Publicity Through Art

People have been heard to remark "How well Carmel is advertised." It is true. One cannot go anywhere in the United States or in the popular centers of Europe that Carmel is not known.

Very little of this advertising has been or is being done in the conventional way. It is the artists, resident and visiting who, best have made Carmel known the world over. Go into the great galleries, public places, but will find upon its walls a magnificent painting of Carmel. If the title does not indicate the location of the scene people inquire.

Through this agency, more than any other, Carmel-by-the-Sea has been made world-famous.

For the large influx of Eastern and European people in Carmel, year after year, we are indebted principally to the artists.

Our Jim Goes to War

Earl Baldwin in N. Y. American

Jim's gone—he's all we have you know.
It broke ma's heart to see him go,
And dad, he clenched his hands and smited
As though his feelings were that mild,
I cried, but Jim knew I was glad,
And ma was, too, and so was dad.
To France! I closed my eyes in prayer
And when I turned Jim was not there.

I'll miss him by the clear, sweet spring,
Where he and I both loved to sing;
I'll miss his laughing, cheerful way
When he and dad pitched up the hay;
The early morning trips we took
To gather mushrooms near the brook,
To hunt beside the well worn lane,
When hazel pods were there again.
The games we played, "Hello Marie!"
"Ah, Mr. James, I've come to tea!"
Then he would pull the bucket up
From out the well and fill my cup.
Oh, how delicious were the days
When rain had cooled July's hot rays,
And barefoot in the dripping grass
I raced to meet him at the pass.
Oh, how precious now the rumps
Through clover meadows in the swamps
Where grassy tufts deceived the tread
And dozing bullfrogs started and fled.

It is September—Jim is gone!
The leaves are dropping to the lawn,
The brown skinned apples near the soil,
Keep safe for us our Jim, dear God!

With nearly one hundred school children and their teachers, carrying flags, drawn up across Ocean avenue, and a large crowd of town people assembled in front of the Pine Cone office, Roy Babcock and John S. Machado departed last Thursday morning for American Lake, Washington.

Prior to the departure, the children escorted the Jorselya auto, carrying the men, down Ocean avenue to Lincoln street and return. The parade stopped at the postoffice where the men were given three hearty cheers, and a large number of men and women gave the boys a handshake.

Carmel sent its men off in a fitting manner—a thing two nearby communities failed to do for their men.

The Misses Lundy and their mother are again greeting old friends here.

Audubon, the Bird Man

Probably John James Audubon knew as much about birds as did any man, and his interest in them began when he was quite small and owned a pet parrot. The boy's father was an officer in the French army, and although little John Audubon was born in Louisiana, he spent many years in the south of France. He never liked school very well, though he loved drawing and music and dancing and would go to any trouble to perfect himself in them. But, by and by, there was something which he liked even better than music and dancing, and that was birds. The more he watched them, listened to them, and studied their habits, the more interested in them he became. After a while he cared about little else than roaming about through the woods. His mother, who liked these outdoor things as well almost as her son, would pack up the boy's luncheon for him in a basket and off he would start for a whole day in the open, always carrying with him a second basket in which to bring home curiosities of flowers, stones, or anything else which took his fancy. Later, when Audubon was a young man, the family returned to the United States, where John James was put in charge of a large farm near Philadelphia. Life on this farm he found most enjoyable, for there he could have horses and dogs and water fowls—whatever creatures he especially wanted to study at the time. But all this while Audubon cared for nothing so much as observing the ways of the birds, and making careful sketches of them.

But Audubon must have been a strangely contradictory young person, for, with his great love of animals and the big, rough out-of-doors, he had a liking for fine clothes; we read of him dashing about the countryside on horseback, dressed in satin breeches, silk stockings and exquisite ruffled shirts which he had made for him in France. His liking for fine things did not reach as far as his home, however, for he turned the lower floor of the house into a sort of museum. Here he trained his pet animals, kept his specimens of various sorts, and had the walls hung around with life size paintings of birds. When he was married and went to live in Kentucky, his young wife was at first quite distracted by all of Audubon's treasures, which he insisted on having in the most conspicuous part of the house; but she became used to her husband's ways, and she realized that he knew a very great deal about birds. So she was patient with him in his careless ways, and at one time she herself undertook to earn the money for the family, so that Audubon might continue his studies uninterruptedly. We read that Lucy would say to him, "You are a genius, for you know more about birds than anyone else. I will earn money while you study; all you need is time to finish your study and your sketches in order to astonish the world with what you know."

Not all of Audubon's friends were so patient, however, for he surely did do strange things. When he was in pursuit of a certain bird, for instance, he would forget everything else. Once, when he was returning to his home after a business trip to the neighboring city, his valuable purchases loaded upon the pack horses, he heard the note of a certain song bird; promptly he forgot all about the horses and their load, strayed off the road in search of the birds, and, consequently, had to seek far and wide before he could find his horses again. Then, again, there is a story that Audubon (who must have been thinking about some particular bird at the time—and thinking hard) once mailed a letter in which he enclosed eight thousand dollars, and even forgot to post it. However, these were not the things that counted most; the great thing for Audubon was his study of the birds. You will notice, if you think over all the best people whom you know, that the ones who have accomplished the most are those who have given up all else for the one work in which they are most interested.

Now it was most fortunate that Lucy was patient with him, for Audubon was making his famous book about birds. He drew the most careful, accurate sketches of all the birds he knew, putting in the colors exactly as he observed them; then, after long months of this work, Audubon had these pictures bound together into four great volumes. Each one of these books cost a thousand dollars. There were only 75 or 80 sets of these bird books published, but you may see one at the Public Library at Boston and one at the main library in New York City. You will have to ask some one to lift these volumes for you, because it takes two men to place one of them upon a rack, where visitors may look at it. In all the four books there was more than a thousand different kinds of birds pictured; if you wish to study birds, you can hardly do better than refer to these great volumes of Audubon's. In these days, when so many people are interested in birds, in feeding them in winter, and putting up houses for them, there is much reason to feel grateful to Audubon, who has given us so much information about the birds.

WEEKLY GREETING

The qualities that make men and women eager lovers, faithful, duty-performing, hard-working husbands and wives, and wise and devoted fathers and mothers stand at the foundations of all possible social welfare, and also represent the loftiest heights of human happiness and usefulness.—
Theodore Roosevelt.

A Worthy Appeal

This is Camp Library Week. It is proposed to raise throughout the United States $1,000,000 to establish library service for our soldiers and sailors.

Every community and school district in the State should respond, as this is the only really educational effort being made for our fighters.

Subscriptions of any amount may be forwarded to Miss Anne Hadden, County Librarian, Salinas, Cal.

Sit on Them Now

Possibly a severe handling of treason right at the start will act as a wholesome preventive of treason and very greatly simplify the work of the Government in the near future.

Treasonable utterance in print or speech is not under the protection of the federal Constitution. It is an abuse of the privilege of free speech and a free press. Studiously discrediting this Government, seeking to disorganize and divide its sentiment and to create sentiment favorable to the country with which we are at war, is treason, whether in our own tongue or a foreign language.

Judged by these standards, treason is busy right now and should be hunted down and dealt with for what it is. Let treason be stamped out at the beginning. A clear-cut word of warning will do now. Later something more serious will be required.

President Wilson Proclaims Junior Red Cross

President Wilson has issued a proclamation calling upon the school children of the Nation to do their part in the war by joining the Junior Red Cross, to assist in the mercy work of the senior organization. The proclamation follows:

"To the school children of the United States:

"A proclamation! The President of the United States is also president of the American Red Cross. It is from these offices joined in one that I write you a word of greeting at this time when so many of you are beginning the school year.

"The American Red Cross has just prepared a junior membership with school activities, in which every pupil in the United States can find a chance to serve our country. The school is the main part of your life. Through it you can best work in the great cause of freedom to which we have all pledged ourselves.

"Our junior Red Cross will bring to you opportunities of service to your community and to other communities all over the world and guide your service with high and religious ideals. It will teach you how to save in order that suffering children elsewhere may have the chance to live. It will teach you how to prepare some of the supplies which wounded soldiers and homeless families lack. It will send to you, through the Red Cross bulletins, the thrilling stories of relief and rescue. And, best of all, more perfectly than through any of your other school lessons, you will learn by doing those kind things, under your teachers' direction, to be the future good citizens of this great country which we all love.

"And I commend to all school teachers in the country the simple plan which the American Red Cross has worked out to provide for your co-operation, knowing as I do that school children will give their best service under the direct guidance and instruction of their teachers. Is not this perhaps the chance for which you have been looking to give your time and efforts in some measure to meet our national needs?"

"WOODROW WILSON, President."

Echoes From the Firing Line

July 16, 11 p. m.

Dear Mother:

Have been on the go since 2:30 this morning, but still feel pretty spry. Send me 1 nail-clipper, 3 cartons Fatimas, 1 doz. cans Prince Albert. I got the bundle and put on the pj's for the first time since May. It was great, but it didn't last, as they routed us out at three, and I haven't tried again. It's bad sign.

While we read in the American papers about dog shows, June brides, etc., the Germans blew up four wards in a hospital about a mile from here, three nights ago. Wake up over there. Paul

What Our Library is Doing

The following report for August is made by Mrs. Sydney Yard, Librarian:

Books entered, 38—by purchase 20, by gift 18.

Total number of volumes in the Library, 8542.

New card holders added, 52.

Circulation—Fiction, 985; non-fiction, 140; Juvenile, 172; magazines, 187; total 1484.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

The annual prizes offered by the Poetry Society of America for the best poems read at its monthly meetings, 1916-17, have been awarded to Sara Teasdale and Edwin Markham.

At the M. E. Conference at Pacific Grove, Rev. Stephen C. Thomas was re-appointed to Carmel. On Sunday morning Mr. Thomas will preach on "The revelation of God in the beauty and gladness of life."

"If I were a member of the United States Senate," says Theodore Roosevelt, "I would be ashamed to sit there without finding some method to remove Robert M. La Follette from the seat he disgraces."

The Carmel Church League thanks those who were patrons and helpers at the recent food sale. $80 was received.

On Monday evening last, at Monterey, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Leidig, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Wyatt, and Robert Leidig were initiated into the American Yeoman order.

The Carmel Red Cross chapter monthly meeting will be held at the City Hall on Monday afternoon next. This is also the day for the annual meeting. There should be a large attendance.

GINGERBREAD

Three tablespoons melted butter, 1 cup sour milk, 1 cup New Orleans molasses, 1/2 cup sugar (scant), 1 teaspoonful (even) soda, 1 teaspoon (good) ginger, a pinch of salt and cinnamon, which latter may be added if desired. Make a medium thick batter with flour, well sifted; and lastly add one egg, well beaten. Cream butter and sugar; add milk, with soda dissolved in it, then ginger, molasses, flour and egg. Bake in an oven which is not too quick,

Interesting Happenings

The ladies who attended the card party given by Miss McLean and Mrs. Koth at the Highlands had a most enjoyable afternoon. Tomorrow evening a number of young folks have been invited to attend a "down-and-out party."

For the purpose of looking into the matter of preserving the historic edifices on Monterey Peninsula, State Engineer W. F. McClure and State Architect G. B. McDougall were here last week.

The League of California Municipalities is in session at Santa Rosa. Carmel-by-the-Sea is represented by Trustee A. P. Fraser.

The rhythmic music of the hammer and the saw goes merrily on at Carmel Highlands. At the Inn reservations are already being made for Thanksgiving week.

Next week is Teachers' Institute at Asilomar. The local school will be closed.

La Playa News Notes

The marriage of Miss Maud I. Lyons and Mr. Calvin C. Hogle took place at Palo Alto last Saturday. Dr. Little, the officiating clergyman, is a cousin of the bride. The honeymoon will be spent in Santa Cruz mountains.

Mrs. Reed B. Cherington and Mrs. William H. Chickering are here for a short visit. Mrs. Cherington will leave soon for American Lake, to be near her husband, who is in the Army.

The Blue Bird Tea Room has been sold to Miss M. Hunkins of San Jose, who will conduct it on the same lines as has Mrs. Arndt.

Recently Miss O'Sullivan had as luncheon guests Miss Bray and Mrs. Oscar Sutro and children.

Judge and Mrs. Ralph Harrison will occupy a suite at La Playa for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. J. F. Weihe has returned to Berkeley, from whence she will go to Crystal Springs for an extended stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Duncan, from McGill, Nev., are charmed with Carmel and its surrounding country. Mrs. Signor hopes to locate them on a large tract at the Highlands. The Duncan would be a social addition as well as enthusiastic builders. Mr. Duncan is connected with the Guggenheim interests.

Mrs. Maude Arndt, Mrs. M. A. Young, Mrs. Goodman, and Mrs. A. D. Signor will motor to San Diego, leaving about October 5.

There is a decided falling off in arrivals since the schools opened. A little later on our Eastern clientele will begin to register.

Recent arrivals:

San Francisco—Judge and Mrs. Ralph Harrison, W. H. Wilson, D. R. Agnew, Miss Agnew, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Connor, Mr. and Mrs. L. Paston and chauffeur.

Cleveland—Miss M. E. Blake-more.

Our Weekly Recipe

BANANA PUDDING

Six bananas, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, one-half cupful of breadcrumbs, one-half cupful of chopped nuts, one table-spoonful of cornstarch.

Gradually dissolve the cornstarch in the milk and mix with the banana pulp. Add sugar, then place a layer of the mixture in the bottom of a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle over this some of the mixed bread crumbs and nuts. Sprinkle the top with powdered sugar and bake in a moderate oven for about 45 minutes. This can be served with a plain sauce if desired.
