"Since the World War we are finding in every modern progressive schoolroom not only pictures of foreign countries and books containing their folk tales and modern literature, but a Victrola and the native folk songs and folk dances of every country, from which the children study the customs, the occupations, the modes of living and the ideas of all foreign people, because it has been found that in the natural music of a people we find the people reflected just as they are and we find that their music is the spontaneous expression in song of joy or horror, of freedom or oppression about their work or their play."

Perry B. Whitsit Is Toastmaster

The culminating feature of the convention was a banquet at which Perry B. Whitsit, president of the Perry B. Whitsit Co., was the toastmaster. Don Johns, of the Johns Music Store, Lima, O., offered a number of delightful songs. On the program with Mr. Johns was John Saum, Rike-Kumler Co., Dayton, O., and Earl Murdock, of Ironton.

At the business session Mrs. Esther Reynolds Beaver, educational director of the Perry B. Whitsit Co., was appointed assistant secretary of the Association by the chairman, Mr. King.

DENISON SHOP ENLARGES STOCK

HONOLULU BOASTS MOST ATTRACTIVE MUSIC WAREROOMS

Headquarters of the Thayer Piano Co. as Artistic and Complete as Any Retail Music Establishment to Be Found in the U. S.—Business Now Controlled by Arthur F. Thayer

The bulletin of the Rotary Club of Honolulu, T. H., of which organization Arthur F. Thayer is a member, recently had the following to say regarding the development of the business of the

Mr. Thayer brought with him a line of pianos which, from his wide experience in the trade, had convinced him would make friends for his organization wherever they were sold. After

View of the Warerooms of the Thayer Piano Co., Honolulu, T. H.

Thayer Piano Co., of that city, which indicates that there is much interest in music in the Hawaiian capital:

Back in the Summer of 1905 Leonard E. Thayer, a man who had been identified with the piano business for about forty years—in fact, ever since he retired from the army at the close of the Civil War—came to Honolulu and founded the Thayer Piano Co.

nearly seventeen years of successful retailing the Thayer Piano Co. is still selling the same line of pianos, including Steinway, Starr, Richmond, Remington, Apollo, A. B. Chase, Francis Bacon and Gulbransen. Hundreds of these instruments have been sold all over the islands and wherever there is a customer of the Thayer Piano Co. he proves to be a booster for its goods and its service.

In 1912 the business was incorporated, and in 1915 the Thayer Piano Co., Ltd., moved into its present location at the corner of Hotel and Union streets. In the Fall of 1920 the company changed its previous policy as an exclusive piano house by taking on the wholesale agency of the Columbia Graphophone Co. In the warerooms of the company there is now the largest stock of Grafonolas and Columbia records ever carried by any firm in this territory. The stock of records alone numbers over 40,000, comprising almost every number in the Columbia library.

The store of the Thayer Piano Co. was remodeled recently and a set of sound-proof demonstration rooms added. These are by far the best-arranged and best-ventilated in the city, the air of each room constantly changing by the use of a large electric blower, which is located in the basement, and keeps the air always pure and cool in the booths and does away with the noisy electric fans.

Leonard E. Thayer, founder of the piano company, died early in the year 1917 and since that time the business has been conducted by his son, Arthur F. Thayer, who is the treasurer and manager of the company.

A view of the modern and attractive quarters of the Thayer Piano Co., now located at 148-150 Hotel street, Honolulu, is presented herewith and indicates that the Hawaiian store compares most favorably with the average musical instrument emporium in the States.

THE MAN WHO LEARNS SUCCEEDS

There is an old adage which says that "You can't teach an old dog new tricks." Like so many of these old sayings, this is a falsehood. Of course, old habits of thought and methods of doing things stick with a man, but if he allows himself to remain in a rut he certainly can't expect to succeed in the talking machine or any other business. There are new ideas galore, and no man is so smart that he can't learn by the experiences of others. The trade papers are a valuable help in bringing the experiences of other merchants to the attention of dealers.

EPSTEIN WITH KNICKERBOCKER CO.

Will Cover Metropolitan District for Victor Distributors—Sales Staff Numbers Five—Employees With Company Covered by Insurance

Louis Epstein, who has had many years' experience in Victor merchandising, has now joined the sales organization of the Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co., Victor wholesaler, New York City. Mr. Epstein will cover the metropolitan district. The Knickerbocker sales staff now numbers five and is energetically devoting its time to co-operation with the dealer in his many problems.

The record cleaners produced by the Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co., with the dealer's imprint, are gaining steadily in popularity, not only in this country, but abroad. Two thousand were recently shipped to Porto Rico and another substantial order to Japan.

Abram Davega, vice-president, has announced a new policy of the company, whereby the various employees will be covered with life insurance at the expense of the company. These policies will be issued on the lives of all employees who have been with the company one year or more and most of the policies will be governed by the length of service. This new move is in direct keeping with an admirable policy of the Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co., which for many years has shown solicitude for its employees.

Music alone ushers man into the portal of an intellectual world, ready to encompass him, but which he may never encompass. That mind alone whose every thought is rhythm can embody music, can comprehend its mysteries, its divine inspirations, and can alone speak to the senses of its intellectual revelations.—Beethoven.

THE VICSONIA IN GREAT BRITAIN

James Smith, of Liverpool, Appointed Distributor for the Vicsonia Reproducer for All of Great Britain With Exception of Ireland

William J. Sess, manager of the Vicsonia Mfg. Co., New York, makers of the Vicsonia reproducers for playing Edison records on Victor and Columbia machines, reports the appointment of James Smith, of Liverpool, England, as distributor for the Vicsonia for all of Great Britain with the exception of Ireland.

Mr. Smith has already received a substantial stock of Vicsonias in order to enable him to fill British orders promptly, and expressed himself as being most enthusiastic over that reproducer and its possibilities. A number of Vicsonias have already been sold direct in England and have met with much success there, so that the future for that reproducer in Great Britain seems very bright.

Negotiations are now under way for the establishment of a distributor in Ireland, and it is probable that in the near future arrangements will be made for local distribution of the Vicsonia in other countries, including South Africa, where the Vicsonia has won such a distinct position for itself.

WHAT IS "MORALE" IN BUSINESS

An Elucidation by F. L. Henderson of the More or Less Hazy Conception of the Value and Purpose of Morale in Conduct of Business

A great many people, members of the business world, seem to have a more or less hazy conception of what constitutes business morale; and in this connection it may prove interesting to read what F. L. Henderson, business counselor of the La Salle Extension University, recently said on this subject in "The Dodge Idea":

"Morale is made up of three parts—interest, confidence and satisfaction. Work without interest is drudgery, and one cannot do efficient work when there is no interest manifested. Possibly the biggest job that executives have before them is to inject a larger amount of interest than there exists at the present time. The second element, confidence, makes a man's task become relatively simple when he has confidence in the people for whom he is working, in the institution for which he is working and in the position he holds; but in the absence of confidence there is the possibility of a great measure of criticism on the part of the employe, a destructive criticism which provokes a feeling of distrust, not only on the part of the man who is especially interested, but on the part of everybody with whom he is identified. And then comes the third element—the question of satisfaction. How much joy there comes into the life of a man who is absolutely satisfied with the thing that he is doing, satisfied with himself. Many people think that they are going to make the unusual, the phenomenal success, by easy methods. Success cannot be obtained that way. This life does not work on any hit-or-miss plan or schedule. Success does not come because of unusual opportunity, but success does come when the unusual opportunity is recognized by doing the uncommon things in life in the uncommon way."

MOVING PICTURES OF VOICE MADE

"Color Music" Recorded on Screen by Los Angeles Invention—Produced by Sound Vibrations on a Series of Tuning Forks

LOS ANGELES, CAL., March 2.—Motion pictures of the voice in color is the latest development in this home of the movie. It is the newest thing in "color music" and records tone in colors on the screen just as the regular camera records motion. The voice of the singer or the tones of any musical instrument or of an orchestra are thereby shown in color as the music is heard. The new color music is produced by the sound vibrations on a series of tuning forks.

Each fork is attuned to a particular note and its vibrations produce an electrical connection that releases certain geometric color forms when a light behind these forms projects them to the screen on the stage. The sound is carried to the machine containing the music forks over a telephone wire that is connected with a telephone receiver in front of the singer or the musical instrument that is furnishing the music to be translated into color.

Any number of the forks may operate at one time to represent the number of tones similarly received, and the result on the screen is a combination of colors something like those produced by a kaleidoscope, except that they are much more brilliant and regular in their form. Each note of the voice or instrument has its own geometric form and, therefore, this combination brings out some remarkably beautiful effects on the screen.

There is one feature that will cause some well-known singers to shy the new color music instrument. Its record is perfect and it will record a sharp or flat just as readily as the perfect sound. For instance, if the singer sounds a note flat the figure representing the note will rotate to the left and if sharp to the right. When the note is perfect the colored figure representing it stands perfectly still and clear until the sound ends and another note is taken up, when the figure disappears and another comes in its place.

This feature, however, is believed to have its advantages, as the singer, by watching the colors on the screen, may see clearly when an imperfect note is sounded and would, therefore, be able to correct it by hard practice. Also, this may make the color music screen valuable in training young singers.

The new color music scheme is the idea of W. M. Thomas, of Los Angeles, and it has been tried out with considerable success. It is said to be an improvement over all other color music instruments, as it can be carried about as easily as a moving picture projector. Its total size is about that of two suit cases. It is easy to operate, say those who have tried it, and ought to prove popular with singers, as it gives them a chance to "see the color of their voices." Also, it has the added virtue of making concerts interesting to the deaf, who may not be able to hear the singing, but will be able to "watch the color of the voice" as it is projected to the screen.

NEW VICTOR NUMERICAL CATALOG

Latest Volume Lists All Records Issued Prior to January 1, 1922

The Victor Talking Machine Co. has just issued a new numerical list of Victor records for 1922, including all records announced prior to the January, 1922, supplement, and including, in addition, some thirty records listed without previous announcement, among them nine piano records by Novaes, three records by Sothern, three by Sothern and Marlowe, fourteen by Caruso, and one by Caruso and Amato.

The new numerical list also offers a new grouping of foreign and domestic selections, according to nationality, all of which are listed numerically.

By careful use of the numerical list the Victor dealer is in a position to keep an accurate account of records in stock, the relative demand for the various records and the volume of sales made during a given period.

The Radio Devices International was recently chartered under the laws of the State of Delaware, with a capital of $250,000.

Proper Handling of the Customer in the Store Results in Increased Business :: By Frank V. Faulhaber

"Make the most of your opportunities when people are in your store," advised a successful talking machine dealer. "Too often possibilities are neglected when, by a little added energy, more sales would easily result. Let the people know you have the goods."

This is indeed sound logic, and it behooves the talking machine dealer who wishes to develop more sales to interest all people who enter his establishment in the merchandise he handles.

Now, just how do sales sometimes materialize, when the dealer goes out after them, in a way that some merchants would hardly think possible? There is always the possible sale, the sale of the future, to keep sight of. There are a few dealers who will not take any steps whatever in interesting people to the extent of purchasing other goods aside from the articles for which they entered. Some dealers will say it is only so much useless effort and the results do not justify it.

Yet how many talking machine dealers neglect to interest people in their goods, such as accompany friends to help select a machine? Indeed, most of them overlook this important point. Let us, by all means, show how it sometimes works out when the dealer really strives to augment sales which ordinarily should never develop.

There is one retailer of talking machines who never hesitates to win the interest of the people who accompany friends who buy. When he has succeeded in selling the machine for which the friend enters he thereupon turns his attention to the other people. On one occasion, despite all refusals to look over his stock, the talking machine dealer nevertheless, through his insistence, induced the second person to examine the machines. The man who had accompanied the friend who bought knew something about talking machines, while the other did not. "It's not necessary for you to buy—I simply want to show you some more of our machines. Perhaps you will want to buy one later, or another friend may be interested." In this wise had the dealer overcome the second man's objections.

When that man went out of his establishment he was thoroughly enlightened as to the kind of machines this dealer had in stock. A few months later a young woman visited the store to buy a machine. Upon conclusion of the transaction she informed the dealer his store had been recommended—and by the man whom the dealer had taken the time to interest in the machines a short time before.

Had this progressive talking machine dealer's efforts been all for naught? Do you think he would have turned this particular sale had he been less aggressive, less determined to show the man the machines he had in stock? Do you see how sales sometimes are not made in your store, sales that readily should result, provided only a little added effort is exerted to win them?

Make the most of your opportunities! There will always be time available on occasions when the talking machine dealer can urge his visitors to examine the merchandise. Even though an immediate sale does not develop! You are looking to the future, striving for those sales that normally would never be made. Next time when you and your salesmen are at liberty interest all prospects. You will then be putting that time to good use and be on the way for many an indirect sale that otherwise likely would go to a competitor.

FAVOR C. O. D. MAIL PLAN

Business Interests Strongly Indorsing Suggestion as Calculated to Help Sales

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—Congressional mails are full of petitions urging the adoption of the C. O. D. mail plan proposed by Congressman MacGregor, of New York. If this plan is adopted it will be possible, for instance, for the traveling salesman of a concern to leave with customers and prospective customers a supply of order blanks in card form on the reverse side of which would be printed the name and address of his firm and in the right-hand corner a permit announcement under which the card would be carried in the mails without a stamp affixed thereto, collection being made at destination.

Proponents of the legislation point out that the greatest returns from mail-order solicitation are where return cards bearing stamps for mailing are used. It has, however, been found that this is a very expensive method of advertising, because so many people remove the stamps from the cards and put them to other uses. The Government is not benefited by this.

The scheme would have its advantages also from the standpoint of the retailer, for he would not have to bother to affix a stamp to a card, but could fill it out and drop it in the mail "as is."

No adjustments necessary when changing from lateral to vertical cut records. Stop prevents swinging to the right.

Needle scratch almost entirely removed.

Turning back of Reproducer permits of easy access to needle socket and saves records from unnecessary scratching.

Is the ONLY equipment that plays vertical cut records in the proper "EDISON" position with the Reproducer turned FACE DOWN to the record, giving it a floating action.

Needle CENTERS on all records.

Straight air-tight construction and absence of movable joints insure perfect reproduction and great volume.

Pivoted ball-joint insures perfect reproduction and freedom of movement both vertically and horizontally.

Weight is the lightest that can produce perfect results, thus saving the record, and permitting a freedom and sweetness of tone considered impossible.

PEORIA, ILL., March 8.—With the object of promoting whatever may benefit the Victrola and Victor record business, as well as of encouraging good fellowship among its members, about fifty or more Victor dealers who attended the Putnam-Page convention banquet at the Jefferson Hotel, this city, got together immediately after the banquet and launched the Central Illinois Victor Dealers' Association. The membership is confined exclusively to Victor dealers located in the central Illinois territory.

F. M. Leslie, President

The launching of this new association was a surprise to the majority of those present. It came about in the following manner:

The speaker of the evening during the convention banquet had been John Gregg Paine, of the Victor Talking Machine Co. Immediately after his speech a number of the dealers were asked to give little talks. Someone started talking about co-operation and organization, and when it got around to the time for F. M. Leslie, Victor dealer of Urbana, Ill., to talk, he popped the question, "How about forming a Central Illinois Victor Dealers' Association?" He put up a very fine argument, which was applauded roundly, and immediately after his talk a nomination committee consisting of Ray Miller, Dixon, Ill.; A. R. Meyer, Havana, Ill., and R. N. Smith, of Carthage, Ill., were selected to fill these positions. These gentlemen retired for about fifteen minutes and came back with the names of the following men, who were unanimously elected: F. M. Leslie, Urbana, president; L. S. Putnam, Peoria, secretary, and Lyle Straight, Peoria, treasurer.

The organization committee named are: Lyle Straight, Peoria; F. L. Fell, Peoria, and O. D. Ehrlicher, of Pekin. Membership lieutenants, whose duty it is to bring the attention of all Victor dealers in that section to the new organization, are: Ray Miller, Dixon; R. N. Smith, Carthage; A. B. Meyer, Havana; E. Froyd, Paxton; F. E. Wollett, Peoria; G. E. Lester, Hoopston; W. L. Barnett, Watseka; F. L. Fell, Peoria; R. L. Berry, Springfield, and Miss W. C. Requarth, Ottawa.

RUSSELL & LAWRIE OPEN STORE

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., March 3.—Russell & Lawrie, Inc., of this city, have purchased the stock of Victor machines, records and equipment of the music business conducted by Louis Guff. The new concern has just completed extensive alterations to its quarters. The Victor line is handled.

The Grand Rapids Talking Machine Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., has dissolved.

VOCALION DISTRIBUTORS ON COAST

Magnavox Co., of San Francisco, and Commercial Associates, of Los Angeles, to Handle the Vocalion Red Records in Pacific Coast Territory—Company Branch to Be Closed

W. H. Alfring, wholesale manager of the Aeolian Co., New York, who returned last week from a transcontinental business trip, reported that while on the Pacific Coast he completed arrangements with the Magnavox Co., of San Francisco, to handle the Aeolian-Vocalion records in that territory, and that in Los Angeles these records will be handled in the future by the Commercial Associates, who will cover the entire southern section of California. The Aeolian-Vocalion distributive branch, which has heretofore been maintained in San Francisco, will shortly be discontinued, as the company feels that the new representatives are entirely competent to cover this territory without direct representation. Horace M. Hull, who has been in charge of the San Francisco branch, will return to New York as soon as these arrangements are completed.

Both of these new Aeolian-Vocalion record representatives are thoroughly familiar with the policies of the Aeolian Co. and are enthusiastic over the prospects which this representation gives them. They are making arrangements to push the Aeolian-Vocalion records intensively throughout their respective territories, on the same high plane in which the Aeolian Co. is accustomed to do business. The Aeolian-Vocalion has already been highly successful among dealers and buyers in the Pacific Coast territory and the groundwork which has already been laid will, no doubt, be widely extended under these new arrangements.

ANNOUNCE FISCHER PHONOGRAPH

J. & C. Fischer, Inc., Well-known New York Piano Manufacturers, Enter the Manufacture of Talking Machines—One of the Oldest Manufacturers of Pianos in the Country

Announcement was made this month by J. & C. Fischer, Inc., 417 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, of the production of the Fischer phonograph, which will be made in two cabinet models and two table models. These instruments will be furnished in mahogany or walnut. The upright models will be known as Styles 100 and 110, while the table models are designated Styles 140 and 150.

J. & C. Fischer are one of the oldest piano manufacturing concerns in the country, having been established in 1840. They have always been well known for the high standard of quality of their products. They maintain a thoroughly equipped and modern factory at the address above, and during their career have produced over 150,000 pianos and player-pianos.

Buyers of talking machines and records are actuated by the law of self-interest. This means that it is necessary to convince them that a machine is worth the price before there is the slightest hope of closing the sale.

Why You Should Sell Sonora Phonographs

Reason Three—

Sonora Advertising

Just as Sonora itself was a marked achievement in phonograph making from the first, Sonora advertising has been of a distinct, impressive character. Never swerving from its message of Sonora quality, it has carried conviction and the pride of ownership to prospective phonograph buyers.

The result is, Sonora dealers sell under the most favorable conditions possible. Even before customers enter a store and ask for a demonstration, they anticipate satisfaction.

The fact that Sonora has always been associated with prestige, gives the dealer a strong, initial advantage.

From year to year, Sonora advertising continues to build upon solid foundations, and the dealer who features this line efficiently will never regret the choice.

Since its introduction the Intermzzo has met with a widespread demand among those wishing a medium-priced Sonora upright with all the tone, beauty and features for which Sonora is celebrated. Plays all disc records. Finished in Golden and Fumed Oak, American Walnut, Brown Mahogany or Mahogany.

Persistent and Energetic Canvassing a Most Vital Aid in Making Talking Machine Sales

There are some parts of this country where canvassing is made an intensive occupation—where men are turned out to make their living by canvassing and have to get results to cover their expenses. Canvassing of this sort does not follow the lines of the easiest way of selecting likely looking names or those people in specially favorable circumstances and soliciting them direct. As a matter of fact, it means calling on everybody in the town and finding out just how they stand as prospects for musical instruments or supplies. Perhaps the individual may not be in the market for a player grand or even a talking machine, but he may need some records, and if the canvasser can induce him to buy them from the house he represents, then the sale helps to pay the canvasser's expenses.

A veteran piano traveler who returned from a trip through the West recently and had occasion to stop at a small Kansas town witnessed a worth-while demonstration of just what real canvassing means. While in the town, which has a population of less than 3,500, the traveler ran across the real honest-to-goodness canvasser representing one of the big music houses in another city. This man had been in the town for two days. The first day he called on 135 people and booked 17 prospects for pianos and talking machines, and on the second day called on over 140 people and reported 19 prospects for instrument sales in addition to prospects for smaller sales which he had picked up casually on his rounds.

To call on 135 people in one day is not in any sense a six or eight hour job. It means working from the finish of an early breakfast to the time when the good people of the town are ready for "lights out." It means a call every four minutes of a ten-hour day, and a man has to move some to keep up the pace, but, as the canvasser explained it, he had eight children, one of whom was going through college, and he simply had to hustle to get the money.

His visiting card was simply a cheap tape measure a yard long bearing the imprint of the house he represented. When the lady of the house came to the door he presented the tape measure with the compliments of his employers. By the time she had looked it over he had made his introduction and worked up from that point. In one instance a man did not want a piano or talking machine, but in the course of conversation hinted he might be able to use a new violin bow. He was immediately directed to the store represented by the canvasser and made his purchase there. The individual who could be persuaded to buy a harmonica for his boy or some new strings for his daughter's ukulele was also directed to headquarters. All was grist that came to the canvasser's mill and he displayed to the traveling man figures that indicated that even small sums gathered regularly grow into a substantial amount in the end.

The average canvasser who makes fifty or sixty calls a day is to be regarded very favorably in most sections of the country, so that the man who can interview 135 or more householders is unquestionably getting action. The point to be emphasized is not the unusual number of calls made, but rather the fact that an effort was put forth to make each call produce some results, and in the final analysis the work of the canvasser referred to and the success that was his portion provides a strong argument for the general music store idea, the moral being that if a prospect cannot be landed as the buyer of one article he may prove an excellent prospect for something else.

It may be that every man will not make a successful canvasser. He may not have the ambition, the personality or the faculty of absorbing rebuffs and still keep going, but results prove that intensive canvassing, even in the larger cities, if persisted in and carried on by men of the right caliber, will get sufficient results to make it a paying proposition and keep the stock moving.

Not long ago a big retail concern in the East handling pianos and talking machines rounded up thirty-five young men and told them to go out into the field and look for piano and talking machine prospects, with the promise that the five or six who showed the best results and the greatest ability during the month would be attached permanently to the payroll. The number of prospects for piano and talking machine sales that were turned in by these three dozen canvassers and the actual sales that resulted proved a revelation even to the manager who first conceived the idea. The experiment accomplished two things—it built up an excellent prospect list and provided the company with a half dozen young salesmen who had proven their ability in actual practice.

Canvassing may be the tough road to sales, and particularly hard on the salesmen who have had some years of comfortable wareroom selling with the prospects dropping in of their own volition. But it is the sort of hard-fisted selling that has made piano and talking machine business in the past and is making it right now for those who have seen the light and persisted.

PREPARING FOR NEW YORK'S THIRD ANNUAL MUSIC WEEK

C. M. Tremaine, Assisted by a Large and Influential Committee, Is Rapidly Formulating Plans for the Third Annual Observance of Music Week, to Be Held From April 30 to May 6

The work of preparation for New York's third annual Music Week has been actively under way for the past few months and plans are now clearly mapped out for the observance of the week from April 30 to May 6, inclusive. The committee in charge of the work is a most representative one, with Otto H. Kahn acting again as honorary chairman. C. M. Tremaine, director of the National Bureau for the Advancement of Music, who formerly served as secretary for the committee, is now the active chairman, with Miss Isabel Lowden as director.

Members of the committee include Philip Berolzheimer, city chamberlain; Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler; Edward F. Albee, president of the Keith Circuit of Theatres; Melza Chaffee, president, Association of Music School Settlements; Kenneth S. Clark, of the Community Service; Mrs. Walter S. Comly, president, New York State Federation of Women's Clubs; George H. Gartlan, Director of Music, Public Schools; Charles D. Isaacson; Mrs. J. F. D. Lanier, president, Society Friends of Music; Richard W. Lawrence; Berthold Neuer, of the American Piano Co.; Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Charles H. Ditson, Rev. Father Francis P. Duffy, Thomas A. Edison, Mrs. Julian Edwards; Dr. William L. Ettinger, city superintendent of schools; Lynnwood Farnam, American Guild of Organists; Harry Harkness Flagler; Mrs. Arthur M. Reis, chairman People's Music League; Hugo Reisenfeld; Franklin W. Robinson, American Orchestral Society; S. L. Rothafel; Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, J. Fletcher Shera, Theodore E. Steinway, Rodman Wanamaker and Edward Zeigler, of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

Several meetings of the general committee have been held at which fundamental policies have been decided upon and various portions of the work assigned. There are also special committees on churches, church organists, public schools, private schools, colleges and universities, music clubs and organizations, music school settlements, state federation of women's clubs, foreign groups, mercantile and industrial organizations, music industries, concert managers, city government, Y. M. C. A.'s and Boy Scouts organizations.

Publicity material in the shape of posters, stickers and envelope slips will soon be ready for distribution to the trade in and around New York. Ways will also be suggested for dealers' co-operation in this great demonstration to concentrate public attention upon music and to impress all the people with the benefits it can give.

HOW MUSIC AIDS BLIND TO READ

Letters in Text of Book or Paper Placed in Device Known as the "Optophone" Transferred to Music Enable Blind to Read

An interesting device known as the "Optophone," invented by Prof. E. E. Fournier d'Albe, by which the blind, through the medium of rays of light converted into sounds of harmony, are enabled to read newspapers and books, was successfully demonstrated recently in Jersey City, N. J.

In the Optophone light projected by a tiny photograph lens streams through five rows of oblong perforations in a revolving disc and is reflected back and transformed into sound by means of selenium cells.

To the observer these rays of light appear to correspond to the five parallel bars of a musical staff, producing, as they pass over each letter, five notes of the musical scale, as follows: Sol, do, re, mi and sol again on a high key.

By way of illustration the electric carriage bears the tiny shaft of light, with its five parallel bars, slowly along under the row of printed letters on the down-turned page. In a curved letter, "C" for example, the outer curve first comes in contact with the light at the line or space which corresponds to the vocal syllable "re." Then, as the light proceeds over the letter, the vibrant tone first produced slurs to "do" and "mi" simultaneously. In the letter "T" the high syllable sounds first, as the upper part of the letter comes in contact with the light; then the full five-note chord as the light rays cross the upright part of the letter, only to revert again to the high tone. The combined effect is charming to the ear of the reader. It is unheard by everyone else.

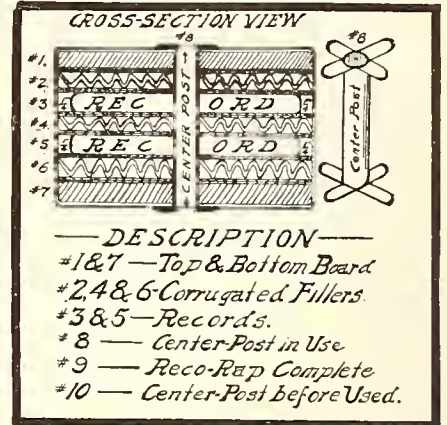

Selenium, it was explained by those who have been testing the Optophone, has the peculiar property of offering a high resistance to the passage of electricity, which is broken down to a marked degree when light shines upon it. It is sometimes called "the electrical eye" because it is affected by light. The musical notes of the Optophone are produced, therefore, as the printed letter passes between the selenium and the light. In capital letters the notes are of greater intensity than when the type is small.

NEW COLUMBIA SLIDES

Series of Movie Slides in Color Now Ready for Distribution to Retail Dealers

The advertising department of the Columbia Graphophone Co. has issued a new series of hand-colored movie slides which are being used by Columbia dealers throughout the country. The slides are designed in full color and the New Series of Columbia Movie Slides imprint portion is tied into the slide so that it appears as though the slides were made expressly for the particular dealer using them.

An organization in which every unit pulls in a different direction is liable to collapse. There must be team work between the members of the sales staff, the salesmen and the manager, and both of these with the employer.

When Knowledge Means Sales—'Tis Folly to be Ignorant

By ROBERT N. STANNARD

A man entered a store which dealt in talking machines and records and asked if there were any records by Chaliapin.

"Sharlpin?" asked the salesgirl. "You don't mean Charley Chaplin, do you?"

"No," answered the prospect, "I mean Chaliapin, the Russian basso."

"Never heard of him," answered the girl in tones that indicated that therefore Chaliapin didn't exist for her.

"No?" answered the man, no longer a prospect. "He's been in the newspapers very much of late."

Then he turned and went out. Thereby the saleslady lost not only a sale, but probably lost a customer.

For several days before this incident happened the Russian had been "turning 'em away" at the Metropolitan Opera House, yet this girl had no notion who he was. Could you blame the prospective customer if he reached the conclusion that such a saleslady would be equally helpless in aiding him in a selection of anything other than the latest jazz hits?

Buyers of classical and operatic records like to talk over their purchases with the salesman or saleslady. A talking knowledge of the events of the day in music goes a long way toward establishing pleasant relations that lead to regular sales.

Somewhere that man found a salesman who could tell him whether there were any Chaliapin records and who could talk intelligently of current events on the concert and operatic stage. What if the store had no Chaliapin records? The customer knew that here was a store that would be likely to have them as soon as they were out. He would also know that here was a salesman who could probably help him if he were to whistle some operatic air the name of which had escaped him. There is no question as to which store he would go for future purchases.

The other day a woman went into a well-known music store in Brooklyn and asked for "The Funeral March of a Marionette." Over the face of the saleslady came a blank expression. She had never heard of such a thing. The customer turned and went out, disgusted, before the saleslady had time to ask anyone who knew.

These are bona fide incidents seen and overheard by the writer. No doubt they have been repeated, with variations, hundreds of times.

A small local store may profit by the moral of these tales. A big one can, of course, but the small store may be able to take away business from the larger ones through employing someone who knows.

Spare minutes can be employed profitably in the reading of various catalogs, especially the little résumés of operas and nutshell histories of performers. Above all, a daily reading of current musical events in the newspapers would keep the ambitious salesman or saleswoman up-to-date on talking points.

Where knowledge means a boost in sales and commissions, for the love of money, why remain ignorant?

THE "FLEA" AND "BOW-WOW BLUES"

A Victor dealer, who is inclined to be a bit of a wag, noticed in the March list, among the dance records, "Bow-Wow Blues," while among the Red Seal records was the "Song of the Flea," and immediately wanted to know why two selections generally accepted as being closely related had not been made available on the same record.

Many a merchant has failed because he assumed a "public be d—d" attitude toward customers.

HOLIDAY CONTAINERS FOR RECORDS

Frederick Loeser & Co. Stimulate Record Sales by Placing Selected Records in Specially Decorated Envelopes for Holiday Use

A plan to take full advantage of the possibilities of holidays for increasing record sales has been inaugurated in the talking machine department of Frederick Loeser & Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., by W. H. Bishop, manager. The plan was first put into effect on St. Valentine's day. It consists simply of placing four or five selected records in an envelope on which have been placed decorations and verse suitable to the day. Circular letters and advertising in the local newspapers urge the giving of records in these containers as holiday gifts. On St. Valentine's day the envelope was decorated with a large red heart in spirit of the day and a few lines of verse. The plan was also used on Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays. Sales of Victor records were greatly stimulated in this manner.

The record compartment holds five Victor albums. The stationary top on this side provides a place for a lamp or ornament.

Well-known Talking Machine Man Takes Important Post With Silent Motor Corp.

Walter Magill, well known in Middle West talking machine circles, was recently appointed Western manager of the Silent Motor Corp., of Brooklyn, N. Y. Charles A. O'Malley, president of the concern, on his recent Western trip, closed the final negotiations for Mr. Magill's services and completed plans for a branch office.

The Chicago offices of the Silent Motor Corp. are located in the Consumers Building, 220 South State street, where a complete line of Silent motors is on display. It is the plan of the Silent Motor Corp. to maintain close contact with the Western purchasers of Silent motors, and Mr. Magill, while giving his special attention to sales work, will maintain efficiency service for Silent motor users.

Mr. Magill has a wide acquaintance among talking machine manufacturers, having formerly been sales manager of the Krasberg Engineering & Manufacturing Corp., and has more recently been identified with the H. G. Saal Co.

OGDEN'S SUCCESSFUL RETAIL DRIVE

Sell Many Victrolas IV and VI in Combination With Ogden You-Nit Stands

LYNCHBURG, VA., February 20.—J. B. Ogden, Inc., Victor retailer, of this city, has conducted an extensive campaign on Victrolas IV and VI in combination with the Ogden You-Nit stands. This concern reports that in the past three years prior to this campaign it sold not more than two or three dozen small Victrolas. The campaign was announced in local newspaper advertisements which brought immediate returns and created from one to three new customers a day. In commenting on this campaign, the company stated: "It brought to us total strangers who had never been in our place before, and, furthermore, it brought to us people who we know from personal knowledge would not have come in and voluntarily solicited or offered to purchase the low-priced instruments because of their social position. In fact, a number of them apologized for buying a small outfit and stated that they had decided instead of deferring their purchase to buy this outfit for the children. As a result of this campaign we were completely sold out on every small Victrola we had and were compelled to telegraph for a lot by express. Incidentally, two large machines were sold as a result of this sale and record sales have increased remarkably." The You-Nit stands which were featured with the table model Victrolas are produced by the Ogden Sectional Cabinet Co., also of this city.

HAS RANGE OF FIVE OCTAVES

A dispatch from Vienna says that the remarkable vocal range of a forty-four-year-old singer, Michael Prita, has caused a sensation. He made his debut before the Austrian Society of Experimental Phonetics recently and demonstrated a range of five octaves, a feat never before performed. His deepest note is the F, an octave below the bass staff—more than two octaves below the lowest note of a violin, and one note lower than the record held since the eighteenth century by the German bass singer, Fischer.

His bass notes are described as full and perfect, while his soprano notes are equal to those of the famous soprano singer, Moreschi, the soloist at St. Peter's, Rome.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—The Van Winkle Piano Co., of 1217 F street, this city, Victor dealer, is taking advantage of the fact that this is the diplomatic center of the country and is recognizing the possibilities for the sale of Victrolas and records to visitors from all parts of the world. Some of the company's recent advertising featured the export branch of the business. The value of the Style 50 portable Victrola as a means of enjoyment for people who travel was stressed. One of the advertisements stated in part that: "North, South, East and West—to every country in the world we ship Victrolas and Victor records. In China and Japan, in England, Belgium, France and Spain, in Norway and South Africa you'll find this peer of musical instruments."

PASTOR PAINTS A MUSICAL HEAVEN

Baptist Clergyman Describes a Heaven Where Music Lovers Will Find Happiness

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., February 27.—Music lovers will find pianos in heaven, just as everyone else will find just what he wants there, declared the Rev. Dr. James E. Norcross, of New York City, field secretary of the General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention, in an address here last week.

"Music is the war department of the Church," he declared, "but there are times when a prayer meeting is dead before it starts because the music kills it. Our singing is often terrible."

He told of a church that had been spending $150 annually for an organist and $150 annually for a choir. It bought a good talking machine and now spends $250 a year for fine records. "There isn't a man on God's earth who wouldn't rather listen to Evan Williams or the Lotus Quartet on a high-grade phonograph than to a mediocre choir," said the clergyman.

PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY

VICTOR ACTIVITIES IN IOWA

Opera Book Month a Signal Success—Campaign Planned and Executed by Mickel Bros.—News of the Victor Retailers in This Territory

DES MOINES, IA., March 4.—One of the most effective pieces of Victor publicity introduced recently in this territory was announced by the Mickel Bros. Co. in January, selecting February as the month to be known as "Opera Book Month" and asking every dealer in the State to lend his efforts in getting as many of these valuable books into the hands of their customers as possible. Each dealer was supplied with large posters for the windows and store and quantities of small circulars, which were mailed out with each supplement. The work was backed up with stirring sales letters, which were mailed to the dealer every few days, and the phrase "Opera Book Month" was brought before the dealer in as many different ways as possible.

To further stimulate the campaign three cash prizes, $25, $15 and $10, were offered to the dealers who installed the most effective windows and forwarded the photographs to the Mickel Bros. Co.

H. B. Sixsmith, sales manager of the Mickel Bros. Co., was responsible for the working of the campaign. "Our fondest hopes were more than realized," said Mr. Sixsmith. "While the margin of profit on the books was the same as any other item of Victor merchandise, still the greatest point gained is that we have gotten them into the hands of people who buy records. We are confident that the book will develop Red Seal business and many wonderful experiences in this respect are told by the dealers. During the month almost two thousand books were sold, which we consider so successful that we are going to make every February 'Opera Book Month' in Iowa."

Donahoe & Donahoe, Victor dealers, Ft. Dodge, suffered several thousand dollars' loss by water when fire destroyed a business block near them. A quantity of instruments were stored in the basement, which was completely flooded.

H. A. Beach, vice-president of the Unit Construction Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and H. Howison, traveler, recently visited the Mickel Bros. Co. Mr. Beach is very optimistic in regard to the outlook for equipment and closed several large deals in the State.

The Crary Co., of Boone, Ia., Victor retailer, is taking a musical census of the town and, judging from the sales which are coming in, the affair is a success. Six girls, with a kit of supplies and records, are canvassing the town and their work is backed up with a large amount of advertising, both outdoor and newspaper, moving picture films and evening recitals in the store. The Crary Co. owns one of the prettiest stores in the State and sells nothing but Victrolas. Jos. C. Britt is manager.

Thos. Saam has purchased the Victor stock of a retiring dealer and, in the future, will conduct an exclusive agency at Lansing, Ia. A complete department is already installed, with a competent force of salespeople.

The Mickel Bros. Co. held a series of district meetings throughout Iowa during the month of January which met with wonderful success. Geo. E. Mickel, president of the company, presided at the meetings. "Our meetings were a source of inspiration to me," said Mr. Mickel, in talking to The World representative. "Iowa, you know, is essentially an agricultural State and the recent rise in price of corn and wheat has done a lot toward putting the farmer in a better buying mood. We are already feeling the benefits. It was more than pleasing to note the growing optimistic feeling among the dealers and their confident opinion that 1922 would do a great deal toward bringing conditions back to normalcy."

President L. A. Murray, of the Iowa Victor Dealers' Association, has already begun arrangements for the fifth annual convention to be held in Des Moines this Summer. "Our last one," said Mr. Murray, "set such a high mark for us to follow that it will be rather difficult to arrange such a helpful as well as entertaining program as we had. However, every member can rest assured that it will be worth the time and money spent in attending. Our motto is 'Bigger and better every year.'" Mr. Murray owns an exclusive Victor store at Davenport, Ia.

W. G. Kennedy has purchased the controlling interest in the firm formerly known as the Kennedy-Gardner Co., Victor dealer, Iowa Falls, and in the future the business will be conducted under the name of W. G. Kennedy.

Axel Nelson, general manager of the Had-dorff Piano Co. retail stores, was a recent visitor to Des Moines. Mr. Johnson, manager of the headquarters at Rockford, Ill., was with him.

SCHEDULES OF THE REGINA CO.

Liabilities of Bankrupt Concern Given as $1,063,801 and Assets as $698,479

TRENTON, N. J., March 3.—The liabilities of the Regina Co., musical instrument manufacturer, of Rahway, N. J., are $1,063,801 and the assets $698,479, according to the schedule filed. The schedule comprises 200 pages and has been referred to Referee Atwood L. DeCoster. The liabilities include: Unsecured claims, $988,170; secured claims, $40,323; notes, $12,868; wages, $4,074, and taxes, $14,354. The assets are: Real estate, $103,000; cash, $193,000; bills, $59,943; stock, 242,903; machinery, $146,886; patents, $4,624; open accounts, $129,632, and bank deposits, $1,426. Bankruptcy proceedings were started against the Regina Co. some time ago in the United States District Court.

MULTUM IN PARVO

The average talking machine buyer is a self-respecting person and the salesman who adopts an air of superiority and condescension had better change his methods or quit. If he doesn't he will not hold his position very long.

Again We Wish to Impress Upon You

That the Mickel trade-mark has a practical significance as applied to our service to the Victor retailer.

There is no phase of the Victor dealers' problems that has not been thoroughly studied by our organization, and as a result of this study and investigation we are ready to help you along constructive, practical lines.

BRAIN WORK IN SALESMANSHIP A DECIDED ESSENTIAL

Chas. H. Kennedy, of the Kennedy-Schultz Co., Cleveland, Contributes Some Pregnant and Illuminating Remarks Which Will Be Read With Exceeding Interest by Our Aspiring Salesmen

"Take care of the big birds and the little ones will take care of themselves." That is the motto of Charles H. Kennedy, of the Kennedy-Schultz Co., of Cleveland, who represents the Granby Phonograph Corp. in Ohio, and in going on this motto Mr. Kennedy has been unusually successful with everything he has undertaken.

"When I was a young chap in the selling game," said Mr. Kennedy, talking to a representative of The World, "I had a boss who knew his business. As a sales manager Frank Randolph knew what was what and when Frank went out after a prospect he generally came back with the goods. Like the squirrel at the sight of Davy Crockett's gun, the prospect dropped down out of the tree when he saw Frank coming.

"I was with him for three years and when I went Frank said to me: 'Kennedy,' he said, 'I want to tell you a secret of success in selling anything. It is very simple, but it brings home the bacon. It has for me and I know it may for you. It consists of just three rules: First, go after the big fellow; second, see the big man, and, third, never fail to work like the devil with your head.'

"This is true. I find that the trouble with most salesmen is that however active they may be on their legs they lack imagination. They don't work with their brains. They go off half-cocked and thus waste a lot of powder and shot on birds that are no good when bagged.

"It is just as easy—even easier—to land the big bird as the little one. The big bird has the brains to understand your proposition and to grasp its possibilities, and he has the money to buy if it appeals to him.

"The little fellow lacks both. You talk your head off and when you get done he shakes his head. He can't see your proposition at all. Or, if he is sold, it may be that his credit is weak-kneed. Then you have had all your work for nothing.

"There is much more satisfaction in gunning for the real big bird. He listens keenly to your story. He gets your story point by point. When you get done he asks a few questions straight from the shoulder and then he gives you an order which he can pay for.

"You smile when I say, 'Gives you the order'. You think I am too cocksure. Well, maybe I am, but I never call on a man with the idea of selling him until I have satisfied myself by making sure of several points. The first of these is 'Can he use the merchandise? Is it economically right for me to sell him?' The second is, 'Can he pay for them?'

"Of course, his money may be all tied up. I can't very well know whether it is or not. But I can—and do—find out whether he is good for any bill he is willing to contract.

"That question as to whether it is right to sell him is one that is too often overlooked or ignored. I am selling Granby phonographs, not for to-day, but for to-morrow. I do not want to sell a man once and then be done with him. I want to be able to go back and get his order every time his stock needs replenishing and if I am not there I want him to mail me the order.

"Therefore, I don't want to load a man up with a lot of phonographs just because he has got the money to buy. He must be able to sell them. If he can't sell them, if he can't see an immediate market for my goods, what's the good of my selling him? I probably will have to take them back off his hands, and if I can't do that he will be stuck. He may not lose any actual cash, but he will be forced to liquidate at cut prices, doing him a lot of harm. He will be disgruntled and everyone that he meets will hear the story of the way he was treated.

"If a man can't make money selling your line you had better not sell him.

"The result of this philosophy is that I don't try to sell Granbys. What I sell is an opportunity for a dealer to make money. The goods themselves are the least consideration. Of course, they are right, so that when a dealer is sold on the proposition the order is waiting.

"By concentrating, then, on the big fellow I find the little fellow takes care of himself. There are a lot of people in the world who have got to follow a leader and most of the little fellows are followers. If you don't want their risk when they come to you with an order in their hand you can turn the order down with a clear conscience.

"If you begin at that end and sell the little fellow first it is just as hard to sell the big one later as it is the other way around, and you will find it hard sledding getting the little fellows' orders past your credit department."

Mr. Kennedy is the kind of a man usually called a live-wire. He has a head full of ideas and he can usually think of more than one at a time. He has acted on the advice that he gives and it has put him well up the ladder. He is not at the top by any means, but he is getting there fast and when he stands on the top round it is going to take a lot of pushing to make him lose his balance.

TRENTON STORE IS ENLARGED

TRENTON, N. J., March 4.—Joseph P. Fee, proprietor of the Record Shop, 236 North Warren street, has enlarged his store and made a number of other improvements to take care of increasing business. Mr. Fee was the first dealer to open a phonograph shop in Trenton, having started eight years ago with a practical experience in talking machines and their construction. The repair end of the business has been greatly enlarged.

VISITS VOCALION DISTRIBUTORS

Oscar W. Ray Makes a Swing Around the Circuit and Brings Back Most Encouraging Report Regarding Vocalion Record Business

Oscar W. Ray, manager of the wholesale Vocalion record department of the Aeolian Co., returned recently from a lengthy trip in the course of which he visited Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Memphis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Detroit and other cities, for the purpose of calling on Vocalion record distributors. Mr. Ray stated that he found the distributors in a thoroughly optimistic mood, all of them reporting very satisfactory business, with a distinct tendency toward increase.

The distributors are doing particularly well in the matter of establishing new dealers, and state that not only are many dealers making voluntary inquiries regarding the Vocalion agency but are arranging to handle that line exclusively. Marked progress was reported in several of the cities, due probably to more encouraging local conditions.

All along the line, declared Mr. Ray, both distributors and dealers expressed enthusiasm regarding the dance records being made by the Yerkes S. S. Flotilla Orchestra and the other organizations recording for Vocalion records.

PEARSON PIANO CO. IN NEW HOME

Prominent Music House of Worcester, Mass., in Commodious New Quarters—A. J. Pearson, Head of Concern, Well Known in Trade

WORCESTER, MASS., March 6.—The Pearson Piano Co., Alfred J. Pearson, treasurer, which has been doing business at 235 Main street for more than ten years, moved recently into a larger and especially attractive new home at 238 Main street. The change was marked by an open house, with concerts afternoon and evening by prominent local talent, and many friends of the long-established music house attended the opening and inspected the spacious new rooms.

The large floor space of the new store permits pleasing displays of the various makes of pianos and the Brunswick phonographs carried by the Pearson Piano Co. The excellently situated windows are full-length plate, allowing an attractive display arrangement.

Features are the spacious, sound-proof talking machine rooms. They are large and attractively furnished, permitting prospective purchasers to listen to records in absolute quiet and in artistic surroundings.

A private room, richly finished with black and gold as the color scheme, is called the Art Echo Room. Its main decoration is the A. B. Chase reproducing grand piano.

An innovation is the addition of a repair department, especially equipped for player instruments. This department has been placed in charge of Carl S. Eckberg, who for fifteen years was an inspector for the Simplex Player Action Co., of this city. The new quarters are very artistically arranged throughout and do credit to Mr. Pearson's good taste.

WHY HE CONTINUES A CLASSICIST

Neighbors Supply All the Popular Records and Thus High-class Records Are Accumulated

Judging from Smith's cabinet of phonograph records, he is what might be called a classicist. Outside of about a dozen dance records which he kept on hand for purely social reasons to entertain company, the collection was classical. His friends found this strange in view of his fondness for popular music, especially jazzy and Oriental strains.

However, the mystery was cleared up the other evening by a friend whose long standing made it not impolite to put blunt questions.

"Well," Smith admitted, "whatever taste for the classics I have developed, I owe it entirely to our next-door neighbors. Besides, they have saved me money. As soon as a new record comes out they buy it immediately and for the next couple of days I hear nothing else.

"Of course, by that time the song which has become the rage has been murdered and buried as far as I am concerned. Therefore, the money which I would spend on popular music which rarely lives beyond a few months I use on classical music which helps to cultivate a genuine taste for music."—The New York Sun.

TRAFFIC COP MAKES RECORDS

Patrolman Qu'nn, of New York Police, Records Two Live Accordion Solos

It is seemingly a far cry from regulating traffic at one of New York's busiest corners on Fifth avenue to playing an accordion for phonograph records, but Patrolman Frank Quinn, of the Traffic Squad of the New York Police Department, has done that little thing for the Vocalion records, the first appearing in the March list. Patrolman Quinn proves that the hand that stems traffic on Fifth avenue can draw some mighty fine music out of the accordion. His first record has on one side "The Cherry Blossom" and on the other "The Swallow's Tale."

The Yetter Investment Co. has been granted a charter of incorporation in Delaware to handle musical instruments, with a capital of $1,000,000.

LA VELLE CO. MAKES BOBOLINK LINE

Takes Over Bobolink Phonograph and Bobolink Books From A. C. Gilbert Co.—New Model Won Favor at Toy Fair—Officers of Company

NEW HAVEN, CONN., March 1.—The La Velle Mfg. Co., of this city, which recently took over the Bobolink phonograph and Bobolink books from the A. C. Gilbert Mfg. Co., which formerly produced this line, is featuring the Bobolink line strongly. This nursery phonograph, which is a toy in everything but the tone reproduction, consists of several models which retailed at $25. Immediately after the La Velle Mfg. Co. took over this new line it announced the production of a new model at $10 in stained oak with white panels upon which appears numerous attractive nursery designs. This new model attracted much attention when displayed at the Toy Fair held recently at the Hotel Breslin, New York City. William Huston, of toy fame, was in charge of the exhibit and reported that this new model also was very popular in Chicago. Mr. Huston will represent the Bobolink in the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast.

The La Velle Mfg. Co. specializes in girls' toys and has an excellent reputation in the toy trade. It is also building up a large clientele among talking machine dealers who are handling this non-competitive toy talking machine line. The Bobolink books are proving very popular and it is expected that the La Velle Co. will place a national advertising campaign behind these books in the near future. The officers of the La Velle Mfg. Co. are F. W. Gilbert, president and treasurer; R. R. Roberston, vice-president, and Frank Degnan, secretary.

BRUNSWICK SHOP CHARTERED

The Brunswick Phonograph Shop, Inc., of Indianapolis, Ind., has been granted a charter of incorporation under the laws of that State, with a capital of $30,000. The concern will deal in Brunswick machines and records exclusively.

SELLS PHONOGRAPH TO DEAF MAN

Steger & Sons Salesman Shows That Deafness Is No Handicap to the Fellow With Pep

Selling the talking machine to a deaf man would be considered in most quarters as representing the accomplishment of practically an impossible feat, but the Steger Magazine, published by Steger & Sons Piano Mfg. Co., tells in a recent issue how a salesman in the company's retail department in Chicago managed to do just that little thing. The story was as follows:

"One of the customers upon whom he waited was an elderly gentleman who had the misfortune of being very hard of hearing. It was very difficult to converse with him, not to speak of demonstrating a phonograph. But our salesman was resourceful. After the first call, which naturally was unsatisfactory, he persuaded the prospect to come in again. In the meantime our enterprising phonograph expert got busy and rigged up a device which would have done credit to a Goldberg cartoon.

"The material consisted of a pair of dictaphone hearing tubes and a 10-cent tin funnel. The funnel inserted in the end of the flexible rubber tube was held in the sound chamber of the Steger, while the customer put the prongs of the hearing tubes to his ears. Great results! The customer was happy as the deal was closed."

B. H. ROTH OPENS VICTOR SHOP

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., March 2.—An attractive new Victrola establishment was opened on Bergenline avenue here this week by B. H. Roth. The opening was marked by a concert and the large number of people who attended the event and exhibited their interest in the store augurs well for the success of the enterprise.

The International Music Co., of Los Angeles, has secured a lease on quarters at 229 West Third street. Talking machines, records, pianos, etc., are handled.

A. H. MAYERS OPENS NEW STORE

Well-known Talking Machine Dealer Now Has Elaborately Equipped Location on Broadway, New York, Known as "Symphony Hall"

A. H. Mayers, who has long been an active factor in the retail talking machine trade in New York, marked a new forward step on the evening of February 21 when he held the formal opening of his elaborate new store at 1989 Broadway, near Sixty-seventh street, only a few doors from his former location on the same block.

The opening of the new quarters, known as "Symphony Hall," was made the occasion for an elaborate concert and entertainment followed by dancing. The program served to attract a representative crowd which packed the commodious store from early in the evening till after midnight.

The new store is fitted up in a most elaborate manner, with a commodious foyer in the front leading into a broad aisle flanked on both sides by numerous booths. The woodwork is finished in mahogany throughout, and the walls in cream tints, with the exception of the foyer, where the walls are elaborately decorated with mural paintings. The lighting system is of the indirect type and serves to add materially to the general artistic effect.

The equipment throughout the store is most modern in every particular, and is thoroughly in keeping with the fine Broadway location.

REMODELING IN NEW PHILADELPHIA

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., February 27.—Alterations to the interior of the Gintz Co.'s store on West High street, now nearing completion, will give the concern 1,125 additional square feet of floor space. The new Victrola parlors are among the best in this section of the State. The balcony in the rear of the store has been enlarged for the convenience of the store's patrons.

Two additional booths have been provided for Victor record demonstrations, there now being six booths in all.

Trade Improves—Campaign to Unite Music Interests—Moody's Plans—Trade News

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 4.—Talking machine dealers report business gradually improving and if this improvement continues it will not be long until the volume of sales is up to the seasonal average. Dealers who made really intensive sales campaigns during February had little cause for complaint as to the volume of business transacted. Jobbers and distributing agencies say the effect of mid-Winter sales is apparent in stock orders, which are now being placed in increasing volume. Record sales are showing improvement and have been stimulated by the appearance at local theatres of many well-known record makers.

Talking machine men are taking a most prominent part in a campaign to unite all the music interests of the city into one organization. This campaign was discussed at the February meeting of the music group of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce. At this meeting C. N. Andrews, Victor jobber, was re-elected chairman of the group and T. A. Goold, of Goold Bros., was named vice-chairman.

Many valuable suggestions which will be followed in planning the campaign were made at this meeting by V. W. Moody, of the Buffalo Talking Machine Co.

The principal address of the meeting was made by George W. Pound, general counsel of the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Pound said the talking machine industry is but in its infancy. He predicted that the time will come when talking machine records will be used as a means of communication much as personal letters and telegrams are now employed. The machine industry is now in the midst of a new era, Mr. Pound said, where perfection of mechanism as well as beauty of cabinet are basic requirements.

V. W. Moody, for the past few years general manager of the Buffalo Talking Machine Co., Victor wholesaler here, and formerly sales manager of the New York Talking Machine Co., of New York City, will leave the talking machine business in the near future to join his brother in the manufacture of metal foil in Louisville, Ky. In addition to his other duties, Mr. Moody has been intimately associated with the work of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers as a member of the arrangements committee.

Columbia dealers in this territory report the national advertising campaign as having a tremendous effect upon business. Record trade has been especially stimulated.

R. J. Milholland has resigned as Syracuse representative of the Columbia Co. and Manager Faring, of the Buffalo branch, has named Charles E. Hewitt as his successor. Mr. Faring, assisted by E. L. Wallace, Rochester representative, conducted a profitable meeting of dealers at the Hotel Seneca in Rochester on February 28.

Another Columbia dealer has been added to the Elmira list, Claude Buckpitt having opened a new store in that city.

Charles Hoffman, Sonora distributor at Buffalo, is enjoying a vacation at West Palm Beach. The Hoffman store is being remodeled and will be one of the most attractive in Buffalo when alterations are completed.

Neal, Clark & Neal recently conducted a most successful sale, in which Victor Model 80 was featured. Two hundred of these instruments were offered and they went fast.

Samuel C. McRoberts, phonograph dealer, of 32 Main street, Batavia, will move from his present quarters late in March. He is now seeking a larger store room.

John Bieda, of Bieda Bros., proprietors of one of the busiest community talking machine stores in western New York, was recently elected chairman of the board of directors of the new Black Rock Progressive Association.

Elbridge Glantz has been appointed manager of the talking machine department of the Stranburg Music Store at Bradford, Pa.

Harry Barsuk, Batavia talking machine dealer, is recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia. His daughter, Miss Rose Barsuk, has also been ill with this disease.

Fire caused by the exploding of an alcohol lamp did $500 damage in the showrooms of the Columbia branch. City firemen confined the blaze to a small area.

Pathé retailers in western New York report good business during February. Victor & Co. made a special offering for one day only and report a record volume of sales during the day.

Herman Kuglin, North Tonawanda druggist, recently donated a beautiful talking machine as first prize in a contest between schools of that city, voting coupons being given with each purchase. The instrument was won by the Pine Woods School, delivery being made on Valentine's Day.

Curt C. Andrus, Edison dealer at Niagara Falls, has moved from 223 Falls street to the Brett Music Store, at 320 Niagara street, where he has commodious and attractive quarters. Like other Edison dealers, Mr. Andrus reports business improving.

Brunswick dealers are among the most optimistic of the local trade and Brunswick sales records for February show the foundation for this optimism.

TO MOVE TO LARGER QUARTERS

The Cable Piano Co. store in Chattanooga, Tenn., will be moved on April 1 from its present location, at 117 East Eighth street, to handsome new quarters at 115 East Seventeenth street, where double the present space will be available for the requirements of the business. The store, of which J. H. Shaw is manager, reports a large and growing business in both pianos and Victrolas.

OAKLAND FIRM ADDS VICTOR LINE

OAKLAND, CAL., March 4.—The Phonograph Shop, one of the most progressive talking machine establishments in this section of the State, has added the Victor line of machines and records, according to a recent announcement by Olin S. Grove, proprietor. The concern also handles Brunswick, Edison and some other machines.

COLUMBIA NEWSPAPER CAMPAIGN

Gigantic Publicity Campaign Introduced Recently by Columbia Co. Meeting With Great Success—Dealers Appreciate Co-operation

The gigantic newspaper Grafonola advertising campaign recently announced by the Columbia Graphophone Co. is meeting with signal success. This campaign consists of six separate interlocking advertisements, and the individual arrangement of each advertisement includes a definite, positive appeal to every class of purchaser. Each of the Columbia wholesale branches is contributing its quota to the success of this campaign, and, judging from all indications, Columbia dealers are keenly appreciative of the co-operation and assistance that the Columbia Co. is giving them through the medium of this campaign.

Some time ago the Columbia Co. announced a Grafonola carload sales campaign which proved successful beyond all anticipations and the results of this campaign convinced the company that its dealers are more than willing to take advantage of any practical, logical form of co-operation.

IMPORTANCE OF SELF-CONTROL

Ability to Meet Rebuffs of Unkind Customers Is of Paramount Importance in Selling

Self-control is one of the most important attributes of the successful salesman. The salesman on the road faces an entirely different proposition than the man in the store. He must be equally as cheery, have the same belief and enthusiasm for the line which he represents and use the same tact and courtesy, but there the similarity ends. The floorman does not get the rebuffs which fall to the lot of the man on the outside. The fighting instincts of any red-blooded man almost compel a sharp retort in answer to a rude prospect. If he lets his natural inclinations overcome his better nature and common sense he will answer in kind. The result is antagonism of a customer and the loss of a possible sale. On the other hand, if he meets a rebuff with a cheery word and disregards it, his chances for an immediate sale are materially increased and even if the gruff customer does not buy at the moment, at least no feeling of enmity has been aroused within him against the house, and the chances are that when he is ready to do business the house represented by the polite and cheery salesman will be given first consideration.

Leadership

THE Victor trade enjoyed the greatest prosperity in pre-war days. The Victor trade weathered the war and post-war adjustment periods the most effectively. The Victor trade will ride at the peak throughout 1922 and the years to follow.

There's a reason why Victor leads and there's a reason why so many Victor dealers prefer our service.

A DEPARTMENT DEVOTED TO PROMOTING RETAIL SALES

Suggestions That Will Stimulate Trade

NEXT time you take your family or your friends to the theatre save the seat checks carefully. And when you take supper afterward in a restaurant make the waiter give you the check or a duplicate copy. Now take a large piece of plain white cardboard, 4x3 feet. Draw a heavy black line down the middle, dividing the card in half, and you are ready to make your "deadly parallel." Head the left side "Entertainment Away From Home—One Night." Then list your expenses. Paste your theatre tickets on the cardboard with the wording, "Theatre tickets, $00.00" (inserting price). Do the same with your dinner-check, then add carfare, and total at the bottom in large figures. Now head the right side "Entertainment at Home—Every Night." Below this write "One Month's Payment on Model XX ——" (inserting name of your machine and amount of the payment). Your next item is "00 New Records, $00.00." Put in enough records to make the totals on both sides balance. For a touch of realism attach at the bottom of the card genuine bills and coins corresponding to the amount of your totals. This card, displayed with a good light close to the front of your window, furnishes an object lesson that should bring you business.

BURIED in your record files is unlimited material for good window displays, if you but know how to use it and are willing to take pains. Here is an idea that will unquestionably attract attention. From your files select a dozen records containing "bird calls," warbling, whistling, etc. A few minutes' conversation on the 'phone with your local taxidermist or the director of your museum and your public schools and you can arrange to borrow a number of stuffed birds. Tell the lenders you will put a "credit card" in the corner of your window acknowledging the source of your birds. Arrange the birds in your window with the records, in pairs, against a light background and the street crowds will begin to gather. If you wish to carry the idea further arrange twigs, grasses and ferns to give an appropriate setting; label each record with a card, bearing its title, and also label the birds. Your sign in the center may read: "The (name of machine) brings you the music of Nature as well as man. These beautiful 'bird-call' records reproduce the notes of ——" (then add your list of bird-calls). Across the bottom write: "Come in now and hear them!"

TO make a drive on your small machines secure from a local wall-paper concern some nursery paper—the kind with a plain ground and a strip of comic animals or Mother Goose characters at the top and bottom. With some light "beaver-board" you can make a backing for your window and when you have attached the wall-paper to this with small thumb-tacks you will have the effect of a nursery. On the wall of your nursery hang one or two framed photographs of children from five to ten years old. A local photographer will loan you these. On the floor place your small talking machine with a record on the turntable, also a doll, a toy elephant, choo-choo cars and a number of records, some in an album, others loose. Do not pose these articles all facing the street, but scatter them just as a child would have left them—the elephant turned over on its side and the dolly flat on her back, with one foot stiffly raised. A little nursery chair or two, borrowed for the occasion, will complete the picture. Your sign in the center may read:

Give your kiddies a small (name of machine).
Costs only $00, and to them it's worth "a hundred millyun dollars!"

WHEN your printed bulletin of the new records arrives paste a copy at the top of a strip of heavy white cardboard 12 inches wide and 30 inches deep. Below letter the words: "Here's the new record bulletin. Come in and get your copy—free." Many people, hurrying by, will step inside to get the new bulletin, and when they get inside and the salesman hands them a copy with the remark, "Have you heard (name of selection) from the bulletin? It's a wonderful hit!"—they will probably wait, hear it and buy it.

THE man who uses every opportunity, no matter how small, to get business, is the one who succeeds. If you are sending out each month a quantity of statements on instalment accounts, either of talking machines or pianos, use that two-cent stamp to bring back business. On the bottom of each statement have the typist write some such line as:

"Come in and hear record No. ——. You'll like it." This is a little reminder, takes away some of the coldness of the bill, and at the same time gives evidence of your desire to serve. If you keep at it you are bound to increase your record business. If you wish to enlarge this idea have printed each month a little stuffer or printed card advertising special record hits, repairing and oiling, or any other items you wish to feature, and insert this stuffer with your statements.

SOME talking machine dealers have developed quite a business in accessories and repairing merely by going after it systematically. The way to do it is to follow up each sale you make six months after you make it. You can do this by taking your mailing list direct from your books or else get a 3x5 card-index with certain months on the guides. Whenever a talking machine sale is made write the customer's name, address and style of machine on one of the cards and file it six months ahead of the current date. As this index is built up you will have a constant supply of names. On a definite day each month go through your names for that month and send each one a form letter on oiling and repairing. This not only develops business in oiling and repairing but also in polish, electric winding devices, new records, and also prospects for talking machines, if your repairman is coached by you to look out for such business.

* * *

IF you carry a large number of instalment accounts you, of course, know that at certain times of the month, just after you have mailed your bills, large numbers of people come to your cashier's window to make payments. On the cashier's shelf arrange a display of needles of various kinds with prices plainly marked. You'll find that your customers will buy them because the needles are brought to their attention at the very moment when they have the change handy. Your cashier will act as the salesman. Your customers may have come in to make a payment, without the least idea of buying anything, yet you can get business out of them because of the "psychology of convenience."

* * *

DEALERS who have tried the plan are strong for the use of sheet music to help sales of new records. In your record department keep a copy, or several copies, of the sheet music of each hit in your new bulletin. While you are demonstrating the record the customer holds the sheet music in his hands. He is sure to "get the words," which he might otherwise miss. You appeal through his eyes as well as his ears, giving you a double chance to sell the record. The expense is small. In fact you can, in almost all cases, sell the sheet music after it has served its purpose, reducing your expense to zero.

IF you are in close competition with a department store whose talking machine department is upstairs, use this wording in your ads, on your letterheads, circulars and window cards:

"Our record booths are on the main floor, convenient to street entrance. Easy to get to, and hard to leave! Try our service."

On the other hand, if your department is upstairs and you are competing with ground-floor shops, have a large photo made of your record department and display it in your window, with this wording, which you can use also in ads and circulars:

"Get away from the noise, hustle and bustle of the street! Our comfortable record booths are on the fourth floor—quiet and restful as your own home. Take the elevator and choose your records under ideal conditions!"

EDITOR'S NOTE—Mr. Gordon will publish on this page any good ideas submitted by you for the benefit of the trade, and will also answer any questions you ask him concerning merchandising problems. Use this department as much as you like. It is intended to serve you—to be a forum for the discussion and exchange of ideas of interest.

INDIANAPOLIS

Jobbers and Dealers Report Continued Improvement—Stewart Co. Increases Capital to $400,000—Capitalizing the Mailing List

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., March 6.—Business for the talking machine dealers in Indianapolis during February was better, generally speaking, than during the corresponding month of last year. Nothing other than an encouraging tone of optimism throughout the trade is to be recorded as a feature of the month. The good business was due, apparently, to exceptionally favorable weather conditions, the daily temperature of the month having averaged two degrees above normal, according to Weather Bureau records.

Outside Men Securing Business

"The outside men have been getting the business for us," says C. P. Herdman, manager of the talking machine department of the Baldwin Piano Co. "They have been hustling and therefore were bound to get business. If a man makes twenty or twenty-five calls a day he is certain to land something."

W. G. Wilson, of Widener's Grafonola Shop, says his sales have consisted either of the very cheap instruments or the more expensive models, with practically no movement of the medium-priced machines. The Granby, he says, continues to gain steadily in favor throughout the territory.

Value of Merchandising Efforts

Speaking of the merchandising efforts of the Victor distributors, the house organ of the Stewart Talking Machine Co., Victor distributor for Indiana, has this to say: "James J. Davin, secretary of the Reincke-Ellis Co., of Chicago, was in this office for a few hours the early part of this month and very enthusiastically explained the many new service items which are being offered to Victor dealers. According to Mr. Davin, the trade as a whole has greeted the announcement of the 'Favorite Records Review' with great enthusiasm. After hearing Mr. Davin talk of the many sales-compelling ideas which are offered by the Reincke-Ellis Co. exclusively to Victor dealers we became more firmly convinced that the Chicago Tribune has sounded one of the keynotes of success, when it adopted 'The More You Tell the More You Sell' as its slogan for 1922."

Louis A. Schwarz, exclusive factory representative for the Jones-Motrola in the United States and Canada, was in the office of the Stewart Talking Machine Co. this month in the course of his visit to Motrola jobbers throughout the United States. Referring to the success with which the new Motrola is meeting, Mr. Schwarz said: "I find that most aggressive dealers are having greater success by selling the Motrola as a part of the Victrola outfit. I have talked with several jobbers and in almost every instance I find that the dealer who is putting the Motrola out on free demonstration for five or ten days is enjoying greater sales."

Victor Dealer Also Orchestra Leader

Fred McDonald, Victor dealer in Sheridan, Ind., is the leader of a "wild jazz orchestra," which furnishes music for Sheridan's most fashionable dances. The orchestra plays under the name of "Mac's Orchestra," and is creating much favorable comment in the community. Incidentally, it is creating considerable publicity for Victor records and machines.

Checks Mailing Lists

A. C. Hawkins, manager of the Indianapolis Talking Machine Co., took active steps during February to check up his mailing list. An ordinary postal card, on one side of which was printed the dealer's name and address and on the other side a brief statement of the purpose in sending the card. The cards were sent to the company's entire mailing list of more than 3,000 names. The copy on the cards was as follows:

"Information obtained through investigation shows that there are many people on our mailing lists who receive our monthly record announcement and other literature who are not interested in it at all. We are wasting their time and our money, and it is needless to do either. We want to send our literature to everyone who really wants it, but we do not wish to bother those people who are not interested.

"Please help us by signing your name and address at the bottom of this card and return to us. The return cards will be our new list. Do not misunderstand. We want you to receive the monthly record announcement (copy of which is enclosed) if you want to get it, but we don't want to send it to you if you do not want to receive it. This card returned will signify your desire to continue receiving our literature. Thank you."

Within a short time about half of the cards had been returned, thus showing the customers' interest in receiving the Victor literature. Those who did not have enough interest to return the cards were classed as "dead wood."

Increase Capital Stock to $400,000

The Stewart Talking Machine Co. has increased its capital stock from $50,000 to $400,000, of which $200,000 is preferred stock. This capitalizes the company for the amount of its assets, according to George Stewart, who says the company is not making any effort to sell the stock. He says, however, that some of the stock may be purchased by persons who may be interested in having it.

"Our company is now capitalized for what it is worth," Mr. Stewart said. "We are not contemplating any change in the business, but are going along just as we have been doing, with an eye to developing the trade in every part of the territory. We feel very optimistic over the future. The outlook among the farmers is better and there is a great deal of building to be done in Indianapolis and other Indiana cities this Summer. This means that an increasing amount of business is to be had by dealers who go after it. One Indianapolis dealer proved that the other day when he sold fourteen machines. Not everyone is doing so well, but the opportunity is before each dealer.

Record Demand Increases

T. H. Bracken, of the Starr Piano Co., reports that his February business in talking machines was about the same as during the same month last year, but that the demand for Gennett records has increased steadily above the high mark set in January and December. He credits this not only to the exceptional sales campaign inaugurated before the holidays, but also to the fact that the new records being produced by the company have met with marked favor.

C. S. Dearborn Takes Charge

C. S. Dearborn, vice-president of the Mooney-Mueller-Ward Co., wholesale druggists and Pathé distributors, has taken charge of the company's talking machine department in place of C. O. Mueller. The latter has been made drug and chemical buyer for the firm, a position he held before the war. Mr. Dearborn says that activity among the Pathé dealers of the State indicates a gradual revival in both machine and record business.

O. C. Maurer Orders Stock

O. C. Maurer, manager of the Sonora department of the Kiefer-Stewart Drug Co., spent the last two weeks of February in New York, where he purchased talking machines and other stock. Reports received from dealers throughout Indiana showed that business was better than during the previous month, but not so brisk as in February, 1921.

Brunswick Phonograph Shop Incorporated

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the Secretary of State by the Brunswick Phonograph Shop, Inc. The authorized capital stock is $30,000. The directors are: Walter J. Baker, president and manager; H. J. Dirks and E. L. Gramlich. Mr. Baker has severed his connection with the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., having been manager of the company's Indianapolis branch, and after April 1 will devote his entire time to the retail phonograph business.

"Our February business was better than the January business," Mr. Baker said, in speaking of the prospects for the coming months. "The new console models are in greater demand than the cabinet models. Business is to be had by the dealer who goes out after it. The old-style phonograph dealer who runs his business on the booking-agency plan might as well lock up his store and throw away the key. The dealers that will be successful in 1922 will be the ones who get busy on the outside and go after business."

Prepare for Salesmanship School

Preparations are being made by the Kipp Phonograph Co. to entertain a large number of Edison dealers expected to attend the salesmanship school this month. The school will be the biggest of the sort ever held here, Mr. Kipp predicts.

Looks for Large Spring Business

H. E. Whitman, of the Circle Talking Machine Shop, is of the opinion that the Spring will develop an encouraging increase in business. He says that he increased his advertising expenditures during February with fair results.

T. E. SESSINGER PASSES AWAY

MEMPHIS, TENN., March 5.—T. E. Sessinger, for a number of years engaged in the talking machine and house-furnishing business here, passed away at his home recently. Mr. Sessinger was well known in local business circles and his death is deeply regretted by his many friends.

The McCulbee Phonograph Co., of Dallas, Tex., has decreased its capital stock from $50,000 to $36,000.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 7.—Jacob Weinheimer's Sons, who conduct a large talking machine department in an attractive store at 200-208 North Celina street, this city, yesterday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the business. The day was entitled "Courtesy Day," and the entire store was thrown open for the inspection of visitors, no goods whatever being sold. There was plenty of music both afternoon and evening, and the distribution of souvenirs marked the occasion.

PACIFIC MUSIC CO. BUYS BUILDING

MODESTO, CAL., March 4.—The Pacific Music Co., here, has obtained a lease on the Star Theatre building and extensive alterations are under way to enlarge the stores which occupy part of the structure. The Pacific Music Co. will occupy one of these stores as soon as the alterations are completed, according to R. S. Smith, head of the concern.

BRUNSWICK SHOP FAVORS EMPLOYEES

LOUISVILLE, KY., February 4.—A co-operative policy, in which the employes will figure in the profits of the concern, has been announced by President H. S. Manning, of the Brunswick Shop, Inc., here. L. E. Yates, who has been financially interested in the company, has disposed of his interests to Mr. Manning.

Alterations at the Oakland Phonograph Store, Oakland, Cal., are nearing completion. The basement of the store has been converted into a large concert hall. Victor and Edison machines are featured here.

VICTOR DEALERS DISCUSS TRADE PROBLEMS AT PEORIA

Assemble Under Auspices of Putnam-Page Co., Victor Distributor, and Listen to Many Important Merchandise Suggestions Made by Noted Speakers—Close With Banquet at Jefferson Hotel

PEORIA, ILL., March 8.—Under the auspices of the Putnam-Page Co., Victor wholesaler, a great gathering of Victor dealers assembled in this city on Thursday and Friday, February 16 and 17, when stimulating trade-building talks inspired everybody with enthusiasm and a desire to make new trade records during 1922. On the evening of the 17th the convention closed with a banquet in the Palm Room of the Jefferson Hotel.

The convention started at 9:30 a. m. on the 16th with the registration of visitors at the Putnam-Page Co. offices, followed by an open session on "Theory of Record Making," with Fred H. Putnam, of the Putnam-Page Co., chairman. Following this was a well-thought-out talk entitled "Supremacy—Yes," delivered by Miss Margaret Streeter, of the educational department of the Victor Talking Machine Co. Next on the program was "The Construction of the Victrola," by Benjamin Oltmanns, of the Putnam-Page Co., who went into the construction of the machine in detail. This was followed by a talk on "Competition" by Miss Ruth A. Dillavoux, of the Putnam-Page Co. The afternoon session was taken up by a talk on "Outside Salesmen" by Roy Page, of the Putnam-Page Co., followed by a discussion of "To-day's Problem" by John Gregg Paine, of the Victor Talking Machine Co.

The program on Friday, the 17th, was very interesting, particularly the subjects "Propaganda for Future Business," by Miss Streeter, of the Victor Co.; "Creating Funds for Organizations," by H. W. Seitz, of the Putnam-Page Co., and another talk by Miss Dillavoux entitled "Promotion and Store Management." Miss Dillavoux went into minute detail on this particular subject and related numerous interesting experiences encountered by her during her services as Victor saleswoman. Prior to her entrance into the sales field Miss Dillavoux was a school teacher, and her study of psychology while carrying on this work is being applied by her constantly in the sales of talking machines. The little sales ideas which she imparted to the listening dealers were happily received by them and were jotted down in their notebooks to be put into practice immediately upon their arrival home.

"What Victor Dealers Ask Reincke-Ellis" was a very interesting and practical discourse on the history of advertising and the vital part it plays in modern business as an accelerator of sales, given by J. J. Davin, of the Reincke-Ellis Co. It was well received.

What may be considered one of the most interesting demonstrations ever given at a convention was made by H. W. Seitz, of the Putnam-Page Co., who utilized the aid of a violinist and illustrated the various technical points taken advantage of by an artist when playing for Victor recording. He played many records of Heifetz, Kreisler and others, calling attention to certain measures in these records and demonstrating with the aid of a violinist the various fingerings needed to obtain these results. After this he put on a listening contest, with the aid of five boys and five girls, ranging in ages from three to eight years. Many of the dealers present admitted they had what they thought was a good idea of how this sort of educational work was done, but that after the demonstration by Mr. Seitz they were frank to admit that their ideas had been rather vague.

Speakers at the Banquet

The convention closed with an elaborate banquet on the evening of the 17th in the Palm Room of the Hotel Jefferson. Roy Page, of the Putnam-Page Co., was toastmaster, and after several toasts introduced the speaker of the evening, John Gregg Paine, of the legal department of the Victor Talking Machine Co. His subject was the principal feature of the evening and he dwelt mainly on how the Victor Co. regards its distribution. During the course of his address, which proved most interesting and illuminating, he explained fully the responsibility which the Victor Co. feels toward every retail dealer and what the company realizes it must do toward making its distribution flow evenly and in a manner to benefit every retail Victor dealer. By way of illustration he told of how an engineer goes about the building of a dam, and that it was not, as a great many people thought, the mere digging of a hole and placing a wall about it to hold back the water. In reality the engineer starts from the very source of his water supply and goes back into the records of that particular stream, looks up the weather reports covering a period of years, takes note of the records of floods and other incidents pertaining to that particular stream, and in this way is able to design a dam secure against any force which may assault it. The Victor Co. realizes that its distribution is a stream which it must know in its every channel. If any part of it is choked or clogged the company is as quick to realize the consequences as is the engineer. If the mouth of the stream is clogged the stream becomes stagnant. The Victor Co. realizes that its distribution is just like the mouth of this stream, and that if the dealer becomes clogged distribution will become stagnant. He then pointed out that everything humanly possible is being done by the Victor Co. to keep distribution flowing smoothly by creating a desire to own a Victrola on the part of the people and by admonishing them to come to the authorized Victor merchants to get the authentic goods. He concluded his talk by some well-thought-out stories pertaining to "tie-ups," saying that the Victor Co. can only create the desire on the part of the public for good music, and that then it is up to the dealer to reach out and say, "We've got it." The dealer should tie up and show that he is a recognized Victor dealer. He should become thoroughly acquainted with Victor merchandise, and especially with the general catalog. In speaking of this tremendous volume to a new customer, and let it go at that, saying that this was just like turning a Bible over to a heathen and saying, "Here is the way to salvation." The heathen could do nothing with the Bible unless he was taught, nor can the untutored customer with the Victor bible—its great catalog. This part of Mr. Paine's address made a very deep impression on all of his hearers and left everyone inspired with a deeper understanding of the business in which he is engaged.

Mr. Paine's talk was followed by one given by J. J. Davin, of the Reincke-Ellis Co., who gave another very interesting discourse on the history of advertising and exhibited examples of the sales promotion plans which Reincke-Ellis offers to the Victor trade.

His talk was followed by a little informal discussion by E. F. Carey, Chicago sales manager for The Talking Machine World, who spoke on what the future holds in a business way for retail merchants who apply vigorous and intelligent sales efforts.

Next on the program was a call by Toastmaster Roy Page for talks from the various dealers, during which discussion the idea of a new organization known as the Central Illinois Victor Dealers' Association was launched. This idea was immediately seized upon by the dealers present, who quickly formed a nominating committee which turned in the names of F. M. Leslie, L. S. Putnam and Lyle Straight, who were unanimously elected. All of those present pledged themselves to do everything they possibly could to further the good cause.

Those present at the convention included:

John G. Paine and Miss Margaret Streeter, Victor Talking Machine Co., Camden, N. J.; Mr. Seldomridge, J. J. Davin, Eugene F. Carey, Ellis Hansen, Benjamin Retchins, Chicago, Ill.; C. S. Brubaker, Charleston, Ill.; Peter Lund, Clinton, Ill.; R. E. Gardner, Washington, Ill.; W. P. Mosher, F. H. Putnam, Roy Page, Miss R. A. Dillavoux, Leonard Putnam, Carl Carey, Miss Rose Herndon, Miss Marie Kaiser, Harry Seitz and Benjamin Oltmanns, Putnam-Page Co., Peoria, Ill.; F. E. Walleit, Dewey Doyle, J. E. Dalton, C. W. Porter, J. B. Tiece, F. L. Fell, Miss Sophie Mills, Miss Harriet Dunlap, Miss Edna Price, Mrs. Russel Stutzman, G. W. La Brier, S. B. Moore, Miss Gertrude Wissel and Lyle Straight, all of Peoria, Ill.; A. Sundquist, Toulon, Ill.; S. B. Bolton, Mrs. S. B. Bolton, Aledo, Ill.; W. L. Barnett, Watseka, Ill.; Russell N. Smith, Carthage, Ill.; O. D. Ehrlicher, Peking, Ill.; G. E. Lester, Hoopston, Ill.; F. M. Leslie, Urbana, Ill.; Rufus L. Berry, Springfield, Ill.; Mrs. K. M. Williams, Colfax, Ill.; Roy Miller, Dixon, Ill.; T. A. Conboy, Sterling, Ill.; A. R. Meyer, Havana, Ill.; T. I. Griggs, Mr. Munsen, Kewanee, Ill.; D. V. Clyde, McKinley & Son, Mason City, Ill.; F. A. Doyle, Galesburg, Ill.; E. T. Froyd, Paxton, Ill.; Miss W. C. Requarth, Ottawa, Ill.; Leo Johnson and Mrs. Leo Johnson, Jacksonville, Ill.

Salesmen and merchants who desire to keep abreast of the times should read the trade journals.

INTRODUCE THE PURITAN RECORD

Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. Now Pressing a Record of Its Own—First Release a Large and Varied One—Limits Its Territory

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., March 1.—The Bridgeport Die & Machine Co., of this city, which has built up an enviable reputation throughout the talking machine trade for its record pressing, is now pressing a record of its own in addition to its pressing work for the manufacturers. This new record is named the Puritan record, and all releases are in ten-inch size, double disc, and will retail for 50 cents. The first release consisted of fifty-six dance numbers, twenty popular vocal numbers, four instrumental records, sixteen standard and sacred songs, eight Hawaiian numbers, twelve recordings of concert and military bands and twenty-eight violin, saxophone and trio recordings. It is planned to supplement this list regularly throughout the future, and in addition to the usual monthly releases two new records will be released each week, thus making popular hits available immediately. The Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. is confining its activities to a territory east of the Ohio River and north of the Potomac.

SOON READY TO DELIVER MOTORS

William Brand Announces That Lindstrom Products Will Soon Be Available for Trade

William Brand, 27 East Twenty-second street, New York, the well-known importer of mica diaphragms and other talking machine accessories, and who some time ago took over the American agency for single-spring motors manufactured by the Carl Lindstrom Co., now announces that deliveries of these new single-spring motors will be made in quantity lots within the next few weeks. Samples are now being forwarded to the trade. Mr. Brand has just completed a trade trip through Middle West territory calling on the trade in the larger cities, including Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis.

The American Phonograph Co., of 187 Pearl street, Burlington, Vt., is featuring Victor machines in both the wholesale and retail branches of its business.

NEW STORE ATTRACTS CROWDS

Columbia Dealer's New Establishment Visited by 8,000 People—Grafonola Department Handsomely Decorated—Plan Sales Drive

LANCASTER, PA., March 6.—It was necessary to call out the police to handle the crowds at the formal opening of the Keystone Furniture Co.'s store in this city. Two hours before the official time for the opening, West King street was lined for two blocks and more than 8,000 people passed through the store on the various days devoted to the opening festivities.

One of the features of the company's establishment is the Grafonola department, which is composed of six hearing rooms, finished in ivory and tinted with green. At the entrance of the department there are two open display rooms, arranged in pedestal style, displaying two handsome Columbia period Grafonolas. To the left of these display rooms are the record racks and counter cases. The Grafonola department is directly in charge of Mr. Hoffman and Mrs. Butz, and they are making plans for an energetic sales drive in behalf of Columbia Grafonolas and records.

OPENS THIRD BRONX STORE

L. Liebowitz, one of the most progressive dealers in metropolitan territory, opened his third store recently and as an opening attraction a local jazz band was secured which furnished considerable entertainment to a large crowd of interested visitors. Mr. Liebowitz, who is an enthusiastic Columbia dealer, has three stores in the Bronx, all of which are closing a substantial business and which are under his personal management.

ARTIST IN WINDOW DRAWS CROWDS

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 27.—The Van Wickle Piano Co., of 1217 F street, this city, attracted considerable attention to its establishment recently when Alberto Barreto, celebrated young Peruvian artist, appeared in the company's window and made crayon sketches of men well known in the nation's capital. A Victrola which was played continually during the exhibit added force to the display.

INTERNATIONALLY POPULAR

Columbia Trade-mark the Only Superscription on Letter From Japan

The famous trade-mark used by the Columbia Graphophone Co. has become internationally popular, as evidenced by a letter received recently from a Columbia dealer in Japan. This dealer, Mr. Tanaka, wished to secure a complete Colum-

ANNOUNCES LOWER RANGE OF PRICES

The Fred. Gretsch Mfg. Co., manufacturer, importer and wholesaler of musical merchandise, Brooklyn, N. Y., has recently announced reduced prices on Gretsch-American xylophones. The Gretsch line of xylophones covers a wide range of selection, from the No. 1050, which retails at $3, to the No. 46, at $110. An attractive circular has been prepared describing and illustrating this line.

One of the chief elements of salesmanship is knowing how to influence people. This entails a never-ending study of human nature.

:: PROMPTNESS ::

By EDWARD FRASER CARSON

In the world of business there are many virtues, but of these one of the greatest is promptness.

If your boss pays you to get to work at 9 o'clock for Heaven's sake get to work at 9 o'clock. Be in your place at 9 o'clock, not five or ten or fifteen minutes after—no, not one minute after 9. For tardiness there is never any real excuse. If you start from home early enough you will forestall delays on the car line.

An innocent man convicted of murder is sentenced to die at 9 o'clock. The pardon arrives at 9.01. What excuse shall the bearer of the pardon who lagged on the way make at the Eternal Bar of Justice? He cannot plead that the car was blocked.

If your customer wants his purchase delivered by a certain hour don't promise to do it unless it can be done. But if you do promise, see that it is delivered on time, even if you have to do it yourself.

Time, they say, was made for slaves, but who among us is a free man? For we must eat and drink and sleep, and just to that extent are we slaves of our own needs, for these things can only be obtained by work. Even the savage in the jungle must answer the call of hunger, thirst and exhaustion.

Be at the appointed place at the time appointed, for in being tardy you entail a double responsibility. You squander not only your own time but that of the man you are to meet as well. And however you may be a spendthrift of your own time, in making another waste time you are robbing him of something which you can never restore.

Let it be said of you that you do what you have promised when you have promised it should be done.

Of all those things which come as a birthright, time alone is the one thing of which the measure is limited. Therefore, be careful of time and see that it is not wasted, for when it is gone it cannot be recovered.

Life might be likened to a purse filled with coins, each coin an hour. As each hour passes a coin is spent and when the purse is empty happy is he who can account for each coin and show that it was spent wisely.

Therefore, you should ever be more careful of your time than you are of your money, for the dollar that is lost may be replaced by a little work, but an hour that is passed is gone beyond recall.

The successful man is prompt in all of his undertakings, for he has learned that all things come to him who is on the job when opportunity knocks at his door. He has learned the lesson of life, which is that promptness in keeping one's engagements pays dividends far more surely than money that is deposited in the bank.

Poor Richard said that a penny saved is a penny earned. If this is so, then how much more may it be said of the minute that you save!

FIRE DAMAGES DODGE MFG. CO.

Fire in Plant of Manufacturer of Seebrook Phonographs Destroys Some Cabinets, Records, etc.—Damage Estimated at $30,000

MISHAWAKA, IND., March 6.—Talking machine cabinets and other parts and supplies were damaged to the amount of $30,000 in a fire that threatened total destruction of Plant No. 5 of the Dodge Mfg. Co. here recently. The fire was extinguished after an hour and a half's effort by the fire department. Before the flames were subdued they had spread over the entire second floor and were attacking the talking machine records stored there. Water flooded the floor and, leaking into the main floor, damaged a number of partially constructed cabinets.

The Dodge Co. has been manufacturing the Seebrook phonograph, which is especially designed for theatre work. One thousand machines which were stored in the building adjacent to the one that was burned were not damaged. The plant and contents were fully insured, it is said.

FILE PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY

A petition in bankruptcy was filed on February 27 against the Electric Phonograph Corp., of 236 West 116th street, New York, by Frank Hildebrand, Charles G. Fischer and Jeanette Frimarck. Liabilities are about $15,000 and assets about $10,000.

HARDING SEES TIDE OF TRADE TURNING TO PROSPERITY

Chief Executive Points to Banking Statement as Proof That Peak of Liquidation Has Passed—
Economic Depression Rapidly Being Lifted and Business Shows Steady Upward Trend

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—The White House has co-operated with the other departments of the Government, which have taken an optimistic view of business conditions, making an announcement that the statement of the Comptroller of the Currency, based on the last bank call, showed the most satisfactory turn in financial affairs of the nation since 1919.

The Comptroller's statement indicates that the peak of liquidation has been passed and that there is reason to believe the most serious period of depression has been experienced. While the national banks represent somewhat less than half of the banking capacity it is assumed that other institutions have experienced similar developments.

The White House announcement contends that the situation in the agricultural districts is improving and that better times may be expected.

"Most Satisfactory Turn" Shown

"The Comptroller of the Currency," said the President, "is issuing the consolidated statement of the national banks, representing the bank call of December 31 last. It shows the most satisfactory turn in the financial affairs of the country that has been registered by a bank statement since the conclusion of 1919. The peak of banking capacity in this country was reached in the statement of December 31, 1919, when the national banks reported aggregate resources of $22,711,000,000. From that time on there was, as shown by the successive consolidated statements, a substantially steady decrease in the aggregate resources.

"The statement that is now being made public registers for the first time a very substantial upturn in resources. It shows that the banks occupy a greatly improved and strengthened position as regards their rediscounts, their resources, their cash in hand and their deposits, which show an astonishing gain. It demonstrates that the process of liquidation has been proceeding at such an excellent rate that it may fairly be said that we are well on the road to getting the 'frozen credits' thawed out. In this regard, indeed, it is by far the most satisfactory showing that has been made since the phrase 'frozen credits' was invented.

"The extent of the broad general improvement in the financial situation between the bank call of September 6 and that of December 31 last is so striking as to justify especial attention. The lawful reserve with Federal reserve banks is far beyond legal requirements and has been strikingly increased within the period covered by this call. This is, on the whole, perhaps the most impressive single item that a consolidated bank statement shows as to the general soundness of the fiscal situation.

"One of the most striking showings is that cash in the vaults of banks was reduced, between September 6 and December 31, by only $15,987,000. But for the fact that great amounts of cash were required to be withdrawn on account of interest and dividend payments as of January 1 a very great increase in the amount of cash would have been shown.

"Next to the item of aggregate resources, perhaps, in a period of liquidation such as is now taking place, the most impressive testimony of the soundness of a banking situation is to be found in the individual deposits. We find that, excluding United States Government deposits, there was an increase of $322,811,000 in these deposits between September 6 and December 31, 1921. The significance of this will be the more apparent when it is explained that between December 29, 1920, and September 6, 1921, there had been a continuing reduction in deposits aggregating $1,103,552,000.

"It is therefore an unquestionable evidence of a rapidly improving position that between the statement of September 6 last and the statement of December 31 last there took place a reversal of this movement, which resulted in an increase of $322,811,000 in individual deposits. This is at the rate of about $100,000,000 monthly increase. The aggregate of all deposits on December 31 last was $15,075,000,000, a gain of $514,000,000 since September 6. To put it in another way, aggregate deposits fell, between December 29, 1920, and September 6, 1921, $1,717,000,000, and since September 6, 1921, they have risen $514,250,000. Not only has the tide turned, but it has been flowing strong and steady.

"It must be borne in mind that the national banks represent considerably less than half of the total banking capacity of the nation. It is, therefore, safe to assume that the State, savings and private banks and trust companies have experienced the same turn in the tide that is noted in the case of the national banks. We may, therefore, conclude that the figures for national banks may safely be doubled in order to get an approximate representation of the situation as to the entire banking establishment of the nation.

Peak of Liquidation Passed

"On December 31 last the national banks had lawful reserve with Federal reserve banks of $1,143,000,000, which was almost $87,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

"Under any analysis the figures indubitably demonstrate that the peak of liquidation and of consequent depression was passed somewhere between September 6 last and December 31 last and that the tendency has been steadily toward improvement in business and less reliance of business upon the support of the banks.

"Of precisely like tenor are recent advices from the War Finance Corporation, which reports a progressive liquidation of its loans and a general improvement of conditions in the agricultural industry. Recent stabilizations of prices for agricultural staples have brought the farmers to the point where they are able to realize something at least approximating costs of production and can look forward hopefully to still further improvements in no very distant future."

RECO-RAPS PROVING POPULAR

St. Louis, Mo., March 7.—The Reco-Rap Co., of this city, which recently introduced a new transportation package for talking machine records, is meeting with pleasing success in the introduction of this package to the dealers throughout the country. February business was excellent and the company is now shipping Reco-Raps to every State in the Union. One of the gratifying features of the company's business is the fact that it is receiving numerous repeat orders, indicating that the dealers are using Reco-Raps to splendid advantage.

EFFECTIVE STEGER ADVERTISING

Steger Phonographs and Pianos Being Featured in the Leading National Magazines

Steger phonograph and piano advertising is now appearing, and will appear, in a number of the leading publications of national circulation, and the effects of the publicity that has already been issued through that channel have been excellent.

The Steger phonographs have been featured particularly, special announcements regarding those instruments appearing in the February issue of the Atlantic Monthly, Century Magazine and Munsey's, in the March number of Scribner's and Harper's Magazines, and the April issue of World's Work. Special phonograph ads also appear in the February, March and April numbers of Etude, Photoplay Magazine, Red Book, Everybody's and several other of the most prominent magazines.

All the advertising, regardless of whether it features pianos or phonographs, has a "tie-up" line calling attention to the other product, piano advertising referring to the Steger phonograph and vice versa.

WINS HONORS IN BEAUTY CONTEST

Saleswoman in Buffalo Columbia Store Wins First Prize in Beauty Contest—Accomplished Pianist, and Singer, Writer and Athlete

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 6.—Miss Irene M. Frechette, of this city, has just been awarded first honors and a thousand-dollar prize in the national beauty contest held by the International Feature Service. The talking machine trade is keenly interested in this award, as Miss Frechette is a member of the sales staff of the music store owned by John G. Schuler, who handles Columbia Grafonolas and records.

Miss Frechette is a pianist, singer, writer and athlete, and above all is an expert saleswoman. She has a host of friends in the trade who were delighted to know of the honors accorded her in the beauty contest.

DISCUSS CO-OPERATIVE ADVERTISING

Talking Machine Men at Meeting Last Month Take Up Subject for Consideration—Annual Banquet to Be Held on April 20 at Pennsylvania Hotel—Plans for March Meeting

The February meeting of the Talking Machine Men, Inc., the organization of talking machine retailers of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, was held at the Café Boulevard, New York. The meeting was, as usual, preceded by a luncheon at which a number of members of the New Jersey Victor Retailers' Association were guests.

Max Landay, chairman of the music trade committee of the American Jewish War Relief, accompanied by a committee composed of Chester Abelowitz, M. Max, A. Davega and B. Abrams, was on hand, and after an address by Mr. Landay the committee moved about the tables making final arrangements for gathering the funds. The music trades committee's quota has been placed at $50,000.

Charles D. Isaacson, editor of "Our Family Music" page of the New York Evening Mail, which paper has been giving free concerts in sixty-nine neighborhood centers, then presented a plan to the members for the purpose of having the Association carry out an advertising campaign in connection with the Mail's publicity work along music lines. Mr. Isaacson's address was well received and was followed by supplementary remarks from President Irwin Kurtz.

It is proposed to have an exclusive design which is to be used by dealers, showing that they are members of the Talking Machine Men, Inc. This design will be used conspicuously in the Mail's advertising page with appropriate editorial comment. The members of the Association will also receive a decalcomanie sign for window use as well as small imprints for advertisements, circulars and other publicity material. It is hoped to get over a hundred retailers to take advertising space in twenty-six issues of the Mail during the year.

It was announced that the annual banquet and ball of the Association will be held on the evening of April 20 at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

At the March 15 meeting of the Association Isabelle Lowden is scheduled to address the members of the Association.

At the March meeting of the Association the well-known music publishing firm, Richmond-Robbins, Inc., will be represented. D. M. Winkler, general manager of that organization, will address the gathering and several songs from his firm's catalog will be demonstrated.

EXHIBIT AT MERCHANDISE FAIR

Banner Records Displayed and Demonstrated at Recent Exhibition in New York

An exhibit of Banner records was made by the Plaza Music Co., New York, at the New York Merchandise Fair, held at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory during the week of February 20. It attracted a good deal of attention and buyers seemed to be impressed with the merits of this new record.

According to H. Germain, of the company, the idea of placing the popular-priced record on the market has found favor with many dealers and Banner records are being distributed with profitable results. The company has announced that extensive plans for a greatly increased production on Banner records will shortly be brought to completion.

FEATURING CARRYING CASES

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—Topham's, of this city, well known throughout the leather goods trade, is conducting a special drive on carrying cases for records which it produces. These cases are finished in two sizes for both ten and twelve-inch records and many exceptional claims are made for the construction and finish. An index card for fifty records is contained in the lid.

The Value of an Intelligently Prepared Mailing List

By H. S. THORPE, The Huse Publishing Co., Norfolk, Neb.

There are mailing lists and mailing lists. A mailing list may be a liability or an asset, according to the intelligence—or lack of it—used in compiling it, in classifying it and in using it. As far as the Victor business is concerned a mailing list will be a liability if it is an indiscriminate list of names taken at random from city and town directories, telephone directories or other similar sources, because such a list used as a target for Victrola literature will: First, include the names of people who already have Victrolas; second, the names of people who already have some other make of talking machine; third, the names of people who under no circumstances could possibly afford to buy any kind of an instrument and will be a dead loss, and fourth, because such a list, if it took in other towns and cities than your own, is very apt to include the names of some of your competitors who can adopt your advertising ideas and plans to their own benefit and to your detriment. Some of the best ideas and some of the best plans in developing the sale of Victrolas and records that the writer has used during the past twelve years have been sent to him by mail by firms selling competitive machines in other cities who had evidently taken his name from a list of property owners or automobile owners or something of the sort without making any effort to find out what business he was in.

A mailing list will be an asset if one division of it contains the names of those in your town and legitimate trade territory who have no talking machines at all and who are financially able to buy one, another division the names of those who have fours and sixes and might be interested in the purchase of a cabinet machine. Another division the names of those who can afford to buy the more expensive machines (as distinct from the first division), another the names of the teachers in the rural schools in your section, and another the names of all makes of talking machines in your town and trade territory. Still further subdivisions will suggest themselves.

Obviously, no list has any value if it is not used. The people in the first four divisions should be bombarded with machine literature, selected, of course, to fit the particular element you are trying to reach, while the people of the last division—the machine owners—should be frequently reminded that you are waiting to furnish them with Victor records, needles, albums and supplies of all kinds. Keep hammering away at them and in time you will find yourself on their mailing list.

The plans suggested may not appeal to every dealer and the writer is not urging anyone to adopt them. In common with many other Victor dealers we have followed these plans or similar ones with a rather gratifying degree of success; as a consequence we consider our mailing list a valuable part of our selling equipment.

McNAMARA VISITS THE TRADE

W. J. McNamara, president of the Empire Phono Parts Co., of Cleveland, O., was a visitor during the latter part of February to New York and other points in the East. In a chat with The World he expressed himself as well pleased with the condition of business during 1921 and was most optimistic regarding the outlook for trade as a whole during 1922. He remarked that while business slowed up somewhat after the holidays there now was a decided undercurrent of betterment in evidence, which will undoubtedly expand. The so-called reconstruction period is now at an end, and business everywhere is starting anew along healthy lines, all of which must have its favorable reflex on the talking machine industry.

DESCRIBES RECORDING PROBLEMS

An interesting article on the problems of making talking machine records appeared in the current issue of the American Magazine. The article described various methods of recording and contained facts about some of the most prominent artists engaged in making records.

The Stradivaria Phonograph Co., of Portland, Ore., has changed its name to Beaver State Furniture Mfg. Co.

JOHN CHURCH CO. OPENS BRANCH

ELGIN, ILL., February 27.—A piano and talking machine establishment has been opened here at 162 Milwaukee street by the John Church Co., of Chicago. This concern manufactures the John Church and Everett player-pianos and the John Church phonographs. These instruments and others made by the company will be sold here and in the surrounding territory.

CATHEDRAL MAKING RAPID PROGRESS

Well-known Phonograph Now Being Made by Ohio Cathedral Co.—Dealers Being Appointed in Many Parts of the Country

MARION, O., March 6.—The Ohio Cathedral Co., of this city, which is now manufacturing the well-known Cathedral phonograph, is meeting with gratifying success in the introduction of this machine in the leading trade centers. During the course of the past few weeks the company has established important agencies in different parts of the country, and judging from the enthusiastic reception accorded its line the company will have no difficulty in securing a wide distribution for its product.

The Cathedral phonograph is being manufactured in an up-to-date plant, and W. H. Houghton, who is well known in the local manufacturing field, is president of the company. He is giving careful consideration to the requirements of the dealers, and the various designs in the Cathedral line are well calculated to meet the demands of the most critical and discriminating buyers.

G. J. PALMER ENLARGES STORE

George J. Palmer, talking machine dealer, of West Chester, Pa., has greatly enlarged his business. Trade has increased here to such an extent that Mr. Palmer was compelled to add several record demonstration booths to adequately take care of customers. The basement of the establishment has also been remodeled and drafted into use.

CHANDLER & NEWMAN OPEN BRANCH

VISALIA, CAL., March 4.—Chandler & Newman, talking machine and sewing machine merchants, with headquarters in Fresno, Cal., have opened a branch store here, with L. E. White in charge. In addition to sewing machines a complete stock of Columbia and Bluebird machines is handled. The concern operates stores in Fresno, Modesto, Bakersfield, Taft and Dinuba.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN EDISON PERSONNEL ANNOUNCED

A. H. Curry Takes Full Charge of Musical Phonograph Division of Thomas A. Edison, Inc.—A. L. Walsh Appointed Head of Advertising Department—Charles Edison Comments on Changes

In accordance with a well-defined plan, certain important changes have occurred in the personnel end of the musical phonograph division of Thos. A. Edison, Inc. A. H. Curry, who came on from Texas last August to assume the office of vice-president in charge of the phonograph division, has now whipped an organization of his own into concrete shape, thereby allowing William Maxwell, for some fifteen years head of the phonograph division, to retire and devote his entire energies to the enterprise he started last Fall, known as the William Maxwell Institute of Salesmanship.

The following appointments have been made on the "general staff," under Mr. Curry: first assistant to Mr. Curry, F. C. Beattie, who was associated with Mr. Curry in Texas for a long time and who came on to Orange with him early last Fall; A. L. Walsh, manager of advertising department, which is to include henceforth, in addition to advertising, the work formerly done under the recital and editorial departments; W. F. Taylor continues as manager of the sales promotion department; and J. A. Sherman, manager of the order and service department.

Mr. Walsh has long been associated with the Edison Co., both as a Re-creation artist and as head of the recital and tone test department. Mr. Sherman has also been with the Edison organization for a number of years, formerly serving in the role of assistant sales manager.

The resignations accepted on March 1 in connection with the above appointments include, in addition to Mr. Maxwell, Thomas J. Leonard, for a long time sales manager of the phonograph division; C. G. Wood, advertising manager, and Daniel E. Wheeler, editor of the various Edison house organs.

In discussing the changes with The Review, Mr. Curry made it clear that revamping of the departmental functions has been effected because henceforth it is to be the policy of the company to co-operate with each Edison jobber in an individual way according to the problems presented by the territory of each particular jobber, whereas the policy in the past has been one of nationalizing the sales promotion, jobber co-operation, and dealer service work.

Many new plans which are to form a part of the new program were consummated at the recent conferences between Edison jobbers and Edison officials, which took place in New York last month.

In discussing the above resignations Charles Edison, chairman of the board, said to a representative of The World:

"This is not a reorganization and we do not expect to give up the sales department. However, at their last convention in New York the jobbers reached the decision that they could take care of the circularization better than it could be done from the plant, and the board of directors of Thos. A. Edison, Inc., have concurred in this decision.

"It is with a great deal of regret that we announce the resignation of Mr. Maxwell as an officer of Thos. A. Edison, Inc., effective March 1. The successful and rapid expansion of the Maxwell Institute of Salesmanship leads Mr. Maxwell to believe he has no option but to concentrate his entire time and effort on its further development.

"As the active management of the phonograph industry has been in the hands of A. H. Curry for some months, Mr. Maxwell's decision will not cause any change in policy."

NEW EMERSON SHOP IN DALLAS

Modern Establishment in Texas City Handles Emerson Line of Phonographs and Records Exclusively—C. L. Mahoney, Manager

DALLAS, TEX., March 7.—The Emerson Shop, a very distinctive and particularly modern music store, has been added to Dallas' already large number of splendid music stores. This shop will handle Emerson phonographs and records exclusively. It is located at 1303 Elm street, in the building formerly occupied by the Adam Schaff Piano Co.

C. L. Mahoney, manager, is most enthusiastic over the many innovations that have been incorporated in its ultra modern equipment. Among these is a unique self-service plan, which offers all customers the privilege of hearing records in sound-proof demonstration booths, on motor-driven machines.

COLUMBIA ARTISTS ON BROADWAY

One of the newest entertainment places along Broadway is the Folies Bergere, which opened recently with the Southern Plantation Revue. This revue, which is an all-colored company, was conceived and staged by Lew Leslie, and is called "Night Time in Dixie-Land." Included in the cast are a number of prominent artists, among whom is Edith Wilson, exclusive Columbia artist. She is accompanied by Johnny Dunn and his original jazz hound orchestra, which is also making records for the Columbia library.

The Grand Rapids Talking Machine Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., has incorporated in that State, with a capital of $1,000. The new concern has been well equipped with a complete stock of talking machines and records.

W. C. FUHRI RETURNS FROM TRIP

Okeh General Sales Manager Finds Conditions Steadily Improving—Jobbers and Dealers Pleased With New Window Display Service

W. C. Fuhri, general sales manager of the record division of the General Phonograph Corp., New York, returned to New York recently after an extensive Southern and Western trip, during which he visited Cleveland, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, New Orleans, Dallas, Atlanta and other points. He states that conditions in the South are splendid, and that generally speaking there is a steady improvement noticeable in practically all sections. Okeh distributors are doing a healthy business, and judging from their reports there is every reason to believe that 1922 will be their banner year.

The distributors advised Mr. Fuhri that Okeh dealers are delighted with the new Okeh window displays and poster service. They are using them to splendid advantage and practically all of the distributors in this territory have stated that this service is acting as a direct stimulant to their business.

The Trade in BOSTON and NEW ENGLAND
 JOHN H. WILSON, Manager
 324 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, MASS.

BOSTON, Mass., March 6.—February was not a very good month locally and there are many reasons for the peculiar slump business took. One thing that played its part in lessening the volume of business was the fact that so many people were busy fixing up their tax returns and then there is the strike situation which is affecting some of the mill centers, Pawtucket in particular. The dealers in those places, who really buy their goods from Boston for the most part, are doing next to nothing, which is just what one might expect, so in those cities and towns one need not expect a return to normalcy until the strikes are a thing of the past, and, speaking for Pawtucket, a settlement does not look promising, as neither side is willing at this writing to submit to arbitration. Everyone is looking forward to better conditions in March and already most convincing evidences of betterment are materializing.

Need of Association Co-operation

The question of the next dinner or luncheon of the New England Music Trade Association is interesting the trade just now. O, for some men of advanced ideas, men with a vision who can see the value of a trade organization and who will co-operate with Frank Horning, the president of the Association. Before Mr. Horning's election the talking machine business did not have, and quite naturally, much interest in this body, but now that a man closely allied with the trade is head of it a certain local pride should possess some of the leaders to the end that Mr. Horning might feel that he had the earnest support of his co-workers in anything that might reasonably be proposed by way of getting the talking machine and piano men (in many cases they are one and the same) to meet periodically. Just now it is proposed to get the men together at luncheon once a month, and that should not be impossible. The Engineers' Club has been spoken of as a convenient place at which to meet and it is to be hoped that when the trade next peruses this department it may read something definite.

Celebrate Caruso Memorial Week

Caruso Memorial Week was widely recognized among the Victor dealers in the city. The show windows of both stores of M. Steinert & Sons Co. contained elaborate displays calculated to promote a new interest in the Caruso records. In Boylston street there was a miniature stage and against a white satin background there was a picture of the great singer and a broad band of the Italian colors serving as a frame. Suspended from the top were baskets of flowers and there were discs suspended against the white satin. In the Arch street store there was a similar display on a smaller scale. Over the top of both displays was this legend: "The Victor has transformed his art into a living reality that will endure forever."

In one of the windows of the department store of the Gilchrist Co. the display was against a black background. There was a picture of Caruso and in the foreground two lighted tapers with a quantity of the singer's records scattered about.

The Oliver Ditson Co. devoted a window to a Caruso display and a picture within a beautifully lighted cabinet or booth, surmounted by the Victor dog, attracted much attention. The Jordan Marsh Co. had a big display of musical merchandise, with many instruments included and at one side was a Victor machine with many records and a picture of Caruso.

To Distribute Record Lines

The Lansing Sales Co., Inc., now has the distribution of the Okeh records and it will also distribute the Fonotipia records in this territory. A. J. Cullen has been having considerable success with both lines and when the gold sign on the window announcing the Okeh has been finished passers-by will know for a certainty that right at 170 Harrison avenue the trade can find this line of goods.

Visits the Local Victor Jobbers

R. A. Drake, western Massachusetts representative for the Victor, and who also has the New Hampshire and Vermont territory, was in town to-day and was in conference with the Eastern Co., the Ditson Co. and the Steinert Co., local jobbers of the Victor. This is the first time that Mr. Drake has been here, for he has been in that territory only a few weeks.

Brunswick Line With Symphony Co.

The Symphony Talking Machine Shop, Inc., lately located at 54 Bromfield street, has moved to 24 Tremont street, the change having been made on March 1. The new store is conveniently located on the second floor. In its announcement sent to its customers it makes especial mention of the Brunswick line which it now carries. Addresses Columbia Dealers

Fred E. Mann, manager in this territory for the Columbia Co., addressed his dealers toward the end of February relative to the denial of the application for a receivership for the company and the plans that are now under way for the readjustment of the company's affairs. Mr. Mann, in part, said in this communication:

our loyal dealers no little concern. The financial reorganization of the Columbia Co., however, which has been concurred in by both the banks and merchandise creditors of the Columbia Co., has progressed so far that an application for a receivership on the grounds of insolvency could not possibly be concurred in by the court. I trust that this court decision may serve to allay any fears or doubts in the mind of any dealer as to the solvency of the Columbia Co. and the justification for the continued loyal support which Columbia dealers generally have accorded the company in spite of the most pernicious character of competitive propaganda."

Making Western Business Trip

R. O. Ainslie, of the Hallet & Davis Co., which will shortly have an interesting announcement to make to the talking machine trade, is now on an extended business trip through the West, which will keep him out for several weeks; in fact, he is scarcely likely to get home much before April 1. Mr. Ainslie was accompanied by his wife and child, whom he left at Lexington, Ky., Mrs. Ainslie's old home. Mr. Ainslie also remained there for a short time and from that point his itinerary took him to Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Springfield, Mo.; Kansas City, Topeka, Wichita, Oklahoma City, Okmulgee, Tulsa, Fort Worth and other Texas cities, finally bringing him to New Orleans.

Remick Opens New Song Shop

J. H. Remick & Co. have opened a new song shop in the New Loew's Theatre Building on Massachusetts avenue, on the West Side of the city (Back Bay section), and it is in charge of Charles Scribner, who heretofore has been the manager at Remick's Tremont street shop. The new store is featuring the Columbia and Brunswick lines.

Why Brunswick Records Are Superior.

Brunswick owners and Brunswick dealers often ask why Brunswick Records are so much better than other records and what is done in Brunswick Studios to make them so.

The answer is, that while recording itself requires both the skill of the artist and the knowledge of the scientist, there is no magic formula for fine record making.

In the last analysis it is simply the combination of the best men, methods, materials and machines that money can buy—and then the taking of infinite pains in every detail.

Brunswick Records are often made and remade many times before Brunswick standards are entirely satisfied.

Bay State Music Corp. Extends Lines

The Bay State Music Corp., which is now occupying the former E. B. Shiddell Co.'s quarters at the corner of Berkeley street and Columbus avenue, and handling the Okeh records, as announced in last month's issue of The World, has now taken on the Wall-Kane needle, for which the concern is the New England factory representative. Salesmen which the company now has in the New England field for all its products include Ray Burke, E. B. Fox and Joseph Donahue, who formerly was with the Lansing Sales Co. Manager Royer says his company had a very good February and the prospects for March were exceedingly promising.

Extends Field of Operations

The Musical Supply & Equipment Co. has arranged to have all the New England territory come under the management of Joe Burke. This will mean that he will keep a very close oversight over a wider field than formerly and he will shortly start on trips that will take him to the principal centers in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. The Jordan Marsh Co., which is one of the best Sonora accounts the Musical Supply Co. has, lately ordered a large number of expensive period models, for which there is quite a demand.

Rearranging Steinert Stores

Kenneth Reed returned to-day from a week's trip among the M. Steinert Co.'s stores in Springfield, Waterbury, New Haven and Bridgeport, in all of which places some important changes are being made so as to meet the needs of increasing business. One of the important improvements is the removal of the booths from the rear of the stores to the front nearer the entrances, which will prove more convenient for customers and will also give more room. When Mr. Reed finished his supervision of the contemplated changes he went over to New York, where he has a host of friends. He is looking forward to attending the Victor jobbers' executive meeting to be held in the metropolis March 15 and 16. Question: Will it "put it over" that held in Boston a year ago?

Miss Dorothy Crane Weds

Miss Dorothy Crane, for eight years connected with the C. C. Harvey Co. as secretary to Winthrop A. Harvey and Ernest A. Cressey, was married on Washington's Birthday to Donald Francis, of South Weymouth. Her associates in the warerooms were most generous in presenting this popular young woman with wedding gifts and silver, cut-glass, pictures and other things. A fortnight before her marriage she was the recipient of a "shower" from her young women friends. She has the congratulations of a host of acquaintances.

Winthrop A. Harvey Goes South

Winthrop A. Harvey, head of the C. C. Harvey Co., is away with Mrs. Harvey on a Southern trip. He shipped his Franklin car to Savannah, Ga., by water and went to that city by train, using the car thence southward. He is due home within a week. Earlier in February Mr. Cressey also enjoyed a trip South, being accompanied by Mrs. Cressey.

Local Interest in Columbia Co.

There was considerable interest manifested locally in the advertisement which appeared on the last day of the month, put out by the Columbia Co. and addressed to the holders of the five-year 8 per cent gold notes of the company who had not deposited them. It is of interest to know if there are a great many such holders in and around Boston.

Good Vocalion Business

Manager Wheatley, of the Vocalion Co., says that the February business was not as good as that of January, despite the fact that considerable newspaper advertising had been put out. Just now he is mapping out plans for a window display of an electrical nature which promises to be something quite out of the ordinary, something that is sure to attract crowds.

Alex. Steinert Enjoying Southland

Alexander Steinert, of the M. Steinert Co., is enjoying the balmy climate of the South, and he is on the golf links every chance he gets. Robert Steinert, of the same firm, is due home in a few days from Bermuda, whither he went after a very strenuous Winter.

Miss Grace Barr Makes Over Steinert Dept.

Miss Grace Barr, who keeps her eye on the educational work of the Steinert's Victor department, has been in Providence making over the Victor department in the establishment of the Flint Adaskin Co., especially installing a new system. Subsequently Miss Barr went to Laconia, N. H., where she supervised some of the arrangements of the new store of W. H. Avery, who already operates three stores in New Hampshire.

New Victrolas in Demand

The new Victrolas of the horizontal type in four models are now in the possession of many of the Victor dealers throughout this territory and they are being received very well. As the Spring progresses it is believed that there will be quite a heavy call for these models.

Congratulations!

Emmet Ryan, one of the city salesmen for the Steinert house, is the proud father of a nine-pound boy, who was born on February 12, and the lusty youngster has been named Emmet Lincoln Ryan. Best wishes.

Calling on the Victor Jobbers

F. B. Bibighaus, assistant manager of the traveling department of the Victor, was in town for two days making calls on Victor jobbers.

Course on Appreciation of Music

Under the auspices of the department of education of this State there is now being given a university extension course in "The Appreciation of Music," which bids fair to do a lot toward inculcating a better understanding of the noble art. The lectures are given in the lecture hall of the Boston Public Library and the lecturer is Henry Gideon, a musician and organist of this city. Already two lectures have been given on "How to Listen to Music" and "The Folk Song," which is called the foundation of all music. The next lecture is this coming Saturday, on "The Climax of Church Music," and some of the succeeding topics that will be considered are the "Symphony Orchestra," "Typical Song Recital," "The Symphonic Poem," "Opera, Old and New," "Opera and the Workaday World," taking "Louise" as an example; "The Music of Russia" and "Tendencies in American Music." In the circular that is sent out the purpose of the course set down "is to give increased power to enjoy good music through intelligent listening and non-technical study."

Included in the company, which numbered about of the steps that warrant promotion. Mr. Stanchfield also appeared at one or two other conferences besides the opening one and he was always listened to with the deepest interest.

William Maxwell, first vice-president of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., also was a speaker at the opening conference, and he, too, had much to say that was valuable on the principles of salesmanship. He paid his respects to the bonus question which is now interesting the entire country and expressed the belief that the problem would be solved satisfactorily very soon. He also was of a highly optimistic turn as regards the business of the country in the near future, and he predicted better prices for cotton, corn and wheat by July 1, such as would tend to improve conditions in all commercial avenues.

One thing that Mr. Maxwell said was that the profession of salesman was one of the oldest in the world, yet it wasn't treated as a profession. Salesmen, he went on, are not born any more than a doctor or lawyer, though, of course, some have more adaptability for the work than have others. Highly technical training is necessary to make a man a good salesman.

Thursday was the big day in the convention, if one might call it that, and Mr. Maxwell was again on the scene to enlist the attention of the salesmen. Present on this occasion also was Eugene Lockhart, actor, who, in discussing salesmanship, dwelt upon the necessity of a good approach and of the value of personality. He gave some interesting examples—really he acted them out—of how to approach a man and by facial expression showed what the play of feature can do by way of attracting or repelling a man.

Frederick A. Silliman, head of the Pardee-Ellenberger Co., Inc., and William Adams, credit manager of the house, were on the scene as often as business would permit, and it was the general consensus of opinion that the school was an unqualified success.

Among those present were the following: Gordon P. Haley, Bernice M. Haley, Astle Music Co., Houlton, Me.; R. W. Longfellow, Wm. McDermott, Miss Frances Adams, Atherton Furniture Co., Brockton, Mass.; Miss M. Edna Mitchell, Atherton Furniture Co., Waterville, Me.; Clarence Marvel, Atherton Fowler Fur Co., Worcester, Mass.; W. W. Averill, Putnam, Conn.; W. W. Ballard, Miss M. H. Ballard, Mrs. F. C. Bixby, W. W. Ballard, Salem, Mass.; Miss Barite, Barite Talking Machine Co., Boston; S. J. Horgan, Barnard, Sumner & Putnam, Worcester, Mass.; Philip Bassett, E. G. Bassett, Bristol, Conn.; L. E. Harmon, Bon Marché Dry Goods Co., Lowell, Mass.; A. M. Fontain, J. J. Bradley, Marlboro, Mass.; G. C. Brodrib, H. E. Blair, Brodrib & Blair, Waterbury, Conn.; R. A. Burr, Eastport, Me.; K. M. Cahoon, Waltham, Mass.; Edwin Reinhold, F. H. pensive Columbia outfit, together with $5 worth of records. He was especially particular to have included "O, Dry Those Tears." He tendered a check for $100 and received in change $10. As he went out the door he called back, "Be sure and don't forget 'O, Dry Those Tears.'" Subsequently, Jack found that other talking machine dealers had been visited and the same game played on them. Jack hasn't yet finished trying to "dry those tears," for he's $10 out. O, boy!

SUFFER DAMAGE FROM FIRE

LEWISTON, ME., March 8.—The Atherton Furniture Co., located on Main street, this city, suffered a bad fire the latter part of February, and the Columbia department in particular was badly damaged. However, the firm lost no time in clearing up the debris and getting rebuilt, and it is expected that the store, including the talking machine department, will be ready for reopening about March 15. A large consignment of Columbia goods has been ordered from the Boston headquarters and they are to be shipped there in a few days.

Always do your best and you can face the worst that may befall.

HEIDNER'S MAGNIFICENT QUARTERS

Interior of Store Most Artistically Arranged for Display of Musical Instruments

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., March 1.—J. G. Heidner & Son, Inc., of 482 Main street, this city, which lately bought out the Victor business of Taylor's Music Store, long established in Springfield, has just had the interior made over from designs by the Unit Construction Co., the work having been done under the supervision of George A. Lyons, who, as the representative of this Philadelphia concern, is widely known in the trade. In the front of the store is a beautiful lobby, with a series of cases for musical instruments, and there are six comfortable booths. The Victor business is in charge of Secretary Clark, of Heidner & Son, and this store, which really is a branch of the larger Holyoke establishment conducted by this company, in its beautiful ivory finish promises to be a very successful establishment. The Holyoke store, by-the-by, which carries Victor, Edison and Columbia lines, has been having a very lucrative business of late.

SENTIMENTAL SHARPER OPERATES

PORTLAND, ME., March 6.—The many friends of Jack Shaughnessy, who conducts a very successful Columbia store in this city, are having a laugh at his expense and the story is too good to keep to one's self, so here goes: A short time ago a well-groomed and good-looking young man entered Shaughnessy's store and ordered an ex-

Notable Gatherings of Dealers During the Month—Business Rather Uneven—Victrola Exposition Arouses Interest

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 8.—The talking machine business was rather listless throughout the past month, in both a wholesale and a retail way. Everybody did some business, but there was no briskness about it. The sales were pretty well distributed, as far as grades of machines were concerned. The tendency to defer buying until general conditions improve seemed well distributed also. The sales of records were more satisfactory, the booths being crowded on release days, and there being a fairly good run of custom in between.

Some Recent Trade Changes

The Brunswick has deserted music row on Olive street and is now at 915 to 919 North Sixth street. The move was made in order to get better and larger accommodations for the company's growing business.

The Taylor Music Co., Columbia, Mo., has been reorganized, following the retirement of the founder, John N. Taylor, who disposed of his interest to L. T. Ralston. Mr. Ralston has been elected president and D. L. Gribble, vice-president. The business will be continued under the same name.

Admirers of Caruso Are Busy

Some enthusiastic admirer of Caruso is making a collection of his photographs by robbing the music stores. Recently photographs disappeared from booths in the Kieselhorst and Smith-Reis stores. The one taken from the Kieselhorst store was autographed and was obtained with difficulty and, of course, cannot be replaced.

G. P. Ellis, secretary of the New York-Chicago Talking Machine Co., recently spent several days here.

Reorganize Morning Study-hour Class

A. W. Hosier, who was recently appointed manager of the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney talking machine department, has reorganized the morning study-hour class and it meets under his supervision three mornings a week.

Getting Out Slow-moving Records

A four months' contest in the sale of overstocked and slow-moving records by the Kieselhorst Piano Co. closed in February with Miss Marie Auberman leading. During this time, $1,611.95 worth of overstock records were sold, 697 of them Red Seal and 564 of other kinds. Mr. Maetten, the manager, started another contest at once, supplying each salesperson with a list of fifty records. Some of these, which have been longest on the shelves, he is giving double credit for. The lists will be exchanged weekly. The results are checked up daily on the Red Seal Derby.

Fred Lehman, of the Lehman Music House, East St. Louis, has been spending a few weeks in California with his brother.

To Introduce the Victrola Exposition

A clever arrangement of material and ideas, to be called a "Victrola Exposition," has been made by the Koerber-Brenner Co., of this city, to be used by its dealers. It consists of eight white columns a foot and a half square by seven feet high, which will be used to form an aisle from the front door to the back of the store, where a Queen Anne Victrola will be displayed against draperies. The columns will carry on each side the picture of a Victor artist, a record by the artist, and a neatly lettered card bearing an annotation of the same. The columns are topped with a Victor dog. Outside the store, two fourteen-foot poles bear a banner announcing the Victrola Exposition. On display in the store also will be the Victor factory's glass-encased Victrola, and one of the very old Victor trade-mark Victrolas.

The Exposition will open in Harrisburg, Ill., in the store of L. L. Parker, who plans to do some seven thousand lines of advertising and to distribute souvenirs during the week of March 13. Daily programs for different groups of people will be held throughout the week.

Celebrate Caruso Memorial Week

Caruso Memorial Week was observed in St. Louis by placing in the various retail houses along Olive street posters bearing the picture of Caruso and the words, "Enrico Caruso—Born forty-nine years ago on the 27th of February—The Caruso American Memorial Foundation has designated this week as Caruso week—a week to awaken musical interest." These cards were furnished by the Victrola dealers, whose window displays reflect this occasion.

Successful Series of Concerts

A most successful series of concerts by Princess Watahwaso, Victor artist, was given in the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney recital hall, on February 16, 17 and 18. Two concerts a day were given by the Princess in her native Indian costumes and every concert filled to overflowing the spacious hall. On Friday the music clubs of the city were invited for a special program. School children from the city schools and from suburban districts attended in great numbers, accompanied by their teachers. Miss B. Rosenbrugh, of the Scruggs educational department, under whose auspices it was given, acted as accompanist.

During the County Teachers' Convention on February 24 and 25, at Anna, Ill., Miss Golda Airy, of the Koerber-Brenner Co., spoke twice each day on music in the schools.

TRI-STATE VICTROLA DEALERS' ASSOCIATION MEETS

Value of Continuous Advertising Stressed by J. J. Davin—E. C. Rauth and C. B. Gilbert Also Speak—Memory of Caruso Honored—Over 100 Attend Most Successful Gathering

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 7.—The Tri-State Victrola Dealers' Association met at the Hotel Claridge in this city on Monday evening, February 27. Over a hundred members were present and pronounced it a most profitable gathering. The meeting began with a dinner at 6 P. M. The date being the birthday of Caruso, the members remained standing during the playing of the last recorded record of Caruso, the "Crucifixus," from the "Messe Solennelle."

Music during the dinner was furnished by the new Victrola 280, which most of those present had not seen. Other machines on display were the Victrola 260, the Victrola XVI, with the glass lids and sides, which is a part of the Koerber-Brenner Victrola Exposition, as well as the little trade-mark Victrola. The dinner was furnished from the funds presented to the Tri-State Association by the St. Louis dealers, the surplus from the last concert of the Eight Famous Victor Artists.

Following the dinner, J. J. Davin, of the Reincke-Ellis Co., spoke on dealer advertising, which he preferred to call business insurance. He pleaded that at least four per cent of the gross business of the Victor dealer be set aside for advertising, and that it be spread out over the year in a constant telling of the story. He suggested profitable newspaper advertising and commented upon the fact that almost all of the newspaper advertising is given over to machines, the records being sadly neglected. Other advertising mediums talked of were: direct by mail, billboards and concerts.

Mr. Davin was followed by E. C. Rauth and C. B. Gilbert, of the Koerber-Brenner Co., who told of selling a Victrola from the mechanical standpoint. Mr. Rauth's topic was cabinet construction and he covered the material from the time it left the forest to the finished article as it reaches the dealer. His talk was illustrated by portions of the unfinished Victrola, showing its construction in detail.

Mr. Gilbert told the dealers of the mechanical construction of the reproducing elements, covering exhaustively the styles, soundbox, goose-neck, tone arm, amplifying compartment and doors. Copious notes were taken by the dealers and all expressed their pleasure at the knowledge gained.

The evening's talks closed with the subject of selling a Victrola from a musical standpoint, by Miss Golda Airy, of the Koerber-Brenner service department. Miss Airy spoke on handling competition without technical discussion, and upon making the proper manipulation of

BRUNSWICK DEALERS' CLUB IS ORGANIZED IN ST. LOUIS

P. L. Deutsch Addresses Largely Attended and Enthusiastic Meeting of Brunswick Dealers of St. Louis and Vicinity at the Hotel Statler—Board of Directors Appointed

St. Louis, Mo., March 8.—Brunswick dealers of this city and vicinity had a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting Monday evening, February 20, at the Hotel Statler, which was arranged by Manager Jackson and his assistants in the local Brunswick store. P. L. Deutsch, secretary and general sales director of the Brunswick organization, came down from Chicago and was the guest of honor and made the address of the evening. There was a general discussion of experiences during the past year and policies for the year to come. Some suggestions were made by dealers which Mr. Deutsch considered of such merit that he accepted them on the spot and promised that they should be put into effect without delay. A Brunswick Dealers' Club was formed, the first of the kind in the country. It will be of a social character and will have no officers. In place of these a board of directors was named, as follows: E. C. Storer, Baldwin Piano Co.; J. F. Ditzell, Famous & Barr Co.; Frank J. Peterman, Stocke-Peterman Furniture Co.; J. H. Kirkland, Kirkland Piano Co., and Harry Meyer, Meyer Piano Co.

In the course of his address Mr. Deutsch emphasized the importance of the formation of the first Brunswick Dealers' Association and the example it offered for Brunswick retailers in other sections of the country to get together for mutual benefit. He paid a tribute to members of the Brunswick sales force who had worked to form the Association, but declared their work would have been in vain but for the splendid work of the dealers.

In the course of his talk Mr. Deutsch stated that retailers generally were tired of the preaching of economists, and of those who had much to say about putting pep into sales campaigns and being more aggressive, for the fact that the Brunswick dealers were successful indicated that they needed no such advice.

He also took occasion to outline the care used in making Brunswick machines and in the selection of the materials entering into their manufacture, and announced that the Brunswick quality standard would be rigidly maintained.

In closing, Mr. Deutsch said: "There are some who doubt the permanency of the phonograph, but let me predict here that it has come to stay, perhaps not in its present form, but in an advanced stage. We see a future that will some day make us look back and smile at our misgivings."

WILL TRIPLE ITS FLOOR SPACE

Manufacturers' Phonograph Co. Leases More Space to Accommodate Growing Business—Remains in Present Building

Arrangements were recently completed by Geo. W. Lyle, president of the Manufacturers' Phonograph Co., New York, manufacturer of the Strand phonograph, whereby this company will triple the floor space that it has been occupying as executive and sales offices. The company was heretofore located in a moderate-sized suite on the twelfth floor of the building at 95 Madison avenue, New York, but with the steady expansion of the business this space was soon found inadequate. Mr. Lyle thereupon leased a suite on the same floor, which has at least three times the floor space of the old quarters, and in these warerooms there will be ample room for the display of the Strand line. The new offices are now ready for occupancy and a general invitation has been extended to the trade to visit the new home of the Strand.

The Ideal Music Co., of 29 John street, New York City, Victor dealer, is planning extensive alterations to its establishment in the near future.

Resumption of Iron and Steel Industries Creates Business for Dealers — Plan to Reorganize Pittsburgh Association — Trade Optimistic

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 7.—An unmistakable upward trend in the talking machine trade in the Pittsburgh district has been very noticeable the past few weeks. Coupled with this there is a marked feeling of optimism among the various talking machine dealers, who feel that there is bound to be a better tone to business. This feeling is based on the gradual resumption of business in the iron and steel centers. Just a few days ago the first pay day in seven months was observed in the Allegheny Valley. There was distributed over $450,000 in cash and the little town of Tarentum had a gala Saturday trading day. The Windsor Music Co. and the Lechner & Schoenberger Co., dealers in talking machines, records and other musical instruments, both reported a good day and evening in business.

Resumption of Industries Creates Optimism

From what can be gleaned from the officials of the large steel and iron companies, coal companies, etc., this Spring will see a better condition as far as operation of mills and mines is concerned. No concern of any moment is felt at the approach of April 1, when the miners' scale expires and a strike is expected, the usual result at that time. It is felt that while some miners may be idle a day or two as a protest against the action of some of the employing operators, the large majority, who have been idle for months, will be eager to get the scale signed and be ready to dig coal. The feeling here is that the "million dollars a day" wage scale will make its return before the end of the Summer. All signs point to a busy industrial season in the Pittsburgh district and with pay days every week and millions of dollars sent into circulation there is bound to be a reflex action that will bring vast good to the talking machine merchants here and in adjoining territory.

G. H. Rewbridge Looks for Good Business

George H. Rewbridge, manager of the wholesale Victrola department of the W. F. Frederick Co., one of the best posted men in the trade, in a chat with The Talking Machine World representative, said: "My view of the talking machine situation is that there will be a good season developed later this year than usual. I feel that there will be a great many Victor machines sold and also a huge demand for the Victor records. While it is true that there has been a sort of slump in the business, I am more than convinced that there will be many orders placed. The industrial situation which, at the present, is rather perplexing, is slowly finding the light, and I believe that with busy mills and mines there will be placed in circulation such a vast amount of money that good must accrue to the talking machine dealers. I am far from being a pessimist and wish to be lined up with the optimists. That is the only sane and reasonable position to take these days. The talking machine dealer who uses up-to-date methods to attract trade will attract it and will get the business."

Plan to Reorganize Pittsburgh Association

Tentative plans were formulated at a dinner-meeting of a committee of the Talking Machine Dealers' Association of Pittsburgh looking toward the reorganization of the association with a view to enlarging its sphere of activity. At present the membership is confined to talking machine dealers in Allegheny County. It is proposed to change this by-law to permit talking machine dealers from Western Pennsylvania points, such as Altoona, Washington, Greensburg, New Castle, Beaver Falls, Mercer and other cities and towns, to affiliate with the Association. The present membership is confined to Victor, Columbia and Edison dealers. There are a number of well-known talking machine dealers who handle the Sonora, Aeolian-Vocalion, Cheney, Brunswick, Paramount, Pathé and other well-known makes of talking machines who will be approached within the next few weeks by a committee to ascertain their views relative to affiliating with the Association. Members who attended the special committee meeting and participated in the discussion were John Henk, A. R. Meyer, Mark Fishel, Leo Half, H. C. Hornberger, J. B. Bennett, Henry Wood, William D. Sahner and H. E. Young. Mr. Henk emphasized the plan of inviting the dealers to an open meeting to place before them the advantages of membership and it is quite likely that this plan will be carried out.

T. B. Niles at Kelley Music Co. Opening

T. B. Niles, assistant manager of the Pittsburgh offices of the Columbia Graphophone Co., attended the formal opening of the new Columbia Grafonola department of the Kelley Music Co., at Fairmont, West Va., last month. Mr. Niles stated that the new department is a model of its kind and one of the best equipped in the State. The Kelley Music Co., exclusive Columbia dealer, has devoted the upper floor of the music house to the Columbia Grafonola department. There are eight demonstration booths, each of which is sound-proof and handsomely furnished. The decorations throughout the store are most attractive. W. G. Kelley, the proprietor, has been engaged in the music business in Fairmont the past twelve years.

News Brieflets

Miss Ruth Rhodes, a popular saleswoman in the Victrola department of the Rothert Co., Altoona, Pa., attended the Victor School of Salesmanship at Camden, N. J.

W. C. Dierks, of the C. C. Mellor Co., Victor dealer, spent a week at Lexington, Ky., at the horse show.

Plan DeForeest Reception

Plans are being formulated by the Piano Merchants' Association of Pittsburgh for a reception and dinner on Thursday evening, March 16, to be tendered to M. V. DeForeest, the well-known music merchant and Music Week promoter, of Sharon, Pa. Mr. DeForeest, in his stores at Sharon, Greenville and Warren, O., handles the Victor, Edison and Brunswick machines. As most of the piano merchants affiliated with the Association handle talking machines, the reception will be one for talking machine dealers as well as piano merchants. The coming here of Mr. DeForeest on March 16 will mark the termination of his transcontinental tour in the interest of the music trade and he will tell his hearers at the dinner of the work accomplished during his tour.

Prize Winners in Edison Sales Contest

Ranking among the leaders in a contest conducted by the Girard Phonograph Co., Miss Carrie Fries and Samuel G. Dunkelberger, attached to the sales force of the Metropolitan Phonograph Co., qualified to receive a free course in salesmanship that was held in Philadelphia under the auspices of the Girard Co. By having sold more than $23,000 worth of Edison phonographs and accessories, Miss Fries led four divisions in the district.

Preparing for Music Week

Pennsylvania will have a State-wide music week, starting April 30 and ending May 6, under the direction of the music division of the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction. Hollis Dann, State director of music, will have charge of the plans. Prof. Dann has issued a program for use during the week. A number of the talking machine dealers here will cooperate in the work of the schools during Music Week.

European Tour of Business Men

Talking machine dealers of western Pennsylvania and vicinity have been notified of the tour of American business men, which will cover Central Europe, Belgium, France, England and Ireland. The party will sail from New York on June 10 and the plan is to return some time in August. The United States Line's steamship George Washington, one of the largest and most palatial ships afloat, will be used by the tourists. C. C. Latus, executive secretary of the Piano Merchants' Association of Pittsburgh, with offices at 623 Pittsburgh Life Building, will furnish rates and complete data about the tour to all who write him. Thus far 160 persons have booked for the tour.

Edison Dealers to Meet

The Buehn Phonograph Co., Edison distributor, is planning to hold an informal meeting and dinner at the Fort Pitt Hotel the latter part of this month. Due notice will be sent to all of the Edison dealers in the Pittsburgh zone in a few days. The affair will be sort of a get-together meeting, and after the business and dinner are over there will be some time left for a dance or other social diversions.

A. A. Buehn, treasurer of the Buehn Co., is quite optimistic over the outlook for the Edison business in his territory and believes that there will be an increased demand for the Edison line, due to the recent reduction in prices of the Edison records and some of the Edison phonographs.

Good Call for Starr Products

Manager Niles, of the Starr Phonograph Co., reports a very satisfactory demand for the Starr phonographs and Gennett records.

Health Builders Records Popular

T. E. Shortell, manager of the Victor department of the S. Hamilton Co., reports a very brisk demand for the Walter Camp Health Builders records, for which the S. Hamilton Co. has been appointed authorized representative and distributor for western Pennsylvania, northern West Virginia and eastern Ohio. Daily demonstrations of the Walter Camp records are made in the S. Hamilton Co.'s stores. No specialty in the talking machine trade in years has made such a decidedly favorable impression as the Health Builders records.

Win the Prize

Miss Hildegard Wehrle and Miss Margaret Stuart, two of the efficient and amiable members of the sales force of the main store of the S. Hamilton Co., were winners recently of a cash prize offered for the best sales of Red Seal records.

IVOGEN ON OKEH RECORDS

Four Records by Opera Star Now Ready—Artist Famous Here and Abroad

The General Phonograph Corp., New York, placed on sale recently four Okeh records made by Maria Ivogen, one of the sensations of the present season in the grand opera world. These records were made in Europe by the International Talking Machine Co. and pressed in the United States by the General Phonograph Corp. Maria Ivogen made her first notable success during the world war, and when she made her debut in New York in January as a member of the Chicago Opera Co. she received an ovation. Musical critics were unanimous in proclaiming her one of the "finds" of the operatic season, and her fame as a coloratura soprano throughout Europe is now being duplicated in this country.

CONVENTION OF EDISON DISC JOBBERS' ASSOCIATION

Jobbers Hold Their Annual Meeting at Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, on February 13 to 15 and Participate in Live Business Program—Present Statuette to Thos. A. Edison on Birthday

The annual convention of the Edison Disc Jobbers' Association was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the week ending February 18, and attracted practically 100 per cent representation, only one Edison jobber not answering to the roll call. An elaborate program, strictly business for the most part, was laid out for the entire three days and the details were all carried out according to schedule.

A number of the jobbers, several of them making up a committee representing the Association, assembled in New York on Saturday, February 11, for the purpose of waiting upon Thos. A. Edison, congratulating him upon his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary which occurred on that day and presenting him with a handsome bronze statuette by Lorado Taft and entitled "Orpheus Consoled."

The convention proper began on Monday morning when the jobbers engaged in general discussions regarding various phases of the business and considered particularly such matters as were to be taken up with the factory officials.

Tuesday was "Laboratory Day," when the various officials of Thos. A. Edison, Inc., met with the jobbers for the discussion of matters of mutual interest. Charles Edison presided at the meeting assisted by the executive staff of the company.

Between the morning and afternoon sessions on Tuesday the Edison officials were the guests of the jobbers at an informal luncheon in the Myrtle Room of the Waldorf, and on Tuesday evening the jobbers in turn were entertained by the Edison Co. executives at an elaborate dinner and dance in the ballroom of the Waldorf, with a long entertainment program provided by Edison artists and others.

The final business session of the Association was held on Wednesday, on which occasion Charles Edison presented to the jobbers the decisions arrived at by the factory officials on matters regarding which conferences were held on Tuesday. Wednesday afternoon was given over to a number of special addresses, the speakers including Dr. Esther L. Gatewood, of the Edison music research department, and assistant to Professor Farnsworth; H. E. Gehle, of the Mechanics & Metals National Bank, and others.

ANNOUNCES NEW CONSOLE MODEL

The Manufacturers' Phonograph Co., New York, manufacturer of the Strand phonograph, has followed its successful introduction of the Queen Anne Model 8 console, listed at $125, with samples of the new Louis XV Model 1 console, listed at $150, and announces immediate deliveries. This new Strand model, which will soon be supplemented by two others, listed at $175 and $200, has the same structural features as the Model 8: the half-lid top, the grille concealed by a drop slide, the all-wood horn and the door covered record shelves. In design it is a splendid reproduction of the distinctive lines of the Louis XV period.

A charter of incorporation has been filed by the Automatic Phonograph Co. with the Secretary of State of Delaware. The new concern is capitalized at $2,000,000.

SILZERS WILL REPRESENT STRAND

Well-known Talking Machine Men to Represent Strand in Four Western States—To Open Offices in Des Moines and Minneapolis

Geo. W. Lyle, president of the Manufacturers' Phonograph Co., New York, manufacturer of the Strand phonograph, announced this week that arrangements have been made whereby Geo. C. Silzer and his brothers, Herman F. and Gustave F., will become exclusive sales representatives for the Strand talking machine in Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and Dakota. They will open representative sales rooms in Des Moines and Minneapolis, and will shortly inaugurate intensive sales campaigns in these important territories.

G. C. Silzer and his brothers have been identified with the talking machine industry for

IGNORING SIGNAL NO. 39

The Battle of Copenhagen, in 1801, was going against the English.

Admiral Parker, an aged and conservative officer, feeling that the situation was hopeless, ordered his aide to run up Signal No. 39.

Thirty-nine was an order to discontinue the engagement.

Lord Nelson, who had direct charge of the battle, continued to walk his deck without appearing to notice it.

Finally, when one of his staff officers called it to his attention, he lifted his glass to his blind eye, and said, "You know, Foley, I have only one eye. I can't see it. Nail my signal for close action to the mast."

In a few hours the enemy fleet was destroyed.

TROUP BROS. TO REMODEL

Work Started on Rearrangement of Company's Store in Harrisburg, Pa.

HARRISBURG, PA., March 6.—Troup Brothers, whose music house is located at 8 North Market Square, are making a number of improvements to the store. The remodeling will involve a new entrance to the store, and the removal of an off-set in the front part of the storeroom, permitting of six or seven additional feet in width at the front of the store. Skylights will be torn out and a metal ceiling installed over the entire first floor.

A large stairway leading from the front of the store will give convenient access to the basement, which will be remodeled and extended to a depth of approximately 125 feet, and finished with hardwood floors. The basement will be utilized for the display of pianos and talking machines, relieving the congested condition of the first floor and permitting the showing of greater stocks.

DITSON & CO. GIVE FINE RECITAL

Edward Johnson, Chicago Opera Tenor and Victor Artist, the Feature at Monday Morning Musicales—First of a Series of Similar Concerts

A large number of Victor talking machine dealers attended a concert and reception in the concert hall of Chas. H. Ditson & Co. on Monday morning, February 27, when Edward Johnson, popular tenor of the Chicago Opera Co. and well-known Victor artist, was the guest-artist and sang a number of selections which have already been recorded for the Victor Co., among them "Someone Worth While," which appears in the Red Seal list for April. Mr. Johnson was in excellent voice and was most generous in responding to repeated encores. Assisting artists were Miss Anna Welsh, harpist, and Frank Umbriaco, a young Italian accordion player.

The concert was the first of a series to be given under the auspices of the wholesale Victor talking machine department of Chas. H. Ditson & Co., of which P. E. W. Carlson is manager. A prominent record artist will be featured at each of the concerts which are to be given for the purpose of making the Victor dealers acquainted with some of those artists who do the recording.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co. now have an elaborately equipped wholesale Victor department located on the eighth floor of the company's building at 8 East Thirty-fourth street, the equipment including a model show window in which the display is changed at regular intervals, together with model booths, record filing and sales systems.

HEARING HELD IN THE VICTOR CO.—OPERA DISC CO. SUIT

Action Brought to Enjoin Sale of German Records Made From Matrices Claimed by Victor Co. Comes Up Before Judge Chatfield, in U. S. District Court in Brooklyn—Briefs to Be Filed March 21

The action brought by the Victor Talking Machine Co. against the Opera Disc Record Co., the Opera Disc Distributing Co. and Max Hesslein, of New York, seeking an injunction preventing the defendants from continuing to import and sell records made in Germany from masters recorded by artists under exclusive contract with the Victor Co., came up for hearing before Judge Chatfield in the U. S. District Court in Brooklyn, N. Y., on Monday, February 27.

At the close of the hearing on Tuesday afternoon both sides were given until March 21 to file briefs, it being agreed between the attorneys that each side should provide opposing counsel with its briefs on March 14, thus providing a week for the preparation of counter arguments. The attorneys agreed that Judge Chatfield was particularly well qualified to pass on the points at issue, having a wide knowledge of such litigation.

The case opened with the presentation of the plaintiff's side by George W. Schurman, of Rounds, Schurman & Dwight, who spent several hours in presenting the Victor Co.'s claims. The Victor Co. cited the fact that a number of prominent artists, including such names as Alda, Bori, Culp, Destinn, Farrar, Gadske, Gluck, Hempel, Melba, Schumann-Heink, Sembrich, Tetrizzini, Amato, Caruso, Goritz, Journet, Ruffo, Scotti, Paderewski, Elman, Kreisler, etc., had been placed under exclusive contract with that company prior to August 14, 1914, the contracts providing for the payment of heavy royalties for the exclusive use of their records and photographs, and that many of the records made by these exclusive artists were being offered by the defendants.

Mr. Schurman went into detail regarding the arrangements made between the Victor Co. and the Gramophone Co. of England in 1901, providing for the interchange of duplicates of record matrices and for the control by the Gramophone Co. in European countries of certain patent rights owned by the Victor Co., and also told of the organization of the Deutsche Gramophon Aktiengesellschaft with 100 shares of stock all controlled by the Gramophone Co. The point was emphasized that the agreement provided only for an interchange of matrices, and did not provide for their purchase or sale.

Shortly after the beginning of the war, it was stated, Alexander Lucas took charge of the D. G. A., purporting to act under the authority of the German Government, and, although the Victor Co. took prompt action through the State Department to protect its rights in the matter and to recover the matrices in possession of the German company, no satisfaction was obtained, and in March, 1917, Lucas sold the assets to the Polyphonwerke Aktiengesellschaft, receiving one million marks for the stock of the company and three million marks for the matrices.

Particular emphasis was laid upon the provisions of paragraph five of Annex Articles 297-298 of the Treaty of Versailles, providing for the delivery to England of trade-marks and unique means of reproduction on demand, with the proviso that the German companies may have copies for use in Germany exclusively. It was stated that the German Government delayed months in forcing the Polyphon Co. to meet the terms of the treaty and to deliver trade-marks and other property demanded, and then delivery of matrices was commenced on a basis that would require several years for completion.

The plaintiff also made the point that the Opera Disc Co. was organized in January, 1921, at a time when war still existed technically between the United States and Germany.

The defense based its argument first upon decisions of United States courts regarding the resale in the United States of goods originally sold out of the country, providing the origin of the merchandise was not hidden. The jurisdiction of the courts of this country in matters affecting the official acts of foreign nations was also questioned, and findings of German courts favoring the rights of the Polyphon Co. to the matrices in dispute were cited.

John D. Meyers and Louis LeDuc, of the legal department of the Victor Co., were in attendance with Mr. Schurman, while C. A. L. Massie, an attorney well known in the talking machine trade, represented Max Hesslein; Johnson & Galston appeared for the Opera Disc Record Co., and Eisman, Lee, Corn & Levien appeared for the Opera Disc Distributing Co. Attorneys representing many other interests in the industry were also present as spectators.

The Trade in PHILADELPHIA and LOCALITY

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 6.—March has opened much more favorably as far as trade is concerned in this city, following a rather uneven February, and distributors and dealers both believe that we are now "over the hill," so to speak, and that a steady and continued improvement will develop as the year grows older. The lessening in the demand for records during February was somewhat unusual, as in years ago this month always seemed to be an excellent sales month for records. Increased interest in records is now manifested, and this has been helped by the "Caruso Week" campaign throughout the country. People have in this way concentrated on records and their importance musically has been impressed upon the purchaser anew. And not records alone, but talking machines of the better type are selling well. Another helpful factor, so far as trade betterment is concerned, is the decreasing evidence of "cut-rate" merchandising. It still exists, unfortunately, but is not as prominent as it was a few months ago. The general public when properly approached is always inclined to buy the standard, reliable, well-advertised products rather than have recourse to the cut-price, nondescript products which are sold under so many various names. The most successful way to fight this cut-rate, stencil, junk campaign is for the dealers to work twice as hard as they have in the past and advertise their products and their reliability, and thus arouse the attention and win the patronage of those who should have talking machines and records in their homes.

Entitled to the Thanks of the Trade

Preparations for the Victor Dealers' Convention, which is just about to open as your correspondent is writing this letter, have been under way for the past month under the auspices of the Philadelphia Victor jobbers. A great program has been prepared and everything done to make this convention one of the most successful of the many held by Victor organizations throughout the country. The final meeting of the committee having this convention in charge was held last week at the Poor Richard's Club and was followed by a dinner. Inasmuch as this convention will be handled in a news way in another part of The World, all that may be said is that the Victor jobbers and all who participated in the success of this convention are certainly entitled to the heartiest thanks of the trade.

New Brunswick Dealers Appointed

The local headquarters of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. reports a very satisfactory condition of business which is steadily expanding. New dealers are steadily falling into line, and at the present time the Pennsylvania territory is well covered in a retail way, but it will be better covered before the year ends. Among the new agencies recently opened were those of the Eccles Music Shop at Carlisle, a new concern which has very attractive quarters; the Hopkins Piano Co., Chester, Pa., which held a formal opening last week.

R. M. Nelson, the local distributor of the Brunswick, is again at his desk following an attack of influenza. He is getting in some very substantial shipments of Brunswick machines, including a number of the new models 217 and 212. It had been impossible to secure these styles before to any great extent. Quite a number of the Queen Anne period Brunswicks are also now on display at the local warerooms. Among the recent visitors at the local headquarters were John I. Monroe, of the Brunswick Phonograph Shop, Williamsport, Pa.; T. A. W. Hoff, Salem, N. J.; Peter Casper, Wilmington, Del.; George E. Eldridge, Pitman, N. J., and Harry Moser, of Morristown, N. J.

The New Blake & Burkhardt Store

The new store of Blake & Burkhardt, 20 South Tenth street, is now in splendid running order and their business in both Edisons and Vocations is reported very much better than for some time past. The business of this old-established firm is expanding, thanks to the enterprising policy of its members.

J. R. Fox Candidate for Legislature

J. R. Fox, Columbia dealer, of White Haven, Pa., has announced himself as the Republican candidate for the legislature from the Second District of Luzern County. His many friends in the trade—and he has a host of them—are backing him to win. He is a retailer who has built up a large Columbia business, and has the equipment to make an excellent legislator. By the way, he recently purchased the White Haven Journal, a weekly newspaper. It can be seen that he recognizes the power of the press as an essential to success.

Luncheon for Joseph Wood

Joseph Wood, supervisor of the repair department of the local Columbia force, was entertained at a luncheon recently by T. M. Kenny, local Columbia dealer, a friend and admirer. The local Columbia branch, by the way, is well pleased with the business transacted in February. The demand for records was especially large, and March has opened with a very satisfactory showing for this company. Recent Columbia visitors were Mr. Fairchilds, of the E. K. Owens Hardware Co., Susquehanna, Pa., and Mr. Felix, of the Felix Department Store, Schuylkill Haven, Pa.

GREATER VICTROLA SALES

Because buyers are now demanding dependable merchandise. Dealers realize the prudence of concentration, also the evil of dissipation—hence the investment in and sale of Victor Product exclusively, whenever possible.

The many Victor Dealers of this Philadelphia territory, who are concentrating their buying with this organization, may know we are equipped for even a still greater Victor business.

Busy Times With the Louis Buehn Co.

The Louis Buehn Co. finds that its dealers are experiencing increased activity, although it has been rather spotty in character and better in some localities than others. Louis Buehn, president of the company, is one of the busiest men in Philadelphia. Besides his duties as chief executive of the large Victor distributing concern which bears his name, Mr. Buehn is also president of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers and has recently been very busy in acting as representative of the Philadelphia Victor distributors in taking over the business of the Geo. D. Ornstein Co. The recent convention of Victor Dealers, held under the auspices of the Philadelphia Victor Jobbers, also has demanded much of Mr. Buehn's time.

Gennett Record Agency

The Witlin Musical Instrument Co., of which Ben Witlin is president, reports a splendid demand for Gennett records and Starr phonographs. A Gennett record agency was recently established in Finigan's Department Store, at 870 Main street, Darby. It is putting out a goodly number of these records. A very fine demonstration of Gennett records is being made by Joseph Morris, 6 North Thirteenth street, this city, who, by the way, has developed a very large trade in these products.

Satisfactory Conditions With Cheney

G. Dunbar Shewell, president of the Cheney Sales Corp., has just returned from a visit to the Cheney headquarters in Chicago, and reports a very busy condition of things prevailing there. It is his opinion that the Cheney phonograph business, not only in the territory which he controls, but throughout the entire country, will exceed all previous accomplishments. There is an increased appreciation of the artistic merits of the Cheney phonograph among discriminating purchasers, and this is the report being received by distributors from dealers everywhere, all of which opens the way to prosperity.

Edison School of Salesmanship Meets

The Edison School of Salesmanship held a series of meetings here in the Snellenburg store the closing week of February, which were largely attended by Edison dealers in this vicinity. The meetings here, as in other cities where they have been held, were under the direction of William Maxwell. Sales talks of an inspiring and instructive nature were given by Mr. Maxwell, Mr. Stanchfield, of the Carnegie Institute, and Eugene Lockhart, the actor. The Edison dealers were enthusiastic over the meetings and were unanimous in their expressions of the value derived from the sales talks.

Penn Phonograph Co. Expansion

The business of the Penn Phonograph Co., Victor distributor, has expanded to a point where it has been found necessary to make use of the entire Penn Building at 913 Arch street. The Penn Phonograph Co. bought this building some years ago and occupied four out of five floors, the second floor being rented to an outside concern. The company has now taken possession of this floor, thus occupying the entire building. This floor is being attractively decorated, and the offices of T. W. Barnhill and H. F. Miller, executives of the firm, will be moved from the third floor to the front of the second floor, thus allowing the entire third floor for record storage. It is reported that the orders for March thus far received would indicate that March will run decidedly ahead of January and February in volume of business.

Big Demand for Record Albums

The National Publishing Co., manufacturer of record albums, states that the exceptional demand reported last month is continuing, with every indication that 1922 will be a big year in albums, judging from the demand.

Doing Well With ConnORIZED Records

The United Music Stores, distributors of ConnORIZED records, report that business is steadily expanding on these records and that a number of new dealers has been added. This company is also a distributor of talking machine accessories and ConnORIZED and Pianostyle music rolls. It is also in possession of a large collection of Italian and other foreign music rolls which are proving very popular.

Good Business in All Departments

H. A. Weymann & Son, Inc., Victor wholesalers, report good business in all departments. In addition to the distribution of Victor merchandise, H. A. Weymann & Son, Inc., are wholesalers of Jones Motrolas, Q R S music rolls, and are manufacturers of the Keystone State line of musical instruments.

Quaker City Columbia Gleanings

Al Herman, popular vaudeville star and exclusive Columbia artist, appeared at Keith's Theatre recently, and his stay in this city was a marked stimulant to the sale of the records which he recently made for the Columbia library.

J. M. Knepper, Columbia dealer at Tamaqua, Pa., is conducting a popularity contest open to all children in Tamaqua and vicinity. Each child is given a list of records and starts out as a sales representative, the idea being that every record sold means a vote. The one having the largest number of votes will win the first prize of $10; the second prize will be $5 and the third and fourth prizes $2.50, respectively. Mr. Knepper is also giving twenty-six additional $1 prizes, and the campaign to date has proven a signal success.

Talking machine dealers in the smaller towns in Pennsylvania are apparently more enterprising and more resourceful in carrying on campaigns for the moving of stock than their brothers in the bigger cities.

To Decorate Remick & Co.'s Quarters

Jerome H. Remick & Co., of this city, are planning to make extensive alterations in their retail warerooms in this city. The entire store will be refitted and a complete equipment for modern musical merchandising will be installed. This will include five hearing rooms and a forty-foot sheet music counter and racks, besides other features of note. The contract for this work was given to Van Veen & Co., Inc., of New York City, and negotiations were concluded between Edward Adams and Joseph Keit, of the Remick Co., and Leon Tobias, secretary of Van Veen & Co. The contract also calls for treatment of the walls and the entire installation will be finished in ivory and blue.

NEW WEYMANN DEALERS' SERVICE

H. A. Weymann & Son, Inc., Victor Wholesalers of Philadelphia, Announce New Sales Promotion Department Under Direction of C. M. Paulson—Valuable Aid to Dealers

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 3.—H. A. Weymann & Son, Inc., well-known Victor wholesalers of this city, have just announced the establishment of a new department of sales promotion under the direction of Charles M. Paulson, formerly of the traveling department of the company. In making the announcement Weymann & Son say: "This department has been established to cooperate with our Victor retailers along general selling lines and for their help and guidance in special problems and educational work. We urge you to avail yourself of the services of this department at any time."

One of the first moves of the new department was to issue an attractive hanger listing twelve Victor records and bearing the caption "Mid-Month Suggestions." The hanger measures 14 by 22 inches, and is designed to stimulate the interest of record patrons during the period between the issuance of the regular monthly supplement by the Victor Co. It is the suggestion of the company that the dealer circularize his mailing list on the mid-month suggestions and carry special advertising featuring the selected records to stimulate business when the interest in the regular monthly supplement has waned a bit.

Mr. Paulson has a number of excellent ideas for the development of dealer service which will be carried out in the near future and may be expected to prove of great value to the retailer. Weymann & Son emphasize the fact that fifty-eight years of experience in the merchandising of music and musical instruments have placed them in a position to offer valuable advice and service to their dealers.

SALT CRYSTALS DO UNCANNY STUNTS

Electrical Experts Show Engineers Marvels That Enter Into Sound Producers

Plans of world-wide communication networked for the next generation, in which combinations of radiotelephony, carrier current, long-distance wire lines and submarine cables will be utilized, were outlined to members of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, who were the guests of the Bell system at its laboratories in the Western Electric Co. building, 463 West street, New York City, recently. Demonstrations of new devices, many shown publicly for the first time, were included in the program.

An instrument termed a stereopticonoscillo-graph enabled the visitors to "see themselves talk." Speaking into an ordinary telephone transmitter, the experimenter saw the effects of his voice projected on a screen in electric waves, which took on various forms according to the words spoken. Vacuum tubes, with an output of 10,000 watts, which, it was said, ultimately would displace heavy machinery in transportation, were shown. The possibilities of using these vacuum tubes in wireless and power fields were unlimited, it was said.

The engineers were interested especially in weird demonstrations of singing, talking and "shimmying" crystals of Rochelle salts, which were produced during the war for submarine detection work. Connected with wire to a talking machine, the saline crystals seemed to speak in a tone much louder than that ordinarily heard from a phonograph horn.

Another novelty was a device whereby one could hear molecules turn over when polarization was changed. Next?

OPTIMISTIC OVER TRADE OUTLOOK

Isador Paschal, general manager of the Pleasing Sound Phonograph Co., New York, has just returned from an extended trip through the South, and expresses himself very optimistically regarding the general situation in the cities visited. He states there is business available for everyone who makes a strong effort to get it. Mr. Paschal expects to leave New York very shortly for a trip through the Middle West in the interest of a campaign recently inaugurated by his company for the purpose of disposing of a great number of motors, which are adopted to any style phonograph, and which are being offered with complete equipment. The Pleasing Sound Phonograph Co. reports that business in the phonograph repair business has shown a decided increase since the first of January, and that business is rapidly returning to normalcy.

A Victor shop has been opened in Salisbury, Md., by Milford Nathan, of Cambridge, Md.

WILL SELL BANKRUPT FIRM'S STOCK

The stock of the Great Northern Phono Supply Works, Inc., of New York City, will be sold at a bankrupt sale, March 16, at the headquarters of the concern, at 57 Fulton street, and at 552 Broadway. The stock consists of machinery, talking machines, motors and other accessories.

Merchants Prepare for Spring Business—Launch Big Columbia Advertising Campaign in Northwest—Blizzards Retard Trade—News

MINNEAPOLIS and ST. PAUL, MINN., March 8.—It would be possible to expatiate at some length on the conditions in the music trade in the Northwest, but at best it would be a space-killing proposition and would add nothing to the stock of human knowledge. When the weather has not shown a temperature mark below zero blizzards have been raging, and between the cold and the wind the conditions have not been conducive to trade activity. But the music merchants of the Northwest, little and big, are getting by very nicely and are all prepared to inaugurate a brisk Spring business.

Launches Columbia Campaign

Something has been said in the daily papers about the difficulties of the Columbia Graphophone Co., which are now, happily, past. Whatever is detrimental does not, however, apply to the Northwest, as W. L. Sprague, in charge of Columbia activities here, is now launching one of the greatest advertising and publicity campaigns ever known in the phonograph field in this territory and the dealers are enthusiastically backing up the campaign with their individual efforts. The carload-lot sales conducted by the New England Furniture Co. and the St. Paul Furniture Co. went big and both houses figure on cashing in on the new publicity venture. Assistant Manager Tanner reports that many new desirable accounts are being opened.

A Tribute to the Ladies

For some time your correspondent has had in mind to say something nice about the two women managers of talking machine departments in Minneapolis, but for one reason or another has neglected to do so, although the ladies have merited some recognition. We are in position to state that Rose Artz, manager of the Victrola department of L. S. Donaldson Co., and Ethel Conley, manager of the talking machine department of Whitney-McGregor Co., have "made good" in every way during the past year—a record, in truth, of which to feel proud.

Getting a Good Share of Business

Pathé phonographs and records are going nicely in this territory, according to G. Sommers & Co., distributors. Business is not big by any means, but, in view of the fact that conditions generally are bad, the company considers that it is obtaining its share of business.

G. H. Compton With Stone Co.

George H. Compton, an experienced phonograph man, has joined the staff of the Stone Piano Co. and henceforth will specialize in the Aeolian-Vocalion. The Vocalion is winning its way in the Northwest and the records are particularly popular.

Noted Artists Heard in Concerts

Selrex service counters have been installed for the Whitney-McGregor Co. in Minneapolis. The counters are just about indispensable for large houses, remarked Eugene O'Neill, of the Beckwith-O'Neill Co.

The Victor Co. is getting some nice advertising in the Northwest through its artists, and dealers have profited by the appearance here in recent weeks of Lauder, McCormack, Heifetz, Braslau and others.

Will Handle Brunswick Records

Anderson, Gauper & Peyer, Inc., a new music house at Lake street and Second avenue, Minneapolis, will handle Brunswick phonographs and records. Word from the Brunswick headquarters in this territory, managed by E. L. Kern, is to the effect that the Brunswick fame continues to grow and the sales continue to increase.

Some Distinguished Visitors

Harry A. Beach, vice-president of the Unit Construction Co., was a visitor here recently and reported that the outlook was gratifying.

James J. Davin, of Reincke-Ellis Co., Chicago, called on his business friends in St. Paul and Minneapolis last week.

Robert Porter, field sales manager for the Columbia Co., is in the Twin Cities for a general sales meeting.

Many Sales of Pathés

The Wallblom Furniture Co. has conducted an extensive sale of Pathé phonographs, which resulted in many sales actually closed and the addition of many names to the prospect list.

R. L. DOUGLASS VISITING ENGLAND

Ross L. Douglass, president of the National Co., of Boston, Mass., manufacturer of Ragtime Rastus, Boxing Darkies, Shimandy and other well-known talking machine toys, is now making a visit to London, England. Mr. Douglass expects to be back within a month or so and will, doubtlessly, bring with him excellent first-hand impressions of talking machine conditions in Europe.

"TALKERS" HIT IN SOVIET TAXES

An item of interest concerning luxury taxes on musical instruments, including talking machines, is a dispatch from Moscow, Russia, appearing in the New York daily papers, which stated that a luxury tax of 200,000 rubles per annum has been levied on talking machines by the Moscow Soviet. Each owner of a grand piano must pay an annual tax of 750,000 rubles, which exceeds the annual wages of Government employes. Ordinary pianos are taxed 600,000 rubles. Are you glad that you are not living in Russia these days?

C. L. Wainwright, who resigned from the talking machine department of the Armstrong Furniture Co., Memphis, Tenn., to join a Texas concern, has returned to his former position.

Featuring the MUSICAL POSSIBILITIES of the TALKING MACHINE

[EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the seventeenth of a new series of articles by William Braid White, devoted to the various interesting opportunities which prevail in the domain of education for the retailer of talking machines. The subject is one of great interest and we commend these articles to the consideration of all who are devoting attention to the featuring and developing of the musical possibilities of the talking machine.]

IMPORTANCE OF CORRECT PITCH

Music is the art which is distinguished from all others by the fact that it moves. It is the art of one dimension—time. Everything that has to do with it is completely governed by the prime requisite of motion in time. Every sound used in music is the product of a definite series of motions, originally taken up by some suitable body and translated through the atmosphere to the auditory apparatus of the listener. Now, since the performance of music is immediately grounded upon the vital necessity for producing each sound cleanly and clearly distinct from every other, it follows that no need is greater than the need that each calculated motion-rate shall be maintained at all times and in all circumstances.

When a Singer Goes Flat

We all know the distressing effect when a singer sings flat. This, of course, is merely the result of the singer's failure to maintain the vibration-speed of the breath issuing from the vocal chords. Again, if a violinist's finger slips ever so slightly upon the strings he is stopping his tone will go sharp or flat, according as the slippage had shortened or lengthened the speaking part of the string. For strings vibrate more slowly as their length increases and more rapidly as their length decreases. Conversely, if the speed of vibrations taken up by the sounding body is increased the resulting sound will go up in pitch; and will go down in pitch if that speed is decreased.

It is, therefore, evident that if music is to be rendered as it ought to be rendered, as perfectly as possible, every element relating to the control of speed must be most carefully regulated.

Sound-groove and Pitch

In the case of the talking machine the sounds are produced by causing a disk on which is engraved a continuous spiral groove to rotate under a fixed stylus or needle, connected with a flexible diaphragm. The groove itself consists of a continuous curve of sines, a curve, that is to say, of the particular form which is always assumed by vibrating bodies when they are drawn over an impressible surface while performing their vibrations. In other words, the sinuosities of the line represent the vibratory activity of the recording stylus, which was actuated while making the record by the voice or instrument which is to be reproduced.

If now the turntable which carries the original wax disk were rotating, when the record was taken, at, say, 76 revolutions per minute, then obviously it would be necessary to have every reproduction made at the same number of revolutions per minute if the pitch of the reproduction were to be the same as the pitch of the recording. If the turntable were rotating faster than the speed mentioned it would at once follow that the stylus would travel through a greater number of sinuosities in a given time, and that, therefore, the vibrations imparted to it would be more rapid, though the same in shape. Therefore, in accordance with the principle that pitch varies directly as speed, the entire reproduction would be given at a higher pitch. In certain circumstances, for instance, it might be quite possible for an instrumental piece to be reproduced in the key of, say, C sharp minor, when it was actually recorded and intended to be reproduced in the key of C minor.

Spoiling Vocal Effects

In exactly the same way the tones of a contralto singer might be lifted in pitch so that the song should sound as if sung by a mezzo-soprano. On the other hand, if the turntable were rotating too slowly the opposite effect would be had and the contralto's voice might even sound far too low for any normal woman's tone production.

Key and Instrumental Music

In any such case the musical result would be somewhat disastrous. Taking the instrumental point of view first it is only necessary to listen closely to well-played instrumental music to see that each composer know precisely how the music should sound, and therefore determine, to the appropriate end, the key in which it should be rendered. When a composer writes a piece for piano in the key of A, whether major or minor, he does so because it appears to him that it will sound best in that key. Probably when the first idea came to him it was clothed to his mental hearing in that key in which he writes it. At any rate, if it is at any time rendered in another key, the effect will not be what the composer intended. Usually it will be inferior and sometimes the difference will be startling. Never, one may safely say, will it be superior.

Pitch and Vocal Effect

From the vocal point of view the faults of incorrect pitch will be even more impressive. Every singer has a certain range within which his or her voice sounds best. The condition of the vocal organs forbids a singer extending the range more than a certain distance up or down. At any rate, no matter what wide ranges some singers may have it may be taken as a rule that each knows where his or her voice sounds best, and that, accordingly, each will sing best within those determined limits.

Now, when a singer's voice is reproduced higher or lower than intended, a double injustice is forthwith done. The singer is cheated because his or her voice is made to sound inferior. The public is cheated because it gets an inferior rendition for its money.

Inspection Needed

Merchants who do not clearly realize the importance of these details would do well to pay special attention to the arguments here set forth. In a large establishment, especially, where there are many machines in constant use for demonstration purposes, it is very necessary that each should be inspected at frequent intervals, in order that the turntable speed may be regulated if necessary and the working of the motor examined. All sorts of accidents will happen in the demonstration booths. Children may meddle with the adjustments when no one is looking, and where a thousand and one minor troubles of the sort are always possible.

Constant inspection will alone serve to keep machines in perfect running order, and it may be taken for granted that unless they are actually in good running order there will often be complaints that records are inferior, and that certain selections do not sound well; complaints which can be explained only on the grounds alleged above. Unfortunately there is a rather general tendency to neglect the small precautions mentioned, mainly through ignorance of their extreme importance. Perhaps the facts now set down will have the effect of stirring many store managers and salesmen to pay more careful attention to a neglected essential.

It might be added in conclusion that careful cleaning of all mechanical parts is equally important, and that brushing arrangements for keeping the record grooves free from grit form most valuable additions to the equipment of any demonstration booth.

GENEROSITY RESULTS IN SALES

CHARLES CITY, IA., March 7.—The Anderson Music House here has gained some live publicity and made several sales of Victor products as the result of its generosity in loaning a complete set of records for the opera "Rigoletto" to the Charles City Music Club during Opera Book Month. The direct result of the loan was the sale of two Victrolas, eight Opera Books and a number of Red Seal records.

The Blumenthal Phonograph Shop, of 37 Lee avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., has moved into a much larger and more favorably located establishment at 40 Lee avenue. Harry Blumenthal, proprietor, is an enthusiastic booster of the Aeolian-Vocalion and Vocalion Red Seal records.

NEW TONEPEN DISTRIBUTORS

The Tonepen Co., Manufacturer of Tonepen Needles, Adds Several Distributors—London Concern Gets South African Territory

The Tonepen Co., manufacturer of the Tonepen needle, New York, has just completed arrangements with several distributors in different sections of the country to sell the Tonepen needle in their territories. The latest additions to this list are: Joseph Schepartz, 42 Church street, New Haven, Conn., for the States of Massachusetts and Connecticut; J. W. Firtz, Baltimore, for the State of Maryland; L. D. Heater, for the States of Oregon, Utah and Washington, and Selig & Co., of London, Eng., for all of South Africa. This latter concern maintains a branch office in Cape Town, where it plans to carry a full line and through its representatives will sell this needle in every town in South Africa.

Another important announcement is that the Tonepen needle will be sold in all stores of the large chain operated by the S. H. Kress Co., which will certainly increase the total output of the Tonepen Co. materially.

The Tonepen Co. reports that dealers everywhere are meeting with gratifying success in the selling of Tonepen needles, and that talking machine owners are much pleased with the results obtained, both as to tone and wearing quality.

RECORDS FOR FAMILY ALBUMS

A dispatch from London, England, says: "The family portrait album of the future will talk, according to the makers of phonograph records here, who declare that the demand for private discs is increasing daily and that prices have become very reasonable. They say that persons are having records of their own accomplishments made and are sending them to friends. Also instead of sending letters or gifts some people now talk onto a disc and send that by way of greeting. The talk of children at various ages is being filed away with their baby clothes."

Trade Steadily Bettering—Many Dealers Add Columbia Line—New Caruso Release in Demand—Record Sales Increasing—Trade News

BALTIMORE, Md., March 7.—The talking machine business has kept up remarkably well since the first of the year, and while a slight drop has been noted in the sale of records since the beginning of Lent, business, generally speaking, is good. In fact, as William C. Roberts, manager of E. F. Droop & Sons, put it, "We have been oversold on No. 100 Victor machines for several months and there is a fair demand for the new types. Our January business was good, February business better, and the outlook, as I see it, for the current year is very good." Mr. Roberts said he based this prediction on the fact that business has shown a steady improvement right along since the slump that followed the abnormal business done during war time, and he saw no reason why this should not continue now that the business is again back to normal.

Many Columbia Dealers in Line

The local branch of the Columbia Co. also reports business as being very good, and that the following dealers in this territory have been signed up for the special advertising contract proposition which the company is now featuring: D. C. Cogdell, Goldsboro, N. C.; Royal & Borden Co., Durham, N. C.; Bullock Furniture Co., Rocky Mount, N. C.; People's Furniture Co., High Point, N. C.; Queen-Miller Co., Greenville, N. C.; Edgecomb Drug Co., Tarboro, N. C.; McGee Furniture Co., Lynchburg, Va., and the Millenson Piano Co., of Cumberland, Md.

New Caruso Record a Heavy Seller

Sales of the new Caruso record, "Crucifixus," from "Messe Solennelle," released here on the first, have so far exceeded all expectations, according to H. T. Bosee, sales manager of Cohen & Hughes, and this he attributes to a great extent to the window displays that were made by the dealers, many of them proving irresistibly attractive, as indicated by the crowds that stood in front of the places which carried the displays. A big advance sale is also reported by the same firm for the four releases on the 15th of this month, which include: "Cutie"—"Lonesome," medley fox-trots; "Virginia Blues"—"Venetian Love Boat," fox-trots; "My Mammy Knows"—"Angel Child," fox-trots, and "Ten Little Fingers and Ten Little Toes"—"In Bluebird Land," fox-trots.

Cohen & Hughes have received the first shipment of the new No. 280 Victrolas and say the dealers are very much pleased with the machines. The firm expects to have a sample shipment of No. 260 Victrolas in shortly, on which they are already oversold.

I. Son Cohen, of Cohen & Hughes; Joseph Fink, of the Smith-Kranz Piano Co., and Ray T. Steward, of Hagerstown, made a short trip to the Victor factory the first part of the month.

Columbia Stars at Local Theatres

The past two weeks have been featured by the appearance of three Columbia stars at local theatres. Al Herrman and Ted Lewis were both in the city last week, and Dolly Kay was one of the stellar attractions at the Maryland Theatre this week. A number of dealers made special displays of their records while the artists were in the city, featuring the songs which they sang on the stage, and the artists spent several hours in autographing a number of records as souvenirs, which, needless to say, were highly prized by those fortunate enough to get one of the prized records.

Mrs. Kirkwood's Fine Record

Mrs. Maude Kirkwood, who took charge of the live Grafonola department at Frank J. Murphy's, 320 West Lexington street, about six months ago, has made a record in increasing business that would be creditable to anyone who had been in the business for years, let alone a practical "greenhorn," as Mrs. Kirkwood was six months ago. Business for December and January was away ahead of the corresponding months of the previous years, and her success has been very gratifying to a large circle of friends.

Hub Piano Co. to Open Branch

The Hub Piano Co. will shortly open a branch house at 304 North Howard street, in which the talking machine department will be a special feature of the business.

The Kunkel Piano Co. is making some extensive improvements in the talking machine department at its establishment on North Liberty street.

Remodeling Columbia Branch

The local branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co. is having its office rooms remodeled and will install an attractive room for local dealers where the latest records will be played and which will serve as headquarters for dealers of the territory when visiting this city.

CARUSO WEEK IN LAPORTE, IND.

LAPORTE, IND., March 4.—The Princess Theatre, a large motion picture house of this city, is aiding in Caruso Week and has installed a large special type phonograph which is playing the famous tenor's records. A peculiar development was that at the conclusion of one of Caruso's most famous reproductions the audience applauded as though the artist were actually there.

CONDUCTS SPECIAL PATHE SALE

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, March 5.—The Salt Lake Hardware Co., of this city, recently conducted a special sale of Pathé phonographs in its retail department that was attended with excellent results. Manager Dorman, of this department, is a hustler and deserves much credit for the success that this department has attained.

Business Betterment Grows —Reports From All Trade Points Cheering—The News

DETROIT, MICH., March 8.—There is hardly a dealer that is not reporting better business for the first two months of this year as compared with last. And all are looking forward to a better March. Everything is favorable for better business in March so far as Detroit is concerned. The industrial situation is showing great improvement, more than 70,000 men being given employment since the first of January. By another four or five weeks we expect to see every motor factory working to at least 70 per cent capacity—and this means more than 100 per cent capacity compared to pre-war days.

Stability of the Talking Machine Business

One of the best indications of the stability of the talking machine business is the report by dealers that collections are holding up very well and that they are not making repossessions. One would ordinarily think that during times such as we have gone through in the past six months the number of repossessions would be surprisingly large, but such is not the case from the best reports obtainable through the larger dealers.

Grinnell Concerts Largely Attended

Grinnell Bros. have been giving a series of concerts on Thursdays in their Victrola Halls, which have been largely attended. These concerts or recitals last about one hour, and usually consist of one or two prominent soloists and selections on the Victrola.

Discuss the Radio Craze

We have heard some talking machine dealers discussing the probable effect of radio enthusiasm on the talking machine business. Here and there we find a dealer who looks upon this new craze as very serious, but, on the other hand, we have met dealers who believe just the opposite—that it will have a good effect as well. One thing is certain—people are apt to stay in more in order to get the benefit of their radio outfits, and wherever people stay at home the field for the talking machine and records is greater. These home crowds will want something to amuse them while they are waiting—and that something will be talking machine music because it is "ready made" for them.

Jewett Phonograph Line With Strasburg

Max Strasburg & Co., on Library avenue, have added the Jewett line of phonographs, which are Michigan made. Mr. Strasburg has made a thorough examination and investigation of the various models and is convinced that they will prove popular with the public. On the other hand, the Jewett Phonograph Co. feels mighty proud of this new connection, as it considers the Strasburg shop among the leading institutions of the city. Already the Strasburg shop has sold Jewetts and repeated on some models.

Local Association Meets

The Detroit Talking Machine Dealers' Association met in February at the Board of Commerce with a good attendance. The Association is still discussing the questions of uniform interest charges, trade-ins and approvals, and, while nothing of a definite nature has been decided upon, no doubt benefits will result from these discussions and there will be a better understanding among dealers on these matters which are so vital to the trade.

New Quarters for Walker

Walker's Music Shop, of which Thomas Walker is proprietor, has moved to larger quarters on Grand River avenue, which is considerably further out on the same thoroughfare where he formerly was in business. But the new location is better all around—larger in every way. Mr. Walker has been able to increase the size of his display room and his booths. The Jewett and Vocalion lines are handled by Mr. Walker.

Show Windows That Attract

The Detroit Music Co., which handles the Columbia line, is becoming one of the live factors in the talking machine industry. Charles Smith, general manager, is certainly doing things these days. His windows are always attractive and he is taking advantage of everything that will stimulate business. When the big musical show "Under the Bamboo Tree" was at the Garrick the week of February 26 Mr. Smith had a big sign on his window, "Bert Williams Will Be Here in Person," and he announced the date. Unfortunately Mr. Williams took suddenly ill, the show was canceled and he returned to New York. But it shows how Mr. Smith is going after things. Just before that he had a very attractive sign on his window announcing the big Columbia hit, "Dapper Dan," and he has sold piles of them and is still doing so.

Hard Work Brings Results

Manager Gardiner, of the Columbia branch in this city, has often contended that the dealer can get out of his business only what he puts into it. If he expects to reap a harvest, he must invest—to begin with, he must back up his investment with sincere hard work. In other words, the average dealer relies too much upon the national advertising of the lines he is handling and the momentum which the industry already has—instead, he should be taking advantage of every opportunity to increase sales. And there are so many ways that this can be done, and there are so many new fields that can be developed. Dealers handling Columbia Grafonolas have reduced their stocks to the point where they are now reordering and the year 1922 looks like a very happy one for Columbia dealers who are alive to their opportunities.

Vocalion Products Grow in Favor

S. E. Lind, of Lind & Marks, distributors for the Vocalion, has made several trips to New York during the past six weeks to get more records as well as to hurry shipments on certain models of Vocalion phonographs. Mr. Lind reports happily that January and February were better than 1921, which is all that he can expect. "We are still adding on new dealers, and those we already have are increasing their orders and repeating," he said to The World correspondent. "Dealers handling the line all tell us that the Red records are increasing in popularity and that they now have a waiting list of people who want immediate information each time there are new releases. We feel very well pleased with the representation we have in our territory and the amount of goods we have sold since we started in business practically one year ago, and if 1922 or our second year will show just a slight increase—which we are positively assured of—we will feel that we are over the top."

Generous Offer in Memory Contests

The Detroit News, in connection with memory contests which are being held in the public schools, has offered seventy-five talking machines to the winning schools.

The Attractive Pier Music Shop

One of the prettiest talking machine stores in Detroit is The Pier Music Shop, on Jefferson avenue East. It is a part of the New Coliseum Building, the major portion of which is devoted to a public dance hall. The shop is under the management of Mr. Hewey, formerly manager of the talking machine department of LaSalle & Koch, of Toledo, O. He is employing six outside men who are canvassing thoroughly the East Side section of Detroit, and they are producing good results. The Pier Music Shop handles the Jewett line of phonographs, as well as the Vocalion line of records. It is a combination certain to produce good business.

Victor Consoles Popular

Dealers handling the new Victor console report that it is taking very well, and C. H. Grinnell, manager of Grinnell Bros., wholesale Victor department, reports that he is shipping them out to dealers just as fast as they are unloaded from the cars. While many dealers believe that the console is not only here to stay but that the demand is on the increase, they still feel that the upright model will be with us for all time to come and probably remain as the biggest seller of the two styles. There is no doubt that for the better grade of homes the console is invariably selected, but, after all, it is the middle and working class of people who are the largest buyers of phonographs, and the upright will appeal to them for several reasons—price and lack of room.

Brunswick Shop a Busy Place

The Brunswick Shop on East Grand River is doing an excellent business. The shop is open evenings and is indeed a busy place. The shop has been doing some very big advertising since the first of the year and sales are being made in goodly numbers. Records are also going very big. Any dealer who is looking for new ideas in the laying out of a phonograph store will find it money well spent to come to Detroit and look over the Brunswick Shop. It has a style and individuality all its own.

Why R. B. Alling Is Optimistic

R. B. Alling, manager of the Phonograph Co. of this city, was in New York attending the Edison jobbers' convention. Mr. Alling is of the belief that the talking machine industry will show increased activity and prosperity during 1922. He still feels that a great deal of the success of any talking machine store depends entirely on the liveness of the dealer himself.

Manager Fyfe, of the Standard Drug Co., of this city, conducted a campaign on Pathé phonographs recently with excellent results. Mr. Fyfe is an Actuelle enthusiast and has considerably contributed to the prestige of this instrument in this locality

TOWN GIVES PHONOGRAPH TO SHIP

Citizens of Vinita, Okla., Present Machine to Ship of That Name

PORTLAND, ORE., March 4.—The steamship "Vinita," loading at Portland for the Orient last week, was the recipient of a beautiful cabinet phonograph, the gift of the town of Vinita, Okla., which was set up and is making music in the saloon of the Shipping Board steamer named after the Oklahoma town in honor of the original Vinita accomplishment of exceeding its quota in the Victory Loan campaign. The phonograph bears an engraved silver plate stating that it is the gift of the citizens of Vinita, Okla.

The gift of the phonograph is the outgrowth of a correspondence which started last October when the officers of the steamer "Vinita" wrote from Shanghai, China, to the mayor and citizens of Vinita, asking for the phonograph as a symbol of the sentimental attachment between the town and the ship. A newspaper in Vinita started a subscription and raised $50 of the phonograph fund. Mrs. Agnes Ogletree, of Vinita, then took charge of the campaign and raised the balance with a Mother Goose carnival.

Though intended for a Christmas present, the phonograph did not reach the ship until a few days ago for the reason that the steamer was on a three months' jaunt across the Pacific in the service of the Columbia-Pacific Shipping Co.

T. SAAM OPENS NEW DEPARTMENT

LANSING, IA., March 7.—One of the finest talking machine departments in the northeastern section of the State has been installed by Thomas Saam, music merchant here. Mr. Saam has purchased the complete stock of Victor talking machines and records from a dealer who has discontinued his business.

Success consists in the invisible and intangible sense of inner satisfaction and approval of one's fellows, plus the tangible results of good judgment and persistence.

ALFRED FOX CO. DAMAGED BY FIRE

Pianos and Talking Machines Damaged When Fire Breaks Out in Building Occupied by Alfred Fox Piano Co., Bridgeport, Conn.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., March 4.—Damage estimated at $10,000 was incurred by the Alfred Fox Piano Co. when a fire broke out in the Studio Building on Fairfield avenue, where the concern is quartered. A number of talking machines and pianos were damaged by flames, smoke and water. Firemen saved many instruments by spreading tarpaulins over them. For a time the complete destruction of the building was threatened, and the smoke was so dense that sixteen fire fighters were overcome.

The concern has opened a temporary store at 304 Fairfield avenue, and will carry on the business there until the former quarters have been repaired.

NEW HONOR FOR THOMAS EDISON

Plan Celebration of the Fortieth Anniversary of the First Electric Light Station

Thomas A. Edison, who was recently honored by celebration of his seventy-fifth birthday, will be further honored before the end of the year by the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of his installation of New York's electrical system.

September 4, 1882, New York's first central station and underground system of distribution were completed and placed in operation according to plans conceived and executed by Mr. Edison. By many this is considered his greatest contribution to mankind, and the principles laid down by him in the construction of that station formed the basis of similar stations all over the world. Indeed, there has been little deviation from them in all the years that have followed.

CLOSE MANY PHONOGRAPH SALES

Some Sales Stunts of Prominent Dealers That Merit Special Consideration :: W. B. Stoddard

Townsend, Wyatt & Wells, St. Joseph, Mo., have found the telephone very useful in collecting overdue instalments on their talking machines, according to Henry Raines, who said, in explanation:

"When going through our bills the last of the month we lay aside those that are to be telephoned, put the number on the statement, and the first of the month we put in most of the day telephoning. When I call a customer I say something like this, 'In looking over your account we find you owe a balance of $—, which is (so many months) past due, and I was wondering if it had escaped your attention.' If the customer promises to pay at a certain time we make a note of it and always mention this fact to the customer. If he does not keep his promise we again call him, reminding him of his promise and asking if he overlooked sending check. If it is necessary to call up a third time we remind him that we are a member of the Retail Credit Men's Association, and should the bureau request it we would be compelled to give them the information, regardless of how good his intentions might be. If I find customers who object to my calling them about their account I say, 'Which would you prefer—having a collector call at your home and dun you, or have the credit department call you by 'phone and remind you of your account?' The change in the customer's attitude is at once apparent. My experience has taught me that success in collecting by telephone depends upon these things—courtesy, tact, patience, persistence, expecting payments when promised and letting the customer know you are watching the account."

How the Remick Shop Keeps in the Public Eye

The Remick Shop, of Portland, Ore., is under a live wire management and there is always some novelty in a publicity way to attract the people. Recently it has undertaken to give wireless concerts and has found this method very popular in increasing its sales of records and even machines.

The advertising of this firm is always distinctive, and, though not large, attracts attention because of being "different" from the usual run. A recent ad with an outline cut of man and maid was captioned: "'Where are you going, my pretty maid?' 'I'm going to Remick's, sir,' she said.' Naturally, folks like to drop in where things begin; and everybody knows that all the latest hits of vocal and instrumental selections will always be found at Remick's."

Another even more striking ad run by this firm showed an owl with small body, large head and big staring eyes. Above it were the words: "This is not a Hartz canary." The ad itself read:

WISE! WISE!
When you find folks having a bird of a time you've run into some REMICK hits.
Yes'm!
Yes'r!

The fun store of Portland is REMICKS.

The ad then went on to describe and quote special prices on talking machines and records, announcing that they would be sold on time payments, if desired.

The company is also a firm believer in attractive show windows, which are never allowed to go stale. A recent display, in which dance records were especially featured, was richly Oriental in tone. Yellow matting covered the floor and in the rear was a bamboo arch, behind which hung curtains of Japanese crepe. From the ends of the arch, as well as from the ceiling, hung Japanese lanterns. Fastened to the arch and scattered over the floor were a number of big yellow paper sunflowers with a record for the heart of each. In the center of the arch was a disc with the words, "Dance Records," and on the floor was a card giving a number of the new records and the price of each. Close to the glass was a Grafonola in action, and a card above it said, "Stop winding your machine—buy one of our electric motors."

This concern is quick to take advantage of timely events, and a display made last month caused everybody who passed to pause, read and laugh—and in telling of it afterwards the fact that the Remick shop sold records was brought strongly to mind. Taking advantage of the much-discussed Volstead law, it placed in its central window, "the Volstead phonograph." This was a big keg, serving as a cabinet, with a Grafonola attached to the top. The doors were open and disclosed, instead of phonograph records, a number of glasses and a decanter. A card above it announced, "First showing of the Volstead phonograph." One of the cards scattered about suggested, "This machine plays 'How Dry I Am.' This is merely a sample of what we have in the phonograph department." Others said, "A barrel of fun in our phonograph department," and "What will you have? Some Late Records."

A clever mid-Winter stunt of the Remick shop was its solving of the problem, "How to Keep the Young Folks at Home." It addressed an open letter to parents on the subject:

Dear Perplexed Folks:—How to keep the children at home evenings? That's the question that faces many of you, isn't it? Too old to be disciplined; too young to select suitable friends and environment—just how to handle children in their teens is a problem. Why not make the home so attractive that they will want to stay there? Ever think about it that way? Let us suggest a Columbia Grafonola for the home. It will make your house a center for your children's friends—and you will feel safe about their surroundings. The young people can sing with it, dance to it, and then when their mood becomes more quiet put on some concert selections and enjoy the world's greatest artists right in their own homes. Don't you think it would pay to investigate?

This was complemented with a striking window display. The floor was covered with powdered cotton to represent snow and in the rear were small trees, also thickly powdered. In the foreground was a toy house, three feet high, with double doors opened, to show the brightly lighted interior, where a company of dolls were dancing. On a stand was a full-sized phonograph, and a card attached to it observed: "There's nothing like music to keep the youngsters entertained. Put a talking machine in your home if you want to keep the children there."

Eliminating the Collector

Every merchant will agree that a collector is not only an expense but a driver-away of trade. People dislike to be dunned, and after the collector has called a few times they register a vow never to trade at that store again. Of course, their attitude is illogical—but it hurts the store just the same. Young & Chaffee, Grand Rapids, came to that conclusion several years ago, and as a result their entire force of eight outside and five inside men were dismissed, and the "personal call" system instituted. Of this the credit man said: "It is a peculiar psychological fact that a man who is approached for a couple of dollars will give it grudgingly, though he has not the slightest desire to sidestep his debt, but the man who seeks his creditors does it jauntily and proudly, treating his debt as a matter of honor which he is frankly glad to meet. Our instalment customers pay weekly, coming to the store for that purpose. Figure out the publicity the store gains by such a method. Fifty-two times a year he calls, seeing something different each time, and becoming familiar with many things he would like to possess. He is met by a man who calls him by name. It flatters him to be recognized as an individual and to have his tastes catered to. In most cases the friendly atmosphere causes him to purchase not only once but several times." The firm's treatment of instalment customers is essentially fair. A man out of work, who has been good pay, can have his account filed for thirty, sixty or even ninety days. But the delinquent debtor receives no such consideration. Several letters are sent, and if these fail a telephone call is made—and from the tone of that interview the credit man takes his cue as to more stringent measures. This firm carries the largest stock of records in the city, but secures a good turnover by not keeping too many of any number. It features these records—and phonographs, of course—in the windows at regular intervals and thus keeps the public informed regarding the latest novelties.

"A new Gennett!"

REFLECTIONS

As the face in the crystal mirror is true to the gazer, so are Gennett Records faithful to the original voice or instrument.

To know the utmost in music's reproduction hear Gennett No. 4830, "Cutie" (fox-trot), from "The Blue Kitten," intro: "I've Found a Bud Among the Roses," played by Hazay Natzy and His Biltmore Orchestra, which makes your toes fairly tingle, and on the reverse the same orchestra brings out with great vivacity the snappiness of "ANGEL CHILD" (fox-trot).

Elected President of Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co. and Columbia Graphophone Co. at Directors' Meeting Last Month—F. J. Ames Elected Secretary and H. C. Cox Is Treasurer

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co. and the Columbia Graphophone Co. held at the company's executive offices in New York, February 28, H.

H. L. Willson

L. Willson was elected president of both companies. Mr. Willson, who has been vice-president and general manager of the Columbia interests for the past few years, will also retain the post of general manager. Mr. Willson succeeds Van Horn Ely, who resigned in order to devote his time to other interests.

C. W. Woddrop, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the Columbia Co., tendered his resignation at the directors' meeting on Monday, and F. J. Ames, who heretofore has been assistant secretary and treasurer, was elected secretary. H. C. Cox, comptroller of the Columbia Co., was elected vice-president and treasurer. Francis S. Whitten, chairman of the Board of Directors, retains this position.

The election of H. L. Willson as president of the Columbia enterprises will be welcome news to the talking machine industry and to the Columbia organization, as he is one of the ablest men in the trade. He has been associated with the Columbia interests for many years, occupying important executive and administrative posts. Mr. Willson is thoroughly familiar with every phase of the talking machine business, including manufacturing, sales and finance, and his intimate knowledge of the industry as a whole well qualifies him to fill the important position of president of the Columbia manufacturing and selling organizations.

PERFECTS NEW RECORD PRESS

H. N. McMenimen Makes Interesting Announcement—New Press Soon Ready for Market

H. N. McMenimen, well-known consulting engineer, of New York, has just made known that one of his clients has perfected a new semi-automatic record press. His announcement is as follows:

"From five to thirty per cent of records manufactured are rejected for various causes. The so-called automatic presses have enabled the individual pressmen to turn out a greater number of records per day, but they have in turn added to the problems in the pressroom, and it has made greater problems for the plating and matrix departments. Nearly every automatic press is idle from thirty minutes to three hours every day for various causes, such as leaky platens, due to superheating and chilling, time required for changing matrices, pressing shells spoiled in setting up the presses, loss of pressing shells slightly blemished by stock that cannot be removed and repaired, and accidents that occur frequently to operators, etc.

"With the knowledge of the disadvantages and defects of the present-day presses, one of my clients has been working for the past seven years developing a semi-automatic press, which has just been perfected. This press will make from two to three records per minute and eliminates all the bad features of the modern automatic presses. It will not only increase production, but cut down pressing rejections and the overhead while the presses are idle."

AMENDS CORPORATION ARTICLES

PORTLAND, ORE., March 4.—The Pathé Exchange, Inc., of New York has filed with the Secretary of State of Oregon amended articles of incorporation, reporting a change of capital stock from $5,000,000, consisting of 500,000 shares at the par value of $10 each, to 200,000 shares of common stock of no nominal or par value, and 30,000 shares of preferred stock of the par value of $100 each.

IRON BANKS BOOM RECORD SALES

DAVENPORT, IA., March 7.—A clever stunt put into effect recently by L. A. Murray, Victor dealer here, has had the effect of greatly stimulating the sale of talking machine records. Mr. Murray had a number of small iron banks made in the shape of the Victrola. These were given to customers who agreed to deposit spare change in the bank for use in purchasing records. And they are saving and, better still, buying records.

SELLS LARGE NUMBER OF MACHINES

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., March 3.—The Harbour-Longmire Furniture Co. has conducted a sale of Pathé phonographs in its headquarters in this city and Dallas, Texas, that has resulted in disposing of a large number of instruments.

Optimism Predominates in Local Trade—Dealers Prepare for "Civic Style Week"—Manufacturers Rushed to Supply Demand—The News

MILWAUKEE, WIS., March 10.—The talking machine trade is approaching the opening of Spring with a great deal more optimism and hopefulness than it did a year ago, when it was suffering from the full effect of the blow struck by the depression. While the past month has been the "between-season" period business has been of moderate proportions. Records, especially, have been selling in large numbers and this end of the retail business is continuing its remarkable growth. Instruments are selling fairly well, with no particular feature to business, but enough moving all the time to prevent any dissatisfaction.

Featuring "Civic Style Week"

The coming week, March 19 to 25, will be observed as "Civic Style Week" by the retail merchants of Milwaukee, particularly those engaged in merchandising ladies' and men's wearing apparel of all kinds. Music dealers have joined in the campaign informally and expect to derive much good from the effect of the awakening of consumer interest which this event will undoubtedly bring about. Each Spring for the last four or five years local retailers have selected a week following the middle of March or early in April to present their Spring styles in a concerted and striking manner, but this year's observance is based on much broader and more impressive lines than heretofore.

Merchants Interested in Exhibit

The Auditorium has been engaged for the week and about 100 merchants in various lines have taken exhibit space. Booths will be arranged in a way to form a miniature of Atlantic City's famous boardwalk, and there will be a huge runway encircling the main area upon which living models will promenade. The participation of music dealers will be largely in contributing new window displays to conform with the general scheme of downtown as well as uptown merchants in making special display trims for "Civic Style Week."

Steady Improvement in Manufacturing Plants

The manufacturing industry in Milwaukee and throughout Wisconsin is reported to be "looking up" in a real, substantial way. Distributors and dealers all over the country are ordering new stocks for Spring and Summer demands and the operation of factories is on a considerably larger scale than a year ago at this time. The Milwaukee Talking Machine Mfg. Co., the General Mfg. Corp. and other talking machine factories in this city are steadily increasing their operations to meet enlarged demands from dealers throughout the country.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers Optimistic

Local wholesale houses have enjoyed a good business in the first two and a half months of 1922, and they feel that this has been only a beginning toward more prosperous conditions. Retailers are not so strongly disinclined as before to buy only for urgent needs, and their requisitions are indicating a greater freedom based on the expectancy of the better volume of business to be done in the coming three to six months.

Large Demand for Victor Records

"Victor dealers in our territory are manifesting a great deal of confidence in the future and are getting back into the old, accustomed swing of buying goods," said Harry A. Goldsmith, secretary of the Badger Talking Machine Co., Victor jobber. "I can't say that our dealer organization ever got down to a strictly hand-to-mouth basis of buying, but, naturally, for a time, they, like representatives of other standard instruments, were forced to limit their purchases to some extent because of the lessened demand from consumers. It seems that this has now been overcome in a large measure, for we are getting some good orders and getting them often. Victor record business so far this year has been the largest in any similar period since this house was established and we encounter difficulties right along in meeting all demands."

Thomas I. Kidd Brunswick Enthusiast

Thomas I. Kidd, manager of the Milwaukee branch of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., has reason to assume the optimistic attitude which he has been carrying for some time as the result of the remarkable movement of Brunswick instruments and records. The situation has come to be one where a dealer seeking a Brunswick franchise has got to be one of the real live wires of the trade to obtain it. The Brunswick agency is to-day regarded as one of the most valuable assets a dealer can have, and only a few of the many applications that are being made to Mr. Kidd are being granted.

New Brunswick Dealer Appointed

The latest appointment of a Brunswick dealer is that of the Frederick Carberry Co., a new $100,000 corporation formed by Frederick W. Carberry to take over the Milwaukee branch of the Bissell & Weisert Piano Co., of Chicago. Mr. Carberry opened the branch about three years ago and has since been its manager. With the establishment of the business under his own name and ownership he has decided to establish a talking machine department and the Brunswick has been secured as a fit companion to the Chickering piano, upon which Mr. Carberry will continue to concentrate in the line of pianos. The Chickering Studios at 420 Jackson street will now also be known as the Brunswick Studios. The new department was opened March 1 and is in charge of W. H. Heise, who was for six years with Charles J. Orth, at 504 Grand avenue, where he handled both wholesale and retail business in the Puritan and also the Brunswick.

Carl West, manager of the Victor department of the Boston Store in Milwaukee, has resigned

H. A. BRENNAN ENTERS NEW FIELD

Popular Talking Machine Man Appointed Sales Manager of Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp.—Company Represents "Firco" Products Made by John Firth & Co.—Important Sales Plans to Be Announced at a Very Early Date

Herbert A. Brennan, recently Victor sales manager of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., New York, and formerly connected with the Victor Talking Machine Co., has been appointed sales manager of the Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp., 709 Sixth avenue, New York. Mr. Brennan assumed his new duties on March 6, and his general plans for the development of his sales organization will be announced shortly.

The Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp. is the sales representative for John Firth & Co., New York, manufacturer of "Firco" products, which are internationally known. John Firth, president of this company, has been associated with the wireless telephone field for twenty years, and has executed orders for practically all of the leading countries of the world. John Firth & Co., through their extensive experience with Government work, have always made apparatus complying with the most rigid government inspection, and among the patents controlled by the company are the following: Seibt German patents; Kolster Decremeter; telephone plugs; loud speaking attachments; transformers; telephone connectors, etc.

The Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp., as sales representative for John Firth & Co., will carry a complete line of wireless telephone outfits and apparatus. Practically every type and description of wireless telephone product is included in the Firth line, and the phenomenal progress made in wireless telephony the past year practically insures the success of the Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp's sales and merchandising activities.

Herbert A. Brennan, who is popular throughout the talking machine trade, has been identified with this industry for many years, occupying important sales and executive posts. He is thoroughly familiar with every phase of the retail field, and his intimate knowledge of the dealers' requirements will enable him to co-operate with the trade to splendid advantage in developing the sales possibilities of the wireless telephone in the talking machine industry. Mr. Brennan is keenly enthusiastic regarding his new work, especially as wireless telephone outfits merchandised by the Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp. embody the most advanced principles of wireless telephone construction. He is planning to offer talking machine dealers maximum service and co-operation in the introduction of the wireless telephone to their patrons, and Mr. Brennan's sales organization will make a specialty of rendering practical and informative service to the Victor merchants.

W. E. Simler and P. A. Wilkinson, who are president and vice-president, respectively, of the Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp., are well known in the advertising and sales fields. They will devote a considerable part of their time to the development of dealer promotion plans that may be used to practical advantage by the dealers handling "Firco" products.

HEGEMAN-STEWART ANNOUNCEMENT

New York Importer States that Effective January 1 It Is Sole and Exclusive Distributor for Homokord Records

The Hegeman-Stewart Corp., the well-known importer of New York City, is announcing to the trade that it is now the sole and exclusive distributor in the United States for the Homokord record, manufactured in Germany, where it is well known. The record has been handled in this country during the past year by a number of dealers.

"After extended negotiations with the Homokord Co., of Berlin," officials of the Hegeman-Stewart Co. stated, "we have secured the sole rights to import and sell these records in this country. This contract has been duly ratified by both companies and is effective as of January 1, 1922, and in consequence, all Homokord records imported in this country from now on will be distributed by us solely.

"The catalog of these records comprises selections in all foreign languages, and offers a diversified field of sales activities to the dealer who carries them in stock. It is planned to offer the dealer a new and varied list of numbers each month, so that in a short time selections imported will comprise the complete Homokord catalog. Plans are now under way for an extensive publicity campaign, designed to introduce the record in all parts of the country." The company states it has appointed several agents to handle the record in their respective territories, and Homokord records will be placed in talking machine stores all through the country in due course.

WANTED SOME SUITABLE MUSIC

PORTLAND, ORE., March 4.—Emma Reynolds, of the Hyatt Talking Machine Co., tells The Talking Machine World correspondent some good ones, but this one I believe is hard to beat: A little pompous and dignified man entered the store the other day and asked to hear some records. Miss Reynolds asked him if he would like to hear any special record and he said: "Some people like this jazz stuff, but I'm not that kind. My mother-in-law is lying at the point of death and I want a record suitable for the occasion." He then asked to hear "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning."

SALES CAMPAIGN NETS RESULTS

BANGOR, ME., March 2.—Libby-Skinner Co., of this city, has built up an excellent business in Pathé products. A large number of phonographs was disposed of during a recent sale conducted by this concern.

Right now you are laying the foundation for a good or a bad year's business.

Is your present line moving satisfactorily?

Have you made the profit you should have made and are you absolutely convinced that, with the lines you now handle, this will be a black ink year?

If you have any doubt, now is the time to take on a line that will give you a better chance to make more sales, quicker sales and an attractive profit with a smaller investment. This is exactly what the Jewett line will mean to you.

Highest Quality—Amazing Value

Compare the Jewett for tone quality with any line you choose. Anyone who knows phonographs will quickly agree that for clearness, sweetness and faithfulness of reproduction the Jewett is not surpassed by any instrument on the market. And every Jewett phonograph is a matchless specimen of artistic cabinet work.

You have never seen a line that combines these three essentials—tone quality, beauty of design and exquisite cabinet work—and still retails at such remarkably low prices as the Jewett.

Financing and Advertising Cooperation

The Jewett policy is to give complete sales, advertising and financing service. We take a firm stand against "loading up" and will help you build a permanent, profitable business.

Besides the six styles shown here the Jewett line includes two new models which will shortly be ready for the trade. One is a William and Mary console to retail around $170, the other an upright listed at less than $100.

AN UNUSUAL RECORDING FEAT

Newark Recording Laboratory Records and Presses Message of President Shallcross to 14,000 Agents of Four Insurance Concerns

The Newark Recording Laboratory, of 15 West Park street, Newark, N. J., the company organized by G. Howlett Davis for the purpose of making records for all purposes, recently completed a very unique order, that of recording the personal message of C. H. Shallcross, from which “The experimental packages we mailed first evoked the most enthusiastic responses. The novelty of the affair was one point, the permanent advertising value was a second point, and the ‘repeats’ through the recipients—business acquaintances, neighbors and friends—also tremendously increased the scope of this advertising scheme.

“The newspaper men who have learned of this enterprise declare that it sets the pace not only for this line of business but for all lines. The printed message is read, forgotten and thrown away. The oral message is new and is imperishable, for nobody will throw away a good phonograph record. Some day, if you care to see some of the very enthusiastic responses, I shall be glad to show them to you over the luncheon or dinner table here in New York.

“Of course, you know without my saying so that the splendid co-operation, the prompt deliveries and the great personal interest you have shown in this matter are thoroughly appreciated. No one could have been more courteous, helpful and energetic than your good selves.”

“TALKER” AIDS HARVARD CREW

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., March 7.—Harvard crews are learning to row to the tunes of records played on a talking machine, which has been installed in the rowing machine room of the Newall boat-house. The results were fairly successful. Men with a keen ear for music have the advantage of those who have not. The experiment has proved the value of the talking machine as an aid to unity and rhythm in the stroke of the oarsmen, and in this way helped the efforts of the “stroke.”

NEW “MADERITE” DISTRIBUTOR

Louis A. Schwarz to Introduce Bruns & Sons' Products in East—Introduce Novel Addition

A. Bruns & Sons, manufacturers of the Bruns “Maderite” one-man cover for talking machines in Brooklyn, report that business with them is showing a normal demand, with the distribution of their covers countrywide. Many new wholesale houses have recently taken on this popular cover, and in consequence it is being widely distributed to dealers, who are finding its distinctive features of construction a great help in the delivery of machines. Particularly useful is the one-man feature, as the delivery can be made with ease by any one person.

One of the new distributors to take on this line is Louis A. Schwarz, of New York, who is planning to introduce it to the entire trade in the East, which he has sold for many years as a wholesaler of talking machine accessories.

This month Bruns & Sons will announce to the trade a new and novel addition to their line, which is expected to fill a long-felt want. This cover is to be made so that the machine can be played without removing the cover, a feature that also will be found useful in the portable type machines. It will not only allow the machine to be used at any time, but will provide a permanent protection. The first of these new covers is being delivered to a manufacturer of a well-known portable machine, who states that the trade is receiving it very enthusiastically, as it offers an outfit that covers all requirements.

BOYER HELPS IN CARUSO WEEK

ELKHART, IND., March 6.—The James F. Boyer Music House, of this city, took advantage of the recent Caruso Week by featuring Caruso and Victor records in its window and advertising. A large picture of the deceased tenor was the center of attraction and Victor records made by him formed part of the exhibit.

INSTALL SEABROOK CONCERT GRANDE

KALAMAZOO, MICH., March 4.—The Majestic Theatre, of this city, has installed a Seabrook concert grande and is collaborating with local talking machine merchants in the sale of records.

C. F. Shallcross at the Newark Recording Laboratory were pressed 14,000 records which were sent to the agents of the four following companies, of which Mr. Shallcross is president: North British Mercantile Insurance Co., Pennsylvania Fire Insurance Co., Mercantile Insurance Co. of America and The Commonwealth Insurance Co. of New York.

Speaking of this unique way of sending a personal message to his agents, Mr. Shallcross said:

SAN FRANCISCO

Fair Demand for Records—Machines Move Slowly—Dealers Honor Caruso—Charles Mauzy Joins the Emporium—News of the Month

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., March 6.—The shortest month in the year, which just ended, bids fair to be the shortest also in sales volume, as far as the talking machine trade here is concerned, but for all that the general trend of business is far from discouraging. Inclement weather and a great deal of sickness naturally curtailed retail activity. Still the volume of record sales has been fair. It requires expert salesmanship to sell machines these days. The people do not respond to reduced prices the way one would expect, but that is hardly strange in view of the contortions pricing has gone through in recent years. "The customer does not understand prices," remarked one of the leading dealers of San Francisco. "Nor does he understand values. If he understood values he would be attracted by the prices we are making on high-class merchandise. What we need to do is to educate the public to the necessity of believing what we say, and the only chance of accomplishing this is to tell the truth. When the people learn to have more respect for advertising statements we may look for more response to advertising. It is folly to create a desire for an article by attractive publicity work and then nullify this by inconsistent or misleading prices."

Dealers Honor Caruso

Caruso Memorial Week was a great success. The talking machine dealers of the State cooperated in doing honor to the great singer whose records have so long been among the best sellers of the trade. The new record, "Messe Solennelle—Crucifixus," by Caruso, which has just been released by the Victor Co., is truly appropriate at this time, the forty-ninth anniversary of Caruso's birth.

Victor Herbert a Visitor

The celebrated composer, Victor Herbert, is the guest conductor this week at the California Theatre. At the grand concert on Sunday morning he led the orchestra in playing one of his own compositions, and thus lovers of good music had the opportunity of comparing the Herbert records with the personal conducting of the composer.

The music of the new Victor record, "Smilin'," is by Krausgrill, the leader of the orchestra of the Strand Theatre, of San Francisco. This fox-trot number is making a strong appeal here.

Charles Mauzy Joins the Emporium

Charles Mauzy, son of Byron Mauzy, has accepted the position of manager of the talking machine department of The Emporium. Charles Mauzy was long the manager of the talking machine department of his father's store before it was sold to the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.

Addison Clark in New Business

Addison Clark, manager of the sales promotion department of the San Francisco office of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., has severed his connection with the company to accept a position with the Southern Electrical Co., of San Diego.

A. C. Ireton, Pacific Coast manager of Edison Co., is back at his desk in San Francisco after a visit to the headquarters in the East.

Wiley B. Allen Co. Optimistic

The Wiley B. Allen Co. looks for a revival of interest in talking machine merchandise as the Spring season advances. The interior branches of the company report prospects good in view of the favorable conditions in the agricultural districts.

Kohler & Chase Busy

Kohler & Chase have suffered no slump in the demand for Okeh records and Burnham machines. The wholesale end is enjoying gratifying success up and down the line.

Iverson Stock Damaged by Fire

The Iverson Phonograph Co., of Oakland, suffered a severe loss two weeks ago as the result of a fire in the building. The damage by water to records and other merchandise was great, though fortunately the fire was controlled before it reached the phonograph shop. Business is continuing as usual.

Improvement at Oakland Phonograph Co.

The Oakland Phonograph Co., Oakland, is having the entire establishment elaborately remodeled in order to better provide for handling the growing business. Among the improvements is a large concert and display room. The Victor and Edison lines are featured.

Hanson Music Co. Making Good

The Hanson Music Co. has built up a flourishing phonograph department in the few months since the business was moved to its present location on Powell street. The manager of the phonograph department is O. M. Smith. Sonora phonographs and Vocalion records are handled with gratifying success.

Men Entertain Ladies of Hauschildt Co.

The ladies of the Oakland store of the Hauschildt Music Co. were the guests of the men employees at a roast pork dinner last month and the affair was one of the most pleasant of the numerous parties held by the Hauschildt forces. The dinner was given in the charming home of Mrs. Cushman, who is one of the Oakland staff.

Clark Wise Comments on Business

Clark Wise, San Francisco, says the sale of records shows some improvement since the recent reductions, but that the general demand for machines is hard to size up. He says the slack business during February is largely due to the psychological effect of the cry of hard times. The people are not buying in proportion to their ability to buy, at least in San Francisco, but are deliberately exercising unusual economy for fear of future poverty.

Student of Sales and Advertising

L. H. Bushnell, manager of the talking machine department of the John Breuner Co., Oakland, is a keen student of modern sales and advertising methods, and his department shows results in keeping with his progressive policies. He assumes that the salesman still has a responsibility to the customer after the sale and the writer believes he is right.

News Brieflets

Morley Somers, manager of the Sonora Phonograph Shop, has returned from his business trip in the North. He is decidedly optimistic in regard to the business outlook.

Billy Morton, manager of the retail talking machine department of Sherman, Clay & Co., took a little trip down the San Joaquin Valley this month and found the trade unshaken in optimism in spite of temporary dullness.

Andrew McCarthy, of Sherman, Clay & Co., was in southern California a few days last week and he says the wholesale demand for Victor merchandise is lively.

WILL HANDLE STRAND LINE

NEW ORLEANS, LA., March 6.—It was announced recently that a deal had been closed by the Maison Blanche store in this city, whereby it will handle the Strand line of phonographs, made by the Manufacturers Phonograph Co., New York. A good-sized shipment is now en route to New Orleans, and the line will be featured by the store aggressively.

The Arcaro Phonograph Co., 918 Wylie avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was slightly damaged by fire recently.

NEW ORLEANS

Trade Has Been Somewhat Uneven—Maison Blanche Puts Over Big Sale—Dealers and Jobbers Very Optimistic Over March Outlook

NEW ORLEANS, LA., March 6.—With one exception, a summary of the interviews of the talking machine dealers of the city brings out the fact that trade for the past month has been somewhat uneven. The bigger stores have fared better than the smaller ones, but from their point of view the month was, as expressed by one of the sales managers, "spotted"—that is, certain days were very good, while other days hardly justified keeping open the store. They consoled themselves, however, with the fact that it was not an indication of a decreased interest in music, but that their experiences were common in other lines as well. The five-and-ten-cent store and the millinery and dry goods stores experienced the same condition.

As analyzed by the far-seeing members of the trade, the present situation represents but a temporary reaction in business—a dip—from which the Spring will see the music trade emerged and thriving.

Buy Cheap Machines and Exchange for Better

The exception spoken of is Maison Blanche. A phenomenal sale of nondescript cabinet talking machines has been enjoyed here. In three days a carload of these machines was disposed of, "and these are orders which we had left over," said J. D. Moore, holding up a handful of orders which represented sales made before they had time to check up.

"It was the biggest thing of its kind we have ever handled and we are still filling those orders. People came in from the country just to get one of these cabinet machines, which we were offering for $49.75, $69.75 and $79.75."

The sale which took place in the early part of February was originally planned to run ten days, but with a full page of advertising the first day and a half page the second day the trick was turned in three days.

In addition to that, there were eighteen cabinet Victrolas sold on the first day to those who had come to buy cheaper machines.

Since the sale a number of the buyers have returned and traded in their machines for Victrolas and Brunswicks. Record sales have increased with the growing number of talking machine owners. However, no records were included in the sale offer.

About the only thing in addition to the sale that has happened at Maison Blanche was the resignation of Miss Frances Johnson, one of the old standbys of the department.

Werlein Manager Plans Big Month

Sales Manager Powell, over at the house of Philip Werlein, Ltd., may not be a Christian Scientist, but he has all the qualifications. He believes that March is going to be an exceptional month for him and on the first day of the month he started out to make it true. For him the month of February has had some very good days, but as a whole he was not satisfied with his showing and is determined to head the list for March.

Mr. Powell reports the sale of two period model Victrolas to two of the city's most prominent families. One of the machines was a Gothic and the other was a William and Mary style.

Mr. Powell has lost the services of Miss M. Pavone and has added to the force Mrs. Gladys S. Britton, who has had a number of years of experience in the Victrola line.

Big Record Sale at Grunewald's

R. A. Young, sales manager for Grunewald, says he is getting his share of the business. "I have heard more talk of hard times on the outside than I have heard here in the department," said

Mr. Young. "While the machine sales have fallen off a bit we have had a phenomenal record business during the month and we look for improvement in the Spring in all lines. Our Rampart street store reports a nice business, but reports from our branch in Jackson, Miss., show business in that section to be rather tight."

Dugan Co. to Feature Caruso Records

Mrs. Trembley, at the Dugan Piano Co., says that the month ended with an excellent business. In the last days of the month a Starr Style 17 was among the many cabinet machines sold. Records also were big sellers. Dugan's is preparing to feature Caruso records in connection with the Caruso American Memorial Foundation drive which will begin March 22.

Celebrated Artists to Be Heard

Two famous Victor artists will be in New Orleans in the near future. They are Galli-Curci and Erika Morini, the seventeen-year-old violinist, who has scored so big in New York.

A True Dog Story

Mrs. Trembley tells an interesting trade story about a lady who wanted to get a Victrola for her little girl as a birthday present. The little girl also wanted a bulldog. So the mother rang up and said that the daughter wanted a bulldog and it was not possible to get both, so she would not buy the Victrola. Mrs. Trembley told her that it would be possible for the daughter to have both—that Dugan Co. would send her one of the Penn souvenir dogs which listens to its master's voice, but that there was no "bull" in him. Mrs. Trembley is now featuring the "Bow-wow Blues," which has all the earmarks of a pedigree number.

VISITS THE CHICAGO FACTORY

Max Willinger, president of the New York Album & Card Co., of New York and Chicago, visited the Chicago factory during the early part of the month. Mr. Willinger reports that the demand for albums is continuing in a satisfactory manner. The album and shelf outfits for the Victrola No. 80 are also much in favor with discriminating buyers.

A Necessity—Not an Accessory

The Hall Fibre Needle is today a part and parcel of the Talking Machine and Phonograph.

Its place among needles is unique, in that its specific performance is different and quite separate and apart from any other.

The Hall Fibre Needle has no competition. It is in a class of its own.

It has never failed to repay the dealer, in terms of increased profits and prestige, for all efforts expended in familiarizing his customers with its many advantages.

GREAT PLANT WHERE STRAND PHONOGRAPHS ARE MADE

Immense Establishment Located at Salem, Ind., Has an Output of Three Hundred Instruments Per Day—Maximum Service in Way of Shipping—Equipment Most Modern and of the Best

The accompanying illustration will give some idea of the magnitude of the plant that is manufacturing Strand instruments. It is said that this factory is the third largest plant in the country devoted exclusively to the production of talking machine cabinets. The Strand factory is located at Salem, Ind., and aside from its manufacturing perfection, it is afforded maximum service in the way of transportation and shipping, as it is located on a railroad siding. The factory, devoted exclusively to the making of Strand phonographs, has a capacity of 300 daily.

The equipment of the plant is noteworthy for its efficiency, for from the first glance at the system of putting all the lumber through all the preliminary processes without any handling off the trucks one cannot escape the evidences of modern time-saving methods. It is a phonograph cabinet factory, was built for phonograph manufacture and never used for any other purpose. Every separate piece of wood goes through its appointed process smoothly and in perfect order. At the exactly calculated time and at the correctly blueprinted spot it is joined by all the other pieces of wood that combine to make a unit, and the same smooth progress holds true right along to the sound-proof testing room, which every Strand instrument passes through before it is placed in the shipping case. Geo. W. Lyle, president of the Manufacturers' Phonograph Co., maker of the Strand phonograph, describes the factory aptly when he states, "the overhead due to imperfect packing and shipping would show up days, weeks and even months afterward in shipping expenses, repacking expense, repairing expense and in the much more costly loss of dealers' good will. That's a kind of 'hang over' overhead which we have eliminated, and is one of the reasons for our ability to offer Strand dealers an exceptional sales proposition."

AN INGENIOUS FILING DEVICE

Duplex Record File Corp. Introducing a New System of Filing That Has Won Much Praise

The Duplex Record File Corp., New York, is introducing to the trade this month a compact and ingenious filing device embodying several features entirely new. It is designed not only to be used in record albums, but can be adopted and installed in any talking machine as a permanent equipment. The album, the company states, is being manufactured in a ten-inch size and is capable of holding twenty records. This feature of compactness is a patented one with this company and is the result of many years of experience and experiment on the part of H. Weidle, who has made a careful study of this particular field for some years past. He stated that "heretofore much attention has been given to every other development of the talking machine equipment and that for some reason filing systems have been more or less neglected. Consequently no great change in construction has been introduced in the trade for a long time past. The thought of this device was the result of lack of space for filing records in my own home, and I worked out the present scheme so as to enable me to file twice as many records in the space available in the present talking machine." He stated further that this was a typical case of the average talking machine owner and for that reason he believes the Duplex record file will meet with favor from talking machine owners everywhere.

A very clever way has been devised for opening the album to procure the records, in that both sides of the album open up as a book, leaving the record exposed where it can be easily available. A place has been left on the inside covers for indexing the records, which is in plain view and easily read when the album is open.

Arthur Kopp, general sales manager, is very enthusiastic about the possibilities of this new album, and it is his idea that it will not only prove a desirable sales asset, but will increase interest in the sale of new records.

WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WORLD, CHICAGO, ILL., MARCH 10, 1922
US TALKING MACHINE men, as we might say, are getting to be truthful and conscientious critters. Truthful James is our name.

The Tribe
James

There was a time when no retail man would ever acknowledge that it was his own fault if business was bad. It was always the fault of General Conditions, General Apathy or one of the other commanding officers of the army of Evil. But we have been noticing lately a tendency among our friends in this part of the world to observe that those who during recent months have been frightened into making strenuous efforts to keep their vessels of business from the rocks have usually been successful. From which it follows that when a man's business is bad he may justly suppose the primary fault to be with himself. It took our retailers a long time to sense out this truth, but really it looks as if most of them by now had come to the correct conclusion. That being so, we may fairly anticipate improvement all along the line. Of course, it will not be a matter of any sudden up-turn. Matters do not work out so quickly as that. But the point is that just so soon as men in industry generally, or in any specific industry, cease looking outward exclusively and begin also to look inward for the springs and causes of prosperity, there is organized forthwith a mental attitude which enables those who adopt it to face facts squarely and see them in their true light. When this happens, when the cloud of fear has been brushed away, the least pleasant facts take on a less deadly aspect. Then, indeed, we may say that we know the worst and can begin to take care of it. Then, too, we may rightly say that we are organizing our own future.

SOME persons who live in the East are prone to believe that the terms Chicago and Illinois are in reality identical. This would be a strange and dangerous doctrine to preach in the hearing of an Illinois downstater, for the preacher would at once be informed that Chicago is merely the wart, as it were, on the nose of the State of Illinois, where said State looks out over the blue waters of Lake Michigan towards the rising sun. Your downstater Illinoisian is some little local patriot when it comes to putting Chicago in its place. Which introductory remarks may serve as a curtain-raiser to the new Central Illinois Victor Dealers' Association, which has just been formed at Peoria and which is referred to elsewhere. The C. I. V. D. A. arose as the direct result of the convention held by the Putnam-Page Co., the eminent Victor wholesaler, in its home city during the last days of February. The move is a good move. The talking machine business has brought itself to a point where the merchandising policy to be adopted by the retail trade becomes a matter of essential importance. We are past the toy stage, past the novelty stage. We are at the musical instrument stage. That means that we need, and must have, sound thinking and a sound merchandising policy. To the formation of such policies and to the success of such thinking associations in the retail trade are, in these wide-scattered days, quite essential. Without them the trade would stagnate. Welcome, C. I. V. D. A.!

AS THESE words are written the attention of Chicago is concentrated upon the meeting of the National Educational Association, which has brought some eight thousand men and women to Chicago, men and women who represent the best practical thought in the country on every matter which relates to education in all its branches. We have superintendents, teachers, supervisors of every kind. Many of them are taking advantage of their opportunity to visit the special educational exhibits which are, as we write, being made at the Leiter Stores Building, once the home of the Siegel-Cooper store. All sorts of school equipment are on display and not the least interesting of the exhibits are made by the Victor Talking Machine Co. and the Columbia Graphophone Co. This is no place to make any description or even to give any hint of the vast variety of the practical applications of the talking machine and records to educational purposes which are set forth in these interesting and fascinating exhibits. But one novelty calls for special attention here. We say "novelty" because we think this is the first time it has been seen at an N. E. A. exhibit. This is the display of Walter Camp's Health Builder records, which, as readers know, give verbal commands and instructions, with music for setting-up exercises to be gone through at home. The demonstration was one of the nicest things we have seen yet, and it surely interested the school folks, who were around in crowds all the time. Here is another entry for the talking machine in the schools. May there be many more of them!

"Settin'

SPEAKING of records, we feel it a good time to express our sympathy with the unfortunate gentlemen who have to choose the titles which vs.

are to be recorded each month. The immense amount of music, chiefly ephemeral, which is published every week, and which competes with a previously existing much larger mass of all kinds and sorts, from the best to the worst, presents to the persons charged with selecting a task of appalling magnitude and uncertainty. It is wonderful that so few mistakes are made. But at the same time the task is rendered far more uncertain than it otherwise might be, by the entire absence of reliable statistics. Now we should like to make a suggestion at this point. We think there is no real reason why statistics should not be collected concerning the styles, quantities, sales figures, etc., of published music, old and new. Sheet music publishers, those who control standard editions, retail merchants and others are alike interested in any information which might lead them better to gauge public taste in its periodic trends towards one extreme or the other. As things stand there is no way of foretelling either the magnitude or the duration of any boom which appears to be starting. Popular music publishing in consequence is largely a matter of forcing certain numbers by various costly and uncertain methods of "plugging" and "boosting." It would be in every way far more scientific, and consequently far better, to spend the same amount of money in actually gathering accurate data as to public demand. And the result of such effort, in relief to those who have to select record lists, would be immeasurable. Of course, this is a matter for trade co-operation. But then why have we a Music Industries Chamber of Commerce if not for dealing with just such questions as this, where the need is for inter-trade co-operation? One thing, at any rate, is sure: the present hit-or-miss method of selecting numbers for recording (and the same applies, of course, to the kindred music roll) is uncertain, expensive, unscientific and wasteful. Much money is lost through wrong guessing and consequent production of numbers which do not sell. Why not begin to investigate the entire question scientifically? No one will be harmed, everyone will be benefited.

IF O. M. Caward, ex-preacher and present manufacturer, is to be believed, one old hardware merchant in a small down-state Illinois

Boards:
Wash and

-town at least knows what has been the matter with his business. The story is too good to keep, and we pass it on from Brother Caward to our mid-West readers with much joy. It seems that our friend was going through his territory calling on the merchants to whom he sells and inquiring of them why they were buying slackly. One old chap paused before he answered, and then, shifting his quid, spat across the floor and drawled: "Well, it may be this way and it may be not, but I've noticed of late that of every ten folks who come into my store to buy seven gets ouija boards to three that gets washboards." Talking machine dealers might take a lesson from the old hardware man and remember that the exact trouble with most of the people of the U. S. A. just at present is that they are wasting too much time listening for sounds from the spirit world to tell them when times will be better and not enough time getting out to sell what they can

CHICAGO, ILL., March 8.—The latter part of February showed somewhat of a falling off in retail business, but a marked revival was evident the first week of March. This is true not only of talking machine retailers, but of retailers in other lines as well. Nevertheless, in our walks around the city we have noticed one peculiarity, which is that the music men seem to be the only merchants who show a tendency toward depressive psychosis. By that we mean that whenever there is a little slump in business in general it affects the talking machine business acutely. The talking machine retailers therein (not all of them, but a good many) are always ready to throw up their hands and exclaim that there is nothing left for them to do but roll over and die. We recently asked one merchant how business was. His come-back was that he believed he would take out an embalmer's license, as he thought there would be more money in burying dead prospects than in selling live ones. That aroused our curiosity and we began questioning. It was not long until we found out that he was not supporting himself locally, either by advertising or by employing canvassers. We asked him how business had been during the holidays and shortly after, and he said that it had been very good. He also admitted that while this business had been good he had been doing some advertising and canvassing as well. So it is plainly to be seen that the same old story applies here as usual. Two and two are four, and you cannot make them five. A little further down the street we came across a department store that makes a specialty of furniture and talking machines. We have been going into this store for a number of years and know everybody from the proprietor to the errand boy. We asked the manager how business was and he said, "We are doing fairly well and managing to keep ourselves busy and to show a profit." We looked around the store and noticed that several of the salesmen were showing customers the lines of furniture, and also that about half the sales people were absent. We remarked about this and asked the manager if he had laid off the rest of his sales help. "No, sir!" said he. "Each one of these salesmen has his own little prospect list and when he is not in the store selling one of these prospects some of our goods he is out on the street telling them what a nice new line we have in stock and inducing them to come in. The way we work it is like this: We have our regular canvassing force to go out and break the ice and find out who is in the market for our goods. After the canvasser makes one or two calls a regular salesman goes out and applies some real sales methods which, with very few exceptions, bring about the desired results." So here again are our two and two, making four.

So after making our rounds of the trade we have again found that the fellows who are really doing the business (and there are plenty of them at that) are those who are going out after it, while those who are hanging the crêpe are letting the "grass grow under their feet." When you really get down to it, there is no reason why one dealer should prosper and another starve in any one locality. When one neighborhood shows two dealers, of whom one is doing business while the other is not, the cause is obvious, and upon investigation will turn out to be that the dealer who is getting the business is really getting it as a reward for good hard labor.

The manufacturers are still receiving many inquiries and generally believe that just as soon as the building operations get going everything pertaining to business will start to pick up. The nucleus of the labor situation is within the Chicago territory, and up at the office where building permits are issued the report comes out that just as soon as this wage question is settled Chicago will see a tremendous building boom. Oldtimers in the business who have gone through such periods in the past are commonly asserting that when building activity has been at its height no one could even ask for better business. From the looks of things at present it is an almost assured thing that building will start in a short time in Chicago and spread all over the country.

Take on Victor

H. A. Moore, a copartner in the Palace Furniture Co., Avilla, Ind., while in Chicago recently, announced that his company has just opened a new talking machine department. Victrolas and Victor records are being handled exclusively and Mr. Moore states that they are working to make this new department one of the handsomest in Indiana. Three hearing rooms have already been equipped and presently plans will be drawn for the purpose of adding several more. At present they are working on their record bins, some of which have already been completed. When finished the capacity will be ten thousand records. The company also plans to carry a complete catalog of Victor records and Victor Red Seal records.

Glicks Incorporate

According to a report printed in a recent issue of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, the Glick Talking Machine Shop has recently been incorporated for $100,000. The incorporators named are George J. Glick, Sam Winikoff and Graham Glick. The purpose of the incorporation is to manufacture and deal in musical instruments. The Glick Talking Machine shop is located at 2100 West Division street and is one of the most handsomely fitted up Victor retail stores in the northwest division of Chicago. The proprietors of this concern have spent a considerable sum of money in remodeling and decorating their place of business.

Change Company Name

The Wade Talking Machine Co. has changed its name to the Wade-Twichell Co. Announcement of the Wade Co.'s taking over the Twichell interests was made in these columns last month. The Twichell name is one of the oldest on Piano Row and for years had represented some of the best known pianos made in this country. About the first of May the stocks of the original Wade and Twichell stores will be moved over to the building where the Smith Piano Co. is located at present. The entire building will be occupied by the new company.

Add New Test Tables

The Fletcher-Wickes Co. has made quite a number of new improvements about its plant in the last thirty days. One thing it has done was to install a number of test tables in the sound box assembling department. The construction of these tables embodies some new ideas, which the heads of this firm believe to be entirely original with them. Each table is about forty-five inches high, twenty-four inches wide and fifty inches long. Beneath the felt-covered top are two motors and two amplifiers. In proper position on top of the table are placed two tone arms, one of which is attached to a permanent master sound box. The other tone arm is used for testing the reproducers and is arranged so that they can be slipped on and off with perfect ease. Two identical test records are used. The master starts to play and then a sound box is placed on the test arm and tried. If the box being tested reproduces tones exactly like those of the master it is passed; if not, it is rejected. This procedure is gone through with every box coming from the assembly department. Careful check is kept on the master and even this is tested at regular intervals during the day. The company has also improved the style of its letterheads. The new ones are engraved and lithographed. The lithograph is a neat little illustration of the company's tone arm and sound box. It is printed at the top of the sheet and the engraving is then superimposed over it.

Second Anniversary With Starr Co.

C. O. Miller, head of the Chicago division of the Starr Piano Co., celebrated his second year in Chicago recently. The celebration came in the form of a little party tendered him by the sales department, and during the little luncheon each salesman turned in individual sales reports, which, when compiled, revealed the fact that the business of this concern is on a very satisfactory basis. Mr. Miller recently put a large number of men out in the city to sell Starr phonographs, pianos and Gennett records, and the reports for the first week are exceedingly good.

National Education Association Meets

More than 8,000 public school superintendents from all over the United States met in congress here during the week February 26 to March 4. The meetings were held on the fourth and fifth floors of the Leiter Stores Building at State and Van Buren streets. In connection with this gathering there was held on other floors of the building an exhibit by manufacturers of school supplies, playground equipment and other educational accessories. The talking machine exhibits, through their educational departments, held the center of the stage for the entire week. Those represented were the Victor Talking Machine Co., the Columbia Graphophone Co. and the Health Builders. The booth of the Victor Co. was very artistically arranged. An oil portrait of Enrico Caruso was hung directly opposite the entrance into the booth, and on the floor below this portrait was a very handsome console Victrola in Walnut. Two large polychrome candles were at each side of the console, and several pieces of antique furniture were scattered over the floor, which was covered with Persian rugs. The effect of this booth was pleasing and interesting to the many school superintendents who were attracted by the playing of one of the two instruments which were placed like sentinels before the entrance to the exhibit. Mrs. Frances E. Clark, director of the educational department of the Victor Co., was in charge of affairs at this booth and stated that this was the largest and best attended convention ever held.

The Columbia booth, which was in charge of Miss Genevieve Qualey and Mr. Wilson, attracted equal interest and attention throughout the congress.

Visit Elkhart

Isham Jones, together with nine members of his famous orchestra, returned last week from Elkhart, Ind., where they had been the guests of James F. Boyer, secretary of C. G. Conn, Ltd. While in Elkhart they were shown through the great Conn factories and witnessed the methods of making Conn band instruments.

Some Remarkable Sales Records

An Indiana store recently sent out our small circulars (furnished free) to its mailing list. The mailing cost only a few dollars and the total sales to date are over 75 repeaters.

Two Loop stores in Chicago are selling more than 15 Repeaters each daily as a result of a window demonstration and counter displays.

A store in a small Pennsylvania town has sold 127 repeaters to date. This is a splendid record for less than two months' work.

Stores that have made window demonstrations of the Geer Repeater, showing it in actual use in the window, are selling from three to ten times more Repeaters than other stores.

G EER REPEATERS sure do sell and they stay sold," say scores of our dealers. And it is the judgment of these men, who are in the same line of business as you, that you are asked to accept when you consider this repeater.

Stores that are handling the Geer Repeater have found it an unusually rapid seller. Those who are using it in window demonstrations have been surprised at the unexpected interest passers-by take in their windows.

The Geer Repeater is as near fool-proof as a repeater can be made. It repeats instantly and as often as desired, without injury to the needle, the record or the machine. For dancing, dining, or when working or resting, the Geer Repeater doubles the joy of owning a phonograph.

No home is complete without a phonograph. No phonograph is complete without a Geer Repeater.

Send for our "Demonstration Package" containing three Geer Repeaters and make a window demonstration. You will be surprised at the results.

Mrs. L. Gelbspan's Mother Dies

We learn with regret that Mrs. Emily Rodgers, mother of Mrs. L. Gelbspan, proprietor of the Boston Book Co., has passed away. Her death was due to pneumonia, which she contracted while in Detroit on a visit to another daughter and son. Mrs. Gelbspan accompanied her mother to Detroit and after placing her in the care of her sister and brother, departed for New York to look after the Eastern interests of her company. Mrs. Gelbspan had hardly arrived in New York when she received a wire that her mother had been taken down with pneumonia. The same evening she received the sad news that her mother had passed away. She hurriedly concluded her business and returned to Detroit. Mrs. Rodgers was buried in Chicago.

Dorchester Mapes With Low's Letter Service

Low's Letter Service, of Chicago, has just made the announcement that it has opened a new copy letter service department with Dorchester Mapes in charge. Mr. Mapes is well known to the talking machine trade and was formerly treasurer and general manager of the R. C. Wade Co., which is now known as the Tonofone Co. Mr. Mapes' new duties are calling on the trade and discussing selling problems that can be handled by mail and other direct-by-mail advertising.

Roseland Shop Decorates

The Roseland Music Shop at 1146 South Michigan avenue has just added four new sound-proof booths to its equipment, making a total of ten. This new equipment greatly facilitates the handling of its record business, which has lately grown to large proportions. Other improvements have also been made which tend to increase the efficiency of this company's service. Among the improvements are very elaborate decorations, the scheme of which blends in a way to bring out the soft color tones very pleasingly and at the same time imparts a sense of restfulness and a homelike appearance through the whole store. This shop has also recently erected a large and beautiful electric sign which shows the name "Victrola" in large letters, and can be seen rising above the tops of the houses for a great distance. Proprietor Corngold is sparing no effort or expense in order to have his establishment up to the minute in equipment, fixtures and stock.

Price Reductions on Enclosed Motors

We have recently made sharp reductions in the prices of enclosed, self-lubricated motors—due to decreased costs in labor and material and a larger output.

This will put the Enclosed Motor within the reach of those manufacturers whose desire has been to use this motor, but whose lines have not been high enough in price to do so.

The same quality and high degree of inspection will be maintained.

REMEMBER

You don't have to tune this motor. It comes to you silent and smooth running. It reaches your customers in the same condition.

the plant in Ashland. The graphite mined by the Superior Co. is of the flake variety and comes in three grades, namely, coarse, fine and powdered. The powdered graphite this company sells to the trade for lubricating of phonograph motors.

Mr. Joyce made an interesting statement in connection with the forms of graphite when he said that there are two kinds, the flake and amorphous. The difference between these is in the fact that flake graphite will never lump or gum and cause a spring to pound or stick, whereas the amorphous or lump graphite will always do this. The graphite prepared and packed by the Superior Co. is put up in packages ranging from one-half pound cans to four hundred-pound barrels.

New Plant Nearing Completion

Word comes from the Brunswick headquarters that their new record plant at Muskegon, Mich., is fast nearing completion. This new plant will be complete in every way and equipped with the most up-to-date record manufacturing machinery. Brunswick will therefore soon have no less than four centers, namely: Jersey City, N. J.; Auburn, N. Y.; Toronto, Canada, and Muskegon. In these is done all the actual manufacturing, while the work of recording is carried on in studios located in New York and Chicago.

With the completion of the Muskegon plant a new source of record distribution will be available, which will insure prompter deliveries on records, especially in the West and mid-Western territories.

So far as Brunswick phonograph and record interests are concerned the Brunswick Co. regards the prospects for 1922 optimistically, and it has reason to do so.

Appoint New Manager in Minneapolis

The Chicago office of the Aeolian Co., through its manager, H. B. Levy, has just made the announcement that George H. Compton has been appointed as sales manager of the wholesale Vocalion department of the Stone Piano Co., Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Compton is one of the best-known men in the trade of the Northwest, having started with C. R. Stone, president of the Stone Piano Co., twenty-seven years ago. In 1908 he was made manager of the Stone Co.'s headquarters at Fargo, N. D., and after being there for four years he took charge of the Grand Forks house of that company.

In more recent years he was associated with Lawrence Lucker, an enterprising jobber of Minneapolis, and from there he came back to the Stone Co. in the capacity of sales manager of the wholesale Vocalion department a few weeks ago. With Mr. Compton's vast acquaintance in the trade, together with the Stone Piano Co.'s prestige in the Northwest, the Vocalion talking machines and records make a very interesting combination, and Mr. Compton has already mapped out comprehensive sales plans for 1922. These plans were recently completed when he paid a

Caruso Week Successful

Victor dealers around Chicago are well pleased with the results of Caruso Week, which was observed February 27. All dealers planned special activities to commemorate the forty-ninth anniversary of Caruso's birth, and in doing this they tied up with musical circles throughout the city. One of the cleverest tie-ups was brought about by the Victor jobbers here, who, working in conjunction with their dealers, thought out numerous plans to put Caruso Week over, in which they were very successful.

One plan which was put forth, and which proved a tremendous success, was the work with the Symphony concerts. All theatres and other houses of amusement which had symphony orchestras co-operated to the fullest extent. The arrangement was along the following lines: A Victrola was placed on the stage or other conspicuous part of the house and a Caruso record, No. 87335, "Crucifixus," from Solemn Mass by Rossini, was played to the accompaniment of the Symphony Orchestra. This was rather an unusual method of bringing the public's attention to this record, but it made a tremendous impression. Besides, the dealers carried large amounts of effective advertising space in the local newspapers and programs, and this also was a means of creating intense interest.

On Southern Trip

C. E. Saunders, Cheney ambassador for the Southern territory, left Chicago this week for a trip through the South in the interest of the Cheney Co. This is a special tour for observation purposes only, and upon his return to Chicago the results thereof will be gone over carefully with a view to picking a new Southern distributor for the Cheney talking machine.

Welcome No. 280 Victrola

The new Victrola No. 280 which recently came through to the Chicago trade has, according to Victor jobbers here, been very favorably received by other dealers, who are in turn placing substantial orders for this new model.

Why Indeed?

H. L. Morey, manager of the talking machine department of Rothschild's, one of the big Loop department stores, is the author of a very pertinent sentence, which is placed conspicuously throughout his department. The question is, "You would not try to match a piece of goods without bringing a sample of the original color, so why try to carry a tune in your head when purchasing a talking machine?"

Mr. Morey states that women prospects who come into this department have been sold immediately by this argument, and it has been the means of creating a great deal of business for him.

W. C. Griffiths' Mother Dies

W. C. Griffiths, assistant sales manager of the Chicago Talking Machine Co., recently received the sad news of his mother's death in his home down in Indianapolis. Immediately upon the receipt of this news he left for that town to attend the funeral and was accompanied on his sad journey by Dan Creed, general manager of the company.

A Notable Visitor to Chicago

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Geissler, of New York, are paying a visit to Chicago which will probably last several weeks. Mr. Geissler is here visiting the trade and looking after his interests at the Chicago Talking Machine Co., of which he is president.

Cheney Publicity

Volume 1, No. 5, of the "Cheney Resonator" was mailed to some thirty thousand Cheney advocates on the first of March. This issue, like the previous ones, is of newspaper size, four pages, and contains much interesting data pertaining to the Cheney Co. and its product. One interesting item entitled "Telling the Story of Cheney Supremacy" is cleverly illustrated by small cuts showing Cheney ads which have appeared in recent issues of The Talking Machine World, which give the details of manufacturing and thoroughly explain these details to the trade. One of these cuts shows the Micrometric instruments which test to the thousandth part of an inch the various parts going into the construction of Cheney motors in order to insure perfection.

Upon reading this article we find that "it is the rule of the Cheney organization that every last part should be as perfect as fine machinery and human ingenuity can accomplish. Imagine, for instance, the mechanical perfection that figures in a small piece of metal that is turned and finished down to less than one-thousandth of an inch."

One of these articles tells just how it is done in the case of the governor-shaft of the Cheney motor, while going through the factory. The illustration shows a small plug of wood, perhaps one-half an inch thick and of peculiar appearance. This is full of small holes. The wood itself seems to be very fibrous, and it is explained that this wood is of a peculiar type of maple which grows in a certain section and which no manufacturer ever had or tried to have. After the shaft of the motor has been milled down to the required dimensions, it is repeatedly run through the holes in this piece of wood, which in turn gives it a high polish and smoothness and is an excellent example of one of the methods put into practice to insure accurate handling of motor parts.

Brunswick via Wireless

Brunswick records are gaining quite a bit of publicity these days through the wireless operations of A. A. Howard, a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, who devotes his spare time to work in the private wireless station which he maintains at his home.

He states that he is attaining remarkable results with his wireless and is at present broadcasting many Brunswick records which lend themselves to this in a remarkable manner. He believes that the Brunswick records he plays into his wireless transmitter are picked up by approximately one thousand stations in and around Chicago.

Columbia Co.'s Activities

Many of the sales force connected with the Chicago branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co. are doing a great deal of work evenings in connection with wireless telephony. They are calling the attention of Columbia dealers throughout Chicago to the fact that Morgan Eastman, who is director of the Westinghouse Broadcast Radiophone Station in Chicago, is using the latest releases of Columbia records each night in his broadcasting program. Several of the dealers have in turn gotten out literature, giving this program in detail and mentioning Columbia records, and at the same time giving the details necessary for the amateur wireless operators to tune up their Radiophone equipment correctly to that of the broadcasting station. One of the most ardent fans in this connection is S. B. Bird, a Columbia dealer of Argo, Ill., who has already installed a wireless receiving station for the benefit of his customers, and in the few nights that it has been in operation the store has been crowded with radio fans who have listened in to the Columbia records sent out by Mr. Eastman. Mr. Bird states that already he has seen the influence in his record department and contemplates adding more amplification to his sets just as soon as he can get them from the Radiophone dealer.

How R. O. Pierce "Got There"

R. O. Pierce, Columbia representative, encountered an unusual experience during the recent blizzard through northern Wisconsin. In an effort to reach Chicago to attend a sales conference he went through several wild rides and a railroad wreck. Newspaper accounts explain that a heavy coating of ice from two to twelve inches thick covered everything in the country, causing roofs to cave in, communications to be cut off and traffic tied up. Fighting his way south from Green Bay, the first big obstacle was encountered five miles from Appleton, where both engines and a baggage car on a double header left the tracks. Walking three miles to a small railroad station, Pierce chartered the only available automobile and successfully dodged live wires and broken telegraph poles and eventually skidded into Appleton. The fun had only started—telegraph wires down, trains at a standstill and a meeting in Chicago. To make a long story short, he missed the meeting by forty-eight hours.

MacNichol the Minstrel

G. A. MacNichol, office manager of the Chicago branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co., holds the important office of director of the Maywood Minstrels. At their annual minstrel show recently one night was devoted to the Columbia family, all of the customary jokes being directed toward the staff from the office.

After the show the party adjourned to the home of D. W. Donohue in Maywood, where fun and hilarity prevailed for several hours.

Robert E. Porter, of the New York executive office of the Columbia Co., spent three days in Chicago recently on his way through to the Western branches.

The Record Digest

The Rosenow Co., one of the large printing and publishing concerns in Chicago, has just brought out a cleverly gotten up little magazine known as the Record Digest, which is published for the benefit of Brunswick dealers. In this it is calling attention to a series of ten portraits of Brunswick artists which are being sent free to all Brunswick Digest subscribers. The first portrait, a beautiful photograph of Florence Easton, is being delivered with the March issue.

Making Chinese Records Popular

The Chinese of Chicago got together last week and celebrated their New Year, as usual, with popping firecrackers, good music and eats. Chicago's Chinatown is down on the South Side. Z. Ganis, a Columbia dealer, whose headquarters are in the Loop, managed to cash in on the affair in a very profitable way. He makes a specialty of all foreign language records, and at the right time he let the Chinese populace know that he had a large stock of Chinese records on hand. This little "tie-up" resulted in the disposal of over seven hundred Columbia Chinese records during the New Year festivities.

A Beautiful Valentine

Another clever tie-up of song and record was put over at the Chicago Theatre last week. The song featured by the artist was "Remember the Rose," a Remick number, and the singer appeared in front of a dark velvet drop, which occupied the entire stage. Placed in front of this drop was an immense spray of white roses which ran up the curtain diagonally, breaking at the center of the curtain, where was an oval opening, surrounded by a gilt frame, within which were arranged three young ladies dressed like a valentine card picture. The color effects were obtained by green and red lighting.

The trio sang "Remember the Rose," and the programs carried information from the Columbia and Remick people as to where the song could be purchased. Dealers in the immediate vicinity of the Chicago Theatre also proclaimed by program announcements that the song could be bought in their shops.

Takes on New Line

The Lakeside Supply Co. has taken on a line of accessories for home wireless outfits, which it is offering to the trade. It has erected a receiving station in its plant at 416 South Dearborn street, and it is surprising to note how the news of this plant has spread during the last week or so. When the plant was put up, Bill and Gus Fricke gave out the news to a few of their intimate friends and casually remarked, "If you know anybody who would like to hear what is going on in the air, send them up." The result was that for the past week or more the plant has been literally mobbed, and so many requests have

Bill Fricke is an old hand at the wireless game and by virtue of having had over twenty-five years of experience as an electrical engineer he knows just where to go to make the necessary connections. Novel Publicity Stunt

A very unique feature of the Balaban & Katz motion picture theatres during the past four weeks has been the rendition of the song "I Hear You Calling Me" by a human voice through the amplifying chamber of a real talking machine. The curtain rises; a girl attendant walks up and winds the machine, places the reproducer on the record and the song begins. Just as the end of the song and of the record is reached the lighting effect is changed and the singer's head is seen in the horn of the talking machine.

First National Ad for Hall Mfg. Co.

The February 25 issue of the Saturday Evening Post carried the first ad of a series of national advertisements to be run by the Hall Mfg. Co. This ad, which was one column wide and a half column long, told the value of the Hall fibre needle and how it preserves and lengthens the life of a record. The illustration shows the fibre needle in the holder at the end of the stylus bar, showing that it is played in exactly the same manner as a steel needle. In a few weeks there will be a group of national magazines coming out which will carry more Hall fibre needle national advertising, and the Hall Co. is calling this fact to the attention of its dealers, so that they may be able to tie up.

Death of Judge A. A. Rolf

Judge A. A. Rolf, of the Jewel Phonoparts Co., died suddenly on February 24 at his home, 10612 South Hoyne avenue. For many years Judge Rolf was heavily interested in this company and at one time was its president. However, on last October he disposed of the greater part of his interest, retaining only a small portion. At the time of his death he was secretary, director and attorney for the company. Judge Rolf had been a resident of Chicago for sixty years and for many years during his career as a lawyer he served as assistant judge in the Probate Court of Chicago. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and was a member of the board of directors of the Hamilton Club. He was also associated with the Eagle Ottawa Letter Co., and several other large corporations. He is survived by his widow, Josephine Rolf, three sisters and one brother.

To Handle the Columbia Line

One of the most recent additions to the Columbia representatives in Chicago is the White Eagle Furniture Co., which operates two stores, one at 8812 Commercial avenue, South Chicago, and the other at 3822 Cedar street, Indiana Harbor, Ind. A. R. Krajewski, the proprietor, is well known in Polish circles of South Chicago. The success of his two large furniture stores can be attributed directly to the influence he has gained. For many years Mr. Krajewski was bailiff of the Cook County Court, and in this office many opportunities presented themselves whereby he could aid Polish immigrants and residents in this country who were in difficulty. This naturally built up a great following for him.

The selection of the Columbia line was influenced by the fact that it publishes a complete Polish catalog. A modern Grafonola department has been installed in both the stores. One of the features in the laying out of this store is that throughout all departments they have placed Columbia machines which are operated by Motrolas, so that there will be a continuous playing,

Takes on Vocalion Line

The Petersen Furniture Co., of this city, conducting stores at 3662 Irving Park boulevard, 4931 North avenue and 1048 Belmont avenue, respectively, has just taken on the complete line of Vocalion talking machines and Vocalion Red records for its three stores. The taking on of this well-known line of talking machines and records was featured by this company with a large advertisement, which appeared in Chicago newspapers. The opening paragraphs of this advertisement read as follows:

"We take pleasure in announcing that we are now representatives for the famous phonograph, 'The Vocalion' and the Vocalion Red record. It is gratifying to announce to our patrons this important affiliation. You are cordially invited to hear and inspect our handsome line of period Vocalions and hear the delightful Red records at your convenience."

The balance of the advertisement was given over to handsome illustrations of various Vocalion period models.

Steady Improvement in Business

Charles F. Baer, president of Charles F. Baer & Co., talking machine manufacturers, who is one of the oldest talking machine men in Chicago, says that there is, beyond all question, a slow but steady improvement in the sale of talking machines. Mr. Baer harks back to the good old days when the Columbia Co. opened its headquarters here, when first he got into the talking machine game. He has been actively engaged ever since that time and knows the actual ups and downs of the trade through all these years. In his opinion, the period of depression through which we have just passed is nothing new or unusual; the trade has gone through other similar periods in the past and the talking machine business always has come out smiling in due time.

"We know that history repeats itself," says Mr. Baer, "and is at present showing signs of doing so again. The recent period of depression is nothing in comparison with that which occurred in 1907, and inasmuch as the music business in general came through that in due time, I can see no reason why we should not go through this. We are going to have good business, with plenty of good, honest competition; but it will take work and salesmanship.

"Our factory is being kept busy, with a sufficient number of orders ahead to keep us working at a good rate. There is a strong demand for console models, and we are planning to take care of the increased business along these lines. There is a sufficient demand for talking machines of good quality at reasonable prices, and the manufacturer who is in position to offer quality and price can get enough business to make his plant work eight hours per day, with sufficient profit at the end of the month to net him a proper return on his investment."

A Lyon &amp; Healy Innovation

L. C. Wiswell, manager of the Lyon & Healy Victor department, both wholesale and retail, announces a unique innovation in their retail Victor service, namely, a personal interpretation of new Victor selections. Mr. Wiswell is the originator of this plan, which has never before been used.

In conjunction with the opening day for new records he has got together a group of Chicago artists who sing and play in person. These artists make the announcement that the numbers they are about to render can be had on Victor Record No. so and so, which is being released during the current month.

The program is given in the record department of the Lyon & Healy establishment from 12 to 3 o'clock and has nothing to do with the regular recitals held in the recital hall. Announcements are sent out in advance to Victor patrons, and they have been splendidly received.

The new plan was launched during the first week of March at the main store at Jackson and Wabash. A few evenings thereafter it was given at their South Side shop and the next evening at the North Side shop. Mr. Wiswell plans to make this a permanent feature in the sale of Victor records and says that the new scheme has met with success. Already there is quite an increase in retail business, which is to be traced directly to this new method of exploiting the Victor business. The numbers given are of diversified character, jazz, popular songs, dance selections, folk songs, operatic arias; in fact, music of every kind.

The artists working with Mr. Wiswell are Lucille Haley, soprano; Carroll Kerns, baritone; Harold Saxler, violinist, Mary Malone, accompanist, and the North Shore Promenade Orchestra.

W. C. Eckhardt Resigns

W. C. Eckhardt, who for the past three years has been managing sales promotion of the Phonograph Co. in this city, has announced his resignation. He has taken up a new line which is known as W. C. Eckhardt Service. This new business venture of Mr. Eckhardt's comes as a direct result of an investigation made among several hundred Edison dealers, jobbers and individuals, identified with the promotion and development of the Edison retail music business.

During his long association with talking machine men he found a need for a service which he has now worked up for talking machine retailers. His plan coincides with a new move of the Edison Co., which calls for disbanding its own promotion department. Mr. Eckhardt has had six years of actual experience in this work in the talking machine and music business and knows dealers in all parts of the United States. His first work on promotion lines was with the Gundlach Advertising Co., of Chicago, for which he handled advertising matter and prepared advertisements for Edison jobbers.

In a sense, Mr. Eckhardt acts as the advertising manager for all dealers who subscribe to his service and these dealers have the privilege of calling upon him for advice as often as they see fit; in other words, his vast experience is being crystallized in the form of a series of talking machine advertisements which he furnishes to his subscribers each month. The style of copy is such that everybody can readily understand it—full of straight-from-the-shoulder sales talk that will make people feel like buying.

Each month these advertisements are sent out in proof form. At the end of a year this series, if produced by one dealer, would cost more than $1,000, whereas by virtue of the Eckhardt service it costs the dealer only a nominal sum.

Edison Dealers Happy

The Edison dealers of Chicago are taking quite a bit of advertising space in Chicago papers announcing the new prices of Edison goods, which went into effect March 1. These announcements convey the news that the $2.25, $1.85 and $1.35 records have been reduced to $2, $1.50 and $1, respectively. The new price of the Hepplewhite model is now $145, former price being $167.50, and the Jacobean, which formerly sold at $265, has been reduced to $245. The other Edison models are unchanged in price. The Edison dealers are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the two new Edison console models, both of which carry the Laboratory Model motor.

New Bulletin Mailer

The latest piece of Brunswick service for its dealers is a new folder, designed to take the place of an envelope, with which Brunswick dealers mail out their monthly bulletins. This new folder is a three-page affair, printed on both sides, making a total of five reading pages, with the sixth left open for addressing purposes. The text matter is handsomely illustrated by means of beautifully colored cards, miniatures of the regular monthly show cards, and the text matter gives little stories pertaining to each record, which instead of calling attention to the technical parts of the rendition, takes up a story applicable to that particular record. For example, the Brunswick record No. 13004, "Habanera" (from "Carmen"), as sung by Irene Pavloska, is handled in the following manner:

"When the African slave ships dropped anchor in the West Indies the blacks brought with them a particular type of wild music to which they danced. Carried back to Spain by returning Cubans (who had learned it from the blacks), this music became very popular, but was savagely attacked as indecent. The Spaniards called it "Habanera," from Havana, where they supposed it had originated. Bizet introduced the most famous of all the "Habaneras" into his opera, "Carmen," where it is sung by the cigarette girl of Seville to allure the unimpressible soldier, Don Jose."

Besides these historical data applicable to records is an illustrated story of Benjamin Franklin and the Armonica. This instrument consisted of a number of glass discs assembled so that they revolved on a spindle passing through water as they turned. The performer sat in front of them and played the instrument by touching the moist edges of these glass discs with his fingers as they revolved. The story goes on to tell how both Mozart and Beethoven composed for it.

Wizard Co.'s Progress

George L. Hadley, of the Wizard Phonograph Co., makes the announcement this month that a new type of console will be added to its Valuephone line ere long. The new console is something very original and unique and offers room for a new invention in talking machines, on which Mr. Hadley has already made application for a patent. Mr. Hadley took The World representative through his plant and pointed out the activity in every department where capacity has been reached and is carried on through the entire eight working hours during the day. He explained that the gradual growth of Valuephone business right through the period of depression just passed was due to the fact that his concern was not too large to keep closely in touch with the actual cost of production and selling instead of having to guess at costs and finally plus them to the dealer's price without making quotations. He stated that the Wizard

Co. had made less money than should have probably been made on the amount of business they had done, but, on the other hand, he believes that they might not have had the volume or made the headway had they undertaken any other policy.

Opening of Bissell-Weisert Co.

The Bissell-Weisert Piano Co. has opened its warerooms at 26 S. Michigan avenue, having moved from its formal home in the Fine Arts Building. The announcement of this new move was made in these columns several months ago. The new warerooms are very luxurious, embracing a thirty-foot frontage on Michigan avenue, extending backwards for over eighty-three feet. The architecture and interior finish are Greek in treatment, and one of the prominent features in the arrangement is a series of heroic medallions from the hand of Emil Zettler, one of Chicago's foremost sculptors. Throughout the establishment the color scheme is a rich gray-green, while the treatment of the large and attractive show windows is carried out in Chinese gold, on a dull red background. The lighting system blends artistically with the coloring of the walls, medallions and panels. In the rear of the shop are located the offices and

Handsome Steger Magazine

The February issue of the Steger Magazine, published by Steger & Sons Piano Mfg. Co., of Chicago, appears this month in new dress and with a new style of make-up and editorial matter. The editor of this little magazine is none other than Sherwin Murphy, advertising manager of the Steger Co. The cover design shows the big ornamental entrance to the Steger Building. The issue consists of twenty-four pages and is handsomely illustrated. The back outside cover exhibits an excellent likeness of the late John V. Steger, founder of the great Steger institution, and a picture of the city of Steger, Ill.

Chicago Jobber Visits New York

C. B. Cordner, head of the Symphony Music Co., Chicago, Ill., has been visiting the trade in New York City the past ten days. Mr. Cordner has completed plans for adding a wholesale line of small goods for Chicago and Middle Western territory. While in New York he succeeded in making some important connections with musical merchandise manufacturers and wholesalers. He will shortly be ready to pursue an ambitious and energetic sales campaign in behalf of the various lines of musical merchandise.

Spofford Sells on Train

F. S. Spofford, Sonora dealer, with headquarters in the Republic Building, has just returned from a six weeks' vacation at his fruit farm at Sarasota, Fla. On the trip down to Sarasota, as well as when coming back, Mr. Spofford entertained the passengers aboard the train with a concert which he rendered with the aid of a portable Sonora. "We had a splendid time with the music," said Mr. Spofford. "Whenever I make a trip I always bring my little portable Sonora with me. A great many Chicagoans aboard the train became very interested in this little instrument. Quite a number of them gave me their names and addresses and asked me to look them up upon my return to Chicago. Several of these names turned out to be really good prospects and in some instances I sold not only portable Sonoras but larger models.

Engravers Pick Best Illustration

An advertising illustration used by Lyon & Healy attracted so much attention because of its beauty that the Wood Engraving Association of Chicago selected it as an appropriate subject to work up as an exhibition of their handicraft. They used the finished product extensively, after which they presented the original wood cut with their compliments to Lyon &

Lyon & Healy's Artistic Wood Cut

Healy. As the wood cut is entirely hand engraved the cut shown was done at considerable cost, as an artist of the highest type was necessary to develop it.

The simplicity of the wood cut is the real reason of its attractiveness. The wood engraving is as much an art as the penciling of the

Visitors From Ohio

Two recent visitors to our metropolis were Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Hockett, of Bellefontaine, O. On their visit to Chicago they called at the plant of the Magnola Talking Machine Co. and were taken through its large building on a tour of inspection. Mr. Hockett reported trade very good in his locality and stated that he had done a very satisfactory holiday business.

Foreign Business Better

F. P. Bassett, vice-president of the Magnola Talking Machine Co., reports that foreign business of this concern has improved considerably during the past few weeks, though the reasons for the improvement are not evident. According to Mr. Bassett, the fact that some talking machine companies are experiencing a boom in export business is a very good sign.

Now With Colwell

R. A. Buttell, who for some time has been with the music department of Montgomery Ward & Co., has just made the announcement that he has severed his connection with that large mail order house and has taken over the management of the music department of the E. B. Colwell department store, of Monmouth, Ill. The Colwell music department carries a full line of Victor and Columbia goods, as well as sheet music, small instruments, etc.

New Quarters for Waterson, Berlin & Snyder

Waterson, Berlin & Snyder, who have for years conducted a retail talking machine and sheet music shop on the second floor of the building at the southwest corner of State and Monroe streets, will move to a new location on May 1. This store has come to be known popularly as Ted Snyder's Music Store and is one of the busiest shops of its kind in Chicago. Besides a full line of popular sheet music this store retails small goods of nearly every description, as well as Columbia Grafonolas and records.

On May 1 this company will move its entire retail stock to 26 West Monroe street. The new location is adjacent to the Majestic Theatre and occupies a space of about a hundred feet in width by about one hundred and fifty feet in depth. The plans call for one of the most elaborate retail music stores in the Loop district of Chicago. The sheet music counter, according to the blueprints, will be one hundred feet in length. There will be twenty hearing booths in the talking machine department of regulation size and one big sound-proof reception room occupying a space thirty feet long and thirty feet wide. The show window space will occupy the entire frontage. On the opening day Frank Clark, Western manager for both the wholesale and retail interests of Waterson, Berlin & Snyder, plans to put on an entertainment lasting an entire week that will be the talk of the town. Mr. Clark has already made arrangements with some of the theatrical stars who will play in Chicago that week and has also made musical arrangements with Paul Biese, Westfall and other well-known musical organizations. Ted Snyder himself and other officials of this organization, together with their whole staff of songwriters, will be on hand for the big event.

Appointed Factory Representative

Tom Cullen, 504 Isabella Building, makes the announcement this week that he has been appointed factory representative for the "Famous records of the New York Recording Laboratories." Mr. Cullen will carry only a sample line of these records and will not attempt to fill orders from his headquarters. Since his appointment as factory representative he has gone very carefully over the Chicago trade and says that the retailers here have received these 50-cent records very favorably. Already he has been successful in closing several good jobbing accounts in Chicago and is at present planning a trip that will take him throughout the Western territory, where he feels he will be able to close quite a number of other jobbing accounts.

Represents Silent Motor

Walter Magill, one of the best-known men in the supply trade in the West, has just been appointed Western manager of the Silent Motor Corp., of Brooklyn. In order to take care of this new business and carry a complete line of Silent motors it was necessary for Mr. Magill to move his offices, which were located in Room 1,400, Consumers' Building, to a larger and more commodious suite in Rooms 1200-1202-1204 of the building. Mr. Magill has had long experience in the motor game and is going after the trade with his line of Silent motors in a big way. He has already submitted samples to the trade of Chicago and the manufacturers report favorably and quite a number of them have placed orders. Mr. Magill leaves Chicago at the end of this week for a visit to the Western trade. His first stop is St. Louis and his plans at this time are

SONORA JOBBERS HOLD MEETING

Informal Gathering of Group of Sonora Jobbers in New York—Guests of Company at a Dinner—Discuss Practical Topics of Interest

During the first week in March quite a number of Sonora jobbers visited New York in connection with a convention that was held in another commercial field. Taking advantage of this opportunity, the Sonora Phonograph Co. invited some of the Sonora jobbers in nearby territory to visit New York, and a get-together meeting of an informal nature was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

In addition to the jobbers who were present there were also in attendance many of the Sonora executives, and the meeting was noteworthy for the practical nature of the discussions that were held. Plans and policies for the coming year were outlined in detail, and at the close of the meeting the jobbers were the guests of the company at an informal dinner.

Co., Elyria, O., together with Mrs. Heineman and Miss Bean, sailed a few weeks ago on the steamer "Olympic" for a six weeks' visit to European countries.

According to Mr. Heineman's schedule, he will first visit Berlin, conferring with the executives of the Carl Lindstrom Co., Ltd., for which the General Phonograph Corp. is American representative, and will then attend the Leipzig Fair, which is one of the most important European commercial exhibits. Although Mr. Heineman's trip is ostensibly in the nature of a combined business and pleasure sojourn, it is safe to predict that he will have very little time for sightseeing, as there are many industrial activities abroad which will interest him in a great measure. He is expected back in New York the latter part of this month.

NEW VICTOR PARLORS IN MASSILLON

MASSILLON, O., March 6.—What are said to be the finest Victrola parlors in this section of the State were opened last week in the new C. J. Duncan store, 8 East Main street. The store is of three floors, the main floor being devoted to the jewelry division. The Victrola parlors are on the second floor, accessible by elevator. Sound-proof record booths are arranged along one side of the room, while in the rear is the record department. Mr. Duncan has just recently taken on the Victor line here, having confined himself previously to jewelry.

SHLIEDER ACTIVE IN ASHEVILLE

ASHEVILLE, N. C., March 4.—The number of Pathé owners in this section of the State was considerably augmented through a recent sale of Pathé phonographs conducted by G. M. Shlieder & Co., Pathé dealers, of this city. Especially attractive prices and terms were offered which resulted in a large number of sales.

The talking machine business of Nelson & Son, Cherokee, Ia., has been purchased by T. D. Boothby. Mr. Boothby has had a wide experience in the merchandising of Victor products and will push this line in his new enterprise.

Phonograph sales today are unmistakably moving in the general direction of the console instrument—the properly designed, true-to-period, flat top, practical, double service instrument. Dealers who have posted themselves about present-day merchandising conditions are enthusiastically and energetically getting behind the new Strand Consoles.

Dealers who find business quiet should handle instruments that are in active demand—that sell while old-style talking machines are standing around.

Strand Consoles have been on the market but a few months. Yet 75% of our sales have been re-orders. That's strong evidence of Strand quality and Strand value.

Among the 500 Strand dealers are such representative concerns as R. H. White & Co., Boston; Frederick Loeser & Co., Brooklyn; James A.

Hearn & Sons, New York; Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia; Kaufman & Baer, Pittsburgh; Bailey Co., Cleveland; The Emporium, San Francisco; Maison Blanche, New Orleans.

In addition to the two models illustrated, our Model 2 (Italian Renaissance Console) at $175; and our Model 4 (Louis XVI Console) at $200 are correspondingly correct and beautiful.

All models made of finest mahogany or walnut, faithful representations of each period. Equipped with heavy double spring motor, all-wood tone chamber, solid-brass tone arm and universal sound box, which permits the playing of all records, and with six well-finished record shelves built in.

Every Strand instrument is guaranteed, not only as regards tone, finish, design and workmanship in every part, but also in packing. Our packing and shipping system is trouble proof.

Business Trend Is Upward—Dealers Now Look for Good Spring Trade—Interesting Views on Radiophone Situation—Other News

CINCINNATI, O., March 4.—The talking machine business here during February compared more than favorably with that of January, and some dealers report an advance over the trade of last month. Optimism is general, though dealers admit that business is not up to expectations at present. All are working energetically, and the belief is that the near future will see a gradual overcoming of trade inertia.

Dealers and the Radiophone

Most Cincinnati dealers are not ready to swallow without seasoning the present tremendous vogue of the radiophone, though all admit its possibilities. At any rate, Cincinnati dealers are not coming forward very rapidly with plans to install radio devices either for practical or for publicity purposes. There are, of course, one or two installations that have recently been made, but for the most part dealers are wary.

Edison Dealers to Meet

At a meeting of Edison dealers of this territory at the Hotel Sinton, Monday morning, March 6, there will be an announcement made of the policies of Thomas A. Edison, Inc. for the year. The Cincinnati office of the new Edison Co. is planning a tone test next week. The experiment will be made with the assistance of Glen Ellison, Scotch comedian, and Miss Hill, pianist.

Evidence of Business Betterment

The business done by the Ohio Talking Machine Co., 427 West Fourth street, during the past month showed improvement all along the line, both in records and machines. C. H. North, secretary of the company, said: "Business has been much better, and when business with us is good it is a dependable sign that business in Victrolas all around the trade is also up to standard. It means that enough sales are being made to compel dealers to place frequent orders for more stock. We are optimistic and feel, with reason, that the outlook is steadily improving. The tobacco situation in Kentucky is much improved, and there should be a great deal more money to spend there than has recently been the case. Regarding eastern Kentucky and West Virginia we are not so sanguine, owing to the mining situation and the constant threat of disruption in that line."

Mr. North, on being asked his opinion as to the value of the radiophone, said: "The theory is, of course, very good, but unless greater perfection is attained it probably will not go far. Several of our dealers have tried out the radiophone as a means of advertising, and in such cases it has aroused interest and curiosity."

Grafonola Sales at Widener's

A remarkable amount of business is being done by Widener's Grafonola Shops. Morris Fantel, of that company, said: "Our business during the last month was fine, both in machines and records. We sold one-third more machines in February this year than last year, and our record sale was double that of the same month last year." Regarding the radiophone, Mr. Fantel said: "It is still in its infancy, and all depends upon the ultimate perfection of the device."

Baldwin Victor Shop Doing Well

The Victrola shop of the Baldwin Piano Co. is enjoying a very excellent volume of business, all things considered. Upon being asked his opinion of the radiophone, U. G. Rowbotham, of the Baldwin Victrola Shop, said: "The radiophone should be a wonderful thing—when it is perfected. At present its operation is marked by so many imperfections and handicaps that it is hardly fair to judge the device now."

Hard Work Boosts Sterling Business

B. L. Brown, of the Sterling Roll & Record Co., believes that hard work is the panacea for business troubles. He has put his theories to the test, with the result that business has shown a steady improvement at the Sterling establishment. Commenting about the radiophone, he said that a great deal of development would be necessary before it attained much value. He mentioned a few cases in which dealers had had radio apparatus installed, were not satisfied with it, and had discontinued it. Mr. Brown made several trips over various parts of Ohio during the month, and he said that throughout the State dealers think well of the radiophone, both as a means of publicity and as a mercantile proposition.

Features "Gypsy Blues"

Howard L. Chubb, of the Chubb-Steinberg Music Shop, is optimistic over the trade outlook. He said: "During the past month our business went along in an extraordinary manner, and proved to be much better than the same period last year. Though record sales were not great, sales of machines increased over the average and we look for better business generally in March. Our window display on 'Gypsy Blues' during the month did much to stimulate sales on that number and the output was large."

Western Arts Association to Meet

Chiefly through the efforts and prestige of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and Eugene Ysaye, its director, the Western Arts Association decided to hold its annual convention in Cincinnati. This convention will begin at Emery Auditorium May 2. Virtuoso Ysaye and the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra record for Columbia.

Passing of W. F. Higgins

W. F. Higgins, Richmond, Ky., died late in February. He was a Columbia dealer of prominence in his district and had built up a good business. His business now is under the direction of M. B. Murphy, a son-in-law, and Mr. Coates, who are carrying forward the policies inaugurated by him.

Buys Columbia for African Missionary

A Columbia Grafonola and a supply of records, sold by A. F. Hibbard, of Hibbard's Music Shop, Huntington, W. Va., are destined for a very long journey. Mr. Hibbard made this sale to the Trinity Episcopal Church, of Huntington, for the use of a missionary in Liberia, Africa. Most of the records were fox-trots of the jazziest sort, for it is reported that Liberian natives prefer this class of music.

Many Dealers Add Brunswick Line

S. Reis, manager for the Cincinnati district of Brunswick products, reports a growing business and the opening of a number of new accounts during the past month. He plans to continue the policy of going out energetically to add new accounts in this district. This has proved to be the only successful method of getting business.

Starr Line Gaining in Popularity

E. I. Pauling, of the Starr Piano Co., reports a fine business both in machines and records. "People are recognizing," says Mr. Pauling, "the excellence of the Starr products, which are steadily growing in favor here."

The New Edison Co.'s Report

The New Edison Co., one of the live-wire dealers in this city, reports a fair volume of business during the past month. This is due in a great measure to the aggressive sales policy of the concern. The company has given a great deal of thought to the radiophone, with a view to using it, according to Mr. Oelman, of the company. Mr. Oelman said further: "There are too many imperfections to make it a safe undertaking. I believe, also, that it is more or less of a fad just now, and if broadcasting by radio becomes very common there will be a thousand conflicts of transmissions. In the main its value just now depends upon too many possibilities, with not enough certainties."

Under the direction of Manager Dessauer, Loury & Goebel Co., Pathé dealers, conducted a successful sale of Pathé phonographs.

ELL & ELL WILL REPRESENT REGAL

Pacific Coast Music Publishers Appointed Regal Jobbers—Well Known in Far West

The Regal Record Co., New York, announced recently that Ell & Ell, music publishers, of Los Angeles, have been appointed distributors for Regal records for the Pacific Coast States. This concern is well known in the musical field, and among their recent successes was "Canadian Capers." Robert Levy, general manager of the company, will be in personal charge of the Regal activities. Wm. Zidell, a member of the firm, closed this important deal on a recent visit to New York.

HIGH-PRICED MODELS FAVORED IN BROOKLYN

Console Type of Talking Machine Is Featured in Many Stores—Dealers Plan for Spring Business—Brunswick Dealer Profits From Movie—New Victor Agency—Trade News

The trade in Brooklyn this past month has experienced a slight depression, but a gratifying feature of the business done was the demand for high-priced models. For this reason, although the actual number of sales was less, total receipts did not show a very great loss. The console type is being displayed in most stores, and, in consequence, the demand for this type of machine has been active, although the high-priced upright has found considerable favor among talking machine purchasers. Dealers' record stocks are in excellent shape, both as to completeness and arrangement, and in most stores the choice of the most particular person can be met. Plans are now being formulated by some dealers for an intensive drive for Spring business. This is to take the form of circularization of prospects and by the use of additional salesmen who are to be placed on the outside for house-to-house canvassing.

Features Brunswick in Theatre

Milton Kramer, proprietor of the Brunswick Temple of Music at 956 Kingsway road, recently tied up his activities with the local Kingsway theatre by the use of a Brunswick phonograph in connection with the moving picture "Molly O," which was being featured in the program. Mr. Kramer featured model No. 122, which retails for $300. The instrument was placed on the stage in full view of the audience, and during the showing of the picture several selections were played. Before the picture was flashed on the screen the well-known song record of the same name, "Molly O," was played, the tones of the phonograph being clearly heard in all sections of the theatre. This timely stunt is one of many which the store has resorted to in the interest of the Brunswick phonograph, which it features exclusively, and as Mr. Kramer stated, "It represents a real sales asset, not only in records, but in machines as well, and we have found that it is well worth the time and effort."

New Victor Agency

After waiting for a long time Geller & Selden, who conduct a successful stationery business in Rockville Center, N. Y., have secured a Victor franchise and are busily engaged in preparing an up-to-date store, which will contain all modern conveniences in equipment. An entire new store has been secured and it is planned to devote the larger part to the merchandising of Victor machines and records. They will continue their stationery business, but this will be located entirely separate from the other, as they believe that the new business will soon become of such size as to merit a space of its own. This new account was opened by the American Talking Machine Co., well-known Victor distributor, of Brooklyn.

Farragut Temple of Music Pushing Vocalion

Another new addition to the Brooklyn retail field is a modern store, opened to the public this month at 1393 Flatbush avenue, which is to be known as the Farragut Temple of Music. The interior equipment is of the very best and the decorations are attractive, while the outside of the store is adorned with a brilliantly illuminated sign that can be seen for several blocks. This store is featuring the Aeolian-Vocalion line of machines and records, and is prepared to make a strong bid for its share of the talking machine business in this section.

R. H. Morris Recovers From Grippe

R. H. Morris, general manager of the American Talking Machine Co., Victor wholesaler, who has been confined to his home with a severe attack of the grippe, is expected back this week to resume his duties. The record classification work which this firm has been carrying on for the benefit of dealers is being enthusiastically received, and when finished it is the belief of this wholesaler that dealers will be equipped to take care of their record trade much more efficiently.

Remodels Store for Victor Line

Theodore Jospe, Glen Cove, N. Y., is now remodeling his store in preparation of receiving his first shipment of Victor merchandise. Mr. Jospe has just secured the Victor line of machines and records, and he plans to equip his new store with attractive show rooms, private hearing rooms, and in general fit up his warerooms in the most approved style. This new exclusive Victor establishment is the latest addition to the list of the talking machine dealers on Long Island, and with its splendid new equipment should attract a large clientele and become one of the leading retail stores in this section.

GRIFFIN ON EMERSON RECORDS

The Emerson Phonograph Co. has just issued an interesting record made by Gerald Griffin, the popular Irish tenor. This record, which features a selection entitled "St. Patrick's Day," has been released in plenty of time for Emerson dealers to take advantage of its timeliness as a sales stimulant prior to March 17, St. Patrick's Day. Gerald Griffin is well known in musical circles, as he has attained considerable success on the concert stage. He is at present a headliner on the big time vaudeville stage, attracting capacity audiences.

JOINS REGAL SALES STAFF

J. H. Adams, who was formerly manager of the Brooklyn store of Jerome H. Remick & Co., music publishers, has been appointed a member of the sales staff of the Regal Record Co., New York. He is well known in the music field, and he has already produced splendid results in the introduction of the Regal line.

CLEVELAND

Association of Northern Ohio Elects Officers—Gennett Line With Marshall Co.—Euclid Concerts Popular—News of Month

CLEVELAND, O., March 6.—Officers of the Talking Machine Dealers' Association of Northern Ohio, elected at the annual meeting at the Cleveland Athletic Club, were as follows: Louis Meier, the L. Meier & Sons Co., president; Samuel Deutsch, the Deutsch-Crane Co.; Norman H. Cook, the S. Kohn & Sons Co., vice-presidents; Dan S. Baumbaugh, the May Co., secretary, and Frank Smirda, Smirda Music Co., treasurer.

In past years the installation of officers has been celebrated by an elaborate banquet and dance. This year the event will probably not be held. The sentiment expressed at the meeting was that the money usually expended should be turned over to the record exchange service of the organization for increasing the scope of its work. This exchange service has more than demonstrated its worth during the last year.

New Gennett Record Distributor

Gennett records in the future will be distributed by the Marshall Drug Co., which operates a chain of twenty-six drug stores scattered over the entire city. R. E. Taylor, district manager of the Starr Co., announces that plans are under way for the development of the record business in the drug stores on an extensive basis. Several of the stores have already been equipped with booths, and plans call for a gradual extension of appointments for handling records until the entire chain has been fitted out for the business.

Victrola Week in Lorain, O.

Victrola week at the Wickens Co. store, in Lorain, O., was featured by elaborate window dressing and unique entertainment. The "Sargent Harlequin Girls," an organization of dancers under the personal direction of Mrs.

H. M. Sargent, former accompanist to Sophie Tucker, were featured in the window of the store. They gave varied and interesting interpretations of folk and classic dances to music furnished by Victrolas. The stunt resulted in the store being literally packed throughout the entertainment, which lasted two hours, both afternoon and evening.

The Radio Situation

The radio idea, after having been given up several weeks ago due to the Government edict forbidding broadcasting, is again occupying much attention on the part of record men hereabouts. The W. R. Cox broadcasting station, which is the only one in this district, was given permission by the Government to send out three concerts weekly. In the past only one has been broadcasted each week.

The general opinion is that the possibilities of radio, as far as the talking machine business is concerned, have not yet been fully realized. Leaders point out that not only is it possible to send out records directly, but the growing custom of having prominent vaudeville and concert stars perform gives unlimited opportunity for original and convincing tie-ups.

The Schuman Furniture Co., of Youngstown, O., has been utilizing the radio idea to good advantage. Weekly concerts featuring Brunswick record selections have been given by the establishment and, because of the increasing interest being shown, it is altogether possible that these events will be held more frequently in the near future.

The Progress of the Granby

Granby phonographs are reported to be gaining in favor rapidly throughout the district. Especially is this true in southern Ohio, according to report by the Kennedy-Schultz Co., since the establishment of headquarters in Cincinnati. Harry Coplan, general sales manager of Granby, was a recent Cleveland visitor. His visit was in regard to expansion, which he discussed with C. H. Kennedy, member of the Kennedy-Schultz firm.

Fischer Co. Closes Out Line

F. W. Nearing, special representative of the Fischer Co., which has just closed out its wholesale business in Pathé machines, believes that the average figures of the sale have seldom been excelled in the history of the talking machine industry. The Fischer Co., as announced before, is not retiring from the retail business. It is within the realm of possibility that the wholesale distribution of another machine will be undertaken within a short time, although announcement to this effect or confirmation of it cannot be made as yet by the company. Mr. Nearing agreed that it was merely a possibility.

Featuring the Brunswick Hits

Brunswick's "Ty-Tee" and "Stealing" are among the most popular records in this district at the present time, due to an elaborate sales campaign which has been carried out in several quarters. The Alhambra Music Co. had one of the best displays booming these numbers. The entire establishment was converted into a Kendrick, general sales manager of the Cleveland branch, says that many dealers found their supply exhausted the day the record was received. Orders and reorders, says Mr. Kendrick, have been coming in wonderful numbers.

New Dreher Store Ready Soon

The new store of the B. Dreher's Sons Co., scheduled to open in about a month, will be one of the finest in the State. Special appointments, which are both elaborate and distinctive, will be features of the talking machine section. The establishment, a three-story affair with a seventy-foot frontage, will boast of extra large show windows, each one of which will be capable of holding a full line of machines in all the different styles.

There will be showrooms on both the main floor and the mezzanine. The record department will be under the mezzanine and will be outfitted with a score of sound-proof booths for demonstration purposes. These booths will be sound-proof in reality and will be outfitted in a style that will make them really attractive. A full catalog of records will be kept on hand by means of the latest cataloging devices.

Conducting Weekly Concert Series

The Euclid Music Co. is conducting a series of weekly public concerts arranged by Miss Grazella Puliver, sales manager of the Cleveland Talking Machine Co. A modest window display and several newspaper ads brought forth a large crowd at the first of these affairs, at which the entertainment feature was story-telling in connection with opera records played. J. R. Frew, musical merchandise department manager, and L. E. Hartwig, also of the firm, will take charge of future affairs of this kind.

The Grafonola in the Movies

Prominent use of the Columbia in motion pictures has been secured through the efforts of George Krauslick, service manager of the local branch. The Bradley studios, local production firm, feature several models in their latest release, "False Fronts."

Two of the strongest tie-ups of the season were made by the Columbia Graphophone Co. in conjunction with the recent appearance of Bert Williams in "Under the Bamboo Tree," at the Hanna Theatre, and Dolly Kay, who presented her vaudeville act at the B. F. Keith 105th Street Theatre.

Miss Kay autographed records herself at the Alhambra Music Co., she being the subject of much advertising beforehand. The stunt resulted in the store being jammed for her entire visit. While Bert Williams did not appear personally at the various stores, special advertising for his records was used and through the newspaper publicity given the star performer, new marks were made in the sale of his records. Mr. Williams made his last appearance here, for when the show went to Detroit he was taken ill and was rushed to New York, where he died.

Incidentally Miss Kay journeyed to the Columbia branch and talked shop with visiting dealers, officers and members of the sales force.

Record Artists in Concert

Pablo Casals, famous 'cellist, and Florence Macbeth, coloratura soprano of the Chicago Opera Co., were among the record artists who have appeared in recent concerts in Cleveland. All record dealers tied up with displays and newspaper announcements, and the results more than justified the effort.

Miss Gwen Trimble, until recently connected with the record department of Columbia, has resigned her position to become identified with the Brunswick forces in a similar capacity.

The large number of new homes that are being built in this district is having a reaction upon public interest in machines. S. Kohn & Sons Co., which recently purchased the retail interest of the Euclid Music Co., reports an increase in the number of people who come to its establishment daily and interest themselves in new models of machines suitable for the better class homes.

This, too, may be responsible for the added interest in console models that has been shown recently. Many stores find that console sales are above sales of the regular styles. E. A. Friedlander, head of the talking machine department of the Bailey Co., reports exceptional demand for console types, especially the styles that sell at popular prices. This is taken as a good omen in view of the fact that many phonographs now in use are bound to be replaced as public taste swerves toward the different style.

Auto Show Week Display

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co. capitalized the automobile show in a unique way. Two talking machines, one large and another small, together with records for wheels, were used to form an automobile. The license tags bore the street number of the store. A machine was played constantly in the lobby of the store and officials say the results of the idea were substantial.

"MUTUAL SERVICE" PLAN OF INCREASING RECORD SALES

Dodge Mfg. Co. Offering Unique Service to Record Dealers Through Their Local Motion Picture Theatres—Seabrook Concert Grande the Great Factor—Practical Illustrations of Value of This Plan

The Dodge Mfg. Co., at Mishawaka, Ind., has entered the talking machine industry under the name of "Mutual Music" and is offering a service to phonograph record dealers through their local motion picture theatres that constitutes one of the most forward movements in record selling that has been developed in many years.

Working in conjunction with the Brunswick Shop at South Bend, Ind., a tryout was effected from January 24th to January 31st in the Blackstone Theatre that boosted Brunswick record sales an average of $50 per day, the increase proving permanent. One hundred and thirty-nine new accounts were added to the books, and over 300 names to the mailing list. Carl J. Lenhard, manager of the establishment, sums up his opinion thus: "Mutual Music has obtained more publicity, more record sales and more prestige for Brunswick in South Bend than any other one publicity idea I have ever used. I'm entirely satisfied and feel it worth every cent it costs me."

The medium used by the theatre and record dealers is the Seabrook Concert Grande phonograph developed by the Dodge interests over a period of two and a half years, and the idea of "mutual service" was furnished by Kenyon W. Mix, director of the Publicity Division of the Dodge Mfg. Co., the Indestructo trunk makers, and other associated interests. Mr. Mix's connection with the publicity plans of the early serial "movie" program undoubtedly furnished the nucleus for this new idea.

In brief, the plan devised by Mr. Mix, as described by the company, is "A phonograph of unusual projecting power, developed by B. R.

record dealers whose current release dates coincide with the installation of the instrument, announces in its newspaper advertising that the Victor, or Brunswick, or Columbia, or Okeh records will be played as an additional feature to their regular program. These records are then played during the showing of the news reel, the comedy and the intermission, no attempt being made as yet to follow the 'feature' with phonograph music. As each selection is played an illuminated board at the instrument announces the name, number and make of the record—i.e.,

Seabrook Concert Grande Phonograph

'Gypsy Blues,' Victor, No. 18839. The playing occurs during the regular rest period of the orchestra or organist and fills an unpleasant void in the present theatre program with approximately thirty minutes of current dance music played by America's finest dance orchestras.

"The record dealer advertises simultaneously with the theatre, saying: "Go to the — Theatre, see a good picture, hear — March records.' The Blackstone Theatre at South Bend seats 2,000 people and fills about once per day, insuring a thirty-minute hearing of new records to 14,000 people per week. It has been estimated that 50 per cent of an average audience either owns or has an interest in a phonograph. The utter impossibility of any one or two dealers playing the new records to 7,000 people per week in a city of 75,000 is apparent. Form letters costing $48 per thousand to print, fill in, address, seal, stamp and mail constitute an exorbitant cost barrier against so large a mailing list, and newspaper advertising at its best can only ask prospects to come in and hear the new records. The theatre-showing insures an actual hearing at a time when folks are in a receptive mood for amusement, and the man who is a phonograph 'fan' as well as a 'movie fan' is rendered a service that saves him the time and trouble of a separate visit to the small demonstration booths of the dealer.

"Once the service becomes effective, phonograph enthusiasts visit the theatre who have not contracted the 'movie' habit, and so the two very substantial aggregations of phonograph fans and movie fans are welded into one. The theatre profits from the idea by a better balanced musical program, a service to its patrons which can not be secured elsewhere because but one Seabrook instrument is installed in each city or town, and the new feature soon pays for itself in increased patronage.

"The record dealer sells more current records with less effort. Where heretofore the prospective record buyer asked 'What's new this month?' and then bought on the process of elimination of what he didn't want, he now comes in

Dealer's Ad Which Tied Up With Concert to make a definite purchase by name and will listen to others. He does not ask to hear the records replayed and the clerk-time thus conserved effects an additional saving. The dealer further finds new sales for phonographs among the picture house clientele not now owning machines and receives the revived record business

Blackstone Theatre, South Bend, Where Plan Was Tried Out

Seabrook and embodying revolutionary ideas of horn material and construction, basic claims for which have already been allowed, is installed in the local theatre. This instrument will reproduce a record in the theatre in the full volume that attended its recording and eliminates completely all needle scratch, blurring of tones or blare.

amplification and projection which develops and discharges sound waves into the atmosphere so effectively that they continue to amplify for a great distance, thus enabling the instrument to reproduce a recorded selection that can be heard with a high degree of clarity for a considerable distance away. The horn is constructed of special material. One of the unusual features of the machine is the introduction of air into the horn in certain definite quantities and proportions. The type of gasket fitted about the diaphragm entirely eliminates blurring and meshing of sound waves and a non-metallic device removes all unpleasant or piercing sounds. The Seabrook Concert Grande phonograph is the only machine now being constructed under definite patent claims which is capable of producing true tone and full volume from 150 to 300 feet away from the horn.

"South Bend and La Porte, Ind., have just been opened up. South Bend played Brunswick January 24 to 31, Victor February 1 to 8, Okeh February 8 to 15 and Columbia February 15 to 22. At La Porte the Princess Theatre is using both organ and orchestra to accompany the vocal selections and reports a most satisfactory experience with the system thus far. South Bend record dealers are all very enthusiastic, stating that record sales have jumped considerably in the last month and vote the idea an outstanding success. The proposition is to be extended to other cities rapidly, and while local conditions may vary the method of procedure somewhat, the idea will, in the main, be as stated."

GRAND OPERA FOR THE SCHOOLS

Community Service Develops Plan for the Presentation of the Best of the Grand Operas in the Various Public Schools

Although most Americans are denied the privilege of hearing grand opera by the big companies, a new scheme has been devised for affording at least a glimpse of that form of art to people in any locality, howsoever small. Certain public schools have introduced a plan for giving opera with the aid of the talking machine. In its most simple form the plan calls for the narration of the story of an opera and the playing of the records in their proper order. In addition, special choral numbers may be sung by a small chorus or by the assembly. The dramatic action may be portrayed by tableaux, pantomime and the reading or acting of excerpts from the text.

The national civic organization, Community Service, is making the suggestion to its local groups that such groups lay this plan before the public school heads in their communities. To facilitate the matter a bulletin on the subject has been issued by the Community Service, 1 Madison avenue, New York. It contains full data for the presentation of three operas, "Martha," "Carmen" and "Aida," including a summary of the story, lists of the available talking machine records for the various arias as issued by the leading companies, directions for the arranging of dances, preparing of scenery and costuming. The suggestion is also being made to music clubs that they not only bring the matter to the attention of the school music supervisors, but consider the plan for performance within the clubs themselves or possibly by the junior music clubs.

He was forty-six years old and is survived by a widow and mother. # HAPPENINGS IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA

NEW OFFICERS CANADIAN PHONOGRAPH MANUFACTURERS

Canadian Phonograph Manufacturers' Association Holds Annual Business Session—Close Deal for Exhibition Building—Music Memory Contests Increase—News of the Month

TORONTO, ONT., March 6.—The National Club was recently the meeting place for the annual meeting of the Canadian Phonograph Manufacturers' Association, the business session following a dinner. The chair was occupied by the president, W. B. Puckett, and a large number of members of the trade was present. James G. Merrick, the secretary, stated that as a result of the continuous pressure for the past several years the Canadian National Exhibition had, on the first opportunity that had presented itself to them, offered the entire Dairy Building to the phonograph industry on certain terms. The requirement was that each exhibitor should pay 50 cents per square foot per year on the floor-area occupied, as the term of the occupancy could be guaranteed for three years and possibly longer. It was proposed that the exhibition architect should prepare plans and the exhibition carpenters construct the booths, the cost of which would be divided in proportion to each booth allotment. The question of the continuance of the musical competitions instituted by the phonograph exhibitors had been discussed, and the exhibition management was preparing to co-operate and to bear a part of if not all the expenses, as the result of further consideration between joint committees of the two associations.

After considerable discussion it was finally moved and carried that the Association endorse the report of the executive committee and accept the offer of the Canadian National Exhibition Association requesting an estimated cost of erection of booths and an estimate of the floor-area available for submission at the earliest possible moment to the respective exhibitors.

J. S. Atkinson, secretary of the Canadian Bureau for the Advancement of Music, gave his report, and among other things stated Music Memory Contests have been started in a number of towns throughout the Province of Ontario and that the city of Toronto's first big contest will be held April 24 at the time of the visit to that city of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra. Music Day was also touched upon in connection with the national exhibition, and in place of seven bands this year at least forty will be competing. The question of Music Week for 1922 was also gone into thoroughly, as also the value of free organ recitals.

Referring again to the new home for phonograph exhibits at the Canadian National Exhibition: It is on the main thoroughfare of the grounds in close proximity to the Manufacturers' Building, where the piano exhibits are housed, which is an advantage to visiting dealers interested in both pianos and phonographs. It has immediately adjoining it an amphitheater with a seating capacity of 1,000, where in all probability the musical competitions will be staged.

The following Association officers were elected for the ensuing year.

Honorary president, W. B. Puckett; president, O. Wagner; treasurer, W. N. Martin, and, secretary, J. G. Merrick.

Exhibition committee—W. B. Puckett, E. C. Scythes, A. E. Landon and E. H. Van Gilder; finance committee, D. R. Gourlay, T. Nash and W. N. Martin; export committee, S. J. Cook, James Pollock and A. E. Landon; legislation committee, W. D. Stevenson, C. H. Weicker and E. M. Berliner; advertising committee, T. Nash, F. A. Trestrail and J. A. Fullerton; nomination committee, F. A. Trestrail, S. J. Cook and W. N. Martin.

The Russell Gear & Machine Co., Ltd., of Toronto, has secured the selling rights for the Dominion of Canada and some of the British possessions of the "Mutual" tone arms and reproducers, which are well known in both Canada and the United States.

C. J. Pott, manager of the General Phonograph Corp. of Canada, has just returned from a short visit to New York to confer with Otto Heine-man, president of the firm, and the head engineers. Mr. Pott was accompanied by Mr. Welker, of their Kitchener plant; also Mr. Paselli, of New York, who had been on a visit to the Canadian plant. Mr. Pott is very optimistic regarding the outlook for good business both in Canada and the United States.

A. E. Landon, manager of the Columbia Graphophone Co.'s Canadian branch, has just returned from a visit to New York and is greatly pleased with the decision arrived at in connection with the parent firm in New York. In discussing Canadian business, Mr. Landon pointed out that the factory at Toronto is in active operation and plans are under way for the exporting of cabinets to the United States. The season's advertising, too, provides for an enlarged campaign, which Mr. Landon remarked would be of vital interest to Columbia dealers.

An exceptionally large order for phonographs has been placed by the Musical Merchandise Sales Co., Toronto, with the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. of Canada, for Brunswick phonographs during the coming months. This order is said to have a list value of approximately $1,500,000, and reveals conclusively the confidence the Musical Merchandise Sales Co. has in the coming year.

This firm, by intensive advertising, aggressive sales efforts, and enthusiastic co-operation with its dealers, succeeded, they say, in selling 33½ per cent more Brunswick phonographs this past December than in the previous December, and could easily have increased this to over 50 per cent had the phonographs been available.

The board of Worthley Road Public School, London, Ont., recently purchased a No. 1 Starr phonograph for school purposes.

Harry Braid has again joined forces with the selling staff of I. Montagnes & Co., exclusive Canadian distributors of the Sonora phonograph here. Mr. Braid will cover Western Ontario. Frank Whetsel, another veteran of the talking machine industry, has also joined forces with this firm and will travel in Eastern and Northern Ontario.

Bruce Carey, music supervisor in the Hamilton, Ont., schools and a well-known talking machine enthusiast, recently demonstrated with a class of public school students the methods employed in teaching music in the schools. This took place before a gathering of the Wentworth Teachers Association.

A. E. Landon, Canadian manager of the Columbia Graphophone Co., is on a business trip to the Maritime Provinces, calling upon Columbia dealers.

J. M. Carriere, of J. M. Carriere Co., was the silent booster of a recent gathering of the Kiwanis Club, of Hull, Que. His gifts consisted of His Master's Voice records and small musical instruments and toys. Mr. Carriere represents the classification of music trades in the newly formed Kiwanis Club there.

Mr. Montagnes, of the firm of I. Montagnes & Co., accompanied by his wife and daughter, sailed on the New Amsterdam from New York to Brussels recently on an extended business trip to various European countries, including England. He was pleasantly surprised by the presentation of a correspondence portfolio from employes of the house. Mrs. Montagnes was presented with a traveling cloak and a beautiful purse was given to Miss Montagnes. Prior to his departure Mr. Montagnes tendered a farewell dinner to the firm's staff at the King Edward Hotel.

R. S. Williams & Sons Co., Ltd., Edison dealers here, made capital out of the local appearance of Rachmaninoff.

The first school of retail salesmanship to be held in Canada opened recently at the Toronto Central Y. M. C. A. with an enrollment of seventy-five men students. The course includes sixteen lectures on the principles of retail selling and an equal number on merchandising. The course also embraces instruction on house furnishings, which naturally includes pianos, talking machines, etc.

MONTREAL DEALERS ADOPT AGGRESSIVE SALES METHODS

Paul Whiteman Orchestra Records Featured by His Master's Voice Dealers in Big Selling Campaign—Layton Bros., Ltd., Chartered—Energy of Dealers Boosts Sales—News

MONTREAL, CAN., March 6.—The thirty days' selling campaign devoted to the sale of His Master's Voice record of the Paul Whiteman Orchestra has resulted in this organization's titles being brought most prominently before talking machine owners. No stone was left unturned as regards publicity. Window trims by the dealers and heavy advertising by the Berliner Gramophone Co., Ltd., plus dealer co-operation, all have helped wonderfully to introduce this orchestra's dance numbers to those who were unfamiliar with them. All His Master's Voice retailers report splendid sales in this direction.

The show window of J. L. Ethier, Brunswick dealer, on Notre Dame street west, has been attracting considerable attention of late on account of his display of dancing dolls in motion.

Shanks & Frere, His Master's Voice dealers, will, on May 1, acquire larger quarters on the corner of St. Philip and Notre Dame streets, west. Their business has grown to such an extent that enlarged space was necessary. This move will mean still more efficient service and a larger assortment of Victor records and machines to choose from.

Announcement has been made of the incorporation of Layton Bros., Ltd., of this city, which will take over, as a going concern, the business of Layton Bros., which has hitherto been conducted as a partnership between Philip E. and H. A. Layton. The authorized capital is $500,000. This firm handles Edison, Columbia and Brunswick phonographs.

The Corona Phonograph Co. has registered as doing business.

The Harris Record & Phonograph Co., Inc., has been incorporated with headquarters at Montreal. The concern is capitalized at $700,000. It is understood that the firm will manufacture in Montreal a record which it will put on the market to retail at fifty cents.

J. Poirier, 295 Centre street, who features Starr phonographs and Gennett records, has, in addition to handling a large record business, developed a big sale of needles. This has been done through constant suggestion to customers.

The Invictus Phonograph Co., St. Catherine street, West, will remove on May 1 to 43 McGill College avenue.

The first sleigh ride and dance tendered employees by the firm of Layton Bros. took place recently. Supper was served in the firm's concert room upon the return from the drive and dancing was enjoyed.

One of the most enjoyable and high-class musical events of the past month was held last week in the music department of N. G. Valiutte, Ltd., when "Miss Grace Brewer and Her Syncopating Sirens" featured the popular Victor dance records of Paul Whiteman's Orchestra. A large and appreciative audience was present.

Louis Graveure's appearance in local musical circles was heralded by large newspaper copy by the Columbia Co., followed by trailers of all local dealers handling Columbia records. The popularity of this artist's records was fully attested to by the large demand for his numbers, both previous to and following his visit here.

During the appearance here lately of Walter Scanlan at His Majesty's Theatre in "Irish Eyes," a romantic Irish comedy, Layton Bros. sent out to an extensive list of customers a coupon entitling them to a considerable reduction in the price of orchestra seats for the opening performance.

Business with S. H. Brown (Brown's Talking Machine Shop) is growing so fast that he is determined to be as up-to-date as possible with his rapidly expanding business and will, therefore, on May 1, remove to more commodious quarters on Bleury street. It is his intention to add pianos and musical merchandise to his line of His Master's Voice products.

J. W. Shaw & Co., in addition to handling Columbia and Gerhard Heintzman machines, have added the Brunswick line of phonographs and records.

Basil Horsfall is going to put on grand opera at the St. Denis Theatre in Montreal at popular prices. This should be welcome news to talking machine dealers, who will, no doubt, cash in largely on increased sales of records.

Chas. Lenoir, a talking machine dealer of Montreal, was summoned in that city recently to answer a charge for the alleged causing of a public nuisance by playing a talking machine in his store, and a fine of $20 was imposed. Mr. Lenoir has taken the case to the Superior Court for reconsideration.

TRADE HAPPENINGS IN WINNIPEG

Interesting Lecture on "Bird Life" With Aid of Records—Changes in the Trade

WINNIPEG, MAN., March 7.—F. Bradshaw, game warden of the Province of Saskatchewan, has a very delightful lecture on "Bird Life in Saskatchewan" which he delivers with the assistance of talking machine records. Attractive pictures of the various birds in this Province are flashed on the screen and a detailed description of it given, then a record of the song or "call" of many of the birds being shown is played. This is a novel and effective manner in which to educate the public to a knowledge of bird life.

W. G. F. Scythes & Co., Ltd., the well-known music house of Regina, Sask., in some recent advertising described two of its popular violin outfits. This firm seems to regard "tone tests" of the greatest value in the demonstration of Edison phonographs and records. Patrons of the Capitol Theatre enjoyed the privilege of listening to an exceptionally good demonstration of this sort a short time ago, when Madam Mabelle Wagner Shank, the Edison record artist, entertained them.

The engagement of Miss Marjorie St. Clair Carruthers to William Alexander Smith, vice-president of the Winnipeg Piano Co., Ltd., was recently announced. Congratulations.

The Edison Shop has removed from 368 Portage avenue to new quarters in the Sterling Bank Building, with a well-equipped store facing Smith street.

Carle A. Brodie, formerly salesman with the music department of the James Ramsey Department Store, has opened the Blue Bird Song Shop at 10144 Jasper avenue, Edmonton, Alta. He will carry various lines, among them the Starr-Gennett and Apex records, along with standard and popular music. Mr. Brodie will be assisted by Mrs. W. Gillespie, late of the Melody Shop, of Vancouver, B. C.

The Hudson's Bay music department, Edmonton, Alta., has lately taken on the representation of His Master's Voice lines, where formerly Pathé products only were handled. Miss Morrell is now on the selling staff of this company.

The E. N. Kennedy Co., Edmonton, Alta., reports an acceleration of business in Columbia and Edison machines and records.

G. R. Dring, of the Brunswick institution, whose Western headquarters are at Calgary, Alta., was a recent visitor to Edmonton, and visited the Heintzman Co.'s piano salon.

Talking machine and record dealers of Edmonton, Alta., are looking forward to an increase in sales, following the advent of several well-known artists to the city in the Spring. Those named to date include: Kathleen Parlow, Percy Grainger, Clara Butt, Florence Macbeth, and possibly Marguerite D'Alvarez and Cherniavsky Bros.' Instrumental Trio.

GEER REPEATER WINDOW DISPLAY

The Walbert Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., manufacturer of the Geer record repeater, is now ready to furnish the trade with a demonstrating record that can be used to splendid advantage in connection with the demonstration of the Geer repeater. This record measures ten inches, but has no music on its face, and the grooves are so pitched that the record will play through in a quarter of a minute, making it ideally adapted to window display.

USES RECORDS IN OPERATIONS

SIoux CITY, IA., March 6.—A surgeon here is using talking machine records for use during local anesthetic operations. The surgeon is Dr. McLaughlin, who has purchased a number of Victor Red Seal records from Davidson Bros. Co. Only records of soft music were selected.

RADIO AIDS RECORD SALES

WAYNE, NEB., March 7.—The Jones Book-Music Store, this city, has greatly increased its sales of Victor records by broadcasting the latest record releases each month by radiophone. The company is also using the radiophone to advertise new publications of books which it has received.

AKRON, O.

Plan a Trade Acquaintance Trip—Buying More Popular, Judging From Trade Reports

AKRON, O., March 6.—Increasing encouragement characterizes the piano trade in the Akron district at this writing. While the immediate pickup of trade can not be said to be general, there are many dealers who report business much improved. Springlike weather the past week has stimulated sales somewhat.

One thing that is certain is that people of Akron are beginning to let loose of their savings, and within the lapse of another month business should show a decided improvement. There is a more confident feeling among the dealers due to the fact that inquiries have been more frequent, and every dealer has more prospects listed at this time than at any previous time since before the war.

Talking machine dealers will join with Chamber of Commerce members who plan three trade acquaintance tours through surrounding territory this Summer. The first of the trips will be over the Pennsylvania Railroad as far Southwest as Mt. Vernon, O. Another trip via the Erie as far East as Warren, O., will be made in June, and in September a trip is to be made via the B. & O. to Uhrichsville, O. More than 125 members will make the tours.

The Brunswick talking machine is being exploited in the Akron district by the George S. Dales Co. through its main store in South Main street and the two branch stores further downtown.

Business with the George S. Dales Co., Victor dealer, was better than was expected in February, according to an official of the store this week. Records continue to hold their own, and March records promise to exceed in popularity those of February, store officials said.

Earl S. Poling, also Victor dealer, reports that business in February was fair and that the coming month holds much for this firm. Salesmen are more optimistic as to the future, and are confident that March sales will top those of any previous month of the present year. Records went big in February and should do even better this month.

Improvement is reported in the talking machine department of the A. B. Smith Piano Co. Collections are better with this firm and prospects brighter than for many months, according to Ernest Smith, manager.

JOINS SONORA SALES STAFF

E. D. Coots has been appointed a member of the field sales staff of the Sonora Phonograph Co., and will co-operate with Sonora jobbers and dealers throughout the country. He is now traveling through Ohio and Michigan, giving practical assistance to the Sonora representatives in these States.

The calm always follows the storm and just so does success follow striving.

AN ARTISTIC BIRTHDAY WINDOW

An Unusually Elaborate Display Arranged by Storm & Shipley in Frederick, Md.

FREDERICK, MD., March 6.—Storm & Shipley, Victor dealers of 201 North Market street, this city, attracted much attention to their store recently with an unusually elaborate George Washington window arranged by Ernest E. Pettingall, display manager for the company. A large gold-framed portrait of George Washington was placed in the center of the window, over which was suspended a large waxed wreath with crossed palms. Two large American flags were draped on the back wall in curtain effect, and a small American flag covered the pedestal upon which rested the portrait. At each side of the window was placed a large Victrola with top up and all doors open, while in front of each machine stood a large Victor dog with a patriotic record on the floor in front of him. Records of war songs and patriotic melodies were scattered about the window, and the whole effect was most impressive.

PROSPECTS CONVERTED INTO OWNERS

LOS ANGELES

Trade Greets M. V. DeForeest and Party—Handsome New Quarters Opened by Barker Bros.—Blue Bird Factory Rushed—Trade News

LOS ANGELES, CAL., March 4.—The arrival of M. V. DeForeest, president of the National Association of Music Merchants, together with his party, who reached Los Angeles on February 25 in the course of their transcontinental trip, forms the chief subject of interest for the month. One hundred and seventy music men sat down to dinner at the City Club in honor of the visitors, and a special effort was made to have as many members of the talking machine trade present as possible, inasmuch as it is considered that more interest should be taken by them in the National Association, which works for their interests quite as much as it does for the piano trade.

Interesting speeches were delivered by President DeForeest, Alexander McDonald and Mark Campbell. The toastmaster of the evening was J. W. Boothe, president of the Music Trades Association of Southern California, who spoke of the work done by the local association, which had been so ably summarized by E. A. Geissler in an article appearing in the official organ of the Music Trades Association of Southern California. The address of welcome was given by Orra E. Monnette, prominent Los Angeles banker, and speeches were also made by L. E. Behymer, local impresario, and T. M. Pletcher, president of the Q R S Co.

Barker Bros. Open New Quarters

The new music department of Barker Bros. was formally opened on Monday morning, February 27, as per schedule. The entire main floor, which fronts on Broadway for seventy feet, is occupied by the talking machine department, with the exception of one beautiful room for the demonstration of reproducing pianos. Fourteen record demonstration rooms are on one side, each differently decorated, and there is an unusually long service counter, with record racks behind. Five very large phonograph salesrooms are also provided, every one of them being decorated and arranged so as to give a separate individuality. The new department as a whole is exceptional and is perhaps one of the finest to be found in any part of the country.

Blue Bird Factory Busy

A recent inspection of the Blue Bird Talking Machine Co.'s factory by M. V. DeForeest and Charles Jacob revealed that production was going forward at full pressure. The most recent models have been equipped with new features consisting of the "Cathedral Grill," which is quite distinct in design, the tone construction has also been greatly improved with most gratifying results. The two novelties which the Blue Bird Co. placed on the market in December of last year, namely, the "Spinnette," which is a combination phonograph in a Colonial spinet desk, and the Teakar, which is a concealed form of a phonograph in a tea car, have met with approval from the public. The Parmelee-Dohrmann Co., of Los Angeles, as well as the Ville de Paris and Los Angeles Furniture Co., have concentrated on the sale of Blue Bird phonographs for some time and used attractive newspaper advertising copy. The firm of Holzwasser's, Inc., of San Diego, has also met with good success in the sale of Blue Birds.

New Home for So. California Music Co.

The Southern California Music Co. will open a magnificent new store near the corner of Eighth and Broadway. This beautiful new building, especially constructed for it, will consist of seven stories, the first three of which will be devoted to piano, talking machine, musical merchandise and sheet music departments, and the modern equipment will be everything that music lovers desire. The fourth floor will consist of the executive and general offices and repair departments. The fifth, sixth and seventh floors will be divided into artists' studios, with a large attractive recital hall.

The Southern California Music Co. was established here in 1880, and was first located on North Spring street, and for the last twenty years has been located at 332-334 South Broadway.

Frank J. Hart, president, and G. S. Marygold, vice-president, report that they will be established in the new building by the beginning of next year. The store at 332-334 South Broadway will also be kept open and continue as before.

Brunswick Shop in Venice

Ed. Young, who has been connected with the Barnes Music Co. for a number of years, has opened a Brunswick Shop in Venice. The new store is described as one of the most attractive in the country and is on the ocean front.

A Queen and Two Jacks

A little more than two years ago announcement was made in these columns of the arrival of a second little boy in the family of Harold Jackson, manager of the phonograph department of the Wiley B. Allen Co. We stated then that the family consisted of two Jacks. We take pleasure now in announcing the arrival of a Queen—little Margaret Louise. The proud father's vest measurement has visibly increased.

Plans for Music Show Discussed

A discussion took place at the last general meeting of the Music Trade Association of Southern California with regard to the holding of a Music Show in Los Angeles in September or early October. Burt Roberts, secretary of the Motor Car Dealers' Association, addressed the meeting and told them of the manner in which the Automobile Show had been put on annually with marked success. A committee to investigate and report is being named by the president.

Sonora in Santa Barbara

Bent Davies, special representative of the Sonora Pacific Coast distributors, states that the Saladin Music House, of Santa Barbara, with L. V. Felger, manager, has been appointed Sonora representative.

Announcing Two More New BUBBLE BOOKS "that Sing"

THE Child's Garden of Verses Bubble Book and The Chimney Corner Bubble Book, Nos. 13 and 14 of the famous series of books "with real phonograph records in them," will be ready early in April.

No. 13 is based upon Robert Louis Stevenson's immortal verses, Bed in Summer, The Swing and My Bed Is a Boat. This number gives you an opportunity to introduce Bubble Books to a new audience—lovers of classic literature. It contains the three verses mentioned above with the musical settings that have come to be accepted as the most beautiful and appropriate for them.

No. 14, The Chimney Corner Bubble Book, includes three old favorite songs that appeal to every youngster and grownup. These songs, North Wind Doth Blow, Sandman, and Lullaby, are made doubly interesting by the sound of rushing wind, buzzing bees, chirping birds and mewling kittens that are a part of the records.

price of $1.00 each make every customer a prospect for the entire set, or a unit sale of $14.00. When you sell one Bubble Book you start a habit, for no child will be satisfied with only one or two. Instruct your sales people to bear this in mind. Tell them to talk quantity when selling Bubble Books.

The liberal discounts, adequate selling helps—circulars, display racks, cut-outs, etc.,—together with the proven salability and popularity of Bubble Books, put them in a class by themselves,—the one line of merchandise for children that appeals equally to boys and girls. New "prospects" are growing up around you every day who are ready to have some fond parent or relative make them happy with Bubble Books "that sing."

Bubble Books Are Now $1.00

Send in your order to-day, either direct to us or through your jobber, for a liberal supply of the two new numbers. Include the Mother Goose Cut-Out book in your order, too.

VAUGHN DE LEATH'S RAPID RISE

Popular Contralto and Exclusive Okeh Artist Winning Success Throughout Country—Co-operating With Okeh Dealers to Advantage

One of the best-known artists in the Okeh record catalog is Miss Vaughn de Leath, contralto, whose popularity has been greatly enhanced by the active part she has played at several radio concerts. Miss de Leath is well known on the concert stage, as she has appeared in all of the leading cities. Last Winter she gave a series of special concerts in St. Louis, Chicago and Detroit, where she co-operated to splendid advantage with the Okeh dealers in that city.

While in Detroit Miss de Leath sang over the radiophone, accompanied by Paul Specht's Society Serenaders. Her voice carried splendidly and she was called upon to make an address, in addition to receiving encore after encore. In Detroit she also sang to 5,000 people at the Arcadia and in addition gave a concert at the Cunningham Phonograph Shop. The accompanying illustration shows the invitation extended by this dealer to the public to hear Miss de Leath and also pictures the new Okeh window display which has become so popular with Okeh dealers.

In addition to her vocal artistry Miss de Leath is fast winning recognition as a writer of popular compositions. Several of her numbers have met with more than passing success and her latest numbers have won very high commendation from prominent musical critics.

Miss de Leath's rise to popularity has been unusually rapid, for ten years ago she was playing the piano and leading the High School Orchestra in the evening in one of the Los Angeles theatres. The quality of her voice attracted the attention of several Los Angeles musical critics, and by sheer hard work she soon advanced rapidly in the musical world.

Her Okeh records have met with a ready sale and whenever she appears at a concert Okeh dealers are quick to feature her records in their local advertising, and in return Miss de Leath is always willing to assist them in every possible way. This co-operation has greatly increased the sale of her records wherever she has appeared.

OMAHA DEALERS' SIX RECORDS

The Omaha Victor dealers have been concentrating their efforts each month on a select list of six best records from the new releases. After a mutual decision as to which records to push, a small sticker has been provided which is attached to the front of the supplement, mentioning these records as "The Cream of the List." All record advertisements during the month have featured the "selected list" of six and the united efforts have been successful in greatly increasing the sales.

JOS. WOLFF BACK AT DESK

Joseph Wolff, vice-president of the Sonora Phonograph Co., returned to his desk a few days ago after spending a fortnight in Atlantic City, recuperating from his recent attack of pneumonia. Mr. Wolff, who is in splendid health, resumed his work with customary vigor.

ROBERTSON'S FINE NEW HOME

The Robertson Music House, of Terre Haute, Ind., Completing Work on Spacious New Quarters—Elaborate Equipment Installed

TERRE HAUTE, IND., March 7.—The remodeling of the building purchased some time ago by the Robertson Music House is rapidly nearing completion and the company expects to move in within a week, according to Mr. Robertson.

Extensive remodeling and redecorating is being done and the building is to be one of the most completely equipped and attractive music stores in the State. The entire structure, of three stories and basement, will be used by the music shop! The main floor will be used for offices and there will also be eight sound-proof demonstrating rooms. The same number of demonstrating rooms are to be used in the basement for demonstrating records and player rolls. The second floor will be used for displaying grand and reproducing pianos and the third floor for pianos and players, with a work shop in the rear.

The front is to be one of the most attractive in the city. It will be of marble stucco; above the first floor will be a large tile and stucco sign, "Robertson's Music House."

Mr. Robertson has been in the music business here for the past twenty years. He formerly had the Victor and Edison agencies, but several years ago took over the Columbia agency.

GRIFFIN SCORING SUCCESS

Well-known Okeh Artist Receives Ovation on Tour—Sings His Recorded Numbers

Gerald Griffin, popular Irish tenor and Okeh record artist, is enjoying a successful tour in the East, during the course of which he has appeared in New York City, Trenton, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Providence, Holyoke, Rochester and Pittsburgh.

Packed houses have been the rule everywhere he has played. On almost every occasion audiences have requested him to sing some of his popular Okeh numbers. His own composition, "It's Only a Step From Killarney to Heaven," is one number which he is always asked to render and which invariably receives many encores.

The General Phonograph Corp., manufacturer of Okeh records, reports a steadily increasing demand for Gerald Griffin records. Where he has appeared this demand has been particularly keen, and it is interesting to note that dealers find that those who previously have bought Gerald Griffin records are very eager to secure his latest releases.

A new Griffin number, "Ireland Is Ireland to Me." is in the new Okeh catalog, and heavy orders are being received for this number.

The Markley Phonograph Co., of 232 Front street, Marietta, O., was recently declared bankrupt and the stock of machines and records is to be sold at a bankruptcy sale.

HOW CURRENT SUCCESSES ARE NATIONALLY EXPLOITED

Present-day Publishers' Problems Discussed—Co-operation of Records, Rolls, Bands and Orchestras Assures National Hearing and Appreciation of Music—Branch Offices as a Factor

It has been said at times that music publishing, particularly popular music publishing, was more or less in the nature of a gamble, and that statement was true for many years. To-day, however, much of the gamble has been eliminated. The publisher, of course, still takes some chances, but it is only in rare cases where any of the leading publishers expend large amounts on a failure. Their methods of giving a number preliminary tests are so thorough that the advertising appropriation that follows is invariably justified.

This is not to say that every song published by even the leading houses is necessarily a hit, but it does mean that those songs that the publishers are actively engaged in exploiting are assured of success. Their present-day methods, after a number is selected on its merits, practically guarantees a certain minimum of sales and this minimum is not small by any means. At present-day standards, which can be considered somewhat abnormal, it means a sale of from 450,000 to 500,000 copies of sheet music. The better numbers even go beyond a publisher's expectations, reaching sometimes considerably over a million copies.

Bringing Sales Up to Quota

If a number selected by any of the leading publishers for special exploitation fails to achieve the expected results in any particular district the modern organization has the means at its command to take measures that generally bring the sales in that locality up to the quota which had previously been set.

The present-day publishing organization, with its many branch offices and large sales staff, in any given two weeks is able to reach the most remote districts of the country. Therefore, if the sales in a given section are not active the publisher's representatives induce singers appearing in the locations to place particular emphasis on a certain song by rearranging programs and by repeating choruses, etc. The orchestras, too, in almost the same manner, are encouraged to contribute their co-operation, and it must be said where the publisher has successfully placed numbers of hit caliber in their hands co-operation is given most enthusiastically.

Records and Rolls Help

Naturally, the wide distribution of both talking machine records and player-piano rolls is often a factor in adding to a publisher's publicity on particular selections, but it must be said that no large publisher depends upon that assistance, though, of course, he willingly accepts such co-operation.

Country-wide Exploitation

There was a time when the fact that a song was a success in the locality where published did not indicate that it had assumed national importance. As a matter of fact, in those days it would take a number sometimes a year or more to go the rounds of the country and achieve the same results now obtained in a much shorter period. To show how, under the present-day methods of exploiting songs, a number becomes a favorite in the very smallest center miles from the place of publication, a recent order from the leader of the Cowboy Band in Grangeville, Idaho, can be cited. The order sent to a large distributor of orchestras in New York City called for ten piano copies to be used by vocalists and a quartet in connection with the band's programs. The ten numbers selected were all current favorites in the East, demonstrating that what was a hit in New York was a hit in Idaho.

There are some exceptions to this rule, but, generally speaking, the above is true. Sometimes a particular number will have a comparatively larger sale in one community than in another, but invariably a hit is a hit anywhere. Chicago and the country adjacent thereto, for instance, purchases a larger volume of jazzy music than any other part of the country. The jazzy dances sometimes become a hit there over night. When they are exploited in other sections of the country they do not always achieve the same result. This, however, will always be true of a strict novelty. There can be no set standard for either the wide appeal or the sale of such music. This type of number still has some of the gambling element in it, not that the publisher loses money but that there is no criterion by which he can estimate sales.

The Value of Branch Offices

Some months back, when conditions were not as good as they are at present, there was a movement in music publishing circles to curtail expenditures, and the question arose in some minds whether or not it would be a profitable and successful move to dispense with some of the branch offices. No concerted move was made, however, to carry out such a plan, and, no doubt, none will ever be made. For unless the industry undergoes a revolutionary change it would hardly be profitable. No publisher would want to revert to the methods of twenty years ago. He cashes in to-day in a short space of time and this is followed by a series of other profitable successes. The same results could not be accomplished by any other methods, and the publisher who wants to give the talking machine record and the player roll manufacturer his best co-operation can hardly afford to dispense with his large organization trained in intensive publicity and sales methods. The record and roll manufacturers are really the cause of all this because their methods of distribution call for a particular release date on their numbers simultaneously in all parts of the country.

PLAYED BY ARTHUR PRYOR'S BAND

Several Witmark Numbers Programmed Regularly by That Band, Now at Miami, Fla.

The programs that Arthur Pryor and his band are offering twice daily down among the sunshine and palms of Miami, Fla., always contain a generous sprinkling of the various publications of M. Witmark & Sons. The fact that these numbers are frequently repeated speaks well for their popularity. The latest addition to the Witmark winners featured by Pryor's Band is "Angel Child," which, though still an infant in point of age, is a fox-trot hit. As a sample of how the Witmark publications figure on the Pryor programs, the following were all listed in one week's offerings: "Let the Rest of the World Go By," "Kiss Me Again," "Little Crumbs of Happiness," "The Heart Call," "Starlight Love," "Eileen Asthore," "Spring's a Lovable Ladye," "Songs of the Season" and "Angel Child."

E. C. Mills, chairman of the executive board of the Music Publishers' Protective Association, returned to his desk quite recently after a two weeks' vacation. Mr. Mills was compelled to take a rest to avoid a nervous breakdown, following his strenuous activities of the past year.

SEEK ROYALTIES FROM WIRELESS

Music Publishing Interests Conferring With Radio Executives Regarding Rights to Give Public Performances of Copyrighted Music

So popular have become the concerts by wireless through the broadcasting service of various big electrical companies that the Music Publishers' Protective Association and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers have taken up with officials of the wireless companies the question of royalties on the music so broadcasted. It is held that the wireless concert constitutes a public performance just as though the music were sung from a theatre stage, and is even claimed that as the service offers the song of the actual singers, as well as the records of noted artists, it threatens to cut heavily into the sales of talking machines and records and reduce the income that publishers now realize on record royalties.

Figures to show that the broadcasting service has hurt record sales are missing, although a big mail order house ascribes the falling off of record demand in the farming districts of the Middle West to that cause. The fact that the record business generally is rather slow just now serves to detract somewhat from the importance of the theory of the mail-order house.

Just what form of royalty would be paid for the privilege of sending copyrighted music by wireless has not been determined, but it is understood that the payment of a flat rate by each station for the use of copyrighted music, or the payment on the basis of so much a song, are both under consideration. The main question is the protection of the interests of the copyright owner, for if free wireless music is to replace the talking machine and other musical instruments then the wireless interests must be prepared to make up, in part at least, for the royalties they have killed.

It may be that a basis of royalty will be established similar to that now in vogue in connection with various theatres throughout the country, a plan that has been upheld by the courts. The developments are interesting.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

Two Popular Publishing Firms Duplicating Success of Former Season With Numbers by the Same Writers of Previous Hits

Some years ago Jerome H. Remick & Co. and Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., Inc., exploited waltz compositions, both of which were tremendous hits, namely, "Till We Meet Again" and "Beautiful Ohio." This season again finds these publishers issuing waltzes of similar success by the same writers as were responsible for the previous two songs. The present numbers are "By the Old Ohio Shore," from the pen of Mary Earl, published by Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., Inc., and "When Shall We Meet Again?" by Egan and Whiting, published by Remick. Another coincidence is the fact that in one of the late Victor Talking Machine Co. lists both numbers are on a single record.

PUBLISHES "STAMBOUL" SCORE

Tama Music Publishing Corp. Secures Rights From M. Witmark & Sons

The Tama Music Publishing Corp., by arrangement with M. Witmark & Sons, has published the complete score of the "Rose of Stamboul," which opened recently at the Century Theatre. The score is by Leo Fall and Sigmund Romberg. The latter is under contract with the Witmarks, which made the arrangement necessary.

"Lovey Dove," lyric by Harold Atteridge, music by Sigmund Romberg, a melodious fox-trot novelty, has already been picked as the number which will be the outstanding hit of the show and which is expected to be a real winner.

Al Goodman, musical director, who is conducting at the Century, wrote several numbers for the "Rose of Stamboul," but it was decided to switch them to the score of "Miss Puck," by Walter Kollo, which is the next Viennese operetta scheduled for production at the Century after the "Rose of Stamboul" has its run.

Ten months ago a clever company of colored people produced a musical piece at the Sixty-third Street Music Hall, New York City, called "Shuffle Along." This entertainment still plays

There is hardly a dance program that is complete without this unique success and it has been recorded on every talking machine record in various forms.

Recently the Victor Talking Machine Co. released a new record of "Gypsy Blues," made by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra. It was considered one of the leaders in the Victor list. Several very striking window displays, devoted exclusively to "Gypsy Blues," have been shown by retailers in both the talking machine record and sheet music lines. A typical instance of this phase of the "Gypsy Blues" success is herewith shown, being a reproduction of the window in the store of Emanuel Blout, New York City.

A DEFENDER OF JAZZ

Jack Kapp, of the Chicago Branch of the Columbia Co., Comes to the Defense of This Much-discussed Class of Music

Under the heading of "What's All This Talk About Jazz?" "Jack" Kapp, of the Chicago branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co. and one of the popular members of the Chicago trade, contributes the following interesting article:

"It is humorous to read in the paper almost every day, to hear people call present-day music immoral and obscene, to have it attacked as such. I wonder if the people who are attacking our present-day music realize that the kind of music which they are attacking is a thing of the past? 'Jazz,' as it was commonly known, was nothing but a 'series of discordant noises' and played by various orchestras of more or less prominence.

"Look at our present selections, the most popular one: 'Wabash Blues' has a dash of the quartet from 'Rigoletto' in it. 'Cho Cho San,' ever popular with orchestra leaders, is nothing else but 'One Fine Day,' from 'Madame Butterfly.' 'Ma' gets its origin from Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song!' How about the 'Song of India' that was dug out by a leading orchestra and made famous throughout the country? Would you call 'Samson and Delilah' modernized to present-time music immoral? And what about Strauss' 'Blue Danube Waltz,' rewritten as 'Blue Danube Blues?'

"It is just the state of mind that the people listening to it are in. There isn't a show produced in which you could not find something immoral if you wanted to. If the good qualities of the show are such that they outshine the bad qualities, why knock it? If the bad qualities are greater than the good ones, you won't have to knock it—it will fall by the wayside.

"Incidentally, how many people who call songs and shows immoral go to the opera and applaud vigorously those appearing in it? How many operas could be produced in English without the public getting the shock of their lives?

"The music that is in favor with the public at present is going to stay for a while, because the orchestras playing it are musicians, because they take great pains in preparing a number before they even play it, and, lastly, because the good qualities of the music make it just as much an art as the music of a symphony orchestra."

WARNING AGAINST PAYING SINGERS

Music Publishers' Protective Association Calls Attention to Penalties for Violation of Rule

The Music Publishers' Protective Association recently called the attention of its members to the Association law regarding the giving of gratuities in any form. "If any member, employe or representative is found to have bought dinners, cigars, drinks, theatre tickets or wearing apparel for a singing actor, the member will be immediately fined and suspended from the Association."

Recently there have been some rumors afloat that the payments to singers were again becoming prevalent. Upon close investigation this was found to be untrue; at least, no proof of any such payments was found. Subsequently the professional managers of the various houses were bound by a written oath to avoid any such practice. This latter is framed and placed in a conspicuous position in the various professional rooms.

Sam Fox Co. Releases New Song by Author of "One Fleeting Hour"

The Sam Fox Pub. Co. has just released a new song by Dorothy Lee, entitled "I Love You More." As it is more than two years since the publication of the last song by this writer, the number, naturally, will be well received.

The sales department of the Sam Fox Pub. Co. believes "I Love You More" will outdistance the success of "One Fleeting Hour," which was one of the biggest sellers of high-class songs in many seasons.

Sam Fox, head of the company, states that he is planning an extensive advertising campaign in behalf of the song and will put every effort back of it to make this another triumph for his favorite composer.

CANTON

Keen Competition in Retail Trade—New Models Interest Dealers — News Happenings

CANTON, O., March 6.—Keener competition in the retail music industry is anticipated this Spring as the result of new stores opening in the Canton district. Some dealers who for years have had exclusive agencies for leading makes of talking machines and pianos will find it will require more effort to keep sales up to former years with new houses featuring the same lines as themselves. A survey of the district the past month discloses that talking machine sales experienced a falling off the past month, but with the advent of March there seems to be increased activity, but, summed up, the industry promises little until after Easter. Dealers are keenly interested in the new models and they doubtless reflect the sentiment of the purchasing public. The demand for records continues strong and March releases bid fair to break records of the past two months. Industrially the Canton district is improving and more mills are operating at the present time than at any time since before the war. Optimism prevails and dealers are confident that the industry will experience brisk business this Spring.

George Wille, head of the George C. Wille Music Co., says dealers are keenly interested in the new console types of Victrolas and predicts they will soon be to the fore in public favor. He says that talking machines have moved slowly for a month but that records continue to top sales of previous months.

S. Paul Bowers, who began his career as a music salesman with the Smith & Phillips Co.,

East Liverpool, O., and who in recent years has been identified with the J. W. Brown Piano Co. and the Van Fossen Smiley Piano Co., Canton, O., this week became manager of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.'s new store, which now is located at Third street and Cleveland avenue. Mr. Bowers announces that the store soon will add talking machines and small musical merchandise.

"The talking machine outlook is better than it was two months ago," said J. R. G. Minnitt, manager of the store of the J. B. Brown Piano Co., this week. "Demand for talking machines is in excess of that for pianos." Mr. Minnitt believes the trade will see quite a revival with the lapse of another month, due to the gradual improvement in industrial conditions. His store recently added the Vocalion line of records and this department, he says, is now one of the most completely equipped as well as one of the most popular in the city.

The Army Store, Tuscarawas street, E. Canton, which opened recently, announces it will carry a complete line of Columbia talking machines and records and Okeh records.

C. M. Alford, head of the Alford & Fryar Piano Co., told a representative of The World this week that the Starr phonographs were enjoying a nice business and that during the past two months there has been an increased call for this make of machine.

Retail music dealers of Canton will join with other retail merchants in the staging of the annual Spring Style Exposition, which will be held this year March 23, 24 and 25. As in former years, merchants will decorate their windows and will exhibit the season's newest merchandise.

COLUMBIA GRAPHOPHONE MFG. CO. RECEIVERSHIP DENIED

Receivership Proceedings Instituted in Delaware Courts Dismissed With Consent of Petitioners and Plans for Rehabilitation of the Company Will Proceed Uninterruptedly

WILMINGTON, DEL., March 8.—The receivership proceedings brought against the Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co. in the United States District Court here ended abruptly on February 21. The manner in which the termination of this litigation was reached indicates that the proposed rehabilitation of the company, as mapped out by creditor committees in that behalf, will proceed to a successful conclusion.

The termination of the suit resulted from a willingness on the part of the petitioners that the action should go no further.

Therefore, when the matter came before the court Judge Hugh M. Morris granted a dismissal of the complaint, with costs to the petitioner, and denied the application for a receivership on the basis of statements filed by the defendant, reciting the consent of creditor interests representing an important portion of the liabilities to plans proposed for extending these claims.

William Mahaffy, of Wilmington, and Walter L. McDermott, of Jersey City, represented the petitioners. In opening for his clients Mr. McDermott stated that, although they had experienced a loss of upward of $100,000 on the 3,000 shares which they hold, their chief grievance was that they had not been kept informed of the progress made by the various committees formed by the bank creditors and other creditors. In view, however, of the details laid before them since the application was made and assurances given in writing that their interests are being safeguarded and that investigation will be made of points raised in their petition they do not desire to hinder in any way the rehabilitation proposed.

OKEH ARTISTS AT RADIO CONCERTS

Participate in Okeh Record Night at Roselle Park Station—Miss Vaughn de Leath Arranges Composers' Night at Newark Station—Varied Program—Both Events Signal Successes

Okeh record artists have played a prominent part in the various musical programs broadcasted by local radio stations. Friday, February 17, was observed as Okeh record night at the Roselle Park station, and it is said that this was the first occasion at which a complete concert by phonograph artists was staged over the wireless.

The entire program of the evening was given by Okeh artists, with Fred W. Hager, musical director of the Okeh laboratories, in charge of the event. Local newspapers gave considerable space to this interesting concert and among the Okeh record artists who participated were: the Justin Ring Trio, consisting of piano, banjo and saxophone; Lewis James, tenor; Nathan Glantz, saxophone solo; Miss Virginia Burt, soprano solo, introducing her own compositions and original Hawaiian steel guitar imitations; Harry Reiser, banjo soloist, and comedy numbers by Billy Jones and Burt Grant.

The Okeh artists who participated in the second part of the program comprised, in addition to the above, Byron G. Harlan, rural interpretations and songs; Joseph Phillips, baritone, and the Stewart Sisters, vocalists.

The accompanying illustrations show some of the Okeh artists as they appeared at the radio studio, and Okeh dealers throughout the country have commented upon the splendid publicity occasioned by this unique radio concert.

On February 22 composers' night was observed at the Newark radio station and Miss Vaughn de Leath, popular contralto and Okeh artist, was responsible for originating and carrying out this very interesting concert.

Among the composers and artists who appeared that evening were Albert Von Tilzer, Kendis & Brockman, Jack Cook, Frank Goodman, Fred Hoff, musical director of the "Greenwich Village Follies"; Nat Sanders, Louis Breau, Al Wilson and Jim Brennan, Miss Judy Roth, Miss

Lewis James

Mary Earl, Jack Sheehan and Seymour Brown.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Impressive Figures That Account for Prosperity in Oregon—Activities of Dealers Indicate That They Are Alert for Trade

PORTLAND, ORE., March 4.—Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern Railroad, is in Portland and has announced that the 1922 budget of his company for improvements is more than $15,000,000. Of this amount approximately $3,500,000 will be spent in Oregon and Washington on materials and labor. When we consider that similar action will be taken by the Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific and O. W. R. & N. lines, all of which enter Portland, the business interests of the Pacific Northwest cannot but be optimistic. Ordinarily the lumber camps would all be in operation at this time, but on account of weather conditions in the mountains many of the camps are still closed down, and but for this fact all would be in operation and business in all lines would be booming. In view of the above, coupled with the great resources of the inland empire in wheat, wool and livestock and the tremendous increase in both imports and exports through the port of Portland, the music dealers, together with the business men in all industrial lines, are more than content with business conditions of the present and the outlook for the future.

H. Donaldson Leopold, Jr., representing the Victor Talking Machine Co., who recently was transferred from the California territory to cover Oregon, Washington and Idaho in place of W. G. Gaston, who is now with the Victor Co., of Detroit, Mich., is in Portland visiting the retail accounts and doing some very excellent sales promotion work among the dealers. Mr. Leopold is quite enthusiastic over his new district and sees a great future for the Pacific Northwest with its wonderful natural resources.

M. Davis, district manager of the phonograph division of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., reports good business for those dealers who go and get it, and says "The business is here for those making the canvass and a little effort to get it." Mr. Davis has just returned from a three weeks' trip throughout eastern Oregon and says the people of that territory are all optimistic now, with a much better feeling among the wheat and lumber districts.

The F. C. Fry Brunswick shop, of Baker, Ore., has been remodeled with the addition of a large reception room and a big display room for Brunswick machines. Mr. Fry reports three times as much business for January and February as for the corresponding months last year.

E. K. Bellony, manager of the Eastern Oregon Music Co., of La Grande, Ore., and an exclusive Brunswick dealer, has added two salesmen to his force and reports a big increase over 1921. Another exclusive Brunswick dealer to give a good account of himself is G. E. Courson, the "music man" of The Dalles, Ore.

Miss E. M. Buelow has opened an exclusive Brunswick department in her music store at Hood River, Ore., and anticipates a good year on account of the prospective big apple crop for this year.

The Ontario Furniture Co., of Ontario, Ore., has built a very neat phonograph department by utilizing one of its entire plate glass window fronts for the display of its Brunswick machines and records.

Mr. Davis says one of the best records made by any Brunswick dealer so far is that of J. E. Metzger, of the Metzger Furniture store, of Gresham, Ore. Mr. Metzger was appointed a Brunswick dealer on December 15, receiving his initial order on the 18th, and by Christmas he had disposed of twenty-two of his machines, most of them of the larger sizes.

The Wiley B. Allen Co. has moved from its old location on the corner of Broadway and Morrison street into most attractive quarters at 148 Fifth street. The talking machine department, in charge of C. L. Neilson, is on the mezzanine floor with two large demonstrating rooms and a spacious floor space for the display of the Victrolas and Brunswick phonographs. The record department, under the management of Miss Erma Ewart, is on the main floor with eleven hearing rooms equipped with every modern convenience, furnished in wicker with rose-colored draperies at the windows. An instant service counter for records has been installed in the center of the floor and Frank M. Case, manager of the Wiley B. Allen store, has designed and planned the establishment with the view of extending to the patrons the utmost quality value and service. The interior of the store is finished throughout in imitation caen stone with odd and attractive archways carrying out the old Italian scheme. Mr. Case is receiving congratulations on the artistic store he has given Portland.

Elmer Hunt, manager of Sherman, Clay & Co.'s wholesale department and one of the men in the music trade of Portland best able to pass judgment on conditions in and around Portland, reports an improved trend everywhere he has visited, showing a material increase over January and February, 1921.

W. L. Brown, of Sherman, Clay & Co.'s wholesale department, has just returned from an extensive trip through eastern Oregon and Idaho, visiting numerous Victor dealers, and he found all dealers visited most optimistic. Farmers are in much better shape and although things have not opened up to any great extent so far they are all encouraged by the fact that they have been able to dispose of their wool and wheat at prices above their anticipations.

Reports from Astoria, Ore., are also encouraging. John Ray, a Victor dealer of the Owl Drug Store, reports lumber conditions in much better shape in his vicinity, with business "perk-ing up" to a considerable degree.

P. N. Smith, of the Smith Furniture Co., of Mount Angel, and W. W. Moore, of the Moore Music House, of Salem, Ore., were recent Victor dealers to call on Mr. Hunt and both report good business in their territories. L. L. Thomas, of the Thomas Music Store, of Marshfield, Ore., says that after a year's intense depression the lumber mills of his district are all putting on full crews again and things are brightening up to a great extent.

Arthur W. Stein, manager of the Victrola department of Sherman, Clay & Co., said the big business for February centered around the Victrola No. 300, while the 100 E. B.'s again proved in big demand. Red Seal record business was unusually big for February, with operatic records leading.

E. B. Hyatt, of the Hyatt Talking Machine Co., reports good February business, with the sale of Red Seal records better than anticipated. Mr. Hyatt says: "I am looking forward to a large sale of the new types of Victrolas when they arrive, as my customers have already shown considerable interest in the new models and I believe the time is most propitious for the change."

The Reed-French Piano Co., which last year retired from the talking machine field, has re-entered the trade and is again handling Victrolas and Victor records. It will make some improvements in its department.

G. F. Johnson, of the G. F. Johnson Piano Co., reports Cheney and Victrola business showing marked signs of improvement as compared to last month and anticipates a big Spring trade.

Harold S. Gilbert has taken over the White phonograph stock of S. S. Sigel & Son and is featuring a sale of these machines and meeting with great success.

The phonograph department of the Meier & Frank Co. put on a successful sale of the Pathé phonograph and Pathé records during the first two weeks of February and 156 machines were disposed of on the opening day and over 500 during the two weeks, together with thousands of Pathé records disposed of, two being offered for the price of one.

H. H. Princehouse, sales manager of the phonograph department of Lipman, Wolfe & Co., reports business very good for the Sonora and Brunswick phonographs during February. A large shipment of Sonoras has just been received, among them a special order in a Sonora period model of Colonial design for the home of D. W. Jacobs, one of Portland's most prominent contractors.

Morley Sommers, Pacific Coast representative for the Sonora phonograph, visited Portland for several days en route to California, after an extensive trip throughout the Pacific Northwest.

M. S. & E. INCREASES TERRITORY

The sales department of the Sonora Phonograph Co. announced this week that the W. B. Glynn Distributing Co., Saxtons River, Vt., Sonora jobbers, had been replaced by M. S. & E., of Boston, Mass. The latter company will now cover the entire New England territory from its headquarters in Boston, Mass.

ARMSTRONG CO.'S SALES CAMPAIGN

MEMPHIS, TENN., March 3.—The popularity of the Pathé phonograph in the South was recently well attested through the results of a sale of Pathé instruments announced by the Armstrong Furniture Co., of this city. The sale brought prospects from far and near, resulting in a large percentage of sales.

THREE-DAY CONVENTION OF VICTOR DEALERS HELD IN PHILADELPHIA

Sales and Educational Conference Under Auspices of Philadelphia Wholesalers and in Co-operation With Victor Co. Proves a Tremendous Success

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 8.—The first convention of the Victor dealers in this section, which began at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel Monday morning and ended with an elaborate banquet at the same hostelry this evening, will go down in trade history as a most successful affair in every particular, successful beyond even the dreams of those who were responsible for the birth and development of the idea and who arranged the program which ran through the three days without a hitch.

The convention was held under the auspices of several Victor wholesalers of this city, the Louis Buehn Co., Penn Phonograph Co., C. J. Heppe & Son, H. A. Weymann & Son, and the Victor Talking Machine Co., and close to 300

Hampton Moore, of Philadelphia, who welcomed the visitors in the name of the city and delivered an interesting address on "Industrial Opportunity," in the course of which he took occasion to call attention to the forthcoming sesqui-centennial exposition which will be held in Philadelphia in 1926. He also paid a graceful tribute to the Victor Co. and the service it is rendering mankind by making permanent records of the voices of great artists and statesmen.

J. S. MacDonald's Address

J. S. MacDonald, sales manager of the Victor Co., was the next speaker, and in his address called the attention of the dealers first to the established policy of the Victor Co. to adhere strictly to quality production, going to the four touch with every new invention and patent that might serve to improve the Victor quality.

Mrs. Clark Tells of Educational Work

The final speaker of the morning session was Mrs. Frances Elliott Clark, director of the Victor Educational Department, who told of the work of her department in a particularly interesting manner and gave an outline of its history and accomplishments. She told how work that originally consisted of placing Victrolas and Victor records in high schools has steadily developed until it now includes the teaching of music to children in the home through the medium of the Victrola, and explained how the work of the department had acknowledgedly revolutionized the teaching of music throughout the country.

The Great Assemblage of Victor Dealers at Opening Session at Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia

dealers and members of their sales staffs attended the various sessions. Most of the program was given over to lectures and detailed descriptions of various phases of the educational work being carried on by the Victor Co. itself and in which the co-operation of the dealers is greatly desired.

The meetings were under the personal direction of "Phil Jobbs" in the person of George A. Tatem, of the Talking Machine Co., who, with sleeves rolled up, garbed in the apron of a shipping clerk, and armed with an instrument which seemed a cross between a nail puller and bung starter, proceeded to announce the various features of the program.

Dealers Receive Cordial Welcome

The convention opened on Monday morning, March 6, according to schedule, with about 300 dealers and members of their sales organizations present. Louis Buehn, head of the Louis Buehn Co., and president of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers, assumed the duties of chairman and welcomed the guests in behalf of the distributors. He then introduced Mayor J.

corners of the globe for materials of the proper grades, and, secondly, of the millions of dollars spent in advertising for the establishment and maintenance of Victor supremacy both nationally and internationally.

Mr. MacDonald pointed out that the retailer was selling more than mere merchandise in that he was offering to the public not only a medium for education, but a means of entertainment. In closing he urged the dealers particularly to give attention to the problem of increasing Red Seal record sales.

John G. Paine's Talk

Following Mr. MacDonald, John G. Paine, of the Legal Department of the Victor Co., delivered an inspiring address on "The Victrola and the Present Day." He emphasized the mutual trusteeship of business, represented first by the self-imposed trust of the Victor Co. in providing its dealers with the best in machines and records, and, secondly, the trust imposed upon the dealer of marketing these products in the best possible manner. Mr. Paine dwelt briefly upon legal matters and told how the Victor Co. kept in close

At the present time, said Mrs. Clark, Victrolas were used regularly in schools in over 10,000 cities and towns, and she took occasion to pay a tribute to the vision of Eldredge R. Johnson, president of the Victor Co., for making possible such an achievement.

Following Mrs. Clark's address, a special luncheon was served in the Rose Room of the hotel, during the course of which the dealers had the opportunity of inspecting a model demonstration room installed by the Unit Construction Co., and equipped with the new sales stimulator and other features.

Some Visiting Wholesalers

In addition to dealers from all sections of Pennsylvania, and the executives and employes of Philadelphia jobbers, there were several wholesalers from other sections who took the opportunity of attending the session, among them being J. Newcomb Blackman, of the Blackman Talking Machine Co., New York; W. D. Andrews, Syracuse, N. Y.; C. N. Andrews, Buffalo, N. Y.;

MONDAY AFTERNOON SESSION

The Monday afternoon session was given over to the representatives of the Educational Department of the Victor Co. and proved most interesting to dealers present. Miss Margaret M. Streeter opened the program with an illustrated talk on "Rhythm—Free and Suggested Expression," going into the subject at considerable length. She was followed by Miss Edith M. Rhettts, who delivered a comprehensive address on "Cultural Hearing," and explained how the child particularly could be trained to have a proper appreciation of musical values. S. Dana Townsend, also of the Educational Department, talked interestingly on "English for the Home and Elementary Schools," with pertinent references to records in the Victor catalog. Miss of the program again and Miss Streeter delivered a talk on "Mimetic Play and 'Making Believe' With Little Children," in the course of which she offered to dealers many new ideas for appealing to the child mind.

Next came Miss Rhettts, who gave a comprehensive talk on "The Instruments of the Orchestra by Sight, Sound and Story," illustrating her address with charts and other literature provided by the Victor Co., and with specially selected Victor records.

Mr. Townsend again addressed the dealers on the subject of English literature, on this occasion devoting his attention to the work of the junior and senior high schools, following which Mrs. Frances Elliott Clark outlined interestingly the development of the music memory contest idea, emphasizing the importance of the work and explaining in detail how the contests could be car-

The entertainment was provided by a number of vaudeville artists, including a number of novelties, among them a mind-reading act that pleased the guests, although it bewildered them. There were eight acts on the bill and of sufficient variety to prove entertaining throughout the program.

WEDNESDAY MORNING SESSION

Ernest John, manager of the advertising department of the Victor Co., was the first speaker of the Wednesday morning session and dwelt at length upon the function of advertising and creating sales, particularly from the dealer's viewpoint. He emphasized the importance of personal contact and personal interest and declared that there was no better way for building up a following than to take the trouble to remind a prospective customer that certain records missing when he called at the store were now available and by Marie Finney had for her subject "Songs for Children, Adolescents and Adults," offering numerous record demonstrations in illustration of her statements.

The final address was by Miss Mabel Rich and proved one of the most interesting of the series. Miss Rich talked on "Around the Year With the Victrola" and offered many illustrations of the type of Victor record music available for Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Easter and the various holidays and special seasons throughout the year. It was an illuminating talk.

Entertained at Theatre Party

On Monday evening the dealers were the guests of the jobbers at a theatre party at the Garrick Theatre, where they enjoyed the performance of Geo. M. Cohan's comedians in their presentation of "The O'Brien Girl." Several bits of topical nature and referring to talking machine subjects were interpolated by the comedians for the benefit of the dealers.

TUESDAY MORNING SESSION

The Tuesday morning session opened with an address by F. A. Delano, director of the Salesmanship School of the Victor Talking Machine Co., whose subject was "Selling Victor Records," and who cited examples of practical record selling on a basis to increase the volume, and as a means to that end emphasized the wisdom of dealers learning the musical preference of their customers. He urged the use of the Ready Reference Labels and made a particular point that where a number of records by one artist are demonstrated they should be interspersed with selections of a different appeal. Mr. Delano's suggestions were based upon his personal experience in the retail record field and were of the sort to prove of great value to dealers adopting them.

The Educational Department then took charge

ried on and particularly how they could be made to revert to the benefit of the Victor dealer.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION

Mr. Delano also opened the Tuesday afternoon session with an address on "Selling the Victrola," in the course of which he particularly urged that dealers cease to sell on the argument of the mechanical perfection of the machine, but rather make the sale on its musical performance. He pointed out, however, that the dealer and his salesman should be equipped to discuss the mechanical features of the Victrola for the benefit of such customers who are inclined to ask questions. He laid particular emphasis upon the fact that Victor machines played Victor records best and discussed for the dealers and with them many important and interesting factors entering into machine selling.

Following Mr. Delano's remarks Miss Streeter, of the Educational Department, delivered an interesting illustrated talk on "Characteristic Rhythms," making reference to both rhythms of nature and of the dance.

A talk of particular importance was that of Miss Rhettts on "Selling Instrumental Music," in the course of which she offered to the dealers accurate and distinctly valuable information regarding music of that type which should have a material effect in increasing record sales.

The final address of the afternoon session was that of Miss Rich, who talked on "Rhythmic Songs and Games," in the course of which she made reference to the use of talking machine music in the development of penmanship.

The Dealers' Entertainment

On Tuesday evening the dealers with their families and employes were the guests of the Philadelphia Victor Dealers' Association at an informal entertainment and dance given in the Clover Room of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

showing a willingness to please him in other directions. Advertising as such, said Mr. John, was designed primarily to get the message of the dealer over to people who could not be reached with the voice and should be written from the angle of the customer and not from that of the dealer.

An interesting point made by Mr. John was that the dealer's store should be so arranged that the interior could be seen plainly from the street, and said that this could be done without interfering with the arrangement of the window displays or the comfort of the customers. By that means the public could be made aware of the activity within the store and be moved thereby to make purchases. He had seen, he said, stores that from the outside were apparently doing no business, but inside there might be a score or more customers making purchases or awaiting attention.

Regarding advertising copy, Mr. John urged the use of plenty of white space to give the message a chance to stand out and attract attention, and also declared that the left-hand page was the most desirable if one wished to have an advertisement appear as the first page that meets the eye when the magazine or newspaper is opened or the page is turned, because the eye travels from left to right.

More Educational Talks

Once again the Educational Department came to the front and Miss Bess Daniels, of that department, talked on "Program and Pure Music," followed by Miss Streeter, who had for her subject "Music in the Rural School." Mr. Townsend, who at the previous session had talked on various phases of literature, next interested the dealers particularly with an address on "The Victrola in Correlation With American History," in the course of which he traced the relation of music to history from the time of the Vikings to the period of the recent World War.

The morning session ended with an address by Mrs. Clark on "Nationality in Music," in the course of which she illustrated how the influence on various peoples of environment, climate, topography and government was reflected in their music.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION

At the opening of the Wednesday afternoon session Miss Rhett's gave a lengthy talk on the development of music under the title "How Music Came to Be," and told the story of music from the time when the art was in its elemental form up to the modern music.

Mrs. Clark's Excellent Address

The next speaker was Mrs. Clark, director of the educational department, whose subject was "Sowing, Cultivating, Harvesting." She took occasion to sum up comprehensively the tremendous educational work started and carried on by the Victor Co. and to emphasize to the dealers the importance of their full and intelligent co-operation locally in making that work as successful as it deserves to be. She declared that as tremendous and widespread as had been the work of the educational department of the Victor Co., all that work had simply been in the nature of preparing the ground and making it fertile for the dealer. It was the function of the latter, she declared, to give heed to the sowing, the cultivating and the harvesting.

The retailers could not expect, she said, simply to throw out a few seeds of local propaganda and expect big proper results any more than the farmer could throw out a few seeds and expect a great harvest. The work required intelligent sowing, intensive and careful cultivation and enthusiastic harvesting. The fact that Victrolas and records are included in the school equipment of over 10,000 cities and towns of the United States offers some idea of the extent of the foundation work of the Victor Co. and of the opportunities that lie before the dealers in the educational field.

The New Order of "Winders"

At this point of the proceedings an unannounced surprise was sprung on the assembled dealers when Phil Jobbs introduced the "Exalted of the Ancient and Honorable Order of Winders," in the person of George W. Whitney, who in turn introduced the grand recording secretary of the new order, together with a score of members of the executive committee. The "Exalted Ruler" then proceeded to initiate all the dealers present in the new order, and caused to be distributed discs bearing the Victor trade-mark on one side and the sign of the order—a Victrola winding key—on the other, surrounded by the words, "Phil Jobbs," and the mystic letters, "A. S. C." He explained that these were emblematical of the words "Advertising, Selling and Collecting," and then went into extended details regarding the further significance of the same letters.

Louis Buehn, the chairman, then announced that the prize for the best slogan for the Philadelphia Jobbers had been awarded to L. P. Brown, of the Penn Phonograph Co., the slogan being, "Let Phill Fill 'Em."

The business sessions wound up with the opening of the question box and the answering of the various questions submitted by J. S. MacDonald, sales manager of the Victor Co. A number of the questions had a decided kick to them, but Mr. MacDonald handled the situation gracefully and did not hesitate in any instance to find an answer that met the situation. The queries ranged from those regarding the effect of wireless telephony on the talking machine trade to those regarding the various types of records. The meeting then adjourned.

THE CLOSING BANQUET

The three-day convention wound up with an elaborate banquet in the Rose Garden of the Bellevue-Stratford, when the visiting dealers were the guests of the Philadelphia jobbers, and the evening was a success from the time the guests first glanced at the unique menu until "Home, Sweet Home," put an end to the dancing.

The menu itself was a work of unusual interest, being printed in the form of the monthly Victor hanger, with a guide line alongside each dish regarding the proper way to eat it, as, for instance, "Ocean-dipped Almonds—Thum and Phirst Phinger"; "Breast of Guinea—Nife and Phork," and "Green Peas—Optional." Needless to say, the menu made one of the hits of the evening, and it is rumored that George W. Whitney was again the responsible party.

When Louis Buehn took up the duty of toastmaster he took occasion to express to the dealers the appreciation of the jobbers for their attendance at the meeting and their loyal support and expressed the hope that they would take back with them to their homes the important lessons learned at the convention.

Ralph M. Freeman's Address

The first speaker introduced was Ralph M. Freeman, director of distribution of the Victor Talking Machine Co., who had for his subject "The Business Prospect," but took occasion at the outset to express appreciation of the Victor Co. for the interest taken by both the jobbers and dealers in studying and discussing the means for the improved distribution of Victor products and for the spread of the educational work. He paid particular tribute to Mrs. Frances E. Clark, head of the educational department of the Victor Co., and the members of her staff for their excellent accomplishments.

In commenting upon the Victor Co.'s attitude toward the dealer and the jobber, Mr. Freeman emphasized the fact that this company had always made it a policy to consider, first, the public buyer; secondly, the retail sales person, who comes in contact with that buyer, and then, in order, the dealer and the wholesaler.

Regarding future prospects, Mr. Freeman said that one man's guess was as good as another's and that he agreed with the statement that the business of the country was going through an effervescent period and was bound to settle down soon. He agreed with the opinion that one-third of the people of the country had only half the buying power of 1917 and expressed the belief that the total buying power of the country to-day was about five-sixths of that of 1917. He cited his experience upon a recent transcontinental tour and declared that business appeared to be worse in those sections where there was evident a lack of effort. In closing, Mr. Freeman declared that a definite reaction for the better in business was coming shortly, probably within the next four or five months and possibly sooner.

At this point a pleasing feature was injected when Mrs. Louise Nolan, wife of William Nolan, the popular Buehn Co. representative, sang several "spirituals," accompanied by Miss Edith Rhett's at the piano.

Blackman Talks on Loyalty

J. Newcomb Blackman, head of the Blackman Talking Machine Co., New York, and one of the out-of-town jobbers observing the work of the convention, spoke next, and based his talk on the loyalty of both wholesalers and dealers to the Victor Co. during the period of uncertainty in appreciation of the tremendous help that company had given them in the conduct of their businesses in the past through well-established regulations and suggestions. He emphasized particularly the fact that although many large corporations in the steel trade and other lines of business had written off deficits of many millions of dollars during 1921 the Victor business had still during that trying period continued to show substantial profit for all concerned, Mr. Blackman used some straight language in expressing his views on the proper attitude of the wholesale and retail trade and made a distinct impression.

Dealers' President Expresses Appreciation

The next speaker was George W. Hoover, president of the Philadelphia Victor Dealers' Association, who, after thanking the jobbers and the Victor Co. for the opportunity given the dealers to get a proper insight into the scope and importance of the educational work, took occasion to enlarge upon the probable results from the conference and the importance of co-operation among the dealers in one locality handling the same product.

E. J. Cattell's Fine Address

The final speaker was Edward J. Cattell, the prominent Philadelphia orator, who delivered a sermon on optimism and the observance of the Golden Rule that, although delivered at times in a humorous way that kept his audience in convulsions, nevertheless carried an undercurrent of seriousness and philosophy that made a profound impression. Mr. Cattell enjoys a countrywide reputation as a speaker.

Following the banquet proper the guests adjourned to the ballroom for the dancing.

A Machine Stock Register Book That Will Make Money for Victor Dealers

Requires no book-keeping knowledge to keep it up-to-date. Tells instantaneously what stock is on hand, what is "on order" and what styles are selling best. Highly prized for more than a year past by many Victor dealers. Now available for the entire Victor trade. Costs little but is worth a lot.

GRINNELL EDUCATIONAL WORK

Educational Department Opened by Grinnell Bros. on January 1 Under Direction of Miss Edith M. Ruebekam Getting Excellent Results in the Detroit Territory

DETROIT, MICH., March 6.—The Victor educational Department opened on the first of the year by Grinnell Bros., local Victor wholesalers, with Miss Edith M. Ruebekam as director, is rapidly developing a number of activities that promise some big things for the Victor retailers in this territory, provided they take full advantage of the opportunities offered.

Miss Ruebekam has had wide experience in music and educational work and in the handling of publicity, having graduated from the Columbia School of Music in Chicago, where she took a course in voice, and later won fame conducting a number of amateur operettas. In addition she has had experience in newspaper work, which enables her to get her matter across in proper form.

Among the various activities of the Grinnell department under Miss Ruebekam's direction is the hooking up of the educational work with the local radio broadcasting service, having secured a period of ten minutes each evening between seven and eight o'clock for the purpose of sending out educational matter. At the present time she is broadcasting information regarding the holding of a music memory contest in Detroit. Two records for demonstration purposes are played each evening.

The Grinnell department is in close touch with the Federated Women's Clubs, before which are given weekly talks and demonstrations. The department is also participating in the work of the Council of Churches in aiding in the course of sacred music, and is preparing to take an active part in the forthcoming School of Religion to be held here. This work is being done through various schools, through the medium of the Art Institute and other mediums.

Edith M. Ruebekam

Miss Ruebekam has been visiting the Victor factory in Camden, conferring with the officials of the Educational Department there, and took occasion to attend the meeting of the Victor dealers held in Philadelphia this week.

BISHOP RESIGNS FROM LOESER'S

Manager of the Talking Machine Department of Frederick Loeser & Co., Brooklyn, Resigns

W. H. Bishop, manager of the talking machine department of Frederick Loeser & Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., severed his connection with that firm on Saturday, March 11. Mr. Bishop has had a wide experience in the merchandising of Victor products, having made his start a number of years ago with the traveling staff of the Victor Talking Machine Co. He was associated with the Trinity Talking Machine Co. in the financial district of New York for three years prior to becoming associated with Frederick Loeser & Co., two and one-half years ago. He is considering several offers, but has not definitely decided on his future connection.

Joseph Flannigan, who has had charge of the record stock under Mr. Bishop during the past two years, will succeed him as manager.

ENLARGE SIMPLEX MOTOR FACTORY

Simplex Electric Motor Meeting With Success—
 Planning to Open Factory in New York

MONTREAL, CAN., March 8.—The Simplex Electric Phonograph Motor Co. has found it necessary to enlarge its factory in order to meet the increasing demand for the Simplex electric motor. The factory is now turning out an average of 5,000 motors monthly, and is giving prompt and efficient service. The Simplex electric motor embodies a number of radical departures in design and construction. It is built without gears or governor, requires oiling at intervals of several years only, and is merchandised with an ironclad guarantee.

The inventor of the Simplex electric phonograph motor is Elmer A. Farmer, of the firm of Farmer Bros. Jewelry, Ltd., well-known manufacturer of watches and clocks. The motor is equipped with an electric automatic stop switch, so constructed that the current is automatically cut off at the right moment. An average test at the Simplex factory has shown that the cost of electricity is in the neighborhood of five cents per month. The company has just about completed plans to make these motors in a factory in New York in addition to its Montreal production, and full details regarding these plans will be ready in a few weeks.

BUTTE FIRM FEATURES COLUMBIA

Intensive Advertising Marks Selling Campaign of One Week on Columbia Line

BUTTE, MONT., March 8.—The Dreibelbis Song Shop, of this city, featured Columbia Grafonolas in a big selling campaign recently which covered a period of a week. An unusually large publicity and advertising program was carried out in the local newspapers and those of the surrounding communities. H. A. Doyer, manager of the establishment, is a firm believer in advertising, and his faith in this medium of getting a message across to the public was amply justified in many sales during the campaign.

JAIL CONCERTS BRING PUBLICITY

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 8.—The Edison phonograph department of the Baldwin Piano Co. here has secured considerable publicity from a series of concerts for the inmates of the county jail. The concerts were conducted under the direction of H. T. Costello, manager of the department. They aroused much interest among the inmates and much newspaper notice.

Your local advertising can only ask people to hear your records. Mutual Music forces a 30 minute hearing at each theatre performance.

Let us send you the written endorsement of record dealers who are now using Mutual Music service.

All of the phonograph record dealers in South Bend and La Porte, Ind., and Kalamazoo, Mich., approve the idea of having their new monthly records played for a week each to 14,000 theatre-goers on a Seabrook Concert Grande instrument of tremendous power and projection.

The theatre advertises, "Come to the Blackstone and hear all the latest phonograph music"—the dealer advertises "This is Victor (or another) week at the Blackstone—go and hear good music while you are seeing a good picture."

The records are played for 30 minutes at each performance; the name and number of each record and the names of the dealers selling the record are announced on an illuminated board, and people who own phonographs are buying more records than ever before.

One dealer in South Bend said, "It's the best publicity work I ever did and it certainly does sell records."

Proof that Mutual Music makes sales is found in the fact that men and women ask for a record by name and number and don't care to hear it played. They say, "Don't play it, I heard it at the Theatre."

The Seabrook is made for theatre use only—only one is installed per city to which all record dealers have equal access—full details will be sent you if you will send us the name of the best theatre and the manager in your city, stating whether they now use organ or orchestra or both.

Address, Kenyon W. Mix, Director, Mutual Music Division, Dodge Manufacturing Co., Mishawaka, Indiana.

DENVER

Aggressive Merchandising of Dealers Overcomes Business Lethargy—Greet DeForeest

DENVER, COL., March 7.—Talking machine dealers here have had to fight against a period of quietness during the past month. The lethargy in the trade was confined particularly to machines and dealers through intensive advertising, circularization and canvassing of prospects have succeeded in making a fair showing. The record trade has been unusually brisk. This is due in a great measure to the many fine recordings included in the latest lists of the various record companies.

The talking machine fraternity played an important part in the reception accorded to M. V. DeForeest, of Sharon, Pa., president of the National Association of Music Merchants, who stopped in this city recently while on a trans-continental tour in the interest of the music trades. Included in the party were Alex McDonald and Charles Jacob, of the national executive committee.

The talking machine department of the American Furniture Co., at Sixteenth and Lawrence streets, has been taken over by George W. Boylan, who will devote his time to pushing the Cheney and Brunswick lines of phonographs.

The appearance of the Eight Victor Artists here recently was instrumental in greatly stimulating the sale of records by these artists.

E. M. Glidden, formerly connected with the traveling staff of Sherman, Clay & Co., of San Francisco, has purchased an interest in the Sonora Shop, 1535 Welton street, in connection with Mr. Marsh, formerly of Marsh & Leve, music dealers. In addition to the Sonora phonograph, the new firm will carry a line of small musical instruments.

The Russell Gates Co. is featuring Brunswick and Columbia machines in window displays which are attracting considerable attention.

The talking machine department of Daniels & Fisher has been considerably enlarged and improved and patrons are offered a fine selection of Victor talking machines and Sonora phonographs.

SOPHIE TUCKER ON OKEH RECORDS

Popular Vaudeville Star Will Make Okeh Records Exclusively—Headliner on Keith Vaudeville Circuit and a Great Favorite Everywhere

The General Phonograph Corp., New York, announced to the trade this week that Sophie Tucker, known in vaudeville as the "Queen of Syncopation," had signed an exclusive contract to make records for the Okeh library. Miss Tucker recently made her first recordings, and they will be released in the very near future.

Sophie Tucker is one of the most popular artists on the vaudeville stage to-day. For a number of years she has been a recognized headliner on Keith's Circuit, numbering among her admirers theatregoers from coast to coast. She is credited with being the original "Queen of Jazz" and her interpretations of the leading song hits of the day have won general commendation because of their originality and melody. Okeh dealers everywhere will undoubtedly welcome the news that Sophie Tucker will record for the Okeh library exclusively, as she occupies a premier position in the vaudeville world.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED

Stewart Anderson, who handles the publicity for the Mutual Life Insurance Co., picked up the following soliloquy some place or other and passed it on to his agents, says The Treasure Chart. Now, just to help a good thing along, we are passing it on to you:

I have some goldfish,
And they don't grow,
No matter how much
They're fed.
But I'm told
That if I'd free them
Into a bigger pond
They'd get as large
As flounders
Or calico bass.
And when I look
At the walls of my office
I think of the goldfish globe
And realize I have Nothing on the fish,
That I must get out
If I want to grow,
That captivity is as Stunting to a salesman
As to a goldfish.

NEW QUARTERS FOR CHAMBERLAIN

BOSTON, MASS., March 10.—A. W. Chamberlain, New England factory representative of the New York Album & Card Co., manufacturer of "Nyacco" albums, New York City, has removed his offices to a more advantageous location at 174 Tremont street, this city. This new location, in the heart of the talking machine district, will not only be valuable to Mr. Chamberlain, but will enable him in turn to give even greater service to his many customers.

WILL SELL OLYMPIC DISC PROPERTY

The property of the Olympic Disc Record Corp., of New York, is to be disposed of at a sale on March 25, according to an announcement made by Louis Jersawit, receiver in equity for the bankrupt concern. Everything owned by the corporation, including stock, patents, trademarks, etc., will be put up for sale.

The display ads of Stix, Baer & Fuller, St. Louis, announcing a sale on Pathé phonographs drew large numbers to the department, resulting in an excellent percentage of sales.

GEER REPEATER INTERESTS SUE

E. S. Geer and W. H. Huth Enter Suit Against Gold Seal Repeater Personnel—Ask for Injunction, Accounting and Damages

Suit was filed in the United States District Court, Southern District, New York, on Wednesday, March 8, by Edmund S. Geer, inventor of the Geer repeater, and Walter H. Huth, head of the Walbert Manufacturing Co., Chicago, sole licensee under the Geer patents, against Geo. M. Browning, "Robert W." Nichols (the name Robert W. being fictitious; the real initials being unknown), "John Doe," "Richard Roe" and any and all persons connected with the manufacture and sale of the Gold Seal repeater. Judge Learned Hand in the United States District Court signed an order on Wednesday directing the defendants to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be entered against them. This order is returnable March 17.

The suit, which asks for an injunction, accounting, damages and costs, alleges that the defendants, in the manufacture and sale of the Gold Seal repeater, have infringed patent No. 1,173,501, granted to Mr. Geer on February 29, 1916, and patent No. 1,117,143, granted to Lawrence Abrahams on November 10, 1914, and owned by Mr. Geer. The Walbert Mfg. Co., of which Mr. Huth is the head, secured some time ago the exclusive rights to manufacture and sell the Geer repeater, which is well known throughout the trade. During the past few months the company has established jobbers throughout the country and secured a wide distribution for its product. Duell, Warfield & Duell, New York, are the attorneys for the plaintiffs.

the sheet music and the music rolls of those particular selections, resulting in many sales.

The window display, which is reproduced here-with, affords a most interesting example of an effort to get the maximum sales on featured numbers, for it was so arranged that a direct appeal was made not alone to the record buyer but to the buyer of sheet music and player rolls. Otto Goebel was the man responsible for the display.

COLUMBIA ARTISTS IN REVIEW

One of the newest entertainment places along Broadway is the Folies Bergere, which opened last week with the "Southern Plantation Review." This review, which is an all-colored company, was conceived and staged by Lew Leslie, and is called "Night Time in Dixie-Land." Included in the cast is Edith Wilson, exclusive Columbia artist. She is accompanied by Johnny Dunn and his original jazz hound orchestra, which is also making records for the Columbia library.

be announced very shortly, and in the interim he is becoming acquainted with the ramifications of the immense Dodge manufacturing and sales organization. This company recently announced the Seabrook Concert Grande phonograph and also has important products in the wireless telephone field which are practically ready for the market.

Burton Collver is not only thoroughly familiar with the talking machine industry, but he is known in the musical world from coast to coast.

At one time he was vice-president of the Welte-Mignon Co., and also occupied the important post of manager of the Ampico division of the American Piano Co. He is not only a sales and administrative executive, but also possesses a musical knowledge that has been an important factor in the success he has attained in the talking machine and piano fields. He is entering upon his new work with keen enthusiasm, as he realizes that the Dodge Mfg. Co. will offer him unlimited possibilities in the sales development of its new products.

Outing T. M. Co. Moves Into New Home—Production Increasing Steadily

The Outing Talking Machine Co., Mt. Kisco, N. Y., manufacturer of the Outing Portable talking machine, has just moved into its new factory. Production is now close to the one-hundred mark per day, and arrangements have been completed to give maximum service to the company's jobbers and dealers. During the past few weeks a number of important jobbing arrangements have been completed, and A. J. Coté, president and general manager of the company, states that sales have been far beyond all expectations.

HEMPEL TO GIVE REQUEST PROGRAM

Frieda Hempel, the famous Edison artist, will give her fourth and last New York recital of the season in Carnegie Hall on Tuesday evening, March 21. Coenraad V. Bos, pianist, and Louis P. Fritze, flutist, will be the assisting artists. She will give a request program.

Stop blaming conditions for slack business. Get into a corner, think, and remedy whatever you find wrong with your policy and methods of doing business.

Perfect Vibrating Quality!

That's why the Violin Spruce Diaphragm reproduces tone with unparalleled purity, resonance and individuality.

Not a single "dead" spot in the Violin Spruce Diaphragm. Every fibre of it consists of natural vibrating membranes. Sand strewn on it is violently thrown off by the vibrations—every grain of it.

The same test applied to any mica diaphragm results in the sand assuming positions of rest on a large part of the surface—indicating non-vibrating areas.

Scientific graduation of the Violin Spruce Diaphragm, like in the top of a violin, controls the vibration, maintaining purity equally in the softest or loudest tones.

Our special process makes this diaphragm impervious to humidity conditions. It cannot warp or crack. Like a violin it mellows with continued use and age.

Tone Arm Attachment For Edison Phonographs

Our new tone arm attachment for Edison phonographs is equipped with Violin Spruce Diaphragm reproducer; plays lateral cut records only. Designed with a single ball joint, it reduces sympathetic vibration and eliminates chattering.

Of Special Interest to Manufacturers

We are prepared to furnish, in any quantity, the following items adaptable to any make of phonograph: Tone arm, equipped complete with Violin Spruce Diaphragm reproducer; Violin Spruce Diaphragm reproducer; or Violin Spruce Diaphragm alone in 2-9/16" diameter only;

Material Revisions Made in List Prices of Re-creations—Reductions Also Effected in Two Very Popular Styles of Phonographs

Downward revisions in the list prices of Edison Re-creations, effective immediately, have been effected, according to an announcement by A. C. Curry, vice-president of Thomas A. Edison, Inc. The revised prices reduce the $2.25 records to $2.00, the $1.85 records to $1.50 and the $1.35 records to $1.00. Two styles of Edison phonographs, the Heppelwhite and the Jacobean, have also been reduced from $157.50 to $145, and $265 to $245 respectively.

START CREDIT CLEARANCE BUREAU

Members of Associated Retail Credit Men of New York Organize New Bureau for Interchange of Information Regarding Those Who Purchase Goods on the Instalment Plan

At a meeting of the Associated Retail Credit Men of New York City, Inc., held on Friday evening, February 24, plans were fully perfected for the organization of a clearance bureau for checking instalment credits. The object of the bureau is to provide a central agency through which retail credit men may check up on those who seek credit on instalment purchases and is calculated to provide positive information instead of forcing the credit man in many cases to depend upon his own investigation or his intuition.

At the first meeting a committee composed of Percy Bowers, head of the credit department of the Aeolian Co.; A. L. Freinckle, of S. Bauman & Co.; J. Nelson, of L. W. Sweet, Inc.; W. H. Caldwell, of R. C. Caldwell Co., and J. J. Van, of Hecht Bros., was appointed to draft a form of master cards to contain all available information for the credit man. These master cards will be placed in the general files and be made instantly accessible to the members of the Association. Through the use of the bureau the inquiring member will also be kept posted on the future activities of his customers and thus be able to tell accurately why certain accounts are slowing up on payments or ceasing to pay altogether.

A number of representatives of the music trade attended the first meeting and affiliated themselves with the new bureau, among them being J. Kohnheim, of the Story & Clark Piano Co.; W. R. Bunce, of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.; Valentine Faeth, of Winterroth & Co.; B. Becker, of the Aeolian Co., and representatives of Gimbel Bros. and Bloomingdale Bros., department stores handling pianos and musical instruments. A score or more of other concerns selling at retail and on the instalment plan are also actively interested in the new movement.

At a second meeting, which was held the following week, it was planned to present the draft of the master card for the consideration of the Association and for adoption. Meetings are held in the offices of the Associated Retail Credit Men of New York City, Inc., 15 East Thirty-seventh street.

It was Lincoln who said: "Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it." This declaration of the martyr president should be cultivated.

Holding Session in Chicago as World Goes to Press—Will Arrive in New York for Two Days' Session at Hotel Commodore Commencing March 15—Important Matters Being Discussed

As The World goes to press the executive committee of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers is in session in Chicago and first reports indicate that the attendance of members of the Association at the open meeting registers nearly 100 per cent. Upon the completion of the Chicago meeting the members of the executive committee will come to New York, arriving here on the morning of March 15, and hold a two days' session at the Hotel Commodore, where the Eastern members of the organization will be welcomed.

The idea of holding two meetings of the executive committee, one in the East and one in the West, in order to make it convenient for the members of the Association to get in touch with the executive body and discuss the many pertinent trade topics worked out so successfully last year, with meetings in St. Louis and Boston, that the plan has been repeated this year and will probably become a permanent feature.

The officers of the Association have laid down a constructive program for the executive session, and particular attention will be given to the selling problems of the industry. One of the chief speakers at both sessions will be Gilbert H. Montague, counsel for the Association, who will discuss the various legal developments of interest to the trade. The plans for the annual convention at Atlantic City in June will also be discussed by the delegates.

Through the efforts of Fred P. Oliver and Lloyd L. Spencer, special arrangements have been made at the Hotel Commodore for the accommodation of the visiting jobbers and there have also been elaborate plans made for their entertainment, the big feature being a dinner and theatre party on the evening of March 15. On that evening the visiting jobbers will be the guests of the New York members of the Association at dinner, probably at the Palais Royal, after which they will attend the performance of "The Blue Kitten," the musical comedy success at the Selwyn Theatre.

MARCH OKEH WINDOW DISPLAY

Latest Unit in Okeh Display Service Very Attractive—Many Applications for Service

The Okeh window display for March is an excellent example of the distinctiveness and sales value of the new window display service announced a few months ago by the Okeh advertising department. J. A. Sieber, advertising manager of the General Phonograph Corp., states that Okeh dealers are advising him

During the first ten days of February there were received in the Okeh advertising department 147 new applications for this monthly service. The March display is especially attractive and its color design is unique in many respects.

SUCCESSFUL KIRKMAN CAMPAIGN

H. M. Linter, of the Kirkman Engineering Corp., New York City, reports that orders for K-E and Simplex record cleaners are continuing to come in in substantial quantities. Mr. Linter attributes the remarkable quantity of these record cleaners sold to the advertising campaign conducted in The Talking Machine World and the policy of the Kirkman Engineering Corp. of its distribution through the jobber. Mr. Linter states that this distribution policy provides an attractive profit for both the jobber and dealer and a monthly letter to jobbers calls attention to the advertising campaign being conducted and suggests a trial order. This suggestion has been liberally followed by many jobbers with the greatest measure of success—in fact, it is highly commended.

SITUATION IN THE FRENCH TRADE

Talking Machine Business Over There Reported to Be Slow—Some Interesting New Inventions, Including an Artificial Shellac for Records

One of the prominent French music trade papers in a recent review of the conditions in the talking machine industry in that country declares that the volume of business is still low and ascribes as one of the reasons the fact the French still stick to the sapphire reproducing point, although all the rest of the world has adopted the metal needle.

The review also calls attention to a number of new inventions which are expected to stimulate business to a certain degree, among them several improvements in tone chambers; a cabinet with shelves that may be arranged horizontally or at an angle; a new talking machine that looks like a lamp with the horn in the base and the motor at the top, covered by the shade, and a means for softening the sound.

It is also stated that there has just been invented a new artificial shellac for records which, it is declared, has the desirable qualities of genuine shellac, but can be manufactured and sold at a much lower price.

KNICKERBOCKER CO. ENTERTAINS

Dealers Listen to New Records and an Address by P. M. Hall—Luncheon Follows

Victor retailers and their employes were invited to attend a recital of April Victor records held at the headquarters of the Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co., Victor wholesaler, New York City, on Tuesday morning, March 7. By 10 a. m., when the meeting was opened, a goodly number were present. Interspersed with the playing of the records were a number of helpful discussions and business talks. P. M. Hall, of the Continental Guarantee Corp., New York City, addressed the dealers on financing and interestingly outlined the proposition offered by his company. The Krumik Studios, producer of display matter, was also represented by Mr. Fuller, who told of the plans of his organization. Following the morning session the retailers were the guests of the Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co. at luncheon at the Hotel Theresa.

WOODSIDE VOCALION CO. ORGANIZED

The Woodside Vocalion Co., organized recently at Portland, Me., has been granted a charter of incorporation under the laws of that State, with 1,000 shares of common stock. The concern is conducting a general musical instrument business. Officers of the company are: President and treasurer, Chester V. Woodside; clerk, Ralph O. Brewster; directors, Chester V. Woodside, M. E. Woodside and M. J. Cuernett, all of Portland.

A new talking machine establishment has been opened at Maywood, Ill., by T. C. Thomas.

OBSERVATIONS ON THE ROAD

By JULES H. ROOS

Cheer up, fellows, the first hundred years is the Hardest, then you get used to it.

Did you ever realize How many sales of phonographs rely on the needle you Use to demonstrate the machine?

Lest you forget, a visit to Toronto will not be complete unless you stop awhile at the Whaley Royce Co. and look the place over and, above all, meet three of the finest fellows who ever signed an order:

Holmes R. Maddock, Wm. H. Myhill and W. A. Hunter. Each one is a genius in his line But oh how Holmes Maddock loves to kid me and the funny part of it is he makes me like it. I love to hear him call me "Jules." Great fellows and a great organization.

I want to thank Fred Trestrail, of the Musical Merchandise Sales Co., for the courtesies extended to me by him while on my visit to Toronto. The only thing I'd love to know, Fred, is what became of the Scotch?

While at the Crown Music Co. the other day an excited dealer came rushing in and said: Hurry and pack me up a hundred copies of "In Maytime I Learned to Love," by Jack Snyder. Herman Snyder, on seeing the dealer was in a hurry, sent him home in a taxicab. That's what we call service.

While in Detroit we had a very pleasant visit with C. H. Grinnell, of Grinnell Bros., and we are always certainly glad to get to Detroit if only to run over to Grinnell Bros. and say Hello to all the boys. Between Ralph and Martin

C. H. Grinnell has a couple of wonderful fellows with him.

The writer predicts that the present business year will be the biggest phonograph and record year in history. It is up to you fellows to all get your share of this wonderful prosperity.

If Al Edlestein, of the Strand Temple of Music, Albany, N. Y., ever runs for Governor He can be sure of two votes—his own and the writer's. He's a great fellow, pals. Let's make him head of the sugar feeder's Union.

Our friend Franklin Clare, of the Iroquois Sales Co., of Buffalo, says it was a very good idea putting Buffalo so near the Canadian Border. It makes it handy in getting the stuff and you can depend on me, Clare?

The fellow who says the days of opportunities are past is like Rip Van Winkle. He's asleep, too.

If you haven't a good excuse for what you say Don't say it.

PUTTING MUSIC INTO JAZZ

Writer in New York Times Credits Paul Whiteman With Developing and Popularizing a New School of Orchestration and Tells Why

In a lengthy story on the subject of "Putting the Music Into Jazz," written by Helen Bullitt Lowry, and published in the New York Times, high tribute is paid to Paul Whiteman and his musicianship for the creation of a new type of syncopated harmony that is based upon sound music fundamentals.

After telling how many orchestra leaders—and, for that matter, arrangers—simply content themselves with more or less inartistic repetitions of a single melody, the writer goes on to say:

"The Paul Whiteman idea is to take this melody and build in the gaps between its occurrence with counter-melodies, instead of with improvised 'fake stuff' and gymnastics. An introduction is usually given to the piece that the first strains of the melody proper may be approached dramatically, while each time the melody is reached throughout the number it is arrived at through an entirely different 'counter-melody'—sometimes through breathless moments of rhapsody, again through a plaintive love lament, or a theme from a Chopin mazurka may be used as a counter-melody to give buoyancy to the spirits of the dancers.

"There is no secret about the 'method.' It is not patented. Nor does Whiteman claim to be a composer. He frankly says to other dance orchestra leaders, 'You can do it, too, provided you are a trained musician instead of a trickster.'

"Moreover, the phonograph records of this new dance orchestra have been spreading the knowledge of the new kind of jazz broadcast, until already one important result is manifest. A demand is coming into music publishing houses for jazz compositions 'arranged' for a four or a five or a twelve-man orchestra, until the publishing houses are beginning to employ a musician to turn out these arrangements for the out-of-town trade, by perfectly good Sears-Roebuck methods. Counter-melodies are now kept in stock by most concerns.

"Nor is the ambition of the reformer of jazz yet realized. The Metropolitan Museum of Art has taken industrial art under its left wing—then, 'Why,' he asks, 'should not some philanthropist endow a dance orchestra? No symphony orchestra could exist without an endowment, for a commercial concern has to follow public taste instead of to lead it. Dance music is wrong if it creates nasty steps. Then certainly it should be a matter of grave concern to the country that our dance music should not be wrong.' Such an endowed orchestra, he explains, could be given the leisure to spend on 'research' on how to refine dance music."

COLUMBIA CO.'S FINANCIAL STATUS

Report of the Financial Condition of the Columbia Mfg. Co. Favorable for Progress in 1922—1921 Was a Year of Effective Readjustment

It was stated in financial circles in New York last week that notwithstanding big losses by the Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co. last year, as a result of inventory cuts, the balance sheet as of December 31 shows that the management was able to set its house in better order than Wall Street generally was inclined to believe. The balance sheet shows total current assets of $23,506,669, against current liabilities of $16,996,923 after making big cuts for inventory depreciation, losses from reductions in prices of records and bad debts. Cash on hand at the end of the year was $3,283,072 and receivables $6,004,672. Inventories were carried at $14,218,925 in contrast to $23,236,574 in 1920. The banking indebtedness has not increased materially during the year, totaling $13,783,381 on December 31, against $13,450,000 a year before. The losses taken during the year, however, wiped out the $1,000,000 surplus and set up in its place a profit and loss deficit of $14,579,882.

THREE HANDSOME NEW PERIOD VOCALIONS ANNOUNCED

New Console Models in Early American, Queen Anne and Jacobean Designs Expected to Make a Strong Appeal—Price Reductions Announced on Other Vocalion Period Styles

The Aeolian Co. recently announced the addition of three handsome new console Period Vocalions to the company's extensive line, to

1619, 1621 and 1923, and in view of the popularity of the upright style it is believed that the console models will be among the leading factors in the large Vocalion instrument line.

The Aeolian Co. also announces, effective March 6, a new schedule of retail prices covering period style Vocalions, the following models being affected: No. 1595, 1596, 1619, 1621, 1635, 1633, 1617, 1623, 1627, 1625, 1629 and 1631. The reduction in price is most substantial in every case, being from $295 to $250 on Style 1595, to be known as Style 1620, early American, listed at $300; Style 1622, Queen Anne, listed at $350; and Style 1624, Jacobean, listed at $385.

The Vocalion, Style 1624—Jacobean

The case designs of the three new instruments are most artistic and are true to the periods represented. Style 1620 is beautifully finished in brown mahogany and the case is an exemplification of the best work of some of the early American craftsmen and is graceful in every detail. The Queen Anne model, Style 1622, combines simplicity with an authentic following of the details of the period, and the rich mahogany finish serves to bring out these details to advantage. The Jacobean, Style 1624, gets away most gracefully from the heaviness of design frequently associated with that period and the shaded walnut finish adds materially to the general attractiveness of the cabinet.

All the new models are equipped with the new Vocalion tone arm and sound box, velour covered turn table and gold finished hardware throughout. The Jacobean model is also equipped with the Graduola.

The three new period styles correspond in design to the three upright period models, Styles from $600 to $525 on Style 1631, with corresponding reductions all along the line.

The various period model Vocalions, both the upright styles and the table models, have been strongly featured by the dealers and have proven very popular with the buying public.

The latest revision of list prices, therefore, may be expected to stimulate the demand materially and make a particular appeal to those who have been standing pat and waiting for price readjustments before purchasing their machines. The excellent designs offered in the Vocalion period models have been the subject of favorable comment from authorities in decorative art matters, for in every instance the designs have been executed with a full understanding and appreciation of the dominant details of the period.

ACQUIRE NEW CAMEO FACTORY

Cameo Record Co. Acquires Factory at Framingham, Mass.—George L. Funnell in Charge—Bridgeport Factory Also Working to Capacity

E. N. Burns, president of the Cameo Record Co., New York, announced on Wednesday that his company had acquired another record-pressing plant at Framingham, Mass. The Siemon Hard Rubber Co., of Bridgeport, Conn., has already started pressing Cameo records and the addition of the Framingham plant will give the company splendid facilities. At the present time the Framingham factory has a capacity of 20,000 records per day, and new machinery is being installed which will give the plant an output of 60,000 records per day.

Geo. L. Funnell, who is recognized internationally as one of the leading experts of record manufacturing, has been placed in charge of the Cameo factory at Framingham. Mr. Funnell at one time was factory manager of the Columbia Graphophone Co. and more recently was in charge of the manufacturing plants of the Berliner Gramophone Co., Montreal.

Aim high. If you miss you will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that you tried and, besides, you will go much further than if you had not tried.

INSTALLING STORE EQUIPMENT

Leon Tobias, secretary of Van Veen & Co., Inc., reports that his company has concluded arrangements with a number of representative houses within the past few weeks for increased and new equipment. Among these is the retail wareroom of Max Phillips, of 1227 Seventh street, N. W., Washington, D. C., where a complete Col-Van equipment in ivory and blue has been installed. This installation includes six hearing rooms and provision for 1,000 records. The Long Island News Co., of Flushing, L. I., is having a complete new store front made and interior work as well for the display of Victrolas in its Victor department. Van Veen & Co., Inc., will shortly install in the warerooms of Herbert & Huesgen, on Forty-second street and Fifth avenue, a combination phonograph and radio department, which will be an unique metropolitan development.

WATERSON NOW CAMEO EXECUTIVE

Henry Waterson, head of the music publishing firm of Waterson, Berlin & Snyder, New York, and well known throughout the musical field, has been elected vice-president of the Cameo Record Co., New York. Mr. Waterson succeeds Earl Jones, who is no longer connected with the company.

MANY EXHIBITS AT LEIPSIK FAIR

Talking Machine Industry Well Represented at Big German Exposition Held This Month

Reports from Germany are to the effect that the talking machine interests have been strongly represented at the Leipzig Fair, held during the week of March 5 to 12, with a number of new types of machines, records and accessories being shown. The influx of foreign visitors to attend the fair is said to have been unusually large, a number of them coming from the United States and a small army from Great Britain.

ADD RADIO OUTFITS TO LINE

The Cabinet & Accessories Co., Inc., New York City, distributor of talking machine accessories, has added radio outfits to the lines which it distributes. The outfits added are made by the A. C. Gilbert Co., of New Haven, Conn., and cover a wide variety of radio sets from $12.50 to the highest price on the market. The Cabinet & Accessories Co., Inc., has these sets installed at its headquarters and is demonstrating to visiting dealers.

August Pleibel, in charge of the retail Victor department of H. A. Weymann & Son, Inc., Philadelphia, has been removed to a local hospital for a possible operation.

FAVORS FLEXIBLE TARIFF

Senate Finance Committee Indorses Flexible Valuation—President Given Wide Powers in Increasing or Lowering Rates by Proclamation, to Prevent Unfair Competition

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—The Senate Finance Committee has agreed to turn over to the experts that have been assisting it the duty of preparing in legislative language the valuation basis for inclusion in the forthcoming tariff law.

The American valuation plan as proposed in the Fordney Tariff bill as it came from the House was rejected by the Committee several days ago. It is stated that the House Republicans who have been fighting for "adequate" protection are much disappointed and that they contemplate fighting any substitute for their plan. However, despite the pressure that has been brought to bear upon the Finance Committee the present system of levying duties upon the basis of the foreign invoice values of dutiable merchandise will be retained.

To meet the demands of the manufacturers for protection greater than that provided in the Underwood Tariff Act there will be incorporated in the new plan a section granting authority to the President to increase or decrease rates of duty contained in the new law, not to exceed 50 per cent.

By means of this provision the President, by proclamation, after investigation by the Tariff Commission, would be able to advance the rate on a given commodity to meet foreign competition where such action would be found advisable, and, on the other hand, if a complaint from importers that existing rates are so high as to keep out imported articles is found to be a fact, and conditions so warrant such action, the rate or rates thereon could be reduced not to exceed 50 per cent.

Another proviso will give to the President authority to reclassify the commodities covered in the proposed new law. For instance, it might be found that an article contained in a basket clause dutiable at 33 per cent was being imported in quantities which precluded the sale of the same or comparable American merchandise. In such event the President, by proclamation, could remove such article from the basket clause and give it a separate classification and a higher rate of duty.

Still another feature of the bill deals with the depreciated currency, and this would become operative when the foreign money fell below 70 per cent of par. It was decided this would not conflict with existing treaties with foreign nations.

The experts have been instructed to draft provisions dealing with unfair practices in foreign trade. It is proposed also to have provisions dealing with discrimination, so that it will not be possible for any foreign country to accord privileges to another country and withhold similar privileges from the exporters of the United States without incurring retaliatory action on the part of the Government of the United States.

THE VICTOR JOBBERS' CONVENTION

Annual Meeting of National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers to Be Held at Atlantic City From June 12 to 16, Inclusive

Plans are proceeding rapidly for the annual convention of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers, which will be held at Atlantic City, on June 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16. The convention period will be longer than usual in the belief that there will be a sufficient number of important matters requiring consideration by the body to carry the meetings over at least four days, the fifth day being devoted to the annual golf tournament.

The hotel at which the convention will be held has not been definitely decided upon, but it is probable that the announcement regarding the headquarters will be made very shortly. The arrangements committee promises a number of interesting and unusual features calculated to make the meeting one of the most resultful held thus far. One thing certain is that Atlantic City convention invariably draws a maximum attendance of Association membership.

PLAN GERMAN TARIFF INCREASE

Doubling of Import Duties on Musical Instruments and Accessories Proposed by Government as Part of Tariff Revision

The German Government, in planning a revision of its customs tariff, is considering immediate increases of 100 per cent in the duty on certain products classed as non-essentials. Musical instruments and accessories are affected. Under the new plan duties will be levied on imports as follows:

Talking machines, including those fitted with electrical apparatus, 120 gold marks per 100 kilōs; clocks with musical accessories, 400 g.m.; pipe organs, 50 g.m.; brass and wood wind instruments, 70 g.m.; pianos, all kinds, 80 g.m.; piano actions and keyboards, 110 g.m.; stringed instruments, 60 g.m.; other mechanical actions with combinations for rendering musical sounds, 80 g.m.; other musical instruments not specified, 60 g.m.; strings, prepared, catgut, 100 g.m.; covered wire, all kinds, 200 g.m.

Musical apparatus not specified are taxed, quite indifferent to the kind or preparation of the material used; parts, though not specified, are taxed at the same rate as the body to which they apply. Similarly, articles required for playing, such as bows, hammers, drumsticks. Wire strings, except those covered with copper wire, etc., pay string rate. Children's musical toys, all kinds and parts, 20 g.m.

DEALERS VISIT VICTOR PLANT

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 9.—Two score or more of the Victor dealers and their salespeople, who attended the sales conference held at the Bellevue-Stratford, this week, visited the Victor Co. factory at Camden this morning, at the invitation of F. E. Delano, and were conducted on a tour of inspection through the plant, which, as usual, made a distinct impression upon those who made the trip for the first time—in fact it was both educational and enjoyable.

GODOWSKY TO THE ORIENT

TALKING MACHINE TROUBLES AND HOW TO REMEDY THEM

Conducted by Andrew H. Dodin

ON THE REPAIRING OF OLD SPRINGS

In my answer to Dominick Ruff, Youngstown, O., in the January issue of The World I mentioned the fact that after I had seen the machine for repairing broken springs that he wrote about I would be pleased to give the dealers my opinion of it and also of his method of work.

I have had, within the past week, a personal call and demonstration by Mr. Ruff of his machine and method of handling broken springs, and, while I cannot describe certain details of the working of this little apparatus until final patents have been granted, I can give a general outline of his method of using it.

In the first place, it is presumed that the party using one of these machines has in his shop equipment a furnace or gas torch with which to remove the temper from the spring ends. Also a pair of pliers or tool for shaping the center of the spring and a means for making a hole in the center or cage ends of the springs. There is at the present time a tool, or punch, on the market for punching these holes, either pear shape or oblong hole with square corners, which in connection with Mr. Ruff's machine makes an ideal working combination.

For an example we will take a situation as follows: A repairman in a small town in the middle of New Jersey has brought to him for repair a double-spring motor. Upon opening the cages and examining the main springs he finds that one of them is broken in the center coil where it engages the sleeve hook of the center shaft. Upon looking over his stock of main springs he discovers that he has no main springs of that particular type on hand. To obtain a new one from his source of supply would mean several days' delay; as a consequence, the probabilities are that the customer will take his machine to the next nearest repairman and try his success there.

For a situation such as this Mr. Ruff's machine is a life saver. He proceeds in the following manner to make the repair, using the old main spring. First, the broken main spring is removed from the cage, the cage end is placed in the furnace and the temper removed for about three inches from the end; the spring coiling pliers are brought into use and the end of the spring is shaped to fit the center shaft. This end is now placed over the receiving mandrel of the "Ruff Spring Saver" and the machine coils up the spring, when wound up to about eighteen inches from the center, and a retaining ring is placed about the spring, the machine is opened and the wound-up spring removed. This gives you the main spring with the broken center on the outside and in a position to place in the furnace to remove the temper and to punch a hole for the cage rivet. Probably the first thought this method of handling a main spring brings to an inexperienced man is that the main spring would not be as strong nor have as much life as it had when wound the other way. On the other hand, it is undoubtedly stronger and exerts more pull than it did before, for in reversing the wind of the coils, not only the temper but the fact that the spring had been coiled the opposite way for a long time increases the pull and strength of the spring when brought into the new position.

In my opinion, this little machine, outside of its saving in money to the repairman, is the greatest time-saving tool that he could possess. He would never be in a position where (from the fact that he did not have a spring in stock) he would be unable to make a repair. I do not look so much to the part-saving end of the matter as I do the time-saving end—there is nothing in our world so valuable as time.

In the February issue of The World I wrote in answer to a letter of Mr. Edden, of Bloomfield, N. J. His subject was "The inadvisability of using broken parts a second time, inasmuch as it would tend to deteriorate the original quality and value of the machine."

To continue my answer to his letter I will say after having seen Mr. Ruff's machine perform, examining and carefully testing the main springs after they had been repaired in this way, that it is my opinion that no one could find fault with the method if it is carefully followed and done in the right way. I am still of the opinion that no matter how good is the method of doing a thing it is the skill in the application of the method by the workman that counts.

STIMULATED TRADE IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., March 2.—D. M. Read & Co., Pathé dealers in this city, stimulated their business to a remarkable degree through a sale of Pathé phonographs at special prices. A large number of sales were reported as a direct result of this campaign.

SPRINKLE CO. IN NEW HOME

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., March 7.—The Sprinkle Piano Co. has moved from the quarters on Main street to an attractive establishment at 436 Trade street, in one of the best locations in the city. The lower floor is largely taken up by the record demonstration booths and the record stock. A balcony has been given over to a complete line of Brunswick phonographs. The concern also operates stores in Norfolk, Va.; Richmond, Va., and Greensboro, N. C.

A. J. CRAFTS CO. FILES PETITION

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed by the A. J. Crafts Piano Co., Inc., of Richmond, Va. Liabilities are estimated at $71,760 and assets are about $168,951. Inability to collect outstanding accounts is said to be the reason for the petition. R. H. Talley has been appointed receiver.

Before making any moves consider what the end will be.

A VIOLAPHONE NEEDLE Plays 10 Records—Brilliantly!

This is the VIOLAPHONE—the electro-tempered, rust-proof needle that plays 10 records—BRILLIANTLY—and positively without injury to the record.

Here's the Perfect Needle for Phonograph Repeating Devices

IT takes a rugged needle—a VIOLAPHONE Needle—to operate successfully the popular new Phonograph Repeating Devices.

Its stiff, strong, tempered point is unaffected by the heavy strain that bends or breaks the ordinary multi-playing needle.

You'll prevent come-backs and assure your customers satisfaction if you'll recommend Violaphone Needles when you sell Repeating Devices.

They Sell Themselves At 100% Profit

A neat counter-salesman, holding 60 boxes of 50 needles each, costs you $3.00—5c per box.

And this industrious, efficient salesman (with mighty little help from you) sells its wares for $6.00 per box.

You double your money!

And Your Customers Come Back for More

Phonograph owners like Violaphone Needles.

They like their convenience—their economy (500 records played—BRILLIANTLY—for 10c). They like the considerate way that Violaphone Needles treat their records.

No wonder they come back and ask by name for those satisfactory VIOLAPHONE Needles.

Made in Three Tonal Qualities

You can have Violaphone Needles in Medium, Loud or Extra-Loud Tone.

All tone-qualities are the same price—$3.00 per carton of 60 boxes.

For dance music, you'll find the Extra-Loud quality a big favorite.

VIOLAPHONE Needles will be Money-Makers and Friend-Makers in YOUR store. A small selection—two or three cartons—will start you nicely. Why not order TODAY?

CLEVER WINDOW ATTRACTS PUBLIC

Artistic Display of Gennett Records and Starr Phonographs in Window of Prominent St. Louis Firm Attracts Attention of Passers-by

The display shown below, which was gotten up by E. E. Fay, of the Connorized Music Co., appears in the windows of the Union House Furnishing Co., St. Louis, Mo., and is attracting a great deal of attention to the Gennett records and Starr phonographs. The large record is six feet in height and is an excellent replica of an actual Gennett record having a blue label with gold lettering. The Union House Furnishing Co. is more than pleased with the attention it is attracting, and says that not only pedestrians but persons riding in street cars and automobiles are also attracted. The record is made of beaver board painted in black and the regular size ten-inch Gennetts make an interesting comparison to the mammoth disc. Gennett records, together with the regular assortment of window cards and a display of phonographs in the background, make up the setting for the immense record shown in the illustration.

Elly Ney, the celebrated pianiste and Brunswick artist, concluded her Southern tour on March 13 in Jacksonville, Fla., where she scored a tremendous success in recital.

TRADE QUADRUPLD IN 1921

Department of Commerce Trade Review Shows Fourfold Gain Over Last Pre-war Year

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—A world trade balance in 1921 favorable to the United States, four times greater than the last pre-war year, notwithstanding a decline of 45 per cent in exports and 52 per cent in imports for 1921 over 1920, was announced last week by the Department in a review of trade conditions.

The total export trade, the review said, fell from $3,228,000,000 in 1920 to $4,485,000,000 in 1921, while imports fell from $2,278,000,000 to $2,509,000,000 during the same period. This decline, it was explained, however, was more apparent than real, even when compared with the unprecedented trade of 1920, as values in that year were "enormously inflated" and 1921 was a year of rapidly declining prices. This report is a little surprising in view of the pessimistic feeling regarding the general condition of trade.

WORKING FOR FOREIGN TRADE

Music Industries Chamber of Commerce Co-operating With Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in Compiling Exporters' Index

The Music Industries Chamber of Commerce is co-operating with the Foreign and Domestic Commerce Bureau of the United States Department of Commerce by urging all of its members who wish to develop their foreign business to list their names on the exporters' index of the Specialties Division of the Bureau.

The Specialties Division, which is under the direction of R. A. Lundquist, plans to render service to exporters along three different lines:

First, by the compiling of statistical information bearing on the world's trade in musical instruments and supplies.

Second, by the analytical study of commercial practices and conditions in foreign markets affecting the musical instrument business.

Third, by the compiling of information which will aid the foreign sale of American musical instruments, including lists of dealers in musical instruments in all parts of the world.

The Chamber, which is aiding in the development of the foreign business of its members by maintaining an Export Credit Bureau and operating a Foreign Credit Service, desires to point out the advantages which will result from listing on the exporters' index. Firms can be listed on the index only after a careful examination of their ownership and interest, which must be thoroughly American, and are then given the benefit of confidential information relative to foreign trade which they can obtain from no other source.

SONORA SLIDE FOR APRIL

NEW CHICAGO COLUMBIA AGENT

CHICAGO, ILL., March 9.—The White Eagle Furniture Co., of this city, has added a line of Columbia Grafonolas and records. Handsome phonograph departments have been installed in the two stores which the company operates at 8812 Commercial avenue and at Cedar street, Indiana Harbor. The store will specialize in foreign records.

J. N. HALLINAN RESIGNS

John N. Hallinan, in charge of the New York office of the Unit Construction Co., of Philadelphia, has resigned, effective April 1. Mr. Hallinan has been connected with the Unit Construction Co. for the past three years. At the present time he is not prepared to announce his plans, but hopes to be able to do so within a short period.

The Utica Phonograph & Supply Co., of Utica, N. Y., will move its business into the Kenmore Building on May 1.

ECKHARDT TAKES STRAND AGENCY

Well-known Talking Machine Man Opens Sales Offices in Philadelphia and Will Handle That Line in a Large Territory

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 6.—Walter L. Eckhardt, who for a number of years has been a conspicuous figure in the talking machine trade here, first with the Columbia and later with the Pathé, has opened offices in the Empire Building, at Thirteenth and Walnut streets, and has taken the local representation of the Strand phonographs, manufactured by the Manufacturers' Phonograph Co., with headquarters in New York and factory in Salem, Ind. Mr. Eckhardt also plans other activities and will act in the capacity of consulting sales engineers and general sales agent.

Mr. Eckhardt has already placed the Strand line with several large local concerns, including Strawbridge & Clothier, Stern & Co., Wurlitzer Co. and Joseph Jacobs, and has also established agencies with several Pittsburgh concerns, including Joseph Horn & Co., Rosenbaum & Co. and the Kaufmann store. He has exclusive distributing rights to the Strand line for Pennsylvania, Maryland, southern New Jersey, Delaware and District of Columbia, and is building up a sales organization to take care of the territory.

INCORPORATED

The Wonder Phonograph Co. has been incorporated in Delaware, succeeding the Wonder Talking Machine Co., of New York. Officers of the new concern are: President, H. B. McNulty; vice-president, C. E. Hoyt; treasurer, A. C. Wheeler, and secretary, G. Jones. The officers and A. J. Collins constitute the board of directors.

DUO APPLIANCE CORP. CHARTERED

The Duo Appliance Corp., of New York City, has been granted a charter of incorporation under the laws of New York, for the manufacture of phonograph record protectors, with a capital of $5,000. Incorporators are E. B. Haymond and P. M. Boesen.

WITH REGAL RECORD CO.

Jules and Nestor Roos have been appointed special salesmen for the Regal Record Co., New York, and are leaving New York this week to cover cities in the Northwest and in the South.

The Victor Talking Machine Co., of Camden, N. J., has declared the usual quarterly dividend of $10 per share on common stock, payable April 15 on stock of record March 31.

"I have always plucked a thistle and planted a flower when I thought the flower would grow," said Lincoln, and this might be adopted by talking machine merchandisers to good purpose.

The Kellogg-Drake Co., Edison dealer, of Galesburg, Ill., has greatly enlarged its store in order to add a line of pianos and music rolls.

A piano and talking machine establishment has been opened at Riverbank, Cal., by Professor Head & Son.

FOR SALE

Some Unusually Interesting Features to Be Presented at Session on March 15

The next meeting of the Talking Machine Men, Inc., will be held at the Café Boulevard, New York, on March 15, at 1 o'clock, and will be preceded by the usual luncheon. A special invitation is issued to the ladies to attend the meeting.

During the course of the meeting Miss Isabelle Lowden, the director of the New York Third Music Week, will deliver an address on the Music Week plans; representatives of the Richmond-Robbins Co. will demonstrate their new songs; George F. Farrah, sales manager of the Electric Recording Laboratories, will offer a demonstration and the A. C. Gilbert Co. will also demonstrate the new wireless telephone.

The business of the meeting will include the nomination of officers, to be elected at the annual meeting in April. The final plans for the annual banquet of the Talking Machine Men, Inc., on April 20, will also be discussed in the fullest detail, and an interesting program will be prepared.

HAVERTY CO. IN FINE NEW HOME

Attractive Talking Machine Department Reassembles a Bungalow in Appearance

HOUSTON, TEX., March 10.—The attractive new home of the Haverty Furniture Co.'s branch in this city has been completed, giving to this concern one of the finest mercantile houses in the Southwest. A feature of the new establishment is an extensive talking machine department on the main floor of the building, which is six stories in height. The entrance to the department is similar in appearance to that of a bungalow and the same home atmosphere is the predominating theme carried out in the interior. Fred T. Smith, who has been with the company for a number of years, goes to the new store as secretary and manager.

WANTED—RECORDER OF HIGH ABILITY

There are only a few men in the country who possess the recording experience and ability required by my client, a large manufacturer.

I am instructed to insist upon a man who can operate a successful laboratory without supervision, who can construct and repair his own recording instruments, who can produce a record of great volume and mellow tone. He must have already achieved success, and be prepared to duplicate his success in my client's laboratory without experimentation.

My client expects him to be a man at the top of his profession and will remunerate him accordingly. He will not be asked to equip a laboratory. Manufacturing or electro-plating knowledge is not required.

It is understood that some or most of the men capable of filling this position are already employed, and would consider making a change only if they are certain that they can better themselves by doing so. If you are one of these, and are free to negotiate, I will gladly arrange so that you can obtain further particulars of our proposition in confidence. An interview can be arranged either direct with me or through your own attorney, whichever you prefer. Address "Box 1115," care The Talking Machine World, 373 Fourth Ave., New York City.

SEABURG MFG. CO. ELECTS OFFICERS

Jamestown, N. Y., Manufacturers Report Progress and Decide to Place New Model on Market

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., March 2.—At the annual directors' and stockholders' meeting the Seaburg Mfg. Co. held recently in its executive offices at Jamestown, N. Y., the following officers and directors were elected: E. J. Seaburg, president; A. H. Seaburg, vice-president; V. B. Seaburg, vice-president; O. T. Seaburg, secretary, and E. T. Seaburg, treasurer. The foregoing are also directors of the company, as are E. B. Seaburg, L. W. Seaburg and R. H. Seaburg.

In the yearly report rendered by the president Mr. Seaburg states that, due to the fact that the company produces but six models of the Librola, it is able to work with a high standard of efficiency in production.

At this meeting the directors also decided to place on the market a new model listed as No. 125, an illustration of which appears herewith. This model, available in either mahogany veneer or quartered oak, golden or fumed finish, retails for $125. It is 36 inches long, 24 inches wide and 31 inches high, and is equipped with a double spring, strong, silent motor.

The many unusual exclusive features of the other Librola models appear in this new product. The turntable is accessible in such a manner that two-thirds of the top is stationary, thus allowing a reading lamp and books to be placed on the phonograph, where they may rest undisturbed when the instrument is used.

SEEKING LOWER FREIGHT RATES

Representatives of Shippers Appear Before Interstate Commerce Commission in Order to Secure More Favorable Freight Schedules

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 28.—Representatives of shippers are appearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission this week to testify regarding the needs of the various industries for lower freight rates. The miscellaneous commodities were put at the end of the program of the hearing and representatives of the different trades have all been given an opportunity to testify regarding conditions.

Almost without exception, the business men are seeking for lower freight rates, believing that a reduction of the transportation cost will be reflected in prices to such an extent as to materially stimulate business. The railroads, on the other hand, are attempting to show that the present freight rates have nothing to do, either with existing high prices or with the lack of business, claiming that the business depression is the result of post-war conditions and that high prices are due to labor, and charge that few, if any, businesses have been willing to sacrifice profits to increase sales.

The work you do is worth doing well. No man ever achieved success by neglecting the petty details of an enterprise. After all, the little things make the big whole—in other words, the business.

Fred McDonald, of Sheridan, Ind., has taken over the Victor department of the Geo. L. Frank jewelry store at Lebanon, Ind.

LONDON, E. C., ENGLAND, March 3.—A general survey of the trade presents no great difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that it is not experiencing an overwhelming influx of business. In some quarters sales are fairly good, though even the retailers under the guise of after-season and other forms of "sales" are prone to cut prices to an extent that leaves no great margin of profit. The explanation is that ordinary business is somewhat slack and to keep things going it is necessary to turn over stock. Values have depreciated by a considerable amount and the policy adopted to a very general extent of liquidating stocks of machines and parts bought or contracted for at high rates will clear the field and stabilize future trade. This policy applies to all sections of the gramophone trade; it has passed down the various distributing channels from manufacturer to wholesaler and mail order firms on to the dealer, who might now be regarded as in the throes of a big effort to interest the public in some "remarkable" bargains. In this regard I have noticed that goods are offered retail at prices below the manufacturer's figure of a few months ago for the same or similar quality articles. It proves that very big sums of money have been "cut" by makers in an effort to reach prices more in conformity with the purse limits of the masses. Apart from the gramophone trade, most industrial companies have followed the policy of cutting the inflated values of too, in many cases, inflated stocks. This is all too apparent in recent balance sheets showing losses on the last fiscal year's trading of hundreds of thousands of pounds sterling, with the not uncommon result of inability to declare dividends even on the preference shares.

Thus the course of trade is still undergoing great changes; there is a constant slide in prices yet proceeding, but it is now a reasonable conclusion that rock-bottom is in sight. These improving indications of stability of values coincide with better service in general organization and particularly in the factory. Workmen are becoming less careless. They are gradually throwing off that post-war irresponsibility of endeavors into which they had been cast by a combination of circumstances often beyond control. In other words, the British workman is delivering the goods. Here and there I still come across examples of, shall it be called, mental aberration? But, on the whole, the average workman is displaying a co-operative sense of responsibility, the result, I think, of being taken into the confidence of his employers. All these signs are good.

The great disorganization of industry, and yet more important, perhaps, the sub-conscious changes which have taken place in our outlook upon life since the fateful days of 1914, have exerted a world-wide influence. Such an upheaval of the one-time placidity of human endeavor has been of revolutionary result, much of great value, that will direct the commercial and social life along channels more to the common good than hitherto. Masters and men must co-operate. In that spirit is the big influence and opportunity for the restoration of commerce and relationship of mankind. We see it reflected in the general reduction of inflated strife-time prices and reversion of policies inimical to good understanding between communities and individuals. Along these lines may we look for a gradual rehabilitation of our sadly depleted commerce.

How necessary an effort is required to this end is found in the fact that two million workpeople are still unemployed, not to mention the many thousands on short time. Trade is picking up. The registration of unemployed shows a decrease each week of as much as 10,000. The prosperity of the gramophone trade is linked up very closely with even the smallest general industrial improvement, and in these good signs traders will be encouraged to march forward with renewed hope and effort.

Though of slow progress, the revival of gramophone business to somewhere near normality may certainly be regarded as probable within a year or two; indeed, most of us look forward to a real, solid improvement next season. Thousands of machines and millions of records are sold every year. That's worth keeping in mind, because it creates hope in determination to go one better when trade eases off during the Summer months.

ple at home, but the attendance registered over 260 members and associates of the music industries and profession. In addition to a representative press, resulting in some good newspaper reports, the following notabilities were among those present as guests: Rt. Hon. the Viscount Burnham, C. H.; Sir Hugh Allen, Sir Henry Hadow, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Sir George Croydon Marks, M. P.; Geo. Terrell, M. P.; Capt. St. George Caulfield, Dr. R. S. Clay, Dr. Arthur Somervell, Col. Mackenzie Rogan.

In the chair was Louis Sterling, president of the Federation, and here it may be said that he proved as capable and popular a chairman as, in so short a time, he has in the capacity of president.

The speeches were throughout of a very high order, interesting as directing a useful light upon the activities and varied doings of the Federation in the encouragement of British musical endeavor and the protection of trade interests. From all of which it becomes more and more evident that as an institution the Federation has fully justified its existence and has already made good to an extent, I venture to think, quite beyond general expectation. Opposition, passivity and criticism which beset the initial efforts of the Federation have, by the hard work and sincerity of its officers, been won over to support, admiration and enthusiastic co-operation from all sides.

A valuable testimony to the work of the Federation was given by the guest of the evening, the Rt. Hon. the Viscount Burnham, C. H. Lord Burnham laid stress on the work the Federation was doing in educating the public, in creating a sound musical tradition in the schools of the country and in getting music introduced into industrial and welfare work.

In reply the chairman explained in some detail what the Federation was doing and pointed out that, whereas twelve months ago only one paper was accepting the Federation articles, those articles were now going to more than forty journals and there were more than one thousand papers which were printing news sent out from the Federation offices. The Music in Industry campaign had been wonderfully successful, and so, too, had the education scheme. It was largely due to these three lines of effort that the music trade had suffered less than any other luxury trade during the previous twelve months.

Other speakers were: Sir Henry Hadow, Colonel Mackenzie Rogan, George Terrell, M. P.; Sir George Croydon Marks, J. F. Simpson and Alexander Dow.

Gramophones at the British Industries Fair

The above exhibition of all kinds of goods representative of British industry duly opened its doors to traders on February 27 at the White City, Shepherd's Bush, London. No great amount of activity marked the first day's proceedings. It seldom does on such occasions unless it be in the nature of a gymnastic display by attendants unpacking the last case or engaged with hammer and nails upon last-minute alterations. However that may be, a few buyers made their appearance and not a few firms registered preliminary sales. The exhibition closes on March 10, by which time I shall be in a position better to estimate the amount of trade and its value booked by the musical instrument firms, of which about thirty are exhibiting. Effective displays are in evidence by the following gramophone companies: Jordan & Carpenter, Ltd. (Voltona sound boxes and machines complete); Electric Gramophones, Ltd. (electric motors and accessories); Melodia, Ltd. (Ultone sound box and tone arm); C. H. Roberts Mfg. Co. (Bestone portable); Gramophone Components, Ltd. (motors, sound boxes and tone arms); Repeating Gramophones, Ltd. (record-repeating device and portables); Craies & Stavridi (Apollo gramophones, etc.); Sterno Mfg. Co. (gramophones, Compactophones and records); Garrard Eng. & Mfg. Co., Ltd. (motors); Johnson Talking Machine Co., Ltd. (gramophones and accessories); Benefit Superphones, Ltd. (gramophone that plays twelve records right off without attention); Alfred Graham & Co., Ltd. (Algraphone gramophones, motors, Sonat sound boxes and accessories); Barnett, Samuel & Sons, Ltd. (Decca and other machines, etc.); Disque Cabinet Co., Ltd. (record-filing cabinets and complete instruments)—fourteen firms all told.

Broadly speaking, it is none too representative a show for our industry. Many houses refrained from taking space because of the comparatively poor results experienced by exhibitors at last year's fair. Others hold aloof by reason of the exclusion of the general public who, it is argued (and rightly, to my mind), should be allowed entry, at least during part of each day. For this reason a number of gramophone firms have secured space at Olympia, where during the whole of March the Ideal Homes Exhibition is being held.

As far as my inquiries go, the consensus of trade opinion is certainly more favorable to combined trade and public shows than to those confined solely to the trade. In the case of the British Industries Fair it is felt that the general public might be allowed entry after 2 p. m., thus reserving the whole morning to traders without interruption. However, the "powers that be" are adamant and that's all there is to't!

Anticipation of good business at the present B. I. F. is said to be more favorable than at the last show. For one thing, prices are considerably less for the same quality products and there is stability of values, the absence of which last year militated greatly against the placement of advance orders. Exhibitors have good reason, therefore, to be optimistic.

Inventor of the Rastus Dancers Visits London

Roswell L. Douglass, president of the National Co., Boston, Mass., spent a few days in London recently on his way to the Continent. It is pretty well known that the National Co. controls the patents of the Rastus dancing toy and boxing dancers, whose amazing capers on hundreds of thousands of gramophones have delighted users throughout the world. The Rastus dancers receive the homage of a big public this side through the agency of the Jake Graham Co., Liverpool.

During the course of a very interesting chat with your correspondent Mr. Douglass mentioned that attempts had been made to foist on the British market a number of imitations of the Rastus figures. To some extent his visit was concerned with the patent situation. His company intends to protect its rights in every way and Mr. Douglass informed me that already action has been taken against an importer of German figures which infringe the Rastus patents. The result of this action, I understand, is that the importers have admitted infringement and signed an undertaking not to proceed.

This cuts out the chief delinquent, and having had a sight of the documents covering the British patents of the Rastus, which, by the way, date back to 1914, I believe that traders here would be well advised to exercise the utmost caution in handling offers of similar or somewhat similar figures from whatever source they may come. At least, in such cases it is only prudent to consult a competent patent attorney before commitment to any proposition involving a doubt upon the subject.

As I have had occasion previously to report in these columns, the accessory side of the gramophone business in this country has not been developed to any great extent. Mr. Douglass believes that we are much behind the States in this regard and feels that there is scope for increasing the specialty trade here.

As to conditions in America, Mr. Douglass speaks with experience in several departments of trade. He said: "It is my opinion that the worst period is over; we have reached bottom and by present indications the next few months should show a gradual improvement in trade all round. Dealers' stocks of what we call stencil machines are becoming exhausted. This will relieve the situation considerably and enable the big concerns to come into their own by stabilizing trade on well-defined lines of policy. The people of the United States like phonographs, the sales of which have only been restricted on account of general business depression. When money comes back into a freer circulation trade in phonographs will certainly revive."

Mr. Douglass plans to spend a few weeks on the Continent and may return home via London.

Action Over "His Master's Voice" Matrices

A complication arising out of the war was recently brought to light in the British courts. Before the Anglo-German mixed arbitral tribunal the Gramophone Co., Ltd., applied for an ad interim injunction to restrain the Deutsche Gramophon Aktiengesellschaft and the Polyphonwerke Aktiengesellschaft Cos. from selling records made from matrices which had been sent over to Berlin before the war to the Deutsche Gramophon Co., as arranged with that company on the distinct understanding that the matrices should remain the property of the Gramophone Co., Ltd., of London. The German Government having sold the shares in the company, which were all owned by the London firm, and also the matrices, the German companies as now constituted are contesting the action of the Gramophone Co., Ltd., and, following the decision of the tribunal to reserve judgment on January 18, the case was again heard on January 20. Douglas Hogg, K. C., for the claimants agreed with the chairman that the tribunal had no executive power to enforce any decision arrived at, but pointed out that no difficulty would be experienced in enforcing it in a German court if the tribunal made a similar order to that which any court could make. It would be an impossible task if the matter was delayed, and presently assessment had to be made of the damages suffered by the Gramophone Co., Ltd., in almost every country in the world.

Sir Duncan Kerly, acting for the German companies, discountenanced any authority of the tribunal to prevent the German firms concerned from dealing with the records. As the claim was based on the actual ownerships of the matrices and the matter had yet to be decided in the German courts, it was useless asking the tribunal to make an order. Judgment was reserved.

The Terpsichorean Period

If there is a special time for dancing (the young folks seem to make it almost an all-the-year-round pastime) that period is certainly in full swing at this time. Records pertaining to the art are much in demand; in fact, dancing tunes, in value to manufacturers and authors, not to mention the music publishers, easily take precedence of all other classes of musical endeavor. Jazzy fox-trots hold the field in popular favor, if recent record issues are any index, though, of course, the simple one-step is well in the running. Some very fine dance records by well-known orchestras and bands top the bill on "His Master's Voice," Columbia, Winner, Zonophone and most other companies make a strong feature of catering to the popular craze.

"His Master's Voice" School of Salesmanship

The projected salesmanship school at the Oxford street headquarters of the Gramophone Co. will be opened some time in March. The school is, in reality, a model shop, fully stocked and with the usual equipment. Thus the students should feel quite at home and in this environment will the better assimilate what they will be coached in—window-dressing, selling methods, pronunciation of musical terms, etc. Of course, the school is open only to "His Master's Voice" dealers and their salesmen or assistants. For this unique service the company makes no charge, believing that the expense and time involved will be amply repaid by the increased selling ability with which it must invest the students. However good a salesman may be he will find something worth remembering and the unique methods advocated at the school will serve as a stimulant to greater endeavor.

Brief Paragraphs of Interest

Otto Heineman is expected to visit London within the near future on business in connection with the development of his numerous commercial interests.

Messrs. Pathé Frères, in conformity with the general trend of price policies, have announced a revision of portable machine prices.

The Rowhill Engineering Co., Enfieldtown, are now manufacturing quite a good quality sound box at the remarkably low price of 1/6 (36 cents). It is evident that though favored by a low exchange rate German imports cannot meet such keen competition as is foreshadowed by the enterprise of the Rowhill Co.

A large mail-order house is now advertising what is described as a six-guinea gramophone for 50/-, with a book of six records thrown in. Almost pre-war rates!

The number of unemployed registered on February 7 was 1,892,000 throughout the United Kingdom. Since then there has been a decrease of 42,600. A good sign!

"Tonepen" is the name of a new needle which is creating much favorable mention in talking machine circles in this city.

Personal Recordings by Sinkler Darby

Thanks to photographers and looking-glasses, most people are familiar with their appearance. It is a reflected glory in the nature of an ocular demonstration. Something to be seen, not heard. It brings to mind the fact that there are no photographers or looking-glasses by which the masses can hear as well as see themselves. At least, that was the position until the advent of Sinkler Darby, who has just inaugurated a new studio on fashionable New Bond street, London, for the very purpose of recording our voices or talents as musicians.

The "Darbycord" (why not Darbychord?) record is for personal recordings by amateurs. The fees are quite moderate—six ten-inch records for 12 guineas; six twelve-inch records, 14 guineas; extra copies, ten-inch, 5/6 each; twelve-inch, 7/6 each. The idea is first rate. It will meet a real want, for there are big business possibilities in catering to the desire of parents to possess records of their children's voices, and offers scope for the amateur to test his or her own performances. Mr. Darby makes a special feature of children's voices.

Gramophones Given Away!

Quite a common form of trading before the war was the policy of presenting a gramophone to those signing a contract undertaking to purchase so many records in multiples of six or twelve per week over a given period. Of course, the gramophone became the property of the purchaser only after completion of the stipulated number of records.

Within the last few months this method of trading has received much attention and a number of firms are now running the scheme for all it is worth, especially in the provinces. A new London firm, the Meloto Co., has recently commenced operations along these lines on quite a big scale. It offers an exceedingly good gramophone free to purchasers of twelve records down and thereafter eight per month for twenty-three months. The Meloto record costs 3/- for the ten-inch double-side, and 4/6 the twelve-inch. The purchaser is under no obligation as to size of record ordered.

Among the critics of this trading policy is the London Music Trades Review, which in a recent report described it as being diametrically opposed to the best interests of the industry.

LATEST PATENTS RELATING TO TALKING MACHINES AND RECORDS

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—Correction Device for Phonographic Machines. George W. Beadle, Stamford, Conn., assignor to Columbia Graphophone Co., Bridgeport, Conn. Patent No. 1,403,584.

This invention relates to phonographic machines of the character used for dictation purposes and has particular reference to the means for imparting information to the transcriber concerning the spoken words engraved in the wax tablet.

It is an object of the invention to simplify devices of this character and to make possible the incorporation of the same into existing machines without detracting from the appearance thereof or requiring the redesigning of the same.

The invention consists, briefly speaking, in the provision, in lieu of the usual scale bar, of a bar having at one end a table over which the index member may be moved. Overlying the table is a pencil guide, the same being preferably in the form of an arch stamped up from the table. One edge of the bar is provided with a channeled guide, preferably in the form of segments stamped up from either side of the plate. This guide is adapted to straddle one longitudinal edge of the index member to prevent the same from buckling or collapsing as it is pushed over the table. A bracket on the carriage serves as a support for one end of the index member and to push the same over said table.

This invention relates to improvements in record-cleaning attachments for phonographs. An object of the invention is to provide a device to the tone arm in advance of the reproducer needle, so as to move over the sound grooves ahead of the needle and wipe out accumulations of dust from the grooves and insure a clearer and more faithful reproduction of the recorded sound waves.

Another and very important object of the invention is to provide a fabric wiper made of either velvet, cotton, wool, linen, silk or other suitable material and fumed with either a disinfectant or perfume, this wiper being used in connection with the aforesaid cleaning attachment, and being usable a number of times before being finally discarded.

A further object is to provide a combination of cleaning attachments of substantially the same nature, said attachments being mounted on the tone arm and a separate support respectively, said attachments having wipers as described, for cleaning the record and polishing the surface to remove finger marks.

A further object is to provide an assortment of brushes, arranged to be used in place of the fabric wipers under certain circumstances.

perspective view of the primary holder; Figures 5 and 6 are perspective views showing the primary holder and closure plate separated; Figure 7 is a perspective view showing the extension holder open; Figures 8, 8a, 8b and 8c are perspective views showing various forms of fabric wipers used in connection with the cleaning attachment; Figure 9 is a detail sectional view illustrating the use of an extension plate in place of the extension holder; Figure 10 is a cross-section similar to Figure 2, showing a brush in place of the velvet wiper; Figure 11 is a perspective view of a modified form of brush wherein short and relatively stiff bristles are employed; Figure 12 is a perspective view of another form of the brush; Figure 13 is a perspective view illustrating the use of an extension support by means of which the cleaning attachment can be applied to tone-arms of other constructions than that shown in Figure 1; Figure 14 is a detail perspective view of the extension support shown in Figure 13; Figure 15 is a perspective view of an auxiliary handle wherein certain of the brushes may be employed; Figure 16 is a perspective view illustrating the use of the handle and brush in reaching the center of the record where the cleaning attachment ordinarily does not reach; Figures 17, 18, 19 and 20 are detail views of modifications of the spring members; Figure 21 is a perspective view illustrating a fixed clamped cleaning attachment; Figure 22 is a perspective view showing a one-piece spring used in connection with the cleaning attachment; Figure 23 is a perspective view illustrating the use of a separately supported relatively broad cleaning member, in combination with the tone arm attached cleaning member; Figure 24 is a detail perspective view of the adjustable standard comprising a part of the separate support in Figure 23; Figure 25 is a longitudinal section of the extensive arm of the separate support; Figure 26 is a detail sectional view of the clamp member in Figure 25; Figure 27 is a section of the balance weight constituting a further modification in the separate support; Figure 28 is a perspective view of the balance weight showing one method of attaching it; Figure 29 is a perspective view of the balance weight illustrating the use of the balance weight fastener arm, and Figure 30 is a perspective view of a modified brush holder.

Reproducer. Frank W. Minor, Richmond, Va Patent No. 15,269 (reissued).

The present invention relates to reproducers for phonographs and the like and has special reference to the means for supporting the stylus arm, the object of the invention being to provide a simple and cheap support which may be readily applied to the reproducer, will facilitate repairs and will permit the stylus and stylus arm to vibrate easily while, at the same time, being susceptible of ready adjustment to compensate for wear and impart a desired tension to the stylus and its arm. Figure 1 is a longitudinal section through a reproducer, having its stylus

Talking Machine. Roy T. Newland and Melvel Merriam, Butte, Mont., assignors of one-half to Adolph Pincus and William Meyer, same place. Patent No. 1,401,277.

This invention relates to talking machines or the like and has for its chief characteristic the provision of a plurality of horns or sound-conveying channels, all of which communicate and have a common outlet, the horns or channels being of different size and configuration, adapted to be singly used, the largest one being used for orchestral music, xylophone or the like, while the small horn is used for word music, especially delivered by high-pitched voices.

Another important object of the invention resides in the novel construction of means for controlling the communication between the respective horns or sound-conveying channels, so that any particular horn or the like can be used at the will of the operator.

This invention relates to phonographs or talking machines and it has more particular reference to cabinets therefor, the main object being to provide a cabinet with which is combined an extensible horn, said extensible horn being so constructed and arranged that when in use it is properly supported while an uninterrupted flare is presented for the amplification of the sounds reproduced from the record.

Another object of the invention is to provide a combined phonograph cabinet and extensible horn whereby the volume and distinctness of the sounds produced are greatly enhanced.

A further object of this invention is to provide a novel means associated with the amplifier or extensible horn whereby the tones or sounds reproduced from the record are more evenly distributed and at the same time greatly clarified in quality; in other words, an important feature resultant to this novel construction of amplifier and extensible horn is that the customary metallic sounds associated with phonographic reproductions are practically eliminated.

horn, partly broken away and in section to better disclose the extensible horn in collapsed or closed in position. Fig. 2 is a front elevation of the cabinet drawn to a reduced scale. Fig 3 is a similar side elevation to Fig. 1, but showing the extensible amplifier or horn in fully extended position; Fig. 4 is a sectional plan taken approximately on the line 4—4 in the preceding figure; Fig. 5 is a front view looking directly into the inner section of the extensible amplifier or horn and drawn to an enlarged scale, and Fig. 6 is a detail side view of a part.

This invention more especially relates to an improved sound box for phonographs which is termed an "articulator" and its object is to provide an improved general construction of phonograph sound box.

A second important object of the invention is the provision, within the sound box, of a perforated, floating and vibrating partition whereby to properly blend the tones and overtones and eliminate discordant sound as well as to assist in increasing the volumes of produced sound.

This invention relates to feed mechanism for sound boxes of sound-recording and reproducing machines adjustable to automatically repeat their co-operation with a given sound record at the will of the operator. The invention is specially adapted for such machines arranged to co-operate with flat disc records and having sound-conducting tubular arms which move with the sound boxes, and are so constructed and arranged that repetition of the co-operation of the sound box with any given record is consequent upon such movement, to an adjustable predetermined extent.

is a plan view of the feed mechanism shown in Figs. I and II, but on a larger scale; Fig. IV is an inverted plan view of said feed mechanism on the same scale as Fig. III; Fig. V is a fragmentary, vertical cross-sectional view of said feed mechanism, showing the inner face of said cam and parts connected therewith; Fig. VI is a vertical longitudinal sectional view of said feed mechanism taken on the line VI, VI in Figs. III and IV; Fig. VII is a fragmentary vertical sectional view showing the feed mechanism terminal stop device, taken on the line VII in Fig. I.

The primary object of this invention is to provide an efficient and generally improved mechanism for automatically returning the sound box and stylus of the phonograph to its initial or starting point after completion of the record being played so that the playing will be automatically repeated.

Another object of the invention resides in the provision of an electro-mechanical mechanism for returning the reproducing stylus to its starting point and further in the specific construction and arrangement of such mechanism.

Sound-recording and Reproducing Machine. Theodore O. Loveland, Iowa City, Iowa. Patent No. 1,406,046.

This invention relates to sound-recording and reproducing machines of the cabinet phonograph type which employ, in addition to the usual sound box and tone arm, an amplifying or tone chamber that is in coupled communication with the tone arm through the medium of a sound-conveying conduit, commonly termed the throat, and the specific improvement embodied herein more particularly resides in a novel departure as to the structural treatment of the throat itself.

Such throats formed wholly of metal have been, and to a minor extent may still be, employed in some machines, but it seems impossible to avoid the resultant metallic tones therefrom, and for the transmission of superior tone values it is generally conceded in this and other musical industries that wood is the very best material that may be adopted.

These hollow throats, therefore, are preferably formed with walls of a carefully selected wood, and their interior surfaces must be of a continuously smooth or unobstructed character as their acoustic properties are of the utmost importance in the transmission of sound waves as constant values from the sound box to the tone chamber of the machine, to insure a delicately accurate reproduction of the record being translated.

For a clearer conception of the improved features claimed reference will now be had to the accompanying drawing, illustrating a practical embodiment thereof, in which drawing the single figure shown is a perspective assembled view of a sound box, its tone arm and a tone chamber, as associated with the improved throat, the latter being partly broken away at its rear and one side wall and illustrating in section on an exaggerated scale the invention as applied.

Means for indicating matter produced on sound records. Victor H. Emerson and Robert B. Wheelan, New York, said Emerson assignor to the Emerson Phonograph Co., Inc., same place. Patent No. 1,404,194.

This invention relates to improvements in indicators to be used in combination with sound-records of musical compositions, monologues, etc. One of the objects of the invention is to provide visible means, in combination with a sound-record disk, to indicate, by illustration or words, a certain portion or portions of the records which are being reproduced. In other words, by means of the improved indicator a song, musical composition, etc., can be illustrated as the reproduction progresses. For example, take a record of the nursery song, "Mary had a little lamb," by means of the improvement the words "Mary had a little lamb," as they are reproduced, would have associated therewith the picture of a little girl and a lamb. The next line, "Its fleece was white as snow," would have associated therewith (for instance), a snow scene. The next line, "And everywhere that Mary went the lamb was sure to go," would have associated therewith a picture of a little girl followed by a lamb; and so on.

To carry out the invention, we superimpose upon a record-disk a second disk, which is preferably loosely secured to the record-disk. During the rotation of the record disk the superimposed disk will be held against rotation, the record disk revolving underneath the superimposed or indicator disk. The superimposed disk is provided with a slot for the passage therethrough of the reproducing needle in order that the needle can contact with the record-disk.

one embodiment of the invention; Fig. 2 is an edge view thereof; Fig. 3 is an enlarged sectional view illustrating one way to secure the disks together; Figs. 4 and 5 illustrate modified forms of the invention; Fig. 6 is an enlarged edge view of the device as illustrated in Fig. 4; Fig. 7 is an enlarged sectional view thereof; Fig. 8 is a plan view of still another form of the invention; and Fig. 9 is a diagrammatic view of a phonographic device having the improvement applied thereto.

Combined Piano and Phonograph. Elizabeth E. Clark, executrix; Melville Clark, Chicago, Ill., assignor to the Apollo Piano Co., De Kalb, Ill. Patent No. 1,406,441.

The purpose of this invention is to provide an improved construction of a phonograph combined with a piano and contained within the casing thereof.

CELEBRATE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Jacob Weinheimer's Sons, Old Syracuse, N. Y., House, Passes Half Century Milestone—Sonoras Featured in Large Department

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 9.—Jacob Weinheimer's Sons, furniture dealers, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the existence of the firm here this week. The business was founded in 1872 by Jacob Weinheimer and its growth has been steady since that time. A feature of the establishment is a large phonograph department on the main floor of the store where the Sonora line is displayed. This department, under the management of Miss Ella M. Peck, has been built up and it now enjoys the patronage of a large clientele in Syracuse and the surrounding community. The anniversary was featured in the local papers by a history of the company's progress covering more than two pages. Considerable advertising also announced the event.

PLAN SALES DRIVE ON COLUMBIA

Troy, N. Y., March 9.—The music house of Cluett & Sons, Inc., this city, is planning an intensive sales drive on Columbia Grafonolas beginning March 11, according to an announcement by E. A. Russell, manager of the phonograph department. Mr. Russell reports that the company has been enjoying a brisk business in phonographs and records in all its stores.

A Phonograph Built to Sell

The selling policy of Sonora begins in the factory. It consists of concentrating the whole force of our organization on making a phonograph only—a phonograph that reflects the pioneering genius and workmanship of Sonora's skilled artisans, and imparts a tone quality heretofore believed impossible.

Hence it follows that Sonora draws out the utmost from all records—indeed, the better the record the more incomparable is Sonora's rendition—a fact which, more than all other Sonora advantages, makes Sonora possession a source of pride to the owner, and the Sonora franchise a prize worth having to the dealer.

The refinements of the new Sonora models, truly astonishing, will make your selling task easier. Write for particulars regarding a Sonora Agency.

INTERDEPARTMENT CO-OPERATION

Talking Machine Departments in Stores Where Varied Lines Are Handled Can Boost Sales Through the Aid of Other Departments

Many departments and general stores are now handling talking machines and the majority of them have installed departments of an up-to-date character. Stores of this nature have an unrivaled opportunity for boosting the sales of talking machines and records through the co-operation of members of other departments on the same floor. For example, if the art department is on the same floor with the talking machine department it is a comparatively easy matter for the salesmen of that department to induce the purchaser of art objects to step into the music department and inspect the line of machines handled and to listen to records. The talking machine salesmen can reciprocate by drawing the attention of customers to the other departments on that floor or elsewhere in the building.

EDMUND C. DOEL WITH WURLITZER

Becomes Manager of the Victrola Department of Prominent New York Establishment

Edmund C. Doel has been appointed manager of the Victrola department of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., 120 West Forty-second street, New York, as successor to Herbert A. Brennan, taking charge March 20. Mr. Doel went to his present post from the Yonkers establishment of Landay Bros., of which he was manager. He was previously manager and designer of the Sonora Melody Shop, of Pittsburgh, and for five years was with Frederick Loeser & Co. in Brooklyn as manager of the music and Victrola departments. His record emphasizes experience and ability in the domain of talking machine merchandising.

JOINS PEARSALL SALES STAFF

H. Harrison Nye Will Cover Eastern New York and Pennsylvania for New York Jobbers

The Silas E. Pearsall Co., New York, Victor wholesaler, has announced the addition to its sales staff of H. Harrison Nye, who was formerly manager of the Victor department of the Outlook Co., Providence, R. I. Mr. Nye, who has been identified with the Victor trade for a number of years, is visiting the trade in eastern New York and Pennsylvania and co-operating with the Pearsall clientele to excellent advantage.

OPENS NEW STORE IN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—George T. Cooper, for the past eight years identified with the Goldsmith Music Store in the Victrola department, has opened a talking machine store at 2361-2363 West Broad street. The store will handle a complete line of Brunswick machines and records. Mr. Cooper is a man of long experience in selling phonographs and the shop should prove one of the most successful in the downtown district, owing to his enterprising methods.

HENRY MOELLER GENNETT ARTIST

Distinguished Tenor Soloist Will Record for Gennett Exclusively—Has Large Army of Admirers in New York and Throughout Country

The Gennett record division of the Starr Piano Co. has just announced that it will soon have new records of songs by Henry Moeller, the well-known concert artist, now exclusively Gennett. His "At Dawning," which was released in March, received a great response among Gennett record lovers. His songs will appear under the Gennett green label and the Starr Piano Co. feels it has made quite an addition to the Gennett list in securing him.

Henry Moeller, whose voice is of unusual sweetness and quality, has filled engagements with the New York Symphony Orchestra and oratorio societies, and at present is tenor soloist of the world's largest congregational church in Brooklyn, N. Y. Wherever he has appeared in concert work the press has spoken in high terms of his musical ability. With his extensive favorable repertoire and his masterly interpretations it is believed by the Starr Piano Co. he will be received with a great deal of enthusiasm by patrons of Gennett records, and his next songs are being looked forward to with very much interest. Two of these, "A Dream" and "The Rosary," will be released on a ten-inch record, and "Good-bye" and "When My Ships Come Drifting Home" will be the twelve-inch size.

Have you noticed that the man who is consistently advertising rarely talks about competition? You will find on investigation that he is too busy serving his customers to give any time to gossip.

OUR EXPORTS OF TALKING MACHINES

Imports of Talking Machines and Records Show an Increasing Tendency, With Exports Making a Poor Showing—Some of Our Buyers

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 4.—In the summary of exports and imports of the commerce of the United States for the month of January, 1922 (the latest period for which it has been compiled), which has just been issued, the following figures on talking machines and records are presented:

The dutiable imports of talking machines and parts during January, 1922, amounted in value to $72,478, as compared with $50,655 worth which were imported during the same month of 1921. The seven months' total ending January, 1922, showed importations valued at $338,730, as compared with $474,920 worth of talking machines and parts during the same period of 1921.

Talking machines to the number of 2,230, valued at $87,233, were exported in January, 1922, as compared with 6,194 talking machines, valued at $281,925, sent abroad in the same period of 1921. The seven months' total showed that we exported 18,174 talking machines, valued at $828,470, as against 53,467 talking machines, valued at $2,369,766 in 1921.

The total exports of records and supplies for January, 1922, were valued at $77,644, as compared with $222,498 in January, 1921. The seven months ending January, 1922, records and accessories were exported valued at $1,012,687; in 1921, $1,919,489.

The countries to which exports were made in January and the values thereof are as follows: United Kingdom, $2,164; Canada, $33,883; Central America, $6,595; Mexico, $8,837; Cuba, $1,531; Argentina, $2,163; Chile, $3,632; other South American countries, $4,198; China, $550; Japan, $6,378; Philippine Islands, $1,555; Australia, $6,938; other countries, $8,809.

NEW YORK FIRM INCORPORATES

The Metal Recording Disc Co., of New York City, has been incorporated under the laws of New York State for the manufacture of talking machines. The firm, which is capitalized at $200,000, was incorporated by L. E. Dresser, E. E. Ennison and A. B. Heermans.

SUFFER HEAVY FIRE LOSS

The Howard Furniture Co., Port Huron, Mich., Brunswick and Edison dealer, was practically wiped out when a disastrous fire swept its store recently with a loss estimated at $50,000. It has opened a temporary branch store. Plans for the future have not been fully decided.

NEW JERSEY CITY STORE OPENED

JERSEY CITY, N. J., April 1.—An attractive new music store has been opened at 491 Central street, this city, by Herbert A. Sylvester and Frank S. Cascia. Sonora and Vocalion machines are featured and, in addition, a complete stock of pianos.

Honesty of Statement a Vitally Important Asset in Salesmanship Domain :: By W. Braid White

"The salesman must be honest—he must not lie about the goods to make a sale."

This is a very plain, not to say blunt, statement. It is extracted from an article on salesmanship which appeared in the February number of The Talking Machine World. That statement was intended to be plain and blunt. It was also intended to convey a simple, well-known truth. Furthermore, it was intended as a basis for further discussion, some of which is here presented.

If we put aside polite fictions and bring ourselves down to concrete truth, we shall mostly be willing to admit that a good deal of selling is conducted on a basis not highly ethical. That is to say, when it comes to a pinch there are many salesmen who cannot, and therefore do not, resist the temptation to color their facts, to distort inconvenient truths into favorable half-truths and generally, perhaps, in manner more than in words, to convey a subtly false impression calculated to make the prospect believe something that is not so. A great deal of retail selling is done in this way and no one who knows the facts will deny the indictment.

Lying Is Intolerable

Now, the point to be insisted on is that lying, no matter how subtle, no matter how mild, no matter even if it be to all intents and purposes "harmless," is in reality a fatal habit and therefore not to be countenanced by a salesman who is loyal to his house and to the goods he sells. Lying is not to be tolerated by any house which expects to build for itself a permanent reputation.

As a matter of fact, houses which have already built for themselves permanent reputations do discourage, and discourage as sternly as possible, all manner of misrepresentation among their salesmen. But salesmen themselves are sadly prone to forget these salutary regulations and to fall into the loose and easy habit of saying what they think the customer hopes is true rather than what is actually true.

The Talking Machine Needs Only Truth

Let us consider a practical example. The whole art of sound recording and reproducing upon which the talking machine is built is in itself so wonderful, so important and so useful to the world that even if it were far more crude and imperfect in its contemporary development than it actually is, after making all allowances, it would still be far above any necessity for misrepresentation, even if misrepresentation were, or ever could be, justified. There is no need to tell about the talking machine or its records anything but the truth.

Yet one hears salesmen telling what is not the truth over and over again, mainly because they hope to make the prospect more pleased than he or she otherwise might become, or because they anticipate some objection and hope to stop it before it has been uttered. It is, for instance, not at all necessary to pretend that any given construction of an incidental part has anything vital to do with tone production. In actual fact it is well known that the general methods of tone conveyance from disc to atmosphere depend on fixed acoustical principles and are therefore essentially identical in all machines. There are incidental differences, of course, some of which are justified by the tonal results and others of which are apparently quite futile. It is not easy unless one be an expert, as most salesmen are not, to explain these technical points clearly and without exaggeration or misstatement. The honest salesman will be much better advised in leaving them strictly alone.

The Futility of Technical Talk

And there is another reason for saying this. The object of all such talk is to persuade the prospect that the machine offered is technically better than others. But the prospect does not really care a hoot, as the saying is, about technical points. If he is not told about them he will not care anything about them, for they are not matters of general knowledge and, in fact, are often, if not nearly always, very obscure. The prospect wants good music and a reliable mechanism that will neither cost too much nor get out of order under use. Give him or her that much and all is well. Nothing more is asked for. Therefore why bother to invent elaborate technical or quasi-technical talk, most of which is incorrect and all of which, rightly considered, must be barred as misrepresentation, since it cannot possibly be made clear to the untutored mind of the average prospect?

What the Prospect Wants

To put it in another way, the mind of the prospect ought not to be disturbed, upset and muddled. That prospect wants music. The salesman's job is to see that the prospect hears, under proper conditions, the music he or she wants to hear, until that prospect has satisfied himself or herself that the machine and the records together will deliver to him or her at home the musical pleasure, which is the object of the purchase. The question of the machine's technical points would be a pertinent question if all buyers of talking machines and records were technical experts. In the automobile field almost every person nowadays who goes to look at a car (and this includes both men and women) knows something about a car. Engineering talk is therefore quite in order, for most people know what it means when it is indulged in. On the other hand, in acoustical and musical matters, there is so much room for controversy and the boundaries between fact and fancy are so vague that it is easy to say almost anything that does not actually sound like nonsense and "get away with it." Yet nothing could be more dangerous.

For when one starts to lie there is no end to the process. One does not know when or where to stop and goes on until one is found out. And then the reputation of the house has received a blow from which it may not easily recover.

A Rule of Conduct

Business confidence established between seller and buyer is the sheet anchor of prosperity.

Sell music, forget talk points, emphasize the house's reputation for fair dealing and for taking trouble to satisfy the customer. Avoid misstatements then. Make no single promise that cannot be redeemed. Leave not a single loophole for a complaint after the sale is made. These should be the salesman's rules of conduct.

Constructive Pointers on the Development of the Instalment Department

:: By J. E. Parsons

The instalment plan has grown to be an important part of the talking machine business and many establishments make a greater percentage of their sales in this way than on the cash basis. Now, it would seem that where so much trouble is taken to gain the patronage of this class of customers an equal effort should be made by the management to retain their friendship with an eye to future business, but in many instances such is not the case.

Following the opening of an account and the purchase of a machine the customer comes in contact with the collector or the cashier of the firm more than with any other member of the business; therefore, it would seem that these two employees should be selected with particular care, mainly because they possess those qualities of personality and courtesy which naturally appeal to the average customer and enhance the prestige of the firm. A man or woman acting in the capacity of cashier who handles the payments of customers has a wonderful opportunity of making friends and increasing the business of the firm. On the other hand, if the cashier or collector acts in a condescending manner when coming in contact with these people incalculable harm is being done to the business and the friendship of a customer with all that it means in the way of future sales has in all probability been irretrievably lost.

The post of the person coming in contact with these customers is equally as important, if not more so, than that of the salesman, and the person selected for the position should not only possess a courteous and amiable disposition and a pleasing personality, but should also have some real sales ability.

In order to make the necessity for the above qualifications clear, let us analyze by a concrete example their value to the firm. John Jones buys a talking machine on the instalment plan and each week or month, according to the arrangements made at the time of the purchase, he comes to the store to make a payment. He walks up to the desk where the payment is to be made and he is greeted by name, cheerfully and with a smile, and he is asked to sit down. While the payment is being made the cashier, who should be familiar with the record stock, suggests new numbers which are proving popular and requests that he listen to several of them. If the customer is interested the cashier turns him over to the care of a salesman, who conducts him to a booth where the selections mentioned will be played. This plan not only results in sales but it implants in the mind of the customer the conviction that he is looked upon as a friend by the company, and if he does not make a purchase at the moment he will surely do so when he does decide to buy records.

When the contract has been signed and the machine delivered it is up to the management to see that the customer stays sold, and the cashier can be of material assistance in this direction. Many people purchase a new machine and find after using it a short time that minor troubles develop. When such is the case the customer often asks himself whether he received his money's worth and he develops an attitude of suspicion towards the store where the purchase was made. This can be overcome by the cashier by simply asking the customer when he makes his payment if the machine is rendering good service, and if some trouble has developed either instruct the purchaser how to overcome the difficulty or send someone to make the necessary adjustments.

In most establishments where there are instalment accounts the cashier either is behind a screen or looks out at a customer through a small window, takes the payment in a silent, impersonal and sometimes grouchy manner, passes out the receipt and the customer goes away feeling that he has intruded in entering the store. Sometimes, also, under this arrangement patrons are forced to wait in line before they receive attention, and the business is transacted in a semi-public manner which is distasteful to the average man or woman.

A small private office for the cashier will overcome these difficulties and at the same time furnish the means of closer personal contact. A bench or several comfortable chairs may be placed along the outside of the office for the comfort of patrons while they await their turn. The expense of making these arrangements will be amply repaid by the increased sales and the development of that type of customer who does business with only one store.

DRUG COMPANY FEATURES MUSIC

MONTEREY, CAL., April 1.—The Palace Drug Co., Victor and Brunswick dealer here, has considerably enlarged the space devoted to its music department by adding another large room for the display of talking machines, pianos, player-pianos and music rolls. The department, which is under the capable management of Verita Young, is enjoying a steadily growing business and is now an important feature of this well-known establishment.

DEVELOPING SALES PLANS AND METHODS

THE many movements in the talking machine trade recently for the purpose of developing sales plans and methods by manufacturers and wholesalers for the benefit of the retailer serve to refute the charge occasionally made that talking machine interests have not developed the selling instinct through lack of necessity. In various sections of the country recently there have been held conferences by wholesalers and retailers with salesmanship as the dominating topic, and, although statistics regarding the results of these conferences are not available, it is quite evident that any effect they may have cannot help but be beneficial. It may be true that for a number of years the talking machine interests have not been called upon to do any very strenuous selling owing to the fact that the demand kept well ahead of the production, but that condition did not interfere with the development and maintenance of sales organizations and sales systems that have proven very practical.

There are probably throughout the country many retailers who are not inclined to take full advantage of the suggestions offered by manufacturers, wholesalers and their representatives, and it is likely that these retailers are suffering as a result. That two heads are better than one applies to talking machine selling as well as to other problems, and the suggestions offered by manufacturers and wholesalers, based either upon the experience of successful merchandisers or upon the results of sales conferences, are in every particular practical. For the retailer who must sell and wants to sell they offer a means of getting results quickly and without costly experimenting.

Those who study retail conditions and the efforts put forth by dealers to boost business, however, are inclined to wonder if many channels for sales promotion work are not overlooked. As an experiment, recently, seven records were purchased in seven different stores in New York City and in no instance was the customer's name asked for the mailing list, and in only one instance was a suggestion made as to other records on the current list or catalog that might have a particular appeal. Perhaps the selection of records from the current popular list may have failed to give the salesman any lead as to the customer's taste, and although he got courteous service it was only in connection with the record he asked for and bought. This must not be accepted as an indictment of retailers generally, but it does indicate that there are too many who are inclined to accept immediate sales without looking to the future.

EVIDENCE OF BUSINESS BETTERMENT GROWS

DURING the past month there have been many evidences of increasing prosperity and business stability throughout the country. The most competent judges of the situation are a unit in the opinion that dull times are now behind us and that we are marching into the sunlight of better business. This has been manifested in multitudinous ways, and consequently there is a decided feeling of optimism regarding the future.

With the exception of New England, where there are some labor disturbances in the textile mills, the reports of the leading States show an increasing employment of labor, while the steadily advancing value of farm products is of great importance to merchants in every line of business, for the appreciation in prices of the products of the farm means a corresponding increase in the ability of the farming element to buy those things that go to make for culture and better living. There are those who are inclined to decry the paternal attitude toward the farming element shown by the Government, the result of strong action brought by the agricultural interests rather than through any voluntary goodness of heart. Whatever burden may be placed upon the business men of the country through loans made to farmers and to other movements for the benefit of the agriculturist, however, is likely to be more than offset by the increased stimulation of general business. A hog may not be a very impressive animal, but when his value to the farmer doubles he is likely to mean more sales of musical instruments.

There is business being done in this country right now—business that in some sections mounts up to substantial and satisfactory figures—but this condition exists only among dealers who have put into their selling campaigns more energy than some of them believed possible a year ago. Members of the industry who have covered the country thoroughly during the past few weeks, not alone to sell goods at wholesale but to study conditions, came back with the report that they found business where it was least expected and in practically every instance it was because the dealer, or group of dealers, had gone back to the methods of selling that call for extensive canvassing and intensive following up of prospects.

TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THE RADIO CRAZE

THE question of the radio and its development still appears to be very pertinent to the talking machine trade, for, whether it is a fad or not, the installation of radio equipment is progressing and the interest in broadcasting services is growing. There is no question but that the radio craze can be turned to advantage by talking machine men in a number of ways, particularly in the matter of getting publicity for their products through broadcasting the new records.

A large number of dealers have already tried the experiment of broadcasting the monthly record releases and the response has been satisfactory. In one case a music house received inquiries regarding records broadcasted from distances of from 500 to 1,000 miles. Broadcasting service, however, just now is more or less disorganized and it cannot be expected that the wireless companies are going to render this service without charge indefinitely or that the prominent artists or musical organizations are going to give their services without charge once the novelty has worn off. In fact, the broadcasting service promises to develop into a pay-as-you-go proposition, the wireless companies paying for the services of the artists and those seeking publicity in turn paying for the radio service.

The unfortunate angle seems to be that the use of talking machines and records in broadcasting has centered attention upon them and the radio enthusiasts who voice their opinion through the public press, almost without exception, make comparisons with the talking machine, and in many cases flamboyantly predict that "the radio will replace the talking machine eventually as a means for musical entertainment in the home." This is a ridiculous assertion and weakens any argument radio advertisers or advocates may make in calling attention to their product. Fortunately, the thinking members of the industry have not become panicky over the situation and the consensus of opinion has been, and is, that the ability of the talking machine owner to arrange his musical programs according to his own desires through the medium of records and to have the kind of music he wants and when he wants it, will insure the permanency of the talking machine regardless of how radio service develops.

Meanwhile, the hooking up of radio to the talking machine is not likely to do any great harm to this industry, in fact, for some time at least it is likely to prove of benefit. The broadcasting of news has not interfered with the sale of newspapers, nor should the broadcasting of music interfere with the sale of musical instruments.

WHY MUSIC WEEK SHOULD COMMAND SUPPORT

THE Music Week idea has unquestionably done much in a constructive way to advertise music—to emphasize its importance and essentiality to the ordinary citizen who is not inclined to give music the consideration it really deserves as a missionary for good and as a civilizing and cultural factor. The Music Week idea has now developed to a point where it is nation-wide, and its development was most clearly reflected in the State-wide celebration in Michigan some time since.

It was in the Metropolis that Music Week had its birth, hence a great deal of interest is being manifested in the third Music Week celebration which is to be held in this city on April 30 to May 6. The program is practically completed, and the committee, headed by Hon. Otto H. Kahn as honorary chairman, is doing very effective work. The success of the two previous Music Week celebrations in New York made a deep impression on those who, for one reason or another, are keenly interested in music, its exploitation and its advancement. Judging from the interest being displayed in the coming Music Week, it is evident that a larger number of people than ever before are realizing the tremendous value of this campaign as a means of stimulating activity of a practical kind in the cause of music.

The talking machine trade, in fact, the entire music industry, should be keenly alive to the possibilities that center in this Music Week program and should manifest an active and enthusiastic participation to the end that the coming Music Week should transcend all previous celebrations, not only in its scope but in achievement of substantial results.

It is not a time for the music profession, the music trade, or anybody interested in music as an uplifting factor, to overlook its importance and value. The cause is a noble one and a big, hearty spirit of co-operation should be manifested. Talking machine men should prepare definite programs for the week. Through their advertising, through their windows, and through their personal letters, and by every other means, they should sell the Music Week idea, and in this way inspire a new interest in the value of music in the community.

From a purely selfish standpoint, this move is wise because it will act as a stimulus in reviving business and awaken the general public to the value of music in the home. Therefore, let us all get together to make this occasion worthy of New York and worthy of everybody who loves music and who is working for its advancement in America.

CREDIT MEN KEEP TAB ON INSTALMENT SALES

A LARGE number of New York retailers engaged in selling on instalments, including piano and talking machine houses, as well as dealers in furniture and other articles, have organized a bureau under the auspices of the Associated Retail Credit Men of New York City, Inc., for the purpose of exchanging information regarding instalment purchases, and the move appears to be one in the right direction.

The new bureau will not confine itself simply to checking up first credits, i.e., giving information regarding the ability of the customer to pay a certain fixed sum weekly or monthly, but it will be utilized primarily to check up his other instalment obligations, a point that has been realized for many years, but regarding which definite action has not been taken before.

A man making $200 a month may be considered a fairly good risk on an instalment account calling for the payment of $10 a month, but if that same individual has gone and obligated himself to pay similar sums to a half-dozen other houses for goods purchased, then he does not represent a good credit risk. It is along this line that the new bureau is working and its progress should be watched with interest by those that sell on instalments in other cities of the country.

It is a more or less new departure in credit service, but it gives added protection and by providing for the interchange of information saves the individual dealer a heavy expense that would otherwise be incurred by his credit department in checking up each account separately.

Arranging a Patriotic Program and Window Display for Decoration Day

By W. Bliss Stoddard

Memorial Day now comes with an added significance, for not only are the heroes of 1861 commemorated, but the brave boys who fell in France in the great world war. The flag they fought to save has always been regarded as the most appropriate symbol for the Boys of '61, so the American Legion has adopted for its departed brothers the scarlet poppy, taken "From Flanders' fields where poppies bloom."

There are very few lines that can be advertised with good taste on Memorial Day, and in most instances it will be found more effective to have simply a patriotic trim. But there is always one line that can be played up to good advantage, and that is talking machines and records. Stirring martial music and hymns of thanksgiving for peace will be rendered in thousands of homes, so it is entirely proper to suggest the purchase of talking machines or records for the 30th of May.

The Lion Co., Toledo, O., gave a regular patriotic concert the Saturday preceding last Memorial Day. They distributed to all a program bordered with red and blue, and had previously announced the concert in the newspapers. The program was divided into three parts, featuring the songs of '61—"Marching Through Georgia," "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," "Rally Round the Flag"; songs of the Spanish war—"Down in the Harbor of Havana," "Break the News to Mother," "Just as the Sun Went Down," and those of the World War—"Keep the Home Fires Burning," "Over There," "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" and "Flanders Field." As each record was played on the machine the young woman in charge of the concert gave a short talk on the origin of the song and something of the composer. At the conclusion the entire audience was invited to join in the singing of "America." Copies of all the pieces played were kept in a small cabinet near the machine and at the conclusion salesmen were on hand to attend to any customers who wished to make purchases, and to demonstrate other patriotic records which had not formed a part of the concert. They naturally arranged a window to assist in giving publicity to the concert, and this had a large flag covering practically all the rear wall. In the center was a tripod formed of guns, backed with a flag and topped with a wreath of black foliage and red poppies, with a card "Decoration Day Offer—Five Dollars Cash will place any Victrola in your home now—Balance in small monthly payments." Across the floor extended a long white mat with border of red and blue, on which a number of patriotic records were laid. Here, too, were a number of small Victor dogs with a card: "You have heard of the 'Dogs of War'—Here are the Dogs of Peace." An interesting collection of battle relics, helmets, field glasses, boots, card cases, etc., were shown, as well as the Vernon McCune Post flag presented to the company by the Women's Volunteer Relief Corps.

Several other interesting Memorial Day displays of talking machines were shown by firms in widely separated parts of the country. The Byron Mauzy Co., San Francisco, Cal., showed on a platform draped with a deep blue cloth three machines, to the central one being attached a large wreath of glossy leaves and palm branches, from which extended long, broad streamers of red, white and blue ribbon. Against the platform was a gilded card lettered in black: "War Songs Are Memorials—They are preserved for all time on Victor and Columbia records." Behind the card was placed a couple of American flags. At either side were records arranged in a rack in pyramid form, back of the topmost record in either rack being placed a pot of Easter lilies. At one side, on the floor, was a Victrola with a motor attachment, which rendered over and over one of the patriotic songs, the music being wafted through the open doorway to the crowds passing by.

Goldsmith's, Columbus, O., was another merchant who featured Memorial Day talking machines. On the pearl gray wall were applied eagles and shields. At one end was a talking machine draped with a large flag, beside which was a Victor dog and a basket of ferns and red and white carnations. A card beside the machine suggested: "You will find many records here suitable for Decoration Day." At one end were several portable machines topped with small flags, and a card suggested: "No camping trip, outing or vacation is complete without music—A portable talking machine will furnish you with all music at all times." Forming a border around the floor were scores of the tiny Victor dogs, used as desk weights.

Schmelzer, Kansas City, Mo., had a display that appealed especially to those who had lads in the American Legion. On the wall in the center was a gilded eagle holding a red, white and blue shield, with smaller shields on either side. Below them hung the pennants in the form of American Legion badges, while on the floor were replicas, nearly two feet in diameter, of the American Legion button. Bunting was draped throughout the window.

Back to the Pacific Coast again: The Bon Marche, Seattle, Wash., had a window backed with a large flag. At either side were placed Victrolas and in the center was a pedestal draped with a flag and topped with a gilded eagle. Strown over the floor were a number of patriotic records—"America," "Star Spangled Banner," "God Be With Our Boys To-night" and others. Tall cards of green lettered in gold, leaning against the Victrolas, contained the slogans: "Let's Keep the Old Songs Alive," "These Songs Gave the Boys Their Fighting Spirit That Won the War" and "You Should Have These Records in Your Collection." A large card in the center bore a score of martial songs and marches, and a vase filled with red, white and blue flowers gave a finishing touch to the display.

Increasing Sales by Analyzing Records and Playing Up the Beauty Spots :: By Arthur S. Garbett

"Here's a record that ought to go better than it does," said the dealer. "Galli-Curci's 'Maids of Cadiz.' Can you suggest a way of popularizing it?"

"Yes," answered the advertising expert, who was a bit of a musician in his way. "Beat time to it with a pencil."

"Huh?"

"Beat time to it with a pencil. Galli-Curci has a fine voice; everybody admits that. But she has also a wonderful sense of rhythm which fewer people realize. She used to be a pianist, remember, and possesses a fine sense of 'tempo rubato'—"

"Steady on there."

"I mean she has a delicate sense of time. No stiff one-two-three, one-two-three for her. Put the record on and I'll show you. There! Notice how she speeds up, slows down and always with a perfect sense of balance. It is like a bird's flight. Even that high note at the end. Listen!"

While the high note was in progress the advertising man beat a steady one-two-three, at the average speed of the music. He did this four times. On the word "one," beginning the fifth measure, the singer's voice sank down to the key-note in the most charming way.

"There! You see. She wasn't holding that note till she ran out of breath, the way some of them do. She was perhaps unconsciously counting time all the while and gave the note a perfectly proportioned rhythmic period. Moreover,—"

"'Nough said, old man. Thanks for the tip."

That same idea can be applied to a great many records, but not to all. There are some artists specially gifted in rhythmic expression. Galli-Curci is certainly one of them and Fritz Kreisler is another. The late David Bispham had it, too, and much of the power of his "Danny Deever" is due to the "punch" he puts into the rhythm of it. There are few records of the same number which have that quality to so high a degree—none known to the writer.

As a matter of fact, interpretative artists vary

enormously in their rhythmic faculties. Many of them seem to specialize on tone-quality to such an extent as almost to ignore the rhythmic side of the art. Names cannot be mentioned without suggesting comparisons of an odious kind, but a case can be given of an artist who has plenty of rhythmic sense, yet in whom the tone-quality is perhaps preponderant. That is Mischa Elman. Few violinists will deny that for richness of tone-quality he is unequalled. The "pencil test," however, will reveal that in his desire to make the most of the tonal qualities of a piece of music he sometimes stretches out the rhythmic proportions in a way peculiar to himself. Compare his record of "Humoresque" with that of Fritz Kreisler (also a master of lovely tone-quality). There is a marked difference in the rhythmic conception. Elman draws the piece out like a love-song, while Kreisler treats it lightly, crisply. The choice between the two is purely a matter of taste, but it certainly will do the salesman no harm to be able to point out the difference to a customer without necessarily giving his own opinion on the matter.

Every salesman will admit that a record sells better if the piece has a "story" which he can tell the customer. Not many compositions have "stories" attached to them. Few salesmen realize, however, that to a man with alert ears, every record has a "story" of its own germinating from the music itself, or resulting from the artist's interpretative methods. Half the battle in selling a record is to get the customer interested in listening for something that he cannot help noticing when it is pointed out to him, but which he cannot readily find for himself without aid.

"That's fine dope," says the salesman, scornfully. "All you need to put it into practice is four years in a music conservatory and a few more as a music critic on a newspaper!"

Not a bad equipment for any phonograph salesman, that. But not absolutely essential. All that is really needed are a sharp pair of ears and a little practice in analyzing the sounds or the rhythms heard. The principle is really the same as that used by a Boy Scout in training his

PHONOGRAPH
The Aristocrat of Phonographs

Widdicomb Console Phonographs in Period Styles are faithful interpretations of the best designs of the old masters of the art of wood-fashioning. The artistic cabinet designs and finish are the handicraft of an organization which for three generations has enjoyed a reputation for leadership as designers of fine furniture.

Widdicomb console models have many distinctive features of design. Chief among these are divided top, partitions for albums, automatic stop and patented tone control. The Widdicomb plays all records. All Widdicomb models are now selling at pre-war prices. New prices range from $90.00 to $260.00.

Why discriminating buyers choose the Widdicomb

PEOPLE of taste and refinement select the Widdicomb as their phonograph for two reasons:

First—Because of its unusual tonal qualities and its surpassingly faithful reproduction of every subtle mood and varied expression of the artist, whether vocal or instrumental.

Every note of the chromatic scale from the high, clear tones of the upper register to the deep, rich bass notes, is given just the proper emphasis, without metallic harshness or “blasting.”

Second—Because the Widdicomb is an exquisite article of period furniture, fitted to take its place harmoniously—really to “belong”—among the furnishings of the most tastefully appointed home.

Into Widdicomb cabinets is built the experience of three generations of master craftsmanship in the building of fine furniture.

To a few merchants who are really interested in attracting a discriminating class of trade, the Widdicomb franchise offers a real opportunity to stimulate sales and to increase prestige.

RECORD ANALYSIS INCREASES SALES

eyesight. A Boy Scout is taught to look into a store window containing many small objects. He looks into the window for perhaps thirty seconds and at the end of that time closes his eyes and specifies just how many things he saw, describing them as nearly as he can remember. At first he makes many mistakes, but he soon develops astonishing skill.

Precisely the same thing can be done with a record, save that one uses ears instead of eyes. It doesn't make the slightest difference whether the piece is popular jazz or a classic.

Take, for instance, such a number as "O, Sole Mio," which everybody "knows," or thinks he does. How many sales people are aware that there are two rhythms employed in this piece: one in the melody, the other in the accompaniment? Whenever the melody has a long note, as on the word "mio," the accompaniment is busy, and when the melody is divided into short notes the accompaniment has long ones.

Surely this would give the unobservant customers a new interest in a song he has heard over and over again.

A tremendous possibility of opening up fresh interest in even a jazz number is by noticing details of the orchestra and pointing them out to the customer. For instance, a year or so ago "Whispering" was all the rage. There were dozens of records issued, but no two were alike, owing to the great variety of instrumentations employed. In this number, as in all popular numbers, the principal melody was repeated, but usually a different group of instruments was used for each repetition. In this respect some records of "Whispering" offered far greater variety than others.

How many salesmen listening to that or any other popular favorite among the dance records could tell just how often the refrain is repeated and just what instrument or group of instruments is employed at each repetition? Ability to do this very simple thing means ability at any time to get and to hold the customer's interest. Not only does such analysis make the popular best seller of the moment more interesting, but it offers an invaluable means of getting rid of slow sellers, many of which lag in their sales simply because neither the salesman nor the customer knows just what to listen for.

The only danger in such a method is that the salesman, in developing his critical faculties, may find himself more alert to detect faults than to find the good points. It is far easier, for example, to detect a flat note or a bit of "bad" instrumentation (as when the flute sticks out far louder than it has a right to do—which it often does) than to find virtues. Strange as it may seem, many a sale has been lost because the salesman, eager to display his little stock of knowledge, has pointed out some slight discrepancy and failed to notice very obvious virtues. That is simply a bad application of a good sales principle. Look for the merits of a record, not the faults.

While the foregoing relates specifically to the sale of records, it applies as well to the sale of talking machines themselves. After all, the final test of a good instrument is the music it reproduces, whether "jazz" or "classic." The salesman who has learned to use his ears in listening to a record can often find clinching arguments which are far more impressive than long technical discourses as to the mechanical virtues, or the appearance of the machine he wants to sell. If he knows a few quite ordinary things about a violin, for instance, he can often volunteer such information as this: "The violinist is now playing on his G string—a few bars later he will play the same passage again, but on the D string; notice how faithfully the talking machine reveals the difference in tone." As only the really standard makes of machines will reveal fine points of this kind the salesman promptly eliminates many of the competitive arguments used by purveyors of some of the jerry-built affairs which now clutter up the market—remnants of the war period, when instruments thrown together in the hurried scramble of boom-times made their appearance and still remain on the market, though their makers have gone down in the economic slump.

The development of the talking machine business has been so rapid that there has been little time for salesmen to study the fine points of the game. From now on, however, every salesman is up against increasing competition. Not only are there more makes of reputable machines on the market, but there are more dealers and salesmen. The odds are on the man who uses his brains. Both records and phonographs have hitherto "sold themselves" in a way that has not been wholly beneficial to the development of the trade as a staple industry. Salesmen have sold thousands of records whose merits they could only dimly appreciate to customers little if any better equipped. Such records have sold by virtue of the artist's name, the familiarity of the title, or the prestige of chance popularity. The time is now at hand for some intelligent methods of salesmanship and a better understanding of the musical qualities of the goods we are selling.

JENKINS TO REMODEL TOPEKA STORE

TOPEKA, KAN., April 2.—Plans have been practically completed for the enlargement and remodeling of the local branch of the J. W. Jenkins' Sons Music Co., at 833 Kansas avenue, according to Clyde R. Faris, local manager. The improvements include the addition of the second floor to the quarters of the establishment and the possible construction of a third story to the building. Victrolas and Victor records will be featured on the first floor, together with sheet music, music rolls and small goods. The second floor will be given over to the piano department. When completed this store will be one of the largest in the State and one of the finest in the Jenkins' chain. The work will cost approximately $20,000.

The Hecht Co., of 513-517 Seventh street, and the Walker & Thomas Furniture Co., 1013 Seventh street, N. W., Washington, D. C., have secured the agency for Regal records in that territory.

How Much to Spend for Retail Advertising and When and Where to Spend It :: By D.G. Baird

A man of the "live-wire" type went into the talking machine business in a large mid-West city several years ago. He had one of the best machines made and he had a good location. Business was good. People were coming in and asking for talking machines without being asked to do so and many of them had the cash to pay for their machines on the spot.

As already said, this dealer was aggressive. He bought big space in the local papers and ran attractive advertisements of his business. Business improved. The public went on a buying spree such as had never been known before and our dealer advertised all the more. He became intoxicated on prosperity and the more his business grew the more he advertised. There came a time when he actually bought a whole page in a newspaper having a circulation of approximately a quarter of a million—space that cost him more than $500—and ran seven words in that space; not a thing except his slogan in all that space.

This dealer sold an almost unbelievable number of talking machines and records, and yet he went broke. He had to sell out at a time when he was doing more business than any other talking machine dealer in the city. He had gone wild on expansion and undermined his capital.

Was all the money that this man spent for advertising lost? Or perhaps we should ask, rather, was any of it lost? It was not. True, this wild advertiser was bankrupted, but a company was organized and his business was taken over, and to-day that company is still reaping the benefits of his advertising. The present head of the company showed me his books about the end of the past year. The company had done more than three times as much business in December, 1921, as it did the same month of 1920.

Everyone knows very well that business was not what one would call good last December. And yet this company had done more than three times as much business during that month as it had done one year before. The reason? In addition to profiting by the heavy early advertising that had established the business this company spent several times as much for advertising in 1921 as it did in 1920.

Why We Have Business Depressions

Business experts are generally agreed that depressions in business are caused by too much prosperity, or, rather, that the unbusinesslike methods used in business during prosperous times brings on the depressions. When the public begins buying freely business speeds up. The factories increase production. They expand, build, hire, borrow, work overtime and advertise. The merchant does the same. He pours oil on the already well-oiled selling machinery in an endless stream of advertising. When the public are buying of their own free will and accord the merchant advertises his head off in order to persuade them to buy. Business overreaches itself. Money becomes tight. Interest rates soar. Those who have undertaken too much go to the wall and take those who are implicated

Some Reasons Why One Should Advertise More Heavily When Business Is Bad Than When It Is Active

along with them. There is a general movement toward conservatism, and the depression is started. As some one has expressed it, business first curtails advertising, then it curtails production, then it curtails advertising, then it hacks at overhead, then it further curtails advertising, it hacks again at overhead, it stops advertising, then—it tries to explain the situation to the bank.

In other words, when times are good the merchant feels optimistic and he spends freely for advertising, much of which is not necessary. When times are bad he curtails his advertising, or even ceases advertising at all.

People are not very much interested in advertising when times are good, when their pockets are bulging with money that they are determined to spend. They are intensely interested in advertising when times are bad, when they must carefully husband their meager savings. Then they buy what they can afford, and they know that advertising tells them where to find it.

The year 1921 was one of general advertising shrinkage. Business was dull and the majority of advertisers curtailed their appropriations. A few, however, took the opposite course. To take a very well-known example, the Chicago Evening American spent about ten times as much for advertising last year as it had ever spent in any one year before. The result was that this paper gained more than 500,000 lines of advertising, while it is said that every one of its competitors lost more than 500,000 lines.

When a train is speeding along over level road at sixty miles an hour the engineer shortens his valve stroke and partly closes the throttle. It doesn't take very much steam to keep the train going at the fast rate of speed. But when he approaches a heavy grade he lengthens his valve stroke and opens the throttle wider and wider. His engine must have more power to negotiate the grade without too great loss of speed. It would probably stall if not given this added power.

Merchants adopt opposite tactics. When their business is going along at top speed, against little resistance, they put on the full steam of advertising. They increase overhead. They are prodigal in their expenditures. Then when business hits a hard grade they cut down on the advertising, their overhead, their expenditures of all kinds, and hope to make the grade on less power than they have been consuming on the level stretch. They slow up, of course, and many of them stall dead still.

All of which is meant to emphasize the fact that one should advertise more heavily when business is bad than when business is good. It is very true that the returns will not be so great, but that is to be expected. Much of the business enjoyed during prosperous times comes of itself, while it takes advertising to pull it in during times of depression. Therefore, now is the logical time to advertise.

Where to Advertise

There are almost unlimited numbers of advertising mediums nowadays, but for the retail dealer there is nothing to compare with the local newspapers. Direct mail is good, if properly

IF you, a Columbia Dealer, will bear in mind that you and the Columbia Graphophone Company are in partnership, you will realize that we are not merely concerned with selling you records, but are anxious to help you sell them, speed up your turnover, and increase your profits.

Some of the greatest selling helps offered by us to Columbia Dealers are the Monthly Display Service, Hearing-Room Hangers, Monthly Record Supplement, and the Mid-month postcards. Dealers who use intelligently and consistently these aids to move records quickly find their sales going up and selling costs coming down each month.

Advertising operates in the same way for dealers as it does for other advertisers. The dealer who spends $10.00 for advertising gets more than double the return that another dealer gets who spends $5.00 for advertising.

Intelligent buying is 50% of intelligent selling

You know that's true, of course. The more intelligently you buy, the easier you can sell.

Now if you could hear, long in advance, the records that are to be brought out later, how easy it would be for you to pick the winners that would go big for your trade.

That is just what we are enabling you to do with our Sample Record Service.

The plan is this: We send you a complete set of the sample records that will be released during the following month.

That gives you plenty of time to play this confidential set of advance releases, consult with your salespeople, and decide which ones will prove fast sellers in your store.

When you have picked the records that your past experience tells you will move fast, make up your order.

This plan relieves you of all guesswork in the ordering of records. You know in advance just what the new releases are, how they are rendered, the technique—everything that contributes to the sale of the record.

The man who sits back and waits for business to come to him in these days has a long wait. The man who by aggressive selling methods, good, timely advertising, and real salesmanship goes after business, finds plenty of it.

Take advantage of every selling help that is available to you. Remember, we are behind you, ready, willing, anxious to help you keep your record stock moving quickly.

THE PERFECT PLAN

AMOUNT TO SPEND FOR RETAIL ADS

handled, but much direct mail advertising lands in the waste basket without a friendly glance. Billboards, car cards, catalogs and programs are all more or less valuable advertising mediums and these should be used some, but the wise advertiser to the general public will devote at least 75 per cent of his publicity to the local newspapers.

Use liberal space, and by all means use cuts. I know a dealer who began running very small advertisements and who lost money on his business for more than a year. His friends advised him to sell out and try something else, but he had studied the situation very carefully and decided that he knew the cause of his lack of success. He doubled the size of his ads and business improved. He added on a few more inches to his space and business improved still more. To-day he is one of the leading men in his line. His first ads had been too small to attract attention.

There are, of course, many things that enter into determining the amount of space one should use, and it is therefore hard to say just how much even the average talking machine dealer should buy. Then, too, one should use larger space in a paper that has a small circulation than in one that has a large circulation. The cost of the space depends on the circulation of the medium and, while it seems pretty expensive business to advertise in some of the larger mediums, it is always advisable to choose them in preference to the cheaper ones that reach only a few readers. The back page of a certain national weekly magazine costs $10,000 per issue, besides the cost of preparing the ad and the cuts, yet California fruit growers find that it pays to buy this space to advertise their raisins that sell for 10 or 15 cents a package. Why? Because their ad in this magazine is seen by about ten million people.

Use cuts. If it is worth while to spend any money at all for advertising it is worth while to spend a little more and prepare such ads as will do the best work. A cut adds immeasurably to the pulling power of an advertisement. And it is far better to get people interested in illustrations. Just a cut of a talking machine, while better than no cut at all, is not of very great attractiveness. People are interested in people, especially if those people are doing something. Therefore, put people into the ads and have those people doing something. Dancing is very good, though it has been used a great deal. One manufacturer has adopted a figure of a beautiful woman adoring the instrument. Another has a woman seated on the floor, leaning her head against the machine. One successful dealer features a deliveryman just arriving before the door of a happy purchaser, who is standing on the porch wearing a happy smile. All of these are good, but if you can get something original, so much the better.

It is seldom that a dealer asks, "How much can I spend for advertising?" The question usually is, "How little can I spend and get any returns from my investment?" He really fears that advertising will not bring him returns as it does others, and he doesn't wish to lose any more on it than he can help.

How Much to Spend for Advertising

There are five different methods commonly used in determining how much to spend for advertising. There is, first, what may be called the spasmodic method. It is usually adopted by the little, one-man store, where the proprietor does everything and not much of anything. He plans no advertising work and he works no advertising plan. He pays his advertising agency for what it knows, but he doesn't let it know anything. When he feels optimistic he runs an ad, when he feels pessimistic he wishes he hadn't run it. This plan is practically worthless.

Another plan is to spend the same amount for advertising as for rent. This is a rather queer plan on which to base an advertising budget, but it is at least a plan, and the dealer who thinks as much of advertising as he does of rent is on the road to acquainting the public with his store. It is an easy plan, because he can divide his yearly rental by fifty-two and arrive at his weekly expenditure for publicity. The objection to this plan is that it is not based on common-sense merchandising.

Remember, rent is rent and advertising is advertising, and the two are quite different. The amount of rental is the same each week or month, whereas the amount spent for advertising at different seasons should vary. Then, too, the appropriation based on rental may be entirely too small, or even too large.

Some firms, particularly large ones, set aside all trade discounts for advertising. These houses also receive advertising allowances from the manufacturers, in many instances, but this frequently leads to disagreements. One of the worst features about this method is the temptation to overbuy. The manufacturer offers a little better discount, or a little larger slice of advertising, with a big order, and the dealer falls. Statistics show that more than 50 per cent of retail establishments that fail do so because of overbuying.

Last year's record is very commonly taken as a basis for figuring the advertising budget for this year. This is particularly inviting to the dealer who has had a bad year and really fears to invest anything at all in advertising for the new year. The method is faulty because last year may have been vastly different from what this year will be. Not only so, but it assumes exactly the same basis as does the rental plan, inasmuch as it is arbitrary and makes no allowance for conditions that may arise.

Probably the most common-sense method in common use is that of taking the average sales volume for a period of five or more years and appropriating from 2 to 5 or more per cent of

Wallace REDUCING Records

Now Selling Through Dealers!

THIS famous reducing course is now available to the trade. It has been advertised on a scale that made it known throughout America. The results it accomplishes have done the rest.

Display a single window strip or wall sign announcing that you have Wallace Reducing Records, and you will feel the full voltage of the demand which has been established.

More than fifty thousand sets of these records have been sold direct while we have been building to a production basis which could handle dealer volume. What people will write for, send money for, wait for, they want. The Wallace course is sold with less trouble, in shorter time, and at smaller cost than attends the sale of one or two amusement records. And each course sold means six dollars profit for the store.

There is satisfaction in handling a proposition of this high grade. Quality is apparent in the Wallace course. The value is obvious. It appeals to discriminating people. It is novel, of sparkling interest, and it does all that is said of it. See following pages for particulars, prices and terms.

This Window Keeps the Cash Drawer Busy

IN Wallace records you are offered something of wide interest, on which the pioneering has all been done. The Wallace reducing course has already been advertised stronger than many things which have been on the market for years. We give you many sales helps; store and window material of unusual attraction; tested plans for selling.

One day's results from a Wallace window will surprise you. A small announcement sold 100 sets in a Chicago department store. In an outlying Chicago record shop where a window demonstration was made, fifty sets were sold within the week. In a town of 6,000 population the dealer sold twenty-six sets in four days.

You will find it true of Wallace Reducing Records that they almost sell themselves. People have read about them; heard them at their friends' houses. They reduce men or women, young or old, and they always make good. Women offer the biggest market, for forty per cent of all women are over the weight that fashions of the day demand.

Bear in mind the ease with which sales of these records are made. No need to play them over. No bewildering list of numbers from which to choose. No numbers out of stocks nor overstocks. The set is a unit; there is just one kind; five records with charts and full instructions in one, compact, sealed box. Wallace records are ready sellers — hand out the box, and ring up $15.

For the customer who asks questions, we supply you a record that tells all about the course and answers every query. The same full explanatory record is on the back of the first lesson in every box. There is nothing left for the dealer to do but sell the courses, and each one represents six dollars' profit.

The lessons themselves are intensely interesting. Wallace, originator of the method, commands and counts the full lesson through, and the full orchestral accompaniment makes them irresistible. You will have to hear a lesson played to appreciate the enthusiasm the melody-method of reducing arouses. The records are of exceptional quality; you will find that they are not excelled by any in tonal clearness, durability, or beauty of finish.

Everybody Knows Wallace

HUNDREDS of thousands of dollars have already been invested in advertising Wallace Reducing Records—and campaigns now under way are even larger than all that has gone before. As dealer distribution is developed, local pressure is brought to bear, connecting up the Wallace dealer with national advertisements.

Full-page advertisements of these records have appeared, and are now appearing, in almost every big magazine of national circulation. They have made Wallace known wherever people are proud of appearance and concerned for their comfort and health.

We reproduce some recent page advertisements that have caused thousands of persons to write and inquire for the course. No doubt scores of these are from the territory you serve, and would purchase Wallace Reducing Records from the store that has them conveniently at hand.

In Every Set of Records $6 or more Profit

WALLACE reducing courses retail for $15, and the discount to the dealer is 40% and more. So, there is a substantial profit in the sale of each course. When the number of courses you can sell every month is considered, what you can make handling them is seen to be well worth while. We believe it quite conservative to state that any dealer can readily realize enough through the sale of these records to cover his rent and light; perhaps the salary of a clerk or two.

Remember, the course is in ideal form for a store sale. It is complete in itself, requires no explanation except the one in the box, takes hold and gets results so quickly that your customers are fully "sold" on it before the next visit to your store, and this novel method of reducing is one which is invariably talked about, and its use spread far and wide through word-of-mouth. Whole communities take up Wallace soon as one set is introduced.

Send today for Wallace Reducing Records, and window and store material for featuring them. You need not place a large order; we prefer that you first experience the real demand so sure to develop from your first announcement that you have them. We are prepared to handle your re-orders with dispatch, and can fill orders same day of their receipt. We will include a selling record for store use.

this for the advertising budget. By basing the appropriation on the sales volume for a period of years one arrives at the general average during both good times and bad and by allowing a margin of 3 or more per cent variance in the appropriations one is prepared to meet such conditions as may arise. Are we actually entering upon a period of assured prosperity? Are people beginning to buy without being urged? Then cut down the advertising gradually, reaching as low a level as 2 per cent when business is at the peak. Are we in the midst of a business depression? Are people shopping around and buying reluctantly? Then increase the advertising budget to 5 per cent or more.

For example, what was the outlook on January 1 of this year? Very gloomy. Professional optimists were assuring us that prosperity was just around the corner, that we would be enjoying good business by Spring, but we knew better. We knew that business conditions were improving, but that they would not be good for some time to come. Then on January 1 we should have set the advertising budget for the year at the maximum.

It may seem hard to pour money into advertising when there seems to be little or no business in sight, but that is the way to get business and to keep the grand total somewhere near an even level. When business is good and one feels prosperous and doesn't mind spending for advertising is the very time to ease up on the expense and to "salt away" some profits for the dull times that are sure to follow later on.

Now is the time to advertise for all you're worth. Keep that in mind!

ECLIPSE CO. TO BUILD FACTORY

Selling the Talking Machine as a Musical Instrument

Written for The World by L. C. FOSTER

From the early days of the talking machine those members of the industry with vision and definite ideas regarding the probable development of the industry have emphasized particularly the point that talking machines should be sold as musical instruments—in other words, that the public be impressed with the music the machines produce, or reproduce, rather than with the general character of the mechanism itself. The steadily growing interest being exhibited in talking machine cabinets of various designs, those that follow period styles and the other general forms of cabinet construction such as console or table models, make the reiteration of the suggestion that talking machines be sold for their musical qualities particularly pertinent.

The talking machine, first and last, is a musical instrument, and its attractiveness lies in the entertainment it is able to offer rather than in the fact that it adds to the appearance of the apartment in which it is placed. There is no question but that an artistic cabinet will have an effect upon the ultimate sale of the instrument, but the cabinet should by no means have the first appeal. There have been and are being produced most elaborate cabinet designs that reflect great credit upon the artistry of the cabinet or furniture maker, but these artistic designs, so far as the talking machine is concerned, are incidental. The first thing to do is to sell the customer the musical instrument and let second consideration be given to the physical form of the cabinet.

It has happened quite frequently that beautiful examples of the cabinet maker's art have proven unsatisfactory from a musical standpoint, more attention being given to the outward appearance of the machine than to the quality of its music-producing equipment. There are, perhaps, manufacturers who will differ on this viewpoint, who will declare that the public is tired of the set form of cabinet construction and demands something that is both artistic and exclusive, but these manufacturers fail to take into consideration the fact that the basis of the talking machine business to-day and all of its further development lies primarily in record sales.

There can, as a rule, be sold only one machine to a customer, but the opportunity for selling that customer records is unlimited. If, therefore, at the outset he buys simply a piece of furniture without musical quality he soon becomes disgusted and ceases his record purchases. If, on the other hand, he is able to secure an instrument that is of high quality musically, he is likely to remain a record customer for an indefinite period while at the same time enjoying the possession of an artistic piece of cabinet work.

The value of the high-class period cabinet lies in the ability of the dealer through featuring such cabinets to increase the money volume of his machine sales. When a customer is finally sold on the music-producing qualities of the talking machine it is up to the dealer to persuade him to buy a period model at $200 or $300 in place of a regular model at $100 or less, but the chief idea is to sell music first, then will come the adornments.

Kiraly Erno, Columbia Artist, Helps Dealers Sell Records—"Open House" Attracts Thousands

On his recent concert tour in this country Kiraly Erno, popular Hungarian artist, recording for the Columbia library, was the guest of L. Fazekas, Columbia dealer, 1463 First avenue, New York, who featured him in a special sales effort. From ten in the morning until six in the evening Mr. Erno held open house at Mr. Fazekas' store, autographing his photos and presenting one to every record buyer. Over 2,000 people visited the store, and at times the crowd became so great on the sidewalk in front that it was necessary to have the police clear the way.

As a result of this sales effort Mr. Fazekas sold 450 Kiraly Erno records during the day. At noon a luncheon was served in honor of the artist, at which a number of Columbia sales representatives were present. Mr. Erno expects to return to the United States very shortly on another concert tour, and at present is under contract to appear in Berlin and other European capitals.

OKEH FOREIGN LANGUAGE RECORDS

Important Activities Announced by A. Thallmayer—Now Issuing Records With Okeh and Odeon Labels—Three Hundred Records in Catalog—Sung in Several Languages

The foreign language record division of the General Phonograph Corp. is making rapid progress in the introduction of these records to the dealers throughout the country, and A. Thallmayer, head of this department, states that during the past few months Okeh dealers have evinced unusual interest in the sales possibilities of foreign language records.

Since taking over the extensive Odeon library, the General Phonograph Corp. has arranged to issue its foreign language records in two labels, similar to those shown herewith. Okeh and Odeon label records are now being issued in the following languages: Bohemian, German, Hebrew-Jewish, Hungarian, Mexican, Polish, Russian, Scandinavian and Slovak. French, Turkish and Greek records will be added to the library in a few weeks bearing both labels. In the Italian library three labels are used, as, in addition to the Okeh and Odeon labels, the Fonotipia library is included in this language.

The Okeh Label

The Odeon Label

At the present time over 300 records are listed in the foreign language catalog of the General Phonograph Corp. and new lists will be issued the first of each month. Advance lists are going out one month ahead of the releases so that the dealers may have ample opportunity to anticipate their requirements.

In a chat with The World, Mr. Thallmayer stated that there was a very heavy demand for the Jewish and Italian records in the catalog, especially those records applicable to the Easter season. One of the most popular records that has been introduced in the foreign language record field recently is the German record of “Bum-mel Petrus,” which has been one of the sensations of the General Phonograph Corp.’s foreign language catalog, and which has met with a sale far beyond all expectations.

RAINBOW MUSIC STORE OPENS

LEBANON, IND., April 2.—The Rainbow Music Store is the name of a fine new establishment recently opened on Meridian street, this city, by Armond R. Akers. Rainbow records and Starr phonographs, as well as a complete line of pianos and sheet music, are handled.

Among the things which make a man stand out from his fellows in the business world are grit, effort, the power of concentration and a willingness to work incessantly.

WHY CREDITS SHOULD BE WATCHED

Beware of the Prospect Who Has a Poor Reputation With the Butcher and Grocer

There are many people in the average community who lack responsibility and the talking machine dealer should exercise every possible precaution to avoid losses by making sales to irresponsible prospects. As a matter of fact there are enough worthy prospects in any community to warrant the avoidance of making sales on the credit basis to such people as these.

The danger of losses by making sales to people of such character can be avoided in a great measure if the dealer or credit man has a knowledge of human nature. Probably the most effective way is to prevent the salesman or canvassers from approaching these people. When the prospect list is made up every available bit of information concerning the character of the prospect should be noted beside the person’s name. Such information as the salary of the head of the house, etc., is important, but of far greater importance to the dealer is information as to whether the prospect is living above his means and to find out if possible if there is another source of income which would justify the mode of living of the prospect. It certainly is extremely poor policy to extend credit to a prospect who lives a hundred-dollar existence on a fifty-dollar income and who has a poor reputation with the grocer and butcher. If a householder fails to meet the bills of the butcher and grocer he surely will be just as lax, if not more so, in making payments on a musical instrument.

On the other hand, the size of income does not enter into the situation so much in the case of a man whose reputation for integrity is sound. The laborer who earns twenty dollars per week and the business man whose income is one hundred dollars per week are both good risks only in proportion to their honesty and desire to meet payments promptly.

BRING NOTED ARTISTS TO AKRON

Work of Windsor-Poling Co. Much Appreciated by Music-loving Public

AKRON, O., April 4.—The Windsor-Poling Co., exclusive Victor store here, has made possible the appearance of some of the world-renowned concert artists in Akron recently. The Eight Famous Victor Artists appeared at the city armory under auspices of the music firm. Sousa and his band appeared here on March 29 and Schumann-Heink April 1. Mr. Poling told The World representative that the people of Akron were giving the concerts splendid support and in all probability other artists would be brought here next season.

A Fair Knowledge of Music Is a Big Factor in the Success of the Retail Record Salesman

The salesman who aims to succeed in the retail department of the talking machine business can aid himself materially by acquiring a knowledge of the music from the standard records, both operatic, concert and popular, which he is handling. The customer never fails to be impressed with the standing of the salesman who knows something about the history of the music on the record, its composer and the artist who records it. To acquire this knowledge necessitates some time and concentration, but it is a valuable acquisition to any salesman no matter how competent he may be in the domain of merchandising.

There is a fascination, anyway, in learning to grasp music's full meaning, and the salesman has a rare opportunity in this connection, because he has at hand vocal and instrumental photographs, so to speak, of the work of the great masters as well as the popular hits of the day rendered by great orchestras, singers and instrumentalists. It is not necessary for him to attend concerts, or to hear or see in person the great artists—although he should do so whenever he possibly can—but his knowledge of music is no longer limited.

On this subject the writer came across a very good article in the New York American the other day in which the writer discoursed on an analysis of the method of association that makes for a better understanding and appreciation of music. It is worth reading by the salesman, and by everyone who is interested in the talking machine business, because, as we said before, the salesman who has a knowledge of music is best equipped to do a successful business. The article follows:

"Hanging over my phonograph is a beautiful landscape painted by a certain Rudolf Wilde. It represents an approaching storm; the trees in the background are wind-blown. In the right foreground stands an old and stalwart oak tree clothed in the florid beauty of Autumnal color. A patch of sunlight floods golden yellow on the greensward that carpets the earth like a thick covering of velvet.

"The phonograph and a painted canvas! The mediums of two interpretations of the beautiful. The magic landscape that grew from under the painter's brush; the liquid melody of music, that gift to posterity of an inspired composer. Both breathe their message with equal conviction, but with a difference.

"This difference lies in the individual's understanding of the story each tells. If we take two people and play the same selection for each and then ask them to write down their impressions the probability is that they will be at a loss to properly describe them. The layman cannot, as a general rule, understand and interpret the theme of a composition that is new to him.

"In the case of the painting one is almost certain to describe it clearly, even in detail. This is simply because it has familiar associations with something else he has seen. We readily recognize a painting of a tree, a house or an approaching storm because they are familiar objects to our vision. The rare beauty of color and composition get their message across because they are associated with and take on forms that we know and understand.

"Music is an art more in the abstract as compared with that of painting and does not take on such well-defined and easily recognizable forms. Much is left to the imagination, and unless we use this faculty it is difficult to grasp the meaning of a composition. If we learn to identify the distinguishing characteristics that mark one form of composition from another it will be of inestimable assistance.

"Perhaps the easiest way to learn is to follow this rule of association. If we wish to take the full measure of enjoyment from music we must, by one system or another, learn to analyze and classify its different forms.

"Let us liken a musical composition, in structure, to a tree. The trunk is the predominant theme or motif; the branches are the variations of this theme and the secondary movements; the leaves are its color. The tempo may be likened to the movement of the wind-blown branches as in a storm, or the gentle swaying as in a balmy Summer breeze, to the rhythm of a lullaby.

"In a general sense this will give us a good conception of musical construction. There should be a certain adherence to form in music, and this comparison illustrates their relative importance simply.

"When you listen to music, try to pick out the predominant theme and classify it as romantic, dramatic, descriptive, poetic, and so forth. Then distinguish the secondary movements and the by-plays in its narrative. Note its tempo for changes in the action or as a key to the general character and disposition of the composition. Appreciate its color in the fine gradations of expression, the contrasts and the effectiveness of its arrangement.

"There is much more, very much more, but if you will try to understand, and it is easy enough, you will soon be rewarded by a keener pleasure and a consequent broader horizon of vision. The happiness we get out of life is measured largely by our ability to appreciate the beautiful, and appreciation is confined entirely within the limits of our understanding."

Isn't this admirably presented?

Some Essential Points in Record Salesmanship

By MARK W. DUNCAN

The three essential points in record salesmanship—in fact, in any salesmanship—are confidence of your merchandise speed in selling and knowing when to close the contract. I never consider that I have made a sale if my customer leaves the store with only the record he asked for. When he came into the store and asked for a certain record it was nothing more than an invitation to me to sell him something else. At least, I always try.

Now, to make these real sales it seems to me that the whole secret is to inspire the customer with lots of confidence in my ability to judge good records. I do not consider the selling of records any different from other lines of merchandise in this respect. The psychology of the thing is the same whether you are selling peanuts or automobiles or records. The customer must be led to have faith in my word first, last and all the time. To get this result it is necessary to make the customer feel that I have a personal interest in him and his welfare. I honestly believe that a salesman has not only to pretend but to be actually interested in each individual customer. Make it as real as possible, however. Some folks are very quick to detect insincerity, so be careful. As soon as you can make him feel that you are really interested in him and what he wants the situation is in your hands.

Then get him in the habit of saying "Yes." Make positive statements and follow them with questions that will produce affirmative answers. Don't talk dollars and cents any more than is absolutely necessary, and don't pay any attention to unfavorable remarks on his part until you are forced to. Keep him in the affirmative mood, for as long as he says "yes" to you he is feeling that you are right. I have often noticed that the very person you might imagine oversold is more likely to come back for more than the man who simply got what he asked for.

With regard to the more mechanical side of record selling, my main suggestion would be to make it snappy. Don't waste your time and the customer's patience, or vice versa, in a long-drawn-out history of the record. Tell just enough to inspire curiosity and interest and let the record do the rest. Don't bore him by playing the record until the end if he does not give you a favorable idea of it. Make him think that he is getting a "sample taste" of a future pleasure, and it is only logical that he will want more.

Finally, close your sale definitely. When the customer has reached the "boiling point"—to quote the cook-book—pour at once; don't let him cool off gradually. Take advantage of the confidence he now has in you and make up his mind for him without hesitation or any appreciable delay.

To summarize, be sincerely interested; work fast and close with decision. Above all and throughout all remember that the customer wouldn't be there at all if he hadn't at least slightly wanted to be sold. Convince him that you are satisfying his wants to the best of your ability and his interest.

PEDDLING RECORD MUSIC

Enterprising Individual in New York Carries About a Small Machine and Several Records and Furnishes Three Tunes for One Dime.

In the Bronx section of New York City a rather aged individual has found a new way for luring the nickels from the pockets of those who are known to be careful of their expenditures. This particular man travels about with a small talking machine hanging suspended from a strap around his neck while in a box below are a half dozen or so of the latest records. He makes his way into the numerous bake shops and restaurants and when some generous-hearted soul contributes a dime all the patrons of the place are entertained with three talking machine selections. There must be money in the scheme for the music peddler has been at it for some time.

Business Recently Sold to Abe Chasin, of New York City, Who Had Planned to Add Wireless Apparatus to Output

LINDEN, N. J., April 1.—The plant of the Century Phonograph Co. was completely destroyed by fire recently. The business was housed in a two-story frame structure on Linden avenue, and damage is estimated at $10,000. Only partial insurance was carried on the plant. The business was recently purchased by Abe Chasin, of New York City, with the intention of starting operations on a large scale by adding wireless apparatus to the output. The plant has not been in operation recently, pending the carrying out of these new plans.

PROS AND CONS ON THE CIRCULATING RECORD LIBRARY

Recrudescence of Interest in the Circulating Record Library Despite the Fact That Many Dealers Hold the Plan Impracticable—Some Developments in a Western City

The record library idea has again cropped up in the West, this time in Fort Wayne, despite the fact that various experiments made during years past have demonstrated that the library idea is not practical either from the standpoint of the individual operating the library, in the matter of profits, or from the standpoint of the machine owner who is desirous of having records that reproduce properly and are not worn.

In this case a department store has opened a record library through which subscribers may change their old records for new ones, each subscriber being called upon at the outset to provide three new records for the library. The service charge is $1 per annum. The scheme does not show any features that may be considered new and, judging from past experiences, both the store and the customers will be tired of the plan before it progresses very far. Dealers in the past have given thought to the record library idea, but the chief drawback has been that the records are bound to wear, and where they are not the permanent property of the subscriber are likely to be subjected to careless treatment. In case of the early libraries it was found that after a record had been into ten or a dozen homes its musical qualities were not such as to prove a very strong advertisement for the talking machine.

In the early days of the player-piano the library question was tried out very extensively, and even in the case of rolls, which are so made that they can be played hundreds of times without showing wear, it was found that the cost of operating the service was out of all proportion to the income that could be obtained from rental or service charges.

It is probable that in the case of the Fort Wayne department store the library plan idea is being tried out for the purpose of bringing people into the store on the assumption that once in they will make purchases in either the talking machine or some other department, but even under such circumstances it is likely to be found that the advertising will prove costly.

While the record library question is under discussion, the following rules adopted by the Fort Wayne institution may prove of interest:

1. A nominal charge of one dollar ($1) per annum is made to each member to help defray the expense of handling the exchange service. These membership dues are used to put new records into your library.
2. Each member agrees to furnish three (3) playable records from his home to start the library. Each record furnished must be subject to the approval of the secretary before it will be accepted.

3. Each club member is entitled to remove three (3) records from the library and keep them in his possession for a period of twelve (12) days. A penalty of three (3) cents per day per record will be charged for each day over the twelve days that the records are kept.

4. No telephone or mail selections will be allowed.

TO RECORD FOR COLUMBIA CO.

Frank Westphal and Rainbo Orchestra to Record Exclusively for the Columbia Library

The Columbia Graphophone Co. announced this week that arrangements had been completed whereby Frank Westphal and his Rainbo Orchestra would record exclusively for the Columbia library. Mr. Westphal's organization made several records for the company on the recent visit of the recording executives to Chicago, and these records were successful beyond all expectations. Plans are being made to feature Frank Westphal and his orchestra as one of the leading dance organizations of the country, and an intensive sales and advertising campaign will be inaugurated very shortly.

Frank Westphal and his Rainbo Orchestra constitute the principal attraction at the Rainbow Gardens in Chicago, one of the leaders in Chicago's amusement world, and since the installation of this orchestra at the Rainbow Gardens the patronage has increased by leaps and bounds. Frank Westphal is well known to theatre-goers throughout the country, as for many years he was a vaudeville headliner on the Keith circuit.

How Events of Current Interest Can Be Turned Into Profits by Merchants :: Arthur A. Young

By Arthur A. Young

The final argument in getting business is to arouse the customer's interest. The headline of all effective advertising aims primarily on getting the customer so interested that he will naturally read the rest of your advertisement. Show windows that display a stunt of novel appeal invariably attract the crowd.

Interest may be artificially stimulated by repeated presentation of the same article before the public's eye. In many instances interest may not be stimulated, as it will be found that the public is already greatly interested in your particular article. When the crest of such interest is at its height it is time for you to seize the opportunity and capitalize on it. Current events can be made to bear fruit in money returns if you will only take the trouble to look out for them and time your advertisements and window dressing in harmony with their appeal.

When Edison's lists of questions were played up all over the country publishers of encyclopedias and dictionaries were alert to possibilities and metropolitan papers carried miles of advertising which showed how Edison's questions could be answered. When musical comedies and operas are in season interest in these amusements has led dealers in talking machines and musical instruments to invent novel methods of attracting the public's attention to their wares.

One of the shops on Michigan Boulevard, Chicago, presented a very beautiful display of talking machine records in the show window during the opera season. In the background was a graceful bamboo arch, from the ends of which hung colored Chinese lanterns. To these were fastened artificial sunflowers with a talking machine record in the heart of each. The floor was covered with matting and there were several boxes on which records were displayed. A talking machine in front bore a card which invited passers-by to step inside and listen to the particular opera singer to be starred in the evening. The card, which listed the number of records the singer had made, was changed every day in accordance with the opera program.

Another merchant appealed to his customers in another way. He placed an advertisement in the papers which said that records of the singers could be heard through the telephone and thus a selection made without any inconvenience. A telephone is installed in close connection with a talking machine. Whenever a request is made the record is placed upon the instrument and the horn is turned towards the transmitter. The sound travels over the wire as perfectly as the human voice.

Radio telephony is now very popular. Some of the city newspapers have even started a department in which radio programs are printed. A number of talking machine stores have broadcasted their record lists by means of radio, and in this way have cashed in on their progressiveness. Capitalizing this craze brought business.

PROVED RECORD COULD BE SOLD

C. C. Baker and His Staff Give Demonstration of Concentrated Effort in Disposing of Record Believed to Be Slow Seller—Some Conclusions

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—"There is always a certain satisfaction in winning a bet," said C. C. Baker, Victor dealer, 43 South High street, in commenting on the wager recently placed on his salesmanship by two friends, also Victor dealers. During one of his recent trips East Mr. Baker was ascertaining the relative sales possibility of a number of records. In coming across the record "Moto Perpetuo" (Perpetual Motion), a Heifetz record, Mr. Baker was told that it would not sell well. That did not "listen good" to Mr. Baker and he immediately said, "I'll show you that it can be sold."

It happened that Mr. Baker had another friend there who was listening in on this challenge and who put up the bet.

Coming back to Columbus Mr. Baker called his sales force together and asked them to concentrate their efforts on this particular record until every last one was sold, but to sell it on its merits only. He allowed them one week for the work.

Every person in the sales force listened to this record and wrote out the outstanding qualities about it. Later they compared notes. Finally they decided the best points about it and began calling this record to the prospective buyers' attention. To make a long story short, every one of the forty-seven records that Mr. Baker had in stock was sold inside of four and one-half days, with additional orders to be filled.

"I learned a big lesson from this wager," said Mr. Baker. "First of all, I am convinced now that this is a popular record and that the public can be educated to like it. Secondly, any record can be sold provided the salesman knows what he is selling to his customers. In other words, he must know the qualities of the goods he is asking his patrons to buy. Last, but not least, I found out that it takes a sales force that is intelligent and co-operates with you to put a thing across. My friend probably would not have won the bet had it not been for the excellent co-operation I received from my people. The credit, if any is to be given, should go to the young men and women in my store."

DELAWARE CONCERN CHARTERED

The Keystone Recording Laboratories have been granted a charter of incorporation under the laws of the State of Delaware, with a capital of $20,000. The new concern will engage in the manufacture of records for talking machines.

ANOTHER KREISLER IN THE FIELD

One of the many interesting numbers featured in the Victor Co.'s advance list of records for May is the first recording by Hugo Kreisler, of the "Serenade Espagnole" by Chaminade-Kreisler. Hugo Kreisler is a brother of the more famous (at least in America) violinist, Fritz Kreisler. Meanwhile Hugo has won great fame abroad as a violoncellist. This record demonstrates that his popularity has been worthily won. It is interesting to note that in this first record of Hugo Kreisler he is accompanied on the piano by his brother Fritz.

DYER EMPLOYES HONOR OFFICERS

ST. PAUL, MINN., April 3.—An interesting special souvenir musical program was recently prepared by the Employes' Social Club, of W. J. Dyer & Bro., Northwestern distributors of Victor talking machines, as a compliment to the retiring officers of the club—Bernard T. Mertens, president, and Patrice Barrette, secretary. The program included vocal and instrumental solos.

LARGER QUARTERS IN ALLIANCE, O.

J. H. Johnson's Sons Music Co. Prepares to Enlarge Its Music Department

ALLIANCE, O., April 6.—Expansion of business has resulted in the acquiring by the J. H. Johnson's Sons Music Co. here of additional floor space, which has been given over exclusively for display and salesrooms for pianos and talking machines, records and rolls.

This firm is one of the oldest in the city, starting as a furniture business in October, 1905.

In January, 1913, was added a line of pianos and phonographs as a sideline. So fast has this department grown that additional floor space became necessary and the owners decided several months ago to make it a separate department, under the supervision of W. B. Johnson.

In January, 1920, A. C. and W. B. Johnson bought out their father's interest in the concern and have since that time conducted business under the name of J. H. Johnson's Sons. The concern features many of the leading makes of pianos and talking machines.

:: SELFISHNESS ::

By EDWARD FRASER CARSON

In the world there are two unforgivable sins. They are Selfishness and Ingratitude.

And the basest of these is Selfishness, for Selfishness is the base of Ingratitude.

Edward Fraser Carson

If you are an employe, don't expect to be paid in cash for every time you turn your hand. If you do, you will get nothing but cash—and cash is cold. The youth who starts life determined to do nothing for nothing will find he is paid in his own coin and the measure of his payment will be generous.

Sometimes Selfishness may seem to put a dollar in your pocket, but when the dollar gets there it crowds out everything else. For a man who only works to make money will find that others will work for him only for the same wages, and the greatest work of the world is not done for money.

The worst thing you can say about a man is that he is "close-fisted," for a miser never has a friend and the friendless man is poor indeed, whatever his wealth in dollars may be. The business founded on Selfishness is as a house built on sand, but the business that aims to help the other fellow stands as on a rock.

All that money is for is to spend—but spend it wisely, young man, and you may live in happiness and comfort. Cling to it and these things will shun you. For Unselfishness in business is as bread upon the water. It is the secret of prosperity, and only upon it can be built real success in life.

As you advance in years you will come to realize more and more that in business a good name is better than riches. It will bring Riches.

The Selfish man must haul his own load. Remember the wheel which turns. That which was at the bottom becomes the top and what was at the top becomes the bottom.

Remember, too, the story of the Lion and the Mouse. The Boy you help to-day may be the Man to whom you may have to look for help yourself to-morrow.

With thy customer be fair, but better it is to be generous. Hold thy head high and stand straight—until you lean over backward if need be. For a little more than a "Square Deal" will be remembered by your customer long after you have spent the few dollars you would otherwise make. But a little less than a "Square Deal" will never be forgotten.

Don't promise your customer more than you can perform, but so guard your tongue that when you are called upon to make good your word you can do just a little more than that which you promised. And when called upon to make good your promises, act promptly, cheerfully. To do justice grudgingly is but one step this side of not doing it at all.

Therefore, I say unto you: Young man, Give. Give of your time and of your experience. Give sympathy. Give encouragement. Give a helping hand. Help the other fellow. It is the greatest, the only real joy in life.

And if there be no other reason, you will find that it pays, for the day may come when you yourself may need these things, and as a man soweth so shall he reap.

Therefore, be not as the man who so closely follows the cent that he cannot see the dollar that is just ahead.

EIGHT VICTOR ARTISTS IN OHIO

Increased Record Sales Follow Appearance of Artists in Various Cities

CANTON, O., April 4.—Record sales were stimulated at the stores of the George C. Wille Co., W. R. Zollinger & Co. and the Klein-Heffelman-Zollars Co. as the result of the personal appearance here recently of the Eight Famous Victor Artists in the City Auditorium. The entertainers, who have made an annual visit here for many years, made good again, and their program included many recent Victor releases. It is estimated that fully 4,000 people heard the artists. The Victor Artists appeared later in Akron and Youngstown, and were also scheduled for a concert in Wheeling, W. Va.

L. M. COLE VISITS NEW YORK

L. M. Cole, sales manager of the Iroquois Sales Corporation, was a visitor to New York last week, calling upon some of his friends in the trade. Upon leaving New York he visited dealers in several of the important up-State cities where important deals were pending for Granby and Okeh record agencies. Mr. Cole stated that conditions were showing a steady improvement and that the dealers were generally confident regarding their future activities.

DUO APPLIANCE CORP. CHARTERED

A charter of incorporation was recently granted to the Duo Appliance Corp., of New York City, for the manufacture of talking machine record protectors. It is capitalized at $5,000 and incorporated by E. B. Raymond and P. M. Boesen.

Dealers Tie Up Publicity With Artists' Concerts — White's Store Expands—Other News

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—An event of much local interest during the past month was the first appearance here of Jascha Heifetz, the prominent violin virtuoso and Victor artist, under the auspices of the Women's Music Club, and although no official "Heifetz Week" was declared the local Victor dealers arranged elaborate window displays to mark the event. One of the most attractive of the displays was that arranged by the C. C. Baker Co., and in practically every instance an increased sale of records was reported. Some excellent newspaper publicity was obtained as a result of the visit of the artist.

White Department Is Remodeled

With the change of ownership of the Z. L. White Department Store, the Victrola department has been completely changed and remodeled. F. J. Connor, who for the past seven years has been interested in the Victor trade, is the manager of this department. At an expenditure of approximately $50,000 for remodeling and equipment one of the most modern salons of music has been created. There are ten sound-proof booths, each nine feet by twelve feet, and because of the spaciousness of these booths four different sizes of Victrolas have been placed in each. This, according to Mr. Connor, was done for the purpose of enabling the prospective buyers of records to listen to them on the same type of machine they have in their homes. The entire woodwork in the department is in ivory finish.

Throughout the department, which occupies the major portion of the fifth floor of the Z. L. White Co., there prevails the home atmosphere. The fact that the picture and furniture departments are also on this floor adds greatly to the attractiveness of the Victrola department.

Just as soon as all the details are completed an innovation in presenting concerts will be inaugurated by this firm. Twice each week, on afternoons desirable to the local public, records produced by the more famous artists will be offered. The afternoons will be designated by the names of the artists. Among the first artists whose records will be demonstrated are Caruso, Alma Gluck, McCormack and Heifetz. On some afternoons only dance music will be featured; on others music characteristic of certain nations will be given. These concerts are to be so arranged that there will be distinct variety, and to add to their popularity on frequent occasions artists in person will come to entertain the audiences.

To Utilize Radio for Concerts

Business conditions are considerably improved in the East, according to Leslie I. King, manager of the Victrola department of the Morehouse-Martens Co., who has recently returned from New York City. Mr. King is particularly interested in radio apparatus, a receiving set having been installed by the Morehouse-Martens Co. During his stay Mr. King visited the larger firms in New York and was very well pleased and encouraged with the successful results of the radio in presenting concerts. In the near future Mr. King intends to offer radio concerts to the patrons of the Morehouse-Martens Co.

To Give Victrola to Charity

On April 1 the Morehouse-Martens Co. gave away a Victrola to the club, hospital, charitable institution, fraternity, school or aid society receiving the largest number of votes in the Morehouse-Martens contest. Customers coming to the store, by signing their names, indicated their preference of the above organizations which they desired to win the Victrola. Men prominent in Columbus business will count the votes at an early date and will award the Victrola to the organization receiving the greatest number of votes.

The course is known as the William Maxwell Orientation System of Scientific Salesmanship. The headquarters of the school, known as the William Maxwell Institute, are at 353 Second National Bank Building, Orange, N. J.

CREATING SALES FROM THE BROADCASTING OF RECORDS

How Thomas K. Henderson, of Munger & Long, of Camden, N. J., Hooked Up Profitably With the Radio Craze—Gets Many Orders and a Flood of Letters From Near and Far

In contrast to those members of the industry who regard the radio as a certain menace to the talking machine business there are many who take the other viewpoint and have made every endeavor to see how they may hook up profitably with the radio craze and get some publicity for themselves and the products they handle.

Among those who have taken advantage of the radio for publicity purposes is Thomas K. Henderson, manager of the Victrola department of Munger & Long, Camden, N. J., who some months ago responded to a request from John L. Hill, of the Federal Institute of Radio Telegraphy, in that city, to co-operate with him in the broadcasting of record music, providing for that purpose a small Victrola and some records.

The demonstrations proved successful and aroused a great amount of interest, with the result that the Camden Daily Courier, one of the progressive newspapers of the city, began to take notice of the opportunity and opened a radio department, publishing the various broadcasting programs. At the suggestion of the newspaper Mr. Henderson has for some time past been preparing regular musical programs for each day, featuring Victor records. These programs are published each evening with the exception of Saturday and are strictly adhered to. The operator announces that the records are furnished by the talking machine department of Munger & Long and at the end of the selection announces the number of the record for the benefit of those who may desire to obtain it. As a matter of fact, the practice of announcing record numbers started at the suggestion of a radio fan who held the opinion that many people might be interested in purchasing the records they heard broadcasted.

Good Advertising Results

In discussing the publicity value of the broadcasting of the record lists Mr. Henderson said: "I am convinced that this is splendid advertising and that the use of the radio will help rather than retard our business. As evidence of this I might cite the fact that one day recently a gentleman wrote us to send him the records of the entire program he had heard the evening before. Shortly before that we had a 'phone call from a lady who wanted the Caruso record that had been broadcasted the previous evening. She had forgotten the title, but, of course, we knew what she wanted. These are only two of many similar instances and show that a record demonstrated by the radio will catch a customer just as it would if demonstrated in a store in the regular way. Demonstrations sell records, ergo, the more demonstrations the more sales. It must be remembered that the radio receiver will not play a record, and if the fan likes the records he has heard he will, in many cases, buy them.

"In constructing our programs I have endeavored to strike the happy medium in music—nothing too high-brow and nothing trashy. The popular selections and dance music are not included in the printed programs, but are added numbers.

So far our efforts seem to have given satisfaction.

"In our newspaper advertising we make known the fact that all of the records used in the 3-Y-Q programs from the Courier station can be obtained at our store. We also have copies of the programs in our books and they are good salesmen. 3-Y-Q, which broadcasts on a 400-meter wave, is one of the most powerful stations in the East, having a radius of 1,000 miles. At times our concerts have been heard at much greater distances, in one instance in the Saskatchewan district in the Canadian Northwest, about 1,700 miles from the broadcasting station.

Record Business Is Helped

"While our own record business has been helped materially by these radio concerts, I have no doubt but that dealers in other New Jersey cities and towns have also been helped through our efforts, and if such is the case all I can say is that it is, in my opinion, a splendid way to tell the world what you've got.

"The radio is here to stay. Some think it will injure our business, but I do not. The talking machine as a home entertainer is a fixture, and with the improvements which are bound to come will prove even more popular in the future."

The following program, selected at random, is indicative of the caliber of the records selected by Mr. Henderson:

1. Waltz—"Blue Danube".....Philadelphia Orchestra
  2. "Where the Morning Glories Grow,"
Spencer and Sterling Trio
  3. Bass Solo—"Till the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold,"
Glenn
  4. Tenor Solo—"In Sweet Inniscarra".....Miller
  5. Monologue—"Virginia Judge".....Kelly
  6. Barcarolle (Tales of Hoffman).....Gluck and Homer
  7. March—"General Mixup".....Pryor's Band
- Added Popular Selections

Since the broadcasting of the Victor records has been under way there has been received a flood of letters from various sections commenting enthusiastically upon the various programs or numbers found therein. These messages come from Walkerville, Ont., in the North, and Wadesboro, N. C., in the South, and from as far West as Buffalo, affording some idea of the broad territory covered by the radio service as a regular thing.

PLAN SPRING BUSINESS DRIVE

Outside Piano Salesmen of Hahne & Co. to Co-operate With Talking Machine Staff—Sales Crews Will Take Weekly Trips

NEWARK, N. J., April 3.—The talking machine and piano departments of Hahne & Co., Broad street, this city, under the management of J. Blake and W. O. Black, respectively, are planning a co-operative campaign to boost the sales of talking machines and pianos. Extensive advertising will be part of the campaign to stimulate the Spring business and crews of salesmen will cover outlying communities on trips covering a period of one week. In this manner it is hoped to cover a much larger territory than formerly. The piano salesmen will endeavor to sell talking machines where the sale of a piano is impossible. The Victor and Widdicomb machines are featured by Hahne & Co.

MISS JOHNSON IN CHARGE

Miss Christine Johnson, for some time past hostess at the Vocalion Recording Studios of the Aeolian Co., has been placed in charge of the repair adjustment department of that company, succeeding Miss Mazie Hurley, who left recently to make her home on the Pacific Coast.

Many a man admits defeat and lies down on the job before he is really finished, when, if he had exerted just a little more effort, worked just a little harder and held on with grim determination for just a little while longer he would have achieved success.

G. K. LORD NEW OKEH ARTIST

Prominent Singing Organist Will Make Okeh Records Exclusively

It was announced this week by the General Phonograph Corp., manufacturer of Okeh records, that Gene Kenneth Lord, who is known as the singing organist, has signed a contract to record exclusively for Okeh records. Mr. Lord has gained distinction through the skill with which he has played some of the world's largest pipe organs and in addition displayed his ability as a baritone singer.

A few years ago the secretary of the Pennsylvania State Spiritualist Association, while in Los Angeles, was attracted by the quality of Mr. Lord's voice and immediately arranged to have him sing and play the organ during the Spiritualist conventions since held in various cities throughout the United States. At the Spiritualist convention held in Detroit last Fall Mr. Lord was appointed by Dr. Geo. B. Warne, president of the National Spiritualist Association, as the first and only "International Evangelistic Singer and Organist."

Through the efforts of A. J. Heath, of Philadelphia, Mr. Lord arranged to record for the Okeh library, and his first record is now being offered to the trade. It features the following two selections: "Gentle Angels, Pilot Me," Spiritualistic hymn, and "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," Spiritualistic hymn.

DROP PLAN TO CHANGE LIEN LAWS

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 8.—Music dealers here who had been planning to introduce a bill before the State Legislature providing for changes in the lien laws have dropped the project. Under the present laws instruments can be taken up immediately following neglect to meet payments, and the full amount paid is retained. A number of dealers objected to paying the filing charge on chattel mortgages. The tentative plan had to do with changing this phase of the laws.

PRACTICAL DEALER CO-OPERATION

Sales Promotion Department of Jewett Phonograph Co. Well Equipped to Serve Dealers—Miss Agnes Nelson in Charge of This Important Work—How the Department Operates

DETROIT, MICH., April 5.—One of the most important departments in the organization of the Jewett Phonograph Co., of this city, is the sales promotion department, which is under the direction of Miss Agnes Nelson, who has been associated with the talking machine industry for a number of years.

In a recent chat with The World Miss Nelson gave some interesting data regarding her activities, as follows:

"This department was established mainly for our dealers; to supervise each dealer's advertising which is done locally; to give them selling ideas, make suggestions for more attractive arrangement of stores and help them make sales, which is often accomplished by a dealer writing this department and giving the name of a prospect who is really interested in a Jewett, but needs something which the dealer feels that he is unable to say to decide him. They want us to write some sort of a letter, and then a letter goes out from this department to the dealer's prospect, saying that we are glad to learn of his interest and so forth and we then proceed to tell him why we feel that he would be making no mistake to buy a Jewett. Several of our dealers have actually made sales, they tell me, wholly on the strength of letters from us direct. We urge our dealers to give us the name of every person to whom they sell a Jewett phonograph and a personal letter of appreciation for their patronage goes out from this department. This, we feel, makes the customers feel that we are as interested as the dealer in the fact that they have bought a Jewett and that we want the good will of every Jewett owner.

"Very often dealers write in for a sample letter which they would like to use in circularizing their territory, or their collections are a little poor and they would like to find out some way to ask for collections without offending their customers and want us to help them out. This is a service which this department also handles.

"This department is so closely in touch with the Jewett dealers that they feel that it is the natural thing to do to bring their troubles here. We tell them new fields to sound out for business, they tell me certain methods which they are using successfully and which might help another dealer.

"Booklets, posters, window trim and store cards are all planned and bought by this department, because this is material used by our dealers and it is given special attention in order to give them material they can use to best advantage."

Attractive new display rooms have been opened in the music department of the Tull & Gibbs store, Spokane, Wash. Victor, Columbia and Edison machines and records are handled here.

Walker Jewett Shoppe, of Detroit, Meeting With Success—Using Aggressive Up-to-date Sales Methods in Development of the Business

DETROIT, MICH., April 8.—One of the latest additions to the retail talking machine fraternity is the new store recently opened by the Walker Jewett Shoppe, of this city. T. B. Walker, owner of this establishment, is an enthusiastic Jewett dealer, and his thorough knowledge of the talking machine business has enabled him to build up a profitable clientele that is steadily increasing. The store is open until ten o'clock every night, and, although it is a neighborhood store, it has customers every night. The furnishings are comfortable and restful and Mr. and Mrs. Walker are always on hand to give a hearty welcome to the neighborhood visitors.

In a recent chat regarding business conditions Mr. Walker stated that he does not by any means depend upon transient visitors as the foundation for his trade, but has established a competent outside sales staff that is constantly "on the job." This attractive store is meeting with a considerable measure of success, which may be attributed to the progressive sales methods that are utilized and Mr. Walker's ready understanding of the importance of utilizing the most up-to-date merchandising methods.

Frank E. Edgar, of the wholesale department of the Aeolian Co., and one of the best known travelers in the music trade, recently brought back from the West the following interesting story, for which he vouches.

According to Mr. Edgar an extensive advertising campaign on talking machines was being featured by one of the leading stores in Columbus, Ind., which boldly offered to sell them at "One dollar down and the machine is delivered to your home."

One morning a well-dressed, middle-aged woman came in and was met by the proprietor in person. "Is it true," she asked, "that one can have a talking machine for a dollar down?"

"Yes," he answered. "We do exactly as we advertise." She then looked around at the various styles displayed and, indicating one, said, "I like that one very much," at the same time opening her hand-bag to extract the dollar.

Whereupon the proprietor said, "The only other thing that is necessary for you to do is to purchase ten dollars' worth of records." "Oh, really?" she asked, then hesitated a moment and finally walked toward the door. "I'll be back later, then."

Assuming that the lady had changed her mind about the proposition, the manager concluded the deal was off. However, about an hour later she returned, her arms full of flat packages. "I have the records," she said, "and would like to have the machine sent up to my home, please." In a word, she had gone down the street to another store and had "purchased ten dollars' worth of records"—from a competitor.

What happened? Just this: The proprietor sent the machine to the lady and made good his advertising.

Moral—Because you know all the details and apparent curves in your sales or your goods, do not expect the customer to be a mind reader. The next customer was told "You must buy ten dollars' worth of records from us."

It is possible for you to know your story so well that you take it for granted everyone else knows as much about it. Be specific and every party to the deal gains, even the customers.

It Takes Eight Gauges Just to Test Holes in the Cheney Motor Frame

Considering the quality of workmanship and materials, Cheney prices are remarkably low. Regular models retail from $11 to $325. Console models in a variety of styles.

THERE are fifteen holes drilled in each Cheney motor frame, and it is absolutely essential that there be no variation in excess of  $5/1000$  of an inch from the standard for each hole. More allowance than this would result in loose bearings, noise and pulsations—far from the standard of excellence set up and rigidly protected in Cheney motors.

Accordingly, eight gauges, as shown in the above illustration, are required to test the holes in this frame. There is only  $5/1000$  of an inch difference in the diameter of the ends of each of the gauges above. One end must go into the hole, the other may not.

Such care is characteristic of the whole process of Cheney manufacture. It explains why The Cheney is the "master instrument"—a profitable selling opportunity for every dealer.

THE CHENEY TALKING MACHINE COMPANY
CHICAGO

This is the third test of the Cheney motor, and is made under actual playing conditions. Every requirement of strong pull and endurance is present to which the motor will be subjected when in use, and the motor must meet a rigid standard of uniformity of speed and duration of pull.

The first Cheney motor test is the stethoscope test, to make sure that it is free from unnecessary noise; the second test, on a specially patented Cheney testing device, makes certain that the motor will pull for a given time at proper and uniform speed. A fourth and final test is made in a sound-proof room after the motor has been installed in the cabinet.

The CHENEY

THE MASTER INSTRUMENT

(NO. IV)

Dear Bill:

I am extremely glad that your business has now reached the stage where you find it necessary to secure the services of several salesmen. The selection of salesmen is of the utmost importance to the continued success of your enterprise and, since I have had considerably more experience in that line than has fallen to your lot, I hope you will not take it amiss if I endeavor to give you some pointers which I have found to be essential in choosing the right men.

In the first place, it is best to always bear in mind the fact that the constant hiring of salesmen, similar to the labor turnover in any industry or business, is an expensive proposition. No matter how clever a man is he must consume considerable time, for which you pay, in which to become acquainted with the trade which you cater to and, if he is an out-of-town man, the various conditions under which you operate.

The second point which you should determine upon is that the men you hire must be efficient salesmen. They must possess all the qualifications which go to make up a live-wire. They must be enthusiastically "sold" on the line of machines and records handled by you or for heaven's sake don't let them lose customers for you. You may as well refrain from securing any salesmen at all if you are not prepared to get the right kind. It is obvious that a man who is not "sold" on the line he represents certainly will not have any great amount of success in "selling" prospects on it. Enthusiasm and sincerity are vital assets and no salesman can hope to become successful if he does not possess them.

There is absolutely no economy in hiring a cheap man. By cheap I mean a man who is willing to work for a few dollars less per week than a first-class salesman. A man usually asks a salary commensurate with his own opinion of his worth and you will find that a good man demands, and is entitled to, a good salary. On the other hand, the salesman who is lacking in ability is invariably willing to work for considerably less. The first-class salesman will be instrumental in increasing the profits and prestige of the house and the second will lose money and customers for the firm hiring him.

Another class of salesman to steer clear of is the "floater"; the type of salesman who jumps from one job to another; the type of man who soon sickens of a job, becomes restless and clears out suddenly. As mentioned before, labor turnover is a costly proposition and no business can afford to hire a man of this type.

It is a comparatively simple matter to determine if the applicant is of this type by his credentials. And right here I want to warn you to be sure that you thoroughly investigate the references of anyone applying for a position. It is much better to be safe than sorry, and a few days' delay involved in "looking up" an applicant is time well spent. You cannot afford to make any mistake in the quality and ability of the man you hire.

This does not mean, however, that simply because a salesman has made several changes that he is a "floater." It is up to the prospective employer to analyze and verify his record. If it is found that a man has rendered faithful and efficient service wherever he has been employed and has only made changes where he improved his position, or for wider experience, a dealer is safe in hiring him. Wishing you all kinds of success, I am

Your friend,

Jim.

KIRKMAN CORP. ADDS RADIO LINE

Manufacturer of the K-E Automatic Stops and Kirkman Record Cleaner Will Soon Place on Market Tele-Radio Sets and Supplies

The Kirkman Engineering Corp., New York City, manufacturer of K-E automatic stops and the well-known Kirkman record cleaner, will shortly place on the market Tele-Radio sets in a wide range of models equipped with both head sets and amplifying horns. The electrical line is not new to the Kirkman Engineering Corp., as it has for many years supplied the electrical trade with fuses, switches and other parts. It is, therefore, well equipped to embark on this new undertaking. Besides the radio sets it is the plan of the Kirkman Engineering Corp. to also produce radio parts. In order to take care of the large demands incidental to this new phase of its business the corporation has secured the entire fourth loft in the building in which it is situated, and this extra loft is rapidly being equipped. Thomas Kirkman, head of the organization, reports that business is continuing in a very satisfactory manner and looks for steady betterment.

M. S. WILSON CO. CHARTERED

The M. S. Wilson Co., Inc., of Providence, R. I., has been granted a charter of incorporation under the laws of that State to deal in talking machines, records, etc. The capital of the concern consists of 500 shares of non-par stock. Mather S. Wilson, George C. Clinton and James O. McManus are the incorporators.

FRED CARBERRY CO. INCORPORATED

The Frederick Carberry Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., has been granted a charter of incorporation under the laws of that State, with a capital of $50,000 common stock and $500,000 preferred stock. Incorporators are F. Carberry, W. Heise and A. Glyis. The concern will deal in talking machines, etc.

DAVEGA'S TIMELY SALES TALK

Pointers to Dealers on Best Method of Selling and Displaying Horizontal Types of Victrolas

The new horizontal type of Victrola was the subject of a special communication from Abram Davega, president of the Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co., addressed to the many Knickerbocker Victor dealers. It was headed "How to Sell More Genuine Victrolas—Horizontal Type." The best method of selling has been carefully analyzed and propounded. One of the primary requisites given for selling these talking machines is having the complete line upon the floor. It is pointed out that one or two of the models will not do; the entire five should be displayed. Upon the subject of display there is much to be said. The indiscriminate mixing up of the horizontal and upright types of Victrolas is confusing and does not adequately display either type. Mr. Davega states that it is better to devote a certain section of the floor entirely to the new model, showing the complete line side by side. It is also suggested that it might be well to make these models the subject of a window display. Mr. Davega outlines the superior points of the new Victrola models and urges that the dealer instill his enthusiasm into the prospective purchaser.

AUTHOR PREDICTED "TALKER"

A prophecy of the talking machine may be found in Cyrano de Bergerac's "Voyage to the Moon." Cyrano's imaginary traveler tells of a wonderful book presented to him by a lunar inhabitant, which had neither leaves nor letters, a book made wholly for the ears and not for the eyes. "When anybody has a mind to read it he winds up that machine with a great many springs, then he turns the hand to the chapter which he desires, and straight as from the mouth of a man, or a musical instrument, proceed all the distinct and different sounds which all the lunar grandees make use of for expressing their thoughts instead of language."

RETURNS FROM SUCCESSFUL TRIP

A. A. Fair, Sales Manager of Jewett Phonograph Co., Brings Optimistic Reports From Eastern Trip—New Jewett Uprights Well Received

DETROIT, MICH., April 4.—A. A. Fair, sales manager of the Jewett Phonograph Co., of this city, returned recently from an Eastern trip which included a visit to New York City, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Utica, N. Y. In all of these points Mr. Fair visited Jewett dealers and also started preliminary negotiations with several important concerns which will probably culminate in new Jewett agencies in the very near future. Upon his return to Detroit Mr. Fair stated that general conditions were very gratifying, and that within the past few weeks over twenty-five new accounts had been opened in various sections of the country.

The new line of Jewett uprights recently announced to the trade has been accorded an enthusiastic reception from dealers who have visited the Jewett factory, and shipments are now being made. The dealers are particularly enthusiastic regarding the quality of the cabinet work and the distinctiveness of the cabinet designs. The factory is now working to capacity and the Jewett sales staff is leaving nothing undone to co-operate with the company's dealers throughout the country, all of whom report improving business.

SUFFERS LOSS BY FIRE

The Record Shop, Toledo, Sustains $2,000 Loss to Stock From Flames and Water

TOLEDO, O., April 3.—The Record Shop recently suffered severe loss from the fire which swept the Orchestra Hall Building, 420 and 422 St. Clair street, the damage being estimated at $2,000, caused mainly by water and affecting the talking machine stock. The business will be carried on, however, while repairs are being made.

This store is one of four owned by Compton Bros., who have in addition shops at Findlay, McComb and Carey, O. Brunswick, Aeolian-Vocalion, Kimball and Columbia machines are handled.

FEATURING THE NEW VICTROLAS

Toledo Talking Machine Co. Attracting Attention With New Models—C. H. Womeldorff Returns From Meeting of Jobbers' Association

TOLEDO, O., April 4.—The Toledo Talking Machine Co. is displaying the new Victor horizontal 240, 260, 280, and they are receiving much attention. It is believed that as soon as the Victor national advertising on these new instruments begins to function the demand will speed up.

C. H. Womeldorff, general manager, has his sleeves rolled up and is back at his desk after attending the recent New York meeting of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers. The trip was both helpful and enjoyable, he reports.

Warren E. Kellogg and W. B. Gannon, sales representatives of this company, will hand back to each other the territories traveled during the month of March. They switched the first of that month for the purpose of widening their acquaintance and studying conditions.

W. B. Gannon will make a trip to Philadelphia and the Victor factory about April 15.

We are living in an era of speed. Pep, real ability, punch and quickness are necessary to-day more than ever before. We are keyed to a high pitch of mental and physical activity and any man who desires to make a mark for himself must be just a little faster than his competitor.

NEW QUARTERS IN MASSILLON, O.

C. J. Duncan, Veteran Victor Dealer, Opens Attractive New Store in That City

MASSILLON, O., April 4.—Ambitions of a quarter century were realized this month when C. J. Duncan, local Victor dealer, opened his new store at 8 East Main street. It is among the finest in the State and ranks with those of the larger cities.

The exterior of the new three-story building is of Indiana limestone. The Victrola parlors occupy the entire second floor, directly above the jewelry shop, and are approached by an attractive stairway. To the rear are eight sound-proof demonstration booths with a special overhead ventilation system. The record department is at the top of the stairs and the system of filing makes it possible to obtain any record in stock in remarkably short time.

Appointments of the salesroom of the department are in harmony with the interior furnishings and finish. Wicker furniture, ferns and unique art specialties add to its homelike appearance. An extraordinary stock of talking machines and records is kept by the Duncan store considering the fact that the town has less than 10,000 population. John Longheir is manager of the department.

Mr. Duncan was the first Victor representative in Massillon and has featured this line of machines and records for almost twenty years, he told a representative of The World.

MANY MOURN BERT WILLIAMS

Death of Famous Colored Comedian Deeply Regretted by Music Lovers—Had Won Popularity Here and Abroad—Exclusive Columbia Artist

Music lovers and theatregoers throughout the country were greatly shocked at the death of Bert Williams, the famous colored comedian, referred to briefly in The World last month, who was rated as a genius from one end of the country to the other. As an exclusive Columbia artist Bert

The Late Bert Williams

Williams was known to talking machine enthusiasts everywhere, and many of his records were phenomenal hits.

Bert Williams started his theatrical career with a little company of minstrels and from the very beginning progressed steadily, winning the goodwill of the public and the respect of his associates. In 1903 when the Williams-Walker Company, headed by Bert Williams and George Walker, played in London Mr. Williams was invited to attend a lawn party at Buckingham Palace at the birthday celebration of the Prince of Wales. His demeanor so pleased the royal family that he remained until his death a prime favorite with Londoners.

Some of the most successful productions in which Williams and Walker appeared as a team were "Two Real Coons," "The Gold Bug," "Senegambian Carnival," "Sons of Ham" and "In Dahomey." George Walker died in 1907 and Mr. Williams was featured alone in "Mr. Lode of Coal." In 1911 he made a Ziegfeld contract under which he appeared in the "Follies" for ten years. At the close of the Ziegfeld contract he starred in "Broadway Brevities" and at the time preceding his death Mr. Williams was appearing in "Under the Bamboo Tree."

While playing in Detroit Mr. Williams suffered a breakdown and was brought to his home in New York, where he died. Some of the selections which he has made for the Columbia library and which have become internationally famous are "Nobody," "Woodman, Spare That Tree," "Everybody Wants the Key to My Cellar" and "When the Moon Shines on the Moonshine."

A NEW BANNER RECORD SERVICE

Attractive Series of Window Cards, Resembling Oil Paintings, Now Ready for Dealers

The Banner Record Division of the Plaza Music Co. announces a new co-operative advertising service for the retailer. In addition to the regular monthly mat service the company is preparing a very elaborate set of window cards, beautifully illustrated in four colors of oil painting.

This promises to be a rather novel display, as each card will have the appearance of being an individual oil painting. This display will be furnished to Banner record dealers at cost, and should prove a great sales factor.

Elbert Jebb, formerly connected with F. S. Dyke's store in Northfield, Vt., is now manager of the A. L. Bailey music store in Lancaster, N. H.

INTRODUCES NEW RECORD CLEANER

New Cleaner, With Specially Designed Celluloid Back, Placed on Market by Plaza Music Co.—An Excellent Publicity Medium

The Plaza Music Co., New York City, well-known distributor of sheet music and a complete line of talking machine accessories, recently introduced a new record cleaner with a colored celluloid back which is made of the finest workmanship and materials. The backs carry all the leading trade-mark names, including Victor, Brunswick, Sonora, Edison, Pathé, Aeolian, Columbia and Okeh, as desired, and, on orders of 100 or over, the dealer's imprint is inserted in addition. A specially designed back, if the dealer prefers, in any selected color, can also be ordered.

The cleaner is three and one-half inches in diameter and fits readily into the palm of the hand, which greatly encourages its use and makes it an appreciated accessory. Hundreds of orders have been received by the Plaza Co. from both dealers and distributors for this new record cleaner, and letters of commendation have also arrived from the trade on the value of this article which carries a permanent ad of the dealer into the home of the purchaser.

EDW. JOHNSON ENTERTAINS DEALERS

Talking Machine Men of Twin Cities Turn Out to Hear Interesting Address of Edward Johnson at Dyer Victrola Concert in St. Paul

ST. PAUL, MINN., April 1.—The recent visit to this city of Edward Johnson, Victor artist, in connection with the appearance of the Chicago Opera Company was eagerly welcomed by dealers handling the Victor line of talking machines and records both in St. Paul and Minneapolis. Additional interest was given to the regular Friday Victrola concert at the establishment of W. J. Dyer & Bro., this city, by the appearance of Mr. Johnson at the concert hall. Approximately 250 people listened to an address made by the artist, who also made a short speech before the Twin City retail dealers, entertaining and instructive, of his experience while shopping incognito among Victrola dealers.

In the picture Mr. Johnson will be observed in the foreground, while behind him stand R. H. Johnston, vice-president of W. J. Dyer & Bro.;

Mr. Leavitt, of Howard Farwell & Co.; Mr. Pofahl and Mr. Zoller, of the Golden Rule, and Mr. Kuncel, of the Cable Company, St. Paul.

The following Minneapolis dealers are included: Mr. Artz, of Donaldson's; Mr. Ebert, of Power's; Mr. Benson, of Benson Music House; Mr. Roden, of Power's; Mr. Porter, of the Metropolitan, and Mr. Lang, of Dayton Co. Also pictured in the group are Mr. Ells, Mr. Cox, Miss Stoner and Miss Donaldson, of the W. J. Dyer & Bro. force.

STEAL "TALKERS" FROM SCHOOLS

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., April 1.—Crime hunters hereabouts have turned their attention from bank robbers, footpads and ordinary highwaymen to burglars who seem to specialize in a new sort of thieving. These burglars are paying visits to unprotected school houses and carting away talking machines and records. Joseph Clayton, a member of the Jackson Mills school board, said that the talking machine thieves entered schools at Jackson Mills, Hyson, Pleasant Grove, Leesville and Cassville.

NEW OKEH RECORD CATALOG

Attractively Designed Catalog Now Being Distributed Among Okeh Dealers—Book Is Noteworthy for Practical Arrangement of Contents

The General Phonograph Corp., New York, manufacturer of Okeh records, has just issued a new complete alphabetical catalog that emphasizes the phenomenal success attained by this record in the past few years. The catalog contains fifty-two pages and cover, and is bound in a rich dull green cover that makes it an attractive addition to the dealer's library of literature.

The illustrations of the various Okeh artists show up to excellent advantage, and the typographical arrangement is very attractive. The titles of the Okeh records are listed alphabetically and the entire contents are cross-indexed in order to make the book a handy reference guide for Okeh dealers and their patrons. The catalog is being distributed to Okeh dealers throughout the country, and intensive publicity plans have been inaugurated to feature this book.

RECORD ALBUM DEMAND IMPROVING

New York Album & Card Co. Reports Increase in Production to Meet Demand

An optimistic report of conditions in the record album field was given by Max Willinger, president of the New York Album & Card Co., of New York and Chicago. Mr. Willinger reports that his company has transacted up to date more business than in the same period of 1921. He states that although the buying in general is not in as large individual quantities, the aggregate totals more, and a steady, healthful demand for albums is manifested. The buying in small quantities, Mr. Willinger points out, is also indicative that the dealer's supply of albums is not large and that a marked improvement in business would immediately result in greatly increased orders for albums. The output in both the Chicago and New York factories of the company has been increased and orders are being filled promptly.

CLOSING HEALTHY BUSINESS

Val's Accessory House Reports Increasing Activities—Will Soon Open New Store

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 5.—Val's Accessory House, of this city, jobber of talking machine supplies and parts, has closed an excellent business the past few months. In fact, the company's activities have increased so rapidly it has been necessary to lease a branch establishment at 1236 Franklin avenue, which will be open in the course of the next few months.

The company recently received large shipments of motors, tone arms and other repair parts, and its campaign to distribute this merchandise has been so successful that additional stocks have been ordered. The demand for mainsprings has been one of the outstanding features of the sales during the past two months, and a special department devoted to this product is kept busy filling the orders of the trade.

McLEAN GOES TO THE COAST

GREAT FALLS, MONT., April 1.—Allan McLean, for the last seven years manager of the Great Falls Edison Shop, has resigned his position to enter the same line of work at Portland, Ore., according to a recent announcement. He will be succeeded by F. S. Martin, late with the Montana Phonograph Co., at Helena, who has arrived here to assume his new duties. For the last several years he has traveled for the Helena concern.

BRUNSWICK INTRODUCES GOLD LABEL RECORDS

Recordings of Double-faced Operatic Records Will Be Known Under Above Title—Will Replace Green Label at Prices Nearly the Same—Opening Gun of Great National Campaign

An announcement of wide interest to the trade emanating from the headquarters of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., of Chicago, Ill., concerns the recording of double-faced operatic records, to be known as Gold Label records. The exclusive Brunswick artists whose recordings are now listed under the Green Label Series will make the new records, the first releases of which appear in the lists for April and May. These new records will retail at from $1.50 to $2.00, comparing with prices of from $1.00 to $1.50 asked for the single-faced discs containing music of the same character.

This is one of the opening guns of the Brunswick Co.'s national campaign to popularize the better class of music in American homes. Through the medium of the double-faced records at a slightly greater cost than the single-faced recordings the company states that it is hoped "to bring the better class of music within the reach of all talking machine owners. By this plan inventories of dealers will also be reduced while at the same time the assortment of selections is multiplied."

The numbers appearing on each side of the Gold Label records are to be carefully selected and only those of like character and appeal will be placed on the same disc. Among the artists who will record for the Gold Label records are: Elly Ney, Richard Strauss, Claire Dux, Mario Chamlee, Max Rosen, Bronislaw Huberman, Florence Easton, Leopold Godowsky, Giuseppe Danise and Tino Pattiera.

A plan has been worked out by the Brunswick Co. to protect dealers from loss in the handling of the Green Label records. In a handsome four-page folder descriptive of the new records an announcement is made that: "As soon as the records of the above artists which have already been released are double-faced an exchange plan will be offered for dealers' stocks of the single-faced numbers on hand at that time." In the meantime the Green Label records will continue to be handled as heretofore.

Announcement is also made by the company that the Blue Label records, which were recently reduced in price from $1.25 to $1.00, will be listed under the Lavender Label classification as soon as the catalog lists can be changed. This step was also taken with the idea in view of popularizing the better class of music.

Records made by the Isham Jones Dance Orchestra and the Criterion Quartet are now listed at 75 cents, together with the Brunswick Black Label series, and all future records by these artists will be classified as Black Label. Stocks on hand at Brunswick dealers' establishments are protected by merchandise rebate credits in these changes.

CHANGES RECORD CLEANER DESIGN

New Cleaner Put Out by Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co. Has Victor Red Seal Facsimile

The Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co., Victor wholesaler, New York City, is now producing its record cleaners with a somewhat changed design. The company during the latter part of last year placed these record cleaners on the market and urged that dealers make use of same for advertising purposes, space being provided for the dealer's imprint. The back of the record cleaner is now produced as a facsimile of a Victor Red Seal record. This new design was originally presented at the last luncheon of the Talking Machine Men, Inc., at which everyone attending found one of the new cleaners at his plate. A special letter has been addressed to the trade outlining the advantages of the cleaners as an advertising medium for the dealer and how they can be used to bring customers to the store.

NEW FOREIGN RECORD HANGERS

Victor Co. Announces Preparation of New Publicity for the Retailers

The Victor Talking Machine Co. announces that a series of attractive hangers, of the same size as the present domestic supplement hangers, are now being prepared for the purpose of featuring lists of records selected from the foreign record catalogs and supplements. It is believed that the new hangers will prove of distinct value in stimulating the sale of records in the foreign lists, inasmuch as they will bring to the attention of the foreign record customers comparatively limited groups of records from which selections may be made easily. The hangers will cover the Bohemian, German, Hebrew, Italian, Polish and Swedish lists, and will be distributed to wholesalers.

The N. W. Brown Piano Co., which has just opened a store at 144 State street, Springfield, Mass., is featuring Brunswick phonographs and records in its attractive department.

PLANS EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS

Wolf & Dessauer Department Store to Move Victor Department to Larger Quarters on the Second Floor of the Building

FT. WAYNE, IND., April 4.—The Wolf & Dessauer department store contemplates extensive improvements and alterations in the Victrola department, which has occupied space on the fourth floor of the store and will be moved to the second. The mezzanine will be a feature. New equipment will be added and the scope of the department will be greatly enlarged. Demonstration rooms will be one-half again as large as at present and ample space will be provided for an elaborate display of machines and service to the customer. W. E. Cotter, manager of this department, was recently married and is just back from his honeymoon.

A salesman should never forget that he represents an investment of his employer and that if the investment proves to be a losing proposition he will get rid of it and seek another.

Four-Minute Conference on Business Topics

No. 1—Your Liquid Assets

[This is the first of a series of four-minute conferences on topics of direct interest to business men in the talking machine trade which have been prepared for this publication by Lester G. Herbert.—EDITOR.]

Your liquid assets are your cash or that which you can turn into cash at a moment's notice.

Without cash or its equivalent a business man is greatly handicapped. Therefore, he should assume obligations very carefully remembering that cash will be wanted before very long. There is a happy medium between timidity and over-caution. Do not knowingly put yourself in a position where there is a possibility that the other fellow can squeeze you. Take the worst possible view of the situation and face it, as to what you would or could do in case the worst should arise.

Successful men play as nearly safe as is humanly possible. What seems perfectly feasible when a clever salesman is talking, or when you are figuring as to what your profits ought to be—may prove quite impossible in the face of an actual business depression or some entirely unexpected circumstance. Assume obligations with the expectation of making good—but leave yourself every possible chance of doing it. Then go forward and leave no stone unturned to insure success.

Many an obligation which seemed reasonable enough to assume has caused anxiety and trouble, because of lack of liquid assets. A man may be perfectly solvent and yet embarrassed for funds. It is an unsafe thing to tie up too much of one's capital or credit in stock or one's business investment. One can never tell just what sudden demand there may be for cash.

When you go to the bank to borrow money, you will in all probability be asked to put up collateral of some kind, and even if you have something so good to offer as Liberty Bonds, you will be asked for a much larger deposit of these than you can expect to get in cash. A man's credit is one of his most valuable assets, and it is poor business judgment to abuse the use of credit—for that means its withdrawal.

It is this assuming of obligations without any real knowledge of where the money is coming from which is so likely to lead to disaster sooner or later. Be careful then only to assume such obligations as you are justified in doing, and for Safety's Sake keep part of your assets liquid for emergency use. The very confidence that this will give you will express itself in an atmosphere of prosperity and well-being.

EXCELLENT SALES CAMPAIGN

Columbia Dealer in Southern Territory Sells Twenty-two Instruments in Three Days and Builds Up an Excellent Prospect List

NEW ORLEANS, LA., April 3.—For over a year D. Bienn, Columbia dealer of Bogalusa, felt that by watchful waiting the tide would turn and people would once more stream into his store to purchase Grafonolas and records as of yore. However, no such thing happened, and when complaining to the manager of the local branch, he, after diagnosing his case, decided to administer a dose of 3,000 fliers, a Magnavox, truck, truck-sign, a specially decorated window and a salesman for three days.

The cure was completely effected at the end of three days and to-day this dealer boasts of the fact that he cleaned off twenty-two instruments in that time. Better still, there is a possibility of getting ten to fifteen times as much business as before.

The dealer is perfectly frank in stating that if he had only had this dose administered to him before he would never have gotten to the point where he decided to wait for better days.

The last instrument was one that caused a very unusual incident. Here's the story as Mr. Bienn tells it:

"Sold a 'G-2' to a customer overnight, who discovered the motor had a slight knock in it and insisted on having another instrument in exchange for it. There was only one instrument on the floor and it was a 'G-2.' This instrument was put on the truck by the salesman and the dealer and the exchange was made with the dissatisfied customer. On returning to the store with the instrument for which the exchange was made a party stopped them on the street and asked regarding the sale. The dealer advised the party that only one instrument was left and that was the one they had on the truck. The customer proceeded to climb onto the truck and the instrument was demonstrated to the customer on the truck, in the middle of the street. Sale was made, same being delivered to the customer that very day."

SEVEN LIVE VICTOR DEPARTMENTS

Cline-Vick Drug Co. Operates Successful Chain of Stores in Southern Illinois Under the Management of Fay Luyster—Doing Well in the Educational and Concert Fields

The Cline-Vick Drug Co., which operates a chain of seven stores in southern Illinois, the stores being located in Herrin, Marion, Carterville, Johnston City, Zeigler, Royalton and West Frankfort, has paid particular attention to the featuring of the Victor talking machine departments in the several stores, having recently placed Fay Luyster in charge as general manager of the Victor departments. Mr. Luyster has had considerable experience in the Victor business and is a graduate of the Victor Salesmanship School at Camden.

The store in Marion was remodeled recently, new booths and record racks being installed, and the feature of the formal opening was a Victrola exposition with models to show the development of the Victor talking machine during the past quarter of a century. Special models of machines were obtained from the factory for the show which attracted much attention. A new Victrola department in the Zeigler store of the company was opened on March 16, on which occasion souvenirs were distributed.

Manager Luyster has been doing considerable educational work, going into the schools for the purpose of giving demonstrations, and holding children's hours at the stores on Saturday morning, when a special record program for the little ones is offered. He has also had much success in featuring Princess Watahwaso in several of the towns, having the school children sell tickets for her concerts with the returns going back to the schools for the purchase of Victrolas.

The Eight Famous Victor Artists have also appeared under the Cline-Vick Co. auspices, and Manager Luyster is now working on a program for the Summer to include Harry Lauder, John McCormack, Sallie Hamlin and the Victor Eight who will further enhance their popularity.

The people in charge of the departments in the different stores are Miss Ruth Mercer, Marion; Miss Beulah Griggs, Carterville; Miss Gertrude Galligan, Herrin; Miss Helen Smith, Johnston City; J. W. Meshew, Zeigler; S. E. Ross, Royalton, and Miss Kate Dunn, West Frankfort, all capable and energetic.

FILES BANKRUPTCY PETITION

A petition in bankruptcy was recently filed by the Master Tone Phonograph Co., of Troy, N. Y. Liabilities are estimated at $53,762 and assets are given as $48,443.

The music business of Tom Graham, at Peoria, Ill., has been purchased by J. R. Gavin and A. H. Schmidt, who will operate it under the firm name of Gavin & Schmidt. Vionola phonographs and Baldwin pianos are handled.

SPECIAL VOCALION RECORD RELEASE

"Old Timers Fox-Trot" and "Southern Medley" Played by Bar Harbor Orchestra Represents a Record of Unusual Appeal and Interest

The Aeolian Co. has just announced as a special release a most interesting new Vocalion record, No. 14315, bearing on one side a clever arrangement of old-time favorites in medley form entitled "Old Timers Fox-Trot," while on the other there is the "Southern Medley One-Step."

The old-time songs include such favorites as "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," "How Dry I Am," "When Roses Bloom," "Georgia Camp Meeting," "Dinah," "Banks of the Wabash," "Yama, Yama," and "Rings on My Fingers," while the Southern medley includes "The Swanee River," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," "Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe" and "Dixie." The recording is by the Bar Harbor Orchestra and has a vim and vigor to it that is distinctly satisfying.

SAUL BLUESTEIN OPENS BRANCH

MEMPHIS, TENN., April 8.—Saul Bluestein, who recently acquired Fortune's Music Shop, 111 Madison avenue, this city, has opened a branch store on South Main street. The new store will be known as the Melody Music Shop. Brunswick and Sonora machines and a complete stock of Brunswick records are handled.

HINTS FOR VICTROLA SALESMEN

New Booklet of Valuable Selling Arguments
Just Issued by the Victor Co.

The Victor Talking Machine Co. has just issued to the trade a particularly interesting little vest pocket volume bearing the caption, "Hints for Victrola Salesmen," and including a wealth of material of great value to the retail salesman in discussing intelligently the features of the Victrola and answering questions propounded by customers. The booklet is the development of a series of articles on Victrola selling that have appeared in "The Voice of the Victor" with much additional material included.

REVISED NEW ZEALAND TARIFF

Important changes in the import duties made by the New Zealand Government in its revised tariff affect the importation of musical instruments, according to statistics just made public by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington, D. C., in Commerce Reports. The former duties on talking machines, records and musical instruments consisted of 30 per cent general and 20 per cent preferential. The revised duties increase the general tariff to 35 per cent. The preferential remains unchanged.

Why You Should Sell Sonora Phonographs

Reason Four—

Sonora Construction

THE new Queen Anne, one of Sonora's latest and most striking achievements, splendidly illustrates the wonderful features of construction which lighten the selling task of dealers who sell the Sonora.

Here, at their utmost, are found Sonora's matchless purity and warmth of tone—Sonora's individual beauty of cabinet design.

But back of these and underlying them is sincerity of construction that has no equal. The all-brass tone arm, the many-layered wood amplifier, the powerful, long-running motor, the inch-thick cabinet walls, the automatic stop that works—in selling these exclusive Sonora features you sell actual superiority, not just a name.

That's why Sonora ranks highest in cash sales and makes enduring good will for dealers.

The Queen Anne (Improved)

Beautifully finished in Walnut, Brown Mahogany or Mahogany, the Sonora Queen Anne is a marked advance over previous period model standards in cabinet design as well as tone quality.

The Value of the Postal Card as a Means of Stimulating Record Sales :: By Frank V. Faulhaber

An old-time merchant recently observed, during a business discussion, "If you want to get more trade than your competitor, go him one better!" The soundness of this logic none will question. It should convey something of import to the talking machine dealer who has no plans in mind whereby he can go his competitor one better. I have in mind just now one energetic dealer whose well-organized selling campaigns are steadily increasing his profits.

This dealer is never beset with slack business. The reason is simply that he keeps everlastingly after his patrons, reminding them of the merchandise he handles. Whereas other dealers may be satisfied to mail out the monthly record catalogs that are supplied them, this particular merchant goes his competitors one better by supplementing these very catalogs with postal catalogs which he sees to it are mailed to the proper prospects.

Let us show how this dealer does it. It is a very simple idea when one comes to think of it, yet it is not so insignificant that it is not worth a trial by other talking machine men. In his store everything is planned out carefully, nothing whatever being overlooked that may in any way contribute to the possibility of increased volume of sales. He and his store-people try, in a word, to sell the right article to the right customer.

By studying his clientele this talking machine dealer is enabled to suggest possible sales, even though the prospects he endeavors to interest do not visit the store. He has instructed all of his salesmen to keep a tab on the kind of purchases made by the different customers. This is of particular value, as regards the selling of talking machine records.

People as a rule have a liking for certain kinds of records, such as classical pieces, or romantic, or popular. This the dealer and his salesmen find out. He ascertains to a nicety just what records sell best with certain customers and he profits by this information. Sometimes prospective customers request selections which do not happen to be in stock. This talking machine dealer capitalizes on his knowledge in two ways.

If the customer is a new one, it is deemed especially advisable to secure the requested record. Otherwise that patron may be forever lost to the store if he or she goes out without the desired record. This dealer does not neglect his opportunity here, but neither does he stop at this point; he lists the prospective customer down on his book, at the same time entering a notation anent the kind of record asked for. Let us assume it is a piece of music adapted to dancing. Well and good. This dealer, naturally, has a certain amount of assurance that the new prospect is interested, or may be interested, in other records of a similar character.

Customers Who Stay Away From the Store for a Long Period of Time Can Be Placed Again on Buying List

He finds out as much to his profit often enough. And you will find that a great many people who purchase music records from you do so only occasionally. These customers may stay away from your store for any of a number of reasons. But the wise merchant makes all of his prospects pay in the way of added business as much as possible. He does this by reminding his prospects of the merchandise he handles.

All well-established businesses have a certain number of well-paying clients; people who are steady customers, the kind who can be depended upon for a certain amount of trade. No business can hope to maintain itself on a successful basis if it must rely for support on transient customers. A proprietor of such a business would indeed have a small sense of security.

Whenever a customer enters your store to purchase some music records capitalize on the information you secure. Keep a record of all purchases made, the sort, the quantity, etc., by the different patrons. It will pay you in the long run. Then, when a customer stays away from your store you can send out postal cards in addition to the usual monthly music record catalogs. Some people do not accord the catalogs adequate attention. Many throw them away without looking them over.

Postal cards sent to your prospects naturally can be made much more specific by the simple matter of a little more work on the part of some assistant in your store. But this work should be done well if at all. With all the information available you can construct the postal cards accordingly.

The expense involved in the postals can safely be disregarded, for it will prove a wise investment later. As our talking machine dealer goes about it, he sees to it that the writing is done in a neat hand, understandable by all. He mails these postal cards regularly. One person will receive a card with the suggestion to buy such and such a record, a record, naturally, in which he or she may very possibly be interested.

Let us cite a number of specimens that will serve as inspiration for others. The following is the kind that may go to a certain class of customers who have shown themselves to be interested in this kind of record:

Dear Madam: We've got a record in stock now in which we think you may be interested. It's a fox-trot—"All By Myself." This piece is making a great hit, and we are sure it will appeal to you as well as it does to others. Step in some time this week and let us put it on the machine for you.

The foregoing is not very much and will go easily on the ordinary postal. Naturally it is more effective by means of the hand-writing, thus catering direct to the prospect. It tells of a certain song, suggests a certain sale, and, as results prove, tends to augment the number of sales of that piece.

To such customers as have manifested an appreciation for good music, this talking machine dealer suggests sales in which they may be interested. The succeeding will illustrate:

Dear Madam: We have just received a record which we are positive will appeal to one of your taste. Would you let us play it for you? We should be only too pleased. It is called "Fantaisie Impromptu" (Chopin), a pianoforte solo, by Leopold Godowsky. This is a piece of music you will be impelled to take home with you, once you hear it. Come this week!

The foregoing is another that will indicate the kind of cards that can be mailed to your prospects. It confines itself to discussing one piece of music, one, naturally, in which the prospect is almost sure to be interested. It is a specific appeal, and for that reason alone should develop many sales.

When a customer receives such a card it makes an added impress by the personal touch that is conveyed through the hand-writing. Were the card printed, carrying more text but less specific suggestions, it might not prove so effective.

Such postals will receive more attention when written by hand, and it is sure to impel action in a number of cases if the pieces of music which the talking machine dealer tries to interest the prospect in are really of the same character that have been purchased on former occasions. By calling attention to certain records in which the customer has shown he or she may be interested, you will find that many sales will develop that otherwise would not accrue to the benefit of your store.

By means of such postals the customer is brought face to face with something of interest without having to go about searching for it in the monthly catalog received. And by sending the cards regularly each month as the enterprising dealer does, the prospect will learn to look for them. That prospect, moreover, will be decidedly impressed by reason of the fact that the talking machine dealer is calling attention repeatedly to music records which really appeal. Added volume of business is the inevitable result of a practice such as this.

The postal cards, too, will prove the means whereby you can encourage former patrons to pay more visits to your store. Don't make the mistake of letting a prospective patron go out of the store without procuring the record requested and without making an effort to secure the given record. Let the patron know you are ready to serve. And the postal cards, as suggested, will serve to assure the customer that you are really trying to please by furnishing records that appeal. Specifically, the use of postals will mean more patrons and more patronage.

FEATURES VICTROLAS FOR SCHOOLS

Inaugurates Teachers' Day and Sends Out Pamphlets Illustrating Value of the Victrola in Educational Work—Plan Boosts Record Sales

MARION, ILL., April 1.—Fay Luyster, manager of the talking machine department of the local store of the Cline-Vick Stores, has greatly stimulated the sale of Victor records and aroused considerable interest in the Victor line of talking machines through the medium of "School Teachers' Day."

A circular letter, accompanied by a small, handsomely illustrated folder, was sent to the school teachers in the city. The letter of invitation explained that the plans of the educational authorities in the study of music were a matter of interest to all teachers and a visit to the store would result in an explanation of the value of the Victrola in the school and the records best suited to this work. The folder showed children at play and study with the aid of the Victrola. The following titles of a few of the illustrations are self-explanatory: "Instrument Study," "School Marching," "Group Singing," "Games on the Lawn" and "Music Appreciation."

USES RECORD FOR ROULETTE WHEEL

Police Raid Discloses Roulette Wheel Made From Record, "Home, Sweet Home"

KEY WEST, FLA., April 5.—Maybe they've stopped making roulette wheels, or perhaps Manuel Gonzalez, operator of a coffee shop here, didn't have a catalog showing where one might be obtained. Anyway, such inconveniences didn't bother Manuel when he decided to install one in the rear of his place recently.

Officers raided the shop, seized the layout and upon examination discovered that the wheel was home-made, manufactured from a talking machine record. The record had been painted, had numbers from 1 to 30, and officials who scraped some of the paint away discovered it was originally a vocal rendition of "There's No Place Like Home."

Gonzalez failed to tell the court whether the title of the hidden song was a warning to those who bucked the wheel or whether he regarded it as a lucky omen for the "house."

COLUMBIA CUT-OUT ANNOUNCED

At the monthly meeting of the Talking Machine Men, Inc., held last month, a letter was read by Irwin Kurtz, president of the Association, which he had received from the Columbia Graphophone Co., stating that a cut-out of 525 Columbia records would be announced to the trade very shortly. Geo. W. Hopkins, who signed the letter, also advised the Association that the specific details as to the cut-out would call for a very liberal method of exchange that would undoubtedly please the dealers.

LOANS "TALKER" TO FOOD SHOW

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 1.—Godard's Music House, of this city, featured the Victor talking machine in the Food Show held here recently. The company loaned the talking machine and a piano to the show to furnish music while the event was in progress. The talking machine department of this house, although only in operation a few months, has built up a nice business in Victor machines and records.

GIVE THE BUYER A CHANCE

Some salesmen have such a fluent flow of flowery language that they don't give the prospect a chance to close the deal. Firmly entrenched in their conceit, they bombard the prospect with a barrage of adjectives, hoping thereby to overcome resistance and emerge victorious from the field with a sale to their credit. Sometimes even a customer would like to ask a question concerning an instrument which represents an investment of considerable money.

"OPERA BOOK MONTH" A SUCCESS

Mickel Bros. Co., Des Moines, Ia., Sponsors Unique Publicity Campaign—Drive Sells Victor Books of the Opera and Red Seal Records—H. B. Sixsmith in Charge of Campaign

DES MOINES, IA., April 6.—Under the auspices of the Mickel Bros. Co., Victor wholesaler at Des Moines, Ia., "Opera Book Month" was introduced

Display of Baas' Music Shop, Rock Island, Ill. in this territory during the month of February and proved a signal success. This enterprising wholesaler co-operated with the Victor dealers to excellent advantage, and the Victrola Book of the Opera, which is published by the Victor Talking Machine Co., was the subject of one of the most interesting and effective publicity campaigns that have been introduced in recent years.

Mickel Bros. prepared a series of letters which were mailed to Victor dealers at regular intervals in order to keep their enthusiasm at the highest point. A rubber hand stamp bearing the words "February Is Opera Book Month—Push It" was used on every piece of literature sent out to the dealers, and a bright-colored sticker was placed on all parcel post and express packages. The jobber also supplied small circulars the same size as the supplement, which it gave to the dealers in large quantities, and, in addition, large window posters were supplied to every dealer.

According to the records of Mickel Bros. 1,520 Victrola Books of the Opera were actually sold to the dealers during the month of February, and this figure becomes more impressive when it is realized that the average jobber's sale of this book amounts to something like 500 during the year. One of the most important features of the campaign is the fact that Victor dealers report a marked increase in the sale of Red Seal records during the month of February. This can undoubtedly be traced to the direct influence of "Opera Book Month," and in quite a number of cases complete sets of operas were sold during the campaign.

Mickel Bros. suggested to the dealers that they prepare attractive window displays during the "Book of the Opera Month" and feature this book as effectively as possible. As a result of this suggestion, many handsome window displays were prepared by the dealers, and among the most attractive were the three shown in the accompanying illustrations. Window displays of exceptional beauty were also prepared during "Opera Book Month" by the following Victor dealers: L. A. Murray, Davenport, Ia.; M. W. Duncan, Albia, Ia., and T. D. Boothby, Cherokee, Ia.

The entire campaign was personally supervised and directed by H. B. Sixsmith, sales manager of the Mickel Bros. Co., who deserves unlimited commendation for the co-operation and service that he extended to the Victor dealers. It is safe to predict that the "Book of the Opera Month" will be an annual institution, as the results of the first campaign well warrant its regular continuance.

A BUSINESS CHANGE IN DETROIT

Goldberg Phonograph Co. Sells Branch Store in That City to Markowitz & Zuroff

DETROIT, MICH., April 4.—The branch store of the Goldberg Phonograph Co., at 2813 Hastings street, this city, was sold recently to Markowitz & Zuroff, who will make extensive improvements in the store and enlarge the scope of the business.

catering largely to the foreign population in this section. The Victor line will be handled exclusively.

Mr. Markowitz was for a number of years associated with Max Strasburg, Victor dealer, who also had a Jewett store on Hastings street.

Mr. Zuroff was formerly connected with the Northwestern Talking Machine Co., which likewise conducted a store on Hastings street, handling the Columbia. Mr. Goldberg will now devote all his attention to his main store.

TO LIMIT LIFE OF PATENTS

New Bill Would Invalidate Patents in Five Years in Cases Where the Patentee Fails to Make Use of His Invention During That Period

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 3.—A bill to limit the life of patents to five years where the patentee fails to make use of his invention has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Ladd, of North Dakota. The bill further provides that the life of a patent when sold by the patentee and not utilized by the purchaser shall be two years. The measure aims at the practice of corporations buying up patents affecting products which they may manufacture in an attempt to stifle competition and to prevent the development of improvements. The bill has been referred to the Senate Committee on Patents and will be made the subject of public hearings before any action is taken to bring the bill before the Senate for adoption. Under the law as at present written the life of a patent is seventeen years, no matter whether it is made use of or not.

NEW VOCALION RECORD SIGNS

Large Metal Replicas of Vocalion Red Records Now Ready for Dealers' Use

The Aeolian Co. has ordered and had delivered a large supply of new model outdoor display signs, featuring the Vocalion red records. The signs are made entirely of metal, equipped with hangers and braces, so arranged as to suspend the record over the sidewalk. The sign proper is 19 inches in diameter and an exact replica of the Vocalion record, though entirely of metal. A number of dealers have already ordered the signs and it is expected that the majority of those handling Vocalion records will take advantage of the opportunity for calling attention to the line.

The Victor Phonograph Shop, of Ellenville, N. Y., was recently sold at auction in a bankruptcy sale.

mands from Emerson dealers for this type of record it will receive a hearty welcome.

Mr. Shuk has appeared on the concert stage both here and abroad, his appearances including the following: Soloist with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, soloist with the Budapest Orchestra, Munich Orchestra, Sofia Orchestra and Constantinople Orchestra. He has also appeared on the concert stage in New York, Pittsburgh, Youngstown and other cities, where his playing won the enthusiastic approval of the newspaper critics.

It is not how much ability you have, but how you use it that counts.

MANAGERS SEE EXPORT BOOM

Normal Basis in Exports Will Be Restored This Year, Predict Speakers at Annual Meeting

A great boom in the country's export trade this year was predicted by export managers at the annual meeting of the Export Managers' Club, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York.

Leland R. Robinson, assistant director of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, who was a speaker at the recent dinner of the club, said that last year's slump was one of values and not of volume. "There is every reason to expect that we have passed the most critical period in our economic readjustment," he said, "and I believe the next two years will show a steady rise in both volume and values of our exports."

Speakers at the meeting emphasized the slogan, "This Is the Year," printed at the head of the program. "We are looking for a great comeback this year," said B. Olney Hough. "Many have forgotten that our export trade, even last year, was just as great as it was before the war. This year we are going to get back on a normal basis. Trade all over the world was demoralized last year, but this year it is coming in faster and faster."

Export managers declared that they were getting two and three times as much business as they were three months ago. One manager was quoted as reporting that his January export business was double that of December, his February business doubled his January business and his March business greater than his February business by a fairly good percentage.

PURCHASES MUSIC STORE

PUBLICITY BY MEANS OF PAMPHLETS

Four-page Folders Containing News Items of Local Interest Can Be Made to Pay Big Dividends in the Way of Increased Patronage

The constant reminder to the public of the name and location and the line carried by a business house is an invaluable asset to any concern. In the talking machine business the competition is particularly keen and the dealer who would remain in the race for existence must utilize every legitimate means of increasing his sales. Publicity is probably the greatest factor in bringing this desirable condition about.

A plan which has been used by several dealers with outstanding success is a personal message from the house to the public through the medium of a monthly bulletin or pamphlet. This pamphlet can be prepared in the shape of a four-page folder of small size. Part of the text of the folder should be given over to local news items of wide public interest. Sufficient space should also be allotted to items concerning four or five records which the dealer is anxious to push each month and a paragraph should be devoted in each issue to the proper care of the talking machine. The cost of publicity such as this is extremely small and the results, when the pamphlets are mailed to a selected clientele, should make the expenditure a first-class investment.

DAYTON, O., STARR CO. TO MOVE

Attractive New Quarters Will Afford Greater Floor Space for the Steadily Expanding Business of Prominent Music House

DAYTON, O., April 7.—The Starr Piano Co., of 27 South Ludlow street, this city, will soon be quartered in its fine new building at 116 North Main street. The new store is being thoroughly remodeled to meet the needs of the steadily expanding business of the company and in addition to a considerably enlarged floor space the company will have the most up-to-date appointments that it is possible to obtain. A much larger stock of Starr phonographs and Gennett records, as well as pianos, will be handled at this establishment.

The difference between a real merchant and a storekeeper is that the merchant uses his brains to devise ways and means of increasing his business and the storekeeper sits in his store like a spider in its web waiting for the customer to come in.

NEW COLUMBIA DIRECTORATE

Important Changes Made in Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co.'s Directorate—H. J. Fuller Now Chairman of the Board—Prominent Industrial and Financial Executives Elected Directors

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co. was held at Bridgeport, Conn., on March 27, a large majority of the stock being represented. At this meeting important changes were made in the directorate for the coming year, and the new board of directors is as follows: H. J. Fuller, chairman Gillette Razor Co., chairman of the board; M. N. Buckner, chairman, New York Trust Co.; G. L. Burr, Guaranty Trust Co.; C. W. Cox, Robert Winthrop & Co.; W. C. Dickerman, vice-president, American Car & Foundry Co.; Van Horn Ely, president, American Railways Co.; G. H. Kinnicutt, Kissel, Kinnicutt & Co.; F. W. Shibley, vice-president and industrial representative of the Bankers' Trust Co.; E. E. Thompson, Crane, Parris & Co., Washington, D. C.; T. F. McClelland and Douglas Parmentier, of the Liberty Industrial Corp., and H. L. Willson, president, Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co.

Francis S. Whitten, formerly chairman of the board of directors of the Columbia Graphophone Co., is no longer a member of the directorate, and is succeeded as chairman of the board by H. J. Fuller.

H. L. Willson, president of the company, in outlining its policies, stated as follows: "It will be the policy of the Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co. to establish itself firmly with the dealer through superior product, sound merchandising policies and extended advertising activities, with a view to further stimulating public demand for phonograph music generally, but through the medium of Columbia instruments and records specifically. It will be the company's particular aim to further establish its good will with the dealer through perfect service and intimate co-operation. Close contact with the dealer and sympathetic knowledge of his problems are of prime importance at this time, in view of the many companies which sprang into existence during the inflation period, which have placed in competition with the high-grade, nationally advertised products cheap and inferior merchandise. The management recognizes the necessity of strictest economy in every department of the organization. Much has been accomplished in this direction in the past thirty days through a reduction of overhead."

JOBBER'S OPTIMISTIC REPORT

C. L. Marshall, Sonora Jobber in Detroit, Gives Interesting Résumé of Conditions—Dealers Are Advertising Consistently and Effectively

DETROIT, MICH., April 6.—J. H. Heinsman, sales manager of the C. L. Marshall Co., of this city, distributor of Sonora phonographs, accompanied by E. D. Coots, field representative from the Sonora executive offices in New York, returned recently from a trip through Michigan and Ohio. In a chat with The World Mr. Marshall commented upon this trip as follows:

"We are pleased to say that we are feeling greatly encouraged over business prospects for the balance of the year since receiving these reports. The trade shows more of a mind and the mood to do something to get things moving, instead of the attitude of calm acceptance of conditions as they are and waiting for business to make its recovery unassisted. Discussions of plans and suggestions for creating business have taken the place of the previously much-talked-of subject, 'Bad Business,' and as a whole it seems we are awakening to the realization that the remedy is in our own hands if we apply it. This is one of the best indications, because all that is necessary is the spirit of co-operation and work, and to get the mental wheels revolving in the right direction and the rest will follow.

"While we are not as yet being burdened with orders for machines, we have been successful in selling our dealers the advertising idea, and their activities in this direction are already showing results. The newspaper campaign now being carried on in Detroit and Cleveland papers, which will be continued the balance of the year, indicates the attitude adopted by Sonora dealers toward the 'Go After It if You Want It' business condition of to-day. Sonora dealers are now doing more advertising in our territory than ever before, and it is being done to greater advantage, because it is being done more carefully and with more consideration as to the results to be obtained. The Sonora Phonograph Co.'s policy in regard to service, its strong belief in the advantages of well-managed advertising and its liberal co-operation along these lines are of very great help to Sonora dealers.

"With few exceptions our dealers have their stocks down to normal, and we are anticipating a steady increase in business from now on. Samples of the new period model Lafayette have just gone forward to the dealers, and this will be followed with the new Queen Anne in a few days."

NEW YORK DEALERS ADD VOCALION

Among the recent dealers to take on the Vocalion line of machines and records in New York City are Schleicher & Sons, piano dealers at 402 East Fourteenth street, and the Broadway Art Stores, with headquarters at 1389 Broadway. The latter concern operates a chain of stores throughout the city. Wm. Kreutzer, of 328 West 125th street, and Marconi Bros., 126 Fifty-ninth street, have also added the Vocalion to their stocks.

THE four new models of the Hallet & Davis Phonograph are destined to be the most popular ever shown.

Characterized by the rare beauty of design and finish and by fineness of construction, these instruments portray the quality so long associated with the name Hallet & Davis.

Nothing has been considered unimportant, no detail too small, which would make for perfection in the construction of these phonographs. The reproducer, tone arm and sound amplifier are especially constructed along the highest scientific principles of carrying sound waves. The motor designed by leading engineers is strong, durable and silent; the whole mechanism is in perfect balance and tested to the thousandth part of an inch.

The cabinets are of the finest woods made with the high piano finish, and are of charming designs which will appeal to the most discriminating buyers. These phonographs present the highest type of artistic blending of a musical instrument into fine furniture.

REGAL PUBLICITY ACTIVITIES

Hanger Featuring Current Releases Added to Dealer Helps—New Comedy Song Will Be Widely Featured in Publicity Campaigns

The advertising department of the Regal Record Co., New York, has just prepared a special window strip featuring a comedy song entitled "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean," which promises to be one of the most popular numbers issued in recent months. This song, which is dedicated to the two vaudeville headliners whose names are mentioned in the title, was recorded for the Regal library by Irving and Jack Kaufman, and judging from all indications Regal dealers are planning to feature this selection as the basis for their current publicity campaigns.

For the first time Regal dealers were furnished this month with a hanger listing current Regal records. This hanger is suitable for use in windows and booths, and forms a welcome addition to the Regal sales helps. The company is planning to issue these hangers regularly, and E. H. Davis, advertising manager of the company, is personally directing the preparation of the designs.

A new form of envelope for Regal records was placed in the hands of the dealers a few weeks ago and has been the subject of favorable comment by Regal representatives throughout the country. It is durable and attractive, and is being used to excellent advantage.

H. P. KERLER NOTES TRADE RISE

Henry P. Kerler, vice-president of Ilsley-Doubleday & Co., New York City, reports a noticeable increase in business in the talking machine field. This company has long specialized in the production of greases and lubricants for the talking machine. The quality of their products has built up for them a large clientele throughout the trade.

PATENT OFFICE RAISES FEES

President Signs Bill Providing for Salary Increases for Patent Office Employees, Additions to Staff, Boosts in Fees—Some Other Changes

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—The bill providing for an increase in the salaries of Patent Office employees and an increase in the personnel of the office, as well as a boost in the prices charged for the filing of patent applications, furnishing copies and abstracts of patents, etc., has been passed. It is hoped that the reorganization will enable the Patent Office to bring its work up to date.

Following the passage of the bill the Patent Office announced that the fee for filing each original application for a patent, except in design cases, will be $20 instead of $15, as at present. The act also provides, in addition to the present fees for recording assignments or other papers, that there shall be paid for each additional patent or application included or involved in one writing 25 cents additional. The new fees are effective on and after April 19, 1922.

Barringer's Victrola Shop, of Kokomo, Ind., has moved to 118 West Mulberry street from its former location on North Main street.

EFFECTIVE WINDOW DISPLAYS

Attractive Service Arranged for the Benefit of Vocalion Record Dealers

The wholesale Vocalion department of the Aeolian Co. has just completed arrangements for a comprehensive window display service for the benefit of the retailers featuring Vocalion records. The displays consist of a number of hand-painted cards of various sizes featuring the latest and most popular record releases in a manner that is bound to attract attention. Retailers who have already taken advantage of the service are enthusiastic over the possibilities and over the excellent effects that may be obtained through its use.

The accompanying illustration shows one of the latest window display sets arranged for demonstration purposes, and affords an excellent idea of the attractive window treatments that may be carried out through the use of the display cards, the accompanying records and various effective "properties." Each of the displays consists of five cards and are furnished to the dealer at cost.

LEAVES EDISON ORGANIZATION

H. R. Skelton, Former Territorial Supervisor for Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Resigns

H. R. Skelton, for many years territorial supervisor for Thomas A. Edison, Inc., has announced his resignation to become effective immediately. The move will be regretted by his associates, for Mr. Skelton joined the Edison association in the old days of the cylinder machine. Recently Mr. Skelton's supervisorship has included Pennsylvania, New York, New England States and all of Canada, although most of his activities were confined to the East.

Mr. Skelton entered the talking machine industry in 1899 with the Columbia Phonograph Co., and became field representative for the Edison laboratories in 1909. He took up his work as supervisor in 1914.

FRENCH INCREASE CUSTOMS DUTIES

A decree relative to customs duties increases for France and Algiers, which was published recently in the French Journal Officiel, affects musical instruments as follows: Pianos, upright and grand, also organs, harmoniums, etc., pneumatic apparatus, etc., 70 per cent general tariff, 35 per cent minimum; violins, bows, etc., 90 per cent general tariff and 45 per cent minimum; phonographs, cylinders, records, 50 per cent general tariff and 25 per cent minimum.

He is therefore well known in this section of the country, and has a host of friends in the trade, who will welcome him as a Jewett representative.

MOVES INTO FINE NEW QUARTERS

New Victrola Department of Griswold, Richmond & Glock Co. to Be One of the Finest in New England When Completed

MERIDEN, CONN., April 8.—The Griswold, Richmond & Glock Co. has moved into the attractive new quarters which have been under course of construction here for some time. The new store consists of one main floor comprising 12,000 square feet, with nearly 5,000 square feet of floor space on basement and mezzanine floors.

A feature of the establishment is an exceedingly fine Victrola department, which is so arranged that the other departments are entirely shut off from it. Two rows of record demonstration booths line both sides of the department and in the rear there are two large rooms for the demonstration of talking machines. At present the finishing touches are being put on this department, which is expected to be one of the best Victor sales rooms in New England.

MEETINGS OF VICTOR JOBBERS' EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Various Phases of the Business Situation Discussed at Committee Meetings Held in Chicago and New York—Close to 100 Per Cent of the Membership of the Association in Attendance

The executive committee of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers held its annual mid-Winter meetings last month from March 12 to 16, inclusive, the first session being held at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, on March 12 and 13, for the benefit of the Western members of the Association who were admitted to the executive committee meeting, and on the 15th and 16th at the Hotel Commodore, New York, for the benefit of the Eastern members.

Both the Chicago and New York session were well attended, close to 100 per cent of the Association being represented at one or the other of the sessions. From all accounts, the meetings were among the most successful and enthusiastic in the history of the organization, enthusiastic because of the success of the new Association program established under the direction of President Buehn, which called for constructive effort to meet the general business conditions and to keep the Victor business on the high level that it has maintained for many years.

Aimless discussions have given way to earnest consideration of sales and exploitation problems, with the realization that these problems exist in every line of business and demand attention. At the Chicago meeting, in addition to the consideration of various matters by the jobbers themselves, there was an address delivered by Gilbert H. Montague, counsel for the Association, who outlined the existing legal situation as it affected the business of the wholesalers and also called attention to various pending legislative matters. Later, L. A. Graham, counselor for the Reincke-Ellis Co., Chicago, delivered a lengthy talk on "The Possibilities and Development of Advertising." On the evening of March 13 the jobbers were the guests of the Mid-West Victor Dealers' Association at the second annual meeting of that body at the Drake Hotel.

The Meeting in New York City

The program of the New York meeting was practically the same as that in Chicago. The same topics were discussed by the jobbers, and Mr. Montague also talked on legal matters. In New York, J. J. Davin, of the Reincke-Ellis Co., took the place of Mr. Graham and delivered a talk on "The Possibilities and Development of Advertising."

At both meetings it was declared the jobbers were very frank in the presentation and discussion of ideas and questions and much valuable information was thus obtained.

On Wednesday evening, March 15, the visiting jobbers were the guests of the New York wholesalers at a dinner at the Palais Royale, where the jobbers and their ladies danced to the music of Paul Whiteman's Orchestra, followed by a theatre party at the Selwyn Theatre, where was witnessed a performance of the musical comedy hit, "The Blue Kitten."

Among those members of the Association who attended either the Chicago or New York meetings, or both, were, of the officers: Louis Buehn, Louis Buehn Co., Philadelphia, president; Arthur A. Trostler, Schmelzer Co., Kansas City, vice-president; W. F. Davisson, Perry B. Whitsit Co., Columbus, secretary; George A. Mairs, W. J. Dyer & Bro., St. Paul, treasurer; and of the executive committee: L. C. Wiswell, Lyon & Healy, Chicago; George E. Mickel, Mickel Bros. Co., Omaha; J. N. Blackman, Blackman Talking Machine Co., New York; J. C. Roush, Standard Talking Machine Co., Pittsburgh; Thomas F. Green, Silas E. Pearsall Co., New York; W. H. Reynolds, Mobile, Ala.; George A. Dodge, Eastern Talking Machine Co., Boston; C. H. Grinnell, Grinnell Bros., Detroit, and Fred H. Putnam, Putnam-Page Co., Peoria, Ill.

Little Ideas That Will Make Big Sales

MOTION never fails to attract the eye. Here's an excellent way to take advantage of this fact. Get your local card writer to make a heavy cardboard hand about 15 x 24 inches, painted in the natural colors. The index finger should point direct to your door. In this card screw two small hooks of the type used to hang up tooth-brushes. On these hooks a sign is hung which can be changed as often as desired. Hang the hand near the front of your window with two black silk threads, one at the wrist and one at the index finger, suspending it from the ceiling. On the changeable card advertise "specials," such as new records, song hits from the show playing in your local theatre, used talking machine bargains, etc. Your salesman can give this large hand a push now and then, and it will keep in motion from six to seven minutes, like the pendulum of a clock. From the street it is hard to see how the hand is suspended and what caused it to move. The message on the card is a direct suggestion to the customer, and the finger pointing to your door urges immediate action.

* * *

THE talking machine manufacturers supply you with handsome record supplements every month, beautifully printed on good stock. Yet a great deal of their effect is lost if you use a rubber stamp to put your name on them. Stamping generally falls to the office boy's lot, and that young gentleman, in his careless way, puts it on crooked or upside down or with so little ink that it is entirely illegible. Get your local printer to put on your name and address in type. The cost is so small and the improvement in appearance so great that it is foolish economy to do it the rubber stamp way. Insert above your name two or three record hits from the bulletin. A dealer who tried this method found that the records he featured above his imprint sold in large numbers.

THERE is no reason why one cannot afford to devote a window display periodically to talking machine accessories. In fact, such a window display used now and then proves conclusively to the public that you are truly rendering service. The following idea can be employed: Make a shelf or low platform running the entire length of your window, about 18 inches from the floor and 15 inches deep. Cover this with white crepe paper, both on the front and on the top. Divide this every 12 inches with a strip of blue ribbon or narrow blue paper. These strips go over the top, as well as the front. This divides your shelf into sections. On top of the shelf, in the center of each section, place one accessory. In the first, put albums; in another, automatic stops; in another, a record light; in another, an electric winding device; in another, record repeater; in another, record cleaner, oil, polish and graphite; in another, a display of needles, etc., etc. Below each accessory, in the square on the front of your platform, place a card 9 inches x 12 inches with a red border. This card bears the name of the accessory shown on top of the platform, followed by a few words telling what it is, and ending with the price. Quote a bargain price on every item, a few cents under the regular price, and, in small type under the price, print "during this display." Above the long platform set a sign 15 inches high by 6 feet long which reads: "Bargains in Accessories for Your Talking Machine." Back of this display set several talking machines with the accessories attached. Streamers should lead from the accessories on the machine to the accessories on your platform.

ATALKING machine shop in New York State, which enjoys a phenomenal business in records, considers its success due chiefly to the self-service idea it uses in the record booths. The device is simply a slanting shelf fixed to the back of the record booth, just high enough to clear the machines. Each record has a separate space of its own on the shelf, which holds from six to eight records in a row, depending on the width of the booth. Construct your shelf as follows: Across the back of the booth fix a strip of wood on which the records rest. On the front of this nail a flange to keep the records from sliding off. Below this shelf place a V-shaped piece to brace the shelf against the wall. At the point where the top of the records rest against the wall fix another strip, running the entire length of the booth. Between each record space, leading from this top strip down to the flange, an upright strip should be set slantwise. In back of these upright strips and halfway up fix a strip running the entire length of the shelf. When the record is put in place this last strip supports it. All of the wood that is exposed should be covered with felt, which looks well and protects the records. When planning your shelf figure how many 10 or 12-inch records your wall space will hold with  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch space between each record. Make more 10-inch spaces than 12-inch because of the greater sale in small-size records. Above each record space fix a card lettered with a selling talk, each card being devoted to one general class of records, so that it will do for any record of this class. Here are some suggestions:

- (For violin records:) "We have sold over a thousand copies of this violin record. Try it!"
- (For popular songs:) "It's easy to find out why this popular hit is popular! Do it now."
- (For dance records:) "Do you dance? Here's one they are all playing now."
- (For operatic records:) "A great artist—a great song—a great success! Try it!"
- (For quartets:) "There are thousands of quartet records, but this is one in a thousand."
- (For comic records:) "Frowns are plentiful, but laughs are scarce. That's why everybody is buying this comic hit."

* * *

THAT "air space" up under the ceiling of your store should earn something for you, instead of being a dead loss. Here's a way to put it to work: From stiff cardboard cut out a circle 24 inches in diameter. It should be bright in color—orange is good. Put a little wooden peg through the center, then place a record over the peg on either side of your orange circle flat against the card. Rubber bands, wrapped around the peg, will hold these records in place. Above the record, letter its title in black or dark blue. Below put the words, "Just hear it!" Letter the back in the same way. Now hang this orange and black "bull's eye" from the ceiling in the center of your store, about ten feet from the floor, where it will get a good light. Hang it with two black threads, instead of one, so that it will not twist sidewise. Everybody coming in will see your sign and record sales will show the result.

YOU probably handle half a dozen or more different kinds of talking machine needles—loud, medium and soft steel needles; also fibre needles, semi-permanent needles, etc. Here's a little wrinkle that will simplify your selling and make for quick service. It also makes it unnecessary to tear open packages to show the goods. Take a heavy card, about 8 inches wide by 6 inches deep. Across the top letter these words, inserting your name in the blank space:

THE _____ NEEDLE CHART

In a row across the center of the card fasten one sample of each of your needles, with its name and price. Then put these words across the bottom:

HELPS YOU COME QUICKLY TO THE "POINT"

Mount the card on a dark mat, so it won't show fingermarks when handled. When a customer can't explain the kind of needle she wants hand her the chart and she'll "come quickly to the point."

* * *

MONEY talks, and there is nothing like seeing the actual cash to impress people with the price of an article. Also, the sight of real money is always interesting. Therefore, if you are featuring terms put several favorite models in your window. On each machine is a card that reads: "You can buy this model for $5 per week." To the card attach a new five-dollar bill. Follow the same plan for all machines in the window, changing the amount of money according to the terms on each model. Instead of the terms you can feature the amount of the first payments, if you prefer, or display your machines as complete outfits, grouping each machine with the records, albums, needles, accessories, which are included in your offer and covered by the terms mentioned. The total amount of money on display is not large, and each night you can put the signs away for safekeeping.

French Nestor and Harry W. Nethken Take Over Victor Wholesale Business in Jacksonville, Fla., Which Will Be Operated Under the Name of the French Nestor Co.—Important Move

PITTSBURGH, PA., April 3.—French Nestor, for the past five years associated with the Standard Talking Machine Co., Victor wholesaler in this city, as vice-president and general manager and for several years before that connected with the W. F. Frederick Piano Co., in charge of that company's talking machine department, resigned on April 1 for the purpose of taking over the Florida Talking Machine Co., Victor wholesaler in Jacksonville, Fla., which will be operated in the future under the title, "The French Nestor Co.," with Mr. Nestor as president.

Associated with Mr. Nestor in the new company as vice-president and treasurer will be Harry W. Nethken, prominent business man of Pittsburgh and particularly active in the various departments of the coal business.

Mr. Nestor is well acquainted with the business situation in Florida from the fact that he has during the past few years made numerous trips to that section. Mr. Nethken has a Winter home at St. Petersburg, Fla., and is likewise well acquainted in that section.

Immediately upon severing connection with the Standard Co. Mr. Nestor went to Jacksonville, where he will make his permanent home. The headquarters of the company will be continued at the present address, 226 East Forsythe street, and plans are under consideration for remodeling the premises and making them strictly up to date in every particular.

NEWARK HOUSE ADDS REGAL LINE

NEWARK, N. J., April 6.—The Broad & Market Music Pub. Co., of this city, has just taken on the Regal line of records, which it will handle exclusively in the future. This concern is one of the busiest sheet music and talking machine record establishments in the city.

FEW "TALKERS" IN FORT WAYNE

Canvass of Assessors Discloses the Fact That Lucrative Territory Is Open to Energetic Merchandisers Who Are Alive to the Situation

FORT WAYNE, IND., April 6.—The result of an investigation made by county assessors here recently disclosed the interesting fact that in 664 homes in this city canvassed by the assessors only 190 talking machines were found. This is considerably less than one-third. In the rural districts only thirty-nine talking machines were found in a canvass covering 556 homes.

This report is of special interest to talking machine dealers here and indications now point to a move on the part of the merchants to adopt more energetic selling methods in order to increase their sales in this territory.

SEALED PARCEL POST PACKAGES

Enclosure of Written Matter Makes Them Liable to First-class Mail Rates

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—Amendment of the postal regulations recently so as to provide for the sealing of parcel post packages where the contents are indicated on the wrapper did not permit inclosure of instructions or other written communications which have not in the past been considered permissible additions to fourth-class or parcel post matter. Officials of the Post Office Department have received a number of reports indicating that persons and concerns mailing sealed packages have adopted the practice of inclosing written matter.

Such unauthorized inclosures, it is pointed out, properly subject the entire parcels to postage at the first-class rate, and postmasters at all offices have been instructed to maintain a careful watch for matter of this nature. When it is desired to accompany a package with a written communication it should be in the form of a letter in an envelope properly sealed and stamped, which may then be attached to the outside of the parcel.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY AIDS DEALERS

Window Displays and Advertising Featuring Irish Melodies Bring Profits to Merchants

Talking machine dealers throughout the country took advantage of St. Patrick's Day to push the melodies of "Old Erin" and as a result many of these records were sold. Window displays in which green was the predominating color and the shamrock was in evidence and advertising which featured Irish songs brought extra profits to many merchants. The plan of special advertising and window displays during holidays is always a profitable one. Decoration Day is the next holiday and an unrivaled opportunity is offered to dealers to feature patriotic records in window displays and suitable advertising.

GIGLI VISITS BLOUT ESTABLISHMENT

Benjamin Gigli, Victor artist and tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Co., was a recent visitor at the establishment of Emanuel Blout, Victor dealer, at 2799 Broadway, New York, according to A. J. Levine, manager of the store. Mr. Gigli purchased a quantity of talking machine supplies which he will take with him on his annual visit to Europe in the near future.

ROOS HEIR ARRIVES

Nestor Roos, well known in the wholesale traveling field, is receiving the congratulations of his friends upon the arrival at his home last week of a baby boy. Mr. Roos is now the owner of a "millionaire's couple," as a baby girl has been an heiress to the Roos fortunes for several years past.

The talking machine department of Bry's Music Shop, Memphis, Tenn., has been greatly enlarged and a complete stock of Victor and Edison machines is on display.

The ordinary steel needle (left), being tapered, increases in diameter and wears the sides of the record grooves. The Sonora Semi-Permanent needle (right) has parallel sides, increases the record's life and plays many times without changing.

NEEDLES

No matter what phonograph you sell, Sonora Semi-Permanent Needles, used in demonstrating instruments and records, have a double advantage—they bring out the full beauty of the music and thus help sales—and they sell easily and rapidly themselves. These economical, long-lived needles also save your demonstration records because they do not score the grooves. (See comparison above.)

No dealer who prides himself on quality merchandise can neglect to stock Sonora Semi-Permanent Needles. Phonograph owners prefer them.

Need of Discarding Apathy for Hard Work

By J. H. TREGOE, Secretary-treasurer, National Association of Credit Men

I believe it is peculiarly our responsibility just now to work harder than ever. Nothing would be so hindering to our restoration and so out of tune with the needs of the business situation as to become apathetic and simply say that progress cannot be made because conditions are against it.

Many commercial fatalists at the present time are, I believe, slumbering in this delusion. We the situation with the best of cheer and thus achieve the highest of results. He who waits for the revival of business will wait a long, long time. He who becomes apathetic is nothing more or less than a fatalist; and the fatalist eventually drifts into a dangerous slumber. The gospel of work should be constantly on our lips and should be expressed in our actions. Never was it so necessary for our people to be alert, to be scanning the horizon, to be thoughtful, to be just and to be at it eternally.

The power of human effort is immeasurable. The sluggishness of human apathy is immeasurable also. One is pitted against the other. We hope most fervently that throughout the entire nation there will soon be a springing to the colors and a determination to get the business of this country of ours once again into normal channels.

CALL FOR RECORD-CARRYING CASES

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 3.—The campaign on record-carrying cases conducted by Topham's, Ltd., is attracting much attention among talking machine dealers. A number of retailers have found these record-carrying cases possess great sales possibilities. Many report a decided demand on the part of the buying public for a carrying case of this character. Topham's, Ltd., is exceptionally well qualified to produce carrying cases, due to its many years' experience in the production of trunks and general leather goods. It is intended to energetically continue this campaign during the future.

VAN NUYS FIRM OPENS NEW STORE

VAN NUYS, CAL., April 1.—The Van Nuys Furniture & Undertaking Co. here has secured an attractive location on Sylvan street, in which the music department of the concern will be housed. Installation of record demonstration booths and record racks is under way. The department will be in charge of Miss Mary Johnstone, who is well known in this vicinity as a musician of unusual attainments.

Phonographic Epigrammatics

By HAYWARD CLEVELAND

"Brevity is the soul of wit," but it is also the life of business. Say it in the fewest words consistent with clarity and courtesy.

The orderly plan of the universe sets a high example for us in the conduct of our mundane affairs.

"All is lost save honor" might be changed to—Honor secure, nothing else really matters.

Never to be recalled: Life—yesterday—a dishonorable act—the spoken word, and particularly the written word, after you have mailed it!

He who harnesses time harnesses fortune.

Do not locate on the wrong side of the right street, for if you do you may pay a part of the other fellow's rent.

Mere volume does not mean prosperity; it may camouflage disaster.

The dullest trade hour should be the liveliest introspectively and constructively.

Answer letters promptly. You would not insult a man, would you, by replying to a verbal inquiry to-morrow or next week?

"Hitch your wagon to a star." That is, aspire! You will reach a higher level by so doing.

Yes and no. The two most powerful words in the English language. Anything added to either but detracts therefrom.

F. W. CLEMENT VISITS NEW YORK

F. W. Clement, manager of the Emerson Phonograph Co.'s branch in Chicago, was a visitor to New York recently, conferring with the executives regarding plans for his Spring campaign. Mr. Clement spoke optimistically of the general situation in Chicago territory, stating that the dealers were reporting a steady improvement in sales which he believed would continue throughout the year.

A first-class salesman must necessarily be an executive. He must meet and surmount difficulties constantly. This means he must do his own thinking. Which naturally leads to the conclusion that a salesman who does not use his head will eventually become a "has been."

H. A. YERKES IS VICE-PRESIDENT

Elected to This Position With Columbia Graphophone Co. at Recent Meeting

At a recent meeting of the stockholders and directors of the Columbia Graphophone Co., held at the company's executive offices in New York, several changes were made in the executive personnel and directorate. One of the most important of these changes was the election of H. A. Yerkes as a vice-president of the company. Mr. Yerkes, who has been assistant general manager of the Columbia Graphophone Co. for a number of years, now becomes vice-president and assistant general manager. He is one of the most popular members of the talking machine trade and has a host of friends who will be delighted to know of his well-deserved promotion.

F. J. Ames, who is secretary of the Columbia Graphophone Co., has been elected a member of the board of directors, and the complete directorate of the company is as follows: F. J. Ames, H. C. Cox, G. W. Hopkins, H. L. Willson and H. A. Yerkes.

The executive personnel of the Columbia Graphophone Co. is the following: H. L. Willson, president and general manager; H. A. Yerkes, vice-president and assistant general manager; H. C. Cox, vice-president and treasurer; G. W. Hopkins, vice-president and general sales manager; F. J. Eames, secretary; John J. Brands, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer, and J. J. Munro, assistant treasurer.

Hard work isn't of much use unless it is directed in the proper channels.

RED SEA DISTRICT A GOOD MARKET

Talking Machines, Accordions and Mouth Organs Supplanting Indian Pipe and Drum in That Section—Room for American Instruments

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—The Red Sea district, says Consul Cross at Aden, in a report to the United States Department of Commerce, presents a market for American musical instruments which is capable of extensive development.

The African natives in this region, says the Consul, have no music of their own except a rhythmic handclapping accompanied by chanting, and the Indian community, which composes 20 per cent of the population of Aden and spreads down the coast, has only Indian pipes and drums of a peculiar type. But they all like phonographs and mouth organs. Practically no instruments have been imported since before the war and the old ones are worn out. It is possible to obtain German mouth organs, which retail at Rs. 1-8-0 (Rs. 3.45 = $1.00), and Indian harmoniums can be specially ordered from Bombay to sell at Rs. 120. A few old Australian phonographs, which get out of order very easily, sell at Rs. 65. Otherwise, Aden is devoid of music except of the most primitive type, and performers on harmoniums, accordions, mouth organs and phonographs are looking to America for supplies. Records will sell at an average of Rs. 3-8-0, or a little over a dollar. Sheet music will sell among the European residents.

The chief considerations as to instruments are cheapness, durability and ease of playing. At present only one firm is dealing in music, but several others have indicated to the Consul their desire to take on this business.

PAUL S. FELDER VISITS NEW YORK

Secretary and Treasurer of Philip Werlein, Ltd., New Orleans, Has Good News of New Orleans

Paul S. Felder, secretary and treasurer of Philip Werlein, Ltd., New Orleans, was a visitor to New York recently. He came on to attend the executive sessions of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers in New York City, as well as to attend to several other business matters of importance.

In chatting with The World Mr. Felder said that business in New Orleans has at no time suffered a severe depression; that 1921 was a good year for his company and that 1922 has every promise of being as good, if not better. He said the agricultural sections of the State of Louisiana have suffered somewhat, but that the general situation is improving.

PLANS FOR FOREIGN TRADE MEETING

Many Experts to Be Present at Annual Convention to Be Held in Philadelphia in May

The program is being rapidly completed for the Ninth National Foreign Trade Convention to be held in Philadelphia on May 10, 11 and 12, when, in addition to many experts in foreign trade representing the U. S. Government, there will be present some of the leading business men of the country, together with foreign traders from all parts of the globe. Secretary Hoover, of the Department of Commerce, is showing a particularly active interest in the forthcoming convention, in which the representatives of his department will play a prominent part.

HOLDS FORMAL OPENING

FAIRMONT, W. VA., April 4.—The Kelly Music Co. recently held the formal opening of its new store, where Columbia Grafonolas and records will be handled exclusively. A reception was held for three hours in the evening and it is estimated 5,000 people visited the store during this time. The store is ideally appointed, with eight attractive demonstration rooms and a handsome display floor which may be used as an auditorium seating 500 people. Mack's Orchestra entertained at the opening.

CHILIAN FIRM DESIRES AGENCY

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 10.—A mercantile firm in Chile wishes to secure an agency for the sale of talking machines, records, needles and accessories, pianos, player-pianos and sheet music, according to a request received by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce here. Quotations should be given c. i. f. Chilean port and correspondence should be in Spanish. References are offered. # STEGER

the finest reproducing Phonograph in the World

THE greatest achievement of a phonograph is to reproduce music as it was originally played—with all the sparkling vivacity of voice or instrument. And this is the attainment of the incomparable Steger which creates to perfection the illusion of reality. Every note that issues from the Steger is true to life, a faithful echo of the human voice or instrumental skill of the master.

Its many exclusive features, the wonderful Steger tone-arm, the scientifically-designed sound chamber of even-grained spruce and the get-at-able record file, have won universal recognition for the Steger as the finest of reproducing phonographs.

WIN SALES WITH THE STEGER

From the standpoint of sales the beautiful Steger offers great possibilities to the aggressive dealer. It is backed by an extensive and profitable merchandising plan that adds immeasurably to the value of Steger representation.

There is still desirable territory open. Write for the Steger proposition today!

BISHOP JOINS BLACKMAN FORCES

Former Manager of Loeser's Victor Department Added to Blackman Staff—Will Visit Talking Machine Trade in New York City

J. N. Blackman, president of the Blackman Talking Machine Co., New York, Victor wholesaler, announced recently that W. H. Bishop, formerly manager of the Victor department of Fredk. Loeser & Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., has been appointed a member of the company's sales staff. Mr. Bishop, who has been identified with the Victor industry for a number of year, will visit the trade in New York City, working in co-operation with Walter Grew, of the Blackman sales force, who also covers New York City.

With the addition of Mr. Bishop to its staff, the Blackman Talking Machine Co. now has five well-trained men on its traveling sales force. C. L. Johnston, sales manager of the company, is also visiting the trade frequently, and Fred P. Oliver, vice-president and general manager of the Blackman Talking Machine Co., has been spending quite some time away from his desk in order to co-operate with the Blackman clientele in every possible way.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., New York, the well-known Victor wholesalers, gave the second of their series of informal recitals by prominent Victor artists for the benefit of Victor dealers on Friday afternoon, March 24, the star of the occasion being Madame Hulda Lashanska, popular soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., who recently joined the Victor staff of artists. Madame Lashanska's first records appeared in the February Victor record supplement and she sang one of the numbers, "Canzonetta," for the benefit of the Ditson audience, together with "Annie Laurie," to her own accompaniment, and several other lighter selections.

Although suffering from the after effects of a severe cold Madame Lashanska disclosed a voice of superb quality. She has an attractive personality and made a distinct hit with the big crowd of metropolitan Victor dealers who turned out to hear her sing, presenting many of them with her photograph duly autographed. The program was opened with a violin and harp duet by Miss Constance Carla and Miss Anna Welch, head of the Ditson harp department, and was greatly enjoyed.

P. E. W. Carlson, head of the wholesale Victor department of Chas. H. Ditson & Co., is making arrangements for a number of recitals by prominent Victor artists in the near future, in view of the wide interest that has been aroused in the recitals already given.

Levi J. Wing Invents Phonograph Operated by Power Plant of Player-piano

Levi J. Wing, of East Orange, N. J., has just been awarded a patent on a new type of talking machine to be operated in conjunction with the player-piano and by means of a motor, constructed on a vacuum principle, and which may be connected directly with the power plant of a foot-driven player-piano. Suitable means are provided for regulating the speed of the turntable of the talking machine. The new instrument is also provided with receptacles for holding both talking machine records and music rolls for player-pianos.

In the patent papers it is stated that means are provided for playing the talking machine and player-piano in synchrony, when desired, although it is also possible to operate both instruments independently.

Business Betterment Continues—Lyradion Scores—Stewart Co.'s Cheery Report—New Lines for Collins—News of the Month

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., April 9.—Talking machine dealers in this city express general satisfaction with the business transacted during the month of March. They believe that a steady and sure progress can be found in most lines and they attribute this to a slight lifting of the business depression. A large number of the retailers report the greatest volume of sales in the larger and higher-priced machines, which seem to move much more quickly than the medium-priced lines.

Sonora Period Models in Demand

"Business, on the whole, is fairly quiet in our department," says C. H. Becherer, manager of the Sonora department of Chas. Mayer & Co. "The boom which I have anticipated for this year has not arrived yet. However, the period models are selling better than ever and the people appear to be gradually educating themselves to an appreciation of this type of machine."

Advertising in Theatres

H. E. Whitman, of the Circle Talking Machine Co., says: "Business is slowly but steadily growing and quite an improvement is to be noted over the February business. The higher-priced and the portable types of machines have been our best sellers lately. We have opened a new medium of advertising through the Lyradion and Radio Concert Grand phonograph, which will play our Victor records the first of every month at the Colonial Theatre. The newest releases will be featured by this machine, which is able to reach the farthest corners of the big motion picture house."

Lyradion Concert Grand in Theatre

The Colonial Theatre is the first Indianapolis Theatre to install the big concert grand phonograph which is manufactured by the Lyradion Sales & Engineering Co., of Mishawaka, Ind. Arrangements have been made between the theatre management and various talking machine dealers to have new record releases placed on the theatre program periodically for musical numbers which supplement the regular musical features of the theatre. The audience is given an opportunity in this manner to become acquainted with the releases and to hear also selections which they may desire to have played. The first week of the innovation was advertised as Brunswick Music Week.

Public Buys Expensive Victrolas

According to Miss Minnie Springer, manager of the Victor department of the Taylor Carpet Co., business in March was good, particularly in the sale of dance records. "An increase in the sale of high-priced machines is evident," Miss Springer said. "We did an unusually good record business during weeks we featured Caruso and the 'Follies'."

Brunswick Shop to Install Radio

Walter J. Baker, manager of the Brunswick Shop, reports that business, on the whole, was better in March than during the corresponding month of last year. The Stratford model of machine is selling especially well. Mr. Baker is making arrangements to have a radio receiving set installed in the store in the near future.

Columbia Artists Boost Record Sales

W. G. Wilson, manager of the Widener Grafo-nola Shop, was responsible for an entertainment given by Van and Schenck, Columbia artists, at a luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at the time when the two artists were here in official capacity with the "Follies." As a result the Widener store had an exceptionally good "Follies" week. Mr. Wilson says that his best-selling machines at present are the higher-priced Granby models.

Reap Profits From Columbia Ads

An unusually fine example of the returns to be had from added sales effort is to be found in the success which has come to the Columbia Grafo-nola department of the Hook Drug Co., the managers of which are Frank Heuber and N. J. Drummond. This department consists of only three booths, a salesman and two record clerks. It recently won the second prize in an advertising contest conducted by the Columbia Co. The prize was awarded on the basis of wording, spacing and general effectiveness created by the amount of advertising used. The department is doing a good regular business in records, the managers report, although the machines themselves are moving a bit slowly.

Baldwin Sales Picking Up

"Business is gradually improving so that some increase is to be noted over our sales during the early part of last year in spite of the fact that our store is suffering yet from the effects of the fire last November," said C. P. Herdman, manager of the talking machine department of the Baldwin Piano Co. "The bad effect of the confusion incident to the work of remodeling and redecorating the store has been so slight that we feel very optimistic over the future. Machine sales are good, particularly among the more costly models. Business of two years ago was with all classes of trade, but now it is confined largely to persons of means. This difference in the type of trade is reflected in the business of the record department, as the persons who buy the higher-priced machines in turn buy more costly records. As an example of the sort of business we are doing, I can say that one day last week we sold three Brunswick machines the total price of which amounted to $1,190."

Ties Up Window With Movies

J. B. Ryde, of the Fuller-Ryde Music Co., says that his business has been fairly successful through co-operation with the Circle Theatre, a motion picture house, in special window displays. During the last week of March the window featured "Freckles" Barry in "School Days," and instruments dear to a boy's heart were displayed. During the previous week the store obtained marked results by decorating in honor of Boy Scout Week and featuring drums, bugles and other instruments which are used by the Boy Scout troops.

Mr. Ryde is a believer in window display for music stores to the extent of changing at least once a week, and, on special occasions, two or three times a week. "Music dealers should be up to date and show an interest in current events if they would get the best results through interesting the public," Mr. Ryde says.

W. E. Hopkins Visits Edison

W. E. Hopkins, of the Edison Shop, reports that his March business was by far the best month's business of the year, with the record business showing an especially healthy increase. Mr. Hopkins spent the 16th and 17th of March with Thomas A. Edison, having, as he says, a very enjoyable visit with the famous inventor before the latter departed from his home for a trip to Florida.

Pathé Demand Improves

C. S. Dearborn, of the Mooney-Mueller-Ward Co., Pathé distributor, says: "Business has picked up for us and our sales in March were most encouraging. Machines are selling better; that is, the high-grade machines. The lower-priced machines are not selling at all, but there is an increase in record sales."

Starr Phonograph Demand Quickens

According to T. H. Bracken, manager of the Starr Piano Co., business in Starr phonographs during March was better than during March of last year. The increased business was noticeable especially in the more costly machines and in dance records.

Collins Co. Adds Jewel and Meteor Lines

Charles E. Collins, manager of the Collins Talking Machine Co., announces that he has discontinued the Emerson line and will concentrate hereafter on the Jewel and Meteor lines. Mr. Collins believes in "doing one thing well" and his company is making no effort at retail business, but is directing its attention to fully protecting its retail agents. As a result of this policy, Mr. Collins says, the company has very few changes in its retail associates, whether in dull or prosperous seasons.

In connection with factory experts Mr. Collins is working out the unique feature of radio receiving equipment for his machines. "This," he says, "will be the greatest step forward in the development of phonographs since the invention of the phonograph itself. It will multiply a million times the pleasure and utility to be got out of the machine. Our dealers are awaiting with almost breathless interest the outcome of the laboratory trials. With the successful completion of the trials one no longer will be limited to the records he will buy, but he will have always available concerts, speeches, sermons, weather predictions and thousands of other events. A definite announcement will be made soon—in a very few days, we expect—because the radio attachments for reproductions have already been perfected."

Record Demand Exhausts Red Seal Supply

George Stewart, of the Stewart Talking Machine Co., Victor distributor, says that reports received from Victor dealers throughout Indiana indicate that their March record business was very brisk. "We have enjoyed the same experience," he said, "as our stock of several March records, especially the Red Seal, has been entirely exhausted. We have had numerous requests from other jobbers asking for shipments of March records, which indicates that the demand is general throughout the country."

A small shipment of the new Victrola No. 280, in red mahogany, was received by the Stewart Co. early in March. Within ten hours after the arrival of the machines they were sent to retail stores and immediate sales were reported. Additional orders for the machines were placed.

Dealers Support Music Memory Contest

The Music Memory Contest featured in the public schools of Indiana is meeting with enthusiastic support throughout the State. Newspapers are giving a large amount of space to publicity and talking machine dealers are taking full advantage of the opportunity to promote the sale of records adapted to the contest.

Regarding the contest, the house organ of the Stewart Talking Machine Co. says: "It is with a feeling of pride and not in a boastful or egotistical manner than we inform dealers that the State Music Memory Contest was 'put across' by Caroline Hobson, head of the Stewart educational department. Through the efforts of Miss Hobson, the State Board of Education and Indiana Federation of Music Clubs were approached on this proposition and they readily promised to give their fullest co-operation and assistance in making this a complete success. You, Victor dealers, are 'on the ground floor'—the State of Indiana is the first one in the Union to make it an annual State movement, so get busy, push the Music Memory Contest in your community and reap some of the harvest which is rightfully yours."

"Made to Order" Re-Creations Popular

As to Edison business in Indiana, H. G. Anderson, general sales manager of the Kipp Phonograph Co., reports: "Our March business showed a very pleasing increase over February. This we believe is due not only to the reduction in the Edison prices on Re-Creations, but also to the general improvement in business conditions throughout the territory. A new venture of the Edison laboratories in the making of 'Made-to-Order' Re-Creations has proven a decided hit and this is helping considerably to increase the business of all dealers."

The Latona Talking Machine Co., of Evansville, has issued $50,000 of preferred stock.

ASSETS EXCEED LIABILITIES

ALLIANCE, O., April 4.—Assets of the Drake & Moninger Co., large dealers in Victor talking machines and records, last week declared bankrupts, will exceed the liabilities by $23,982.34, according to a report of the receiver filed this week in the Common Pleas Court at Canton. The receiver was appointed last week on petition of the principal stockholders, who ask that the company be dissolved. The store expects to weather the situation, officials remarked, and this week an effort will be made to reorganize the business.

The talking machine establishment of Joseph Cohan, 719 North street, Springfield, Mass., was slightly damaged in a recent fire.

The Trade in BOSTON and NEW ENGLAND

324 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, MASS.

BOSTON, MASS., April 8.—March was not a very good month in the talking machine world of New England largely because of labor troubles, which have disturbed such centers, first, as Pawtucket and Providence, and latterly Lawrence and other places. Some concerns have not been materially affected by these untoward conditions, but they are few. For the most part, there has been stagnation, which is not surprising with so many people idle. On the other hand, in localities where business in general has been reasonably good the talking machine trade has shown some advance over March of last year. The business in machines has scarcely kept pace with that in records, all things being equal, for many houses reporting a fairly good call for records have been selling comparatively few machines. There is a general feeling that April is going to make a much better showing; in fact, that May, too, is going to come to the fore with an encouraging total.

Anent That Proposed Luncheon

Sorry there is nothing definite to report on the proposed luncheon of the New England Music Trade Association. President Frank S. Horning, of the Boylston street store bearing his name, has been working hard, in conjunction with Secretary Merrill, to create enough interest so that the trade can get together for a noontime meal, with some good speaker, presumably at the Engineers' Club. It is certainly to be hoped that the executive committee can soon announce some date for this month.

After Chamber of Commerce Members

At a luncheon given a few days ago by President Everett Morss, of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, to a body of Boston merchants at the Copley-Plaza Ernest A. Cressey, of the C. C. Harvey Co., which carries the Victor, Edison and Brunswick, was appointed one of the members of the membership committee of the Associated Bureaus of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Cressey made a special appeal to the music trade in a letter which has just been sent out. This statement is made:

"Through the very large work being accomplished by the Chamber it has evidently been necessary for them to solicit not only moral, but financial, help in carrying on the tremendous work which they are accomplishing, and also new work to follow for the betterment of our vicinity. The directors are now going ahead with the new building project, which you are, no doubt, familiar with, and pushing forward every effort to not only hold the business of Boston and New England from getting away, but to develop still further all business now in progress. It is, no doubt, a most worthy work and cannot but enhance the business possibilities of every concern coming within its scope. May I ask you to consider this project seriously, as you may expect to receive a personal call relative to your decision as to the amount you will subscribe."

C. F. Von Euw, Jr., Engaged

The many Boston friends of Charles F. Von Euw, Jr., of the Steinert staff, are congratulating him on his engagement; his fortunate fiancée being Miss Helen F. O'Connor, of Roxbury, where Mr. Von Euw also resides. Mr. Von Euw is in charge of the record stock room of the Steinert house, and he is widely known to the trade that is supplied by this large company. The marriage of the young couple will not take place before the early Fall.

Henderson Co. Opening New Store

The Henderson talking machine department in the Gilchrist Co.'s store, at the corner of Washington and Winter streets, has been given up. The Henderson Co. in the meantime is opening another store on Federal street close to Dewey square, an excellent business center.

E. F. Carson Pushing Granby Line

Edward F. Carson, whose series of articles in The World is attracting much deserved attention, is pleasantly located at 21 West street, from which headquarters he is pushing the Granby proposition into much new territory. Mr. Carson possesses all the qualifications for leadership in the industrial world and he is destined to win for the Granby much deserved popularity.

Making Fine Display of Brunswick

Harry Spencer is now pleasantly established in his new quarters in the Vose Building, as it was recently announced he was to be, and for display purposes he has on exhibition as many as fifteen types of Brunswick machines, four of which are of the console type. Since opening Mr. Spencer has received a great many visits from prospective dealers who can study the various types of Brunswicks under the most pleasant conditions. These headquarters have been found extremely convenient for Brunswick dealers who do not carry the full line of styles themselves.

R. O. Ainslie Returns From Trip

R. O. Ainslie, of the Hallet & Davis Co., returned to-day from an extended trip through the West and South, which took him into many large cities. Going west he was accompanied by his wife and child, whom he left at Lexington, Ky., which is Mrs. Ainslie's home city, and there she remained, visiting her family. Mr. Ainslie got as far South as New Orleans and while away he was able to interest many dealers in the new Hallet & Davis talking machine, details of which may be found in another part of this issue of The World.

Sonora Lafayette Model Admired

The Lafayette model of Sonora, which has been eagerly awaited by Manager Joe Burke, of the Musical Supply & Equipment Co., has reached Boston and he is exhibiting the model to everyone who drops in. The model is a very handsome one and the Jordan Marsh Co., which carries the Sonora line, has ordered a large consignment of this type. Mr. Burke says business, which was rather quiet early in the month, picked up very appreciably toward the end of March.

J. O. Morris, president of the Musical Supply & Equipment Co., was over in town a short time ago and held a business conference with Joe Burke, the local manager; T. E. Burke and R. V.

New Vocalion Agents in Boston

R. M. Kempton, manager of the Vocalion department of the Aeolian Co. at New York, was over in Boston the middle of March conferring with Manager Wheatley. The latter has been able to interest the Winter street house of F. Vorenburg & Co. in the Vocalion proposition, with the result that this will be one of the important downtown distributing points for this machine. Another downtown house to take on the Vocalion is the Richardson Drug Co., 645 Atlantic avenue.

New Strand Representatives in New England

The Strand bids fair to be widely represented throughout New England before very long and with Arthur W. Chamberlain now associated with Arthur C. Erisman in the wholesale distribution of this new popular-priced instrument there is a combination of intelligence, enthusiasm and activity that is sure to make a big name for the Strand. New accounts which have lately been opened up by Mr. Chamberlain, who devotes his time to traveling about the field, are: The Biddle Piano Co., at Keene, N. H.; B. S. Canner Furniture Co., East Boston; A. McArthur & Co., Boston; Symphony Talking Machine Co., Boston; J. E. Heidner & Son, Holyoke, and Enfield Pharmacy, Enfield, N. H.

Good Reports From Steinert Territory

Manager Kenneth Reed is enthusiastic over the fact that in the Victor territory served by the Steinert Co. there has been a 20 per cent increase in business for the month of March over the same period of a year ago. This increase, Mr. Reed says, is in spite of the fact that in those places where there have been labor troubles naturally the business has been below normal. This popular Victor man has the sympathy of his friends in the accident that befell his wife lately, when she fell and injured herself so that she was confined to her room for a couple of weeks.

Charles Shaw With Widener's

Charles Shaw, lately with the Granby Phonograph Co.'s wholesale department, having for his territory the New England States east of the Connecticut River, is now manager for Widener's, Inc., at 23 West street, succeeding Otto Zerrahn. Widener's carries the Columbia and Granby lines of merchandise.

'Twas a Success and They Know It

It looks from this distance as though the executive meeting of the Victor jobbers over in New York was a great success and for verification of this statement one has but to ask Bob Steinert or George A. Dodge or Ken Reed or Otto Piesendell, for with these the three Boston jobbing houses of Steinert, Eastern and Oliver Ditson Co. were well represented.

Some Recent Visitors

Fred Gardner, head of the Gardner Temple of Music of Lawrence, was a welcome caller on the Boston trade the latter part of last month.

Harry Russell, manager for the Outlet Co., of Providence, R. I., spent a day or two in Boston lately and the Victor distributors in particular were glad to give him a handshake.

Doing Well With Khaki Covers

The manufacture of the khaki covers which the Lansing Sales Co. made such a success of is now being conducted at 2 Hudson street by the Henry Smith Co. It will be recalled that Mr. Smith formerly was with the Lansing Co. and became so well acquainted with the details of this branch of the business that when the Lansing Co. branched out into wider fields he took this manufacture of the covers over on his own account and he is deserving of the marked success with which he is meeting in his present enterprise.

HALLET & DAVIS CO. NOW MAKING TALKING MACHINES

Well-known Boston Piano Manufacturers Announce the Hallet & Davis Phonograph—Machines Are Made in Three Models, English, Colonial and Period—Will Play All Records

BOSTON, MASS., April 4.—After long and careful experiments carried on along highly scientific lines the Hallet & Davis Co., of Boston, is now able to make an announcement to the trade which is of the greatest importance, and concerns a product which is sure to find widespread favor, namely, a new talking machine which takes the honored name of this famous house. Into these machines has been carried all the conscientious workmanship that has made the pianos of this house widely and favorably known, and when these models are given close scrutiny they will be found to be everything that is claimed for them. It is further claimed for them that they are destined to play an important part in raising the general tone of the talking machine and certainly from the artistic standpoint it will be agreed that these Hallet & Davis models are hard to beat. Three things that, of course, were kept closely in mind in getting ready to present these models to the public were artistic cases, the most approved mechanical construction, and tone, which perhaps is the most important of all.

The cabinets are constructed of the finest selected woods, with a high piano finish. In the English and Colonial models the charm of simplicity is shown to splendid advantage, while for those desiring a more elaborate case there are the graceful and exquisite Louis styles.

The reproducer, tone arm and sound amplifier are specially constructed on highest approved scientific laws for carrying sound waves. The motor designed by leading engineers in the industry is strong, durable and silent. Every part of it is mechanically perfect to the thousandth part of an inch. Since there are many different makes of records, a universal tone arm and reproducer are used for playing all kinds of records without attachments, thereby giving access to all the great record libraries of the world. For further convenience each style is equipped with an automatic stop so simple it can be operated by a child.

Model H is of Louis XV style in English brown mahogany and figured American walnut; height, 43 inches; width, 20 inches; depth, 22 inches; equipped with universal reproducer for playing all records, twelve-inch turntable, automatic stop, tone modifier, trimmings nickel plated. $115.

Model J, Queen Anne, is in English brown mahogany and figured American walnut; height, 34¼ inches; width, 36 inches; depth, 21¼ inches; equipped with universal reproducer for playing all records, twelve-inch turntable, automatic stop, tone amplifier, trimmings nickel plated. $135.

Model L, Colonial, is made in English brown mahogany and figured American walnut; height, 34¼ inches; width, 38¼ inches; depth, 22¼ inches; equipped with universal reproducer for playing all records, twelve-inch turntable, automatic stop, tone amplifier, trimmings nickel plated. $185.

Model M, of Louis XVI type, is in English brown mahogany and figured American walnut;

In no case have the details been considered too small to carry out to perfection. The reputation for producing nothing but the best in the renowned Hallet & Davis pianos (which, during over three-quarters of a century, have been awarded 139 gold medals throughout the world) has been zealously guarded in the production of the Hallet & Davis phonograph.

An underpaid employe does not give the best returns. Profits accrue in proportion to the effectiveness of the sales staff and the other units of the business organization. ## DEMONSTRATING THE GRADUOLA

Unique Electric Device Invented by E. M. Wheatley for Window Display Purposes

BOSTON, MASS., April 3.—E. M. Wheatley, manager of the Vocalion Co., of Boston, is the inventor of a unique electric device which is on exhibition in the window of the Vocalion headquarters at 190 Boylston street, and which is attracting much deserved attention. By this device adequate demonstration is given the complete operation of the Graduola, which is the Vocalion's exclusive feature for controlling tone.

Window Display That Attracted

Encased in a small cabinet which is mounted on a stand beside a Vocalion are a pair of small wax hands which electrically operate the Graduola in a very human manner. Just above the hands is a dial with a pointer which moves back and forth simultaneously with the movement of the hands, showing clearly how the volume of tone can be controlled. The entire device with its accompanying Vocalion is exhibited within handsome yellow curtains and the very setting itself invites the passer-by to stop. Once he has stopped he finds something worth while to carefully study. Mr. Wheatley is to be congratulated on his ingenuity.

STEINERT CO. IN ATHOL, MASS.

Paige Establishment Taken Over, Renovated and Formally Opened by Manager Goddard

ATHOL, MASS., April 3.—Saturday, March 25, was a big day in this town, for it marked the opening of what is practically a new talking machine shop, namely, the M. Steinert & Sons Co., which establishment lately was known as C. F. Paige & Co., which the Steinerts bought out. Manager Goddard, who is well acquainted with the Victor line of merchandise, had his hands full on the opening day entertaining the throng of visitors. Each woman was made happy through receiving flowers and a pocket mirror, and it is of double interest that the first day was productive of a number of sales of more or less expensive Victor outfits.

The interior of the shop has been much improved by a series of booths installed by the Unit Construction Co., and with the interior redecorated and refurbished the shop will make a pleasant rendezvous for the musical people of the town, who will be sure to appreciate such an up-to-date store in their midst.

W. H. AVERY OPENS BRANCH STORE

CONCORD, N. H., April 1.—William H. Avery, one of the most progressive talking machine dealers in this State, has purchased a building in Laconia in which he has opened a branch store. Mr. Avery's business in the local store has increased with such rapidity that he has been compelled to install a larger record rack. Approximately 8,000 records are kept in stock at all times.

NEW CAROLA READY FOR TRADE

Machine Introduced Six Years Ago Makes Re-appearance—Has Been Developed Along Interesting Lines—N. I. Schwartz General Manager

CLEVELAND, O., April 3.—The Carola Co., of this city, will shortly return as a factor in the Middle West talking machine industry. The Carola Co. first appeared in the trade in 1916, when it placed a small metal machine upon the market and did some sensational advertising.

Recently the company was reorganized under the direction of N. I. Schwartz, who is treasurer of the Carola Co. of to-day, and the machine once more makes its appearance in talking machine circles. The new Carola is now in production and is rapidly being placed in the dealers' hands in all parts of the country. The machine stands 22 inches high when closed and 31 inches high when open. It is 11½ inches in width and 13 inches deep. The new Carola is finished in mahogany only and is furnished with or without albums, which hold some thirty-six records.

The officers of the company are: H. Geltman, president; A. E. Riestler, vice-president; N. I. Schwartz, treasurer and general manager, and W. A. Stinchcomb, secretary.

VOCALION ARTISTS TO APPEAR

John Charles Thomas, Marie Sundelius and Yerkes Orchestra to Be Present at Annual Banquet of Talking Machine Men, Inc.

E. G. Brown, secretary of The Talking Machine Men, Inc., announces that in addition to the artists already scheduled to appear at the annual banquet and entertainment of that organization on April 20 the Aeolian Co. has arranged for the appearance of John Charles Thomas, popular baritone, Marie Sundelius, grand opera soprano, and the Yerkes S.S. Flotilla Orchestra, all notable Vocalion record artists, at the Pennsylvania during the course of the evening.

Morris Grossman, formerly connected with Szilagyi & Co., 1580 First avenue, New York, Columbia and Sonora dealer, sailed recently for Europe. He plans to engage in the import and export business in Bratislava, Czecho-Slovakia.

Broadcasting Records by Radio—Edison Dealers Convene—May Co.'s Entertaining Stunt—Talented Columbians—News of Month

CLEVELAND, O., April 8.—Linking of the talking machine trade and radio activities here is recognized with the turn of this month. Though in its present form radio has been in progress in this district only since the beginning of the year, that it is a fixture is admitted by leaders in the talking machine industry. T. W. Wade, of the Vocalion Co. of Ohio, for one, points out that the tremendous hit made by certain records has been inspired by the music broadcasted from the Cleveland station.

This station is operated by the Cox Laboratories, Warren R. Cox, head of the enterprise, having recently returned to Cleveland with Government sanction. The station WHK uses a 260-meter wave length and serves a radius of 200 miles. Victor machines and records supplied by the Buescher Co. are used, as well as talent from local theatres.

Standard machines for this purpose, and records as well, points out E. H. Poad, head of the Cleveland Radio Association, serve the purpose best, because they have less surface noises.

New Cheney Agencies

New outlets for Cheney products have been created by the Cheney Phonograph Sales Co., the latest being the Boggs & Buhl Co. and the National Phonograph Co., at Pittsburgh. The significant development of the last few weeks, in the opinion of T. R. Buhl, secretary-treasurer, is the steady improvement in demand for the higher-priced and console models.

J. L. DuBreuil Recovers

J. L. DuBreuil, district manager of the Brunswick Co., is back on the job after a brief illness, voicing his now well-known phrase about being "full of pep and never better," which, of course, inspires the energetic E. F. Hughes, service manager; Miss Florence Turner, secretarial expert, et al., to still greater achievement. Mr. DuBreuil was spending the early part of April in a tour of the territory, notably in the vicinity of Buffalo.

Market Music Co. in New Home

The Market Music Co. is now completely installed in its new quarters. Every week during the past month parties of a get-together nature have been held. J. H. Schulhoff, manager, is enthusiastic about the new location and says that record sales have been doubled since the new store was occupied.

Columbia Home Talent Entertains

The latest get-together party of the members of the Cleveland Columbia Graphophone Co. staff brought forth the Columbian Jazz Orchestra, operated by Geo. E. Krauslick, service department manager at the branch. There was plenty of home talent to sing and dance to the strains of said band, notably the work of Miss Frances E. Miller, secretary to Branch Manager S. S.

Columbia Branch Has Jazz Orchestra

Larmon. Be that as it may, it looks as though the band were going to be a permanent addition to the good family spirit at the branch.

Convention of Edison Dealers

One of the most important events in local phonograph circles during the past month was the convention of Edison dealers of Ohio held by the Phonograph Co. Over 100 dealers from all parts of the State were present and a sure-fire entertainment was staged by the local offices.

Luncheon at the Cleveland Athletic Club started the affair and immediately afterward a session was held at the rooms of the Phonograph Co. L. M. Bloom, treasurer, welcomed the different delegations and spoke along lines impressing the different plans for the coming year and asking for the same co-operation on the part of dealers that the Phonograph Co. has had in the past.

The winners in the annual sales contest were introduced. They were: J. H. Barnes, the George E. Buss Co., New Philadelphia; William Snyder, the T. S. Porter & Sons Co., Lima; A. B. Sauer, the George E. Clarke Co., Lorain. The winners, with the exception of Mr. Barnes, were called upon to tell of the methods they had found most efficient in closing sales. Mr. Barnes was prevented from attending by the sickness of his father.

T. X. Dunigan, prominent local attorney, with offices in the Citizens' Building, was introduced. In his address he dwelt on the legal end of the business, calling attention to both the rights and limitations connected with selling machines and explaining fully the methods of replevin and the different angles of chattel mortgages. That the speech was well received was shown by the numerous questions asked Mr. Dunigan when he announced an open forum. The idea of thus throwing light on the legal aids at the command of the phonograph man is original and well worth copying.

The meeting adjourned to the Carleton Terrace, where an elaborate banquet was served. B. F. Keith's vaudeville theatre was the final stopping place—although rumor has it that a few kept right on celebrating after the show.

A Clever Entertainment Stunt

Score another for Dan E. Baumbaugh, whose efforts as manager make the Cheney, Brunswick and Victor lines break real records in the phonograph department of the May Co. The May Co. is the largest department store in Ohio and boasts of a manager in this particular department who doesn't need to doff his chapeau to the best in the country.

But that's getting away from the story. On St. Patrick's Day the May Co. staged a gigantic masque ball at the Chamber of Commerce rooms and the duty of evolving the entertainment feature fell upon Mr. Baumbaugh. Local talking machine circles are still telling the story of how he did it, and at the same time created a tie-up that scored.

The 300 couples at the affair were all invited into the main ballroom, where, to the strains of a large orchestra, the incarnation of "The Sheik," "Peggy O'Neil" and other record characters strode across the stage amid "Ohs" and "Ahs" from the crowd. Each character wore a number and the audience was outfitted with slips which had blank spaces meant to be filled in with the name of the record represented by each different character.

Mr. Baumbaugh as "The Sheik," James Schofield as "Dapper Dan," Miss F. Nolish as "Strut, Miss Lizzie," Mrs. Dowling as "Rebecca," Miss Marquand as "April Showers," Miss Shrive as "Sahara Rose," Miss Lewis as "Sally," E. H. Mills as "Patches," Miss Hebrown as "Marie," Miss Lotz as "Granny," Miss Gehring as "Peggy O'Neil," they kept the crowd guessing. And we mustn't forget Miss Elsie Baer, manager of the talking machine department of the M. O'Neil Co., of Akron. She caused a riot as "Pretty Baby." When the stunt was over and the gray-haired judges solemnly surveyed the 600 masqued dancers present to select the best costume Miss Baer's rig won on a walkaway. And it's also interesting to note that Mr. Baumbaugh's impersonation of "The Sheik" scored first among the men. It was a great impersonation.

Monthly Magazine on Records

William Murstein, manager of the Alhambra Music Co., is publishing a monthly magazine which he circulates throughout his district. The leaflet is gotten up in a breezy, readable fashion and tells interesting points about the latest records. Mr. Murstein is rated as one of the best Brunswick men in the district and has originated many window displays of records that have been copied elsewhere.

Opens New Retail Store

The Smerda Music Co. recently celebrated the opening of a retail store at East Fifty-eighth street and Broadway, by distributing photographs of famous Victor artists, some of which were autographed. The Smerda Music Co., which is under the direction of Frank Smerda, does a large business among foreign-born people, specializing on foreign records.

THE TWIN CITIES

Jobbers and Dealers in Northwest Sanguine and Alive Regarding Business, Present and Prospective—Columbia Campaign Wins Out

MINNEAPOLIS and ST. PAUL, MINN., April 4.—Spring is coming apace in the Northwest, but the pace is too slow to find approval with the music merchants. They had none too much out of the past Winter and they are hoping that the advent of Spring may brighten up things a little. Without question the people will respond promptly to any general revival of trade and industry and the entire Northwest will react quickly to well-directed impulses with a general scope. Railroads are showing marked signs of life and this is the most hopeful indication for some time. It is believed that the farmers will do all that may reasonably be expected of them and as the wise men declare that there is an upward tendency in farm product prices the Northwest should be on an even keel again some time next Fall, after the crops have begun to move in large quantities.

A canvass of the jobbers in talking machines in this territory finds the managers sanguine and wide-awake. George A. Mairs, head of the Victrola department of W. J. Dyer & Bro., states that after conferring with jobbers from other parts of the United States he is satisfied that the Twin City field is in as good condition as any part of the country.

"The new types of Victrolas are moving most satisfactorily," remarked Mr. Mairs. "We received nice orders at the start and already have received numerous 'repeat' orders. This indicates that the Victor dealers can do business when they can meet the public taste and the public purse. We are very confident that the year will prove remunerative to all dealers who are willing to do a little work to get business."

The radical reduction in the price of Edison records has given a veritable boom to the record trade in the St. Paul and Minneapolis retail stores, according to the officers of the Minnesota Phonograph Co. The new model machine to compete with the $150 class of other makes also has been of material aid to the local merchants. Discussing the wholesaling of Edison machines and records, Laurence H. Lucker, general distributor, states that it could be better, but all in all it is jogging along very nicely.

Manager H. F. Sharar, of the phonograph department of G. Sommers & Co., expected to see business fall off in March and April, but to his surprise each month showed better totals than its respective predecessor. The record business would have been regarded as phenomenal a year ago. An increase in machine sales of Pathé phonographs is partly due to the special prices that have been quoted to the trade.

One of the most extensive publicity campaigns ever conducted through the newspapers of the Northwest in the phonograph field is being conducted by the Columbia Graphophone Co., under the direction of W. L. Sprague, manager of the Northwestern service. It is bound to bring results, as the Columbia product has a substantial following in this part of the country.

A "jumbo" talking machine made by Edward Lenz, 199 West Robie street, St. Paul, is attracting the attention of phonograph devotees. It not only is a giant size, but the tone volume is said to be seven times that of the ordinary machine. The explanation given by Mr. Lenz for producing his phenomenon is that he wanted one so large that the children could not reach the mechanism to tamper with it.

The Cleveland Symphony Orchestra played a selection of strains and the contestants were required not only to tell the composer, but also to tell his nationality and the work from which the piece was taken.

B. Dreher's Sons Co. had a unique display of posters advertising the affair. These posters, which were made by the Lakewood, O., school children, represented different records.

More Room for Display of Talking Machines in M. O'Neil Co. Store

AKRON, O., April 4.—To take care of the increased business, extensive alterations are being made to the talking machine department of the M. O'Neil Co., largest department store here, which has added the Brunswick line. When improvements are completed the department will have much needed space at the disposal of its sales floor and four more demonstration booths, which will bring the total number up to twenty. According to Miss Elsie Baer, manager of the department, business has topped all other departments in the store, and for this reason officials of the store allotted the additional floor space.

VICTOR LINE FOR M'MAHON

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 3.—The McMahon Piano Co. announces the opening of an exclusive Victor department in its store, 112-114 East Federal street. The Victor line of talking machines and records was added this week and the department is experiencing an excellent volume of business, store officials report.

SELLS RECORDS IN PUBLIC MARKET

That the public is interested in talking machines and records even while marketing for the Sunday dinner is proven in the case of F. Baumgarten, manager of the Camera & Music Shop, Youngstown, O., which is located in the public market of that city. The record business done by the shop is said to be the largest in Youngstown.

18 WEST 20TH STREET
NEW YORK

This book does something for the progressive music dealer that no volume ever attempted before. It gets right down to the dollars and cents basis of how to increase your profits—

- (1) By Starting a Musical Merchandise Department.
- (2) By Running One Already Established at Bigger Profits.

A Practical Business Book

It is a practical book of hard, cold facts. "SELLING MUSICAL MERCHANDISE" is a plain, business-like description by a successful music dealer of the ways, methods and plans he found to work out profitably in his own stores. Every page of this remarkable volume contains some definite suggestion that you can turn into dollars and cents—some sales or advertising method you can put right to work for yourself.

It covers every routine problem that will come up in conducting a profit-making department in your store.

Meets Today's Business Needs

It is published now because the retail music trade today is anxious to cash in on the demand for musical merchandise. There are sound business reasons for this: A musical merchandise department requires small investment, gives quick turnover, involves no risk, increases the sales of pianos, players and talking machines and helps make a given store the music center of its community.

Dependable Methods to Increase Sales

The practical information Mr. Frew gives you in "SELLING MUSICAL MERCHANDISE" is thoroughly dependable. He knows every angle of the business from practical experience. His book really places at your disposal the extensive merchandise knowledge of a remarkably able dealer which you can consult at any time, any day, on any problem of buying, displaying, selling, advertising musical merchandise and making your own store the acknowledged musical center of your city.

Wide Range of Topics Covered

Thousands of dealers have wanted just such a helpful volume for some time.

Read over the wide range of topics that you will find in this work, a marvel for retailers.

CONTENTS

AKRON, O.

Trade Trend Is Most Gratifying—Price Stability Is Assured—What Dealers Say

AKRON, O., April 1.—Talking machines, pianos and practically all musical merchandise has now reached a standard rating, according to Akron dealers who are now starting to make a display of their newest merchandise. Prices vary but little from those which have obtained during the past few months, and this, they believe, is going to have a healthy effect on trading, for buyers realize that the period of constant price changing is now practically past.

April looms as an active month for music dealers of Akron. Money is easing up, and in nine of ten stores visited this week by a representative of The World collections were reported better and prospects more plentiful.

Little Damage by Fire

Business continues good with the A. B. Smith Piano Co., South Main street, probably the largest distributor of musical merchandise in the city. This store, damaged by a recent fire, suffered less actual loss than was first reported, according to officials. Sales in March were of a satisfactory volume.

"In my opinion business is on the upward trend," said Ray Porter, head of the sales department at the store of George S. Dales. "While March has been nothing startling, there is every reason to believe that April will be much better," he said. From his observation he declared that most people are buying machines ranging in price from $100 to $200.

Concerts Help Business

Presentation of two concerts this month, Sousa's band and Schumann-Heink, at the city armory, has given the Windsor Poling Co., exclusive Victor dealer, considerable prestige locally. This firm has done much to stimulate record sales by offering the concerts, which in each instance were largely attended.

Rockwell Installs Radio

E. G. Rockwell, proprietor of Akron's only exclusive small goods music store, in South Main street, has installed a radio outfit, and his store these nights is the Mecca of hundreds of music and radio fans. Eventually he intends to carry a complete line of radio accessories, he told a representative of The World. Mr. Rockwell, some months ago, opened this store with the intention of making it a complete musical merchandise emporium, and to this end he has accomplished much.

M. O. Neil Co. Sales Big

Talking machine sales with the M. O. Neil Co. have been very brisk during the month of March. The month's volume was boosted by a special sale of a popular-priced machine, of which a carload was disposed of in less than a week, according to Miss Elsie Baer, head of this department. The console type of machine is meeting with much favor and record sales are keeping up well. The fiscal year for the music department of the store ended in January, 1922, and, according to Miss Baer, last year was the biggest year from a standpoint of sales in the history of the store excepting 1919, when all records were shattered.

Starr Co. Doing Well

Manager Currie, of the Starr Piano Co., reports business on the up trend and says that with continuance of existing industrial conditions his store this year will exceed the business of a year ago. Special record sales are helping the month's business volume, and outside piano salesmen are doing a nice business.

Retail Merchants Meet

Music dealers of Akron affiliated with the Akron Retail Merchants' Board of the Akron Chamber of Commerce joined with merchants of other lines at the annual banquet of the association April 4 at the Portage Hotel. Retailers of national prominence discussed topics of the day of interest to retail merchandising.

RICE AUDISCOPE CO. CHARTERED

A charter of incorporation was recently granted to the Rice Audiscope Co., of New York City, under the laws of New York State, to deal in talking motion pictures, with a capital of $200,000. Incorporators are: M. Spero, G. I. Wiley and W. Kessler.

CHAS. H. MURRAY CO. INCORPORATES

Plans to Manufacture a Combination Radiophone and Talking Machine at Early Date

A New York State charter has been granted by the Secretary of State to Charles H. Murray, Inc., to manufacture, buy and sell musical instruments, etc.

C. H. Murray, who was advertising manager of the Pathé Frères Phonograph Co., resigned from that organization last September, taking effect on December 31 last. Mr. Murray announces that there will be little to say for two or three months in regard to his company except that it is the plan to market a high-class combination radiophone and talking machine at a price even lower than is asked for the ordinary straight phonographs.

NEW MANAGER IN CANTON

CANTON, O., April 6.—Wilbur E. Pyle, until recently identified with the music department of the May Co., Cleveland, is the new buyer and manager of the talking machine department at the William R. Zollinger & Co. store, it was announced Saturday. Mr. Pyle, who assumed his duties a week ago, succeeds A. E. Jones, who left the Zollinger Co. January 1, after several years as head of the department, to become manager of the piano department of the George S. Dales Co., Akron.

Improved Industrial Conditions Help Trade—Great Welcome for DeForest—French Nestor Leaves for Florida—Budget of Live News

PITTSBURGH, PA., April 6.—Trade conditions in the talking machine shops in the Pittsburgh district are showing signs of improvement. Several of the downtown talking machine dealers made the statement that sales for March showed a slight increase over the same month a year ago. There is, on the whole, a better tone to business of all kinds. While there is no rush business or anything like a boom the improvement in sales is taken to be rather steady and sure. As one talking machine dealer stated: "It is better to take business this way than to have it on a big boom and the bottom fall out suddenly, just when you think you are on the highway to a splendid season."

The industrial situation is clarifying rapidly and the building trades are exceptionally busy. Since January 15 last more than $6,000,000 worth of dwelling houses and apartment houses has been contracted for and this Spring promises to be the busiest in construction circles since 1915. Live talking machine dealers are watching house construction and are ready to "talk business" to the prospective occupants of the new houses and apartments with a view to seeing that a talking machine is in every home.

Cheney Line for Boggs & Buhl

Henry Wood, manager of the talking machine department of Boggs & Buhl, leading Northside department store, has announced the opening of a Cheney phonograph section in his department. A complete stock of Cheney instruments is on display and Mr. Wood anticipates a brisk sale of that line. In the Pittsburgh newspapers of March 29 the B. & B. service on the Cheney was well advertised.

Welcome for M. V. DeForest

A rousing welcome-home reception was tendered to M. V. DeForest, of Sharon, Pa., the president of the National Association of Music Merchants, at the Lincoln Club, this city, under the auspices of the Music Merchants' Association, of Pittsburgh. Over thirty music dealers from Pittsburgh and various sections of western Pennsylvania turned out in response to a cordial invitation extended by the local Association. A dinner preceded the meeting. Wm. C. Hamilton, president of the Pittsburgh Association, presided and acted as toastmaster. The principal address was made by Mr. DeForest, who was given an ovation when he concluded his tale of the wonderful trip to the Pacific Coast and return. Mr. DeForest said that in every city visited the Association idea was stressed to the music men, talking machine men and others to get in line with the organization idea. He said that the National Association was growing and emphasized the fact that every music dealer in the country, talking machine men included, was needed in the Association to make it powerful and influential. He told of the wonderful solidarity of the music trade interests he found in some of the cities he and his fellow pilgrims had visited. Mr. DeForest also referred to the Jubilee Convention of the National Association, which will be held in the Commodore Hotel, New York, the week of June 5. He stated that the leading talking machine companies would play an important part in the entertainment of the music merchants who will be in Gotham that week.

Among the talking machine dealers who attended the meeting were: E. B. Heyser, of the W. F. Frederick Co., Victor distributor; H. H. Fleer, of the C. C. Mellor Co., Victor distributor; Wm. C. Hamilton and Burt Hengeveld, of the S. Hamilton Co., Victor dealer; Theodore and Edward Hoffman, of the J. M. Hoffman Co., Brunswick dealer; D. L. Aaron and W. L. Bingaman, of Kaufmann's, Victor dealer; Jacob Schoenberger, L. S. Schoenberger and Arthur O. Lechner, of the Lechner & Schoenberger Co., Victor, Columbia and Edison dealer, all of Pittsburgh; J. E. Hardwick, Jr., of Uniontown, Pa., Aeolian-Vocalion dealer; S. R. Pollock, Indiana, Pa., Victor dealer; E. N. Markley, Warren, O.; William DeForest, G. S. Mitchell, R. A. Curran and Guy B. Wooster, all of Sharon, of the DeForest organization, which handles the Victor, Edison and Brunswick lines.

Thomas T. Evans Is Optimistic

Thomas T. Evans, manager of the wholesale Victor department of the C. C. Mellor Co., is back at his desk after an extended Eastern trip, during which he visited New York, Philadelphia and the Victor Co.'s plant at Camden, N. J. Mr.

Evans said: "As far as I can venture a prediction, the outlook for Victor business is showing an improvement. It is my candid opinion that the enterprising Victor dealer who will command business will be the dealer who will take unusual methods to obtain business. He will not stay in his Victor shop and wait for business to come drifting in. He will go out and force the issue, interview prospects and see that no opportunity is overlooked that will land a customer for a Victrola. The old-time method of knocking at doors is not obsolete by any means, and I believe that the successful Victor dealer of the days to come will use this as one of the methods of securing business. It can be done if the honest, everyday persistency is kept up in dealing with prospective buyers."

French Nestor Goes to Florida

The Standard Talking Machine Co. has announced that French Nestor, who has been with the company since April 1, 1917, has severed his connection with the company, to take possession of his own Victor distributing house at Jacksonville, Fla. J. C. Roush, president of the company, in referring to the matter, said: "We make this announcement with much regret, as Mr. Nestor's connection with our company has been marked always by most conscientious effort for both the dealers' and our own best interests, and for the most cordial relations in the trade. It has been a very great pleasure to have him in our organization. Every member of the Standard staff joins in congratulating Mr. Nestor and in wishing him unbounded success in his new venture in the sunny South. I have so arranged my own outside affairs as to devote all my time hereafter to Standard's business and I will have the assistance of Wallace Russell as my right-hand man and manager; J. E. McCormick, as accountant, and Miss Minnie I. Watson in charge of the record department."

Optimistic Over Trade Outlook

The offices and warerooms of the Cheney Phonograph Co. and the Record Sales Co. are located at 806 Penn avenue, with Marion Cheney in charge as manager. A full and complete line of the Cheney instruments is on display, as well as a complete assortment of Okeh records. Mr. Cheney is quite optimistic relative to the outlook for the Cheney trade in the Pittsburgh territory, which goes as far east in Pennsylvania as the Susquehanna River.

Doing Well With the Brunswick

One of the most comfortable and quiet demonstration rooms is that of the J. M. Hoffman Co., the well-known Brunswick dealer, who has a large building at 537 Wood street. There the latest console and period styles of the Brunswick phonographs are shown, as well as the upright line. Being far from the street and also away from the section of the building devoted to repairs and business operation, there is a quiet obtained that makes it a pleasure and a delight for the hearer to listen to the playing of the Brunswick records. Mr. Hoffman said that sales of the Brunswick line were most gratifying and that the demand for the late numbers of the Brunswick records was quite brisk.

J. A. Scanlan With Cheney Co.

J. A. Scanlan, Jr., former manager of the Brunswick distributing agency here, has resigned and is now associated with the Cheney Phonograph Co. as manager of the Rochester, N. Y., distributing house, which covers all of New York State except the southeastern and metropolitan districts.

The Eight Victor Artists appeared at Connellsville, Pa., on March 21 before a large and enthusiastic audience in the High School auditorium, under the auspices of the Aaron Co., Victor dealer. The Connellsville News had this to say of the concert:

"It would rather be impossible to attempt to pick the 'star' of the evening, because every member of the party proved a real 'star' before the program had progressed very far."

Miss Gertrude Droegemeyer, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., has moved her talking machine and musical instrument business from 407 W. Berry street to 209 W. Berry street.

TORONTO CONTINUES QUITE AN ACTIVE TRADE CENTER

The Past Month Was Marked by Numerous Changes in the Talking Machine Field—George C. Heintzman Sails for Europe—Phinney's, Ltd., Plans New Department—The Month's News

TORONTO, ONT., April 8.—George C. Heintzman, president of Heintzman & Co., Ltd., and Mrs. Heintzman have sailed for Europe, planning to spend some time in southern France before taking the Mediterranean trip.

B. J. Philp, the well-known Brighton, Ont., resident, has been appointed local representative for Brunswick phonographs and records, succeeding F. C. McMaster, who is retiring from the business.

Among those present at the nineteenth annual convention of Grinnell Bros.' managers, held recently in Detroit, were the Canadian branch managers from Sarnia, Chatham, Windsor and Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

Phinney's, Ltd., of Barrington street, Halifax, has opened up a "His Master's Voice" department, carrying a complete line of records and Victrolas.

Sir John Eaton, president of the T. Eaton Co., Ltd., this city, Winnipeg, Moncton, and many other points, is so pleased with the new portable Victrola No. 50 that he has had one installed in his private motor car, which, together with a supply of "His Master's Voice" Victor records, provides him with music whenever he is in the mood.

Edwin A. Stevenson, formerly head of the Regal Phonograph Co., Ltd., states that he plans to enter the retail phonograph field in the Queen City. His location and plans will be announced shortly.

The National Piano Co., Ltd., "His Master's Voice," Starr and Sonora dealer, has completed its removal from the former quarters at 266-268 Yonge street to its new home at 15 Bloor street, West.

"Why not get busy and run a 'Children's Hour' after school or Saturday morning, and make your store the center of attraction in town?" This question has been asked "His Master's Voice" dealers by the promotional and service department of "His Master's Voice," Ltd.

Few members of the music trade know that Fred J. Robson, the local Brunswick representative, was at one time the foremost skater of Canada and the United States. For some twenty-two years he held that distinguished position.

A. G. Wolfe, who for years was an Ontario representative for the Music Supply Co., and more recently with the Brunswick organization in New York, has just joined the sales staff of the Musical Merchandise Sales Co., distributor of Brunswick phonographs and records. Mr. Wolfe brings back with him a wealth of new ideas that should be of material assistance to dealers, especially during this year when original sales effort is more than ever necessary. He will represent the Musical Merchandise Sales Co. in Western Ontario and the Niagara Peninsula.

R. S. Williams & Sons Co., Ltd., have just sustained the loss of a faithful employe in the death of George Muirhead, who had been with the firm for over six years. He was held in high esteem by his fellow employes.

The recent appearance of Leopold Godowsky, the renowned pianist and exclusive Brunswick artist, in recital at the Patricia Theatre, London, Ontario, afforded the local Brunswick representatives an opportunity of giving prominence to the various Brunswick records made by Godowsky. Similar recitals were lately given by Godowsky in Hamilton and Belleville, when Brunswick records also came in for considerable publicity.

Burn's Pharmacy, Cornwall, Ont., is working up a nice record business and is disposing of a goodly number of Starr-Gennett records, for which it finds a splendid outlet.

The Jewett Phonograph Co. of Canada, Ltd., has been incorporated, with a capital of $950,000, with headquarters at Windsor, Ont.

General regret is felt in Canada over the death of Bert Williams, exclusive Columbia artist, whose records had a great following and were increasing in popularity every month.

The Starr Co. of Canada, Ltd., London, Ont.,

BERLINER EMPLOYEES HOLD CARNIVAL.

Five Hundred Present at Masked Skating Carnival and Dance—C. W. Lindsay Staff Hold Banquet—Ties Up Window With Theatre

MONTREAL, CAN., April 7.—About five hundred employes and friends of the Berliner Gramophone Co. were present at a masquerade skating carnival and dance given by the management at its plant recently. Later the scene was shifted to the second floor of the company's new building on Lacasse street, where almost an entire floor had been set apart for dancing. The guests were welcomed by E. M. Berliner, vice president of the firm; G. J. White, assistant sales manager; J. P. West, advertising manager; W. Walker, office manager, and J. Dumochel, branch manager.

A banquet was given recently to the sales staff of C. W. Lindsay, Ltd., Columbia and Sonora representatives, by J. A. Hebert, general manager of the company, at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in recognition of the exceptional success attained by them during the 1921-22 fiscal year. The honored guest of the evening was C. W. Lindsay, president of the firm, who took the opportunity of congratulating the staff upon their wonderful work and volume of sales produced. There were a number of optimistic sales talks by other members of the house.

In conjunction with the Mark Twain satire, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," screened at the Allen Theatre this week, C. W. Lindsay, Ltd., under the direction of Leopold A. Poulin, display manager, have linked up their handsome show windows with artistic taste, and many appreciative comments have been heard in this direction. The windows represent the reproduction of a room in Louis period furniture, the center of attraction being a Sonora Elite table model. A card in close proximity bears the following text: "If the Connecticut Yankee could have had the wonderful Sonora to entertain King Arthur in the year 528 A. D., his happiness would have been complete."

The Compo Co., Ltd., Lachine, Que., has incorporated with a capitalization of $100,000.

The Montreal Gramophone & Cabinet Store

reports a decided improvement in wholesale trade. Business is picking up both in phonographs and records and dealers are sending in orders more freely and for very much larger amounts. The sales organization has been materially increased by additional travelers.

At a special meeting of the directors of Regal Phonograph Co., Ltd., Bruce Riordan was elected president of the company and W. N. Martin was appointed manager, succeeding Edwin A. Stevenson, who, as reported elsewhere, is going into the retail talking machine business.

I. Montagnes & Co., Ltd., Canadian distributor for the Sonora phonograph, announces a new retail price of the Sonora Etude model, which is now priced at $125, the original figure being $155.

will shortly remove from 1264 St. Lawrence boulevard to No. 794 on the same street, occupying the old premises of S. Flanz.

The Happy Six Columbia dance orchestra is delighting large audiences in Montreal at the Bustanoby & Castellani restaurant and cabaret.

"Caruso Week," as arranged by the Berliner Gramophone Co., Ltd., was a great success among "His Master's Voice" dealers, and a large number of this artist's records were disposed of.

S. J. O'Donnell, manager of the local branch of the Musical Merchandise Sales Co., Toronto, is covering the large centers of the Maritime Provinces, and is expected back in a couple of weeks' time.

H. R. Braid, of I. Montagnes & Co., Ltd., Toronto, Sonora distributors for Canada, has been in town in conjunction with Sonora Week, which his firm is featuring.

Considerable interest was recently shown in the Marconi wireless telephone demonstration in Layton Bros.' show windows. Concerts took place at the head Marconi station, and were received at Layton Bros. every alternate half hour during the afternoon. An expert Marconi operator was in charge at Layton Bros. The Marconi Co. has selected the Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph and a Layton Bros. player-piano for all demonstrations.

Layton Bros. have sold a Brunswick phonograph model No. 207, retailing for $185, to the Westmount High School, which will be used for educational purposes.

The coming to Montreal to appear in concert recitals of Alberto Salvi, "His Master's Voice" artist, should stimulate interest in this artist's harp records.

store gives this concern twice as much floor space as at present.

W. Hughes has been made manager of the talking machine department of the J. A. Banfield Co., here.

Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, exclusive "His Master's Voice" artist, recently made his first appearance in Vancouver at the Men's Musical Club. Mason & Risch, "His Master's Voice" dealers, secured the exclusive sale at the regular retail price of a limited number of this artist's records, which he specially autographed for them as a souvenir of his first Canadian appearance. A large number of records of this artist's selection were added to various record collections.

When lecturing on the history and study of music in his address of "Fifty Years of My Life in Music," Professor Laubach, of Regina, Sask., recently used a talking machine on which to illustrate certain selections to convey the impression that this instrument also had its own place in music history.

The Public Drug Co., Edmonton, Alta., partners, H. E. Merrick and Norman Watson, is successor to A. L. Kean, 10310 Jasper avenue. This concern is now pushing the sale of Victrolas and "His Master's Voice" records.

The Brunswick Shops report the sale of a Colonial Console model to the attorney-general of Manitoba. They also announce a marked interest in these new models.

Charles Kent, father of Herbert Kent, head of Kent's Edison Store in Victoria, and grandfather of Daryl Kent, manager of the Kent Piano Co., Vancouver, died in Victoria recently.

Miss Kathleen Parlow, exclusive Columbia artist, scored a great success in a violin recital at Saskatoon, Sask., recently.

"TALKER" MARKET IN CANADA

Montreal Newspaper Investigation Discloses the Fact That Comparatively Few Own Machines and Many Want Them—Time to Get Busy

MONTREAL, CAN., April 6.—An exhaustive survey of the market for manufactured goods, including talking machines, has just been completed by the Family Herald & Weekly Star, a local newspaper. The survey comprised an investigation of the articles owned and desired in the 142,000 homes to which this paper goes. Of these homes 115,000 are in the farming districts, scattered over practically the entire country. The investigation disclosed the fact that there were only 42,895 talking machines in these homes and upon inquiry 23,150 families expressed the desire to own a machine.

THE PASSING OF M. E. STANDFIELD

TORONTO, ONT., April 7.—Melville E. Standfield, well-known talking machine dealer of this city, passed away recently at his residence, 310 Brunswick avenue. The deceased was for a number of years connected with the Standfield-Macpherson Co., Ltd., Starr distributor, as secretary-treasurer, and in addition was president of the local Phonograph Dealers' Association.

COLUMBUS CONCERN INSTALLS RADIO

COLUMBUS, O., April 1.—The talking machine department of the Morehouse-Martens Co., of this city, has installed one of the most complete radio sets in this section of the State, according to an announcement by Leslie I. King, manager of the department. In addition to giving concerts the concern is planning to furnish concert dates of various Victor artists to the public through the medium of the local newspapers ten days in advance of the actual broadcasting.

William Waldman, a talking machine dealer, at 601 Ninth avenue, New York City, has purchased the building in which his business is housed.

KILLING INITIATIVE BAD BUSINESS

No Set of Rules Which Retards the Development of Employes Is Profitable From the Standpoint of Business Efficiency

The merchant or manager of any business enterprise who runs his business and directs his employes by any set of hard and fast rules which allow no freedom of action or thought on the part of his salesmen is working along lines designed to kill what latent ability the members of his staff may possess. No business which makes of an employe a soulless machine can hope to reach the topmost rung of the ladder of success. On the other hand, a set of general working rules which will aid employes in developing their initiative will do much to arouse that enthusiasm which is so necessary to the best results.

HIGH HONOR FOR RIMINI

Giacomo Rimini, well-known baritone of the Chicago Opera Company, has recently been honored by the King of Italy by being appointed Cavaliere of the Crown of Italy. Sig. *Evidences of Confidence and Expansion Prevail—Trade Is Tying Up
With Musical Events—New Stores and Changes Recently Announced*

LOS ANGELES, CAL., April 6.—The approaching visit of the Chicago Grand Opera Company during the week of April 10 is being looked forward to by the music-loving public here, and music dealers are planning to have attractive window displays during the preceding week. The repertoire of operas which will be given—namely, "The Love of Three Kings," "Thais," "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," "The Jewels of the Madonna," "Romeo and Juliet," "Tannhauser" and "Salome"—is not very well represented by talking machine records, but the idea which is being put forward is that by encouraging the love of opera as a whole people will naturally want records of all operas. The motion picture people have now realized that it is not good policy to feature their stars only, leaving the name of the picture in the background—they now feature the story first and the star second. And therefore, similarly, it would seem that talking machine dealers should try to educate the public more and more along the lines of greater appreciation of good music, mentioning in a secondary way the names of great artists—the sales of the latter's records will take care of themselves.

Sherman, Clay & Co. Appoint Representative

Miss Donzella Cross was appointed early in the month as special representative for the educational department of Sherman, Clay & Co., Victor distributor for the Pacific Coast. Miss Cross accomplished important work in this territory

Here they are—

The two new BUBBLE BOOKS
that are going to boost your sales

No. 13 is based upon Robert Louis Stevenson's immortal verses, Bed in Summer, The Swing, and My Bed Is a Boat. This new number gives you an opportunity to introduce Bubble Books to a new audience—lovers of classic literature. It contains the three verses mentioned above with the musical settings that have come to be accepted as the most beautiful and appropriate for them.

No. 14, The Chimney Corner Bubble Book, includes three old favorite songs that appeal to every youngster and grownup. These songs, North Wind Doth Blow, Sandman, and Lullaby, are made doubly interesting by the sound of rushing wind, buzzing bees, chirping birds, and mewing kittens that are a part of the records.

These two new books don't mean just two more Bubble Books. They mean a new chance to push the whole line.

All purchasers like novelty, children particularly, and those who buy for them are on the lookout for something new.

And it's a well-known fact that a customer who is attracted by a new display is more than likely to buy the regular line, too.

That's what these two new Bubble Books will do for you. They will not only prove good sellers themselves, but they will boost the sales on the whole series.

Order your supply of these new numbers today—feature them—and remind your customers of the new low $1.00 price.

Mother Goose Cut-Outs

Any child who owns a Bubble Book will be delighted with the Mother Goose Cut-Outs. Here are characters from the first three Bubble Books, colored daintily and ready to be cut out and mounted on the record, where they dance gayly as the record plays. This book sells for sixty cents. Properly pushed, it should be a big seller wherever Bubble Books are sold.

When you sell one you sell a habit, and when you sell a habit, you're business building

RECORD TRADE SATISFACTORY

Samuel Steinfeld Secures Good-sized Orders for Cotton Flocks—Conditions Improving Generally

Samuel Steinfeld, president and treasurer of the Claremont Waste Mfg. Co., manufacturer of cotton flocks, was a recent visitor to New York after making a trip through the Middle West. In a chat with The World Mr. Steinfeld stated that business in general was improving steadily, and that he found optimism throughout the territory he visited. Building activities on a large scale were apparent throughout Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan and Illinois, and unemployment showed a material decrease. Record manufacturers visited by Mr. Steinfeld were making plans for an active year, and he secured some good-sized orders for cotton flocks.

INSTALL COMPLETE EQUIPMENT

MERIDEN, CONN., April 3.—The entire work on the extensive equipment made by Van Veen & Co., Inc., in the warerooms of the Griswold, Richmond & Glock Co., Victor retailers, of this city, was completed on the first of the month. The entire construction was in charge of experienced men sent from the New York headquarters of Van Veen & Co., Inc. T. H. Glock, general manager of the company, in an enthusiastic letter sent to Van Veen & Co., Inc., complimented the company on the efficient work of its men and praised the manner in which they carried out every suggestion.

A NEW RECORD DISPLAY FIXTURE

G. L. Bailey, New Jersey salesman for the New York branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co., is the inventor of a record display fixture which is being marketed under the trade name "No-Warp." Mr. Bailey has spent several years in the development of this product and announces that he feels he has accomplished in the "No-Warp" a window display or counter fixture that will keep records from warping and at the same time display them in a most attractive manner. The manufacturer of the device is the Display Fixture Co., of Newark, N. J., and it is being distributed by several leading Victor Talking Machine Co. jobbers, the General Phonograph Corp., the New York branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co. and several accessory branches.

while she was a member of the educational department of the Victor Talking Machine Co., and Victor dealers are much gratified at her appointment by Sherman, Clay & Co. They realize the immense possibilities in this line of endeavor, but also feel the constant need of an expert to direct them.

Bartlett Music Co. Enlarges

The Bartlett Music Co., on West Seventh street, has enlarged its store by an additional 6,000 feet. Last week the company announced that it has taken on the Brunswick line of phonographs and records. E. E. Searles, general manager, states that sales are ahead of those for the corresponding period of 1921, but that with much improved facilities a still larger increase is expected.

Jack Ray Goes to Arizona

Jack Ray, who has been covering the Los Angeles County territory as special representative for the Columbia for several months, has gone to Phoenix, Ariz., where he will probably later take up similar work. He is at present, however, suffering from the effects of a recent illness. Mr. Ray was well known in New York, where for a number of years he was assistant to H. L. Willson, general manager of the company.

New Victrola Department

Bullock's, one of the best-known high-class department stores on the Pacific Coast, will open a Victrola department some time this month. This is a new departure for Bullock's, which has hitherto been without a music department. The appointment of the manager of the department has not yet been announced, but Miss Raka Johnson, who is well known here, will have charge of the record department.

Barker Bros. Install Station

An immense radio station, claimed to be larger than any which has yet been put up in Los Angeles, has been installed on the roof of Barker Bros.' store. It is connected with the music department and lively interest is being shown in it by the public. But the most interesting innovations are the wireless attachments which are being installed in Sonora phonographs. Wireless receiving apparatus and the Magnavox are placed in the cabinets of period and large upright models of the Sonora at an additional cost of $75 to $250. The wire connecting the Sonora with the receiving equipment can be easily concealed under a carpet or rug, and the Sonora is then equipped to play regularly with records as a phonograph or in a few moments the wireless can be brought into play and concerts or talks from distant stations can be listened to through the radio. J. W. Boothe, general manager of the music department, has this new department in his charge. He states that the orders and demands for wireless attachments and for wireless-equipped Sonoras is simply overpowering and far in excess of the present supply.

New Wightman Co. Sales Manager

Irving C. Franklin has received the appointment of sales manager of the Wightman Music Co., Long Beach. This concern is one of the oldest music stores in Long Beach and occupies one of the most unique and beautiful quarters in the country. Mr. Franklin has had eleven years' experience in the talking machine field. He has been connected at various times with the Edison, Pathé and Brunswick companies. He was also a sales manager for the Burnham Phonograph Corp., and previous to that, manager of the San Francisco branch of the phonograph division of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co.

Nordskog Recordings Well Received

Arne Nordskog, general manager of the Nordskog Phonograph Recording Co., of Los Angeles and Santa Monica, has been receiving many compliments upon the excellence of the recordings which have been made at the Santa Monica laboratories. It is expected that the first commercial records will be released in the near future. Personal recordings have already been made in large numbers.

Harry A. Beach in Los Angeles

Harry A. Beach, vice-president of the Unit Construction Co., of Philadelphia, was in Los Angeles

this week and left for San Francisco. He expects to return here for a second visit within the next few days.

New Edison Manager at Fitzgerald's

H. C. Braden, general manager of the Fitzgerald Music Co., announced that W. A. Callahan has taken over the management of the Edison department. Mr. Callahan has been identified with the sales end of Edison's, both wholesale and retail, for a number of years.

New "Talker" Store Opened

A music store has been opened in Eagle Rock and will be known as Hancock Music Store No. 2. Milton T. Hancock, brother of Newton Hancock, of Pasadena, is in charge. Brunswick phonographs and records will be carried exclusively.

Nelson & Schooler, who recently sold out their store in Whittier, have opened very attractive new quarters in Fullerton, where they are handling Brunswick phonographs.

Don C. Preston, the well-known talking machine man of Bakersfield, paid the sunny Southland a few days' visit recently.

Congratulations

Los Angeles, on its way toward the 3,000,000 mark, has just had another big addition to its population, weighing seven and one-half pounds—and it's a girl! The census man, in his dull, methodical way, will probably record it as only one in number. But to Harold Jackson, manager of the phonograph department of the Wiley B. Allen Co., it's a mighty important addition. "In fact," says Mr. Jackson—who, by the way, is already the proud father of two lusty native sons—"Los Angeles would never have been quite complete without this new citizen!" Both the mother and daughter are doing nicely. And in the meantime Mr. Jackson's many friends are enjoying some good "smokes" in honor of the great event.

The Trade in PHILADELPHIA and LOCALITY

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 4.—While noticeably increased Spring business has not as yet been manifested, generally good conditions prevail in the retail talking machine trade in this city and locality. The betterment in weather conditions has brought increased numbers of shoppers on the thoroughfares and local retailers have not been backward in enticing these shoppers into their warerooms through the medium of publicity in the daily press and attractive window displays. Along Chestnut street the approaching Easter season is the motif of a number of attractive window displays. Among the most attractive is the window of the retail store of the Talking Machine Co. adjoining the Adelphia Hotel. In this window a huge open egg holds an upright Victrola, surrounded by the special Easter Victor records attractively arranged. In the wholesale section the window of the Louis Buehn Co. on Arch street furnishes a valuable suggestion for an Easter trim and on the next block the Penn Phonograph Co. has also given much thought to the attractive arrangement of its window. Dealers in all lines seem to have caught the spirit of Spring and are making increased efforts. In Victor retailing circles the recent Educational Convention is much talked of and the universal question seems to be: "When will there be another?" The new horizontal type Victrola to retail at $115 has been delivered to the Victor dealers throughout Philadelphia. This new model has found much favor and the general opinion expressed is that it will be one of the biggest sellers of the Victor line.

O. F. Jester Succeeds R. M. Nelson

O. F. Jester has succeeded R. M. Nelson and has been given charge of the Philadelphia city territory for the Brunswick. Mr. Jester was formerly in charge of the Southwestern Pennsylvania territory, which hereafter will be in the hands of W. J. Lorenz, who was formerly with the Columbia Co.

The Talking Machine Co. Makes Its Debut

Arch street, which has for a number of years housed the headquarters of the Louis Buehn Co. and the Penn Phonograph Co., has lately welcomed another Victor wholesaling house, the Talking Machine Co., of Philadelphia. This Victor wholesaling firm has secured the large and commodious quarters formerly occupied by the George D. Ornstein Co., at 1025 Arch street. Extensive alterations have been made and every effort has been exerted to most efficiently lay out the new quarters of this progressive house. Adequate space has been provided for the storage of machines and the filing of records and the front part of the street-level floor is devoted to the offices of the company. Harry A. Ellis, wholesale manager of the company, who is in charge, is a thoroughly experienced Victor man and numbers many friends in Victor retailing circles. The Talking Machine Co. is rapidly taking possession of the new quarters and is making good use of its facilities in taking care of its steadily increasing business.

Artistic and Interesting Unico Folder

The Unit Construction Co., of this city, has recently issued an attractive six-page folder on its equipment. The center spread of this folder depicts twenty-one actual installations recently made in widely separated sections of the country and which are destined to serve admirably in the way of a suggestion to the dealer for the improvement of his warerooms. Half-tone illustrations are presented of various designs and suitable space is also devoted to the accessory and service tables, specials racks and the efficiency repair bench.

Budget of Columbia News

The value of the window display service issued by the Columbia Graphophone Co. was emphasized recently by the experience of C. C. Baer, Columbia dealer at Oxford, Pa. Mr. Baer decided to cut down expenses on January 1 and canceled his window display service. However, after going one month without it he found that the service was a necessity and not an expense, and he re-ordered it immediately, stating that he intended to use it regularly despite any adverse business conditions.

Robert Porter, field sales manager of the Columbia Graphophone Co., was the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Philadelphia Columbia Grafonola Dealers' Association held on Tuesday, March 28. Mr. Porter gave an interesting discourse on general business conditions, which was received with keen interest by the dealers.

Dolly Kay, exclusive Columbia artist, recently completed an engagement of several Philadelphia theatres. Practically every local dealer featured this artist in window displays, and her theatre engagements, coupled with these displays, stimulated the sale of Miss Kay's records materially.

Columbia dealers in adjacent Philadelphia territory are enthusiastic regarding the special Grafonola advertising allowance made by the Columbia Graphophone Co. Over twenty dealers are already using the advertising campaign, and the Philadelphia branch expects many additions to

Weymann &amp; Son Happenings

H. W. Weymann, president of H. A. Weymann & Son, Inc., Victor wholesalers of this city, reports that dealers are achieving exceptional results in the sales of the new Victor Models Nos. 240, 260, 280 and 300. A suggestion was recently made by this firm to its dealers that they display these new horizontal models separately from the upright models of the Victor line. It has been found through actual experience that the dealers who followed this suggestion and made a separate extensive display of these models achieved the greatest results and were most successful in the merchandising of the models.

A shipment of the new type No. 240, retailing at $115, was received from the Victor factory on the last day of March and was promptly shipped out to the dealers. In commenting on this popular new model Mr. Weymann stated: "I consider the No. 240 which we are shipping out to-day an instrument of the greatest value. The advance illustration of this model did not do it justice at all. It must be seen to be fully appreciated. As proof of this I might mention that a number of dealers who personally visited our headquarters and saw the model on display here and who had ordered only one of the model immediately increased their orders to four, five and six of the same number, with requests to ship immediately. I believe that this model is going to prove an exceptionally popular one and will produce very heavy sales." Mr. Weymann continued: "We have just finished our weekly staff meeting. It has long been a policy of this house to hold these meetings on each Saturday afternoon, when all of our traveling staff are in town. They have proved of exceptional benefit in solving problems beneficial to us and the dealers' interests in increasing the sales of Victor products. The sales promotion department, in charge of Charles Paulson, is doing very good work in promoting the sales of Victor merchandise. One of the recent features inaugurated by this department which is proving so successful is the mid-month hanger of suggested numbers selected from the Victor catalog. This is resulting in increased sales of records everywhere and has been especially beneficial in moving record stocks.

Our Organization is constantly alive to the individual requirements of our Victor Dealers, our Sales Promotion Department being at your service to help you with your merchandising problems.

All Victor Dealers in our territory should be on our mailing list and receive our "Mid-Month Suggestions" Hangers.

This is one of the many features of our Victor Service

In fact, we have invited suggestions from dealers, in making up these mid-month lists, so that we might include on this list such numbers as dealers might be particularly well stocked with. This mid-month suggestion hanger combats a somewhat growing tendency among the consuming public to only buy each month as the new releases are issued and from the new list, whereas there are so many excellent numbers in the Victor catalog which should be in the home of every talking machine owner. This hanger is doing much in attracting the attention of the general public to the gems to be found in the general catalog."

Under the able direction of Mr. Weymann the wholesale business of H. A. Weymann & Son, Inc., has enjoyed exceptional growth. Perhaps a secret source of inspiration to Mr. Weymann in his work is to be found in a photograph which occupies a conspicuous place upon his desk. This photograph depicts Harry Power Weymann, Jr., his grandson and son of H. Power Weymann, also connected with H. A. Weymann & Son, Inc. Young Harry is a bright-eyed, laughing youngster of less than two years and is particularly fond of his grandfather. Mr. Weymann proudly points to Harry Power Weymann, Jr., as one of the future executives of the house of Weymann.

Ornstein Estate Appraised

The appraisal of the estate of George D. Ornstein, Victor jobber, whose interests were purchased by the five leading distributors of this city, has been appraised at $354,998.14. Mr. Ornstein's share in the enterprise is valued in the estate appraisal at $123,000. Other of his holdings included 500 shares Bethlehem Steel, $28,625; 500 Consolidated Cigar Co., 100 American Sumatra Tobacco Co., 28 Atlantic Refining Co., $29,400, and 121 United Cigar Stores Co., $15,246. The Ornstein holdings of real estate have not yet been appraised.

Now for Pennsylvania's Music Week

The program for Music Week which will be celebrated in Pennsylvania under the auspices of the State Department of Public Instruction from April 30 to May 7 is practically completed and will include community singing, choral and orchestral concerts, music memory contests and music festival competitions. Music Week is being promoted in a very liberal way by Weymann's sales promotion department, which has sent out a letter to dealers enclosing a pamphlet which has been issued by the State Department. It is up to the dealers to co-operate in every way possible in this movement—to tie up their stores with this great campaign for music which has aroused the enthusiastic support of the Governor

"Prove It With Profits"

Sonora dealers in Pennsylvania always look forward with a great deal of interest and considerable profit to the sales tips which E. S. White and F. H. Owens, of the Sonora Co., Philadelphia, circulate when they either reach them in person or when they hear from them in the form of literature. For instance, here is a recent letter which ranks with the famous Garcia message:

"The Message That Went Over the Wire. It was a real message; it was a man's message. It went from the general manager to a branch manager. We think it is worth repeating. 'Close your prospects or close your doors.' That was the message.

"Every Sonora dealer has some prospects that need closing. There always is a possibility of a competitor closing them first. Make April a closing month. Get those prospects in a corner, but, before you do it, go carefully over all the features of several models and don't forget the Elite and Grand. They are two good models to close prospects with. If you do not have them in stock, order at once.

"There is business. It is a little harder to get now, but it can be done. The two models suggested eliminate most competition and give you strong-closing talking points. You can get business. One big man recently said: 'You can, but will you?' Your business will increase greatly if you realize on Sonora prestige. There are more high-priced Sonora phonographs sold than any other make. Tell the Elite or Grand story. Prove it with profits."

Broaden Equipment Scope

The Unit Construction Co., of this city, manufacturer of Unico equipment for talking machine warerooms, has added rugs to its line. The Unit Construction Co. has built up an enviable reputation in the quality of its equipment and, in an endeavor to completely serve the dealer in demonstration room equipment, some months ago added service tables, self-service record racks, lighting and ventilating fixtures. With the addition of rugs it is now possible to secure the entire equipment for the demonstration room at one source, thus assuring entirely harmonious fittings.

United Music Stores Expand Lines

The United Music Stores, of this city, report generally satisfactory business. It is announced that this company has lately added the Pianostyle word roll to the lines which it distributes. The Pianostyle word roll is now handled in addition to the Connorized word roll, which the company will continue to distribute as heretofore. Joseph Wexler, representative of the company throughout the State of Pennsylvania, has opened a number of new accounts in various parts of the State. This company also distributes a number of well-known talking machine accessories.

Now the Reliable Phono Supply Co.

Robert Stein, proprietor of the business formerly known as the Keen Talking Machine Supply Co., has announced the change of the name of that company to the Reliable Phono Supply Co. This company will continue to wholesale and job talking machines, records, parts, etc., as in the past, and from the same address, 109 North Tenth street.

Mr. Stein states, in a general announcement recently made to the trade, that the name of Keen was abandoned because of a tendency on

New Victor Horizontal Styles Popular

The headquarters of the Louis Buehn Co., Victor wholesaler, has been the scene of much activity during the past month. The new horizontal type of Victrola No. 240 was received during the latter part of the month and displayed in the warerooms of the company. This new model attracted much attention and a good volume of orders has been received for this type.

William H. Nolan, of the Buehn sales staff, is still hearing many complimentary expressions from Victor retailers upon Mrs. Nolan's exceptionally fine rendition of "Spirituals." At the recent banquet tendered by Philadelphia jobbers to the retailers Mrs. Nolan obliged by singing several "Spirituals" which were appreciated.

New Brunswick Dealers

Among the important recent Brunswick dealer appointments is that of F. A. North & Co. piano stores in Chester and West Philadelphia and Daniel L. Green, of Kennett Square. These stores are prominently located and will undoubtedly dispose of a great number of Brunswick machines and records.

Why G. Dunbar Shewell Is Enthusiastic

There are few more enthusiastic men in the trade here than G. Dunbar Shewell, president of the Cheney Sales Corp., who is building up a very fine business in this territory for the Cheney. During the past month he has opened a number of new accounts and his business is from five to six times as large as the same month a year ago.

Penn Phonograph Co. Expansion

The headquarters of the Penn Phonograph Co. at 913 Arch street was visited by a number of out-of-town dealers during the month. Possession has been taken of the second floor of the building for office purposes, thereby allowing the entire third floor for increased storage space. The constantly increasing business of the firm has made this move imperative. The Penn-Victor dog continues in popularity and is doing its share in providing the dealer with an excellent means for getting prospects into the wareroom. A local dealer has featured these dogs in a large Ferris wheel for a window display.

Harry A. Beach on Pacific Coast

Harry A. Beach, vice-president of the Unit Construction Co., is now on the Pacific Coast in the interest of the company. Mr. Beach reports remarkable activity in various commercial centers on the Coast and has secured contracts for a number of extensive installations in talking machine warerooms.

Congratulations for Harry Fox

Harry Fox, popular general manager of the Emerson Philadelphia Co., of this city, is receiving the congratulations of his friends upon the arrival at his home on March 30 of a baby girl. This heiress to the Fox fortunes has been christened Barbara Ann, and Harry Fox is so delighted that he is buying cigars for all of the boys.

Gimbel Bros.' Pathé Sale

Gimbel Bros. have had tremendous success with the special sale of Pathé machines. Many thousands were sold and in this connection the talking machine department was kept open almost every night until nine o'clock for three weeks.

Finds Improving Business Conditions

Ben Witlin, of the Witlin Musical Instrument Co., distributor of Starr phonographs and Gennett records, has just returned from an extended trip, which included Washington, Baltimore and surrounding territory. He found a much better feeling existing than for months past, and is quite optimistic regarding the future of Starr products in this territory.

Increasing Call for Edison Records

Herbert E. Blake, who, as announced in The World, took possession of his new store at 20 South Tenth street last month, is doing an excellent business in Edison phonographs and records. The latter, owing to the new reduced prices, are in great demand.

B. H. Rogers Tells of Vocalion Popularity

B. H. Rogers, of the Lincoln Business Bureau, is very optimistic regarding the demand for Vocalion records. He says that general business is steadily improving and this is manifested in the demand for Vocalion phonographs and records.

Pleased With Outlook

Oscar W. Ray, general manager of the wholesale Vocalion record department of the Aeolian Co., recently visited the Lincoln Business Bureau, Vocalion distributors in Philadelphia, and reports that for February and March, the first full months in which the new distributors handled the line, the sales exceed those of any previous month in the Philadelphia territory. The result is that B. H. Rogers, of the Lincoln Business Bureau, who has charge of Vocalion distribution, was enthusiastic regarding the possibilities for the development of that business.

SONORA DISTRIBUTOR MOVES

PITTSBURGH, PA., April 8.—H. Milton Miller, manager of the distributing agency of the Sonora phonograph, has moved his offices and showrooms to the original quarters on the second floor of the Jenkins Arcade, where he is welcoming his Sonora dealers daily. Mr. Milton is quite "sold" on the Sonora line and is positive that this season will show a large gain in sales of the Sonora, especially the period models.

SLIGHT DAMAGE FROM FIRE

The Brunswick Phonograph Shop, West Jackson street, Macomb, Ill., was slightly damaged recently in a fire which broke out in an adjoining building.

CELEBRATE INDUSTRIAL WEEK

Columbia Dealers in Philadelphia Participate in Celebration and Parade

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 4.—During the early part of March retailers of all lines of merchandise from York street and Allegheny avenue and Broad street to Sixth street held an "Industrial Week," under the auspices of the Central North Philadelphia Business Association. Monday afternoon an unusual parade was made up of bands and floats, in which Columbia dealers participated.

Myers F. Hall, Columbia dealer, had his truck decorated with the national colors and a Magnavox attached on the hood kept playing popular airs. All of the retailers' windows in the vicinity were dressed up and among the most artistic windows were those of G. J. Oldervurtle and Mr. Hall. Both attracted considerable attention and were well worth the time and attention bestowed upon them.

Among the recent visitors to the Columbia branch in Philadelphia were: J. W. Maus, Shamokin, Pa.; H. B. Newkirk, Salem, N. J.; L. M. Paul, Pottsville, Pa.; E. O. Lockwood, credit manager from the executive office in New York, and H. L. Pratt, branch service manager.

APPOINTED PRODUCTION MANAGER

J. N. Foreman Joins Deca-Disc Factory Executive Staff—Company Is Increasing Its Production Rapidly to Meet the Demand

EDISON PITTSBURGH DEALERS MEET

Conference at the Fort Pitt Hotel Attended by a Great Array of Dealers—N. W. Russler Elected President of a Permanent Organization

PITTSBURGH, PA., April 3.—Edison dealers in the Pittsburgh zone held an all-day conference at the Fort Pitt Hotel on March 23, which was attended by a majority of the retailers in the district, who were welcomed by A. A. Buehn, of the Buehn Phonograph Co., local Edison jobbers.

Steps were taken during the meeting for the formation of a permanent organization of local Edison dealers, the following officers being elected for the first year: President, N. W. Russler, of the Russler-Chadwick Co., Cumberland, Md.; secretary-treasurer, J. C. Dilts, Sr., of Wheeling, W. Va.; executive committee, J. E. Bumbera, Swissvale, Pa.; H. H. Findt, Steubenville, O.; S. A. Phillips, Morgantown, W. Va.; P. P. Brooks, Altoona, Pa., and George J. Carney, Parkersburg, W. Va.

The entire day was taken up in discussions of matters of importance to the Edison dealers, during which there was a full and free interchange of opinions. The afternoon session was exclusively for dealers, the Edison jobbers not being in attendance.

In the evening there was the usual dinner and dance. This proved to be a most interesting social event, with the handsomely gowned women and gallant men dancing to the music of a fine orchestra. The menu that was served was up to the notable standard of the Fort Pitt Hotel. Those who attended the affair were: C. Ament, Apollo, Pa.; T. Anderson and H. McMillen, Blairsville, Pa.; Mrs. N. Aughenbaugh and Miss A. McGeary, Monaca, Pa.; P. Brooks and Miss McConville, Altoona, Pa.; J. E. Bumbera, Swissvale, Pa.; George Carney, Parkersburg, W. Va.; R. J. Commons and J. H. WILL INTRODUCE NEW LINE

Harponola Co. Will Have New Models Ready July 1—Consoles Will Be Featured

CELINA, O., April 6.—The Harponola Co., of this city, is bringing out an entirely new line of talking machines. The date for the introduction of the new machines is set for July 1. H. J. Beam, secretary of the Harponola Co., says that the new machines are to be popular in price and will include five new consoles which will embrace some novel ideas in distinctive styles. The company will continue the use of the golden spruce horn amplifier, as this feature has been one of the most popular in the Harponola line.

NOW OCCUPYING LARGER QUARTERS

The Magic Phono Supply Co., formerly of 67 Debevoise street, Brooklyn, N. Y., has just leased quarters at 261-273 Lorimer street. The new home gives the company greatly increased floor space to care for the growing demand for its popular-priced two-spring motors. The company now manufactures the Markel motor under the trade name Magic, as well as the Butterfly motor.

High-Class Musical Entertainments Help Trade—Officers of Local Association Elected—Business Steadily Improves—The News

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., April 3.—It is conservatively estimated that over 400,000 tickets to high-class musical entertainments have been sold in San Francisco and vicinity during the present music season. That such a showing can be made in the San Francisco Bay region, which has a population of about a million people, fully justifies the claim that this community regards good music as one of the prime necessities of life. Visiting artists love San Francisco, and when they appear before San Francisco audiences they are inspired to do their very best because they know their offerings will be appreciated and that appreciation expressed by unstinted and enthusiastic applause. Data is not available for the sales volume on classic records, but it is safe to say that the demand is fully in proportion to the patronage of the great musical performances. This week, which marks the opening of the Chicago Grand Opera season in San Francisco, the leading talking machine dealers are featuring opera records in their show window and newspaper advertising.

Handling Radio Equipment

Blossom time is here again, yet business has not revived enough to make the trade gloat over its profits. Conditions are steadily improving, however, and interest in talking machine merchandise is alive. The radio interests have somehow become closely allied to the talking machine interests and some of the talking machine concerns are already handling radio equipment with success. The San Francisco trade, quite generally, sees benefit to the talking machine business in this radio music, for the reason that a wider interest in mechanically recorded music is stimulated among a class of people scientifically inclined.

Northern California Association Meets

The Music Trades Association of Northern California held its second annual meeting and luncheon on March 14 at the Hotel Stewart in San Francisco. The following were elected directors for the ensuing year: C. H. Hanson, Hanson Music Co., San Francisco; Henry Grobe, San Francisco; Shirley Walker, Sherman, Clay & Co.; Bernard Goldsmith, Oakland Phonograph Co.; F. A. Levy, California Phonograph Co.;

George R. Hughes, Wiley B. Allen Co.; Gibson McConnell, Gibson McConnell Co.; Walter Gannon, Kohler Industries; M. V. Thompson, Baldwin Piano Co.; W. A. Craven (for Sacramento), Hauschildt Music Co.; S. S. Hockett (for Fresno), Hockett, Bristol & Cowan; Fred E. Turner (for Stockton), Stewart School Supply Co., and W. B. Reilly (for San Jose), Robinson & Sons Co. Following the regular meeting these directors unanimously elected the following as officers: George R. Hughes, president; Shirley Walker, first vice-president; S. S. Hockett, second vice-president; F. A. Levy, treasurer, and M. B. Bowman, secretary.

Excellent Progress During the Year

The Association has made good progress in its first year and Mr. Hughes, who was re-elected president, was congratulated for his activity in promoting the welfare of the music trades. It was decided at the meeting that hereafter there would be a special committee, composed of talking machine dealers, to take up matters pertaining to this branch of the industry. Owing to the many new concerns which have entered the talking machine business there is still much need for getting together on important issues. One of the chief problems is that of handling instalment sales. The policies of certain houses in making fantastic instalment sale inducements have tended to lower the dignity of the business, it is claimed.

The Nathan Dohrmann Co., of San Francisco, large dealer in household merchandise, is to add a talking machine department. The Blue Bird machine will be featured.

To Distribute Vocalion Records

The San Francisco wholesale branch of the Aeolian Co. has been discontinued, and Manager Hull has returned East. The Magnavox Co. has taken the agency for handling Vocalion records in northern California and the Northwest. The popularity of these records is growing fast on the Coast.

Morley Somers, manager of the Phonograph Shop, San Francisco, finds March business fully up to last year's record, both in the wholesale and retail ends. The Sonora line has been just placed with Lowell Dixon, jeweler, 1512 Seventh street, Oakland, and with the Garrett Owen Co., which operates two stores in Berkeley.

J. W. Boothe, manager of the talking machine department of Barker Bros., Los Angeles, was a business visitor in San Francisco this month. He reported business good in the South.

Encouraging Increase in Business

The Wiley B. Allen Co., San Francisco, is enjoying an encouraging increase in business. The record sales are fairly heavy and the movement of machines is much brisker. Practically the full line of Brunswick machines is now in stock by reason of new shipments from the factory.

Andrew McCarthy, of Sherman, Clay & Co., says the wholesale Victor business is satisfactory on the Coast and that the exclusive Victor dealers are certainly getting their full share of the retail business.

Victor Line for Phonograph Studio

The latest San Francisco establishment to take on the Victor line is the Phonograph Studio at O'Farrell and Powell streets. W. H. Quarg, the manager, is delighted with the increase in sales this month. The Phonograph Studio caters largely to the night trade in the downtown district and keeps open until 11 p. m. Two shifts of employes are required. The shop also carries the Columbia line. An enlarged show window has been put in adjoining the O'Farrell street entrance.

Walter King, the Ellis street phonograph dealer, has closed his establishment.

Edison Artists in Recital

Helen Davis, the well-known soprano, and Victor Young, the pianist, gave a recital at the Hotel St. Francis on the evening of March 24 under the auspices of the Edison Shop, San Francisco. Admission was by special invitation. A large audience attended to hear the tone test of Edison Re-creations.

The Victor department of the Emporium, in this city, has been removed to a more favored position in the large department store and it is now directly facing the elevators on the third floor and very convenient for callers.

"JACK" BLISS WITH U. S. MUSIC CO.

Popular Music Roll Executive Opens Offices for U. S. Music Co. in New York—Sales Efforts Already Producing Results

George H. ("Jack") Bliss, one of the best-known members of the music roll trade, recently opened an Eastern branch for the United States Music Co., of Chicago, at 122 Fifth avenue, New York. A complete stock of U. S. player rolls has been installed at this branch, and results to date indicate that Mr. Bliss and his staff will meet with unlimited success.

Mr. Bliss, who has rounded out fourteen years in the music roll business in various capacities, came East eight years ago to establish a branch for the Q R S Co. in New York. He was one of the organizers of the Greater New York Music Publishers' and Dealers' Association, and acted as secretary for that organization for four years. He has also been active in the National Piano Travelers' Association, of which he is at present first vice-president.

The opening of Eastern headquarters for the United States Music Co. is expected to increase materially the demand for this company's rolls throughout the Eastern territory, and it is probable that further steps, including possibly the opening of a branch factory, will become necessary in the future to meet the requirements of the trade.

The music store of McCauley & Powers, Adel, Ia., has been taken over by Clarence E. Powers. In the future Victor products only will be handled at this establishment.

Columbia Grafonolas are being featured in an extensive sales drive by the Automatic Music Shop, 844 Grand avenue, New Haven, Conn.

Trade Conditions Reviewed—Carberry Heads Association—Many New Dealers in Evidence—Participants in Style Week—The News

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 6.—The talking machine trade here is making good progress in the sale of machines as well as records, despite a number of unfavorable factors, chief among which is the recrudescence of strong and injurious competition from "gyp" dealers. In the past two or three weeks it appears that a large number of instruments of more or less doubtful origin have been "dumped" into this market and offered at prices that can hardly represent even cost, regardless of the cheapness of the make. There also has been considerable selling of cheap records at starvation prices, although this competition is probably less severe on dealers than the marketing of instruments without regard to cost.

There is, of course, always a class of people which will buy the "gyp" machines and make it worth while for those who market such goods to take on lots of instruments. But in the case of records it is somewhat different, for even the biggest bargain hunters seem to realize that a cheap record is not much good, nor will it last. But, on the other hand, it seems that certain people will buy cheap machines and then buy good records, because the cheapest machine is willing to play a good record.

The orderly merchandising of trustworthy instruments is going forward in an encouraging way, notwithstanding the strenuous competition of cheap merchandise. Talking machine dealers who value the prestige they have built up and decline to enter into the merchandising of cheap stuff are getting more and more business. Sales so far in April command respect. March was a good month—better than February or January—and the improvement in business apparently is not only sustained, but being accentuated. This view is borne out both by jobbers and retailers.

Easter Season Speeds Victor Sales

"Business is good, and it is getting better right along," is the cheery word from Sam Goldsmith, vice-president of the Badger Talking Machine Co., Victor jobber. "We had a good month in March, and April so far has developed some excellent orders. The Easter season in recent years has come to be more and more a season of music, and people are buying musical instruments in a way that is reminiscent of the Christmas and New Year's periods. We have no complaint to make—in fact, business is so satisfactory that we are rather inclined to point to earlier predictions of constantly improving trade and being able to prove that these are coming true."

Brunswick Popularity Increasing

The Brunswick, which in the last year or two has come to be regarded as one of the real big sellers in this territory, is continuing its march of progress, a statement which is borne out by the actual sales records in the office of Thomas I.

Kidd, manager of the local branch of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. But the biggest step forward has been made by the Brunswick record, the sale of which, by Milwaukee and Wisconsin talking machine shops privileged to handle this line, is something truly remarkable. In a few years' time the Brunswick record has established rank as one of the very best sellers, and the popular numbers especially are enjoying a vogue that is making some of the "old-timers" look up.

Local Association Elects Officers

Frederick W. Carberry, head of the Frederick Carberry Co., who recently added a Brunswick talking machine department to his Chickering piano business, was elected president of the Milwaukee Association of Music Industries at the annual meeting held late last March. Hugh M. Holmes, sales manager of the J. B. Bradford Piano Co., featuring the Victor, Sonora and Vocalion, was elected vice-president. The new secretary is R. H. Lanz, of the musical merchandise division of the Yahr & Lange Drug Co., Sonora and Okeh record distributor. Adam C. Schroeter, manager of the piano department of Gimbel Bros., is the new treasurer. The Association has recently undergone a complete rejuvenation and is engaged in some very practical work for the advancement of music which undoubtedly will work greatly to the benefit of the sales of instruments, records and other musical merchandise.

Frederick W. Carberry

Edison Dealers Kept Busy

Sales of the New Edison phonograph and Edison records have been of splendid proportions during the past month and business is of a most satisfactory character, according to members of the Phonograph Co. of Wisconsin, distributor of the Edison line in Wisconsin and upper Michigan.

Yahr & Lange Pushing Sonora

The Sonora is steadily increasing in popularity due to the vigorous promotion of the Yahr & Lange Drug Co., distributor in the Wisconsin and northern Michigan territory. "The Highest Class Talking Machine in the World" is emblazoned on most of the best-known and tallest buildings in this section, and the advertising it is receiving in this and many other ways is helping a great deal to make sales. The Sonora dealer organization in the city of Milwaukee embraces some of the most prominent retail stores, and the Yahr Co. is making it a point in its local advertisements to tell where the instruments can be purchased.

This, naturally, is a dealer aid that makes many sales. There are eighteen dealers listed in Sonora advertisements, these including the Wm. A. Kaun Music Co., Gether Piano Co., Joe Goldman, George Durner, Kunzelman-Esser Co., Luebtow Music Co., E. Eggert & Sons, M. B. Barkan, Charles Gitzel, Carl Euler, A. W. Fuchs, Edward J. Jensen, A. Kittleman, Wm. Klug & Sons, Noll Piano Co., Thien-Pentler Co., Winter Piano Co.

New Vocalion Dealers

Harry M. Hahn, for many years associated with Milwaukee wholesale and retail talking machine concerns, who recently opened a wholesale business in general musical merchandise here, is now featuring the Aeolian-Vocalion. Mr. Hahn has furnished the Aeolian Co. with some excellent outlets in a retail way in the past month. One of his newest acquisitions is Reinhold Hille, jeweler, at Menomonie Falls, Wis., who has been handling several other lines for a number of years, but is making the Vocalion a distinctive seller in his territory. James Kleiner, 2810 North avenue, this city, is now an exclusive Vocalion dealer and is planning the entire remodeling of his shop to meet the service required for proper representation of the Vocalion franchise. Edward Karl also is a dealer who has decided to concentrate on the Vocalion phonograph and records, a line that is producing a very gratifying amount of business in the exclusive Hi-Mount Boulevard residence district.

A. Kittleman Enlarges Store

A. Kittleman, who handles the Columbia and Sonora, has recently remodeled his store and built an addition to accommodate his increasing trade. It is now the largest music store in the extreme Northwestern section, and this is the result of more than three years of intensive cultivation of a fertile field.

Dealers Take on Starr Products

The Hoeffler Mfg. Co. reports a steady increase in sales to the retail trade of the Starr phonograph and Gennett records. The record department has been especially active and the list of dealers handling this line has been augmented recently by the addition of some of the best-known stores in the Wisconsin territory.

Changes in Badger Shop

The Badger Music Shop, of Fond du Lac, Wis., which is conducted by the same interests as the Badger Victrola Shop, is now under the management of J. A. Sandee, vice-president, who has Both stores feature the Victor line and are also building up extensive piano departments.

J. M. McLaughlin Resigns

J. M. The New London plant is one of the main sources of supply of Thomas A. Edison Co., Inc., for talking machine panels and complete cabinets.

Passing of G. B. Hancock

George B. Hancock, vice-president of the A. J. Farnham Co., Inc., distributor of the Edison dictaphone, died March 23 after a long illness, at the age of forty years. The deceased had many friends here who mourn his passing.

E. A. Heaney Loses Daughter

Edward A. Heaney, president of the General Mfg. Corp., a large manufacturer of talking machines, is mourning the loss of his daughter, Mary Eileen, who died March 17 at the age of thirteen years. She was a girl of great promise.

A. G. Kunde Plans European Trip

A. G. Kunde, importer and distributor of musical merchandise, and formerly a widely known Columbia dealer of this city, expects to leave within a short time for another extended tour of Europe, accompanied by his family. His present trip is for pleasure and recreation.

Dealers Participate in Style Week

During Style Week, March 20 to 25, most of the talking machine shops were decked out in gala attire. This stimulated business to a considerable extent, although the real results are just becoming apparent. One of the handsomest window displays on this occasion was that featuring the Cheney phonograph by Edmund Gram, Inc. Mr. Gram made an exhibit of pianos at the Auditorium, where sixty-seven local merchants staged an elaborate exposition of wearing apparel of all kinds. This was in the nature of a replica of the famous Board Walk of Atlantic City and attracted nearly 80,000 visitors, who paid on an average of 50 cents to gain admission to the Auditorium.

Manufacturing New Needle

George E. Bernecker, president of the Standard Accessory Corp., is bringing out a new type of talking machine needle which is claimed to cover a multitude of purposes and eliminates the need of using more than one style of needle to obtain different gradations of tone. He has obtained a patent on his invention and is now engaging in quantity production. The Bernecker needle does its work by being rotated in the receiver of the reproducing device.

COLLINGS & CO.'S STRONG DRIVE

New Horizontal Type of Victor Machines Grows in Favor—L. W. Collings' Educational Campaign in Behalf of These Machines

L. W. Collings, head of Collings & Co., Victor distributors for northern New Jersey and north-eastern Pennsylvania, is very enthusiastic over the new horizontal type talking machines manufactured by the Victor Co. Mr. Collings has made it a point to visit every dealer in his territory and on numerous occasions has addressed the sales organizations of the various retailers regarding the possibilities of these new products.

In speaking of these new musical instruments Mr. Collings said: "At first our efforts met with resistance. However, when the various models were placed upon the dealer's floor and the pertinent features of the new product were brought before them the response was most pleasing."

Collings & Co. are making a special drive in their territory in behalf of these new products and besides the personal attention given to bringing the merits before the dealers the campaign is being supplemented by letter and by a feature article in The Record, the monthly house organ issued for Victor dealers. In this latter publication many points that dealers might have a tendency to overlook are brought out and methods of creating as well as closing the sales are outlined.

Following the initial release of these new models, the retailer is giving an enthusiastic response in the way of sales and orders.

PLAUT-CADDEN CO. IMPROVEMENTS

NORWICH, CONN., April 3.—The Plaut-Cadden Co., of this city, recently placed a contract with Van Veen & Co., Inc., of New York City, for the construction of a complete talking machine department, consisting of eight hearing rooms and a record department, with a capacity of 20,000 records. It is expected that work will be completed on this job in record time.

TONE QUALITY
par excellence

Purity, resonance, volume, individuality, sweetness, mellowness, nuance, color—all these qualities are faithfully reproduced by the Violin Spruce Diaphragm. Nature's perfect resonating medium—violin spruce—scientifically adapted, is free from all the inherent faults of mica and other vibrating mediums.

Wins Instant Approval

The following excerpts are from letters in our files:

A famous artist, under exclusive contract with a maker of phonograph records, says:

"... that is the most perfect, the most beautiful reproduction of my playing I have ever heard."

From a phonograph manufacturer:

"... it proves to be first-class and the best we have heard on classical records."

From a builder of special designs only:

From household owners:

"... is the most wonderful I have ever heard."

"... it has brought out tones from my records I never heard before."

"... I tell my friends it is the perfect reproducer."

From a sales executive, fourteen years in the talking machine business:

"... I have tried it (the reproducer) on every kind of record imaginable and the reproduction is excellent."

Attachment For Edison Phonographs

Our new attachment for Edison phonographs is equipped with Violin Spruce Diaphragm Reproducer; plays lateral cut records only. Designed with a single ball joint for lateral movement, and a spring tension that automatically maintains correct pressure on needle-point. Patents have been applied for.

Of Special Interest to Manufacturers

Improving Conditions Prevail—Radio Grows in Favor—Edison Dealers Meet—Musical Events Help Trade—News of the Month

CINCINNATI, O., April 8.—Business in talking machines, records and auxiliary lines in the Cincinnati district looked up considerably during the month of March. Practically all dealers reported a business much greater than that of the preceding month and some said that trade in all lines of the business was immeasurably better than that of March last year.

Some of this increase is ascribed to the large number of high-class musical events held in the city during the month. In addition to four regular concerts and one popular concert of the Symphony Orchestra, Sousa's Band, Kreisler and Schumann-Heink appeared on the concert stage—occurrences which always are followed by a greater or lesser demand for records made by these artists. Building and other business conditions are, too, somewhat better in this section and the special efforts being made by some houses to exploit their goods along various publicity lines are bearing fruit.

Many Stores Talking on Radio

The radio is growing rapidly here in popularity. Thousands of receiving sets have been sold to individuals and hundreds of others made by ingenious persons out of a receiver, a coil, a bit of wire and the bed springs or other ready conductor of radio waves. The Precision Instrument Co. has been doing a good business along this line, in addition to holding regular concerts for the benefit of its patrons. The Crosley Manufacturing Co., dealer in talking machines and supplies, also is exploiting the radio, broadcasting sermons, speeches, vocal and instrumental music and news bulletins in cooperation with the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Several talking machine dealers in Cincinnati and vicinity also have installed, or plan to install, sending and receiving radio sets. Several dealers have made arrangements for equipping their stores with radio supply outfits in addition to their regular machine and record business. Among these are the Chubb-Steinberg Music Shop, East Sixth street, and the Victrola department of the John Shillito Co., Race street. The Shillito Co. plans to conduct its radio department separately from the regular Victrola department. Howard L. Chubb, of the Chubb-Steinberg Co., announced, however, that he plans to install a complete radio receiving set for the entertainment of his patrons and to include a special department for equipment to sell to customers.

A receiving set already has been installed in the Victrola department of the H. & S. Pogue Co. and also in the Columbia Record Shop, conducted by T. J. Shepherd, Orleans, Ind.

Tie Up With Better Homes Week

Good advantage was taken by one talking machine dealer of Better Homes Week, exploited by the Cincinnati Enquirer in an attractive special supplement, and including a "Better Homes Exhibit," for four days at Music Hall. This enterprising dealer was Ross H. Wilson, manager of the Dealer Service department of the Columbia wholesale branch in this city. Mr. Wilson contrived to "sew up" the privilege of exhibiting a musical instrument and had on display, among the many other home furnishings, some Columbia machines.

How Record Albums Were Moved

A feature that is working exceptionally well for the Victrola department of the Baldwin Piano Co., West Fourth street, is the "one cent" sale of record albums. This month the sale brought a repetition of the success recorded earlier in the year—all the albums in stock were sold out, both ten and twelve-inch. The plan is to sell one ten-inch album for $1.25, two for $1.26, three for $1.27, etc.; one twelve-inch album for $1.50, two for $1.51, etc. Four gross of each size of album were sold during the short duration of the sale.

Rowbotham Opens in Lexington, Ky.

Mr. Rowbotham, for some time manager of the Victrola department of the Baldwin Co., has resigned that position and has gone to Lexington, Ky., to engage in business for himself in partnership with Robert M. Morris. Mr. Rowbotham is president of the Morris & Rowbotham Music Shop and Mr. Morris is secretary and treasurer. The store occupies a good location in Lexington and is capitalized for $10,000.

Edison Dealers Meet

Early in the month district dealers in Edison phonographs met at a meeting held at the Hotel Sinton. No changes in policy or plans were announced. New models were shown and a tone test was conducted with the aid of Glen Ellison, comedian, and Miss Hill, pianist.

"Our business for March," reported Mr. Oelman, of the New Edison Co., West Fourth street, "was very good. It showed a good improvement over trade for the previous month and over March, last year. Lower prices for records have increased business materially."

Widener Shop Finds Outlook Encouraging

The Widener Grafonola Shop, West Fourth street, did an excellent business during March. "Business," said Morris Fantel, manager, "is on the upgrade, I am sure. Everything is encouraging. Although we made no special efforts to sell, beyond the usual advertising and display, our business was splendid. It made February business look very small and was five times as great as business done last March."

Brunswick for Steinway Retail Stores

One of the largest and most important accounts opened by the Brunswick Co. in the Cincinnati district was contracted for last week, when S. Reis, district manager for Brunswick products, completed arrangements assuring that all retail stores of Steinway & Sons in Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia will handle exclusively Brunswick products. These salesrooms are to be equipped with Unico booths, record racks and an exhaustive line of Brunswick products to make a thoroughly up-to-the-minute machine and record store. These salesrooms are located in Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Ohio; Charleston, Huntington and Wheeling, W. Va., and Indianapolis, Ind.

Mr. Reis reported that business done during March by Brunswick dealers was very good and that he was encouraged to look forward to still greater improvement.

Increase the Sales of Ponselle Records

The Civic Music Commission of Evansville, Ind., conducted a pretentious musicale on March 17, with Rosa Ponselle as the headliner. The city made a great deal of this festival, a situation that gave Columbia dealers, who sell Miss Ponselle's records, an opportunity to exploit their wares. C. E. Hall, Columbia salesman in that territory, made the very most of this chance and dealers in Evansville benefited greatly by his clever window displays and his very effective advertising.

Other Columbia Brieflets

Mrs. Nell I. Sharpe, educational representative of the Columbia Co., has been confined in the Jewish Hospital, Cincinnati, for two weeks, following an operation for appendicitis.

A new account for the Columbia people is the Guttman Furniture Co., which opened its shop March 18.

Starr Co. Pleased With Business

Business in the talking machine department of the Starr Piano Co. has been very good during March, according to E. I. Pauling, Cincinnati manager of the company. Mr. Pauling reported that the business in machines was good and that in records exceptionally so.

The Gregory Music House, of Saginaw, Mich., has moved from the West Side to a more advantageous location on Jefferson street, the East Side. The Unico equipment, with which the new store is fitted, makes this one of the most attractive establishments in the city.

BUFFALO

Exhibitors at Better Homes Exposition—Trade Showing Betterment—News of Month

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 3.—Talking machine dealers made the most of the opportunity presented by the "Better Homes" exposition, held in the Broadway Auditorium during the week of March 25, to show how better and happier homes are created by the presence of a musical instrument. Many leading machines were shown at the exposition. In addition to a number of sales that were made outright, dealers report the development of new prospect lists from which much is expected this Spring and Summer.

The John G. Schuler Co. attracted thousands of exposition visitors to its booth by offering one of the most popular Sonora models free to the person guessing nearest the number of talking machine needles contained in a glass jar. Thousands of guesses were made and it will be some time before these are tabulated and the result of the contest made known. A number of the most popular Sonora models were shown by this firm.

An especially tasteful and well-arranged display was that of the Utley Piano Co., which showed an extensive line of Edison and Brunswick machines. This firm also placed an Edison machine in an exhibit showing an ideal home.

Neal, Clark & Neal showed Victor machines exclusively, giving demonstrations of various models throughout the exposition. Some of the latest records were played in the firm's booth, which was constantly filled with visitors throughout the exposition.

The Larkin Co. had one of the choice locations of the show and exhibited Symphonola talking machines.

Many talking machine dealers attended the "Get Acquainted" meeting of the music group of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, held late in March. C. N. Andrews, wholesale Victor dealer, presided at the meeting, which followed noon luncheon at the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce.

Following brief remarks by Andrews A. A. Van DeMark, managing director of the National American Music Festival, told of the history and aims of the Festival. He was accompanied by two of the Festival soloists, Miss Marguerite Kraemer and Miss Florence Reid, both of whom sang delightfully.

After the meeting and program opportunity was provided for dealers to become acquainted with each other.

Dealers report that while March business did not show a sensational spurt, it was quite satisfactory and there is a general feeling that April and May will see volume of sales steadily increasing. Medium-priced machines are the best sellers just now, while standard records have the call in this line.

Collections are showing some improvement and the general condition of the market is one of slow but apparently steady improvement. Jobbers report dealers placing substantial stock orders for Summer models, and dealers are hopeful that portables will prove good sellers during the next few months.

Columbia dealers in the Buffalo district have entered whole-heartedly into the international sales contest and are keeping the local agency near the top in this drive to rejuvenate trade.

Dealers taking part in the contest in this district are: Household Outfitting Co., M. Turchin, Variety Music Co., Seeber & Hofheins and Verbeck Musical Co., Buffalo; Pritchard & Ropelt, O. Provenzano, John Gugino and Carfi Bros., Rochester; Jacob Weinheimer & Sons, Syracuse; Claude Buckpitt, Elmira; G. F. Schafer, Batavia; J. A. Goldstein, Niagara Falls; Swanson Piano Co., Jamestown; Jones Bros., Lockport; George L. Traver, North Tonawanda; McNall & McNall, Albion; N. H. Vasbinder, Corning; Allen Music Store, Ithaca; Overton & Hall, Westfield; M. A. Meagher Co., Skaneateles; Conservatory of Music, Portland.

The M. A. Meagher Co., of Skaneateles, is the latest addition to the ranks of Columbia dealers. It is composed of live wires and they propose to make the agency an important one.

Sascha Jacobsen, violinist, delighted his many Columbia record friends at his recent appearance at Shea's Hippodrome.

A Grafonola and Columbia records were used recently in a wireless telephone demonstration given before the Engineering Society of Buffalo by McCarthy Bros. & Ford.

Harry Barsuk has moved his talking machine and record store at Batavia from 43 Ellicott street to 59 Jackson street. He recently purchased the building which he now occupies.

Another Batavia dealer who recently moved is Samuel C. McRoberts, who has moved his place of business from 32 Main street to quarters in the old postoffice building at 16 Jackson street.

After a chase extending across several States Sam Poindexter, of Boston, was arrested in Buffalo charged with the theft in Boston last Christmas of a talking machine and a number of records. He presented the machine to a lady friend and she and the instrument later disappeared.

The building in which the new Kurtzmann store is to be located is now nearing completion and removal will be completed late in April or early in May, it is expected.

Removal of the McClellan Music House from 732 Main street to 678 Main street will take place early in May, it is expected.

J. N. Adam & Co. will open an exclusive music shop in the building now occupied by the U. S. Rubber Co., on Washington street, opposite the company's present department store, some time in May. In the new store, which will consist of three entire floors devoted to instruments and accessories, extensive space will be devoted to the talking machine department.

A Machine Stock Register Book That Will Make Money for Victor Dealers

Requires no book-keeping knowledge to keep it up-to-date. Tells instantaneously what stock is on hand, what is "on order" and what styles are selling best. Highly prized for more than a year past by many Victor dealers. Now available for the entire Victor trade. Costs little but is worth a lot.

NEW YORK'S THIRD MUSIC WEEK ON APRIL 30 TO MAY 6

Talking Machine Dealers Should Appreciate the Business-building Value of This Great Event in Which the Prominent Men of the City Are Interested—A Campaign for Music

There is every prospect at present that New York's Third Music Week, to be held from April 30 to May 6, will prove the most successful yet held by a very substantial margin, in view of the active participation of thirty-seven special committees covering different fields under the auspices of the general committee, of which C. M. Tremaine, director of the National Bureau for the Advancement of Music, is chairman.

Some of the more important committees this year and their chairmen are: Actors' Equity Association, John Emerson, chairman; Artists' Co-operation, Berthold Neuer, chairman; Boys' Clubs, Major Edwin W. Dayton, chairman; Camp Fire Girls, Mrs. Henrietta Baker Low, chairman; Churches, Rev. Ernest L. Stires, D.D., chairman; Synagogues, Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, chairman; Church Organists, Lynnwood Farnam, chairman; City Government, Hon. Philip Berolzheimer, chairman; Colleges and Universities, Prof. Samuel A. Baldwin, chairman; Concert Managers, Milton Diamond, chairman; Council of Jewish Women, Mrs. N. Taylor Phillips, chairman; United Neighborhood Houses, Miss Harriet Righter, chairman; Girl Scouts, Mrs. J. D. Rippin, honorary chairman; Inter-Racial Council, Felix M. Warburg, chairman; Motion Picture Houses, Hugo Riesenfeld, chairman; Music Clubs and Organizations, Mme. Edna Marione, chairman; Music Schools and Conservatories, J. Lawrence Erb, chairman; New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, Miss M. Louise Mundell, chairman; Parochial Schools, Mgr. Joseph Smith, chairman; Private Schools, Prof. Charles H. Farnsworth, chairman; Public Schools, Music Department, George H. Gartlan, chairman; Lecture Bureau, Dr. Ernest L. Crandall, chairman; Public Welfare, Kenneth Clark, chairman; Salvation Army, Staff Captain George Darby, chairman; Y. M. C. A., Walter Diack, chairman.

A proper conception of the extent and quality of this voluntary co-operation can be had by reading the newly issued folder of the General Committee, giving the complete personnel of the various special committees; or, better still, by examining the hundreds of replies received to date from churches, clubs, schools, colleges, etc., whose participation in the observance the committees have helped to secure. The work of organizing the special committees and supervising the huge correspondence for which they are responsible has been in charge of Miss Isabel Lowden, director of Music Week.

The committee for the co-operation of the city government includes, besides Mr. Berolzheimer, Thomas J. Drennan, Fire Commissioner; Richard E. Enright, Police Commissioner; Francis D. Gallatin, President, Park Board; Joseph Haag, Secretary, Board of Estimate; Murray Hulbert, President, Board of Aldermen; Joseph Johnson, Commissioner of Public Works; Julius Miller, Borough President; Anning S. Prall, Tax Commissioner; Alfred A. Taylor, Street Cleaning Commissioner. The participation of the city administration along definite and most helpful lines has already been promised and more detailed announcement will be made in the near future.

The Music Industries Special Committee is divided into five parts as follows: Piano Manufacturers and Merchants, Theodore E. Steinway, chairman; Music Merchandise, S. Buegeleisen, chairman; Music Publishers, George Fischer, chairman; Phonograph Dealers, Irwin Kurtz, chairman, and Phonograph Manufacturers and Distributors, J. Newcomb Blackman, chairman. Ample opportunity will be offered the trade to participate in Music Week. Beautiful posters have been prepared for the dealer to display in his windows during the observance, also folders, stickers and envelope slips for use in his correspondence. Other suggestions made by the committee are that the dealers give concerts in their stores, decorate their windows appropriately and feature Music Week in their advertising. Nearly 100 replies have already come in from dealers in New York and the surrounding territory within a radius of thirty miles, declaring their intention to associate themselves with the observance in these ways. More responses are coming in daily.

The trade all over the country has been quick to appreciate the business-building value of these Music Weeks, and in many cities the leading music merchants have taken an active part in initiating the movement. Since the National Bureau for the Advancement of Music has started the Music Week campaign seventy-eight different cities have held Music Weeks.

No adjustments necessary when changing from lateral to vertical cut records. Stop prevents swinging to the right.

Needle scratch almost entirely removed.

Turning back of Reproducer permits of easy access to needle socket and saves records from unnecessary scratching.

Is the ONLY equipment that plays vertical cut records in the proper "EDISON" position with the Reproducer turned FACE DOWN to the record, giving it a floating action.

Needle CENTERS on all records.

Straight air-tight construction and absence of movable joints insure perfect reproduction and great volume.

Pivoted ball-joint insures perfect reproduction and freedom of movement both vertically and horizontally.

Weight is the lightest that can produce perfect results, thus saving the record, and permitting a freedom and sweetness of tone considered impossible.

Indestructible NCM-Y-KA diaphragms do not blast, crack, split or warp, and are the greatest development in phonographic sound reproduction in years.

Review of Business Conditions—Koerber-Brenner Co.'s Victrola Exposition—"Talker" Speeds Typists in School—Trade Changes

St. Louis, Mo., April 5.—Talking machine business in the St. Louis trade territory is still dragging. In the high-class stores most of the sales are of machines priced at $100 to $200. There are not many inquiries for those that cost more than $200, although inquirers can in some instances be persuaded that the higher-priced machine is the best buy. On the other hand, there is a fairly good movement of the cheaper machines that are offered by the stores that specialize in them and in the bargain basements of the department stores.

Victrola Music to Speed Up Typists

The proprietor of a Belleville, Ill., business college has just introduced a novelty into the school by which he expects and declares he will increase the speed of students taking up the study of typewriting. He installed a Victrola and the typists accompany the music of the Victrola on the typewriters. He declares that a march gives the students a speed of between twenty and twenty-five words per minute, a waltz about thirty-five words per minute and a two-step between fifty and fifty-five words per minute. He declares that harmony is the greatest thing in life and persons who are in harmony seldom are failures. Beginners start to the accompaniment of marches and are advanced to the waltz and then to the two-step. Jazz music is entirely out of the question, as it throws everything out of gear and causes the pupils to add motion of the body to the nimbleness of fingers and the fingers and the typewriter are forgotten.

To Get Supplies From St. Louis

Texas Vocalion dealers will hereafter obtain supplies from the St. Louis wholesale Vocalion headquarters. They formerly were supplied by the Crowdus Dry Goods Co., at Dallas. That company is no longer acting as distributor.

Featuring Vocalion Records

J. Conrad, music publisher, has opened a music shop at 526 DeBaliviere avenue, in the West End, where, in addition to sheet music, Vocalion records will be handled.

Now With Peoria Music Shop

Miss Leona Nichols, for the past six months record buyer for the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney talking machine department, has resigned to take a position with the Peoria Music Shop at Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Anna Marie Price, wife of T. J. Price, a Victor dealer at Belleville, Ill., died recently at the age of fifty-six years.

The Victrola Exposition

The arrangement of interesting Victor exhibits planned by the Koerber-Brenner Co., known as a Victrola Exposition, has just finished its third showing and is proving more successful every week. The dates were: Marion, Ill., Cline-Vick Drug Co., March 6-11; Harrisburg, Ill., L. L. Parker Music House, March 14-18; St. Louis, Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, March 22-28.

A teaser campaign in the newspapers opened a week before the exposition. Five teaser ads, consisting of a circle enclosing the letters V. E., and a Victor dog increasing in size each day were run. The day before the opening an explanatory ad was run, giving the program for the entire week. This was followed each day with interesting explanations of things to be seen and heard at the exposition. In all, some 7,000 lines of Victor advertising was carried.

At Marion, in addition to the regular display, Fay Luyster, manager of the Cline-Vick Victrola stores, was able to get two dozen of the old seven-inch, single-face records of the Victor make and of the Berliner Gramophone records. These added to the interest in the trade-mark Victrola. A window display was made of them, using a five-piece band record of twenty-five years ago in contrast to a 100-piece orchestra record of the present day. Several hundred people saw the exhibit in Marion and many sales resulted, as well as a prospect list of importance.

At Harrisburg Mr. Parker, of the Parker Music House, moved out his stock of pianos, giving over a large and attractive floor to the exhibit. In spite of three days of heavy rain the attendance was remarkable, almost a hundred people seeing it each day. The Parker Music House reports an increased business as a result of the exhibit.

At Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, in this city, a part of the piano floor was cleared for the exhibit. This was directly in front of the elevators and attracted even casual visitors. Here a lighted glass case contained the parts of the Victor motor against a background of black. This and the glass-encased Victrola were centers of interest, especially to the men. The exhibit is booked solidly through April and May.

Many Hear Fritz Kreisler

Fritz Kreisler played to a crowded house in St. Louis on March 22. The capacity of the Odeon Concert Hall was taxed, a hundred or more occupying the stage and several hundred were turned away. St. Louis dealers were lax in supporting the concert through advertising and only one, Hellrung & Grimm, used the program to advertise his records.

Fifteen copies of "The Victrola Book of the Opera" are in the St. Louis Public Library, placed there through the efforts of the educational department of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney.

The San Carlo Opera Co. is giving the only week of grand opera heard in St. Louis in two years and the window of the Kieselhorst Piano Co. has been cleverly decorated to celebrate the event. The Penn Victor figures are used on the revolving table of the window; each is plainly labeled as to character represented and the Victor artist who has made records of that role.

Bauer's Music House Remodeled

Residents who have had occasion to enter the well-known music house of Bauer's, on Gravois avenue, have been most agreeably surprised at the wonderful improvements that have been made both in the interior and outside. The interior has been completely remodeled, enlarged and decorated in white enamel and partitions removed, large pillars replacing them. Mr. Bauer has just completed twenty-five years of business activity, during most of which he has been a Victor dealer and can lay just claim to a store that answers every purpose in the musical line.

Miss Lacy McGee, formerly with the record department of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., is now with the same department of the Lehman Piano Co.

Report 50 Per Cent Increase

Retail Manager Schlude, of the local Edison house, reports an increase of 50 per cent in March over the preceding month. The demand was mostly for the larger machines, twice as many of these being disposed of as of other models. E. A. Beldwin, Kennett, Mo., and R. N. Monahan, Gillespie, Ill., Edison dealers, were in St. Louis recently.

New Starr Dealers

Manager Earl E. Fay, of the Connorized Music Roll Co., which has the agency for Starr talking machines and Gennett records in St. Louis, has opened an account for machines, records and music rolls with the Bitterth Music Co., which opened for business Saturday, April 1, at 5049 Gravois avenue. The company formerly did business as the Service Shop, of East St. Louis.

Frank L. Fay, traveler for the St. Louis Connorized music roll branch, left April 3 on a trip of several weeks through Illinois with the Connorized rolls, Starr talking machines and Gennett records.

Miss Marie Tucker, bookkeeper of the St. Louis Connorized roll branch, has recovered from an illness which kept her at home for a week.

Enlarges Record Counter

Manager J. F. Ditzel, of the Famous & Barr Co. talking machine department, has found it necessary to enlarge his record counter 25 per cent to handle the increasing record business. The counter is now one of the largest in the country.

F. J. Ennis, manager of the Stix, Baer & Fuller talking machine department, was out of the city a part of last week.

Some Brieflets

E. D. Follin, supervisor of the Widener chain of stores, was here early in April and returned to New York by way of Indianapolis and Cincinnati.

R. V. Johnson, manager of the Vocalion department of the Aeolian Co., has returned from a business trip to Kansas City, Mo., and cities in Kansas.

A. A. Trostler, manager of the Schmelzer Co., Kansas City, Mo., Victor wholesaler, stopped in St. Louis on his way home from a visit to the Victor factory.

Lectures on the Radio

F. H. Kroger, representing the Radio Corp. of America, lectured on a recent evening before 400 members and guests of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. He gave a detailed account of large transmitting apparatus, of the apparatus used by the army and navy during the war and by the commercial stations. He explained the transmitting apparatus, beginning with the earliest types.

A picture of what Mr. Kroger called the 1922 phonograph was shown. It showed a phonograph cabinet, which, instead of the usual motor and revolving disc for the record, was completely equipped with dials and rheostats and apparatus for a first-class receiving outfit, with three stages of amplification.

Indicted on Complaints of Investors

George N. Dobson, of Rogers, Ark., former president of the Lampagraph Co., and J. G. R. O'Hara, of Indiana Harbor, Ind., are charged in three indictments returned here with obtaining money by false representations. They are accused of having represented that the company had bought the Madame De Foe farm in St. Louis County, whereas the place was never acquired. The complaining investors are B. L. Hannah, Robert H. Becker, Adolph Stocker, Scott Stites and Otto Oberlag, all of St. Louis. Dobson and O'Hara are also charged with floating the stock of the Lampagraph Co., sales of which are alleged to have amounted to $85,000. The representation was that the company was to manufacture a combination table lamp and phonograph in St. Louis.

TRADE ACTIVITIES IN MEMPHIS

Talking Machine Dealers Plan Exhibits at Carnival—Arrange Music Memory Contest

MEMPHIS, TENN., April 7.—The celebration of the Viaduct opening on McLemore street, June 5 to 10, will be made the event of a pageant and carnival by local merchants. There will be industrial booths and other features to attract residents. A number of the local talking machine dealers will participate. Another event of interest in music circles here is a music memory contest, which will be held some time this Spring. A number of prizes, including a Victrola and records, will be presented to the winners.

EQUIP BUCKLEY-NEWHALL BUILDING

Van Veen & Co., Inc., New York City, manufacturers of Van Veen equipment for talking machine warerooms, recently installed new equipment for the Buckley-Newhall Co., New York City. An indication of the appreciation of this work by the Buckley-Newhall Co. is to be found in the fact that Van Veen & Co., Inc., subsequently were awarded a contract for woodwork, consisting of partitions and screens throughout the entire building.

JEROME B. SULLIVAN IN NEW POST

Jerome B. Sullivan has been appointed representative for New Jersey by the Musical Products Co., Vocalion distributor for that State, succeeding J. M. Wale, who recently severed his connection with the company to go with the United Music Roll Co. Mr. Sullivan was formerly connected with the Emerson and Cardinal organizations.

And Today—the Modern STRAND Console

THE trend today is unmistakably toward the flat-top Console. Strand Consoles are all flat-top, have the correct lines, and are faithful representations of each period.

In addition to Model 8 (Queen Anne Console) at $125, illustrated at the right; our Model 1 (Louis XV Console) at $150; our Model 2 (Italian Renaissance Console) at $175; and our Model 4 (Louis XVI Console) at $200 are correspondingly correct and beautiful.

STRAND Consoles are made of finest Mahogany or Walnut, and are equipped with heavy double-spring motor, all-wood tone chamber, solid brass tone arm and universal sound box, which permits the playing of all records, and with six well finished record shelves built in. Every Strand model is guaranteed, not only as regards tone, finish, design and workmanship in every part, but also in packing. Our packing and shipping system is trouble proof.

BROOKLYN DEALERS CONCENTRATE ON RECORDS

Window Displays and Special Sales Efforts on Records Make Up for Slack Machine Business—Plan Sonora Outdoor Ad Campaign—A Successful Sales Campaign—Recent Trade News

Dealers in this section of metropolitan New York have made the past month one of real achievement in record business, which has helped materially in bringing sales up to a respectable figure. This phase of the talking machine business is the ever-present stabilizer of retail sales and, as the sale of instruments the past few weeks has been low, dealers have made up the deficiency by concentrating their activities on records and also accessories with gratifying results. Store windows everywhere are devoted to striking and attractive displays featuring many groups of record selections, popular and classical, and as a result business has been of good proportions, despite a generally depressed condition.

Plans Big Outdoor Ad Campaign

The Long Island Phonograph Co., wholesaler of the Sonora phonograph for Brooklyn and Long Island, is busily engaged in completing one of the most extensive outdoor advertising campaigns ever carried on in this territory. More than 150 of the most desirable sites have been secured, where attractively painted signs will be erected, featuring the Sonora phonograph "Clear as a Bell," and which will display prominently the name of this popular distributor. Robert H. Keith, general manager of the company, stated that this campaign was a forerunner of several more, for which plans have already been perfected—that it represents one phase of service which the company is endeavoring to give the Sonora dealers in the territory and also reflects the confidence it has that talking machine sales will more than hold their own during the Summer season.

Sales Campaign Moves Large Stocks

Edward Strauss, pioneer music dealer and one of the oldest in metropolitan New York, recently conducted a very successful sales campaign, through which he was able to liquidate a large stock of Pathé, Emerson and Aeolian instruments which he has carried. He is now planning to feature the well-known Brunswick line of machines and records. Despite the depressed demand for instruments this campaign was productive of many sales and, in consequence, the months of February and January compared very favorably with the same months last year. The location of this store, at 94-96 Court street, is in the heart of the shopping district and is considered one of the most desirable in Brooklyn.

Victor Dealers Enjoy Good Trade

The American Talking Machine Co., Victor wholesaler, reports that dealers have had a very good month in sales, the demand for records being especially lively. Machine sales were few, but some large and expensive models were sold. All dealers, it states, are confident that the coming months will produce some real business.

Sofus Hjelden in Larger Quarters

Sofus Hjelden, well-known Victor dealer at 5403 Fifth avenue, is now moving into his new and larger quarters recently acquired, at 5116 Fifth avenue. This move was made necessary, as the old location was found inadequate to take care of his fast-growing business, and it is expected that these new quarters will take care of his large number of customers in a more efficient manner. When completed this new store will present a very attractive appearance and, with the latest store improvements installed, will be one of the most modern establishments in Brooklyn. This move certainly reflects the confidence held by the retail trade for the future of the talking machine business in this territory.

Sells Expensive Sonora

A recent noteworthy sale of a high-class model talking machine was one made by the Ideal Piano Co., Sonora dealer, at 582 Sutter avenue. The model sold was a Louis XV Du-Barry Sonora, which retails for $1,000, and, according to I. Weshal, proprietor of the store, who made the sale, is only one of others which he hopes to close in the near future, as he has several good prospects, who he believes will purchase later on. J. J. Schatweiser, sales manager of the Long Island Phonograph Co., also reported that another live Sonora dealer in the person of Leon Brick, of 1803 Pitkin avenue, had just placed a similar model in the home of one of his customers. It takes real salesmanship to sell a high-priced machine, but it can be done, as demonstrated above, provided the proper effort is put forth, for there are many prospects who could be induced to buy if approached with real salesmanship.

Music Shop Adds Sonora Line

The Music Shop, Babylon, Long Island, conducted by J. R. Ferguson, is one of the latest additions to the long list of Sonora dealers in this section. It is planned to feature this popular instrument, in conjunction with other makes, and with the facilities of a well-appointed store the prospective purchaser can be suited as to choice in the most approved manner. Lee Coupe, genial representative of the Long Island Phonograph Co. for this territory, is responsible for the establishing of this desirable Sonora account.

Will Hold Formal Opening

The Greenpoint Talking Machine Co., located at 638 Manhattan avenue, this city, is making extensive plans for the formal opening of its new establishment some time this month. An elaborate program is being prepared at which prominent Victor artists will participate. L. R. Sherman is the head of this organization and is one of the leading Victor dealers in his section of the borough. The new building is right next door to his present location.

His latest move in this direction is the rearrangement and redecoration of the entire store and the installation of several new equipment features, which are designed to take care in a more efficient manner of the needs of a steadily increasing business. This work is bound to make for him many new desirable customers and also enable him to offer an efficient and genuine service to the large clientele which he now serves.

UNIQUE WAY OF FILING RECORDS

Okeh Dealer at Riverhead, N. Y., Introduces Novel Filing Plan—Self-service Idea That Sells

The accompanying picture shows a most unique way of filing records, which enables the prospective customer to serve himself. Sylvester L. Cavanaro, Okeh and Edison dealer at Riverhead, Long Island, N. Y., is responsible for this self-service idea. He has just installed a new department on the second floor of his commodious quarters in the thriving Long Island town, and it has already proved its worth.

One hundred different records are filed in this way along the entire side of the store. All the latest Okeh releases are prominently displayed, in addition to the regular stock. On the other side of the room are comfortable sound-proof booths, and "Mr. Prospect," after looking over the record stock, selects some of the numbers which he wishes to try and goes to a booth and hears the records.

The display racks are thirty feet long and ten feet high, and are arranged in three sections. Okeh records are devoted to the first and second sections and a part of the third. Mr. Cavanaro has in all five booths in his store, but the new department on the second floor, because it is so very quiet, offers ideal quarters for prospects to try out records. The results have more than justified the outlay through the increased sale of the selections that are featured.

Mr. Cavanaro is one of the most wide-awake and progressive phonograph dealers on Long Island, and, while he is situated in Riverhead, he covers the entire Eastern section of the Island.

S. L. Cavanaro's Interesting Self-service Record File

He is ably assisted by Mr. Preston, his salesman, whose principal task is to look after the trade outside of Riverhead. Both Mr. Cavanaro and Mr. Preston were recent visitors to the Okeh recording laboratories in New York. They report an increased demand for Okeh records, both of the popular dance and vocal type, and of the celebrity records. They are also doing a big business in the piano selections of Ferdinand Himmelreich, the well-known pianist, who is a resident of Riverhead.

Rogers & Fischer Have an Admirably Arranged Establishment for Victor Wholesaling

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 4.—Rogers & Fischer, Victor wholesalers of this city, are finding their new headquarters at 1219 I street particularly efficient in taking care of their steadily increasing business. This building was erected in accordance with the plans and specifications laid down by Mr. Rogers and Mr. Fischer for an efficient Victor wholesaling headquarters. Before the first piece of furniture had been moved into the building every foot of floor space had been carefully planned out with great care. The building extends straight through to a back street, thus providing excellent shipping facilities without interruption to business. The ground floor is devoted to the general offices of the company, together with a model demonstration booth and display of Victor merchandise. The other three floors are devoted to storage purposes for both machines and records. An excellent filing system has been installed for records.

THE New Horizontal Type Victrolas are being placed before the public as attractive popular models with all the exclusive Victor musical qualities.

The Victor retailer will invariably find a ready response to his announcement of these new styles, and should, therefore, stock these new machines in sufficient quantities to meet the demands of discriminating and critical music lovers.

Well-known Toledo Firm Arranges for Appearance of Victor Artists—Selling Tickets on Credit Increases Attendance at Concert

TOLEDO, O., April 8.—The Victrola department of the Lion Store here, which arranged for the appearance of the Eight Famous Victor Artists, reaped profits in the shape of good will and increased record sales. More than 2,500 persons were present at the concert. The Lion store arranged matters so that regular patrons were able to secure tickets on credit, a service which was appreciated by customers and aided materially in stimulating ticket sales. The staging of this concert is in line with the policy of the Lion Store to educate the public to an appreciation of the better class of music.

Some housewives in a far Western city have succeeded in solving the servant problem by installing small styles of talking machines and a goodly library of records in their servants' quarters, realizing that music is not confined to any station in life.

KANSAS CITY

Merchants Experience Decided Revival in Business—Agricultural Betterment and Increased Building Help Trade—News of the Month

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 6.—The talking machine business is sharing the better conditions that have come to this city and trade territory during the past three months. There has been a decided increase in the prices of agricultural products, and the farmers are all not only feeling better but many of them have a lot more money than they had, or expected to have. This has had its effect on all sorts of business in the territory.

In addition, there is the largest number of buildings, especially of dwellings, being erected now that has ever been erected in a given time. This condition is continuing, and has been in effect for the last six months. This is releasing considerable money, and, of course, practically every new house makes a new prospect for a talking machine. Then there is the general improvement of business being felt all over the country. This is the theory. The reports from both retail and wholesale merchants bear it out.

Practically all dealers agree as to the large increase in the sale of records. Those who have had no change in prices are saying that the sales are better this year than last, and that the February sales were larger than those of January (which is unusual for this market), and that the March sales have been larger than those of February. The companies which have reduced prices have enjoyed an increase in the number of sales, and most of them are saying that the cash value was held up. Dealers are frankly stating that the increase in the sales was largely due to the lower prices.

Big Increase in Edison Business

The local Edison Shop, which is managed by M. M. Blackman, has had a big increase in business over the corresponding months of 1921. Besides the cut in record prices there has been a vigorous advertising campaign put on, and special inducements for immediate orders offered. In March the business is reported to have been two and one-half times that of March, 1921. The vigorous advertising is being continued during April. Mr. Blackman is just home from New York, where he participated in the conference of branch managers. He came back bubbling over with enthusiasm, and full of optimism as to the future for the Edison in this territory.

Expansion of Brunswick Activities

The Brunswick is looking forward to the occupancy of another building which will be more suitable for the carrying on of its business, and which will be large enough to take care of the growing trade of this branch. The building at 1329-1331 Main street has long been too small for the business and additional room has been used for carrying the stock; and now the company has sold the Main street property and expects to move into the more strictly wholesale district. It has not secured a suitable building yet, however.

The increase in the sale of Brunswick records is attributed to several things. In the first place, the list of records has been very materially increased during the year. In the second place, the times are better. In the third place, Brunswick artists have stimulated sales by visits to the territory. Because of the expected visits of several of these to cities in this territory in the near future the demand is expected to continue to grow.

Among the Brunswick artists that are announced to visit in this territory soon are: Miss Dux, who will be in Emporia April 13. The Elshuco Trio is soon to visit Salina, Coffeyville, Concordia and Independence, Kansas. It will be at Salina on the 17th. Irene Pavloska will be in Wichita in "Carmen" on the 21st.

An encouraging feature of trade conditions as reported by F. M. Briggs, manager of the Brunswick branch, is that there are less overdue accounts on their books at this time than there have been for a long time. This indicates that there are more merchants who are in a condition to buy goods than usual.

Schmelzer Co. "Hitting on All Six"

Victor sales are reported very satisfactory. A. A. Trostler says, "We are going over, and hitting on all six." He reports that M. C. Schonly, who came to the Schmelzer Co. about six weeks ago, has had a very successful and satisfactory trip over the territory, getting acquainted with the dealers and preparing for increasing the business. The new horizontal models of the Victor are being well received, and Mr. Trostler expects them to grow in favor.

Fred Jenkins in Charge

Fred Jenkins, Jr., now has charge of the wholesale Victor department of the J. W. Jenkins' Sons Music Co. He was formerly at the head of the record department. He is pushing the horizontal models of the Victor, and is just getting in a carload of the $115 model. This company is just finishing a demonstration booth in its wholesale department, which is not only to be used in demonstrating machines, but it in itself is a demonstration of how a booth can be erected at a small cost and yet include in itself all the most modern equipment.

There is being installed in the wholesale department of the Jenkins Co.'s Victor wholesale department a radio receiving equipment. There has been a great deal of interest manifested in radio sending and receiving in the Kansas City territory recently, and with it an increase in all sorts of music.

J. W. Jenkins Heard From

J. W. Jenkins and wife, who are on a trip through the Mediterranean, have reached Rome on the return trip. They will visit, also, on the Continent rather extensively, and run up to London for a short visit. They are expected home

Distinguished Columbia Artists Heard

Radio fans who enjoy Columbia record concerts each night broadcasted by the Western Radio Co., of Kansas City, Mo., had an unusual treat March 20 when the concert of Rosa Ponselle, Metropolitan grand opera singer, and exclusive Columbia artist, was broadcasted. Miss Ponselle appeared at the Convention Hall under the auspices of the Murray-Davis Post of the American Legion. Immediately following her concert a special Columbia record Ponselle concert was given to the radio fans in addition.

Advance bookings of the appearances of Margaret Romaine in the Kansas City branch territory have just been received. Miss Romaine is an exclusive Columbia artist and Columbia dealers in towns in which she is to appear are arranging for complete tie-ups, so that they can secure the very desirable publicity which is inevitable through her appearance.

Lucy Gates, an exclusive Columbia artist, was a visitor at the Kansas City branch recently and advises that she will appear in an engagement at Manhattan, Kans., during the month of April. This is the first appearance of Miss Gates in the Kansas City branch territory for several years, and music lovers and friends who have heard her before will be glad of the chance to hear and see her again.

BRUNSWICK FOR STEINWAY STORES

Complete Line of Brunswick Machines and Records Installed in Retail Stores of Steinway & Sons—A Distinctly Important Move

CINCINNATI, O., April 10.—R. E. Wells, general manager of the Steinway & Sons retail department here, made the announcement this week that they have taken on the Brunswick line of phonographs and records, and will give them exclusive representation in the six Steinway & Sons retail establishments supervised by Mr. Wells. The opening dates are as follows: Cincinnati, O.; Columbus, O., and Huntington, W. Va., will open Brunswick departments early in April and the retail stores at Indianapolis, Ind.; Dayton, O., and Charleston, W. Va., will formally inaugurate Brunswick sales on May 1. All these establishments, which are tributaries of the Cincinnati store, have already been equipped with Unico demonstration booths, record racks and counters.

Clarence Browning, a man of long and successful experience in the talking machine field, has been appointed manager of the new talking machine departments in the seven stores. Mr. Browning for the past ten years was manager of the talking machine department of the Pogue department store in Cincinnati and he is well known throughout the trade.

Manager Wells, of Steinway, and sales manager A. J. Kendrick, of Brunswick, are to be congratulated for the work they have done in bringing about an association of these two great institutions. The prestige of both the Steinway pianos and Brunswick phonographs is nationally established, and a joint representation of both of these well-known products offers, as a matter of course, a great amount of added prestige to the local representation.

R. L. CHILVERS VISITS NEW YORK

A recent visitor to the New York trade was R. L. Chilvers, former sales manager of the Berliner Gramophone Co., Ltd., of Montreal, Can. While in the metropolis Mr. Chilvers consulted with representatives of several well-known lines of talking machines, which he plans to represent in Canada, where he is widely known to the talking machine fraternity.

DENVER DEALERS ARE WORKING HARD

Merchants Overcome Trade Lethargy by Sheer Hard Work—Plan Extensive Programs for Music Week in May—Noonday Concerts Boost Record Sales—New Store Opens—M. L. Leve Weds—News of the Month

DENVER, COL., April 8.—The energetic efforts of the talking machine dealers in this city are proving effective in overcoming, to a great extent, a natural lethargy which is being felt throughout the trade at present. Attractive window displays, advertising in the local newspapers, increased efforts on the part of members of the various sales staffs and other means are being taken advantage of to bring business up to a satisfactory level, with considerable success.

The outstanding event of the talking machine trade here is the approaching Music Week, which will be held in May. Dealers throughout the city are all busy planning to make this one of the most successful musical events ever held here, and preparations for extensive programs are under way.

One of the busiest stores in Denver is the Boot Music Co., which is concentrating on the sale of Victor records. Noonday concerts are proving instrumental in disposing of large numbers of records, both popular and classic.

An attractive new establishment has been opened at Fifteenth and Market streets by F. Hodus. Victor, Columbia, Vocalion and other well-known makes of machines and records are handled.

Milton L. Leve, one of the youngest music dealers in this city, and president of the Marsh-Leve Music Co., was married to Miss Etta Schonfeld recently. Both Mr. and Mrs. Leve are popular, and they have the best wishes of their many friends for a happy matrimonial career.

William Alfred White, music director of the Denver schools, passed away recently following an attack of influenza.

J. M. Spain, formerly manager of the talking machine department of the American Furniture Co., is now associated with the Columbia Stores Co., distributor of the Columbia Grafonola.

The establishment of the Knight-Atmore Piano Co., which has been undergoing alterations for some time, is now completed and this concern now boasts of one of the most attractive music stores in this part of the State. The concern features the Ampliphone.

Alterations which have been going on at the store of the Denver Music Co. for some time are rapidly nearing completion.

NEW DREHER STORE TO OPEN SOON

Interesting Program Being Arranged for Formal Opening of Cleveland Establishment

CLEVELAND, O., April 9.—A removal sale is under way at B. Dreher's Sons Co.'s store here to facilitate moving into the new store, which will be opened within the next few weeks. The new establishment is said to be one of the finest in the State. A feature of the store will be the talking machine department, which will be located under the mezzanine floor. This department will be up to date in every particular. Plans for the formal opening are being prepared by Robert Jones, advertising manager of the firm.

EDWARD TISCH PLANS NEW STORE

ELMHURST, N. Y., April 9.—Edward Tisch, head of the firm of A. B. Tisch, Victor dealer here, is planning the construction of a handsome new store in the Jackson Heights section of Elmhurst, according to information made public by the New York Talking Machine Co., Victor distributor, of New York. Mr. Tisch visited the headquarters of the company for data covering dealer equipment and store plans, which were placed at his disposal.

The merchant who is too near-sighted in the conduct of his business to think of to-morrow is in a bad way, indeed.

VOCALION RECORDING DIRECTORS

T. P. Ratcliff in Charge of Classical Recordings While Cliff Hess Will Look After the Recordings of Popular Selections for This Company

Thos. P. Ratcliff has been placed in charge of the recordings of classical and standard records at the Vocalion Record Recording Laboratories of the Aeolian Co. and Cliff Hess will have supervision over the recording of popular selections following the resignation of George Sheffield, who for some time past had been in charge of the laboratories.

Mr. Ratcliff is a man of wide experience in the talking machine trade, and particularly in the recording field, and some time ago was associated with the Vocalion record department of the Aeolian Co. in an important capacity. Cliff Hess is a well-known musician and pianist and has been connected with the Aeolian Co. in its music roll department for some years past.

OKEH RECORDS IN NEW ROLE

Appeal to Members of "Second Story" Profession as Highly Desirable—Two Okeh Dealers, Victims of Burglars, Lose Many Records

Okeh records are becoming more and more popular daily, and this condition applies not only to the general public, but to the members of the "second story" profession. This is indicated by the fact that burglars recently broke into the Sinn Fein Department Store at 415 West Forty-second street, New York, which is owned by T. J. Joyce, and stole 100 Okeh Irish records. Among the records picked out by the thief were selections by Gerald Griffin, Frank Kennedy, John McCormack and others.

Soon after this burglary was placed on "record" another group of music-loving highwaymen broke into the Plaza Sport Shop at 1085 Second avenue, New York. After taking a couple of cameras they evidently spied the Okeh record department and, as a result, the entire stock of Okeh records in this store became the property of the burglars. Both of these dealers admit that Okeh records are meeting with a ready sale, but they hope that all future customers will enlarge their Okeh record libraries through the usual way—over the counter.

Mid-West Point of View

WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WORLD, CHICAGO, ILL., APRIL 10, 1922

WHEN the paragraphs which fit into this page were written last month it was really too early to discuss the doings of the Mid-West Victor Dealers' Association, but we hope that no one will think it is now too late. For the topics which were discussed by the eminent speakers from East and West, to the accompaniment of one of those excellent dinners at our Drake (which hostel we decline to trade for any Biltmore or Pennsylvania or Ritz or Manhattan), were of the kind which waxeth not stale. Particularly were we struck by the very apt observations of J. Newcomb Blackman from New York. Now, Mr. Blackman is an eminent man when it comes to the talking machine business. For he has been in it, of it and a considerable thinker for and in behalf of it ever since there was a talking machine business. The writer of these words, once a happy Manhattanite, knows how, eighteen years ago, when The Talking Machine World made its debut, J. Newcomb Blackman was in evidence with an imposing advertisement and he has been in evidence ever since in this publication, because he has always been doing something important, valuable or useful for the talking machine business. So when he came down and told our Mid-Westerners all about the early days of the talking machine business we applauded vigorously and wished he would talk a lot more than he did. We fellows in these blessed days simply do not know what trouble is. We only think we do. Brother Blackman did a real service when he reminded some of the local kickers of what really went on in those old days—those "good old days." For our part we'll take 1922 with all her troubles. And so, we know, will Brother Blackman.

TALKING of dealers' associations leads us very naturally, of course, to the movement now under way to organize a state-wide association of music merchants for Illinois. Some ten days after the publication of these paragraphs the music men of the Blackhawk State will be meeting at Springfield to organize a state-wide association for the furtherance of their common aims and interests. We are not privy to the designs of the eminent Illinois merchants who are behind this admirable move, but we are aware that most, if not all, those who are likely to join the association already deal in talking machines, more or less extensively. Some of them indeed are very extensively interested in the talking machine. These gentlemen will remember, we are sure, that the talking machine is to-day of such importance that it has a merchandising problem all its own, a problem quite individual and much in need of analysis and solution: The problem of educating the mass of the country and city dwellers to their immediate need, not only of some talking machine, but of a good one; not only of some records, but of many and the best records. This problem has not been settled, nor has the parallel problem of financing received its due heed of attention. The Illinois music merchants have our best wishes in their new endeavor, and we heartily hope that they will remember the talking machine in all their comings and goings on April 24 and 25.

THE RADIO is evidently having its day. The craze continues to grow in the West. Lyon & Healy, who handle "Everything in Music," announce a jobbing arrangement which will enable them to supply to retailers De Forest, Cunningham, DeVeau and other supplies of a very technical nature. Then the Lakeside Supply Co. has come out with the announcement that it will soon have its own equipment on the market, complete for sending and receiving, and there is in general a buzzing of excitement among the wise men in our trade which portends still wider developments. So it seems that after all the talking machine men out here are doing what we counseled them to do some time ago, when we said to them, in effect: "If this new game is just a fad, then at least while it lasts it will make a lot of folks think about music, which won't hurt you at all. Then it will pass away and you won't be harmed. On the other hand, if it is to be permanent you cannot charm it away. Therefore, turn it to account." We said that, in slightly other terms, some time ago; and we see no reason now to take back the words.

WHEN P. L. Deutsch recently stood up before the assembled Brunswick dealers in St. Louis and talked to them about the history of the great house in which he performs so important a part, he was telling a story which constitutes a true romance of business. From the little factory down in Cincinnati which J. M. Brunswick started three-quarters of a century ago to the fifty-million-dollar corporation of to-day is a long way, whether reckoned in time or in accomplishment. But more important than this was his statement: "It is a tradition that Brunswick products must be good." In this simple remark is summed up the secret of a great and powerful house. Now, the talking machine business has likewise been founded and come to greatness upon the tradition that its product must be good. The entrance of the Brunswick house into that business was therefore eminently appropriate. Mr. Deutsch's words are quoted from the address he made at the organizing meeting of the Brunswick Dealers' Association of St. Louis. This is the first local Brunswick dealers' association and therefore deserves more than passing attention. Our industry is already well acquainted with the fact and the value of intra-corporation work of this kind, where the interests of a single manufacturing house in respect of distribution become so intricate that they can best be handled as to the general policies of merchandising by associations of jobbers and dealers who market their products. When rightly conducted these associations of jobbers and dealers in one product have been extremely successful, radiating beneficent power throughout the entire trade and encouraging all members thereof to stand firmly for the policies and the ideas which they know to be right but often feel too weak to maintain by themselves. It is, therefore, highly appropriate that we should here welcome the first local Brunswick dealers' association and tell its officers—as we now tell them by these words—that we are glad to see them established and shall hope to watch them grow steadily and healthily. The first meeting of the new body was held on the first Tuesday of the present month.

WE note that the Hall Mfg. Co. has started its national advertising through the Saturday Evening Post. This sounds like rather tall work for a house which makes so apparently small a product to go in for such elaborate publicity. Yet in fact the fibre needle makes an industry in itself, and the sort of publicity which the Hall Mfg. Co. is now so splendidly conducting is the kind that pays on a large scale. We are advised that dealers who feature the Hall fibre needle are reporting increased sales since the starting of the Saturday Evening Post campaign. Well, why not? They ought to. Incidentally, it might be observed that when an accessory product is being pushed in this manner the stability of the talking machine industry is being taken for granted, as it ought to be.

THE great increase in the building of homes, not only in the West, but, in fact, throughout the country, is good news to everyone engaged in the manufacturing and retailing of musical instruments. There are a lot of people who have been able to buy talking machines during the past year or so, but they have not done so simply because they have been crowded in temporary living quarters awaiting an opportunity to occupy an apartment or a home of some kind. These are prospective buyers—hence the importance of this great campaign for the building of homes which is so pleasingly evident throughout the country. The construction of homes now scheduled for the first half of 1922 exceeds all the anticipations made at the opening of the year, and the greater employment of workers in building these homes will be a decided factor in the larger demand for talking machines and records.

ARTHUR E. NEALY

A. SNYDER

CHICAGO, ILL., April 8.—The Chicago office of The Talking Machine World learns from the wholesalers and manufacturers that the trade over the country is very spotty; that is to say, some sections, for example, various localities throughout the mid-West, are reported to be enjoying very good business. This claim is substantiated by the fact that many dealers are sending in orders continually from their localities, whereas dealers in other localities are unheard of so far as communication via the order book is concerned. Some of those who supply these dealers have become curious as to why business should be good in one locality and not in another. Throughout the mid-West some of these men have been making a sort of canvass and have found that for one thing the chaotic conditions existing throughout the coal fields of Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky have put somewhat of a damper on business. Dealers in these districts say that for a time the big coal strike, which went into effect on April 1, had business in general demoralized in those sections, but that, as usual, it only took a week or so for the residents of those localities once more to accustom themselves to labor troubles. As soon as this had been accomplished business began to go on again. As a matter of fact, hardly a year goes by but that the public is knocked out of its shoes by newspaper scare-heads, telling about the biggest coal strike in the history of the world, and what it means and how it is going to demoralize industry throughout the country. But after the excitement dies down business goes on just as usual, even though there is a strike. Perhaps the reason of it all is that the coal operators want an excuse to raise the price of their product. Anyhow, we know that in other years talk such as this caused the talking machine business to fall off in the mining section of the country, but it was only a temporary falling off, and the same holds true this year.

The farming districts, according to many of the wholesale men, are contributing very much to the cause of good business. Machine sales are keeping the dealers busy and the records are also moving along in a very fair manner.

We recently talked to a man well known throughout the talking machine trade who in reality is one of the pioneers in the West. This man has gone through all kinds of business since his entrance into the industry and from the way he talks to-day he is going to spend a great many more years with it. We asked him what he really thought was the matter with business in general to-day and here is what he had to say:

"Salesmanship—that's the big thing. Whenever we had good business we had good salesmen. During the war we had an awful lot of business thrust upon us suddenly. Everybody was satisfied, but, when you really come down to it, was it good business? So far as the money part was concerned it was good business, temporarily, but, oh, the morning after! Now, if this business had been really done by salesmen, men who had actually gone out and made the sales, we would not be suffering at this time from any harmful effects caused by an overdose of abnormal business virtually thrust upon us. During the war period and immediately following for a number of months many of our high-pressure salesmen were lost to the trade. The men who were doing business were quick to discover that you didn't need good salesmen, all you needed was an order-taker; some school kid could fill the bill. Consequently, these men who were real salesmen were dispensed with and they, accordingly, went into other lines of business, or, better still, went into business for themselves. Anyhow, they have not returned, and now that we are actually facing a period where intensive selling and experience are needed we find ourselves up against a new proposition. We hate to admit that we haven't as many men as we need to cope with the situation and we are only too willing to acknowledge that business conditions are not what they should be. We then ask, why is it that the automobile men are not losing any sleep over business? The answer is that they have a plentiful supply of crackerjack salesmen, whom they run out in relays after prospects and, believe me, brother, if you ever had the automobile crew get after you as a prospect you are finally going to buy in self-defense. When one of them runs out of breath another one steps into his place. Now, any of the old-timers in the game remembers that the real selling was done by these high-pressure boys, many of whom have gone into the auto business, and the thing it behooves us to do is to get them back by all means. Now, by this I do not mean that there are not good salesmen left in the game. There are, but not enough and it's up to us to get our depleted ranks filled up again. We must get over this idea, and get over it quickly, that business conditions of to-day do not warrant additional salesmen. If we continue with this belief it will not be long before business will come to a point where it will not warrant even the number of salesmen we have to-day. The real thing we must do is to put on our salesmen, and it will not take long before these fellows will make the business warrant them."

Fire Does Serious Damage

The biggest fire that Chicago has witnessed since Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked the lantern over, way back in '71, occurred three weeks ago, when an entire block of buildings was destroyed, and half the interior of a modern office building (the C. B. & Q. R. R. offices) was gutted. Most of the buildings were eight and ten-story affairs, housing numerous printing and publishing concerns. The fire, of unknown origin, started about midnight and within twenty minutes the entire block was blazing away merrily. Among the firms with connections in the talking machine trade who suffered by fire loss were: The "morgue" or art filing department of Barnhart Bros. & Spindler. This department was quite a distance from the main plant and was used for storage purposes by the art department. This company, besides making the famous Scottford tone-arm and die castings, runs the largest type foundry in the country.

Another concern, which unhappily was entirely destroyed, was the Rosenow Co., publishers of The Brunswick Record Digest, which it got out monthly for all Brunswick dealers. No sooner was it apparent that their building was doomed, than the heads of the Rosenow Co. began plans for an immediate resumption of business in new quarters, so as to get the Digest out on schedule time.

"Robinson, the Plater" also suffered heavily by the fire. The same "I will" spirit characteristic of Chicagoans in 1871 again prevailed, however, and hardly had the firemen got the fire under control in this building than a number of building repair men were put on the job by Mr. Robinson and ere long a sign was hoisted over the front door, "Business going on as usual."

The Modern Phonograph Co. was another victim. This company manufactures knock-down cabinets. The safe was buried in the debris for ten days and upon being opened the contents were found to be in perfect condition. The Shaw-Walker Co., of this city, maker of steel files and safes, now has this safe on display in its show window and it is needless to say that it has attracted quite a great deal of attention. The Modern Phonograph Co. is making temporary headquarters with the Lakeside Supply Co., at 416 South Dearborn street.

Benson at the Tivoli

Victor dealers on the South Side took advantage of the appearance, recently, of Benson's orchestra, with Roy Bargy directing, at the Tivoli Theatre, Sixty-third street and Cottage Grove avenue. This galaxy of stars was the center of attraction at this wonderful theatre and Victor dealers for miles around were early on the job and cashed in on the tie-up offered them. Many of the dealers formed "community parties" and took large numbers of their customers to the theatre to see these famous Victor stars in person. The Tivoli is a Balaban and Katz house, and is said to be the most beautiful and commodious movie theatre in the world. The week the Benson orchestra played at this theatre happened to be the week set aside by the management to celebrate the first anniversary of its opening. According to South Side Victor dealers, Messrs. Balaban and Katz could not have hit upon a better attraction for this event than Director Bargy with Benson's orchestra.

Attractive Easter Windows

With eggs selling at 25 cents a dozen and plenty of good Easter records on sale the populace of Chicago and its numerous suburbs ought to have a happy time this Easter. As a matter of fact, there are more strictly fresh eggs on the Chicago market than there have been in more than a year. In fact, eggs are so plentiful and so fresh that Chicagoans are quite apt to forget the taste of the cold storage variety if some steps are not taken immediately.

The dealers in Chicago are certainly tying up with the Lenten season this year and many beautiful and seasonable greetings are sent throughout the city. It seems as though the manufacturers of records have concentrated on Easter as well, for many of these dealers are heralding handsome and extensive Easter libraries. At this particular time it might be well to recall to the readers of these columns the fact that our next national holiday will be on May 30, Decoration Day.

Open Chicago Office

The Jewett Phonograph Co., of Detroit, Mich., has opened a handsome and commodious suite of offices on the sixteenth floor in the North American building. A full and complete line of Jewett talking machines is on exhibition. The offices are in charge of H. J. O'Connor, but the preliminary organization of the sales and office staff is being directed by E. F. Sharpe, assistant sales manager of the Jewett Co.

New Hall Needle Envelopes

The Hall Mfg. Co. is now packing its product in very handsome and elaborate envelopes, lithographed in three colors. The major part of the front of the envelope is colored, which shows up in shadow a background of bamboo poles. The famous Hall trade-mark is shown in red and yellow, and the lettering of the address, etc., is in white. The color scheme for this background is of two kinds, a royal purple for No. 1, or 50-cent, package, and an emerald green for the No. 5, or 25-cent, package. The needles come packed in a handsome display carton, which is gotten up along the same lines as the needle envelopes.

Kreisler Praises the Hall Fibre Needle

A great tribute to the merits of the Hall fibre needle, made by the Hall Mfg. Co., 33-35 West Kinzie street, this city, has been paid by Fritz Kreisler, the famous violinist and Victor artist, who recently made this statement:

"The effect produced by the Hall fibre needle is most pleasing. The music becomes mellow, enriched. I believe that it is really the best to use in order to obtain the most from a record.

THE GEER REPEATER

If we asked you to accept our views regarding the Geer Record Repeater, you might justly hesitate, but what about the judgment of men who are in the same line of business as you?

Letters of Proof

Hill Talking Machine Co.
(Huntington, W. Va.)

"We received our three demonstration Geer Repeaters this morning, and while it has been a bad day, with few people in the store, they are all sold and orders booked for more. Kindly ship us at your earliest convenience twenty-five repeaters."

Brunswick Phonograph Shop
(Chicago)

"A few weeks before Christmas, we placed an electric machine in our window demonstrating the Geer Repeater and sales tripled at once. The demonstration is still running, and we are convinced that it has increased our business, considerably in all departments."

Consolidated Talking Machine Co.
(Chicago)

"We have very carefully tested the Geer Record Repeater and are convinced that it is something that ought to be in the hands of every phonograph owner. From a sales point of view, we are very glad to handle this repeater and to recommend it to our dealers because we know it will give satisfaction to their customers and be an unexpected and additional source of profit."

Wade Talking Machine Co.
(Chicago)

"We are pleased to advise you that after making a test of eight hours per day for two weeks, we decided to use your Record Repeater in our show windows as an attraction, with the result that it has kept large crowds of people before the show windows continuously, resulting in the sales of 15 to 25 repeaters per day, and a very material increase in our sales of dance records."

SALES records are being broken every month—that is the latest news regarding the Geer Record Repeater. If you could see the rapidity with which hundreds of our dealers are selling Geer Repeaters, you would say instantly: "Yes, sir, ship me an order today." Some of the letters which we have recently received are herewith reproduced.

Why Geer Repeaters Sell Quickly

Practically every large distributor of phonographs and accessories has endorsed the Geer Record Repeater. Here are the reasons why Geer Repeaters sell quickly:

1. It is as easy to put on and take off as a record.
2. It will repeat instantly and as often as desired.
3. It cannot possibly break or get out of order, and will last a lifetime.
4. It will not injure the record, needle or machine.
5. It fits any phonograph with free swinging tone arm.
6. It comes packed in a beautiful, durable box and can be laid away when not in use.
7. When dancing, entertaining, dining, or when you want music while working or resting, the Geer Repeater proves its remarkable usefulness.

Send for Our "DEMONSTRATION PACKAGE" Today

For the dealers who want to stock the Geer Repeater immediately and share in the quick profits that are being made, we have arranged a "Demonstration Package," containing three repeaters. ## FROM OUR CHICAGO HEADQUARTERS—(Continued from page 111)

Few men are better fitted to pass judgment upon the value of this needle as a means of conveying to the user of records the fullest measure of the musical value of the music on the record than this great artist, whose fame is international and whose ability as a composer and violinist ranks among the foremost.

Planning Intensive Campaign

The W. W. Kimball Co., manufacturer of the well-known Kimball phonographs, is planning a campaign by means of which it hopes to add several hundred new Kimball dealers to its following. This campaign was suggested by reason of the large number of inquiries received from different parts of the country, as an answer to the company's national advertising campaign. These results indicate renewed interest on the part of buyers and the Kimball Co. believes that those who make voluntary inquiries constitute usually but a small percentage of the actual prospects who can be sold if an aggressive local selling campaign is conducted by the dealer.

In planning this campaign the W. W. Kimball

Co., through J. V. Sill, manager of the wholesale talking machine department, has laid out a prospectus that is very comprehensive. The one big idea behind the whole campaign, according to Mr. Sill, is that the right kind of merchandise, backed by intensive selling methods, will produce surprising results, regardless of any of the so-called depression waves. This thought is the backbone of the Kimball Co.'s present campaign, which has already had a reception that leaves no doubt as to its success. Mr. Sill further believes that a portion of the public may have quit buying, but that is no reason why the Kimball Co. should cease selling, as the success of a number of dealers in selling Kimball talking machines proves that business depends largely on the efforts of the dealer.

Novel Plan of Interesting Public

N. H. Shoukair, who has recently moved to a new location at 1361 East Forty-seventh street, this city, employs a novel feature in his newly equipped store. An instrument that plays records out through a horn under his window platform to the street is entirely surrounded by a plate-glass case, which eliminates from the store any surface noise from the record being played and prevents the music from coming into the store to conflict with anything going on there. An electric motor operates this instrument and the records are changed by lifting a glass cover. This idea is only one of the many original and practical features of Mr. Shoukair's new store. He has installed, at a great expense, a hearing-room ventilating system, which keeps his hearing rooms supplied with warm, fresh air at all seasons of the year.

Another Manufacturer Enters

A new organization, known as the J. D. Keating Corp., of Chicago, has just been capitalized for $25,000, under the laws of Illinois. The new concern will manufacture and deal in phonographs, accessories, etc. The incorporators are: H. E. Keating, J. D. Keating and H. Heise. J. D. Keating is one of the pioneers in Chicago manufacturing circles and during some years put on the market an instrument known as the Usona. Just what name the new company will give to the instruments it contemplates putting on the market has not been decided as yet.

National Co. Leases Factory

The National Phonograph Co., which recently suffered the loss of one of its plants by fire, has leased a three-story building, comprising some thirty thousand square feet, at 2837-47 North Ashland avenue. The lease covers a period of ten years, with an aggregate rental of $60,000. The transaction was made with a woodworking concern, known as the Hoffman Co., which, in addition to the lease, sold to the National Co. $15,000 worth of woodworking machinery and equipment. At the time of its loss by fire the National Phonograph Co. was confining most of its output to the manufacture of small consoles.

Federal Phonograph Co. to Liquidate

The Federal Phonograph Co., of this city, has disbanded its organization. S. H. Siegal, proprietor of the company, made the announcement that he expected fully to liquidate its assets by April 1 at the latest. This company was not in bankruptcy and the reason for its liquidation, according to Mr. Siegal, is to enable him to resume activities in the real estate building line. Mr. Siegal and other members of his concern have been building contractors for many years in and about Chicago. During the war, when the building industry was disorganized, he and his associates organized the Federal Phonograph Co., fully intending to disband this organization when building activities should open up again. The assets of the company were sold at auction.

Thos. Mee to Open Another Store

Thos. Mee, of Clinton, Ill., who has operated a Grafonola shop at Clinton for the past two years, will soon announce the opening of a second store in Clinton, to be located on a busy street intersection. This new store will be splendidly equipped and will handle Columbia Grafonolas and records exclusively. One of the interesting points brought out by Mr. Mee while in the Chicago Columbia offices recently was the very high percentage of cash sales in his city. In this day, when the ratio of cash phonograph sales has dropped way below normal, it is amazing to find a community where 90 per cent of the business is conducted on a cash basis, as in the case of Mr. Mee's Grafonola and record business.

Strand Line Making Progress

The Consolidated Talking Machine Co., 227 Washington street, is making rapid progress in the introduction of the Strand phonograph, for which it is district representative. E. A. Fearn, head of the company, states that the dealers are enthusiastic regarding the sales possibilities of this attractive console product.

Bulletin No. 10 has just come through the mail from the advertising department of the Sterling Devices Co. This bulletin is a four-page folder, printed on heavy-coated stock, and

The Best Motor Money Can Buy

1. The wick lubricating system, an exclusive feature of our motor, keeps every part in the gear box running in a film of oil. Not a mere smear of grease to dry away and get gummy and hard with exposure to the air, causing noise and variable speed within a short space of time, but constant circulating lubrication.

For at least two years after our motors are installed the wick will circulate pure oil and governor and gears will be perfectly lubricated. Some of the high-priced motor cars have recently adopted wick lubrication—because it is right—continuous, automatic, certain.

2. The enclosed construction makes this lubricating system possible and also keeps dirt, bits of excelsior, lint and phonograph needles, etc., from getting into the works. This prevents those trouble cases that cost the dealer money and cause his customers annoyance.

3. The design of our motor lends itself to accurate alignment of bearing and springs. When our box-like casting is clamped into the holding tools to be machined it does not distort with pressure as open castings do. The reason we have almost no spring breakage is that perfect alignment does away with the side strain which causes crystallization and breakage of springs.

REAL PRICES

1. We have a modern, complete, specially designed equipment solely devoted to the production of this motor.

2. Our plant is spacious, light, modern in every feature and our organization is seasoned and imbued with spirit of quality.

We have the necessary volume of output and can produce efficiently. Because of these facts we are furnishing a motor of positively unequalled merit, at unmatched prices.

shows illustrations of the company's reproducers, tone arms and attachments for playing Edison records. Concerning the Sterling tone arm it has the following to say: "Since the advent of the Sterling it is not necessary to use an unsightly fold-back tone arm. Sterling tone arms are designed on pleasing, graceful lines, with as few turns or bends as possible to prevent muffling and metalizing the sound."

How Two Beloitains Made Good

Two and a half years ago this month two young men hit the striving town of Beloit, Wis. Their combined capital amounted to $12.42. Through determination, foresight and ability they were able, in a short time, to secure the confidence of several wholesale houses sufficient to secure a small line of credit and the shipment of enough goods to set up one of those modern department stores, sometimes called a drug store. The most important part of this establishment was a Grafonola Shop.

Two and a half years after the advent of these two young men into Beloit there appeared in the Beloit News a full-page advertisement announcing the opening of the most up-to-date and modern drug store on the busiest square of Beloit. It has been equipped with the latest improved showcases and with woodwork in Flemish oak and golden trimmings. Here, filed in modern racks, is carried a complete line of Columbia records, Columbia Grafonolas and period models. This is the business romance of Walt Krueger and Eugene Flarity. "K. & F.," as they are known in Beloit, are by far the two most popular young men in the town, and Dame Fortune has smiled on them kindly. The opening of their new store has been the occasion of many congratulatory remarks and the press has been profuse and complimentary.

Valuephone Console

Something like 10,000 handsomely printed leaflets showing the latest model Valuephone console were mailed out to the trade this week by Manager Hadley, of the Wizard Co. The console comes in either walnut or mahogany finish and is built up of seven-eighths-inch five-ply paneling with legs and moulding of solid mahogany or walnut. Manager Hadley states that the first mailing of literature announcing the offering of these consoles aroused considerable comment in the trade and brought a large number of inquiries and many orders.

Lakeside Co. Jobs Radio

Since the Lakeside Supply Co. announced in the advertising columns of The World last month that it had taken on a full line of radio supplies, it has been literally besieged by dealers clamoring for wireless telephone paraphernalia. The numerous inquiries and orders which have been received from all parts of the country indicate that the buying public has gone wireless mad. One interesting feature noted in the inquiries is that "the little sister of the talking machine" is causing an increased amount of activity in the record business.

According to the views of the Messrs. Fricke, proprietors of the Lakeside Co., the broadcasting of music is being received in over 600,000 homes in the United States. At present most of these receiving "hook-ups" are home made, at small initial cost and with no upkeep to speak of. The music received by the owners of these sets is arbitrarily chosen and seldom repeated. Therefore, in practice, after hearing a number by radio, the listener will feel inclined to perpetuate the enjoyment by purchasing records of the same. Many dealers have also reported to us that they have sold quite a number of talking machines owing to the wireless craze.

The Fricke brothers have just completed a "loud speaker" device on which they have applied for basic patent rights. This speaker is built along original lines, and, when in action, brings out the spoken voice or instrumental tones, which are remarkably free of "frying" or "escaping steam" noises so commonly run across in radio telephony. The Lakeside "loud speaker" will be ready for the market in the course of a few weeks.

A Great Success

Encouraged by the enthusiastic reception of the personal demonstration of March records, Lyon & Healy have again invited the music-loving public to hear a personal demonstration of the selections on the new April Victor records.

The unqualified success of the innovation inaugurated in March by Lyon & Healy prompted them to again render an elaborate program in conjunction with the opening day for April records. Several artists sang and played in person in their record department the selections recorded for April by the Victor Co. The program consisted of the McKay Trio, Helen McKay, piano, Malvina Neilsson, violin, and Walter Brauer, cellist; Lucille Hayley, soprano, and Carroll Kearns, baritone. This concert was given in their record department on Saturday, April 1, 12.00 to 3.00 p. m.

The outlining and planning of this method of exploiting new releases is from the fertile brain of L. C. Wiswell, manager of both wholesale and retail Victor departments of Lyon & Healy. The initial debut of these programs was given on March 1 and the phenomenal success attained assured a series of repeat concerts not only at the main store but all Lyon & Healy branches throughout Chicago as well.

Distinguished Canadians Visit Chicago

G. L. Stanwood, secretary and treasurer, and G. H. Roberts, manager, of Stanwoods, Ltd., Winnipeg, Can., were visitors to the Chicago trade recently. Messrs. Stanwood and Roberts spent most of their time in calling on the dealers located in the "loop" section and taking note of Chicago business methods. The house represented by these gentlemen retails Victor and Columbia products and special attention was paid to sales methods in use here by dealers handling these well-known lines.

measure responsible for our visit to Chicago," said Mr. Stanwood. And when asked, "How come?" he stated that each month he takes much interest in looking over The World's news columns and paying particular attention to the special articles and news items.

"Pertaining to sales methods, your valuable paper," said Mr. Stanwood to a World representative, "contains what I believe to be a truly remarkable collection of sales ideas, and many of these are being utilized by our firm from time to time. Some of these items published recently were of such a simple, yet unique, character that I thought it would be well worth while for myself and Mr. Roberts to journey down here to Chicago and look them up."

It might be well to state here that Stanwoods, Ltd., is one of the largest and oldest music establishments in central Canada. A large part of its remarkable growth is attributed to its up-to-the-minute business methods. Willingness to go out of its way to make satisfied customers is one of the firm's hard and fast rules.

Home Exposition Successful

A full line of Victor Victrolas and Victor records was the center of attraction in the Wurlitzer Co.'s booth at the "Own Your Own Home" Exposition, which ran at the Coliseum last week. As reported by Lester C. Noble, retail manager of Wurlitzer's Victor department, the Exposition was one of the most successful his company has ever been connected with. A large number of sales were made and hundreds of prospects booked during the exhibit.

Repair Parts Going Big

Dealers throughout the country are fast learning the advantages to be derived by maintaining repair departments. This fact is evidenced by the daily increased activities in the repair parts department of the Consolidated Talking Machine department. "A repair department is becoming a prime requisite with most dealers nowadays" is the opinion of A. E. Fern, president of the Consolidated Co., "and is being maintained by all dealers who realize that many prospects are found and machines sold, by the close association of this department with the public." The Consolidated Co. bears the enviable reputation of carrying the largest and most complete line of repair parts in the United States.

Hark Sales Co. Chartered

The Hark Sales Co., 139 North Clark street, distributor of the "Happer Automatic Record Gleaner," has been granted a charter of incorporation, under the laws of the State of Illinois, with a capital of $10,000. Officers of the concern are: President, Mark S. Porter; vice-president, W. A. Hansen, and secretary and treasurer, Albert A. Walbur.

The record cleaner is the invention of R. A. Happer and it fits any reproducer excepting the Edison and the Pathé. The cleaner works automatically as the record plays.

Deiro Entertains

Deiro, hailed by the local press as the world's greatest piano-accordionist, as well as a famous exclusive Columbia artist, proved, according to the theatrical critics of these very newspapers, a 99¾ per cent pure hit. The week of March 26 he showed with the "Midnight Rounders" at the Apollo Theatre, Chicago. The Columbia boys spent a great deal of their time calling the Columbia dealers' attention to the fact that Deiro was showing here, and by diligent work effected a considerable number of excellent tie-ups, which resulted in substantial sales of Deiro's records.

Chasing Rainbows

Members of the Chicago office of the Columbia Graphophone Co., their friends and relatives, with Columbia dealers in Chicago and their friends and relatives, are getting ready to get upon the band wagon on the evening of Monday, April 17, when they will all go down to Fred Mann's Rainbo Gardens, the home of the latest acquisition to the now long list of Columbia dance orchestras. And here's the why of the whole big party. It is in honor of Frank Westphal and his Rainbo Orchestra, and the management of the Rainbo Gardens is calling the aforementioned night Columbia Night, in honor of all the Columbia people who will be there. He has promised everyone who attends a mighty good time, with nice souvenirs 'n' everything.

Frank Westphal recently joined the happy family of Columbia entertainers and samples of his first records, which were made in the recording laboratory of the Chicago office of the Columbia Co., have been enthusiastically received by the Columbia dealers throughout the city. A comparison of these records will be made with the actual playing of the Rainbo Orchestra at the big party.

Forming New Association

Agitation which has been in progress throughout the State of Illinois for an organization of Illinois music merchants came to a head in this city recently when at a gathering of some of the most prominent of them it was decided to send out a call for a get-together meeting of all the merchants in the State. The meeting will be held at the New Leland Hotel in Springfield on April 24 and 25. The call is signed by a committee consisting of C. C. Adams, of Peoria, Ill., who was appointed temporary chairman; J. Bart Johnson, of Jacksonville, and O. F. Anderson and R. L. Berry, of this city.

The need of an association such as this has long been felt. Thanks to the efforts of W. F. Wallace, of the Q R S Co., together with Charles Burtzloff, of the Chicago office of Kohler & Campbell, Inc., the views of many dealers have been obtained and their co-operation has been enlisted.

It is expected that this Association, which in all probability will be known as the Central Illinois Music Merchants' Association, will be able to do a tremendous amount of good, not only in getting the merchants of the State together for an interchange of opinions and experience, but in the initiation of movements against undesirable advertising and illegitimate trade practices. It is also expected that speakers of experience in association work will be present to give the new organization a good start along its path of success and usefulness.

Quite a number of men prominent in the talking machine trade have already expressed their opinions, the consensus of which is that the period of depression through which the trade has just passed has been in a large way responsible for a tremendous cleaning out of undesirable, fraudulent advertisers and that an association such as this will be a means of keeping these undesirable citizens out of our trade. For this reason it is hoped that the talking machine men will be there in full force when the meeting is called at the New Leland Hotel.

Lyon & Healy Open Radio Department

Lyon & Healy have taken advantage of the national interest now being shown in wireless telephony and have opened a new department which will be devoted exclusively to radio equipment, units and parts. They have already announced that they are now distributors for the products of various well-known radio equipment concerns and that they will job this equipment to retail dealers throughout the talking machine and music trade. They have already received initial shipments of De Forest radio equipment, Cunningham tubes, Clapp-Eastham receiving sets and other high-grade radio parts and are completing plans for the distribution of this material at popular prices.

For a number of months past officials of Lyon & Healy have been making a very thorough study of wireless telephony and its possibilities. With the co-operation of the KYW broadcasting station at Chicago Lyon & Healy have broadcasted monthly releases of Victor records, as well as selections on reproducing pianos.

It is estimated that there are in the neighborhood of 20,000 receiving sets being used in the zone served by the KYW station, and it is further estimated that the majority of these sets are the handiwork of amateurs. This field alone offers favorable opportunity for replacement with high-grade instruments and when the entire country is taken into consideration and it has been recently stated by men in position to know that there are something like 800,000 receiving sets scattered throughout the country alone.

Triangle Week in Chicago

An elaborate advertising campaign was put on by the Triangle Music Co. during the week of March 26, during which period special attention was given to the exploitation of this company's promising new numbers, "Thrills" and "Carolina Blues." The purpose of the big celebration was to give a christening party to the new Chicago office, which was opened on the 26th. During the week the songs were boosted throughout a goodly number of Chicago's amusement places and one-sheet posters, advertising these songs, were placed on all elevated stations in the city. Quite a number of vaudeville headliners, as well as picture theatre orchestras, featured the songs, which were also advertised in the local newspapers. The campaign brought about pleasing results and quite a demand was made for the songs which were featured, as well as for other numbers in the Triangle catalog.

In Trouble

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed by the Masonic Temple Song Shop, Inc., at 161 North State street. The liabilities are given as $3,999 and the assets are $2,893.

New Melody Console

The Melody National Sales Co., of 190 North State street, has just come out with an exceptionally attractive little console, which it is listing at $125. The size is 36½ by 36 by 20½. It is of the split-top design, built along very artistic lines, and comes in five-ply wood, equipped with powerful double-spring motors and high-grade tone arm and reproducer.

This company was formerly located on the eleventh floor of the big State & Lake Building, but was recently moved to larger and more splendidly equipped quarters in Suite 840 of the same building.

Assumes Control

It has been reported that George G. Roberts, well known throughout Chicago as a dealer in high-grade lumber, has taken over the LaSalle Phonograph Co., at 19 South Hoyne avenue. It is said that the plans of this company are not worked out completely as yet, but a full line of high-grade instruments will probably be placed on the market within a short time.

The men originally behind the LaSalle Co. organized this concern at practically the close of the big boom in the talking machine business and this is believed to be the cause of its never getting firmly established. However, under the leadership of Mr. Roberts we may expect to see quite a number of high-grade LaSalle models placed on the market within the next few months.

Change Local Unit Co. Management

With the first of April a change of much import was brought about in the talking machine trade of Chicago when W. D. Montgomery, manager of the Cleveland branch of the Unit Construction Co., came to Chicago to assume charge of the Chicago branch of this concern. This change was brought about by the resignation of Gus Mayer, who for a number of years has been manager of the local branch here at 30 North Michigan avenue. The first day of his installation as manager here Mr. Montgomery spent in conference with Rayburn Smith, president, and Harry Beach, vice-president, of the Unit Co. Mr. Beach had been on a trip to the Coast.

Just before leaving the Cleveland branch Mr. Mayer closed a deal with Steinway & Sons, New York, for the complete equipment of five of their branches located in Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton, Huntington, W. Va., and Charleston, W. Va., as well as partial equipment for the Indianapolis branch. The deal was consummated with the co-operation of R. E. Wells, general manager of the Cincinnati branch for Steinway & Sons.

quainted with the details of the Chicago office meeting visitors Mr. Montgomery will lay out a program for the Chicago territory, which, when completed, will have brought him in personal contact with every dealer in the city.

Wallace Incorporates

One of the latest entrants to make its debut in the Chicago trade is the Wallace Institute, which has just been incorporated under the State Laws of Illinois. The new organization is opening its headquarters at 630 South Wabash avenue and is capitalized for two hundred shares of no par value. The intention is to manufacture and deal in musical instruments, etc. The incorporators are: Frank P. Page, Harold Beacon, Edward G. Ince. The correspondent named is Winston, Strawn & Shaw, First National Bank Building.

Congratulations!

W. C. Griffith, assistant sales manager of the Chicago Talking Machine Co. returned to his desk this week from a visit to Bermuda, where he and his bride, formerly Miss R. Perry, of Indianapolis, Ind., spent their honeymoon. The happy pair were married on March 4, with D. A. Creed, general manager and vice-president of the Chicago Talking Machine Co., as best man.

Publisher Visits

Among the recent visitors to Chicago was R. L. Huntzinger, of the music publishing firm of Huntzinger & Dilworth, New York, Mr. Huntzinger reported that business was in a very satisfactory condition and he also made an interesting comparison between the sheet music business of to-day and that of several years ago. He said that he noticed a marked improvement in the interest taken in the sheet music business to-day and that the average standard of knowledge and other desirable qualities of those who were engaged in this business had improved considerably.

A. D. Geissler in Chicago

A. D. Geissler, president of both the Chicago and New York Talking Machine Cos., spent a number of days in Chicago recently, and while here attended the semi-annual executive committee meeting of the Victor jobbers.

Now With Kimball Co.

L. E. Inman, who formerly conducted the Music Store in Vandalia, has disposed of his interest to J. L. Gerkin, of that city. The Music Store handles a full line of the well-known W. W. Kimball Co. pianos and talking machines. Since disposing of his store Mr. Inman has become associated with the Kimball Co. and has been made manager of the Decatur branch of this company.

Becomes Starr and Gennett Jobber

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Kunde, wholesale Wisconsin representatives for Gennett records and Starr phonographs, passed through Chicago recently on their way to New York. The couple expect to sail from New York on April 1 aboard the liner "Olympic" for Europe. They intend to visit numerous places in Great Britain and in several of the European countries and in all probability may not return to their home for a number of months.

The firm of A. G. Kunde was recently appointed wholesale representative throughout the Wisconsin territory for Gennett records and Starr phonographs. This firm has long been known as a high-class importer and distributor of foreign goods and has made quite a success throughout the Middle West with the Homokord record. During their visit to Europe Mr. and Mrs. Kunde will probably visit the Homokord factories.

Steger National Advertising Campaign

Steger phonograph advertising is now appearing in a number of the leading publications of national circulation, and the effects of the publicity that has already been issued through that channel have been excellent.

The Steger phonographs have been featured particularly, special announcements regarding those instruments appearing in the February issue of the Atlantic Monthly, Century Magazine and Munsey's, in the March number of Scribner's and Harper's Magazines, and the April issue of World's Work. Special phonograph ads also appear in the February, March and April numbers of Etude, Photoplay Magazine, Red Book, Everybody's and several other of the most prominent magazines.

The Man With the Searchlight

Cheney publicity on "The man who snaps his fingers at the whole Cheney factory" has been the cause of a vast amount of favorable comment for the past month. This publicity has been broadcasted by the Cheney advertising department and tells the story of one man—the Cheney inspector—who cares nothing for the opinion of any workman or foreman throughout the whole of the extensive Cheney organization. His duties are to carry on without fear or favor and to reject any Cheney that shows even the tiniest blemish. He takes his orders from, and is accountable only to, the executives of the company. In going about his work he uses only two tools, a powerful focusing lamp or searchlight and a pad of rejection slips. The rays of light falling upon the instrument under inspection bring out any blemish in the finish. When said blemish is found, on goes the rejection slip and the instrument is sent back to the finishing department. To the trained eye of this expert craftsman the most infinitesimal imperfection stands out like a barn door. Since the trade has learned how Cheney standards are maintained by virtue of this expert Cheney inspector it has taken a more keen interest than heretofore.

These letters are of a congratulatory nature, complimenting the Boston Book Co. upon its foresight in bringing before the public such a clever innovation as this new album. This method of building albums was made possible by the addition of a wooden back, of which feature, together with the interchangeable leaf idea, the Boston Book Co. feels justly proud.

Isham Jones Orchestra to Travel

Isham Jones and his famous Brunswick Orchestra came out with the announcement this week that they are terminating their showing at the College Inn on May 1. This closing at the College Inn is only a temporary affair, however, lasting over the Summer months, or until September 1, when Mr. Jones and his orchestra will return and resume the duties of entertaining the patrons of College Inn.

Immediately after closing at the Inn Mr. Jones and his orchestra will leave for the Brunswick recording laboratories in the East, where they will spend several days recording, and on May 6 the organization will appear at the New Grand Central Theatre at St. Louis. The Brunswick dealers of St. Louis, who recently formed a Brunswick Dealers' Association, have made preparations for the coming of Mr. Jones and at present have contracted with the street-car company for the displaying of their panels announcing the orchestra. These panels will be placed on the front and rear end of all street cars in St. Louis and suburbs. After the St. Louis engagement the orchestra goes to Cape Girardeau; then to Indianapolis; and on the 17th they play for the "Junior Prom" at Notre Dame University. This prom is an annual affair and in order to hook up with Isham Jones' orchestra its regular date was put back several days. The route is then to Kalamazoo and Jackson, Mich., followed by an eight weeks' engagement in Chicago, where the orchestra will appear at the Pantheon and Senate theatres. At the close of this engagement the organization moves back to the College Inn to entertain visitors.

Mid-West Dealers Hold Second Annual Meeting

The second annual meeting of the Mid-West Victor Dealers' Association was held at the Drake Hotel on the evening of March 13, too late for mention in last month's issue. An elaborate dinner was served at six-thirty. The guests of honor and speakers of the evening were: J. N. Blackman, of the Blackman Talking Machine Co., New York, and Louis Buehn, president of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers.

The meeting was opened by R. B. Corcoran, who welcomed the visiting jobbers, and with the assistance of L. C. Wiswell introduced the visiting jobbers to the members of the Dealers' Association. After the introduction Miss Margaret Haley, of the Victor department of Lyon & Healy, gave a vocal solo. Following this the Mid-West Victor Dealers' committee on advertising rendered an interesting report on program and billboard advertising. The report was read by Chairman McCauley, of this committee, who said, in concluding, that up to the time of the typing of his report nearly every member of the Association had signed up for this work. The advertising report was followed by a talk given by President Buehn, of the Jobbers' Association, who, in the course of his remarks, stated that he was much interested in the campaign the mid-West dealers were putting on, and told of the necessity for concerted action on the part of Victor men throughout the country. During the course of his remarks he paid high tribute to the Victor Talking Machine Co. and its president, Eldridge R. Johnson.

Gilbert H. Montague, counsel for the Jobbers' Association, then recounted the story of the old days in larger cities, when "If one wanted music one called on foreigners," showing how the Victor Co. had been a big and important factor in changing all of this. He also brought out some

J. N. Blackman's Address

Beginning with the good old days of 1897, when the talking machine was in reality only a toy, J. N. Blackman, the next speaker, brought all of his listeners through the various stages of the talking machine industry up to the present day. He commented upon the foresight of the pioneers of the Victor Co., Leon A. Douglass and Eldridge R. Johnson. Their names were mentioned because they are monuments of courage and foresight, according to the views of Mr. Blackman. He also pointed out how the trade laughed in the olden days when the Victor Co.

proposed what has now come to be known as its Red Seal library, and also how the trade giggled when the announcement was made of the first hornless type talking machine; how the price was thought to be preposterous, $200, and the saying was that the only place you would find it was along Fifth avenue or in the White House. Sure enough it wasn't long before the Victor did get in the White House, and this was followed by an extensive advertising campaign, which began on the front cover of The Talking Machine World, showing the familiar Victor trade-mark and the White House.

With the aid of some newspaper clippings from recent daily papers he called to the attention of his listeners some of the grave financial struggles now existent throughout the country. His purpose in doing this was merely an effort to show the talking machine dealer what a "terribly hard time" they had in comparison with the dealers representing other industries, whose companies had been inflated in the past few years to the utmost capacity and who were at present undergoing deflation. Upon the conclusion of Mr. Blackman's talk it was conceded by all that the remarks he made were most instructive and constructive, to say the least. This talk by Mr. Blackman was followed by an evening of dancing, the music for which was furnished by Benson's Orchestra.

New Tonofone Traveler

E. C. Doyle, who for many years has been associated with the traveling sales department of the Shapleigh Hardware Co., of St. Louis, is now connected with the traveling department of the Tonofone Co., manufacturer of the well-known Tonofone needles. Since he has been with the Tonofone Co. Mr. Doyle has been successful in doing much tie-up work with Tonofone jobbers throughout the Northwestern States, as well as the Northern States of the mid-West. On the first of the month he left for an extensive tour, which will take him throughout the Eastern and Southern States. He plans to call on all Tonofone jobbers in those sections.

As regards the business situation with the Tonofone Co. President J. F. Johantgen stated in an interview with the representative of The Talking Machine World that since the first of the year his sales chart showed a gradual increase in business. The increase is not one of those spasmodic risings, but just a gradual one—steady enough to indicate that as time goes on the business situation in the trade will improve materially.

F. D. Hall to California

Frederick D. Hall, chairman of the board of directors of the Hall Mfg. Co., accompanied by Mrs. Hall, is planning a visit to California in the course of the next few weeks. Upon their arrival in California, Mr. and Mrs. Hall expect to do quite a bit of sight-seeing and finally journey down to the southern part of the State, where they will spend a protracted vacation. Last year the happy couple made an extensive tour of the Orient, where they visited the bamboo forests from whence come the choicest and most select poles, which are afterwards sent to the Hall Mfg. Co. plant in Chicago to be cut into the world's finest fibre needles.

An Expanding Business

Another incident, which characterizes the progressiveness of Frank and Jerry Justine, widely known as Justine Bros., was brought to the attention of the Chicago office of The World this week by a full-page ad, which appeared in the Gary Evening Post, of Gary, Ind. The advertisement was an announcement to the effect that this well-known Chicago firm had opened a beautiful retail store in Gary. The new shop, known as the "House of Music," is located at 540 Broadway, and occupies a frontage of some fifty feet, with a depth of 125 feet. Besides a full line of Victor goods, this new store will carry an extensive line of high-grade pianos, as well as a complete complement of assorted small goods, such as band instruments, etc. Fifteen years ago the firm of Justine Bros. was founded and has been steadily growing until to-day it

CHICAGO, ILL., April 7.—The Phonograph Co., of Chicago, Edison phonograph jobber, has disposed of its retail business to the Raymond Music Co., which will continue to operate a retail business at the present address, 229 South

Wabash avenue, and in connection with a line or two of pianos. It is said to be the intention of the Raymond Music Co. to remodel the quarters and make them among the most attractive in this section. It is rumored that the Raymond Music Co. will be run by Ray Healy, president of the Central Piano Co., but this is not confirmed at this writing.

The Phonograph Co., of Milwaukee, will be consolidated with the Phonograph Co. here, with W. Smith, formerly manager of the Milwaukee house, in general charge, with headquarters in Chicago, from which point will be met the requirements of the dealers formerly served by the Milwaukee company.

The Kady Piano Co., of Grand Island, Neb., was recently granted the exclusive agency for the Kimball line of pianos and phonographs. Okeh records are also handled.

TO MAKE THE ORGANOLA

DAYTON, O., April 8.—The International Dayton Products Co., located in the U. B. Building, this city, has been organized to manufacture and sell the Organola, a talking machine which features the use of organ pipes in reproduction. It is planned to manufacture eight models, ranging in price from $175 to $450. The officers of the company are: Harry S. Keys, president; John S. Wilson, vice-president, and R. E. McMillan, secretary and treasurer.

If you have advanced ideas on any subject, do not expect popular applause. The people seldom approve the pioneer. You must get your joy not from the cheers of the populace, but from self-expression. If your ideas are really worth while and you have confidence in their value to the world, the approval of the multitude, as the "Treasure Chest" points out, will be a matter of supreme indifference to you.

WALLACE INSTITUTE ENTERS TRADE

Known Throughout Country After Years of Nationally Advertising Its Reducing Course—Entire Sales to Be Handled by W. C. Eckhardt—Record Makes Strong Appeal to Women

CHICAGO, ILL., April 10.—This month heralds the introduction of the famous Wallace reducing records to the talking machine trade. These records have been offered direct to the consumer since their introduction in 1918 by the manufacturers, the Wallace Institute, Inc., of Chicago. The Wallace Institute, Inc., is an outgrowth of the old Wallace Physical Culture Institute, which was established in Chicago some twenty-one years ago. Since its organization in 1899 the Wallace Physical Culture Institute has been catering to big business men of Chicago and the Middle West. To the women have been featured reducing records, but it was not until 1918, with the founding of the Wallace Institute, that these reducing exercises to music were placed on records and offered to the public. This concern has used over a quarter of a million dollars' worth of space in all national publications published for the benefit of women, and now, when all the pioneer work has been done, it is felt that the time has come to offer the trade an opportunity to cash in on this much-sought-for product.

Accordingly a sales force has been organized with W. C. Eckhardt, formerly sales manager of the Phonograph Co. of Chicago, in charge. After severing his connections with the Phonograph Co., Mr. Eckhardt organized a powerful dealers' advertising service concern, which was known as the W. C. Eckhardt Service. This service was devoted exclusively to Edison dealers and jobbers, or individuals identified with the promotion and development of the Edison retail business.

Mr. Eckhardt is admirably fitted for this new position by virtue of his long association with the talking machine trade. He has had six years of actual experience with promotion work in the talking machine and music business and knows dealers in all parts of the United States.

In the organization program which Mr. Eckhardt has assisted in working out, provision has been made for getting up elaborate window trims, printed in five colors. These will be sent to the trade along with handsomely lithographed hangers. The Wallace Institute has also got out electrotypes of a large number of cleverly designed illustrations, to be used by the dealer for local advertising.

The history of the Wallace reducing record is very interesting. Early in his career Professor

Wallace hit upon the idea of teaching in "bulk," that is to say, teaching more than one individual at the same time, and a plan for instructions by mail followed soon after. This was continued until 1917, when he thought it might be a good idea to reach his clientele with his actual voice on a record, rather than his thoughts on paper. He began in a small way to give personal instructions to certain of his clientele by means of a dictating machine, and this aroused so much interest that in the course of a year, or to be more exact, in 1918, he decided to make this a permanent feature of his business, and accordingly set about to have disc records manufactured. This, however, was at a time when the entire trade was taking everything in the talking machine line that it could get its hands on and could spare neither the space nor the time in the factories to work on such an innovation. Professor Wallace was determined to get his reducing record on the market, however, and, therefore, went out on a protracted inspection tour of factories and recording plants in the East, and finally found that it would be necessary for him to build his own recording and pressing plants. This he did. A plant was taken over at Newark, N. J., starting in a small way at first, which has gradually grown till it is now quite a pretentious institution. Mr. R. Durgin, publicity manager of the Wallace Institute, has been holding down this position since the inception of the weight reduction idea. He has some very interesting old newspaper clippings, which are in reality of a more or less editorial nature, pertaining to the Wallace Institute and its methods. One Chicago newspaper became interested in it about four years ago and made Professor Wallace a unique proposition. They wrote him, "If you really have a sure method of reducing folks to normal, about half of all of our readers will be interested in knowing about it. Therefore, we are willing to give you a large amount of publicity if you will consent to reduce a class of stout persons of our selection, and work under the supervision of the doctors and specialists we will appoint as observers. We make this one condition, however: We shall publish pictures and weights daily, and give our readers the actual facts, regardless of what happens. In other words, if those you undertake to reduce should not lose flesh as you prophesy and should gain weight instead, we will also publish that." Following the acceptance of this challenge there appeared for the next forty days a series of photographs of Professor Wallace and his class. At the end of that time the heavy-weights had reduced to the table of correct weights that determine normalcy.

CATERS TO COLLEGE STUDENTS

Kraft, Bates & Spencer, Brunswick Distributors, of Boston, Secure Good College Trade

BOSTON, MASS., April 8.—Kraft, Bates & Spencer, of this city, distributors for the Brunswick line, have been developing a nice business among the colleges through the medium of live dealers near these institutions. Included are: Briggs & Briggs, Cambridge, Mass.; C. A. McNeal, Hanover, N. H.; A. D. Bastiene, Williamstown, Mass.; the Oriole Music Shop, at Mt. Holyoke.

CANTON

Industrial Revival Quickens Trade — High-Priced Machines in Demand—Trade News

CANTON, O., April 5.—Gradual improvement in the talking machine trade is reported by dealers in the Canton district. Industrial conditions are still on the up-grade, and if steel mill operations continue to improve dealers in all lines will have no reason to complain. Prospects for Spring and early Summer are brighter than in many months and, without exception, dealers reported March better in volume of sales than the preceding month. Record sales are showing a decided improvement, due in a measure to intensive sales campaigns conducted by many dealers.

At Rhine's Edison shop sales for the month of February were entirely satisfactory, according to Manager Rutledge, and, if anything, there seems to be a tendency on the part of the public to buy the higher-priced machines. Little demand for the cheaper type of machines has been noticed here during the past month. Edison record sales have been stimulated considerably by the recent reduction in price.

George C. Wille, head of the George C. Wille Music Co., Victor distributor, will open a radio store at Cleveland avenue and Third street in the near future.

Wilbur E. Pyle, new manager of the talking machine department of the William R. Zollinger Co., announces that since assuming charge of this store's department two weeks ago talking machine sales have jumped 50 per cent over what they were a month ago. This department has had no manager since the resignation of A. E. Jones, who left the store the first of the year. The department has been completely reorganized since Mr. Pyle assumed charge.

The J. W. Brown Piano Co. is now in the midst of one of the largest piano and talking machine sales conducted by a Canton music store in many years. Many talking machines and pianos, mostly of the higher-priced type, were moved during March, and April looks like another good month.

Record sales at the establishment of the D. W. Lerch Piano Co. have shown a decided increase in the past month. Sales of Vocalion, Brunswick and Columbia records jumped fully 50 per cent this week with the release of the April numbers and the outlook is exceedingly bright.

Talking machine sales are gradually increasing at the music department of the Klein-Heffelman-Zollars Co., according to Manager Schrake, who states that he believes people are becoming more free with their money.

The popularity of the Cheney and Starr talking machines is increasing steadily in this territory, according to C. M. Alford, of the Alford & Fryar Piano Co.

Optimism Features Trade—Improvement Continues—Recitals Aid Sales—The News

DETROIT, MICH., April 10.—Talking machine business in Detroit is more than holding its own; in fact, it is showing steady improvement and with the Lenten season about over dealers believe there will be quite a spurt in sales towards the end of the month and all through the month of May. When we hear the complaints of men in other lines of trade we begin to feel that the talking machine dealer has little to complain about. Industrially, Detroit is showing great signs of improvement and the number of people employed is on the increase, so that in reality the talking machine dealers are justified in anticipating better business for the next few months at least.

Max Strasburg, of the Max Strasburg Shop, handling Victor, Columbia and Jewett phonographs, says that, while business is not "rushing," he hasn't a thing to complain about. "People will buy phonographs as soon as they can afford to," he remarked. "People want them as much as they ever did; young people are getting married; new homes and apartments are being established and there will always be a demand for our product, but we cannot expect that people are going to buy them when they have no positions, or when they are uncertain as to how long they will be employed. You must remember that, after all, the masses comprise the major number of buyers of talking machines and their prosperity means the prosperity of the dealer. When they are not prosperous we must take our medicine proportionately."

Weekly Recitals at Grinnell Bros.

Grinnell Bros. have been giving weekly recitals on Wednesdays in their Victrola Auditorium in the basement of their main building on Woodward avenue and they have been attracting considerable attention. The artists comprise the best local talent available and the playing of the latest Victor records is always a part of the afternoon program.

C. H. Grinnell, manager of the Victor wholesale department of Grinnell Bros., was in New York last month attending a meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Talking Machine Jobbers.

The Victor record "Angel Child" is having a big call and it promises to be one of the biggest hits of the year.

Many Talking Machines as Prizes

In connection with the Music Memory Contest being conducted in the Detroit schools, partly sponsored by the Detroit News, The Edison Shop, through Mr. Sweeney, in charge of the retail department, has offered a handsome console machine to the school that wins first prize. The Detroit News has offered seventy-five upright talking machines as prizes to be distributed among winners. The winners will be decided at a grand finale to be held at Orchestra Hall, April 26. In connection with this contest, which has been going on for some time, dealers have had quite a call for records, as well as piano player rolls, containing the themes mentioned in the contest and, in fact, on some of them have had to reorder.

Growing List of Cheney Dealers

The Van Korn-Shower Co., with offices at 201 Farwell Building, is distributor in the State of Michigan for the Cheney and it has a very nice list of dealers in Detroit, nearly a dozen, among them some of the best stores in the city, including the J. L. Hudson Co., Cable Piano Co., Noble Piano Co. and the Robinson-Cohen Co.

Some New Brunswick Accounts

P. J. Gordon, manager of the Brunswick department of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., tells us that Brunswicks are selling better than ever in its entire history. The latest and biggest acquisition was the Cable Piano Co. for its store at 1420 Woodward avenue, and the branch store in Ludington. In time Mr. Gordon expects to have every Cable store in Michigan handling Brunswicks. Some of the other important new accounts are Lampe & Tanner, 11728 Hamilton Boulevard; Kelsey & Garrettson, Birmingham, Mich.; Barack Bros., 6525 Woodward avenue, Detroit; Stofflets Phonograph Shop, Ann Arbor, and F. J. Hedrich, Wyandotte.

Display at Builders' Show

When the Builders' Show took place at the General Motors Building, March 18 to 25, the Brunswick Shop of Detroit had a very attractive exhibit of period and console models. It was the only phonograph display and Manager Quinn, of the Brunswick Shop, said it was productive of good results. The exhibit actually attracted a great deal of attention and comment, as the show was very largely attended.

A number of dealers have already added radio outfits and most of them have been solicited, but we find most of the dealers watching the development of the radio and waiting to see how far-reaching it will be.

Service Department for Jewett Dealers

A. A. Fair, sales manager of the Jewett Phonograph Co., reports that each month is showing a healthy increase. The sales department has been considerably augmented and with the addition of a service department, in charge of Miss Nelson, dealers are finding the Jewett a more attractive proposition than ever before. "Yes, we have added dozens of new accounts in every section between Chicago and the western part of New York State," said Mr. Fair. "We are still unprepared to take dealers on in every State, but as we increase production and our selling force we hope to give every attention to the numerous requests which have come to us for the line. We are building slowly but surely. We don't want to develop our business except on a solid foundation—that's why we are going along easily, but carefully. The outlook for the balance of the year is very good and the beauty of it is that our dealers are re-ordering right along."

WITH the coming of Spring, and the days of re-decorating and rearranging in the home and the addition of new furnishings, is surely a most excellent time for an aggressive selling campaign.

Your buying public is right now thinking of how to make the home more attractive and enjoyable—and, what better means to accomplish this than through purchase of a Victrola—or what better time to make a special drive for sales?

tors for the Vocalion line, is more optimistic than ever about the line. Since his company started fully one hundred new accounts have been established and many more could be if the sales force were larger. This is something that Mr. Lind has under serious consideration. Both record and machine business is good and the quotas set for each month this year have so far been reached. "We haven't a kick in the world coming," he said to The World correspondent. "We are doing more business right along and all our dealers are enthused over the records and the machines. As general conditions improve, so will our business on a larger scale than ever."

Activity at Columbia Headquarters

There is considerable activity around the wholesale branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co., indicating that business is improving for Columbia dealers. W. H. Shumacher, in charge of Dealer Service, is very busy showing dealers how they can increase their sales by the proper window displays, proper advertising and proper selling methods. There are about forty Columbia dealers in Detroit. The Detroit branch covers all of Detroit, half of lower Michigan and part of northern Ohio. H. A. Gardiner, branch manager, has been here for several years, succeeding Sam E. Lind, who resigned to engage in business for himself. Mr. Gardiner came from Newark, N. J., and is a pioneer with the Columbia Co.

The Columbia record of "Angel Child" and a Jolson number on the other side is proving a tremendous hit with Columbia dealers. It is double value for the money, the Jolson number alone being sufficient to cause it to sell big.

New Columbia dealers are the Michigan Music Co., Detroit, and the Wauseon Music Shop, of Wauseon, O.

A. A. Grinnell, treasurer of Grinnell Bros., is back from a two weeks' vacation at French Lick Springs—playing golf most of the time.

The fellow who is always bragging about what he is going to do is so busy telling about it that he seldom has time to put his ideas into practice.

OPENS HANDSOME BUILDING

Haverty Furniture Co. Moves Into New Home at Houston, Tex.—Columbia Department Attractively Arranged—Has Ten Stores

HOUSTON, TEX., April 6.—The Haverty Furniture Co., one of the leading retail organizations in the South, with branch stores in many important cities, opened a new building here recently. The new home of the company in this city is located in a six-story building at Fannin street, near Capitol, and a cordial invitation was extended to the public to be present at the formal opening of the building.

The first floor contains the offices of the company, with a limited number of general display fixtures. The third floor, which is exceptionally attractive, houses the Columbia Grafonola department, and a feature of this department is a bungalow interior of three rooms for demonstrating Columbia records.

The Haverty Furniture Co. has been remarkably successful with its Columbia departments located in ten stores throughout the South, and the department in the new Houston store gives every indication of being one of the leaders in sales totals.

"BLUES" SINGER PROVES SUCCESS

Leona Williams, one of the latest additions to the ranks of Columbia artists, is attaining signal success in the rendition of "blues" for the Columbia library. Miss Williams is well known to vaudeville enthusiasts throughout the country, as she has been appearing on big time for a number of years. She has become recognized as one of the leading singers of "blues" and syncopated music, and Columbia dealers are awaiting with interest several of her new records that will be released shortly.

Never make a statement unless you can back it up. Likewise, never make a promise unless you are prepared to keep it to the letter.

CIRCUIT COURT REVERSES DECREE

Decides in Favor of Long Furniture Co. in Cabinet Suit—Reverses Lower Court

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second District handed down a decision a fortnight ago, deciding in favor of Lawrence J. Rooney, a local dealer, and the Long Furniture Co., of Hanover, Pa., in the suit brought by Beecroft & Blackman, Inc., against Mr. Rooney and the Long Furniture Co.

This suit had been tried originally in the Southern District Court of New York and Beecroft & Blackman, Inc., had been successful in their claim that the defendants had infringed Letters Patent No. 1,244,944. This patent, which had been granted to Clement Beecroft and assigned to Beecroft & Blackman, Inc., covers a cabinet for talking machines, involving certain distinctive features as to moulding, etc.

Mr. Rooney and the Long Furniture Co. appealed from the decision of the U. S. District Court and the decision just handed down by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals reverses the lower court and gives the decree to the defendants.

Manager of Victor Department of Philip Werlein, Ltd., Weds Miss Frances Johnson

NEW ORLEANS, LA., April 4.—The marriage of B. G. Powell, manager of the Victrola department of Philip Werlein, Ltd., to Miss Frances Johnson, formerly assistant manager of the Victrola department of Maison Blanche, was celebrated here March 7.

Mr. Powell is widely known throughout the talking machine trade. For about seven years he was connected with the Columbia Graphophone Co., where he was awarded a number of prizes for salesmanship. He is a graduate of the Red Seal School of the Victor Co. For a number of years he was manager of the Victrola department of Maison Blanche and it was while there that he met and knew Miss Johnson, who was his assistant.

Miss Johnson is very popular among the music people of the city and has made friends of all whom she has served.

Among the prominent talking machine people at the wedding were: Mrs. G. S. Britton, L. L. Abbott, credit manager of Werlein's; W. P. Berry, of the Dwyer Music Store. The entire Werlein sales force turned out for the event.

Mr. and Mrs. Powell were the recipients of a handsome present from the Werlein employees.

FOREIGN VALUATION TO BE BASIS UPON WHICH DUTY ON MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS WILL BE PAID

Senate Finance Committee Is Reported to Have Agreed Upon Plan Whereby Duties of 45 Per Cent of Ad Valorem Value, Based on Foreign Valuation, Will Be Placed on Musical Instruments

(From Our Special Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—The re-imposition of the duties levied on musical instruments under the Payne-Aldrich Tariff of 1909 is now understood to have been agreed upon by the Senate Finance Committee. After considerable discussion of these duties the committee has practically agreed upon the manner in which musical instruments shall be treated and it has been intimated that they will be made dutiable at 45 per cent ad valorem, based on the foreign valuation. Strings composed wholly or in part of steel or other metal will be given a similar rate and all other wire will be dutiable at 35 per cent. Manufactures of catgut, it is understood, will be dutiable at 50 per cent ad valorem. The bill as passed by the House provides a duty of 35 per cent ad valorem, based on American valuation, for musical instruments and strings, with an additional specific duty of $1.50 each for violins, violas, violoncellos and double basses. Tuning pins would be dutiable at $1 per thousand and 25 per cent ad valorem and talking machine phonographs and parts would be dutiable at 30 per cent ad valorem.

There is now no doubt but that the Senate Finance Committee will reject the American valuation plan and provide for the retention of the present system of basing duties on the foreign value of the imported merchandise, with provisions authorizing the President to increase all rates of duty by not exceeding 50 per cent upon a finding that the rates provided in the law are too low to permit of the domestic producers competing with foreign manufacturers in similar lines. At the same time, in the event of a showing that a monopoly exists in the United States with respect to any article, the President would be empowered to reduce the rate of duty thereon to an extent of not exceeding 50 per cent.

President Harding has indicated that he expected the Finance Committee to agree to the foreign valuation plan with the authority granted him to make changes in the rates and the further provision that the President may act in cases where it is found that there are unfair practices existing in foreign commerce.

Members of the House who are interested in the problem have declared that they will not accept any new tariff legislation that does not provide for the basing of all ad valorem duties upon American values. The Finance Committee, therefore, is making up two accounts, one with rates so based and the other with rates based on foreign values, the latter being considerably higher than the rates in the Fordney bill. The Senate is hoping to show the House that the rates based on the foreign valuation are so high as to provide adequate protection to the domestic manufacturers, yet not to shut out imported merchandise.

Indications are that it will take fully two months to get the bill through the Senate after it is presented. That means that approximately a year will have elapsed from the time it was adopted by the House, for it was passed by the lower body on July 21, 1921.

The Reynolds' valuation investigation report, showing the selling price in this country of the American and imported article of all commodities that carry ad valorem rates in the House bill, was used by the Finance Committee as an aid in arriving at the rate which will appear in the Senate bill. This report was not intended as an argument for or against American valuation, it is pointed out by members of the committee, but to give the committee data that would assist it in its work.

The report gives details as to the foreign selling price, the landed cost—getting the goods to this country—the amount of duty paid under the present tariff law, the importer's overhead and profit on his land cost, which would be the total of the foreign cost; the landing charges and the duty, and the selling price of the importer in the American market. As the comparable unit to the importer's selling price, the Reynolds committee took the net factory price of the American manufacturer.

A large number of musical instruments were investigated for the committee. It was found, for instance, that there is no foreign competition with the domestic phonograph, but that twelve-inch phonograph records from Germany, having a foreign value of 48 cents each, cost 6.65 cents for landing charges, etc., pay a duty of 12 cents at the present rate of 25 per cent, making a total cost here of 66.65 cents, and are sold for 77 cents each, leaving the importer an overhead and profit on landed cost, including duty, of 10.35 cents, or 15 per cent, while the comparable domestic record is sold at 85 cents. Similarly, ten-inch records having a foreign value of 32 cents are sold here for 55 cents, leaving an overhead and profit of 10 cents, or 22.2 per cent, while the domestic record is sold for 61 cents. Under the House bill these records would carry a rate of 30 per cent, based on the American valuation, while under the 1909 tariff they were rated at 45 per cent, based on foreign valuation. Spun steel strings from Germany also are sold here at less than the similar American article, while, on the other hand, the American harmonicas are sold for less than the German product, while domestic cornets, trombones and brass cymbals are sold for less than the same imported instrument.

Vera Henderson is the proprietor of a new talking machine shop at Mt. Pleasant, Mich.

E. G. HOCH PUSHING CHENEY LINE

Cheney Phonograph Popularity Increases in Northwest—Edward G. Hoch Co. Enjoys Record Business in March

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., April 8.—One of the most enterprising members of the talking machine fraternity in this territory is Edward G. Hoch, head of the Edward G. Hoch Co., 104 Third street, North, Cheney distributor for Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana and part of Wisconsin.

Although this concern has only been acting as a distributor for the Cheney line for the past two years it is largely responsible for the progress made for this machine in its territory. In a statement concerning business conditions Mr. Hoch states that the Cheney line is steadily gaining in popularity, as attested by the fact that the business of the company in March was in excess of the combined months of February, March and April of last year.

Famous Operatic Soprano and Columbia Artist Appears in Evansville—Receives Exceptional Co-operation From Prominent People

EVANSVILLE, IND. April 5.—Rosa Ponselle, famous operatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., and an exclusive Columbia artist, appeared recently at the Central High School Auditorium and received an ovation from a crowded house. Miss Ponselle appeared in this city without a guarantee, so that she could help the music commission of Evansville in its efforts to develop the public's music appreciation.

Mayor Bosse bought outright 100 tickets for distribution among his employes, and on all sides were evidences of unusual co-operation. The show windows of the Evansville Courier, reserved for nationally advertised products, were given over to a Columbia and Rosa Ponselle window display exclusively. Local dealers also aided in success of the event.

RECORD OR ROLL TRADE UNHURT BY SHEET MUSIC SALES

Interesting Facts Deduced From Questionnaire Sent Out by Trade Service Bureau of Music Industries Chamber of Commerce Regarding Effect of Record and Roll Sales on Sheet Music Trade

Several years ago there was considerable discussion regarding the effect of talking machine and player roll sales, and particularly sales of word rolls, on the sheet music business, the general opinion among the music publishers being that their business was suffering through the increasing popularity of the rolls and records. Recently, however, this opinion has been changed somewhat, as sheet music sales kept up to a fair level, but no real figures to prove that roll and record sales did not hurt the sheet music business were available until a few weeks ago, when the Trade Service Bureau of the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce made inquiries along that line.

In reply to a questionnaire sent out by the Bureau as to the effect of the music roll business on sheet music sales, a number of retailers, thirty in all, provided information that is both interesting and satisfying. The questions and answers were as follows:

1. Do music roll sales increase sheet music demand? Yes, 22; no, 5; doubtful, 2.
2. Do music roll sales decrease sheet music demand? Yes, 1; no, 23; doubtful, 1.
3. Do music roll sales affect sheet music demand? Yes, 22; no, 5; doubtful, 2.

Out of thirty replies received, the greater share of the comments emphatically expressed opinions that music rolls increased sheet music demand; a number said that each helped the other, and several said that phonograph records were a more positive aid.

The above are the first accurate data along these lines that have ever been gathered. However, in other directions the reports are substantiated. For instance, during the past eighteen months many talking machine record dealers who heretofore had not stocked sheet music have done so. It has been estimated by the leading sheet music jobbers of the country that over a thousand such dealers have either opened up sheet music departments or have stocked the most popular sellers during the past year.

At several meetings of the Talking Machine Men, Inc., an organization comprising retailers in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut territory, the question of installing sheet music as an accessory has been discussed. The expressions of those dealers who had opened such departments invariably were that it was a healthy addition to the talking machine record stock. Not only was it found to be profitable, but more often than not proved to be a magnet to attract trade.

The fact that the sheet music publishers and distributors have done much to encourage the opening of such departments should eliminate any doubt as to where present-day opinion stands in that field.

On the other hand, the fact that the talking machine dealer has taken kindly to the sale of sheet music should demonstrate that there is no question in his mind that it is not only profitable but that it in no wise affects an already established business.

CADMAN WRITES MOVIE SCORE

Special Music for "The Rubaiyat" Composed by Charles Wakefield Cadman

"The Rubaiyat," the Ferdinand Earle production, dramatized from the famous quatrains of Omar Khayyam, the Persian poet of the eleventh century, has had special descriptive music written for it by Charles Wakefield Cadman. The Eastern Film Corp. is exploiting this production, which is to have an invitation presentation at The Ambassador before being brought before the general public at a Broadway theatre, and then subsequently in the principal theatres of other parts of the world.

Charles Wakefield Cadman is the author of hundreds of musical compositions, including the opera "Shanewis."

NEW FEIST NOVELTY

"People Like Us" Being Used Extensively in Vaudeville and for Dancing

Leo Feist, Inc., has just released a new song entitled "People Like Us." This is a novelty number which in a short space of time, no doubt, will be one of the most popular songs in vaudeville. It is very timely, full of good clean humor and where it has been sung has been enthusiastically received. Seemingly there is a laugh in every line.

The dance arrangement of "People Like Us" in fox-trot form is now being placed in the hands of orchestra leaders and the appealing melody, together with an attractive rhythm, should make it popular.

I regard music not only as an art whose object is to please the ear, but as one of the most powerful means of opening our hearts and of moving our affections.—Gluck.

OSCAR ADLER'S ORCHESTRA

Organization Formerly Known as the California Ramblers Now Known by Above Title

Announcement has been made of the change of name of the organization known as the California Ramblers to Oscar Adler's Orchestra. Even under the former name this orchestra was under Mr. Adler's direction and was very popular in recording circles. Oscar Adler's Orchestra is now headlining on the Keith Circuit and has just concluded a successful engagement at the Palace Theatre, New York. The orchestra is booked on this big circuit for three years solid. It is Mr. Adler's intention to devote considerable time to recording work. The extensive way in which this orchestra will be featured in the leading vaudeville houses of the country during the next three years, Mr. Adler feels, will act as an excellent vehicle for the sales of his recordings. It is his intention to communicate with the dealers previous to his arrival in each city and tie up his appearance with extra effort in record sales. Mr. Adler is a finished musician of marked ability and his orchestra has never failed to stand out as one of the big features of the Keith bills. The dealer will also have an excellent opportunity to make use of the theatre program during the time this orchestra is billed to advertise the recording of the selections played. The program is changed frequently, thus keeping his act up to the minute and featuring the newest record releases. Mr. Adler has opened headquarters in Suite 306, 245 West Forty-seventh street, New York City, to provide a convenient address for recording purposes.

BORNSTEIN SAILS FOR EUROPE

Irving Berlin, Inc., Manager Goes Abroad—Berlin Also Sojourning in Italy

Saul H. Bornstein, of Irving Berlin, Inc., sailed for Europe on the "Mauretania" last month for a six or seven weeks' tour of Great Britain and the Continent. He will make a general survey of business conditions on the other side and transact some important business for his concern.

Irving Berlin, who sailed last week on the "Olympic," will remain abroad for a few weeks, Italy being his objective. The famous composer plans to write next year's "Music Box Revue" while abroad and also rest up a bit from his activities in connection with the publishing business.

The advertiser who has cold feet now will be cold all over two years from now.

"JUST BECAUSE" MAKES ITS DEBUT

New Musical Comedy Well Received by Broadway Critics—Harms, Inc., Publishing the Score—Several Numbers Will Prove Hits

Musical comedy made its appearance at the Earl Carroll Theatre, New York, for the first time with the opening recently of "Just Because," book by Anna Wynne O'Ryan and Helen S. Woodruff, with lyrics by Miss Woodruff and music by Madelyn Sheppard. "Just Because" was presented in gala fashion with an excellent cast. Of course, with such a quartet of estimable ladies standing sponsor for this latest child in the line of musical plays, it could not help being a refined, polite and pleasant infant. Moreover, a great deal of money has been expended on its dressing and settings.

The book is inspired by sentiment; in fact, "young love" breathes in every situation through the plot, in the lyrics and the tinkling and tuneful score. The heroine in the case is Mignonette, and as played by dainty Jane Richardson is as fragrant as her name. Queenie Smith danced delightfully, and Olin Howland also scored in one of the leading comedy rôles. Frank Moulan provided many of the laughs, and Charles Trowbridge assisted ably.

The plot concerns a family of nine daughters, the youngest of whom falls in love with the superintendent of an adjoining orphanage. In order to charm him more easily she becomes an inmate of the institution and there subdues him by her solos. The songs in the order of their merit are: "Just Because," "Oh, Those Jazzing Toes," "Day Dream Bay," "Love, Just Simple Love" and "I'll Name My Dolly," all published by Harms, Inc.

JENKINS HITS IN DEMAND

Very Active Season Reported by Publishing Division of Kansas City Firm

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 8.—The publishing division of the sheet music department of the J. W. Jenkins' Sons Music Co. never had a more active season than the present. The professional department is receiving many requests from vaudeville singers who are using Jenkins' songs in their programs and practically every recognized dance orchestra in the country is playing such numbers as "Lonesome Mamma Blues" and "Suppose the Rose Were You." Other active numbers are "Dangerous Blues," "Manila Memories," "Kiss Me, Dear" and "Lullaby Moon," to mention a few of the leaders.

The Spring campaign recently inaugurated by the publisher on the above numbers is the most elaborate ever arranged by that organization and covers every angle of musical activity in the entire country. Present indications point to excellent results from this campaign.

MELODY SUPERSEDING JAZZ IN THE ORCHESTRAL DOMAIN

Old-time Jazz Craze Has Been Replaced by Music of a Much Higher Type Which Is Interpreted by Orchestras of Real Merit—Movement Marks a New Era in Dance Music

We who have been standing on the side lines have watched for a long time past the wails and propaganda against what is termed "jazz." We saw that the effect of these vocal outbursts, campaigns and decisions to bury jazz were having little or no effect and we came to the conclusion that jazz, like any other novelty, must run its course and spend itself.

That it has done just that must be the conclusion of anyone who attends the dances at the hotels, dance palaces and cabarets. The present-day orchestra is far from a jazz band; indeed, none of the popular orchestra leaders would allow himself or his organization to be billed as such. They are now society serenaders, novelty and symphonic syncopators. They no longer have the noisy effects that were part of the jazz aggregation and only in a few instances do we see the eccentric leader who is given to physical gyrations.

Melody is the slogan of the present-day orchestra and carrying out the musical theme, possibly with syncopated effects, is the prominent feature of every dance program.

No one would dare call Paul Whiteman's Orchestra a jazz band, nor that of Isham Jones or Eddie Elkins. These are the leaders in the dance world and it is to them that every small orchestra leader looks for his style. It is from them that he takes his methods and by following such leaders enjoys success.

Edgar Benson, who practically controls most of the high-class orchestras playing in Chicago, recently sent out a notice to his clients that his offices will not furnish any jazz orchestra. Novelty and symphonic syncopating combinations are to replace the organizations of the former caliber. Mr. Benson has been in business for more than twenty-five years and controls more than sixty well-known Chicago orchestras.

The musical publishers and the talking machine record manufacturers probably look with pleasure upon the completion of this movement for melody which has been under way for many months and now predominates in the present-day dance programs. The rendition of numbers to-day means that the melodies are to be carried out from start to finish in a manner that compels the patrons to remember the air. Carrying away the tune of a number that has met popular fancy means the sale of sheet music, talking machine records and player rolls of the number. It means profits for the publisher, manufacturer, distributor and dealer through the medium of stronger support by the public.

The drift away from jazz for a better standard of dance music was never better illustrated than in the success of the number, "Song of India," adapted from Rimsky-Korsakoff's theme, and which became popular in a number of arrangements. Other old standard numbers have also been given modern arrangements, the purpose of which, more than anything else, is to make them adaptable for the present-day dance.

So, despite all the agitation against jazz, which rather aided in keeping it in the forefront, the dance orchestras have, of their own volition, with the aid of the composers, brought about a new era in dance music. The present-day orchestra is improved, playing better music, and with pleasure and profit for all concerned.

A vaudeville act composed of some of the best-known songwriters has been booked to appear on the Loew Theatre Circuit. It is composed of Harry Pease, Edward G. Most of the songs programmed are published by Leo Feist, Inc., and include "Georgia Rose," "Ty-tee," "Wabash Blues," "Stealing," "Nobody's Baby," "All That I Need Is You" and "Georgia." The initial appearance was made at the American Roof, New York City.

Ze Z Confrey, the composer of "Kitten on the Keys" and other novelty piano works, recently wrote a new number which is now being issued in both song and instrumental form by Leo Feist, Inc. It is entitled "Stumbling."

FOX GETS NEW BASS SONG

"Bells of the Sea" to Be Published by Sam Fox Pub. Co.—Already Well Received

The Sam Fox Pub. Co. recently accepted for publication a bass song which bears the title "Bells of the Sea." It is by Arthur J. Lamb and Alfred Salman, who will be remembered for such standard works as "Asleep in the Deep" and "When the Bell in the Lighthouse Rings."

This new song was recently introduced at the Strand Theatre, New York, by the well-known basso, Herbert Waterous. Sam Fox, attending the performance and noting the reception of the song, immediately made inquiry as to the authors. Following a short conference he induced them to let him publish the number despite the fact that other publishing houses were interested in securing the publishing rights.

BROADCASTING PROBLEMS

Writer in the Kansas City Star Outlines Some of the Difficulties Which May Arise Through the Radio as a Purveyor of Entertainment

[EDITOR'S NOTE—Below is reproduced, without comment, a report of a writer on the Kansas City Star relative to the broadcasting of songs, etc. Considering the fact that the Star has been active in aiding the radio stations, it should be well worth reading.]

The wisest people in what is commonly called the show business probably are turning their eyes and ears to the possibilities of the radiophone. It is a subject that must instantly challenge every mind that houses whatever degree of intelligence is required to cause a human individual to look into the future and to look out for himself. Just now the performer, singer, player or composer who is a creator of music or elocutionary utterances might well consult a lawyer or someone versed in the drawing of contracts. The near future is very apt to offer great opportunity for any artist who can assist the purveyor of sound through the air. Not only will concert and opera managers have to hold forth some inducement to performers in the way of royalties for "air" rights, but they themselves may be compelled to pay royalties to composers for music broadcasted on the ether waves. The producers of opera, concerts, musical comedies and such who now are finding wireless concerts broadcast by commercial radio companies very profitable because of the unusual publicity accorded them soon may discover there is a boomerang attached to the radiophone. The air may kick back.

For example, the Star on Friday recorded several incidents where very worthy young men and their mothers, who otherwise might have been at Convention Hall for the symphony concert, remained at home and heard the music on their wireless sets.

In addition to the amusement features of the new craze it may also dig into the coffers of the baseball world. The Post has announced that with the commencing of the coming season it will broadcast the results of the three leading associations as fast as received.

It is known that some of the local managers are giving the matter much serious consideration, and, while they are lending their assistance to the papers in their new plaything by allowing acts to participate in the concerts, it would not be surprising if they refused to allow the acts to work in the near future outside the limits of the theatre.

MANAGERS BAR SINGING FOR RADIO

Vaudeville Artists Prohibited From Radio Work by New Contracts

CHICAGO, ILL., April 7.—Singers on vaudeville circuits are prohibited from singing for radio telephones by clauses which now are being inserted in their contracts. The Western Vaudeville Managers' Association, which first began making such contracts, declares that the best efforts of the singers are needed for the stage.

MANY FEATURING "IN MAYTIME"

Vaudeville Singers of Promise Using That Popular New Ballad Number

The Wilson Bros., two of the best-known singers, appeared at the Palace Theatre, New York City, last week, where they featured the Jack Snyder, Inc., ballad, "In Maytime (I Learned to Love)." The preceding week Vaughn Comfort, the vaudeville and concert artist, sang the same ballad at the same theatre and the week prior to that John Steel, the well-known musical comedy star, also programmed this successful song.

Jack Snyder, Inc., is fast placing the number in the repertoire of many other artists and, according to the sales department of the company, the results of this publicity are already being felt.

"BLOSSOM TIME" ANNIVERSARY

Celebration of One Year's Run of Operetta Held in New York Recently

"Blossom Time," the operetta with Franz Schubert's music, at the Ambassador Theatre, New York, celebrated Thursday night, March 23, the first anniversary of its production. It was on March 23, 1921, that the operetta had its premiere in Atlantic City. It played engagements in Baltimore and Boston and following a period of inactivity during the Summer was presented at the Ambassador here on September 29 last. Bertram Peacock, who sings the role of Franz Schubert in the operetta, has sung at every performance. Leo Feist, Inc., publishes the score.

ITALIAN COMPOSER DIES

Author of "Funiculi Funicula" Recently Passed Away in Italy

The death of Luigi Denza brings to mind his "Funiculi Funicula," a song that has gained a world-wide popularity and which so aptly expresses the Neapolitan spirit that Richard Strauss used it in his orchestral suite, "Aus Italien," as a folk song. Strauss or his publisher some years later sued for infringement of copyright a man who used much less of one of his musical motives as an avowed quotation. Denza's song was inspired by the opening of the funicular railway and was written for the festivities of the "Die di Grotto" in Naples in 1880.

FURER'S NEW MUSIC SHOP OPENS

STAMFORD, CONN., April 9.—Another noteworthy acquisition has been made to the music stores of this city by the recent opening of Furer's New Music Shop, in the Spelke Block, one of the most attractive music houses in this part of the State. Seven air-cooled, sound-proof record demonstration booths are a feature of the establishment. Mr. Furer, who has been in business here for several years, was formerly located on Atlantic avenue.

Music transmitted by wireless to a moving train was heard clearly recently by several hundred Cornell University students, who were coming to New York for their Spring vacation aboard a special train of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western. Railroad officials said it was the first time radio waves from a broadcasting station had been picked up for the entertainment of passengers on a train.

A. H. Curry, vice-president of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., in charge of phonograph merchandising, left for Dallas, Tex., on April 4. While in

Guests of Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co. Snapped on Pennsylvania Hotel Roof

York City, Victor wholesaler, for the benefit of Victor retailers, was changed from the auditorium of the Knickerbocker headquarters to the Pennsylvania Hotel. Either the central location of the hotel, with its attendant accessibility, or the bright Spring weather proved a stimulus in increasing the attendance, for at the opening of the recital at 10 o'clock Wednesday, April 5, Parlor A was entirely filled and another room had to be thrown open. Victor retailers were present from all over the metropolitan district, Long Island and New Jersey, and among the guests was William P. Van Wickle, president of the Van Wickle Piano Co., of Washington, D. C., which is also a Victor retailer. The entire advance May list of Victor records was played and during the recital Abram Davega, president of the Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co., spoke interestingly on current topics of interest to the Victor retailer.

to the Knickerbocker Talking Machine Co. for its hospitality and complimented the organization on its progressive spirit. Mr. Davega, in responding, announced that a similar event would be held next month, at which time a selling and buying contest would be held, which would undoubtedly prove intensely interesting to all present.

T. E. ASHWORTH WITH AUERBACH

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, April 8.—T. E. Ashworth, who has been connected with the talking machine business for the past ten years, has been made manager of the new talking machine department of the Auerbach Co. The department is located on the main floor of the store and up-to-date equipment makes it as fine as any in the city.

the South it is Mr. Curry's intention to look over his wholesale and retail interests in that section of the country. On his return North, which is scheduled for ten days to two weeks after his departure from Orange, he plans to bring his family with him, so that henceforth the Curry headquarters, domestic as well as commercial, will be in Orange.

BENNIE KRUEGER'S TEN WEEKS' TOUR

Bennie Krueger and his orchestra, exclusive Brunswick artist, who for several weeks has been playing nightly at Delmonico's, New York, is starting out this week on a ten weeks' vaudeville tour with Keith's circuit. This flattering offer made by this prominent vaudeville house to Mr. Krueger reflects the reputation he has acquired as a premier orchestra leader and interpreter of dance music. The Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. is planning to follow Mr. Krueger in his appearances in different theatres with full-page advertisements, carried in the local papers.

TAKES OVER ACME BUSINESS

The business of the Acme Die Casting Corp. has been taken over by the Aluminum Die Casting Corp., a New Jersey corporation, with headquarters at Garwood, N. J. The business will be continued as heretofore and under the direction of the same officials, but it will be conducted under the name of the Aluminum Die Casting Corp. instead of Acme.

Musical Activities Help Trade—Some Notable Visitors—Business Improving—Soule, Starr District Manager—Trade Changes

PORTLAND, ORE., April 6.—During the past month Portland music lovers were treated to one continual round of concerts and every week during the month one or more famous artists appeared and played to capacity houses. The Chicago Grand Opera Company appeared at the municipal auditorium March 22, 23, 24 and 25 for five performances and drew very large audiences. The company was brought to Portland by W. T. Pangle, with a guarantee of $72,500 by Portland's public-spirited business men. Sherman, Clay & Co., the Wiley B. Allen Co., the Bush & Lane Piano Co., the G. F. Johnson Piano Co. and the Seiberling & Lucas Music Co., the five music houses that helped back the proposition, are delighted at the artistic and financial success of Opera Week. It is estimated that over 23,000 persons attended the opera and this alone, the dealers say, is bound to stimulate interest in music. Sales of Red Seal records, especially opera selections, have been tremendous and many out-of-town visitors "stocked up" while in the city.

The Victrola department of Sherman, Clay & Co.'s store has had numerous noted personages visit it during March, including Edward Johnson, the noted Canadian tenor and Victor artist, who is a member of the Chicago Grand Opera Company; Sophie Braslau, contralto, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who was soloist for the Portland Symphony Orchestra, March 29; and Homer Samuels, husband and accompanist to Galli-Curci. They were shown through the store by Arthur W. Stein, manager of the Victrola department.

Increased activity in both Victrolas and Victor records for March is the report of Arthur W.

Stein, manager of the Victrola department of Sherman, Clay & Co. Mr. Stein says: "Our sales sheets show a big increase over this time last year, and we anticipate more good business ahead. The new Victrola console types Nos. 300, 280 and 260 are going over big and are arousing a great deal of interest among our patrons."

George J. Dowling, president of the Cable Company, of Chicago, accompanied by Mr. Hughes, stopped off for several days in Portland.

D. C. Peyton, manager of the talking machine department of Meier & Frank, reports greatly improved conditions, and is rejoicing over the acquisition to his department of Miss Ellen L. Tracy, who will act as his assistant, and whom he has placed in complete charge of the record department. Miss Tracy has just returned from the Victor factory at Camden, N. J., where she completed the six weeks' educational course.

The cut-out of 519 records from the Columbia stock is being greeted with approval by most dealers, who were ready for a Spring house-cleaning.

Carl W. Jones, former district manager of the Columbia Graphophone Co. in Portland, has gone to Los Angeles and is connected with the Remick Song Shop's phonograph department in that city.

Charles Soule, of Soule Bros. Music Co., has been appointed district manager of the Starr Piano Co. to fill the place of John P. Murphy, who was promoted to the Los Angeles office.

John C. Foley, who recently closed out his piano and phonograph business, has been appointed sales manager of Oregon Eilers Music House. L. Lunsford, formerly manager of the Denver Music Co., of Montrose, Col., and at one time active in the phonograph manufacturing business, has been made assistant sales manager of the firm.

The G. F. Johnson Piano Co. announces better business in higher-priced machines for March than for several months, with sales of the console models in the Cheney phonographs being excellent.

H. G. Reed, of the Reed, French Piano Co., reports splendid business for March, with more sales in Edison and Victrola machines made during the past month than for January and February combined.

Wm. Smith, Oregon sales manager of the Columbia Graphophone Co., who expected to return to California, has reconsidered and decided to "carry on" in Oregon. Columbia business has been so lively in Portland that Mr. Smith was unable to make his usual side trips into the outlying districts during the month of March, however. Columbia machine and record business in southern Oregon is booming, according to Mr. Smith, and good reports are received from all towns down the valley. S. H. Short, of the Ashland Drug Co., who is an exclusive Columbia dealer, is building an attractive balcony in his store, on which he will be able to display and demonstrate his machines.

The Palmer Piano Co., of Medford, Ore., has made extensive improvements throughout the entire store and has completely remodeled the department for demonstrating the Columbia, Victor and Edison phonographs, which it carries.

M. Davis, district manager of the phonograph division of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., reports excellent business for March both in the city and throughout the entire State. The new Brunswick console types, which arrived in carload lots, were snapped up, says Mr. Davis, and they moved so fast that they proved to be just a drop in the bucket.

L. E. Heynes' music store, of Lebanon, Ore., which is an exclusive Brunswick dealer, reports good business and a very bright outlook for the coming Spring.

The Moore-Dunne Music Co., of Salem, is

The Laraway Music House, of Eugene, Ore., Brunswick and Victor dealer, is showing better than 75 per cent increase in volume of business over last year.

The Woodworth Drug Co., of Albany, Ore., Brunswick and Victor dealer, reports a 50 per cent increase over 1921 business so far this year. J. F. Jones, manager of the phonograph department, died recently. He was only twenty-five years old, an "overseas man."

A. J. Lilburn & Son, exclusive Brunswick dealers, have disposed of their business to McKean, Darby & Baldwin, which firm plans extensive improvements.

Stanton Powell, of the Music and Photo House, of Grants Pass, Ore., will hereafter only handle the Brunswick and Victor machines. The Sabin Drug Co. is now handling the Columbia line with a very large measure of success.

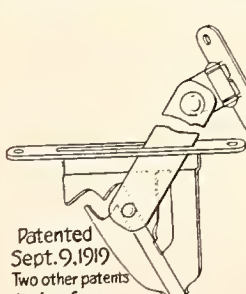

The McDougall-Conn Music Co. has placed Miss Eva V. Mosher in charge of its Columbia and record department.

Emma Reynolds, manager of the record department of the Hyatt Talking Machine Co., reports an enormous sale of Red Seal records, due to the appearance of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, but the sale of dance music goes on unabated nevertheless.

After an absence of six weeks on account of an operation for appendicitis Miss Madeline Larson, manager of the record department of the Bush & Lane Piano Co., has returned to her duties.

William A. Hodecker, of Seiberling-Lucas Music Co., reports big business in the Victrola department. Mary Elizabeth Godwin, in charge of the educational department, is kept busy assisting in the work of the public schools, which are putting in a great amount of time on the coming musical memory contest. The finals will be held some time in May and thousands of children are interested in what promises to be a most popular musical event for Portland.

Formal Opening of Attractive New Victor and Brunswick Shop Attended by Many

CIRCLEVILLE, O., April 9.—The formal opening of the Seitz Music Shop, 138 West Main street, which took place here recently in the room formerly occupied by the Third National Bank, was attended by fully a thousand people.

The new quarters present a most attractive appearance. Demonstration booths, soundproof rooms for the demonstration of machines and records are provided, where Victors and Brunswicks shine in rivalry.

Carl F. Seitz, proprietor, and members of the sales staff, Fulton Cryder, Henry Mader and Miss Nellie Denman, welcomed the guests at the opening and made everyone happy. They were in receipt of congratulations and good wishes from those who attended.

Paddock Products, Inc., New York City, has received many letters from talking machine dealers praising the merits and simplicity of the Phon-O-Mute, which, attached to the sound box, regulates tone by loosening or fastening a thumb screw. It requires no mechanical adjustment and has won considerable favor.

DISMISSAL OF VICTOR-STARR SUIT UPHELD ON APPEAL

U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals Sustains District Court in Dismissal of Bill of Complaint Filed by Victor Co. Against Starr Co. Alleging Infringement of Johnson Record Patent

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the second district of New York, on April 4, handed down a decision affirming the decree of the U. S. District Court of February 11, 1921, dismissing the bill of complaint filed by the Victor Talking Machine Co. against the Starr Piano Co. for alleged infringement of U. S. Letters Patent No. 896,059, granted August 11, 1908, to Eldridge R. Johnson, on the basis of lack of invention and abandonment.

The decision was rendered by Judges Rogers, Augustus N. Hand and Knox, sitting in the Circuit Court of Appeals, the opinion being written by Judge Hand and representing a most exhaustive survey of the patent itself, as well as of the development of the art of record manufacturing and various patents that have held a prominent place in that development.

The opinion, which runs close to 2,500 words, is a most interesting document from the standpoint of those connected with the manufacture and development of talking machine records in their varied phases.

BRISTOL & BARBER TO MANUFACTURE

Prominent New York Distributors Will Shortly Place Talking Machine on the Market

Bristol & Barber of 3 West Fourteenth street, New York City, well known throughout the talking machine trade as distributors of talking machines, records, accessories, etc., have announced that they will shortly place upon the market a talking machine of their own. While full details are not as yet available it is expected that the new machine will be of the console type, to retail at $125. One of the features of the machine will be a motor of exceptional quality, which will be sold with a five-year guarantee.

HART SISTERS WITH COLUMBIA

Well-known Vaudeville Team to Record for Columbia Library—Have Been Very Successful on "Big-time" Circuit Throughout Country

The Hart Sisters, who have one of the most artistic and attractive "sister" acts on the vaudeville stage to-day, have been added to the Columbia record library and their first record, "The Little Red School House," will be issued June 1.

Irene and Bernice Hart, comprising the Hart Sisters, are only nineteen and seventeen years of age, respectively, but they have already won unusual success on the vaudeville stage. Van and Schenck, famous vaudeville team and exclusive Columbia artists, heard them sing at a benefit some time ago and were so impressed with their talent that they introduced them to William Rock, the well-known musical comedy star and producer. Shortly afterward they were engaged by Mr. Rock for his "Silks and Satins Revue," where they were received as one of the hits of that musical comedy. They have just finished a very successful tour on the Keith vaudeville circuit and their addition to the Columbia record catalog adds another name to the long list of vaudeville stars who record for Columbia.

OPEN RECORDING LABORATORIES

The Manhattan Recording Laboratories, recently formed, have opened offices and recording laboratories at 48 West Thirty-ninth street. The laboratory is modern in every respect and well equipped. The company announces that it will give every attention to turning out the best of work and that recordings have already been made for some four or five record companies. It is also planned to add a personal recording department to the company.

REPORT INCREASED ACTIVITY

BALTIMORE, Md., April 6.—The headquarters of Cohen & Hughes, in both this city and Washington, report increased activity on the part of the dealer as the Spring season progresses. The ordering of the special Easter records would tend to indicate that dealers are planning to make the most of this important season. The new horizontal type Victrola, No. 240, was placed on display in both headquarters immediately upon its receipt and orders for this new model have been large.

The New York Globe cooperated with the General Phonograph Corp. and furnished as one of the artists for the evening Miss Jean Stockwell, well-known violin virtuoso.

"IOWA CORN SONG" RECORD A HIT

The Duning Co., Des Moines, Ia., Reports That the Gennett Record of that Number Has Proven a Big Seller in the Corn Belt

DES MOINES, IA., April 7.—The Duning Co., piano and talking machine dealer of this city, representing the Starr Piano Co. line in Iowa and Nebraska, reports a most substantial demand for the Gennett record of the "Iowa Corn Song," popularized during the Shrine Conclave in Des Moines last Spring, and later published in sheet music form.

The company prevailed upon the Starr Piano Co. to record the number as a direct medium for introducing Gennett records into this territory, and the move has been a wise one. The "Iowa Corn Song" will be featured by all song leaders during the first annual Music Week to be held in Des Moines from April 16 to 23.

W. S. Parks, manager of the Baltimore branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co., was a visitor to the company's executive offices in New York this week, accompanied by W. J. Boggs, president of the Guttman Furniture Co., of Briscoe, Va., Columbia dealer. Mr. Parks was keenly optimistic in his predictions regarding general business, stating that his sales for the first three months of the year had been very satisfactory.

Other callers at the Columbia executive offices recently included C. F. Schaffarzick, manager of the Spokane branch of the Columbia Co., and A. E. Landon, general manager of the Columbia offices at Toronto. Both of these callers brought with them pleasing reports as to the business.

Jobbers and Dealers Report Improving Conditions—Miss Ponselle Helps Record Sales—New Brunswick Dealers—News of the Month

BALTIMORE, Md., April 7.—The talking machine and record business in Baltimore and vicinity is good, according to reports from all the leading jobbing houses. This is especially true of the firm of E. F. Droop & Sons Co., 231 North Howard street. Manager Roberts says that their business for March was away ahead of last year and April business so far bids fair to exceed the previous month. This is especially true of the business in the No. 100 Victrola, on which, he says, they have been oversold for some time. Although he received a carload shipment last month he still has unfilled orders on his books.

H. T. Bosee, sales manager for Cohen & Hughes, 227 West Saratoga street, also reports a very good business, especially in records. This is attributed to a large extent to the attractive window displays that are being made by the dealers generally. Many of the displays are very unique and novel and naturally attract hundreds of prospective customers, especially in the downtown shopping districts.

Manager Shaw, of the local Brunswick branch, 107 Hopkins Place, who recently came here from St. Louis, says that he has added two big dealers to his list the past week in the firms of C. B. Noon, 325 North Charles street, and the Hub Piano Co., who have just opened a handsome showroom at 304 North Howard street, but that this is only a starter and the Brunswick stores will continue to increase in this territory.

Manager Parks, of the Columbia Graphophone Co., 16 South Howard street, has just returned from New York, where he had a conference with General Sales Manager Hopkins and is very optimistic as to the future for the Columbia Co. The local branch reports a big demand for all the records of the late Bert Williams, especially No. 6141—Bert Williams' Sermons—which has been completely exhausted and many orders for it booked ahead.

H. A. Bushman, who conducts the Jazz Shop at 1544 Pennsylvania avenue, another Columbia dealer, reports a big increase in the demand for records of the Columbia colored stars, Leona Williams and Edith Wilson. He says that when a customer comes in for either one of the latest records of these stars he does not ask them to buy anything else, but merely puts on the other record and nine times out of ten the sale is made.

Following an advertising campaign by the dealers of Norfolk, Va., supplemented by the Columbia Co., featuring the Ponselle Sisters, dealers in that city report having sold more records of these stars during the week of March 27 than in the whole previous year. This campaign was also put on the previous week by the dealers in Durham, who designated March 25 as "Rosa Ponselle Day" with equally satisfying results.

George Behm has just added a handsome Grafonola department to his store at 573 North Gay street.

Emanuel Kaufman, who recently bought out the talking machine shop of Mrs. Abraskin, 439 North Gay street, has completely renovated the place and is carrying a large stock of new machines.

which appeared here last week, visited the local branch of the Columbia Co. A special release of his record A-3577, "Carolina Rolls," was made for Washington this week, where the company is showing.

The Voluma Corp., 2826 Huntington avenue, has just let a contract for the manufacture of a phonograph reproducer, which is new in principle, according to a statement of James J. Cook, president of the company.

ARTISTIC SONORA DISPLAY

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, April 7.—The Daynes-Beebe Music Co., of this city, which handles the Sonora phonograph, is an enthusiastic believer in artistic window displays, and the accompanying illustration represents one of the most attractive windows that has appeared in the local trade for some months past. Utilizing the famous Sonora phrase "Clear as a Bell" as the basis for the display, the company prepared a window that not only attracted general attention but also produced tangible results in the sale of high-priced Sonoras.

BIG CALL FOR VIOLAPHONE NEEDLES

The Fred. Gretsch Mfg. Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., reports that the sale of Violaphone needles has shown a steady increase during the year. Last week one single order covered 3,000 cartons, which contained a total of 9,000,000 needles. The Violaphone needle is strongly constructed and is, therefore, proving popular in use with the various repeating devices now on the market. The company also reports that additional numbers of talking machine dealers are finding the line of musical merchandise profitable and a steady increase in sales is in evidence throughout the country. Dealers find musical merchandise a profitable and interesting sideline to handle. It does not increase the overhead and it brings a great many customers into the store who are apt to be interested in talking machines and records. This is not theory, but it is the experience of a great many talking machine dealers who are successfully coupling these two lines and who have so informed Mr. Gretsch.

TALKING MACHINE MEN, INC., ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Irwin Kurtz Elected President With a Strong Organization of Executives at Meeting on April 12—Final Plans Announced for Annual Banquet and Entertainment at Hotel Pennsylvania on April 20

The monthly meeting of The Talking Machine Men, Inc., the organization of talking machine retailers of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, was held at the Café Boulevard on Wednesday, April 12, being preceded by the usual luncheon, which proved most enjoyable.

The most important matter at the meeting was the selection of officers for the ensuing year, those elected being Irwin Kurtz, who so ably presided during the preceding year, as president, E. Leins as vice-president, and E. G. Brown again as secretary. The following division vice-presidents were also elected: Aeolian Division, J. Friedmann; Brunswick, A. Bersin; Columbia, L. Tylkoff; Sonora, J. H. Mayers, and Victor, L. J. Rooney.

The Shapiro-Bernstein Co., music publishers, had several of their songwriters present to demonstrate some of their latest numbers, and Louis Bernstein, president of the company, gave an interesting talk regarding the company's plans for the coming season.

Joseph Mayer, executive manager of the Caruso American Memorial Foundation, took occasion to explain the object of the movement and to urge the support of the talking machine men, which, needless to say, will be given. The Clapp-Eastham Co. had representatives present who demonstrated for the benefit of the dealers the wireless outfit made by the company, which proved quite interesting.

Cuts of the new association insignia for use on letterheads and charts were distributed at the meeting to those who desired them and paid up their dues for the year. The association has also arranged to provide members with luncheon cards without which a charge of $1.50 will be made for each luncheon.

At the meeting final plans were announced for the annual banquet and entertainment of The Talking Machine Men, Inc., to be held at the Hotel Pennsylvania on Thursday evening, April 20. A notable array of talent has been assured for the evening, including Paul Whiteman's "Romance of Rhythm" orchestra, which will play throughout the evening, the All Star Trio, Clyde Doerr's Club Royal Orchestra, Yerkes' S. S. Flotilla Orchestra, Benny Krueger's Orchestra and other organizations, together with many individual stars, including John Charles Thomas, Charles Harrison, Elsie Baker, Danise, Marie Sundelius, Mario Chamlee, Green Bros., "Zez" Confrey, Wheeler Wadsworth and others.

It is reported that there has been a very substantial demand for tickets and that the prospects were that the affair would be the most successful in the history of the association, which in view of past achievements is significant.

Assistant Secretary of Brunswick Co. Returns From Visit to London and Paris—Comments Upon Improved Industrial Conditions Abroad

P. L. Deutsch, assistant secretary of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., accompanied by Mrs. Deutsch, arrived in New York Friday, April 7, on the "Aquitania," after spending four weeks abroad. Mr. Deutsch visited London and Paris and in the latter city spent some time at the Brunswick factory and office.

In a chat with The World Mr. Deutsch stated that his trip was principally in the nature of a vacation, but he was glad to find that the business situation in Europe was considerably better than it had been for the past two years. Mr. Deutsch commented upon the fact that there seemed to be a dearth of moderate-priced talking machines in England, with a superabundance of high-priced instruments. The industrial outlook, as a whole, showed signs of marked improvement, with a feeling of optimism in practically every industry.

Mr. Deutsch remained in New York a few days and then left for Philadelphia, to attend the wedding of Robert Bensinger, son of B. A. Bensinger, president of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. He then proceeded to the company's headquarters at Chicago to take up his usual duties.

O. W. Ray Well Satisfied With Situation in Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Memphis Territories—Numerous New Dealers Appointed

O. W. Ray, general manager of the wholesale Vocalion record department of the Aeolian Co., returned on April 11 from a visit to Pittsburgh and Cleveland, where he called upon local Vocalion distributors. In Pittsburgh Mr. Ray declared that he found business good despite the coal strike, and that many of the furnaces were in operation. The Clark Musical Co., in that city, reports the establishment of many new dealers. In Cleveland the Vocalion Co. of Ohio, which also operates distributing quarters in Cincinnati, reported real progress for the Vocalion line.

C. D. McKinnon, district manager for the Vocalion Co., recently visited the Hessig-Ellis Co., in Memphis, and reported that thirty new dealers had been appointed in that territory within the past month.

ANNOUNCE A FILM OPERA IN BERLIN

German Concern Claims Solution of Perfect Synchronization of Film and Music

A dispatch received by the New York Herald from Berlin states that a German film company claims to have a definite solution of the synchronization of film and music. The premiere of the first film opera will take place at the Berlin Opera House shortly, the score having been written by Prof. Hummel, a well-known German composer.

The timing of the music to the tale unrolled in the film is attained by a narrow ribbon bearing the music, which appears at the bottom of the picture, having been photographed simultaneously with the scenes in the play. Singers and orchestra take part in the film opera, the conductor of the orchestra keeping his eye upon the changing ribbon of music.

With one hand the conductor operates an automatic relay, which retards the film whenever the action is too fast for the tempo. Thus exact timing is possible. The film opera is entitled "Beyond the Stream" and the scene is the underworld.

MUSICAL SHOW AND EXPOSITION

Display of Ancient and Modern Musical Instruments to Be Feature of Exhibition to Be Held This Month Under the Auspices of the Caruso American Memorial Foundation

The Caruso American Memorial Foundation is arranging a Musical Show and Exhibition to be held under its auspices at the Canessa Galleries, 1 West Fiftieth street, April 24 to May 6, according to announcement by John Aspegren, chairman of the executive committee.

The purpose of the exhibition will be to demonstrate the development of American musical arts and crafts and to augment the Foundation's national endowment fund now being raised to assist needy and talented students of music and to promote the cause of music in America. The use of the Canessa Galleries has been donated and many priceless art objects have been loaned by Amedeo Canessa, art collector. Noteworthy examples of the primitive and modern musical arts and crafts are being assembled by the executive committee of the Foundation, which has headquarters in the Woolworth Building. These will include rare examples of the craftsmanship of the instrument makers of several centuries ago and types of the earliest as well as the most up-to-date musical devices. Some of the leading American makes of musical instruments, including pianos, string instruments, brass instruments, woodwinds, etc., will be exhibited, it is stated.

There will be addresses by recognized authorities on music and concerts each afternoon and evening and prominent artists will contribute their numbers. The proceeds from the exhibition will go to the fund. Among the officers and members of the committee who are co-operating in the plans for the exhibition are: Paul D. Cravath, Otto H. Kahn, Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, Felix M. Warburg, Dr. Antonio Stella, Walter Damrosch, Calvin G. Child, O. G. Sonnek and Stefano Miele.

F. A. Ende, New Bremen, O., has sold his Victrola and jewelry store to Melville Laut.

THOMAS M'CREEDY WITH UNIT CO.

Becomes District Manager Covering New York and New England Territory, With Headquarters at 299 Madison Avenue, New York

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 8.—The Unit Construction Co., of this city, manufacturer of Unico equipment for the talking machine wareroom, has announced that Thomas McCreedy, who has for the past five years represented the Victor Talking Machine Co. in the Greater New York District, has become affiliated with this company as district manager. He will not only have jurisdiction over Greater New York territory, with headquarters at 299 Madison avenue, but will also from these headquarters cover the New England district. Mr. McCreedy needs no introduction to the trade and it is not hard to predict great success in his new work in the sales of Unico equipment. In addition to Mr. McCreedy's Victor experience he has had broad experience in the advertising field, which makes his service to the dealer of more than ordinary value.

B. E. BEMIS JOINS BRUNSWICK CO.

The New York office of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., phonograph division, is making an intensive drive in metropolitan New York for Spring and Summer business. The Long Island territory is to be thoroughly covered with splendid advertising where it is expected the influx of Summer residents will swell up Brunswick sales.

E. A. Strauss, general manager of this branch, just announced that B. E. Bemis, a well-known talking machine man, who formerly was connected in the talking machine business in New England, has been appointed Brunswick representative for Long Island territory.

NEW PANHELLENION CO. QUARTERS

Recording Headquarters Now Located at 48 West Thirty-ninth Street—Some Recent Releases

The headquarters of the Panhellenion Phonograph Record Co., Inc., has been moved from West Fourteenth street to 48 West Thirty-ninth street, where the offices and recording laboratories have been established. This company has long made a specialty of recording in the Greek language and has built up a reputation with the quality of these recordings. Regular monthly releases are a part of the plan of the organization and the latest release contains six double-faced discs, four in ten-inch size and two in twelve.

The following appear in the ten-inch size: 330 "Balatta," from "Rigoletto," and "La Paloma" (tenor solos), by G. Kanakis; 329 "Tosca," "The Girl of the Waves" (tenor solo), by G. Kanakis; 326 "Masca," "Mob of Athens" (soprano solo), by Mrs. Bibi, and 323 "Comical Monologue—Part I," "Comical Love," by H. Syllas. The twelve-inch selections include: 8030 "Comical Monologue—Part II," "Comical Monologue—Part III," by H. Syllas; 8029 "Smyrnie Politises," "Hanoumi Mou" (soprano solos), by Mme. Koula.

LOUIS STERLING ARRIVES

London Representative of Columbia Co. Here to Confer With Officials Regarding Policies for the Coming Year—Heads British Association

Louis Sterling, managing director of the Columbia Graphophone, Ltd., London, England, and in charge of the European interests of the Columbia Graphophone Co., arrived in New York recently on the "Mauretania" for a stay of several weeks. Mr. Sterling is conferring with the executives of the company regarding plans and policies for the coming year.

Upon his arrival Mr. Sterling was congratulated by his associates upon the fact that he was recently elected president of the Federation of British Music Industries. This is the most important and influential organization in the music industries of Great Britain as it includes in its members manufacturers of musical instruments of every description. Mr. Sterling's election is a great honor, in view of the fact that the election of an American citizen to this important position is very unusual.

VICTOR STORE IN ALLIANCE SOLD

Drake & Moninger Co. Sold to J. H. Johnson Sons—East Liverpool Store Also Sold

ALLIANCE, O., April 11.—The sale of the Alliance store of the Drake & Moninger Co., exclusive Victor shop, to J. H. Johnson Sons was approved Tuesday in the Common Pleas Court at Canton. The company went into a receivership on its own application, the petition setting out that difficulty in collecting book accounts has made it impossible for the company to operate successfully.

The East Liverpool store of the same concern, also carrying a large line of talking machines, was sold this week to William and John Moninger and in the future will be known as Moninger Bros Co.

The experiences of other successful merchants, as set forth in the trade papers, can be made to pay big dividends to the progressive dealers who intelligently take advantage of their opportunities.

IMPORTANT EDISON ANNOUNCEMENT

Substantial Reduction in Prices of Several Models of Phonographs

ORANGE, N. J., April 13.—Thos. A. Edison, Inc., has announced a reduction in price of several models which were not included in the announcement made last month. The new reductions are as follows: Eighteenth Century English console type, $500; reduced to $375. Italian Umbrian console type, $500; reduced to $350. Louis XIV upright type, $350; reduced to $295.

THE RETURN OF WAR TAXES

George W. Pound Issues an Opinion Covering That Important Question

George W. Pound, general counsel of the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce, has offered the following opinion regarding the return of war taxes on pianos, talking machines, etc., sold prior to January 31, 1922, and returned after that date.

Pianos, phonographs, player-pianos and other musical instruments subject to special tax under the Revenue Act of 1918, which were sold prior to January 1, 1922, and upon which such tax was paid, and which instruments were afterward returned and the sale and tax rescinded, are free from such tax.

In such cases the manufacturer may rescind the sale, refund or credit the purchase price and the war tax.

He may then file claim with the department for the refund of such tax so returned by him to the purchaser of the instrument. See Form 843 for this purpose.

RECORD SALES INCREASING

Columbia Branch in Detroit Reports Steadily Growing Business in Records and Machines

DETROIT, MICH., April 3.—The Detroit branch of the Columbia Graphophone Co. has shown a decided increase in record sales during the past month, and with the aid of the special advertising campaign in the various newspapers in this territory the branch also succeeded in closing a substantial Grafonola business. Several new Columbia dealers have been opened in this territory, including Wauseon Music Shoppe, which opened a very attractive store in the Arcade Building, Wauseon, Mich.

Mlle. Erica, a young dancer who substituted for Mae Murray, the popular motion picture star, in her recent production, "Peacock Alley," attracted considerable attention when she danced in the window of the Allmendinger Music Shoppe, Ann Arbor, Mich., Columbia dealer. Mlle. Erica danced to the music of Ted Lewis' Columbia records and was responsible for the sale of many Ted Lewis Columbia records.

VICTOR DEALERS ADD PIANO LINE

Baim Bros. & Friedberg, who have been pushing Victor products exclusively in their three stores in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, N. Y., recently opened a piano department, in which the Wissner line is featured.

The Latona Talking Machine Co., of Evansville, Ind., has been incorporated.

TALKING MACHINE LURES SEALS

Oxford University Scientists Find That Music Makes Seal Hunting Easy

The talking machine long ago found a definite place for itself in the Arctic as a medium for providing entertainment for explorers during the long watches in the Land of the Midnight Sun. Brown, Binney and Paget Wilkes, Oxford University scientists on an exploration trip to the Island of Spitzbergen, found that the talking machine not only provided entertainment for humans but made an excellent decoy for seals, who came up in great numbers to see where the music came from and paid for their curiosity with their lives.

Using the "Talker" as a Decoy

In view of the success met with by the Arctic explorers by capturing seals with music we may soon see the city man arm himself with a portable talking machine and go out for the purpose of getting the makings of a sealskin coat for friend wife without paying the tariff demanded by the fur dealers. Just what sort of music appeals most to seals, whether jazz or symphony, is not stated.

COLUMBIA TRADE IN PITTSBURGH

S. H. Nichols, Manager of Pittsburgh Distributing Office, States That Industrial Chaos Is Retarding More Rapid Betterment

PITTSBURGH, PA., April 7.—S. H. Nichols, manager of the local offices of the local Columbia Graphophone Co., reports trade conditions as showing a very satisfactory improvement. He expressed the opinion that just as soon as the coal strike flurry has been cleared and the industrial plants of the Pittsburgh district get on a more normal operating basis sales of the Columbia line will show a marked gain. Mr. Nichols said: "We are pleased with what we have accomplished with the Columbia Grafonola here and we believe that the possibilities of the field are unlimited and that the real live-wire dealer in the Columbia line will reap an abundant harvest if he sows the right kind of (sales) seed."

The fellow who refuses to let go, no matter how bad things seem to be, is bound to come out on top. This applies to salesmen.

DOLBEER REVIEWS TRADE CONDITIONS

Improving Trend Apparent Throughout the Country, Despite Strike Interruptions

Frank K. Dolbeer, manager of the traveling department of the Victor Talking Machine Co., who naturally keeps in close contact with the business situation and prospects throughout the country, sees many reasons for optimism regarding trade developments, and his viewpoint is well outlined in the following letter sent recently to the various members of his staff. Mr. Dolbeer bases his opinions upon carefully weighed facts, and they are thus worthy of particular attention. In his letter he said:

"Reports continue to be received from almost all sections of the country indicating improved general conditions. A Des Moines newspaper makes the following statement: 'Corn has gone up 65 per cent since the first of last November, oats are up over 300 per cent, hogs have had a radical advance. Iowa is again beginning to feel the old-time prosperity.

"On the 60 per cent of the corn crop, which is estimated as still remaining on the farms of Iowa, the advances of the last ninety days give this corn an additional value of over $54,000,000, and the increase in hogs, oats and other items would amount to far more than that. Iowa is back on its feet.'

"Additional information received in bank reports from Kansas City and Minneapolis make strong comment upon the generally improved conditions in those localities, making special mention of the increase in money now lying idle in the banks, and this so-called idle money will be put to use in the very near future.

"The upward trend in the prices of corn, wheat and hogs will give the farming sections additional spending money and our distributors and dealers should benefit materially from this.

"The National City Bank of New York, in its March report, states: 'The business situation has been brightened decidedly by the rise of farm products which has taken place in the last month. This advance is of greater significance than any other development that has occurred since the prices of farm products broke in the Fall of 1920. It is the first burst of real sunshine and as such in marked contrast with the artificial variety which has been rather laboriously disseminated by cheerful people who have thought nothing was required but that everybody should smile at each other.'

"The feature which may disturb general business is the coal strike, which started on April 1, but in discussing this with people who are in touch with the situation they believe that this is the opportune moment for such a strike and that the benefits to be derived will be far in excess of the trouble that may be caused."

AN INTERESTING EXPERIMENT

Otto Goldsmith, president of the Cabinet & Accessories Co., recently performed an interesting experiment in recording by wireless at the headquarters of the company, 145 East Thirty-fourth street, New York. The Cabinet & Accessories Co. is a distributor of the Recordola and has lately added radio sets made by the A. C. Gilbert Co., of New Haven, Conn. An A. C. Gilbert set has been installed at the headquarters and the other evening when the New York Evening Mail was broadcasting the opera, "La Traviata," Mr. Goldsmith conceived the idea of recording the sound on the Recordola. While it was only an initial experiment and, therefore, subject to improvement, the results were indicative of interesting developments.

Mr. Goldsmith recently returned from an extensive trip through the Long Island territory of about a week's duration. He reported considerable activity among retailers on the island and a general expectation of future good business. An example of the progressive spirit is to be found in the retail establishment of Geller & Seldim, which is occupying a new large corner location in Rockville Centre, which has been thoroughly decorated and equipped.

"DA-LITE" ELECTRIC DISPLAY SERVICE EXCLUSIVELY FEATURING Victor Records

THE SERVICE costs $6.00 per month and consists of four artistic hand-colored panels, or fronts, featuring records selected through information obtained from over fifty wholesale distributors and delivered to you each month before the records are released.

These panels are used in our "DA-LITE" ELECTRIC DISPLAY, which we sell you at $15.00, which is the wholesale price. All of the leading VICTOR DISTRIBUTORS have this display installed in their salesroom for your inspection and will advise you to order the service if you desire to increase your sale of records.

A NEW FEATURE—SELLING OLD RECORDS

The special panel for the old record No. 18721, "HONOLULU EYES," has proven a success. Dealers using the panel have sold out or greatly reduced their stock. This month we feature No. 18744, "UNDERNEATH HAWAIIAN SKIES." Our display will "clean up" the stock of one old record every month and also feature the new records. The Special Panels cost $2.50 each.

DISMISSAL IN VICTOR VS. BRUNSWICK TONE-ARM SUIT

Judge Sessions in U. S. District Court, Grand Rapids, Mich., Dismisses Bill of Complaint of the Victor Talking Machine Co. Against the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. Charging Patent Infringement

On November 1, 1920, the Victor Talking Machine Co. filed suit against the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. in the United States District Court at Grand Rapids, Mich., alleging that the Brunswick tone-arm and sound conveyor infringed claims 2 and 42 of Letters Patent No. 814,786 and claims 7 and 11 of Letters Patent No. 814,848, both granted March 13, 1906, to the Victor Talking Machine Co. as the assignee of Eldridge R. Johnson, president of that company.

The Victor Co. followed the filing of its bill with a motion for a preliminary injunction against the Brunswick Co. to which the latter responded by reply affidavits. Both parties appeared by their counsel on the day appointed for the hearing of this motion before Judge Clarence W.

Sessions, United States district judge, who very shortly expressed his refusal to pass upon such a motion and immediately set the case down for trial beginning January 24, 1921.

The trial continued for a week in open court with sound experts and patent experts appearing as witnesses for both parties. Subsequently the case was argued by counsel before Judge Sessions on March 12, 1921, and printed briefs were filed and the court took the case under advisement. After full consideration Judge Sessions, on April 5, 1922, decided that the Brunswick machine does not infringe the Victor patents in suit and has ordered the bill of complaint dismissed with costs assessed against the Victor Co.

NEW SONORA VICE-PRESIDENT

S. O. Martin Elected to Important Office—Well-known in Industrial and Commercial Circles

S. O. Martin, formerly an executive of the American International Corp., New York, one of the country's greatest industrial organizations, has been elected first vice-president of the Sonora Phonograph Co., Inc., New York. Mr. Martin, who is widely known in business circles, was in charge of the American International Corp.'s commercial research and investigation department, and in this important post he was in intimate touch with a great many prominent industrial concerns. He brings to the Sonora Phonograph Co. a wealth of executive and demonstrative ability that makes him a valuable addition to the Sonora personnel.

NEW VICTROLA BOOK OF OPERA

Sixth Edition Represents Entirely New Work and Is Most Complete of Its Kind

The Victor Talking Machine Co. has just announced the sixth edition of "The Victrola Book of the Opera." The new edition does not represent a revision of the earlier editions, but is a book that has been completely rewritten and is one of the most complete works of its kind. The new book contains stories of more than 100 operas, with summaries of their history, musical quotations, critical and explanatory material. Correct pronunciations are given to the names of operas and operatic characters and all the stories are told in clear, concise English. A new and attractive cover design of gold, embossed on a red background, has been provided for the new edition.

CONCERT INCREASES EDISON SALES

NEWARK, N. J., April 10.—A recent "tone-test" recital in which the Edison was featured by the Edison Shop here resulted in much worthwhile publicity and several sales for that concern. Walter Chapman, pianist; Mary Morrissey, contralto, and Harold Lyme, flutist and saxophonist, entertained the large audience which appeared at Wallace Hall for the recital.

The Victor talking machine department of Woodward & Lothrop, Washington, D. C., has been greatly enlarged.

SIMPLEX EXECUTIVE IN NEW YORK

Harry Farmer, of Simplex Electric Phonograph Motor Co., Visits New York—Arranges for Another Factory—Montreal Plant Working to Capacity

Harry Farmer, of the Simplex Electric Phonograph Motor Co., Montreal, Can., was a visitor to New York last week in connection with various matters incidental to the manufacture and distribution of this electric motor. While here Mr. Farmer started negotiations with the object of opening a New York factory.

Through an error in the layout of the advertisement used by the Simplex Electric Phonograph Motor Co. in the March issue of The World an address was given which implied that the company had already opened a New York factory. Mr. Farmer's visit to New York, however, straightened out this error and he has communicated with the talking machine manufacturers suggesting that they address all inquiries to the company's executive offices, at 321 Bleury street, Montreal.

Mr. Farmer states that the Simplex electric phonograph motor has been enthusiastically received throughout Canada and inquiries from manufacturers in the United States evidence a keen interest in this motor generally. Production is being rapidly increased at the Montreal factory and the plant in New York will enable the company to give efficient service to American manufacturers.

SONORA OFFICERS VISIT FACTORY

Jos. Wolff and S. O. Martin, vice-presidents of the Sonora Phonograph Co., Inc., New York, spent last week at the Sonora factory in Saginaw, Mich., where they conferred with the factory executives relative to "speeding up" production.

Ed Hewitt, of Tipton, Ind., has purchased the talking machine business formerly operated by Forrest Worreil in that village.

The stock of the Paris Phonograph Shop, of Plainfield, N. J., was recently damaged by fire.

REGINA CO. REORGANIZED

Concern Incorporated and Officers Elected—Prominent Men Interested—To Pay Off the Preferred Creditors Before May 10

At a meeting of the creditors of the Regina Co., held at the office of the Referee in Bankruptcy on March 27, the referee approved a plan for the purchase of the assets of the company by the Creditors' Committee. The plan was carried out and the Regina Corp. was chartered under the laws of the State of New Jersey with a capital of 10,000 shares of no par value stock, for the purpose of taking over the assets and business of the Regina Co.

It was the original intention of the committee to issue a share for each dollar of indebtedness. It was found, however, in order to carry out this plan, the fee of the Secretary of State would have been in excess of $10,000. It therefore was decided to have fewer shares and issue one share for each $100 of indebtedness. This necessitates there being fractional shares, but it was held that this is not objectionable.

An organization meeting of the new company was held and the following officers and directors elected: W. L. Desnoyers, president; C. M. Cubbison, vice-president; Eugene F. E. Jung, secretary and treasurer; James F. Shaw and E. F. Fretz, directors.

Of the above, Mr. Fretz is president of the Light Manufacturing and Foundry Co., at Pottstown, Pa., and was the largest merchandise creditor and was on the Creditors' Committee. Mr. Jung also is on the Creditors' Committee and is by profession a statistician and economic expert. Mr. Shaw is of the banking house of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne. Mr. Cubbison is a sales manager of large experience and will take charge of the sales of the new company. Mr. Desnoyers has been acting as receiver and his training and experience in reorganization work should be of value to the company.

The following trustees were appointed: W. L. Desnoyers, John Bernhard and D. L. Murphy. These have qualified and will superintend the winding up of the affairs of the old Regina Co.

It is expected that between now and the tenth of May it will be possible to pay off all preferred claims, liquidating expenses, etc., and the company will then be prepared to send a statement to credit agencies and to its stockholders.

Bronislaw Huberman, the distinguished violinist and Brunswick artist, will give his fourth and last New York recital at Aeolian Hall on April 22. An interesting program has been arranged.

The old-fashioned "storekeeper" waited for customers to enter his store. The progressive business man of to-day overcomes competition by enticing people to his establishment by advertising, superior service, window displays, etc.

POPULAR RADIO SHOW EXHIBIT

Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp. Exhibits Firth Product—Herbert E. Brennan Now an Officer of Company—Distribution Plans Completed

At the Radio Show, which was held recently at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, one of the most popular and attractive exhibits was the booth of the Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp., New York. Herbert E. Brennan, who was one of the most popular members of the talking machine trade, is secretary and treasurer of the Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp. and is in charge of sales, having been elected an officer a few weeks ago.

Mr. Brennan has closed a number of very important deals in connection with the distribution

P. A. Wilkinson and H. E. Brennan of the Firth product, and full details will be announced in a few weeks. The talking machine trade will be an important factor in his distribution, as Mr. Brennan's thorough knowledge of the talking machine industry will enable him to cooperate with this trade to excellent advantage. At the Radio Show P. A. Wilkinson, vice-president of the Loyd Wireless Telephone Corp., together with Mr. Brennan, introduced Firth product to the many thousands of visitors who were keenly interested in the distinctive qualities of these wireless outfits.

NEW HOME FOR PATHE SHOP

COLUMBUS, O., April 11.—Announcement is made that the Pathé Shop is now located at 236 South High street with the Thomas Furniture Co. In the new quarters twice the former floor space is at the disposal of the store.

Some merchants are too conservative and others are reckless in the conduct of their business. The first retards growth and the second leads to failure. The happy medium, lying between the two, will increase the chances of success.

OTTO HEINEMAN RETURNS HOME

President of General Phonograph Corp. Returns With Optimistic Reports From European Trip—Talking Machine Industry in Germany and England Greatly Improved—General Outlook Gives Convincing Reasons for Optimism

Otto Heineman, president of the General Phonograph Corp., arrived in New York on Friday, April 7, on the steamer "Aquitania," after spending several weeks abroad. Mr. Heineman was accompanied on this trip by A. G. Bean, president of the General Phonograph Mfg. Co., Elyria, O., and vice-president of the General Phonograph Corp. While Mr. Heineman's trip was ostensibly a combination business and vacation journey, he forgot the vacation part as soon as he arrived on the other side and spent the greater part of his time acquainting himself with business conditions in England and Germany.

In a chat with The World Mr. Heineman commented upon his trip as follows: "Conditions abroad are very much improved, especially in the phonograph industry in Germany. While prices of talking machines and records have been lowered here, they have been increased proportionately in Germany. This has proven a wise move, as the cost of raw materials has advanced steadily and the new prices were therefore absolutely necessary.

"I was gratified to find that the talking machine business in England had greatly improved since my last trip and all factors of the talking machine trade throughout Great Britain were optimistic and well pleased with the general outlook.

"The Leipzig Fair was a wonderful exhibition of German industry of to-day and a great many German phonograph manufacturers exhibited at the fair. They displayed nothing new, however, but exhibited standard lines, which are meeting with a ready sale throughout Germany.

"Wherever I visited the hope was expressed that conditions throughout Europe would become more stabilized as the result of the Genoa Conference. It is confidently expected that this conference will go a long way towards settling the Russian situation and as soon as this is accomplished there will be a better feeling throughout every part of Europe.

"Germany is practically bare of raw materials at the present time and as soon as monetary conditions are settled and the industrial situation becomes stabilized that country will unquestionably afford a tremendous field for merchandising exploitation."

NATIONAL PHYSICAL CULTURE WEEK

Health Builders, Inc., Start Big Campaign in Connection With This Event—Seek Co-operation of Dealers Throughout the Country

Aiding the talking machine retailer to "cash in" on National Physical Culture Week is a subject that is engrossing much of the attention of R. B. Wheelan, president of the Health Builders, Inc., producers of the Health Builders course of talking machine records, New York. This stated week has been planned by the Physical Culture Magazine with the aid of a committee comprising the names of nationally known people in athletic, civil and governmental circles. From May 1 to 8 has been set aside and the slogan "To Build a Stronger Nation" has been adopted.

Health Builders, Inc., have distributed window signs to the large number of talking machine dealers that carry Health Builders records. In addition there has been prepared an attractive rotogravure window display and the dealers are being furnished with quantities of "Personal Health Programs" to send out in their mailing lists. In commenting on this week, R. B. Wheelan stated, "When every one is thinking of physical culture there is a wonderful opportunity to sell Health Builders records. Extra effort during this week, I believe, will be well rewarded."

Steady increase of business is reported by Health Builders, Inc. March business was almost double that of February, and April, thus far, is 33 1/3 per cent ahead of March. Two additional offices have been secured adjoining the present suite, which have been attractively fitted up and which greatly increase the facilities. The separate charts hitherto furnished with the course have been dispensed with and in their place a bound book has been substituted, thus eliminating confusion due to misplaced and missing charts.

Constructive criticism is a mighty good thing, provided you direct it at yourself. Other people will not appreciate it.

READERS of THE MUSIC TRADE REVIEW may have the privilege of examining, free, any of the technical books published by Edward Lyman Bill, Inc. Each volume has been written by William Braid White, Technical Editor of The Review. To make these books authoritative, he has drawn not only from his own rich and practical experience of nineteen years, first as a tuner and later as an acoustical engineer, but also has drawn upon the extensive resources at his command by virtue of his affiliation with The Review.

The Edward Lyman Bill, Inc., technical library represents the only books written in English for the men who constitute the piano and player-piano industry of the United States. Each book covers its respective subject clearly and completely. Each volume is the standard work of its particular field. Every one of these books should be in the hands of every progressive man who wants to continue to make the American piano industry the world's leader, both from an artistic and commercial standpoint, as it is today.

These books also should be in every factory, as well as office and retail establishment, for they are first of all practical books, and are real working tools for the man whose success depends so much upon a sound fundamental knowledge of piano and player construction, acoustics, etc.

Modern Piano Tuning

A very comprehensive book covering principles and practices of tuning, regulation of piano action, elementary principles of pneumatics, general construction of player mechanisms, repair of old pianos or player mechanisms. 331 pages, $2.00.

ALBUS T. M. CO. LEASES NEW HOME

Well-known Louisville Concern Will Soon Move Into Attractive New Quarters

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 9.—The Albus Talking Machine Co., dealer in machines, records, cabinets and supplies, 528 Market street, announced recently that it has secured a lease on an attractive store in the Commercial Hotel Building, 408 East Market street. Extensive alterations will be made before the concern moves into the new quarters. The company has been in business here for the past twelve years and features Granby and Strand talking machines, as well as several lines of records, including the Ckeh, Gennett, Emerson and Black Swan.

SERVICE TO SONORA DEALERS

Sonora Jobbers in Greater New York Issuing Handsome Display Signs—Have Direct Sales Value to the Retailer of Talking Machines

Sonora dealers in Greater New York are receiving an exceptional form of co-operation from the Greater City Phonograph Co., New York, Signs That Are Distinctly Constructive and the Long Island Phonograph Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., Sonora jobbers in this territory. This co-operation consists of a series of handsome multi-colored window signs, which are furnished to the dealers free of charge.

These signs are changed regularly and Maurice Landay, president of the Greater City Phonograph Co., is personally responsible for the preparation of many of these attractive window signs. In a chat with The World he stated that these signs have proven a direct stimulus to sales and, as they feature something distinctive each month, their sales value can readily be determined. The accompanying illustration shows one of the latest signs featuring the new Imperial and Hepplewhite models of the Sonora, which have been received enthusiastically by the Sonora dealers throughout this territory.

NEW QUARTERS IN LEWISBURG, O.

LEWISBURG, O., April 10.—The Columbia Music Shop recently moved into larger quarters on the Public Square, this city, where a good line of Columbia Grafonolas and records is carried, together with a complete stock of sheet music and supplies. A department of instruction in piano, voice, etc., is conducted in connection with the store. E. Vernon Moore, the manager, is a member of the Avonmoor Entertainers, a popular local organization.

Ada Radel, daughter of M. Radel, proprietor of Radel's Music Shop, 991 Columbus avenue, New York City, Sonora and Columbia dealer, was married on April 8 to Max D. Rosenthal.

The Lyradion Console combination Radio and Phonograph complete with compartments for dry and storage batteries.

Price complete $485.00.

Other models from $275 up to $850.
Theatre models, $1075 to $2150.

Here is the new Lyradion Combination— radio and phonograph

All Lyradion outfits contain the remarkable Seabrook "Loud Speaker" horn, which created such extensive comment at the New York Radio Show.

The Lyradion reproduced the music of a dance orchestra 40 miles away so loud that 100 couples danced to it in the Hotel Pennsylvania Grill room on March 9th.

Lyradion upright and console models fitted with non-regenerating wireless receiving sets will be ready for delivery within sixty days—and we are now arranging for jobbing connections as well as dealer representation.

We are also ready to deliver right now upright cabinets which include "loud speaker horn" and amplifier, and which provide concealed compartments for both wet and dry batteries, switches, and all wire connections.

These cabinets will receive 2 stage Westinghouse R. C. set of which thousands have already been sold. They are completely wired and each terminal tagged—anyone can install his entire outfit in less than 20 minutes.

Owners of radio outfits are complaining of the "mussy" appearance of any outfit that is strewn over tables and floor—these cabinets are beautiful pieces of furniture and hide every accessory of the outfit. They connect to antennae and ground wires in the same way that an electric-driven phonograph connects to a base plug.

Remember also they include "loud speaker" horn and amplifier—they retail from $100 to $150 complete.

Why not sell these cabinets to owners of Westinghouse sets while you are waiting for complete Lyradion outfit? Make a profit on the radio craze right now.

Westinghouse dealers can sell both set and cabinet with all accessories for less than $275, including tubes, batteries, aerial, etc. If you want the agency for Lyradion "loud speaker" cabinets, combination consoles, or theatre outfits, get in touch with us immediately.

The Dodge Mfg. Co. is a million-dollar concern with an Aaa 1 rating, and stands back of everything we sell.

The complete Lyradion line will be shown in the May issue—watch for it. There is nothing like the Lyradion in America today. It is the instrument for the home, from the standpoint of beauty as well as performance.

Featuring the MUSICAL POSSIBILITIES of the TALKING MACHINE

[EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the eighteenth of a new series of articles by William Braid White, devoted to the various interesting opportunities which prevail in the domain of education for the retailer of talking machines. The subject is one of great interest and we commend these articles to the consideration of all who are devoting attention to the featuring and developing of the musical possibilities of the talking machine.]

REMEMBER THE INSTRUMENTS

During the entire history of music the great voices have held the stage of popular idolatry, while instrumentalists and composers have been relegated to inferior positions, if not entirely neglected. There has always been something about the great vocal parts in opera which has caught the public fancy, from the days of Peri to those of Verdi and Wagner. The great singer obtains, through intimate association with the mimic world of opera, an amount of garish display which the instrumentalist never can obtain. The result is that, with the unthinking mob of ordinary music lovers, the singer comes first and the rest are nowhere. Translated into terms of the talking machine industry, this simply means that the most easily sold records of high-class music are the records of great voices. A McCormack, a Caruso or a Farrar gains a fortune annually in royalties on his or her recordings, while the finest work of a Kreisler or a Casals attracts comparatively a very small fraction of the popularity the singers so easily gain.

Now, this is a very interesting fact in the talking machine business, and one which the retail merchants ought to consider. For, in point of fact, it is not an advantage but rather a disadvantage that the talking machine should be so much thought of, in respect of its higher manifestations, merely as a reproducer of voices. It is true that the popular side of the recording business is filled with band, orchestra and ensemble recordings of all kinds; but this does not alter the fact that the high-class instrumental recordings do not receive the attention they deserve.

Now, it is not a good thing when the high-class end of a business like ours rests upon one of its manifestations. Unless there is a general interest in all the features which the manufacturers are able to conceive, design and carry out, there will be no encouragement for these manufacturers to continue their good work. They will come to believe that it is not worth while trying to continue the fine work in certain directions which they began so courageously. And they may find commercial reasons for confining their activities to just what will sell most easily. Which would be a pity. It would be a pity from the point of view of the talking machine business in general, which cannot be maintained on a fad or a series of fads.

Pushing the Instrumentals

All of which leads to the observation that the instrumental recordings which are now available in all talking machine catalogs need more pushing than they commonly get. I am not here speaking of the highest-minded, keenest and wisest merchants when I make this observation. On the contrary, I am well aware how, in the great city where I live, there are talking machine retailers who do persistently and successfully play up to the very best and most intelligent trade, who display conspicuously and push persistently the best violin, 'cello, quartet and orchestral recordings. These merchants are wise in thus attracting to their counters those who otherwise might be more or less indifferent to the talking machine. But unfortunately these merchants are but few, and they do not represent a large fraction of the retail community.

I appeal to every talking machine merchant to make a study of the possibilities of the instrumental record side of his business. He will find in it so many fine and new things, so many suggestions for new ideas, so many musical possibilities that he will be both astonished and delighted. There is a general idea that instrumental recordings are not effective, as compared with voices; but this, I believe, is a great mistake. The fact is that the voice is just as difficult an instrument to record as the violin, and, in fact, more difficult on the whole. The art of vocal recording is very much the art of training the singer in the peculiar technique which is called for. Some of the greatest singers have never made good records, and per contra some singers of the second rank have done surpassingly good record work. On the other hand, the violin and the 'cello, to take two prominent examples, lend themselves with the utmost facility to the peculiarities of the recording wax and stylus, so that violinists and 'cellists who have accustomed themselves to the work soon learn to effect splendid reproductions.

Some Marvelous Recording

An excellent example of what I mean is to be found in the wonderful series of three records issued by the Victor Co. reproducing the three movements of the Concerto for Two Violins in D minor, by Sebastian Bach, as played by Kreisler and Zimbalist with string quartet accompaniment. These records represent, to my mind, an extraordinary achievement in the art of recording and, in fact, could scarcely be surpassed in any circumstances. Lest I should be accused of partiality, however, let me say that some of the best 'cello music I have ever heard has been by Julius Berger and Henry Hadley in the Okeh edition. And there are others I shall mention some other day which will prove to any reader that there is no monopoly in the art of fine instrumental recording.

I speak, however, of this Bach Double Concerto because it shows what can be done when two artists are content to give the necessary time and patience to achieve a fine permanent result. When so achieved we have a distinct acquisition, something added to the world's store of delights, something which the concert stage scarcely ever gives us and which otherwise at best only dwellers in the largest cities would ever be likely to have the opportunity of hearing. It is so beautiful, so serene, so heavenly, especially in the middle movement, that no person, no matter how untrained, who may possess the slightest feeling for musical expression, can fail to be entranced with it. It ought to sell better than any Caruso record ever made—not because Caruso had not a fine voice, but because no voice is ever so lovely as the tone of lovely violins played by real artists.

Violin Tone Not Spoiled

It is said that the tone of the violin and of the 'cello degenerates during the process of recording. This is not true. The very highest register of the violin undergoes, it is true, a little process of what may be called "scouring," whereby the upper partial tones which give the peculiar tang to the tone of the violin disappear and leave behind them a more fluty tone than one usually hears from a violin played directly to one's ear. But in the case of the 'cello even this very slight defect is not to be heard. Sometimes I think that the 'cello is the finest of all instruments in capacity for recording. Certainly some of the most artistic 'cellists of modern times have recorded their best work. Merchants and salesmen who do not know what is "in" the 'cello ought to come down to the store sometimes on Sundays, or stay during Summer Saturday afternoons when the doors are closed, just to get acquainted with these hidden treasures of their record bins.

Other Instrumental Beauties

Nor is the list to be closed here. There are the beauties of the string quartet, which is just now beginning to obtain the recognition it deserves. There are the many beauties and charms of flute, clarinet, horn and oboe which very few know about outside of such schools as possess and use educational records. And there are . . . but I could go on forever.

The point is just this: There are in every catalog of records dozens of neglected beauties, of hidden delights which the music lovers of each merchant's community would love to know about. But they must be told. Nor can they be told—at least, effectively—unless those who tell them are themselves in sympathy with what they are telling. Did one ever read anything so lifeless, so stupid, so futile as advertising talk on matters musical by a man who is not really in sympathy with the subjects he undertakes to treat?

In a word, if we are to bring out and feature the musical possibilities of the talking machine, let us remember that the obvious, the much advertised are not necessarily the best sellers or the best goods. There is always something in the catalogs on which to make a big selling if only we know enough to dig it up.

OCTAGONAL TONE-ARM IN DEMAND

William Phillips, president of the William Phillips Phono. Parts Co., New York City, manufacturer of tone arms and reproducers, reports a steady improvement in business. He calls particular attention to his octagonal tone arm, which has been in much demand from the time of its initial offering on the market. Mr. Phillips has had excellent results from the advertising campaign on this tone arm which he inaugurated in the columns of The Talking Machine World some months ago. In response to this publicity a large number of inquiries were developed. In most every instance the sample sent resulted in a substantial order.

Well-known Wholesale Man Appointed Manager of Local Okeh Distributing Branch—New Quarters Now Occupied by General Phono. Corp.'s New York Distributing Division

E. B. Shiddell, widely known in the wholesale field in the East and formerly an Okeh jobber in Boston, Mass., has been appointed manager of the New York distributing division of the General Phonograph Corp., which is a jobber of Okeh records in Greater New York territory. Mr. Shiddell brings to his new post an intimate knowledge of every phase of the talking machine business, and under his direction Okeh dealers in this territory will undoubtedly receive maximum service and co-operation.

In order to handle its rapidly increasing business the New York distributing division of the General Phonograph Corp. moves on April 24 from 25 West Forty-fifth street to 15 West Eighteenth street. The ground floor is being occupied at the new address, and the new quarters offer ample space for handling the requirements of the trade.

NEW OKEH JOBBERS IN NEW YORK

Bristol & Barber Appointed Okeh Distributors Will Institute Aggressive Sales Campaign

W. C. Fuhri, general sales manager of the Okeh record division of the General Phonograph Corp., New York, announced this week that Bristol & Barber, 3 East Fourteenth street, New York, had been appointed Okeh distributors. This concern, which is one of the leading wholesale houses in the East, is planning to inaugurate an intensive advertising campaign, featuring Okeh records, and its sales staff will do everything possible to co-operate with Okeh dealers in metropolitan territory. Okeh records will now have two jobbers in Greater New York, as the New York distributing branch of the General Phonograph Corp. will also serve the dealers in this territory.

ISHAM JONES IN JACKSON, MICH.

The Barnard Music Co., Jackson, Mich., which handles Brunswick phonographs and records, is making much capital of the forthcoming appearance in that city in concert of the Isham Jones Orchestra of Chicago, which will play in Jackson May 19, 20 and 21. In addition to newspaper advertising the company has sent out a number of circulars calling attention to the event.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Grand Phono & Piano Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE DIAMOND JUVENILE CONSOLE

This Is the Title of a Most Artistic Little Talking Machine Produced by the Diamond Products Corp.—Supplies Big Juvenile Want

The Diamond Products Corp., New York City, whose factories are at Oswego, N. Y., is announcing to the trade this month a small talking machine which is to be known as the Diamond Juvenile console, which it is expected will be received enthusiastically. The machine is built along the same lines as the higher priced consoles of this type, while the motor equipment is of a standard in keeping with the rest of the machine. No effort has been spared to make the machine throughout a quality product, and to inform the trade that it is not a toy but a legitimate machine in every respect. The cabinets are beautifully finished in two colors, French blue and ivory, with appropriate "diamond" designs on the cover, which presents a very attractive appearance.

In conjunction with this Juvenile console the company is manufacturing an entire equipment for a dealer "kiddie booth," which consists of a table, one arm-chair and three regular chairs. The size of this furniture is designed to accommodate children and is finished in the same colors as the console talking machine. The idea of a "kiddie booth" is the result of a thorough investigation of the field by General Manager H. B. Foster, who for some time has felt that a demand existed for this novel feature of the average talking machine dealer's business.

A special "kiddie booth" in the talking machine dealer's store has many advantages, as it attracts many youngsters with their parents, and it is the idea of this company to show the dealer how a booth of this sort can be used to make real sales; for instance, parents coming in with their children with the intention of buying a talking machine, or even records, can do so in quiet and comfort by placing the children in the care of some one in this "kiddie booth." Oftentimes when parents are purchasing a large machine the small console type machine can be presented to them and sold for the use of the children, thereby leaving the better machine for the use of adults alone, insuring it against damage by the children.

J. B. Price, Middle Western representative of the company, on his return from an extended trip in this territory, stated that dealers everywhere were very enthusiastic about this little machine and the juvenile furniture designed to go with it. Dealers stated that this was the first combination of this kind ever offered the trade, and that all indications pointed to a very healthy demand. Mr. Price is planning to leave at an early date for another trip, which will take in the Southern States and from there is to spend some time in the States of the Northwest.

Lee Conover, New England representative, is leaving shortly for a trip to the Far West for the purpose of introducing these new products to the trade in that territory, and on his return he is scheduled to visit the New England States, where he is well known and where he expects to build quite a business.

GODOWSKY'S FAREWELL RECITAL

Leopold Godowsky, the noted pianist and Brunswick artist, is now completing his coast-to-coast tour. He will return to New York about May 1 to give his farewell recital at Carnegie Hall on May 3. This will be his first and last concert in New York this year. In fact, this will be his last recital in the United States for several years to come. He will spend June, July and August wintering in South America and from there will sail for the Orient, where he will make an extended tour in China, Japan, India and other Asiatic countries.

NEW IDEA IN NATIONAL CAMPAIGN

Columbia Advertising in Newspapers Localized and Adapted to Local Conditions—Five Types of Copy in Series—Plan Well Received by Trade

The advertising department of the Columbia Graphophone Co. has just instituted a new idea in Columbia national advertising that is meeting with an enthusiastic reception from Columbia dealers.

The details of this new advertising idea provide for the preparation of five types of copy in connection with the new Columbia record lists. In each type of copy the lists, of course, remain the same, but alongside of the list is placed copy that features dance music, song hits, instrumental opera and concert music, "blues" and sacred quartets and old-fashioned melodies.

DEALERS TELL OF INCREASED RECORD SALES

Installation of Seabrook Concert Grande in Theatres, Backed by Mutual Service, Brings Results That Call Forth High Praise From Dealers—Some Interesting Testimony

MISHAWAKA, IND., April 8.—As announced in last month's issue of The Talking Machine World, the Mutual Music division of the Dodge Mfg. Co., of this city, attained phenomenal success with the introduction of its service to talking machine dealers in South Bend, Ind. Kenyon W. Mix, director of this division, who personally supervised all of the details incidental to the installation of the Seabrook Concert Grande in the Blackstone Theatre at South Bend, has received interesting letters from the dealers, testifying to the splendid results that they received from this unique sales and publicity plan.

The C. W. Copp Music Shop, handling Columbia and Okeh products, wrote Mr. Mix as follows, the first letter being dated February 14 and the second letter dated March 2:

"It gives me great pleasure to tell you that the results from playing Okeh records at the Blackstone this week far exceeded our expectations. I was frankly skeptical until 24 hours after the first performance where Okeh records were played, when our stock was so depleted by sales that I phoned the Chicago jobber for replacements. Later in the week I found it necessary to make a personal trip to Chicago to bring back more records to fill the demand.

Signed) "C. W. Copp."

"Supplementing my recent letter relative to results obtained from demonstrating Okeh records at the Blackstone I want to add that we have just finished our week at the theatre with Columbia records, which we also handle. It is interesting to note that, while I am still filling orders on call for Okeh records played two weeks ago, I have also practically doubled my sales for Columbia records this week. Your method of presenting new record releases to phonograph owners is a mighty good one, and I certainly advise every Okeh and Columbia dealer to take it up in order to get a bigger share of the local record business in his city.

Signed) "C. W. Copp."

C. J. Lenhard, of the Brunswick Shop, at 113 North Main street, South Bend, Ind., gave Mr. Mix the following interesting details as to the success of the Mutual Music service:

All of our advertising contains this excellent advice—
"Be Sure Your Walnut is ALL Walnut."

AMERICAN WALNUT
PHONOGRAPH CABINET, CONSOLE DESIGN.

Think of the Big Selling Value
In the Period Design Cabinet that is Made of

AMERICAN WALNUT

"The Cabinet-wood of the Ages."

Imagine the effect on the customer's mind when you show a Walnut cabinet and remind him (or her) of the vast number of famous pieces of furniture made of Walnut hundreds of years ago and which are still in perfect, serviceable condition.

Most people of the type who buy "period" machines know that Walnut is "the heirloom wood." Those who don't know it are rapidly learning the fact from our advertising.

And if you want to show them visual evidence, hand them a copy of the "Walnut Book," which is illustrated with many of these historical examples.

Have you read that book yourself? It contains a lot of valuable information. We will gladly send you a copy.

AMERICAN WALNUT MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION
Room 1022, 616 South Michigan Boulevard
Chicago, U. S. A.

"You asked me to put on paper some of the enthusiasm I expressed to you in the shop regarding your Mutual Music service between the Blackstone Theatre and ourselves. I rather imagine I am expressing the opinion of all the local phonograph dealers when I tell you that since the big phonograph started playing dance music in the theatre my record sales have jumped considerably—in fact, after the second day we showed an advance of $50 per day, which has now proven to be a permanent increase. One striking feature of this new business is that the person buying the record does not ask to hear it played; they say, 'I've heard it at the Blackstone,' although my sales people have little difficulty in getting them to listen to other selections not played at the theatre.

"Before the service was installed the usual question of a prospective customer was, 'What's new this month?' His purchases were made by the process of elimination of those records he did not care for—to-day he comes in to make a definite purchase by name and will listen to others. This so conserves the time of my clerks that I am enabled to handle, with the same force, the six new demonstration booths which I found it necessary to install since the service was started. The comment of men and women has been exceptionally fine and has come from the best people in South Bend. Women particularly have expressed their approval of the new variety of musical program presented by the Blackstone.

"Many people who had not realized the true value of Brunswick music have become regular customers after hearing the records played in public, and invariably say, 'I had no idea that a Brunswick record was so good.' The point here is this. It costs me a considerable amount to write a letter asking people to come in and hear Brunswick records, and this of course is the line of greatest resistance. I now advertise, 'Go to the Blackstone and hear Brunswick music.' The theatre advertises, 'Come to the Blackstone, see a good picture and hear Brunswick music.' To them this is just another reason to go to a place of amusement, and in the end I actually accomplish my purpose more effectively because 'Hearing is Buying' when you are talking about Brunswick records.

"I have tried to express my enthusiasm 'on paper,' as you requested, but I guess I could have summed it all up in this sentence, 'Mutual Music has obtained more publicity, more business and more prestige for Brunswick in South Bend than any other one idea I have ever used. I'm satisfied and feel it is worth every cent it costs.

Signed) "C. J. LENHARD."

Mr. Mix also has on file a congratulatory letter from the Blackstone Theatre Corp., South Bend, and another interesting communication from the Majestic Garden at Kalamazoo, Mich., which also co-operated with the Mutual Music service and installed a Seabrook Concert Grande phonograph.

Vice-president of Sonora Phonograph Co. Attends Informal Dealer Meeting

Frank J. Coupe, vice-president and sales director of the Sonora Phonograph Co., visited Milwaukee recently to attend an informal convention of Sonora dealers held under the auspices of Yahr & Lange, Sonora jobbers at Milwaukee. This meeting was very interesting, as the discussions were noteworthy for their practical application to the dealer's problems. The reports by the various dealers as to business conditions indicate that there is a steady improvement in practically every industry in Wisconsin territory and Sonora dealers are making plans for an active year.

QUALITIPHONE GROWS IN FAVOR

The Qualitiphone Sales Corp., New York, manufacturer of the small table phonograph known as the Qualitiphone, reports that this little machine has been winning considerable favor with dealers throughout the country. In the short time it has been on the market it states that dealers have found that it is readily marketable and it hopes to have it distributed throughout the entire country before the Summer season is in full swing. William R. O'Brien, general manager of the company, stated that several prominent jobbers throughout the country are negotiating to handle this little machine in their respective territories.

(Special Correspondence to The World)

CHICAGO, ILL., April 10.—The Q R S Co., manufacturer of music rolls, has been appointed manufacturing agent for the product of the Chicago Radio Laboratory, which will thus market its instruments and equipment through the music industry.

In marketing Zenith products, the Q R S Co. will devote practically all of its profits on these goods to publicity for both Q R S rolls and Zenith. The Q R S Co. is fortunate in that when building its New York and Chicago factories it purchased much additional ground, which gives plenty of room for expansion in the manufacturing of radio equipment, etc.

COLUMBIA CREDIT PLAN ANNOUNCED

Creditors' Committee of Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co. Arrange for Indebtedness to Be Frozen for Three Years—Important Move

The Columbia Graphophone Mfg. Co. creditors' committees have worked out a plan under which its indebtedness will be frozen from April 1, 1922, to August 1, 1925, after deduction of an amount not in excess of aggregate bank deposits on September 15, 1921. The plan has been approved, by the banking creditors, the merchandise and the supply creditors, it was said yesterday. The debt is about $20,000,000 and interest and principal, if due, will be deferred for three years.

The plan calls for adjustment of interest on all indebtedness to April 1 of this year. Provision is made for the appointment of a committee to represent the debt, which will be known as the readjustment committee and composed of M. M. Buckner, Benjamin Joy, J. C. Neff, William C. Dickerman and G. Herman Kinnicut.

DEATH OF HUGO H. TRAEGER

Hugo H. Traeger, proprietor of Traeger's Music House, at 115 Wright street, Stapleton, S. I., died on Tuesday morning, April 4, at his home in Richmond Borough, New York City. Mr. Traeger was a practical piano man, highly esteemed for his ability in that special field and had built up a very fine business in Staten Island during the past twelve years, virtually carrying everything in the musical line from pianos to Victor talking machines. His passing has occasioned considerable regret. A widow and three children survive.

COMPLAINT IN TONE-ARM PATENT SUIT IS DISMISSED

Judge Sessions in U. S. District Court in Grand Rapids Hands Down Decree Dismissing Bill of Complaint of Victor Co. Against General Phonograph Corp. Charging Patent Infringement

Judge C. W. Sessions, in the U. S. District Court in Grand Rapids, Mich., on April 5, handed down the following decree and decision in the action brought by the Victor Talking Machine Co. against the General Phonograph Corp. and the General Phonograph Corp. of Illinois for alleged violation of the Johnson Tone-Arm Patents Nos. 814,786 and 814,848. The original bill of complaint was filed in Grand Rapids on November 1, 1920.

In his decision Judge Sessions said: "Applying the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals of this Circuit in the case of Cheney Talking Machine Co. vs. Victor Talking Machine Co., it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that none of the defendant's machines infringes the claims of the patents here in suit. Hence a decree will be entered in each case dismissing the bill of complaint with costs to the defendant to be taxed."

The decree itself read: "The cause having heretofore been heard upon pleadings and proofs, argued by counsel and submitted; upon consideration of the premises, it is now ordered, adjudged and decreed that the bill of complaint of the said complainant be and hereby is dismissed, and that the said defendants do recover against the said plaintiff their costs in this cause, to be taxed, and that the said defendants have execution thereof."

The finding of the court is regarded as a most important one, and has been awaited with great interest by members of the trade.

The W. W. W. Staylor Music Co., of Huntingdon, Pa., will open a branch store on West Pennsylvania avenue, Mt. Union, Pa., as soon as alterations of the quarters have been completed. Talking machines, records and musical accessories will be handled.

DEALERS DISPLAYING FAITH IN FUTURE CONDITIONS

Rayburn Clark Smith, President of the Unit Construction Co., Presents Convincing Evidence That Dealers Are Preparing for Better Business and Are Making a Strong Appeal to Quality Buyers

There is no longer room for doubt that 1922 will see a return to normal in the talking machine trade. Unmistakable evidence is furnished by the activity of the leading dealers in preparing for better business, which they clearly foresee as resulting from a well-planned appeal to the quality buyer.

If there is still a lingering doubt in anyone's mind or a desire for tangible evidence of successful piano store in Athol for some time. In addition to this entirely new Victor store, M. Steinert & Sons Co. has made arrangements to place an entire new Unico equipment in its Lowell store consisting of six record rooms, a player room, several counters and racks with a capacity of 10,000 records. The Steinert stores have also improved their Unico facilities in Waterbury, Fall River, New Bedford and Spring-jurisdiction of R. E. Wells, general manager, and C. S. Browning, who is well known in the trade, will have charge of the talking machine end of their business. They will handle Brunswick phonographs in each of the stores mentioned and very complete Unico equipment has been installed in each branch. Mr. Wells and Mr. Browning are looking forward to big results in each of these locations.

Another complete equipment, which was installed in Parkersburg, W. Va., is that shown in the illustration of O. J. Stout & Co. The Standard Talking Machine Co. of Pittsburgh has placed the Victor line with the Stout Co. Ex-

The illustration on the left-hand side is that of J. G. Heidner & Son, Inc., of Springfield, Mass.; in the center is that of O. J. Stout & Co., Parkersburg, W. Va., and on the right-hand side is that of Z. L. White Co., of Columbus, Ohio.

the upward trend, it is only necessary to have a chat with Rayburn Clark Smith, president of the Unit Construction Co. The record of recent Unico accomplishments demonstrates the dealers' faith in future conditions.

Mr. Smith reports that activity in the trade seems well divided between new operations and expansion of present establishments to new locations and improved facilities. He gave as an example some recent changes of interest.

The well-known New England house of M. Steinert & Sons Co. has made improvements of both classes mentioned above. It has just opened a new Victor department in its Athol store, consisting of three Unico demonstration rooms, together with rack and counter equipment. This is a new proposition as far as Victor merchandise is concerned, although it has had a very field. Another Unico equipment in New England is that of Heidner & Sons Co., in Springfield. The best idea of it can be obtained from the illustration. John Clark, secretary of the Heidner Co., is in direct charge of this new operation. He is highly pleased with the new equipment and the exceptional speed with which it was installed. Heidner & Sons, as may be recalled, have for some years operated a very successful music store in Holyoke, where they also have complete Unico equipment.

That it might not be supposed that New England carries off all the honors on equipment, Rayburn Clark Smith told of arrangements recently concluded with Steinway & Sons for placing Unico equipment in their branches at Columbus, Cincinnati, Dayton, Charleston and Huntington. The Steinway stores are under the cellent results are predicted for this new dealer.

There are now being installed for the J. Boiarsky Jewelry Co., at Charleston, record and player demonstration rooms, record, player roll and sheet music departments, together with musical instrument cases, enabling Mr. Boiarsky to handle a full line of musical merchandise. A fine opening for Mr. Boiarsky's store is looked forward to within the next few weeks.

Another beautiful installation which is shown herewith is that of Z. L. White Co., in Columbus. [This equipment predicates larger business.

Space does not permit of detailed information on all of the departments which Mr. Smith showed as concrete evidence of business revival, but its distribution throughout the entire country may be visualized from the fact that they have within the last two months placed equipment with the Christine Jewelry & Music Shop, of Bangor, Pa.; Cheyne Studio, Hampton, Va.; F. A. North Piano Co., Philadelphia; the Talking Machine Shop, Hagerstown, Md.; M. Nathan Estate, Cambridge, Md.; Halle Bros., Cleveland, O.; Troup Bros., Harrisburg, Pa.; Bodenschatz Drug Co., Lemont, Ill.; John Throgmorton, Flora, Ill.; T. P. and B. H. Azpell, Ardmore, Pa.; B. B. Todd, Chestnut Street Store, Philadelphia, Pa.; W. E. Wyeth, Newark, O.; The Fair Department Store, Chicago, Ill.; Justine Bros., Gary, Ind.; Justine Bros., Cicero, Ill.; The Music Shop, Lexington, Ky.; H. A. Taylor, Columbia, S. C.; M. M. Palmenteri, Port Washington, L. I.; Werner's Supply Co., Mohnton, Pa.; Sherman, Clay & Co., Vallejo, Cal.; L. J. Meyerberg Co., San Francisco, Cal.

Mr. Smith refers to this record as indicating that the sales and service branches of the Unit Construction Co. are carrying the message of Unico service to the trade in a very energetic manner. Unico branches situated in New York, Chicago, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver and London, England, have been established to give prompt and efficient service to the trade and the increasing demand for their sales engineering service is an indication of its worth. The latest addition to the sales and service branches is the one in London, England. The English trade, like the American, is experiencing a steady upward movement and in the future Unico service in all of its ramifications will be at the disposal of the English trade at the London branch.

Business Shows Signs of Improvement—Quick Settlement of Labor Troubles Necessary to Trade Revival—Many Interesting Exhibits at Leipzig Fair—Otto Heineman Visits London—Third Annual Dinner of Gramophone Association—Plan Music Festival—The Ideal Home Exhibition Results in Gramophone Business—Artistic Displays Predominated—New Zonophone Records—Trade News of the Month

LONDON, E. C., ENGLAND, April 4.—While there has been no great improvement in trade since my last report general business conditions certainly seem a little more buoyant. This may be the outcome of the British Industries and Ideal Home exhibitions. On the other hand, it may be, as I am inclined to think, the first breath of that general business revival which, sooner or later, must blossom forth in real earnest. Progress is slow, nevertheless, at this time, just when we might have congratulated ourselves upon a certain stability of labor, in the absence of disputes, we are confronted with an upheaval in an important branch of industry—the Engineering World. The merits of the case do not so much concern us as the effect exerted upon an already impoverished community. Unless this matter is quickly settled, and at the moment of writing the prospect is faint, commerce in every department will feel its paralyzing influence. Hopes of trade revival engendered by somewhat better conditions in the gramophone world the last few weeks are by this labor lock-out dashed to the ground.

Whatever the position is at the time of writing it is a welcome sign that the gramophone trade has held up well during the last few weeks. A very fair business has been done by the mail-order houses and, in most cases, the public has taken full advantage of sales bargains offered by several big London stores. Among the manufacturers and jobbers easier conditions prevail, both machine and record sales having been quite good, circumstances and time of year considered. Coming to the retailers, there is no doubt they have experienced a hard time individually. The fight for trade is necessarily very keen and, of course, in centers of industry where unemployment is greatest gramophone sales are not too free despite a certain amount of price-cutting.

The immediate future trade prospects must be regarded as of an unknown value, pending a settlement of various industrial disputes.

Doings at the Leipzig Fair

This year's Leipzig Messe, which, commercially, lasted about five days, is described by English newspaper correspondents as something approaching a failure, notwithstanding the fact that some reports place the number of visitors as high as 150,000. Doubtless, many of these were merely on pleasure bent. In several sections exhibitors quickly booked orders to the fullest possible extent of the available supplies. But owing to restricted supplies, due to economic confusion in Germany, exhibitors were unable to guarantee date of delivery or accept orders at fixed prices.

That which most interests my readers, i. e., the gramophone and musical instrument exhibits, call for special mention. The principal gramophone displays were made by the Lindstrom concern, the Gramophon Co. (Germany), the Poly-phonwerke and a new firm named the Vox Co. These firms made a fine display of pedestal cabinets and all strongly featured new models of electric motors. As usual, the Lindstrom display attracted very wide attention. In the same building were housed the exhibits of the Odeon and Beka concerns, which are associated with Messrs. Lindstrom. Their combined exhibits included many fine models of machines which, as my correspondent describes, are especially suitable for the English market. The firm's new motor—a combination of the best features of German, American and Swiss models—was very much admired and I understand that an exclusive arrangement was completed for the sale of a large quantity in England. Of this transaction more, no doubt, will be heard in due course.

The display of the Polyphon and Gramophon companies included a very attractive array of machines constructed on lines that probably appeal more to the English taste than other makes, this being, it is said, due to the fact that they have so many models similar to those of the English Gramophone Co. I am informed that a special exhibit featured by this combined concern was a patented gramophone of unique design, which reproduces records with such wonderful fidelity as to actually deceive. Details of this machine are not available pending completion of certain patent registrations. A combined electric and spring motor was another attractive exhibit by this firm. The idea of the dual power is that failure of the electric current would call into use the spring motor and vice versa.

A brave show of machines, records and accessories

sories was made by the new Vox Co. The most interesting point about their instruments is that the tone is directed through a central chamber and evenly distributed from all sides of the machine. Their records are described as of a very good standard of quality.

Other exhibits of interest were made by the Favorit, Triumphone, Adlerphone and Holzweizig, and, of course, an extensive array of tone arms, sound boxes, horns and other parts and accessories were noticeable.

Apart from the strong featuring of electric motors, manufacturers seemed to be developing along standard lines to the exclusion of the usual novelties one expects to meet with at Leipzig.

Quite a goodly number of traders from England visited the Fair, including Mr. Bilantz, C. Howell, Geo. Murdoch, A. J. Balcombe, R. Willis, W. Cooper, Otto Ruhl, Mr. Duwe (Manchester), Mr. Wilkinson (Glasgow), Mr. Gilbert (Sheffield) and representatives of Messrs. Richardsons and the Johnson Talking Machine Co.

Mr. Heineman's European Trip

At the office of A. J. Balcombe, Ltd., this city, I had the pleasure of an interview with Otto Heineman, who spent a day or so in London on his way to the Continent. As president of the General Phonograph Corp., New York, Mr. Heineman is unquestionably an authority on matters relating to the gramophone industry and his remarks are therefore of very great interest. He ascribes the bad time experienced, at least in America, as being due, in part, to industrial expansion at a time when the situation demanded rather a conservative policy than otherwise. To a great extent this viewpoint is applicable to business undertakings the world over.

Regarding the talking machine situation in America I found Mr. Heineman quite optimistic. He is a man of broad views and of vast experience in our industry in many countries, and I gathered that in his considered judgment the American phonograph trade is once again making progress toward a definite revival of activity.

In the course of our conversation Mr. Heineman said: "It is true that the American phonograph industry has passed through a very severe crisis, but, thanks to the wise leadership of American financiers, a panic was avoided. Over-expansion of the industry resulted in the market being flooded with 'stencil' machines which, at one time, could be counted in thousands. There are still many of these machines about, but their numbers are diminishing. Dealer stocks are now entirely exhausted and the trade is still much disorganized in consequence.

"The machine of the future," continued Mr. Heineman, "is, in my opinion and that of the leading companies, what we call the 'console' type. This class is strongly featured by the chief concerns as it is the quality product alone that counts with the American public. There is no opportunity in America for cheap European goods."

Mr. Heineman had much to say pertaining to the record field of trade endeavor on your side. "There has been a fairly general reduction of prices, and though there are many records selling at 50 cents, they are not of leading make. Some of the department stores sell records as low as 44 cents; they are of obscure brand. It is, in my opinion, a short-lived policy and cannot last because, in the main, the American public is buying on a well-advertised trade-mark rather than on the influence of cheap prices. The American public is a great music-loving public and it demands a high-grade product." This thought probably suggested to Mr. Heineman that "the American record was generally of a higher musical quality and manufacture than European makes." Well, I have heard others say the same.

On the subject of American trade prospects, Mr. Heineman was optimistically of the opinion that "there is good expectation of a satisfactory recovery from the crisis through which we have passed. There is a noticeable decrease of unemployment and the natural products of the country are now fetching much better prices. This will help to reconstruct the buying power of the American people and I believe that after the dark days of our industry there is a great future before us."

Mr. Heineman visited the Leipzig messe, and, after a look around the continental trade centers, planned to return to the States about the end of March.

Third Dinner of Gramophone Association

By the presence of 160 members a record attendance was achieved at the third dinner of the Association of Gramophone and Musical Instrument Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers, held on March 1 at Frascati's, London. President Cooksey occupied the chair. It was a very successful function, gastronomically and otherwise. Peculiar to this Association is a spirit of fellowship and good will, which, largely carried over throughout the year, helps to a sympathetic understanding in matters of common interest and elimination of anything in the nature of friction.

Proposing the toast of "The Association," Alexander Dow said (in part): "Each group of the Federation is working in sympathy with the great combination of interests that the Federation represents. I look upon this Association as the mainspring of music trade endeavor. The gramophone is doing a fine work in the schools and homes of England as a musical educator of great value."

In reply the president thanked Mr. Dow for the generous reference to himself. "The Association gave maximum service at a minimum cost; in fact, its service was unique in value and scope." Stress was laid upon the useful information supplied to members; it entailed a lot of work for their secretary, Mr. Timms, "to whom," said the president, "much of the success of the Association was due." Reference to the Federation's funds revealed that the Gramophone Association headed the list with subscriptions (given and promised) of over

£3,000. "A very proud position to occupy," said Mr. Cooksey. Touching upon the difficult times through which the industry had passed, the speaker said it was a notable fact that during the last twelve months there had not been a single instance of bankruptcy among members of the Association! The moral to outside firms is to join up.

Sir George Croydon Marks, C. B. E., M. P., coupled with his toast—"The Federation"—its energetic organizing director, Lieut.-Col. R. H. Tatton. "Federation propaganda," said Sir George, "was undoubtedly good business—there could be no great demand for music if we did not educate the people—music contributed to their happiness and promoted that business from which they were all out to reap the benefits."

Lieut.-Col. Tatton made a vigorous reply and wound up with an expression of opinion that in contributing to the Federation its chairman, Louis Sterling, the Gramophone Association had contributed something more valuable than £3,000.

Frank Samuel proposed the toast of "The Visitors," to which Herbert Marshall replied.

Due tribute was accorded to Mr. Cooksey by Mr. Sterling, vice-president of the Association, and appreciative response made.

The musical program of the evening was thoroughly good and well arranged.

Another Music Trade Exhibition

The occasion of the Musical Festival period—June 9 to July 8—at the Crystal Palace, London, has been thought an appropriate time to arrange for an exhibition of music and musical instruments. The scheme is backed by the Federation of British Music Industries after "very careful consideration by the Trade Committee." Only goods of wholly British manufacture can be exhibited. The Palace management intends to allocate all net profit from space-letting to advertising the fair.

There can be no doubt as to the value of this proposed exhibition, as it furnishes a good opportunity of giving to a large and essentially musical class of public practical demonstrations of the great progress made in every section of British musical productions. On the other hand I know that the trade, broadly speaking, is particularly keen upon the organization of a purely trade exhibition some time early in September. It is felt that this is really the best and most profitable time for exhibiting new season's goods, just when dealers are most likely to place good orders. Considerable disappointment was expressed that the efforts of the Federation to secure a show at Olympia in August or September fell through owing to that center not being available.

At the British Industries Fair

With something like over three miles of gangway, it was a foregone conclusion that the British Industries Fair, which has just terminated, would prove a big attraction to many thousands of traders. Almost every department of commerce was represented, either at the London or the Provincial sections. Trade visitors mostly from London and the provincial centers of industry largely outnumbered the comparatively few buyers from overseas, though commercial representatives from different European countries were fairly well in evidence.

The musical instrument section comprised some thirty firms—a very poor representation of British industry. The chief reason assigned for this sparse display must be associated with the fact that results at the last exhibition were disappointing to many of the firms who had taken space, but coupled with this is the veto placed upon the exhibition by the Federation of British Music Industries, which had objected to the exhibition of products, pianos in particular, not wholly manufactured in England. The result was that many British houses refrained from taking space. Personally, I agree with this attitude, though, as far as concerns piano exhibits, a very small percentage were built entirely or in part of foreign components. It is good news, however, that the Board of Trade has now accepted the dictum of the Federation in regard to the exclusion of instruments not wholly of British manufacture.

In the gramophone section I observed apparatus of American manufacture and machines whose only claim to British were the cabinets. This, I take it, is entirely foreign to an exhibition supposedly held in the interests of British industry. Some of the gramophone exhibitors found things just a trifle slack, but with actual orders booked and the great value of the publicity derived by trade inquiries I am of the opinion that the B. I. F. can honestly be regarded as an unqualified success for most of the exhibitors whose names, by the way, appeared in these columns last month.

The Ideal Home Exhibition

As usual, this exhibition, held at Olympic during March, proved highly popular. The great element of value derived by manufacturers lay in the opportunity of directly interesting the public by ocular demonstration of their exhibits. Most of the firms exhibiting were certainly pleased with the business results, and that, after all, is the main thing.

Among gramophone exhibits special mention should be made of the beautiful art period "Algraphones" by Alfred Graham & Co., Crofton Park, London, S. E. As much as $3,750 (£750) could be paid for a true-to-the-period model. These instruments combine many new features of construction and are a real revelation of build and tone-quality. In every way distinctive, "Algraphones" certainly represent a high achievement in the gramophone world, and even so, I am given to understand that further big developments may be expected within the near future. The company already lists about sixty different models and there are many more on the way, which will figure at prices within the purse limits of "the man in the street." In other words, Messrs. Graham are out to satisfy all and every possible demand. Behind a wonderful organization is a wonderfully keen brain. Alfred Graham has done far more in the post-war development of our industry than anyone I know of.

Another exhibit of general admiration was a gramophone baptized under the name of "Tretone Separaphone," described as "The Gramophone with a Tone Filter." Its fidelity of reproduction certainly justifies all the praise showered upon it by visitors and I am satisfied that the Tretone Separaphone is well on the way to the establishment of a deservedly good reputation in the trade as an instrument of distinctive merit.

Messrs. Perophone, Ltd., occupied a prominent stand upon which a very pleasing display of the now famous "Grippa" machines attracted considerable attention. This instrument made its bow to the trade as a portable, but developments have since taken place in the introduction of some new small pedestal models of period design and of dainty dimensions. The general verdict was entirely favorable to the conception, tone quality and volume of these beautiful little "Grippa" gramophones, so much so that quite an appreciable amount of business resulted, I understand. H. J. Cullum has evidently given considerable thought to the production and correct period designs of the new Grippas, which have won an instant success.

Brief Notes of Interest

The latest sound box production here is made of solid silver with ivory diaphragm. In tone it is exceedingly mellow. The retail price is £7 10s. Mr. Russell, of the Gramophone Exchange, this city, fathers this unique line and he tells me that orders have already been booked.

The question of equity in exchanging records as between manufacturer and dealer is again to the forefront by the arrival of the exchange period. It's a matter that the Gramophone Association of Retail Dealers have in hand. I believe that a common policy will be reached. That's what the trade most urgently requires.

Messrs. Pathé have gone to the public with an offer to exchange old or broken Pathé records against purchase of three times the value at their dealers' establishments. Few agree that the three to one basis of exchange is an acceptable proposition.

Appleton's of Leeds has made an important move by absorbing Long's (Newcastle-on-Tyne), Ltd., Columbia jobbers, and the Wholesale Gramophone Supply Co., Ltd., Zonophone jobbers, also of Newcastle. In trade circles this big concentration of interests is regarded as certain to result advantageously for Columbia and Zonophone dealers.

The Limit Engineering Co., maker of tone arms and various gramophone fittings, announces removal from Southwark street to larger premises at Albion street, Kings Cross, London, N. 1.

Mr. Balcombe, who is associated here in the "Motor of Quality" sales interests of the Otto Heineman Corp., has registered as A. J. Balcombe, Ltd., gramophone manufacturers, capital £10,000, office, 51 Tabernacle street, E. C. 2.

Some Interesting New Zonophone Records

Among the new Zonophone records is included one by Sir Harry Lauder, whose popularity in the States is probably no less than it is here. On G. O. 56, he makes a noteworthy recording of "The Lass o' Killiecrankie," an old favorite which, to the writer, is far more acceptable in every way than the obverse title on this record, "That's the Reason Noo I Wear a Kilt," well recorded though it be.

On the ordinary list are some good titles: 2200, "Cuckoo's Call," waltz, and "Ta Whoo," fox-trot, by the Black Diamond Band; 2202, "Hawaiian Dreams," waltz, and "Last Night," one-step, two very pretty items by the Peerless Dance Orchestra; 2208, "When Ma Piccaninny Died," and "A Little Coon's Prayer," by Miss Jessie Broughton, are the sort of songs that sell; they are somewhat mournful; 2203 bears a couple of extremely pleasing ballads, "Song of the Bow," and our old favorite, "Devonshire Cream and Cider," both sung to perfection by Foster Richardson; 2211, "My Mammy," and "If You Show a Little Love for Me," by The Two Rascals completes a satisfactory program.

Garrard Pays Tribute to the Press

It was a grateful thought on the part of the Garrard Engineering & Manufacturing Co., Ltd., to invite members of the Press to lunch with the directors and executive staff of the firm. C. E. Newbiggin, chairman of the Garrard Co., presided. He told an interesting story of his firm's war activities, and how it had since switched over to the manufacture of the Garrard gramophone motors. The change had involved installation of special machinery capable of working to 1-

2,000th part of an inch. It had determined to produce a British motor of reliability and credit to the industry. In which respect it has achieved a distinct success. Incidentally, I might mention that at the British Industries Fair, the fine Garrard exhibit attracted the special attention of His Majesty, the King, who spent some few minutes of his long tour of the fair at the Garrard stand inquiring into and examining the Garrard mechanism.

Mr. Newbiggin expressed very sincere thanks to the Press—"it could not be bought, and its voluntary support of the Garrard enterprise merited the unqualified gratitude of himself and his co-directors." Lt. Colonel R. H. Tatton proposed the toast of "The Press" in felicitous terms, averring that "no section of the community is more devoted to the cause of rehabilitating British industry than the British Press." And so say all of us! The toast acknowledged, the whole company afterwards proceeded to the British Industries Fair and inspected the Garrard motor exhibits.

"His Master's Voice" New Celebrity Issues

Announced as a fine trade tonic are the celebrity records listed on the Gramophone April program. Contributions by Tetrizzini, Battistini, Heifetz and other famous artists should certainly help to the making of special sales. In other sections, records by the Symphony Orchestra, the Beatrice Hewitt Piano Quartet, Hamilton Harris, etc., represent big trade possibilities for "His Master's Voice" dealers.

"America's Premier Trade Journal"

My reference in the February issue to the smart editorial style of advertisement used by our friend Thos. Edens Osborne, of Belfast City, is, I observe, quoted verbatim in a recent issue of the Belfast Telegraph. Due recognition is, of course, given The Talking Machine World; in fact, the paragraph bears the caption: "America's Premier Trade Journal." I suspect that Mr. Osborne knows not a little about this report!

Mention of Mr. Osborne reminds me that at a meeting of the Queen's University French Society the whole of Corneille's "Le Cid" in five acts, as recited by the actors of the Theatre Francais in Paris, was performed on the gramophone to a distinguished audience. The members were unanimous in their appreciation of the gramophone as a most valuable adjunct to the teaching of modern languages. Perfectly demonstrated and lent by Mr. Osborne, the machine and records were voted a great success.

H. A. Moore & Co. to Represent Unit Co.

An announcement of much interest to the trade in the United Kingdom has just been made by the Unit Construction Co., of this city. Arrangements have just been concluded whereby H. A. Moore & Co., Ltd., will be the sales agents for Unico products in the United Kingdom and will carry the message of better stores, better business and greater profits.

The Oxford street store of the Gramophone Co., Ltd., is ample introduction to the Unit Construction Co., but it is well worth mentioning, however, that its service is by no means confined to such comprehensive installations as this. As a matter of fact, in the States, Unico service is counted as indispensable to the small dealers as its effectiveness to the larger ones. The distinctive value of sectional construction enables the dealer who needs one room to-day to become the larger dealer of to-morrow. Colonel Moore, who is now in the States getting first-hand information as to the exceptional results which accrue from well planned Unico equipped stores, upon his return will be able to place Unico service at the command of dealers.

Winner News

J. E. Hough, Ltd., announce a fine new list of Winner records by such talented artists as Talbot O'Farrell, Walter Williams, Jay Laurier, H. M. Scots Guards Band, Corelli Wendeatt's Orchestra. Their contributions are topical and enjoy a quick sales response.

With this record list the company advises dealers of price reductions on all lines of main-springs, repair parts, sundries and accessories.

The "His Master's Voice" Spare Parts List

Three separate lists of spare parts have been issued. Every part is illustrated and numbered for easy reference. The lists are compiled for use with instruction cards and dealers' tool sets already circulated to all H. M. V. agents. The company has done everything possible to facilitate the keeping in repair of their instruments which, it may be said, do not often require attention, given normal treatment. Dealers should make good use of these facilities.

LATEST PATENTS RELATING TO TALKING MACHINES AND RECORDS

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—Sound Box. Washington C. Kantner, Reading, Pa. Patent No. 1,394,427.

This invention relates to certain new and useful improvements in sound boxes for sound-reproducing machines, the object being to provide a sound box which is so constructed that the sound waves are broken up or separated so as to eliminate the shrillness, harshness and ear-piercing effects whereby sweet, melodious strains can be produced.

A still further object of the invention is to provide a sound box with a series of chambers disposed between the vibratory disc and the outlet in order to cause the sound waves of the outer portion of the vibratory disc to travel through the openings of the walls of the chambers in such a manner that the waves produced by the vibratory diaphragm are broken up before they are transmitted to the horn.

A still further object is to provide a mechanism which can be readily applied to the ordinary construction of sound box now in use by simply employing screws of a greater length.

In the drawings Figure 1 is a longitudinal section through a sound box constructed in accordance with the invention, and Fig. 2 is a longitudinal section showing the parts separated, showing the path of travel of the sound waves.

Sound Box. Washington C. Kantner, Reading, Pa. Patent No. 1,394,428.

This invention relates to sound boxes for sound-reproducing machines and is in the nature of an improvement on the application for sound box filed June 25, 1920, Serial No. 391,573, the object being to improve the general construction of the same in order that the box can be manufactured very cheaply.

A further object of the invention is to provide a sound box which is so constructed that the ordinary sound box now in use on sound-reproducing machines can be used in building up a sound box constructed in accordance with this invention.

Another and further object of the invention is to provide a sound box in which a plurality of spaced discs are employed arranged within a lidlike member, said member and disc being provided with centrally disposed openings in such a manner that the waves produced by the vibratory diaphragm are broken up before they are transmitted to the horn of the sound-reproducing machine.

In the drawings Figure 1 is a longitudinal section through a sound box constructed in accordance with the invention; Fig. 2 is an enlarged section taken on line 2—2 of Fig. 1, and Fig. 3 is a plan view of the disc.

Expression Device for Sound-reproducing Instruments. William A. Johnson, Yonkers, N. Y. Patent No. 1,408,514.

One object of this invention is to provide an expression-controlling device for the aforesaid purpose that shall not only be promptly responsive to the will of the operator but also have a particularly direct effect upon the reproducer itself rather than upon the passage through which the sound is transmitted after it is produced.

Another object is to provide a simple and compact structure for acting upon the mechanical connection between the needle or stylus and the reproducer, whereby the amplitude of the vibrations transmitted from the record to the diaphragm of the reproducer may be directly under the control of the operator.

Referring to the drawings, Figure 1 is a transverse sectional elevation of a reproducer equipped with an expression-controlling means which constitutes one embodiment of the invention; Fig. 2 is a front elevation of the same mechanism; Figs. 3 and 4 are sectional plan views taken on the lines 7—7 and 8—8, respectively, of Fig. 1; Figs. 5 and 6 are views corresponding to Figs. 1 and 2, showing still another modification of the invention; Fig. 7 is a sectional plan view drawn to a larger scale and taken on the line 11—11 of Fig. 5. Another modification of the invention is shown in Fig. 8, which corresponds to Fig. 2.

Phonographic Machine. Charles M. Goldstein, New York, assignor to Columbia Graphophone Co., Bridgeport, Conn. Patent No 1,408,585.

This invention relates to phonographic machines of the type used for dictation purposes and aims to improve devices of the character indicated by making the indicating device susceptible of attachment to existing machines without necessitating structural rearrangements therein. Another object is to provide mechanical marking means in combination with an index sheet arranged in the form of a cylinder.

Figure 1 is a vertical section taken on line 1—1 of Fig. 3, sufficient parts of a phonographic machine being illustrated to show the application of the invention; Fig. 2 is a front elevation of the invention looking in the direction of the arrow "2" in Fig. 1, the mechanical marking means being omitted; Fig. 3 is a top plan of Fig. 1, looking in the direction of arrow "3"; Fig. 4 is a vertical section taken on line 4—4 of Fig. 1; Fig. 5 is a section taken on line 5—5 of Fig. 6;

Fig. 6 is a top plan of Fig. 5, parts being broken away and parts being in section, and Fig. 7 is a section on line 7—7 of Fig. 4.

Sound Box for Talking Machines. Harold Y. Prendergast, Brooklyn, N. Y. Patent No. 1,408,776.

This invention relates to improvements in sound boxes, and is a continuation of an abandoned application, Serial No. 134,987, filed December 4, 1916.

One of the objects of the invention is the provision of means for concentrating the sound waves emanating from the diaphragm and conveying such sound waves through a passage so arranged as to preclude diffusion of extemporaneous sound waves in adjacent passages or chambers within the sound box.

Further objects are the provision of means for taking the sound vibrations from the central portion of the diaphragm where the clearer and richer tones are reproduced, and subsequently transmitting such sound waves through an insulated passage to the tone arm—the provision of a resilient enclosed partition or sounding board, so disposed and arranged as to improve the quality of the reproduced sound—the provision of a sound box provided with means for concentrating the reproduced sound waves at or about the center of the diaphragm, and transmitting same to an outlet opening located eccentrically with reference to the axis of the sound box.

Talking Machine Reproducer. Franklin G. Mathieu, Chicago, Ill. Patent No. 1,408,820.

This invention relates to talking machines and more particularly to the reproducers thereof with a view to improving the tone qualities of the machine.

Hitherto it has been usual in talking machine construction to provide a disc behind the diaphragm having a central aperture or apertures for the passage of sound from the diaphragm to the goose-neck. The amplitude of vibration of the central portion of the diaphragm is greater than that of the parts nearer the periphery, so that a greater volume of sound is obtainable from the center than from the outlying portions of the diaphragm. The tones given out by the central part of the diaphragm are, however, harsher and more strident than those from the outer portions of the diaphragm. This invention is designed to overcome this defect.

It is an object, therefore, of the invention to provide means for softening the tones given out by the central portion of the diaphragm and for giving relatively greater freedom to the passage of the vibrations from the outer parts of the same.

It is also an object to provide an improved form of disc for controlling the passage of the sound waves from the diaphragm to the horn or sounding box. A further object is the provision of a sound reflector behind the center of the diaphragm adapted to reflect the vibrations received from the latter in lateral directions.

Modifier for Phonograph Sound Boxes. Burr B. Blood, Chicago, Ill., assignor to the Jewel Phonoparts Co., same place. Patent No. 1,408,437.

This invention relates to a device whereby the tones or sounds produced by the reproducer or sound box of a phonograph may be readily modified; that is, the volume of the tones reduced or moderated without, however, affecting the tone quality; the object of the invention being to provide means whereby the modifying of the tones or sounds may be quickly accomplished without necessitating any change or alteration in the sound box or reproducer, per se; the invention comprising means whereby the tones or sounds may be modified without dissipating the tones as is the case with many modifiers at present in use.

The invention contemplates means adapted to be readily secured to any of the well-known types of sound boxes at present employed and which may be easily adjusted to the varying sized sound boxes or reproducers in use.

Figure 1 is a front elevation of a sound box or reproducer with the improved modifier attached thereto; Fig. 2 is a sectional view taken on the line 2—2 of Fig. 1, looking in the direction of the arrows; Fig. 3 is a perspective view of the modifier, unattached to a sound box; Fig. 4 is a front elevation of a sound box or reproducer, illustrating a modified form of the invention; Fig. 5 is a fragmentary view of a portion of the sound box and modified form of modifier mechanism shown in Fig. 4.

Sound Record. Chester C. Cook, McMinnville, Tenn. Patent No. 1,409,674.

The present invention relates to improvements in sound records or discs for phonographs, graphophones or the like. At the present time there are two distinct types of these disc records in use, one having one surface only grooved for musical reproduction and the other having both sides or surfaces grooved. The advantages of the latter over the former, especially as regards the phases of economy of space and expense, are too well known to need comment upon. The great disadvantage, however, lies in the fact that it is seldom that the purchaser gets his own selection on both sides. In other words, while he may select the record for the reproduction on one side, he is obliged to take the manufacturer's selection on the other. He has, of course, resort to the single surface reproduction type, but in doing so he loses the important advantages of the double type which have been referred to above.

The object of this invention is to provide an article of manufacture which will permit the purchaser to obtain a sound record of the double type with the combination of reproductions he desires. This is carried out by making the records preferably relatively thin and each grooved with the sound reproduction upon one side, these being so supplied to the retailer of the sound records. It should be understood that the term "relatively thin" used above and in the claims is intended to comprehend a disc member which is of such a thinness or thickness as to be impracticable for the ordinary handling incident to actual use. These discs are sufficiently thick, however, to permit the purchaser to try out his selection and when he has made his choice of two such records the retailer places adhesive upon the backs and sticks the two discs together. This form of connection is not necessarily a permanent one, because it may be desired to separate the two records for a subsequent change. At any rate, the proposal is to employ a readily fusible adhesive so that separation may be effected if desired.

Figure 1 represents two thin record discs of the type proposed to employ for combination purposes and which may be connected by an adhesive; Fig. 2 is a plan view of a spring ring which may be utilized instead of cementing the records together; Fig. 3 is a similar view of a modified form of sectional ring, and Fig. 4 is a cross section through the ring, considerably enlarged.

Phonograph Reproducer. Robert C. Mathes, New York, assignor to the Western Electric Co., Inc., same place. Patent No. 1,409,388.

This invention relates to a volume of tone control for a phonograph or gramophone. Prior to this invention the common methods for changing the volume of tone consisted in constricting the cross-sectional area of a horn at some point by means of shutters or valves. The inevitable result of such methods was to alter the reproducing characteristics.

An object of this invention is to produce a simple means of changing the loudness of reproduction without altering the acoustic properties of the system.

Another object is to produce a device by which the volume of tone may be altered while the machine is in operation.

In combination with a sound box and stylus lever, we have a sound modifier which consists of a support arm having a slideway therein, attached to the sound box. A slide is mounted in said slideway and has an arm slidably connecting it with the stylus lever, thus forming an adjustable fulcrum point for the stylus lever. A set screw or other clamping means is used to retain the slide in any desired position.

Sound Box. Jacob H. Weber, Brooklyn, N. Y. Patent No. 1,409,503.

This invention relates to sound boxes and particularly to stylus bar mountings having knife-edge bearings. An object of the invention is to provide a stylus bar mounting for sound boxes having readily renewable bearings which can be of various desired materials or of various degrees of hardness, and in which the bearings are secured to the casing or stylus bar in a manner to eliminate danger of loosening or chattering, in the use of the box, of any of the elements of the mounting. A further object is to provide a mounting of this type and for this purpose which is simple and inexpensive and in which the bearings can be replaced at a very low cost and by inexperienced persons.

Sound Amplifier. John B. Mitchel, Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada. Patent No. 1,408,761.

The invention relates to improvements in sound amplifiers with novel features of construction, whereby the sound is conducted from the tone arm through a substantially bell-shaped sound chamber constructed of brass or like material and preferably having a vibratory top of like material and is emitted through a chamber having sound-deflecting boards therein.

The objects of the invention are to provide a form of sound amplifier capable of reproducing the full volume of the sound received from the tone arm and at the same time eliminating the metallic tone so common in phonographs and rendering the tone flexible and pure and generally to provide a sound amplifier which will be inexpensive to construct, durable and efficient.

W. H. Fifield and E. O. Russell have opened a talking machine and typewriter business in Claremont, N. H. Brunswick phonographs and records are handled.

The NEW Scotford Tonearm and Superior Reproducer

A new external shape of grace and beauty—without changing the internal design:

That same angle turn with the solid inclined plane deflecting the sound waves straight downward into amplifying chamber. That same famous Scotford tone—the tone of refinement—genuinely musical. Now in a tonearm of accepted, conventional, popular design. WRITE FOR SAMPLES.

NEW CONSTRUCTION

The long straight tube is of drawn Yellow Brass. Tonearm Base, Main Elbow and Connection Elbow and the Reproducer Frame, Face Ring and Back Plate are cast of TENSO White Brass Alloy—an alloy more than double the tensile strength of cast iron—much stronger, harder and lighter in weight than ordinary white metal alloys. New dies have been produced for casting all parts. The new parts are solidly cast, and are very substantial and durable.

Sonora takes the Lead in Price Reductions

Here are a few of the popular Sonora Sellers at New Reduced Prices:

PERIODS

Canterbury - - - - -	$200
Queen Anne (Improved)	250
Louis XV, Standard - -	300
Lafayette - - - - -	165
Pembroke (Improved) -	165

UPRIGHTS

Melodie - - - - -	$50
Etude - - - - -	100
Elite - - - - -	250
Grand - - - - -	300
Invincible - - - - -	350

WITH the substantial reduction of price which went into effect April 1st on many Sonora models, regardless of astonishingly improved tone quality, Sonora becomes the first of the leading phonograph manufacturers to take a step in the right direction to instill confidence in the public mind.

Coincident with this announcement is the further assurance that there will be no other price change this year.

These facts, combined with Sonora's fair and square policies with relation to its representatives whereby rebates are made on all unsold models affected, are significant of Sonora's sound financial strength, far-sightedness and loyalty to its dealers.

PAYS TO MAKE STORE ATTRACTIVE

Some Pertinent Reasons Why an Attractive Store in a Poor Community Pays—The Experiences of a Talking Machine Dealer

In every town or city there are quarters where the people are of the poorer class and invariably the talking machine establishments in these sections are in keeping with their surroundings to a certain degree. One of the most successful merchants in a poor quarter of the metropolitan district has just opened a store, the equal in appearance of any in the city. What he says concerning his reasons for spending a large sum of money in opening a fine and artistically arranged store in that section may be of interest to other dealers located in similar positions. His statement follows:

"We have been in business here for a number of years and close investigation of the attitude of the people and their reaction to a high class of service and anything beautiful has convinced us that an artistic store here will be appreciated more than the attractive store in a neighborhood where the customers take it for granted.

"We aim to make our establishment the music center for the people living here; a place that is the equal in beauty of any in the city. They will get service of the best quality and there will be no comparison in any way between our method of conducting business and that of the house where the customers are financially in better condition.

"Our reasons for this are due to the fact that among the poorer people, who have few pleasures other than simple ones, the love of music and beauty is an outstanding feature. It forms a larger part of their lives than in the case where greater abundance of money makes possible other pleasures which our prospective customers cannot afford."

The soundness of this reasoning was evident on the opening day of the store. Open house was held and during the entire day people crowded in to inspect the line of machines handled by this concern and to listen to records. Not a few records were disposed of and the chances are that whoever is in the market for a talking machine in that neighborhood will patronize this enterprising type of dealer.

JOINS OKEH JOBBERS' STAFF

Vernon T. Stevens Appointed Manager of Okeh Department of Doerr, Andrews & Doerr—Well Qualified for New and Important Post

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., May 4.—Vernon T. Stevens, popular songwriter and for several years connected with the music publishing business, has been appointed manager of the Okeh division of Doerr, Andrews & Doerr of this city, distributors of Okeh records. Mr. Stevens was at one time general manager of the A. J. Stasny Music Co. of New York, and recently Northwest manager of the Richmond-Robbins Music Co. In addition to his commercial activities he has written a number of songs which have proven popular successes, and he is in close touch with the leading orchestra leaders and professional people throughout the country.

Mr. Stevens has already started an intensive sales campaign in behalf of Okeh records along lines similar to the campaigns inaugurated by popular music publishers. He has solicited and received the help of orchestra leaders, branch managers of music publishing offices as well as theatre managers. As the result of Mr. Stevens' live sales campaign, Doerr, Andrews & Doerr report a material increase in the sale of Okeh records and state that many new dealers have joined the Okeh distributing organization recently.

VICTOR FACTORY WEEK IN OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma Talking Machine Co. Arranging for Special Factory Displays by Victor Dealers in That Territory During Week of June 4

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., May 2.—The Oklahoma Talking Machine Co., the new Victor distributor here, is arranging a "Victor Factory Week" among Victor dealers for the week of June 4. The plan, which has been well received, includes the arrangement of a special factory window in all Victor stores in the State, the idea being that the cumulative effect will result in business for all concerned.

The "Baby State" of the Union is one of magnificent distances, but regardless of that fact, Oklahomans are a migratory people, Tulsans having interlocking interests in Oklahoma City and Oklahoma Cityans having a similar interest in Muskogee and Okmulgee. Because of the residents of the State spending so much of their business time visiting around, the Victor dealers have realized the value of this advertising and have entered into the plan most enthusiastically.

VICTOR LINE WITH HOME FURN. CO.

BRADDOCK, PA., May 3.—The Home Furniture Co., 852 Braddock avenue, this city, recently added the Victor line of talking machines and records, according to an announcement made by Alexander Goldsmith, sales manager. The company is planning a vigorous sales campaign in the interests of its new product. Immediately following the acquisition of the Victor line full page advertisements in which the various models were illustrated were run in the local papers. In discussing the acquisition of the Victor line, which has been long sought, Mr. Goldsmith remarked: "We feel, to use baseball vernacular, that we are batting in the big league with Victor products."

CHANGE IN BUFFALO FIRM

E. R. Burley has purchased the interest of H. E. Biesinger in the firm of Burley & Biesinger, Victor dealers of Buffalo, N. Y., and will continue the business at the same address on West Ferry street as its sole proprietor.

ACCESSORIES OFFER A PROFITABLE FIELD FOR DEALERS

Every Talking Machine Owner Is a Prospective Customer for Accessories—Every Sale of a Machine or Records Opens an Avenue for the Sale of This Class of Merchandise

Every talking machine owner is a prospective customer for accessories of all kinds. In view of this fact it is indeed strange that merchants pay so little attention to this source of revenue. Window display space is given to talking machines and records, but it is seldom that even a corner is allotted to needles, record-cleaning brushes, albums, etc. The writer, in an investigation covering half a dozen supposedly first-class stores run by live wire merchants, was surprised to find that comparatively little attention was paid to pushing this class of merchandise.

Accessories are a real necessity to the talking machine owner. They are vital aids to the fullest enjoyment of the music and as such their importance and profit-producing probabilities should not be overlooked. The chances are that very few talking machine owners are equipped with the necessary accessories, and the opportunities for increasing the revenue in this direction are wide open to the dealer who cares to take advantage of them.

The talking machine owner, as a rule, is eager to take advantage of anything which will add to his enjoyment of the records and comparatively little argument will be found necessary to make sales because of the smallness of the amount of money involved in these transactions.

WHY NOT ANNOUNCE THE RECORD?

Names and Prices of Records Played on Machines Before Stores Impart Knowledge to the Listener Which Induces Action

Talking machine dealers who make it a point to attract the attention of passers-by by playing a talking machine near the doorway of their store are overlooking a golden opportunity of making more record sales and increasing interest in their store and its display by not announcing to the public, either in the window or at the doorway, the exact musical number which is being played. In his perambulations the other day the writer passed some stores where a large number of people were attracted to the windows of talking machine stores by the music which emanated from some very pleasing records. One of the party who was quite enamored of the music turned to the writer and remarked, "It is a pity that the name of that record and the price are not placed at the door or in the window so that we may know what piece is being played. I am sure that it would result in a great many sales being made were the records changed every twenty minutes or half an hour."

There are thousands of people who, for one reason or another, do not take in the current shows these days, but who would like to hear the best "hits" from these performances, hence the value to be derived from publishing the name and the price of the record when it is exploited publicly by the dealer. The suggestion is certainly along the right line, and is passed along to talking machine men for consideration.

CHALMERS STORES ADD CHENEY LINE

Company Operates Seven Talking Machine Stores in Various New Jersey Cities

One of the largest orders ever booked by the Cheney Sales Corp., of New York, jobber for the Cheney line of phonographs, recently resulted from the addition of this line by the Chalmers Music Co., of New Jersey, which operates seven stores. The concern has stores in Newark, East Orange, Montclair, Orange, Summit, Morristown and Westfield.

Following Up Record Sales as a Means of Retaining Former Customers :: :: By Robert Falconer

In the Fall of 1920 a man and his wife went into a large department store and bought a hundred and fifty dollar talking machine. At the same time they selected and purchased a small collection of records. Since then they have bought records at six different stores, yet their total collection is still small.

Some of the records have been purchased on charge accounts. Some have been paid for at the time of purchase, and then delivered by the store. Some have been paid for and carried away at the time of the purchase. All but two of the stores patronized have the name and address of this family and data that show it owns a phonograph.

There are a great many other families just like this one and it may be interesting and instructive to learn just what could have been done to increase the sale of records to this phonograph owner. To date nearly all the records purchased have been bought because some friend mentioned them and spoke about what fine records they were. Some were purchased because of information given in local newspaper advertising. A few were selected from the catalog or from the national advertising of the maker.

All these years it has been much easier to keep from buying than to buy. Many a time a magazine or a newspaper has nearly sent one of the family to the store to buy a record, but before the trip was actually made something else came up and the purchase was delayed. Then some other record seemed more desirable and the first one was forgotten. This has probably happened in the case of no less than a hundred different records, not one of which has been purchased.

Why has this happened? One reason has been that when it has almost been decided to buy a record the problem has come up of deciding at which store to buy it. The family is not now living in the same city it did when the machine was purchased. Before it moved to the city where it is now located it bought all records at the store where it bought the machine. Every record bought at this store was sealed in its envelope, and a record once purchased could not be returned. This was a guarantee that every record was new and had never been used by anyone else. There was a feeling that one was getting full value for his money.

No store in the city where the family now lives has been found that has this practice. There is always a feeling that perhaps the record bought may have been used for demonstrating purposes or has been returned by someone else. There is a slight lack of confidence and this is deterring purchases.

What is of greater importance, however, is the fact that no store seems to be especially interested in selling records to this family. Any store that did show real interest along this line ought to be able to sell several records every month to this talking machine owner. The collection that now contains only a few dozen records would soon grow to several hundreds.

This interest could be shown in an effective manner by means of the following method: First, the store would have to convince this customer that all records sold were new and had never been used for any purpose whatsoever. This would have to be done in order to win the complete confidence of the customer.

The next step would be the mailing of letters to the family to call attention to special records. If a little attention were given to the class of records this family has been buying these letters could bring to its attention the particular kind of records in which it is most interested. If this were done an appeal would be made to some member of the family, and made in such a forceful manner that it would not be possible to resist the temptation to spend the amount necessary to buy that record.

Should these letters point out the fact that the particular records were selling at a rapid rate, and that a prompt purchase would be necessary in order to make sure of getting the record desired, then the purchase would be speeded up. Still better, if it happens to be a store at which the family has a charge account, and it was suggested that the order be telephoned in at once, many a sale would be made as soon as the letter was read.

Assuming that it cost five cents a letter to prepare and mail them, and a letter was mailed each month, this would mean an expenditure of sixty cents. Such an expenditure on well-prepared letters would lead this family to increase its purchases from $25 to $30 a year. It wouldn't seem like an abnormally high expense to increase sales in this way.

Of course, no such returns could be expected from every family, but they could be expected from this particular family. Even a letter once in three months, or twice a year, would surely increase the sales.

At the present time no one seems to be particularly interested in selling records to this particular machine owner. No member of the family visits any record department of a talking machine store often enough to be known there. Somehow it seems as though the clerks were not especially interested in making sales.

Not a clerk has offered to take down the name and address in order to keep this purchaser informed in regard to new records and other records there may be in stock that will prove especially interesting. No one has taken the trouble to mail any special letters calling attention to any desirable records.

Yet six stores have been patronized. At least one purchase has been made in each of them. Every one of these stores has lost an opportunity to increase sales.

The chances are that had this family bought its machine from a mail order house which believes in following up all its customers its present collection of records would be larger, the machine would be used more and more needles would have to be bought. As it is, no one cares enough about making sales to make an investment of even twenty-five cents a year in special direct appeals. That is why this family doesn't buy more records. Many merchants are probably losing profits in a like manner.

The First Principle of Scientific Talking Machine and Record Selling :: :: By W. Braid White

The selling of talking machines involves, as its first consideration, in order of time, as well as of importance, the clear realization that the object of a sale is, fundamentally, to put the buyer in possession of means for entertainment, pleasure, interest, through the medium of reproduced music in any of its forms.

The statement seems self-evident, but one learns by experience that the self-evident is not always the same as the self-acted-on. It does not in the least follow that a man will straightway begin to practice a certain series of actions merely because it has been demonstrated to him that the practice will be useful, advantageous, or even very pleasant. In the practice of salesmanship there is no doubt whatever that the most important single principle is the principle of preliminary analysis, the practice, that is to say, of splitting up into its component parts every proposition which may be laid down, every proposal which may be made, every case involving merchandising problems which may present itself. Unless this analysis is habitually carried on there can be no such thing as systematic salesmanship. It will be admitted, I think, that systematic salesmanship, analytically directed to ends foreseen and correctly envisaged, is a need of the talking machine industry.

Unfortunately, however, it is one thing to become convinced of this fact and quite another thing to put it into practice. The human mind dislikes intensely taking up new habits, because to do so means to undertake a process which in its beginning is always more or less irritating and difficult. It is so much easier to cling to old habits, of which the most powerful represent always actions which have involved the least mental activity in their production. That is one reason why bad habits stick and why, for that matter, most habits are more or less bad anyway.

Still, if we are going to attack systematic scientific salesmanship for the talking machine retail trade it is plain that we must begin by making up our minds to the need of some new mental habits, some new ways of thinking and some new actions based on those thoughts. Let us then assume, for the purposes of this article, that we are ready to take up these little burdens and then we can go on more easily.

The Principal Objective

I have said that the object of a talking machine sale is to provide means for entertainment in the home via reproduced music. The physical form and cost of the machine itself do not constitute the principal objective. The customer, upon entering a talking machine store, or after reading a talking machine advertisement, may be expected to be in possession of certain conceptions, more or less definite, more or less well argued out, more or less in accord with facts, but all relating to the general idea, "talking ma-

The Prospective Buyer Must be Made to Realize the Entertainment and Pleasure Value of the Talking Machine

chine" and "records." The nature of these conceptions will depend upon a variety of considerations which may be summarized somewhat roughly after this fashion:

- (1) The idea that talking machines give nice music.
- (2) The idea that it is nice to have music at home when you want it.
- (3) The idea that a great many other people, friends and acquaintances have talking machines.
- (4) The idea that the children will like it.
- (5) The idea that the prices do not appear to be high, judging from what one hears through the neighbors.

There may also be counter-ideas suggested by advertising, by seeing some special machine in somebody's possession, or by the gossip of friends. They may take the form (1) that a good deal of expense is connected with the game, or that (2) records cost a great deal and break easily.

A still further counter-idea is occasionally discovered, namely, the idea that talking machine music is "canned music" and therefore inartistic. But persons who think thus will not come into a store and will be discovered only by canvassers out prospect-hunting. We shall discuss the treatment of their case at a later date. Meanwhile, we dismiss them.

Now, the counter-ideas enumerated are not likely to be strong enough to stand by themselves. The casual visitor to a talking machine store is safely to be regarded as in a receptive mood almost always. What is needed is to forget the physical facts involved, the kind, form, type, features and price of the machine. All these must be resolutely put aside, save by way of briefly answering any questions put by the customer, until the latter has become satisfied that the desired musical entertainment may be had in every imagined variety by a talking machine.

Convincing Demonstrations

That is to say, the object of the salesman must be to effect a convincing demonstration. It should not be a question of saying, "What sort of a machine do you want?" For if one thing is more certain than another, it is that there is no defined sense of values in the mind of the ordinary prospect. The ordinary prospect has no expert knowledge, and if asked such a question would probably ask to see something cheap. It is only after the demonstration has been made that the question can be raised as to the particular physical embodiment of this music-in-the-home idea most likely to be suitable. What will be suitable will in each individual case differ, according to the many individual differences which exist among the circumstances and tastes of different persons.

This effectuation of a convincing demonstration is not quite so simple a task as it may at first seem to be. It involves (1) a tactful leading away from the vague, crude idea "I-half-wish-I-had-not-got-into-this" which the entering prospect always entertains for some moments at least after his entry. (2) Gentle introduction of the prospect into the sort of atmosphere which suggests the living-room at home. (3) Skillful extraction from the prospect of pertinent information about his musical tastes. (4) Satisfying that taste by appropriate music. (5) Patient service which allows the music and the spirit of the idea to work into the personality of the prospect.

"Let Them Sell Themselves"

Then, and then only, when the prospect has soaked up the atmosphere, and has brought himself by gradual stages to the right point of interest and desire—then, and then only, the prospect will take the next step by asking, "Well, now, how much will it cost me to get all this?"

There is a wise saying attributed to some wise salesmen in the player-piano game. It says "Leave them alone and they will sell themselves."

If what I have said above has any meaning at all, then the same wise saying is applicable to the talking machine trade and should form one of the principles of all systematic salesmanship.

And that this principle is so applicable there cannot be the slightest doubt. In fact the talking machine is to be sold only secondarily and incidentally. That which is primarily and as a matter of principle, to be sold, is the music to which the talking machine is the means. The art of talking machine salesmanship is the art of selling music. It involves, runs parallel with, and is equal in importance to the sale of records. The record and the machine go together and neither should be separated from the other.

This, then, is the result of considering the first principles of systematic salesmanship, summarized in last month's Talking Machine World.

STUDY OF TRADE CONDITIONS NECESSARY

FOR some months past the talking machine trade, at least that portion established on a permanent basis, has been faced with the problem of doing a legitimate business and maintaining list prices in the face of hundreds of sales of machines of various kinds offered at low prices to effect the liquidation of stocks. The problem has been a serious one, but, so far as present indications point, it is rapidly coming to an end as the excess stocks are being absorbed and the public again is turning to machines of known standards. On top of the liquidation problem, however, has come that of meeting the terms offered by numbers of dealers who insist upon resorting to the price appeal whenever the demand slows down a bit.

For some time past the newspapers have been full of advertisements offering machines of well-known makes, not at cut prices, but on terms ranging from nothing to $5.00 down on instruments retailing at $100 upwards. It is a question of just how far this practice can continue without threatening permanent injury to the industry. There is no question but that a certain amount of business can be brought in by a direct appeal of terms, for the fact that the individual can purchase a valuable talking machine and spread the payments over several months means much more sales than though all cash were asked for it.

There should be a limit, however, to the low level to which terms may be allowed to fall. The public generally realizes to-day that it is impossible to obtain something for nothing, and the offer of a valuable piece of property such as a talking machine selling for $100 to $150, for instance, for nothing down and payments to begin a month hence, is not likely to promote public confidence. Of course, the talking machine dealer has the advantage of being able to demand that the customer purchase a definite quantity of records for cash before obtaining the machine, but the point is that the machine itself is given free for a specified period. If terms must be advertised, and in certain instances it may be a wise move, let them be sufficiently high to represent a fair proportion of the sale price.

It is generally conceded by those specializing in instalment sales that the charge of the first payment should be from 20 to 25 per cent of the purchase price. If talking machine dealers would even cut that figure and demand 10 per cent it would at least be giving the public the impression that while their attitude was one of generosity they still had in mind the real value of the product they were selling.

It is quite certain that an individual who cannot pay from ten to twenty dollars down on a good talking machine is certainly going to be a bad credit risk if he is able to secure the same machine for nothing down. It is also significant that those who insist upon proper terms are doing their share of business even in the face of discouraging conditions. In the matter of terms the talking machine men might take warning from the piano dealers, and not do likewise.

DEPARTMENTAL CO-OPERATION HELPFUL

MANY retailers of talking machines who operate talking machine departments in conjunction with departments handling other products, while realizing that the talking machine line must be handled as a distinct proposition, have also come to realize that sales resistance will be overcome to a material degree by promoting the spirit of co-operation between the various departments of the store in order that one may profit to some degree through the publicity of the other.

The sales argument of the department store manager is not so much that the public likes to shop and do as much of its buying as possible under one roof, but rather that coming into the store to purchase some definite thing the customer must of necessity pass through various departments handling different lines of goods and is quite likely to stop and make additional purchases not contemplated in the first instance.

It has been found in department stores that by a little tactful work the buyer of dress goods can be interested in some other line—possibly talking machines. It is, therefore, much more likely in a general store that the purchaser of a piano or some band or orchestra instrument, having once become acquainted with the store, is most easily induced to visit and patronize the talking machine department.

Inter-department co-operation simply means the capitalizing of an acquaintanceship that has been built up probably at considerable expense, time and effort, but if that acquaintanceship is confined to a single department it proves an expensive proposition. If, on the contrary, it can be made to bring business to several related or unrelated departments the development cost of each individual sale is reduced materially.

It does not pay for any department manager to remain aloof with the idea that he can paddle his own canoe without worrying about the other departments of the store. Perhaps he can, but a little real co-operation is going to make the paddling easier for all hands.

GREAT PROGRAM FOR COMING CONVENTIONS

IT is likely that members of the talking machine trade will play a prominent part in the program at the annual conventions of the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Music Industries and allied associations, which will be held at the Hotel Commodore, New York, during the week of June 5. As a matter of fact, several features of the program of the Merchants' Association will be contributed by the talking machine men themselves and will be directly applicable to that division of the music industry and at least one big feature of the entertainment program—a gala concert at Carnegie Hall on the evening of June 6—will be provided by a talking machine company.

Various music trade associations, particularly the National Association of Music Merchants, have for several years been making strong efforts to interest and secure the active support of the talking machine men in the conduct of their association affairs, but the response to date, for one reason or another, has been rather disappointing. There is reason to believe, however, that the co-operation of the talking machine interests with the other divisions of the industry on a proper basis would work out to the advantage of all concerned. The interests of the various divisions are so closely interlocking at many points, particularly in the matter of distribution at retail, that the problems of one division are properly the problems of all.

PUTTING PERSONALITY INTO SALESMANSHIP

A MOVE on the part of many members of the talking machine trade that is worthy of particular commendation is that of bringing into their stores and recital halls prominent record artists of recognized standing that they may sing before the dealers and give to those who sell their records the benefits of personal contact and acquaintanceship. Chas. H. Ditson & Co., Victor wholesalers in New York, for instance, have been conducting a weekly series of recitals at each of which some prominent Victor record artist appears and sings recorded and unrecorded numbers for the benefit of a goodly number of dealers who attend by invitation. In other cities of the country dealers in various lines have followed out the same idea, although perhaps not so systematically, and in every instance the appearance of the artists has resulted directly and immediately in an increased demand for his or her records. It simply follows out the idea of putting personality into salesmanship, for it is but natural that the retailer and his salesmen will show more interest in exploiting and selling records made by some one whom he knows personally than he will in simply disposing of records made by those who, so far as he is concerned, represent only names.

During the course of the musical season there is hardly a section of the country that is not visited by at least several grand opera and concert stars who have made records for one or another of the various companies and, if properly approached, the majority of these artists are only too willing to appear in some central hall or salon and sing a few numbers for the benefit of a group of dealers. The average artist is proud of his records and is anxious to see that they sell readily and in goodly numbers, for that reflects credit upon him. He realizes also that when he gives a private recital for a group of dealers he is simply increasing his own popularity and stimulating sales. The opportunity is present and should be capitalized.

SPECIAL RECORD RELEASES HELP SALES

AMONG the factors that have served to stimulate record sales at a time when they have most urgently needed stimulation have been the special record releases by practically all the leading companies, and the great majority of retailers are enthusiastic over the practice.

Under the old system a full month elapsed between new record releases and, after the interest in the current list had worn off, it meant a week or two in dragging and strong selling effort before the new supplement appeared to bring machine owners again into the stores. The special record releases—generally well-selected numbers, although comparatively few in number—nevertheless served to fit into this quiet gap very acceptably, and to provide a sufficient revival of public interest to keep things moving until the next full list is ready.

There always has been and always will be a certain steady volume of trade throughout the month on standard and semi-standard numbers—a trade which many dealers have managed to cultivate to a very substantial point—but there is no denying the fact that the popular types of records, particularly of dance music, still make up the great bulk of sales, and the class of people who favor such records for the most part buy them as soon as they are released and then wait impatiently for the next month's batch. Special releases serve to keep these people in line and interested. So long as these special releases are not sufficiently frequent to become commonplace, they serve the same purpose as monthly bulletins in impressing the record-buying public with the fact that there is something new for them to listen to and purchase.

INCREASED HOME BUILDING HELPS TRADE

THE movement started in many States and towns, throughout the country, including New York, for the purpose of encouraging home building on a large scale, so as to relieve the housing shortage which has existed so acutely for several years past, is deserving of the support of talking machine merchants particularly, and business men generally, for any material increase in the number of homes in the country means that just so many more families have been placed in a position where they not only can buy home furnishings and the things that give pleasure, but they will have a place to put them. To-day there are thousands of prospective buyers of talking machines and other musical instruments who are dividing homes with other families, living in furnished rooms, or in small apartments where there is no room for placing even a diminutive musical instrument.

The legislature of the State of New York during the session just closed gave quite a stimulus to housing projects through the passage of ameliorative laws, while other states and cities are also encouraging building on a big scale. It must be borne in mind that each house or full-sized apartment building occupied means in most cases a place in which to put a talking machine or some other musical instrument; hence in supporting such projects talking machine merchants are assisting in a most practical way in opening a new and proper field for their products—they are aiding not only in a matter of getting business but in supplying an essential need for comfort and enjoyment of our people.

SELLING THE HIGH PRICED RECORDS

WE sometimes wonder whether a real, earnest effort is made by talking machine dealers to feature in an effective manner the better class of records. The rank and file of the retail trade to-day has concentrated very largely on the popular "hits" of the day, including all the popular dance numbers. This is commendable salesmanship, but we have noticed that those dealers who are placing special emphasis on the records by our noted singers, violinists, and pianists are being rewarded by a volume and class of trade that is bound to enhance the prestige of their stores as well as place a good profit on the right side of the ledger.

It should be the duty of salesmen, even in stores where popular records are largely in demand, to call attention to the records of the leading artists, because in this way they are educating the public to a knowledge of the fact that the world's most noted musicians are not only to be found represented in record catalogs but that they consider the talking machine a most admirable and satisfying medium for bringing their talents to the attention of the musically inclined people of the nation.

Analyzing the Possibilities of the Radio for the Talking Machine Dealer

By Kenyon W. Mix
Director, Lyradion Sales & Eng. Co.

Is there any basis for the somewhat prevailing opinion among talking machine and music dealers that radio is going to either put them out of business or going to cut heavily into their profits? I am asked this question very frequently of late and I always answer it with a very emphatic "No!" I make this statement without a single reservation because I am convinced of the soundness and reliability of the analysis upon which we are basing our production and sales.

As a matter of fact, we are of the opinion that radio presents to music dealers the greatest opportunity for added profits they have ever had. Some people express the opinion that radio is merely a fad. This is not true, but what is true is that radio is passing through a faddish stage on its way to stability. You will remember if you will let your mind go back a decade or so ago that the telephone, automobile and phonograph passed through a similar stage before both the producer and consumer brought about definite and standardized practice in design and utility.

The time is coming, and it is coming quickly, too, when radio is going to be as much of a necessity as the telephone or the automobile. Every requirement in the appearance and operation of both the automobile and phonograph has been due to the influence of the woman of the house. She has—for the novelty of the thing—been content to have a radio receiving set installed in her home, if it did turn one room into a miniature and untidy machine shop, but now that the novelty is wearing off she wants radio in somewhere where it will be properly housed in cabinet form and which will harmonize with the other surroundings of her home.

We are absolutely convinced that a demand of this nature does exist and that such a demand is going to be emphasized in the very near future.

You may ask just what bearing this has on a connection between radio and the music dealer—it has a great deal. Under present conditions radio has reached the state where it is practical and utilitarian and it has reached that stage primarily by virtue of the efforts of those who an instrument of entertainment, a large portion of which consists of musical broadcasts, it is really a musical merchandising proposition belonging to the talking machine and music dealer.

As manufacturers of phonographs and radio-phonographs we recognize this fact.

Radio is not going to supplant the phonograph, the piano or the player-piano, but it will serve to enhance all of these. Under any possible set of circumstances the person who owns a radio are electrically inclined and by virtue of the fact that radio receiving sets have been sold up to the present time by electrical dealers. The average electric shop is not, and I do not think anyone will deny this, under the direction or ownership of men who are really capable of handling the radio proposition with modern refinements, such as I have in mind. A radio is not an electrical shop or a specialty shop proposition. As long as a radio receiving set is essentially receiving set has no choice of a program, but must take what is sent, when it is sent; on the other hand, popular music broadcasted by radio may make a marked appeal to the owner of the radio set, and it is altogether likely that he will want to make permanent on his phonograph, his piano or player-piano the selection which pleases his fancy. Realizing that this is true, we have been advocating a plan which is accepted by various newspapers and one which renders a real service to the readers of the newspaper, and unquestionably renders a tremendous service to the music dealer. Under this plan, which is simplicity itself, the newspapers who are already devoting a great deal of space to radio give this added space. The definite broadcasts sent out by the various stations are listed; in the next six columns are listed the various makes of phonograph records, and then the player rolls are listed, then the various publishers are listed. As for example, the Detroit News broadcasting station on a certain day broadcasts "Hurry Back Home" and this selection appeals to those who hear it and they wish to make it permanent in their home; they will find that the same selection is offered by the various record companies and piano rolls and the sheet music by different publishers. Definite and concrete tie-up is thus made which cannot but act favorably upon the newspapers, the readers and the music dealers. Radio is being made and housed in period cabinets similar to the various phonograph period cabinets which are extremely pleasing to the eye, and the only ones actually in a position to sell such sets to the public are music dealers by virtue of their long years of experience in similar lines.

A radio if properly installed is not a complicated affair from the standpoint of service—at least, there is no more service connected with it than there is to the phonograph or a player-piano and what small amount of service there is can be handled just as easily and efficiently by the music dealer.

We believe in all sincerity that the talking machine and music dealer is the logical man to sell radio equipment, provided such equipment is properly housed in a cabinet which will fit in with the surroundings of any home of refinement and good taste. There is to-day a strong demand for radio equipment—we have convinced ourselves that there is a stronger demand for radio receiving sets which can go into any home and occupy a small space and which will be an ornament to that home. We believe it is up to dealers to capitalize this fact.

Hit a "Home Run" With Peerless Albums

A "Go-Getter" Sales Plan

Vacation days are coming—schools will be closed.

How many responsible boys are there in your neighborhood who would welcome the opportunity to make a little vacation money right now?

Call eight or ten of them in. Give each an album filled with twelve of the latest records. Send them out among their friends to demonstrate and sell the records and the albums. A small commission to the boys will bring you some mighty good and profitable business.

Now is the time to start—some of the best boy salesmen might wish to work for you all summer.

Phil Ravis

Peerless enjoys an enviable reputation, established over a period of long and faithful service, and stands behind every album sold.

If there were a hundred album manufacturers in America, Peerless would be the foremost, because:

1—Quality, the first consideration, is evidenced in every Peerless product; which is represented by better workmanship and choice material.

2—Price, the next consideration, is always the minimum with Peerless, due to modern manufacturing methods. Quality considered, Peerless prices are right.

3—Of paramount importance to the Peerless organization is a helpful co-operation with every branch of the industry—particularly the requirements of the individual dealer.

Peerless albums are covered and bound with Interlaken cloth

Originators of No. 80 album equipment, as well as the album sets for all flat shelf phonographs which we supply with Peerless Big Ten.

4—Our interest extends beyond the mere supplying of the best album at the lowest possible price. We try to suggest means of selling them. Here is a sign which will help the sale of Peerless Albums in your store — write for one — or more if you need them.

Note: Three years ago, when Peerless began to serve the trade in a big way, we said, "An empty album is an invitation to the purchaser to fill it with records." Will our friends now be kind enough to write us their opinion of our new slogan, "Albums sell records"?

Compiling an Authoritative Prospect List by Thoroughly Canvassing the Territory

How many retail music merchants have any approximate idea of the number of homes in their territories equipped with a musical instrument of one sort or another, or of the number of homes that, lacking any kind of musical instrument, may be legitimately regarded as being worthy of a place on the prospect list? Judging from experience, the number of retailers so informed, or who have available approximate figures upon which to base any sort of a fair calculation, are few in comparison to those who are uninformed.

For a number of years there has been much discussion in the trade regarding the advisability of carrying on a general canvass of the country to ascertain the proportion of homes musically equipped, but it was considered that the venture was too ambitious and would probably prove too expensive to warrant going into.

What has been advised, and to some degree considered, however, has been the possibility of retailers making surveys of their own immediate territories to eliminate guesswork as far as possible from their selling plans. What statistics have been gathered regarding musical instruments in homes have been gathered largely by interests outside the trade and for reasons other than that of the direct sale of musical instruments. Not long ago a farm publication made a survey of its subscription list and brought forth some interesting information regarding the number and types of musical instruments in the homes of the rural population.

The biggest thing in this line, however, has been done by the Milwaukee Journal, which a few months ago made a thorough canvass of homes in Milwaukee and vicinity to ascertain how they were supplied with musical instruments, and which compiled a report covering 10,000 homes where the questionnaire offered by the newspaper was answered in full. The results of the survey, for which the newspaper deserves full credit, indicated that of the 10,000 homes 7,236 or 72.4 per cent were homes with children, which fact proved very significant in its effect upon the musical instrument equipment.

A General Canvass of Homes to Determine Those Equipped With Music Will Yield Valuable Information

Of the 10,000 homes, also, 7,942 or 79.4 per cent had some kind of musical instrument. Of homes in which there were boys only 80.47 per cent had some musical instrument, and where there were girls 85.77 per cent had some musical instrument, while of the homes without children 69.2 per cent had some sort of musical instrument.

A general survey of the 105,000 families in Milwaukee indicated that 45.91 per cent have pianos, 42.43 per cent have phonographs, 6.96 per cent have violins, 4.23 per cent have player-pianos, and .14 per cent have pipe organs, while the balance have a miscellaneous assortment of instruments. These percentages are particularly interesting in that they show a condition that existed with the beginning of the present year.

Judging from limited surveys that have been made in other sections of the country and by various agencies, Milwaukee may be said to be particularly well-supplied in the matter of musical instruments and to be possessed of a citizenry that is in itself distinctly musical. Figuring the proportion of sales to the country's population it would seem that the percentages in Milwaukee are high, but the very interesting showing made there should serve to encourage music trade interests in other localities to seek similar information for their own guidance, in cases where no outside agencies can be relied upon to undertake the task. If a newspaper with many fields to draw upon for advertising finds it worth while to spend some thousands of dollars in making a careful survey of a single city in order to find a basis for fresh advertising arguments, how much more important is it for the manufacturers, and particularly the sellers, of musical instruments to gather such information for their own use?

It is certain, however, that in most localities such a survey, even though not as extensive as that carried on by the Milwaukee Journal, will serve to prove to retailers that there is still a tremendous field available for musical instrument sales. Having once been convinced of that fact, the retailers can concentrate their efforts on consideration of ways and means for reaching that field.

OPENS FINE NEW VICTROLA SHOP

Unique Features of M. Goldsmith & Son Store Make It One of the Finest Victor Establishments in the Metropolitan District

The formal opening of the new Victor shop of M. Goldsmith & Son, 1493 First avenue, New York City, recently, marked the addition of one of the finest talking machine stores to the music establishments in the metropolitan district. The new store, while not large in comparison to many other music houses in the city, ranks with the best in attractiveness and completeness of appointments.

The record demonstration booths and interior decorations, which were installed by the Broadman Construction Co., of New York, are unique in several respects. The booths, ten in number, have been so arranged that advantage is taken of every available space. They are constructed of carved walnut and paneling of the same material has been used on the walls. In each booth there is an electric button, which the customer pushes when the service of a salesman is desired. In the rear of the establishment, in plain view of all who enter the store, is a show case built flush with the wall, in which will be displayed a single talking machine. This case is illuminated by electricity at all times, making the display stand out distinctly. On the main floor there are record racks with a 10,000-disc capacity and in the basement record shelves have been constructed to hold a 15,000-record surplus stock.

During the opening, which was attended by many people, handsome souvenirs were distributed. These included 10 and 12-inch record albums, with the firm name on the cover, record brushes, mirrors, on the back of which was reproduced a likeness of the Eight Famous Artists, and Victor dogs. During the day a concert was staged and members of the trade were served with refreshments. The store will be under the management of Morris Goldsmith, Jr.

In the evening the crowd became so great that the services of the police were necessary to preserve order. Chas. Harrison, William Robyn, Chas. Hart and Elliot Shaw, Victor artists, entertained with some of their most popular songs and autographed a number of records for eager purchasers. Further music was furnished by an orchestra hired for the occasion. Messrs. King and Shilkret, of the Victor Co. forces, were present and helped to make the event a success. Later in the evening the company served a buffet supper to more than fifty guests. J. N. Blackman, of the Blackman Talking Machine Co., delivered an address on modern tendencies in merchandising. The interest manifested by the entire trade in the event was attested by the many telegrams of congratulation and floral tributes received by the proprietors.

W. O. Welker

Welker, who has had considerable experience in Victor retailing and wholesaling, has an extensive acquaintance among Iowa dealers.

When he first entered the talking machine industry Mr. Welker was associated with Case & West, of this city, who at that time were Victor wholesalers, and upon their retirement from the wholesale field he spent several seasons representing the Putnam-Page Co., of Peoria, Ill., in eastern Iowa. For the past four years Mr. Welker has been purchasing agent for the city of Des Moines, and he brings to his new post a wealth of practical experience that will be used to advantage by Mickel dealers.

DERIVATION OF THE WORD RADIO

Few persons, even among the experts, know the derivation of the word "radio" as distinguished from the older generic term "wireless." Of course, radio is wireless in a sense, but the latter applies to so many other forms of free communication that it was found necessary to seek a new word that would express more exactly the peculiar activity of the broadcasting stations as we know them to-day.

Radio applies specifically to electric communication by means of ether waves. There are many other forms. Electric discharges may be conducted through water or the earth. They may be conducted through light waves, just as ether waves are employed for a similar purpose. Even induction between wires strung short distances apart has been used by telegraph companies. Telegraphic communication has been established between free-moving trains and the telegraph wires strung along the sides of the road by the simple expedient of laying metal sheets on the roofs of the cars. And successful experiments have been conducted between balloons equipped with a covering of tinfoil. All these may be called by the name of wireless. So may radio, but it is a thing apart.

The Merchant Who Secures Even Distribution of Business Can Render Better Service

Most talking machine establishments are busiest during certain periods of the day and at others there is an absolute dearth of business. The average merchant tries hard to give the best possible service, realizing, of course, that upon this, to a great extent, does the reputation of his establishment depend. No matter how much effort is expended by the merchant, if his store is crowded with customers during the peak hours of the day some of them are bound to wait before they can obtain the services of the clerks. This naturally results in a certain amount of ill feeling on the part of customers who are compelled to await their turn, and there are some people who will visit other stores in the future with the hope that their demands can be satisfied with more speed, and where this occurs the dealer will, in all probability, lose a customer.

There are two methods of overcoming this condition. One is to provide some plan so that the arrival of customers will be more evenly distributed during the day and the second is to provide some means to ease the waiting period. In any event it should be impressed upon the minds of the clerks that customers should be waited on in their proper turn. If a customer enters a store and finds two or three persons there before her and more follow her in she does not expect to be waited on last. Where this occurs it is pretty certain that the customer discriminated against will take her trade elsewhere, and with good reason.

In most talking machine establishments the morning hours are the quietest and in the afternoon the rush hours occur. Therefore, the dealer should make an effort to get some of his customers to do their record shopping in the morning.

There are several ways of doing this, and they all require most careful handling to eliminate the possibility of offending customers. A simple method is to try, wherever possible, to impress on the customer's mind, by personal conversation, the fact that in the morning hours your store is not so crowded and, consequently, better service can be rendered and more time can be given to record demonstrations.

The Dealer Can Avoid Rush Hours by Educating the Customers to Do Their Buying During Different Hours

The dealer might also enclose a personal letter to the customer with the monthly supplement, diplomatically urging that record shopping be done in the morning. Of course, these letters must not be too strong or insistent. The printed word is often crude and sometimes conveys an entirely different meaning to the reader than the same message in a personal chat.

One dealer is doing a large morning business through the medium of morning concerts. A note of invitation is sent to a selected list of customers and the records to be played are listed. The recipients of the invitations are carefully selected through data on file in the office of the store. For example: On the card bearing the name of each customer there is a notation concerning the particular quality of music preferred by that person. If the dealer arranges a Red Seal record concert he takes care to send invitations only to those customers who have evinced a liking for that class of music. It is obvious that a person who is fond of jazz and does not care for the better music will not make any particular effort to attend a concert of this sort. On the other hand, this dealer finds that classical record enthusiasts do make an effort to attend the concerts, which are well patronized. The plan has been instrumental in selling a considerable number of records during those hours when business is dull in most establishments, and the thinning of the ranks of afternoon shoppers has enabled the salesmen to devote more time to each customer, greatly increasing the efficiency of the house and promoting good will of patrons.

SHORE MUSIC SHOP IN NEW HOME

The Shore Music Shop, formerly located at Tennessee and Pacific avenues, Atlantic City, N. J., is now in its handsome new establishment at 924 Pacific avenue. A complete line of Victrolas, Starr phonographs and Victor and Genett records is handled in addition to pianos.

Announcing the Columbia

Illustration above shows how compact, attractive, and easy to carry is the New Portable Grafonola. Weighing only 22¼ pounds, it is no heavier than an ordinary hand-bag.

The New Portable Grafonola open and ready for playing.

HERE'S big news for every Columbia Dealer! The New Portable Columbia Grafonola—the instrument you have been waiting for—is now on the market. The improved, compact, handsome Portable Grafonola embodies the identical method of sound reproduction found in the large, cabinetted Columbia Grafonola, and this feature now places all other portables on the defensive.

Believing that it is wrong to subordinate the reproducing qualities of a portable phonograph for the sake of compactness, we have produced a highly scientific instrument with all the best reproduction features of the cabinet model Grafonola, and yet an instrument that can be carried as easily as a hand-bag.

Think of what a wonderful selling proposition this Portable Grafonola offers you for summer business!

Just the thing for vacation use, for week-end trips, for summer bungalows, picnics, lawn parties, day trips, porch dancing, beach parties, to take aboard the motor boat, automobile or canoe—in fact, it will be found indispensable to all who like to take music with them wherever they go.

Being covered with heavy, durable, black Fabrikoid, reinforced at the corners, this new Portable Grafonola is a light-weight, handsome piece of luggage which no one will object to carrying and which will withstand all sorts of hard wear.

From every standpoint of beauty, utility, quality, and volume of reproduction and serviceability the New Portable Grafonola is beyond doubt superior in every respect to anything of its kind on the market, and as a musical instrument is something on which you can go the limit in pushing, knowing full well that it will give complete satisfaction.

new Portable Grafonola

Look at these improved features

- A—Two pivoted tone-control leaves at the mouth of the amplifying chamber permit modifying the volume of tone as desired.
- B—The cover encloses the scientifically shaped amplifying chamber (or horn) which permits the full and natural development of the sound-waves (as in the big cabinet Grafonolas) from the neck of the tone-arm to the mouth of the horn.
- C—An escutcheon at this point fits over the motor pinion and secures the turntable against rattle or damage during transportation.
- D—The standard Columbia bayonet-joint tone-arm conveys the sound-waves directly into the amplifying chamber in a continuously widening channel without obstruction or the necessity of employing special turns or adjustments to suit this type of a phonograph.
- E—Covers seal needle cups when top is lowered for carrying.
- F—Three nickel needle cups (one for used needles) prevent aggravating forgetfulness.
- G—The position of the winding spindle gives the crank a wide swing, which permits easy and safe winding of motor.
- H—Complete exterior is covered with the best grade of heavy black Fabrikoid.
- I—Heavy nickeled corner protectors give strength, withstand abuse, and save scratching of furniture.
- J—The inside is finished in highly polished Red Mahogany, which, with the highly polished nickel parts and black Fabrikoid exterior, makes this instrument very attractive in the playing position.
- K—Tone-arm and improved standard Columbia reproducer swing back without adjustment and are safely positioned by a spring for carrying.
- L—Winding crank is conveniently positioned here for transportation.
- M—Ingenious safety catch permits dust-proof closing of cover.

MANY NEW JEWETT DEALERS

Important Accounts Opened Up by Jewett Phonograph Co.—March Sales Greater Than January and February Combined

DETROIT, MICH., May 8.—The Jewett Phonograph Co., of this city, manufacturer of the Jewett phonograph, has closed a number of important accounts recently. Among the dealers who have arranged to handle the Jewett phonograph during the past few weeks are the following: W. S. Barringer, Kokomo, Ind.; Carr & Hicks, Fostoria, O.; John Deans, Eddystone, Pa.; F. H. Frazelle, Toledo, O.; Grosse Pointe Furniture Co., Detroit; Gardner White Furniture Co., Detroit; John J. Howard, Detroit; C. Kobe & Son, Findlay, O.; Ralph Lloyd, Flint, Mich.; Eugene C. Laurent, Morton, Pa.; C. J. Lenhard, South Bend, Ind.; Newman & Kettler, Lima, O.; Pathé Shop, Columbus, O.; People's Outfitting Co., Detroit; Sprow's Music House, Carlisle, Pa.; Schultz & Humm, Caro, Mich.; Tepper Bros., Fort Wayne, Ind.; Thomas Furniture Co., Pontiac, Mich.; W. B. Wood Piano Co., Parkersburg, W. Va.; Watt & Shand, Lancaster, Pa.; White Furniture Co., Detroit.

A. A. Fair, sales manager of the company, states that the new William and Mary console, retailing at $185, is meeting with a hearty reception from the trade. The new upright line introduced a month or so ago is also proving popular with Jewett dealers everywhere, who are exploiting it to splendid advantage in their respective localities.

As indicative of the progress that the Jewett phonograph is making, it is interesting to note that Mr. Fair reports a total business for March greater than January and February combined. Official figures for April have not yet been compiled, but preliminary totals indicate that April showed a substantial increase over March sales.

AMERICAN "TALKERS" IN CHILE

Good Market for Talking Machines and Records—Heavy Import Duties Add to Expense—Very Little Competition to Contend With

During and since the war musical instruments have been imported into Chile almost exclusively from the United States, according to a recent report by Consul D. C. McDonough, who is stationed at Concepcion. The report states, in part, that: "The market for talking machines and records is very good, although not large, and American instruments have very little competition. The import duties make them rather expensive, especially heavy discs or records. Importers receive a credit of ninety days.

ANNOUNCES TALKING MOVIE

Lee De Forest, of De Forest Radio Telegraph & Telephone Co., Tells of Perfected Device for Talking Motion Pictures—Arouses Interest

Lee De Forest, pioneer in wireless telegraphy and telephony, returned from Germany recently on the "Mauretania," with an announcement that he had perfected a device for talking motion pictures. The action of the photoplay and the voice were registered on the same strip of film, which could be used in an ordinary projection machine with an attachment, he said.

Enthusiastic over his invention, which, he predicted, opened great possibilities, Mr. De Forest exhibited a strip of film of a speaking movie. The voice, he said, was registered on the narrow margin of the strip by action of the light on the sensitive cells. The margin thus bore a picture of the voice. Through the medium of a special device the voice was reproduced in perfect synchronism with the motion picture.

"I am convinced my invention will revolutionize the motion picture industry," Mr. De Forest said. "An entire play or opera of an evening's length will be one of the novelties of the speaking movies."

Mr. De Forest said his voice registration method could be applied to the talking machine—ordinary films could be played without a needle. He said experiments with the "photophone" demonstrated that musical sounds were more pronounced than those from the talking machine.

Mr. De Forest, who is president of the De Forest Radio Telegraph & Telephone Co., said he would return to Germany in two weeks to continue his work on the talking motion picture machine, which he expects to put on the market soon. He said he found technical labor easier to obtain and experimental conditions more favorable there. While here he would add another factory to his business of manufacturing radio telephone products, he said.

"TALKER" CONCERTS ON TRAINS

The management of the C. I. & L. R. R., better known as the Monan Road, has installed a Brunswick phonograph and a number of records on one of its dining cars for the entertainment of passengers. Concerts are held each evening to break the monotony of the trip. The invitation to the concert is printed at the bottom of each menu.

N. A. BURKE BUYS VICTOR BUSINESS

NYACK, N. Y., May 3.—The Victor talking machine and stationery business of Tunis S. Dutcher, of this city, has been purchased by Norman A. Burke, proprietor of a Columbia Grafonola shop here. Mr. Burk moved the Victor stock of machines and records to his establishment on South Broadway.

"MODERNOLETTE" MAKES ITS DEBUT

New Portable Machine Attractively Designed and of Distinct Merit Placed on the Market by the Modernola Co., Inc., Johnstown, Pa.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., May 1.—The Modernola Co., Inc., of this city, which is well and favorably known throughout the talking machine field through the production for many years past of the Modernola phonograph, has announced the advent of a new member in the Modernola family. The new arrival has been named the Modernolette and is a portable machine of attractive appearance weighing twenty-one pounds, twelve ounces, and is produced in either wax finish or leather covered. This new portable has been in the process of development for a long time past. It had to meet many rigid tests before it was finally placed on the market, and in its present condition it has the unqualified endorsement of the Modernola Co., which makes many exceptional claims for it. This new portable has been placed on the market at a particularly appropriate time, and in season to permit the dealer to have it in stock in time for the Summer months, which is usually the heaviest sales season in this type of machine. The accomplishments of the Modernola Co. in the past bespeak a bright future for the Modernolette.

ROBERT RINGLING TO MAKE RECORDS

Robert Ringling, only son of Charles Ringling, circus owner, and a baritone of distinction, has just signed a contract with R. E. Johnson, concert manager, of New York, for concert and operatic appearances and singing for talking machine records during the next two years. Mr. Ringling is twenty-five years old, and has been studying singing since he was eight, finishing up with some of the great masters in Europe.

A new music store was recently opened at Teppers, Ind., under the management of A. J. Fedewa and C. G. Cauers. Brunswick phonographs and records are handled.

Four-Minute Conference on Business Topics

No. 2—Your Losses—In Part

[This is the second of a series of four-minute conferences on topics of direct interest to business men in the talking machine trade which have been prepared for this publication by Lester G. Herbert.—EDITOR.]

Business loss includes waste through mismanagement as well as through unavoidable economic conditions. By eliminating preventable loss and waste we fortify ourselves against emergencies and disaster.

One of the most frequent causes of waste in business is failure to furnish continuity of employment for the different workers. Each and every one of the employees rightly expects full pay for all time put in, and it is the fault of the management if there are gaps which are unproductive and time which must be paid for, and yet which shows nothing in return in the way of profitable production.

It does not make any difference who the employe is or what sort of work is being done—continuous employment of the right type is necessary or there will be a tremendous leak which will express itself in unnecessarily high overhead expense.

Then many employers fail to plan their work in sufficient detail that it may be done to advantage. It is possible to trust trained and experienced helpers to go ahead with their work, for these people have developed a sufficient sense of personal responsibility to be interested in and concerned for the final results of their work.

But it is unsafe to take anything for granted especially if changes are planned or new workers are being employed. It is only fair to old employes who are being put to new tasks that their time will not be wasted or the work done to poor advantage.

Sometimes we think that employes have had more experience or a broader vision than they really have. Then, too, we may forget that good as their judgment is, often they are not in touch with the inner conditions of the business as we are, and so are handicapped. In any event, joint planning is sure to be a decided advantage in that both individuals contribute constructive ideas and benefit by the conference and its suggestions.

A third cause of waste is now being recognized as high labor turnover. People are discharged who might be trained if a little interest were taken in them; or a worker who is a failure at one job may be especially good at some other part of the task.

Investigation in the building industry showed that one man in the course of five and a half years worked for no less than seventy-six different contractors, and was hired 108 times. This is an extreme case, but it shows how much time the man must have lost and the expense he represented in starting each new job.

It is better to develop efficiency in the business and then to make continuous use of it. A wise employer will plan business to keep his organization profitably employed.

AN INTERESTING COURT DECISION

In Injunction Sought by E. S. Geer and W. H. Huth to Restrain the Manufacture and Sale of Gold Seal Record Repeaters, Defendants Ordered to File Bond of $10,000 to Secure Plaintiffs' Loss of Profits, and Damages

The latest development in the action brought by Edmund S. Geer and Walter H. Huth against George M. Browning and others for a preliminary injunction restraining the defendants from continuing the manufacture and sale of the Gold Seal record repeater occurred on April 18, when Judge Knox, in the U. S. District Court, Southern District of New York, decided not to grant the injunction, provided the defendants filed a bond of $10,000 to secure plaintiffs against loss of profits and damages. The attorneys for the defendants stated that the necessary bond would be filed immediately. The suit will now come to trial in the usual course. The decision of Judge Knox was, in full, as follows:

KNOX, D. J.: The great number of claims contained in the Geer patent imposes no little burden upon the Court in reaching a conclusion as to their range and the extent of any infringement thereof by defendant, and I shall now not attempt to do so.

It is admitted by defendants' experts that the alleged infringing device may read upon claims 4, 23, 24, 30, 33, 34, 37 and 40 of Geer, and assuming them to be valid, and not anticipated, this is enough, upon proof of sales within this district of the infringing article, to justify a preliminary injunction.

It is sought to avoid what would ordinarily be the effect of such an admission by the argumentative statement that the Geer claims mentioned above read equally well upon the device disclosed in the German patent to Goepper, No. 249,872, patented August 1, 1912.

The rejoinder which plaintiffs make to this answer is that Geer has successfully fixed the time of his invention as of a date prior to August 1, 1912.

Geer's own affidavit of September 23, 1914, is couched in most general terms, and, filed in the Patent Office, was sufficient to get his patent allowed over a citation of Goepper. By an affidavit filed herein he fixes the date of the reduction to practice of his device as in March or April of 1912. This affidavit is corroborated by one made by Arthur H. Kirkpatrick, who swears that he saw Geer constructing his device in April, 1912, and that he actually saw it used upon July 13, 1912.

Further affidavits made by Geer's sister show that he accomplished sufficiently early what was needful to anticipate Goepper.

It may be that the defendant upon the trial will be able to so qualify the apparent anticipation as to make it impossible to sustain the Geer patent; but as the case now stands the lack of invention upon the part of Geer is not so obvious as to disentitle him to the protection for which his patent presumably calls.

If he does not now receive such protection, and hereafter he should win his suit, I am of opinion that his success will be of small benefit. The marked difference in cost between the two articles, the somewhat evanescent (I should imagine) demand for phonograph repeaters, means that Geer must have his monopoly now or never. As between the parties the convenience of the plaintiffs should receive first consideration.

Upon the question of infringement within this district by defendant I think there is small doubt but that the sales complained of took place in the manner described by plaintiffs. I also feel that what the individual defendants did was done for and upon behalf of the Gold Seal Co.

The fact that the Gold Seal Co. carried on business in New York "inadvertently" seems to me of small consequence. I dare say the "inadvertence" was probably a lack of appreciation as to the possible effect thereof.

After consideration of all the matters submitted to me, including the financial statement (the worth of which is almost wholly dependent upon whether defendants' article may lawfully continue to be marketed), I have concluded that a preliminary injunction shall issue unless defendants secure plaintiffs against loss of profits and damages by filing herein a good and sufficient bond, to be approved by the Court, in the sum of $10,000. Should such bond not be given an injunction will issue upon the filing by plaintiff of the usual injunction bond in the sum of $5,000.

Duell, Warfield & Duell (D. A. Woodstock, of counsel) for the plaintiffs and Cooper, Kerr & Dunham (Drury W. Cooper, Parker W. Page, Thos. J. Byrne, of counsel) for defendants.

TYING UP WITH RECORD ARTIST

Appearance of John Steel at Keith's Riviera in Brooklyn Capitalized Most Successfully by Baim Bros. & Friedberg Co., Victor Dealers

When John Steel, the popular tenor and Victor record artist, appeared at Keith's Riviera Theatre in Brooklyn recently arrangements were made with the management of the theatre for the playing of a Victrola in the lobby and the playing thereon of a number of Mr. Steel's records. The machine and record display was arranged by Charles M. Unger, manager of the branch store of Baim Bros. & Friedberg Phonograph Co., St. John's place and Utica avenue, near the theatre. Mr. Steel autographed a number of his records at Mr. Unger's suggestion, and signs on the Victrola at the theatre called attention to the fact that such records were available at the Baim Bros. & Friedberg store.

Mr. Unger is most enthusiastic over the success of the display, and Mr. Steel's interest in the exploitation of his records. It is the sort of tie-up that gets results with the public and Mr. Unger suggests that Victor dealers wherever possible endeavor to get direct publicity out of the appearance of record artists in theatres near their stores. In Mr. Steel's case, for instance, it was found that quite a number of people were made aware for the first time of the fact that he had made records.

LOUIS JAY GERSON TO EUROPE

Louis Jay Gerson, formerly manager of the talking machine department of the John Wanamaker store in New York, and now general manager for the Interocean Holding Co., Inc., importers and exporters, sailed recently for Europe, where he will investigate the business situation in various countries, especially with reference to the talking machine, record and piano business in relation to South America from the viewpoint of the manufacturer.

GATHERING OF COLUMBIA DEALERS

Connecticut Columbia Dealers' Association Meets in Bridgeport—Elect Officers and Inspect Columbia Record Department

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., May 2.—Benjamin P. Morrison, of this city, was re-elected president of the Connecticut Columbia Dealers' Association at the quarterly meeting held recently in the Stratfield Hotel. More than fifty State dealers attended the gathering. The other officers elected include: L. H. Merwin, New Haven, vice-president; J. W. Ballou, New Haven, treasurer; C. G. Brodrib, Waterbury, secretary, and directors, L. C. Warner, New Britain; Joseph B. Zellman, Waterbury; L. H. Merwin, and J. W. Ballou, of New Haven.

Prior to the meeting, the dealers made a visit to the record department of the Columbia Graphophone Co. here, where they were escorted through the plant by A. V. Bodine, general superintendent; E. S. Coldwell, assistant superintendent, and J. F. Kilbride, assistant superintendent of the record department. Methods used in creating the finished record were shown to the visitors and all appliances and machines used in making the finished product were described by the guides.

The members of the Association enjoyed a supper at the Stratfield in the evening at which more than 100 members and guests were present. Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce Seward B. Price was chairman. After welcoming the out-of-town guests he gave a short history of the settlement and further development of the Columbia plant here. He introduced the speakers of the evening.

H. L. Tuers, manager of the dealers' sales service department, told of the work of the service department in conjunction with dealers and gave a number of developed ideas with a regard to increase in sales. Manager Oliver Benz, of the record department, spoke on methods of selling machines and records. He gave original ideas for large record sales by dealers and their salesmen.

Manager Kenneth Mills, of the New York branch, told of increased sales of machines during a recent sales campaign held throughout the Eastern section. G. W. Hopkins, vice-president and general sales manager of the company, spoke on the service of agency managers and told of the work of the sales bureau in developing Columbia graphophone sales to the highest pinnacle.

He spoke on the new machine which will come out next week, a revelation in graphophone circles with a number of improvements. A new portable machine will be ready for delivery during the month, he said.

A number of vocal and instrumental artists from New York who are engaged by the Columbia people to make records gave a program of unusual interest. Latest New York song successes were rendered by George Cornell and Edward Porray, through the courtesy of Irving Berlin Co., Harry Hoch and Harry DeCosta, of Waterson, Berlin & Snyder; Bob Miller and Herbert Steiner, of Leo Feist, Inc.; William Pagan, Joe Sherman and Frank Damstadt, of M. Witmark & Sons, and Joseph Santley, of J. H. Remick. A number of the latest records made by the company were played and greatly enjoyed.

LIONS CLUB HONORS L. M. COLE

Popular Wholesale Traveler Featured in Business Club's Publication—His Success in Industry Well Deserved

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 6.—One of the most popular men actively engaged in the selling end of the phonograph and record business in New York State is Lionel M. Cole, sales manager of the Iroquois Sales Corp., of this city, wholesale distributor of Okeh records and Granby phonographs. Mr. Cole owes a considerable measure of his success to his host of real personal friends in the trade, and to the fact that he possesses the rare quality of working effectively both for his house and his customers in a manner that produces permanent relationships and lasting results.

The Lions Club of Buffalo, New York, of which Mr. Cole is a member, recently introduced him in the "Get Acquainted" column of the club's publication through the medium of the following prose poem:

"Songs that masters great have sung us never need we now to lack. Here's Lionel Cole among us, who can bring the masters back. For their greatness they've recorded on the Okeh record's scroll. Listening we feel rewarded as from Granby's throat they roll. Here's a thing that's worth the telling. Li's well liked among the trade. In the years that he's been selling, many are the friends he's made. Used to be quite athletic, in which field he also shone; now his efforts energetic are into his business thrown."

MARKETS RADIO AMPLIFYING HORN

The F. C. Kent Co., 67 Grace street, Irvington, N. J., the well-known manufacturer of attachments for talking machines, has placed upon the market a new radio amplifying horn under the trade name Kentone. The instrument is made of brass tubing and in such form that there are no sudden angles to deflect sound. It will fit any of the popular makes of radio receivers and is guaranteed by the manufacturer. The styles are in black, nickel and gold plated.

THIS is one of the latest additions to the EDISON line . . . . a new, popularly priced Console Model in the much-favored Chippendale design.

A few years ago Thomas A. Edison, Inc. offered the trade the first Console Period Models ever manufactured in the phonograph industry. These were the higher priced authentic Period designs.

With the broadening of the phonograph market in late years has come a desire for finer designs at the popular prices, and Thomas A. Edison, Inc. has met this desire with the official laboratory model in this new Chippendale Console, which in quality is a worthy peer of the earlier but higher priced models.

The Playing of a Battered Old Talking Machine Is an Exceedingly Bad Publicity Stunt

Upon dropping into a neighborhood cigar store recently the writer had occasion to listen to the conversation of the cigar man and several customers regarding the annoyance caused by a local talking machine dealer through the constant playing of a rather scratchy talking machine and apparently very much battered records, with the "music" issuing from a type of tin horn that did everything but improve the tone. The conversation was far from complimentary to the dealer. The cigar man offered the opinion, perhaps biased, that people actually went to a cigar store located in another direction rather than pass the talking machine store and hear the discord.

A visit to the talking machine store proved that the proprietor thought he was pulling off a good publicity stunt. He did not simply put a record on and let it play, but each time the record was changed he put a sign into a special frame at the side of the window reading: "The machine is now playing the latest fox-trot, 'Cherie,'" or whatever the title might be. For demonstration purposes the dealer had dug up an old-style horn machine, attaching a rubber hose to the horn socket, with the other end fastened to a hole in the doorjamb. On the other side of the hole facing the street was an ordinary tin horn, of what was one time known as the "flower" type. The dealer carried one of the leading types of machines and records and was giving the public a demonstration of the latest releases. The music evidently started from the record all right, but all that came out of the horn was a blare and rasp, with the melody hardly distinguishable.

The question was just how much good the dealer was doing his business by continuing the open-air demonstration, for it appeared more than likely that he was driving away more trade than he was attracting.

Certainly the layman, who had no idea of talking machine quality, would not be impressed with the reproducing powers of the modern

A Worn-out Machine Is Not a Good Advertisement for Records and Arouses the Antagonism of Neighbors

instrument while listening to the tones emitted from the horn, and there was nothing about the demonstration that was calculated to make a man enter the store and risk hearing such music at first hand.

The idea of conveying talking machine record music long distances through tubes and through various contraptions to a point where it can be thrown wildly at the passer-by on the sidewalk is fast being cast aside, for although such a demonstration attracts attention it also attracts criticism, proves a nuisance to the neighborhood and does not offer a proper display of the real musical powers of the machine and records.

The modern plan in the Summertime is to place a large machine close to the doorway and then play the new records at intervals with sufficient rest period between demonstrations to prevent the playing becoming tiresome to those who live nearby and whose patronage is considered worth while.

Another good plan that has been adopted in several instances is to place grille work in the panel under the show window, maintaining a machine on the platform in the cellar so that the tone chamber is directly on a level with the street and then letting it go. This requires the presence of an attendant on the platform to change the records and the needles, but the cost of a half-hour demonstration when the crowd on the street is the thickest is little enough when possible results are considered.

The talking machine as a musical instrument is frequently abused. The tenant in Apartment 10 may enjoy immensely the playing over of a lively Irish reel, time and time again, for an hour or two each evening, but the people who live in Apartments 11 and 12 may be so unfeeling as to prefer a little concert music in homeopathic doses. The result is that the tenants in 11 and 12 talk loudly of the talking machine as a nuisance, although one or the other may have an outfit of his own and with the sort of records he prefers.

There are enough inconsiderate talking machine owners scattered about to cause trouble and develop prejudice against even the best machines and records without the dealer lending his help. A blary demonstration is bad enough in the crowded business street, where it is drowned during the day by the noise of the traffic and silenced after business hours, but to keep the neighborhood flooded with mangled jazz throughout the evening, when people in their homes feel that they have a right to converse, read or sleep, as may be, in comparative quiet within the precincts of their own home, is, on the face of it, maintaining a nuisance.

It might be well for the dealer who has been carrying on such demonstrations, even though he has devised a plan for carrying the music to the street without impairing its quality, to have a little scouting done about the neighborhood to get a line on the effect. He is in business to sell goods to his neighbors and not to annoy them, and even though the annoyance is unintentional it has its effect just the same.

Talking machine concerts of good music can, at proper intervals, prove pleasing even in the select resident neighborhoods, but a continuous noisy demonstration does no good.

The public demonstration problem, incidentally, has been cleverly solved by a talking machine concern in a small city in the upper section of New York State, which secured permission from the town authorities to block off a section of the main street in front of its store for the purpose of giving a demonstration concert of special records. Under such conditions a demonstration is bound to arouse general interest and commendation.

MISS YATES HEADS DEPARTMENT

CINCINNATI, O., May 2.—Miss Stella Yates, who has been connected with the talking machine department of the H. & S. Pogue Co., this city, for the past seven years, has been promoted to buyer and manager of the department, succeeding C. S. Browning, who recently became manager of the new talking machine departments opened by Steinway & Sons.

TONE QUALITY par excellence

Purity, resonance, volume, individuality, sweetness, mellowness, nuance, color—all these qualities are faithfully reproduced by the Violin Spruce Diaphragm. Nature's perfect resonating medium—violin spruce—scientifically adapted, is free from all the inherent faults of mica and other vibrating mediums.

Wins Instant Approval

The following excerpts are from letters in our files:

A famous artist, under exclusive contract with a maker of phonograph records, says:

"... that is the most perfect, the most beautiful reproduction of my playing I have ever heard."

From a phonograph manufacturer:

From a builder of special designs only:

From household owners:

"... is the most wonderful I have ever heard."

"... it has brought out tones from my records I never heard before."

"... I tell my friends it is the perfect reproducer."

From a sales executive, fourteen years in the talking machine business:

"... I have tried it (the reproducer) on every kind of record imaginable and the reproduction is excellent."

Are You Wasting Your Advertising? READ THIS UNICO MESSAGE. Then Get Out Your Pencil!

YOUR advertising says in effect, "Come to my store; you will get Better Service here." Fine, that's your logical argument because it is a mighty small community where one dealer has an exclusive agency for a particular line of machines and records.

BUT what is "Better Service"? To be successful, advertising must be convincing and your claim of "Better Service" must be substantiated. Your customer must be assured comfortable and convenient audition rooms, record sales facilities that satisfy and store surroundings that are artistic and in harmony with your quality merchandise.

AT this point Unico Service comes into the picture. You specialize in selling music—we specialize in equipment and service for producing sales. Equipment that guarantees "Better Service" makes good your advertising. But, you say, wherein does Unico Equipment differ from any I might build and what is Unico Service?

AS one successful dealer recently described it, Unico Equipment "provides the most effective sales facilities at the most economical cost"—equipment which, in addition to its mechanical efficiency, creates a sales background which is convincing in its appeal.

ITS value as a selling force is permanent—through patented sectional construction Unico Equipment is insured against depreciation.

UNICO Service is just as different as Unico Equipment. Your problems are handled by a staff of experts combining years of merchandising and construction experience. It is this expert service together with unequalled facilities which make possible the complete installation of departments of character, such as those illustrated above, within two or three weeks from date of your order. Our record of 2,500 installations is conclusive proof that yours will be right.

NOW for that pencil! The selling force and the advertising value of Unico Equipment alone make it your wise and logical choice. However, figure it from a dollars and sense standpoint as an investment—consider the surrender value.

OVER 50% of the cost of any equipment you install is represented by labor cost and when you have occasion to move or rearrange your department that 50%, in the case of ordinary equipment, is practically all lost, together with a good portion of the remaining 50% through material that is damaged and destroyed. That's why Unico Equipment is your economical investment. Our patented units are simply unlocked. All labor that entered into their original construction is saved. Your equipment does not have to be refinished. There is no loss of material. The value is still 100%.

GET the full Unico Message! Write to-day to our home office or one of our branches.

The "Eye" of the Store Should Tell a Story

By R. S. BAAS, of the Baas Music Shop

The character of every man shines forth in the expression of his eye, and at first meeting one is either favorably or unfavorably impressed by what he sees there. So it is with a dealer. Every passer-by is either favorably or unfavorably impressed by the "eye" of your store, and unless that impression is favorable you may be losing money daily in lost business through such an impression. Where your rate of rental is based on the value of your window, as it happens to be in a good many cases, your loss will be untold.

An effective window display is one prepared to tell a story, and in addition to telling the story should attract the eye. Don't try to tell the passer-by too much of a story. If, for instance, you are making a display of records, then make it solely a record display with nothing to detract from that story.

Window trims can be classified under three headings: selling, creating a desire and decorative. These three headings dovetail more or less into one another, but each is planned differently.

An actual selling window is one that sells chiefly by its being brought to the attention of a passer-by, and without any premeditated intention on his part. It may be a single record, it may be several records of the same classification or it may be a Victrola of a certain type and finish at special terms. No matter what kind, it tells a story that produces immediate results.

A good window display grows on the looker. Its attractiveness gets the attention and its effectiveness makes the sale. For instance, at Christmastime we show a huge fireplace with the logs a-burning within. The fireplace, dummy figures of mother, dad and the children, a Christmas tree, toys and a Victrola standing near. A window of this sort is apt to create a desire for possession.

The decorative or display window is one that, while telling no particular story, acquaints the passer-by with the fact that here is a good place to buy a Victrola and Victor records, and so impresses him that when he is in the market for your merchandise he thinks of you as being the best one to buy from. Above all, your window display should never be slovenly or haphazard of merchandise. Such a window means nothing and invariably leaves an unfavorable impression of your store.

Never overcrowd your displays. They then become a jumbled mass and lose their effectiveness. Another thing, regardless of your ability as a window trimmer, you can at least keep both the glass and the floor clean. A clean, shiny window always stands out sufficiently to attract attention. While all dealers do not possess the knack of clever window trimming, nevertheless a little thought and time given to your window displays and with frequent changes will add to the prestige of your store, which means additional profits for you.

EDISON DEALERS MEET IN DALLAS

Merchants From Texas and Oklahoma Convened at Texas-Oklahoma Phonograph Co.'s Store

DALLAS, TEX., May 3.—Half a hundred phonograph dealers from various points in Texas and Oklahoma attended a conference at the Texas-Oklahoma Phonograph Co.'s store recently. The conference during the day was followed by a banquet at the Oriental Hotel in the evening, which was attended by dealers and their wives.

A. H. Curry, president of the company and vice-president and general manager of the phonograph division of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Orange, N. J., was the principal speaker at both the conference and the banquet. Mr. Curry talked on the phonograph industry and business conditions generally. He said that business conditions were much improved in the North and East, and predicted that a corresponding improvement would soon be noted in the Southwest and other sections of the country.

The Brunswick Shop, of Williamsport, Pa., recently gained considerable publicity through a contest open to all, for the best essay on "The Benefits of Music in Every Home."

A DECISION OF WIDE INTEREST

Gramophone Co., of London, Eng., Wins Decision Against Polyphon Co., Barring Sale of Its "Red Seal" Records in Sweden

The proceedings brought by the Gramophone Co., of London, Eng., against the Deutsche Grammophon A. G. and the Polyphon Co., at Copenhagen, Sweden, for alleged violation of the copyright of certain "Red Seal" artists' records has been decided in favor of the first-named concern, according to advices reaching here recently. The Gramophone Co. is a subsidiary of the Victor Talking Machine Co., of Camden, N. J.

The situation was brought about by the sale of certain records, including some made by Caruso and other prominent artists, which had been secured by the Polyphon Co. during the war as a result of the trading-with-the-enemy laws. After the war the Gramophone Co. brought suit to restrain the German concern from selling these records in other countries, charging an infringement of copyright privileges and property rights.

This decision is important in view of a similar suit of the Victor Talking Machine Co. which is now pending in the United States District Court in Brooklyn, N. Y., asking for an injunction against the sale of imported records by the Opera Disc Co.

VICTOR RECORDS BY CARUSO

Attractive New Booklet Devoted Exclusively to Caruso Records Just Issued by Victor Co.

The Victor Talking Machine Co. has just issued an attractive little booklet, carefully compiled and classified, and devoted exclusively to the records made by the late Enrico Caruso. The booklet opens with a short introduction outlining Caruso's career, and then come the record lists divided into the several classes, such as dramatic, lyric, in English, concerted, devotional, love songs and Neapolitan numbers.

Setting forth as it does in one group all the records made by Caruso, the booklet serves to emphasize most emphatically the great work of the late tenor, and should prove of distinct convenience to those who sell Caruso records, as well as those who desire to expand their libraries of such records.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE CONVENTION

Constructive Program Arranged for Tenth Annual Meeting of Chamber of Commerce of U. S. to Be Held in Washington This Month

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 6.—"European Conditions and Their Effect on American Business" will be the main topic at the tenth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, to be held in Washington May 16 to 18. This announcement was made by the Chamber when it made public a tentative program.

Because of the interest of business men throughout the country in the general subject it is predicted that the convention will be one of the largest ever held by the Chamber. More than 1,400 business organizations have been asked to send representatives and an attendance of from 4,000 to 5,000 business men is looked for.

"In selecting the subject for the convention," said the statement by the Chamber, "there was a desire to obtain a thorough discussion of world business conditions as well as domestic conditions for use as a basis of judgment in planning measures to insure a continuing future prosperity in the United States. The situation abroad has been constantly changing and the time has come for a new inquiry into the facts. The biggest question before American business men today is the problem of formulating intelligent plans that may be of assistance in restoring normal economic conditions.

"No plans can be made that do not take into account the European situation, including such problems as the Allied debts, reparations settlements, paper currency issues, exchange fluctuations, ocean shipping, etc."

As in previous years the work of the convention will be done largely in group sessions. Groups representing the major divisions of business will take up the questions before the meeting in their relation to the particular interests or industries within the group.

Among the subjects scheduled for discussion are: Effect of the European Situation on American Business, Merchant Marine, Housing, Distribution, Production in Industry, Finance, Foreign Commerce, Insurance, Actual Resources, Railroads, Highway Transports, Labor and Immigration and Transportation and Communication Abroad.

The talking machine and furniture establishment of B. Glass, in Suffern, N. Y., has been redecorated. The talking machine department, where the Victor line is featured, has been considerably improved by the addition of several sound-proof demonstration rooms and a large room for the display of the machines.

The Development of an Attractive Personality Is an Essential to Success :: By Chas. T. Hubbard

Personality as a success feature worth developing is highly recommended to the ambitious talking machine and music dealer. Emerson remarked that "an institution is but the lengthened shadow of a man" and so the popular and profitable store is often the reflection of one man's personality. To some personality is a misconception. Many believe that personality is merely the business manner of being able to greet customers with a glad hand and a smile. This is but personality in its lowest evolution.

The talking machine dealer who has cultivated a pleasant personality has accomplished more than merely the knack of shaking hands while extending a smile. The type of personality which wins success and prosperity is that which is founded on sincerity. Personality means thoughtfulness, friendliness, wholesomeness and many other virtues. Sometimes the best personalities are to be found among dealers who do not possess the effervescent smile and practiced handshake. Personality originates in a man's mind and should not be donned as part of business equipment to be used merely during the day. A successful personality is not the result of endeavoring to copy the ways or mannerisms of another, but in the thorough analyzation of one's self to find first what powers should be best cultivated. Personality represents the highest cultivation of these powers.

Perhaps as a dealer or manager you have as your asset the virtue of patience. Again, you may be endowed with a pleasant voice or it may be that you are favored with a pleasing address, a good sense of management, original qualification in advertising or other powers. On these your personality can rest if you will but take an inventory of the manner you should best cultivate.

It has been stated that almost any twelve-year-old boy can, as automobiles pass, tell the make and cost of each one and describe with surprising knowledge the mechanics of each car and all about it. Many men at later ages pride themselves on being able to do the same thing. Most of us are familiar with the lives and histories of our leading ballplayers, actors and prizefighters—yet how few of us really know anything about ourselves? The talking machine dealer has discovered that by making a study of records and human nature an interesting and profitable business has been created. A knowledge of business methods is necessary in order that one may qualify as a successful talking machine dealer. In the same manner a knowledge of yourself is essential in order that you may benefit with the best results from others. The good features of your own personality are well worth cultivating in this worthy effort—for they are very likely to be characterized throughout your whole organization and its results.

NOW DESCRIBED AS "A MENACE"

Princeton University Professor Makes Excited Attack Upon Talking Machine and Its Influence Upon the Life of the Students

Although the work done by the talking machine in the development of musical interest and appreciation is generally recognized throughout the country, and recognized by those in a position to observe and understand the great results, there are still those who for one reason or another like to take a fall out of the talking machine and talking machine music whenever the opportunity presents itself.

Now comes a professor of Princeton University, backed by the Daily Princetonian, the University paper, to declare that the talking machine is to be regarded as a menace at the University as tending to cause waste of time and interfere with the work of the students. The charge is embodied in the following dispatch which appeared recently in the New York Herald:

"The phonograph has become one of the greatest menaces to serious study in American universities, say several professors in Princeton. It now ranks with bridge, dances, 'petting' and other diversions which attract the undergraduate from his books. Says Prof. Randolph Hermance, supervisor of freshmen:

"One man goes to visit a friend's room and immediately they indulge in a phonographic session, playing one record after another with no apparent interest in the music. And so one more perfectly good hour is wasted in the idle and useless amusement."

The worthy professor and his associates will find few to agree with their contention. They probably forget the times, if they ever knew of them, when the average college frat house, or dormitory, simply exuded so-called melodies from the throats of ambitious glee club men, properly stimulated, or plucked out of guitars, mandolins or banjos. At least the modern talking machine offers real music, which same cannot be said of the amateur efforts of other days.

OKEH ARTISTS AT RADIO CONCERT

Well-known Artists Appear at Bedloe's Island Station—Successful Concert Under Fred Hager's Direction—Plan Weekly Programs

Another Okeh record radio party was given April 19 under the direction of Fred W. Hager, general manager of the Okeh recording library, at Bedloe's Island Broadcasting Station (WVP). Several of the selections on the program were request numbers, among which were "Kiss Me By Wireless," sung as a duet by Jane Neilson, soprano and Nat Sanders, tenor. Nathan Glantz, another well-known Okeh artist and brilliant saxophonist, entertained with a new novelty number "Step Along," and also played "Dardanella" by request.

The Rega Dance Orchestra, an exclusive Okeh organization, under the direction of Justin Ring, played three selections, "The Sheik," "The Clock of Love" and "Swanee Smiles." Other numbers on the program contributed to the success of the evening, and it is interesting to note that Okeh concerts have been so well received by radio fans that plans have been made whereby Okeh artists will offer programs every Wednesday night from Bedloe's Island Broadcasting Station.

“Gallagher and Shean”

Their humorous little ditties have been laughed to from Maine to California and from Canada to the Gulf. Everybody knows them. Everybody wants them. They're so typically G. & S. that one little strain is enough to put a giggle through a whole house. As rendered on Banner Record 1054, the song is a thunderbolt—one hundred per cent mirth provoking, and sales producing.

And here's another idea—a Gallagher and Shean fox-trot—wonderful!—with a talking saxophone and a laughing trombone. You can almost hear the words. “Absolutely” speaks the saxophone—“Positively” says the trombone. The orchestra has taken advantage of the opportunity and made just that kind of a dance-thing that sells and sells—for months!

AMBITION

By EDWARD FRASER CARSON

When a young man enters business he is very much like a ship starting on a voyage. Only it is usually the case that the young man does not know where he is headed. The ship does.

Edward Fraser Carson

Before the ship weighs anchor or casts loose from its pier the captain gets his sailing orders. These orders tell him to what port he is to take the ship and with that knowledge he gets out his charts, orders the engineer to start the engine and he is off—headed for a definite port.

And, barring accidents, the ship in due time reaches that port.

How many young men who start out in life have a definite goal in view? Have YOU—you who read these lines? Do you know in what direction you are heading? Do you know where you will make port? Do you know where you will be, even where you hope to be, twenty or thirty years hence?

Will you be a boss yourself, directing the work of others? Or will you be plodding—still plodding along on a salary dependent on another for the privilege of working?

Have you ever stopped to sit down and seriously figure it out? Believe me, it's a good thing to do. And the more you think—really think about it—the sooner you will get your sailing orders. The sooner you will know what the future holds for you in the way of prosperity.

And when you have your orders you will start the engine that nature gave you and see to it that it keeps working smoothly and steadily. You will keep your eye on the chart and your mind on the destination you have chosen.

When you do that, young man, you will reach the place you set out for. It doesn't make a bit of difference what that place is. No matter what your ambition may be you can attain it if you keep it continually before you and work hard. It is as sure as death and taxes.

Ambition is dual in its nature. It implies first, a definite goal and, second, the energy to work to attain that goal. To have a goal without the energy to work for it is to dream, and undirected—or misdirected—energy is wasted power. Many a man can, and usually does, dream of the things he would like to be or the heights he would like to attain. He wishes he were rich or that he was mayor or governor or that he was the boss.

But he lacks the energy to attain this ambition. He takes it out in wishing. He is like a ship with the engines broken down at sea, drifting at the mercy of the waves.

In like measure, others have the energy—the pep, as they say—necessary to win success, but they never get anywhere. They are always working, always striving, but have no goal in view.

If such a man does get anywhere it is pure luck. Like a ship without a chart he has nothing to guide him.

Success in life depends on these two things—

a goal and the energy to work for it. And these two things are ambition.

And if you, young man, have ambition there is no handicap you cannot overcome, no barrier you cannot surmount. With ambition there is nothing you cannot attain.

DAVIN ADDRESSES DULUTH DEALERS

Speaks on Advertising and Selling—Miss Dixon Dwells on Music Appreciation—To Renew Billboard Publicity—Victrola Show Planned

DULUTH, MINN., May 4.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Victor Dealers' Association, held in this city recently, the principal speaker of the evening was J. J. Davin, of the Reincke-Ellis Co., who spoke most interestingly on the subject of advertising and selling. With his wide experience in the talking machine business and his grasp of conditions throughout the country, his talk made quite a favorable impression and he was given a rising vote of thanks.

Miss Dixon, supervisor of music for the schools of Duluth, also gave a very interesting talk on "Music Appreciation," and asked for full co-operation in the music memory contest held in this city.

After the Association banquet, which was attended by all the Victor dealers along the Range, the regular monthly business session was held and it was decided to renew the co-operative billboard campaign inaugurated by the Association.

The city of Duluth's yearly exposition will be held the week of May 14, and the Association is planning a Victrola show as its contribution to the exhibit.

WRITES ARTICLE ON RECORDING

An interesting article on the making of talking machine records appeared in a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor. The text, which was supplemented by illustrations of the actual recording and a view of the record-pressing room of a plant, was supplied by A. C. P. Russen, of Newark, N. J.

Dear Bill:

I have just finished reading your letter and that portion of it relating to your difficulty in making collections reminded me that only last week the Jones Music House went into bankruptcy. In his petition Jones stated that his failure was due to the large number of outstanding, uncollectible accounts. I have been watching Jones for the past year and have warned him time and time again against the methods which he was using in trying to make collections. Perhaps you are making some of the same mistakes and, therefore, I will risk your displeasure by preaching again and warning you against certain harmful practices.

Every customer who comes into your store, whether he is independent from the financial standpoint or depends on his weekly or monthly salary to meet current expenses, is possessed of a certain amount of pride. In this particular every man, woman and child is kin and, in view of this fact, it will be best for you not to forget to calculate on this very human characteristic when trying to collect delinquent accounts.

Instant antagonism is aroused on the part of a customer when the dealer undiplomatically and bluntly tells the customer that his payment is overdue. The typewritten letter is also a cold proposition from the customer's standpoint. In the majority of cases you will find, upon investigation, that a person has neglected to make a payment for either one of two reasons: either the matter has been overlooked unintentionally or the patron is in temporary financial difficulty. The latter will often be the case where the head of the house is employed at a trade where he is out of work for several days at a time in periods between jobs. This class of customer usually takes pride in the fact that bills are paid promptly, and if you become impatient at a few days' delay the chances are that you will make an enemy. It is much better to try to get in touch with the customer personally and have a frank understanding about the matter. Make him feel that while you want your money when it is due you value his patronage and he will respond by making every effort to comply with your policy of doing business.

If it is impossible to make personal contact the only thing left to do is to get in touch with him by letter. As I stated before, the short, snappy, so-called business type of letter will do more harm than good in a case such as this. Write in the same manner that you would to a friend, mentioning the fact that the customer has not been in to see you of late and also draw attention to some new records, etc., which you think might interest him. Before closing call his attention to his overdue payment, stating that the matter has probably been overlooked by him and close with a statement that you hope to see him concerning the records mentioned. An inquiry as to whether the machine which he purchased is giving satisfaction will also go far in promoting good will.

In the case where a customer neglects to make a payment through an unintentional oversight a letter similar to the above will achieve the desired results without giving offense. Of course, the thing to do is to keep after customers so that they will not get into the habit of putting you off, but the point is that you cannot afford to make an enemy of even a slow-paying customer.

With best wishes,

Jim.

SONORA PRICES ARE REDUCED

New Price List Announced by Sonora Phonograph Co. Represents Reductions in Entire Line—Company Advises Trade New Prices Will Remain Standard for Balance of Year

The Sonora Phonograph Co. announced a few weeks ago a new schedule of prices for Sonora phonographs. When advising the trade regarding these new prices the company stated as follows: "Present conditions have had their effect on labor as well as the price of raw materials, so that the Sonora factories are to-day turning out better phonographs at lower prices. Sonora's policy always has been, and always will be, to pass on to dealers and the public all savings effected by careful management and economy in the buying of raw materials, as well as economies realized by increased production. An exhaustive investigation has been made into the various steps of the construction of each model, with the result that to-day's prices will not be again changed this year."

The new prices of the conventional Sonora models are as follows: Invincible, $350; Grand, $300; Elite (wooden tone arm), $265; Elite (new metal tone arm), $250; Baby Grand, $200; Intermezzo, $175; Imperial, $150; Etude, $100; Melodie, $50, and the Portable, $50.

Reduced prices for Sonora standard and De Luxe period models have also been announced and the new prices of the standard period models are as follows: Lafayette, $165; Pembroke, $165; Canterbury, $200; Queen Anne, $250; Louis XV, Lorraine, $325 and $300; Italian Renaissance, Verona, $300; Louis XVI, Royale, $300; Adam, Hartford, $300; Queen Anne, Queensboro, $300.

INSTALLS TWENTY RECORD BOOTHS

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 2.—Extensive alterations, designed to considerably enlarge the Victrola department of the Boston House, one of the largest department stores in this city, have added twenty record demonstrating rooms to that department. A nursery room has been built in which children may hear records played.

Sells Records From Music Shop on Wheels

Written for The World by CHAS. OLIVE

An entirely novel idea in connection with the sale of talking machine records has been put into use by the Hershey Music Store, of Willmar, Minn. This store, one of the oldest music businesses in that town, is under the management of Mr. Hershey, Victor and Columbia dealer, and is doing a good business, both at Willmar and Atwater, where a branch store is conducted. His new idea is that of selling records by automobile.

A closed car is used for carrying the records and it is equipped with racks that hold the records safely even on bumpy roads. The record outfit consists of the greatest hits and the most popular pieces, because these are the easiest to sell. The auto is in charge of a competent salesman, whose route is carefully mapped out for each day in the week; thus the territory controlled by the firm is canvassed many times during the Summer and Fall, and every home with a talking machine is visited, in town, surrounding country and villages. The records are delivered directly from the stock carried in the car, so that these pieces are not used merely for demonstration.

The plan is as excellent as it is novel and the salesman does a good business. He visits not only the homes in the neighborhood, but also the hotels, boarding houses and Summer cottages. Around Willmar are many beautiful lakes, where people spend the Summer months in cottages, and these people are good buyers of new records. They are staying out there just to rest and enjoy themselves and have lots of time to use and play talking machines. Any new and striking pieces will interest them. Summer boarders also look for good records to break the monotony. And even the folks out on the farms buy many records when the salesman comes around. They use the talking machine at lawn parties, church socials, picnics, etc., and are always glad to get something new to play. The salesman is able to advise them of the latest hits and, as the records can be obtained so conveniently, the temptation of buying the best can hardly be withstood.

Further, the salesman carries one of the smaller Victrolas in the car, for the purpose of interesting possible purchasers in the machine, and also for demonstrating certain records when necessary. Those places or localities yielding the most business are visited at least twice a month with a stock of new records and many sales are made there every time. As conducted by Mr. Hershey the selling of records by automobile not only increases Summer business, but also advertises the store and gives it greater prestige, so that many more regular customers are attracted to the place. Because the Hershey Music Store carries a complete stock of sheet music and musical instruments of all kinds every record customer means also a possible purchaser of some other merchandise in the music line.

KODISK PLACED ON MARKET

Metal Disc for Making Permanent Home Recordings Now Ready for Trade—Uses Ordinary Steel Needle for Recording and Reproducing—Has Many Unique Features

A metal recording disc for home recording which will be known as the "Kodisk," has just been placed on the market by the Phonovations Co., Inc., 37 East Eighteenth street, New York, which will be the distributor of this disc. The "Kodisk," which is manufactured by the Metal Recording Disc Co., may be used with any phonograph to record the human voice or any combination of musical instruments. Recordings may be made either through talking into the horn of the phonograph and using the sound box as a recorder, or by using the "Kodisk" recording horn for recording and reproducing. The discs will be made in various sizes with space for recording on each side, and it is stated that the record made on the "Kodisk" is absolutely permanent. The ordinary high-grade loud tone steel needle is used for the recording point, and the simplicity of the "Kodisk" and its method of operation is one of the outstanding features of this new home-recording outfit. It is the invention of one of the best-known members of the talking machine industry.

SEABURG CO. IN RADIO FIELD

Well-Known Manufacturer Making Radio Cabinets—Orders Received in Large Quantities

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., May 5.—The Seaburg Manufacturing Co., of this city, manufacturer of the Librola phonograph, a combination talking machine and library table, is doing considerable work in the radio field. Librola cabinets are admirably fitted for the installation of wireless outfits, as nearly all standard equipment may be installed in the record compartment side, while the horn on the other side is used as a loud speaker.

The Seaburg Manufacturing Co. is furnishing cabinets alone for both the talking machine manufacturer and the radio assembler, and during the past few weeks orders have been received from well-known concerns in all parts of the country. The Seaburg factory is co-operating with its trade in every possible way and is making prompt shipments of these cabinets.

W. D. WARREN IN NEW QUARTERS

W. D. Warren, who has built up a very excellent business in talking machines, records and player rolls in Denver, Col., has just moved to a new location in that city at 238 Fifteenth street. He is carrying a very large stock and has equipped the establishment in a manner that should prove most attractive to purchasers. He has also opened a repair department to meet the needs of his customers.

The firm of McKean, Darby & Baldwin, Portland, Ore., has purchased the talking machine business of A. J. Lilburn & Son, Roseburg, Ore.

ADVOCATES STANDARD "TALKERS" FOR BROADCASTING

Absolutely Essential to the Best Results in the Transmission of Record Music by Means of the Radio, Declares President of the Cleveland Radio Association, E. H. Poad

CLEVELAND, O., May 6.—That the standard talking machine is essential to proper broadcasting of music by radiophone is the assertion of E. H. Poad, president of the Cleveland Radio Association, this statement coming simultaneously with the closing of negotiations with the Department of Commerce by Warren R. Cox, head of the Cox Laboratories, who has just returned from Washington with the limited license that permits the broadcasting of music, news and general information. The Cox station, the only one in Cleveland, and one of only five in the country, will be known as WHK.

In order not to conflict with the distribution from Pittsburgh, Chicago, Newark and Springfield, Mass., on those nights during which concerts are given, the wave length from WHK will be kept down to 360 meter wave lengths, which means that receivers within a radius of 200 miles will receive the material thus broadcasted in Cleveland without interfering with outside broadcasting, and vice versa.

So well equipped are the Cox Laboratories, however, that the music distributed from this point has been received in Celina, Kan., according to Mr. Cox. The laboratories are located on the top floor of the Stuyvesant Building.

While the talking machine figures most prominently in the music broadcasted from this station a staff of musicians, headed by Miss Ethel Toole, is part of the Cox organization. The concerts sent out are now being held three nights every week. The room in which the concerts are held is cloth-padded, absolutely sound-proof and barred to all outsiders.

But the chief factor in this method of music distribution is the talking machine, in the opinion of President Poad, of the Cleveland Radio Association, under the auspices of which the concerts are being given.

"A standard talking machine is absolutely essential to the proper transmission of record music," says Mr. Poad. "Surface noises must be absent entirely or the effect is spoiled completely. We know this by experience with many types of machines. Those outside of the sending station have often wondered why they cannot get good reproduction at times. It is because of the surface noises created by some instruments or records. We who are interested in developing this science have learned this by experimenting with various machines. There is no idea of discrimination, however, but we have found that the best-recognized machines and records are best for this purpose."

It merely happens, therefore, that in the present work being done in Cleveland the Victor machine and Victor records are being used at WHK. The instrument and records are being supplied by the Buescher Co.

It is through the Cleveland Radio Association that significant steps in radio development in the Cleveland district are being taken, in the opinion of Mr. Poad. Prominent business men of the community are personally interested in its achievements and in directing its affairs.

SOUND BOX THIEF SENT TO JAIL

H. J. Wexler, Youth Who Stole Talking Machine Parts From Store of Winterroth & Co., New York, Sentenced to Elmira Reformatory

At least one talking machine sound box thief will not annoy New York dealers for a couple of years to come, following the action of the Court of Special Sessions recently in sending Herman J. Wexler, of 2 Tracy avenue, Newark, N. J., to Elmira Reformatory.

The prosecution of Wexler came about through the efforts of E. J. Winterroth and Valentine Faeth, of Winterroth & Co., Union Square. A man went into one of the Winterroth booths on April 8 to hear some records and when he left one of the machines was found to be minus its tone arm. A careful watch was kept and the following day a young man came in to listen to some records and as he started toward the door an investigation showed that a tone arm was missing and a large exhibition sound box had been removed and replaced by a smaller type.

The tone arm was found on the youth, who proved to be Wexler, and it was decided to prosecute. Messrs. Winterroth and Faeth were supported in their case by Charles E. Neier, an attorney, and Irwin Kurtz, president of the Talking Machine Men, Inc. It was hoped to learn the name of the party to whom Wexler had disposed of his talking machine parts, but he consistently refused to reveal the name. Investigation brought out the fact that he had pleaded guilty a few months ago to the theft of a sound box from an uptown store.

OKEH RECORDS POPULAR IN SOUTH

ATLANTA, GA., May 3.—One of the live-wire Okeh record dealers in the South is B. G. Porter, of Eustis, Fla., who has been handling this line only a few months, according to P. C. ### TAKE OVER REGINA ASSETS

Creditors' Committee Incorporated for the Purpose of Settling the Affairs of Bankrupt Concern—Will Start Work at Once

At a meeting of the creditors of the Regina Co., held at the office of the Referee in Bankruptcy last month, the referee approved a plan for the purchase of the assets of the company by the Creditors' Committee. The plan was carried out and the Regina Corp. was chartered under the laws of the State of New Jersey with a capital of 10,000 shares of no par value stock, for the purpose of taking over the assets and business of the Regina Co.

It was the original intention of the committee to issue a share for each dollar of indebtedness. It was found, however, in order to carry out this plan, the fee of the Secretary of State would have been in excess of $10,000.00. It therefore was decided to have fewer shares and issue one share for each $100.00 of indebtedness. This necessitates there being fractional shares, but it was held that this is not objectionable.

An organization meeting of the new company was held and the following officers and directors elected: W. L. Desnoyers, president; C. M. Cubbison, vice-president; Eugene F. E. Jung, secretary and treasurer; James F. Shaw and E. F. Fretz, directors.

Of the above, Mr. Fretz is president of the Light Manufacturing and Foundry Co., at Pottstown, Pa., and was the largest merchandise creditor and was on the Creditors' Committee. Mr. Jung also is on the Creditors' Committee and is by profession a statistician and economic expert. Mr. Shaw is of the banking house of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne. Mr. Cubbison is a sales manager of large experience and will take charge of the sales of the new company. Mr. Desnoyers has been acting as receiver and his training and experience in reorganization work should be of value to the company.

The following trustees were appointed: W. L. Desnoyers, John Bernhard and D. L. Murphy. These have qualified and will superintend the winding up of the affairs of the old Regina Co.

It is expected that between now and the end of May it will be possible to pay off all preferred claims, liquidating expenses, etc., and the company will then be prepared to send a statement to credit agencies and to its stockholders.

STEALS TALKING MACHINE MOTORS

Obtains Names of Machine Owners From Dealer and, Posing as Repairman, Steals Motors

The operation of a new type of burglar was revealed in the metropolitan district recently when Benjamin Springsteen was arraigned before Magistrate Douras charged with grand larceny. The complainant against him was Jacob Zatlun, proprietor of a musical instrument store at 596 East 180th street. He charged that Springsteen obtained a list of his customers who had purchased talking machines on the instalment plan and visiting nine of them induced them to let him remove the motors of the machines "to look them over" and then failed to return them.

VICTOR CO. APPEALS DECISIONS

Appeals to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati were taken by the Victor Talking Machine Co. on April 17, 1922, from the decisions of Federal Judge Sessions, rendered April 5, 1922, in the Victor Co.'s suits against the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. and against the General Phonograph Corp. and General Phonograph Corp. of Illinois.

LOUIS M. GREENBERG INCORPORATES

"DAILY DOZEN" IN THE SCHOOLS

Health Builders' Records Become Part of Curriculum of George Washington School, Keokuk, Ia.—Stimulates Athletic Activity

KEOKUK, IA., May 1.—Walter Camp's "Daily Dozen," through the medium of the Health Builders' records, produced by Health Builders, Inc., New York City, has become a part of the curriculum of the George Washington School of this city. Every morning at 9:45 and again in the middle of the afternoon the pupils in all the grades of this school are put through the twelve exercises to be found in this record course. At the beginning the first set of records explaining each part of the exercise was used, but the children rapidly learned these exercises, and now the advanced records in which the exercise is merely announced are being used. The twelve exercises are gone through in less than fifteen minutes, during which the windows are thrown open. The same talking machine which is used in other educational work is used for the Health Builders' record. The teachers of all grades in this school are enthusiastic over the "Daily Dozen" and many of the children have induced their parents to purchase the Health Builders' course of records from the local talking machine dealer for use in their homes.

G. K. LORD SINGS FOR RADIO

Gene Kenneth Lord, the Singing organist, who recently signed a contract to record exclusively for Okeh records, is one of the latest Okeh artists to sing over the radio. Mr. Lord has been singing from the broadcasting station of Strawberry & Clothier, Philadelphia, and the program has been advertised in all of the Philadelphia papers. His new spiritualistic hymns are meeting with an excellent reception from the Okeh dealers, who are well pleased with the sale of these records.

Reubin Wallace is the new manager of the Victrola sales department of the Carroll Music Shop, Appleton, Wis.

Fine Music Goes Hand in Hand with Fine Machines and Fine Machines are Cased in Genuine Mahogany

IN these days, when the music-loving public enters your store, you have not only to talk music but durability, fine workmanship of motor and cabinet and particularly, you have to talk quality. For the public is as much interested in the appearance of the machine as in its tone-producing ability.

The trade is realizing this more and more. A New York City evening paper recently carried the following news item:

"The situation of the companies that are in difficulties can be summed up in their producing an inferior product," said George A. Dodge, of Boston, treasurer of the Eastern Talking Machine Company. "They produced an inferior product that didn't stand up even in the hands of dealers. Some companies filled their storehouses with as many as 500,000 of these machines, and the public threw them back on their hands. Naturally, they have to liquidate."

Ninety percent of the pianos built in this country are made of Genuine Mahogany. Genuine Mahogany, whether in pianos, furniture, paneling, or in talking machine cabinets, is both durable and beautiful. And your clientele has been educated for many months to demand the durable and beautiful.

“Fish—or Cut Bait!”

A while ago “big business” was being handed out on a silver platter—but to-day things have changed. “Big Business” is still to be had, only it means action, and lots of it. What are you doing to stir up new business, Mr. Victor Dealer? Going to sit tight and wait for something to happen—or are you going to get down to “brass tacks”? One thing is certain—your future success depends upon your efforts.

Right now, let's all get behind the one big bet of the season—the PORTABLE VICTROLA No. 50. This instrument, while an all-year-round money producer, is a particularly ideal model for the spring and summer months. The abundant pleasure it affords, its wonderful reproducing qualities, its extremely low cost, are all features that make the No. 50 a sure seller.

In the country, in the home, when camping, while sailing, for dancing and entertainment, the PORTABLE VICTROLA No. 50 is indispensable.

What a world of opportunity there is open to you, Mr. Victor Dealer! Don't delay a moment—begin your advertising and selling campaign at once. In doing so you will receive the benefits of the Victor Company's advertising that will soon begin in all the leading magazines and newspapers throughout the country. A rare opportunity now presents itself!

Some Timely Merchandising Suggestions for Live Talking Machine Dealers :: By Frank H. Williams

Women's wear stores and department stores stage style shows constantly and get a lot of business from such stunts.

Why couldn't the talking machine dealer stage a style show and boost business thereby?

Here's the idea: Secure some old-style instruments of the kind you handle and display these in your show window alongside some modern machines—preferably the console or perpendicular styles. Then get some old-time records, including the cylinder type, and arrange them beside the modern records. At the rear of the window place a sign reading like this:

OUR TALKING MACHINE STYLE SHOW

Contrast the old-style talking machines and records with the modern styles of machines and records. Keep up with the style. Change your old machine for a new instrument NOW.

The same sort of an exhibition might be carried out inside the store.

This would create a lot of interest and would undoubtedly make numerous sales to people who would be brought, by the show, to a realization that they were, perhaps, far behind the times in the matter of possessing the latest creations in machines and records.

An Original Plan of Making Sales

The Wolf & Dessauer department store, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has developed a particularly good business in Victor machines and records under the direction of W. E. Cotter, the manager of the department. One of the ideas which he has used in pushing his business could, undoubtedly, be employed by other talking machine departments or stores to good advantage.

This stunt is the formation of an orchestra among the store employes and the playing by this orchestra at farmers' institute meetings, school gatherings over the county, and public gatherings of every sort where there is a demand for music and where no other provisions for music have been made. The orchestra is composed of music-lovers who play for the love of it and so it costs nothing to operate the orchestra. All the members, too, have their own instruments, so the store is out nothing for equipment.

And whenever the orchestra goes anywhere to play, Mr. Cotter always takes along a big Victor demonstrator and a bunch of records of the type he feels will appeal to his audience. Between selections by the orchestra, the machine is played. In this way Mr. Cotter secures a demonstration where it will do the most good, and he has made many sales as the result of all this.

How to Stimulate Interest in the Store

Who has the oldest talking machine in your city?

Who has the oldest record?

Think how interesting it would be to discover these old-timers and to exhibit them in your show window!

And think how much interest would be aroused in your city by an announcement to the effect that you would award a prize of five new records to the owner of the oldest machine in the city and five records to the owner of the oldest local record! Such an announcement would create a lot of scurrying back and forth and examination of machines and records and all this sort of thing would stir up a renewed interest in machines and records and would, therefore, stimulate your business as well as making your store more talked about than any other talking machine store or department in the city. Try this plan in YOUR store NOW!

Keeping the Young Folks Interested

Every parent of a child of high school age is deeply and vitally interested in knowing where his child is at night.

This being the case it would be a good stunt for the talking machine dealer to secure a list of the local high school students from the principal of the school or from the local superintendent of schools and then to solicit the parents of these children on the proposition of purchasing machines and records for home use, as a "talker" in the home is one of the best possible ways of keeping children of this age at home nights and of getting the young people to bring their friends around to the house where the parents can see who and what sort of people these friends are.

In many of the homes thus solicited there would, undoubtedly, already be talking machines, but there may be no new records in the home, hence the "talker" was seldom used. To these people the dealer could easily sell new records.

Don't pass up this method of getting more business.

PLAN NATIONAL MERCHANDISE FAIR

Event Similar to the Leipzig Fair in Europe to Be Held in New York in August

Announcement has been made that the National Merchandise Fair under the auspices of the National Retail Dry Goods Association will be held in New York City at the Grand Central Palace during the first three weeks of next August. Colonel Michael Friedsam, president of B. Altman & Co. and chairman of the general executive committee in charge of the Fair, issued a statement in which he reviewed the plan and told how all energies would be devoted to preparing for the event. With the assistance of the committee, he is now completing the various groups required to handle the Fair arrangements, including ways and means, merchandise exhibits, co-operation, entertainment and publicity.

Describing the need of lower distribution costs, from the raw material to the consumer, Colonel Friedsam declared the Fair would provide appreciable economies, since it would allow buyers to purchase all they needed within a limited period and within the least possible area adequate for merchandise display. In mentioning the good results obtained abroad, he stated that the Leipzig Fair this year had given work to the manufacturers for the next half year. The assurance of immediate sales in large volume, he said, would be welcomed by the manufacturers here.

Booth space will be allocated to the various lines of merchandise, it was explained at the Association offices, in the same proportion that they contribute to the general volume of business of the average department store, the purpose being to develop a well-rounded exhibition. At the same time the plan calls for a lay-out of exhibits along the lines generally followed in the average department store.

Every sales manager and salesman should remember that line of Charles Frohman's, says the Treasure Chest: "There are no bad towns—only bad plays!" Every town will show its good side to good salesmen, good products and good service.

The Cheney Resonator is actually Carved out of Seasoned Violin Wood

Carving Cheney Resonators from violin wood—seasoned maple and spruce

The famous violin resonator of The Cheney is really carved from seasoned spruce and maple, the resonant woods which develop within a violin its rich, sweet tones.

Only by carving the walls of The Cheney Resonator can we achieve that richness and fullness of tone which makes The Cheney stand out from all other phonographs. It is a part—and an essential part—of the acoustic system which makes The Cheney absolutely, fundamentally different from any other phonograph that is made.

The violin wood used in The Cheney Resonator is not kiln dried. It is carefully seasoned for a year or more in the only way that sensitive woods can be seasoned to retain their live, vibratory quality—by time and the elements.

CHENEY TALKING MACHINE COMPANY, CHICAGO

“The longer you play it, the sweeter it grows”

Because the sensitive wood shell of a fine violin is the most perfect resonating chamber known to musical science, the resonator of The Cheney [a most important exclusive feature] is carved in the same graceful, symmetrical lines. Suspended at a single point of contact, it hangs in the cabinet free from obstruction, vibrating with every passing note. As its delicately curved walls become ever more vibrant and responsive, it is true of The Cheney, like an old violin, that “The longer you play it, the sweeter it grows.”

Considering the quality of workmanship, Cheney prices are remarkably low. Regular models retail from $115 to $325. Console models in a variety of styles.

Keeping Fit to Music through the aid of the Health Builders' course of records, produced by Health Builders, Inc., New York City, is set to music. The new Atlantic City Athletic Club recently held its first banquet in the Venetian room of the Ambassador Hotel, which was attended by over 200 prominent professional and business men of this well-known resort. Mayor Bader of Atlantic City acted as toastmaster, and among the specially invited guests were Walter Camp, Robert B. Wheelan, president of Health Builders, Inc., and Bernarr MacFadden, publisher of the Physical Culture Magazine. Walter Camp addressed the gathering on "Keeping Fit," and told of his experiences while helping the United States Navy Physical Training Department during the World War. Robert B. Wheelan, president of Health Builders, Inc., spoke on somewhat similar lines, discussing not only the value of keeping fit, but how it was possible to have the "Daily Dozen" in the home set to music, and demonstrated this fact by actually putting the guests through the exercises at the close of his address. These 200 prominent members, clad in their "soup and fish," and others dressed in business suits, responded heartily to Mr. Wheelan's suggestion and with the help of a talking machine and Health Builders' records went through the complete course. This was an outstanding event of the evening, and much enthusiasm was displayed over this course of records.

Trade Survey Discloses Attitude of Women Toward Window Displays and Advertising

MARSHALLTOWN, WIS., May 9.—One of the most complete reports on a retail trade survey ever given has just been turned over to the local Chamber of Commerce. The survey was made in November, 1921, by W. F. Bristol, of the extension department of the State University. Out of seventy-five answers received to a questionnaire concerning advertising, seventy-three women said they read the newspaper ads and were guided in their purchasing by the advertising published in newspapers by merchants. Window display advertising was recommended, however, as the one from which most results come, with newspapers second in point of view of results. The answers disclosed that women were drawn downtown by newspaper advertisements, but that they expected the window displays to draw them into the stores.

Dealers Inaugurate Clever Plan Which Stimulates the Sale of Records

It isn't a question of "If you're waking call me early," because you get called early anyhow, whether you're waking or not. For Flatbush, N. Y., talking machine dealers have put on an efficiency stunt that makes every day as mad and merry a day as anybody could wish, says The Sun.

This is the way it goes: Your telephone rings, and in answer to your "Hello" a voice with a wile inquires concerning your musical appetite at the moment; whether you feel that jazz or chamber music would go down easiest, whether you are hungry for opera or have a hankering after coon songs. All you have to do is to express your preference and a musical bill of fare, selected accordingly, is served you over the telephone. Indicate the items you like best, and in ten minutes the records show up at your front door to be tried on your own favorite talking machine.

Victor Jobber Suggests That Dealers Carefully Investigate Discount Proposition—Some Plans Considered Unfair—Legitimate Discount Companies Suffer by Activities of Other Kind

Talking machine jobbers and dealers in Greater New York have been visited recently by representatives of several discount companies who have tried to interest them in the merits of their respective propositions. The jobbers have been asked to lend their endorsements to the plan, and dealers, of course, have been solicited direct for business. The Silas E. Pear-sall Co., Victrola wholesaler, in order to protect the interests of its dealers, investigated one of these plans, and at the conclusion of its investigation advised Victor dealers to be very careful in giving their paper to the representatives of this discount company. The proposition itself seemed equitable on the surface, but upon investigation it was found that there was a "joker" in the contract offered the dealer which not only would necessitate the use of more paper than specified in the contract, but might cause the dealer considerable annoyance and embarrassment. It is therefore suggested that dealers in Greater New York who are offered contracts by discount companies read the contracts very carefully and be absolutely certain that there is no possibility of any ambiguity or misconception of the terms in the contract.

There are quite a number of discount companies in New York which are conducting their business along legitimate, ethical lines that represent practical co-operation to the talking machine dealer, but these concerns are having their activities jeopardized by the unfair methods adopted by some of the discount companies which have chosen talking machine dealers as victims.

NEW PORTABLE GRAFONOLA

Columbia Graphophone Co. Announces New Portable Model—Will Retail at $50—Has Many Distinctive Merits That Will Appeal

The Columbia Graphophone Co. has just placed on the market a portable model which has won the enthusiastic praise of all Columbia dealers who have inspected it carefully. The new portable Grafonola, which weighs only twenty-two and one-quarter pounds and will retail for $50, is covered with heavy, durable, black Fabrikoid, reinforced at the corners. The inside is finished in highly polished red mahogany, making the instrument very attractive in its playing position.

Some of the features of the new Grafonola, as set forth in detail in the Columbia Co.'s literature, are as follows: Two pivoted tone control leaves at the mouth of the amplifying chamber permit modifying the volume of tone as desired; the cover encloses the scientifically shaped amplifying chamber (or horn), which permits the full and natural development of the sound waves (as in the big cabinet Grafonolas) from the neck of the tone arm to the mouth of the horn; an escutcheon at this point fits over the motor pinion and secures the turntable against rattle or damage during transportation; the standard Columbia bayonet-joint tone arm conveys the sound waves directly into the amplifying chamber in a continuously widening channel without obstruction or the necessity of employing special turns or adjustments to suit this type of a phonograph; covers seal needle cups when top is lowered for carrying; three nickel needle cups (one for used needles) prevent aggravating forgetfulness; the position of the winding spindle gives the crank a wide swing, which permits easy and safe winding of motor; heavy nicked corner protectors give strength, withstand abuse and save scratching of furniture; tone arm and improved standard Columbia reproducer swing back without adjustment and are safely positioned by a spring for carrying; winding crank is conveniently positioned here for transportation; ingenious safety catch permits dust-proof closing of cover.

Okeh Artist Will Feature "Kiss Me By Wireless" on European Tour—Fred Hager Writes Comedy Chorus as Requested

Sophie Tucker, famous vaudeville star and exclusive Okeh artist, sailed a few weeks ago for England, but before her departure she became interested in radio, and while visiting the laboratory of the General Phonograph Corp. for the purpose of making several Okeh records, heard the new fox-trot called "Kiss Me By Wireless." She tried it out during one of her spare moments and decided to use it in her repertoire in England.

When Miss Tucker sailed for England she carried with her copies of the lyrics and orchestrations of this new fox-trot, but just off Sandy Hook discovered that the song needed a comedy chorus in order to make it a "real" hit on the other side. Miss Tucker thereupon visited the radio operator's cabin and sent the following message to Fred Hager, director of the Okeh laboratories, who wrote the song: "Kiss Me By Wireless' needs comedy version."

Upon receipt of this radiogram Mr. Hager immediately composed a special chorus to suit Miss Tucker's requirements and dispatched it at once. According to her present plans Miss Tucker will feature "Kiss Me By Wireless" extensively in her tour of England.

NEW VICTROLA BOOK OF OPERA

Sixth Edition Represents Entirely New Work and Is Most Complete of Its Kind

The Victor Talking Machine Co. has just announced the sixth edition of "The Victrola Book of the Opera." The new edition does not represent a revision of the earlier editions, but is a book that has been completely rewritten and is one of the most complete works of its kind. The new book contains stories of more than 100 operas, with summaries of their history, musical quotations, critical and explanatory material. Correct pronunciations are given of the names of operas and operatic characters and all the stories are told in clear, concise English. A new and attractive cover design in gold, embossed on a red background, has been provided for the new edition.

The worker who willfully cuts down his efforts almost invariably cuts down his character.

COLUMBIA ARTISTS IN EUROPE

Famous Operatic Stars Winning Additional Fame Abroad—Some Details of Artists' Activities

There was recently received at the executive offices of the Columbia Graphophone Co., New York, an interesting communication from the Columbia headquarters in Paris, relative to the activities of Columbia artists abroad. This letter read in part as follows:

"Charles Hackett is rapidly becoming the best-known American tenor in Europe. First Monte Carlo welcomed him with cheers when he sang in 'Tosca' there; now it is the turn of La Scala, Milan, and later in the Spring he is to be heard both at the Paris Opera and Opera-Comique. Ponselle and Macbeth are being continually spoken of as the big stars of the Paris Spring season, while Lazaro is setting them howling with delight in Naples. The plan of having a gala performance of 'Rigoletto' at the opera with Barrientos, Hackett and Stracciari in the principal roles has not been abandoned, and this Columbia artists' performance may be given at the end of March.

"Maria Barrientos is singing in Madrid just now with bigger success than ever. A series of concerts and performances are scheduled in Paris this Spring with her as the principal star. Hipolito Lazaro continues his triumphant career in Italy. His time is all taken up for the coming twelve months, and the prices he obtains in Spain are the highest ever paid any singer.

"Toscha Seidel played a tremendously successful concert in Paris, and the critics are hailing him as a violinistic revelation. He is soon to start on a concert tour of Australia, thus making practically a tour of the world during his absence from America, to which he returns next year. Stracciari, the famous baritone, has apparently fully recovered from his recent indisposition, for he is reaping a tremendous success all over Italy at present."

Manager of Talking Machine Department of Cluett & Sons, Inc., Made President of New Music Trades Association Organized in Troy

Troy, N. Y., May 4.—Amos E. Russell, manager of the talking machine department of Cluett & Sons, Inc., of this city, was elected president of the Music Trades Association of Troy, which was formed here recently, when a number of local music dealers and those interested in the trade gathered for that purpose. Other officers include: E. T. Nehill, secretary, and Mrs. Lillian H. Caldwell, treasurer. A constitution committee was appointed to select a regular meeting night and to take up other business which might properly come before it. The committee is as follows: Frank S. Rogers, L. O. Toole and L. G. Hathaway. A publicity committee, composed of J. H. Caldwell, A. E. Russell and F. S. Rogers was named to acquaint the public with the aims and accomplishments of the Association.

Amos E. Russell

The Association selected "Give More Thought to Music" for its motto, pointing out that the cultural and educational value of music demanded at least thought, if not study, on the part of all individuals.

Tentative plans for the observance of Music Week were made and a request was made for suggestions and plans from the members. The Association has decided to function as much as possible in the manner of the music trade associations of other cities, and therefore it was determined to conduct a publicity campaign on a large scale during Music Week, April 30 until May 6. Concerts, theatre displays and demonstrations were discussed and approved by those in attendance.

The charter members of the Music Trades Association of Troy are as follows: A. E. Russell, E. T. Nehill, Mrs. L. H. Caldwell, F. S. Rogers, J. H. Caldwell, L. O. Toole, W. K. Denniston, E. F. Culkin, Orrin E. Galbraith, Mrs. Alice F. Colwell and L. C. Hathaway. The organization has great plans for the future and after firmly establishing the present organization and proving its worth and ability the members expect to organize a music trades association embracing Albany, Troy, Schenectady and other cities of this district.

A UNIQUE DELIVERY AUTO

COLUMBUS, NEB., May 3.—Many talking machine dealers have arranged their delivery machines with a special body in the shape of a talking machine, but C. H. Dack, a local druggist, who handles a line of talking machines and records has gone a step further in placing on his Ford delivery car a body made of metal designed like two talking machines. The machine is used for delivering prescriptions and two machines can also be placed in the body for delivery.

If you don't like the talking machine business get out of it and try something that you do like.

BRUNSWICK WITH HALLE BROS. CO.

Opens Beautifully Appointed Talking Machine Department Wherein Brunswick Gets Exclusive Representation—N. Cook in Charge

CLEVELAND, O., May 9.—One of the biggest events of the year in the Cleveland talking machine trade occurred on Monday, May 1, when Halle Bros. Co., of this city, formally opened the new Brunswick department. This high-class store, catering to the better class of trade, has advantages for which many talking machine companies have sought for years. The Brunswick department is being managed by Norman Cook, who has been connected with the talking machine trade for many years and whose last trade connection prior to this appointment was with the Eclipse Musical Co.

The talking machine department is beautifully appointed with Unico equipment and occupies a large space on the seventh floor of the Halle

Co.'s ten-story building. This company operates over 110 departments, all elaborately equipped, where retail merchandising is conducted on a high plane of excellence.

The Cleveland trade appreciates that the consummation of this deal is a real advantage for Brunswick, as all are familiar with the opportunities offered by Halle Bros. All hands, therefore, are congratulating the Brunswick Co. on closing this transaction, which was handled in the interests of the Brunswick Co. by A. J. Kendrick, sales manager, with the assistance of the Cleveland office of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., May 8.—The La Velle Mfg. Co., known throughout the talking machine trade as producers of the La Velle Bob-o-link phonographs and record books for children, has recently issued an attractive catalog of its line which centers on games and novelty sets for girls. Four pages are devoted to a thorough exposition of Bob-o-link phonographs, which are now produced in two models, and the various record books. The Bob-o-link model, which formerly retailed for $25, is now listed at $18 and it is reported that the new price has greatly stimulated sales.

The newest record book issue is a game set which includes such familiar games as "Here We Go Round the Mulberry Bush," "The Farmer in the Dell," "London Bridge" and "John Brown Had a Little Indian." This new set has met with instant popularity although only recently introduced. The La Velle Co. is energetically featuring the entire line and other attractive sales literature has been prepared for the talking machine trade.

Concerts Interest Public—C. E. Avery Joins Stewart Bros.—Baker Leases Store—Trade News

COLUMBUS, O., May 5.—All the Victor dealers are co-operating in the benefit concert that is to be given at Memorial Hall on Wednesday evening, May 10, by John Steel, tenor and Victor artist. The profits of this concert will go to the Welfare Association of the Blind. Practically every dealer will feature John Steel's records in his window during the week of the concert, as well as advertise in the newspapers.

So popular was the first Victrola concert given in the music room of the Z. L. White Co. that F. J. Connor, manager of the Victrola department, has decided to give another this month. Business is improving both in records and machines, according to Mr. Connor. He stated that the months of March and April have exceeded in the number of sales the same months of the past two years.

With the appearance of Frieda Hempel, the noted Edison artist, in this city, on April 28, in a Jenny Lind program, the window of the Z. L. White Store featured the concert. It was centered by a figure which represented Jenny Lind. At the piano, a square rosewood of 1850, was an accompanist in the costume of that period. There were original Jenny Lind programs in the window and a painting. C. C. Baker's window also had a miniature Jenny Lind figure.

C. E. Avery, who has recently come to Columbus to become associated with the Victrola department of the Stewart Bros., Victor dealers, is an accomplished pianist. Prior to coming here he was connected with the J. B. Avery Music Store, Amherst, O., and later with the Lion Store at Toledo. He has appeared in concerts as soloist as well as with orchestras. At the present time Mr. Avery is particularly interested in reorganizing the record department of his firm. It is his object to have the most complete stock of Victor records possible.

C. C. Baker, of the C. C. Baker Music Stores, recently secured the storeroom and basement at 123 South High street for a term of ten years. The lease is effective January 1, 1923, and calls for an average yearly rental of $19,000. Mr. Baker has four music stores here, and he secured this new room as his central store and expects to occupy it when he removes from his present location in the Neil House block.

What is considered to be one of the largest signs in this city and acknowledged to be the largest Victor sign is that painted on one side of the building, housing the Elite Music Store, Victor dealer, 211 South High street. The dimensions of this sign are 35 by 80 feet. Harry Patton, manager of this firm, stated that this sign is one of the best advertising mediums he has ever employed in promoting his business.

Don John, of John's Music Store, in Lima, O., was a recent visitor to the Perry B. Whitsit Co., wholesale Victor jobber, 211 North Fifth street. Mr. John has designed a large cut-out metal sign of the famous fox terrier Victor dog, which he makes in various sizes to be used for out-of-door advertising or preferably highway advertising. Some of these signs are constructed for the purpose of appearing on top of a business block, and others along the roadside. The dealer's name and the names of the Victrolas painted on the body of the dog make a very attractive sign or advertisement.

Mrs. Esther R. Beaver, educational director of the Perry B. Whitsit Co., is now visiting schools in a number of cities throughout the State, where she is conducting educational work.

SONORA JOBBER VISITS FACTORY

C. L. Marshall Visits Saginaw Plant—Will Call Upon All Dealers in His Territory—Kentucky Now Covered by This Distributor

DETROIT, MICH., May 8.—Frank J. Coupe, vice-president and director of sales of the Sonora Phonograph Co., visited here a few days ago, accompanied by C. L. Marshall, Detroit jobber, and spent a couple of days at the Saginaw plant of the Sonora Co. Mr. Marshall states that it is his intention to visit every Sonora dealer during May, and his purpose in visiting the factory at this time was to gain an intimate knowledge of Sonora's present manufacturing methods. He was delighted with his visit, and is giving Sonora dealers a detailed account of the perfection and thoroughness that characterizes Sonora manufacturing.

The recently announced reduction in the price of Sonora phonographs has met with an enthusiastic reception from the trade. The Sonora Co. is rebating its dealers for all stock on hand affected by the cut in price, and this broad-minded attitude has enhanced the good-will and confidence of the dealers in the Sonora.

Kentucky was recently added to the territory covered by the C. L. Marshall Co., and this progressive jobber is now taking care of the dealers in the States of Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky.

Adolph Winters, talking machine dealer of Richmond, Cal. is constructing a new building on Eleventh street and Macdonald avenue, where he will house his business.

CARUSO MEMORIAL EXPOSITION

Display of Mementos of the Late Tenor, Together With Other Musical Attractions, Recently Held at Canessa Galleries for the Benefit of Caruso Memorial Foundation

Under the auspices of the Caruso Memorial Foundation an exposition of the singer's memorabilia was opened on Monday, April 24, at the Canessa Galleries, 1 West Fiftieth street, New York, and continued for two weeks, both afternoon and evening. The exhibits included the late tenor's personal art collection in which are found rare enamels and porcelains. There was also shown the original costume he wore in his debut in "Rigoletto" in 1903, together with many caricatures from his own pen and busts and pictures of him by other artists.

Among the interesting mementos was a Victrola of Queen Anne design in Chinese lacquer finish, presented to Caruso by the Victor Talking Machine Co., together with a gold master of the first record he made for that company, on February 1, 1904. The number was "Questa o quella" (Mid the Fair Throng).

Several houses in the music industry contributed to the exhibit, showing modern instruments. The Aeolian Co. displayed a Steinway Duo-Art reproducing grand, two period Vocalions, and a number of Vocalion records. Thos. A. Edison, Inc., displayed a model of the original tin-foil phonograph, together with a modern Amberola, a new Edison disc machine in period style, and a number of Edison re-creations.

Hardman, Peck & Co. had on display Caruso's own Autotone finished in white and decorated in Empire style, together with a Hardman reproducing grand, autographed photo of Caruso, and other mementos.

William Knabe & Co. displayed a Knabe grand with the Ampico. Landay Bros., Victor dealers, contributed a large Victrola and a collection of Caruso records. G. Schirmer, Inc., displayed a number of books on music and opera scores. The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co. had on display a number of rare violins, including a Stradivarius, together with several harps.

During the course of the week informal concerts were given each afternoon and evening under the auspices of the Aeolian Co., the American Piano Co., Thos. A. Edison, Inc., and Hardman, Peck & Co.

Why You Should Sell Sonora Phonographs

Reason Five—

Sonora Dealer Service

When a new dealer is enlisted in the great Sonora household, a powerful service organization and series of dealer helps are at once placed at his disposal—at no cost to himself.

Sonora lithographic matter, consisting of beautifully colored counter cards, window cards, decorative screens, store-hangers, 24-sheet posters, etc., go to him free. A dealer service department at Sonora headquarters constantly keeps in touch with individual dealers, supplying their wants and assisting them in various ways, through personal correspondence and a monthly house-organ.

The strength, distinction and timeliness of Sonora advertising have always given it real "pull" and exceptional selling power. The newspaper advertisements shown on this page are only a sample of the attractive campaigns furnished free in electro or matrix form to Sonora dealers.

INDIANAPOLIS

Many Talking Machines Destroyed by Fire in Pearson Piano Co. and Indianapolis Talking Machine Co. Stores—Trade Activities

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 9.—Following the fire on Sunday, April 23, which caused an estimated loss of more than $100,000 to the Pearson Piano Co., that concern has taken temporary quarters in the former Marott department store, at 342-358 Massachusetts avenue, pending remodeling of the company's warerooms, at 128 North Pennsylvania street. Instruments that were in transit at the time of the fire, as well as surplus stock from the five other stores operated by the company in other Indiana cities, have been placed in the new store. It is announced the burned building will be ready for occupancy again July 1.

Figures originally given as to the number of instruments ruined in the fire were excessive, according to E. W. Stockdale, manager. The number of pianos in the store at the time of the fire was 300, and the number of talking machines was 250. Close to 130 talking machines were burned, while 50,000 records were ruined by water, Mr. Stockdale says. The other instruments were damaged by water and smoke.

The Indianapolis Talking Machine Co., located in a store adjoining the Pearson Piano Co., suffered a loss from water and smoke estimated by A. C. Hawkins, manager, at about $15,000. Repairs to that store were made during the week and business was resumed Saturday, April 29.

The Pearson fire was the second fire in recent months causing damage to piano stores. The Baldwin Piano Co. suffered a loss of about $25,000 in a fire last November. This company now is doing business in a completely remodeled and redecorated store which is one of the handsomest in the city. The three floors have been decorated in brown and gray shades. Draperies and rugs give the demonstration rooms an air of elegance, while a specially woven gray carpet on the main floor adds a distinctive touch there which is rich and harmonious.

C. P. Herdman, manager of the talking machine department of the Baldwin store, reports the April business ahead of the April business of last year. He has been selling an unusually large number of the Windsor exclusive period models, he says, as well as the higher priced Brunswick models.

Miss Hobson Married

Miss Caroline Hobson, for many years head of the educational department of the Stewart Talking Machine Co., Victor distributor, was married, April 22, to Whiting Raymond, a real estate broker, of Detroit. Miss Hobson became widely known throughout Indiana and adjoining States through her work in the interest of better music. It was through her activity that the music memory contests were taken up in public schools all over the State. Nothing before has aroused such general interest in music as these contests, it is reported by school officials and music dealers.

Barringer in New Quarters

W. S. Barringer, Victor dealer in Kokomo, has moved his store from 304 Main street to a new location on West Mulberry street. The new store was recently refinished, the walls being in gray with the hangings in purple. Three demonstration booths are furnished with wicker furniture, floor lamps and pictures of noted artists.
