

on this date, 15 January 1951, they will enter their Small Unit Training Program.

2. Scope -- The program is designed for progressive individual training in basic subjects. Emphasis is placed on carbine instruction, physical conditioning, riot and field formations, and the development of the qualities necessary in the National Police Reserve.

3. Modification -- a. The program may be modified to make the best use of existing facilities and training conditions. The general sequence of subjects, and the allocation of time to subjects will be preserved.

b. The training week will consist of 48 hours; this is based on 6 days of 8 hours each. Hours consumed in night training will be included in the 48 hour week, and time off will be allowed during daylight hours of the week.

c. Units that finish their Basic Training Program, and which will not complete the full 8 weeks program of the Carbine and Tactics Training Program, may start their Carbine and Tactics Program during that week which will best fit their Training needs.

4. Methods of Instruction -- a. Emphasis will be placed on practical work as opposed to theoretical instruction. Every effort will be made to insure that instruction is carefully prepared and presented in an understandable, interesting and dynamic manner.

b. Throughout all training periods the necessity for the training and the application of prior instruction to current training should be stressed. Instruction in a subject once completed must not be forgotten, but should be applied whenever possible concurrently with other training. Likewise, to the fullest extent, the actual application of the subject and the importance of teamwork and cooperation will be stressed. Every effort should be made to introduce realism into training. Maximum use will be made of competition to stimulate interest in training and for the attainment of the best possible standards of performance.

5. References -- a. As listed in paragraph 12.

b. Several methods of instruction are employed, but it must be borne in mind that application by the student is the most effective way to drive home instruction and must be utilized wherever and whenever possible. The coach and pupil method of instruction will be applied in all instruction.

c. Graphic Training Aids are easily adapted to a variety of training purposes. Many are designed for use in conferences and demonstration, others can be posted for review purposes and for self-instruction by individual trainees.

6. Supervision -- a. The quality and thoroughness of training is directly proportioned to the amount of active and personal supervision rendered by all supervisors and their staff. Continuous observation of instruction should determine how well training is being accomplished and insure only the best methods of instruction.

b. All supervisors and their staffs will exercise constant and active supervision of instruction in the training areas. Administrative work will not be permitted to interfere with the primary mission of training.

7. Progress Records -- A record of the status of training of individuals will be kept as prescribed later by this Headquarters.

8. Inspections -- There is a close relationship between inspections and standards. Inspections determine the progress of training and should indicate the training which must be stressed to attain the desired standards. Progress of the individual in attaining minimum standards will be determined by observation of training.

9. Safety -- Realism in training can be achieved without sacrifice of essential safety factors. Common sense is the basis of safety in any training program. Most accidents attributed to training can be prevented by proper supervision and inspection of equipment and training facilities. The firing of weapons will be governed by provisions contained in instructions published by this Headquarters and disseminated to the units.

Section 1.

General

1. Purpose -- The purpose of this program is to prescribe a course of training for trainees of the National Police Reserve who have completed their Basic Program prior to 15 January 1951.

RESTRICTED

ANNEX "A"

On this date, 15 January 1951, they will enter ~~their~~ Small Unit Training Program.

2. Scope -- The program is designed for progressive individual training in basic subjects. Emphasis is placed on weapons instruction, physical conditioning, riot and field formations, and the development of the qualities necessary in the National Police Reserve.

3. Modification -- a. The program may be modified to make the best use of existing facilities and training conditions. The general sequence of subjects, and the allocation of time to subjects will be preserved.

b. The training week will consist of 48 hours; this is based on 6 days of 8 hours each. Hours consumed in night training will be included in the 48 hour week, and time off will be allowed during daylight hours of the week.

c. Units that finish their Basic Training Program, and which will not complete the full 3 weeks program of the Weapons and Tactics Training Program, may start their Weapons and Tactics Program during that week which will best fit their Weapons Training needs; i. e. Field Artillery, Tank or AA units, who have only 4 or 5 weeks remaining, may start with the 4th or 5th week, where Infantry Rifle units would start with 1st week.

4. Methods of Instruction -- a. Emphasis will be placed on practical work as opposed to theoretical instruction. Every effort will be made to insure that instruction is carefully prepared and presented in an understandable, interesting, and dynamic manner.

b. Throughout all training periods the necessity for the training and the application of prior instruction to current training should be stressed. Instruction in a subject once completed must not be forgotten, but should be applied whenever possible concurrently with other training. Most accidents attributed to training can be prevented by proper supervision and inspection of equipment and training facilities. The firing of weapons will be governed by provisions contained in instructions published by this Headquarters and disseminated to the units.

10. Training Missed -- a. Training missed by trainees will be made up only insofar as to permit such trainees to attain the minimum objectives set forth for those particular subjects. If an individual has missed part of a subject, he need not be required to take makeup training if he can attain the necessary minimum objective without this additional training.

b. References -- The paragraph references listed in paragraph 12, for each subject, are listed as a guide only, and should not be considered as being an ironclad sequence for instruction, but may be varied according to the conditions under which the instructional material is presented.

Section 1.

General

1. Purpose -- The purpose of this program is to prescribe a course of training for trainees of the National Police Reserve who have completed their Basic Program prior to 15 January 1951.

on this date, 15 January 1951, they will enter their Small Unit Training Program.

2. Scope -- The program is designed for progressive individual training in basic subjects. Emphasis is placed on carbine instruction, physical conditioning, riot and field formations, and the development of the qualities necessary in the National Police Reserve.

3. Modification -- a. The program may be modified to make the best use of existing facilities and training conditions. The general sequence of subjects, and the allocation of time to subjects will be preserved.

b. The training week will consist of 48 hours; this is based on 6 days of 8 hours each. Hours consumed in night training will be included in the 48 hour week, and time off will be allowed during daylight hours of the week.

c. Units that finish their Basic Training Program, and which will not complete the full 8 weeks program of the Carbine and Tactics Training Program, may start their Carbine and Tactics Program during that week which will best fit their Training needs.

4. Methods of Instruction -- a. Emphasis will be placed on practical work as opposed to theoretical instruction. Every effort will be made to insure that instruction is carefully prepared and presented in an understandable, interesting and dynamic manner.

b. Throughout all training periods the necessity for the training and the application of prior instruction to current training should be stressed. Instruction in a subject once completed must not be forgotten, but should be applied whenever possible concurrently with other training. Likewise, to the fullest extent, the actual application of the subject and the importance of teamwork and cooperation will be stressed. Every effort should be made to introduce realism into training. Maximum use will be made of competition to stimulate interest in training and for the attainment of the best possible standards of performance.

5. References -- a. As listed in paragraph 12.

b. Several methods of instruction are employed, but it must be borne in mind that application by the student is the most effective way to drive home instruction and must be utilized wherever and whenever possible. The coach and pupil method of instruction will be applied in all instruction.

c. Graphic Training Aids are easily adapted to a variety of training purposes. Many are designed for use in conferences and demonstration, others can be posted for review purposes and for self-instruction by individual trainees.

6. Supervision -- a. The quality and thoroughness of training is directly proportioned to the amount of active and personal supervision rendered by all supervisors and their staff. Continuous observation of instruction should determine how well training is being accomplished and insure only the best methods of instruction.

b. All supervisors and their staffs will exercise constant and active supervision of instruction in the training areas. Administrative work will not be permitted to interfere with the primary mission of training.

7. Progress Records -- A record of the status of training of individuals will be kept as prescribed later by this Headquarters.

8. Inspections -- There is a close relationship between inspections and standards. Inspections determine the progress of training and should indicate the training which must be stressed to attain the desired standards. Progress of the individual in attaining minimum standards will be determined by observation of training.

9. Safety -- Realism in training can be achieved without sacrifice of essential safety factors. Common sense is the basis of safety in any training program. Most accidents attributed to training can be prevented by proper supervision and inspection of equipment and training facilities. The firing of weapons will be governed by provisions contained in instructions published by this Headquarters and disseminated to the units.

10. Training Missed -- a. Training missed by trainees will be made up only insofar as to permit such trainees to attain the minimum objectives set forth for those particular subjects. If
