

Handwritten Japanese calligraphy in cursive style (sōsho). The text is written on a white strip of paper pasted onto a brownish background. The characters are highly stylized and fluid, typical of the cursive script. The text appears to be a single line of a longer piece, possibly a signature or a short phrase. The characters are arranged from right to left, starting with a large character on the right that resembles '山' (mountain) and ending with a smaller character on the left that resembles '心' (heart/mind).

Handwritten Japanese calligraphy in cursive style (sōsho). The text is written on a white strip of paper pasted onto a brownish background. The characters are highly stylized and fluid, typical of the cursive script. The text appears to be a single line of a longer piece, possibly a signature or a short phrase. The characters are arranged from right to left, starting with a large character on the right that resembles '山' (mountain) and ending with a smaller character on the left that resembles '心' (heart/mind).