LA CRESCENTA CARPENTERS AND PLASTERERS SEEK PART IN BUDDIES' HOME BUILDING

Labor Is Completely Lined up awaiting Results From Merchants' Sales for Purchase of Materials, the Least Part of the Cost

LUMBER COMPANIES HAVE SPECIFICATIONS List of Those Whose Merchandise Will Contribute to the Fund Includes a Variety From Real Estate to Furniture and Shoes

The La Crescenta carpenters and plasterers have asked for a part in the building of the Five Buddies' homes at La Crescenta.

The carpenters, numbering fourteen or fifteen, living at La Crescenta, felt that they had been overlooked in the movement of labor toward the construction. Accordingly they asked for places on the jobs.

The plasterers, of whom there are five living at La Crescenta, made a similar request.

They were granted places and the union men of La Crescenta were gladly admitted to the ranks of union labor now all in line, ready to swing out onto the job.

The men are ready, the transportation for the material is ready. All but the lumber has been accounted for.

Of the five lumber yards to whom the specifications have been submitted, only one up to late yesterday has turned in a price for the material. It is expected that the bids of the others will be received some time today.

Meanwhile, the sales for the cost of the material are going on today throughout Glendale, where the Red Card shows in the window.

The amounts to go to the fund for the little homes varies from 10 to 2 per cent, the latter among the shoe men.

The variety of goods offered runs from real estate to house furniture and loggery.

For the benefit of those who have not patronized these merchants thus far, the list is reprinted today.

Approximately $1200 is needed now for the material, mainly lumber, so that sum must come from the sales.

All percentages of from 2 to 10 per cent—the sales must be sustained in large volume during the remainder of the week to make the total amount.

The Glendale Daily Press advertising, added to the funds collected at La Crescenta, has practically financed four of the houses.

The merchants who have sales today and on following days follow:

Grossman-Miller Furniture Co., Brand and California, sales today.

A. Gelmor, 138 South Brand, tailored ladies' and men's clothing, 5 per cent, sales today.

Barlow, furniture, 624 1/2 East Broadway, 5 per cent to the building fund, sales today.

Kenny Music Shop, 203 North Brand, today, 5 per cent on Gramophones.

Ladies' Toggery, 133 South Brand, 5 per cent, sales today.

Quality Toggery, 111 North Glendale avenue, beginning today, 5 per cent sales will run all week.

A. Baines' Shoe Repair Shop, 312 East Broadway, sale today.

McGee's Dry Goods store, 614 East Broadway, sale Wednesday, 5 per cent.

Welch, Broadway Confectionery, 604 East Broadway, sales Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 2 per cent.

Broadway Shoe Store, 312 East Broadway, sales Wednesday, 2 per cent.

Anderson Dry Goods Co., 516 E. Broadway, sales Friday, percentage not decided.

H. F. Brandenburg, watch maker and jeweler, 229 1/2 North Brand, a recent arrival in Glendale, is devoting the balance of the week to a sale for the buddies' fund and is giving 10 per cent of his total sales. His windows reveal many good bargains in jewelry and silverware, and he invites the public to inspect them.

Mr. and Mrs. Brandenburg took an active interest in war work before coming to Glendale, and they deem it a great pleasure to be able to help the boys again.

W. W. Welch, proprietor of the Broadway Confectionery at 604 East Broadway, is another booster for the buddies' building fund, and is giving a percentage of his sales today, Thursday and Friday for the fund. He carries a good line, and invites the public to come in and get acquainted.

Mr. Welch is a big booster for

Coming Clean Is Harder Than to Tell Falehoods

To acknowledge error and to admit mistakes is a far more courageous thing to do than to tell a falsehood in order to retain a bit of false pride, according to James W. Foley in The Listening Post this evening. He cites several stories which in times gone by were used in school books for examples of courage which now is thought of as stubbornness. In his comment on the d. v's news, Henry James speaks of the audacious conceit of Margot Asquith and the contemptible conduct, as he terms it, of Mrs. Pitt Campbell. He declares that it would be a sorry day for English women if they were to be judged by the present occupying much space in the press.

The police as related to politics is interestingly discussed in the editorial columns this evening. It is cited that to make the office of the police chief distinctly political would make the welfare of the public secondary.

Dr. Frank Crane introduces his very interesting article this evening with the thought that "organized labor ought to turn its attention to music." Della Stewart in her corner this evening shows us how a bit of tact, which is nothing more than thoughtfulness of another's viewpoint, can sweeten a life wonderfully.

LITTLE LOST DOG WINS NEW HOME WITH TRICKS

Nearly Blind and Old He Earns Care by Funny Stunts

He was a little, white, wiry-haired old dog and nearly blind. Lost, but sturdily he groped about in the night on Ivy street, trying to locate the home or automobile that belonged to his folks.

Somehow they had disappeared in the darkness that encompassed him.

He thought it over in a courageous fashion and took stock of all the houses that front the strange street.

He had tricks, funny cunning tricks, that amused humans. Some humans liked dogs anyway. Perhaps he might find some of that kind.

So he went up a wide driveway, and stopped, at the rear door of a house wrapped in the darkness.

"What in the world is that dog barking for?" asked Mrs. Cunningham, at 347 Ivy. She got up to look.

The little fellow sat up on his hind legs and barked a bid for a welcome. He turned around and he rolled over. Then he played dead and sat up, tongue out, expectantly, and the door opened wide.

He went in from the cold, lonesome street.

Since then he has been such a good little chap, so knowing, and a sport. But his owner, if he has one, may have him if he has not forgotten the little chap.

NOTED SPEAKERS AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TONIGHT

McQuilken of Philadelphia and Ramsey of Pasadena to Speak

Rev. Robert C. McQuilken of Philadelphia and Rev. A. J. Ramsey, D. D. of Pasadena will be at the Presbyterian church this evening and will give short addresses.

These two men will be the speakers at the Victorious Life Conference to be held here from May 7 to 14. These conferences have been held for a number of years all over the country and many visitors from all parts of Southern California will be attracted to Glendale by this gathering.

The local committee in charge of James A. Newton is busily engaged in completing the arrangements. The first session of the conference will be Sunday morning when Dr. Ramsey will preach the opening sermon. All the sessions of this conference will be open to the public.

SNEAK THIEF VISITS MURPHY

While the proprietors of the Murphy Furniture store, 1261 South Brand boulevard, were waiting on customers between 4 and 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the cash drawer of the store was broken into and $85 was stolen.

The thieves are at a loss to know how this theft could have been committed while they were so close by. The police were notified immediately and are now making every effort to bring the guilty person or persons to justice.

A Vote of Confidence

The big vote cast for the high school bonds should be a gratification to the citizens of the Union high school district, and a source of pride to the board of trustees.

To the one it is a sign that there is a strong civic consciousness in the city. In the election of the board of trustees, about 3500 votes were cast. This was considered unusual at the time. It was credited to the close rivalry of the candidates. In the bond election, the people cast approximately half as many votes to sustain that board in the development of the high school.

The people yesterday gave a vote of confidence backed by a trust of $600,000. Out of the total vote, there were only 75 people who refused to trust the board of trustees and refused to sustain their plans for a new high school.

Naturally the board of trustees will feel the honor that has been bestowed upon it by the people of the district. For it is an honor as well as a responsibility to have the expenditure of more than half a million of the people's money.

That the responsibilities for the expenditure will be met and every dollar will get a dollar's worth is written in the record of the men who constitute the board. In this city is fortunate beyond many communities.

Glendale has every reason to be contented with its officials, and its school system. And it showed that it was.

ARMY AND NAVY STORE PAYS $25.00 ON ITS SALES

The Army and Navy Store today announced a contribution of $25 to the Buddies' Home Building Fund. It is the percentage of the sale Saturday. The sum represents about $500 worth of goods sold that single day. More, it represents $500 voting for the cause the sale represented. It shows that the public will finance the material for the homes at La Crescenta.

MILITIA MEN TO LOCAL COMPANY HOLD ATHLETIC CARNIVAL

Hackenschmidt Agrees to Meet Man of His Caliber on Program

An athletic carnival is being arranged for the members of the two companies of the California national guard stationed in Glendale and their friends. The carnival will be held in the gymnasium of the high school. The date has not been set as all the entries must be listed and a date that is convenient for them chosen. Sergeant Paul Vissman is in charge of the details.

Hackenschmidt has agreed to wrestle for the guards on that night and a man in his class will be secured to wrestle with him. There is considerable boxing and wrestling talent among the members of the two companies and several matches will be arranged from this talent.

Plans are being developed to secure one or two good professional boxing bouts for that night also.

This will be the first of a series of athletic carnivals to be given for the national guardsmen in this city. It will be an invitational carnival to which the members of the two companies can invite their friends.

FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS CONVENES

21st Annual Convention Opens at University of So. California

LOS ANGELES, May 3.—California clubwomen may represent at Bovard hall, University of Southern California, the 21st annual convention of the California federation of women's clubs opened today.

The program opened with Mrs. William A. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Mariana Bertola presiding. Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley, chairman, read the report of the local board, which opened the way for reports from many officers and district presidents.

The feature of the morning session was an address by Dr. Rufus B. Von Klein Smid, new president of U. S. C. His theme, "American Citizenship," sounded the keynote of the convention.

One of the big questions before the session this year, and one which was informally discussed on every hand today, was "Shall the federation rejoin the women's legislative council, from which it withdrew last year?"

"AUNT" SALLIE DIES
LOMPOC, Calif., May 3.—Aunt Sallie Saunders was buried here today. Her death Monday broke one of the few remaining links of the personal history of Abraham Lincoln.

For "Aunt Sallie" was the sister of Ann Rutledge, youthful sweetheart of the martyred president. Although aged 92 at the time of her death Mrs. Saunders loved to recount the visits of "Honest Abe" to her home—a courtship ended by the death of her sister.

LIGHT ALL VALLEY ROAD IS NEW SLOGAN

San Fernando Boulevard Assn. to Petition for Extension

The San Fernando Boulevard Improvement Association held a well attended and enthusiastic business session Tuesday evening in the offices of the president, William Griffin, at which excellent committee reports were received.

Lloyd Wilson presented the report of the committee which had been appointed to present a petition to the city council for the lighting of San Fernando road, telling of the favorable action of the city fathers and of their approval of the two-light standard selected by the association. Following the receipt of the report the good news was discussed with relation to its effect on property values.

Mr. Wilson stated that he had refused a $10,000 offer for a lot he owns at the corner of Park and San Fernando road since the news of the council's action had spread abroad. It was agreed that it would be far reaching in advantage to property owners.

Reports were also submitted concerning petitions now circulating for the extension of the lighting system to the northern and southern Glendale limits of the thoroughfare which already have a good many signatures.

There was likewise discussion relative to a bridge across the Los Angeles river to Griffith park, the committee, headed by Mr. Salver, stating its petition for the improvement will soon be ready for presentation to the board of supervisors.

Announcement was made that the next meeting to be held the evening of May 16 in the hall of the branch library at Los Feliz and Brand, will be a lively social affair at which refreshments will be served and a general get-acquainted good time will be enjoyed. Every member, it is hoped, will be present.

The reports of the evening included a review of work done by the committee named to boost for the high school bonds.

LA CRESCENTA FOLKS HELP BUDDIES

Women's Club, Children and Community Church Donate $120.01.

The silver offering at the tea given by the La Crescenta Women's club last Sunday has now reached $107.51. The committee in charge feels very grateful to the club members and friends for their generous response.

This amount will be donated to the building fund for homes of the five Thurnycroft buddies. The drive is the splendid work of the Glendale Press.

The La Crescenta school children added $12.35 to the fund. The Community church sent in a donation of $12.50, which makes a total donation for La Crescenta of $120.01.

LARGEST EMERALD IN U. S. STOLEN

NEW YORK, May 3.—Upon discovery of what is believed to be the largest emerald in the United States and one of the largest in existence police and private detectives of many cities today pinned hope of finding the thieves who robbed Mrs. Mitchell Harrison, wife of a sugar refiner of $100,000 in jewels.

The robbery occurred Sunday while Mrs. Harrison, socially prominent in Washington, Philadelphia and New York was en route to New York where yesterday she sailed for Europe.

Mrs. Harrison personally packed her jewels in a traveling bag upon boarding the train, and upon nearing New York set it out in the aisle while she put on her coat. When she reached for the bag it was gone.

HIGH SCHOOL BOND ISSUE CARRIES BY OVERWHELMING VOTE THROUGHOUT DISTRICT

Out of the Total of 1,832 Votes Cast, All But 75 Are Cast for the Issuance of the Securities and Expenditure of Fund by Present Board

WORK WILL BE RUSHED ALL THIS SUMMER

Eagle Rock Casts Highest Vote of Outlying Sections, Giving 326 for and Only One Vote Against the Plant as Proposed

The high school bond issue was carried yesterday by a large majority. The official figures for the election are 75 votes against issuing bonds for the new high school as against 1757 in favor of the measure. The outcome of the election was not a surprise to the people of Glendale, as from the time the proposal to build a new high school in this city was first made there has been no organized opposition. The election yesterday was considered a mere formality attending the issuing of bonds.

The district casting the largest vote was the Glendale Central precinct, voting at the high school. There were 1015 votes cast in this precinct, 982 favoring the bonds and 33 against them. The smallest vote was cast in Tunjuna where 13 votes, all in favor of the bonds, were cast.

There were 1332 votes cast in the entire district embracing Sunland, Tunjuna, La Crescenta, Eagle Rock and the three precincts in Glendale, 383 were cast in the outlying territory and 1449 in the city proper. Eagle Rock cast the heaviest vote of any of the outlying territory. There were 326 votes cast in favor of the bonds there and 1 against.

Following is a table of votes:

PRECINCT	For	Against
Sunland	11	7
Tunjuna	13	0
La Crescenta	23	2
Eagle Rock	326	1
North Precinct, Glendale	235	23
Central Precinct, Glendale	982	33
South Precinct, Glendale	167	9

Irving H. Oliver, business manager of the high school, said this morning: "There was no doubt in my mind as to the outcome of the election as the people realize that Glendale needs a larger high school. At present we are accommodating approximately 1300 students in an institution planned for about half that number. Next year we expect even more students than this year. People will not quit coming to Glendale to make their home and we must provide adequate school facilities for their children as our school system is one of the reasons for the growth of this city."

That work will start as soon as possible on the new high school to be erected on Verdugo road between Broadway and Colorado is evidenced by the fact that Mr. Oliver is not planning a vacation this summer away from Glendale. He said that he expects to be entirely too busy with architects and builders during the summer to leave for any length of time. An attempt will be made to complete the new school buildings within the next year.

The committee in charge of the May party given on Monday night reported that the entertainment was a success both in a financial and social way. The lodge from San Fernando and representatives of the lodge in Los Angeles attended the party and felt that they had spent a very enjoyable evening.

Plans for the initiation of four candidates on the night of May 16 were discussed and it was decided to extend an invitation to the Edelweiss Lodge of the order in Los Angeles to come to Glendale and put on the degree work on that night.

The committee in charge of the May party given on Monday night reported that the entertainment was a success both in a financial and social way. The lodge from San Fernando and representatives of the lodge in Los Angeles attended the party and felt that they had spent a very enjoyable evening.

CITY COUNCIL TO INSPECT PAVING FOR STREETS

To Prepare for Laying in Sycamore Canyon Boulevard

Several members of the Glendale city council are visiting a number of nearby cities today with the aim of determining the best concrete-asphalt pavement to be used for a number of the streets to be put in in Glendale. Several different kinds of pavement have been laid in various cities of Southern California, and it is with the aim of determining the one that is giving the best service that the officials are scouring the country.

Sycamore Canyon boulevard, South Brand boulevard, Los Feliz road and other thoroughfares in Glendale will be improved with this better class of pavement and the council is trying to give the property owners the very best pavement possible for the money.

ART EXHIBITION CLOSES WITH DEFICIT

Glendale Fails to Support Its First Showing of Culture

The last of the recent art exhibit in Glendale was taken away this morning and the end of the Glendale first art exhibit was marked up. The exhibit, sponsored by the Sculptors' Guild of Southern California, was a success from an artistic and educational viewpoint but from a financial standpoint it was a losing proposition.

Practically all of the school children of Glendale were given the opportunity to see these wonderful works of art. They were brought over to the chamber of commerce assembly room, where the exhibit was held, from the various schools under the direction of the teachers, and each masterpiece was explained to them. A sculptor was also present during the children's hours at the exhibit, modelling in clay.

A small admission fee was charged in the evening to cover the expense of insuring the masterpieces and to pay the expense of bringing them to Glendale. The exhibit along with the price of admission, and in addition there was an excellent musical program each evening, given by some of the leading musicians in the south, but still the people of Glendale did not give the exhibit the support that was expected and to which the sponsors of the show were entitled, and when the exhibit was ended a slight deficit was found. This was made up by several business men and organizations who are striving to assist in the civic, art and political improvement of Glendale.

SEEK RELIEF FROM RANDALL ASKS A 'BULL' MONTANA IS BREATHLESS HOUR AGAIN CALLED FAR AWAY

Board of Education Eliminates Los Angeles Pupils

Steps were taken last night at the meeting of the Glendale board of education at the Intermediate school for the relief of the crowded conditions of the Cerritos avenue grammar school. This consisted of the board ordering a communication sent to the Los Angeles school board definitely informing that body this city will under no circumstances take care of the pupils of the Atwater tract, which is within the Los Angeles city limits. If the pupils of the Atwater tract were not taken care of by Glendale this year there would be very little crowding in the Cerritos avenue school. In other words, it is the pupils from the Atwater district, who should be taken care of by Los Angeles, that are responsible for the crowded condition.

The congested condition in this school will be further relieved next year by the fact that the seventh and eighth grades will be taken from this building and put in the new Intermediate school now under construction at the corner of Glendale and Park avenues, and also by the fact that the upper grades will be taught at the Acacia avenue school, this taking a number of the children from the Cerritos avenue school, which should be anything but crowded next season.

The election of officers for the board of education will be held next Saturday evening.

Prohibition Congressman Discusses Recent W. C. T. U. Resolutions

By CHARLES H. RANDALL

Prohibition Congressman 1915-1921 The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Los Angeles county, represented by 67 local union, one of them having the largest membership of any union in the world, has just completed the three-day sessions of its annual convention.

Among the resolutions adopted was one relating to the record of members of congress from California, on the only prohibition measure of importance, considered by the present session, namely the bill to prohibit the prescription of beer as a medicine. This is popularly known as the anti-beer bill. Discussion at the convention brought out the fact that this bill was kicked about congress for nearly six months before being enacted into law. In the meantime most of the 30 national organizations opposed to prohibition sprang up with their well organized propaganda to elect a wine and beer congress.

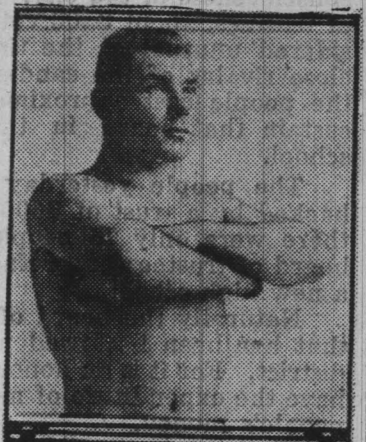

It was stated in the W. C. T. U. convention that the critical hour for the anti-beer act came when members of the lower house failed by 14 yeas to sustain Congressman Volstead in his effort to prevent an adjournment for a summer recess while a vicious filibuster was in progress against the bill in the senate. Refusal of the house to adjourn until the senate acted would have compelled its passage in a few days by the senate, but the adverse vote on this motion to adjourn threatened disaster to the prohibition cause.

The W. C. T. U. resolution follows: "The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Los Angeles views with alarm the stupendous efforts of the liquor interests through the use of deceptive propaganda to elect a wine and beer congress, committed to amendment of the Volstead act to weaken enforcement and finally destroy the Eighteenth amendment. It calls upon all friends of prohibition to scrutinize with utmost care the record of every candidate for congress and to support only those who have shown aggressiveness and faithfulness to the dry cause. It cannot approve the course of those members of the house and senate from California who during the present congress failed to give unqualified support to the anti-beer bill. It cannot condone the failure of those members who, while professing allegiance to our cause, voted for adjournment of the house of representatives—or failed to vote at all—while the anti-beer bill was threatened with defeat by such adjournment."

'BULL' MONTANA IS BREATHLESS HOUR AGAIN CALLED FAR AWAY

Breaks Date to Meet Hackenschmidt at Elks Home

Telephoning Harry W. White, who had arranged a match between "Bull" Montana and John Hackenschmidt of Glendale, a man who said he represented Montana cancelled the match, which was to have been held tomorrow night at the Elks' club. He gave as the reason for cancelling the match the information that Montana had left for New York.

Hackenschmidt was notified of the cancellation of the match by Montana, and rather than disappointing the wrestling fans of the lodge he secured the services of Pete Sauer of Burbank who has built up quite a reputation as a wrestler and has defeated the "Boo" on the mat. Sauer and Hackenschmidt will put on an exhibition match at the club tomorrow night.

This is the second time that Montana has cancelled or failed to appear in a scheduled match with Hackenschmidt. The other match was cancelled by the "Boo" before details were arranged. He issued a challenge to "Hack" and when an attempt was made to arrange the match it was learned that Montana had left for Honolulu.

NEW GEOGRAPHY TEACHING TOLD

along with the Spanish products. He argued that with a knowledge of physical geography and the practical application of that knowledge to Southern California, children could take a relief map of China and determine in a general way the portions which would be well watered and the portions that would be dry, and why; where the populous cities might be expected, what the products of the country would naturally be. Then the statistics relative to the size of rivers, population of cities, products of the country, habits of the people would have some meaning. This study should be had in hand with history, he declared, and could be made on of the most fascinating courses in the curriculum. Under present conditions, one-sixth of all the time spent in the elementary schools is used for geography and it is largely thrown away, he said.

The coming geography, he said, will teach us the life of this planet, and take children, through their imagination, to the various parts of the world and show them how the people live because the very same laws that govern here, control there. The unrelated facts will be brought into a mosaic which will form a picture that will stay with them.

Following the lecture Prof. Fairbanks answered a number of questions relative to the "faults" that are the cause of earthquakes. He said his prediction of the San Francisco earthquake was suppressed by the newspapers, but the earthquake came but a few months after he had announced its inevitability.

The next quake, he said, is due in Southern California, and will be along a fault some distance from Glendale, which will not be affected. This fault passes over the ridge near the Tejon pass, past Elizabeth lake and Palmdale, and the Sierra Madres along the foothills of the San Bernardino mountains east of Redlands until it disappears in the desert.

At the business meeting which preceded the program, announcement was made by President Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson, who presided, that the national federation of women's clubs will meet in Chattanooga, N. Y., and a special rate will be made by the railroads of one and one-third fare for the round trip. She hoped some of the members would be able to attend. She explained why the official board had deemed it wise to take out a permit for a clubhouse, saying it would be good whenever the organization saw fit to use it but did not commit the club to a building program. She also stated that Architect Alfred Priest expected to have his plans in such shape within a week that they could be submitted to builders for bids if desired.

The nominating committee presented its report through Mrs. O. E. Von Oven, submitting the following list of candidates who received ten or more votes, and who had consented to run:

President—Mrs. Daniel Campbell.

First vice president—Mrs. Warren Roberts and Mrs. A. H. Montgomery.

"Across the Continent" Is Hair Raising, Thrilling Adventure

Have you ever held your breath for an hour and one-half? If not, to witness "Across the Continent" which is now playing at the T. D. & L. theatre, will surely cause you to do so. Of all the pictures that have been seen in Glendale for months, this is one of the most thrilling. The picture is a breath-taking from start to finish and from beginning to end the audience is kept in an uproar.

The story has to do with Mr. Dent and his son. Dent is a proud manufacturer of an inexpensive car and the ambition of his life is to make his son and the public in general proud of his output. After a touring experience in a high-priced car and an exposure of the crooked methods of the maker of the car, which holds the cross-country record, to hold that record, Jimmy Dent arranges a transcontinental race in which he personally enters.

The race starts at midnight from New York and from the drop of the hat there is something doing every minute. The cars are seen ploughing through different stretches of the country, and although the Dent is "wide open" all the time she gradually falls back. But pretty soon adverse conditions take a hand, and as the bigger cars are hard hit the little Dent continues to plough ahead. Finally, after one of the grandest and pluckiest races in the world, the little Dent—but, say, to tell the rest would be to give away the whole secret. Anyway, the little Dent doesn't get the catsup, and the plucky fight it makes is applauded again and again by the whole audience.

This is one of the biggest pictures Wally Reid has ever made. Theodore Roberts takes the part of the elder Dent. These stars are supported by a very capable cast. The play will be shown again tonight and tomorrow night.

In addition to "Across the Continent," there is the unusual scenic attraction, "Jungle Dances," which shows domestic and other life in the heart of Africa. The latest news reel is also shown, and there is a special comedy which is sure to drive away the blues.

Buddy Ross and Dick Smith, Mack Sennett comedians, were unable to be present to give their laughable sketch, "If L Should Die Tonight," but it is expected they will be at this theatre on Friday and Saturday evenings.

The T. D. & L. theatre will present to the public of Glendale the following notable film attractions all practically on the heels of each other: "Smilin' Through," featuring Norma Talmadge; "Beyond the Rockies," starring Rudolph Valentino and Gloria Swanson; "Pay Day," with Charlie Chaplin, and "The Masquerade," by Richard Walter Tully, featuring Guy Bates Post.

Mrs. John Robert White submitted the proposed changes in the constitution read at the previous meeting. The amendment to increase the initiation fee from $5 to $10 was adopted with about half a dozen voting "no."

An amendment more exactly defining the powers of the club parliamentary at meetings of the official board was adopted without opposition.

An amendment proposing to abolish the weekly meetings and return to the former custom of fortnightly meetings, the second and fourth Tuesdays, developed opposition. Mrs. Hutchinson asked Mrs. Williams, first vice president, to take the chair, and said: "I feel that to go back to meeting but twice a month is a step backward. In a club so large as this (600 members) we ought to have enough community interest, state interest, national interest to require more than two meetings a month. Some of our best programs have been put on by the sections and some of our most interesting meetings have been the open forums. When I asked for the open forums it was my hope that the first Tuesday of the month might be a club luncheon, but under the present conditions at the Masonic Temple that has not been possible. That will be altered in our clubhouse. It has been argued that some of the programs have not been well attended, but it should be remembered it is a pioneer movement. If only one hundred members desired such meetings, they ought to have the privilege of coming."

Mrs. Daniel Campbell favored a return to the two meetings a month because she felt the club made too heavy demands on members interested in church work, which falls on Tuesdays. Said she: "We have many sections and the women who are our best workers have other irons in the fire."

Mrs. A. W. Tower also favored the amendment and return to two meetings, raising the point that the sections ought not to be called upon for free programs when their service might be needed to raise money for the club debt.

Mrs. Holbrook favored four meetings a month, saying she was a convert to the plan, after having opposed it in the beginning.

Mrs. Mabel Rudy moved that the matter be put upon the official ballot to be voted next Tuesday, and the motion carried. Mrs. Rudy also announced she had 100 tickets for the Mission Play at San Gabriel for Thursday's matinee for which a special rate of 85 cents had been granted, and invited members to get them from her.

The meeting had a larger attendance than the last forum, and the stage was beautifully decorated with flowers in a charming combination of blue lupins and pink roses.

WOMAN CONTESTS SEAT OF SEN. WILLIAMS

JACKSON, Miss., May 3.—By a queer twist of political fate a Southern woman, a Mississippian may be the first of her recently enfranchised sex to win a seat in the United States senate—quaer because the state of Mississippi was one of the bitterest in the fight against the constitutional amendment giving the ballot to the women of the nation.

Miss Belle Kearney, of Flora, near here, a nationally known W. C. T. U. lecturer and world traveler, is in the race to succeed Senator John Sharp Williams when he retires in 1923, and keen political observers here say her chances for victory are exceptionally good.

The women of the state, it is believed, will line up almost solidly behind Miss Kearney. Although slow at first to take advantage of the ballot, reports received here show that the women throughout the state are registering fast.

Masculine elements in the state reportedly have sought to force the withdrawal of Miss Kearney from the senate race, but all of these efforts have met with defiance on the part of the champion of "Women's rights." She says the fight she has waged to gain state and national prohibition and to win the ballot for women have been too long and bitter for her now to retire just because "mere man," who she says, "has been in the habit of eliminating or effacing women," wishes it.

Miss Kearney started her active campaign for a senate seat as soon as it was established that Senator John Sharp Williams would not seek re-election, and with a platform that is brief and to the point she is stumping every county in the commonwealth in the interests of her race. Here is her platform:

"Disarmament and entry of the United States into the League of Nations.

"Legislation toward making the United States a nation of home owners rather than that of renters.

"Strict enforcement of the Volstead prohibition enforcement act.

"Protective legislation for women in industry.

"Restricted immigration.

"Legislation to enforce social morality.

"Advocacy of a federal department of education with a secretary in the cabinet.

"A more vigorous child welfare and public health policy.

"Reduced taxation, federal aid for farmers, progressive labor legislation.

Miss Kearney declares her political enemies already are busy, and have sent out reports that she is an artist. To combat this report she is producing a statement by Rev. L. L. Roberts, formerly of Flora but now of Columbus, explaining that Miss Kearney withdrew from the Methodist church because she could not reconcile certain doctrines.

Opposing Miss Kearney in the contest for senatorial honors are two men, Hubert Stephens, who represented Mississippi in the lower branch of congress for many years, and James K. Vardaman, former senator and political figure in the state for the past 20 years.

Stephens, in his public speeches, is pleading that the factional lines be dropped in this campaign. He is going out on his record as a public servant in congress and as a "Simonpure" democrat.

Vardaman, reported in poor health, has been content thus far to wage his campaign through the columns of his weekly magazine here, "Vardaman's Weekly." He has made very few speeches.

Like Stephens, Vardaman also is standing behind his public record and criticizes Woodrow Wilson for his war record. Vardaman was one of the "Willful Twelve" senators.

Miss Kearney started her public career as a school teacher, but early turned to uplift work, becoming one of the best lecturers and organizers for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. She always was an ardent suffrage worker. During the recent conflict in Europe in which the United States was involved Miss Kearney went to France at her own expense and engaged in relief work.

She has opened headquarters here with Mrs. John Clark, one of her close friends and wife of an East Mississippi attorney, as campaign manager.

LOVE RUNS THE M'CORMICK COURSE

CHICAGO, May 3.—"The course of true love runs smoothly—and my love for Max Oser is true."

That was the answer of Mathilde McCormick today to reports from Paris that she was drifting away from her fiancé, keeper of a Swiss livery stable.

Mathilde had just returned to the home of Cyrus McCormick, where she is staying, from an early morning ride in a drenching rain, when informed of the story from Paris.

Her well worn riding habit of coarse, durable material was soaked and clung to her athletic form.

Mathilde reiterated her intention of returning to Europe in June to marry Oser.

The commission also charged that the company was not engaged solely in export trade and therefore was not entitled to the advantages of the Webb-Pomeroy export law.

The Self-Defrauded

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE
Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Nobody likes to be tricked or defrauded by another person. Many people are not merely indignant, but are moved to immediate and severe reprisals if cheated out of even a small sum of money.

Yet among those same people you will find not a few who all the while, with the utmost complacency, cheat themselves out of what is worth far more than any amount of money of which they may be swindled.

There are many, for example, who cheat themselves out of happiness by the strangely selfish lives they lead.

Day in and day out they seem to be actuated by the motive "Myself alone." And because their selfishness alienates others from them, they presently discover that their lot in life is, by its solitariness, peculiarly in keeping with the "Myself alone" motive they have permitted to govern their behavior.

Forced finally to appreciate that they are quite without friends, are miserably unhappy, they perhaps rail bitterly against fate. But fate is not to blame. The fault rests with themselves, it has its roots in their self-fraudulent egotism.

Among the self-fraudulent, too, are those numerous folk who look upon work as a curse and idleness as a blessing.

Idleness might be a blessing if men were not born into this world with an instinctive urge to do, to accomplish, to create and achieve. The more fully they comply with this urge, the greater the satisfaction they derive out of life.

Consequently, when they set themselves against compliance, they actually rob themselves of something very precious to them. They may, in the bargain, bring upon themselves grave evils.

For today it is known that nervous and mental disorders, even serious bodily ailments, often are directly or indirectly the products of idleness. When these disorders and ailments do develop there is again a tendency to rail against fate. But again persistent cheating of self is the true explanation.

And often the only effective cure is to conquer the self-fraudulent habit of idling. As many a wise physician, in these days of psychological enlightenment, frankly informs those among his patients who have thus come to grief.

Self-fraud, once more, is plainly in evidence in the case of all who act as though they have completely forgotten that they have minds to take care of as well as bodies.

Luckless self-swinders of this sort, however carefully they may nourish their bodies, provide next to no nutriment for their minds. The time afforded them for mental nourishing they spend in mere pleasure-seeking, always in pleasure-seeking, and perhaps in pleasure-seeking of a vulgar, vicious sort.

But their starved minds take revenge for the deprivation.

Boredom is the lightest penalty they enforce. They enforce it unflinchingly. Yet seldom do the victims of the boredom appreciate that the discomfort it causes is a punishment self-fraud has drawn upon them.

Fashions for Americans

The use of applique work as a trimming for children's dresses is not very new, but some of the motifs and colorings thought out for spring are new, or unusual, which amounts to the same thing. The frock shown in the sketch helps to prove this. It is made of a washable tweed in a gray and green mixture, and trimmed with a rather large parrot cut from bright green broadcloth or felt and appliqued on. A narrow belt is also of the plain green. Rows of green buttons finish the short sleeves. The new idea seems to be to use few motifs and have these rather bold in size. A clever little black taffeta dress recently seen, for a child of four, had no trimming at all except a large bouquet of multi-colored ribbon flowers appliqued on the side front just above the hem.

There is little that is new in style line for children, color combinations, novel trimmings, etc. being depended upon for variety. One dainty little frock recently seen was of white crepe de Chine, to which was given a dotted appearance by having red beads studded rather thickly over it, red fagoting outlining the hem, narrow yoke and edges of the wide sleeves. Wide sleeves, by the way, are seen in quite a good many of the new spring things for children. Another frock distinguished by color contrast was of white wool crepe with band around the skirt, neck and sleeves of red crepe de Chine. The dress, a simple bishop front, was opened at one side in style and fastened with a red silk lacing.

An Old Trimming in a Novel Design is the Feature of This Frock

For the girl of eight to twelve, suspender dresses and sleeveless one-piece straight line dresses are to be popular this spring, with separate blouses of white or plain color fabric or of checked gingham.

The Barton Bedtime Stories

A TRAP FOR CURIOUS FOLKS
By JOHN BARTON
(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers)

You know Tad Coon. When things go right he's always laughing. When things go wrong he thinks the world has come to an end. That's how he felt when he climbed into the broken airplane which came down in Tommy Peele's Broad Field—and couldn't get out again. Even good old Dr. Muskrant couldn't comfort him.

Indeed the doctor needed a little comforting. He was very badly worried about his friend. "You aren't hurt, are you?" he asked.

"Oh, no," Tad owned. "It's as snug as a hollow tree in here, with a nest to lie on (meaning the seat) only there isn't a place I can catch my paw on. I'm hungry and thirsty and I don't want to stay here forever and ever on end. Can't you walk round the edge where I hopped in and reach me a toe, or a tail, even. Then I'd be all right again."

The doctor shook his head mournfully. "Tad," he sighed, "you forget, I can't climb. It looks like a trap to me—a trap to catch curious folks like men and coons. I can smell cold iron. (Of course he could, for it had an engine.) Suppose I see if I can gnaw a hole here in the bottom."

But at this suggestion Tad suddenly remembered something. "No, no!" he almost shouted. "I promised you I'd take care of it for you. At least I promised Tommy Peele's dog. Watch, when he told me what the man was saying. I said I wouldn't let paw nor claw on it till he came back again—the crow himself doesn't know when Well, that means teeth, too. And I thought it would be easier to scare the folks away than to argue with them. I guess it was, except you, and you didn't scare."

He thought a minute. "I say, doctor, if you'd let that old dog know what a tangle he got me in, he'd bring Tommy Peele. Tommy'd get me out again. But don't send Bobby Robin. I wouldn't have him find out there's anything wrong with me for all the frogs in your pond."

"No that's sensible," the doctor agreed. "Much better than knowing, I'll slip through the pasture fence and ask the Red Cow to tell him. He'll be coming after her before long." Off he set, and Tad curled up small on the driver's cushion and went to sleep to keep from feeling lonesome.

"Don't You Dare to Perch!" He Squealed.

When Bobby Robin flew by he squawked at the sight of him. That woke Tad up. He forgot he was hungry and thirsty; he just grinned as if it were the one place in the world's he'd rather be. "Don't you dare to perch," he squealed. "Your feet are all mucky from digging those dirty angieworms!"

PARIS NIGHT LIFE CHANGED AS WAR MEMORY FADES

PARIS, May 3.—There was a time, in the faraway, before-the-war days, when anybody who wanted to see "Paris by Night" could do so within two steps of the Grande Boulevard.

Night life was a normal part of the city's restaurants, one of the big cafe-restaurants thought of closing as long as there was a customer who wanted another drink. Montmartre, now the home of jazzjoy unconfined, was a remote place where artists and sculptors worked and lived and sang in cabarets which were just what the word indicates—resorts where drinking and singing went on together.

This is not the Paris of today, or rather of tonight. War restrictions have been abolished and the closing hour has been made later and later, from the 9:30 p. m. of war times to 2 a. m., but the people—the French inhabitants—have lost the old habit of staying up late at night. Besides, most of them live in the suburbs and they have to think twice about the price of a taxicab, as this modern capital does not boast any other method of transportation after midnight.

The foreigner, therefore, is the needed accessory of life in the early hours. And nowadays "foreigner" nine times out of ten means American.

By Special Appointment of His Majesty Americus, might be hoisted as a sign outside every night resort in Paris. Formerly it was the Russian, or even the German, who was known in the slang of the night as a "bon micheton," in other words, a "good spender."

The "Gentleman from Indiana" has taken away the title and is holding it against all comers. This makes it easier for the purveyor of amusement. He knows that the visitor from the other side of the Atlantic has a very distinct preconceived idea of what Parisian amusement ought to be. He knows what his customer wants and he gives it to him in large gobs.

Let us, then, take a little whirl around Paris after nightfall. Our explorers have dined and danced, yes, danced, because they have certainly not gone to a French restaurant where people like to make dining and dancing two separate operations. Thus they have probably struck up a passing acquaintance with two or three blond or blondined "petites dames," whose knowledge of U. S. army English is wide if not profound. This restaurant closes at 1 or 2 o'clock and naturally that is just the hour for beginning. Therefore, the joyseekers readily fall in with the suggestion of their companions that they jump into a taxi, or two, and have some more.

It matters not to which one of the places in the rue Pigalle, or the rue Fontaine, or the adjoining streets, they are piloted. It will be the Monastery, or Nelly's, or Charley's, or the Dog Who Never Sleeps, or the Smiling Pig. It will be the original of one of the places whose names were introduced to New York by the modern founders of Greenwich Village, but at least it will be real, as far as a Parisian night life can be real. It will certainly be in Montmartre, because the post-armistice mushroom resorts around the Champs-Elysees or out in Neuilly or Passy went right out of existence when the Stars and Stripes were hauled down for the last time from the roof of the Hotel Crillon.

"Oh, give em one Louis," warbles one of the blond guides as she flings herself out of the taxi on arrival, and one of the explorers hands over twenty francs, saying, with an air of great unconcern, "Well, after all it's only a dollar-sixty at the present rate of exchange." If he had taken a taxi on his own account for the trip the chauffeur would have said "merci" for five francs. The evening has begun. In the next article we shall see how it continued.

POLICE AND POLITICS

In every large city there have been efforts, marked often by indifferent success, to divorce the police and politics. That out of the community intelligence, some successful method should be contrived, does not appear yet to be an impossible task. The proposition has been made to elect the chief of police by popular vote. Of course this would be to make the office distinctly political, and the entire force would be erected into a political machine. The welfare of the public would be secondary, and war upon criminal elements a mere incident, regarded as of comparatively small importance. The chief would change with every city administration, and the men who served under him be aware that their certainty of tenure ended with his. Nothing could well be imagined as more subversive of discipline or harmful to public safety.

However a chief of police be appointed, it is certain that he should remain so long as his record shows his competency. It is due to him that he have control of the men, even to discharging them, each, however, having a right to public hearing. He should not be the mere tool of any mayor, manager or council. It should not be required of him to belong to one political faction or another, and the politics of his men he ought to be able to regard as their own business and not his.

The best police chiefs are those who have had practical experience, beginning as patrolmen. To bring in an outsider trained in some different field of activity, almost always has proved to be a mistake. Perhaps determination of choice through civil service examinations would be wise. Anyhow, there is no large city that does not have the problem of making its police effective, and it cannot be effective if used as the adjunct of anybody's political ambitions.

WALLINGFORD PHILOSOPHY

A confidence man is quoted as saying, "I never succeeded in swindling anybody who was not looking for a chance to swindle me or somebody else."

Happily, in order to listen to this bit of wisdom, the interviewer was obliged to visit a secure prison. The modern bunko sharp has a way of easing his conscience by imagining that his victim was as great a sinner as himself. This in instances, doubtless is true. Most of the men who are induced to bet on an imaginary horse race, believe that they are betting on information obtained by tapping the wires. The buyer of a bogus gold brick has been led to think the article stolen, and that the thief is afraid to dispose of it in open market. Such cases as these, however, do not cover the list of swindling activities. Often the victim is as innocent as a child, and indeed, has but the mind of a child.

When an army of astute rogues started out to wheedle men and women of Liberty bonds, pretending to replace them with bonds of far greater value, they succeeded. The losers had no thought to cheating anybody. They deemed themselves as making a good stroke of perfectly legitimate business. When an army of human locusts invades the middle west, where people know little of mining or oil, and sell stock in non-existent properties, they are themselves mere vulgar thieves, and they are dealing with honest folk. Of course when a water-front loafer sells a battleship to a yokel for a few hundred dollars, the buyer merely thinks he is getting a good bargain, and that to take advantage of such an opportunity is shrewd.

The fiction writer who invented Wallingford was guilty of doing the public an injury. This picturesque rogue of the printed page was strong in the philosophy that soothes and sustains the prisoner quoted above. It is a false philosophy.

SENTENCES A THIEF UNDERSTANDS

Two robbers of an Apache gang in New York have received sentences of from forty to sixty years in the penitentiary. That is the sort of sentence a thief understands. The robber, bearing the weapons of murder and with the willingness to slay, would refrain from following his criminal impulses if he thought it meant imprisonment for life to indulge them.

Courts all over the land should profit by the action of the New York judge. That they are so far from tendency to pursue a similar course is one of the circumstances to which, with good reason, may be ascribed the prevalence of crime at which all urban communities have been shocked. Procedure in California has been at least as lax as in any part of the country. The criminal is unafraid because he perceives nothing to excite his fears. He understands so well that even if convicted, he has a chance of defeating justice through probation or parole. He is quite aware that to establish guilt is made almost impossible by the red tape of precedent, and the tricks of the rogue lawyer.

There is no excuse for the ku klux. It is an unbecoming and dangerous organization; no excuse, but ready explanation. People have become so tired of seeing rascals given the keys of every city, that they have been misled into thinking a remedy may be in a different form of lawlessness. It is possible, indeed, it is probable, that decent citizens have been drawn into endorsement of mob rule on the theory that it is better than no rule.

If the offenders who merit punishment expressed life sentence, got all they deserved, or a substantial part of it, society would not be wondering now how to suppress the ku klux rabble, for there could be no such rabble.

MONEY BY THE BALE

Russia, demanding credit at Genoa, is said to be about to issue more of its worthless currency. These are to be notes of as high a denomination as 100,000,000 rubles. In other words, while Russia strives to become a member of the world's financial family, it continues to demonstrate its unworthiness. Without seeking to go deeply into monetary problems, it is clear that a country in which a dollar will purchase 4,000,000 rubles, and that continues to turn out the paper product as fast as the press can print it, is not on the way towards the establishment of a sound system. It is not doing that by which it may hope its potency as a world power to be restored.

Much is said concerning what Russia and Germany in combination intend to do to Europe. The supposition is that they will accomplish their purpose by force. Military operations require money. Rubles, 4,000,000 of which may be had for an American dollar, are not to be rated as money. They are paper, and have scarcely more value than the waste scraps swept out of business houses and shipped to the mills. If Russia thinks to become once more the gigantic national force which its numbers and its natural riches, under healthful development would make it, first it must be a business institution. By the time it had been erected into a business institution, the insane leadership of the present, and the dreams of conquest both might vanish. Then it could have a chance to cultivate its fields, work its mines, and manage the transportation system, now fallen into decay and disuse. Then it would find its own affairs important, and attend to them, this change auguring well for the peace of the world.

FUTURE MOTIVE POWER

From time to time some discovery or invention is announced as about to revolutionize motor power. Unfortunately with the announcement, the incident has a habit of becoming closed. It is frequent to observe the statement that an engine has been perfected for which the cost of fuel is to be next to nothing. Gasoline is to be superseded utterly as a necessity for the automobile. Nevertheless Standard Oil stock is good, and the dividends from it continue to keep Mr. Rockefeller in comfortable circumstances.

A late statement of this character tells of the possibility of running an automobile 300 miles at a fuel cost of 5 1/2 cents. According to the builder of this remarkable mechanism, it will run a three-horse engine continually for eighteen hours on 1 1/4 gallons of the fuel oil, and the cost of the oil per gallon is set at 5 1/2 cents.

Of course, these assertions are to be accepted only after adequate demonstration satisfactory to experts. On the face of them is very little to inspire human faith. Nevertheless, there is every reason to suppose that a better power and method of applying it will be an accomplishment of the near future. Failure in this respect would mean that genius, in the field of locomotion, was falling behind genius as operating elsewhere.

It is no wild dream to predict that the future will be familiar with machines driven by unseen currents drawn from the sun. The atmosphere is being made the mere instrument of man in conveying sound, and in producing light. In time the mystery of the waves in which energy expresses itself in power, is as likely to be solved. It is no more formidable than the mysteries that have been studied and triumphantly solved.

Responsibility for the atrocious murder of Czar Nicholas and his family is placed squarely upon the soviet leaders who now dominate Russia from Moscow, and desire to dominate the world. The slaughter of these people was a crime so atrocious that the perpetrators have no reason to expect ever to be forgiven. It was enough to condemn any cause that promoted it.

MUSIC AND LABOR

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Organized labor ought to turn its attention to music. Music is perhaps the best recreation in the world. It cheers, inspires and drives away the glooms.

It is also the best unifier in the world. It is the best bond of comradeship.

If labor unions would devote their efforts toward music instead of crying for beer it would be better.

We speak of music particularly in reference to groups of laborers because theirs may be the finest music in the world, which is choral singing.

We have somehow fallen into the erroneous notion that music is a luxury and an accomplishment of the idle; or at least it is something that can be taken up only by a favored few.

The contrary is true. Music is essentially universal, democratic and human. Anybody can learn it. It requires no unusual gifts, and not even an education.

James Hodson describes the musical activities of the weavers in Lancashire, England.

In Lancashire and Yorkshire almost everybody is an amateur musician. The weavers there recently gave a production of Balfe's "Bohemian Girl." A loom tacker took the part of Florentine. A moulder's laborer was Count Arnheim and a weaver was Arline. The other principals, the chorus and the dancers were all mill hands, boy and girl mill workers.

These workpeople, who are all good union members, have given a number of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, besides very creditable performances of "The Messiah," "Elijah" and "The Crucifixion." The result is good fellowship and refreshing democracy. Often a subordinate in the shop commands his superiors in the chorus or the orchestra.

Some of the singers as well as the instrumental performers learn their parts entirely by ear. That is a laborious process, but they enjoy it, and the results are surprising.

There can be no reason why the delights of music and its civilizing and refining advantages should not be enjoyed by every class of people. And if the workers in a factory or a mill were encouraged to take up this sort of thing it would increase the pleasure of living emphatically.

THE LISTENING POST

There are two stories that used to be in the schoolbooks that are interesting for their differing interpretations of courage.

Probably neither of them is true. But they serve to point a moral and adorn a tale.

A great many of the stories that were in the old school books were not true.

There was fable, legend, tradition, fairy tale. And all of them perhaps let in a little light. If we did not take them too literally and seriously.

It is a pretty good thing to know that the school boy looks upon his school books as inspired writings.

They assume an authority that is not to be disputed.

So whoever prepares a schoolbook should understand his responsibility.

If there is unfairness or untruth or mistake in it the minds of millions of youngsters are corrupted.

And it may be long before that corruption is cleansed from it.

One of the stories was about the Spartan lad. Who had a fox or some other animal concealed beneath his toga or robe or corset or whatever it was.

And being unable to dispose of it when he stood before his parents or elders or somebody he kept it there without winking.

While it ate out his vitals.

That was cited as an example of courage. Grit and bravery and resolution.

Which was a mistake, of course. Because it was not courage at all.

It was the height of folly. For the boy in the end lost his fox, his vitals and his life.

He gained nothing. Except a reputation for stubbornness and obstinacy and foolishness.

For by confessing his error he would have lost nothing.

Except a little foolish pride. And would have saved everything.

He did not come clean, as the saying is. Make a clean breast of it.

Acknowledge his error, ask for pardon and go forward resolutely to better conduct.

As George Washington did. When he chopped down the cherry tree. Acknowledged his fault. Came clean.

It is the humanest thing in the world to fall into error.

To make mistakes. To do wrongs. It is the most courageous thing in the world manfully to admit them.

It is the silliest thing in the world to persist stubbornly in folly after it is seen to be folly.

In case of mistake or error or wrong it is the course of courage to come clean.

To acknowledge error. To make amends as far as possible. To accept discipline of punishment. And to profit by experience and go forward resolutely to better standards and deeds.

JAMES W. FOLEY.

SONGS OF THE POETS

Nature—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882)

As a fond mother, when the day is o'er,
Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
Half willing, half reluctant to be led,
And leave his broken playthings on the floor,
Still gazing at them through the open door,
Nor wholly reassured and comforted
By promises of others in their stead,
Which, though more splendid, may not please him

more;
So Nature deals with us, and takes away
Our playthings one by one, and by the hand
Leads us to rest so gently, that we go
Scarce knowing if we wish to go or stay,
Being too full of sleep to understand
How far the unknown transcends the what we know.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

DROPPED FOR EFFICIENCY!

[Good Government]

The question of the advisability of the civil service classification of assistant United States district attorneys is brought forcibly before the country in the case of T. Henry Walnut of Philadelphia, whose resignation as assistant district attorney was suddenly accepted by the attorney general as of March 15, upon the eve of his prosecution of several important cases of the violation of the Volstead law.

Mr. Walnut was appointed as assistant district attorney under the Wilson administration. He had been retained up to date under the Harding administration and had taken up vigorously the prosecution of certain former officials of the prohibition enforcement unit in Pennsylvania, especially William C. McConnell and Samuel B. Wolff. Mr. Walnut is said to have been asked by two representatives of the attorney general's office (Messrs. Smith and Jones) to suspend action on the McConnell and Wolff cases. Soon after his refusal to suspend action he received a telegram notifying him that his resignation which had been submitted last July, was accepted to take effect March 15, 1922. Commenting on Mr. Walnut's case, Bishop Garland of Philadelphia said:

"How can our government expect to get men of intelligence, self-respect and honor to serve as public officials if this is the reward that is meted out to them, evidently under pressure from some who have deliberately broken the laws?"

The alleged reason given by the department of justice for the sudden termination of Mr. Walnut's

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELIA STEWART

Tact is such a lubricator of life. It's amazing how hard it is for some of us to use it. It's the very shortest way between two points. Also the easiest.

Two executives may have exactly the same degree of good will, but the one who uses the hammering process will fail to get the same results as the one who uses Huckleberry Finn tactics every time. One can sometimes be scolded and forced or shamed into obedience and action, but the scolding and the forcing and the shaming are apt to show out plainly in the work done.

But to be made to love what one does, to do it from sheer delight in the task and admiration and respect for the one who demands it, that's a very different matter. And it can be thus accomplished, it is thus accomplished, in many a busy manufacturing store.

Tact in social relations—what a joy this is! We may be absolutely sure that Mrs. A— would be a failure in some position and be perfectly aware of the shortcomings of Mrs. B—'s husband or children. But very seldom indeed is it necessary to inform them personally. Tact will get us around the dangerous place—tact without deceit.

But most of all is tact indeed in family life. Its relations are so close, its revelations so pitiless in their revealing, its petty irritations so frequent. That kindly tact which is none else than thoughtful consideration of the other one's viewpoint, will ease daily relations and avoid conflicts, sweetening every day life unbelievably. Let's calculate tact.

services is that he was a democratic appointee and that he was insubordinate. The Public Ledger, in commenting on the excuse of the department in letting Mr. Walnut go, says:

"The shallow insincerity of that excuse is revealed by the assistant United States attorney general, Rush L. Holland, who assumes immediate responsibility for the gross wrong that was done when Mr. Walnut's activities in unearthing the irregularities in the enforcement administration were cut short on the very eve of the sitting of the grand jury. Here is the bald confession made by Mr. Holland: "There has been no investigation of Mr. Walnut for the simple reason that there is nothing to investigate. I have been informed that Mr. Walnut was an honest, efficient and capable official. He has had several years in his position and he should be satisfied."

ONE GUARANTY OF PEACE

[New York Tribune]

The diplomatic foundations of a new war are being openly laid. A superstructure will speedily go up if Russia and Germany dare. The only way to keep them from doing is for the western powers to recommit their union. The only counter to a league of hatred and destruction is by a league of peace guardians.

The solidarity of the allies! Without it everything is gone! With it everything is saved!

IN KANSAS

[Kansas City Times]

During a hailstorm in Iola, Kan., Sunday morning when the window lights were being smashed in one of the churches, the minister said: "Something unusual seems to be happening." Well, it was unusual, perhaps, for a quiet town like Iola. But out at Salina or Concordia when the window lights begin to cave in and the benches to be moved by the wind, the minister announces: "Let the choir sing one verse of 'Tell Me the Old, Old Story.'"

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

It would be a sorry day for English women were they to be judged by Margot Asquith and Mrs. Pat Campbell. The former is mildly to be characterized as obnoxious. Probably there is not extant another such conceit as that of which she is the center. There simply is no limit to her presumption.

HENRY JAMES

Recently Mrs. Asquith visited Secretary of State Hughes. Of that episode she writes: "As one of his secretaries remained in the room, we said nothing worth recording."

The marvel of such nerve! The visitor appeared to think that a diplomat would talk to her with more freedom than to one of his own confidential attaches. And she the person described by her own countryman as "the woman with a serpent's tongue"; who is notorious for the betrayal of friends, and whose output has its value mostly from the fact that it blares secrets that the impulse of propriety would be to guard sacredly.

The Campbell woman is peddling to the press an account of her intimacies with men of note, just now the victim being G. B. Shaw. She is placing a man who has many qualities of greatness, in a humiliating posture before the world. The fact that he, too, is given to meanness of various kinds is no excuse for her. Her conduct is base and contemptible, and must lose her such respect as her historic abilities may have won for her.

The President was warned not to take a certain boat because it was regarded as unsafe. The public was not warned, and it crowded aboard. The boat proved to be no better than intimidated. There was an accident that hurt several.

Nobody would countenance the carrying of the President in unfit craft. The drowning of the executive would be a tragic event, startling the whole world.

It is impossible to figure out a good excuse for letting Americans of less prominence risk their lives, the danger being known. On several occasions excursions have been turned into terrible catastrophe, and on each occasion there has been much sorrow.

It is impossible to read without regret the fate of once great naval vessels now on the way to the junk pile. There's the old Monterey, for example, crossing the Pacific to become scrap at San Francisco.

Many Californians witnessed the launching of the Monterey at the Union Iron works. It happened that the fingers now hammering out this paragraph, hammered a far better one in honor of that event.

There are various brands of fools in the world, but the one who undertakes the task of playing continuously on the piano for ninety-six hours, may be set in a class all by himself.

When the teaching of German became taboo in the schools of this country, there was excellent reason for part of the inhibition. That study of the language should have ceased in the higher schools, did not appear. A knowledge of German is as likely to be useful, as knowledge of any other language.

Objection to German arose from the circumstance that there were school districts in which no other language was spoken either by teacher or pupil. In such schools treason was a feature of the instruction.

This being America and not Germany, such a detail of the curriculum was an anomaly. To close offending schools and to demand an utter change in the system, was right then, and is proper now. This has nothing to do with the wisdom of acquiring familiarity with German, for the pursuit either of business, literature or science.

John Barrett has been singularly successful in his chosen field largely because of his fund of words, and his ability to draw on it. He has, to a degree seldom attained, the gracious "gift of gab." Not that his addresses are mere sound, not at all. They are first rate.

Barrett was formerly a newspaper man in the Puget Sound country. He found more language welling up within him than it was possible to reduce to print. So he flew to the realm of diplomacy, alighted successfully, built a nice nest, and now the fate of nations is at the end of his silver tongue.

The one mysterious thing about this Baker flapper is not that she likes to get as far as the church door, and then run away leaving the groom stricken dumb, and out the price of one good wedding ring.

The mystery is why anybody cares what she does. The world is full of flappers who seem to have sense enough to be interesting.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

My old man says he has about despaired of me. He says it looks to him as though I would never grow up. And when I do grow up, he says, the only thing I'll be fit for is to be killed for beef. He says I have the intellect of a feeble-minded child of six.

"You poor nut," he says, "why don't you THINK! THINK! Use the bean. Never stop thinking until you get a headache. Then you may amount to something."

All this rot of abuse was occasioned by what I'll have to admit was a typical trick of mine. My old man and I had been out in a small country town, and being driven in by the rain, paused in a second-hand store. There we found some old holy paintings on copper. Neither of us knew who were the various saints and virgins depicted, but that made no difference. They were obviously very old, the work was excellent, and there could be no question of their genuineness.

"How much are these?" I asked. I was trying not to show my excitement. I knew that I had made a real find. But when the dealer told me I could take the whole batch for fifty cents apiece my enthusiasm went down as though it had been artificially cooled. One of those virgins at ten dollars would have seemed cheap to me. Six virgins at fifty cents apiece looked too dear.

Of course, the old man took them, and of course, he peddled them to antiquers and made a good bit of money out of them. One of them was a real discovery. But the point is that the old man says that I have not yet learned to use whatever brain nature may have gifted me with. If the virgins had been seen by me in an environment with which I am acquainted—in a library of a friend or a gallery or the shop of a man known to be a skilled collector—I would have appreciated them at their true worth. Because I found them in a dusty second-hand store in a second-class town in a fourth-class state I could not adjust. I could not see the value under the dust of circumstance.

My old man says that the only reason he has for clinging to me, and not drowning me offhand in a bucket, is that most people are that way. If folks held their minds down to business, he said, and judged values by value and not by the tint of a wall or the fall of the auctioneer's whiskers they would get along better in this world.

The value of this advice, however, is somewhat impaired by the fact that my old man is one of the most impassioned buyers of gold mining stock extant.

CORNER IS FORMED

FOR CONTROL OF DIAMOND SUPPLY

BE HOSTS TO REALERS

South Anglo Syndicate With Anglo-Americans Are Ruling Factors

LONDON, May 3.—Anglo-American interests have effected a corner in diamonds, and the world's supply is now controlled from two buildings in Holborn Viaduct.

By the amalgamation of the South African Diamond Syndicate and the Anglo-American Syndicate, in which the powerful Morgan interests are largely represented.

The corner was brought about by the amalgamation of the South African Diamond Syndicate and the Anglo-American Syndicate, in which the powerful Morgan interests are largely represented.

By the amalgamation of the syndicates removed the last vestige of competition for rough diamonds. It is stated to be impossible for rough diamonds in any appreciable quantity to be purchased anywhere in the world outside the two buildings in Central London.

For a long time the product of the world's big diamond mines has been more falling in price than hands, but recently at least two big channels of disposal, and there was competition between the markets in London and Antwerp.

South Africa's output passed through English channels, and was handled by the South African Syndicate in London. The Congo output was handled by another syndicate, which was outside the trust.

The Anglo-American Syndicate recently bought out all the German Southwest African diamond interests and it has now taken over the Congo group, which had its center at Antwerp.

Between the Anglo-American and the South African syndicate there is a working agreement. An arrangement has been made for London to buy the output of the only channel through which a rough diamond from any of the world's great mines shall reach the jewelers.

There are more multi-millionaires in this new great diamond trust," said a leading jeweler, "than in any other concern in commercial history. The output is now entirely in the hands and at the mercy of the two syndicates."

THREE PIGEONS STARVE TO DEATH LONDON, May 3.—Three of the famous pigeons of St. Paul's Cathedral have been found dead, starved in their efforts to feed their spring crop of young ones. Motor traffic is responsible for the famine. The birds used to live well on the grain dropped from horses' nosebags. Now they depend on the public generosity, and in rainy weather sometimes go foodless for days.

LODGES - CLUBS - CHURCHES

R. T. W. CLASS HOLD MEETING
The regular meeting of the R. T. W. class of the Baptist church was held at the home of Mrs. Mildred Barnes, 1311 North Brand, Tuesday afternoon.

Devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Sicily, who brought out the thought of the manifold blessings of motherhood.

The business session which followed showed splendid work done by club members. A very interesting program was then given by members which included the following numbers:

Instrumental duet, "Dance of the Demons" (Holt) by Mrs. J. R. Bentley and Mrs. Thomas Hoskins. Vocal solo, "That Dear Irish Mother of Mine," Mrs. Paul Elliot. Mrs. Linnie Carl gave a talk on the "Ideal Mother," during which she read a poem of childhood by Paul Laurence Dunbar, and "Mother of Mine" by Kipling.

Refreshments of cake, ice cream and punch were then served by the hostesses, Mrs. George Harris, Mrs. A. Van Wormer and Mrs. Mildred Barnes. About 35 were present.

DINE WITH FRIENDS IN LOS ANGELES
Miss Virginia Hunter of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Harris, Jr., of 140 South Cedar street, and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Gultard of 524 Patterson avenue, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Mangnum of Los Angeles. An immense May basket centered the table, from which ribbon streamers extended to the individual May baskets which marked each plate with its place card, rose decorated.

A five-course dinner was served, the dessert including a huge cake centered with a great pink rose in frosting which was served with a dainty strawberry pudding.

PHILATHEA CLASS HOLDS MEETING
The members of the Philathea class of the First Methodist church held their regular meeting and coffee and tea at the home of Miss Helen Ingelue, 501 East Wilson avenue, Tuesday night. About 20 girls were present. Plans were made for a wienie bake and a boat party. Mrs. Carl Seitter, the class teacher, tendered her resignation on account of illness. The girls very reluctantly accepted it.

LADIES' AID SECURES DELIGHTFUL PROGRAM
Members of the Ladies' Aid of the Central Avenue Methodist church have secured a delightful program for an entertainment which they will give at the church Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Dr. William G. Millar, a great dramatic orator, is to give short readings, followed by Shakespearean interpretations, including the trial scene from the Merchant of Venice, scenes from Richard III and other plays. It will be something no one who enjoys worthwhile things should miss.

GLEN EYRIE CHAPTER TO HOLD SOCIAL EVENING
Glen Eyrie chapter, O. E. S., of which Mrs. Fannie Parke is worthy matron, will give a social evening for members and their husbands, Friday, May 5, at 8 p. m. in Masonic Temple. Mrs. H. A. J. O. C. CLASS OF FIRST METHODIST HOLDS MEETING

Class Agrees to Support Four Near East Orphans

The J. O. C. class of the First Methodist church, with a membership of 150 young women, had its regular monthly business session at the church Tuesday evening. At a short business session plans were made for the entertainment which the class is to give May 12 to raise money for the support of the four near-east relief orphans which the class has agreed to support at a cost of $240 a year.

The program will consist of music by the class quartet, a short play by class members and other numbers. There will also be booths for the sale of candy and fancy work donated by members and friends.

Following the business session a social evening devoted to games was enjoyed with refreshments served at the close.

This class with Mrs. C. M. Crist as teacher is doing wonderful work. It has pledged $600 to the church fund, of which $200 has been paid, and, as stated, has undertaken the support of four near-east relief orphans. It likewise does much home missionary work and whenever called upon in a case of sickness or death its members respond cheerfully with calls and flowers.

TEETOTALER IS MARTYR TO CAUSE
LONDON, May 3.—Oxford authorities have refused to continue giving the unemployment benefit to George Chaplin, who refused a proffered job in a brewery on the ground that he was a teetotaler.

Detailed reports of the convention will be taken to their club by these ladies and it is hoped and believed that many new ideas will be gleaned that will assist in the successful operation of the popular Eagle Rock organization.

MONEY SCARCE AT MONTE CARLO

MONTE CARLO (By mail to the United Press).—This winter was expected to produce more gambling and bigger gambling on Riviera tables than any season in history. But there was far less, and what there was was comparatively trifling. Few reckless sportsmen, as in past years, threw hundreds of thousands of francs on the green tables. There are no stories of fortunes made overnight. There are no frantic efforts to hush stories of ruined millionaires—there are no such stories to hush.

All over the world the reaction from the orgy of spending that came after the war has produced dams in the stream of gold that pours into Monte Carlo. Officials of the Casino and of the Sporting Club themselves—the two are really one organization—admit the dashing of their hopes for a big year.

For the horde of gamblers which was expected this year at Monte Carlo the Sporting Club opened its new "salle de jeux," twice as large as the original one, the very last word in gambling rooms. In this hall the big player of the year, according to habitues, has been a Greek shipper who makes his residence in Marseilles, a certain Vagliano, James Hennessy, the "Brandy King," has done his share of playing as in past years. There have been some regulars, but the play has been nothing like that of previous seasons.

The man who talks like a book may be a plagiarist.

WEBB-SHERWOOD WEDDING HAS HOME SETTING

One of the prettiest of home weddings ever solemnized in Glendale was that of Miss Lois Webb and B. W. Sherwood of this city, which took place Tuesday evening, May 2, at the home of the bride's parents, 127 West Chestnut street. The spacious home was decorated throughout with pink and white roses and greenery and in one corner of the large living-room was a pink and white arch under which the young couple stood.

MISS LOIS WEBB Who Became Bride of B. W. Sherwood Last Night

Just preceding the ceremony Miss Hazel Linkogel played two violin selections, "At Dawning" and "Memories" by Cadman, accompanied on the piano by her sister, Pearl Curran. Miss Gretchen Albreger sang two selections, accompanied on the piano by Miss Ruby Edgcomb.

Mrs. John T. Jenkins, matron of honor, dressed in lavender organdy and carrying pink sweet peas and maidenhair fern, proceeded from a white rose arch at the top of the stairs into the living-room to the pink and white arch, where the ceremony took place. She was followed by Miss Helen Sherwood, sister of the groom and maid of honor, who was dressed in pink organdy and carried lavender sweet peas. Next came the flower girl, Bernadine McKay, dressed in pink organdy and carrying a basket filled with sweet peas, and the ring bearer, Winton Webb, nephew of the bride, bearing the ring in a beautiful callily. He wore a little silk velvet suit.

The bride then entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She was beautiful in a gown of ivory silk canton crepe, trimmed with pearls and pearl fringe. She carried a shower bouquet of delicate pink rosebuds and in her hair was a dainty silver wreath.

The best man, Dolliver Webb, brother of the bride, then entered with Lowie Perkins of South Pasadena, attendant, and the ceremony was solemnized, Rev. Byron Wilson of Los Angeles officiating. Rev. Wilson is superintendent of Methodist churches of Southern California. Pearl Curran and Miss Hazel Linkogel played the wedding march from Lohengrin to which the bridal party entered the room.

The bride's mother, Mrs. James Webb, wore a beautiful black canton crepe gown, elaborately beaded, and a corsage of American Beauty rosebuds. Mrs. J. B. Sherwood, mother of the groom, wore a blue georgette crepe, draped with black lace, and wore a corsage of pink tea roses.

Only intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom witnessed the ceremony which was followed by a reception and the serving of refreshments, the floral decorations and appointments carrying out a pink and white color scheme.

Immediately after the reception the young couple left for a wedding trip to Yosemite valley. Upon their return they will make their home in Glendale.

Mrs. Sherwood is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Webb of 127 West Chestnut street. Mr. Webb is proprietor of the Glendale Hardware company on East Broadway. Mrs. Sherwood graduated from the local high school in the class of 1921 and has lived in Glendale for the past 10 years. She has a host of friends here.

Mr. Sherwood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Sherwood of 357 West Broadway and has lived here for about five years. He is a well-known designer and builder.

The successful business man today is the one who knows how to choose his managers. A successful modern business is too vast for any one man to handle. So managers are essential, and if these managers are badly chosen, failure follows.

The unsuccessful man owes a great deal of his failure to managers like young Billy Oates.

Young Bill Oates' father sent him to the mill one day to try to sell the season's wheat crop. Oates got hold of the miller and submitted a handful of wheat to him. The miller examined the wheat carefully. Then he said: "How much more has your father got like this?"

"He ain't got no more like that," young Billy Oates answered. "It took him all morning to pick that out."

Purely Personal

The first annual celebration of the Christian Circle club has been postponed from May 7 to May 8.

The Ladies' Aid society of Central Christian church will hold their May birthday dinner on Thursday. All are urged to bring a luncheon and enjoy the entire day, which will be spent in sewing and a social time.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Albert and daughter Gertrude, of the Thom ranch, accompanied Dwain Moore on a motor trip to Oakland last week. They left Glendale Monday and returned Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Cline and family of 134 North Orange street spent Sunday at Balboa with Mrs. Cline's sister, Mrs. Myrtle True Smith. They enjoyed a pleasant motor ride around the bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Herring of 411 South Central avenue are the proud parents of a baby girl, born Monday morning at the Glendale hospital and sanitarium.

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Worsley were host and hostess at a dinner at their home, 346 Vine street. The dinner was given in honor of Ashley Worsley of Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Barton and son Arthur of 920 Mountain street motored to Bakersfield on Friday on a business trip. From there they went to MacFarland and then to Woodlake to visit Mrs. Barton's sister, Miss J. E. Campbell, who came back to Glendale with them Sunday. The trip was a pleasant one.

Chapter C. J. P. E. O. will meet Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Martha Cox, 624 South Central avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Tassmere, 409 East Lomita street, spent Sunday at Santa Monica.

Laura Cutter was hostess at a birthday party recently in celebration of her ninth birthday. Those present were Rosine Brown, Leona Rockhold, Katherine Henry, and Val Roy, Kather of Los Angeles.
