The human mind is so fond of striking contrasts, that when a man is praised for some extremely high qualities, the first thought of many people is to ascertain what are his lowest ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Doubledot.

A QUARRELSOME COUPLE, WHO ARE KNOWN AMONG THEIR FRIENDS AS THE "DOG AND CAT."

A scene enacted by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Paul in their entertainments, which have become very popular throughout England. In London they gave one thousand representations, being the longest "run" ever attained in the metropolis by any entertainment, with the single exception of the late Albert Smith's Lectures on "Mont Blanc."

He.—Let me have a moment's peace!
I implore, I beg, I pray!
Stay your tongue! your scolding cease,
Or you'll scare my wits away!
Wrangle clatter, noise and din!
All day long endure I can't!
Do be quiet! Pray give in!
Will you madam?

She.—No, I shan't!
He.—Tell me, then, what have I done?
She.—Everything! Don't ask me what!
You would break a heart of stone!
He.—So would you! Now would she not?
She.—There! Just like you! Off you go!
In a rage you always fly!
'Tis a shame to treat me so!
I'll not bear it!

He.—Nor will I!
She.—Ne'er was wife so badly used!
What I suffer none can know!
Snaubed, neglected and abused!
Where do you expect to go?
He.—Silence, madam! I command!
Hush this instant. Pray forbear,
Some one's coming close at hand!
They will hear you!

She.—I don't care!
He.—Do you wish to drive me mad?
Stay! what's this? Oh, never! tears!
Pray, forgive me. 'Twas too bad.
She.—Leave me, or I'll box your ears!
He.—Really, madam, 'pon my life,
This is going much too far!
I'm your husband!
She.—I'm your wife!
He.—Then obey me!
She.—Ha! ha! ha!

Do you take me for a slave?
He.—There, there; come, now, let it rest!
She.—For as such I'll not behave!
He.—Goodness, gracious, what a pest!
She.—Yes, 'tis I that's all to blame!
Well, 'tis woman's lot to bear!
He.—What the dickens—
She.—Sir, for shame!

Rave, abuse, but do not swear!
You must know I'm far from strong;
Spare me then this new distress.
I shall not be with you long!
He.—Blissful thought what happiness!
She.—I declare—now, if I don't—
Cruel man, to let you see—
Go and drown myself!

He.—No, don't. Think what would become of me!
She.—Sir, you are a perfect brute!
He.—Like yourself, my love, I fear.
She.—And a wretch, beyond dispute!
He.—Then we are a pair, my dear.
She.—Would your face, I'd never seen!
He.—Fond regrets, alas! how vain!
She.—What a goose I must have been!
He.—Yes, and constant still remain!
She.—Oh, you monster!
He.—Oh, you shrew!
She.—Ruffian!
He.—Vixen!
She.—Fright!
He.—Old squib!
She.—You're a savage!
He.—You're a screw!
She.—You're another!
He.—That's a fib!
She.—Sir, your shoulders I will flog
Black and blue. I tell you that!

He.—Yes, you treat me like a Dog!
She.—So you are!
He.—Then you're a Cat!

The Emperor's New Clothes.

BY HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN.

Many years ago there lived an emperor who cared so very much about having new clothes that he spent all his money merely for the sake of being smartly dressed. He did not care much about his troops; he did not care either about going to the play or driving out unless it were that he might show his new clothes. He had a suit for every hour in the day; and as one usually says of the King or Emperor—he held a privy council, so of him it was said—His Majesty sat in council with his tailors.

In the large town where he resided people led a merry life. Day after day fresh visitors arrived at court; one day, too, a couple of swindlers, who called themselves first-rate weavers, made their appearance. They pretended that they were able to weave the richest stuffs, in which not only the colors and patterns were extremely beautiful, but that the clothes made of such stuffs possessed the wonderful property of remaining invisible to him who was unfit for the office he held, or who was extremely silly.

"What capital clothes they must be!" thought the Emperor. "If I had but such a suit I should directly find out what people in my empire were not equal to their offices; and besides, I should be able to distinguish the clever from the stupid. By Jove, I must have some of this stuff made directly for me! And so he ordered large sums of money to be given to the two swindlers, that they might set to work immediately.

The men erected two looms and did as if they worked very diligently; but in reality they had got nothing on the loom. They boldly demanded the finest silk and gold thread, put it all in their own pockets and worked away at the empty loom till quite late at night.

"I should like to know how the two weavers are getting on with my stuff," said the Emperor one day to himself; but he was rather embarrassed when he remembered that a silly fellow, or one unfit for his office, would not be able to see the stuff. 'Tis true, he thought as far as regarded himself, there was no risk whatever; but he preferred sending some one else to bring him intelligence of the two weavers, and how they were getting on, before he went himself. Everybody in the whole town had heard of the wonderful property that this stuff was said to possess, and all were curious to know how clever or foolish their neighbors might be found to be.

"I will send my worthy old minister," said the Emperor at last, after much consideration; "he will be able to say how the stuff looks better than anybody, for he is a man of understanding, and no one can be found more fitted for this than he."

So the worthy old minister went to the room where the two swindlers were working away with all their might and main. "Lord help me," thought the old man opening his eyes as wide as he could; "why, I can't see the least thing on the loom!" But he took care not to give voice to his thoughts.

The swindlers begged him most politely to have the goodness to approach the loom; and then, pointing to the empty frame, asked him if the colors were not of great beauty. And the poor old minister looked and could see nothing at all there. "Bless me!" thought he to himself, "Am I really then a simpleton? Well, I never thought so, and nobody does. I not fit for my office! No nothing on earth shall make me say that I have not seen the stuff!"

"Well, sir," said one of the swindlers, still working busily, "you don't say if the work pleases you or not."

"Oh beautiful, beautiful! the work is admirable!" said the old minister, looking at the beam through his spectacles. "This pattern and these colors!—well, well; I shall not fail to tell the Emperor that both are most beautiful."

"Well we shall be delighted if you do so," said the swindlers, and named the different patterns and colors that were in the stuff. The old minister listened attentively to what they said, in order that he might be able to repeat all to the Emperor. The swindlers then asked for more money and silk and gold thread, which they said they wanted to finish the piece they had begun. But they put, as before, all that was given them into their own pockets, and still continued to work with apparent diligence at the empty loom.

"Some time after the Emperor sent another officer to see how the work was getting on, and if the piece of brocade would soon be finished. But he fared like the other; he stared at the loom from every side; but as there was nothing there, of course he could see only the empty frame.

"Does the stuff not please you as much as it did the minister?" asked the men, making the same gestures as before, and talking of splendid colors and of patterns which did not exist.

"Stupid I certainly am not," thought the new commissioner; "then it must be that I am not fitted for my lucrative office—that were a good joke! however, no one dare even suspect such a thing. And so he began praising the stuff that he could not see, and told the two swindlers how pleased he was to behold such beautiful colors and such charming patterns. "Indeed, your Majesty," said he to the Emperor, on his return, "the stuff which the weavers are making is extraordinarily fine."

The magnificent brocade that the Emperor was having woven at his own expense was the talk of the whole town.

The Emperor wished to see the costly stuff while it was on the loom; so, accompanied by a chosen train of courtiers, among whom were the two trusty men who had so admired the work, on he went to the two cunning cheats. As soon as they heard of the Emperor's approach, they began working with diligence, although as yet, there was not a single thread on the loom.

"Is it not magnificent?" said the two officers of the crown. "Will your Majesty only look? What a charming pattern what beautiful colors!" said they, pointing to the empty frames, for they thought the others could really see the stuff.

"What's the meaning of this?" said the Emperor to himself, "I see nothing! This is a terrible matter! Am I a simpleton; or am I not fit to be Emperor? Why, that were the worst that could happen to me. Oh, charming, the stuff is really charming," said he then; "I approve it highly!" And he smiled graciously; for he would not for the world say that he could not see what his two officers had so much praised. The whole strained their eyes to discover something on the looms, but they could see as little as the others. At the same time, in order to please their master, the Emperor, they all cried: "Oh, how beautiful!" and counselled his Majesty to have new robes made out of this magnificent stuff for the grand procession which was about to take place. "Excellent! charming!" was echoed from mouth to mouth, and all were extremely pleased. The Emperor was as satisfied as his courtiers, and conferred on each of the cheats an order which they were to wear in their button-holes, and gave them the title of "Knights of the Most Honorable Order of the Loom."

"The night preceding the day on which the procession was to take place, the two men stayed up all night, and had sixteen candles burning; so that everybody might see how hard they worked to get the Emperor's new dress ready in proper time. The pretended to unroll the stuff from the loom; they cut the air with their scissors, and sewed with needles that had no thread. "Now, then," said they, "the Emperor's new suit is ready at last."

"The Emperor then made his appearance in the chamber of the two Knights of the most Honorable Order of the Loom, accompanied by his two chamberlains of the highest rank; and the two cheats held up their arms as though they had something in their hands, and said, "Here are your Majesty's knee-breeches; here is the coat, and the mantle. The whole suit is as light as cobweb, and when one is dressed, one would almost fancy one had nothing on; but that is just the beauty of this stuff."

"Of course!" said all the courtiers, although not a single one of them could see anything of the clothes.

"Will your Imperial Majesty most graciously be pleased to undress? we will then try on the new things before the glass."

The Emperor allowed himself to be undressed, and then the two cheats did exactly as if each one helped him on with an article of dress, while his Majesty turned himself round on all sides before the glass.

"How well the dress becomes your Majesty, and how well it fits? What a pattern! What Colors! This is indeed a dress worthy of a King!"

"The canopy which is to be born above your Majesty in the procession is in readiness without," announced the chief master of the ceremonies.

"I am quite ready," replied the Emperor. "Do my new things sit well?" asked he, turning round once more before the looking-glass, in order that it might appear that he examined the dress very minutely.

The pages who were to carry the Emperor's train felt about on the ground, as if they were carrying something, for they also did not wish to betray simplicity or unfitness for their post.

And so the Emperor walked on, under the high canopy, through the streets and at the windows cried out, "Oh, how beautiful the Emperor's new dress is! what a splendid train! and the mantle, how well it sits!"

In short, there was nobody but wished to cheat himself into the belief that he saw the highly-valued clothes, for otherwise he would have had to acknowledge himself either a simpleton or an awkward fellow. As yet, none of the Emperor's new dresses had met with such approval as the suit made by the two weavers.

"But the Emperor has nothing on!" said a little child. "Ah, hear the voice of innocence!" said the father, and one person whispered to the other what the child had said.

"But he really has nothing on!" exclaimed at last all the people. This vexed the Emperor, for he felt that they were right, but he thought, "However, I must bear the thing to the end!" And the pages placed themselves further from him, as if they were carrying a train which did not really exist.

What think our readers of the moral here conveyed, and how many of them pretend to see things that have no existence, least their judgement may be called into question.

A YANKEE OUTWITTED.—A Yankee owed an Irishman the sum of five hundred dollars, for which amount the creditor held the debtor's note. The creditors, not having the utmost confidence in the solvency of his debtor—however much he might have had in his honesty—offered him his note for two hundred dollars. The Yankee could not resist the tempting offer, and moved heaven and earth till he borrowed the two hundred from his friends. He sought his Irish creditor, and the affair seemed to be satisfactorily settled, by the Irishman pocketing the two hundred and the Yankee his note, when Pat says to his friend, "Plase, sir, let me have a look at that note." The confiding Yankee hands it over for Pat's examination, when the latter coolly walks away with it, remarking to his astounded friend, "I'll chridit this two hundred on the back of the note." The Yankee's "phelinks" may be imagined, but not described.—Nevada Transcript.

CORKSCREWS have sunk more people than cork jackets will ever keep up.

MATRIMONIAL ADVICE.—Never marry an undertaker's daughter, unless you wish to undertake to raise a hearseful family; nor a miller's daughter, unless she is the flour of the family. Nor pay your addresses to the daughter of a lawyer, for fear her existence will be brief. If you must choose between a doctor's or a baker's daughter, take the latter, for her drafts are more easily swallowed. Nor should you wed a nobleman's daughter, for her "offense is rank;" nor yet a gardener's daughter, lest she should take a rake. Avoid marrying a drowned sailor's daughter, for she will have an aversion to water; neither condole with a shoemaker's girl, for she'll wish you waxing near your end for your all. If you marry a blue stocking, you will go with holes in your own. You cannot marry a baker's daughter, for she will not be of the upper crust, and of course is ill-bred. If you care to marry, marry some woman whose father was hung. Then you need not use a rope's end to her, for she will remember the paternal application. Pick a sexton's daughter, for she will be of a grave turn of mind, and experienced in epitaphs suitable for a bereaved family, which is a convenient thing to have in the house.

A STEAMBOAT DIALOGUE.—Hoosier, (stepping up to a Down Easter)—How are ye, stranger? Bound too Noo'Leans, 'speak? What mout be your business? Want to buy some corn or oats?

Yankee—Tolerable, thank you, how are yourself? Bound to any place in particular? In for any kind of trade?

Hoosier—What kind of trade hav ye?

Yankee—Wall, it's a patent right?

Hoosier—Patent for what?

Yankee—Patent right for a machine for making all kinds of seed out of wood, from a shell-bark down to a grass seed. Have also a patent right for the mirage life preserver.

Hoosier—Meerage—what's meerage?

Yankee—It's a machine to be fixed on the front of a locomotive or steamboat, with reflectors of great power, to show the image of anything ahead, no matter how far it may be off—anything under a hundred miles.

Hoosier—Don't say? And are yer the inventor?

Yankee—I be.

Hoosier—You're a horse: What mout be yer name?

Yankee—Coffin.

Hoosier—Heerd tell of your family. You are a relation of the man that invented wooden hams and plaster-paris shoe-nails. Had a brother once, hadn't yer, that got accidentally choked with a rope round his neck?

Yankee—Knew the man—wasn't a brother—only a second cousin to my wife's sister's aunt's brother's cousin. But what might your name be?

Hoosier—It mout be Smith, but it ain't. Calculate it's Caster.

Yankee—Knewed yer family well, from yer great grand-father down. You are one of two twins. One was a handsome, cute, bright-eyed little chap, and the other a tarantion ugly, born fool; and I heerd that the cute one died.

Here the dinner-beel rang.

The heaviest money-freight ever recorded was carried to England from the West Indies, a few weeks ago, on the Tasmania steamer. It was nearly all in Mexican dollars, reaching $5,662,000 in amount, and weighing 165 tons, contained in 2,168 packages. It occupied a special train of thirty-six railway wagons on its way from Southampton to London; and was taken from the London station to the Bank of England in thirty-six street wagons. Such a reception in a single day, though a little rare, is not at all unprecedented in the bank of England.

JEREMY TAYLOR says, if you are for pleasure, marry; if you prize rosy health, marry. A good wife is Heaven's last best gift to man—an angle of mercy—minister of graces innumerable—his gem of many virtues—his casket of jewels—her voice, his sweet music—her smiles, his brightest day—her kiss, the guardian of innocence—her arms, the pale of his safety, the balm of his health, the balsam of his life—her industry, his surest wealth—her economy, his safest steward—her lips, his faithful counsellor—her bosom, the softest pillow of his cares—and her prayers, the ablest advocates of Heaven's blessings on his head.

A BAD SPECULATION.—The New Orleans Delta tells a story of a man in that city, who, being about to enter upon a doubtful speculation, disposed of all his real estate, and deposited the proceeds thereof in the bank, in the name of his wife, that the money might be beyond the reach of his creditors should his speculation prove unprofitable. The wife, finding herself the sudden possessor of wealth, in her own right, ran away to Havana with a good-looking masculine friend, leaving her loving spouse to consider at his leisure the truth of an old adage.

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1861.

THE Teachers' Association of Yolo county, will hold an adjourned meeting at Yolo City on the fourth Saturday of this month, at 1 o'clock P. M. Several of the members being absent on last Saturday, the exercises were postponed for two weeks. Mr. E. B. Frink will deliver an address, and Mr. C. B. Smyth and other gentlemen will have original essays upon the important subject of Education. Let all who have the interest of our schools at heart, attend. Mr. Frink's abilities as a speaker, are of the first order—while the reputation of Prof. Smyth is such as to promise a rich literary treat.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement, in another column, of Thomas & Brownell, who have just arrived from San Francisco with a large and well selected stock of goods.

VALENTINES DAY.—Call and examine the Valentines, of all kinds, for sale at this office.

NEW MAGAZINE.—We have received a copy of the California Mountaineer a monthly magazine, edited by H. S. Brooks, of Tuolumne county, and from appearances, we think it is equal to any of the magazines published in this State. J. W. Sullivan, San Francisco, is the general agent.

DIDN'T WANT AN APETITE.—The Mountain Democrat is responsible for the following: "A disappointed candidate called for an 'eye-opener' in the Orleans Hotel, Sacramento. The bar keepers speedily completed a cocktail and was topping it off with absynthe. 'What's that?—what's that?' demanded the man outside of the counter. 'It's absynthe, sir, it'll give you a good appetite.' 'Appetite, h—ll! take that stuff out; take it out! I don't want no appetite—what's a feller want of an appetite when he hain't got money enough to pay for his breakfast?'"

CALIFORNIA STAGE CO.—The following were elected officers of the Company on the 7th inst. for the ensuing year: J. Haworth, President, Sacramento; G. F. Thomas, General Superintendent, Salem, Oregon; A. G. Richardson, Cashier, Sacramento; H. A. Charles, Secretary, Marysville. Trustees—J. Haworth, F. S. Stevens, G. F. Thomas, A. G. Richardson, and Wash. Montgomery.

HEALTHFULNESS OF APPLES.—There is scarcely an article of vegetable food, says Hall's Journal of Health, more widely useful and more universally loved than the apple. Why every farmer in the nation has not an apple orchard, where the trees will grow at all, is one of the mysteries. Let every family lay in from two to ten or more barrels. It will be to them the most economical investment in the whole range of culinarics. A raw, mellow apple can be digested in an hour and a half, while boiled cabbage requires five hours. The most healthy dessert which can be placed on a table is a baked apple. If taken freely at breakfast, with coarse bread and butter, without meat or flesh of any kind, it has an admirable effect on the general system, often removes constipation, corrects acidities, and cooling off febrile conditions more effectually than the most approved medicines. If families could be induced to substitute the apple—sound, ripe and luscious—for the pies, cakes, candies and sweetmeats, with which their children are too often indiscreetly stuffed, there would be a diminution in the sum total of doctor's bills in a single year, sufficient to lay in a stock of this delicious fruit for a whole season's use.

From Victoria, V. I.

By the Overland Mail from Portland, we have dates from Victoria to Dec. 27th.

The British bark "Nannette," 175 days from London, was wrecked on Race Rock Reefs, near the harbor of Victoria, and is a total loss. The officers and crew escaped, and a portion of the cargo may be recovered, but in a damaged condition.

The "Nannette" left London on the 30th day of June, and had been, consequently, 175 days in making Race Rocks. She was 385 tons burthen, and was consigned to Messrs. Stamp & Co., of Victoria, and was laden with a full and very valuable cargo, valued at from $160,000 to $170,000., of which amount the Hudson Bay Company had $70,000, and Messrs. Stamp & Co, $50,000—both fully insured. The balance of the cargo was in smaller lots, and consigned to various merchants in Victoria, some of whom were not insured, and are consequently heavy losers by the unfortunate occurrence.

The "Nannette" was three years old, and was considered a staunch vessel.—Capt. Main is an old and experienced navigator, and the loss of his vessel within eleven miles of the port to which he was bound, after a safe passage of 175 days, without hardly sighting land, is attributed to the occurrence of a succession of unfortuitous circumstances, against which no seaman could guard.

Knight's Landing Cemetery.

Judge Gwinn and C. F. Reed Esq., of this place, have liberally donated to the public, between five and six acres of land for a burial ground, on the north side of the slough about a mile from town, on the Cacheville road. Mr. Underhill, and several other citizens of Knight's Landing have been engaged for the past few days in laying off the ground in lots, 10x24 feet, with convenient avenues and walks between.

As the grounds will need fencing, it is proposed to sell the lots for a small sum, in order to raise funds for that purpose. It is to be hoped that our people will each contribute their mite to this most laudable enterprise.

The spot selected is one of the most beautiful for that purpose, that could be found in the whole State.

The donation is a most generous and liberal one, and a little exertion now on the part of our citizens will give us, for all time to come, one of the most beautiful Cemeteries in the country, to which posterity will point as a monument of the munificence and refinement of the early settlers of Knight's Landing.

On Saturday next there will be a meeting at the School House, at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of electing Trustees, etc.

THE BRIGGS GIFT DRAWING.—The Marysville Appeal, of Jan. 16th, gives the official drawing of Briggs' gifts, and the following account of the manner in which it was done:

The drawing of the one hundred and twenty-four prizes, valued at $215,000, in the first division of Briggs' Grand Gift Entertainment, came off at the Melodeon last night, at the conclusion of the evening's performances by the Sager troupe. The theater was crowded with anxious and excited men, who gladly hailed the close of the "entertainment" and the appearance of the huge tin drum, nearly as big as a cider barrel, set on uprights, which contained tickets numbered from 1 to 107,800. The audience chose as a Committee to take charge of the drawing the following well known and respectable citizens; A. Walker, President; J. Beleroude, C. L. Crackborn, C. N. Jenkins, F. B. Fleming, E. S. Chapin, S. P. Bronk, L. C. Hammond, David Milson. After the Committee had given the drum containing the little numbered squares a thorough turning, amid the shouts and laughter and obtrusive orders of the impatient crowd, a little girl named Frances Emma Lattin, aged about five or six years, was brought upon the stage, and stood on a chair, between the drum and the audience, to draw the numbers.

The little arbitress of fate performed her duty very coolly, and thrust her petite hand into the cylinder as though it were full of sugar-plums. As she drew forth the checks and laid them upon a waiter held by one of the Committee, the numbers were called out in a loud voice. The following is the numbers of the four first prizes drawn. The first number drawn, entitling the holder of the corresponding ticket to the Sacramento river orchard, valued at $120,000, was 9,080. The lucky owner is supposed to be a citizen of Auburn. The next number, entitling the lucky holder to the Oroville orchard, valued at $90,000, was 43,508. The third, which bestows the $3,000 meadow ranch, was 68,748; and the fourth, giving the $2,000 ranch, was 70,095. After the drawing of these numbers, the announcement of which was received rather quietly, a large part of the audience left.

CHARLES DICKENS' COUNTRY HOUSE.

—It is announced that Dickens is about to dispose of Tavistock House, London, and retire altogether to his pleasant retreat at Gadshill. The latter residence has been the remote cause of all the great novelist's domestic woe. In his boyhood, Dickens lived at Rochester, Kent, his father being then employed in the Navy Yard, at Chatham, contiguous to Rochester. The scenery in the immediate neighborhood, had an unspeakable charm for Dickens. He describes a portion of it in the early chapters of the Pickwick papers. As he advanced in life and became familiar with Shakespeare's Henry IV, Gadshill, in the vicinity of Rochester, acquired a special interest in his eyes, and he registered a vow that if he became rich he would build a house there.

But by the time he had obtained possession of the means of realizing the object near his heart, Mrs. Dickens had become so attached to London life that she positively refused to go into the country. It was in vain that Dickens expostulated, entreated, and explained how difficult it was for him to write in London uninterruptedly, exposed, as his popularity rendered him, to frequent visitors. Mrs. Dickens was inflexible. Ultimately Chas. Dickens went to the new country house, accompanied by one of his daughters, and for her sake invited his sister-in-law and a meritorious young actress to become inmates of their dwelling. It was not long before this arrangement became a subject of serious uneasiness to Mrs. Dickens. The "green-eyed monster" is said to have possessed her, and thence arose those serious misunderstandings which led to a dissolution of the marriage compact and the complete severance of Dickens from London life.—N. Y. Post.

From Oregon.

The Oregon papers contains the following:

The Port Townsend Register says that this volcano is now in active operation, throwing off clouds of smoke and steam. To-day the atmosphere being clear, our citizens had a magnificent view of the snow clad giant from whose summit ascended a column of smoke, which by aid of a telescope, presented the appearance of a steamboat blowing off her surplus steam—the vapor rose perpendicularly high above the loftiest peak, and was more distinctly visible than we have ever seen it before.

A little son of Mr. Jacob Conser, of this country, two years old, some weeks since climbed upon the hearth of a Franklin stove, in the absence of its mother, and its clothes taking fire, it was badly burned, inasmuch that its life was for some days despaired of; but it is now recovering. The little fellow's cries attracted an older brother, who extinguished the flames by plunging him in a tub of water, which luckily happened to be near.

A little son of Mr. William Churchill, of Cole's Valley, Douglas county, was left by his mother in the care of his little sister, while she went into the kitchen to prepare dinner. Shortly after she left the room she was startled by the cries of the little girl, when she ran into the room and found the little boy in the fire. He lived two days, enduring the acutest pain, when he was relieved by death.

On Christmas day, Mr. G. W. Howell, of Marion county, found the skeleton of a horse with saddle and bridle on. The horse had been dead six or eight months. There was, with other articles, what seemed to have been a new broadcloth coat when left there.

Some time in November, Mrs. Martha Jones fell dead in the stable of Joseph Churchill, of Marion county. The Coroner, Dr. Magers, reports apoplexy the cause.

LATE FROM VIRGINIA CITY.—In the Territorial Enterprise of January 12th we find the following:

An injunction was granted on Friday last by Judge Cradlebaugh, at the instance of the St. Louis Mining Company, against the Rich and Lucy Ella Companies, restraining them from working and carrying away ore from the tunnels of the last two companies, above the Devil's Gate. The surprising richness of the land in those tunnels has attracted much attention during the past two weeks. Two surveys were made on the ground, one by the County Surveyor and another by Isaac James, and upon the surveys presented the injunction was granted. Some parties of the Rich Company, who could not be served on Saturday, went to work on Sunday, making a formidable display of United States Minie muskets, revolvers, etc.; these were captured by Sheriff Blackburn, and carried off. The posse comitatus was called out, and the parties were summarily ejected, after which the Sheriff put in a keeper to preserve the property intact, until the further order of the Court. Before the service of the legal injunction, it is understood that the Rich Company had served a peremptory process against the Lucy Ella in the shape of Minie and Colt's improved patent "monarch of all I survey," warranted to hold everything within five hundred yards.

From Ludlum, who resides on the Carson river near Ragtown, we learn that a party of Pah-Utahs who were camped near the Sink of Humboldt sent a deputation into Fort Churchill, to state that they desired peace and wished an Indian Agent to be sent among them, as they heard occasionally in their intercourse with the whites that they (the whites) wanted to fight them. They said they desired peace and wished the whites to prospect, but to use them right. They further stated that the Northern Indians were belligerent. The Chief—the elder Winnemucca, who made the statement—was disposed to rule all Indians out of his tribe who would not obey his orders. They seem to desire that the whites should thoroughly understand their position.

We understand that J. J. Cooper, of this city, has discovered some very fine specimens of saltpetre but a short distance from this city. It is found in a crystalline form, and in sufficient quantities to warrant collection. The discoverer intends to test it thoroughly in the Spring.

A petition is in circulation for the removal of the county seat of Carson county from Genoa to Silver City.

From Australia.

The Sydney Morning Herald of the 20th, Oct—five days later, has the following:

A disastrous fire occurred in Sydney, on the 3d of October, which destroyed property to the value of $500,000. The Prince of Wales Theater, which cost $150,000, was also destroyed. A great deal of distress had been occasioned by this terrible conflagration.

The revenue of New South Wales, for the year ending September, 1860, was 1,573,053 pounds sterling—which is a considerable falling off.

The telegraph extensions, for which heavy appropriations had been made, amounted to 800 miles the past year, and the important mines of Kiandra were now connected with Sydney by telegraph.

CACHEVILLE, YOLO CO., Jan. 14.

EDITOR NEWS:—I noticed in your last issue, under the head of "poetry," a piece headed "Collision" and its author signed his name "Omega," and, by the way, I should judge a very appropriate name; for of all the low doggerel that have ever had the semblance of poetry, that is the most despicable in spirit, in combination, and in composition.

I should presume "Omega" will never make a very graceful rider of Pegasus, and if he wishes to gain a literary immortality he will have to court something beside the muses.

At the first glance it would seem to be the production of two or three very small schoolboys; for the grammatical and rhetorical features of the doggerel were indicative of the grossest ignorance.—Nothing but a want of good breeding would have prompted him to take advantage of Mr. Pierce's absence, (he being at the time in Sacramento,) to set his name forth in such a purile production as "Collision." But I understand that it emanated from the fertile brain of a young man? whose beard has seen several summers, and who rejoices in the euphonious name of "D—k P—m—r," and as you gave publicity to the poem (?) I will take the trouble to state the facts. Mr. Pierce had taught the school for over five months; had labored incessantly for the benefit of the school; had spent considerable money for prize books for the scholars; and in return had received comparatively nothing for his labor. But with some, and especially with "Omega," it was thought that he had not yet done enough to require them for receiving his instruction; and as they thought they had the numerical strength, they determined that he should not enter his own house until he should give them five or ten dollars, as the case might be. He, it appears, thought differently and not wishing to yield to a system of wrong, that would force the property from one, because it had the strength, resisted and in the resistance the door was broken; when the boasted valor of "Omega" collapsed. A word upon the system and I am done. It originated in wrong; it had been perpetuated in wrong; it is based upon wrong and extortion, and trampling upon the rights of teachers; and at this age of improvement no teacher who is faithful to his trust will ever submit to such an indignity. If he does he is not worthy the name of man much less that of teacher, even if he gives "Omega" a chance to sound his "larum cry" and "hand his name down to glory."

The Kansas Famine.

The correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, writing from Atchison, Kansas, under date of December 9th, says:

"I reached the city yesterday morning. On landing at the levee from the railroad ferryboat, the first object to be seen was a long row of wagons, with numbers of gaunt and hungry oxen standing near. I was told that they were from the interior, driven here to be loaded with the provisions sent for the relief of the people. The first men I saw were Mr. Pomeroy, the general disbursing agent of the Relief Committee; Dr. Ayres, of Linn county; C. B. Lines, of Waubensia county, and Mr. Graham, of Doniphan county. I was immediately plied with questions to know how the people East were sustaining the efforts made to relieve the destitution. I gave all the information of which I was possessed, and in return was told that the destitution had been underrated entirely. The Rev. Mr. Graham said that there were fifty thousand who must be sustained for some months. Dr. Ayres, one of the most intelligent and well esteemed citizens of Linn county, said that at least forty thousand must be kept from starving for six months to come. These gentlemen I know, and have every confidence in.

I walked up to the office wherein is transacted the business of the relief. It was crowded with the men in charge of the teams standing in the streets and on the levee. As I came along I counted twenty-three; and was told that at least fifty were in town. Such a scene! Great, stalwart men, gaunt, lean, hungry, weary-looking, sad, tired and dispirited, poorly clad, and in all respects, filling one with the conviction of suffering patiently borne and long repressed—men, some of whom I recognized, and all of whom bore the unmistakable character of sturdy industry and independence common to our Western pioneers. To look upon those faces and read the sad tale of suffering within, told the story far more forcibly than any feeble words can.

Mingling among them, I took down in my note-book the statement made by some dozen of them. I give you a few, that your readers may see this is no fiction.

The first I spoke to was a poorly but decently clad middle aged man—a respectable looking farmer. This the substance of his story:

"My name is Walter Cain; I live in Jefferson township, north part of Jackson county, about 40 miles west of Atchison. I have been here four times without obtaining any aid. My orders from the local committee represent about three hundred voters, (about twelve hundred persons). There has been literally nothing grown in our section, and many must suffer. I planted 25 acres in corn, wheat and potatoes. I have no corn, no potatoes, and only about thirty bushels of wheat, as the harvest. My son-in-law had 14 acres planted in corn, but did not harvest a single ear."

By this time many had gathered around me and were disposed to tell their stories. I picked out a small, keen eyed, intelligent appearing man, and asked him what part of the interior he came from. He said:

"My name is A. V. Saunders; I am from Whitewater creek, Otoe county. Whitewater is in the extreme southwest of Kansas, and is at least two hundred miles from Atchison. Our country is somewhat new. Judge Norton took the census. He reports about four hundred persons in the country. Our settlement is about a specimen of all. Of eighty-three acres planted in corn by six or my neighbors, (the narrator at the same time telling the proportions planted by each of that amount,) we have not harvested a single bushel. We have no breadstuffs. We have some buffalo meat, no potatoes, no vegetables. Have been here ten days; it is two hundred miles to our place, and I only get for my wagons, (two I think he said,) twelve sacks of meal and eight of potatoes."

A grave, earnest looking middle aged man said, in reply to my questions, that:

"His name was W. K. Beech, lived on Mission Creek, Waubensia county, about one hundred miles from this place. The settlement contained 150 persons last summer, half of whom had left. Of the rest only three farmers had old corn—There was nothing raised there. I know of six families perfectly destitute. These families will average six each—about thirty-six in all. They have nothing, sir, but what the neighbors give of their little supply."

This was said in a very earnest tone in response to my startled look.

"One family consists of a sick widow and five children. They have nothing but what we give them. Have been here with two teams waiting ten days, and Mr. Pomeroy can give us no more of a load than ten sacks of meal and twenty sacks of potatoes. We are afraid of these freezing."

"Will you please read what you have written sir?" said Mr. Beech, as I closed my note book. I did so, and he closed my note book. I did so, and he corrected one or two immaterial errors I had made. No man's story impressed me as did this old gentleman's. He was so earnest and conscientious in his statement, that one felt the unsaid to be worse than what was said.

BAYARD TAYLOR HISSIED.—The New York Times of December 21st, says:

Bayard Taylor delivered a lecture, on Tuesday evening, before the Mercantile Library Association, in the Athenaeum. His subject was "Man and Climate." In the course of his remarks he said:

"There was no race, ever known, who did not possess some instinct of individual rights. There were said to be a class of savages in Bulgaria, who hang all their intellectual men when they become too prominent, in order to preserve the balance of equality and keep the people at peace. In civilized countries the practice was modified a little, for they only muzzled, instead of hanging them. An instance of the latter method occurred a few days since at Philadelphia, when (the lecturer's) friend, Mr. G. W. Curtis, was muzzled in this manner."

This created considerable excitement. Applause and hisses greeted the lecturer's ears. At first the applause predominated, but the hisses rallying returned to the charge, and for several minutes there was a fearful conflict for the ascendancy. At the end of five minutes it was quite apparent that the hisses were in the majority, and both parties subsided.

Mr. Taylor then very quietly remarked, "I thought I was too old a traveler to have a new sensation, but I have now. I never before have been hissed publicly; but I must say, that to be hissed for advocating freedom of speech is not so bad after all." This reply was received with mingled hisses and applause, which was continued but for a moment, and the matter was dropped by all.

THE
Knight's Landing News.

A GOOD JOKE.—A loafer, while stopping at a tavern up country, used to lounge about the bar and drink other people's liquor. Not a glass could be left alone for a moment, but he would slip up and drink its contents. One day a stage driver came in, and called for a stiff horn of brandy toddy. Jehu immediately played possum by leaving his brandy while he stepped to the door. The bait took—on returning he saw his glass empty, and exclaimed with the all diabolical horror he could effect.

"Brandy and opium enough to kill forty men! who drank that pizen?"
"I!" stammered the loafer, ready to yield up the ghost with affright.
"You're a dead man," said the driver.
"What shall I do?" beseeched the other, who thought himself a gone sucker.
"Down with a pint of lamp oil, or you're a dead man in three minutes," answered the wicked driver. And down went the lamp oil and up came the brandy and opium, together with his breakfast—the joke was told and he never drank other people's liquor since.

"VERY PROUD TO-NIGHT."—It was a cold night in winter. The wind blew and the snow was whirled furiously about, seeking to hide itself beneath cloaks and hoods, and in the very hairs of those who were out. A distinguished lecturer was to speak, and, notwithstanding the storm, the villagers ventured forth to hear him. William Annesley, buttoned up to the chin in his thick overcoat, accompanied his mother. It was difficult to walk through the new-fallen snow, against the piercing wind, and William said to his mother: "Couldn't you walk more easily if you took my arm?"

"Perhaps I could," his mother replied, as she put her arm through his, and drew up as close as possible to him. Together they breasted the storm, the mother and the boy who had once been carried in her arms, but who had grown up so tall that she could now lean on his. They had not walked far before he said to her, "I am very proud to-night mother."
"Proud that you can take care of me?" she said to him with a heart gushing with tenderness.

"This is the first time you have leaned upon me," said the happy boy.
There will be few hours in that child's life of more exalted pleasure than he enjoyed that evening, even if he should live to an old age, and should, in his manhood, lovingly provide for her who watched over him in his helpless infancy. It was a noble pride, that made his mother love him, if it were possible, more than ever; and made her pray for him with new earnestness, thankful for his devoted love and hopeful for the future. There is no more beautiful sight than affectionate, devoted, obedient children. I am sure he that commanded children to honor their father and mother, must look upon such with pleasure. May he bless dear William, and every other boy whose heart is filled with ambition to be a blessing and "a staff" to his mother.

A FISH STORY.—The Monterey Union of Friday last, tell the following:
"For the last few days there has come ashore large numbers of smelt, young mackerel, and other fish. The tables of everybody, consequently, have been well supplied. This has been caused by larger fish chasing them into shoal water, where the surf has washed them ashore. In fleeing from the larger enemies of their own species, they have rushed into dangers quite as formidable. Birds, innumerable, have been preying upon them in the Bay. Ours, it would seem, is not the only sphere where one animal preys upon another. Antagonism exists everywhere, and will continue, until the good time spoken of, when the lion and the lamb shall lie down together."

REMARKABLE PRESENCE OF MIND.—A bereaved western widow addressed the pall-bearers of the funeral with—"You pall-bearers, just go into the buttry and get some rum, and we'll start this man right along."

SOMEBODY says, the devil never troubles a busy man. This we know to be false. Show us a busier man than the editor, and he is fortunate if he has no more than one "devil" to trouble him, especially when "copy" is short.

WHAT use could the antediluvians have had for their tongues, when, in the nineteenth century, with its arts, its discoveries, its sciences, and its books, people still feel themselves at a loss what to say?

A PRINTER'S apprentice says that at the office they charge him with all the pi they do find, and at the house they charge him with all they don't find. He does not understand that kind of logic.

DEFINITIONS.—A stepmother is a mother who takes steps to turn the other woman's children out of doors as soon as possible after a marriage.
A stepchild is a child left on a doorstep.

MENTAL pleasures never cloy; they are increased by repetition, approved of by reflection, and strengthened by enjoyment.

THE man who got the last word in disputing with a woman, has advertised to whistle for a wager against a locomotive.
