CITY TRUSTEES HAVE SHORT MEET

At the regular meeting of the city board of trustees Monday evening there was no business of special noteworthy importance transacted. The monthly bills were considered and ordered paid, and other routine matters attended to. A map of tract 4649, on which the west end schoolhouse is situated, was accepted preparatory to improvement. This was formerly known as the Niemeyer tract. Trustee Taylor reported that he had interviewed the officials of the Glendale-Montrose railway in regard to the crossings between the end of the line here and the western limit of the city and had been promised that they would be put in better condition. The city engineer was instructed to prepare the grades for tract No. 4618, which is a part of the Dahlia Heights tract recently placed on the market.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it. Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.—Adv.

IMMORAL BOOKS TAKEN OFF STANDS

Officials of the W. C. T. U. yesterday protested to the chief of police that book stands and stores are offering for sale magazines that are obscene and unfit to be read by the young people of the city, or anyone else. They stated that the magazines with their suggestive pictures on the cover, and titles that suggest snappy reading are displayed openly. In the case of several publications, that are not allowed to go through the mails because of their contents, the organization cited facts that they declared were horrifying, and should not be allowed to go on sale in this city. Chief of Police Martin issued an order to all officers to notify all magazine and book dealers in the city that these publications must be taken off the stands.

If a hen lays for you she doesn't mean any harm by it.

WILL ADDRESS BUSINESS WOMEN

MISS WINIFRED HAUSMAN

Mrs. Margaret Biggs, president of the Glendale Business and Professional Women's Club, reports that the list of speakers at the banquet which the club is giving next Tuesday night in the banquet hall of the Chamber of Commerce, will be augmented by Edwin R. Server, who will give the practical side of the service rendered by the employment bureau established by the Business Women's Club of Pasadena, in its placement work.

The chief speaker along this line, however, will be Miss Winifred Hausman, head of the vocational guidance work which the club instituted in that city, and whose portrait appears herewith.

It is a work in which the Glendale club has great interest, an interest which is shared by employers in this city, and her explanations of the work and its possible development are certain to be followed with close attention by members and the guests of the club, who will include city councilmen, chamber of commerce members, and heads of prominent organizations of the city. Miss Hausman is also chairman of the vocational department of the California State Federation of Business Women's clubs, and is one of the authorities on the subject.

Mrs. May Myton heads the vocational guidance committee of the Glendale business women's club, and Mrs. George U. Moyse, who is experienced in vocational work, is one of her able lieutenants on the committee.

not. It lies in the union of the Christian soul with God, but these material things need to go along with it. We are here to make the name of Christ sweet to all the community and all of the equipment, though necessary, is subordinate. The church is the only institution in the world that exists solely to send further the kingdom of God. After this fine program had been enjoyed, refreshments were served by the ladies of the church, and a very interesting talk was given by Miss Marie Brehm on the liquor question.

MEET MISS DORIS FACE TO FACE

DORIS JEAN MILLER

Glendale residents have modestly claimed all the delights of paradise even though challenged by all the newcomers with "show me!"

One of the most sustaining proofs to offer is the Glendale children, many of whom are as perfect as though heaven had been their home instead of the fastest growing city in the United States. Perhaps this "fastest growing" spirit has entered the blood. At all events the baby pictured herewith, Doris Jean Miller, "born in Glendale," has never been sick a day, and has never varied from the standards of measurements laid down by a well known baby specialist. She is 19 months old and talks plainly, uses long sentences, and knows her "A, B C's" up to G. There is nothing abnormally precocious about her, just a healthy, lovely baby who is the light of the home in which she lives.

Mr. and Mrs. Troy P. Miller, the happy parents of this perfect baby, live at 201 East Palmer Avenue, and are ready to give Glendale a certificate of recommendation any time it is desired for incredulous visitors.

GLENN INN WILL OPEN HERE TONITE

Not Full Dress Affair Says One of Men at Helm

An erroneous impression has been circulated around Glendale to the effect that the dinner dance to be given at the Glenn Inn, 152 South Brand tonight, will be a full dress affair. F. V. Edmond, one of the proprietors, says that the dinner dance is being given solely to the "regular folks" of Glendale and is in no way to be a full dress affair. The character of the affair will be a little out of the ordinary, everything being done by the management that would enhance the enjoyment of those present. The little "finer" details will be given careful consideration.

TIED AND UNTIED

Senator Oddie, of Nevada, hails from Reno, where the divorce mills work night and day, and he has been the subject of quite a bit of mild spoofing from his colleagues on this account. The senator was in a group listening to some of these wise observations on his home city and when he had an opportunity to get into the conversation he remarked: "Well, Reno is the only city in the world where the people go down to the trains to see the tide come in." For a second or two nobody got just what he meant, but about the minute it was beginning to percolate into the minds of his hearers he added with a smile: "And they go down to the trains to see the untied go out."

graduated and enter the high school. It took place at the home of her parents, 342 El Bonita, and Miss Rosemary Gilhuly was an assisting hostess.

The house was decorated in the class colors, red and white, the same scheme being carried out in the refreshments. Mrs. Whitney, class mother, had charge of the affair, and was assisted by Mrs. Annie Curtis, principal, and Mr. Samos, physical director of the school. About boys and girls were present and a very pleasant evening of games and music was enjoyed.

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY, BROKEN OUT SKIN

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation. Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment of disfigurement. A little jar of Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.—Adv.

The colored lighting effects which furnished an aesthetic background of purple or crimson shadow for the beautiful girls who contributed to the program gave it quite a metropolitan effect.

$2000 for the first Prescription

This amount represents what the first prescription put up in my store cost me. In order to anticipate what your doctor was going to prescribe, it was necessary for me to put in stock, many thousands of the various pills and tablets, pints and gallons of liquids, pounds and pounds of the various drugs and chemicals, so that when the first prescription was presented to me to be filled, I could properly take care of it for you.

MY STOCK NOW is quite complete—we carry most of the various remedies of demand and our PRICES ARE REASONABLE - FAST—FREE—FURIOUS DELIVERY Just Phone to Glendale 1902

Today's Prevarication: The Chamber of Commerce, which has been so persistent regarding a new postoffice for Glendale, has at last been assured from Washington by our congressman that a large appropriation will be made for one and everybody will be satisfied.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME IS LEARNED

Chicago Stage Celebrity Says Greasy Pan Is Not Best Weapon

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—The secret of why men leave home is out. Men want their eyes pleased. If they can't get the optical illusion at home they will turn the "home, sweet home" motto upside down and steal out to knock upon the aesthetic threshold.

IF I never heard of a man "going to the dogs" for a woman with a greasy skillet in her hand, the first thing a wise woman will do when she is married is to go out and buy the best dress she can find. She will live on doughnuts and coffee and make her husband like 'em, for a long time, in order to wear silks and feathers.

"If the ever-enduring housewife knew what the women of the stage know, they would consider good clothes more essential than butter, eggs and bread. We have seen the husbands in action around the stage door."

FIVE FINE ACTS VAUDEVILLE BILL

Several Surprises on for Glendale Theater Patrons Tonight There are five corking big acts on the new vaudeville bill at the Glendale theater today. Yaconilli, a piano accordionist, is one of the cleverest artists and Leland and Lane offer what they style "Color Evolutions." This is a novel act and a most delightful twelve minutes of entertainment. Friendly and Cunningham style themselves "The Wise Guy and the Sloop." This act has been put together for this act purpose and that is to stir laughter. Allaire, European novelty juggler, will demonstrate that there are still a few new tricks to be revealed in the art of juggling. He is a wonder. Doc Jones and the Lively Sisters offer "Harmony and Nonsense" and the act is a winner. The picture with the bill is Gladys Walton in "Playing with Fire."

A modern comedy of errors is "Her Winning Way," an adaptation of a famous London stage hit, in which Mary Miles Minter will be presented Sunday and Monday. The popular star will be shown in the role of a cool and resourceful business girl, a young newspaper writer whose specialty is literary reviews and interviews with authors.

SPORT DIRECTOR IN SERIOUS CASE NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Tex Rickard, famous sporting promoter, was arraigned in police court today on charge of mistreating three girls, all under 16 years of age. Rickard denied all the charges. The allegation was brought by the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Rickard sweepingly denied the accusations and declared that he did not even know the girls. He was released on bail to appear next Wednesday.

Truths in Epigram

The great end of life is not knowledge but action.—Huxley (1825-1895). Let no guilty man escape, if it can be avoided. No personal considerations should stand in the way of performing a public duty.—Grant (1822-1885). Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle which fits them all.—Holmes (1809-1894).

WARNED TO SLOW DOWN

Doctors are calling attention to the danger of heart disease. Deaths from this cause are increasing. Doctors ascribe its prevalence to the tendency of the age to hurry, hurry; not always with the purpose of doing a thing quickly, but sometimes due to the habit or obsession of haste.

There also is the factor of improper methods of living. Food is gulped down. Hours of sleep are cut to a minimum. There is no time for rest. The candle, burned at both ends, soon is extinguished.

People who accomplish the most, do not seem to be in a rush. They conserve their energies by eliminating all waste motion. They do not get excited. Rather than risk destroying a vital organ by chasing a car, it is highly probable that they would wait for the next car. There are tasks they desire not only to undertake, but to finish. They see no merit in rushing themselves to death.

Life is not a long journey. Every mortal is bound to complete it. There is a grave at the end. By neglecting the rules of health, throwing aside all natural precaution, it is easy to make the journey very short indeed. A splendid personality, capable of great achievement, has no right to curtail its own possibilities.

Physical strain affects the heart. There is a limit to that which the heart may endure. In the eagerness to acquire wealth or fame, or just through carelessness, it is asked to do too much. Therefore the doctors issue solemn warning. Perhaps some will heed it.

THE WAR-LIKE POWERS

In the estimation of the yellowest of the yellows "The Harding administration and the republican party are trying to force on this country a treaty and alliance with the three warlike powers of the world."

By the way, what is a warlike power? England and France have just emerged wounded, sore and impoverished, from a desperate military conflict. The conflict was forced upon them, just as later it was forced upon the United States. The dearest wish of both is for peace. They are ready to go to any length to insure peace. Is this being warlike?

Neither England nor France would be more eager to fight than would the United States. The latter heads a movement that has for its purpose a tranquility so complete that it shall enwrap the peoples of the earth. It could do this with more certainty with the avowed and active co-operation of other powers. When it gathers under the banners of its cause, the only nations capable of making war, none in the combination is warlike; quite the contrary, if the yellowest will acknowledge the truth.

Japan is different. Spurred by its ambitions, it might, in theory, be warlike if permitted. The compact deprives it of this privilege. It will have to conduct itself in accord with the company that it keeps. It will not be allowed to foment war. Because the nations thoughtlessly described as "warlike" are not warlike, but abominant war.

A DUO OF BOMBS

According to reports from Washington, Secretary Hughes and Mr. Balfour have hurled a bomb apiece right into the intimate center of diplomacy. The bombs were charged with similar ammunition, but that contained in Balfour's had a trifle more T. N. T. enforcement. Both related to the Open Door (which generally is shut) demanding that it be really a method of access to China.

Hughes proposed that spheres of influence, and the granting of monopolistic concessions to foreigners in China, end and cease. Balfour urged the setting up of international machinery to bring about observance of the open door principle.

These gentlemen are not indulging in secret diplomacy. Their proposals were made in a manner for all the world to see.

The absolute justice of the suggestions cannot be denied. Morally considered, aliens have no more right to spheres of influence in China than in the United States or England. Such spheres have been established only in token of arrogance and greed. Perhaps no nation is able to deem itself blameless, although some have been worse offenders than others.

China is no incompetent minor in need of a guardian. It is greatly in need of being left alone to work out its destiny for itself. The notion that China is legitimate prey has prevailed too long. The Japanese still cling to it, but they constitute a minority. A persuasive majority ought to be able to make them see the light.

JAPANESE FANTASIES

A certain element of the Japanese press is doing its utmost to stir up hatred there towards Americans. In a sense this is to be regretted, of course. It is far more pleasing to be liked than to be hated. Otherwise the matter is of small importance. Assuredly it will not have the effect of swerving the United States from any line of conduct that it conceives to be indicated to it as a duty.

It is interesting to observe what the jingoes of the Orient are saying:

"We deeply regret the utter lack of courage, and the incompetence of the Japanese delegates. They have sealed the fate of Japan. Her hands and feet have been cut off at Washington."

Here is another: "America, hiding behind the beautiful names of justice, humanity, liberty and peace, has been a personification of extremely bold imperalism, and of an insatiably greedy policy of aggression. Men of Japan, rise for the cause of the empire."

And once more: "American possessions in the Pacific have been acquired by aggression, annexation or robbery. Japan will be called upon to protect them for America without any compensation. The quadruple agreement only makes Japan a slave for Great Britain and America. America claims first place in the world, as if the world belonged to her altogether."

Moreover, as Japan is boiling thus, the yellow American press is telling all and sundry that Japanese diplomats have "put it all over the American amateurs."

Queer world, isn't it?

COMMUNITY INTERESTS

Pasadena has just had a Home Products week. In every way it was a success. It opened the eyes of many residents to the fact that the city had a real rating in the manufacturing world. It called attention to many opportunities. While Pasadena does not aspire to become a factory center, and retains all its prejudice against belching smokestacks, it naturally is pleased at learning how many factories wholly free from any offensive characteristics, already are in operation.

Home Products week was not merely an exhibition of wares. It was made the occasion for people to get together. There were banquets and modest dinners, and addresses from practical folk, and a big parade worth seeing. Local pride was aroused, and local ambitions stimulated.

One value in all this is that other places in this community may take the course of Pasadena for an example. There is not a city of the number but would be benefited by a similar showing of industrial accomplishments and possibilities.

SOWING EVIL SEEDS

In a letter to the editor touching the subject of enforcing prohibition occurs this sentence:

"The man who speaks lightly of the eighteenth amendment is sowing seeds of crime."

Truly this is worth thinking about. The more one thinks about it the clearer stands forth the truth of it. Society is bound, if it is to remain an organization, to respect the laws enacted by itself. When such a law has become a part of the constitution, failure to respect it is an attack directed against the fundamentals upon which order rests.

Men who would not disobey the law generally, who are not counted among the enemies of law, but rather as its exponents and upholders, have failed in regard to prohibition. They may not have endorsed that part of its principle that seemed to them to attack personal liberty, and because of this lack of sympathy, they have defied the amendment.

Bootleggers constitute a comparatively small class. They are not of numerical strength such as entitles them to rule. If they possessed such strength they would devote it to having the amendment repealed.

But backed by citizens, who consider themselves good citizens, at that, they are so nearly running things that they are able to flood whole communities with their spurious and poisonous stuff.

The effect is bad in more than the mere promotion of drunkenness and destruction of health. It impairs the social integrity. It strikes at the sanctity of all law. It shows contempt for the constitution and for statutory restraints. Thus it aids the wave of crime to rise and roll from coast to coast. People wonder what is the matter with morals.

"The man who speaks lightly of the eighteenth amendment is sowing the seeds of crime."

MONEY MADNESS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Mr. Otto Kahn, in a letter the other day to the committee of American business men, used the following language:

"It is sheer folly, and malignant folly at that, to think that it is possible to shackle and hamper business, penalize success, disturb the delicately adjusted machinery of commerce and finance, impede the flow of capital, and interfere with the free play of economic forces, without causing harmful consequences to the country as a whole and to every section and calling."

There is little doubt that ignorance or, what is worse, a lot of positive knowledge that is not so, concerning business and the making of money, is what ails us.

The inequalities of fortune and success are striking, and the average mind jumps easily to wrong conclusions. It cannot distinguish between what is wrong and what is dangerous. Yet the distinction is vital.

Riches are dangerous, but they are not wrong. In fact, riches constitute the difference between civilization and barbarism.

Capital, as Mr. Babson says, is the world's greatest invention, because without it no other invention would be of much account.

Capital is the principal difference between a prosperous and happy America and a wretched, starving and desperate Russia.

There are some things inherently wrong. Whisky is wrong. There is no single good thing about the smallpox. Leprosy, lewdness and lying are intrinsically wrong.

But capital is not.

It is time we got rid of a lot of the childish and silly prejudice against riches. It is every man's duty to be as rich as he can, just as it is every man's duty to be as strong and healthy as he can, because riches mean power just as health means power. It is not the weak, feeble, and unsuccessful people that are the strength of a nation.

And there is nothing unethical in accumulating wealth. It only becomes unethical when it is accumulated selfishly and wickedly, and when it is used for wrongful purposes, precisely as intellectual ability and bodily strength may be wicked if they are used by wicked men.

It is the duty of a nation to accumulate wealth. The curse of Holy Writ is not upon those who lay up money, but upon those who lay up money for themselves. The only intelligent object of human labor, either individual or social, is the accumulation of capital.

And there ought to be some means to pound these fundamental truths into the minds of youth. (Copyrighted by Dr. Frank Crane)

THE LISTENING POST

How's your sense of humor and analysis? How tolerant are you? Are you disposed to hasty judgments? Do you take snap judgment, as the saying is? Want to settle everything right off the reel?

You meet Brown for instance. Or Jones or Smith or whoever it is. And Brown or Jones or Smith does not seem in the same mood as usual.

Passes you hastily by. Rather crustily and hastily and discourteously.

Are you disposed to take snap judgment? To berate Jones or Smith or Brown in your imagination for his lack of friendliness. Or do you stop and reason in this wise?

"Smith or Brown or Jones has been my friend. Nothing has happened to mar that friendship. I have done nothing to offend.

Therefore something must have happened to Brown or Jones or Smith to harass or fret him.

And when I discover what it is I shall feel sorry for him and understand his attitude of this morning."

So sometime later you meet him and the cloud has cleared away.

He is his friendly self again.

And he says: "Old Man, I fear I spoke crustily to you this morning, but I was fretted about a personal matter and was not quite myself."

And then you are glad you did not take snap judgment.

Condemn him right off the reel, as the saying is.

Wow it would be a long time before you spoke pleasantly to him again.

For there was a reason.

As there is for most of the things that happen in this world.

JAMES W. FOLEY.

SONGS OF THE POETS

Threnody—By Ruth Guthrie Harding (1882—)

There's a grass-grown road from the valley— A winding road and steep— That leads to the quiet hill-top, Where lies your love asleep. . . . While mine is lying, God knows where, A hundred fathoms deep.

I saw you kneel at a grave-side— How still a grave can be, Wrapped in the tender starlight, Far from the moaning sea! But through all dreams and starlight, The breakers call to me.

Oh, steep is your way to Silence— But steeper the ways I roam, For never a road can take me Beyond the wind and foam, And never a road can reach him Who lies so far from home.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

MODERN INDIAN BRAVES

[New York World]

The conduct of the Indian wards of the nation is again a subject of concern to their official guardians. According to the report of the board of Indian commissioners, the automobile "seems to possess the same irresistible fascination for the Indian that it does for many of his white brethren." In numerous cases "the first proceeds of the sale of tribal lands go to purchase a high-powered automobile and a full complement of accessories."

Having no wigwam to mortgage for the price of a car, it is only natural that Lo should devote the proceeds of his oil land to that object. If he chooses to follow paleface precedent in preferring racing cars to flippers, that should be set down to the aptitude of his "untutored mind" for assimilating the white man's standards. At any rate the development may be instanced as evidence of Indian progress and ought to be a matter for commendation rather than for criticism.

When Indians begin to worry over the price of gasoline and wrangle with the other problems of the high cost of luxurious living they are in a fair way toward complete civilization. Perhaps Indian bureau reports will yet include statistics of motor car fatalities on the reservation. And after all, is not the sight of a red-skinned brave careering over

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA STEWART

It's only real greatness that is lasting. The spurious kind is fleeting. Only recently an advertisement appeared in a German paper, of proven German origin: "Iron Hindenburg for sale. As a whole, or in part, for firewood."

For years the great statue had stood in a Berlin street, presumably to the admiration and respect of the kaiser's faithful subjects. Now, offered for firewood—and only necessity accepted the offer at that. Fleeting greatness, as fleeting as that of the original. Why? Because founded on wrong principles of admiration or worship.

We strive so hard for the fleeting greatness. Don't we? The little honors—the sham belongings of life, the foolish, fleeting good things, good for the minute only. It's so hard to teach us that there's something better than the great wooden statues that may be firewood tomorrow.

True greatness very seldom is as showy as the false variety. More modest and quiet, we find it easy to overlook it. But it's well worth searching for. And it has a quality far above showiness. It's endurance. What's the use of struggling with every nerve, including the pocketbook one, to gain a little prestige or honor to notice that may vanish with the morrow and never was very real anyway?

It's only the real greatness that is lasting. We can well afford to let the other variety escape us. It brings dissatisfaction and heart-ache in the end. It's hard for us to learn this.

KILLJOYS AND THE CONFERENCE

[Washington Star]

Senator Edge, replying to some criticism of the armament conference, asks the question, "Why not join in the acclaim?"

Why not, indeed? There is acclaim, and well justified. The conference was called with excellent intent, excellently stated. The President's action was applauded all over the world; and certainly the conference has been conducted with dignity and much success. If nothing else stood to its credit—but a good deal does—the fact that the world's post-war situation stands more clearly revealed now and is more accurately appraised than before would entitle the conference to the highest respect.

The New Jersey senator then lays this injunction on the critics: "Don't lead the killjoys!" It is a good injunction. Unfortunately, every movement, every situation, produces killjoys. They inhere in human affairs. This conference could not have escaped them. If every question presented had been disposed of promptly and by unanimous action, there would still have been killjoys.

But such persons are unusually obnoxious at a time like the present, and in the circumstances could exist. Feverishness and anxiety rack the world today. Serious men everywhere are confabulating about remedies; and surely every proposition having relief in view should be considered without heat or hate, and supported when approved by orderly examination. And such examination is provided for in the senate, where the work of the conference, when completed, will be passed upon.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

It appears that Wilbur Crafts is exceedingly angry. He would not thus define his own emotion. Probably he would term it righteous wrath. The reason for this anger is that Will Hays is to be the head of the motion picture industry. To Crafts this seems to be the entry of the picture producers into the field of politics. He has been there for many years himself. He cannot discern the possibility of remaining there in comfort if men of ideas not conforming to his own are to be permitted to be among those present.

HENRY JAMES

Crafts is a preacher of the same sect for which Hays serves as elder. Hays is not a bad man. He is not ramping around seeking whom he may destroy. Not at all. On the contrary he holds a reputation for decency and good citizenship. To others than Crafts the fact that Hays is in the picture business will be regarded as an excellent thing both for the business and the public.

It is possible to view the situation from another angle, of course. Crafts, for instance, has chosen another angle. The aspect plunges him into an ocean of grief, and he comes up sputtering brine and fighting for air.

Sad indeed would it be to observe Hays bringing pictures to a standard where they could not be raged against. What would the chronic reformer do then? Who would have a job for Crafts and his kind? However, with all objectionable features shorn from the pictures, there still would be evils in the world; enough evils, perhaps, to incite good people to strive to correct them, and afford the Crafts type an opportunity to remain verbose and spectacular.

There is a middleweight champion. He is not popular. The National Boxing commission has barred him from sixteen states, nor can he perform in Canada or Australia. It seems that he declines to abide by the rules of the game.

In every calling there is a code of conduct and honor. The person violating it never gains by the process. But when a man is so ornery that he isn't allowed to fight, he must have biffed the governing code with unusual vim.

Eighty-five consuls have been promoted by the President. The senate confirmed them as soon as the names had been received. There was no occasion for debate.

There was a time when the consular service of this country was a rather ridiculous institution. Cleveland placed it on a civil service basis. Every President has endorsed this course, and some of them have accentuated their faith in the method by extending it.

The consular service has ceased to be a department into which to shunt ineffectuals, and has become a credit instead of a joke.

There is an effort to have La Follette classed as a man without a party. As he long ago elected to assume this role, the present attempt would seem to be a mere recognition of a voluntary status.

Some other so-called republicans will have to watch out for the partisans will catch them and toss them over the fence.

As the funeral rites have been performed over Marquis Okuma, there will be general acceptance of the report of his latest death as final.

Sweeping changes in the bureau of prohibition enforcement are contemplated. They seem to be necessary.

Many cities report that drunkenness is increasing, and something ought to be done about it.

Cases are comparatively frequent where a dentist makes the mistake of pulling the wrong tooth, but a New York physician has beaten any error record ever piled up by dentistry. Called in to operate upon a club foot, he operated on the sound one of the pair. Now the patient has no serviceable foot.

The surgeon is defendant in a $100,000 damage suit. The price named seems moderate in the circumstances.

A lawyer recently proclaimed that in this state was no "unwritten law."

Be this as it may, there is a lot of written law that does not seem to be working much.

In a Florida city every automobile driver is required to carry a registration card. Each offense against the traffic laws is recorded by punching the card.

Nothing is indicated as to what happens when the card is full. Possibly the driver gets punched then.

As a man lay in the road near the harbor after having been run down by an automobile, a second machine came rushing along and duplicated the performance. In each case the driver hurried on without a pause.

There are many brutal cowards running machines on the highways. It is seldom that they operate in pairs.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

One of these days I'm going to suggest to my old friend Smith that he scrap his battleships. The time has come for him to take part in a personal reduction and limitation of armaments. He is a bully good fellow and he means well, but he is getting to be like the German nation used to be when Old Man Hohenzollern was High Jack. He doesn't seem to like any one.

"You're getting to be a condemned knocker," I said to him the other day. Maybe it wasn't polite or tactful, but my nerves had been worn a little raw. Smith couldn't see it. He was almost tearful in his effort to persuade me that he never knocked—not even a tiny tap.

"But," he said with a sad pride, "none of these birds can fool me."

So he goes around looking for the worst in people. The moment he is asked to drop in after dark and see what the bootlegger brought us he begins to wonder what it is I have in mind. He is convinced that I am trying to put something over on him. If I did not occasionally extend an invitation he would know that I am trying to hold out something on him. Either way he wins.

His criticisms of the national administration are almost blasphemous. So were his criticisms of the preceding administration. He doesn't like Lloyd George, Briand, De Valera or Commissioner Haynes. He reads the papers carefully in order to locate the current misdemeanors of officialdom. The minister under whose teachings he formerly sat preached an old-time, conventional, fire and punishment gospel. So he changed churches, but this minister is too full of kindness. He finds that he prefers to look forward to an eternity of woe for the rest of the world. He thinks it is deserved.

I have the highest regard for Smith, but I do not want ever to see him again. He is able, intelligent, kind and thoughtful, but his tongue drops vitriol. He leaves a blotch on the day's happiness. The worst of it is that—being a weak vessel—when he gets to knocking I knock, too. Then I spend a few hours hating myself.

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

Writing in 1909, the late Lord Avebury (Sir John Lubbock) illustrated the rapid progress of applied science by the statement that he was "older than any railway company in the world, any gas company, any steamboat company, any telegraph, telephone or electric company."

According to Dr. W. T. Hornaday, furs will be unobtainable if the destruction of fur-bearing animals for their skins continues at the present rate. No less than 80 skins are required to make a mink wrap, 200 for a squirrel coat, 280 to 300 for a black mole coat.

In some parts of the North Atlantic a quart of sea water contains from 3000 to 13,000 microscopic organisms, collectively known as "plankton."

There are more than 7000 species of mammals.

Nuts as Food

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc. (Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

I am asked why, in view of the acknowledged food value of nuts, they are not more generally used as a staple article of diet. The reason is threefold.

Partly it is because the popular habit long has been to regard nuts as delicacies. Partly it is because nuts are commonly supposed to be indigestible. And partly it is because the food value of nuts still is not appreciated by any great number of people.

Comparatively few know, for example, that chemical analysis goes to show that, in concentration of nutrients, peanuts, walnuts and other nuts may excel even such valuable foods as meats, eggs and cereals.

Comparatively few know that nuts may be effectively substituted for meat as a source of protein; that they also contain fats in large amount and some carbohydrates; and that in addition they are vitamin-containing.

Thus they really constitute an almost ideal food. So that it is not surprising to find certain dietary enthusiasts exclaiming, with Dr. Daniel S. Sager:

"Nuts are the most nutritious and the most valuable of all the natural foods, taking first place in this respect."

And, for that matter, it has been experimentally demonstrated that nutrition can be well maintained on a diet in which nuts predominate. This, of course, does not mean that one should endeavor to live on nuts alone. But it does bespeak for them a larger place in the home diet than is usually accorded to them.

As to the supposed indigestibility of nuts, it has rightly been pointed out by an editorial writer in a leading medical journal:

"If nuts are eaten properly and used in the diet as eggs, meat and other foods rich in protein are used they behave quite as well in the body as do the ordinary staple articles of food."

"Particularly when nuts are finely chewed or are consumed in the finely divided form of nut pastes or nut butter, there can be no complaint about the proper utilization of the product."

The trouble is that most people, when they eat nuts at all, are careless as regards chewing them finely. Also, instead of eating them as a constituent part of the meal, in place of meat or eggs, they eat them at the close of an already hearty meal.

It is therefore not surprising that discomfort is afterward experienced. But it is not the nuts that should be blamed. Hasty eating and overeating are the real causes of trouble.

WIFE AND BABE MAKE HIM ACCEPT $1,000,000 HE SPURNED

Idealism is a beautiful thing, but it is outweighed by a wife and baby, according to Charles Garland, who has reversed his original decision and accepted the $1,000,000 legacy left him by his father, the late James A. Garland of Boston. Young Mrs. Garland and her new-born child, who, with the husband and father, are living in a tumbledown farmhouse a short distance from Boston, were responsible for his change of heart. Garland, who refused the fortune because, he said, it was not "Christlike," has come to believe that his wife and child are entitled to whatever comforts can be obtained for them, wherefore the necessity for money. Garland surprised the world in 1920 when he refused to accept a legacy of more than $1,000,000. "Christ would have refused to be a millionaire, why shouldn't I?" said young Garland. At that time he had just reached his majority. So Charles Garland has become a millionaire after all, and it is confidently expected that one of the first outward signs of affluence will be extensive repairs made on the farmhouse. The photograph shows Charles Garland and his wife.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

WHEN SALT AND LEMON MEET

The Miller household was disturbed. It had been what Charlie called a "ghastly" week, with sudden illness and its consequent unsettled state lying heavily upon everybody.

Terry had been sent to the hospital for an emergency operation. The twins had had croup in the middle of the night, and Lucy and her mother had been terrified as they manufactured a steam tent out of a sheet and two umbrellas tied to the beds of the twins.

"It's just the last straw," said Charlie, the tallest son, "that the twins should have croup and that Lucy, in her anxiety to rig up that steam tent, should have tipped ink all over my best dress shirt front."

Reprimanded by Sister

"You shouldn't have left your dress shirt in the study, anyway. I was looking for string in mother's work-basket to tie the umbrellas to the twins' cots for the steam tent, and your old shirt was on the table and the ink tipped over."

Lucy spoke accusingly.

"Children! Children!" said Mrs. Miller, soothingly. "Be glad the twins are better! That choking cough in the dark—their poor little purple faces!" and she shuddered at the memory, thinking of her shaking hands, her attempt to appear calm, when fear clutched at her heart.

The "children" fell silent as they, too, thought of the precious pink and white twins. And rejoiced because of their recovery.

Still Charlie's dress shirt was ink-stained. And it was his first dress shirt. Surely a tragedy!

Mother Comes to Rescue

His mother came to the rescue. "I think salt and lemon will remove it," she said, examining the stain on the glossy linen, "and water, of course."

"Why salt and lemon?" said Charlie, a trifle aggressively.

"Because," explained his mother, "the citric acid of the lemon unites with the sodium of the salt and frees the chlorine. The chlorine unites with the hydrogen of the water, freezing the oxygen, which unites with the substance causing the stain."

"You mean the ink?" said Lucy, who always called a spade a spade. How Stain Was Removed

"Exactly," said her mother, while Charles tried to recall lessons in ancient chemistry, without success. His mother's explanation sounded reasonable, he was bound to admit.

Soaking the ink-stained linen in warm water, Mrs. Miller applied salt moistened with lemon juice. She kept the application moist for three hours, using salt and lemon generously. The stain then washed out in warm water.

And Charles said, pleasantly, "when salt and lemon meet, the ink must go."

Father was trying to read his evening paper to while away the time until mother returned from shopping. He was being pestered all the time by the persistent questionings of his young son, who asked for the most impossible information about the most impossible things. Father was becoming increasingly irritated.

Then, at the worst possible moment, irritation, the "Daddy, tell me, what dragon?"

The man replied, in desperation: "Now, look here, my one more word about this—ther and off you go to bed."

LEGION NOTES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Hundreds of men disabled in the service of their country during the world war, are being put on their feet again and making great progress in gainful occupations through the aid of the United States Veterans' Bureau.

Several outstanding cases are cited by the bureau, which has interviewed personally more than 145,000 disabled veterans.

Henry Bitter, of Dubuque, Iowa, totally blind and having artificial arms, has discovered a formula for a proprietary pharmaceutical preparation, which he has patented and is now making on a large scale. Prior to his enlistment Bitter was a pharmacist.

Three men who have been rehabilitated as blacksmiths by the United States veterans' bureau are now receiving an average salary of $204 a month.

The bureau has rehabilitated 26 men as acetylene welders who are now receiving on an average of $146.45 a month.

The most important meeting of the American Legion ever held between national conventions will be called in Indianapolis, January 20 and 21, to arrange for a census of every ex-service man and woman in the country. The plan that national commander Hanford MacNider will present to delegates calls for personal interviews by Legion canvassers of all veterans. C. R. Forbes, director of the United States veterans bureau, will be the personal representative of President Harding and Judge K. H. Landis will be one of the speakers.

The national executive committee of the American Legion auxiliary, an organization of women relatives of Legion members, will meet concurrently. The census will be known as a service and compensation campaign and is modeled after the "Iowa plan," successfully used in that state when MacNider was commander there. After approval by the convention, the census will be undertaken at once.

The governmental agency dealing with veteran relief work, the United States veterans' bureau, is now manned almost entirely by ex-service men. This situation has been long contemplated by the government and has been advocated by all the veteran organizations.

The veterans have contended that their problems would receive more sympathetic consideration by one who had been in the service. They felt that one who was familiar with the conditions existing during the war would be acquainted with the service procedure and therefore better able to render a fair decision in their case.

President Harding took this into consideration when he appointed an officer who had seen service overseas, Col. Charles R. Forbes, as director of the veterans' bureau. Col. Forbes in turn has made it a point to fill practically all the responsible positions with ex-service men. Regional officers are 100 per cent ex-service men.

The managers of the 14 regional districts are without exception ex-service men. These men are in direct charge of the activities of the veterans' bureau relating to compensation, hospitalization and vocational training in their respective districts. The decentralization of the veterans' bureau has given these men added responsibilities.

The Sweet bill provides for a number of sub-offices not to exceed 140. There are now 138 such sub-offices in existence. Eighty-six per cent of the sub-district managers are ex-service men.

A WELL KNOWN SPEAKER

A gentleman attached to one of Uncle Sam's scientific bureaus at Washington was one of many bored listeners to a windy speech on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of a building to house the bureau mentioned.

Finally a neighboring sufferer turned to the scientist and said: "Do you know the speaker?"

"I do," said the scientist. "He speaks under many aliases, but his name is Thomas Rot."

Lots of people live all their lives without knowing the name of their own state.

HOPE IS IN SIGHT.

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers.)

I can't stop to tell you all the adventures poor Maltie Kitten went through that snowy night when he started for Dr. Muskrat's Pond. It seemed as if every hunter in the vicinity had been out there, and Maltie was the only one left.

Yes, Tad was at home. That very night Dr. Muskrat and Stripes Skunk had escorted the widow squirrel to Chatter's store house in the duck's oak. But not Tad. He'd been waiting round for ever and ever so long till she was well enough to go, and he was sleeping hard to make up for lost time. He never twitched a whisker when Maltie used him for the warmest kind of a coonskin rug to sleep on. And Maltie never stirred when Dr. Muskrat slipped into the far side of the pond without stirring a ripple. Or when Nibble Rabbit pattered down for a drink on his soft paddy-paws. Or when Chewee the Chickadee splattered the water for his morning bath just as gayly as he does in the summer time.

But only Tad, who had settled himself till spring, could keep his eyes shut when Watch the Dog came racing down the lane, barking at the top of his lungs, "Dr. Muskrat! Oh-h-h Dr. Muskrat! Has the red dog come?"

"Eh? What?" asked the doctor, waking up so suddenly that he couldn't believe his ears.

"Because it's fortune is coming true!" Watch yelped delightedly. "It's free. It's got away from that terrible man. He's up at the house this minute asking for it."

"Eh, what?" asked the doctor, waking up so suddenly that he couldn't believe his ears.

Deep Woods was out, and they all took after him. If he hadn't known every hiding hole from the wise old bunny's log in the Big Marsh to Tad Coon's hole he would never have reached the pond.

By the time he got there he was as tired and cold and hungry as the red dog had been when he took it home to his cabin. And it was high time he was getting back there again. He curled up on the doctor's flat stone with his tail about his chilly toes, and called and called till his eyelids drooped over his yellow eyes. "This'll never do," he grumbled, giving himself a shake. "There's no knowing when that owl may come flapping along. If Dr. Muskrat's not home, I'll just have to wait for him. Guess I'll go up to Tommy Peck's den and get a drop of warm milk—it's most milking time."

But that isn't what he did at all. His eyes felt too droopy and his feet felt too heavy to stay awake even that long. He shinned up the hickory tree and cuddled down on top of Tad.

"Because it's fortune is coming true!" Watch yelped delightedly. "It's free. It's got away from that terrible man. He's up at the house this minute asking for it."

THE EVENING STORY

ASHES OF ROSES

Little Mrs. Murray was vastly entertained when, casually meeting the rich Mrs. Deeming on State street, the latter said, carelessly: "I'm going shopping, don't you want to come along?"

There was excitement that began to possess her. All sense of values departed. She seemed to have lived for ages in the enveloping atmosphere of debt service. She forgot that only a few hours before she had washed the breakfast dishes and scalded her snowy tea towels with their brave scarlet initials.

Perhaps it was the remoteness of her friend's air, a seeming impression of the impossibility of Daisy's possessing anything so costly; perhaps it was the madness that sometimes seizes the most sane of humankind. At any rate, Daisy spoke with a hard decision that fully claimed the attention of the matron.

GROWS TO WEST AND NORTH

Engineer Says History Shows in Developments of Past

A prominent engineer of Glendale declares "history shows that the natural trend of a city growth is towards the west and north, as evidenced by Carthage, Rome, Paris, London, New York and Los Angeles."

"History is repeating itself in this respect right here in Glendale," said A. M. Yale, of the Yale Bros. Realty company, 249 North Brand, this morning. "This is shown in the rapid growth of the northwest section of the city, particularly the foothill section."

"But the sad part is that there is such a limited amount of this foothill property. That section is being rapidly filled with beautiful homes."

"All of this shows that the people do appreciate the high elevation and magnificent view to be had from the foothills, combined with good conveniences and comforts. It is the cleanest and most desirable section in Southern California."

The Yale Bros. new tract is right in the heart of this northwest section, being located at the corner of Brand, View and Sixth street. It is close to car lines and schools and each lot is covered with 12 and 15 year old avocado, grape fruit, orange and lemon trees. So rapidly is this tract being disposed of that this firm has been compelled to put on an additional salesman. One-third of the tract was sold before the engineers had finished placing the stakes.

BITTER ATTACKS ON DR. SAWYER

Legion Men Say High Army Officers Are to Blame

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 21.—Bitter attacks against Brig. Gen. Sawyer, personal physician of President Harding, stirred a meeting of state commanders and adjutants of the American Legion here late today. The legion leaders, discussing the work of the veterans' bureau, condemned its activities as slow and inefficient.

"The trouble is not the veterans' bureau, but a high army officer who didn't wear a uniform until two years after the war ended—Brig. Gen. Sawyer," Julius F. Lynch of the Virginia department declared in a speech. Someone in the rear of the room, who declared himself to be "a veteran from Tennessee" hastened to endorse Lynch's statement.

"The affairs of the disabled should be handled by ex-service men," Lynch said.

A Japanese visiting England was interested at the sight of a large asylum, and on learning its nature remarked:

"Ah, yes, you have a saying about the insane being invisible, have you not?"

This query caused some bewilderment until it transpired that the saying referred to was "Out of sight, out of mind."

Foley's Friendly Fancies

THE COMFORTER

I like my friend who comes and takes my hand. And says to me just this: "I understand!" Whatever be my trial or my care Some spirit that is in him seems to share My inmost thinking; and I need not say Him any plea or word or yea or nay; And what excuse or plea of me was planned, He knows, and says but this: "I understand!"

Whatever grief or care or fret it is, His understanding spirit makes it his, He knows my need by some close sympathy That makes him more than brother is to me. He reads my spirit as if on a scroll Were writ the very secrets of my soul, And smiles me not, but offers me his hand And chides me perhaps, and says: "I understand!"

I think He had that spirit, by the sea Who walked there far away in Galilee, And by that blessed will of his to share Were all the souls of men to Him laid bare. He was so all in all not any whim Or mood of men but was as clear to him As though the soul lay quivering in His hand, And He said: "Peace! I love—and understand!"

PAVLOVA AND BALLET IN LOS ANGELES

In every decade there are stars in the theatrical firmament who become immensely popular with the public and year after year are privileged to return and, always find a welcome waiting. Of these Pavlova, the peerless Russian dancer, is one of the unique examples. Out of eleven seasons, seven have been devoted by this artist to American tours and each has proven her more popular, if possible, than the last. This year she has returned with a new organization and production. Many of the old favorite ballets will be given, also the solo divertissements including "The Swan," "The Dragon Fly," "Pavlova's Favorite," "California Poppy" and a revival of "The Bacchanale." The programs are so arranged that patrons may enjoy four different programs on alternate days.

The Western Robin

By JOHN BRECK

In the east we watch for Robin Redbreast as a sign of spring; west of the Rockies he means that winter has set in. "Is he here?" Have you seen him? eagerly inquires the passer-by who sees you scanning the shrubbery with your glass. If you say "Yes," it is high time to cover delicate shrubbery o' nights against the frost.

Whatever your answer it is three to one you are wrong. For the western robin is not at all the same as the bird who haunts your kitchen floor. His striped throat-patch seems more distinct; you miss the flash of his white-tipped tail-feathers as he flies, and he lurks timidly in perpetual ambush.

When you do glimpse a ruddy breast among the berries it has a black streak above it. Its wearer's gray wings are plain-marked with cinnamon and his black cap is turned up with the same color above, his velvet ear-tabs. His call is as nearly like that of the bird you know as that of the one you are looking for. For he is the varied thrush and they are thrushes all, with the family note merely changed in accent and intonation.

The redbreast who comes out of the brush to be sociable has changed his black cap for a hood which falls as low as the varied thrush's neck-scarf, and his wing-plaid is white. He announces himself, rather blurring the syllables, English fashion, as Chewink, the towee. A bird in faded, dusty khaki startsles you by answering in an odd falsetto. His wife? Dear, no! She is Little Red Hiding-hood—the fashionable henna red instead of scarlet. This is his cousin, who has become a native and adopted the wear of the country. He looks on his tourist cousin's gay outfit as the boys on the range would look on a golf suit.

But there is one time when there is no mistaking Cock Robin. When the flocks hold their High Mass in the top of an oak before they set out on the perilous spring flight it is the same glorious chant which their far-away cousins celebrate their safe arrival at our nesting grounds. Just as far more than feather-deep are the emotions which awaken it.

CHIEF OF POLICE IN NEW OFFICES

Judge Lowe Moves to Council Chamber to Give Chief Privacy

Chief of Police Allen O. Martin has recently moved into his new office in the city hall. Additions to the police force and the increased business of the department have made it imperative that the chief of police have a private office in which to consult people having business with the department.

Judge F. H. Lowe moved his office into the council chamber, where he holds court and the chief was moved into the office formerly occupied by Judge Lowe. A new rug has been added to the equipment of the office and workmen installed a telephone in the chief's office Friday.

Detective Sergeants Delgado and Herda will also use the chief's office in which to transact department business and to keep their records and identification filing system.

YOUNG WIFE MAY HAVE PLANNED IT

Sheriff Believes She Was Responsible for Man's Escape

HANFORD, Jan. 21.—The sheriff's office here declared it had learned that the pretty young wife of John Cahill, who escaped from the county jail Wednesday night, had carefully planned her husband's escape. After holding an interview with the prisoner in the morning, according to the sheriff's office, she returned to her father-in-law's ranch, packed her husband's clothes and hurried away in an automobile to the prison where she met Cahill and decamped with him.

Cahill is believed to have belonged to a big gang of bootleggers who have been operating out of Fresno and other valley cities. He was serving time on a charge of violating the dry laws.

'DOUBLE LIVES' IS HIT ON T.D.&L. BILL

"Just Around the Corner" to Be Shown on Sunday

"Double Lives," the dramatic sketch which William Moore and his company of players are offering on the vaudeville road show at the T. D. & L. theater today, is a play which has many twists and turns of plot and is sure to furnish much interest for all who see it. In support of Mr. Moore is Walter Rogers, the noted picture actor, who portrays the same role which he did at the premier of this sketch in New York.

Just to show that it is possible to do many things and do them all well, Balmus, the noted Australian physical culturist, is presenting a novel athletic turn in which will be found many stunts rarely combined in one act.

Taking his audience back to the days when the early settlers crossed the plains, Louis London is offering a remarkable portrayal of Indian characters. Not only does Mr. London wear the buckskins and headdress of the early Indians, but he has a repertoire of songs which are especially fitting for the costumes which he wears.

At the same time, "Geraldine" assists Mr. London with a dance that is sure to arouse the envy of all the feminine hearts of Glendale.

"Courage" is the name of the all-star feature photoplay shown in conjunction with the vaudeville. You who cried and laughed over "Humoresque"—well you know what human appeal may come from the lives in some humble street!—when the joys and sorrows of these lives creep close and become your own.

You who will see "Just Around the Corner," to be presented at the T. D. & L. theater Sunday, will laugh and cry again, over another, different story of New York's great East Side—over another mother, another son, two girls and a couple of men.

A rare and happy life picture—one of those really big pictures that go right to the heart. It is the successor to "Humoresque," by the same author, Fannie Hurst. Don't miss it—it is worth going far to see.

Added to "Just Around the Corner" are a number of interesting short subjects—comedy and Kinogram news events.
