QUADRIANNUAL HISTORICAL PROGRESS REPORT

CIVIL EDUCATION

1. EDUCATION:

a. Civil Education:

(1) Board of Education. Since the establishment of a prefectural Board of Education composed of seven members, including one woman, in November 1948, responsibility for the school system has been effectively assumed by that Board. The public has accepted the authority of the Board and, to some extent, their responsibilities in relation to the Board. In December 1948 the six sections of the education department with two hundred and two workers, including personnel of eleven gun branches, were organized as the secretariat. By September 1949 the number of employees had risen to 292. In September 1949 the functions of the research division were delegated to the general affairs division, leaving five divisions: general affairs, school education, social education, guidance, physical education. About half of the employees have been changed, and the number was cut to two hundred and thirty-five.

(2) Reorganization of Schools. Districting and consolidation have not been completed in Kagoshima and remain the most pressing problem to be studied by the Board. Primary School districts are as before the war. Two hundred and ten lower secondary schools were established in 1947 based on the primary school districts. The present number is two hundred and twenty-three main LSS and seventy branches. The thirty-seven prefectural and three municipal upper secondary schools are not districted, but advisory committees are working on this problem as well as consideration of LSS districts. However, districting is being considered almost entirely from the local point of view. In 1947 there were one hundred and thirty youth schools. These buildings were turned over to primary, LSS, and USS.

All primary and nearly all LSS are now coeducational. In 1948, fifteen prefectural USS adopted coeducation. By 1949, there were twenty-seven and five prefectural and three municipal semi-coeducational USS (boys and girls in the same school but not in mixed classes). There are five USS with boys only. Teacher-pupil ratios are as follows:

Primary -- 1:37.3 based on one teacher to 68 students (where student population allows) and 1-3 teachers for special subjects. Average class size 46.6 and 1.25 teachers for each class.

LSS -- 1:28.3 based on 60 students and 1.7 teachers to the class.

USS -- based on Mombusho standard for USS.

In 1945 there were forty-four branches of primary schools. Elimination and organization of these schools have balanced each other. At present there are forty-three branches. In 1947, sixty-two branch LSS were established. These increased to sixty-five in 1948 and seventy in 1949. In 1948, one branch USS was established but was made independent in 1949.

(3) In-Service Training. There are three teacher consultants and fifteen assistants in the guidance section of the secretariat. There are fourteen assigned to guns and cities, each of whom has five teacher helpers. Consultants are divided into three categories: primary, secondary, and vocational. Consultants are functioning reasonably well in view of very limited funds.

In 1947, ten schools were designated as try-out schools (two primary, six LSS and two USS). These schools formed an association and have made data of their experiments available to all schools. Chief experiments include homeroom system, five-day week, and student activities program. One LSS has been dropped from the group on account of inactivity.

The try-out schools adopted the five-day week in April 1948. The Ministry of Education requirements of a 235-day year prevented the Board from requiring all schools to adopt the five-day week. Forty-four schools, in addition to the nine try-out schools, have done so.

Courses:

1947--About 8,846 primary and LSS teachers attended courses on the new education given in 34 places.

1948--About 7,596 primary teachers and 4,292 LSS teachers attended ten-day courses held in 96 places. Courses for USS teachers were given at 71 places. One-day courses for principals were held at three places.

1949--Courses in subject fields were given at 13 places for 1,285 primary teachers.
920 LSS teachers attended 10-day courses in subject fields given at 13 places.
801 USS teachers attended 5-11 day courses given at 24 places.
2-day training course for 30 teacher consultants.
250 English teachers of all levels attended a 5-day course on the teaching of English as a foreign language given by a specialist.

Methods of IST include weekly faculty conferences, special lectures, re-education courses, visits to other schools, correspondence courses, and professional reading.

The secretariat as well as civil affairs officers conduct both announced and unannounced inspections throughout the prefecture. Teacher consultants are required to spend at least two days each week visiting schools. Emphasis has been on giving assistance rather than harsh criticism. Opportunity is always given for teachers to ask questions and discuss their problems. Other topics most frequently emphasized are: noise, discipline, curriculum planning, sex education, coeducation, five-day week, and in-service-training.

The oral method and varied techniques to increase pupil interest are being stressed in the LSS, but few teachers are capable of teaching other than by the old translation and grammar method. The USS courses are based on college entrance requirements and contain only difficult, literary English, The five-day course in the structural approach to the teaching of English, given by the Assistant Regional Education Officer, is expected to improve the teaching of English greatly.

Development of the social science curriculum has one of the most difficult but fruitful problem for Japanese teachers. Much study and many conferences have been concerned with it. The secretariat suggested that cities and guns develop their own basic units appropriate to local conditions. Committees for social science curriculum were organized in the cities and guns for this.

Romaji education was popularized after a series of lectures for teachers on its purposes and techniques of teaching it. Three primary schools started studies in this field, and other schools have visited them for demonstration.

For three years the textbook shortage was acute. But since 1948 distribution has been greatly improved. In August 1949 the second textbook exhibitions were held to give teachers and principals the opportunity of choosing textbooks best suited to their purposes.

(4) School Construction.

Reconstructed floor space 17,905 tsubo.

(5) Vocational Training. Technical education has not been very important in this largely agricultural prefecture. Vocational education has been almost wholly agricultural. Until 1948 emphasis was put largely on food production. In 1949 the Board of Promotion of Vocational Education was organized and the plans of vocational education of all schools were reviewed. An industrial textbook is being prepared. Recently a conference was held to encourage teaching agricultural bookkeeping in mathematics classes. The home project method has been introduced into the teaching of agriculture.

(6) Special Schools. There were ten higher schools in this prefecture before the new university system was instituted. Among these, five were national, four prefectural, and one private. These five national schools became the four colleges of Kagoshima National University and three of the prefectural colleges (including the Medical School) became two colleges of Kagoshima Prefectural University. The national university has the College of Literature and Science, the Fishery College, Agriculture College, and Teachers College. This new university opened September 1, 1949. The prefectural university has the Technical College and Medical College. This university opened in June 1949. The prefectural women's higher school and the private commercial higher school have applied for junior college status effective in 1950.

There is one school for the blind and one for the deaf in the prefecture. Both of these schools offer primary, lower and upper secondary education.

There are 1,015 blind children and 928 deaf children who should be registered in these schools, but only seventy-six are in the school for the blind and one hundred and nineteen in the school for the deaf. This is due to the small capacity of the schools and the lack of understanding of the parents. The secretariat is making an effort to inform the parents of handicapped children, as well as the general public, on the importance of providing adequate educational advantages for these children. The Board is planning to establish branches of these two schools.

There were five private schools for girls and four for boys before the new school system was established. Some of these were combined, some closed, and some became new type schools after the reorganization. There are now two private girls' schools, one for boys, and one which is semi-coeducational. One new type upper secondary school was established in 1949 as a branch school of Tamagawa Gakuen in Tokyo.

(7) Political Activity. All posters and materials pertaining to militarism were burned or abolished. Under the Teacher Screening Board one hundred and seventy-one teachers were purged. Of those who have applied for teaching positions one hundred and forty were disqualified. One teacher resigned in August 1949 while evidence of militaristic attitude in teaching physical education was being discussed by the Board. At present there are no known cases of militaristic or improper political activities among teachers. The Board has made no official statements regarding political activities, since the members consider the law sufficiently clear on this point. A few students of the Seventh College have participated in political demonstrations and strikes from time to time until June 1949 when a change in the student government officers brought anti-communist leadership. Known political activity among students is insignificant.

(8) Finance. The percentage of the educational budget in relation to the prefectural budget has been 33% in 1946, 43% in 1947, 40% in 1948, and 42% in 1949. The budget itself has been 121,264,006 yen in 1946, 442,798,750 yen in 1947, 1,098,094,304 yen in 1948, and 1,437,846,483 yen in 1949. When the very poor economic condition of the prefecture is considered, the percentages shown for education show that it has been considered of top importance. The largest expenditure has been for salaries of teachers. The budget has been inadequate to support real educational reform satisfactorily. Contributions have increased each year. The figures are 2,797,349 yen in 1946, 4,718,535 yen in 1947, 6,320,245 yen in 1948, and 6,338,500 yen in 1949. Most of these contributions are made by PTA's, and the money has been spent largely for repairs of school buildings.

(9) Teachers Union. Early in 1946 the middle school teachers organized the Teachers Union. In September 1946 the primary teachers organized unions. The traditional prejudice that divided primary and middle school teachers was eliminated when these two unions were combined under the influence of the Japan Teachers Union in December 1947. In August 1949 the other education associations were combined with the Teachers Union and principals were admitted to membership. Since the organization of the Board of Education cooperation between the union and the Board has been satisfactory. Slogans and resolutions of the Japan Teachers Union containing the communist line have been advanced at the union meetings, but the number of teachers actually sympathizing with communist thought is small. The union has not officially participated in political concerns.

b. Social Education:

(1) Adult Education. There are thirty-three municipal CPH's in the prefecture and two hundred ninety-two buraku CPH's. The small number is due to severe war damage and resultant economic stress. Women's and youth organizations are now urging provisions of these facilities. A few CPH's are developing very active programs. All furnish reading materials to the public and a meeting place for community groups.

The prefectural library was heavily damaged during the war, but no books were destroyed. In November 1945 the library was reopened. The CIE American Reading Room was added in January 1947, the Labor Library in January 1948, the Children's Room in August 1948 and a deposit collection from the Kumamoto SCAP CIE Information Center. There are fourteen branches in rural and island districts. In March 1949 a circulating library on a truck was started. The library, considered one of the best in the six large cities, now has a staff of thirty-one employees, a budget of 6,682,643 yen of which 1,850,000 yen is used for new books, and a stock of 11,984 books. The number of books borrowed has risen from 1523 by thirty-seven groups in 1945 to 14,479 by 725 groups in 1949. The number of books purchased has risen from one hundred thirty-nine in 1945 to 2,800 as of 31 August for 1949.

Many organizations attempted adult education courses, but most of these were very inadequate at first. During 1948 and 1949 some good community schools were started. The I Corps Adult Education Course has been the most valuable program in this field. By August 1949, 60% of the towns and villages had started classes for citizens and others were waiting for the farming season to end.

The forty-five part-time USS's and fifteen branches in the prefecture had an enrollment of approximately 10,000 students in 1949 after one year of operation during which enrollment dropped 700 students. These schools have poor teachers, inadequate facilities, and an unsatisfactory program of work. The Board of Education is acting to improve them, in some cases, joining them to full-time schools.

b. (2) Women's Organization. The traditional women's association, the Fujin Kai, has been gradually reorganizing to develop specific interests and purposes, membership requirements, and an active organization of the basic units. Two levels of representation in the hierarchy of organization have been eliminated, and the city, town, village, and prefectural federations have been changed to liaison councils with emphasis on the activities planned and carried out in the local groups. The committee system has been adopted and studies are being made of parliamentary procedure. A questionnaire was completed by every group. This will be used as the basis for recognition of standard and honor units by the liaison councils. A few small independent groups have been formed and are meeting.

The Women's and Minors' Bureau has been functioning since April 1948 with a field representative and two assistants. Special emphasis programs, such as Women's Week, have been carried out very effectively. Ability to use publicity media has been improved. The Bureau has completed some surveys and research studies but has concerned itself too much with inspections and individual cases. The field representative has participated in a liaison council composed of leaders of various women's organizations and government agencies during the past year. This group is now jointly sponsoring with the WMB a monthly meeting for women at which various social questions are discussed.

Nine Home Demonstration Agents were appointed April 1, 1949. The slow development of a national program delayed constructive planning at the prefectural level. A regional conference held in July gave the program a start. Agents have prepared and distributed printed materials, participated in all principal women's conferences, written a handbook on their work and carry out scheduled visits to rural areas throughout the prefecture teaching women how to improve their homes.

(3) Youth Organizations. The traditional youth organization, Seinen Dan, was reorganized in July 1949--limiting the age of members of twenty-five years or less, abolishing the complex federations in favor of prefectural and city (town and village) liaison councils, and giving final authority and importance to local units. Four full-time youth workers have helped groups throughout the prefecture to develop better recreational and activity programs. Junior Red Cross is active in 18 schools. The Children's club movement has been started. Two Boy Scout troops are registered, and one Girl Scout troop has been organized. Leadership training for youth leaders is a fundamental need.

(4) PTA's. The PTA was first introduced in Kagoshima in June 1947 through the distribution of informational material. Within a year every school in the prefecture had established a group, but there was little difference between the new organization and the old supporters' association. During 1949 parent education was emphasized through good programs, school visits, and community schools. City and gun liaison councils have been established. In some schools the PTA has developed a few good activities, but none has a unified organization meeting monthly and using strict parliamentary procedure.

(5) Physical Education. Fencing, sumo, and such training has been eliminated from the schools along with all equipment pertaining to militaristic training. Two new organizations, the prefectural Physical Education Association and the School Physical Education League, are working to develop a new concept of physical education and greater interest in sports. Conferences and courses have been held to train teachers in the new program. Some schools are beginning to get books and equipment. But the old type annual athletic meet is still receiving too much concentration and few teachers yet understand how to carry out the new physical education program.

The first leadership training school for recreation was held in October 1947. In August 1947 a square dance club was organized and a course was held. Since that time square dancing has gained considerable popularity and hundreds of young people have learned it. A few new games and songs have been taught to women's and youth groups throughout the prefecture, but much more work is needed in this field.

The School Lunch Program started in January 1947 when 54,674 persons were fed in fifty-five schools. In 1948 there were 63,620 persons in sixty-eight schools, and in July 1949, 95,906 persons in one hundred and fourteen schools. The cost is 30 yen per month per student in urban areas where the lunch is served four times a week and 25 yen in rural areas where it is served at least three times a week. The program is now under the supervision of a prefectural Board of School Lunch.

Several safety campaigns were held during 1948 and 1949 through cooperation of PTA's, schools, youth organizations, the Labor Standards Office, and the police. During the summers of 1948 and 1949 Kagoshima City operated two beaches with lifeguards and a complete water safety program.

(6) Arts, Culture, and Religion. Two of the leading Japanese artists, Ebihara and Yoshii, are living in Kagoshima. The Minami Nippon Newspaper encourages public interest in the arts through exhibits and contests. There is some interest in establishing an art hall and in organizing an orchestra. A number of choral groups have been organized and give public concerts. There is little activity in the literary field, though a few poetry clubs are meeting regularly. Several groups interested in Noh drama meet regularly and give informal performances.

4. CONCLUSION:

The schools have been brought under the control of a prefectural Board of Education. The secretariat has been established but is not efficiently organized or well staffed. The school system has been organized on the 6-3-3 plan and coeducation has been adopted throughout the system. Problems of districting, consolidation and construction are not being studied and solved from the perspective of the prefectural level. There has been improvement in ability to keep accurate records and supply honest statistical data, but inflated figures are still used in reports to the Ministry of Education and administrative personnel are listed as teachers. Problems of budgeting are not being studied scientifically. The five-day week has been introduced but may not be generally accepted by all schools for several years. The comprehensive curriculum has not been accepted as a definite policy. Separate vocational schools are being established. Some teachers are taking advantage of in-service-training opportunities with enthusiasm and are attempting to develop skill in the new methods through study and experimentation. Facilities for training and retraining teachers are still very inadequate. Teacher consultants are not functioning properly. School health conditions are poor, and school nurses are not trained for giving health instruction or supervision. Principals are shifted too frequently and on the whole, seem to be one of the weakest elements in the administration, giving little leadership to teachers. Educational cliques based on graduation from certain normal schools are still a strong influence in personnel policies.

The need for adult education and active community organizations is being felt, and there is much experimentation. New techniques of discussion are being adopted and learned, but there is little ability to follow parliamentary usage. There are few trained leaders for any groups, especially children and youth. The number of meetings, especially of women's groups, has increased greatly.

Kagoshima has been described as being unusually feudalistic. It seems true that the people are more emotional, have stronger prejudices and opinions, and are more deeply rooted in local traditions than some other parts of Japan. The men-women relationships are probably less progressive than in other prefectures, and the actual social development of women is very retarded. The superintendent of education is extremely conservative and autocratic. He seems sincerely interested in education and has a reasonably friendly personality. However, he is not highly qualified for his position and has no inclination toward genuinely democratic inter-personal relations with co-workers. While burdened with the serious financial and other large problems, he has a tendency to retain control over all details of school administration and is impatient with the small problems involved. The chief of social education, the women's affairs officer, and other prefectural educational officials are also poorly qualified to give democratic leadership to educational reform. Their attitudes tend to follow the old bureaucratic pattern.

5. RECOMMENDATIONS:

Japanese education officials need assistance in the following fundamental problems:

Districting and other reorganization matters
Teacher allocations
*Records and budgeting
In-service-training and teacher education
School Health Administration
Board of Education Policies and Functioning
Reorganization of Secretariat
Adult Education Programs
Training courses for democratic leadership (especially for youth and women)
Program of try-out schools

*(Specialized assistance required)

Assist communities in development of independent organizations and recreational activities.

Assist WMB and Home Demonstration Agents in development of special programs for women.
