PREFACE

FOLLOWING a similar work on Thomas Gray, A CONCORDANCE TO THE POEMS OF WILLIAM WORDSWORTH is the second volume to appear under the auspices of The Concordance Society. Of the subvention requested by the publishers, in order to decrease the pecuniary risk attending so large and costly a venture, The Concordance Society has contributed one-third; for a part of the remainder the editor is indebted to the generosity of his mother and his two brothers. It should be added that, in all their dealings with the editor and The Concordance Society, the publishers have shown themselves friendly, in an unusual measure, to the interests of scholarship as represented in this work.

Function of the Concordance. The labour of compiling this index to the language of Wordsworth was begun, and has been finished, in the well-considered belief that, after Chaucer, Spenser, Shakespeare, and Milton, he is the fifth of the great English poets; that the notion of discarding any large section of his writings as if they were of relatively little value, or unnecessary to the comprehension of the rest, is as pestilent an error as the same notion would be if applied to Lucretius or Plato; that a study of the whole is indispensable to an understanding of the parts, and vice versa; that the study of Wordsworth, having passed beyond the stage of naive appreciation, could not now make any essential advance if a concordance were lacking; and that probably no recent English author has employed so large a vocabulary with so much precision.

The main function of the Concordance is to aid 'the attentive reader', whose coming is anticipated in Wordsworth's Preface to The Excursion, in discovering the vital relation between the longer poems, which are likened to the antechapel and the body of a Gothic church, and the 'minor pieces' which correspond 'to the little cells, oratories, and sepulchral recesses, ordinarily included in those edifices.'

Plan and Execution. The enterprise of this concordance having been announced at a meeting of The Modern Language Association of America in December, 1907, the plan was elaborated by the editor in the following October. A set of 'Instructions to Collaborators' * was drawn up, submitted to the scrutiny both of specialists in the study of Wordsworth and of other competent judges, again rendered as exact and comprehensive as possible, and then, together with the necessary materials, put into the hands of those who had agreed to assist the editor in his undertaking. The Oxford Wordsworth, edited by Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, and bearing the imprint of the year 1907, was adopted as the basic text. Loose sheets of this were obtained in a sufficient number to provide eight complete sets of each allotment of pages; and the work of excerpting was actually begun in November, 1908. The concordance-words were written in the upper left-hand corner of slips of paper of a uniform size (three inches by five); the line of poetry containing each word was cut out of the printed text, and pasted on the corresponding slip; by the use of rubber stamps, the number of the page on which the word and line occur in the text was added in the upper right-hand corner of the slip; by the same device, the title of the poem was indicated in the lower right-hand corner; and then the number of the line was commonly added in script. Cross-references for hyphenated words were made on separate slips.

In this way, it was hoped, a high degree of accuracy would be secured in the copy; for the slips thus prepared were sent to the printer without transcription.

Each collaborator received from one-fortieth to one-eightieth of the Oxford Wordsworth for his share of the text. The editor of the Concordance copied the lines for a number of anomalous passages in the basic text, and also for certain poems which are not contained in the Oxford Wordsworth, but appear in the edition of Mr. Nowell Smith, the Eversley Edition of Professor William Knight, or Professor Knight's Letters of the Wordsworth Family (the choice here being in favour of the text of Mr. Nowell Smith where a choice was possible); and, in addition, he assisted a few of his collaborators who, for one reason or another, were unable to complete their assignments within the time desired.

In most cases, the finished slips for each section of the work were alphabetically arranged before they were returned to the editor, to be incorporated in one main alphabetical list. This final arrangement of all the slips (about 211,000, including the cross-references) was completed before the end of May, 1909, so that the whole task of preparing the copy was accomplished, through careful planning, the division of the burden, the employment of labour-saving devices, and an exceptional spirit of co-operation, in the space of less than seven months. Some delay was encountered in finding a publisher; but this obstacle being suddenly and happily overcome, in part through the kind offices of Mr. Gordon Wordsworth, the printers set to work about the beginning of May, 1910. At the date of this Preface it is two years and three months since the excerpting commenced; had there been no loss of time in discovering the right publisher, the Concordance might have been before the public within eighteen months after its inception.

Collaborators. The following persons freely gave their services in recording the quotations:—

PROFESSOR ARTHUR ADAMS, TRINITY COLLEGE, HARTFORD.
DR. CARROLL S. ALDEN, UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY, ANNAPOLIS.
MR. ADOLPH C. BAEBENROTH, SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY.
DR. ELMER J. BAILEY, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MR. DAN E. BALDWIN, CASCADILLA SCHOOL, ITHACA.
MISS MARY M. BELDEN, ELMIRA COLLEGE.
MISS EDITH BENTLEY, LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.
MR. LESLIE N. BROUGHTON, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MR. LLEWELLYN BUELL, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
PROFESSOR ALBERT S. COOK, YALE UNIVERSITY.
*MRS. ALBERT S. COOK. (Died December 31, 1908.)
MISS MILDRED E. COOK, NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.
DR. EDWARD G. COX, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MR. WILLARD W. ELLIS, CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.
MRS. WILLARD W. ELLIS, ITHACA.
PROFESSOR ROBERT H. FLETCHER, IOWA COLLEGE.
MR. ALLAN H. GILBERT, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MISS ANTOINETTE GREENE, ELMIRA COLLEGE.
MISS ELSTE L. GWYN, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
DR. JOHN LOUIS HANEY, CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL, PHILADELPHIA.
MISS JULIA HARRIS, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.

* The editor will be pleased to give a copy of these 'Instructions' to any one who intends to engage in a similar undertaking.

DR. CHARLES M. HATHAWAY, JR., UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY, ANNAPOLIS.

MRS. SAMUEL P. HAYES, SOUTH HADLEY, MASSACHUSETTS.
PROFESSOR CHARLES W. HOPELL, GOUCHER COLLEGE, BALTIMORE.

MISS CECILIA A. LAW, ITHACA.

MISS ERNESTINE LAURENCE MILLER, SAYRE INSTITUTE, LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.

MISS MARY A. MOLLOY, WINONA SEMINARY, WINONA, MINNESOTA.

MISS MARY MORRISON, NOOKSACK, WASHINGTON.

MISS EDITH J. MUNSELL, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.

DR. HERBERT S. MURCH, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.

PROFESSOR IRENE T. MYERS, PENNSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY, LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.

PROFESSOR PAUL R. POPE, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.

MRS. PAUL R. POPE, ITHACA.

MRS. GEORGE F. REINHARDT, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA.

PROFESSOR ROBERT K. ROOT, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.

PROFESSOR HUBERT G. SHEARIN, PENNSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY, LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.

*MISS EMMA F. SKINNER. (Died September 30, 1910.)

MR. GEORGE S. SPOHN, WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE, WESTMINSTER, MARYLAND.

MR. BENJAMIN F. STELTER, THE UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS.

MRS. HENRY L. STEPHENSON, PORTLAND, OREGON.

MISS FRANCES N. STEVENS, NEW BRUNSWICK, NEW JERSEY.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM STRUNK, JR., CORNELL UNIVERSITY.

MRS. WILLIAM STRUNK, JR., ITHACA.

DR. GEORGE B. TENNANT, PATERSON, NEW JERSEY.

MISS MARY REBECCA THAYER, OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

MISS MABEL F. YEOMANS, ONEONTA, NEW YORK.

The most of these persons had no previous experience in the making of concordances. The editor's experience had been limited to a certain amount of proof-reading in connection with the Concordance to Gray.

Alphabetizing. The following persons took part in the final arrangement of the slips:—

MISS ROSE ABELE.	MISS BESSIE MARRIOTT.
MR. DANE L. BALDWIN.	MISS ELIZABETH MERRILL.
MRS. MADISON BENTLEY.	MR. SHERMAN B. NEFF.
PROFESSOR ALBERT S. COOK.	MR. DOMINIC RUOTOLO.
MISS MILDRED E. COOK.	MR. WILLIAM E. SCHULTZ.
MR. SIDNEY A. COOK.	MISS EDITH B. SLOAT.
MR. HOWARD T. FOULKES.	MISS MARY W. SMYTH.
MISS MARGARET FOWLER.	MR. BENJAMIN F. STELTER.
MR. ALLAN H. GILBERT.	*MR. WILLIAM S. WHITTLE-
MISS ELIZABETH G. HOPPER.	sey. (Died January 19,
MR. GERARD E. JENSEN.	1910.)
MR. ALEXANDER C. JUDSON.	MISS FRANCES B. VAN ZANDT.
MR. JOHN T. MCCANTS.	THE EDITOR.

Proof-reading. The following assisted the editor in the proof-reading:—

PROFESSOR ARTHUR ADAMS.	MR. DOMINIC RUOTOLO.
MISS EMILY H. HALL.	MISS EDITH B. SLOAT.
MISS ELIZABETH G. HOPPER.	MISS MARY REBECCA
MISS ROCA LELAND.	THAYER.
PROFESSOR CHARLES G.	PROFESSOR HUBERT G.
OSGOOD.	SHEARIN.

Quotations. Save in the case of two passages from The Borderers, the quotations from Wordsworth, as in Neve's Concordance to Cowper, consist in every instance of a single line of poetry; care has been taken to preserve any mark of punctuation at the end of a line. The different method of excerpting which was employed in the Concordance to Gray seems not, on the whole, to have produced a much happier result in the way of intelligibility; could not have been so exactly carried out for Wordsworth if the printed text was to be cut and pasted; would inevitably break down if the attempt were made to apply it to the long periodic sentences that are found in The Prelude and The Excursion; and would tend to swell immoderately the size of the work.

Lines 1903-2008 and 2217-2224 of The Borderers are in prose, much of it closely approximating blank verse. For the purposes of the Concordance, it has been assumed that the prose of the first passage gives way to actual verse at line 2009, beginning with 'We are betrayed!' The line-numbering of these two passages being arbitrary, words cited from them are accompanied by what seems to be the most germane bit of context, a part of which may be taken from the line preceding or following.

Omitted Words. No quotations accompany the following words in this Concordance:—

A	BY	HIM	OF	THEIR	US
ALSO	FOR	HIS	OH	THEM	WE
AN	FROM	IF	ON	THERE	WHICH
AND	HAD	IN	OR	THEY	WITH
ARE	HAS	IT	OUR	THIS	YE
AS	HAVE	ITS	OUT	THOU	YOU
AT	HE	NO	SHE	TO	YOUR
BE	HER	NOT	THAT	TOO
BUT	HERE	O	THE	UP

This list is mainly based upon a similar list in the Concordance to Gray, and has its sanction from the practice in Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of The Bible. In the Concordance to Wordsworth, however, it will be observed that the personal pronouns and pronominal adjectives I, ME, MINE, and MY, which are of unusual interest in a subjective poet, are not included in the list of omissions, but belong in another category, which is indicated by the term Partial List. The attempt has been made to include all the occurrences of these four words that have any special significance in connection with the poet.

Partial Lists. In order to lessen the cost of publication, only some of the occurrences of each of the following words have been recorded:—

ABOUT	EVEN	NEITHER	THOSE
AFTER	EVERY	NOR	THRO'
AGAIN	FORTH	NOW	THROUGH
AGAINST	'GAINST	O'ER	THUS
AH	HADST	OFF	THY
ALL	HAST	OFT	TILL
ALONG	HATH	OFTEN	'TILL
ALTHOUGH	HE'S	ONCE	'TIS
AM	HIMSELF	ONE	'T WAS
AMID	HOW	ONLY	'T WERE
AMONG	HOWEVER	OURS	'T WILL
ANY	I	OVER	UNDER
AROUND	I'D	OWN	UNTIL
ART	I'LL	ROUND	UPON
AWAY	I'M	SAID	VERY
BEEN	INDEED	SAY	WAS
BEFORE	INTO	SAYS	WERE
BEHIND	IS	SHALL	WE'RE
BELOW	IT'S	SHALT	WERT
BENEATH	ITSELF	SHE'S	WHAT
BETWEEN	I'VE	SHOULD	WHEN
BOTH	LESS	SHOULDST	WHENCE
CAN	LET	SO	WHERE
CANNOT	LIKE	SOME	WHETHER
CANST	MAY	STILL	WHILE
COULD	MAY'ST	SUCH	WHO
COULDST	ME	TH'	WHOM
DID	MID	THAN	WHOSE
DO	'MID	THAT'S	WHY
DOES	MIGHT	THEE	WILL
DONE	MIGHT'ST	THEIRS	WILT
DOST	MINE	THEN	WITHIN
DOTH	MORE	THENCE	WITHOUT
DOWN	MOST	THEREFORE	WOULD
EACH	MUST	THERE'S	WOULDST
E'ER	MY	THESE	YES
EITHER	MYSELF	THINE	YET
ÉRÉ	NE'ER	THO'	YOURS

The formation of such a list is to some extent arbitrary. The quotations for most of these words were recorded by two of the more experienced and rapid workers, Professor Arthur Adams and Mrs. George F. Reinhardt, whose sections of text, as it happens, were not very characteristic in their substance, though interesting for their peculiarities of syntax. A valuable collection of similes is included in the quotations under the word LIKE. The references to WERE are restricted to the use of this word as a proper name.

Concordance-titles. In order to facilitate the use of the Concordance by persons who may not own the Oxford Wordsworth, it has been necessary to employ no fewer than 728 combinations of words in italics to indicate the titles of the poems. The selection of these catch-titles was very difficult. Wordsworth is often so circumstantial in naming his poems that no significant catchword is discernible; in other cases, the poems have no names; in others, two poems have the same name, or names very similar. In still others, it was found that two or more of the editors of Wordsworth, who give an alphabetical list of titles, had not hit upon the same catchword for their arrangement. For various reasons, therefore, it has often been necessary to refer to a poem by words enough from the opening line to identify it in such an index of first lines as the recent editions of this poet contain. Though some of the concordance-titles may seem unfamiliar or awkward, it must not be supposed that the choice of them was made at random; there is a reason for the particular form in virtually all cases.

Variants. No truly exhaustive collection of the variant readings in the successive editions of Wordsworth's text has ever been published. The editor of the Concordance, having solicited advice from those who were most able to give it, was confirmed in his opinion that he ought not to attempt a labour which would greatly delay the appearance of the whole work, as well as materially increase a pecuniary outlay already becoming formidable. In general, therefore, variant readings have not been recorded, with the exception of those which are included in the standard text of Mr. Hutchinson. In the case of one stanza in each of the poems referred to as Dion, Duty, and Louisa, the variant quotations were provided with no line-numbers in the Concordance, because of the confusion which would otherwise result through the similar numbering of contiguous passages in the same text. The variants in There was a Boy (Oxford Wordsworth, p. 183), and similar extracts from The Prelude (pp. 89, 186, 208), have been noted according to the page, but otherwise the quotations in these extracts are referred to their place in the complete poem; Vaudracour and Julia, however, has been treated in all respects as a separate work, so that there are a few unimportant repetitions as between this and The Prelude, Book 9. In the case of An Evening Walk and Descriptive Sketches, it has been the intention that the final text should be fully recorded; and, for the first or 'Quarto' editions of these poems, the purpose has been to include quotations only for those lines which show a verbal difference from the final text—not merely a difference in the use of capital letters or marks of punctuation. Yet differences in the compounding of words by means of a hyphen have been noted, as well as a few anomalous forms like it's. The delicate task of recording the variants in the 'Quarto' editions of these two poems was entrusted to Professor Robert K. Root, of Princeton University.

Concerning The Recluse, Book First, Part First, it is to be observed that the Concordance accepts the readings of the Eversley Edition in matters of spelling and punctuation, as far as and including line 753, and that the line-numbering of quotations from the extracts published by Wordsworth and his nephew follows that of the canto as a whole. Verbal differences in the Oxford Wordsworth are noted, however, and all the quotations from these extracts are referred to their proper pages (pp. 218, 621, 622, 755) in this text. The text of the Eversley Wordsworth as far as line 753 is said to be based upon a new and careful examination of the original manuscript. From line 754 the text of the quotations in the Concordance is that of the Oxford Wordsworth, and the page-number (755) of this edition is preserved, but the line-numbering, again, is that of the canto as a whole.

Variants and Additional Poems. Of the ostensibly new material from Wordsworth which has been printed by Mr. Nowell Smith and Professor Knight, it must be said that these passages have come before the public in spite of such utterances as the poet is known to have made to Alexander Dyce: 'You know what importance I attach to following strictly the last copy of the text of an author' (Letters of the Wordsworth Family 2. 420). Concerning his adaptations from Juvenal he wrote to Francis Wrangham: 'The verses which you have of mine I should wish to be destroyed' (1. 253). But where recognized editors have shown the way, the maker of a concordance has little choice but to follow. As a result, the present work admits a full list of quotations from these additional sources, even in certain cases where Mr. Nowell Smith and Professor Knight have not clearly differentiated between fresh discoveries and mere variants, or additional or rejected manuscript passages of poems already known. The present writer has discussed several of these cases in Notes and Queries during the autumn of 1910.

One sonnet, attributed to Wordsworth, and published in The Home Journal, New York, October, 1847, is referred to in the Concordance without an accompanying page-number, by the title A sad*.

Homographs. This work makes no pretence of uniting the functions of a lexicon with those of a concordance pure and simple. A lexical concordance to Wordsworth, with an equal number of references, would require a volume probably one-third or one-half as large again as the present. As in the Concordance to Gray, in a few cases only has a distinction been indicated in the meaning of different words which are spelled in the same way. Where such a distinction is made, the attention of the reader will be called to it by a departure from the normal ordering of references according to page-numbers, the form having the fewer references being put first under the common head-word. Under CAN, for example, the quotations containing the noun precede those containing the auxiliary verb; and the case is similar with MUSIC, the name of a dog, and MUSIC, a common noun.

Cross-references. When two or more verbal elements are compounded in the text of Wordsworth by means of a hyphen, the occurrences of the entire word are arranged in their proper place in the alphabet, and cross-reference is made to this whole word from the second element, or second and third elements, of the compound, except in most cases where these elements, being particles and the like, would as single words fall under the rule of partial or complete omissions.

Wordsworth, however, seems to be very inconsistent in the use of the hyphen: within the limits even of a short poem he may print the same combination of elements as a single word and as a compound (see, for example, the references to GREENHOUSE, GREEN-SWARD, NOONTIDE); or he may join the same elements with a hyphen at one time, and at another print them as separate words (compare BATTLE, BATTLE-FIELD, LITTLE, LITTLE-ONE, and various combinations under COTTAGE and MOUNTAIN). He is also at times inconsistent in his spelling (see CRECY, CRESSY, FORBODE, FOREBODE). It is improbable that all of these variations have been discovered in the proof-reading. And though an attempt has been made to normalize the cross-references in page-proof, it has been impossible to obtain a complete uniformity in this matter; for one thing, the unusual demands upon particular fonts have made it necessary that the earlier letters of the alphabet should be printed off, in order to release the type for later ones. Moreover, the editor is doubtful whether any system could have been devised which should exactly provide for all of these petty abnormalities. As the industrious Cruden remarked in his second preface: 'Though it be called . . . "A Complete Concordance", poor sinful man can do nothing absolutely perfect and complete, and therefore the word "complete" is only to be taken in a comparative sense.'

Errors in the Basic Text. In the preparation of this

Concordance, the following errors have been noted in the basic text:—

- 108 Indolence 31, read Than for Then
 209 Laod. 4, read required: for required
 245 P. B. 775, read Bell. for Bell
 789 Excursion 3. 194, read " One for " One 858 Excursion 7. 87, read fortune-telling for foretune-telling.

In some few instances, the word sic, or a mark of interrogation, or a word which should be substituted, has been inserted in brackets in the text of a quotation, in order to draw the attention of the reader to an abnormality; but the paramount aim has been to reproduce with the utmost fidelity the text of Wordsworth as it appears in the editions which have been quoted.

It only remains for the editor to express his sense of deep obligation to all those persons who by their advice, or direct participation in the labour, have aided in the advancement of this work. To Professor Albert S. Cook, President of The Concordance Society, both for counsel in the planning and manifold help in the making, the volume owes a debt too extensive to be well expressed. And from Professor William Strunk, Jr., of Cornell University, the editor has received endless assistance in difficulties both small and great. Mr. George William Harris, the Librarian of Cornell University, provided the manuscript of the Concordance with a place of safe-keeping for the better part of a year. To Miss Elizabeth G. Hopper, of the Library of Congress, Miss Mary Rebecca Thayer, of Oakland, Maryland, Miss Edith B. Sloat, of Ithaca, and Mr. Dominic Ruotolo, of the Yale University Library, special thanks are due for a devotion to the interests of the Concordance which has been quite incommensurate with the compensation which they received for their labours.

LIST OF TITLES

Some ground not mine; and, strong her strength
 (Above the convex of the watery globe)
 (Above the general roar of woods and crags)
 Above the hermit's long-forsaken cell!
 High is her aim as heaven above,
 Streaming from founts above the starry sky,
 Lodged above the starry pole;
 "Haste! and above Siberian snows

 Clear shines the glorious sun above;
 Each narrowing above each—the wings,
 Impetuous motion to the Stars above her.
 From sorrow, like the sky above our heads.
 Rapt though He were above the power of sense,
 Hands clasped above the crucifix he wore
 And seeking consolation from above;
 Rapt above earth by power of one fair face,
 God reigns above, and Spirits strong
 And mysteries above her years.
 "But oh! thou Angel from above,
 Above the loftiest ridge or mound
 Raised far above the law of kind;
 Woman! I above all women glorified,
 Thea, like the mountain, thundering from above
 (As yours above all offices is high)
 Looks oo, and Grace descendeth from above
 By a bright ladder to the world above.
 Warbled, for heaven above and earth below,
 Stage above stage) would sit this Island's King,
 Towering above the sea and little ships;
 Above his head uplifted in vain prayer
 Above sea-clouds, the Peaks of Arran rose;
 About, below, above,
 The lark above the hill,
 My spirit seems to mount above
 Lost above all, ye labouring multitude!
 May He pour round you, from worlds far above
 His living rof above our heads.
 Above a world that deems itself most wise
 Above all grandeur, a pure life uncrossed
 Then, with a blessing granted from above . . .

Through its meek influence, from above,
 The cold, cold moon above her head,
 Above his antlered head;
 And, if she trust the stars above
 For love of God, run fast above thy sphere;
 Himself above each lower thought uplifting,
 These mortal spheres above,
 When first, above the yells of bigot strife,
 Above the rave's nest, by knots of grass
 Extended high above a dusky grove.
 Hast placed me high above my best deserts,
 Lifted above the ground by airy fancies,
 Above, behind, far stretching and before;
 Above the press and danger of the crowd,
 Above all height! like an aerial cross
 And above all—for this was more than all—
 To things above all art; but more, for this,
 On which he dwells, above this frame of things
 Brooding above the fierce confederate storm
 The shadows of the breezy elms above
 Of death-plant, under and above him strewn,
 I stand—the chasm of sky above my head
 Above what rules can teach, or fancy feign;
 To an Authority enthroned above
 On human nature from above imposed.
 —And that unless above himself he can —Jehovah—shapeless Power above all Powers,
 Above the summits of the highest hills,
 Hovered above our destiny on earth:
 Of ancient minster lifted above the cloud
 Shedding sweet influence from above; or pure
 Above the centre of the Vale, a voice
 Above this transitory world, allow
 And would preserve as things above all price,
 Of increase and the mandate from above
 Above the darkened hills stood boldly forth
 Thoughts raised above the Earth while here he sits

Of vale below, a height of hills above. . . .
 A task above my skill; the silent mind . . .
 Scrub lives a genuine Marquess above stairs.
Abraham. To Abraham of old. The supper done, Abraham's. Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the year;
Abridge. And to abridge my sorrow's violence,
Abrided. With love abridged the day;
 By which our toilsome journey was abridged,
 And their place knew them not. Meanwhile, abridged.
Abroad. And eve's mild hour invites my steps abroad.
 Dissolved the Barons' League, and sent abroad . . .
 Surely some evil Spirit abroad to-night . . .
 The tale was spread abroad; my power at once
 have kept me abroad to-night till this hour?
 Wandering by stealth abroad, he chanced to hear
 There's neither horse nor man abroad, . . .
 There's not a single soul abroad!
 And who is she, betimes abroad,
 One summer morning we had walked abroad . . .
 When falcons were abroad for prey . . .
 And quickly spread themselves abroad, . . .
 Come forth, ye drooping old men, look abroad,
 In sleep She sometimes walked abroad,
 Nor hedge-row screen invites my steps abroad;
 "Thy name in this large world is spread abroad!
 To tell abroad thy mighty worthiness, . . .
 Fair Spirits are abroad; in sportive chase . . .
 Tumbles, the widing Thunder slips abroad;
 Had run abroad in wantonness, to sport,
 By royal visages. Meanwhile abroad . . .
 Of high endeavours, daily spreads abroad . . .
 Why, gifted with such powers to send abroad
 Was yellowing the hill tops, I went abroad
 Abroad, how cheerfully the sunshine lay . . .
 And thenceforth bloody spoils abroad is paired
 That a benignant spirit was abroad . . .
 And spread abroad the wings of Liberty, . . .
 Abroad on many nations, are no more . . .
 They from their native selves can send abroad
 In restless mind to look abroad with hope . . .
 His summer, ere the mower was abroad . . .
 The shade, and look abroad. On this old bench
 With sparing hand. Then trust yourself abroad . . .
 The herds and flocks are yet abroad to crop . . .
 The Mother, oft as she was sent abroad, . . .
 Wretched at home, he gained no peace abroad;
 Of old Helvellyn spread their arms abroad . . .
Abrogate. Should abrogate his human privilege Abrupt. His prey, through tracts abrupt of desolate space . . .
 Dead pause abrupt of midnight winds, . . .
 Through all thy most abrupt transitions . . .
 No more: the end is sudden and abrupt, . . .
 Abrupt—as without preconceived design . . .
 From those abrupt and perilous rocks . . .
 For pasture pluge—into the "abrupt abyss," . . .
 Dismantled, but by violence abrupt— . . .
 Supplied a boundary less abrupt and close;
 Through what perplexing labyrinths, abrupt
Abruptly. Abruptly spreading to depart,
 Abruptly paused the strife—the field throughout
 Of slow endeavour! or abruptly cast . . .
 And thus abruptly spake;—"We yield
 Oh! severed, too abruptly, from delights
 Thrust out abruptly into Fortune's way
 Abruptly into some sequestered nook, . . .
 Abruptly, with the view (a sight not rare)
 With needful knowledge, had abruptly passed
 Abruptly, and indeed before my time:
 Said the old man, abruptly breaking silence,—
 I was abruptly summoned by the sound
 Abruptly broken off. The ruddy boys
 Abruptly here, but with a graceful air,
Absence. See Half-absence.
 His absence, he hath sought, whate'er his aim,
 Thy absence, till old age and fresh infirmities
 I did not think that, during that long absence,
 Were with him—his long absence, cherished hopes,
 Absence and death how differ they! and how
 Through a long absence, have not been to me
 Of absence, these steep woods and lofty cliffs,
 Of absence withers what was once so fair?
 For a brief absence, proves that love is true;
 The drooping mind of absence, by vows sworn
 Of absence! but they will not stay,
 Thou striketh—absence perisheth.
 Though for brief absence. But farewell! the page
 After long absence, thither I repaired, . . .
 After an eight-days' absence. For (to omit Restored to me—such absence that she seemed
 No absence scarcely can there be, for those
 After short absence, curiously I scanned
Absent. His absent Brother still was at his heart.
 One rarely absent from thy train . . .
 How slackly for the absent mind permits . . .

 Passing, as accident or fancy led,
Accidental. Is not an accidental quality,
 Occasional, an accidental grace,
Accidents. For accidents and changes such as these,
 Through accidents of peace or war,
 All accidents of time and place;
 By chance collisions and quaint accidents
 All accidents, and to the very road
 By change of accidents, or even, to speak
 And accidents as children do with cards,
 And all the accidents of life were pressed
 From Nature's way by outward accidents,
 Revolving with the accidents of life,
 All accidents, converting them to good.
 All accidents, and judges were of all.
 And local accidents, shall tend alike
 Subject, you deem, to vital accidents;
Acclaim. The people answered with a loud acclaim:
 The sight was hailed with loud acclaim
Acclamation. Glad acclamation by which the air was rent!
 And acclamation, crowds in open air
Accompanied. Accompanied his steps, by anxious love
 I, who accompanied with faithful pace
 And open day; accompanied its course
 Accompanied by feelings of delight
 Accompanied those strains of apt discourse,
 Accompanied these musings; fervent thanks
 Softly accompanied the tuneless harp,
 Accompanied, still extant, in a wreath
 The stately fence accompanied our steps;
Accompanies. The wanderer accompanies her flight
Accompany. To accompany the verse? The mountain blast
Accomplish. To accomplish there her loveliness;
 And, with life, power to accomplish aught of worth.
 Accomplish—this is our high argument.
 (And Heaven was pleased to accomplish the desire)
 —Accomplish, then, their number; and conclude Accomplished. Accomplished under friendly shade of night.
 A work accomplished by the brotherhood
 Accomplished in the showman's part;
 That Man may be accomplished for a task
 His task accomplished to his mind,
 Accomplished, giving thus unto events
 Accomplished; minds whose faculties are then
 By some accomplished Master, while he sate
 Fulfilled, the hope accomplished; and they praise
 Camoens, he the accomplished and the good,
Accomplishes. Labour accomplishes, or patience bears—
Accomplishment. Or see of absolute accomplishment
 Yet wanting the accomplishment of verse, Accomplishments. Those rare accomplishments, and varied powers,
Accord. Who, in the open air, with due accord
 Do with the service of this Day accord
 Then well may their accord be true,
 Cathedral pomp and grace, in apt accord
 That, with a perfect will in one accord
 Whose offering gladly would accord
 Feelling, we finally shall make accord.
 With one accord our voices raise,
 Long months of peace (if such bold word accord
 Your hearty with me, a serene accord
 Of thanks and expectation, in accord
 Our inquest turns.—Accord, good Sir! the light
 As with her office would but ill accord)
 A happy communion! an accord Accordance. Your praise in meet accordance with your claims
 Touched by accordance of thy placid cheer,
Accordant. —Now o'er the soothed accordant heart
 we feel
 Sight that inspired accordant thoughts; and speech I thus renewed:
 With accordant steps, or gathering
 And singing, while the accordant hand
 Accordant to the measure.
 Accordant meditations, which in times
 Gives to that rapture an accordant Rhyme.
 Sung to the Virgin while accordant oars
 Accordant to the sweet Birds' harmony;
 But o'er the sooth'd accordant heart we feel
 Accordant to the cheek's unquiet glow;
 A kindling eye—accordant feelings rushed
 Feelings with these accordant; love, esteem,
 Was cleared, I dipped, with arms accordant, oars
Accorded. To you accorded, never be withdrawn,
 To saints accorded in their mortal hour.

Accorded—continued.

Up to the measure of accorded might,
 False tints too well accorded with the glare
 Accorded little with his present mind;
According. Yet seek thy firm support, according to their need.
 Still act according to the voice
 From word to word according to the note:
 Redeemed, according to example given
 That are not prized according to their worth.
 But ill according. An heraldic shield,
Accordingly. Knowledge was given accordingly;
 my trust
 Accordingly he by degrees perceives
Accords. And with that voice accords the soothing sound
 With Him who made the Work that Work accords
 That which is done accords with what is known
 Accords with nature's language—the soft voice
Accost. He took his way, impatient to accost
 Came up the hollow:—him did I accost
Accosted. Nor, if accosted now, in thought engrossed,
 A blind old Greybeard and accosted him,
 Was thus accosted by the Dame:
Account. And, finding that he can account
 Numbers exceeding credible account
 Who shall complain, or call thee to account?
 High as the Sun, that he could take account.
 Oh! much have they to account for, who could tear,
Accounted. He, on his part, accounted for the worst,
 Accounted with his burthen and his staff;
 Of prophecy, accounted to fulfil Accountment. Motley accountment, of power to smile
Accumulated. Accumulated feelings pressed his heart
 Than that accumulated store of gold
 Languished beneath accumulated years,
Accursed. His banner in accursed league with France,
 That an accursed thing it is to gaze
 In hideous usages, and rights accursed,
 The blood cries out on your accursed deed.
 And him among the accursed Jews she sought.
Accurst. A mortal malady, I am accurst:
 Into main Ocean they, this deed accurst
Accusation. Should cease; and open accusation lead
Accusations. Disclose, had accusations to prefer Accuse. "I, Robespierre, accuse thee!" Well is known
 Probed, vexed, and criticised?—Accuse me not Accused. See Self-accused.
 At which I half accused the God in Heaven.—
 Appeal was made to the great Judge: the Accused
 What though the Accused, upon his own appeal
Accuses. And then betrays; accuses and inflicts Accustomed. Ere, from accustomed paths, familiar fields,
 Wanting accustomed food, must pass from earth,
 With the accustomed garb of daily life)
 In my accustomed bed, more welcome now
 On his accustomed journey. The delight,
 With my accustomed load; in heat and cold,
 Of one accustomed to desires that feed
 Not long accustomed to this breathing world;
 Detains him after his accustomed hour
 All her accustomed offices and cares
Ace. Roared in the tempest, was within an ace
 The paramount ace, a moon in her eclipse,
Achates. Achates, with the gifts to Carthage hid;
Ache. When my heart does not ache to think of it—
 With agony his eye-balls ache
 And made her poor old bones to ache,
Ached. Now I could laugh till my ribs ached. Oh, Fool!
 And clasped her to my heart, my heart that ached
 Till my ribs ached I'd laugh at you!
 That any heart had ached to hear her, begged
Aches. See Heart-aches.
 Sore aches she needs must have! but less
 And with an infinite pain the spirit aches,
Achleva. Had power as lofty actions to achieve
 Content to observe, to achieve, and to enjoy.
 To achieve its higher triumph. Not unfelt
 The worst that human reasoning can achieve,
 Such triumph over sin and guilt achieve?
Achieved. Achieved their separation: and once more
 And perfect harmony of notes, achieved
 Achieved, this closing deed magnificent,
 "Thou hast achieved, fair Dame! what none
 The day when he achieved that matchless feat,
 (So might they dream) till victory was achieved,
 Wrought in men's minds, like miracles achieved;
 Doth melt away; but for those palms achieved

Acting—continued.

- Never forsaken, that, by acting well, . . . 707 Prelude 8. 527
 These, if these only, acting in despite . . . 828 Excursion 5. 419
- Action. Action is transitory—a step, a blow, . . . 65 Bd. 1539
 I saw that every possible shape of action . . . 69 Bd. 1780
 From action up to action with a mind . . . 69 Bd. 1789
 This action? Innocent!—oh breaking heart!—
 That strenuous action follow both, . . . 224 'Tis gone* 52
 Yet, with deliberate action slow, . . . 241 P. B. 422
 With action, were as nothing, patriot Friend! . . . 261 Retirement 3
 Of action born, existing to be tried, . . . 361 For action* 1
 Of virtuous action; all that courage daros, . . . 363 The world forsaken* 4
- Had mortal action e'er a nobler scope? . . . 442 Ecc. Sonn. 3. 9. 9
 All principles of action that transcend . . . 574 Portentous change* 13
- That by the regular action of the world . . . 647 Prelude 2. 361
 And busy with an action far advanced. . . 711 Prelude 9. 95
 In action, give it outwardly a shape, . . . 715 Prelude 9. 95
 Of action from without and from within; . . . 745 Prelude 13. 376
 Of civil action, yielded to a power . . . 798 Excursion 3. 825
 Which bears the name of action, howsoever . . . 799 Excursion 3. 894
 Is meditated action; robbed of this . . . 884 Excursion 9. 21
 Of life, and hope, and action. And 'tis known . . . 886 Excursion 9. 128
- Actions. Of actions, and their laws and tendencies, . . . 60 Bd. 1227
 Great actions move our admiration, chiefly . . . 65 Bd. 1536
 Had power as lofty actions to achieve . . . 325 Ode 1814 140

- Actor. The little Actor cons another part; . . . 589 Immortality 102
 Or could perform; a zealous actor, hired . . . 842 Excursion 6. 284
- Acts. A pledge of endless bliss in acts of early piety, . . . 93 Poet's Dream 74
 Had fed or sheltered, linking to such acts . . . 132 Michael 72
 To acts of tenderness; and he had rocked . . . 133 Michael 157

 To acts of love; and habit does the work . . . 567 Cumb. Beg. 100
 In acts of love to those with whom they dwell, . . . 568 Cumb. Beg. 139
 Reflective acts to fix the moral law . . . 570 Prelude 3. 84
 Of natural rights and civil; and to acts . . . 712 Prelude 9. 201
 In thought or conversation, public acts, . . . 717 Prelude 9. 543
 The Senate's language, and the public acts . . . 727 Prelude 11. 8
 Of a majestic intellect, its acts . . . 747 Prelude 14. 67
 Hence cheerfulness for acts of daily life, . . . 747 Prelude 14. 121
 This spiritual Love acts not nor can exist . . . 749 Prelude 14. 188
 These acts of mind, and memory, and heart, . . . 794 Excursion 3. 574
 To acts which they abhor; though I bewail . . . 805 Excursion 4. 301
 And emanations were perceived; and acts . . . 812 Excursion 4. 738
 For acts of service? Can his love extend . . . 817 Excursion 4. 1095
 And her uncharitable acts, I trust, . . . 850 Excursion 6. 775
- Actual. Of present, actual, superficial life, . . . 706 Prelude 8. 506
 The actual world of our familiar days, . . . 745 Prelude 13. 357
 Actual, divine, and true. To fear and love, . . . 748 Prelude 14. 162

- Actuates. From that which is and actuates, by forms, . . . 357 Aquap. 326
- Adage. The adage on all tongues, "Murder will out," . . . 518 Pun. Death 6. 10
 162 Art thou* the 12
 287 Ellen Irwin 5
- Adam. Could Father Adam open his eyes . . . 393 Inglewood 6
 Young Adam Bruce beside her lay, . . . 569 Farmer 4
 Fair parks spread wide where Adam Bell might deign . . . 569 Farmer 17
 That I sing of old Adam, the pride of old men, . . . 569 Farmer 4
 Yet Adam was far as the farthest from ruin, . . . 569 Farmer 17

Adam—continued.

- Yet Adam prized little the feast and the bowl,—
 For Adam was simple in thought; and the poor, . . . 569 Farmer 21
 All trades, as need was, did old Adam assume,—
 Old Adam will smile at the pains that have made . . . 569 Farmer 25
 Like a maguet, the heart of old Adam can draw; . . . 570 Farmer 49
 Now farewell, old Adam! when low thou art laid, . . . 570 Farmer 75
 The mind of Adam, yet in Paradise . . . 570 Farmer 78
 571 Farmer 89
 709 Prelude 8. 659
- Adamant. Ay, we are coupled by a chain of adamant; . . . 70 Bd. 1854
 Against a Champion cased in adamant. . . . 442 Ecc. Sonn. 3. 7. 14
Adamantine. Yea, all the adamantine holds of truth . . . 666 Prelude 5. 39
Adam's. The quiet of nature was Adam's delight. . . . 569 Farmer 24
Adapt. Can portion out his pleasures, and adapt, . . . 813 Excursion 4. 803
 Add. And doth call out for vengeance. Do not add, . . . 75 Bd. 2125
- That skill or means of his could add, but the architect had wrought . . . 91 Norman Boy 18
 And bear with their transgression, when I add . . . 122 V. and J. 65
 In silence, though my memory could add; . . . 124 V. and J. 177
 And I to this would add another tale . . . 202 Hari-leup 96
 Great is their glee while flake they add to flake . . . 280 Intent* on 4
 Add and your voices to the quire . . . 286 Sons of Burns 26
 Add every charm the Universe can show . . . 455 Not in the wood* 22
 Nor add to it a flower! . . . 508 May 92
 To express what then I saw . . . and add the gleam, . . . 578 Peke Castle 14
 Add to my friend who knows me I may add, . . . 643 Prelude 2. 73
 Add that whatever of Terror or of Love . . . 651 Prelude 3. 133
 Hero must we pause; this only let me add, . . . 674 Prelude 5. 584
 —To time thus spent, add multitudes of hours . . . 677 Prelude 6. 179
 Add to these exhibitions, mute and still, . . . 691 Prelude 7. 260
 Taking my seat, I saw (not blush to add, . . . 691 Prelude 7. 270
 Add also, that among the multitudes . . . 709 Prelude 8. 665
 Devoured by locusts,—Carra, Gorsas,—add . . . 712 Prelude 9. 176
 Add unto this, subservience from the first . . . 713 Prelude 9. 233
 Whom no one owned, sate silent, shall I add, . . . 722 Prelude 10. 298
 Suffice it here to add, that, somewhat stern . . . 731 Prelude 11. 275
 With half a harvest. It pleased Heaven to add . . . 764 Excursion 1. 538
 Loud echoing, add your speed to the pursuit; . . . K.8. 255 Recluse 1.1. 592
 Forgive me if I add another claim, . . . K.8. 205 Brook, that* 2

 Add. "And from your doom," he added, "now I wait, . . . 36 Guilt 652 7
 Another grave was added.—He had found . . . 96 Brothers 84
 But added, that, the evening being calm, . . . 102 Brothers 416
 To which, requests were added, that forthwith . . . 136 Michael 310
 A Lady added to my court . . . 372 Eg. Maid 231
 Six months to six years added he remained . . . 576 Six months* 1
 While every moment added doubt to doubt, . . . 683 Prelude 6. 578
 With vice at home. We added dearest themes—
 I added, work of safety; from all doubt . . . 714 Prelude 9. 354
 Added no farewell to his parting counsel, . . . 720 Prelude 10. 143
 Was added to the troubles of a time . . . 726 Prelude 10. 538
 Foretold, and added prayer to prophecy; . . . 764 Excursion 1. 557
 Year after year is added to his store . . . 797 Excursion 3. 765
 866 Excursion 7. 565
- Adding. And adding, with a hope to be forgiven, . . . 102 Brothers 431
 Knocked here—and knocked there, pounds still adding to pounds. . . . 570 Farmer 36
 Adding immortal labours of his own—
 A Being, who by adding love to peace . . . 587 Crosth. 6

cell;
Of her affections? so they blindly asked
Strong hold on his affections, were to him
But affections higher, holier,
To guide your speech and your affections.
And while these right affections play,
In memory of affections old and true,
The affections, to exalt them or refine;
In which the affections gently lead us on,—
Be thy affections raised and solemnised.
She, in benign affections pure
For if of our affections none finds grace
To old affections, had been heard to plead
Dwells in the affections and the soul of man
Affections which, if put to proof, are kind;
Of agonised affections;
Divine affections; and with beast and bird
Plays false with our affections;
The chaste affections tremble to fulfil
To calm the affections, elevate the soul,
Of right affections climbing or descending
Affections pure and holy in their source
Called forth by those affections that endear
Affections lose their object; Time brings forth
Have waited—till the affections could no more
Her soothed affections clung
By vain affections unenthrall'd
Affections, warm as sunshine, free as air;
But for those first affections,
Were fastened to the affections. I began
The props of my affections were removed,
And all my young affections out of doors.
For me, when my affections first were led
Was Man in my affections and regards
Loose and disjointed, and the affections left
Or our infirm affections Nature pleads,
To rivet my affections; nor did now
Diffusing only those affections wider
The affections and the spirit of the place,
Of the affections, and to Nature's self
And all affections by communion raised
Foremost in my affections, had fallen back
Spontaneously had his affections thrive
Their lost affections unto thee and thine!"
And such benign affections cultivates
Corrupt affections, covetous desires,
And to the best affections that proceed
For Man's affections—else betrayed and lost,
Affections seated in the mother's breast,
Of pure affections, shedding upon joy
In my affections. Witness the delight

Affiance. Affiance in each other; faith more firm
Affianced. See Heart-affianced.

Affinities. To those first-born affinities that fit
By observation of affinities
Affirm. The wise man, I affirm, can find no rest
I now affirm of Nature and of Truth,
We safely may affirm that human life

Affirmed. Bold words affirmed, in days when faith was strong
Discoloured, then divested. 'Tis affirmed
Affixed. Here stood an Oak, that long had borne affixed

Afflict. Afflict, or injuries assail,
To humble or afflict whom'er he will,
The God of Love afflict thee with all teen,

Afflicted. "Hither the Afflicted come, as thou hast heard thy Mother say,
And feel, thou Earth, for this afflicted Race!
To hide her poor afflicted head?
Of Pagan night. Afflicted and dismayed,
Beside the afflicted; to sustain with prayer,
Of poor humanity's afflicted will

Afflicting. And afflicting means she fetches,
Affliction. Our hopes such harvest of affliction reap,
From which affliction—when the grace
Such daughter of affliction, say
Such strength as, if ever affliction and pain
If from the affliction somewhere do not grow
A worse affliction in the plague of war:
Whether affliction be the foe, or guilt!
But worse affliction must be borne—far worse;
With such, in their affliction. Ellen's fate,
Tending to patience when affliction strikes;

Affliction's. Wreaths that endure affliction's heaviest shower,
Afflictions. But, surely, if severe afflictions borne
Nor Duty struggling with afflictions strange—

 Is, after conflict, quiet as the ocean,
 Soon after, the good Abbot of St. Cuthbert's
 After his death. I have been much deceived.
 When, after a broad flash that filled the cave,
 Sent after him? I have loved you ever since.
 But after that? The features of Idonea
 After her little Child, and he came not;
 And after that he hung them by the law.
 After my knowledge I have loved always;
 And after that thus said she unto me;
 The morrow after they rose, and took their way,
 And after this he Saint Valentine's day,
 Francesco Centi would that, after death,
 By uniform control of after years,
 In youth, or to be changed in after years.
After-call. And strength in evil? Hence an after-call
After-day. Appeased his yearning:—in the after-day
After-joy. Of reason; yet prepares that after-joy
After-lay. I gave this after-lay.

 Agents. See Under-agents.
 Of Elements and Agents, Under-powers,
 Those immaterial agents bowed their heads
 Than the mute agents stirring there:—alone
 Their own dire agents, and constrain the good
 Rude intercourse; apt agents to expel,
 Ages. His death will be a monument for ages.

A knot of spiry trees for ages grew . . . 212 Laod. 169
 The brightest star of ages yet to be,
 Of ages coming, ages gone ;
 As laboured mistresses through ages wear !
 Whole ages if I here should roam,
 Lies fixed for ages on his conscious neck ;
 Go back to antique ages, if thine eyes
 England's illustrious sons of long, long ages ;
 Perchance, in future ages, here may stop ;
 Departed ages, shedding where he flew
 That, in the lapse of ages, hath crept o'er . . . 419 Ecc. Sonn. 1. 3. 6
 Ages ere Valdo raised his voice to preach . . . 431 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 12. 3
 In classic ages men perceived a soul
 Enshrined for ages. Is not then the Art
 True freedom where for ages they have lain
 Which for ages there had hung . . . 535 Egremont 4
 And through ages, heirs of heirs,
 On strangers, of all ages ; the quick dance
 A weight of ages did at once descend
 The experience of past ages, as, through help
 For a paradise of ages, the blind rage
 Friends, enemies, of all parties, ages, ranks,
 To illuminate the abyss of ages past,
 Time with his retinue of ages fled
 Through a long course of later ages, drove,
 "Once more to distant ages of the world
 Have dwelt through ages—Patrons of this Cure.
 Shall cause to fade, till ages pass away ;
 And the best ages of the world prescribe.

 To quicken, and to aggravate—to feed . . . 777 Bord. 2263
 To multiply and aggravate the din ? . . . 863 Excursion 7. 366
Aggravated. Or lastly, aggravated by the times Aggravates. Combat, while darkness aggravates the groans :
Aggravation. But drop the rest :—this aggravation, Aggressive. Tides of aggressive war, oft served as well

Aghast. And, wildly pausing, oft she hangs aghast,
 The Soldier's Widow heard and stood aghast ;
 Once raised, remains aghast, and will not fall !
 And then aghast, as at the world
 Aghast within its gloomy cavity
 Aghast and prayerless. Into a deep wood
 The Senate stood aghast, her prudence quenched,
 Aghast we might behold this crystal Mere

Agile. Like a bold Girl, who plays her agile pranks
 By Youth's surviving spirit ? What agile grace !
Agitate. Or rouse and agitate his labouring soul ?
 Could thus have dared the grave to agitate,
 Words that can soothe, more than they agitate ;
Agitated. Were agitated, and commotions, strife
 Was agitated ; yea, I could almost
 The agitated scene before his eye
Agitating. Blow fiercely, agitating earth and sky,
Agitation. While, with increasing agitation,
 In foamy agitation ;
 Rash schemes, to abjure all selfish agitation,
 In agitation said, " 'Tis against that
 In clamorous agitation, round the crest
 Of endless agitation. Here you stand,
 To the agitation of a brook that runs

Agitations. To agitations less severe,
 Too high, or idle agitations lull !
 Of kindred agitations for thy sake ;
 And gentle agitations of the mind
 Wakes in me agitations like its own,
 Some inward agitations thence are brought,
 For other agitations, or be calm ;
Agliaia. To fair Agliaia ; by what envy moved,
Ago. (For many years ago I passed this road)
 Your love hath been, nor long ago,
 And Betty, half an hour ago,
 Celandine ! and long ago,
 Said I, " not half an hour ago
 But a few hours ago, had been
 And battles long ago :
 Bandusia, prattling as when long ago
 I should have died, yea many hours ago ;
 For it was done a little while ago—
 "Not twenty years ago, but you I think
 Twelve tedious years ago,

Agonies. Pray in ghostly agonies.
 Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
 —O prostrate Lands, consult your agonies !
 Woven out of passion's sharpest agonies,
Agonised. Of agonised affections ;
Agonizing. An agonizing sorrow to transmute ;
Agony. See Heart-agony.
 While prayer contends with silenced agony,
 Disease and famine, agony and fear,
 Hope died, and fear itself in agony was lost !
 In all things like ourselves but in the agony
 Of agony had pressed the Sufferer down :
 Is love, though oft to agony distrust,
 With agony his eye-balls ache
 In agony of silent grief—

Aid. See Ayde.
 Rouse hell's own aid and wrap thy fields in fire :
 In an impartial balance, give thine aid
 Her dwelling in his dreams. By Fancy's aid
 To him we turned —we had no other aid :
 And begged a little aid for charity :
 Nor was there wanting other aid—
 Suppliant for aid his kingdom to regain ;
 Farewell desire of human aid,
 And blasts of heaven will aid their flight ;
 Tormented ? by such aid you may conceive
 Why of your further aid bereave me ?
 With like command of beauty—grant your aid
 Had to a Primrose looked for aid
 By her sweet farewell looks, I longed to aid.
 Their very wishes wanted aid
 Which by their aid re-clothe the naked lawn
 How, with the Muse's aid, her love attest ?
 Not while—to aid the spirit of the place—
 Or seek, from saints above, miraculous aid—
 Which, without aid of numbers, I sustain,
 Now, surely, hath that gracious aid
 While she, by aid of Nature, climbs—
 Nice aid maternal fingers lend ;
 A not unwelcome aid may lend,
 Aid, with congenial influence, to uphold
 And enter, with prompt aid from the Most High,
 Both feel, when he renews the wished-for aid :
 With native Fancy her fresh aid,
 Yea, trusting in God's holy aid,
 Weep, if that aid thee ; but depend
 From Naworth come ; and Howard's aid
 On you, if room for mortal aid ;
 For promise fails of Howard's aid ;
 Nor wants the cause the panic-striking aid
 Nor scorn the aid which Fancy oft doth lend
 Nor leaves her Speech one word to aid the sigh
 Aid, glorious Martyrs, from your fields of light,
 Of thee to visit them with lenient aid . . . 338 Brientis 9

 Which liberty and love dispersed in air. . . 123
 The owlet, in the moonlight air, . . . 126
 The common air; hills, which with vigorous step . . . 132
 The air or laugh upon a precipice; . . . 139
 Driven in by Autumn's sharpening air . . . 143
 Such an entire contentment in the air . . . 146
 Or like some natural produce of the air, . . . 146
 Was fettered, and the air by storm disturbed, . . . 150
 The sight is free as air—or crost . . . 154
 Then—all at once the air was still, . . . 154
 There's not a breeze—no breath of air— . . . 155
 Their nuptial song, a gladsome air; . . . 159
 Self-poised in air thou seem'st to rest;— . . . 159
 That breath'st with me in sun and air, . . . 159
 A Life, a Presence like the Air, . . . 159
 And fly about in the air together! . . . 163
 Bees, wafted on the breezy air, . . . 163
 No trace of a ferocious air, . . . 166
 Clouds that love through air to hasten, . . . 166
 Of his death-wound, when he from innocent air . . . 169

 In wrath! fell headlong from the fields of air,
 Cool air I breathe ; while the unnumbered Mind,
 In brightest sunshine bask ; this nipping air,
 At early dawn, or rather when the air 269 Gordale 1
 All bright and glittering in the smokeless air 269 Westm. Bridge 8
 Cleaves the blank air, Life flies : now every day
 The air of liberty, the light of truth ; 270 Ye sacred 4
 Who gives his Angels wings to speed through air,
 Or with the Moon conquering earth's misty air,
 Its waste,—Though crumbling with each breath of air,
 Of such weak fibre that the treacherous air
 To keep, so high in air, its strength and grace :
 Breathe hopeful air 285 Nith 18
 Or melt it into air 297 Highland Boy 210
 To seize what'er, through misty air,
 And chase this silence from the air,
 Powers that will work for thee ; air, earth, and skies ;
 And saw, while sea was calm and air was clear,
 'Tis his who walks about in the open air,
 Even rich men, brave by nature, taint the air
 And spreads her arms, as if the general air
 Glad acclamation by which air was rent !
 By breezeless air to smoothest polish, yield
 This messenger of good was launched in air,
 Hovered in air above the far-famed Spot.
 Sung from that heavenly ground in middle air,
 Even by the sun and air unpurged ;
 On the steep's lofty verge : how it blackened the air !
 The sky was blue, the air was mild ; 348 Lulled by 7
 Fetch, sympathising Powers of air,
 Yet ever hangs or seems to hang in air,
 Peering in air and backed by azure sky,
 The breath of air can be where earth had else
 Save insect-swarms that hum in air afloat,
 Far off and faint, and melting into air,
 Who breathe the air he breathed, tread where he trod.
 Near the Cell—yon sequestered Ken at high in air—
 To sit and muse, fanned by its dewy air
 Ascend, with lineaments in air not lost ;
 Of a bright Ship that seemed to hang in air,
 Through air, to thee my Charge will I deliver.
 Sleep fell upon the air, and stilled the ocean.
 Air, earth, sea, sky, and heaven, success betaken,
 How in still air the balance trembled—
 Keen was the air, but could not freeze,
 Thousands of years before the silent air
 No voice replies ;—both air and earth are mute ;
 Deep underground ? Or in the upper air,
 The clouds and fowls of the air they way pursue !
 Of April, smiling high in upper air ?
 Should some benignant Minister of air 382 Dutton 25. 2
 Or, free as air, with flying quest viewed
 Absolute stillness, poised aloft in air,
 So thinks that Dame of haughty air,
 With air about him breathing sweet, 401 White Doe 258

 By sound diffused, or by the breathing air 693 Prelude 7. 422
 For sunshine, and to breathe the fresher air.
 And of the air, which he had come to seek,
 Up to thy summit, through the depth of air
 Transferred a courtesy which had no air
 And open punishment, if not the air
 What ground I trod on, and what air I breathed.
 For the spent hurricane the air provides
 The general air still busy with the stir
 The motion of a wind-mill ; though the air
 If not, then others vanish into air.
 Must live within the very light and air
 When into air had partially dissolved
 In clearest air ascending, showed far off
 By sound diffused, or by the breathing air 693 Prelude 7. 422

 Who dwell on earth, yet breathe empyreal air,
 The blank air—for the region all around . . . 804 Excursion 4. 144
 Take flight ; while with their clang the air resounds.
 Food not unwholesome ; earth and air correct
 To muse, and be saluted by the air
 Impulse and utterance. The whispering air
 While, free as air, o'er printless sands we march,
 As the unbreathing air, when not a leaf
 "The fragrant air its coolness still retains ;
 At such transition from the fervid air,
 And, with this change, sharp air and falling leaves,
 Approached ; and, with a mild respectful air
 The vital air ; others, which, though allowed
 Taken from air and sunshine when the rose
 Of the dense air, which town or city breeds
 An air and mien of dignified pursuit ; . . . 838 Excursion 5. 927
 Court the fresh air, explore the heaths and woods ;
 Charming the air with skill of hand or voice,
 Infect the air which he had freely breathed
 And breathed its soothing air,—the spirit of hope
 With nothing better, in the chill night air,
 If not in beauty yet in sprightly air,
 The air with cheerful spirit, for thy sake,
 Asked comfort of the open air, and found
 To pastoral melody or warlike air, . . . 857 Excursion 6. 1100
 Of winter cannot this ; the fresh air lodged
 Through the still air, the closing of the Grave ;
 Her waters, Air her breezes ; and the sail
 Breathing fresh air, and treading the green earth ;
 In air high-towering with a boorish pomp,
 Be likened ? She whose countenance and air
 The moving waters, and the invisible air,
 And breathe the sweet air of futurity ;
 Of ever-humming insects, 'mid thin air
 With the least taint and injury to the air
 —For, as the element of air affords
 Abruptly here, but with a graceful air,
 How temptingly the landscape shines ! The air
 The suzerain only of a breath of air !"
 With correspondent wings the abyss of air,
 By the dense air—shot upwards to the crown
 However gently, toward the vulgar air,
 Eludes perception, not by rippling air,
 Their own emotions given to mountain air
 The cloud of rooks descending through mid air
 In prospect far above the denser air
 Breath in the air of fellow-suffering
 The raven croaks, and fills the upper air
Aira. Known chiefly, Aira ! to thy glen,
 Wild stream of Aira, hold thy course,
Aira-force. Doth Aira-force, that torrent hoarse,
Air-proof. So smooth was all within, air-proof,
Air's. Of nether air's rude billows is unknown ;
 Straight from the sun and tainted air's embrace
Airs. Spring parts the clouds with softest airs,
 And airs that gently stir . . . 194 Ruth 219
 Even She whose Lydian airs inspire
 With shady night. Soft airs, from shrub and flower,
 'Mid new-born blossoms that soft airs were wooing,
 Thee gentle breezes waft—or airs that meet
 Where cities fanned by thy brisk airs . . . 506 * While from 37
 Soft airs were stirring, and the mid-day sun
 Withering by slow degrees, 'mid gentle airs,
 From hell came sanctified like airs from heaven.
 Of the green hills ; ye breezes and soft airs,
 In the prime hour of sweetest scents and airs.
Airy. In airy baskets hanging, work and sing,
 Fancy hath flung for me an airy bridge
 Of airy workmanship whereon we stood,
 Self-shaken, as I closed my airy journey.
 On airy upland, and by forest rills,
 Thro' yester-day by airy ghosts ;
 Where once his airy helpers schemed and planned
 And airy bonds are hardest to disown ;
 Into broad light, and sends, through regions airy,
 For airy promises and hopes suborned
 From airy words alone, a Ply that ne'er decays.
 What are fears but voices airy ?
 Glad from their airy baskets hang and sing,

 Alas! what boots the long laborious quest
 Alas! it may not be: for earthly fame
 Alas! that from the lips of abject Want

 Alas! the bright Ship floated,
 Alas! thought he, and I have borne
 Too oft, alas! by her whose head
 How soon—alas! did Man, created pure—
 And speak the word—"Alas!" of fearful things
 The hospitality—the alms (alas!)
 Alas! the Genius of our age, from Schools
 Alas! too busy Rival of old Tyre,
 Alas! the gratitude of men
 Alas! how he fumbles about the domains
 "Alas! that cannot be."
 Alas for thee, bright Galaxy of Isles,
 Alas! with most, who weigh futurity
 Half hid in native trees. Alas! 'tis not,

Alas! they pined, they languished while they shone;
 Though I, alas! may ne'er enjoy
 With numbers near, alas! no company.
 Alas! that such perverted zeal
 Alas! 'twas hardly worth the telling,
 Alas! that day for Harry Gill!
 But take it in good part!—alas! the poor
 How hard, alas! to bear, I only know.
 And said, Alas! that ever I was born,
 Alas, alas! my very heart will break,
 Alas, poor Book! for thy unworthiness,
 And to himself full oft he said, alas!
 Alas, and there I took of her my leave.
 It saith, Alas, why severed are we twain?
 Alas! the twentieth April of his life
 By playful smiles, (alas! too oft
 Alas! what idle words; but take
 Alas, how feebly! but our feelings rise
 Her seat scarce left, she strives, alas! in vain,
 Alas! such high emotion touched not me.
 Might sit and sun himself.—Alas! alas!
 I, too, have been a wanderer; but, alas!
 Power growing under weight: alas! I feel
 Alas! to few in this untoward world,
 I treat the matter lightly, but, alas!
 Not worth the trouble of a thought?—alas!
 Alas! the endowment of immortal power
 Alas! such wisdom bids a creature fly
 "Alas! before to-morrow's sun goes down
 To fix her eyes—alas! 'twas hard to bear!
 "Alas! what differs more than man from man!

 Albeit uninspired by love,
 Buildings, albeit rude, that have maintained
 Albeit putting forth a fainter light,
 Albeit lifeless then, and doomed to sleep
 Albeit long after the importunate bell
 And measured passions of the stage, albeit
 Even as this setting sun (albeit the Vale
 Than to do wrong, albeit themselves have erred.
 That one, albeit of these degenerate times,
 Such pleasure now is mine, albeit forced,

Albani. Albani, in thy race we cherish
 Albinos. Are here—Albinos, painted Indians,

Albion. Dwarfs,
 Albion. Intrepid sons of Albion! not by you
 Albion's. And Albion's giants quelled,
 Such is Albion's fame and glory.
 Best against Albion's shore, since ear of mine
 On Albion's noble Race in freedom born,
 Albopasio's. To Albogasio's olive bowers,
 Alcæus. When the live chords Alcæus smote,

Alcalro. Alcalro, Babylon, or Persepolis;
 Alcestis. Alcestis, a reanimated corpse,

Alchemists. Fruitless as those of aery alchemists,
 Alcove. And shrubs—to hang upon the warm alcove,
 For instant flight; the Sage in yon alcove
 When here, in this remote alcove,
 Nor lacking, for fit company, alcove,
 Alder. Upon that alder sit;

And, from his alder shades and rocky falls,
 Where two tall hedge-rows of thick alder boughs.
 Aldermen. And worship Mayors, Tipstafs, Aldermen and all.

Alders. Beneath the alders, near the river;
 For Thee, green alders have together wound
 And sail that glides the well-known alders by.
 Ale. Offered a greeting of good ale
 While the warm hearth exalts the mantling ale,
 Of the silver-rimmed horn whence he dealt his mild ale!

Right good ale he bowses;
 Ale-house. Every ale-house should then have a feast on its walls.

Alert. When thou art up, alert and gay,
 But thou, perhaps, [alert as free
 Turned this way—that way! sportive and alert
 Alert to follow as the Pastor led,
 Alfred. The pious ALFRED, King to Justice dear!
 Of Alfred boasts remote Jerusalem,
 In sacred converse gifts with Alfred shares.
 The Race of Alfred covet glorious pains
 That orb whose beams round Saxon Alfred shone:

Her darling Alfred, might have spoken;
 Of Saxon liberty that Alfred wore;
 Alfred, dear Babe, thy great Progenitor!
 For ever.—The Spirit of Alfred, at the head
 Sir Alfred trithing, with appropriate words
 Alice. And said, "My name is Alice Fell;
 Of Alice and her grief I told;
 The little orphan, Alice Fell!
 Alien. Shall on some lovely Alien set
 On motley bands of alien flowers
 And alien storms with home-bred ferments claim
 By monstrous theories of alien growth,
 Let alien frenzy seize thee, waxing wroth,
 Into the tumult sent an alien sound
 A sort of alien scattered from the clouds.
 To what an alien spirit had acquired
 The unhappy alien hoping to obtain

Alienation. To wilful alienation from the right,
 Aliens. Aliens, is God's good winter for their haunts.
 Alight. Which, they foresee, must soon alight
 There to alight upon crisp moss ad range,
 From the warm breeze that bears thee on, alight
 Through humbleness, the Spirit that did alight
 Alighted. Or descend where the ark alighted,
 Alighted, there the Stranger stood aloof;
 Ere on firm ground the car alighted;
 And where'er their strokes alighted,
 And at the Hoop alighted, famous Inn.
 Alighting. Forthwith alighting on the ground,
 Alights. And there alights 'mid that aerial host
 Alike. Alike, when first the bitter'n hollow bill
 Alike in whelming snows and roaring waves.
 Be scorn and fear and hope alike forgot
 In Palestine? Where he despised alike
 Doth prey alike on two distracted Countries,
 Admitting no resistance, bends alike
 To occupy—both fools, or wise alike,
 Learn how she can feel alike

But hand and voice alike are still;
 Alike indulged to all, we paused, one now,
 Alike are vain.
 Of hearts and hands alike "prepared
 The glorious temple—did alike proceed
 All kinds alike seemed favourites of Heaven.
 Studied alike in palace and in cot.
 Confirmed alike in progress and decline.
 As will be owned alike by bad and good,
 There's indifference, alike when he fails or succeeds,
 Be Thou to love and praise alike impelled,
 Cheerful alike if bare of flowers as now,
 Rivals in effort; and, alike intent
 Upon its mother) may be both alike
 Alike, when first the vales the bitter'n fills,
 Fostered alike by beauty and by fear:
 We rested in the shade, all pleased alike,
 Both silent and both motionless alike:
 And now and then, alike from need of theirs
 One spirit ruling in each heart; alike
 Alike to body and to mind: his port,
 Faithful alike in forwarding a day
 Cast out alike of person and of thing.
 The wandering Herbalist,—who, clear alike
 Earnest alike, let both from hill to hill
 Her annual, her diurnal, round alike
 And local accidents, shall tend alike
 And uncorrupted senators, alike
 Dear Youth, by young and old alike beloved,
 Gifts nobler are vouchsafed alike to all;
 Granted alike in the outset of their course
 Been shown, alike to body and to mind."

Alive. Or sink, with heart alive like Memnon's lyre ;
 Alive to independent happiness,
 Is he alive ? What mean you ? who alive ?
 The old Man in that dungeon is alive.
 In Story, what men now alive have witnessed,
 That we should leave him there, alive !—we did so.
 Not one of which could help him while alive,
 Alive or dead, I'll find him. Alive—perdition !
 And you left him alive ?
 Alive !—the damps of death were upon him—
 Alive ! you heard him breathe ? quick, quick—
 Of having left a thing like her alive !
 Your limbs they are alive ;
 That, if he be alive, he has it yet.
 And yet I am alive ;
 Is all that is alive ;
 Till thirty were not left alive
 Her limbs are all alive with joy.
 Alive to all things and forgetting all.
 All alive with the fires
 Whether they be alive or dead !
 Could keep alive when He was gone !
 Such seemed this Man, not all alive nor dead,
 And if 'twas born alive or dead,
 And save your souls alive !
 When, all alive with merry chimes,
 With Clym o' the Clough, were they alive again,
 He should be seized, alive or dead.
 Thence, also, more alive to tenderness.
 This Lawn, a carpet all alive
 Most restlessly alive when most confined.

Hubert, if alive that day ;
 For lovers, of all folk that be alive,
 For of all good she is the best alive.
 For of all good she is the best alive.
 For of all good she is the best alive.
 Since of all good you are the best alive.
 That Phæton his son is yet alive,
 Else unremembered, and so keeps alive
 You would say that each hair of his beard was alive,
 My heart, alive to transports long unknown,

(Alive to all a mother's pain,
 An image of her soul is kept alive,
 Which we behold and feel we are alive ;
 Have felt, and every man alive can guess ?
 Of the wide area, twinkles, is alive.
 He loved the Poets, and, if now alive,
 Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive,
 That rose in splendour, was alive, and moved
 And fed him there, alive, month after month,
 To sympathy with man, he was alive
 Of the whole countenance alive with thought,
 And feel no wish to be alive,

In lines, that seem to keep themselves alive

All. (Partial list.) See All-in-all.
 May He whose-eye is over all protect you !
 Till all the band of playmates wept together ;
 And, through all converse of our later years,
 In spite of all the larks that cheered our path,
 All gentleness and love. His face bespeaks
 Nay, Father, stop not ; let me hear it all,
 The punishment they merit. All is plain :
 Sir Host ! by all the love you bear to courtesy,
 With all the daring fictions I have taught her,
 To-day will clear up all.—You marked a Cottage,
 I 'th' name of all the Saints, and by the Mass
 These ten years she has moved her lips all day
 These ten years she had sat all day alone
 You are wasting words ; hear me then once for all :
 Concentrates all the terrors of the Universe :
 And smothered all that's man in me ?—away !—
 All gathered to the spot, in open day
 And all particulars that dull brains require
 I did believe all things were shadows—yæ,
 Of love in all its shapes, beginnings, ends,
 Take all that's mine " beneath the moon,"
 Of all this unintelligible world,
 To me was all in all—I cannot paint
 All thinking things, all objects of all thought,
 And rolls through all things. Therefore am I still
 Than all the sages can.
 Poor Matthew, all his frolics o'er,
 Surpass all science and all utterance ;
 Till the first verse he learned it all by rote.
 Our Lady I will praise with all my power.
 " Through all the Jewry (this before said !)
 With face all pale with dread and busy thought,
 For he may do all that he will devise ;
 Till to a lawn I came all white and green,
 All green and white ; and nothing else was seen.
 Began to honour May with all their powers.
 Well did they know that service all by rote,
 And some did sing all out with the full throat.
 Not all asleep and yet not waking wholly ;
 That shamefully they one and all were slain,
 And take my leave of all such company,

All—continued.
 What ! quoth she, thou art all out of thy mind,
 For thereof comes all goodness and all worth ;
 All gentleness and honour thence come forth ;
 Yet for all that, the truth is found elsewhere ;
 The God of Love afflict thee with all teen,
 And gathered each and all into one place ;
 For of all good she is the best alive.
 For when he saw her doors fast bolted all,
 O, of all houses once the crowned boast !
 Why Troilus hath all this heaviness ?
 All which he of himself conceived wholly
 All white with flour, the dole of village dames,
 (A thing more precious far than all that books
 That we have all of us one human heart.
 To the neighbours he went,—all were free with their money ;
 All trades, as need was, did old Adam assume.—
 And his heart all the while is in Tilsbury Vale.
 This child but half known it, and that not at all.
 All effort seems forgotten ; one to whom
 But did not fall ; for Virtue braves all shocks,
 Death is the quiet haven of us all.
 O flower of all that springs from gentle blood,
 And all that generous nurture breeds to blood,
 The eyes of all Savona streamed with tears.
 And all the wisdom of the Stagyrte,
 With all the Persons, down to paised Age,
Allah. " Gracious Allah ! by such title
Allan. But, Allan, be true to me, Allan,—we'll die
Allay. Those busy cares that would allay my pain ;
 Her virtuous scruples to remove, her fears allay.
 But the dewy allay the heat,
 And thirst for insight to allay
 Griets to allay which Reason cannot heal ;

Can pomp and show allay one heart-born grief ?
 No Mermaids warble—to allay the wind
 With fruitless effort to allay
 But Gospel-truth is potent to allay
 Than to allay. Anathemas are hurled
 All wounds, all perturbations doth allay ?
 Write, and allay by your beneficence,
Allayed. Is tempered and allayed by sympathies
 Of vigour seldom utterly allayed :
 Who, with an understanding heart, allayed
All-beholding. Of all-beholding Phœbus ! But, alas,
 Of all-beholding Man, earth's thoughtful lord ;
All-conquering. Where the all-conquering Roman feared to tread.
All-controlling. And all-controlling power.
All-disposing. Of all-disposing Providence, Allegiance. Upon the allegiance to which men are born—
 Inherits an allegiance, not by choice
 While she exacts allegiance, shall admit Allegoric. By allegoric Bards.
 There, allegoric shapes, female or male,
All-enraptured. And all-enraptured with its purity ?—
Alley. That is an alley had a privy place, Alleys. Through paths and alleys roofed with darkest green ;
 And moss-grown alleys, circumscribing shades,
 Of this fair garden, and its alleys dim,
Alliance. Of such alliance.—From their cradles up,
 Who shrinks not from alliance
 Working but in alliance with the works
 Office, alliance, and promotion—all
 Owes to alliance with these new-born arts !
Allied. A kindred impulse, seemed allied
 For ye, though not by birth allied,
 Features to old ideal grace allied,
 And there shall bloom, with Thee allied,
 Her peace from images to pain allied,
 Best of the good—in pagan faith allied
 In stately men to sovereign Thames allied
 How nearly joy and sorrow are allied !
 With the least shade of thought to sin allied ;
 While unrequiring sadness is allied
 Are Ye to heaven allied,
 Of soul and sense mysteriously allied,
 Filial allied to anger and revenge.
Allies. That will forget thee; thou hast great allies;
 She casts the Britons upon strange Allies,
All-in-all. An intellectual All-in-all
All-involving. At the approach of all-involving night.
All-judging. Queen, Wife and Mother ! may All-

Alms-giving. The hand grew slack in alms-giving, the heart

- Aloft. Save where aloft the subtle sunbeams shine
Aloft, here, half a village shines, arrayed
Think not the peasant from aloft has gazed
Aloft upon the elm-tree. Pretty Maids,
Aloft !—momentous but uneasy bliss !
Mounted aloft, is suffered not to use
Shed round her pillow from aloft,
Which aloft thou dost discern ;
Puzzling aloft his curious wits ;
Or when aloft on Mænalns he stops
Thou hast clomb aloft, and gazed
Almost to touch ;—then up again aloft,
And from aloft look down into a cove
And self-reproach ! for, from aloft, a Kite
Aloft, beneath the moon's pale beam,
Which hath been held aloft before men's sight
Aloft, where pines their branches toss !
Where he, aloft in garden-glade,
Aloft, yet in a tilting vessel rode,
The Cross, in calm procession, borne aloft
Bear to the glacier hand—those Shapes aloft described.
The local Genius hurries me aloft,
As we approached the Convent gate, aloft
Aloft, the imperial Bird of Rome invokes
Absolute stillness, poised aloft in air,
Aloft ascending, and descending deep . . .
Aloft is roasted for the night,
Aloft in sign of taunting scorn,
Hailed from aloft those Heirs of truth divine
Enthroned aloft in undisputed power,
That shines aloft, while through the wood
With penitential sorrow, and aloft
Were tempting all astrir to look aloft or climb ;
Aloft the Raven hangs a visible nest,
Was that clear synthesis built up aloft
Where, tumbling from aloft, a torrent swelled
Tossing in sunshine its dark boughs aloft,
Beyond all compass ; spreads, and sends aloft,
But as the ancient Prophets, bore aloft
Deep—and, aloft ascending, breathe in worlds
Had clomb aloft to delve the moorland turf
That with united shoulders bore aloft
Which, when they should sustain themselves aloft,
Imbued the altar-window ; fixed aloft
Light hirc, aloft upon the horizon's edge,
Aloft, in prospect of the shouting field !
The primal duties shine aloft—like stars ;
Of the blue firmament—aloft, and wide :
In spiral circles mount aloft, and soar . . .
That hang aloft in myriads—nay, far less,
Alone. The longing look alone on you,
The horse alone, seen dimly as I pass,
But now with other mind I stand alone
Once, Man entirely free, alone and wild,
The slave of none, of beasts alone the lord,
Rich guerduons, and to them alone are due.
True dignity abides with him alone
Nor shall she perish there, untended and alone !
How wilt thou stand alone ? Is he not strong ?
Proceed alone. It shall be so ; for strength
When first I saw him sitting there, alone,
Cast off by her Betrayer, she dwells alone,
Trotting alone along the beaten road,
These ten years she had sate all day alone
Murder—perhaps asleep, blind, old, alone,
Is a most serious thing. Not I alone,
And Men alone are Umpires. To the Camp
Who on her journey must proceed alone,
Here do I stand, alone, to helplessness,
Whom no one comes to meet, I stand alone ;—
Would have been better timed. Alone, I see ;
To be alone, and therefore we must part.
I would be left alone. I know your motives !
To abide the issue of my act, alone.
Alone but for a swarm of minute creatures
I seemed a Being who had passed alone
Oh, Eldred, you will die alone.
Alone partake of it ?—Belovèd Marmaduke !
Therefore through me alone must be revealed
To travel half a mile alone.—Good Lady !
Not less if unattended and alone
Sitting behind the chaise, alone.
Nor sheep nor kine were near ; the lamb was all alone,
I saw, within, the Norman Boy kneeling alone in prayer,
Rang alone the far-heard knell, . . .
In which the Parish Chapel stood alone,
Of the world's business to go wild alone :
Was gone to sea, and he was left alone,
Will prosper, though untended and alone :
Fair in thyself and beautiful alone, . . .

Alone—continued.

- But in the Lover's ear alone,
He dwells alone . . .
To visit me, and me alone ; . . .
Alone, I cannot fear to die . . .
Far ever left alone am I . . .
Weep in the public roads, alone . . .
Persisted openly that death alone . . .
Old Susan, she who dwells alone, . . .
Alone amid a prospect wide ;
Who journey thither find themselves alone
Up to the mountains : he had been alone . . .
Had done him female service, not alone . . .
All works which I was wont to do alone, . . .
Sitting alone, or with his faithful Dog,
Or else she were alone : . . .
To me alone imparted, sure I am
Were wasted, as I chanced to walk alone . . .
On which it grew, or to be left alone . . .
Attired in peasant's garb, who stood alone,
He stood alone ; whereat he turned his head
By pacing here, unwearied and alone,
Alone I tread this path ;—for aught I know,
Let thy wheel-harrow alone—
Here, alone, before thing eyes,
And off alone in nooks remote . . .
Love him, or leave him alone !
The Danish Boy walks here alone :
While in the dell he sings alone . . .
Beneath her father's roof, alone
There did she rest ; and dwell alone
Wandering about alone and silently
Sir Walter and the Hart are left alone . . .
'Tis my delight, alone in summer shade,
The Hermit sits alone. These beautiful forms,
Are mourned by man, and not by man alone,
Of music, audible to him alone . . .
Alighted, there the Stranger stood alone ;
That not by bread alone we live,
Peter was travelling all alone ;—
Whether alone or in a crowd,
A little chapel stands alone, . . .
Like to a breeze from heaven. Shall I alone,
Sleeping alone within a mossy cave,
A truth which they alone shall comprehend
Not these alone inspire the tuneful shell ;
Who chase his epitaph ?—Himself alone
Alone she cuts and binds the grain,
Alone upon Loch Ven's heights,
While there he sate, alone and blind,
Alone, and innocent, and gay !
And standing upright and alone,
I see—but not by sight alone,
And We are left, or shall be left alone ;
Alone could satisfy her wide embrace,
And exquisite, that sleep alone bestows
To couch in this thicket of brambles alone,
Recited—and wings alone could travel—there
Speaking of death alone, beneath a clime
In what alone is ours, the living Now
Seated alone, with forehead skyward raised,
The dome of Florence, pensive and alone,
Hers in whose sway alone my heart delights,
Ah ! not for emerald fields alone,
On Earth, who works in the heaven of heavens,
alone,
And she is left alone in heaven ;
Among the thick weeds, stretched alone ;
Alone, beside that grassy heap !
Alone, the armed Multitude,
He takes alone his far-off stand,
There was he left alone, unwept,
Of quietness, she sits alone ;
For wounds that death alone has power to heal,
To adore the Invisible, and Him alone.
For self, and struggles with himself alone,
Deep is the lamentation ! Not alone
Seated alone beneath a darksome tree,
Yet not alone, nor helpless to repel
And by the tide alone the water swayed.
If He, through whom alone our conflicts cease,
Or gulf of mystery, which thou alone,
Came and delivered him, alone he sped
Ye Dales and Hills ! to you alone
And owls alone are waking,
Why, William, sit you thus alone,
—Then ask not wherefore, here, alone,
Him alone she sees and hears,—
He was a tree that stood alone,
He only is a King, and he alone
For One, but surely not for One alone,
See the Condemned alone within his cell
Ah ! not alone by colours bright
And hoast that they alone are free
He is helpless and alone :
Sounded the Horn which they alone could sound,
But she, poor Woman ! housed alone . . .
When she was left alone,
From airy words alone, a Pile that ne'er decays, . . .

'Tis already like a hill
 Already had survived that great decay,
 Behold, already they forget to shine,
 Inviting words—perchance already fung
 Already gathered in this favoured Land
 Their guide in flight—already she
 Perhaps already to his home;
 Already half his race hath run;
 And breathing life of flesh, as if already
 Thy faults, where not already gone
 Grew dear to me: already I began
 Too weak to gather it, already love
 Hath beautified that flower; already shades
 What is already written in the hearts
 If not already from the woods retired
 Already hinted at, of other mould—
 He, on that ministry already bound,
 Already said of patriotic love,
 Of Nature, and already was prepared,
 Already formed upon the village-green,
 Too much of fraltry hath already dropped;
 Gone forth already to the far-off seat
 From every mind!—Already had the sun,
 My Son! behold the Tide already spent
 It is too late already for such hope,
 For they are blest already. None would give Already have I gained. The inward frame
 Already hath sprung up within my heart.
 Already with a stranger whom we love

Also, omitted.

Altar. Before the Altar. What, if he were sick,
 There be who pray nightly before the Altar.
 Shrine, Altar, Image, Offerings hung in sign of gratitude;
 Upon the altar, to the Maud he loved.
 While incense from the altar breathes
 Had pledged his troth before the altar
 Of stagooat waters: altar, sword, and pen,
 He knows that from a holier altar came
 The altar, to decide the fane,
 Marched round the altar—to commemorate
 They round his altar bore the horned God,
 When toward the altar from her bower
 Or altar, whence the cross was reot,
 Lo! Discord at the altar dares to stand
 Temple and Altar sink, to hide their shame
 Then he, who to the altar had been led,
 Down to the humbler altar, which the Knight
 The Vested Priest before the Altar stands;
 The Altar calls; come early under laws
 May-garlands, there let the holy altar stand
 And humble altar, 'mid your sumptuous aisles
 Shed round the altar a celestial calm;
 An altar is in each man's cot,
 Before the Altar, where the Sacrament
 To the high altar its determined place;
 Our Christian altar faithful to the east,
 From the altar of this sacrifice,
 Before the altar while the Mass doth last:
 It is the sacrificial altar, fed
 A fragment, like an altar, flat and smooth:
 Altar and image, and the inclusive walls
 Shrine, altar, image, and the massy piles
 Even like an altar lit by fire from heaven,
 When grove was felled, and altar was cast down,
 Altar, and cross, and church of solemn roof,
 On the dim altar burned continually,
 From her own lonely altar? Do not think
Altars. With altars undisturbed of mossy stone,
 Altars for Druid service fit;
 Did incense-bearing altars rise,
 The priests are from their altars thrust;
 How oft above their altars have been hung

Altars that piety neglects;
 Even for our Altars—for the prize
 The darksome altars, would have blazed
 Of prostrate altars, shrines defaced,
 Again with frankincense the altars smoke
 Their altars they forego, their homes they quit,
 From altars threatened, levelled, or defiled,
 Keep watch before the altars of St. Bees,
 Wherever Christian altars have been raised,
 Who tend her altars, wait upon her throne,
 Of those pure altars worthy; ministers
 (As books and haply votive altars vouch)

Altar-stone. Where altar-stone and rock-hewn seat
Altar-window. Imbued the attar-widow; fixed aloft
Alteration. Strange alteration wrought on every side
 Whence alteration in the forms of things,
Alterations. Of alteratious human hands might make Altered. Desponding Father! mark this altered bough,
 To fit proportion with my altered state!
 As lightly, though of altered hue,
 An altered look upon the advancing Stranger

Ambition. Thy office, thy ambition, be henceforth
 Him, in whose wretched heart ambition failed,
 Whom she to young Ambition bore,
 If like ambition: be their guide.
 Thou, with ambition modest yet sublime,
 Or with a new ambition raised;
 Ambition—following down this far-famed slope
 Of checked ambition, tyranny controlled,
 By no profane ambition, Powers that thrive
 Urged by Ambition, who with subtlest skill
 By blind ambition, be this tribute paid.
 For, sooth to say, ambition, in the breast
 Greedy ambition, armed to treat with scorn
 Ambition frames and heart-humilities.
 Enough of climbing toil!—Ambition treads
 I saw (ambition quickening at the view)
 Her bed, his mountains mad Ambition piles; 532

Of zeal and just ambition, than to live
 Through fond ambition of that hour, I strove
 By personal ambition unenslaved,
 Though like ambition, such was he, O Friend!
 Of low ambition or distempered love?
 Ambition to attempt, and skill to win.
 Wretched ambition drops astounded, fell
 Into the dewy clouds. Ambition reigos
 Has, through ambition of his soul, given way
 Of ill-advised Ambition and of Pride
Ambition's. They shrank, insane ambition's barren goal—
Ambitious. Beware of rousing an ambitious thought;
 On-aught of more ambitious show
 Rising to no ambitious height; yet both,
 Thou liv'st with less ambitious aim,
 Ambitions to be seen or heard,
 O most ambitious Star! an inquest wrought
 And sometimes with ambitious wing that soars
 Take with you some ambitious Youth!
 But, with a less ambitious sympathy,
 Her skill she tried with less ambitious views.
 And guide the Bard, ambitions to be One
 Troubling the last holds of ambitious Rome,
 If unproved the ambitious eagle mount
 Sometimes the ambitious Power of choice, mistaking
 Whether the Painter, whose ambitious skill
 Ambitious projects, pleased me less; I sought
 Not less ambitious once among the wilds
 Where youth's ambitious feet might move at large;
 Be joyless as the blind? Ambitious spirits—
 To follow reason's least ambitious course;
 And by ambitious longings undisturbed;
Ambitiously. Ambitiously the office tried;
 That, while they most ambitiously set forth
 Ambitiously collected. Yet the sigh,

Anarchy. Striking through English breasts the anarchy
 For eyes and ears! what anarchy and din,
 Who from the anarchy of dreaming sleep,
Anathemas. Than to slay, Anathemas are hurled Anatomise. To anatomise the frame of social life;
Ancestor. Like that Wise ancestor of thine
Ancestors. To his ancestors restored
 Which all his glorious ancestors approve:
 Think ye your British ancestors forsok
 Adorn, in which the good Man's ancestors
 Our ancestors, within the still domain
 Or where their ancestors erected huts,
Ancestral. Uprisen—to lodge among ancestral kings;
 In his ancestral palace, where, from morn
 Hearths loved in childhood, and ancestral floors;
 She heard the ancestral stream;
 Our dim ancestral Past in vision clear;
 The Sultan hides deep in ancestral tombs.
 Who, with ancestral feeling, can perceive
Ancestry. How fragile! yet of ancestry
 The eagle worth of her ancestry?
 Who counts among her ancestry
 Honouring the hope of noble ancestry.
 With all his ancestry. Then peace to him,
 And customs of our rural ancestry
Anchor. The skiffs, at anchor where with umbrage wide
 Fixed on the anchor left by Him who saves
 Much sorrow ere the fleet its anchor weighed;
 The anchor of my purest thoughts, the nurse,
 Some lying fast at anchor in the road,
 Or, in the hollow surge, at anchor rocked
 While that stout Ship at anchor lay
 The skiffs with naked masts at anchor laid,
 Or drops his anchor down with plunge profound;
 Toss like a ship at anchor, rocked by storms;
 The torch, the star, the anchor; nor except
 Or ride at anchor in her sounds and bays;
Anchorage. Of trusty anchorage, or scudding o'er
Anchored. Our boat is safely anchored by the shore,
 For ever anchored in her sheltering bay.

 And who, that walks where men of ancient days
 It was a spot where, ancient vows fulfilled,
 Led by its murmur, to the ancient oak
 The ancient spirit is not dead;
 That in our ancient uncouth country style
 Of her who in my heart still holds her ancient place.
 And the ancient church was filled with light,
 Their ancient neighbour, the old steeple-tower,
 That ancient Woman seated on Helm-crag
 Of ancient mountains, or my ear was touched
 Our walk was far among the ancient trees:
 What wonder? at her bidding, ancient lays
 Of ancient ether was no more,
 With no one but the ancient woman,
 To lead those ancient Amazonian files,
 The words of ancient time I thus translate,
 Sigh forth their ancient melodies!
 What though this ancient Earth be trod
 The ancient faith disclaim?
 His ancient dower Olympus hath not sold;
 Heed not the pillage of man's ancient heart.
 Is ancient Piety for ever flown?
 In which some ancient Chieftain finds repose
 Day's mutable distinctions.—Ancient Power!
 Leaving an ancient dome, and towers like these,
 Have forfeited their ancient English dower
 Whether, as bards have told in ancient song,
 In due observance of an ancient rite,
 Our ancient freedom; else 'twere worse than vain
 Guardians of Biscay's ancient liberty.
 Hither, like you ancient Tower
 And of the ancient hills!
 Descend, and, on the brow of ancient Rome
 Flattery in Ancient Rome's pure-minded style:
 From ancient Rome, downwards through that bright dream
 And habit of his vow. That ancient Man—
 Hail, ancient Manners! sure defence,
 And lasting terror through that ancient Hold.
 Round strath and mountain, stamped by the ancient tongue
 To be looked down upon by ancient hills,
 The forest huge of ancient Caledon
 The Lovers took within this ancient grove
 That ancient voice which wont to call
 The rites of ancient piety
 Be parted from his ancient ground:

 Who sang in ancient Greece his loving lay,
 In ancient times, and ere the Hall was built
 The ghostly language of the ancient earth,
 Of ancient times revive, and youth be trained
 To see again, was one by ancient right
 In ancient story versed, whose breast had heaved
 Take one,—that ancient festival, the Fair,
 Perennial of the ancient hills; nor less
 With looking on, some ancient wedded pair
 Retaineth more of ancient homeliness, . . . 712
 Of ancient loyalty, and chartered rights,
 Of ancient Story, thought of each bright spot,
 Of Romorentin, home of ancient kings,
 By ancient lawgivers. In this frame of mind,
 Wanted, fast rooted on the ancient tower
 In which apostasy from ancient faith
 But as the ancient Prophets, borne aloft
 Of ancient institutions said and done
 Of ancient heroes. If I suffered grief
 An ancient servant of my father's house
 Didst chaunt the vision of that Ancient Man,
 Was wholly ignorant that my ancient Friend—
 Of a small chapel, where, in ancient time,
 Of ancient inspiration serving me, . . . 797
 Beats to the heroic song of ancient days;
 Enquire of ancient Wisdom, go, demand
 The ancient rural character, composed
 My ancient minister and I together took
 Of ancient minstrel lifted above the cloud
 The fire of ancient Caledonia burned:
 That ancient story of Prometheus chained
 Drawn from the chords of the ancient British harp
 Futurity was thought, in ancient times,
 England, the ancient and the free, appeared
 Sent by the ancient Soul of this wide land,
 For ancient worth and honourable things,
 Or straggling burgh, of ancient charter proud,
 Among the clouds, and roars through the ancient woods;
 Lamenting ancient virtues overthrown, . . . 878
 And mountains bare, or clothed with ancient woods,
 The home and ancient birthright of their flock, . . . 888
 Which had been sighed for, ancient thought fulfilled
 And if those eagles to their ancient hold
 Thy ancient honours when shalt thou resume?

 It chanc'd that Andrew pass'd that way
 Quoth Andrew, "Under half-a-crown,

Anaw. And said: I wis, when thou art horn'd anew,
 And wakes anew life's glimmering trembling fires,
 He should depart, to plant himself anew.

Angel—continued.

A mailed angel on a battle-day ; 108
 An Angel from his station ; 112
 An Angel, and in earthly ecstasies 139
 This Height a ministering Angel might select ;
 Might tempt an angel to descend,
 Till off her guardian Angel, to some charge
 The Harmit saw the Angel spread his wings
 And glides o'er the earth like an angel of light.
 "But oh ! thou Angel from above,
 ANGEL by name ; and not an ANGEL waves
 Whose spirit, like the angel that went down
 A Guardian Angel fluttered
 Or Angel, if he were to dwell on earth,
 As the lost Angel by a human voice
Angelic. A mind that, in a calm angelic mood
 His raiment of angelic white, and lo !
 Her own angelic glory seems begun.
 With something of angelic light.
 He hung,—then floated with angelic ease
 Around angelic Forms, the still Evening's angelic clouds. Yet ne'er a note
 A Spirit, with his angelic wings
 Thou Spirit, whose angelic hand
 The silent stars, among the angelic quire,
 Why should we weep or mourn, Angelic boy,
 Hands of angelic powers had fixed it there,
 On wings, angelic Spirits ! I could muse Angelica. It was Angelica thundering through the woods
Angelical. Inferior to angelical, they prolong
 Angelical, keen eye, courageous look
Angel's. Tinged like an angel's smile all rosy red—
 This knowledge, from an Angel's voice
 Where even the motion of an Angel's wing
 Flew open, by an Angel's voice unbarred ?
 Dropped from an Angel's plumed, With moistened eye Angels. The Cross, by angels planted on the aerial rock
 And if good Angels fail, slack in their duty,
 Let other bards of angels sing,
 For such, by pitying Angels and by Spirits
 Sweet thoughts of angels hovering nigh,
 Of blessed Angels crowned the right
 He knew the rocks which Angels haunt
 Since earth grew calm while angels mused ?
 Mortals, rejoice ! the very Angels quit
 With angels when their own untroubled home
 Angels of love, look down upon the place ;
 Angels and gods ! We struggle with our fate,
 Who gives his Angels wings to speed through air,
 For, if good Angels love to wait
 Angels might welcome with a choral shout !
 O for the help of Angels to complete
 This Temple—Angels governed by a plan
 To chant, as Angels do above,
 The very Angels whose authentic lays,
 Angels she sees—that might from heaven have flown,
 Saints would not grieve nor guardian angels frown
 Which Angels make, on works of love descending.
 Of holy Angels round her hovered :
 And Angels carolled these far-echoed verses ;—
 But Angels round her pillow
 Win rest, and ease, and peace, with bliss that Angels share
 Though men be, there are angels that can feel
 By angels guarded, deviate from the line
 Angels and Saints, in every hamlet mourned !
 By men and angels blest, the glorious light ?
 His Spirit Angels greet ; and ours be hope
 Like Angels from their bowers, our virtues to befriend ;
 While choirs of fervent Angels sang
 Like those good Angels whom a dream of night
 Angels hovering round thy couch,
 In act, as hovering Angels when they spread
 But Sir Eustace, whom good angels
 A theme for angels, when they celebrate
 The choirs of Angels spread, triumphantly augmented,
 By angels planted on the aerial rock
 Guests welcome almost as the angels were
 Like that of angels or commissioned spirits,
 Far was I, far as angels are from guilt.
 Like angels stopped upon the wing by sound
 Of shouting Angels, and the empyreal throng—
 If Angels traversed their cerulean floors,
 Of God ; and Angels to his sight appeared
 "Angels may weigh and fathom : they perceive,
 Of blessed angels, pitying human cares
 In tasks which guardian Angels might approve,
Genii, and winged Angels that are Lords
Anger. While roars the sullen Arve in anger by,
 Or, swept in anger from the insulted shore,
 And met a man who foamed with anger vehement.
 Yet loathing life—till anger is appeased
 And, in anger or merriment, out of the north,
 Into anger or disdain ;

Anger—continued.

Of hasty anger, rising in the eclipse 124
 The utmost anger of the sky : 177
 Survive, and Fortune's utmost anger try ;
 Yet, in some fit of anger sharp, 301
 Let Thy love its anger soothe 336
 And, from the whirlwind of his anger, drink
 In sackcloth, and God's anger deprecate
 Or into anger roused by vernal words
 Pride, anger, mischief, poverty, and madness.
 Upon his lips or anger at his heart
 This sea in anger, and that dismal shore
 Whoe roar'd the sullen Arve in anger by,
 Swept in their anger from th' affrighted shore,
 Of anger, and vexation, and despite,
 With anger vexed, with disappointment sore,
 Which anger and resentment could not dry
 Of moral anger previously had tinged
 In anger blowing from the distant sea
 To anger, by the malady that griped
 Of anger never seen in her before
 Anger and indignation. Still he loved
 Fittest allied to anger and revenge
Angle. Met in an angle, hung a penthouse, framed Angler. The thundering tube the aged angler hears,
 Thou Angler, by the silent flood ;
Angler's. Ruffled the waters to the angler's wish,
Anglers. Anglers, bent on reckless pastime,
 Keen anglers with unusual spoil elated
Angles. A spot, that angles at the riv'let's feet,
Anll. ANGLI by name ; and not an ANGEL WAVES
Anlling. Anlling beside the margin of the lake
 Anlling I went, or trod the trackless hills
Anlling-rod. Scribbled with verse : a broken anlling-rod
Angry. Their watch-dog ne'er his angry bark forgoes,
 The Demon of the snow, with angry roar
 Of angry Nature to avenge her God
 And he seemed angry. Angry ! well he might ;
 But 'twas an angry night, and o'er our heads
 When they are angry, roar like lions for their prey
 Exclaimed an angry Voice,
 "Trust, angry Bard ! a knowing Sprite,
 Whence angry perturbations,—and that look
 For Thou art angry with Thine enemies !
 An angry arm that snatches good away,
 Reckless of angry Duddon sweeping by,
 Bethought him, angry and ashamed,
 And angry Ocean roars a vain appeal
 Threatened by angry breakers as they passed ;
 In angry spirits for her old free range,
 Breaks off the dreadful kiss with angry shriek
 Fanned by the breath of angry Providence
 Such as the storms and angry elements
 To every angry passion. There I heard,
 From mild to angry, and from sad to gay,
 Which turned an angry beck against the down
 Of friends or kindred, whom the angry sea
 Of angry nmpires, partial and unjust ;
 Yet mutinously knits his angry brow
 To Argos. So wills angry Jupiter,
Anguish. See Heart-anguish.
 Untaught that soon such anguish must ensue,
 To loathsome vaults, where heart-sick anguish
 fessed,
 Though inward anguish damped the Sailor's brow,
 His anguish, with his heart he ceased to strive ;
 And, in the storm and anguish of the heart,
 Would crush the lion's paw with mortal anguish,
 Of penitential anguish, yea with tears
 The Mother, in her turns of anguish, worse
 And, in their anguish, bear what other minds have borne !"
 Nor Anguish strayed from her Tartarean den ;
 All anguish ; Saint that evil thoughts and aims
 Their anguish,—and they blend sweet songs with thine
 Again engendering anguish,
 Bereft Ones, and in lowly anguish weep
 Anguish, and death : full oft where innocent blood
 Where anguish, strange as dreams of restless sleep,
 But now, his Child, with anguish pale,
 This weight of anguish and despair
 Oh take her anguish and her fears
 From anguish to despair !
 Pipe solitary anguish ; or must hang
 This anguish ; and, indifferent to delight,
 —The darts of anguish fix not where the seat
 Of anguish unrelieved, and lack of power
 Was anguish to her ears ! 'And must she rule,
 Of sweetness where dire anguish had been known,
 Of keen domestic anguish ; and beguile
 Of desolating anguish for then all !
 Who in the anguish of their souls bewail
Animal. And their glad animal movements all gone by)
 The strenuous Animal hath clomb
 Weak all the animal within ;

Animal—continued.

An animal delight though dim !
Sad words to that mute Animal,
And animal activities, and all
Our animal appetites and daily wants,
His animal being ; in them did he live,
They lift the animal being, do themselves

Animals. Of the dumb animals, whom he had saved, Animate. See Re-animate.
Stoops willingly to animate and spur

Returned to animate an age forlorn ?
Should animate, but not mislead, the pen
More fit to animate the Poet's pen,
That animate my way where'er it leads !
And fiction animate his sportive lyre,
To animate the mind that ever turned
Or animate an hour of vacant ease.
One courage seemed to animate them all :

Animated. Was filled with animated toys,
More animated I might here give way,

Animates. Love animates my lyre—
That animates the scenes of public life
Her courage animates the flood ;
Upon the Patriots, animates their task ;
Which animates this day their calm abode.

Animating. See Soul-animating.
If thou partake the animating faith
That animating spectacle of sails
The animating hope that time may come
One spirit animating old and young,
Their little boons of animating thought

Animation. Such animation often do I find,
Wanted not animation, when the tide
How rich in animation and delight,
With a complacent animation spake,
But O, the animation in the mien.

Anio's. To listen to Anio's precipitous flood,
Near Anio's stream I spied a gentle Dove

Ankled. See Lean-ankled.
Ankles. Rests upon ankles swoln and thick ;
Do his weak ankles swell.

Anna. (Suspect not, Anna, that their fate is hard ;
Annan. To Tiviot's stream, to Annan, Tweed, and Clyde :—

Anna's. While Anna's peers and early playmates troad,

Anne. I am older ; Anne, than you . . .
Pull the primrose, sister Anne !
To good Saint Fillan and to fair Saint Anne ;

Announce. Announce a season potent to renew,
Wrecks though they be, announce with feeling
Sent in on Winter's service, to announce,
His expectations, and announce his claims

Announcement. Opening the clouds ; or sovereign king, announced
Poured forth his aspirations, and announced . . .
Announced, as a preparatory act

When the next village hears the show announced
Of instantaneous thunder, which announced,
—This sacred right is fruitlessly announced,

Announcement. In that announcement, greeting seemed to mock

Announces. The Wain announces—by whose side
Announces to the thirny fields a boon
The priest announces from his holy seat :
Or locks of wool, announces whence he comes.

Announcing. Announcing, One was born mankind to free ;
Announcing immortality and joy

Annoy. Like branches when strong winds the trees annoy.
Fancy, intent to harass and annoy,
To noble Clifford ; from annoy
True lovers doth so bitterly annoy,
No sad vacuities his heart annoy,

Annoyance. For fixed annoyance ; and full oft beset Annoyed. To One by storms annoyed and adverse winds ;

Annual. Well pleased upon some simple annual feast,
Her annual funeral,
With annual verdure, and revive the woods,
In annual renovation thus it stands—
When she applies her annual test
On these expected annual rounds ;
Of annual joy some tributary lay,
Content upon some simple annual feast,
Were flown, and autumn brought its annual show
By annual custom, issuing forth in troops,
The annual savings of a toilsome life,
Prompt answer ; they proclaim the annual Wake,
Her annual, her diurnal, round alike
Her annual bounty, springing dealt forth
" One day—a summer's day of annual pomp "

Annually. Sees annually, if clouds towards either ocean
A thrush resorts, and annually chants,
That sycamore, which annually holds

Annulled. That self might be annulled : her bondage prove

Annunciation. Joyful annunciation !—it went forth—

The annunciation of the dreadful truth
Anodynes. And many anodynes applying,

Anon. Anon, appears a brave, a gorgeous show
Susaa ! they'll both be here anon,"
But total darkness came anon,
Re-yoked her to the Ass :—anon
The Ploughboy is whooping—anon—anon :

Anon his lifted eyes
And Peter, ever and anon
Anon before my sight a palace rose
Anon the breeze became a blast,
" So be it," said the King ;—"anon,"
Crossed ever and anon by plank or arch ;
Niagaras, Alpine passes, and anon
Fast the churchyard fills :—anon

And, ever and anon, how bright a gleam
Where, ever and anon, her head she shrouds
That of this murder wist, and that anon :
And then I thought anon as it was day,
And so methought I started up anon,
Returns from her long course :—anon

Anon, in order mounts a gorgeous show
Came ever and anon a breath-like sound,
Rocked high above their heads ; anon, the din
Which 'tis reproach to hear ? Anon I rose
I could not, ever and anon, forbear
And cloudless sky.—Anon exclaimed our Host,
And recognises ever and anon
Giddy and restless ; ever and anon
Through many channels, ever and anon

Another. Another high on that green ledge ;—he gained

For never could I hope to meet with such another.
I seemed transported to another world ;
For that another in his Child's affection
This castle has another Area—come,
Nay, we must travel in another path,
Another sits 'th' sun, and by the hour
What there is not another living man
Finds ease because another feels it too.
Will waste her curses on another name.
Start not !—Here is another face hard by ;
Pluck them, and another year
They went ad they built up another . . .
Another grave was added,—He had found
Another grave,—near which a full half-hour
That it was not another grave ; but one
We'll take another : who is he that lies
Three months with one, and six months with another ;
Or sing another song, or choose another tree . . .

The threshold of another year ;
Before I see another day,
Before I see another day,
Another day, a single one !
My Child ! they gave thee to another,
I shall not see another sue ;
Nor shall I see another day.
" Another still ! and still another !
" Dear Babe, thou daughter of another,
Another kinsman—he will be our friend
Another Master. Heaven forgive me, Luke,
Without another link to my felicity,"
The splinters took another road—
All seasons through, another debt,
Another Star-of-Babhehem find,
Another of the flock,
Another voice, in tone as hoarse
And gives another lusty cheer ;
Which called their thoughts another way :
Another ; then perhaps a pair—
Another could repair ;
Her Father took another Mate ;
But there may come another day to me—
But Stephen to another Maid
Had sworn another oath ;
" Bring forth another horse ! " he cried aloud.
" Another horse ! "—That shout the vassal heard
Another monument shall here be raised ;
And I to this would add another tale.
—Now another day is come,
To them I may have owed another gift,
(Like the bright confines of another world)
Frail man ne'er ate in such another ;
He gave a groan, and then another,
And saw it was another !
Shines like another sun—on mortal sight
" 'Twill be another Yarrow !
Upon those servants of another world
Thought for another moment. Thou art free,
Another year !—another deadly blow !
Another mighty Empire overturned !
' 'Twill be another Yarrow.' " Prophecy
Or aught by which another is deprest,
From hope too distant, not to dread another.
She ventures once again—another pause !
But her Faith leaned another way . . .
Up to another cottage, hidden
Another language spreads from coast to coast ;

Another—continued.

Softly she glides, another home to seek. . . . 434 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 22. 8

 "Another year is ours;" 507 May 30
 Another takes its place, 507 May 30
 Another was on Thursday brought,
 Some with their notes another manner feigned;
 Another time he took into his head,
 The little Actor took another part;
 Another race hath been, and other palms are
 won. 590 Immortality 203
 With it's own Virtues springs another earth: . . . 616 Desc. Sk. Quarto 783
 If this be error, and another faith
 With clearer knowledge; with another eye
 And bore the semblance of another stream
 As if it pertained to another mind,
 Without unkindness, in another place. 677 Prelude 6. 187
 Above all joys, that seemed another morn.
 Another maid there was, who also shed
 With children gathered round; another street
 Another lies at length, beside a range
 As if admonish'd from another world. 697 Prelude 7. 205
 Into another region. As a light
 One victory with another, higher far,
 My deeper feelings, but another cause,
 For future restoration.—Yet another
 Is but another name for absolute power
 One deeper than another, self-condemned
 To the green meadows of another vale.
 Another tablet registered the death,
 Was wedded to another, and his heart 843 Excursion 6. 368
 Though from another sprung, different in kind:
 Methinks, would better suit another place.
 Full fleest he was, "Another Margaret Green,"
 Another and the same! Most beautiful,
 Of yet another summer's day, not loth
 And o'er the mountain-wastes. "Another sun,"
 Another sun, and peradventure more;
 The journey of another night, K.8. 220 The snow-tracks* 39

Another's. When trusted to another's care,
 Another's praise from envy clear.
 Another's first, and then her own?
 Or by another's sympathy was led,
 Another's need to suit,
 Which was the captive of another's toil
 She lives another's wishes to complete,—
Answer. No voice made answer, he could only hear Recovering heart, like answer did she make;
 Answer these questions, from our common knowledge,
 I'll answer for it that our four-legged friend
 To stay behind!—Hearing at first no answer,
 And spake to you, why did you give no answer?
 'Twas a strange answer that he made; he said,
 No answer—hush—lost wretch, he lifts his hand
 A wicked Man should answer for his crimes.
 Made answer to that plaintive sound.
 The Boy no answer made by words, but, so earnest was his look,
 One that will answer to my mind;
 No answer, only took the mother's hand
 To this did Johnny answer make,
 Made answer, like a traveller bold,
 The Youth made answer with a jocund voice;
 The Jay makes answer as the Magpie chatters;
 A gentle answer did the old Man make,
 Shall answer, for our song is of the Clouds,
 A simple answer! but even so forth springs,
 "Wait, prithee, wait!" this answer Lesbia threw
 No sign of answer made by word or face:
 There would the Indian answer with a smile
 The tombs— which hear and answer that brief cry,
 And some a bold uttering answer made:
 The tear in answer flows;
 And she made answer: "ANLESS sorrow!"
 No answer did the Matron give.
 Concise in answer; solemn and sublime
 He with a smile made answer, that in truth
 That they might answer him; and they would shout.
 Nor had I power to answer ere she told
 Prompt answer; they proclaim the annual Wake,
 And have an answer—thither come, and shape
 We shouted—but no answer! Darkness fell
 And, with that ready answer satisfied,
 To appear and answer; to the grave I spake
 But what is error? "—Answer he who can!"
 This answer followed.—"You have turoed my Approach. Her sad approach

Approached—continued.

As he approached, no salutation given . . .
I had approached, like other youths, the shield . . .
In seats of wisdom, not to be approached . . .
Approached; and, with a mild and respectful air . . .
Even as the same is looked at, or approached . . .
My Lady ne'er approached a thing so coarse . . .

Approaches. As he approaches them, with solemn cheer.

And night approaches with her shades.

Approaching. See Naar-approaching.

Approaching, and upbraid the tardy gale;
His home approaching, but in such a mood . . .
Uprisen, as if to check approaching Night,
Or cloud approaching to divert the rays,
Is shed, the laeugor of approaching noon;
" For this, approaching, One by One,
Approaching in her gentle way,
Thy whereabouts, to warn the approaching sail.
Approaching Waters of the deep, that share
And echo'd hoof approaching the far shore;
A passenger approaching, he would turn
Retiring or approaching from afar
Of my approaching steps, and in the shade
For full in view, approaching through a gate

Approbation. Her approbation, and with pomps and games.

Dread mark of approbation, justly gained!

Appropriate. While from his heart the appropriate lesson flows,

The appropriate calm of blest eternity.
From this appropriate Court renowned LUCRINE
Of feudal sway her own appropriate seat;
The appropriate Picture, fresh from Titian's hand,
With an appropriate human centre—hermit,
They are to put the appropriate nature on,
The appropriate sense, in Latin numbers couched:
With its appropriate grace, yet rather seeking
Like Indian mats, that with appropriate grace
Sit blithe sitting, with appropriate words
Defended, and appropriate to man's need.
Appropriate, and divided from the world

Appropriated. Lodged, in a dear appropriated spot,

Approva. A more benignant sacrifice approve—
A hope, that prudence could not then approve,
Rebellious passion: for the Gods approve
Which all his glorious ancestors approve:
Can she, a blessed saint, the work approve?
Your faith in Him approve
Their spirit, in your Children, thus approve.
It is his darling passion to approve;
Be one fixed mind for all; thy rights approve
And merciful desires, thy sanctity approve!"
A heart, that could not much itself approve,
Such's start forth, not seldom, to approve
Cherish, and lofty Minds approve the past—
In tasks which guardian Angels might approve,

Approved. While friends and kindred all approved

In their benignity approved!
My life has been approved,
From earth, perhaps by Shakespeare's self approved,
May'st thou pursue thy course by God approved,
If so approved and sanctified, to pass.

Approves. A Pile that Grace approves, and Time can trust

That He who guides and governs all, approves
And Hooker's voice the spectacle approves!
April. As lambs or fawns in April clustering lie
Comes on to gladden April with the sight
It was an April morning; fresh and clear
Meanwhile were mine; till one bright April day,
Or, some bright day of April sky,
" In April here beneath the flowering thorn
Beneath the concave of an April sky,
When Peter on some April morn,
Sloped seaward, turf whose tender April green,
Of April, smiling high in upper air?
Like a patch of April snow—
That day of balmy April weather,
Were in the sky, that April morn,
Which you last April made!"
Lo! Streams that April could not check
Alas! the twentieth April of his life
When Transport kiss'd away my april tear,
Thus, when in changeful April fields are white
Ye rains of April, duly wet this earth!

April's. Of April's mimeries!

The dew's of morn, or April's tender shower?

Apron. Till she had filled her apron full.

Aprons. With their comely blue aprons, and caps

white as snow,

Apt. I have prepared a most apt Instrument—

Your pupil is, you see, an apt proficient
Intense, and frugal, apt for all affairs,
Apt emblem (for reproof of pride)
Needles for strings in apt gradation!
Apt likeness bears to hers, through gathered clouds
To give me human strength, by apt admishment.
That makes our hearts more apt to sympathize

Arb. He sequent an Arab of the Bedouin tribes:
Could mean, the Arab told me that the stone
The song, than the Arab with calm look declared
But was an Arab of the desert too;
This Arab phantom, which I thus beheld, . . .

Arabian. Arabian fiction never filled the world
Among Arabian sands:
The Arabian desert shapes a willing road
Hangs o'er the Arabian Prophet's native Waste,
A slender abstract of the Arabian tales;

Arab's. O'er the parched waste beside an Arab's tent;
Of beauty, meets the sun-burnt Arab's eye:
Arabs. They roamed through Wastes where now the tent'd Arabs dwell.

Araby. Near spicy shores of Araby the blest,
In Araby, romances; legends penned . . .
Arachne's. Arachne's rival spirit, . . .
Ararat. Of a proud Ararat! and, thereupon, . . .
Arbitr. Arbitr. undisturbed of right and wrong, . . .
Arbitrary. And arbitrary rule. But launch thy bark
To be no arbitrary weight imposed, . . .

Arbitrement. Lie in the arbitrement of those who ruled . . .
Arbitress. Dread arbitress of mutable respect, . . .
Realms quake by turns: proud Arbitress of grace,
Let Truth, stern arbitress of all, . . .

Arbour. Let us quit the leafy arbour, . . .
And seug as birds in leafy arbour, . . .
And a small arbour, made for rural joy:
My mansion with its arbour shall endure;—
" The arbour does its own condition tell;
He rested 'mid an arbour green and shady,
Half grot, half arbour—proffers to enclose
That in you arbour oftentimes she sate

Arbour's. That cheered the trellised arbour's privacy,

Arbours. Tall trees, green arbours, and ground-
flowers in flocks;
Walks, pools, and arbours, homestead, hall—
Wast store of leafy arbours where the light
Where arbours of impenetrable shade, . . .
Arc. She might prove our Maid of Arc. . . .

Stormy and fierce, the Maid of Arc withdrew . . .
Arcade. Flits and refits along the close arcade;
Arcades. Of its Arcades paved with sepulchral slabs,
Of trellis-work in long arcades,
The Arcades I traversed, in the Palace huge
The streets were still; not so those long Arcades;
Arcadia. Of his Arcadia, by fraternal love
Arcadian. Enough of garlands, of the Arcadian crook
To scenes Arcadian, whispering, through soft air,
Not such as, 'mid Arcadian fastnesses:
By beds and banks Arcadian of gay flowers
Dismissing therefore, all Arcadian dreams,
Arcady. The happiest lovers Arcady might boast,
In Arcady, beneath unaltered skies, . . .

Arch. See Rainbow-arch.

His neck, a varying arch, between his towering
wings:
And, as thou see'st, under the arch of heaven

Arm—continued.

A lance he bore, and underneath one arm . . .
 With freight of slippers piled beneath his arm !
 From far, with basket, slung upon her arm,
 Tied to her arm, and picking thus from the lane
 Were baffled ; nor could my weak arm disperse
 But wrought with mightier arm than now prevails.
 Standing apart ; with curvèd arm reclined Whizzed from the Stripling's arm ! If touched by him,
 Hence a dread arm of floating power, a voice . . .
 Who, bearing each a basket on his arm,
 The tyrant felt their arm sublime . . .

A Pym's brave heart, or stir a Hampden's arm ?
 The nobler badge shall glitter on his arm . . .

Armuth's. On Armuth's pleasant fields. And now they came.

Armuthwaite. Of Wilfred Armuthwaite ? " The Vicar answered,

Armed. He to an armed fleet was forced away
 About your Daughter ! Troops of armed men,
 Was made to seize him by three armed men,
 As soon as he had armed himself with strength
 Each crowned with flowers, and armed with spear and shield,

And armed with living spear for mortal fight ;
 And stands amidst you now an armed creature,
 Like a Champion, armed I come ;
 With all her armed Powers, . . .
 Alone, the armed Multitude . . .

Well-pleased, the armed Company
 Rides forth, an armed man, and hurls a spear
 Of Justice armed, and Pride to be laid low.
 Encounters, armed for work of pain and death.
 Greedy ambition, armed to treat with scorn
 Armed to repel them ? Every hazard faced
 His being armed with strength that cannot fail.
 Now meeting on his road an armed knight,
 And armed warrior ; and in every grove

Armenian. Hear now of a fair Armenian,
 Constant to the fair Armenian,

Armies. Than twenty armies. How ? The old blind Man,
 Opposed to armies, not a nerve would tremble :
 To chase mankind, with men in armies packed
 Of perilous war her weightiest armies fall,
 Armies or kingdoms. We have heard a strain
 On fleets and armies, and external wealth :

The power of Armies is a visible thing,
 And laurelled armies, not to be withstood—

We crossed the Brabant armies on the fret
 Armies of clouds,—even so, its powers and aspects
 Than sentinels, between two armies, set . . .

Arming. Thou Power supreme ! who, arming to rebuke

Arminius. ARMINIUS—all the people quaked like dew

Armorial. Figures with armorial signs of race and birth,

Armorica. In old Armorica, whose secret springs

Armour. Armour rusting in his halls
 Armour divine, and conquer in your cause !
 Cased in the unfeeling armour of old time,
 Broke forth in armour of resplendent words,
 The boxer's armour, the dishonoured Glove.

Armory. Armoury of the invincible Knights of old Arm's. But, with the plaything at arm's length, he sets

Arms. Their frozen arms her neck no more can fold ;
 Thy breast their death-bed, confined in thine arms !
 The cloister startles at the gleam of arms . . .
 With few in arms, innumerable foes . . .
 And the short thunder, and the flash of arms ;
 With its dark arms to form a circling bowyer,
 The happy husband flies, his arms to throw
 Left by gigantic arms—at length surveys
 My husband's arms now only served to strain
 Whole hours, with idle arms in moping sorrow knit.

Died in his arms ; and with those thanks a prayer
 I felt thy infant Brother in her arms ;
 I took thee in my arms and we began
 I bore her in my arms ; her looks won pity ;
 And arms to fold her to my heart. Submissively
 Is brave. To Clifford's arms he would have led
 To stretch her arms, and dim the gladsome light
 His pleading face, and feel his clasping arms,
 But take me to your arms—this breast, alas !
 And in the arms of a stranger I must die.
 But standing, walking, stretching forth his arms,
 and he had died in my arms !—
 His senses play him false ; and see, his arms
 To weep that I am gone. Brothers in arms !
 They hug the infant in my arms,

Into their arms the lamb they took,
 " He took thee in his arms, and in pity brought thee home :

Arms—continued.

Me had the dream equipped with wings, so I took him in my arms,

His arms have a perpetual holiday ;
 Pine not like them with arms across,
 When from my arms my Babe they took,
 And then he stretched his arms, how wild !
 And in his arms a Lamb he had.

I cannot keep thee in my arms ;
 Upon the nursing which his arms embraced.
 She looks again—her arms are up—
 Old Michael, while he was a babe in arms,
 With outspread arms and fallon upon her knees
 Thee, Baby, laughing in my arms,
 While she dandles the Babe in her arms to the sound.

The trees were grey, with neither arms nor head ;
 For blue Ether's arms, flung round thee,
 Their own far-stretching arms and leafy heads
 Nor of her arms ashamed.

While Soldiers, weary of the arms they wield,
 And now entwine their arms ; but ne'er again
 Back turned, arms folded, the unapparent face
 Through the beloved retreats your arms enfold !
 And, falling into Bruce's arms, . . .
 And useless arms, a trunk of man, . . .
 And spreads her arms, as if the general air . . .
 That which we would perform in arms—we must !
 Resting upon his arms each warrior stood,
 Glory to arms ! But, conscious that the nerve
 Infants in arms, and ye, that as ye go . . .
 By skeleton arms, that, from the mountain's trunk
 The clang of arms is heard, and phantoms glide,
 Whose infant arms enclasp the shrine

Their foliage ; ashes flung their arms around ;
 And dim of arms and minstrelsy . . .
 And Captains known for worth in arms ;
 Now was the North in arms—they shine
 And thus in arms, a zealous Band . . .
 To spread its arms, and stand for aye . . .
 Her arms, or over-deeply breathed,
 Dissension, checking arms that would restrain
 And has a Champion risen in arms to try
 Their tents, and check the current of their arms.

Of good, o'er manners arts and arms, diffused ;
 Creep round its arms through centuries unborn.
 But, from the arms of silence—list ! O list !
 That fascinate the very Babe in arms, . . .
 By Social Order's watchful arms embraced ;
 Struggling for life, into its saving arms !
 They fall, thy saving arms, dread Power ! around them cast.

That every man in arms should wish to be ?
 That every Man in arms should wish to be . . .
 The Boy is in the arms of Wharf, . . .
 His arms, as swimmers use, and plunge—dread
 thought,

To feats of arms address !
 And in Death's arms has long reposed the Friend . . .
 The dusky Shape within her arms imbound,
 Their arms still strengthening with the strengthening heart,

And every season has soft arms . . .
 That stripped of arms I to my end am brought
 In the chaste arms of thy beloved Love !
 Stretched forth his little arms and 'smil'd'
 Thee to her arms, and kisses interweave
 Claps in her arms, nor weens (O lot unblest !)
 What arms the son of bright Aurora wore :—
 Uplifted in his arms the child, . . .
 Where I was looking on, a babe in arms, . . .
 Nursed in his Mother's arms, who sinks to sleep,
 In arms, now rosy prattlers at the feet . . .
 Long were his arms, pallid his hands ; his mouth
 Arms flashing, and a military glare . . .
 And stamping on his arms. In sailor's garb . . .
 He took no heed ; but in his brawny arms . . .
 Men, Women, three-years' Children, Babes in arms,
 To augment the band of emigrants in arms . . .
 Surrounded by adventurers in arms, . . .
 What, then, were my emotions, when in arms
 The Herculean Commonwealth had put forth her arms,

Shaken by arms of mighty bone, in strength,
 —Margaret stood near, her infant in her arms,
 In rugged arms how softly does it lie,
 How Nature hems you in with friendly arms !
 And, so consumed, she melted from my arms ;
 A broad oak, stretching forth its leafy arms . . .
 That lovingly consigns the babe to the arms
 Of arms, the crown which bignity had lost,
 Against his conscience rose in arms, and, braving
 And in remotest vales was heard—to arms !
 With righteous Joshua ; nor appeared in arms . . .
 Was cleared, I dipped, with arms accordant, ears
 For baffled lips and disappointed arms . . .
 Of old Helvellyn spread their arms abroad
 Of glory, fronted multitudes in arms . . .
 Arms and the Man I sing, the first who bore
 Slap-dash, tall foremost, as his arms shall drive . . .
 What arms the son of bright Aurora wore,

 Those shadowy breasts in love's soft light array'd, . . . 604
 In all the majesty of light array'd, . . . 619
 Now in its morning purity arrayed, . . . 823
 Had lavishly arrayed him. As old bards . . . 868
 With the myrtle's boughs arrayed, . . . S.3
 With the myrtle [? myrtle's] boughs arrayed, . . . S.3

Arrays. The gilded turf arrays in richer green . . . 594
Arrive. Thus, in the train of Spring, arrive . . . 247
 At which they only shall arrive . . . 330
 Bless Thou the hour, or ere the hour arrive . . . 331
 The gift of tongues might fall, and power arrive . . . 220
 And ne'er to fail? Shall that blest day arrive . . . 894
Arrived. Which, when the appointed season hath arrived, . . . 173
 Arrived a neighbour with his horse; . . . 249
 Its tender verdure. At the door arrived, . . . 767
 So, at his dwelling-place the Priest arrived . . . 858
 The Knight arrived, with spear and shield, and borne . . . 872
Arrives. —I long before the blissful hour arrives, . . . 755
Arrogance. Of arrogance, unknown Wanderer as I am, . . . 816
Arrogates. She arrogates o'er heaven's eternal door, . . . 427
Arrow. When hunter's arrow first defied . . . 215
 As an arrow from the bow; . . . 216
 The unwearied arrow hath pursued its flight! . . . 327
 But, like an arrow, to the river takes. . . . 490
 Or Cupid's sparkling arrow streamed . . . 497
Arrow's. Till he was left an arrow's flight behind. . . . 649
Arrows. The Indian's bow, his arrows keen, . . . 296
Arrowy. Yon eddying balls of foam, these arrowy gleams . . . 268
 While arrowy fire extorting feverish groans, . . . 596
Art. (Partial list.)
 These fifteen years— Ha! speak—What Thing art thou? . . . 54
 Thou too art deep in guilt. We have indeed . . . 55
 But yet I trust, Idonea, thou art safe. . . . 57
 Or art can fashion, shall you deck our boy, . . . 124
 Only by art in nature lost. . . . 154
 Yet tho' to me the pencil's art . . . 164
 Quick as he in feats of art, . . . 171
 His speech with uncouth terms of art, . . . 178
 Was fashioned; whether by the hand of Art, . . . 219
 By art to unsensualise the mind . . . 228
 As if some Protean art the change had wrought, . . . 230
 O'erweening Art was caught as in a snare. . . . 231
 A liquid concert matchless by nice Art, . . . 233
 Point not these mysteries to an Art . . . 234
 Art, daring because souls could feel, . . . 234
 Praised be the Art whose subtle power could stay . . . 252
 Soul-soothing Art! whom Morning, Noontide, Even, . . . 252
 The Poetry of Life, and all that Art . . . 252
 To household virtues. Venerable Art, . . . 255
 High is our calling, Friend!—Creative Art . . . 260
 And while the youthful year's prolific art— . . . 266
 If these brief Records, by the Muses' art . . . 269
 Which Art hath lodged within his hand—must laugh . . . 277
 Thy Art be Nature; the live current quaff, . . . 277
 Then, and then only, Painter! could thy Art . . . 279
 If simple Nature trained by careful Art . . . 281
 Spirit divine through forms of human art: . . . 282
 And vanish by mysterious art; . . . 300
 To sound the depths of every Art . . . 301
 With combinations of long-practised art . . . 320
 Victorious England! bid the silent Art . . . 324
 Notes shrill and wild with art more musical: . . . 336
 Or minister to finer art, . . . 342
 My spirit is the scene of such wild art . . . 350
 And divine Art, that fast to memory clung— . . . 367
 Of him who thus survives by classic art . . . 368
 Yet glorious Art the power of Time defies, . . . 368
 "My Art shall help to tame her pride—" . . . 379
 Fetched by our art, the Egyptian Maid . . . 369
 Withered at eve. From scenes of art which chase . . . 388
 Children of Art, that claim strange brotherhood . . . 390
 To his huge trunk, or, with more subtle art, . . . 430
 By works of Art, that shed, on the outward frame . . . 440
 Laud, "in the painful art of dying" tried, . . . 442
 Hath typified by reach of daring art . . . 452
 Yet, while each useful Art augments her store, . . . 466
 Subdued, composed, and formalized by art, . . . 467
 Of art mosaic, in a roofless floor, . . . 472
 Has designed to work as if with human Art! . . . 473
 And own that Art, triumphant over strife . . . 476
 Her lawful offspring in Man's art; and Time, . . . 477
 Enough of Science and of Art; . . . 482
 Must lacquer a dumb Art that best can suit . . . 486
 There how the Original of human art, . . . 488
 Lycoris! life requires an art . . . 496
 Enraptured Art draws from those sacred springs . . . 497
 Why is the Past belied with wicked art, . . . 500
 Of self-restraining art, . . . 505
 Offspring of soul-hewitching Art, make me . . . 508
 More than is needed, but the precious Art . . . 509
 Forgives their interference—Art divine, . . . 509
 Enshrined for ages. Is not then the Art . . . 509
 Where simple art with bounteous nature vied, . . . 525
 Calming to raise; and, by a sapient Art . . . 538
 And cheek embrowned by art; . . . 542
 One wooed the silent Art with studious pains: . . . 546
 From youth a zealous follower of the Art . . . 547
 With books supplied and instruments of art, . . . 548
 What! quoth she, thou art all out of thy mind, . . . 559

Art—continued.

For thou art worse than mad a thousand fold ;
 Of Palace whilom day that now art night,
 And said : I wis, when thou art horn'd anew,
 In him it was scarcely a business of art,
 Now farewell, old Adam ! when low thou art laid,
 That never art secure from dolorous change !
 Or Fancy, disciplined by studious art,
 Shaped by himself with newly-learned art ;
 The confidence of Youth our only Art,
 Yet, blessed Art, ye yield not to defection ;
 No Laureate offering of elaborate art ;
 Of Grecian art, and purest poesy . . .
 In summer, making quest for works of art,
 Where tones of Nature smoothed by learned Art
 When Art was young ; dramas of living men,
 And to book-notions and the rules of art
 And all the nicely-guarded shows of art,
 Liking ; by rules of mimic art transferred
 To things above all art ; but more,—for this,
 Of courteous usages refined by art . . .
 Reared by the idustrious hand of human art
 Youngest apprentice in the school of art !
 True, the intelligence of social art
 Of art, this palpable array of sense,
 Art to outstrip in her peculiar walk.
 A work of art more sumptuous than might seem Shall find apt subjects for her highest art.
 Had learned the art of pleasing, and had now
 A Youth, I practised this delightful art ;
 An art, a music, and a strain of words . . .

Artelal. He died, whom Artegal succeeds—his son ;
 Feebly returned by daunted Artegal ;
 A while the astonished Artegal stood mute,
 Theo Artegal thus spake : " I only sought
 The reinstated Artegal became . . .

Artful. Together,—mid trim walks and artful
 bowers,
 And there he planned an artful Cot
 With preparation artful and benign,
Artfully. With caution, sift the matter artfully.
Arthur. See Stone-Arthur.
 The feats of Arthur and his knightly peers ;
 Of Arthur,—who, to upper light restored,
 In silence did King Arthur gaze
 King Arthur led the Egyptian Maid,
 Of Arthur, bearing through the stormy field . . .

Arthur's. Soon will the Knights of Arthur's Table
 May yet to Arthur's court be borne
 Thence northward did they pass by Arthur's seat . . .

Articulate. The Child, as if the thunder's voice spake with articulate call,
 Which yet I understood, articulate sounds,
 Articulate music. Above all, one thought
 Articulate prattle—Child as beautiful . . .
 And haply sometimes with articulate voice,
 He heard, borne on the wind, the articulate voice
 The ready Organ of articulate sounds . . .

Artificer. As the supreme Artificer ordained,
 (The Artificer was to the elbow bare,
 But by the great Artificer endowed . . .

Artificial. The surfaces of artificial life
 By artificial lights ; how they debase . . .

Artillery. And whole artillery of the western blast,
Artisans. With care and sorrow : shoals of artisans Artist. " A cunning artist will I have to frame . . .
 Might some aspiring artist dare ?
 Or more mechanic artist represent . . .

Artist's. Of long companionship, the artist's hand,
Artists. Like Grecian Artists, give these human cheeks,
Artless. Trained to health and artless beauty ;
 An artless rustic's notice, this way less,
 And wooed the artless daughter of the hills,
Art's. When Art's audacious inventions were unknown ;
 Art's noblest relics, history's rich bequests,
Arts. Yet are they softer arts with power induced
 And droop, while no Italian arts are thine,
 Who, through most wicked arts, was made an orphan
 With goodly arts and usages refined ;
 To freeze the blood I have no ready arts :
 Spake of heroic arts in graver mood
 By Art's bold privilege Warrior and War-horse stand . . .

Her arts, her strength, her iron, and her gold,
 Honour to word-preserving Arts, and hail . . .
 By civil arts and labours of the pen,
 Yet peaceful Arts did entrance gain
 Their arts, their customs, ebb and flow ;
 Of your redemption. Shun the insidious arts
 Whose arts and honours in the dust are laid
 With all their Arts,—but classic lore glides on
 Of good, o'er manœvers arts and arms, diffused
 With a bad world, and foll the Tempter's arts.
 Not by black arts but magic natural !
 Then Arts, which still had drawn a softening grace
 Of neighbourhood and intermingling arts . . .

Yet, arts are thine that rock th' unsleeping heart .
 While no Italian arts their charms combine . . .

Arts—continued.

To the mild influence of the finer arts ;
 Arts yet untried, upon new counsels bent,
 Then seeks the queen ; with her his arts he tries ;
 And left their usages, their arts and laws,
 To thee, unblinded by these formal arts,
 Have made me pay to science and to arts . . .
 O seat of Arts ! renowned throughout the world !
 Of arts and letters—but be that forgiven—
 With arts and laws so tempered, that their lives
 Polished in arts, and in punctilio versed ;
 Of strenuous champions, in scholastic arts
 In their own arts outdoe, their fame eclipsed,
 Hands apt for all ingenious arts and games ;
 Spread with the spreading of her wealthy arts,
 By importation of unlooked-for arts,
 Owes to alliance with these new-born arts !
 And the Arts died by which they had been raised.
 Those arts, and high inventions, if unpropred
 I said, " And, did in truth those vaunted Arts
 Of household occupation ; no nice arts
 If there were not, before those arts appeared,
 A Little-one, subjected to the arts
 Arts, in themselves beneficent and kind,
 With civil arts, that shall breathe forth their
 fragrance,
 What arts had better claim with wrath to warm
 Do arts like these a royal mind evince ?

Arve. While roars the sullen Arve in anger by,
 When ro'd'd the sullen Arve in anger by . . .

As, omitted.

Ascanius. To young Ascanius, should assume his place ;
 His young Ascanius to the Tyrian walls ;
 The true Ascanius steep'd in placid rest ; . . .

Ascend. Aerial pines from loftier steeps ascend
 Winds our deep Vale, two heath-clad Rocks ascend
 " Learn, by a mortal yearning, to ascend . . .
 So be it !—but let praise ascend
 Shall praises be poured forth, and thanks ascend,
 Or thanks and praises to His throne ascend
 His volent Spirit will, he trusts, ascend
 Ascend, with lineaments in air not lost :
 Best while their Spirits from the woods ascend
 And tempting Fancy to ascend . . .
 In his mind's eye thy crescent horns ascend,
 Thy mental vision further and ascend
 "As thro' th' astonish'd woods the notes ascend,
 Shade above shade the desert pines ascend,
 Up to the loftiest towers of Pride ascend,
 Conspicuous invitation to ascend
 Fresh from a toilette of two hours, ascend
 In dignity of being we ascend,
 And the clear hills, as high as they ascend . . .

Ascendant. And, as the Moon, o'er some dark hill ascend . . .

Ascended. The Water-wraith ascended thrice—
 Ascended, with his staff and faithful dog ;

Ascending. But lo ! the Alps, ascending white in air,
 That dark mysterious gulf ascending, sound
 And up the craggy hill ascending . . .
 The stately wagon is ascending,
 A mountain ascending, a vision of trees ;
 And now, ascending, after one dark hour . . .
 Ascending, they approach—I hear their wings
 Ascending from behind the motionless brow
 Skyward ascending from a woody dell,
 But eye ascending, restless in her pride
 Aloft ascending, and descending deep . . .
 To where the Alps, ascending white in air,
 "Breaking th' ascending roar of desert floods,
 Ascending, nearer howls the famish'd wolf,
 Loud thro' that midway gulf ascending, sound
 That, from the rural school ascending, play
 Ascending, as if distance had the power
 Ascending, overlooked them both, far stretched ;
 Ascending at loose distance each from each,
 Deep—and, aloft ascending, breathe in worlds
 In clearest air ascending, showed far off
 Was heard ascending ; mournful, deep, and slow
 To loftiest heights ascending, from their tops,
 A veil of glory for the ascending moon ;
 Ascending ! For on that superior height . . .

Ascends. Honour ascends among the humblest poor,
 A voice to Peter's ear ascends . . .
 Huge Criffel's hoary top ascends
 The "trumpyry" that ascends in bare display—
 Heavenward ascends with all her charities,
 That from the vule ascends . . .
 While loud and dull ascends the weeping cry,
 Alone ascends that mountain nam'd of white
 In the waste wilderness : the Soul ascends
 Below, from which the curling smoke ascends.
 Commingling with the incense that ascends,
 Yet not for meek of heart. The smoke ascends
 That from the humblest floor ascends to heaven . . .

Ascension. And glorified Ascension ? Warriors, go,
Ascent. " See to ascent . . .
 Then up the steep ascent they hied,
 Your feet must struggle ; in such bold ascent
 The long ascent of Duamail-raise . . .

Ascent—continued.

Four roads of sheer ascent) Sir Walter found . . . 201 Hart-leap 50
 Some path of steep ascent and lofty aim ; . . . 261 * Fair Prime 12
 Now gads the wild vine o'er the pathless ascent —
 Yet undelivered, rise with ascent . . . 340 Fort Fuenes 17
 The summit of this hold ascent . . . 396 * Action is 12
 Yet undelivered, rise with ascent . . . 409 White Doe 1173

 Of hard ascent before thou reach the top . . . 548 * Stay, hold 3
 My homeward course led up a long ascent . . . 664 Prelude 4. 379
 Thus did we breast the ascent, and by myself
 A steep ascent ; and reached a dreary plain . . . 776 Excursion 2. 324
 From high to low, ascent from low to high . . . 834 Excursion 5. 796
 Von structure, framing, with the ascent of steps
 With an ascent and progress in the main ; . . . 872 Excursion 7. 1005

Ascentic. A young Ascetic—Poet, Hero, Sage, . . . 362 * List—twas 86
Ascribed. Be this ascribed ; to early intercourse,
Ash. See Mountain-ash.
 Will see an ash from which a sign-board haogs ; . . . 41 Bord. 218
 That every naked ash, and tardy tree . . . 146 * It was an 14
 Is the light ash ! that, pendant from the brow
 Through the stiff lance-like shoots of pollard ash,
 That to the sapling ash gives birth ; . . . 397 White Doe 121
 Of a tall ash, that near our cottage stood ;
 Grew there ; an ash which Winter for himself
 Rose the slim ash and massy sycamore, . . . 659 Prelude 4. 89
Ashamed. Nor of her arms ashamed,
 Of those unflin'g fears I am ashamed,
 To stop ashamed—too timid to advance ; . . . 378 Duodon 10. 5
 Bethought him, angry and ashamed,
 Like men ashamed : the Sun with his first smile
 I am ashamed of them : and that great Bard,
 Among the crowd, half pleased with, half ashamed
 And keen heart-anguish—of itself ashamed, Ashes. Dark with bat-haunted ashes stretching broad, . . . 7 Ev. Wk. 263
 All stiff with ice the ashes lie ; . . . 114 Ind. Wom. 13
 Shaking the dust and ashes from her head !
 Awake to new life from its ashes ad dust ; . . . 331 Ode : Thanks. 130

 Their foliage ; ashes flung their arms around ;
 Urns without ashes, tearless lacrymals !
 To senseless ashes. Mark ! how all things swerve
 Yea, his dry bones to ashes are consumed . . . 377 Duodon 5. 7

 Murdered, like one ashore by shipwreck cast, . . . 432 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 17. 3
 And, in her struggles, cast ashore ; . . . 432 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 17. 8
 She cast a Pearl ashore. . . 780 Excursion 2. 569
 Tossed ashore by restless waves, . . . 892 Excursion 9. 553

 Tall ash-tree, sown by winds, by vapours nursed,
Asia. Upon the Lakes of Asia 'tis bestowed—
Aside. There was in Asia, in a mighty town,
Aside. Caution must not be flung aside ; remember,
 He saw me, and he turned aside, . . . 370 Eg. Maid 64
 All have laid their mirth aside, . . . 374 Eg. Maid 374
 Can destiny be turned aside ? . . . 511 * Who rashly 13
 For what one moment flung aside, . . . 579 * Sweet Flower 22
 He hath thrown aside his crook, . . . 798 Excursion 3. 871
 Must now have thrown aside his fears . . . 406 White Doe 953
 Into a thicket turns aside, . . . 851 Excursion 6. 863
 He turns aside his head, he pauses ; . . . 866 Excursion 7. 596
 And Peter turns his steps aside . . . 327 Ode : 185 24
 Meanwhile that veil, removed or thrown aside,
 " Whate'er betide, we'll turn aside, . . . 553 Priores 36
 Nor turn aside to Yarrow . . . 48 Bord. 604

 Nor did he turn aside to prove . . . 181 Waggoner 4. 119
 All efforts that would turn aside . . . 191 Seq. Beggars 8
 An old weak Man for vengeance thrown aside,
 Summoned the Chiefs to lay their feuds aside,
 Truths whose thick veil Science has drawn aside ?
 Who faltered not, nor turned aside ; . . . 205 Brougham 140
 Welcome !—but lay thy sword aside, . . . 242 P. B. 570

 The poor Ass staggered with the shock ; . . . 241 P. B. 426
 And east and west, the Ass sent forth . . . 241 P. B. 464
 Once more the Ass did lengthen out . . . 241 P. B. 478
 He scans the Ass from limb to limb, . . . 242 P. B. 491
 The Ass is by the river-side, . . . 242 P. B. 533
 Full suddenly the Ass doth rise ! . . . 242 P. B. 560
 The little Ass his neck extends, . . . 242 P. B. 564
 The Ass looks on—and to his work . . . 242 P. B. 571
 And he whom the poor Ass had lost, . . . 243 P. B. 577
 Of this poor miserable Ass ! " . . . 243 P. B. 585
 Upon the pleased and thankful Ass ; . . . 243 P. B. 597
 And there the Ass four days had been, . . . 243 P. B. 604
 The Ass is startled—and stops short . . . 243 P. B. 621
 The listening Ass conjectures well ; . . . 243 P. B. 652
 But Peter—when he saw the Ass . . . 243 P. B. 656
 Meanwhile the Ass to reach his home . . . 244 P. B. 666
 And while the Ass pursues his way . . . 244 P. B. 686

Ass—continued.

- Where, as before, the enduring Ass 244 P. B. 712
 He thought,—of thee, O faithful Ass ! 244 P. B. 732
 An Ass like this was worth the stealing ! 245 P. B. 815
 The Ass turned round his head and grinned. 245 P. B. 825
 The unheeding Ass moves slowly on,
 Meanwhile the persevering Ass 246 P. B. 866
 Along the lae the trusty Ass 247 P. B. 981
 The poor Ass standing by her side,
 The Ass in that small meadow-ground ;
 She calls the poor Ass by his name,
 He lifts his head—and sees the Ass 248 P. B. 1037
 He sees the Ass—and nothing living 248 P. B. 1044
 Forth to the gentle Ass he springs,
 And many years did this poor Ass,
 —Rocked by the motion of a trusty ass
Assail. Oh ! when the sleety showers her path assail,
 Which now with freezing thoughts did all her powers assail ; 249 P. B. 1107
 Afflict, or injuries assail,
 Oh ! when the bitter showers her path assail,
 Till Death's cold touch her cistera-wheel assail,
Assailants. The Assailants, turning round and round ;
Assailed. Dire poverty assailed ;
 But, one by one, the hand of death assailed
 Over that tender Spirit—assailed
 Of self-reproach familiarly assailed ;
 Of disputation, shrunk not, though assailed
Assails. Where Horror-led his sea of ice assails,

Assurance—continued.

Words of assurance can be heard; if nowhere
To give assurance of content within;
She spake, nor was the assurance unfulfilled;
Assurances. With kind assurances that he would do
Tranquil assurances that Heaven supports Assured. See Full-assured.
Assured that Heaven its justice will proclaim,
Inseparably linked. Then be assured
Assured that now the traveller would repose
To England I returned, else (though assured
I had but lent a careless ear, assured
Exists—one only; an assured belief
Now, by experience taught, he stands assured,
The assured domain of calm simplicity
The Spirit capable of heaven, assured.
The most assured seat of [poesy ?]
Assuredly. For you, assuredly, a hopeful road
Astir. Were tempting all astir to look aloft or climb;
Are falling hard, with people yet astir, Astonished. And start the astonished shades at female eyes.
A while the astonished Artegal stood mute,
Dropped to the earth, astonished at the sound!
Had filled the astonished world with such abuse
—As thro' th' astonish'd woods the notes ascend,
And through the astonished Island swept in storm,
Astonished; like a hero in romance,
Astonishment. Who in the hey-day of astonishment
Of high astonishment and pleasing fear.
Back in astonishment and fear we shrink:
Eftsoons astonishment was past,
Of blank astonishment;
With mute astonishment, it stands sustained
With an astonishment but ill suppressed,
To the wide world's astonishment, appeared
With mute astonishment, themselves to see
With pity mixed, astonishment with scorn!"
Astounded. He is astounded,—wonder not,— Astounded in the mountain gap
Speak I!—astounded Hubert cannot;
Swing on th' astounded ear it's dull undying roar:
Wretched ambition drops astounded, fell
Astounding. Lord of the vale! astounding Flood; Astounds. Shout which the enraptured multitude astounds!
Astræa. And drove Astræa from the earth.
Astray. The half-seen form of Iwilight roams astray;
An innocent life, yet far astray!
Nor deem that "light which leads astray
Whose factions lead astray the wise and brave—
In many an hour when judgment goes astray.
Yet never once doth go astray,
He cannot halt nor go astray,
I lov'd, mid thy most desert woods astray,
Honour misplaced, and Dignity astray;
Why need such man go desperately astray,
Astrologer. The Astrologer, sage Sidrophel,
The Astrologer was not unseen
Astronomer. Like a sage astronomer,
With mazy boundaries, as the astronomer
Asunder. Asunder,—and above his head he sees
Yes, there was One;—for One, asunder fly
Head, harp, and body, split asunder,
His brain will burn, his stout heart split asunder.
But when the clouds asunder fly
At, omitted.
Ata. He sat, and ate his food in solitude:
Ate, drank, and with the fruit and glasses played,
Atheist. Wielded the sceptre of the Atheist crew.
Athenian. Upon Athenian walls;
Choose, with the gay Athenian, a conceit
Athens. Three Athens revered in the stunted grove;
Gave to Athens equal laws.
Athens sings 'tis thine to rest
Gave to Athens equal laws.
Athens's. When in Athens' festal time
Athol. Among the hills of Athol he was born;
Athwart. From lamp of lonely toll-gate stream'd athwart the night.
Yet are allowed to steal my path athwart
Athwart the unresisting tide
Striding with shattered crests his eye athwart.
Striding, with shattered crests, the eye athwart?
Athwart the concave of the dark blue dome,
Atlantic. Had crossed the Atlantic main.
Had heard the Atlantic surges roar
His double front among Atlantic clouds,
Or the soft breezes from the Atlantic sea,
Flew high above Atlantic waves, to draw
Down-bearing with his whole Atlantic weight
Even though the Atlantic ocean roll between.
From huge Pelorus to the Atlantic pillars,
Of lighthouse, beaten by Atlantic waves;
Into the main Atlantic, that appeared
Sought in the Atlantic Main—why should they he
"Fresh blew the wind, when o'er the Atlantic Main Atlantic's. Ye long deep channels for the Atlantic's voice,
Atlas. The lore of Atlas, to resounding strings,

Atmosphere. Gifted to purge the vapour atmosphere
To human life's unsettled atmosphere;
And through the very atmosphere she breathes,
Atom. Dissolve before a twinkling atom!—Oswald,
Atone. For youthful faults ripe virtues shall atone,
Which for the loss of that moist gleam atone . . .
And for presumptuous wrongs atone;—
And, to atone for it, with soul unshaken
A stripling's years may for his faults atone,
Atones. And the habitual murmur that atones
Atop. Save that, atop, the subtle sunbeams shine,
Atrocities. Of those atrocities, the hour of sleep Attached. That he procced; attached to him in heart;
Of Nature were collaterally attached
Those incidental charms which first attached
(Spirit attached to regions mountainous
Of all the lighter ornaments attached
Attack. The one bold man, whose voice the attack had sounded . . .
Who in attack or in defence were strong
Attacked. To be perpetually attacked by foes
Attain. A sacrifice of birthright to attain
Sink, to attain a loftier flight;
Of sudden passion roused shall men attain
Mine was unable to attain. Immense
Attain a point that showed the valley—stretched Attainable. To the same point, attainable by all—
Attained. Attained a good old age.
Attained a summit whence his eyes
Attained a stature twice a tall man's height,
Yet not to be attained!
One end at least hath been attained; my mind
Of dimmer character, he thence attained
Can be attained,—a better sanctuary
By multitudes was missed, perhaps attained
Attained his western bound; but rays of light—
In twinkling lustre, ere the boat attained
Attaining. By means refined attaining purest ends,
Attainment. Its best attainment fits of such repose Attainments. Were he and his attainments overlooked,
Of his attainments? no; but with the air
Attemper'd. To earth attemper'd and her deep-drawn sighs,
Attempt. But let us make the attempt . . .
When to his chamber he retired, attempt
To minister to works of high attempt—
Lowest of these and humblest in attempt,
Ambition to attempt, and skill to win,
Bygone, they for the attempt and pains employed,
Hidden from all men's view. To our attempt
With the perverse attempt, while littleness
Which foot of boldest stranger would attempt,
Those services, whereby attempt is made
The attempt was made;—'tis needless to report
In Britain's senate, Fruitless was the attempt:
Attempting. That, still attempting to prevent the waste . . .
Attempts. Attempts which still the heart-sick Maid
Of meditation that attempts to weigh,
Attend. Attend, at every stretch, his headlong fall.
Kind Nature's charities his steps attend;
I will attend you to a Hut that stands
All vanished. I gave way—do you attend?
A curse will attend us all.
Nor sorrow may attend thy name?
To attend upon the orphan, and perform
What favours do attend me here,
Nor will she servilely attend
And all will weep who there attend,
Though joy attend Thee orient at the birth
And evil Spirits may our walk attend
My Song, a fearless homager, would attend
Sole-sitting, only can to thoughts attend
The God in heaven;—attend, he just;
Attend, or dare with minute-steps their way;
Attend thee! seeking off the haunts of men,
Than her destructive energies, attend
Than brotherly forgiveness may attend;
Permission to attend its obsequies.
Attendant. The attendant lords withdrew;
For the last time, attendant by the side
Not wasted on the attendant crowd,
And to the attendant promise will give heed—
While the white-robed choir attendant,
Which is the attendant Page and which the Queen?
He veiled, attendant on Thessalian flocks)
To watch me, an attendant and a friend,
(Ah! surely not without attendant gleams
Her father's prompt attendant, does for him
She was a soft attendant cloud, that huag
With images attendant on the sound;
Attendants. Are prompt attendants, 'mid that giddy bliss
Attended. By virtue's holiest Powers attended.
Yet by some grave thoughts attended . . .
A Man so gloriously attended!
And, though some tears the strain attended,
Attended but by thy own voice, save when
Attended by the soft-paced Doe;

Attunes. That sparkling thrids the rocks, attunes . . .
 his voice . . . 856 Excursion 6. 1171
Atween. Atween his downy wings be furnished, there . . . 382 Duddon 25. 6

Audacious. At this audacious blasphemy, I thought . . . 51 Bord. 793
 And reason govern that audacious flight . . . 261 From the dark* 8
 Prompting the world's audacious vanities! . . . 313 Go back* 4

Audacly. Turning them inside out with arch . . .
 audacity . . . 221 Triad 127
 Reckless audacity extol, and jeer . . . 514 Portentous change* 3

Audible. Of music, audible to him alone . . . 220 Triad 51
 Audible tears, from some invisible source . . . 498 Enough of climb-* ing 37

Was audible; and sate among the woods . . . 647 Prelude 2. 342
 One song they sang, and it was audible, . . . 648 Prelude 2. 415
 Most audible, then, when the fleshy ear, . . . 648 Prelude 2. 416
 Then stopped for years; not audible again . . . 687 Prelude 7. 11
 To make the sounds more audible? What crowd . . . 699 Prelude 8. 4
 And audible seclusions, dashing lakes, . . . 708 Prelude 8. 636
 His respiration quick and audible; . . . 879 Excursion 8. 312
 Audible praise, to thee, omniscient Mind, . . . 895 Excursion 9. 753
Audibly. Is cropping audibly his later meal: . . . 1 Early Youth 4
 Main ocean, breaking audibly, and stretched . . . 219 This Height* 14

 'Mid that strange audience, he bestrides . . . 234 Power of Sound 138
 Due audience, how for aught but scorn defy . . . 365 The Baptist* 4
 A Tuscan audience: but full soon was called . . . 573 Chiabrera 2. 17
 Of the plain Burghers, who in audience stood . . . 653 Prelude 3. 313
 If willing audience fail not, Nature's self, . . . 732 Prelude 11. 350
 I sing:—'fit audience let me find though few!' . . . 755 Recluse 1. 1. 776
 Attentive audience. But, oh! gentle Friends, . . . 794 Excursion 3. 600

Auditors. Rapt auditors! from thy most eloquent . . .
 tongue— . . . 695 Prelude 7. 517

Augean. Could cleanse the Augean stable, by the . . .
 might . . . 726 Prelude 10. 585

Aught. See Ought.
 An inch, till I am answered. Know you aught . . . 46 Bord. 497
 And if I have in aught offended you, . . . 61 Bord. 1317
 I did not think that aught was left in me . . . 61 Bord. 1324
 Nor aught else like it, could be heard, . . . 82 Alice Fell 12
 The hut stood finished by his pains, nor seemingly . . .
 lacked aught . . . 91 Norman Boy 17
 Was nothing, scarcely can be aught, yet 'twas . . .
 bounteously bestowed, . . . 93 Poet's Dream 78
 Which then it had! Nay, Sir, for aught I know, . . . 97 Brothers 136
 Are aught of what makes up a mother's heart, . . . 99 Brothers 233
 A pretty flock, and which, for aught I know, . . . 100 Brothers 302
 Aught that my feeble nature could perform, . . . 105 Artegal 179
 On aught of more ambitious show . . . 113 Lament 32
 If aught which he had owned might still remain . . .
 for me, . . . 119 Sailor's Mother 24
 Surpasses aught these elements can show, . . . 139 Widow 22
 Nor did aught of future days that kiss belie, . . . 142 Arm. Lady 143
 Alone I tread this path;—for aught I know, . . . 151 When, to* 105
 I listened, nor aught else could hear; . . . 155 Waterfall 54
 A boding sound—for aught but sleep unfit! . . . 167 Pilgrim's Dream 51
 Had aught of sylvan growth been there), . . . 175 Waggoner 1. 186
 Can aught on earth impede delight, . . . 178 Waggoner 3. 24
 Was aught ever heard like his fiddle and him? . . . 188 Music 8
 And he perhaps, for aught we know, was born . . . 203 Hari-leap 155
 With aught that breathes the ethereal element, . . . 213 Dion 55
 Her voice would utter, aught ensue . . . 222 Triad 157
 Points she to aught?—the hills draws near, . . . 223 Wishing-gate 5
 If aught on earth have heavenly might, . . . 238 P. B. 149
 Of limpid water, humbler far than aught . . . 251 There is a little* 2
 As aught that song records of Robin Hood; . . . 255 Detraction 3
 More efficaciously than aught that flows . . . 255 Grief, thou* 6
 His heart to aught which doth on time depead, . . . 257 No mortal* 11

Aught—continued.

If there he aught of pure, or good, or great, . . . 259 Calvert 10
 261 *From the dark 8
 Nor aught of mutual joy or sorrow knew
 But are we aught enriched in love and meekness ?
 Aught dost thou see, bright Star ! of pure and wise
 To him, and aught that hides his clay . . . 284 Grave of Burns 17
 Aught good were destined, thou wouldst step between . . . 309 *England ! the 8
 By aught redeemed out of the hollow grave : . . . 325 Englien 9
 Than aught dependent on the fickle skies . . . 329 Ode : Thanks. 56
 Thus after Man had fallen (if aught . . . 343 Eclipse 55
 Nor more, for aught that time supplies,
 More touching far than aught which on the walls . . . 348 *Lulled by 27
 As aught that marvellous coast thro' all its length
 From mortal change, aught (that is horn on earth
 If to the future aught of good must come . . . 355 Aquap. 165
 Nor giving heed to aught that passed the while,
 Due audience, how for aught but scorn defy . . . 355 Aquap. 208
 In aught that ye would grace or hide—
 Heard them, unchecked by aught of saddening hue,
 Or aught in Syrian deserts left to save . . . 356 Aquap. 230
 On aught by which another is deprest . . . 358 Aquap. 350
 Aught that was ever shown in magic glass ;
 Nor aught that troubles us, the fools of Nature . . . 365 *Under the 3
 Nor saw of wreck or ruin aught . . . 365 *The Baptist 4
 Aught of the fading year's inclemency !
 His sky-born warblings—does aught meet your ken
 Aught that more surely by its aspect fills
 For aught the wisest know or comprehend ;
 Than aught the sky's fantastic element . . . 366 *Ye Trees 8
 By aught that mingled with the tragic scene . . . 367 *If with 12
 Wonder that aught of aspect so sorene
 Disgraced by aught that seems content to sit
 If aught impair thy beauty or destroy,
 If aught unworthy be my choice . . . 367 Trajan 11
 To aught of highest, holiest, influence—
 Nor aught that makes men's promises a blank,
 Or aught that watchful Love to Nature owes
 If aught (intrusted to the pen . . . 368 Trajan 57
 Of aught transacted there in bay or creek ;
 Not soon does aught to which mild fancies cling
 Could strip, for aught the prospect yields . . . 369 Eg. Maid 16
 Whoever against Love meant aught amiss . . . 370 Eg. Maid 60
 That least of all can aught—that ever owned
 O dread reverse ! if aught be so, which proves
 In aught to earth pertaining ? Death has proved
 When aught had suffered wrong,—
 When aught that breathes had felt a wound ;
 Aught of these bowers and whence their pleasures flow ; . . . 381 Duddon 21. 14
 In these lone vales, if aught of faith may claim,
 Do fall around him upon aught that bears
 Or looked that way for aught that might be clothed
 As aught by wooden images performed . . . 387 Manse 8
 By aught, I fear, of geouine desert
 Nor checked by aught of tamer argument,
 That aught external to the living mind . . . 423 Ecc. Sonn. 1. 18. 5
 The region left behind him ; and if aught
 I clearly saw that neither these nor aught
 Can aught be more ignoble than the man . . . 428 Ecc. Sonn. 1. 37. 7
 But most intensely ; never dreamt of aught
 To measured admiration, or to aught . . . 435 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 26. II
 Or aught of heavier or more deadly weight,
 And, with life, power to accomplish aught of worth,
 Nor aught of blinder vacancy, scooped out
 And, being still unsatisfied with aught . . . 439 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 43. 4
 Most happy, if, from aught discovered there . . . 439 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 41. 7
 Nor in the other region, nor in aught
 With aught, as more desirable and fair, . . . 440 Ecc. Sonn. 3. 2. 9
 Of various intercourse, nor wishing aught
 At aught, however fair, that bore the mien . . . 458 *Had this 71
 Aught that deserves respect : for I exist,
 Of aught unworthily conceived, endured
 By aught that innocently satisfies . . . 461 *Queen of 45
 Ah ! let not aught amiss within dispose
 So deeply, that, unsatisfied with aught . . . 470 *A youth 12
 Is aught so certain as that man is doomed
 That sparkling decked the morning grass ; or aught
 A mind by nature indisposed to aught . . . 471 Ailsa Crag 13
 Aught by these perishable heavens disclosed
 Aught of romantic interest, it is gone . . . 472 Ossian 19
 Nor crowded city can be taxed with aught
 And whether aught, of tendency as good . . . 522 Epist. Beaumont 80
 Not from such hope, or aught of such belief
 Scattered about us, nor through dearth of aught
 Could aught but envy now his pride rebuke ? . . . 527 *Those breathing 3

Autumn's—continued.

- Driven in by Autumn's sharpening air . . . 143
Blithe Autumn's purple crown, and Winter's icy mail ! . . . 350
Dwindles the pear on autumn's latest spray . . . 608
Autumns. Of many autumns in the cave had piled.
Autumn-winds. Wheo Autumn-winds are sobbing?
Auvergne. Avenge the vine-clad mountains of Avergne . . . 162
Auxillar. Mixed with auxillar Rocks, three hundred Forms ; . . . 121
 With which it communed. An auxillar light
 Auxillar to divine. That change shall clothe . . . 612
Auxillars. Druids descend, auxiliars of the Cross ; . . . 647
For mighty were the auxiliars which thee stood . . . 820
Avall. But what can all avail to clear him . . . 181
But what do his desires avail ? . . . 295
Sea, desert, what do these avail ? . . . 413
Is tender pity thee of no avail ? . . . 423
When Prayer is of no avail ? . . . 494
That, might a wish avail, would never fade,
May not avail, nor prayer have for God's ear
What may your ill intentions you avail ? . . . 519
What profit riches ? what does youth avail ? . . . 554
Dear Liberty ! Yet what would it avail . . . 575
For neither unremitting rains avail . . . 632
Avalled. Avalled against the mighty ; never more
 (When all that Man could do availed no more)
 But all availed not ; by a mandate given
 Avalled not to my Vessel's overthrow . . . 76
And their disastrous issues. What availed,
 Of a relenting soul, have now availed ; . . . 468
Avalis. Best eloquence avails not, Inspiration
 Avalis those modulations to detect,
 Ah, what avails heroic deed ? . . . 574
Ah ! what avails that she was fair,
 But what avails the bold intent ? . . . 735
 But what to them avails the land . . . 853
 What avails the kindly shelter . . . 233
 Within this court full seldom Truth avails,
 Ah ! what avails imagination high . . . 339
 Prove a degraded Race ? and what avails . . . 342
Avalanche. Save when the avalanche breaks loose, to read . . . 370
 But list ! the avalanche—the hush profound . . . 404
 And here the avalanche of Death destroy . . . 483
Avarice. Delights us. Rapine, avarice, expense,
 If cloistered Avarice scruple not to wrong . . . 404
Nor avarice, nor over-ambitious care . . . 483
Sublime o'er Conquest, Avarice, and Pride,
Avaricious. An unremitting, avaricious thrift ;
Avast. I've had a glimpse of you—avast !
Avault. "Avault, inexplicable Guest !—avaunt,"
 Avault all specious pliancy of mind
 Sad thoughts, avault !—partake we their blithe cheer
 Avault this vile abuse of pictured page !
 " With such foundations laid, avault the fear
 Avault this economic rage ! . . . 176
Ave. A choral Ave Marie shall beguile,
 Ave Marie, as he goeth by the way . . . 213
Avenge. Of angry Nature to avenge her God . . . 319
 May gather to avenge this wrong . . . 381
 To avenge their own insulted majesty . . . 489
 Yea, to avenge her violated rights . . . 889 Avenge. Shall Nature be avenged. "Ths nobly thought," . . . 3
 And slight Hope will be avenged ; and, when Avenge. Avenge you of outraged innocence !
 Not long the Avengeer was withstood—
 And ofttimes Death, avenger of the past,
 Avenge. Crimes which the great Avengeer's hand provoke, . . . 345
Avenge. Into avengers, from whose wrath they fled Avening. Last night, when moved to lift the avening steel, . . . 718
 For deep as hell itself, the avenging draught . . . 58
 Or is the painted staffs [? staffs] avenging host . . . 792
Avenue. Pace the long avenue, or glide adown
 Down the main avenue my sight can range : . . . 55
 Albano's dripping Ilex avenue, . . . 204
 Louvett walked single through the avenue,
 The narrow avenue of daily toil . . . 886
Avenues. Obscure not yet these silent avenues
 League after league, and cloistral avenues,
 In avenues disposed ; there, towers begin (Prized avenues ere others had been shaped)
Aver. Never heed them ; I aver . . . 345
 Yet all do still aver . . . 12
Averr'd. "Ths said ENJOYMENT (who averr'd
 Averse. Ever averse to pantomime, . . . 300
Aversion. That savoured of aversion to thy name
 More than we see, or whence this strong aversion ?
 Yet whence this strange aversion ? You are a man
 Of unbenevolent aversion or contempt,
 His feelings of aversion softened down ; . . . 41
Avert. They are labouring to avert . . . 816
 Come ye—who, if (which Heaven avert !) the Land
 No sacrifice avert, no power dispute ;
 Cause should recur, which righteous Heaven avert !
 And prudent caution needful to avert . . . 819
Avoid. Whose footsteps superstitiously avoid . . . 181

Avoid—continued.

- And silliness avoid, as now they shun . . . 278
Avoid these sights; nor brood o'er Fable's dark abyss ! . . . 347
To imitate, not wise enough to avoid ; . . . 728
To be instructed what they must avoid : . . . 886
Avoids. The limpid mountain-rill avoids it not ;
Avon. Avon—a precious, an immortal name ! . . . 390
 Into the Avon, Avon to the tide . . . 392
Avow. I will avow before the face of day . . . 432
 This will I here avow, not dreading thy despite . . . 71
 Dare I avow that wish was mine to see, . . . 104
Avowed. No pause admitted, no design avowed !
 Are but the avowed attire . . . 735
Awalt. Enjoins, while firm resolves await . . . 213
 On those revolving motions did await . . . 330
 Us humbler ceremonies now await ; . . . 224
 Await my steps when they the breezy height . . . 255
 Heart-killing luxury, on your steps await . . . 332
 You, on whose progress dazzling trains await . . . 420
 Than even now await her prest, . . . 433
 And silence did await upon these thoughts . . . 503
Awalted. And infant's smile awaited my return . . . 677
Awaits. Awaits on virtuous life, and ever most
 What joy awaits you, when the breeze . . . 794
 That bliss awaits her which the ungenial Hollow
 Such doom awaits us. "Nay, forbid it Heaven!
 Awaits you then, if they were rightly taught . . . 106
 Awaits her now ; but, verily, good deeds . . . 261
 This, of all acquisitions, first awaits . . . 316
 Awaits us ! Oh, how much unlike the past ! . . . 444
 Of evil hap and good as oft awaits . . . 540
 Belike no higher destiny awaits . . . 698
Awake. From such romantic dreams, my soul, awake
 And thus, to keep herself awake, . . . 710
 Keep the sprightly soul awake, . . . 833
 Playthings that keep the eyes awake . . . 888
 —Cast off your bouds, awake, arise,
 Listen ! the mighty Being is awake,
 Awake ! the majesty of God reverse !
 Of the world's hopes, dare to fulfil ; awake,
 Give to devotion, wheresoe'er awake,
 Early awake, by Siloa's brook, to sing
 Of light, which tells that Morning is awake.
 Must Man, with labour born, awake to sorrow . . . 156
 Awake to silent joy : . . . 172
 Their own significance for hearts awake, . . . 214
 —He hears a noise—he's all awake—
 Awake, awake ! and snatch the slumbering lyre,
 Had lain awake on summer nights to watch
 A human being destined to awake
 Him, sleeping or awake, the robber spared ;
 Right gladly would I lie awake . . . 258
Awaken. As if awakened from sleep, the Nations hailed . . . 332
 They first of all that breathe should have awakened
Awaken. Ah then, lest you awaken me, speak low . . . 366 Awakened. As if awakened, summoned, roused, constrained, . . . 506
 From sleep awakened, and misled by sound . . . 525
 Before our eyes, awakened in my mind . . . 267
Awakener. To be the awakener of divinest thoughts,
Awakening. See Soul-awakening . . . 77
Awakenings. Gentle awakenings, visitations meek ; Awakens. Whom Morn awakens, among dews and flowers . . . 813
Awakes. Earth awakes from wintry sleep : . . . 460
Award. And, proud of her award, . . . 894
Awards. As Benjamin is now aware, . . . 628
 The pleased Enchanter was aware . . . 629
 Gives rights to error ; and aware, no less, . . . 629
Away. (Partial list.) See Castaway . . . 729
 It seemed to move away from us ; and yet . . . 39
 To fling't away from you : you make no use . . . 39
 The name of Marmaduke is blown away : . . . 39
 For this good deed !—Well, Sirs, this passed away ;
 And smothered all that's man in me ?—away !—
 Away ! away !—Nay, I have done with you :
 On which it should be touched, would melt away . . . 44
 We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon ! . . . 250
 And from our earthly memory fade away . . . 259
 Fame tells of groves—from England far away—
 The house that cannot pass away be ours . . . 262
 His native superstitions melt away . . . 271
 To wantonness.—Away, Circean revels ! . . . 278
 Mourns less for what age takes away . . . 426
 And, when Thou art past service, worn away, . . . 447
 As he breaks the ice away, . . . 489
 Such greeting heard, away with sighs . . . 490
 O cursed folk ! away, ye Herods new ! . . . 507
 To the next Abbey him they bare away : . . . 554
 Touched then his tongue, and took away the grain ;
 And he for dread did fly away full fast ; . . . 555
 Till he was far, all out of sight, away . . . 589
 Ere he has passed the door, will turn away, . . . 589
 What less may mislead you, they took it away . . . 569
 Thus might we wear a midnight hour away, . . . 746

Away—continued.

From natural wisdom turn our hearts away ;
Then, like a blast that dies away self-stilled,
By sorrow laid asleep ; or borne away,
It seemed the better part were gnawed away .
" The glory of the times fading away—
And their immortal soul, may waste away,"
And steal away, and for a while deceive
That must not die, that must not pass away .
Awe. Now, with religious awe, the farewell light
Awe in his breast with holiest love unites,
Were yet with pensive fear and gentle awe
With awe, receives the hallowed veil,
The mercy, goodness, have not failed to awe
Tempered with awe, and sweetened by compassion
Deep was the awe, the rapture high,
Was on the wing ; stooping, he struck with awe .
Of orderly respect and awe ;
Inspiring universal awe,
For him abandoned to blank awe,
The unconverted soul with awe submit .
An awe and supernatural horror breeds ;
(Swerves not, how blest if by religious awe
Peasant and mail-clad Chief with pious awe ;
A weight of awe, not easy to be borne,
Of reverential awe will chiefly seek
To awe the lightness of humanity .

If generous Loyalty must stand in awe
To a like salutary sense of awe
In after-thought, for Him who stood in awe
Copying with awe the one Paternal mind .
Awe struck, the kneeling peasant scarce surveys ;
Humility and modest awe themselves
Of the whole place should bear a stamp of awe ;
Of awe or tremulous dread, that had given way
To melt away ; and further, the dread awe
With Indian awe and wonder, ignorance pleased—
With wonder heightened, or sublimed by awe—
Out of its leafy brow, the more to awe
But that one tutored thus should look with awe
But, even if that were not, amid the awe
Be hallowed, love that breathes not without awe ;

By help of dreams—can breed such fear and awe
And human reason dictated with awe,
Inly distressed or overpowered with awe,
For admiration and mysterious awe
The heart, in concert with that temperate awe
And look upon the dust of man with awe."
Not, as before, like one oppressed with awe."
Tho', in this Vale, remembered with deep awe."
Of admiration and delightful awe,
Not without awe. Thence passing on, she said
Awed. Awed sober Reason till she crouched in fear ?
The Chamois-chaser awed in vain
Awed, delighted, and amazed !
Or awed he weeps, struggling to quell dismay,
For she returns not.—Awed by her own knell,
And awed to piety,
Awed by the theme's peculiar sanctity
Aw'd, while below the Genii hold their state,
Youth should be awed, religiously possessed
Awed have I been by strolling Bedlamites ;

Awe-inspiring. The impregnable and awe-inspiring fort
The simple shepherd's awe-inspiring God !"
Awes. And awes like night with mercy-tempered frown

Awe-stricken. Awe-stricken she beholds the array
Awe-stricken stood both Knights and Dames .
And, in awe-stricken Countries far and nigh, Awe-struck. Of awe-struck wisdom droops : or let my path .

Awful. —Is there who 'mid these awful winds has seen
Stand motionless, to awful silence bouds
Awful the light, and holy is the air,
Within a temple stands an awful shrine,
—There doth she ken the awful form
But every awful note in unison
And solemn rites and awful forms
Will be an awful thought, if life have one."
An unexamined voice of awful memory !
And claim, among the dead, this awful crown ;
These Shapes of awful phantasy ?
And neither awful Voice be heard by thee !
Of awful prudence, keep the unvanquished soul :
The awful light of heavenly innocence
Within its awful caves.—From year to year
Soft notes, awful as the omen
But Man is Thy most awful instrument,
Saw ye the soft yet awful veil
A product of that awful Mountain seem,
That follows—yet more awful than that awful
sound !

That awful name to Thee, thee, simple Cuckoo,
Thee hath some awful Spirit impelled to leave,
Verily so to live was an awful choice—
With awful cheer a voice of praise ;
In deep and awful channel runs
He from the pulpit lifts his awful hand ;

Awful—continued.

Of awful notes, whose concord shall not fail ;
What awful perspective ! while from our sight
Come links for social order's awful chain .
To lumber functions, awful Power !
Some awful moment to which Heaven has joined
More awful, where, advancing hand in hand,
An awful balancing of loss and gain,
In silence and the awful modesties .
Strike not from Law's firm hand that awful rod,
'Mid these more awful feelings, to infuse
That may recall to mind that awful Pile
Deepening her echoing torrents' awful peal
'Soften'd the terrors of her awful mien.'
But from this awful burthen I full soon
Incumbencies more awful, visitings
O Heavens ! how awful is the might of souls,
Soul awful—if the earth has ever lodged
An awful soul—I seemed to see him here
Kept the same awful steadiness—at his feet
Aod thought that, in the blind and awful lair
Rested within an awful solitude .
That awful Power rose from the mind's abyss
The awful truths delivered thence by tongues
Man suffering among awful Powers and Forms ;
Companionless your awful solitudes !
Though with such awful proof before their eyes
'Mid circumstances awful and sublime,
And that most awful scripture which declares
At thy command, how awful ! Shall the Soul,
When piety more awful had relaxed.
Received a shock of awful consciousness,
Within the bosom of her awful pile,
A type and shadow of an awful truth ;
Its cities, temples, fields, its awful power,
In awful sovereignty ; a place of power,
More awful than the chambers of dark earth
Which I have felt this day. An awful voice,
Awful as ever stray Demonic uttered,
When, such the awful will of heaven, she died
Awfully. And awfully impetrable.
Awfulness. Of awfulness, is in her face,—
So much I felt the awfulness of life,

Awhile. Not yet in sight !—We'll saunter here awhile ;
You are quite exhausted. Let us rest awhile
Spare me awhile that greeting. It may be
That she is innocent. Leave that thought awhile
Listen yet awhile ;—with patience .

Be loth that we should breathe awhile exempt
Stay, bold Adventurer ; rest awhile thy limbs
Those lofty hopes awhile, for present gifts
Leaving us at the board ; awhile we lingered,
That flowed awhile with unabating strength,
But let him pause awhile, and look again,
Therein, with our simplicity awhile
Awhile they stood in conference, and I guess
Over both minds, when they awhile had marked
Till the spectator, who awhile was pleased

Awning. And pleasant awning. On the moss-grown wall
Awoke. Awoke a fainter sense of moral grief ;
The father, and relenting thoughts awoke ;
Awoke to new life from its ashes and dust ;

So loudly, that I with that song awoke.
Awoke a fainter pang of moral grief ;
AWRY. His body, dwindled and awry,
That answers unexpectedly awry,

Axe. See Battle-axe, Stone-axe.
Stretched on the block the glittering axe recoils ;
Saved from the sordid axe by Beaumont's care,
Than the bare axe more luminous and kee,
Whose shades have never felt the encroaching axe,
His sentence to the axe would doom them all .
AXIS. On its own axis restlessly revolving,
Axle-tree. Or forest, fetched the enormous axle-tree

Ay. See Aya.
You must forgive me. Ay, and if you thiock .
Ay, Sir, there's nobody that feels for us .
At Herbert's door. Ay ; and if truth were known
Ay, what is it you mean ? Harkee, my Friends ;—
But bear the proofs— Ay, prove that when two peas
Feed on her leaves. You knew her well—ay,
there,
But they will soon be lightened. Ay, look up—
Ay, we are coupled by a chain of adamant ;
Ay, and his head was bare ;
Ay, and say at once that I murdered him !
Ay, in the word a thousand scorpions lodge ;
Ay, come to me and weep. Yes, Varlet, look,
Ay, what shall we encounter next ? This issue—
Ay, thought the Vicar, smiling to himself,
Ay, there, indeed, your memory is a friend
Ay—you may turn that way—it is a grave
Ay, more than once I have seen him, mid-leg deep .

Ay—continued.

Then they could write, ay, and speak too, as well
 Ay, Sir, that passed away : we took him to us ;
 Ay, that he did— And all went well with him—
 " Ay," said the Tar, " through fair and foul—
 Ay, quoth the Cuckoo, that is a quaint law,
 Ayde. Their sabbath music—" @ñ us apñ !"
 With vocal music, " @ñ us apñ !"
 Aye. Descending, shuts for aye his prison door.
 And so will gallop on for aye,
 And there, my babe, we'll live for aye."
 Of nature trusts the Mind that builds for aye ;
 Set, like his fortunes ; but not set for aye.
 The Olympian summit hath destroyed for aye
 But aye ascending, restless in her pride
 That through the realms of glory shines for aye.
 To spread its arms, and stand for aye.
 And aye, methinks, this hoary Pile,
 'Mid Heaven-born flowers that shall for aye endure,
 Which did Thee bear, and is a Maid for aye,
 To worship aye, and he forgot it not ;
 Saint Nicholas in his presence standeth aye,
 Now may'st thou sing for aye before the throne,
 Loving is aye an office of despair,
 And as he flew, the Cuckoo, ever and aye,
 Aye as he rode, to Paodarus he told
 Aye, think on that, my heart, and cease to stir,
 To endure for aye. The Vicar, taking note
 Ayr. All through the bonny shire of Ayr ;
 Azincour. And drew their sounding bows at Azincour,
 Azura. In robes of azure, fleecy-white, and gold.
 The hills, while gleams below the azure tide ;
 Bright stars of ice and azure fields of snow ;
 At the spectator's feet,—Yon azure ridge,
 But let thy love, upon that azure field
 An azure disc—shield of Tranquillity ;
 The azure brooks, where Dian joys to lave
 That through the texture of yon azure dome
 The azure sea upswelled upon the sight.
 The sky an azure field displayed ;
 Peering in air and backed by azure sky,
 Floating through the azure sky.
 A land whose azure mountain-tops are seats
 Whose azure depth their colour emulates,
 One chimney smoking and its azure wreath,
 O'er azure pikes serene and still, they go,
 Bright stars of ice and azure worlds of snow,
 From the green fields, and from yon azure sky.
 To the broad ocean and the azure heavens
 Yon azure smoke betrays the lurking town ;
 Of azure without cloud, and at my feet
 Is heave's profoundest azure ; no domain
 Inverted trees, rocks, clouds, and azure sky ;
 Of azure heaven, the unending clouds,

B

Babbie. And babble of her pastime!—On, dread
 Power!
 Babbled. That babbled on through groves and meadows green ;
 Babbling. And all the babbling brooks are liquid gold ;
 In every babbling brook he finds a friend ;
 We have no time for this, my babbling Gossip ;
 Beside the babbling rills ;
 Though babbling only to the Vale,
 To a babbling wanderer sent ;
 Of babbling winds as they go by,
 " The babbling flatterer ;"
 Babs. A nursing babe her only comforter ;
 The heart of living creature.—My poor Babe
 There are Mothers who can see the Babe
 I overtook him, Sirs, my Babe and I,
 A little Infant, and instruct the Babe,
 Of this poor Babe, and taught its innocent tongue
 Yields, could not chuck his babe beneath the chin,
 While in my lap I held my little Babe
 I had a better guide—that innocent Babe—
 Helpless and harmless as a babe : a Mao
 When from my arms my Babe they took,
 But thou, dear Babe, art far away,
 Such things as she unto the Babe might say :
 " Dear Babe, thou daughter of another,
 And I have left a babe at home :
 Sweet Babe ! and they will let him die.
 The babe and mother near me dwell :
 Until the babe was born. When morning came,
 Of Julia's travail. When the babe was born,
 The Babe was drawing in its quiet food.
 In which the Babe was carried. To a hill,
 And thither took with him his motherless Babe,
 Old Michael, while he was a babe in arms,
 While thou, a feeding babe, didst in thy joy
 " Sweet babe ! they say that I am mad,
 " Suck, little babe, oh suck again !
 It comes to cool my babe and me.
 The babe I carry on my arm,

Babe—continued.

Without me my sweet babe would die.
 From him no harm my babe can take ;
 My little babe ! thy lips are still,
 And there, my babe, we'll live for aye."
 Here, for neither Babe nor me,
 Once up, once down the hill, one journey, Babe,
 She and her Babe, which to her breast
 Not to speak of babe and mother ;
 While she dandles the Babe in her arms to the sound.
 The little Babe was buried there,
 The shadow of a babe you trace,
 The little Babe lies buried there,
 The last she to her Babe did say :
 She called her babe unborn.
 Of some sweet Babe—Flower stolen, and coarse
 Weed left
 That fascinate the very Babe in arms,
 Her new-born Babe ; dire ending of bright hope !
 Lies the Babe, in helplessness
 To the babe, what'er betide,
 For the unconscious Babe so prompt a love !—
 Alfred, dear Babe, thy great Progenitor !
 Cao such a One, dear Babe ! though glad and proud
 And the Babe leaps up on his Mother's arm :—
 His father helpless as the babe he rocks,
 Laid soars to make the babe her own.
 Above the babe, unseen ;
 Where I was looking on, a babe in arms,
 Hath no beginning. Bless the infant Babe,
 Our Being's earthly progress,) blest the Babe,
 In which, a Babe, by intercourse of touch
 Or in some sheltering vale, was seen a babe
 With envy on thy nameless babe that sleeps,
 This One Man, with a sickly babe outstretched
 Eyed the poor babe with love unutterable.
 The mother from the cradle of her babe,
 I took my staff, and, when I kissed her babe,
 As they had chanced to fall. Her infant Babe
 If I had any hope,—but for her babe
 She told me that her little babe was dead,
 At her aspiring outset. Mark the babe
 That lovingly consigns the babe to the arms
 To rock the cradle of the slumbering babe :
 To rock the cradle of her peevish babe ;
 This sacred right, the lispng babe proclaims
 The trees (her first-born child being then a babe)
 But, Babe ! there's none to work for me,

Back. Alternately they mount her back, and rest . . .
 Back from his sight no bashful children steal ; . . .
 Which oft as he looked back had fixed his eye,
 Rolled at his back along the living plain ; . . .
 Back to our post, and strip the Scottish Foray
 Is cunningly devised ; and, on the back
 A look of mine would send him scouring back,
 Will bring me back—protect him, Saints—farewell !
 Now she is gone, I fain would call her back.
 And he must lead me back. You are most lucky ;
 But I'll be back with my best speed : for you—
 For once you loved me. You shall back with me
 Back on himself ; but changed into a curse . . .
 Back on herself, I think, again—my breast
 Meanwhile, do you two hasten back and see
 Till that same star summoned me back again.
 To give it back again ! What mean your words ?
 I hurried back with her.—Oh save me, Sir,
 And echoes back his sister's glee ; . . .
 From sunshine back to shade . . .
 Bearing his brother on his back. I have seen him,
 He travelled back to Egremont ; and thence,
 And, coming back with Her who will be ours,
 When he came back to us, a withered flower,—
 "Roll back, sweet Rill ! had to thy mountain-
 bounds, . . .
 Bring back a humbler mood !
 And, if my brow gives back their light,
 The wanderers back to their delight !
 What he has got upon his back . . .
 Cries Betty "he'll be back again ;"
 But I shall soon be back again."
 Till she comes back again . . .
 And, grumbling, he went back to bed !
 Oh carry back my Idiot Boy !
 Was busy, looking back into past times.
 But 'tis a long time to look back, my Son,
 And send a thankful spirit back to you,
 His speaking-trumpet ;—back out of the clouds
 —Back to the joyless Ocean thou art gone—
 And yet, just three years back no more—
 Upon his back and body fings . . .
 Plunge, and fling back a spiteful ear,
 Stand back, and you shall see her grasis ! . . .
 Back to her place the ship he led ; . . .
 Wheeled her back in full apparel ; . . .
 Back to his former cause of mourning, . . .
 And the pale-visaged Baker's, with basket on back.
 And gave them back his own . . .
 Her senses back again . . .
 Given back to dwell on earth in vernal bloom ?
 An arch thrown back between luxuriant wings
 Back flows the willing current of my Song :
 And if to lure the truant back be well,
 Flung back, and, in the sky's blue caves, reborn—
 To life, to life give back thine ear :
 Thea back to Earth, the dear green Earth—
 Upon the Creature's back, and plied
 And back he falls, as if his life were flown !
 But no—that Peter on his back
 Thence back into the moonlight creeps ;
 Together they brought back the Course.
 Back turned, arms folded, the unapparent face
 Couldst thou go back into far-distant years,
 Beat back the roaring storm—but how subdued
 Go back to Yarrow, 'tis their own ;
 Thea hurries back the road it came—
 I measure back the steps which I have trod ;
 Go back to antique ages, if thine eyes
 Go back, and see the Tower of Babel rise ;
 As on a mirror that gives back the hues
 Back in astonishment and fear we shrink :
 Why cast ye back upon the Gallic shore,
 All that I heard comes back upon my ear,
 And turned his eagles back with deep-drawn sighs :
 And back with her to this sea-cave ;—
 Of Nature leading back to life ; . . .
 Gave back a rich and dazzling sheen,
 May render back the Highland Brooch.
 Hung back, and smiled, and blushed for joy,
 Back therefore will they lie to seize
 Back through the melancholy Host
 Far back—far back my mind must go
 The friend shrinks back—the foe recoils
 Of mind, to Rylstone back she came ;
 Back to the Land those Pilgrims left of yore,
 Part of her lost One's glory back to trace
 Flung back from distant climes a streaming fire,
 The Queen drew back the wimple that she wore ;
 He comes not back ; an ample space
 Of slumber—shrinking back she fell,
 Now back to the files, then in search of the wall,
 And back to the forests again !
 From manhood—back to childhood ; for the age—
 Back towards covered life's first rude career.
 But the greyhound in the leash hung back,
 And virtue, flown, come back ;
 Joined in the transport, echoed back their shout,

Back—continued.
 O yield him back his privilege !—No sea . . .
 The snail the house he carries on his back ; . . .
 Hither come thou back straightway, . . .
 Back again to England steered . . .
 He has a blanket on his back, . . .
 The by-way back again to take ; . . .
 So far runs back the praise . . .
 Turned his back on the country—and off like a bird.
 And his pure native genius, lead him back
 Would bring him back in manhood's prime . . .
 Though nothing can bring back the hour . . .
 And her cold back their colder bosoms thrill ;
 Threw back my eyes, return'd, and gazed again.
 To summon back from lonesome banishment,
 And renders nothing back. Was it for this . . .
 Back to the covert of the willow tree ; . . .
 Have I, reclining back upon my heels, . . .
 And sweet sensations that throw back our life,
 Call back, O Friend ! a moment to thy mind,
 My hand upon his back with stormy joy . . .
 Those walks in all their freshness now came back.
 So near that, slipping back into the shade
 And so we parted. Back I cast a look,
 While I was travelling back among those days,
 To drive him back, and pound him, like a stray,
 Went back to Granta's closters, not so prompt
 Of monkeys on his back ; a minstrel band
 Thence back into the throng, until we reach,
 Must needs bring back the moment when we first,
 Turns, and will measure back his course, far back,
 Blown back upon themselves ; their reason seemed
 Of widest course but treads back his own steps ;
 Should to the breast of Nature have gone back,
 Came back upon me, so that some few tears
 Assisted, led me back through opening day . . .
 Foremost in my affections, had fallen back
 When, looking back, thou seest, in clearer view
 This age fall back to old idolatry . . .
 And disappeared. I journeyed back this way,
 Was wasted.—Back I turned my restless steps ;
 Of my best prayers to bring me back again.
 Had vanished, much was come and coming back—
 Methinks that I have heard them echo back—
 Give back faint echoes from the historian's page ;
 In combination, (wherefore else driven back
 Back to my mind rushed all that had been urged
 Upon the beach, rolls back into the sea . . .
 Saddening the heart. Go forward, and look back ;
 Time to look back with tenderness on her . . .
 Which it hath witnessed ; render back an echo
 Should listen, and give back to him the voice
 Of what he seems to take ; or gives it back,
 And on the back of more ignoble beast ; . . .
 And, like a serpent, shows his glittering back . . .
 One bears a willow-pannier on his back,
 Both have been fairly dealt with ; looking back
 His mind gives back the various forms of things,
 And giving back, and shedding each on each,
 The shirt on my back . . .
 When to Cyprus back I go
 Into the homestalls, ere they send them back
 I will go back and range a second time
 The courage that was needful to leap back
 Look back till we had reached the boundary . . .
Back-and-forward. Of busy hands and back-and-forward steps, . . .
Backed. He stands, backed by the wall ;—he abates not his din ;
 Peering in air and backed by azure sky,
 Backed also by a ledge of rock, whose crest Background. Make a strange back-ground. From his lips, ere long,
 Serves as a solemn background, or relief,
Back-looking. Back-looking, sees, upon a stone,
Backs. Our hands behind our backs with felon cords ?
 And bade the Snow their ample backs bestride,
 A hundred hills their dusky backs upheaved . . .
Backward. My soul will cast the backward view,
 The swan uplifts his chest, and backward flings . . .
 And see how dark the backward stream ! . . .
 Hills quaked, the rivers backward ran ;
 Backward, in rapid evanescence, wheels
 Of fainting hopes and backward wills,
 With backward curve, the leaves revealed
 Else let the dastard backward wend, and roam,
 For, backward, Duddon ! as I cast my eyes,
 Am grieved this backward march to see . . .
 A backward movement surely have we here,
 Among the mazy streams that backward went,
 He swells his lifted chest, and backward flings
 —With backward gaze, lock'd joints, and step of pain,
 A backward glance upon the curling cloud . . .
 For oftentimes he cast a backward look,
 Dying, will cast on you a backward look ; . . .
 And backward wanderings along thorny ways : . . .

Backward-looking

Backward—continued.
 With backward steps. Yet ever as there passed,
 With backward will; but, wanting not address—
 Among the mazy streams that backward went,
Backward-looking. The strength of backward-looking thoughts is scorned.
Backwardness. Or a nice backwardness afraid of shame)
Backwards. And, looking backwards when he looked, mine eyes
 Backwards, nor checked his flight until I saw
Bacon. The very bacon shows its feeling,
Bacon's. Now honour'd Edward's less than Bacon's name.
Bad. Then the milk-thistle had those herds demand
 "Bad is the world, and hard is the world's law
 Henceforth it shall be said that bad men only
 I thought there was no harm: but that bad Man,
 —So had proceeded propagating worse;
 That even bad men had vainly striven
 With a bad world, and foil the Tempter's arts.
 As will he owned alike by bad and good,
 Of their bad influence, and their good receives:
 Great issues, good or bad for human kind,
 Of good or bad (what'er be sought for or profest)
 The bad man's restless walk, and haunt his bed—
 Far oftener then, had ushering worse event,
 But turo we from these "hold bad" men;
 This Provost doth for those bad Jews prepare
 Small jealousies, and triumphs good of bad—
 No fear had they of bad becoming worse,
 In their unhalloed principles; the bad
 Mid such had daring sought a coward's name.
Bad. See Bad.
 She rose and bade farewell I and, while her heart
 The cry, I bade him halt again,
 And bade them better mind their trade,
 And bade the Snow their ample backs bestride,
 Darkens the sun, hath bade the forest sink,
 Saved by His care who bade the tempest cease;
 Which done, he bade that they the Jews should bind.
 Nor that vile wretch who bade the tender age
 I bade farewell; and, one among the youth
 Returned from that excursion, soon I bade
 For those that bade them fall. They found their joy,
 Pointing towards a sweet-briar, bade me climb
 Toward him, bade him leap, which word scarce said
 But me hath Nature tamed, and bade to seek Badge. Their badge, attests the holy fight they wage.
 Of those who lived distinguished by the badge
 Than as they were a badge glossy and fresh
 The nobler badge shall glitter on his arm.
Badger. To hunt the badger and unearth the fox
Badger. To haffle me—it put me to my prayers.
 Baffle the threat, bright Scene, from Orrest-head
 Redeemed to baffle that imperial Slave,
 To baffle all that may her strength impair;
 That has power to baffle death—
 To baffle, as he might, the watery storm:
Baffled. See Long-baffled.
 He hears the chiding of the baffled wind,
 Where ours are baffled. I had been deceived.
 It took effect—and yet I baffled it,
 "You shall be baffled in your mad intent
 And, baffled thus, though earth from day to day
 How baffled projects on the spirit prey,
 Was baffled still, the crumbs in little showers
 On the dark earth the baff'd vision falls,
 Secure, the chiding of the baffled wind,
 Baffled and plagued by a mind that every hour
 Of silence came and baffled his best skill,
 Baffled my understanding: how men lived
 With spiteful gratitude the baffled League,
 Were baffled; nor could my weak arm disperse
 For baffled lips and disappointed arms
 A baffled conqueror's deeply searching rage,
Baffling. Might else have triumphed, baffling prayer,
Bag. Than the height of a counsellor's bag;
 That overlays the pile; and, from a bag
Bagdads. In his still haunt on Bagdad's summit high;
Bagpipe. The bag-pipe dinning on the midnight moor
 Cheered by the Highland bagpipe, as they marched
Bagpipers. Of bagpipers on distant Highland hills.
Bagpipes. And then the bagpipes he could blow—
Bait. Was playing with some inward bait.
 Remains without an heir, the bait
Balls. Wages of folly—baits of crime,
Baker's. And the pale-visaged Baker's, with basket on back.
Balance. In an impartial balance, give thine aid
 Would balance claim with claim, and right with right?
 Restless with fixed to balance, high with low,
 O for a balance fit the truth to tell.
 (The balance trembling between night and morn
 Yes, ye were startled—and, in balance true,
 Are weighed by Providence, in balance even;
 How in still air the balance trembled—
 A skill—to balance and supply;
 The balance of delight.

Balance—continued.
 In such an even balance, that the heart
 Might fix the wavering balance of my mind,
 As in a balance of excessive hopes,
 The balance, and with firm hand weighed myself.
 A balance, an ennobling interchange
 The excess, by which the balance is destroyed.
Balanced. Balanced in ether he will never tarry,
 More justly balanced; partly at their feet,
 To take his sentence from the balanced Block,
 Balanced by vigilance for others' weal.
 Balanced these contemplations in his mind;
 And balanced by pathetic truth, by trust
Balancing. And, balancing the hopes that are the dearest
 Of seasons balancing their fight
 A State—which, balancing herself between
 An awful balancing of loss and gain,
Balbi. Pause, courteous Spirit!—Balbi supplicates
Bald. Couched on the bald top of an eminence;
 Murmuring submission, and bald government,
Baleful. Portending ruin to each baleful rite
 With cheeks o'erspread by smiles of baleful glow,
Balked. And Tyranny is balked of her desire:
Ball. See Eyeball.
 The Ball whizz'd by,—it grazed his ear,
Ballad. And it seemed, as I retraced the ballad line
 by line,
 Of which we in the Ballad read.
 And crowded street resound with ballad strains,
 The milkmaid stops her ballad, and her pail
 Stretched under wayside hedge-rows, ballad tunes,
 Here files of hallads dangle from dead walls;
Ballad-singer. An English hallad-singer. Private courts,
Ballad-singer's. The English ballad-singer's joy!
Balloon. There's something in a huge balloon;
 The bravest traveller in balloon,
Ballot-box. Hurrah for ——— [Grote], hugging his Ballot-box!
Balls. See Eyeballs, Foam-balls.
 A Juggler's balls old Time about him tossed;
 Yoo eddying balls of foam, these arrowy gleams
 Yet, like to eddying balls of foam
Balm. His good works will be balm and life to him.
 In that delicious hour of balm,
 And hers shall be the breathing balm,
 A balm of expectation?
 In rich reward all suffering; Balm that tames
Balm. My story may begin O balmy time,
 Thy spirits will seem to feed on balmy air:
 So the balmy minutes pass,
 That day of balmy April weather,
 And hums the balmy air to still
 The story might begin, oh, balmy time,
 In balmy spring-time full of rising flowers
Baltic. And, from the wide and open Baltic, rise
 To the flat margin of the Baltic sea,
Ban. With scorn, invoking a vindictive ban
 Lay on the moral will a withering ban?
 Laws that lay under Heaven's perpetual ban
Banbury. Who dragged Earl Pembroke from Banbury church Band. See Faggot-band.
 True; and, remembering how the Band have proved
 Let us begone—the Band may else be foiled.
 Repair to Liddesdale, and tell the Band
 Is rooted in his mind; this Band of ours,
 Till all the band of playmates wept together;
 Your single virtue has transformed a Band
 Obey you more. Your weakness, to the Band,
 We come by order of the Band. Belike
 Commissioned by the Band, burst in upon us.
 A band of Pirates in the Norway seas;
 Pledge of an eternal band:
 About that tight and deadly band
 Make all one band of paramours,
 Herald of a mighty band,
 And hark! the Leader of the band
 The gladdest of the gladsome band,
 Is touched—and all the band take flight.
 Of the pleasure it spreads through so thankful a band;
 Which stopped that hand of travellers on their way,
 And so the bright immortal Theban band,
 Or hath not Pindus fed thee, where the band
 Full sure they were a happy band,
 Unfit for men; and that in one great band
 Wise, upright, valiant; not a servile band
 A loyal band to follow their liege Lord
 Then, glittering like a star, she joins the festal band.
 Bear to the glacier band—those Shapes aloft described.
 Than question not that, 'mid the austere Band,
 Kept watch, a viewless band;
 So stout and hardy were the band
 But some—a variegated band
 All followed him, a gallant band!
 That Nortoo with his band is near!

Barter. But would rejoice to barter outward show
Who were content to barter short-lived pangs . . .
Bartered. And sorrow bartered for exceeding joy . . .
Bartholomew. And named of St. Bartholomew ;
there, see
Baruth. Dread cliff of Baruth ! that wild wish may sleep,
Base. Travel along the precipice's base ; . . .
As bath been said, they were not base ; . . .
These base implements to wield ; . . .
From base to summit ; such delight I found . . .
Forth from a jutting ridge, around whose base . . .
Poor in estate, of manners base, men of the multitude,
Right at the imperial station's western base, . . .
The pyramid extend its monstrous base, . . .
Have never ceased to eddy round its base, . . .
Of tide and tempest on the Structure's base, . . .
At the green base of many an inland hill,
From thee and thy base throat, keep all that's good,
For righteous triumphs are the base . . .
Though reared upon the base of outward things,
In simple childhood something of the base . . .
Of a rude cottage at the mountain's base . . .
The length of road that from yon mountain's base
Were taught a base submission.— Here behold
At the green base of many an inland hill,
And at your will what in a groom were base . . .
Basal. Joy based on sorrow, good with ill combined,
Baseless. How insecure, how baseless in itself,
Basier. That turbed the baser passions, and left free
Basist. War is passion's basest game
Bashful. Back from his sight no bashful children steal ;
The bashful freed from fear, . . .
Like a small Hamlet, with its bashful head . . .
With bashful fear no cottage children steal . . .
Of soul impetuous, and the bashful maid . . .
On thee, bright Spring, a bashful little one, . . .
Basin. See Bason, stone-basin.
In rocky basins its wild waves repose, . . .
And, in a basin black and small,
Filled the fuceral basin at Timothy's door ;
A basin for that fountain in the dell !
Basis. Upon the basis of the coming time, . . .
" Inspect the basis of the social pile ;
That basis laid, those principles of faith . . .
Is the firm basis of habitual sense . . .
Bask. In brightest sunshine bask ; this opping air,
To rest where the lizard may bask in the palm
Stretched, herdsman-like, as if to bask . . .
Stretched in the sunny light of victory bask . . .
Bask in the sunshine of the memory ; . . .
Basked. Basked in the sun, and plunged and basked
again . . .
Basket. Sat round the basket piled with oaten cakes,
A basket, which they filled with pedlar's wares ; . . .
And, with this basket on his arm, the lad . . .
And the pale-visaged Baker's, with basket on back . . .
" A basket on her head she bare ;
Upon his head ; with basket at his breast . . .
From far, with basket, slung upon her arm,
Each in his basket nodding drowsily ; . . .
Who, bearing each a basket on his arm,
Baskets. In airy baskets hanging, work and sing . . .
Glad from their airy baskets hang and sing . . .
Bason. In dark-brown bason its wild waves repose,
Bass. Rolling a solemn sea-like bass, that floats Bastard. The bastard gave some favorite [? favourite] stocks of peers
Bastille. To fettered wretchedness that no Bastille . . .
Of the Bastille, I sate in the open sun,
Of these wild hills. For, lo ! the dread Bastille
Bastions. The feudal kern, the bastions of Cohorn, Bat. The bat, lured forth where trees the lane
o'ershade,
Batavia's. Lo ! where through flat Batavia's willow groves, . . .
Or where thick sails illumine Batavia's groves ; . . .
Bateman. There's Richard Bateman, thought she to herself,
Bat-haunted. Dark with bat-haunted ashes stretching broad,
Batha. Which bathes the limbs in sweat to think of them ;
Of boys that bathe remote the faint uproar,
Rise up, and bathe the world in light ! He looked . . .
And did, thereafter, bathe their hands in fire,
Bathed. So dropped Adonis, bathed in sanguine dew
Like harebells bathed in dew,
Bathed doteously her wayworn feet,
Bather's. To fight so shallow, with a bather's glee,
Bathing. Made one long bathing of a summer's day ;
Who might have there been bathing. Long I watched,
And pure as dew bathing their crimson leaves,
Baths. Fair houses, baths, and banquets delicate,
Battened. Opposed to hopes that battened upon scoru,

Battered—continued.

That battered on thy youth. But thou hast trod
Battens. Battens on spleen, or moulders in despair ?
Batter. Batter ! batter ! batter !
Battered. His battered head, a groan the Sailor fetched
The rain rushed down—the road was battered,
Nor did the battered Tar forget,
Battering. She seeks a covert from the battering shower
Battering the Temple's front, its long-drawn nave
She seeks a shelter from the battering shower.
Battle. The shriek that from the distant battle broke,
Drive them down, like men in a battle :
In a field of battle made,
In bloodiest battle since the days of Mars !
From battle and from jeopardy,
Of cold mechanic battle do enslave.
Of battle and the routed foe
They seek, are sought ; to daily battle led,
And to the battle ride . . .
Triumphant wrong, battle of battle born, . . .
Upon the battle field, or under ocean's waves ;
Of battle meets him in authentic form !
Where faith was proved ?—while to battle moved
Is overturned ; the mace, in battle heaved
And speak of war, battle, and pestilence,
For battle in the cause of Liberty.
Battle-axe. Thy thundering battle-axe as it cleaves
the press
Battled. And battled for the Right . . .
Battle-day. A mailed angel on a battle-day ;
Incitements of a battle-day, . . .
Battle-field. Or life or death upon the battle-field,
Though loth and slow to come ! A battle-field,
Battle-martyrs. He, too, of battle-martyrs chief !
Battlement. Where battlement and moated gate Battlemented. Piping through cave and battle-mentent lower ;
Under the white cliff's battlemented crown,
Battlements. At will the crystal battlements, and peep
With battlements that on their restless fronts
Whose battlements were screed by tufted trees.
Beneath the battlements and stately trees . . .
And dignified by battlements and towers . . .
Battle's. On ground yet strewn with their last battle's wreck ;
An empty noise of death the battle's roar,
An earthquake, mingling with the battle's shock,
Of hopeful life,—by battle's whirlwind blown . . .
Battles. He sang of battles, and the breath . . .
And battles long ago ;
'Tis not in battles that from youth we train . . .
Tremendous God of battles, Lord of Hosts ! . . .
And welcome glory won in battles fought . . .

Bay. See Morecambe-bay.
Where, winding on along some secret bay, . . .
And lures from bay to bay the vocal barge . . .
To keep at bay the howling blast, . . .
As e'er by mariner was given to bay
Along the margin of a bay : . . .
On headland, or in hollow bay ;—
For ever anchored in her sheltering bay.
And lustily along the bay she strode,
This little bay ; a quiet road,
The lake, the bay, the waterfall ;
Launched from the margin of a bay
Lugano ! on thy ample bay ;
Nor asking more, on that delicious Bay,
Following the margin of a bay, . . .
Till in the sunny bay his fleet was moored !
Or in the haven rest, or sheltering bay,
On the mute sea in this unruined bay ;
This perilous bay, stands clear of all offence ;
May haunt this horned bay ;
Of aught transacted there in bay or creek ;
The bay ; and conquerors thanked the Gods,
Where winds the road along the secret bay ;
Where the slow waggon winds along the bay ;
Into a silent bay, or sportively
Within the crescent of a pleasant bay, . . .
And intricate recesses, creek or bay
To a low cottage in a sunny bay,
Our pinnacle moves ; then, coasting creek and bay,
Hence we behold the bay that bears the name
Bayard's. And the last sunbeam fell on Bayard's eye ; Bays. And bays with myrtle fringed, the southern breeze
For sheltered places, bosoms, nooks, and bays,
Bays, gulfs, and ocean's Indian width, shall be,
Heard, by star-spotted bays, beneath the steep ;
When warm from myrtle bays and tranquil seas,

To make a bed for me!—My Girl will weep . . .
 It should be told you pinioned in your bed,
 Holla! to bed, good Folks; within! O save us!
 Dragged from his bed, was cast into a dungeon,
 Not yet in bed, Eleanor!—
 Tranquil as he had died in his own bed.
 The home and sheltered bed,
 Make your bed, or make your bower;
 That he's left, for a bed, to beggars or thieves!
 —Come now we'll to bed! and when we are there
 To bed the children must depart;
 In bed she moaning lay,
 Is it not well with thee? well both for bed and board?
 Our hearth shall be thy bed, our house shall be the fold.
 That often, rising from his bed at night,
 Or, if the grave be now thy bed,
 Scarcely a soul is out of bed;
 Cried Betty, rising from the bed,
 And, grumbling, he went back to bed!
 She turned, she tossed herself in bed,
 Did Susan rise up from her bed,
 From twig or bed an humbler flower, even for your sake!
 Blessing the bed she lies upon?
 The leaves that make the softest bed . . .
 And a small bed of water in the woods.
 You stirred me on my rocky bed—
 What keeps her thus reclined upon her lonesome
 bed?
 Couched on a casual bed of moss and leaves,
 The Sailor gathers up his bed,
 The mists, that o'er the streamlet's bed
 Their bed of straw and blanket-walls.
 A Barn her winter bed supplies;
 And nightly tosses on a bed of pain;
 Made the warm earth his lazy bed.
 And this one Beast, that from the bed
 Head-foremost from the river's bed
 Beside that luckless river's bed
 If he had died upon his bed!
 Her doom it is to press a weary bed—
 For he is safe, a quiet bed,
 And stirring in his bed,
 His bed perchance was yon smooth mound
 And hang like dreams around his guilty bed.
 Watching o'er the River's bed,
 Below the icy bed of bright ARGENTIERE.
 And that which marks thy bed . . .
 A light around his mossy bed;
 Along his path? His unprotected bed
 But when, from out their viewless bed,
 Lie quiet in your churchyard bed!
 Upon a bed of herbage green,
 Crisp, yellow leaves my bed; the hooting owl
 A Growth from sinful Nature's bed of weeds—
 And now with thankful heart to bed doth creep,
 As on a bed of death? Some lodge in peace,
 Rumble along thy bed, block after block:
 If Life were slumber on a bed of down,
 Along its foaming bed.
 The bad man's restless walk, and haunt his bed—
 And the rough bed of many an unbridged brook?

Bed—continued.

Within the garden, like the rest, a bed . . .
 In what may now be called a peaceful bed . . .
 Glares, like a troubled spirit, in its bed . . .
 He sighs the sun to bed?
 Compare! thy earthly bed a moment past
 From open ground to covert, from a bed
 Bedded. Lay bedded in a quickening soil, and all
 Lay bedded, changing oftentimes its form . . .
 Bedded among rich plumes of tropic birds;
 Bedded for good and evil in a gulf
 Bedded for good and evil, O venerable Bede!
 Bede. Thy hovering Shade, O venerable Bede!
 Bedeck. Why bedeck her temples less . . .
 "How gay the habitations that bedeck . . .
 Bedecked. Of orange-trees bedecked with glowing fruit . . .
 As sound—blithe race! whose mantles were bedecked . . .
 Upon a Charger gorgeously bedecked . . .
 Bedewed. Of universal grief bedewed his honoured brow . . .
 My leaves you freshened and bedewed;
 Bedewed with toil . . .
 Bedewed with meditative tears . . .
 Bedford's. The Bedfords, Glosters, Salisburys, of old
 Bedim. Bedim, the grand terraqueous spectacle, Bedimmed. Even till long gazing hath bedimmed his eye . . .
 With my true self; for, though bedimmed and
 changed . . .
 Hidden by clouds, and oft bedimmed by haze,
 Bedimmed with smoke, in wreaths voluminous . . .
 Bedimming. Of a bedimming sleep, or as a lamp . . .
 Bedlins. If, while a half-slumber his memory bedlins, Bedlam. Bedlam, and those carved maiaics at the gates . . .
 Bedlamites. Awed have I been by strolling Bed-lamites; . . .
 Bedouin. He seemed an Arab of the Bedouin tribes;
 Bedrop. Shall with a thankful tear bedrop its latest page . . .
 Bedropped. On the window pane bedropped with rain . . .
 Pale and bedropped with everflowing tears . . .
 Bedropped with tears. "I will please you to be told Bedrowsed. Daunt him—if his Companions, now bedrowsed . . .
 Beds. I heard my neighbours in their beds complain
 Asleep upon their beds they lie;
 Or peeped they often from their beds, . . .
 Through beds of matted fern, and tangled thickets,
 And culled, from sundry beds, a lucid store
 While I was shaping beds for winter flowers;
 Each kind in several beds of one parterre;
 Down their steep beds, that never shall be still:
 With lawns and beds of flowers, and shades
 Flowers laugh before thee on their beds
 Like beds of moonlight shifting on the brine.
 As from the beds and borders of a garden
 Unthought of: in their woodland beds the flowers
 And while below, along their several beds,
 Among the cottages by beds of flowers.
 Shut up in lesser lakes or beds of lawn
 And o'er the brawling beds of unbridged streams.
 On these soft beds of thyme-besprinkled turf,
 By beds and banks Arcadian of gay flowers
 Upon their grassy beds lay couch'd in sleep, . . .

Beggar. Well! they might turn a beggar from their doors,
His tool, the wandering Beggar, made last night
Not like a beggar is he come,
Like a beggar in the cold,
I saw an aged Beggar in my walk;
Watches the aged Beggar with a look
The aged Beggar coming, quits her work,
The aged Beggar in the woody lane,
Where'er the aged Beggar takes his rounds,
Of a blind Beggar, who, with upright face,
Begged. Begged and outraged!—Many hearts deplored.
Beggar's. Touched by the beggar's moan of human woes;
Nor to the beggar's language could I fit my tongue.
Beggars. That he's left, for a bed, to beggars or thieves!
The wandering heggars propagate his name,
Of merry-making heggars,—now, provoked
Begged. And begged a little aid for charity:
And begged our daily bread from door to door.
She begged an alms, like one in poor estate;
But of his father begged, a last request,
A lodging begged beneath a castle's roof;
And begged an alms with doleful plea
And begged of the old Man that, for my sake,
That any heart had ached to hear her, begged
Begging. Have been fast bound, a begging debtor;
—The begging scavenger, with hat in hand;
Begin. The pastoral Swiss begin the cliffs to scale,
He lays his stiffened limbs,—his eyes begin to close;
Cooling our heels in this way!—I'll begin
Each in his way? Troth, I begin to think so.
My story may begin) O balmy time,
I will do mine.—I will begin again
When evening dew begins to fall.
Hung low, begin to rise and spread;
Slow to begin, and never ending;
We Poets in our youth begin in gladness;
Fit aims, with courage to begin,
Begin to follow to and fro
Here, where the Princess lies, begin the trial;
Even ere her joys begin to fade;
Rash Polity begin her maniac dance,
And then did she begin this song full high,

For when thy horns begin once more to spring,
Shades of the prison-house begin to close
When close and closer they begin to strain,
That twilight when we first begin to see
Begin to strike him with a fire-like heat,
The story might begin,) oh, balmy time,
So might—and with that prelude did begin
"But how begin? and whence?"—"The Mind is free—
Around him looking; "Where shall I begin?
Of many helpless Children. I begin
Her glorious destiny. Begin even now,
Begin their merry-making,
Beginning. And that was the beginning of my love,
Smiles are beginning, like the beams of dawn,
And start from the beginning."
As the beginning of the heavens and earth!
To thy beginning nought that doth present
Was the beginning; yet the several Lays Beginning, where the song must end,
Hath no beginning. Bless the infant Babe,
Beginning not long after that first time
Beginning to mistrust their boastful guides,
Beginning, lead his voice through many a maze
Beginning timidly, then creeping fast,
Beighted; but, the dawn beginning now
Beginning, ends in servitude—still painful
From the beginning, hollowed out and scooped
Beginning towards the south, where from Dove
Crag
Break up, and are beginning to recede;

Beginnings. Of love in all its shapes, beginnings, ends;
Thy fierce beginnings, softened and subdued
From least beginnings; how, together locked
From their beginnings, inasmuch as drawn
Begins. And Susan now begins to fear
A reading o'er his head begins the fray again.
Where holy ground begins, unhallowed ends,
Where it begins to stir, yet voiceless as a snake.
For whom his toil with early day begins.
Before her wane begins on heaven's blue coast;
Drawn from the wisdom that begins with fear,
With these dark words begins my Tale;
Old Daniel begins; he stops short—and his eye,
The pastoral Swiss begins the cliffs to scale,
Begins, and Love and Truth compose her train;
The law that governs each; and where begins
Till he begins to smile upon the breast
He begins to clatter;
Begins to love us! By a sullen storm,
Soon as the cock begins to crow
Begirt. While, in a ship begirt with silver bells,
Begirt, from day to day, with temporal shapes
In avenues disposed; there, towers begirt

Begone. Let us begone—the Band may else be foiled.
Let us begone and bring her hither;—here
Let us begone with speed, that he may hear
Begone, ye Slaves, or I will raise a whirlwind
Begone! There is some wicked deed in hand:
Begone, thou presumptuous Elf!"
Begs. And there she begs at one steep place
Beguile. At times, and tales unsought beguile the day,
Gazing she feels its power beguile
To the small wooden isle where, their work to beguile,
Beguile the remnant of the night;
A choral Ave Marie shall beguile,
Some wild Bird oft might settle and beguile
And there did they beguile the day
A corresponding virtue to beguile
Strange and familiar, might beguile the way,
Be there of decoration to beguile
Such fruitless questions may not long beguile
Of fond sepulchral flattery can beguile
Take refuge and beguile myself with trust
Did oft beguile his sorrow, and almost
Whatever their office, whether to beguile
That served those wanderings to beguile, hast said
That served my Fellow-traveller to beguile
Of keen domestic anguish; and beguile
And to beguile the lassitude of ease;

Beguiled. The stranger's looks and tears of wrath beguiled
And been for evermore beguiled;
And who but this dear Bird beguiled
So subtly are our eyes beguiled,
Though the most easily beguiled
I speak with knowledge,—by that Voice beguiled,
I speak as if of sense beguiled;
But once and deeply let me be beguiled.
Have I been so beguiled as to be blind
That hath her six weeks' solitude beguiled
And I by my affection was beguiled:
It soothed us—It beguiled us—then, to hear
Harp I we have been full long beguiled
She first in reason's dawn beguiled
By which the Prioress beguiled the way,
Looked down with pity upon eyes beguiled
Beguiled into forgetfulness of care
For day-dreams soft as e'er beguiled
And, by the beauty of the vase beguiled,
That had beguiled the work from which he came,
Of which adventures, that beguiled and cheered
By hopes of coming patronage beguiled
Beguiled his leisure hours; refreshed his thoughts;
Here, resting in cool shelter, we beguiled
Beguiles. Now hardly heard, beguiles my homeward way.
Whom ofttest she beguiles.
And to the grove that holds it. She beguiles
Beguiling. See Time-beguiling, Way-beguiling.
Some other loiterers beguiling.
Of that beguiling influence;
Beguiling harmlessly the listless hours.
Begun. A hopeful reign, auspiciously begun,
Her own angelic glory seems begun.
And with the sight of this same path—begun,
Begun and ended, in the shady grove,
Thy pleasant course,—when day's begun
The thunder had begun to growl—
That instant was begun a fray
Hues doubtfully begun and ended;

Life with you Lambs, like day, is just begun,
All consequences: work he hath begun
And has begun—its clouds of sound to cast
His glad deliverance has begun:
Or for the gentler work begun
Stodious of that pure intercourse begun
"Our work," said I, "was well begun,
O'er dew-damp'd dust our journey was begun,
Has perched o'er the beeches, their work is begun:
Through groves that had begun to shed
Return Delights! with whom my road begun,
Of glory there forthwith to be begun,
A weight must surely hang on days begun
Are penned in cotes; the chaffering is begun.
The mood in which this labour was begun,
Their voyage was begun: nor is its power
Where knowledge, ill begun in cold remark
Whose course of earthly honour was begun
Begun and ended within three days' space,
Behalf. In Liberty's behalf. Fears, true or feigned,
Which yet in thy behalf the Poet claims,
'Tis just that in behalf of these, the works,
Beheld. And others who survived the wreck, beheld
Beheld a star twinkling above my head,
And, whereso'er I turned me, I beheld
Was under fascination;—he beheld
Watched for tidings from the East, beheld his Lord,
Joanna, looking in my eyes, beheld
Ever beheld. Up-led with mutual help,
Beheld a dancing—and a glancing;
I felt a sense of pain when I beheld

Being—continued.

Diffused through all the mysteries of our Being,
 Yet, being inwardly unstained,
 A life and soul, to every mode of being
 In childhood, from this solitary Being,
 —Such pleasure is to one kind Being known,
 But its necessity in being old.
 Still, at the centre of his being, lodged
 Our noisy years seem moments in the being
 Of unknown modes of being; o'er my thoughts
 Can I forget you, being as you were
 And, in our dawn of being, constitute
 And of some other Being. A rude mass
 Emphatically such a Being lives,
 Great birthright of our being, was in me
 I felt the sentiment of Being spread
 With our own inner being are forgot.
 His being armed with strength that cannot fail.
 Of my own private being and no more;
 It gives, to think that our immortal being
 Reverence was due to a being thus employed;
 Being itself benign. My drift I fear
 I guess not what this tells of Being past,
 That frame of social being, which so long
 His hour being not yet come. Far less had then
 Of dust, and kindred to the worm; a Being,
 This notwithstanding, being brought more near
 Being written in a tongue he cannot read,
 Forgot, at seasons, whence they had their being;
 Of pity and sorrow to a state of being.
 "The very being of the immortal soul."
 "What are they but a mockery of a Being
 Those mysteries of being which have made,
 And various trials of our complex being,
 In such a being; for, her common thoughts
 A sensitive being, a creative soul.
 Salutes the being at his birth, where grace
 Of being understood at once, or else
 Which do both give it being and maintain
 Being over and forgotten, on we wound
 Where is the favoured being who hath held
 Of human Being, Eternity, and God.
 The transitory Being that beheld
 And, being still unsatisfied with aught
 His animal being; in them did he live,
 What wonder if his being thus became
 From years of youth; which, like a Being made
 A Being, who by adding love to peace
 A human being destined to awake
 That passing shows of Being leave behind,
 The ends of being would secure, and win
 Sad or disturbed, is ordered by a Being
 That in the scale of being fill their place;
 As he must bear, being powerless to redress;
 Of Life continuous, Being unimpaired;
 In dignity of being we ascend.
 Of infinite Being, twinkling restlessly!
 Has not the soul, the being of your life,
 —So build we up the Being that we are;
 For future states of being; and the wings
 The being one, and one the element.
 From my good Host, that being crazed in brain
 In his dividual being, self-reviewed,
 And to his moral being appertained:
 The infant Being in itself, and makes
 Of no mean Being? One who should be clothed
 "To every Form of being is assigned."
 Run o'er with gladness; whence the Being moves
 Of effort with the end of Being.

 What can I do? believe me, gentle Sirs,
 I sincerely can believe it. Myself, I heard
 Has driven him out of harbour? I believe
 But listen, for my peace— Why, I believe you.
 I did believe all things were shadows—yea,
 I do believe he weeps—I could weep too—
 I sate me down, and cannot but believe—
 Yet calm.—I could believe that there was here
 Some terrible phantom I believe is now
 I left him. I believe that there are phantoms,
 And you believe, then, that his mind was easy?—
 "Believe it not," said Eliudre; "respect
 Dear Maid, this truth believe,
 And for this cause not always, I believe,
 Have lutes (believe my words)
 Kind Spirits! may we not believe
 Have followed; for such loss, I would believe,
 One might believe that natural miseries
 So shall the people gather and believe
 Where what we gladdest would believe
 And let me believe that when nightly the Muse

 Where Piety, as they believe, obtains
 Informs my spirit, ne'er can I believe
 Nor can I not believe but that hereby Until I cannot but believe that they—
 Yet further.—Many, I believe, there are
 With calmness suffer and believe.
 Must keep to all, as fondly all believe,
 Yet in themselves less grateful, I believe,

And vainly eyed below the tempting flood,
 While silent stands the admiring crowd below,
 The hills, while gleams below the azure tide;
 Were there, below, a spot of holy ground
 Rich golden verdure on the lake below.
 And hear the rattling thunder far below;
 Reclined, he sees, above him and below,
 Glitter the stars above, and all is black below.
 The gulf is deep below;
 Only in the lake below.

Below him, in the bosom of the deep,
 Watching below till he had disappeared
 In high and low, above, below,
 And no not dread the waves below,
 Our blest re-union in the shades below.
 How beautiful the world below;
 Upon the lake below,
 Even here below, but more in heaven above.
 The lake below reflects it not; the sky
 Below the white-rimmed bonnet, far-descried,
 And earth below, they best can serve true gladness
 Thou "poor Inhabitant below,"
 And Rob was lord below,
 Reflected in the pool below.
 Upon a princely company below,
 To us who tread below,
 Below the icy bed of bright ARGENTIERE.
 Earth stretched below, heaven in our neighbourhood.
 And prospect right below of deep coves shaped
 Of the Jerusalem below, her sin
 From the bowers of earth below;
 Warbled, for heaven above and earth below,
 Alternate empire in the shades below—
 About, below, above,
 That he below may rest in peace,
 A silent tar below!
 Each weary step, dwarfing the world below,

Unshaded, eying far below, the flood,
 While silent stands th' admiring vale below;
 A w'd, while below the Genii hold their state.
 Rich golden verdure on the waves below.
 The death-dog, howling loud and long, below;
 Below, the echo of his parting oar,
 He looks below with undelighted eye.
 Below its aim, or meets with, from without,
 Above our human region, or below,
 Hope, below this, consists not with belief
 Wherever laid, who living fell below
 From the full river in the vale below,
 Or fret and labour on the Plais below.
 Then fell below zero,

Of vale below, a height of hills above.
 Admonishing the man who walks below
 Yon curling smoke from the grey cot below,
 Heavenward, so piercing deep the lake below.
Belt. I hung this belt. Mercy of Heaven! What ails you!

And, haply, far within the marble belt
 Its warfare's bourn, its travel's belt!
 They belt him round with hearts undaunted
 Whose white belt scared him thence, or wind that blew
 Orion with his belt, and those fair Seven,
 Of the warm summer, from a belt of hemp

Belus. Then she, as Belus wont, and all the line
 From Belus, filled it to the brim with wine;
 That Belus, nightly to his splendid couch

Belying. Of promise, nor belying the kind hope Bemazed. Stock-still there he stands like a traveller bemazed:

Bemoan. And must he too the ruthless change bemoan
 "If there be one who need bemoan
 In secret did, we trust, her loss bemoan.

Bemock. Hills, torrents, woods, embodied to bemock
Bemocked. And by a train of flying clouds bemocked;
Bemocking. 'Mid spectral lakes bemocking thirsty
 men,

To stretch his limbs, bemocking, as might seem,
Bench. See Cottage-bench.

They came to lowly bench or sculptured stall,
 No chair remained before the doors; the bench
 With long long ways before, by cottage beach,
 The voice was silent. From the bench I rose;
 The shade, and look abroad. On this old beach
 And this rude bench, one torturing hope endeared,
 From that low bench, rising instinctively
 We sat on that low bench: and oow we felt,

Benches. Was occupied by oaken benches ranged Bend. Three years a wanderer now my course I bend—
 She saw the carman bend to scoop the flood
 To see thy arch thus stretch aad bend,

The way my friends their course did bend,
 Bead with the breeze their heads, beside a crystal stream.

But ne'er could Fancy bend the buoyant Lark
 Hither his flight he would bend;
 To her; for her the willow bend;
 Wherever sportive breezes bend
 Bending, as you or I might bend
 But harder far, once more I see thee bend
 Why should we bend in grief, to sorrow cling,
 With first-fruit offerings crowd to bend the knee
 In splendour: what strength was, that would not bend

Who never did to Fortune bend the knee;
 Where simple Sufferers bend, in trust
 Bend that way herdesires. The dew, the storm—
 "Though here I bend a suppliant knee
 Her own thoughts loved she; and could bend
 Not unforgiven the suppliant knee might bend;
 In freedom. Men they were who could not bend;
 To which our souls must bend;
 And can earthward bend an ear
 Works not the righteousness of God? Oh bend,

Bend, ye Perverse! to judgments from on High, 10

Must bend the sceptred Potentates of earth.
 Was ever Spirit that could bend
 Bend o'er th' abyss?—the else impervious gloom
 Bend o'er the smoke that curls beneath the rocks.
 Again to bend the Sabbath of that time
 To bend at last to the same discipline,
 To bend as doth a slender blade of grass
 The shape of theirs, my understanding bend
 Bend the complying heads of lordly pines,
 Here might I pause, and bend in reverence
 Nor would I bend to it; who should have grieved
 To this would rather bend than see and hear
 Your cherished nullness is forced to bend
 To bend, he stoutly re-addressed himself.

Bended. A Prelate's blessing ask on bended knees.

There, bending o'er the stream, the listless swain
 Or, from the bending rocks, obtrusive cling,
 The bending body of my active sire;
 Bending low before the Donor,
 He sees the bending multitude, He hears the choral rites,

Hither he his course is bending;—
 Ilissus, bending o'er thy classic ura!
 Bending, as you or I might bend!
 And o'er the sickle bending;—
 His look and bending figure, all bespeak
 Low bending o'er the colour'd water, fold
 And, bending, water'd with the human tear,
 Bending beneath our life's mysterious weight
 In different quarters of the bending sky,
 He held the child, and, bending over it,
 When, in the coogregation bending all
 Whose flexile boughs low bending with a weight
 Bending its apex toward a paler self
 To linger, bending over thee: for oow,

Bends. Admitting no resistance, bends alike
 She bends) at leisure may be seen
 Bends to the favourite burthan. Moon and stars
 While Peter o'er the river bends,
 For more than Fancy to the influence bends
 A blue sky bends o'er Yarrow vale,
 Still stronger, bends him to his course.
 Who bends to happier duties, who more wise

 That ragged Dwelling, close beneath a rock
 Yields, could not chuck his babe beneath the chin,
 Whirred from among the fern beneath our feet,
 Beneath the church-yard tree," 34
 Upon the long stone-seat beneath the eaves 95
 Beneath your ridge, the last of those three graves?
 Take all that's mine "beneath the moon," 109
 Beneath an evening-moon. 109

 Beneath the covert of your Cloak, 119
 Beneath a sun that wakes a weary world
 As on he goes beneath the moon. 122
 Beneath the moon, yet shining fair, 127
 Large space beneath, as duly as the light
 Beneath those lofty firs, that overtop 130
 Beneath this rock, at sunrise, on a calm
 Beneath the branches—of itself had made
 Along the floor, beneath the shade 147
 Beneath my shade the mother-ewe 153
 Beneath these fruit-tree boughs that shed 159
 But a thing "beneath our shoon:" 161
 Beneath the summer sky 163
 Beneath the shady tree 168
 The mastiff, from beneath the waggoo, 178
 Beside the lake, beneath the trees, 187
 Beneath her father's roof, alone 192
 She sleeps beneath the greenwood tree, 194
 Beneath that hill of moss so fair. 200
 His nostril touched a spring beneath a hill,
 A circuit ampler than the lake beneath, 201
 FLOWER OF THE WINDS, beneath her bosom worn—
 Beneath the concave of an April sky, 226
 Leaving ten thousand stars beneath her: 236
 Beneath the spreading Weymouth-pine! 238
 Beneath their little patch of sky 239
 Beneath his looks so bare and bold, 240
 Beneath the alders, near the river; 242
 So he, beneath the gazing moon—
 Was stopped, and could not breathe beneath the

 Beneath worse ailments of the mind, 294
 How sweet to rest her wide-spread wings beneath!

 Speaking of death alone, beneath a clime
 Your council-seats beneath the open sky,
 This thy last haunt beneath Italian skies
 And trod the bible beneath their feet.
 Beneath "the random bield of clod or stone"
 We lay beneath a spreading oak,
 Sing here beneath the shade,
 Beneath a covering of the common earth!
 Beneath the sun, beneath the moon,
 Panting beneath the burthen of their wool,
 As if, beneath, some hero lay,
 And, who beneath this stone the Corse was laid,
 Six weeks beneath the moving sea
 To live beneath your more habitual sway.
 Heard, by star-spotted bays, beneath the steep;
 Beneath an old-grey oak as violets lie, 324
 And, far beneath, Banditti voices talk; 326
 Beneath a tree, slacking my thoughts by choice,
 Beneath the gloomy hills homeward I went
 Beneath the wave, yea, in the wave itself, 343
 Beneath him in the bottom of the deep, 350
 Beneath the trees or by the glimmering lake,
 Bending beneath our life's mysterious weight
 With freight of slippers piled beneath his arm!
 And northwards, from beneath the mountainous verge 404
 Beneath the trees, clear footing many a mile—
 Banded beneath the Great Mogul, when he
 A POET, made me seek beneath that name,
 Beneath our feet, a little lowly vale,
 To breathe beneath a vault of ignorance?
 Beneath this turf lie mouldering at our feet:
 Of a young fowl beneath one mother hatched,
 Languished beneath accumulated years,
 Darkened beneath the shadow of her thoughts
 Is known to all beneath the polar star, 475
 Should lie beneath the cold starlight! K. 8. 220

 Flowers we espy beside the torrent growing;
 Apart, beside his silent goats,
 And proudly think, beside the chafing sea,
 O'er the parched waste beside an Arab's tent;
 Their last embrace; beside those crystal springs
 And, MARV! off beside our blazing fire,
 Beside the ridge of a grassy grave
 Couchant beside that lonely mound;
 Alone, beside that grassy heap!
 Beside the lonely watch-tower stood
 Beside her, on some sunny bank!
 Beside the afflicted; to sustain with prayer,
 Beside the torrent dwelling—bound
 That stands beside our door.
 Beside their moss-grown hut of clay,
 Beside my daughter's grave.
 Beside the churchyard yew,
 Beside a mossy seat . . . 269 Gordale 9

 Bess. The Squire is come: his daughter Bess
 "O, here he is!" cried little Bess—
 One night, (and now, my little Bess!
 What ails you now, my little Bess?
 Best. Was best, could I but shun the spot where man might come.
 And kindred of dead husband are at best
 The best of all he has to me and mine.
 But I'll be back with my best speed: for you—
 This man's the property of him who best
 And most despise the man who best can teach us
 Before the Camp, and would that best and wisest
 To whom I owe the best of all the good
 The best and kindest!—but where is he? guide me,
 I'll lead you to his Daughter; but 'twere best
 With thy best imaginings;
 That Cross he now was fastening there, as the surest power and best
 They please Him best who labour most to do in Betoken. Air, earth, sea, sky, and heaven, success betoken.

 That best betoken patriot loyalty.
Betokens. A calmness that betokens strength to bear Belook. At midnight, I betook me to the Churchyard:
 And his old Father both betook themselves
 The weary Sun betook himself to rest;—
 I to the sport betook myself again.
Betray. Of fainter gold, a purple gleam betray.
 Betray the Elf that loves to dwell
 The silent company betray
 That might his trespasses betray.
 Doth she betray us when they're seen? or are they but a name?
 Knowing that Nature never did betray
 Betray not by the cozenage of sense
 That might his steps betray.
 That might thy sylvan confidence betray.
 Feel not that Conscience never can betray,
 Nor thought of tender happiness betray;
 To hide what they betray!
 Betray me, serving often for a cloak
 Frail human will, dependent should betray
 (Which doth at once befriend us and betray)
 Betray to sight the motion of the stream,
 So cowardly, so ready to betray,
 Betray their occupation, rising up,
Betrayed. See Self-betrayed.
 There, objects, by the searching beams betrayed,
 Betrayed, in darkness! Here to strike the blow—
 We wonder at ourselves like men betrayed:
 No more was heard of? I had been betrayed.
 And cannot.—You have betrayed me—I have done—
 Have you betrayed me? Speak to that. The mask,
 We are betrayed! His Daughter!—God have mercy!
 (Abused, betrayed, but how it matters not)
 By friends deceived, by foes betrayed,
 Check with thy notes the impulse which, betrayed
 To hearts so oft by hope betrayed;
 His peace hath no offence betrayed;
 247 P. B. 937
 Never before to human sight betrayed.
 Things incomplete and purposes betrayed
 269 Malham 12
 Wandering with timid footsteps oft betrayed,
 While glory seemed betrayed, while patriot-zeal
 And therefore are betrayed.
 Should beat too strongly, both may be betrayed.
 He looked about like one betrayed:
 No Spirit was she; that my heart betrayed,
 Some spake, by thought-perplexing fears betrayed;
 He, by the alluring element betrayed,
 When novel trusts by folly are betrayed,—
 Betrayed by mockery of holy fear.
 Won confidence, now ruthlessly betrayed
 Who had betrayed their country. The stern word
 A steadfast peace that might not be betrayed.
 Such sympathies, though rarely, were betrayed
 Or left (by mere timidity betrayed)
 And the errors into which I fell, betrayed
 Friendship betrayed, affection unreturned,
 For Man's affections—else betrayed and lost,
 But not betrayed by tenderness of mind
Betrayer. Cast off by her Betrayer, she dwells alone,
 She was reserved by me her life's betrayer;
 The rash betrayer could not face the shame
Betraying. Till a betraying sickness was seen Betrays. The rear through iron brown betrays a sullen gleam.
 A last infirmity betrays,
 Remembrance persecutes, and Hope betrays;
 Yon azure smoke betrays the lurking tann;
 And then betrays; accuses and inflicts
 That tires not, nor betrays. Our life is turned Betroth'd. Which with the dear Betroth'd was to come
 To be waylaid by her betroth'd, peace
Better. Be better fed. Ne'er may I own the heart
 Our march of yesterday had better suited
 Shall squire you, (would it not be better, Sir?)
 He should have used me better!—Charity!
 You'd better like we should descend together,
 Felt warm as a wren's nest. You'd better turn
 The deeper malady is better hid;
 And I, no coward in my better days,
 I had a better guide—that innocent Babe—
 Would have been better timed. Alone, I see;

Better—continued.
 These stifling blasts—God help me! Better this bare rock,
 Lovers lock up as pearls, though oft no better
 The wider space the better—we may find
 Far better than the sages' books,
 And bade them better mind their trade.
 For better lore would seldom yearn,
 I now can see with better eyes;
 Her body—it grew better.
 Her body still grew better.
 'Twere better to be dumb than to talk thus.
 To see a better day. At eighty-four
 The breeze had better been asleep,
 There is a better and a best;
 The better fortune or the worse;
 And so were better manners bred,
 And, to be the better seen,
 Of thoughts with better thoughts at strife,
 Regard not her—oh, better wrong and strife
 With men to whom no better law
 Nor better life was known;
 Full soon that better mind was gone:
 Better provide thee with a Cuckoo-clock,
 That taints the purer, better, mind;
 Would not a whit the better be;
 And make no better use of it;
 Was heart or head the better.
 Who mad'st at length the better life thy choice,
 The world which we inhabit? Better plea
 If ye would give the better will
 Without a better guide.
 Still better pleased as more and more
 And tongues that uttered wisdom—better none:
 The truth should now be better understood;
 Fair seed-time, better harvest might have been
 I better like a blunt indifference.
 Of flex, or, if better suited to the hour,
 Better to breathe at large on this clear height
 If not, O Mortals, better cease to live!
 Better to thank a dear and long-past day
 To have no seat for thought were better doom,
 Thy place be on my better hand—
 That shows, ev'n on its better side, the might
 A better will; and, in the imagined view
 With thy stern aspect better far agrees
 Better, if Reason's triumphs match with these,
 Better than such discourse doth silence long,
 Better fate have PRINCE and SWALLOW—
 From well to better, daily self-surpass:
 So shall the truth be better understood,
 Crime might lie better hid. And, should the change
 A blooming Lass—who in her better hand
 For thy better memory.
 Yet, since I may no better, would I kiss
 The fields better suited the case of his soul:
 Let not our times halt in their better choice.
 Be nothing better than a wandering cloud,
 Sometimes it suits me better to invent
 Ah! better far than this, to stray about
 Far better never to have heard the name
 O'erpowered my better reason, and the bird
 With better knowledge how the heart was framed
 From the remembrances of better things,
 A boy, no better, with his rosy cheeks
 Did better suit my visionary mind,
 Far better, than to have been bolted forth,
 For permanent possession, better fruits,
 Far better had it been to exalt the mind
 When from our better selves we have too long
 Sprinkling this talk with questions, better spared,
 Rises to lead him toward a better clime,
 A better eye than theirs, most prodigal
 With a dear friend, and for the better part
 I was a better judge of thoughts than words,
 Alone, that something of a better life
 Of Kings, their vices and their better deeds,
 In framing their own laws; whence better days
 And perfect triumph for the better cause.
 No better than a landsman on the deck
 Untired, the better, surely, would preserve
 And can reap nothing better,—child-like longed
 The plain strait road, for one no better chosen
 When erring, erring on the better part
 Through want of better knowledge in the heads
 That, whatsoever falls my better mind,
 Express the image of a better time,
 The better portion of his time; and there
 Ere we built up a pile of better thoughts,
 It seemed the better part were gnawed away
 Of pain were keen as those of better men,
 No dearer relique, and no better stay,
 "Nor could your coming have been better timed;
 I love it better than a snail his house.
 Can be attained,—a better sanctuary
 A better state than waking; death than sleep:
 Of better entertainment—let us hence!
 Change manifold, for better or for worse
 "You have known lights and guides better than these.

Beyond—continued.

- Service beyond all others of its kind.
 Beyond the seas; where he grew wondrous rich,
 Beyond the common life of man, I still
 To seek a hiding-place beyond the seas.
 By any who should look beyond the dell
 To the last point of vision, and beyond,
 Thou art not beyond the moon,
 Far beyond in joy of heart.
 Beyond his wish he walks secure;
 And see, beyond that hamlet small
 With sudden happiness beyond all hope.
 Exulting, rich beyond the wealth of kings,
 And to the left, three yards beyond,
 Which is a little step beyond:
 That I might step beyond my natural race
 Echoes from beyond the grave,
 And, far beyond thy native East,
 Buried in glory, far beyond the scope
 Beyond the visible world she soars to seek
 Beyond the stars, celestial Paradise.
 Of thoughts that lie beyond the reach
 Beyond these transient spheres, doth wear a crown
 For dignity not placed beyond her reach,
 Which the chaste votaries seek, beyond the grave;
 Beyond her native dell.
 Not in the mines beyond the western main,
 Reposing here, and in the aisles beyond
 Determined, lies beyond the State's embrace,
 And what beyond this thought we crave
 Beyond the mountain's giant reach that hides
 Beyond his native valley hardly stray
 Which Fate, beyond the promise of her birth,
 O'er all that, lost beyond the reach of thought
 A winning power, beyond all other power.
 And beyond common wretchedness depressed,
 A dreary mansion, large beyond all need,
 For me beyond its ordinary mark,
 Passed not beyond the suburbs of the mind;
 And once, far-travelled in such mood, beyond
 Beyond all compass; spreads, and sends aloft
 (Beyond that mighty wall, not fabulous,
 Beyond the boundary line of some hill-shadow,
 Mortal, or those beyond the reach of death;
 I chiefly looked (what need to look beyond?)
 Beyond the limits that my feet had trod,
 All over this still ocean; and beyond,
 Far, far beyond, the solid vapours stretched,
 Human, or such as lie beyond the grave.
 —Beyond the limits of the shadow cast
 Beyond all poverty how destitute,
 Glory beyond all glory ever seen
 Hath placed beyond these penetrable bounds,
 Beyond the allowance of our own fireside,
 Glory—beyond all glory ever seen,
 Beyond the seas, and to the farthest pole,
 Beyond the tenderness of human hearts:
 Beyond the temporal destiny of the Kind,
 Which they inherit,—cannot step beyond,—
 But others, far beyond this narrow sphere,
 Beyond their own poor natures and above
 Pious beyond the intention of your thought;
 And towards a crystal Mere, that lay beyond
 Beyond these humble graves, of grievous crimes
 Not to our prayer, but far beyond our prayer;
 To a small Chapel in the vale beyond)
 Beyond its natural elevation raised
 That lies beyond life's ordinary bounds,
 Beyond itself, communicating good,
 Upon this flowery slope; and see—beyond—
 All over their own pastures, and beyond.
 Precludes, and charity beyond the bounds
 From tasks too frequent, or beyond its power
 And see the blue beyond.—Type of that grace

 Of grateful memory, bid that joy depart.
 And bid them dance, and bid them sing;
 Victorious England! bid the silent Art
 Once more, heart-cheering Sun, I bid thee hail!
 Be Charity!—to bid us think.
 That bid me hail thee as the SAILOR'S FRIEND,
 Spring from their nests to bid the Sun good morrow?
- We cannot bid the ear be still;
 Be strong in faith, bid anxious thoughts lie still;
 Rejoiced to bid the world farewell,
 Bid from on high his lonely cannon sound,
 But here I must break off, and bid farewell

Bid—continued.

- And moved, a willing Page, as he was bid,
 Sky-piercing Hills! must bid farewell to you.
 There hang thy trophies; bid the jockey's vest,
Bidden. Quoth Merlin, "Even as I was bidden, Bidding. Bidding me trust in God, he stood and prayed;—
 That oft have checked their fury at your bidding.
 What wonder? at her bidding, ancient lays
 Clouds at her bidding disappear;
 The spirits at your bidding play
 At thy meek bidding, shadowy Power! brought forth;
 At Jesu's bidding. We rejoice, "O Death,
 Pastor and Patriot!—at whose bidding rise
 At Danger's bidding, may confront the seas,
 And bidding paler shades her form conceal.
 Tamed to their bidding; we without further bidding
 In bodily form.—But without further bidding
 Who at her bidding early and alone,
 Who, at her heart's light bidding, once had moved
 They saw a mansion at his bidding rise.
- Bids. Their brow sublime: in shelter there to bide
Bids. He bids his little company advance
 And bids it aptly fall, with chime
 Of bitter change, and bids the flowers beware;
 When duty bids you bleed in open war:
 Close at my side! She bids me fly to greet
 One feeble Being—bids me climb
 And bids her soldier come her woes to share,
 —When the Sun bids the gorgeous scene farewell,
 While, as Night bids the startling uproar die,
 Bids every thought be kind?
 Alas! such wisdom bids a creature fly.
- Bield. Beceath "the random bield of clod or stone"
 Sky streaked with purple, grove and craggy bield,
 Or rocky bield with patience they retire.
- Bier. Of universal grief bedewed his honoured bier.
 To gather round the bier these festal shows.
 Will fall to illuminate the infant's bier;
 He reached that ebon car, the bier
 Bearing the body on a bier;
 Remove this second Rachel from the bier.
 "Upon his bier this Innocent doth lie,
 And lifted up this Martyr from the bier,
 Stretched on his bier—that massy timber wain;
Big. That looked up at the sky so proud and big
 The big and lesser griefs with which she mourned
 Galled by their monarch's chain. The times were big Big passions strutting on a petty stage;
 And make the chalice of the big round year
Bigot. When first, above the yells of bigot strife,
 A bigot to a new idolatry—
 Of bigot zeal madly to overturn;
Bigotry. With bigotry shall tread the Offering
 That bigotry may swallow the good name,
 Of civic prejudice, the bigotry,
 Of arms, the crown which bigotry had lost,
Bigot's. In the dark mansions of the bigot's soul,
Bill. Alike, when first the bitter's hollow bill
 Or the swan stirs the reeds, his neck and bill
 Her finely-curved bill.
 Chanting with indefatigable bill,
 Like the first summons, Cuckoo! of thy bill,
 Thy feathered Lieges bill and wings
 Then whispered she, "The Bill is carrying out!"
 By fluttering pinions here and busy bill;
Billow. And, billow favouring billow,
 Nor let one billow of our heaven-blest Isle
 What is youth?—a dancing billow,
 To his own covert; as a billow, heaved
 In billow after billow, evermore
 As is the greenest billow of the sea.
Billows. A solemn sea! whose billows wide around
 Of neighbouring billows from each other's sight.
 As with the force of billows shattered;
 Of nether air's rude billows is unknown;
 Their feet among the billows, know
 By a fair Swan on drowsy billows heaved,
 And heard the billows leap and dance,
 Whisper it to the billows of the main,
 In dreary billows, wood, and meagre cot,
 Green as the salt-sea billows, white and green—
 Of learning, where thou heard'st the billows beat
 And mightiest billows ever have confessed
 Deserves the name (this truth the billows preach)
 The billows lengthening, mutually crossed
 Are vain, as billows in a tossing sea.
 Over the billows of this troublesome world
 Beaten by lonely billows, hear the songs
Billowy. The rocks, and quivering trees, and billowy lake,
 Thou who trod'st the billowy sea,
 Upon the billowy ocean, as it lay
Bind. To bind a lingering life in chains:
 Of this fair Spot her flowers may bind,
 A broken vow, or bid a true,
 Of Faith, and round the sufferer's temples bind
 They bind the unoffending creature's brows

Bind—continued.

No craft this subtle element can bind,
That bind thee to the path which God ordains
To bind, on apt suggestion, or unbind;
To bind his spiritual Progeny, with rules
That bloom—those eyes—can they assist to bind
And vows, that bind the will, in silence made,
Through earth and heaven to bind and to unbind!—
Those flowers of chivalry, to bind the brow
Should bind the vassal to his lord's domains?
A tender sympathy, which did thee bind
Which done, he bade that they the Jews should bind.
He can make sick,—bind can he and unbind
Did bind my feelings even as in a chain,
There doth the reaper bind the yellow sheaf,
That bind the perishable hours of life
To shake; but only to bind up and seal;
All unconcerned as he would bind a sheaf,

Binding. Binding the charmed soul in powerless trance.

Binding herself by statute to secure
Binds. To all that binds the soul in powerless trance,
Binds her wild wreaths, and whispers his return.
Alone she cuts and binds the grain,
And binds her temples with the civic wreath?
That binds them, pleasant River! to thy side—
Behold a record which together binds
The casement shade more luscious woodbine binds,
Sole link that binds them to each other; walks,
Dislodged the natural sleep that binds them up
The vassalage that binds her to the earth,
That, while it binds, invigorates and supports.

Bind-wood. The cumbersome bind-wood, with its wreaths and bells,

Binnorie. The solitude of Binnorie!
To Binnorie is steering:
The solitude of Binnorie.
The solitude of Binnorie.
The solitude of Binnorie.
The solitude of Binnorie.
The solitude of Binnorie.

Birch. Even the white stems of birch, the cottage

white.
Where, mixed with graceful birch, the sombre pine
But 'twas the foliage of the rocks—the birch,
As golden locks of birch, that rise and fall
In birch besprink'd cliffs embosom'd deep;
Light birch, aloft upon the horizon's edge.
Birch-leaf. In woodbine bower or birchen grove,
Birches'. To mark the birches' stems all golden light,
Birch-tree. And silent majesty; the birch-tree-woods
Birch-trees. And birch-trees risen in silver colonnade.
Among the birch-trees of this rocky isle.
Of birch-trees waves over the chimney-top;
With birch-trees fringed; my hand shall guide the helm,
Of the fair Isle with birch-trees fringed—and there,
Bird. See Bell-bird, Cuckoo-bird, Mocking-bird,

Mother-bird, Night-bird, Singing-bird.

The bird, who ceased, with fading light, to thread
Methought from every cot the watchful bird
The startled bird quivered upon the wing.
Of kitten, bird, or summer fly;
If but a bird, to keep them company,
Ere, pouncing like a ravenous bird of prey,
Like a scared Bird encouraged to renew
"The bird and cage they both were his:
'Twas my Son's bird; and neat and trim
When last he sailed, he left the bird behind;
Heart-pleas'd we smile upon the Bird
And who but this dear Bird beguiled
That thus brings man and bird together,
Whether the bird fit here or there,
Of common pleasure: beast and bird, the lamb,
The happiest bird that sprang out of the Ark!
Leav'st to the wandering bird of paradise,
"If breeze or bird to this rough steep
The bird caught in a snare:
Art thou the bird whom Man loves best,
The pious bird with the scarlet breast,
The bird that comes about our doors
The bird that by some name or other
Can this be the bird, to man so good,
O pious Bird! whom man loves best,
No bold bird gone forth to forage
Arch, volatile, a sportive bird
Which would you be,—the bird of the saloon,
Within this lonesome nook the bird
No beast, no bird, hath here his home;
Sweet Bird! to do me wrong;
There to the brooding bird her mate
By bird or beast made vocal, sought a cause
Sylph was it? or a Bird more bright
Who was blest as bird could be,
That solitary bird
The jolly bird hath learned his cheer
O Cuckoo! shall I call thee Bird,
No bird, but an invisible thing,
O blessed Bird! the earth we pace
In the silence of morning the song of the Bird.
For this young Bird that is distrust;

Which the sweet Bird, misnamed the melancholy,
Tempted the bird of Juno to unfold
Her happy spirit as a bird is free,
Will to composure lead—or make thee blithe as bird in bower.

This, this the Bird of Paradise! disclaim
This the Sun's Bird, whom Glendovers might own
Though often burled like a bird.
Like a poor bird—her plundered nest
Mount, tuneful Bird, and join the immortal quires!
Watching the least small bird that round her hops,
Some wild Bird off might settle and beguile

Yes, I will forth, bold Bird! and front the blast,
Or fish in stream, or bird in bower,
High lodged the Warrior, like a bird of prey;
And beast and bird that from the spell
Touches me not, though pensive as a bird.
Some bird (like our own honoured redbreast) may strew

Or Bird that soared with Ganymede;
To hail the exploratory Bird renewing
Those louder cries give notice that the Bird,
Divine affections; and with beast and bird,
Voice of the Desert, fare-thee-well; sweet Bird!
Here ruminate, nor shrouded bird,
Or he would pass into her bird, that throws
Aloft, the imperial Bird of Rome invokes
Tyrranic, keep the Bird of Jove embarras
Man, bird, and beast; then, with a consort paired,
And darting like a wounded bird
(Like a poor bird entangled in a snare
To the still lake) the imaginative Bird
The captive Bird was gone;—to cliff or moor
Eyeing the sea's blue depths. Poor Bird! even so
Cage for a Bird of plumage bright,
To win this bright Bird from her cage,
And functions dwell in beast and bird that sway
Where'er her course; mysterious Bird!
A holy name—the Bird of Heaven!
The Bird of God! whose blessed will
With which, more zealous than the liveliest bird

Is there a cherished Bird (I venture now
Then, little Bird, this boon confer,
That still he loves the Bird, and still must love;
I was your lambk'n and your bird,
And as I lay, the Cuckoo, bird unholy
Fie, quoth she, on thy name Bird ill beseen!
Quoth she, to hear this churlish bird thus speak
For there is not so false a bird as she.
Of that false Bird whom Love can not abide.
Then spake one Bird, and full assent all gave;
Turned his back on the country—and off like a bird.
I saw the Bird depart.
Till pours the wakeful bird her solemn strains
The bird, with fading light who ceas'd to thread
While Evening's solemn bird melodious weeps,
Small as a bird the chamois-chaser fly.
Her Voice was like a hidden Bird that sang,
Free as a bird to settle where I will.
But like the innocent bird, hath goodings on
O'erpowered my better reason, and the bird
So sweetly 'mid the gloom the invisible bird
I seemed to move along them, as a bird
The inferior creatures, beast or bird, attuned
To wisdom; or, as lightsome as a bird
"The untutored bird may found, and so construct,
Of happy instinct which the woodland bird
And, fraught with antics as the Indian bird
To grant, or be received; while that poor bird—
Soundless, with all its streams. The bird of dawn

We two had sung, like gladsome birds in May;
—These fools of feeling are mere birds of winter

Of birds that build their nests and sing,
Birds warbled round me—and each trace
There dwelt we, as happy as birds in their bowers;
The little birds began to stir,
As merry as the birds in spring.
To sympathize with vulgar coppice birds
And hither throngs of birds resort;
And birds and flowers once more to greet,
While birds, and butterflies, and flowers,
Rouse the birds, and they sing;
Among the dwellings framed by birds
And snug as birds in leafy arbour,

Birds—continued.

The small birds twitter,
The birds are singing in the distant woods ;
He heard the birds their morning carols sing ;
The birds pour forth their souls in notes
Where birds and brooks from leafy dells
Your squadrons to an endless flight of birds
And whispers to the silent birds, " Prepare
'Mid song of birds, and insects murmuring ;
He the seven birds hath seen, that never part,
Ye heavenly Birds ! to your Progenitors.
Seen birds of tempest-loving kind—
Rare beasts, and birds with plumage bright ;
And birds, high flying in the element,
Of birds, in leafy bower,
The Birds with progress smooth and swift
And lo ! those Birds, far-famed through Love's dominions,
Where small birds warbled to their paramours ;
As, when a storm hath ceased, the birds regain
Scattering, like birds escaped the fowler's net,
The birds, of late so noisy in their bowers,
The little birds are piping yet
Which foolish birds are caught with. Can, I ask,
The birds around me hopped and played,
Should that day come—but hark ! the birds salute
Through dewy grass, nor small birds hushed in
bowers,
On which the warbling birds their pastime take.
What birds she tamed, what flowers the ground
And saw the birds come tripping from their bowers,
Methought I wist right well what these birds meant,
To all the Birds that lodged within that dale,
For birds we are—all here together brought ;
Fell on the ground ; and the small mountain birds,
The pleasant melody of woodland birds,
Of highway side, and with the little birds . . .
The little hedgerow birds,
The birds shall sing and ocean make
Now, while the birds thus sing a joyous song,
Then sing, ye Birds, sing, sing a joyous song !
Mounts thro' the clearer mist the chaunt of birds,
Or like two birds, companions in mid air,
Was now an Island musical with birds . . .
Bestowed new splendour ; the melodious birds,
Heard him, while birds were warbling, tell his tales
Dews, vapours, and the melody of birds,
Or cooing morn, as happy as the birds . . .
As scattered birds troop to the fowler's lure,
Eager as birds of prey, or as a ship
There small birds warble from the leafy trees,
Filled all the woods : the cry of unknown birds ;
The spectacles within doors,—birds and beasts
Were life about him as the songs of birds . . .
Bedded among rich plumes of tropic birds . . .
Birds, running streams, and hills so beautiful
Birds in the bower, and lambs in the green field,
And teach the little birds to build their nests . . .
Could they have lived as do the little birds
His overflowing spirit. Birds and beasts,
The small birds find in spring no thicket there
And the wild birds that gather round my porch.
And small birds singing happily to mates
Though of the kind which beasts and birds present
Of sunbeams, shadows, butterflies and birds,
Of lordly birds, an unexpected sound
But most of all the Birds that haunt the flood
Birds'. Sleepless ! and soon the small birds' melodies
For now when they may hear the small birds' song,
According to the sweet Birds' harmony ;
Bird's-nest. Than a forsaken bird's-nest filled with snow
Birth. Lo, from the flames a great and glorious birth ;
A thing dependent for its casual birth . . .
In all things worthier of that noble birth,
Thus fares it still with all that takes its birth
That gave it birth : in service meek
Or art thou of still higher birth ?
That wert a promise to me ere thy birth,
Figures with armorial signs of race and birth,
Not idly.—Hadst thou been of Indian birth,
Of discontent, and check the birth . . .
In scorn I speak not,—they are what their birth
As if she from her birth had been
The sky rejoices in the morning's birth ;
The hoary peaks of Scotland that give birth
Whose trembling fancy would to love give birth ;
For ye, though not by birth allied,
Some barrier with which Nature, from the birth
Doth glorify its humble birth
He from his birth had lived.
Of Venice did not fall below her birth,
That, having forced its way from birth to birth,
Like him of noble birth and noble mid ;
When they to future empires have given birth,
N'er saw a race who held, by right of birth,
Which to unequal laws gave birth,
And murmur sweet songs on the ground of their birth !
That gives to common pleasures birth ;
That for oblivion take their daily birth

Birth—continued.

Of secondary birth, the Jung-frau's cone ;
Of either sea, an Islander by birth,
And very names of those who gave them birth
Embellishing the ground that gave them birth
With gleams that owed not to the sun their birth,
" Her birth was heathen ; but a fence
Thy cradle cracks ;—to chant thy birth, thou hast
To dignify the spot that gives thee birth
Though joy attend Thee orient at the birth
The gentle Una, of celestial birth,
That to the sapling ash gives birth ;
Whom I have left, Love's mildest birth,
By bands of no ignoble birth,
(Such have I seen) whom chance of birth
A second and yet nobler birth ;
Who, as the fields and woods have given them
birth,
Go forth, great King ! claim what thy birth
bestows ;
The Infant's notice of his second birth—
Rejoices in a second birth . . .

Birth-morn. Thy present birth-morn with thy last,
so fair,
Birthplace. Was the Youth's birth-place. There he wooded a Maid
And, at his birth-place, built a chapel floored
Their birthplace in the rocky cleft
And smiles that from their birthplace ne'er shall flee
I seek the birthplace of a native Stream.—
And in their common birthplace sheltered it
Savona was my birthplace, and I sprang
Much favoured in my birthplace, and no less
On some grey rock—its birthplace—so had I
That is the eagle's birthplace, or some peak
From its fantastic birthplace ! And I own,
Its birthplace ; none whose figure did not live
Birthright. We slighted them all,—and our birthright was lost.
A sacrifice of birthright to attain
Woman's birthright into dust.
Your noble birthright, ye that occupy
Your birthright is a fence
But if the change restore his birthright, then,
Great birthright of our being, was in me
And left a solid birthright to the State,
And with their humble birthright rest content.
N'er to return ! That birthright now is lost.
Whose birthright Reason, therefore, may ensure.
The home and ancient birthright of their flock

Blasts. See Sea-blasts.
 These stifling blasts—God help me! Better this bare rock, 67 Bord. 1658
 And blasts of heaven will aid their fight; 117 Affl. Marg. 44

Blasts—continued.

Of blasts of every tone; and oftentimes,
 Against the mountain blasts; and to the heights,
 Blasts of tempestuous smoke—wherewith he tries.
 Or blasts the green field and the trees distress,
 The stationary blasts of waterfalls,
 Spread into madness of the many; blasts
 Wild blasts of music thus could find their way
 Of self-esteem; and by the cutting blasts
 And oaken leaves that, driven by whirling blasts,
 Against the mountain blasts, and to the heights

Blaze. Its green-tinged margin in a blaze of gold;
 And far and wide the icy summits blaze,
 Red on the hills her beacon's far-seen blaze;
 I took it for the blaze of Chevrolet Beacon:
 Set the sign-board in a blaze,
 Which caught the blaze or sacrifice,
 A mournful thing, so transient is the blaze!"
 By Moscow self-devoted to a blaze
 And snow-fred torrents, which the blaze of noon
 The midnight stars outshining, or the blaze
 Whose blaze is now subdued to tender gleams,
 Of thy trim Mansion destined soon to blaze
 While far and wide the icy summits blaze
 As despot courts their blaze of gems display,
 And laugh with merrier blaze her evening fires;
 Red on his hills his beacon's comet blaze;
 The glittering waves reflect the dazzling blaze;
 Each in the other's blaze, a galaxy
 By vocal utterance, or blaze of light

Blazed. Came where beneath the trees a faggot blazed;
 Of clouds that in cerulean ether blazed!
 The darksome altars would have blazed
 Her chantry blazed with sacrilegious fire,
 The flattered structure glistened, blazed,
 The cottage windows blazed through twilight gloom

Blazes. Catches fire, as seems, and blazes

Blazing. There, all unshaded, blazing forests throw
 When, Antioch blazing to her topmost towers,
 Were seated round their blazing fire,
 A steaming howl, a blazing fire,
 A blazing intellectual deity—
 And massy grove, so near you blazing town,
 By blazing fire, the still suspense
 And, MARY! oft beside our blazing fire,
 Housed near a blazing fire—is seen to flit
 Yet more,—round many a Convent's blazing fire
 There swims, of blazing sun and beating shower
 From gilded rafter many a blazing light
 And blazing terrace upon terrace, high
 Even from the blazing chariot of the sun,
 A blazing fire—beside a cleanly hearth
 Laid open through the blazing window—there
 Engaged, near blazing hearth, on clean swept floor,

Blazon. Charged with a blazon on the field,
 To blazon—power and energy detached

Blazoned. "E'er was blazoned or sung?"
 Shop after shop, with symbols, blazoned names,

Blazonry. I see a matchless blazonry unfurled
 Fought, as if conscious of the blazonry

Bleach. Where unremitting frosts the rocky crescent bleach,

Bleached. By which it had been bleached, o'erspread
 the board;
 And wholly without roof (the bleached remains .
Bleak. Or hovering over wastes too bleak to rear
 On the bleak sides of Cumbria's heath-clad moors,
 Save that the bastard, of those regions bleak
 Why else have I been led to this bleak Waste?
 Of the bleak Waste—left him—and so he died!
 Whom, one bleak winter's day, she met upon the dreary Wild.
 In weather rough and bleak;
 To the bleak winds she sometimes gives
 By Christmas snows, by visitation bleak
 To harren heath, bleak moor, and quaking fen,
 From bleak hill-top, and length of march by night
 Through the bleak conceive, wakes this wondrous chime
 Bleak Radicofani! escaped with joy—
 From the bleak isle where she is laid,
 So cheered, she left that Island bleak,
 Gay June would scorn us. But when bleak winds roar
 Though bleak and bare, and seldom free
 Which yet survive on bleak Iona's coast.
 Where sheltered from the north and bleak northwest
 Whom, since her birth on bleak Northumbria's
 coast,
 Forc'd from my native mountains bleak and bare;
 And the bleak music from that old stone wall,
 Of minster-clock! From that bleak tenement
 In bleak December, I retraced this way,
 By an unthought-of patron. Bleak and bare
 Bleak season was it, turbulent and bleak,

Bleakest. And luxuries extract from bleakest moors;
 Here on the bleakest point of Cumbria's shore
 Her crest a bough of Winter's bleakest pine,

Bleat. Why bleat so after me? Why pull so at thy chain?
 That bleat, how tender! of the dam
 Even to the fleecy straggler's bleat;
 Of a new master; bleat the flocks aloud.
 Save for that single cry, the unanswer'd bleat

Bleating. And the bleating mother's Young-one
 Frisking, bleating merriment,
 Long as the shepherd's bleating flock shall stray
 As the last bleating of the fold expires,
 K.8. 226 *I will 75

Bleatings. Of barking dogs, and bleatings from strange fear.
 And bleatings manifold of mountain sheep,
Bled. Whose temples bled beneath the platted thorn.
 Softly!—To save the contrite, Jesus bled.
 For them who bravely stood unhurt, or bled!
 The sons who for thy civil rights have bled!
 Of all who for her rights watched, toiled and bled.
 In him who bled for man upon the cross;
 And from the faith derived through Him who bled

Bled. When duty bids you bleed in open war:
 Than ever forced unspit hearts to bleed.
 —The shack is given—the Adversaries bleed—
 None bleed, and none lie prostrate but the foe;
 327 Ode 1815 17
 368 Trajan 48

Bleeding. Where bleeding Sidney from the cup retired,
 You call it, "Love lies bleeding,"—so you may,
 Called the dejected Lingerer Love Lies Bleeding.
 At length he spies a bleeding wound,
 Of Yarrow Vale lay bleeding?
 Though sprung from bleeding war, is one of pure
 delight;
 Bleeding on that precious Rood;
 And the sword stopped; the bleeding wounds were closed;
 The crown of thorns around his bleeding brow
 Tearing their bleeding ties leaves Age to groan
 Unlocking bleeding Thought's "memorial cell;"
 And Conscience dogging close his bleeding way

Bleeds. Ere martyr burns, or patriot bleeds!

Blemish. Of his half-open hand pure from blemish or speck;
 And he from every blemish them defendeth;

Blemished. Before me?—nothing blemished the fair sight

Blencathara's. There, at Blencathara's rugged feet,
 And leave Blencathara's rugged coves,

Blend. Blend in a music of tranquillity;
 And with wild flowers and blooming orchards blend;
 And blend its waters with his daily meal,
 Blend with the mist—a moving shroud
 Never to blend our pleasure or our pride
 That blend the nature of the star
 Far as the woodlands—with the trill to blend
 And blend with the surrounding trees.
 Save only far as thought and feeling blend
 Their anguish,—and they blend sweet songs with thine.
 Less deeply sad, with these to blend!
 And deadlier poisons in the chalice blend:
 With theirs my efforts cannot blend,
 Around these Converts; and their glories blend,
 As to a visible Power, in which did blend,
 And with immortal Spirits blend!
 Oft with his musings does thy image blend,
 So may our Autumn blend
 These all to swell the village murmurs blend,
 To blend his murmurs with my nurse's song,
 Deriving cheerful confidence, shall blend
 To blend with knowledge of the years to come,
 Inaudible by daylight, blend their notes
 Trusting that not incongruously I blend
 They blend therewith congenially: meanwhile,
 And gladly blend with outward fellowship

Blended. A Fool and Coward blended to my wish!
 From age to age in blended memory.
 And soon with this he other matter blended,
 The two that were at strife are blended,
 Blended in absolute serenity,
 And no pride blended with their dignity.
 Tints softly with each other blended,
 The dream, to time and nature's blended powers
 By all the blended powers of Earth and Heaven.
 Where Kylstone brook with Wharf is blended.
 King, child, and seraph, blended in the mien
 Softshades and dews have shed their blended power
 I heard a thousand blended notes,
 And blended, in peculiar harmony,
 Blended with praise of that parental love,
 From blended colours also borrowing help,
 The blended calmness of the heavens and earth,
 Can it be called) which they with blended might
 If, then, their blended influence be not lost
 Blended in perfect stillness, to our sight!
 A blended holiness of earth and sky

Blending. In prayer, yet blending with that solemn rite
 He sang of love, with quiet blending,
 Blending as in a common English grove
 Of music opened, and there came a blending

Blending—continued.

Though mute, of all things blending into one.
 Deep sighs with quick words blending,
 To saintly nosmes!—Glorious is the blending
 When Nature's self, amid such blending, seems

Blending their diverse foliage with the green . . .
 Dreamlike the blending also of the whole . . .

Blends. Hope with reflection blends her social rays
 Blends with the solemn colouring of night;
 In slumber, with the cadence blends
 Of many waters, or as evening blends . . .
 Regret pursues and with it blends—
 O Love and Fear, their several powers he blends,
 With Hope Reflexion blends her social rays
 Blends with the solemn colouring of the night;
 For with the sense of admiration blends . . .

Bless. Such as did once the Poet bless,
 He saw his Wife's lips move his name to bless.
 God bless and thank you both, my gentle Masters.
 Met in the roads, would bless us; little children,
 Therefore I bless her; when I think of Man,
 I bless her with ad spirit, when of God,
 I bless her in the fulness of my joy!
 Thou didst command me to bless all mankind;
 Heaven bless you when you are among your kindred!
 Would bless such piety—It may be then—
 Before I knew thy face.—Heaven bless thee, Boy!
 A poor old Dame will bless them for the boon:
 I bless Thee, Vision as thou art,
 I bless thee with a human heart;
 The heroes bless him, him their rightful soo.
 When our enlightened minds shall bless his sway;
 Bless Thou the hour, or ere the hour arrive,
 Jesu! bless our slender Boaf,
 When youth had flown did hope still bless
 Hence not for them unfitted who would bless
 For I am come with power to bless,
 Bless, tender Hearts, their mutual lot,
 And bless for both this savage spot;
 Ever bestowed to equalize and bless
 Or deadly snare; and He survives to bless
 Our minds and hearts to bless—
 Thou drooping sick Man, bless the Guide
 And let me calmly bless the Power . . .
 Look up to heaven, and bless his darling boy.
 Forgers of daring tales! we bless you then,
 Nor least, Heaven bless him! the renowned Lord Mayor . . .
 Heaven bless them, and their inconsiderate work!
 Permitted to descend, and bless mankind.
 To benefit and bless, through mightier power:—
 Bless him, rejoicing in his neighbourhood."
 The charities that soothe, and heal, and bless,
 Bless it then with constant light . . .

Blessed. See Blest.
 Haply some wretch has eyed, and called thee blessed;
 Thus Hope, first pouring from her blessed horn
 By rocks that, shutting out the blessed day,
 To lead a Spirit, spotless as the blessed,
 Have blessed their steps, the fatherless retire . . .
 I had led him 'cross the torrent, his voice blessed me:
 My Child, my blessed Child! No more of that;
 O blessed tidings! thought of joy!
 A blessed day for thee! then whither wouldst thou roam?
 O blessed vision! happy child!
 "My Mother," said the Boy, "was born near to a blessed Tree,
 Who to this blessed place
 And love the blessed life that we lead here.
 To such inheritance of blessed fancy
 I toiled and toiled; God blessed me in my work,
 Blessed is and be your consort;
 Love, blessed Love, is everywhere
 Find, within, a blessed harbour!
 O blessed Bird! the earth we pace . . .
 Of blessed Angels crowned the right.
 Of aspect more sublime; that blessed mood,
 Is lightened!—that serene and blessed mood,
 Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
 Was never half so blessed.
 For what thus far hath blessed my wanderings,
 thanks
 Inflicted;—blessed Men, for so to Heaven
 Can she, a blessed saint, the work approve?
 No common light of nature blessed . . .
 The meekest Child on this blessed earth.
 A Maid o'er whom the blessed Dove
 Returns to her—that blessed Saint . . .
 Even such this blessed Pilgrim trod,
 Of Christian Faith, this savage Island blessed
 Bishops and Priests, blessed are ye, if deep
 By them who blessed the soft and happy gale
 And from the blessed power that rolls
 The Bird of God! whose blessed will
 Oh, speed the blessed hour, Almighty God!
 In music all unversed, nor blessed with skill
 A blessed Man! who of protracted days . . .

Blessed—continued.

O blessed Lord! whose mercy then removed . . .
 Ye blessed Creatures, I have heard the call
 Loose-hanging rocks the Day's bless'd eye that hide,
 Bless'd with his herds, as in the patriarch's age,
 Transmits of days more bless'd in times of yore.
 Yet, blessed Art, we yield not to dejection;
 Which I had loved, even as a blessed spirit
 And ye adore! But bless'd be the God
 His fellow country-men; and yet most blessed
 Nor could have been, without her bless'd name.
 Deeming our blessed reason of least use
 Because the goatherd, blessed man! had tips
 By the strong wind. When, in the blessed hours
 Of blessed consolations in distress;
 Hath blessed poor Margaret for her gentle looks,
 Had been a blessed home, it was my chance
 I blessed her in the impotence of grief.
 Art everlasting, and the blessed Spirits,
 A blessed restoration, to behold
 Island or grove, that hides a blessed few
 Observed the liberating stroke—and blessed.
 Of blessed angels, pitying human cares.
 With hostile purposes the blessed Isle,
 Or of the blessed Virgin, looking down
 And female care.—"A blessed lot is yours!"
 And, unadverted from the blessed mood . . .

What has this blessed earth to do with shame . . .
Blessedness. Conscious of blessedness, but, whence it sprung,
 Grant to the mort of life its natural blessedness!
 What joy to live, what blessedness to die!
 Of blessedness to come . . .
 Thus blindly with thy blessedness at strife?
 In thankful blessedness, which yet survives.
 And found benevolence and blessedness
 Religiously, in silent blessedness;
 That made him; it was blessedness and love!
 Though, for a nation, times of blessedness,
 Of pure, imperishable, blessedness,
Blesses. Blesses the moon that comes with kindly ray,
 Where He that made them blesses their repose—
 Blesses the Moon that comes with kindest ray . . .

Blessing. The blessing this a father gives his child!
 The Blessing of my later years . . .
 Blessing the bed she lies upon?
 But as a blessing to this calm recess,
 Yet shall my blessing hover o'er thee still,
 Beholds them blest and blessing.
 From Heaven a general blessing; timely rains
 The Donor's farewell blessing, can he read
 A Prelate's blessing ask on hended knees.
 O Father!—to the Espoused thy blessing give,
 Breathe through my soul the blessing of thy grace,
 There is a blessing in the air,
 Then, with a blessing granted from above . . .

Ponder the blessing they entreat
 To launch the boat; and with her blessing cheered,
 Thee let him pass, a blessing on his head!
 —Then let him pass, a blessing on his head!
 I heard the blessing which to you
 Upon the act a blessing I implore.
 And left the Glow-worm, blessing it by name,
 This shall be her choicest blessing.
 Oh there is blessing in this gentle breeze,
 More than we wished we knew the blessing then
 The blessing of my life; the gift is yours,
 Be many, and a blessing to mankind.
 Heaven's blessing be upon thee where thou liest
 The farewell blessing of the patient man,
 Called out, and sent a blessing after me,
 And, through Heaven's blessing, thus we gain the bread
 But, blessing God and praising him, bequeathed
 Closed by degrees to charity; heaven's blessing
 A simple blessing, or with evil mixed;
Blessings. See Heart-blessings.
 With this "the blessings he enjoys to guard,"
 While the remotest hamlets blessings share
 Shall blessings wait upon a deed of mine.
 But the comfort, the blessings, and wealth that we had,
 Blessings upon that soft, warm face,
 Two days, and blessings from thy Father's tongue
 And countless blessings which God sends:
 Is full of blessings. Therefore let the moon
 Well may our hearts have faith that blessings come,
 Thanks to the place, blessings upon the hour;
 Blessings be on you both! one hope, one lot,
 Be meo who hold its many blessings dear,
 Eternal blessings on the Muse,
 Blessings and prayers in nobler retinue
 With prayers and blessings we your path will sow;
 Her blessings cursed—her glory turned to shame!
 Blessings to give, news ask, or suit prefer.
 Blessings be with them—and eternal praise,
 Dependent as in part its blessings are
 And let us utter thanks for blessings sown . . .

Blush—continued.

The boy of plainer garb, whose blush survives
Thy apprehensions—blush thou for them all . . .
Need only blush for what they once have been,
Blush Pride to see a farmer's wife produce . . .

Blushed. He blushed with shame, nor made reply;
Hung back, and smiled, and blushed for joy . . .

Blushes. While across her virgin cheek pure blushes strayed, . . .
But her blushes are joy-flushes; . . .
By blushes yet untamed; . . .
In Heaven; hence no one blushes for thy name,
Our groans, our blushes, our pale cheeks declare
Suffused with blushes of celestial hue, . . .
And high her blushes mounted; . . .

Blushing. I stood, of simple shame the blushing Thrall; . . .
Blushing she eyes the dizzy flood askance; . . .
Her blushing cheek, love-vows upon her lip,
Soon fades her cheek, her blushing beauties fly,
The blushing mien and downcast look;
Of her new office, blushing restlessly . . .
Feeding on sunshine—to the blushing girl . . .

Blustering. See Hollow-blustering.
Where leafy shades fence off the blustering gale,
Associates, and, unscared by blustering winds,
And if the blustering wind that drives the clouds
Tricks out her blustering powers, . . .

Boar. From which the tusky wild boar flies in fear;
Made room where wolf and boar were used to range?

Board. See Sign-board, Supper-board.
Of three ten summers dignify the board . . .
No board inscribed the needy to allure
Dried up, despairing, desolate, on board . . .
It was a rustic inn—the board was spread,
Is it not well with these? well both for bed and
board? . . .
His board with lawful joy, and bear . . .
But chiefly from above the board . . .
Pursues the Enthusiast to the social board, . . .

And hand reposing on the board in ruth
The Master of whose humble board . . .
A genial hearth, a hospitable board,
At his board by these surrounded,
Of three ten summers consecrate the board . . .
By clearer taper lit a cleaner board . . .
On board a ship then ready for the seas,
Set sail, was wrecked, and all on board was lost.
While round a vacant board the chiefs recline,
She spake and shed an offering on the board;
Oh, with what echoes on the board they fell!
Of the old grey stone, from her scant board, supplied,
And, hand in hand, danced round and round the
board; . . .
And round and round the board we danced again,
Leaving us at the board; awhile we lingered,
By Nature's gift so favoured. Upon a board
While on the board she spread our evening meal,
By which it had been bleached, o'erspread the
board; . . .
Of country 'squire; or at the staterial board
Of his own board, where sat his gentle Mate
Their was a hospitable board, and theirs
—Seven lusty Sons sate daily round the board
Spread on the never-empty board, and drink
Of unexpected pleasure.—Soon the board . . .
Upon the board he lays the sky-blue stone
So long unthanked) hast cheered a simple board . . .

Boards. From time to time, the solid boards, and Boast. Of any wonder Normandy, or all proud

France, can boast!" . . .
Which stands the universal empire's boast;
The happiest lovers Arcady might boast,
Object uncouth! and yet our boast,
France would have had her present Boast,
Hadst this to boast of; thou didst love
He, whose heaped waves confounded the proud boast
Heaven upon earth's an empty boast . . .
(Not Apennine can boast of fairer), hills
Still do our very children boast . . .
Our tainted nature's solitary boast;
"Slaves cannot breathe in England"—yet that
boast
Meet them half way." Vain boast! for These,
the more
Soon the relapsing penitent may boast
And boast that they alone are free
O, of all houses once the crowned boast!
Was the boast of the country for excellent cheer;
What steeds the car of Diomed could boast;
Not as our glory and our absolute boast,
Nor made unto myself a secret boast . . .
Such palms I boast not;—no I to me, who find,
Indifferent judges. "Spite of proudest boast,
—Such the too frequent tenour of his boast—
Nature (I but repeat your favourite boast)
Bishops, of milder Spanish breed, shall boast
Would More or Henry boast the general voice? . . .

Boasted. Tokens, once kept as boasted wealth, . . .
A crown for Hope—I dread the boasted lights . . .
Where now that boasted liberty? No welcome . . .

Boaster. I hate a boaster; but to thee . . .
A boaster that, when he is tried, fails, and is put to shame? . . .

Boastful. Boastful Idolatress of formal skill . . .
Beginning to mistrust their boastful guides,
Of France a boastful Tyrant hurled his threats;
Oh! shame! is this thy service boastful plume?
Boaste. Of Alfred boasts remote Jerusalem, . . .
Yes, shall the fine immunities she boasts . . .

Boat. See Steamboat.
Sounds from the water-side the hammered boat;
The boat her silent course pursues!
Each with its household boat beside the door;
The cries he uttered might have stopped the boat
In such clear water, that thy boat . . .
Our boat is safely anchored by the shore, . . .
Like travellers shouting for a boat . . .
Long is it as a barber's pole, or mast of little boat,
Until I have a little Boat, . . .
And now I have a little Boat, . . .
Fast through the clouds my Boat can sail;
Both for my little Boat and me!
Away we go, my Boat and I—
Up goes my Boat among the stars
Up goes my little Boat so bright!
"Shame on you!" cried my little Boat,
Within a living Boat to sit,
A Boat twin-sister of the crescent-moon!
Of flew the Boat—away she flees,
Her only pilot the soft breeze, the boat
In sailor's ship, or fisher's boat, . . .
A boat is ready to pursue;
Leapt, from his storm-vested boat, to land,
Jesu! bless our slender Boat,
Homeward in their rugged Boat, . . .
To chant, as glides the boat along, . . .
"My pearly Boat, a shining light,
One boat there was, but it will touch the shore
And thus from day to day my little boat . . .
A silver boat launched on a boundless flood;
To launch the boat; and with her blessing cheered,
Placed in the little boat, then o'er the deep
The talking boat that moves with pensive sound,
Each with his household boat beside the door,
A little boat tied to a willow tree
Of mountain-echoes did my boat move on;
And as I rose upon the stroke, my boat
I did not step into the well-known boat
Of a slow-moving boat, upon the breast
While from a boat others hung o'er the deep,
On stormy waters, tossed in a little boat . . .
To the lake's margin, where a boat lies moored
Free from obstruction; and the boat advanced
In twinkling lustre, ere the boat attained . . .

Boat-house. You chestnuts half the latticed boathouse hide, . . .
Before the boat-house peeping thro' the shade;
Boatman. But, lo! the boatman, overwaded, before
And where the boatman of the Western Isles . . .
Boatmen. Of the sly boatmen of Killyrany, Boat's. The boat's first motion—made with dashing oar; . . .

Boats. Come boats and ships that safely ride
To tend their silent boats and ringing wains,
When full five hundred boats in trim array,
Old Roman boats and figures thro' the shade, . . .

Bodily. See Feebly-bodily.
Even such a Mao my fancy bodied forth
For bodied forth before my eyes the cross-crowned but appeared;
Mere Mortals, bodied forth in vision still,
Bodied forth and evanescent,
Had bodied forth the ghostliness of things

Bodies. While feeding on their bodies. Would that Idonea
To give their bodies to the family mould, . . .
Of the dead bodies.—'Twas a day of shame
A vault where the bodies are buried upright!
Their warrant. Bodies fall by wild sword-law;
Our bodies feel, where'er they be,
When we had given our bodies to the wind,
Of many minds, of minds and bodies too;
Nor for their bodies would accept release;
Nor bodies crushed by unremitting toil;
Of heavenly bodies shining in their spheres.

Bodiless. Living or dead all things were bodiless,
Bodily. Than bodily weariness. While here we sit
And what are a few throes of bodily suffering
Even with the organs of his bodily eye,
His bodily frame had been from youth to age
His bodily frame had been from youth to age
Ours bodily life, some plead, that life the shrine
The bodily frame. That beauty is laid low
Would overspread my soul, that bodily eyes
It was no madness, for the bodily eye
Who through that bodily image hath diffused,
To look with bodily eyes, and be consoled."
Or saw, like other men, with bodily eyes, . . .

Bodily—continued.

When the bodily eye, in every stage of life
By bodily toil, labour exceeding far
To bodily sense exhibits, is the express
Perplexed the bodily sense. He had received
In bodily form.—But without further bidding
With bodily eyes, they are borne down by love
The bodily frame wasted from day to day;
Who, in the bodily image, in the mind,
That saps the individual's bodily frame,
When present, to the bodily sense; a haunt
Boding. A boding sound—for aught but sleep unfit!
Or boding Shade, or if the Maid
Not free from boding thoughts, a while Salute with boding note the rising moon
Bodings. From bodings, as might be, that hung upon his mind.
Bodings unsanctioned by the will
Body. A human body that in iron's swang,
The bending body of my active sire;
Bed under her lean body there was none,
Whose body near our cottage chanced to lie;
What do they mean? were this my single body
Both soul and body—'Tis too horrible!
The senseless body, and why not the mind?
All but the mutual mockeries of body,
And leave his body here, it were all one
Inanimate large as the body of man,
I tell you his hands and his body were cold—
Woman, I've lent my body to the service
His body is at rest: there was a plot,
From body pains and pains of soul thou needest no release,
Oh let my body die away!
Oh let my body die away!
Through his whole body something ran,
Her body—it grew better.
Her body still grew better.
Body, heart, and soul in union,
Forgetful of the body they sustained.—
Upon his back and body hangs
Thus leans, with haughty brow and body bent
Not an inch of his body is free from delight;
His body was bent double, feet and head
Himself he propped, limbs, body, and pale face,
And the whole body of the Man did seem
In body, and become a living soul:
Here is my body doomed to tread, this path,
Leaving the body on the grass.
Her body propped against his knee,
Will help to bring the body home."
Yet, round the body of that joyless Thing
Did with her body cover
His body he extended,
Ill health of body; and had pined
Head, harp, and body, split asunder,
His giant body o'er the steep rock's brink,
So, from the body of one gully deed,
Preyed upon body and mind—yet not the less
As o'er the insensate Body hung
Body and mind, from molestation freed,
But I in body will be there.
Bearing the body on a bier;
While in the Body lodged, her warm abode;
Ah, when the Body, round which in love we clung,
The shrouded Body to the Soul's command
Nor quits the Body when the Soul is freed,
His body, dwindled and awry,
Here stretch thy body at full length;
And industry of body and of mind;
Body and mind and soul; a thirst so keen
Humbling the body, to exalt the soul;
His Mother swooning by the body lay:
Enclosed his uncorrupted body sweet.—
Them who are whole in body and in mind,
And you guess that the more then his body
must stir.
That body dismissed from his care;
A body without life—
Was blowing on my body, felt within
That might have dried me up, body and soul.
Debasement undergone by body or mind,
A form and body; all things were to me
Alike to body and to mind: his port,
In his own body. 'Twas in truth an hour
One body, spreading wide as clouds in heaven.
Assumed the body and venerable name
Yea, the whole body of society
A twofold frame of body and of mind.
Followed his body to the grave. The event,
Have flowed as if my body were not such
Her body was subdued. In every act
His body is at rest, his soul in heaven."
Then, when the body, soon to be consigned
'His body is at rest, his soul in heaven.'
To have a body (this our vital frame
His stooping body tottered with wreaths of flowers
Body and mind in one captivity;
In the fair body of a leafy grove
Whether in soul, in body, or estate!
The mortal Body by her Infant's side."

Body—continued.

A generous spirit, and a body strong
The sick in body, or distress in mind;
The trunk and body of its marvellous strength,
Through the whole body, with a languid will
Been shown, alike to body and to mind."
Flung from the body of devouring fires,
Among them, with a body hale and stout,
For rest of body, perfect was the spot,
Mortal to body, and the heaven-born mid;
Body-bending. With the gross aims and body-bending toil.

Boislerous. The boislerous carman, in the miry road,
—Some little I've seen of blind boislerous works
But, courage! for around that boislerous brook
Beside the boislerous brook of Greenhead Ghyll.
Escaped from boislerous winds that rage without,
Now we are tired of boislerous joy,
Pure as the morning, fretful, boislerous, keen,
And tired of listening to the boislerous sea—
But thee may no such boislerous visitants
We ran a boislerous course; the year span round
Touching the heart amid the boislerous crew
Of boislerous merriment, and music's roar,
Boislerously. Of Cam sailed boislerously, and let

 Of hawk's wares—books, pictures, combs, and . . .
 pins— . . . 699 Prelude 8, 29
 As those of books, but more exalted far; . . . 703 Prelude 8, 283
 From books and what they picture and record, . . . 708 Prelude 8, 616
 But though untaught by thinking or by books . . . 712 Prelude 9, 198
 And fellowship with venerable books, . . . 713 Prelude 9, 236
 Of books and common life, it makes sure way . . . 714 Prelude 9, 336
 As books and common intercourse with life . . . 728 Prelude 11, 95
 Vague and unsound; and having brought the books . . . 741 Prelude 13, 71
 How books mislead us, seeking their reward . . . 743 Prelude 13, 208
 Nor uninformed by books, good books, though . . .
 few— . . . 743 Prelude 13, 244

 With books, maps, fossils, withered plants and . . .
 flowers, . . . 781 Excursion 2, 663
 With no incurious eye; and books are yours, . . . 809 Excursion 4, 564
 That, for the day's consumption, books may yield . . . 810 Excursion 4, 584
 With the ever-welcome company of books; . . . 823 Excursion 5, 57
 As books record, and even the careless mind . . . 834 Excursion 5, 797
 To books, and to the long-forsaken desk, . . . 840 Excursion 6, 149
 Those brighter images by books imprint . . . 848 Excursion 6, 701
 By books unsteady, by his pastoral care . . . 859 Excursion 7, 115

Books—continued.

That pressed upon his brother's house ; for books
(As books and haply votive altars vouch) . . .

Book-stalls. Than for the humble book-stalls in the streets, . . .

Boon. In barn uplighted ; and companions boon, . . .

With which he gave the boon—I see it now ! . . .

Kind Nature's gentlest boon ! . . .

Bright boon of pitying Heaven !—alas, . . .

And yet a boon I gave her, for the creature . . .

This precious boon ; and hlest a sad abode." . . .

That wretched boon, days lengthened by mistrust . . .

Whether this boon he granted us or not, . . .

We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon ! . . .

Is there no debt to pay, no boon to grant ? . . .

Not loth to thank each moment for its boon . . .

A poor old Dame will bless them for the boon : . . .

Ah ! that a boon could shed such rapturous joys ! . . .

Then might the passing Monk receive a boon . . .

Obtaining ampler boon, at every step, . . .

O'er man and beast a not unwelcome boon . . .

Announces to the thirsty fields a boon . . .

Rite to perform, or boon to ask ? . . .

Of mountain-quiet and boon nature's grace ; . . .

Transcendent Boon ! noblest that earthly King . . .

On the bare coast ; nor do they grudge the boon . . .

Whatever boon is granted or withheld, . . .

For the least boon that freedom can bestow ? . . .

Then, little Bird, this boon confer, . . .

For which I ask for guerdon but one boon, . . .

Of myriads and boon nature's lavish help ; . . .

And intellectual strength so rare a boon— . . .

To speak the word—with rapture ! Nature's boon, . . .

He gives it—the boon produce of a soil . . .

" Oh ! pang unthought of, as the precious boon . . .

For the least boon that pity can bestow. . . .

No mystery is here ! Here is no boon . . .

The boon is absolute ; surpassing grace . . .

Boons. His hat gives him vigour, with boons dropping . . .

in, . . .

But for some precious boons vouchsafed to thee, . . .

By casual boons and formal charities ; . . .

Of each recalling his peculiar boons, . . .

The laggard Rustic ; and repay with boons . . .

Boons inexhaustible ? Who, hurrying on . . .

Their little boons of animating thought . . .

Boor. Of boor or bughar, as they marched along . . .

Boorish. In air high-towering with a boorish pomp, . . .

Boors. Art thou the Peter of Norway Boors ? . . .

Boot. There is no need of boot or spur, . . .

Of goodness, next her Son, our soul's best hoot . . .

Bootes. Of Auster and Bootes, fifty years . . .

Booths. A Parliament of Monsters, Tents and . . .

Booths . . .

Booths are there none ; a stall or two is here ; . . .

While faction Blue from shops and booths . . .

Bootless. "What is good for a bootless henn?" . . .

"What is good for a bootless henn?" . . .

Boots. Alas ! what boots it ?—who can hide, . . .

What hoots the enquiry ?—Neither friend nor foe . . .

Alas ! what boots the long laborious quest . . .

"What boots," continued she, "to mourn ? . . .

How little boots that precedent of glory . . .

What boots the gain if Nature should lose more ? . . .

What boots the sculptured tomb ? And who can . . .

blame, . . .

Booty. Will be the Tinker's booty ; . . .

Border. Of their rich Spoil, ere they recross the . . .

Border, . . .

Through border wilds where naked Indians stray, . . .

Shall soon behold this border thickly set . . .

Renowned in Border story, . . .

Of the old minstrels and the border hardis,— . . .

Great Minstrel of the Border ! . . .

I bore her in my arms ; her looks won pity ; . . .

That bore us through the water— You returned . . .

And bore him high through yielding air my debt . . .

of love to pay, . . .

With other burthens than the erp it bore . . .

He bore the lasting name of " pious Elidure ! " . . .

What love I bore to thee, . . .

Turned upon her who bore him, she would stoop . . .

And the vain rank the pilgrims bore while yet on . . .

earth, . . .

Gave the baptismal name each Sister bore, . . .

What love they bore each other, . . .

"The good Lord Clifford" was the name he bore, . . .

Whom she to young Ambition bore, . . .

Whose countenance bore resemblance to the sun, . . .

Was the worst paog that sorrow ever bore, . . .

The music in my heart I bore, . . .

And bore it on his head, . . .

Of triumph, how the labouring Danube bore . . .

For him who bore the world ! . . .

They round his altar bore the horned God, . . .

But in his breast the mighty Poet bore . . .

But worthy of the name she bore . . .

A fairer than herself she bore, . . .

What aspect bore the Man who roved or fled, . . .

Ere the meek Saint, Columba, bore . . .

To guard the Standard which he bore, . . .

He bore a heart of timid frame ; . . .

Until the babe was born. When morning came, . . .
Of Julia's travail. When the babe was born, . . .
Go !—'tis a town where both of us were born ; . . .
An only Child, who had been born to them . . .
And that the old Man's heart seemed born again ? . . .
His youngest born did Andrew hold : . . .
And beauty born of murmuring sound . . .
Nay—if a child to her was born . . .
And if 'twas born alive or dead, . . .
And he perhaps, for aught we know, was born . . .
When the fatherless was born— . . .
" Last of the Three; though eldest born, . . .
And see the town where I was born ! . . .
And, ere that little child was born, . . .
Alas that ever he was born ! . . .

Born—continued.

Of mortal parents is the Hero born
Triumphal wrong, battle of battle born,
Nor pity idly born,
Announcing, ONE was born mankind to free;
From mortal change, aught that is born on earth
For action born, existing to be tried,
The ground where we were born and reared!
I am your son, your eldest born;
I, by the right of eldest born,
That he was horn of gentle blood;
That ever he was born, a glance of mind
That they were born for immortality.
Must Man, with labour born, awake to sorrow

Born to be lost in Derwent flowing near;
Born only to depart.
With weary feet by all of woman born)—
Since thou, blithe May, wert born,
Would that the little Flowers were born to live,
Born of Conceit, Power's blind Idolater

A creature born of time, that keeps one eye
That touchingly bespeaks thee born
Mindful of Him Who in the Orient born
Yea, to the stars, if they were born
And said, Alas! that ever I was born,
Which man is born to—sink, howe'er depressed,
"Will be no fruitless moment. I was born
Born deaf, and living deaf and dumb.
When Love was born of heavenly line,
They tell that your future Queen is born.
Beneath the sky, as if I had been horn
That dwell among the hills where I was horn.
Where he was born; the grassy churchyard hangs
And human nature seeming born again.
Pleased (though to hardship born, and compassed round
Upon the spot where she was horn and reared;
Upon the allegiance to which men are born—
As, of all visible natures, crown, though horn
Born in a land whose very name appeared
For, born in a poor district, and which yet
Hence Genius, horn to thrive by interchange
Among the hills of Athol he was born;
The twain within our happy cottage born,
And learning's solid dignity, though horn
That they were ever born to! In due time
Who to your dull society are horn,
Among her higher creatures horn and trained
Thus are they born, thus fostered, thus maintained;
"The other, horn in Britain's southern tract,
When that poor Child was born. Upon its face
"Though horn a younger brother, need was none
Which tells her that a living child is horn;
Of furze-clad commons; such are horn and reared
To Britons born and bred within the pale . . .
Thus would have lived, or never have been born.
Them who are born to serve her and obey;
On Albion's noble Race in freedom born,
And that the old man's heart seem'd horn again?
Untainted manners; horn among the hills,
A wreath she twines of blossoms lowly born—
Were Kings a free-horn work, a people's choice.

Borne. Sound of closed gate, across the water borne,
The crows rushed by in eddies, homeward borne.
"Borne to a hospital, I lay with brain
Borne gently to a bed, in death she lay;
I have borne my burthen to its destined end.
But had he strength to walk? I could have borne him . . .
It must be told, and borne. I am the man,
The cataract had borne him down
She saw him down the torrent borne;
On whose breast are thither borne
Which to an only brother he has borne
(Such it may seem) if I thy crown have borne,
But, surely, if severe afflictions borne
The gallant ship is borne;
Three leaps have borne him from this lofty brow
And, in their anguish, bear what other minds have borne!"
That she had borne a heavy yoke,
When I have borne in memory what has tamed
Of Jesus goes before, the child is borne
—Hours, Days, and Months, have borne them in the sight
Borne gaily o'er the sea,
Green boughs were borne, while, for the blast that shook
The Cross, in calm procession, borne aloft . . .
But many a benefit borne upon his breast
How patient y the weight of wrong is borne;
Borne by the Muse from rills in shepherds' ears
May yet to Arthur's court be borne
Here stood an Oak, that long had borne affixed
Alas! thought he, and have I borne
While to the prison they are borne,
And, with that rueful Banner borne
The mighty sorrow hath been borne,
Have long borne witness as the Scriptures teach?—

Borne—continued.

Than his who sees, borne forward by the Rhine,
Meed of some Roman chief—in triumph borne
Rightfully borne; for Nature gives thee flowers
A weight of awe, not easy to be borne,
A thousand years hath it borne that name,
Borne in their hands the lily and the palm
Up to the throne of God is borne
Strong as could then be borne. A Master meek
Had the House of Lucie born,
Thou tread; or sweep—borne on the maaaged steed—
Are safely borne, landed upon the beach,
The tide of things has borne him, he appears
FRANCESCO was the name the Youth had borne,
And frequent sights of what is to be borne!
Or clock, that hild against the wanderer horn,
Slow swells the service o'er the water born,
That the weight can no longer be borne,
Pelucid water for the hands is borne,
Within my mind, should e'er have borne a part,
Else sooner ended, I have borne in mind
But as the ancient Prophets, borne aloft
By sorrow laid asleep; or borne away,
Is raised from the church-aisle, and forward borne
Ill borne in earlier life; but his was now
And from the cottage hath been borne to-day.
Your heart had borne a pitiable share
With hotly eyes, they are borne down by love
He heard, borne on the wind, the articulate voice
And sufferings meekly borne—1, for my part,
But worse affliction must be borne—far worse;
These titles emperors and chiefs have borne,
Into its graveyard will ere long he borne
The Knight arrived, with spear and shield, and horne
Borne by you clustering cottages, that sprang
With them I think I could have borne . . .
And was borne headloog by the roaring flood.
Thy kindred and thy friends such travall borne . . .

Borrow. From Scripture she a name did borrow;
Seemed from each other a faint warmth to borrow.
And loved to borrow, ornaeet;
A solace she might borrow . . .
His meacs are run out,—he must heg, or must borrow.

Borrowdale. Are those fraternal Four of Borrowdale, Borrowed. In the street that from Oxford hath borrowed its name.
The tone of voice which wedded borrowed words
Upon a living staff, with borrowed sight.
The vanquished Whig, under a borrowed name,
Borrowing. While, borrowing helps where'er he may,
From blended colours also borrowing help,
And borrowing more their spirit, and their shape
From blended colours also borrowing help.
Bosoms. Benevolence is mild; nor borrowings help,
Bosom. No tears can chill them, and no bosom warms,
Gleams that upon the lake's still bosom fall;
Triumphant on the bosom of the storm,
His bosom heaves, his Spirit towers amain,
Nor pain nor pity in my bosom raised.
Fill your lap and fill your bosom;
Upon the bosom of a placid lake,
Below him, in the bosom of the deep,
Into thy bosom we again shall creep.
And one across the bosom lies—
Though at my bosom nursed; this woeful gain
Find place within his bosom.—Once again
Upon the Mother's bosom; resting thus
In Robin's bosom, as a chosen cell.
Thrills not the less the bosom of the plain:
A bosom to the suo endeared?
In the bosom of the cliff.
Ruffles the bosom of this leafy glen.
Her virgin bosom swell;
Her bosom heaves and spreads, her stature grows;
Might in the universal bosom reign,
A deep delight the bosom thrills,
Yet still the bosom beating high.
FLOWER OF THE WINDS, beneath her bosom worn—
And in the bosom of the firmament
Lodged in the bosom of eternal things?
Happy the feeling from the bosom thrown
Of his full bosom, gladsome Piety!
Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the year;
This Sea that bares her bosom to the moon;
Reflected in my bosom all too late!
On England's bosom; yet well pleased to rest,
Into whose bosom earth's best treasures flow,
Along the bosom of this favoured Nation,
But in the bosom, with devout respect
And quits the bosom of the deep
Appended to his bosom, and lips closed
The bosom half, and half concealed,
Spreading his bosom under Kentish dowos,
Yet still the female bosom lent,
Till in the bosom of our rustic Cell
That swells the bosom of our passag sail!
Mother! whose virgin bosom was uacrost . . .

Bound. See Earth-bound, Errand-bound, Foot-bound, Home-bound, Iron-bound.

And pours a deeper blue to Æther's bound ;
That Silence, once in deathlike fetters bound,
 To flat-roofed towns, that touch the water's bound,
 While the pale moon moves near him, on the bound
 Leaps with a bound of graceful hardihood ;
 Stand motionless, to awful silence bound :
 The bound of all his vanity, to deck,
 There, to the porch, belike with jasmine bound Save cornfields stretched and stretching without bound ;
 All, all was cheerless to the horizon's bound ;
 Cold stony horror all her senses bound.
 To break my dream the vessel reached its bound ;
 On shipboard, bound till peace or death should set him free.
 Have I lived many days—my sleep was bound
 Bound each to each by natural piety.
 Of that magnificent temple which doth bound
 I to the Muses have been bound
 Of which I speak, the Shepherd had been bound
 To leave me, Luke : thou hast been bound to me
 We see not nor suspect a bound,
 Of the Alps the Chamois bound,
 Bound himself, and then unbound ;
 That Mother, whose spirit in fetters is bound,
 But plain it is the Thorn is bound
 Saw, at a long-drawn gallery's dusky bound,
 Potent was the spell that bound thee
 To Time's first step across the bound
 Aerial, upon due migration bound
 Have been fast bound, a begging debtor ;—
 His head is with a halter bound ;
 In his last sleep securely bound ;
 She to the Meeting-house was bound
 In sundry moods, 'twas pastime to be bound
 To trust a Poet in still musings bound.
 Bound to thy service with unceasing care,
 Is heard ; to grave demeanour all are bound ;
 Of something without place or bound ;
 And in the wilderness were bound
 And o'er the eternal snows, like Echo, bound ;
 Who to their Country's cause have bound a life
 ceased

Whether for London bound—to trill
 Snows, torrents ;—to the region's utmost bound,
 But here am I fast bound ; and let it pass,
 That bound it to its native earth—poised high Bound him, nor, since he raised yon House, have ceased

Bound by indissoluble ties to thee
 Her glistening tresses bound, yet light and free
 Have moved in order, to each other bound
 Beneath the arch with ivy bound,
 To a lingering motion bound
 Bound on some errand of delight
 Upon a prospect without bound
 So to the Churchyard they are bound,
 Fast bound for Limbo Lake. And yet not choice
 Had bound the flowers I wore, with faithful tie :
 Nine beats distinctly to each other bound .
 And see to what fair countries ye are bound !
 Who, to that service bound by venial fees,
 Beside the torrent dwelling—bound
 Shall bound across THE STRID ?
 Or, bound by oaths, come forth to tread earth's floor
 Bound in a dark abominable pit,
 Whose free embraces we were bound to seek,

On which he stood, by spells unnatural bound,

Save hope that we, yet bound to Earth, may share
 Beautiful, yet in mournful durance bound.
 Beneath yon eastern ridge, the craggy bound,
 That on the summit whither thou art bound,
 And still he lay as if he had been bound.
 All that he will have bound, or have unbound.
 My Lady dear, first bound me captive-wise.
 And while the young lambs bound
 And let the young Lambs bound
 And pouring deeper blue to Æther's bound ;
 A few short steps were the chain that bound
 Within this churchyard bound.
 Are high rewards ; but bound they Nature's claim
 The horizon's bound, a huge peak, black and huge,
 Sly subterfuge, if the adventure's bound
 Till with a sudden bound of smart reproach,
 Bound to the distant Alps. A hardy slight
 Such willing note, as, on some errand bound
 Among mankind he was in service bound,
 He, on that ministry already bound,
 By the first Francis wood, and bound to him
 Bound to the fierce Metropolis. From his throne
 Thoughts without bound, magnificent designs,
 The wished-for port to which my course was bound.
 " That righteous cause (such power hath freedom)
 bound,
 His course, on errands bound, to other vales,
 Upon the region whither we are bound,
 Through the long year in constant quiet bound,

Bound—continued.

 Reared for thy presence : therefore am I bound
 Though bound to earth by ties of pity and love,
 Bound—by vexation, and regret, and scorn,
 The pair, whose infant she was bound to nurse,
 To that still region whither all are bound.
 Like Youths released from labour, and yet bound
 And, to whole nations bound in servile straits,
 I sometimes entertain, that haply bound
 Bound by his vow to labour for redress
 Versed in the characters of men ; and bound,
 High peaks, that bound the vale where now we are.
 Bound to establish new communities
 Attained his western bound ; but rays of light—
 Our youthful Voyagers bound fast her prow,
 Hence deified as sisters they were bound
 Grateful is Sleep ; my life in stone bound fast
 Within the bound of this high concave ; here
 Must honour still to Lonsdale's tail be bound ?
 Boundaries, Assist me, God, their boundaries to know,
 With many boundaries, as the astronomer
 Deem that our puny boundaries are things
 Which—to the boundaries of space and time,
Boundary. In walks whose boundary is the lost One's grave,
 The horizon's utmost boundary ; far above
 Beyond the boundary line of some hill-shadow,
 Supplied a boundary less abrupt and close ;
 Some boundary, which his followers may not cross
 " A favourite boundary to their lengthened walks
 The boundary lost, the line invisible
 Look back till we had reached the boundary . . .

Bounded. Of lambs that bounded through the glade,
 Bounded before him ;—but the unweeting Child
 I bounded o'er the mountains, by the sides
 And wild deer bounded through the forest glade,
 No perfect cure grows on that bounded field.
 I bounded down the hill shouting amain
 With thoughts and wishes bounded to this world,
 Bounded :—triumphant entry this for him !

Bounden. I feel myself much bounden to you, Oswald ;

Bounding. See Swift-bounding.
 Like-roe-hucks they went bounding o'er the hills ;
 The lambs from rock to rock were bounding ;
 Bounding through branches interlaced,
 Bounding before me, yet a stripling youth—
 Well might a stranger look with bounding heart
Boundless. Their blossoms, through a boundless range
 For fearless virtue bringeth boundless gain.
 In boundless prodigality ;
 When some great change gives boundless scope
 As boundless patience only could endure ?
 Take root again, a boundless canopy .
 The boundless plain of waters seems to lie—
 Of boundless suffrage, at whose sage behest
 Whate'er the difference, boundless is the gain.
 A silver boat launched on a boundless flood ;
 Into the boundless sea, and rather makes
 I saw before me stretched a boundless plain
 Boundless, or guide into eternity.
 And self-withdrawn into a boundless depth,
 And whose soft gloom, and boundless depth, might tempt
 As our enjoyments, boundless.—From those heights
 And the defence that lies in boundless love
 Spread like a sea, in boundless solitude . . .

Bounds. See Mountain-bounds.
 Her rocky sheepwalks, and her woodland bounds ;
 Portentous through her old woods' trackless bounds,
 And sometimes, as from rock to rock she bounds,
 From age to age, throughout his lonely bounds
 And higher far than lies within earth's bounds :
 Through the bounds which many a star
 Of Walter's forefathers o'erflowed the bounds
 These narrow bounds contain our private store
 Who, being loved, in love no bounds dost know,
 A pregnant dream, within whose shadowy bounds
 Are but three bounds—and look, Sir, at this last—
 " Now Who is he that bounds with joy
 Renewed throughout the bounds of earth or ocean,
 Who oftentimes within those narrow bounds
 Is conscious of her want ; through England's
 bounds,
 Until they reach the bounds by Heaven assigned,"
 And aid my verse, content with local bounds
 Bounds calm and clear the chaos still and hoar ;
 Six thousand years amid his lonely bounds
 Starved in those narrow bounds : but not the soul
 Single and of determined bounds ; and hence
 To meet the war upon her frontier bounds.
 And of the bounds which sever it from good,
 He broke from his contracted bounds, repaired
 And in the origin and bounds of power
 Hath placed beyond these penetrable bounds,
 Will, to her efforts, tolerate no bounds
 And our regards confining within bounds
 Or, to the garden's narrow bounds, confined.
 That lies beyond life's ordinary bounds,
 Europe, through all her habitable bounds,

Bounds—continued.

Until they reach the bounds by Heaven assigned.
 Precludes, and charity beyond the bounds
 These narrow bounds, and think of nothing more,
 Bounds to be leapt, darkness to be explored,

Bounteous. With bounteous hand beneath a cottage-roof
 —Twelve hours, twelve bounteous hours are gone, while I

Vouchsafes her lessons, bounteous Nymph
 O bounteous Heaven! sigs true as dove and bough
 Heaven's bounteous love through me is spread
 This high repute, with bounteous Nature's aid,
 Where simple art with bounteous nature vied,

A bounteous help in days of yore,
 Not to withhold his bounteous aid, Sebeto
 Shower with a bounteous hand on Thee and Thine.
 Thanks to the bounteous Giver of all good!—
 And find a thousand bounteous images
 His bounteous gift! or saw him toward the deep
 No—they sank into me, the bounteous gift
 And mellow Autumn, charged with bounteous fruit,
Bounteously. Was nothing, scarcely can be aught, yet 'twas bounteously bestowed,

Bounties. For the rich bounties of constraint;
 That Host, which rendered all your bounties vain!
 For all his bounties upon man bestowed:
 Amid the bounties of the year, the peace

Bountiful. Bountiful Son of Earth! when we are gone

There dwelt the gay, the bountiful, the bold;
 How just, how bountiful, the hand of Heaven.
 How bountiful these elements—compared
 "How bountiful is Nature! he shall find
 "Soul-cheering Light, most bountiful of things!
 Is bountiful—go wheresoe'er they may;
 Have been to me more bountiful than hope,

Bounty. Trusted my life to what chance bounty yields,

Of its own bounty, or my need,
 On me such bounty Summer pours,
 And bounty never yields so much but it seems to do her wrong?

With bounty more and more enlarged
 O bounty without measure! while the grace
 Not with God's bounty, Nature's love, to vie,

And, if thy bounty fail, the forest pants;
 Their utmost bounty on thy head:
 And shall his bounty be dispensed in vain,
 And for thy bounty wert not unadored
 Where everlasting Bounty dwells?
 Of bounty infinite. Between Powers that aim
 Fair Trees, your bounty run to waste!
 With its first bounty. Wandering through the west,
 Pours forth his bounty, like the day doth cheer,
 God's goodness—measuring bounty as it may;
 God's bounty, soon forgotten; or indeed,

Off-times makes its bounty known
 "Such bounty is no gift of chance,"
 And bounty, lowliness, and courtesy,
 Nor for his bounty to so many worlds—
 And sky, whose beauty and bounty are expressed
 As mize was through the bounty of a grand
 To a luxuriant bounty!—As our steps
 Thy bounty caused to flourish deathless flowers,
 Bounty and government, that filled their hearts
 But is that bounty absolute?—His gifts,
 Her annual bounty, sparingly dealt forth
 Was given, the crowning bounty of the whole;
 Or bounty tires—and every face, that smiled
 —Father of good! this prayer in bounty grant,
 Thy bounty stints, nor can thy heauty mar,

Bounty's. Firm Independence, Bounty's rightful sire;

Bourn. (Sole hound, sole wish, sole object of my way;
 And peeps the far-off spire, his evening bourn!
 Thy daring in a vapour bourn,
 Its warfare's bourn, its travel's belt!

Bourne. To Como's steeps—his happy bourne!
 With rival oars; and the selected bourne
 The self-same bourne. And for this cause to thee

Bout. When every whirling bout is o'er—

Bow. They bow to, calling the idol, Demonstration.
 Straight as an arrow from the bow;
 Might bow to as their Lord. What character,
 To bow to some transforming power,
 To whom all human-kind shall bow;
 Lay couched; on him or his dread bow unbent

The Indian's bow, his arrows keen,
 We bow our heads before Thee, and we laud
 Through ice-built arches radiant as heaven's bow;
 That make the Patriot-spirit bow her head
 And all the people bow their heads, like reeds
 The image of its perfect bow.
 Opinion bow before the naked sense
 If to expedience principle must bow;
 When in the antique age of how and spear

Bow—continued.

To bow his forehead in the courts of kings,
 As fades the chequer'd bow that paints the sky.
 The servile million bow;
 Of use and custom to bow down the soul
 Bow to the watery element, adored
 Not equipp'd with bow and quiver
 And take up my Uncle's bow.

Bow-bent. Bow-bent, his eyes for ever on the ground,
Bowed. See Low-bowed.

Bowed meekly in submissive fear, before the Lord
 of All;
 Not lifting yet the head that evening bowed;
 The sullen Spectre to her purpose bowed,
 Hell to the lyre bowed low; the upper arch
 The craven few who bowed the head
 If Kingship bowed its head to Commonwealth—
 In many a midnight vision bowed
 Your feeble spirits! Greece her head hath bowed,
 Go—and with foreheads meekly bowed
 Now, while his bright-haired front he bowed,
 How, like a Roman, Sidney bowed his head,
 When each pale brow to dread hosannas bowed
 Her landing hailed, how touchingly she bowed!
 To be sustained; and Mortals bowed
 Worse than the Dragon that bowed low his crest,
 Those immaterial agents bowed their heads
 Yet in the deepest passion, I bowed low
 Her temper changed, and bowed to other laws
 Unheard, the savage nations bowed the head
 And bowed to many a major-domo

Bowels. Spin motives out of their own bowels, Lacy!
 Out of the bowels of those very schemes
 Upon his touch. The bowels of the earth

Bower. See Olive-bower, Orange-bower.

Yon isle conceals their home, their hut-like bower;
 Host of his welcome inn, the noon-tide bower,
 With its dark arms to form a circling bower,
 Make your bed, or make your bower;
 Each within its leafy bower;
 We rested in the garden bower;
 And she will prize the Bower, this Indian shed,
 Where apple-trees in blossom made a bower,
 And love the strawberry in its bower;
 I'll build an Indian bower; I know
 A fairer bower was never seen.
 And all the year the bower is green.
 To come and slumber in your bower;
 And to her own green bower the breeze
 A hundred times, by rock or bower,
 While in her lonely bower she tries
 Who first, weighed down by scorn, in some lone bower

Perhaps it was a hower beneath whose leaves
 Of hazels, and the green and mossy bower,
 Ere from the mutilated bower I turned
 In earth and heaven, in glade and bower,
 187 Three years* 10
 Had built a bower upon the green,
 We will make merry in that pleasant bower.
 Made merriment within that pleasant bower.
 These were the bower; and here a mansion stood,
 In woodbine bower or birchen grove,
 Nor Sea-nymph glistening from her coral bower;
 Will to composure lead—or make thee blithe as bird
 in bower.

In sylvan bower, or haunted hall?
 Owns not a sylvan bower; or gorgeous cell
 On the bare rock, or through a leafy bower
 Or fish in stream, or bird in bower,
 Yon cottage seems a bower of bliss,
 Fireside, the heroic wealth of hall and bower,
 The student's bower for gold, some fears unnamed
 Through the green vales and through the herds-man's bower—

Heard from the depths of its aerial bower—
 Of birds, in leafy bower,
 Of a good wish sent after thee; from hower
 To bower as green, from sky to sky as clear,
 When toward the altar from her bower
 While the Monks prayed in Maiden's Bower
 And higher still, above the hower
 To live and die in a shady bower,
 How soothed, when in thick bower enclosed,
 For recompense—their own perennial bower.
 And Chastity finds many a sheltering bower.
 Rest smooths the way for sleep; in field and bower
 Rising from what may once have been a lady's bower;

And to a holly bower;
 Through primrose tufts, in that green bower,
 A doleful hower for penitential song,

Is masked, "if house it be or bower,"
 Yon tuft conceals your home, your cottage how'r
 To mark some sheltering bower or sunny nook,
 Of gowned students, quitted hall and bower,
 Wafted, at intervals, from many a bower
 Birds in the bower, and lambs in the green field,
 Far as it carries thee. In some green bower,
 Upon the lips of men in hall or bower;
Bowers. No id with piteous outcry thrill thy bowers;

 For the boy loved the life which we lead here; . . 100 Brothers 296
 Noisy he was, and game as a boy; 108 Indulgence 47
 And tottering spirit. And full off the Boy, . . . 118 Maternal Grief 49
 Or art can fashion, shall you deck our boy, . . . 126 V. and J. 201
 Him whom you love, your Idiot Boy? 126 Idiot Boy 11
 Him whom she loves, her Idiot Boy 126 Idiot Boy 41
 The Boy, who is her best delight 126 Idiot Boy 53
 On which her Idiot Boy must ride, 126 Idiot Boy 70
 Oh! then for the poor Idiot Boy! 127 Idiot Boy 73
 The silence of her Idiot Boy, 127 Idiot Boy 92
 What speedy help her Boy will bring, 127 Idiot Boy 124
 And I have lost my poor dear Boy, 129 Idiot Boy 255
 Oh carry back my Idiot Boy! 129 Idiot Boy 300
 And cannot find her Idiot Boy. 130 Idiot Boy 361
 Him whom she loves, her Idiot Boy. 130 Idiot Boy 366
 He whom you love, your Idiot Boy. 130 Idiot Boy 371
 And fast she holds her Idiot Boy. 130 Idiot Boy 376
 To hear again her Idiot Boy. 130 Idiot Boy 381
 Him whom she loves, her Idiot Boy; 130 Idiot Boy 388
 The Pony, Betty, and her Boy, 130 Idiot Boy 407
 And hence this Tale, while I was yet a Boy . . . 131 Michael 27
 And in a later time, ere yet the Boy 131 Michael 159
 And when by Heaven's good grace the boy grew up 134 Michael 177
 And gave it to the Boy; wherewith equip . . . 134 Michael 184
 Were dearer now? that from the Boy there came 134 Michael 200
 Thus in his Father's sight the Boy grew up : . . 134 Michael 204
 Who, out of many, chose the trusty boy 135 Michael 265
 If he could go, the Boy should go to-night." . . . 135 Michael 282
 His utmost for the welfare of the Boy; 136 Michael 309
 Lack any pleasure which a boy can know." . . . 136 Michael 356
 Nay, Boy, be of good hope;—we both may live 137 Michael 388
 Before I knew thy face,—Heaven bless thee, Boy! 137 Michael 396
 Ere the night fell,—with morrow's dawn the Boy 137 Michael 425
 Of Luke and his well-doing; and the Boy 138 Michael 432
 I waked, and saw my little boy, 144 Her Eyes 27
 My little boy of flesh and blood; 144 Her Eyes 28
 "Oh! love me, love me, little boy! 145 Her Eyes 41
 "Then do not fear, my boy! for thee 145 Her Eyes 51
 If his sweet boy he could forsake, 145 Her Eyes 75
 'I'll teach my boy the sweetest things : 145 Her Eyes 81
 The shadow of a Danish Boy. 165 Danish Boy 11

Boy—continued.

The Danish Boy walks here alone 165 Danish Boy 21
 —They hear the Danish Boy, 166 Danish Boy 42
 The lovely Danish Boy is blest 166 Danish Boy 49
 Like a dead Boy he is serene. 166 Danish Boy 55
 Concealed the persecuted boy, 180 Waggoner 4. 49
 The one-pennied Boy has his penny to spare. 188 Music 28
 —While he was yet a boy, 192 Ruth 33
 Or heard them not, so happy as a boy 195 Resolution 18
 I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous Boy, 195 Resolution 43
 He had no follower, dog, nor man, nor boy : 201 Hart-leap 34
 The Boy must part from Mosedale's groves, 204 Brougham 99
 Inflamed by thee, the blooming Boy 216 Enterprise 59
 There, healthy as a shepherd boy, 218 Young Lady 7
 An image, too, of that sweet Boy, 232 Jac. Fam. 13
 As hath this little orphan Boy, 249 P. B. 1109
 Have romped enough, my little Boy ! 295 Highland Boy 2
 A poor blind Highland Boy 295 Highland Boy 10
 A Highland Boy !—why call him so ? 295 Highland Boy 11
 For God took pity on the Boy, 295 Highland Boy 23
 Than did the poor blind Boy, 295 Highland Boy 45
 The blind Boy always had his share : 295 Highland Boy 72
 And to the Boy they all were known— 296 Highland Boy 114
 And this the little blind Boy knew ; 296 Highland Boy 126
 An English Boy, O thought of bliss ! 296 Highland Boy 129
 Our Highland Boy oft visited 296 Highland Boy 136
 She saw her poor blind Boy, 296 Highland Boy 165
 But for the child, the sightless Boy, 296 Highland Boy 166
 They follow the blind Boy, 297 Highland Boy 185
 And touches the blind Boy, 297 Highland Boy 235
 The perilous Deep, the Boy was saved ; 339 Tell 21

Brain—continued.

Is heart as dull in brain—while pacing ground . . . 356
 No heart had she, no busy brain ; . . . 370
 His brain will burn, his stout heart split asunder . . . 372
 Of the world's flatteries if the brain be full, . . . 394
 From his distracted brain was cast, . . . 406
 To stay the precious waste. Through every brain . . . 433
 To fiercer mood the frenzy-stricken brain, . . . 459
 And doubts and scruples seldom teased the brain, . . . 468
 Though brain would swim, and eyes grow dim, . . . 478
 That spectacle, for many days, my brain . . . 638
 Depicted on the brain, and to the eye . . . 641
 And gratitude grew dizzy in a brain . . . 653
 Oo men suspected to be crazed in brain. . . . 660
 When Wisdom, like the Goddess from Jove's brain, . . . 695
 Labouring, a brain confounded, and a sense, . . . 724
 No composition of the brain, but man . . . 741
 Upon his brain ; and on their pictured lines . . . 758
 From my good Host, that being crazed in brain . . . 839
 Through fancy's heat redounding in the brain, . . . 863

Brains. The least of which would beat out a man's brains ;

And all particulars that dull brains require . . . 56
 That Benjamin, with clouded brains, . . . 58
Braka. See Fern-brake, Forest-brake, Furza-brake.
 A voice of uttermost joy brake out : . . . 403
 I followed on from brake to bush ; . . . 79
 In bush and brake, in black and green ; . . . 128
 He trudged along through copse and brake . . . 240
 Close by a brake of flowering furze . . . 246
 And startled only by the rustling brake, . . . 262
 Intent on gathering wool from hedge and brake . . . 280
 Dwarf willows gilding, and by ferny brake. . . . 377
 The White Doe, in the hawthorn brake ; . . . 405
 Retreated towards a brake of thorn, . . . 412
 A stirring in a brake of fern ; . . . 491
 Seven days she lurked in brake and field, . . . 542
 Good Cuckoo, seek some other bush or brake, . . . 558
 Fixed in the centre of a prickly brake, . . . 835

Brakes. At thorns, and brakes, and brambles,—and in truth

That in wild Arden's brakes was ever heard, . . . 523

Bramble. Deep in its tomb—the bramble crept . . . 390
 The gadding bramble hang her purple fruit ; . . . 433
 Thy fragments to the bramble and the rose ; . . . 549

Bramble-leaf. A bramble-leaf or blade of grass. . . . 244
Brambles. At thorns, and brakes, and brambles,—and in truth

To couch in this thicket of brambles alone, . . . 185
 'Mid thorns and brambles ; or a bird that breaks . . . 340
Bran. Upon thy margin, roaring Bran — . . . 301
Brancepeth. Of Brancepeth look in doubt and fear, . . . 402
 And, mixed with these, to Brancepeth came . . . 403

Branch. And dragged to earth both branch and hough, with crash . . . 185
 Grasping a hawthorn branch in hand, . . . 243
 Perched on an olive branch, and heard her cooing . . . 360
 Godlike, a humble branch of the divine, . . . 509
 The trunk and every master branch were green . . . 676
 And this most rotten branch of human shame, . . . 722
 The veins that branch through every frame of life, . . . 724
 No natural branch ; despondency far less ; . . . 803

Branches. Among the branches of the leafless trees ; . . . 80
 While thick above the rill the branches close, . . . 3
 And cracked the branches, and strewn them about ; . . . 80
 There was he, where of branches rent and withered . . . 91
 and decayed,

Like branches when strong winds the trees annoy . . . 108
 Their branches in mid air, . . . 109
 Beneath the branches—of itself had made . . . 149
 My branches are so fresh and gay . . . 156
 But in the branches of the oak . . . 157
 Under the branches of the tree : . . . 162
 In spikes, in branches, and in stars, . . . 198
 Among thy branches safe he lay, . . . 204
 He lay beneath the branches high, . . . 239
 Which should extend thy branches on the ground, . . . 319
 Aloft, where pines their branches toss ! . . . 337
 Or the Indian tree whose branches downward bent, . . . 383
 Among its withering topmost branches mixed, . . . 393
 The root sincere, the branches bold to strive . . . 425
 (Blighted or scathed tho' many branches be, . . . 431
 And proudly did its branches wave ; . . . 495
 With branches intertwined, . . . 543
 Bonding through branches interlaced, . . . 544
 And when its potent branches, wide outthrown, . . . 546
 And see the budding leaves the branches throng, . . . 557
 That, round his trunk and branches, might have clung . . . 585
 To where, while thick above the branches close, . . . 592
 Stand like an oak whose stag-horn branches start . . . 695
 Upon my naked branches :—lively thoughts . . . 793

Branching. These lofty pillars, spread that branching roof . . . 451
 Of pillars, branching off from year to year, . . . 546
Branchy. And all its branchy vales, and all that lurks . . . 350
Brand. Bare to the sky, with threatening brand, . . . 301
 Uplifting toward high Heaven her fiery brand, . . . 420
 Michael, and thou, St. George, whose flaming brand . . . 434

Brandishad. Brandished his crutch against the mountain tops ; . . . 180

Brandishas. Which yet he brandishes for future war, . . . 103
Brass. Here's neither head nor foot-stone, plate of brass, . . . 98
 By plate of monumental brass . . . 817
 And shining effigies of brass inlaid . . . 425
Bravado. Or with bravado insolent and hard, . . . 504
Brava. Anon, appears a brave, a gorgeous show . . . 6
 Poison, which not a frame of steel can brave, . . . 20
 Rejoice, brave Land, though pride's perverted ire . . . 22
 I long for news of our brave Comrades ; Lacy . . . 50
 Are brave ; Clifford is brave ; and that old Man . . . 54
 Is brave. To Clifford's arms he would have led . . . 54
 Shall be proclaimed : brave Men, they all shall . . . 55 hear it.

Let me speak of this brave Child . . . 93
 By brave Corineus aided, he subdued, . . . 102
 With two brave sheep-dogs tried in many a storm, . . . 132
 Hardships for the brave encountered . . . 140
 Across the wave, a Rover brave . . . 161
 His brave spirit with the war in . . . 163
 Heaped over brave King Dunmail's bones, . . . 176
 On which brave Admiral Nelson stood— . . . 178
 Wert kind as resolute, and good as brave ; . . . 210
 Or through the clouds, and brave the light . . . 216
 The prompt, the brave, . . . 285
 Be independent, generous, brave ; . . . 287
 She has her brave Rob Roy ! . . . 291
 In honour of that Hero brave ! . . . 291
 Yet was Rob Roy as wise as brave ; . . . 291
 Say, then, that he was wise as brave ; . . . 291
 I would not wrong thee, Champion brave ! . . . 292
 Strength to the brave, and Power, and Deity ; . . . 306
 Even rich men, brave by nature, taint the air . . . 308
 And hear you shouting forth your brave intent. . . . 309
 Sons of the brave who fought at Marathon, . . . 312
 Whose factions lead astray the wise and brave— . . . 314
 By Palaofo, and many a brave compeer, . . . 315
 Brave Schill ! by death delivered, take thy flight . . . 317
 Methinks that we shall hail thee, Champion brave, . . . 318
 Where all the brave lie dead. But, when of bands . . . 318
 Which a brave People into light can bring . . . 324
 Fit garlands for the brave, . . . 323
 O murdered Prince ! meek, loyal, pious, brave ! . . . 325
 Fuentes once harboured the good and the brave, . . . 340
 The beautiful, the brave, the holy, and the just ! . . . 351
 By hands of men, humble as brave, who fought ! . . . 355
 From death the memory of the good and brave . . . 367
 Yet, to the loyal and the brave, who lie . . . 383
 While we, the brave, the mighty, and the wise, . . . 384
 Immured in Bothwell's towers, at times the Brave . . . 392
 Like the brave Lion slain in her defence. . . . 395
 He spake, and eight brave sons straightway . . . 400
 Of this brave man, when he shall see . . . 401
 —Brave Earls ! to whose heroic veins . . . 401
 Would breed us thousands brave as they." . . . 405
 —The noble Francis—wise as brave, . . . 408
 Swayed the brave man to his wrong, . . . 411
 And where full many a brave tree stood, . . . 413
 And sculptured Forms of Warriors brave : . . . 417
 Rise !—they have risen : of brave Anearin ask . . . 421
 When she would tell how Brave, and Good, and . . . 440
 Wise,

Children of Summer ! Ye fresh Flowers that brave . . . 474
 A loving creature she, and brave ! . . . 490
 More brave for this, that he hath much to love :— . . . 494
 Dive, at thy choice, or brave the freshening gale ! . . . 527
 'Oh ! can a brave Man wish to take . . . 535
 Pious and pure, modest yet so brave, . . . 541
 "Silence !" the brave Commander cried ; . . . 579
 A meek man and a brave ! . . . 580
 The meek, the brave, the good, was gone ; . . . 580
 Strong poison not a form of steel can brave . . . 613
 The seats of learning brave the distant skies. . . . 619
 Brave hearts ! to shameful flight. It was a grief,— . . . 722
 Upon our brave Progenitors, who rose . . . 815
 Near this brave Knight his Father lay entombed, . . . 825
 With his brave sword endeavoured to prevent . . . 844
 For, like brave Philip Sidney, . . . S.3.

Than that brave vessel, though she sailed so far ; . . . S.3.
 And the brave Tyddies meet. . . . S.3.
 Of two brave vessels matched in deadly fight, . . . K.B.
 A Pym's brave heart, or stir a Hampden's arm ? . . . L.R.

Braved. Whose fierce wrath the Girl had braved ; . . . 93
 Discord in hearts of men till they have braved . . . 105
 Thus, after he had fondly braved . . . 297
 But Francis, soon as he had braved . . . 410
Bravely. For them who bravely stood unhurt, or bled . . . 328
 'Gone are they, bravely, though misled ; . . . 401
 And there stood bravely, though forlorn, . . . 412
 As bravely as the foe was keenly sought. . . . 458
 Sister of Mercy, bravely hast thou won . . . K.B.
 Brave. When he had risen alone ! No braver Youth . . . 869
Bravery. With all its bravery on ; in times . . . 294
 Of all this outside bravery, within, . . . 775
Braves. And, as a Coracle that braves . . . 296
 The HELVETIAN Girl—who daily braves, . . . 344
 Or like the invincible Rock itself that braves, . . . 540

Braves—continued.

But did not fall; for Virtue braves all shocks,
 I love to see the look with which it braves,
Bravest. "Supreme of Heroes—bravest, noblest, best!
 The bravest traveller in balloon,
 Were crowded with the bravest youth of France, Braving. Against his conscience rose in arms, and braving
Brawl. Filled with its fray or brawl, how eagerly Brawling. And o'er the brawling beds of unbridged streams.
Brawls. Where the brook brawls along the public road
 Whose nursing current brawls o'er mossy stones,
 Where the brook brawls along the painful road,
 I mean the brawls of lawyers in their courts
 Issuing when shame hath ceased to check the brawls
Brawny. He took no heed; but in his brawny arms
Bray. A long and clamorous bray!
 The hard dry see-saw of his horrible bray!
Brazen. To king and people true. A brazen plate,
Breach. Or tempt them to an hour of sabbath breach.
 Had saved him from that breach of faith!
 Then would I seek the Pyrenean Breach
 Pain entered through a ghastly breach—
 No breach of promise in the fruit?
 The breach is open—on the wall,
 He made by wilful breach of law divine.
 Of sottish vice or desperate breach of law,
Bread. See Convent-bread.
 Bread has he none, the snow must be his drink;
 With daily bread, by constant toil supplied.
 And lustily the master carved the bread.
 Our heavenly Father granted each day's bread;
 Was crying, as I thought, crying for bread,
 And begged our daily bread from door to door.
 The stone-cutters, 'tis true, might heg their bread
 Never did worthier lads break English bread;
 Shelter and daily bread—the sum of his desires.
 Whereof to buy us bread.
 And bought my little children bread,
 Her shelter and her bread.
 For shelter, and a poor man's bread!
 That not by bread alone we live,
 Lived thankful for day's light, for daily bread,
 The bread which without industry they find.
 Roof, raiment, bread, or burial;
 Thanks given to God for daily bread, and here
 That asks for daily bread.
 Came not, but in a lane partook his bread.
 Was reared and taught; and humbly earned his
 bread,
 Deny'd the bread of life the foodful ear,
 No bread to feed him, and the snow his drink,
 Meantime in canisters is heap'd the bread,
 Sought daily bread from public charity,
 Of dainties,—oaten bread, curd, cheese, and cream;
 Relinquished, lived dependant for his bread
 For daily bread. A consciousness is yours
 For daily bread." "Yes!" buoyantly exclaimed
 And, through Heaven's blessing, thus we gain the bread
 As there to linger, there to eat his bread,
 The bread they eat. A sample should I give
 To every day's demand for daily bread,
Breadth. See Hair-breadth.
 To see an acre's breadth of that wide cliff
Break. See Day-break, Water-break.
 In timely sleep; and when, at break of day,
 That break against the shore, shall lull thy mind
 To break my dream the vessel reached its bound;
 And under covert rest till break of day,
 Then shatter the delusion, break it up
 But will return to you by break of day.
 As if her innocent heart would break;
 I chanced to see at break of day
 Sleep—and at break of day I will come to thee
 again!
 Never did worthier lads break English bread;
 Friendships that will not break, and love that cannot roam.
 Would overstep the brain, or break the heart:
 At break of day, Joanna and myself.
 At break of day I ventured forth,
 Break forth into thanksgiving,
 Or that he could not break the chain,
 His eyes will burst—his heart will break—
 Nor ever once did break his fast:
 And, with due care, ere break of day,
 Fresh as a lark mounting at break of day,
 Would break the silence of this Dell:
 Which he will break for us he dares to speak,
 Break forth at thought of laying down his head,
 When thou, uprisen, shalt break thy double yoke,
 The Monks relax or break these iron chains;
 And some break forth when others' sorrows crush
 Why should we break Time's charitable seals?
 Voices, thy winds break forth in prophecy,
 Let us break off all commerce with the Muse:
 Would through the clouds break forth on human sight!

Break—continued.

May rise to break it: effort worse than vain
 Let us break forth in tempest now or never!—
 Nor chide the Muse that stooped to break a spell
 Break forth,—again to walk the clear blue sky.
 The twin ere break of day
 Alas, alas! my very heart will break,
 His eyes from sleep, at the first break of day,
 Him thought his sorrowful heart would break in two;
 Now is there not good reason to break forth
 To break the quiet of the village shade
 To break, the vales where Death with Famine
 scow'rs,
 Severely honest, break no plighted trust,
 To break upon the sabbath of her rest
 Halted without an effort to break through;
 But here I must break off, and bid farewell
 To times, when half the city shall break out
 That shall break in upon his sleep for weeks;
 Capable of clear truth, the ooe to break
 For, like a plague, will memory break out;
 Of a command which they have power to break,
 Break down all grandeur, still unsatisfied
 Did never break the stillness that prevails
 That seemed to break from an expanding heart,
 Break from the maddened nations at the sight
 Could break from out those languid eyes, or a blush
 And as these lofty barriers break the force
 Break up, and are beginning to recede;
Breaker. From such a desperate breaker of the peace?
Breakers. With breakers roaring to the gales
 Threatened by angry breakers as they passed
Breakfast. Their breakfast done, the pair, though loth, must part;
Breakfasts. And breakfasts with his dog. When they have stolen,
Breaking. See Heart-breaking.
 Where sparkling eyes and breaking smiles illumine
 This action? Innocent!—oh breaking heart!
 He suffered—breaking down in heart and mind!
 Till, breaking in upon the dying strain,
 Main ocean, breaking audibly, and stretched
 Where mists are breaking up or gone,
 Breaking the silence of the seas
 Of the waves breaking on the chalky shore;—
 Come, weak as is a breaking wave!
 Thus innocently sported, breaking forth
 Pleas'd thro' the dusk their breaking smiles to view,
 Where sparkling eyes and breaking smiles illumine
 —Breaking th' ascending roar of desert foods,
 On breaking up a long-continued frost,
 Said the old man, abruptly breaking silence,—
 Wantonly breaking in upon the Swiss,
 Was left to tremble for a breaking vow,—
Breaks. See Water-breaks.
 And now, on every side, the surface breaks
 In foamy breaks the rill, with merry song,
 And breaks the spreading of its golden tides;
 Save when the avalanche breaks loose, to rend
 The ice breaks up and sweeps away a bridge;
 Oft, when light breaks through clouds or waving
 trees,
 Such a light of gladness breaks,
 When in some great extremity breaks out
 Europe breaks forth; then, Shepherds! shall ye rise
 Of Time, breaks forth triumphant Memory
 Needful when o'er wide realms the tempest breaks,
 Breaks into dimples small and bright;
 Breaks—and the greyhound, DART, is overhead!
 As he breaks the ice away.
 It breaks, and all is clear:
 Breaks off the dreadful kiss with angry shriek.
 And breaks the mirror of the circling deeps;
 Breaks on the shade, the shade upon the light,
 The pie, and chattering breaks the night's repose.
 Breaks from the rustling boughs,
 Where the salt sea innocuously breaks,
 Breaks from a many-windowed fabric huge;
 'Mid thorns and brambles; or a bird that breaks
Breast. See Redbreast.
 Thy breast their death-bed, confined in thine arms!
 Creep hushed into the tranquil breast of death.
 How richly glows the water's breast
 When, from the sunny breast of open seas,
 Awe in his breast with holiest love unites,
 In mute devotion on the thankful breast!
 Three lovely babes had lain upon my breast;
 I too forgot the heavings of my breast.
 He bore within a breast where dreadful quiet reigned.
 Here at my breast, and ask me where I bought it:
 Back on herself, I think, again—my breast
 I could have dropped asleep upon his breast.
 What'er the monster brooding in your breast
 But take me to your arms—this breast, alas!
 No strife disturbs his sister's breast;
 On whose breast are thither borne
 In her breast, uruly fire,

Breast—continued.

From human care, or grows upon the breast of earth.
 And he, recovering sense, upon her breast . . .
 If justice ruled the breast of foreign kings,
 Here, thronged with primroses, the steep rock's breast
 Then hush again upon my breast ; . . .
 Thou know'st the pillow of my breast ;
 His head upon one breast, while from the other
 Sing at thy Mother's breast. Month followed month,
 May fill your breast with joyful pride ;
 Confiding in his ruddy breast,
 Hung at my breast, and pulled at me ;
 Thy father cares not for my breast,
 " But now proud thoughts are in your breast—
 Hath often eased my pensive breast
 Spreading out thy glossy breast . . .
 The pious bird with the scarlet breast,
 Sleeping on the mountain's breast.
 Is warmed thro' winter by her feathery breast.
 The Miller with two Dames, on the breast of the Thames !
 While they dance on the calm river's breast.
 By generous pride within the breast ;
 She and her Babe, which to her breast
 Thy shelter—and their mother's breast !
 A fire was kindled in her breast,
 And though his favourite seat be feeble woman's breast.
 And of the ocean's dismal breast
 And withered leaves, from earth's cold breast
 On the flower's breast ; as if she felt
 To fall sleep upon the breast . . .
 And daily, in the conscious breast,
 Who from the well-spring of his own clear breast .
 And, did not pity touch my breast . . .
 " Ne'er in the breast of full-grown Poet
 " Within the breast of Peter Bell
 Whether to cheer his coward breast,
 Assiduously—to soothe her aching breast ;
 When sunshine follows shower, the breast can thrill
 From rapture, lying softly on her breast ! . . .
 Or when along thy breast serenely float
 Power in my breast, wings growing in my mind,
 Jane hangs her head upon my breast,
 On Vaga's breast the fretful waves,
 On Grasmere's clear unruffled breast . . .
 Spring finds not here a melancholy breast,
 Faith buried deeper in her own deep breast
 Of more than martial courage in the breast . . .
 And the red cross on my breast ;
 Into the torpid breast of daily life ;—
 Across her burning breast,
 Unfolds a willing breast) with infant glee
 Into his single breast, a sheaf
 From the smooth breast of gay Winandermere ?
 Which in her breast Futurity concealed ;
 But many a benefit borne upon his breast
 But in his breast the mighty Poet bore
 On Laura's breast, in exquisite repose ;
 Deep into patient Earth, from whose smooth breast
 it came ! . . .
 On the calm depth of his transparent breast,
 To prompt the thought ?—Upon the steep rock's breast
 Of dancing insects forged upon his breast ;
 The pensive warbler of the ruddy breast
 Worn at the breast of some grave Dame
 Palm to palm, on his tranquil breast ;
 Which, though seemingly doomed in its breast to sustain
 And that same Banner, on whose breast
 Bare breast I take and an empty hand."—
 With breast unmailed, unweaponed hand.
 I may hear witness in my breast
 Should on the consecrated breast . . .
 She reached the grave, and with her breast
 For, sooth to say, ambition, in the breast
 The peace of God within his single breast !
 Received, and fostered in her iron breast :
 Each with a vernal pny at his breast,
 As now, when She hath also seen her breast
 Such as will promptly flow from every breast,
 Or fancies stealing forth to soothe the breast
 Which, filling, consecrates the human breast.
 The drooping Emma to his breast,
 Then from thy breast what thought,
 And smooths her liquid breast—to show
 Of youth into the breast :
 Into the human breast, and mix with sleep
 Conscious Nursling, to thy breast ! . . .
 Into his English breast, and spare to quake
 Or love within the breast.
 Informs the fountain in the human breast
 Within the happiest breast on earthly ground.
 With amber honey from the mountain's breast ;
 Type of a sunny human breast . . .

Breast—continued.

No winds disturb ; the mirror of whose breast
 Are sown in every human breast, to beauty
 Within the Maiden's breast ;
 Upon the breast Thy name do glorify . . .
 " With Mother's pity in her breast enclosed
 And pray that in his faithful breast the grace
 Within a breeze-fanned rose's breast
 Wide were his aims, yet in no human breast
 With new-fledged hope still fluttering in his breast :—
 While, by the scene compos'd, the breast subsides,
 The deepest dell the mountain's breast displays,
 Or moonlight Upland lifts her hoary breast ;
 —Give them, beneath their breast while Gladness springs,
 With panting breast, now pale as winter snows,
 When pure Religion rear'd the peaceful breast
 " So shall thy sire, whilst hope his breast inspires,
 Do thou, if gratitude inspire thy breast,
 A sigh recall'd the wanderer to my breast ;
 Receive him to her breast :
 But soon upon her breast he sunk—to wake no
 more.
 Then waits him, cherish'd on her careful breast,
 How great a God, incumbent o'er her breast,
 On his smooth breast the shadow of those towers
 Beheld her breast the wind, then suddenly
 Rocked on his Mother's breast ; who with his soul
 Of senseless horsemanship, or on the breast
 Of a slow-moving boat, upon the breast
 Upon Winander's spacious breast, it chanced
 Who fills the mother's breast with innocent milk,
 Grey dark with all the shadows on its breast,
 That ever harboured in the breast of man . . .
 Upon his head ; with basket at his breast . . .
 In ancient story versed, whose breast had heaved
 Within the breast, as ever-varying winds . . .
 Should to the breast of Nature have gone back,
 Within the folds of no ungentle breast . . .
 Thus did we breast the ascent, and by myself
 In strength, reflecting from its placid breast . . .
 But yet no motion of the breast was seen . . .
 Did chill her breast ; and in the stormy day
 Upon the breast of Faith. I turned away
 Swelled in my breast.—' I have been dead,' I cried,
 To brush the still breast of a crystal lake . . .
 Of her own breast ; confounded into hope . . .
 Within the depths of its capacious breast . . .
 From yon huge breast of rock, a voice sent forth
 " Upon the breast of new-created earth
 An Indian Chief discharges from his breast . . .
 High on the breast of yon dark mountain, dark
 Till he begins to smile upon the breast . . .
 And various fluctuations in the breast ; . . .
 By right of birth ; within whose spotless breast
 And nature that is kind in woman's breast,
 From the maternal breast ; then scruples rose ;
 Thus wronged in woman's breast : in vain I pleaded—
 The perturbation in the suffering breast,
 The ridge itself may sink into the breast . . .
 Affections seated in the mother's breast,
 Such on the breast of darksome heaths are found ;
 Presume to offer ; we, who—from the breast . . .
 The other, glassed in thy unruffled breast,
 On the broad water's placid breast—
 And oh ! dear soother of the pensive breast,
 Between my breast-plate and my skin than make . . .

Breasts. See Redbreasts.
 Nor less than mother's love in other breasts,
 Striking through English breasts the anarchy . . .
 Breasts the sea-flashes, and huge waves
 That wants not, even in rudest breasts, a seat ;
 Might soothe in human breasts the sense of ill,
 Those steadfast eyes, that beating breasts inspire
 Those shadowy breasts in love's soft light array'd,
 And vexed the market-place. But in the breasts
Breath. See Breath's.
 No more her breath can thaw their fingers cold,
 (For sighs will ever trouble human breath)
 The " parting Genius " sighs with hollow breath . . .
 Alas ! the thing she told with labouring breath
 And breath and being ; where he cannot govern,
 Time, since Man first drew breath, has never moved
 The faintest breath that breathes can move a world ;
 Had given me breath, and was I not to be
 Untouched by his breath see the candle shines bright,
 That lightly draws its breath.
 His pulse is stopped, his breath is lost,
 And blew with the same breath through days and weeks,
 There's not a breeze—no breath of air—
 The thaw-wind, with the breath of June,
 Sad thoughts, and breathes with easier breath ;
 The gentlest breath of resignation drew ;
 Recovering breath, and pleased to win
 And halt for breath and halt again,
 The air was now without a breath—
 —Nut a breath of air . . .

 Do Thou, then, breathe those thoughts into my mind
 Cool air I breathe; while the unnumbered Mind,
 To breathe in rural peace, to hear the stream
 Breathe hopeful air.
 Was stopped, and could not breathe beneath the load
 And glad some notes my lips can breathe,
 Here, on our native soil, we breathe once more.
 He only, if such breathe, in strains devout
 Breathe Thou, this day, a vital undulation!
 Fervent but humble as the lips can breathe
 Who breathe the air he breathed, tread where he
 trod,
 Better to breathe at large on this clear height
 On gales that breathe too gently to recall
 Be loth that we should breathe awhile exempt
 Then be good Spirits free to breathe a note
 Has called him forth to breathe the common air,
 Turned to a fearful Thing whose nostrils breathe.
 Breathe through my soul the blessing of thy grace,
 To breathe the Elysian peace in upper air.
 "Slaves cannot breathe in England"—yet that
 boast
 The social rights of man breathe purer air;
 If doomed to breathe against his lawful will
 To breathe and live but for himself alone,
 And, long as he can wander, let him breathe
 As long as verse of mine shall breathe the air
 Breathe o'er the falling soul voluptuous dreams;
 No longer breathe, but all be satisfied,
 I cannot miss my way. I breathe again!
 To breathe an elevated mood, by form
 Of all that breathe?—what in the path of all
 For sunshine, and to breathe the fresher air
 Did breathe its sweetness out most sensibly,
 Be free to breathe in, and the heart of man
 Without Whose call this world would cease to breathe,
 They first of all that breathe should have awaked
 While yet our hearts are young, while yet we breathe
 They do not breathe among them: this I speak
 The outside of her creatures, and to breathe
 Deep—and, aloft ascending, breathe in worlds
 Who dwell on earth, yet breathe empyreal air,
 To breathe beneath a vault of ignorance?
 While in a spot like this we breathe and walk,
 Should breathe a word tending to violate
 Soothed by the natural spirit which they breathe.
 To save the perishing; and, henceforth, I breathe
 And breathe the sweet air of futurity;
 Though strength decay, to breathe in such estate
 To breathe in solitude, above the host
 To breathe and to be happy, run and shout
 With civil arts, that shall breathe forth their
 fragrance,
 Breathe in the air of fellow-suffering
 Calmly they breathe their own undying life
 To breathe in peace, we shall moreover find
 By all that breathe in Troy, how tired and worn
 Breathe. See Flower-breathed, Low-breathed, Sweet-

Breath'st. That breath'st with me in suo and air, Breathing. See Fiercely-breathing, Incense-breathing,
Sweetly-breathing.

To scent the sweets of Piedmont's breathing rose,
The breathing pestilence that rose like smoke,
Your natural breathing has been troubled. Nay,
From the stero-breathing of the rough sea-wind;
I am sure I heard something breathing—
Her sweets, and triumph o'er the breathing rose?
Old times, thought I, are breathing there;
Are mastered by the breathing haze;
By breathing mist; and thine appears to be Breathing with such suppression of the heart
A Being breathing thoughtfully breath,
And hers shall be the breathing balm,

Bridge. Leads to her bridge, rude church, and cottaged grounds,
 The eye reposes on a secret bridge,
 In the roofed bridge ; the bridge, in that dread hour,
 He leaped upon the bridge that spans the glen,
 And thence they saw the bridge of wood,
 And to the bridge they came.
 Hath fallen, and made a bridge of rock :
 The ice breaks up and sweeps away a bridge ;
 Across the bridge and through the dale,
 And while she crossed the bridge, there came
 Of Andes—frozen gulfs became its bridge—
 Fancy hath rung for me an airy bridge
 Calls me to pace her honoured Bridge—that cheers
 A bridge to copy, or to paint a mill
 In the roof'd bridge, at that despairing hour,
 And the bridge vibrates, tottering to its fall,
 While crossing Magdalene Bridge, a glimpse of Cam ;
 Thus having reached a bridge, that overarched
 But whence yon swarm that loads the western bridge,
Bridged. The River proudly bridged ; the dizzy top
Bridges. With temples crested, bridges, gondolas,
Bride. And proudly shook the bride too ;
 For joy he cannot hold the bridle,
 —O for a bride bitted with remorse
 From unsubmitive necks the bridle shook
 Could scarcely hold a bridle, with proud hopes

Bright—continued.

The grass is bright with rain-drops;—on the moors
Of olive green and scarlet bright,
To view the ocean wide and bright,
When all the stars shone clear and bright,
On this great throng, this bright array!

And glancing, gleaming, dark or bright,
[So pure, so bright, so fitted to embrace
To Syracuse advance in bright array.
And drop thy pointing finger bright
And vernal mornings opening bright
Or survey their bright domicions
But an old age serene and bright,
(Like the bright confines of another world)
Invoke we those bright Beings one by one;
And one of the bright Three become thy happy Bride.

And the bright landscape too must lie,
I sang—Let myriads of bright flowers,
(Softening that bright effulgence by degrees)
" What if those bright fires
Was such bright Spectacle vouchsafed to me?
Bright Seraphs mixed familiarly with men;
The glory of the sun's bright head—
That loads the middle heaven; and clear and bright
And see! a bright precursor to a train
As is the crescent-moon so bright!
Up goes my little Boat so bright!

When the full moon was shining bright
All bright with berries ripe and red,
Into large letters—bright and plain!
When earth is calm, and heaven is bright.
Beneath the full moon shining bright,
Might work in our high Chalice—a bright hope
Nor those bright sunbeams to forsake the day;
That work a living landscape fair and bright;
The bright assurance, visibly return:
Still to be strenuous for the bright reward,
Is reached, where, forfeiting his bright attire,
Nor will I praise a cloud, however bright,
How clear, how keen, how marvellously bright
With bright Joaquins, their odours lavishing
And to this Work!—a groto bright and clear
Bright, speckless, as a softly-moulded tear

" Bright is thy veil, O Moon, as thou art bright!"
And so the bright immortal Theban band,
A gay society with faces bright,
Green herbs, bright flowers, and berry-bearing plants,
All bright and glittering in the smokeless air.
Bright as the glimpses of eternity,
Could scarcely make more placid, heaven more bright)
Such age how beautiful! O Lady bright,
So the bright faces of the young and gay,
Shall look more bright—the happy, happier still;
Aught dost thou see, bright Star! of pure and wise
Rose out of darkness: the Star! of work stood still?
Baffle the threat, bright Scene, from Orrest-head
And, on the mouldered walls, how bright, how gay,
—Then why these lingering steps?—A bright adieu,
Think rather of those moments bright—
Of common day, so heavenly bright,
To travel through that region bright.
But bright as Vesper shines her lamp:
Rare beasts, and birds with plumage bright;
With which his soul had shone so bright—
Bright Star! with laughter on her banners, drest
She was a maiden City, bright and free;
Was like a lake, or river bright and fair,
Tells also of bright calms that shall succeed.
And silent fetters? Yes, if visions bright,
Aod, in like sign of cloudless triumph bright,
Now that all hearts are glad, all faces bright,
And scattered rural farms of aspect bright;
Whence bright days of festive beauty;
Bright be the Fabric, as a star
Or thou, impartial Sun, with presence bright
Bright be thy course to-day, let not this promise fail!
So shine our thankfulness for ever bright!
Bright shines the Sun, as if his beams would wake
Bright shines the Sun—and not a breeze to shake
Near the bright River's edge. Yet why repine?
This bold, this bright, this sky-born, WATERFALL!
Till all is dim, save this bright Stone
Looks down—the bright and solitary Moon,
Bright Spirit, not with amaranth crowned
My thoughts become bright like you edging of Pines

Below the icy bed of bright ARGENTIERE,
Not virgo lilies marshalled to bright row,
Till the bright Star appeared in eastern skies,
Bright sunbeams—the fresh verdure of this lawn
To this bright land, Hope was for him no friend,
Mid—as the verdure, fresh—the sunshine, bright—
The rescued Pine-tree, with its sky so bright
With those bright beams yet hid it not, must steer
From ancient Rome, downwards through that bright dream
Heaved less for thy bright plains and hills bestrown

Bright—continued.

Of a bright Ship that seemed to hang in air,
To a full orb, this Pinnacle bright
As thought, when through bright regions memory ranges.
Alas! the bright Ship floated,
With ambient streams more pure and bright
Pure flow the verse, pure, vigorous, free, and bright,
Bright liquid mansions, fashioned to endure
Truth's holy lamp, pure source of bright effect,
Can question that thy countenance is bright,
May this bright flower of Charity display
A bright, encouraging, example shows;
The sun shines bright; the fields are gay
If I with this bright Creature go:
Brightens her that was so bright;

—But hers are eyes serenely bright,
Bright was the Creature, as in dreams
The Boy had seen her, yea, more bright;
Is spotless, and holy, and gentle, and bright;
Rich as the mine's most bright creations.
Of recollections clear and bright;
And those bright Twins were side by side;
Bright locks of silver hair, thick spread,
A spot of shame to the sun's bright eye,
Oh! wherefore was her countenance bright
Too free to one bright moment's hope?
The bright Moon sees that valley small
Of colours manifold and bright
Breaks into dimples small and bright;
And yet not faint—a presence bright;
One star of aspect heavenly bright;
All ceasure, enterprise so bright
Erewhile a covert bright and green,
And loving-kindness ever bright:
And temples flashing, bright as polar ice,
Aod, ever and anon, how bright a gleam
Through these bright regions, casting many a glance
An Apparition more divinely bright!
Emerging pure, and seemingly more bright:
The bright corporeal presence—form and face—
Methinks their very names shine still and bright;
By a bright ladder to the world above.
So, like the Mountain, may we grow more bright
A dawn she has both beautiful and bright,
Grave Creature!—whether, while the moon shines
bright

On those bright steps that heavenward raise
A thing too bright for breathing man to keep.
Yes, lovely Moon! if thou so mildly bright
A Form as bright, as beautiful a moon
Nemean victor's brow; less bright was worn,
Till this bright Stranger came, fair as day-break,
On the smooth bottom of this clear bright sea,
But ye, bright Flowers, on frieze and architrave Aod "hopes, perhaps more heavenly bright than this,

Her new-born Babe; dire ending of bright hope!
Cage for a Bird of plumage bright,
To win this bright-Bird from her cage,
Her eyes grew bright with blissful light,
(Your casual glance oft meeting; this bright cord,
Bright Flower! whose home is everywhere,
We walked along, while bright and red
Aod, for my chance-acquaintance, ladies bright,
How bright her men!
Bright ship of heaven!
Serene will be our days and bright,
That makes the path before him always bright:
Bright trophies of the sun!
Alas for thee, bright Galaxy of Isles,
Of their presence tell—too bright
Of many virtues, mildly bright,
To open a bright eye.
However bright and fair.
In her own dawn—a dawn less gay and bright,
To Loughrigg-tarn, round, clear and bright as heaven,
Before her cottage on the bright hill-side

By those bright eyes, what weary vigils kept,
Ah! not alone by colours bright
Bright colours whether they deceive or no?—
And bright the Lady is who shares his bed.
Of humblest Friends, bright Creature! scorn out
one:
A bright and cheerful face;
And 'mid his bright locks never shorn
The Mother-maid, whose countenance bright
Bright, as if through ether steering,
And eke of martyrdom this ruby bright,
And in that Temple she with her bright eyes,
With thy bright beams to guide me but one hour,
Troilus stood the bright moon to behold;
When hence did journey my bright Lady dear,
For which, oh, gentle Luna, bright and clear,
Lo! yonder is my own bright Lady free;
And his bright eyes look brighter, set off by the streak
Bright as the sun himself, 'tis out again!

Brim. He fills with his power all their hearts to the brim—
 A primrose by a river's brim
 And gaily lift its fearless brim
 From Belus, filled it to the brim with wine ;
 Ah ! need I say, dear Friend ! that to the brim
 Was moist with water-drops, as if the brim . . .
Brimful. With heart brimful of pride and joy !
 Brimful of glory said within himself,
Brim-full. Brim-full of a carousing crew,
Brimming. The milk-maid followed with her brim-

 Of hearts with gladness brimming o'er ;
Brine. The unluckiest bulk that stems the brine
 And, as they traversed the smooth brine,
 I watch thee sailing o'er the midland brine ;
 And those watery glories, on the stormy brine
 Why stand we gazing on the sparkling Brine,
 Like beds of moonlight shifting on the brine.
Bring. Until it seemed to bring a joy to my despair,
 Will bring me back—protect him, Saints—farewell !
 Bring to her hut ; and so the Wretch has lived
 What harvest it would bring us both ; and so
 Let us begone and bring her hither ;—here
 To bring perdition on the universe,
 You were not able to bring him all the way
 Bring down a heap of rubbish, and it crush me,
 With witless hope to bring her near !—
 If Nature to her tongue could measured numbers

Britain—continued.

Britain put forth her freeborn strength in league,
What in those days through Britain was performed
Britain opposed the liberties of France.

Of Britain circumscribed me; else, perhaps
In Britain, ruled a panic dread of change;
Of Britain are resorted to by ships
Of Britain, do invite her to cast off

Britain's. Where be the temples which in Britain's

Isle,
High on that chalky cliff of Britain's Isle,
Of Britain's calm felicity and power!
Of Britain's realm, whose leafy crest
Of Britain's acts,—may catch it with rapt ear,

Of Britain's acts would sing,
It cannot be that Britain's social frame,
In Britain's earliest dawn:
Should spread on Britain's favoured ground!
And beam'd on Britain's sons a brighter day;

Hear Britain's sons rehearse thy praise with joy,
That Westminster, for Britain's glory, holds
The other, born in Britain's southern tract,
In Britain's senate. Fruitless was the attempt:

Of Britain's farthest glens. The Earth has lent
Britannia. With rapture she beheld Britannia smile,
Cease, Britannia, cease to weep!

Whereon Britannia rests her peaceful fame.
British. A British ship I waked, as from a trance restored."

Pathless, a British record (long concealed)
The British sceptre, here would I to thee
This Lady, dwelling upon British ground,

That British ground commands:—low dusky tracts,
The chaster coverts of a British hill.
Our British Hill is nobler far; he shrouds
Of waters issue from a British source,

Of British freedom, which, to the open sea
But British reason and the British sword.
On British ground the Invaders are laid low:
And give the treasure to our British tongue!

"Her course was for the British strand;
Such to this British Isle her christian Fanes,
The fugitives than to the British strand,
On British waters with that look benign?

On ground which British shepherds tread!
That have no rivals among British bowers;
At whose behest uprose on British ground
A British Painter (eminent for truth)

Think ye your British Ancestors forsook
Of some old British Chief: 'tis nothing more
But she who trains the generous British youth
Will settle on some British theme, some old

Drawn from the chords of the ancient British harp
Are at its centre, British Lawgivers;
When British floods were worshipped, some faint trace

Seated in a British chair.

Briton. A Briton, even in love, should be
To the rude Briton, when, in wolf-skin vest
A single Briton clothed in wolf-skin vest,
A native Briton to these inward chains,

Britons. So styled by those fierce Britons, pleased to see
She casts the Britons upon strange Allies,
To Britons born and bred within the pale

Broach. Still in the Highland Broach is seen,
The silver Broach of massy frame,
Beneath a massier Highland Broach.
The hidden silver Broach was left.

Will vanish the last Highland Broach.
May render back the Highland Broach.
Broached. Butlers have simply broached their Lordships casks.

Broad. They crush with broad black feet their flowery walk;

Dark with hat-haunted ashes stretching broad,
(For dark and broad the gulf of time between)
Stretch o'er the pictured mirror broad and blue,
And the fierce torrent at the flashes broad

When, after a broad flash that filled the cave,
Life stretched before me smooth as some broad way
A broad and gilded vane.

High on a broad unfruitful tract of forest-skirted
Down,
On wings from broad and steadfast poise let loose
by this reply,

And, while the broad blue wave and sparkling foam
Yet all in the broad highway of the world.
And in the broad highway, I met;

Along the broad highway he came,
In the broad open eye of the solitary sky,
Glittering before him bright and broad;

For yet it is broad day-light: clouds pass by;
(More fair than heaven's broad causeway paved with stars)

On broad Euphrates' palmy shore,
The broad blue heavens appeared to glimmer,
Not four yards from the broad highway:

Breathless with adoration; the broad sun

Broad—continued.

Come like a giant from a haven broad;
The broad full visage, chest of amplest mould,
Or where broad waters round him lay:
Of Sanguinetto or broad Thrasymene,

When the broad oak drops, a leafless skeleton,
Nor in broad pomp, or courtly state;
The peacock in the broad ash-tree
Into broad light, and sends, through regions airy,
Broad, clear, and toned harmoniously, with skill.

Of wrongful acts. Downward it is add broad,
Turn a broad front full on his flattering beams:
Had placed his staff across the broad smooth stone
And the broad gulfs I traversed oft and oft.
To meet the world's broad eye,
Ye crush with broad black feet your flow'ry walk;

Stretch, o'er their pictur'd mirror, broad and blue,
The torrent, travers'd by the lustre broad,
Shun the broad way too easily explored,
To the broad ocean and the azure heavens
Of character, in points of wit as broad,
To the broad follies of the licensed world,

Who, with a broad highway, have overbridged
Five rivers broad and vast, made rich ameads,
Into a lordly river, broad and deep,
Ere the broad world rang with the maiden's name,
Of the broad vale, casting a casual glance,
By the broad hill, glistered upon our sight
Upon a broad leaf carried, choicest strings
A broad oak, stretching forth its leafy arms

Was her broad forehead; like the brow of one
In the broad day, a weeping Magdalene.
In the broad day, a rueful Magdalene!
Were working the broad bosom of the lake
On the broad water's placid breast—
Broad-day. Of marvels, broad-day wonders permanent:
Broadening. An edge all flame, the broadening sun appears;

It's edge all flame, the broad'ning sun appears;
As on the broadening causeway we advance,
Broad-spread. And round the broad-spread oak, a glimmering scene,
Brodered. The vestments 'brodered with barbaric pride:
The wounds the brodered Banner showed,
With brodered housings. And the lofty Steed—
Broke. Broke only by the slow clock tolling deep,
For ever broke, the sabbath of her bowers.
Each clacking mill, that broke the murmuring
streams,

The shriek that from the distant battle broke,
Then, with a voice which inward trouble broke
Just as those final words were peoned, the sun broke out in power,
But who shall show, to waking sense, the gleam of light that broke
The old Man's grief broke from him; to his heart
Here broke off the dangerous converse:
Down from yon cliff a fragment broke;
Broke from the sable orbs of his yet-vivid eyes.

Broke forth in concert flung adown the dells,
Broke from the Matron's strong black eye—
The cries which broke from old and young
Over waves rough and deep, that, when they broke,
Some casual shout that broke the silent air,
And from the turf a fountain broke,
Broke threateningly, in sparkles dire

Endure that silence, and broke out in song,
When, as day broke, the Maid, through misty air,
Broke silence, or I heard him in my thought.
Chok'd is the pathway, and the pitcher broke.
Broke only by th' unvaried torrent's sound,
Broke only by the melancholy sound
Shall love, 'till Life has broke her golden bowl,
Right to a rough stream's edge, and there broke off;
To rush and disappear. But soon broke forth
Broke forth in armour of resplendent words,
In the great City, broke like light from far.

He broke from his contracted bounds, repaired
That he broke faith with them whom he had laid
Broke in upon the Speaker with a frank
Broke from the happy old Man's reverend lip;
Into my bosom, whence these words broke forth:
Of mine kind! He was it who first broke
Divine displeasure, broke the marriage-vow.
Thus silence broke:—"Behold a thoughtless Man
The Sage broke off. No sooner had he ceased

Broken. See Heart-broken, Sternly-broken.
Each slip of lawn the broken rocks between
Thou wouldst be leaning on a broken reed—
Is broken, you will hear no more of him.
And through the broken hawthorn hedge,
A broken intercourse; and, while his eyes
She says, in faint words by sighs broken,
Unvisited, where not a broken bough
Be broken down and old:
A broken vow, or hind a true,
Which one harsh day has broken.
—Tears had not broken from their source;

227 Vernal Ode 129

Broken—continued.

Died of a broken heart
 What beast of chase hath broken from the cover ?
 Will soon be broken ;—a rough course remains,
 In vain shall rue the broken intercourse.
 Their forms are broken staves; their passions, steeds
 And if there be whom broken ties
 Broken in fortune, but in mind entire
 Stung with remorse for broken vows ;
 Foundations broken up, the deeps run wild,
 Broken with all mankind, solicit death,
 Hence whole day wanderings, broken nightly sleeps

That friendship lasts though fellowship is broken !
 Is broken; yet why grieve ? for Time but holds
 Each speck of law the broken rocks between ;
 In broken sounds her elder grief demand,
 That in its broken windings we shall need
 The darkness windings of a broken stair,
 Of brotherhood is broken : time has been
 Had broken their trim border-lines, and straggled
 Scribbled with verse : a broken angling-rod
 Abruptly broken off. The ruddy boys
 Pursued our way, a broken company
 And neither pair be broken ? Nay perchance

Broken-hearted. Died broken-hearted. 'Tis a common case.

Broken. Were bronzed with deepest radiance, stood alone

Brood. Brood o'er the long-parched lauds with Nile-like wings !

The lion roars and gluts his tawny brood
 The verminous brood, and cherish what they spare
 The mountain raven's youngling brood
 To brood on air than on an earthly stream ;
 A brood whom no civility could melt,
 It may soar with the eagle and brood with the dove,
 Waxed wroth, and with four claws, a harpy brood,
 An old place, full of many a lovely brood,
 But now upon this thought I cannot brood ;
 That loves on sullen thoughts to brood !
 The brood of chaste affection.

Avoid these sights ; nor brood o'er Fable's dark abyss !
 Modest Savona ! over all did brood
 The sullen reservoirs whence their bold brood—
 To naturalise this tawny Lion brood ;
 Vouchsafed in gentleness to brood
 Yea, offered up this noble Brood,
 Nourish the sufferers thee ; and amidst, that brood
 Of sacred truth may enter—till it brood
 And over fancied usurpations brood,
 They heard, and, starting up, the Brood of Night
 Ye brood of Conscience—Spectres ! that frequent
 Fearless of all assaults that would her brood molest.

Oh do not Thou too fondly brood,
 To brood the nations o'er with Nile-like wings ;
 Behold the parent hen amid her brood,
 And straggle from her presence, still a brood,
 A brood of gallant creatures, on the deep ;
 These were the lurking Satyrs, a wild brood
 The cackling hen, the tender chicken brood,
 Then, o'er that mould, a sanctity shall brood
 How fair amid her brood of cottages !
 To guard the royal brood. The sailing glead,

Brooded. I brooded o'er my injuries, deserted
 Has o'er their pillow brooded ;
 While thus he brooded, music sweet
 Intensely brooded, even till they acquired
 And much she read ; and brooded feelingly

Brooding. When, in the south, the wan noon, brooding still,
 Besides, on grieis so fresh my thoughts were brooding still.

What'er the monster brooding in your breast
 Brooding on her eggs reposes
 There to the brooding bird her mate
 To sit in meekness, like the brooding Dove,
 And spreads in steadfast peace her brooding wing.
 Heavenly Guardians, brooding near
 Sits brooding, lives not always to that end,
 Brooding above the fierce confederate storm
 From brooding clouds ; shadows that lay in spots

Broads. See O'er-broads.
 Above yon eastern hill, where darkness broods
 Over his own sweet voice the Stock-dove broods ;
 The gentleness of heaven broods o'er the Sea :
 Broods, visibly portrayed, the mystic Dove,
 A tender Spirit broods—the pensive Shade
 That broods and sleeps on his own heart
 Broods like the Day, a Master o'er a Slave,
 Now o'er the eastern hill, where Darkness broods
 That feeds upon infinity, that broods

Brook. Beyond, along the vista of the brook,
 Dear Brook, farewell ! To-morrow's noon again
 Where the brook brawls along the public road
 In every babbling brook he finds a friend ;
 A brook to murmur or a bough to wave,
 No brook to wet his lip or soothe his ear ;

Brook—continued.

Where wreaths of vapour tracked a winding brook,
 When I returned with water from the brook,
 Floats kingcups in the brook—a Hero one
 So from the court I passed, and down the brook,
 Fresh water from the brook, as clear as ever ran ;
 'Cross the brook its thoughtless dam.
 The neighbours were alarmed, and to the brook
 And, tired with slights his pride no more could brook,

As doth a fly upon a summer brook ;
 Or lay upon the moss by brook or tree,
 When up she winds along the brook
 And for us the brook murmured that ran by its side.
 To hunt the moon within the brook,
 Up the tumultuous brook of Green-head Ghyll,
 But, courage ! for around that boisterous brook
 Might see and notice not. Beside the brook
 Near the tumultuous brook of Green-head Ghyll,
 Beside the boisterous brook of Green-head Ghyll.
 Were native to the summer.—Up the brook
 Of Grecian brook, or Lady of the Mere,
 That overhangs a brook.
 As a swan brook with rugged course,
 Where close fogs hide their parent brook ;
 Are steadfast as the rocks ; the brook itself,
 And on or in, or near, the brook, espy
 And a clear brook with cheerful knell
 Which no philosophy can brook !
 The brook adown the rocky steeps.
 Hath stirred thee deeply ; with its own dear brook,
 Or down the tempting maze of Shawford brook—
 But some (who brook those hackneyed themes full
 well,

When will she turn, and whither ? She will brook
 Brook no continuance of weak-mindedness—
 Brook ! whose society the Poet seeks,
 Or groom !—We must run glittering like a brook
 And we can brook the thought that by his hands
 Even yet my heart can scarcely brook,
 Reflected in some crystal brook ;
 And nobly will thou brook the chains
 Thick boughs of palm, and willows from the brook,
 Into a Brook of loud and stately march,
 Impetuous thoughts that brook not servile reins.
 And Tiber, and each brook and rill
 That curbs a foaming brook, a Graveyard lies ;
 Ours couch on naked rocks,—will cross a brook
 Which I myself could scarcely brook
 Where Rylstone brook with Wharf is blended,
 Which ill can brook more rational relief :
 Scooped out of living rock, and near a brook
 And flung into the brook that travels near ;
 "As thou these ashes, little Brook ! wilt bear
 Which Faith has suffered, Heaven could calmly
 brook.

Early awake, by Siloa's brook, to sing
 That so a Church, unforced, uncalled to brook
 Gently to brook decline and fatal change ;
 Thy brook, and bowers of holly ;
 And the rough bed of many an unbridged brook ?

Above a murmuring brook
 And to the brook I ran and got a stone,
 And flew into a hawthorn by that brook ;
 With his grey hairs he went from the brook and the green ;

Where the brook brawls along the painful road,
 The famous brook, who, soon as he was boxed
 Stealing with silent lapse to join the brook
 Entered a narrow chasm. The brook and road
 And ill could brook, beholding that the best
 Of intellect ; such sloth I could not brook,
 Of sudden admonition—like a brook
 Of a clear brook ;—beneath an abbey's roof
 A napkin, white as foam of that rough brook
 Who'er hath stood to watch a mountain brook
 That he could brook, and glory in,—but when
 To the agitation of a brook that runs
 May bring ; that brook converting as it runs
 Fetched by a neighbouring brook.—Across the vale
 And where the very monarch of the brook,
 To a bold brook that splits for better speed,
 Pursued his way toward a brook, whose course
 An island in the brook. It was a place
 To the green plot of pasture in the brook
 Along the steep that overhung the brook,
 Down to the brook he went, and tracked its course
 Brook, that has been my solace days and weeks,
Brooked. A bondage sweetly brooked, a strife
Brooks. Our rambles by the swift brook's side
 From the brook's margin, wide around, the trees
Brooks. And all the babbling brooks are liquid gold ;
 A Poet, one who loves the brooks
 The little brooks that seem all pastime and all play,
 On windy days, in one of those stray brooks,
 Saunter through the sky—the brooks ran clear ;
 To the caves, and to the brooks
 Where birds and brooks from leafy dells
 So narrow seemed the brooks, the fields so small !
 The azure brooks, where Dian joys to lave

Brooks—continued.

White your leaves I behold and the brooks they will strew,
This Valdo brooks not. On the banks of Rhone
He murmurs near the running brooks
Was felt near murmuring brooks in earliest time;
I love the Brooks which down their channels fret;
The icy brooks, as on we passed, appeared
Among the windings hid of mountain brooks.
The trees, the mountains shared it, and the brooks,
And brooks were like a dream of novelty
The wild brooks prattling from invisible haunts;
When up the lonely brooks on rainy days
Through the whole compass of the sky; ye brooks,
And now the 'trotting brooks' and whispering
trees,
The gentle brooks!—Your desolating sway,
Even as the multitude of kindred brooks
Or the wild brooks; from which he now returned
Haunting with rod and line the craggy brooks?
Yet, of the wild brooks ask if he complained;
That paves the brooks, the stationary rocks,
To lie beside the lonely mountain brooks,
Brook-side. We left the willow shade by the brook-side,
By the brook-side: it is the shade of One,
By the brook-side—'tis gone—and that dark cleft!
And held the pathway down by a brook-side;
By a brook-side, we came, a roofless pile,
By a brook-side or solitary tarn.
Broom. Feeding 'mid purple heath, "green rings," and broom;
No gipsy cower'd o'er fire of furze or broom;
—'Twas that delightful season when the broom,
A Broom out of its feet.
The Broom began to doze,
The Broom might have pursued
The little careless Broom was left
Beneath the broom or budding thorn,
Passive yet pleased. What! with this Broom in flower
Who have a broom still ready in your hands
The Scottish Broom on Bird-nest brae
Which the poor broom no longer felt Broom's. This flowering broom's dear neighbourhood, the light
Brooms. Like cattle through the budded brooms;
Brother. Of Tavern, Brothel, Gaming-house, and Shop,
Brother. He sits a brother at the cottage-meal;
And I in truth did love him like a brother,
I felt thy infant brother in her arms;
Her brother now takes up the note,
My sister and my brother;
My brother John and I,
My brother John was forced to go,
Which to an only brother he has borne
If still his brother lived, or to the file
Bearing his brother on his back. I have seen him,
'Tis of the elder brother I am speaking;
And that he had one Brother— That is but
In him was somewhat checked; and, when his Brother
His absent Brother still was at his heart.
He sought his brother Leonard.—You are moved!
And, looking at the grave, he said, "My Brother!"
And on the vacant throne his worthier Brother placed.
"It is the king, my brother!" and, by sound
—O Brother! to my knowledge lost so long,
I, Brother! only should be king in name,
Thus was a Brother by a Brother saved;
And her twin Brother, had the parent seen,
Your grown-up and your baby brother;
Year followed year, my Brother! and we two,
My Brother, and on all which thou hast lost.
Father, sister, friend, and brother.
A Brother of the dancing leaves;
All men who know thee call thy brother,
Each wave, one and t'other, speeds after his brother;
Cried out, "Good brother, why so fast?"
And we, as brother should with brother,
And Ghimmer-crag, his tall twin brother,
Of that which went before the brother,
Though man for brother man has ceased to feel.
Thy elder Brother I would be,
Nor haply less the Brother whom I marked,
Sir Tristram, dear to thousands as a brother,
O Brother! I reverse the choice
Bear with me, Brother! quench the thought
With Strength, her venturesome brother;
Her recreant Brother—he prevailed
Be Brother now to Brother joined!
The injunction by her Brother laid;
"Your noble brother hath been spared;
Your brother lives—he lives—is come
To seek her Brother forth she went,
Her youngest Brother brought it home,
Doth man of brother man a creature make
Pleased with your triumphs o'er his brother Space,
No brother, no mate has he near him—while I
Of this the very brother.

Brother—continued.

Brother to brother, this is all we can.
Of sorrow;—feel for all, as brother Men!
What thou askest, noble Brother,
Could have seen my Brother die!
To his Brother then he came,
And unto Pandarus, his own Brother dear,
My Brother, too, in loving thee,
Have lent his wing, my Brother dear,
—Brother and friend, if verse of mine
How fast has brother followed brother,
From him, a brother at the cottage meal,
Off he descends to nurse the brother pair,
Is come as a brother thy sorrows to share,
Pursues thy brother—this to thee is known;
In many things my brother, chiefly here
I called him Brother, Englishman, and Friend!
Brother to many more. In this mixed sort
O Friend! O Poet! brother of my soul,
From the injustice of our brother men—
The brother followed; and was seen no more!
"Though born a younger brother, need was none
To her loved brother and his shy compeer.
And one, like them, a brother of our hearts,
Brotherhood. A work accomplished by the brotherhood
Upon that unsubstantial brotherhood
A brotherhood of venerable Trees,
Children of Art, that claim strange brotherhood
This fair unrivalled Brotherhood,
Through lawless will the Brotherhood was driven
In objects where no brotherhood exists
Lessons of genuine brotherhood, the plain
Such as the daring brotherhood of late
Of the whole human race one brotherhood.
Spread by a brotherhood of lofty elms,
Of brotherhood is broken: time has been
The bond of brotherhood, when he sees them go,
With world-excluding groves, the brotherhood
Of the monastic brotherhood, upon rock
Of a poor brotherhood who walk the earth
The common creature of the brotherhood,
Brotherly. With brotherly resemblance. Turn your steps
Than brotherly forgiveness may attend.
Brother's. And Leonard, chiefly for his Brother's sake,
Did place upon his brother's head the crown,
In purity for his brother's son, a man
For she her brother's charge revered,
Yea, by her brother's very name,
But here her Brother's words have failed;
His Brother's life, for Lands' and Castle's sake?
Asked it by a brother's name,
A brother's Child, most tenderly beloved!
To comfort me while with a brother's love
That pressed upon his brother's house; for books
Brothers. To weep that I am gone. Brothers in arms!
"Sisters and brothers, little maid,
It seems, these Brothers have not lived to be
Two Brothers clomb, and, turning face from face,
Embraced those Brothers upon earth's wide plain;
Untried our Brothers have been loved
Suit to his Brothers often made
Partners in faith, and brothers in distress,
Brothers in soul! though distant times
Ere the Brothers through the gateway
To Palestine the Brothers took their way.
Upon equal ground; that we were brothers all
My brothers and myself. There rose a crag,
And I and my three brothers, orphans then,
Son, husband, brothers—brothers side by side,
—Those seven fair brothers variously were moved
—Not brothers they in feature or attire,
On Deep-dale-head, and Brothers water (named
From those two Brothers who were drowned therein);
All brothers, long endeared by kindred pain,
Brothers'. His Brothers' wisdom or their love—Brother-Shepherds. Were brother-shepherds on their native hills.
Brough. Rejoiced is Brough, right glad, I deem,
Brough'm. We have them at the feast of Brough'm.
Brought. Brought from without to inward misery.
And nothing to my mind a sweeter pleasure brought.
Were not for me, brought up in nothing ill:
Through which his Wife, to that kind shelter brought,
No kindred sufferer, to his death-place brought.
But what has brought you hither? A slight affair,
From Palestine, and brought with me a heart,
Revealed by lustre brought with it from heaven;
And brought me food. Have I not cause to love her?
I thank you for that hint. He shall be brought
With the glad tidings which this day hath brought;
But his own crime had brought on him this doom,
—if I had brought him along with me,
till I am brought to a felon's end.
And brought it forth into the light:
"He took thee in his arms, and in pity brought thee home:

Brought—continued.

"Thou know'st that twice a day I have brought these in this can . . .
O thou! whose fancies from afar are brought;
Had brought upon him; and we had conjectured,
Whom from the borders of the Lake we brought,
Would have brought us more good than a burthen
of gold . . .
The high-born Vaudracour was brought, by years
Hadst been brought up upon thy Father's knees.
Their union brought, will they repay the debt,
A track, that brought us to a slip of lawn,
That instant brought two strippling bees . . .
Night has brought the welcome hour,
New heavens succeeded, by the dream brought forth:
That is from joyless regions brought!
And what the morning brought to light,
What wealth the show to me had brought:
And brought them from the Cherokees;
He with him many tales he brought
About its mother's heart, and brought
Should be to public justice brought;
That brought him up to manhood's prime.
Brought from a pensive thought a happy place.
That brought their precious liberty again.
Fresh as if Evening brought their natal hour,
And is She brought within the power
Strict passage, through which sighs are brought,
To a thick wood he soon is brought,
Till brought to a deserted quarry—
It brought full many a sin to light . . .
Together they brought back the Corse.
Yet to my mind this scanty Stream is brought
At thy meek bidding, shadowy Power! brought forth;
Elates not, brought far nearer the grave's rest,
For all that thou, as if from heaven, hast brought
Are brought in ships from far . . .
And then, when he was brought to land,
Brought low a Power, which from its home
Hath brought forth no such souls as we had thee,
That Thou hast brought our warfare to an end,
That He has brought our warfare to an end,
The glittering crowns and garlands which it brought—
Brought to this genial climate, when disease
Has to our generation brought and brings
Brought to the ark are coming evermore,
New love of many a rival image brought
That brought me down that sunless river,
If thee fond Fancy ever brought
More than by smoothest pathway may be brought
By wanderers brought from foreign laods . . .
And every day brought with it tidings new
Thus suddenly, and brought so near?
Involved whate'er by love was brought
To Kylstone he the tidings brought;
His own life into danger brought
A Spearman brought him to the ground.
Her chance and change, that hath been brought
Her youngest Brother brought it home;
But tears in our loved Helvellyn's depths was brought,
That tears into his eyes were brought.
So sad a sigh has brought?
It is the generous Spirit, who, when brought —What trick of memory to my voice hath brought
Is Death, for one to that condition brought,—
By what evil spirit brought?
Another was on Thursday brought,
They brought, each visiting
She cried, till to the Jewry she was brought,
How from her inmost heart a sigh she brought,
For birds we are—all here together brought,
You see to what end he has brought his grey hairs,
To Arno's side hath brought him, and he charmed
That stripped of arms I to my end am brought Here, brought from far, his horse found rest,—
Which brought us bitter . . .
But none of those fair Graces brought . . .
Among the dust till he had brought Huge goblets are brought forth; they crown the wine;
Continued, brought me to my hermitage . . .
Desert me not, forthwith shall be brought down
That brought with it a regular desire . . .
That must have fallen upon him had he brought . . .
Our cottage door, and evening soon brought on
Were flown, and autumn brought its annual show
Upon a desert coast, that having brought . . .
In look and air, from that new region brought,
To have, for instance, brought upon the scene
Brought to such spectacle a milder sadness,
Upon his knee, whom he had thither brought
From byre or field the kine were brought; in the sheep
This notwithstanding, being brought more near
That from the press of Paris duly brought
My sorrow; for I brought with me the faith
Hereafter brought in charge against mankind.
They who with clumsy desperation brought Brought less encouragement, and unto these . . .

Brought—continued.

With all the sorrow that it brought, appeared . . .
Some inward agitations thence are brought,
Vague and unsound; and having brought the books
When every day brought with it some new sense . . .
Add now, O Friend! this history is brought . . .
On all things which the moving seasons brought . . .
His earnings might supply, and brought away . . .
Or pleased their fancies, with the wares he brought.
Shaggy and grey, had meanings which it brought
And poverty brought on a petted mood . . .
Brought from the cupboard wine and stouter cheer,
With wigg'd Messengers; who daily brought . . .
Promptly received, as prodigally brought, . . .
Power may be trained, and renovation brought . . .
Who, from their lowly mansions hither brought,
A tired way-faring man, once I was brought . . .
Brought yesterday from our sequestered dell . . .
Hope from that quarter would, I know, have brought . . .
"Brought from the woods the honeysuckle twines
(The hour of life to which he then was brought)
To that complexion brought which prudence trusts
in
What renovation had been brought; and what . . .
Brow. 'Mid groves of clouds that crest the mountain's brow . . .
Or, when upon the mountain's silent brow . . .
Appalling havoc! but serene his brow,
And grey-haired men look up with livelier brow,—
Their brow sublime: in shelter there to bide . . .
Over her brow like dawn of gladness threw;
Though inward anguish damped the Sailor's brow,
And, if my brow gives back their light,
In which a love-knot on a lady's brow . . .
And your brow is free from scorn, . . .
To one or other brow of those twin Peaks . . .
High on the trunk's projecting brow,
Thus leans, with hanging brow and body bent
For at the bottom of the brow . . .
Under the brow of old Helvellyn—
Is the light ash! that, peadent from the brow
Three leaps have borne him from this lofty brow
That wore a threatening brow; . . .
It is not a brow inviting . . .
Her brow hath opened on me—see it there,
Ascending from behind the motionless brow
I see the dark-brown curls, the brow,
With his hands pressed against his brow,
Aerial Rock—whose solitary brow . . .
That change:—age on thy brow was smoothed—
thy cold . . .
His visionary brow: a glow-worm lamp,
Fresh as the star that crowns the brow of morn;
Invisible? yet Spring her genial brow . . .
With brow in penitential sorrow bent!
Take from her brow the withering flowers of eve,
And to that brow life's morning wreath restore;
'Tis said that to the brow of you fair hill
The piercing eye, the thoughtful brow,
That must have followed when his brow . . .
Wear rather in thy bonds a cheerful brow:
Her haughty brow against the coast of France,
If a new Temple lift her votive brow . . .
Helvellyn's brow severe? . . .
Oa Rcom's silent brow . . .
Had flown with mine to old Helvellyn's brow,
Descend, and, on the brow of ancient Rome . . .
Change, with a brow not insolent, though stern . . .
And pallid brow, a melancholy lustre . . .
Or torrent from the mountain's brow, . . .
I helmeted a brow though white, . . .
In self-defence with warlike brow . . .
Full off the unworthy brow of lawless force; . . .
Screams round the Arch-druid's brow the sea-mew
—white . . .
Those flowers of chivalry, to blod the brow
With holiday delight on every brow . . .
Weep not, meek Bride! uplift thy timid brow.
When each pale brow to dread hosannas bowed . . .
When darkness creeping o'er thy silver brow . . .
Nemean victor's brow; less bright was worn,
Still round my shattered brow in beauty wave." . . .
A sleeping infant's brow, or wakeful eye . . .
The old Tower's brow yellowed as with the beams
"Shine so, my aged brow, at all hours of the day!"
The crown of thorns around his bleeding brow . . .
Her brow was smooth and white: . . .
The Conqueror, crowns the Conquered, on this brow
Around a younger brow! . . .
Wherever peace is on the brow, . . .
A silver line, that runs from brow to crown . . .
Hooded the open brow that overawed . . .
Of a perpetual dawn from brow and cheek . . .
To snatch a sprig from Chaucer's reverend brow—
Thus, gifted Friend, but with the placid brow . . .

Brow—continued.

Or when his tiny gems shall deck his brow :
That o'er thy brow he shed ;
Fit for the glimmering brow of Proserpine.
His brow with laurel green ;
Darken the brow of this memorial Stone,
Molest ; may gentle breezes fan thy brow ;
Droops, and o'er canopies his regal brow,
She hears, upon the mountain forest's brow,
Or gazing from the mountain's silent brow,
And wilder graces sport around their brow ;
The Despot's laureled brow ?
Out of its leafy brow, the more to awe
"A cheerful smile unbends the wrinkled brow,
Or as a traveller, who has gained the brow
In which a love-knot on a lady's brow,
Upon the insolent aspiring brow
He was all fire : no shadow on his brow
The shade of discontent which on his brow
With myrtle-wreathed tiara on his brow,
Its kindly influence, o'er the yielding brow
Not less than beautiful ; an open brow
An English Sovereign's brow ! and to the throne
Upon the haughty maiden's brow, 'tis but
Was her broad forehead ; like the brow of one
—Bright garland form they for the pensive brow
Lay beautiful on Snowdon's sovereign brow,
Of fire, incensed beneath his hoary brow,
Beneath his ample brow, in darkness paired,—
Of his fair eyes, by his capacious brow,
—And, surely, he, that spake with kindling brow,
Of some stern castle, mouldering on the brow
Whereon our fathers sate. And mark his brow !
Yet mutinously knits his angry brow.

Browed. See Dusky-browed, Stern-browed.

Brown. See Dark-brown, Red-brown.

The rear through iron brown betrays a sullen gleam.
And her brown little-ones around her leads,
Here, on the brown wood-cottages they sleep,
And when a gathering weight of shadows brown
And what if my poor cheek be brown ?
Her skin was of Egyptian brown.
Green, sable, shining yellow, shadowy brown,
A golden spear to swallow ! and that brown
Which a brown merion half-concealed,
And clad in homely russet brown ?
Hopeless of further growth, and brown and sere
In the brown park, in flocks, the troubl'd deer
On the low brown wood-huts delighted sleep
Of that brown ridge, sole outlet of the vale
To mix the manly brown with silver grey.

Browner. Spires, rocks, and lawns a browner night
O'er spreads ;

Brownie's. Is warbling near the BROWNIE'S Den.

Brows. Whose brows, the day that she was styled
And half, by knitting of his brows
For worthless brows, while in the pensive shade
Intrenched your brows ; ye gloried in each scar :
Or wiped his honourable brows
Age ! twine thy brows with fresh spring flowers,
The sober Hills thus deck their brows
By more deserving brows.—Yet so ye prop,
They bind the unoffending creature's brows
To deck your stern Defenders' modest brows !
Soft breezes fanning your rough brows—the night
When first our infant brows their lustre won ;
The garland withering on their brows ;
From that time forth did for his brows disown
Of yon wild cave, whose jagged brows are frieged

Feelingly their brows incline
To twine around the Christian's brows,
And watch, while on your brows the cross ye make,
So shall that earthly crown thy brows have worn
As calmly, underneath the pleasant brows
But had not tamed his eye ; that, under brows
Orbanceless, wreathed around their sunburnt brows,
Down he sits ; his brows he knits ;

Browed. Browed by the side of dashing waterfalls ;

Browning. The White Doe on the Mountain Browing,

Bruca. Young Adam Bruce beside her lay,
The Bruce had been selected ;
If Bruce hath loved sincerely,
Rushed forth, and at the heart of Bruce
And Bruce, as soon as he had slain
By Ellen's side the Bruce is laid ;

Bruce's. And, falling into Bruce's arms,
Bruges. Bruges I saw attired with golden light
In Bruges town is maoy a street

Brulse. And safe without a bruise or wound

Bruised. His head was bruised, and there was blood about him—

Brun. Less than the painted Magdalene of Le Brun, Bruno's. From Bruno's forest screams the affrighted jay,
From Bruno's forest screams the frightened jay,
She ceased to speak, but while St. Bruno's pines
Brunswick. That eve, the Star of Brunswick shone

Brush. But she, God love her ! feared to brush
Your Minister would brush away
Brush the too happy tear ?

Brush—continued.

To brush the still breast of a crystal lake.
Brush it away, or cloud pass over it ;

Brushed. Brushed by the current of the water-
breeze ;
Brushed by the owl's wing ;

Brushing. Brushing with lucid wands the water's face :
Made vocal by their brushing wings,

Brutal. With brutal laughter and most foul allusion,
Not even in theirs—whose brutal violence
Beneath the brutal sword ?—Her haughty Schools

Brute. "I'm helping this poor dying brute."
Calm is the well-deserving brute,
See the first mighty Hunter leave the brute—
Brute rapine, or with gentle lure she tames.
From both sides ; vetera thunders (the brute test
Our varying moods, on human kind or brute,
Not oftentimes, I trust, as we, poor brute !

Of forms created the most vile and brute,
Whence human kind, and brute ; what natural powers
Chained to its object in brute slavery
Imparted—to brute matter. I rejoice,
As a brute mean, without acknowledgment
The paralytic man, and for the brute—
In Scripture sanctified—the patient brute,
Human and brute, possessors undisturbed

Brute's. How the poor brute's condition, forced to rue Brutes. See Fellow-brutes.
Only in our relations to the brutes
God, who instructs the brutes to scent

Brutish. To that abhorred den of brutish vice—
By the deformities of brutish vice :

Brutus. How Brutus came, by oracles impelled,
To Brutus—that tyrannic power is weak,
As Brutus did to Virtue, ' Liberty,

Bubble. Though a breath made it) like a bubble blown

Bubbled. There were two springs which bubbled side by side,

Bubbles. Where bubbles burst, and folly's dancing foam
Bubbles gliding under ice,
Its dignity ; with gifts he bubbles o'er
And congloriated bubbles undissolved,

Buccaneer. For both, my honest Buccaneer !
Bucer. Bucer, Erasmus, or Melancthon, read !
Buchanan. How did Buchanan waste the Sage's lore !
Buck. To let slip upon buck or doe.
Bucket. Does like an empty bucket mount.
Buckler. A falchion, and a buckler small,
Buckles. See Rosebuckles.

Bud. See Rosebud.
Sunshine and shower be with you, bud and bell !
It falls not here on bud or bloom.
"When spring came on with bud and bell,
Of bud, leaf, blade, and flower—was fashioning
Where bud, and bloom, and fruitage, glowed,
Killing the bud o'er which in vain we grieve.
Flower and bud together fall ;

Budded. With songs the budded groves resounding ;
Like cattle through the budded brooms ;

Budding. The budding groves seemed eager to urge on
As budding pines in spring ;
The budding flowers, peeped forth the nest
Among the budding trees,
With budding, fading, faded flowers
Through fresh green fields, and budding groves among,
Beneath the broom or budding thorn,
Beneath the budding beeches.
His budding courage to the proof ; and here
Of winter storms, yet budding cheerfully ;
The budding twigs spread out their fan,
While blossoms and the budding spray
And see the budding leaves the branches throng,
A blackbird's whistle in a budding grove.
The budding rose above the rose full blown.
And all the earth was budding with these gifts
Those six fair Daughters, budding yet—not one,
In the bare twigs, each little budding place

Budding-time. A congregation in its budding-time

Buds. Prized above all buds and bells
Of treasure sucked from buds and bells,
The buds, and freshens the young leaves,
With buds on every bough !
Hopeful and promising with buds and flowers ;
Like blighted buds ; or clouds that mimicked laod

Buffeted. A cheerful mind,—and buffeted with bond,
And buffeted at will by rain and storm.

Buffoons. Inviting ; with buffoons against buffoons

Buffo's. The box resound on Viscount Buffo's ear.

Bugle. Hath blown his bugle horn.
Must blow to-night his bugle horn. Had I

Bugles. The bugles that so joyfully were blown ?

Build. Kind pious hands did to the Virgin build Strong to o'erturn, strong also to build up.
We build up the fire, we're saug and warm ;

Buried—continued.

The little Babe was buried there,
The little Babe lies buried there,
And hath buried deep his book;
Buried in glory, far beyond the scope
Buried together in yon gloomy mass
Though often buried like a bird.
But Thee, deep buried in the silent tomb,
Lies buried in this lonely place.
Of his devices—buried, lost!
Faith buried deeper in her own deep breast
But half their host is buried:—rock on rock
Gone are they, viewless as the buried dead:
A vault where the bodies are hurried upright!
And straightway buried he should be
Was buried by her Mother's side.
Is hidden, buried in its monthly grave;
And yours, my buried Little-ones! am I;
Buried beneath the glittering Lake,
"Son of my buried Son, while thus thy hand
Inglorious, buried in the dusky wood;
Lying full three parts buried among tufts
Secluded, but not buried; and with song
Down a rocky mountain, buried now and lost
—Call Archimedes from his buried tomb
All buried with me without monument

Burke. Genius of Burke! forgive the pen seduced

Burly. See Hurly-burly.

Burn. How 'twill burn down the taller; and they all
She weeps, she weeps—my brain shall burn for hours
Early at evening did it burn—and late,
Soft as a guiding star that cheers, but cannot burn.
If stately passions in me burn,
With nobler zeal I burn;
Which might not burn itself to rest,
And on he drives with cheeks that burn
The lamp of faith, lost Friend! too faintly burn;
Burn all the statutes and their selves:
And, kindling at their lustre, if I burn,
His brain will burn, his stout heart split asunder.
And Christian monuments, that now must burn
Their eyes away in sorrow, others burn
The tapers burn; the odorous incense feeds
As one who rightly taught how zeal should burn.
So that they burn forth in great martyrdom.
And maketh them to burn, as in a fire,
Let them smoke, let them burn, not a straw would he care!

While burn in his full eyes the glorious tears.
Where fierce the rays of woe collected burn.
Burn to the socket. Many a passenger
Fret, burn, and struggle, and in soul am there;

Burned. Burned like a fire among his men;
Where tapers burned, and mass was sung,
But to his purposes, that burned
The fire of ancient Galedonia burned:
On the dim altar burned continually,
"The fire, that burned so brightly to our wish,

Burning. Tipt with eye's latest gleams of burning red.
His burning eyes with fearful light illumed.
His burning eyelids stretched and stiff as lead;
With naked feet walked over burning ploughshares.
On a dead sea under a burning sky.
In which, from burning heat, or tempest driving far and-wide,

Two burning months let summer oveleap,
Lamps of faith, now burning dim,
'Tis spent—this burning day of June!
A burning of portentous red;
The secrets of the burning Waste;
Of burning Africa.
And on the pillow lays her burning head.
That, burning independent of the mind,
Across her burning breast,
Lo! in the burning west, the craggy nape
Over the burning wilderness, and charge
And everlasting deeds to burning words!
Corded, and burning at the social stake;"
Satellites burning in a lucid ring
Like Ocean burning with purple flame;
And, even within the burning zones of earth,
O hush unburnt! burning in Moses' sight!
Stately, and burning in his pride, divides
To teach their limbs along the burning road
Or crown of burning seraphs as they sit
Had settled, "Tis," said I, "a burning day:
The burning sunshine, or a transient shower;
Of hay-makers, beneath the burning sun
Retained a flashing eye, a burning palm,
Spare, burning sun of midsummer, these sods,
Amid the burning town the Grecians domineer.

Burnished. Is hushed, and like a burnished mirror glows,
They burnished her. From touch of this new power
'Twas now for me a burnished silver shield

Burn-mill. The sweets of Burn-mill meadow;

Burns. No purer essence, than the one that burns,
The west, that burns like one dilated sun,
And burns with a clear and steady light;
That at my will burns on the dewy lawn,
Ere martyr burns, or patriot bleeds!
He burns—transmuted to a dusky fire—

Burns—continued.

So burns yon Taper 'mid a black recess
Where Burns is laid.
Over the grave of Burns we hung
She traioed her Burns to win applause
I sought the untimely grave of Burns;
That burns for Poets in the dawning east;
And festive gladness, burns not one that dares Where Burns ploughed up the Daisy." Far and wide

She burns, she frets—by Juno's rancour stung;
Insatiable looks, and gazing burns.
Burns, like an unconsuming fire of light,

Burnt. See Sunburnt.

Like red-hot iron burnt into my heart.
Old Man! my wrath is as a flame burnt out,
The sun has burnt her coal-black hair;
Burnt on with ever-strengthening light, enshrined
Kindled and burnt among the sapless twigs
Burr. His lips with joy they burr at you;
Burr, burr—now Johnny's lips they burr, burr, burr,
And Johnny's lips they burr, burr, burr,
Checked in your course by many a teasing burr;.

Burring. With burring note, which Industry and Sloth

Burrow. Hares couch, and rabbits burrow!

Burrs. And Johnny burrs, and laughs aloud;
Burst. But what a sudden burst of overpowering light!

As if my heart would burst; and so I left him.
Burst on the mountains with hell-rousing force.
Commissioned by the Band, burst in upon us.
Might lead to good—I saw it and burst forth,
And wish, as if my heart would burst.
"Princess, at this burst of goodness,
And where the mightier Waters burst
His eyes will burst—his heart will break—
When hark a burst of doleful sound!
Burst, when repose grew wearisome;
That tears burst forth again. Did gleams appear?
Where bubbles burst, and folly's dancing foam
For once I burst my bands, and cry, applaud!"
Volcanic burst, earthquake, and hurricane,
With a new burst of spring.
And with that word, she into tears burst out.
Pain's wild rebellious burr proclaims her rights aloud.

Proudly revealed with instantaneous burst,
Had slumbered, now in opposition burst
In sudden proclamation, burst from haunt
Had burst innocuous. Say in bolder words,
But burst and spread in deluge through the land.
Of human anthems,—choral song, or burst

Bursteth. The music bursteth into second life;

Bursting. Theence bursting shrill did all remark prevent;

Her sons were bursting forth, to dwell at ease.
Fierce as a flood-gate bursting at midnight
And chaser bursting here with one dire smart.
Black tempests bursting, blacker still in view!
Of poesy; a bursting forth

But, bursting forth above the waves, the Sun

Of short-lived transport, like a torrent bursting,
Has heretofore made known; that bursting forth
And let the bursting clouds to fury rouse

Bursts. While from the crowd bursts forth a rapturous noise

In bursts of outrage spread your judgments wide,
—Bursts from the troubl'd Larch's giant boughs.
Through bursts of sunshine and through flying showers,

Or happy blunder triumphed, bursts of glee
Thus interrupted by uneasy bursts

Burthen. Though loth to be a burthen on his age.
A burthen, now with fortitude sustained,
I have borne my burthen to its destined end.
My burthen to support.

Would have brought us more good than a burthen
of gold,

"A simple burthen, Sir, a little Singio-bird."
The silver-shower, whose reckless burthen weighs
And your huge burthen, safe from harm,

In which the burthen of the mystery,
Bends to the favourite burthen. Moon and stars
On the crushed heart a heavier burthen lay.
Whose vague burthen is—"OUR KINGDOM'S HERE!"

What though our burthen be not light
Panting beneath the burthen of their wool,
A burthen of the earth! 'Tis Nature's law
That burthen of my own unnatural self,

But from this awful burthen I full soon
Accounted with his burthen and his staff;
The burthen of existence. Science then
To shake the burthen off? Ah! there was felt,

She bore a secret burthen; and full soon
That, with like burthen of effects most prized
New wealth upon the burthen of the old,
Who, with their burthen, traverse hill and dale,

Burthened. See Gullt-burthened.

These fields were burthened when they came to me ; Skilful and bold, the horse and burthened sled

Burthens. With other burthens than the crop it bore. Fraught with their burthens ; and a way as smooth

Burthensome. " My life, Heaven knows, hath long been burthensome ; And burthensome ; and lastly, that poor few

Bury. To bury this poor Thorn for ever. And a huge mass, to bury or to hide, Then sped themselves to bury him full fast ;

Bury'd. The redbreast peace had bury'd it in wood, Bush. See May-bush.

Hung there, no bush proclaimed to old and poor. I followed on from brake to bush ; And in this bush our sparrow built her nest,

In bush and brake, in black and green ; Ere a leaf is on a bush, In bush, and tree, and sky,

" Where there is not a bush or tree, 'Mid its own bush of leafless eglaetion— Whose first-drawo breath from bush and tree

He stood behind a bush of elder, O bush unburnt ! burning in Moses' sight ! In the next bush that was me fast beside,

Good Cuckoo, seek some other bush or brake, While every bush and tree, the coutry through,

Bushes. While fluttering in the bushes. Among the bushes and trees ; Then all is hushed ; the bushes rustle near,

Bushy. Of the elder's bushy head ; Buster. Where hum on busier wing her happy bees ; And the poor Boy was busier still, with work of anxious heed.

Here, as 'mid busier scenes, ground steep and rough, While hum with busier joy her happy bees ; Thoughts are not busier in the mind of man

Was busier with his task—to rid, to plant, Bustles. Busties the eye with images and forms

Asked him in scorn what business there he had ; Holla ! No, no, the business must be done.— I have good business there. I met you at the threshold, How say you ? in disguise ?— But what's your business I shall have business with you, Marmaduke ;

For me, I have business, as you heard, with Oswald, With a few drops of blood cut short the business ;

No, no, my Friend, you may pursue your business— Of the world's business to go wild alone ;

And find elsewhere his business or delight ; Yet some did think that he had little business here :

Whose only business was to flow ; By chance of business coming within reach

That no one else may have business near them, When little other business stirred,

As if life's business were a summer mood ; Romans for travel grt, for business gown'd ;

The slave of business, time, or care of life, Of the mind's business : these are the degrees

His business as he likes. Far other show And ordinary business without care ;

Of business, care, or pleasure ; or resigned Whose only business is to perish !—true

Time, place, and business, all at his command !— In him it was scarcely a business of art,

To dialogues of business, love, or strife ; A man of business and expense, and went

Towards human business, to a privileged world Her talk, her business, pleased me ; and no less

Sick of its business, of its pleasures tired, The business of the day to come, unborn,

Men who, to business of the world untrained, And all the business of the elements,

Of business roused, or pleasure, ere their time, Here may I roam at large,—my business is,

On rural business passing to and fro On his own business, and the goings on Buskined. With which his genius shook the buskined stage. Bust. The Bust that speaks and moves its goggling eyes,

I have a house that I can call my own;
I will not call on Heaven to vouch for me,
Now she is gone, I fain would call her back.
I love her, though I dare not call her daughter.
Prattling upon his knees, to call him Father—
We call, and scorn the other as Time's spendthrift;
Who will turn pale upon you, call you murderer,
And doth call out for vengeance. Do not add,
How could he call upon his Child!—O Friend!

Came—continued.

Deep into patient Earth, from whose smooth breast
it came !
Came to this hidden pool, whose depths surpass Came those live herbs ? by what hand were they sown
When alternations came of rage
It came ; and Francis Norton said,
Thus, with his sons, when forth he came
She was before she hither came ;
From every side came noisy swarms
And, mixed with these, to Brancepeth came
Came fraught with kindly sympathies.
(While from the pendent woodbine came
Came One who, with sedate respect,
" I witnessed when to York they came—
A troop of deer came sweeping by ;
So to her feet the Creature came,
Of mind, to Rylstone back she came ;
For that she came ; there oft she sate
Rose to the God from whom it came !
But whence it came we know not, nor behold
But from what world She came, what woe or weal
While from the Papal Unity there came,
But whence came they who for the Saviour Lord
Yet came prepared as glorious lights to shine,
What came from heaven to heaven by nature clings,
They came,—and, while the moral tempest roars
Glory to God ! and to the Power who came
Or came and was and is, yet meets the eye
Till this bright Stranger came, fair as day-break,
Came and delivered him, alone he sped
Where once came monk and nun with gentle stir,
Yet fetched from Paradise that honour came,
Came studious Taste ; and many a pensive stranger
Came Barons bold, with store of gold,
Doubt came not, nor regret—
The tears which came to Matthew's eyes
" There came from me a sigh of pain
And, ere we came to Leonard's rock,
It came, and we were glad ; yet tears were shed ;
Our tears from passion and from reason came,
And who he was, and whence he came ;
Came, in that service, to a glorious work,
For state-dishonour black as ever came
Came forth—a light, though but as of daybreak,
Came not, but in a lane partook his bread.
Came ministers of peace, intent to rear
Save He who came as rightful Heir
But silent and by stealth he came,
To his Brother then he came,
'Twas well enough, when summer came,
Which came, but it has passed into a prayer—
And oft, as either Guardian came,
Came forth the Maid—" In me . . .
The passion of a moment came . . .
This little Child, as he came to and fro,
After her little Child, and he came not ;
Immediately he came, not tarrying,
To me she came, and thus to me did say,
Till to a lawn I came all white and green,
Then straightaway came the Nightingale to me,
Came as he rode by places of the town
From whence to Thebes came griefs in multitude.
And hither home I came when it was eve ;
Stretched out for my acceptance,—but Death came.
By a blest Husband guided, Mary came
She came, though meek of soul, in seemly pride
Sea—Ship—drowned—Shipwreck—so it came,
And when the precious hours of leisure came,
To me alone there came a thought of grief :
And that imperial palace whence he came.
And came her services to proffer :
Soon to the Dwelling of my Love I came,
When after, this man's Ghost unto him came
When Time was young, an inspiration came . . .
A prophecy : poetic numbers came
With brisk and eager steps ; and came, at length,
Came hopes still higher, that with outward life
Survived, and, when the European came
That came with soft alarm, like hurtless light
Came sweeping through the darkness, spinning still
By nourishment that came unsought ; for still
And languidly pursued. When summer came,
We came with weightier purses, that sufficed
Came from yon fountain ? " Thou, my Friend !
art one
For now a trouble came into my mind
And sorrow is not there ! The seasons came,
Came strengthened with a superadded soul,
Came from my mind, which on the setting sun
Came and returned me to my native hills.
Those walks in all their freshness now came back
Strength came where weakness was not known to be,
At least not felt ; and restoration came
Came ever and anon a breath-like sound,
Came creeping over me, when at my side,
Of silence came and baffled his best skill,
Came in reply, translated by our feelings,
Deserted and deceived, the Spoiler came . . .

Came—continued.

With flourishing trumpet, came in full-blown state
His story, whence he came, and who he was . . .
Did knowingly conform itself ; there came . . .
All that took place within me came and went Far less than craving power ; yet knowledge came,
Came, of themselves, or at her call derived
Its freight of public news, the fever came,
Distinction open lay to all that came . . .
By a brook-side, we came, a roofless pile,
In the tranquillity of nature, came . . .
From hell came sanctified like airs from heaven.
To me came rarely charged with natural gifts,
Came back upon me, so that some few tears
Within a chest imprisoned ; how they came . . .
Came to a bottom, where in former times
We came, and roused the shepherd who attends
That went before my steps. Thereafter came
She came, no more a phantom to adorn
Thither I came, and there, amid the gloom . . .
With those whom he saw suffer. Hence it came
From that forsaken spring ; and no one came
Can scarcely bear it now in mind, there came
A strange surprise and fear came to my heart,
That fed upon the Common, thither came . . .
We sate together, sighs came on my ear,
I knew not how, and hardly whence they came.
And when a stranger horseman came, the latch
Was served by rival advocates that came . . .
To comfort ;—but how came ye ?—if yon track
" That I came hither ; neither have I found
Other support, not scrupulous whence it came ;
They came and go, appeared and disappear,
That had beguiled the work from which he came,
Ceased, when she learned through what mishap I came,
The tidings came that she whom he had wooed
Within his Father's gates.—Whence came he ?
—clothed
He came, the ghost of beauty and of health,
Thoughts, which the rich are free from, came and crossed
Hither she came ; here stood, and sometimes knelt
When hither came its last Inhabitant . . .
And with a lady's mien,—From far they came,
Came at that moment, ringing noisily,
Of Tell came trooping from a thousand huts,
Who from their dwellings came not forth to join
Came on a war-horse sumptuously attired,
Wished-for, or welcome, whereso'er he came—
Down the green field came tripping after us . . .
On Armath's pleasant fields. And now they came,
Were dearer now ? that from the Boy there came
Once to the verge of yon steep barrier came . . .
Alone and devious from afar he came ;
They came, to sojourn here in solitude,
I came not dreaming of unruined life . . .
Camest. First cam'st into the world—as oft befalls
Of London, and from cloisters there, thou camest,
Camdens. With it Camdens soothed an exile's grief ;
Camdens, he the accomplished and the good . . .
Camp. In wood or wilderness, in camp or town,
Henceforth, then, will I never in camp or field
And Men alone are Umpires. To the Camp
Before the Camp, and would that best and wisest
Carry him to the Camp ! Yes, to the Camp . . .
To fit all deeds. Carry him to the Camp !—
We marched to Syria : oft I left the Camp,
Tents of a camp that never shall be razed—
Slept amid that lone Camp on Hardknott's height,
A Camp, and a beleaguered Town,
Confusion through the Camp spread wide ;
Than in fantastic conqueror's roving camp,
Campaign. But husbanded through many a long campaign.
Campaigning. In campaigning I shine . . .
Campania's. More than fulfilled, as gay Campanian's shores
Campbells. Away the seven fair Campbells fly,
For those seven lovely Campbells . . .
Campo. In Pisa's Campo Santo, the smooth floor
Camps. Through courts, through camps, o'er liminary floors ;
Cam's. While Cam's ideal current glided by,
From smooth Cam's silent waters : had we met,
Camus. Old Camus, too, on that prophetic night
Can. (Partial list.)
Now with her empty can the Maiden turned away :
" Thou know'st that twice a day I have brought thee in this can . . .
From whose perverted soul can come no good
Are natural ; and from no one can be learnt
I never can forgive it : but how steadily
For all this world can give. Nay, he composed :
Where he can stab you deepest. Clifford never
But there are Mothers who can see the Babe
This they can do, and look upon my face—
If you can melt a rock, he is your man ;
And long as I can stir I'll dog him,—Yesterday,

 Silence ensued. "O Jupiter, whose care . . .
 Some solace under weight of royal care, . . .
 That book upheld as with maternal care . . .
 A channel paved by man's officious care . . .
 And earnestly to charitable care . . .
 When I was first intrusted to the care . . .
 Who care not, know not, think not what they do, . . .
 The Italian, as he thrids his way with care, . . .
 With care, the master-pamphlets of the day; . . .
 With scrupulous care; but these restrictions soon . . .
 —Now, by thy care befriended, I appear . . .
 As cool refreshing water, by the care . . .
 To weigh with care his words, and to rejoice . . .
 By worldly-mindedness or anxious care . . .
 Of her own thoughts: by some especial care . . .
 With care and sorrow; shoals of artisans . . .
 "Ere my departure, to her care I gave, . . .
 To private interest dead, and public care, . . .
 If love were his sole claim upon their care, . . .
 A pause ensued; and with minuter care . . .
 The little sinuous path of earthly care, . . .
 Maintained with faithful care. And you divine . . .
 Or from its death-like void, with punctual care, . . .
 Distress and care. What then remains?—To seek . . .
 By nature's care from wreck of scattered stones, . . .
 Upon his care, from whom he also looks . . .
 From foul temptations, and by constant care . . .
 Care not for me, he lingers round my door, . . .
 Of Jesus, and his everlasting care, . . .
 And by the care prospective of our wise . . .
 To Nature's care, assisted in her office . . .
 By his own hand disposed with nicest care, . . .
 And every care which transitory things, . . .

 At early morn the careful housewife, led
 Then waits him, cherish'd on her careful breast,
 Was the commodious walk: a careful hand
 With prompt yet careful hands. This done, we paced Carefully. (Though they had long been carefully observed),
 Pieces of money carefully enclosed,
 Before their eyes lay carefully outspread,
Careless. In careless mood he looked at me,
 As careless as if nothing were.
 Careless of hooks, yet having felt the power
 Spread here his careless blossoms, here
 The little careless Broom was left
 Like a careless Prodigal;
 Careless of thy neighbourhood,
 And I will have my careless season
 With careless air and open mien.
 Must vanish, and his careless cheer
 Which the careless shepherd sleeps on,
 Besprinkled with a careless quire,
 And in a light and careless way,
 Careless of flowers that in perennial blow
 And what the little careless innocent
 So careless and disorderly,
 If looked at only with a careless eye;
 Yet are by nature careless of the sun
 And careless hand his alms upon the ground,
 My careless Little-oe, for thee and thine!"
 From street to street with loose and careless mind.
 Of careless youth, unburdened, unalarmed,
 With careless ostentation shouldering up . . .
 Or being regarded with too careless eye,
 Tranquil almost, and careless as a flower
 I had but lent a careless ear, assured
 To careless eyes. And—now convinced at heart.
 My earliest visitations, careless then
 Extends his careless limbs along the front
 The careless stillness of a thinking mind
 The careless wanderer's friend, to him made known
 Who, entering, round him threw a careless glance
 Left and forgotten in his careless way,
 Answered the sick Man with a careless voice—
 Then, speaking in like careless sort, he said
 Of insects chirping out their careless lives . . .
 As books record, and even the careless mind
 Who holds the land in fee, its careless lord!
 In a low voice, yet careless who might hear,
 To shaggy steeps on which the careless goat
 For his own careless head.
Carelessly. Carelessly watched, sport through the summer day,
 This was not wanting, Carelessly I roamed
 Who entered, humming carelessly a tune,
Cares. Those busy cares that would allay my pain;

Carnations. O'er paths they used to deck: carnations, once
Carol. The breeze-like motion and the self-born carol;
Carolled. Have carolled, fancy free,
 And Angels carolled these far-echoed verses—
Carolling. With the sweet bird's carolling,
 Seats of glad instinct and love's carolling,
 A timely carolling.
Carols. The echoes of your rocks my carols wild:
 And carols loud and strong,
 He heard the birds their morning carols sing;
 Carols like a shepherd-boy;
 Who carols thinking of his Love and nest,
 Let loose their carols when they please,
Carouse. A charming beverage for you to carouse.
Caroused. She fearfully caroused.
Carousing. Brim-full of a carousing crew,
Carpenter. With chips is the carpenter strewing his floor?
Carpet. This Lawn, a carpet all alive
 A meadow carpet for the dancing hours.
 And a fair carpet, woven of homespun wool
Carra. Devoured by locusts,—Carra, Gorsas,—add Carriage. His whole bold carriage (which had quelled
 And carriage, marked by unexampled grace.
Carried. Carried about her for a secret grief
 In which the Babe was carried. To a hill,
 "Or him that wicked Pony's carried
 And carried Johnny to the wood.
 A healthy Lad, and carried in his cheek
 Carried the Lady's voice,—old Skiddaw blew
 But thou, a School-boy, to the sea hadst carried
 That carried sceptre-like, o'er tops the head
 By Flatterers carried, mount into a dream
 The massy ways, carried across these heights
 Which the new-comer carried through the waste
 Has carried far into his heart the voice
 Than later days allowed; carried about me,
 Roaming, I carried with me the same heart:
 Upon a broad leaf carried, choicest strings
 In mercy, carried infinite degrees
 Carried so high, that every thought, which looked
 But in projection carried, as she walked
 Or easiest carried, closed the motley train.
 We to the patient creatures carried food
Carries. The snail the horse he carries on his back;
 Far as it carries thee. In some green-bower
 Carries into the centre of the vale
Carrock's. On Carrock's side, a Shepherd-boy?
Carrousel. Of the Carrousel, where so late had lain
Carry. Carry him to the Camp! Yes, to the Camp.
 Because they carry in themselves an earnest
 To fit all deeds. Carry him to the Camp!—
 Oh! lift me up and carry me to the place.
 But whither did you carry him? He was torn,
 Oh carry back my Idiot Boy!
 The babe I carry on my arm,
 With all the sail that he can carry,
 To carry thy glad tidings over heights
 Go, carry to some fitter place
 Might carry to the clouds and to the stars,
 And, wherever they carry their plots and their wiles,
 To carry meaning to the natural heart;
 Can carry virtue, virtue is professed;
Carrying. Our spirits, carrying with them dreams of flowers,
 The Hebrews thus, carrying in joyful state
 Carrying this instrument of woe,
 And carrying inward a serene
 Alternate; carrying holy thoughts and prayers
 Then whispered she, "The Bill is carrying out!"
 Thou tak'st thy way, carrying the heart and soul
 Carrying through ether, in perpetual round,
 Carrying relief for nature's simple wants.
Cars. With trampling horses and refulgent cars—
 With images, and crowns, and empty cars;
 "The very swiftest of thy cars
Cart. A cart and horse beside the rivulet stood;
 Then I'll yoke thee to my cart like a pony in the plough;
 The nails of cart or chariot-wheel have left
Cart's. The cart's whip that on his shoulder rests
Carthage. When here with Carthage Rome to conflict came,
 Achates, with the gifts to Carthage hid;
Carthaginian. Whose desperate shock the Carthaginian fled.
Cart-load. Is a cart-load of turf at an old woman's door?
Cart's. To give a hint of whips and the cart's tail,
Carts. Eight sorry carts, no less a train!
Carva. More toilsome than to carve a beechen bowl
Carved. And lustily the master carved the bread,
 Ha! what is here? and carved by her own hand!
 Say that the Cherubs carved in stone,
 Was carved—a Goddess with a Lily flower,
 But a carved Lotus cast upon the beach
 And carved, on mural cliff's undreaded side,
 —She sees a warrior carved in stone,

Carved—continued.
 Bedlam, and those carved maniacs at the gates,
 Some unknown hand had carved the murderer's name.
 Carved uncouth figures on the heads of sticks—
Carves. —The Shepherd-lad, that in the sunshine carves,
Cascade. Save where, with sparkling foam, a small cascade
 A small Cascade fresh swoln with snows
 One loud cascade in front, and lo!
 Sole light admitted here, a small cascade,
Cascades. All the green summer, to forlorn cascades
Case. See Needle-case.
 His fate was pitied. Him in iron case
 Than a tight case of dungeon walls for shelter
 Died broken-hearted. 'Tis a common case.
 "Sad case for such a brain to hold."
 Sad case, as you may think, for one
 Yet, as she may, for each peculiar case
 Sad case it was, as you may think,
 And them besought to hear her doleful case,
 And iron case were gone; but on the turf,
Cased. Against a Champion cased in adamant.
 Cased in the unfeeling armour of old time,
 Cased in the gleaming mail the monarch wore,
 Cased with its several beads, what myriads there
Casement. See Chamber-casement.
 The red-breast, known for years, which at my casement pecked.
 Is busy at her casement as the swallow
 The Doctor at the casement shows
 And casement closed and door made fast,
 If he resist those casement panes,
 She rose, and toward the close-shut casement drew,
 And at my casement in the wind
 Like a loose casement in the wind
 The casement shade beneath their casement shade
 The casement shade more luscious woodbine binds,
 Casement, and cottage-roof, and stems of trees
 A box, perchance, is from your casement hung
Casket. I have no cases by me ready made
Casket. Poor earthly casket of immortal verse,
Casks. Butlers have simply broached their Lordships casks.

Cast. See Self-cast.
 My soul will cast the backward view,
 —There be whose lot far otherwise is cast:
 Was hopeless, as if cast on some bare rock;
 And stern looks on the man her grey-haired
 Comrade cast.
 When on his own he cast a rueful look.
 Cast off by her Betrayer, she dwells alone,
 I cast a look upon the Girl, and felt
 Upwards I cast my eyes, and, through a crevice,
 Cast round you your mind's eye, and you will learn
 Or mourn-him dead. A man by men cast off,
 Must be cast off.—Know then that I was urged,
 Dragged from his bed, was cast into a dungeon,
 And down into the bottom cast his eye,
 Confounded, I looked up to Heaven, and cast,
 Is all gone by. You have cast off the chains
 His limbs are cast in beauty's mould,
 From floor to roof, all round his eyes the Child with wonder cast,
 He towards his native country cast a looing look.
 Still higher—to be cast thus low!
 In Denmark he was cast away:
 On Johnny vile reflections cast:
 Cast headlong to the pit!
 To seek for thoughts of a gloomy cast,
 Cast up the Stream or down at her beseeching,
 A more than human weight upon his frame had cast.
 Or cast, for lingering death, on unknown strands;
 And not in vain, when thoughts are cast
 That opening—but a look ye cast
 —Cast off your bonds, awake, arise,
 That gives this ragged group to cast
 A piercing look the Widow cast.
 Cast up at random by the snllen wave.
 She cast away, and showed her fulgent head
 From all, and cast a cloud around the fate
 To thy large heart and humble mind, that cast
 Perchance without one look behind me cast,
 Cast off—abandoned by thy rugged Sire,
 Murdered, like one ashore by shipwreck cast,
 Wide Europe heaves, impatient to be cast,
 And has begun—its clouds of sound to cast
 So far from the holy enclosure was cast,
 A Hero cast in Nature's mould,
 Cast far or near a murky shroud;
 Why cast ye back upon the Gallic shore,
 Provoked to envions spleen, he cast
 And, in her struggles, cast ashore;
 But a carved Lotus cast upon the beach
 She cast a Pearl ashore.

Caught—continued.

Had caught the accents of my native speech
Is seen, heard, felt, and caught at every turn,
Yet higher power; had caught from them a tone,
Created for them, catch it, or are caught

Cause.

Cause. To the just cause; and, oh! do thou preside
Though he had little cause to love the abode
And I divine the cause. Do not reproach me:
And you mistake the cause: you hear the woods

But for Idonea—I have cause to think.

But for Idonea—I have cause to think
I am belated, and you must know the cause—
From what has just befallen me I have cause

Whatsoever be the cause, 'tis sure that they who pry and pore.

Whatsoever be the cause, 'tis sure that they who pry and pore
What cause the Hart might have to love this place,

A generous cause a victim did demand.

A generous cause a victim did demand;
And I (as all men may find cause,
Tell to a curious world the cause

Small cause of dire effect! for, surely,

Small cause of dire effect! for, surely,
And ask of Nature from what cause
The homely beauty of the good old cause

In thee a bulwark for the cause of men;

In thee a bulwark for the cause of men;
That this great Servant of a righteous cause
Who to their Country's cause have bound a life

Yet is there cause for gushing tears;

Yet is there cause for gushing tears;
Will cleave to this good cause and me."
I cannot for such cause contend;

All prayers for this cause, or for that!

All prayers for this cause, or for that!
Without the Cause for which they fight;
A cause, which on a needful day

All prayer for this cause or for that;

All prayer for this cause or for that;
Must needs be fatal to our cause.
Looked round—but saw no cause for fear;

Nor wants the cause the panic-striking aid.

Nor wants the cause the panic-striking aid
To heap disgust upon the wretched Cause:
Lures not from what they deem the cause of God.

Armour divine, and conquer in your cause!

Armour divine, and conquer in your cause!
In vain who, for a rightful cause, give breath
Suppliants! the God to whom your cause ye trust

From sense, faith, reason, fancy, of the cause,

From sense, faith, reason, fancy, of the cause,
For she, with scanty cause for pride,
Finds comfort in himself and in his cause;

Then trust thy cause to the arm of Fortitude,

Then trust thy cause to the arm of Fortitude,
The cause of grateful reason to sustain;
The blameless cause lay in the Theme itself.

Tell me the cause why thou dost sing this hymn,

Tell me the cause why thou dost sing this hymn,
And for that cause OSEE I cry; take heed!
That in thy chilliness a cause canst find

A cause he found into the Town to go.

A cause he found into the Town to go,
O cause of woe, that cause has been of bliss:
That cause is of my torment and my sorrow;

As needed kindness, for this single cause.

As needed kindness, for this single cause,
Small cause there is for that fond wish of ours
Yet haply Arno shall be spared all cause

From thence to search the mystic cause of things

From thence to search the mystic cause of things
Oh! in the past if cause there was for shame,
The cause they fought for in their earthly home,

Waged in Freedom's holy cause,

Waged in Freedom's holy cause,
But for this cause, that I had seen him lay
The self-same hourne. And for this cause to thee

Good cause would oft be his to thank the surf.

Good cause would oft be his to thank the surf
A bed of glittering light: I asked the cause:
From the same cause produced, 'mid outward things

For battle in the cause of Liberty.

For battle in the cause of Liberty,
The wish to bring me over to their cause,
Less than might well befit my youth, the cause

Arguments sent from Heaven to prove the cause.

Arguments sent from Heaven to prove the cause,
Complacently the progress of a cause,
And perfect triumph for the better cause.

Have undertaken for a cause so great

Have undertaken for a cause so great

 Or any other cause that hath been named;
 Nor was time given to ask or learn the cause,
 You look at me, and you have cause; to-day
 The cause of Christ and civil liberty,

 To an exalted pitch (the self-same cause . . . 737 Prelude 12. 123

Caused. That, in the undertaking which has caused
 That, in my zeal, I have caused you so much pain.
 Theirs be the blame who caused the woe, not mine!
 From mischief, caused by spells himself had muttered;
 "Alas! and I have caused this woe;
 Grief that devouring waves had caused—or guilt
 Caused by the wish, as knows your sapience,
 For which, with pain, he caused due obsequies
 By false philosophy had caused the woe,
 Thy bounty caused to flourish deathless flowers,
 Or sorrow which his senseless guilt had caused;
 Have caused her to abate the virgin pride,
Causeless. O vain and causeless melancholy!
Causes. Poor Peter from a thousand causes
 And murder causes some sad tears to flow,
 From unknown causes. I was left alone
 Whence, and from deeper causes, all discourse
Causeway. A rude and natural causeway, interposed (More fair than heaven's broad causeway paved with stars)
 That Causeway with incomparable toil!—
 As on the broadening causeway we advance,
Caution. With caution, sift the matter artfully,
 Caution must not be flung aside; remember,
 And which, with caution due, may soon be realized,
 And prudent caution needful to avert
Caution. Be cautious, my dear Master! I perceive
 More cautious as they draw more near;
 By cautious love supplied
 Though weak his step and cautious, he appeared.
 And cautious water-fowl, from distant climes,
Cautionously. The horses cautiously pursue
 He cautiously surveyed.

 Till the caves roar,—and imbecility
 Cliffs, woods and caves, her viewless steps resound
 Within its awful caves.—From year to year
 Which from Siberian caves the Monarch freed,
 To sink, and meet them in their fretted caves,
 Tempestuously let loose from central caves?
 Of tuneful Caves and playful Waterfalls—
 Or in the diver's grasp fetched up from caves

 Of boyhood, many an hour in caves forlorn,
 Dived into caves, and pierced the matted woods,
Cavities. From the projections, wrinkles, cavities,

Gawing. Whose cawing occupants with joy proclaim
 Around their ancient grove with cawing noise
 The cawing rocks, and sea-mews from afar,
Cease. That cease not till night falls, when far and night,
 And cease the acknowledged purpose to withstand;
 For years the work of carnage did not cease,
 The bond of nature, all unkindness cease,
 There cannot come a day when I shall cease
 Conflict must cease, and, in thy frozen heart,
 —Here, Lady! might I cease; but nay, let us before we part
 But when I cease to look, my hand is on my heart.
 That murmur once so dear, when will it cease?
 Their labour did not cease; unless when all
 That could not cease to be. Green leaves were here;
 He did not cease; but cooed—and cooed;
 Where winds and waters cease to strive—
 Glad Hope would almost cease to be
 Nor while sin lasts must effort cease;
 A Spirit whispered, "Let all wonder cease; Thoughts that would stray from Heaven? The dream must cease
 Crying with earnestness that might not cease,
 Nor cease to gaze upon the bold Relief
 Or cease to please the fickle worshipper;
 Their vocal charm; their sparklings cease to please.
 If not, O Mortals, better cease to live!
 But, Harp! thy murmurs may not cease—
 Can never cease to bear celestial fruit.
 Saved by His care who bade the tempest cease;

Ceased—continued.

They ceased not to surround us; change of place,
 They had imbued, and ceased not to receive. . . .
 The rains at length have cease'd, the winds are still'd,
 Issuing when shame hath ceased to check the brows
Ceaseless. These, by the pale-blue rocks that ceaseless ring,
 If some, by ceaseless pains outworn,
 For praise and ceaseless gratulation, poured
 This ceaseless play, the genuine life
 Where guilt had urged them on with ceaseless goad,
 We sojourn stunn'd by Ocean's ceaseless roar;
 While Hope that ceaseless leans on Pleasure's urn
 Make ceaseless music that composed my thoughts
 But for the impertinent and ceaseless strife
 In ceaseless pains—and strictest parsimony
 Of traffic glides with ceaseless intercourse
 Of ceaseless motion, that might scarcely seem
Ceases. Are vanished; gladness ceases in the groves,
 Of beauty never ceases to enrich
 And love ceases to rebel,
 With roaring sound, that ceases not to flow,
Ceasing. See Never-ceasing.
 So looked; not ceasing to pursue
 And without ceasing, since it was daylight;
 Not ceasing, forth appeared in view a band
 The naked spirit, ceasing to deplore
Cecilia. So looked Cecilia when she drew
 And rapt Cecilia, seraph-haunted Queen
Cedar. And followed on, through woods of gloomy cedar,
 With pine and cedar spreading wide
 Emerging from a cedar shade
 If but the Cedar thrive that near them stands,
Cedar's. That shook on Lebanon the cedar's top,
Cedars. Like cedars on the top of Lebanon Ceiling. Down from the ceiling, by the chimney's edge,
 The notes are from the floor or ceiling;
 Swinging from the smoky ceiling!
 Of some huge cave, whose rocky ceiling casts
Ceilinged. Ceilinged and roofed; that is so fair a thing
Celandine. 'Tis the little Celandine,
 Little, humble Celandine,
 Celandine I and long ago,
 There is a Flower, the lesser Celandine,
Celebrate. And Time the Shadow;—there to celebrate,
 Unheard by them, their deeds shall celebrate!
 To celebrate their great deliverance;
 A theme for angels, when they celebrate
 Upon this hour, the bond to celebrate!
 The hallowed theme) will rise and celebrate
Celebrities. And to celebrities of lawless force;
Celestial. Reflected beams of that celestial light
 Spangled with drops of that celestial shower.
 Veil of such celestial hue;
 Celestial pity I again implore;—
 Of power ethereal and celestial grace,
 By the celestial Muses glorified
 Beyond the stars, celestial Paradise,
 A foil to his celestial cheek!
 "Through from my celestial home,
 What ye, celestial Maids! have often sung
 Thy saintly rapture with celestial aim:
 The sacred ENGLBERG, celestial Bands,
 Thrones of celestial visages,
 The turmoil hushed, celestial springs
 Celestial Power, as much with love as light?
 The gentle Una, of celestial birth,
 Encouraged of celestial power;
 Can never cease to bear celestial fruit.
 Suffused with blushes of celestial hue,
 Of high with low, celestial with terrene!
 And in his prison breathes celestial air.
 And the pure spirit of celestial light
 Such hues from their celestial Urn
 Warm'd our sad being with celestial light,
 Thee, thee my life's celestial sign!)
 Shed round the altar a celestial calm;
 Yea, to celestial CHOIRS, GRACE DARLING'S name!
 Following the Lamb celestial," quoth she,
 I sprinkle thee with soft celestial dews,
 Appareled in celestial light,
 If I look'd obedience: the celestial Fair
 For know we not that from celestial spheres,
 Celestial, lay unseen the pastoral vales
 Hope of a fight celestial, will produce
 Like those celestial messengers beheld
 To man's celestial spirit; virtue thus
 Of those celestial splendours, grey the vault—
 By powers celestial tossed on land and sea
Celibates. Taught by the hooded Celibates of St. Bees.
Cell. Calls forth the woodman from his desert cell,
 On joys that might disgrace the captive's cell,
 And search the affections to their inmost cell;
 In Robin's bosom, as a chaste cell,
 In clearer light the moss-hull cell
 In the impenetrable cell
 Cowering beside her rifted cell,
 —They all were with her in her cell;

Change—continued.

For change, to whom the new looks always green !
 The soothing recompense, the welcome change . . .
 Through every change its aspects undergo—
 Is crossed by knowledge, or by dread, of change,
 Gently to brook decline and fatal change ;
 And, spite of change, for me thou keep'st the same
 My mind as restless and as apt to change ;
 If the whole State must suffer mortal change . . .
 What change shall happen next to Nunnery Dell ?
 Of future change, that point of vision, whence
 But, oh the heavy change !—heretofore
 My hopes no more must change their name,
 And if Time leagued with adverse Change
 Perilous is sweeping change, all chance unsound . . .
 Portentous change when History can appear . . .

Crime might lie better hid. And, should the change
 Whose goodness knows no change, whose love is sure,
 Dees in this change exceedingly rejoice ; . . .
 This ever-graceful change, . . .
 And admiration lost, by change of place
 But if the change restore his birthright, then,
 In spite of season's change, its own demand,
 A mournful change, should Reason fail to bring
 O more than mighty change ! If e'er . . .
 No change can falsify !
 The old man does not change his course, the boy
 That never art secure from dolorous change !
 Calmed in his soul the fear of change and death,
 Might I pursue this theme through every change
 Through every change of growth and of decay,
 Hence life, and change, and beauty, solitude
 A northern villager. As if the change . . .
 Yet true it is, that I had made a change
 Of change, congratulation or regret,
 Superior, and incapable of change . . .
 By change of accidents, or even, to speak
 For utterance, to think what easy change
 And Earth did change her images and forms
 With danger, varying as the seasons change,
 From disappointment, not to find some change
 A change of purpose in young Whittington
 With ominous change, which, night by night, provoked
 The elements, and seasons as they change,
 That shift and vanish, change and interchange
 Of that great change wandered in perfect faith,
 Custom and habit, novelty and change ;
 Change and subversion from that hour. No shock
 Is not sequestered—what a change is here !
 But change of them into their contraries ;
 From ruin and from change, and all the grief,
 How shall I trace the change, how bear to tell
 And that is joy to him. When change of times
 Temptation so prevailing as to change . . .
 Went through his usual tasks, a silent change
 And change, and emptiness, these freaks of Nature
 What dignity what beauty, in this change
 For different lot, or change to higher sphere,
 Her cheek to change its colour, was conveyed
 And partner of my loss.—O heavy change !
 —In Britain, ruled a panic dread of change ;
 Quick change of objects ; and, to laugh alone,
 " Possessions vanish, and opinions change,
 Change manifold, for better or for worse . . .
 Of time and change disdaining, takes its course
 For you should undergo a sudden change ;
 Or solace, varying as the seasons change . . .
 Auxillar to divine. That change shall clothe . . .
 How vain, thought I, is it by change of place
 And, with this change, sharp air and falling leaves,
 Or, if the change demanded no regret . . .
 Such universal change as autumn makes . . .
 With little change of general sentiment, . . .
 And, by as salutary change, compelled
 Deplored changes past, or dreading change
 Of this great change I look ; and there behold
 What lamentable change, a year—a month—
 And thirst for change ; or habit hath subdued
 " Change wide, and deep, and silently performed,
 They ceased not to surround us ; change of place,
 Producing change of hearty ever new . . .
 Who saw, of change were conscious—had become
 Beauty not therefore wanting change to stir . . .

Changed. See Unchanged.
 Back on himself ; but changed into a curse . . .
 And everlasting hills themselves were changed . . .
 How changed from him who, born to highest place,
 Be changed, that was so fair to view,
 With all its lovely images, was changed
 Changed countenance, like an object sullied o'er
 Seems changed into a pallid spot . . .
 Though changed, no doubt, from what I was when first
 That love which changed—for wan disease,
 But quickly Peter's mood is changed,
 Oh what a Wreck ! how changed in mien and speech !
 Hung round its top, on wings that changed their hues at will . . .

Changead—continued.

Of the changed City's long-departed power, . . .
 Changed, as the pair approached the light, . . .
 Though we were changed and changing ; . . .
 And to green meadows changed the swampy shores ?
 Or changed and changing, I not seldom gaze
 For which, with changed, pale, and deadly face,
 With changed face, and piteous to behold ;
 Stiff in its members, withered, changed of hue."
 A drooping daisy changed into a cup
 On the lone mountain top, their chang'd estate.
 Resolves that Cupid, chang'd in form and face
 Be changed for one whose glory cannot fade.
 Had changed their functions ; some, plebeian cards
 Or circumstance, how far soever changed . . .
 In youth, or to be changed in after years . . .
 Changed also slowly and insensibly . . .
 Changed like a garden in the heat of spring,
 Before us, fast as clouds are changed in heaven.
 Though heedless of such honours now, and changed ;
 Changed, and the unbroken dream entangled me
 That neither passed away nor changed, I gazed
 Frenchmen had changed a war of self-defence
 With my true self ; for, though bedimmed and
 changed
 Much, as it seemed, I was no further changed
 Dies with him, or is changed ; and very soon
 Was changed. As she unlocked the door, she said,
 And so I waste my time : for I am changed ;
 To flow, when purposes are lightly changed ?
 We shall not sleep, but we shall all be changed !
 The shepherd's grey to martial scarlet changed,
 Her temper changed, and bowed to other laws)
 The appearances of things ! From such, how changed . . .
 Changed to a crimson flower ; when he, whose pride
 All shall survive—though changed their office, all Changeful. Involve their serpent-necks in changeful rings,
 What more changeful than the sea ? . . .
 " In vain, through every changeful year,
 Do serve with all their changeful pageantry ;
 O Nature—in thy changeful visions,
 For earth through heaven, for heaven, by changeful
 earth,
 Life as she is—our changeful Life,
 When and wherever, in this changeful world,
 Tracking with silvery path the changeful gale.
 Yes, I remember when the changeful earth,
 And changeful colours by invisible links
 Six changeful years have vanished since I first
 The changeful language of their countenances
 Our course submitting to the changeful breeze
 Is the mute company of changeful clouds ; . . .
 Varying its tincture with the changeful light . . .
 Thus, when in changeful April fields are white
 Through all the seasons of the changeful year,
Changes. And yet, some changes must take place among you : . . .
 For accidents and changes such as these, . . .
 On which it stood ; great changes have been wrought
 Through all the changes of the year, . . .
 All changes of the element, . . .
 And, though past pomp no changes can restore,
 Who, yielding not to changes Time has made,
 And the changes it brings had no power to unbind.
 The Princess, passive to all changes . . .
 What harmonious pensive changes . . .
 Changes her means, the Enthusiast as a dupe
 Whose virtue changes to a christian Flower . . .
 Turn to minuter changes at our feet ; . . .
 Shall find thee through all changes of the year :
 Nought but her changes. Thus, ungrateful Nation !
 Man changes, but not Thou !
 So changes mortal Life with fleeting years ;
 Of shadowy things work endless changes,—there,
 And yielded to all changes of the scene
 If you imagine changes slowly wrought,
 Of social nature changes evermore . . .
 Deplored changes past, or dreading change
 Or beautifies, like changes undergoes,
 Thy changes, which to wiser Spirits seem . . .

 In deep and awful channel runs
 That o'er the channel holds august command,

 There lies the channel, and original bed,
 Down the deep channel of the stream he went,
Channelled. Ask of the channelled rivers if they held Channels. Channels for tears; no Naiad shouldst thou be,—

Like this unhears'd, and their channels wear
Rucs through blind channels of an unknown tongue.
Forbear to shape due channels which the Flood
The shores and channels, working Nature's will
I love the Brooks which down their channels fret,
Ye long deep channels for the Atlantic's voice,
Ran in new channels, leaving old ones dry;
Through many channels, ever and anon
The shores and channels, working Nature's will

And we too chant the praise of his good deeds.
Leave for one chant;—the dulcet sound
These mighty Minions crown, and chant thy power,
And let us chant a passing stave,
—Chant the Deliverer's praise in every tongue!
To chant a love-spell, never intertwined
To chant, as glides the boat along,
To chant, as Angels do above,
Moved to the chant of sober litanies,
Chant in full choir their innocent Te Deum.
Thy cradle decks;—to chant thy birth, thou hast
The Torrents chant their praise, inspiring scorn
Well pleased that future Bards should chant
To chant, in strains of heavenly glory,
Their nests, or chant a gratulating hymn
His voice shall chant, in accents clear,
To chant your praise; nor can approach you now
Will chant together." Thereafter, as the shades
Would chant, in lonely peace, the spousal verse
And the soft woodlark here did never chant

Of holy rites chanted in measured round?
This Child, I chanted to myself a lay,
Chanted his pretty songs, when you
Chanted in love that casts out fear
For prayer in stillness, or the chanted rite;
Am I deceived? Or is their requiem chanted
Of self-reproach) have chanted elegies
And chanted hymns and stiller voice of prayer,
With hymns rhyms, and the chanted rite;
But chanted by your Orphan Quire
Of the gross fictions chanted in the streets

Chanter. Chanter by heaven attracted, whom no bars
Chanting. Chanting with indefatigable bill,
Chanting for patriot heroes the reward
Chanting her low-voiced hymn, take pride
While I weed, best pleased in chanting a blithe strain,

From Monks in Ely chanting service high,

The sand-lark chants a joyous song;
While heaven's vast sea of voices chants their praise.
A thrush resorts, and annually chants,
Chaos. And on the verge of Chaos hang in fear.
Bounds calm and clear the chaos still and hoar;
Havoc and Chaos blast a thousand vales,
The froward chaos of futurity,
I pass them unalarmed. Not Chaos, not
Chaotic. "These craggy regions, these chaotic wilds,

From lonesome chapel at the mountain's feet
A lonesome Chapel stands, deserted now;
The Chapel Oak of Allonville; good Angel, show it

Holy as that which long hath crowned the Chapel of this Tree;

In which the Parish Chapel stood alone,
And, at his birth-place, built a chapel floored
A little chapel stands alone,
And to the chapel far withdrawn,
Where, in her holy chapel, dwells
In Church or Chapel, if my curious quest
A Chapel, like a wild-bird's nest,
The long-roofed chapel of King's College lift
Ran, ostrich-like, to reach our chapel door
A Romish chapel, where the vested priest
Of a small chapel, where, in ancient time,

Char. Nought but the char that for the may-fly leaps,

Character. And character of gladness, as if Spring.

Of this late day by character in tree

Might how to as their Lord. What character,

A savage character was seen

And quieted in character—the strife,

The genuine mien and character would trace

That ruled those dances wild in character?—

Form spirit and character from holy writ,

In character, and depth of feeling, shown

Congenial with thy mind and character,

More pleasing, and whose character I deem

In character, tricked out like aged trees

Of character, in points of wit as broad,

Of character or life; but at that time,

*A character of quiet more profound

A character more stern. The second night,

And every character of form and face:

An image, and a character, by books

That individual character presents

Of dimmer character, he thence attained

The ancient rural character, composed

A character reflected in himself,

Oh! where is now the character of peace,

Charactered. So charactered did I maintain a strife

Characters. I, like a Runic Priest, in characters

I chiselled out in those rude characters

So shall the characters of that proud page

Such deeds to paint, such characters to frame,

The characters of every face,

Nor characters of Greek or Roman fame,

Impressed upon all forms the characters

The threshold, and large golden characters,

Characters of the great Apocalypse,

Of well-formed characters, with chalk inscribed

Manners and characters discriminate,

The characters are fresh and visible,

Versed in the characters of men; and bound

- Chart. See, at his feet, some little plan or chart,
Charter. Had given a charter to irregular hopes.
 By sacred charter, holden for her use
 Or straggling burgh, of ancient charter proud,

Chartered. And let the chartered wind that sweeps the heath
 Of ancient loyalty, and chartered rights, . . .
Charters. Confirmed the charters that were yours before;—
 And charters won and guarded by the sword . . .
 Strong by her charters, free because imbued,
 His charters and exemptions; and, perchance
Chartreux. I greet thee, Chartreux, while I mourn thy doom.
 Beheld the Convent of Chartreux, and there . . .
 Of the Chartreux, for worship. Thus was man
Chartreux'. Ev'n now I sigh at hoary Chartreux' doom
Charybdis. My ship and me Charybdis will devour.
Chasa. When gentle Spirits urged a sportive chase,
 And watch the fearless chamois-hunter chase . . .
 I could have joined the wanton chase . . .
 The royal Elidure, who leads the chase, . . .
 May the unsullied Goddess of the chase, . . .
 And he went to the chase with a tear on his cheek
 Associates in that eager chase; . . .
 —This chase it looks not like an earthly chase;
 Of panting Wood-nymph, wearied with the chase.
 That lamentable cry to chase—
 The northern Wind, to call thee to the chase, . . .
 To chase for ever, on aerial grounds!
 In painful struggles. Months each other chase,
 Then rents and factors, rights of chase, . . .
 So have ye seen the fowler chase
 And chase this silence from the air,
 To chase mankind, with men in armies packed
 By just revenge inflamed? No foot may chase,
 With thoughts which no delights can chase,
 Which Superstition strove to chase,
 What beast of chase hath broken from the cover?
 Sun, moon, and stars, and beast of chase or prey;
 Withered at eve. From scenes of art which chase
 Through park, or chase, or savage wood.
 Of her most timid touch his sleep would chase,
 And often, ere the chase was done, . . .
 —Off they fly in earnest chase; . . .
 Are linked in endless chase; . . .
 Within this whirlpool, they each other chase
 Out of the world this Innocent to chase; . . .
 Fair Spirits are abroad; in sportive chase
 Dire clap of hands, distracted chase of feet,
 Confederate, imitative of the chase
 Of self-forgiveness. Yes, that heartless chase
 In chase of him; whereas I waked in terror,
 Keen hunters in a chase of fourteen weeks,
 Vanished and vanishing in subtle chase, . . .
 In prosecution of their deadly chase,
 Darkness to chase, and sleep; and bring the day
 Chase the wild goat; and if the bold red deer
 Swept in the storm of chase; as moon and stars
 To dread his perseverance in the chase.
 And solemn chase—from morn to sultry noon
 To play on water, or in endless chase . . .
 Single at chase among the lonely woods,
 Or whet his kingly faculties to chase . . .
Chased. Together chased the butterfly!
 With a vexed people, and the tyrant chased;
 By which the journeying pair are chased?
 So these,—and, heard of once again, are chased
 Both sank and died, the life-veins of the chased
 The turf, and thought by thought was chased,
 Have chased far off by righteous victory
 He taught, till persecution chased him thence,
 Chased spectral fears away . . .
 A shout thrice sent from one who chased
 Or chased away, the airy wretchedness
 'Twas chased away: for, toward the western side
 Doubt shall be quelled and trouble chased away;
Chaser. See Chamois-chaser.
 And chaser bursting here with one dire smart.
Chases. The busy dor-hawk chases the white moth
Chasing. Chasing those pleasant dreams, the falling leaf
 Or from before it chasing wantonly
 Chasing a crimson butterfly;
 Ye, too, must fly before a chasing hand,
 While thou wert chasing the winged butterfly
 Chasing those long long dreams the falling leaf
Chasm. See Gordale-chasm.
 A single chasm, a gulf of gloomy blue, . . .
 Into a chasm a mighty block . . .
 That chasm is much the same— But, surely,
 yonder—
 By chasm or dizzy precipice;
 From the dread chasm, woods climbing above woods,
 Forth flashing out of its own gloomy chasm
 From this deep chasm, where quivering sunbeams play
 The pair have reached that fearful chasm,
 Entered a narrow chasm. The brook and road
 I stand—the chasm of sky above my head
 No chasm, no solitude; from link to link
Chasms. Or, led where Via Mala's chasms confine Into deep chasms troubled by roaring streams;
 O'er chasms with new-fallen obstacles strewn,

Chasms—continued.
 Deep pools, tall trees, black chasms, and dizzy crags,
Chasmy. O'er-walk the chasmy torrent's foam-lit bed,
Chastia. But in chaste hearts; uninfluenced by the power
 Chaste Snowdrop, venturesome harbinger of Spring,
 The brood of chaste affection.
 Which the chaste Votaries seek, beyond the grave;
 The chaste affections tremble to fulfil
 With stainless touch, as chaste as when they praise
 Best thro' the fire of chaste desire,
 In the chaste arms of thy beloved Love!
 Sobriety, and order, and chaste love,
 Queen and negress chaste and fair!
Chasten. To chasten and subdue. And I have felt
 Unless they chasten fancies that presume
 That God will chasten whom he dearly loves.
Chastened. With chastened feelings would I pay
 From all that breathes and is, was chastened, stemmed
Chastening. While chastening thoughts of sweetest use, bestowed
 And chastening sympathies!
 Chastening the fullness of a present bliss,
 The measure of God's chastening love,
 From lowly sympathy and chastening truth:
 Awakening, chastening an'intermediate grief,
Chastens. It chastens only to requite
Chaster. The chaster coverts of a British hill.
Chastise. She kissed him—how could she chastise?
 Convoled the impious to chastise!
Chastised. Or be chastised by mortal instruments.
 Chastised by self-abasement more profound,
Chastisement. See Mock-chastisement.
 Reviving, heavier chastisement deserve
 But chastisement shall follow peace despaired.
 And yet, for chastisement of these regrets,
 Of unintelligible chastisement,
 A chastisement; and when I called to mind
 Calamity, the chastisement of Heaven,
 For chastisement, and custody, and bonds,
Chastity. And Chastity finds many a sheltering bower.
 This gem of chastity, this emerald, . . .
Chat. See Stone-chat
Chatsworth. Chatsworth! thy stately mansion, and the pride
Chattels. Fields, goods, and far-off chattels we have none:
 Lawns, houses, chattels, groves, and fields,
 For goods and chattels, or those Infants dear,
Chatter. That evermore his teeth they chatter,
 Chatter, chatter, chatter still!
 His teeth they chatter, chatter still . . .
 His teeth they chatter, chatter still!
 His teeth they chatter, chatter still.
Chattering. Scarce heard, their chattering lips her shoulder chill,
 The pie, and chattering breaks the night's repose.
 By chattering popinjays; the inner heart . . .
 With chattering monkeys dangling from their poles,
Chatters. She chatters in her ecstacy . . .
 The magpie chatters with delight; . . .
 The Jay makes answer as the Magpie chatters; . . .
 That writhes and chatters in her wry cage,
Chatterton. I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous Boy, . . .
Chaucer. Time-honoured Chaucer speaking through that Lay
 I laughed with Chaucer in the hawthorn shade;
Chaucer's. A Pastor such as Chaucer's verse portrays;
 To snatch a sprig from Chaucer's reverend brow—
Chaunt. No Nightingale did ever chaunt
 Mounts thro' the nearer mist the chaunt of birds,
 Didst chaunt the vision of that Ancient Man,
Chaunted. Daily with chaunted rites. In such a race
 That round us chaunted. Well might we be glad, Chauntry. With whip and spur we through the chauntry flew
Chaunts. He chaunts Arcturus,—that fraternal twain
Cheap. Fields gaily sown when promises were cheap.—
 Cheap matter offered they to boyish wit,
 But he was a cheap pleasure to my eyes;
Cheapar. I know no cheaper engine to degrade a man,
Cheaply. No gains too cheaply earned his fancy cloy, Cheapside. And a river flows on through the vale of Cheapside.
Chear. Where silver rocks the savage prospect chear
 Where hardly giv'n the hopeless waste to chear Chear'd. Continual fountains welling chear'd the waste,
Chearflessness. Then did no ebb of chearflessness demand
Cheat. To cheat the thought she cannot chear,
 Their soul-subduing looks might cheat . . .
 Can cheat the time; sending her fancy out
 Grief of her sting; nor cheat, where he detains
 Doubtless shall cheat full off the heart's desires;
 An old resource to cheat a forward time!
 With curious subtlety, from wish to cheat
 To cheat the world, or from herself to hide . . .

Cheat—continued.

To cheat the sadness of a rainy day ;
Cheated. That listening sense is pardonably cheated
 His fancy cheated—that can see
 To ease a father's cheated love he hugs
Cheats. That cheats her of too busy cares,
 With garlands, cheats her into happiness ;
Check. Check his loud whip and hail us with mild voice
 That fastened there, as it would check the current.
 Who would check the happy feeling
 And then, as from a sudden check,
 Check with thy notes the impulse which, betrayed
 Of discontent, and check the birth
 But whence that sudden check ? that fearful start !
 Uprisen, as if to check approaching Night,
 Which neither force shall check nor time abate !
 Hangs that day's treasured sword, how firm a check
 Which spurns the check of salutary hands,
 To check this pious haste of erring duty,
 Nor check, the music of the strings ;
 Their tents, and check the current of their arms,
 He, whose strong arm the Orient could not check,
 Earth cannot check. O terrible excess
 Even when they rose to check or to repel
 "No check, no stay, this Streamlet fears ;
 To check the erring, and improve ;
 Whatsoever check they bring,
 Lo ! Streams that April could not check
 Is to control and check disordered Powers ?
 The little flower her vanity shall check ;
 Conscience to guide and check ; and death to be .
 Communion without check of herbs and flowers .
 Issuing when shame hath ceased to check the brows
Checked. When crowding cattle, checked by rails that make
 Whether some old Swiss air hath checked her haste,
 The stranger till its barking-fit I checked ;
 That oft have checked their fury at your bidding,
 She checked herself in her distress,
 In him was somewhat checked ; and, when his Brother
 Hath checked his foaming courser :—can it be !
 Checked her with filial meekness ; for no thought
 Though timid scruples checked me loag ;
 They checked me—and I left the theme
 Here checked by too impetuous haste,
 Till checked by some necessities severe,
 Checked in your course by many a teasing burr ;
 Checked off-times in a devious race,
 "All freakishness of mind is checked ;
 Checked in the very act and deed of blood,
 That checked the desultory range
 Of checked ambition, tyranny controlled,
 Checked not its rage ; unfelt the ground did rock,
 —She feels it, and her pangs are checked,
 Thus checked, a little while it stayed ;
 Till the checked torrent, proudly triumphing,
 The Church, whose power hath recently been checked,
 Then be it neither checked nor stayed :
 And checked him in his leap
 Checked, in the moment of its issue, checked
 Neither checked by the rich nor the needy thy room ;
 Who checked or turned thy headstrong youth,
 Which checked discussion ere it warmed to strife ;
 Hence am I checked ; but let me holly say,
 Checked our unwearied steps. Let this alone
 Nor checked by aught of tamer argument,
 Have been preferred, that this fair creature, checked
 Backwards, nor checked his flight until I saw
 Was nothing either seen or heard that checked .
 By pain of heart—now checked—and now impelled
 Too little checked—An active, ardent mind ;
 Was reached, the Solitary checked his steps ;
Checking. But a thick umbrage—checking the wild growth
 Checking the stream, make a pool smooth and clear
 Dissection, checking arms that would restrain
 Checking the fiercer spirits that refuse
 Checking the sober steed on which he rode,
 Appeared, confusion checking their delight
Checks. Strong terror checks the female peasant's sighs,
 That fosters growth or checks or cheers decay,
 That, for a brief space, checks the hurrying stream !
 A sweet confusion checks the Shepherd-lad ;
 It neither damps the gay, nor checks the witty
Chequer. Chequer with paler red the thickest shades, Chequer'd. And gives, where woods the chequer'd upland strew
Cheek. Thy flooded cheek to wet them with its tears ;
 Still the cold cheek its shuddering tear retains
 Were hardy, though his cheek seemed worn with care
 Upon her cheek, to which its youthful hue
 Of me, say that the worm is on my cheek.—
 Even while he printed kisses on the cheek
 Thy vest is torn, thy cheek is deadly pale ;

Cheek—continued.

Might exalt the loveliest cheek ;
 Still upon his cheek are living
 Tears down his cheek, or solitary smiles
 He had as white a head and fresh a cheek
 Stolen from his cheek ; he drooped, and pined, and pined—
 That sparkle on her cheek
 One upright arm sustains the cheek,
 And he went to the chase with a tear on his cheek.
 Oh, what a kiss was that ! my cheek
 A healthy Lad, and carried in his cheek
 While across her virgin cheek pure blushes strayed,
 And what if my poor cheek be brown ?
 And—with my cheek on one of those green stones
 With hues of genius on his cheek
 That its fair flowers may from his cheek
 But mark her glowing cheek, her vesture green !
 Hers is not a cheek shame-stricken
 Tenderest bloom is on her cheek ;
 The roseate bloom on woman's cheek ;
 "There was a hardness in his cheek,
 Oft have I seen, ere Time had ploughed my cheek,
 Wan cheek at once was privileged to unfold
 Of fretful temper sullies her pure cheek ;
 When I behold thy blanched unwithered cheek,
 A foil to his celestial cheek !
 Appeared upon his tender cheek)
 Made to the Twelve, survives : lip, forehead, cheek,
 Shed, on the Slumberer's cold wan cheek
 Those watery locks, that bloodless cheek !
 Of colour dawned upon the Damsel's cheek ;
 And Neville's cheek grew pale with fear ;
 A few tears down her cheek descend
 Black hair, and vivid eye, and meagre cheek,
 Her blushing cheek, love-vows upon her lip,
 Wan cheek, and knees indratted with prayer,
 Goes forth—unveiling timidly a cheek
 And many a blooming, many a lovely, cheek
 Though it can wet with tears the hardest cheek
 And still the centre of his cheek
 Can draw warmth from the cheek of my Love ;
 Stain her cheek in future years—
 Would their lost strength restore and freshen the pale cheek ?
 Of a perpetual dawn from brow and cheek
 That cheek—a kindling of the morn,
 Of cheek that with carnation vies,
 And cheek embrowned by art ;
 Of the unfaded rose that still blooms on his cheek .
 I kissed his cheek before he died ;
 Pale was her hue ; yet mortal cheek
 Her seal, the mortal tear his cheek has wet ;
 Soon fades her cheek, her blushing beauties fly,
 A fainter that while it fans my cheek
 To deck some slighted playmate's homely cheek
 Upon the cheek of listening Infancy
 He was in limb, in cheek a summer rose
 Dishevelled, gleaming eyes, and rueful cheek
 Disarmed his voice and fanned his yellow cheek
 Time had compressed the freshness of his cheek
 Why should a tear be on an old Man's cheek ?
 Upon his hollow cheek. "How kind," he said,
 Her cheek to change its colour, was conveyed
 The old Man's cheek ; but, at this closing turn
 Of undisturbed humanity ; a cheek
 Of infancy first blooms upon his cheek ;
 To tinge his cheek ; and through his frame it crept
 —I noted that the Solitary's cheek
 Within his cheek, as light within a cloud ;
 To his worn cheek ; or with uneasy shame
 Mantle upon his cheek. Is this the form,
 The beautiful girl, whose cheek was flushed with joy
 Food for sick passion in a minion's cheek,

Cheer—continued.

With joyousness, and with a thoughtful cheer, . . .
 For a sunny thought to cheer the Stranger's way,
 Wherewith to cheer him in the winter time."
 To cheat the thought she cannot cheer,
 That far-off tinkling's drowsy cheer,
 Said cordially, "My Friend, what cheer?
 And gives another lusty cheer;
 And thinking it but sorry cheer
 The jolly bird that learned his cheer
 Their daring wiles, their sportive cheer?
 Much witnessing of chage and cheer,
 To see her Master and to cheer—
 Must vanish, and his careless cheer . . .
 Whether to cheer his coward breast,
 To mitigate and cheer its loneliness.
 Rich are his walks with supernatural cheer;
 Shall guide, his fancy cheer, your way;
 Is this a place for mirthful cheer?
 Smile on his Mother now with bolder cheer.
 And cheer my mind in sorrow.
 Nor cheer him; for the illustrious Swede hath done
 O dastard whom such forestate doth not cheer!
 Is there a power that can sustain and cheer
 And through all Europe cheer desponding men
 In every nook a lip that it may cheer.
 Found casual vent. She said, "Be of good cheer;
 And softly touched; but, to his princely cheer
 Sad thoughts, avault!—partake we their blithe cheer
 Then, with mild Una in her sober cheer,
 With awful cheer a voice of praise;
 A sound of military cheer,
 Of border tunes was played to cheer
 To cheer this sad and pensive time;
 Haunting the spots with lonely cheer
 Even in her own despite, both feed and cheer;
 Pours forth his bounty, like the day doth cheer,
 As he approaches them, with solemn cheer.
 Thou, stately York! and Ye, whnse splendours
 cheer
 Touched by accordance of thy placid cheer,
 To cheer the long dark hours of vacant night—
 To cheer the itinerant on whom she pours
 By hooded Votresses with saintly cheer;
 Of hood, and smiles on you with cheer sublime.
 Art thou a Man of purple cheer?
 Send through the tarn a lonely cheer;
 To cheer the remnant of his host
 Nor doth the example fail to cheer . . .
 So, by chequerings of sad cheer,
 Partakes a livelier cheer;
 For time and season, rules that work to cheer—
 Her work and her work's partners she can cheer,
 When fire or taper ceased to cheer the room,
 My passing Spirit cheer . . .
 Sent forth her peace to cheer . . .
 Wern shaped to cheer dark winter's lonely hours.
 His Primer conning with an earnest cheer,
 Ah! good sweet Nightingale! for my heart's cheer,
 Was the boast of the country for excellent cheer;
 "The sunshine may not cheer it, nor the dew;
 But welcome fortitude, and patient cheer,
 To cheer the wand'ring wretch with hospitable light,
 Let Bacchus, donor of soul-quick'ning cheer,
 To cheer the thoughts of those I love, and mine.
 Guide, and support, and cheer me to the end!"
 To cheer us both. But long we had not talked
 Brought from the cupboard wine and stouter cheer,
 Invited, summoned, to partake the cheer
 And pure good-will, and hospitable cheer;
 Nothing to speed the day, or cheer the mind;
 A tributary shed to cheer
 And ask no better cheer. . . .
Cheered. See Cheer'd.
 Continual waters welling cheered the waste,
 Hope cheered my dreams, and to my daily prayers
 In spite of all the larks that cheered our path,
 With soft illumination cheered the dimness of that place.
 Not unvouchsafed—a light that warmed and cheered
 And cheered; and now together breathe fresh air
 Where by that dream he had been cheered
 The mourner is cheered, and the anxious have rest;
 The thoughts with which it then was cheered;
 The Knight hallooeed, he cheered and chid them on
 She looked upon him and was calmed and cheered:
 That cheered the trilled arbour's privacy,
 The hoary mountain-heights were cheered,
 It cheered mild Spenser, called from Faery-land
 Companion! by whose buoyant Spirit cheered,
 Failed to reanimate and but feebly cheered
 So cheered, she left that Island bleak,
 And o'er wide plains cheered by the lark that trills
 And rests not thankful? Whether cheered by talk
 This tragic Story cheered us; for it speaks
 Had, in her solitude, been cheered.
 That calmed her, cheered, and fortified? . . .

Cheered—continued.

Through this still medium, are consoled and
 cheered;
 Cheered with the prospect of a brighter day.
 That through our gipsy travel cheered the way;
 To launch the boat; and with her blessing cheered,
 That greatly cheered his country: to his kin
 My own voice cheered me, and, far more, the mind's
 And nothing cheered our way till first we saw
 The assurance which then cheered some heavy thoughts.
 Cheered with this hope, to Paris I returned,
 Then, cheered by short refreshment, sallied forth.
 That had not cheered me long—ere, looking round
 Baronial court or royal; cheered with gifts
 Cheered by the Highland bagpipe, as they marched
 Cheered, plainly, and yet serious. What a wreck
 For all; and yet how few are warmed or cheered!
 That frets, or languishes, be stilled and cheered.
 A merry journey, rich in pastime, cheered
 Of which adventures, that beguiled and cheered
 That dignified and cheered a low estate?
 So long unthanked) hast cheered a simple board
Cheer. The cheerer Thou of our in-door sadness, Cheer'st. Cheer'st the low threshold of the peasant's cell!
Cheerful. The sky is veiled, and every cheerful sight:
 The dripping groves resound with cheerful lays,
 I comprehend thee—I should be as cheerful
 A cheerful mind,—and buffeted with bond,
 He talked about him with a cheerful love.
 How cheerful, at sunrise, the hill where I stood,
 Oh! had he but thy cheerful smiles,
 Fields, where with cheerful spirits he had breathed
 Nor cheerful, yet with objects and with hopes,
 Of remedies and of a cheerful hope.
 As cheerful as a grove in Spring; at length
 With confident and cheerful thoughts; and now
 The time was March, a cheerful noon—
 Then, cheerful Flower! my spirits play
 Or the night's darkness, or its cheerful face
 Inviting him with cheerful lure;
 From May-time and the cheerful Dawn;
 And a clear brook with cheerful knell
 Our cheerful faith, that all which we behold
 And cheerful songs, and suns that shine
 A cheerful life is what the Muses love,
 Wear rather in thy bonds a cheerful brow:
 In cheerful godliness; and yet thy heart
 Are cheerful as the rising sun in May.
 All sacred things are covered: cheerful morn
 Thinned the rank woods; and for the cheerful grange
 The cheerful dawn, brightening for me the east;
 And golden summer days uniting cheerful hearts.
 Cheerful alike if bare of flowers as now,
 Stay, little cheerful Robin! stay,
 To cheerful intercourse with wood and field,
 A bright and cheerful face;
 Green ivy risen from out the cheerful earth
 Enlivening Hop display'd her cheerful ray,
 Clapp'd her strong wings, and sought the cheerfulisle
 Or glancing at each other cheerful looks,
 A cheerful confidence in things to come,
 "A cheerful smile unbends the wrinkled brow,
 And cheerful, but the foremost of the band
 Deriving cheerful confidence, shall blend
 With cheerful hope, until the second autumn,
 Are cheerful; while this multitude of flies
 Her cottage, then a cheerful object, wore
 Paid cheerful tribute to the moorland house.
 Into the presence of the cheerful light—
 On the hill-sides, a cheerful quiet scene,
 Hopeful and cheerful:—vanished is the pall
 The air with cheerful spirit, for thy sake,
 And this Survivor, with his cheerful throng
 "A Man he seems of cheerful yesterdays
 With cheerful heart, an unknown voice of joy,
Cheerfully. Cheerfully uttered, with demeanour kind,
 Of water storms, yet budding cheerfully;
 That owned him; living cheerfully abroad
 Cheerfully led to individual ends
Cheerfulness. See Cheerfulness.
 Where common cheerfulness would fail;
 Thy goings—or the cheerfulness
 Their cheerfulness, and busily retrim
 Truth breathed by cheerfulness.
 Rights equal, laws with cheerfulness obeyed,
 See cheerfulness undamp'd by stealing Time;
 And jollity, fresh cheerfulness, and mirth;
 To night, unbroken cheerfulness serene.
 Where, though the shades with cheerfulness were filled,
 Thus gaiety and cheerfulness prevail.
 Hence cheerfulness for acts of daily life,
 Happy, and quiet in his cheerfulness,
 Such easy cheerfulness, a look so mild,
 With tender cheerfulness, and with a voice
 In peace and meditative cheerfulness;
 Open, and day's pure cheerfulness, but veiled

Cheerfulness—continued.

With evening cheerfulness. In powers of mind, . . . 833 Excursion 5. 716
 But with a mild and social cheerfulness; . . . 839 Excursion 6. 93
 Where health abides, and cheerfulness, and peace: . . . 843 Excursion 6. 175
 In grove or pasture; cheerfulness of soul, . . . 866 Excursion 7. 582
 Diffusing health and sober cheerfulness, . . . K.8. 249 Recluse 1.1465

Cheerly. Have hailed the morning sun. But cheerily, father, . . . 39 Bord. 125
 Where cheerly his course he weaves, . . . 240 P. B. 342
 More cheerly; and town and tower, . . . 243 Eclipse 64
 Full cheerly on convent-bread . . . 398 White Doe 219
 But Cupid, following cheerly his guide . . . 624 Aeneid 53

Cheering. See Heart-cheering, Soul-cheering.
 Cheering its naked waste of scattered stone, . . . 4 Ev. Wh. 94
 Her he addressed in words of cheering sound; . . . 27 Gullit 185
 Our little fire sent forth a cheering warmth . . . 50 Bord. 708
 And cheering oft-times their reluctant gloom, . . . 172 Infant Daughter 50
 Cheering the wakeful tent on Syrian mountains, . . . 232 Power of Sound 19
 And cheering off his peaceful reveries, . . . 466 St. Bees 44
 Is often cheering; for I neither seem . . . 634 Prelude 1. 149
 Cheering my days, and with industrious thought; . . . 823 Excursion 5. 56
 And sink, through utter want of cheering light; . . . 835 Excursion 5. 834
Cheeringly. Abroad, how cheeringly the sunshine lay

Cheerless. All, all was cheerless to the horizon's bound; . . . 26 Gullit 109
 A cheerless beverage. How good it was in you . . . 52 Bord. 810
 Which she in duty left, sad but not cheerless, . . . 370 Eg. Maid 84
 And off a Prisoner in the cheerless place, . . . 521 Epist. Beaumont 27
 Not cheerless, though forlorn, . . . 580 John Words. 20
 My thirst I slaked, and, from the cheerless spot . . . 763 Excursion 1. 463
 Or a forbidden tract of cheerless view; . . . 830 Excursion 5. 529
 Of feeling, which were cheerless and forlorn . . . K.8. 248 Recluse 1.1434

Cheerlessness. With more than wintry cheerlessness and gloom . . . 830 Excursion 5. 538
Cheers. Soft as a guiding star that cheers, but cannot burn, . . . 140 Arm. Lady 66
 Whose presence cheers the drooping frame . . . 164 Fair Lady* 31
 That fosters growth or checks or cheers decay, . . . 169 Never entwined* 2
 The feeble motions of thy life, and cheers . . . 173 Infant Daughter 70
 Her loneliness she cheers: . . . 195 Ruth 243
 The night that calms, the day that cheers; . . . 238 P. B. 132
 And cheers thy melancholy Mate! . . . 294 Jedbor. 83
 The shouting, and the jolly cheers, . . . 295 Highland Boy 78
 And in fit measure cheers autumnal days. . . . 336 Rhine 14
 Calls me to pace her honoured Bridge—that cheers . . . 351 Des. Stanzas 56
 Of dawn, it cheers the lofty spirit most . . . 391 Though joy* 2
 Cheers these Recluses with a steady ray . . . 467 St. Bees 84
 For thou hadst lived till every thing that cheers . . . 491 Tribute: Dog 13
 With process not unlike to that which cheers . . . K.8. 249 Recluse 1.1474

Cheese. And their plain home-made cheese. Yet when the meal . . . 132 Michael 102
 Of dainties,—oaten bread, curd, cheese, and cream; . . . 781 Excursion 2. 677
Chemic. Urged to close toil with chemic fire; . . . 399 White Doe 302

Chequered. See Chequer'd.
 And gives, where woods the chequered upland strew, . . . 8 Ev. Wh. 337
 Oh Life! without thy chequered scene . . . 337 Oh Life* 1
 As fades the chequer'd bow that paints the sky . . . 619 School Ex. 98
 Time a chequered mantle wears— . . . 628 Installation 25
 Chequered the green-grown thatch. And so she lived . . . 770 Excursion 1. 904

Chequering. Chequering the canvas roof the sun-beams shone, . . . 34 Gullit 542
 Chequering the ground—from rock, plant, tree, or tower, . . . 184 Night-piece 7
 Thou, chequering peaceably the minster's gloom, . . . 459 Wanderer!* that 27
 Danced in the breeze, chequering its mossy roof, . . . 860 Excursion 7. 203

Chequerings. In the soft chequerings of a sleepy light. So, by chequerings of sad cheer, . . . 451 Ecc. Sonn. 3. 44. 4

Cherish. Who would not cherish dreams so sweet, . . . 9 Lines: Boat 15
 The verminous brood, and cherish what they spare . . . 48 Bord. 587
 If I may dare to cherish hope that gentle eyes will read . . . 93 Poet's Dream 79
 Would supplant the weeds, and cherish . . . 94 Westmoreland Girl 79

Its presence tempted him to cherish schemes . . . 124 V. and J. 188
 Appears to cherish most that Torrent white, . . . 381 Dudson 19. 8
 But of the lights that cherish household cares . . . 426 Ecc. Sonn. 1. 31. 4
 Seek for the good and cherish it—the ill . . . 505 Warning 161
 Uphold us, cherish, and have power to make . . . 589 Immortality 157
 Albert, in thy race we cherish . . . 629 Installation 95

To keep and cherish? how shall man unite . . . 831 Excursion 5. 576
 And I as willingly did cherish mine, . . . 839 Excursion 6. 106
 To shelter innocence, and cherish love; . . . 887 Excursion 9. 202
 Cherish, and lofty Minds approve the past— . . . 896 Excursion 9. 795
 They [?] to the last my friends did cherish . . . K.8. 219 The snow-tracks* 5

Cherished. See Self-cherished, Time-cherished.
 The spirit sought not then, in cherished sadness, . . . 2 Ev. Wh. 15
 Were with him:—his long absence, cherished hopes, . . . 102 Brothers 422
 And she I cherished turned her wheel . . . 109 I travelled* 11
 And all those tokens of a cherished sorrow, . . . 119 Maternal Grief 78
 Hopes I cherished—let them go! . . . 140 Arm. Lady 58
 From the wild sea a cherished Visitant; . . . 150 When,* to 55
 The cherished tenor of his pace . . . 243 P. B. 658
 Of which my fancy cherished, . . . 301 Yarrow V. 2
 Though robbed of many a cherished dream, . . . 342 Ital. Itin. 27
 Hath cherished on a healthful soil; . . . 344 How blest* 6
 And cannot spare the Thing he cherished; . . . 370 Eg. Maid 50
 Would lodge her, and the cherished burden bear . . . 382 Dudson 25. 37
 Which may itself be cherished and caressed . . . 394 No more* 33

Cherished—continued.

Cherished Priestess of the new-baptized! . . . 420 Ecc. Sonn. 1. 9. 6
 Untaught that meekness is the cherished bent . . . 455 Not in the lincid* 14
 With cherished sullenness of pace . . . 490 Night Thought 9
 Is there a cherished bird (I venture now . . . 528 Those breaking* 60

Child—continued.

God loves the Child; and God hath willed
 Hath he, a Child of strength and state!
 Daughter of Hope! her favourite Child,
 Dear Child of Nature, let them rail!
 And haply to the cradled Child,
 Will make thee happy, happy as a Child;
 Yet am I with the Jewish Child,
 To think of one, almost a child;
 Benoni, or the child of sorrow,
 And, ere that little child was born,
 And gentle as an infant child,
 Sobs loud, he sobs even like a child,
 Hence am I cross and peevish as a child:
 Dear Child! dear Girl! that walkest with me here,
 That child of winter, prompting thoughts that climb
 Rotha, my Spiritual Child! this head was grey
 Child of loud-throated War! the mountain Stream
 Yea, let our Mary's one companion Child—
 Or woman, man, or child,
 Which he, poor Child, had studied well;
 How rapidly the Child is driven!
 But for the child, the sightless Boy,
 This Child will take no harm.
 And welcomed the poor Child.
 The Child; when she can trust her eyes,
 Venice, the eldest Child of Liberty.
 Felt for thee as a lover or a child!
 Of Jesus goes before, the child is borne
 "Shame! should a Child of royal line
 Dutiful Child, her lot how hard!
 Child of the clouds! remote from every taint
 Succeeding—still succeeding! Here the Child
 Even when a child, the Streams—unheard, unseen;
 "Look, there she is, my Child! draw near;
 The meekest Child on this blessed earth.
 Her docile, unsuspecting Child:
 Instructed here her darling Child,
 But now, his Child, with anguish pale,
 "Thou, thou art not a Child of Time,
 King, child, and seraph, blended in the mien
 Then, when her Child the hallowing touch received,
 Or by his fire, a child upon his knee,
 Some ragged child holds up for sale a Store
 A touch so tender for the insensate Child—
 A child of the field or the grove;
 If Nature, for a favourite child,
 To see a child so very fair,
 —O my own Dora, my beloved child!
 This child of Nature's own humility,
 Together they put forth, Father and Child!
 You lavished on me when a child
 "Dear child, sweet Mistress, say not so!
 Beheld their only Child returned
 Did Francis Beaumont sport, an eager child;
 But as a child of twelvemonths old or less,
 This Child was wont to kneel adown and say
 "This little Child, while in the school he sat
 This child did him beseech on his bare knees
 This little Child, as he came to and fro,
 And, as the Child began to the school to pace,
 After her little Child, and he came not
 To tell her if her child had passed that way;
 "This Child with piteous lamentation then
 Yet spake this Child when sprinkled was the water;
 In supplication to the Child began
 Thus saying, 'O dear Child! I summon thee
 Said this young Child, and by the law of kiod
 'My little Child, then will I come for thee
 This child but half knows it, and that not at all.
 A brother's Child, most tenderly beloved!
 A Child whom every eye that looked on loved;
 But Heaven is now, blest Child, thy Spirit's home:
 Doth hang around it, as a sickly child
 Thou Child of Joy,
 Behold the Child among his new-born blisses,
 Thou little Child, yet glorious in the might
 Than when, erewhile, I taught, "a happy child,"
 —Meanwhile his wife and child with cruel hope
 Haply that child in fearful doubt may gaze,
 But, infant as he was, the child
 Wherewith to nurse the child—and still he pin'd,
 Pronounced the name of Hope!—The conscious child
 She views the gifts; upon the child then turns
 Uplifted in his arms the child,
 Oh, many a time have I, a five years' child,
 Was a spoiled child, and, rambling like the wind,
 The child that might have led him; Emptiness
 Nor that unruly child of mountain birth,
 Acquaintances of every little child,
 As long as he shall be the child of earth,
 Drops daily from the tongue of every child,
 This model of a child is never known
 The child, whose love is here, at least, doth reap
 Young as I was, a child not nine years old,
 No less than sound had done before; the child
 Mother and child!—These feelings, in themselves
 Articulate prattle—Child as beautiful
 Decked with refreshments had this child been placed,
 He held the child, and, bending over it,

Child—continued.

Would to a child be transport over-great,
 The meek, the lowly, patient child of toil,
 They made it proudly, eager as a child,
 In brief, a child of Nature, as at first,
 Child of the mountains, among shepherds reared,
 Child of my parents! Sister of my soul!
 While yet a child, and long before his time,
 While yet a child, with a child's eagerness
 As my own child. Oh, Sir! the good die first,
 That she had parted with her elder child;
 The little child who sat to turn the wheel
 To soothe a Child, who walked beside him, weeping
 The sun-burnt forehead of the weeping child—
 Have scarcely disappeared." "This blooming Child,"
 This simple Child will mourn his one short hour,
 The Child, who long ere this had stilled his sobs,
 Leading sometimes an inexperienced child
 Snug as a child that hides itself in sport
 To that same child, addressing tenderly
 "A child of earth, I rested, in that stage
 Primeval Nature's child. A creature weak
 A curious child, who dwelt upon a tract
 The original stain, the child is there received
 A child of hope? Do generations press
 Of overpowering light.—While yet a child,
 To a poor dissolute Son, her only child.
 When that poor Child was born. Upon its face
 The Child whom Ellen and her Mother loved
 Trusting her child, she left their common home,
 Her child should die; as Ellen now exclaimed,
 Her own—deserted child!—Once, only once,
 Upon the last sweet slumber of her Child,
 Which tells her that a living child is born;
 —Just as the Child could totter on the floor,
 The gladsome child bestows at his request;
 "Much as I glory in that child of yours,
 The trees (her first-born child being then a babe)
 Childbirth's. From Childbirth's perilous throes. And should the Heir
 Childhood. Than those soft scenes through which thy childhood strayed,
 Unquiet Childhood here by special grace
 Yet He whose heart in childhood gave her troth
 In simple childhood, spread through ours!
 Had in her childhood read the same;
 That ere the Sun goes down their childhood sets.
 Hearts loved in childhood, and ancestral floors;
 From manhood—back to childhood; for the age
 loapt conjecture! Childhood here, a moon
 Where she in childhood had reposed,
 As little children in their childhood do.
 Him from my childhood have I known; and then
 In childhood, from this solitary Being,
 Of Childhood, whether busy or at rest,
 Of childhood didst thou intertwine for me
 The simple ways in which my childhood walked;
 From their first childhood; in that glorious time
 And later down, in prattling childhood even,
 In childhood, ere he was full twelve years old,
 And they must have their food. Our childhood sits,
 Our simple childhood, sits upon a throne
 Should in his childhood be detained for ever!
 One, of whose name from childhood we had heard
 And all the scenes of childhood reappear
 And manners which my childhood looked upon
 From childhood. On the fulgent spectacle,
 They who had fed their childhood upon dreams,
 From our first childhood. I remember well,
 In simple childhood something of the base
 Of childhood, when a disappearing lie,
 Of genial thought in childhood, and in spite
 With whom from childhood he grew up, had held
 Whatever, in docile childhood or in youth,
 From childhood up, the ways of poverty;
 From their short, in early childhood, was withdrawn
 Till their whom holiday of childhood ceased,
 Who, in his very childhood, should appear
 Of childhood—but that there the Soul discerns
 And Childhood, seeming still more busy, took
 That from his very childhood he had lived
 In childhood, here as it abides by day,
 Childhood's. Fair scenes for childhood's opening bloom
 Whether the bolt of childhood's Fancy shot
 Instructing simple childhood's ready ear:
 Childish. When we began to tire of childish play,
 The time, when in our childish plays,
 Sweet childish days, that were as long
 When full of play and childish cares,
 Those many records of my childish years,
 "My eyes are dim with childish tears,
 Childless. Where she was childless, daily would repair
 Childless, yet by the strangers to thy blood
 A wedded pair in childless solitude.
 Childless, until the time when he began
 Child-like. If child-like fruitfulness in passing joy,
 Yet something of a girlish child-like gloss
 Of child-like inquisition now and then
 And can reap nothing better,—child-like longed

Back from his sight no bashful children steal ;
 His children's children listened to the sound ;
 Thus does the father to his children tell
 That from his sight his children might have run,
 Me and his children hungering in his view ;
 Husband and children ! one by one, by sword
 With his cak-staff the cottage children played ;
 From your own Children, if yourself were sick,
 Met in the roads, would bless us ; little children,
 and he may have children—
 My wife and children came into my mind.
 To bed the children must depart ;
 " Six Children, Sir ! had I to feed ;
 And bought my little children bread,
 As dear as my own children be ;
 I loved my children more and more.
 I loved my children less ;
 Her children from her inmost heart bewept.
 " One night, my Children ! from the north
 Children of the faring hours !
 And the children build their bowers,
 All children of one mother ;
 The darling of children and men ?
 Covered with leaves the little children,
 Men, women, children, yea the frame
 That our own children to our eyes
 Anxious for far-off children, where Children, thus post ye over vale and height
 Like Children. She is privileged to hold
 Her other children him did love :
 Wisdom doth live with children round her knees :
 Sound, healthy, children of the God of heaven,
 Ye children of a Soil that doth advance
 Make merry, wives ! ye little children, stun
 And to our children will transmit, or die ;
 The rude Biscayans, when their children lie
 Whose ruddy children, by the mother's eyes
 Children of Art, that claim strange brotherhood
 And little children by the hand
 Still do our very children boast
 Their spirit, in your Children, thus approve.
 The village Children, while the sky is red . . .
 And joins his little children in their sleep . . .
 Children of Summer ! Ye fresh Flowers that brave
 " And, Matthew, for thy children dead
 Children are blest, and powerful ; their world lies
 Wife, children, kindred, they were dead and gone ;
 But by the mouths of children, gracious God !
 A nest of children come of Christian blood,
 As little children in their childhood do
 " Among these children was a Widow's son,
 Their kindred, and the childree of their blood.
 And the Children are culling
 And see the Children sport upon the shore,
 With bashful fear no cottage children steal
 His children's children join'd the holy sound,
 His children up to waste and pillage.
 Thy Children left unfit, through vain demand
 These children claim thee for their sire ; the breath
 Destruction to the children of the earth
 Their wives, their children, and their virgin loves,
 Upon the childree of the land, a pest
 A race of real children ; not too wise,
 And accidents as children do with cards,
 With children gathered round ; another street
 And children whirling in their roundabouts ;
 Men, Women, three-years' Children, Babes in arms.
 Assembled with their children and their wives,
 The children now are rich, for the old to-day
 Associate with his children and his wife
 In common with the children of her love,
 And fearing God ; the very children taught
 And teasing ways of children vexed not him ;
 They, and their wives and children—happier far
 Of the poor innocent children. " Every smile,
 Two lovely Children—all that they possessed !
 And loved the haunts of children ; here, no doubt,
 And airy hopes my children.—From the depths
 To the inattentive children of the world :
 That poor men's children, they, and they alone,
 One of God's simple children that yet know not
 Of wife and children stung to agony.
 Of many helpless Children I begin
 Two ruddy children hung, a well-poised freight,
 Fair Rosamond, and the Children of the Wood,
 And three fair Children, plentifully fed
 And, in that mansion, children of his own,
 Mother and little children, boys and girls,
 By women, who have children of their own,
 For all the children whom her soil maintains
 On you, the children of my humble care,

Child's. For that another in his Child's affection
 Nor to the Child's enquiring mind
 Which, through all seasons, on a child's pursuits
 In a Child's heart as fear itself conceived
 While yet a child, with a child's eagerness
 Thankful for my beloved child's return
Chill. No tears can chill them, and no bosom warms,
 And be it so—for to the chill night shower
 When grass is chill with rain or dew,
 When chill night that care demands,
 Strikes through the Traveller's frame with deadlier chill
 Swain with chill rains, nor ever cast a look
 Such tribute as to winter chill

Chime. Three humble bells their rustic chime repeat ;
 Plucked while the church bells rang their earliest
 chime
 Some chime of fancy wrong or right ;
 And mighty Fairfield, with a chime
 Doth to the Soul exalt it with the chime
 Chime forth unwearied canticles,
 And bids it aptly fall, with chime
 Sad may I be who heard your sabbath chime
 Through the bleak concave, wakes this wondrous
 chime
 Derives its name, reflected as the chime
 A musical but melancholy chime,
 I hear their sabbath bells' harmonious chime
 Endearing title, a responsive chime

- In civil conflict met on Bosworth-field ;
Of natural rights and civil; and to acts
Of civil government, and its wisest forms;
Of civil slaughter, was our frequent walk;
In arguments of civil polity,
The cause of Christ and civil liberty,
Of civil action, yielded to a power
Of civil polity, and early trained
With civil arts, that shall breathe forth their
 fragrance,
The powers of civil polity were given;
Civilised. A savage horde among the civilised,
Civility. A brood whom no civility could melt,
While the fair gardens of civility,
Among the conquests of civility,
Of sweet civility, on rustic wilds.

And she was wildly clad:
And shepherds clad in the same country grey
What shifting pictures—clad in gleams
Are clad in one green hue, and lose themselves
And in a white, far-beaming, corselet clad!
Though clad in colours beautiful and pure,
And proud she was of heart, when clad
A shepherd clad in homely grey;
And clad in homely russet brown?
Ill fed she was, and thinly clad
Not seldom, clad in radiant vest,
A spirit seek in self-abasement clad.
Of mitred Prelates, Lords in ermine clad,
Of some gigantic warrior clad in mail,
In one inseparable glory clad,
Of aspect, with aerial softness clad,
Is clad with yellow flowers.
Claim. Confirmed by hoary hairs, belief may claim;
Not ineffectual was that piteous claim:
Of war, had I returned to claim my right;
Would balance claim with claim, and right with right?
Than half his substance. This unlooked-for claim,
For MARV'S humble, SARAH'S silent claim,
Thou art indeed by many a claim
One tender claim abate;
Such privilege ye claim.
And, if there be a joy that slights the claim
Inspired, may in thy leisure claim a part;
Proofs of a higher sovereignty I claim;
Which justly it can claim. The Nation hears
And claim, among the dead, this awful crown;
If, guarding grossest things from common claim
Some claim upon thee, if I could,
Beneath the change; who heard a claim
Powers have they left, an impulse, and a claim
The unfeeling Elements no claim shall raise
Peace that should claim respect from lawless Might.
With every help that ye from earth and heaven
 may claim!
If from a traveller's fortune I might claim
Before the target stood—to claim
Too much from this frail earth we claim,
Can oft with justice claim. And not disdaining
To greet with instant faith their loftiest claim.
Respect to every Inmate's claim:
Children of Art, that claim strange brotherhood
For great and sacred is the modest claim
A pure religion, and the claim
Such rights did feeble nature claim;
Yet shall it claim our reverence, that to God,
Shall, by regenerate life, the promise claim.
Christ died for—cannot forfeit his high claim
Go forth, great King! claim what thy birth bestows;
Claim Heaven's regard like waters that have wet
And alien stems with home-bred ferments claim
Ere nightfall—truth that well may claim a sigh,
Claim for the pilgrim: and, though chidings sharp
In concert with memorial claim
There's virtue, the title I surely may claim,
A claim to her disparagement!
Therein a portion claim.
He is come to claim his right:
One heart-relieving tear may claim;
In these lone vales, if aught of faith may claim,
Are high rewards; but bound thy Nature's claim
Unthought of—this may surely claim a sigh.
But now her Spirit hath put forth its claim
These children claim thee for their sire; the breath
Freedom, such as man may claim
Calmy triumphant; and for humbler claim
If love were his sole claim upon their care,
May fairly claim, by niggard age enriched
A claim that shattered all.—Our blooming girl,
Fit recompense of new desert? what claim
And mortal ignorance and frailty claim,
Full oft procured, yet may they claim respect,

Claim—continued.

- From my own door I shall be free to claim
Forgive me if I add another claim,
What arts had better claim with wrath to warm
Of Hercules, though by a dubious claim.
Claimad. In stray gifts to be claimed by whoever shall find;
Or herb that claimed peculiar sympathy,
Who, to spread wide the reverence they claimed
If now I ask a grace not claimed
How Francis, with the Banner claimed
Claimed by proof upon the Horn:
Claimed absolute dominion for the day.
The tribute by these various records claimed,
Which else the Christian virtue might have claimed.
Claiming. (Though claiming high distinction upon earth.
Claims. And came to—what's your title—eh? your claims
A measure is of Thee, whose claims extend
Yet he, not loth, in favour of thy claims
A Judge, who, as man claims by merit, gives;
Here pause: the poet claims at least this praise,
All States have glorified themselves,—their claims
Why speak of Roman Poms? the haughty claims
Your praise, in meet accordance with your claims
Justice and Peace through Her uphold their claims;
And claims from other worlds inspired
Which yet in thy behalf the Poet claims,
Ye shadowy Beings, that have rights and claims
They urge, "have interwoven claims and rights
(All claims of duty satisfied)
Through claims of wealth or blood; nor was it least
Life, human life, with all its sacred claims
His expectations, and announce his claims
Clamor. And raise up a radical clamor!
Clamorous. Rejoiced that clamorous spell and magic verse
A long and clamorous pray!
The voice, though clamorous as a horn
What need of clamorous bells, or ribands gay,
Of Genevieve. In both her clamorous Halls,
Those aberrations—had the clamorous friends
In clamorous agitation, round the crest
Clamorously. On Bard and Hero clamorously fell.
Clamour. Clamour of boys with innocent despites
Then shalt thou raise a clamour as do I.
Clamours. No night-duck clamours for his wilder'd mate.
Clan. Had been the wildest of his clan,
Wild Chieftain of a savage Clan!
The faded stories of his Clan!
And feeds, where, clan encountering clan,
Aroused his clan; and fighting at their head.
Clang. Now, as he plodded on, with sullen clang
How did they sparkle to the cymbal's clang!
The clang of arms is heard, and phantoms glide,
As clear and bold as the trumpet's clang.
Take fight; while with their clang the air resounds.
Clank. The wind is now thy organist;—a clank
Clanking. And clanking chains are perfect liberty.
While the jail-mastiff howls at the dull clanking
 chain,
Clap. Just as we left the glen a clap of thunder
The devils at such sights do clap their hands.
Clap your hands with joy my Hearers,
With thunder-peals, clap after clap,
Clap, infants, clap your hands! Divine must be
The Swans, in triumph clap their wings;
The struggle, clap their wings for victory!
Dire clap of hands, distracted chase of feet,
Clapham. Is John de Clapham, that fierce Esquire, Claphams. The Claphams and Mauleverers stand;
Clapped. Rose from the spot;—the Daughter clapped her hands,
"Mine is she," cried the Knight;—again they clapped their pinions.
Clapped hands, and shook with glee their matted locks;
Clapp'd her strong wings, and sought the cheerful
 isle,
Clapping. Clapping hands with shout and stare,
Over their mirthful triumph clapping hands.
Claps. Of history, Glory claps her wings, Claremont's. A Nation's hopes lie crushed in Clare-mont's desolate Hall.
Clarion. On tiptoe reared, he strains his clarion throat,
The cock far off sounded his clarion throat;
On tiptoe reared he blows his clarion throat,
Clarions. While clarions prate of kingdoms to be won—
Clarkson. Clarkson! it was an obstinate hill to climb:
Clarkson's. Shine for Clarkson's pure delight
Clash. Of turrets, and a clash of swords
Clashing. And headed not the voice of clashing swords,
Clasp. The symbol yield; and would undo this clasp,
Once having seen her clasp with fond embrace

Clasp—continued.

- And this poor Thorn they clasp it round . . .
 Forth sprang the impassioned Queen her Lord to clasp ; . . .
 Extended, clasp the winds, with mutual moan . . .
 The clasp that fixed the Roman Gown ; . . .
 Mere Fibula without a robe to clasp ; . . .
 My Father, do I clasp your knees ; . . .
 And clasp her Father's knees ;—ah, no ! . . .
 That be might wake to clasp thee in the shade : . . .
- Clasped. And clasped her to my heart, my heart that ached . . .
 Clasped the Lamb and kept her hold . . .
- Seen by mine eyes, or clasped in my embrace . . .
 Fell down and clasped his knees for joy, not uttering word . . .
 Hands clasped above the crucifix were wore . . .
 And the realised vision is clasped to my heart . . .
 A bead-roll, in his hand a clasped book . . .
 Of ivy, flourishing and thick, that clasped . . .
- Clasping. Clasping your infant Daughter to your heart . . .
 His pleading face, and feel his clasping arms . . .
 Clasping her beauty in my soul's embrace . . .
 Is clasping mine, it clasps me to think . . .
- Clasps. See how her ivy claddens the sacred Ruin,
 She clasps them at that dim-seen roofless stone.—
 Clasps in her arms, nor weens (O lot unblest !)
- Class. From that soft class of devotees who feel in scale and order, class the cabinet . . .
 With less delight upon that other class . . .
 To every class its station and its office . . .
 And they perhaps err least, the lowly class . . .
 He was a peasant of the lowest class : . . .
- Classes. The substance classes by some barbarous name . . .
- Classic. Illius, bending o'er thy classic urn ! . . .
 And, like the Spire that from your classic Hill
 Of him who thus survives by classic art,
 May classic Fancy, linking . . .
 With all their Arts,—but classic lore glides on
 In classic ages men perceived a soul . . .
 Now also shall the page of classic lore,
 The golden precepts of the classic page ; . . .
 But by the trade in classic niceties,
 Under the weight of classic eloquence,
 Ere yet familiar with the classic page . . .
- Clatter. Yet still his jaws and teeth they clatter,
 He begins to clatter ; . . .
- Clatters. The pewter clatters on the wall ; . . .
- Claws. And grows as if he would fix his claws . . .
- Clawed. Waxed wroth, and with foul claws, a harpy brood,
 And grant that every sceptred child of clay . . .
 " Eight weary weeks, through rock and clay,
 And that frail Child of thirsty clay,
 My unassisted heart is barrow clay,
 On "coigoes of vantage" haug their nests of clay ; . . .
 And honour rest upon the senseless clay . . .
 Its glistening dew ; but hallowed is the clay . . .
 To him, and aught that hides his clay . . .
 That less should scorn the abandoned clay ; . . .
 If clay could think and mind were weight,
 Lamented youth ! to thy cold clay . . .
 Last lingering look of clay, that tames . . .
 Close to the vital seat of human clay ; . . .
 Beside their moss-grown bud of clay,
 In thee hath tempered so her clay . . .
 Who, less insensible than sodden clay . . .
 Earth crouches, the elements are potter's clay,
 By scale exact, in model, wood or clay . . .
 Or wraps an old acquaintance up in clay . . .
 That venerable clay. Meanwhile the best . . .
- Clean. Engaged, near blazing hearth on clean swept floor . . .
- Cleanlier. By clearer taper lit a cleanlier board . . .
- Cleanly. Turned to the cleanly supper-board, and
 there . . .
 A blazing fire—beside a cleanly hearth . . .
- Cleanse. To soothe and cleanse, not madden and pollute ! . . .
 Could cleanse the Augean stable, by the might . . .
 Cleanse with thy blood my sins, to this incline . . .
- Cleansed. Familiarly, yet out of the cleansed heart
 There stood be, cleansed from the despair . . .
 In the cleansed faith for which her martyrs died ; . . .
 And consecrating element hath cleansed . . .
 Of all dishonour, cleansed from mortal stain . . .
- Cleansing. Earlier from cleansing fires, and gains withal . . .
- Clear. But now the clear bright Moon her zenith gains . . .
 Feeds the clear current of his sympathies . . .
 On as we journey, in clear view displayed,
 Beat round to clear the streets of want and pain . . .
 And clear and open soul, so prized in fearless youth . . .
 No—no—the thing stands clear of mystery ; . . .
 To-day will clear up all.—You marked a Cottage,
 The moon sone clear, the air was still, so still
 From the clear light of circumstances, flashed . . .
 And burns with a clear and steady light ; . . .

Clear—continued.

- Fresh water from the brook, as clear as ever ran ;
 In such clear water, that thy boat . . .
 Suspended in a stream as clear as sky . . .
 " But is that gloom dissolved ? how passing clear . . .
 As the clear Moon with modest pride . . .
 'Tis eight o'clock,—a clear March night,
 So clear, so bright, our fathers said . . .
 It was an April morning : fresh and clear . . .
 Helvellyn far into the clear blue sky . . .
 Warbles by fits his low clear song ; . . .
 Or by the silent lapse of fountain clear,
 But what cao all avail to clear him,
 The clear Moon, and the glory of the heavens . . .
 Sailed through the sky—the brooks ran clear ; . . .
 And a clear brook with choerful knell . . .
 Her looks were calm, her senses clear . . .
 Through half the clear blue sky will go ; . . .
 When all the stars shone clear and bright,
 Solitary, clear, profound,
 Ito clear view the cultured fields that streak
 With dread precision, ye made clear . . .
 That loads the middle beaver ; and clear and bright
 Who from the well-spring of his own clear breast
 Beneath the clear blue sky he saw . . .
 Towards the smooth river deep and clear . . .
 More steady looks the moon, and clear,
 Yet standing in the clear moonshine ; . . .
 Lingers beside that Rill, in vision clear . . .
 Hath shown that nothing human can be clear . . .
- How clear, how keen, how marvellously bright
 Aod to this Work !—a grotto brightly and clear
 Yet he repines not, if his thought stand clear . . .
- Hurrying and sparkling through the clear blue beaver ; . . .
 Clear tops of far-off mountains we descry . . .
 In festal glee : why oot ? For fresh and clear,
 So loud, so clear, my Partner through life's day,
 And clear way made for her triumphal car . . .
 Thou wear'st upon thy forehead clear . . .
 Then clear the weeds from off his Grave . . .
 On Grawmere's clear unruined breast . . .
 And saw, while sea was calm and air was clear,
 When morn returns, beneath the clear blue sky . . .
- Solemn effluence, clear as solar light . . .
 Of past events ; to whom, in vision clear . . .
 In naked splendour, clear from mist or haze . . .
 Clear shines the glorious sun above ; . . .
 Another's praise from envy clear . . .
 From the clear spring of a plain English heart,
 Days passed—and Monte Calvo would not clear . . .
 To tower as green, from sky to sky as clear . . .
 Better to breathe at large on this clear height
 With thy clear voice, I caught the fitful sound . . .
 For the clear waters to pursue their race . . .
 Checking the stream, make a pool smooth and clear
 Rocks, rivers, and smooth lakes more clear than glass . . .
 Substantial motive, reason clear . . .
 Of recollections clear and bright ; . . .
 The hall-clock in the clear moonshine . . .
 That stood't before my eyes, more clear . . .
 Of duty, seeing with clear sight ; . . .
 Around her sees, while air is hushed, a clear
 In the clear land of vision, but foreseen . . .
 Seems firm as solid crystal, breathless, clear . . .
 In vision exquisitely clear . . .
 To sit in leafy woods by fountains clear ! . . .
 To glide in open prospect through clear sky . . .
 The cattle crowding round this beverage clear . . .
 This perilous bay, stands clear of all offence ; . . .
 Because the unstained, the clear, the crystalline . . .
 On the smooth bottom of this clear bright sea,
 Extracting from clear skies and air serene,
 Clear sight She has of what be was,
 Up ! up ! my Friend, and clear your looks ; . . .
 It breaks, and all is clear : . . .
 Again unfolded, passage clear shall yield . . .
 Clear, loud, and lively is the din . . .
- His voice shall chant, in accents clear . . .
 Broad, clear, and toned harmoniously, with skill . . .
 Then haply, Beaumont ! words in current clear . . .
 To Loughrigg-tarn, round clear and bright as heaven . . .
- Is smooth as clear, save where with dimples small
 Break forth,—again to walk the clear blue sky . . .
 And where the wood was clear . . .
 Yet may I sing, O Alma ! loud ad clear . . .
 Aod in a tomb of precious marble clear . . .
 That her clear voice made a loud rioting,
 Next morning Troilus began to clear . . .
 Singing so well, so goodly, and so clear . . .
 For which, oh, gentle Luoa, bright and clear . . .
 Bounds calm and clear the chaos still and boar ; . . .
 Now in the clear and open day I feel . . .
 As clear and bold as the trumpet's clang . . .
 Shall I take up my home ? and what clear stream
 'Twas autumn, and a clear and placid day . . .

Clog. The encircling turf into a barren elod ;
 Beneath " the random biad of clod or stone "

 Duty ?—an unwelcome clog ;
 Those life-consuming sounds that clog the air,
 Idleness halting with his weary clog,
 Became a clog to him, whose spirit wished

Clogged. Pathway, and lane, and public road, were clogged
 While thankless thousands are oppress and clogged

Cloister. The cloister startles at the gleam of arms.
 There ranged through cloister, court, and aisle,
 As in a cloister. Yet the grateful Poor
 As in a cloister. Once—while, in that shade

Cloistered. In cloistered privacy. But not to dwell
 If cloistered Avarice scruple not to wrong
 Of cloistered Archbishops, free their souls to fill
 Pure as the holiest cloistered nun
 576 Censuraph 4

Cloisters. Courts, cloisters, flocks of churches, gateways, towers ;
 Went back to Granta's cloisters, not so prompt
 Of London, and from cloisters there, thou camest,
 The floors of those dim cloisters, till that hour,

Cloistral. Of that perennial shade, a cloistral place
 Close to these cloistral steps a burial-place,
 Of lurking cloistral arch, through trees espied
 And, high above that length of cloistral roof,
 For such a One beset with cloistral snares.

Yet many a Novice of the cloistral shade,
 League after league, and cloistral avenues,

Clomb. Most cruelly. As up the steep we clomb,
 As when he clomb from Rydal Mere ;
 Thou hast clomb aloft, and gazed
 The strenuous Animal hath clomb ;
 Those steps I clomb ; the mistis before me gave
 Two Brothers clomb, and, turning face from face,
 And laughing dares the Adventurer, who hath clomb

And clomb the winding stair that once
 To giddier heights hath clomb the Papal sway.
 Was crossed, a bare ridge clomb, upon whose top
 Have seen us side by side, when, having clomb
 When from the Vallais we had turned, and clomb
 And clomb with eagerness, till anxious fears
 Following our Guide, we clomb the cottage-stairs
 Had clomb aloft to delve the moorland turf
 Of mere humanity, you clomb those heights ;
 We clomb a green hill's side ; and, as we clomb,

Close. While thick above the rill the branches close,
 Close by her mantling wings' embraces prest.
 —At once bewildering mists around him close,
 And, ere his eyes can close upon the day,
 While o'er the desert, answering every close,
 Close on the remnant of their weary way ;
 He lays his stiffened limbs,—his eyes begin to close ;

Close by my mother in their native bowers ;
 That ragged Dwelling, close beneath a rock
 You will have nobody to close your eyes—
 His staff had dropped, and close upon the brink
 For once could have thee close to me,
 Of a close chair, a litter, or sedan,
 Close to the spot where with his rod and line
 These close the peaceful lives of flowers ?
 Some close behind, some side by side,
 He'd wish to close them again.

Is close and hot ;—and now and then
 The VANGUARD, following close behind,
 Where close fogs hide their parent brook ;
 With a continuous cloud of texture close,
 So close, you'd say that they are bent
 " And, close beside this aged Thorn,
 Which close beside the Thorn you see,
 Close to the thorn on which Sir Walter leaned
 Close clings to earth the living rock,
 And close by Peter's side he stands :
 —A withered leaf is close behind,
 To a close lane they now are come,
 Close by a brake of flowering furze
 Close to the Ass's feet she fell ;
 Close to these cloistral steps a burial-place,
 For they have learnt to open and to close

Close—continued.

Close at my side ! She bids me fly to greet
 " The tomb," said Merlin, " may not close
 Close to the vital seat of human clay ;
 Urged to close toil with chemic fire ;
 That with their joyful shout should close
 Close to the summit of this height,
 Flits and refits along the close arcade ;
 The linnet's warble, sinking towards a close,
 From the close confines of a shadowy vale,
 Wafted o'er waves, or creeping through close trees,
 Close up those barren leaves ;
 Shut close the door ; press down the latch ;
 Of winter rushing in, to close
 But, O Mother ! by the close
 Falsehood and Treachery, in close council met,
 Your gift, ere shutters close—
 Resounded with deep swell and solemn close,
 Or gentle Nature close her eyes,
 In close self-shelter, like a Thing at rest.

That doth " within itself its sweetness close ;"
 Shades of the prison-house begin to close
 To where, while thick above the branches close,
 While ere his eyes can close upon the day,
 When close ad closer they begin to strain,
 And Conscience dogging close his bleeding way
 Close at her side were all the powers, design'd
 Embrace me, then, ye Hills, and close me in,
 Him will I take, and in close covert keep,
 In a close Box, covert for Justice meet.

The star which comes at close of day to shine
 Cherry or maple, sate in close array,
 And close communion. Many are our joys
 Close at my side, an unmouth shape appeared.
 The rocks that muttered close upon our ears,
 Dear native Regions, wheresoe'er shall close
 Reality too close and too intensely,
 And nothing less) when, finally to close
 Open ; I would approach them, but they close.
 Among the close and overcrowded haunts
 It was a close, warm, breezeless summer night,
 To its appointed close : the discipline
 Had reached its close ; but Life is insecure,
 Not one hour merely, but till evening's close,
 Supplied a boundary less abrupt and close ;
 At the calm close of summer's longest day,
 Of stillness and close privacy, a nook

" Close to his destined habitation, lies
 " In that green nook, close by the Churchyard wall,
 " These grassy heaps lie amicably close,"
 And, close behind, the comely Matron rode,
 Then, shall the slowly-gathering twilight close
 Of her close tasks, and long captivity.
 Of Man may rise, as to a welcome close
 The same should be continued to its close,
 Softens its evening uproar towards a close
 Th' inevitable close of Dardan power

Close-attending. From his close-attending cloud,
Close-clipt. Of close-clipt foliage green and tall,
Close-crowding. Close-crowding round the infant-god ;
Closed. Sound of closed gate, across the water borne,
 And closed the sparkling eye.

There, when they had closed their voyage,
 And casement closed and door made fast,
 Had closed upon his weary way,
 And, till life's journey closed, the spot
 Of a closed volume lingering in thy hand
 Here closed the meditative strain ;
 Looked ere his eyes were closed. By him was seen
 Uncovered to his grave : 'tis closed,—her loss
 When the soft hand of sleep had closed the latch
 Appended to his bosom, and lips closed
 But with closed eyes,—of breath and bloom forsaken.

Self-shaken, as I closed my airy journey.
 The Council closed, the Priest in full career
 And the sword stopped ; the bleeding wounds were closed ;

Had closed his door before the day was done,
 Then would be closed the restless oblique eye
 His ears he closed to listen to the songs
 And the pure vision closed in darkness infinite.
 Has closed the Shepherd-poet's eyes ;
 His eyes have closed ! And ye, lov'd books, no
 more

Last night, while by his dying fire, as clos'd
 On the closed eyes of young Endymion fell,
 The cottage threshold where my journey closed.
 While listlessly I sate, and, having closed
 Of strangers, till day closed, we sated along,

 When, having closed the mighty Shakespeare's page,
 Closed up each chink, and with fresh bands of straw
 Closed the preparatory notices
 Had scarcely closed this high-wrought strain of rapture

Who, for the sake of sterner quiet, closed
 Here closed the Tenant of that lonely vale
 And guardian of their course, that never closed
 To calm the Sufferer when his story closed ;

Here closed the Sage that eloquent harangue,
His last, repentant breath; and closed his eyes,
Closed by degrees to charity; heaven's blessing
Or easiest carried, closed the motley train,
Before the greedy visiting was closed,
This vesper-service closed, without delay,

years:—
And look, where clothed in brightest green
Dwell, clothed in radiance, their immortal vest;
It seems the Eternal Soul is clothed in thee
Of pencil ever clothed with light and shade;
Shall show her clothed with strength and skill
Clothed with innocuous fire;
A winged Goddess—clothed in vesture wrought
In beauty clothed, or breathing sweetness
That the firm soul is clothed with fruit divine!
While Bacchus, clothed in semblance of a Friar,
In filial duty, clothed with love divine,
There are the naked clothed, the hungry fed;
Clothed with impressive majesty, and graced
And feudal rapine clothed with iron mail,
A student clothed in gown and tasselled cap,

Of azure without cloud, and at my feet
A cloud of mist, that smitten by the sun
Half-veiled in vapoury cloud, the silver steam
Of a departing cloud,—“Twas not for love”
Set and sustained;—thou, who didst wrap the cloud
Or cloud of darkness, localised in heaven;
And, as the heavy cloud of sleep dissolves,
Brush it away, or cloud pass over it;
Of ancient minster lifted above the cloud
So, through the cloud of death, her Spirit passed
The cloud of fancy and uncouth surmise
She was a soft attendant cloud, that hung
Softly and lightly from a passing cloud,
Rocking the trees, or driving cloud on cloud
Within his cheek, as light within a cloud;
Then, following closely with the cloud of dust,
The cloud of rooks descending through mid air
Acquaintance as they sweep from cloud to cloud.

Clouds—continued.

Clouds of all tincture, rocks and sapphire sky, . . . 784
 For fickle, short-lived clouds to occupy, . . . 787
 And let the bursting clouds to fury rouse . . . 790
 More solid than the gilded clouds of heaven? . . . 792
 Inverted trees, rocks, clouds, and azure sky; . . . 800
 Sink, with a retinue of flaming clouds, . . . 803
 Into the dewy clouds. Ambition reigns . . . 807
 Is the mute company of changeful clouds; . . . 808
 Descending from the region of the clouds, . . . 809
 Could have transferred him to the flying clouds, . . . 829
 And if the blustering wind that drives the clouds
 Like blighted buds; or clouds that mimicked land
 Hidden by clouds, and oft-bedimmed by haze,
 Shed wheo the clouds had gathered and distained
 That virtue, like the fumes and vapoury clouds
 To linger 'mid the last of those bright clouds . . . 873
 Among the clouds, and roars through the ancient
 woods; . . . 878
 Of azure heaven, the unending clouds, . . . 884
 And multitudes of little floating clouds, . . . 893
 Vivid as fire; clouds separately poised,—
 The stars shine brightly between clouds at rest,
 As if swift clouds swept o'er it, or it caught
 Seat-Sandal, a fond lover of the clouds; . . .
 And not feel motions there? He thought of clouds
 The mountains too are thine, some clouds there are,
 When envious clouds shut out her silver light.

Cloud-seat. Who but must covet a cloud-seat, or skiff
Cloud-sequestered. On cloud-sequestered heights, that see and hear
Cloud-streaks. And, with cloud-streaks lightest and loftiest, share
Cloud-wooling. Transported over that cloud-wooling hill
Cloudy. A cloudy substitute for failing gladness.
 Issuing from her cloudy shrine;—
 And upward, high as Malvern's cloudy crest;
 From her unworthy seat, the cloudy stall
 Lift, and encircle with a cloudy chair,
 Not Iris, issuing from her cloudy shrine,
 Through cloudy umbrage, well might that fair face,
 —Heavy, and dull, and cloudy is the night,
Clough. With Clym o' the Clough, were they alive
 again,
Clove. He clove to her who could not give him peace—
 The crescent moon clove with its glittering prow
 That ROLAND clove with huge two-handed sway,
 Clove fondly; to his favourite seat
 Who with the ploughshare clove the barren moors,
 My surprise, through the inferior throng I clove
Cloven. See Fresh-cloven.
Clovenford. And when we came to Clovenford,
Clower. His cheeks were red as ruddy clover;
Clown's. When she stands cresting the Clown's head,

Clowns. Clowns, conjurers, posture-masters, harlequins,
Cloy. No gains too cheaply earned his fancy cloy,
 These local recollections ne'er can cloy;
 That neither overwhelm nor cloy,
Clubs. Ironic diamonds,—clubs, hearts, diamonds, spades,
Clumsy. They who with clumsy desperation brought Clung. That clung to Nature with a truant's love, Round the dear Shade she would have clung—'tis vain,
 That round it clung, and tempting scheme . . .
 For them whose timid Spirits clung . . .
 And sorrow that to fruitless sorrow clung! . . .
 And divine Art, that fast to memory clung—
 How has the Banner clung so fast . . .
 Clung to the hand to which it passed . . .
 Ah, when the Body, round which in love we clung,
 Her soothed affection clung,
 That, round his trunk and branches, might have clung . . .
 Upon Æneas, and around him clung; . . .
 As ever clung around a mother's neck,
 They clung, as if they were its life, nay more,
 With the neglected house to which she clung.
 The doubt to which a wavering hope had clung
Cluster. A bare rock of the Scilly cluster;
 The cluster round the porch, and the folk . . .
Clustered. That clustered round her head, . . .
 Clustered like stars some few, but single most,
 Clustered together with a merry crowd
 Or clustered dwellings, where again they raise Clustering. 'Mid clustering isles, and holly-sprinkled
 steps;
 As lambs or fawns in April clustering lie
 She left him there; for, clustering round his knees,
 With its grey rocks clustering in pensive shade—
 Clustering, with barn and byre, and spouting mill!
 In trellised shed with clustering roses gay,
 Clustering like constellated eyes
 And her bright dower of clustering charities,
 With clustering ivy, and the lightsome twigs
 Under the covert of these clustering elms. . .
 In clustering curls, like ivy, which the bite
 Borne by yon clustering cottages, that sprang

Clusters. With all its mealy clusters of ripe nuts, . . . 99
 Tall and erect, with tempting clusters hung, . . . 185
 —So, pleased with purple clusters to entwine . . . 367
 With milk-white clusters hung; the rod and line,
Clyde. To Tiviot's stream, to Annan, Tweed, and Clyde:—
 Had trod the banks of Clyde, and Tay, . . .
 For thou, O Clyde, hast ever been . . .
 (So beautiful is Clyde) forgot to mourn
 To serve thy need, in union with that Clyde
Clym. With Clym o' the Clough, were they alive

Coaches. Now, coaches and chariots! roar on like a stream;
 'Mid coaches and chariots, a waggon of straw,
Coal. And on the page, more black than coal,
Coal-black. The sun has burnt her coal-black hair;
Coals. The mountains, glowing hot, like coals of fire.
Coarse. While the coarse rushes, to the sweeping
 breeze,
 Of some sweet Babe—Flower stolen, and coarse
 Weed left
 Coarse manners, vulgar passions, that beat in
 The portion gave of coarse but wholesome fare
 And a coarse outside of repulsive life
 My Lady ne'er approached a thing so coarse
Coarser. (The coarser pleasures of my boyish days,

 Pines, on the coast, through mist their tops uprear,
 Upon the coast of Cyprus? Yes, even so,
 Upon the Barbary coast.—'Twas not a little
 Or foreland, on a new-discovered coast;
 And, while they coast the silent lake,
 Do we behold the line of Erin's coast?
 Where I have been, but on this coast . . .
 "And all along the indented coast,
 The coast of France—the coast of France how near!
 Her haughty brow against the coast of France,
 Of England—who in hope her coast had won,
 As nought that marvellous coast thro' all its length
 Became, as nearer to the coast she drew,
 Which yet survive on bleak Iona's coast.
 Another language spreads from coast to coast;
 On a wild coast, rough monitors to feed
 Before her wane begins on heaven's blue coast;
 On a wild coast; how destitute! did they
 The guilty coast of Norway iron-bound;
 When Bega sought of yore the Cumbrian coast,
 On the bare coast; nor do they gudgeon the boon
 When he was driven from coast to coast,
 Is but a mockery! when from coast to coast,
 By rough waves on a perilous coast,
 In life-long exile on a savage coast,
 Or, shipwrecked, kindles on the coast
 Whom, since her birth on bleak Northumbria's
 coast,
 Pipe wild along the hollow-blustering coast,
 The pines that near the coast their summits rear
 Upon a desert coast, that having brought
 And lived by his forbearance, from the coast
 Sails in smooth weather by the placid coast
 O'er the flat meadows and indented coast . . .
 Huge skeletons of crags which from the coast
 Where hast thou tarried, Hector? from what coast

 A coat he wore of military red . . .
 Thou, like the morning, in thy saffron coat, . . .
 And with his coat did then essay
 In climate, and my nature's outward coat . . .
 Of Fortunatus, and the invisible coat . . .
 He dons his coat of darkness: on the stage
 And, in his scarlet coat, . . .

 And coats enough to smother nine,
Cobwebbed. Ne'er assail my cobwebbed shield!
Cobwebs. Among its kindred cobwebs. I had been,
 By cobwebs, stood within a dusty nook;
Cock. See Haycock, Heath-cook, Weather-cock.
 Or to the drowsy crow of midnight cock
 The cock far off sounded his clarion throat;
 I lay where, with his drowsy mates, the cock
 Then whistle as shrill as the buzzard cock;
 So struts yon cock that now is crowing;
 The Cock is crowing,
 But, long as cock shall crow from household perch
 The cock that crows, the smoke that curls, that sound
 Save that the Cock is crowing, a shrill note,
 Followed by drowsy crow of midnight cock.

Cock—continued.

The cock had crowed, and now the eastern sky
 —There crows the cock, single in his domain :
 "Roused by the crowing cock at dawn of day,
 Soon as the cock begins to crow
Cockatoo. Beware of him ! Thou, saucy cockatoo,
Cockle. Which staff and cockle hat and sandal shoon Cocks.
 "The cocks did crow to-whoop, to-whoop, Cocytus. But if thou (like Cocytus from the moans
Code. No single volume paramount, no code,
 Fit retribution, by the moral code
Coercing. Coercing all things into sympathy,
Coeval. But for coeval sympathy prepared
 And some, coeval with the earliest blush
Coevals. When her coevals each and all are fled,
 For thy unblest coevals, amid wilds
 Than his coevals in the sheltered vale Coffin. A coffin through Timothy's threshold had past ;
 Is it a coffin,—or a shroud ?
 Bearing a coffin in the midst, with which
 Beside the coffin, resting on its lid
 And by the unclosed coffin kept her seat
Coffin. Thy breast their death-bed, confined in thine arms !
Coffin-lid. Echoed from the coffin-lid ;
Coffins. Gloomy as coffins, and unsightly lanes
Cogitations. And oft his cogitations sink as low
 Do penitential cogitations cling ;
 —Our cogitations this way have been drawn,
Cognizable. No cognizable vestiges, no more
Cognizably. By something cognizably shaped ;
Cohorn. The feudal keep, the bastions of Cohorn, Cohorns. Lo ! he harangues his cohorts—there the storm
Colognes. On "coignes of vantage" hang their nests of clay ;
Coll. Doth lodge, and feed, and coil, and sleep, in safety.
 Coil within coil, at noon-tide ? For the Word
Colled. And ye, Beliefs ! colled serpent-like about Colled-up. His colled-up prey with barkings turbulent.
Colling. See Up-colling.
 The coronal that colling vipers make ;
 And harmless reptile coiling in the sun,
Coln. But stops,—that he may safely lodge the coin
 —Up from the ground they snatch the copper coin Colnage. Enemies !—of his own coinage. That may be,
Colns. (As you have said) he coins himself the slander
 Shrank into coins with all their warlike toil :
Cold. On cold blue nights, in hut or straw-built shed,
 No more her breath can thaw their fingers cold,
 Still the cold cheek its shuddering tear retains,
 And cold and hunger are his least of woes ;
 Cold as the north-wind o'er a waste of snow,
 The wet cold ground, he feared, must be his only
 bed.
 Cold stony horror all her senses bound.
 The empty loom, cold hearth, and silent wheel,
 Of service done with cold formality,
 Who has so practised on the world's cold sense,
 Resembled much that cold voluptuary,
 My hands are numb. Ha ! ha ! 'tis nipping cold.
 The cold blast struck me. 'Twas a foolish question.
 Alas ! 'tis cold—I shiver in the sunshine—
 From cold, from hunger, penury, and death ;
 To cold and hunger !—Pain is of the heart,
 I tell you his hands and his body were cold—
 but I think his malady was cold and hunger.
 In the cold, cold night.
 My playmate thou shalt be ; and when the wind is cold
 Ere with cold beads of midnight dew
 In the cold north's unhallowed ground,
 The days are cold, the nights are long,
 Protected from his cold damp air ?
 How cold it is ! but thou art good ;
 And the sun did shine so cold !"
 Or whispering like two reeds that in the cold moon-beam
 Now are they parted, far as Death's cold hand
 Like a beggar in the cold,
 It seems that all looks wondrous cold ;
 And Benjamin is wet and cold,
 Men, women, heartless with the cold ;
 From damp, and rain, and cold.
 Cold, pain, and labour, and all fleshly ills ;
 Shall ne'er submit to cold decay.
 And withered leaves, from earth's cold breast
 The little sprinkling of cold earth that fell
 You might perceive, his spirit cold
 But through the dark, and through the cold,
 Of cold neglect she leaves thy head ungraced,
 That change—age on thy brow was smoothed—
 thy cold
 "As the cold aspect of a sunless way
 Untouched through all severity of cold ;

Cold—continued.

Be left more desolate, more dreary cold
 Into the tracts of darkness and of cold :
 As vapours breathed from dungeons cold
 The dewy ground was dark and cold ;
 Of cold mechanic battle do enslave
 Communion where the heart is cold
 Yet is the heart not pitiless nor cold ;
 She vanished ; leaving prospect blank and cold
 Like vision, pensive though not cold,
 Lamented youth ! to thy cold clay
 Endured. And who—if not a man as cold
 Cold as she is, ere life be fled for ever
 Shed, on the Slumberer's cold was cheek
 Thy Knights must touch the cold hand of the Virgin ;
 A gloomy niche, capacious, blank, and cold ;
 Flung from your cliff a shadow large and cold
 How he was found, cold as an icicle,
 In the cold grave hath long been laid :
 Flies out, and passes on from cold to cold ;
 Though cold as winter, gloomy as the grave,
 Through summer heat, autumnal cold,
 The formal World relaxes her cold chain
 How cold the quarter that the wind best loves,
 For Fancy hath her fits both hot and cold,
 Cold though your nature be, 'tis pure ;
 Nor heat, nor cold, nor weary ways,
 For very cold to go to bed ;
 And then for cold not sleep a wink.
 When her old bones were cold and chill,
 The cold, cold moon above her head,
 And icy cold he turned away
 That he was cold and very chill :
 "Poor Harry Gill is very cold,"
 "I speak not of the winter's cold"
 Both hot and cold, and heart-aches every day,—
 Like frost he thought his heart was icy cold ;
 Thy cold doors ; but I dare not for this rout ;
 To selfishness and cold oblivious cares
 In this cold abstinence from evil deeds,
 That shrinks, like many more, from cold and rain ;
 "It doth not love the shower, nor seek the cold :
 To the cold marble, waits upon thy dust ;
 And her cold back their colder bosoms thrill ;
 Led by Fear's cold wet hand, and dogg'd by Death ;
 Which with cold kiss Devotion planted near,
 Cold from necessity's continual snow,
 Till Death's cold touch her cistern-wheel assail,
 So through the darkness and the cold we flew,
 For cold and raw the air was, and untuned ;
 Now mute, for ever mute in the cold grave.
 To the cold grave in which her husband slept,
 Joined in a cold damp nook, espied a well
 With my accustomed load ; in heat and cold,
 This vital warmth too cold, these visual orbs,
 The redbreast, ruffled up by winter's cold
 In the cold ground ; and to the emmet gives
 Where knowledge, ill begun in cold remark
 Cold, sullen, blank, from hope and joy shut out ;
 The ghostly face of cold decay put on
 For these cold humours of habitual spleen
 Of sudden overthrow ; and cold neglect
 With a step quickened by November's cold,
 Should lie beneath the cold starlight !
 To drink of the cold well. When in like sort
 Yes, the realities of life so cold,
 And cold and hunger's abject wretchedness,
Colder. And should the colder fit with You be on
 And her cold back their colder bosoms thrill ;
Coldly. Now coldly given, now utterly refused,
 Coldly we spake. 'The Saxons, overpowered
 But coldly rest not here—be more than just ;
Coldness. On the blank plains,—the coldness of the night,
 With coldness still returning ;
Cold-sweating. A thousand sharp punctures of cold-
 sweating pain,

 Which you've collected for the noblest ends,
 These silver clouds collected round the sun
 Said I, becoming quite collected ;
 For in a few collected in His name
 Of the fields, he collected that bloom, when a boy ;
 Where fierce the rays of woe collected burn
 That is collected among woods and fields,
 More faithfully collected from himself
 Had been collected from the neighbouring vale,
 One after one, collected from afar,

 The little colour that he had was soon . . . 100
 Faint colour over both their pallid cheeks, . . . 119
 In colour like a raven's wing; . . . 166
 Of colour bright as feverish dreams!
 The ghastly colour from his lips had fled;
 Disorderly colour, form, and stature!
 And colour life's dark cloud with orient rays.
 What strife of colour, shape and sound
 Of colour dawned upon the Damsel's cheek;
 Were at that time, as now, in colour grey.
 But what is colour, if upon the rack
 Whose azure depth their colour emulates,
 In colour so resplendent, with command
 Monstrous in colour, motion, shape, sight, sound!
 Of colour and proportion; to the moods
 Her cheek to change its colour, was conveyed

 Low bending o'er the colour'd water, fold
 Of waters colouring by impending clouds,
 He coloured objects to his own desire

 Now deep and red, the colouring of night;
 Gave specious colouring to aim and act,
 Which o'er sad thoughts a sadder colouring threw.
 Do take a sober colouring from an eye
 Blends with the solemn colouring of the night;
 Gleaming through colouring of other times,
Colours. He deems their colours shall endure
 On the slopes of the pastures all colours were seen;
 Blue-cap, with his colours bright,
 And the colours have all passed away from her eyes!
 All lovely colours there you see,
 All colours that were ever seen;
 Their colours and their forms, were then to me
 In the gorgeous colours drest
 Though clad in colours beautiful and pure,
 And, if time spare the colours for the grace
 And charm of colours; if applaud those signs
 All colours,—and the liveliest streak

 In vermilion colours and in gold
 Of colours manifold and bright . . . 446
 There are no colours in the fairest sky
 Prismatic colours from the sun;
 Such colours, and no other, . . . 486
 With a divinity of colours, drest
 Ah! not alone by colours bright
 Scatter the colours from the plumes that bear
 Bright colours whether they deceive or no?—
 And mingle colours, that should breed
 Within that canvass Dwelling, colours, lines,
 Of sea or sky, no colours of green fields;
 And changeful colours by invisible links
 Of colours, lurking, gleaming up and down
 Of forms and colours, passive, yet endowed
 Of colours, lights, and forms; the deafening din;
 Press forward, in all colours, on the sight;
 Through all the colours which the sun bestows,
 From blended colours also borrowing help,
 Through meagre lines and colours, and the press
 And gorgeous as the colours side by side
 Into a thousand colours; while he read,

Come. Come forth, and here retire in purple shade;
 Though grief and pain may come to-morrow?
 As now, fair river! come to me
 Both of the time to come, and time long fled:
 So lonely, but that thence might come a pang
 When hearing a deep sigh, that seemed to come
 "Twas a hard change; an evil time was come;
 "O come," he cried, "come, after weary night
 Was best, could I but shun the spot where man
 might come.
 Was come, I tried in vain the crowd's resort.

 shiverings, . . . 51
 Come, let us house together. Had I not
 Must never come before a mortal judgment-seat,
 We come by order of the Band. Belike . . . 56
 In which a man may come to his end, whose crimes
 That Woman will come o'er this Waste to save thee.
 Nay, think not so: come, let me raise you up:
 Laws, but we ask not whence those laws have come;
 I come home, and this is my comfort!
 Why dost thou come to me with words like these?
 Ay, come to me and weep. Yes, Varlet, look,
 It would have come to this!—What brings you hither? speak!
 Come, let us take a peep at both together, . . . 77
 What way does the Wind come? What way does he go?
 But how he will come, and whither he goes, . . . 80
 —Come now we'll to bed! and when we are there
 And shouted, "Mother, come to me!" . . . 81
 "Then come with me into the chaise." . . . 81
 Come on, and tread where I shall tread."
 The rain and storm are things that scarcely can come here. . . . 85

Come—continued.

I've heard of fearful winds and darkness that come there ;
 Sleep—and at break of day I will come to thee again ;
 And when thy decline shall come,
 "Hither the Afflicted come, as thou hast heard thy Mother say,
 In verse, which to thy ear might come, would treat this simple theme ;
 By this the Priest, who down the field had come, And who would grieve and fret, if, welcome come Will come with loads of January snow,
 That Leonard Ewbank was come home again,
 Should come, 'twould needs be a glad day for him ; He could not come to an unhallowed end !
 Come often to us, fear no wrong ;
 Will come to you ; to you herself will wed ;
 Come to him thus, and drove the weary Wight along,
 That come and go with endless play,
 I think that he will come again.
 Headlong yon waterfall must come,
 The wolf has come to me to-night,
 Reckless of what might come at last
 "Let him come, with his purse proudly grasped in his hand,
 "What ails you, that you must come creeping to me ?"
 My apprehensions come in crowds ;
 Then come to me, my Son, or send
 "Across the waters I am come,
 Come to me—I'm no enemy,
 And you may see his hour is come,
 Through dark and shapeless fear of things to come,
 Come home again, nor stop at all—
 Come home again, what'er befall,
 A thought is come into her head ;
 And to the wood at length is come ;
 The Son and Father were come home, even then,
 At length their time was come, they were not loth
 A good report did from their Kinsman come,
 As that which comes, or seems to come, from heaven,
 But why that prayer ? as if to her could come
 Else these words would come like mockery,
 But things come, and pass away ;
 Not like a beggar is he come,
 Or wind from any quarter, ever come,
 Under my cottage-roof, had gladly come
 Come forth at evening, keeps These still and mute ;
 To come and slumber in your bower ;
 May peace come never to his nest,
 Thou wilt come with half a call,
 Spring is coming, Thou art come !
 From the shore come the notes
 The family had come that way,
 Nor has thought time to come and go,
 He draws him to the door—"Come in,
 Come, come," cries he to Benjamin !
 Can any mortal clog come to her ?
 Come straggling through the wind and rain :
 "Come ! come !" cried one, and without more ado
 But there may come another day to me—
 As if all needful things would come unsought
 But thereof come in the end despondency and madness.
 By what means it could thither come, and whence ;
 He told, that to these waters he had come
 I will come hither with my Paramour ;
 And come and make his death-bed near the well.
 —Now another day is come,
 The day is come when I again repose
 Come, blooming Hero, place thee by my side !
 But Shapes, that come not at an earthly call,
 Come, like the Graces, hand in hand !
 Come to regions solitary,
 "Come, if the notes thine ear may pierce,
 Come, youngest of the lovely Three,
 Come with each anxious hope subdued
 Must come unhoped for, if they come again ;
 Well may our hearts have faith that blessings come,
 Charms of their own,—then come with me,
 The Squire is come : his daughter Bess
 But how one wife could e'er come near him,
 "If any one should come and see
 Thought Peter then, come weal or woe,
 And hither is he come at last,
 To a close lane they now are come,
 Come, Spirits of the Mind ! and try,
 Did plainly come to Peter's ears ;
 He never will come home again—
 The first you meet with—bid him come,
 Still last to come where thou art wanted most !
 Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
 Come like a giant from a haven broad ;
 Such tempting spots as into vision come
 Desperate as time ? Or come the incessant shocks
 May perish ; they may come when never more
 Of pure delight come whensoc'er it may,

Come—continued.

Is come, and thou art silent in thy age ;
 "If Care with freezing years should come,
 Say that we come, and come by this day's light ;
 Come boats and ships that safely ride ;
 By choice or chance, did thither come
 Should come in frenzy and in drunken mirth,
 England ! the time is come when thou shouldst wean
 Come ye—who, if (which Heaven avert !) the Land
 Come ye—who, not less zealous, might display
 Come ye—what'er your creed—O waken all,
 For come, O ye old men, now in peaceful show
 High deeds, ye Germans, are to come from you !
 Advance—come forth from thy Tyrolean ground,
 Like a Champion, armed I come ;
 How blest the souls who when their trials come,
 With a hope (and no more) for a season to come,
 What stores for years to come !
 O come, if undishonoured by the prayer,
 If to the future aught of good must come
 Come Spoliers—horde impelling horde,
 As generations come and go,
 To the grief of her soul that doth come and go,
 From Oxford come to his native vale,
 Be at their side, come wail or woe
 The time is come that rings the knell
 From Northwold come ; and Howard's aid
 For I am come with power to bless,
 Your brother lives—he lives—is come
 And, for their sakes, come wear or woe,
 They come, by cruel Sussex sent ;
 The tidings come of Jesus crucified ;
 They come—they spread—the weak, the suffering,
 They bear
 They come—and onward travel without dread,
 Amid oblivious weeds,—"O come to me,
 Whence they, like richly-laden merchants, come
 Who dars be wedded ! Fancies thickly come
 Must come and ask permission when to blow,
 Threats come which no submission may assuage,
 Come secrets, whispered nightly to his ear ;
 The Altar calls ; come early under laws
 Approach, come gladly, ye prepared, in sight,
 That come but as a curse to party-strife ;
 Come not to speed the Soul's delirancy ;
 "I come to open out, for fresh display
 May the night never come, nor day be seen,
 Come forth, ye drooping old men, look abroad,
 Which with the dear Betrothéd was to come ;
 And lives there one, of all that come and go
 And spread as if ye knew that days might come
 Repine as if his hour were come too late ?
 Come links for social order's awful chain.
 That nothing of itself will come,
 Come, hear the woodland linnét,
 Come forth into the light of things,
 Come forth, and bring with you a heart
 Come forth and feel the sun.
 Edward will come with you—and, pray,
 We for the year to come may take
 Then come, my Sister ! come, I pray,
 Till summer come up from the south, and with crowds
 Have come to him in solitude.
 —Come hither in thy hour of strength ;
 Come, weak as is a breaking wave !
 And, to the churchyard come, stepped short
 Like showers of manna, if they come at all :
 Come when it will, is equal to the need :
 And hither is young Romilly come,
 But slowly did her succour come,
 With this green isle my fortunes, come not where
 Should that day come—but hark ! the birds salute
 Come forth ; and, while the morning air is yet
 Of sorrow that will surely come ?
 Or, bound by oaths, come furth to tread earth's floor
 And virtue, flown, come back ;
 When May is whispering, "Come !"
 But while a thousand pleasures come unsought,
 Come, and my requiem sing,
 Issuing in pomp, shall come to judge mankind.
 Hither come thou back straightway,
 Whence, then, could it come—the thought—
 He is come to claim his right :
 I come," said she, "from far ;
 Is come to bitter fruit ;
 "Nay, nay, I come with semblance feigned
 It was my choice to come,
 So let it rest ; and time will come
 A nest of children come of Christian blood,
 Come to the spout in wonder at the thing ;
 "My little Child, then will I come for thee
 And of that longing heaviness doth come,
 And saw the birds come tripping from their bowers,
 All gentleness and honour thence come forth ;
 For thereof come all contraries to gladness ;
 Then shall she come, that with her bliss may bring.
 And thence does come this air which is so sweet,
 Of the tenth day will come, and end his sorrow.

 I come—thy stalk to wash away
 The Winds come to me from the fields of sleep,
 But trailing clouds of glory do we come
 And hide her soldier come her woes to share,
 Those lips, whose tides of fragrance come, and go,
 For come Diseases on, and Penury's rage,
 Is come as a brother thy sorrows to share.
 Would, with its rattling music, come,
 Would, with its rattling music, come,
 On Nature's invitation do I come,
 To question us. "Whence come ye? to what end?"
 From such Pandorion gift may come a Pest
 Extend through unambitious years to come,
 What'er its mission, the soft breeze can come
 Come fast upon me: it is shaken off.
 A cheerful confidence in things to come.
 To passive minds. My seventeenth year was come.
 As one far mightier, hither I had come,
 Come forth, perhaps without one quiet thought.
 When Learning, like a stranger come from far,
 Whence profit may be drawn in times to come.
 Had come among these objects heretofore,
 This heard, I said, in pity, "Come with me."
 Be wrenched, or fire come down from far to scorch
 That all would come to pass of which the voice
 Than shaping novelties for times to come,
 May not come near him, nor the little throng
 Nor what it augurs of the life to come;
 The present, with us in the times to come.
 And sights and sounds that come at intervals,
 And of the air, which he had come to seek,
 The business of the day to come, unborn,
 And in the lapse of many years may come
 His hour being not yet come. Far less had then
 For worst to them was come; nor would have stirred.
 Of history, the past and that to come!
 A gift that was come rather late than soon.
 They—who had come elate as eastern hunters
 Pressed on me almost like a fear to come.
 Do come within the reach of humblest eyes;
 Fed on the day of vengeance yet to come.
 Is come whose harbinger he was; a time.
 Imaginations, sense of woes to come,
 Of their offences, punishment to come;
 Made manifest. "Come now, ye golden times,"
 From out the bosom of the night, come ye:
 That wisdom could, in any shape, come near
 The man to come, parted, as by a gulph,
 From Nature doth emotion come, and moods.
 And built thereon my hopes of good to come.
 Spread over time, past, present, and to come,
 Must come, or will by man be sought in vain.
 Of their deliverance, surely yet to come.
 —To these emotions, whenceso'er they come,
 Dreaming on things to come; and dost possess
 Beheld the stars come out above his head,
 To blend with knowledge of the years to come,
 To human life, when he shall come again.
 Were now come nearer to her: weeds defaced
 Ere Robert come again. When to the House
 And he continued, when worse days were come.
 Had vanished, much was come and coming back—
 Motions of moonlight, all come thither—touch,
 And have an answer—thither come, and shape
 Been planted, hither come and find a lodge
 From far ye come; and surely with a hope
 (Not to be deemed a stranger, as you come —Come, labour, when the worn-out frame requires
 Perpetual sabbath; come, disease and want;
 Ah! if the time must come, in which my feet
 Trust me, that for the instructed, time will come
 Till night lies black upon the ground. "But come,
 Come," said the Matron, "to our poor abode;
 Through lath and slow to come! A battlefield,
 This Churchyard was. And, whether they had come
 O come and hear him! Thou who hast to me
 Where injury cannot come?—and here is laid —"Whence do you come? and with what errand charged?"
 Had never come, through space of forty years;
 Past or to come, yea, holdly might I say,
 His own appointed hour will come at last;
 To all that come, almost to all that pass.
 Oft did he say, 'was come to Gold-hill side.'
 Like wild beasts without home! Their hour was come;
 The animating hope that time may come
 And cannot come. The boy, where'er he turns,
 And by the river's margin—whence they come,
 The consummation that will come by stealth
 Were left, the other gained.—O ye, who come
 Come, gentle Sleep, Death's image tho' thou art,
 Come, share my couch, nor speedily depart;

Come—continued.

And wherefore, wherefore come they here? . . . K. 8. 219 The snow-tracks* 10
 A centre, come from whereso'er you will,
 Perhaps for many genial days to come,
 Is past we blame it not for having come.
 Did we come hither, with romantic hope
 Depressed, nor does it fear what is to come,
 Wild creatures, and of many homes, that come
 Admitted of the days of love to come
 That is to come, the throng of woodland flowers,
 Immortal in the world which is to come.
 I come to thee, thou dost my heart renew
 Whence flows the Latin people, whence have come
 'Tis come, the final hour,
 Hath come! we have been Trojans, Ilium was Come! Yet to be come-at by the breeze:
 Comed. Rough, bold, as Grecian comedy displayed
 Comeliness. The comeliness of unfeathered age.
 Comely. Full fifty comely sheep I raised,
 With their comely blue aprons, and caps white as snow
 His Helpmate was a comely matron, old—
 And saddled his best Steed, a comely grey;
 There have I seen a comely bachelor,
 And, close behind, the comely Matron rode,
 Comers. See New-comer.
 Saluted the chance comer on the road,
 Comers. The comers and the goers face to face.
 Comes. Home-felt, and home-created, comes to heal
 Blesses the moon that comes with kindly ray,
 Predominates, and darkness comes and goes,
 Rich steam of sweetest perfume comes and goes.
 Comes on to gladden April with the sight
 Nearer and nearer comes the trying hour!
 For a companion—here he comes; our journey
 And he is mine for ever—here he comes.
 This Boy—when he comes forth with bloody hands—
 Whom no one comes to meet, I stood alone;—
 Ha! is it so!—That vagrant Hag!—this comes
 —But see, the evening star comes forth!
 "Whence comes," said I, "this piteous moan?"
 Comes from the depth of Dungeon Ghyll.
 Comes to this church-yard once in eighteen months;
 Who comes her Sire to seek;
 Till she comes back again.
 As that which comes, or seems to come, from heaven.
 Comes from within doors or without!
 It comes to cool my babe and me.
 That thought comes next—and instantly
 The empty house when he comes home;
 The bird that comes about our doors
 Comes a tired and sultry breeze
 A voice that comes from some one near,
 With him whatever comes in course,
 Where no disturbance comes to intrude
 Comes to give what help he may.
 That comes and goes—will sometimes leap
 And what the creeping breeze that comes
 He comes to tarry with these three hours' space;
 —Who comes not hither ne'er shall know
 Crowding the quarter whence the sun comes forth
 —She comes!—behold
 Comes Faith that in auspicious hours
 Comes from the entrance of a cave:
 He knows not how the blood comes there—
 Comes from that tabernacle—List!
 He comes, escaped from fields and floods;—
 No tarrying; where She comes the winds must stir:
 Their tops, between them comes and goes a sky
 Comes not by casting in a formal mould,
 So sadness comes from out the mould
 Music that sorrow comes not near,
 And, when the moment comes, to part
 He comes like Phoebus through the gates of morn
 All that I heard comes back upon my ear,
 The sea-blast ruffles as the storm comes on,
 And griefs whose airy motion comes not near
 Comes gliding in with lovely gleam,
 Comes gliding in serene and slow,
 Comes she with a votary's task,
 "Lo, Francis comes," there were who cried,
 Why comes not Francis?—From the doleful City
 —Why comes not Francis? Thoughts of love
 Why comes he not?—for westward fast
 She comes, and in the vale hath heard
 Comes with the people when the bells
 Who comes with functions apostolical?
 In soft repose he comes. Within his call,
 Who comes—with rapture greeted, and caressed
 The Hero comes to liberate, not defy;
 Its natural echo; but hope comes reborn
 Comes that low sound from breezes rustling o'er
 Now when the star of comes forth to shine
 For one who comes to watch them and to feed,
 He comes not back; an ampler space
 Comes to me not; malignant truth, or lie,
 For love, that comes, wherever life and sense
 Thither the rainbow comes—the cloud
 The heifer comes in the snow-storm, and here

Comes—continued.

For thereof comes all goodness and all worth ;
Thence worship comes, content and true heart's pleasure,
Thence sickness comes, and overwhelming sadness,
When next May comes, if I am not afraid.
Duly a Friday comes, though pressed herself
Comes in the promise from the Cross,
Like these, there comes a mild release ;
The Rainbow comes and goes,
Blesses the Moon that comes with kindest ray
On the high summits Darkness comes and goes,
—Fierce comes the river down ; the crashing wood
Comes on, to whisper hope, the vernal breeze,
He comes, my dear delight,—and costliest things
The star which comes at close of day to shine
But unto Faith and Loyalty comes aid
It comes, to works of unreprieved delight,
That comes with night ; the deep solemnity
Thither he comes with spring-time, there abides
No genuine insight ever comes to her.
Whene'er it comes ! needful in work so long,
A hymn of triumph : " as the morning comes
Who thither comes to find in it his home ?
Comes o'er my heart : in fancy I behold
They had left behind ? So feeling comes in aid
That from itself it comes, that thou must give,
I see by glimpses now ; when age comes on,
A momentary trance comes over me ;
This notice comes too late. With joy I saw
The mountain infant to the sun comes forth,
Hostility—how dreadful when it comes,
A day of solemn ceremonial comes ;
What qualities of mind she bears, who comes,
Whence comes it, then, that yonder we behold
Power that comes forth to quicken and exalt.
He is a slave to whom release comes not,
Or locks of wood, announces whence he comes.
And now, my lads, the Election comes

Comest. See Com'st.
Comet. Red on his hills his heacon's comet blaze ;
Cometh. And the least welfare cometh to their share ;
And cometh from afar :

Comfort. When not a star supplies the comfort of its light ;
" We lived in peace and comfort ; and were blest
Proverbial words of comfort he applied,
Comfort by prouder mansions unbested
Kindly the housewife pressed, and they in comfort fed.
" Barred every comfort labour could procure,
Thanks to them, are to us a stream of comfort :
This is true comfort, thanks a thousand times !—
Her's what will comfort you. The Saints reward you
Though rich in heavenly, poor in earthly, comfort,
And we were comforted, and talked of comfort ;
Why so ? a roofless rock had been a comfort,
I come home, and this is my comfort !
A comfort to each other—That they might
No peace, no comfort could I find,
Our comfort was near if we ever were cross ;
But the comfort, the blessings, and wealth that
we had
All that is left to comfort thee
What warmth, what comfort would it yield
To comfort poor old Susan Gale,
To comfort poor old Susan Gale,
He was his comfort and his daily hope.
There is a comfort in the strength of love ;
Comfort have thou of thy merit,
To warn, to comfort, and command ;
Might need for comfort, or for festal mirth ;
Live, and take comfort. Thou hast left behind
For comfort, being, as I am, oppress'd,
To give thee comfort if I may."
A comfort in the dark abyss
He was their comfort to the last,
Of power to comfort or rejoice ;
Finds comfort in himself and in his cause ;
And their meaning is, whence can comfort spring
Comfort for a faithful mind ;
And cottage comfort shunned not seemly pride
My sighs breathed forth in silence,—comfort give !
To comfort him, and make his heart more light ;
He promised comfort ; and the flattering thoughts
To comfort and to peace
No star supplies the comfort of it's light,
The Ocean ; not to comfort the oppressed,
While on I walked, a comfort seemed to touch
In comfort, I entreated that henceforth
That were a frequent comfort to my youth.
And every comfort of that privileged ground,
More firmly ; and a comfort now hath risen
To human comfort. Stopping down to drink,
In peace and comfort ; and a pretty boy
To natural comfort shut our eyes and ears ;
Stood drinking comfort from the warmer sun,
To give her comfort, and was glad to take
With the best hope and comfort I could give :
Whose presence gave no comfort, were gone by,

Comfort—continued.

To comfort me while with a brother's love
To draw the line of comfort that divides
To comfort ;—but how came ye ?—if yont rack
Of comfort, spread over his pallid face
To seek that comfort which the mind denies ;
My comfort :—would that they were oftener fixed
Than their own thoughts to comfort them. Say why
A heavenly comfort ; there she recognised
Asked comfort of the open air, and found
(Or call it comfort, by a humbler name),
Use, comfort, do this roof endear ;
He was his comfort and his daily hope
Comforted. And we were comforted, and talked of comfort ;
You understand me—I was comforted ;
—Perplexed, and longing to be comforted,
From one disburthened so, so comforted,
Comforter. A nursing babe her only comforter ;
A comforter of sorrow ;—there is something
That I have been his comforter till now !
My faithful true and only Comforter.
And Care—a comforter that hest could suit
Yet, helped by Genius—untired comforter,
The Comforter hath found me here,
And he too hath his comforter. How poor,
Was now a help to his late comforter,
A soothing comforter, although forlorn ;
As to a spiritual comforter and friend,
Guide of our way, mysterious comforter !
Comforters. Dependants, comforters—my wheel, my fire,
Comfortless. Perplexed and comfortless he gazed around,
Has been but comfortless ; and yet that place,
A comfortless and hidden well
Report of comfortless despair,
And comfortless despairs the soul benumb.
Which this comfortless oven environ !
Joyless and comfortless. Our days glide on ;
In the comfortless vault of disease
The earth was comfortless, and, touched by faint
Was comfortless, and her small lot of books,
Though comfortless !—Not of myself I speak ;
Within myself, not comfortless.—The tenour
Comforts. It comforts me to think of it
But delegated Spirits comforts fetch
To travellers, from such comforts as are thine,
And the Land's humblest comforts. Now her mood
With just enough life's comforts to procure,
Who comforts the forlorn ;
Ye dealt out your plain comforts ? Yet had ye
His comforts, native occupations, cares,
Of daily comforts, gladly reconciled
Coming. Dark is the region as with coming night ;
That he should wait thy coming till the day
Coming on with a terrible pother,
And, coming back with Her who will be ours,
By chance of business coming within reach
She's coming from among the trees,
Coming one knows not how, nor whence,
Spring is coming, Thou art come !
Now she meets the coming prey,
And, coming to the Banks of Tone,
Coming together in life's pilgrimage ;
Cries coming from the mountain head :
But at the coming of the milder day
Upon her coming wait
Of coming good,—the charm is fled ;
Of ages coming, ages gone ;
Thine coming from the wayward world,
Does joy approach ? they meet the coming tide ;
So, coming his last help to crave,
And, with the coming of the tide,
Of destructive tempests coming,
Brought to the ark are coming evermore,
Turn from us all the coming woe :
As if with prescience of the coming storm,
Their pearly lustre—coming but to go ;
To meet the coming hours of festal mirth,
Shine on, until ye fade with coming Night !—
His coming step has thwarted,
The beauty coming and the beauty gone
But the whole household, that our coming wait
I might her see again coming to Troy !
The aged Beggar coming, quits her work,
But chiefly Dido, to the coming ill
Low breathings coming after me, and sounds
If the night blackened with a coming storm,
Coming in revelation, did converse
Upon the basis of the coming time,
Twilight was coming on, yet through the gloom
Admonished thus, the sweet hour coming on
Had vanished, much was come and coming back—
" Nor could your coming have been better timed ;
By hopes of coming patronage beguiled
" O for the coming of that glorious time
What is that that's coming ?
His coming step to seek my Parent ;
A human voice—a Spirit of coming night,

Comings-in. To help the small but certain comings-in Command. See Self-command.

The Crew deceived you? Nay, command yourself.
 'Tis his who will command it.—Think of my story—
 Thou didst command me to bless all mankind;
 Loth to rule by strict command;

With like command of beauty—grant your aid
 Serving at my heart's command,
 He who had once supreme command,
 The Waggoner, with prompt command,
 Forthwith, obedient to command,
 To warn, to comfort, and command;
 Laodamia! that at Jove's command
 "Appear!—obey my lyre's command!
 Whom onset, fiercely urged at Jove's command,
 Or fortress, reared at Nature's sage command,
 The Church, when trusting in divine command
 Our pleasure varying at command
 Had thine at their command.
 Less than divine command they spurn;
 An undisputed symbol of command,

Well obeyed was that command—
 Holding a central station of command,
 Wandering, he haunts, at fancy's strong command,
 "My books command me to lay bare
 A voice is with us—a command
 Embroidered (such her Sire's command)
 "Might ever son command a sire,
 Proceeding under joint command,
 Raised, as the vision gave command,
 And, with a look of calm command,
 Was to the harp a strong command.
 The shrouded Body to the Soul's command
 For re-subjecting to divine command
 Sweet flowers! at whose inaudible command
 Who in these Wilds then struggled for command;
 That o'er the channel holds august command,
 Then followed Printing with enlarged command
 —Who, if he rise to station of command,
 Or at a doubting Judge's stern command,
 Not He, whose last faint memory will command
 And Will, whose office, by divine command,
 In the weak love of life his least command.
 Bore a light switch, her sceptre of command

Time, place, and business, all at his command!—
 He rose, and straight—as by divine command,
 At nature's pure command;
 Their painted couches seek, obedient to command.
 The minutes fly—till, at the queen's command,
 Of sharp command and scolding intermixed.
 In colour so resplendent, with command
 At full command, to London first I turned,
 Among new objects serve or give command,
 He perished fighting, in supreme command,
 That he had formed, when I, at his command,
 At thy command, at her command gives way;
 At thy command, how awful! Shall the Soul,
 Of a command which they have power to break,
 Do speak, at Heaven's command, to eye and ear,
 But He, at whose command the parched rock
 "Meanwhile, at social Industry's command,
 Nothing to praise, to teach, or to command!

Commander. "Silence!" the brave Commander
 cried;

Commanding. He was commanding and entreating,
 Of chiming sound, commanding sympathies;
 Ere some commanding star dismiss to rest
 Exploring, or commanding with meet pride,
 Had more commanding looks when he was there.
 Of some commanding eminence, which yet
 On new-blown heath; let yon commanding rock
 'Nay,' said she, with commanding look, a spirit
 From some commanding eminence had looked

Commandments. Mighty were the soul's commandments

Commands. That British ground commands:—low
 dusky tracts,
 While on that isthmus which commands
 No pitying voice commands a halt,

And for the holdest tale belief commands.
 By her commands partakes not, in degree,
 Obedient, as here taught, to thy commands.
 Noting that in despite of their commands
 Whose love, whose counsel, whose commands, have made

Commemorate. Marched round the altar—to commemorate

Commemorating. Commemorating genius, talent, skill,
Commemoration. Commemoration holy that unites Commenced. His mournful narrative—commenced in pain,

In pain commenced, and ended without peace:
Command. Command me to the place. If a man should die

Wallace and Wilfred, I commend the Lady,
 Command me to these valleys! Yet your Churchyard

Command—continued.

Command him, when he's only heard.
 Whom to this service I commend ;
 I call thee : I myself commend
 Or does it suit our humour to commend
 This work of thine I blame not, but commend ;
 And doth commend their weakness and disease
Commendable. Tremblings withal and commendable fears,

Commendation. Unspoiled by commendation and the excess

Commendations. With commendations of departed
 worth;

Commended. Commended him as a poor friendless man,

Comment. Meek Nature's evening comment on the shows

Are fostered by the comment and the gibe."
 Have their authentic comment; that even these

Comments. But vainly comments of a calmer mind Commerce. That holds no commerce with the summer night,

With commerce freighted, or triumphant war.
 From unimpeded commerce with the Sun,
 Let us break off all commerce with the Muse:

For commerce of thy nature with herself,
 Each into commerce with his private thoughts:
 From a too busy commerce with the heart!

To hold a vacant commerce day by day

Commination. So shall the fearful words of Commination

Commingled. All kinds commingled without fear,
 Commingled—shapes which met me in the way

Commingled, making up a canopy
 Confused, commingled, mutually inflamed,

Commingleing. These structures rose, commingleing old and young,

Commingleing with the incense that ascends,
Commiseration. No word of kind commiseration

Feelings of pure commiseration, grief
Commissioned. Commissioned by the Band, burst in upon us.

Of riotous men commissioned to expel
 Like that of angels or commissioned spirits,

Committ. I will commit him to this final Ordeal!—
Committed. Committed to thy guardianship by Heaven;

Which few can hold committed to a fight
 Committed to the silent plains

Committed by forsaken Ellen's hand

Commodious. On this commodious Seat! for much remains

There in commodious shelter may we rest.
 Smooth and commodious; as a stately deck
 Could find commodious place for every God,
 Was the commodious walk: a careful hand

Common. That common growth of earth, the foodful ear;

No common soul. In youth by science nursed,
 Of looks where common kindness had no part,
 At houses, men, and common light, amazed,
 Answer these questions, from our common knowledge,

It is no common thing when one like you
 Yours is no common life. Self-stationed here,
 But have they not a world of common ground
 Where is our common Friend? A ghost, dreamed—
 By the good God, our common Father, dooms—
 Died broken-hearted. 'Tis a common case.

Look at the common grass from hour to hour:
 Within the eddy of a common blast,
 And one domestic for their common needs,
 And shunning even the light of common day;
 The common air; hills, which with vigorous step
 Beyond the common life of man, I still
 Of common pleasure: beast and bird, the lamb,
 Than common feelings of fraternal love.

Nor was it common gratitude
 The common life our nature breeds;
 He whose domain is held in common
 This is no common waste, no common gloom;
 Upon the common weal; a warrior bold,
 The common growth of mother-earth
 Of common sense you're surely sinning;
 Unhappy Nuns, whose common breath's a sigh
 Well pleased, her foot should print earth's common grass,

Which hold, whate'er to common sight appears,
 If, guarding grossest things from common claim
 And more than common strength and skill
 Of common day, so heavenly bright,
 Though but of common neighbourhood.
 All that he holds in common with the stars,
 Where common cheerfulness would fail;
 There's not a breathing of the common wind
 So didst thou travel on life's common way
 As to a common centre, tend
 That gives to common pleasures birth;
 Thy sense from pressure of life's common din
 Turning, for them who pass, the common dust

 Of company or friends, and left 187 I wandered* 16
 Then do a festal company unite 198 Thorn 107
 Upon a princely company below,
 But this swift travel scorns the company
 What sprinklings of blithe company !
 And float in rucful company !
 Well-pleased, the armed Company
 A bright-haired company of youthful slaves,
 We stood, a trembling, earnest Company !
 Who, doomed to go in company with Pain,
 Upon this solemn Company unmoved
 Tired of my books, a scanty company !
 With numbers near, alas ! no company.
 Nor lacking, for fit company, above,
 Hatel to Christ and to His company ;
 The Abbot with his convent's company
 And take my leave of all such company,
 And seemliness, and faithful company,
 To part from company and take this book
 The saucy air. In this proud company
 Presents a company of dancing dogs,
 A sober company and few, the men
 As left by the departed company,
 Is the mute company of changeful clouds ;
 With the ever-welcome company of books ;
 With the prospect of the company within,
 As if their silent company were charged
 Pursued our way, a broken company,
 Making a silent company in death ; 218 Vernal Ode 93

Compeers. Clear-sighted Honour, and his staid Compeers,
 Not, like his great Compeers, indigoantly
 We, differing once so much, are now Compeers,
 Among the band of my compeers was one.
 For their own safety; laughed with my compeers
 And his compeers—the laughing Sage of France.— Compelled. Yet more;—compelled by Powers which only deign
 I was compelled to seek my father's door,
 A Man by pain and thought compelled to live,
 And oftentimes compelled to halt,
 For thee, O Scott! I compelled to change
 Ah, think how one compelled for life to abide
 But often his mind is compelled to demur,
 Compelled to be a life unto herself,
 To speak (as I must be compelled to do)
 Compelled and sickness, at this latter day,
 Compelled to look, and inwardly oppressed
 As one of many schoolfellows compelled,
 For his dismissal, day and night, compelled
 And the more faithful were compelled to exclaim,
 And, by as salutary change, compelled
 That, by the thinking mind, have been compelled Compelling. Of this same life, compelling us to grieve
Compels. The mild necessity of use compels
 Whom a benign necessity compels
 Such outrage done to nature as compels Compensated. And be in part compensated. For rights,
Compensating. Let me a compensating faith maintain;
Competence. In hope, at length a competence to gain;
 To competence and ease—to him it offered
 And venial error, robbed of competence,
Competent. And competent to shed a spark divine
 Heights which the soul is competent to gain.
 And resolution competent to take
 Performs its functions; rarely competent Complacence. With 'erewhening complacence our state to compare,
 Complacence there—but wherefore this to you?
 Linked in entire complacence with her choice;
Complacencies. Of smooth and solemnized complacencies,
Complacency. Perused him with a gay complacency.
 So neither were complacency, nor peace,
 His proud complacency!—yet do I exult,
 Without desire in full complacency,
Complacent. See Self-complacent.
 Complacent Fictions were they, yet the same
 With a complacent animation spake,
Complacently. Complacently the progress of a cause, Complain.—To towns, whose shades of no rude noise complain,
 I heard my neighbours in their beds complain
 We'll not complain of that. My limbs are stiff
 No more shall he complain of wasted strength,
 Forebodes mishap or seems but to complain;
 Spirits of Power, assembled there, complain
 Who shall complain, or call thee to account?
 Then sure I have no reason to complain,
 I—of whose touch the fiddle would complain,
 Thus, and unable to complain, they fared,
 O for a dirge! But why complain?
 To towns, whose shades of no rude sound complain, Complained. Where Man and Muse complained of mutual wrong;
 Some, singing loud, as if they had complained;
 Vibrate, as if a voice complain'd within;
 Yet, of the wild brooks ask if he complained;
Complaining. In some complaining, dim retreat,
 He went complaining all the morrow
 The tremulous sob of the complaining owl;
Complainings. Makes efforts with complainings; nor gives o'er
Complains. To you a suffering State complains,
 The man who thus complains!
Complaint. The Man who makes this feverish complaint
 She wasted no complaint, but strove to make
 One day, when from my lips a like complaint
 Yields no peculiar reason of complaint
 —Yet, in its general tenor, your complaint
 (For thus the tenour of complaint hath run)
 Give way to words of pity or complaint,
 No languor, peevishness, nor vain complaint:
Completa. Behold thee, and my misery is complete!
 And seemliness complete, that sways
 O for the help of Angels to complete
 To the bare head. The victory is complete;
 Or dear voice utter, to complete the man,
 And all will be complete, thy race be run,
 Then shall our triumph be complete as theirs.
 She lives another's wishes to complete,—
 Of urgent need.—Your Country must complete
 To wrestle with, and victory to complete,
Completed. A work completed to our hands, that lays,
 Hath not completed since our dame, the queen

Complex. And various trials of our complex being, Complexion. Tall was her stature; her complexion dark
 To that complexion brought which prudence trusts
 in
Compliance. Some fond hearts to COMPLIANCE seem'd inclin'd;
 —Bur your compliance, Sir! with our request
 With a sedate compliance, which the Priest
Complicated. A tottering infant, with compliant stoop Complicated. This complicated provocation,
Comply. If with that counsel I do e'er comply,
 Stifle her hope; for, if the State comply,
Complying. Bend the complying heads of lordly pines,
Compose. Steal, and compose the oar-forgotten floods;
 From harp or lute, kind influence to compose
 Mingling with night, such twilight to compose
 Begins, and Love and Truth compose her train;
 All jumbled up together, to compose
 Flowers out of any hedge-row to compose
 That all the scattered subjects which compose Composed. For all this world can give. Nay, he composed:
 Composed and silent, without visible sign
 Which soon composed a little sylvan hall
 Those quivering wings composed, that music still!
 Composed with Nature's finest care,
 And earth and stars composed a universal heaven!
 Within himself as seems, composed;
 For vision so composed and sweet
 Subdued, composed, and formalized by art.
 While, by the scene, compos'd, the breast subsides.
 Make ceaseless music that composed my thoughts.
 My voice, composed my gait, and, with the air
 Both elevation and composed delight:
 In dreams and fictions, pensively composed:
 Of the Tartarian dynasty composed
 Thus moderated, thus composed, I found
 And graciously composed, but that, no less,
 Which craft of delicate Spirits hath composed
 And saw the water, that composed this rill,
 Time's fetters are composed; and life was put
 Be of a thousand faculties composed,
 The ancient rural character, composed,
 The fluttering nerves composed; the beating heart
 Were nicely braided; and composed a work
Composing. Molten together, and composing thus,
 A course of days composing happy mouths,
 At a composing distance from the haunts
 —And you tall pine-tree, whose composing sound
 Composing darkness, with a quiet load
Composition. All thoughts whose idle composition lives
 No composition of the brain, but man
 Varying their composition and their hue,
 Grace, be their composition what it may,
 Of composition gentle and sedate,
Composure. With stern composure watches to the plain—
 The bland composure of eternal youth!
 Will to composure lead—or make thee blithe as bird
 in bower.
 Full thrice, had crossed himself in meek composure,
 For healing and composure.—But as least
 Long patience hath such mild composure given,
 Their light composure, far less to instil
 Victorious, and composure would ensue,
 Bestowed composure on a neighbourhood
 Composure, and ennobling Harmony.
 Of her composure, felt that agony,
 In mute composure, o'er the shadowy lake,
 Farewell!—if thy composure be not ours Comprehend. I comprehend thee—I should be as cheerful
 A truth which they alone shall comprehend
 These moralists could act and comprehend:
 Shall comprehend this victory sublime;
 For aught the wisest know or comprehend;
Comprehended. Let her be comprehended in the frame
Comprehends. Who comprehends his trust, and to the same
 Who sees all suffering, comprehends all wants, Comprehension. Of teaching comprehension with delight,
 Thus comprehension fails, and truth is missed;
Comprehensive. The comprehensive mandate which they give—
 In all their comprehensive bearings known
 Sublime and comprehensive! Low desires, Comprehensiveness. And comprehensiveness and memory flow,
Compressed. A stifling power compressed his frame,
 Time had compressed the freshness of his cheek
Compromise. And, by what compromise it stood, not nice?
Computation. And what, through strong compunc-tion for the past,

Condition. A sage survey of his condition.
 "The arbour does its own condition tell;
 Who, even the best, in such condition, free
 To his forlorn condition! let thy grace
 With my condition satisfied;
 Is Death, for one to that condition brought,
 If more of my condition ye would know,
 Such was my new condition, as at large
 Was my condition, till with open war
 How the poor brute's condition, forced to run
 That mine was a condition which required
 The worst effects that our condition saw
 In the condition of a damaged seed,
 By their condition taught, can understand
 Which no condition can preclude; of One
 For his obscured condition, an obscure
 Beholding her condition, at the sight
 The lot is wretched, the condition sad,
Conditioned. See Ill-conditioned.
Conditions. In all conditions of society,
 Nature for all conditions wants not power
Conduct. What must be done? We will conduct her hither;
 Esteemed you worthy to conduct the affair
 Conduct them to their punishment;
 Impatient to conduct thee, not as erst
 And yet more gladly thee would I conduct
 Till pitying Saints conduct her bark
 Wading beneath the conduct of their guide
 Your walk conduct you hither, ere the sun
Conducted. At length conducted us to Roseland,
 there,
 "By heavenly Powers conducted, we have met;
 Or were conducted home in single state,
 Whether conducted to the spot by sighs
 Conducted through those labyrinths, unawares,
 Was to the truth conducted; of this faith
 Conducted hither your most welcome feet,
Conducting. Appear; a calm descent of sky conducting
 In sense conducting to ideal form,
Conductor. With our conductor, pensively we sank
Cone. Upon the summit of this naked cone,
 That struck perchance the farthest one
 Upon the apex of that lofty cone
 Of secondary birth, the Jung-frau's cone;
 Sublime upon this far-surveying cone,
Cone-shaped. Unquestionably kenne'd, that cone-shaped hill
Confederate. Confederate, imitative of the chase
 Confederate with the current of the soul,
 Oh, pity and shame! with those confederate
 Powers!
 Brooding above the fierce confederate storm
Confer. Minds that have nothing to confer
 Where She—a statist prude to confer
 Is busiest to confer and to bereave;
 Then, little Bird, this boon confer,
 To rouse, to urge; and, with the will, confer
 Upon the individual doth confer,
 What more than that the severing should confer Conference. Awhile they stood in conference, and I guess
Conferred. All that the God of Nature hath conferred,
 On you have been conferred? what gifts, withheld
 And benefits his wisdom had conferred;
 If mild discourse, and manners that conferred
Confess. You are too fearful; yet must I confess,
 And, grieved for their brief date, confess that ours,
 To confess their majesty!
 By glimpses only, and confess with shame
 Pass sentence on ourselves, confess the fact,
 This truth escaped me not, and I confess,
 In serious mood, but oftener, I confess,
 Unwilling to forego, confess, submit,
 Why should I not confess that Earth was then
 To whom he might confess the things he saw.
 "I, who weep little, did, I will confess,
 I deem not arduous; but must needs confess Confessed. Confessed no law but what his reason taught,
 And mightiest billows ever have confessed
 The crime confessed, a kneeling Penitent
 But on the front of his reproof confessed
 We took, and let this freely be confessed,
 Confessed the power of nature.—Pleased though sad,

Confession. A plain confession, such as leaves no doubt,
 Confession ministers the pang to soothe
 And soothe the heart confession hath laid bare—
 Made confession, asked forgiveness,
 Confession of man's weakness and his loves.
 Or, for confession, in the sinner's need,
Confessional. But were an apt confessional for One
Confessor. I learn'd this when I was a Confessor.
 The woman-hearted Confessor prepares
Confessors. Of sages, martyrs, confessors—the man
Confest. Be it confest that, for the first time, seated Confidant. Thy confidant! say, whence derived that air
Confide. We still confide in more than we can know;
 Turned to humbler delights, in which youth might confide,
 These choristers confide.
 Whose infant soul was tutored to confide
 And, should a less unnatural doom confide
 Say first, to whom did we the grace confide,
 Nor fear, though thou confide in me, a want
Confided. Through every realm confided to thy sway;
Confidence. Which by degrees a confidence of mind
 When I, in confidence and pride,
 That might thy sylvan confidence betray.
 And confidence deceived.
 In gloom on wings with confidence outspread
 Preserve thy charge with confidence sublime—
 What patient confidence was here!
 The Other gains a confidence as bold;
 By confidence supplied and mercy shown,
 Oh! if through confidence misplaced
 The confidence of reason give;
 His breath in confidence of Heaven's applause:
 Won confidence, now ruthlessly betrayed
 The confidence of Youth our only Art,
 A cheerful confidence in things to come.
 Whom I, in perfect confidence, might hope
 A more than Roman confidence, a faith
 Encouraged with a martyr's confidence;
 Was not this single confidence enough
 With evil expectations; confidence
 Yet, in me, confidence was unimpaired;
 By gratitude, and confidence in truth.
 Deriving cheerful confidence, shall hie
 A proud and most presumptuous confidence
 Yielded, that day, a confidence sublime
 When wanted most; a confidence impaired
 The loss of confidence in social man,
 Could e'er for such exalted confidence
 Yet, should this confidence prove vain, the wise
 This mutual confidence; if, from such source,
 With a gay confidence and seemly pride;
 With patriotic confidence and joy.
 Cannot subsist, nor confidence, nor peace.

Connected—continued.

Connected in a mighty scheme of truth,
Connecting. In one impression, by connecting force
Or easier links connecting place with place)

Connection. Now in connection with so great a theme Connects. An unknown power connects him with the dead :

Conned. Upon the muddy water, which he conned,
He conned the new-born Lay with grateful heart—

Conning. See Infant-conning.
His Primer conning with an earnest cheer,
Or conning more, as happy as the birds

Conquer. Conquer the Gallic lily which thy foes
Armour divine, and conquer in your cause !
And energy to conquer and repel—

Conquered. Have we not conquered ?—by the vengeful sword ?
He conquered !—Saw we not the Plain
In conquered Cyprus see thy Bride decline

The Conqueror, crowns the Conquered, on this brow
Of those who conquered first the Indian Isles, Conquered and conqueror. Thus the pride of strength,

For mortal creatures, conquered and secured.
Conquered, and in tranquillity retained !

Conquering. See All-conquering.
Or with the Moon conquering earth's misty air,
He conquering, as in joyful Heaven is sung,

HE CONQUERING THROUGH GOD, AND GOD BY HIM.
Behold how fought the Chief whose conquering sword

And conquering Reason, if self-glorified,
" A conquering lance is beauty's test,
Conquering. No Gothic conqueror ever drank) revealed
And now the conqueror essays

Conqueror, 'mid some sad thoughts, divinely blest !
Hail, mien'd Conqueror of gloomy Night !
Haughtily shake, a dreaming Conqueror !—

But who is He—the Conqueror ? Would he force
Than sceptred king or laurelled conqueror knows,
Conqueror beloved ! expected anxiously !
The Danish Conqueror, on his royal chair,

The Conqueror, crowns the Conquered, on this brow
Conquered and conqueror. Thus the pride of strength,

Conqueror's. Ah ! that a Conqueror's words should be so dear :
When Europe prostrate lay, the Conqueror's aim,
A trophy nobler than a conqueror's sword.

Than in fantastic conqueror's roving camp,
That spake the Norman Conqueror's stern behest—
A baffled conqueror's deeply searching rage,

Conquerors. The bay ; and conquerors thanked the Gods,

Conquest. Like conquest would the Men of England see ;
Rich conquest waits them :—the tempestuous sea
What need to seek a conquest over me,

Sublime o'er Conquest, Avarice, and Pride,
Of conquest over sense, hourly achieved
For one of conquest, losing sight of all
Did ye not hear that conquest is abjured ?

In sign of conquest by his wit achieved
In wantonness of conquest, or puts on Working through love, such conquest shall it gain,
A conquest ? who must bear the blame ? sage man

Conquests. Upon the internal conquests made by each,
Her conquests, in the world of sense made known.
Among the conquests of civility,
He listens (all past conquests and all schemes
The conquests lost that were so hardly won—
And, from the dazzling conquests daily gained
And conquests over her dominion gained,

Cons. The little Actor cons another part ; Conscience. He said, " the pangs that to my conscience came
But soft !—how came he forth ? The Nightmare
Conscience

My conscience made me wish to be struck blind ;
As Conscience, to the centre
To ease his conscience of its pain.
And, of the recompense that conscience seeks,
Feel not that Conscience never can betray,

A will by sovereign Conscience sanctified ;
By Conscience governed to their steps retrace.—
Conscience, the timid being's inmost light,
Of conscience souls are placed by deeds that lack
That startle Conscience, as she lurks

To social havoc. Is not Conscience ours,
For thy own conscience gradually renewed ;
Ye brood of Conscience—Spectres ! that frequent
Endures her conscience with external life
And Conscience dogging close his bleeding way
And conscience her tortures appease.

Deep in the conscience, nor of Christian Hope,
Tampers with conscience from a private aim ;
To Conscience only, and the law supreme
Was glad to find her conscience set at ease ;
Will conscience prey.—Feebly must they have felt
In that excess which conscience disapproves.

Conscience—continued.

Of conscience—conscience reverence and obeyed,
Of inward conscience ? with whose service charged
To reason, and by conscience is enjoined ;
So to declare the conscience satisfied ;
There, where they placed them who in conscience prized

Against his conscience rose in arms, and, braving
Conscience to guide and check ; and death to be.

Consciences. At consciences perplexed with scruples nice !

Conscience-sake. A just repayment, both for conscience-sake

Conscience-stricken. I thine—the conscience-stricken must not woe

Conscientious. That soul of conscientious daring.
With conscientious reverence, as a day

Conscious. See Half-conscious.
Though half a sphere be conscious of their brightness)
While, flapped with conscious pride, resound his wings !

Of sea-fowl, conscious both that they are hovering
Jove frowned in heaven ; the conscious Parca threw
The flowery ground is conscious. But no wind
Then why should conscious Spirits fear
And daily, in the conscious breast,

Sinks, hardly conscious of the influence—
Glance on the conscious plumes touched here and there ?

And scarcely conscious of the dashing oars
Lies fixed for ages on his conscious neck ;
Conscious of blessedness, but, whence it sprung,
Quakes—conscious of thy power

And stands on tiptoe, conscious she is fair,
Glory to arms ! But, conscious that the nerve
Be conscious of Thy moving spirit !
What moment in life is so conscious of love,

If they received into a conscious ear
With conscious sight, as he swept along
Swept like a breeze the conscious strings,

By men yet scarcely conscious of a care
On hope that conscious innocence supplied,
Upon their conscious selves ; their own lips speak
Is conscious of her want ; through England's
bounds,

In calms is conscious, finding for his freight
Me, conscious that my leaf is sere,

Conscious Nursling, to thy breast !
In scarcely conscious fingers, was, she knows,
Conscious of half the pleasure which they give ;
His utterance finds ; and, conscious of the gain,
Is it that ye with conscious skill
Were, in the conscious sea, roused and prolonged
Death conscious that he only could destroy
Are conscious ;—may the like return no more !
Pronounced the name of Hope :—The conscious
child

Was conscious of the ray ;
Fought, as if conscious of the blazonry
No conscious memory of a kindred sight,
Two consciousnesses, conscious of myself
And conscious step of purity and pride.
Move us with conscious pleasure. I am sad
With conscious pleasure opened to the charm
But to my conscious soul I now can say—
These, bold in conscious merit, lower down ;
And old Helvellyn, conscious of the stir
And I am conscious of affecting thoughts
Half conscious of the soothing melody,
Of time and conscious nature disappear,
By choice, and conscious that the Will is free,
And she lies conscious, in a blissful rest,
Who saw, of change were conscious—had become
Conscious of that abundant favour showered
Of inspiration for the conscious lyre.

Consciousness. Into the consciousness of safety thrilled ;
When to the consciousness of right
Mingles, and lurking consciousness of wrong ;
Of inward consciousness, and hope that laid
That flesh can know is theirs—the consciousness
It occupies—what consciousness retains
For consciousness the motions of thy will ;
Through consciousness that silence in such place
Where peace and happy consciousness should dwell,
For daily bread. A consciousness is yours
Received a shock of awful consciousness,
Of less exalted consciousness, through which
A consciousness remained that it had left,
If consciousness could reach him where he lies

Consciousnesses. While consciousnesses, not to be disowned,
Two consciousnesses, conscious of myself
Or consciousnesses not to be subdued.

Consecrate. See Re-consecrate.
To virtue consecrate, stoop ye from your height
So prays the Church, to consecrate a Vow
And consecrate our lives to truth and love.

Consecrate—continued.

Which Zion's Kings did consecrate of old ; . . . 576
 Of thrice ten summers consecrate the board . . . 613
 To consecrate, if we have eyes to see, . . . 744
 By devious footsteps ; regions consecrate . . . 809
 This place is consecrate ; to Death and Life, . . . 836
 From their conjunction ; consecrate to faith . . . 836

Consecrated. Mutually consecrated. Poor old Man !
 Now, for that consecrated fount
 There stood a consecrated Pile ; . . . 111
 Of consecrated places . . . 111
 As if the streets were consecrated ground, . . . 334
 He kissed the consecrated Maid ; . . . 402
 But see the consecrated Maid . . . 407
 Should on the consecrated breast . . . 410
 Shame if the consecrated Vow be found . . . 445
 The consecrated works of Bard and Sage, . . . 666
 With that communion. Consecrated be . . . 823
 Truth's consecrated residence, the seat . . . 876
 Shall we behold them, consecrated friends, . . . K.8.

Consecrates. Which, filling, consecrates the human breast . . . 478
 But for a gift that consecrates the joy ? . . . 632
Consecrating. And consecrating element hath cleansed Consecration. Erewhile, by solemn consecration, given . . . 431
 The Priest bestows the appointed consecration ; . . . 450
 Is now by solemn consecration given . . . 578
 The consecration, and the Poet's dream ; . . . 105
Consent. Until King Eldure, with full consent . . . 136
 She gave consent, and Michael was at ease . . . 213
 And, following guides whose craft holds no consent
 With one consent the people rejoice, . . . 396
 A just memorial ; and thine eyes consent . . . 539
 And slaves who will consent to be destroyed—
 Without his own consent, or knowledge, fixed !
 If time, with free consent, he yours to give, . . . 878
Consenting. Twice seven consenting years have shed
 To view, and for the mind's consenting eye . . . 896 Consents. Of the brisk waves, yet here consents to dwell ; . . . 287
Consequence. Grow into consequence, till round my mind . . . 254
 Is the sure consequence of slow decay . . . 730 Consequences. All consequences : work he hath begun . . . 873
Consider. Consider, Johnny's but half-wise ; . . . 305
Consign. Shall I this lonely thought consign ?—
 With vain regrets—the Exile would consign . . . 128 Consigned. Domestic Portrait ! have to verse consigned . . . 410
 Her little charge consign'd . . . 549
 Then, when the body, soon to be consigned
Consigns. That lovingly consigns the babe to the arms Consistence. Want due consistence ; like a pillar of smoke,
 Which, ere they gain consistence, by a gust
Consistent. So far that, if consistent in their scheme,
 Consistent in self-rule ; and heaven revealed
Consistory. In consistory, like a diadem
Consists. With whose perfection it consists to ordain
 Hope, below this, consists not with belief . . . 804
 Hope, below this, consists not with belief . . . 804
Consolation. A cup of consolation, filled from Heaven
 Dear consolation, kneeling on the turf . . . 75
 Of home-felt consolation ? . . . 119
 And seeking consolation from above ; . . . 224
 Such consolation, and the excess . . . 363
 And hope, and consolation, fall . . . 402
 Fixed on the Cross, that consolation springs,
 That consolation may descend from far . . . 534
Consolations. Wanted not consolations, nor a creed
 'Mong other consolations, we may draw . . . 770
 Of blessed consolations in distress ; . . . 795
 The consolations of a hopeful mind ? . . . 724
Consolatory. The Wife, from whose consolatory grave
Consoils. Rites that console the Spirit, under grief . . . 752
 Kindly emotion tending to console . . . 789
Consoiled. An aged woman. It consoled him here
 Through this still medium, are consoled and
 cheered ; . . . 752
 To look with bodily eyes, and be consoled . . . 789
Consonance. Opens a way for life, or consonance
Consort. Blessed is and be your consort ; . . . 423
 "Be taught, O faithful Consort, to control
 Returned, to seek a Consort upon earth ; . . . 538
 The imperial Consort of the Fairy-king . . . 125
 Man, bird, and beast ; then, with a consort paired,
 Welcomes the Consort of a happy Queen . . . 210
 And with soft smile, his consort would improve . . . 220
Consorted. Consorted, Others, in the power, the faith,
Consorting. Consorting in one mansion unreprieved.
Conspicuous. Conspicuous to the Nations. Thou, I think,
 Yet shall thy name, conspicuous and sublime,
 Conspicuous yet where Oroonoko flows ;
 And doth in more conspicuous torment writhe,
 Glory of night, conspicuous yet serene,
 Conspicuous object in a Nation's eye,
 Conspicuous invitation to ascend . . . 460
 There, too, conspicuous for stature tall . . . 494

Conspicuous—continued.

I glance but at a few conspicuous marks, . . . 695
 A blooming Lady—a conspicuous flower, . . . 774
 He vanished ; but conspicuous to this day . . . 842
 As you have seen, hear such conspicuous part . . . 866
 Lived in an age conspicuous as our own . . . 873
 The brightness more conspicuous that invests . . . 890
 And yet conspicuous, stood the old Church-tower,
 Conspicuous at the centre of the Lake,
Conspicuously. A last year's nest, conspicuously built
 Empurpled hills, conspicuously renewing . . . K.8.

Conspiracy. Was hatched among the crew a foul
 Conspiracy . . . 150
Conspire. If office help the factions to conspire, Conspired. "From that day forward have the Jews
 conspired . . . 554
 Of manliness and freedom] all conspired . . . 662
Constancy. For endless constancy, and placid truth ;
 In constancy, in fellowship more fair ! . . . 122
 Unfading constancy ? . . . 437
 Their constancy to prove, . . . 479
 By constancy inviolate, . . . 540
 O high example, constancy divine ! . . . 629
 Of his triumphant constancy and love ; . . . 839

Constant. See Ever-constant, Over-constant.
 With daily bread, by constant toil supplied, . . . 29
 Forgoe the home delight, of constant truth, . . . 32
 Did constant meditation dry my blood ; . . . 69
 Constant as a soaring lark, . . . 94

And O most constant, yet most fickle Place, . . . 107
 And from this constant light, so regular, . . . 133
 Constant to the fair Armenian, . . . 142
 So constant with thy downward eye of love, . . . 153
 Into the service of his constant heart, . . . 169
 A constant interchange of growth and blight !
 And this light-hearted Maiden constant is as he . . . 212
 The earth is constant to her sphere ; . . . 224
 Still constant in her worship, still . . . 228
 And constant voice, protest against the wrong,
 She thought of him with constant care,
 Hast heard the constant Voice its charge repeat, . . . 283
 A constant influence, a peculiar grace ;
 And said, I am in constant dread I trow,
 A smooth rock wet with constant springs) was seen
 With motion constant as his own, I went . . . 760
 And constant disposition of his thoughts
 Through the long year in constant quiet bound,
 From foul temptations, and by constant care . . . 829
 The darksome centre of a constant hope . . . 842
 By choice were spent in constant fellowship ; . . . 845
 Of constant infelicity, cut off . . . 846
 See him a constant preacher to the poor !
 And constant as the motion of the day ;
 And placid way of life, and constant love . . . K.8.

Constellated. Clustering like constellated eyes Constellations. The constellations—gently was I charmed . . . 745
 With answering constellations, under earth,
Constitute. To constitute the spiritless shape of Fact,
 And, in our dawn of being, constitute
 Are sister horns that constitute her strength . . . 640
 Me didst thou constitute a priest of thine, Constituting. (Submission constituting strength and power) . . . 802
Constitution. Do, in the constitution of their souls,
Constitutions. The constitutions, powers, and faculties,
Constrain. Constrain her heart as quickly to return,
 Eternity, as men constrain a ghost . . . 796
 Their own dire agents, and constrain the good Constrained. Or must we be constrained to think that these Spectators rude, . . . 189
 But moved by choice ; or, if constrained in part,
 I know an aged Man constrained to dwell . . . 284
 As if awakened, summoned, roused, constrained,
 Lovers of truth, by penury constrained, . . . 650
 In vision, yet constrained by natural laws, . . . 656
 High-titled Powers, am I constrained to ask,
 Degenerate ; who, constrained to wield the sword
 Constrained forgiveness, and relenting vows,
 Apart from old temptations, and constrained . . . 827
Constraining. "Fear not a constraining measure !
Constrains. That stern yet kindly Spirit, who constrains . . . 818
Constraint. As if some dire constraint of pain, or rage
 For the rich bounties of constraint ; . . . 216
 Ah ! wherefore yields it to a foul constraint
 Like recognitions, but with some constraint . . . 438
Construct. It were a pleasant pastime to construct
 "The untutored bird may found, and so construct,
 Do you, for your own benefit, construct
Constructed. See Ill-constructed, Re-constructed.
 Constructed, that sufficed for every end,
Construed. Or what their scruples construed to be such—
Consul. Consul for life. With worship France proclaims
 Consul, or King, can sound himself to know
 The Roman Consul doomed his sons to die

Consult—continued.

—O prostrate Lauds, consult your agonies ! . . . 330
 And, if that fall, consult the Stars . . . 370
Consulting. For me, consulting what I feel within . . . 885
Consume. Life to consume in Manhood's firmest hold ; . . . 321

Silently to consume the heavy clouds ; . . . 426
 Consume with zeal, in winged ecstasies . . . 467
 To consume this crystal Well ; . . . 550
Consumed. See Self-consumed.
 Disease consumed thy vitals ; War upheaved . . . 316
 Yea, his dry bones to ashes are consumed . . . 432
 His bones are consumed, and his life-blood is dried, . . . 621
 Was all consumed. A second infant now . . . 764
 To aim and purpose, he consumed his days, . . . 774
 All joy in human nature ; was consumed, . . . 776
 And, so consumed, she melted from my arms ; . . . 796
 A slow disease insensibly consumed . . . 864
 Of all the mighty, withered and consumed ! . . . 872

Consumes. His drought consumes, his mildew taints with death ; . . . 328 Consuming. See Life-consuming.

Consummate. Rose,—and, to consummate this just intent, . . . 105
 To guard the fallen, and consummate the event, . . . 326
 That day consummate happiness was mine, . . . 660
 The wrath consummate and the threat fulfilled ; . . . 724
 A habitation, for consummate good, . . . 789
 How such consummate elegance was bred . . . 842
 Praised the consummate harmony serene . . . 882

Consummation. Again that consummation she essayed ; . . . 210
 The consummation, the whole ruth . . . 413
 And consummation of a Poet's mind, . . . 750
 Of this great consummation :—and, by words . . . 755
 A happy consummation ! an accord . . . 861
 The consummation that will come by stealth . . . 893

Consumption. On his pale horse shall fell Consumption go . . . 617
 That, for the day's consumption, books may yield contagious. Soft bosoms breathe around contagious sighs, . . . 810
Contain. These narrow bounds contain our private store . . . 12
 But these, and all that they contain, . . . 106
 That holds but him, and can contain no more ! . . . 237
Contained. O'er which they move, wherein they are contained, . . . 817
Contains. Contains not such a Monster ! For this purpose . . . 230
 The thing most precious that it now contains : . . . 56

Contamination. Without contamination doth she live . . . 75
Contemplate. When from these forms I turned to contemplate . . . 692
 That we, who contemplate the turns of life . . . 70
 Heart-sworn, while in your pride ye contemplate . . . 476
 Are that which we would contemplate from far . . . 567

Contemplated. Of heaven contemplated by Spirits pure . . . 830
 Outwardly, inwardly contemplated, . . . 474
 Contemplated, describe the Mind and Man . . . 706
Contemplating. Contemplating in soberness the approach . . . 755
 Contemplating ; and who, and what he was— . . . 819
 And further ; by contemplating these Forms . . . K.8.
 Contemplating perfection absolute . . . 190
Contemplation. Of contemplation, the calm port . . . 320
 A Soul by contemplation sanctified . . . 328

Of contemplation, by no sense of wrong . . . 385
 For quiet contemplation ; . . . 684
 Of contemplation almost failed to beat . . . 665
 When Contemplation, like the night-calm felt . . . 675
 Of contemplation, what intuitive truths, . . . 743
 Still higher, men for contemplation framed, . . . 757
 Detained for contemplation or repose, . . . 772
 To happy contemplation soothed his walk ; . . . 787
 —Hail Contemplation ! from the stately towers, . . . 804
 Vigils of contemplation ; praise ; and prayer— . . . 810
 And easy contemplation ; gay parterres . . . 225

Contemplations. Star-guided contemplations move . . . 355
 To kindred contemplations ministers . . . 714
 Balanced these contemplations in his mind ; . . . 799
 But contemplations, worthier, nobler far . . . 660
Contemplative. Wide-spreading, steady, calm, contemplative . . . 696
 For feeling and contemplative regard, . . . 20
Contempt. Surely in other thoughts contempt may die . . . 23
 Is littleness ; that he who feels contempt . . . 47
 More of contempt than hatred ; both are flown ; . . . 241
 With hard contempt his heart was wrong . . . 357
 With morals, trusting, in contempt or fear . . . 497
 Unacceptable feelings of contempt, . . . 648

I speak, unapprehensive of grey locks . . . 722
 A chaplet in contempt of his grey locks . . . 775
 An infidel contempt of holy writ . . . 776

Contempt—continued.

By wandering Rhapsodists ; and in contempt . . . 812
 Of unbegun aversion or contempt, . . . 816
 Until abhorrence and contempt are things . . . 810
 The longing, the contempt, the undaunted quest, . . . K.8.
Contemptible. Becomes at last weak and contemptible . . . 48
 Contemptible as vain . . . 495
 Formal, and odious, and contemptible . . . 798
Contempts. And those eousing laughters and contempts, . . . 704
Content. Content ye with each other ? of the sea . . . 229
 I cannot for such cause contend ; . . . 401
 For what contend the wise ?—for nothing less . . . 436
 Swayed, and thereby enabled to contend . . . 442
 And doomed him to contend in faithless courts, . . . 573
 There, too, the lusty Wrestlers shall contend : . . . 773
 Nor summoned to contend for virtue's prize, . . . 835

Contenting. I move at ease ; and meet contenting themes . . . 350
 With fancied spots contenting ; . . . 497
 Ocean and Earth contenting for regard . . . 497
 Of oars with oars contenting, sails with sails, . . . 664
 Contenting after showers. The mother now . . . 692

 In placid beauty and sublime content ! . . . 495
 And aid my verse, content with local bounds . . . 522
 For something more than dull content, . . . 526
 And, as his tufts of leaves he spreads, content . . . 529
 So were both right well content : . . . 535
 Thence worship comes, content and true heart's pleasure, . . . 559
 Ev'n here Content has fix'd her smiling reign . . . 608
 Content upon some simple annual feast, . . . 613
 Content and not unwilling now to give . . . 633
 And now it would content me to yield up . . . 634
 If, mingling with the world, I am content . . . 648

 And with their humble birthright rest content . . . 832
 Even at the worst, a smooth stream of content, . . . 833
 Distracted in propensity ; content . . . 843
 So placid, so inactive, as content ; . . . 849
 And undertook with dutiful content . . . 852
 Which her poor treasure-house is content to owe, . . . 862
 Content with meaner prowess, must have lacked . . . 866
 The wish for liberty to live—content . . . 888
 In placid beauty and entire content . . . S.3.

 Of the Devout, as, 'mid your glooms convened
 Of every nature, and strange plants convened
 Plunged—'mid a gay and busy throng convened 870 Excursion 7. 868

Convenes. With careful hesitation,—then convenes Convenience. For the convenience of unlawful gain,
Convenient. To such convenient work as might employ Convent. Huge convent domes with pinnacles and towers,
 I thought the Convent never would appear ;
 Idonea would have fears for me,—the Convent
 We'll lead him to the Convent. He shall live,
 Lady, you'll find your Father at the Convent 69 Bord. 1766
 I hid my face within a Convent, there 72 Bord. 1989
 cannot we go to the Convent ?
 Upon this arm. You led him towards the Convent ?
 That Convent was Stone-Arthur Castle. Thither
 That dooms her to a convent.—Who shall tell,
 A convent, even a hermit's cell,
 A shattered Convent, yet rose proud to have
 As we approached the Convent gate, aloft
 By panting steers up to this convent gate ?
 In the magnificent Convent built of yore 509 F. Stone 96

 Beheld the Convent of Chartreux, and there

Convent-bread. Full cheerily on convent-bread
Convent-crested. Of that high Convent-crested cliff I stood,
Convent-fire. And heard old tales by the convent-fire,
Convent-haven. From Tasso's Convent-haven, and retired grave,
Conventicle. Court, theatre, conventicle, or shop,
Convent-plot. Where ancient trees this convent-plot enclose,
Convent's. Nuns fret not at their convent's narrow room ;
 Yet more,—round many a Convent's blazing fire
 While through the Convent's gate to open view
 The Abbot with his convent's company 433 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 20. 1
Convent-tower. Flung from a Convent-tower,
Conventual. Of vast cathedral or conventual church,
Converging. Converging walks, and fountains gay,
Conversant. Fervid, yet conversant with holy feat,
 Must needs be conversant with upward looks,
 With which I had been conversant, the mind
 Are conversant, subservient in their turn 736 Prelude 12. 138

Conversation. In conversation between man and man
 Such conversation, under Attic shades,
 In thought or conversation, public acts,
 Frank conversation, made the evening's treat :
 And in the various conversation here
 That made their conversation fresh and fair 877 Excursion 8. 187
Converse. In converse that ensued she nothing spake ;
 And, through all converse of our later years,
 Much converse do I find in thee,
 Here broke off the dangerous converse :
 Of man converse with immortality ?
 For converse with God, sought through study and prayer,
 In sacred converse gifts with Alfred shares 364 Vallamb. 8
 Converse with Nature in pure sympathy ; 425 Ecc. Sonn. 1. 26. 14

From early converse with the works of God
 Thine be such converse strong and sanative,
 Converse with men, where if we meet a face
 To hold fit converse with the spiritual world,
 Nor in such other converse as is here,
 Of other converse which mind, soul, and heart,
 Earth to despise ; but, to converse with heaven—
 Such converse, if directed by a meek,
 And by his converse crowns a silent day
 Through lack of converse ; no—his must have found
 In social converse, or by some short space
 Converse with heaven, nor yet deprest towards earth,
 For grateful converse : and to these poor men
 From human converse to frequent alone 625 Aeneid 132

 Pleasant conviction flashed upon my mind
 It wrought in him conviction strange ; 41 Bord. 229
 With a conviction of the power that waits
 Preclude conviction, that a spirit strong
 All feeling of conviction, and, in fine,
Convictions. Convictions still more strong than heretofore,
Convict's. The convict's summons in the steeple's knell ;
Convinced. Convinced that he, or soon or late,
 Convinced that there, there only, she can lay 234 Power of Sound 158

Convolved. Up-coiling and inveterately convolved ;
Convulsed. Convulsed as by a jarring din ;
Convulsions. Into the chilling flood. Convulsions dire
Convulsive. That a brief while heaves with convulsive throes—
Conway. And two of us at Conway dwell,
 " You say that twofold at Conway dwell,
Coed. That coo again !—'tis not to chide,
Cooed. He did not cease ; but cooed—and cooed ;
Cooling. Perched on an olive branch, and heard her cooing
Cook. For show ; mean handy-work of craftsman, cook,

Coolness. 'Mid recent coolness, such as falls
A grateful coolness round that crystal Spring,
"The fragrant air its coolness still retains ;
A grateful coolness fell, that seemed to strike . . .
Cools. It cools my blood ; it cools my brain ;
Coop. Such DUNSTAN !—from its Benedictine coop
Cooped. When, in forlorn and naked chambers cooped
Co-operation. Zealous co-operation of all means
Coops. The captive promptly coops ;
The thicket, where th' unlisten'd stockdove coos.
Cope. And rest ; but now along heaven's darkening cope
Hence he will gain a firmer mind, to cope . . .
To cope with Sages undevoutly free . . .
Under a cope of sky more variable,
To cope with stoutest champions of the bowl ;
Copied. And gorgeous insects copied with nice care Copious. In copious showers, from earth by wholesome springs,
When gushing, copious as a thunder-shower,
With copious eulogy in prose or rhyme
When copious rains have magnified the stream
A copious stream with boldly-winding course ;
Copper.—Up from the ground they snatch the copper coin,
Coplice. Then Michael from a winter coplice cut
To sympathize with vulgar coplice birds
And in the sheltered coplice where I sate,
Copse. Of copse and thicket, leaves the eastern shore
Or heath-besprinkled copse might yield,
He trudged along through copse and brake
Through the rough copse wheel thou with hasty stride ;
But both will soon be mastered, and the copse
Was kindling, not unseen, from humble copse . . .
Gave intermitting prospect of the copse
Copse-clad. Sparkling from out a copse-clad bank that rose
Copses. Along the copses runs in veins of gold . . .
"Mid groves and copses. Once again I see
Copy. Copy their hearty more and more, and preach,
Oh could we copy their mild virtues, thea
A bridge to copy, or to paint a mill,
—Stoop from your height, ye proud, and copy
these !
Copying. Copying with awe the one Paternal mind.
Coracle. And, as a Coracle that braves . . .
Coral. See Choral.
Thine are all the [?] coral fountains . . .
Nor Sea-nymph glistening from her coral bower ;
Cord. Tied by a woollen cord, moves on before
When round my wrist I felt a cord drawn tight,
To pull the cord. I guess he must have heard it ;
And by a slender cord was tethered to a stone ;
"What ails thee, young One ? what ? Why pull so at thy cord ?
(Your casual glance off meeting) this bright cord,
Unto a heifer's motion, by a cord
Corded. Corded, and burning at the social stake : "
Cordella. You say, Cordella, was the metal sought, Cordial.—Now whether (said I to our cordial Friend,
By cordial love invited.
"Your Father gave me cordial greeting ;
Without a cordial greeting. Thence with speed
With cordial transport, moulds it and remoulds,
And cordial greeting.—Vivid was the light
Of cordial spirits and vital temperament,
Cordiality. Of native cordiality, our Friend
Cordially. Said cordially, "My Friend, what cheer ?
His is a welcome cordially bestowed !"
Cordially greeted. Graceful was her port :
Cords. Our hands behind our backs with felon cords ?
Of the noon-day. Nor doubt that golden cords
Those slender cords, to guide the unconscious Boy
Core. My heart, could penetrate its inmost core,
He trembles, smitten to the core
Enfolds within its core. The faith be mine,
Corin. Than the gay Corin of the groves, who lives
Corneus. By brave Corneus aided, he subdued, Cormorant. Slowly the cormorant aims her heavy flight,
Cormorants. And what if ospreys, cormorants,
herons cry,
Where ospreys, cormorants, and herons cry.
Corn. To the green corn of summer, autumn's hue.
Hurrying the timid hare through rustling corn ;
O'er Gallia's wastes of corn my footsteps led ;
"A little croft we owned—a plot of corn,
And that green corn all day is rustling in thy ears !
Or reap an acre of his neighbour's corn.
Of wind-swept corn that wide around us rolled
The ripening corn beneath it. As mine eyes
"And just above yon slope of corn
Of yellowing corn, the same that overtopped
Thanks to this tall-tale sheaf of corn,
Hurrying the feeding hare thru' rustling corn ;
O'er Gallia's wastes of corn dejected led,
Of Indian corn tended by dark-eyed maids ;
And the ripe corn before his sickle fell . . .
Of grass or corn, over and through and through,
Corn-clad. The sylvan slopes with corn-clad fields . . .

Corner. In any corner of this savage Waste
Save, in a corner, a heap of dry leaves,
Leonard and James ! I warrant, every corner
Thou rocky corner in the lowest stair . . .
At the corner of Wood Street, when daylight
appears,
From every corner of the hall ; . . .
This corner is your own . . .
Still shall be left some corner of the heart . . .
And at the corner of that self-same house . . .
Hath left no corner of the land untouched :
The corner stones, on either side the porch,
Had been piled up against the corner panes
Corners. Yea, from the utmost corners of the earth,
Three aspens at three corners of a square ;
Emblem of those dark corners sometimes found . . .
To the remotest corners of the laad Corner-stone. Now for the corner-stone of my philosophy . . .
My purposes. Lay now the corner-stone,
A corner-stone by lightning cut, . . .
Beside the tree and corner-stone . . .
The corner-stone from hands that build to God . . .
Was once selected as the corner-stone . . .
Upon a corner-stone of that low wall,
Cornfields. Save cornfields stretched and stretching without bound ;
Cornice. The cornice, richly fretted, of grey stone ;
Cornish. While Merlin paced the Cornish sands,
Corn-land. And turnips, and corn-land, and meadow, and lea, . . .
Corn-stacks. Long files of corn-stacks here and there were seen,
Cornwall's. On farthest Cornwall's rocky shore,
Coronal. Those boys with their green coronal ; . . .
The coronal that coiling vipers make ; . . .
My head hath its coronal,
In coronal, with Phyllis in the midst—
Coronet. Thy bright coronet and Thee, . . .
Upon its head this coronet ?
Corporeal. Until, the breath of this corporeal frame
His vital presence ? his corporeal mould ?
On the tired household of corporeal sense, . . .
The bright corporeal presence—form and face—
From this corporeal frame ; whereon who stands
Haply for corporeal sight ! . . .
On my corporeal frame, so wide appears
Of vigorous hunger—hence corporeal strength
Corpses. Thy corpse shall buried be, . . .
A corpse that lay expiring on the ground,
Correct. Food not unwholesome ; earth and air correct
Corrected. To God, Who thus corrected my desires ;
Correction. Of fond correction and reproof bestowed
Under His great correction and control, Correspond. Which, if with truth it correspond, and sink
Correspondence. A correspondence with the talking world
Correspondent. A correspondent calm stole gently o'er his woes,
A correspondent breeze, that gently moved
A correspondent amplitude of mind ;
With correspondent wings the abyss of air.
Corresponding. A corresponding virtue to beguile
By corresponding hope was met,
A corresponding dignity within,
Corrupt. Corrupt affections, covetous desires,
Culpably cherished, or corrupt relapse
Corrupted. Soured and corrupted, upwards to the source,
Corrupted and cast down, on favoured ground,
To those inventions of corrupted man
Corse. Disclosing the grim head of a late murdered corse,
And well it was that of the corse there found . . .
The corse interred, not one hour he remained . . .
Upon his swinging corse an eye can glance,
When his corse is laid in earth, . . .
The breathless corse ; then peacefully resigned
Aloests, a reanimated corse . . .
And on the palace-floor a lifeless corse she lay . . .
Together they brought back the Corse.
From its dear home the Hermit's corse,
Attire the peaceful corse in vestments white ;
And singly thine, O vanquished Chief ! whose corse,
Is now a corse ; then put aside
Espied the uncovered Corse ; the Man . . .
Till he rose a lifeless corse . . .
And, underneath this stone the Corse was laid,
Here, brought from far, his corse found rest,—
In that one moment when the corse is lifted . . .
A valley, thrice repeated o'er the Corse
Corselet. And in a white, far-beaming, corselet clad !
Corselets. While twice ten thousand corselets at the Corselean. That saw the Corsican his cap and bells

- Cotes. Are penned in cotes ; the chaffering is begun.
 Cotes. Thy lowly cots that sprinkle all the shore,
 Five streams of ice amid her cots descend,
 The cots, those dim religious groves embow'r,
Cottage. See Mountain-cottage.
 Even the white stems of birch, the cottage white,
 Last evening sight, the cottage smoke, no more,
 Gilding that cottage with her fondest ray,
 Beyond the cottage hearth, the cottage-door ;
 Concealed some cottage, whither he might turn
 No swinging sign-board croaked from cottage elm
 Ere long they reached that cottage in the dale ;
 With his oak-staff the cottage children played ;
 Far as the cottage. " A sad sight is here,"
 Whose body near our cottage chanced to lie ;
 Would stoop to skulk about a Cottage-door—
 To-day will clear up all.—You marked a Cottage,
 But he was snappish as a cottage cur . . .
 I met a little cottage Girl : . . .
 And, in the church-yard cottage, I . . .
 Night and day thou art safe,—our cottage is hard by . . .
 Of his old cottage,—as it chanced, that day,
 That from his cottage to the church-yard led,
 Of their inheritance, that single cottage—
 Thee, and the Cottage which thou dost surround.
 I to her cottage bent my way, . . .
 When down behind the cottage roof, . . .
 " Oh, move, thou Cottage, from behind that oak ! . . .

Couch. Now couch thyself where, heard with fear afar,
 To have heard your voice. Your couch, I fear, good Baron, 246 P. B. 842
 Thy couch the dewy earth, thy roof the forest thorn !
 The blooming heath their couch, gazed side by side,
 Couch the widely-scattered sheep ; —
 Whose moss-grown root might serve for couch or seat, 104 Artegal 161
 For oft, when on my couch I lie
 Give, on this well-known couch, one nuptial kiss.
 A play-ground — or a couch of rest ;
 Couch beautiful as e'er for earthy use ;
 Where the young lions couch ; for so, by leave
 Couch near their dams, with quiet satisfied ;
 Hares couch, and rabbits burrow !
 To couch in this thicket of brambles alone,
 When, from the soft couch of her sleeping Lover,
 Ours couch on naked rocks, — will cross a brook
 Her sabbath couch has made.
 Angels hovering round thy couch, 151
 Blithe Flora from her couch upstarts,
 For the dear blessings of a lowly couch,
 Till from his couch the wished-for Sun uprose.
 Breathes out from floor or couch, through pallid lips
 When she, whose couch had been the sod,
 And couch — all ready to a wish 151
 He makes his summer couch, and here at noon 151
 The sharers of her golden couch, was seen 151
 From that soft couch I rose not, till the sun
 Then from his couch he starts ; and now his feet
 The couch his fate had made for him ; supine,
 And on that couch inviting us to rest,
 Depresses the soul's vigour. Quit your couch —
 That Belus, nightly to his splendid couch 151
 To reconcile his manhood to a couch 151
 A grateful couch was spread for our repose ;
 Where couch the spotted deer ; or raised our eyes
 Couch, share my couch, nor speedily depart ;
Couchant. Still couchant, an inevitable ear,
 Upon the couchant lion's mane !
 Mute are all creatures, as this couchant fawn,
 Couchant beside that lonely mound ;
Couched. The kine are couched upon the dewy grass ;
 Forth-startled from the fern where she lay couched ;
 Ere thus I have lain couched an hour,
 Couched upon the rocking wave,
 Couched on a casual bed of moss and leaves,
 Couched on the bald top of an eminence ;
 Couched in the shadow of Manalian pines,
 Lay couched ; on him or his dread bow unbent
 A nursing couched upon her mother's knee,
 The Gordon, couched behind a thorn,
 To ruminant, couched on the grassy lea ;
 (Couched in their den) with those that roam at large
 Couched upon the dewy grass,
 Now couched at ease, though oft this day
 The sun is couched, the sea-fowl gone to rest,
 The fair Endymion couched on Latmos-hill ;
 At matins froze, and couched at curfew-time,
 The moon in splendour couched among the leaves
 Of such a madness, reason did lie couched.
 Upon my night head couched a single sheep,
 Couched in the dewy grass. With such a theme
 The appropriate sense, in Latin numbers couched ;
 To whom the appeal couched in its closing words
 And choice of moss-clad stones, whereon we couched
 Upon their grassy beds lay couch'd in sleep, 151
Couches. And some recline on couches, myrtle-crowned,
 On couches lie, with purple overspread ;
 Their painted couches seek, obedient to command.
Couching. That, calmly couching while the nightly
 dew
 The lamb is couching by the lion's side,

Countenance—continued.

But not the less—nay more—that countenance,
They from their fields can see the countenance
Of the beautiful countenance, twyn round his neck;
What countenance hath this Day put on for you?
A countenance that as sweetly smiled—
And lightened o'er the pallid countenance.
Can question that thy countenance is bright,
Oh! wherefore was her countenance bright,
Beamed from that gracious countenance;
May not the less, through Heaven's mild countenance,
From his mild advent till his countenance
Her countenance, phantom-like, doth reappear:
So shines that countenance with especial grace
So privileged, what a countenance of delight
The Mother-maid, whose countenance bright
My fortunes hid, my countenance
The countenance of the horizontal sun
That countenance there fashioned, which, spite of a stain
Could represent the countenance horrible
In that stern countenance, for our souls theuce drew
That from his ardent countenance are flung,
The plain and seemly countenance with which
Towards the Uncreated with a countenance
Blots from the human countenance all trace
The common countenance of earth and sky:
In under-coverts, yet the countenance.
His countenance, meanwhile, grew more disturbed;
Cast upwards on thy countenance, to detect
That overpread the countenance of earth,
What countenance to promote this second love I
With sound of voice and countenance of the Man,
All that a darling countenance can look
Retained too long a countenance severe;
Grateful support; his countenance as he stood
With such an active countenance, an eye
His countenance gave notice that my zeal
Listened intently; and his countenance soon
And in the Matron's countenance may be read
This honest sheep-dog's countenance I read;
On many a staring countenance portrayed
The gleams of his slow-varying countenance,
Of the whole countenance alive with thought,
Is that the countenance, and such the port,
Be likened? She whose countenance and air
Inquisitive the countenance, will peruse,
Countenanced. And countenanced like a soft cerulean
sky,
Countenances. The changeful language of their countenances.

Counterpart. An abject counterpart of what they are,
And its invisible counterpart, adorned
Beneath him, showed his shadowy counterpart.
And this deep vale its earthly counterpart, Counterpoise. Glorifying, I found a counterpoise in her,
Counter-proclamation. Of counter-proclamation,
now are seen,
Counter-scheme. To scheme and counter-scheme for Country—continued.

To show thee some delightful thing, in country or in town.
Should the country need a heroine,
And shepherds clad in the same country grey
He towards his native country cast a longing look.
Proud was I that my country bred.
That in our ancient uncouth country style
Full proof of this the Country gained;
When to this country first I came,
As all the country know,
From its own country, and forgive the strings."
Hence all who love their country, love.
Through town and country both deranged
Star of my Country!—on the horizon's brink
For my dear Country, many heartfelt sighs,
My Country! and 'his joy enough and pride
I had, my Country—am I to be blamed?
What time his injured country is a stage
Hark, how thy Country triumphs!—Smilingly
Then for that Country let our hopes be bold;
Are captains such as erst their country bred
"Thus strives a grateful Country to display
Your Country rears this sacred Monument!
Forgive, illustrious Country! these deep sighs,
Possessed the country, far and near;
Yet, my beloved Country! I partake
Ungrateful Country, if thou e'er forget
Who, with sad hearts, of friends and country took
Were they who, when their Country had been freed,
Throughout the Country they have left, our shores
Cut off from home and country, may have stood—
He all the country could outrun,
Mistrust thyself, vain Country! cease to cry,
My Country! if such warning be held dear,
Who had betrayed their country. The stern word
Was the boast of the country for excellent cheer;
Turned his back on the country—and off like a bird.
That greatly cheered his country: to his kin
If, in that country, where he dwells afar,
All over his dear Country; left the deeds
To gallop through the country in blind zeal
While every bush and tree, the country through,
Of custom, language, country, love, or hate,
As a tradition of the country tells,
Of my beloved country, wishing not
The attraction of a country in romance!
To travel in a country far remote;
That laid their country waste. No need to speak
Of country'squire; or at the staliel board
Our Country marked the preparation vast
No higher name; in whom our country showed,
Country, society, and time itself,
Of every country under heaven. My thoughts
Of urgent need.—Your Country must complete
And this dear land, our country, while on earth
Whose country groan'd under a foreign scourge?
Country-justice. Your friend the country-Justice scarce would fail
Country-life. That made the very thought of country-life
Country-man. But oh! that Country-man of thine, whose eye, loved Child, can see Countrymen. See Fellow-countrymen.
Unto their martyred Countrymen decreed,
His fellow country-men; and yet most blessed
Of his adventurous countrymen were led
For their dear countrymen, and all mankind.
Country-playhouse. When at a country-playhouse,
some rude barn
Country's. Shall lift his country's fame above the polar star!
Shouldst be my Country's emblem; and shouldst
wink,
Whate'er your temper, at your Country's call;
Who to their Country's cause have bond a life
Enough: 'my Country's cliffs I can behold,
The State,—the Country's destiny to mould;
To exense him in his Country's sight?
His Country's virtue, fought, and breathes no more;
Their Country's woes. But scarcely have they met,
Where Reynolds, 'mid our country's noblest dead,
Like one whose own country's far over the sea;
Have pondered here their country's weal,
To see a sanctuary for our country's youth
Fount of my country's destiny and the world's;
Upon our native country's sacred ground.
Or praises for our country's victories;
In due proportion to their country's need;
The sceptre of his sway; his country's name,
Counts. Or on her fingers counts the distant clock,
Nor Her who thinking of me there counts widowed hours."
Of old companionship, Time counts not minutes
Who counts among her ancestry
On viewless fingers counts the valley-clock,
Couple. And left, the couple neither gay perhaps
With all who want not skill to couple grief
Foreseen, had dared to couple, even in thought,

Coupled. Ay, we are coupled by a chain of adamant ;
Then with the father's name she coupled words ;
Of Faith stand coupled for a common flight !
On Patience coupled with such low endeavour . . .

Courage. Hope, strength, and courage, social suffering brings,
Has given him power to teach : and then for courage
Or own we baby Spirits ? Genuine courage
Saved by courage that with danger . . .

But, courage ! for around that boisterous brook
Of hardship, skill or courage, joy or fear ;
" Yet you make all courage fruitless,
" Stranger, 'tis no act of courage . . .

Thy matchless courage I bewail no more,
That choice lacked courage to bestow !
Fit aims, with courage to begin,
Of course you saw little there . . .

Of more than martial courage in the breast
The martial courage of a day is vain,
No courage can repel the dire assault ; . . .

Her courage animates the flood ;
Of virtuous action ; all that courage dares,
His budding courage to the proof ; and here
And yet want courage at their need :
The foe from numbers courage drew,
Redoubted King, of courage leonine,
That Courage may find something to perform ;
Of the towering courage which past times
" But courage, Father ! let us out to sea—
With courage will depart."
This neither is its courage nor its choice, . . .

To patient courage and unblemished truth,
Of courage, or integrity, or truth . . .

With courage, and new hope risen on our soil,
Courage to them who looked for good by light
One courage seemed to animate them all :
By courage, to demand from real life . . .

As soldiers live by courage ; as, by strength
Take courage, and withdraw yourself from ways
The courage that was needful to leap back
An act of courage, and the thing itself . . .

Or sought with courage ; enterprize forloru . . .

Courageous. Her humane courageous spirit . . .

Fixed in the depths of this courageous soil ;
That not the less a frank courageous heart
Angelical, keen eye, courageous look, . . .

Course. See Watercourse.
And whoso'er my course shall end,
Where antique roots its bustling course o'erlook,
The boat her silent course pursues !
With more majestic course the water rolled,
With a light heart our course we may renew,
Three years a wanderer now my course I bend—
And female cries. Their course they thither bent,
Wanderers whose course no longer now agrees,
Than make me change my course. Dear Marmaduke,
In such a course fit links of sympathy,
With two or three companions, whom their course Wouldst change the course of things to all men's sight !
And circumspect must be our course, and slow,
The way my friends their course did bend,
Young as I am, my course is run,
The Stream, so ardent in its course before,
While she pursues her course through the dreary sea.
" Dost thou presume my course to black ?
Thy pleasant course,—when day's beguio
Hither be his course is bending ;—
As a swollen brook with rugged course,
With him whatever comes in course,
Rolled round in earth's diurnal course,
The Knight, Sir Walter, died in course of time,
But Nature, in due course of time, once more
Her staterier Eden's course to guard ;
In worlds whose course is equable and pure ;
Or ruder weapon which their course might yield,
That Destiny her course should change ; too just Desires whose course in folly ends,
Their course, or genial showers descend !
The golden years maintained a course
A mazy course along familiar thongs,
Self-cast, as with a desperate course,
Where cheerily his course he weaves,
Why wander from your course so far,
He finds no solace in his course ;
Heaven-born, the Soul a heavenward course must hold ;
Went forth—his course surrendering to the care
Checked in your course by many a teasing burr ;
No public harm that Genius from her course
His course was true, . . .
And from the shore their course they take, . . .

Course—continued.
A course of lively pleasure ; . . .
The course of things, and change the creed . . .
And, if old judgments keep their sacred course,
Of such high course was felt and understood ; . . .

The unconquerable Stream his course pursue.
Bright be thy course to-day, let not this promise fail !
Then give free course to joy and love, . . .
But from our course why turn—to tread . . .
Rest where thy course was stayed by Power divine !

How, when their course they through the desert took, . . .
To which sad course, these wrinkled Sons of Time
Nor stagnates, nor precipitates his course,
Henceforth a humbler course perplexed and slow ;
And pleasant course ; flower after flower has blown,
Thy course and sport around thee softly fan—
" Her course was for the British strand ;
To learn thy course ; farewell ! be prompt and steady."
Fleet was their course, and when they came . . .
Ere yet our course was graced with social trees
Will soon be broken ;—a rough course remains,
Nor have I tracked their course for scanty gains ;
Her trophies, Fancy crouch ; the course of pride.
To watch thy course when Daylight, fled from earth . . .
Still stranger, bends him to his course . . .
To Durham first their course they bear ;
His solitary course maintain ;
A downward course, perverse and strange ?
And tremblingly her course she hent . . .
And, for delight of him who tracks its course,
Slackens his course—to mark those holy piles . . .
From their known course, or vanish like a dream ;
In light confirmed while years their course shall run,
Ploughs her bold course across the wondering seas ;
And, if dissevered thence, its course is short . . .
We, nothing loth a lingering course to measure,
For the brief course that must for me remain ;

That searching test thy public course has stood ;
Wild stream of Air, hold thy course, . . .
And they a blissful course may hold . . .
Gain a fresh impulse, run a livelier course ;
To stop your Leaders in their headstrong course !
What yet remains of this day's course : . . .
In course of nature under a low roof . . .
Where'er her course ; mysterious Bird !
But O, restrain compassion, if its course, . . .
The generous course, aspire, and still aspire ; . . .

Long as the sun his gladsome course renews . . .
In which course if Christ our Saviour
To read that they, who mark thy course, behold
Seven nights her course renewed,
" Leave open to my wish the course, . . .
And that the sun did take his course not right,
The old man does not change his course, the boy
Such course he held ! Bologna's learned schools
Returns from her long course ;—anon . . .
Flowed in a course of sympathy divine ;—
From sign to sign, its steadfast course,
His wizard course where hoary Derwent takes
What perils meet Æneas in his course, . . .
Your own grief and your friends'—your wandering course ;
A smooth free course along the watery gleam,
May'st thou pursue thy course by God approved,
Upon the river point me out my course ? . . .
We ran a boisterous course ; the year span round
Of some small island steered our course with one,
Yet Nature, or a happy course of things
Judging not ill perhaps, the timid course . . .
In its late course of even days with all
That ran on Sabbath days a fresher course ;
My homeward course led up a long ascent,
What joy was mine ! How often in the course
Yet independent study seemed a course
A rigorous student. What a stormy course
Did this unprecedented course imply
As their forerunners in a glorious course ;
And, that our future course, all plain to sight,
With some untried adventure, in a course . . .
Yet, undetermined to what course of life
A minuet course ; and, winding up his mouth,
His devious course. A glimpse of such sweet life
My mortal course, there will I think on you ;
Darkness ere day's mid course, and morning light
Turns, and will measure back his course, far back,
Through Paris lay my readiest course, and there
Seemed nothing out of nature's certain course,
Of wild course but treats back his own steps ;
To turn all judgments out of their right course ; . . .

 She welcomed what was given, and craved no more ;
 Full measure of content ; but still I craved
 Nor more would she have craved as due to One
 He craved a substitute in troubled joy ;
 But from Him I crav'd no warrant,
Craven. The craven few who hounded the head
 Among her native wilds of Craven ;
Craven's. In Craven's dens, on Cumbrian heights ;
 In Craven's Wilds is many a den,
Craves. Where men were monsters. A last grace he craves,
 The immortal Mind craves objects that endure :
 Who, having learnt that name, salvation craves
 And its possessions, what it has and craves,

Crazy—continued.
Who shall enumerate the crazy huts
Creaked. No swinging sign-board creaked from cottage elm
Creaking. Trees creaking in the wind (but none are here)
Blows keenly, it sends forth a creaking sound
Cream. Rich cream, and snow-white eggs fresh from the nest.
Refreshment, strawberries and mellow cream.
Of dainties,—oaten bread, curd, cheese, and cream;
Create. And mutual interest failed not to create.
Of eye, and ear,—both what they half create,
May find or there create?
Create, creator and receiver both,
Or could more bright appearances create
Kindred mutations; for themselves create
Earth and the kingdoms of the earth, create—
Receives, or by reflexion can create.
Created. See Home-created, New-created, Self-created.
Yet why repine, created as we are
And others like in fame, created Powers
How soon—alas! did Man, created pure—
That none, the meanest of created things,
Of forms created the most vile and brute,
Created out of pure intelligence.
Created for them, catch it, or are caught
Was Man created; but to obey the law
Creates. That both creates and fixes, in despite Informs, creates, and thaws the deepest sleep
His eye distinguishes, his soul creates
And oh! how much, of all that love creates
Creation. Nor stop but where creation seems to end.
He who governs the creation,
My fancy's own creation,
Rich change, and multiplied creation;
Creation of the painter's skill,
Her delicate creation,
And such a beautiful creation makes
Their own creation. Such glad welcomes
Creation, as it were, of yesterday—
More high, where creation seems to end,
Vexing its own creation. Thanks to both,
Old as creation, drinking in a pure
Creation and divinity itself.
And the creation (by no lower name
(As at a first creation and in haste
A new and unforeseen creation rise
Creations. Rich as the mine's most bright creations.
Creations lovely as the work of sleep—
Creations in the mind (and were indeed
Creations often), then when he discoursed
Creative. High is our calling, Friend!—Creative Art
In pomp foreseen by her creative eye,
My first creative sensibility;
Creative agency. The song would speak
The whole creative powers of man asleep—
A sensitive being, a creative soul.
Creative and enduring, may become
Or by creative feeling overborne,
Obedient to the strong creative power.
The moral interests, the creative might,
Creator. Create, creator and receiver both,
Creature. The eye that marks the gliding creature sees
He seemed the only creature in the wild
Never on earth was gentler creature seen;
The heart of living creature.—My poor Babe
Be worse than death) to that confiding Creature
Thou bring'st, gay creature as thou art!
Even so this happy Creature of herself
Proud creature was she the next day,
I heard a voice; it said, "Drink, pretty creature, drink!"
"Drink, pretty creature, drink," she said in such a tone
"It will not, will not rest—Poor creature, can it be
For never sun on living creature shone
Or like a sinful creature, pale and wan.
For happier soul no living creature has
With mortal creature. An Inhabitant
With some, the noble Creature never slept;
Fit pattern for a human creature,
Thrice happy Creature! in all lands
Sweet silent creature!
A beautiful creature,
"Such it is; the aspiring creature
Creature none can she decoy
Furnishes to every creature;
The Creature, by the Mastiff's side,
And this of mine—this bulky creature
A Creature not too bright or good
A creature of a "fiery heart."
And yet a boon I gave her, for the creature
Winds the mute Creature without visible Mate
Than fairest spiritual creature of the groves,
That in the living Creature hid on earth a place.
How gaunt the Creature is,—how lean
That earnest Creature turned away,
So with his freight the Creature turns
He sees an unsubstantial creature,

Creature—continued.
O gentle Creature! do not use me so,
Breathes forth a cloud-like creature of its own,
But, O fair Creature! in the light
May human creature leave the shore!
The hapless creature which did dwell
And stands amidst you now an armed creature,
But not a living creature could be seen
That, while the Creature is sustained,
Is wheeling hitherward. Thanks, happy Creature,
And every shape of creature they sustain,
So like, yet so unlike, a living Creature!
If I with this bright Creature go:
As a commoo creature might:
While this radiant Creature lies
Bright was the Creature, as in dreams
Which do the gentle Creature wrong,
And even this Creature!" which words saying,
Fair creature, and more white than snow!
The same fair Creature, who hath found
A radiant creature, silver-bright!
So to her feet the Creature came,
The saddest thought the Creature brings?
She saw the Creature once again;
In which the Creature first was found.
And prospects of the inferior Creature!
In that fair creature whom the fields
There doth the gentle Creature lie
The Creature, to the Creature glory give;
Grave Creature!—whether, while the moon shines
bright
Doth man of brother man a creature make
Such an odd such a kind happy creature as he.
See that Fly,—a disconsolate creature! perhaps
A loving creature she, and brave
What is the creature doing here?
As a debt to that frail Creature,
How could he think of the live creature—gay
A creature born of time, that keeps one eye
On a green bank a creature stood forlorn
That brings to the inward creature no disgrace?
Of humblest Friends, bright Creature! scorn not one
The fainting creature took the marsh,
From the most gentle creature nursed in fields
The heaven-eyed creature sleeps in earth:
Blank misgivings of a Creature
The Poet, gentle creature as he is,
Frail creature as he is, helpless as frail,
With every form of creature, as it looked Upon thy grave, good creature! While my heart
Are still, the creature trotted on before;
Earth's paramount Creature! not so much for woes
Of the unwieldy creature he bestrode,
Have been preferred, that this fair creature, checked
Meanwhile this creature—spiritual almost
Making man what he is, creature divine,
That almost seems inherent in the creature,
Why is this glorious creature to be found
A human creature, howsoever endowed,
And his frail creature Man!—but ye shall hear.
Primeval Nature's child. A creature weak
A creature, squalid, vengeful, and impure;
Small creature as she is, from earth's bright flowers,
The rational creature, left, to feel the weight
Alas! such wisdom hides a creature fly
To lift the creature toward that eminence.
And who shall judge the creature, will forgive.
Perforce? Are we a creature in whom good
What sees he but a creature too perturbed;
The one by which a creature, whom his sins
Beef faithless, hear him, though a lowly creature,
Yet is the creature rational, endowed
The breathing creature stood; as beautiful,
Not for the creature only, but for all
The common creature of the brotherhood,
Creature's. "What thoughts must through the creature's brain have past!
Upon the Creature's back, and plied
They bind the unoffending creature's brows
Upon the happy Creature's face.
Is in the thankful Creature's power.
Love for the human creature's absolute self,
Creatures. For creatures doomed to breathe terrestrial
air:
The weakest of God's creatures, stand resolved
Alone but for a swarm of minute creatures
Link her with the inferior creatures,
If we are creatures of a winter's day;
Two separate Creatures in their several gits
Once more, those creatures thus by nature paired,
Say, when the moving creatures saw
Even as these blissful creatures do I fare;
For the unoffending creatures whom he loves,
Hear not we, unthinking Creatures!
All creatures met in peace, from fierceness free,
Speak silent creatures.—They are gone, are fled,
Could humanize the creatures of the sea,
And trust that spiritual Creatures round us move,
