, "Nam propter eas vivo facilius." Epid. II. ii.—Æqua noscere is i. q. ἐπιεικῆ γνῶναι, "avoir les sentimens d'un homme droit" (Madame Dacier). For the sentiment editors compare Virg. Æn. i. 630; Soph. Autig. 299.

62. Non me indicente hæc fūnt, "These things don't happen without my warning," i. e. "me non dicente." Gronov. quotes a parallel use of "indico" in Livy xxii. 39, "Nam et duo boni consules, etiam me indicente, omania e republicâ fide vestra faceretis." In Virg. Æn. vii. 733, "Nec tu carminibus nostris indictus abibis," and in Phorm. V. viii. 58, "Quod dictum, indictum est," "indico" is as here i. q. "non dico."—Utinam hic sit modo defunctum, "Would that it were only got quit of with this," or "would it were but ended thus." "Defunctum" is used passively, as in Eun. Prol. 15, "Defunctus jam sum;" Phorm. V. ix. 32, "Cupio misera in hac re jam defungier."

65. In eum hæc evomom, cf. above III. ii. 14, note.

ACTUS III.—Sc. V.

HEGIO enters, speaking to Sostrata, as he quits her house (cf. Andr. III. iii.; Heaut. V. i.), and assuring her of his urgent interference with Micio.

Metre :—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Quod potes, i. e. “quantum potes.” So in Heaut. III. i. 7, “Quod potero,” where “quod” is i. q. “quantum” or “quoad,” see note in loc. Guyetus rejects this scene as spurious, but it seems necessary to retain it: as explaining which, Hegio and Micio are together in Act IV. Scen. iii. This Bentley pointed out.

3. Narrabo ordine, cf. III. iii. 11, above; and Heaut. IV. iii. 28. In v. 4, “Si est, facturus ut sit,” &c., a curious periphrasis for “Si facturus est,” compare Hecyra III. v. 51, “Si est ut velit reducere uxorem;” IV. i. 43, “Si est, ut dicat velle se;” Phorm. II. i. 40. With v. 5 Altiter—ejus est sententia, cf. III. iv. 46 above, “Siu aliter auimus vester est.”

6. Respondeat mi, cf. III. iv. 53., “Quid mihi respondes.”

ACTUS IV.—Sc. I.

CTESIPHO questions Syrus, in a state of alarm, about his father's movements. Demea had gone to his farm, supposing Ctesipho to be there, and the latter fears that he will soon be back, and find that he has been loitering in town. What excuse is he to invent? While Syrus is suggesting a variety of these, Demea is seen approaching and Ctesipho retires into the house, yet not out of hearing, while Syrus awaits Demea.

Metres :—1 & 9. Trochaic Tetrameter.

2 & 10. Troch. Tetram. Catalectic.

8. Trochaic Dimeter Catalectic.

3—7, 11—23. Iambic Tetrameter.

1. Sodes. Cf. Andr. I. i. 58, note; and Hildyard on Plaut. Menæchm. 445. Gl.—Vunc quom maxime, &c., “I suppose he's now as busy as possible at some work or other.” “Quom maxime,” = “most particularly,” in Andr. V. i. 4; Heaut. IV. v. 40, and Hecyr. I. ii. 40; Phorm. I. iv. 26. Westerhov. explains the words here to mean, “Ita nunc, ut tunc cum maxime,” which seems to be correct. In the next verse quod is for “quoad” or “quantum.” Fleckeisen rightly places a colon at “utinam quidem,” thus obviating the awkwardness of supposing “utinam velim” to be joined in construction, as Ruhnken does. —Triduo hoc perpetuo, Translate “within the whole of the next three days.”

5. Istoc si quid potis est rectius (addi, sc.), an euphemism of the slave for the old man's death. If the son had heard the plain statement, he could not have rejoined with “ita” “Potis est,” see note on Andr. II. vi. 6.

6. Misere nimis, “Very intensely.” For this redundancy of expression, compare Plaut. Mil. G. I. i. 24, "Insanè bene;" Ibid. II. ii. 22, "Repente subito;" and above at Ter. Ad. III. ii. 24, "Oppido opportunè." So also in Catull. xxxvi. 10, "Jocoso lepide vovere divis:" where the two adverbs (if the reading is sound) combine to strengthen each other, (see "English Journal of Education," vol. xi. p. 419.)

7. Tum male odi, "I hate so fiercely." Compare Plaut. Men. 107 (Hildyard), "Ut ego uxorem, ubi te aspicio, odi malè." In v. 9 we have "oppressisset" in its common sense of "overtake." See above at II. ii. 21, "Ut in ipso articulo oppressit," and Andr. I. iii. 22, Cic. de Senectut. c. 14, "Quoties nox oppressit, quum mane coepisset." — Revorti posset iterum. "Iterum" is pleonastic, as "rursus" in I. i. 46, "Rursus ad ingenium redit." Cf. Eun. IV. ii. 6, "Redeo rursus."

11. Quem ego hodie toto non vidi die. These are the supposed words of Demea, and are an illustration of the abrupt transition from the narrative to the direct form of speech. Fleckeisen omits "quem" and reads "Ego hoc te toto non vidi die."

12. Nilne in mentem. The best reading here is that which omits "est." Understand "venit," as in Heaut. V. ii. 33, where see notes. "Does nothing occur to you?" Nunquam quicquam, "Never a thing." Cf. Andr. II. iv. 7, where as here and elsewhere "nunquam" is used for "non." — Tanto nequior, "So much the worse." This phrase occurs in Plaut. Menæch. 339. See Hildyard's Glossary and notes. Its opposite is "Tanto melior," for which see Heaut. III. ii. 38, notes.

13. Cliens, amicus, hospes. Westerhov. quotes Cie. de Senect. c. 10, "Non curia desiderat vires, non rostra, non amici, non clientes, non hospites." — "Hisce ut opera data sit (narra, sc.)," "Say you've been attending to these." Cf. Heaut. V. i. 37, "Operam amico dat suo." — Quæ non data sit. Construe, "What! when I've not been attending to them!" "Quæ" is i. q. "cum ea."

15. Interdiu, "Your excuse will hold good for the daytime."

17. Quin tu otiosus es, "Can't you be easy in your mind." For this sense of "quin," with an indicative, cf. Virg. Ecl. ii. 71, "Quin tu aliquid saltem potius," &c. As it is practically an exhortation, we do not find a note of interrogation. — Illiū sensum pulchre calleo, "I thoroughly understand his disposition," or perhaps "way of thinking."

18. Tam placidum quam ovem reddo, "I'll make him as tame as a lamb." For this attraction of the object compared to the ease of that with which it is compared, cf. Phorm. IV. ii. 1, "Ego hominem callidiores vidi neminem, quam Phormionem." There is no necessity to adopt Bentley's emendation, "quam ovis est," or Fleckeisen's conjecture of "quasi ovem" for "quam ovem." For instances of "fervere," used as of the third conjugation, see Virg. Aen. iv. 409, "Littora fervere longè," and ibid. 567.

19. Facio te apud illum deum. For this hyperbole editors find a comparison in Cicero de Oratore, ii. 42, "Quæ dispositio argumentorum, in qua tu mibi semper deus videri soles;" and Plato's Meno. p. 99, where "women" and the Spartans are said to affect this style of praise. With v. 20, Lacrumæ cadunt, cf. above III. iii. 55, "Oh! lacrumo gaudio."

21. Lupus in fabulâ, "The wolf in the fable;" h. c. he, of whom there has been so much talk: in reference to the fable of the boy who so often raised the alarm of "Wolf, wolf!" Plautus, in Stichus IV. i. 7., has "Atque eccum tibi lupum in sermone: præsens esuriens adest;" and Madame Dacier takes "sermo" and "fabula" to be synonymous, meaning, as one of the commentators on Plautus says, "common talk," cf. "fabulari." This seems a more simple explanation than that which is based on Virgil Ecl. ix. 54, "Mærum lupi videre priores;" and Theocr. xiv. 22, οὐ φθέγξῃ; λύκον εἰδεῖς. viz., the superstition that to see a wolf caused loss of speech. Adopting the former explanation, we have an English proverb to match it: "Talk of the devil," &c.

22. Syre, quid agimus? Present foc future, as in Plaut. Men. 148, H. G., and in Terence, passim.—Ego video, "I'll see to it." Cf. Andr. II. vi. 25, "Ego istæc video," see note.—Nusquam tu me (vidisse—dicas, sc.), Aposiopesis. Cf. Virg. Ecl. iii. 25, "Cantando tu illum?" Potin' ut desinas? "Can't you be still?" Desino is thus used in Andr. V. vi. 8, "Tum de puerō, Dave,—ah, desine!" For instances of this form of checking a speaker, see Plaut. Menæch. H. G. 368, "Potin' ut quiescas;" Plaut. Merc. V. ii. 49, "Potin' ut animo sis tranquillo." For the form "potin," see note at Andr. II. vi. 6.

ACTUS IV.—Sc. II.

DEMEA returns to his brother's house from a fruitless search for him, and in further trouble because he learns from a farm-servant that Ctesipho is not at the farm. He looks upon himself as the most unfortunate of men, being the first to learn and feel for the family troubles. He soon sees Syrus, who invents a long story how Ctesipho has been ill-treating both him and the music-girl, as the result of a mad mood, which came upon him as he was beginning his walk to the farm. Demea is charmed by this evidence of Ctesipho's virtue and right-mindedness, and is started again by a circuitous route, suggested by Syrus, in search of Micio.

Metre:—Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

1. Nusquam gentium. Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 179; Ter. Heaut. II. iii. 16, "Interea loci;" Key's Gramm. § 923; Madvig. § 284, obs. 10.—A villâ mercenarium; "A farm-servant;" a villâ = "villæ," as in Andr. III. i. 3, "Ab Andriast ancilla hæc." Compare Andr. IV. iv. 15, "a nobis;" and 17, "Ab Andriâ." Plaut. Mil. G. II. ii. 5, "Quemque a milite hoc hominem," &c.

4. Quin tu animo bono es. Cf. above IV. i. 17, "Quin tu otiosus es."—Quid hoc, malum, infelicitatis? "What a misfortune's this, plague take it!" For "malum," thus used interjectionally, see Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 299, 695; Aulul. H. G. 383, "Quid, malum, curas?" Heaut. II. iii. 77, note.—Nisi me credo, &c. For this comic use of "nisi," see Andr. IV. i. 40, "Nescio, Nisi mihi deos satis scio esse iratos," &c., and Heaut. III. ii. 31. Construe, "Save that I believe I was born for this one object, to endure miseries."

7. Rescisco, "come to the knowledge of" a thing concealed. Cf. Heeyr. V. iv. 27, "Omnia omnes ubi resciscunt." See Plaut. Menæch.

581. H. G.; Aulul. 727, H. G. The verb is used four times in this sense in the Andria.

8. Obnuntio, "I announce bad news;" a word borrowed from the augurs and magistrates; see Smith's Antiq. G. and R., 176, 178; Cic. Philipp. ii. 33, "Augur auguri, consul consuli obnuntiavisti." The magistrate stopped the assemblies by reporting (obnantiando) evil omens, which the augurs had declared.

11. Ne ille hic prorsus se irruat, "That he don't burst right in here!" Prorsus i. q. "proversus;" cf. "horsum," "dextrorum," &c. For the active use of "irruo" here cf. Eun. III. 5. 51, "Foras simul omnes proruunt se;" Adelph. III. ii. 21, "Ceteros ruerent." Parry adds Virg. Georg. i. 445, "Sese Diversi erumpunt radii." — Etiam taces? "Be quiet!" cf. Heaut. II. ii. 6, "Etiam eaves?" and Andr. V. ii. 8, "Etiam tu hoc respondes." In v. 12 hodie is used by way of asseveration, as constantly in Terence.—Istuc committam, "Entrust that task," viz., "of keeping my father from rushing in."

15. Non hercle hic quidem durare quisquam, si sic fit, potest, "No one can ever stay here, by Jove, if things go on in this way." Here Bentley proposed to read "perdurare" for "durare." Fleckeisen for "quidem" has "qui volt." In Plaut. Men. 684, H. G. we find "durare," for "edurare," as here, "Viverc hic non possum, neque durare ullo modo." Syrus is supposed here to come to the front of the stage, and complain of his grievances, so as to attract the attention of Demea.—Quid ille gannit? "What is he grumbling about?" "Gannio" is used by Catull. lxxxiii. 4, "Quod nunc gannit et obloquitur." A compound of this verb occurs in Phorm. V. ix. 41, "Usque ad aurem ogganiat," and in Plaut. Asinar. II. iv. 16. "Gannio" is said to be properly used of "dogs" by Varro and Festus. For malum! in v. 18, see above at v. 4.

20. Hem, vide ut discidit labrum, "See how he has cut my lip." A hoax on the short-sighted old man, who is probably intended by Syrus to look for a cut inside his mouth.

22. Produxo aības? "Didn't you say that you had just set him on his way hence into the country?" "Producere = προπεμπειν, cf. III. iii. 48, note. For the syncope of "produxe" for "produxisse," cf. Heaut. Prol. 32, "decesse" for "decessisse;" Virg. Aen. viii. 274, "porgite" for "porrigite;" Hor. Sat. I. ix. 73, "Huncine solein Tam nigrum surrexe mihi."

23. Non puduisse, &c. For the infinitive used as here without a governing preposition, see Madvig. Lat. Gr. §. 399; Ter. Andr. I. v. 10, note.—Quem ego modo, &c., "Altho' 'twas I who not so very long ago carried him in my arms, a child no bigger than this" (δεικτικῶς).—Modo needs not here be explained of a great distance of time. The force lies in the slave's thinking the interval "no time to speak of." Westerhov. quotes Eurip. Cyclops. 142, δν ἔξέθρεψα παῖδ' ἔγω ποτ' ἀγκάλαις, and shows from Plaut. Mil. G. III. i. 102, that the office alluded to was performed by a person called "geraria," th. "gero," whence the frequentative "gesto."

25. Patrissas, "You take after your father," "You are a chip of the old block." Cf. Plaut. Mostell. III. i. 108, "Euge, Philolaches patrissat." This verb is one of a small class formed after Greek verbs in ζ (e. g. μηδίζω), of which "Græcisso," "Atticisso," and "Sicelicisso" are examples; see Plaut. Menæch. H. G. Prol. 11, and Key's Grammar,

§ 751. For abi, “go,” “go your ways,” an ejaculation expressive of praise, as here, and at Plaut. Asin. III. iii. 114, “Hem sic, abi;” and of blame or ridicule as in this play above, II. ii. 12, “Abi: nescis inescare homines.”—Perquam and perfortiter, in 27 and 28, are used ironically: “O very!” “Very bravely.”

29. Idem quod ego, sensit te esse huic rei caput, “Even as I had, he has found out that you are ‘head and front of this offending.’” For “caput” thus used with a dative, see Andr. II. vi. 27, note, and Plaut. Asin. III. iii. 138, “Ego caput huic argento fieri hodie reperiundo.”

32. Diminuetur—cerebrum, “I’ll break your crown in a minute!” Compare III. ii. 19, “Ut cerebro dispergat viam;” V. ii. 7, “An tibi mavis jam cerebrum dispergi hic.” In the following sentence we see the difference between “scio” and “novi,” Cf. Aulul. Plaut. H. G. 672.

34. Nostin’ porticum, apud macellum, hanc deorsum? “Know you the colonnade here, just below, near the provision market?” “Hanc” agreeing with “porticum” signifies “hard-by,” or “in this direction;” and “deorsum” is used as an adverb of rest, not motion, signifying “below,” or “downwards,” as in Aulul. Plaut. H. G. 321, “Si autem deorsum comedent,” &c. Bentley proposed to read “hac deorsum;” but there is no need, and we have “hac” in the next line.

35. Præterito hac recta platea sursum, “Pass this way straight up the street;” or “right along the street upwards.” With hac understand “viâ,” or “parte;” sursum = “subversum,” as “deorsum,” “devorsum.” A parallel to this fool’s errand, on which Syrus is sending Demea, is quoted by Colman from Shakespeare’s Merchant of Venice, Act ii. Sc. ii., Launcelet and Gobbo.

36. Civus deorsum versus est: hac te præcipitato. Madaine Dacier translates “vous trouvez a cette main-la une petite descente : jettes-vous-y.” For the juxtaposition of deorsum versus h e. “downwards.” Forcellini gives a parallel in Cato de R. R. c. 156, “Postea ubi deorsum versus ibit;” Cicero, Orator. c. 29, “Sursum versus redditur.” For “versus” used with “ad” or “in,” a parallel case, see Madvig. Gr. § 172, obs. 4. Construe, “There’s a slope looking downwards.”—Hac te præcipitato seems to mean “Make the best of your way down this road.” Some omit the case after “præcipito,” as in Virg. AEn. ii. 9, “Nox humida cœlo præcipitat.”—Est ad hanc manum, “right or left,” according as he points with his finger.—Ibi angiportum propter est, “There, there is an alley hard-by.” For the word “angiportum,” cf. Eunuchus, V. ii. 6. The masc. from “angiportus” occurs in Hor. O.L. I. xxv. 10, “In solo levis angiportu.”—Propter : adv. i. q. “propiter,” or “prope,” see Phædrus II. vi. 7.

38. Quoniam? “In which direction?” Fleckeisen here conjectures “Quanam?” “By which way, pray?”

40. Censen’ hominem me esse? “Don’t you count me to be a man?” (“As such, and therefore as liable to error”) “I’ve made a mistake.” This is the simple meaning, and the only interpretation of this passage, which can claim acceptance. Ne admits, when affixed to the verb, an affirmative or a negative answer: cf. Madvig. Gr. § 451 a, who gives instances where, as here, an affirmative answer is expected. See also Parry’s note here, and Long on Cic in Verr. II. ii. 46.

43. Ad sinistram hac recta platea, “Go this way right along the street to the left.”—Ad Dianaē (“templum,” sc.). For this common ellipse, see Madvig. Gram., § 280, 3; Hor. Sat. I. ix. 35, "Ventum erat ad Vestæ;" Hom. Odyss. x. 282, ἐν Κίρκης, h. e., in Circe's Temple.

45. Pistrilla, "a small pounding-mill;" diminutive from "pistrinum," for which it is perhaps used here.—Fabrica, is simply, "a workshop."—Exadvorsum, "over against it." The word is used by Terence, Phorm. I. ii. 38, "Exadvorsum ei loco Tonstrina erat;" Plaut. Bacch. IV. vii. 37, "Video exadvorsum Pistoclerum."

46. Lectulos in sole, &c., "He has been ordering some open-air benches with legs of holm oak." "Lectulos in sole," indicate seats made for the "solarium" (or "flat house-top," cf. Plaut. Mil. G. II. iii. 69), on which the ancients were wont to bask, enjoying the luxury of what Gronovius calls "insolatio." Cf. Persius, Sat. iv. 18, "Assiduo curata cuticula sole." In the next verse, ubi is, i. q., "in quibus."

48. Ego te exercabo hodic — silicernium, "I'll work you to-day, as you deserve, old drybones!" For like threats, cf. Andr. V. ii. 23, "Ego jam te commotum reddam." Excreo is used thus in Virg. Aen. iv. 623, "Genus omne futurum Exercete odiis." Cooper in his Thesaurus explains silicernium, a "pudding eaten at funerals." In Terence, he adds, it means "an olde cripple at the pitte's mouthe; that is ready to have such a dinner made for him." The derivation according to some is, "silices cernere," h. e., "sepulchorum suorum," but this is very questionable; though far from the worst explanation.—Aeschinus odiose cessat, "Aeschinus is intolerably behindhand;" Eun. IV. vi. 16, "Odiosa cessas."—Prandium corrumpitur, "Dinner's spoiling." "Prandium" perhaps has here somewhat of its original sense, i. e. "the first meal," th. πρᾶ or πρῶτον; for it would seem from v. 52 that the hour was early. "Cœna" and "prandium" however, were frequently confounded with each other by the ancients, see Hildyard's note on Plaut. Menæch. 94, G., and ibid. 48, on "cœna." In Plaut. Pseud. III. ii. 102, we have "Corruptitur jam cœna."

50. In amorest totus, "Is wholly taken up with his love." Cf. Hor. Sat. I. ix. 2, "Nescio quid meditans nugarum, totus in illis."—Unum quicquid, quod erit bellissimum, &c., "I'll pick out all and each of the nicest sweets." Cargo is used thus, in Martial. iii. 13. 1, "Non vis leporem, dum non vis carpere nullum." "Bellus," as an adjective, is applied often to the sweetmeats, or second course, of the Romans. Hence the word, "bellaria," "confections."

52. Cyathos sorbilans, "In sipping my cups." The "cyathus" was one-twelfth of a sextarius, see Hor. Od. III. xix. 12, "Tribus aut novem Miscentur cyathis pocula commodis." For the sense of producam here, h. e., "lengthen out," "spin out," cf. Martial. Epig. II. 89, 1—2, "Quod nimio gaudes noctem producere vino, Ignosco." The cyathus appears usually to have been tossed off at a gulp. Hence we see the leisurely style of enjoyment which the slave promises himself, in sorbilans and producam.

ACTUS IV.—Sc. III.

Micio and Hegio have met in the Forum; and on the former having been acquainted with the connection between Æschius and Pamphila, he has promised Hegio that the girl shall have justice. Hegio persuades Micio to go with him to Sostrata, and make it clear to her that it is only on behalf of his brother Ctesipho, that Æschinus has at all interfered in the affair of the music-girl.

Metre: Iambic Tetrameter.

1. Ego in hac re, &c. Compare similar modest refusals of undue praise, in Andr. II. i. 30, "Chariue, neutiquam," &c.; Plaut. Trinumm. V. ii. 5, "Non videor meruisse laudem; culpā caruisse arbitror." For nisi si, in v. 5, cf. Andr. I. v. 13, "Nisi si id est, quod suspicor," note.

4. Sibi fieri injuriam ultro, &c. — expostules, "That a gratuitous injury is done them, if you expostulate with them about a wrong which they themselves have done you; and who furthermore go on to accuse you. Expostules, the reading of the C. Bembin., is to be adopted without hesitation. For instances of ultro, similarly used, see Audr. I. i. 73, note. Parry aptly quotes Eunuchus I. i. 22—5; Phorm. II. iii. 13; Plaut. Menæchm. 272.

6. Aliter atque es, "Other than you are." Cf. Madvig. Gr. § 444, b. In Ter. Phorm. Prol. 31, we have "ne simili utamur fortunā atque usi sumus." At v. 9, Bentley proposed "Suspicionem hanc propter fratrem esse; ejus esse illam psaltriam." But the common reading may stand.—Opus est facto. Cf. Madvig., § 266, obs.; Key, § 1280; Audr. III. ii. 10, note; Heaut. I. i. 28, note.

11. Relevabis. Bentley reads "relevaris," for the sake of uniformity of tense with "functus fueris"; but this is nowise necessary.—Tabescit, "languishes," cf. Cicero Catil. II. iv.; Plaut. Captiv. I. ii. 30, "Tuo mœrore maceror — et tabesco miser."

14. Quibus res sunt minus secundæ. "Minus secundæ" is an euphemism for "miseræ." In v. 15, Ad contumeliam omnia accipiunt magis= "They take everything in the light of an affront, more" ("than other men," sc.). Westerhov. illustrates "ad contumeliam" by Phædrus Fab. III. viii. 8, "Accipiens (quid enim?) cuncta in contumeliam."

16. Impotentium, "poverty," "want of means." Ruhnken refers to Cic. pro. Muræn., c. 28, "Valeant hæc omnia ad salutem innocentium, ad opem impotentium, ad auxilium calamitosorum."—Semper credunt neglegi. Such is the reading of many MSS. But the Bembine has "claudier" (cf. Andr. III. iii. 41), which yields little sense, and for which Faeru proposed "calvier" a very rare word (= to be deceived); and Bentley, "ludier." This last is the best emendation. But "neglegi" may well be retained. Editors quote a fragment of Menander—

πρὸς ἄπαντα δειλόν ἔστιν δὲ πένης πράγματα καὶ πάντας αὐτοῦ καταφρονεῖν ὑπολαμβάνει.

17. Te ipsum purgare ipsis coram placabilius est, "To excuse yourself in their presence, is a plan most fitting to appease them." Verhals in "bilis" are sometimes active in signification as here; cf. Madvig. sect. 185, b. i. The word "placabilius" is so used again in Phœrin. V. viii.

68. The Bembine C. read here "ipxi coram," in which case "ipxi" would refer to the mother, and "coram" would be used adverbially. For the dative, after "purgare," see Hecyr. V. iv. 31.

ACTUS IV.—Sc. IV.

ÆSCHINUS enters in great distress at having learned the suspicions, which Pamphila and her mother entertain of him, from the old woman who was sent for a nurse. He could not explain himself to the old woman, for fear of compromising his brother. But now he blames himself for not having asked his father's leave to marry Pamphila, at first. He determines, however, to go and see Sostrata, and is about to enter, when the door opens, and the scene ends.

1. Discrucior animi, "I am tortured in mind." For this use of the genitive, cf. Madvig. Gr. § 296, 3., obs. 3; Plaut. Aul. H. G. 66; Mil. G. III. i. 125, "Continuo excruciarer animi." Rubenken observes, that "objici" in v. 2, is properly used of "malum;" cf. Hec. III. i. 6, "Objectus labos;" Phorm. III. ii. 18, "Tum hoc esse mi objectum malum;" Virg. Æn. ii. 200, "Aliud inajus miseris multoque tremendum Objicitur."—De improviso, cf. Andr. II. ii. 23; Heant. II. iii. 40.

5. Obstipuit, cf. note on Andr. I. v. 21; Plaut. Pæn. I. ii. 48, "Quid hic, malum, Astans obstipuisti." With "consistere" in v. 5, Westerhov. compares Virg. Æn. i. 643, "Neque enim patrius consistere mentem Passus amor."—Me ex hac expediam turbā, "How shall I extricate myself from this trouble?" or "scrape." For "expediam," see note at Andr. III. v. 11.

7. Suspicio de me incidit ("illis," sc.). Comp. Andr. II. ii. 22, "Ex ipsâ re mi incidit suspicio," and Andr. III. ii. 21.

9. Id anus mi indicium fecit, "The old woman has made that clear to me." "Indicium fecit" is, i. q., "indicavit," as in Aulul. Plaut. 145 and 625, II. G.; q. v.

13. Abi, abi. Expressions of scorn and reprobation. Cf. Phorm. I. ii. 9, "Abi sis, insciens."—Satis dia dedisti verba. Cf. notes on Andr. I. iii. 6; Plaut. Men. II. G. 55; Aulul. 23, H. G. Construe, "You have deceived us long enough."—Nos frustratast fides. Cf. Andr. II. ii. 37, "Jam me spes hæc frustratast."

14. Valeas: habcas illam, &c., "Away with you! Have her you fancy." Æschinus is uttering the words of Cauthara. Here, as in Andr. IV. ii. 12, "Valeant qui inter nos," &c.; and V. iii. 18, ibid., "valeas" is, i. q., "abcas in malam rem." See notes on Andr. I. c.

—Me reprehendi, “I checked myself.” A secondary use of “reprehendo” derived from its first meaning, viz., “to lay hands on, and hold back anything.” Cf. Ad. Prol. 14, “Locum repressum;” Plaut. Trin. III. i. 23, “Ille reprehendit hunc priorem pallio;” Phædrus. V. viii. 4, “Elapsum semel Non ipse possit Jupiter reprehendere.”—Ac fieret palam (sc. “ne”). Compare Heaut. IV. iii. 43, “Rem facias palam;” Hecyr. I. ii. 30, “Ne id fiat palam.”

18. Quod minime opus est Usquam efferri: ac mitto, “A tale which ought by no means to get abroad,” “so let it pass!” Parry following most editors, reads, “id quidem” for quod, which last Bentley preferred. For efferri in this sense, compare above III. ii. 41, “Nunc si hoc palam proferimus;” Phorm. V. viii. 65, “Vides tuom peccatum esse elatum foras.”—Fieri potis est ut ne quā exeat, “It’s just possible that it may not get wind in any quarter.” Ruhnken illustrates this use of “exeat” by Cornel. Nep. Datam. c. 6, “Si in turbam exisset.”

19. Tot concurrunt verisimilia. Cf. Andr. III. ii. 31, “Multa concurrunt simul;” Heaut. II. ii. 3, “Concurrunt multæ opiniones,” &c. In v. 21, ut eo seems to strengthen mea, “I own that these things occur through my fault, and mine only.” Cf. Andr. III. iii. 47, note.—Ut ut erat gesta, “Be it as it might,” Colman. For “Ut ut” so used, cf. Heaut. I. ii. 26, “Ut ut erat mansum tamen oportuit;” Adelph. II. ii. 40.

23. Cessatum usque adhuc est, “I’ve been lazy up to this point.”—Nunc porro, Æschine, expurgiscere, “Now, Æschinus, from this time rouse yourself.” Westerhov. quotes Plaut. Asin. II. i. 1, “Hercle vero, Libane, nunc te melius expurgiscier.” For “porro” in this sense, cf. Andr. Prol. 22, “Dehinc ut quiescant porro.”

25. Horresco semper, &c., “I’m always in a trembling, when I begin knocking at these doors, wretch as I am.” Compare Eun. I. ii. 4, “Tremo, horreoque postquam aspexi hauc.” Pulso = “to knock at a door from the outside.” Concrepuit foris, is said of knocking from the inside, a common custom with Greek doors, which opened outwards, and were therefore knocked by comers-out, to warn passers-by; cf. Andr. IV. i. 59, note.—Aperite aliquis actutum ostium, “Some one open the door forthwith.” Parry illustrates this construction, (in which “aliquis,” being used distributively, takes a plural verb) by Plaut. Men. IV. ii. 115, (576, Hildyard), “Aperito atque Erotium aliquis evocate ante ostium,” and by Soph. Ajax, 964. Compare also, Epid. 390, “Exite hic aliquis;” Mercat. 129, “Aperite aliquis;” Pseudol. V. i. 37. —Concedam huc. Cf. Heaut. I. i. 121, “Huc concessero.”

ACTUS IV.—Sc. V.

MICIO, from the house, meets Æschinus just entering, and to play off his nephew, who has concealed his love from him, coins a story, “that a friend of his, as nearest of kin to the young woman dwelling here, is about to marry her, according to the Athenian law, and take her to Miletus. Sostrata, it is true, pretends that her daughter has a child by some one else, but that’s an excuse.” Æschinus, in the excess of trouble, confesses his love affair; and Micio, after a gentle reproof of his concealment, bids him get ready to bring home his wife.

2, 3, 45—72. Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

4—44. Iambic Trimeter.

73—8. Iambic Tetrameter Catalectic.

4. Quid huic hic negotist? “Aside,” to the audience. Ludo, h. e., “illudo,” as in Heaut. IV. vi. 20, “Ludis fortasse mo.”—Melius est, “I had better do so.” Cf. note on Adel. II. i. 26, above.

9. Erubuit: salvu rest est, “He blushes: ‘tis all right.” Donatus quotes from Andr. V. iii. 7, “Vide num ejus color pudoris signum usquam indicat,” of one supposed to be very hardened, and Westerhov. quotes from Meuander, ‘Ερυθριῶν πᾶς χρηστός εἶναι μοι δοκεῖ. In Eun. II. ii. 37, we find, “Salva res” as here. See also Plaut. Rudens, IV. iii. 98, “Euge, salva res est, præda hæc perpetua est mea.” In v. 10, Fleckeisen reads, “Nil est mihi quidem.”

12. Huc advocatione sibi, “as an assistant” or “witness.” See a parallel use of the word in Eun. II. iii. 48, “Advocatus mane mihi esse ut meminerit.” See, too, below at v. 42 of this scene, “Advorsumne illum causam dicere,” and Plaut. Menæchm. (Hildyard) 700, “Non equidem mihi te advocatione, pater, adduxi.”

14. Ut opinor has non nosse te, et certe scio. This line seems to depend on “pauperculae” in the last verse: “Certain women in poor circumstances, so that I suppose you don’t know them: indeed (et) I am very sure of it.” We are inclined to adopt Bentley’s “ut opiner,” i. e. “adeo ut.” This seems more probable than the supposition that “ut opinor” is dependent on “pauperculae,” and parenthetic. Gronovius illustrates this mode of assertion (“cum quasi primum dubitavimus, et inter loquendum re considerata certius aliquid affirmamus”) by Cic. ad Att. vi. ep. 3, 2: “Cicero puer legit (ut opinor et certe) epistolam inscriptam patri.” “Et” is used emphatically. Goveanus reads, as does Madame Dacier—

“Opinor has non nōsse te, at et certo scio.”

18. Huic leges cogunt nubere hanc. Westerhov. refers to Numbers xxxvi. 6 (concerning the daughters of Zelophelad), for evidence of a like custom among the Israelites. For its existence at Athens, compare Andr. I. i. 43, note; and Phorm. I. ii. 45—47 and 75; II. iii. 63.—Nil: recte: perge (exclamations indicative of one endeavouring to disguise his feelings and feign indifference), “Nothing! All right! Proceed!” Hecyr. III. ii. 20, “Recte, mater;” Heaut. III. ii. 7, “Recte equidem.”

21. Animo male est: “I’m ill at ease.” Plaut. Amph. V. i. 6, “Animo male est, aquam velim.” In this passage, as in Curcul. II. iii. 33, (quoted by Parry, “Animo male est—Vin aquam?”), there seems to be a reference to fainting.—Quid illas censes? (dicere posse, sc.) “What think you they’d say?” See note on Andr. V. ii. 12, and Gronovius on that passage.—Nil enim, “Why, nothing!” “Euim”=“enimvero.” Cf. note on Andr. III. ii. 23, “Certe enim scio.”

25. Priorem esse illum, “That he has the prior right” (“jure tori,” Stalbaum).

26. Postea, “After all.” Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. III. ii. 31, “An tibi malam rem vis pro maledictis dari postea," where, however, Hildyard (398, H.) reads with Bothe "posce" instead of "postea."

30. Dicendum magis aperte, illiberaliter, "And, to speak more plainly, ungenerously." With this form of speech, compare Andr. II. vi. 23, "Et quod dicendum hic siet. Tu quoque perparce nimium." In v. 32, Qui cum illa consuerit prior, "With whom she lived before." Parry takes "illa" as the nominative, and "quicum" as the ablative, comparing Ter. Hecyr. IV. i. 40, "Quacum tot consuessed annos." Add to this Phorm. V. vi. 34, "Cum ejus consuevit olim matre in Lesbo clanculum." Some editors omit "cum." For the phrase "haud scio an," cf. Andr. III. ii. 45, note.

34. Præsens præsenti eripi, "Snatched from him before his face." For this collocation of the adjectives, compare Virg. Æn. iv. 83, "Illum absens absentem auditque videtque;" Terence, Heeyr. III. ii. 15, "Continuo sola soli;" Ibid. IV. i. 42, "Solum solus conveni." For the dative after "eripere," cf. Key's Gr. § 973.—Facinus indignum, "'Tis a disgraceful piece of business." Cf. Andr. V. ii. 13, note, "Immo vero indignum," &c.

37. Cui quando nupsit? "To whom was she wedded, and when?" There is no need, as Stalbaum shows, of any stop at "cui;" the sentence is a twofold interrogation.—Anctor his rebus quis est? "Who sanctioned these proceedings?" For this sense of "auctor," cf. Plaut. Aulul. 207, H. G., "Auctor sum;" Eun. V. vi. 12, "Te auctore."—Alienam, i. e. one virtually betrothed to another, as next of kin.

39, 40. Dum cognatus hinc Illinc veniret, &c. "Waiting till a kinsman should come from some quarter or other." Hinc was Bentley's emendation for "huc." For "grandem," (natu, sc.) cf. Plaut. Aul. H. G. 116, "Grandior natu;" 148, "Grandem virginem."—Sedere in v. 38 is, i. q. "to linger," or "sit inactive." Compare Plaut. Aulul. 34, H. G., "Quasi claudus sutor domi sedet totos dies." In an old inscription the compound "domiseda" occurs.

41. Et id defendere, "And to have maintained that line of argument." Such appears to be the force of these doubtful words. Westerhov., however, explains "defendere" to mean here "prohibere," h. e. to have averted this issue, viz. that the kinsman should intervene. But the former meaning is best.

42. Advorsumne illum . . . adrocatuſ. "What, plead against him, to befriend whom I had come." For "advocatus," see above at v. 12. For "causam dicerem," see Plant. Menæchm. 700, 701; Hildyard, "Te advocatum, pater, adduxi, sed viro. Hinc stas: illius causam dicis." See note, ibid.—Quid nobis cum illos? Cf. above, II. i. 23, "Quid tibi rei mecumst?" Heaut. IV. iv. 20, "Etiamne tecum hic mihi res est?" and see note, ibid.

45. Quid lacrumas! "Wherefore weep you?" For this acc. see Key's Gr. § 909.—Curæ sunt mihi. Cf. Madvig. Gr. § 249; Key, 984.

47. Promerentem, h. e. "beno mereutem." Cf. Virg. Æn. iv. 333, "Nunquam, regina, negabo, promeritam." In Plautus (e. g. at Menæchm. H. G. 880) "Promeritum" is used in a bad sense, though at 965 and 998 it is used "in bonam partem." Donatus, on Terenco Hecyra III. v. 37, says that "mereri" (cf. Andr. II. i. 31) and "promereri ad bona," and "commereri ad mala referre."—Me hoc delictum admisisse in me "That I have committed this fault." So in Phorm.

II. i. 40, "Culpam in se admiserit." See also Plaut. Men. H. G. 614; Aulul. 747, H. G.; Hor. Ep. I. xvi. 53, "In nihil admittes in te formidine pœnae."

49. Me tui pudet, "I am ashamed in reference to you," Cf. Heaut. II. iii. 18, 19, "Cujus nunc pudet me et miseret." In v. 50, indiliens is "careless," "reckless." Gronovius shows that it is the opposite of "diligens," an epithet proper in the language of the jurisconsults to "patresfamilias." — Indiligenter occurs in Phorm. V. iii. 5; and in Plaut. Mostell. I. ii. 23, we find "nequam homo diligensque." For tandem in v. 51, cf. Andr. III. ii. 12 (notes); and Plaut. Men. H. G. 614.

56. In this verse qua is, i. q. "qua ratione;" in v. 57, it is equivalent to "per quos," and, as Donatus observes, all the clauses depend on "numquid circumspexit." — Hæc dum dubitas. For this acc. after an intrausitative verb, cf. Key's Gr. 893; Madvig. § 223, c.

59. Dormienti hæc tibi confecturos deos? "That the gods would bring to pass these things for you if you remained inactive." For this sense of "dormienti," cf. Plant. Curc. I. ii. 67; Heaut. IV. iv. 8, "Dormiunt: ego pol istos commovebo;" Phorm. V. ix. 18, "Filiam Suscepit jam unam, dum tu dormis." Lindenbrog quotes Menander, Αυτόματα γὰρ τὰ πράγματα ἐπὶ τὸ συμφέρον ρεῖ, καν καθευδῆσῃ. — Deductum iri, "Would be conducted home to her husband." Cf. Ter. Heeyr. I. ii. 60, "Uxorem deductum domum;" Plaut. Mil. G. III. i. 91, "Nam bona uxor si ea deducta est usquam cuiquam gentium."

61. Cæterarum rerum te socordem, "I would not have you be careless as to other matters." For this genitive after an adjective, cf. Key's Gr. § 932; Madvig. § 289, b.; Ovid. Trist. I. i. 49, "Securus famæ;" Cic. pro Quintio, 3, "Cæterarum rerum et prudens et attentus." With miscre — cupio in v. 64, cf. above, IV. i. 6, "Misere nimis cupio."

65. Deos comprecare, "Offer prayers to the gods" (presiding over wedlock). Religious rites were deemed essential to the due solemnisation of a marriage. Westerhov. refers to Aulul. 534, where Megadorus, before marriage with Euclio's daughter, says, "Eo lavatum ut sacrificem." For quantum potest, see Andr. V. ii. 20, note.

68. Quam oculos, &c. Cf. Catull. iii. 4, "Quem plus illa oculis suis amabat;" ibid. xiv. 1, "Ni te plus oculis meis amarem." See also Hildyard's Glossary Menæchm. 593, where Psalm xvii. 8, φύλαξθν με ὡς κόρην ὀφθαλμοῦ, "Preserve me as the pupil of an eye," is quoted; and King Lear, Act I. ii. "Dearer than eyesight." — Perbenigne, "I'm much obliged to you;" a form of thanks, for parallels to which see Hor. Epist. I. vii. 16, "At tu quantum vis tolle. Benigne;" Phorm. V. ix. 62, "Benigne dicis."

69. Abiit, periit, navem ascendit. A case of ὑστέρον πρωτερον. See for a parallel, Plaut. Rudens, II. ii. 19, "Leno abiit scelestus exulatum: In navem ascendit." Ruhnken explains "periit," "abiit ut nesciamus ubi locorum sit." It seems to mean "he has vanished." In the words tu potius deos comprecare, commentators note a proper deference to his elders on the part of Æschinus, and compare Virg. Æn. ii. 717: "Tu, genitor, cape sacra manu, patriosque peuates."

71. Quo vir melior multo es quam ego. Fleckeisen here reads "Quom" for "quo," ingeniously, but not necessarily; for "eo" is often understood in the antecedent clause, as here with "obtemperaturos magis;"

(see Stalbauni ad loc.) Construe, "For I'm very sure, that they will hear your prayer all the more, in proportion as you are a far better man than I." Ruhnken illustrates the sentiment here expressed by Ovid. Met. viii. 724, "Cura pii Dis sunt, et qui coluere coluntur."

72. Quæ opus sunt. Cf. Andr. II. i. 37, "Nisi ea quæ uil opus sunt sciri," and note thereon.—Quid hoc est negoti! "Why! what a marvel's this!" Surprise and commendation, as Donatus notes, are implied here.

74. Qui magis morem gereret, "How could he humour me more, if he were my brother," &c. For "morem gerere" thus used, see above, at III. iii. 75, note; Plaut. Menæch. H. G. 690, "Morem geras;" Eun. I. ii. 108.

75. Gestandus in sinu est. This metaphor is common to all languages. Westerhov. refers to Hom. Il. vi. 135, and to Cic. ad Fam. xiv. 4. But no editor seems to have noted the parallel in Shake-peare's Hamlet, Act III. scen. ii.—

"Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay in my heart of hearts
As I do thee."

In v. 76, Bentley suggested "injicit," which is adopted by Zenne and Fleckeisen. For commoditate, h. e. "obsequio," cf. Heaut. III. ii. 10, note, "Mulier comoda," Adelph. V. ii. 8, below.

78. Ne moræ meis nupliis egomet siem? Cf. Madvig. Gr. §. 249.

ACTUS IV.—Sc. VI.

DEMEA returns weary from a fruitless search for his brother. He complains of his disappointment, but is resolved to wait at his doors for his return.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Cum tua, &c., "May Great Jove confound you along with your directions." For "cum," thus used, cf. Andr. V iv. 38, "Dignus es, Cum tuā religione, odium." And for "ut," used as "utinam," cf. Heaut. IV. vi. 6, "Ut te quidein—perduint." See notes, ibid.

3. Perreptari usque omne oppidum, "I have crawled all the town over." Compare Plaut. Amphit. IV. i. 3, "Nam omnes plateas perreptavi," &c. Indeed the whole of this short scene seems to have been suggested by that passage of the Amphitryo, and by his Epidicus, Act II. Sc. ii. 13—16. "Perrepto" is properly used here of an old man's slow pace. Cf. Hor. Sat. I. v. 25, "Millia tum pransi tria repimus."

6. Certum obsidere est, "Now I'm determined to stick at his house, even till his return." "Obsidere," according to Gronovius, is "se-dendo diu perseverare." He quotes for this neuter sense, Plaut. Pœnul. Prolog. 23, "Servi ne obsideant, liberis ut sit locus," and Iseu-dol. III. ii. 18, "Hoc ego fui hodie solus obsessor fort." The verb is more commonly active, as in Livy III. v., "Qui armati Aventinum ob-sedissent."

ACTUS IV.—SC. VII.

MICIO, coming forth from his house, is assailed by Demea with reproaches, on account of the new iniquities of Aeschinus, whose intrigue with Pamphila is a graver business than the affair of the music-girl. Micio tells him that all is right. The young people are to marry, and live with him; and the music-girl will also remain with him. Demea waxes more wroth, and deems his brother, and all belonging to him, utterly hopeless.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Illis, i. e. Sostrata and her daughter.—Nullam esse in nobis moram. So Virgil. Ecl. iii. 52, “In me mora non erit ulla.”—Quidnam, “What is it, pray?” or “wherefore (propter quid), pray?” Fero, says Donatus, flagitia and ingentia, indicate the gravity of the charges he has to make. For “fero,” used of bearing important news, compare, with Westerhov. Phorm. V. vi. 17, “Quod fers cedo,” and Heaut. III. i. 18; Andr. V. ii. 17, in which places “adporto” is so used. Boni is, of course, used ironically.

4. Ecce autem, “See now then!” For this exclamation, used of something sudden, or unexpected, see Adelph. I. ii. 73, note above; Hecyr. III. v. 53, and Plaut. Menæch. 687, II. G., “Ecce autem litigium;” Eun. II. iii. 6, “Ecce autem alterum.”—Nova in Zeune, Stalbaum, Parry, and other editions, is in the mouth of Demea. Fleckeisen takes it with “Ecce autem” with much probability. “See now, here are new charges!”—Demea rejoins, “ay, capital charges.” For “capitalia,” see Cicero. pro Rabir. c. 9, “Fraudem capitalem,” h. e. “propter quam capite puniendus sit,” according to Ulpian.—Ohe jum, “Enough! enough!” Compare Aulul. Plaut. H. G. 16, “Etiam nunc! etiam! ohe;” Hor. Sat. II. v. 96; I. v. 12, “Trecentos inseris! Ohe. Jam satis est.”

6. Somnias, “idly dream.” Cf. Plaut. Menæch. 304, H. G. Ter. Andr. V. vi 7. “Num ille somniat,” &c.—Virginem cirem. Cf. Plaut. Menæch. 3, H. G., “Homines captivos;” and Ter. Andr. V. i. 9, “Homini adolescentulo;” IV. iv. 16, “Mulier meretrix.”

9. Non clamas? Non insanis? “Don’t you cry out, or complain? Don’t you run mad?” Cf. for “clamo” in this sense, Adelph. I. ii. 11; III. iii. 26, and for “insanis,” see IV. ii. 22. At malim quidem, Bentley and others suppose a break or interruption of Micio’s words.—Di bene revertant, “Heaven bless it!” Cf. Plaut. Aulul. (H.) 213, “Istuc dii bene vortant.” Ibid. 228. Virgo is used occasionally in a wide acceptation, e. g. Hor. Od. II. viii. 23, “Virgines nuptæ” (cf. Puella, ibid. III. xiv. 10); Virg. Ecl. vi. 47, “Ah virgo infelix,” said of Pasiphæ.

11. Ducenda indotata est? Such was the alternative, unless death were preferred, in Athenian law. See Plaut. Aulul. 748—51 (Hildyard), and 715, and the notes on both passages.—Res ipsa fert, “The nature of the case, or the circumstance suggests.”

14. Istocine pacto oportet (nuptias fieri, sc.)—Ipsā re, “In reality,” in very truth. In prose we find “reipsā” very commonly.—Tibi istuc dolet, “That grieves you.” Cf. Key’s Grammar, §. 872, 1; Adelph. IV. vii. 36, below.—Simulare certe est hominis, “Surely ‘tis a man’s duty to feign (grief) at it." As Parry well observes, Demea uses "homo" for a "man of right feeling," Micio for a man of "kind feeling."

17. Res compositast, "The affair is settled." Cf. Phorm. IV. iii. 17, "Hæc potius cum bonâ Ut componiantur gratiâ quam cum malâ"—Hæc magis sunt hominis, h. e. "Of a man of kind feeling." Cf. Heaut. I. i. 25, "Homo sum," &c. With the sentiment of v. 20, cf. Hor. Od. I. xxiv. 19, "Durum sed levius fit patientiâ," &c.

21. Ita vitast hominum, &c. Lindenbrog compares Alexis apud Stobæum—τοιοῦτο τὸ ζῆν ἐστὶν ὥσπερ οἱ κύβοι οὐ ταῦτ' ἀεὶ πίπτουσιν, οὐδὲ τῷ βίῳ ταῦτὸν διαμένει σχῆμα· μεταβολὰς δ' ἔχει.

—Maxime opus est jactu. Cf. Key's Grammar, §. 1280. Construe, "If the throw, most needed by you, turns not up, take care to mend by skill the throw that has chanced to you." Compare Cæsar B. C. iii. 73, quoted by Lindenbrog. "Si non omnia caderent secunda, fortunam esse industriâ sublevandam." Cf. also, Hor. Sat. II. viii. 85, "Arte Emendaturus fortunam."—Corrector, "A fine mender you are!" (ironically). Nempe, "to wit," or "for example" (ironically). Cf. Andria III. v. 12, "Nempe ut modo."

25. Minæ Pro psaltriâ périere, "By this skill of yours, twenty pounds have been lost to you on the music-girl." Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 123, "Quatuor minæ Periere plane."—Quantum potest (sc. celerrimè), "with all speed." Cf. Andr. V. ii. 20, note, Menæchm. H. G. 340.—Aliquo abjiciendast, si non pretio, gratis, "Must be thrown away in some quarter or other, if not for a price, for nothing." "Abjicere," says Gronovius, is, i. q. "vili vendere." Cf. Plaut. Mostell. III. iii. 3, "Nunquam ædepol me scio Vidisse usquam abjectas ædes, nisi modo hasce;" Seneca de Pœncl. i. 1, "Qui beneficium aut superbe abjecit, aut iratus impegit," &c.; iv. 29, "Stipem æris abjecti."

28. Quid igitur facies? Bentley read "Quid illâ igitur facies?" Fleckeisen suggests, "Quid igitur faciet." Both are needless. When in v. 30 Micio says, Cur non, we must bear in mind that he is trying to shield Ctesiphon; or he might have given a direct answer.

31. Ita me dî ament, ut, &c., "So help me Heaven, such is my view of your folly, I believe," &c. For the phrase, "Ita me," &c., cf. Plant. Men. 195, "Dii te amabunt;" Heaut. III. i. 54, IV. vi. 6, note; Andr. V. iv. 44, notes.—Ut video—ineptiam, seems to be parenthetic, as in Heaut. IV. viii. 29, "Næ tu propediem, ut istam rem video, istius obscuraberc."—Facturum (tc, sc.) credo, &c., "I believe you will bring it to pass, that you will have a companion to sing with."

34. Tu inter eas restim ductans, &c., "You will dance between them, joiuing hands." "In saltatione restim ducere dicuntur chorū puerorum puellarumque manus conserti," Cooper's Thesaurus in voc. According to Lindenbrog and other commentators it is i. q. κόρδακα τάκειν, which occurs in Aristoph. Nub. 540 (cf. Smith's Dict. G. and R. A., p. 277 b.), and if so, it implies here a licentious familiarity between Micio and the partners in the supposed dance. Gronovius illustrates the passage by Hor. Epist. I. x. 48, "Tortum digna sequi potius quam ducere funem;" and Plaut. Pœn. Prol. 116, "Jaanne hoc tenetis? Si tenetis ducite: Cave diruimpatis;" and III. i. 63 ibid., where there is a similar metaphor from the rope which those who danced in the ring held.

36. Non te hæc pudent? Cf. Adelph. I. ii. 4, "Quem neque pudet Quicquam," and see Key's Grammar, 872, 1. In the next verse, Fleckeisen reads istam for the usual istane, and "ita ut hodie decet," for "ita uti decet," the common reading. There seems reason and force in the introduction of "hodie."

38. Hilarum, &c., "Make yourself glad and hearty." For the ancient use of "hilarus" for "hilaris" see Madvig. §. 59, obs. 3. Similar adjectives are imberbus, imberbis, inermus, inermis, &c. "Hilarus" occurs in Plaut. Pers. V. i. 8, "Unde ego omnes hilaros, libentes, lactificantes faciam ut fiant." In v. 39, redeo is i. q. "redibo." Cf. Menæchm. Plaut. H. G. 148.

42. Adulescens luxu perditus. Valkenaeer quotes this passage at St. Luke xv. 13, διεσκόρπισε τὴν οὐσίαν αὐτοῦ, ζῶν ἀσώτως. With this last word compare the words "salus," and "servare," in v. 43, 44. In v. 43, Senex delirans, "a doting old man," see Phorm. V. ix. 8, Delirat miser Timore; Plaut. Epid. III. iii. 11, "Profecto deliramus interdum scnes." Salus, a goddess, at Rome, as Tyieia with the Greeks. Cf. Plaut. Capt. III. iii. 14, "Neque jam Salus servare, si volt, me potest;" Mostell. II. i. 4, "Nec Salus nobis saluti jam esse, si cupiat, potest;" Cic. Verr. iii. 57, "Quo ex judicio te ulla Salus servari posset."

ACTUS V.—Sc. I.

SYRUS enters, in liquor, from the house of Micio: and stumbles upon Demea: whose wrath is still further aroused by this confirmation of his last words:—Syrus pays little heed to him, and treats him, as a man in his cups would treat another, to some advice.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Aedepol. Cf. Ad. III. i. 2, "Recte ædepol spero;" and Menæchm. 16, H. G. Gellius says that men and women alike use the oath "ædepol," women only "Mecastor," and men only, "Mehercule." For the diminutive Syrisce, "Syrus, my boy!" compare Plaut. Casin. III. vi. 14, "Olympisce mi," addressed to Olympio.—Te curasti molliter, "You've taken special care of yourself." So Hor. Epist. I. iv. 15, "Bene curatā cute;" I. ii. 29, "In cute curandā plus aequo operata juventus;" Plaut. Pæn. III. iii. 80, "Ubi ego eurer mollius, Quam regi Antiocho oculi curari solent."—Lauteque munus administrasti tuum, "And have nicely discharged your province," or "fulfilled your task," i. e., "of filling his stomach." Westerhov. compares with this comic use of "munus administrare," Plaut. Captiv. IV. iii. 7, "Nunc ibo ad prefecturam, ut jus dicam larido."—Abi. Cf. above, IV. ii. 25, note. Postquam. Cf. Adelph. Prol. I.

4. Prodeambulare, a rare use of two prepositions united in composition. Cf. Virg. Georg. iii. 256, "Et pede prosubigit terram." So in Valerius Flacc. IV. 288, and Prudentius, Peristeph. iii. 129, we find "prosubigit."—Sis = si vis, Plaut. Aul. 7, Menæch. 264, H. G.; Ter. Heaut. I. ii. 38.—Ecce autem. Cf. above, IV. vii. 4.—Quid tu es tristis, Key's Gr. §. 873.

7. Ohe jam, "Hold! enough, there!" Compare above, IV. vii. 5. The punctuation of Fleckeisen seems right here; the colon being placed after jam.—Sapientia, "old wiseacre," the abstract for the concrete, as "arma" for "armati;" scelus (in v. 6) for "scelest." This is better than taking sapientia as the acc. neut. plur. agreeing with "verba."—Tu si meus essem—Such is Bentley's reading, preferable to the usual reading of editions, "Tun', si meus essem?" Syrus interrupts Demea's remark, which is concluded in 9 and 10.

9. Tuam rem constabilisses, "You would be rich and would have established your fortunes." Cf. Plant. Capt. II. iii. 92—93, "Edepol rem meam constabilivi." Cicero Philipp. xi. 2, "Rem familiarem constitusses." Exemplo for exemplum, is the reading of the Codex Bezae.—In ipsa turbâ, "In the very midst of this disturbance." As Westerhov. remarks, "sedatum" is properly applied to "turbâ," as well as "peccatum;" though of course grammatically it is only connected with the latter.

13. Quasi re bene gestâ, "As if matters had been well and successfully managed." A military metaphor, cf. Virg. Æn. ix. 157, "Quod superest, leti bene gestis corpora rebus Procurate, viri;" Plaut. Amphit. II. ii. 23, "Re gestâ bene Victis hostibus, quos nemo posse superari ratu'st."—Nollem huc exitum, "I would I had not come forth hither." Cf. above, II. i. 11, "Nollem factum;" Heaut. I. ii 26, "Mansum tamen oportuit." "Nolim exitum," would mean, "I should be sorry to have gone out." "Nollem exitum," "I could have wished I had not," &c. Cf. Key's Gram. §. 1221. "Nollem" refers to "past time," or to "what is now impossible."

ACTUS V.—Sc. II.

DROMO, Ctesiphon's servant, most unluckily breaks in upon Syrus and Demea, with a message from Ctesiphon to Syrus. Demea's suspicions are roused, and though the slaves vainly try to stop him, he forces his way into the house.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

4. Parasitaster parvulus is the reading of some MSS. and editions. But Bentley restores from the C. Bemb., "paululus," which is used of "stature," while "parvulus" is more properly used of "age." "Tis some other Ctesiphon, a wretched little parasite." "Parasitaster" is a Greek diminutive, as is "Syriscus," in V. i. 1 above. See Key's Gram., §. 209.—Nostin? "Don't you know him?"—Jam scibo, "I'll soon know who he is?" For the form scibo, see Madvig. Gr. 115, c.; Adelph. III. iii. 7; Menæch. Plaut. H. G. 295, &c.—Mitte me! "Let me go!" or "hands off!" Cf. Heaut. V. i. 74, "Mitte: sine me in hac re gerere mihi morem."

6. Non manum abstines, mastigia! “Won’t you keep your hands off, scoundrel?” “Abstines” is the present for the future, Plaut. Menæch. 148, &c. Mastigia (th. μαστίξ), “one that is always being flogged.” It occurs in Cœrule. Plaut. IV. iv. 11.—Cerebrum dispergam hic. Cf. above, at III. ii. 19, “Ut cerebro dispergat viam.” Seo note. Bentley reads “dispergant” from the Bembine Codex; others, “dispergi.”

8. Edepol comissatorem haud sane commodum. An exclamation like this is often placed in the accusative without any verb to govern it, e. g. Act. IV. vii. 40. Construe, “In faith, not a very pleasant fellow-reveller.” “Comissator” is derived from κῶμος. Cf. Eun. III. i. 52, “Phædriam intromittamus Comissatum.” Westerhov. quotes from Menauder—δ σκληρὸς ἀνήρ ἐστιν ἐν νέοις γέρων.

10. Hæ silescant turbæ, “While this storm is blowing over.” Compare Plaut. Mil. G. II. vi. 100, “Dum hæ consilescent turbæ, atque ire leniunt.”

11. Edorniscam hoc villi, “Sleep off this bout of wine.” For “edorniscere” thus used with a case after it, cf. Plaut. Rudens, II. vii. 28, “Ut edorniscam hanc crapulam.” In a different sense Horace says, in Sat. II. iii. 61, “Fufius ebrius olim Cum Ilionam edormit.”—Villi from “villum,” is a diminutive of “vinum,” formed as “ullus” from “unus”; “asellus” from “asinus,” &c.

ACTUS V.—Sc. III.

DEMEA, re-entering from Micio’s house, meets him coming forth from Sostrata’s, and finishing a few words with her, expressive of all being ready for the marriage. He bursts out into a fierce tirade against his brother for having corrupted and spoiled both his sons, for he has just witnessed Ctesiphon’s falling-off. Micio replies, that he has found the money for the lads’ amusement, and that he will still do so. Time, he says, will mend their morals, and their natural dispositions are good. At any rate, he adds, smooth your brow to-day. Demea agrees, but vows he will make the music-girl scrub, when he gets her home to the farm.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

2. Quisnam a me pepulit, &c. For “a me” here, see Andr. IV. i. 59, note; Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. i. 76. See also above, IV. iv. 25, note. Here, as Ruhuken notes, “pepulit” is used in a rarer sense of one coming out, of which “crepo” or “concrepo” is more commonly used.—Quid clamem, cf. IV. vii. 9, note.

4. O cœlum! O terra! &c. Cf. Plaut. Trinumm. IV. iii. 63, “Mare, terra, cœlum, Di vostram fidein.” Donatus quotes Virg. Æn. ii. 745, “Quem non iucusavi amens hominumque Deorumque.” In v. 6, with succurrendumst, understand “Ctesiphoni.”

7. Corruptela nostrum liberum. Cf. above, II. i. 34, “Pernicies adolescentium.”—Ad te redi, “Be yourself again.” Cf. Andr. III. v.

16, "Sime—ad me redcam;" Heaut. V. i. 48, "Non sum apud me;" Andr. V. iv. 34, &c. In St. Luke's Gospel, xv. 17, we find εἰς ἐαυτὴν ἀλθῶν used in the same sense; and Kunoel there quotes this passage, and Lucret. iv. 994, "Donec discussis redeant erroribus."

10. Rem ipsam putemus, "Let us argue the matter in itself"—a metaphor from computations. Cf. Plaut. Aul. 482, H. G.; Ter. Eun. IV. ii. 4, "Dum hæc puto."—Adeo in ver. 11, strengthens ex te. Cf. Andr. III. iii. 47, note, "Tute adeo." Construe, "The suggestion arose from yourself."

13. Cur recipis meum? "Why do you harbour my boy?" So in Hecyr. V. i. 16, "Meum receptas filium ad te Pamphilum." "Receptores," says Ulpian, "non minus delinquent quam aggressores."—Numqui minus—quod mecum est tibi? "Is it anywise unfair that I should have the same rights as regards you, as you have as regards me?" Bentley reads "tecum" after jes idem, as being required by the antithesis. It is at any rate implied.

17. Non aequom dicis. DEM. Non? Such is the reading of Zeune, Parry, and Fleckeisen. Gronovius, Lindenbr., Westerhov., &c., read "Non aequom dicis: non," &c. Gronov. observes that the second non strengthens the negation, as in I. ii. 22, "Non est flagitium scortari adolescentulum; non est;" Catull. xiv. 16, "Non non hoc tibi, salse, sic abibit."—Communia esse amicorum, &c. Parry adduces Aristot. Polit. II. v. 6 (Congreve), Ethics, viii. 9. 1; ix. 8. 2, for the proverb κοινὰ τὰ τὰν φίλων. Cicero, in his Offices, i. 16, and De Legibus, i. 12, quotes the same proverb. The proverb is quoted by Westerhov. as from Menander. Cicero calls it "Illa Pythagorea vox."

19. Nunc demum, "At this late period." Micio, in Act I. scen. ii. had advocated a distinction of rights and responsibilities.—Aucusulta paucis, cf. Andr. I. i. 2, note.—Si te id mordet. Eun. III. i. 55, "Quod eam mordeat;" Virg. Æn. i. 261, "Quando hæc te cura remordet."—Sumptum filii quem faciunt. Attraction of antecedent to the case and clause of the relative. Cf. Madvig. Gr. § 319, obs. Andr. Prol. 3, note; Eunuchus IV. iii. 11, "Eunuchum quem dedisti nobis, quas turbas dedit."

23. Pro re tollebas tuā, "You bred them according to your station in life," or "as befitted your fortune." Cf. Heaut. V. i. 67, "Pro re nostrā."

26. Eandem illam antiquam rationem obtine, "Still stick to that good old plan." Cf. Andr. IV. v. 22, note; Hecyr. V. iv. 20.—Gloriam tu istam obtine, "Do you get yourself the credit of your present plan." But Bentley reads with the old editions and MSS., "Gloriamque istanc tibi" [obtine]. In these, "obtino" is clearly a gloss; and this reading seems preferable.

29. Mea quæ præter spem—utantur. For the acc., after such verbs as "utor," cf. Andr. Prol. 5, "Operam abutitur" (note); Plaut. Pœn. V. ii. 128, "Profecto uteris, ut voles, operum meam."—De summa nil decedet, &c., "Nothing will be drawn from your principal; whatever addition shall have accrued to it from my funds, count all that clear gain." Hinc is said δεικτικῶς.—Id de lucro putato esse omne. Compare, for de lucro, Phorm. II. i. 16, "Quicquid præter spem eveniat, omne id deputabo esse in lucro." Hecyr. III. i. 7, "Omne quod est interea tempus—in lucro est." Ilor Od. I. ix. 14, "Quem sors dierum cumque dabit luero Adpone."—Dempseris molestiam, cf. IV. vii. 18

"Dempsi omnem metum."

34. Mitto rem: consuetudinem ipsorum, "I pass over the question of money: 'tis their morals I care about." Understand "euro" "queror," or some such verb.—Istuc ibam, "I was coming to that." Eun. I. ii. 44, "Sed sine me pervenire, quo volo;" Hor. Sat. I. i. 108, "Illuc, unde abii, redeo." In homine, "in man's nature."

37. Duo quom idem faciant, &c., "So that you can often say, when two persons do the same, 'this man may be let do this without mischief to him, that one may not.'" Parry observes well that "impune" is used subjectively.—Non quod, &c., "Not that the thing itself is criminal, But he who does it." Colman.—Quæ ego, &c. (signa, sc. from v. 36).

41. In loco rceri, "De la pudeur, quand il faut," Madame Dacier; "Ingenuous shame, at the proper season." Cf. for in loco, above, II. ii. 8, and Heaut. III. ii. 27, note.—Scires liberum, &c. The usual reading here is "Scire est," h. e. "Scire licet," as in Heaut. I. ii. 18, "Credere est" was the old reading for "crederes." Parry, in both cases, rightly reads "crederes," "scires," following Lachmann on Lucret. v. 533.

44. Reducas ("ad officium," sc.) — Ne ab re sint tamen Omissiones paulo, "That they may yet be somewhat too careless as to their own interests." Omissiones is the opposite of "attentiores" in ver. 48. Compare Heant. V. ii. 9, note, "Animo esse omissio." At ver. 46, Westerhov quotes from Stobæus a fragment of Menander—

εἰ τ' ἀλλ' ἀφαιρεῖν δ πολὺς εἰλθεν χρόνος ἡμῶν, τό γε φρονεῖν ἀσφαλέστερον ποιεῖ.

46. Solum unum hoc vitium. Lindenbrog. quotes here Cic. de Senect. c. 18, and Horace. A. P. 169, "Multa seneni circumveniunt incommoda: vel quod Quærit et inventis miser abstinet et timet uti." Attentiores, cf. below, V. viii. 31.—Quod illos sat ætas acuet, "As to which time will sufficiently sharpen them." Quod is the accusative of limitation, as in Greek οὐ for κάθ οὐ. For the use of acuo see Virg. Georg. i. 123, "Curis acuens mortalia corda."

50. Bonæ tuæ istæ rationes, "Those fine arguments of yours;" tuos iste animus æquos, "your boasted fairness in thinking" (ironically).—Date hodie mihi, "Yield yourself to my guidance for the day." Cf. Eun. III. iii. 10, "Mihi sese dare."—Exporge frontem, "Unruffle your brow." Cf. Hor. Sat. II. ii. 125, "Explicit vino contractæ seria frontis;" Od. III. xxix. 16, "Sollicitam explicuere frontem;" Plaut. Cas. II. iv. 3, "Porrectiore fronte;" Hor. Epist. I. xviii. 94, "Deme supercilio nubem;" Eurip. Alcest. 776, στυγνῷ προσώπῳ καὶ συνοφρυμένῳ.—Fert, cf. Andr. II. i. 17, note; Adelph. I. i. 28.

55. Cum primo lucu. Here Bentley reads "luci," the adverb, as "mani" for "mane." "Luci" is found in Plaut. Cistell. II. i. 49, "Cum primo luci." But Donatus reads and justifies "lucu," which we therefore retain. To satisfy the metrical difficulties of this verse, Bentley and others reject "ibo hinc," and consider that there is an aposiopesis. Fleckeisen leaves out "immo," which comes to the same thing. Contrue, "I'll go hence at day-dawn." Mic., "Nay, I'd advise you to go at midnight." For "Cum primo lucu," compare Sallust Jugurth. c. 68, "Cum occasu solis;" and for "De nocte," used as here, Hor. Epist. I. ii. 32, "Surgunt de nocte latrones;" Key (Gr. 1326. h), seems to think that "de" in such cases signifies "by" or in "the course of."—Hilarum; cf. above, IV, vii. 38, note.

57. Pugnareris, "You will have won the day," h. e. "fought (and conquered)." Cf. Plaut. Epid. III. iv. 57, "Pugnasti: homo es." Cf. also, Eun. V. ii. 60, "Dabit hic aliquam pugnam denuo."—Illi, in ver. 58, is i. q. "illic;" cf. Phorm. I. ii. 41, "Dum sedemus illi;" Adelph. I. ii. 36; Plaut. Men. (H. G.) 223. Illic= "to the farm," or "country," here.

59. Ego istuc video, "I'll look to that," or "trust me to look to that." Cf. Andr. II. vi. 25, note.—A'que ibi plena — molendo, "And I'll take care that there she be up to her eyes in ashes, smoke and flour, in cooking and grinding." Donatus remarks upon the υστερον πρότερον here, and compares Virg. Aen. i. 179, "Et terrere parant flammis et frangere saxo." In the Mercator of Plautus II. iii. 62, we find a fuller account of a female slave's occupations, "Nihil opus nobis ancillâ, nisi quæ texat, quæ molat, Lignum cœdat, pensum faciat, ædes verrat, vapulet, Quæque habeat cotidianum familiæ coctum cibum."—Meridie ipso, "at high noon." Varro and Douatus wrongly derive "meridies" from "medius" and "dies," "quasi medi-die." It is derived from "merus dies." But see Donaldson's Varonianus, p. 256, who seems to recognise the change of "d" into "r" in the derivation of this word.

63. Tam excoctam, "as dried up" or "melted out." Placet = "well done." Cogam, in ver. 61, is i. q. "cogerem," "I'd force my son" &c. ("if I were you," sc.)—Ego sentio, "I feel;" "while you are trifling" is implied in isto animo sies.

68. Cui rei est, ei rei hunc sumamus diem. So read Fleckeisen, Parry, and other modern editors, following the Bembine, Vatican, and other best MSS. The reading of Westerhov. and Zeune, "ei hilarem hunc sumamus diem" (cf. II. iv. 23), errs against the metre here. Construe, "And let us spend this day on that affair (the nuptials, that is,) to which it is dedicated."

ACTUS V.—Sc. IV.

DEMEA takes counsel with himself, and reflecting on his brother's ways and on his own, and then on the results of each course, as regards the sons, resolves that "it is never too late to mend." He will try Micio's plan henceforward.

Metre:—Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

1. Bene subductâ ratione ad vitam, "Never has any one so well cast up his accounts as regards his life"—"made his reckonings as to his life so well." For the phrase "subducere rationem," cf. Plaut. Curc. Act iii. Sc. 1. "Subduxi ratiunculam; Quantum æris mihi sit, quantumque alieni siet;" Captiv. I. ii. 89; Cic. ad Fam. i. Ep. 9, "Circumspectis rebus omnibus, rationibusque subductis."

4. Prima, h. c. "primo loco ponenda," "most desirable."—In experiundo ut repudies. We retain "ut," following the Codex Bembin.

6. Prope jam excuso spatio, "When at last my course is well-nigh run." Beutley reads "decurso," omitting "jam"; and, doubtless, "decurso" is most common in this sense. See Plaut. Mer. III. ii. 4, "Decurso in spatio," &c.; Virg. Georg. ii. 39; Plaut. Stich. I. ii. 14, "Decurso aetatis spatio." The metaphor is from the race-course.—Facilitate, "good nature"; clementia, "moderation." With ver. 9, compare above I. i. 17, "Ego hanc clementem vitam urbanam," &c.

10. Nulli laedere os, "he offends no one to his face." For the infinitive put, as here, absolutely, see Andr. I. i. 35; Key's Gr. 1253. The opposite of "os laedere," occurs above II. iv. 5, "In os laudare."

11. Sibi rixit, "He has lived after his own fancy." Cf. Heaut. II. iii. 47, "Ita uti quae ornantur sibi," h. e. "for their own satisfaction."—Bene dicunt: amant; cf. Andr. I. i. 41, "Obsequium amicos, veritas odium parit."—In the next line, agrestis is churlish. Cf. Hor. Epist. I. xviii. 6, "Asperitas agrestis et inconcinna gravisque."

13. Duxi uxorem, &c. Westerhov. quotes Menander, τὸ γυναικα ἔχειν εἶναι τε παῖδων, Παρμένων, πατέρα, μερίμνας τῷ βίῳ πολλὰς φέρει.

—Quam ibi miscriam vidi, "What miseries I experienced thereby;" ibi. For "vidi," in this sense Stalbaum quotes Virg. Aen. ii. 5, "Quæque ipse miserrima vidi," and from the Scriptures, Psalm xxxiv. 13; 1 Pet. iii. 10, ἡμέρας ἰδεῖν ἀγαθάς.

15. Facerem, i. q. "conficerem;" compare Livy I. ix., "Magnas opes sibi, magnumque nomen facere."—Contrivi in querendo vitam, "I have spent my life in getting money." Cf. Ter Phorm. I. iv. 32, "Contrimus operam frustra;" Hecyr. V. iii. 17, "Totum hunc contrivi diem."—Exacta aetate, cf. Heaut. II. iii. 39, "Vitam — exegerit;" Plaut. Aulul. (H. G.) 4, "Malam aetatem exigas;" Cic. pro Deiotaro, c. 10, "Jam aetate exacta."—Hoc fructi, "This measure of requital." For this ancient genitive for "fructus," see Andr. II. ii. 28, "Ornati, tumulti; and Madvig. Gr. 47, obs. 2.

18. Patria potitur eomoda, "Reaps all a father's comforts," Colman. For "potior" with an accusative, see below, ver. 22, "potitur gaudia."

20. Illum ut vivat optant; cf. Heaut. I. i. 32, "Fac me, ut sciam."—Meam autem mortem expectant; cf. I. ii. 28, note.—Fecit suos, "has won over to himself." Cf. Andr. V. vi. 12, "Tuus est nunc Chremes;" and below at V. vi. 10, "Plebem — facio meam."

23. Age, age, &c. The reading here given is from the Bembine MS. Bentley reads "experiari," and omits the first "age." Parry explains the metre by making "age age nunc" one foot — —. Benigne facere, "act liberally." Plaut. Capt. V. i. 29, "Facis benigne." Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. Prol. 16, H. G. "Benignitas." It differs from "liberalitas," in not being confined to "giving," and from "comitas" which consists in words. Its subject matter is "quocunque modo benefacere."—Quando hoc provocat, "Since he challenges me to it." Hoc, the Bembine reading is i. q. hue; the common reading is eo.

25. Magni — pendi, "to be made much of," or "highly prized," Andr. I. v. 59, "Te semper fecit maximi;" Madvig. Gr. § 294, obs. 1.—

Non posteriores feram (partes, sc.), Gr. τὰ ἔσχατα φέρεθαι. A metaphor from the stage. For the ellipse of "partes" see Hor. Sat. I. ix. 46, "Magnum adjutorem, posset qui ferre secundas." The phrase was used primarily of the δευτεραγωνίστης.

27. Deerit (si pecunia, sc.), "Suppose money fail; that is of least consequence to me, seeing that I am the eldest." "Si" is often omitted in hypothetical sentences, see Key's Gr. 1219; Madvig. § 442 a, obs. 2; Virg. AEn. vi. 30.

ACTUS V.—Sc. V.

DEMEA proceeds to make his first experiment in mended manners upon Syrus, and thinks he does it rather well.

Metre :—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Abeas longius; cf. Plaut. Menæchm. (Hildyard) 241, "Proin tute ab ædibus ne quo abeas longius."

2. O Syre noster, salve, quid fit? quid agitur? "Ha! worthy Syrus, good day! What's up? How go matters?"

5. Servum haud illiberalem te præbes, h. e. "servis liberaliter;" cf. Andr. I. i. 11. Construe, "Your conduct is that of a very respectable slave."—Tibi lubens bene faxim, "I should be glad to do you a good turn." So Plaut. Trin. II. ii. 47, "Bene volo ego illi facere."—Atqui, Syre. The old man is fearful that Syrus will think he is joking.—Propediem; cf. Heaut. I. i. 108; IV. viii. 27.

ACTUS V.—Sc. VI.

GETA coming out from Sostrata's house to prepare for the wedding is accosted by Demea in the same improved style of courtesy.

Metre :—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Huc ad hos proviso, "I'm going hither to our neighbours here, to see how soon," &c. For proviso, see Andr. V. v. I, "Proviso quid agat Pamphilus;" Plaut. Men. H. G. 606.

3. O, qui vocare? "Oh! what's your name?" Donatus quotes Virg. AEn. i. 327, "O quam te memorem, virgo?" Demea's repetition of the slave's name, when he learns it, shows his anxiety to please.—Hominem maximi preti. Andr. V. ii. 15, "Videtur esse quantivis preti."

5. Servos spectatus satis, "A thoroughly tested slave." Metaphor from the assay of metals; cf. Andr. I. i. 64; Plaut. Men. H. G. 860, "Spectamen bono servo" (a test of a good servant); Aul. H. G. 542.—Si quid usus venerit, "If anything shall have happened;" usus venit, is i. q. "usu venit" or "evenit," used as one word. Cf. note at Heaut. III. ii. 42, "Non usus veniet, spero;" Phorm. I. i. 23, "Mi usus venit, hoc scio."—Lubens bene faxim; cf. above, V. v. 6.

8. Meditor esse affabilis, &c., "I'm practising affability, and it succeeds admirably." For "meditor," cf. Virg. Ecl. i. 2; and for "procedit," cf. Cicero. Verr. iii. 98, "Si bene processit." It is used personally below at V. ix. 22, "Syre, processisti hodie pulchre."—In ver. 9, cum= "quia," as in Plaut. Menæchm. 1044, "Cum tu liber es, gaudeo, Messenio."

10. Paulatim plebem, &c., "First of all I'm gradually winning over the lower orders." Ovid. A. A. ii. 259, "Fac plebem, mihi crede, tuam;" Cic. pro Milone, c. 35, "Plebem suam so fecisse commemorat." Cf. above V. iv. 21.

ACTUS V.—Sc. VII.

Aeschinus next comes in for a share of his father's new-found amiability. He is complaining of the delays occasioned by needless preparations for the marriage; and Demea chimes in with his views, advocating his making a way through the boundary wall, so as to bring home Pamphila without further delay. Aeschinus is charmed at the suggestion.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Occidunt me, "They worry me to death." Ruhnken quotes Hor. Epod. xiv. 5, "Candide Mæcenas, occidis sæpe rogando," and Ter. Phorm. IV. iii. 67, "Geta, occidisti me tuis fallaciis."—Nimis sanctas, "too formal," Parry.—Quid agitur, "How d'ye do?" or "how goes it?" Cf. "Quid agis," Plaut. Men. H. G. 62.

4. Et animo et naturâ, "Autant par la teudresse, que par la nature;" Madame Dacier.—Hosce oculos; cf. IV. v. 67, above.—Hoc mihi moræst; cf. IV. v. 78, note.

7. Tibicina, et Hymenæum qui cantent, "A female flute-player, and some to sing the nuptial song." In Andr. II. ii. 28, the lack of "flowers and flute-players" ("nil ornati, nil tumulti") is taken as proof of no wedding being about to take place. For "Hymenæum cantare," cf. Casina (Plaut.), IV. iii. 11, "Hymen hymenæe! Io Hymen. Perii hercle ego miser, dirupi Cantando Hymenæum," Catullus, Carm. lxi. and lxiii. passim. See also Smith's Gr. and R. Ant. pp. 599, 604, and 969. Tibicina (cf. Plaut. Aulul. H. G. 237), is i. q. "tibiacina."

8. Huic seni, "an old man like me," δεικτικῶς, cf. Hor. Sat. I. ix. 47, "Hunc hominem velles si tradere."—Turbas, lampadas, fidicinas; cf. as above, Audr. II. ii. 28. For lampadas (torches), at weddings, cf. Ovid. Epist. xii. 137, "Ut subito nostras Hymen cantatus ad aures Venit et accenso lampades igne micant;" Plaut. Cas. i. 30, "Primum omnium huic lucebis novæ nuptæ facem."

10. Maccram, "a wall" (th. μάκελος, Smith's Dict.). The word is very rare; never found, except in this passage, in Plautus or Terence. Westerhov. quotes from Plaut. Merc. V. iv. 49, "Illac per hortum nos domum transibimus."—Quantum potest, cf. Andr. V. ii. 20, note. Hac (sc. viā) "this way," h. e. through the breach.

13. Pater lepidissime, "Most jolly father." Cf. Plaut. Men. 71, H. G., "Lepidissimum hominem;" and Aulul. 658, "O lepidum diem." So in Andr. V. iv. 45, "O lepidum patrem."—Fratri aedes sicut perviae, "My brother's house will become a thoroughfare;" Virg. Æn. ii. 453, "Pervius usus Tectorum inter se Priami"

15. The Bembine MS. here has "amittet," and omits "et" before "sumptum." A very neat emendation is Fleckeisen's "Sumptu amittet multa," "he'll lose much by his expenses." The ordinary reading is sumptum admittet, = "he will incur expense." Multa standing by itself seems rather unmeaning.—Quid m'ā (refert, sc.), "What care I?"

17. Jube nunc jam Dinumeret ille Babylo viginti minas. Such is Bentley's reading, who explains it, "Come then, now let yon spend-thrift count out his twenty minæ." (I am quits with him, I shall get quite as many thanks.)—Babylo, he considers, is i. q. "BabyIonian," because the Medes and Persians were luxurious and expensive beyond other nations. Jube, he says, is, i. q. "age;" cf. Mostell. Plaut. II. i. 79. He supposes the words to be uttered "aside." Burmann at Sueton. Ner. c. 36, approves this explanation. Parry, after Colman, reads "Dinumeret illi Babylo," &c., "Let Babylo (one of Demea's slaves) count out for him (Æschinus) twenty minæ," a marriage present. We prefer Bentley's explanation, which appears that of Douatus also, and which is approved by Ruhnken.

19. Tu illas abi et traduce, an instance of the figure σύγχυσις. Ruhnken illustrates it by Plaut. Merc. V. iv. 35, "Serva et subveni aunc senem."—Dī tibi Bene faciant; cf. Plaut. Menæchm. 919, Hildyard.

21. Tan ex animo factum velle, "wish so well:" "are so kindly disposed." Compare Plaut. Aulul. Hildyard's Glossary, 640, "Facta velle me quæ tu velis;" and notes at 104, "Facta volo."—In ver. 24, enim seems to be used emphatically, "Why to be sure," as in Plaut. Menæchm. 85, II. G., or elliptically, as in Aul. 454, H. G.—Sic soleo, "such is my wout;" cf. Eun. II. ii. 48, "Sic soleo amicos."

ACTUS V.—Sc. VIII.

Micio, finding what orders Demea has been giving, comes out to see with his own eyes, and to test this transformation of a churl into a good-fellow. Demea astounds him with a proposal, that he, Micio, shall marry Sostrata; to which, though loth at first, he consents after persuasion from his brother and Æschinus. He is next induced to give up a small farm to Hegio, as a relation of Sostrata and Pamphila, and Demea enforces the exhortation to do this, by a quotation from Micio's own speech, in V. iii. 18.

3. Unam facere; cf. V. vii. 11, "Unam fac domum."—Colcre, "to cherish;" cf. Virg. AEn. i. 16, "Posthabitâ coluisse Saino."—Adjunctre, "to ally with ourselves." So Plaut. Triumm. III. ii. 73, "Affinitatem adstrinxeris."

6. Quid postea; cf. IV. i. 13; Eun., II. iii. 79, "Quid tum postea."—Ita aiunt, Heaut. IV. viii. 12.—For respiciat in ver. 8, cf. Andr. IV. i. 18, note; Adel. III. ii. 55, "Neino respicit nos," note.—Solast, "She's a lone woman;" Andr. I. v. 55, "Perquo hujus solitudinem;" II. iiii. 7,

"Tum hæc solast mulier."—Quam hic rem agit? "What are you driving at?" Cf. Heaut. I. i. 37, note.—In ver. 10, Autem indicates "astonishment." Cf. Plaut. Men. 685; & 687 H. G.

10. Te operam, ut fiat, dare. This is addressed to Æschinus, according to Donatus.

11. Si tu sis homo, Hic faciat, "If you've a man, he'll do it," Colman. Cf. I. ii. 27, "Si essem homo," &c.—Asine; cf. Ter. Heaut. V. i. 4, "Quæ sunt dicta in stultum caudex, stipes, asinus, plumbeus."—Nil agis, "It's no use your opposing it;" cf. II. i. 13, "Nil facis."

14. Aufer ("te," sc. according to Donatus: "manum" sc. according to Ruhnken). "Off!" or "Away with you." Æschinus had been, with earnest gesture and supplicating hand, trying to persuade him. Cf. Ter. Phorm. I. iv. 46, "Aufer mi oportet;" V. vi. 17, and III. iii. 26, "Aufer te hinc."—Da veniam filio, "Grant your son's request," "Indulge your son's wish." So Gronovius explains, quoting Cic. ad Fratr. iii. Ep. 1, "Quod tibi amantissime petenti veniam non dedit, uti rescriberet."

16. Idne estis auctores mihi? For this construction see Key's Grammar, § 909. Construe, "Is this what you recommend to me?" Cf. Phorm. IV. iii. 20, "Uno ore auctores fuere ut," &c.; Plaut. Pseud. I. iii. 2, "Quid mihi es auctor."—In the line above denuo = "now for the first time;" cf. Ad. II. ii. 25, above; and see Key's Gr. § 1447.

17. De te largitor, puer! "Be liberal of what's your own, lad!" De te = παρὰ σωτροῦ. Cf. Plaut. Men. 446 (Hildyard's Gloss.), "Da, sodes, abs te." Ruhnken quotes Plaut. Pseud. II. iv. 45, "Possum a me dare."—Da veniam in ver. 19 is as in ver. 14.—Ne gravere, "Don't take it amiss." Cf. Plaut. Mil. G. IV. vi. 15, "Quod cupiam ne gravetur."—Non omittis? "Won't you let me alone?" Pres. for future, as in Plaut. Men. 148.

20. Vis hæc est quidem, a protest that he acts under coercion. Plaut. Capt. III. v. 92, "Vis hæc est quidem hercle;" Sueton. C. J. Cæsar. 82, "Ista quidem vis est."—Age prolixe, Micio, "Act handsomely, Micio!" Parry refers to Eun. V. viii. 52, "Accipit hominem nemo melius prorsus, neque prolixius." It is derived from "laxus."

23. Merito te amo, "I love you and you deserve it." Cf. Eun. I. ii. 106, "Merito te amo : bene facis."—Hoc confit, quod volo, "This answers to my wish," Colman; "What I wish is being brought about." Cf. Andr. I. i. 140, "Et spero confore;" Virg. Aen. iv. 115, "Confieri possit." "Confit" is the reading of Donatus, but Bentley proposed "Merito tuo te amo. Verum.—Mic. Quid? DEM. Ego dicam, hoc cum fit quod volo." And this reading, with the exception of "tuo," we retain, as adopted by Fleckeisen. In the next line, we read with Bentley "Quid nunc? quid restat," for "quod restat" and "his" for "istis."

25. Affinis nobis. Donatus notes that this is an illustration of the difference between "cognatus" and "affinis." The wife's "cognati" are "affines" to the husband; cf. Plaut. Aulul. 427. H. G., where it is shown that "cognatus" is connected by ties of blood, "affinis" only by those of marriage.

26. Ayelli est hic sub urbe, &c. "There's a bit of land here near the town." For sub in this sense, cf. Plaut. Trin. II. iv. 107, "Est ager sub urbe hic nobis;" Martial. XI. xviii. 1, "Rus sub urbe."—Quod locitas foras, "Which you let out."—Huic demus qui fruatur, "Let us give him the use of it." Gronov. explains the phrase "dare agrum qui fruatur," dare "ut annuos inde fructus ac redditus percipias, ita tamen ut ager meus maneat :"—"usufructuarium" in legal phraseology. For this abl. "qui" cf. Heaut. IV. iii. 30, "Nam qui ille potuit esse in tuto, dic mihi;" IV. v. 30, "Aurum atque vestem qui... tenesne?" "Dare fruendum," and "locare fruendum" (cf. Livy. lib. xlvi. 19) differ, the latter being "to let the usufruct."—Paululum id autem? "Nay, but is it such a bit."

28. Pro patre, "in the light of a father;" cf. Eun. II. iii. 84, "Facile ut pro eunacho probes."—Postremo non meum, &c., "Last of all these words I'm using are not mine." Bentley from two MSS. reads "nunc" for "non." But either reading will stand with equal force. For ver. 31 compare V. iii. 48.

32. The simplest reading of this verse and the two following is to insert, with Parry, Micio at the close of ver. 32.—Mi pater! will then be an exclamation of Æschinus at the end of ver. 33. Gaudeo will be in Micio's mouth in ver. 34, and Suo sibi gladio will belong to Demea. Hermann carries these words into the next scene, and places them in the mouth of Syrus. For Quid istic "enough," in 33, see Andr. III. iii. 40. note; Heaut. V. v. 9; and for Suo sibi gladio hunc jugulo, Plaut. Capt. I. i. 14, "Suo sibi succo vivunt." For the adage cf. Cicero pro Cæcinâ, c. 29, "Aut tuo, quemadmodum dicitur, gladio, aut nostro defensio tua conficiatur necesse est;" and Senec. Controv. 24, "Hac eum Sallustius vicit, et in suis castris cecidit."

ACTUS V.—Sc. IX.

DEMEA in this last scene follows out his novel theory by procuring the freedom of Syrus (for his care of the morals of his master's sons!) and of his wife Phrygia, and bidding Micio let them have some money to start with. Micio inquires whence has come this change, and then Demea shows that he has thus acted, in order to afford an illustration of the ease with which popularity may be won by headlong indulgence, and of the lengths to which it may be carried. He then offers to be henceforth a friendly adviser to his sons, when they need advice. They accept his offer, and he recommends Ctesiphon to be content with his present love, and all may turn out well.

Metro:—Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

1. Quod jussisti. At V. vii. 10. q. v.—Frugi homo es: cf. Heaut. III. iii. 19, note; and III. iii. 36, note; Eun. III. v. 60. The word was commonly used in addressing slaves, and signifies "You're an honest fellow." Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 478, Aul. 542. H. G.—Med quidem sententia; cf. I. i. 4 above.

5. Ego istos, &c. Donatus hence infers that Syrus was the "Pædagogus." So in Heaut. III. iii. 33 Syrus, another equally rascally "pedagogus" laments that his young charge won't heed him. "Nam ibi iam minus minusque obtemperat."

7. Et quidem porro hac. Said ironically.—Obsonare cum fide, Madame Dacier rightly translates in a note "acheter fiddlement," "To cater or purvey faithfully." Ruhnken and others read "cum fide scortum," and explain it "fidicinam meretriciam" or "psaltriam quæ fidibus canat." But this is very doubtful. For "obsonare," cf. Plaut. Men. II. G. 126, Aul. 236, &c.

8. Adparare de die convivium, "To prepare a banquet early in the afternoon"—a practice encouraging luxury and dissipation. For the Romans were not wont to have their "cœua" or public meal (cf. Plaut. Men. 94. H. G.) till the ninth hour (three o'clock p. m.); cf. Martial IV. viii., "Imperat exstructos frangere nona toros." But spendthrifts and profligates began soon after noon, which is the exact force of "dies" in the phrase "de die." Cf. "De nocte," V. iii. 55, note; Hor. Epist. I. ii. 32. For "De die" cf. Catull. xlvi. 5, "Vos convivia lauta, sumptuosa De die facitis."—O lepidum capu! cf. V. vii. 13.

11. Prodesse æquomst, &c., "'Tis but fair one should do him a good turn: other slaves will be the better for it." (Ironically.)—Hic, Æschinus.—Cupio, in ver. 12, is put into the mouth of Æschinus, as stronger than "volo."

14. Omnibus gratiam habeo, &c., "Je vous remercie tons en général, et vous en particulier, monsieur!" Madame Dacier.—For Benefacis, cf. V. v. 6 above, viii. 25.

15. Utinam hoc perpetuum fiat gaudium, &c., "Would that this joy could be made complete" (uninterrupted). Cf. Hor. Epist. II. ii. 175, "Perpetuus nulli datur usus;" Hecyr. III. iii. 46, "O fortuna, ut nunquam perpetua es data." See also Plaut. Men. H. G. 1045, where "perpetuo" is similarly used.—Phrygia, observe the female slaves, as the males, are named from the nations which mostly furnished slaves, cf. Syrus, Geta.

18. Hercle vero scrio, "Nay then in good earnest," "Oh, en bonne foi."—Emitti is i. q. "manu mitti," as in Plaut. Pseud. IV. ii. 37, "Mulieremque mihi emittere." In Ter. Phorm. V. v. 2, we find "emissa est manu" in full.—Quanti est = "quanti empta est," "her value."—Dī tibi—omnia omnes, &c. We have adopted Bentley's reading, for which he quotes Plaut. Capt. II. ii. 105, "Dī tibi omnes omnia optata offerant."

22. Processisti pulchre, "You have thriven rarely." "Procedere" and "Provenire," are more commonly used impersonally; cf. V. vi. 9, note. But we find "procedere" used as here, in Hor. Sat. I. ii. 38, "Procedere recte Qui moechos non vultis," on which passage Bentley quotes "Processisti pulchre" as i. q. "pulchre tibi processit."—Si quidem porro, &c., "Ay, assuredly, if only, Micio, furthermore you shall do your duty," &c.

23. Aliquid paulum præ manu Dederis, unde utatur, "You shall have given him some little money in hand, on which to live." For "præ manu" compare Plaut. Bacch. IV. iii. 10, "Qui patri reddidi Omne aurum amans, quod fuit præ manu." Unde utatur, h. e. "quo vivat," "quo victim habeat;" cf. Plaut. Trin. II. ii. 74, "Deum virtute habemus et qui nosmet utamur." For "unde," cf. I. ii. 42.—Istoc vilius, "So much the cheaper," Bentley; who explains the words to mean, "I gave the other things: this I'll not give." He derives this explanation from Charisius. Donatus explains it, "I won't give even anything more worthless than that" (h. e. a snap of the finger), which is perhaps the better explanation, though in this case the ellipse "quicquam non dabo" is rather a large one.

28. Prolubium, "inclination" (th. pro-lubere), cf. Aul. Gell. xvi. 19. Some MSS. read "proluvium." But Donatus, Bentley, and other commentators read "prolubium," a word recognised and explained by Varro de Linguâ Latinâ. The Vatican MS. has "prolubium."—Quod te isti, &c., "That as to those boys of yours thinking you good-humoured and jolly," &c.—Id non fieri ex verâ vitâ, "that that does not arise from a well regulated life." Cf. Heaut. I. i. 102, "Hoc cum fit, ibi non vere vivitur," where vere = "rectâ ratione." For Ex aequo et bono, "from equitable conduct," cf. Heaut. IV. v. 40, Phorm. IV. iii. 32.

33. Quia non justa injusta, &c., "Because I don't humour you in all things altogether, just and unjust alike." Understand "vobis." The accusatives "justa," &c., are "accusatives of limitation," and the construction is like that in Phorm. I. ii. 29, "Obsequi quæ vellent;" Plaut. As. I. i. 61, "Id ego percupio obsequi uato meo."

34. Missa facio, "I've done with it all." Andr. IV. i. 56. He means to say he will henceforth let them go their own way.

36. Minus vidctis, &c., "Matters in which ye exercise less forethought, more excessive eagerness, and but little deliberation, by reason of your youth." For "minus videtis," see Andr. IV. iii. 23, note, "Aut tu plus vides;" Heaut. III. i. 95, note.

37. Obsecundare in loco, "To humour you in due season;" cf. Ter. Heaut. IV. vi. 22, note; III. ii. 26, note.

39. Quid opu facto est; cf. Andr. III. ii. 10, note; Madvig. 226, obs.

40. In istâc finem faciat, "With her let him finish his intrigues," i. e. Let there be no more music-girls. "Let him finish there," Colman.—CANTOR. Plaudite; cf. Andr. V. vi. 15, note; Heaut. V. v. 21, note.

ACTVS I.—SCEN. 1.

PHILOTIS. SYRA.

Ph. Per pol quam paucos reperias meretricibus
Fidelis euenire amatores, Syra.

Vel hic Pamphilus jurabat quotiens Bacchidi,
Quam sancte, ut quiuis facile posset credere,
Numquam illa uiua ducturum uxorem domum !

Hem duxit. Sy. Ergo propterea te sedulo
Et moneo et hortor, ne quoiusquam misereat,
Quin spolies, mutiles, laceres, quemquem nacta sis.

Pn. Utin eximium neminem habeam ? Sy. Neminem :
Nam nemo illorum quisquam, scito, ad te uenit,
Quin ita paret sese, abs te ut blanditiis suis
Quam minumo pretio suam uoluptatem expletat.
Hiscine tu, amabo, non contra insidiabere ?

Ph. Tamen pol candem injuriumst esse omnibus.

Sy. Injurium antemst ulcisci aduorsarios ?
Aut qua uia te captent eadem ipsos capi ?
Eheu me miseram, quor non aut istaec mihi
Ætas et formast aut tibi haec sententia ?

ACT. I.—SCEN. 2.

PARMENO. PHILOTIS. SYRA.

PA. Senex si queret me, modo isse dicio
 Ad portum percontatum aduentum Pamphili.
 Audin quid dicam, Scirte ? si quæret me, uti
 Tum dicas : si non quæreret, nullus dixeris,
 Alias ut uti possim causa hac integra.
 Sed uideon ego Philotium ? unde hæc aduenit ?
 Philotis, salue multum. PH. O salue, Parmeno.

SY. Salue mecastor, Parmeno. PA. Et tu edepol, Syra.
 Dic mi, ubi, Philotis, te oblectasti tam diu ?

PH. Minume equidem me oblectaui, quæ cum milite
 Corinthum hinc sum profecta inhumanissumo :
 Biennium ibi perpetuom misera illum tuli.

PA. Edepol te desiderium Athenarum arbitror,
 Philotium, cepisse sæpe et te tuom
 Consilium contempsisse. PH. Non dici potest,
 Quam cupida eram huc redeundi, abeundi a milite
 Vosque hic uidendi, antiqua ut consuetudine
 Agitarem inter uos libere conuiuium :
 Nam illi haud licebat nisi præfinito loqui
 Quæ illi placerent. PA. Haud opinor commode
 Finem statuisse orationi militem.

PH. Sed quid hoc negotist, modo quod narrauit mihi
 Hic intus Bacchis ? quod ego numquam credidi
 Fore, ut hac ille uiua posset animum inducere Uxorem habere. PA. Habere autem ? PH. Eho tu, an non habet ?

PA. Habet : sed firmæ hæ uereor ut sint nuptiae.

PH. Ita di deæque faxint, si in reū est Bacchidis.

Sed qui istuc credam ita esse, dic mihi, Parmeno.

PA. Non est opus prolato : hoc percontarier
Desiste. PH. Nempe ea causa, ut ne id fiat palam ?
Ita me di amabunt, haud propterea te rogo,
Ut hoc proferam, sed ut tacita tecum gaudem.

PA. Numquam tam dices commode, ut tergum meum
Tuam in fidem committam. PH. Ah noli, Parmeno :
Quasi tu non multo malis narrare hoc mihi
Quam ego quae percontor scire. PA. Vera haec prædicat,
Et illud mihi uitiumst maximum. si mihi fidem
Das te tacituram, dicam. PH. Ad ingenium redit.
Fidem do : loquere. PA. Ausculta. PH. Iстic sum. PA.
Hanc Bacchidem

Amabat, ut quom maxume, tum Pamphilus,
Quom pater uxorem ut ducat orare occipit
Et haec communia omnium quae sunt patrum,
Sese senem esse dicere, illum autem unicum :
Præsidium uelle se senectuti suæ.

Ille primo se negare : sed postquam acrius
Pater instat, fecit animi ut incertus foret,
Pudorin anne amori obsequeretur magis.

Tundendo atque odio denique effecit senex :
Despondit ei gnatam huius uicini proxumi.
Usque illud uisumst Pamphilo neutiquam graue,
Donec jam in ipsis nuptiis, postquam uidet
Paratas, nec moram ullam quin ducat dari,
Ibi demum ita ægre tulit, ut ipsam Bacchidem,
Si adesset, credo ibi ejus commiscereseret.

Ubi quomque datum erat spatium solitudinis,
Ut conloqui tecum una posset : ‘ Parmeno,
Perii, quid ego egi ? in quod me conjeci malum !
Non potero hoc ferre, Parmeno : perii miser.’

PH. At te di deæque perduint cum isto odio, Lache.

PA. Ut ad pauca redeam, uxorem dedit domum.

Noete illa prima uirginem non attigit :

Quæ consecutast nox eam, nilo magis.

PH. Quid ais ? cum uirgine una adulescens cubuerit
Plus potus, sese illa abstinere ut potuerit ?
Non uerisimile dicis, nec uerum arbitror.

PA. Credo ita uideri tibi : nam nemo ad te uenit
Nisi cupiens tui : ille inuitus illam duxerat.

PH. Quid deinde fit ? PA. Diebus sane pauculis
Post Pamphilus me solum seducit foras ;
Narratque, ut virgo ab se integra etiam tum siet,
Seque ante quam eam uxorem duxisset domum
Sperasse eas tolerare posse nuptias.

' Sed quam decrerim me non posse diutius
Habere, eam ludibrio haberí, Parmeno,
Quin integrum itidem reddam, ut accepi ab suis,
Neque honestum mihi neque utile ipsi uirginist.'

PII. Pium ac pudicum ingenium narras Pamphili.

PA. ' Hoc ego proferre incommodum mi esse arbitror :
Reddi patri autem, quo tu nil dicas uiti,
Superbumst : sed illam spero, ubi hoc cognouerit
Non posse se mecum esse, abituram denique.'

PII. Quid ? interea ibatne ad Baechidem ? PA. Cotidie :
Sed ut fit, postquam hunc alienum ab sese uidet,
Maligna et multo magis procax facta ilicost.

PII. Non edepol mirum. PA. Atque ea res multo maxime
Dijunxit illum ab illa, postquam et ipse se
Et illam et hanc quæ domi erat cognouit satis.
Ad exemplum ambarum mores earum existimans,
Haec, ita uti liberali esse ingenio decet,
Pudens, modesta, incommoda atque iniurias

Viri omnis ferre et tegere contumelias.
 Hic animus partim uxoris misericordia
 Deuinctus, partim uictus hujus injuriis,
 Paulatim elapsust Bacchidi atque huc transtulit
 Amorem, postquam par ingenium nactus est.

 Ubi illuc dies est compluris, arcessi jubet :

ACTVS II.—SCEN. 1.

LACHES. SOSTRATA.

LA. Pro deum atque hominum fidem, quod hoc genus est, quæ hæc est conjuratio !

Utin omnes mulieres eadem æque studeant nolintque omnia
Neque declinatam quicquam ab aliarum ingenio ullam reperias ?
Itaque adeo uno animo omnes socrus omnis suas oderunt nurus.
Viris esse aduorsas æque studiumst, similis pertinaciast.
In eodemque omnes mihi uidentur ludo doctæ ad malitiam :
Ei ludo, si ullus est, magistram hanc esse satis certo scio.

So. Me miseram, quæ nunc quamobrem accuser nescio. LA.
Hem,

Tu nescis ? So. Non, ita me di ament, mi Lache, Itaque una inter nos agere ætatem liceat. LA. Di mala pro-hibeant.

So. Meque abs te immerito esse accusatam postmodum rescisces, scio.

LA. Te immerito ? an quicquam pro istis factis dignum te dici potest ?

Quæ me et te et familiam dedecoras, filio luctum paras.
Tum autem ex amicis inimici ut sint nobis adfines facis,
Qui illum decretunt dignum, suos quo liberos committerent. 15
Tu sola exorere, quæ pertubes hæc tua impudentia.

So. Egon ? LA. Tu inquam mulier, quæ me omnino lapidem, non hominem putas.

An, quia ruri esse crebro soleo, nescire arbitramini
Quo quisque pacto hic uitam uostrorum exigat ?

Multo melius hic quæ sunt quam illi ubi sum adsidue seio : 20
 Ideo quia, ut domi uos mi eritis, proinde ego ero fama foris.
 Jampridem equidem audiui cepisse odium tui Philumenam :
 Minumeque adeo mirum : et ni id fecisset, magis mirum foret.
 Sed non credidi adeo, ut etiam totam hanc odisset domum :
 Quod si scissem, illa hic maneret potius, tu hinc isses foras. 25
 At nide, quam inmerito ægritudo hæc oritur mi abs te, Sostrata :
Rus habitatum abii, concedens uobis et rei seruiens,
 Meo labore haud parens præter æquom atque ætatem meam,
 Sumptus uostros otiumque ut nostra res posset pati.
 Non te pro his curasse rebus, nequid ægre esset mihi ! 30

So. Non mea opera neque pol culpa euenit. LA. Immo maxume :

Sola hic fuisti : in te omnis haeret culpa sola, Sostrata.
 Quæ hic erant curares, quom ego uos curis solui ceteris.
 Cum puella anum suscepisse iuimicitias non pudet ?
 Illius dices culpa factum ? So. Haud equidem dieo, mi Lache. 35

LA. Gaudeo, ita me di ament, gnati causa : nam de te quidem Satis scio peccando fieri detrimenti nil potest.

So. Qui scis an ea causa, mi uir, me odisse adsimulauerit,
 Ut cum matre plus una esset ? LA. Quid ais ? non signi hoc sat est,

Quod heri nemo uoluit uisentem ad eam te intro admittere ? 40

So. Enim lassam oppido aibant tum esse : eo ad eam non admissa sum.

LA. Tuos esse ego illi mores morbum magis quam ullam aliam rem arbitror,

Et merito adeo : nam uostrarum nulla est, quin gnatum uelit
 Ducere uxorem : et quæ uobis placitast condicio datur :
 Ubi duxere in pulsu uostro, uostro in pulsu easdem exigunt. 45

ACT. II.—SCEN. 2.

PHIDIPPVS. LACHES. SOSTRATA.

Ph. Etsi scio ego, Philumena, meum jus esse, ut te cogam
 Quæ ego imperem facere : ego tamen patrio animo uictus faciam,
 Ut tibi concedam, neque tuae lubidini aduorsabor.

La. Atque eccum Phidippum optume uideo : hinc jam scibo hoc quid sit.

Phidippe, etsi ego meis me omnibus scio esse adprime obser-quentem,

Sed non adeo ut mea facilitas corrumpat illorum animos :
 Quod tu si idem faceres, magis in rem et nostram et nostram esset.

Nunc uideo in illarum potestate esse te. Ph. Heia uero.

La. Adii te heri de filia : ut ueni, itidem incertum amisti.
 Haud ita decet, si perpetuam hanc uis esse adfinitatem,
 Celare te iras. siquid est peccatum a nobis, profer :
 Aut ea refellendo aut purgando uobis corrigemus,
 Te judice ipso. sin east retinendi causa apud uos,
 Quia ægrast, te mi injuriam facere arbitror, Phidippe,
 Si metuis satis ut meæ domi curetur diligenter.

At ita me di ament, haud tibi hoc concedo, etsi illi pater es,
 Ut tu illam saluam magis uelis quam ego : il adeo gnati causa,
 Quem ego intellexi illam haud minus quam se ipsum magnificare.
 Neque adeo clam me est, quam esse eum grauiter laturum
 credam,

Hoc si rescierit: eo domum studeo haec prius quam ille ut redeat.

Ph. Laches, et diligentiam uostram et benignitatem
 Noui et quæ dicis omnia esse ut dicis animum induco,
 Et te hoc mihi cupio credere : illam ad uos redire studeo,

Si facere possim ullo modo. LA. Quæ res te id facere prohibet?
 Echo, numquidnam accusat uirum? PH. Minime: nam postquam attendi

Magis, et ui cœpi cogere ut rediret, sancte adjurat
 Non posse apud uos Pamphilo se absente perdurare.
 Aliud fortasse alii uiti est: ego sum animo leni natus:
 Non possum aduersari meis. LA. Hem, Sostrata. SO. Heu me miseram.

LA. Certumnest istuc? PH. Nunc quidem ut uidetur: sed numquid uis?

Nam est quod me transire ad forum jam oportet. LA. Eo tecum una.

ACT. II.—SCEN. 3.

SOSTRATA.

Edepol næ nos sumus inique æque omnes inuisæ uiris,
 Propter paucas, quæ omnes faciunt dignæ ut uideamus malo.
 Nam, ita me di ament, quod me accusat nunc uir, sum extra noxiæ.

Sed non facilest expurgatu: ita animum induxerunt, socrus
 Oniuis esse iniquas: haud pol me quidem: nam numquam secus

Habui illam ac si ex me esset nata: nec qui hoc mi eueniat scio
 Nisi pol filium multimodis iam expeto ut redeat domum.

ACTVS III.—SCEN. 1.

PAMPHILVS. PARMENO. MYRRINA.

PAM. Nemini ego plura esse acerba credo ex amore homini umquam oblata

Quam mi. heu me infelicem, hancine ego uitam parsi perdere ?

Hacine causa ego eram tanto operc cupidus redeundi domum !
hui,

Quanto fuerat præstabilius ubiuis gentium agere ætatem,

Quam hue redire atque hæc ita esse miserum me resescere !

Nam nos omnes quibus est alicunde aliquis objectus labos,

Omne quod est interea tempus prius quam id rescitumst lucrost.

PAR. At sic citius qui te expedias his ærumnis reperias.

Si non rediisses, hæc iræ factæ essent multo ampliores :

Sed nunc aduentum tuom ambas, Pamphile, scio reuerituras.

Rem cognosces : iram expedes : rursum in gratiam restitues.

Leuia sunt, quæ tu pergrauiæ esse in animum induxti tuom.

PAM. Quid consolare me ? an quisquam usquam gentiumst æque miser ?

Prius quam hanc uxorem duxi, habebam alibi animum amoris
deditum :

Tamen numquam ausus sum recusare eam quam mi obtrudit
pater :

Jam in hac re, ut taceam, quoiuis facile scitust quam fuerim miser.

Vix me illinc abstraxi atque impeditum in ea expediui animum meum,

Vixque huc contuleram: hem noua res ortast, porro ab hac
quæ me abstrahat.

Tum matrem ex ea re me aut uxorem in culpa inuenturum
arbitror :

Quod quicn ita esse inuenero, quid restat nisi porro ut fiam
miser ? 20

Nam matris ferre iniurias me, Parmeno, pietas jubet :

Tum uxori obnoxius sum : ita olim suo me ingenio pertulit,

Tot meas iniurias quæ numquam in ullo patefecit loco.

Sed magnum nescio quid necesset euenisse, Parmeno,

Unde ira inter eas intercessit, quæ tam permansit diu. 25

PAR. Haud quidem hercle parvom : si uis uero ueram rationem exsequi.

Non maxumas, quæ maxumæ sunt interdum iræ, iniurias

Faciunt : nam sæpe est, quibus in rebus alias ne iratus quidemst,

Quom de eadem causast iracundus factus inimicissimus.

Pueri inter sese quam pro leuibus noxiis iras gerunt ! 30

Quapropter ? quia enim qui eos gubernat animus infirmum gerunt.

Itidem illæ mulieres sunt ferme ut pueri leui sententia :

Fortasse unum aliquod uerbum inter eas iram hanc concuiisse.

PAM. Abi, Parmeno, intro, ac me uenisse nuntia. PAR. Hem, quid hoc est ? PAM. Tace.

Trepidari sentio et cursari rursum prorsum. PAR. Ageduin, ad foris 35

Accedo propius. hem, sensistin ? PAM. Noli fabularier.

Pro Juppiter, clamorem audiui. PAR. Tute loqueris, me uetas.

MY. Tace obsecro, mea gnata. PAM. Matris uox uisast Philumenæ.

Nullus sum. PAR. Quidum ? PAM. Perii. PAR. Quamobrem ?
PAM. Nescio quod magnum malum

Profecto, Parmeno, me celas. PAR. Uxorem Philumenam 40

Panitare nescio quid dixerunt: id si forte est nescio.

PAM. Interii: quor id mihi non dixti? PAR. Quia non poteram una omnia.

PAM. Quid morbi est? PAR. Nescio. PAM. Quid? nemon medicum adduxit? PAR. Nescio.

PAM. Cesso hinc ire intro, ut hoc quamprimum, quidquid est, certo sciam?

Quonam modo, Philumena mea, nunc te offendam affectam? ⁴⁵

Nam si periculum ullum in te inest, perisse me una haud dubiumst.

PAR. Non usus factost mihi nunc hunc intro sequi:

Nam innisos omnis nos esse illis sentio:

Heri nemo uoluit Sostratam intro admittere.

Si forte morbus amplior factus siet,

50

Quod sane nolim, maxume heri causa mei,

Seruom ilico intro iuisce dicent Sostratæ,

Aliquid tulisse comminiscetur mali

Capiti atque ætati illorum, morbus qui auctus sit.

Hera in crimen ueniet, ego uero in magnum malum.

55

ACT. III.—SCEN. 2.

SOSTRATA. PARMENO. PAMPHILVS.

So. Nescio quid jamdudum audio hic tumultuari misera:

Male metuo ne Philumenæ magis morbus adgrauescat:

Quod te, Æsculapi, et te, Salus, nequid sit huius oro.

Nunc ad eam uisam. PAR. Heus, Sostrata. So. Hem.

PAR. Iterum istinc excludere.

So. Ehem Parmeno, tun hic eras? perii, quid faciam misera? ⁵

Non uisam uxorem Pamphili, quom in proxumo hic sit ægra?

PAR. Non uisas? ne mittas quidem uisendi causa quemquam.
 Nam qui amat quoi odio ipsus est, bis facere stulte duco:
 Laborem inanem ipsus capit et illi molestiam adfert.
 Tum filius tuos introit uidere, ut uenit, quid agat. 10

So. Quid ais? an uenit Pamphilus! PAR. Venit. So. Dis gratiam habeo.

Hem, istoc uerbo animus mihi rediit et cura ex corde excessit.

PAR. Jam ea te causa maxume nunc huc intro ire nolo:
 Nam si remittent quidpiam Philumenæ dolores,
 Omnem rem narrabit, scio, continuo sola soli,
 Quæ inter uos interuenerit, unde ortumst initium iræ. 15
 Atque eccum uideo ipsum egredi: quam tristis? So. O mi gnate.

PAM. Mea mater, salue. So. Gaudeo uenisce saluom. saluan Philumenast? PAM. Meliusculast. So. Utinam istuc ita di faxint.

Quid tu igitur lacrumas? aut quid es tam tristis? PAM. Recte, mater. 20

So. Quid fuit tumulti? dic mihi: an dolor repente inuasit?

PAM. Ita factumst. So. Quid morbi est? PAM. Febris.
 So. Cotidiana? PAM. Ita aiunt.

I sodes intro; consequar jam te, mea mater. So. Fiat.

PAM. Tu pueris curre, Parmeno, obuiam atque eis onera adjuta.

PAR. Quid? non sciunt ipsi uiam, domum qua ueniant?

PAM. Cessas? 25

ACT III.—SCEN. 3.

PAMPHILUS.

Nequoc mearum rerum initium ullum inuenire idoneum,
 Unde exordiar narrare, quæ nec opinanti accidentunt;

Partim quæ perspexi his oculis, partim quæ accepi auribus :
Qua me propter exanimatum citius eduxi foras.

Nam modo intro ut me corripui timidus, alio suspicans

Morbo me uisurum adfectam ac sensi esse uxorem : hei mihi.

Postquam me aspexere ancillæ aduenisse, omnes ilico

Lætæ exclamat 'uenit', id quod me repente aspexerant.

Sed continuo uoltum earum sensi immutari omnium,

Quia tam incommode illis fors obtulerat aduentum meum.

10

Una illarum interea propere præcucurrit nuntians

Me uenisce : ego ejus uidendi cupidus recta consequor.

Postquam intro adueni, extemplo ejus morbum cognoui miser :

Nam neque ut celari posset tempus spatium ullum dabat,

15

Neque uoce alia ac res monebat ipsa poterat conqueri.

Postquam aspexi, 'o facinus indignum' inquam ; et corripui ilico

Me inde lacrumans, incredibili re atque atroci percitus.

Mater consequitur : jam ut limen exirem, ad genua accedit

Lacrumans misera : miseritumst. profecto hoc sic est, ut puto.

Omnibus nobis ut res dant sese, ita magni atque humiles sumus.²⁰

Hanc habere orationem mecum principio instituit :

'O mi Pamphile, abs te quamobrem hæc abierit causam uides :

Nam uitiumst oblatum uirgini olim ab nescio quo improbo.

Nunc huc configuit, te atque alios partum ut celaret suom.'

Sed quom orata eius reminiscor, nequeo quin lacrimum miser.²⁵

'Quæque fors fortunast' inquit 'nobis quæ te hodie obtulit.

Per eam te obsecramus ambæ, si jus, si fas est, uti

Aduorsa ejus per te tecta tacitaque apud omnis sient.

Si umquam erga te animo esse amico sensisti eam, mi Pamphile,

Sine labore hanc gratiam te ut sibi des pro illa nunc rogat.³⁰

30

Ceterum de reducenda id facias, quod in rem sit tuam.

Parturire eam nec grauidam cesse ex te, solus consciu's :

Nam aiunt tecum post duobus concubuisse mensibus.

Tum, postquam ad te uenit, mensis agitur hic jam septimus :

Quod te scire ipsa indicat res. nunc si potis est, Pamphile,
 Maxume uolo doque operam, ut clam eueniat partus patrem,
 Atque adeo omnis. sed si id fieri non potest quin sentiant,
 Dicam abortum esse : scio nemini aliter suspectum fore,
 Quin, quod uerisimilest, ex te recte eum natum putent.
 Continuo exponetur : hic tibi nil est quicquam incommodi,
 Et illi miseræ indigne factam injuriam contexeris.
 Pollicitus sum, et seruare in eo certumst quod dixi fidem.
 Nam de reducenda, id uero neutiquam honestum esse arbitror :
 Nec faciam, etsi amor me grauiter consuetudoque eius tenet.
 Lacrumo, quæ posthac futurast uita, quom in mentem uenit,
 Solitudoque. o fortuna, ut numquam perpetuo es data ! |
 Sed jam prior amor me ad hanc rem exercitatum reddidit,
 Quem ego tum consilio missum feci : idem nunc huic operam dabo.
 Adest Parmeno cum pueris : hunc minumest opus
 In hac re adesse ? nam olim soli credidi,
 Ea me abstinuisse in principio, quom datast :
 Vereor, si clamorem ejus hic crebro audiat,
 Ne parturire intellegat. aliquo mihi
 Hinc ablegandus, dum parit Philumena.

ACT. III.—SCEN. 4.

PARMENO. SOSIA. PAMPHILVS.

PAR. Ain tu tibi hoc incommodum euenisse iter !
 So. Non hercle uerbis, Parmeno, dici potest
 Tantum, quam re ipsa nauigare incommodumst.

PAR. Itanest ? So. O fortunate, nescis quid mali
 Praeterieris, qui numquam es ingressus mare.
 Nam alias ut mittam miseras, unam hanc uide :
 Dies triginta aut plus co in nauis fui,

Quom interea semper mortem expectabam miser :
Ita usque aduorsa tempestate usi sumus.

PAR. Odiosum. SO. Haud clam me est : denique hercle aufugerim 10

Potius quam redeam, si eo mihi redeundum sciam.

. PAR. Olim quidem te causæ inpellet bant leues,
Quod nuuc minitare facere ut faceres, Sosia.

Sed Pamphilum ipsum video stare ante ostium :

Ite intro : ego hunc adibo, siquid me uelit. 15

Here, etiam tu hic stas ? PAM. Et quidem te expecto. PAR.

Quid est ?

PAM. In arcem transcurso opus est. PAR. Quoi homini ?

PAM. Tibi.

PAR. In arcem ? quid eo ? PAM. Callidemidem hospitem
Myconium, qui mecum una uectust, conueni.

PAR. Perii. uouisse hunc dicam, si saluos domum
Redisset umquam, ut me ambulando rumperet. 20

PAM. Quid cessas ? PAR. Quid uis dicam ? an conueniam modo ?

PAM. Immo quod constitui hodie conuenturum eum,
Non posse, ne me frustra illi expectet. uola.

PAR. At non noui hominis faciem. PAM. At faciam ut noueris : 25

Magnus, rubicundus, crispus, crassus, cæsius,
Cadauerosa facie. PAR. Di illum perduint.

Quid, si non ueniet ? mane amne usque ad uesperum ?

PAM. Maneto : curre. PAR. Non queo : ita defessus sum.

PAM. Ille abiit. quid agam infelix ? prorsus nescio
Quo pacto hoc celem, quod me orauit Myrrina,
Suæ gnatæ partum : nam me miseret mulieris.
Quod potero faciam, tamen ut pietatem colam :
Nam me parenti potius quam amori obsequi

Oportet. attat ecum Phidippum et patrem

Video : horsum pergunto. quid dicam hisce, incertus sum.

35

ACT. III.—SCEN. 5.

LACHES. PHIDIPPVS. PAMPHILVS.

LA. Dixtin dudum illam dixisse, se expectare filium ?

PH. Factum. LA. Venisse aiunt : redeat. PA. Quam causam dicam patri, Quamobrem non reducam, nescio. LA. Quem ego hic audiui loqui ?

PA. Certum affirmare est uiam me quam decreui persequi.

LA. Ipsus est de quo hoc agebam tecum. PA. Salue, mi pater.

TA. Gnate mi, salue. PH. Bene factum te aduenisse, Pamphile :

Atque adeo, quod maxumumst, saluom atque ualidum. PA. Creditur.

LA. Aduenis modo ? PA. Admodum. LA. Cedo, quid reliquit Phania

Consobrinus noster ? PA. Sane hercle homo uoluptati obsequens

Fuit, dum uixit : et qui sic sunt, haud multum heredem juuant,

Sibi uero hanc laudem relinquont ‘ uixit, dum uixit, bene.’

LA. Tum tu igitur nil attulisti hic plus una hac sententia ?

PA. Quidquid est id, quod reliquit, profuit. LA. Immo obfuit :

Nam illum uiuom et saluom uellem. PH. Impune optare istuc licet :

Ille reuiuisct jam numquam, et tamen utruin malis scio.

15

LA. Heri Philumenam ad se arcessi hic jussit. dic jussisse te.
 PH. Noli fodere. jussi. LA. Sed eam jam remittet. PH. Scilicet.

PA. Omnem rem scio ut sit gesta : adueniens audiui modo.

LA. At istos inuidos di perdant, qui hæc lubenter nuntiant.

PA. Ego me scio cauisse, ne ulla merito contumelia 20

Fieri a uobis posset : idqne si nunc memorare hic uelim,

Quam fideli animo et benigno in illam et clementi fui,

Vere possum : ni te ex ipsa hæc magis uelim resciscere :

Namque eo pacto maxume apud te meo erit ingenio fides,

Quom illa, quæ nunc in me iniquast, æqua de me dixerit. 25

Neque mea culpa hoc discidium euenisce, id testor deos.

Sed quando sese esse indignam deputat, matri meæ

Quæ concedat huiusque mores toleret sua modestia,

Neque alio pacto potest componi inter eas gratia :

Segreganda aut mater a me est, Phidippe, aut Philumena. 30

Nunc me pietas matris potius commodum suadet sequi.

LA. Pamphile, haud inuito ad auris sermo mi accessit tuos,

Quom te postputasse omnis res præ parente intellego :

Verum uide ne impulsus ira prae insistas, Pamphile.

PA. Quibus iris impulsus tandem nunc in illam iniquos
siem ? 35

Quæ numquam quiequam erga me commeritast, pater,

Quod nollem, et sæpe meritam quod uellem scio :

Amoque et lando et uementer desidero :

Nam fuisse erga me miro ingenio expertus sum,

Illique exopto ut reliquam uitam exigat 40

Cum eo uiro, me qui sit fortunatior,

Quandoquidem illam a me distrahit necessitas.

PH. Tibi id in manust ne fiat. LA. Si sanus sies,

Jube illam redire. PA. Non est consilium, pater :

Matris seruibo commodis. LA. Quo abis ? mane, 45

Mane, inquam : quo abis ? PH. Quæ hæc est pertinacia ?

LA. Dixin, Phidippe, hanc rem ægre laturum esse eum ?
Quamobrem te orabam, filiam ut remitteres.

PH. Non credidi edepol adeo inhumanum fore :
Ita nunc iſ sibi me supplicaturum putat.
Si est ut uelit reducere uxorem, licet :
Sin alioſt animo, renumeret dotem huc, eat.

LA. Ecce autem tu quoque proterue iracundus es.

PH. Percontumax redisti huc nobis, Pamphile.

LA. Decedet jam ira hæc, etsi merito iratus est.

PH. Quia paulum uobis accessit pecuniæ,
Sublati animi sunt. LA. Etiam mecum litigas ?

PH. Deliberet renuntietque hodie mihi,
Velitne an non : ut alii, si huic non est, siet.

LA. Phidippe, ades, audi paucis. abiit. quid mea ?
Postremo inter se transigant ipsi, ut lubet,
Quando nec gnatus neque hic mi quicquam obtemperant,
Quæ dico parui pendunt. porto hoc jurgium
Ad uxorem, quoius hæc fiunt consilio omnia,
Atque in eam hoc omne quod mihi ægrest euomam.

ACTVS IV.—SCEN. 1.

MYRRINA. PHIDIPPVS.

My. Perii, quid agam ? quo me uortam ? quid uiro meo respondebo

Misera ? nam audiuisse nocem pueri uisust uagientis :

Ita corripuit derepente tacitus sese ad filiam.

Quod si rescierit peperisse eam, id qua causa clam me habuisse
Dicam, non edepol seio.

Sed ostium concrepuit. credo ipsum ad me exire : nulla sum.

Ph. Uxor ubi me ad filiam ire sensit, se duxit foras :

Atque eccam. quid aüs, Myrrina ? heus tibi dico. My. Mihine, mi uir ?

Ph. Vir ego tuos sim ? tu uirum me aut hominem deputas adeo esse ?

Nam si utrumuis horum, mulier, umquam tibi uisus forem, 10
Non sic ludibrio tuis factis habitus essem. My. Quibus ?

Ph. At rogitas ?

Peperit filia ? heim, taces ? ex quo ? My. Istuc patrem rogare est æquom ?

Perii : ex quo censes nisi ex illo qui datast nuptum, obsecro ?

Ph. Credo : neque adeo arbitrari patris est aliter. sed
demiror,

Quid sit quamobrem tantopere omnis nos celare uolueris 15

Partum, præsertim quom et recte et tempore suo pepererit.

Adeon peruicaci esse animo, ut puerum præoptares perire,
Ex quo firmiorem inter nos fore amicitiam posthac scires,

Potius quam aduorsum animi tui lubidinem esset cum illo nupta !

Ego etiam illorum esse hanc culpam credidi, quæ te est penes.²⁹

My. Misera sum. Ph. Utinam sciam ita esse istue. sed
nunc mi in mentem uenit

De hac re quod locuta es olim, quom illum generum cepimus :
Nam negabas nuptam posse filiam tuam te pati
Cum eo qui meretricem amaret, qui pernoctaret foris.

My. Quamuis causam hunc suspicari quam ipsam ueram mauolo.²⁵

Ph. Multo prius sciui quam tu illum amicam habere,
Myrrina :

Verum id uitium numquam decreui esse ego adulescentiae :
Nam id est omnibus innatum. [at] pol jam aderit, [se quoque] etiam quom oderit.

Sed ut olim te ostendisti, eadem esse nil cessauisti usque
adhuc,

Ut filiam ab eo abduceres, neu quod ego egissem esset ratum.³⁰
Id nunc res indicium hæc facit, quo pacto factum uolueris.

My. Adeon me esse peruicacem censes, qui mater siem,
Ut eo essem animo, si ex usu esset nostro hoc matrimonium ?

Ph. Tun prospicere aut indicare nostram in rem quod sit potes ?

Audisti ex aliquo fortasse, qui uidisse eum diceret
Exeuntem aut intro cuntein ad amicam. quid tum postea ?
Si modeste ac raro hoc fecit, nonne dissimulare nos
Magis humanumst quam dare operam id scire, qui nos oderit ?
Nam si is posset ab ea sese drepente auellere,
Quacum tot consuessed annos, non eum hominem ducerem,⁴⁰
Nec uirum satis firmum gnatæ. My. Mitte adulescentem obsecro

Et quæ me peccasse aïs. abi, solum solus conueni,

Roga uelitne an non uxorem : si est ut dicat uelle se,
Redde : sin est autem ut nolit, recte ego consului mæ.

Ph. Siquidem ille ipse non uolt et tu sensi esse in eo,
Myrrina,

Peccatum : aderam, quoius consilio par ea fuerat prospici.
Quamobrem incendor ira, esse ausam facere hæc te injussu
meo :

Interdico ne extulisse extra ædis puerum usquam uelis.

Sed ego stultior, meis dictis parere hanc qui postulem.

Ibo intro atque edicam seruis, ne quoquam efferri sinant.

Mv. Nullam pol credo mulierem me miseriorem uiuere :
Nam ut hic latus sit, si ipsam rem ut siet rescuerit,
Non edepol clam me est, quom hoc quod leuius tam animo
irato tulit :

Nec qua uia sententia eius possit mutari scio.

Hoc mi unum ex plurimis miseriis reliquom fuerat malum,
Si puerum ut tollam cogit, quoius nos qui sit nescimus pater :
Nam quom compressast gnata, forma in tenebris nosci nou
quitast :

Neque detractum ei est quicquam, qui post posset nosci qui
siet :

Ipse eripuit ui, in digito quem habuit, uirgini abiens anulum.

Simul uereor Pamphilum ne orata nostra nequeat diutius
Celare, quom sciet alienum puerum tolli pro suo.

ACT IV.—SCEN. 2.

SOSTRATA. PAMPHILVS.

So. Non clam me est, gnate mi, tibi esse suspectum, uxorem
tuam

Propter meos mores hinc abisse, etsi ea dissimulas sedulo :

Verum ita me di ament itaque obtingant ex te quæ exopto
michi,

Ut nunquam sciens commerui, merito ut caperet odium illam
mei :

Teque ante quod me amare rebar, ei rei firmasti fidem :

Nam mi intus tuos pater narrauit modo, quo pacto me habueris
Præpositam amori tuo, nunc tibi me certumst contra gratiam
Referre, ut apud me præmium esse positum pietati scias.

Mi Pamphile, hoc et uobis et meæ commodum famæ arbitror :

Ego rus abituram hinc cum tuo me [esse] certo decreui patre, 10
Ne mea præsentia obstet, neu causa ulla restet reliqua,

Quin tua Philumena ad te redeat. Pa. Quæso quid istuc consilist ?

Illius stultitia uicta ex urbe tu rus habitatum migres ?

Haud facies, neque sinam ut qui nobis, mater, male dictum
uelit,

Mea pertinacia esse dicat factum, haud tua modestia.

Tum tuas amicas te et cognatas deserere et festos dies 15

Meo causa nolo. So. Nil pol jam istæc mihi res uoluptatis ferunt :

Dum ætatis tempus tulit, perfuncta satis sum ; satias jam
tenet

Studiorum istorum : hæc mihi nunc curast maxunia, ut nequou mea

Longinquitas ætatis obstet, mortemque exspectet meam. 20

Hic uideo me esse inuisam inmerito : tempus est concedere.

Sic optume, ut ego opinor, omnis causas præcidam omnibus :

Et me hac suspitione exsoluam et illis morem gessero.

Sine me, obsecro, hoc effugere, uolgas quod male audit mulierum.

Pa. Quam fortunatus ceteris sum rebus, absque una hac
foret,

Hanc matrem habens tales, illam autem uxorem ! So. Obsecro, mi Pamphile,

Non tute incommodam rem, ut quæquest, in animum induces pati ?

Si cetera ita sunt ut uis itaque ut esse ego illa existumo,

Mi gnate, da ueniam hanc mihi, reduce illam. Pa. Hei misero mihi.

So. Et mihi quidem : nam hæc res non minus me male habet quam te, gnate mi.

ACT. IV.—SCEN. 3.

LACHES. SOSTRATA. PAMPHILVS.

La. Quem cum istoc sermonem habueris, procul hinc stans accepi, uxor.

Istuc est sapere, qui ubi quomque opus sit animum possis flectere.

[Quod faciendum sit post fortasse, idem hoc nunc si feceris]

So. Fors fuat pol. La. Abi rus ergo hinc : ibi ego te et tu me feres.

So. Spero ecceastor. La. I ergo intro et compone quæ tecum simul Ferantur : dixi. So. Ita ut jubes faciam. Pa. Pater.

La. Quid uis, Pamphile ? Pa. Hinc abire matrem ? minuam. La. Quid ita istuc uis ?

Pa. Quia de uxore incertus sum etiam quid sim facturus. La. Quid est ?

Quid uis facere nisi reducere ? Pa. Evidem cupio et uix contineor :

Sed non minuam meum consilium : ex usu quod est, id persequar :

Credo ea gratia concordes magis, si non reddenam, fore.

LA. Nescias : uerum tua refert nil, utrum illaec fecerint,
Quando haec abierit. odiosa haec est ætas adulescentulis.
E medio æquom excedere est ; postremo nos jam fabula
Sumus, Pamphile, ‘senex atque anus.’

14

Sed uideo Phidippum egredi per tempus : accedamus.

ACT. IV.—SCEN. 4.

PHIDIPPVS. LACHES. PAMPHILVS.

PH. Tibi quoque edepol sum iratus, Philumena,
Grauiter quidem. nam hercle abs te factumst turpiter :
Esti tibi causa est de hac re : mater te inpullit :
Huic uero nulla est. LA. Opportune te mihi, Philippe, in ipso tempore ostendis. PH. Quid est ?

PA. Quid respondebo his ? aut quo pacto hoc operiam ?

LA. Dic filie rus concessuram hinc Sostratam :
Ne reuereatur, minus jam quo redeat domum. PH. Ah :
Nullam de his rebus culpam commeruit tua :
A Myrrina haec sunt mea uxore exorta omnia :

PA. Mutatio fit. PH. ea nos perturbat, Lache.

PA. Dum ne reddenam : turbent porro quam uelint.

PH. Ego, Pamphile, esse inter nos, si fieri potest, Adfinitatem hanc sanc perpetuan uolo :

Sin est ut aliter tua siet sententia,

Accipias puerum. PA. Sensit peperisse : occidi.

LA. Puerum ? quem puerum ? PH. Natus est nobis nepos :
Nam abducta a uobis prægnas fuerat filia,
Neque fuisse prægnatem uinquam ante hunc sciui diem.

LA. Bene, ita me di ament, nuntias : et gaudeo
Natum illum et tibi illam saluam. sed quid mulieris

20

Uxorem habes aut quibus moratam moribus !
 Nosne hoc celatos tam diu ? nequeo satis,
 Quam hoc mihi uidetur factum prae*re*p*ro*loqui.

PH. Non tibi illud factum minus placet quam mihi, Lache. 28

PA. Etiam si dudum fuerat ambiguom hoc mihi,
 Nunc non est, quom eam sequitur alienus puer.

LA. Nulla tibi, Pamphile, hic jam consultatiost.

PA. Perii. LA. Hunc uidere saepe optabamus diem,
 Quom ex te esset aliquis, qui te appellaret patrem :
 Euenit : habeo gratiam dis. PA. Nullus sum.

LA. Redduc uxorem ac noli aduorsari mihi.

PA. Pater, si ex me illa liberos uellet sibi
 Aut se esse mecum nuptam, satis certo scio,
 Non clam me haberet quod celasse intellego.
 Nunc quom ejus alienum a me esse animū sentiam
 (Nec conuenturum inter nos posthac arbitror),
 Quamobrem reducam ? LA. Mater quod suasit sua,
 Adulescens mulier fecit. mirandumne id est ?
 Censem te posse reperire ullam mulierem,
 Quæ careat culpa ? an quia non declinuant uiri ?

PH. Vosmet uidete jam, Lache et tu Pamphile,
 Remissan opus sit uobis reductan domum :
 Neutra in re uobis difficultas a me erit.
 Uxor quid faciat, in manu non est mea.

Sed quid faciemus puero ? LA. Ridicule rogas :
 Quidquid futurumst, huic suom reddas scilicet,
 Ut alamus nostrum. PA. Quem ipse neglexit pater,
 Ego alam ? LA. Quid dixti ? echo an non alemus, Pamphile ?
 Prodemos quæso potius ? quæ hæc amentiast ?
 Enimuero prorsus jam tacere non queo.
 Nam cogis ea quæ nolo ut præsente hoc loquar.
 Ignarum censes tuarum lacrumarum esse me ?

30

44

50

Aut quid sit id quod sollicitere ad hunc modum ?

Primum hanc ubi dixti causam, te propter tuam

Matrem non posse habere hanc uxorem domi :

Pollicitast ea se concessuram ex ædibus.

Nunc postquam ademptam hanc quoque tibi causam uides,

Puer quia clam te est natus, nactus alteram es.

Erras, tui animi si me esse ignarum putas.

Aliquando tandem huc animum ut adjungas tuom,

Quam longum spatium amandi amicam tibi dedi !

Sumptus quos fecisti in eam quam animo æquo tuli !

Egi atque oraui tecum uxorem ut duceres,

Tempus dixi esse : impulsu duxisti meo.

Quæ tum obsecutus mihi fecisti ut decuerat ;

Nunc animum rursum ad meretricem induxti tuom :

Cui tu obsecutus facis huic adeo injuriam :

Nam in eandem uitam te reuolutum denuo

Video esse. PA. Mene ? LA. Te ipsum : et facis injuriam. 70

Configis falsas causas ad discordiam,

Ut cum illa uiuas, testem hanc quom abs te amoueris :

Sensitque ad eos uxor. nam ei causa alia quæ fuit,

Quamobrem abs te abiret ? PH. Plane hic diuinat : nam id est.

PA. Dabo iusjurandum nil esse istorum tibi. LA. Ah, 75
Redduc uxorem, aut quamobrem non opus sit cedo.

PA. Non est nunc tempus. LA. Puerum accipias : nam is quidem

In culpa non est : post de matre uidero.

PA. Omnibus modis miser sum nec quid agam scio :
Tot me nunc rebus miserum concludit pater.

Abibo hinc, præscens quando promoueo parum.

Nam puerum injussu credo non tollent meo,

Præsertim in ea re quom sit mi adiutrix socrus.

LA. Fugis ? hem, nec quicquam certi respondes mihi ?

Num tibi uidetur esse apud sese ? sine :

85

Puerum, Phidippe, mihi cedo : ego alam. PH. Maxume.

Non mirum fecit mea uxor, si hoc ægro tulit :

Amaræ mulieres sunt, non facile hæc ferunt.

Propterea hæc irast : nam ipsa narrauit mihi :

Id ego hoc præsente tibi nolueram dicere :

90

Neque illi credebam primo : nunc uerum palamst.

Nam ominino abhorrere animum huic video a nuptiis.

LA. Quid ergo agam, Phidippe ? quid das consili ?

PH. Quid agas ? meretricem hanc primum adeundam censeo.

Oremus : accusemus : grauius denique

95

Minitemur, si cum illo habuerit rem postea.

LA. Faciam ut mones. echo puer, curre ad Bacchidem hanc
Vicinam nostram : huc euoca, uerbis meis.

Ut te oro porro in hac re adiutor sis mihi. PH. Ah,

Jamdudum dixi idemque nunc dico, Lache :

100

Manere adfinitatem hanc inter nos uolo,

Si ullo modo est ut possit : quod spero fore.

Sed uin adesse me una, dum istam conuenis ?

LA. Immo abi uero, aliquam puero nutricem para.

ACT. V.—SCEN. 1.

BACCHIS (CVM DVABVS ANCILLIS). LACHES.

BA. Non hoc de nilost, quod Laches me nunc conuentam esse expetit :

Nec pol me multum fallit, quin quod suspicor sit quod uelit.

LA. Videndumst ne minus propter iram hanc inpetrem quam possiem,

Aut nequid faciam plus, quod post me minus fecisse satius sit.

Adgrediar. Bacchis, salute.

BA. Salue, Lache. LA. Credo edepol te non nil mirari, Bacchis,

Quid sit quapropter te huc foras puerum euocare jussi.

BA. Ego pol quoque etiam timida sum, quom uenit in mentem quæ sim,

Ne nomen mi quæsti obsiet : nam mores facile tutor.

LA. Si uera dicis, nil tibi est a me pericli, mulier :
Nam jam ætate ea sumi, ut non siet peccato mi ignosci aequom :
Quo magis omnis res cautius ne temere faciam adcuero.
Nam si facis facturaue es, bonas quod par est facere,
Inscitum offerre injuriam tibi inmerenti iniquomst.

BA. Est magna ecastor gratia de istac re quam tibi habeam :¹⁵
Nam qui post factam injuriam se expurget, parum mi proposit.
Sed quid istuc est ? LA. Meum receptas filium ad te Pamphilum. BA. Ah.

LA. Sine dicam : uxorem hanc prius quam duxit uostrum amorem pertuli.
Mane : nondum etiam dixi id quod uolui. hic nunc habet
uxorem :

Quære alium tibi firmiorem, dum tibi tempus consulendi est :²⁰
Nam neque ille hoc animo erit ætatem, neque pol tu eadem ista ætate.

BA. Quis id ait ? LA. Socrus. BA. Mene ? LA. Te ipsam :
et filiam abduxit suam,

Puerumque ob eam rem clam uoluit, natus qui est, extinguere.

BA. Si aliud scirem, qui firmare meam apud uos possem fidem,

Sanctius quam jusjurandum, id pollicerer tibi, Lache,
Segregatum habuisse, uxorem ut duxit, a me Painphilum.

LA. Lepida es. sed scin, quid uolo potius sodes facias
BA. Quid ? cedo.

LA. Eas ad mulieres hue intro atque istuc jusjurandum idem

Policeare illis. exple animum eis teque hoc crimine expedi.

BA. Faciam. quod pol, si esset alia ex hoc quæstu, haud faceret, scio,

30

Ut de tali causa nuptæ mulieri se ostenderet.

Sed nolo esse falsa fama gnatum suspectum tuom,

Nec leuiorem uobis, quibus est minime æquom, eum uiderier

Inmerito : nam meritus de me est, quod queam illi ut com-modem.

LA. Facilem beneuolumque lingua tua jam tibi me red-didit :

35

Nam non sunt solæ arbitratæ hæc : ego quoque etiam credidi.

Nunc quam ego te esse præter nostram opinionem comperi,

Fac eadem ut sis porro : nostra utere amicitia, ut uoles :

Aliter si facias—sed me reprimam, ne ægre quicquam ex me audias.

Verum hoc te moneo unum, amicus qualis sim aut quid pos-siem

40

Potius quam inimicus, periculum facias.

ACT. V.—SCEN. 2.

PHIDIPPVS (CVM NVTRICE). LACHES. BACCHIS (CVM ANCILLIS).

PH. Nil apud me tibi

Defieri patiar, quin quod opus sit benigne præbeatur.

Sed quom tu eris satira atque ebria, ut puer satur sit facito.

LA. Noster socer, uideo, uenit : puero nutricem adducit.

Phidippe, Bacchis dejerat persancte. PH. Hæcine east ? LA.

Hæc est.

PH. Nec pol istæ metuont deos, neque has respicere deos opinor.

BA. Ancillas dedo : quolubet cruciatu per me exquire.

5

Hæc res hic agitur : Pamphilo me facere ut redeat uxor
Oportet : quod si perficio, nou pænitet me famæ,
Solam fecisse id quod aliæ meretrices facere fugitant.

10

LA. Phidippe, nostras mulieres suspectas fuisse falso
Nobis in re ipsa inuenimus : porro hanc nunc experiamur.
Nam si compererit crimini tua se uxor credidisse,
Missam iram faciet : sin, ut est, ob eam rem iratus gnatus,
Quod peperit uxor clam, id leuest : cito ab eo hæc ira ab-scedet.

15

Profecto in hac re nil malist, quod sit discidio dignum.

PH. Velim quidem hercle. LA. Exquire : adest : quod satis sit, faciet ipsa.

PH. Quid mi istæc narras ? an quia non tute dudum audisti,
De hac re animus meus ut sit, Laches ? illis modo explete animum.

LA. Quæso edepol, Bacchis, quod mihi es pollicita tute ut serues.

20

BA. Ob eam rem uin ergo intro eam ? LA. I, exple animum eis, coge ut credant.

BA. Eo, etsi scio pol eis fore meum conspectum inuisum hodie :

Nam nupta meretrici hostis est, a uiro ubi segregatast.

LA. At hæc amicæ erunt, ubi quamobrem adueneris resci-scent :

PH. At easdem amicas fore tibi promitto, rem ubi cognorint :

25

Nam illas errore et te simul suspitione exolues.

BA. Perii, pudef Philumenæ : me sequimini intro huc ambæ.

LA. Quid est quod mihi malim quam quod huic intellego euiri,

Ut gratiam ineat sine suo dispendio, et mihi prospicit?
 Nam si est ut haec nunc Pamphilum uere ab se segregarit,³⁰
 Scit sibi nobilitatem ex eo et rem natam et gloriam esse:
 Referetque gratiam ei, unaque nos sibi opera amicos iunget.

 Qui ob rem nullam misit, frustra ubi totum desedi diem,
 Myconium hospitem dum expecto in arce Callidemidem.
 Itaque ineptus hodie dum illi sedeo, ut quisque uenerat,
 Accedebam: ‘adulescens, dic dum quæso, es tu Myconius?’⁵
 ‘Non sum.’ ‘at Callidemides?’ ‘noñ.’ ‘hospitem ecquem

Hie habes?’ omnes negabant: neque eum quemquam esse
 arbitror.

Denique hercle iam pudebat: abii. sed quid Bacchidem
 Ab nostro ad fine exeuntem video? quid huic hic est rei?

BA. Parmeno, opportune te offers: propere curre ad Pamphilum.¹⁰

PA. Quid eo? BA. Dic me orare ut ueniat. PA. Ad te?
 BA. Immo ad Philum ueniam.

PA. Quid rei est? BA. Tua quod nil re fert, percontari

PA. Nil aliud dicam? BA. Etiam: cognosse anulum illum
 Myrrinam

Gnate suæ fuisse, qnem ipsus olim dederat mihi. PA. Scio.
 Tantumne est? BA. Tantum: aderit continuo, hoc ubi ex te Sed cessas ? Pa. Minume equidem : nam hodie mihi potestas haud datast :

Ita cursando atque ambulando totum hunc contriui diem.

Ba. Quantam obtuli aduentu meo lætitiam Pamphilo hodie !

Quot commodas res attuli ! quot autem ademi curas !

Gnatum ei restituo, pæne qui harum ipsiusque opera periiit : 20

Uxorem, quam numquam ratus posthac se habiturum, reddo :

Qua re suspectus suo patri et Phidippo fuit, exsolui :

Hic adeo his rebus anulus fuit initium inueniundis.

Dicitque sese illi anulum, dum luctat, detraxisse.

Eum haec cognouit Myrrina in digito modo me habente :

Rogat unde sit : narro omnia haec : indest cognitio facta,

Philumenam compressam esse ab eo et filium inde hunc natum.

Hæc tot propter me gaudia illi^r contigisse lætor :

Ego dum illo licitumst usa sum benigno et lerido et comi.

PUBLII TERENTII AFRI HECYRA.

PROLOGUS.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Hecyra, h. e. ἔκυρα—socrus, “A mother-in-law.” The play is therefore named from the main feature in its plot. This prologue seems to have been written for the third representation of the play, which failed of a hearing on the first and second exhibition. For “Hecyra,” the dative Hecyrae is read by Fleckeisen, cf. Madvig. 246, obs. 2. Bentley proposed “fabulai” for “fabulæ,” but see note on Andr. II. vi. 8, “hospitai” v. “hospitæ.”—Cum data Noia est, “When it was first presented,” cf. Heaut. Prol. 33, “quom dabit Alias novas;” Cic. Tusc. II. i. 1, “Livius fabulam dedit.”

2. Vitium, “Impediment,” a term borrowed from augury. Cf. Cic. De Nat. Deor. II. iv. “Vitio creatos consules esse.”—Calamitas, “damage” or “misfortune”—according to Donatus, derived from “calamus” culmus, “a tempest damaging the crops,” cf. Donat. ad Eun. I. i. 34. But others (cf. Smith’s Dict. in voc.) derive it from “cado,” by permutation of d and l.

3. Spectari, “to be seen out,” or “to the end:” cognosci, cf. Andr. Prol. 24, “Rem cognoscite.”—Ita populus studio, &c., “To such a degree had the people fixed its attention on a rope-dancer, being lost in wonder through their interest in his performances.”—Studio stupidus, h. e. “stupens.”—Funambulo—the “funambulus” seems to have been the σκωωβάτης of the Greeks. Horace, in Epist. II. i. 210, alludes to him, “Ille per extentum funem mihi posse videtur Ire poeta,” &c.—Animum occuparat, h. e. “occupatum habebat.”

5. Pro nova, “In the light of a new piece,” Adelph. V. viii. 28, “Pro patro est.”—Item referre, &c., “Would not bring it on again a second time, that (by keeping it back) he might be able to sell it again;” h. e. “at other games, to the Ædiles, whose duty it was to purchase plays for the festivals.”—Sed . . . This lacuna with the word “Sed,” is a suggestion of Fleckeisen, who supposes something to have slipped out.

8. Alias. The Andria was the only play earlier than the Hecyra, if the second representation of that play was in B.C. 165. The last representation but one was in 160, at the funeral games of L. Æmilius Paulus. If this prologue belongs to that representation, alias would comprehend all but the Adelphi.

ALTER PROLOGUS.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. AMBIVIUS TURPIO, a favourite Roman actor, speaks this prologue, condescending to undertake an office, more proper to an inferior actor, in order to assist the success of the play. He reminds his audience how, ere now, he has done a like good office for Cæcilius, whose plays the public were inclined to dislike, but who has now surmounted this adverse feeling, through his aid.—Orator ad vos venio, &c., “I come before you as a pleader, in the garb or guise of prologue-speaker.”—Orator = “cui causa defendenda mandatur,” cf. Heaut. Prol. 11., note.—Ornatu prologi, Parry thinks should be taken literally, and gathers from it that the speaker of the prologue wore an appropriate dress.

2. Sinite exorator ut sim, “Allow me to gain the end for which I plead.” Cf. Andr. V. iii. 30, “Sine te exorem;” III. iv. 13, “Vixquo id exoro;” Plaut. Bacch. V. ii. 51, “Sine hoc exorare abs te.” “Sino” is used constantly in Terence and Plautus in formulas of entreaty.—Eodem ut jure quo jure. For this repetition of the antecedent in the relative clause, see Madvig. § 315 a, obs. 2, Cæsar., B. G. i. 6, “Duo itinera—quibus itineribus.”

4. Noras qui exactas, &c., “I, who caused new plays that had been hissed off, to become established (or ‘grow old’) in public favour, lest poet with his writing should pass into oblivion.” There is an Antithesis here between novas and inveterascerent, “the plays that, when new, had been hissed off, became ‘veteres,’ through the favour which Ambivius won them.” For the construction, noras fcci ut, &c., for “feci ut novæ,” &c., cf. Andr. Prol. 3. For exactas, see Andr. Prol. 27, “Spectandæ an exigendæ sint vobis prius.”

6. Quas primum Cæcili, “In the case of the plays of Cæcilius, which I played at first when they were new, in some of them I was hissed off, in some I scarce stood my ground.” We learn hence that Cæcilius, who, according to Donatus, was able to take Terence by the hand, and aid him with his good word and his hospitality, had some difficulty in his early career to win his way with the Roman playgoers. Ambivius refers to Cæcilius as an established favourite. Horace, in Epist. II. i. 59, distinguishes between him and Terence, “Vincere Cæcilius gravitate, Terentius arte.”—Partim, cf. below, III. iii. 3, and Madvig. Gr. 284, obs. 4. In this case the adverb is used as the acc. of definition or limitation. Vix steti. Ruhnken and Gronov. illustrate this phrase, used of actors and plays, by Hor. Epist. II. i. 176, “Securus cadat, an recto stet fabula talo.” Phorm. Prol. 8, “Quom stetit olim nova.”

9. Spe inserta, certum, &c., “I took upon me certain labour, while my expectation was uncertain”—

“I was content to hazard certain toil
For an uncertain gain.”—Colman.

Compare with the Antithesis here v. 18, “otio” “negotio.”

10. Easdem agere cœpi, &c., "I began to act these same rejected pieces with the best of my powers, that so I might have other new plays by the same author to act, lest haply I should withdraw him from his profession." He took up the damned plays in the hope that by reversing the public verdict on them, others would be produced by the same poet, for him to act.—Placite sunt, "They gave satisfaction." So "licuit" and "licitum est," are both used as "placuit" and "placitum est." Servius on AEn. x. 106, "Haud licitum;" Andr. IV. i. 21, "Complacita est tibi."—Restitui in locum, cf. Andr. IV. i. 57, "Restitue, in quem me acceperisti locum;" Phorm. Prol. 33; Plaut. M. G. III. i. 108, "Haud facile te in eundem rursus restitues locum."

15. Ab studio, &c. This seems a sort of Hendiadys. Construe, "Well-nigh estranged from the profession and practice of the dramatic art." For studio compare ver. 11. For arte musical, Heaut. Prol. 23; Phorm. Prol. 17, notes.—In præsentia, "At the time," cf. Adel. II. ii. 14, "Quin quicquid possem mallem auferre potius in præsentia;" Heaut. V. ii. 9. Otio—negotio, cf. ver. 9, incertâ, certum, &c.

20. Aequo animo. Cf. Andr. Prol. 24. "Adeste æquo animo," Heaut. Prol. 35.—Per silentium, "With the advantage of silence," or "by favour of silence," cf. Heaut. Prol. 36, "Statariam agere ut liceat per silentium," and see notes ibid.—Calamitas, cf. above, Prol. i. 2, "Vitium et calamitas." The metaphor from the "storm" is kept up in sedabit, in ver. 24.

25. Pugilum gloria, "de fiers athlètes," Madame Dacier. "Some burly pugilists." The words are a Periphrasis for "pugiles gloriosi," according to Donatus. So in Greek, βίη Πριάμοιο, i. e. Πρίαμος. Commentators quote Hor. Epist. II. i. 182, "Sæpe etiam audacem fugat hoc terretque Poëtam, &c.; and Parry adds Plaut. Pænul. Prol. 17—43, in illustration of the interruptions to which a new piece was liable. The 26th verse is as it were in a parenthesis, so that there is no need to read with Bentley accedens for "accessit."

27. Comitum conuentus, "The groups of attendants," either on the "pugilists" or on the wealthier spectators. Bentley suggested the reading comiti, h. e. comitii, the "assembly."—Exirem foras, cf. above, 7, "Partim sum earum exactus."

29. Vetere in novâ—ut essem, "I began to adopt my old custom in the case of this new play, namely, to try again." The clause, In eperiendo ut essem, explains vetere consuetudine: and the use of sum is illustrated by reference to Ter. Heaut. III. i. 63, Illos ibi esse; V. ii. 30, Ibi nunc sum; Hecyr. I. ii. 39, Istic sum, in all which cases sum, as here, is i. q. "to be engaged in;" "to engage oneself in." With placeo in ver. 31: cf. ver. 13, Placite sunt.

32. Datum iri gladiatores, "That a show of gladiators is about to be exhibited." gladiatores = "gladiatorium spectaculum," as in Cic. Ep. ad Div. x. 32, "Gladiatoribus Gallos equites immisit in populum."—Pugnant de loco, "They squabble for seats." Cf. Plaut. Pænul. Prol. 19—23, whence it appears that it was necessary to be very early on the ground, if one wished for a seat.

34. Meum tutari locum, "While the spectators were fighting for places on the 'subsellia,' I could not maintain my place—the stage." There is a pun intended here, on the double meaning of "locus."—Nunc turba non est—This is the reading of the Bembine MS.

37. Potestas condecorandi, &c., "To you is given an opportunity of gracing (with your presence and favourable hearing) the scenic games." For potestas, so used, cf. Andr. III. iii. 9, "Cujus tibi potestas summa servandi datur." In ver. 39, 40 Ambivius advocates "free trade in the Drama. per vos, "through your means." Cf. Ter. Phorm. Prol. 16, "In medio omnibus Palmam esse positam," &c.—Facite ut vostra auctoritas, &c., "Cause your influence to second and assist my influence," viz., in securing for Terence that patient hearing which I formerly won for Cæcilius, though after much difficulty.

41. Si numquam arare — vostris commodis. Cf. Heaut. Prol. 48—50, notes, where these lines occur. Probably they are an interpolation here. Si used here as a form of adjuration, as in Ter. Andr. I. v. 57, "Si te in germani fratriis dilexi loco;" Virg. Aen. iv. 317, "Si bene quid de te merui.—In animum induxi. See note at Heaut. Prol. 49.

44. Qui in tutelam meam, &c. The antecedent clause is, of course, to be found in ver. 46.—Se in rostram commisit fidem, "Has thrown himself on your good faith." See this phrase again in Hecyr. I. ii. 34.—Inique iniqui irrideant. Stälbaum illustrates this play on words by Plaut. Amphitr. Prol. 34, "Juste ab justis justus sum orator datus."

47. Causam accipite, "Take up the cause (of the Poet)." The phrase, says Gronovius, is used properly of "patroni," or "causidici." "Causam accipere" is therefore i. q. "patrocinari;" Westerhov. quotes Plaut. Mostell. V. ii. 23, "Accipito hanc ad te litem."

49. Precio emptas meo, "Purchased at my own cost," i. e. by the actor, not the Ædiles. Ruhnken and other commentators gather hence, and from Juvenal, vii. 87 ("Intactam Paridi nisi vendit Agaven"), that actors sometimes purchased plays as a private venture, cf. Prol. i. 7. Madame Dacier explains the words as "achetées au prix que je leura imarqué:" purchased, i. e. for the Ædiles, at a valuation, for which the manager Ambivius was responsible. But this, though ingenious, is not borne out.

ACTUS I.—Sc. I.

PHILOTIS and Syra, an old woman, begin to unfold the plot of the play; which is more fully developed in scene II. These two, who are otherwise unconnected with the action, talk over the marriage of Pamphilus, and his consequent desertion of Bacchis. The old woman takes occasion thence to advise the gay Philotis to fleece all the male sex while she can.

1. Per pol quam paucos = Pol perquam paucos, by the figure Tmesis. Cf. Ter. Andr. III. ii. 6, "Per ecastor scitus puer," where see note, and Plaut. Casina II. vi. 18, "Per pol sæpe peccas." For pol= ædepol, cf. Plaut. Men. H. G., 16 and 279, the sentiment here expressed; cf. Ter. Andr. III. i. 2, "Fidelem laud ferme mulieri invenias virum."—Erenire, "turn up," as in a lottery. Parry quotes Adel. V. iii. 29, "Mea, quæ præter spem cvenere, utantur sine."

3. Vel hic jurabat, &c., "Even Pamphilus here, for example, used to swear, how often and how solemnly!" For "vel," which Parry Englishes, "to go no further than," see Heaut. IV. vi. 2, "Vel me hæc deambulatio Quam non laboriosa;" where see also the notes of this editor on quam used as here. See also Andr. I. i. 109, "Quam familiariter," notes.—Ut = ita ut.

5. Ducturum uxorem domum! Domum duco applies to the husband, nubo to the wife, cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 41; "Demum duxi," Aulul. 443, H. G.—Ovid. Met. ix. 764, "Sacra quibus qui ducat abest, ubi nubimus ambæ." "Duco" came to be used absolutely.—Hem, "Look you."

7. Ne quoiusquam misereat (te, sc.), "To have pity on none." For this construction cf. Madvig., sect. 292.—Quin spolies, &c., "But strip, pillage, tear to shreds whomsoever you may chance to pounce upon." The metaphor is from beasts of prey, of which "nanciscor" is properly used (cf. Hor. Od. III. xi. 41, "Quæ velut naætæ vitulos leanæ Singulos eheu lacerant"). For the verbs "spolio" and "lacero," used as here, see Plaut. Bacchid. V. i. 6, "Chrysalus me hodie laceravit, Chrysalus me miserum spoliavit."—Admutilo is used by Plautus in the same sense as "mutilo" in this passage. Cf. Capt. II. ii. 19, "Verum si frugi est, usque admutilabit probè." For the use of "quemque," h. e. "quemcunque," cf. Plant. Menæchm. 619 (Hildyard), "Omnia mala ingerebat, quemquem aspexerat," and ibid. 1054, H. G. Others read "quemque," for which compare Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. ii. 5, quoted by Parry, and others, "Quemque a milite hoc videritis," &c.

9. Utin' exinium neminem habeam? "Do you mean that I'm to make no exception?" The construction is "Visne uti eximum," &c. "Eximius" and "egregius," are words properly used of victims selected ("eximo") from a herd (e grege) for sacrifice. Parry compares the Gr. ἔξαπτος. See Cic. de Divin. in Q. Cæcil. 16, "Te illi unum eximum, cui consuleret, fuisse."—Exinium neminem = "no fancy-man."—Urine, cf. Phorm. V. vi. 34, "Urine haec igneraret suum patrem" Hecyr. II. i. 2.—Nemo quisquam, a redundancy, with which cf. Eun. II. i. 20, "Hoc nemo fuit Minus ineptus, magis severus quisquam."

11. Quin ita paret sese, "Without making up his mind"—"without laying himself out;" for this use of "paro" cf. Andr. V. iv. 6; "Itane hue paratus advenis?" Phorm. II. iii. 80. Suam voluptatem expletat must be taken with abs te. Cf. Andr. I. ii. 17, "Animum ut expleret suum."—Quam minimo pretio, "At the cheapest cost." For amabo, "prythee," in ver. 13, cf. Heaut. II. iv. 24, note; Plaut. Men. H. G. 291.

14. Tamen pol eandem injuriumst, &c., "Yet, 'faith, 'tis unjust to be the same to all." "Injurius" occurs in Andr. II. iii. 4, and Heaut. II. iii. 79, "Multimodis injurius;" Plaut. Aul. H. G. 653, "Injurium est."—Te captent, "They seek to entrap you;" a metaphor, according to Grouovius, from the Gladiator's science.—Captatio is, i. q. "petitio, cum alter alteri insidiatur ad ictum inferendum;" cf. Plant. Mostell. V. i. 21, "Astute mihi captandum est cum illoc;" Pœnul. V. ii. 73, "Qui hue advenisti nos captatum," Pseud. V. i. 6, &c.

18. Tibi hæc sententia? "or why (have not) you my mind," hæc is used δεικτικῶς. With this passage commentators compare Hor. Od. IV. x. 7 "Quæ mens est hodie, cur eadem non puer fuit," &c.

ACTUS I.—Sc. II.

PARMENO, on his road to the Piræus to welcome home his young master, Pamphilus, meets Philotis and Syra. The former gathers from Parmeno the truth of what she has heard from Bacchis about Pamphilus's marriage; how at first it was against his will, and how he began by neglecting his wife, but through her gentleness and neck endurance, contrasted with the ill-tempers of Bacchis, at last became attached to her, in spite of himself. How Pamphilus, at this point, was sent by his father, Laches, to look after some property of a deceased relative at Imbros, leaving his young wife with her mother-in-law, Sostrata; and how, after a time, Philumena left her mother-in-law's house, and went to her own mother, from whom, on pretence of sickness, she will not return. She refuses to see anyone, and Laches has been to see her father, Phidippus, on the subject.

2. Ad Portum (Piræum, sc.) percontatum, “to ascertain,” th. “contus,” the pole, with which seamen sound the depths. The form, “percunctor,” seems to be only a variation of “percontor.”—Scirte, a mute person, th. σκιρτᾶν.—Uti tum dicas, “Mind you then say so.”—Understand “volo,” or some such verb before uti, cf. Act. I. Sc. i. ver. 9.

4. Nullus dixeris. Nullus is i. q. non, as in Eun. II. i. 10, “Memini tametsi nullus moneas;” Andr. II. ii. 33, “Ac nullus quidem,” note; Plaut. Aul. 747 (H.), “Nullus’t tam parvi pretii.” Construe, “Don’t say anything.”—Causā hāc integrā, “This excuse new and fresh,” in reserve for another occasion.

8. Salve mecastor Parmeno. Mecastor is “Me Castor adjuvet. “Mecastor” and, “ecastor” were women’s oaths, cf. Plaut. Aul. H. G. 28; Men. H. G., 130, Aedepol, cf. Men. H. G. 16.—Oblectasti tam diu? “Where have you been taking your pleasure this long time?” cf. Adelph. I. i. 24, “In eo me oblecto.”

12. Biennium ibi perpetuum—tuli, “There, wretched as I was, I bore with him a whole two years.” For “tuli,” used as here, cf. below, IV. iii. 4, “Ibi ego te et tu me feres,” and Virg. AEn. iii. 327, “Juvene nque superbū Servitio enixæ tulimus.”

15. Consilium contempsisse, “And that you scouted your plan” (viz., of leaving Athens). Cf. Andr. IV. iii. 18, “Repudio quod consilium primum intenderam”—“te desiderium Athenarum cepisse” = “that regret for Athens possessed you,” or “struck you;” Cic. ad Fam. II. 11, “Mirum me desiderium tenet urbis.”

18. Antiquā ut consuetudine—convivium, “That after the good old fashion I might spend a merry time among you unrestrictedly.” Agitare is so used in Heaut. IV. iv. 11, “Apud eum miles Dionysia agitat;” Ov. Met. vii. 431, “Agitant convivia patres.”—Nam illi—præfinito loqui. Here “illī” is i. q. “illie,” as in Adelph. I. ii. 36, “Ego illi maxumam partem feram.”—Nisi præfinito, “Unless in set phrase.” For this adverbial form of the adjective or participle, see Madvig. Gr. 198, obs. 2, note r. Cf. “merito,” “consulto,” “sortito,” &c.

20. Haud opinor commode—militem, "I don't think the soldier was polite in thus limiting your speech." "Commode" = "benè et blandè," Donatus; cf. Heaut. III. ii. 10, "Mulier commoda."—Sed quid hoc negotist, "But what's this business." Cf. Andr. V. ii. 8, "Quid istic tibi negotist?"—Animum inducere, cf. Adelph. I. i. 43 (note), "Sie animum induco meum;" Andr. V. i. 15.—Habere autem? "Have a wife indeed?"—Eho tu, an non habet? "Why look you, has he not got one?"

25. Firmæ hæ vereor ut sint nuptiæ, "I fear this marriage won't be firmly cemented." Cf. below I. ii. 101, "Quid adhuc habent infirmitatis nuptiæ?" Phorm. V. i. 6, "Quom scirem infirmas nuptias Hasce esse."—Ita Di deæque faxint, "May the gods and goddesses grant it, if," &c. Cf. Plaut. Aul. 213, "Ita Di faxiut." For the form "faxint," cf. Andr. IV. iv. 13; Menæchm. H. G. 37.—Si in rem est Bacchidis, "If 'tis for the interest of Bacchis." In Andr. III. iii. 14, we find "In rem utriusque," and in Aulul. H. 90, "Quod in rem esse utriusque arbitremur."

29. Non est opus prolatu, "It must not be divulged." For this construction, see Andr. III. ii. 10, note, Madvig. Gr. 266, obs. For "profero" in this sense, Heaut. V. ii. 41, "Rem profer palam," and below, at ver. 78, of this scene. Nempe eā causā, ut ne id fiat palam, "For this reason doubtless, that it may not get abroad." Heaut. IV. iii. 43, "Rem facias palam."

31. Ita me Di amabunt, "The gods love me." Cf. Plaut. Men. 195, "Dii te amabunt." In Ter. Heaut. II. iii. 67, "Ita me Di ament."

33. Nunquam tam dices commodè, ut, &c., "You will never speak so pleasantly, as to induce me to trust my back to your safe keeping." For "commodè," cf. above, 20, "Haud opinor commodè." For the phrase "tergum cmmittere in fidem alienius," cf. Caesar. B. G. viii. 23, "Cu-jusquam fidei suam committere salutein." Parmeno speaks as a slave cf. Heaut. IV. iv. 6, "Syrus mihi tergo pœnas pendet."

35. Quasi tu non multo malis, &c., "Now don't say so, Parmeno. As if you were not much more eager to tell me this, than I, who ask, to know it." Multo malis, cf. Heaut. V. i. 55, note.

37. Illud mihi ritiumst, &c. (aside to the audience). "That's my greatest fault," viz., "to be a blab."—Ad ingenium redit, "You are coming to yourself." Cf. Adelph. I. i. 46, "Rursum ad ingenium reddit," note—Istic sum, "I am engaged therewith," i. e. "I am attending to you." Cf. above, Prol. v. 30, note; Heaut. V. ii. 30, "Ibi nunc sum;" III. i. 63, "Illos ibi esse."

40. Amabat, ut quom maximè, tum Pamphilus, "Pamphilus was then most madly in love with Bacchis, when," &c. For the phrase "ut cum maxime" (sc. ita), see Andria, V. i. 4, "Quom maximè." Heaut. IV. v. 40; Adelph. IV. i. 2.

44. Præsidium velle, &c., Ruhnken quotes Tacit Annal. i. 3, "Quo pluribus munimentis insisteret." Madame Dacier translates, "Qu'il n'avoit que lui d'enfant, et le soutien de sa vieillesse."—Ille se ("deturum," sc.) primo negare. Historic infinitive.—Animi incertus, "Wavering in mind." So Phorm. IV. i. 12, "Consilii incertum;" Livy i. 7, "Confusus atque incertus animi." Madvig. Gr. 289 b.

48. Tundendo atque odio, "By importunity and boring." For "tundo," in this sense, cf. Andr. II. ii. 11, "Obtundis, tametsi in-telligo;" Eun. III. v. 6, "Rogitando obtundat." Fer odio ("by boring him"), cf. Phorm. V. vii. 44, "Si porro esse odiosi pergitis;" V. vi. 9, "Nunquam tu odio tuo me vinceas;" Plaut. Curc. 195, "Odium me vocas;" Menæchm. H. G. 230, "Odiosum;" Hor. Sat. I. vii. 6, "Odio qui posset vincere Regem."—Despondit ei natam, "Contracted him to the daughter," for "eum natæ," cf. Andr. I. i. 75, note.

50. Illud, h. e. "the mere betrothal."—Usque—donee, &c., "Even up to the very time of the nuptials." Perhaps there is an Aposiopesis here as in Virg. Aen. ii. 100, "Donec Calchante ministro—" This seems to be the view of Westerhov.

53. Ut ipsam Bacchidem—ejus commiseresceret, "That, I'm sure, even Bacchis, had she been present, would have pitied him, at that juncture (ibi)."
For the imperfects "adesset," "commiseresceret," cf. Adelph. II. i. 22, "Si possidererem," &c.: and for the construction after "commiseresceret," see above, I. i. 7, "Ne cujusquam miseroat;" Heaut. IV. v. i., note.

55. Spatium solitudinis, "An opportunity of being alone." Cf. below, III. iii. 14, "Nam neque ut celari posset tempus spatiū ullum dabant;" Phorm. IV. iv. 21, "Spatium apparandis nuptiis."

59. At te Di deaque perdunt, &c., "Now may all the gods," &c.
For "At," expressing indignation, as here, see notes on Audr. IV. i. 42; Virg. Aen. ii. 535; Heaut. V. iv. 9. For "Perdunt," cf. Menæchm. H. G. 223.—Cum isto odio, "With that boring of yours." "Cum tuā odiosā importunitate." For "cum," thus used, Westerhov. quotes Andr. V. iv. 38, "Dignus es, cum tuā religione, odīm."

60. Ut ad pauca redeam, &c., "Pour le faire court," Madame Dacier.
The phrase recurs at Phorm. IV. iii. 43.—Uxorem deducit domum. Cf. Adelph. IV. v. 60, note.

64. Plus potus, h. e. "plus solito potus." Heaut. II. i. 8, "Ubi adbibit plus paulo."—Sese illā abstinere." Cf. below, III. iii. 51, "Eā me abstinuisse in principio."

69. Me solum seducit foras, "Takes me aside by myself out-of-doors."
seducit = "seorsum ducit." Cf. Plaut. Aul. (H.) 94, "Eo nunc ego secreto te hue foras seduxi;" Asin. II. ii. 95, "Nam me hodie senex seduxit solum, seorsum ab ædibus."—Abs se integra. Abs se = "quod ad se attinet." Cf. Plaut. Curcul. I. i. 51, "Tam a me pudica est quasi soror mea sit."

73. Sed quam deccrerim, &c. There is a transition here from the narrative style to the dramatic, from the third person to the first, the "oratio obliqua" to the "oratio recta."—Eam ludibrio haberi, "That she should be held up as a laughing-stock." Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. 685. H. G. and ibid 595, "Habes despiciatui." Quin = "quominus," "So that I should not." For the sense of "deccrerim" in ver. 73, cf. Heaut. I. i. 95; V. i. 67, &c.

78. Hoc ego proferre incommodum mihi esse arbitror, "To make this matter public (viz. his love for Bacchis, and indifference to his young wife), I deem to be unhandsome on my part." For "proferre," see above, ver. 32.—Incommodum. Litotes.

79. Cui tu nihil dicas riti, "But that a girl, with whom you can find no fault, should be sent back to her father, is an act of arrogance." The antecedent to "cui" is clearly "filiam," or "virginem," understood. Cf. Plant. Asin. V. ii. 49, "Dotatæ uxori vitium dicere."

84. Maligna multo, et magis procax, &c., h. e. "Multo magis maligna et procax." Bentley proposed "magis" for "multo." But this is not necessary.—Maligna = "chary of her favours." Cf. with Parry, Plaut. Bacch. III. ii. 17, Malignus, largus. Hor. Od. I. xxviii. 23, Vagæ ne parce malignus arenae, &c.—Procax, "exacting," cf. Heaut. II. i. 15, note.

87. Illam (Bacchidem sc.)—Ad exemplum — existimans, "Forming his judgment of their characters according to the example of each:" i. e., which each gave of them. Bentley read "ad amussim," h. e. "accuratè;" but there is quite a satisfactory explanation to be given of the text as it stands. Parry shows that "exemplum" means a sample, probably derived from "eximo."—In ver. 90, incommoda = "rude-nesses," "unkindnesses"—"les mauvais traitemens," Madame Dacier. Cf. the frequent use of "commodus," and incommodus above at ver. 78. For "tegere contumelias" cf. III. iii. 28, Adversa ejus per te tecta, &c.

92. Uxor is misericordia, "Pity for his wife." For "devinctus" as here, cf. Andr. III. iii. 29, "Consuetudine et conjugio liberali devinctum." For "victus" cf. Heaut. I. i. 62, "Graviter audiendo victus est."

94. Elapsust Bacchidi, "Fell away from Bacchis." "Elabor" follows here the analogy of verbs of "taking away," which govern a dative of the person, cf. Key's Grammar, § 973.—Huc transtulit, "Transferred to his wife here." Huc=ad hanc. Heaut. II. iv. 10, "Illi suom animum alio conferunt." Ruhuken quotes Propert. I. xii. 13, "Sunt quoque translato gaudia servitio."—Par ingenium, "a congenial nature." So Ovid. Her. ix. 32, "Si qua voles aptè nubere, nube pari."

97. Ea ad hos redibat lege hereditas. See Andr. IV. v. 4, note. If there was no will, the property "redibat," to the heir at law.—Extrudit inritum, "Dispatches against his will," cf. Plaut. Mercator II. iii. 22, "Jam hinc olim invitum domo extrusit ab sese."

100. Rus abdidit se, "Has gone in the country to hide himself." For this construction see Cæsar. B. G. i. 12, "Reliqui sese in proximas silvas abdiderunt. Virg. Aen. xi. 810, "In montes sese abdidit avius altos."—Infirmitatis, cf. above ver. 26, "Firmæ."—Complusculos, cf. (Plaut.) Rudens I. ii. 43, "Jam hos dies complusculos." Construe, "For several days."

104. Miris modis, "Unaccountably," cf. Andr. V. iv. 36, "Multi-modis."—Postulatio numquam, "Complaint never." Postulatio, according to Donatus, differs from "expostulatio;" in that the latter is addressed to the offending party himself: the former said of him to another. The word occurs in Bacchid. III. iii. 45, "Aceris postulatio hæc est," and Postulare, for "expostulare," in Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. vi. 35, "Utrumne postulare prius tecum æquom siet."

106. Accesserat (Sostrata, sc.). In v. 108, "Ubi non quit pati," refers to Philumena.—Pati is used absolutely, as in Virg. Ecl. x. 52, "Inter spelæa fœrarum Malle pati." Lucan v. 313, "Disce sine armis Posso pati," &c. Pati = "to get through life," "to endure." See also Heaut. IV. v. 13, "Non possum pati."—Ad rem divinam "To a sacrifice." Cf. Ter. Eun. III. iii. 7, "Ait rem divinam fecisse."

112. Nemo remisit (verbum sc.), "No answer."—Arcessunt, "They send for her," i. e. "the messengers from her mother-in-law." For "arcesso," cf. Plant. Men. II. G. 636.—Nostra illico It viscre ad eam, "My mistress (Sostrata) goes at once to her to pay her a visit. It viscre, is a poetic construction, the infinitive for the supine, which may be illustrated by Virg. Aen. i. 14, "Virum tot adire labores Impulit," Æn. i. 527; "Populare Penates Venumus." Hor. Od. I. ii. 7, "Pecus egit altos Visere montes. Key's Gr. § 1255. "Visere ad eam" occurs II. i. 40. "Visentem ad eam," &c.

115. Rescivit, "Came to hear," "got to know this." Cf. Andr. III. ii. 14; Heaut. I. i. 47; Plaut. Men. H. G. 581; Aul. H. G. 727.—Convenit, "He went to meet." So Andr. I. iii. 22, note. Plaut. Men. 457 (note) "Conveniam servom."

118. Curae est, "But I certainly am anxious." Ruhnken illustrates the phrase by Cicero, Ep. ad Div. x. 1, "Maxime mihi curæ est non de mcâ quidem vitâ, sed de patriâ."—For Nisi, "but," see Andr. IV. i. 40, note; Heaut. V. ii. 4, note.

119. Habes omnem rem, "You are in possession of the whole story."—Pergam quo cœpi hoc ier, "I will proceed with this journey, to the point whither I am bound." "Pergo" is properly an active verb; and we have here (as in Sallust. B. J. c. 79), an example of the accusative after it. Quo cœpi (pergere sc.) 'Je vais continuer mon chemin.'

120. Constitui, "I've made an appointment," cf. Heaut. IV. iv. 4, "Aut quom venturum dixero et constituero," note. Eun. I. ii. 125, "Venturum ad me constituit domum.—Divortant bene, &c. Cf. Phorm. III. iii. 19; Plaut. Cura. V. ii. 58, "Deos volo bene vertere istam rem vobis."

ACTUS II.—Sc. I.

LACHES charges his wife, Sostrata, with having driven away Philumena by her hatred and unkindness; the usual course of mothers-in-law towards their daughters-in-law. He would have sent her away, and kept Philumena, had he been at home. He complains that, though he slaves at the farm, he cannot trust Sostrata to keep matters smooth at home. She has no reply to make, save that she is not to blame, as she knows not the real cause of her daughter-in-law's departure.

Metre:—1—3, 5—7, 10—18. Iambic Tetrameter.

4, 8, 9, 19. Iambic Trimeter.

20—45. Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

1. Quod hoc est genus? Que hac est conjuratio? This is, according to Westerhov, a sort of Hendiadys, for "Quod hoc est genus conjurationis?" "What sort of cabal is this?" Others refer "genus" to the sex; as Colman, "What animals are women!"

2. Utine. So reads the "Codex Bembinus." Bentley, followed by Hermann, reads "Ut ne." Parry, following the Bembine C., adds, that the penult of utine is long, and that "mulieres" is pronounced as a dissyllable. Construe, "Does it not seem as if all women affected and disliked exactly all the same things?"—Studeant, cf. Eun. Prol. 28.—Neque declinatum, &c., "And that you cannot find any woman varying at all from the disposition of others." Neque= "utque non." Menander has γυνὴ γυναικὸς πάποτ' οὐδὲ διαφέρει.

4. Itaque adeo, &c., "And so accordingly all mothers-in-law, with one consent, hate their daughters-in-law." Socrus, as Parry observes, is a monosyllable here. In the next verse, with adversas, compare Andr. I. i. 37, "Advorsus nemini." Heaut. V. iii. 5, q. v.

6. In eodemque — ludo, "And all appear to me to have been trained to mischief in the same school." Ludo, sc. "gladiatorio." Gronov. refers to Hor. Epist. I. i. 2—3, "Spectatum satis, et donatum jam rude, queris, Mecænas, iterum antiquo me includere ludo." The word however came to signify a school generally, as here, and in Phorm. I. ii. 36, "In ludum ducere et reducere." With "doctæ ad malitiam," cf. Heaut III. i. 41, "Instructa pulchre ad perniciem."

7. Si ullus est, "If any such there be." Bentley reads "ulla sit magistra," but there is no need of any change.—Hanc, "my wife here, whom he sees approaching." For "non" in ver. 9, Fleckeisen reads "nescio." Ita me Di bene ament, cf. Phorm. I. iii. 13; cf. also, Heaut. III. iii. 8.

10. Itaque una — liceat, "And so (i. e. if what I say be true) may we be allowed to pass our lives together in unity." Itaque= "et ita."—For Di mala prohibeant cf. Andr. III. iii. 36; Adelph. II. iv. 11, notes. Construe, "May Heaven forefend it." In ver. 11, most editions place the last "scio" in the mouth of Laches. Bentley, however, refers it to Sostrata, and places a comma at reseciscas. Fleckeisen follows him. If we read "scio" as part of Laches' speech, we construe it, "Oh! no doubt," ironically.—For resciscas, cf. Andr. III. ii. 14; Heaut. I. i. 47; Plaut. Men. H. G. 581; Aulul. 727.

13. Familiam dedecoras. Westerhov. refers to Plaut. Bacch. III. iii. 95, "Qui dedecorat te, me, amicos atque alios flagitiis suis." Ex amicis inimici, for this use of "ex" cf. Andr. I. i. 10, note.—Affinis differs from "cognatus" in that the latter is connected with one "by blood," the former "by marriage," cf. Plaut. Aul. 427, H. G.

15. Suos cui liberos committerent, "Who judged him worthy to whom they might entrust their child, or a child of theirs." Liberos is here used vaguely, as in many passages in various languages, cf. Heaut. I. i. 99, In liberos. Plaut. Aulul. IV. x. 6, "Meosque perditum ires liberos." So in Sophocles, βασιλεὺσιν is used for "the king," the plural for singular, and in Virg. AEn. x. 532, we have "Gnatis parce tuis," in a similar sense.—Exorere, "start up," the idea of "unexpectedly" is involved in this word, cf. Virg. AEn. iv. 625, "Exoriare aliquis nostris ex ossibus ultor."

17. Lapidem, "A stock or stone," cf. Heaut. IV. vii. 3, "Quid stas, lapis?" ibid. V. i. 44; Plaut. Merc. III. iv. 46, "Is lapidi mando maxumo." With "tu, inquam, mulier," Donatus compares Eurip. Androm. 85, πολλὰς ἀν εἴροις μηχανὰς γυνὴ γὰρ εἰ.—In ver. 18, understand me before nescire.—Vostrorum, h. e. "vostrum" or "vestrum." So "nostrorum" Eun. IV. iv. 10. Varronian. (Donaldson) p. 309. See also below, II. i. 43; Adelph. III. ii. 33, note.

20. Illi ubi, h. e. "illic ubi." Cf. above I. ii. 19, "Nam illi haud licebat," &c.—Idco quia — fama foris, "(And I do this) because as you shall conduct yourselves at home, just so shall I be reputed abroad." Miki is the Dat. Ethicus. For proinde, used as here, see Heaut. I. i. 13. With ero fama, Westerhov. compares IV. iii. 14, "Nos fabula Sunus." Colman translates, "Because upon my family at home depends My character abroad."

25. Tu hinc isses foras. The form of divorce was, Exi foras, mulier. See Martial. Ep. XI civ. 1, "Uxor, vade foras, aut moribus utere nostris."—In ver. 26, Aegritudo= "anxiety, care." Cf. Heaut. III. ii. 28.

27. Coneedens robis, "Giving way to you," or "making way for you." So "decedo" is used with a dative, for the simple "cedo," cf. Virg. Ecl. viii. 88, "Seræ decedere nocti." Coneedens is so used in Plaut. Epid. V. ii. 16, "Num oculis concessi tuis." Amphit. I. i. 119, "Neque nox quoquam concedit die." Rei serviens, "A slave to my property." Cf. Plaut. Truc. II. iii. 21, "Ut rei servire suave est."

28, 29. Meo labore, &c. These two verses are transposed by many editors.—Otiumque ut nostra res posset pati. Otium, "Life of ease," cf. Adelph. I. i. 17. Pati, "to sustain," "to be equal to." Ruhnken quotes Hor. Epist. I. xviii. 28, "Meæ, contendero noli, Stultitiam patiuntur opes."—Non te pro his, &c. (oportuit sc.).—Ne quid ægre esset mihi, "That I should have no annoyance." Cf. Plaut. Men. 528, "Quid tibi ægre est."

31. Pol. Cf. Andr. I. iv. 2, note. Plaut. Men. 16, H. G.—In ver. 33, Solvi=“I have freed or detached.” Westerhov. quotes Hor. Epop. XVII. 45, “Et tu, potes nam, solve me dementia.”

34. Cum puellâ, &c. For the use of "puella," for even a married woman, see, with Ruhnken, Ovid. Heroid. i. 115, "Certe ego, quæ fueram, te decedere, puella." Fast. ii. 557, "Viduæ cessate puellæ." So also in Virg. Ecl. vi. 48, "Ah, virgo infelix," is address to Pasiphaë, the mother of Phaedra and Ariadne and Androgeos. Hor. Od. II. viii. 23, "Virgines nuptæ."

37. De te — peceando detrimenti nihil fieri potest, "No hurt can be done you by any fault." With detrimentum, cf. Héaut. III. i. 39, note on "intertrimento."—In ver. 39, plus is i. q. "amplius" or "plus diu." Westerhov. illustrates this use by Lucret. vi. 420, "Altaque cur plerumque petit loca: plurima quo plus Montibus in summis vestigia cernimus ignis?"

41. Enim, "Why." Gr. γάρ. The word seems to be used "ellipticè" as in Aulul. 454, at the beginning of a sentence. Cf. Hildyard's note at that passage. Understand, "It's true, I did not see her—for," &c. See also Phorm. V. viii. 90, "Enim nequeo solus."—Lassam, cf. Andr. II. i. 4, note.—Oppido, cf. Heaut. IV. ii. 2, note.

43. Vestrarum nulla est. See above at ver. 19, and Adelph. III. ii. 33, note. Construe, "There's not one of your sex," &c.—Et quæ vobis placitast conditio datur, "And the match, which you fancy, is made. For conditio used in this sense, see Andr. I. i. 52; Aul. 194, H. G. 430, ibid.—Ubi duxere (uxores sc.), exigunt (sc. domo), "They drive them away;" "divorce them." Cf. Plaut. Merc. IV. vi. 5, "Uxor viro si clam domo egressa est foras, Viro fit causa, exigitur matrimonio."

ACTUS II.—Sc. II.

PHILUMENA'S Father, Phidippus, joins Laches and Sostrata, after bidding his daughter to do as she pleases with regard to going back to Sostrata, or remaining where she is. Laches reasons with him, and advises him not to yield too readily to the women. He asks for some explanation of Philumena's conduct, and grounds of dissatisfaction.

Phidippus replies that she urges none; but objects to remain with her mother-in-law, in the absence of Pamphilus.

2. Patio animo rictus, "Vaincu par la tendresse paternelle," Madame Dacier.—Faciam ut tibi concedam. For this construction, see Heaut. Prol. 28, "Facite æqui sitis."

4. Optime, h. e. "peropportunè." Cf. Andr. II. i. 36, note. Eun. V. ii. 66.—Scibo, see Madvig. Gr. 115, c. Plaut. Men. 295, H. G.

5. Adprimè obsequentem, "Exceedingly obliging." For "apprise," cf. Andr. I. i. 34, note.—In the next verse, sed, must be used as equivalent to tamen, and considered as the Apodosis to "etsi," "Though I'm aware that I am exceedingly obliged to all my friends, yet I am not so to such a degree as to let my easiness corrupt their characters."—For "in rem" in ver. 7, see Andr. III. iii. 14; Hecyr. I. ii. 27.

8. In illarum potestate esse te, "That you are under their thumb and finger." Gronov. quotes Cic. ad Fam. V. iv., "Quod si mihi tuā clementiā opem tuleris, omnibus in rebus me fore in tuā potestate tibi confirmo;" and several like passages. See also Aulul. 489 (Hildyard), "Nam quæ indotata est, ea in potestate est viri."—Heia vero, "Look ye there now!" Plaut. Men. 290, H. G.

9. Itidem incertum amisti, "You sent me away in doubt, even as I came." Amisti is Syncope for "amisisti." So in Phorm. II. iv. 19, "Incertior sum multo quam duduim."—Si perpetuam — affinitatem, "If you desire this alliance to be lasting." Bentley read "perpetem" as in Plaut. Amph. I. i. 124; but Parry rightly rejects this reading, showing that the usage of Plautus is no unerring guide as to the text of Terence.—Celare te iras, "that you should smother your anger."

12. Aut ea refellendo aut purgando. Ea is referred to "peccatum," by Enallage of number. Cf. Heaut. II. iv. 13, "Hi se ad vos applicant," where "hi" refers to "viro" in ver. 11. Refellendo, "by refuting," cf. Phorm. I. ii. 82, "Quom tu horum nil refelles. Purgando, "by clearing myself." Parry illustrates this word by Hecyr. V. iv. 31, "Propterea te sibi purgatum." To which we may add Adelph. IV. iii. 17, q. v. —Te judice ipso, "even with you to be judge," or "to arbitrate."—In ver. 15, Si metuis — u, &c., cf. for this construction, Madvig. Gr. § 376.

17. Id adeo gnati causā, &c., "And, what is more, this is for my son's sake." The force of "adeo" is "quod plus est," as in Plaut. Men. Prol. 21, ibid. 211 (H. G.), and Aulul. 600 (H.).—In the next verse, magnificare is i. q. "magni facere," "magni aestinare." So Plaut. Pseud. IV. i. 34, quoted by Gronov. "Ut ego ob tuam, Simia, perfidiam te amo, et metuo, et magnifico." See also Plaut. Men. (H. G.) 280, "Magnificare." Cistell. I. i. 22, "Quia me colitis et magnificatis."—Clam me est, cf. Andr. I. v. 52, "Nec clam te est." Construe here, "And what's more, I'm not unaware how bitterly I believe he'll take it." Bentley proposed to read, "clam te."—Eo domum studeo hæc, prius quam ille, ut redeat, "Therefore I am desirous that she should return home before him."

21. Diligentiam, "Affection." The original meaning of the word, which the v.-rb "diligo," its root, indicates.—Animum induco, cf. Andr. III. iii. 40, "Animum induxi esse utile;" Hecyr. I. ii. 24; Adelph. I. ii. 43. Construe, "I'm persuaded."—Et te hoc mihi cupio credere,

"And I'm very anxious that you should believe me in this." Cf. Heaut. IV. i. 11, "Vin' me istuc tibi, etsi incredibile est, credere?"

25. Eho! numquidnam &c. "Harkye, does she at all blame her husband." For numquidnam, cf. Andr. I. iv. 8; II. i. 25, notes. For echo, see "eliodum" Andr. II. i. 24, note.—Attendit magis, "I directed my attention more to the matter." For instances in which "attendo" is thus used absolutely, cf. Smith's Dictionary, sub voc. (2).—Sancte adjurat. So in I. i. 4, "Jurabat quotiens Bacchidi, Quam sancte."—Perdurare, "hold out," "endure life," cf. Adelph. IV. ii. 15, "Non hercle quidem durare quisquam, si sic fit, potest."

28. Aliud fortasse alii viti est. Such is Bentley's reading, though the majority of MSS. have "aliis." The former is preferable; as the reference is to Laches.—Ego sum animo leni natus, "I'm naturally of a mild disposition."

29. Hem! Sostrata, "Hear you this, Sostrata!"—Certumne est istuc? "Is that settled:" (viz., that Philumena stays where she is).—Numquid vis? Cf. Adelph. III. iii. 78; ibid. II. ii. 39, note.—In ver. 31, Nam est quod me, &c. "For I have reasons for being obliged to go across to the forum now." Cf. Andr. II. vi. 17, note, "Est quod succenset;" Heaut. Prol. 3, Madvig. Gr. §. 365, obs. 1.

ACTUS II.—Sc. III.

SOSTRATA soliloquises on the injustice of her husband's accusations; which however she cannot easily rebut. Her son's return is her chief hope of clearing her character as a mother-in-law.

1. Iniquè æquè omnes invise viris, "In good truth, unfairly, are all of us women alike hated by our husbands." There is a sort of "oxymoron," in "iniquè æquè," cf. Andr. Prol. 17, "Faciunt næ intelligendo ut nil intelligent." With v. 2, Westerhov. compares Eurip. Ion. 398, τὰ γὰρ γυναικῶν δυσχερῆ πρὸς ἔρσενας, Κἄν ταῖς κακαῖσιν αἱ γαῖαι μεμιγμέναι Μισούμεθ. οὐτω δυστυχεῖς πεφύκαμεν.—Sum extra noxiām, "I am blamēss." Cf. Heaut. II. iii. 56, note. Plaut. Mostell. V. ii. 47, &c.

4. Sed non facile est expurgatu, "But this is not an easy matter for clearing up." Cf. Heaut. II. iii. 116, "Hæc res neutiquam neglectu est mihi," note; and Parry's note on the same passage, where it is shown that the "supine in u" is a dative case of a verbal noun." See also III. i. 16, below.—Animum induxerunt, cf. above II. ii. 22.

5. Haud pol me quidem (esse iniquam inducant animum, sc.). This transition from the "recta oratio" to the "obliqua" is not uncommon. We should look for, "Haud ego iniqua fui."—Habui illam, cf. Adelph. I. i. 23, "Habui, amavi pro meo."—Si ex me esset nata, cf. Adelph. I. i. 15, "Atqui ex me hic natus non est."

7. Nisi, "Save that," or "But this I know, that;" see Andr. IV. i. 40; Heaut. V. ii. 4.—Multimodis, cf. Andr. V. iv. 36; Heaut. II. iii. 79; Plaut. M. G. IV. iv. 53.—For expecto, the common reading of editors, Bentley reads "expeto."

ACTUS III.—Sc. I.

PAMPHILUS, returning home from Imbrus, learns that his wife has quitted his father's roof. He laments bitterly over the rough course of his loves, his severance from Bacchis, and the untoward journey that has taken him from Philumena, just when he was beginning to love her. He feels that, whichever is to blame, his wife, or his mother, he has grief in store. Parmeno comforts him by saying, that his return will clear up all. Their talk is interrupted by a bustle at the house of Phidippus. Parmeno is sent to learn the cause; but, as he fails to learn it, Pamphilus goes in himself.

47—55. Iambic Trimeter.

1. Nemini homini, cf. Adelph. II. iii. 6.—Oblata esse, “have chanced;” so “offerre” is used in a bad sense in Act. V. i. 14, below, “Inscitum offerre injuriam tibi immerenti iniquom est.” Plaut. Epid. II. i. 10, “Ærumna Acerbior Herculi, quam illa mihi est objecta.” Amphitr. II. i. 58, “Huic homini nescio quid est mali mala objectum manu.” Cf. also below at ver. 6.

2. Hancine ego vitam parsi perdere? “Have I been sparing of losing this life of mine?” Donatus notes that “parsi” is the perfect of the verb “parco”=“conservo;” “peperci” of the verb “parco”=“veniam do.” Ruhnken quotes a similar construction from Ovid. Trist. III. iii. 51, “Parce tamen laccrare genas.”—Ubiris gentium, cf. Heaut. V. i. 55, Madvig. § 284, obs. 9 and 11.—Atque hæc ita esse miserum me resciscere, “And that I, wretched fellow, should come to learn that these things are so.”

6. Objectus labos. Cf. Adelph. IV. iv. 2, and above at ver. 1 of this scene. For labos, see Heaut. I. i. 30, note, “Omne quod est interea — lucrost.” See Adelph. V. iii. 30, 31, “Id de lucro putato esse omne.” Iphorm. II. i. 16. With the “Anacoluthia” which occurs here, where nos omnes is said as if “lucri facimus” were to follow; and “lucro est” follows as if “nobis omnibus” had preceded, see Ter. Heaut. V. iv. 18, and Parry’s note there; and see also Madvig. Gr. § 480, p. 427, where this passage is quoted. In ver. 9, Fleckeisen, Stälbaum, and others, read “hæc iræ,” with Bentley. For this form “hæc” for “Hæ” see Plaut. Aul. 487, H. G. Curcul. 39, “Lenonis hæc sunt ædes.”

11. Iram expedies, A somewhat uncommon construction, different from the usual one, which occurs in ver. 8 above. Here we must understand it, “You will settle their squabbles.” Cf. Cic. ad. Att. xi. 18, “Rein, ut poteris, expediās” &c.—Rursum in gratiam restitues. For the Ileonasm here, see Adelph. IV. ii. 40, “Kursum redi.” For in uninum induxti tuom, cf. Hecyr. Prol. alt. 42.

14. Habebam alibi animum amori deditum, “I had bestowed my affections in another quarter.” Similarly we have in Andr. V. i. 10. “In alio occupato amore.”—Cuivis facile scitust, cf. above II. iii. 4, note, —Obtrudit, “forced upon me.” So in Andr. I. v. 15, “Ea quoniam nemini obtrudi potest, Itur ad me.”

17. Vix me illinc astraxi, &c. “Scarcely have I torn myself from my former love.” Such is the common reading. The Bembine MS. has “illi,” and Muretus suggests “illine.” But there is no need for either emendation, if we adopt Parry’s explanation that in Ter. and Plaut., illinc and illic are often read as monosyllables. Illinc is here i. q. “ab illâ,” as “huc” in the next line is i. q. “ad hanc.” Cf. Andr. II. iii. 12, “Ut ab illâ excludar, huc concludar.”—Impeditam — expediti, cf. Andr. III. v. 11 note.

22. Tum uxori obnoxius sum, “Besides, I am beholden to my wife; so well did she formerly bear with me with her own sweet temper, Olim. i. e. before I loved her.” For the sense of “obnoxius,” cf. Virg. Geor. i. 396, “Fratriis radiis obnoxia surgere Luna.” Propert. I. ii. 21, “Facies aderat nullis obnoxia gemmis.”—Quæ in ver. 23, refers, of course, to “uxori.” Though some editors and commentators (e. g. Donatus) consider “quæ” to be the neut. plur. acc. used generally, instead of “quas” as the relative to which “injurias” is antecedent.

25. Intercessit. Cf. Andr. V. v. 5, “Si nulla ægritudo huic gaudio intercesserit.”

26. Haud quidem hercle parvom (“evenisse necesse est”), “Nay, not even anything trifling need have occurred, if you’ll really examine into the true cause;” much less any “magnum nescio quid.” Such is Donatus’s reading and explanation. Colman appears to have followed Bentley’s emendation, “Aut hercle parvom,” &c. He translates, “Rather some trifle, if you knew the truth.” But the reading adopted by Donatus is best here, and simplest. For veram rationem exsequi, Gronovius quotes Livy. III v., “Exsequendo numerum subtiliter ducentos ait et triginta.” See also Plaut. M. G. III. iii. 71, “Ut accurate et commode hoc quod agendum est, exsequamur.”

27. Non maxumas, quæ maxumæ sunt interdum iræ, injurias Faciunt, “Sometimes the enmities which are greatest, do not make (or ‘prove’) men’s wrongs the greatest, for often in some things one man is not even angered, whereas from the same cause a wrathful man is made most hostile.” Parry has very carefully examined the passage, and, following the view of Donatus, has made it more intelligible. He simplifies the construction by showing that “maximas faciunt” must be taken together as the predicate. There is no need, with Bentley, to read “maxumæ” “injuriæ.” Colman translates

“The greatest quarrels do not always rise
From deepest injuries.”

He appears, as does Madame Dacier, to understand “faciunt,” i. q. “ostendunt.” For est quibus in rebus (ἐστιν οἷς Gr.), cf. Hor. Od. I. i. 3, “Sunt quos curriculo,” &c., and Maclean’s note, ibid.

30. Iras gerunt, “bear enmity,” or cherish wrath. Cf. Plaut. Pæn. III. vi. 18, “Si quid peccatum est, plumbeas iras gerunt.”—Quia enim, “Why because.” Here, as elsewhere, “enim,” is used elliptically. See above at II. i. 41, note, and Heaut. I. ii. 14, note; Andr. V. i. 4.—Qui eos gubernat animus infirmum gerunt.—Here the antecedent is attracted into the clause and case of the relative, cf. Virgil, Æn. i. 573, “Urbem quam statuo, vestra est." See also Andr. Prol. 3, note; Madvig. Gr. § 319, obs., and Key's Gr. 1125. Stälbaum quotes Sallust. Catil. i. "Animi imperio, corporis servitio magis utimur."

32. Itidem illae mulieres—levi sententia, "Just so those women are, pretty much as boys, of fickle purpose." "Sententia" is i. q. "consilio." Gronovius quotes Plaut. Mostell. I. iii. 15, "Ut lepide res omnes tenet, sententiasque amantum;" Mil. Gl. II. i. 51, "Ego quoniam inspexi mulieris sententiam, Cepi tabellas." Propert. (II. ix. 33.) speaks more strongly on the same topic: "Non sic incerto mutantur flamine Syrites, Nec folia hyberno tam tremefacta Noto, Quam cito femineā non constat fœdus in irā, Sive ea causa gravis, sive ea causa levis."

33. Fortasse unum aliquod—concivisse, here, "It may chance that some one word has stirred up this wrath between them." The ordinary reading is "conceiverit." Bentley following Donatus reads "concivisse," and adds here, to which last word Parry objects, as the line is an iambic Trimeter Catalectic without it. Donatus remarks that the ancients often connected an infinitive with "fortasse," "scilicet," "videlicet," &c.; and by referring to Gronov. Observat. Lib. III. c. ix, p. 506, we find "fortasse" so used in three passages of Plautus, viz., Mercat. IV. iv. 42, "Fortasse te illum mirari coquom;" Pænul. V. ii. 43, "Fortasse medicos nos esse arbitrarier;" Trucul. III. ii. 12, "Parasitum te fortasse dicere." For "scilicet" so used, cf. Ter. Heaut. II. iii. 117. Gronov. says that "adepol" and "certe" are likewise so used with an infinitive.

35. Trepidari—prorsum, "I notice that there is a bustling, and a running backwards and forwards." The verbs are used here impersonally. Trepidari is properly used of disturbance caused by some sudden alarm, e. g. a panic in an army. Ruhnken illustrates it here by Sallust. Jug. 67, "Romani milites improviso metu—trepidare ad arcen oppidi;" Hor. Sat. II. vi. 117, "Currere per totum pavidi conclave magisque Exanimes trepidare." Adelph. III. ii. 25, q. v.—Rursum prorsum, cf. Plaut. Amph. V. i. 60, "Ego cunas recessim rursum vorsum trahere et ducere." Ter. Eun. II. ii. 47, "Ne sursum deorsum cursites."

36. Nullus sum, "Je suis perdu," Madame Dacier. Cf. Andr. III. iv. 20, note, and below at IV. i. 6, IV. iv. 32.—Quidum? "How so?" For this particle dum thus used, cf. And. I. i. 1, note.

41. Paviture nescio quid dixerunt, "They said that your wife has something of an ague fit." Cooper, in his Thesaurus, applies the word "pavito," however, to mental ailment, construing, "is troubled in spirit." For the former interpretation, cf. Plaut. Bacch. I. i. 73, "Timida es."—Id si forte est, nescio, "Whether that happens to be the case or not, I can't say." —Quia non poteram unā omnia (tibi dicere, sc.), —Quid morbi est? cf. below III. ii. 22.

43. Nemo medicum adduxit? "Has no one fetched a doctor?" Cf. Plaut. Men. II. 786, "Medicum ducere an fabrum." In ver. 44, Fleckeisen follows the Bembine MS. and reads "certo sciām." Stälbaum and Parry and others, "certum."

45. Te offendam affectam? "Shall I find thee disordered?" or "in disposed!" For "offendo," thus used, cf. Heaut. II. iii. 44, and for "affectam," Westerhov. quotes Propert. II. xxviii. 1, "Jupiter, affectō tamen miserere puellæ." Where Paley (cf. III. xx 1) explains "affectæ," sc. "morbo, ægrotanti."—For the sentiment in ver. 46, cf. Phorm. I. iv. 24. Propert. III. xx. 42 (Paley), "Vivam si vivet, si cadet illa, cadam."

47. Non usus factost, &c. Cf. Adelph. III. iii. 75; Heaut. I. i. 29; Andr. III. ii. 10; and Plaut. Men. 655, "Usus facto est." Censtrue, "There's no occasion."

50. Amplior factus sicut, "Should have become more serious." "Amplior" is i. q. "gravior," as in ver. 9, "iræ ampliores."

54. Capiti atque cœtati illorum, "To their persons and lives." "To them all." A Periphrasis for "illis," see Plaut. Men. 577. "Ætati tue" = "tibi." Æsch. Choeph. 434, αἰώνι σφ, Phorm. III. ii. 6, "Suo capiti fuat;" Virg. AEn. viii. 484, "Di capiti ipsius, generique reseruent." Plaut. Rudens. V. ii. 59.—Qui, "whereby."

55. Hera in crimen veniet, "My mistress will come in for blame:" but I for severe punishment. Westerhov. points out a parallel to this in Heaut. II. iii. 115, "Tibi erunt parata verba, huic homini verbera." See also Phorm. II. ii. 8.—For malum, in the sense of punishment, cf. Adelph. I. i. 44. "Malo coactus," note.

ACTUS III.—Sc. II.

PARMENO stops Sostrata who is going to inquire what is amiss in the house of Phidippus, and persuades her to await her son's coming-out thence, that she may hear all from his lips. Pamphilus soon comes out; but parries all inquiries, and is most uncommunicative. He looks sad and dejected, and tries to get rid of Sostrata and Parmeno that he may sorrow in secret.

Metre:—Iambic Tetrameter Catalectic.

1. Nescio quid jamdudum—tumultuari, "I hear some disturbance or other going on here." Cf. above III. i. 35, "Trepidari sentio," &c.—Male metuo, "I'm sore afraid." Westerhov. quotes Cic. ad. Fam. x. 33, "Tanquam nihil pejus timerent;" Heaut. III. ii. 20, "Syre, tibi timui male."—Morbus adgravescat, h.e. "gravior fiat." Cic. in Catil. i. 13, "Hic morbus, qui est in republicâ, vehementius gravescat;" Cic. Tusc. Disp. III. 31, "Vulnus adgravescens."

3. Quod te, Æsculapi, &c. An Apostrophe. Cf. notes to Andr. I. v. 55.—Nequid sit hujus. The full phrase occurs in Heaut. III. ii. 40, "Siquid hujus simile evenerit."—Salus was a daughter of Æsculapius, and had a temple on the top of the Quirinal Hill. See Ad. IV. vii. 43, "Ipsa si cupiat Salus."—Nunc ad eam risam, cf. I. ii. 114, note, Plaut. Mil. G. II. vi. 40, "Vise ad me intro."

5. Tun' hic eras. Eun. I. ii. 6, "Ehem, tun hic eras, mi Phædria."—In proximo h̄ic (loco sc.), Cf. Heaut. I. i. 2, note; Plaut. Cistell. I. i. 102, "Quæ habitat in proximo."—Non visas? ne mittas, &c., "Not go and see her? Nay don't even send any one," &c. Madame Dacier reads, "Non visas, nec mittas quidem," &c., without notes of interrogation. She translates, "Ni vous n' irez la voir, ni vous n'y envoyerez personne de votre part."

8. Nam qui amat, &c. The antecedent to qui is "eum," the acc. before facere.—Cui odio. For this double dative see Madv. § 249; Heaut. II. iii. 116, and above, passim. "Odio" is the abstract for the concrete, as "arma" for "armati," "scelus," for "scelestus."—Laborem capit, cf. Andr. V. ii. 29, "Tantum laborem capere ob talem filium," and note there.

10. Tum, "Moreover."—Introit ridere, see note at I. ii. 114, "It visere."—Quid agat, "how she is," cf. Andr. I. v. 33, note. Propertius, I. i. 12, "Ibat et hirsutas ille videre feras."

14. Si remittent quippiam Philumene dolores, "Shall abate at all." "Remitto" is used here in a neut. sense, as in Caesar. B. C. iii. 20, "Si ventus forte remisisset;" Cic. ad Att. x. 4, "Alter ardet furore et scelere, nec remittit aliquid."—Continuo sola soli, cf. Ad. IV. v. 34.

18. Gaudeo renisse salvom. Cf. Eun. V. v. 6, "Ehem, salvum te advenire, here, gaudeo."—Meliusculast, "She is a trifle better." Ruhken quotes in illustration Cicero ad Div. xvi. 5, "grandiuscula." Eun. III. iii. 21, "majuscula."

20. Rectè, mater, "All right, mother!" or "Nothing, mother!" Cf. Heaut. II. i. 16, "Rectè est;" note. III. ii. 7; Adelph. I. v. 19.—Quid fuit tumulti? "What was the disturbance which I heard?" "Tumulti," cf. Andr. II. ii. 28, note. Plaut. Aul. H. G. 678, "gemitu."

24. Eis onera adjuta, "Help them with the baggage." The construction is either an Hypallage, "eis onera" for "eos oneribus" (ferendis, sc.); or we may consider "onera" to be the acc. of limitation or definition (i. e. "help them as regards the burdens"). In Phorm. I. ii. 49 we find "Qui adjutaret funus."

ACTUS III—Sc. III.

PAMPHILUS recounts his discovery of his wife's real state, after having gone unexpectedly into her room. On his retreat thence he has been followed by his mother-in-law, who extenuated the circumstances by assuring him that Philumena was blameless, and that she had left the house of Laches, to bring no shame upon it. Myrrhina has induced him to keep the matter a secret—still, he says, he will not take his wife home again.

Metre:—1—48. Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.
49—54. Iambic Trimeter.

2. Nec opinanti (mihi, sc.). Cf. Andr. I. ii. 9, "Nos sic nec opinantes duci."—Partim quæ—accepi auribus. "Accipio" is often used absolutely in this sense, as in Andr. II. iii. 23, "Si te æquo animo ferre accipiet."

4. Qua me propter exanimatum citius eduxi foras. "Qua propter" is divided by "Tmesis." Cf. Hor. Od. I. vii. 25, "Quo nos cunque feret melior fortuna," &c.—Eduxi foras, "Withdrew," or "Rushed out of doors." Westerhov. quotes Plaut. Aul. 662, "Ego me deorsum duco;" and Ruhken, Plaut. Bacch. IV. ii. 11, "Duc te ab ædibus."—In ver. 5, corripui as in IV. i. 3, is used of "hurrying" into a place. In ver. 16 below, and also in Plaut. Mercator III. iv. 76, "Ut corripuit se repente, atque abiit," "corripio" has the sense of "hurrying forth".

8. Id quod me repente a-lspexerant. Id quod = "Ideo quod." See Madvig. Gr. § 315 b; Key, § 1454 a.—Vultum carum sensi immutari omnium, "I beheld all their countenances changed." Westerhov. quotes Hor. Sat. II. viii. 84, "Nasidiene, redis mutatae frontis."—Incommodè in ver. 10 = "unseasonably." In Plaut. Mon. (H.) 64, we find commoditatis articulos, "The very nick of time."

12. Ego, ejus videndi cupidus, &c., "I, in eagerness to see her, follow her straight" (ancillam, sc.). For "ejus videndi," a blending of the gerundive construction with that usual after the gerund, compare Ter. Heaut. Prol. 24, Norarum spectandi, &c., note; Madvig. 413, obs. 2; and Phorm. I. iii. 24, "Ut neque mihi ejus sit mittendi nec retinendi copia."—Rectâ (sc. viâ), cf. Andr. II. vi. 11. note; Ad. III. iii. 79. For spatium, in ver. 14, cf. I. ii. 55, above, "spatium solitudinis."

15. Neque voce alia ac res moneta', &c., "Nor could she lament in other language than her circumstances suggested." "Res," says Donatus, here = "partus." For "corripui," see above, ver. 5. For percitus, "violently moved," in ver. 17, see Plaut. Casin. III. v. 6, "Ne quid in te mali faxit irâ percita." Cic. pro Milon. c. 23, "Sivo enim illud animo irato ac percito fecisset."

18. Jam ut limen exirem, h. e. Cum jam in eo eram ut limen exirem, "Just as I was going forth from the threshold." For the phrase limen exire, i. q. "e limine exire," cf. Cæsar. B. G. i. 45, "Exercitum Gallie provinciæ fines egressum."—Ad genua accedit, "She fell at my knees" as a suppliant. Ruhnken illustrates the phrase by Seneca, Troad. 690, "Ad genua accido suppplex."

19. Hoc sic est, "This is the case," or "This is a fact." So Andr. III. iii. 22, "Profecto sic est." Ch. "Sic hercle ut dicam tibi."

20. Omnibus nobis—humiles sumus, "According as circumstances present themselves to us, we are proud or humble." For the phrase dant sese, i. e. "succeed," cf. Heaut. V. i. 43, "Quot res dedere, ubi possem persentiscere." Virg. Geor. i. 287; Æn. iv. 627.—Magni is = "superbi," according to Ruhnken, who quotes Plaut. Mil. IV. ii. 53.—"Magnum me faciam Nunc, quoniam illæc me collaudat." For the general sentiment Donatus compares Hom. Odyss. xviii. 136—

τοῖος γὰρ νόος ἐστιν ἐπιχθονίων ἀνθρώπων οἶον ἐπ' ἡμαρτῆγησι πατὴρ ἀνδρῶντε Θεῶντε.

In ver. 21, Institit, = "incepit." Gronov. illustrates it by reference to Livy xxiv. 26, "Aversis auribus animisque, omissis pro se precibus, puellis ut saltem parcerent, orare institit."

23. Vitiumst oblatum. Cf. Ad. III. i. 9, note.—Orata ejus reminiscor, "I remember her prayers." Oruta, the neut. plur. participle for the substantive "orationes" or "preces."

26. Quæque fors fortunast, "Whatever strange chance it is." Quæque is i. q. "quæcunque," as above at I. i. 8, "Quemque nacta es." For "fors fortuna," a goddess who had a temple on the right bank of the Tiber, Parry refers to Ov. Fast. vi. 773, &c. See Eun. I. ii. 54, "Forte fortunâ;" Phorm. V. vi. 1, "O Fortuna, O fors fortuna."—Si jus, si fas est, "If it is consistent with human and divine law." For "si" thus used in adjurations, see Andr. I. v. 57; Madvig. Gr. 294, obs. 1. Ruhnken quotes Virg. Geor. i. 269: "Festis quædam exercere diebus Fas et jura simunt."—Ad rorsa ejus, "Her misfortunes." For the plur. neut. adj. thus used, see above, "orata," ver. 25.—Tacitaque apud omnes sient, "And hushed up in every one's presence." Tacita is used passively, as in Adelph. III. iv. 28, "Ignotum, tacitumst."

30. Sine labore hanc gratiam, &c., "She now begs you in return for that to grant her this favour which will cost you no effort." Westerhov. illustrates "sive labore" by Phæirus. III. vii. 24: "Sic sine labore venter impletur meus." "Gratiam dare" is uncommon; but we find "gratiam petere" in Plaut. Cap. III. v. 63, "Frgo ab eo petito gratiam istam;" and Stich. I. ii. 23, "Gratiam a patre si petimus."—Caterum de reducendā, &c., "But as regards taking her back, do that which may be to your interest."

34. Mensis agitur — septimus, cf. Virg. AEn. v. 626, "Septima post Trojæ excidium jam vertitur æstas."—Doque operam, cf. Aulul. 240, H.

38. Dicam abortum esse, "I will say 'twas a miscarriage."—Ex te rectè eum natum. Ruhnken rightly explains rectè as i. q. "legitimo matrimonio." In ver. 40, hic is i. q. "herein."—In ver. 42, Certum est, "I'm resolved." Cf. Plaut. Men. 871; Aul. 630, H. G.

43. Nam de reducendā, &c., "Now, as to taking her back," &c. De reducendā is, i. q. Quod ad reductionem attinet, as in ver. 31. Nam, "now," is used perhaps here elliptically, the connection being "I'm resolved to keep my word as regards that point" [viz. keeping the secret; but what am I to say as to the other point]: "for, as to taking her back," &c. For "nam" so used, cf. Aulul. H. G. 656.—Amor — consuetudoque ejus. Westerhov. neatly explains this as an Hendiadys for "consuetus amor," cf. Andr. I. i. 108, "Ut consuetum amorem facile cerneret." Consuetudo, "intimacy," occurs in Andr. I. v. 44; II. vi. 8.—Quom in mentem venit. For this impersonal use of the phrase "in mentem venit," compare Ter. Phorm. IV. iii. 47, "Nam mihi venibat in mentem ejus incommodi;" and Plaut. Aulul. H. G. 183, "Venit hoc mi in mentem."

46. O fortuna, ut nunquam — es data. Cf. Adelph. V. ix. 15, "Utinam hoc perpetuum fiat gaudium." "Data" is the reading of Donatus here, adopted by Bentley, for the ordinary "bona." Bentley also suggested "perpetua" for "perpetuo." Cf. Plaut. Cistell. I. iii. 46, "Ut sunt humana, nihil est perpetuum datum."—Ad hanc rem exercitatum, cf. II. i. 6 above, "Docte ad malitiam."—Quem ego tum consilio missum feci, "Which I then purposely discarded." For "missum feci," cf. Andr. IV. i. 56; V. i. 14, notes. Parry rightly explains the sense of the passage: "My former love has trained me; for as I got rid of it determinedly, so now I will do my best for my present passion."

49. Adest Parmeno cum pueris, "Here's Parmeno with the slaves;" cf. III. ii. 24, "Tu pueris curre, Parmeno, obviam. In hac re adesse, "Should be mixt up in this matter."—Nam olim soli credidi, &c. Parry notes here, that Colman has gone upon a misapprehension in finding fault with Terence here. Parmeno does not know why Philumena went to her mother's house, nor does the audience know it, till this scene. Parmeno knew that Pamphilus and Philumena had not at first lived together. But till this scene not even Pamphilus seems to have known the true state of the case.

51. Eā me abstinuisse, &c., cf. Hecyr. I. ii. 64, above — Hinc ablegandus, “Must be sent hence out of the way.” “Ablego” is used of the removal of distasteful objects or persons, cf. Plaut. Mil. Gl. III. ii. 55. Livy, i. 35, “Sub tempus pueros venatum ablegavit.”

ACTUS III.—Sc. IV.

PAMPHILUS follows out his resolution (III. iii. 54) by sending Parmeno, just arrived from port with the baggage and servants, on an errand to the Acropolis, to put off his friend Callidemides, whose appearance is described, and for whom he is to wait till evening, if need be.

Metro:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Ain tu, “You don’t mean to say?” cf. Heaut. II. iii. 1.—Hoc incommodum evenisse itc, “That this voyage of yours proved unpleasant.” “Ire” is so used in Virg. Aen. iv. 310, “Et mediis properas aquilonibus ire per altum.” For tantum, followed by quam in ver. 3, cf. Livy. vii. 35, “Nec in acie tantum ibi cladis acceptuni, Quam quod trecentos — immolarunt!” Plaut. Rudens. I. iii. 1, “Nimio hominum fortunæ mihi miseræ memorantur Quam reapse experiundo iis datur acerbum.” In ver. 3, navigare is the infinitive used as the subject. Cf. Madvig. § 388, a. For the sentiment commentators quote Menander: Πῦρ καὶ Θάλασσα μὲν γυνὴ, κακὰ τρία.

5. Qui nunquam es ingressus mare. Posidippus had a line δὸ μὴ πεπλευκὼς οὐδέν ἔώρακε κακόν. With plus eo (tempore sc.) in ver. 7, compare Heaut. I. i. 11, “Annos sexaginta natus es, aut plus eo.”—Note.

9. I'a usque adversā tempestate usi sumus, “Such bad weather did we experience all the while.” For “usque” so used Parry quotes Virg. Ecl. ix. 64, “Cantantes licet usque (minus via lædet) eamus.” Couington translates that “usque” with “eamus:” “let us go straight on.” “Usque” seems to imply “continuous extent of space” or “time.”

10. Odicsum, “Troublesome,” or “what a bore,” cf. Menæchm. H. G. 230.—Denique hercle aufugerim potius, &c., “In a word, by the gods I’d rather make my escape than return (to Imbrus, sc.), if I knew I had to return thither again.” Bentley reads “sciam” for the ordinary reading “siet;” Phædrus I. xviii. 1, “Nemo libenter recolit, qui laesit, locum.” In ver. 11 and 12, Parmeno twists Sosia with having always had a taste for running away. Donatus compares Andr. IV. iii. 15, where, in reply to Davus, who has pleaded some desire to swear truly, Mysis says, “Intelligo: Nova nunc religio unde istæc incessit?”

16. Here, etiam tu hic stas? “Master, are you still standing here?” Etiam = “etiam nunc, as in Andr. I. i. 89; III. ii. 23. Virg. Aen. vi. 485, “Etiam currus, etiam arma tenentem.” In Eun. II. ii. 55, we find “etiam nunc hic stas, Parmeno?”—In arcem transcurso opus est, “You must run across to the citadel.” See Andr. III. ii. 10, note; Madvig. § 266, obs.; Key, § 1280.—Cui homini? “Who must?”—Tibi, “You!” In Andr. II. ii. 7, we find “Quis homo’st.”

18, 19. Culidemidem — conveni, “Go up to Callidemides, my host of Myconos, who sailed hither with me.” Myconos, one of the Cyclades.

Cf. Virg. Aen. iii. 76, "Gyaro celsa Myconoque revinxit." — Vorisse hunc dicam, &c., "I should say that this master of mine had vowed, that if ever he had reached home in safety, he would break my wind with walking." A sportive allusion to the custom of vows by sailors for safe return. Cf. Hor. Od. I. v. 13, "Me tabulâ sacer Votivâ paries indicat uvida," &c.; Virg. Aen. ii. 17, "Votum pro reditu simulant" For the phrase "ambulando rumpere," Gronovius compares Martial. XII. xiv. 11, 12, "Quid te frena juvant temeraria? Sæpins illis, Prisce, datum est equitem rumpere quam leporem;" and ibid. IX. lvii. 4, "Nec ruptæ recutita colla mulæ." Stälbaum quotes Plaut. Capt. Prol. 14, "Ego me tuâ causâ, ne erres, non rupturus sum."

22. An conreniam modo? "Am I only to go up to him?"

23. Immo, quod constitui, &c., "Yes: as to my appointment that I would meet him to-day, (tell him) I cannot: (tell him) not to wait there for me in vain! Away with you." — Non posse and ne me — expectet depend on dicas, understood from dicam in ver. 22. — Vola, compare Plaut. Pers. II. ii. 17, "Vola curriculo."

26. Magnus, rubicundus, &c., "A large, red, curly, coarse, cat-eyed fellow." — Cadarerosâ facie, "with a corpse-like face;" "a ghastly visage." For a similar description see Heaut. V. v. 17, "Rufamne illam virginem" &c., where also we have the epithet "cæsiām" q. v. ibid. The Myconians, according to Apollodorus, were all bald. Donatus therefore suppose Terence to have purposely written "crispus" for a joke. Westerhov. illustrates this passage by Plaut. Capt. III. iv. 113, "Macilento ore, naso acuto, corpore albo, et oculis nigris. Subrufus aliquantum, crispus, cincinnatus." — Cadarerosus, according to Westerhov. and Rulinken is an epithet similar to the Greek νεκρώδης, and the Lat. "morticine" (carrión!), cf. Plaut. Pers. II. iv. 12.

33. Quid potero faciam: tamen ut, &c., "I'll do what I can; yet in such a manner as to regard my filial duty." — Ita is understood before tamen. Pamphilus means that he will hold his tongue; but he will not take her home again, out of regard to what is due to his mother. With ver. 34, cf. I. ii. 47, "Pudorine anne amori obsequeretur magis." — For horsum in ver. 36 (h. e. huc-vorsum), cf. Plant. Rud. I. ii. 83, "Horsum se capessit."

ACTUS III.—Sc. V.

AT this point Laches, with Phidippus, comes upon Pamphilus; who is at a loss to say why he will not receive his wife back. Laches pretends that Philumena had gone home at her father's wish, but would now return. Pamphilus however tells him that he knows all, and puts the separation on the score of his mother, who, he says, does not agree with his wife. He must prefer his duty to his love. He leaves Phidippus and Laches, the former goes away in a rage, and Laches vows vengeance against Sostrata.

Metre:—1—34. Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

35—65. Iambic Triunctor.

1. Dixit' dudum, &c., cf. above II. ii. 27.—Factum (sc. “est quod dicis.”)

4. Certum affirmare est — persequi, “I am resolved to persist in the course which I have determined to follow out.” Ruhnken illustrates “persequi” by Cic. Cat. iv. 5, “Quoniam hanc is viam, quæ popularis habetur, secutus est.”—For “affirmare” see Heant. V. v. 8, note. With de quo hoc agebam tecum in ver. 5, compare Adelph. I. i. 53, note.

6. Bene factum te advenisse, “I’m glad you’ve arrived.” Cf. V. iv. 17, “Bene factum et volup est.” Phorm. II. i. 25, “Salvom venire — vellem quidem.”—Adeo, cf. Andr. III. iii. 47, note.—In ver. 8, Admodum, “Yes, very!” or “exactly so,” used in emphatic replies. Cf. Phorm. II. ii. 1, “Itanc patris ais adventum veritum hinc abiisse? Get. Admodum” Plaut. Baech. IV. vii. 40, “Bellan’ videtur specie mulier? Admodum.”—Consobrinus is a degree of relationship subsisting between sister’s children (consororini: sobrini), as “patrueles” between brother’s children.—Homo voluptati obsequens, cf. Adelph. I. i. 8.

10. Qui sic sunt, “Those, whose way is such,” cf. Andr. V. iv. 16, Sic, Crito, est hic.” Notes.—Vixit, dum rixit, bene, “He lived a jolly life, while he did live;” “While he lived he lived well.”—Colman. “Pendant qu’ils ont vécu, ils ont su vivre agréablement.”—Madame Dacier.—Ter. Eun. V. viii. 44, “Et libenter vivis, etenim bene libenter vietitas.”

12. Tum tu igitur nil, &c., “And so then you’ve brought nothing more hither than one sentence.” Bentley suggested “hac” after “unā.”—Quicquid est id, quod reliquit, profuit, “What little he has left, is an advantage.”—Immo obfuit, “Nay, a loss.” Quicquid id est is an apologetic way of speaking of property, as in Plaut. Rud. Prol. 58 (quoted by Ruhnken), “Quicquid erat, noctu in navem comportat domo.”—In ver. 15, Impune optare istuc licet = “You may safely wish that.”—Et tamen utrum malis, scio, is said “aside.”

17. Noli fodere, “Don’t dig me” (in the ribs, i. e.) “Don’t nudge me.” So in Hor. Ep. I. vi. 50, “Lævum Qui fodicerat latus.”—Scilicet = “To be sure I shall.”—At istos invidos Dè perdant, &c., “Now may the gods confound those envious informants of yours.” Donatus explains “Invidos” here, “qui matrimonio invident.”—For “at” used as here in indignation, cf. An-lr. IV. i. 43, note.

21. Fieri a vobis posset, “I’m sure that I took precautions that no notion of affront should deservedly arise on your part” (address to Phidippus).—In v. 22, fui is less usual than “fuerim” would have been. But a dependent interrogative proposition does sometimes occur in the indicative in Plaut. and Terence, never in prose, cf. Madvig. Gr. § 356, obs. 3.—For possum, in the next verse, we might also expect possim.

25. Cum illa, quæ nunc in me iniqua est, æqua de me dixerit, “When she, who now is unfavourably disposed towards me, shall have spoken fair of me.” Donatus observes that the testimony of an enemy is a strong rhetorical figure. Cf. Virg. Æn. i. 625, “Ipse hostis Teucros insigni laude ferebat.”—For discidium in ver. 26, cf. Andr. IV. ii. 14, note.

27. Sed quando sese esse indignam deputat, matri meæ Quæ concedat, “But since she deems it unmeet for her to yield to my mother.” The common reading was “Cui” which gives no sense. Gronov. in his Observations, pp. 499, 500, emends this passage by reading “Quæ” for

"Cui," from the Bembine Cod.; and he is followed by Bentley. Gronov. illustrates indignam quæ, &c., by Eun. V. ii. 29, "At tu indignus, qui faceres tamen." In the next verse, Cujusque causes some difficulty, as it seems awkward to refer it to any antecedent, except "sese" which clearly is not its antecedent. Bentley proposed "Quæque ejus mores." But, to our mind, Fleckeisen has hit the true emendation, "hujusque mores toleret" &c. This we retain, construing, "To yield to my mother, and to bear her tempers with her proper moderation." —For "mores" used in a bad sense, cf. Andr. II. iii. 21, "Uxorem his moribus dabit nemo." Plaut. Trinum. III. ii. 43, "Atque is mores hominum moros et morosos efficit." —For "componi potest gratia," "a reconciliation can be effected," cf. Plaut. Curc. V. iii. 23, "Si potis sum hoc inter vos componere." Ter. Phorm. IV. iii. 16; Virg. Ecl. iii. 108, "Non nostrum inter vos tantas componere lites."

31. Nunc me pietus matris — suadet, "Now," or "under present circumstances," duty to my mother induces me to consult her interests." —Pietas matris, the objective genitive after a substantive, cf. Madvig. Gr. § 233. For an accusative after suadeo, which more commonly has a dative, cf. Phœdr. I. xv. 6, "Suadebat asinum fugere." Virg. Aen. xii. 814. But perhaps "me" is to be taken as the accusative before the infinitive "sequi." —For "commodum sequi," Ruhnken refers to ver. 45 below, "Matris servibo commodis."

33. Quum te postputasse — præ, cf. Adelph. II. iii. 9, note. —Præ ingistas, "But look to it, Pamphilus, that you do not pursue a wrong course through the promptings of anger." Phorm. I. iv. 15, "Qua quærere insistam viam."

36. Quæ — commeritast, "Seeing that she has never committed any fault towards me." "Commereo" and "commereor" are generally used in a bad sense. See Plaut. Aul. 695, H. G. "Culpam commeritum." Plaut. Capt. II. iii. 43, "Neque te commeruisse culpam." Ter. Phorm. I. iv. 28, "Arbitrabitur Commeruisse culpam." —Quod nollem, "That I would wish undone." —Meritam quod vellem, scio, "I know that she has often done her best to please me." This use of "mereor" (the opp. of "commereor" as Donatus shows) is hard to render exactly in English. Donat. quotes here Virg. Aen. iv. 333, "Nunquam, regina, negabo Promeritam."

39. Miro ingenio, "Of an admirable disposition." Ruhnken quotes Virg. Aen. i. 78, "Omnies ut tecum meritis pro talibus annos Exigat."

43. Tibi id in manu est, ne fiat, "The preventing of that rests in your hands." Cf. below IV. iv. 44, "Uxor quid faciat, in manu non est mea." Plaut. Amph. II. i. 14, "Istuc tibi in manu est." —Non est consilium, "I don't intend to do so," "Tis not my intention." Plaut. Mil. Glo. II. iii. 73, "Consilium est, ita facere." —Matris servibo commodis, cf. above ver. 31.

50. Ita nunc is sibi me supplicaturum putat, "Docs that fellow then think that I'll go and cringe to him." Donatus notes that "sibi" and "me" are to be pronounced with emphasis, as in Virg. Ecl. iii. 25, "Cantando tu illum!" —Si est, ut velit, &c. "If he chooses to take back his wife, he may do so." For the phrase si est, ut &c. see below IV. i. 43, "Si est ut dicat velle se," and Ad. III. v. 4, note.

52. Renumeret dotem hue, "Let him pay back her dower here, into my hand. Hue is used δεικτικῶς. Donatus at III. iii. 31, on the words

"Quod in rem sit tuam," explains "Nam nisi reducatur, reddenda dos erit." Such was the Athenian Law, see Dos, in Smith's Dict. Ant. s. v. Renumeret = "reddat." So in Ad. III. iii. 52, "Nam ut numerabatur forte argentum." For ecce autem, see Adelph. I. ii. 73, note. Plaut. Men. H. G. 687.—Proterve, "immoderately."—In ver. 54, nobis, is the Dativus Ethicus, "to our sorrow." Cf. Madvig. Gr. § 248.

55. Decedet, "will abate." Cf. V. ii. 15 below. Livy iv. 52, "Ubi hæ sollicitudines discessere."—Sublati sunt animi, "Your pride is uplifted." Cf. Plaut. Truc. II. viii. 10, "Postquam filiolum peperit, animos sustulit." See also Pl. Aulul. H. G. 124, "Istas magnas factiones, animos, dotes dapsiles."—Velutne, an non, ("uxorem reducere" sc.)—Ut alii, si huic non est, siet. Such is the reading of the Embiue MS. adopted by Bentley. Understand "uxor" as the nom. to "est" and "siet."

60. Audi paucis. Cf. Andr. I. i. 2; III. iii. 4, notes.—Quid mea ("refert" sc.) "What care I?"—Inter se transigant ipsi. Cf. Andr. V. vi. 17, "Intus transigetur."

63. Quæ dico parvi pendunt, "And do not value what I say," "attach no weight to my words." Cf. Heaut. I. i. 103, "Tu illum nunquam ostendisti quanti penderes."—Porto hoc jurgium, h. e. portabo, the present for the future. Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 148.

65. Atque in eam hoc omne, quod mihi ægre, evomam, "And I'll vent on her all this spleen of mine." For "evomam" cf. Ad. III. ii. 15; III. iv. 65, notes, and for "Quod mihi ægre est," II. i. 30 above, "Ne quid ægre esset mihi," Adelph. I. ii. 57.

ACTUS IV.—Sc. I.

GOING into his house, Phidippus discovers his daughter's real condition, and blames his wife for seeking to hide the birth of the child. If it is Pamphilus's, wherefore should it be exposed, he asks? He puts his veto on this.

5. Trochaic Dimeter Catalectic.

6, 28—31, 51—61. Iambic Tetrameter.

2. Vagientis, "crying" (as an infant). See Ovid. Fast. ii. 405, "Vagierunt ambo pariter: sensisse putares." Ibid. Heroid. xi. 85, "Vagitus dedit ille miser;" and Livy. I. iv. "Ad puerilem vagitum cursum flexisse." For "corripuit sese," cf. III. iii. 5. note.—Derepente, "suddenly." This compound adverb (of the same class as "de-nuo" "de-subito") occurs in three fragments of Ennius, and one of Attius. (Astyanax 184. "Derepente aspicio ex nemore — egredi." See Ribbeck's Trag. Lat. Reliquiae (Index). See also Plaut. Most. II. ii. 57, and for "desubito" Heaut. IV. ii. 6.

4. Clam me habuisse, "That I concealed from him." So in IV. iv. 35, below, "Non clam me haberet."—Ostium concrepuit, cf. Andr. IV. i. 58, note. Nulla sum, see above, III. i. 39, note.

7. Se duxit foras, "Withdrew out of doors." Cf. above, III. iii. 4, "Me — citius eduxi foras." Aulul. 662 (Hildyard).—Tibi dico, "It's to you I'm speaking." Cf. Adelph. I. ii. 17.

9. Vir ego, &c. "What ! I be your husband ? Do you think that I'm a husband or even a man?" "Moi, votre mari ? Estce que vous me considerez comme tel ? Ou enfin, me prenez vous seulement pour un homme ?"—Madame Dacier. The reading "sim" for "sum," is restored by Bentley, from the MS. Bembine. Vir = "maritus" as in Virg. Ecl. vii. 7, "Vir gregis ipse caper," ἄνης in Greek.

11. Non sic ludibrio — habitus essem, "I should not have been thus made ridiculous by your acts." Cf. I. ii. 74, "Eam ludibrio haberis, Parmeno." Pl. Men. H. G. 685, "Ludibrio, pater Habeor," and ibid. 595, "Me — tibi habes despiciatui."—Cui datast nuptum, cf. Andr. II. i. 1, note ; Adelph. III. ii. 48 ; Madvig. § 411, obs. 1.

14. Credo : neque adeo — patris est aliter, "So I suppose : nor in fact does it become a parent to think otherwise. But I marvel" &c.—Præseriū cum et rectè et tempore suo, &c., "Especially since her delivery has been regular and at her full time." "Rectè" is used as here in Hecyr. III. iii. 39. "Ex te rectè eum natum putent."

17. Adeon' perricaci esse animo, &c., "To think that you should be so stubborn-spirited as to prefer that the child should perish," &c. For this construction, see Andr. I. v. 10, "Adeon' hominem esse invnustum," and note ibid. With "præoptares" "potius" is elegantly redundant in ver. 19. Ruhuken quotes, Cic. Ep. ad Div. xv. 5. "Casum potius quam te laudari mavis." Something similar is the Greek μάλλον εὐτυχεστέρεος.—Potius quam — esset cum illo nupta, "Rather that she should be wedded with him against your inclination." With ver. 19, we must supply "ut" in sense. For "nupta cum illo" (more commonly "illi") Westerhov. quotes Plaut. Stich. I. ii. 75, "Vosne ego patiar cum mendicis nuptas, me vivo, viris ?"

20. Ego etiam illorum, &c., "I believed that this fault, which all lies at your door, belonged or attached to them likewise," i. e. to the family of Laches. The position of "etiam" points to this construction. Donatus thought "etiam" = "adhuc," and construed it with "creddi."—Sed nunc mi in mentem venit, De hāc re. Compare Phorm. IV. iii. 47, Hecyr. III. iii. 45, note. The ordinary reading is, "ex hāc re." Bentley restores "de" from the quotation of the line by Donatus at IV. iv. 89.

22. Generum cepimus, h. c. "elegimus." Gronov. quotes Virg. Georg. ii. 230, "Ante locum capies oculis."

27. Verum id ritium, &c. See Adelph. I. ii. 21, "Non est flagitium" &c.—Nam id innatumst, at pol jam aderit &c. Such was one of Bentley's modes of reading this line, which would then be a Trochaic. His other plan was to read, "Nam id omnibus innatum, ut," omitting "est," and so making an Iambic with what follows. Parry, whose reading for its simplicity we have followed, reads, "Nam id est omnibus innatum: at pol jam aderit" &c. The Metro will then be Iambic Tetrameter.—At pol jam aderit — quom, cf. Andr. I. i. 125, "Prope adest, quum alieno more vivendum est." Plaut. Bacch. III. iii. 13, "Jam aderit tempus, cum sese etiam ipse oderit." Construe, "Nay, soon the time will come, when he will even also hate his former self." See for "quoquo etiam" thus joined, Hecyr. V. i. 36, "Ego quoque etiam credidi," and for sentiment generally, Heaut. V. iv. 20, "Eheu, quam ego nunc totus displico mihi." Parry adds, Juvenal vii. 34, 35, q. v.—Eadem esse nil cessavisti, h. e. "You have not a whit ceased to be the same up to the present time."

30. Ut filiam — neu quod egissem, &c., "As to estranging my daughter from him, and as to frustrating that which I had done, or arranged." Neu is i. q. "et ut nou."

31. Id nunc res indicium haec facit, quo pacto, &c., "This conduct of yours shows this, namely, how you wished things done." Parry rightly explains "id" as the accusative, governed by the logical idea of "indictum — facit," i. q. "indicat." The clause "quo pacto" &c., is in apposition to "id."—Factum volueris= "optaveris."—Cui mater siem, "Towards one whose mother I am."—Si ex usu esset nostro, &c., "If this marriage were for our advantage." Cf. Andr. V. iv. 51, "Magis ex sese." Heaut. I. ii. 36, "Tibi quod ex usu siet." See also below, IV. iii. 10, "Ex usu quod est, id persequar."

34. Nostram in rem quod sit. Cf. above, I. ii. 27, "Si in rem est Bacchidis." Andr. III. iii. 14, "Si in remst utriusque," note.—Quid tum prostea? "What matter?" an expression of contempt of some argument or charge. The phrase occurs in Eun. IV. ii. 9.

38. Dare opcam id seire, qui nos oderit, "Than to do our utmost, that our enemy should know it," i. e. "than to take all pains to publish it to our enemies." Such is the explanation of Westerhov, and it seems the true one. He compares IV. ii. 14, "Qui nobis maledictum velit," which is a similar construction. Parry explains "qui" in the sense of the purpose, as in Andr. Prol. 5. But this is not so satisfactory. Madame Dacier translates qui nos oderit, "afin qu'il vous hâisse." But there can be no doubt that the interpretation given above is the best and most natural. For "derekente" in ver. 39, above cf. IV. i. 3, note.—Quacum tot consucesset annos, cf. Ad. IV. v. 32, note.

41. Nec virum satis firmum gratae, "Nor a husband constant enough for my daughter." Cf. above I. ii. 26, "Firme hæ vereor ut sint nuptiae," and Andr. III. iii. 39, "Tibi generum firmum et filiae invenies virum."—Mitte, "have done with" i. q. "omit." Cf. Andr. IV. iv. 25, "Mitte id quod scio," note.—Solus solun conveni, cf. Ad. IV. v. 34, note, and above III. ii. 15, note.—Rogā, in ver. 43 has its last syllable short. See Parry's note on Adelph. III. iv. 21, &c. For "si est ut dicat velle se," compare Adelph. III. v. 4, note.

45. Si quidem, &c., "If it is true that he himself does not wish her, and that you perceived that there had been a mistake herein: I was at hand" &c. Editors pass over this passage unnoticed, but it seems best to take "peccatum" with "esse in eo," and to make "aderam" &c. the Apodosis.—Cujus consilio ea par fuerat propici, "By whose advice it was meet that those matters should be provided for."—Incendor irā, cf. Ad. III. ii. 12, "Ardeo iracundiā."—Injussu meo, cf. Phorm. II. i. 1, and below, IV. iv. 82.

48. Ne extulisse velis= "ne efferas" "that you don't remove" or "expose." "I forbid you to expose." This Periphrasis of the infinitive after "velle," is not uncommon. Ruhlen quotes an illustration, Lucret. ii 640, "Ut armis Ac virtute velint patriam defendere terram." Ov. Met. ii. 745, "Tu tantum fida sorori Esse velis."

52. Nam ut hic latus hoc sit, &c., "For how he (Phidippus) will bear this, if he shall have come to know the actual state of the case ; by the gods, I am not at all in doubt." Cf. II. ii. 19, 20 above.

55. Hoc mihi unum — reliquum fuerat malum, &c., "This one last ill then of many miseries was in store for me, namely, if he forces me to rear the child." For a parellel expression, cf. Ad. III. iii. 3, "Id misero restat mihi mali, si illum potest" &c. For "nou quita est" in ver. 57, the old form of "quivit," cf. Madvig. Gr. § 159, obs. 2. The passive form was used where the infinitive passive was subjoined. See also Plaut. Rud. IV. iv. 20, "Ut nequitur comprimi;" Pers. II. ii. 12, "Nec subigi queantur unquam;" Sallust. B. Jug. 31, "Ulcisci nequitur."—In ver. 58, Qui post posset &c., "qui" is the ablative. For the constructions "detractum ei est," "eripuit virginī," cf. Adelph III. ii. 20, note. Key's Gr. § 972.

60. Orata nostra. Cf. above III. iii. 25, "Quom orata ejus reminiscor." —Alienum, h. e. "nothum," cf. Heaut. V. iv. 6, "Alienum te esse," note, and see below at IV. iv. 27.—Tolli (as "tollam" in 55) "to be brought up," "reared." Cf. Andr. I. iii. 14, note; Heaut. IV. i. 14.

ACTUS IV.—Sc. II.

SOSTRATA has an interview with her son Pamphilus, who, she has heard, has preferred his filial duty to his love. She is determined not to exact this sacrifice, but to retire to the country-house, that Philumena may return to her husband and be freed from her presence, which has been distasteful. Pamphilus does not accept her proposal, which, if favourably received, would cut away from him any excuse for not receiving her back.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. We adopt here Bentley's emendation which omits "me" before "esse," and reads "suspectum."

2. Propter meos mores, "On account of my tempers." Cf. III. v. 28, note.—Itaque obtingant ex te quæ excepto mihi, "And so may what I desire from you happen to me." Phorm. V. iv. 1, "Fratri obtigisse quod vult."—Commerui, cf. notes on III. v. 36, "Commerita est." —Caperet odium illum mei. So above II. i. 22, "Cepisse odium tui Philumenam."

5. Teque ante quod me amare rebar &c., "And that which I thought before, namely, that you loved me, to that fact you have given confirmation :" "You have pledged your faith." Bentley, followed by Ruhken, reads "quod" instead of "quam," the more general reading here. Donatus seems to have read "quam," and to have supposed "tam" to be understood; in which case we should construe, "And, as I before thought, that you loved me, so now you have confirmed" &c. Schneider, quoted by Stälbaum, takes "quam" to mean "quamtöpere." We prefer Bentley's solution.

6. Quo pacto me habueris Prapropositam, h. e. praposueris. A kind of Grecoism which Ruhnken illustrates by Sallust. Catil. 23, "Tale periculum reipublicæ haud occultum habuit." Jug. B. 10, "Neque ea res falsum me habuit." L'arry quotes Plaut. Cas. II. ii. 15, "Vir me habet pessiminis despicatam modis." Soph. Antig. 22, τὸν μὲν προτίσας, τὸν δ' ἀτιμάσας ἔχει.

8. Ut apud me præmium esse positum pietati scias, "That you may know that with me a reward is set apart or proposed to filial piety." Pietati appears to be the true reading here, and is confirmed by Plaut. Pœn. V. iv. 17, "Præmium ut esse sciām pietati," quoted by Bentley. Virg. Æn. i. 465, "Sunt hic etiam sua præmia laudi. Virgil in Æn. V. 292, has "Invitat pretiis animos et præmia ponit." See also Phorm. Prol. 17, "Palmam esse positam."—In ver. 10, Certo decrevi, "I've positively determined," "fixed for certain."

13. Illiū stultitiā — migres? ("Oportet ut," sc.) "Shall her perverseness drive you out of town?" Colman—Ut qui nobis male dictum relit, &c., "Nor will I allow any one who would fain slander us, to say that your going into the country was caused by my obstinacy, not your moderation. For "Ut qui nobis — velit," cf. IV. i. 38, "Qui nos oderit," note.

16. Tum tuas amicas, &c.—festos dies, "Besides, I would not have you for my sake desert your female friends and relations, and your festivals." Gronov. and Ruhnken quote Cic. Orat. post Reditum ad Quirites, sect. 1, "Amicitiæ, consuetudines, vicinitates, clientelæ, ludi denique et dies festi quid haberent voluptatis, carendo magis intellexi, quam fruendo." The festivals alluded to seem to have been "family gatherings," called "Charistia." Plaut. Aul. 334, has "Festo die siquid prodegeris." In ver. 17 istæc is i. q. "istæ." Cf. Heaut. IV. vii. 10; Phorm. V. viii. 23; "Hæccine" for "Hæcine."

18. Tulit. Cf. Andr. I. ii. 17; Ad. I. i. 28, notes.—Satias jam tenet, &c., "I'm disgusted at last with those amusements you speak of." For "satias" (gen. "satiatis"), see Eun. III. i. 14, where some read "satietas," and V. v. 3, "Ubi satias ecepit fieri, commuto locum."

20. Longinquitas atlati obset, "That to none may my length of days be a hindrance." "Longinquus" and "longinquitas," says Gronov., are used of time as well as space. Cf. Propert. I. vi. 27, "Multi longinquo periere in amore libenter;" Cæsar. B. G. i. 47, "scientiam, quâ multâ jam Ariovistus longinquâ consuetudine utebatur."—Mortenre expected meam, "Or anyone be longing for my death." So in Adelph. I. ii. 29; V. iv. 20, notes. There is an Anacoluthon here: we should expect "neve quis." Colman quotes Midsummer Night's Dream, Act. I. scene 1, "She lingers my desires, Like to a step-dame or a dowager, Long withering out a young man's revenue." Menander has left a line—πικρόν ἐστι θρέμμα γέρων ἐν οἰκίᾳ μένων.

22. Omnes causas præcidam omnibus, "I shall cut off all grounds of dissatisfaction from all." Ruhnken quotes Cic. in Verr., Act. II. Lib ii. 62, "Da mihi hoe: jam tibi maximam partem defensionis præcideris." Cic. Cato Major, c. 16, "Brevi præcidam;" Hor. Epist. I. ii. 9, "Bellii præcidere causam."—Morem gessero, cf. Andr. IV. i. 17, note; Plaut. Men. (H.) 690.—Sine me—hoc effugere, volgus quod male audit, &c., "Prythee, let me avoid this charge, with which the mass of woman-kind is reproached." Quod is i. q. "proter quod." For "volgus mulierum," cf. Andr. III. iv. 4, note, "Volgus servorum." For male audit, "is ill spoken of," cf. Phorm. Prol. 20, "Benedictis si eertasset, audisset bene." Hor. Epist. I. xvi. 17, "Si euras esse, quod audis." Sostrata alludes to Act II. i. 4, "Omnes socrus omnes suas oderunt nurus."

25. Absque una hac foret, "Were it not for this one thing" (sc. re.) A common phrase of Terence and Plautus, in which "si" is elegantly omitted. Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 920, Absque te esset, "But for you." Triumm. 802 (IV. i. 13), "Nam absque foret te, sat scio in alto Distraxissent;" Ter. Phorm. I. iv. 11, "Nam absque eo esset Reete ego mihi vidi sem;" Plaut. Bacchid. III. iii. 8, &c.

27. Non tute incommodam rem, &c., "Will you not make up your mind to endure each unpleasantness, as it comes." Cf. Hor. Od. I. xi. 3, "Ut melius quidquid erit pati," Hor. Sat. I. iii. 78, 79, "Ac res Ut quæque est, ita suppliciis delicta coërcet." Compare, for the sentiment, Andr. V. iv. 18; Hor. Od. I. xxiv. 19.

29. Da veniam hanc mihi, "Grant me this request." Cf. Andr. V. iii. 30, note.

ACTUS IV.—Sc. III.

LACHES has overheard the dialogue in the last scene, and concurs in his wife's determination—which he persists in urging her to carry out, in spite of the delays and doubts suggested by Pamphilus. He thinks 'tis time that he and his old woman should retire from the stage. Phidippus comes up at this juncture.

1. Procul hinc, "At a little distance hence. Bentley reads, Procul hic, "Hard by here." Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 144; Virg. Ecl. vi. 16, "Serta procul tantum capiti sublapsa jacebant."—Istuc est sapere, qui ubi, &c., "That is true wisdom, whereby one can direct one's mind wheresoever there may be need."—Qui is then i. q. "quā ratione." Stälbaum, however, considers qui as the nominative i. q. ut tu, "to be able," &c. Either construction is admissible. Ver. 3 is further explanatory of istuc est sapere, "To wit, if one shall have done now the very same thing, which perhaps must be done hereafter." The second person is put generally for the third.

4. Fors fuat pol! "May fortune befriend us!" "Fors" = "Fortuna." For fuat, the old form of "Sit" a "fuo" ($\phi\acute{\imath}\omega$), cf. Aulul. H. G. 190, 380; Virg. AEn. x. 108, "Tros Rutulusve fuat;" Pl. M. G. II. vi. 112, "Ne, dum absun, illis sortito fuam."

5. Compone, quæ, &c., "Pack up what is to be carried with you." So in Plaut. Mil. G. IV. vii. 21, "Omnia composita sunt, quæ donavi, ut ferat."—Dixi, "I have said the word." Properly used of advocates who have finished their cause. See Phorm. II. iii. 90, "Dixi Phormio;" Eun. V. viii. 36, "Dictum est."

7. Hinc abire matrem ("decetne," sc.). Minime, An answer to his own question. In ver. 8, etiam is i. q. "etiam nunc," as in Andr. I. i. 89.—Vix contineor, "I can scarce keep myself from doing so (h. e. "quid reducam," sc.). Contineor is used in a middle sense.

10. Sed non minuam meum consilium, "But I won't alter my determination." Andr. II. iii. 18, "Nec tu minueris," &c.; Cæsar. B. G. v. 26, "Minuere controversiam."—Ex usu quod est, id persequar, "What is to our interest, that I'll carry out." For ex usu, see Andr. V. iv. 51; Heant. I. ii. 36, notes, and above, IV. i. 33.

11. Credo cā gratiā concordes magis, &c., "I suppose that they will agree better together on the strength of this, namely, if I do not reinstate her (Philumena)."
Bentley proposed to omit "non" before "reducam," and he is followed by Fleckeisen. In that case "credo" is to be taken ironically. But Pamphilus only means "they will do better apart." For "ēā gratiā," cf. Audr. II. vi. 2, note.

12. Nescias. Verum id, &c., "You don't know that. But it matters nothing to you which of the two things they do (agree or disagree), when my wife shall have taken her departure."—For refert tuā, cf. Adelph. V. iv. 27, note; Madvig. § 295; Key's Gr. § 910 (who considers "mēā, tuā," &c. to be accusatives feminine singular). Donaldson, in Varronianus, p. 310, takes them as datives = "mēæ, tuæ," &c., agreeing with "rei" in "refert;" as also Festus seems to indicate.—Hæc ælas, δεικτικῶς.

14. E medio æquom exceedere est, "'Tis meet we should retire from the world's gaze." So in Adelph. III. iv. 33, "In medio'st mater virginis." In the opposite sense, Plautus, Amph. I. i. 68, has "In medium;" "Utrique imperatores in medium exequunt."—Postremo nos jam fabula sumus, &c., "In a word, we are already a by-word, 'old man and old woman.'" Such seems the simplest interpretation; cf. Hor. Epod. xi. 7, "Heu me! per urbem, (nam pudet tanti mali)—Fabula quanta fui!" Epist. I. xiii. 9, "Fabula fias." Madame Dacier explains, "Nous ne sommes plus bons qu'à faire le sujet d'un conte, il y avait autrefois un bon-homme et une bonne-femme," and this explanation was that of Donatus, Guyetus, and Tanaquil Faber. These last read "fabula," Ruhken reads "fabulæ."

16. Per tempus, "In good time," "opportunely." So Andr. IV. iv. 44, "O Chreme, per tempus advenis."

ACTUS IV.—Sc. IV.

PHIDIPPUS, having learned his daughter's secret, blames Myrrhina for the separation of Philumena from Pamphilus, and urges the latter to acknowledge the child. Laches concurs in this request. But Pamphilus is only the more set against it, and Laches infers that he still loves Bacchis, in which view Phidippus joins. Pamphilus leaves them to do and say what they please, and they resolve upon sending for Bacchis, to warn her against encouraging Pamphilus's visits.

Metre :— Iambic Trimeter.

1. Tibi quoque, “With you, as well as your mother.” For this is the force of quoque.—De hac re, “As regards this matter.”

6. Aperiam. Bentley’s reading “operiam” seems more probable here, and it has been adopted by Fleckeisen. Construe, “What shall I answer these? or how shall I hide this from them?” Parry prefers aperiam, “How can I tell them the whole matter?”

8. Ne revereatur, minus jam quo redeat domum, h. e. “quominus jam redeat,” &c., a case of Tunesis, “That she may not fear to return home now.”—For commeruit in ver. 9, cf. note at III. v. 36, “Quæ commeritast.”

11. Mutatio fit. These words properly belong to Pamphilus, who speaks them aside. He says, “There’s a shifting of the charge,” from Sostrata to Myrrhina, i.e. The ordinary reading attributes “Mutatio fit” with the context, to Phidippus.

12. Dum ne reducam, &c. “Provided I don’t restore her to my home, let them squabble on as much as they please.” For Dum ne, cf. Andr. V. iii. 31.—Turbent porro, cf. Plaut. Mostell. III. i. 15, “Pergam turbare porro;” Virg. Ecl. i. 12, “Usque adeo turbatur agris.” “Turbare” is used also absolutely also, in Pl. Men. H. G. 388; Aulul. 610.—Quam velint is i. q. “quantum velint.” Ruhnken illustrates this use by Cic. pro Cælio, c. 26, “Quam velit, sit potens.”

15. Sin est ut, &c. A Euphemism to avoid the ill omen of the word “divorce.” Adelph. III. iv. 46, “Sin aliter animus vester est.”—Accipias puerum, “Take and rear the child.” Donatus says, that in cases of divorce, the male children followed the father.—Sensit peperisse: occidi! Said aside to the audience.

18. Prægnas. This form, as well as the form “prægnaus,” occurs in Terence and Plautus. In Plaut. Aul. 120, the editions are in favour of “prægnantem,” as also in Plaut. Amph. II. ii. 91, “Prægnanti.” Festus explains the difference between gravida, “quæ jam gravatur conceptu,” and prægnans “velut occupata in generando, quod conceperit.”—Unquam ante hunc sciri diem. Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 402, “Unquam ante hunc diem Vidi neque novi.”

21. Sed quid mulieris uxorem habes? &c., “But what sort of woman have you for a wife!” Quid mulieris implies contempt; as in Heaut. IV. viii. 7, “Queso quid tu hominis es?” Eun. V. i. 17, “Quid illuc hominis est;” Andr. I. v. 10, &c.—Quibus moratum moribus, “Endowed with what a disposition” or “temper.” “Moratus is used thus either in a bad or good sense. Compare, Aulul. Prol. 22, “Pariter moratum;” and ibid 196 (H.), “Duminodo morata recte veniat.”

23. Nosne hoc celatos tam diu? For this construction, see Andr. I. v. 10, notes: and for the two accusatives after “celo,” Madvig. Gr. § 228 a, obs. Andr. III. iv. 6, note.—In v. 24 videtur is the indicative, where the subjunctive would be more common. It seems to express the speaker’s opinion more decidedly. In ver. 25 there is no need with Bentley to read “dolet.” Stälbaum rightly explains the line, as equivalent to “Mihi hoc factum æque displicet atque tibi.”

27. Eam sequitur alienus puer, “The child of another follows her as his dam.” For alienus, see above IV. i. 61, and for “sequitur,” the metaphor of which is from the young of a flock following their dam, cf. Hor. Od. I. xxiii. 11, “Tandem desine matrem Tempestiva viro sequi;”

Virg. Georg. iii. 316, "Atque ipsæ memores redeunt in tecta, suosqne Ducunt."—Consultatio = "occasion for deliberation." Cf. "cautio est," Andr. II. iii. 26.

31. Nullus sum. Cf. Andr. II. ii. 33, note.—In ver. 30, Westerhov. quotes Virg. AEn. iv. 327, "Saltem siqua mihi de te suscepta fuisset, Ante fugam soboles," &c.—For Se esse mecum nuptum, compare above, IV. i. 23, "Nuptam filiam cum eo," &c., and Phorm. V. iii. 34, "Natam inveni nuptam cum tuo filio."

35. Alienum a me, cf. Ad. III. ii. 27, notes.

37. Nec conventurum—arbitror, "And I don't think that there will be a reconciliation between us hereafter." Bentley read "arbitrer :" but arbitror may stand, if we read it in a parenthesis. Conventurum is i. q. "concordiam futuram," cf. I. ii. 103, "Bene conveniebat sane inter eas;" Plaut. Trinumm. III. i. 22, "Nescio quid non satis inter eos convenit."

41. An quia non delinquent viri? "Is it because men do no wrong?" (ironically). Cf. V. ii. 18, "An quia non tute dudum audisti."—Remissan opus sit vobis redditum domum, "Whether she ought to be sent back to us by you, or taken home to you"—"to be repudiated or reinstated." For the construction of the ablatives "remissa" and "reducta" agreeing with Philumenā understood after opus sit, cf. Key's Gr. §§ 999, 1280, &c. For the repetition of "ne" instead of "ne—an," cf. Key's Gr. § 1424; Virg. AEn. i. 312. "Qui teneant oras, hominesne feræne;" Tibull. IV. v. 20, "Quid refert clamne palamne roget."—In manu non est meā, cf. III. v. 43, note.—Quid faciemus puero? cf. notes at Andr. III. v. 8, "Nec quid me nunc faciam scio."

46. Ridicule rogas: quicquid, &c., "You ask a foolish question: whatever may happen you must surely give back his child to my son here, that we may rear our own." Nostrum is said by the grandfather, as having an interest in his son's child. Pamphilus then says to the audience, "What one whom his real father has neglected," and then aloud to his father, Ego alam? "Am I to rear?" There seems no reason for the reading "ipsa" with Donatus, in ver. 48.—For Prodemus in ver. 50, cf. Heaut. IV. i. 26, "Nempe amui illi prodita abs te filiast planissimè."

54. Aut quid sit id quod, &c., "Or what is the cause, by reason of which you are harassed in this fashion? Quod h. e. "ob quod."—Policitast ea, &c., cf. IV. ii. 21, IV. iv. 7.—Nactus alteram es, "You have lit upon another." Cf. V. iii. 27, below; Plaut. Men. 325, "Si possum hospitium nancisci."

61. Aliquando tandem, &c., "That at some time, late though it were, you might attach yourself to matrimony:" huc δεικτικᾶς.—Animum adjungas, cf. Andr. I. i. 29, "Ut animum ad aliquod studium adjungant."—Spatium amandi, cf. I. ii. 55, "Spatium solitudinis."—Sumptus quos fecisti in eum, "The expenses you incurred for that woman" (Bacchis). Cf. Heaut. I. i. 78, "Sumptus domi Tantos ego solus faciam;" Adelph. V. iii. 21, "Sumptum filii Quem faciunt."

64. Egi atque oravi tecum, "I pleaded with you, and prayed you to marry." "Oro" is used with "eum," and the abl. of the personal pronouns, by Plaut. Rudens. III. iv. 68, "Tecum oro, senex." Parry adds, Plaut. Cas. II. v. 16, "Mecum oraret;" Asinar. III. iii. 96, "Petere atque orare mecum." Westerhov. needlessly refers the expression in the text to the class of constructions of which Adelph. V.

vii. 19, "Illas abi et traduce" is an instance.—Impulsu duxisti meo, "You married at my urgency," cf. II. i. 45, above.

66. Quæ tum obsecutus, &c., "By complying with my wishes as to which things then, you did as it became you."—Animum ad meretricem induxi. Parry says that this is the sole instance in Terence of "ad" following "animum inducere." Westerhov. quotes "animum ad malas adducam partes," in V. iii. 38, as somewhat similar.—Cui in ver. 68, refers, of course, to Bacchis.

69. Revolutum denuo, "For I behold you rolling back again upon the same course of life." For this use of denuo (de novo) with revolutum, Parry quotes Prol. ii. 30, "Refero deuuo." For revolutum, Ruhnken adduces Cic. ad Att. xiii. 26, "Revolvorum identidem in Tusculanum." Westerhov. refers to St. Pet. II. ii. 22, ὃς λουσαμένη εἰς κύλισμα βορβόρου. In ver. 71, Fleckeisen follows Bentley in reading "Configis," for "Cum fingis."—Testem hanc, "This witness here," i. e. his wife.

73. Sensitque adeo uxor, "And what's more, your wife has discovered it." Cf. Andr. III. iii. 47, note.—Planè hic divinat, "The man is clearly a diviner" (aside to the audience). Gronov. explains "divinare" here "conjiciendo rem acu tangere," quoting a similar sense of "divinus" and "divinitus" in Livy, i. 36, "Agedum, inquit, divine tu, inaugura," &c., and Curelio, II. i. 33, "Vah! solus hic homo est, qui sciat divinitus."

75. Dabo jusjurandum. So Adelph. II. i. 11, "Jusjurandum dabitur."—Quamobrem non opus sit cedo, cf. "reductâ" as in ver. 44 above. For "cedo," see Heaut. IV. viii. 5, Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 114. In culpâ non est, cf. above III. i. 19.

80. Tot me — concludit pater, "By so many things does my father get wretched me in the toils." Concludo is a metaphor from snaring wild beasts. Cf. Andr. II. iii. 12, "Ut ab illâ excludar, huc concludar." Cf. also Plaut. Cure. iii. 79.—Promoveo parum, "I make little progress," "I gain little." Cf. Andr. IV. i. 16 note, Eurip. Hippol. 1294 καίτοι προκόψω γ' οὐδέν.—Injussu meo, cf. IV. i. 47.

85. Num tibi videtur esse apud sese? "Does he seem to you to be in his senses." Cf. Heaut. V. i. 48, "Non sum apud me." Andr. V. iv. 34, "Vix sum apud me."—Sine, "Leave him to himself." Eun. I. i. 20, "Sine modo," "Let me alone for that."

88. Amarce mulieres sunt. So Menander, φύσει γυνὴ δυσήνιδη ἐστι καὶ πικρὸν. Ovid. A. A. ii. 373—378, q. v.—Ipsa narravit mihi, h. e. in Act. IV. sc. i. ver. 23.

92. Nam omnino abhorrere, &c., "For I see that his inclination is altogether set against matrimony." Cf. Audr. V. i. 10, "Abhorrenti ab re uxoriā."

95. Oremus: accusemus: gravius denique &c., "Let us treat with her; accuse her; then in fine threaten her." Bentley has rightly placed the colon at "accusemus," and omitted a stop between "gravius" and "denique."—Si cum illo rem, &c., cf. Eun. I. ii. 39.

98. Huc evoca verbis meis, "Bid her in my name to come forth hither." For verbis meis, cf. Plaut. Mil. Gl. III. iii. 39, "Anūlūn Quem ego militi darem tuis verbis." Plaut. Aen. phit. III. iii. 12, "Gubernatorem a navi huc evoca verbis meis." Sallust. Jug. B. c. 21, "Caninius me tuis verbis admonuit."

101. Manere adsinitatem. Cf. ver. 14, and with Ruhnken, Virg. Aen.

i. 26, "Manet altâ mente repostum Judicium Paridis," where, as here, there is a notion of fixedness.

104. Para, "Hire." Cf. Eun. III. ii. 35, "Qui haberet qui pararet alium, hunc perpeti." Hor. Sat. II. iii. 129, "Servosne tuos, quos ære pararis."

ACTUS V.—SCEN. I.

BACCHIS comes at the bidding of Laches, who first disabuses her mind of any unfriendly purpose on his part, and then imputes to her a continuance of her old liaison with Pamphilus. She denies it to the satisfaction of Laches, and at his wish undertakes to prove to Myrrhina and Philumena, that since his marriage, Pamphilus has kept aloof from her. She desires to clear herself and her former lover.

1. Non hoc de nihilost, &c. This is not for nothing, namely, that Laches seeks an interview with me now. The phrase, de nihilo, is illustrated by Ruhnken from Propert. III. vii. 52 (Paley), "Nec sic de nihilo fulminis ira cadit," and Westerhov. adds, Plaut. Truc. IV. ii. 56, "De nihilo illi est irasci, quæ te non flocei facit."—Me conventam esse expedit, see Plaut. Poen. V. ii. 159, "Est qui illam conventam esse vult."

2. Nec pol me multum fallit, quin &c., "Nor, faith, am I much mistaken, unless what he wants with me be what I suspect."

3. Videndum est ne minus propter iram, &c., "I must look to it that through this anger of mine, I don't obtain less than I might." This is said aside. Bentley for hanc, reads "hinc," h. e. "a Bacchide." But this change is unnecessary.—Aut ne quid faciam plus, quod, &c., "Or lest I should do anything too much, which afterwards it might be better I had not done." Comparo Phorm. III. iii. 21, "Ne quid plus minusve faxit quod nos post pigeat, Geta."

7. Huc foras puerum evocare jussi. Cf. IV. iv. 97.—Ego pol quoque etiam. For the combination of "quoque" and "etiam," cf. above, IV. i. 28, and below at ver. 36 of this scene; and Virg. En. i. 9, "Multa quoque et bello passus."—Venit mi in mentem, cf. Heaut. V. ii. 33 and 43, notes; Adelph. IV. i. 12; Hecyr. III. iii. 45.

9. Ne nomen mihi quæsti olsit, &c., "That the name of my trade may operate to my prejudice." The Bembine MS. has "quæsti," and omits "apud te," which was in the old texts. Fleckeisen reads "quæstuis;" but we have preferred to follow Bentley, who adopted the Bembine reading. For such forms as "quæsti" see Adelph. V. iv. 16, "Fructi," note.—Nam mores facile tutor, "For I can easily defend my conduct." Parry, after Perlet, quotes here Adelph. II. i. 7, where Sannio tries to defend his profession, "Leno ego sum—At ita ut usquam fuit fido quisquam optimā." See also below V. iii. 38.

11. Ut non siet peccato mi ignosci æquum, "For I am now at that time of life, that it is not fair I should be pardoned, when a fault has been committed by me." Gronovius explains "peccato" as an ablative absolute, illustrating it by Cicero De Legi Agrariâ Orat. II. c. 2, "Cui errato nulla venia, recte facto exigua laus — proponitur." This explanation is quite satisfactory; and that of Mr. Parry respecting "ignosco," having here a combination of two datives, of the thing, and the person, is not adequately illustrated by the instances given. In ver. 12 "Magis" is pleonastically joined with "cautius." Ruhnken quotes Livy ix. 7, "Tristior ignominiosæ pacis magis quam periculi nuncius fuit."

14. Inscitum offerre injuriam, &c., "Twere unfair of me foolishly to inflict an injury on you which you deserve not." For "inscitum," cf. Mil. Glor. III. i. 141, "Qui deūm consilia culpet, stultus inscitusque sit." For "offerre injuriam" cf. Ad. III. i. 9, note. In ver. 15, Bentley read "Est magnam — gratiam de istac re quod tibi habeam."

16. Nam qui post factam, &c. For this sentiment, compare Adelph. II. i. 8, 9; and for expurget, Andr. V. iii. 29, "Sine me expurgem." — Meum receptas filium, "You harbour with you my son Pamphilus." Cf. Adelph. V. iii. 13, "Cur recipis meum?" See the note there. Cic. pro Milon. c. 19, "Ipse ille omnium latronum occultator et receptator locus." — Vostrum amorem, either "the love between you two," or "his love for you."

19. Mane. Parry notes that the "e" in "mane" is short here; see Adelph. III. iv. 21, and above at IV. i. 42, "Rogă." He also remarks that there is an hiatus after "dixi." — Firmorem, cf. Andr. III. iii. 39, "Tibi generum firmum," &c.; and above I. ii. 26, note.

21. Nam neque ille animo erit ætatem, "For neither will he be of this mind for an age, nor will you be of that time of life" (to enable you to get "alium firmorem"). For "ætatem" cf. Heaut. IV. iii. 38, "Me ætatem censes velle id adsimularier?" — Plaut. Asin. II. ii. 8, "Ætatem servire velim;" and for "istâc ætate," cf. Heaut. I. i. 58, "Istuc ætatis."

22. Quis id ait, namely, the charge in ver. 17. In ver. 25, Segregatum habuisse is i. q. "segregasse, as in IV. ii. 6, "habueris præpositam" is i. q. "præposuisse." As Parry observes, we are not bound to reconcile very closely this statement with that in Hecyr. I. ii. 82, "Ibat ad Bacchiden quotidian;" and there is some degree of verification to her words in I. ii. 85, "Maligna multo et magis procax facta illico est." Fleckeisen, following Bentley, has ventured to omit "me" in ver. 26, and "vis" in ver. 27; for the exigencies of the Trochaic metre.

29. Exple animum iis, "Satisfy their minds." Cf. Andr. I. ii. 17, note, "Animum ut expleret suum." Virg. AEn. ii. 586, "Animumque explesse juvabit." — Teque hoc crimine expedi, cf. III. i. 8, "Qui te expedias his ærumnis.

30. Alia ex hoc quæstu, "Another of my trade:" "hoc is used δεικτικῶς. For the use of the ablative with "ex" instead of the genitive, see Cic. pro Muren. c. 36, quoted by Ruhnken, "Facit eodem ex studio vir eruditus." For "illi ut commodem" in ver. 34, cf. Audr. I. i. 135.

35. Facilem benevolumque. Cf. Adelph. V. ix. 29, "Facilem et festivum putant." In the next verse, Fleckeisen, after Bentley, reads "haec" for "hæ," cf. Heaut. IV. vii. 10, note; Phorm. V. viii. 23. — Ego quoque etiam, "What's more: I too believed it." In ver. 37, "quain" seems a better reading than "quum," as it thus becomes the relative to which "eadem" is antecedent. Construo, "Now, what I have discovered you to be, contrary to my preconceived opinion, that same take you care to be hereafter." For prater opinionem, cf. Heaut. I. i. 7.—Porro, Andr. Prol. 22, "Dehinc ut quiescant porro."—Utere is the future.

39. Aliter si facias. An Aposiopesis, cf. Andr. I. i. 137; Adelph. I. ii. 55, notes.—Sed me reprimam, cf. Heaut. I. ii. 25, "Illene? Sed reprimam me."—Ne ægrè quicquam ex me audias. "Ægrè" here="quod ægre sit tibi," or "quod ægre feras."

40. Amicus qualis sim aut quid possiem, &c., "Make trial what sort of a friend I am, or what is my power as a friend, rather than what sort of foe I am." For "quid possiem" see Plaut. Stich. I. ii. 12, "Cujus potestas plus potest;" and for "periculum facias," Andr. III. iii. 34, note.

ACTUS V.—Sc. II.

PHIDIPPUS returns with a nurse for the baby, and is informed by Laches of the statement Bacchis has made. After some trouble he is induced to believe it, and suggests the mission of Bacchis to Myrrhina and Philumena.

Metre :—after ver. 1, Iambic Tetrameter Catalectic.

2. Tibi defieri patiar, "I'll let you want for nothing" (said to the nurse). For "defieri" see Plaut. Men. 137 (Hildyard), "Neque defiat; neque supersit." Virg. Ecl. ii. 22, "Lac mihi — non frigore defit."—Benigne præbeatur, "Be bountifully supplied." Benignus is used in this sense in Plaut. Curc. IV. ii. 37, "Pecuniam benigna præbuisti." Hor. Od. I. xvii. 15, "Benigno — cornu." So in Plaut. Menæchm. Prol. 16, "Benignitas," "bountifulness," cf. Hildyard's Glossary.

3. Sed quom tu eris satira atqua ebria, "But when you shall have eaten and drunk your fill, take care" &c.—Ebria is not hero used in its bad sense, but as in Plaut. Capt. I. i. 35, "Unde satietate sape ego exii ebrius." Parry quotes a passage from the Casina III. vi. 19, where it means "plentiful." Cf. loc. "Facite cœnam mihi, ut ebria sit."—Noster socr in ver. 4, "Our good friend, the father-in-law," cf. Virg. Æn. ii. 149, "Noster eris." Madame Dacier, "Notre Beau-père."

5. Dejerat persancte, "Protests very solemnly." Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 716, "Abstulisse dejerat." The force of "de" is "thoroughly," "out-and-out," cf. "detergo," "demiror," "dealbo." See also Ter. Eun. II. iii. 40, "Liquet mihi dejerare."—For respicere, in ver. 5, cf. Andr. IV. i. 18, "Nisi quid Di respiciunt." Plaut. Bacch. IV. iii. 24, "Deus respicet nos aliquis."

7. Ancillas dedo, "I am ready to give up my handmaids for examination" (by torture). Cf. Plaut. Most. V. i. 38, 39, "Servos pollicitus est dare Suos mihi omnis questioni"—Quo lubet cruciatu per me exquire, "Examine them, as far as my leave is concerned, by the rack."—Hæc res hic agitur, "the business now on hand is this." For "perficio" in ver. 9, Bentley and Fleckeisen read "effecero."—Non paenitet me fumæ,

"I am not ashamed of the credit I shall have" &c. Cf. Phorm. I. iii. 20; Heaut. I. i. 20, note.

12. Porro hanc nunc experiamur. "Henceforward let us make trial of Bacchis here.—Crimini, in ver. 13,—"a false charge." Corn. Nepos, Epam. c. 7, "Cum criminibus adversariorum omnes in invidiam venissent."—Missam iram faciet, "She will dismiss her wrath." Andr. V. i. 14, note.—Hæc ira abscedet, cf. above, III. v. 55, "Decedet jam ira hæc."

16. Discidio dignum, "deserving a separation," discidium (th. dis-scindo). Cf. IV. iv. 43, "Remissan opus sit vobis reductan domum."—Quod satis sit, "ad purgationem," sc. "to justify herself."—De hac re animus meus ut sit, cf. Adelph. III. iv. 47, note.—Illi modo explete animum, cf. V. i. 28, "Exple animum eis," and below, ver. 21. Cic. pro Domo suâ, c. 17, "Explevi animos invidorum." Construe, "Do but satisfy their minds."

23. A viro ubi segregatast. Cf. above V. i. 26, "Segregatum habuisse, uxorem ut duxit, a me Pamphilum." In ver. 24, hæc is i. q. hæ, as in V. i. 36. Bentley is right in not omitting ver. 25, with some MSS. and editions. Through their anxiety for their children, both old men naturally give the same pledge to Bacchis.—Suspicio exsolves. So in V. i. 29, "Teque hoc crimiue expedi."

27. Pudet Philumena, "I'm ashamed to be seen by Philumena." Cf. Heaut. II. iii. 19, "Cujus nunc pudet me et miseret," &c. Livy iii. 19, "Pudet deorum hominumque." Key explains, that the genitive of person with "pudet," may be either one who has acted, or one who has been dealt with shamefully; so that in either case the sight of him raises the feeling of shame. See note to § 938, Key's Gr. p. 180.

28. Quid est quod — evenire, "What is there that I could wish to happen to me, rather than what I understand is happening to Bacchis here, viz." &c. For gratiam ineat; cf. Heaut. II. iii. 61, "Ne falsam gratiam Studeas inire." Adel. V. vii. 16, "Ego lepidus ineo gratiam." Bentley proposes to read, "ineam" and "prosim" needlessly.—For Si est, ut, &c., cf. note above, IV. iv. 15, "Si est ut aliter tua siet sententia."

30. Segregarit, properly used of the breaking off of a "liaison;" cf. above, V. i. 26, and Andr. I. v. 56; Heaut. II. iv. 6, q. v.—Scit sibi nobilitatem ex eo &c., "She knows that from that act a good name, and fortune and credit accrues to her." For "nobilitatem," Ruhnken quotes, Cic. pro Arch. c. 11, "In eo ipso in quo prædicationem nobilitatemque despiciunt." It is often used in a bad sense, as in Eun. V. vi. 20, "Nobilito" is used; see also "nobilis" in Heaut. II. i. 15, note.

32. Unâ operâ, "By one and the same means." Cf. Plaut. Men. (H. G.) 426, "Ut hoc nunc unâ operâ ad aurifarem deferas." Ibid. 696, 698.—Ei refers to Pamphilus.

ACTUS V.—Sc. III.

PARMENO returns from his bootless errand (cf. Act. III. Sc. IV.), and meets Bacchis coming out of the house of Phidippus. She sends him to fetch Pamphilus, and to tell him that Myrrhina has recognised the ring, which he had given to her (Bacchis), as her daughter's. Bacchis then soliloquises on the train of circumstances, and the fortunate discovery of this ring at the present crisis.

Metre:—1—17. Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.
18—42. Iambic Tetrameter Catalectic.

1. For the servant's complaint in ver. 1, Westerhov. refers to a parallel in Plaut. Amphitr. I. i. 17, 18, q. v.—Frustra ubi totum desedi diem, “Where I have been idling to no purpose all day.” For “desedi” in this sense, compare Plaut. Bacch. II. iii. 2, 3, “Nostrum tam diu Ibi desidere.” Pseudol. IV. iv. 7, Aul. 33, “Quasi claudus sutor domi sedet totos dies.” Compare “deses” and “desidia.”—Illi in ver. 4, is i. q. “illic,” as above.

5. Accedebam, “I kept going up to them.” So Andr. I. i. 57, “Rogitabam, heus puer,” &c.—Dic dum quæso. For “dum” thus used, “paragogice” as it is called, see Ter. Andr. I. i. 2, note; Plaut. Men. H. G. 84, 88.

6. Hospitem ecquem Pamphilum, “Any foreign friend named Pamphilus.” This “hospes” would be the Greek $\xi\acute{e}\nu\sigma$, between whom and the stranger arriving at Athens there would be a league of hospitality. Cf. Phorm. I. ii. 17, “In Ciliciam, Ad hospitem antiquum”—Neque eum quemquam csse arbitror, “In short, I don't believe there's such a man,” Colman. Quemquam, “Anybody at all.”

9. Ab nostro adfine, “From our new connection's house.” This sense of “affinis” seems most like Terence, and is adopted by Colman and Madame Dacier. Parry translates, “from our neighbour's.” For “noster,” used for anything belonging to a slave's master, cf. Andr. V. ii. 5, “O noster Chreme!” note.—Quid huic hic est rei. See Adelph. IV. v. 4, “Quid huic hic negotist?”—Opportunc te offers, “Well met!” Andr. IV. ii. 3, “Optime mihi te offers.” See note.

12. Tuā quod nil refert, percontari desinas, “Doubt not about what does not concern you.” Menander wrote $\delta\mu\eta\pi\rho\sigma\tau\acute{\eta}\kappa\epsilon\iota\mu\eta\tau'$ ἄκοντε, μήθ' ζρα. Plaut. Stich. II. i. 48, “Tuā quod nil refert ne Cures.” For percontari, cf. above, I. ii. 2; Heaut. I. i. 26.

13. Etiam, “Yet more.” Cf. Aulul. H. G. 16; Gr. $\xi\tau\iota$.—In ver. 15, Tantunne est? = “Is that all?” Cf. Eun. V. v. 26, “Tantum est.”

17. Totum hunc contrivi diem, “I have spent all this day.” Cf. (with Westerhov.) Propert. II. i. 46, “Quā potē, quisquo in eā conterat arte diem;” and see Adelph. V. iv. 15, note.—In ver. 19, Quot commodas res is i. q. “Quot commoditatis,” in Andr. III. iii. 37.

20. Harum, “These women in the house,” $\delta\epsilon\iota\kappa\tau\acute{\eta}\kappa\omega\varsigma$.—Quā re suspectus—exsolvi. Here the antecedent is attracted to the relative clause. The full sentence would be, “Exsolvi eā re de quā suspectus fuit.” Cf. IV. iv. 72, “Ut cum illā vivas,” &c.; and for “exsolvo” thus used, see IV. ii. 23.

23. Adeo, "Nay more." Cf. Plaut. Men. Prol. 23, and H. G. 47. Hic anulus ($\delta\epsilon\kappa\tau\kappa\hat{\omega}s$) "the ring on my finger here."—Abhinc menses decem. For "abrine" thus, see Andr. I. i. 42, "Abhinc triennum." For the time mentioned, cf. Adelph. III. iv. 29, "Hic mensis decimus est," and note ibid.—Nocte primā, "In the early part of the night." Compare, Heaut. V. i. 29, "Ultimis in ædibus;" Madvig. sect. 311; Adelph. V. iii. 55.—Fini plenum, cf. Hor. Od. III. xxv. 1, "Quo me Bacche, rapis tui Plenum." For amabo, "prythee," see Heaut. II. iv. 24; Plaut. Men. H. G. 291.

27. Quid exanimatus, obsecro? "Why, pray, are you breathless?" Cf. Andr. I. iv. 7, "Quidnam Pamphilum exanimatum video?" Phorm. III. iii. 31, "Quam scio esse examinatam metu." Hecyr. III. iii. 4, above. — Alias res agere se simulare, "He began to feign that he was not attending," literally "that he was engaged about something else." Cf. Andr. I. ii. 15, note, "Hocine agis an non?" "Are you minding me or not?"

28, 29. Postquam video, Nescio quid suspicarier, "On seeing this, I began to suspect something."—Homo se fatetur, &c. Westerhov. points out that this passage is borrowed from Plaut. Cistell. I. iii. 10, 11, q. v. —Dum luctat: note the old use of the active form instead of the later deponent. Cf. Plaut. Trinumm. IV. i. 20, "Quibus ærumnis deluc-tavi." This usage is common in Plautus and Terence. Cf. Madvig. Gr. sect. 147. — Illi—anulum detraxisse, cf. Heaut. IV. i. 38, "De digito anulum Detraho;" Hor. Od. I. ix. 23, "Pignusque dereptum lacertis Aut digito male pertinaci;" and above, IV. i. 59.

32. Eum hæc cognorit, &c., "That ring Myrrhina here recognised, as I had it just now on my finger." This is according to Bentley's reading, "habente," a sound emendation for "habentem," the old reading. Cf. Heaut. IV. i. 44, "Postquam aspexi illico Cognovi." Parry remarks on the lengthened last syllable of "modo" here, and refers to Andr. IV. i. 6.

35. Propter me, "By my means." Andr. I. v. 36, note; Eun. V. v. 29.—In rem nostram, "To our interest," cf. above, II. ii. 7. For "quæsti gratiâ," cf. Andr. II. ii. 28; Madvig. Gr. sect. 47, obs. 2. Madame Dacier translates, "Mais le gain ne me portera jamais à faire rien de malhonnête."

39. Dum illo licitum est ("uti," sc.). Incommode mihi nuptiis evenit, "It brought bad luck to me when he married." Ill befell me from his marriage. Nuptiis is i. q. "ex nuptiis."—Factum fatcor (id esse, sc.), "I don't deny that it was so."

42. Multa ex quo fuerint commoda, ejus incommoda æquum est ferre, "It's only fair to put up with disagreeables on the part of one, from whom many agreeables have proceeded.

" And since I have received much kindness from him,
 'Tis fit I should endure this one affliction."—Colman.

Ejus is i. q. "ex eo."

ACTUS V.—Sc. IV.

PAMPHILUS cannot well believe the good news conveyed by Parmeno till he has seen Bacchis; but makes great promises to the slave, if his tidings are confirmed. Bacchis does confirm them, and they agree to keep the whole truth from Laches, as also from Phidippus. Parmeno finds that he has been doing more good unwittingly this day, than he has done knowingly all his life long. This observation of his closes the play.

Metre:—1, 7. Trochaic Tetrameter.

2—6, 8, 9, 11, 27—34, 39, 40. Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

10. Iambic Dimeter.

12, 13, 19—26, 35—38. Iambic Tetrameter.

14—18. Iambic Trimeter.

1. Hæc certa et clara attuleris, “Prythee, good Parmeno, look to it again and again, that this news you have brought me be clear and certain.” For “etiam,” used as here, see Andr. I. i. 89; Aulul. H. G. 16. For the junction of “clara” and “certa” Gronov. and Ruhnken quote Plaut. Pers. II. ii. 1, “Satim’ hæc tibi sunt clara et certa?” Livy i. 18, “Signa nobis certa adclarassis;” Senec. de Mort. Claud. i., “Ab hoc ego quæcunque audivi clara et certa affero.”

2. Ne me in breve tempus conjicias, gaudio hoc falso frui, an involved construction. Frui is i. q. “ad fruendum,” and the whole clause is nearly i. q. (in Heaut. II. iii. 51), “Ne me in lætitiam frustra conjicias.” Construe, “Lest you should thrust me into a brief space only, for enjoying this delight, if it be false.” For frui used instead of a gerund after “ad,” cf. III. ii. 10, above, “Introit videre.”—Visum est is the answer to “vide” in ver. 1, “It has been looked to.”—Deus sum. Cf. Heaut. IV. iii. 15, “Deorum vitam apti sumus;” Andr. V. v. 4, “Nam mi immortalitas” &c. and Plaut. Curcul. I. iii. 11, “Sum Deus;” Propert. II. xii. 40, “Nocte una quivis vel Deus esse potest.”

4. Manendum, sodes, “Prythee now stop.” For the paragogic “dum,” cf. Andr. I. i. 2.—For maneo, as here, Heaut. II. iii. 32.—Factum, “It is so,” in ver. 6, is a not uncommon affirmation, cf. II. i. 23; Eun. IV. iv. 40, “Factum. Et eam est indutus? Factum.”

8. Venustatisque adeo plenior, “And, what’s more, fuller of luck in love.” For this sense of “venustas” (th. Venus), cf. Andr. I. v. 10, note; Plaut. Poen. I. ii. 44, “Diem pulchrum et celebrem et venustatis plenum.”—Nihil enim, in ver. 10, = “Why nothing,” understand “me dones.”

12. Qui ab Orco—reducem in lucem feceris, “What! shall I suffer you, who have restored me, dead as I was, from the shades to light again,” &c., a figurative mode of expressing “rescue from the depths of trouble.” For parallels, Ruhnken quotes Ovid. Trist. V. ix. 19, “Seminecem Stygiæ revocasti solus ab undâ;” Plant. Pseud. III. ii. 6, “Quin ob eam rem Orcus recipere hunc ad se noluit.” For abire sine munere, “to go unrewarded,” cf. Virg. Æn. v. 305, “Nemo ex hoc numero mihi non donatus abibit.”

17. Benefactum, et volup est. For the indeclin. adv. "volup" or "volupe," see Phorm. IV. iii. 5, below, the only other place where it occurs in Terence, and Plaut. Men. H. G. 579. Hildyard explains it as i. q. "voluptas." Parry as a neuter from an old adj. "volupis." Both amount to the same thing, the neut. adj. used as a substantive.—Factis ut credam facis, "By your acts you make me believe (the sincerity of your delight," sc.).

18. Antiquamque—renustatem obtines, "And you keep up your old charm of manner." For "obtines" see Andr. IV. v. 22, "Antiquum obtines," and note; Ter. Ad. V. iii. 26.—"Venustas" is used in its usual sense.—Ut voluptati obitus, &c., "So that a chance meeting with you, a conversation with you, or your expected coming is ever a pleasure, whithersoever you go." Obitus (th. "obeo," i. q. "occurro" cf. Lucretius. i. 123.), differs from adventus, in that the latter is a "settled coming;" "obitus," a chance-meeting. In ver. 21, Unus quisquam must be joined in sense, and "quisquam," as Parry notes, is used because the sentence is negative; "unus quisque," would indicate an affirmative. Construe, "There is nowhere in the world a single man of all the sex living, who is more cautious than you." For "quisquam," see Key's Gr. 1142.

22. Rectè amásti, "You were right in loving your wife." Cf. Andr. IV. iv. 27, "Rectè ego semper fugi has nuptias."—Quod nossem, "Quo je sache," Madame Dacier. Cf. Adelph. IV. v. 7. "Non equidem istas, quod sciām."—Perliberalis, "Very well bred;" cf. Andr. I. i. 11, note "Liberaliter." Eun. III. ii. 20, "Quam liberali facie;" Phorm. V. iii. 32.

25. Neque opus est Adeo muttito, "And it must not be so much as whispered." Cf. Andr. III. ii. 25, note, "Nil jam muttire audeo;" Plaut. Men. H. G. 613. Some editions place a colon at "opus est," and make "muttito" the imperative mood. Donatus took the sentence in the other light.—Placet non fieri—comœdiis, "I'm resolved that this shall not be done in the same way as in comedies where," &c. The fun here consists in the actor being supposed to forget he is acting, and to quiz his art. Parry illustrates the passage by Plaut. Pseud. IV. vi. 19, &c., "Nugas theatri, verba quæ in comœdiis Solent lenoni dici;" and Rudens IV. vii. 23—27, "spectavi ego pridem comicos, &c. See also Amphitryo III. iv. 3. For "resciscunt," see above, III. i. 7, "Priusquam id rescitum est;" Heaut. I. i. 47.

29. Dabo h.c. "Dicam." Cf. Virg. Ecl. i. 19, "Da, Tityre, nobis."—Jurijurando meo Se fidem habuisse, &c., "That she has given credence to my oath, and that therefore she holds you cleared;" or "acquitted." Cf. II. ii. 12, "Aut ea refellendo aut purgando vobis corrigineus;" Plaut. Aulul. H. 710, "Qui quando malo fecerunt, purgant;" Cæsar. B. G. i. 28.

35. Egone hunc ab Orco mortuum? Parmeno tries to worm out the secret by quoting the words of Pamphilus at ver. 12 of this scene.—Imprudens in ver. 37 = "Without knowing what I was about." He is still pretending to a knowledge of the secret, in order to beguile Pamphilus into letting it out.

38. An temere quicquam Parmeno prætercat. Bentley rightly ascribes this sentence to Bacchis. "Can Parmeno carelessly pass over aught that's needful to be done." Some editors read "Parmenonem," to which class Parry adheres. Either will do. The two concluding lines seem to have been borrowed from Plaut. Capt. Prol. 43—45. For the concluding "Plaudite," see Andr. V. vi. 15; Heaut. V. v. 21, notes.

Postquam poeta uetus poetam non potest

Nullum inuenire prologum posset nouos,
Quem diceret, nisi haberet cui male diceret:’
Is sibi responsum hoc habeat, in medio omnibus
Palmam esse positam, qui artem tractant musicam.
Ille ad famem hunc ab studio studuit reicere:
Hic respondere uoluit, non lacesere.
Benedictis si certasset, audisset bene:
Quod ab illo adlatumst, id sibi relatum putet.
De illo jam finem faciam dicundi mihi,
Peccandi quoniam ipse de se finem non facit?
Nunc quid uelim animum attendite. adporto nouam

Date operam, adeste æquo animo per silentium,
Ne simili utamur fortuna, atque usi sumus
Quom per tumultum noster grex motus locost:
Quem actoris uirtus nobis restituit locum
Bonitasque nostra adjutans atque æquanimitas.

Amore abundas, Antipho.

Nam tua quidem hercle certo uita hæc expetenda optandaquest.

Ita me di bene ament, ut mihi liceat tam diu quod amo frui,

Jam depecisci morte cupio ; tu conjicito cetera,

Quid ego ex hac inopia nunc capiam, et quid tu ex istac copia,

Ut ne addam, quod sine sumptu ingenuam, liberalem nactus es,

Quod habes, ita ut uoluisti, uxorem sine mala fama palam :

Beatus, ni unum desit, animus qui modeste istæc ferat.

Quod si tibi res sit cum eo lenone quocum mihist, tum sentias.

Ita plerique omnes sumus ingenio, nostri nosmet pœnitet.

ACT. I.—SCEN. 4.

GETA. ANTIPO. PHÆDRIA.

Ge. Nullu's, Geta, ni jam aliquod tibi consilium celere rep-peris :

Ita nunc inparatum subito tanta te inpendent mala :

Quæ neque uti deuitem scio neque quomodo me inde extraham :
Nam non potest celari nostra diutius jam audacia.

An. Quidnam ille commotus uenit ?

Ge. Tum temporis mihi punctum ad hanc rem est : herus adest. An. Quid istuc malist ?

GE. Quod quom audierit, quod ejus remedium inueniam iracundiae ?

Loquar? incendam: taceam? instigem: purgem me? laterem lauem.

Heu me miserum: quom mihi paueo, tum Antipho me exeruiat animi:

Ejus me miseret, ei nunc timeo, is nunc me retinet: nam absque eo esset,

10

Recte ego mihi uidissem et senis essem ultus iracundiam:

Aliiquid conuasassem atque hinc me conjicerem protinam in pedes.

AN. Quam hic fugam aut furtum parat?

GE. Sed ubi Antiphonem reperiam? aut qua quærere insistam uia?

PH. Te nominat. AN. Nescio quod magnum hoc nuntio expecto malum.

PH. Reuocemus hominem. AN. Sta ilico. GE. Hem, Satis pro inperio, quisquis es. AN. Geta. GE. Ipsest quem uolui obuiam.

Quod si eo meae fortunae redeunt, Phanium, abs te ut distrahar, Nullast mihi uita expetenda. GE. Ergo istaee quom ita sint, Antipho,

Tanto magis te aduigilare æquomst : fortis fortuna adjuuat.] 25

AN. Non sum apud me. GE. Atqui opus est nunc quoin maxume ut sis, Antipho :

Nam si senscrit te timidum pater esse, arbitrabitur

Commeruisse culpam. PH. Hoc uerumst. AN. Non possum inmutarier.

GE. Quid faceres, si aliud quid grauius tibi nunc faciendum foret ?

AN. Quom hoc non possum, illud minus possem. GE. Hoe

Quid hic conterimus operam frustra ? quin abeo ? PH. Et Mane, mane inquam. AN. Ego me noui et peccatum meum :

Vobis commendo Phanium et uitam meam.

40

PH. Geta, quid nunc fiet ? GE. Tu jam litis audies :

Ego plectar pendens, nisi quid me fefellerit.

Sed quod modo hic nos Antiphonem monuimus,

Id nosmet ipsos facere oportet, Phædria.

PH. Aufer mi 'oportet' : quin tu quid faciam impera.

Meliore et callidiore. PH. Fiet sedulo.

GE. Nunc prior adito tu, ego in subsidiis hic ero Subcenturiatus, siquid deficias. PH. Age.

ACTVS II.—SCEN. 1.

DEMIPHO. GETA. PILÆDRIA.

DE. Itane tandem uxorem duxit Antipho injussu meo ?
Nec meum imperium, ac mitto imperium, non simultatem
meam

Reuereri saltem ! non pudere ! o facinus audax, o Geta Monitor ! GE. Vix tandem. DE. Quid mihi dicent aut quam causam reperient ?

Demiror. GE. Atqui repperi jam : aliud cura. DE. An hoc dicet mihi :

‘ Inuitus feci. lex coegit ? audio, fateor. GE. Places.

DE. Verum scientem, tacitum, causam tradere aduorsariis, Etiamne id lex coegit ? PH. Illud durum. GE. Ego expe-diam : sine.

DE. Incertumst quid agam, quia præter spem atque incredibile hoc mi obtigit :
Ita sum irritatus, animum ut nequeam ad cogitandum instituere.

Quamobrem omnis, quom secundæ res sunt maxume, tum maxume

Meditari secum oportet, quo pacto aduorsam ærumnam ferant.
Pericla, damna peregre rediens semper secum cogitet
Aut fili peccatum aut uxoris mortem aut morbum filiæ, Communia esse hæc, nequid horum umquam accidat animo
nouom :

Quidquid præter spem cueniat, omne id deputare esse in lucro.

GE. O Phædria, incredibilest quantum herum ante eo sapientia.

Meditata mihi sunt omnia mea incommoda, herus si redierit : III
 Molendumst in pistrino, uapulandum, habendæ compedes, Opus ruri faciendum : horum nil quicquam accidet animo
 nouom. 20

Quidquid præter spem eueniet, omne id deputabo esse in lucro.
 Sed quid cessas hominem adire, et blande in principio adloqui ?

DE. Phædriam mei fratris uideo filium mi ire obuiam.

PH. Mi patrue, salue. DE. Salue : sed ubist Antiphō ?

PH. Saluom uenire. DE. Credo : hoc responde mihi. 25

PII. Valet, hic est : sed satin omnia ex sententia ?

DE. Vellem quidem. PH. Quid istuc est ? DE. Rogitas, Phædria ?

Bonas me absente hic confecisti nuptias.

PII. Echo, an id succenses nunc illi ? GE. O artificem probum !

DE. Ego illi non succenseam ? ipsum gestio
 Dari mi in conspectum, nunc sua culpa ut sciat
 Lenem patrem illum factum me esse acerrimum.

PII. Atqui nil fecit, patrue, quod succenseas.

DE. Ecce autem similia omnia : omnes congruont :

Unus cognoris, omnis noris.] PH. Haud itast. 35

DE. Hic in noxiast, ille ad dicendam causam adest :
 Quom illest, hic præstost : tradunt operas mutuas.

GE. Probe horum facta inprudens depinxit senex. Cf. Aeneas Menach. 11.

DE. Nam ni hæc ita essent, cum illo haud stares, Phædria.

PII. Si est, patrue, culpam ut Antiphō in se admiserit,
 Ex qua re minus rei foret aut famæ temperans,
 Non causam dico quin quod meritus sit ferat.
 Sed si quis forte malitia fretus sua
 Insidias nostræ fecit adolescentiæ

Ac uicit, nostran ea culpast an judicium,
 Qui sæpe propter inuidiam adimunt diuiti
 Aut propter misericordiam addunt pauperi ?

46

GE. Ni nossem causam, crederem uera hunc loqui.

DE. An quisquam judex est, qui possit noscere
 Tua justa, ubi tute uerbum non respondeas, 60
 Ita ut ille fecit ? PH. Functus adulescentulist
 Officium liberalis : postquam ad judices
 Ventumst, non potuit cogitata proloqui :
 Ita eum tum timidum illuc obstupefecit pudor.

60

GE. Laudo hunc : sed cesso adire quam primum senem ? 55
 Here, salue : saluom te aduenisse gaudeo. DE. Oh,
 Bone custos, salue, columen uero familiæ,
 Quoi commendaui filium hinc abiens meum.

55

GE. Jamdudum te omnis nos accusare audio
 Inmerito, et me horunc omnium inmeritissimo : 60
 Nam quid me in hac re facere uoluisti tibi ?
Seruom hominem causam orare leges non sinunt,
 Neque testimoni dictio est. DE. Mitto omnia.
 Do istuc ‘inprudens timuit aduleseens’ : sino
 ‘Tu seruo’s’ : uerum si cognatast maxume, 65
 Non fuit necesse habere : sed id quod lex jubet,
 Dotem daretis ; quæreret alium uirum.
 Qua ratione inopem potius ducebat domum ?

65

GE. Non ratio, uerum argentum deerat. DE. Sumeret
 Alicunde. GE. Alicunde ? nil est dictu facilius. 70

70

DE. Postremo si nullo alio pacto, fænore.

GE. Hui, dixti pulchre : siquidem quisquam crederet
 Te uiuo. DE. Non, non sic futurumst : non potest.
 Egon illam cum illo ut patiar nuptam unum diem ?
 Nil suaue meritumst. hominem commonstrarier 75
 Mi istum uolo aut ubi habitat demonstrarier.

75

GE. Nempe Phormionem ? DE. Istum patronum mulieris.
 GE. Jam faxo hic aderit. DE. Antipho ubi nunc est ? GE.
 Foris.

DE. Abi, Phaedria, eum require atque adduce huc. PH. Eo :
 Recta uia quidem illuc. GE. Nempe ad Pamphilam. ⁸⁰

DE. At ego deos penatis hinc salutatum domum
 Deuortar : inde ibo ad forum, atque aliquot mihi
 Amicos aduocabo, ad hanc rem qui adsent,
 Ut ne inparatus sim, si adueniat Phormio.

ACT. II.—SCEN. 2.

PHORMIO. GETA.

PH. Itane patris aies conspectum ueritum hinc abiisse ? GE.
 Admodum.

PH. Phanium relictam solam ? GE. Sic. PH. Et iratum senem ?

GE. Oppido. PH. Ad te summa solum, Phormio, rerum reddit :

Tute hoc intristi : tibi omnibus exedendum : adcingere.

GE. Obscero te. PH. Si rogabit . . . GE. In te spes est. PH.
 Eccere, ⁵

Quid si reddet ? GE. Tu impulisti. PH. Sic opinor. GE.
 Subueni.

PH. Cedo senem : jam instructa sunt mihi in corde consilia omnia.

GE. Quid ages ? PH. Quid uis, nisi uti maneat Phanium atque ex crimine hoc

Antiphonem eripiam atque in me omnem iram deriuem sensis ?

GE. O uir fortis atque amicus. uerum hoc saepe, Phormio, ¹⁰

Vereor, ne ista^c fortitudo in neruom erumpat denique. PH.

Ah,

Non itast : factumst periculum, jam pedum uisast uia.

Quot me censes homines jam deuerberasse usque ad necem,

Hospites, tum ciuis ? quo magis noui, tanto s̄epins.

Cedodus, en umquam injuriarum audisti mihi scriptam dicam ?

15

GE. Qui istuc ? PH. Quia non rete accipitri tenditur neque miluo,

Qui male faciunt nobis : illis qui nil faciunt tenditur,

Quia enim in illis fructus est, in illis opera luditur.

Aliis aliundest periculum, unde aliquid abradi potest :

Mihi sciunt nil esse. dices ‘ ducent damnatum domum ’ :

20

Alere nolunt hominem edacem, et sapiunt mea sententia,

Pro maleficio si beneficium summum nolunt reddere.

GE. Non pote satis pro merito ab illo tibi referri gratia.

PH. Immo enim nemo satis pro merito gratiam regi refert.

Tene asymbolum uenire unctum atque lautum e balueis,

25

Otiosum ab animo, quom ille et cura et sumptu absunitur !

Dum tibi fit quod placeat, ille ringitur : tu rideas,

Prior bibas, prior decumbas : cena dubia adponitur.

GE. Quid istuc uerbist ? PH. Ubi tu dubites quid sumas potissimum.

Hæc quom rationem ineas quam sint suauia et quam cara
sint,

30

Ea qui præbet, non tu hunc habeas plane præsentem deum ?

GE. Senex adest : uide quid agas : prima coitiost acerruma :

Si eam sustinueris, postilla jam, ut lubet, ludas licet.

ACT. II.—SCEN. 3.

DEMIPHO (CVM ADVOCATIS). GETA. PHORMIO.

DE. En umquam quoiquam contumeliosius
 Audistis factam injuriam quam haec est mihi ?
 Adeste queso. GE. Iratus est. PH. Quin tu hoc ages ?
 Jam ego hunc agitabo. pro deum inmortarium,
 Negat Phaniūm esse hanc sibi cognatam Demipho ?
 Hanc Demipho negat esse cognatam ? GE. Negat.

DE. Ipsum esse opinor de quo agebam. sequimini.
 PH. Neque ejus patrem se scire qui fuerit ? GE. Negat.
 PH. Nec Stilpouem ipsum scire qui fuerit ? GE. Negat.
 PH. Quia egens relictast misera, ignoratur parens,
 Negligitur ipsa : uide auaritia quid facit.

GE. Si herum insimulabis malitiæ, male audies.
 DE. O audaciam, etiam me ultiro accusatum aduenit.
 PH. Nam jam adulescenti nil est quod succenseam,
 Si illum minus norat : quippe homo jam grandior,
 Pauper, quo opera uita erat, ruri fere
 Se continebat : ibi agrum de nostro patre
 Colendum habebat : saepe interea mihi senex
 Narrabat se hunc neglegere cognatum suom :
 At quem uirum ! quem ego uiderim in uita optumum.

GE. Videas, te atque illum ut narras. PH. I in malam crucem.

Nam ni ita cum existumassem, numquam tam grauis
 Ob hanc inimicitias caperem in uostram familiam,
 Quam is aspernatur nunc tam inliberaliter.

GE. Pergin hero absenti male loqui, impurissime ?
 PH. Dignum autem hoc illost. GE. Ain tandem carcer ?
 DE. Geta.

GE. Bonorum extortor, legum contortor. DE. Geta.

PII. Responde. GE. Quis homost? chem. DE. Tace. GE.
Absenti tibi

Te indignas seque diguas contumelias

Nunquam cessauit dicere. DE. Ohe desine.

Adulescens, primum abs te hoc bona uenia peto,

Si tibi placere potis est, mi ut respondeas :

Quem aunicum tuom ais fuisse istum, explana mihi,

Et qui cognatum me sibi esse diceret.

PH. Proinde ~~expiscare~~ quasi non nosses. DE. Nossem?
PH. Ita.

DE. Ego me nego : tu qui ais redige in memoriam.

PH. Echo tu, sobrinum tuom non noras? DE. Enicas.

Dic nomen. PH. Nomen? maxume. DE. Quid nunc taces?

PH. Perii hercle, nomen perdidi. DE. Hem, quid ais? PII.
Geta,

Si meministi id quod olim dictumst, subjice. hem,

Non dico : quasi non noris, temptatum aduenis.

DE. Egone autem templo? GE. Stilpo. PH. Atque adeo quid mea?

Stilpost. DE. Quem dixti? PH. Stilponem inquam noueras.

DE. Neque ego illum noram neque mi cognatus fuit

Quisquam istoc nomine. PH. Itane? non te horum pudet?

At si talentum rem reliquisset decem—

DE. Di tibi male faciant. PH. Primus esses memoriter
Progeniem uostram usque ab auo atque atua proferens.

DE. Ita ut dicis. ego tum quom aduenissem, qui mihi

Cognata ea esset, dicerem: itidem tu face:

Cedo qui est cognata? GE. Eu noster, recte: heus tu, caue.

PH. Dilucide expediui quibus me oportuit

Judicibus: tum id si falsum fuerat, filius

Quor non refellit? DE. Filium narras mihi,

Quoius de stultitia diei ut dignumst non potest ? 55

Ph. At tu qui sapiens es, magistratus adi,
Judicium de ea causa alterum ut reddant tibi :
Quandoquidem solus regnas, et soli licet
Hic de eadem causa bis judicium adipiscier.

De. Etsi mihi facta injuriast, uerumtamen 60
Potius quam litis secter aut quam te audiam,
Itidem ut cognata si sit, id quod lex jubet
Dotem dare, abduce hanc, minas quinque accipe.

Ph. Ha ha hae, homo suavis. De. Quid est ? num iniquum postulo ?

An ne hoc quidem ego adipiscar, quod jus publicumst ? 65

Ph. Itan tandem quæso, item, ut meretricem, ubi abusus sis, Mercedem dare lex jubet ei atque amittere ?
An, ut nequid turpe ciuis in se admitteret
Propter egestatem, proxumo jussast dari,
Ut cum uno ætatem degeret ? quod tu uetas. 70

De. Ita, proxumo quidem : at nos unde ? aut quamobrem —

Ph. Ohe,

Actum' aiunt 'ne agas.' De. Non agam ? immo haud desinam, Douec perfecero hoc. Ph. Ineptis. De. Sine modo.

Ph. Postremo tecum nil rei nobis, Demipho, est :
Tuos est damnatus gnatus, non tu : nam tua 75
Præterierat jam ad ducendum ætas. De. Omnia hæc
Illum putato, quæ ego nunc dico, dicere :
Aut quidem cum uxore hac ipsum prohibeo domo.

Ge. Iratus est. Ph. Tute idem melius feceris.

Da. Itane es paratus facere me aduorsum omnia, 80
Infelix ! Ph. Metuit hic nos, tametsi sedulo Dissimulat. Ge. Bene habent tibi principia. Ph. Quin quod est

Ferundum fers ? tuis dignum factis feceris,
Ut amici inter nos simus. De. Egon tuam expetam Aunicitiam ? aut te uisum aut auditum uelim ? *

Ph. Si concordabis cum illa, habebis quae tuam
Senectutem oblectet : respice ætatem tuam.

De. Te oblectet : tibi habe. Ph. Minue uero iram. De.
Hoc age.

Satis jam uerborumst : nisi tu properas mulierem
Abducere, ego illam ejiciam : dixi, Phormio. *

Ph. Si tu illam attigeris secus quam dignumst liberam,
Dicam tibi impingam grandem : dixi, Demipho.
Siquid opus fuerit, heus, doino me. Ge. Intellego.

ACT. II.—SCEN. 4.

DEMIPHO. GETA. HEGIO. CRATINVS. CRITO.

De. Quanta me cura et sollicitudine adficit
Gnatus, qui me et se hisce impediuit nuptiis !
Neque mi in conspectum prodit, ut saltem sciam,
Quid de hac re dicat quidue sit sententiae.
Abi, uise redieritne jam an nondum dominum.

Ge. Eo. De. Videtis quo in loco res haec siet :
Quid ago ? dic, Hegio. He. Ego ? Cratinum censeo,
Si tibi uidetur. De. Dic, Cratine. Cra. Mene uis ?

De. Te. Cra. Ego quæ in rem tuam sint, ea uelim facias :
mihi

Sic hoc uidetur : quod te absente hic filius
Egit, restitui in integrum æquomst et bonum :
Et id inpetrabis. dixi. De. Dic nunc, Hegio.

He. Ego sedulo hunc dixisse credo : uerum itast,

Quot homines, tot sententiæ : suos quoique mos.

Mihi non uidetur quod sit factum legibus

15

Rescindi posse : et turpe inceptus. DE. Dic, Crito.

CRI. Ego amplius deliberandum censeo :

Res magnast. HE. Numquid nos uis ? DE. Fecistis probe :

Incertior sum multo quam dudum. GE. Negant

Redissem. DE. Frater est expectandus mihi :

24

Is quod mihi dederit de hac re consilium, id sequar.

Percontatum ibo ad portum, quoad se recipiat.

GE. At ego Antiphonem quærerem, ut quæ acta hic sint sciat.

Sed eccum ipsum uideo in tempore huc se recipere.

ACTVS III.—SCEN. 1.

ANTIPHO. GETA.

AN. Enimuero, Antipho, multi modis cum istoc animo es uituperandus :

Itane te hinc abisse, et uitam tuam tutandam aliis dedisse !

Alios tuam rem credidisti magis quam tete animum aduorsuros ?

Nam ut ut erant alia, illi certe quæ nunc tibi domist consuleres, Nequid propter tuam fidem decepta poteretur mali :

Quoius nunc miserae spes opesque sunt in te uno omnes sitæ.

GE. Et quidem, here, nos jamdudum hic te absentem incusamus, qui abieris.

AN. Te ipsum quærebam. GE. Sed ea causa nihilo magis defecimus.

AN. Loquere, obseero, quonam in loco sunt res et fortunæ meæ :

Numquid subolet patri? GE. Nil etiam. AN. Ecquid spei porrost? GE. Nescio. AN. Ah.

GE. Nisi Phædria haud cessauit pro te eniti. AN. Nil fecit noui.

GE. Tum Phormio itidem in hac re, ut in aliis, strenuum hominem præbuit.

AN. Quid is fecit? GE. Confutauit uerbis admodum iratum senem.

AN. Eu, Phormio. GE. Ego quod potui porro. AN. Mi Geta, omnis uos amo.

GE. Sic habent principia sese ut dico : adhuc tranquilla res est,
15

Mansurusque patruom pater est, dum huc adueniat. AN. Quid eum ? GE. Ut aibat

De ejus consilio sese uelle facere quod ad hanc rem attinet.

AN. Quantus metust mihi, venire huc saluom nunc patruom,
Geta !

Nam ejus per unam, ut audio, aut uiuam aut moriar sententiam.

GE. Phædria tibi adest. AN. Ubinam ? GE. Eccum ab
sua palæstra exit foras.

audio.

PH. Nequeo te exorare ut mancas triduom hoc ? quo nunc abis ?

Do. Mirabar si tu mihi quiequam adferres noui. AN. Hei,³

Ut phaleratis dictis ducas me et meam ductes gratiis ! 15

An. Miseritumst. Ph. Hei, ueris uincor. Ge. Quam uterquest similis sui.

Ph. Neque, Antipho alia quom occupatus esset sollicitudine, Tum hoc esse mi objectum malum ! An. Ah, quid istuc autemst, Phaedria ?

Ph. O fortunatissime Antipho. An. Egone ? Ph. Quoi
quod amas domist :

Nec cum hujusmodi umquam usus uenit ut conflictares malo. 20

An. Mihin domist ? immo, id quod aiunt, auribus tenco

Nam hic me hujusmodi scibat esse : ego hunc esse aliter creddi ;

Iste me fefellit ; ego isti nihilo sum aliter ac fui. 45

Sed, ut ut hæc sunt, tamen hoc faciam : cras mane argentum
mihi

Miles dare se dixit : si mihi prior tu attuleris, Phædria,
Mea lege utar, ut sit potior, qui prior ad dandumst, vale.

ACT. III.—SCEN. 3.

PHÆDRIA. GETA. ANTIPO.

Ph. Quid faciam ? unde ego nunc tam subito huic argentum inueniam miser,

Quo minus nihilo est ? [Quod si hic pote fuisset exorarier Triduom hoc, promissum fuerat ?] An. Itane hunc patiemur,
Geta,

Fieri miserum, qui me dudum, ut dixti, adjuerit comiter ?

Quin, quom opus est, beneficium rursum ei experimur reddere ?⁵

Ge. Scio equidem hoc esse æquom. An. Age ergo, solus seruare hunc potes.

An. Pater adest hic. Ge. Scio : sed quid tum ? An, Ah, dictum sapienti sat est.]

Ge. Itane ? An. Ita. Ge. Sane hercle pulchre suades :
etiam tu hinc abis ?

Non triumpho, ex nuptiis tuis si nil nanciscor mali,¹⁰

Ni etiam nunc me hujus causa quærere in malo jubeas crucem ?

An. Verum hic dicit. Ph. Quid ? ego uobis, Geta, alienus sum ? Ge. Haud puto :

Sed parumne est, quod omnibus nunc nobis succenset senex, -

Solus est homo amico amicus. GE. Eamus ergo ad eum ocios.

AN. Numquid est quod opera mea uobis opus sit ? GE. Nil :
uerum abi domum, 30

Et illam miseram, quam ego nunc intus scio esse exanimatam metu,

Consolare. cessas ? AN. Nil est æque quod faciam lubens.

PH. Qua uia istuc facies ? GE. Dicam in itinere : hinc modo te amoue.

DEMIPHO. CHREMES.

DE. Quid? qua profectus causa hinc es Lemnum, Chreme, Adduxtin tecum filiam? CH. Non. DE. Quid ita non?

CH. Postquam uidet me ejus mater esse hic diutius,
Simul autem non manebat ætas uirginis
Meam neglegentiam: ipsam cum omni familia
Ad me profectam esse aibant. DE. Quid illic tamdiu,
Quæso, igitur commorabare, ubi id audiueras?

CH. Pol me detinuit morbus. DE. Unde? aut qui?
CH. Rogas?

Senectus ipsast morbus. sed uenisse eas
Saluas audiui ex nauta qui illas uexerat.

10

DE. Quid gnato obtigerit me absente, audistin, Chreme?

CH. Quod quidem me factum consili incertum facit.
Nam hanc condicionem siquo*tulero extrario*,
Quo pacto aut unde mihi sit dicundum ordinest.
Te mihi fidelem esse æque atque egomet sum mihi
Scibam: ille si me alienus adfinem uolet,
Tacebit, dum intercedet familiaritas:
Sin spreuerit me, plus quam opus est scito sciet,
Vereorque ne uxor aliqua hoc resciscat mea:
Quod si fit, ut me excutiām atque egrediar domo,
Id restat: nam ego meorum solus sum meus.

15

DE. Scio ita esse: et istæc mihi res sollicitudinist:
Neque defetiscar usque adeo experirier,
Donec tibi quod pollicitus sum id effecero.

ACT. IV.—SCEN. 2.

(GETA. (DEMIPHO. CHREMES.)

Ego hominem callidiorem uidi neminem
 Quam Phormionem. uenio ad hominem, ut dicerem
 Argentum opus esse, et id quo pacto fieret.
 Vix dum dimidium dixeram, intellexerat :
 Gaudebat : me laudabat : quærebat senem.
 Dis gratias agebat, tempus sibi dari,
 Ubi Phædriæ esse ostenderet nilo minus
 Amicum sese quam Antiphoni hominem ad forum
 Jussi opperiri : eo me esse adducturum senem.
 Sed eccum ipsum. quis est ulterior? attat Phædriæ
 Pater uenit. sed quid pertimui autem, bellua?
 An quia quos fallam pro uno duo sunt mihi dati?
 Commodius esse opinor duplici spe utier.
 Petam hinc unde a primo institui : is si dat, sat est :
 Si ab eo nil fiet, tum hunc adoriar hospitem.

ACT. IV.—SCEN. 3.

ANTIPH. GETA. CHREM. DEMIPH.

AN. Expecto quam mox recipiat sese Geta.
 Sed patruom uideo cum patre astantem. hei mihi,
 Quam timeo, aduentus hujus quo inpellat patrem.

GE. Adibo : o salute, noster Chreme. CH. Salue, Geta.

GE. Venire saluom uolup est. CH. Credo. GE. Quid agitur?

CH. Multa aduenienti, ut fit, noua hic compluria.

GE. Ita de Antiphone audistin quæ facta ? CH. Omnia.

GE. Tun dixeras huic ? facinus indignum, Chreme,
Sic circumiri ! DE. Id cum hoc agebam commodum.

GE. Nam hercle ego quoque id quidem agitans mecum sedulo

Inueni, opinor, remedium huic rei. CH. Quid, Geta ?

DE. Quod remedium ? GE. Ut abii abs te, fit forte obuiam Mihi Phormio. CH. Qui Phormio ? GE. Is qui istam. CH. Scio.

GE. Visumst mi, ut ejus temptarem sententiam.

Prendo hominem solum : 'quor non' inquam 'Phormio,
Vides, inter nos sic hæc potius cum bona

Ut componamus gratia quam cum mala ?

Herus liberalis est et fugitans litium :

Nam ceteri quidem hercle amici omnes modo

Uno ore auctores fuere, ut præcipitem hanc daret.'

AN. Quid hic cœptat aut quo euadet hodie ? GE. 'an legibus
Daturum poenas dices, si illam ejecerit ?

Jam id exploratumst : heja, sudabis satis,
Si cum illo inceptas homine : ea eloquentiast.

Verum pono esse nictum eum : at tandem tamen

Non capit is ei res agitur, sed pecuniæ.'

Postquam hominem his uerbis sentio mollirier,
'Soli sumus nunc hic' inquam : 'eho, dic quid uis dari
Tibi in manum, ut herus his desistat litibus,
Hæc hinc facessat, tu molestus ne sies ?'

AN. [Satin illi di sunt propitii ?] GE. 'nam sat scio,
Si tu aliquam partem æqui bonique dixeris,
Ut est ille bonus uir, tria non commutabitis
Verba hodie inter uos.' DE. Quis te istæc jussit loqui ?

CH. Immo non potuit melius peruenirier
Eo quo nos uolumus. AN. Occidi. DE. Perge eloqui.

GE. A primo homo insanibat. CH. Cedo quid postulat ?

GE. Quid ? nimum quantum libuit. CH. Dic. GE. Siquis daret

Talentum magnum. DE. Immo malum hercle : ut nil pudet !

GE. Quod dixi ei adeo : ' quæso, quid si filiam
Suam unicam locaret ? parui retulit

Non suscepisse inuentast quæ dotem petat.'

Ad pauca ut redeam, ac mittam illius ineptias,

Hæc denique ejus fuit postrema oratio :

'Ego' inquit 'a principio amici filiam,
Ita ut æquom fuerat, uolui uxorem ducere.

Nam mihi uenibat in mentem ejus incommodum,

In seruitutem pauperem ad ditem dari.

Sed mi opus erat, ut aperte tibi nunc fabuler,

Aliquantulum quæ adferret, qui dissoluerem

Quæ debo: et etiam nunc, si uolt Demipho sug. deb.

Dare quantum ab hac accipio, quæ sponsast mihi,

Nullam mihi malim quam istanc uxorem dari.'

AN. Utrum stultitia facere ego hunc an malitia

Dicam, scientem an imprudentem, incertus sum.

DE. Quid si animam debet ? GE. 'Ager oppositust pignori
Decem ob minas' inquit. DE. Age age, jam ducat : dabo.

GE. 'Ædiculæ item sunt ob decem alias.' DE. Oi ! hui !

Vimiumst. CH. Ne clama : repetito hasce a me decem.

GE. 'Uxori emunda ancillulast : tum pluscula

Supellectile opus est : opus est sumptu ad nuptias :

His rebus' inquit 'pone saue decem minas.'

DE. Sexcentas proinde scribito jam mihi dicas :

Nil do : iupuratus me ille ut etiam iurideat ?

CH. Quæso, ego dabo, quiesce : tu modo filius

Fac ut illam ducat, nos quam uolumus. AN. Hei mihi,

Geta, occidisti me tuis fallaciis.

CH. Mea causa ejicitur : me hoc est æquom amittere.

GE. 'Quantum potest me certiorem' inquit 'face,
Si illam dant, hanc ut mittam: ne incertus siem:
Nam illi mihi dotem jam constituerunt dare.'

CH. Jam accipiat: illis repudium renuntiet:
Hanc ducat. DE. Quae quidem illi res uortat male.

CH. Opportune adeo argentum nunc mecum attuli,
Fructum quem Lemni uxoris reddunt prædia:
Inde sumam: uxori tibi opus esse dixero.

ACT. IV.—SCEN. 4.

ANTIPHO. GETA.

AN. Geta. GE. Hem. AN. Quid egisti! GE. Emunxi argento scenes.

AN. Satin est id? GE. Nescio hercle, tantum jussus sum.

AN. Eho, uerbero, aliud mihi respondes ac rogo?

GE. Quid ergo narras? AN. Quid ego narrem? opera tua
Ad restim res redit mihi quidem planissume.

Ut te quidem di deæque omnes superi atque inferi
Malis exemplis perdant! hem, siquid uelis,
Huic mandes, qui te ad scopulum e tranquillo auferat.

Quid minus utibile fuit quam hoc ulcus tangere,

Aut nominare uxorem? injectast spes patri
Posse illam extrudi. cedo nunc porro, Phormio

Dotem si accipiet, uxor ducentast domum,

Quid fiet? GE. Non enim ducet. AN. Noui, ceterum
Quom argentum repetent, nostra causa scilicet

In neruom potius ibit? GE. Nil est, Antiphon,
Quin male narrando possit deprauarier.

Tu id quod bonist excerptis, dicis quod malist.
Audi nunc contra jam: si argentum acceperit,

Ducendast uxor, ut ais : concedo tibi :
 Spatium quidem tandem adparandis nuptiis,
 Vocandi, sacrificandi dabitur paululum.
 Interea amici quod polliciti sunt dabunt :
 Inde iste reddet. AN. Quamobrem ? aut quid dicet ? GE.
 Rogas ?
 ‘ Quot res postilla monstra euenerunt mihi !
 Intro iit in ædis ater alienus canis :
 Angui per inpluuium decidit de tegulis :
 Gallina cccinit : interdixit hariolus :
 Aruspex uetuit : ante brumam autem noui
 Negoti incipere * * * . * * *
 * * * quæ causast justissuma.’
 Hæc fient. AN. Ut modo fiant ! GE. Fient : me uide.
 Pater exit : abi, dic esse argentum Phædriæ.

ACT. IV.—SCEN. 5.

DEMIPIO. GETA. CHREMES.

DE. Quietus esto, inquam : ego curabo nequid uerborum duit.
 Hoc temere numquam amittam ego a me, quin mihi testis
 adhibeam :
 Quoi dem et quamobrem dem, commemorabo. GE. Ut cautus est, ubi nil opust.
 CH. Atqui ita opus factost : at matura, dum lubido eadem hæc manet :
 Nam si altera illæc magis instabit, forsitan nos rejiciat.
 GE. Rem ipsam putasti. DE. Duc me ad eum ergo. GE.
 Non moror. CH. Ubi hoc egeris, Transito ad uxorem meam, ut conueniat hanc prius quam hinc abit.

Dicat eam dare nos Phormioni nuptum, ne succenseat :
Et magis esse illum idoneum, qui ipsi sit familiarior :
Nos nostro officio nil digressos esse : quantum is uoluerit 10
Datum esse dotis. DE. Quid tua, malum, id refert ? CH. Magni, Demipho.

Non satis est tuom te officium fecisse, id si non fama adprobat :
Volo ipsius quoque hæc uoluntate fieri, ne se ejectam prædicet.

DE. Idem ego istuc facere possum. CH. Mulier mulieri magis / conuenit.

DE. Rogabo. CH. Ubi illas nunc ego reperire possim, cogito. 11

Lætus sum, ut meæ res sese habent, fratri obtigisse quod uolt.
Quam scitumst, ejusmodi parare in animo cupiditates,
Quas, quom res aduersæ sient, paulo mederi possis!
Hic simul argentum repperit, cura sese expedinit:
Ego nullo possum remedio me enoluere ex his turbis,
Quin, si hoc celetur, in metu, sin patefit, in probro sim.
Neque me domum nunc reciperem, ni mi esset spes ostenta
Hujusce habendæ. sed ubinam Getam inuenire possim?
Ut rogem, quod tempus conueniundi patris me capere jubeat.

DEMIPHO. CHREMES. PHORMIO.

DE. Dis magnas merito gratias habeo atque ago,
 Quando euenere haec nobis, frater, prospere.
 Quantum potest, nunc conueniundus Phormiost,
 Prius quam dilapidet nostras triginta minas
 Ut auferamus. PH. Demiphonem si domist
 Visam, ut quod DE. At nos ad te ibamus, Phormio.

PH. De eadem hac fortasse causa? DE. Ita hercle. PH.

Credidi:

Quid ad me ibatis? ridiculum: uerebamini
 Ne non id facerem quod recepissem semel?
 Heus, quanta quanta haec mea paupertas est, tamen
 Adhuc curauit unum hoc quidem, ut mi esset fides.

CH. Estne ita ut dixi, liberalis? DE. Oppido.

PH. Idque ad uos uenio nuntiatum, Demipho,
 Paratum me esse: ubi uoltis, uxorem date.
 Nam omnis posthabui mihi res, ita uti par fuit,
 Postquam tantopere id uos uelle animum aduorteram.

DE. At hic dehortatus est me, ne illam tibi darem:
 ‘Nam qui erit rumor’ inquit, ‘id si feceris?
 Olim quom honeste potuit, tum non est data:
 Nunc uiduam extrudi turpest:’ ferme eadem omnia
 Quae tute dudum coram me incusaueras.

PH. Satis superbe inluditis me. DE. Qui? PH. Rogas?
 Quia ne alteram quidem illam potero ducere:
 Nam quo redibo ore ad eam quam contempserim?

CH. ‘Tum autem Antiphonem uideo ab sese amittere
 Inuitum eam’ inque. DE. Tum autem uideo filium
 Inuitum sane mulierem ab se amittere.

Sed transi sodes ad forum, atque illud mihi
Argentum rursum jube rescribi, Phormio.

PH. Quodne ego discripsi porro illis quibus debui ?

DE. Quid igitur fiet ? PH. Si uis mi uxorem dare,
Quam despondisti, ducam : sin est ut uelis
Manere illam apud te, dos hic maneat, Demipho.
Nam non est æquom me propter uos decipi,
Quom ego uostri honoris causa repudium alteræ
Remiserim, quæ dotis tantudem dabat.

DE. I hinc in malam rem cum istac magnificentia,
Fugitiae ? etiam nunc credis te ignorarier,

Aut tua facta adeo ? PH. Inritor. DE. Tune hanc duceres,
Si tibi daretur ? PH. Fac periculum. DE. Ut filius
Cum illa habitet apud te, hoc uostrum consilium fuit.

PH. Quæso quid narras ? DE. Quin tu mi argentum cedo.

PH. Mihi uero uxorem tu cedo. DE. In jus ambula.

PH. Enimuero si porro esse odiosi pergitis . . .

DE. Quid facies ? PH. Egone ? uos me indotatis modo
Patrocinari fortasse arbitramini :

Etiam dotatis soleo. CH. Quid id nostra ? PH. Nihil.

Hic quandam noram, quoius uir uxorem — CH. Hem. DE.
Quid est ?

PH. Lemni habuit aliam : CH. Nullus sum. PH. ex qua

Suscepit : et eam clam educat. CH. Sepultus sum.

PH. Hæc adeo ego illi jam denarrabo. CH. Obsecro,
Ne facias. PH. Oh, tune is eras ? DE. Ut ludos facit.

CH. Missum te facimus. PH. Fabulæ. CH. Quid uis tibi ?
Argentum quod habes condonamus te. PH. Audio.

Quid uos, malum, ergo me sic ludificamini

Inepti, uostra puerili inconstantia ?

Nolo uolo : uolo nolo rursum : cape cedo :

Quod dictum, indictumst: quod modo erat ratum, inritumst.

CH. Quo pacto aut unde haec hic resciuit? DE. Nescio,
Nisi me dixisse nemini certo scio.

CH. Monstri, ita me di ament, simile. Pn. Injeci scrupu-
lum. DE. Hem,

Hicine ut a nobis hoc tantum argenti auferat,
Tam aperte inridens? emori hercle satius est.
Animo uirili præsentique ut sis para.

Vides tuom peccatum esse elatum foras;
Neque jam id celare posse te uxorem tuam:
Nunc quod ipsa ex aliis auditura sit, Chreme,
Id nosmet indicare placabilius est.
Tum hunc inpuratum poterimus nostro modo
Ulcisci. PH. Attat, nisi mi prospicio, haereo.
Hi gladiatorio animo ad me adfectant uiam.

CH. At uereor ut placari possit. DE. Bono animo es:
Ego redigam uos in gratiam, hoc fretus, Chreme,
Quoniam e medio excessit unde haec susceptast tibi.

PH. Itane agitis mecum? satis astute adgredimini.
Non hercle ex re istius me instigasti, Demipho.
Ain tu? ubi quæ lubitum fuerit peregre foceris,
Neque hujus sis ueritus feminæ primariae,
Quin nouo modo ei faceres contumeliam,
Venias nunc precibus lautum peccatum tuom?
Hisce ego illam dictis ita tibi incensam dabo,
Ut ne restinguas, lacrumis si extillaueris.

DE. Malum quod isti di deæque omnes duint.
Tantane adfectum quemquam esso hominem audacia!
Non hoc publicitus scelus hinc asportarier
In solas terras! CH. In id redactus sum loci,
Ut quid agam cum illo nesciam prorsum. DE. Ego sc :
In jus eamus. PH. In jus? huc, siquid lubet.

DE. Adsequere, retine, dum ego huc seruos euoco
 CH. Enim nequeo solus: adcurre. PH. Una injuriast ⁹⁰
 Tecum. CH. Lege agito ergo. PH. Alterast tecum, Chremie.
 DE. Rape hunc. PH. Itane agitis? enim uero uocest opus:
 Nausistrata, exi. CH. Os opprime. DE. Inpurum uide,
 Quantum ualet. PH. Nausistrata, inquam. CH. Non taces?
 PH. Taceam? DE. Nisi sequitur, pugnos in uentrem ingere. ⁹⁵
 PH. Vel oculum exclude: est ubi uos ulciscar probe.

PUBLII TERENTII AFRI PHORMIO.

PROLOGUS.

THE prologue is, as those to the Andria and Heautontimorumenos, a reply to the attacks of Lavinius, who had added a new charge to his former charges, to wit, that the plays of Terence are commonplace in language, and feeble in style. Dealing first with this attack, Terence admits that, if to introduce noisy characters and striking incidents is a merit, he must plead guilty to the lack of it. But Lavinius, he suggests, owed the success of his own pieces to his actors, not himself. As to the charge that the matter of his prologues is simply retort upon Lavinius, his answer is, let Lavinius cease his attacks, which arise from a desire to monopolise the stage, and he will cease replying. He finishes by explaining the nature and origin of his play, and asking for it a more favourable hearing than, on a former occasion, one of his plays, perhaps the Hecyra, met.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Poeta vetus. Cf. Andr. Prol. 7; Heaut. Prol. 22, notes. For the juxtaposition of poeta — poetam cf., with Donatus, Virg. Aen. i. 684, “Notos pueri puer inde vultus.”

2. Retrahere ab studio, “Obliger Térence à renoncer à l'étude de la poésie,” Madame Dacier. Retrahere is i. q. “abstrahere” in Andr. I. v. 8, or “revocare,” as it is used in Cic. pro. Sext., c. 15, quoted by Ruhnken, “Cum duo consules a republicā provinciarum fœdere retraxisset.”—Ab studio: “musico,” sc.; compare Heaut. Prol. 23, and note there.—Transdere hominem in otium, &c., “to consign the man to idleness,” “to leave him nothing to do.” For the form “transdere” for “tradere,” cf. “transducere,” “trausnare,” “transjicare,” Ruhnken.—Otium, cf. Hecyr. Prol. Alt. 18, “Ut in otio esset potius quam in negotio.” For maledictis deterrere, in ver. 3, cf. Hecyr. Prol. Alt. 19, “Deterruisse facile, ne alias scriberet.”

4. Qui ita dictitat, “For he is constantly giving this out.” “Dictitat,” cf. Heaut. Prol. 22, “Quod malivolus vetus poeta dictitat.”—Quas-fabulas, attraction of antecedent to the case of relative, cf. notes on Andr. Prol. 3; Madvig. § 319: obs. fecit, as ibid, is properly used of the playwright.

5. Tenui esse oratione et scripturā leri, “Are of poor language and unsustained style.” The charge against him that his plays lacked due gravity and sublimity of style, is in itself a proof of his excellence as a comic writer, as Donatus has noted. For oratio, used as here, cf. Andr. Prol. 12; Heaut. Prol. 46.—Scriptura is i. q. “stilo,” in the first of these passages. Leri is the opposite to "gravis" or "grandis"—epithets of tragedy. Parry here remarks upon Terence's close adherence to the features of the New Comedy.

6. Quia nusquam—scetari canes, "Because he never introduced the character of a mad young man fancying he saw a hind flying, and the hounds in pursuit, and the former imploring and praying him to help her." A hit at Lavinius, who seems to have been fond of introducing such incidents, unsuited to comedy, and rather what we should call melodramatic. A like hit at a similar incident is made in Heaut. Prol. v. 31, "Qui nuper fecit servo currenti in viâ," &c.

In ver. 7, ridere = "fancying he saw," which Ruhnken illustrates by Virgil. AEn. iv. 469, "Eumenidum veluti demens videt agmina Pentheus;" Plaut. Stich. II. i. 50, "Quas tu vides colubras?" Pliny, in his Hist. Nat. viii. 32, remarks that deer hard pressed in the chase are wont to fly to man for succour. Westerhov. compares Ovid Pont. II. ii. 39, "Nec se vicino dubitat committere tecto Quæ fugit infestos territa cerva canes."

9. Quom stetit olim nova, "fabula," sc., cf. Heeyr. Prol. Alt. 7, note; Hor. Epist. II. i. 176, "Securus eadat an recto stet fabula talo." Construe, "When it appeared originally."

In ver. 10, stetisse must be construed, "stood its ground," as in Heeyr. l. c.

After ver. 10, a verse had crept in from Andr. Prol. 3, "Et magis placentur quas fecisset fabulas." Bentley ejected this verse, and has the approval herein of most later editors.

11. Here begins a reply to the statement that Terence has cause to thank Lavinius for attacking him: as otherwise he would have no matter for prologues. Vetus, "Lavinius," cf. v. 1.—Norus, "Terence."—Prologum refers here to the matter spoken, not as in Heeyr. Prol. Alt. 1, and elsewhere, to the actor who delivered it.

In ver. 14, Bentley reads "posset" for "potuisset."

16, 17. In medio omnibus Palmam esse positam, &c., "That the prize is set up in the midst for all, or lies open to all, who ply the poetic calling." Cf. Heaut. Prol. 23.—Studio—musicum, and note ibid. Heeyr. Prol. Alt. 38, artem musicam. For the phrase In medio omnibus Palmam esse positam cf. Virg. AEn. v. 109, "Munera principio ante oculos, circoque locantur In medio;" Cic. in Verr. II. ii. 42, "Tabulæ sunt in medio."

18. Ille ad famem—studuit reicere, "The other strove to drive back our poet here from his calling to want again," "whilst he has wished to retort, not to provoke attack." Studio, Heeyr. Prol. 15; Plaut. Capt. Prol. 13, "Quando histrionem cogis mendicarier." For the form reicere, cf. Virg. Ecl. iii. 76, "Tityre, pascentes a flumine reice capellas;" Lueret. iii. 877, "eicit" for "ejicit."

20. Benedictis si certasset, &c., "Had he vied with me in good words, he would have been well spoken of." Cf. Andr. V. iv. 17, "Si mihi pergit quæ vult dicere, ea quæ non vult audiet."—audisset bene, cf. Heeyr. IV. ii. 24, p. 181. note. Madame Dacier well renders the next verse, Quod ab illo adbutumst, &c., "On ne fait que lui rendre ce quil a prêté." "Sibi esse idrellatum putet," is the reading of most MSS.

23. Mihi—de se, are antithetic, "Now for my part I shall make an end of speaking of him, though on his side he does not of his own accord cease to offend."—de se=ἀφ' ἔαυτοῦ. For the sentiment, cf Heaut. Prol. 34, animum attendite, al "adverte." The same phrase occurs in Cic. in Verr. I. c. 10.—Adporto novam, "I present you a new play," h. e. new to the Latin stage. For adporto, cf. Andr. V. ii. 17, "Quidnam adportas?" and ibid. I. i. 46.

25. Epidicazomenon, h. e. "the claimant for the heiress," h. e. Phormio. This, which is Parry's explanation, is better and safer than supposing with Bentley, Ruhnken, and others, that we should read "Epidicazomenen," and referring it to Phanium. She would, as he observes, be called, ἡ ἐπιδικασθεῖσα, cf. Liddell and Scott's Lexicon, in v., and Smith's Dict. G. and R. A. p. 123 A.—Vocant Græci. The play was one of Apollodorus. Bentley proposes to read "Græce : Latine hic Phormionem nominat." His chief reason is because the play was not yet acted, when the prologue was being spoken. But, as Parry says, the Romans might have been familiar with it, though not on their own stage: and may have called it Phormio from the principal character.—Phormio has his name from φορμὸς, a mat, as in Plaut. Men. I. i. 1, "Juventus nomen fecit Peniculo mihi," &c. The "mat," and the "sponge," from their powers of suction, gave fitting nicknames to parasites.

27. Quia primas partes qui aget, "Because the chief character," &c. In such phrases, the subst. "partes" was often omitted. Cf. Adelph. V. iv. 26, "Non posteriores feram," and notes ibid. See also Eun. I. ii. 71, "Priores partes;" Phorm. V. v. 7.—Voluntas vestra, "your favour," as in Cic. ad Div. iv. 13, quoted by Ruhnken, "Vulgī voluntas, vel potius consensus omnium."

30. Date operam, adeste, &c. Cf. Andr. Prol. 24, "Favete, adeste aequo animo," &c.—Per silentium, "A calm hearing could not always be counted on." Cf. Hecyr, Prol. Alt. 21, "Quam mihi per silentium Nunquam agere licitumst."

32. Quom per tumultum, &c. This seems to be an allusion to the fate of the Hecyra (see Prol. Alt. 25—34). For "per tumultum—motus locost," cf. Hecyr. Prol. Alt. 33, "Tumultuantur, clamant, pugnant de loco: Ego interea meum non potui tutari locum." For "grex," used as here for a "troop" or "company" of players, cf. Heaut. Prol. 44, note; Plaut. Asinar. Prol. 3.—Quem actoris virtus, &c. A compliment to the actors, cf. for "restituit locum," Hecyr. Prol. Alt. 13, note.—For æquanimitas, ver. 34, cf. Adelph. Prol. 24, "Facite æquanimitas," &c.

ACTUS I—Sc. I.

ENTER Davus with some money due to Geta, and needed by him at this time, because his master, Demipho's, son Antipho was married yesterday, and he would like to make the bride a present. There will be presents when the baby is born, and on its birthdays, ere long, thinks Davus.

Metre:—Iambic Trinometer.

1. Amicus summus meus, et popularis, "My most near friend and fellow-townsman." For "amicus summus," cf. Andr. V. vi. 6, note. Phorm.

V. viii. 60, Popularis in its first sense would be "one of the same race or people." These slaves are not so: but speak as if their master's country was their own. For "popularis," cf. Adelph. II. i. 1, "Observe! populares;" Eun. V. viii. 1, "O populares."

2. Erat ei de ratiuncula, &c., "There was for some time past a trifling sum of money remaining in my hands from an account due to him." "I owed him a trifle from an old account." "Ratinuncula" occurs in Pl. Curcul. iii. 1, "Subduxi ratiunculam." "Ratio" is constantly used in the same sense. Plaut. Men. 123, "Ratio redditur." For the phrase "apud me reliquum pauxillulum," &c., Westerhov. quotes Plaut. Mostell. I. iii. 141, "Etiam nunc decem minæ apud te sunt: vel rationem puta;" Cic. ad Att. xvi. 3, "Maxime me angit ratio reliquorum meorum." Davus, it will be observed, is fond of diminutives: ratiuncula, pauxillulum.

4. Id ut conficerem ("rogavit," sc.), "He begged me to make it up." Perhaps this clause depends upon the verb "venit" in ver. 2, which implies an application for the money. For conficerem so used as here, cf. below, Phorm. V. v. 11, "Ne, quum hic non videant me, conficere credant argentum suum." Cic. in Verr. Act II. Lib. i. c. 52, "Per magnam eum dicere ex illâ re pecuniam confici posse." So Plaut. used "fieri," Pseud. I. iii. 68, "Vel ducentæ fieri possunt præsentes minæ."

6. Munus hoc conraditur. Cf. notes ad Adelph. II. ii. 34; Heaut. I. i. 89, "Conrasi omnia." Donatus notes that wedding presents might be presented until the seventh day after a marriage.—Quam inique comparatum est, "How hard is the arrangement." Heaut. III. i. 94, "Ita comparatam esse hominum naturam omnium;" Cic. pro Sext. Rosc. Amer. 36, "Itaque more majorum comparatum est, ut," &c.; Plaut. Amph. II. ii. 3, "Ita cuique comparatum Est in ætate hominum." See Colman's version of verses 7—12. Westerhov. quotes Martial. V. xxxii. 1, "Semper eris pauper, si pauper es, Æmiliane; Dantur opes nulli nunc, nisi divitibus."

9. Quod ille unciatim—comparsit miser, "What, Geta, poor wretch, has saved up with difficulty, ounce by ounce, from his monthly allowancee, cheating himself of his proper fare: All this that bride will carry away."—Unciatim. The "uneia" was the twelfth part of an "as"—so that the adverb is used to express the pitiful amount of the slave's scraping.—De demenso, "frumento," sc. The allowance was four, or, according to Pliny. H. N. xviii. 9, five "modii" per month. Cf. "Demensum" in Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 14, "Nunc argumentum vobis demensum dabo Non modio, neque trimodio, verum ipso horreo." This allowance was paid on the first of the month, the Kalends, and was by the Greeks, Hesiod. Op. et D. 767, called ἀρμαλιτη. Cf. Plaut. Stich. I. ii. 3, "Vos meministis quot calendis petere demensum cibum."—Suum defrudans genium. Cf. Plaut. Aul. 682, "Ego met me fraudavi, Animumque meum, geniumque meum." See Hildyard's note. In Plaut. Pers. II. iii. 11, we have the opposite, "Genio meo multa bona faciam," "I'll indulge my appetite." Hor. Od. III. xvii. 14, "Cras genium mero Curabis." With the reading "defrudans" for "defraudans," cf. Andr. III. iii. 41, where some copies read "cludier."

13. Ferictur alio munere, "Will be mulcted in another present."

Propert. IV. iii. 50, "Qui volet austeros arte ferire viros," where Paley observes that "ferire" seems to have been conventionally used of deceiving a husband. In Prop. V. v. 44 (al. IV. v. 44), we read "Cum ferit astutos comica mæcha Getas," where Broukhus, Kuinoel, and others, say the simile is from gladiatorial combats.—Natalis dies, for this keeping up of birthdays by the ancients, compare Plaut. Capt. I. ii. 71, "Quia mihi est natalis dies, Propterea te vocari ad cœnam volo." Ovid Amor. I. viii. 93; Plaut. Pseud. I. ii. 32, "Nam mibi hodie natalis dies est, decet eum omnes vos concelebrare." Lindenbrog. quotes Genesis xl. and Matt. xiv., the birthday festivals of Pharaoh and Herod.

15. *Ubi initiabunt, "And when they shall wean the child"—*initiabunt (sc. "cibo et potu"). Stalbaum quotes Varro ap. Non. Marcell. p. 108, "Cum primo potu et cibo initiarent pueros, sacrificabantur ab edulibus Edusæ, a potionē Potinæ." Donatus seems to refer the words to the Αὐφιδρόμια of the Athenians, the festival for introducing and naming the child. See Smith's Dict. G. and R. A. 41 a. Thus the three occasions for presents to the child will be the birth, the birthday, and the naming-day.—Omne hoc mater auferet, "All this the mother will carry off." "The boy will be the excuse for sending the presents."

ACTUS I.—Sc. II.

ENTER Geta, whom Davus questions as to his rueful visage. He explains that his master and his master's brother have entrusted to him the care of their sons Antipho and Phædria, while they are absent in Lemnos and Cilicia. First he tried strictness; but finding that he got kicked for that, he let the youths have their way. What is the result? Phædria has fallen in love with a music girl belonging to a slave-merchant, and Antipho with a penniless orphan, Phanium, whom one Phormio, a parasite, has helped him to marry, by pretending that Antipho is next of kin to the girl, and that he, as the father's friend, was bound to sue him to marry her. He has carried out this scheme. They were married yesterday. Phædria's affair has been less happy, as he cannot raise money to buy the music-girl. The fathers are expected home. The slave and the young man are in a very natural state of alarm as to the consequences.

1. Siquis me queret, &c. Cf. Heeyr. I. ii. 1.—At ego obviam conabar tibi ("ire," sc.). See Heaut. II. ii. 11, note, "Dum moluntur, dum conantur, annus est." Construe, "Why, I was starting to meet you, Davus."—Accipe, hem, Lectumst, "There, take it, it's good coin." Cf. Plaut. Pseud. IV. vii. 50, "Accipe: hic sunt quinque argenti lectæ numeratæ minæ."—Conveniet numerus quantum debui, "You'll find it the exact sum I owed." For conveniet numerus, cf. Plaut. Most. I. iii. 148, quoted by Parry "Bene igitur ratio accepti atque expensi inter nos convenit;" Plaut. Men. H. G. 1008, "Conveniunt signa;" see also, Plaut. Pseud. IV. vii. 109, "Tantundem argenti, quantum miles debuit, Dedit huic."

4. Ama te, "I thank you." Cf. Eun. I. ii. 106, "Merito te amo." "Amo" is used in thanking: "amabo" (cf. Plaut. Aul. H. G. 101; Men. H. G. 291), of asking a favour. — Habeo gratiam, cf. Andr. I. i. 15. — Non neg' exisse ("te," sc.). — Præsertim ut nunc sunt mores, cf. Andr. I. i. 41, "Namque hoc tempore Obsequium," &c. — A deo res reddit, "It comes to this," cf. Heaut. I. i. 61, note. — Siquis quid reddit, &c. Westerhov. quotes Plaut. Trin. IV. iii. 44, "Siquis mutuom quid dederit, fit pro proprio perditum."

7. Tristis, "Rueful visaged." With modo ut tacere possis, &c., "vide," cf. Andr. II. iv. 6, note. — Abi sis, insciens, "Prythee, away, blockhead." Cf. Adelph. II. ii. 12, note; IV. iv. 12, note.

10. Cujus tu fidem, &c., an "a fortiori" argument. — Ubi quid mihi lucrist, &c., "In which matter what interest have I in deceiving you." Ubi = "in quā re," as in Heaut. V. i. 43, "Quot res dedere ubi possem persentiscere." Or, we might construe the sentence, "Where have I any interest in deceiving you," simply.

12. Hanc operam tibi dico, "I am paying you this attention," h. e. the attention you ask. Dico is, i. q. do, as in Plaut. Bacch. IV. ix. 72, "Aurium operam tibi dico." So in Plaut. Mil. Gl. IV. i. 7, "Immo omnes res posteriores pono, atque operam do tibi."

15. Tam quam te. Fleckeisen, following Bentley, reads Tam quam as two words, cf. Eun. IV. iv. 50, "Tam scio quam me vivero." In ver. 16, illi = "Chremeti." nostro = "Demiphoni." — Ad hospitam antiquum, "To a foreign friend of long standing," cf. Hecyr. V. iii. 6, note. — Pellexit, "decoyed." Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 257, "Si pellexerunt, perditum amittunt domum," where Hildyard shows the distinction between "illico" and "pellicio" to be the same as between "inducere" and "perducere," "tentare," and "pertentare." The preposition per seems to indicate "accomplishment," carrying through, cf. "pellax" and "pellex." — Modo non montes auri pollicens, "Promising him all but mountains of gold." For modo non, "all but," or "well nigh," cf. Gr. μονονούχλ, and Mælvig. Gr. § 462, a. For the hyperbolic "montes auri," Ruhnken quotes Sall. Cat. c. 23, "Repente glorians maria montesque polliceri cœpit." Pl. Mil. G. IV. ii. 73, "Tum argenti montes non massas habet."

19. Cui tanta erat res, et supererat? "What? decoyed a man who had so great riches; and such a superfluity of them?" This is the sense of the passage as Donatus understood it, referring eui to Demipho; and Stalbaum follows Donatus. Westerhov. refers cui to "hespitem;" "Who had such wealth, and such a superabundance?" The first sense is best. — Desinas, an impatient rejoinder. — Sie est ingenium, "Such is my master's nature" — "Money's his passion," Colman: cf. Plaut. Amph. III. ii. 18, "Ita ingenium meum est."

20. Oh! regem me esse oportuit, "Oh! 'tis I that ought to have been as rich as a king." The emphasis is on me, and the implied force is, "I should know how to enjoy my money, and not run about after more." For "rex" in the same sense as here, see Plaut. Capt. IV. ii. 45, "Non ego nunc Parasitus sum, sed regum rex regalior." Eun. I. ii. 88, reginæ. — Magistrum, "pedagogue." Commentators compare Adelph. V. ix. 5.

23. Prorincium Cepisti duram, "You undertook a hard office!" Cf. Heaut. III. ii. 5, "Nostro traditast provincia," and notes thereupon.—Mihi usus renit, hoc scio, "It has proved so; I'm sure of that?" See note on Heaut. III. ii. 42, "Non usus veniet, spero;" Adelph. V. vi. 7, "Si quid usus venerit," note.—Memini relinqu me Deo irato meo, "I remember that I was left in charge of them, when my God was wroth with me." Deus is here, i. q. "genius," "my tutelary spirit." For similar phrases, see Andr. IV. i. 40, "Deos fuisse iratos," note. Hor. Sat. II. iii. 8, "Iratis natus paries Dis atque poetis." Plaut. Pœn. II. 4, "Dis meis iratissimis;" Virg. Aen. II. 396, "Haud numine nostro."

26. Scapulus perdidī, "I ruined my shoulders." So Plaut. Epid. I. i. 84, "Corium perdidī." Expressions of slaves for a sound beating. See Casin. V. iii. 14, "Nam salus nulla est scapulis, si domum redeo." Parry quotes also Asin. II. ii. 49, 50, and Trucul. IV. iii. 19.

28. Adrōrum stimulum calcēs ("jactare" sc.), "to kick against the goad;" "to raise the hinder part of the heel to kick," is "calces jactare," or "ducere." Gr. πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν. See Æsch. Agam. 1624; Eurip. Bacch. 794; Acts of the Apostles, ix. 5, xxvi. 14; Plaut. Trucul. IV. ii. 55, "Nugae sunt. Si stimulus pugnis cædis, manibus plus dolet." For the construction of obsequi quæ vellent, see note at Adelphi. V. ix. 33.—Scisti uti foro, "You understand how to suit your market." "You don't fix your price beforehand, but are ruled by the current price of the market."

31. Nactus est, "Chanced upon," cf. note at Hecyr. I. i. 8.—Hanc omare crepit perdite, cf. Heaut. I. i. 45.—Impurissimo, "Most rascally," cf. Plaut. Aul. H. G. 332, "Ita illis impuris omnibus adii manum;" Asinar. 453, "Impure, nihil, non vides irasci?" In ver. 34, with "quicquam," understand "suppetebat."

35. Oculos pascere, "To feast his eyes." Ruhnken illustrates this phrase by Cic. Phil. xi. 3, "Cum animum satiare non posset, oculos pavit suos." Lucret. ii. 418, "Oculos qui pascere possunt." Similarly, Virg. Aen. i. 468, "Animum picturā pascit inani." Plaut. Pœn. V. iv. 1, 2, "Fuit hodie operæ pretium ejus qui amabilitati animum adjicent Oculis epulas dare." For similar expressions see Hildyard's note on Aulul. 492, upon the reading of Lambinus "edi" for "audivi" there.—In ludum ducere, &c., "To escort her to school, and back." For "ludus," so used, see Hecyr. II. i. 6; Plaut. Rudens. Prol. 44.—Sectari, "Run after," "amatoriè." Cf. Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. i. 13, "Ait sese ultro omnes mulieres sectarier." Donatus remarks upou the satire intended here; "sectari" properly applies to "attaching oneself to the teaching of some philosopher," as Phædria ought to have been doing, instead of running after the "citharistria."

37. Nos otiosi operam, &c. "We too, for lack of other business, gave our time to Phædria," Colman.—In quo hac discebat ludo, exadrōrum ei loco, "Opposite that place, namely, the school in which the girl was taking lessons." For the attraction of the antecedent to the case of the relative, see Andr. Prol. 3. For exadrōrum, Adelph. IV. ii. 45, note.—Illi, in ver. 41, is i. q. "illic," as in Adelph. I. ii. 36; Hecyr. V. iii. 3, notes, q. v.—Tonstrina, "A barber's shop," the haunt of loungers, Plaut. Amph. IV. i. 5; Epid. II. ii. 14.

45. Hic vicinie, "In this neighbourhood," cf. note at Andr. I. i. 43 Madvig. Gr. 284, obs. 9.—Ea sita erat exadrōrum, "The corpse was placed (or laid out) opposite to her," h. e. in the hall of the house.—Neque illi benevolens, &c., "Nor had she any well-wisher, acquaintance, or kinsman, present, to assist in the funeral." For Qui adjutaret funus, compare Andr. I. i. 81, "Curabat uua funus;" and for "adjuto," in a like construction, Hecyr. III. ii. 24, "Atque eis onera adjuta."

51. Commorat omnes nos, "He had moved us all." — Commorat, syncope, for "commoverat." — Eamus viscre, sc. ut before eamus. For the construction cf. Hecyr. I. ii. 114, note. — Alius, h. e. Phaedria or some other of the loungers at the barber's shop. — Imus, venimus, videamus, Asyndeton, "We go: we reached the spot: we see her." Venimus is, i. q. "advenimus," the perf., but there is no reason for supposing imus to be i. q. "ivimus." Parry compares this passage with Heaut. II. iii. 44—50, q. v.

54. Quo magis diceres, h. e. "putares," ita rem esse, sc., "And, on which account you would think her the more so." — Nil aderat adjumenti, "There was no addition to set off her beauty." Cf. Heaut. II. ii. 47, 48, "Tum ornatam ita uti quae ornantur sibi Nulla malā re esse expolitam muliebri;" Ovid. Fast. II. 763, 764, q. v. For "Capillus passus," see Heaut. I. c. 49. — Ipsa horrida, "Herself unkempt;" horrida is here i. q. "sordida," in Heaut. I. c. 56. Ipsa, according to Ruhnken, means "in her whole appearance."

57. Ut, ni vis boni In ipsā inesset formā, &c., "So that if the essence of beauty had not been in her very form, these things would have killed (or "put out") her loveliness." For the construction cf. Madvig. Gr. § 347 b, and obs. 2; Key, Gr. § 1209; Ter. Adelph. IV. v. 74. For vis boni, cf. Lucret. IV. 1166, "Quoi Veneris membris vis omnibus exoriatur." For bonum, in the sense of "beauty," Hor. Od. IV. i. 3, "Qualis eram bonae Sub regno Cinarae." Catull. xv. 10, "Infesto pueris bonis malisque."

59. Ille ("Phaedria," h. e.) tantumodo 'Satis,' inquit, 'scitast.' "Merely said, she's fair enough." For "scitus" so used, cf. Andr. III. ii. 6, "Per ecastor scitus puer." Satis is used of faint praise. Cf. note on Heaut. III. ii. 12. — Sic satis — noster vero, "But our young master" (Antipho). Cf. Andr. V. ii. 5, "O noster Chreme!"

61. Scin quam? quo evadat vide, "Know you to what extent?" "Observe the result." Quam, according to Stalbaum, is for "quontopere." — Sibi ejus faciat copiam, "To give him possession of her." Plaut. Cas. II. viii. 14, "Quod maxime Cupiebas ejus copiam feci tibi." — Illa enim, h. e. "enimvero," Gr. δῆ; cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 168. After negat, we must supply "copiam facturam." — Neque eum aequom, &c., "And she says that he is acting wrongly;" Neque = "et non," as in Hecyr. III. iii. 32.

65. Bonam bonis prognatam, "An honest girl, and born of honest parents," Colman. Bonus is here, i. q. "virtuous" as in Hor. Od. IV. iv. 29, "Fortes creatur fortibus et bonis;" Epist. I. xvi. 52, "Oderunt peccare boni," &c. — Lege id licere facere, "If he wishes her for a wife, he may accomplish that legally." Lege, h. e. "legitimē," as in Andr. IV. v. 4, note, and Hecyr. I. ii. 97, q. v.

69. Non, si redisset pater, &c., "Would not his father, on his return, have given consent?" Si is here used of "time," as in Hor. Epist. I. vii. 10, "Quod si bruma nives Albanis illinet agris," &c.; Plaut. Capt. II. ii. 1, "Jam ego revertar intro si ex his quae volo exquisivero."

—Veniam daret, cf. Andr. V. iii. 30, “Da veniam ;” Hecyr. IV. ii. 29, notes.—Indotatam — ignobilem, Two great requirements were dower and family connections. Westerhov. quotes Trinumm. I. ii. 122, “Ut eam in se dignam conditionem collocem.” But see Plaut. Aulul. 434 (H.), on the subject of dower, “Nam meo animo,” &c., “Ut indotatas ducant uxores domum.” Cf. ibid. 196, and Amphitr. 687 (Bothe.), and Hor. Od. III. xxiv. 21.

72. Quid fiat (“rogas” sc.), a common construction with Terence.—Homo confidens, “An impudent fellow.” Cicero alludes to this passage in his oration for A. Cæcina, c. 10, “Sextus Clodius—nec minus niger, nec minus confidens, quam ille Terentianus est Phormio.” For confidens, cf. Andr. V. ii. 14, “Ellum, confidens, catus”—Qui illum di omnes perduint, “Would that all the gods might confound him!” The general consent of editors and commentators explains qui in this and like imprecatory passages as i. q. “utinam.” Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 356, “Qui illum perduint Di omnes,” and ibid. 828. Westerhov. whom Stalbaum follows, resolves it into an aposiopesis, Qui—Illum perduint, &c., “Who—but may the gods,” &c. Parry explains qui as an ablative “wherefore,” i. e. “and so.” In default of satisfactory explanation, we incline to the view of Hildyard, who follows Donatus, Gronovius, and others.

75. Lex est ut orbæ, &c. Cf. Andr. I. i. 44, note; Adelph. IV. v. 18, “Hic meus amicus illi genere est proximus : Huic leges cogunt nubere hanc,” see notes. For “nubant” and “ducere,” in ver. 76, cf. Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 41, where Ov. Met. ix. 764, is quoted “Sacra quibus qui ducat abest, ubi nubimus ambæ,” in which passage Iphis, then a female, is about to wed Ianthe.

77. Tibi scribam dicam, “I'll enter an action against you,” γράψομαι δίκην. Cf. Plaut. Aul. 716; Hildyard's Glossary and notes. Dica (h. e. δίκη), is a substantive from the Greek. Cf. below IV. iii. 63; II. iii. 92, “Dicam tibi impingam grandem;” II. i. 15. See also Cic. in Verr. II. ii. c. xiv., “Scribitur Heraclio dica,” and Long's note on that passage; as well as ibid. c. xv., “Dicas sortitum;” Plaut. Poen. III. vi. 5, “Cras subscribam homini dicam.”

80. Qui cognata tibi sit, “How she is your relation.” Qui = “quomodo.”—Quod erit mihi bonum atque commodum, “As far as shall be good and advantageous to my cause.” Quod = “quoad.” Donatus takes the phrase to be the Parasite's form of saying, “Quod felix faustumque sit;” and Zeune alters the punctuation by placing a colon at “confingam,” and referring “quod — commodum” to ver. 82. But the first method is best. For “refelles,” cf. Hecyr. II. ii. 12.—Vincam scilicet, Westerhov. quotes Cic. Tusc. Q. i. 1, “Erat facile vincere non repugnantes.”—Quid med, “refert,” sc. Compare Adelph. V. iv. 27, note; Hecyr. IV. iii. 12, note.

84. Jocularē audaciām. Cf. Andr. IV. iv. 43, “Jocularium in malum,” and note there.—Persuasumst homini, “Our poor fellow was persuaded,” h. e. Antipho. The reading “persuasumst” for “persuasit” is Bentley's, from the C. Bembin., and suits best with the “asyndeton” of the passage. For Quid tc futurumst? in ver. 87, cf. Andr. III. v. 8, note; Heaut. III. i. 53, note.

88. Quod fors feret, &c., “Whate'er chance shall bring, I'll bear patiently.” Westerhov. quotes Virg. Æn. V. 710, “Quicquid erit, superanda omnis fortuna ferendo est." Cic. ad Att. vii. 14, "Sed haec ut fors tulerit." For "Æquo animo," &c., cf. Hor. Od. I. xxiv. 20, "Levius fit patientia," &c.—In me omnis spes mihi sit. Cf. Eun. II. ii. 9, "Itan' parasti te, ut spes nulla reliqua in te esset tibi?"

90. Ad preeatorem adeam, credo, &c., "What, I'm to go to an intercessor, I suppose," &c. Credo is said ironically. For preeatorem, cf. Heaut. V. ii. 23, "Nec tu aram tibi, Nec preeatorem pararis," and note ibid. Slaves used to suborn an intercessor: cf. Plaut. Asin. II. iv. 9, &c. Amitte = "dimitte," cf. Andr. V. iii. 27, note.—Posthac si quicquam, nil precor, "If he shall have done any wrong again, I won't intercede for him." For the ellipse after quicquam, cf. Andr. I. ii. 25, "Si sensero hodie quicquam." Parry compares Eun. V. ii. 13, "Unam hanc noxiā Amitte; si aliam adinisero unquam, occidito."—Tantummodo non addat, "And all but add, when I'm gone hence kill him, an't please you." Bentley places a full stop at precōr, and reads addit, "He only does not add," and Fleckeisen follows him.

94. Quid paedagogus ille, qui citharistriam? "Sectabatur" sc. A humorous allusion to Phædria, "What of him, gentleman-usher to the music-girl?" Colman. One of the duties of a slave, who was employed as a paedagogue, was to attend his charge to and from school.—Quid rei gerit? "How goes he on?" i. q. "quid agit?"—Sic, tenuiter, "But so so, very poorly." For sic, cf. Heaut. III. i. 49, Sic hoc, note; Andr. IV. v. 9, 10, note, "Sic ut quimus, aiunt," &c. In ver. 98, quoad = "quamdiu."—Non certum scio, cf. Heeyr. III. i. 44, "Certum sciam," where, however, Fleckeisen reads "certo sciam."

100. Ad portitorcs esse delatam, "And that it has been carried to the custom-house-officers." For this sense of "portitor," "cujus erat portum obsidere, et omnia sciscitari, ut ex iis vectigal sumeret," see Plaut. Menæchm.; Hildyard's Glossary, 41, "Portitorem domum duxi;" Asinar. I. iii. 7, "Ego pol istum portitorem privabo portorio;" Trinumm. III. iii. 64—66, "Jam si obsignatas non feret, dici hoc potest: Apud portitorem eas resignatas sibi, Inspectasque esse;" Cic. de Off. i. 42.—Numquid—me vis? cf. Adelph. III. iii. 78, note; Heeyr. II. ii. 30, note.—Puer, heus, "What ho! boy?" This is said as he knocks at the door.—Da hoc Dorcio, "Give this money to Dorcium," his wife and fellow-slave. The termination is the same as usual in women's names, e. g. Glycerium, Phanium, Planesium.

ACTUS I.—Sc. III.

ANTIPHO expresses to Phædria his dread of his father's return, and consequent discovery of his marriage, which is a constant source of anxiety to him. Phædria rallies him on his being actually disposed to find fault with his good luck in love. Antipho replies (to his cousin's wish that he were in his, Phædria's, difficulty), that the difference is in his affair being indissoluble, while Phædria's can be dropped at any moment. Geta interrupts them.

1. Adeon rem redisse, &c., “To think that it should have come to this.” Cf. notes to Andr. I. v. 10; Heaut. IV. v. 3.—Ut qui mihi consultum optimè velit esse, &c., “That him, who has my interest most at heart, that I should dread my father, I say.” Cf. Bacch. IV. vi. 18, “Orabat ut quod istic esset scriptum, ut fieret.” The second ut is pleonastic. “Qui—velit” is a periphrasis for “amicus summus,” and refers to his “father.” For “consultum velit,” cf. Plaut. Bacch. III. vi. 36, “Me ires consultum malè.”—Ejus adventi in mentem venit, cf. for this construction, Phorm. IV. iii. 47, 48; Plaut. Aulul. H. G. 183; Eunuch. IV. iii. 24; Cic. ad Verr. Divinatio. c. xiii. For adventi, archaic, for “adventus,” cf. Andr. II. ii. 28, note.

3. Quid ni fuisse incogitans, “Whereas had I not been inconsiderate.” Incogitans occurs again at III. ii. 14. below, and “incognititia” in Plaut. Merc. I. i. 27. The particle “quod” occurs as here in Cæsar, B. G. i. 44, “Quod nisi discedat,” &c., and below in ver. 5, Quod utinam, pleonastically.—Quid istuc est? “What's this you speak of?”—Rogitas? qui—conscius sis, “Do you ask, who are privy with me to so audacious an act?” Phædria was with Antipho, cf. I. ii. 41. For mihi conscientius, cf. Heaut. I. i. 69, note; “Qui fuere ei conscientii.” Plaut. Rudens. IV. vii. 21, “Ne conscientii sint ipsi maleficiis suis.” For quod utinam, cf. ver. 3.—Neu = “atque utinam ne.”—Quod mihi mali, cf. Andr. II. vi. 27, “Hem illuc est huic rei caput.” Parry compares with the general scope of the following lines, Andr. II. vi. 9, 10, q. v.

7. Non potitus esscm, “Suppose I had not gained her.” Douatus illustrates this granting the possibility of failure, by Virg. Aeo. iv. 603, “Verum anceps fuerat pugnæ fortuna—fuissest.” For fuissest mihi ægre, cf. Adelph. I. ii. 57, “Ægre est.” In ver. 8, Audio is equivalent to “Oh! doubtless,” said ironically. Cf. Andr. III. iii. 20; and Phorm. V. viii. 54. In ver. 9, dum exspecto depends upon “cura angeret animum” in ver. 8.—Qui hanc mihi adimat consuetudinem, “Whilst I'm on the look out how soon he may arrive, who is to deprive me of this intercourse.” For quam mox, cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 606, “Provisam quam mox vir mens redeat domum.” Ibid 79, “Quam mox incendo rugum?” For consuetudinem, cf. Andr. II. vi. 8, note; Hecyr. III. iii. 44.—Ægrest, see above, ver. 7.

10. Aliis quia defit. Westerhov. quotes Plaut. Curcul. I. iii. 14, “Ipus se exeruciat, qui homo quod amat, videt; nec potitur, dum licet.” For “defit,” see Hecyr. V. ii. 2.—Amore abundas, Antipho, “You're too rich a lover, Antipho!”—Colman.

12. Nam tua quidem hercle certo. For this concurrence of particles, cf. Andr. II. ii. 10, note, and the use of the Greek τότε γαρ τολ. The same phrase occurs in Plaut. Menæchm. 228, H.—I'a me di bene ament ut, cf. Hecyr. II. i. 9, note; Heaut. III. iii. 8.—Tam diu quod amo frui, “to enjoy possession of what I love as long;” h. e. as Antipho has his wife. Tam din is perhaps said δεικτικῶς. Frui, as Stalbaum notes, is used “propriè in re amorum.”

14. Jam depecisci morte cupio, "I'm ready at this moment to close the bargain with my death," Parry. "Depecisci morte" is, "to enter on a compact not to refuse even death as an equivalent for the accomplishment of one's wishes." Cic. ad Att. ix. 7, "Cur non honestissimo periculo depecisci velim?" Virg. Æn. v. 230, "Vitamque volunt pro laude pacisci;" xii. 49, "Letumque siuas pro laude pacisci."—Tu conjicito cetera, "Imagine you the rest, what I now reap from this lack I experience, and what you do from that abundance, with which you are blest." Plaut. Casin. I. i. 6, "Dehinc conjicite cæterum."—Ut neiva μῆ.

18. Beatus ni unum hoc desit, "Blest in all but this" &c. Cf. Hecyr. IV. ii. 25, "Quam fortunatus ceteris sum rebus, absque una hac foret."—Tum sentias, Andr. II. i. 10, "Tu si hic sis aliter sentias."—Nostri nosmet pœnitent, "We are dissatisfied with our own state." Cf. Heaut. I. i. 20, note; Cic. ad Fam. vi. 1, "Etsi ea perturbatio est omnium rerum, ut suæ quemque fortunæ maximè pœnitent."—De integro, "afresh," "from a fresh starting-point." Cf. Andr. Prol. 26; Heaut. V. iii. 8, "ad integrum." In ver. 23, Fleckeisen reads "retinere amorem an mittere."

23. In eum incidi infelix locum, "Have fallen unluckily into that predicament, that I've the power neither of letting her go, nor keeping her." For locum, see Heaut. II. iii. 118, "In eum jam res rediit locum." For the construction eius (h. o. "uxoris") amittendi, see Hecyr. III. iii. 12, note; Heaut. Prol. 29; Madvig. 413, obs. 2, and below, V. vi. 40, where some read "ejus habendi."

ACTUS I.—Sc. IV.

GETA enters in a state of perplexity how to escape the reward of his aid to his young master, now that his father is come home. He is half inclined to run away from the consequences, and only stays from love to Antipho. Antipho interrupts this soliloquy and learns his father's arrival at the Piræus. He is in utter consternation, but Geta urges him to brave it out. Ere his father can come up, however, his resolution fails, and he leaves Geta and Phædria to do their best to appease Demipho. They agree to stick to the story of the lawsuit.

1. Nullus es. Cf. Andr. III. iv. 20, note; Hecyr. IV. i. 6. Bentley in this verse omits "tibi," and reads "repereris."—Te impendent, "hang over you." For the unusual construction of an accusative after impendent, see Lucret. i. 327, "Mare quæ impendent vesco sale saxa peresa." Some read "in te impendent," as in Plaut. Epid. I. i. 77, "Tantæ in te impendent ruinæ."—Me inde extraham, "I may extricate myself therefrom," cf. Hecyr. V. iv. 36, "Ex quantâ ærumnâ extraxeris." After ver. 4, copyists have introduced a verse from Andr. I. iii. 3, "Quæ si non astu," &c.; but Bentley properly rejects it here.

5. Quidnam ille commotus venit? "What is it that he's disturbed about, as he comes?" For commotus, compare Andr. V. ii. 23, "Ego jam te commotum reddam;" V. iv. 34, "Ita animus commotus metu."—Tum temporis mihi punctum, &c. "Besides I have but a moment for this matter," i. e. devising some plan of concealment. Punctum temporis=στιγμὴ χρόνου. Parry quotes Hor. Epist. II. ii. 172, "Puneto quod mobilis horæ."

9. Loquar incendam, "Suppose I speak? I should inflame him. Or be silent? I should goad him on. Or try to excuse my conduct? 'twould be labour lost." For instigem, see Andr. IV. ii. 9, note, "Si hic non insanit satis suâ sponte, instiga."—Laterem lavem, literally "I should be trying to wash a brick, πλίνθους πλύνειν, to get the colour out of it." Westerhov. quotes Lucilius, Sat. ix., "Nam laterem qui dicit habet nil amplius unquam Quam communè lutum e paleis, cœnumque acerosum." For excruciat animi in ver. 10, cf. Mil. Gl. IV. ii. 76, "Quid illam miseram animi excrucias." "Diserucior animi," Plaut. Aulul. H. G. 66. Adelph. IV. iv. 1, "Diserucior animi."

11. Nam absque eo esset, "For were it not for him." See notes at Hecyr. IV. ii. 25; Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 920.—Recte ego mihi vidisse, "I should duly have looked out for myself." Vidisse is, i. q. "providisse," as in Andr. II. vi. 25. See the use of "vide," Menæchm. 266, H., and the common use of "viderit," "let him look to it," in Virgil Æn. and elsewhere.

12. Aliquid convassasse, &c. "I would have packed up something." "Convasare" is, i. q. "vasa colligere;" cf. Plaut. Pseud. IV. iii. 16—18. Bentley suggested reading "convassissem" unnecessarily.—Me conjicerem in pedes, "I'd take to my heels." Cf. Plaut. Bacch. III. i. 7, "Me continuo contuli protinam in pedes." For "protinam," see Plaut. Curc. II. iii. 84, "Exinde me ilico protinam dedi."

15. Quā querere insistam vid, "Ou l'irai-je chercher?"—Madame Dacier. Querere is, i. q. "ad quærendum."—Expecto, "I anticipate." Virg. Æn. vi. 14, "Inclusi pœnam expectant."—Ibi plurimum est, "He is mostly there." "Plurimum"=τὸ πλεῖστον—Donatus.

18. Satis pro imperio, quisquis es, "You stand sufficiently on your authority, whoever you are!" Cf. Adelph. I. i. 27, "pro meo jure." Livy iii. 49, "Jam pro imperio Valerius discedere a privato lictores jubebat." With obviam supply dari.—Verbo expedi, "Tell me in one word." Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 516, "Mi expedi."

22. Nam quod ego huic, &c. "Prythee what remedy," &c. For nam used as here, interrogatively, cf. Andr. II. ii. 24, "Quorsum nam istuc?" note; Andr. III. iv. 12. But see Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 150, where it is explained as "emphaticè dictum." Cf. Ter. Andr. III. v. 6.—Exitio remedium inveniam, cf. Andr. III. i. 10, "Quod remedium nunc huic malo inveniam."—Eo meæ fortunæ redeunt, cf. above, I. iii. 1, note.

25. Fortes fortuna adjuvat. Ennius lib. vii., "Fortibus est fortuna viris data." Cic. Tusc. Disp. II. iv. "Fortes enim non modo fortuna adjuvat," &c. Virg. Æn. x. 284, "Audentes fortuna juvat." Menander, "τὸλμη δικαία καὶ Θεὸς συλλαμβάνει." Sophoc. "οὐ τοῖς ἀθύμοις ἡ τυχὴ συλλαμβάνει."—Non sum apud me. Andr. II. iv. 5; V. iv. 34, "Vix sum apud me;" Hecyr. IV. iv. 85, note.—Quom maxime ut sis (apud te), "sc.).

For "cum maximè," cf. Adelph. IV. i. 2, "Nunc quom maxime operis aliquid facere credo." Heecyr. I. ii. 40, note.

28. Commeruisse culpam (sc. te), "That you have committed a fault," cf. note at Heecyr. III. v. 36; Plaut. Aul. 695, H. G.—Non possum immutari, "I cannot change myself: i. e. my usual timid nature." Colman translates, "I cannot help it nor seem otherwise." Madame Dacier, "Je ne puis pas me changer."

30. Quom hoc non possum (facere, sc.), h. e. "apud me esse."—Illud, h. e. "aliud gravius."—Hoc nil est, "This is nothing," h. e. "nothing of importance." Cf. Andr. II. i. 14, "Id aliquid nil est."—Ilicet, "Let him be off," h. e. Autipho: cf. Heaut. V. ii. 21, note.—Quid hic conterimus operam, &c. cf. Adelph. V. iv. 15, note.—Quin abeo? "But I'll be off."

32. Quid si adsimulo ("me audacem esse," sc.), "Suppose I feign boldness?"—Satinest? "Will that do?"—Garris, cf. Heaut. IV. vi. 19, "Garris, Unde?"—Vultum contemplamini, "Regard my countenance," "Look and see how this face will do."—Hem, istuc serva, "There! keep that expression."—Et verbum verbo, par pari ut respondcas, "And mind you answer him, word for word, and tit for tat." Ut depends on some verb of cautioning implied in "serva." Par pari, Westerhov. compares Plaut. Trueul. v. 47, "Par pari respondet."

36. Ne te iratus scvidicis dictis protelet, "Lest in his anger he should repulse you, put you to flight, with his sharp-spoken words." "Protelo" is a very rare word, occurring only here, in the Latin authors, "mclioris ævi et notæ." It is derived by the old grammarians from $\tau\hat{\eta}\lambda\epsilon$. But Smith (L. D.) derives it from "tendo," by the change of "d" into "l," as in "cicala" from "cicada." Westerhov. derives it from "teluni," in which sense protele is equivalent to "lapides loquatur." See Plaut. Aul. 110, Hildyard, "Lapides loqueris."

38. In ultimā plateā. Cf. Heaut. V. i. 29, "Ultimis in ædibus;" and Madvig. Gr. § 311.

41. Tu jam lites audies, &c. "You will catch a rowing, and I shall be tied up and flogged, or I'm much mistaken." Donatus quotes Heaut. II. iii. 115, "Tibi erunt parata verba, huic homini verbera." See also Eun. V. vi. 20, "Tu jam pendebis." Plaut. Cura. V. iv. 24, "Nulla causa est, quin pendentem me, uxor, virgis verberes."

45. Aufer mi 'oportet', "Away with your 'musts,' prythee." See note at Adelph. V. viii. 14. Gronovius quotes Hor. Sat. II. vii. 42, "Aufer Me vultu terrere;" and below V. vi. 18, "Quin tu hinc pollicitationes aufer." For the taking up "oportet" from the last speaker's lips, compare Ter. Andr. II. i. 14, "Id 'aliquid' nil est;" I. v. 29, "Misera timeo incertum hoc quorsum accidat?"

47. In re incipiundā ad defendendam noxiā, "When we commenced this matter for the purpose of shielding ourselves from blame." For "noxiā" in this sense, see Heecyr. II. iii. 3, "Sum extra noxiā;" Heaut. II. iii. 56, note; Livy x. 19, "Desertori magis, quam deserto noxiā fore."—Vincibilem, "Sure to win" actively. So in Plaut. Most. V. ii. 40; Merc. III. iv. 20, "impetrabilis" is used actively. Adelph. IV. iii. 18, "placabilius. In ver. 49, ipsa refers to "oratione."—Siquid potest, cf. Adelph. IV. i. 5, "Et istoc si quid potis est rectius."

51. Ego in subsidiis hic ero subcenturiatus, "I'll be here in the rear as a reserve." The "subsidia" of the Roman army were the Triarii, or third rank; the "centuriæ" the second and more advanced lines, which were recruited from the rear. Hence, Geta means to say, that he will hang behind to reinforce (succenturiare) Phædria, and supply his place, if he fails. See Plaut. Cure. IV. iv. 29, "Miles pulchrè centuriatus expuncto in manipulo." Bentley, from old editions and MSS., replaced "subsidiis" for "insidiis." For a humorous introduction of military phrases on the stage, see Eunuch. IV. vii. 6, "Ubi centurio est Sanga et manipulus furum?"

ACTUS II.—Sc. I.

DEMIPHO enters, in a rage at his son's marriage, and Phormio's lawsuit. He thinks he might have pleaded some defence, and not yielded so easily. Phædria and Geta listen to his remarks: and at length Phædria accosts his uncle, and defends his cousin, on the ground that he was over-reached, and, when sentence was given, overwhelmed, and so did not answer. Geta joins them, and shows that the hindrance to paying some one else to marry the girl was Demipho's absence, and consequent lack of funds. Demipho is determined to see Phormio, and arrange some reversal of the marriage.

1. Itane tandem, "Is it so then?" For tandem, used in angry interrogations, cf. Andr. V. iii. 4, "Ain' tandem?"—Injussu meo; Hecyr. IV. i. 47; IV. iv. 82, notes.—Nec meum imperium — revereri sultem? "And was he not in awe of my authority. Well, well?" Revereri, the hist. infinitive. For age, mitto imperium, cf. Heaut. IV. i. 24, "At id omitto: misericordia, animus maternus: sino."—Simultatem (th. simul), A coming together, generally hostile, cf. Plaut. Pseud. I. iii. 56, "Ne illam vendas ob simultatem suam;" and Cie. ad Att. ii. 19, where this passage is quoted by Cicero.

4. O Geta Monitor! "Oh, that Geta, his prompter!" Monitor was a title applied to "pedagogues." Ruhnken quotes Hor. A. P. 163, "Cereus in vitium flecti, monitoribus asper." Heaut. V. i. 2, "Adjutor ineus et monitor et premonstrator Chremes."—Vix tandem may mean, "Hold, scarcely that; I've hardly been that to him." Or, as Stalbaum thinks, "So! at last ho's hardly come to speak of me!" "Pene mei oblitus est." This is the view of Donatus.

5. Atqui repperi jam: aliud cura, "Nay, but I've found one already; think of something else." (aside.) Fleckeisen, following Lachmann (Lueret iii. 1050), reads "reperiam," which he places in the mouth of Phædria. Parry combats this change satisfactorily, see his notes here.

7. Verum scientem — causam tradere adversariis, "But wittingly, and without a word to yield the cause to your opponents." According to Gronov. Obs. L. iii. c. xxiii. p. 653, "Donare causam adversariis" was the part of a "prævaricator" or "sham defendant or accuser," "one who plays booty;" said of those who "per malam gratiam causam adversariis tradunt."—Illud durum, "That's hard to answer!" This is in the mouth of Phaedria. Phaedria is less ready than Geta, who is quick to answer the argument, which strikes so home to the other.

10. Animum ad cogitandum instituere, "Settle" or "compose my mind to thinking." Plaut. Most. I. ii. 2, "Argumentaque in pectus multa institui."—Quamobrem omnes — accidat animo novum. These verses appear to have been suggested by the fragment of Euripides's Theseus, quoted by Galen (IV. vii.), Plutarch and others, and to be found in Dindorf's Poet. Scen. Fragm. Eurip. 384. Cicero quotes the verses of Terence and Euripides (translated) in his Tusc. Disp. iii. 14. In ver. 13, Fleckeisen, following Bentley, whose reading is based on Tusc. Disp. I. c., reads—

"Pericla damna peregrediens semper secum cogitet."

Parry, following Westerhov. and others, reads "Pericla, damna, exilia. Peregrediens semper cogitet," making the three asyndetous words an explanation of "ærumnām;" and beginning a new sentence at Peregred. We prefer Fleckeisen's whole arrangement of this passage.

15. Communia esse hæc, "That these things may befall any of us." Cf. Virg. Aen. vi. 105, "Non ulla laborum O virgo nova mi facies inopinave surgit: Omnia præcepi, atque animo mecum ante peregi."

16. Quicquid præter spcm — in lucro. Cf. notes at Adelph. V. iii. 31, 32; Hecyr. III. i. 7; Hor. Od. I. ix. 14, "Quem sors dierum," &c.—Ante eo sapientiā, cf. Plaut. Bacch. V. i. 3, "Solus ego omnes longe anteo stultitiā."—Meditata mihi sunt omnia. For participles of deponents used passively, see Madvig. Gr. § 153. Construe, "All my mishaps, when my master shall have returned, have been thought over." Si= "cum." For meditata, see Cic. Tuscul. Disp. iii. 14, "Sint semper omnia homini humana meditata." Catil. I. x., "Ad hujus vitæ studium meditati illi sunt, qui feruntur, labores tui."

19. Molendumst in pistrino, cf. Andr. I. ii. 28, 29, notes.—Vapulandum, "mihi" sc. "I must suffer beating." Cf. Plaut. Pœn. IV. ii. 33, "Mihi vapulandum est."—Opus ruri faciundum, "I must be set to work on the farm," instead of in the city, a degradation. Cf. Hor. Sat. II. vii. 118, "Accedes opera agro nona Sabino."

25. Salvum venire. Cf. Hecyr. III. v. 7, note.—Creditur. Demipho breaks off his nephew's speech abruptly.—Satin' omnia ex sententiā, "Is all as you could wish?" Cf. Heaut. IV. iii. 5, note; Aulul. H. G. 544. —Vellem quidcm, cf. Adelph. V. i. 13, "Nollem hoc exitum."

28. Bonas — confecisti nuptias, "You have brought about a fine marriage here, in my absence." For "conficere nuptias" see Andr. IV. i. 50; Heaut. V. i. 22. In ver. 29 (an id succenses nunc illi?), id is the accusative of limitation; cf. Andr. II. iii. 3, "Si id succenseat," note.

31. Dari mihi in conspectum, "I long to have my son himself set face to face with me." "Let me but set eyes on him," Colman. Compare Adelph. III. ii. 13, "Quam illam totam familiam dari mi obviam."—Lenem patrem illum, "That that formerly lenient father of his," or "his father so well known for his lenity." Donatus illustrates "illum" by Virg. Aen. ii., "Quantum mutatus ab illo Hectore." See too Andr. I. i. 59, "Nam Andriæ Illi id erat nomen."

34. Ecce autem, "Why look you now!" (in token of astonishment at something unexpected). See notes at Adelph. I. ii. 73; Menæchm.

H. G. 687; Hecyr. III. v. 53. Construe, "Why, lo! it's all of a piece!" — Omnes congruunt, "They are all agreed" in their story, sc. Compare Heaut. III. i. 102, "Ne nosmet inter nos congruere sentiant." — Unum cognoris, &c. For this proverb, compare Virg. Æn. ii. 65, "Accipe nunc Danaum insidias et crimine ab uno Disce omnes." Andr. Prol. 10.

36. Hic in noxiā est. Some read "noxā." Ruhnken and Fleckeisen and others read noxiā, which we retain. Cf. I. iv. 48.—Ille ad defendendam causam ad-est, "One does a fault, the other's hard at hand to bear him out." — Colman. Adest, says Gronovius, is a forensic word, Cic. pro. Milone, c. 14, "Vidi enim, vidi hunc ipsum Q. Hortensium, lumen et ornamentum reipublicæ pene iuertifici manibus servorum, cum mihi adasset." — Praesto est is used in the same sense in the next verse, and in Cic. pro. Murenā. e. q. "Servius præsto multis fuit."

38. Probe eorum — depinxit senex, "The old man has unwittingly drawn a correct picture of their doings." "Depingere" may be taken here in its natural sense, sce Pænul. Pl. V. ii. 154. For imprudens, see Andr. IV. i. 18, note; Plaut. Men. H. G. 326; and Aulul. 23, H. G. &c.

39. Cum illo haud stares, "You would not side with him," "You would not stand by him." Compare Menæchm. 701, "Hinc stas, illinc causam dicis," and Hildyard's note. "Hinc" is, i. q. "a me," the more usual form with "sto" in this sense. This phrase is properly applied to military, and in its secondary sense to forensic, support.—Si est, patrue, culpam ut. For si est — ut, see Adelph. III. v. 4, note; Hecyr. IV. i. 43, note. "Culpam in se admisicit." Cf. Adelph. IV. v. 48, "Me hoc delictum admisisse in me," note.

41. Minus rei aut famæ temperans, "Too inconsiderate as to his patrimony, or his reputation. Rei refers to his marrying a poor girl; famæ, to his marrying one humbly born. For "tempero" as here in the sense of "parco," Parry quotes Hor. Od. III. xxiv. 18, "Illic matre parentibus Privignis mulier temperat innocens." — Ex quâ re=ex quâ culpâ, h. e. "so that by that fault." — Non causam dico quin, "I do not argue against." Cf. Plaut. Aul. 712 (Hildyard), "Haud causifor, quin eam Ego habeam potissimum." Plaut. Capt. III. iv. 92, "Nullam causam dico quin," &c. Casin. V. iv. 26.

45. Vicit, "Has won the suit." Cf. I. ii. 82, "Vincam scilicet;" I. iv. 49, "Vincibilem." — Qui sæpe propter invidiam — addunt pauperi. Diviti, e. g. "Antiphoni;" pauperi, e. g. "Phanio." Lindenbrog quotes from Sotades, Ο πένης ἐλεεῖται, δὲ πλούσιος φθονεῖται. Antiphanes, καλῶς πένεσθαι μᾶλλον ή πλουτεῖν κακῶς. Τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἔλεον, τὸ δὲ ἐπιτίμησι φέρει. Westerhov. observes that the Law of Moses provided against such unfairness, cf. Exod. xxxiii. 3; Levitic. xix. 15.

52. Functus adulcentulist Officium liberalis. For the acc. after "fungor," cf. notes on Heaut. I. i. 14, "Officia fungere;" Adelph. III. iv. 18, "Functus officiuinst viri." — Non potuit cogitatu proloqui, "He wanted power to utter what he had prepared." — Colman. Il n'a pu dire ce qu'il avoit préparé.—Madame Dacier.

57. Bone custos, salve, columen, &c., "How are you, excellent governor, and support of my family." For "custos" see above II. i. 4, "O Geta monitor." Both words refer to the same office.—Columne familie, cf. Hor. Od. II. xvii. 4, "Grande decus, columenque rerum"; I. xxxv. 14, "Stantem columnam;" Plaut. Cas. III. ii. 6, "Sed ecceum egreditur senati columen, præsidium popli" (said, as here, ironically). Adelph. III. iv. 35, "Sonus omnem familiam Sustentat."

60. Immcritissimo, adv. superlative, "most undeservedly." Westerhov quotes from a fragment of Cælius "meritissimo."

62. Scrvum hominem, &c. "A slave the laws will not allow to plead." For the fact here enunciated, see Audr. IV. iv. 32, note. For the substantive used adjectively, "hominem servom," cf. Adelph. IV. vii. 6, "Virginem civeū," note; Pl. Men. H. G. 3, "Hominis captivos; Aul. H. G. 377; Plaut. Ep. III. i. 7. For "causam orare," cf. Heeyr. IV. iv. 64, "Egi atque oravi tecum." Cf. Virg. Æn. vi. 850, "Orabunt causas melius." Cicero in his oration for Sextus Rosc. Amerin. c. 10, uses the phrase, "Ameriam re inoratā reverterunt," h. e. indictā, nullo de re verbo facto.—Neque testimoni dictio'st, "Nor has he the right to give evidence." Dictio is a verbal adjective of the same nature as "Taetio," in Aulul. 377, H. G.; Menæchm. 914, though in these cases the verbals retain the construction of their verb, while here we have the natural construction of the latter of two substantives. Fleckeisen reads in ver. 64, "Do istuc imprudens," &c. But there seems no ground for altering the usual reading, "addo." Some editions have "adde"—the Bembine C. "addo." Colman translates "Nay more!" "The boy was bashful." "I allow it."

66. Sed id quod lex jubet, Dotem daretis, "But as the law enjoins, you should have given her a dower; she might have sought another husband." For this law, cf. I. ii. 75, note &c. For "quæreret alium virum" cf. Heeyr. V. i. 20, "Quære alium tibi firmiorem." Donatus says, that "quaero" indicates "looking out in disgust;" as in Virgil Æn. "Quærat sibi foedera Turnus."

68. Quā ratione &c., "On what reckoning did he marry a penniless girl, rather than give her a dowry?" Potius ("quam dotabat," sc.). Geta punning upon the word "ratio" observes, "nou ratio, verum argentum deerat." "Ce n'est pas la raison qui nous a manqué, c'est l'argent." Madame Daeier. So Plaut. Trinumm. II. iv. 17, "Ratio quidem hercle appareat, argentum oλχεται. "Ratio," in the 69th line, seems to mean the "account" in a money point of view.—Sumeret alicunde (mutuō, sc.), "He might have borrowed it from any one." Geta rejoins, "From any one, eh! that's very easily said."

71. Postremo — fænore, "Last of all, if by no other means, on interest." Ruhnken distinguishes "mutuom" from "fœnus" by the former being "sine usuris," the later "eum usuris." Cf. Plaut. Asin. I. iii. 95, "Nam si mutuas non potero, certumst sumam fœnere." Plaut. Epid. I. i. 51. Fœnus or "fenus" (th. "fetus," fœo, φύω) is=to the Greek τόκος.

72. Siquidem quisquam crederet Te viro. This would be a violation of what Plautus (Pseud. I. iii. 69) calls the "Lex quina vicenaria," which forbade loans to a minor under twenty-five years of age, in his father's life; and rendered such loans, if made, irrecoverable. See also Plaut. Rudens. V. iii. 26. This law was also called "Lætoria lex."—Non, non sic fatrum'st: non potest. Ruhnken illustrates the force of the repeated "non" here, by Livy xxx. 14, "Non est, non (mihi crede) tantum ab hostibus —periculum." See also Adelph. I. ii. 21—22.—Egone illam cum illo ut patiar &c., cf. note on Andr. I. v. 28, "Ein' ego ut advorser." For cum illo — nuptam, see Heeyr. IV. i. 19, note; and ibid. ver. 23.

75. Nil suare meritumst. J. F. Gronovius explains this, "Nil mihi mercedis suave est, ut ego illam cum illo nuptam feram," "No compensation can satisfy me, for," &c.; and Plaut. Men. 134, H. G., "Neque hodie, ut te perdam, meream Deūm divitias mibi," in some degree supports this explanation. But it is simpler and more satisfactory to adopt Parry's explanation that "meritum" is used here, as in V. viii. 25 below, passively; so that we should construe, "No leniency has been deserved." Madame Dacier, in a note on the passage, catches a light upon it in her last words—"Ou plutôt c'est le préterit du verbe qui peut être actif et passif."

78. Jam faxo hic aderit. For "faxo" followed by an indicative, as here, see Plaut. Men. H. G. 240, "Jam ergo haec madebunt faxo," and ibid. 462. Ter. Eun II. ii. 54; IV. iii. 21, "Jam faxo scies." See below V. viii. 66. It more commonly has a subjunctive after it.—Rectā viā, cf. Andr. III. iv. 21.—Nempe ad Pamphilam, is, of course, said aside.

81. At ego Deos penates hinc salutatum, &c., "But I will step aside hence, and go home to salute my household gods;" a usual custom before meeting relations and families, on returning home. Cf. Plaut. Amph. I. i. 25, "Dis advenientem gratias pro meritis agere atque adloqui." Stichus. IV. i. 29, "Deos salutatum atque uxorem modo intro devortor domum."—Amicos advocabo, "I will call some friends to my aid." Cf. Plaut. Amph. V. i 76, "Ego Tiresiam conjectorem advocabo." Hence the use of the word "advocatus," see Ter. Adelph. IV. v. 42, "Advorsumne illum causam dicerem Cui veneram advocatione." Plaut. Men. (Hildyard) 700, "Non equidem mihi te advocationem, pater, adduxi"—Adsident is also used in a forensic sense, cf. above in this scene ver. 36, "Ille ad dicendam causam adest," note.

ACTUS IL.—Sc. IL

GETA having apprised Phormio of Demipho's arrival, and the consequent abandonment of Phanium by Antipho, the parasite prepares to meet the angry father, and, by recalling to Geta's mind former successful tricks, encourages him to hope that he will take the whole business on his own shoulders. He says his boldness arises from having nothing to lose, and from his sponging qualifications.

Metre:—Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

1. Admodum, "Exactly so!" see note at Hecyr. III. v. 8.—Oppido, cf. Heaut. IV. ii. 2, note. Donaldson's Varonianus, p. 93, q. v.—Ad te summa — redit, "The conduct of affairs reverts to, or devolves on you alone, Phormio." For summa rerum, Ruhukken quotes Cesar. Bell. Civ. iii. 5, "Ad hunc summa imperii respiciebat."

4. Tute hoc intristi, h. c. "intrivisti" "You have made this mess: you must eat it all. Set about it then!"—Intero is to "bruise, crumble, or pound."—Intritum, "a mash," cf. Phaedrus I. xxvi. 7, "Intrito cibo Plenam lagenam posuit." Ausonius, Idyll. vii., quoted by Lindenbrog, has "Tibi quod intristi exedendum est; sic vetus verbum jubet, Compedes quas ipse fecit, ipsus ut gestet faber."

5. Obsecro te. "I pray you, help us."—Si rogabit, "Suppose he enquire of me why I act thus."—Eccere, "I have it now." Eccere is, i. q. "Per ædem Cereris," cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 310. It occurs in the Amphitryo and Casina also. Some derive it from "eece, res!" "lo there!" Donaldson's Varronianus, p. 436, agrees with the former explanation—Quid si reddet may mean "What if he reply;" or "What if he return the girl on our hands." In these two lines Phormio and Geta are engaged in their own lines of thought; and it seems a game of cross questions and crooked answers.

7. Jam instructa sunt mi in corde. Cf. Plaut. Pseud. II. iii. 10, "Jam instituta, ornata, cuneta in ordine animo ut volueram Certa, deformata habebam."—Cedo senem is, "Let's have the old man before us!"

9. Antiphonem eripiam atque in me, &c. Cf. Heeyr. III. i. 55, note.—Omnem iram derivem sensi, "Turn all the current of the old man's wrath upon myself." Cf. Cic. pro Milone, c. 10, "Dicam non derivandi criminis causâ."

11. In nervom erumpat denique, "I fear that courage may end at last in the stocks." Cf. IV. iv. 15 below, "Nostra causa scilicet in nervom potius ibit." Cf. Rudens. Plaut. iii. vi. 34, "Melius est te in nervom correperi." Plaut. Aulul. 700, "In nervo," where see Hildyard's Glossary. Festus explains "nervum" ferreum vinculum, quo pedes impediuntur, quanquam Plautus eo etiam cervicee viuciri ait." Gr. ξυλοπέδη. See also Cureul. V. iii. 40, "Tu autem in nervo jam jaebis."

12. Jam pedum visa'st via, "The way of my footsteps is plain." "I can go my own way without getting into the stocks." For factumst periculum above, see Andr. III. iii. 33. Periculum feceris, note.—Dererberasse usque ad necem, "Have cudgelled well nigh to death," said metaphorically, to express "have almost ruined." Madame Dacier translates, "Combien crois-tu que j'ai batu de gens en ma vie"; and Westerhov. illustrates the passage aptly by Plaut. Capt. III. v. 12—14, "Quia me meamque rem — Tuis scelestis falsidicis fallaciis Delace-ravisti, deartuavistique opes."

14. Quo magis novi, tanto saepius, "The better I know the way, the oftener I've done it." After "novi," sc. riam hanc from ver. 12.—Cedodium, en unquam injuriarum, &c. "Come tell me now, I wonder if you ever heard of an action for assault having been brought against me?" For cedodium, cf. Andr. I. i. 123, and I. i. 1. For scriptam dicam, see above I. ii. 77, note.—En unquam, cf. below II. iii. 1. Plaut. Trin. II. iv. 189, "O Pater, En unquam aspiciam te!" Virg. Eel. i. 68, "Eu unquam patrios longo post tempore fines," &c. Eel. viii. 7, "En quid ago." So ην is used before questions in Greek. See Conington's note on Virg. Eel. i. 68.

16. Quia non rete, &c. "Because the net's not spread to catch the hawk Or kite, who do us wrong; but laid for those Who do us none at all; in them there's profit, In these mere labour lost." So Colman, literally enough. Compare for the sentiment Juvenal ii. 63, "Dat veniani corvis, vexat censura columbas." Phormio means to say that the well-to-do are the only persons worth putting into prison; needy fellows like himself are all cost and no profit. For opera luditur, cf. Casina. II. vii. 1, "Meam operam luserim."

19. Aliis aliundest periculum, &c. "Some are exposed to danger from one quarter, some from another, of those, from whom anything can be extorted."—Abredi (cf. Cicero. Cætin. 7), a metaphor from shaving or scraping wood.—Ducent damnatum donum, An allusion to the custom of Roman law, that debtors, when insolvent, should be condemned to slavery in the house of the creditor, and so made to work out their debt. To this the passage of Plaut. Menæch. H. G. 23, refers, "Ad Menæchmum nunc eo, quo jam diu Sum judicatus," where Hildyard explains "judicatus" damnatus, "addictus quasi per judicis sententiam." See also Asin. V. ii. 87, "Judicatum me uxor adducit domum." For alere, "to keep," &c. in the next verse, see Hildyard's Glossary to Menæchm. v. 22, "Non alit." Heeyr. IV. iv. 48. Creditors had to maintain their "nexi."

23. Ab illo, i. e. Antiphon—Immo enim — gratiam regi refert, "Nay rather, no one can be grateful to his entertainer as he deserves." Regi, "the master of the feast," the "arbiter bibendi," who had the "regna vini." This interpretation is given by Westerhov., but the general interpretation is, that "regi" here means "patron;" and Parry quotes Plaut. Stich. III. ii. i. 2, "Tam confido quam potest Me meum obtenturum regem ridiculis meis;" and Juvenal. i. 135-6 in confirmation of this. The general sense of "entertainer" meets both views, which are in fact much akin.—Ten' asymbolum venire, h. e. ἀσύμβολον δειπνεῖν, "For you at free cost to dine." Cf. note at Andr. I. i. 61, "Symbolam dedit;" Eun. III. iv. 2, "De symbolis esse." Compare also the use of "immunem" in Hor. Od. IV. xii. 22, "Non ego te meis Immunem meditor tingere poculis."—Uncut et lautum, &c. An allusion to the Roman luxury of the bath before dinner. Cf. Plaut. Trinumm. II. iv. 5, "Comesum, expotum, exustum, elotum in balneis." Pers. I. iii. 10, "Lautum credo e balneis Jam hic adsuturum."

26. Otiosum ab animo, "Easy as regards my mind." Cf. Plaut. Aul. 178 (Hildyard), "Innoxium abs te atquo abs tuis," h. e., "quod ad te et tuos attinet." Plaut. Trueul. IV. iii. 59, "Ab ingenio est improbus." In Andr. V. ii. 1, q. v. we have, "animo otioso."—Ille ringitur, "He chafes." Cf. Hor. Ep. II. ii. 128, "Quam sapere et ringi." "Ringi" is, primarily, "to grin like a dog," "to show the teeth,"—Prior decumbas, "You are the first to be seated at table." Cf. Asin. V. i. 1, "Agedum, decumbamus sis, pater." "Discumbere" is more common in this sense, Cic. in Verr. i. 26, "Mature veniunt, discumbitur."—Cœna dubia adponitur, "A dinner is served, of which you are puzzled what to eat first." So Horace Sat. II. ii. 77, "Vides, ut pallidus omnis Cœnâ desurgat dubiâ." In a somewhat similar sense, Silius Italicus uses "Dubiâ meditatus cuspidé" (iv. 188), where "dubiâ" implies the hesitation of the spear's owner, whom he shall first assail.

30. Rationem incas, "You go into a calculation."—Præsentem deum, "A favouring deity," Virg. Ecl. i. 42, "Nec tam præsentes alibi cognoscere divos." Hor. Od. I. xxxv. 2, "Præsens, vel imo tollere de gradu." Ibid. III. v. 2, "Præsens divus habebitur Augustus."—Post illa jam, ut lubet, ludas licet. "Tout le reste ne sera que jeu," "All that follows will be mere play." For postilla, see Andr. V. iv. 33, note; Plaut. Men. H. G. 256.

ACTUS II.—SC. III.

DEMIPHO has brought with him certain friends to witness his interview with Phormio, and now enters with them, taking counsel as to what he shall do. Geta and Phormio get up a conversation, which they manage that he shall overhear. Phormio blames the avarice of Demipho, whose conduct in regard to Phanium has been influenced by purse-pride. Geta pretends to defend his master hotly. Demipho joins them at this point, and asks the name of the friend of Phormio, whom he (Demipho) is supposed to have forgotten, and whose daughter he scorns for his son. Phormio at first is at fault, but, aided by Geta, gives Stilpho's name. As to the relationship, he has gone into all that in the courts of law. He declines Demipho's offer of five minæ, if he will take back Phormio, and Demipho threatens to turn her out of doors. Phormio says, he had better not.

Metre :—Iambic Trimeter.

1. En unquam, cf. II. ii. 15, note. These words are an appeal of Demipho to his friends.—Adeste quæso, “Prythee stand by me” (as “advocati”). Cf. above II. i. 82, “Amicos advocabo ad hauc rem qui adsient;” and at ver. 36 of the same scene.—Quin tu hoc ages, “Well then, heed me now.” Cf. Andr. I. ii. 15, “Hoccine agis an non?” note. Plaut. Menæchm. 726; Heaut. IV. iii. 16, note.

4. Jam ego hunc agitabo, “I'll soon disturb him,” a metaphor from wild beasts roused from their lairs by the hunter. Cf. Andr. V. ii. 23, “Ego jam te commotum reddam,” note; and Heaut. IV. iv. 8, note.—Pro Deum immortalium (“fidem,” sc.). In ver. 7, Sequimini is addressed by Demipho to the “advocati.”

8. Neque ejus patrem, &c., “And dees he say that he does not know who was her father?” A Greek construction, like οὐδα σε τις εἰ. The sentence depends on an affirmative verb implied in “negat.” There is no need, with Bentley, to doubt the genuineness of ver. 9. Further in the scene Phormio forgets Phanium's father's name, but, as Zeune observes, “Perturbatus non semper memor est dicterum.”

10. Ignoratur parens, “Her father is despised as unknown.” We use the word “ignore,” almost in this sense, of things. Ruhnken illustrates the word by Plaut. Amphit. IV. iii. 14, “Quem omnes mortales ignorant et ludificant, ut libet,” where “ignorare” is explained “aspernari et cognoscere nolle.” Lindenbrog quotes from Menander's Adelphi, ἔργον ευρεῖν συγγενῆ Πένητός ἐστιν οὐδὲ εἰς γὰρ δμολογεῖ· Αὐτῷ προσήκειν τὸν βοηθείας τινὸς Δεόμενον αἰτεῖσθαι γὰρ ἡμα τι προσδοκᾷ. For vide, “Look you now,” said in a rage, see Adelph. V. i. 4, “Illud sis vide Exemplum discipline.”

12. Si kerum insimulabis araritiæ, &c. For this construction, cf. Madvig. Gr. § 293. Plaut. Mil. G. ii. iv. 12, “Qui propudii me maxime innocentem Falso insimulavit?” See Hildyard's Glossary on Menæchm. 703, “Quæ insontem insimules.”—Etiam me ultro accusatum advenit? For ultro, see note at Adelph. IV. iii. 4; Andr. I. i. 73, note.

14. Nam jam adolescenti, &c. Phormio continues as if he had not heard Demipho's observation. Quod is i. q. “propter quod,” “As to the youth, I cannot take offence, If he had not much knowledge of him," Colman.—Homo jam grandior, "Seeing that the man being now somewhat advanced in years;" cf. Virg. Æn. vi. 304, "Jam senior: sed cruda deo, viridisque senectus."—Cui opera vita fuit, φ τὸ ἔργον ἦν δέ Bios, "Whose labour was his subsistence." Ruhnken quotes Plaut. Stich. III. ii. 9, "Nam ut illa vitam repperit hodie sibi;" where as here, vitam= "victum." Beutley from some MSS. reads "Cui in opere vita fuit," and he is followed by Zeune and Fleckeisen.—Ruri fere Se continebat. Cf. Adelph. I. i. 20, "Ille contra hæc omnia Ruri agere vitam." For Ruri see Madvig. § 273, b.

18. Agrum — colendum habebat, "He held land under my father to till," a sign of narrow means. Ruhnken illustrates by Virg. Æn. xi. 520, "Conductaque pater tellure serebat."—Se hunc negligere cognatum suum, "That this man being his kinsman overlooked him." Se refers of course to the old man.—At quem virum! quem, &c., "Aye, and what a man! the very best I have seen in my lifetime." For this form of praise, see Eun. III. v. 42, "At quem deum! qui tempora cœli summa sonitu concutit." For in vita, cf. Heaut. V. iii. 4.—Optimum — quem, is i. q. "Optimum eorum, quos."

21. Vides, te atque illum ut narras, "See what lies you're telling about yourself and him." This is the simplest and only plausible interpretation of an obscure passage. It is borne out by the use of "narro" = "mentior" in Heaut. II. i. 8, "Sua quæ narrat facinora;" Adelph. IV. ii. 18, &c. Bentley ventured to alter the text to "Vidisti nullum, ut narras;" but this is too sweeping an emendation. For I in malam crucem, see Plaut. Men. Prol. 66, "Abstraxitque hominem in maximam malam crucem;" ibid. 242, "Nunquid vis? Ut eas maximam in malam crucem;" Aulul. 413, "Abi in malum cruciatum." So Aristoph. ἐς κόπακας ἐλθεῖν. Construe, "Go to perdition;" "Go and be banged." See Andr. III. v. 15, "Quid meritū's? Cruce!" —Hanc in ver. 23, is "Phanium," of course. Bentley, from the Codex Beinbinus, reads vostram familiam, which Parry and Fleckeisen adopt. —Illiberaliter, cf. Adelph. IV. v. 30, q. v. The antecedent to quam is hanc.

25. Pergin' hero absenti male loqui, &c., "Are you going on to abuse my master in his absence," &c. So Plaut. Capt. III. iv. 32, "Male mihi loqui audes?" Trucul. II. ii. 10, "Pergin male loqui, mulier, mihi?"

26. Dignum autem hoc illo est. "Well! he deserves it!"—Ain tandem, carcer? For tandem here, compare Andr. V. iii. 4, "Ain' tandem, civis Glyceriumst?" "Say you so," &c. See above II. i. 3. Carcer is, i. q. "carcere digne!" Cf. Aulul. 476 H., "Aliqua mala crux," where "crux" is used of a person. Bentley altered "tandem" into "tamen," to amend the metre.—Seque dignas, h. e. "quas ipse debet audire."

31. Bonā veniā, "With your leave," i. q. "pace tuā." Parry quotes from Cicero de Orat. i. 57, "Bonā veniā hujus optimi viri dixerim."—Si tibi placere polis est, h. e. "potest" used impersonally. Construe, "An't please you." For "petis est," cf. Notes to Andria II. vi. 6. In ver. 34, qui is the ablative case.

35. Proinde expiscare, quasi non nosse, "You fish for the answer, just as if you did not know him." Cic. ad Fain. ix. 19, "Nescis me ab illo omnia expiscatum."—Proinde — quasi. So "Proinde — ut," in Plaut. Men. 517, and Amph. Prol. 63.—Ego me nego (nosse, sc.) — redige in memoriam, "Faites m'en souvenir," "Help me to recollect it." Westerhov quotes Cic. ad Fam. i. 9, "Quidque sibi is de so recepisset, in memoriam redigit."

37. Sobrinum tuum, "Your cousin-german." Sobrini (cf. Hecyr. III. v. 8, note) are the children of "consobrini" i. q. "consororini," sisters' children. For enicas, "you worry me," cf. Andr. IV. i. 36, "Cur me enicas?" note.

40. Subjicee, "Prompt me," "Suggest it to me." Ruhnken quotes Virg. Aen. iii. 314, "Vix pauca furenti Subjicio." Propert. I. vii. 20, "Nec tibi subjiciet carmina serus Amor."—Hem, non dico, &c., "Hold! I'll not tell you: you come hither to try me, as if you didn't know him."—Non dico: present for the future, as in Plaut. Men. 148. These words are said aloud to Demipho.—Si meministi — subjicee, aside to Geta. In ver. 42, with atque adeo quid mea, understand "refert," "Well then, if you must have it, what matters it to me." For atque adeo, see Plaut. Men. 47, H. G.—Quid meā, see Hecyr. III. v. 60.

46. At si talentū rem, &c., "But suppose he had left behind him a property amounting to ten talents."—Di tibi maleficiant, "Bad luck to you." For the opposite phrase, cf. Ter. Adelph. V. v i. 19; Plaut. Menæchm. 919, H. G.—Primus essem memoriter Progeniem — proferens, "You would have been the first to set forth by heart your race even from grandsire and great grandsire." The words are used loosely as in Virg. Aen. vii. 56, "Turi us avis, atavisque potens." Atavus is properly the father of "Abavus," the great-grandsire. Cf. Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. iv. 20, "Ibi mei major-s sunt siti; pater, avos, proavos, abavos;" and Persius. Sat. vi. 57—6v, "Progenies terræ? Quare ex me quis mihi quartus Sit pater," &c.—Essem — proferens is i. q. "proferres." Cf. Andr. IV. iv. 36, "Ut tu sis sciens."

49. Ita ut dicis, &c., "It's even as you say; in that case (i. e. had he left me a legacy) if I had come into court (advenissen, ad judices, sc.) I should state how she was related to me. Do you do the like; tell me, how is she akin to me?" Geta observes, Eu, noster, reete, "Bravo, master, that's right;" and then to Phormio, Heus tu, cave! "Look you, sir, take care." For "noster," see Eunuch I. ii. 74, "Eu, noster, laudo."

55. Cujus de stultiā, &c., "Do you talk to me of my son, whose folly cannot be spoken of in fitting terms?"—Judicium de cādem causa iterum, &c. This seems to have been contrary to Greek law. Cf. Deinosth. c. Leptin. p. 502 (Bekker.), οἱ νόμοι οὐκ ἔωσι δἰς πρὸς τῶν αὐτῶν ὑπὲρ τῶν αὐτῶν οὔτε δίκας, οὔτε εὐθύνας, οὔτε διαδικασίας, οὐτ' ἀλλὰ τοιωτο οὐδὲν ἔλει.

59. Quandoquidem solus regnas, "Since you are sole potentate." An invidious sarcasm, at Athens, or Rome, each being Republic. Cf. a like taunt in Adelph. II. i. 21, "Regnumne, Æschine, hic tu possides?"—Judicium adipiscier, "to get the judgment given." "Faire juger une même affaire deux fois," Madame Dacier. Bentley reads "apiscier" (metri gratiā) instead of "adipiscier." The simple verb occurs in Heaut. IV. iii. 15, "Deorum vitam apti sumus." Plaut. Rudeus. Prol. 17, has "litem adipisci."

61. Potius quam lites sector, "Rather than engage in a lawsuit." Cf. notes to Andr. IV. v. 16; Adelph. II. ii. 40.—Itidem ut cognata si sit, "In like manner as if she were my kinswoman, as the law ordains to give a dower, so, away with her, and take five minæ." Demipho resorts to the course which he before suggested that his son should have taken. Cf. II. i. 67, "Sed id quod lex jubet, Dotem daretis; quæreret alium virum."

64. Homo suavis, "Pleasant fellow," ironically. Ruhnken says that "suavis" is i. q. "stultus," comparing the kindred use of ἡδὺς and γλυκῆς, Plat. Hipp. Ma. 288, B.—An ne hoc quidem — publicum'st? "Am I not even to obtain this, which is the common right of citizens?" "Jus publicum" is not here used, says Ruhnken, in its sense as the opposite to "jus privatum." So Cic. Div. i. 5, "Jura communia." For "abusus sis" with an accusative in ver. 66, cf. Andr. Prol. 5, note. The second person used for the third, in the general sense of the French "on" is to be noted here: "When a man has abused," &c.—Ut meretricem, h. e. "quasi esset meretrix."—Amittere, "to get rid of her."

68. Civis in se admitteret. Civis is used in contradistinction to "peregrina;" for "in se admittere culpam" or "turpe," see Ter. Adelph. IV. v. 48; Phorm. II. i. 40; Plaut. Aul. 747, H. G.—Ut cum uno aetatem degeret, i. e. "Not with many, but with one." Cf. Plaut. Cistell. I. i. 79, "Quia ego illum unum nihi exoptavi quicum aetatem degerem." Heaut. II. iv. 12, "Vobis cum uno semel ubi aetatem agere decretumst viro."

71. Ita proximo quidem: ut nos unde? &c., "Just so, to her nearest-of-kin truly. But from what source did she get us for such, or wherefore?" The sentence is broken off by Phormio, interrupting. For "Ohe!" see Adelph. IV. vii. 5; Plaut. Aul. 16, H. G.—Actum, aiunt, ne agas, "Don't lose your labour, as the saying is." Cf. Adelph. II. ii. 24, notes; Plaut. Pseud. I. iii. 28, "Stultus es: rem aetam agis."—Sine modo, "Only let me try," "Let me alone for that." Cf. Eun. I. i. 20, "Quæ me? quæ non? sine modo."

76. Omnia hæc Illum putato, &c. So in Heaut. III. iii. 48, "Pro Menedemo nunc tibi ego respondeo," &c.—Aut quidem cum uxore, "Or indeed I'll forbid him and this wife of his, my house." Adelph. I. ii. 39, "Ubi non erit, fortasse excludetur foras." Sallust. Catil. 28, "Ita illi januā prohibiti."

79. Tute idēm melius feceris, "You'd better do that same to yourself," h. e. "Turn yourself out than your son." This seems the best interpretation, and is that of Donatus. Madame Dacier translates "Vous ne serez pas si méchant que vous dites."—In felix in ver. 81, is i. q. κακοδαιμων, "Wretch." So. Plaut. Cistell. IV. ii. 17, "Ilicet me infelicem et scelestam."—Sedulo, Andr. I. i. 119, note.

82. Quin, quod est Ferendum, fers? "Why don't you endure what must be endured." Cf. Andria. II. iii. 25, "Quin taces?" Virg. Ecl. II. 71, 72. In ver. 88, Hoc age, "Mind me!" "Mark me;" cf. note at Andr. I. ii. 15, "Hoccine agis an non?" Heaut. IV. iii. 16.

90. Ego illam ejiciam, cf. IV. iii. 22, below, "Si illam ejecerit."—Dixi, Phormio, "Phormio, I've said my say." Cf. Hecyr. IV. iii. 5, note; Eun. V. viii. 36.—Dicam tibi impingam grandem, "I'll bring a swinging writ against you," Colman. For "dicam" see above, I. ii. 77, note. Impingam means "I will fasten on you." Parry quotes Plaut. Capt. III. v. 76, "Jubete huic crassas compedes impingier."—Dome me, "compelle" or "arcesse" is understood.

ACTUS II.—Sc. IV.

DEMIPHO having despatched Geta to look for Antipho, consults his "advocati" as to the present posture of his affairs. They do not agree in their views, and leave him in greater doubt than before. Geta returns to say that Antipho is not at home. Demipho determines to await his brother's return, and to go down to the port for this purpose.

2. Impeditum, cf. Andr. III. v. 11, note.—Videtis quo in loco res haec siet. Cf. III. i. 9, below; Heaut. II. iii. 118, "In eum jam res rediit locum."—Quid ago? in ver. 7, is i. q. "Quid agam," pres. for fut., as in Men. H. G. 148, q. v.—Cratinum censco ("interrogandum," se.), "Cratinus, please you, should speak first," Colman.

9. Que in rem tuam sint, cf. Andr. III. iii. 14; Hecyr. I. ii. 27, notes.—Restitui in integrum, "Should be restored to its original footing," i. e. "should be undone." Cf. Cic. in Verr. II. v. 46, "Perditæ civitates—solent hos exitus exitiales habere, ut damnati in integrum restituantur," &c. Here it is used in the force of "rescindi," "should be declared null." For æquom cst et bonum, see Adelph. V. ix. 30; Heaut. IV. v. 40.

13. Ego sedulo hunc dixisse, &c., "I believe my friend here has given his opinion to the best of his ability." Sedulo, see note at Andr. I. i. 119, "A la bonne foi."—Quot homines, tot sententiae. For a parallel, see Hor. Sat. II. i. 27, "Quot capitum vivunt, totidem studiorum Millia." "Autant de têtes, autant d'avis," Madame Dacier.—Suus cuique mos. "Chacun a son gout." Virg. Ecl. ii. 65, "Trahit sua quemque voluntas."

16. Et turpe inceptu'st. So Bentley. Many editors read "inceptum." Construe: "the attempt is shameful."—Ego amplius deliberandum censco. Crito falls back on what the Roman Law called "ampliatio" (cf. Cic. in Verr. act. II. lib. I. c. ix.), "an adjournment." See Long's note in "Bibliotheca Classica." Construe, "My opinion is that the case needs further deliberation." Res magna est, "'Tis a matter of importance." Aulul. H. 728, "Magna res est, quam ego tecum otiose, si otium'st, cupio loqui."—Numquid nos vis? See Ter. Adelph. II. ii. 39, note; Plaut. Men. H. G. 242.—Incertior sum multo, &c. cf. Hecyr. 22. Percontatum—quoad se recipiat, "To inquire how soon he is to return." Cf. I. ii. 98, above, "Quoad senem expectatis vestrum." For percontatum, see note at Hecyr. I. ii. 2.—In tempore, cf. Andr. IV. iv. 44, "Per tempus," h. e. "tempestive." Plautus constantly uses "Temperi" in this sense; cf. Menæchm. H. G. 350, 367.

ACTUS III.—Sc. I.

ANTIPHO enters, full of self-reproach, because he has left his interests to the management of others. Geta reports to him tolerable progress in appeasing Demipho, who is awaiting his brother at the Piræus.

4. Ut ut alia erant, “Howsoever other matters stood, at least you should have consulted the interests of her, whom you now have at home.” For ut ut, cf. Heaut. I. ii. 26; Adelph. II. ii. 40, notes: for consuleres, the imperf. for pluperf., see Andr. IV. iv. 54; Virg. Aen. viii. 643, “At tu dictis, Albane, maneres.”

5. Poteretur. This form of the verb “potior” solves the difficulties of scansion in this passage which would arise from reading “potiretur,” which seems to have been one reading of Donatus. Poteretur is more commonly adopted by editors. But it is clear that but for the i in “potiretur,” that would be the general reading. Parry quotes for the use of “poteretur,” Ovid. Met. xiii. 130, “Tuque tuis armis, nos te poteremur, Achille;” Virg. Aen. iii. 56, “Vi potitur;” Phormio (below) V. v. 2. For Spes opesque, in ver. 6, compare Adelph. III. ii. 34, note. Construe, “All whose hopes and resources,” &c.

7. Equidem, according to Bentley, was not used except with verbs of the first person singular in the age of Terence. And he therefore reads, Et quidem, “Well, truly!” Cf. Key’s Gr. 1453, d. But, as Parry shows, equidem is the MSS. reading at Euu. V. iv. 34, where it is coupled with the third person; and in Propert. III. xxiii. 5, where see Paley’s note.—Qui abieris, h. e. “propterea quod abieris.”—Defecimus, compare I. iv. 52, “Siquid deficias.”

10. Numquid subolet patrī? “Has my father any slight suspicion?” See note at Heaut. V. i. 24; Plaut. Pseud. I. v. 7; Trinumm. III. ii. 72. Compare “Olfecissem,” in Adelph. III. iii. 43.—Nil etiam, “None as yet.” For this sense of etiam, see Andr. I. i. 89, note; III. ii. 23, &c.—Et quid spei porro est. Porro is, i. q. “for the future.”

11. Nisi Phaedria haud cessavit. For nisi, thus used, for “nisi quod,” see Heaut. III. ii. 31; Andr. IV. i. 40.—Nihil fecit novi, “That’s nothing new in him.”—Strenuum hominem præbuit, “Has shown himself a man of energy.” For the omission of “se” here, Westerhov. quotes Cic. ad Fam. v. 18, “Rogo atque oro, te colligas, virumque præbebas.” Smith, in his Dictionary, quotes “præbeo,” used in a neuter sense, Ovid A. A. ii. 685, “Odi quæ præbet, quia sit præbere necesse.” For confutarit, in the next verse, see note at Heaut. V. i. 76, “Dictis confutabitur.”

15. Sic habent principia sese ut dico. So in II. iii. 82, above, “Bene habent tibi principia.”—Tranquilla res est, “All’s calm and quiet.” Cf. Andr. III. v. 14, “Ex tranquillissimā re.”—Mansurusque patrum, &c., “And your father’s going to wait for your uncle.” For this sense of “maneo” compare Plaut. Menæchm. (Hildyard’s Glossary), 328, “Etiam parasitum manes?” Ibid. 936, “Hic me maneo.”

17. De ejus consilio, h. e. “ex ejus consilio,” “By his advice.” Plaut. Bacch. IV. ix. 115, “Fecisse dicas de meā sententiā.”

20. Eccum ab suā palæstrā exīt foras, "See, he comes forth from his training-school." Palæstra is facetiously used to denote the pander's house here, to which Phædria is supposed to go regularly, as to school. So it is used by Plaut. Bacch. I. i. 33, "Penetrare hujusmodi in palæstram, ubi damnis desudascitur." See the whole passage, where the idea implied in the metaphor is very fully worked out. Compare, also, Rudens II. i. 7, "Pro exercitu gymnastico et palæstrico." Parry refers to the facetious use of the term "pedagogus," in I. ii. 94, above.

ACTUS III.—Sc. II.

PHÆDRIA enters, begging three days more of Dorio, the slave-dealer, before he completes the sale of Pamphila to a soldier, as he hopes ere the expiration of that time to raise wherewithal to purchase her himself. Antipho and Geta join with Phædria in urging this delay; but Dorio is hard to move, and will only grant a respite till the next morning.

7. Hei metuo lenonem nequid Suo suat capiti, "Alas! I'm afraid the procurer will—Ge.: work some mischief for himself: That's the same fear I have." Geta anticipates Antipho, who was going to say, "Phædriæ;" and substitutes "suo capiti." For the phrase "suo suat capiti," cf. Plaut. Amph. I. i. 211, "consutis dolis." So the Greeks used βάπτειν. For "suo capiti," see Hecyr. III. i. 54, note. Bentley read "suo capiti fuat," but there is no advantage gained by adopting his conjecture upon this somewhat obscure passage. For Hariolare, "You are dreaming," or "You are mad," cf. Adelph. II. i. 48, note; Plaut. Men. Prol. 76. For Fabulæ, see notes at Andr. I. iii. 19; Heaut. II. iii. 95.

Andr. I. v. 10, note.

16. Ut phaleratis dictis ducas me, &c., "As to try to deceive me by specious words, and to obtain possession of my slave, without paying the price." For this sense of "ducas," compare Andr. IV. i. 20, "Ducere postulas," note.—Phaleratis dictis, i. e. "words in showy trappings." "Phaleræ" were the silver ornaments of horses: hence any thing for mere show. Cf. Persius. Sat. iii. 30, "Ad populum phaleras: ego te intus et in cute novi."—Ductes = "fruaris," verbum obscenum, cf. Plaut. Asin. V. ii. 13.—Gratiis, i. q. "gratis." Cf. Adelph. IV. vii. 26, note, "Si non pretio, gratiis."

17. Miseritumst, "I pity him," h. e. Phædria.—Hei veris vincor, "Alas! what he says is too true." Cf. Heeyr. I. ii. 30, "Vera haec praedicat." Parry adds, Hor. Sat. II. iii. 305, 306, "Stultum me fateor, liceat coucedere veris, Atque etiam insanum."—Quam uterque similis est sui, "How like each is to himself," viz., how completely Phædria acts up to his g norous nature, in listening to reason, and how hard-hearted Dorio is, as might be expected. This is Stalbaum's explanation, the best on the whole.

18. Neque Antiphō aliā, &c. After neque, understand "vellem," and construe, "And I would that this evil had not befallen me at a time when Antiphō," &c. This is Zeune's explanation. The solution attempted by construing "neque aliā," i. e. eadem, is very unsatisfactory. For "Objectum malum," cf. Adelph. IV. iv. 2, note.

21. Nec cum hujusmodi-usus venit ut confictares malo, "And there has never come any need of struggling with an evil of this nature." For "usus venit," see above I. ii. 23, "Mi usus venit, hoc scio." For "confictares," see Andr. I. i. 66, note. It means properly, "to come in contact with."—Imo, id quod aiunt, auribus teneo lupum, "Nay, but, as the saying is, I've got a wolf by the ears." Cf. Aristænet. ii. 3, Ἐγὼ γὰρ τὸν λύκον τῶν ὄτων ἔχω, δν οὕτε κατέχειν ἐπὶ πολὺ δυνατὸν, οὕτε μὴν ἀκίνδυνον ἀφίεναι. Sueton. Tiberius. c. 25, "Cunctandi causa erat metus undique imminentium diseriminum, ut saepe, lupum auribus tenere diceret." Commentators there explain that as the wolf has very short ears, it cannot well be held by them, while if they are let go, there is great risk of being destroyed by the wolf. Bentley needlessly brackets ver. 23, Num neque, &c., but the Greek passage quoted has the same explanation as is given here; a strong evidence that the verse is sound.

24. Ipsum istuc mihi in hoc est, "'Tis just my ease with him," Colman. "Voilà justement où j'en suis avec lui," Madame Dacier.—Heia, ne parum leno sies. Ant pho says to Dorio, "Ha, you're afraid lest you should fail of being a procurer thoroughly." Before "ne" understand "vereris," and compare Plaut. Pers. IV. vi. 4, "Ne nou sat esces leno, id inctuebas miser." As Gronovius says, "Eleganter ponuntur personæ pro moribus certarum personarum," e. g. in Ovid Met. xi. 29, "Pietatem publica causa Resque patrem vicit." Then turning to Phædria, Antiphō adds, Num quid hic conficit? "Has this fellow settled anything," or "arranged anything?"

27. Quam indignum facinus, ancillam ære emptam suo. Said ironically, "What a scandalous act, to sell a girl bought with his own money." Hor. Sat. II. iii. 129, "Servosque tuo quos ære pararis."—Cum illo ut mutet fidem, "And to break his faith with that other fellow." For this passage Gronov. quotes Plaut. Mil. G. IV. iii. 37, "Numquid videtur demutare, atque uti ego Dixi" &c., where demutare is, i. q.

"alius esse;" IV. i. 36, ibid., "Ne istanc amittam et hæc mutet fidem." Pseud. I. iii. 142, "Si tu argentum attuleris, cum illo perdidierim fidem." Something similar is the use of "muto" in the phrase "Haud muto factum," Andr. I. i. 13. Triduum hoc appears to be the accusative of duration of time after "me maneat."—Aufero, "I get." Cf. Heaut. IV. viii. 9, "Ut eſt viā abs te argentum auferretur." Plaut. Epid. II. ii. 9, "Quo pacto abs se argentum auferam."

31. Obtundis, "You dun me." Cf. Andr. II. ii. 11; Hecyr. I. ii. 48, note.—Idem hoc tibi—conduplicaverit, "He will soon repay you twofold this same service which you will have done him." The sense is the same as that of ver. 8 of this scene.—Distrahi, cf. Hecyr. III. v. 42, "Illam a me distrahit necessitas."

35. Neque ego, neque tu. Colman translates, "Can you, Dorio, divide their loves?" Dorio, "Nor I, nor you." And Madame Dacier's rendering is, "Ce n'est ni votre faute, ni la mienne." The inference is implied, "It rests with Phædria, and his power to pay the money."—Di tibi—quod es dignus, duint. For duint, see Andr. IV. i. 42, note; Plaut. Men. H. G. 184; Aul. 23.—Id quod es dignus. The safest course here is to consider id as the acc. after "dignus," because attracted to the case of the relative, and not to base on Andr. V. iv. 38, "Dignus es—odium," and this passage, a claim for "dignus" to an accusative after it. See note at Andr. I. c.

37. Nunc, contra omnia hæc, Repperi, "Now, in direct contrast to all this, I've found one to give and not whimper." For "Contra hæc omnia," cf. Adelph. I. i. 19, note.—Da locum melioribus, "Give place to them that are better off: melioribus," h. e. "ditioribus." The formula was used by the lictors preceding the consul. Cf. Plaut. Curc. II. iii. 1, "Date viam mihi noti atque ignoti."

40. Quam ad dares huic, præstituta, "A day appointed, by which you should pay this man." For "diem præstituere," cf. Pseud. Plaut. I. i. 56, "Ei rei dies Hæc præstitutast." For ad diem dare, "to pay by a certain day," cf. Cæsar B. C. ii. 19, "Edictum præmittit, ad quam diem magistratus—sibi præsto esse Cordubæ vellet." See also, Cic. ad Attic. xvi. 16, "Admonuit ut pecuniam ad diem solverent."

41. Verum hæc ei antecessit, "But this day has come before it." He seems to imply that he has effected the sale to the other bidder a day beforehand. The exclamation of Antipho, "Are you not ashamed of your falsehood?" confirms this view.—Ob rem, "To my interest." Cf. Sallust. Jugurth. c. 31, "Id frusta an ob rem faciam, in vestra manu situm."—Sterquilinium: literally, κοπροδοχέων. Here the thing is used for the person. Cf. Plaut. Pers. III. iii. 3, "Sterquilinium publicum." Cf. Mil. Gl. II. i. 12, "Stercoreus."—Sic sum, "It's my way." So in Andr. V. iv. 16, "Sic, Crito, est hic." Plaut. Amph. II. i. 57, "Sic sum, ut vides."

43. Miles dare se dixit, h. e. "daturum esse se," the present infinitive for the future. Cf. Plaut. Menæchm. H. G. 439, "Dicam curare." Ibid. 954, Dixi petere, h. e. "petitum." Aul. 641, "Impetrassere," for "impetraturum esse." Ovid. Met. ix. 444, "Credens quo suis iu surgere regnis," h. e. "insurrecturum."

49. Med lege utar, &c., "I'll follow my old rule." "The first to pay shall be first served." Med lege, h. e. "lenonia," which prefers "interest" to "honesty."

ACTUS III—Sc. III.

PHÆDRIA is in a strait, how to get the money. Antipho, grateful for Phædria's aid to himself, urges Geta to devise some plan for raising it. Geta comes into the matter somewhat unwillingly, and, after hearing Phædria desperate, he at last undertakes to do the only practicable thing—have recourse to Phormio.

Metre:—Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

2. Quod si hic potuisset nunc exorarier, &c. This is the reading of Westerhov. The Bembine MS. reads pote fuisset without nunc. Bentley, for "hic," reads "hinc," h. e. "ab lenone." But the text as it stands will yield a satisfactory sense, "But if he could now have been persuaded out of these three days." Exoro is one of those verbs which, in the active, take two accusatives, and in the passive voice an accusative of the more remote object. Cf. Madvig. § 228, a. b.; Hecyr. IV. iv. 23, note.—Adjuerit, contracted from "adjuverit." Bentley reads "adjūrīt." Fleckeisen, following Faernus, reads, in ver. 5, "experimur" instead of "experiāmūr," and places a note of interrogation at the end of ver. 4. Construe, "Why don't we, at his need, try to render him a kindness in return?" Cf. Andr. II. iii. 25, "Quin taces?" note.

8. Dictum sapienti sat est, "A word to the wise." Plaut. Pers. IV. vii. 19.—Etiā tu hinc abis? "Are you not off yet?" "Begone, won't you?" Cf. for "etiam," Andr. V. ii. 8; Adelph. IV. ii. 11, notes.

10. Non triumpho, ex nuptiis tuis, &c., "Can't I triumph at taking no hurt out of your nuptials, without your also now bidding me, for the sake of your cousin here, seek punishment in mischief," or rather "greater trouble in the midst of trouble." For "triumpho," see Heaut. IV. ii. 5, "Triumpho si licet me laterc tecto abscedere." For "nanciscor," used of bad luck, see Andr. V. vi. 3, note; Therm. III. i. 5, above.—Quærere in malo crucem, h. e. "malum sumnum," cf. Plaut. Men. 6; Hildyard, "Namque homini misero si ad malum accedit malum."

14. Ni instigemus etiam, &c., "Unless we furthermore provoke him, so that no place be left for entreaty." For "preci," see Andr. III. iv. 22, note. "Parum" and "locus," Parry observes, are to be taken as monosyllables. For a parallel to the next verse, see Adelph. IV. v. 20—35.

18. Quoquo hinc asportabitur, &c. For "Quoquo terrarum," cf. Heaut. V. i. 54, "Quovis gentium." Madvig. 284, obs. 9 and 11. Asportabitur is, i. q. "absportabitur."—Certum est, "I'm resolved." Cf. Andr. I. iii. 4, "Nec quid agam certumst." Virg. Ecl. x. 52, 53, "Certum est in silvis, inter spelæa ferarum Malle pati." Plaut. Mercator. V. ii. 16, "Certa res est Mo usquo quærere illam, quoquo hinc abducta est gentium."

19. Di bene vertant, quod agas. Cf. Hecyr. I. ii. 121, note.—Pedetentim tamen, "persecuraris," sc. h. e. σπεῦδε βραδέως, Stälbaum. Geta says, "God speed your object—only proceed cautiously." Pedetentim, i. e. "pedibus tentando."

21. Ne quid plus minusve faxit, &c. Cf. Hecyr. V. i. 4, notes; Plant. Captiv. V. iii. 18, "Cur ego plus minusque feci quam æquum fuit."

—Quero, “I’m seeking a plan,” cf. Andr. IV. i. 59, note, “Quero.” Fleckeisen reads, “Salvos est, ut opinor,” as a speech in the mouth of Antipho. Geta is made to rejoin Verum enim metuo malum, “Yet in truth I fear some mishap.” This is not an unlikely reading of the passage. But the verse will stand, if supposed to proceed entirely from Geta.

23. Bona mala tolerabimus, “We will endure good or ill fortune” Cf. Ter. Adelph. III. iv. 50, “Paupertatem una pertulimus gravem.” Virg. Aen. ii. 709, “Unum et communue periculum, Una salus ambobus erit.” For “opus” used adjectively, as in the next verse, cf. Andr. II. i. 37, note, “Nisi ea quae nil opus sunt sciri.”—Istuc vero vilius est, “Nay, a girl like that is cheap.”

26. Age, age, inventas redilam, “Well, well, I’ll find and hand over the money,” i. q. “inveniam et reddam”—O lepidum, “caput” is added in most MSS. but not in the Bembine. The verse “Abi: dic, præsto ut sit domi,” which follows ver. 27 in some copies, is not found in the Bembine, and does not seem necessary.

29. Solus est homo amico amicus. Mil. Gl. III. i. 66, “Qui amicus amico sit magis.” Solus here means “preeminently,” as in Ter. Andr. V. vi. 9, “Solus est quem diligunt Di.” Apollodorus has μόνος ἐπίσταται φιλεῖν τούς φίλους.—Illam miseram, h. e. Phanum.—Exanimatam metu, “Breathless with fear,” cf. Heeyr. V. iii. 27, note.—Dicam in itinere, “I will tell you on our road.” Bentley here and at Heaut. II. iii. 30, reads “itere” for “itinere.” But this form seldom occurs except in Lucret. v. 652. “Iteris” is used by Nævius, 38 (Ribbeck’s Trag. Lat. Reliquiæ), “Ignotæ iteris sumus.” Attius. ibid. 499, has “Longo ab itere.”

ACTUS IV.—Sc. I.

CHREMES and Demipho talk over the voyage of the former to Lemnos, whither he had gone to bring home his daughter, with a view to her marriage with Antipho, his nephew. Finding, on reaching the island, that mother and daughter had sailed for Athens, and arrived there, he returned at once. His plans are upset by Antipho’s conduct: and he shrinks from marrying his daughter to a stranger, to whom he will have to disclose her parentage, and his own intrigues.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Quid? quā profectus causā—Adduxtin, &c. Here quid causā is the relative clause with the sentence Adduxtin—fliam as its antecedent: “How now? Have you brought with you your daughter, for the sake of whom you set out?” &c. For a similar sentence see Plaut. Bacch. II. iii. 15. In ver. 3, videt is the historic present.

4. Non manebat—Meam negligentiam, “Could not wait for my negligent delay.” For this sense of “maneo,” see above III. ii. 4; Hor. Od. I. xxviii. 33, “Debita jura vicesque superbæ Te maneant ipsum.” Parry refers to Adelph. IV. v. 38, “An sedere oportuit Domi virginem tam grandem, dum cognatus hinc Illinc veniret expectantem?” q. v.—Familia “servants.” Cf. Plaut. Men. H G. Prol. 74 and 525.

"Familia" (says Cicero, pro Cæcina 19), "constat ex servis pluribus." See also Heaut. IV. v. 3, note.

9. Senectus ipsa est morbus. τὸ γῆράς ἐστιν αὐτὸν νόσημα, Apollodorus. Plaut. Menæchm. 658—60. Merc. 664, "Tantum hoc onerist, quod fero. D. Quid oneris? S. Annos octaginta et quatuor." — Audiri ex naufragio; so in Plaut. Mil. Gl. IV. iii. 16, "Nauclerus dixit, qui illas advexit, mihi." "Nauta" seems to have the sense of "nauclerus."

12. Quod quidem me factum, &c., "Ay, an act which makes me wavering in purpose." We must understand "immo audivi." For "consilium incertum," cf. Hecyr. I. ii. 46, "Animi incertus," and Madvig. 289 b.—Nam hanc conditionem si cui tulero, &c., "For if I shall have proposed this match to any one unconnected with us." For "conditio," in this sense, see Plaut. Aul. H. G. 194, "Tu conditionem hanc accipe." Andr. I. i. 52, note.—Extrario is a word not often used: but in the notes to Suetonius: Vespasian c. 5, "Canis extrarius" is explained "qui erat extra focum Vespasiani;" it is so explained also by Festus, who says extrarius is "qui extra foenum, sacramentum, jusque est." Extraneus= "exterraneus." — Quod pacto aut unde, &c., "I must tell from beginning to end how, or by whom she is mine." For this use of ordine, see Plaut. Men. H. G. 581; Virg. Æn. iii. 179, "Remque ordine pando."

17. Tucebit, dum intercedet familiaritas, "He will hold his peace, so long as there shall subsist intimacy between us." For intercedet, see Hecyr. III. i. 24; Andr. V. v. 5, notes.—Plus quam opus scito est, see Madvig. 266, obs.; Adelph. V. ix. 39, note; Andr. III. ii. 10, note.

20. Ut me excutiam, "To strip myself of everything." Plaut. Aul. 600, "Excutedum pallium." Hor. Sat. II. iii. 19, "Aliena negotia euro excussus propriis." Parry adds, Hor. Od. III. ix. 19, "Si flava excentitur Chloe," and says that the observations of Chremes indicate that he has married a woman with a fortune, and is therefore in her power. Ruhnken explains "ut me excutiam," "ut me ejiciam domo," "to hurry forth."

21. Ego meorum solus sum meus, "I've only myself, of my belongings, that I can call my own." Meorum seems to refer to the "household," with a general sense of "qui mihi faveam," "I alone of my allies can be counted upon by myself." Apollodorus has ἔγώ γὰρ εἰμι μόνος τῶν ἑμῶν ἑμός.

23. Neque adeo defatiscar—Donec, "Nor shall I ever tire of trying till the very moment of my accomplishing," &c. For adco—donec, see Andr. IV. i. 38, "Urque adeo donec perpulit."

ACTUS IV—SC. II.

GETA soliloquises on the cleverness of Phormio, whom he has seen, and prepared to aid Phædria and Antiphædria, at once; a recommendation to the scheme in Phormio's opinion. The parasite understood the case before it had been half detailed, and had gone off, full of meeting Demipho, and getting the money from him. Geta sees Demipho and Chremes coming up together, and determines to try Demipho first, and, failing him, apply to Chremes.

Metre :—Iambic Trimeter.

3. Argentum opus esse, “That money is needed.” Opus is used adjectively, as in Heaut. V. i. 20; Andr. II. i. 37, note; above, II. iii. 93.—Ficeret, h. e. “conficeretur.” Pseud. I. iii. 68, “Fieri possunt præsentes minæ.” See too Phorm. I. i. 4, note.—Tempus sibi dari Ubi, “That an opportunity was afforded him, in which he might,” &c. Ubi = “in quo,” Parry and Fleckeisen prefer Lachmann’s simple emendation of the common text, Phædriæ se—Amicum esse, which was metrically faulty, namely, reading “Ubi Phædriæ esse—Amicum sese.” For reasons against Bentley’s “Phædriai,” see Audr. II. vi. 8, note.—Ad forum is i. q. “apud forum,” cf. Andr. I. v. 19.

11. Pertimui autem bellua, “Yet what was I afraid of, simpleton!” Bellua, a term of self-reproach. Cf. Eun. IV. iv. 36, “Age nunc bellua Credis huic quod dicit!” Plaut. Trinumin. IV. ii. 110, “Næ tu me elepol arbitrale belluam.”

13. Duplici spe utier, “To have two strings to my bow.” Westerhov quotes Ovid. Remed. Am. 449, “Qui sibi jampridem solatia bina paravit.”—A primo, “At first,” as ad primum is sometimes used for “primum,” cf. IV. iii. 37, “A primo homo insanibat.” Plaut. Mostell. III. ii. 139, “Quin multum improbiores sunt quam a primo credidi.” For adoriar in ver. 15, cf. Heaut. IV. v. 9, “Cesso hunc adoriri.”

ACTUS IV—Sc. III.

ANTIPHO finds Geta with his father and uncle, trying to extort from them by subtlety the sum needed by Phædria. He listens to the conversation, unperceived; but without getting any clear notions of what is the scheme of Geta and Phormio. Geta tells the old man that Phormio will take back Antipho’s wife, Phanium, and marry her himself, if a dower of 30 minæ be given with her. Phormio, he says, had stickled for a talent, but he had beaten him down to 30 minæ. This Demipho thinks too much: but Chremes engages to pay it, thus getting rid of Phanium, and dissolving Antipho’s wedlock.

Metre :—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Recipiat se. Cf. II. iv. 22, above.—Venire salvum volup est, “I’m glad to see you’re safe arrived.” Volup is a neut. substantive according to Hildyard on Menæchm. 579, Glossary—Terence Hec. V. iv. 17, “Benefactum et volup est”—Quid agitur, Adelph. III. iii. 19, note.

6. Multa advenienti—compluria, “J’ai trouvé, à l’ordinaire, bien des nouvelles en arrivant,” Madame Dacier. Compluria is explained by Donatus as an old form of “complura” formed from “complure,” the old form of “plus.”—Faeinus indignum, cf. III. ii. 26.

9. Sic circumiri, “To be thus overreached.” Cf. Plaut. Pseud. III. ii. 109, “Nam eum circumire in hunc diem.” So “circumveniri” is very commonly used. Cf. Ter. Hec. Prol. Alt. 46.—Id eum hoc agebam commodum, “I was touching on that point with my brother here, this very moment” (commodum). For the use of this word as a neuter adv. Gronov. quotes Plaut. Amphitr. II. ii. 37, “Ad aquam præbendam commodūm adveni domum." Casin. III. iv. 3, "Ad te hercle ibam commodūm." Rudens. II. vi. 35; Merc. I. ii. 106. So also Eun. II. iii. 52, "Illa sese interea commodum hic adverterat."

13. Is qui istam—"aposiopesis," "The fellow, who as to that girl." Understand "defendit," or some such word; which Geta, to chime in with Chremes's disgust, leaves unsaid. The emphasis is laid on istam. —Prendo hominem solum, "I accost the man when alone." Cf. Andr. II. ii. 16, note; Plaut. Mil. Gl. i. 60, Reprehenderunt.

16. Hæc patius cum bona, &c. Cf. Hecyr. III. v. 29, note; Virg. Ecl. III. 108.—Fugitans litium, "Averse to lawsuits." For this construction of the genitive of the object after a participle used as an adjective, see Madvig. §§ 289, a.

20. Uno ore—præcipitem hanc daret, "All the rest of his friends but now with one mouth advised him to turn her out of doors." Uno ore, Andr. I. i. 69.—Auctores fucre, cf. Adelph. V. viii. 16, note; Key's Gr. § 909.—Præcipitem daret. So "agere" is used by Cic. in Verr. I. iii. "Agunt eum præcipitem pænae civium Romanorum."—Quo evadet hodie, "Where will all this end?" Colman. Cf. Andr. I. i. 100, "Quam timeo, quorsum evadas."

23. Jam id exploratum est, "That matter has been already looked into."—Sudabis satis, "You'll have trouble enough." Compare Hor. A. P. 241, 242, "Sudet multum frustraque laboret Ausus idem." Cic. iii. Ep. 12, "Vides sudare me, jamdudum laborantem quomodo ea tuear," &c.

25. Verum pono esse victimum eum, "But I'll suppose him cast in his suit." Pono is the reading of Bentley after the Bembine MSS. instead of "pone."—At tandem tamen, &c., "Yet even then after all it's not a question of life with him, but of money." Cf. Heaut. III. i. 67, "Non nunc pecunia agitur." Hor. Ep. I. xviii. 84, "Nam tua res agitur, paries cum proximus ardet." In ver. 29, dari tibi in manum = "to be paid down to you," as Præ manu is used in Adelph. V. ix. 23, q. v.

30. Hæc hinc facessat, tu molestus ne sies. These clauses, with the one immediately preceding, are "asyndetons." Geta represents himself as asking Phormio what consideration he will accept, on the understanding that "his master desists from the lawsuit, on the one part, and that, on the other, Phanium (hæc) takes herself off, and Phormio puts no obstacle in the way." For "hinc facessat," cf. Menæchm. H. G. 166, "Dictum facessas doctum;" and Livy i. 47, "Facesset hinc Tarquinios." There seems to be an ellipse of "sc."

31. Satin' illi Di sunt propitiū? h. e. "Is he in his senses?" Compare Andr. IV. i. 40, "Deos fuisse iratos," note; and Phorm. I. ii. 24, "Memini relinqu me Deo irato meo." For æqui bonique, cf. Heaut. IV. v. 39, note. Construo, "If you act reasonably in some measure."—Ut est ille bonus vir, tria non commutabitis, &c., "Such is that excellent man, my master's goodness, that you'll not have to bandy three words," &c.; cf. Andr. II. iv. 7, note. For a primo, in ver. 37, see above at IV. ii. 14.

38. Quid? nimium quantum libuit, "How? So then what he wanted was a great deal too much." For such phrases as nimium quantum, see Horat. I. xxvii. 6, "Inmane quantum," and the Greek, οὐράνιον θσον, θαυμαστὸν θσον, ἀμήχανον θσον, &c. Cic. de Fin. iv. 25, has "nimium quantum;" as also Syminachus, vii. 16; Livy. ii. 1, "Mirum quau-tum." Bentley wished to omit "libuit," adding "quantum" before "die" to the words of Chremes. But of this there is no need.—Talentum magnum, h. e. an Attic talent = 60 minæ, or 6000 Attic drachmæ. Cf. Plaut. Aul. H. G. 264.

40. Quod dixi adeo ei, "Just what I said to him." For the sense of adeo, see Andr. I. i. 135, &c. The words that follow seem to flow from Geta, in reference to his master, "What more, prythee, could he do, if he were giving in marriage an only daughter? It has been small gain to him not to have had a daughter; for one has been found, to look for a dower from him." For "locaret," said of giving daughters in marriage, cf. Aulul. H. G. 149, "Neque eam queo locare cuiquam," "in matrimonium," sc. Plaut. Trinumm. III. iii. 52, "Ubi erit locata virgo in matrimonium," Phorm. IV. vi. 25, below.—Parvi retulit, cf. Hecyr. IV. iii. 12, note; Adelph. V. iv. 27, note.—Ad pauca ut redeam, cf. Hecyr. I. ii. 60, note.

47. Nam mihi veniebat in mentem, &c. For the impersonal construction, which is the explanation of the passage, if we read with Bentley "incommodi," see Hecyr. III. iii. 45, note. But editors are generally agreed in retaining "incommodeum" here, as in Eun. II. ii. 2.—Aliquantulum quæ afferret, &c., "One who should bring with her a little sum wherewith I might discharge my debts." Parry illustrates dissolverem by Cic. in Verr. II. iii. 75, "Pecuniam publicam tenueris omnem, neque quicquam ulli dissolveris civitati." Caesar. Bell. Civ. i. 87, "Pecuniam pro iis rebus dissolvit."

56. Quid si animam debet. Commentators quote a Greek proverb, καὶ αὐτὴν τὴν ψυχὴν ὀφείλει. The phrase is used of those who owe more than they can pay, perhaps with some reference to a creditor's right over life and limb of insolvent debtors.—Ager oppositust pignori, &c., "A farm, said he, has been mortgaged for 10 minæ." Cf. Plaut. Curcul. II. iii. 77, "Ille suum anulum opposivit." Catull. xxvi. 1—4, "Furi, villula vestra non ad Austri Flatus opposita est—Verum ad millia quindecim et ducentos." Pseud. Plaut. I. i. 85, "Si me opponam pignori."

60. Tum pluscula suppelletile opus est, "B-sides we need some little more furniture." In ver. 62, pone is, i. q. "Set down" or "reckon." Unless we attach to it the sense of "suppose," as above, at ver. 23, of this scene.

63. Sexcentas proinde scribito, &c., "Well then, let him bring any number of writs against me." For sexcentus, used here indefinitely for any number, cf. Aulul. H. G. 472, "Treceni." Plaut. Trinumm. III. iii. 62, "Sexcentæ ad eam rem possunt causæ conligi." Hor. Od. III. iv. 79, "Amatorem trecentæ Pirithoum cohibent catenæ." Hor. Sat. II. iii. 116, &c. For "dicas," see above I. ii. 77, note. Do is, i. q. "dabo."—Impuratus me ille ut etium irrideat, understand "visne," or some such verb, and see note on Hecyr. I. i. 9, "Utin eximum neminem habeam." For "impuratus," Ruhnken refers to Plaut. Rudens. II. vi. 59, "Impurata bellua."

67. Getu occidisti, &c., cf. note on Adelph. V. vii. 1.—Mea causa ejicitur, "Phanium" sc. For ejicitur, cf. II. iii. 90, "Ego illam ejiciam." For Quantum potest in ver. 69, compare Andr. V. ii. 20, note. Plaut. Men. 340, H. G. Aulul. 80. Construe, "as quickly as possible."

72. Illis repudium renunciet, "Let him report to that other family his repudiation of her that was betrothed to him." "Repudium" was said of a "breaking off" between betrothed persons; "divortium" of one between married persons. Cf. Plaut. Aulul. 740, "Is me nunc renuntiare repudium jussit tibi." See Hildyard's Glossary. Compare also V. vii. 35, below.—Quæ quidem — vertat male, cf. Adelph. II. i. 37, note.

75. Fructum quem Lemni uxoris reddunt prædia, "The income which my wife's farms at Lemnos yield." Cic. in Catil. ii. 8, speaks of "Id quod est stultissimum, certare cum usuris fructibus prædierum," i. e. "trying to pay the interest of money with the proceeds of the land." Cf. Catull. cxiv. (Doering.), 4, "Fructus sumptibus exsuperat." "Reddo" is also properly used of the returns made by land to its owner. Ruhnken quotes Columella de Re Rust. II. 13, "Reddit pratum in pabulo non minus quam in fœno."

ACTUS IV.—Sc. IV.

ANTIPHO turns upon Geta, with reproaches against him for the line he has taken in reference to Phanium. He will have to lose her, through Geta's fault. Geta explains that all will be well. Phormio will receive the money, and be in no hurry to take Phanium home. This delay will allow the money to be raised elsewhere, and repaid to the old men. Phædria will have got the money he needs; and Phanium will remain with Antipho.

Metre:—Iambic Trimeter.

1. Emunxi argento senes, "I've cheated the old men out of their money." "I've cleared them out of it." "Emungo" is literally "to wipe the nose;" hence, "to cheat or outwit." Cf. Plaut. Bacch. IV. iv. 50, "Emungam hercle hominem probè hodie;" V. i. 15, "Miserum me auro esse emunctum." Epid. III. iv. 58, "Qui me emunxisti mucidum," where Lambinus explains the phrase "tanquam puerulum, cuius nasus mucoris plenus, omnisque consilio est expers, delusum argento spoliasti." See also Mostell. V. i. 60, "Probe Me emunxi." So, Gr. ἀπομύττειν. See also Hor. A. P. 238, "Emuncto lucrata Simone talentum."

2. Satin' id est? "Well, is that enough?" i. e. "to have got the money out of the old men, without considering the means taken to that end." Geta, purposely misunderstanding Antipho's meaning, rejoins, Tantum jussus sum, "Twas all my orders."

5. Ad restim mihi — rediit planissimè, "By your means my case has been absolutely brought to an affair for the halter;" "I am driven to hang myself." For like phrases, see Plaut. Poen. I. ii. 184, "Capias restim et te suspendas," &c. Pseud. I. i. 86, "Restim volo Mihi emere." Martial. iv. 69, "Nihil Ammiano, præter aridam restim Moriens reliquit ultimis pater ceris." Cf. also Andr. I. v. 20, and Soph. Oed. Tyr. 1374, ἐργ' ἔστι κρέσσον τὸ γχθνης εἰργασμένα.

7. Malis exemplis, "By condign punishments." Cf. Eun. V. iv. 26, "In quæ exempla sient." — Hem, siquid velis Huic mandes, qui te ad scopulum, &c. In spite of their absence from the Bembine and other

MSS., we must follow Bentley in retaining "Qui te — auferat" after "Huic mandes," and rejecting "quod quidem recte curatum velis" as an interpolation derived from Adelph. III. iii. 18, and a useless repetition of "si quid velis" in the line above. Construe, "Look you, if you want anything done, entrust it to this fellow to bring you out of smooth water against a rock." For Huic mandes, cf. Adelph. III. iii. 18, note; Asin. I. i. 107. Lucret. ii. 1170 has the phrase, "Ire Ad scopulum spatio etatis defessa vetusto."

9. Quid minus utibile fuit, &c., "What could have been less serviceable than to touch this sore." For utibile, cf. Plaut. Menaechm. (Hildyard's Glossary) 879; Mil. G. 611. For Tangere ulcus, cf. with Parry, Ovid Trist. III. xi. 63, 64, "Deque gravi duras ulcere tolle manus," where however Merkel reads "vulnera." See also Cic. pro Dom. c. v., "Tu in hoc ulcere tanquam inguen existeres." For Posse illam extrudi, in ver. 11, compare Plaut. M. G. IV. i. 30, where Lambinus reads "Ut mulierem extrudam foras."

13. Non enim ducet, "Why to be sure, he won't marry her." For this sense of "enim" i. q. "enimvero," cf. Plaut. Men. 85. H. G., "Egone? Id enim quod tu vis," &c. see below at V. viii. 90, Heccr. II. i. 41, note.—Nostrā causā scilicet In nervum potius ibit, "On my account forsooth he will prefer going to gaol" For the phrase in nervum ire, cf. above, II. ii. 11, note; Curculio. V. iii. 40. These words are, of course, ironical.

16. Quin male narrando, &c., "Many a tale is spoilt in telling," Colman. Westerhov. quotes a counter statement from Cic. Paradox. i., "Nil est tam incredibile quod non dicendo fiat probabile," &c. Geta explains the process in the next verse.—Tu id quod bonist excerpis, "You take out of your statement all the good there is." For "excerpis," see Hor. Sat. I. iv. 40, "Primum ego me illorum — Excerptam numero."

20. Spatium quidem tandem adparandis, &c., "At least some little space will be allowed for getting ready the nuptials, for invitations, for sacrificing." Madame Dacier reads "adparandi nuptias," evidently to make ver. 21, follow without change of construction on ver. 20. But this is unnecessary. For "sacrificandi," see Aulul. 534 (Hildyard). "Eo lavatum, ut sacrificem," where Gronovius quotes from Servius the statement that "uxorem ducturi saerificiis semper auspicabantur." Compare Adelph. IV. v. 65, "Abi domum, ac deos comprecare ut uxorem arcessas."—Paululum agrees with "spatium." In ver. 23, Inde iste reddet, "Out of that he will repay." Inde is i. q. "ex eo," as constantly in Terence; or it may be for "ex iis," "from that source," or "those friends." Westerhov. reads "id ille istis reddet." But "indo iste reddet," is the reading of the C. Bembin. approved by Bentley.

24. Quot res? Postilla, monstra evenerunt mihi. We prefer the reading and punctuation common to most editions, and understand "dicere poterit Phormio." For "postilla," see Andr. V. iv. 33, note; Phorm. II. ii. 33. It means here "from the time of my betrothal" &c. If the whole line is read without any stop, "monstra" must be in apposition with "res," which is awkward and inelegant.—Ater alienus canis, "A strange black dog." Plaut. Cas. V. iv. 4, "Caninam scævam spero meliorem fore."

26. Anguis per impluvium, &c., "A snake fell from the tiles through the sky-light." Bentley after Guyetus, reads "in imnluvium." Im- plurium is properly the tank in the middle of the "atrium" to receive the rain. Complurium, "the sloping roof above," which is here meant; as also in Eun. III. v. 41, "In alienas tegulas Venisse clanculum per impluvium." Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. ii. 4, "Ita per impluvium intro spectant." In Plaut. Amphitr. V. i. 56, "Decidunt angues jubati deorsum in impluvium duo," we have a parallel to the omen here mentioned, and "impluvium" used in the proper sense. See for the same omen Livy, i. 56, "Anguis ex columnâ ligneâ elapsus."

27. Gallina cecinit, "A hen crowed," "a sure sign that the husband would die first." Faber gives the French proverb, "La poule a chanté le coq."—Interdixit hariolus, "The soothsayer forbade the marriage." For "hariolus," th. "fari," see Plaut. Men. Prol. 76, H. G.; Plaut. Mil. Gl. III. i. 99, "Hariolæ, atque haruspicæ." The distinction between the two probably is, that "hariolus" divined the future from general omens, the "haruspex" from signs discovered in the sacrificial victims. "Haruspex" is derived from "hira," an intestine, and "spicio;" from the same origin comes "haruga," or "arviga." See Smith's Latin Dict. Parry thinks "haruspex" is closely connected with ἱεροσκόπος. Fleckeisen supposes a lacuna between incipere in ver. 29, and Quæ causast, &c. in ver. 30.—Ut modo fiant, "Spero" sc. "I only hope they may!"—Me vide, "Trust to me." Cf. Andr. II. ii. 13, note; Plaut. Rud. III. iii. 18.—Dic esse argentum Phædriæ, "Tell Phædria that we have the money" (nobis, sc.)

ACTUS IV.—Sc. V.

DEMIPHO and Chremes return with the money for Phormio, and Deinipho enters assuring Chremes that he is quite a match for the parasite, whom he will pay at once, before he changes his mind. He undertakes likewise to get Nausistrata to see Phanium before she goes to Phormio, and explain that this is the fittest match, and that they have given a handsome dower. Chremes then goes off in quest of his wife and daughter from Lemnos.

1. Ne quid verborum duit, "That he don't at all impose upon me." For "verba darc," see notes at Andr. I. iii. 6; Plaut. Men. H. G. 55; Aulul. H. G. 23. For the form "duit," see Andr. IV. i. 42; Plaut. Men. H. G. 184, "duis;" Aulul. 23.—Testes adhibeam, "Procuring witnesses to the payment." Cf. Cæsar Bell. Civ. iii. 105, "Ut iis testibus in summâ pecuniâ uteretur."—Commemorabo, "I will recite, to whom I pay, and why I pay it."—Ubi nil opus est. Opus used adjectively, cf. Andr. II. i. 37, note, "Opus fact'o'st," cf. Key's Gr. §§ 1280.

5. Altera illæc, "The other girl he mentioned." Cf. IV. iii. 53, "Quantum ab hac accipio, quæ sponsa'st mihi."—Forsitan nos rejiciat, "Perchance he may cast us off," h. e. "our match for him, Phanium." Plaut. Bacch. IV. iii. 19, "Rejeci hominem."—Rem ipsam putasti, "You've hit it exactly," h. e. "Rem acu tetigisti;" for which see Plaut. Rud. V. II. 18, 19, "Tetigisti acu."—Non moror, "I'm all ready."—Hanc, h. e. Phanium.

8. Ne succenscat, "To prevent her being angry at being sent away."—Et magis esse illum idoneum, qui ipsi, &c., "And that he is far fitter (to be her husband) because he is much more intimate with her." See above, II. iii. 16—20. Qui here, points the cause.

11. Quid tuā, malum, id refert? "Pshaw! what's all this to you?" For tuā refert, cf. notes at Adelph. V. iv. 27, and Hecyr. IV. iii. 12. For malum, "plague on't," cf. Adelph. IV. ii. 5; Eun. IV. vii. 10, &c. Parry thinks that "tūā" must be retained in its place in the text here, though an almost solitary example of the last syllable short in such a case. An easy and probable emendation is, "Quid, malum, tuā id refert?" In earlier editions ver. 13 was placed in the mouth of Demipho. Bentley seems to have done well in giving it to Chremes. In ver. 13, ejectam= "thrust out," "ex ædibus," sc. "et matrimonio."

14. Idem ego istuc facere possum, "I can do all that same" h. e. "explain the matter to Phanium." Chremes replies, Mulier mulieri magis congruit, "Une femme convient mieux à une femme." Westerhov quotes Florus III. xxii. 3, "Viro cum viris facile convenit." By illas in ver. 15, Chremes means his Lemnian wife, of whose death he has not heard, and her daughter Phanium.

ACTUS V.—Sc. I

SOPHRONA, Phanium's nurse, meets Chremes as he is seeking his daughter, and bewails the troubles her charge has to fear from Antipho's angry father. Chremes overhears her justifying her own motives in getting Phanium married, and lamenting that she cannot meet with Stilpho, under which name she knows Chremes. They meet and recognise each other in the street. Chremes tells her that his other name had been assumed for fear his Athenian wife should learn his Lemnian connexion. Sophrona tells him that that anxiety is over, for his Lemnian wife is dead. He further learns from her that Phanium is married to Antipho, which is just what he could have wished. He begs Sophrona not to divulge that he is Phanium's father.

Donatus observes, that the grief of Chremes is naturally not excessive ("Malè factum" would equal in his view, "That's a bad job"), as it relieves him from an awkward plurality of wives.

Cf. such words as consulto.—Quam saepe forte temere eveniunt, "How oft by some random chance those things happen which you cannot dare to wish for!" Gronovius gives four passages from Livy, where "forte temere" are thus conjoined, xxiii. 3; xxv. 38; xxxix. 15; xli. 2. See also Cic. de Divinat. ii. 68, "Nisi ista casu nouissimum forte temere concurrent." Lindenbrog quotes for the sentiment, Plaut. Most. I. iii. 40, and from Menander—

31. Offendi adveniens, &c., "On my arrival I have found my daughter married to him, with whom I wished to see her wedded, and as I wished." The reading of ver. 33 is that of Westerhov. Bentley reads "filiam locatam," Fleckeisen "collocatam gnatam." Adveniens is, i. q. "cum advenissem," Gr. παραγενόμενος.

86. Oppido. Cf. Hecyr. II. i. 41, "Eum lassam oppido aibant tum esse;" Heaut. IV. ii. 2, note, "In angustum oppido nunc mere coguntur copiae."—Scibit, cf. Men. H. G. 295, "Seibo;" Madvig. Gr. 115, c. Chremes goes with Sophrona into Demipho's house to see Phanium.

ACTUS V.—Sc. II.

DEMIPHO grumbles to Geta about the money he has paid Phormio; and says it all comes of being too easy. Geta hints that it's well if the money effects its purpose, and Phormio marries Phanium. Demipho goes off to see Nausistrata, about her speaking to the girl; and Geta soliloquises respecting his own position. He must pay his creditors by borrowing from others. The evil day is only put off. He resolves to go and see Phanium to relieve her from fear of Phormio, and to prepare her for Nausistrata's visit.

1. Nostrapte culp'd facimus, &c., "By our own fault we make it to be the interest of others to be bad, whilst we are over-anxious that we ourselves should be called good and kind." Nostrapte culpā facimus ut, "We have only ourselves to blame, that." For malis esse expedit, cf. Heaut. II. iv. 8, "Expedit bonas esse vobis," note. See also Madvig Gr. 393, c. obs. 1.

3. Ita fugias, ne præter casam, ut aiunt. The sense of this passage is best explained by Gronovius, "Si fugam paras, ita institue, ut case domini tibi non sit prætereunda . . . Satis periculi est fugere, ne aliquam temeritatem addas, et periculum duplices prætereundo casam." The moral would be, that if a man pays money for an injury done to him, he invites another; just as he who, having run away from service, is fool enough to pass his master's house, puts himself into twofold and needless peril. Construe, "So run away, as not to pass your master's house, as the saying is." The proverb is a rustic one, as seen in the words "fugias" and "casam." See more in the Notes of J. F. Gronov to Terence, p. 209.

4. Etiam argentumst ultro objectum, "Money was thrown to him, almost before he asked it." Ultro has often somewhat of the sense of "prior," cf. Plaut. Aul. H. G. 485, "Etiam ipsus ultro debet argentario;" Menæchm. 272, H. G., "Alloquar ultro;" Virg. Æn. II. 279, "Ultro flens ipse videbar Compellare virum."—Objectum, as Ruhnken shows, is used of a sop given to a dog. Cf. Livy IV. 51, "Delenimentum animis Bolani agri divisionem objici." Parry quotes Virg. Æn. vi. 420, 421, q. v.—Accipere — injuriam= "To put up with an injury from him."

5. Ut sit qui vivat, dum, &c., "That he may have whereupon to live (means of subsistence) until he can accomplish some other mischief." For "qui vivat," cf. Heaut. V. ii. 25, "Unde peterem mihi cibum;" Adelph. V. ix. 23, "Unde utatur;" Plaut. Trin. II. ii. 74, "Qui nosmet utamur."—Qui recta prara faciunt, "qui font voir que le blanc est noir" Madame Dacier, "Who put wrong for right."

7. Ut stultissime quidem illi, &c., "So that in the most foolish way we have been consulting or forwarding his interests." For "rem gero" in this sense, see Plaut. Pers. IV. iii. 34, "Ego valeo recte, et rem gero, et facio lucrum." Cf. also Hor. Epist. I. viii. 1, "Celso gaudere et bene rem gerere Albinovano." But "illi" may stand for "illic," in which case we must construe, "So that herein we have managed matters most foolishly."

8. Modo ut — possiet discedi, ut istam ducat. Cf. "Sperandum est," "Let's hope only that by this scheme things may turn out successfully that he may marry her."—Discedi possiet is used impersonally, in the sense of coming off successfully from a contest: as, "we may come off" ("a nobis" sc.). Cf. V. viii. 58, "Immo vero pulchre discedo, et probe Et præter spem." For Uthomo est, see Adelph. I. ii. 63, "Nam itast homo." Key, in a note on § 1131 in his Grammar, observes, that the relative adverb "ut" is used for "sic," or "ita," here and elsewhere. He construes, "I am only too much afraid, faith, (knowing the fellow's character) he may change his mind." Cf. Heccyr. III. v. 10, "Sic sunt;" Phorm. III. ii. 43, Sic sum, "It's my way."

10. Nescio : verum "si forte" dico, "I don't know : I only say, 'perhaps.'" Nuntia (Phanio, sc.) hanc (Nausistratam) venturam.

13. De jurgio siletur, "There's no talk about the lawsuit" with Phormio, on account of the marriage.

15. In eodem luto hæsitas, "You are sticking in the same mire still," "You're as deeply involved as ever." Parry illustrates by Pseud. IV. ii. 27, "Perii, nunc homo in medio luto est," which Lambinus explains "non potest se expedire." Cf. Pers. IV. iii. 66.—Versurā solves, Geta, "You'll pay old scores by borrowing afresh," h. e. "You'll get out of one difficulty by getting into another." Versura= "the borrowing of money to pay a debt." Cf. Smith's Dict. G. R. A. 527. As Gronovius observes, "Ita creditor mutatur, debitum manet." Cic. pro Cælio. c. 7, "Versuram nunquam omnino fecit ullain." Here of course "the debts," are Geta's faults and trespasses.—Præsens quod fuerat malum, "The punishment which had been close at hand (if Phædria had lost his music girl) has been staved off for a season." In diem, see Eunuch. V. vi. 19.—Plagæ crescent Nisi prospicis, "Tho' score of lashes is increasing if you don't look out." In ver. 18, Fleckeisen reads "hujus" for "ejus" (after Madame Dacier), h. c. Nausistrata.

ACTUS V.—Sc. III.

DEMIPHO is engaged in speaking to Nausistrata, when Chremes comes out of Demipho's house, full of his discovery. Nausistrata has been promising to do her best to persuade Phanium to go to Phormio. Chremes finds that his brother has paid the money already, and is sorry for it, but owing to his wife's presence cannot exactly say why. He tells them Phanium won't go from Antipho, and what's more, she is of kin to their family after all. This causes much cross-questioning, and he answers obscurely till his wife retires, content that Phanium shall remain where she is. Then Chremes unburdens the whole story to Demipho, how that it is his daughter that Antipho has married. They go into the house of Demipho to talk it over quietly.

3. Pariter — ac re dudum opitulata es, “Just as you a little while ago aided me with your substance.” He alludes to her loan to him from her rents. See above, IV. iii. 76, “Inde sumam: uxori, tibi opus esse, dixero.—Factum volo, “I'm glad 'twas done;” “I'm agreeable;” or “With all my heart.” Cf. Plaut. Bacch. 5. Quia — indiligerenter tutatur, “Because he's a careless manager of my father's well-earned property.” Tutari=“tueri,” in its sense of “keeping in good order.” Gronovius illustrates it by Cie. in Verr. i. 50, “Edem Castoris P. Junio habuit tuendam.” So “Tutela” is used by Pliny, Epist. ii. 12, “Villa usibus capax, non sumptuosa tutela.” For “indiligerenter” see note at Adelph. IV. v. 50, “Vereor ne indiligens nimium sics.”

7. Capiebat statim, “For from these farms he used to enjoy a uniform income of two talents.”—Statim literally means “in standing.” Nonius, says Gronov., explains it “perpetuo, perseveranter.” Cf. Plaut. Amph. I. i. 83, “Sed in fugam se nemo tamen convertitur: Nec recedit loco quin statim rem gerat.” Ibid. 120, “Ita statim stant signa.”—Vir viro quid præstat! “What a difference there is between man and man!” Cf. Eun. II. ii. 1, “Homini hemo quid præstat, stulto intelligens.” In the sense of the text statim has its first syllable long; but not always, as Parry shows, see his note here.—Ac rebus vilioribus multo, tamen talenta bina, “And that was while things were far cheaper, yet he drew two talents.”

9. Quid haec ridentur, (“tibi” sc.) “What think you of all this?”—Scilicet, “To be sure,” a careless assent.”—Virum me natum vellem. Bentley and the Bembine Codex read “natum” not “natam,” rightly. Demipho stops this termagant with difficulty by suggesting to her to save her words for an argument for Phanium, who is younger.

13. Curari ilico, "I attended to it immediately."—Nolle datum, cf. Andr. I. i. 13, where one reading is "factum gaudeo;" see too above in this scene ver. 4, "Factum volo."—Pene plus quam sat erat, ("locutus fui" sc.) "I had almost said too much." This is said aside. For "quam sat erat," cf. Adelph. V. iii. 48, "Attentiores — quam sat est."

15. Jam recte, "'Tis all right," "No matter." Cf. Hecyr. III. ii. 20, "Recte, mater;" Heaut. II. i. 16; Adelph. I. v. 19, notes.—Istā, h. e. "Phanium."—hanc, "Nausistrata."

17. Quia uterque utriusque cordi est, "Because each is near to the other." For "cordi est," cf. Andr. II. i. 28; Plaut. Cistell. I. i. 111. "Mihi cordi est tamen." Terent. Heaut. II. iv. 14, "Utrique ab utrisque vero devincimini." Gronov. h. l. shows that "cordi esse" is a phrase which Livy much affected. Cf. Livy vi. 9; vi. 20; viii. 7; ix. 1, &c.—Quid istuc nostrā, ("refert" sc.) See Hecyr. IV. iii. 12, &c.—Deliras, Andr. IV. iv. 13, note.—Sic erit, "So it will prove." Cf. Eun. V. viii. 28, where the same form occurs.

19. Redii tecum in memoriam, "I have recalled the matter to my mind." So Plaut. Capt. V. iv. 25, "Nunc demum in memoriam redeo, cum tecum recogito." Bentley was the first to read "redii" instead of the old reading "redi." The old reading would mean, if anything, "Recall the matter to your mind along with me."—Non est, "coguata" sc.

21. Patris nomen aliud dictum est, "Another name (than the true one) of the father was mentioned," in the trial, by Phormio.—Hoc tu errasti, h. e. "propter hoc"—"C'est ce qui vous trompe"—Madame Dacier. Concedes, in ver. 22,—"credes, consenties,—Si tu nil narras, 'non possum intelligere,' sc.

26. Una omnes nos aut scire aut nescire, &c. Cf. Plaut. Epid. III. i. 3, "Sitne quid, necne sit, scire cupio."—I'an' parram mihi fidem esse, &c., "To think that you should have so little confidence in me!" For this construction of the inf., cf. Andr. I. v. 10, note.

28. Vin satis quessitum, &c. "Would you have me be satisfied with my inquiries as to that matter."—Rectē "Nothing." See above at ver. 15 of this scene.—Hanc igitur mittimus? "Are we then to give her up," h. e. "the daughter of our friend." An ambiguous form of speech for Chremes's daughter by his Lemnian wife, whom Demipho does not know to be one and the same with Phanium. Parry and same others think "hanc" means "Nausistrata"—Illa maneat? "Is that one whom he has taken (h. e. Phanium) to remain?"—Ire sc. "domum."

32. Perliberalis visast, "She seemed very well-bred." Cf. Hecyr. V. iv. 22, note; Andr. I. i. 11, note.—Di nos respiciunt, "The gods look on us with favour." Cf. Andr. IV. i. 18, note; Hor. Od. I. ii. 35, "Nepotes Itespiciis, auctor,"—Nuptam cum tuo filio, cf. Hecyr. IV. i. 13, note.

36. As they retire into Demipho's house, Chremes charges him not to divulge the secret that Phanium is his daughter, even to their sons.

ACTUS V.—Sc. IV.

ANTIPHO rejoices at his brother's good fortune, however bad his own. Phædria's case shows the wisdom of moderate desires, soon supplied. As for himself, Antipho is in a dilemma. Secrecy entails constant fear. Exposure would bring shame with it. He will seek Geta, to learn when he may best face his father.

1. Ut meæ res sese habent, “However my affairs proceed.” Cf. Phorm. III. i. 4, “Ut ut erant alia.” For “ut” is here, i. q. “ut ut.” Cf. Adelph. II. ii. 40, &c. 3. Quas — paulo mederi possis, “Which, when circumstances are untoward, you can relieve a little.” Either the relative is here attracted to the case of the antecedent, or “mederi” governs an accusative; as “medicari” does in Virg. Æn. vii. 756, “Sed non Dardaniæ medicari cupidis ictum Evaluit.”

4. Curd sese expedivit, cf. Adelph. IV. iv. 6, note.—Me evolvere, “Free myself, literally “unwind myself.” (Gr. ἐκτολοπεύειν Aesch. Agam. 1034.) Cf. Eun. IV. iv. 55, “Te omni turbā evolves.”—Sin patesit, the indicative here, after the subj. “celetur” in the other clause, is an ἀνακόλουθον, as Donatus notes.

7. Ni mi esset spes ostenta, &c., “Unless I had had a glimpse of hope of keeping her.” Cf. Eun. III. v. 56, 57, “Occasionem Mihi ostentam tantam, &c.” Gronov. quotes Cic. pro Cœl. c. 8, “Cum unius filii recuperandi spes esset ostentata.” In these and other passages, “Ostendo” and “ostento” have an idea of “rare,” or “infrequent occurrence.”

ACTUS V.—Sc. V.

PHORMIO boasts to Antipho, that he has got Demipho's money, and given up the music-girl to Phædria. He is now going to get a holiday in the country. Antipho inquires what Phædria is doing, and Phormio replies that, like Antipho, he is avoiding his father's presence, and hopes that his cousin will plead for him with Chremes, whilst he's off in the country with the Parasite. Phormio is going to tell the old men that he is going to Sunium to buy his wife a slave.

8. Te suas rogavit rursum ut ageres, “partes” sc. Westerhov. and other editors, whom Parry follows, read “suam.” But Bentley’s reading from the Bembine MS. “suas” is clearly right, though Donatus seems to have read “suam.”—Causam pro se diceres, “Plead his excuses.” Cf. ACTUS V.—Sc. VI.

GETA issues from Demipho’s house, full of the news that Antipho’s wife’s is the Lemnian daughter of Chremes. This Phormio and Antipho partly overhear, and then call him back as he is going off in search of his young master. He relates at length to them how after Demipho and he had got home from the Forum, his master sent him to Phanium, whose page stopped him from going in, because Chremes was with her. He resolved at once to play the eaves-dropper, and so gathered that Phanium and her mother were the Lemnian wife and child of Chremes. Antipho goes off overjoyed to meet his family circle. Phormio, somewhat incredulous, determines on a plan to make Chremes rest satisfied without repayment of the money; by holding this new secret over him.

I. ii. 54.—Quantis commoditatibus, &c., "With how great blessings and how suddenly have you loaded my master Antipho, by your aid."—hero meo — hunc diem, is a case of hypallage for "herum meum — hoc dic." For onerare, used in a good and bad sense, cf. Andr. V. i. 8, "Remittas jam me onerare injuriis." Capt. IV. ii. 47, "Sed ego cesso Hegionem ouerare laetitiam senem."

4. Sed ego nunc mihi cesso, qui non, &c., "But I'm loitering to my hurt, in not throwing my cloak upon my shoulder." Miki is the dative of the person concerned, cf. Key, Gr. § 977.—Humerum onero pallio, cf. Eun. IV. vi. 31, "Attolle pallium." This action denotes tucking up the cloak for the sake of expedition.

8. Num mirum aut novumst revocari, &c. "Is it any marvel or novelty to be called back, when you've begun running?" "Quand ou se met à courir?"—Madame Daeicer. For an allusion to the common joke of calling to a slave to stop, see Phorm. I. iv. 17, 18, note.—Pergit hercle, "He goes on calling me back, I declare."—Nunquam tu odio tuo me vinces, "You shall never prevail upon me by boring me." Cf. Hecyr. I. ii. 48, "Tundendo atquo odio—efficit senex." See below V. vii. 44, "Si porro esse odiosi pergitis" Hor. Sat. I. vii. 6; Plaut. Menachm. 230, "odiosus," H. G.—Non manes? "Won't you stop?" pres. for fut.

10. Vapula, "To the lash with you!" "Go and be beaten!" Cf. Plaut. Asin. II. iv. 72.—"Vapula! Me. Id quidem tibi hercle fiet." Autipho here rejoins, "That will soon be your fate, rascal, unless you stop." Vapula is Bentley's reading for "vapulabis."

11. Familiariorem oportet, &c., "This must be some one intimately acquainted with me: he threatens punishment." A slave's conscience is at work. For "malum" "punishment," cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 6, "Si ad malum accedit malum;" Aulul. H. G. 437, "Malam rem;" Pers. V. ii. 35, "Ne tibi hoc scipione Malum magnum dem."—Congredere actutum, "Accost him at once." These are the words of Phormio to Antipho. Bentley assigns them to Geta.

13. O omnium, quantum est qui vivunt, &c. For Quantum est, see Heaut. IV. vi. 6, note. Hor. Epod. v. 1, "At, O deorum quicquid in coelo regis." Plaut. Aulul. 742, note, H. G.—Homo hominum ornatisime. Adelph. II. ii. 10, "Homo hominum stultissimo."—Ab dis solus diligere, "You're the special object of the gods' regard." Cf. Andr. V. vi. 9, "Solus est quem diligent Di."

16. Satin' est si te delibutum gaudio reddo? "Will you be satisfied, if I plunge you over head and ears in joy?" For delibutum, cf. Plaut. Pœn. I. ii. 55, "Coeno delibutas;" Hor. Epod. xvii. 31, "Quantum neque atro delibutus Hercules Nesi cruento;" Epid. iii. 13.—Enicas, "You torture me." Cf. Andr. IV. i. 36, note.—Quin tu hinc — aufer, &c., "Away with your promises, and tell the news you bear."—Quin is here expostulatory, as in Andr. II. iii. 25, "Quin taces."—Aufer = "omitte," cf. above I. iv. 45, "Aufer mi oportet." In ver. 18, for accipe, hem, Fleckeisen reads "Accipe, en:" "Hear then, lo." For accipe ("auribus" sc.) compare Hecyr. III. iii. 3, "Quæ accepi auribus."

19. Tibi, h. e. "Phormio;" uxorem tuam, h. c. "Antipho's wife."—Rectâ domum sumus profecti, "We started homewards forthwith."

The houses of Demipho and Chremes are both represented on the stage; so that Bentley's emendation "Rectā ad Chremem," is needless.

22. Ubi in gynæcum ire occipio, "When I begin to enter the women's apartments, up to me runs the page Mida." Gynæcum=γυναικεῖον sc. δίκημα, cf. Plaut. Most. III. ii. 72. It was the inner part of the house, in the rear of the men's apartments.—Pone adprendit pallio, "Catches me by the cloak behind." Cf. Mil. G. I. i. 59, "Ut vel illæ quæ here pallio Me reprehenderunt;" Epid. I. i. 1, "Quis properantem me prehendit pallio."—Resupinat, "He pulls me backwards." Gronovius explains the word "retro trahendo facit ut vultu aliquis cœlum spectet." Cf. Hor. Sat. I. v. 19, "Stertitque supinus;" Hor. Od. III. xxiii. 1, "Cœlo supiuas si tuleris manus."

27. Suspenso gradu, &c., "I proceeded to go quickly on tip-toe." Cf. Ovid. Fast. vi. 333, "Et fert suspensos corde micante gradus." Phædrus. Fab. II. iv. 18, "Evagata noctu suspenso pede." Aud, above all, see Conington's note on Virgil. Ecl. ii. 66, "Aratra jugo referunt suspensa juvenci."—Animam compressi, cf. Adelph. III. ii. 26, note; Ov. Fast. i. 425, "Surgit amans, animamque tenens, vestigia furtim Suspenso digitis fert tacitura gradu."

29. Hoc modo sermonem captans. "In this fashion (δεικτικῶς, suiting the action to the words) listening to their conversation." For this use of "capto," cf. Pl. Casin. II. viii. 8, "Captandus est horum claneculum sermo mihi."—Pulcherrimum facinus. Facinus is here used in a good sense. Cf. Heaut. II. iii. 73, "Facinus magnum nec memorabile."

33. Cum ejus consuevit olim matre, &c. For this use of consuevit, cf. notes at Adelph. IV. v. 32, and Hecyr. IV. i. 40, above.—Somnium, "Moonshine," cf. Adelph. II. i. 50, note.—Utin' haec ignoraret suum patrem? "Do you mean that she didn't know her own father?" Westerhov. supplies the ellipse "adeone rudit erat." But see Hecyr. I. i. 9, "Utin' exinium neminem habeam."—Aliquid credito — esse causæ, "Be sure there was some reason for it." "Croi, Phormion, qu'il y a là-dessous quelque chose que nous ne savons pas." Egerint, in ver. 36, means "treated of," "dixerint, locuti sint."

37. Atque hercle ego quoque istam audivi fabulam. This sentence was, till Bentley's time, assigned to Phormio. He rightly saw that it belonged to Antipho. For "Audivi" some editors read "inaudivi," after Donatus. Cf. Plaut. Mil. Gl. II. ii. 56, "Os columnatum poëtae inaudivi barbaro." Antipho perhaps refers to IV. iii. 65, q. v. Dabo = dicam, as in Heaut. Prol. v. 10. Inde, h. e. "o domo Demiphonis." Huc, "into the street." Gronovius appears to have read "intus egreditur foras," taking "intus" for "ex interiore parte ædium;" which he parallels by Plaut. Amph. II. ii. 138; Bacch. I. i. 62.

40. Ait uterque — ejus habendæ. Bentley needlessly, and without authority, read "habendi." But this is not a case like that of Heaut. Prol. v. 27, &c., and there is no merit in inventing a difficult construction.

42. Quin ergo rape me, "Away with me then instantly," Colman: Eun. II. iii. 86, "Abduc, duc, quantum potes." Madame Dacier's idea as to Antipho "quil se met sur les épaules de son valet" has no warranty in the words of the text. Guyetus ended the play, and Bentley, after Faernus, the scene, at gaudeo in ver. 43.

45. Summa eludendi, &c., "Now I've a first-rate opportunity of outwitting the old men." In the next line we have an "anacoluthon," adimere, where we should have expected "adimendi" after "eludendi." For Phædriæ adimere curam argentarium, cf. Key's Gr. § 1252, where this passage is instanced as a case where the infinitive seems to supply the place of a genitivo (τοῦ "adimere"). Construe "and of relieving Phædria of his anxiety about money;" Plaut. Pseud. I. iii. 68, "Inopiā argentariā."

48. Nam idem hoc argentum, ita ut datumſt, &c., "For this very money, just as it has been given to me, shall be given to him, against their will." Ei the reading of the C. Bembinus is far better than "his" which is found in the old editions. For ingratitiis, cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 952; Circul. I. i. 6, &c. — Hoc, qui cogam, re ipsa repperi, "How to force them to this, I've discovered, under the circumstances, as they present themselves," viz., by pretending to be ready to marry Phanium; and if the old man won't give her up, then refusing to restore the money.—Vultusque est capiundus norus, cf. Heaut. V. i. 14, "Vultus quoque hominum fingit scelus."—Angiportum, cf. Adelph. IV. ii. 39; Eun. V. ii. 6.

ACTUS V—Sc. VII.

As Demipho and Chremes come forth from the house of the former, rejoicing in the happy issue of their desires about Antiphō and Phanium, and bent withal on recovering the thirty pounds from Phormio, they are met by him. He pretends readiness to marry Phanium and take her at once. Demipho interposes excuses. "He can't turn her out of doors: and Antiphō won't give her up." Then, says Phormio, "I can't repay the money. I've spent it in paying debts, and it is mine, for I've been ready to fulfil my contract." Demipho retorts, calling Phormio a rogue and cheat: and he, in turn, holds in terror over Chremes his Lemnian intrigue. Chremes then foregoes his claim, and begs the parasite to keep his secret: but Demipho counsels resistance to Phormio's demands. As the old men are collaring Phormio, he cries out for Nausistrata, bent on telling her the whole tale.

3. Quantum potest, "With all speed;" cf. Andr. V. ii. 20, note; Plaut. Men. H. G. 340. Dilapidet, literally "demolish," here "squander." Construe "That we may carry off from him our 30 minæ before he squanders them." Fleckeisen places ver. 12, "Estne ea—oppido" after ver. 2: probably on account of its apparent unmeaningness in its usual place. But there seems no authority for the change.

9. Quod recepissem semel, "Which I had once promised." Cf. Ter. Heaut. V. v. 12, note, "Ad me recipio;" Cic. ad Fam. i. 9, "Quidque sibi is de me recepisset, in memoriam redegit;" Cic. Philipp. V. c. 18, "Promitto, recipio, spondeo, Caium Cæsarem semper talem fore civem, qualis hodie sit."—Quanta quanta hæc mea paupertas est, cf. Adelphi. III. iii. 40, "Tu quantus quantus es nil nisi sapientia es," note; Plaut. Poen. III. iv. 28. For the sentiment compare Virg. Aen. ii. 79, "nec, si miserum Fortuna Sinonem Finxit, vanum etiam mendacemque improba finget."

12. Estne ea ita ut dixi, &c. Chremes must be supposed here to be heedless of the conversation, and to ramble on about his new found child. In ver. 13, Bentley reads "Idque adeo advenio nuntiatum;" Parry, "Itaque ad vos venio;" Fleckeisen, "Idque ad vos venio nuntiatum."—Omnès posthabui mihi res, cf. Adelph. II. iii. 9, "Omnia sibi postputavit esse; Virg. Ecl. vii. 17, "Posthabui tamen illorum mea seria ludo."

20. Nunc viduam extrudi turpe est, "Now it were shameful that she should be thrust out of doors without a husband." Viduam= "viro disjunctam," as in Plaut. Men. 37, "Faxo foris vidua visas patrem," where see Hildyard's Glossary; Ovid. Heroid. i. 10, "Lassaret viduas pendula tela manus;" ibid. xix. 69; cf. Catull. vi. 6, "Te non viduas jacere noctes," &c. See also Men. 622, H. Lambinus explains "vidua," "ea quæ, postquam nupsit, viro caret." Dudum me incusaveras, cf. Phorm. II. iii. 66, &c. For "incuso," with two accusatives; cf. Key's Gr. § 898.

22. Satis superbe inluditis me, "Vous me traitez fort cavalièrement," "You trifle with me in a tolerably high tone." For Illuditis, in this construction of Heaut. IV. iv. 19, note. Alteram, cf. Heaut. IV. iii. 52, "Nullam mihi malim quam istane uxorem dari."—Quo redibo ore, "With what face;" cf. Heaut. IV. iii. 22, "Nam quo ore appellabo patrem?" see notes, ibid.

25. Tum outem Antiphonem video — inque, "Besides, I find that Antipho won't part with the woman. Say this." Chremes is prompting Demipho with another plea, which he immediately uses.—Sed transi sodes, &c., "But, come, step to the forum, and direct that that money be paid back to me." Money matters were settled at the "mensæ" and "tabernæ" of bankers in the forum;" cf. Adelph. II. iv. 13, note. For "rescribere," in the sense of "repaying," cf. Hor. Sat. II. iii. 76, "Dictantis quod tu nunquam rescribere possis."

30. Quodne ego discripsi, &c., "What! the money I've paid away at once to my creditors?" Bentley, after the Bemb. c. and the apparent reading of Donatus, restores discripsi for perscripti, the usual reading.—Dos hic maneat. Hic is said δεικτικῶς, "With me," pointing to his pockets.

35. Vestri honoris causā, "Out of respect to you;" Plaut. Poen. III. iii. 25, "Quia nos honoris tui causa hic ad te venimus."—Repudium alteræ remiserim, "I've refused the other woman," cf. above, IV. iii. 72; see also Aulul. H. G. 740, and ibid. 756. "Eā re repudium remisit avunculus causā meā." For alteræ, see note at Heaut. II. iii. 30. It is an archaism for "alteri."

37. I hinc in malam, &c., "To perdition with you, vagabond, with that brag of yours!" cf. above, II. iii. 21; Men. Prol. H. G. 66, &c.—Cum istac magnificentia. Cf. Heaut. IV. vi. 6, 7, "Cum tuo—Istoc invento cumque incepto;" Andr. V. iv. 38, "Cum tuā religione."

Fugitive, "runaway slave," cf. Plaut. Pseud. I. iii. 131, "Fugitive."—Te ignorior, au' tua facta adeo, "That you're not known, aye, and your acts too :" adeo, "what's more." For Irritor, cf. Adelph. II. iv. 18, note; Andr. III. iv. 18, note.

40. Fac periculum, "Try me;" Heaut. II. i. 9, "Periculum ex aliis facito ;" Andr. III. iii. 32, note; Hecyr. V. i. 40, note. Demipho then, in ver. 41, imputes to Phormio a base motivo.

43. In jus ambula, "Come to the law-courts." "Marche devant les juges." Cf. Plaut. Curc. V. ii. 23, "In jus ambula." Jus here, according to Donatus, pro, "loco" judicii est.—Si porro esse odiosi pergitis, "if you continue to be troublesome." Cf. for odiosi, Plaut. Men. H. G. 230; Aulul. 84, "Odiosas haberit." The words here are an illustration of "aposiopesis." Cf. Andr. I. i. 137, note; Adelph. I. ii. 55, note.

45. Vos me indotatis — arbitramini, &c., "Perhaps you deem that I act as champion only for undowered females : I'm wont to discharge a like office for some who have dowers." A hit at Chremes, to whose wife, Nausistrata, he alludes in dotatis.—Quid il nostrā ("refert" sc.)

49. Nullus sum, cf. Andr. III. iv. 20, note; Hecyr. IV. i. 6, note.—Sepultus sum, "I'm a dead man," "I'm lost." Parry quotes Amphitr. V. i. 22, "Sepultus est quasi sit mortuus." But there is no exact parallel to be found in the commentators. In ver. 51, as often above, adeo = "and what's more."—Ut ludos facit, "How he mocks us!" Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 314, "Ludos facere ;" Aulul. H. G. 209, "Quein sc̄nctā ētate ludos facias." Ludos faccre = "ludificare," and takes an accusative after it; cf. Andr. III. i. 21, note.

53. Missum te facimus, "Nous ne te demandons plus rien." We discharge you of obligation. Cf. Andr. IV. i. 56, note; V. i. 14, "Nos missos face."—Argentum—condonamus te, "We forgive you the money you've got of ours." The common construction after "condono" is a dative of the person, an accusative of the thing, forgiven, cf. Key, § 975. But here and in Plaut. Bacch. V. ii. 24, we have a double accusative, "Siquam debes, te condono."—Audio, cf. above, I. iii. 8, note. Malum, cf. Heaut. II. iii. 77; Ad. IV. ii. 5, note.

56. For puerili sententiā, Fleckeisen suggests "puerili inconstantiā." With the following verses compare Plaut. Aul. 215, 216, "Pactum non pactum est, non pactum pactum est, quod vobis lubet," where Lambinus quotes this passage: Hor. Epist. I. i. 97.

60. Nisi me dixisse—scio. Nisi here = "But," as in Andr. IV. i. 40; Ad. IV. ii. 6, Notes. — Monstri simile. So in Eun. II. iii. 43, "Eho! Nonne hoc monstri simile est ?" "Prodigious ! so help me the gods!"—Injecti scrupulum, "I've made them uneasy," cf. Adelph. II. ii. 20, note; Andr. V. iv. 37, &c.

62. Hicine ut a nobis—auferat, "To think of this fellow carrying off from us so large a sum, and laughing at us so barefacedly!" For this not uncommon construction cf. Andr. I. v. 28, "Eime ego ut ad-vorser?" note; Phorm. II. i. 74, "Egone illum — ut patiar" &c.—Emori hercle satius est," "I'd die rather;" Eun. I. i. 21, "Mori mo malim."—Animo virili presentique ut sis para, "Prepare to act like a man, and with presence of mind;" Eun. IV. vi. 31, "Fac animo hæc præsenti dicas."

85. Esse elatum foras, "Has been divulged;" "has got abroad." Cf. Adelph. IV. iv. 17, "Quod minime'st opus Usquam efferri."—Placabilius est, "To state the matter to her ourselves is the most likely way to appease her." Cf. Adelph. IV. iii. 17, Note, "Te ipsum purgare ipsis coram placabilius est."

69. Hunc impuratum ulcisci, "To take revenge on this rascal in our own fashion." Impuratum, cf. above, IV. iii. 64; Aulul. (Hildyard's Gloss.) 313, "Impurate," filthy wretch; "Impurata bellua," Rudens. II. vi. 59.—Nostro modo, Andr. I. i. 126, "Meo modo;" Plaut. Men. 167, "Non tuo hoc fiet modo."—Hæreo, "I'm in a fix;" see Eun. V. ii. 9, Trinumm. IV. ii. 59, "Hæret hæc res."

71. Hi gladiatorio—affectionat viam, "These men are making towards me with most hostile intent." Gladiatorio animo, h. e. "with the spirit in which the gladiators descend into the arena." Affectionat viam, cf. Heaut. II. iii. 60, Note; Plaut. Men. 588; Aul. H. G. 530. —Bono animo es, "Cheer up!" "Take heart;" cf. Plaut. Aulul. (Hildy.) 689, "Animo bono es!" Ter. Adelph. IV. v. 62.—Hoc fructus, Chreme, Quum, &c., "Relying on this, to wit, the fact that she is removed from us." &c. Quum, says Donatus, is for quia. E medio excessit, "Has departed this life." Cf. Adelph. III. iv. 34, In medio est, h. e. "is still among us." The phrase is a Euphemism for "mortua est."

75. Satis astute aggressimini, "You begin your assault very cleverly." The metaphor is still from the gladiators.—Non hercle ex re istius me instigasti, "But, 'faith, 'twas not to your brother's interest that you goaded me on, Demipho!" Ex re istius, "To the interest of that brother of yours;" cf. Plaut. Pseud. I. iii. 104, "Ex tuâ re non est, ut ego emoriar;" Truc. IV. iv. 20, "E re meâ est."

77. Ain' tu? Ubi quæ libitum fuerit, &c., "How say you, Sir?" (turning to Chreines). Plaut. Aulul. H. G. 254, Ain' tandem? "When you have done abroad what you pleased."—Neque hujus sis veritus, &c., "And have not regarded your wife here, a lady of family." Veretur is found with a genitive in a fragment of Afranius. apud Non. "Uxor quæ non vereatur viri," and Cic. ad. Att. viii. 4, "Ne tui quidem testimonii veritus." The methods of commentators to explain away this genitive, e. g. "hujus" (cansâ sc.), and hujus genitive of value, are ridiculous. For fæminæ primariæ, cf. Plaut. Mil. III. i. 73, "Parasitum primarium;" Rud. IV. iv. 29, "Quoad primarius vir dicat;" Stich. I. ii. 81, "Conditionem ex pessimâ primariam."

79. Quin novo modo—contumelium, "So as to forbear insulting her in an unheard-of manner." Quin depends on "veritus sis" above.—Venias mihi, &c., "Would you come, I ask you, to wash out your offence by entreaties." In this sense luo is much more common than "lavo." Horace in Od. III. xii. 2, has "neque dulci Mala vino lavere." Mihi, here, is the dative Ethicus; cf. Key Gr. § 978; Hor. Epist. I. iii. 15, "Quid mihi Celsus agit."

81. Incensum dabo. Cf. Andr. IV. ii. 20, "Effectum reddam; Heaut. V. i. 77, "Adeo exornatum dabo," note; Andr. IV. i. 59, "Inventum dabo."—Ut ne restinguas lachrymis si extillaveris, "That though you melt away in tears, you shan't quench the fire" (of her wrath). The metaphor is from water used in putting out the fire. For "extilient," cf. Plaut. Pseud. III. ii. 29, "Oculi ut extilient."

83. Malum quod isti—duint. There is no difficulty here if we take ma/um as the ordinary imprecation, and consider the words that follow Demipho's mode of fastening it on Phormio. "A plague! and may all the gods and goddesses cause it to light on that rogue." This verse occurs in Plaut. Most. III. i. 126, "ipsissimis verbis."—Tantūne adjectum, &c. Cf. note on Andr. I. v. 10.—Non hoc publicitus, &c., "Ought not this rascal to be transported to a desert land at the country's expense."—Publicitus, cf. Amphitr. I. i. 8. "Peregre adveniens hospitio publicitus accipiar." Plautus in the Trinumm. II. iv. 146, draws a picture of a convict settlement, "Malos in quem omnes publicè mitti decet," and whither "detrudi maleficos Aequum videtur."—For "solas terras," cf. Pl. Rud. I. iv. 8, "Neque magis sole terræ sunt," &c.; Aulul. 627 (Hild.) "Solum locum," h. e. ἔρημον; Virg. Ecl. x. 14, "Solā sub rupe."—In jus eamus, cf. above ver. 43.—Huc, si quid lubet, Phormio retorts In jus upon Chremes, and his reply is, "Before a judge? O yes, come in here then, if you please," pointing to Chremes' house, and hinting at Nausistrata as the judge.—Adsequere ac retine, "Run up to him and hold him," &c.

90. Enim nequeo solus, "Why! I can't, single-handed." Enim is used "ellipticè," as in Hecyr. II. i. 41, note; Aulul. H. G. 454—Una injuria est tecum (to Demipho), "I've one assault against you." Injuria, says Donatus, is here "actio injuriarum."—Lege agito ergo, "You may go to law with me then." Lege agito was said to one, whose threat appeared contemptible; see Donatus. Compare Plaut. Aulul. 412, Hildyard's notes, and Mil. Gl. II. v. 43, "Lege agito: nunquam mittam."

93. Os opprime, "Stop his mouth." Cf. Plaut. Asin. III. ii. 40. Impurum vide, quantum valet! "See the rascal, how strong he is!"—Pugnos in ventrem ingere, "Hit him in the wind, if he does not follow you." Phormio takes him up, menacingly, "Ay, or knock out his eye. I shall have a fine opportunity of revenge."—Oculum exclude. Cf. Plaut. Pseud. I. v. 95, "Excludito mihi hercle oculum." Lambinus in that passage reads "exculpito;" as indeed the Bemb. c. here reads exscalpe. "Est ubi vos ulciscar prope?"—For est ubi, as here, cf. Plaut. Pseud. V. ii. 26, "Erit ubi te ulci-car, si vivo."

ACTUS V.—Sc. VIII.

THE clamour brings out Nausistrata, to whom Phormio, amid much interruption, tells her husband's misdeeds at Lemnos. Demipho tries to justify his angry sister-in-law. Phormio exults in his mischief, and further tells Nausistrata all about the 30 minæ, and her son Phædria's intrigues. She is disposed to treat the matter easily, and, at his own suggestion, shows her thankfulness to the parasite by asking him to supper.

2. Obstipuisti. So Bentley, after C. Bembin., cf. Andr. I. v. 21, "Ob-

Plaut. Poen. III. v. 2; Trinumm. III. i. v. 5. Creduit occurs in Truc. II. ii. 52, q. v. Creduas is an archaic form of "Credas." —Si non totus friget, &c., "He's in a shivering fit, I'll lay my life," Colman. Cf. Eun. I. ii. 3, "Totus, Parmeno, Tremo horreoque, postquam aspexi hanc."

6. Nihil est, "Formula respondere detrectantis," cf. Adelph. II. ii. 25, note.—Delirat miser Timore, "He is mad, poor wretch, with fear." For Delirat, cf. Andr. IV. iv. 13, note; Phorm. V. iii. 18.—Non pol temere est, &c., "Faith, its not without some cause, that you're so afraid." Heaut. IV. i. 7, "Non temere est."

10. Recte sane. Ironically, "Oh, not at all." Cf. for "recte," Hecyr. III. ii. 20; Heaut. II. i. 16, notes.—Scelus, Tibi narret? "Rascal! tell it at your bidding." Tibi is the Ethic dative here.—Quid, "at"? "But what?" or "what means that, But?"

14. At scito huic opus est, "But the lady here must know it!" "Scito" is the abl. of the perf. part, after opus, cf. Key's Gr. § 1280.—Mi homo, Di melius duint, "My good man, may the gods give us better luck!" Cf. Virg. Georg. iii. 513, "Di meliora piis, erroremque hostibus illum!"

18. Dum tu dormis, "And has by her one daughter already, while you're in a state of happy ignorance of it." Such seems to be the force of "dormis," which Colman has not hit off. For this sense of dormio, cf. Adelph. IV. v. 59, "Dormienti haec tibi confecturos Deos."—An quicquam hodie—indignus? Hodie here does not relate to time, but signifies indignation. Cf. Adelph. II. ii. 7, "Hodie ei usque os præbui;" Virg. Aen. ii. 670, &c. Bentley ascribes "Hoc actumst" to Demipho: "An quicquam—senes" to Phormio: "Demipho, te appello," &c., to Nausistrata, but the sense is nowise improved by this alteration.—Qui mihi ubi, &c., "'Tis such men as these, I'm sorry to say, who then only become old, when they've come to their wives." Sc. "ii sunt" or "ejusmodi sunt ii." For the sentiment here, cf. Plaut. Asin. IV. ii. 4, "Uxori excuses te et dicas seuem." Mihi is here redundant, as often; cf. Heaut. II. i. 8, "Is mihi ubi addibbit plus paulo," &c.

22. Distædet loqui, "I cannot bear to speak." For distædet, cf. Amphitr. I. iii. 5, "Domi distædeat." — Hæcine erant itiones, &c., "Were these then his frequent goings, and long sojourns at Lemnos?" Hæc = "hæ," cf. Heaut. IV. vii. 10, note. Westerhov. quotes Virg. Aen. iv. 675, "Hoc illud, germana, fuit?"—Hæcine—vilitas, "Was this the cheapness, that used to reduce our rents?" cf. V. iii. 6.

25. Esse in hac re meritam. If with the Bembine MS. we read, "meritum," here, there is nothing out of course in the construction. But the reading of MSS. and editions generally is "meritam;" in which case we must suppose the verb to be used passively, as in II. i. 75, above, where see the note.—Sed ea quin sit ignoscenda ("nego" sc. from ver. 25). "But I deny that it is an unpardonable offence;" cf. Hecyr. V. i. 11. Another reading is Sed eam, quæ sit ignoscenda, "But such an one, as is pardonable."—Verba fiunt mortuo, "You are talking to the dead," or "to one as good as dead." Cf. Plaut. Poen. IV. ii. 18, "Verba facit emortuo." In ver. 27, negligentia tuo and odio tuo, "indifference" or "aversion to you;" cf. Heaut. II. iii. 66; Madvig. 297,

6. obs. 1.—Abhinc annos quindceim. Cf. Andr. I. i. 42, “Abhinc trionnum.”

30. E medio abiit, qui — scrupulus, “Your only grievance is removed,” Colman. See Andr. V. iv. 37, note; Adelph. II. ii. 20; and above, V. vii. 61.

32. Cupio in hac re misera—defungier, “I’m anxious to put an end to the trouble with this business—to be quit of it with this business.” Cf. Adelph. III. iv. 62, “Utinam hic sit modo Defunctum,” “I wish it were only ended with this.” See note ibid. Madame Dacier wrongly translates “Je veux pour toujours rompre avec lui.”

37. Exsequias Chremeti, &c., “Whoever would attend the obsequies of Chremes, now’s the time!” (said to the audience). The words of the crier proclaiming a public funeral, according to Lindenbrog.—Sic dabo, “Thus I’ll pay him off.” Cf. Plaut. Men. H. G. 506, “Sic datur,” which Pareus explains as “sermo castigantis et pœnas sumentis.” Cf. Pseud. I. ii. 22, “Hem, sic datur, si quis herum servos spernit.”—Age nunc, age, &c., “Now let any one provoke Phormio, if he dare.”—Mactatum atque hic est infortunio, “I’ll cause him to be afflicted with like misfortunes to this man.” Macto is from the root mag. “to be great,” seen in “magnus,” and means first to “honour,” hence “to sacrifice.” Plautus constantly uses it as here; cf. Aulul. H. G. 490, “Dotatæ mactant et malo et damno vivos;” Plaut. Pœnul. III. i. 14, “Divitem audacter solemus mactare infortunio;” Trinumm. IV. ii. 151, “Macto te infortunio.”

41. Usque ad aurem ogganniat, “She can for ever din in his ear,” cf. Adelph. IV. ii. 17, “Quid ille gannit!” cf. Plaut. Asin. II. iv. 16 “Centies eadem imperem atque obganniam.”

42. At meo merito, credo, “Well, it’s owing to my own deserts, no doubt.” These words are ironical, cf. above, I. ii. 90. Madame Dacier translates, “Mais sans doute Je me suis attiré cela moi-même.”—Singulatum, more commonly “singillatum.” Sometimes “singultum.”—Minime gentium, “Not in the least in the world;” Eun. IV. i. 11; Heaut. V. i. 55; Madvig. Gr. 284, obs. 9.

45. Fieri infectum non potest, “What’s done can’t be undone.” Cf. Plaut. Aulul. 698; Hildyard. Hor. Od. III. xxix. 45, “Diffinget, infectumque reddet,” &c. — Per fallaciam ab illo abstuli, “I got through trickery from that husband of yours.” Abstuli is used thus by Ter. Heaut. IV. viii. 9, “Ut eā viā (per fallaciam) abs te argentum auferretur.” Bentley for “illo” reads “isto.”

53. Quo ore—objurgabis? “How will you have the face to chide him?” Cf. for quo ore, V. vii. 24 above, note; Heaut. IV. iii. 22, note. Westerhov. quotes Juvenal xiv. 50, “Unde tibi frontem libertatemque parentis, Cum facias pejora senex?”

58. Satin’ tibi est? Ch. Mihin? This is Fleckeisen’s reading. The original reading was “Satin’ id est? Ph. Immo vero,” &c., Bentley, suggested to add “Chreme” after “est,” and to attribute “immo vero,” &c. to Chremes. Fleckeisen’s plan is as good. Pulchre discedo, “I come off famously.” Cf. Plaut. Stich. II. ii. 70, “Discessisses non male.” See also above, V. ii. 8.

60. Tuo summus Phædriæ, “And a special friend to your son, Phædria.” Cf. Andr. V. vi. 6; Adelph. III. ii. 54, note. — Benigne dicas, “You’re very kind!” Cf. Adelph. IV. v. 68, “Perbenignè;”

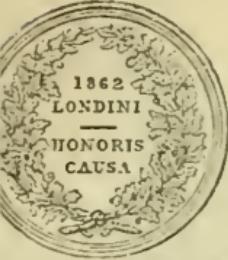

Hor. Epist. I. vii. 15, "At tu quantumvis tolle. Benignè;" Plaut. Truc. I. ii. 27, "Benignè dicis." In vers. 63 and 64, "Quod" is i. q. "propter quod."

64. Et quod tuo viro oculi doleant? "And a thing to grieve your husband's sight," "whereat your husband's eyes may be vexed." Cf. Plaut. Asin. V. i. 4; Most. IV. ii. 10.

66. Jam hic, faxo, aderit. The same words occur above, II. i. 78: see note. Vos valete et plandite (to the audience). Cf. Andr. V. vi. 17; Heaut. V. v. 23, notes
