PRICE 5 CENTS

W. IRVING

Many people have been confused by the meaning of Portland Cement and accept any cement bearing the word "Portland" The word "Portland" signifies only the kind of cement, but does not designate the brand. Specify the word "Atlas" when buying cement and you will get the best. One grade of "Atlas" the best that can be made.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week until Jan 1st, 1912, by sending $2.00 to this office now.

Feed the birds. You'll need 'em next bug time.
Some men start for the doctor when they have a sick horse. Others feed well, care well and drive well, so they never have to go to the doctor.

Do not allow inferior cabbage, potatoes and beets to freeze; store them in the hen house. This is not when they will need such things as add succulence to the ration.

The fact that Massachusetts now has the world's record for yield per acre of marketable corn will unquestionably stimulate endeavor throughout all the northeast portion of our country.

Provide a stout sled, warm clothes, and let the children slide; but keep them off the roads. It is fun, and you know it, to go to and far more healthful for mind and body than a dime novel in the barn lot.

One of the best tools a farmer can have is a good riveter for mending leather straps of all kinds. One of these will save a good many trips to town and maybe more than one runaway.

To-day, when there is so much of interest to country people, when the worth and dignity of agriculture is being recognized as never before, when the question of bettering the farm home, the farm community and the country school is claiming so much attention, it would seem that the Grange and other agricultural organizations should flourish as never before.

If you have not yet sold your surplus fowls now is a good time to do so. Butchers are paying extra good prices for old and young stock, and it is only a waste of money to keep anything over winter that you do not absolutely need for next season's breeders or this winter's laying stock. The drones in the poultry houses are what get away with the profits of the poultry business.

Some farmers seem to have a weakness for keeping a mixture of chickens. They will get Plymouth Rock roosters one year, some other kind the next, and their farms are overrun with mixed chickens of every conceivable shape and color. If these fowls are profitable, how much greater profit could be realized from the same number of fowls good in quality, pure bred, uniform in size and color. The pure bred Cochins, Bantams or Plymouth Rock will weigh more than mixed chickens just as fall more than mixed Hovvells or Shortbills, retain more weight than scrub stock.—Inland Farmer.

There are several points which every cow owner would do well to consider if he is to get the best milk yield and reap the greatest profits from his herd. In the first place, a cheap ration must be provided, one that can be raised on the farm; second, it must be well adapted to milk production and fed liberally. As a rule, the greater portion of the feed can be raised at home, which always lessens the cost of production. For that reason corn silage has come to be recognized by nearly all stock men as the most economical feed the farmer can raise.

The harness is usually one of the most neglected factors in the farm equipment, yet good care will prolong its period of usefulness quite as much as proper care will extend the serviceable life of any other part of the necessary farm equipment. At least once each year it should be thoroughly washed and well oiled. All breaks should be promptly repaired in a workmanlike manner, and it will be much improved in appearance by an occasional cleaning and dressing. This is good work for stormy weather, and it should not be more important work. But it should not be neglected and will not be on the well-managed farm.

One of the common reasons why house-plants fail to flourish is over-potting—that is, the use of too large pots. The plant's health, if not life, is in danger from over-watering, and a sour soil. This may seem strange to the amateur, who is apt to go on the principle "more soil, more food; more food, better plants." The reverse is usually the case, as a matter of fact.—Suburban Life for December.

Those who grow vegetables in large or small quantities may not know that the soil devoted to them manured and rough plowed in the fall will do better work than if all the preparation is done in the spring. There will be enough of the fine work to do in the spring, so why not do some of the coarse preparation now? Many things, such as rhubarb and asparagus, for example, are much helped by a protection of manure put on in the fall.

The warmth of poultry can not be provided in the winter poultry house. A good, comfortable home that fully protects the fowls from the cold in all that is necessary, provided that a generous supply of grain is furnished

Shoe Industry.

Conditions in the shoemaking industry vary according to the shop and location. Some factories are busier than others, and some are closing while taking stock, before beginning on the spring run next month. The general condition is improving. Business is better than at this time last year, but not up to the normal. Some shops have secured more orders for the spring season than they had a year ago, so the general outlook for the spring business seems encouraging.

Demand on the factories for goods for the present season continues and many duplicate orders are being received. These orders include a liberal portion of cloth-top goods, and such lines are wanted as soon as possible, for no one dares to predict the future.

This condition is embarrassing to the business. The cloth-top boot, especially the velvet-topped in women's and children's lines, has been of great value to the shoemaking industry, but they are difficult, and therefore more expensive to produce than leather goods. Their popularity is considered a passing craze that may disappear as quickly as it appeared. So manufacturers and dealers are concerned over the future of the trade in such lines.

The sale of velvet goods has been sufficient to exclude patent leather goods from popularity. It is claimed that there has been enough of the patent leather; too much for its own good, in spite of the fact that jappers are very rapidly making gains as fast as they can. Some dealers argue that the demand has been turning more towards doll finishes, oozie and suede leathers, so velvet is a natural result, meeting both the demands for soft doll finish and something new and fancy. Now that another season is coming along, the season when color reigns, when black goods are not so desirable as brown or even white, the concern of manufacturers over black velvet is not unnatural.

Indications continue to point toward a renewed popularity of white shoes, canvas, leather or any material in demand for peculiar lines. The retail business is now approaching the season when novelties are more salable, when the slipper trade increases, and anything that can be made a gift is in demand. The custom of selling certificates is a help in increasing business. A few months hence the shoes for Easter Sunday and the beginning of spring will be in demand. June sees a call for the school commencement period, and then the vacation goods, to be followed by the heavier lines for fall outing and winter wear. All these lines are distinct in character, and when the customers, the dealers and the manufacturers agree that a better recognition of certain general periods of distinctiveness in goods will be to the advantage of all concerned, a better day will dawn to the boot and shoe industry.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. In a warrant for a special town meeting to be held tomorrow, Saturday afternoon, the Water Commissioners have an article asking the town to vote as to whether they will grant licenses to fish, boat and gun, at the lake used for the town water supply.

As the commissions have absolute authority in this matter, the article to some people seems absurd, as no man would grant a license to a child or stranger to go to his home water supply, such as well, cistern or spring for that purpose, nor would a good housewife allow her best dishes used as wash tubs for soiled clothes.

The Charles River Basin commission has made its final report and it sounds well as the first of its kind. Eighteen miles of shore front developed, a beautiful dam, dykes, canals, etc. No doubt it was a great piece of engineering and as we have said with beautiful results but the cost figures are $8,992,527.71.

Mayor Fitzgerald will be in the city to pay for it and the contest will soon be on. Weymouth is in the Metropolitan district and comes in for a share but it is a question how many of our citizens will ever enjoy the pleasure of paddling Venetian gondolas along the canals of a water world.

In fact, of the 12,000 people of Weymouth, not one in ten will ever visit the spot or derive any benefit from it, either direct or indirect.

Weymouth Board of Trade.
By invitation of the management of the Davis Bates Clapp Memorial Association the Board of Trade held its December meeting at the Memorial Hall, Dec. 1.
Eighteen speakers had been secured to talk on Savings Bank Insurance, the meeting was an open one and quite a number outside of the membership were in attendance.

The president, W. P. Donohoe, opened the meeting with an interesting report of a recent meeting of delegates and kindred organizations in the state, and the regular monthly reports and other business was side tracked to hear Mr. Herman Peters of Cambridge, an agent of the Savings Bank Insurance Association. Mr. Peters explained in a lengthy and interesting manner the nature and objects of the movement and its methods of work.

At the conclusion of Mr. Peters' talk, an intermission was taken and lunch served, after which regular business was resumed.

On motion of Louis A. Cook, it was voted to continue the meeting to the size of the hall, with the help of the Water movement and the annual dues, $15 was appropriated for that purpose.

Joseph A. Oshing for the committee on Town Affairs called the attention of the meeting to the article in the Weymouth for special Town meeting tomorrow, Saturday, relating to having fishing and boating on the lake. Mr. Oshing made a good address to the meeting.

Louis A. Cook for the committee on telephone service made a further report on the new regulations and suggested that telephone users keep a record of their telephone calls in order to get at the real cause of the trouble. Mr. Cook A. Worthen and George L. Barnes of the special committee on Back River bridge made a very interesting and interesting report of their labors with different Congressmen and the matter is now fairly before Mr. Weeks and others to urge the cost of construction to the general government.

Clapp Memorial Association.
The basketball season was opened last Saturday evening with two fast games in the gym. The Clapp team defeated the sports Makara team of Quincy. The other game was between the senior boys and the Union A. C. of South Weymouth.
The Union team won in an exciting finish by a score of 24 to 20. McBride for Clapp and Fallon for Clapp scored.

The summary of baskets for the season is as follows: Clapp 1; Fallon 1; Warren 2; Callahan 1; Mowry 2 and Richardson 1. Referee, Gifford, Empire Gaffney and timer Murray.

The big game resulted in a walkover for the home team 32 to 11. Nolan and Shooby, the old high school stars, excelled for Clapp while Makara played well for the visitors. The summary—baskets from Nolan 7; Shooby 3; Allstead 3; Tirrell 2; McKenzle 2; Burbage 1 and Mandle 1; goals from Nolan 2 and Luffler 3. Referee, Jones, Empire Nichols and timer Murray. 20 and 15 minute halves. Attendance 200.

By the time the game was over the presented to the winners of the Thanksgiving Day race. The first prize was taken by George Baker second by Arthur Schütz and third by John Hunt.

A home joining league is to be formed soon in duck ponds and a prize will be awarded at the end of the season for the best three string total each week.

The Brockton Y. M. C. A. bowling team came to East Weymouth last Monday evening and were soundly beaten by the Clapp rollers. The team of Loring and Denbroser of Clapp and Thompson of Brockton was the bright spot of the evening's rolling. The local team took the first two strings and won the total by thirty three pins. Next Wednesday the team rolls Milton at Milton.

An entertainment will be given in the association hall tomorrow night under the direction of the social committee.

Mr. Leonard Joy sold 67 turkeys one week, at 11 and 12 cents apiece.

Over two hundred and fifty young peo-

Leonel Torrey, Jr. and George Rogges dressed they weighed 300 pounds.

A branch of the First Land League was formed here last evening, with the following officers: President, David Tobin; vice president, John A. Condit; secretary, John H. Whelan; treasurer, Robert McIntosh. The society has very flattering prospects of success, fifty three persons joining the first night.

The evening of Tuesday last, November

There has been some speculation as to the origin of the term Hockley, which seems to have been applied to a spot in Weymouth, on Back River, very soon after its settlement. The following is the story as far as a plausible explanation of the name of the town is concerned.

There is in the southern part of Surrey, England, a place called Hockley. It is important to find its way into the story, or a place on ordinary maps. It has a slight historical interest, being the spot where King Alfred gained a significant victory over the Danes in the year
878. Its old name was Acha, from Saxon "Acha," an oak, and "Hock," a meadow pasture or plain. This afterwards became Hockle and then Hockley.

It is quite probable that the early settlers of Weymouth were familiar with this name and locality, and it is also probable that the name of Hockley was applied to a spot in Weymouth, either arbitrarily or on account of the significance of the word itself, and as part of the town was then covered with oak trees, this name would very naturally become "Hockley" in the pronunciation of the word by uneducated English people, and locally at a time when the word, though frequently spoken, was seldom written.

HANDICAPPED.
This is the Case With Many Weymouth People.

To many Weymouth citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The increasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and sleeping or lifting an impossible task. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest and in the morning is stiff and lame. Pastors and liniments may give relief but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Don's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Can you doubt Weymouth evidence? I also have been cured. Peter E. Burns, 21 Granite street, Weymouth, Mass., says: "I was a great sufferer from backache and had to give up work for more than six weeks at a time on this account. It was hard for me to assume an erect position after sleeping or sitting for some time, and I was troubled from the kidney secretions, the passage being too frequent. Although I tried everything I heard of, I received no permanent relief until I began using Don's Kidney Pills, procured at George R. Kemp's Pharmacy. At the end of three weeks not a single symptom of kidney trouble remained. I cannot praise the pills too highly in return for the benefit I have derived from their use."

A Dream and Its Sequel. "In a room of the Indian border there was engaged another of high repute, the member of an ancient South family," says Mrs. Mayo in "Recollections of Fifty Years." "The first of his kind, started from his sleep, exclaiming: 'There's the shot that has killed my brother!'"

"His wife told him it was but a dream. He must have been an anxious thought to his brothers before going to sleep. Next day the pair were in the garden directing their gardener, when the bird suddenly exclaimed: 'Do you hear the buzzes?'"

"No," answered the lady. "I can hear nothing. I am sure there is no sound."

"Strange," said the bird, "for I can even hear what is played. It is 'The Flowers of the Forest Are A' Wee Away!'"

"A few hours later came the telegram reporting that the brother had been shot down by some border warrior and over his lonely grave the man of his regiment had played the pathetic air whose mysterious echo seemed to have reached the lady."

Shakespeare's Definition of Poetry. What a pity it is that Shakespeare ever used that phrase "fine frenzy!" It has become a faddish factor in the framing of foolish fancies. It is the mark of a madman, and from this we are enabled to know what Shakespeare considered poetry. Curiously enough, it is in the very passage where Shakespeare uses that unfortunate phrase "fine frenzy." Let us quote: "The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven. And as imagination bodies forth The forms of things unknown to the poet's Turned them to shapes and gives to airy nothings a local habitation and a name."

THE FAT GOODES.

A Picture That Jarred the Nerves of a French Art Patron.

M. Durand, a French art patron, a buyer of a picture, had had little wisdom as a critic, and his admiration, compounded equally of childlike vanity and morose benevolence, was to figure as a patron of youthful geniuses.

One of the earliest commissions he bestowed was upon a young artist who selected for his subject a scene of classic mythology, in which the assembled gods were depicted upon Mount Olympus. When it was finished M. Durand was invited to the studio to inspect it. His face clouded as he gazed.

"Young man," he declared, "you have not treated me fairly. It is true I do not pretend to know everything about art, but I am not a fool, and I know that gods and goddesses should be no less noble than kings and queens. These people of yours are not even astrologers. Madame, my wife, does not pretend to be a fine lady, yet when I put my two hands around her waist it is by an inch only that they fail to meet, and as for Juliette, my daughter, she is so slender and delicate. Look now at that big, clumsy woman in a loose gown who you say is queen among the gods! She has no figure at all. She is like a sack of flour in the same. Pour it out for a body and a goddess, she who is without stays and without waist! Mme and Mlle Durand would make a mockery of her, your Juno! Pour! She is a peasant, a fellow of the earth!"

Nevertheless he was convinced by infinitely tactful explanations that the waste was not unknown in classic antiquity, even to goddesses. It was, however, not the artist that he finally accepted, the picture and the knowledge that the sovereign deity of Mount Olympus had never attained the heroic compression of the gods. It was, however, not the artist that he finally accepted, the picture and the knowledge that the sovereign deity of Mount Olympus had never attained the heroic compression of the gods. Except for the drip from the face of the high rocks above, which is skillfully directed, the cave is absolutely dry. The interior is shaped like a triangle, the floor forming the base. Save at the sides there is ample room to stand upright and move about inside. Besides the beds and cooking utensils, the cave contains many articles of various kinds, giving the interior quite a homelike appearance. The apology for a fireplace is some way back from the entrance, there is a grate, which the smoker finds its way outside—Wide World Magazine.

When John Sherman of New Haven, preacher, mathematician, almanac maker and father of twenty-six children, heard of the death of his good friend, Charles C. Smith, a Harvard pastor, he explained after due thought and many poetic passages:

Here lies the darling of his time,
My darling, my dear, my dear,
Who four years short of forty-seven
Was found full ripe and plucked for The grave.

When Thomas Dudley, father of the first American poetess, Anne Bradstreet, came to his deathbed, says the South Braintree quarterly, he showed how his daughter had received her surprising gift by composing such farewell lines as:

Dim eyes, dear ears, cold stomach ache,
My dissolution is in each of these.
Eleven times seven never lived have I,
And now God calls I willing die.

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week until Jan 1st, 1912, by sending $2.00 to this office now.

You can now plan, if not plow, for the next year's crop.

The cold cow gives cold comfort to her owner.

An ignorant, ill-tempered, loud-voiced man should never be tolerated in any stable.

Remember that no animal should stand on a wet floor. It is worse still to lie on one.

Now is a good time to nail loose boards on the barn and sheds and to replace broken glass in the windows.

Train up a heifer calf in the way she should go when she becomes a cow.

Do not neglect to keep the feet of the driving horses sharply shod. It may save bad wrenches and will greatly add to the comfort of the animals.

When the roads are wet and slushy with snow take more than ordinary care in cleaning the horses' legs and heels and wiping them dry.

If a cow has an apple or a similar obstruction lodged in her throat, it can be removed by pouring a pint of melted lard down her throat. This will make the animal strangle and cough, and in the struggle the obstruction will be dislodged.

Those whose cows all "came in" last spring will soon find that the dollar will not "come out" so freely as it ought to when butter and milk are high, because then the yield of the cows will be at the lowest.

A little more corn may be added to the evening grain ration, as the hens will need more heating feed. On the farm of the writer the winter grain ration consists of two parts whole corn, one part oats, and one part wheat. During the summer only one part corn is given to two parts oats and one part wheat.

The man who looks ahead and who farms with his head as well as his hands realizes the necessity of live stock on the place. The dollars and cents he actually receives for their sale, over and above the expense of breeding or feeding, does not begin to show the extent of their profit, for in the maintenance of soil fertility which the handling of live stock makes possible there lies a profit that can not be computed.

On the assumption that the kind of feed and care that will yield satisfactory results with a good cow will do likewise with good hens, a writer in Wallace's Farmer makes this exhortation:

Apply the methods of handling good cows to hens; feed them well, house them well. Keep an account with them and give them credit for what they do. Don't delay keeping an account until you have pure bred stock—begin now. Find out the best hen in the flock and grade up as fast as possible.

To get eggs in winter the fowl must have animal food. In the New York Agricultural College experiments were made in feeding cockles and pellets on a meat ration. The cockles gained over 50 per cent more than those fed on other rations. The pellets commended to lay eight weeks earlier than those fed without meat. The great trouble with most farmers is that they are apt to give their chickens one continued feed without any change or variety. The feed is the whole thing with the hen, and she can not be expected to lay eggs unless she gets the proper rations to produce them.

The belief that when a cow drinks too much water the milk is poor by excess of water is not at all probable; indeed, it seems to be physiologically impossible, although, of course, no one knows precisely what goes on inside of an animal. But from what is known of the origin and character of the milk it is reasonable to infer that if water is drunk in excess of water passes off through the kidneys and the skin.

Few owners of horses are aware of the importance of keeping the skins of the animals clean. Proprietors of valuable stock usually require their hostlers to keep the animals so well groomed that their coats will shine like a new dollar, and so clean that they would hardly soil a white handkerchief. This is done to protect the eye, the owners usually being oblivious of the fact that by pursuing this course they are using one of the best means to conserve the health and vigor of the animals.

GATHERED UP.

The bearer of good news always has a pleasant voice.

A sober husband makes a full farmer.

Of course a woman can't remember very far back; she isn't old enough.

Let him who would move the world, first move himself.—Socrates.

Mrs. Marsh—Are you going to vote for Mr. Thompson?
Mrs. Mallow—No. They say the other man is much better looking.

A Brockton judge has ruled that when a man is out of a job and his wife has one in a shop, that he must stay at home do the housework and take care of the babies. Why not?

One of the greatest accomplishments is to be a good listener. By letting the other man do all the talking we acquire a reputation for wisdom far above that we may gain in any other way.

Not every man who is "charming" and "good fellow" abroad is a model husband at home. Many a hat-tipping gallant compels his wife to split the kindling.

"The mills of the gods grind slow but they grind exceedingly small." History keeps on repeating this truth. Back of all the mystery of human deeds is the ruling of a mighty hand.

The long look within ourselves will cure us of a lot of impatience with other folks.—Henry F. Cope.

"I would rather vote for a donkey," said the voter.

"Come, now! You ought not to allow yourself to be influenced by family ties," said the candidate.

Judge not. There will be lots of people in heaven who will be just as much surprised to see you there as you will be to see them. Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

There is not a moment of any day of our lives when nature is not producing scene after scene, picture after picture, glory after glory, and working still upon such exquisite and constant principals of the most perfect beauty that it is quite certain that it is all done for us and intended for our perpetual pleasure.—Ruskin.

"So she doesn't return your affection, eh? Well, I shouldn't get mad about that. What's the use of bothering about a girl?" said Watkins.

"I don't mind her not returning my affection," said Dobleigh, "but, confound it, she won't return my diamond ring, either!"—Harper's Weekly.

INHERITED.
"And now," said Professor Longhunter as he greeted Henry Peck, "what shall we make of your little boy—a lecturer? He has a sincere taste for it."

"I know he has," replied the male parent. "He inherits it from his mother."

HER ONLY WANT.
"I have difficulty in satisfying my wife. She has a thousand wants."

"I have difficulty in satisfying mine, and she has only one want."

"What is it?"
"Money!"—Baltimore American.

The author—Well, how did you like my play?
The critic—It was very nice.

The author—Didn't you think the church scene realistic?
The critic—Intensely so. Why, a great many of us actually went to sleep while it was on.

"I understand, Mr. Reuben," said the visitor, "that your son is devoted to the turf."
"Yes, I reckon he is," said the old man. "Jabez kin lay down on the grass for half hours 'bout makin' no complaint."

"Yes, mum," said Poetic Pete, as he twined an autumn leaf through his buttonhole. "I am a great lover of the romantic. I stopped at this gate because I saw the sign 'Idlewood.'"

"You did?" approved the housewife.
"Well, there is a lot of idle wood down at the woodpile. Just take this ax and split up half a cord."

"It is true," said a woman lecturer, "that some girls, marrying men to reform them, succeed. Some girls, too, fail."

"The hostess at tea once said to a beautiful, sad-eyed woman:
"Are you fond of sports, Mrs. Blank?"
"Mrs. Blank smiled. Her sad eyes twinkled a moment. Then she sighed and answered:
"Well, I suppose I ought to be. I married one."

A GOOD FRIEND.
Hello there, Mr. Trouble.
Come right on in a while.
We want to introduce you
To our friend, Mr. Smile.
Were sure he wants to see you,
Because we heard him say
That he had lots of kind words
And smiles to give away.

So step in Mr. Trouble.
And make yourself at home,
And aid us in our struggle
To help the world along.
What! You are seeking sorrow?
Well, we have none to lend.
We're sorry we can't help you,
But Mr. Smile's our friend.

Special Town Meeting.

The article in the By-Laws of the Town of Weymouth which raised, in substance, that no money shall be raised or expended at a Special Town Meeting unless 100 people are present and voting in favor of the same is a good one, and it would seem that at any time when an emergency which calls for raising money it ought not to be a very hard job to find out of our 2,400 and more voters, 100 who had interest enough in town matters to attend the meeting and vote, but such is not the case.

Two important articles in the Warrant for a Special Town Meeting last Saturday were by default for want of the 100 men. The meeting was called to order by Town Clerk John A. Raymond and Hon. Louis A. Cook was elected as moderator.

The 20th article was to authorize the Treasurer with the approval of the Selectmen to issue six notes of $1,000 each to reimburse the treasury for the same amount. The 21st article was that which instructed the Town Clerk to call for a meeting on the 20th inst. at 7 o'clock.

Article 22 was to see if the Town would raise and appropriate $1,000 for a deficiency in the Fire Department for the current year and the same was lost for the same reason.

Next came Article 4. At a request of the Water Commissioners:—To see if the town will instruct the Water Commissioners not to issue licenses for boating and fishing on Weymouth Great Pond.

A. Cushing took the floor and moved that the water be restricted owing to the water being polluted by its present use for the purposes mentioned and it at once became evident that outside of those interested in the camps and other features at and around the Weymouth water supply, there was but little interest in the meeting.

J. Clarence Howe spoke against the article and the motion as not being called for and an injustice to those who were using the pond for the purposes specified in the article.

D. M. Easton, chairman of the Water Commissioners, spoke of decided improvements which had been made in the water supply and that the water was being polluted and at no distant day the boating, fishing and gunning would have to be stopped but he did not think it advisable to do so.

Mr. Vinson said he had lived in the vicinity of the pond many years and the water was apparently as good as ever and there was no occasion to interfere with the water when they were using it.

Mr. Joseph Chase Jr., J. Barton R. Ed and H. B. Reed spoke in favor of the water being used for its present purposes and thought all pollution of the water should be stopped now and not wait for an epidemic caused by it.

High School Notes.

There was no school Wednesday owing to a severe snowstorm.

The Senior College English Class is now studying Macaulay's "Life of John Bull" and the German Class has taken up the study of Sturm's "Crafrahen".

The pupils are now in the midst of their bi-monthly examinations.

Mr. Bean has added a large variety of food to his lunch counter, and the room presents a very appetizing appearance.

Gerald Fitzgerald has the school paper, "The Junior," well underway for its first edition.

The School Gymnasium has been closed for the past month owing to the breaking of a window in the room and the lack of a person to own up to breaking it or knowing anything about it.

The Junior class pin committee has many samples from Bastian Bros., Roch., N. Y., and from other firms. The pin will probably be decided upon this week.

Town Meeting of December 3.

The special town meeting of last Saturday was adjourned to Friday evening, Dec. 3, because one hundred voters were not present, and that number is necessary for the raising of money.

The meeting was, however, an educational one in a matter of great importance to the inhabitants of the town.

The question of licensing boating, fishing and gunning on the pond which supplies the town with its drinking water, was warmly discussed and, incidentally, many interesting facts were made known.

The chairman of the Board of Water Commissioners thought that there had been no danger incurred in the drinking of Great Pond water, up to the present time, but that at no distant date, there might be danger. He expressed his belief that when the water became dangerous the Board would, doubtless, act promptly.

It seemed to other speakers that this simply meant waiting for an epidemic of typhoid fever, or some similar experience, to demonstrate to the Water Commissioners, that there was danger.

The startling and unsanitary conditions around the shores of the pond, two or three years ago, were depicted by one of the speakers, and the somewhat improved conditions at present explained, but it was made clear that "eternal vigilance is the price of pure water as well as of liberty."

I understood the Clerk of the Board to say that ninety seven (97) permits for boating, fishing or gunning had been issued to residents of South Weymouth, besides a few to others. It was a good surprise to me that it was so much in demand for these purposes.

It is reasonable to suppose that the water of a pond habitually used by so large a number of sportsmen is as clean as it would be if no such use were made of it, but the fact is that it is not clean to preserve the cleanliness of the water? If so many have permits, is it not likely that others enjoy the pond without the bother of asking permission?

Are not the majority of the voters of the town as much interested in the prospects of clean and safe drinking water as a few of them are in boating, fishing and gunning?

Shoe Industry.

By mail and from salesmen, shoe manufacturers have received orders the past week in about the same volume as last week before, and the general situation is as good as can be expected.

The business of the wholesalers is steady, and they are disposing of seasonal goods in good time.

The amount of new business received at the factories is normal with prospects of improvement.

The day of great order seems to have passed, and as business is being done on a closer basis, a different standard of measure is required; so while the orders now current do not compare favorably with those of a few years ago, they are better than a year ago, and represent a carefully considered plan.

White Mountains of the Tramper.

The monthly supper of the Social Club of the Union church of Weymouth and Braintree was held last Wednesday evening in the banquet room of the church.

About ninety members and their friends and guests were present to enjoy the bountiful supper provided by a committee of the ladies of the club under the chairmanship of Mrs. N. Herbert Goodspeed, assisted by an able corps of helpers, among whom were Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Louis F. Bates, Mrs. Charles Baker, Mrs. Bernard, Mrs. Wm. Bond and Mrs. James Hollywood.

After the supper and the transaction of a few items of business the company adjourned to the main auditorium of the church, where from 7.15 until nearly 8 o'clock a constantly increasing audience listened with enjoyment to a delightful concert given by Mrs. F. E. Lord of South Weymouth. Mrs. Lord has many friends in this part of the town who always enjoy her organ selections and the power with which she interprets them.

By 8 o'clock a large company had gathered and then the lecturer of the evening was introduced, Mr. John Ritchie, Jr., of Boston. Mr. Ritchie's subject, "The White Mountains of the Tramper," very accurately describes the substance of his address, for the scenes which he threw upon the screen were not the common ones which the ordinary tourist enjoys in Boston.

There were no picturesque village views, such as one with Interlake, Jackson, Jefferson, or Bethlehem, and one missed the familiar views of the Crawford Notch, the Presidential range from Bretton Woods and the ascent of the train from the Base Station. Instead the lecturer showed the wild and picturesque views which only the tramper sees.

Starting in at Crawford, from the summits of Mount Webster and Willey he gave, (after exhibiting a few maps) extensive views of the Southern peaks of the Presidential range above the tree line on the naked, storm swept ridges. He showed the shelters or refuges erected by the Appalachian Mountain Club and explained their purpose, on those desolate and dangerous trails. He might have told a story of much pathetic interest of the eight fatalities which have overtaken the trampers on Mount Washington, but he merely alluded to the death of William B. Curtis, one of the most noted American mountaineers, who accompanied by Allan Ormsbee of Brookline, was overtaken by a furious storm of rain and hail, and a gale of nearly one hundred miles an hour, when miles from shelter of any kind upon the desolate and dangerous ridges of the Crawford Ridge.

The lecturer showed the Lakes of the Clouds, near which Mr. Curtis's body was found and the naked ridge, within five minutes walk of the Signal Station where Mr. Ormsbee's body was found.

Besides the refuge huts, the lecturer showed the various types of camps which the Appalachian Mountain Club has erected, Mr. Tucker's ravine, the Great Gulf, Carter Notch, on Imp Mountain, and the famous Madison Spring Hut, a rough stone hut at an elevation of about 5000 feet which has been called "the most popular hotel in the mountains."

The lecturer showed the views of King's trade as feeling the impetus of the advancing winter and sales everywhere have improved. A large portion of the orders and orders are being filled thoroughly.

The business of the wholesalers is steady, and they are disposing of seasonal goods in good time.

The amount of new business received at the factories is normal with prospects of improvement.

The day of great order seems to have passed, and as business is being done on a closer basis, a different standard of measure is required; so while the orders now current do not compare favorably with those of a few years ago, they are better than a year ago, and represent a carefully considered plan.

The Harvest Moon

A Novelization of the Drama of AUGUSTUS THOMAS
By GEORGE HENRY PAYNE

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY AUGUSTUS THOMAS

This is a realistic story of the great, romantic, throbbing world of the modern stage. Revealing the good as well as some of the evil of stage life, it also deals authoritatively with dramatic technique in an interesting way. Through all the story runs the engrossing narrative of the talented young playwright, Willard Holcomb, and of the beautiful young home girl, Dora Fullerton, who went out alone into the world to endeavor to win fame and fortune on the stage. The record of her experiences, of her struggles and of her awakening forms one of the really brilliant novels of the times.

CHAPTER I

THE Grand Ball, as it was called, picked up to its principal, Southampton every Monday morning in time to get them into New York for their more or less important business. And it was because of the character of that somebody one said that it was the most representative train in America.

It was a suburban, vigorous, athletic-looking aggregation of humanity that filled the train-tail, vigorous women who looked as if they never doubted, perfectly sure of themselves and their possessions, from a dog and an automobile or two to a hot or portable, a husband, women who knew and yet were perfectly calm in all their knowledge; women who lived much in the open air, a rapidly increasing habit that might argue that they were returning to the joys of life and courage of our paleolithic ancestors, who lived as they breathed, with wild, rampant unrestrained peace be it to the gods.

The train pulled out of Southampton at 7.30, and among its precursors, freight, even at this early hour, all eager eyes, all clear eyes, all ready eyes, all eyes that were young and woman and woman who found their seats with little difficulty and immediately started an earnest conversation.

"I tell you, Dora, you are wrong," said the young man. He was hardly over thirty and a trifle too stout for his age. Every lineament in his face showed his sincerity and displayed his good breeding, and it was nearly impossible that he was endeavoring to conceal something—his love.

"Graham!" the girl spoke in a lower voice than her companion, her knowledge of effect being greater than her speaking the truth, but there are things I cannot tell." She hesitated. "I am going to do this thing, you dislike so much and even I fear to do it, to do it no matter what the outcome."

"The young man sat back in his seat. His face reddened. "You are going to do it no matter what the outcome," he said. "I am going to do it no matter what the outcome," he said. "I am going to do it no matter what the outcome," he said.

He broke in his voice, "I don't want you to do this thing, but if you must, why not let us get married first and let me go with you?"

"The girl shook her head sadly. "I am not afraid of you," she said. "I am not afraid of you," she said. "I am not afraid of you," she said.

"I don't think that show you, Dora, now. I don't think that show you, Dora, now. I don't think that show you, Dora, now. I don't think that show you, Dora, now."

"You don't know my friends," he said. "You don't know my friends," he said. "You don't know my friends," he said.

"I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said. "I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said.

"For another opportunity to talk the matter over, while she kept steadfast to her resolution not to let his obstinacy wear her down."

"There was a little flutter of the heart as she stepped out of the door, for she was entering into a new world, a wonder world."

"Holcomb is my name," said the young man in a very pleasant voice and with an announcement that carried weight in itself. "We've met at the Players club."

"I have not had much experience," said Mr. Holcomb, "as I have only been on the stage two years. What ever I have had, however, shall be most decidedly at her service, and I will see you again."

WHEN ABNER GOT MAD

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Miss Eunice Gray was a "sorter" old maid, but it was not her fault. Abner Jackson, who was a "sorter" old bachelor, had been courting her for five years without actually proposing the question. She tried to get her wild-eyed mother in the village, and he worked a little farm just outside.

Abner wasn't lazy. He was just a good natured poke of a man. He was going to get married some day, but there was no hurry about it. He always had a good excuse for not getting married, but he didn't care down to details. He didn't ask her to name the day and arrange the bridal train.

"Get mad at him and make him think he's going to lose you," she said. "The only thing you can get mad at is his nose, his eyebrows. Tell him that he's the homeliest man you ever saw."

"I don't think he'd mind it if you said, 'I don't think you ever see him show any temper?'"

"Not a bit. He was run over by a drove of hogs once and got up laughing. No, you can't make Abner mad. He's a poke, but an awfully good one."

"And are you going to keep right on for the next fifty years, are you?"

"I guess I'll go mean," answered Abner, who was too astonished to be straight.

"And I guess you won't," said Aunt Hannah, "at least not until you have explained yourself. I've been looking at you. If I had a cow as homely as you are I'd look in the gutter for a pig."

"I'll never come again!" exclaimed Abner in a changed voice.

THE DEAREST GIFT.

A Pathetic Incident in the Life of Robert Browning.

A young American woman was traveling one day in an Italian railway coach. The only other occupant of the compartment being an elderly gentleman. Observing the interest of the young woman in the country through which they were passing, and seeing also that it was not her, the more experienced traveler pointed out objects and places of note.

From scenery the conversation drifted to books and authors, until something suggested by the ride set looking intently out of the window, having apparently forgotten the very existence of his traveling companion.

"I fear, sir, that I have offended you. Perhaps you do not like Mrs. Browning's poetry?"

"The man slowly turned upon her, but during the rest of the ride set looking intently out of the window, having apparently forgotten the very existence of his traveling companion."

"I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said. "I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said.

"I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said. "I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said.

"I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said. "I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said.

"I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said. "I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said.

"I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said. "I am going to do something in this world that will be absolutely mine," he said.

GATHERED UP.

Indolence is a robber with a dagger under her cloak.

The man whose God is money never has any mercy on himself.

No matter how much a woman loves her husband she just can't help abusing him now and then.

Most of us forget that how a man parts his principles is much more important than how he parts his hair.

G-rading— You haven't been to see me since you asked my father for my hand. Gerald, no, this is the first time I've been able to get about without a ladder.

The man who cannot laugh does not know what it means to live.

To the joker who writes jokes for a living it isn't much of a joke when the editor can't take a joke. —Lippincott's.

Miss Homeleigh: Perhaps you don't know what it means to kiss a man.

Miss Cutting: Really? Well he'd have been a strange man if he tried to kiss you twice.

HIS BIGGEST MISTAKE. "What was the biggest mistake you ever made?" "Thinking I was too foxy to make a big mistake." —Cleveland Leader.

DOMESTIC MESS. Mrs. Henpeck (with newspaper)—It says here that buttermilk will extend one's life to over a hundred. Henpeck (wearily)—If I was a bachelor, I'd take to drinking it. —Boston Transcript.

Talents are not wasted in a narrow sphere. Your lamp could add but little to the great glow that illumines the world, but it may still with light a home that without it would be in darkness.

MODERNITY. "Some are so intensely modern that they prefer a Corot to a Rembrandt." "If it's a better hill climber I don't blame 'em. Me for the French car every time." —London Punch.

DIVIDING HER WEIGHT. "Don't stand on that delicate tangle to hang the picture, Martha. It will break. You're too heavy." "Oh, no. I'm not, mum. I'll bear me. I'm standing only on one foot."

"What was the trouble with Swinton and his wife? Was it his fault or hers that they were unable to get along together?" "It's rather hard to decide. It appears that whenever one of them had an irresistible impulse the other had an unalterable objection." —Chicago Record-Herald.

The automobile without lights is even worse than the dark motor boat, for the ocean affords more room to dodge than does the public highway. —Portland Express.

"You must take rigorous exercise if you expect to regain your health." "Aw, shucks, doc; why can't I take some kind of a patent pill?" —Kansas City Journal.

"We never knew of an engineer who could kick his train around a curve without the grace with which a first-class leader of fashion can perform the operation."

SHAKING HANDS. Few people know how to shake hands well. The general run of folk either give a limp paw and allow it to be shaken or else grasp yours in theirs and nearly dislocate it with their violence. —London World.

When the idea of any pleasure strikes your imagination, make a just computation between the duration of the pleasure, and that of the repentance that is likely to follow it. —Epictetus.

Two men were getting warm over a simple difference of opinion. "They turned to the third man." "I don't know," said the third man.

We can learn to read and write, but we can not learn laziness; that must be a particular gift of nature; and to tell the truth, I esteem him happy who does not wish to acquire it. The character of sarcasm is dangerous; although this quality makes those laugh whom it does not wound, it nevertheless, never procures esteem. —Oxenford.

A young man was drinking tea with a beautiful girl when her little brother slipped into the room. "Mr. Manning," the boy asked, "can you stand on your head?" "No," said the visitor, laughing; "I don't think I can."

"Well, I can," said the boy; "look here." And he stood on his head very neatly in the corner.

"Ha, ha," laughed Mr. Manning, "and who taught you that?" "The urchin frowned. "Sister told me I must never tell," he said.

FROM STRAY STORIES. A pretty, rosy-cheeked country girl entered a large department store one day recently. It was bargain day, and the crowd was greater than usual.

She had wandered about from floor to floor, a little bewildered at the magnitude of the establishment, the largest she had ever seen.

Seeing her, a shopwalker approached and said: "Is there anybody waiting on you?" "Yes, sir," said the girl, blushing to the roots of her flaxen hair. "He's at the door; he wins come in!"

A LAZY MAN. A worthy citizen of Newport, who had the reputation of being the laziest man alive among "them billocks," so lazy indeed that he used to weed his garden with a rocking chair by rocking forward to take hold of the weed and backward to uproot it. He used to drive his old white faced mare to the dock, where the tautog (black-fish) might be depended on for any weight, from two to twelve pounds, backed his gig down to the water side, put on his line and when the tautog was safely hooked started the old mare and pulled him out.

Thirty Three Years Ago. Three scows loaded with pig iron, belonging to the Weymouth Iron Co., were sunk during the severe storm of Wednesday last, near the company's wharf at the "Neck."

The eleventh anniversary of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of East Weymouth, took place last Monday evening, at Mechanics Temple of Honor hall, where a large number were assembled whose anticipations of an enjoyable occasion were fully realized.

An alarm of fire was given at 10 o'clock last night, which called out the Amazon Co. and Hook and Ladder. The cause of alarm was the burning of a wash-house on the premises of M. M. Hodgman, at North Weymouth, which was destroyed before the engine arrived. The Rocket was hauled from East Weymouth north to Lincoln square before the company found out where the fire was located.

About nine months ago a branch Sunday school was opened under the auspices of the First Congregational Church, at the only district, known as Pond Point. It was organized by the election of Augustus Shaw, as Supt., and during the summer months was held in a private house, and a growing interest had been manifested in the enterprise, till the school now numbers about fifty. It has been kindly provided with a permanent room in a public building.

The service of installation of Rev. Henry W. Eldridge, as pastor of the Congregational church of East Weymouth took place last Wednesday, the session of the council (Rev. G. F. Stanton moderator) occurring at 4 P. M.

The service was attended by a large audience, and the exercises were well associated in interest, the singing and organ performance especially, being of marked excellence, a large and efficient choir aiding in this portion of the service, led by Robert B. Raymond. At the close the choir was hospitably entertained in the vestry, where a collation was served.

Of the ten churches represented in the council not one now has the same pastor and of the several delegates the only one living is George W. Shaw who represents the Union church of Weymouth and Braintree.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH

The monthly social held by the St. Paul Union last Wednesday evening was attended by about one hundred and seventy people. An appetizing supper was served by the following ladies of the church: Miss Susie E. Raymond, chairman; edited by Mrs. Samuel W. Barrett, Mrs. E. F. Fisher, Miss Clara Mitchell, Mrs. George H. Wise, Mrs. Nathan D. Conterbury, Mrs. Minnie P. Gayer, Mrs. Fred H. Pratt, Mrs. John W. Ryan, Mrs. Henry L. Lovell, Mrs. Harry L. Bates, Mrs. George Raymond, Mrs. Fred L. McCobb, Mrs. Marion Raymond, Mrs. Fred H. Langhurst and Mrs. Lucinda Totman. After the supper a reception was held and at eight o'clock the vocal entertainment was given, consisting of songs and recitations by Master Clifford Harlow, accompanied by Miss Lillian Harlow; piano duets by Mrs. Henry Lovell and Miss Isabelle Lovell, and violin solos by Master Walter Peers, accompanied by Master Summers Peers.

The church choir will begin rehearsals for Christmas music tomorrow (Saturday) night at seven forty-five. A new departure has been made this year of selecting soloists from the choir instead of having outside talent.

The Christmas festival will be held in the vestry next Wednesday evening. The exercises for the Primary department will be held in the afternoon.

Sunday will be observed in the interest of Universal Peace. The pastor will preach in the morning on the topic, "An Unfamiliar Paradox. The United States, the Leading Peace-maker among the Nations and the Leading Peace-maker in multiplying the Munitions of War."

How Far Can You See? What is the farthest limit to which the eye can see? Power 10 is most exceptional with the naked eye, though one or two cases are recorded, the third satellite being the most distant. Perseus as he is the longest sighted race on earth. Humboldt records a human figure eighteen miles away, being able to recognize the sun, moon and stars and in white. This is probably the record for far sight.

Probably He Wouldn't. A country doctor, coming up to preach at Oxford in his turn, complained to Dr. Routh, the venerable principal, that the remuneration was very inadequate, considering the traveling expenses and the labor necessary for the composition of the discourse.

"How much did they give you?" inquired Dr. Routh.

"Only £5," was the reply.

"Why, I would not have preached that sermon for fifty!"—Bric-a-brac.

Hens' Teeth. "Your composition, as a whole," said the professor of literature, "deserves a great deal of praise, but I must object to the expression, 'as fine as hens' teeth.' It is not correct usage, but also suggestive of native faking, for it is common knowledge that hens' teeth do not exist."

"I do not see why they don't exist," muttered the composer.

"Well, he's been married to May nearly four months now, you know."—Illustrated Bits.

Precipitatory. The Minister-Doctor, is it absolutely to remove my appendix?

"Not absolutely, but it is safer to begin with some simple operation like that."—Life.

Scott's Rhyme of Merry Christmas

Deep on moor wood! The wind is still.

But, as it whistles as it will, My love on a Christmas morn'g still. Each age has deemed the newborn year.

The fittest time for restal cheer. And well our Christian stores of old Loved when the year its course had rolled.

And brought the Christmas back again With all his hospitable train.

Domestic and religious rite gave honor to the holy night. On Christmas eve the bells were rung; That only night in all the year Saw the staid priest the chanter rear.

The dame, dressed in her little gown; The hall was dressed with holly green; Forth to the wood did merry men go To gather in the mistletoe.

Then opened wide the Baron's hall To vassal, tenant, serf and all:

Power laid his merry maskers in And Ceremony doffed his pride. The heir, with roses in his shoes, That night might give partner to choose.

All banished with uncontrolled delight And general voice the happy night That to the cottage as the crown Brought tidings of salvation down.

The fire, with well dried logs supplied, Went roaring up the chimney wide; The huge hall table's oakmen gave, Scribbled till it shone, the day to grace, Bore then upon its massive board No mark to part the squire and lord.

Then was brought in the lusty brew By old blue coated serving man; The grim browed head frowned on high. Crested with bays and rosemary, Well can the green barbed ranger tell How, when and where the monster fell.

And all the baiting of the boar.

The wassail round, in good brown bowls, Garnished with ribbons, dithely trowed, There the huge stork reeked, hard by Plum porridge-sold and Christmas pie, Nor falied old Scotland to produce At such high tide her savory goose.

Then came the merry maskers in, And carousal roared with blithesome din; If unmeasured was the song, It was a hearty note and strong. England was merry England when Old Christmas brought his sports and games.

'Twas Christmas bronched the mightiest air; 'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale; A Christmas gambol oft could cheer The poor man's heart through half the year.

—Sir Walter Scott.

THE WREN BUSH.

An Old Custom Still Observed in Ireland at Christmas.

Among the many old customs still observed in Ireland at Christmas few are more curious than the practice of carrying about "the wren bush" on St. Stephen's day, and antiquaries are puzzled to explain why the poor little "king of all birds" should be put to death on the festival of the first martyr.

The most probable explanation is that the wren was sacred to the Irish and was used by them in divination and other pagan rites at the festival of the winter solstice, which almost coincided with Christmas, and consequently the clergy urged their converts to destroy the birds which were associated with such unholy rites. Just as St. Patrick's relentless destruction of the images of serpents, used in the ancient pagan worship of Ireland, gave rise to the legend that he Gave the snakes and toads a twist And banished them all forever!"

This seems the more likely because "wren," also means "a Druid," and old folk still call "Jenny" the "Druid bird" and say that she has the gift of prophecy and that those who can interpret her twitterings as she hovers about a house or flies from bush to bush can read the future. In the library of Trinity college, Dublin, there is a curious document describing how to interpret the notes of the wren—Maud E. Sargent in Longman's Magazine.

1860 DUNBAR-FRENCH 1910

Fifty Years of Matrimonial Life Rounded Out Today.

Fifty years ago, Willard J. Dunbar, a young man of 21 years, and Mary E. French, a maiden of 17 years, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen French of East Weymouth, Rev. Cooper, then pastor of the Methodist church, performing the ceremony.

In the fifty years which have elapsed since the marriage ceremony was performed, the aged grandparents, the fathers and mothers and many kindred and friends of the bride and groom have been gathered to the "land of eternal rest"; but time has dealt kindly with Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar, and other friends and relatives have taken the places of the departed, and all who can will meet tonight at the Methodist church to join in celebrating an event which comes to but a small portion of those who are joined in marriage, i. e., a "Golden Wedding" Friday, Dec. 23rd, 1910.

Mr. Dunbar was one of eleven children born to Ebed and Sophia Dunbar and was born December 22, 1839 in a house standing on the spot where the more modern home of Francis Pool now is at Weymouth Center.

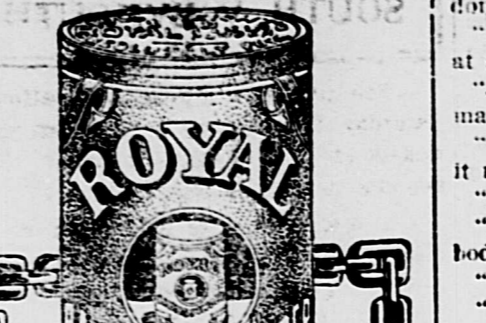

Of the eleven children, the subject of this sketch was the only boy, and he with one sister, Mary Ann, widow of Theodore Blanchard, are all that are now living.

Mr. Dunbar's school days were spent in the district school of his native village and his early trade was in connection with shoe making.

His honeymoon had hardly begun to wane when guns were opened on Fort Sumpter and the Civil War was on in earnest. The bride of a few months was left behind, and he went to the front in Co. A, 42d Mass, and saw service with the army.

One might draw the inference that a weary old and infirm but such is not the case with Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar. Time has dealt gently with them as will be seen by the accompanying pictures which were but recently taken. Their home is the historic "Rice Tavern" at Jackson square, East Weymouth and the family circle consists of Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar, their only son, Charles W., and wife and the idol of the family, a grandson.

Butler at New Orleans and other places and was honorably discharged at the close of his enlistment, but he maintained close relations with the "Boys in Blue" and in P. O. of Reynolds Post 58 G. A. R. He is also affiliated with Ophelia's Hope Lodge A. F. & A. M., Pentapolis Hope Arch Chapter and South Shore Commandery of the W. T. Rice Co. in that body.

Joe was a Portuguese urchin, six years old and untidy with the accumulated soil of all his seasons. He lived with his father and mother and numerous brothers and sisters in a dilapidated cabin in the outskirts of the city.

His neighbors were fellow expatriates speaking their own tongue and continuing their own customs, and Joe's only knowledge of the world that lay beyond the truck farms had been gained when he went with his father to peddle vegetables in a rabbit entered Joe's leg, and he was brought to the hospital.

Miss Merton, a senior nurse, was his "day" when all his world was full of horrors. She was his first nurse and the one he first felt was his friend.

In a hospital lying and dying more according to certain laws. The progress of a case is routine to the experienced ones. Dislocation takes place in certain known steps.

But one element of which no account is taken, for which no calculation is made, is the love of a man and a woman. In the hospital life there is no place for it. A nurse's time and thoughts are devoted to her work. Her love and sympathy belong to her patients.

Concerning the relations of doctors and nurses hospital etiquette is strict. It demands that these relations be absolutely professional. The reputation of a hospital depends on the discipline maintained within its walls, and the laws of St. Anna were enforced with severity.

ON THE FARM

Let this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week until Jan 1st, 1912, by sending $2.00 to this office now.

Cultivate the friendship of every farm animal, from the dog to the horse. The man who has not friends of this kind is not apt to have many elsewhere.

When potatoes are allowed to heat or sweat in large bins or pits, decay is quite sure to result with many of the tubers.

No one can doubt that potatoes feed to better advantage when cooked than when raw. It is doubtful if other foods are greatly improved by cooking, except where warm food is needed.

Get interested in the stock you have as well as the stock you would like to have. No thing will so quickly arouse interest in a flock of chickens as an accurately kept account. For the amount of capital invested in her, the hen will hold her own with the best of cows.

Where whole milk is fed the calf to the time it is six or eight weeks old, and then the calf sold for veal, it is as much money will be received for the calf as could have been secured for the whole milk which it took.

Skimmed milk without dilution is thin enough feed. It ought to be thickened with shorts or other nutritious ground feeds rather than be diluted with clear water or common fish water.

If you contemplate going into the poultry business for other than mere health's sake, don't know it all at once. There is more to learn 100 years hence. Poultry culture is advancing as rapidly as any other business, and what is new today will be followed with something better later. Don't know it all if you wish to succeed and keep at the top.

A horse dealer was showing a horse to a prospective buyer. After running him back and forward for a few minutes he stopped and said to the buyer, "What do you think of his coat? Isn't he a dandy?"

The buyer, noticing that the horse had the heaves, replied, "Yes, I like his coat all right, but I don't like his pants." "It's Bits."

In treating a wire cut, the wound should be kept absolutely clean and exposed to the air and sunshine. When the wound starts to heal it should not be irritated by washing the raw surface or by removing scabs which have formed. Liquid disinfectants are best applied by allowing the fluid to be poured onto the raw surface, not by rubbing the wound with cotton saturated with the disinfectant.

"Back to the farm," seems to be the present-day slogan. Men born and reared on the farm, in later life migrated to the cities, only to realize that they had made a mistake. Agriculture in all its branches is on the ascendancy and its true dependence—both from a financial and a health standpoint—is again calling its sons "back to the farm."

Every one should compost every available bit of manure. Build a rail pen in the garden, and into this throw all the ashes and trash about the place that will rot and become fertilizer. Pour the wash water into it, for it has some value. The pile will be ready to scatter over the garden in the spring.

How much soil energy is wasted in the production of pernicious and noxious weeds in our country can never be ascertained, says the Denver Field and Farmer, but estimates are made that the weed crop represents a waste reaching to the hundreds of millions annually. Every farmer ought to be endowed with enough imagination to fancy himself a captain waging relentless war against weeds and insects, thus conserving soil and wild life.

Budded trees of peach are always planted when 1 year old, and the tree is trimmed back to the main stem, and this shortened to 18 to 24 inches. Cherry and plum trees are of slower growth and usually remain in the nursery a second season, but the demand for 1 year-old trees of these varieties is increasing. Low-headed fruit trees are desirable for several reasons. There is less danger of injury by winds and sun; the fruit may be gathered more easily; pruning and spraying may be performed more quickly.

Stable and farm manure is better for the garden than commercial fertilizer because it brings out a better mechanical condition of the soil enabling it to stand both drought and excessive wet much better when it contains leaved vegetation in case of beans or sweet potatoes, for instance, rotted straw, which contains but little elements of fertility is ample because it is more essential to keep the soil loose any moist than to manure excessively.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

GATHERED UP.

If your life is not a blessing to others, it will curse you.

The silence of a man may be more eloquent than the speech of a woman.

Fine weather brings out the birds on the fairs.

No man or boy is ever the slightest good in this world unless he has ambition—Lord Stanley.

The age of aviation calls for a race of spectators with eyes on the tops of their heads.

Nothing troubles a handsome man like the loss of his good looks.

Don't envy the man who is riding around in an auto until you know how big his mortgage is.

To be a success is to so live your life that it shall cause no one to lose faith in you or in the world.

"Does your heart ever reach out for the unattainable?" "No; but my hands do when my husband is not at home. There are three but on the back of my gown that I can't reach."—Stray Stories.

An old lady whose son had been sentenced to prison for twenty-five years, exclaimed, "What did they do that for? he wouldn't be contented there three weeks."

PATIENCE. Her Mother—"You must be patient with him. The Bride—"Oh, I am. I know it will take time for him to see that he can't have his own way."

THE DEAR FRIENDS. Maid—"You say Jack once proposed to you. I don't believe it. He said I was the only woman he ever loved. Ethel—"Yes, dear, but he didn't class me among women. He used to call me his angel."

THE LATE O. Henry did not believe in woman suffrage. Once, at supper at Moquin's, in New York, an underpaid reporter said to the humorist, bitterly: "Women should receive men's wages."

"Well, married women do," O. Henry replied.—New York Tribune.

HOME ATHLETICS. "Son, how would you like to enter a relay event?" "Fine, dad. I was a star at relay events in college."

"So I've heard you say. Well, your ma is about ready to relay the carpets."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It was a hot August day and Smith's face was all wrapped up in bandages so that one could only see his eyes and mouth.

Just then Blake met him. "Hallo, old man, what in the world is the matter? Had an accident?"

"Oh, no," replied Smith; "not at all. Just wearing those to keep warm."

INKEEPER—"Going to make an early start to see the glacier today, I see. Do you know, it moves at the rate of only one foot an hour?"

"Tourist—"Yes; but my wife is so slow getting ready that I'm afraid I'll miss it after all!"—Puck.

"You say that you witnessed this altercation?" "Inquired the Judge."

"No, sorr," said the witness. "Oh, didn't see that. Of wuz busy looking at the fig."

Let Us All Keep Smiling.

There is plenty of sighing in the old world now. So it's up to us all to keep smiling. Perhaps your downward, but anyhow, it's up to you still to keep smiling. There's plenty of sorrow, plenty of pain. The little of sunshine and too much of rain.

But weeping and sighing are both done in vain. And the best plan is just to keep smiling.

The farmer who sows for a big crop of grates. Why, it's up to that man to keep smiling.

Though when the harvest comes round he has naught for his pains. It is up to him to keep smiling. For, spite of the failure, why, he's done his best.

And grumbling and growling, it's freely confessed, Won't help him a bit, so with zeal and with zeal, He should bury his grief and keep smiling.

The young man who's courting the maiden to get wealth. Sure you can't keep that fellow from smiling.

Though she gave him the mitten for some other boy at last. Still, I think that he ought to keep smiling.

For there's many a fish yet uncaught in the sea, And perhaps he'll do better next time; and, may be, Get a girl ten times sweeter. Then, 'twixt you and me, He'll have much occasion for smiling.

The merchant who hopes from his sales to get wealth. The man whose desire is for wisdom and health. Can't afford to do ought but keep smiling.

The jolly Jack Tar whose ship rides the foam. The wanderer afar from his friends and his home. The writer compiling the ponderous tome, Will make their days brighter by smiling.

And so, whatsoever be your lot on this earth, Live up to you, friend, to keep smiling. You can't help your looks and you can't help your birth. But you can help your fortune by smiling.

So be of good cheer, though the skies be overcast. Make the best of what comes and don't brood on the past; Keep your eye on the goal and you'll triumph at last. If you'll work with will and keep smiling. J. H. Larimore. St. Louis Globe-Dem.

Shoe Buying Made Safe

We offer you a simple guide for buying shoes. Make sure that the next shoes you buy have been made on Goodyear's welt-making machines. This means more to you than a manufacturing process. It means comfort, durability, style, and economy. For the manufacturers who employ these machines in their factories are leaders in shoe-making. They are the men who issue the authoritative shoe fashions. They are in a position to get the best leather the market affords. These makers put into every shoe the biggest value for your money. Retailers prefer to sell "Goodyear Welt" shoes because the manufacturer assumes responsibility for perfect quality and workmanship.

GOODYEAR WELT

It consists of sewing a narrow strip of leather called a welt, with a rubber upper, and to the channeled lip of the insole. This makes the shoe smooth inside. You'll be astonished at the number—fully five hundred different names of shoes. They are some to be sold by leading retailers in every town. Get this book before you buy another pair of shoes. Your inquiry brings a booklet illustrating the entire shoe-making process and each stage in the evolution of a shoe. Also another interesting booklet, "The Secret of a Shoe—An Industry Formed" which tells the true story of a great American achievement. Write today.
