 All night the storm endured: aod, soon as help
 To baffle, as he might, the watery storm:
 Upon the dark materials of the storm
 Feelingly sweet is stillness after storm,
 The rainbow smiling on the faded storm:
 To oldest time I and reckless of the storm
 Swept in the storm of chase as moon and stars
 Who throve, like plants, uninjured by the storm
 Hath harassed him toiling through fearful storm,
 Repelled the storm and deadened its loud roar.
 That the dread storm is weathered by them both.
 " I know where I shall find him, though the storm
 For ye must know! that though the storm
 Thick storm, and heavy, which for three hours'
 space
 Begins to love us! By a sullen storm,
 Two months unwearied of severest storm,
 Through these two months of unrelenting storm,
 Conceal us from the storm,—so here abides Storm-beaten. Storm-beaten and bewildered as we were;
Storm-driven. Storm-driven; who, having seen the cup of woe
Stormed. In bondage; and the palace, lately stormed
Storm-proof. Impervious, and storm-proof.
Storms. See Mountain-storms.
 And Pikes, of darkness named and fear and storms,
 And from his nest amid the storms of heaven
 Roaring with storms beneath night's starless gloom;
 Had heard of one who, forced from storms to shroud,
 The heaviest storms not longest last;
 Up to the heights, and in among the storms, Derived from clouds and storms!) the amplest range
 Founder amid fanatic storms.
 'Mid summer storms or winter's ice,
 Storms, sallying from the mountain-tops, waylay
 We watch their splendour, shall we covet storms,
 Doth yet frequent the hill of storms,
 Ye Storms, resound the praises of your King!
 Report of storms gone by
 Of fortune, and the desolating storms
 Of Winter, but the storms of life,
 Shouts rise, and storms of sound from lifted trumpets blow!
 And alien storms with home-bred ferments claim
 Of winter storms, yet budding cheerfully;
 And storms the pillars rock. But we such schools
 But list!—though winter storms be nigh,
 Then, amid the storms of life
 Storms make in rising, valued in the moon
 In his own storms he hides himself from sight.
 And, to far-travelled storms of sea and land,
 Full oft, when storms the welkin rend,
 With which she speaks when storms are gone,
 Hath seen in grim array amid their Storms
 Huge Pikes of Darkness named, of Fear and Storms,
 From his bare nest amid the storms of heaven
 Memorial reverenced by a thousand storms;
 When storms are raging. Happy are they both—
 To wait upon the storms: of their approach
 Such as the storms and angry elements

Into strange woods, where he at large may live
Poor winter look fine in such strange masquerade.
To escape from many and strange indignities;
Provoked out of herself by troubles strange,
Many and strange, that hung about his life;
Strange apparitions mock the village sight,
And with strange tinglings sings her fainting ear.
Strange "weeds" and alpine plants her helm entwine,
That travelling in strange countries once he found
With what strange utterance did the loud dry wind
In one society. How strange that all
Migration strange for a stripling of the hills,
Woyaging through strange seas of Thought, alone,
Strange rendezvous! My mind was at that time
Make a strange back-ground. From his lips, ere

There was a strange half-absence, as of one
While this was uttering, strange as it may seem,
Of every nature, and strange plants convened
Hazards and strange escapes, of which the rocks
The threshold now is overpast, (how strange
Strange congregation! yet not slow to meet
Which may seem strange: but I was unprepared
To mock me under such a strange reverse.
In such strange passion, if I may once more
Sing notes of greeting to strange fields or groves,
Strange and uncouth; and dire faces, figures dire,
Of use or ornament; with a strange,
A strange surprise and fear came to my heart,
Struggling against the strange reverse with zeal

And a strange thraldom of maternal love,
Of strange or tragic accident, hath helped
To most strange issues. I have lived to mark
Wide, sluggish, blank, and ignorant, and strange—Strange, then, nor less than monstrous, might be deemed

Strange, should He deal herein with nice respects,
When many plants strange blossoms bore . . .
Methinks 'tis strange I did not perish . . .

With a strange sound of genial harmony;
Strange question, yet it answers not itself.
Beget strange themes; and to freaks give birth
Strangely. Could find delight to nurse itself so strangely,
On me how strangely did he look!
Mix strangely; trifles light, and partly vain,
Strangely the exasperation of that Land, Strangeness. And, more than all, a strangeness in the mind,
Stranger. Save when, a stranger seen below, the hoy

Strawberries. To gather strawberries all day long;
 Strawberry-berries from lane or woodland, offering wild
 Refreshment, strawberries and mellow cream.
Strawberry. And love the strawberry in its bower;
 There bloomed the strawberry of the wilderness;
 The season's sprinklings of ripe strawberry fruit.
Strawberry-blossom. Only spare the strawberry-blossom!
Strawberry-blossoms. Strawberry-blossoms, one and all

Straw-bull. On cold blue nights, in hut or straw-built shed,

Stray. 'Tis pleasant near the tranquil lake to stray
 Beyond his native valley seldom stray,
 Hail Freedom! whether it was mine to stray,
 To waken our stray Baron. Were there not
 I had been out in search of a stray heifer;
 On windy days, in one of those stray brooks,
 Through border wilds where naked Indians stray,
 Or stray invention.
 In stray gifts to be claimed by whoever shall find;
 Where'er the subtle waters stray;
 Where human foot did never stray;
 With sympathetic heart may stray,
 Long as the shepherd's bleating Rock shall stray
 That I, if frugal and severe, might stray
 Or shining slope where he must never stray;
 We went to stray,
 For sportive youth to stray in;
 Thoughts that would stray from Heaven? The dream must cease
 The task, in smoother walks to stray;
 I love beside the flowing lake to stray,
 Where solitary forms illum'd stray
 Beyond his native valley hardly stray,
 At such an hour there are who love to stray,
 O'er Anet's hopeless seas of marsh to stray,
 Ah! better far than this, to stray about
 To drive him back, and pound him, like a stray,
 No more shall stray where meditation leads,
 The clouded moon, and calls me forth to stray
 In search of a stray sheep. It was the time
 Awful as ever stray Demonic uttered, Strayed. See Forth-strayed.
 Across the pebbly road a little runnel strayed.
 By chance had thither strayed;
 While across her virgin cheek pure blushes strayed,
 Nor through their sunny lawns have strayed?
 Nor Anquish strayed from her Tartarean den;
 Than those soft scenes through which thy childhood strayed,
 Have sunk, at Nature's call; or strayed
 He strayed through the fields like an indolent wight,
 'Thou now, where erst the grey-clad peasant stray'd,
Straying. Who has a trick of straying from his keepers;
 And, if a breeze be straying,
 A few steps distant, feeding, straying;
 While they, side by side, were straying,
Strays. The weary eye—which, wheresoe'er it strays,
 Of thoughtful Herdsman when he strays
 The shepherd strays, a rolling hut his home.
Streak. Above Helm-crag—a streak half dead,
 Into clear view the cultured fields that streak
 Wish not for a richer streak;
 All colours,—and the liveliest streak
 For not a tinge or flowery streak
 Whereat a tender twilight streak

Streak—continued.
 And his bright eyes look brighter, set off by the streak
 Ne'er kindled with a livelier streak
Streaked. —Thy lake that, streaked or dappled, blue or grey,
 Sky streaked with purple, grove and craggy bield,
 Gleams, streak'd or dappled, hid from morning's ray
 The silvery lake is streaked with placid blue;
 Into blue spots, and slowly lengthening streaks;
 In streaks diverging wide and mounting high;
 And of the streaks that laced the severing clouds
 Or crossed by vapoury streaks and clouds that move
 Long streaks of fairy light the wave illum'd
Stream. There, bending o'er the stream, the listless swain
 Bandusia's praise, wild stream, should yield to thine!
 Strong flakes of radiance on the tremulous stream:
 At intervals imperial banners stream,
 And see how dark the backward stream!
 O glide, fair stream! for ever so,
 Or seek at eve the banks of Tusa's stream,
 Flings o'er the wilderness a stream of fire!
 Over the mighty stream now spreading wide:
 Left his mind still as a deep evening stream.
 And rain he wildered on, no moon to stream
 Thanks to them, are to us a stream of comfort:
 The lamb had slipped into the stream,
 To brood on air than on an earthly stream;
 Suspended in a stream as clear as sky,
 And the mazy stream unravelled
 And unbridged stream, such as you may have noticed
 Sabrina,—vowing that the stream should bear
 Bend with the breeze their heads, beside a crystal stream.
 The Stream, so ardent in its course before,
 O'er lake and stream, mountain and flowery mead,
 The stream that flows out of the lake,
 The murmur of a neighbouring stream
 The stream will not flow, and the hill will not rise,
 Now, coaches and chariots! I roar on like a stream;
 The stream is flowing,
 Cast up the Stream or down at her beseeching,
 But now his voice to me was like a stream
 You see the stoves, the fountain, and the stream;
 Beside her little humble stream;
 That on the banks of this delightful stream
 To Tiviot's stream, to Annas, Tweed, and Clyde—
 That, for a brief space, checks the hurrying stream!
 To mock the wandering Voice beside some haunted stream.
 A stream as if from one full heart.
 Over the silent stream.
 Upon the stream the moonbeams quiver:
 So toward the stream his head he bent,
 By an immeasurable stream
 Yet to my mind this scanty Stream is brought
 A grace the sinuous vale and roaring stream
 And leap at once from the delicious stream.
 Wafted adown the wind from lake or stream;
 Here, with no thirst but what the stream can slake,
 And, like mine eyes that stream with sorrow, blind!"
 A Stream, to mingle with your favourite Dee,
 From that young Stream, that smites the throbbing rocks,
 Breathed forth beside the peaceful mountain Stream
 After her throes, this Stream of name more dear
 To breathe in rural peace, to hear the stream,
 Let us beside the limpid Stream
 Child of loud-throated War! the mountain Stream
 "Be Yarrow stream unseen, unknown!
 Or fish in stream, or bird in bower,
 A Champion worthy of the stream,
 Of rock that frowns, and stream that roars,
 And is this—Yarrow?—This the Stream
 That this most famous Stream in bogs and sands
 The unconquerable Stream his course pursue.
 City, and naval stream, suburban grove,
 From many a hallowed stream and grove,
 That stream in blithe succession from the throats
 Sully the limpid stream of thankfulness.
 Is this the stream, whose cities, heights, and plains,
 Doth DANUBE spring to life! The wandering Stream
 Still, with those white-robed Shapes—a living Stream,
 The form and motion of a stream to take;
 Struggling against the stream of destiny,
 Never perhaps to reappear. The Stream
 Near Anio's stream I spied a gentle Dove
 Which yet it bears, sweet Stream! as crystal pure.
 For late, as near a murmuring stream
 I seek the birthplace of a native Stream—
 Fed by the stream with soft perpetual showers,
 On, loitering Muse—the swift Stream chides us—on!
 O mountain Stream! the Shepherd and his Cot

Stream—continued.

Checking the stream, make a pool smooth and clear
 And may thy Poet, cloud-born Stream! be free—
Still glides the Stream, and shall for ever glide;
 For busy thoughts the Stream flowed on
 Flow on for ever, Yarrow Stream!
 For us the stream of fiction ceased to flow,
 Like the crystal stream now flowing
 Dark moor, and gleam of pool and stream,
 I, who essayed the nobler Stream to trace
 And with dread signs the nascent Stream invest?
 Only perchance some melancholy Stream
 Where Tiber's stream the immortal City laves:
 As with the Stream our voyage we pursue,
 Pours on the surface of the turbid Stream!
 Down a swift Stream, thus far, a bold design
 Henceforth, as on the bosom of a stream
 The purest stream of patient Energy.
 His drowsy rings. Look forth!—that Stream behold,
 THAT STREAM upon whose bosom we have passed
 A stream is heard—I see it not, but know
 Where wood or stream by thee was never greeted.
 Were wont to stream before mine eye,
 Among the mountains were we nursed, loved
 Stream!
 Measuring thy course, fair Stream! at length I pay
 Flung from her to the stream.
 And the Stream whirled her down the dell
 Wild stream of Aira, hold thy course,
 Rich prospect left behind of stream and vale,
 From murmur of a running stream;
 And Thou, wild Stream, that giv'st the honoured
 name
 See studied kindness flow with easy stream,
 She heard the ancestral stream;
 Meanwhile the stream, whose hank I sate upon,
 And live as long as its pure stream shall flow.
 Less for the love of stream and rock,
 I saw the Stream of Yarrow glide
 There was a time when meadow, grove, and stream,
 Small cottage lights across the water stream,
 Or charms that smile on Tusa's evening stream,
 There hang in fear, when growls the frozen stream,
 —Red stream the cottage lights; the landscape
 fades,
 When hurrying forward till the slackning stream
 Waves o'er the gloomy stream;
 Shall I take up my home? and what clear stream
 In a small mill-race severed from his stream,
 Her clear though shallow stream of piety
 Preyed on my strength, and stopped the quiet
 stream
 And bore the semblance of another stream
 Down by thy side, O Derwent! murmuring stream,
 Low-standing by the margin of the stream,
 See trees, and meadows, and thy native stream,
 We glided forward with the flowing stream,
 Crossing the unbridged stream, that road we took,
 Which in the stony channel of the stream
 Was downwards, with the current of that stream.
 And giddy prospect of the raving stream,
 The rapid stream whose margin we had trod;
 Led by the stream, ere noon-day magnified
 I saw, or heard, or felt, was but a stream
 That flowed into a kindred stream; a gale,
 (So willed the Muse) a less impetuous stream,
 Thou endless stream of men and moving things!
 Devoted, on the inviolable stream
 In a pure stream of words fresh from the heart:
 In the green dales beside our Rotha's stream,
 In loose procession through the shallow stream
 In one continuous stream; a mind sustained.
 Of our long labour: we have traced the stream
 He cleared a passage for me, and the stream
 Had newly scooped a running stream. He rose,
 And the mute fish that glances in the stream,
 Faintly reflected in a lingering stream.
 Of stream and headlong flood that seldom fails;
 When copious rains have magnified the stream
 —Voiceless the stream descends into the gulf
 Raised for enabling this penurious stream
 Even so deduce the stream of human life
 And majesty with this gigantic stream,
 Of Mississippi, or that northern stream
 Betray to sight the motion of the stream,
 Must he again encounter.—Such a stream
 By flowing stream, through wood, or craggy wild,
 A stream, which, from the fountain of the heart
 Upon the flowing stream, a thought arose
 Like one whose untired ear a murmuring stream
 To drink with gratitude the crystal stream
 Poured forth with fervour in continuous stream,
 A copious stream with holly-winding course;
 Even at the worst, a smooth stream of content,
 As the mute swan that floats adown the stream,
 The stream, that bears thee forward, prove not, soon
 In the grey cottage by the murmuring stream
 Was smitten, and poured forth a quenching stream
 Rose this pure eloquence. And, when the stream

Stream—continued.

Thus would he say, 'the Rhine, that famous stream!
 Of a green hill or bank of rugged stream.
 And in the courts—and where the rumbling stream,
 Drink the pure water of its innocent stream.
 And hear the mighty stream of tendency
 In their vast stream, and if an age hath been Down the deep channel of the stream he went,
 Right in the middle of the roaring stream.
 What, if I floated down a pleasant Stream
 Shall I reprove myself? Ah no, the stream
 And I shall float upon that stream again.
 To pastoral fancies? Is there such a stream,
 Or must we seek that stream where Man is not?
 Hath dealt with me as with a turbulent stream,
Streamed. Till his eye streamed with tears. In this deep vale
 From lamp of lonely toll-gate streamed athwart the night.
 The parting signal streamed—at last the land withdrew.
 Streamed with the pomp of a too-credulous day.
 (Streamed from the west) as with a robe of power:
 The blood of Huguenots through Paris streamed.
 Or Cupid's sparkling arrow streamed
 The eyes of all Savona streamed with tears.
 Imperishable majesty streamed forth
Streamers. We want your streamers, friend, you know;
 Towers where red streamers flout the breezy sky
 With nets and sails outspread and streamers gay,
 Play on her streamers, fails she to assume Streamling. Streaming from founts above the starry sky
 And lo! with crimson banners proudly streaming, Entered, with streaming thousands, through the gate,
 Who sees, may lift a streaming eye
 More glorious, with spread sail and streaming pendant.
 And see love-emblems streaming from thy ship,
 Flung back from distant climes a streaming fire,
 Come streaming down the streaming panes.
 Upon the tall mast streaming. But, ye Powers
 As ever raised to heaven a streaming eye!
Streamlet. How sweet its streamlet murmurs in mine ear!
 And one meek streamlet both
 But one meek streamlet, only one:
 And Thou, blue Streamlet, murmuring yield'st no more.
 "No check, no stay, this Streamlet fears;
 There, on the margin of a streamlet wild
 That streamlet whose blue current works its way
 Or let us trace this streamlet to its source;
Streamlet's. A heap of stones, which by the stream-let's edge
 The mists, that o'er the streamlet's bed
 And down the vale along the streamlet's edge Stream-like. The stream-like windings of that glorious street—
Stream's. Right to a rough stream's edge, and there broke off;
 On the stream's bank, and everywhere, appeared Streams. See Mountain-streams.
 Along the mystic streams of Life and Death.
 —Alas! the very murmur of the streams
 While pastoral pipes and streams the landscape lull,
 Those lofty cliffs a hundred streams unfold,
 Innumerable streams with roar profound.
 Five streams of ice amid her cots descend,
 Each clacking mill, that broke the murmuring streams,
 Into deep chasms troubled by roaring streams;
 And from the headlong streams.
 The streams with softest sound are flowing,
 That the green valleys, and the streams and rocks,
 And make dear friendships with the streams and groves.
 And streams that murmur as they run,
 Our streams proclaim a welcoming;
 Of the deep rivers, and the lonely streams,
 In happier beauty; more pellucid streams,
 Where'er the streams a passage find;
 The headlong streams and fountains
 And streams, and bowers, and ladies fair,
 "He roved among the vales and streams,
 And pours forth streams more sweet than Castaly.
 That o'er the pavement of the surging streams
 Of lawless will, unlooked-for streams of good,
 Be turned; and streams of truth dried up, even at their source!
 Streams on the walls, and torrent-foam
 On rampart, and the banks of all her streams.
 Free were the streams and green the bowers;
 Of midnight,—cities, plains, forests, and mighty streams.
 With ambient streams more pure and bright
 To humbler streams, and greener bowers.

Streams—continued.

Even when a child, the Streams—unheard, unseen ;
For Thou, upon a hundred streams,
And streams unknown, hills yet unseen,
Whistling to clouds and sky-born streams, that shine . . .
And in far-stretching vales, whose streams
Of Streams to Nature's love, where'er they flow ;
Of streams inaudible by day ;
Heard near fresh streams ; and thousands, who rejoice
Forthwith that ancient Voice which Streams can hear
The aspiring Mountains and the winding Streams,
Tremble on dancing waves and rippling streams . . .
Of sunset ever there, albeit streams
Then laugh, ye innocent Vales ! ye Streams, sweep on,
And lofty springs give birth to lowly streams . . .
Among the mazy streams that backward went,
Streams that reflect the poetry of things !
The unremitting voice of nightly streams . . .
Lo ! Streams that April could not check
And when the sun first dawned upon the streams,
But when the ice our streams did fetter,
A mighty union of streams !
—Mid the dark steeps repose the shadowy streams,
The mountain streams their rising song suspend ;
—Thy fragrant gales and lute-resounding streams,
Her quiet streams, and hills of downy green,
Wide o'er the Alps a hundred streams unfold,
Unnumber'd streams with hollow roar profound,
Flings o'er the desert blood-red streams of fire . . .
In languid streams through every thrilling vein ;
We scampered homewards. Oh, ye rocks and streams,
Such sights before, among the shining streams
Of calmer lakes and louder streams ; and you,
Murmured the sister streams of Life and Death,
With its dumb catacaets and streams of ice,
The widely parted hours ; the noise of streams,
Think, how the everlasting streams and woods,
Immutable, and everflowing streams,
The heart with firmer grasp ! Your swoons and streams
And o'er the brawling beds of unbridged streams,
Birds, running streams, and hills so beautiful . . .
Mounted the roar of waters, torrents, streams
Their modulation with these vocal streams—
They call upon the hills and streams to mourn,
Clouds, mists, streams, watery rocks and emerald
turf,
Out of an instrument ; and while the streams
The streams far distant of your native glen ;
With the loud streams : and often, at the hour
And streams, whose murmur fills this hollow vale,
Soundless, with all its streams. The bird of dawn
Among the mazy streams that backward went,

Street. At the corner of Wund Street, when daylight appears,
In the street that from Oxford hath borrowed its name,
Down the long street, rich goblets filled with wine
The stream-like windings of that glorious street—
Through busiest street and loneliest glen
And wanderers of the street, to whom is dealt
In Brug's town is many a street
Mountain, and moor, and crowded street, where lie
And transport finds in every street a vent,
In marshalled thousands, darkening street and moor
And crowded street resound with ballad strains,
'Mong Christian folk, a street where Jews might be,
And through this street who list might ride and
wend ;
In the Jews' street, and there he last was seen . . .
From street to street with loose and careless mood.
With children gathered round ; another street
In public room or private, park or street,
To executions, to a street on fire,
Their May-bush, and along the street in flocks
And through a rainbow-arch that spanned the street,
Street-disturbing. Fuxced from the street-disturbing
newsman's horn,
Streets. Beat round to clear the streets of want and pain,
In the open streets, and let him think he sees,
Hurrying the busy streets along ?
As if the streets were consecrated ground,
The streets and quays are thronged, but why disown
These crowded streets resound no plaintive ditty :—
Yet he watches the clouds that pass over the streets ;
They hunt through the streets with deliberate
tread,
With books, or while he ranged the crowded streets

Streets—continued.

Gowns grave, or gaudy, doctors, students, streets,
Drifted about along the streets and walks,
From the assembly ; through a length of streets,
Her endless streets, a transient visitant ;
Some half-frequented scene, where wider streets . . .
How oft, amid those overflowing streets,
Moonlight and stars, and empty streets, and sounds
Of houses, pavement, streets, of men and things,—
Thaan for the humble brook-stalls in the streets,
The streets were still ; not so those long Arcades ;
Of the gross fictitious chanted in the streets . . .
Once more parading through her crowded streets
His lullaby. From crowded streets remote, Strength. Hope, strength, and courage, social suffering brings,
With strength did memory return ; and, thence . . .
Wrapped in our clanks, and, with recruited strength,
Of me, or of my strength—come, let me feel . . .
I feel my strength returning. The bequest . . .
Proceed alone. It shall be so ; for strength . . .
The giant's strength ; and, at the voice of Justice,
Had strength to teach ;—and therefore gratitude . . .
No more shall he complain of wasted strength,
Oh that I had but strength to reach the place !
Without the strength to rise. Well, well, he lives,
But had he strength to walk ? I could have borne him
Grew, by strength the gift of love,
The nobles leagued their strength . . .
Down would he sit ; and without strength or power
Such strength, a dignity so fair :
Of an unusual strength : his mind was keen, . . .
As soon as he had armed himself with strength . . .
There is a comfort in the strength of love ;
Of an unusual strength. Among the rocks
The Rivulet, delighting in its strength, . . .
Her bulwark and her tower of strength !
Endurance, foresight, strength, and skill ;
To give me human strength, by apt admonishment.
Hath he, a Child of strength and state !
Some ground out mine ; and, strang her strength
above,
Than strength of nerve and sinew, or the sway
With rolling years thy strength increased ;
And strength to persevere.
To keep, so high in air, its strength and grace :
And more than common strength and skill
And wondrous length and strength of arm :
By strength of prowess or of wit :
And all the oppressed, who wanted strength,
A strength unthought of heretofore !
That paints, by strength of sorrow,
The unconquerable strength of love ;
For manhood to enjoy his strength ;
Those titles vanish, and that strength decay ;
Strength in the brave, and Power, and Deity ;
In splendour : what strength was, that would not bend
Instead of gathering strength, must droop and pine ;
And tremble, seeing whence proceeds the strength
That he has power to inflict what we lack strength to bear.
Her arts, her strength, her iron, and her gold.
Shall show her clothed with strength and skill
And strength of love our souls shall elevate :
Where once together, in his day of strength, . . .
Racked on the surge, there tried his spirit's strength
With magnitude and strength fit to uphold
Which whose'er approached of strength was shunn,
All other strength the weakest may withstand,
With Strength, her venturous brother ;
Receiving, willingly or not, fresh strength . . .
In that they very strength must lie . . .
Such strength that Earldom held of yore ;
How oft has strength, the strength of heaven,
And strength of Reason ; held above
Gathers unblighted strength from hour to hour.
To baffle all that may her strength impair ;
Of beamy lustre from a tower of strength ;
Ocean has proved its strength, and of its grace
Speak Thou, whose massy strength and stature score . . .
The strength of backward-looking thoughts is scored . . .
There's weakness, and strength both redundant
and vain ;
Such strength as, if ever affliction and pain
Of health, strength, friends, and kindred, see !
—Come hither in thy hour of strength ;
And gave that strength of feeling, great . . .
Among a people famed for strength of mind,
Lie in forbearance, strength in standing still ?
Where strength has been the Builder's only care ;
Would their lost strength restore and freshen the pale cheek ?
Strength in what remains behind ;
Craz'd by the strength of hope at morn he eyes
For ever, fast as they of strength become . . .

Strengthen—continued.

A feeling of their strength. The naked trees,
 "O son, my strength, my power! who dost despise
 A Nation's strength that will not perish
 Once more made trial of her strength, nor lacked Conquered and conqueror. Thus the pride of strength,
 Of vigorous hunger—hence corporeal strength
 As natural beings in the strength of Nature.
 Strength came where weakness was not known to be,
 His being armed with strength that cannot fail.
 Preyed on my strength, and stopped the quiet
 stream
 What love of nature, what original strength
 With us thy pleasure; thy returning strength,
 And all the strength and plumage of thy youth,
 On every side, in prime of youthful strength,
 "I recognise thy glory:" in such strength
 That flowed awhile with unabating strength,
 To try her strength among harmonious words;
 Such is the strength and glory of our youth!
 Trying their strength, enforced him to start up,
 Britain put forth her freeborn strength in league,
 If new strength he not given nor old restored,
 All powers of swiftness, subtlety, and strength
 Matured, and in the summer of their strength,
 From all the sources of her former strength;
 When thou wert in thy strength! Nor this through stroke
 Such strength in me as often held my mind
 Of feeling and diversity of strength
 Are sister horns that constitute her strength.
 And intellectual strength so rare a boon—

 Possessed of health, and strength, and peace of mind;
 Beauty, or strength! Such privilege is theirs,
 (Such strength of vision to the shepherd's eye
 Surpassed in strength, I heard of danger, met
 His strength, and had his triumph and his joy,
 A calmness that betokens strength to bear Strength. And God will strengthen thee: amid all fear
 May learn, if judgment strengthen with his growth,
 And strengthen love, rejoicing secretly
 Strengthened. Came strengthened with a superadded soul,
 Strengthened and braced, by breathing in content
 When, strengthened, yet not dazzled, by the might Strengtheners. Be these the daily strengtheners of their minds;
 Strengthening. See Ever-strengthening, Soul-strengthening.
 Haunts of a strengthening amity
 Their arms still strengthening with the strengthen-

 To strengthening love for things that we have seen;
 The illusion strengthening as he gazed, he felt Strengtheners. The faith Heaven strengthens where he moulds the Creed.
 Strenuous. That strenuous action follow both,
 Yet strenuous was the infant Age:
 The strenuous Animal hath clomb
 Still to be strenuous for the bright reward,
 And, strenuous to protect from lawless harms
 That scraped the chords with strenuous hand!
 Of strenuous idleness;
 Spent in a round of strenuous idleness—
 Grave doctors strenuous for the mother-church,
 Of strenuous champions, in scholastic arts,
 Wanting all relish for her strenuous mind,

Stress—continued.

The wealthy, the luxurious, by the stress . . .
 Stretch. Attend, at every stretch, his headlong fall.
 Stretch o'er the pictured mirror broad and blue,
 The rocks rise naked as a wall, or stretch
 Where, if a famishing man stretch forth his hand,
 To stretch her arms, and dim the gladsome light
 Might stretch beyond the measure of one moon.
 "If the sun be shining hot, do but stretch thy woollen chain,
 To see thy arch thus stretch and bead,
 Full often make you stretch and strain,
 But the horses stretch and pull;
 (That stretch a thousand thousand sails)
 More urgent called, will stretch his wings at large,
 Entanglings of the brain; though shadows stretch
 Here stretch thy body at full length;
 Stretch, o'er their pictured mirror, broad and blue,
 Behind me did they stretch in solemn train,
 Spirits upon the stretch, and here and there
 Upon the stretch, when winds are blowing fair:
 With those that stretch the neck and strain the eyes.
 Stretch from the western marge of Thurston-mere,
 Of amity, whose living threads should stretch
 To stretch his limbs, bemocking, as might seem,
 Stretched. See Far-stretched, Outstretched, Stretched.
 A fence far stretched into the shallow lake,
 When school-boys stretched their length upon the green;
 Stretched at his feet, with steadfast upward eye,
 Far stretched beneath the many-tinted hills,
 Save cornfields stretched and stretching without bound;
 Stretched on the ground, began a piteous tale;
 His burning eyelids stretched and stiff as lead;
 Life stretched before me smooth as some broad way
 an old Man lying stretched upon the ground—
 Lay stretched at ease; but, passing by the place
 And then he stretched his arms, how wild!
 Sate with a fettered sleep before him stretched
 They stretched in never-ending line
 Advancing, forth she stretched her hand
 The dogs are stretched among the mountain fern.
 Upon his side the Hart was lying stretched:
 With breathless nostrils stretched above the spring.
 Main ocean, breaking audibly, and stretched
 With legs stretched out and stiff he lay:
 And stretched beneath the furze he sees
 Stretched on the block the glittering axe recoils;
 No vapour stretched its wings; no cloud
 Earth stretched below, heaven in our neighbourhood.
 Stretched far as earth might own a single lord;
 Among the thick weeds, stretched alone;
 Stretched, herdsman-like, as if to bask
 Stretched in the sunny light of victory bask
 Devoutly stretched upon their chancel floors.
 With hands stretched forth in mollified disdain,
 An Eagle with stretched wings, but beamless eye—
 A plain below stretched seaward, while, despoiled
 Stretched on the dying Mother's lap, lies dead Stretched forth with trembling hope?—In every realm,
 Stretched out for my acceptance,—but Death came.
 Now stretched beneath his grass-green mound
 Stretch'd on the scented mountain's purple side.
 Stretched forth his little arms and smil'd,
 I saw before me stretched a boundless plain
 Stretched forth the shell, so beautiful in shape,
 Stretched under wayside hedge-rows, ballad tunes,
 Of Chamouny stretched far below, and soon
 At last we stretched our weary limbs for sleep,
 Stretched and still stretching far and wide, exalt
 Ascending, overlooked them both, far stretched;
 Far, far beyond, the solid vapours stretched,
 As if on wings, and saw beneath me stretched —In that fair clime, the lonely herdsman, stretched Stretched upon fragrant heath, and lulled by sound
 Attain a point that showed the valley—stretched Stretched overhead, and at my pensive feet
 Insidiously stretched out its lassy length,
 Stretched on his Bier—that mazy timber wain;
 Stretched on the grass, or seated in the shade,
 Of darkness, stretched o'er guilty Europe, makes
 The outcry of his son: he stretched his staff

 Stretches. Crouches, stretches, paws, and darts!
 As stretches a blue bar of solid cloud
 That landward stretches from the sea,
 From the brink her paws she stretches,
 Through bare enclosures stretches, 'till its line
 Oft stretches toward me, like a long straight path
 Stretching. See Far-stretching.
 Dark with bat-haunted ashes stretching broad,
 Save cornfields stretched and stretching without bound;
 But standing, walking, stretching forth his arms,
 Like a vast river, stretching in the sun.
 That, stretching far among the Alps, assumed

Above, behold, far stretching and before ;
Stretch and still stretching far and wide, exalt
His shadow stretching towards Syracuse,
A broad oak, stretching forth its leafy arms
That, stratching boldly from the mountain side, Stretch. See Stretched.
Then, stretch at ease in some sequestered cave,
Sirew. And gives, where woods the chequered upland strew,
And without wrong are cropped the marble tomb to strew.
Some bird (like our own honoured redbreast) may strew
A most unfimeg grave to strew,
While your leaves I behold and the brooks they will strew,
Fresh water rushes strew the verdant floor ;
And gives, where woods the chequer'd upland
strew,
Quits, growling, the white bones that strew his lair ;
Strowed. Flowers strowed the ground ; the nuptial feast
Strow'st. Thou strow'st temptation o'er the path Strow'ing. With chips is the carpenter strow'ing his floor ?
With the green bottom strow'ing o'er the wave ;
Strowing the turf's green slope. A diamond light
Strowing in peace life's humblest ground with herbs, Strown. See Strawn.
And cracked the branches, and strown them about ;
And left as if by earthquake strown,
Which, strown with snow smooth as the sky can shed,
On ground yet strown with their last battle's wreck ;
Strown with grey rocks, and on the horizon's verge,
Brighter than eastern skies at daybreak strowa
Strown far and wide. Think, proud Philosopher !
Strown on the frozen snow. And when the spring
Of health-plant, under and above him strown,
A dismal prospect yields the wild shore strown
Had marked the line, and strowa its surface o'er Strows. Strows twenty acres of good meadow-ground
Stricken. See Awe-stricken, Confusion-stricken, Conscience-stricken, Fancy-stricken,
Frenzy-stricken, Heart-stricken, Planet-stricken, Shame-stricken, Sorrow-stricken,
Tempest-stricken.
Been stricken by a twofold stroke ;
Poet ! that, stricken as both are by years,
Stricken by this ill assurance,
Behold ! she said, " a stricken Hind
Both stricken, as she entered or withdrew,
Unrecognised ; but, stricken by the sight,
This happy Land was stricken to the heart !
We should recoil, stricken with sorrow and shame,
Is stricken in the moment when her throes
Strict. Duty, like a strict preceptor,
Loth to rule by strict command ;
Long, strict, and tender was the embrace he gave,
Strict passage, through which sighs are brought,
Of strict obedience, serve the Almighty Lord ;
Are strict observers ; and not negligent.
To the strict labours of the merchant's desk
From strict analogies by thought supplied
As is their wont, a pittance from strict time,
After strict question, left within my mind
Aad functio, or, through strict vicissitude
For by superior egeries ; more strict
Aad a strict love of fellowship, combined.
By strict necessity, along the path
Stricter. More promptly rises, walks with stricter head, Strictest. In ceaseless pains—and strictest parsimony
Strictliest. The will to reason's law, can strictliest live
Strictly. But thee I now would serve more strictly, if I may.
Subservient strictly to external things
Her mind she strictly tutored to find peace
Mirrored, yet not too strictly, may refine Strictness. With strictness scarcely known on English ground.
Strictures. In grisly folds and strictures serpentine ;
Strid. The striding-place is called THE STRID,
Shall bound across THE STRID ?
Stride. The imperial Stature, the colossal stride,
Through the rough cove wheel thou with hasty stride ;
I had been travelling : this a stride at once
With shield and stone-axe, stride across the wold ;
Strides. Science advances with gigantic strides ; Striding. Striding with shattered crests his eye athwart.
Striding, with shattered crests, the eye athwart ?
Striding along as if o'er tasked by Time,
With prospect underneath of Striding edge,
Striding-piece. The striding-piece is called THE STRID,

Strife. See Party-strife.

Powers that support an unremitting strife
No strife disturbs his sister's breast ;
But; at the touch of wrong, without a strife
Twins had they been in pleasure ; after strife
Who, loving most, should wiseliest love, their only strife.
Rock the cradle of joy, smooth the death-bed of strife.
Why should we dwell in strife ?
He thinks not of his long, long, strife ;—
Of thoughts with better thoughts at strife,
Regard not her :—oh, better wroag and strife
The two that were at strife are blended,
Slaves of folly, love, or strife—
No fears to beat away—no strife to heal—
And thoughts with things at strife ;
Began the pencil's strife,
Tempered into rapturous strife.
No disproportion in her soul, no strife ;
Great is the glory, for the strife is hard !
Produced as lonely Nature or the strife
While thus illumined, tells of painful strife
With rival earnestness ; far other strife
Not like an outcast with himself at strife ;
A hondage sweetly brooked, a strife
And quieted in character—the strife,
With them no strife can last ; they live
The strife of happiness and pain,
What strife of colour, shape and sound
For ever with yourselves at strife ;
Were with herself at strife, would take your stand,
We know the arduous strife, the eternal laws
There are who cannot languish in this strife,
With that great Leader vies, who, sick of strife
" Finish the strife by deadliest victory ! "
Abruptly paused the strife ;—the field throughout
Expressive signals of a glorious strife,
Not only from the dreary strife
Things in their very essences at strife,
In silence watched the gentle strife
And sunshine to a dangerous strife ;
Of strife and factions desperate ;
And, under cover of this woeful strife,
Of truths that soften hatred, temper strife.
By sound, or ghost of sound, in mazy strife ;
Extracts from Nature's elemental strife ;
That hung between two callings. May no strife
And own that Art triumphant over strife
Books ! 'tis a dull and cadless strife :
A foolish strife ; they see
And calm'st the weary strife of frail humanity !
Whose powers shed round him in the common strife.
And jealousy, and quivering strife,
Yet, spite of all this eager strife,
Presigned by that dread strife
That civic strife can turn the happiest hearth
And being, to preclude or quell the strife.
For—save the calm repentance sheds o'er strife
By noise and strife, and questions wearisome,
And hope and fear mix not in further strife.
Elysian quiet, without, toil or strife ;
Which checked discussion ere it warmed to strife ;
To dialogues of business, love, or strife ;
Thus blindly with thy blessedness at strife ?
Yet more ; the tyrant Genius, still at strife
If e'er these precepts quell'd the passions' strife,
When first, above the yell of bigot strife,
That the shield bore, so glorious was the strife ;
In strife too humble to be named in verse :
And all the strife of singularity,
Were agitated ; and commotions, strife
Uppermost in the midst of fercest strife.
That this particular strife had wanted power
Of the two spirits then at strife remained
Amid the turns and counterturns, the strife
Shy, and unpractised in the strife of phrase ;
So characterized did I maintain a strife
Of strife and folly, though it be a treat
But for the impertinent and ceaseless strife
In strife, in tribulation ; and ordain'd,
And while the uproar of that desperate strife
Daily, its bowling-green with harmless strife
The internal pangs, are ready ; the dread strife
For strife and ferment in the minds of men ;
Shall it endure ?—Shall enmity and strife,
Flattery and double-dealing, strife and wrong,
Strife! And sick at heart of strife! Christendom, Strifes. Great God ! by whom the strifes of men are weighed
Our tumults appeased, and our strifes passed away !
The limbs of the great world ; its eager strifes Strife. Something I strike upon which turns my mind
Betrayed, in darkness ! Here to strike the blow—
Seems like a note of joy to strike,—
Strike pleasure dead,
These times strike monied worldlings with dismay :

Strike—continued.

Strike audibly the noblest of your lyres,
That heresies should strike (if truth be scanned)
And strike with reverence. The Monarch leans
Friends strike at friends—the flying shall pursue—
Unsheathed in wrath to strike the offender's head,
Strike not from Law's firm hand that awful rod,
Begin to strike him with a fire-like heat,
A grateful coolness fell, that seemed to strike
Strike the deserted to the heart; I speak
What terror doth it strike into the mind
Are leagued to strike dismay; but outstretched hand
Should the sun strike her, and the impartial breeze Strikes. And trepidation strikes the blackened mountain-caves.
—the clock strikes three—a dismal knell!
Strikes a solitary sound.
Strikes upon his lifted face,
Wherever strikes the sun's glad ray;
Strikes through the Traveller's frame with deadlier
chill,
She strikes upon him with the heat
Amazement strikes the crowd; while many turn
Whatever it strikes with gem-like hues!
Nor shout, nor whistle strikes his ear!
Thy every-day appearance, as it strikes—
Teading to patience when affliction strikes;
Strikes. Thou striketh—absence periseth,
Striking. See Horror-striking, Panic-striking.
The mimic notes, striking upon his ear
Striking through English breasts the anarchy
By striking out a solitary spark,
That follows—striking on some kindred chord
String. With other names, an endless string;
He, who in concert with an earthly string
Of Liberty, and smote the plausive string
Harp! couldst thou venture, on thy boldest string,
Is the string touched in prelude to a lay
Can string you names of districts, cities, towns,
Face after face; the string of dazzling wares,
Smooth task, with his compared, whose mind could string,
Stringed. She bears the stringed lute of old romance,
Stringed like a poor man's heifer at its feed,
Stringent. Stringent as flesh can tolerate and live;
Strings. Needles for strings in apt gradation!
Around its polished strings;
Rested a golden harp,—he touched the strings;
From its own country, and forgave the strings,
Nor check, the music of the strings;
To which, with no reluctant strings,
Called the submissive strings to wake
Swept like a breeze the conscious strings,
To his grave touch with no unready strings,
The lore of Atlas, to resounding strings,
Pulling the strings of his boxed rare-show;
In scanty strings, had tempted to o'erleap
Upon a broad leaf carried, choicest strings
Strip. Back to our post, and strip the Scottish Foray
Or strip the bough whose mellow fruit bestrews
Could strip, for aught the prospect yields
Harass the mind and strip from off the bowers
Her trappings here, should strip them off abashed
Take the live herbage from the mead, and strip
Striped. See Three-striped.
With haycocks studded, striped with yellowing
grain—
Stripes. And forced unworthy stripes to bear,
Stripling. I could have quelled the Cowards, but this Stripling
And though of unripe years, a stripling only,
His stripling prime. A town of small repute,
That instant brought two stripling bees
This Stripling, sportive, gay, and bold,
The Stripling seeks the tented field;
Where silver Isis leads my stripling feet;
(Not three weeks past the Stripling died,)
The love-sick Stripling fancifully sighs
"Therè!" said a Stripling, pointing with meet pride
Migration strange for a stripling of the hills,
Bouncing before me, yet a stripling youth—
A stripling, scarcely of the household then Stripling's. Nor any half so sure. This Stripling's mind
Of human life: a Stripling's graces blow, Whizzed from the Stripling's arm! If touched by him,
A stripling's years may for his faults atone,
Striplings. Ye Striplings, light of heart and gay,
Ten hardy Striplings, all in bright attire,
Stripped. See Half-striped, Self-striped.
And stripped of power! me, feeble, destitute,
Not stripped, nor voiceless in the mirrors,
The storm has stripped her of her leaves;
Is stripped; the ravage hath spread wide
That stripped of arms I to my end am brought Stripped of his voice and left in dimple down
Worn out in greatness, stripped of novelty,

Stripped—continued.

Stripped as I am of all the golden fruit
Stripped of their leaves and twigs by hoary age,
Strip. And social Justice, stript of reverence
Of History, stript naked as a rock
Strip is the haughty one of pride,
Strip of its frightful powers by slow decay,
Strip of their harmonising soul, the life Strive. His anguish, with his heart he ceased to strive;
So let us strive to live, and to our Spirits will be given
To strive with such a torrent; when he died,
The owls in tuneful concert strive;
'Tis vain to strive for mastery.
With heavy tufts of moss that strive
Where winds and waters cease to strive—
Strive, and not vainly strive, to rove
Whether among the winds we strive,
" While yet ye may find mercy;—strive
And, at one moment, in one rapture, strive
In friendship—strive—for his sake go—
The Banner strive thou to regain;
The root sincere, the branches hold to strive
Do Thou, in truth a second Mother, strive
And strive to fathom the mysterious laws
With shadows flung from leaves—to strive
Flowers are there many that delight to strive
What need is there against the truth to strive?
Thou against Time so feelingly dost strive.
Who, when such good can be obtained, would strive
I did not strive to follow you.
If Stephen's distanced, onward see him strive Striven. With which she may have striven!
When I with these untoward thoughts had striven,
Thou fought'st against him; but hast vainly striven:
Have striven by purity to gain
Due homage; nor shall fruitlessly have striven,
Where haughty Force had striven in vain;
That even bad men had vainly striven
Had for the common safety striven in vain,
Strives. Till higher mounted, strives in vain to cheer
Which ever strives in vain itself to satisfy,
" Thus strives a grateful Country to display
Dear to the saints, strives earnestly to eject
And strives the towers to number, that recline
Air slumbers—wave with wave no longer strives,
Of Truth and Beauty, strives to imitate,
The inextinguishable Spirit strives.
And fondly strives her struggling friend to save.
Her seat scarce left, she strives, alas! in vain,
Behind his sail the peasant strives to shun
While strives a secret Power to hush the crowd,
Devoted, strives in vain her vast desires to fill;
Strives, from that height, with one and yet one more
For him, who, seeking faith by virtue, strives Striving. Peaceful striving, gentle play
Is striving stoutly as he may;
Striving in peace each other to outshine.
The antics striving to outstrip each other,
Striving to hide, what nought could heal, the wounds
Striving to entertain the lonely hours
Struds. And lustily along the bay she strode,
The Host that followed Urien as he strode
Strode after me. With trembling oars I turned,
Stroke. See Thunder-stroke.
Till one was found by stroke of violence dead,
But every night at the first stroke of twelve
But now it mocks my steps; its fitful stroke
No, not by stroke of arm. But learn the process:
With many a wanton stroke
" 'Tis on the stroke—" He must be near,"
The clock is on the stroke of one;
And struck him with a mighty stroke,
Farbear to covet a Repeater's stroke,
" O wretched loss—untimely stroke!
Been stricken by a twofold stroke!
Then let him hew with patient stroke
Stroke merciful and welcome would that be
Towers, temples, fall by stroke of thunder;
That sullen stroke pronounced farewell
By unregarded age from stroke
To twinkle after that dull stroke of thine,
And ready for the gentlest stroke of death,
Th' unwearied glance of woodman's echo'd stroke;
Much wondering what sad stroke of crazing Care
And, as I rose upon the stroke, my boat
A punctual follower on the stroke of nine,
When thou wert in thy strength! Nor this through stroke
With her first growths, detaching by the stroke
Observed the liberating stroke—and blessed.
Yet not with stroke so sudden as refused
Itself had been unlocked-for; oh! dire stroke
Stroked. Softly he stroked the child, who lay outstretched

Strokes. Twelve strokes that clock would have been telling
 And where'er their strokes alighted,
 Of the church clock telling the hours with strokes

Stroll. We'll stroll into the wood; lean on my arm.
 I will stroll on; you follow when 'tis done.

Strolled. One morn we strolled on our dry walk,
 Played with our time; and, as we strolled along,
 Of two delightful hours we strolled along
 And strolled into her garden. It appeared

Strollers. Or Strollers are they, furnished to enact Strolling. May sometimes greet the strolling minstrel's harp,
 Awed have I been by strolling Bedlamites;
Strong. Strong flakes of radiance on the tremulous stream:
 Strong terror checks the female peasant's sighs,
 "Aod off I thought (my fancy was so strong)
 I honour him. (Strong feelings to his heart
 Strong to destroy, is also strong to heal—
 How wilt thou stand alone? Is he not strong?
 More than we see, or whence this strong aversion?
 What strong temptations press upon the Poor.
 Else could so strong a mind have ever known
 The feeble and the strong. She needs not here
 Strong to alertum, strong also to build up.
 Her very heart, her grief grew strong;
 And carols loud and strong.
 Thy limbs, are they not strong? And beautiful thou art:
 On her pinions swift and strong?
 Strong as an Eagle with my charge I guided round and round
 And his own mind did like a tempest strong
 Like branches when strong winds the trees annoy.
 That, nymph-like, she is fleet and strong,
 And hopes are strong and will prevail.
 For strong and without pain I lay,
 And what, through strong compunction for the past,
 These fourteen years, by strong indentures:
 An old man, stout of heart, and strong of limb.
 Strong hold on his affections, were to him
 I still am strong and hale,—do thou thy part;
 With such a strong devotion, that your heart
 Shine hot, or wind blows troublesome and strong;
 The Flood was tyrannous and strong;
 Wise, foolish, weak, or strong;
 For thy song, Lark, is strong;
 With a soul as strong as a mountain river
 That prompts such work, a Spirit strong,
 Though strong, is, in the main, a joyless tie
 He was patient, they were strong.
 Is known, and by as strong a spell
 Was growing inwardly more strong;
 And now the same strong voice more near
 Or is it rather that Conceit rapacious is and strong,
 "Alas! when evil men are strong
 I said, when evil men are strong,
 Some ground not mine; and, strong her strength
 above,
 "And Thou, though strong in love, art all too weak
 Within the mind strong fancies work,
 His strong hand on the wind, if it were bent
 Of warblers in full concert strong
 What spell so strong as guilty Fear!
 You need a strong and stormy gale
 By strong compunction and remorse.
 When thankfulness of heart is strong and deep!
 Yes! hope may with my strong desire keep pace,
 Thence has it, with the Son, so strong a hold.
 What strong allurements draws, what spirit guides, Speak, passing winds; ye turrents, with your strong
 Forgive me if the phrase be strong;—
 Thus nothing here provokes the strong
 For Policy was then too strong—
 Broke from the Matron's strong black eye—
 And rivers large and strong:
 Beneficent as strong;
 Of Nations wanting virtue to be strong
 A few strong instincts and a few plain rules,
 Like the strong wind, or sleeping like the wind
 That host, as huge and strong as e'er defied
 Of the round world, and built, by laws as strong,
 Wandering, he haunts, at fancy's strong command,
 My heart, and filled that heart with conflict strong.
 God reigns above, and Spirits strong
 Fate, fortune, sweep strong powers away,
 And superstitious fancies strong,
 Had blindly grasped in that strong trance,
 Which he had grasped in that strong trance;
 Be strong;—be worthy of the grace
 Eyes dark and strong; and on his head
 A strong Hold on the banks of Tees;
 To vacancy, and horror strong:
 Exciting self-suspicion strong;
 Whose self-reproaches are too strong!"
 Was to the harp a strong command,

Strong—continued.
 He, whose strong arm the Orient could not check,
 Perplex the wise, the strong to overthrow;
 Of solitude, with love of science strong,
 Scorning that world whose blindness makes her strong?
 With equal wrath the steps of strong and weak)
 Calm as an under-current, strong to draw
 Sharing the strong emotion of the crowd,
 Might here be moved, till Fancy grows so strong,
 The strong were merciless, without hope the weak;
 Bold words affirmed, in days when faith was strong
 Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood,
 Or strong compunction in me wrought,
 And the most ancient heavens, through Thee, are fresh and strong.
 That the river was strong, and the rocks were steep?
 Is seized with strong incitement to push forth
 And they like Demi-gods are strong
 Be strong in faith, bid anxious thoughts lie still;
 Strong by her charters, free because imbound,
 And thy grieved Spirit brighten strong in faith.
 Strong as could then be borne. A Master meek
 Thus in the chosen spot a tie so strong
 Driven by strong winds at play among the clouds.
 The Emperor sent a pledge as strong
 And he was strong to follow in the steps
 To public notice, with reluctance strong,
 However proud and strong.
 And I again am strong:
 And who but feels a power of strong controul,
 Strong poison not a form of steel can brave
 Clapp'd her strong wings, and sought the cheerful isle,
 With passion for Æneas, such strong love
 By the strong mind, and tales of warlike feats,
 In these night wanderings, that a strong desire
 True symbol of hope's foolishness, whose strong
 And strong hook-mindedness; and over all
 Were, in the main, of mood less tender; strong,
 Me hath such strong enrancement overcome,
 Such was she—not from faculties more strong
 And yet a power is on me, and a strong
 Strong in herself and in beatitude
 As if to make the strong wind visible,
 Less strong of wonder and obscure delight.
 Almost as deeply seated and as strong
 Behold, turned upwards, a face hard and strong
 In no discordant opposition, strong
 With strong sensations teeming as it did
 And the strong hand of outward violence
 Maimed, spiritless; and, in their weakness strong,
 Should see the people having a strong hand
 On a strong river boldly hath been launched;
 Who in attack or in defence were strong
 Preclude conviction, that a spirit strong
 Strong and perturbed, not doubting at that time
 By a strong levy of humanity
 Of this new enemy. Tyrants, strong before
 In wicked pleas, were strong as demons now;
 To yield myself to Nature, when that strong
 Resistance strong as heretofore, I thought
 Upon our side, us who were strong in love!
 Is lost in light, the weak in the more strong.
 Or, seeing, had forgotten! A strong shock
 This was the crisis of that strong disease,
 Thine be such converse strong and sanative,
 Although a strong infection of the age,
 By the strong wind. When, in the blessed hours
 Attends us, if but once we have been strong.
 In a strong wind, some working of the spirit,
 There are who think that strong affection, love
 Convictions still more strong than heretofore,
 The strong hand of her purity; and still Obedient to the strong creative power
 By the strong sunbeams smitten. Like a mast
 Impulse and motive to that strong discourse,
 Predominate; whose strong effects are such
 The tiny creatures strong by social league;
 When winds are blowing strong. The traveller
 slaked
 And undisguised, and strong and serious thought;
 Strong and unbounded to embrace, and firm
 Of their most dreaded foe, the strong South-west
 "Such was that strong concussion; but the Man,
 How hopelessly; but innocence is strong,
 In silent pools, now in strong eddies chained;
 For me, the emotion scarcely was less strong
 There blossoms, strong in health, and will be soon
 A generous spirit, and a body strong
 Her strong knee-timbers, and the mast that bears
 The rudiments of war; ten—hardy, strong,
 And strong in hatred of idolatry."
 Strong to subvert our noxious qualities:
 Through a strong net, and mounts upon the wind,
 And the strong wind have revered.
 Discoursing on remote imaginations, strong

Strong-abodes. Our strong-abodes and castles see

Strong-bullit. A mighty evil for a strong-built mind!

Stronger. Its darkening boughs and leaves in stronger lines; Did not admit of stronger evidence; When ye were gone my limbs were stronger; With stronger wing, more clearly to discern Still stronger, bends him to his course; By chain yet stronger must the Soul he tied; Enclosed when he was stronger; And, fronting the bright west in stronger lines, Far stronger, now, grew the desire I felt; His helper and not theirs, laid stronger hold; More dignified, and stronger in himself;

Strongest. Are at work with the strongest; The solemn promise. Strongest sinews fail, Amid my strongest workings evermore; In spite of strongest disappointment, pleased. Must labour, whence the strongest are not free. And go to the grave, unthought of. Strongest minds

Strong-hold. Entrance I gained to that strong-hold. Strongly. Should beat too strongly, both may be betrayed. And, serving Truth, the heart more strongly beats

Strove. She strove, and not in vain, her head to rear; I strove to ease my mind, when our two Comrades, he strove to turn from me

Strown. See Strown. But all the steps and ground about were strown

Struck. See Awe-struck. Struck, and still struck again, the troubled horse; Struck the poor innocent. Pallid with dismay 'Tis but for a few days—a thought has struck me. It struck me at the time—yet I believe Struck upon my heart I know not how. I struck my flint, and built up a small fire The cold blast struck me. 'Twas a foolish question. He struck me; and that instant had I killed him, But that was a vain hope. You have struck home, A human voice distinct, struck on my ear. My conscience made me wish to be struck blind; The minister-clock has just struck two, That struck perchance the farthest cone And struck him with a mighty stroke, As Peter struck—and struck again.

Where he had struck the Ass's head; Of winds—though winds were silent—struck a deep Of victory, that struck through heart and reins Was on the wing; stooping, he struck with awe Which struck with terror friends and foes! Name that first struck by chance my startled ear! Have struck thy sides, too many ghastly decks While he struck his desolate harp without hopes or aims.

I struck, and with a single blow Awe struck, the kneeling peasant scarce surveys; Upreared its head. I struck and struck again, That prove to what low depth had struck the roots, Would but have touched the judgment, struck more deep From these tall elms; the cottage-clock struck eight;

Structure. A structure stands, which two bare slopes enclose. The structure of her laden thigh, As this low structure, for the tasks of Spring Oh, had this vast theatric structure wound Man left this Structure to become Time's prey, A holy Structure to the Almighty's praise. A pious structure, fair to see, The flattered structure glistened, blazed, On a low structure of rude masonry

Lofty, but the unsubstantial structure melts. Of a dilapidated structure, once Fantastic pomp of structure without name, Is no mechanic structure, built by rule; In structure, framing, with the ascent of steps

Structure's. Of tide and tempest on the Structure's base, And flashing to that Structure's topmost height, Structures. The sacred Structures for less doubtful gains

Structures like these the excited spirit mainly One of those petty structures. "His it must be!" What in those holy structures ye possess These structures rose, commingling old and young,

Struggle. O weary struggle! silent years Were but the bitter struggle past. Your feet must struggle; in such hold ascent Who, while they struggle from the scourge to flee, Or struggle in the net-work of thy dreams! Sun, moon, and stars, all struggle in the toils To struggle through dark ways; and when a damp Angels and gods! We struggle with our fate, The last that dare to struggle with the Foe, The struggle, clap their wings for victory! To stir in useless struggle) hath relied The prayers, the contrite struggle, and the trust And painful struggle and deliverance—prayed Struggle with frosty air and winter snows; Graven on the tomb we struggle against Time, And still we struggle when a good man dies. To struggle, to be lost within himself To struggle in as sparcely would allow Yet cease I not to struggle, and aspire After long struggle, had escaped at last— Fret, burn, and struggle, and in soul am there;

Struggled. We toiled and struggled, hoping for a day Struggled with tears nor could its sorrow ease, I would so long have struggled with my Nature, Struggled with the flood in vain:

Each struggled, and each yielded as before Who paints how Britain struggled and prevailed Not vainly struggled in the might Who in these Wilds then struggled for command; E'er struggled with a heart so proud, And all who struggled with the Sea, The capital City; what was struggled for, Which they had struggled for: up mounted now, Through which I struggled, not without distress

Struggles. With a hard-hearted ignorance; your struggles And, in its struggles to get free, In painful struggles. Months each other chase, The toils and struggles of thy infant years! The shepherd struggles with them. Onward thence Out of her early struggles well inspired And, in her struggles, cast ashore; For self, and struggles with himself alone, With its own struggles, did I meditate Seeks for no trophies, struggles for no spoils Keen struggles, and black clouds of passion raised; And from the private struggles of mankind His struggles, his discomfitures deplore.

Struggling. as I was struggling on, by the light of the moon Thus Elidure, by words, relieved his struggling heart. Or awed he weeps, struggling to quell dismay, That, struggling through the western sky, have won She soared—and I awoke, struggling in vain to follow.

May Duty struggling with afflictions strange— Nor lead the thoughts, thus struggling used to stand The struggling heart, where be they now?— He, struggling in the net of pride, Struggling for liberty, while undismayed Struggling against the stream of destiny, The struggling Rill insensibly is grown Of heroes, fallen, or struggling to advance, And scourges England struggling to be free: Struggling for life, into its saving arms! And fondly strives her struggling friend to save. In nature's struggling frame, Instrument of struggling Nature And nations sink; or, struggling to be free, We shall behold the struggling Moon

Each grasps an oar, and struggling on they go— The pent-up air, struggling to free itself, All side by side, and struggling face to face, By struggling with the crowd for present ends. Of a ship struggling with a hideous storm) For sacrifice, and struggling with fond mirth Here, if need be, struggling with storms, and there Went struggling on through those calamitous years Struggling against it; with a soul perplexed, Struggling against the strange reverse with zeal That, in a struggling and distermped world, Struggling in vain with ruthless destiny." Struggling and bold, and shining from the west

Strung. See New-strung. Hath Nature strung your nerves to bear Strung on slender blades of grass; Struts. So struts your cock that now is crowing; Strutting. Big passions strutting on a petty stage; Stuart. The Stuart, landing to resume, by force stubble. And crisp with frost the stubble land.

Stubborn. The bosom-weight, your stubborn gift,
 Or stubborn spirit doomed to yell.
 To trace right courses for the stubborn blind,
 The stubborn spirit of rebellious man?
 Urged unmitigated the stubborn work,
Stuccoed. Mute fixture on a stuccoed wall;
Stuck. But faded, and stuck o'er with many a patch and shred.
 Or we're stuck fast for ever—passion, then,
 With leaves of laurel stuck about;
 With dull red stains discoloured, and stuck o'er
Stud. And with the courteous inn-keeper, whose stud
Studded. Studded with apples, a beautiful show!
 With haycocks studded, striped with yellowing
 grain—
 All studded round, as thick as chairs could stand,
Student. A careful student he had been
 A student clothed in gown and tasselled cap,
 A rigorous student. What a stormy course Student's. The student's bower for gold, some fears unnamed
Students. And students with their pensive citadels;
 Gowns grave, or gaudy, doctors, students, streets,
 With loyal students faithful to their books,
 Of gowned students, quitted hall and bower,
Studied. Which he, poor Child, had studied well;
 In studied symmetry, with interspace
 Studied alike in palace and in cot.
 See studied kindness flow with easy stream,
 Intensely studied with a painter's eye,
 By manners studied and elaborate;
 As studied first in our own hearts, and then
 And shady groves in studied contrast—each,
 But more was given; I studied as we ate
 Even by his studied depth of privacy
Studies. To sacred studies; and the Roman Shepherd
 Of our scholastic studies; could have wished
 Of college studies and their set rewards;
 Are these the studies that besem a prince?
Studious. Preferring studious leisure, I had chosen
 Your once sweet memory, studious walks and shades!
 A studious forehead to incline
 But studious only to remove from sight
 Studious regard with opportune delight,
 And Mina, nourished in the studious shade,
 Studious that He might not disdain the seat
 That Old Man, studious to expound
 And choice of studious friends had he Even so a thraldom, studious to expel
 Studious of that pure intercourse begun
 Thee Athens revered in the studious grove;
 Came studious Taste; and many a pensive stranger
 Citadels dear to studious privacy.
 One wooed the silent Art with studious pains:
 That once, while there he plied his studious work
 Drew Trurus from the depth of studious bowers,
 Enriched and beautified his studious mind:
 Or Fancy, disciplined by studious art,
 But Cytherea, studious to invent
 Blots out Sichesus, studious to remove
 Whose studious aspect should have bent me down
 Led in abstemiousness a studious life;
 Friendly to studious or to festive hours;
 Had fallen in presence of a studious friend,
 Of blessings, and most studious of our good,
 Where from their airy lodges studious lawyers
 For my instructor, studious more to see
 Observant, studious, thoughtful, and refreshed
 For studious fancy, his quick hand bestowed
 Ye would discover, then, a studious work
 Studious of mutual benefit; and he,
Studiously. Were skimmed, devoured, or studiously perused,
 Which Nature studiously employs to thwart
 That, studiously withdrawing from the eye
Study. For converse with God, sought through study and prayer.
 And study Trajan as by Pliny seen;
 A marvellous study of wild accident;
 To in-door study than was wise or well,
 By solitary study, to uphold
 Of study and hard thought; there, there, it is Yet independent study seemed a course
 In dreams, in study, and in ardent thought,
 And, having shown in study forward zeal,
 Whom, in their youth, sweet study has enthralled,
Stuff. A world of other stuff.
 The ancient thrones of Christendom are stuff
 And stuff at hand, plastic as they could wish—
 What stuff the Dwellers in a solitude,
 Turned inward,—to examine of what stuff
Stuffed. The presence even of a stuffed Owl for her
 Stuffed with the thorny substance of the past
 With empty actions and vain passions stuffed,
Stumbling. I led my horse, and, stumbling on, at length
Stump. "Down to the stump of yon old yew
 A stump of rotten wood.
 Their courtly figures, seated on the stump

Stumping. What thumping—stumping—overhead!
 And stumping on his arms. In sailor's garb
 Stumping upon a caec with which he smites, Stumps. "You see these lifeless stumps of aspen wood—
Stun. And louder torrents stun the noon-tide hill,
 Make merry, wives! ye little children, stun
Stung. See Heart-stung.
 At morn my sick heart hunger scarcely stung,
 (All hated him, and I was stung to madness)
 The Lover, thus bereft, stung with his loss,
 As if his heart by notes were stung
 But, more than all, his heart is stung
 From voices into zealous passion stung,
 Stung with sharp thoughts; and, ere the last
 Stung with remorse for broken vows;
 Till, by repentance stung, they fear to think;
 She hurns, she frets—by Juno's rancour stung;
 And stung with injury, at this ripper day,
 Was misery in remembrance; he was stung,
 Stung by his inward thoughts, and by the smiles
 Of wife and children stung to agony.
Stunned. We sojourn stunned by Ocean's ceaseless roar;
 With high and spacious rooms, deafened and stunned
Stuns. That stuns the tremulous cliffs of high Lodore;
 And insect buzz, that stuns the sultry woods,
Stupefied. Who, by the recent deluge stupefied,
Stupendous. Of toil stupendous, in a hallowed seat
 Of England's Church; stupendous mysteries!
 China's stupendous mound) by patient toil
 And, with a touch, shift the stupendous clouds
 Who seems, by these stupendous barriers cast
Stupor. This mortal stupor which is creeping over me, Sturdiness. Yet to their sturdiness 'tis owing Sturdy. Sturdy he seemed, though he was sad;
 He entered, by the sturdy oaks unfelt,
 He dealt a sturdy blow—
 The pale Recluse—"I praise to the sturdy plough,
 On sturdy horses graced with jingling bells,
Stygian. Upon those roseate lips, Stygian hue
Style. Yet, to relieve her heart, in friendly style
 An undistinguishable style appears
 That in our ancient uncouth country style
 Not negligent the style,—the matter?—good
 Flattery in Ancient Rome's pure-minded style:
 In just esteem, it rivals; though no style
 Thoughtful and sad, the "narrow house." No style
 To youthful Hooker, in familiar style
 Far as she may, primeval Nature's style
 Such have we, but unvaried in its style
 Of Pompey's pillar; that I gravely style
Styled. Whose brows, the day that she was styled
 So styled by those fierce Britons, pleased to see
 Thee have thy Votaries aptly styled,
 Might well be styled this noble body's HEAD;
 On the great Prophet, styled the Voice of One
 Why should not grave Philosophy be styled,
 Is styled, when most affectionately praised,
 Deservedly have styled.—From his abode
Subalpine. Subalpine vales, in quest of safe retreats
Subdue. To chasten and subdue. And I have felt
 A Genius dwells, that can subdue
 And, rising to repel or to subdue,
 Labour their proper greatness to subdue;
 Shed over it Thy grace, and thus subdue
 With his own mind, unable to subdue
 Such doom was hers; yet nothing could subdue
Subdued. When nature had subdued him to herself,
 By brave Corneus sided, he subdued,
 Subdued by breathless harmonies
 Even her own needle that subdued
 Come with each anxious hope subdued
 Beat back the roaring storm—but how subdued
 Thy fierce beginnings, softened and subdued
 But soon, through Christian faith, is grief subdued:
 For tyranny subdued,
 At length a Spirit more subdued and soft
 In strains of rapture, or subdued delight!
 And, by her gushing thoughts subdued,
 The weak One hath subdued her heart;
 Subdued by outrage and decay,
 Mine ear has rung, my spirit sunk subdued,
 Whose blaze is now subdued to tender gleams,
 Subdued, composed, and formalized by art,
 Or, if the soul to bondage be subdued,
 With thought.—He is insensibly subdued
 Or consciousness not to be subdued.
 But greater, though in spirit more subdued—
 And melancholy Fear subdued by Faith;
 By Nature; by the turbulence subdued
 Her body was subdued. In every act
 Of prejudice subdued—still he retained,
 In such a man, so gentle and subdued,
 Was into meekness softened and subdued;
 And thence, for change; or habit hath subdued
Subdues. Controls them and subdues, transmutes, bereaves.

- Sublime. The eye sublime, and surly lion-grace :
Their brow sublime : in shelter there to hide
Of aspect more sublime ; that blessed mood,
Of elevated thoughts ; a sense sublime
Which Dion learned to measure with sublime delight : —
—But oh ! what transports, what sublime reward,
Thou, with ambition modest yet sublime,
A blest estate when piety sublime
Where Heroes, Sages, Bards sublime,
Where stood, sublime, Leonidas
Smooth, graceful, tender, or sublime—
The senselessness of joy was then sublime !
Of such poor Instruments, with thoughts sublime
Didst first lead forth that enterprise sublime,
Here, mighty Nature ! in this school sublime,
Yet shall thy name, conspicuous and sublime,
In peace of spirit, and sublime content !
Shall comprehend this victory sublime ;
Each becting rampart, and each tower sublime,
Faint — far-off — near — deep — solemn and sublime ! —
Where life and rapture flow in plenitude sublime.
What'er they bring of impulses sublime
Preserve thy charge with confidence sublime—
The pious Lady built with hope sublime
Perpetual industry, Sublime Recluse !
Earth never witnessed object more sublime
And is no more ; drop like the tower sublime
Of hope, and smiles on you with cheer sublime.
He knoed, who gave that love sublime
In placid beauty and sublime content !
The heaven-regarding eye and front sublime
Would ill suffice : for Plato's lore sublime,
And this huge Castle, standing here sublime,
Sublime upon this far-surveying cone,
Sublime o'er Conquest, Avarice, and Pride,
What shield more sublime
Peopled the mind with forms sublime or fair,
Far from those lovely sights and sounds sublime
Concise in answer ; solemn and sublime
Is highest reason in a soul sublime ;
Gathered among those solitudes sublime
In meditations holy and sublime,
A solitary object and sublime,
Acknowledging dependency sublime
Like spectres,—ferment silent and sublime !
In earth, the widely scattered wreck sublime
By a sublime idea, whenceos'er
And in the order of sublimity behests :
Of wise in passion, and sublime in power,
And think ye not with radiance more sublime
Which, seeing little worthy or sublime
Mid circumstances awful and sublime,
In presence of sublime or beautiful forms,
Sublime and comprehensive ! Low desires,
Inward and outward ; humble, yet sublime :
Yielded, that day, a confidence sublime
In the sublime attractions of the grave !
The loneliness of this sublime retreat !
Soul-strengthening patience, and sublime content.
Religion tells of amity sublime
Sublime of instrumental harmony
Of our sublime dependencies, and hopes
From the pure soul, the soul sublime and pure ;
Of his sublime vocation, in the walks
Sublime from present purity and joy !
"But, if to such sublime ascent the hopes

Sublime—continued.

- Even as an object is sublime or fair, 887 Excursion 9. 215
- Refuse to echo the sublime decree ? 890 Excursion 9. 404
- Repeated ; but with unity sublime ! 893 Excursion 9. 608

- Sublimed. In man's intelligence sublimed by grace ?
But faith sublimed to ecstasy !
With wonder heightened, or sublimed by awe—
- Sublimely. Of Cybelé was seen, sublimely turreted !
- Sublimier. Sublimier transport, purer love,
Sublimier joy ; for I would walk alone,
- Sublimity. Still is he seen, in lone sublimity,
Of possible sublimity, whereto
- Submission. See Self-submission.
O teach me calm submission to thy Will !
Threats come which no submission may assuage,
Murmuring submission, and bald government,
(Submission constituting strength and power)
To yield entire submission to the law
Were taught a base submission.— Here behold
- Submissive. Bow'd meekly in submissive fear, before the Lord of All ;
"Grieved am I, submissive Christian !
Submissive to the might of verse
From the submissive necks of guiltless men
Called the submissive strings to wake
The lovely Nun (submissive, but more meek
Oppose, or bear with a submissive will.
Thus in submissive idleness, my Friend !
Her whose submissive spirit was to me
Remorseless, and submissive to no law
With a submissive reverence they beheld ;
To Providence submissive, so she thought ;
- Submissively. And arms to fold her to my heart.
Submissively
Then pays submissively the appointed debt
- Submissiveness. That my submissiveness was choice:
In their submissiveness with power as sweet
- Submit. By laws to which all Forms submit
Shall ne'er submit to cold decay.
And who is to submit,
The unconverted soul with awe submit.
What—how ! shall she submit in will and deed
Unwilling to forego, confess, submit,
As piety ordained ; could I submit
That Love will not submit to be controlled
To which her forwardness must needs submit.
Mirth that to aching ribs will not submit
- Submits. Submits to recognise ; the immediate law,
But he submits ; what can he do ?
A dwindled object, and submits to lie
Decay submits not, But wher'er my steps
Submits to nothing less than taking in
- Submitted. Submitted to the chains !
I have submitted to a new control :
- Submitting. One after one submitting to their doom,
To reverence, suspends his own ; submitting
He sighed, submitting will and power
Our course submitting to the changeful breeze
Subordinate. Subordinate helpers of the living mind :
Subordinate to her, her visible forms
Not want, for this, your own subordinate place
Suborned. For airy promises and hopes suborned
- Subscribe. That you too should subscribe your name.
Subscribed. To those acknowledgments subscribed his own,
874 Excursion 8. 2
- Subservience. Add unto this, subservience from the first
713 Excursion 9. 233
- Subservient. Offable, though to truthsubservient, hear
Of those Bathustas a subservient friend,
Subservient strictly to external things
Are conversant, subservient in their turn
Subservient still to moral purposes,
These feelings, though subservient more than ours
- Subsided. Subsided in a moment, like a wind
- Subsides. While, by the scene compos'd, the breast
subsides,
So when on Ocean's face the storm subsides,
Subsist. Man's intellectual empire. We subsist
Subsist thy dignity to guard,
Yet would the living Presence still subsist
Uncensured, and subsist, a scattered few
Cannot subsist, nor confidence, nor peace
- Subsisting. Subsisting under nature's steadfast law.
And central peace, subsisting at the heart
- Subsists. A sovereign voice subsists within the soul,
Who know not what they speak. By love subsists
And by this law the mighty whole subsists :
From sense and observation, it subsists
- Substance. My father's substance fell into decay :
They have no substance. Pass but a few minutes,
And substance, nothing differing from his own,
But had a continuity and substance
The world in substance, not deceive by show,
That is no substance which ye settle on !
By the returning substance, seen or touched,
The heavier substance of a leaf-clad bough,
Than half his substance. This unlooked-for claim,
As a loved substance, their futurity :
They are in truth the Substance, we the Shadows,
The shadow from the substance, rocks and sky,

Substance—continued.

A substance, fancied him a living man,
Substance and shadow, light and darkness, all
Creatures of one ethereal substance met
Substance and life to what I feel, enshrining,
But vast in size, in substance glorified;
The substance classes by some barbarous name,
Stuffed with the thorny substance of the past
Into a substance glorious as her own,
So that the only substance which remains,
From out their substance issuing, maintain
Fictions in form, but in their substance truths,
Shadow and substance kissing point to point
Substances. Built of all precious substances,—so pure
Even forms and substances are circumfused
Upon his mind like substances, whose presence Substantial. But things substantial have so pressed on me—
If that substantial title please thee more,
Substantial motive, reason clear,
Are a substantial world, both pure and good :
Let more substantial themes the pen engage,
And sympathy with man's substantial griefs—
Remained in their substantial lineaments
Among the conflicts of substantial life ;
A more substantial name, no mimic show,
Intent on little but substantial needs,
Round a substantial centre, which at once
Deal boldly with substantial things ; in truth
Rests his substantial orb :—between those heights
Substantial service. Mark me now, and learn
Substantial, and all crumbling in their turn,
And man's substantial life. If this mute earth Substantially. Substantially expressed—a place for bell
Substitute. A cloudy substitute for failing gladness.
And substitute a universe of death . . .
He craved a substitute in troubled joy ;
Substitutes. Substitutes, turn our faces where we may,
Imperfect substitutes, whose use and power
Subterfuge. Sly subterfuge, if the adventure's bound Subterranean. Thou dost forsake thy subterranean haunts,
Not in Utopia,—subterranean fields,—
Of subterranean Spirits feeding lope Subterraneous. Make subterraneous music, like the noise
He breathes a subterraneous damp ;
From subterraneous Treason's darkening power :
A subterraneous magazine of bones,
Subtily. See Subtlety.
All powers of softness, subtlety, and strength
With curious subtlety, from wish to cheat
Subtle. Save where aloft the subtle sunbeams shine
For not misleading us. That subtle Grey-beard—
He is no madman. A most subtle doctor
The sage enchanter Merlin's subtle schemes ;
Is gone ;—but not the subtle stains
Myriads of notes attest her subtle skill ;
A subtle smell that Spring unbinds,
Where'er the subtle waters stray ;
Their subtle fight could satisfy ;
Her subtle essence to unfold,
Praised be the Art whose subtle power could stay
With subtle speculations, haply vain,
And modulate, with subtle reach of skill
No craft this subtle element can bind,
To his huge trunk, or, with more subtle art,
Of subtle Treason, in his mask of law,
504 Warning 102
Save that, atop, the subtle sunbeams shine,
Instil thy subtle poison, and inspire,
To a more subtle selfishness ; that now
Thy subtle speculations, toils abstuse
Vanished and vanishing in subtle chase,
Whose subtle intercourse with breathing flowers,
More subtle and less easily explained,
In human nature and her subtle ways,
Plague from this union spread, whose subtle pane
Spread, from disease, whose subtle injury lurks
Malice so subtle, vengeance so refin'd.
Subtler. Of subtler origin ; how I have felt,
Yes, I had something of a subtler sense,
Subtlet. Urged by Ambition, who with subtlest skill
I do not here allude to subtlest craft,
Subtleties. Or barren intermeddling subtleties,
Subtlety. See Subtlety.
All plain blunt sense, all subtlety of thought.
Subtly. So subtly are our eyes beguiled,
How subtly works man's weakness, signs may have
How subtly glide its finest threads along !
Suburban. City, and naval stream, suburban grove,
Bring straggling breezes of suburban air.
Of the suburban villages, I first
Suburbs. Passed not beyond the suburbs of the mind ;
Down to the suburbs of St. Antony,
Subversion. Change and subversion from that hour.
No shock
Subvert. Of vice—thenceforth unable to subvert
The blameless inmates, and belike subvert

Subvert—continued.

Strong to subvert our noxious qualities :
Subverted. See Salt-subverted.
Prosperity subverted, maddening want,
And rightful government subverted, found
Succedaneum. But as a succedaneum, and a prop
Succeed. Tells also of bright calms that shall succeed.
In whose pure sight all virtue doth succeed.
Or if an unexpected call succeed,
And a new quickening shall succeed, at first Succeeded. New heavens succeeded, by the dream brought forth :
And night succeeded with unusual gloom,
Succeeding. And, while shades to shades succeeding
Or, where tears flow not, sigh succeeding sigh,
Succeeding—still succeeding ! Here the Child
The breathless stillness. The succeeding day,
Succeeds. The female with a meeker charm succeeds,
He died, whom Artegal succeeds—his son ;
There's indifference, alike when he fails or succeeds,
Success. Success and failure, could a ground
Air, earth, sea, sky, and heaven, success betoken.
Or, having known the splendours of success,
With like success, nor often have appeared
The summer's day, and winter's ; with success
Succession. That stream in blithe succession from the throats
In long succession, pre-existing ghosts
Reach after reach, succession without end
That true succession fall of English hearts,
The new succession, as a line of kings
Her swarms, and in succession send them forth ;
Successful. Long had he fancied each successive slope
Through the year's successive portals ;
That spreads into successive seas, he walks ;
Successfully. And, once, three days successively, through paths
Successor. To Caesar's Successor the Pontiff spake ;
As fierce a successor ; the tide retreats
Successors. Unworthy successors of thee,
No successors ; and, lodged in memory,
Succour. The little Orphan then would be your succour,
Came with succour from above.
To mortal succour, though the tomb
On mortal succour—all who sigh
Yet none so prompt to succour and protect
But slowly did her succour come,
Heavenly succour, not denied
For succour ; but perhaps he sits alone
Their succour would supply ;
Such. (Partial list.)
Well may we wonder he has gained such power
For such he is— Your busy fancies, Wilfred,
My fancies, fancies if they be, are such
And in such wise to rack her gentle heart
We will not waste an hour in such a cause.
I dare not trust myself with such a thought—
To win belief, such as my plot requires.
With such a look—it makes me tremble, Sir,
A holier name ; and, under such a mask,
And tell me if 'tis fit for such a work.
In such a weary night, and such a place.
May you in age be blest with such a daughter !—
When such a sudden weakness fell upon me,
The genuine owners of such Lands and Baronies
Such sort of doctrine as men used there,
That such a Boy where'er he lists shall go
Such wickedness his judgments cannot spare ;
Was making such a noise as it ran on Such uncouth singing verily dost thou make.
And take my leave of all such company,
Now say—in such belief I'll live and die ;
With such a master would I never be ;
Where he had felt such perfect pleasure once.
Praise be to such, and to their slumbers peace !
—Such pleasure is to one kind Being known,
With a look of such earnestness often will stand,
Poor winter look fine in such strange masquerade.
And, for hunger and thirst and such troublesome
calls,
Long patience hath such mild composure given,
So lived I, and repined not at such fate :
Suck. " Suck, little babe, oh suck again !
They suck—from breath that, threatening to destroy,
It seemed to suck us in with an eddy's force.
Sucked. And thou hast almost sucked thy fill.
Of treasure sucked from buds and bells,
And sucked, and sucked him in.
Suckled. A Pagan suckled in a creed outworn ;
Suckling. Of tenderness—the Wolf, whose suckling
Twins
Sucklings. Let Babes and Sucklings be thy oracles.
Sucks. That sucks from mountain-heath her honey fee, Sudden. But what a sudden burst of overpowering light !
His sense, in sudden vacancy quite lost,
A sudden joy surprised expiring thought,
And, fondling, licked his face, then on a sudden

Sudden—continued.

Oswald. Oswald ! This is some sudden seizure !
 When such a sudden weakness fell upon me,
 Shall feign a sudden illness, and the Girl,
 A sudden blankness overpreads his face,
 By sudden pangs ; what bitter tears have on this pavement dropt !
 Mutual was the sudden transport ;
 At length I to a sudden turning came
 And starting off again with freak as sudden ;
 His heart with sudden joy is filled,
 And then, as from a sudden check,
 With sudden happiness beyond all hope.
 But whence that sudden check ? that fearful start !
 Then Peter gave a sudden jerk,
 His sudden fit of joy is flown,
 A glimpse of sudden joy was his,
 Of him whom sudden death had seized
 When sudden blankness overpread
 Why, making here a sudden pause,
 Had past a sudden shock of dread,
 Issued, to sudden view, a glorious Form !
 Of mortals, hurrying like a sudden shower
 Charged with remembrance of his sudden sting,
 No more : the end is sudden and abrupt,
 Fell on him, with the sudden thought
 He felt—and made a sudden stand
 When she by sudden glimpse espied
 Once more the Church is seized with sudden fear,
 A sudden conflict rises from the swell
 With sudden brightness, like a Man inspired ;
 Of sudden passion roused shall men attain
 And, while I gazed, with sudden shock
 Or lost at eve in sudden mist the day
 But lo ! what sudden cloud has darkened all
 Shown by a sudden turning of the road,
 Till with a sudden hound of smart reproach,
 To sudden proclamation, burst from haunt
 Of sudden admonition—like a brook
 I followed, till he made a sudden stand :
 For you should undergo a sudden change ;
 Yet not with stroke so sudden as refused
 " A sudden illness seized her in the strength
 These yield, and these to sudden overthrow :
 Of sudden overthrow ; and cold neglect
 Wake sudden recognitions, that were like
 And, with a sudden influx overpowered
Suddenly. See Suddenly.
 And suddenly grew black, as he would die.
 He will suddenly step in a cunning nook,
 But unforeseen misfortunes suddenly
 Suddenly halting now—a lifeless stand !
 Along the indented shore ; when suddenly,
 And suddenly a ruffling breeze,
 To music suddenly :
 Suddenly raised by some enchanter's power,
 Full suddenly the Ass doth rise !
 [? Suddenly] glaring through sepulchral damp,
 Since suddenly the dart of death went forth
 Some inward trouble suddenly
 Thus suddenly, and brought so near ?
 And, suddenly, behold a wonder !
 For, suddenly up-conjured from the Main,
 Fell suddenly upon my Spirit—cast
 Behold a high injunction suddenly
 Beheld her breast the wind, then suddenly
 By mists bewildered, suddenly mine eyes
 Was mists with tears. Then suddenly the scene
 Bids the notes of music, suddenly let loose
 Death blasted all. Death suddenly o'erthrew
 Bright apparition, suddenly put forth,
 Was suddenly revealed—the swains moved on,
 Suddenly then they disappeared : not twice
 Breathed over them : but suddenly the door
 Now suddenly diverging from the orb
Sue. His lips were moving ; and his eyes, upraised to sue for grace,
 I grieved, fond Youth ! that thou shouldst sue
 Our yesterday's procession did not sue
 For prompt forgiveness will not sue in vain.
 To sue the God ; but, haunting your green shade
 Fall on thy knees and sue for help divine.
 That my demerits did not sue in vain
Sued. " With rod and line I sued the sport.
 He sued :—heart-smitten by the wroeg,
 At length to tell his love, but sued in vain ;
Sues. She sues for help with piteous utterance !
Suffer. That we can suffer greatly. Very true.
 And breeding suffer them to be ;
 Suffer my genial spirits to decay :
 If she should suffer this : " My Son,
 To suffer pains with heathen scorn and hate
 That mortals do or suffer,
 If the whole State must suffer mortal change,
 Not without hope we suffer and we mourne.
 With calmness suffer and believe,
 And what they do and suffer for their creed ;
 With coward fears. He could afford to suffer
 With those whom he saw suffer. Hence it came
 And suffer now, not seldom, from the thought
 Whether to act, judge, suffer, or enjoy.

Suffer—continued.

—Much did she suffer : but, if any friend,
 Whose sorrow rather is to suffer wrong
 Of all who suffer wrong, and to enact
 " And tens of thousands suffer wrong as deeds" Sufferance. Only by sufferance of the winds*and waves,
 How, likewise, under sufferance divine,
 The sufferance only of a breath of air !"
Suffered. But, if I have not meekly suffered, meek
 What she had seen and suffered turned her brain.
 Neglect me ! no, I suffered long
 Mounted aloft, is suffered not to use
 He suffered—breaking down in heart and mind !
 The patient Briar suffered long,
 She suffered, as Immortals sometimes do ;
 Much have ye suffered from Time's goading tooth :
 Might crush, nor know that it had suffered harm ;
 Suffered or done. When lawless violence
 For what she did and suffered. Pledges sure
 Of mortal man is suffered to behold ;
 All that she suffered for her dear Lord's sake.
 Hath suffered from the shock of zeal,
 Of the new Flame, not suffered to expire,
 Which Faith has suffered, Heaven could calmly brook.
 He suffered not to languish or decay.
 When aught had suffered wrong,—
 Suffered in silence for Truth's sake ; or tell,
 Holden where martyrs suffered in past time,
 Could teach, admonish ; suffered with the rest
 And suffered, and was doing, suffering, still,
 Of ancient heroes. If I suffered grief
 The yellow stone-crop, suffered to take root
 For whom she suffered. Yes, it would have grieved
 Or heaven's blue vault, is suffered to put forth
 Of what I suffered, when I wept that loss,
 Have acted, suffered, travelled far, observed
 Cherished for him, he suffered to depart, Sufferer. No kindred sufferer, to his death-place brought
 Of agony had pressed the Sufferer down :
 Lone Sufferer ! will not she believe
 That, if the Sufferer rise from his sick-bed,
 And seek the Sufferer in his darkest den,
 For the meek Sufferer. Why then should we read
 That the poor Sufferer had escaped with life.
 Oh ! no, the innocent Sufferer often sees
 To calm the Sufferer when his story closed ;
 Lost was she, lost ; nor could the Sufferer say
 Of all companionship, the Sufferer yet
 Which to outrageous wrong the sufferer owes, Sufferer's. Of Faith, and round the sufferer's temples bind
 Is that the Sufferer's last retreat ?
Sufferers. See Follow-sufferers.
 Where simple Sufferers bend, in trust
 All sufferers that no more rely
 Nourish the sufferers then ; and misis, that brood
 That opens, for such sufferers, relief
Suffering. See Follow-suffering, Long-suffering.
 Hope, strength, and courage, social suffering brings,
 Suffering not doing ill—fate far more mild.
 Suffering what no endurance could assuage,
 For act and suffering, to the city straight,
 And what are a few throes of bodily suffering
 Suffering is permanent, obscure and dark,
 Now you are suffering—for the future day,
 The extremes of suffering meet in absolute peace.
 Of suffering or of peace, I know not which :
 —Yet tears to human suffering are due ;
 In-rich reward all suffering ; Balm that tames
 One who was suffering tumult in his soul
 Who from disease and suffering
 I weigh the hopes and fears of suffering heart.
 For its own honour, on man's suffering heart.
 All suffering dim eclipse !
 To you a suffering State complains,
 All but the suffering heart was dead
 Nor do a suffering Spirit wrong,
 They come—they spread—the weak, the suffering,
 heart ;
 O suffering Earth ! be thankful ; sternest claim
 And suffering under many a perilous wound—
 Faint types of suffering in thy beamless face.
 And all things suffering from all,
 As more exposed to suffering and distress ;
 A suffering woman's word ;
 Out of human suffering ;
 Though doing wrong and suffering, and full oft
 To a meek spirit suffering inwardly.
 Man suffering among awful Powers and Forms ;
 And suffered, and was doing, suffering, still,
 Of human suffering, such as justifies
 A meditative, oft a suffering, man—
 A tale of silent suffering, hardly clothed
 Its course of suffering in the public road,
 Too weak for suffering, and for hope too tame)
 The test of act ad suffering, to provoke
 Of suffering hath been thoroughly fortified

Suffering—continued.

 Suffers religious faith. Elate with view . . .
 The Rose of England suffers hight, . . . 628 Installation 21
 Suffers for this. Even Science, too, at hand . . .
 These vain regrets; health suffers in these, else
 Unbidden faces: he that suffers most, . . . 655 Prelude 3. 418
 By which mankind now suffers, is most just, . . .
 Suffers like loss when drawn out of the soul, . . .
Suffice. Of what I witnessed. This day will suffice
 We have thus far adventured, will suffice
 That will suffice thee; and it seems that now
 May well suffice, till noon-tide's sultry heat
 Would ill suffice for persons and events: . . .
 Suffice it that the Son, who strove . . .
 Their radiance through the woods—may yet suffice
 What hand suffice to govern the state-helm?
 To tell his might my wit may not suffice; . . .
 I learned that one poor moment can suffice
 And, should the out-pourings of her eyes suffice not
 Would ill suffice: for Plato's lore sublime,
 A chronicle that might suffice to show . . .
 Suffice it here to add, that, somewhat stern
 This brief communication shall suffice.
 And her blind helper Chance, do then suffice
 Amid these wilds, this answer may suffice;
 Suffice it, therefore, if the rural Muse
 Would less suffice than Bridewell and the stocks?
Sufficed. Yea, veriest reptiles have sufficed to prove
 We came with weightier purses, that sufficed . . .
 Constructed, that sufficed for every end, . . .
Suffices. Suffices me—her tears, her mirth, . . .
 A glance suffices;—should we wish for more,
 Suffices; and unshaken bears the assault
Sufficeth. Sufficeth them, the simple plan, . . .
Sufficient. See All-sufficient.
 And shalt become thy own sufficient stay:
 Men unto whom sufficient for the day
 Sufficient for the wise, . . .
 More than sufficient recompense! Her love
 Where no sufficient pleasure could be found.
 By a bequest sufficient for my needs
 Not equal, but sufficient to maintain,
 —Take me at once this one sufficient hope,
Sufficing. See All-sufficing, Self-sufficing.
Suffrage. Of boundless suffrage, at whose sage behest
Suffused. Suffused with blushes of celestial hue,
 Climbing suffused with sunny air,
 Suffused with something of a feminine hue;
Suggest. As skill and graceful nature might suggest Suggestion. 'Tis not a time for nice suggestion,
 To bind, on apt suggestion, or unbind;
 Yet, on your first suggestion, will I give, Suggestions. From least suggestions; ever on the watch.
Sugh. Beneath the cliffs, and pine-wood's steady sugh;
 The sugh of swallow flocks that twittering sweep,
Suicide. The uplifted arm of Suicide;
Suit. Have heard my suit, and urged my plea at Court.
 So used to suit his language to the time,
 I put denial on thy suit, and hence,
 With suit that I would speak in verse of that sequestered child
 He urged his persevering suit in vain. . . .
 Who heard the heart-felt music of his suit
 Why will ye thus my suit repel?
 Are all, as seems to suit thee best,
 And suit their slender lays. . . .
 But your smooth motions suit a peaceful aim;
 And Care—a comforter that best could suit
 His voice to suit the temper of yon Moon
 These emblems suit the helpless and forlorn,
 Suit to his Brothers often made
 Blessings to give, news ask, or suit prefer.
 Must lacquey a dumb Art that best can suit
 Which for their sakes we fasten, as may suit
 Flowers—or a richer produce (did it suit
 Or does it suit our humour to commend
 I spurred his lawless suit, . . .
 At Wordsworth's suit been spared;
 All else is nothing.—Did occasion suit
 Another's need to suit,
 'Tho' now no more thy maids their voices suit
 More palpable, as best might suit her aim.
 Did better suit my visionary mind, . . .
 To suit my ends; I moved among mankind
 Than suit the work we fashion, might set forth

Summer. —When low-hung clouds each star of

 To the green corn of summer, autumn's hue. . . . 8 Ev. Wk. 338
 Who at the call of summer quits his home,
 Then Summer lingered long; and honey flowed
 That holds no commerce with the summer night.
 "But the calm summer season now was past.
 Summer knows but little of them: 79
 All last summer, as well you know, 80
 Of kitten, bird, or summer fly; 81
 Till all was tranquil as a summer sea. 81
SUMMER ebbs;—each day that follows
 Long as the summer lasted: some, as wise,
 And summer days, when we were young;
 Two burning months let summer overleap,
 As doth a fly upon a summer brook;
 Look at the fate of summer flowers,
 Or for the summer shade. It was the first
 Murmur as with the sound of summer flies.
 Were native to the summer.—Up the brook
 One summer morning we had walked abroad
 Amid the fir-trees, all the summer long
 And that fleet messenger of summer days,
 The summer long, from day to day,
 And in the sultry summer hours 155
 On me such bounty Summer pours,
 Beneath the summer sky 156
 He is the friend of our summer gladness: . . . 163
 A Pilgrim, when the summer day 167
 But, fill the warmth of summer skies 194
 And summer days is gone, 194
 As if life's business were a summer mood;
 While yet the summer leaves were green,
 And thither, when the summer days were long,
 'Tis my delight, alone in summer shade,
 And quit the flowers that summer brings
 And in eternal summer lose 225
 With that of summer skies! 232
 Loved haunt of many a summer hour, 238
 'Mid summer storms or winter's ice, 239
 For summer pastime into wanton air; 250
 He found the longest summer day too short,
 A lovely Beauty in a summer grave!
 And nobler cares than listless summer knew.
 Through summer heat and winter snow:
 Nor flaunting Summer—when he throws
 Haste, Virgins, haste!—the flowers which summer gave 323
 And, while in summer glory 337
 Carelessly watched, sport through the summer day,
 Taught by his summer spent, his autumn gone,
 Sinks, when the summer breeze hath died,
 With its softest summer surdiv:
 Where that pure Church survives, though summer heats 431
 Poured forth, while summer suns at distance shine,
 Apart—like glow-worms on a summer night; . . . 441
 For summer wandering quit their household bowers; 463
 When a soft summer gale at evening parts
 'Mid a trim garden's summer luxuries,
 Children of Summer! Ye fresh Flowers that brave
 What Summer here escapes not, the fierce wave,
 As from the hive where bees in summer dwell,
 As if green summer grass were the floor of my room,
 Till summer come up from the south, and with crowds 485
 I saw thee stagger in the summer breeze, . . . 491
 In the still summer noon, while beams of light,
 Departing summer hath assumed 498
 Less fair is summer riding high 502
 Such be our Spring, our Summer such; 502
 As a floating summer cloud, 502
 Through summer heat, autumnal cold,
 Through half the summer, stands with top cut sheer, 507
 Advancing Summer, Nature's law fulfilled, . . . 521

Summer—continued.
 And golden summer days uniting cheerful hearts. . . 524
 Filled with delight three summer morning hours. . . 525
 'Twas well enough, when summer came, 536
 Of summer, in the season of sere leaves; . . . 539
 He makes his summer couch, and here at noon
 Parching Summer hath no warrant
 The toll-gate, when in summer at her door
 Disturb the summer dust; he is so still
 Four summer weeks I dwell in sight of thee:
 For Her who, ere her summer faded,
 Where summer Sun in ocean sink to rest,
 Or summer hamlet, flat and bare, on high
 The summer long to feed from stage to stage;
 Then Summer lengthen'd out his season bland,
 Ev'n to the summer door his icy tide,
 That dallies with the Sun the summer night.
 For now, till this seventh summer have ye rang'd
 One summer evening (led by her) I found . . . 637
 At noon and 'mid the calm of summer nights,
 And by the waters, all the summer long. . . 638
 All the green summer, to forlorn cascades . . . 639
 Prolonged in summer till the day-light failed:
 And languidly pursued. When summer came,
 And what the summer shade, what day and night,
 Had lain awake on summer nights to watch
 That summer, swarming as it did with thoughts
 Than pathless wastes. Once, when those summer months 664
 On summer evenings, I believe that there . . . 671
 In summer, making quest for works of art,
 When the third summer freed us from restraint,
 Through the whole summer have I been at rest,
 Of Summer, lingering, shining, by herself, . . . 687
 He was in limb, in cheek a summer rose
 Caught, on a summer evening through a chink
 All summer, and at sunrise ye may hear
 (When e'er the summer sun, declining, smote . . . 702
 And all enjoyment which the summer sun
 Forth like a Polar summer: every word
 Behind the summer clouds. By birth he ranked Matured, and in the summer of their strength . . 713
 Three summer days I roamed) where'er the Plain
 It was a close, warm, breezeless summer night,
 That summer, under whose indulgent skies,
 When thou dost to that summer turn thy thoughts,
 'Twas summer, and the sun had mounted high: . . 756
 In summer, tended cattle on the hills; 758
 And they whose hearts are dry as summer dust
 In summer, ere the mower was abroad
 Of summer, autumn, winter, and of spring.
 Of the warm summer, from a belt of hemp
 Such is the summer pilgrim's frequent wish; . . 773
 Upward it winds, as if, in summer heats, . . . 786
 And, crowned with garlands in the summer grove,
 The gilded summer flies to mix and weave
 In the deep stillness of a summer even 807
 And damps, through all the droughty summer day
 How thankful for the warmth of summer days, . . 835
 That work a summer flood with hasty swell . . . 852
 Withdrawn,—to while away the summer hours
 While the dark shadows of the summer leaves
 Had summer scorched the fields; not twice had fallen, 861
 For noontide solace on the summer grass, . . . 861
 Who, in some placid day of summer, looks
 Are gone, what summer loiterer will regard,
 Smooth summer dreams, old favours of the place,
 But now, when everywhere the summer grass
 One of a golden summer holiday,
Summer-day. One summer-day I chanced to see
 The long, warm, lightsome summer-day,
Summer-evenings. On summer-evenings, I believe that there 813
Summer-fields. Whole Summer-fields are thine by right; 157
Summer-gladness. To summer-gladness unkind: 338
Summer-hours. The face of summer-hours. . . . 348 Summer-house. Crowned by its antique summerhouse—descends, 881
Summer-leaf. The summer-leaf had faded, passed to Heaven. 446
Summer-long. All summer-long the happy Eve
Summer's. To pilgrims overcome by summer's heat.
 And pines the unripened pear in summer's kindest
 ray; 15
 High and more high in summer's heat they go,
 When I walk by the hedge on a bright summer's day, 116
 And countenance like a summer's day,
 This Flower, that first appeared as summer's guest,
 The landscape of a summer's morning;
 Or note (translucent summer's happiest chance!)
 Her face from summer's noontide heat
 With the slow motion of a summer's cloud,
 Her summer's faithful joy—that still is mine,
 That suits a summer's noon;
 To rival summer's brightest scarlet flower; . . . 529

Sun—continued.

That breath'st with me in sun and air,
 Long as there's a sun that sets,
 Telling tales about the sun,
 When the rising sun he painted,
 Of the sun going down to his rest,
 Yet is it to the fiercest sun,
 (In the sun or under shade,
 Which, with slant ray, the merry sun
 Three years she grew in sun and shower,
 The green field sleeps in the sun;
 The weary Sun hetrock himself to rest;—
 The moon, the glory of the sun,
 Are dearer than the sun.
 Nor wanted sun, nor rain, nor dew,
 But now the sun is rising calm and bright;
 All things that love the sun are out of doors;
 Raises a mist; that, glittering in the sun,
 Of rock or sand reposest, there to sun itself;
 A leafy shelter from the sun and wind.
 I've guessed, when I've been sitting in the sun,
 The sun on drearier hollow never shone;
 First admonition that the sun is down!
 While, like the sun emerging from a cloud,
 Of magic potent over sun and star,
 Climes which the sun, who sheds the brightest day
 They tempt the sun to sport among their plumes;
 Crowding the quarter whence the sun comes forth
 Those silver clouds collected round the sun
 Whose countenance bore resemblance to the sun,
 And would ye, tracking your proud lord the Sun,
 Ye are their perilous offspring; and the Sun—
 Beneath the glaring sun.
 Sun, moon, and stars, all struggle in the toils
 Their pensive light from a departed sun!
 Breathless with adoration; the broad sun
 Shines like another sun—on mortal sight
 As if the sun were not. He raised his eye
 The rising sun, and on the plains descend;
 Yes! when the sun of life more feebly shines,
 Never did sun more beautifully steep
 With light reflected from the invisible sun
 Pale twilight's lingering glooms,—and in the sun Rise, tardy Sun! and let the Songster prove
 The sun, the day; the stars, the night;
 The inquisition of the sun!
 Is round the rising sun diffused,
 But 'tis a chosen soil, where sun and breeze
 To see the sun how brightly it will shine,
 Are cheerful as the rising sun in May.
 And left them lying in the silent sun,
 Across the setting sun and all the fiery west.
 The morning sun may shine
 While the Sun rules, and cross the shades of night—
 Darkens the sun, hath bade the forest sink,
 Or thou, impartial Sun, with presence bright
 Once more, heart-cheering Sun, I bid thee hail!
 Bright shines the Sun, as if his beams would wake
 Bright shines the Sun—and not a breeze to shake
 But, where we stood, the setting sun
 The Sun regards it from the West;
 Clear shines the glorious sun above;
 Even by the sun and air unpurged;
 Lo! while I speak, the labouring Sun
 Her Pioneer, the snow-dissolving Sun,
 But, touched from behind by the Sun, it now shines.
 Plead with the sovereign Sun for longer stay
 On sun, moon, stars, the nether elements,
 With gleams that owed not to the sun their birth,
 The sun in heaven!—but now, to form a shade
 Sun, moon, and stars, and beast of chase or prey;
 Light from the fountain of the setting sun.
 And splendour slowly mustering. Since the Sun,
 The sun shines bright; the fields are gay
 And from the scorching noon-tide sun,
 To wither in the sun and breeze
 Beneath the light of sun and star;
 Straight from the sun and tainted air's embrace Crimes that might stop the motion of the sun)
 From sea to sea, impervious to the sun
 That ere the Sun goes down their childhood sets.
 Like men ashamed: the Sun with his first smile
 From unimpeded commerce with the Sun,
 The shepherd, bent on rising with the sun,
 The Sun, that seemed so mildly to retire,
 The sun is couched, the sea-fowl gone to rest,
 That, while the sun rode high, was lost beneath their dazzling sheen.
 The sun has long been set,
 —From worlds not quickened by the sun
 Spring from their nests to bid the Sun good morrow?
 To Liberty? Her sun is up the while,
 Prismatic colours from the sun;
 Each in its orbit round the central Sun.
 Whose sun could never set,
 Here am I, and to-morrow's sun,

The sun above the mountain's head,
 Come forth and feel the sun.
 Uprose the morning sun:
 Beneath so beautiful a sun,
 To Christ, the Sun of righteousness, espoused.
 Bright trophies of the sun!
 As the sun mounts, by sea-born breezes fanned;
 Swift as the rising sun his beams extends
 Look up to Heaven! the industrious Sun
 High as the Sun, that he could take account
 And long or ere the uprising of the Sun
 But, bursting forth above the waves, the Sun

I see him sporting on the sunny lawn ;
 For a sunny thought to cheer the Stranger's way,
 Are tempted to this sunny slope !
 Shadows and sunny glimmerings,
 Playmates in the sunny weather,
 Nor through their sunny lawns have strayed ?
 What wouldst thou more ? In sunny glade,
 The sunny vale locked gay ;
 A seemly Cottage in this sunny Dell,
 And, through the sunny portion of the year,
 And ye mild Seasons—in a sunny clime,
 In vain ; the sky will change to sunny blue,
 Whom in a sunny glade I chanced to see,
 Amid the sunny, shadowy, Coliseum ;
 Union not sad, when sunny daybreak smites
 For joy its sunny hours were free to give
 Where the enamoured sunny light
 A more than sunny liveliness
 Beside her, on some sunny bank !
 Stretched in the sunny light of victory hark
 Like sunny mist ;—at length the golden hair,
 Till in the sunny bay his feet was moored !
 Chiming suffused with sunny air
 To our kind Friend high on the sunny hill—

Type of a sunny human breast . . .
 With his red stalks upon this sunny day ! . . .
 Upon some vacant sunny day, . . .
 From some hill-top on sunny afternoons, . . .
 Long unaltered, nor the sunny seat
 To mark some sheltering bower or sunny nook,
 For eastern monasteries, sunny mounts
 When on its sunny bank the primrose flower . . .
 'Mid a green hay-cock in a sunny field.
 To a low cottage in a sunny bay,
 And labyrinthine walks, her sunny glades . . .
 Offering a sunny resting-place to them
 "As on a sunny bank, a tender lamb
 The shadowy vale, the sunny mountain-top ;
 Warm woods, and sunny hills, and fresh green fields,
Sun-proof. Or feed his eye in paths sun-proof Sunrise. How cheerful, at sunrise, the hill where I stood,
 Beneath this rock, at sunrise, on a calm
 For 'tis the sunrise now of zeal ;
 The hastiest sunrise yields a temperate ray ;
 Of maids at sunrise bringing in from far
 All summer, and at sunrise ye may hear
 And now at sunrise, rallying forth again
Sun's. Shed from their sides, that face the sun's slant beam,
 Marks nothing but the red sun's setting round,
 Together smoking in the sun's slant beam,
 Some amid lingering shade, some touched by the sun's rays.
 Wherever strikes the sun's glad ray ;
 The glory of the sun's bright head—
 This the Sun's Bird, whom Glendoveers might own
 Even as I speak the rising Sun's first smile
 Opening before the sun's triumphant eye—
 In the sun's eye, and in his sister's sight
 Nor of the setting sun's pathetic light . . .
 At the sun's outbreak, as with light divine,
 Shines in the greeting of the sun's first ray
 A spot of shame to the sun's bright eye,
 Not like the rising sun's impatient glow
 Now, faintly darkening with the sun's eclipse,
 The sun's first greeting, his last farewell ray !
 Throned in the Sun's descending car
 For the sun's light. The soul when smitten thus
 To intercept the sun's glad beams—may ne'er
Suns. "The suns of twenty summers danced along,— Bright suns without a spot ;
 Thither do I withdraw when cloudless suns
 To thirsty suns and parching air,
 Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns,
 And cheerful songs, and suns that shine
 Is she for tropic suns, or polar snow ?

Of noontide suns ;—and even the beams that play
 Of July suns ; he feels it sweet ;
 With warmer suns and softer gales,
 Suns that through blood their western harbour sought,
 And touch from rising suns in vain
 Poured forth, while summer suns at distance shine,
 Before the path of milder suns ;
 Though many suns have risen and set . . .
 Where summer suns in ocean sink to rest,
 —Of cloudless suns no more ye frost-built spires . . .
 —Why suns in winter, shunning heaven's steep
 heights
 The mist, the shadows, light of golden suns,
Sunset. "And often after sun-set, Sir,
 Of golden sunset, ere it fade and die,
 Their hues to sunset. If with raptured eye
 (Like clouds of sunset) into lucid amber.
 Most glorious sunset ! and a ray
 The sunset splendours of a finished war
 Of sunset ever there, albeit streams

Sunset—continued.

Glowing in golden sunset tints of joy,
 After the hour of sunset yester-even,
 The sunset cannon. While the orb went down Sunshine. In the calm sunshine slept the glittering main ;
 Alas ! 'tis cold—I shiver in the sunshine—
 From shade to sunshine, and as fleet
 From sunshine back to shade.
 We'll talk of sunshine and of song,
 Sunshine and shower be with you, bud and bell !
 And in the open sunshine of God's love
 Imprisoned by hot sunshine lie
 With brightest sunshine round me spread
 Through sunshine fitting from the bough
 Of sunshine and of flowers,
 Shade upon the sunshine lying
 In sunshine or in shade
 As pure a sunshine and as soft a gale . . .
 Of sunshine wilt thou think, and flowers, and song,
 In brightest sunshine bask ; this nipping air,
 So beautiful of late, with sunshine warmed,
 As void of sunshine, when, from that wide plain,
 When sunshine follows shower, the breast can thrill
 Her sunshine plays upon thee !
 In the open sunshine or we are unblest !
 What hope, what joy can sunshine bring to thee,
 To move in sunshine ?—Utter thanks, my Soul !
 Mild—as the verdure, fresh—the sunshine, bright—
 Of stationery sunshine :—thou hast viewed
 But breezes played, and sunshine gleamed—
 Dear to the common sunshine,
 In sunshine sailing far away,
 And sunshine to a dangerous strife ;
 So graced the sunshine of that day,
 In sunshine were his only task,
 Or needful sunshine ; prosperous enterprise,
 In the first warmth of their original sunshine,
 Of sunshine, an apt emblem yields . . .
 From sunshine, clouds, winds, waves,
 Sunshine and cloud, whirlwind and breeze,
 Feeds in the sunshine ; the robust and young,
 'Mid the dews, in the sunshine of morn,—'mid the joy
 "The sunshine may not cheer it, nor the dew ;
 A sad heart's sunshine) by a soft
 Affections, warm as sunshine, free as air ;
 From sunshine to the sunless land !
 The sunshine is a glorious birth ;
 Through bursts of sunshine and through flying showers,
 With silver clouds, and sunshine on the grass,
 Clothed in the sunshine of the withering fern ;
 Abroad, how cheerfully the sunshine lay
 Bask in the sunshine of the memory ;
 Spread round my steps like sunshine o'er green fields.
 Tossing in sunshine its dark boughs aloft,
 For sunshine, and to breathe the fresher air.
 Of Arden—amid sunshine or in shade
 Or sunshine to my individual mind,
 Of bright and pleasant sunshine interposed ;
 In sunshine and in shade, in wet and fair,
 The burning sunshine, or a transient shower ;
 By the warm sunshine, and the jocund voice
 Of present sunshine.—Deities that float
 —The Shepherd-lad, that in the sunshine carves,
 My two Associates, in the morning sunshine
 Of outward sunshine and internal warmth ;
 As if the sunshine of the day were met . . .
 Taken from air and sunshine when the rose
 This favoured Land, or sunshine warms her soil.
 Drawn by the sunshine—at that hopeful season
 Like vernal ground in sabbath sunshine left,
 Feeding on sunshine—to the blushing girl
 Swarms with sensation, as with gleams of sunshine,
Sunshining. In June's sunshining hours
Sunshiny. Retired in that sunshiny shade he lay ;
Sunward. Sunward now his flight he raises,
 Sunward to seek the daylight in its fount,
Superadded. Came strengthened with a superadded
 soul,
 In all ; in most with superadded foes, . . .
Superb. Of Genoa the superb—should there be led Shaggy and bold, and wreathed horos superb,
Superficial. And superficial pastimes ; now and then
 Of present, actual, superficial life,
 Bent overmuch on superficial things,
 The charm more superficial that attends . . .
Superfluous. Object, so seemed it, of superfluous pains,
 To many seemed superfluous—as, no cause
 On fickle pleasures, and superfluous cares,
 "That prayer were not superfluous," said the Priest,
Superhuman. Of human forms with superhuman powers,
 Transcendent, superhuman as it seemed,

Superior. He, all superior but his God disdained,
 Charms superior to decay.
 Of a far superior garden.
 Superior? Help to virtue does she give?
 Arise superior to the Siren's power,
 And the vain-glory of superior skill,
 Superior, and incapable of change,
 Superior, magisterially adopts
 On her—at once superior to my woes
 For by superior energies; more strict
 That these—and that superior mystery
 Superior, insusceptible of pride,
 Ascending! For on that superior height
 Thence up Helvellyn, a superior mount,
Supernatural. Rich are his walks with supernatural cheer;
 Do in the supernatural world abide:
 An awe and supernatural horror breeds;
 And natural or supernatural fear,
 Reached her with supernatural mandates charged
Supersedes. That aids or supersedes our grosser sight,
Superstition. And very superstition of the place,
 Some uncouth superstition of its own.
 Which Superstition strove to chase,
 By superstition, spread the Papal power;
 Might leap, the weakest nerve of superstition start;
 "When Superstition left the golden light
 Science with joy saw Superstition fly
 By superstition of the neighbourhood,
 Where superstition weaves her airy dreams."
Superstitions. Ye superstitions of the heart,
 His native superstitions melt away.
Superstitious. And superstitious fancies strong,
 Dismay, and superstitious pain,
 Glimmers through many a superstitious form
 And with a superstitious eye of love.
 But superstitious fear, and abject sloth.
 In deadly scorn of superstitious rites,
 Of superstitious fancy, might have seemed Superstitiously. Whose footsteps superstitiously avoid Supine. The couch his fate had made for him; supine.
 Screened from the sun. Supine the Wanderer lay,
Supper. And eat my supper there.
 The lamb, while from her hand he thus his supper
 took.
 Our Lord's Last Supper, beautiful as when first
 Rec'd at supper hour her tempting hoard;
 To Abraham of old. The supper done,
Supper-board. Turned to the cleanly supper-board, and there,
Suppers. With invitations, suppers, wine and fruit,
Supplant. Would supplant the weeds, and cherish .

Supplanted. Shame followed shame, and woe supplanted woe—
 Supplanted the whole majesty of Rome
 To others, all supplanted in their turn;
 Had been supplanted, could I hope to stand—
 Supplanted, not for treacherous vacancy
Supple. Why, friend, to deck her supple twigs Suppliant. Suppliant for aid his kingdom to regain;
 Then crutch no more on suppliant knee,
 With suppliant gestures and upbraidings stern;
 With faith, the Suppliant heavenward lifts her hands:
 "Though here I bend a suppliant knee
 By Rome abandoned; vain are suppliant cries,
 Not unforgiven the suppliant knee might bend,
 Their suppliant hands; but holy is the feast
 When Alpine Vales threw forth a suppliant cry,
 And asked for peace on suppliant knee;
 O son, a suppliant to thy deity!"
Suppliant's. Unquestionable lines of that wild Suppliant's face.
Suppliants. From suppliants panting for the skies!
 Disregard Thy Suppliants now!
 Suppliants! the God to whom your cause ye trust
Suppliants. And whining voice denote them supplicants
Supplicates. I supplicate for thy control;
Supplicates. Pause, courteous Spirit!—Balhi suppliccates .
Supplication. And, kneeling, supplication make to our Lady de la Paix;
 The Woman urged her supplication,
 In supplication to the Child began Supplied. So shall its waters, from the heavens supplied .
 With daily bread, by constant toil supplied.
 Supplied my helplessness with food and raiment,
 Of waters which the winter had supplied
 By thought supplied, nor any interest
 With what this innocent spring supplied .
 On hope that conscious innocence supplied,
 By confidence supplied and mercy shown,
 Will to the woman be supplied!
 By cautious love supplied.
 With books-supplied and instruments of art,
 With all his waits supplied .

 Of the old grey stone, from her scant board,
 supplied.
 Supplied our want, we haply might employ
 With other signs of manhood that supplied
 From strict analogies by thought supplied
 What'er the minister's old shelf supplied;
 His Schoolmaster supplied; books that explain
 Upon the PEDLAR's toil—supplied their wants,
 Supplied a boundary less abrupt and close;
 His morbid humour, with delight supplied
 Was put to proof, and exercise supplied
 The lovely Girl supplied—a simple song,
 Soft heath this elevated spot supplied,
Supplies. When not a star supplies the comfort of its light;
 Which the kindly wool supplies,
 A Barn her winter bed supplies;
 Nor more, for aught that time supplies,
 No star supplies the comfort of it's light,
 Which an abstract intelligence supplies;
 There doth he rest. No theme his fate supplies Supply. That grief for which the senses still supply is able to supply my loss,
 That doth presume no more than to supply
 For You she wrought: Ye only can supply
 This Ordinance, whether loss it would supply,
 A skill—to balance and supply;
 The silence of sorrow it seems to supply,
 His earnings might supply, and brought away
 A grateful recollection must supply
 All weakness fathoms, can supply all needs:
 The voice of gladness, less and less supply
 Instructs, and prompts her to supply defects .
 Their succour would supply;

 Revolve in me sure track; . . . 505
 Whose goodness knows no change, whose love is sure, . . . 519
 Though sure of plaudits on his costly stage,
 Poor Robin as a sure and crafty friend,
 Thy smile is sure, Thy plighted word
 Make slow in feel, and by sure steps resign
 Than finds what he beholds. And sure it is,
 And kindlings like the morning—presage sure
 Their sure foundations in the heart of man,
 Were more circuitous, but not less sure
 Was founded a sure safeguard and defence
 Of books and common life, it makes sure way
 Proclaims to him that hope should be most sure;
 But, above all, the victory is most sure
 Is sure, that through remorse and grief he died;
 Had earned for him sure welcome, and the rights
 For a life's stay (slender it was, but sure) . . . 859
 Is the sure consequence of slow decay . . . 859
 With present triumph, will be sure to find
 Reserves for either, sure it is that both
 Whose muse a sure though late revenge hath ta'en
Surely. Surely in other thoughts contempt may die.
 Surely some evil Spirit abroad to-night
 There surely must some reason be . . . 67

Surely—continued.

That chasm is much the same— But, surely,
 yonder— . . . 97
 For, surely, then I should have sight . . . 117
 Would surely be a tedious tale. . . . 128
 He surely met with strange adventures. . . . 129
 Would surely be forgotten. But at length . . . 136
 But, surely, if severe afflictions home . . . 143
 What trouble, surely, will be bred; . . . 156
 Their instinct surely came. . . . 168
 O Nightingale! thou surely art . . . 186
 And surely as they vanish. Earth destroys . . . 210
 Full surely, when with such proud gifts of life . . . 231
 Of common sense you're surely sinning; . . . 238
 Small cause of dire effect! for, surely, . . . 246
 I surely not a man ungently made, . . . 253
 But surely less so than your far-fetched themes!
 . . . 268
 And surely here it may be said . . . 285
 Now, surely, hath that gracious aid . . . 338
 Or wish to share it?—One there surely was, . . . 353
 Else it deserts him, surely as he lives. . . . 354
 Walk in the light of day, pertain full surely . . . 357
 Else will the enamoured Monk too surely find Aught that more surely by its aspect fills . . . 363
 —Oh! surely 'twas a gentle rousing . . . 387
 Blest Pilgrims, surely, as they took for guide . . . 415
 The State (ah, surely not preserved in vain!)
 Surely, from fairest spots of favoured lands,
 Dost rouse, yet surely in thy own despite,
 We saw, but surely, in the motley crowd,
 That bliss is ne'er so surely won
 Or surely you'll grow double:
 There's virtue, the title it surely may claim,
 A backward movement surely have we here,
 Of sorrow that will surely come?
 (Surely I do not err) that pensive air
 For One, but surely not for One alone,
 Far higher, else full surely shalt thou err.
 As all Monks are, or surely ought to be,
 Thou surely hast of her benevolence,
 His tombstone thus should speak for him. And surely . . . 573
 Is to be pitied; for 'tis surely blind.
 Surely a sweet remembrance of Thee. . . . 579
 But she had surely spoil'd the boy:
 Unthought of—this may surely claim a sigh.
 Which, if I err not, surely must belong
 A weight must surely hang on days begun
 On infant minds as surely as the sun.
 Yet was there surely then no vulgar power
 Ah! surely not in singleness of heart . . . 653
 Among the nations, surely would my heart
 (Ah! surely not without attendant gleams
 Though surely no mean progress had been made
 Untired, the better, surely, would preserve
 And hope that future times would surely see,
 Of their deliverance, surely yet to come.
 Hears least; else surely this Man had not left —And surely never did there live on earth
 Of the unldest; for he will surely sink
 From far ye come; and surely with a hope
 And yielding surely some relief to his, . . . 801
 Is all too true; and surely not misplaced:
 —And, surely, he, that spake with kindling brow,
 The penetrating hiss; oh surely these . . . 860

 Good cause would oft be his to thank the surf
Surface. And now, on every side, the surface breaks
 Soft o'er the surface creep those lustres pale
 Is shaken till the dregs float on the surface; . . . 58
 Its stony surface glittered like a shield; . . . 68
 Along so vast a surface, all at once,
 That skimmed the surface of the dead calm lake,
 Terrestrial, but a surface, by the flight
 Along the surface of a spacious plain
 Italia! on the surface of thy spirit,
 The garden pool's dark surface, stirred
 Pours on the surface of the turbid Stream!
 On the smooth surface of this naked stone!
 Dive through the stormy surface of the flood
 Upon the surface of humanity
 And the whole surface of the out-spread map,
 Soft o'er the surface creep the lustres pale
 The surface of the universal earth
 Could find no surface where its power might sleep;
 Incumbent o'er the surface of past time
 Where the road's watery surface, to the top
 A surface dappled o'er with shadows hung
 O'er the smooth surface of an ample grave,
 On their smooth surface, evidence was none:
 Upon life's surface. What, though in my veins
 And, on its glassy surface, specks of foam,
 A heaving surface, almost wholly free . . . 847

Survives—continued.

The boy of plainer garb, whose blush survives
Surviving. See Self-surviving.
 Surviving comrade of uncounted hours,
 Surviving near the public way,
 By Youth's surviving spirit? What agile grace!
 Surviving—they for us, and we for them—
Survivor. He is the sole survivor.
 Perhaps the sole survivor of thy race,
 The one Survivor stood; he wept, he prayed
 And this Survivor, with his cheerful throng Survivor's. Of the survivor's sweetest voice (dear child,
Survivors. Have the survivors of this Storm reweaved
 Of the survivors—to the clouds might hear—
 Should frail survivors heave a sigh?
Susan. For her good neighbour Susan Gale,
 Old Susan, she who dwells alone,
 Old Susan lies a-bod in pain,
 There's none to help poor Susan Galq;
 Or she will die, old Susan Gale.
 Away she hies to Susan Gale:
 To comfort poor old Susan Gale.
 Which she to Susan will not tell.
 Poor Susan moans, poor Susan groans;
 Poor Susan moans, poor Susan groans;
 And Susan has a dreadful night.
 Susan! they'll both be here anon."
 And Susan now begins to fear
 At the first word that Susan said
 "Susan, I'd gladly stay with you,
 Susan, we must take care of him,
 "Oh God forbid!" poor Susan cries.
 Good Susan tell me, and I'll stay;
 At poor old Susan then she railed,
 "If Susan had not been so ill,
 To comfort poor old Susan Gale.
 Who is it, but old Susan Gale?
 Long time lay Susan lost in thought;
 Did Susan rise up from her bed,
 Andrew there, and Susan here,
 Poor Susan has passed by the spot, and has heard
Susan's. And Betty, now at Susan's side,
 And Betty, still at Susan's side,
 She sits, as if in Susan's fate
 And Susan's growing worse and worse,
 And Betty's still at Susan's side.
 That God poor Susan's life would spare,
Suspect. Can still suspect, and still reverse himself,
 Marmaduke! I suspect unworthy tales
 We see not nor suspect a bound,
 (Suspect not, Anna, that their fate is hard;
 Forgive me if I venture to suspect
Suspected. Now Harry he had long suspected
 On men suspected to be crazed in brain.
Suspend. For him suspend the dashing oar;
 The mountain streams their rising song suspend;
Suspended. See Long-suspended.
 The dripping of the oar suspended!
 Where mists, suspended on the expiring gale,
 Suspended 'mid the quiet of the sky;
 Suspended in a stream as clear as sky,
 Almost suspended, we are laid asleep
 With breath suspended, like a listening scout.
 While mists, suspended on the expiring gale,
 Think not, suspended from the cliff on high
 Suspended by the blast that blew amain,
 Suspended over a knight's tomb, who lay
 His harp, suspended at the traveller's side;
Suspending. In rapture,—yet suspending her embrace,
Suspends. The pictured fane of Tell suspends his oar;
 To reverence, suspends his own; submitting
Suspense. "But should suspense permit the Foe to cry,
 By blazing fire, the still suspense
Suspicion. See Self-suspicion.
 A dire suspicion drove us from our shed;
 You will do well; unjust suspicion may
 Suspicion ripened into dread;
 Collateral suspicion, else unknown.
 To no perverse suspicion he gave way,
Suspicious. Would watch my motions with suspicious stare,
 Of the suspicious, slips of the indiscreet,
 In his suspicious wisdom; oftener still,
Suspiciously. Suspiciously, to establish in plain day
Sussex. So cruel Sussex, unrestrained
 They come, by cruel Sussex sent;
Sustain. Far lovelier, and his heart could not sustain
 Why thus that worn-out wretch must there sustain
 That will sustain me. Did you murder him?
 Watch over her, I pray—sustain her—Captain!
 Ill fitted to sustain unkindly shocks,
 She hardly can sustain her fears;
 Two losses had we to sustain,
 Which, without aid of numbers, I sustain,
 Or fortune be wanting to sustain,
 Is there a power that can sustain and cheer
 And every shape of creature they sustain,
 Sustain the heart in feeling

Sustain—continued.

Which, though seemingly doomed in its breast to sustain
 Beside the afflicted; to sustain with prayer,
 His crown of weeds, but could not even sustain
 Thy life I would gladly sustain
 Extended and extending to sustain
 The cause of grateful reason to sustain;
 May Nature's kindest powers sustain the Tree,
 That I the weight of it may not sustain;
 Issued, on delegation to sustain
 Sustain, thou only canst, the sick of heart;
 Which, when they should sustain themselves aloft,
 Most frequently call forth, and best sustain,
 Durance to sustain, be over;
 That Smithfield should sustain so vast a loss,
Sustained. See Ill-sustained.
 And with the food of pride sustained his soul
 A burthen, now with fortitude sustained,
 That cannot be sustained;
 Sustained by delicate illusion?
 Forgotten of the body they sustained—
 At length, by Peter's arm sustained,
 Dread trials! yet encountered and sustained
 Exalted office, worthily sustained!
 That, while the Creature is sustained,
 Raised and sustained by memory of Him
 Sustained by memory of the past
 With mute astonishment, it stands sustained
 To be sustained; and Mortals bowed
 Espied him on his legs sustained, blank, mute,
 And inwardly sustained by silent prayer,
 Sustained by what her scrip might yield,
 But ill sustained, and almost (so it seemed)
 And monarchs surly at the wrongs sustained
 Was in its birth, sustained as might befall
 Augmented and sustained. Yet is a path
 And yet the building stood, as if sustained
 No dog attending, by no staff sustained,
 Exists and is sustained. More lofty themes,
 (Sustained by worthier as by wiser thoughts)
 Sustained and governed, still dost overflow
 In one continuous stream; a mind sustained
 May have sustained, that, howsoever misled,
 The life and death of martyrs, who sustained,
 Must have sustained a loss.—"The hand of Death,"
 Set and sustained;—thou, who didst wrap the cloud
 That, mutually protected and sustained,
 Than those which they had severally sustained,
 Which it sustained. But no one takes delight
Sustaining. See All-sustaining, Soul-sustaining.
 Each desperately sustaining, till at last
 Faith in life endless, the sustaining thought
Sustains. One upright arm sustains the cheek,
 A solemn fancy yet sustains
 Fulfilled, and she sustains her part!
 That tempts, emboldens—for a time sustains,
 We know, yet faith sustains the sorrowing heart;
Sustenance. The self-created sustenance of a mind
 Its sustenance, while the girl with pallid hands
 From which she draws her meagre sustenance.
Swain. See Shepherd-swain.
 There, bending o'er the stream, the listless swain
 A lonely spital, the belated swain
 Crouded behind the swain, in mute distress,
 "The whistling swain that plods his ringing way
 "Here," cried a swain, whose venerable head
 A fertilising moisture, said the Swain,
 A world, his rich discovery! But our Swain, Swains. Spreading her peaceful ensigns, calls the swains
 Of Swains reposing myrtle groves among!
 As, at this day, the rudest swains who dwell
 To shepherd swains, or seated harp in hand,
 Those shepherd swains whom I had lately left,
 Was suddenly revealed—the swains moved on,
 To the unlightened swains of pagan Greece.
Swale. The joy of them who fill the fields of Swale,
 Upon the rapid river Swale,
 And for the murmuring river Swale.
 The Swale flowed under the grey rocks,
 To bring the noises of the Swale
 Have helped us: Ure we crossed, and Swale,
Swallow. And as a swallow, at the hour of rest,
 Who would stop the swallow, wheeling
 Is busy at her casement as the swallow
 The Swallow, twittered subject to like spell;
 A golden spear to swallow! and that brown
 That bigotry may swallow the good name,
 Better fate have PRINCE and SWALLOW—
 The sigh of swallow flocks that twittering sweep,
 The wheeling swallow, and the darting snipe,
Swallowed. Soon to be swallowed by the briny surge;
 Or is she swallowed up, remote from ken
 Had vanished, swallowed up with all that there
 All melted into him; they swallowed up
 And swallowed up 'mid deserts infinite!
 Have vanished—swallowed up by stately roads
Swallowing. A swallowing up of lesser things in great,

Swallows. The Stone-eater, the man that swallows fire,
Swallows' Thy thorns that cleave, like swallows' nests, on high;
 Thy thorns, like swallows' nests that cleave on high;
Swam. Shook, tottered, swam before his sight;
Swamp. Through heavy swamp, or over snow-clad height—
 Was spread a treacherous swamp,
 In a swamp or watery bog;
 By weedy pool or pestilential swamp,
Swampy. And to green meadows changed the swampy shores?
Swan. The swan uplifts his chest, and backward flings
 Fair Swan! by all a mother's joys caressed,
 Or the swan stirs the reeds, his neck and bill
 Who does not know the famous SWAN?
 [Fair is the Swan, whose majesty, prevailing
 The white plumes of the floating swan;
 By a fair Swan on drowsy billows heaved,
 The swan on still St. Mary's Lake
 Float double, swan and shadow!
 Obscure Grace the winding swan pursue.
 Went heaving through the water like a swan;
 As the mute swan that floats adown the stream,
Swang. A human body that in irons swang,
 In cadence,—and Silenus swang
Swan-like. Where'er he turned, a swan-like grace
 Hence Forms that glide with swan-like ease along,
 These swan-like specks of mountain snow,
Swans. The swans that with white chests appeared in pride
 Where two fair swans together glide.
 Not swans descending with the stealthy tude,
 Came two mute Swans, whose plumes of dusky white
 Instructs the Swans their way to measure;
 The Swans, in triumph clap their wings;
 The white swans southward passed,
 Of milk-white Swans, wherefore are they not seen
Sward. See Green-sward.
 Not loth we quit the newly-hallowed sward
Swarm. Alone but for a swarm of minute creatures
 When halstones have been falling, swarm on swarm,
 More deeply even than ever: but a swarm
 Least understood. Yet, 'mid the fervent swarm
 He loved me; from a swarm of rosy boys
 But whence yon swarm that loads the western bridge,
Swarmed. Swarmed with enchantment, till his spirit sank,
 Like bees they swarmed, gaudy and gay as bees;
 The land all swarmed with passion, like a plain
Swarming. That summer, swarming as it did with thoughts
 Or daisies swarming through the fields of June.
Swarms. See Insect-swarms.
 From every side came noisy swarms
 The turbid Race are poured in thickening swarms
 Her swarms, and in succession send them forth;
 Swarms with sensation, and with gleams of sunshine,
 Let Ignorance o'er the monster swarms preside,
Sway. Where silent Hours their death-like sway extend,
 All neighbouring countries through his righteous sway
 Is man, subjected to despotic sway.
 Beneath her sway, a single forest cry
 Than strength of nerve and sinew, or the sway
 Prove that thy heaven-descended sway
 Witness this symbol of your sway,
 Through seas of ether, where the ruffling sway
 By concord winding with a sway
 The way of Death; long ere mine eyes had seen
 In man's perturbed soul thy sway benign;
 Endears that Lingerer. And how blest her sway,
 His lawful sway.
 'Tis God's appointment who must sway,
 Exalted by congenial sway
 By which true Sway doth mount; this is the stalk
 And his is henceforth an established sway—
 Raised up to sway the world, to do, undo,
 Banners at enmity with regal sway,
 Where every passion shall the sway attest
 When our enlightened minds shall bless his sway;
 For privilege redeemed of godlike sway)
 As recognising one Almighty sway:
 And for the sway of equity renewed,
 That ROLAND clove with huge two-handed sway,
 O silence of Nature, how deep is thy sway,
 Hers in whose sway alone my heart delights,
 And glad acknowledgment, of lawful sway.
 Hath any sway? or pain, or fear?
 And perfect sway, through many a thought
 The Might of spiritual sway! his thoughts, his dreams,
 Helps to restore and spread a Pagan sway:
 To giddy heights hath clomb the Papal sway.
 Of feudal sway her own appropriate seat;

Sway—continued.
 Might give to serious thought a momēt's sway,
 For sway profoundly felt as widely spread;
 Nor sometimes felt a fitness in thy sway
 Which they had witnessed, sway the man who built
 The undisguised extent, of mortal sway!
 And functions dwell in beast and bird that sway
 Thanks to the Powers that yet maintain their sway,
 All Nature welcomes Her whose sway
 When all the world acknowledged elfin sway?
 To live beneath your more habitual sway.
 Through every realm confined to thy sway;
 Not to the Zephyr's sway,
 Of feudal sway, the bright blue river passed
 To mitigate the injurious sway of place
 We were perforce connected, men whose sway
 How potent a mere image of her sway;
 Of permanent and universal sway,
 Should have such mighty sway! yet so it was),
 Of those mutations that extend their sway
 The gentle brooks!—Your desolating sway,
 To establish something of a leader's sway;
 And mild paternal sway. The potent shock
 Of military sway. The shifting aims,
 Under his spiritual sway. He hath vouchsafed
 Foretelling aged Winter's desolate sway.
 One spirit seldom failed to extend its sway
 Is the Philosophy whose sway depends
 The sceptre of his sway; his country's name,
 And Reason's sway predominates; even so far,
 And sway with absolute controul
 That must be looked for here, paternal sway,
Swayed. Had swayed the royal mace, Deem that by such fond hope the Youth was swayed,
 Nor doubt that something of their spirit swayed
 Yet unperplexed, as if one spirit swayed
 Swayed the brave man to his wrong.
 Realm there is none that if controlled or sway'd
 Swayed, and thereby enabled to contend
 And by the tide alone the water swayed.
 With finest touch of passion swayed
 And rising, by the moon of passion sway'd.
 The wind that swayed them; once, and more than once,
 Yielding to old remembrances, and swayed
 Of music swayed their motions, and the waste
 Swayed by such motives, to such ends employed;
 The plough he guided, and the scythe he swayed;
Sways. He sways them with harmony merry and loud;
 And seemliness complete, that sways
Swear. I swear the sight of him would quail me more
 Should be as Lennox has forsworn, then swear,
 And others, I've heard many swear,
 Through the long day to swear and tittle
 The glittering rabble hounded to . . . and swear Swearing. As there are daggers here. What need of swearing!
 Divine, of swearing everlasting truth,
Sweat. The man half raised the stone with pain and sweat,
 Which bathe the limbs in sweat to think of them;
 The sweat pours down from Peter's face,
Sweating. See Cold-sweating.
Swede. Nor cheer him; for the illustrious Swede bath dome
 Call not the royal Swede unfortunate,
 The Swede, the Russian; from the genial south,
Sweep. Even here, amid the sweep of endless woods,
 Beholds the unwearied sweep of wood that scales
 The Plain resounding to the whirlwind's sweep,
 And many perished in the whirlwind's sweep.
 (Where, smoothly urged, the vapours sweep
 With infant shout; and often sweep,
 Sweep their length of snowy line;
 Shall he our hand of music; he shall sweep
 And sweep away life's visionary stir;
 With finished sweep into a perfect round,
 Oh! spare to sweep, thou mournful blast,
 To sweep from many an old romantic strain
 Sweep to the charge; more high, the Dacian force,
 Pursued its way with bird-like sweep,
 How touching, when, at midnight, sweep
 Till nightly lamentations, like the sweep
 Gliding in silence with unfettered sweep!
 And fishes front, unmoved, the torrent's sweep,—
 Fate, fortune, sweep strong powers away,
 Protect from beating sunbeams, and the sweep
 The blast will sweep us all away—
 In one sad sweep of destiny—
 All Christendom:—they sweep along (was never Plinions of high and higher sweep, and make Then laugh, ye innocent Vales! ye Streams, sweep on,
 Thou tread; or sweep—borne on the managed steed—

Sweep—continued.

- And sweep him from the village ! 621 Andrew Jones 5
 And sweep him from the village ! 621 Andrew Jones 35
 To sweep along the plain of Wiodermere 643 Prelude 2, 56
 Yet then, from the indiscriminating sweep 682 Prelude 6, 487
 Will sweep the remnant of his line away ; 799 Excursion 3, 927
 They sweep distemper from the busy day 886 Excursion 9, 133
 Acquaintance as they sweep from cloud to cloud.
- Sweeping. See Widely-sweeping.
- Sweeping—vehemently sweeping—
 While the coarse rushes, to the sweeping breeze, (Nations from before them sweeping,
 Of many a furious whirl-blust sweeping by,
 For overhead are sweeping GABRIEL'S HOUNDS
 O'er the defrauded heart—while sweeping by,
 Of Rhine—or by the sweeping Po, 335
 Reckless of angry Duddon sweeping by, 379
 Then, like a spectre sweeping by, 411
 A troop of deer came sweeping by, 414
 In Reformation's sweeping overthrow, 468
 Perilous is sweeping change, all chance unsound,
 When Severn's sweeping flood had overthrown
 Came sweeping through the darkness, spinning still Left by the west wind sweeping overhead 643
- Sweeps. Beat o'er the groaning flood that sweeps away his tears, 11
 The ice breaks up and sweeps away a bridge ;
 No sound here sweeps away the will 97
 It sweeps from vale to vale ; 112
 Sweeps now along this elevated ridge ;
 Sweeps his harp, the Master rides ; 197
 Save when the wind sweeps by and sounds are caught 220
 Sweeps visibly the Wallace Wight ;
 Down from the Peanin Alps how fiercely sweeps
 And let the chartered wind that sweeps the heath
- Sweet. Yet hears her song, "hy distance made more sweet,"
- Sweet are the sounds that mingle from afar,
 How sweet its streamlet murmurs in mine ear !
 Who would not cherish dreams so sweet,
 Sweet poison spreads along the listener's veins,
 In her full lap, he sees such sweet tears flow
 That on his marriage day sweet music made !
 And often, viewing their sweet smiles, I sighed,
 The silent sea. From the sweet thoughts of home
 Yet two sweet little ones partook my bed ;
 I talk familiarly to you, sweet Lady ! 50
 Be calm, sweet Lady, they are wassailers
 This innocent Gentleman. Sweet heavens ! I told him 77
 I said, sweet Lady, you were not his Daughter—
 A heart, the fountain of sweet tears ; 77
 A month, sweet Little-ones, is past 77
 But the sweet face of Lucy Gray 83
 That you may see sweet Lucy Gray 83
 Sweet Maid, how this may be," 84
 Why you would change sweet Liswya farm
 How did he die at last ? One sweet May-morning,
 Sweet childish days, that were as long
 Sweet garden-orchard, eminently fair,
 And this sweet spring, the best beloved and best ;
 Sweet heaven forefend ! his was a lawful right ;
 In one of those sweet dreams I slept,
 "Roll back, sweet Rill ! back to thy mountain-
 bounds, 29
 Be anything, sweet Rill, but that which thou art
 now, 111
 Than the sweet flowerets of the fields ! 113
 For thee, sweet Baby !—thou hast tried,
 Sweet Babe ! and they will let him die,
 And feed his countenance with your own sweet looks, 124
 "Oh dear, dear Pony ! my sweet joy !
 Was ever such a sweet confusion,
 Sweet thoughts of angels hovering nigh,
 "Sweet babe ! they say that I am mad,
 Without me my sweet babe would die,
 'Tis thine, sweet babe, there to rest ;
 If his sweet boy he could forsake,
 The happy idleness of that sweet morn,
 And therefore, my sweet MARV, this still Nook,
 And the sweet joy which they partake,
 Of Thee, sweet Daisy !
 Have I derived from thy sweet power
 Sweet silent creature !
 In this sequestered nook how sweet
 Pleasures newly found are sweet
 Sweet Bird ! to do me wrong ;
 And the silence makes it sweet,
 Where the road it fringes, sweet,
 In that sweet mood when pleasure loves to pay
 Sweet records, promises as sweet ;
 By her sweet farewell looks, I longed to aid,
 As with the breath of one sweet flower,—
 Through your sweet influence, and the care
 "Sweet Ruth ! and could you go with me
 That to sweet Ruth that happy day
 Over his own sweet voice the Stock-dove broods ;
 In hours of weariness, sensations sweet,
 For all sweet sounds and harmonies ; oh ! then, 207

Sweet—continued.

- Your once sweet memory, studious walks and shades ! 213
 Where Pity sheds sweet tears—and Love, 215
 In thoughts whose sternness makes them sweet ; 217
 Which the sweet Bird, misnamed the melancholy,
 Shall mothers breathe a like sweet air 224
 Sweet flowers ;—what living eye hath viewed
 And through your sweet vicissitudes to range !
 An image, too, of that sweet Boy, 232
 Two lovely Sisters, still and sweet 232
 Of promises, shrill, wild, and sweet ! 233
 Was passing sweet ; the eyeballs of the Leopards,
 Is a sweet Isle, of isles the Queen ; 237
 Together make as sweet a scene 240
 A sweet and playful Highland girl, 246
 Sweet tears of hope and tenderness ! 247
 And pours forth streams more sweet than Castaly,
 Of private recollection sweet and still !
 Fairer than life itself, in this sweet Book, 251
 The prayers I make will then be sweet indeed
 How sweet it is, when mother Fancy rooks
 Sweet tones, and caught by a noble Lady blest
 Their anguish,—and they blend sweet songs with thine, 269
 The river gildeth at his own sweet will :
 Sweet Fancy ! other gifts must I receive ;
 Too late, I feel, sweet Orphan ! was the day
 And red-breasts warble when sweet sounds are rare,
 That winds into itself for sweet return,
 Of each sweet Lay, 286
 Sweet Mercy ! to the gates of Heaven 286
 Sweet Highland Girl, a very shower
 Sweet Highland Girl ! from these to part ;
 And sweet is Yarrow flowing !
 Of July suns ; he feels it sweet ;
 How sweet, on this autumnal day,
 How sweet to rest her wide-spread wings beneath !
 Sweet Nymph, O rightly of the mountains named !
 Of sweet and threatening harmony ; 314
 And loses its sweet savour ! 314
 In sumptuous buildings, vocal in sweet song,
 Yet sad as sweet,—for English words
 How sweet the prospect of yon watery glade,
 Of penetrating harps and voices sweet !
 Such sweet wayfarer—of life's spring the pride,
 But face like that sweet Boy their mortal doom,
 As that of the sweet fields and meadows green,
 But in sweet pity ; and can hear
 "Sweet HIGHLAND Girl ! a very shower
 And murmur sweet songs on the ground of their birth ! 343
 Are sweet as morning fragrance shed
 Which yet it bears, sweet Stream ! as crystal pure,
 In a sweet fellowship with kinds beloved,
 Voice of the Desert, fare-thee-well ; sweet Bird !
 I repose, nor am forced from sweet fancy to part,
 Nor art thou wronged, sweet May ! when I compare
 A sweet confusion checks the Shepherd-lass ;
 Of some sweet Babe—Flower stolen, and coarse
 Weed left 378
 Of echo doth reverberate some sweet sound ;
 How sweet were leisure ! could it yield no more
 Grave thoughts ruled wide on that sweet day,
 Upon that sweet and tender melancholy 394
 For vision so composed and sweet ?
 With air about him breathing sweet,
 While thus he brooded, music sweet 406
 Like odours, sweet as if the same) 407
 For him, the sweet half-opened Flower !
 With the sweet bird's carolling, 413
 Sweet pastoral flowers, and laurels that have crowned 418
 That we the sweet song of the Monks may hear !"
 Gales sweet as those that over Eden blew !
 "Sweet is the holiness of Youth"—so felt
 More sweet than odours caught by him who sails
 A thousand times more exquisitely sweet,
 Sweet flowers ! at whose inaudible command 445
 The monitor revives his own sweet strain ;
 Fairer than Tempe ! Yet, sweet Nightingale !
 What pleasure once encompassed those sweet names
 When her sweet Voice, that instrument of love,
 Sweet voices for the passing wind ; 476
 Repeats but once the sound of thy sweet name :
 Sweet is thy voice at pensive even ;
 Most sweet it is with unuplifted eyes
 When life was sweet, I knew not why,
 His first sweet evening yellow 481
 How sweet his music ! on my life,
 Sweet is the lore which Nature brings ;
 In that sweet mood when pleasant thoughts
 In the sweet shire of Cardigan, 483
 Which that sweet season gave, 486
 Are those that are by distance made more sweet ;
 Sweet images ! which, wheresoe'er he be,
 Loth should I be to use it : passing sweet 498
 Their harvest of sweet lays, 498
 Nor shorten the sweet life, too fugitive, 501

Sweet—continued.

- And, sweet Mother! under warrant
To honour thee, sweet May! 502
Delicious odours! music sweet, 507
Too sweet to pass away 507
And what if thou, sweet May, hast known
So fair, so sweet, withal so sensitive, 507
The sweet illusion might have hung, for hours,
The sweet and natural hopes that shall not die,
Modest and sweet, a progeny of earth, 539
"Dear child, sweet Mistress, say not so!
Sweet is the holiness of youth; and hence,
This well of mercy, Jesu's Mother sweet,
Enclosed his uncorrupted boy's sweet, 556
And longing of sweet thoughts that ever long,
According to the sweet Birds' harmony; 558
Ah! good sweet Nightingale! for my heart's cheer,
Now, my sweet Troilus, love me well, I pray!
And thence does come this air which is so sweet,
By that sweet taste of pleasure unpursued,
How oft have I heard in sweet Tilshury Vale 569
I love thee, and love the sweet Boy at thy side:
With fondness on those sweet Nestorian strains,
In its sweet opening 'neath what dire mishap
For charity's sweet sake alone, 575
Sweet Flower! I helike on day to have 579
For such a gentle Soul and sweet 580
And Thou, sweet Flower, shalt sleep and wake
Surely a sweet remembrancer of Thee, 580
Whose life was, like the violet, sweet,
Knowledge and wisdom, gained from converse sweet
Sweet as the spring, as ocean deep; 586
This sweet May-morning
Sweet rill, farewell! To-morrow's noon again,
She calls them near, and with affection sweet
While in sweet cadence rising small and still
Or sighed for thy sweet presence some dark night,
Guide hither, O sweet Moon, the maid I love so well,
For I, methought, while the sweet breath of heaven
Days of sweet leisure, taxed with patient thought
And sweet sensations that throw back our life,
Society made sweet as solitude 646
Of life's sweet season—could have seen unmoved
Sweet Spenser, moving through his clouded heaven
Towards that sweet Valley where I had been reared;
Impediments that make his task more sweet;
In slender accents of sweet verse, some tale
Sweet honey out of spurned or dreaded weeds,
Of that sweet Valley; when its paths, its shores,
Of words in tuneful order, found them sweet 674
Sweet meditations, the still overflow
How sweet at such a time, with such delight 680
Made a sweet jingling in our youthful ears;
Sweet covers did we cross of pastoral life,
In their submissiveness with power as sweet
As virtue is, or goodness; sweet as love, 685
Sweet as this last herself, for such it is, 685
And rustling leaves. Enchanting age and sweet!
Some sweet lass of the valley, looking out
His devious course. A glimpse of such sweet life
Oh, sweet it is, in academic groves,
Justice and peace. But far more sweet such toil—
Promised soft peace and sweet forgetfulness 719
To those sweet counsels between head and heart 732
Rejoiced with them and me in those sweet sounds,
For, spite of thy sweet influence and the touch
At every season green, sweet at all hours, 750
A skilful distribution of sweet sounds, 757
In all things that from her sweet influence
Admonished thus, the sweet hour coming on, 771
And sweet humanity, he was, himself, 772
Ah! what a sweet Recess, thought I, is here!
Feelingly sweet is stillness after storm,
And pity is sweet to infant minds, 790
Sweet to himself, was exercised in good 823
In the sweet spring that lurks 'mid yon green fields;
Of sweet civility, on rustic wilds, 833
Shedding sweet influence from above; or pure
Whom, in their youth, sweet study has enthralled,
Of mutual pity and forgiveness, sweet 841
Upon the last sweet slumber of her Child, 853
Sweet, perfect, to be wished for! save that here
For their sweet purposes, with perfect skill, 861
Heart-sorrow rendered sweet by gratitude, 864
That many, sweet to hear of in soft verse,
And breathe the sweet air of futurity;
Is salutary, or an influence sweet,
Vouchsafed sweet influence, while her Poet speaks
Sweet was the walk along the narrow lane
Instilled a confidence—how sweet to feel!
And sent 'warm-reeking, rich and sweet,'
How sweet thus living without life to lie,
Thus without death how sweet it is to die,
And real evil, yet be sweet withal,
Sweet-breathed (So fame reports) and die,—his sweet-breathed kine
Yet, like the sweet-breathed violet of the shade,
Sweet-briar. Pointing towards a sweet-briar, hade me climb
Sweeten. That moral sweeten by a heaven-taught lay,

Sweeten—continued.

- Did sweeten many a meditative hour, 683
That sweeten labour, make it seen and felt 8. 249 Sweetened. Which, soothed and sweetened by the grace of Heaven
Tempered with awe, and sweetened by compassion
Sweeten. And nothing to my mind a sweeter pleasure brought,
Never to living ear came sweeter sounds 136
Sweeten even than gaiety? 171
A sweeter meadow ne'er was seen,
For none made sweeter melody 243
And Nina heard a sweeter voice 295
Each minute sweeter than before,
A music sweeter than their own, 482
Winded in sweeter cadence down the vale;
A distant strain, far sweeter than the sounds 616
Sweetest. While chastening thoughts of sweetest use, bestowed
Rich steam of sweetest perfume comes and goes.
—The sweetest thing that ever grew
Of the survivor's sweetest voice (dear child,
That last, that sweetest smile of his?
"I'll teach my boy the sweetest things:
Shall grace the fairest, sweetest, plant 104
The sweetest notes must terminate and die; 252
The very sweetest Fancy curls or frames, 253
The flower of sweetest smell is shy and lowly,
Like dreams themselves; and sweetest sound—
And part far from them!—sweetest melodies 324
Surpasses sweetest music. There she sits 488
Instinct with light whose sweetest promise lies, 508
On their quick sense our sweetest music jarred; 525
The very sweetest had to thee been given 578
But as a face we love is sweetest then 660
It chance to wear, is sweetest if the heart 660
In the prime hour of sweetest scents and airs, 850
Sweetly. Sweetly ferocious, round his native walks,
How gaily murmur and how sweetly taste
While sweetly shone the evening sun
By a sure voice that can most sweetly tell,
A bondage sweetly brooked, a strife
More sweetly breathes the wind, 348
A countenance that as sweetly smiled—
Which one day sang so sweetly in the nave
So sweetly 'mid the gloom the invisible bird
Murmuring so sweetly in themselves, obeyed 647
Sweetly-breathing. Of sweetly-breathing flowers, 499 Sweetmeats. The Goddess then her lap with sweetmeats fill'd
Sweetness. Whose piercing sweetness can unloose 620
A human sweetness with the thought 232
In heauty clothed, or breathing sweetness 289
Like thoughts whose very sweetness yieldeth proof
Earth's sweetness in thy breath, 366
The sweetness of Christ's Mother pierced so
That doth "within itself its sweetness close;" 451
Was all the sweetness of a common dawn—
Did breathe its sweetness out most sensibly, 507
Her very presence such a sweetness breathed,
Admired for beauty, for her sweetness praised;
Of sweetness where dire anguish had been known,
Sweets. To scent the sweets of Piedmont's breathing rose,
Her sweets, and triumph o'er the breathing rose?
The sweets of Burn-mill meadow; 21
Returning unreluctant sweets; 110
With sweets that she partakes not some distaste 293
The sweets of earth contentedly resigned, 344
For him lost flowers their idle sweets exhale;
A flower till it have yielded up its sweets 382
Her pensive beauty; from the breeze her sweets, 384
Sweet-souled. The sweet-souled Poet of the Seasons
stood— 602
Sweet-visaged. This sweet-visaged Cherub of Parian
stone 892
Sweet-voiced. Sweet-voiced, nor wishing for a flight
Swell. O'er the curled waters Alpine measures swell,
And husy throat whose sink and swell 143
Her virgin bosom swell; 187
Vast is the compass and the swell of notes: 234
Prepared by one who loves the buoyant swell
Not Love, not War, nor the tumultuous swell
Their voices into liquid music swell,
Dread swell of sound! loud as the gusts that lash
To mark some change of service. As the swell
A sudden conflict rises from the swell 339
Do his weak ankles swell, 373
Resounded with deep swell and solemn close, 442
Neither sully it nor swell, 483
That Hulk which labours in the deadly swell,
These all to swell the village murmurs blend,
Swell more gigantic on the steadfast sight;
And wild-wood mountain lutes of saddest swell,
Soft o'er the waters mournful measures swell,
That work a summer flood with hasty swell
And freak put on, and arch word dropped—to swell
To swell thee into voice; nor longest drought
Swell his devotion with their voice in storms, 550

3 Q 2

Swelled. And my full heart was swell'd to dear delicious pain.
Where, tumbling from aloft, a torrent swelled
Swelled in my breast.—'I have been dead,' I cried, Swelling. Swelling the outcry dull, that long re-sounds
There where the peal of swelling torrents fills . . .
For a few swelling phrases, and a flash
When the dread peal of swelling torrents fills . . .
Of the ostentatious world—a swelling stage
And O, ye swelling hills, and spacious plains!
New she is not; the swelling turf reports . . .
Swellings. Proud spring-tide swellings for a regular sea,
And swellings of the spirit, was rapt and soothed,
Swells. The Baptistery's dome, and that which swells
That swells the bosom of our passing sail!
Of its grave echoes, swells a choral strain . . .
Hourly the democratic torrent swells; . . .
Catch the blithe music as it sinks and swells,
Swells like the bosom of a man set free;
He swells his lifted chest, and backward flings
He tastes the meaneast note that swells the gale;
And swells the groaning torrent with his tears.
Slow swells the service o'er the water born,
A giant morn along the forest swells
Swept. See Wind-swept.
Or, swept in anger from the insulted shore,
Who at full speed swept by us where the wood
Multitudes are swept away
Swept through the Hollow long and bare: . . .
In soul I swept the indignity away:
And fiercely swept the marble floor,—
Whose joys, from all but memory swept away,
Rolled audibly!—it swept along,
Swept onwards, did the vision cross your view?
By the current swept along;
That swept from hill to hill, from flood to flood:
With conscious sight, as he swept along—
Swept like a breeze the conscious strings,
Swept by a favouring wind that leaves thought free,
What though the rites be swept away, the fanes
It is not then when, swept with sportive ease,
Dearly united, might he swept away
To utter, above showers of blossom swept
Swept in their anger from th' affrighted shore,
And through the astonished island swept in storm,
Mounted—from province on to province swept,
Of record or report swept over us;
Of their own help have been swept away;
Swept in the storm of chase; as moon and stars
Who swept from Scotland, in a flame of zeal,
Had swept away; and now her Spirit longed . . .
And the long-priviledged house left empty—swept Survive; all else is swept away.—How bright
Engaged, near blazing hearth on clean swept floor,
As if swift clouds swept o'er it, or it caught Swerve. Honour that knows the path and will not swerve;
Your thrones, ye Powers, from duty fear to swerve!
To senseless ashes. Mark! how all things swerve
From THESE if I would swerve:
Brightening a converse never known to swerve
Swerved. I speak of such among my flock as swerved Swerves. Who swerves from innocence, who makes divorce
(Swerves not, how blest if by religious awe
Swerves not—diverted by a casual law
Swerving. Advance, swerving not from the path prescribed;
Swift. Our rambles by the swift brook's side
On her pinions swift and strong?
Faithful, though swift as lightning, the meek dove;
Turn the swift wheel round and round!
Blanch, Swift, and Music, noblest of their kind,
Swift, toward the realms that know not earthly day,
Swift as a Thracian Nymph o'er field and height!
On the swift wings of day and night,
Swift Mercury resounds with mirth,
Swift insects shine, thy hovering pursuivants:
Is but a glimmering spoke in the swift wheel . . .
On the swift flood is hurrying down,
When, far and wide, swift as the beams of morn
Earthward it glided with a swift descent:
But this swift travel scorns the company
With current swift and undefiled,
Death-parted friends, and days too swift in flight,
The Birds with progress smooth and swift
On, loitering Muse—the swift Stream chides us—on!
Down a swift Stream, thus far, a bold design
For many a voyage made in her swift bark,
Swift as the rising sun his beams extends
If gloom fell on me, swift was my escape;
High as the pitch of their swift plumes
And as a swift by tender cares oppress'd
Swift Rhone! thou wert the wings on which we cut
Was disappearing by a swift decay,
Till the swift vehicle approach, they stand;
As if swift clouds sweep o'er it, or it caught
Where Achilles swift of feet . . .

Swift-bounding. Thy nymph-like step swift-bounding o'er the lawn,
Swiftlest. Fly upon swiftest wing round field and height,
"The very swiftest of thy cars . . .
Swift-flowing. Beside swift-flowing Lowther's current clear.
Swiftly. Perishing yet more swiftly than the flower,
Swiftly went that grey-haired Servant,
Swiftly turn the murmuring wheel!
Swiftly thereon a rainbow arch to build
And swiftly down the running lake
Without restraint. How swiftly have they flown, Swiftness. All powers of swiftiness, subtily, and strength . . .
Swim. A nobler ship did never swim,
And both the undying fish that swim
This shell upon the deep would swim,
Though brain would swim, and eyes grow dim,
Swimmers. His arms, as swimmers use, and plunge—dread thought,
Swimming. The lamb, still swimming round and round,
While-as a swimming darkness came
Dim were my swimming eyes—my pulse beat slow
In him to stand before my swimming eyes,
Swims. In which he swims as taught by nature,
—There swims, of blazing sun and beating shower
Swindle. Swindle and rob, is no informer there.
Swing. Swing on th' astounded ear it's dull undying
roar:
Swinging. The distant forge's swinging thump profound;
No swinging sign-board creaked from cottage elm
Upon his swinging corse an eye can glance,
Swinging from the smoky ceiling!
Or, flung from swinging censor, shrouds
The solemn curfew swinging long and deep;
And pliant harebell, swinging in the breeze
Swings. And swings above the roof the poplar tall, Swiss. Whether some old Swiss air hath checked her haste,
The pastoral Swiss begin the cliffs to scale,
And oft he tempts the patriot Swiss
Which, heard in foreign lands, the Swiss affect
The pastoral Swiss begins the cliffs to scale,
We left the Swiss exulting in the fate
The freeborn Swiss to leave his narrow vales,
Wantonly breaking in upon the Swiss,
Switch. Bore a light switch, her sceptre of command

Switzers. A nobler race, the Switzers, and their land,
Swain. See Full-swoin, Heart-swoin, High-swoin.
Swain with incessant rains from hour to hour,
Was swain into a noisy rivulet,
A small Cascade fresh swain with snows
As a swain brook with rugged course,
Swain by that voice—whose murmur musical
Swain with chill rains, nor ever cast a look
Rests upon ankles swain and thick;
Had opened of itself (for it was swain)
Of the swain cataracts (which now are heard . . .
Swoon. Into a second swoon!
I in a slumber and a swoon was caught,
Swooning. His Mother swooning by the body lay:
Swooning-fit. As long as in that swooning-fit I lay,
Swoop. Issues the master Mind, at whose fell swoop
Sword. And grasps by fits her sword, and often eyes;
His book he prizes, nor neglects his sword;
Husband and children! one by one, by sword
Give me your sword—nay, here are stones and fragments,
But take your sword along with you, for that
Had slain his paramour with ruthless sword:
With that terrific sword
Mailed and horsed, with lance and sword,
Hangs that day's treasured sword, how firm a check
And to his Sword he would have said,
And, taking impulse from the sword,
Employed in setting his sword free
Of stagnant waters; altar, sword, and pen,
But British reason and the British sword,
Beneath the brutal sword?—Her haughty Schools
Iberian Burghers when the sword they drew
The Eternal looks upon her sword that gleams,
Despoil our temples, and by sword and flame
Where now?—Their sword is at the Foeman's heart!
Have we not conquered?—by the vengeful sword?
To Thee the exterminating sword is given.
This sword that one of our weak times might wear!
Grasped in his hand; and lo! with upright sword
Sword dropped not, javelin kept its deadly aim—
Behold how fought the Chief whose conquering sword
For fifty kingdoms by my sword recovered.
The fairest, while with fire and sword
By the stern justice of the sword!
John with a sword that will not fail,
Lament! for Diocletian's fiery sword
The Relics of the sword flee to the mountains:

Take—continued.

Take from her brow the withering flowers of eve,
Margaret, the saintly Fountness, take thy place;
For honest men delight will take
Take, then, thy seat, Vicegerent unreprieved!
That they should take, who have the power,
I'll take the shortest way."
"I, too, will have my kings that take
Take to thy heart a new delight;
There! take your seat, and let me see
This Child will take no harm.
And from the shore their course they take,
Live, and take comfort. Thou hast left behind
Were with herself at strife, would take your stand,
Brave Schill! by death delivered, take thy flight
Nor take one ray of light from Thee;
That for oblivion take their daily birth
The form and motion of a stream to take;
These records take, and happy should I be Forced by intent to take from speech its edge,
That Wisdom wears, or take his treacherous staff
Chanting her low-voiced hymn, take pride
Whose souls take pride in freedom, virtue, fame,
Then said he, "Take her to thy heart,
Take, cradled Nursing of the mountain, take
Take rock again, a boundless canopy.
Were only History licensed to take note
And smiles, they dared to take their place,
Bare breast I take and an empty hand."
The invisible God, and take for guide
"An old man's privilege I take
To take his life they have not dared;
Oh take her anguish had her fears
And in the churchyard mayest take his bride
Your ministry, that, as ye rise and take
Pastors who neither take nor point the way
The soul of Genius, if he dare to take
He will take with him to the silent tomb.
Over three Realms may take its widest range;
Rejoiced in—take, whate'er thou be, a share,
Gazied and take into his mind and heart,
Shalt take thy place with Yarrow!
Whate'er the senses take or may refuse,
We for the year to come may take
And you must kindly take it:
O turn aside,—and take, I pray,
A counter impulse let me take
To take his sentence from the balanced Block,
Vague sympathies have urged her to take flight:
Intensely—from Imagination take
High as the Sun, that he could take account
Take from the horror due to a free deed,
—But if there be a Muse who, free to take
Take those dear young Ones to a fearless nest;
On which the warbling birds their pastime take.
Will take away, may cease to give.
And take the radiance from the clouds
Oh! can a brave Man wish to take
"Take your earnings."—Oh! that I
That he on her would vengeance take.
And to the fields his road would take;
The by-way back again to take;
A poor Man's counsel take;
But take it in good part!—alas! the poor
Soon as the grain from off thy tongue they take:
And for that cause Osak I cry; take heed!
And take my leave of all such company,
Then of the Nightingale did I take note,
And that the sun did take his course not right,
Age might but take the things Youth needed not!

For I'd take my last leave both of verse and of prose.
Take pride in him!—O Passenger, farewell!
Alas! what idle words; but take Which good men take with them from earth to heaven.
Do take a white colouring from an eye
Take pleasure in the midst of happy thoughts,
Him will I take, and in close covert keep,
Shall I take up my home? and what clear stream
Take refuge and beguile myself with trust
Take up a station calmly on the perch
Not less delighted did I take my place
To give and take a greeting that might save
Know there are on earth to take in charge
Leave let me take to place before her sight
Take firmer hold of us, and words themselves
That cannot take long leave of pleasant thoughts.
To part from company and take this hook
Yet why take refuge in that plea?—the fault,
Licensed to take the meaning that we love!
We take our way. A rare-show is here,
But let me now, less moved, in order take Full-formed, that take, with small internal help,
Take one,—that ancient festival, the Fair,
Or spirit that full soon must take her flight.
With them to take a troubled human heart,
I knew that wound external could not take
That I was led to take an eager part
For manna, take a lesson from the dog
How without njury to take, to give

Take—continued.

Take note of this? When I began to enquire,
May boldly take his way among mankind
Was uttered, midnight darkness seemed to take
In the self-haunting spirit learned to take
To take a station among men, the step
By circumstance to take unto the height
The silent stars! Oft did he take delight
To take a farewell of me; for he feared
To give her comfort, and was glad to take
The yellow stone-crop, suffered to take root
Said—"Shall we take this pathway for our guide?—
If I must take my choice between the pair
Take the live herbage from the mead, and strip
Whose fibres cannot, if they would, take root,
Take flight; while with their clang the air resounds.
Take courage, and withdraw yourself from ways
Of a most rustic ignorance, and take —"Take, running river, take these locks of mine"
-(Take from him what you will upon the score
And have the dead around us, take from them
Will mercifully take me to himself.
Of what he seems to take; or gives it back,
And resolution competent to take
Obssequiously doth take upon herself
Be rooted out, and virtuous habits take
For those ordained to take their sounding flight
Oh! let thy Word prevail, to take away
In notes which mountain echoes would take up
By her side I'll take my place,
And take up my Uncle's bow.
"I only touch—not take—don't fear,
Take up, the cloud-capped hills repeat, the Name),
That take it with them hence, where'er they go.
I cannot take possession of the sky,
Take from us at your pleasure—yet shall ye
—Take we at once this one sufficient hope,
Taken. See Off-laken, Ta'en.
This garb was taken up that indolence
Had taken refuge in this neighbourhood,
Which thou hast taken to thee as thy own,
Hast taken gifts which thou dost little need.
And taken thy first leave of those green hills
Some memory that had taken flight;
Taken praise that should be thine,
Wouldst thou be taught, when sleep has taken flight,
Learn from thy course, where'er their own be taken,
A single human life have wrongly taken,
Snatches of music taken up and dropt
Was taken up, singing his song away;
Have I been taken; this is genuine life
Be now for ever taken from my sight,
This Boy was taken from his mates, and died.
In mind, as when I thence had taken flight
Dejection taken up for pleasure's sake,
Was taken up by scoffers in their pride,
From her maternal cares, had taken up
"That poor Man taken hence to-day," replied
Taken from air and sunshine when the roses
The oldest, he was taken last, survived Takes. Which the goat cannot climb, takes his sounding flight;
Her brother now takes up the note,
Thus fares it still with all that takes its birth
Of moon or stars he takes no heed;
Many a breathing-fit he takes;
He starts—and takes, at the admonition,
Takes down the canvas overhead;
Takes delight to play upon.
He through the portal takes his silent way,
With malice—that again takes flight;
So from his pocket Peter takes
Takes fire.—The men that have been reappear;
That to itself takes all, Eternity.
That Nature takes, her counter-work pursuing.
For gentleless uses, oft-times Nature takes
He takes alone his far-off stand,
Requiem which Earth takes up with voice un-
daunted,
Or like the Alpine Mount, that takes its name
Mourns less for what age takes away
But, like an arrow, to the river takes.
Spring takes, O sprightly May! thy shape,
Another takes its place.
Each takes in this high matter, all may move
Thus takes the Nightingale her leave of me;
Where'er the aged Beggar takes his rounds,
Takes one unsparing handful for the scrip
Full ten times a day takes his heart by surprise.
No mood, which season takes away, or brings:
His wizard course where hoary Derwent takes
Turns recedant to her task; takes heart again,
That field-ward takes her walk with decent steps.
On the pure bliss, and takes her rest with God.
Hope takes, or Doubt or Fear is forced to wear,
Of time and change disdaining, takes its course
Dispersed, like music that the wind takes up
That God, who takes away, yet takes not half
Which it sustained. But no one takes delight
In manner of a bird that takes delight
As one or other takes the fit of glee,

Takest. Which now thou tak'st upon thee. God forbid
 Takest away, and into souls doth creep,
 Thou takest not away, O Death!
 Thou tak'st thy way, carrying the heart and soul
Taking. See Leave-taking, Pains-taking.
 And flow it did; nor taking heed
 Taking her for some way-worn rover,
 He hath kenned them taking wing;
 And, taking impulse from the sword,
 Who, taking counsel of unbending Truth,
 For they are taking the baptismal Vow
 The downward pathway taking,
 And taking up a voice shall speak (tho' still
 But salutation taking its glad way
 Full often, taking from the world of sleep
 By whom we were encompassed. Taking leave
 Submits to nothing less than taking in
 Taking my seat, I saw (nor blush to add,
 But not dismayed, nor taking to the shame
 Are scattered everywhere, taking their date
 The vapours had receded, taking there
 "Yes," said the Wanderer, taking from my lips
 He, taking counsel of his own clear thoughts,
 In works of havoc; taking from these vales,
 To endure for aye. The Vicar, taking note
 —We followed, taking as he led, a path
Tala. See Fellow-tale, Love-tale, Tell-tale.
 Alas! the idle tale of man is found
 Confused the Marathonian tale appears,
 For of that ruin she had heard a tale
 Such tale of this lone mansion she had learned,
 She knew not what dire pangs in him such tale could wake.
 Their way the Woman thus her mournful tale
 renewed.
 As if because her tale was at an end,
 Stretched on the ground, began a piteous tale;
 To end her wrongs. But if the blind Man's tale
 The tale of this his grandam Barony
 No! this is not the place to hear the tale:
 Here to impart the tale, of which, last night,
 The tale was spread abroad; my power at once
 Nay; hear my tale, 'tis fit that you should hear it—
 No symbols, Sir, to tell us that plain tale:
 Tell seemingly no doubtful tale;
 A portion of the tale may well be left
 The Tale I follow to its last recess
 Would surely be a tedious tale.
 A most delightful tale pursuing!
 And hence this Tale, while I was yet a Boy
 This Tale the Shepherd told.
 Then, when the Hero of my tale
 Thou bringest unto me a tale
 His homely tale, this very day;
 (And all do in this tale agree)
 And I to this would add another tale.
 To them I must relate the Tale
 Began the promised Tale.
 We've reached at last the promised Tale;
 His tale did Peter tell.
 —Here ends my Tale: for in a trice
 The tale I have been telling,
 But chiefly let one Cottage hear the tale;
 And for the boldest tale belief commands.
 The tale as fabulous.—Here while I recline,
 Ere he his Tale recounted.
 That life is but a tale of morning grass
 A tale of tears, a mortal story!
 'Tis well that she hath heard the tale,
 The spirit of a mournful tale,
 Some tale will be related.
 A tale in every thing.
 It is no tale; but, should you think,
 Perhaps a tale you'll make it.
 This lamentable tale I tell!
 With these dark words begins my Tale:
 In woman's shape. But why prolong the tale,
 How among them it was a common tale,
 And thus it was that she began her tale.
 Oh, what would they be to my tale of two Thieves?
 But tells a plain tale of the days that are flown.
 Doth the same tale repeat:
 Romantic tale by Milton left unsung;
 A tale from my own heart, more near akin
 With fond and feeble tongue a tedious tale.
 Up to an eminence, and told a tale
 Whose tale is only of himself; even so,
 Than these to which the Tale, indulgent Friend!
 He told in few plain words a soldier's tale—
 Whose tale Cervantes tells; yet not the knight,
 Some simply fashioned tale, to tell again.
 In slender accents of sweet verse, some tale
 Those unclaimed garments telling a plain tale
 Of sound humanity to which our Tale
 Almost indifferent, even the historian's tale
 As through a book, an old romance, or tale
 But I might here, instead, repeat a tale,
 The ill-fated pair) in that plain tale will draw
 That some dramatic tale, ended with shapes
 He had small need of books; for many a tale

Tale—continued.
 That left half-told the preternatural tale,
 Of garrulous age; nor did the sick man's tale,
 All recollection; and that simple tale
 Her homely tale with such familiar power,
 An idle dreamer! 'Tis a common tale,
 A tale of silent suffering, hardly clothed.
 "This tale did Margaret tell with many tears:
 To thank him for the tale which he had told.
 Some way-beguiling tale. Nor less regard
 "Now for the tale with which you threatened us!"
 Should the tale tire you, let this challenge stand:
 "So ends my dolorous tale, and glad I am
 Is fashioned like an ill-constructed tale;
 This tale gives proof that Heaven most gently deals
 With words that might be prelude to a tale
 Song of the muses, sage historic tale,
 Short was his life, and a brief tale remains.
 I will relate a tale for those who love
 Yea to this hour I cannot read a tale
Talant. And sorceries of talent misapplied.
 Which practised talent readily affords,
 Commemorating genius, talent, skill,
Talents. Your talents, power, or wisdom, deem him not
 Than talents, worth, and prosperous industry.
 Thither his popular talents be transferred;
 His talents lending to exalt the freaks
Tales. At times, and tales unsought beguile the day,
 With tales of weakness and infirmity!
 Marmaduke! I suspect unworthy tales
 We joined our tales of wretchedness together,
 Should he, by tales which would draw tears from iron,
 Such tales of your dead Father!—God is my judge,
 To hear these tales they will repeat,
 Help us to tell Her tales of years gone by,
 I'll tell him many tales of Thee
 Of those domestic tales that spake to me
 Telling tales about the sun
 But in Man's fortunes. Hence a thousand tales
 And with him many tales he brought
 Such tales as told to any maid
 Bring tales of distant lands.
 And of those tales, whatever they were,
 By tales of love and sorrow,
 And heard old tales by the convent-fire,
 No tales of Runnagates fresh landed, whence
 Sang youthful tales of shepherds and their flocks;
 By the strong mind, and tales of warlike feats,
 Heard him, while birds were warbling, tell his tales
 A slender abstract of the Arabian tales;
 The tales that charm away the wakeful night
 Forgers of daring tales! we bless you then,
 Tales of the May-pole dance, and wreaths that decked
 Myself from frequent perils; nor were tales
 Tales of the poets, as it made the heart
Taliesin. The song of Taliesin;—Ours shall mourn
Taliesin's. Nor Taliesin's unforgotten lays,
Talk. Talk, laughter, and perchance a church-tower knell:
 To traveller who might talk of any casual theme.
 Oh, Sir, you would not talk thus, if you knew
 Lord Clifford—did you see him talk with Herbert?
 I talk familiarly to you, sweet Lady!
 Would lead me to talk fondly. Do not fear;
 Blown to you from a trumpet. Why talk thus?
 About you still; you talk of solitude—
 And held such intermitted talk
 We talk about the dead by our fire-sides.
 This is sad talk—they'll never sound for him—
 We'll talk of sunshine and of song,
 'Twere better to be dumb than to talk thus.
 To whom I sometimes in our idle talk
 That they, with whom you once were happy, talk
 Daisy! again I talk to thee,

Talked—continued.

Shed when he talked of them where they were not,
 He talked about him with a cheerful love.
 And all that to herself she talked,
 Unworthy things she talked, and wild;
 She talked and sung the woods among,
 And, while he talked of blows and scars,
 Last Christmas-eve we talked of this,
 Have sate and talked where gowans blow,
 We talked with open heart, and tongue
 We sauntered, played, or rioted; we talked
 With these defenders of the Crown, and talked,
 To cheer us both. But long we had not talked Enkindled by the sun. He sate—and talked
 The sound of titled names, and talked in glee

Talking. To hear a stranger talking about strangers,
 The Housewife answered, talking much of things
 Thus talking of that Peasant, we approached
 The old man still stood talking by my side;
 While he was talking thus, the lonely place,
 The talking boat that moves with pensive sound,
 And talking voices, and the low of herds,
 And talking to itself when all things else
 A correspondence with the talking world
 To tread for pastime, talking with his mates,

Talks. He talks of a transition in his Soul,
 In loving words he talks to him,
 Dreams on the banks, and to the river talks.
 Whom the fifth Harry talks of. Silence! hush!
Tall. And swings above the roof the poplar tall.
 Charmed the tall circle of the enchanted steeps.
 The tall sun, pausing on an Alpine spire,
 On the tall peaks the glistening sunbeams play,
 Lank as a ghost and tall, his shoulders bent,
 That does not play you false.—On that tall pike
 Majestic in her person, tall and straight;
 And, when we came in front of that tall rock
 And the tall Steep of Silver-horn, sent forth
 Fair ferns and flowers, and chiefly that tall fern,
 The tall and upright figure of a Mao
 Of tallest hollies, tall and green;
 And Glimmer-crag, his tall twin brother,
 Tall and erect, with tempting clusters hung,
 That tall Man, a giant in bulk and in height,
 She had a tall man's height or more;
 And, near the fountain, flowers of stature tall
 Haunted me like a passion: the tall rock,
 The trees' tall summits withered at the sight;
 Of that tall rock, as from a hidden world,
 Tall trees, green arbores, and ground-flowers in flocks;
 Gleams on the grass-crowned top of yon tall Tower,
 Each with a lance, erect and tall,
 Of close-clipt foliage green and tall,
 Mark him, of shoulders curved, and stature tall,
 Watching, with upward eye, the tall tower grow
 Him found we not: but, climbing a tall tower,
 The redbreast sings from the tall larch
 'Tis said he once was tall.
 Attained a stature twice a tall man's height,
 Whence the tall window drinks the morning rays;
 Tall were the flowers, the grove a lofty cover,
 Survive upon the tall mast's height;
 Charms the tall circle of 'th' enchanted steeps.
 —The tall Sun, tip-toe on an Alpine spire,
 Of a tall ash, that near our cottage stood;
 Myself unseen. He was of stature tall,
 A span above man's common measure, tall,
 And that monastic castle, 'mid tall trees,
 There, too, conspicuous for stature tall
 Upwards through every stage of the tall stem,
 To measure the altitude of some tall crag
 Where two tall hedge-rows of thick alder boughs
 From these tall elms; the cottage-clock struck eight:—
 A meagre person, tall, and in a garb
 Of a tall rock, their airy citadel—
 A tall and shining holly, that had found
 Upon the tall mast streaming. But, ye Pnwerns
 Tall was her stature; her complexion dark
 Stands a tall ash-tree; in th'wose topmost twig
 Of that tall pine, the shadow of whnse bare
 —And you tall pine-tree, whose compassing sound
 Tall ash-tree, snow by winds, by vapours nursed,
 Along a hedge of hollies dark and tall,
 Through tall green silent wvnds and ruins grey.
 Deep pools, tall trees, black chasms, and dizzy crags,
Taller. How 'twill burn down the taller; and they all
 Was two years taller: 'twas a joy to see,
 The taller followed with his hat in hand,
Tallest. Small prey upon the tallest. Solitude!—

Target. Before the target stood—in claim
 The target mouldering like ungathered fruit; . . .

Tarn. See Bow-scale-tarn, Loughrigg-tarn.
 A silent tarn helow!
 Send through the tarn a lonely cheer;
 By a brook-side or solitary tarn . . .
 Leaving St. Sunday's Crag, to Grisdale tarn
Tarpeian. Tarpeian named of yore, and keeping still Tarried. They tarried in the wood together.

Tarry. Why can he tarry yonder?—In our church-yard
 He comes to tarry with thee three hours' space;
 Upon the signs that pass away or tarry;
 Balanced in ether he will never tarry,
 I may nnt tarry here!
 Pray also thou for us, while here we tarry Tarrying. No tarrying; where She comes the winds must stir:
 Immediately he came, nnt tarrying,
 Tarrying at will in many a pleasant spot . . . 258 With Ships* 13

Tars. The moments' humour, rough Tars spend their wit.

Tartan. In crimson stockings, tartan plaid,

Tartar. Malays, Lascars, the Tartar, the Chinese,

Tartaraan. Nor Anguish strayed from her Tartarean den;

Tartarean flags are caught at, and unfurled—
When a Tartarean darkness overspreads

Tartarian. Among Tartarian wilds—fell short, far short,

Of the Tartarian dynasty composed

Tartar's. Fleet the Tartar's reinless steed,

Task. You'll find a task for half a year.
Both gladly now deferred their task;
Thou hast foreknowledge that such task is thine;
Through foul and fair our task fulfilling;
But 'tis a fruitless task to paint for me,
That Man may be accomplished for a task
From new incitements friendly to our task,
Comes she with a votary's task,
A further, though far easier, task
In sunshine were his only task,
Of what befalls—be this your task—
Upon the Patriots, animates 'em their task;
Making your hardest task your best delight,
Make haste, your morning task resign;
The task, in smoother walks to stray;
And now, his task performed, the flood stands still,
Due to the day's unfinished task; of pen
Hard task! I exclaim the undisciplined, to lean
All in one deuteous task agree.
His task accomplished to his mind,
To measure height and distance; lonely task,
Are monuments of his unfinished task.
Turns recreant to her task; takes heart again,
Hard task, vain hope, to analyse the mind,
Impediments that make his task more sweet;
Pleased with his daily task, or, if not pleased,
A spirit friendly to the Poet's task,
In unlabouring pleasure, with no task
There, 'tis the shepherd's task the winter long
For a deliverer's glorious task,—and such
Hence could I see how Babel-like their task,
Smooth task! for words find easy way, inspired
If future years mature me for the task,
Gladly would I have waited till my task
A task he was unable to perform.
Ceased from his task; and she with faltering voice
The appointed task and duties of the day,
"A little mourner, whom it is my task
He went about his hospitable task.
A task it was, I own, to hold discourse
Too young for any profitable task.
'Tis, by comparison, an easy task
What would they tell?" said I,—but, from the task
Yet much, I feel, is wanting—else the task
"Time flies; it is his melancholy task
Was busier with his task—to rid, to plait,
Smooth task, with his compared, whose mind could string,
That task would foil;" then, letting fall his voice
Enter, and each the wanted task resumes
And now, its task performed, the flood stands still
A task above my skill; the silent mind

Task-master. A feathered task-master cries, "Work

Acknowledging no task-master, at will

Tasks. With many tasks they were resigned to thee:
Tasks that are no tasks renewing,
For finest tasks of earth or air:
As on their silent tasks they move!
That hath in noble tasks been tried;
As this low structure, for the tasks of Spring
His soul her daily tasks renewed,
To blither tasks did Simon rouse
Among the tasks of old life, hath wrought
Life's daily tasks with them to share
By duty chained, Not seldom did those tasks
Where sovereign Nature dictated the tasks
And I have other tasks. Recall to mind
He mingled, where he might, the various tasks
Went through his usual tasks, a silent change
And the most difficult of tasks to keep
May issue thence, recruited for the tasks
Of her close tasks, and long captivity,
In tasks which guardian Angels might approve,

From tasks too frequent, or beyond its power
Eight hundred years uncalled to other tasks

Taste. Or rather stay to taste the mild delights
And plants were wholesome, now of deadly taste:
How gaily murmur and how sweetly taste
A taste of this great pleasure, viewing
With baubles of theatrical taste,

Taste—continued.

Too harshly hath been doomed to taste
Nor spares to stoop her head, and taste
And pleasure-grounds where Taste, refined Co-mate
Came studious Taste; and many a pensive stranger
The taste of this once-intellectual Land.
His Mother leaves him free to taste
By that sweet taste of pleasure unpursued,
The squeamish in taste, and the narrow of mind,
From touch of growing grass, that may not taste
Not seldom differed from my taste in books,
Fell under the dominion of a taste
Far less did rules prescribed by passive taste,
Not, doubtless, without help of female taste
Tasted. "Who never tasted grace, and goodness ne'er had felt."

Tears—continued.

That tears burst forth a main. Did gleams appear ? Deep in the thankful heart ;—yet tears will flow. Though it can wet with tears the hardest cheek. Bedewed with meditative tears . . . The tears into his eyes were brought, The tears which came to Matthew's eyes . . . Were tears of light, the dew of gladness. " My eyes are dim with childish tears, It came, and we were glad ; yet tears were shed ; Our tears from passion and from reason came, Audible tears, from some invisible source . . . This thy First-born, and with tears With thy own blood, which tears in torrents shed Fail to wash out, tears flowing ere thy troth Their first look—blinded as tears fell in showers . . . Let me not ask what tears may have been wept . . . As blameless pleasure, not without some tears, All that they think and feel, with tears of joy ; " My thanks with silent tears " Tears might be shed, and I might pray, Kindled mid rapturous tears ; Heart-breaking tears, and melancholy dreams His salt tears trickled down like showers of rain ; And with that word, she into tears burst out. And tears of fifteen will come into his eyes. May read them not without some bitter tears. The eyes of all Savona streamed with tears. And murder causes some sad tears to flow, No tears of passionate regret Inspired—works potent over smiles and tears. Thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears. And eyes through tears the mountain's shadeless height ; And swells the groaning torrent with his tears. While burn in his full eyes the glorious tears. And-tears before him travel like a cloud. Glimmers before my sight through thankful tears, (Oh were it mine !) to hallow saddest tears, Glad welcome had I, with some tears, perhaps, Almost to tears I sometimes could be sad . . . For penitential tears and trembling hopes . . . Wetting the turf with never-ending tears . . . Pale and bedropped with everflowing tears . . . Yet at this very moment do tears start I wept not then,—but tears have dimmed my sight, Tears from the hearts of others, when their own . . . Was laid with tears. Then suddenly the scene Came back upon me, so that some few tears . . . Whether by words, locks, sighs, or tears, revealed ; When, after the first mingling of our tears " This tale did Margaret tell with many tears : As if she had been shedding tears of joy . . . Weeping, and weeping have I waked ; my tears The tears stood in her eyes. I left her then . . . Perhaps is shedding orphan's tears ; you also Honour my little cell with some few tears . . . At others' tears in pity ; and in scorn . . . Ruefully seized, and shedding bitter tears, As the sole spring and fountain-head of tears, And tears, in pride suppressed, in shame concealed— Grieving for sin, and penitential tears Of the fresh shower, but of poor Ellen's tears Bedropped with tears. 'Twill please you to be told Of many tears, virtuous and thoughtful grief ; Due resignation. Therefore, though some tears With tears, that wept not then ; nor were the few, Tears wipe away, and pleasant tidings bring ; Reason, and, with that reason, smiles and tears ; Of tears that have been shed at sight of it, Insatiate Charlotte's tears, and Charlotte's smile. That moistened Dunkirk's sands with blood and tears, Tease. Our watchful house-dog, that would tease And tire . . . Tease, and the thought of time so spent depress, Teased. And doubts and scruples seldom teased the brain, Had to his joy unearthed a hedgehog, teased Teasing. His wife sat near him, teasing matted wool, Checked in your course by many a teasing burr ; Press forward by the teasing dogs unscared . . . And teasing ways of children vexed not him ; Tedious. Would surely he a tedious tale. " Rocking as in a dream the tedious year ; " With fond and feeble tongue a tedious tale. Grows tedious even in a young man's ear. Proved tedious, and I gradually withdrew 'Tis long and tedious ; but my spirit clings Into this tract again. Nine tedious years ; —But why this tedious record ?—Age, we know, Twelve tedious years ago, Relieves the tedious holiday of age— Tedium. The tedium of fantastic idleness : . . .

Teem. Which was to teem with high communion,
With a thousand soft pictures his memory will teem,
—With promises the Hebrew Scriptures teem :
Teeming. Pinions that fanned the teeming mould
When teeming Matrons—yielding to rude faith
With strong sensations teeming as it did
Teeme. The region of his inner spirit teems
Teem. The God of Love afflict thee with all teem, Tees. His Followers gathering in from Tees,
A strong Hold on the banks of Tees ;
On the steep rocks of winding Tees ;—
Teeth. And, grinning in his turn, his teeth
That evermore his teeth they chatter,
His teeth they chatter, chatter still.
His teeth they chatter, chatter still !
Yet still his jaws and teeth they clatter,
His teeth they chatter, chatter still.
Of immaturity, and—in the teeth
Telegraph. And some the hovering clouds, our telegraph, declare.
Telescope. A Telescope upon its frame, and pointed to the sky :
For one day with my telescope,
And shattered telescope, together linked
Tell. No peasant leans upon his pole, to tell
The pictured fane of Tell suspends his oar ;
Through which rough Garry cleaves his way, can tell
Thus does the father to his children tell
Oh ! tell me whither—for no earthly friend
To tell the change that Voice within her wrought
Repair to Liddesdale, and tell the Band
Did not the Soldier tell thee that himself,
Do you tell fortunes ? Oh Sir, you are like the rest.
Against this venerable Man ? I'll tell you :
And I will tell you all !—You know not, Sir,
And tell me if 'tis fat for such a work.
Give me your hand ; where are you, Friends ? and tell me
Saw him—his face turned toward me ; and I tell thee
Tell where you found us. At some future time
I pray tell me what this land is worth by the acre.
I tell you his hands and his body were cold—
And, though it smote me more than words can tell,
And words that tell these things be heard in vain ?
"And where are they ? I pray you tell."
Yet ye are seven ! I pray you tell,
"Now tell me, had you rather be,"
My little Edward, tell me why."
"I cannot tell, I do not know."
"Why, Edward, tell me why ?"
I shall tell you truth. A Lamb
Hear the homely truths I tell,
No symbols, Sir, to tell us that plain tale :
He had not dared to tell him who he was.
Help us to tell Her tales of years gone by,
Something must stay to tell us of the rest.
And I will dare to tell,
Tell seemingly no doubtful tale ;
What have I ? shall I dare to tell ?
In friendship she to me would often tell.
I'll tell him many tales of Thee."
That dooms her to a convent.—Who shall tell,
Yet, for his life, he cannot tell.
Which she to Susan will not tell.
Good Susan tell me, and I'll stay ;
Which way to turn she cannot tell.
Oh Reader ! now that I might tell
O gentle Muses ! let me tell
I cannot tell ; but, while he laughs,
Cried Betty, "Tell us, Johnny, do,
And, Johnny, mind you tell us true."
Less impassioned words might tell
Doth in its silence of past sorrow tell,
Tell me, ye Zephyrs ! that unfold,
Before you hang my wreaths to tell
What more he said I cannot tell,
Say, Dora ! tell me, by your placid moon,
Could tell with self-dissatisfaction
O wherefore ? wherefore ? tell me why
"I cannot tell ; I wish I could ;
No earthly tongue could ever tell ;
"I cannot tell ; but some will say
"I cannot tell how this may be,
I will not stop to tell how far he fled,
"The arbour does its own condition tell ;
And in my simple mind we cannot tell
Tell thy name, thou trembling Field ;
By a sure voice that can most sweetly tell,
O for a balance fit the truth to tell
In simple truth I cannot tell ;
Faint recollection seems to tell
Tell to a curious world the cause
His tale did Peter tell.
Even Joy could tell, Joy craving truce and rest
Of prospect, whereof many thousands tell.
Will no one tell me what she sings ?—
And, as I promised, I will tell
By Uri's lake, where Tell —Have we not known—and live we not to tell—

Tell—continued.
In loose fashion tell their joys ;
He with enraptured voice will tell
With lip and heart to tell their gratitude
The measure, simple truth to tell,
Did mighty Tell repair of old—
Ask of his fellow-men, and they will tell
Could tell a tragic history
To tell, or, Lady, you to hear ?
Rushed in ; and—while,—O grief to tell !
—Why tell of mossy rock, or tree,
Past things, revealed like future, they can tell
To tell—how, finding in the rash distress
When she would tell how Brave, and Good, and Wise,
Shines through his soul—"that he may see and tell
Tell, if ye may, some star-crowned Muse, or Saint !
Tell what rushed in, from what she was relieved—
So piety took root ; and Song might tell
Canal, and Viaduct, and Railway, tell !
Speak, Giant-mother ! tell it to the Morn
He touched ; what followed who shall tell ?
As he to you will tell,
This lamentable tale I tell !
And no one can tell whither. Dearest Friend !
Of water-breaks, with grateful heart could tell.
Of their presence tell—too bright
Thoughts, chances, sights, or doings, which we tell
Of Nightshade haply yet may tell ;
None could tell if it were night-time,
The neighbours tell, and tell you truly,
And shall the Verse not tell of lighter gifts
Might tell what intercourse she found,
Had heard her Father tell
To tell a story I will use my power ;
Help me to tell it in thy reverence !
To tell abroad thy mighty worthiness,
To tell her if her child had passed that way ;
To tell me the cause why thou dost sing this hymn,
To tell his might my wit may not suffice ;
Will tell of fraud and never-ceasing hate,
To tell his worth, the marble of this tomb
(What weakness prompts the voice to tell it here ?)
Let rescued Europe tell the story.
They tell that your future Queen is born.
If e'er thy beam, as Snyrna's shepherds tell,
I spare to tell of what ensued, the life
Suffered in silence for Truth's sake ; or tell,
Of Cumbria's rocky limits, they can tell
Nor is my aim neglected if I tell
Grew weaker, and I hasten on to tell
A prospect in the mind. 'Twere long to tell
Heard him, while birds were warbling, tell his tales
Some simply fashioned tale, to tell again,
And tell you all their cunning ; he can read
As from restraints and bonds. Yet who can tell—
To tell us what is passion, what is truth,
By specious wonders, and too slow to tell
And tell, since juvenile errors are my theme,
I hear thee tell how bees with honey fed
Harmonious as your own, that I might tell
Keenly industrious. She with pride would tell
I cannot tell how she pronounced my name :—
"This tale did Margaret tell with many tears :
How shall I trace the change, how bear to tell
But History, time's slavish scribe, will tell
Of faith was wanting. Tell me, why refused
What would they tell ?" said I,—but, from the task
At length to tell his love, but sued in vain ;
My reverend Father tell that, 'mid the calm
And I could tell, not travelling for my theme
Of life's autumnal season.—Shall I tell
Their grave migration, the good pair would tell,
Tell in their idle songs of wandering gods,
Of Tell came trooping from a thousand huts,
Economists will tell you that the State
To which (and who can tell where or how soon ?)
Must tell you, Captain, Lord, and Ladies,
Fontarabbia can tell
As gathered from the Matron's lips, and tell
Let grandeur tell thee whither now is frown
Telling. See Fortune-telling.
When Michael, telling o'er his years, began
Telling tales about the sun,
Twelve strokes that clock would have been telling
"Hush, boys ! you're telling me a lie ;
The tale I have been telling,
Of the GREAT WATERS telling how they rose,
Telling melancholy hours !
Alas ! 'twas hardly worth the telling,
Those unclaimed garments telling a plain tale
Of the church clock telling the hours with strokes
In turn its visitant, telling there his hours
Tell's. Or is it Tell's great Spirit, from the dead
For Tell's dread archery renowned,
Tells. So speaks the Chronicle, and tells of Lear.
The Story tells what courses were pursued,
Tells that these words thy humbleness offend ;
"This visage tells thee that my doom is past :

 If fall they must. Now, whither doth it tend?
 Whether the whistling Rustic tend his plough
 To tend their silent boats and ringing waives,
 As to a common centre, tend,
 Shall tend, with his own dark-eyed Maid,
 Ye living, tend your holy cares;
 Can such a vain oblation tend;
 That, as we downward tend,
 Might tend to wean him. Therefore with her hues,
 Who tend her altars, wait upon her throne,
 And local accidents, shall tend alike
 Or feel, shall tend to quicken and refit;

 That bleat, how tender! of the dam
 Repentance is a tender Sprite;
 Where'er the tender grass was leading
 And tender sounds, yet you might see
 Where blue and grey, and tender green,
 A look more tender than severe;
 And penetrated all with tender light,
 A thousand tender pleasures, thine and mine,
 Smooth, graceful, tender, or sublime—
 A tender hazy brightness;
 Of tender thoughts, that nestle there—
 The dew of morn, or April's tender shower?
 The tender insects sleeping in their bells;

 The tender Infant who was long
 Cast into that recess—the tender shade,
 Whose tender love, here faltering on the way
 For he too tender was of age to know;
 To tender offices and pensive thoughts.
 The tender peace of rural thought:
 No thorns can pierce her tender feet,
 Found—for all interests, hopes, and tender cares,
 And as a swift by tender cares oppress'd
 Nor that vile wretch who bade the tender age
 To curb, exalt, reform the tender mind:
 There have I loved to show the tender age
 And purge from Vice's dross my tender charge.
 Teach from the heart the tender tear to flow;
 When she would enter on her tender scheme
 Were, in the main, of mood less tender: strong,
 Dumb creatures find him tender as a aun,
 Lacked not anticipations, tender dreams,
 Of gales Etesian or of tender thoughts.
 To feed a Poet's tender melancholy
 Directly, but to tender thoughts by means
 As tender infants are: and yet how great!
 He had sate lord in many tender hearts;

 With tender pleasure of the verses graven
 Nor tender yearnings, wanting for my good
 And the lamb's mother, and their tender ways
 Be tender as a nursing mother's heart;

 Her tender spirit, and her contrite heart,
 Tender or blithe; now, as the varying mood
 By tender sorrow for our mortal state)
 Abashed, and tender pity overawed."
 Raised in the tender passage of the throat
 Tender emotions spreading from the heart

Tending to the darlesome hollows
Served, tending a few sheep and goats, a ragged

Sylph or Faery hither tending,—
By the silent thicket, now tending
Kindly emotion tending to console
Nor shall we not be tending towards that point
This was the time, when, all things tending fast
Of all infirmity, and tending all
Should breathe a word tending to violate
Tending to patience when affliction strikes;
Tendrils. Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood,
Tends. So to the homestead, where the grandsire

And tends a flock from hill to hill:
And, whoso'er the stealing footstep tends,
Alas! where'er the current tends,
Sidelong, and half-reverted. She who tends
Of fine propensities, that tends, if urged Tenement. A tiny tenement, forsooth, and frail, as

Tenth. For which upon the tenth night if thou fail
Of the tenth day will come, and end his sorrow.
Tents. I'll look upon your tents again.
Tents of a camp that never shall be razed—
She hastens to the tents
They lodged in leafy tents and cabins low;
Their tents, and check the current of their arms.
Or yonder is it that the tents must be;
By naked huts, wood-built, and sown like tents
A Parliament of Monsters. Tents and Booths
Pitches her tents before me as I move,
Who pitch their tents under the green-wood tree?
Tenure. Wisely; and by such tenure do we hold
Tepid. Long springs and tepid winters, on the banks
Tern. That I—so near the term to human life
Grants to thy mission a brief term of silence,
"For term of life Love shall have hold of me"—
The dangerous craft of culling term and phrase
That scarcely, as my term of pupilage
Familiarly, a household term, like those,
A gift, to use a term which they would use,
Their lenient term of separation past,
Till the Term, for which she's fated Terminate. The sweetest notes must terminate and die
That in itself may terminate, or lead Termination. O Friend! The termination of my course
And termination of his mortal course;
A termination, and a last retreat,
Terms. And, for yourself, in plain terms he asserts
His speech with uncut terms of art,
On friendly terms with this Machine:
Endangered States may yield to terms unjust;
On honourable terms, or else retire.
"Though," said the Priest in answer, "these he terms
No doubt if you in terms direct had asked
Terrace. Along the margin of our terrace walk;
And blazing terrace upon terrace, high
Terraces. O'er villas, terraces, and towers;
And terraces in trim array—
Pools, terraces, and walks are sown
On stately terraces of Como,
Terraqueous. Bedim, the grand terraqueous spectacle,
Terrone. Of high with low, celestial with terrene!

Terror—continued.

The only quiet heart on earth. In terror,
Remembered terror, there is peace and rest.
And move in terror of the elements;
Conceived a terror; and, by night or day
A twelvemonth's terror and distress!"
Terror over,
And terror of that marvellous night!
O terror! what hath she perceived?—O joy!
For terror, joy, or pity,
Of harmony—a shriek of terror, pain,
Of Terror, hear us to the ground, and tie Stalks round—abhorred by Heaven, a terror to the Earth!
Yield not to terror or despondency,
And lasting terror through that ancient Hold.
The wind with terror while they roar for food.
Which struck with terror friends and foes!
Wrongs and the terror of redress, would wean
In terror of the Czar."
And terror shall leap at his heart.
Add that whatever of Terror or of Love
In chase of him; whereat I waked in terror,
Of terror; yet no soul-debasing fear,
With an indefinite terror and dismay,
In terror. Disappointment and dismay
Put on a milder face; Terror had ceased,
Hath terror in it. Thou didst soften down
All strength—all terror, single or in bands,
In such communion, not from terror free,
What terror doth it strike into the mind
He's the terror of boys in the midst of their noise.
Terror's. Plunged with the Russ embrown'd by Terror's breath,
Terrors. Hears Winter calling all his horrors round,
From the night terrors of that waste to shield:
Concentrates all the terrors of the Universe:
Then calm your terrors, Betty Foy!
On all sides doubts and terrors met her;
My heart with terrors? Am I not
Illusive cataracts! of their terrors
And sins, that point their terrors,
Yet as the terrors of the lordly bell,
And clothe thyself with terrors like the food
When empty terrors overawe;
She plants well-measured terrors in the road
'Sofen'd the terrors of her awful mien.'

Test. I felt that merit has no surer test
Your visitations are a test
When she applies her annual test
Rise as he may, his grandeur scorns the test
From both sides; veteran thunders (the brute test
Of true compassion greet them. Creed and test
That searching test thy public course has stood;
"A conquering lance is beauty's test,
If in the aims of men the surest test
Weighed with me, could support the test of thought;
Who hath in no concerns of his a test
The test of such a trial; clearer far
Of modern statisticians to their proper test,
The test of act and suffering, to provoke

Testified. Tears of delight, that testified how true
Of humble mourners testified,
Hath, in my hearing, often testified
Testify. And every passing breeze will testify.
This can thy own experience testify:
To testify of Love and Grace divine.
Which even in deepest winter testify
Scorned or forgotten, Thou canst testify,
Did they together testify of time
That ye to him your love may testify;
Testimony. The testimony there displayed;
Tethered. And by a slender cord was tethered to a stone;
To their house and their mill tethered fast:
If he were tethered to the waggon,
Tethered to the waggon's tail:
Tethering. Of fire his desperate self is tethering?
Text. Prayer, text, or symbol, graven upon the stone;
Texts. Admonitory texts inscribed the walls,
The voice of wisdom whispering scripture texts
Texture. With a continuous cloud of texture close,
That through the texture of yon azure dome
And napkins of smooth texture, finely shorn.
Unsound, of spongy texture, yet without
Of texture midway between life and books.

These not of earthly texture, and the vault

While silent stands th' admiring vale below;
Broke only by th' unvaried torrent's sound,
Thames. O Thames! that other hardy may see
The Miller with two Dames, on the breast of the Thames!
High on the shore of silver Thames—to greet
From the proud margin of the Thames,

Thames—continued.

In stately mien to sovereign Thames allied
Emblem and instrument, from Thames to Tyne,
Up, down, the busy Thames—rapid as fire
Thames's. In Troynovant, his seat by silver Thames's side!
Some little pleasure-skiff, that doth on Thames's waters float.
Than. (Partial list.)
More of man's thoughts and ways than his experience
A firmer step than mine. That dismal Moor—
More than we see, or whence this strong aversion?
And for less fee than I would let him run
More speedily than you helike would wish.
But yesterday was worse than all; at last
More of contempt than hatred; both are flown;
Yes. More than ever Parent loved a Child?
Whom he to more than filial love and duty
Then make me change my course. Dear Marmaduke,
And I have felt, more than perhaps becomes me,
Than what it leaves behind.
"His Schoolfellow, who elder was than he,
Rather than he disgraced, would chouse to die.
For thou art worse than mad a thousand fold;
By longer way than he was wont to go;
(A thing more precious far than all that books
Of soul in his face than of words on his tongue;
His Grand sire that age more than thirty times told;
Who went something farther than others have gone,
Thane. He had insulted—Peasant, King, or Thane?
Thank. He said—"I thank you all, if I must die,
I thank you; but, a resting-place so near,
Ah! what is here? Oh! Gentlemen! I thank you;
God bless and thank you both, my gentle Masters.
May love his Child. Thank you, old Man, for this!
To thank me for this service. Rainbow arches,
I thank you for that hint. He shall be brought.
Of what I have been—yes, I thank thee, Heaven!
Hereafter you will thank me for this service.
Do I dare to thank the God,
Will thank you. Faultless does the Maid appear;
Not loth to thank each moment for its boon
Better to thank a dear and long-past day
I thank the silent Monitor, and say
And said, Forsooth, my friend, do I thank thee,
Good cause would oft be his to thank the surf
It seemed she did not thank me. I returned,
To thank him for the tale which he had told.
As if to thank him; he returned that look,
Beside our roads and pathways, though, thank Heaven!
There, undisturbed, could think of and could thank
The Sage rejoined, "I thank you—you have spared Thanked. And, when he rose, he thanked her pious care
Then God be thanked—
The Stranger would have thanked him, but he felt
The other thanked him with an earnest voice;
I thanked the Leader of my onward way.
The hay; and conquerors thanked the Gods,
Well satisfied, I thanked her, and she said,
She thanked them; and then her leave she took,
Till then unmet, he thanked me; I returned
When God, the giver of all joy, is thanked
She thanked me for my wish;—but for my hope
His thirst from rill or gushing fount, and thanked Thankful. In mute devotion on the thankful breast!
All that breathe are thankful debtors
To her thankful mind's relief.
And send a thankful spirit back to you,
With thankful heart, to either Eminence
Of the pleasure it spreads through so thankful a band;
O'er whom such thankful tears were shed
And thankful through a weary time,
Be thankful, even though tired and faint,
On busy days, with thankful nights, be mine.
Be thankful we again have met—
Upon the pleased and thankful Ass;
Lived thankful for day's light, for daily bread,
"Be thankful, thou; for, if unholy deeds
13
In thankful joy and gratulation pure.
And rests not thankful? Whether cheered by talk
O suffering Earth! be thankful; sternest clime
Deep in the thankful heart;—yet tears will flow.
And now with thankful heart to bed doth creep,
In thankful bosoms to a modest pride.
A grey-haired, pensive, thankful Refugee;
Is in the thankful Creature's power.
Shall with a thankful tear bedrop its latest page.
With thankful spirit. The descendant, and the wind
Glimmers before my sight through thankful tears,
In thankful blessedness, which yet survives.
Happy, and now most thankful that my walk
The thankful captive of maternal bonds;
Thankful for my beloved child's return.
They looked; were humbly thankful for the good

Thankful—continued.

How thankful for the warmth of summer days,
 But most of all and with most thankful mind
 Make him more thankful, then to call on verse
Thankfully. And thankfully there rested side by side
 But like it, enjoy it, and thankfully eat.
 Thankfully took an effort that was meant
 The eyes of good men thankfully give heed,
 So seemed it,—now I thankfully acknowledge, Thankfulness. Then offer up thy heart to God in thankfulness and praise,
 With thankfulness the Mother pressed;
 When thankfulness of heart is strong and deep!
 When thankfulness were best?—Fresh-flowing tears,
 Sully the limpid stream of thankfulness,
 So shine our thankfulness for ever bright!
 Free to pour forth their common thankfulness,
 With deeper thankfulness.
 Be lost in thankfulness and praise.
 The thankfulness with which I laid me down
 By intermingling strains of thankfulness
 And to establish thankfulness of heart
Thankless. With this tried Servant of a thankless
 Court,
 Or too aspiring, thankless at the best)
 Else, I allow, most thankless.—But, at once,
 While thankless thousands are oppress and clogged
Thanklessly. We all too thanklessly participate, Thanks. Died in his arms; and with those thanks a prayer
 Thanks to them, are to us a stream of comfort!
 This is true comfort, thanks a thousand times—
 Has made amends. Thanks to you both; but,
 Oh Sir!
 Thanks for your care. Perhaps it would be useful
 You are found at last, thanks to the vagrant Troop
 Join me in thanks for their blind services.
 Thanks and praises, each a gage
 'My thanks for your discourse are due;
 Be thanks poured out to Him whose hand bestows,
 To gentle Natures, thanks not Heaven amiss.
 Rich mellow bearings, that for thanks shall call:
 12
 Thanks to thy virtues, to the eternal youth
 Thanks; thou hast snapped a fireside Prisoner's chain.
 But metaphor dismissed, and thanks apart,
 Thanks to the place, blessings upon the hour;
 Now thanks to Heaven! that of its grace
 Of that great Water give God thanks.
 (Thanks to high God) forests of such remain:
 Shall praises be poured forth, and thanks ascend,
 Or thanks and praises to His throne ascend
 On this high Day of THANKS, before the Throne of Grace!
 To appease the Gods; or public thanks to yield;
 To move in sunshine?—Utter thanks, my Soul!
 Rest from enjoyment only. Thanks poured forth
 For what thus far hath blessed my wanderings, thanks
 Thanks to our Lady's grace." I smiled to hear,
 Is wheeling hitherward. Thanks, happy Creature,
 His milder Genius (thanks to the good God
 Pleased with the thanks that in His People's eye
 By some acknowledgment of thanks and praise,
 May silent thanks at least to God be given
 Utterance of thanks that we have past with ease,
 Thanks to the austere and simple Devotees,
 Thanks for the lessons of this Spot—fit school
 And thanks and praises seemed to run
 This hymn of thanks and praise,
 By the silent thanks, now tending
 Thanks to the Powers that yet maintain their sway,
 Thanks uttered to God for daily bread, and here
 And let us give thanks for blessings sown
 201
 Thanks to the moth that spared it for our eyes;
 Accept, mute Captive! thanks and praise;
 Thanks to this tall-tale sheaf of corn,
 Had breathed a sigh of thanks to God,
 "My thanks with silent tears
 The song of thanks and praise;
 Thanks to the human heart by which we live,
 Thanks to its tenderness, its joys, and fears,
 —Oh if such silence be not thanks to God
 Vexing its own creation. Thanks to both,
 Thanks to the means which Nature deigned to employ;
 And cannot be remembered but with thanks
 Thanks with uplifted heart, that I was reared
 Thanks to the bounteous Giver of all good—
 Thanks in sincerest verse have been elsewhere
 No thanks he breathed, he proffered no request;
 Of thanks and expectation, in accord
 Accompanied these musings; fervent thanks
 Thanks to his pure imaginative soul
 Deserve the least return of human thanks;
 To stop, and yield our gracious Teacher thanks.
 And patient listening, thanks accept from me.
 Thanks given for that becoming courtesy,

Thanks—continued.

The radiant Cherubim;—accept the thanks
 Then, intermingling thanks, on each bestowed
 Thanks, and if favours of the heavenly Muse
Thanksgiving. Break forth into thanksgiving,
 With impious thanksgiving, the Almighty's scorn!
 Solemn thanksgiving. Nor will they implore
 His mind was a thanksgiving to the power
 And greets it with thanksgiving. 'Till this hour,

Thanksgivings. Vocal thanksgivings to the eternal King;
That, omitted.

 so she lived
Thatched. See Fern-thatched.

 And smothered all that's man in me?—away!
 A thought that's worth a thousand worlds! I grieve
 And that's the reason why."
 Left in the church-yard wall. That's Walter Ewbank.
 Take all that's mine "beneath the moon,"
 And that's the very Pony, too!
 And envies him that's looking;—what an insight must it be!
 As if it were thyself that's here
 Is it a reed that's shaken by the wind,
 But that's a loyal virtue, never sown
 Could pierce through a temper that's soft to disease,
 What is that that's coming?
Thaw. No more her breath can thaw their fingers cold,
 Of storm and thaw, when every water-course
 The Elements; as they do melt and thaw
 Rest not in hope want's icy chain to thaw
 Until her house by frost, and thaw, and rain,
 Nor the vicissitudes of frost and thaw
Thawed. "The frost of England's pride will soon be thawed";
Thaws. Between life and death his blood freezes and thaws;
 Informs, creates, and thaws the deepest sleep
Thaw-wind. The thaw-wind, with the breath of June,
The, omitted. See Th.
Theatre. Dead in my eyes, dead as a theatre
 His little stage in the vast theatre,
 Yet was the theatre my dear delight;
 Court, theatre, conventicle, or shop,
 Into a theatre, whose stage was filled,
 How vast the compass of this theatre.
Theatres. Temples, towers, domes, theatres, and temples lie
Theatric. Oh, had this vast theatric structure wound
 With banbles of theatric taste,
 More than theatric force to Shakspeare's scene;
 How throngs the crowd to yon theatric school!
Theban. And so the bright immortal Theban band,
 Some Theban fragment, or unroll
 As Juno was unto the Theban blood,
 My Theban obelisk; and, there, behold Thebes. From whence to Thebes came griefs in multitude.
 And the dark sorrows of the line of Thebes?
 Upon the moral law. Egyptian Thebes,
Thee. (Partial list.)
 Did not the Soldier tell thee that himself,
 I comprehend thee—I should be as cheerful
 To save thee from the extreme of penury;
 I took thee in my arms, and we began
 Now I do love thee. I am thunderstruck
 To be transferred to thee. When I'm dishonoured!
 I would preserve thee. How may this be done?
 Thee I adore, and find my rest in faith.
 But what was made an engine to ensnare thee;
 In his grey hairs!—I love the Father in thee.
 But Thee, deep buried in the silent tomb,
 To Thee, in this aerial cleft,
 Thee have thy Votaries aptly styled,
 Thee, thee my life's celestial sign!
 Jesu! of Thee, and the white Lily-flower
 Which did Thee bear, and is a Maid for aye,
 For sometimes, Lady! ere men pray to thee
 Even so fare I; and therefore, I thee pray,
 Guide thou my song which I of thee shall say.
 Thus saying, 'O dear Child! I summon thee
 'My little Child, then will I come for thee
 'Be not dismayed, I will not thee forsake!
 From thee and thy base throat, keep all that's good,
 And she hath been before thee with her song
 What! quoth she then, what is't that ails thee
 now?
 The God of Love afflict thee with all teen,
 And one thing will I counsel thee also,
 Thee she accepts as for her service fit!
 I love thee, and love the sweet Boy at thy side:
 That lifts up the veil of our nature in thee.
 For thee she mourns, nor e'er will cease to mourn;
 No other can divide with thee this work:
 That later seasons owed to thee no less;
 This over-stermness; but for thee, dear Friend!

Thee—continued.

One whom with thee friendship had early paired ; Coleridge ! with this my argument, of thee It will be known, by thee at least, my friend ! To thee the work shall justify itself.

Theft. O'er moor and mountain, midnight theft to hatch ! In secret revels—haply after theft

Their, omitted. Theirs. (Partial list.) 'Gainst all that in his heart, or theirs perhaps, said nay.

It plays not for them,—what matter ? 'tis theirs ; Them, omitted.

Theme. To traveller who might talk of any casual theme. In verse, which to thy ear might come, would treat this simple theme,

I pass the raptures of the pair,—such theme I checked me—and I left the theme As his distress is sharp, would scorn my theme, Since thou dost hear it,—a memorial theme But, leaving each unquiet theme

Whatever the theme, the Maiden sang Support their mighty theme from age to age ; All-ruling Jove, whatever the theme might be Of freedom, with mind grasping the whole theme For Duddon, long-loved Duddon, is my theme ! Wholly dis severed from our present theme ; How widely spread the interests of our theme . . . Rich theme of England's fondest praise . . . A theme for praise and admiration high . . . Or loftier pitch if higher rose the theme . . . The blameless cause lay in the theme itself . . . A theme for angels, when they celebrate . . . Sad theme for every tongue ; . . . Thy charms my only theme ; . . . Would gladly grapple with some noble theme, . . . Will settle on some British theme, some old . . . Some imperfection in the chosen theme, . . . Might I pursue this theme through every change The road lies plain before me ;—'tis a theme . . . I have been speaking, for my theme has been . . . And, therefore, now that we must quit this theme, . . . Knowing too well the importance of his theme, . . . Set forth, too serious theme for that light place— From this memorial tribute to my theme . . . Are now my theme ; and, foremost of the scenes, . . . Whose genius spangled o'er a gloomy theme . . . Now in connection with so great a theme . . . (A theme for boys, too hackneyed for their sires,) . . . And tell, since juvenile errors are my theme, . . . Pour rapture, tenderness, and hope,—my theme . . . Imagination having been our theme, . . . Couched in the dewy grass. With such a theme, . . . Theme this but little heard of among men— . . . Be not this labour useless. If such theme . . . To be diverted from our present theme, . . . And I could tell, not travelling for my theme . . . There doth he rest. No theme his fate supplies . . . While thus from theme to theme the Historian passed, . . . The Pastor pressed by thoughts which round his theme

The hallowed theme) will rise and celebrate Upon this impulse, to the theme—erewhile A voice shall speak, and what will be the theme ? Dark as a riddle, prove a favourite theme ; The theme is fruitful ; nor can sorrow find

Themes. Awed by the theme's peculiar sanctity Themes. There too we read of Spenser's fairy themes, The domination of his glorious themes, But some (who brook those hackneyed themes full well), But surely less so than your far-fetched themes !

I move at ease ; and meet contending themes Sang in this Presence kindred themes ; There find I personal themes, a plenteous store, Of undiscordant themes ;

Let more substantial themes the pen engage, Unconscious prelude to heroic themes, To transitory themes ; yet I rejoice, Exists and is sustained. More lofty themes, With vice at home. We added dearest themes— Exalting tender themes, by just degrees —Life, death, eternity ! momentous themes From trivial themes to general argument Beget strange themes ; and to freaks give birth

Themselves. By seamen, who perhaps themselves had shared But that they cannot stand up of themselves ; In recompense for what themselves required . . . But to protect themselves from extirpation ?— The plot to rid themselves, at any cost, . . . Do recognise some image of themselves, . . . And everlasting hills themselves were changed. The mountains have all opened out themselves, Who journey thither find themselves alone . . . And his old Father both betook themselves

She said to Luke, while they two by themselves Helmet-like themselves will fasten . . . They themselves make the reel, And are returned into themselves, they cannot but be sad ?

Are clad in one green hue, and lose themselves More dear, both for themselves and for thy sake ! Prepared themselves for glorious enterprise . . . To show them a fair image ; 'tis themselves, . . . That flowers themselves, whatever their hue, . . . Themselves to lose their light, or pass away As they themselves appear to be, . . . On which they gazed themselves away . . . More like themselves the rocks appear . . . Yet in themselves are nothing ! One decree . . . To work against themselves such fell despite : . . . Who have seen—themselves now casting off the yoke—

Like dreams themselves ; and sweetest sound— All States have glorified themselves ;—their claims However humble in themselves, with thoughts . . . Too lovely to be pensive in themselves And feeble, of themselves, decay ; . . . And quickly spread themselves abroad, That shape themselves and disappear . . . Sung for themselves; and those whom they would free !

Which of themselves our minds impress ; And mix the poison, they themselves must drink. Pass sentence on themselves, confess the fact, . . . Then sped themselves to bury him full fast ; . . . They pruned themselves, and made themselves right gay.

Themselves, the fathers and the dealers-out . . . Give themselves up to jollity, . . . Nor general Truths, which are themselves a sort . . . Humility and modest awe themselves . . . So beautiful, so majestic in themselves, . . . Murmuring so sweetly in themselves, obeyed . . . And what they do within themselves while yet . . . And sports and games (too grateful in themselves, . . . Yet in themselves less grateful, I believe, . . . Take firmer hold of us, and words themselves . . . Present themselves as objects recognised, . . . Mother and child !—These feelings, in themselves Sequestered, handed down among themselves . . . Did first present themselves thus purified, . . . Kindred mutations ; for themselves create . . . The measure of themselves, these favoured Beings, Which, when they should sustain themselves aloft, But soon his thoughts returned upon themselves, Of a good shepherd tended, as themselves . . . With mute astonishment, themselves to see . . . For all that can no longer feed themselves, . . . Than to do wrong, albeit themselves have erred . . . Present themselves at once to all men's view : . . . To save themselves from blank forgetfulness ! . . . These, bred to little pleasure in themselves, . . . Our active powers, those powers themselves become That works but by extinction ? On themselves Arts, in themselves beneficent and kind, . . . To eyes and ears of parents who themselves . . . There to defend themselves the winter long. Must needs themselves be hallowed, they require They lift the animal being, do themselves . . . Reveal themselves ; not therefore is my heart One family, and one mansion ; to themselves Six which themselves must single from a train,

Then. (Partial list.) His passion drove him—then a Voyager . . . He must have felt it then, known what it was, 'Tis but a word and then— Something is here And are you going then ? Come, come, Idonea, And, fondling, licked his face, then on a sudden . . . Well then, says I—I'll out with it ; at which . . . You are wasting words ; hear me then once for all : I met your Father, then a wandering Outcast : . . . But you were then a tottering Little-one— . . . Touch not a finger— What then must be done ? . . . Then shatter the delusion, break it up . . . Then grasp our swords and rush upon a cure . . . But all our thoughts were then of Earth, . . . And then he sang it well and fearlessly, . . . "This Child with piteous lamentation then . . . Then sped themselves to bury him full fast ; . . . Touched then his tongue, and took away the grain;

Then—continued.

And then I thought anon as it was day,
 And it was then the third night of the May.
 Then, quoth she, let me never hope for bliss,
 Then shalt thou raise a clamour as do I.
 Then of the Nightingale did I take note,
 Then straightway came the Nightingale to me,
 Then spake one Bird, and full assent all gave;
 She thanked them; and then her leave she took,
 Then let him pass, a blessing on his head!
 Then the Muses might deal with me just as they chose,

Thence. (Partial list.)

Thence issuing oft with unwieldy stalk,
 And downward thence a knot of grass he throws,
 So lonely, but that thence might come a pang
 A long mile thence. While thither they pursued
 Thence bursting shrill did all remark prevent;
 And thence they saw the bridge of wood,
 Stopped short,—and thence, at leisure, limb by limb
 And it was fit that thence I took
 And thence full many a sound she hears,
 Thence in our rustic dialect was called
 And took no note of the hour while thence they gazed,

And that bright gleam which thence will fall
 Thence the sound—the light is there—
 Thence look thou forth o'er wood and lawn
 Thence offer nightly sacrifice)
 Thence back into the moonlight creeps;
 Thence has it, with the Son, so strong a hold
 The shepherd struggles with them. Onward thence
 To thee, a woman, and thence weak:
 Thence marching southward smooth and free.
 He thence may learn, ere fall of night,
 Thence creeping under sylvan arches cool,
 As thence she holds her way to Palestine.
 He taught, till persecution chased him thence,
 Thence, also, more alive to tenderness.
 All gentiles and honour thence come forth;
 Thence worship comes, content and true heart's pleasure,

Thence sickness comes, and overwhelming sadness,
 Men thence a book might make, a history;
 Thence issuing oft, unwieldy as ye stalk,
 Thence, from three paly loopholes mild and small,
 Thence red from different heights with restless gleam
 Thence down the steep a pile of grass he throws
 From thence to search the mystic cause of things
 And learn from thence thy own defects to scan;
 In that stern countenance, for our souls thence drew
 Thence did I drink the visionary power;
 Is smitten thence with an unnatural taint,
 Whose white belt scared him thence, or wind that blew

Thence back into the throng, until we reach,
 A patriot, thence rejected by the rest,
 And thence let loose, to seek their pleasant homes
 Thence look for these magnificent results!
 That flattering breezes blowing thence

Thence northward did they pass by Arthur's seat,
 Thence up Helvellyn, a superior mount,
 Thence, journeying on a second time, they passed Thenceforth. As if thenceforth nor pain nor trouble she could know.

Of vice—thenceforth unable to subvert
 Out of his feelings, to be fixed thenceforth
Theoretus. And, O Theocritus, so far have some Theoretic. Lost people, trained to theoretic feud!
 But stop! these theoretic fancies jar
Theories. By monstrous theories of alien growth,
 As from the first, wild theories were afloat,
 Plans without thought, or built on theories
 By theories with suitable support—
Theory. The Sage's theory? the Poet's lay?—
 Of the strange sight, nor hide his theory
 Exploding upstart Theory, insists
 Thence, omitted.

Thereafter. And saw, thereafter, on the soil of France
 And when thereafter to my father's house
 Will chant together." Thereafter, as the shades
 He who thereafter, and in how short time!
 That went before my steps. Thereafter came
 And did, thereafter, bathe their hands in fire,
Thereat. And thereat shall the Eagle be our Lord,
Thereby. Swayed, and thereby enabled to contend
 That objects, even as they are great, thereby
 And with amazement more;—thereby to assert
 On which they stand; as if thereby they drew

Therefore. (Partial list.)
 And therefore chose this solitary Moor,
 Therefore I bless her: when I think of Man,
 And therefore leave thee to a righteous judgment.
 To be alone, and therefore we must part.
 Therefore through me alone must be revealed
 —Therefore, unwilling to forget that day,
 And therefore, my sweet MARY, this still Nook,
 Have souls which never yet have risen, and therefore prostrate lie?

Therefore—continued.

And rolls through all things. Therefore am I still
 Thy nature is not therefore less divine:
 Her functions are they therefore less divine,
 And, therefore, was it rightly said
 Therefore the wise pray for thee, though the freight
 And, therefore, art thou blest with peace, serene
 And therefore are betrayed.
 Not, therefore, shall my mind give way to sadness;—
 Sounder and therefore holier than the ends
 Therefore the Voice spake from the Desert, thence Back therefore will they hie to seize
 And therefore now she deems it good
 And therefore are ye summoned to depart,
 And, therefore, shalt thou be an honoured name!
 And therefore does not stoop, nor lie in wait
 Them therefore with wild horses did he draw,
 And, therefore, Nightingale! do thou keep nigh,
 And therefore we a Parliament will have.
 And, therefore, now that we must quit this theme,
 This was her creed, and therefore she was pure
 Therefore to serve was high beatitude;
 Tumult was therefore gladness, and the fear
 And therefore bold to look on painful things,
 But much was wanting; therefore did I turn
 With toil, he therefore yoked with ignorance;
 Therefore, for what is here produced, I ask
 Disgusted therefore, or appalled, by aims
 Therefore, not unconsold, I wait—in hope
 Extinguished, do not, therefore, cease to be.
 And therefore no incompetency of mine
 To whom kind Nature, therefore, may afford
 Whose birthright Reason, therefore, may ensure.
 Urge it in vain; and, therefore, like a prayer
 Suffice it, therefore, if the rural Muse
 Beauty not therefore wanting change to stir
 —What Being, therefore, since the birth of man
 A freeman, therefore, sound and unimpaired;
 Unworthy therefore, and unallowed: no,
 Reveal themselves; not therefore is my heart
 Dismissing, therefore, all Arcadian dreams, Therefrom. Therefrom to human kind, and what we are.

Therein. Therein for ever you must yield to me.
 Lest she should drown herself therein.
 To drown herself therein.
 Therein a portion claim.
 And one thing is therein which is not fair;
 Therein, with our simplicity awhile
 That he, from wrath redeemed, therein shall float
 From those two Brothers who were drowned therein;

Thereof. But thereof come in the end despondency and madness.
 And far and wide the fame thereof did ring.
 For thereof comes all goodness and all worth;
 For thereof come all contraries to gladness;
Thereon. Of fancy which thereon was shed,
 Nor view of who might sit thereon allowed;
 Swiftly thereon a rainbow arch to build
 As if the wreath of liberty thereon
 Can hope the general eye thereon would gaze,
 From this bare eminence thereon have cast
 And built thereon my hopes of good to come.
 Barren the tablet, yet thereon appeared

There's. (Partial list.)
 Ay, Sir, there's nobody that feels for us.
 You have been insolent. And there's the Baron,
 But there's a Providence for them who walk
 There's witchery in 't. I never knew a maid
 There's George Fisher, Charles Fleming, and Reginald Shore,

Now there's a grave—your foot is half upon it,—
 There's not a house within a mile,
 There's none to help poor Susan Gale;
 For of this Pony there's a rumour
 "As sure as there's a moon in heaven,"
 There's neither horse nor man abroad,
 There's nothing that can ease my pain.
 There's neither Johnny nor his Horse
 There's neither Doctor nor his Guide.
 There's not a single soul abroad."
 There's Richard Bateman, thought she to herself,
 And there's a riddle to be guessed,
 There's not a breeze—no breath of air—
 Long as there's a sun that sets,
 There's a flower that shall be mine,
 There's joy in the mountains;
 There's life in the fountains;
 "There's neither dog nor heifer, horse nor sheep,
 There's something in a flying horse,
 There's something in a huge balloon;
 There's nothing that I would not do;
 "There's the Galla Water, Leader Haughs,
 There's pleasant Tiviot-dale, a land
 There's such a place as Yarrow.
 There's not a breathing of the common wind
 There's not a nook within this solemn Pass
 There's a cuckoo, and one or two thrushes,
 There's more of wisdom in it,
 There's thought and no thought, and there's pale-ness and bloom

There's—continued.

There's weakness, and strength both redundant
and vain;
There's indifference, alike when he fails or succeeds,
Pride where there's no envy, there's so much of joy;
There's freedom, and sometimes a diffident stare
There's virtue, the title it surely may claim,
But, Babe! there's none to work for me.

Thereto. Wash with Thy blood my sins; thereto incline

Nay, nothing shall me bring thereto, quoth I,
Thereupon. Of a proud Ararat! and, thereupon,
Therewith. As aptly suits therewith that modest pace
Therewith he threw away the lance,
Therewith when this true Lover 'gan behold,
Therewith he cast on Pandarus an eye,
By timely interference: and therewith
This was their rest and only hope; therewith
That they may knit together, and therewith
They blend therewith congenially: meanwhile,
Therewithal. And therewithal to cover his intent

These. (Partial list.)

Answer these questions, from our common knowledge,
Performs these delicate services, and therefore
'Tis weariness that breeds these gloomy fancies,
When these old limbs had need of rest,—and now
—These fools of feeling are mere birds of winter
These ten years she has moved her lips all day
These ten years she had sat all day alone
These walls shall witness it—from first to last
These joyful tidings from no lips but mine.
These are strange sights—the mind of man, up-
turned,
"Among these children was a Widow's son,
Methought I wist right well what these birds meant,
And these inevitable charities,
Penned these sad lines, nor can forbear to pray
Thesplan. As in a fit of Thesplan jollity, Thessalian. As when their breath enriched Thessalian air.
He veiled, attendant on Thessalian flocks)
Thessaly. That skins the plains of Thessaly,
They, omitted.
They'd. As if they'd fall asleep embracing!
They'll. This is sad talk—they'll never sound for him.
'He pines,' they'll say, 'it is his doom,
They'll both be here—'tis almost ten—
Susan! they'll both be here anon."
They're. And they're dancing merrily.
Doth she betray us when they're seen? or are they but a name?
Now they're famished or slain:
They've. What they've been doing all this time,
Thick. See inch-thick.
White thick above the rill the branches close,
Forced hard against the wind a thick unwieldy flight.
Down a thick wood, they dropt into the vale;
Drops deadened from a roof so thick with leaves.
Her hair was thick with many a curl
But a thick umbrage—checking the wild growth
Thick as sheep in shepherd's fold!
And fears and fancies thick upon me came;
To a thick wood he soon is brought
Darkness as thick as life o'er life could fling,
The dulllest leaf in this thick wood
Where towns and cities thick as stars appear,
Her wherity dazzles the thick wood;
Thick boughs of palm, and willows from the brook,
Ripe for the hand, or under a thick shade
The encircling laurels, thick with leaves,
Among the thick weeds, stretched alone;
Amid the trees of some thick wood,
Bright locks of silver hair, thick spread,
How soothed, when in thick hower enclosed,
And still, 'mid yon thick woods, the primal truth
Thus often, when thick gloom the east o'er shadows,
Truths whose thick veil Science has drawn aside?
Rests upon ankles swoln and thick;
To where, while thick above the branches close,
Bright'ning the gloom where thick the forests
stoop;
Or where thick sails illumine Batavia's groves;
All studded round, as thick as chairs could stand,
Of a thick Hawthorn, I could mark him well,
Through a thick forest. Silence touched me here
Of thick entangled forest, like the moon
With fancies thick as his inspiring stars,
In size a giant, stalking through thick fog,
With length of shade so thick, that whose glides
Low-hung and thick that covered all the sky;
Where two tall hedge-rows of thick alder boughs
Rising behind a thick and lofty grove,
Like leafless underboughs, in some thick wood,
While all the undergrove is thick with leaves,
Of ivy, flourishing and thick, that clasped
Of some thick wood, her place of covert, cleaves

Thick—continued.

Thick storm, and heavy, which for three hours'
space
Thickened. Lost in the thickened darkness, glimmers hoar;
Thickening. The turbaned Race are poured in thickening swarms
Proofs thickening round her that on public ends
Now homeward through the thickening hubbub, where
Thickens. Thickens, the pastoral River will forgive
That thickens, spreads, and, mingling fold with fold,
Thickest. While neither mist, nor thickest cloud
Or under leaves of thickest shade,
Laden with summer's thickest foliage, rock
Thicket. This thicket will conceal us.
Why, if a wolf should leap from out a thicket,
Of corpse and thicket, leaves the eastern shore
Or blooming thicket moist with morning dew;
Into a thicket turns aside,
Right in the middle of the thicket;
To couch in this thicket of brambles alone,
Chequer with paler red the thicket shades.
The thicket, where th' unlisten'd stock-dove coos.
The small birds find in spring no thicket there Thickets. Through beds of matted fern, and tangled thickets,
Open, ye thickets! let her fly,
But the green thickets plenteously shall yield
And blooming thickets; nor by rocky hands
The spangled turf, and neighbouring thickets ring
With thickets rough and blind;
Pleasant as roses in the thickets blown,
Glades we behold, and into thickets peep,
And thickets full of songsters, and the voice
Thickly. Had been so thickly planted and had thriven
Shall soon behold this border thickly set
Shall find such toys of fancy thickly set:
Who dares he wedded! Fancies thickly come Thickly-glittering. From thickly-glittering spires the matin-hell
Thickly-sprouting. Whence thickly-sprouting growth of poisonous weeds;
Thick-ribbed. And dark Oppression builds her thickribb'd towers
The thick-ribbed walls that o'ershadow the gate
A thick-ribbed army; not, as in the world,
Thick-wove. Quiet and dark; for through the thickwove trees
Thief. If a thief could be here he might pilfer at ease;
And Scotland has a thief as good,
Thieves. What do they here? Listen! What;
dogged like thieves!
That he's left, for a bed, to beggars or thieves!
Oh, what would they be to my tale of two Thieves?
Thigh. The structure of her laden thigh,
His spindles sink under him, foot, leg, and thigh!
Start at the reliques of that very thigh,
Thin. Under a hoary oak's thin canopy,
Down fell in straggling locks his thin grey hair;
Or whistling thro' thin grass along the unfurrowed plain.
Through a thin veil of glittering haze was seen
Nor would permit the thin smoke to escape,
Time cannot thin thy flowing hair,
His thin autumnal locks where Monks abide Remaining still distinct grew thin and rare,
Our fathers glimpses caught of your thin Frames,
His legs are thin and dry.
That thin memento of effulgence lost
Are thin upon the bough. Mine, only mine,
Thin silver hairs, and ancient hamlet fame;
Her road elms rustling thin above my head,
With their thin umbrage, on the stately roads
At leisure, thence, through tracts of thin resort,
Her face was pale and thin—her figure, too,
Of winter cannot thin; the fresh air lodged
Of ever-humming insects, 'mid thin air
How pleased he is where thin and thinner grows

Thine. (Partial list.)

In the same nest, my spring-time one with thine.
This charge of thine, then ill befall thee!—Look,
That wretched life of thine shall be the forfeit.
The triumphs of this hour; for they are THINE!
Cities and towns—'tis Thou—the work is Thine!
For Thou art angry with Thine enemies!
Thine arm from peril guards the coasts
Dread Lord! so fearful when provoked, thine ire
Thing. See Plaything.
For any living thing, hath faculties
Alas! the thing she told with labouring breath
It is no common thing when one like you
No—no—the thing stands clear of mystery;
A thing worth further notice, we must act
Unless I differ from the thing I am
Is it possible? One thing you noticed not:
These fifteen years—Ha! speak—what Thing art thou?
Is a most serious thing. Not I alone,
A thing dependent for its casual birth
That misery is a sacred thing: for me,

Thing—continued.

A leaf had fallen, the thing had never been
 Nor any living thing whose lot of life
 A thing so great to perish self-consumed.
 Or the empty thing that they would wish to be.
 In such a wilderness—to see no thing,
 Give me a reason why the wisest thing
 The thing most precious that it now contains:
 Evil to any living thing; but hear me,
 Of having left a thing like her alive!
 —The sweetest thing that ever grew
 When he had learnt what thing it was,
 A thing of such materials framed, by a builder such as he.
 But the poor ragged Thing whose ways my human heart had warmed.
 To show thee some delightful thing, in country or in town.
 A thing of an esteem;
 Thou easy-hearted Thing, with thy wild race
 But thou art no such perfect thing:
 A vision, and adored the thing he saw.
 Startled, as if some new-created thing,
 To living thing—not even to her.—Behold!
 With many a most diverting thing,
 "A little idle sauntering Thing!"
 'Twill make a thing endurable, which else
 Full many a sad and doleful thing:
 My pretty thing! then thou shalt sing
 Off, off! or, puny Thing!
 For such a Thing as you!
 But a thing "beneath our shoon":
 A dull helpless thing,
 Of feathered Thing most delicate
 A thing no storm can'er destroy,
 And he and every thing was gone:
 No bird, but an invisible thing,
 This solitary Tree! a living thing
 She seemed a thing that could not feel
 Or give a thing but small delight that never can be dear?
 So that it seems a thing endowed with sense:
 A wretched thing forlorn.
 With sorrow of the meanest thing that feels."
 The face of thing that is to be:
 Who sought the thing he loved. For nature then
 Shalt show us how divine a thing
 A thing as steadfast as the scene
 But still the heavy-headed Thing
 When Peter spied the moving thing,
 That man's heart is a holy thing,
 Ceilings and roofed; that is so fair a thing
 A mournful thing, so transient is the blaze!
 The Thing became a trumpet; whence he blew
 And grandeur crouches like a guilty thing,
 Yet, round the body of that joyless Thing
 More beautiful, as being a thing more holy:
 Huge Cruchan, (a thing that meaner hills
 The thing which ought to be; is raised above
 Which Milton held.—In every thing we are sprung
 Yields every thing to discipline of swords?
 Whose panoply is not a thing put on,
 Upon the pressure of a painful thing,
 The power of Armies is a visible thing,
 That an accursed thing it is to gaze
 But seemingly a Thing despaired;
 Shrinks from the note as from a mis-timed thing,
 And O, good Brethren at the cowl, a thing
 And cannot spare the Thing he cherished:
 Where is no living thing to be seen,
 Whither it goes. Even such, that transient Thing,
 Turned to a fearful Thing whose nostrils breathe.
 A thing too bright for breathing man to keep
 Our own domestic mountain. Thing and thought
 A tale in every thing.
 Yet, God is my witness, thou small helpless Thing!
 A reasoning, self-sufficing thing.
 A thoughtless Thing! who, once unblest,
 That half-mad thing of witty rhymes
 For thou hadst lived till every thing that cheers
 For him, or any one,—the thing that ought
 In lonely spots, become a slighted thing;
 Where Love for living Thing can find a place.
 Could any thing be more alluring
 And seemed the proudest thing on earth.
 "Is it an honest thing? Shall this be so?"
 Come to the spot in wonder at the thing;
 By cursed Jews—thing well and widely known,
 But hear you now a wondrous thing, I pray;
 And one thing is therein which is not fair;
 And one thing will I counsel thee also,
 (A thing more precious far than all that hooks in close self-shelter, like a Thing at rest.
 That patience now doth seem a thing of which "From regions where no evil thing has birth
 Did tremble like a guilty Thing surprised:
 Up hill or down, or shall some floating thing
 And measured motion like a living thing,
 As of a single independent thing,
 No living thing appeared in earth or air,
 To sense embodied: not the thing it is

Thing—continued.

And grateful memory, as a thing divine.
 And having thus discerned how dire a thing
 I mix more lowly matter; with the thing
 And 'twas a rueful thing to see the looks
 Cast out, alike of person and of thing.
 The breeze how soft! Can any thing produced
 That 'tis a thing impossible to frame
Erect himself, how poor a thing is man!
 And undisturbed proportions; but a thing
 A thing most sacred in the eye of Heaven;
 Wisdom enjoins; but if the thing we seek
 Or implement, a passive thing employed
 The thing that hath been as the thing that is,
 An act of courage, and the thing itself
 That is around them, love for every thing
 Meek and neglected thing, of no renown!
 O happy Thing! among thy flowery creeks,
 My Lady we'er approached a thing so coarse
Things. Now, in this blank of things, a harmony,
 Of many things which never troubled me—
 "These things just served to stir the slumbering sense.
 My frame, and I hethought me of two things
 That things will work to ends the slaves o' the world
 But at the surfaces of things; we hear
 The moral shapes of things. His tender cries
 I did believe all things were shadows—yea,
 Living or dead all things were bodiless,
 To let a creed, built in the heart of things,
 Where the least things control the greatest, where Delivered to the Judge of all things. Dead!
 In all things like ourselves but in the agony
 His guilt was marked—these things could never be
 Through words and things, a dim and perilous way;
 But things substantial have so pressed on me—
 Oh, why have I to do with things like these?
 And dies in solitude: all things but man,
 Why may we speak these things, and do no more;
 And words that tell these things be heard in vain?
 In all things worthier of that noble birth,
 The rain and storm are things that scarcely can come here.
 Things that I know not of belike to thee are dear,
 And dreams of things which thou canst neither see nor hear.
 Toward the mighty gulf of things,
 And gladdened all things; but, as chanced, within that very hour,
 The marvellous current of forgotten things;
 Wouldst change the course of things in all men's sight!
 Of things earth makes, and sun doth shine upon;
 Glasses he had, that little things display,
 For I had many things to say.
 If things ensued that wanted grace,
 I question things and do not find
 All merry things are now at rest,
 Such things as she unto the Babe might say:
 Through dark and shapeless fear of things to come,
 Into the list of things that cannot be!
 Unworthy things she talked, and wild
 Were things indifferent to the Shepherd's thoughts.
 Feelings and emanations—things which were
 Things needful for the journey of her son.
 The Housewife answered, talking much of things
 On things thou canst not know of.—After thou
 That these are things of which I need not speak.
 A love for things that have no feeling:
 "I'll teach my boy the sweetest things:
 And hopes and wishes—from all living things
 Alive to all things and forgetting all.
 Sending sad shadows after things not sad,
 That love for little things by Fate
 Of things that in the great world be,
 Loose types of things through all degrees,
 Can turn to little things; but once
 Are melancholy things,
 Of the countless living things,
 Even from things by sorrow wrought,
 Meek Infant! among all forlornest things
 My Ass and fifty things beside,—
 Where all things else are still and motionless.
 The heart luxuriates with indifferent things,
 But all things else about her draw
 Of mute insensate things.
 Where all things are so fair,
 All things that love the sun are out of doors;
 As if all needful things would come unsought.
 We see into the life of things. If this
 All thinking things, all objects of all thought,
 And rolls through all things. Therefore am I still
 And all the sad and precious things
 And thoughts with things at strife;
 A mazy course along familiar things,
 Lodged in the bosom of eternal things?
 With faithful memory left of things
 Of tones and numbers all things are controlled,
 Never did fifty things at once
 Among the lovely shades of things;
 And see things as they are.

Things—continued.

Or as the weakest things, if frost . . . 246 P. B. 848
 Divorce of words quickening insensate things. . . 252 Why, Minstrel* 8
 Of all things, that at last in fear I shrink, . . . 260 How sweet* 13
 Things incomplete and purposes betrayed . . . 269 Malham 12
 Peace let us seek,—to steadfast things attune
 If, guarding grossest things from common claim
 Under the grave of things; Hope had her spire
 To see how things are made and managed there.
 Of things, has fenced this fairest spot on earth.
 For old, unhappily, far-off things,
 For in the principles of things
 Would all have seemed but paltry things, . . .
 "Of old things all are over old,
 Of good things none are good enough:—
 And now, sole register that these things were,
 Spot rich in all things that can soothe and please!
 Old things have been unsettled; we have seen
 When, looking on the present face of things,
 Seems at the heart of all things. But, great God!
 The course of things, and change the creed
 The aspiring heads of future things appear,
 Before whom all things are, that were,
 To act the God among external things,
 Eternal things; and, if need be, defy
 While all things present told of joy and love.
 Things in their very essences at strife,
 Things that recoil from language; that, if shown
 Of things that may to gladness turn this weeping.
 Though mute, of all things blending into one.
 Of things gone by, her meagre monuments
 Through all things else, in this can find
 These things, which thus had in the sight
 This lovely chronicler of things . . .
 Past things, revealed like future, they can tell
 For all things are less dreadful than they seem.
 To senseless ashes. Mark! how all things swerve
 All sacred things are covered: cheerful morn
 And speak the word—Alas! of fearful things
 Of things not seen, drawn forth from their recess,
 With things that were not, yet were meant to be.
 Of things invisible to mortal sight.
 (Grave this within thy heart!) If spiritual things
 Things that we judge of by a light too faint:
 Thus all things lead to Charity, secured
 Till into one loved vision all things melt:
 Now, like to things within fate's easiest reach,
 For things far off we toil, while many a good
 Of things for ever speaking,
 Come forth into the light of things,
 Mis-shapes the beautiful forms of things:—
 In common things that round us lie
 The things which others understand.
 And all things suffering from all;
 Goes to learn how all things fare;
 And formal fellowship of petty things!

Streams that reflect the poetry of things!
 Warmed by thy influence, creeping things
 In faithful scales, things and their opposites,
 Knowing, things rashly sought are rarely found;
 Of things which their united power called forth
 And, if with all things not enwrought,
 That things obscure and small outlive the great:
 And things of holy use unhallowed lie;
 And meditate on everlasting things,
 That none, the meanest of created things,
 The tide of things has borne him, he appears . . .
 Age might but take the things Youth needed not!

Was even the gentlest of all gentle Things.
 The May had then made all things green;
 From out the bitterness of things;
 If things in our remembrance held so dear,
 So prized, and things inward and outward held
 The things which I have seen I now can see no more.
 Of sense and outward things,
 Save in the land where all things are forgot,
 From thence to search the mystic cause of things
 Among all lovely things my Love had been;
 He comes, my dear delight,—and costliest things
 A cheerful confidence in things to come.
 In common things—the endless store of things,
 Nor am I naked of external things,
 Of all things, and deliberate holiday.
 But with high objects, with enduring things—
 Our new existence to existing things,
 Rememberable things; sometimes, 'tis true,
 Of things forgotten, these same scenes so bright,
 Of visionary things, those lovely forms
 Daily the common range of visible things . . .
 Deem that our puny boundaries are things
 Perceived in things, where, to the unwatchful eye,
 And essences of things, by which the mind
 Faith in the marvellous things which then I felt?
 Subservient strictly to external things . . .
 Coercing all things into sympathy,
 With things that really are; I, at this time,
 In many things my brother, chiefly here
 I looked for universal things; perused . . .
 If prophecy be madness; if things viewed

Things—continued.

What passed within me. Not of outward things
 From the remembrances of better things, . . .
 Yet Nature, or a happy course of things . . .
 Fur quiet things to wander in; a haunt
 Even when we look behind us, and best things
 To higher things; more naturally matured,
 Till 'mid this crowded neighbourhood of things . . .
 Thee and thy dwelling, and a crowd of things
 And talking to itself when all things else
 The things which were the same and yet appeared
 Of the clear flood, from things which there abide
 Things that aspire to unconquerable life;
 And things that teach as Nature teaches: then,
 All things are put to question; he must live
 To manage books, and things, and make them act
 To strengthening love for things that we have seen;
 Of shadowy things work endless changes,—there,
 Even when unconsciously, to things removed . . .
 From the same cause produced, 'mid outward things
 From things well-matched or ill, and words for things,
 Had bodied forth the ghostliness of things . . .
 Of social life, I looked upon these things
 And mocks the prompter's listening. Marvellous things
 Thou endless stream of men and moving things!
 Some miniature of famous spots or things,—
 And recent things yet warm with life; a sea-fight,
 As at a glance, the things which I had shaped,
 But, as a common produce, things that are
 Though reared upon the base of outward things,
 Are falsely catalogued; things that are, are not,
 All out-o'-the-way, far-fetched, perverted things,
 In steadiness, who hath among least things
 Of self-destroying, transitory things,
 For all things serve them; them the morning light
 Of men and things, what benefit I owed
 On the dead letter, miss the spirit of things;
 Of sickness, disjoining, joining, things
 And all the several frames of things, like stars,
 It might be told (but wherefore speak of things
 Of houses, pavement, streets, of men and things,—
 A farm and body; all things were to me
 Such was the state of things. Meanwhile the chief
 To all mankind. But, these things set apart,
 Things that could only show themselves and die,
 In the great deep; all things have second birth;
 Who to themselves are false. But these are things
 Or trepidation for the end of things
 The first was service paid to things which lie
 Enrapt; but brightest things are wont to draw
 And is half pleased with things that are amiss,
 A swallowing up of lesser things in great . . .
 That time was ready to set all things right,
 This was the time, when, all things tending fast
 And therefore bold to look on painful things,
 And things to hope for! Not with these began
 Dispensing truth, and, over men and things,
 To things above all art; but more,—for this,
 Bent overmuch on superficial things, . . .
 Worshipping then among the depth of things,
 Of things that pass away, a temperate show . . .
 Upon the unassuming things that hold
 Deal boldly with substantial things; in truth
 Speaking no dream, but things oracular; . . .
 Proceeding from a source of untaught things,
 This fur the past, and things that may be viewed
 Upon the vulgar forms of present things, . . .
 To exert upon the face of outward things, . . .
 Serve to exalt; they build up greatest things
 Of exquisite regard for common things,
 Her overweening grasp; thus thoughts and things
 On which he dwells, above this frame of things . . .
 A history only of departed things, . . .
 Dreaming on things to come; and dust possess
 Of things which he had seen; and often touched
 To whom he might confess the things he saw . . .
 On all things which the moving seasons brought . . .
 The mural properties and scope of things, . . .
 Or by the silent looks of happy things, . . .
 All things, responsive to the writing, there
 There littleness was not; the least of things . . .
 In all things that from her sweet influence
 Things which you cannot see: we die, my Friend,
 This hour when all things which are not at rest
 A while on trivial things he held discourse,
 So busy, that the things of which he spake
 Will give me patience to endure the things
 Self-occupied; to which all outward things
 Was busy in the distance, shaping things . . .
 The forms of things with an unworthy eye?
 With the few needful things that life requires . . .
 Though little suited to surrounding things:
 To skim along the surfaces of things,
 That Fancy, dreaming o'er the map of things,
 Tranquillity to all things. Or is she,
 There, where on few external things his heart
 But all within the sphere of little things;
 The intellectual power, through words and things,
 Of institutions, and the forms of things; . . .

Things—continued.

And, in the blank and solitude of things, . . . 798
 Repose and hope among eternal things—
 "And what are things eternal?—powers depart,"
 Through all the mighty commonwealth of things;
 On outward things, with formal inference ends;
 With less intelligence for moral things . . .
 Authentic tidings of invisible things . . .
 Where living things, and things inanimate,
 Until abhorrence and contempt are things
 The spiritual presences of absent things,
 So shall they learn, while all things speak of man,
 The processes of things, and serve the cause
 Thus deeply drinking-in the soul of things,
 By Nature destined from the birth of things
 Old things repeated with diminished grace;
 Cannot but notice among men and things)
 The fluctuation and decay of things,
 Exclusively with transitory things)
 And every care which transitory things,
 As only capable to prey on things
 And gradually enriched with things of price,
 Were all things silent, wheresoe'er he moved.
 "Soul-cheering Light, most bountiful of things!
 For ancient worth and honourable things,
 Whence alteration in the forms of things,
 Low things with lofty) I too shall be doomed
 While all things else are gathering to their homes,
 And would preserve as things above all price,
 In all things, in all natures; in the stars
 But, while the gross and visible frame of things
 His mind gives back the various forms of things,
 The appearances of things! From such, how changed
 The things that live, the things that move? . . .
 Feelings and emanations, things which were
 Wonder, and admiration, things that wrought
 With any who could talk of common things
 Upon unwelcome things, which unawares
 Where these things are. He truly is alone.
 Hath said, "Be mild and cleave to gentle things,
 Enough on these inferior things.
 And the great name of Troy; now all things pass
 Think. Think not the peasant from aloft has gazed
 Where, so they fondly think, the worm shall gnaw no more.
 Inly disturbed, to think that others felt
 Till now I did not think my end had been so near.
 Yet was I grievously provoked to think
 And think that they were blasted for my sake,
 Thus much to speak; but think not I forget—
 I did not think that, during that long absence,
 He tempted me to think the Story true;
 And, while you take your rest, think not of us;
 You must forgive me. Ay, and if you think
 I think good Woman, you are the very person
 To think of it. Enough, I you may depart.
 They think it is to feed them. I have left him
 If I could think one weak or partial feeling—
 I think I see a second range of Towers;
 Back on herself, I think, again—my breast
 To its most fit conclusion, do you think
 Perchance you think so now? I cannot do it:
 Think not of that! 'tis over—we are safe.
 Which hath the limbs in sweat to think of them;
 When my heart does not ache to think of it!—
 Each in his way? Troth, I begin to think so.
 I did not think that aught was left in me
 Therefore I bless her; when I think of Man,
 Thou wilt have time to breathe and think—
 Oh, Mercy!
 It cannot live with thought; think on, think on,
 I interrupt you? Think not so. Idonea,
 Nay, think not so: come, let me raise you up:
 But for Idonea!—I have cause to think
 'Tis his who will command it.—Think of my story—
 it comforts me to think of it.
 but I think his malady was cold and hunger.
 I did not think he had a living Child.—
 Without a dog to moan for him. Think not of it,
 In the open streets, and let him think he sees,
 I think of these with many fears
 Think, it thou on beauty leanest,
 Think how pitiful that stay,
 Fell, in his hand he must have grasped, we think,
 Yet some did think that he had little business here:
 I think that he will come again.
 Think of evening's repose when our labour was done,
 Think not of me with grief and pain:
 I think, to help me if they could.
 Thou hast, I think, a look of ours,
 Virtuous restraint—ah, speak it, think it, not I
 He seems, I think, the rein to give;
 For passions that were not my own, and think
 Should pass into a stranger's hand, I think
 And on the mountains; else I think that thou
 Be thy companion, think of me, my Son,
 Think how it would stir against you,
 Then think of her beautiful gliding form,
 Of solemn loveliness, I think on thee, . . .

Think—continued.

Ah! would you think, even yet how blest . . . 155
 Look up! and think, above your head . . . 156
 Thou must needs, I think, have had, . . . 161
 Sighed to think I read a book . . . 161
 Nor think the Harp her lot deploras; . . . 164
 I rather think the gentle Dove . . . 168
 Think how ye prospered, thou and thine, . . . 169
 Softly, slowly: one might think, . . . 170
 You think, those doings must have bred . . . 178
 Or must we be constrained to think that these Spectators rude, . . . 189
 Delighted all the while to think
 I'll think of the Leech-gatherer on the lonely moor!" . . . 193
 Sad case, as you may think, for one . . . 197
 I cannot think, whate'er they say, . . . 199
 I do not think she could! . . . 200
 Such race, I think, was never seen before.
 Thou, who canst think, as well as feel. . . 200
 Of sunshine wilt thou think, and flowers, and song,
 That I am here, they'll think," quoth he, . . . 242
 To think of one, almost a child;
 Think what the Home must be if it were thine,
 Will press me down: to think of what is gone
 "Think, gentle Lady, of a Harp so far
 To think how much of this will be thy praise.
 The crowd beneath her. Verily I think,
 If the whole weight of what we think and feel,
 We rather think, with grateful mind sedate,
 And think and feel as once the Poet felt.
 Think rather of those moments bright . . .
 And think, and fear!
 And looked me in the face, to think
 Conspicuous to the Nations. Thou, I think,
 To think that now our life is only drest
 Now, when I think of thee, and what thou art,
 Think that a State would live in sounder health
 To think that such assurance can stand fast!
 Say can he think of this with mind serene
 Dear Fellow-travellers I think not that the Muse,
 Be Charity!—to bid us think,
 If clay could think and mind were weight,
 And proudly think, beside the chafing sea,
 My heart—may have been moved like me to think,
 Ah, pensive Scholar, think not so,
 Ah! who could think that sadness here
 The Sensual think with reverence of the palms
 Bishops and Priests, think what a gulf profound
 Daily to think on old familiar doors,
 "Thou look'st upon me, and dost fondly think,
 Strew far and wide. Think, proud Philosopher!
 Feel with the Mother, think the severed Wife
 "Think you, 'mid all this mighty sum
 And much it grieved my heart to think
 And I must think, do all I can,
 It is no tale; but, should you think,
 Then may'st thou think upon the dead.
 I cannot choose but think
 That wastes so oft, we think, its tuneful powers,
 How could he think of the live creature—gay
 Till, by repentance stung, they fear to think;
 Think ye your British Ancestors forsook
 Think not that Prudence dwells in dark abodes,
 Of dear Old England? Think they she is dead,
 Ah, think how one compelled for life to abide
 Even now I sometimes think of him as lost . . .
 Should sometimes think, where'er they chance to spy
 Think of their common peace, their simple play, . . . 530
 Sad case it was, as you may think, . . . 331
 Now think, ye farmers all, I pray, . . . 336
 All that they think and feel, with tears of joy;
 In snow-white splendour,—think again; and, taught
 Who do not think in love their life to lead;
 To think upon my truth and steadfastness, . . . 549
 You might think he'd twelve reapers at work in the Strand. . . 562
 Think not, O Passenger! who read'st the lines
 Such once was hers—to think and think . . . 374
 Think not, suspended from the cliff on high
 Think all, he is the God of young delight."
 Aye, think on that, my heart, and cease to stir,
 Think calmly on the past, and mark at leisure
 Is clasping mine, it saddens me to think
 We gaze—nor grieve to think that we must die,
 Why think of anything but present good?" . . . 633
 And Souls of lonely places! can I think?
 That more than one of you will think with me
 It gives, to think that our immortal being
 Think not that I could pass along untouched
 Who care not, know not, think not what they do.
 To think of, to read over, many a page,
 For utterance, to think what easy change . . . 674
 To think, to hope, to worship, and to feel,
 Trite, do yet scarcely seem so when I think Solicit our regard; but when I think
 Think, how the everlasting streams and woods,
 In our first years, or think that it is found,
 Self-pleasing, which, if we would wish to think . . . 704

Think—continued.

My mortal course, there will I think on you ;
A work of honour ; think not that to this .
Under worst trials, was I driven to think .
When then I learned, or think I learned, of truth,
Have been distressed to think of what she once
And think ye not with radiance more sublime
There are who think that strong affection, love
" Not twenty years ago, but you I think
There, undisturbed, could think of and could thank
I tremble yet to think of—our last prop,
How, think you, would they tolerate this scheme
" That which we feel we utter : as we think Restores not to their prayer ! Ah ! who would think
And sullen Hanoverian ! You might think
Be recognised by all— " Ah ! do not think,"
No sadness, when I think of what mine eyes
The rudest habitations. Ye might think
To think of one, blind and alone, advancing
Which I behold with trembling, when I think
From her own lonely altar ? Do not think
Think not, that, pitying him, I could forget
Nor think that they are victims—turned to wroongs,
The happy Island where ye think and act ;
Might almost think, at this affecting hour,
Lady, (you will think it queer)
With them I think I could have borne
Has her own treasures, and I think of these,
These narrow bounds, and think of nothing more,
And shall we think that Nature is less kind
Thinker. Not too much a thinker :
Thinketh. That with him is, or thinketh so to be,
Thinking. See Half-thinking.
Say, who, by thinking on Canadian hills,
Then, thinking that my fancy had deceived me,
Nor Her who thinking of me there counts widowed hours,"
And thinking it but sorry cheer
To pipe a simple song for thinking hearts.
All thinking things, all objects of all thought,
By thinking of his 'whens' and 'hows ;
Who carols thinking of his Love and nest,
Plain living and high thinking are no more :
While tens of thousands, thinking on the af fray,
Thinking how fast time runs, life's end how near !
' Tis the still hour of thinking, feeling, loviog,
Thinking of past and gone, with what is left
And thinking of my Brethren, dead, dispersed,
Reading or thinking ; either to lay up
But though untaught by thinking or by books
Of those enormities, even thinking minds
When thinking on my own beloved friend,
The careless stillness of a thinking mind
Or haply thinking of far-distant friends,
The thinking principle—shall they in fact
The thinking, thoughtless, school-boy ; the bold youth
That, by the thinking mind, have been compelled
With gladness, thinking that the more it spreads
Thinker. But then he is a horse that thinks !
And, when he thinks, his pace is slack ;
She thinks no more of deadly sin ;
Yet, while he thinks on times of old,
And somewhere, as he thinks, by crashes
He thinks not of his long, long, strife ;—
Thinks her the luckiest soul on earth,
So thinks that Dame of haughty air,
It is, thinks he, the gracious Fairy,
Who thinks that priestly cunning holds the keys
A wandering Ghost, so thinks the Knight,
With something, as the Shepherd thinks,
The Power least prized is that which thinks and feels.
He thinks of the fields he so often hath mown,
Feeds on in light, nor thinks of wioter's shock ;
Widening on all sides ; sees, or thinks he sees,
Lurk in its cells—and thinks himself enriched,
And guard her fortresses. Who thinks, and feels,
She thinks that she and all she has
Thinly. That thinly decks his few grey hairs ;
Thinly by a one night's frost ;
When, lo ! the ice, so thinly spread,
Ill fed she was, and thinly clad ;
But thinly sown these natures ; rare, at least,
Thinly-peopled. On thinly-peopled mountains and wild heaths,
Fair-flowering in a thinly-peopled house,
Thinly-scattered. Hamlets and thinly-scattered villages,
Thinned. That thinned the living and disturbed the dead ?
Thinned the rank woods ; and for the cheerful grange
Thinner. Rises ; but, having reached the thinner air,
How pleased he is where thin and thinner grows .
Thinning. And by that thinning magnifies the great,
Thin-set. To pastoral dales, thin-set with modest farms
Third. " So passed a second day ; and, when the Third—continued.

Dead, and with mangled limbs. The third day after Doomed to a third and last captivity,
Sir Walter mounted him ; he was the third
And then he gave a third .
On the third stage of thy great destiny.
But, on the third day, passing by
And it was then the third night of the May.
A third now slumbers at the Mother's side ;
But, when a third time from the land
And now a third small Island, where survived
When the third summer freed us from restraint,
And on the third, as wistfully she raised Third-rate. " This," cries the Sailor, " a Third-rate—is Thirmer. Of Thirmer flashes like a warrior's shield
Thirst. See Under-thirst.
Their thirst they slake—they wash their toil-worn
feet,
My thirst at every rill can slake,
No, no, this cannot be ;—men thirst for power and majesty !
And thirst for insight to allay
And thirst for no inferior zeal,
" Or, if you thirst with hardy zeal
Here, with no thirst but what the stream can slake,
Now, for your shame, a Power, the Thirst of Gold,
Impelled by thirst of all but Heaven-taught skill.
In this pellucid Current slaked his thirst ?
There stopped ; her thirst was satisfied
To slake their thirst, with reckless hoofs have trod
In her esteem the thirst that wrought man's fall,
The thirst of fame his warrant :
Body and mind and soul ; a thirst so keen
The thirst for power in men who ne'er concede ;
And, for hunger and thirst and such troublesome
calls,
For thirst of power, that Heaven disowns,
And pleasant flowers. The thirst of living praise,
And unrelentingly possessed by thirst
And thirst for bloody spoils abroad is paired
I scorned indifference ; but, inflamed with thirst,
My lips are parched with thirst, but you, it seems,
My thirst I slaked, and, from the cheerless spot
His thirst from rill or gushing fount, and thanked
And thirst for change ; or habit hath subdued
Had slaked his thirst out of a famous well,
Whose skirts the glowing Mountain thirsted to detain.
Thirsting. Thirsting for some of those exploits that fill
Thirsting after all perfection,
I mused ; and, thirsting for redress,
Was useful round men thirsting to transgress ;—
Thirsting to make the guardian crook of law
Thus daily thirsting, in that lonesome life,
Is thirsting for their overthrow, who yet Thirstings. And keep vindictive thirstings from the soul,
Thirsts. A flock that thirsts not to a pool disliked ?
Thirsty. See Blood-thirsty.
And that frail Child of thirsty clay,
To thirsty suns and parching air.
And moisten the parched lips of thirsty flowers—
Announces to the thirsty fields a boon
' Mid spectral lakes bemoeking thirsty men,
Lapp'd by the panting tongue of thirsty skies.
But, like a thirsty wind, to roam about
With which thou dost refresh the thirsty lip,
Thirteen. " For thirteen hours he ran a desperate race ;
Thirty. See Five-and-thirty, Two-and-thirty.
Till thirty were not left alive
Thirty years or more, and yet
Her thirty years of winter past,
Though he has been, full thirty years,
Full thirty years behind.
Thus thirty smooth years did he thrive on his farm :
His Grand sire that age more than thirty times told ;
Four years and thirty, told this very week,
This, omitted.
Thistle. See Holy-thistle, Milk-thistle.
And juniper and thistle, sprinkled o'er,
Choose her thistle for thy sceptre,
Towered like the imperial thistle, not unfurnished Thistle's. Where scarce the foxglove peeps, or thistle's beard ;
Of dandelion seed or thistle's beard,
Sit loosely, like the thistle's crest of down ;
Where scarce the foxglove peeps, and thistle's beard,
And turned the thistles of a curse
Thither. Yet thither the world's business finds its way
A long mile thence. While thither they pursued
And female cries, Their course they thither bent,
That Convent was Stone-Arthur Castle. Thither
By chance had thither strayed ;
On whose breast are thither home
And thither took with him his motherless Bahe,
Who journey thither find themselves alone
That many and many a day he thither went,

Thither—continued.

- Thither do I withdraw when cloudless suns
But, when they thither came, the Youth
By what means it could thither come, and whence;
This wretched Woman thither goes;
And thither, when the summer days were long,
By choice or chance, did thither come
Thither, in time of adverse shocks,
No vestige now remains; yet thither creep
And thither young and old repair,
Thither the rainbow comes—the cloud—
Thither your eyes may turn—the Isle is passed
away;
Or thither thronged for refuge. With quick glance
Can in a moment travel thither,
Alter long absence, thither I repaired,
When thou wert thither guided. From the heart
That, thither driven from some unsheltered place,
Upon his knee, whom he had thither brought Thither he comes with spring-time, there abides
His flock, and thither from the homestead bears
Who thither comes to find in it his home?
Thither, uncertain on which road to fix
My expectation, thither I repaired,
Thither I came, and there, amid the gloom
That fed upon the Common, thither came
Thither his popular talents he transferred;
Motions of moonlight, all come thither—touch,
And have an answer—thither come, and shape
That from your garden thither soars, to feed
Thither we turned; and gathered, as we read,
By nature only; but, if thither led,
Said she, "for thither as the trees grew up,
Thitherward. With Luke that evening thitherward
he walked:
Looked thitherward. Ope, reckoning by years,
With this persuasion thitherward my steps
While thitherward we shape our course; or while

Sharper than the pointed thorn."
The yew, the holly, and the bright green thorn,
"There is a Thorn—it looks so old,
It stands erect, this aged Thorn;
And this poor Thorn they clasp it round
To bury this poor Thorn for ever.
"This Thorn you on your left esp; ;
"And, close beside this aged Thorn,
Which close beside the Thorn you see,
"Now would you see this aged Thorn,
And there, beside the Thorn, she sits
And why sits she beside the Thorn
The pond—and Thorn, so old and grey;
"But that she goes to this old Thorn,
The Thorn which I described to you,
"But what's the Thorn? and what the pond?
But plain it is the Thorn is bound
Dismounting, then, he leaned against a thorn;
Close to the thorn on which Sir Walter leaned
"In April here beneath the flowering thorn,
Beneath the broom or budding thorn,
Whose temples bled beneath the platted thorn.
Or rain-drop lingering on the pointed thorn."
The Gordon, crouched behind a thorn,
In his pure presence near the trysting thorn—
On her last thorn the nightly moon has shone;
Retreated towards a brake of thorn,
Its hinder part concealed by hedge-row thorn.
That lip—a rose-bud from the thorn,
Whose certain pine or thorn,
In misery near the miserable Thorn;—
She seeks a wilderness of weed and thorn,
Thorns. At thorns, and brakes, and brambles,—and in truth
The crown of thorns, hands pierced upon the tree,
The crown of thorns; whose life-blood flowed, the

The crown of thorns around his bleeding brow
No thorns can pierce her tender feet,
That the thorns wound her not; they only guard.

Would drive those Scottish Rovers to their dens

This Provost doth for those bad Jews prepare

Thought. (Partial list.) See Tho'.
Thought I have never seen his face, methinks,
Thought at a distance and he was disguised,
I love her, though I dare not call her daughter.
You will be firm: but though we well may trust
Thought rich to heavenly, poor in earthly, comfort,
And do good service, though she knew it not.
Thought but a glimpse, it sent me to my prayers.
Faithful, though swift as lightning, the meek dove;
In sooth, I speak from feeling, what though now Thought thou the Cuckoo heard, ere thou heard'st
me;
Thought I be far from her I reverence,
Thought he to no one give the fortitude
Duly as Friday comes, though pressed herself
And recognised it, though an altered form, Thought. See After-thought.
Vain thought!—Yet be as now thou art,
What high resolves exalt the tenderest thought.
Rocked the charmed thought in more delightful dreams;
All but neglect. The world, for so it thought,
Which he has never used; that thought with him
Who, in the silent hour of inward thought,
Some labourer, thought he, may perchance be near;
Nor, if accosted now, in thought engrossed,
Banished that dismal thought; and now the wind
Here paused she, of all present thought forlorn,
A thought resigned with pain, when from the mast
"And oft I thought (my fancy was so strong)
A sudden joy surprised expiring thought,
(Reader, forgive the intolerable thought)
He seemed to quarrel with the very thought.
I thought the Convent never would appear;
'Tis but for a few days—a thought has struck me.
I never should have thought of it again
I dare not trust myself with such a thought—
Was crying, as I thought, crying for bread
I thought I saw the skeleton of Idonea.
Of this Man's crimes beyond the reach of thought?
At this audacious blasphemy, I thought
A wretched Outcast—but this strain of thought
You thought his voice the echo of Idonea's.
A thought that's worth a thousand worlds! I grieve
That flatters us, because it asks not thought;
Shall Nature be avenged. 'Tis nobly thought;
One happy thought has passed across my mind.
Deep, deep and vast, vast beyond human thought,
It cannot live with thought; think on, think on,
That she is innocent. Leave that thought awhile
Banish the thought, crush it, and be at peace.
Give not to them a thought. From Palestine
I thought he grasped my hand
A single tree; she thought it was her Father.—
In some degree. Between us stood, I thought,
Alas, the thought of such a cruel death
Who, casting as I thought a guilty Person
Forgive me!—Saints forgive me. Had I thought
I thought there was no harm: but that bad Man,
Within the compass of a mortal thought,
A Man by pain and thought compelled to live,
And love, and thought, and joy.
O blessed tidings! thought of joy!
Again, as if the thought would choke
I thought of Kilve's delightful shore,
Kilve, thought I, was a favoured place,
Thus, thought I, to her lamb that little Maid might sing:
And fittest to unutterable thought
I thought of times when Pain might be thy guest,
Leave that thought; and here be uttered
Ay, thought the Vicar, smiling to himself,
Why, there, Sir, is a thought that's new to me!
The thought of death sits easy on the man

Thought—continued.

Beware of rousing an ambitious thought ; . . . 104 Arlegel 164
 As I already have in thought devised ; . . . 105 Arlegel 216
 With these our latest gifts of tender thought ; . . . 106 Farwell 20
 Some thought he was a lover, and did woo :
 Some thought far worse of him, and judged him
 wrong ;
 Could not the entrance of this thought forbid :
 Ah gentle Love ! if ever thought was thine . . . 108 Indolence 33
 110 Look at 15*
 111 'Tis said that some*
 48
 And Love is dutiful in thought and deed ; . . . 112 O dearer 14*
 And my last thought would happy be ; . . . 114 Ind. Wom. 68
 Though little given to care and thought, . . . 115 Last of Flock 23
 I thought he knew some ill of me : . . . 115 Last of Flock 74
 I prayed, yet every day I thought . . . 115 Last of Flock 87
 That follows the thought—We've no land in the vale,
 From that ill thought ; and, being blind,
 Death, life, and sleep, reality and thought,
 Old times, thought I, are breathing there ;
 With haughty indignation, spurned the thought . . .
 Checked her with filial meekness ; for no thought
 A thought with which her heart is sore—
 I thought to find my lost one here,
 A thought is come into her head : . . .
 Perhaps, and no unlikely thought !
 Long time lay Susan lost in thought ; . . .
 Such was his first resolve ; he thought again,
 There's Richard Bateman, thought she to herself,
 Thoughty lofirn ne'er came between them,
 For a sunny thought to cheer the Stranger's way,
 We meet thee, like a pleasant thought,
 That thought comes next—and instantly
 Has a thought about her nest,
 Their Father, took of them no thought,
 To cheat the thought she cannot cheer,
 Almost as thought itself, of human ken.
 Thought of a wound which death is slow to cure,
 Matter for a jocund thought,
 —That smile forbids the thought ; for on thy face
 Nor has thought time to come and go,
 No notion have they—not a thought,
 I gazed—and gazed—but little thought
 Does, then, a deep and earnest thought the blissful mind employ . . .
 She thought again—and did agree
 Nor less, to feed voluptuous thought,
 But of the Vagrant none took thought ;
 My whole life I have lived in pleasant thought,
 I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous Boy,
 I looked around, I thought I saw
 And now, with gleams of half-extinguished thought,
 By thought supplied, nor any interest . . .
 All thinking things, all objects of all thought,
 And, while I gazed, there came to me a thought . . .
 When of thy loss I thought, beloved Wife !
 Old frailties then recurred :—but lofty thought,
 Ye Gods, thought He, that servile Implement
 It was in sooth a happy thought
 A reconciling thought may turn
 To keep the treasure unimpaired. Vain thought !
 The daring thought, forget the name ; . . .
 Intricate labyrinth, more dread for thought . . .
 Knit every thought the impending issue needs,
 Thought Peter, What can mean all this ? . . .
 A thought received with languid pleasure !
 Thought he, that is the face of one . . .
 Thought Peter then, come woe or woe,
 He thought, —of thee, O faithful Ass ! . . .
 I'm not the man who could have thought . . .
 Thought Peter, in the shire of Fife . . .
 Thought Peter, 'tis the poor man's home :
 Happy the thought best likened to a stone
 Will he an awful thought, if life have one . . .
 Deep thought, or dread remembrance, had I none.
 Oftener than Ganges or the Nile ; a thought . . .
 I have thought of all by turns, and yet do lie . . .
 Pleasing remembrance of a thought foregone ; . . .
 If thou appear untouched by solemn thought,
 Save only far as thought and feeling bleed . . .
 But now upon this thought I cannot brood ; . . .
 Yet he repines not, if his thought stand clear, . . .
 Glad thought for every season ! but the Spring . . .
 The deep, deep joy of a confiding thought ; . . .
 Nor could I let one thought—one motion—slip
 Of thought, that give the true poetic thrill ; . . .
 Or share with me, fond thought ! that inward eye,
 Motions of thought which elevate the will . . .
 At thought of what I now behold : . . .
 A human sweetness with the thought . . .
 As wise in thought as bold in deed : . . .
 But thought how wide the world, the times
 As might have been, then, thought of joy !
 She thought of him with constant care, . . .
 His Mother often thought, and said, . . .
 An English Boy, O thought of bliss ! . . .
 A bold thought roused him, and he took . . .
 Had wakened some redeeming thought . . .
 Sad thought, which I would banish,
 That thought is one which neither can appal . . .

Thought—continued.

Thought for another moment. Thou art free, . . . 306 Here, on our 10*
 It is not to be thought of that the Flood . . . 307 It is not 1*
 To timely sleep. Thought I, the impassioned strain,
 Than all the pride of intellect and thought ? . . . 314 I dropped 6*
 A resolution, or enlivening thought ? . . . 315 Alas ! what 14*
 And we can 'hook the thought that by his hands
 And, ere a thought could ask on what intent . . . 316 It was a 4*
 But 'tis a rueful thought that willow hands . . . 319 Spaniard 5
 To mutual respect in thought-and deed ; . . . 323 Ode 184 25
 Of joy and sprightly thought . . . 325 Engkien 12
 Inherited :—presumptuous thought !—it fled . . . 334 The Spirit 11*
 Of his last going from Tweed-side, thought turned,
 Deserve a thought) but little known to fame— . . . 337 Eclipse 12
 Break forth at thought of laying down his head,
 With a thought he would flee to these haunts of his prime,
 The mind, depressed by thought of greatness flowo.
 Bold with the thought, in reverence I sat down,
 From far, forgive the wanderings of my thought :
 Her lineaments, thought he, surpass . . . 360 Eg. Maid 15
 Merlin, as fixed in thought he stood,
 As thought, when through bright regions memory ranges,
 Of purposes which no false thought shall cross,
 Bear with me, Brother ! quench the thought . . . 373 Eg. Maid 263
 To prompt the thought ?—Upon the steep rock's breast
 I thought of Thee, my partner and my guide,
 That thought away, turn, and with watchful eyes
 Then may we ask, though pleased that thought should range
 This way or that, or give it even a thought . . . 384 Tyndrum 6
 To have no seat for thought were better doom,
 By which the soul—with patient steps of thought
 Meekly, with foreboding thought, . . . 394 How profitless 6*
 The thought while I am by thy side,
 And thou, (O happy thought this day !)
 If on one thought our minds have fed,
 And thought endue thee with all truth—
 The Chieftains to unfold his thought,
 Alas ! thought he, and have I borne
 Fell on him, with the sudden thought . . . 396 Action is 9*
 Out of his heart, or crossed his thought,
 The turf, and thought by thought was chased,
 Thought he, may want not skill to save . . . 402 White Doe 347
 " A shadow of such thought remains . . . 402 White Doe 535
 Shall I this lonely thought consign ?—
 By this sad burden—even that thought,
 This was the instant thought of all ; . . . 402 White Doe 573
 And perfect sway, through many a thought
 It is, thought Emily, the same, . . . 402 White Doe 579
 The saddest thought the Creature brings ?
 Of time, and place, and thought, and deed—
 And of that lonely name she thought,
 Of thought, she neither shrunk nor mourned ;
 Servants of God ! who not a thought will share
 How patiently the yoke of thought they bear !
 With the least shade of thought to sin allied ;
 Your practice prove, faithless thought but in thought,
 Thought pride's least lurking thought appear a wrong . . . 402 White Doe 171
 Man to curse man, (thought monstrous and appalling) . . . 402 White Doe 182
 The Church extends her care to thought and deed ;
 Or grovelling thought, to seek a refuge here ; . . . 402 White Doe 1679
 Might give to serious thought a moment's sway,
 For whom the gravest thought of what they miss,
 Swept by a favouring wind that leaves thought free,
 Hast thou looked down upon, that such a thought
 With pleasure sometimes by this thought restrained— . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 Thought Eglamore, by which I swore . . . 402 White Doe 1715
 Our own domestic mountain. Thing and thought
 If Thought and Love desert us, from that day . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 With Thought and Love companions of our way,
 There's thought and no thought, and there's pale-
 ness and bloom . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 Such stores as silent thought can bring,
 So fast out of his heart, I thought . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 Of still and serious thought went round,
 Then from thy breast what thought, . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 Smooth passions, smooth discourse, and joyous thought : . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 For thought—dominion vast and absolute . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 But in the quietness of thought : . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 Upon the plan that pleased his boyish thought : . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 Nor thought of tender happiness betray ; . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 His arms, as swimmers use, and plunge—dread
 thought, . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 Of gentler thought, protracted till thine eye . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 Of calm abstraction ? Can the ruling thought
 Thought that should teach the zealot to forego . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 The murderer, yea, by sanction to that thought,
 And thought in silence, with regret too keen, . . . 402 White Doe 1594
 To every act, word, thought, and look of love, . . . 402 White Doe 1594

Thoughtful—continued.

Exalt the sense of thoughtful gratitude
And poured out truth in works by thoughtful love
For my grave looks, too thoughtful for my years.

From Ellen's thoughts; had perished to her mind
Stung by his inward thoughts, and by the smiles
Of memory, images and precious thoughts,

Thousand. With thousand thousand twinkling points of light ;

And homeless near a thousand homes I stood,
And near a thousand tables pined and wanted food.
Her last death-shriek, distinct among a thousand.
This is true comfort, thanks a thousand times !—
A thought that's worth a thousand worlds ! I grieve
A thousand miles. I am in poverty,
Ay, in the word a thousand scorpions lodge ;
By One who would have died a thousand times
A thousand lambs art on the rocks,
Had clothed the Ewbanks for a thousand years :—
And should he live a thousand years,
Arid the heart of many thousand mists,
There are ten thousand to whom loss like this
Where three thousand skulls are laid ;
But in Man's fortunes. Hence a thousand tales
Of a thousand standers-by,
A thousand years are but as yesterday ;
Not less capacious than a thousand years.
A thousand, if they cross our way,
Which made me look a thousand ways
Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
That, of a thousand vessels, mine should be
Five thousand warriors—O the rapturous day !
On which four thousand years have gazed !
That stretch a thousand thousand sails)
Which a thousand ridges yield ;
In ten thousand dewy rays ;
A face o'er which a thousand shadows go !
Of rapture from a thousand throats—
They lull perchance ten thousand thousand flowers,
And ye have all a thousand fears
Leaving ten thousand stars beneath her :
Ten thousand miles from all his brethren ?
Poor Peter from a thousand causes
He kisses him a thousand times !
By doubts and thousand petty fancies crost
That, while ten thousand pleasures disappear,
A thousand times this pipe did Tasso sound ;
The thousand links of that ethereal chain ;
A thousand tender pleasures, thine and mine,
There are a thousand such elsewhere
Six thousand veterans practised in war's game,
A thousand like it, white as snow—
On that offensive soil, like waves upon a thousand shores.
A thousand ghostly fears, and haunting thoughts, proceed !
Clinging to its steep sides a thousand herbs
Full sixteen thousand fair to see ;
A thousand, thousand rings of light
Against a thousand cannot stand ;—
A thousand times more exquisitely sweet,
Self-poised, and scooped into ten thousand cells,
Decks, on thy sinuous banks, her thousand thrones,
I heard a thousand blended notes,
'Twill murmur on a thousand years,
Not only for a thousand thoughts that were,
A thousand years hath it borne that name,
And shall a thousand more.
That, when a thousand years are told,
But while a thousand pleasures come unsought,
Whose fancy had a thousand fields to skim ;

Thousand—continued.

For thou art worse than mad a thousand fold ;
With a thousand soft pictures his memory will teem,
A thousand times more beautiful appeared,
In a thousand valleys far and wide,
While twice ten thousand corselets at the view
Six thousand years amid his lonely hounds
Hayoc and Chaos blast a thousand vales,
And on ten thousand hearths his shout rebound ;
A thousand sharp punctures of cold-sweating pain,
Why should I speak of what a thousand hearts
And in the press of twenty thousand thoughts,
A world of pain, ripened a thousand hopes ;
Memorial revered by a thousand storms ;
Leaving a thousand others, that, in hall,
Than that famed paradise of ten thousand trees,
Into a thousand colours ; while he read,
And find a thousand bounteous images
One only in ten thousand ? What one is,
Shines, in the brightest of ten thousand stars,
A thousand times more beautiful than the earth
Among ten thousand innocents, enrolled
Be of a thousand faculties composed,
And twice ten thousand interests, do yet prize
Upon its pillow with a thousand schemes.
Into a thousand thousand sparkling waves,
That whirls (how slow itself !) ten thousand spindles :
Of Tell came trooping from a thousand huts,
This he is freed from, and from thousand notes
These have we, and a thousand nooks of earth
Are hung with thousand thousand diamond drops

Thousands. Where thousands meet to worship God under a mighty Dome ;
Which then, when tens of thousands were deprest
Of prospect, whereof many thousands tell.

While tens of thousands, thinking on the affray,
Entered, with streaming thousands, through the

Sir Tristram, dear to thousands as a brother,
Thousands of years before the silent air
Was ripe to send its thousands forth,
Of tens of thousands, secretly,
Who sees him ?—thousands see, and One
Who, 'mong those thousands, friend hath none,
Would breed us thousands brave as they.'
Heard near fresh streams ; and thousands, who rejoice
But passions spread like plagues, and thousands wild
A voice, from long-expecting thousands sent,
When thousands, by severer doom,
Thousands though rich in Fortune's grace
In marshalled thousands, darkening street and moor
Thousands, in each variety of tongue
Thousands, as toward yon Lancastrian Towers,
To thousands, share not Thou ; how'er bereft,
Than treading a path trod by thousands before.
'Twas a path trod by thousands ; but Daniel is one
Made not, as thousands do, a vulgar sleep ;
And many thousands now are sad—
With tens of thousands rent from off the tree
To thousands upon thousands of her sons,
When Englishmen by thousands were o'erthrown,
Thousands of cities, in the desert place
White thankless thousands are oppress and clogged
While tens of thousands falter in their path,
And tens of thousands suffer wrong as deep.
For tens of thousands uninformed as he ?
That tens of thousands at this day exist
Where her thousands Fate slew,

Thrilled—continued.

Into the consciousness of safety thrilled;
Whose sedulous iteration thrilled with joy
Of silence, how it thrilled thy sumptuous roof,
For universal Christendom had thrilled
With rapture thrilled; whose Youth revered the crown
Then shall a Veteran's heart be thrilled with joy,
A wild delirium first the infant thrill'd;
But Europe at that time was thrilled with joy,
Thrilled by some female vendor's scream, belike
On the thrilled ear, and flags uprising, yield

Thrilling. See Heart-thrilling.
Thrilling the unweaponed crowd with plumeless heads?—
A voice so thrilling ne'er was heard
A thrilling voice was heard, that vivified
Thrilling each pearly cleft and sparry grot,
To a voice of thrilling power.
More thrilling melodies; Witch answering Witch,
With thrilling word, and potent sign
Chidden she chides again; the thrilling touch
For Her, who, pierced by sorrow's thrilling dart,
In languid streams through every thrilling vein;
Of Pan, Invisible God, thrilling the rocks . . .

Thro'. (Partial list.) See Through.
O sylvan Wye! thou wanderer thro' the woods, . . .
Thro' bare grey dell, high wood, and pastoral cove;
Before the boat-house peeping thro' the shade;
Portentous, thro' her old woods' trackless claron throat,
The cock far off sounded his clarion throat;
Twice did I spring to grasp his withered throat,
And busy throat whose sink and swell . . .
Haloocing from an open throat, . . .
Is, and the pillar of the throat would be
Twice in a day it passed through his throat;
And cut his throat, and in a pit him cast.
There, where with mangled throat he lay upright,
Since that thy throat is cut, as it doth seem.
"My throat is cut into the hone, I trow,
And some did sing all out with the full throat.
From thee and thy haste throat, keep all that's good,
As thou dost in thy throat, I wot not how.
On tiptoe rear'd he blows his clarion throat,
Raised in the tender passage of the throat . . .

That stream in blithe succession from the throats
Throb. Soft as the dying throb of the lyre . . .

Throbbled. She slept in peace,—his pulses throbbled

Throbbing. The throbbing pulse—else troubled with-

Thrones—continued.

Had never been when thrones of mighty Nations
Is stricken in the moment when her thrones
Throne. And on the vacant throne his worthier
 Brother placed.
Re-seated on thy throne,
Who sat a ruler on his throne
This is our palace,—yonder is thy throne;
"O Lady, worthy of earth's proudest throne!
Mercy from her twilight throne
Methought I saw the footsteps of a throne
How Verse may build a princely throne
Austria a Daughter of her Throne hath sold!
O wretched man, the throne of tyranny!
Or thanks and praises to His throne ascend
Oa this high DAY of THANKS, before the Throne of Grace!
The laurelled Dante's favourite seat. A throne,
And, for a moment, filled that empty Throne.
Or gift to be presented at the throne
Upon a primrose bank, her throne
"Mid woods and wilds, on Nature's craggy throne,
Upon his throne;" unsoftened, undismayed
Totters the Throne; the new-born Church is sad,
Woman! the Power who left His throne on high,
That pardon, from God's Throne, may set its seal
In progress toward the fount of Love,—the throne
She heard, ere to the throne of grace
Your Master's throne is set."—Deaf was the Sea;
—Then Canute, rising from the invaded throne,
From his everlasting throne,
Up to the throne of God is borne
I beat before Thy gracious throne,
Now may'st thou sing for aye before the throne,
So promptly from her lofty throne?—
Seated on her lineal throne;
For the Church, the State, the Throne!
Our simple childhood, sits upon a throne
Was Nature's, uttered from her Alpine throne;
Bound to the fierce Metropolis. From his throne
Spared not the empty throne, and in proud haste
Bearing a tribute to the Almighty's Throne.
Of open court, an object like a throne
Who tend her altars, wait upon her throne,
Or, out of Sion, thundering from his throne
An English Sovereign's brow! and to the throne
How, from his lofty throne, the sun can fling
A throne, that may be likened unto his,
From thy empyreal throne, the elect of earth
The brightest jewel of a George's throne.
Throned. Throned in the hearts of men. Should Heaven ordain
Where, throned in gold, immortal Science reigns;
Throned in the Sun's descending car
Sit like a throned Lady, sending out
 (The throned Lady whom erewhile we hailed)
Of vengeful retribution, theirs who throned
O'er stately Edinborough throned on crags?
Thrones. Else how, when mighty Thrones were put to shame,
Your thrones, ye Powers, from duty fear to swerve!
The ancient thrones of Christendom are stuff
Decks, on thy sinuous banks, her thousand thrones,
Whose merchants Princes were, whose decks were thrones;
For temples, towers, and thrones
Of shouting Angels, and the empyreal thrones—
Ye Thrones that have defied remorse, and cast Throng. What shall it be? a mithilfe throng? or that holy place and calm
Where is the throng, the tumult of the race?
On this great throng, this bright array!
Glad moment is it when the throng
Nor wholly lost upon the throng
Thou wilt salute old memories as they throng
And melancholy Spectres throng them;—
They cried, and all around me throng,
Well might such thoughts, dear Sister, throng
What He—who, mid the kindred throng
And a throng of rosy boys
Hence motions, even amid the vulgar throng,
Was fit for some gay throng;
From Wood-nymph of Diana's throng?
And from the temple forth they throng,
So vaunt a throng of Followers, filled with pride
With orb and cycle girds the starry throng.
Amid the shuddering throng doth Cranmer stand;
The throng of rooks, that now, from twig or nest,
And to the throng, that on the Cumbrian shore
It charms a feast-day throng of all degrees,
That when his fate had housed him 'mid a throng
And see the budding leaves the branches throng,
In the throng of the town like a stranger is he,
I hear the Echoes through the mountains throng,
We in thought will join your throng,
Gleazed sideway, leaving the tumultuous throng,
In lonely places; if a throng was near
My surplice, through the inferior throng I clove
Doth here rise up against me. 'Mid a throng
May not come near him, nor the little throng

Throng—continued.

Of this glad throng, foot-travellers side by side,
Thence back into the throng, until we reach,
And there he sate surrounded with a throng
Shrill voices from the hawkers in the throng,
To seek the ground where, 'mid a throng of graves,
We saw a throng of people;—wherefore met?
Where on the labours of the happy throng
And this Survivor, with his cheerful throng
Plunged—'mid a gay and busy throng convened
That is to come, the throng of woodland flowers,
Thronged. Here, thronged with primroses, the steep rock's breast
And vacant doth the region which they thronged
The Monks of Fountain's thronged to force
In the thronged city, from the walks of gain,
The streets and quays are thronged, but why disown
Thronged yesterday by airy ghosts;
Or thither thronged for refuge. With quick glance
The Heavens are thronged with martyrs that have risen
Is thronged with staring pictures and huge scrolls,
Was thronged with imprecations like the Wilds
Whose skill had thronged the floor with a proud show
Upon the thronged abodes of busy men
From the thronged hive, and settle where they list
Of the thronged world, Society is here Thronging. Unscared by thronging fancies of strange hue
Thronging the walls; and on the floor beneath
Throng. For sacrifice its throngs of living men,
And hither thronged of birds resort;
Thronged of celestial visages,
How throngs the crowd to yon theatric school
Throste. And hark! how blithe the throste sings!
Throttled. And throttled with an infant godhead's might
Through. (Partial list.) See Thorough, Thro'
And, through all converse of our later years,
A glow-worm, through the covert of the furze,
A piece of money glittering through the dust?
And will be so through every change of fortune
Upwards I cast my eyes, and, through a crevice,
With its first bounty. Wandering through the west,
By wrong triumphant through its own excess,
Renews. Through every forest, cave, and den,
Through humbleness, the Spirit that did alight
Upon thy heart, whence, through that glory's might,
And through this street who list might ride and
 wend;
Twice in a day it passed through his throat;
"Through all the Jewry (this before said I)
"The Christian folk that through the Jewry went Yet have I felt of sickness through the May,
Through all this May that I have little sleep;
He lets them perish through that grievous ill.
In winking words, since through her gentleness,
As soon as he this song had thus sung through,
He strayed through the fields like an indolent
 wight,
And Nature, while through the great city he hies,
Will hear the wind sigh through the leaves of a tree.
Through the lost look of dotage, is cunning and sly:
They hunt through the streets with deliberate
 tread,
Throughout. Time softly treads; throughout the landscape breathes
From age to age, throughout his lonely bounds
Throughout that journey, from the vehicle
With iron, making it throughout to all
Which, as the Housewife phrased it, were throughout
Evening spreads throughout the west!
Renewed throughout the bounds of earth or ocean,
Were England's native growth; and throughout Spain
Abruptly paused the stride;—the field throughout
Ye saw, throughout this royal House
By truth, shall spread, throughout the world dispersed.
Throughout the Country they have left, our shores
[Yet not the less would I throughout
Throughout the live-long day,
But evermore throughout thy reign
O seat of Arts! renewed throughout the world!
One happiness. Throughout this narrative,
Throughout the landscape; tuft, stone, scratch minute—
Have prayed that throughout earth upon all men,
Throughout the nether sphere!—And if with this Throughout a long and lonely summer's day
Throughout the lofty range of these rough hills,
Into all hearts. Throughout the world of sense,
Throughout all lands: let every nation hear
Throve. They throve, and we at home did thrive:
Best throve the fire of chaste desire,

Throws—continued.

Made desperate by contempt of men who throw . . .
Who throw, like plants, unimjured by the storm . . .
Throw. And round the west's proud lodge their shadows throw, . . .
Yet does she still, undaunted, throw the while . . .
There, all unshaded, hazing forests throw . . .
The happy husband flies, his arms to throw . . .
Full off is pleased a wayward dart to throw ; . . .
Hath no resolves to throw away ; . . .
Why throw away a needful day . . .
With stary lustre ; yet had power to throw . . .
Not envying Latian shades—if yet they throw . . .
Tradition, he thou mute ! Oblivion, throw . . .
Ye ne'er, like hapless human wanderers, throw . . .
To throw the "sultry ray" of young Desire ; . . .
And sweet sensations that throw hack our life, . . .
Throwing. 'Twas throwing words away ; for still . . .
From the fierce aspect of this River, throwing . . .
That throwing off oppression must be work . . .
On throwing of incumburances, to seek . . .
Instantly throwing-down my limbs at ease . . .
Thrown. See Out-thrown.
No meadows thrown between, the giddy steps . . .
To-day you have thrown off a tyranny . . .
Or thron upon a desert thron . . .
Who told him that his pains were thrown away, . . .
Lay thron together, ready for the work . . .

Now, if our errand hath been thron away, . . .
In one blest moment. Like a shadow thron . . .
Throws. A lingering light he fondly throns . . .
And downward thence a koot of grass he throns, . . .
If the soft voice he throns about . . .
That mossy slope, o'er which the woodbine throns . . .
Our Human-nature throns away . . .
Nor haunting Summer—when he throns . . .
Or he would pass into her bird, that throns . . .
No zephyr breathes, no cloud its shadow throns : . . .
The sauntering Horseman throns not with a slack . . .
Thence down the steep a pile of grass he throns . . .
Thrush. The thrush is busy in the wood, . . .
Thou Thrush, that singest loud—and loud and free, . . .
The shepherd's dog, the linnet and the thrush, . . .
In the time before the thrush . . .
Hangs a Thrush that sings loud, it has sung for . . .
three years : . . .
Long as the thrush shall pipe on Grogar Hill ! . . .
Hark ! 'tis the Thrush, undaunted, undegrest, . . .
Pleased to renounce, does this dear Thrush attune . . .
Off have I heard the Nightingale and Thrush . . .
In which the linnet or the thrush might sing, . . .
Hints to the thrush 'tis time for their repose ; . . .
The shrill-voiced thrush is heedless, and again . . .
To you exulting thrush the Muse . . .
The while a Thrush, urged rather than restrained . . .
So that, I guess, the linnet and the thrush, . . .
From human dwelling, or the vernal thrush . . .
A thrush sang loud, and other melodies, . . .
A thrush resorts, and annually chants, . . .
Friends shall I have at dawn, blackbird and thrush . . .
and thrush . . .
Thrushe's. There's a cuckoo, and one or two thrushes, . . .
Thrush's. Of that one beech, appeared a thrush's . . .
nest ; . . .
Thrust. Why should a thrust of the arm have such . . .
a power, . . .
"Nor dare to thrust thy foolish self . . .
The priests are from their altars thrust ; . . .
And downward thrust his staff, intent . . .
Thrust out abruptly into Fortune's way . . .
Of vice and folly thrust upon my view, . . .
How, between heart and heart, oppression thrust . . .
Who thrust themselves upon the passive world . . .
Thrusting. By thrusting two rude staves into the . . .
wall . . .
The dark pines thrusting forth their spiky heads ; . . .
Thrusts. Old Andes thrusts yon craggy spear . . .

Thrusters—continued.

Thrusters his hands in a waggon, and smells at . . .
the hay ; . . .
Thump. The distant forge's swinging thump pro- . . .
found ; . . .
Thumping. What thumping—stumping—overhead ! . . .
Thumps. Rattles the salt-box, thumps the kettle- . . .
drum, . . .
Thunder. And hear the rattling thunder far below ; . . .
And the short thunder, and the flash of arms ; . . .
The thunder rolled in peals that would have made . . .
Just as we left the glen a clap of thunder . . .
Justice—is there not thunder in the word ? . . .
The thunder send him on his knees to prayer . . .
Air blackened, thunder growled, fire flashed from . . .
clouds that hid the sky, . . .
The thunder had begun to growl— . . .
Amid the darkness and the thunder, . . .
The thunder had not been more busy : . . .
And blackening clouds in thunder speak of God, . . .
A sound like thunder—everlastingly . . .
That Mountain floods should thunder as before, . . .
A startling thunder quick and short ! . . .
Towers, temples, fall by stroke of thunder ; . . .
When, with a noise like distant thunder, . . .
Resist—the thunder quails thee !—crouch—rebuff . . .
Tumbles, the wildering Thunder slips abroad ; . . .
A naked savage, in the thunder shower . . .
Jehovah—with his thunder, and the choir . . .
In thunder down the mountains ; with all your . . .
might . . .
Of instantaneous thunder, which announced . . .
Of thunder daunting those who would approach . . .
Thunderbolt. He, who had launched the startling . . .
thunderbolt, . . .
Thunder-cloud. From a black thunder-cloud, down . . .
Scotell's side . . .
Thundered. It thundered down, with fire and smoke, . . .
Thunderer. From Homer the great Thunderer, from . . .
the voice . . .
Thunderer's. Glittering before the Thunderer's sight, . . .
Thundering. See Forth-Thundering.
The thundering tube the aged angler hears, . . .
Came thundering loud and fast . . .
And Garry, thundering down his mountain-road, . . .
Thundering adown a rocky wood . . .
Heedless of Alpine torrents thundering . . .
Thy thundering battle-axe as it cleaves the press . . .
Then, like the mountain, thundering from above . . .
By floods, that, thundering from their dizzy height . . .
We beat with thundering hoofs the level sand . . .
It was Angelica thundering through the woods . . .
We beat with thundering hoofs the level sand . . .
Or, out of Sion, thundering from his throne . . .
The thundering Thurlow, Apis ! shall rejoice . . .
Thunderous. With thunderous voice ? Or are ye . . .
jubilant, . . .
Thunder-peals. With thunder-peals, clap after clap, . . .
Thunder's. The Child, as if the thunder's voice spoke . . .
with articulate call, . . .
Visibly leading on the thunder's harmonies . . .
The thunder's greeting. Nor have nature's laws . . .
Thunders. And blasted quarry thunders, heard re- . . . mote ! . . .
Thunders through echoing pines the headlong Aar ; . . .
Which thunders down with headlong force, . . .
Insidiously, untimely thunders growl ; . . .
But here no cannon thunders to the gale ; . . .
From both sides ; veteran thunders (the brute test . . .
Thunder-shower. When gushing, copious as a thunder- . . .
shower, . . .
Thunder-stroke. Driven by the born's incessant . . .
thunder-stroke . . .
Thunderstruck. Now I do love thee. I am thunder- . . .
struck. . . .
Thunder-wielding. So often tie the thunder-wielding . . .
hands . . .
Thurlow. The thundering Thurlow, Apis ! shall . . .
rejoice . . .
Thursday. Another was on Thursday brought, . . .
Thurston. Of mitred Thurston—what a Host . . .
Thurston-mere. Stretch from the western marge of . . .

Thus. (Partial list.)
That you are thus the fault is mine ; for the air . . .
Thus much to speak ; but think not I forget— . . .
Thus to torment her with inventions !—death— . . .
To see him thus provoke her tenderness . . .
And torture thus the heart of his own Child— . . .
Oh, Sir, you would not talk thus, if you knew . . .
Blown to you from a trumpet. Why talk thus ? . . .
A scale and table of belief—as thus— . . .
And opposites thus melt into each other. . . .
Thus, if from two fair eyes mine cannot turn, . . .
" This Widow thus her little Son hath taught . . .
Answered him thus :—" This song, I have heard say, . . .
Until thus far she learned, that he had been . . .
Thus saying, ' O dear Child ! I summon thee . . .
To me she came, and thus to me did say, . . .
And thus in May their hearts are set on fire, . . .
And, as I with the Cuckoo thus 'gan chide, . . .

 Upon the breast Thy name do glorify.
 Help me to tell it in thy reverence !
 " Lady ! thy goodness, thy magnificence,
 Thy virtue, and thy great humility,
 Thou goest before in thy benignity,
 To be our guide unto thy Son so dear.
 To tell abroad thy mighty worthiness,
 " O Thou great God that dost perform Thy laud
 By mouths of Innocents, lo ! here Thy might ;
 Since that thy throat is cut, as it doth seem,
 If long time from thy mate thou be, or far,
 That all this May I will thy songstress be,
 And live and die I will in thy belief ;
 With thy bright beams to guide me but one hour,
 Thy horns were old as now upon that morrow,
 I love thee, and love the sweet Boy at thy side :
 Lelius ! has death cut short thy brilliant day
 —Thy fragrant gales and lute-resounding streams,

Thyme. A garden stored with peas, and mint, and thyme,
 From humble violet—modest thyme—
 The thyme her purple, like the blush of Even ;
 Of lowly thyme, by Nature's skill enwrought.

Thyme-be sprinkled. On these soft beds of thyme-be sprinkled turf.

Thyrsus. Tossing her frantic thyrsus wide and high !
Thysell. Now couch thyself where, heard with fear afraid.

Fair in thyself and beautiful alone,
 Thyself thy own enjoyment,
 Bold, and lavish of thyself ; . . .
 Till, like thyself, I disappear . . .
 Reveal thyself, like pensive Morn
 There, and not thee thyself, I would not do
 As if it were thyself that's here . . .
 Thou wouldst have nobly stirred thyself,
 Though fallen thyself, never to rise again,
 Yet thou thyself hast round thee shed a gleam
 And clothed thyself with terrors like the good
 Spread for thyself the snares of tribulation,
 Mistrust thyself, vain Country ! cease to cry,
 And yet more often living with thyself,
 And for thyself, so haply shall thy days
 That from thyself it comes, that thou must give,
 Power to thyself ; no Helper hast thou here ;
 Of infancy around us, that thyself,
 To furnish ; for this effluence of thyself,

Tides. See Noon-tide's.

Hush'd are the winds and silent are the tides ;
 Of tides, and when the moon will be eclipsed,
Tidings. These joyful tidings from no lips but mine,
 With the glad tidings which this day hath brought ;
 O blessed tidings ! thought of joy !
 Tidings of one so long and dearly loved,
 Twelve years are past since we had tidings from him.
 No tidings of an only child ;
 Some tidings that my woes may end ;
 Who dares report, the tidings to the lord
 Distressful tidings. Long before the time
 The tidings of his melancholy loss,
 Watched for tidings from the East, beheld his Lord,
 And they such joyful tidings were,
 In hopes some tidings there to gather :
 Sad tidings to that noble Youth !
 The tidings passed of servitude repealed,
 Bear through the world these tidings of delight !
 To carry thy glad tidings over heights . . .
 Glad tidings to Iona's shore,
 And every day brought with it tidings new
 To Rylstone he the tidings brought ;
 The tidings come of Jesus crucified ;
 She shoots the tidings forth to distant friends ;
 No tidings reach us thence from town or field,
 Nor of him were tidings heard . . .
 Upon those tidings by the peasant given
 No tidings of her husband ; if he lived,
 Shout forth faint tidings of some gladder place . . .
 If fixed or wandering star could tidings yield
 Tidings of joy and love.—From those pure heights
 Authentic tidings of invisible things ;
 The tidings came that she whom he had wooed
 Tears wipe away, and pleasant tidings bring ;
 These tidings, and in Christian temples meet . . .

Time—continued.

A more congenial object. But, as time
 A foggy day in winter time)
 O happy time of youthful lovers (thus
 My story may begin) O balmy time,
 So passed the time, till, whether through effect
 And of the lark's note heard before its time,
 Much bow the Youth, in scanty space of time,
 For the last time, attendant by the side
 Which, after a short time, by some mistake
 From this time forth he never shared a smile
 By this time is not quite so hurried:
 But now that time is gone and past.
 That happy time all past and gone,
 What they've been doing all this time,
 In five months' time, should he be seen,
 Long time lay Susan lost in thought;
 And to a later time, ere yet the Boy
 Distressful tidings. Long before the time
 Nor was there at that time an English land
 At length their time was come, they were not loth
 But 'tis a long time to look back, my Son,
 And to that hollow dell from time to time
 The length of full seven years, from time to time,
 The time of early youth; and there you learned,
 Played with our time; and, as we strolled along,
 Werewith to cheer him in the winter time."
 A second time, in Grasmere's happy Vale.
 The time was March, a cheerful noon—
 Than in old time;—thou not in vain
 In the time before the thrush
 They are sobered by this time.
 That, when time brings on decay,
 But what is time? What outward glory? Neither
 Their efforts and their time they measure
 'Tis not a time for nice suggestion,
 By this time she was snug within,
 Nor has thought time to come and go,
 By this time near their journey's end;
 Eager to repair lost time;
 Of echoes, to his march kept time;
 That golden time again.
 And Time the Shadow,—there to celebrate
 What matter! he's caught—and his time runs to waste;
 A time to overrule the power
 You must take care and choose your time
 And, when at last her time drew near,
 That Martha Ray about this time
 For many a time and oft were heard
 And this I know, full many a time,
 The Knight, Sir Walter, died in course of time,
 "Here in old time the hand of man hath been."
 But Nature, in due course of time, once more
 The words of ancient time I thus translate,
 "Oh! it was a time forlorn
 And thankful through a weary time,
 Unborrowed from the eye.—That time is past,
 To me, this day, a second time thy bride!"
 What time the fleet at Aulis lay enchained.
 Was doomed to wear out her appointed time,
 Of drowsy, dotard Time:—
 Keep faith with Time on distant shores?
 Show me the noblest Youth of present time,
 Time pressing on with starry crest
 All accidents of time and place;
 And now, unforced by time to part
 —A slender sound! yet hoary Time
 Aod in due time the soft spontaneous shock,
 The lingering world, when time hath ceased to be.
 In old time worshipped as the god of verse,
 All treasures hoarded by the miser, Time,
 To Time, aod Man his earth-born chronicler;
 "There was a time when all mankind
 As if the moving time had been
 In perfect shape (whose beauty Time shall spare
 A juggler's balls old Time about him tossed;
 To one brief moment caught from fleeting time
 Oft have I seen, ere Time had ploughed my cheek,
 His heart to aught which doth on time depend.
 That neither present time, nor years unborn
 The holy time is quiet as a Nun
 (From time to time, like Pilgrims, here and there
 The dream, to time and nature's blended powers
 Which neither force shall check nor time abate!
 Old Time, though he, gentler among the Thralls
 Time loves Thee! at his call the Seasons twine
 Even on this earth, above the reach of Time!
 Can cheat the time; sending her fancy out
 May perish; time may come when never more
 And, if Time spare the colours for the grace
 For health, and time in obvious duty spent.
 Who, yielding not to changes Time has made,
 The slave of business, time, or care for life,
 Shall dwell together till old Time
 To the memorial majesty of Time
 Hastening the stern decrees of Time,
 My youth here witnessed, in a prouder time;
 England! the time is come when thou shouldst
 wean

Time—continued.

For time and season, rules that work to cheer—
Learn to make Time the father of wise Hope ;
Against time present, passion holds the scales :
Afforded (may it through all time afford)
Before the world had past her time of youth
A creature born of time, that keeps one eye
For earthly sight, " Eternity and Time," Rough is the time ; and thoughts, that would be free
An old resource to cheat a froward time !
But time, irrevocable time, is flown,

Time, place, and business, all at his command !—
That Time, unwrinkled grandsire, flings
Affections lose their object ; Time brings forth
As each new Moon obeyed the call of Time,
Of hoary Time to decorate ;
At this time, and on this spot,
'Twas a hard time for Goody Blake.
And feeling, suited to the place and time
See cheerfulness undamped by stealing Time ;
Into the mists of fabled Time .
To aid the work, what time these walks and bowers
Is not a Ruin spared or made by Time,
So let it rest ; and time will come .
How venture then to hope that Time will spare
Within a little time, as hath been found,
At other time, methinks, in like degree .
If long time from thy mate thou be, or far,
And when he might his time aright espy,
Another time he took into his head,
And happiness, which to the end of time
'Tis a look which at this time is hardly his own,
On whom the duty fell (for at that time
Had scarcely flowered ; and at this early time,
Time still intent on his insidious part,
Long time his pulse hath ceased to beat ;
Such Picture would I at that time have made :
Cased in the unfeeling armour of old time,
His wish was gained : a little time
But, when a third time from the land . . .
But time before him melts away,
Graven on the tomb we struggle against Time,
Tease, and the thought of time so spent depress,
Did they together testify of time
Is broken ; yet why grieve ? for Time but holds
There was a time when meadow, grove, and stream,
Filling from time to time his " humorous stage " .
Just at the time ; and there he found
Thou against Time so feelingly dost strive .
When Time was young, an inspiration came .

Time a chequered mantle wears—
Time, in his mantle's sunniest fold
Again to bend the Sabbath of that time
Time, place, and manners do I seek, and these
Oh, many a time have I, a five years' child,
Shouldering the naked crag, oh, at that time
I heeded not their summons : happy time
It was a time of rapture ! Clear and loud
Not seldom even in that tempestuous time,
I choose it rather at this time, than work
With giddy motion. But the time approach
Even in this joyous time I sometimes felt
How Nature, intervenient till this time
Beginning not long after that first time
Under the quiet stars, and at that time
Of pleasant wandering. Happy time ! more dear
Both silent to each other, at this time
With things that really are ; I, at this time,
On visionary minds ; if, in this time
Striding along as if o'tasked by Time,
Of settling time in this untrod abode,
That tolerates the indignities of Time,
By poets in old time, and higher up
This was a glad some time. Could I behold—
Be it confessed that, for the first time, seated
In not a desperate or opprobrious time,
Upon the basis of the coming time,
From their first childhood : in that glorious time
The naked recollection of that time,
The labouring time of autumn, winter, spring,
That time can lay upon her ; how on earth
A freshness also found I at this time
Wore in old time. Her smooth domestic life,
Distinctly manifested at this time,
Incumbent o'er the surface of past time
Some skill, and longer time than may be spared,
Of character or life ; but at that time,
Strange rendezvous ! My mind was at that time
When Folly from the frown of fleeting Time
Through length of time, by patient exercise
As might appear to the eye of fleeting time,
Of reason, undisturbed by space or time ;
Even in the time of lisping infancy
Among the depths of time. Yet is it just Deals with a flower ; the keepers of our time,
And islands of Winander !—many a time
The time of trial, ere we learn to live
An empire, a possession,—ye whom time .

Time—continued.

On that delightful time of growing youth . . .
Poems withal of name, which at that time
Not only in that raw unpractised time
The Poet's soul was with me at that time ;
Which—to the boundaries of space and time,
Of melancholy space and doleful time . . .
And not to leave the story of that time
—To time thus spent, add multitudes of hours
O Friend ! we had not seen thee at that time,
Even at that early time, needs must I trust
But Europe at that time was thrilled with joy,
How sweet at such a time, with such delight
Hail to the mighty projects of the time !
Oh, most beloved Friend ! a glorious time,
A happy time that was ; triumphant looks
A little space of intermediate time . . .
There was a time when whatso'er is feigned . . .
Those bold imaginations in due time
Half-rural Sadler's Wells ? Though at that time
Here, too, were " forms and pressures of the time,"
We since that time not unfamiliar
I heard, and for the first time in my life,
From time to time, the solid boards, and makes them
Of Institutes and Laws, hallowed by time ;
From time to time, into an orifice
Holden where martyrs suffered in past time,
Of time, and place, and object ; by his wants,
Smooth life had flock and shepherd in old time,
As is their wont, a pittance from strict time,
Nature herself was, at this unripe time,
As in a moment ; yet with Time it dwells . . .
In old time haunted by that Danish Witch,
Have pleased me, seeking knowledge at that time
Diffused through time and space, with aid derived
Without a vital interest. At that time
Of good and evil of the time was shunned
The soil of common life, was, at that time,
Through the whole tenour of my school-day time,
In memory of the farewells of that time,
And I, who at that time was scarcely dipped . . .
That would be found in all recorded time,
And not by reverential touch of Time
Abject as this would in a little time
O, happy time of youthful lovers, (thus
The story might begin,) oh, balmy time,
Yet would I at this time with willing heart
Strong and perturbed, not doubting at that time
A revolution, save at this one time ;
Their joy, in England ; this, too, at a time
Is come Whose harbinger he was ; a time . . .
A time when sage Experience would have snatched
It was a lamentable time for man,
A woeful time for them whose hopes survived
Most melancholy at that time, O Friend !
He who thereafter, and in how short time !
From that time forth, Authority in France
Our Shepherds, this say merely, at that time
Abruptly, and indeed before my time :
Seems, when the first time visited, to one
That time was ready to set all things right,
This was the time, when, all things tending fast
Infirmities of nature, time, and place,
Where the disturbances of space and time—
For purpose, at a time, how different !
Wrought for them in old time : yea, not unmoved,
Long time have human ignorance and guilt
Of time and season, to the moral power,
I speak in recollection of a time
Were limited. I had not at that time
There are in our existence spots of time,
That dreary time,—ere we had been ten days
Down to this very time, when storm and rain
Long time in search of knowledge did I range
The promise of the present time retired
And to that day continued.—For, the time
Also, about this time did I receive . . .
Time with his retinue of ages fled
I seemed about this time to gain clear sight
Nor was time given to ask or learn the cause,
Spread over time, past, present, and to come,
Age after age, till Time shall be no more . . .
Among the ways of Nature, for a time . . .
And warble in its chambers. At a time
Of life and death, time and eternity,
The time (our guiding object from the first)
Express the image of a better time,
To be his chosen comrade. Many a time,
Through a parched meadow-ground, in time of drought,
All but a scattered few, live out their time,
And listening Time reward with sacred praise.
While yet a child, and long before his time,
So passed the time ; yet to the nearest town
The better portion of his time ; and there
Time had compressed the freshness of his cheek
Of brotherhood is broken : time has been . . .
Was added to the troubles of a time
That for a little time it stole away . . .
We parted.—"I was the time of early spring ; . . .

That in more genial times, when I was free
As times of quiet and unbroken peace,
Though, for a nation, times of blessedness,
Tower eight times planted on the top of tower,
Is to the ear of Faith ; and there are times,
Such as in unsafe times of border-war . . .
The faith partaking of those holy times, . . .
And from the sanctity of elder times . . .
And if, at times, they fretted with the yoke,
Of long-past times, nor obsolete in ours, . . .
Futurity was thought, in ancient times, . . .
"I feel at times a motion of despite . . .
That one, albeit of these degenerate times,
Purloined, in times less jealous than our own,

A willing, nay, at times, a forward part ; . . .
In times when most existence wish herself
From out the bosom of these troubled times . . .
Lured by the crystal element in times . . .
Yet were there times in which they did not want
In times of heavy snow." She then began . . .

 away !
Old Timothy took up his staff, and he shut
Timothy's. Filled the funeral basin at Timothy's

Tinker's. Will be the Tinker's booty ;
Tinkle. And bells of passing mules that tinkle dull,
Tinkled. Tinkled like iron ; while far distant hills . . .
Tinkles. Feebly it tinkles with an earthy sound, . . .
Tinkling. Of drowsy bells, for ever tinkling round ;
The bark of dogs, the heifer's tinkling bell,
Where torrents roar, or hear the tinkling knell . . .

The bark of dogs, the drowsy tinkling bell,
A humming bee—a little tinkling rill . . .
Tinkling's. That far-off tinkling's drowsy cheer, Tinklings. It's drowsy tinklings on th' attentive hills ;
Tinted. See Many-tinted.
Tints. Tremble in ever-varying tints of air,
"Ah me ! what lovely tints are there . . .
Tints softly with each other blended, . . .
Glowing in golden sunset tints of joy, . . .
False tints too well accorded with the glare . . .

Tiny. A tiny tenement, forsooth, and frail, as needs must be Both for tiny harmless minnow 91 Norman Boy 15
94 Westmoreland Girl 51

Mantling in the tiny square.
Have shells to fit their tiny hands
Thy hand here sprinkling tiny flowers,
Observe each wing!—a tiny van!
What are they to that tiny grain,
Which tiny Elves impressed;—on that smooth stage
That smites this tiny sea,
Spread, tiny nautilus, the living sail;
Or when his tiny gems shall deck his brow:
A peopled world it is; in size a tiny room.
The tiny creatures strong by social league;
With tiny finger—to let fall a tear;
Of melted hoar-frost, every tiny knot

Tip. Tip their smooth ridges with a softer ray;
The drops that tip the melting icicles.

Tipp'd. See Tip.
Those holy turrets tipped with evening gold,
Where tipp'd with gold the mountain-summits glow'd.
Those turrets tipp'd by hope with morning gold,
And outer spray profusely tipped with seeds
Tipped with a rain-drop, Fancy loved to seat,

Tipples. Through the long day to swear and tipples;
Tips. That tips with eve's last gleam his spiry head.
Tipstuffs. And worship Mayors, Tipstuffs, Aldermen and all.

Tipst. See Tipp'd.
Tipt with eve's latest gleam of burning red.

Tiptoe. On tiptoe reared, he strains his clarion throat,
Or hang on tip-toe at the litted latch.
And wild rose tip-toe upon hawthorn stocks,
And stands on tiptoe, conscious she is fair,
Again?—on tip-toe down the hill
On tiptoe rear'd he blows his clarion throat,
—The tall Sun, tip-toe on an Alpine spine,

Tire. Our watchful house-dog, that would tease and tire
When we began to tire of childish play,
Should the tale tire you, let this challenge stand
Were ready comrades whom he could not tire;

Tired. And, tired with slights his pride no more could brook,
Ere the tired head of Scotland's Queen
Of their own offspring tired.
Comes a tired and sultry breeze
Calls to the few tired dogs that yet remain:
Be thankful, even though tired and faint,
Or, tired with sport, wouldst sink asleep
While thy tired lute hangs on the hawthorn-tree,
For the tired slave, Song lifts the languid oar,
Here, where, of havoc tired and rash undoing,
Now we are tired of hoisterous joy
On the tired household of corporeal sense,
A sign he craved, tired slave of vain contrition;
Tired of the world and all its industry.
Of roving tired or desultory war
Tired with his daily share of earth's unrest,—
A tired Ship-soldier on paternal land
Of one tired out with fun and madaess;
Tired of my books, a scanty company!
And tired of listening to the boisterous sea—
Tired, and uneasy at the halts I made.
Sick of its business, of its pleasures tired,
And sun-burnt travellers resting their tired limbs,
Moving in heaven; or, of that pleasure tired
Feverish, and tired, and restless, I went forth
Some, tired of honest service; these, outdone,
Of vain endeavours tired; and by his own,
If tired with systems, each in its degree
And, to tired limbs and over-busy thoughts,
A tired way-faring man, once I was brought
To use of reason. And, I own that, tired
By all that breathe in Troy, how tired and worn

Tires. Me this unchartered freedom tires;
Or bounties tires—and every face, that smiled,
That tires not, nor betrays. Our life is turned 96 Brothers 54
253 O gentle 5

Tiresome. Of tiresome indolence, would often hang
This tiresome night, O Sleep! thou art to me

Ti. (Partial list.)
'Tis a strange letter this!—You saw her write it?
'Tis weariness that breeds these gloomy fancies,
'Tis but for a few days—a thought has struck me.
'Tis plain he loves the Maid, and what he said
'Tis but a word and then— Something is here
'Tis aever drought with us—St. Cathbert and his Pilgrims,
'Tis too disorderly for sleep or rest.
'Tis Herbert and no other! 'Tis a feast to see him,
Yes, loves him; 'tis a truth that multiplies
His guilt a thousand-fold. 'Tis most perplexing:
Stoop for a moment; 'tis an act of justice;
My hands are numb. Ha! ha! 'tis nipping cold.
And tell me if 'tis fit for such a work.
How goes the night. 'Tis hard to measure time
'Tis his own fault if he hath got a face

'Tis—continued.
Think not of that! 'tis over—we are safe.
That horn again—'Tis some one of our Troop;
Both soul and body—'Tis too horrible;
Tissue. On silken tissue, might diffuse his limbs
Thy handmaid Frost with spangled tissue quaint

Titian's. The appropriate Picture, fresh from Titian's hand,
A Titian's hand, address to picture forth
And she shall love him. With unquestioned title
And came to—what's your title—eh? your claims
'Gracious Allah! by such title
Prescriptive title to the shattered pile,
If that substantial title please thee more,
Endearing title, a responsive chime
There's virtue, the title it surely may claim,
And even a title higher still,
These, and the name and title at full length,—

Titled. See High-titled.
Professedly, to others titled higher.
The sound of titled names, and talked in glee

Title-page. Here, fronts of houses, like a title-page, Titles. Then thus exclaimed: "To me, of titles short,
To thee, by varying titles known
Those titles vanish, and that strength decay;
Of Earth's first blood, have titles manifold,
Of pompous horses; whom vain titles please;
And wealth and titles were in less esteem
Her titles and her honours; now believing,
By sounding titles, hath acquired the name
Establish sounder titles of esteem
'What titles will be keep? will he remain
These titles emperors and chiefs have borne,
Long-reverenced titles cast away as weeds;

Titlis. Nor for the moon cared he a tittle,
Titius. Drew Titus from the depth of studious bowers,
Tiviot. And leave thy Tweed and Tiviot
Tiviot-dale. There's pleasant Tiviot-dale, a land
Tiviot's. To Tiviot's stream, to Annan, Tweed, and Clyde:—

Tivoli. Of Tivoli; and, high upon that steep,
To, omitted.
Toad. Well!—he has often spurned me like a toad,
And if you can, the unwieldy toad
How disappeared he?—ask the newt and toad,
'How disappeared he?' Ask the newt and toad;
Tobacco-box. His shining horn tobacco-box;
Tocsin. Must bid the tocsin ring from tower to tower!—

Tod. Or from a rifted crag or ivy tod
To-day. To-day will clear up all.—You marked a Cottage,
Than Youth's spontaneous products; and to-day
To-day you have thrown off a tyranny
But go to-morrow, or belike to-day,
Such happiness as I have known to-day.

To-day I fetched him from the rock;
To-day I fetched it from the rock;
Presiding Spirit here to-day,
And to-day my heart is weary;
Behold her how She smiles to-day
Familiar matter of to-day?
To-day, nor yet to-morrow;
Bright be thy course to-day, let not this promise fail!
The act were justified to-day."
This said, our tears to-day may fall
We who were led to-day down a grim dell,
We from to-day, my Friend, will date
Our temper from to-day.
That what has been unveiled to-day,
Ye that through your hearts to-day
To-day, to-morrow will be, took of them
The children now are rich, for the old to-day
You look at me, and you have cause; to-day
He knows not wherefore;—but the boy to-day,
"That poor Man taken hence to-day," replied
And he, whom this our cottage hath to-day
And from the cottage hath been borne to-day.

Toe. See Tiptoe.
Covered from top to toe with scars;
With letters huge inscribed from top to toe,

Together. Where beasts and men together o'er the plain
Neither smoking in the sun's slant beam,
Nor could we live together those poor boys and I;
Till all the band of playmates wept together;
Our wanderings together. Providence
We've weathered out together. My poor Gilfred!
We joined our tales of wretchedness together,
You'd better like we should descend together,
Come, let us house together. Had I not
We'll go together, and, such proof received
Light to thy path, warmth to thy blood!—Together
And we shall howl together. I am deserted
Come, let us take a peep at both together,
Together chased the butterfly!

79 Stay near* 13

Together—continued.

Those bright blue eggs together laid !
 Together visited.
 Where two fair swans together glide.
 Together round her grave we played,
 And placed together near our rocky Well.
 And cheered ; and now together breathe fresh air
 Together here this one half day.
 Did she bring forth, and all together sat
 Lay thrown together, ready for the work.
 Have played together, nor with me didst thou
 Both of them sleep together : here they lived,
 And to the house together they returned.
 How the pair escaped together,
 That thus brings man and bird together,
 Huddling together from two fears—the fear
 Whether we might be !
 My last year's friends together.
 Seven Sisters that together dwell ;
 And let us die together.
 Together plunged into the deep,
 And there together sleep.
 And fly about in the air together !
 Ye pulled together with one mind ;
 Still sit upon Helm-crag together !
 While she and I together live
 Of islands, that together lie
 Coming together in life's pilgrimage ;
 And moveth all together, if it move at all.
 We stood together ; and that I, so long
 Buried together in yon gloomy mass
 Had often been together.
 Together make as sweet a scene
 Together they brought back the Corse.
 Together in immortal books enrolled :
 Like these frail snowdrops that together cling,
 Language and droop together. Nor unfelt
 And neighbours rest together, here confound
 That we may sing together, if thou wilt,
 Might we together
 Shall dwell together till old Time
 In truth together do ye seem
 If we, who thus together roam
 On tombs, with palms together prest,
 Or prest together by the appetite,
 Where once together, in his day of strength,
 For Thee, green alders have together wound
 Crowded together under rustling trees
 Together,—mid trim walks and artful bowers,
 Did we together read in Spenser's Lay
 Together of a purer faith ;
 Together we have learned to prize
 Had sate together in Raby Hall !
 Together died, a happy death !—
 They tarried in the wood together.
 We breathed together for a moment's space,
 We two have known such happy hours together
 Whence ye have escaped together,
 Till they were plucked together ; a blue flower
 For each and all of us, together joined
 As well as we knew, together had grown grey.
 To kneel together, and adore their God !
 Together they put forth, Father and Child !
 And ever two and two together were,
 For birds we are—all here together brought ;
 Behold a record which together binds
 Between them, and both go a-pilfering together.
 Together move in fellowship without end.—
 Did they together testify of time
 The halfpennies together.
 Flower and bud together fall ;
 Discordant elements, makes them cling together
 Soon ended, and together on we passed
 Trooping together. Little suits it me
 A long half hour together I have stood
 For a whole day together, have I lain
 Clustered together with a merry crowd
 A halting-place, where all together took
 Will chant together." Thereafter, as the shades
 All loosely put together, hobbled in,
 All jumbled up together, to compose
 Sit in the shade together, while they gaze,
 Together danced, Queen of the feast, and King ;
 From least beginnings ; how, together locked
 Would fall together with its parent tree.
 Together wanted in wild Poesy,
 By nations sink together, we shall still
 We sate together, sighs came on my ear,
 We had returned together, she enquired
 Together casting then a farewell look
 Step after step—together, with their firm
 And shattered telescope, together linked
 We salled forth together ; found the tools
 Molten together, and composing thus,
 Leapt out together from a rocky cave ;
 Their sports together in the solar beam,
 In silent congress ; or together roused
 Halting together on a rocky knoll,
 My ancient Friend and I together took

 Gathered together on the green hill-side,
 Together in a never-dying choir ;

Toil. See Over-toil.
 Toil, small as pygmies in the gulf profound ;
 Brisk toil, alternating with ready ease,
 With daily bread, by constant toil supplied.
 Nor was I then for toil or service fit ;
 Not fearing toil, nor length of weary ways,
 So, but from toil less sign of profit reaping,
 Where Toil pursues his daily round ;
 His duteous toil of furrowing the green earth.
 That Causeway with incomparable toil !—
 From his loved home, and from heroic toil,
 Shrunk into coils with all their warlike toil :
 Bedewed with toil,
 As nobly graced by Sculpture's patient toil ;
 Whom Labour, never urged to toil,
 Though the toil of the way with dear Friends we divide,
 For whom his toil with early day begins.
 —Alas ! that One thus disciplined could toil
 (Heaven only witness of the toil)
 Than toil in needless sleep from dream to dream :
 Urged to cease toil with chemie fire ;
 Ut toil stupendous, in a hallowed seat
 His whole life long tills it, with heartless toil,
 Tempest, or length of way, or weight of toil ?—
 'Mid fruitless fields that ring with jocund toil,
 Toil unimposed, vicissitude unknown,
 Pleasure, or Grief, and Toil that seldom looks
 For things far off we toil, while many a good
 Why all this toil and trouble ?
 Enough of climbing toil !—Ambition treads

 252 * Why, Minstrel 11

Where'er was dipped the toiling oar,
 Now toiling, wafted now on wings of prayer—
 On the great waters toiling to and fro,
 Than years of toiling reason :
 Which we are toiling all our lives to find,
 Left, even to us toiling in this late day,
 Across a bare wide Common I was toiling
 Rudely to mock the works of toiling Man.
 Hath harassed him toiling through fearful storm,
Toils. Chafed like a wild beast in the toils ; but soon
 Day and night my toils redouble,
 The poor Hart toils along the mountain-side ;
 Sun, moon, and stars, all struggle in the toils

Toils—continued.

Even She who toils to spin our vital thread
Apart she toils within the chosen ring
Troubles and toils that every day prepares.

Toilsome. Who long hath trod this toilsome way,
How toilsome—nay, how dire—it was, by thee
Speak not now of toilsome duty;

Toil-worm. Their thirst they take— they wash their toil-worm feet,
Is heard the spirit of a toil-worm slave.

Toils. And all those tokens of a cherished sorrow,
Such are they; and the same are tokens, signs,
And though for bridal wreaths and tokens true

Toil. See Half-toil.

Hath told; for, landing after labour hard,
In fainter howlings told its rage was spent:
Only were told there stood a lonely cot

I told of hills, and far-off towns,
We told o'er all that we had done,—
Of Alice and her grief I told;

Who told of Juliet and her Romeo,
Who told him that his pains were thrown away,
And Betty o'er and o'er has told

Tomb—continued.

- Call Archimedes from his buried tomb . . . 877 Excursion 8. 220
Go, modern Prince, at Henry's tomb proclaim . . . L. i. 94 Juvenal 2. 19
- Tombs. St. Denis, filled with royal tombs, or the Church of Notre Dame? . . . 92 Poet's Dream 24
Egyptian tombs unlock their dead, . . . 216 Enterprise 85
On tombs, with palms together prest, . . . 301 Bran 49
Her sparkling fountains, and her mouldering tombs; . . . 353 Aquap. 80
The tombs—which hear and answer that brief cry, . . . 445 Ecc. Sonn. 3. 20. 11
And Whispering Gallery of St. Paul's; the tombs . . . 689 Prelude 7. 130
When the great voice was heard from out the tombs . . . 733 Prelude 11. 382
The Sultan hides deep in ancestral tombs. . . . 809 Excursion 4. 569
Statues and temples, and memorial tombs; . . . 812 Excursion 4. 737
- Tombstone. Tombstone nor name—only the turf we tread . . . 95 Brothers 14
His tombstone thus should speak for him. And surely . . . 573 Chitabrera 1. 8
Upon his tombstone, whispering to myself: . . . 726 Prelude 10. 547
- To-morrow. Though grief and pain may come to-morrow? . . . 9 Lines: Boat 16
To-morrow evening. When, upon the plank, . . . 51 Bord. 744
We'll have a counting of our flocks to-morrow; . . . 71 Bord. 1886
As soon as 'tis daylight to-morrow, with me . . . 80 Address: Child 20
And she to-morrow will return; . . . 81 †Mother's Return 3
To-morrow is the happy day. . . . 81 †Mother's Return 4
Or the injuries of to-morrow? . . . 88 H. C. 26
But go to-morrow, or helike to-day, . . . 107 Indolence 8
To-morrow, or the next day, or to-night: . . . 135 Michael 281
"He shall depart to-morrow." To this word . . . 136 Michael 317
To-morrow thou wilt leave me: with full heart . . . 136 Michael 332
Ye trees, that may to-morrow fall . . . 214 Kirhstone 25
That no to-morrow shall our beams restore! . . . 261 I watch* 14
To-day, nor yet to-morrow; . . . 293 Yarrow Univ. 46
Rise, and to-morrow greet magnificent Rome. . . . 358 Aquap. 372
If yet To-morrow, unbelied, may say, . . . 456 Soft as* 24
Which was to be to-morrow: . . . 495 Force of Prayer 46
To-day, to-morrow will be, took of them . . . 696 Prelude 7. 589
To-morrow—nay perchance this very hour . . . 884 Excursion 9. 27
(For every moment hath its own to-morrow!)
- To-morrow's. Dear Brook, farewell! To-morrow's noon again . . . 3 Ev. Wk. 86
Into the secret of to-morrow's fare; . . . 471 Ailsa Crag 11
Here am I, and to-morrow's sun, . . . 479 Sonnamb. 113
—Sweet rill, farewell! To-morrow's noon again, . . . 593 Ev. Wk. Quarto 85
"Alas! before to-morrow's sun goes down . . . 840 Excursion 6. 113
To-morrow. And confident to-morrows; with a face . . . 866 Excursion 7. 558
Tone. He waked her—spake in toot that would not fail, . . . 27 Guilt 168
"Drink, pretty creature, drink," she said in such a tone . . . 87 Pel-lamb 11
For she looked with such a look, and she spake with such a tone, . . . 88 Pel-lamb 67
Of blasts of every tone; and oftentimes, . . . 132 Michael 49
Used to sing in heavenly tone, . . . 144 Driven in* 55
Was softened down into a vernal tone. . . . 146 It was an* 5
And Fairfield answered with a mountain tone; . . . 147 Joanna 60
Another voice, in tone as hoarse . . . 176 Waggoner 1. 235
And, coming to the Banks of Tone, . . . 194 Ruth 214
The tone of voice which wedded borrowed words . . . 353 Aquap. 73
Nor does the village Church-clock's iron tone . . . 453 Most sweet* 6
Her earnest tone, and look beaming with faith, . . . 480 Grace Dark. 45
Whose tone hespake reviving interests . . . 665 Prelude 4. 464
And, in a tone elaborately low . . . 695 Prelude 7. 554
Yet higher power; had caught from them a tone, . . . 745 Prelude 13. 358
He spake with somewhat of a solemn tone: . . . 765 Excursion 1. 805
Musik of finer tone; a harmony, . . . 782 Excursion 2. 710
But, while he spake, look, gesture, tone of voice, . . . 793 Excursion 3. 463
And, in soft tone of speech, thus he resumed, . . . 807 Excursion 4. 417
At the Redeemer's feet? "In rufel tone, . . . 817 Excursion 4. 1100
With resignation; and no jarring tone, . . . 848 Excursion 6. 643
And questions in authoritative tone, . . . 859 Excursion 7. 101
Mildly, and with a clear and steady tone. . . . 883 Excursion 8. 601
I would not speak in snarling tone; . . . S. 3. 438 My Lord* 2
Of human-kind—the tone agreeing . . . S. 3. 439 Avant this* 11
- Toned. Broad, clear, and toned harmoniously, with skill . . . 508 F. Stone 19
- Tones. See Trumpet-tones.
His words and tones and gestures, did but serve . . . 77 Bord. 2262
The tones of waterfalls, and inland sounds . . . 95 Brothers 48
In finest tones the Youth could speak: . . . 192 Ruth 32
Of tones and numbers all things are controlled, . . . 235 Power of Sound 178
With her smooth tones and discords just, . . . 235 Power of Sound 220
Sweet tones, and caught by a noble Lady blest . . . 267 St. Cath. 5
Not unconnected with the tones . . . 301 Bran 101
(Though not without some plaintive tones between) . . . 537 In desultory* 6
A Spirit sang in tones more plaintive than the wind: . . . 581 Invoc. Earth 3
Where tones of Nature smoothed by learned Art . . . 685 Prelude 6. 674
His gestures note,—and hark! his tones of voice . . . 866 Excursion 7. 562
His looks, tones, gestures, eager eloquence, . . . 883 Excursion 8. 577
Whose low tones reached not to the distant rocks . . . 892 Excursion 9. 535
- Tongs. And the tongs and the poker, instead of that horse . . . 484 A plague* 3
- Tongue. Nor to the beggar's language could I fit my tongue, . . . 31 Guilt 378
(I wot not what ill tongue has wronged him with you) . . . 40 Bord. 167
That, when your praise was warm upon my tongue, . . . 42 Bord. 284
About this ground; she hath a tongue well skilled, . . . 44 Bord. 366
Of this poor Babe, and taught its innocent tongue . . . 56 Bord. 1051

Tongue—continued.

- Of every tongue—as you are now. You've heard . . . 68 Bord. 1688
Then did the boy his tongue unlock, . . . 86 Anecdote 53
If Nature to her tongue could measured numbers bring, . . . 87 Pel-lamb 19
Endeavouring, in our English tongue, to trace . . . 120 Emigrant/Mother 11
These tears—and my poor idle tongue, . . . 121 Emigrant/Mother 78
Two days, and blessings from thy Father's tongue . . . 136 Michael 342
And it was in the English tongue. . . . 144 Her Eyes 10
To words of a forgotten tongue . . . 166 Danish Boy 36
But no! he spake the English tongue, . . . 192 Ruth 26
No earthly tongue could ever tell; . . . 199 Thorn 149
His tongue could whisper words of might. . . . 205 Brougham 137
Nor shall the tongue of envious pride . . . 220 Triad 19
Fell at the sight from Peter's tongue; . . . 241 P. B. 453
For he, with tongue not used to falter, . . . 246 P. B. 909
The letters of my tongue do Thou unbind, . . . 257 The Prayers* 12
GLVN CAFAILGAROC, in the Cambrian tongue, . . . 297 Lady E. B. 9
In Gaelic, or the English tongue, . . . 297 Highland Boy 179
We must be free or die, who speak the tongue . . . 307 It is not* 11
—Infirm ejaculation! from the tongue . . . 311 Who rises* 42
Ah! where is Palafox? Nor tongue nor pen . . . 318 Ah! where* 1
And give the deliverer to our British tongue! . . . 325 Edw 1814 130
—Chant the Deliverer's praise in every tongue! . . . 326 Sobieski 11
Father and Judge of all, with fervent tongue, . . . 328 Edw 1815 115
In picture, speaking with heroic tongue, . . . 334 The Spirit* 3
As indignation mastered grief, my tongue . . . 367 As indignation* 1

To-night. To-night, my Friend, within this humble cot . . . 22 Desc. Sk. 665
Kindly have you protected me to-night, . . . 52 Bord. 825
Near the wood's edge—rest there to-night, I pray you: . . . 67 Bord. 1648
Surely some evil Spirit abroad to-night . . . 67 Bord. 1664
Eleanor, I have shed tears to-night, . . . 71 Bord. 1913
To-night I met with an old Man . . . 72 Bord. 1923

Too-night—continued.
 have kept me abroad to-night till this hour? . . . 72 Bord. 1950
 To-night along these lonesome ways? . . . 82 Alice T'ell 34
 "To-night will be a stormy night—
 Unless our Landlord be your host to-night,
 Pondering that Time to-night will pass . . . 112 Lament 20
 To-night the church-tower bells will ring . . . 113 Lament 22
 The wolf has come to me to-night,
 To-morrow, or the next day, or to-night :—
 If he could go, the Boy should go to-night."
 Now am I fairly safe to-night— . . . 135 Michael 281
 We shall be meeting ghosts to-night! . . . 174 Waggoner 3 110
 To-night, beneath the moonlight sky,
 Ask him to lend his horse to-night, . . . 245 P. B. 783

 Thee winged Fancy took, and nursed
 Thankfully took an effort that was meant
 And took it in most grievous part ;
 On went She, and due north her journey took.
 Forth to her Dove, and took no further heed.
 For God took pity on the Boy,
 A bold thought roused him, and he took
 He felt the motion—took his seat ;

Touched—continued.

Touched by accordance of thy placid cheer,
Rose, where she touched the strand, the Chantry of St. Bees.

If he should speak, by fancy touched, of signs
He touched; what followed who shall tell?
By labours that have touched the hearts of kings,
Is the string touched in prelude to a lay
The natural heart is touched, and public way
Touched then his tongue, and took away the grain;
And his hearing is touched with the sounds of a dream.

As touch'd with dawning moonlight's hoary gleams,
Touch'd with his wither'd hand an aged lyre;
Had almost touched the horizon; casting then
The earth was emotionless, and, touched by faict
Alas! such high emotion touched not me.
Had staid his oars, and touched the jutting pier,
And now the soldier touched his hat once more
Cloud-like it mounts, or touched with light divine
With firmness, hitherto but slightly touched
Nor touched by welterings of passion—is,
Was touched, but with no intimate concern;
Through a thick forest. Silence touched me here
Is no where touched by one memorial gleam)
Saw them and touched: the rest was coajured up
Would hnt have touched the judgment, struck more deep

Hath hitherto been barely touched upon,
Of things which he had seen; and often touched
Beneath him:—Far and wide the clouds were touched.

A heedless Youth, who touched a golden lute,
The Solitary by these words was touched
The other, which the ray divine hath touched,
Society were touched with kind concern,
By the nice finger of fair ladies touched
Was hapless Ellen.—No one touched the ground
That might have touched the sick heart of his Friend

him,
His fame touched the skies,

Inverted, all its sun-bright features touched
Touches. Touches of her infant hand,

It touches on that piece of native rock
He touches—his to him a treasure!
He touches here—he touches there—
With touches irresistible.

His lenient touches, soft as light that falls,
And touches the blind Boy
Touches me not, though pensive as a bird
May touches of his memory bring
And now it touches on the purple steep
That waits upon the touches of the wind.
Touches him not. To enhance the wonder, see
It touches, it confirms, and elevates,

Touching. Touching the matter of his passion, still,
Which they are touching; yea far brighter, even
A sight so touching in its majesty:
Rose like a star that touching earth,
A simple, hut a touching, song;
Yield to the Music's touching influence;
More touching far than aught which on the walls
How touching, when, at midnight, sweep
Touching, as now, in thy humility
Will make a touching melody.
More touching still, more perfect was the pleasure,
Put on a lowly and a touching grace
Touching the heart amid the boisterous crew
Appeared more touching. One will I select;
Brightness and touching beauty of her own,

Touchingly. So touchingly he smiled—
Do hut more touchingly recall
Her landing hailed, how touchingly she bowed!
That touchingly bespeaks thee born

Tough. Then grieve not, jolly team! though tough

A favourite spot of tournament and war!
A tournament of blows, some hardly dealt
Whether for gorgeous tournament addressed,
In tournament, upon the fields of France.

Tourney. Away with feast and tilt and tourney!
Toussaint. Toussaint, the most unhappy man of men!

Toward. While they are drawing toward the sacred floor
Saw him—his face turned toward me; and I tell thee
Toward the mighty gulf of things,
And, scouring toward him o'er the grassy plain,
No, passing through strange sufferings toward the tomb,
Tow'rd some far-distant wood, a Figure quaint,
Swift, toward the realms that know not earthly day,
Thus, in their stations, lifting tow'rd the sky

So toward the stream his head he bent,
She rose, and toward the close-shut casement drew,
From desolation toward the genial prime;
That mounts not toward the radiant morning sky,
Driving some vessel toward a dangerous beach—
Mounts, in this fine illusion, toward the skies:
Forth-looking toward the rocks of Scilly,
While drawing toward the car Sir Gawaine, mailed
When toward the altar from her hower
Held; hut in radiant progress toward the Deep
And if, as toward the silent tomb we go, 384
Raised toward that Imagery once more: 405
Toward Bolton's ruined Priory.
As Menai's foam; and toward the mystic ring
Uplifting toward high Heaven her fiery brand,
Toward the pure truths this Delegate propounds,
In progress toward the fount of Love,—the throne
Who, with a toward or untoward lot,
Mount toward the empire of the fickle clouds,

Drawn toward the centre whence those sighs creep

And jocund smiles, and toward the lowly Grange

We started—and he led me toward the hills,
'Twas chased away: for, toward the western side
Raised toward those craggy summits, his intent
Led toward the Cottage. Homely was the spot;
"So, westward, tow'rd the unviolated woods
His hounteous gift! or saw him toward the deep
Toward regions yet more tranquil. But, methought,
The Solitary lifted toward the hills
To lift the creature toward that eminence
The reverend Pastor toward the church-yard gate
The Vicar paused; and toward a seat advanced,
Of days advancing toward their utmost length,
In order, drawing toward their wished-for home,
Oft stretches toward me, like a long strait path
Straight toward some precipice's airy brink!
Eastward, the Danube toward this inland sea,
—Right toward the sacred Edifice his steps
Undaunted, toward the imperishable heavens,
However gently, toward the vulgar air,
Bending its apex toward a paler self
Toward the beleaguered city, in the might

Far-lifted towards the unfading sky;
Turn towards the spot where, full in view,
Retreated towards a brake of thorn,
By scrow lifted towards her God;
The linnet's warble, sinking towards a close,
While he, uplifted towards thee, laughs outright,
Towards a low roof with green trees half concealed,
Back towards caverned life's first rude career.

Towards human business, to a privileged world
Towards that sweet Valley where I had been

Town—continued.

His strippling prime. A town of small repute, Go 'tis a town where both of us were born ; That rose a brief league distant from the town, Of that same town, in which the pair had left To bring a Doctor from the town, To bring a Doctor from the town, While to the town she posts away ; But now she's fairly in the town, The town so long, the town so wide, Then up along the town she hies, Their pleasant Indian town, " From town to town, from tower to tower, And see the town where I was born ! Deep in the vale a little rural Town " Let Yarrow folk, frae Selkirk town, Through town and country both deranged And well might it besem that mighty Town In Bruges town is many a street More cheerily ; and town and tower, And massy grove, so near you blazing town, Of wonder, I have watched this sea-side Town, Within them, church, and town, and hut, and graige, Lulling the leisure of that high-perched town, Its neighbour and its namesake—town, and food A Camp, and a beleaguere Town, No tidings reach us thence from town or field, Where shady hamlet, town that breathes " There was in Asia, in a mighty town, A cause he found into the Town to go, Came as he rode by places of the town Of all this town, save only in this place, He dwells in the centre of London's wide Town ; In the throng of the town like a stranger is he, From town to town and through wide scattered realms Yon azure smoke betrays the lurking town ; Winding from house to house, from town to town, Hushed in profound repose. We left the town Prepared to sojourn in a pleasant town, And felt through every nook of town and field, The town of Arras, whence with promise high So passed the time ; yet to the nearest town And he would leave his work—and to the town Their town, and foodful region for support City, and town, and tower,—and sea with ships Of the dense air, which town or city breeds Meeting as strangers, in a petty town Of that small town encountering thus, they filled, Hamlet, and town ; and plety survive In town and city and sequestered glen, Here a huge town, continuous and compact, Of modern ingenuity ; no town . Amid the burning town the Grecians domieeer.

Town-abode. Reach the caged lark, within a town-abode, Town's. So pleads the town's cathedral quire, Of the huge town's first presence, and had paced Towns. —To towns, whose shades of no rude noise complain, To flat-roofed towns, that touch the water's bound, Thy towns that cleave, like swallows' nests, on high ; Of towns in flames, fields ravaged, young and old I told of hills, and far-off tows, Fields smiled, and temples rose, and towns and cities grew. Of towns and cities, I have owed to them, The towns in Saturn are decayed, Whether of mighty towns, or vales Nor wanted lurking hamlet, dusky tows, Where towns and cities thick as stars appear, And, drinking towns and cities, still can drink Cities and towns—'tis Thou—the work is Thine!— When desolated countries, towns on fire, Is opened round him!—hamlets, towers, and towns, Lo ! busy towns spring up, on coasts These spreading towns a cloak for lawless will ? Yet more ; around those Churches, gathered Towns To towns, whose shades of no rude sound complain, Thy towns, like swallows' nests that cleave on high ; Can string you names of districts, cities, towns, We held our way, direct through hamlets, towns, And single cottages and lurking towns, On towns and cities, wallowing in the abyss Beautiful region ! o'er thy towns and farms, Toy. Toy with the sun and glitter from afar. It is the toy of fools, and little fit Nor lacked his calmer hours device or toy —Pleased by any random toy ; —Makes of the whistling shrouds a toy, The Roman kill, degraded to a toy, Not more than a mere plaything, or a toy A toy that mimics with revolving wigs Toyng. Or old man toyng with his age ? Toys. Was filled with animated toys, Shall find such toys of fancy thickly set ; To mock the mind with " desperation's toys " Traces. Has disappeared, and every trace is fled Where but a mass of shade the sight can trace,

Trace—continued.

Here, where no trace of man the spot profanes, And here the unwilling mind may more than trace And scarce could any trace of man descry, How glad he was at length to find some trace Birds warbled round me—and each trace As visions still more bright have done, and left no trace behind. Can trace the finger of mortality, I know not what I trace ; Endeavouring, in our English tongue, to trace Some new resemblance we may trace No trace of a ferocious air, In him, while he was wont to trace In their fraternal features I could trace The shadow of a babe you trace, As thou seem'st now to do ; might one day trace Intent to trace the ideal path of right Four pleasure forth, and solaces that trace But to recall the truth by some faint trace No trace of pain or languor could abide And night unnotes that Infant's voice ; no trace In which more plainly I could trace The genuine mien and character would trace But who the limits of that power shall trace That thou shalt trace, (At least for one rapt moment) every trace So may all trace and sign of deeds aloof In the flower-besprent meadows his genius we trace If, undecieved, my skill can trace I, who essayed the nobler Stream to trace To trace right courses for the stubborn blid, Part of her lost One's glory back to trace What'er the path these mortal feet may trace, On them who urge the keel her plains to trace And Fancy, unproved, even yet may trace Till of his doings is no trace, From trace of human foot or hand, Inspired the pencil, lines to trace, They, who had waited for that sign to trace Give voice to what my hand shall trace, But benefits, his gift, we trace— But, ah ! 'th unwilling mind may more than trace Nor, sedulous as I have been to trace (For with my best conjecture I would trace Bloths from the human countenance all trace Earth, nowhere unembellished by some trace How shall I trace the change, how hear to tell Or let us trace this streamlet to its source ; Find entrance ;—high or low appeared no trace Less to be envied, (you may trace him oft Some trace am I enabled to retain Fancies, and loose conjectures. Other trace Raised by his hands, And now no trace is left Under a faded sky. No trace remained When British floods were worshipped, some faint trace Of my dear friends I see the trace. Traceable. Is traceable a vestige of the notes Here traceable, there hidden—there again Traceably. Traceably gliding through the dusk, recall Traced. A hoary pathway traced between the trees, A little hoary line and faintly traced, Traced on the beach, his work the Sorcerer urges ; Was shaped that traced the lives of these good men, Upon that circle traced from sacred story But I have traced thee on thy winding way The ever-changing Moon had traced The block on which these lines are traced, perhaps, Had traced its windings.—This Savona knows, Whether he traced historic truth, with zeal Of our long labour : we have traced the stream Caught at a glance, or traced with curious pains. He traced an ebbing and a flowing mind, Then towards the cottage I returned ; and traced Traced faintly in the greensward ; there, beneath Upon unwritten story fondly traced " Fleed utterly ! or only to be traced Traces. The traces of primeval Man appear ; I have seen traces of it. Once he headed Discovering traces of the fugitives, Deliberate traces, registers of thought At once, all traces from the good Man's heart Which malice may not enter ; where the traces Of yew, in which survived some traces, here Tracing. A morbid pleasure nourished, tracing here Tracing the lofty barrier with my eye On tracing and retracing that large round, Track. See Horse-track, Sheep-track, And track the yellow lights from steep to steep, Bare is it, without house or track, and destitute Or track the hedgehog to his hole. A track, that brought us to a slip of lawn, A heart more wakeful ; and had worn the track Along a track of most unnatural years ; To follow in his track of silver light, Fulfillment ; but, we trust, her upward track He cannot find out in what track he must crawl, The track that was, and is, and must be, worn

 But patience! Curses on that Traitor, Oswald!—
 'Tis done! The ruthless traitor! A rash deed!
 First open traitor to the German name!
 Worst Traitor of them all is he,
 A Traitor dark and cowardly!
 "I am no Traitor," Francis said,
Traitors. Fell not the wrath of Heaven upon those traitors?
Trajan. And study Trajan as by Pliny seen;
 A Pontif, Trajan here the Gods implores,
 And Trajan still, through various enterprize, Trajans. Hoards may come forth of Trajans, Maxi-mins,
Trample. From rites that trample upon soul and sense.
Trampled. Where none but those who trampled on my rights
 In a sensual creed that trampled
 Or trampled into earth; a chain of straw,
Trampling. With trampling horses and refulgent cars—
 Trampling upon his vileness. Stranger, pass
 The lightning, the fierce wind, and trampling waves.
 With speed and echoes loud of trampling hoofs Trance. To all that binds the soul in powerless trance,
 But, when the trance was gone, feebly pursued his way.
 A British ship I waked, as from a trance restored,
 And drop, as he once dropped, in miserable trance.
 A shepherd-lad, ere yet my trance was gone,
 We left our Hero in a trance,
 The trance is passed away—he wakes;
 Lo! where she stands fixed in a saint-like trance,
 All power was given her in the dreadful trance;
 The Damsel, in that trance embow'd;
 Till doubtful combat issued in a trance
 Had blindly grasped in that strong trance,
 Which he had grasped in that strong trance;
 Binding the charmed soul in powerless trance,
 To the whole city, "sleep no more." The trance
 A momentary trance comes over me;
Trances. Trances of thought and mountings of the mind
Tranquil. 'Tis pleasant near the tranquil lake to stray
 The soft gloom deepening on the tranquil mind.
 Creep hushed into the tranquil breast of death.
 Tranquil as he had died in his own bed.
 Tranquil—why not? Oh, peace! He is at peace;
 And guarded in their tranquil state of life,
 Dwelt in a tranquil spot. And oftentimes
 Tranquil assurances that Heaven supports
 With tranquil restoration,—feelings too . . . 206
 (Whose tranquil pomp and spotless purity
 Once more beneath the kind Earth's tranquil light;
 Palm to palm, on his tranquil breast;
 Thine is the tranquil hour, purpled Eve!
 Fondly embosomed in the tranquil food,
 On tranquil land, beneath a sky of bliss,
 Nought wakens or disturbs it's tranquil tides;
 Light up of tranquil joy a sober scene;
 When warm from myrtle bays and tranquil seas,
 Till all was tranquil as a dreamless sleep.
 And tranquil scenes, that universal power
 Of the Upholder of the tranquil soul,
 Hollow as ever vexed the tranquil air;
 Could have more tranquil visions in his youth,
 Faint, but more tranquil, like the changing sun
 Tranquil almost, and careless as a flower
 More tranquil, yet perhaps of kindred birth, . . . 763

Tranquil—continued.

Upon that tranquil Ruin, I returned, . . . 765
 From my unguarded heart.—The tranquil shores
 Toward regions yet more tranquil. But, methought,
 In like removal, tranquil though severe,
Tranquillised. The madding factions might be tranquillised, . . . 727
Tranquillising. See Tranquillizing.
 A tranquillising spirit presses now . . . 642
 Into the soul its tranquillising power, . . . 665
Tranquillity. Bleed in a music of tranquillity;
 Is sinking down in its tranquillity;
 Would interrupt the intense tranquillity
 An azure disc—shield of Tranquillity;
 A more entire tranquillity, . . . 264
 Ravage the world, tranquillity is here!
 Links in the chain of Thy tranquillity!
 The blest tranquillity that sunk so deep
 Tranquillity! the sovereign aim wert thou
 Of divine tranquillity!
 In the tranquillity of nature, came
 So still an image of tranquillity,
 Tranquillity to all things. Or is she,
 The longing for confirmed tranquillity,
 Are guardians of their own tranquillity,
 Conquered, and in tranquillity retained!
Tranquillizing. See Tranquillising.
 The tranquillizing power of time, shall wake,
Tranquilly. For though the priest, more tranquilly, Transacted. Of aught transacted there in bay or creek;
Transactions. 'Mid the transactions of the bustling crowd;
Transatlantic. He left his Transatlantic home:
Transcend. All principles of action that transcend
 Rights that transcend the loftiest heritage
 By faith in glory that shall far transcend
 His darkness doth transcend our fickle light!
Transcendent. And lead us on to that transcendent rest
 What offering, what transcendent monument
 Through love, through hope, and faith's transcendent dower,
 Transcendent Boon! noblest that earthly King
 Transcendent over time, unbound by place,
 Bestowed on this transcendent hour!
 And hath the name of God. Transcendent peace
 Transcendent, superhuman as it seemed,
 Transcendent to all local patrimony,
 By recognitions of transcendent power,
 In the transcendent wisdom of the age,
 For apprehension those transcendent truths
 This soul, and the transcendent universe, Transcends. Rapt into still communion that transcends
Transcripts. And if these Transcripts of the private heart
Transfer. Or soil endured a transfer in the mart
 This transfer is permitted,—not alone
 Transfer not to futurity a work Transferred. To be transferred to thee. When I'm dishonoured!
 Transferred to regions upon which the clouds
 The bold report, transferred to every clime;
 Transferred to bowers imperishably green,
 Hence, with the spiritual sovereignty transferred From the hushed vale's realities, transferred
 To unorganic natures were transferred
 Transferred a courtesy which had no air
 Liked; by rules of mimic art transferred
 Thither his popular talents he transferred;
 Could have transferred him to the flying clouds, Transfigurations. And bold transfigurations, more untrue
Transfigured. But the Transfigured, in and out of season,
 Transfigured through that fresh abode
 Transfigured, sinks into a hopeless grave;
 Transfigured, from this kindling bath foretold Transformation. That transformation through the wide earth felt,
 Or, at a touch, produced by happiest transformation.
 Prompt transformation works the novel Lore;
 Recalls the transformation of the flood,
 The transformation wrought by gay attire.
 I felt: the transformation I perceived,
Transformed. Your single virtue has transformed a
 Band
 It came with sleep and showed the Boy, no cherub,
 not transformed,
 Transformed, and rushing on a bold exchange
 At her own prayer transformed, took root,
 Might, with small help from fancy, be transformed
Transforming. To bow to some transforming power, Transgress. Was needful round men thirsting to transgress;—
 Or rule which they are tempted to transgress:
Transgressed. If we have faltered or transgressed, . . . 506

Transgression. And bear with their transgression, when I add . . .
 And chambers of transgression, now forlorn . . .
 Her own transgression; penitent sincere . . .

Transgressors. Yet we, who are transgressors in this kind, . . .

Transient. That nod to welcome transient guests; . . .
 Transient deception! a gay freak . . .
 And transient feignings with plain truth . . .
 For transient sorrows, simple wiles, . . .
 (By nature transient) than this torpid life; . . .
 Sheds round the transient harm or vague mischance . . .
 And for no transient ecstasies! . . .
 Enriched—too transient, were they not renewed . . .
 A mournful thing, so transient is the blaze!" . . .
 The rigid features of a transient smile, . . .
 And voluble their love of transient howers, . . .
 Their transient mission o'er, . . .
 In haste, nor springing with a transient shower: . . .
 Beyond these transient spheres, doth wear a crown . . .
 Whither it goes. Even such, that transient Thing, . . .
 We only dare to cast a transient glance, . . .
 For her mute Powers, fixed Forms, or transient Shows . . .
 Where Fear is but a transient guest, . . .
 Whose transient pleasure mounted to the head, . . .
 Transient and idle, lacked not intervals . . .
 Her endless streets, a transient visitant: . . .
 loudible—was transient; I had known . . .
 Their the enduring and the transient both . . .
 The burning sunshine, or a transient shower; . . .
 By observations transient as the glance . . .
 With transient observation; and thence caught . . .

Transit. O pleasant transit, Grasmere! to resign . . .
 (By transit not unlike man's frequent doom) . . .
 That this first transit from the smooth delights . . .
 Is undergone; the transit made that shows . . .

TransitMon. Which looks like a transition in my soul, . . .
 He talks of a transition in his Soul, . . .
 To a new transition, when the King was crushed, . . .
 Was easier, the transition more secure, . . .
 At such transition from the fervid air, . . .
 In the transition of that bitter hour!

Transitions. Through all thy most abrupt transitions . . .

Transitory. Action is transitory—a step, a blow, . . .
 All fitful cares, all transitory zeal! . . .
 What serve they? If, on transitory good . . .
 Must needs impress a transitory thought . . .
 Unfolded transitory qualities, . . .
 From transitory passion, unto this . . .
 To transitory themes; yet I rejoice, . . .
 Of self-destructive, transitory things, . . .
 The transitory Being that beheld . . .
 Of transitory interest, and peeps round . . .
 Exclusively with transitory things) . . .
 And every care which transitory things, . . .
 Above this transitory world, allow . . .
 Vouchsafed; this local transitory type . . .

Transits. Make sadder transits o'er thought's optic . . .
 glass . . .

Translate. The words of ancient time I thus translate, . . .

Translated. Came in reply, translated by our feelings, . . .

Translation. Not by translation to the heavenly choir . . .

Translucent. Or note (translucent summer's happiest . . . chance!) . . .
 In the soft heaven of a translucent pool . . .
 Nor, yet, perchance, translucent Spring, had tolled . . .
 Gazing intensely, the translucent lymph . . .

Transmigrations. Had sprung, their transmigrations, . . .
 when and how . . .

Transmit. And to our children will transmit, or die . . .

Transmits. Transmits of happier lot in times of yore! . . .
 Transmits to Heaven! As Deep to Deep . . .
 Transmits of days more bless'd in times of yore . . .

Transmitted. Supremacy from Heaven transmitted . . .
 pure . . .
 To be transmitted, and to other eyes . . .
 Transmitted far as living memory . . .

Transmutations. In quest belike of transmutations . . .

Transmuta. Transmute him to a wretch from quiet . . .
 hurled— . . .
 An agonizing sorrow to transmute; . . .
Transmuted. See Self-transmuted. . . .
 He burns—transmuted to a dusky fire— . . .

Transmutes. Controls them and subdues, transmutes, . . .
 hereaves . . .

Transparency. Transparency through the golden . . .

Transparency. With wonder smit by its transparency, . . .

Transparent. The smooth transparent skin, . . .
 On the calm depth of his transparent breast, . . .
 Transparent as the soul of innocent youth, . . .
 Reviewed through Love's transparent veil of years? . . .
 Is your transparent cell; . . .
 By that transparent veil with light divine, . . .

Transplant. While I this flower transplant . . .

Transplanted. Lovelier—transplanted from heaven's . . .
 purest! clime! . . .
 We were transplanted—there were we let loose . . .
 From paradise transplanted: wintry age . . .
 Transplanted ere too late;—The hermit, lodged . . .

Transport. Mutual was the sudden transport; . . .
 Pure transport undisturbed by doubt or fear . . .
 I turned to share the transport—Oh! with whom . . .
 Such transport, though but for a moment's space; . . .
 The transport was rolled down the river of Were, . . .
 —High transport did the Father shed . . .
 Go high, no transport ever higher . . .
 From blissful transport some—from clefts of woe . . .
 And transport finds in every street a vent, . . .
 Sublimar transport, purer love, . . .
 Joined in the transport, echoed back their shout, . . .
 When Transport kiss'd away my april tear, . . .
 And run in transport to the dimpling deeps; . . .
 And hence my transport. Nor should this, perchance, . . .
 If high the transport, great the joy I felt . . .
 Of short-lived transport, like a torrent bursting, . . .
 Would to a child be transport over-great, . . .
 Great was my transport, deep my gratitude . . .
 With cordial transport, moulds it and remoulds, . . .
 Vivid the transport, vivid though not profound; . . .
 Her voice of social transport reached even him! . . .
 The strain of transport, "whose'er in youth . . .
 Not with more transport did Columbus greet . . .
 A holder transport seizes. From the side . . .
 The Priest in holy transport thus exclaimed: . . .
 Be sung with transport and unceasing joy . . .
 To shout with transport o'er a knock-down blow, . . .

Transported. I seemed transported to another world; . . .
 To take of this transported pair . . .
 The Soul transported sees, from hint of thine, . . .

Transported over that cloud-wooling hill, . . .
 Transported, my soothed spirit hovers o'er . . .
 How far so'er transported and possessed, . . .
 That is transported to excess; that yearns, . . .

Transports. Like sun-lit tempests, troubled transports roll; . . .
 Yet frequent transports mitigate the gloom: . . .
 That your transports are not mine, . . .
 Thy transports moderate; and meekly mourn . . .
 Whence oft invigorating transports flow . . .
 —But oh! what transports, what sublime reward, . . .
 To transports from the secondary founts . . .
 His transports? wether his heroic strains? . . .
 Like lighted tempests troubled transports roll; . . .
 My heart, alive to transports long unknown, . . .
 With your bright transports fairly may be deemed, . . .
 And from those transports, and these toils abstruse, . . .
 By the unexpected transports of our age . . .
 —Those transports, with staid looks of pure goodwill, . . .

Transversally. With mounds transversely lying side . . .
 by side . . .

Trapped. He will destroy. To have been trapped . . .
 like moles!— . . .

Trappings. Her trappings here, should strip them off . . .
 abashed . . .
 To which the trappings of a gaudy world . . .

Travail. Of Julia's travail. When the babe was . . .
 born, . . .
 Thy kindred and thy friends such travail borne . . .

Travel. Travel along the precipice's base; . . .
 You seem worn out with travel—shall I support . . .
 you? . . .
 That you should travel unattended, Lady!— . . .
 How would you like to travel on whole hours . . .
 That a fierce storm o'ertook us, worn with travel, . . .
 Nay, we must travel in another path, . . .
 To travel half a mile alone.—Good Lady! . . .
 And long, long vales to travel through; . . .
 Until a man might travel twelve stout miles, . . .
 We two could travel, Sir, through a strange round; . . .
 Have far to travel,—and on these rough paths . . .
 And travel with the year at a soft pace . . .
 Ye travel heavily and slow; . . .
 Eyes of some men travel far . . .
 Travel with the multitude . . .
 The road we travel, steep, and rough; . . .
 Thy ship will travel without harm; . . .
 She cares for; let her travel where she may, . . .

Romans for travel girl, for business gowned; . . .
 To travel through that region bright . . .
 And those that travel on the wind! . . .
 So didst thou travel on life's common way, . . .
 But this swift travel scorns the company . . .
 The wages of thy travel, joy! . . .
 The wages of thy travel, joy! . . .
 His project crowned, his pleasant travel o'er? . . .
 Recoiled—and wings alone could travel—there . . .
 They come—and onward travel without dread, . . .
 That through our gipsy travel cheered the way; . . .

Feeling from limbs with travel spent, . . .
 Must travel, still is Nature's priest, . . .
 Can in a moment travel thither, . . .
 And tears before him travel like a cloud . . .
 From these I turned to travel with the shoal . . .
 To travel without pain, and I beheld, . . .

Travelled—continued.

How willingly we travel, and how far !
 To travel independent of her help,
 How far they travel, and how long endure ;
 Must turn elsewhere—to travel near the tribes
 But stout and hale, for travel unimpair'd.
 To travel in a country far remote ;
 Had yet to travel far, but unto us,
 And milder worth : nor need we travel far

Travelled. See Far-travelled.
 Thus when thou with Time hast travelled
 He travelled back to Egremont : and thence,
 I travelled among unknown men,
 And I have travelled weary miles to see
 Travelled into distant lands ;
 He travelled ; stirring thus about his feet
 He travelled here, he travelled there ;—
 And with the Tweed had travelled ;
 Has travelled down to Matthew's name,
 We travelled merrily, to pass
 Not far we travelled ere a shout of glee,

I travelled round our little lake, five miles
 We had not travelled long, ere some mischance
 And travelled through the wood, with no one near
 Have acted, suffered, travelled far, observed
 For strangers who have travelled far perhaps,
Traveller. See Fellow-traveller.

The loitering traveller hence, at evening, sees
 The face of traveller passing food and rest ;
 To greet the traveller needing food and rest ;
 And oh, fair France ! though now the traveller sees
 Nay, Traveller ! rest. This lonely Yew-tree stands
 A Traveller on the skirt of Sarum's Plain
 He met a traveller, robbed him, shed his blood ;
 To traveller who might talk of any casual theme.
 You are a lusty Traveller. But how fare you ?
 No traveller, peasant, herdsman ? Not a soul :
 Made answer, like a traveller bold,
 The traveller to a shelter, summoned him
 Thou greet'st the traveller in the lane ;
 To be such a traveller as I.
 A single traveller—and there
 Startles the pensive traveller while he treads
 A Traveller between life and death ;
 Have been a traveller under open sky,
 I was a Traveller then upon the moor ;
 Nor Traveller gone from earth the heavens to espy !
 The passing traveller slights ;
 Yes, Traveller ! fifty winters have been told
 The traveller, at this day, will stop and gaze

The bravest traveller in halloon,
 Hath painted Winter like a traveller old,

And if some traveller, weary of his road,
 The forlorn traveller, or sailor wrecked
 While a fair region round the traveller lies
 Stock-still there he stands like a traveller bemazed :
 On which the Traveller passed this way.
 When this ill-fated Traveller died,
 To the sun-burnt traveller,
 Which the unsheltered traveller might receive
 Pause, Traveller ! whose'er thou be
 At distance still the same. Poor Traveller !
 The traveller would hang his wet clothes on a chair ;
 Traveller or Shepherd, let it say,
 Besiege the traveller whom they half afright.
 We must descend. A Traveller I am,
 Assured that now the traveller would repose
 At once, some loely traveller. I was lost ;
 And envied traveller ! When the Boy returned,
 All that the traveller sees when he is there.
 That asks not speed, a traveller might bestow
 For spring or fountain, which the traveller funds,
 The curious traveller, when, from open day,
 Or as a traveller, who has gained the brow
 Heard, though unseen,—a devious traveller,
 Or well-spring where the weary traveller rests.
 A youthful traveller, and see daily now
 Its final home on earth. What traveller—who—
 When winds are blowing strong. The traveller
 slaked
 Need a bewildered traveller wish for more ?
 Far livelier than bewildered traveller feels,
 From traveller halting in his own despite,
 And, wheresoe'er the traveller turns his steps,
 Herein less happy than the Traveller

Traveller's. 'Twill be the traveller's shed, the pilgrim's cot,
 Strikes through the Traveller's frame with deadlier
 chill,
 Given to the pausing traveller's rapturous glance :
 If from a traveller's fortune I might claim
 The Traveller's expectation ?—Could our Will
 To the Traveller's eye it shone :
 Appeared to recompense the traveller's pains
 (How welcome to the weary traveller's eyes !)
 That bars the traveller's road, she often stood,
 His harp, suspended at the traveller's side ;

Traveller's—continued.

Those small flat stones, which, ranged by traveller's
 hands
Travellers. See *Fellow-travellers, Fool-travellers,
 Horsemen-travellers.*
 The travellers saw me weep, my fate inquired,
 Two Travellers ! The woman is Idonea.
 While our four travellers homeward wead ;
 The travellers know it not, and 'twill remain
 Our Travellers are the happiest pair ;
 While thus our jocund Travellers fare,
 Like travellers shouting for a boat.
 Our Travellers, ye remember well,
 Which stopped that band of travellers on their way,
 Of travellers in some shady haunt,
 To travellers, from such comforts as are thine,
 And sun-burnt travellers resting their tired limbs,
 Of travellers, chiefly delegates returning
 Of vehicles and travellers, horse and foot,
 Yet do such travellers find their own delight ;
Travellers. And, after ordinary travellers' talk Travellerst. Thou travellerst so contentedly, and sleep'st

Travelling. See Slow-travelling.

Raised by yon travelling flock, a dusty cloud
 And he is all in travelling trim,—
 She sees him in his travelling trim,
 For, while they all were travelling home,
 Peter was travelling all alone—
 That through his brain are travelling,
 Of travelling through the world that lay
 Travelling where she from time to time enshrouds
 At length, in darkness travelling on,
 The ray the cot of morning travelling nigh,
 A friendless Man, a travelling Cripple !
 That travelling in strange countries once he found
 Unprofitably travelling toward the grave.
 And now was travelling towards his native home.
 While I was travelling back among those days,
 A travelling cripple, by the trunk cut short,
 Since, travelling southward from our pastoral hills,
 I had been travelling ; this a stride at once
 I have been travelling far ; and many days
 Travelling at steadier pace than ours, had risen
 And I could tell, not travelling for my theme

Travel's. And that was all his travel's story,
 Its warfare's bourn, its travel's belt !
Travels. He travels slowly down the vale.
 Mounts with a tune, that travels like a blast
 Diaphanous because it travels slowly ;
 Of locusts travels on his breath ;
 The simple rapture ;—who that travels far
 For Power that travels with the human heart :
 And fung into the brook that travels near ;
 Which whose travels in her bosom eyes,
 He travels on, a solitary Man,
 He travels on, a solitary Man ;
 He travels on, and in his face, his step,
 When the world travels in a beaten road,
Traverse. Nor by his presence traverse the design.
 Who, with their burthen, traverse hill and dale,
Traversed. Was traversed from without ; much, too, of thoughts
 And, as they traversed the smooth brine,
 He went, and traversed plain and hill ;
 Traversed by gleaming ships, looked up to thee
 And the broad gulfs I traversed oft and oft.
 The torrent, travers'd by the lustre broad,
 The Arcades I traversed, in the Palace huge
 Of the glad times when first I traversed France
 If Angels traversed their cerulean floors,
 Traversed hut by a few irregular paths,
Traverses. That respite o'er, like traverses and toils
Traversing. While traversing this aether sphere,
 I thought, still traversing that widespread plain,
 While traversing alone yon mountain-pass.

Treacherous. To climb the treacherous cliffs for scanty fare.
 There's little sign the treacherous path
 His hope is treacherous only whose love dies
 Of such weak fibre that the treacherous air
 That Wisdom wears, or take his treacherous staff
 But from behiud with treacherous wound
 Triumphant, snatched from many a treacherous will !
 And, sorrow for him ! the dull treacherous heat
 That looks for evil like a treacherous spy ;
 Was spread a treacherous swamp,
 In a strait and treacherous pass.
 They can be treacherous too.
 How treacherous to her promise, is the world ;
 From intricate cabals of treacherous friends,
 For scanty food the treacherous cliffs to dare.
 And gave, in handfuls gave, the treacherous store ;
 She dreads the treacherous house, the double tongue ;
 Gave treacherous sanction to that over-love
 Leaves far behind life's treacherous vanities,
 Death-like, of treacherous desertion, felt
 Motions not treacherous or profane, else why ?
 Not treacherous, to the mind's excursive power.

Treachery—continued.

Supplanted, not for treacherous vacancy . . . 3.3. 435 *The doubt 115
Treachery. There I reproached him with his treachery.
Falsehood and Treachery, in close council met,
A treachery that foils it or defeats;
Tread. Spur-clad his nervous feet, and firm his tread;
The hound, the horse's tread, and mellow horn;
And dear the velvet green-sward to his tread;
Winds neither road nor path for foot to tread;
From the unpretending ground we mortals tread;—
Come on, and tread where I shall tread." . . .
Tomestone nor name—only the turf we tread
Her tread that would scarcely crush a worm, . . .
Alone I tread this path;—for aught I know,
Tread there with steps that no one shall reprove!
Here is my body doomed to tread, this path, . . .
That in thy holy footsteps I may tread;
And all her twinkling stars, Who now would tread,
Whom could the Muses else allure to tread . . .

While Anna's peers and early playmates tread,
That every foot might fall with heavier tread,
At God's appointed hour to them who tread . . .
For an hour's perfect bliss, to tread the grass
She gave, if Faith might tread the beaten ways
To us who tread below),
The grass-grown pavement tread, . . .
But from our course why turn—to tread . . .
Provokes no echoes, but must softly tread;
Who breathe the air he breathed, tread where he trod,

Where the all-conquering Roman feared to tread.
Which her Heaven-guided feet refuse to tread.
Blest be the unconscious shore on which ye tread,
Levelled with earth this foot of mine may tread."
With bigtry shall tread the Offering
Though doomed to tread in solitary ways,
Wheels and the tread of hoofs are heard no more;
On ground which British shepherds tread!
That, if thy new-born Charge shall tread
Or, bound by oaths, come forth to tread earth's floor
Under a rock too steep for man to tread, . . .

Is all too rough for Thee to tread, . . .
Thou tread; or sweep—borne on the managed
steed—
Where never foot doth tread." . . .
The household floor to tread.
They hunt through the streets with deliberate tread,
And dear the green-sward to his velvet tread;
Was never heard the plodding peasant's tread.
To guide his dangerous tread the taper's gleam.
Whose slippery face derides his deathful tread!
When fragrant scents beneath th' enchanted tread
Rock'd on the dizzy larch's narrow tread,
May never tread; but scarcely Spenser's self . . .
That we must tread—thy image rose again,
Too hot to tread upon. Off said I then,
That I have dared to tread this holy ground,
Then, though (too weak to tread the ways of truth)
For I must tread on shadowy ground, must sink
Not wishing more; repining not to tread . . .
Not doomed to ignorance, though forced to tread,
To tread for pastime, talking with his mates,
The earth we tread, the sky that we behold
Delight exhaling from the ground they tread."
Of the path worn by mournful tread of her
Of man or beast was seldom used to tread.

Tread'st. Speak, and the floor thou tread'st on will rejoice.
Treading. See Close-treading.
And treading among flowers of joy . . .
A gravelled pathway treading, . . .
All, while he slept, treading the pendent stairs
Than treading a path trod by thousands before.
Is treading, where no other face is seen)
Treading their path in sympathy and linked
Breathing fresh air, and treading the green earth;
Treads. Time softly treads; throughout the landscape breathes
Startles the pensive traveller while he treads . . .
Softly she treads, as if her foot were loth . . .
Months perish with their moons; year treads on
year;
And treads in solitary ways,
And fragrance in thy footing treads;
Enough of climbing toil!—Ambition treads . . .
That howl so dismally for him who treads
Of widest course but treads back his own steps;
And treads the mountains which his fathers trod.
Treason. Of subtle Treason, in his mask of law,
Treason. And, worst of all, a treasonable growth Treason-parties. Round fire-side treason-parties en famille?
Treason's. From subterranean Treason's darkling power:
Treasons. For treasons, tumults, and for wars?
Treaure. Looking down on the kine, and our treasure of sheep . . .

Treasuring. Relinquishing, but treasuring every law
Treat. See Baby-treat.

The Arch-impostor— Treat him gently, Oswald;
In verse, which to thy ear might come, would treat
this simple theme,
Say not you love the delicate treat,
Our treat shall be a friendly bowl!"
They—who have heard some learned Patriot treat
Greedy ambition, armed to treat with scorn
What shall I treat of? News from Mona's Isle?
I treat the matter lightly, but, alas!
Of strife and folly, though it be a treat
Frank conversation, made the evening's treat:
—Still less, far less, am I inclined to treat
Nor wanted timely treat of fish or fowl
Treated. He mocked and treated with disdain
And shameless women, treated and caressed;
Then let both be kindly treated,
Treatise. A treatise of Geometry, he woot,
Treats. To furnish treats more costly than the Dame
The Pharasac [sic] sneer that treats as dross . . .

First covered, and here taught this aged Tree
No tree was there, no meadow's pleasant green,
Sigh at the deed? Hew down a withered tree,
Here is a tree, ragged, and bent, and bare,
No tree, nor jutting eminence, nor form
From such a journey!—there was a black tree,
A single tree; she thought it was her Father.—
He tosses about in every bare tree,
Beneath the church-yard tree."
"My Mother," said the Boy, "was born near to a blessed Tree,
Holy as that which long hath crowned the Chapel of this Tree;
Or lay upon the moss by brook or tree,
Or let the aged tree uprooted lie, . . .
Or sing another song, or choose another tree. . .
Or sit in the shade of my grandfather's tree,
And under every hospitable tree
In tree and tower was Johnny seen,
The CLIPPING TREE, a name which yet it bears.
The breeze I see is in the tree:
And underneath the spreading tree
That every naked ash, and lardy tree . . .
To note in shrub and tree, in stone and flower,
Under the branches of the tree:
There is a tempest-stricken tree;
Beside the tree and corner-stone,
Halting beneath a shady tree, . . .

Tree—continued.

Beneath the shady tree.
Of this late day by character in tree
Dinning from the CHERRY TREE!

Tree's. See Pine-tree's, Yew-tree's.

Whitening a pine tree's northern side,
Trees. See Apple-trees, Birch-trees, Fir-trees, Forest-trees, Lime-trees, Orange-trees, Pine-trees, Yew-trees.
Among the branches of the leafless trees;
From rock-hewn steps the sail between the trees;

Treeless. A quiet treeless nook, with two green fields,

(Among reflected boughs of leafy trees)
Float with its crest of trees adorned
And all its stately trees, are passed away,

Trees—continued.

The Moon's fix'd gaze between the opening trees,
Gleam war's discordant habits thro' the trees,
A feeling of their strength. The naked trees,
Remained, no pleasant images of trees,
The leafless trees and every icy crag
On caves and trees, upon the woods and hills,
Belfry, and images, and living trees;
From a tumultuous ocean, trees and towers
A grove, with gleams of water through the trees.
Powder'd like rime trees, when frost is keen,
Whose worship, 'mid remotest village trees,
In character, tricked out like aged trees
The trees, the mountains shared it, and the brooks,
Grotts, pebbles, roots of trees, and fancies more,
Beneath the trees or by the glimmering lake,
Of trees and hills and water, bolt upright
And that monastic castle, 'mid tall trees,
See trees, and meadows, and thy native stream,
There small birds warble from the leafy trees,
Than that famed paradise of ten thousand trees,
Beneath the trees, clear footing many a mile—
Joust underneath the trees, that as in storm
To thee unknown! Twice bad the trees let fall
That flowers, and trees, and even the silent hills,
While in a grove I walk, whose lofty trees,
The gooseberry trees that shot in long lank slips,
Said Margaret to me, here beneath these trees,
And now the 'trotting brooks' and whispering trees,
To fall upon us, while, beneath the trees,
Casement, and cottage-roof, and stems of trees
With mimic trees inserted in the turf,
Inverted trees, rocks, clouds, and azure sky;
In the green trees; and, kindling on all sides
Whose battlements were screened by tufted trees.
Beneath the battlements and stately trees
Is lost within a little tuft of trees;
(Ye scarcely can) amid its sheltering trees
Rocking the trees, or driving, cloud on cloud
Of yet unfaded trees she lifts her head
Of the rude pile; as oftentimes trunks of trees,
Like trees in forests,—spread through spacious tracts,
Some nourishment, as trees do by their roots,
Their slender ditties when the trees are bare,
Following its fortunes like the beasts or trees
Quiet and dark; for through the thick-wove trees
And pleasant dwellings, to familiar trees
The trees (her first-born child being then a babe)
Said she, "for thither as the trees grew up,
That humble roof embowered among the trees,
Deep pools, tall trees, black chasms, and dizzy crags,
Trees'. The trees' tall summits withered at the sight;
Tree-tops. And over the tree-tops; nor did we want trellised. That cheered the trellised arbour's privacy,
In trellised shed with clustering roses gay,
Treills-roof. With purple of the trellis-roof,
Treills-work. Of trellis-work in long arcades,
Tremble. Here, plots of sparkling water tremble bright
Where huge rocks tremble to the bellowing herd.
Tremble in ever-varying tints of air.
With such a look—it makes me tremble, Sir,
Opposed to armies, not a nerve would tremble:
Why do I tremble now?—Is not the depth
I look at him and tremble like a child.
If he were innocent—then he would tremble
but I shall tremble.
Grasp it,—if thou shrink and tremble,
'Behold they tremble!—haughty their array,
Well may you tremble and look grave!
And tremble, seeing whence proceeds the strength
I tremble at the sorrow of the time.
The chaste affections tremble to fulfil
Tremble on dancing waves and rippling streams
Yes, though He well may tremble at the sound
And proud hearts can make tremble in a trice.
Did tremble like a guilty Thing surprised:
Hang from the rocks that tremble o'er the steep,
Oh! tremble, ye, to whom bath been assigned
I tremble yet to think of—our last prop,
Was left to tremble for a breaking vow.—
Trembled. In power, where once he trembled in his weakness;
How in still air the balance trembled—
My frame hath often trembled with delight
Trembled the groves, the stars grew pale,

It trembled, but it never passed away.
I trembled,—thought, at times, of human life
Who trembled, trunk and limbs, like some huge oak
Trembles. Nile trembles at his fountain head;
At which the desert trembles.—Humming Bee!
He trembles, smitten to the core
He trembles—he is pale as death;
Who trembles now at thy capricious mood?
Like a maiden of twenty he trembles and sighs,
Regrets, or trembles, wrongly, or too much;
Trembling. Itself-trembling at the torrent's power.
Measured by all that, trembling, we foresee,
Trembling, through my unworthiness, with fear
May meet at noontide; Fear and trembling Hope,

Trembling—continued.

The waters of the spring were trembling still.
Tell thy name, thou trembling Field;
Whose trembling fancy would to love give birth;
(The balance trembling between night and morn
Trembling I gazed, but heard a voice—it said,
Trembling to you!
The little trembling flowers that peep
Trembling, I look upon the secret springs
Of earthly hope put on with trembling hand;
On knees that ceased from trembling, or intoned
The trembling eyebrow showed her sapphir blue,
We stood, a trembling, earnest Company!
Upon a Maiden trembling as she knelt;
From month to month trembling and unassured,
The spousal trembling, and the "dust to dust,"
Stretched forth with trembling hope?—In every realm,
Pale and trembling Hubert stood.
A trembling solace to her widowed Lord.
By cells whose image, trembling as he prays,
Wide o'er the main, a trembling lustrous plays,
And wakes anew life's glimmering trembling fires,
Strove after me. With trembling oars I turned,
When, by the margin of the trembling lake,
Not without trembling, we in safety looked
For penitential tears and trembling hopes
Her trembling expectations, but no more
These that in trembling hope are laid apart;
And trembling grasp the long-deferred reward,
Which I behold with trembling, when I think Tremblingly. Cling tremblingly to rocks as loose as they:
'Tis from the crowd, who tremblingly
And tremblingly her course she bent
Justice, and order. Tremblingly escaped,
To meet her waking eyes. This tremblingly
Tremblings. Than tremblings that reprove
For precious tremblings in your bosom found!
Tremblings withal and commendable fears,
That they must perish. Tremblings of the heart Tremendous. Tremendous God of battles, Lord of Hosts!
Tremendous truths! familiar to the men
Tremulous. That stuns the tremulous cliffs of high Lodore;
Strong flakes of radiance on the tremulous stream:
And stilled his tremulous lip. Thus they were calmed
They lengthen out the tremulous sob,
His elbows on his tremulous knees.
Widow, or wife, implore on tremulous knee,
The tremulous heart excite;
There by caresses from a tremulous hand.
Of tremulous admiration. Such true fame
The tremulous sob of the complaining owl;
Of awe or tremulous dread, that had given way
And so acknowledged with a tremulous joy
Trenches. Up through the trenches of the long-drawn vales
Trent. Where Trent is nursed, far southward!
Cambrian hills
Trepidation. And trepidation strikes the blackened mountain-caves.
In trepidation, from the blank abyss
Or trepidation for the end of things
From trepidation and repining free.
Trepidations. These trepidations? Plain it is that Heaven
The trepidations of mortality.
Tresspass. This tresspass of old Goody Blake;
Tresspassed. I tresspassed lately worse than ever—
Tresspasser. To scare him as a tresspasser,
Tresspasses. Of tresspasses, affected to provoke
That might his tresspasses betray.
But for thy tresspasses; and, at this day,
Tresses. Her glistening tresses bound, yet light and free
Trial. For a like trial, but more merciful.
But pass a mile—and then for trial,—
Here, where the Princess lies, begin the trial;
Of trial past without offence
Once more made trial of her strength, nor lacked
The time of trial, ere we learn to live
Of some great trial, and we hear the voice
The test of such a trial; clearer far
Yet trial and temptation oft are shunned
To meet such trial from their spiritual sires
Trials. Dread trials! yet encountered and sustained
When will your trials teach you to be wise?
How blest the souls who when their trials come
Meek, patient, kind, and, were its trials fewer,
O Man,—if with thy trials thus it fares,
And through dark trials still dost thou explore
Through life's worst trials, whether shocks or snares,

In all trials sure to find
Yet, thro' all visitations and all trials,
Under worst trials, was I driven to think
And various trials of our complex being,
Did, after trials not in vain prolonged,

 I almost see him tripping down the path . . . 98 Brothers 221
 But as of all those tripping lambs not one . . . 376 Duddon 3. 5
 Who tripping lisps a merry song . . . 507 May 33
 And saw the birds come tripping from their bowers, . . . 558 Cuck. and Night. 67

Tripping—continued.
Down the green field came tripping after us . . .
Trips. O'er rough and smooth she trips along . . .
Trips down the pathways of some winding dale ; . . .
Tristram. Sir Tristram, dear to thousands as a brother,
Trite. Trite, do yet scarcely seem so when I think
With trite reflections of morality,
Triton. Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn.
Triumph. Here justice has indeed a field of triumph.
And where's the triumph if the delegate
To share your triumph ? Yes, her very look,
Shout in triumph, both are saved ; . . .
And, from this triumph of affection pure,
Her sweets, and triumph o'er the breathing rose ?
The triumph of your late devotion !
And hast Thou not with triumph seen
Over their mirthful triumph clapping hands.
That in high triumph drew the Lord of vines,
With one calm triumph of a modest pride.
Is given to triumph and all human pride !
It is the triumph of his joy !
That triumph, when the very worst, the pain,
Triumph, and thoughts no bondage can restrain.
To which the triumph of all good is given,
For perfect triumph o'er your Enemies.
Glory, and triumph. Yet with politic skill
Of triumph, how the labouring Danube bore
And, in like sign of cloudless triumph bright,
And loud and long of Winter's triumph sing !
Yet filled with ardour and on triumph bent
The triumph hail, which from their peaceful clime
Receive the triumph destined to thy hand !
The Swans, in triumph clap their wings ;
O'ER PAIN AND GRIEF A TRIUMPH PURE.
The triumph of a desperate deed
These were their triumph, these their pride ;
To lead in memorable triumph home
(Proud triumph is it for a sullen Queen !)
Meed of some Roman chief—in triumph borne
To virtue every triumph that he knows :
Send forth a song of triumph. Waves and Winds,
The triumph of that hour.
With triumph and delight, with hope and fear,
To achieve its higher triumph. Not unfeared
And perfect triumph for the better cause.
Exulted, in the triumph of my soul,
A hymn of triumph : " as the morning comes
This triumph, yet the pity of my heart
Then shall our triumph be complete as theirs.
" Yet," with a smile of triumph thus exclaimed
And cause for most rare triumph will be thine
Or disappearing ; triumph that proclaims
" Triumph who will in these profaner rites
With present triumph, will be sure to find
Such triumph over sin and guilt achieve ?
Gave to triumph Freedom's cause,
Gave to triumph Freedom's cause,
His strength, and had his triumph and his joy.
Triumphal. And clear way made for her triumphal car
That gave the Roman his triumphal shells ;
Ask rather a triumphal strain
Flowers left to wither on triumphal arcs,
Triumphal pomp for liberty confirmed,
Triumphant. Triumphant on the bosom of the storm,
For Benjamin, triumphant soul !
Hoping excuses, and triumphant pain ;
Opening before the sun's triumphant eye—
Triumphant wrong, battle of battle born,
Of Chiefs triumphant after ruthless wars ;
Triumphant.—Inundation wide and deep,
Of Time, breaks forth triumphant Memory ;
With commerce freighted, or triumphant war.
Spread by triumphant cruelties
By wrong triumphant through its own excess,
Triumphant, snatched from many a treacherous wile
O Death ! the ensanguined yet triumphant wheels,
And own that Art, triumphant over strife
Triumphant o'er the darkness of the grave.
Calmly triumphant ; and for humbler claim
A happy time that was ; triumphant looks
Triumphant over every obstacle
Triumphant, winning from the invaded heavens
And yet—triumphant o'er this pompous show
Of his triumphant constancy and love
Bounded—triumphant entry this for him !
Triumphantly. To be triumphantly restored,
Henceforth bestir'd—triumphantly
To few triumphantly been given !
The choirs of Angels spread, triumphantly augmented,
Triumphantly displayed in records left
Triumphantly dispersing with the taunt
Raising his voice triumphantly, " obtain Triumphed. Who triumphed o'er divinian power !— and yet
Might else have triumphed, baffling prayer,
And buoyant spirit triumphed over pain ;

Triumphed—continued.
So genius triumphed over seeming wrong,
Or happy blunder triumphed, bursts of glee
I triumphed. Meantime, day by day, the roads Triumphing. Till the checked torrent, proudly triumphing,
Triumphs. The mantling triumphs of a day too blest.
Hark, how thy Country triumphs !— Smilingly
The triumphs of this hour ; for they are THINE !
Lo, Justice triumphs ! Earth is freed !
Triumphs in sun-bright gratitude displayed,
But liberty, and triumphs on the Main.
Better, if Reason's triumphs match with these,
Pleased with your triumphs o'er his brother Space,
Thy Spirit triumphs o'er the slight ;
Triumphs, in that great work, the Painter's skill,
For righteous triumphs are the base
Small jealousies, and triumphs good or bad—
To triumphs and to sacrificial rites
Their brethren, and her triumphs be in the end
Triumphs of unamithing peace at home,
Where are your triumphs ? your dominion where ?
His triumphs hail, and glorify his end ;
Thy rival triumphs, thy Newmarket fame.
Trivial. However trivial, if you thence be taught
As have no slight or trivial influence
'Mid trivial care and petty cross
From trivial cares. But, Fancy and the Muse,
Are trivial pomp and city noise,
Read lazily in trivial books, went forth
Seemed trivial, and the impresses without
Of trivial pleasures was a poor exchange
Of trivial objects, melted and reduced
Thy trivial pleasures ; and when these had drooped
With vulgar men about me, trivial forms
In trivial occupations, and the round
A while on trivial things we held discourse,
And trivial ostentation—is left free
From trivial themes to general argument
Of trivial occupations well devised,
Trod. Who long hath trod this toilsome way,
The glorious path in which he trod.
The paths which we had trod—these fountains,
flowers ;
What though this ancient Earth be trod
Regent of sound, have dangerous Passions trod !
And trod the cliffs of Dover.
No ghost more softly ever trod ;
(But seldom trod) of mildly-gleaming ore ;
And in her Catholic attributes, hath trod
How oft inspired must he have trod
Had trod the banks of Clyde, and Tay,
Which Caledonian Heroes trod
I measure back the steps which I have trod ;
Who breathe the air he breathed, tread where he
trod,
Rough ways my steps have trod ;—too rough and long
Enjoys the walks his predecessors trod,
Grew on the floors his sons had trod :
And trod the bible beneath their feet.
Even such this blessed Pilgrim trod,
Fields which they love, and paths they daily trod,
Or lured along where green-wood paths he trod
To slake their thirst, with reckless hoofs have trod
And they could look his ghostly hoofs who trod
Lead, through dark ways by sin and sorrow trod,
By few but shepherds trod !
Than treading a path trod by thousands before.
'Twas a path trod by thousands ; but Daniel is one
The sea, or trod the earth, to peace estrang'd."

Trojan—continued.
 His course to Latium from the Trojan shore,
Trojans. The Trojans too (Æneas at their head),
 Loud shouts,—the Trojans echo the applause.
 Hath come! we have been Trojans, Ilium was Trompington. Beside the pleasant Mill of Trompington
Troop. The Troop will be impatient; let us hie
 That horn again—'Tis some one of our Troop;
 You are found at last, thanks to the vagrant Troop
 Landed with a small Troop, myself being one:
 'Twas by a troop of miners made,
 The troop of horse have gained the height
 A troop of deer came sweeping by;
 The Minstrel of the Troop, and left him there,
 As scattered birds troop to the fowler's lure,
 With the sad news, that he had joined a troop
 Of Chaplain to a military troop
Trooping. Trooping to that summons holy.
 Trooping together. Little suits it me
 Of Tell came trooping from a thousand huts,
Troops. Driven out in troops to want and nakedness;
 About your Daughter! Troops of armed men,
 Army of Clouds! ye winged Host in troops
 Unhappy ghosts in troops by moonlight seen;
 Unharnessed, naked, troops of Moorish horse
 Howling in troops along the Bothnic Main.
 By annual custom, issuing forth in troops,
 The order'd troops
Trope. Vanity's hieroglyphic; a choice trope

Trophied. You trophied Mound shrinks to a shadowy speck
Trophies. These desolate remains are trophies high
 Trophies that led the good and wise to mourn
 —Not work of hands; but trophies that may reach
 Her trophies, Fancy crouch; the course of pride
 Her heaven-offending trophies Glory rears:
 Bright trophies of the sun!
 Seeks for no trophies, struggles for no spoils
 There hang thy trophies; bid the jockey's vest,
Trophy. High was the trophy hung with pitiless pride
 That man will have a trophy, humble Spade!
 A trophy nobler than a conqueror's sword.
Tropic. Upon the tropic sea,
 The tumult of a tropic sky,
 Is she for tropic suns, or polar snow?
 Yet still her eyes retained their tropic fire,
 Thou buoyant minion of the tropic air;
 That in the Tropic Islands he had scrued,
 Bedded among rich plumes of tropic birds;
Tropics. Between the tropics filled the steady sail, Troth. Of misery that was not—Troth, 'tis hard—
 Each in his way? Troth, I begin to think so.
 Had pledged his troth before the altar
 Yet He whose heart in childhood gave her troth
 He will repent him of his troth;
 Of God and chosen friends, your troth to plight
 Fail to wash out, tears flowing ere thy troth
 At will, your power the measure of your troth—
 And hope that kept with me her pledged troth.
 No chief, on my troth,

Trotted. Are still, the creature trotted on before;
Trotting. Trotting alone along the beaten road,
 And now the 'trotting brooks' and whispering trees,
Trouble. (For sighs will ever trouble human breath)
 As if thenceforth nor pain nor trouble she could know.
 Then, with a voice which inward trouble broke
 'Twere wrong to trouble you. God speed you both.
 Would trouble us; if he were here again,
 To look his trouble in the face, it seemed
 What trouble, surely, will be bred;
 Night and day, I feel the trouble
 —Such din shall trouble them no more.
 Are not unused to trouble friends
 Some inward trouble suddenly
 Of trouble—but the fluttering breeze;
 A trouble, not of clouds, or weeping rain,
 Hath roamed in trouble and in grief,
 To trouble hours that winged their way,
 Why all this toil and trouble?
 And trouble from the soul.
 That trouble still is near.
 Nor yet of trouble and alarms:
 And all his trouble to the moon he told,
 That drove her as in trouble through the groves;
 And seemed to be a trouble to the peace.
 By day, and were a trouble to my dreams.
 For now a trouble came into my mind
 That thou, O Friend! the trouble or the calm
 Like one in trouble, for returning light,
 Not worth the trouble of a thought?—alas!
 Doubt shall be quelled and trouble chased away;
 Their foot-marks do not trouble me,

Troubled. Cloud-piercing pine-trees nod their troubled heads,
 Like sun-lit tempests, troubled transports roll;
 On the mute Image and the troubled walls.
 Moody, or inly troubled, would he seem
 Struck, and still struck again, the troubled horse:
 Of many things which never troubled me—
 Your natural breathing has been troubled. Nay,
 I've had the saddest dream that ever troubled
 When you had told him the mischance, was troubled
 Into deep chasms troubled by roaring streams;
 The wrong and the wrong-doer. You are troubled—
 He drew it from the troubled pool,
 Yet as the troubled seed and tortured bough
 Heard him, how he was troubled in his sleep:
 And, though little troubled with sloth,
 The old Man's shape, and speech—all troubled me:
 By ruder fancy, that a troubled ghost
 The throbbing pulse—else troubled without end:
 Owe to a troubled element their forms,
 Where these troubled waters roar!
 So have we hurried on with troubled pleasure:
 Guiding the mariner through troubled seas,
 Nought heard, of ocean troubled or serene?
 Mimicking a troubled sea,
 Troubled long with warring notions
 For me with sighs be troubled. Not from life
 In the brown park, in flocks, the troubl'd deer
 Nod the cloud-piercing pines their troubl'd heads, —Bursts from the troubl'd Larch's giant boughs
 Like lighted tempests troubled transports roll;
 And ebs unsteady on the troubled walls,
 And troubled pleasure, nor without the voice
 With them to take a troubled human heart,
 Was most inviting to a troubled mind;
 Like the fixed centre of a troubled world.
 He craved a substitute to troubled joy;
 Glares, like a troubled spirit, in its bed
 From out the bosom of these troubled times

Trouble-haunted. All now was trouble-haunted ground;
Troubler. The innocent troubler of their quiet, sleeps
Troubles. Have you forgot your own troubles
 My troubles, and beyond relief:
 Should troubles overflow on her from whom it came;
 And all old troubles now are ended.
 So were the hopeless troubles, that involved it
 Troubles and toils that every day prepares.
 Nor aught that troubles us, the fools of Nature.
 Once more of troubles wrought by magic spell;
 Shatters the air, and troubles tower and spire;
 And troubles that were each a step to Heaven:
 Provoked out of herself by troubles strange,
 And outward troubles, between man himself,
 Was added to the troubles of a time
 Before whose sight the troubles of this world
 Those troubles had appeased, he sought and gained,
 And reproduce the troubles he destroys.

Troublesome. When the troublesome Tempter beset us, said I,
 Shine hot, or wind blows troublesome and strong;
 And, for hunger and thirst and such troublesome
 calls,
 Over the billows of this troublesome world
Troublest. Thou troublest me with strange alarms; Troubling. And while around it storm as fierce seemed troubling earth and air,
 And the green, glided snake, without troubling the calm
 Troubling the last holds of ambitious Rome,
 For wholesome sadness, troubling to refine,
 Troubling a heart that had been long at rest.

Trouts. Large store of gleaming crimson-spotted trouts;
Trow. I'm as great as they, I trow,
 "My throat is cut unto the bone, I trow."
 And said, I am in constant dread I trow,
Troy. Her Hero slain upon the beach of Troy?
 'Unto the blood of Troy, I pray of thee,
 I might her see again coming to Troy!
 And shall, unless I see her soon in Troy,
 To Tyrians, and these exiles driven from Troy;
 And the great name of Troy; now all things pass
 By all that breathe in Troy, how tired and worn

Troynovant. In Troynovant, his seat by silver
 Thames's side!
Truant. Take care of him, and feed the truant well.
 So, truant in waste woods, the blithe Euphrosyne!
 And if to lure the truant back be well,
 They taught me random cares and truant joys,
 Or through her truant pathway's native charms,
 And glorifies the truant youth of Vannes.
 Keen as a Truant or a Fugitive,
 On the vague reading of a truant youth
 The bark was nibbled round by truant sheep.
Truants. That clung to Nature with a truant's love,
Truca. Even Joy could tell, Joy craving truce and rest
 A breathing-time, vacation, or a truce,
Trudge. Might trudge it alongside each other!"

Trudged. "And he had trudged through Yorkshire dales,

He trudged along through copse and brake
He trudged along o'er hill and dale;
True. Instructed that true knowledge leads to love;
True dignity abides with him alone
True sympathy the Sador's looks expressed,

And though for bridal wreaths and tokens true
A broken vow, or bind a true,
In every fibre true.
And a true master of the glowing strain,

Who, gathering true pleasures wherever they grow,
As a true man, who long had served the lyre,
"Ask not for whom, O Champions true!

True—continued.

Dark but to every gentle feeling true,
But most the Bard is true to inborn right,
The remnant of his days at least was true;
Small service is true service while it lasts:
Of tremulous admiration. Such true fame
May brighten more and more! True to the mark,
But Thou art true, incarnate Lord,

Whether he loved the mountains, true it is
'Tis true, hath in my walks been often heard,
With motions of true dignity and grace?
A true Community, a genuine frame
The sage has read the stars with skill so true,
True-love. Thus, from the heart of her True-love,

Trumpery. The "trumpery" that ascends in bare display—
Trumpet. See Speaking-trumpet.
 Blown to you from a trumpet. Why talk thus?
 The trumpet (we, intoxicated with pride,
 The Thing became a trumpet; whence he blew
 The trumpet blew a universal blast!
 But word was given, and the trumpet sounded:
 To hear the sanguinary trumpet sounded.
 The trumpet of the Living Word
 Sounding through Christian lands her trumpet, roused
 With flourishing trumpet, came in full-blown state
 And him who at the trumpet puffs his cheeks,
 By blast of trumpet? Plenteous was the growth
 And Gideon blew the trumpet, soul-inflamed,
 The heroic trumpet with the Muse's breath!
Trumpet's. As clear and bold as the trumpet's clang, Trumpets. And greet your sons! drums beat and trumpets blow!
 Shouts rise, and storms of sound from lifted trumpets blow!
 And blast of trumpets. He who hath been doomed
 The cataracts blow their trumpets from the steep;
Trumpet-tones. Those trumpet-tones of harmony that shake
Trumpet-wearied. And to the soldier's trumpetwearied ear;
Trunk. Gracefully up the gnarled trunk; nor left us unsurveyed
 For, deftly framed within the trunk, the sanctuary showed,
 Huge trunks! and each particular trunk a growth
 Haunts the old trunk; lamenting deeds of which
 And useless arms, a trunk of man,
 By skeleton arms, that, from the mountain's trunk
 Further to force their way, endowed its trunk
 Upon a pine-tree's storm-uprooted trunk,
 To his huge trunk, or, with more subtle art,
 Round the decaying trunk of human pride,
 That, round his trunk and branches, might have clung
 With sinuous trunk, houghs exquisitely wreathed,
 The trunk and every master branch were green
 A travelling cripple, by the trunk cut short,
 Who trembled, trunk and limbs, like some huge oak
 By dances round its trunk.—And if the sky
 The trunk and body of its marvellous strength,
 Around whose trunk the maidens dance in May—
Trunk's. High on the trunk's projecting brow, Trunks. Huge trunks! and each particular trunk a growth
 That chooses to be reared upon their trunks.
 Of the rude pile; as oftentimes trunks of trees
Trust. Bidding me trust in God, he stood and prayed:—
 Out of that deed. My trust, Saviour! is in thy name!
 I dare not trust myself with such a thought—
 You will be firm; but though we well may trust
 But yet I trust, Idonea, thou art safe.
 He that puts his trust in me shall not fail!
 In this deep sorrow, trust, that I am thine
 Were natural enough; but that, I trust,
 That now I should restore what hath been held in trust!
 I trust it is,—and never dry:
 I may not trust thy placid cheer!
 Urged her steps; she shrunk from trust
 And trust me, on some sultry noon,
 "Trust, angry Bard! a knowing Sprite,
 Had heretofore, in humble trust,
 Yet, trust the Muse, it rather hath
 Of kindness and of love. Nor less, I trust,
 Trust in that sovereign law can spread
 Becoming thoughts, I trust, of solemn gloom
 To trust a Poet in still musings bound.
 And trust that spiritual Creatures round us move,
 Has sown as yields, we trust, the fruit of fame
 The Child; when she can trust her eyes,
 (Penance their trust, and prayer their store;)
 With local sanctities in trust,
 The Land we from our fathers had in trust,
 Their God, and placed their trust in human pride!
 A Pile that Grace approves, and Time can trust
 Where simple Sufferers bend, in trust
 Nor is least pleased, we trust, when golden beams,
 By conflict, and their opposites, that trust
 Fulfilment; but, we trust, her upward track
 All trust abandoned in the healing might . . .
 Drove from itself, we trust, all frightful gloom.
 Our noblest blood is given in trust,
 "Then Francis answered—'Trust thy Son,
 Our mortal ken! Inspire a perfect trust
 Suppliants! the God to whom your cause ye trust
 The prayers, the contrite struggle, and the trust . . .

 With morals, trusting, in contempt or fear
 Yea, trusting in God's holy aid,
 Trusting himself to the earth, and God.
 The Standard trusting to the care
 Trusting in hope that Others may advance
 Our Church prepares not, trusting to the might
 Now dupes me, trusting to an anxious eye

 Trusting ourselves, we wound from crag to crag,
 And trusting only to his own weak hands,
 Trusting her child, she left their common home,

Trusts—continued.

When novel trusts by folly are betrayed,—
To that complexion brought which prudence trusts
Trusty. Who, out of many, chose the trusty boy
Soon returned a trusty Page
He paces on, a trusty Guide,—
He left a trusty guide for one

Along the lane the trusty Ass
Of trusty anchorage, or scudding o'er
So have I done; as trusty as thy barge
Were mine the trusty staff that Jewel gave
The adventurous stranger's steps, a trusty guide;

Truth. See Gospel-truth.

Harmonious thoughts, a soul by truth refined,
And I in truth did love him like a brother,
Forgone the home delight of constant truth,
There must be truth in this. Truth in his story!
At Herbert's door. Ay; and if truth were known
Of truth, enough to dazzle and to blind,
Yes, loves him; 'tis a truth that multiplies
The truth shall be laid open, his guilt proved
The truth is hideous, but how stifle it?
That she revealed the truth. Stand by me now;
You are now in truth my Master; you have taught me
Truth—and I feel it. What! if you had bid
The beauty of truth— I see I interrupt you;
Thy curse is fixed; the truth must be laid bare.
Whose impious folds enwrapped even thee; and truth
I shall tell you truth. A Lamb

Yet your conclusion wanders from the truth:
The while on thee they gaze in simple truth,
Dear Maid, this truth believe.
Yet how?—for I, if there be truth
No truth is in them who say so!
For endless constancy, and placid truth;
Divine, of swearing everlasting truth.
None will reproach you, for our truth is known;
It is in truth an utter solitude;
Smiled in my face) this were in simple truth
As when he shines above it. 'Tis in truth
And Truth would skim the flowery glade,
In truth a favoured plant!
And transient feignings with plain truth
At thorns, and brakes, and brambles,—and in truth
In truth, you'd find it hard to say
Elt countenance for the soul of primal truth;
Obeyed a summons covetous of truth.
That truth informing mind and heart,
Truth shows a glorious face,
But to recall the truth by some faint trace

Of divine Love, where Wisdom, Beauty, Truth
Of fable, though to truth subservient, bear
O for a balance fit the truth to tell
For, restless Wanderer! I, in truth,
In simple truth I cannot tell;
In truth the prison, unto which we doom
Hence, if in freedom I have loved the truth;
A truth which they alone shall comprehend
The air of liberty, the light of truth;
To life thou art, and, in thy truth, how dear!
Here by thy pencil shown in truth of lines
I see its truth with unreluctant eyes;
Be turned; and streams of truth dried up, even at their source!
If in this book Fancy and Truth agree;
On humble truth.
For it may be proclaimed with truth,
In truth together do ye seem
Of admiration sprung from truth;
When truth, when sense, when liberty were flown,
Who, taking counsel of unbending Truth,
The truth should now be better understood;
Of fiercely-breathing war, The truth was felt
Never may from our souls one truth depart—
Now (for, though Truth descending from above
To warn the living; if truth were ever told
Feels, and hereafter shall the truth declare,
The citadels of truth;
The life, the truth, the beauty: she confides
The measure, simple truth to tell,
But Truth inspired the Bards of old
The announcement of the dreadful truth
How blest (if truth may entertain
Missed not the truth, retains a single name
You petty Steep in truth the fearful Rock,
Know them no more. If Truth, who veiled her face
From what a precious source of truth it came.

To vindicate the majesty of truth,
Implanted like a Fortress, as in truth
And its truth who shall doubt? for his Spirit is here;
Of faithful love, undaunted truth,
With truth, or with each other, decked remains
Thus everywhere to truth Tradition clings,

Truth—continued.

For, spite of sober Truth that sees
And thought endure thee with all truth—
He spake bare truth; for far and near
The voice restored, the eye of Truth
And sorrow of this final truth!
And still, 'mid yon thick woods, the primal truth
That heresies should strike (if truth be scanned
Truth, their immortal Una? Babylon,
Sits there in sober truth—to raise the low,
In the blest soil of gospel truth, the Tree,
Hailed from aloft those Heirs of truth divine
Is by these shocks exhausted, spiritual truth
By truth, shall spread, throughout the world dispersed.

And worship him in spirit and in truth.
Of truth) are met by fulminations new—
The truth exploring with an equal mind,
Yet Truth is keenly sought for, and the wind
Led by her own free choice. So Truth and Love
Do Thou, in truth a second Mother, strive
Two aspects bears Truth needful for salvation;
Ere nightfall—truth that well may claim a sigh,
Truth fails not; but her outward forms that bear
Of sacred truth may enter—till it brood
Of simple truth with grace divine imbued;
Of sky should be in truth the steadfast face
Where lies the truth? has Man, in wisdom's creed,

Of Truth and Beauty, strives to imitate,
Let Truth, stern arbitress of all,
With truth, "THE MAGISTRACY SHOWS THE MAN;"
Of valour, truth, and love.
Truth breathed by cheerfulness.
Comes to me not; malignant truth, or lie.
Of truth and pure delight by heavenly lays!
For spreading truth, and making love expand.
Be on them; who, in love and truth,
And in the light of truth thy Bondman let me live!
Deserves the name (this truth the billows preach)
And consecrate our lives to truth and love.
Making a truth and beauty of her own;

As Truth herself, whom they profess to seek.
The truth that Britain was his native land;
To this plain truth, or fling it to the wind;
To hope, and makes truth willing to be seen!
With its soft smile the truth express,
A British Painter (eminent for truth
They are in truth the Substance, we the Shadows."
And Truth, whose eye guilt only can make dim;
One who would gather from eternal truth,
So shall the truth be better understood,
And, serving Truth, the heart more strongly beats
This humble offering made by Truth to Love,

To truth and sober reason blind,
Receive the curb of sacred truth,
To follow truth, is eloquent as they.
What is truth?—a staff rejected;
What need is there against the truth to strive?
And that the very truth it is which I
Yet for all that, the truth is found elsewhere;
Within this court full seldom Truth avails,
To think upon my truth and steadfastness,
To be a Prodigal's Favourite—then, worse truth,

"I AM THE WAY, THE TRUTH, AND THE LIFE."
And seen the soul of truth in every part,
While truth and love their purposes fulfil,
And poured out truth in works by thoughtful love
For much that truth most urgently required
But more in show than truth; and from the fields,
Whether he traced historic truth, with zeal
Begins, and Love and Truth compose her train;
In the bright paths of fair majestic Truth:
To court majestic truth, or wake the golden lyre;
Fair to the view is sacred Truth display'd,
Firm in the sacred paths of moral truth,
Our truth, when we, old yet unchilled by age,
But truth divine has sanctified their rage,
Where science, leagued with holier truth,
To patient courage and unblemished truth,
Of Truth that cherishes our daily life;
Simplicity and self-presented truth.
If so he might, to duty and to truth
Science appears but what in truth she is,
My own enjoyments; or the power of truth
The truth in solitude, and, since the days
Bear witness Truth, endowed with holy powers
To such community with highest truth—
This is, in truth, heroic argument,
Stood almost single; uttering odious truth—
Of others but my own; I should, in truth,
Before antiquity and steadfast truth
This truth escaped me not, and I confess,
Lovers of truth, by penury constrained,
Whether of truth or virtue, to ensue.
And Decency and Custom starving Truth,
I cannot say what portion is in truth
Yes, all the adamantine holds of truth

Tumbler. Prettiest Tumbler ever seen !
Tumblers. Equestrians, tumblers, women, girls, and boys,
 Heels over head, like tumblers on a stage.
Tumbles. Tumbles, the wildering Thunder slips abroad ;
Tumbling. Where, tumbling from aloft, a torrent swelled
Tumult. The tumult of a tropic sky,
 Where is the throng, the tumult of the race ?
 The depth, and not the tumult, of the soul ;
 One who was suffering tumult in his soul
 Yet see (the mighty tumult overpast)
 Dot-d-dead, shocks of tumult, shrieks of crime,
The oppression of the tumult—wrath and scorn—
 As if the tumult, by the Almighty's will While plovers screamed with tumult harsh
 'Mid tumult and uproar this man must repose ;
 Into the tumult sent an alien sound
 A ground of tumult. Duly were our games
 'Mid gloom and tumult, but no less 'mid fair
 Tumult and peace, the darkness and the light—
 And all unfit for tumult or intrigue,
 Tumult was therefore gladness, and the fear
 And the world's tumult unto me could yield,
 Expressed the tumult of their minds, my voice
 Amid the deafening tumult, scarcely heard
 His desperate course of tumult and of glee.
Tumulte. For treasons, tumults, and for wars ?
 Ours tumults appeased, and our strifes passed away !
 The mighty tumults of the House of Keys ;
Tumultuous. Up the tumultuous brook of Green-head Ghyll,
 Near the tumultuous brook of Green-head Ghyll,
 Tumultuous harmony and fierce !
 Not Love, not War, nor the tumultuous swell
 And each tumultuous working left behind .
 Tumultuous noises filled the hall ;
 Glanced sideway, leaving the tumultuous throng,
 From a tumultuous ocean, trees and towers
 With a tumultuous waste of huge hill tops
Tunable. Most tunable. In faith, a pleasant scheme ;
 A humming sound, less tuneable than bees,
Tune. Her Messenger 's in merry tune ;
 First uttering, without words, a natural tune ;
 Mounts with a tune, that travels like a blast
 For this, for everything, we are out of tune ;
 Roused into fury, murmur a soft tune
 The Minstrels played their Christmas tune
 And seldom hath ear listened to a tune
 This water's pleasant tune
 We act as if we joyed in the sad tune
 Tune in the mountain dells their water lyes.
 Who entered, humming carelessly a tune,
 Must tune his pipe, insidiously to nurse
Tuneable. See Tunable.
Tuned. Forced from that voice so lately tuned to a strain
 They shall be tuned to love.
 His heart lay open ; and, by nature tuned
 Where mild enthusiasts tuned a pensive lay Tuneful. Her tuneful adoration !
 A tuncful offering for the weal .
 The owls in tuncful concert strive ;
 Leamed from the tuncful spheres that glide
 To tuncful tongues in mystery versed ;
 Mount, tuncful Bird, and join the immortal quires !
 Not these alone inspire the tuncful shell ;
 To Nature's tuncful quire, this rustling dry
 And from one voice a Hymn with tuncful sound
 He paid to Nature tuncful vows ;
 Apt language, ready as the tuncful notes
 A harp that tuncful prelude made
 Of tuncful Caves and playful Waterfalls—
 Chanting in barbarous ears a tuncful prayer—
 The Ghost of Hingal to ears tuncful Cave
 That wastes so oft, we think, its tuncful powers,
 Of words in tuncful order, found them sweet
 Erewhile my tuncful haunt ? It pleased me more
 With tuncful him is filling all the air .
 Which, in his tuncful course, the wind draws forth
 Not unaccompanied with tuncful notes
 Softly accompanied the tuncful harp,
 Methinks I could repeat in tuncful verse,
Tunefully. How tunefully the forests ring !
Tunes. " Feeling tunes your voice, fair Princess !
 That tunes on Duddon's banks her slender voice.
 Of harder tunes was played to cheer
 Though blind, thy tunes in sadness hum
 Stretched under wayside hedge-rows, ballad tunes,
 Of music, martial tunes, and banners spread,
 And whistled many a snatch of merry tunes
 An interchange of soft or solemn tunes,
Tunic. But, faith, to see him in his silken tunic,
Turban. An ill-adjusted turban, for defence
Turbaned. The turbaned Race are poured in thickening swarms Turbid. Pours on the surface of the turbid Stream !
Turbulence. Then, in the turbulence of glee,
 Its dizzy turbulence eludes the eye,

Turbulence—continued.
 Or fashioned by the turbulence of waves,
 And faculty for storm and turbulence,
 For that from turbulence and heat
 By Nature ; by the turbulence subdued
 And turbulence of murmuring cities vast ;
 Of turbulence, anxiety, and fear—
Turbulent. Of pleasure high and turbulent,
 To overawe the turbulent,
 As by a spirit turbulent ;
 And wider range to passions turbulent,
 In that enormous City's turbulent world
 Into the midst of turbulent events ;
 His coiled-up prey with barking turbulent.
 Whether their course be turbulent or smooth,
 Bleak season was it, turbulent and bleak,
 Hath dealt with me as with a turbulent stream,
Turf. See Mountain-turf.
 Ere long, from heaps of turf, before their sight,
 Tombstone nor name—only the turf we tread
 That he had seen this heap of turf before,—
 Dear consolation, kneeling on the turf .
 Of weed and sapling, along soft green turf
 And though the jealous-turf refuse
 Off on the dappled turf at ease .
 And planted where thy hoofs the turf have grazed,
 The grove, and stained the turf with gore ;
 As fitly spring from turf the mourner weeps on—
 The turf unites, the pathways intertwine ;
 That Pile of Turf is half a century old :
 As they from turf yet hoar with sleepy dew
 Whose turf may never know the care
 Which faction breeds ? the turmoil where, that passed
 Smooth space of turf which from the guardian fort
 Sloped seaward, turf whose tender April green,
 Tells that their turf drank purple from the veins .
 The spangled turf, and neighbouring thickets ring
 The dewy turf with flowers bestrown ;
 The turf, and thought by thought was chased,
 Nor on the lonely turf that showed
 The encircling ground, in native turf arrayed,
 The encircling turf into a barren clod ;
 (Still marked with green turf circles narrowing
 And from the turf a fountain broke,
 A pile beforehand, turf or stick,
 Is a cart-load of turf at an old woman's door ?
 Its green untrodden turf, and blowing flowers ;
 The gilded turf arrays in richer green
 Among the smooth green turf. Through half the night,
 Almost as silent as the turf they trod,
 A holy scene !—Along the smooth green turf
 They move about upon the soft green turf :
 In the wild turf : the lingering dews of morn
 Wetting the turf with never-ending tears .
 As aromatic flowers on Alpine turf,
 And when I saw the turf that covered him,
 And iron case were gone ; but on the turf,
 For instantly a light upon the turf
 For languid steps that by the slippery turf
 Hollow and green, he lay on the green turf
 The turf of yon large pasture will be skimmed ;
 With mimic trees inserted in the turf,
 On the green turf following the vested Priest,
 Had clomb aloft to delve the moorland turf
 Clouds, mists, streams, watery rocks and emerald
 turf,
 On these soft beds of thyme-besprinkled turf,
 Of mossy turf defended from the sun,
 On the green turf, a dial—to divide
 While, listening, he had paced the noiseless turf,
 That overspread and chilled the sacred turf,
 Beneath this turf lie mouldering at our feet ;
 Of mountain turf required the builder's hand .
 And mantled o'er with aboriginal turf
 And on the very turf that roofs her own,
 Now she is not ; the swelling turf reports
 Caught from the pressure of elastic turf
 On the green turf, with his imperial front .
 Lie loose on the bare turf, some half-overgrown
Turf-bull. To weather-fend a little turf-bull seat
Turf-clad. Upon the turf-clad he lies
 And on your turf-clad graves !
 Upon a semicircle of turf-clad ground,
Turf's. Strewing the turf's green slope. A diamond
 light .
Turk. The Jew ; the stately and slow-moving Turk,
 Here reigns the Russian, there the Turk ; observe Turks. By Christian disturbers more savage than Turks,
Turmoil. From turmoil, who would turn or speed
 The turmoil hushed, celestial springs
 Hear and repeat, the turmoil that unites
 Into the turmoil, bore a sounder judgment
Turn. Turn to a silent smile their sleepy cry,
 Last, let us turn to Chamouny that shields
 Concealed some cottage, whither he might turn
 Well ! they might turn a beggar from their doors,
 I had as lief turn to the Friar's school .
 Felt warm as a wren's nest. You'd better turn

Turn—continued.

Which way soe'er I turn, I am perplexed. . . .
Now may I perish if this turn do more
Work on her nature, and so turn compassion
Will turn perforce and seek for sympathy
Who will turn pale upon you, call you murderer,
Substitutes, turn our faces where we may,
he strove to turn from me
Ay—you may turn that way—it is a grave
Turn from me, gentle Love! nor let me walk

Turn rather, though I love her well :
And all uncertain whither he should turn,
How turn to left, and how to right,
Which way to turn she cannot tell.
If from the public way you turn your steps
At gate or gap, to stem or turn the flock;
And of this moment; hither turn thy thoughts,
And one chance look to These should turn,
Swiftly turn the murmuring wheel!
Turn the swift wheel round and round!
Can turn to little things; but once
One after One they take their turn, nor have I one espied

Nor turn thy face away
From turmoil, who would turn or speed
A reconciling thought may turn
Not only stop but turn, and change
And, grinning in his turn, his teeth
That served my turn, when following still
Turn to him, seek him day and night,
When will she turn, and whither? She will brook
Teaching the docile waters how to turn,
All turn, and court the shining and the green,
Do thou, in turn, be paramount; and rule
"What'er be tide, we'll turn aside,
Nor turn aside to Yarrow.
But, though so near, we will not turn
To the paternal floor; or turn aside,

Turn from the fortified and threatening hill,
But from our course why turn—to tread
—Oh what a spectacle at every turn
Thus, if from two fair eyes mine cannot turn,
And loosened from the world, I turn to Thee;
That he would turn to Christ our Lord,
Of things that may to gladness turn this weeping.
Turn from the sight, enamoured Muse—we must;
Turn into port; and, reckless of the gale,
That thought away, turn, and with watchful eyes
Turn towards the spot where, full in view,
Nor did he turn aside to prove
All efforts that would turn aside
Turn from us all the coming woe :
How happy in his turn to meet
The unarmed Host who by their prayers would turn
My feet would rather turn—to some dry nook
And turn the instruments of good to ill,
Amazement strikes the crowd: while many turn
The threshold, whither shall they turn to find
Remotest lands and unborn times shall turn,
Turn to minuter changes at our feet;
Homeward we turn. Isle of Columba's Cell,
O turn aside,—and take, I pray,
Her hope is near: no turn she makes;
If but to God we turn, and ask
That civic strife can turn the happiest hearth
Nor turn aside, unless to shape a way
But turn, my Soul, and from the sleeping pair
Nor will he turn his ear aside
Fond fancies! whereso'er shall turn thine eye
As oft befalls, prevent or turn aside
Deed and intent, should turn the Being adrift
Turn from a spot where neither sheltered road
Thither your eyes may turn—the Isle is passed

away;
May turn indifference to pride;
But turn we from these "bold bad" men;
Turn a broad front full on his flattering beams:
Ere he has passed the door, will turn away,
And each, in his turn, becomes leader or led;
But turn we rather, let my spirit turn
Turn whereso'er I may,
Hence shall we turn where, heard with fear afar,
Last let us turn to where Chamoumy shields,
The wretch on his pallet should turn,
Then every chief in turn the beverage quaff'd.
Are mine in prospect; whither shall I turn,
Of a known Vale, whither my feet should turn,
To others, all supplanted in their turn;
A passenger approaching, he would turn
To turn from present hardships to the past,
Of freedom which encouraged me to turn
And in the narrow rent at every turn
Turn where I might, was opening out its glories,
Escaped as from an enemy, we turn
In turn its visitant, telling there his hours
These fictions, as in some sort, in their turn,
And from the driving current should we turn
Nor turn of sentiment that might be named
To turn all judgments out of their right course;

Turn—continued.

But now, become oppressors in their turn,
Is seen, heard, felt, and caught at every turn,
Are conversant, subservient in their turn
But much was wanting; therefore did I turn
Which lacked not voice to welcome me in turn :
When thou dost to that summer turn thy thoughts,
Must turn elsewhere—to travel near the tribes
Incessantly to turn his ear and eye
That made him turn aside from wretchedness
Would turn without an errand his slack steps;
From natural wisdom turn our hearts away;
The little child who sate to turn the wheel
Turn whereso'er we would, he was a light
Like human life from darkness."—A quick turn
To turn a slender mill (that new-made plaything)
Their aspects lend, and mingle in their turn
With brotherly resemblance. Turn your steps
Substantial, and all crumbling in their turn,
Or, if the mind turn inward, she recoils
His natural wings!—To friendship let him turn
Of death and night, has caught at every turn
By war, might, if so minded, turn aside
Of truth and justice. Turn to private life
The old Man's cheek; but, at this closing turn
I turn, and reach at last the guiding light;
The edge of adverse circumstance, and turn
Reading, where'er we turn, of innocent lives,
"Here rests a Mother. But from her I turn
The never-baiting time; or, in her turn,
This keen Destroyer, in his turn, must fall.
From-Age," the Priest continued, "turn your thoughts

Are profitless to others. Turn we thea
They cannot lean, nor turn to their own hearts
To labour for them; bringing each in turn
"Turn where we may," said I, "we cannot err
Fainted with fear. Thrice did he turn his face
Like a frail Bark, weary I turn to Thee,—

Turned. At once to pillars turned that flame with gold :

With indignation turned himself away,
He turned, while rain poured down smoking on every side.
To him we turned:—we had no other aid:
"No help I sought; in sorrow turned adrift,
Have I!"—She ceased, and weeping turned away;
With face to earth; and, as the boy turned round
What she had seen and suffered turned her brain.
I turned me from the dwellings of my Fathers,
Saw him—his face turned toward me; and I tell
thee
And, whereso'er I turned me, I beheld
When from these forms I turned to contemplate .
Now with her empty can the Maiden turned away:
He to the solitary church-yard turned;
His thoughts were turned on Leonard's luckless fortune,

As the Priest lifted up the latch, turned round,—
By his ungrateful daughters turned adrift.
And she I cherished turned her wheel
He saw me, and he turned aside,
Turned upon her who bore him, she would stoop
Life turned the meanest of her implements,
Perhaps he's turned himself about
And gently turned the Pony's head
She turned, she tossed herself in bed,
Turned to the cleanly supper-board, and there,
He stood alone; whereto he turned his head
And from the gate the Pilgrim turned,
He turned, and watched with kindred look
Can destiny be turned aside?
A nutting-crook in hand; and turned my steps
Ere from the mutilated bower I turned Such small machinery as she turned
I turned about and heard her cry,
Be turned to heaviness and fear.
How oft, in spirit, have I turned to thee,
How often has my spirit turned to thee!
Where'er he turned, a natural grace
Where'er he turned, a swan-like grace
And turned the thistles of a curse
Turned round his long left ear,
The patient Beast on Peter turned
He turned the eye-ball in his head
To the blind work he turned again.
He will be turned to iron soon,
That earnest Creature turned away,
And to his book he turned again;
The Ass turned round his head and grined.
Now, turned adrift into the past,
Turned towards a gate that hung in view
I turned to share the transport—Oh! with whom
We turned, departing from that solemn sight:
Back turned, arms folded, the unapparent face
Be turned; and streams of truth dried up, even at their source!
Sighing I turned away; but ere Twice-glorified fields! if in sadness I turned

Of his last going from Tweed side, thought turned,

Turned—continued.

Turned to humbler delights, in which youth might confide,
 And turned his eagles back with deep-drawn sighs:
 To mortals, joy is turned to sorrow;
 Abashed, Sir Dinas turned away;
 Her silence; then his thoughts turned round,
 To him the Lady turned; "You said
 And turned away from thee, my Son!
 Turned to a fearful Thing whose nostrils breathe
 Her blessings cursed—her glory turned to shame!
 He, in disgust, turned from the neighbouring sea
 Who faltered not, nor turned aside;
 When with her load she turned about,
 And icy cold he turned away.
 His eyes are turned, and, as he moves along,
 Turned his back on the country—and off like a bird.
 Who checked or turned thy headstrong youth,
 Give, when your thoughts are turned this way,
 And with a deep sadness I turned, to repair
 Or not far off. Where'er my footsteps turned,
 Strode after me. With trembling oars I turned,
 From these I turned to travel with the shoal.
 I turned my head to look if he were there;
 The hook, had turned my eyes toward the wide sea.
 A few short months before. I turned my face
 When from the Vallais we had turned, and clomb
 At full command, to London first I turned,
 Behold, turned upwards, a face hard and strong
 Turned this way—that way I sportive and alert
 Caught by the spectacle my mind turned round
 I had my face turned toward the truth, began
 Of her distress, was known to have turned her steps
 She was, and with her ready pupil turned
 From those sad scenes when meditation turned,
 Turned and returned with intricate delay.
 Exposed to eye and hand where'er I turned.
 To animate the mind that ever turned
 Had seen the anticipated quarry turned
 Of Orleans eagerly I turned; as yet
 That very morning had I turned aside
 Oft, as my thoughts were turned to human kind,
 Out of a heart that had been turned aside
 But turned to abstract science, and there sought
 And, turned into a gewgaw, a machine,
 That, with believing eyes, where'er I turned,
 Turned toward the sun then setting, while that staff
 Turned inward; or at my request would sing
 From ill-requited labour turned adrift
 A little while; then turned her head away
 Binding the lower pannels, I turned aside,
 Was wasted.—Back I turned my restless steps;
 I turned, and saw her distant a few steps;
 I turned aside in weakness, nor had power
 Upon the breast of Faith. I turned away,
 To what odd purpose have the darlings turned
 That it is ended." At these words he turned—
 Who to the Solitary turned, and said,
 Full on that tender-hearted Man he turned
 Turned inward,—to examine of what stuff
 Which turned an angry beak against the down
 Were turned on me—the face of her I loved;
 This answer followed.—"You have turned my thoughts
 You turned; and yet more pleased have from your lips
 Then to the Solitary turned, and spake.
 Thither we turned; and gathered, as we read,
 Turned towards the planet Jupiter that hung
 I turned, that ye in mind might witness where,
 He turned to this secluded chapelry;
 The pining Solitary turned aside.
 To which his peaceful fancy oft had turned,
 That tires not, nor betrays. Our life is turned
 Were turned to evils that are new and chosen,
 Nor think that they are victims—turned to wrongs,
 I grieve not," to the Pastor here he turned,
 On us the venerable Pastor turned.
 But turned not without welcome promise made
 Their skeletons, turned to brilliant ornaments.
 Turned into blood before her heart-sick eye.
Turn'st. Thou turn'st the Wheel that slept with dust o'erspread;
Turning. See Up-turning.
 Turning past pleasures into mortal pains;
 Outstretched, and turning on a restless bed;
 They wept—and, turning homeward, cried,
 Her large round wheel was turning. Towards the field
 By turning o'er these hillocks one by one,
 At length I to a sudden turning came
 Turning blossoms inside out;
 "You screech-owl," says the Sailor, turning
 Turning them inside out with arch audacity.
 When, turning round his head, he sees
 Two Brothers clomb, and, turning face from face,
 She safe, from notice turning not away,
 Turning, for them who pass, the common dust
 The Assaultants, turning round and round;
 "And, turning from her grave, I met,
 To see Presumption, turning pale, refrain

Turning—continued.

Turning with quiet touch the valley's hay,
 More often turning to some gentle place
 Or turning the mind into upon herself,
 Shown by a sudden turning of the road,
 "You," to the Pastor turning thus he spake, Turnings. And, through the turnings intricate of verse,
Turnips. And turnips, and corn-land, and meadow,
 and lea,
Turns. Winds met in conflict, each by turns supreme;
 He turns his face to heaven. But why so violent
 Something I strike upon which turns my mind
 That turos its goat's-beard flakes of pea-green moss
 The Mother, in her turns of anguish, worse
 He's at the guide-post—he turns right;
 And to the road she turns her ears,
 Turns to a little tent hard by:
 The various turns of Cmsoc's fate)—
 Turns round his long left ear.
 Into a thicket turns aside,
 So with his freight the Creature turns
 Nor once turns round his head to crop
 He turns aside his head, he pauses;
 And Peter turns his steps aside
 I have thought of all hy turns, and yet do lie
 And more would grieve, but that it turns
 Thy presence turns the scale of doubtful fight,
 Nor turns, nor winds, as doth the liquid flood;
 Still as he turns, the charmed spectator sees
 In every Roman, through all turns of fate,
 From chosen comrade turns, or faithful friend—
 But quick the turns of chance and change,
 Realms quake by turns: proud Arhitrress of grace,
 Under the holy fear of God turns pale;
 That we, who contemplate the turns of life
 Turns his necessity to glorious gain;
 Bent in quick turns each other to undo,
 Through the quick turns of many a hollow nook,
 She turns her wheel, if on the road she sees
 Turns with less noisy wheels to the roadside,
 Death, as she turns her neck the kaisy to seek,
 There turns for glad repose the weary eye;
 She views the gifts; upon the child then turns
 Vain is her wish; where'er she turns she finds
 Turns recreate to her task; takes heart again,
 The head turns round and cannot right itself;
 Would, in their turns, lend ornaments and flowers
 Turns, and will measure back his course, far back,
 Amid the turns and counterturns, the strife
 No vain conceits; provokes to no quick turns
 Their soonest fails to please, and quickest turns
 Their leafy umbrage, turns the dusky veil
 Our inequest turns.—Accord, good Sir! the light
 But, in the quicker turns of the discourse,
 And, wheresoe'er the traveller turns his steps,
 That turns the multitude of dizzy wheels,
 And cannot come. The boy, where'er he turns,
 Or turns the godlike faculty of speech.
Turet. Though from the same grim turret fell
 But from the Castle turret blew
Turted. Of Cyhel's was seen, sublimely turtred!
 And one a turtred manorial hall
Turrs. Drops on the mouldering turret's head
 Or, not less pleased, lay on some turret's head,
Turrets. Those holy turrets tipped with evening gold,
 That, shaped like old monastic turrets, rise
 Thou sacred Pile! whose turrets rise
 Of turrets, and a clash of swords
 Those turrets tipp'd by hope with morning gold,
 Turrets and pinnacles in answering files,
Turtledove. The Turtledove replies:
Turtle-shell. The rarest was a Turtle-shell
 Still do they keep the Turtle-shell;
Tusa's. Or seek at eve the banks of Tusa's stream,
 Or charms that smile on Tusa's evening stream,
Tuscan. A Tuscan audience: but full soon was called Tusculum. Shall range of philosophic Tusculum;
Tusky. From which the tusky wild boar flies in fear;
Tut. What I am now— Praying or parleying?— tut!
 Tut! let them gabble till the day of doom.
Tutinary. Like a tutinary spirit
 Invoking Dion's tutinary care,
 With tutinary power,
 For tutinary service, thence had rolled,
 While, like a tutinary Power,
 With tutinary music, from all harm
 To watch again with tutinary love.
Tutor. Of light was there;—and thus did I, thy Tutor,
 To Tutor or to Tailor, as befell,
Tutored. See Ill-tutored.
 She trills her song with tutored powers,
 A light unknown to tutored elegance:
 To the first leagues of tutored passion climh,
 Where thoughtful Edwin, tutored in the school
 Whose infant soul was tutored to confide
 Here tutored for eternity.
 May in these tutored days no more be seen

Twelve years are past since we had tidings from him.

Twelvemonth. For any lady I have seen this twelvemonth. . . 870
Twelvemonth's. A twelvemonth's terror and distress! . . . S. 3. 431
Twelvemonths. But as a child of twelvemonths old or less, . . . 43
Twentieth. Alas! the twentieth April of his life Twenty. See Four-and-twenty, Two-and-twenty.
"The suns of twenty summers danced along,—
I'd wager on his life for twenty years.
Than twenty armies. How? The old blind Man,
Over your head twice twenty years must roll,
Strews twenty acres of good meadow-ground
As he were twenty fathoms underground,
Join twenty tapers of unequal height
For twenty lives. The daylight dawned, and now—
Through twenty seasons; but he had been reared
And in one night send twenty score of sheep
If he had one, the Youth had twenty homes.
As twenty days are now.
Though younger than himself full twenty years.
Whom he twenty winters tended,
Here are twenty souls happy as souls in a dream:
"Full twenty years are past and gone
Full twenty times was Peter feared
Some twenty fathoms under ground.
Not twenty paces from the door,
Like a maiden of twenty he trembles and sighs,
And in the press of twenty thousand thoughts,
"Not twenty years ago, but you I think
Tricks he has twenty,
Have driven him twenty miles." . . . 106
We were no saints at twenty, be it so;

'Twas. (Partial list.)

Should hold a place, as if 'twere rnbrry, . . . 38
'Twere wrong to trouble you. God speed you both. . . 41

'Twere—continued.

'Twere well in little, as in great, to pause,
Twice. Over your head twice twenty years must roll,
Twice did I spring to grasp his withered throat,
Twice had he been to me a father, twice
"Thou know'st that twice a day I have brought thee in this can
And twice in the day, when the ground is wet with dew,
"Thy limbs will shortly be twice as stout as they are now,
Twice every Sabbath-day.
Went twice two hundred yards or more,
Twice seven consenting years have shed
Thy fortunes, twice exalted, might provoke
Attained a stature twice a tall man's height,
Twice in a day it passed through his throat;
Twice as fast as before does his blood run about;
Nor has the rolling year twice measured,
While twice ten thousand corslets at the view
And twice five summers on my mind had stamped
Twice over with a male and female voice.
Fresh emptied of spectators. Twice five years
Our journey, and ere twice the sun had set
To thee unknown! Twice had the trees let fall
And twice ten thousand interests, do yet prize
The fruits of earth through space of twice ten years,
Suddenly then they disappeared: not twice
Had summer scorched the fields; not twice had fallen,
Twice-glorified. Twice-glorified fields! if in sadness
I turned Twig. Heaven grant that he spare but that one upright twig
From your bed an humbler flower, even for your sake!" . . . 139
The towering maize, and prop the twig . . . 342
The throng of rooks, that now, from twig or nest,
Stands a tall ash-tree; to whose topmost twig . . . 455
Twigs. Some limber twigs into a Cross, well-shaped with fingers nice, . . . 851
For you and your green twigs decoy . . . 91
Were only blossoms dropped from twigs . . . 150
Green twigs would pluck, as rapidly . . . 170
The budding twigs spread out their fan, . . . 479
With clustering ivy, and the lightsome twigs . . . 480
Kindled and burnt among the sapless twigs
Stripped of their leaves and twigs by hoary age,
Why, friend, to deck her supple twigs . . . 472
Upon thy chance-defilements—withered twigs
In the bare twigs, each little budding place . . . 479
Twilight. Where twilight glens endear my Esth-waite's shore,
And its own twilight softens the whole scene,
The half-seen form of Twilight roams astray;
A sympathetic twilight slowly steal,
Dim from the twilight, water's shaggy side,
Is gone, and twilight to the Mother's wish
Glimmering through the twilight pale;
By eyes and lingering twilight made!
Her eyes as stars of Twilight fair; . . . 233
Mercy from her twilight throne . . . 235
When twilight shades darken the mountain's head,
Watching the twilight smoke of cot or grange,
Hail, Twilight, sovereign of one peaceful hour!
By twilight premature of cloud and rain; . . . 262
Through twilight shades of good and ill
Its second twilight, and looks gay; . . . 265
Whereat a tender twilight streak
O'er twilight fields the autumnal gossamer?
Survives—the twilight of this day—
Observe how dewy Twilight has withdrawn
Then, Twilight is preferred to Dawn,
Mingling with night, such twilight to compose . . . 497

Upha. The KIRK OF UPHA to the pilgrim's eye
Umbrage. The skiffs, at anchor where with umbrage wide
 But a thick umbrage—checking the wild growth .
 By sheddings from the pining umbrage tinged
 Brightening the umbrage of her hair ;
 With trees, whose lofty umbrage met ;
 Through cloudy umbrage, well might that fair face,
 With their thin umbrage, on the stately roads
 Their leafy umbrage, turns the dusky veil
Umbrageous. At noontide from umbrageous walls
 The umbrageous woods are left—how far beneath !

The umbrageous Oak, in pomp outspread,
 Beneath the oaks' umbrageous covert, sown
Umbrella. As eagerly pursued; the umbrella spread Umfraville. Of Umfraville or Percy ere they marched Umfras. And Men alone are Empires. To the Camp
 Of angry empires, partial and unjust ;
Una. Like Una shining on her gloomy way,
 How Una, sad of soul—in sad attire,
 The gentle Una, of celestial birth,
 Then, with mild Una in her sober cheer,
 Truth, their immortal Una ? Babylon,
 And heavenly Una with her milk-white Lamb.
Unabated. Breathless as they, with unabated craving
 But leave me unabated trust in thee—
 Even to old age, with unabated charm
Unabating. That flowed awhile with unabating
 strength,
Unable. With her last words, unable to suppress
 Of vice—thenceforth unable to subvert
 Thus, and unable to complain, they fared,
 A task he was unable to perform.
 With his own mind, unable to subdue
 Mine was unable to attain. Immense
 Proved all unable to support the weight
Unacceptable. Unacceptable feelings of contempt, Unaccompanied. Not unaccompanied with tuneful notes
Unaccustomed. As it appears to unaccustomed eyes.
 On objects unaccustomed to the gifts Unacknowledged. Of unacknowledged weariness, I took
 His scorned, or unacknowledged, sovereignty.
Unadored. And for thy bounty wert not unadored
Unadulterate. In Gallic ears the unadulterate Word,
Unadulterated. Inspire ; through unadulterated ears
Unadvisedly. Not unadvisedly those secret springs
Unaffected. From unaffected contrast with the gloom
Unaffecteding. And unaffected manners might at once
 Unalred. "What could I do, unaided and unblest ?
 This by their own unaided might,
Unaimed. And unaimed prattle flying up and down ;
Unaired. The captive 'mid mad vaults ununsunned, unaired,
Unalarmed. Of careless youth, unburdened, un-alarmed.
 I pass them unalarmed. Not Chaos, not Unalterable. Behold the unalterable heart entire,
Unaltered. Did meet us with unaltered face,
 In Arcady, beneath unaltered skies,
Unambitious. Beside an unambitious hearth to sit
 In unambitious compass round thee spread,
 Where all his unambitious functions fail.
 Of public quiet ; unambitious Men,
 Extend through unambitious years to come,
 Triumphs of unambitious peace at home,
 Of unambitious piety he chose,
 Of nature's unambitious underwood,
 And faithful care of unambitious schools
Unambitiously. His name, and unambitiously relates Unamused. Not unamused.—But ridicule demands
Unanimity. Now walks in unanimity.
Unanswer'd. Save for that single cry, the unanswer'd bleat
Unappalled. Or 'mid the factious senate unappalled Unapparan. Back turned, arms folded, the unapparent face
 Though unapparent—like those Shapes distinct
 Which from the unapparent fount of glory
Unapprehensive. I speak, unapprehensive of contempt,
Unapproachable. Down to the unapproachable abyss,
 Else unapproachable, their buoyant way ;
 These forests unapproachable by death,
 And, from his Dwelling, unapproachable,
Unapproachd. Me, unapproachd by any friend,
Unappropriate. Yet still, though unappropriate Wild be none,
Unappropriated. With all its unappropriated good,
 A range of unappropriated earth,
 Expense of unappropriated earth,
Unarmed. Unarmed and naked will I go,
 In reverence, and unarmed, I bear
 Unarmed be followed to the field ;
 The unarmed Host who by their prayers would turn
Unasked. For unasked alms in pity given.

Unassisted. Not unassisted by the flattering stars,
 My unassisted heart is barren clay,
 Of all that unassisted I had marked
 Which unassisted reason's utmost power
Unassuaged. Till she, in jealous fury unassuaged,
Unassuming. Thou unassuming Common-place
 Kindly, unassuming Spirit !
 Upon the unassuming things that hold Unassured. From month to month trembling and unassured,
Unattended. That you should travel unattended,
 Lady !—
 Not less if unattended and alone
Unavailing. No unavailing tear.
 The pang of unavailing prayer ;
 That fills the Soul with unavailing ruth.
 With unavailing pity. Rich in love
Unavangaable. And unavengeable, defeated pride,
Unavanged. Wrongs unredressed, or insults unavenged
Unawares. Heard by his mother unawares !
 I saw a Man before me unawares :
 Would enter unawares into his mind,
 Due to this timely notice, unawares
 Conducted through those labyrinths, unawares,
 "In truth the threat escaped me unawares :
 Upon unwelcome things, which unawares
Unawed. Unbissed, unbewildered, and unawed ?
 Unchastened, unsubdued, unawed, unraised
Unbaffled. Unbaffled powers of vision hath prepared,
Unbarred. And found the door unbarred.
 Flew open, by an Angel's voice unbarred ?
 Through Moscow's gates, with gold unbarred,
 Free was it, and unbarred at either end.
 The cottage door was speedily unbarred, Unbashful. (Unbashful dwarfs each glittering at his post)
Unbecoming. "Abate this unbecoming pride,
 Not unbecoming, of grotesque device Unbedimmed. Eyes unbedimmed, see bloom that cannot fade, Unbegulled. Nor grieved to see (himself not unbe-guiled)—
 Youth, by pleasure unbegulled
Unbelied. If yet To-morrow, unbelied, may say,
Unbelieved. Some bitter wrong. Nor is it unbelieved, Unbeliever. So huge a host !—to tear from the Unbeliever
Unbending. By the unbending Parents of the Maid,
 Albeit of a stern unbending mind,
 Who, taking counsel of unbending Truth,
 Like saintly Fisher, and unbending More.
 I looked for counsel as unbending now ;
Unbends. "A cheerful smile unbends the wrinkled brow,
Unbenign. Of unbenign aversion or contempt, Unbent. Lay couched ; on him or his dread how unbent
 Unbent, which rather seemed to rise,
Unbereth. Is of the very footmarks unbereth Unbestowed. Comfort by prouder mansions unbes-towed
Unbetrayed. And I be unbetrayed, unbetrayed ; Unbewildered. Unbiassed, unbewildered, and un-awed ?
Unbiassed. Unbiassed, unbewildered, and unawed ?
Unbidden. Like an unbidden guest. Though day
 by day
 One tribute more : unbidden feelings start
 And some unbidden tears that rise
 Starts at the simplest sight th' unbidden tear, Unbind. If almighty grace through me thy chains unbind,
 The fetters of my tongue do Thou unbind,
 To bind, on apt suggestion, or unbind ;
 And the changes it brings had no power to unbind.
 Through earth and heaven to bind and to unbind !—
 Nor only palpable restraints unbind,
 He can make sick—bind to be and unbind
 Thy cherished fetters to unbind.
Unbinds. Evening now unbinds the fetters
 A subtle smell that Spring unbinds, Unblamed. Even so, and unblamed, we rejoice as we may
 Unblamed—if the Soul he intent on the day
 While ground was left for hope ; unblamed
 That ornament, unblamed, The floweret, held
 Unblamed, uninjured, let him bear about
 The imperfect record, there, may stand unblamed Unblemished. With fancied roses, than the unblemished moon
 The unblemished good they only can bestow.
 To patient courage and unblemished truth,
 As little as the unblemish'd Queen of Night,
Unblest. "What could I do, unaided and unblest ?
 Unblest distinction ! showered on me
 For thy unblest coevals, amid wilds
 In the open sunshine, or we are unblest :
 An unblest work ; who, standing by,
 A thoughtless Thing ! which, once unblest,
 And still be not unblest—compared Clasps in her arms, nor weens (O lot unblest !)

Unblest—continued.
Of the unblest; for he will surely sink
And yet in both rejoicing; man unblest;
Unblighted. Gathers unblighted strength from hour to hour.
Unblinded. To thee, unblinded by these formal arts, Unblushing. Ephemeral offspring of the unblushing world;
Unborn. Held that the unborn infant wrought
She called her babe unborn.
That neither present time, nor years unborn
Remotest lands and unborn times shall turn,
Creep round its arms through centuries unborn.
Of Beauties yet unborn—the rustic Lodge
The business of the day to come, unborn, Unborrowed. Unborrowed from the eye.—That time is past,
Unbosom. Unbosom their last mysteries.
Unbosoming. "And what if o'er that bright unbosoming
Warblers I heard their joy unbosoming
Unbought. By such examples moved to unbought pains,
Unbound. Bound himself, and then unbound;
How quickly from that airy hold unbound,
Unbound by pledge of fealty,
Transcendent over time, unbound by place,
Of revolution, impiously unbound!
All that he will have bound, or have unbound,
Whose fragrance, by soft dew and rain unbound, Unbounded. With new-born hope. Unbounded is the might
That less than power unbounded could not tame
To bliss unbounded, glory without end.
The unbounded might of prayer; and learned,
with soul
Strong and unbounded to embrace, and firm
Unbreathed. Unbreathed, unbreathed upon. Thrice happy quest,
Unbreathing. Stays it's low murmur in th' unbreath-ing vale;
Unbreathing Justice her still beam surveys;
As the unbreathing air, when not a leaf Unbreached. The One, yet unbreached, is not three birthdays old,
Unbridged. And unbridged stream, such as you may have noticed
And the rough bed of many an unbridged brook?
Crossing the unbridged stream, that road we took,
And o'er the brawling beds of unbridged streams.
Unbridled. 'Tis sense, unbridled will, and not true
love,
Lands deluged by unbridled floods;
Unbroke. The scene is waken'd, yet its peace un-broke,
Unbroken. Yet are they here the same unbroken knot
Distressed and harassed, but with mind unbroken:
To night, unbroken cheerfulness serene.
Changed, and the unbroken dream entangled me
As times of quiet and unbroken peace,
Unburdened. Of careless youth, unburdened, un-
alarmed,
Unburied. The unburied dead that lay in festering heaps,
Unburied, lay hid under heaps of slain;
Unburnished. Radiant all over with unburnished gold,
Unburnt. O bush unburnt! burning in Moses' sight!
Uncalled. That so a Church, unforced, uncalled to brook
Forgetfully; uncalled upon to pay
Eight hundred years uncalled to other tasks
Uncarested. Are by domestic pleasure uncarested Uncaught. Uncaught by processes in show humane,
Unceasing. Rain had fallen, unceasing rain,
Bound to thy service with unceasing care,
Perpetual emptiness! unceasing change!
A local summons to unceasing toil!
(Not less unceasing, not less vain than these),
Be sung with transport and unceasing joy.
Uncensored. Uncensored, and subsist, a scattered few Shall pass uncensored; though the issue prove, Unceremonious. Unceremonious greetings interchanged
Rang with its blunt unceremonious voice,
Uncertain. By an uncertain light revealed, that falls
Shy tenant, seeing by the uncertain light
And all uncertain whether he should turn,
Meanwhile, uncertain what to do,
With some uncertain notice, as might seem Uncertain what to choose and how to steer—
And her lips, quickening with uncertain red,
As we for most uncertain recompense
Uncertain thro' his fierce uncultur'd soul
And ebb' uncertain on the troubled walls,
Its woods, and that uncertain heaven, received
And that meanwhile, by no uncertain path,
Thither, uncertain on which road to fix
Is all uncertain: but, beloved Friend!
Unchangeable. Once more: but, if unchangeable her doom,

Unchanged. Of kindred permanence, unchanged in form
And fears of men, doth still remain unchanged)
Where earth is quiet and her face unchanged)
Unchanging. Lord of heaven's unchanging year!
Uncharitable. Uncharitable crossed his mind, no sense
Plagued with uncharitable thoughts the church;
And her uncharitable acts, I trust,
Unchartered. Me this unchartered freedom tires;
Unchastened. Unchastened, unsubsided, unawed, unraised
Unchecked. Perpetual fight, unchecked by earthly ties,
Heard them, unchecked by aught of saddening hue,
Unchecked he hurries on;—nor heeds
Unchecked as when by merry Outlaw driven,
In days when Fancy wrought unchecked by fear,
Unchecked by pride or scrupulous doubt,
Unchecked is that soft harmony:
With earnest pains unchecked by dread
With unchecked fancy ever on the stir,
That course unchecked, unerring, and untired,
Unchecked by innocence too delicate,
Unchecked, or loitered 'mid her sylvan comb's,
751 Prelude 14. 397
489 Spade 16
Uncheered. Is yet uncheered by other minstrelsy.
Yet cool the space within, and not uncheered Unchilled. Our truth, when we, old yet unchilled by age
A solitude, unchosen, unprofessed;
Unchristian. Flower of an unchristian sod!
Unclaimed. Those unclaimed garments telling a plain tale
Unclassic. The unclassic profanation.
Uncle. They had an uncle;—he was at that time
And, but for that same uncle, to this hour
Uncle's. And take up my Uncle's bow.
Unclosed. Unclosed the noble Francis lay—
Life's book for Thee may lie unclosed, till age
In which he sat alone, with unclosed eyes,
And by the unclosed coffin kept her seat
Unclosing. No fond hand left to staunch th' unclous-ing vein,
Unclouded. Of spring's unclouded weather,
He drooped, 'mid else unclouded victories,
And fond unclosed memory.
Where'er he moves along the unclouded sky,
Serene it was, unclouded by the cares
Beneath the concave of unclosed skies
At night's approach bring down the unclosed sky,
With undistempred and unclouded spirit,
Uncomplaining. Earthward in uncomplaining lan-guishment,
In quiet uncomplaining mood,
Upon the uncomplaining Doe
And with a quiet uncomplaining voice,
An uncomplaining apathy displaced
No harm, and uncomplaining as before
Unconcealable. With slow mutation unconcealable; Unconcern. With seeming unconcern and steady countenance
To a voluptuous unconcern, preferring
Unconcerned. All unconcerned by her dejected plight,
I stood, 'mid those concussions, unconcerned,
All unconcerned as he would bind a sheaf,
Unconfined. Till Rome, to silent marble unconfined,
A ghostly Domination, unconfined
Unconfirmed. Curling with unconfirmed intent, Unconforming. Those Unconforming; whom one rigorous day
Uncongenial. No uncongenial element; could here
Unconnected. Not unconnected with the tones
Unconquerable. The unconquerable strength of love;
And love, and man's unconquerable mind.
The unconquerable Stream his course pursue.
Things that aspire to unconquerable life;
The unconquerable pang of despised love.
Unconquerably. Unconquerably virtuous and secure.
Unconscious. The Sire, unconscious of his age,
Though not unconscious of self-blame;
To a palsied, and unconscious hand;
Blest be the unconscious shore on which ye tread,
As not unconscious with what power the thrill
For the unconscious Babe so prompt a love!—
Their wings to guard the unconscious Innocent—
Unconscious of its own untoward lot,
This little Niche, unconscious of decay,
Unconscious prelude to heroic themes,
I held unconscious intercourse with beauty
To an unconscious love and reverence
Those slender cords, to guide the unconscious Boy
The cross itself, at whose unconscious feet
For, not unconscious of the mighty debt
Antipodes unconscious of each other,
Than to be left unconscious of the woe.

676 Prelude 6. 104

Unconsciously. Even when unconsciously, to things removed Unconsoled. Therefore, not unconsoled, I wait—in hope Unconsuming. Burns, like an unconsuming fire of light.

Uncontrollable. The pride, the fury uncontrollable,
Watched every gesture uncontrollable,
Uncontrolled. With uncontrolled meanderings;
For her to move about in, uncontrolled.
Unconverted. The unconverted soul with awe submit.
Unscrupled. Joys only given to unscrupled hearts.
Uncounted. Surviving comrade of uncounted hours,
Uncounted months are gone,
Uncounted the best fruits of Time's uncounted hours, Uncountenanced. Unseconded, uncountenanced;
then, as time
Unepoch. Some unepoch superstition of its own.
Wild beasts, or unepoch savages impure!
That in our ancient unepoch country style
Some unepoch name upon the native rock,
By a memorial name, unepoch indeed
Object unepoch! and yet our boast,
His speech with unepoch terms of art,
He hears an unepoch sound—
Unepoch the workmanship, and rude!
An unepoch Chronicle of glorious years.
Unwelcome mixtures as the unepoch noise
Unepoch proximities of old and new;
For lo! an unepoch melancholy sight—

Such unepoch singing verily dost thou make.
Unepoch assemblage was it, where no few
In unepoch race, and left the cross-legged knight,
Sound there was none—but, lo! an unepoch shape,
Close at my side, an unepoch shape appeared
From many other unepoch vagrants (passed)
Strange and unepoch; dire faces, figures dire,
Carved unepoch figures on the heads of sticks—
To vision—forms unepoch of mightiest power
Upon these unepoch Forms a slight regard
The cloud of fancy and unepoch surmise
Whose unepoch form was grafted on the wall,
An unepoch feat exhibit, and are gone
Add unepoch fancy. From behind the roof Unepochly. That flashed unepochly through the woods and fields.
Uncovered. Uncovered; dazzling the Beholder's sight
Uncovered to his grave; 'tis closed,—her loss
Espied the uncovered Corse; the Man
Aod, while, beside him, with uncovered head,
Uncovered. Unfriendly objects and uncovered,
Uncreated. Towards the Uncreated with a countenance
Uncrossed. Can nowhere move uncrossed by some new wall
Above all grandeur, a pure life uncrossed
Uncroset. Mother! whose virgin bosom was uncroset
Uncultured. To be an uncultured flower of the glen,
Uncultivated. Into the rough uncultivated ground,
Uncultur'd. Uncertain thro' his fierce uncultur'd soul
Undamp'd. See cheerfulness undamp'd by stealing Time;
—Vigorous in health, of hopeful spirits, undamp'd Undaunted. Yet does she still, undaunted, throw the while
Soaring on undaunted wing,
Orphan Insight! truth's undaunted lover,
Hark! 'tis the Thrush, undaunted, undeprest,
By whom the undaunted Tyrolese are led?
Starts from a dizzy steep the undaunted Rill
Of faithful love, undaunted truth,
They belt him round with hearts undaunted
Undaunted, lofty, calm, and stable,
Requiem which Barth takes up with voice un-
daunted,
There with his infants man undaunted creeps
The most serene, with most undaunted eye!
I promised also,—with undaunted trust
If his undaunted enterprise had failed
Undaunted, toward the imperishable heavens,
The longing, the contempt, the undaunted quest, Undazzled. By sight undazzled with the glare of praise,
Undecaying. Pure undecaying beauty is their lot;
How life pervades the undecaying mind;
In undecaying beauty were preserved;
Undeceived. For the undeceived, smile as they may,
Deliberately, and undeceived,
If, undeceived, my skill can trace
Undelected. Long undelected lay th' important choice,
Undefiled. Maid and Mother undefiled,
With current swift and undefiled,
Days undefiled by luxury or sloth,
Undefined. With views of undefined delight,
For inducement undefined a personal shape;
Undegenerate. Flowed in thy line through undegen-
erate veins,
Undelighted. Upon the spots with undelighted eye,
He looks below with undelighted eye.

Undelighted—continued.

Could have beheld,—with undelighted heart,
Undelightful. Not undelightful are the simplest charms,
Undelivered. Yet undelivered, rise with sure ascent Undeluded. And I be undeluded, unbetrayed;
Undelusive. To watch for undelusive auguries:—
Undeparting. This undeparting Flower in crimson died,
Undepressed. A stature undepressed in size,
Or eager, though as gay and undepressed
A lofty stature undepressed by time,
Undeprest. Hark! 'tis the Thrush, undaunted, undeprest,
Under. (Partial list.)
Like those self-solacing, those under, notes
Under a hoary oak's thin canopy,
Bed under her lean body there was none,
All night from time to time under him shook
And put your head, good Woman, under cover.
Yes, to my sorrow—under the great oak
A holler name; and, under such a mask,
Is going from under me; these strange discoveries—
And under covert rest till break of day,
Poor Victim! not a virtue under heaven
Under pretence of violence, be seized.
And, as thou see'st, under the arch of heaven
On a dead sea under a burning sky,
Where thousands meet to worship God under a mighty Dome;
Under a cloudless sun—till he, at length,
Was under fascination;—he beheld
Accomplished under friendly shade of night.
Under a private signet of the State.
Under privation and restraint; and what,
And under every hospitable tree
Under my cottage-roof, had gladly come
Under the branches of the tree:
(In the sun or under shade,
Said, "Mount, and get you under cover!"
Under the brow of old Helvellyn—
Under cover,
That, fleeced with moss, under the shady trees,
Have been a traveller under open sky,
Under the greenwood tree.
Here, under this dark sycamore, and view
Help, under every change of adverse fate.
Or under leaves of thickest shade,
The Swale flowed under the grey rocks,
Some twenty fathoms under ground.
For me, who under kindlier laws belong
When, haply under shade of that same wood,
Under the grave of things; Hope had her spire
That glides the dark hills under?
But dance! for under Jedborough Tower
That, under hills which rise like towers,
Ever, by the Living, under ground;
Under mouldering banners pendant,
Upon the battle field, or under ocean's waves;
Gay vision under sullen skies,
Under the white cliff's battlemented craves,
Unburied, lay hid under heaps of slain:
Under the shadow of a stately Pile,
But Ocean under magic heaves,
Sailed " (hear me, Merlin!) " under high protection,
And one small hamlet, under a green hill
Spreading his bosom under Kentish downs,
Under an arch of that forlorn abode,
Stood silent under dreary weight,—
Proceeding under joint command,
Under the saintly ensigus three,
Far under ground is many a cave,
Thence creeping under sylvan arches cool,
Under the weight of mortal wretchedness!
Under the holy fear of God turns pale;
Degrees and Orders stood, each under each:
His spindles sink under him, foot, leg, and thigh!
Deep under ground, in Pluto's cabinet,
Laws that lay under Heaven's perpetual ban

Under the steel his hand had dared to draw,
Under a rock too steep for man to tread,

Under a fancied yew-tree's luckless shade;

Or hidden under ground, like sleeping worms.
At morn, at noon, and under moonlight skies.
Bubbles gliding under ice,
Under a maple that is well beseen,
Quoth Andrew, " Under half-a-crown,
Under yon orchard, in yon humble cot,
Under God's restraining laws.
Under the quiet stars, and at that time
Under the pealing organ. Empty thoughts!
Round the stone table under the dark pine,
Under such banners militant, the soul
Under the weight of classic eloquence,
Or genius, under Nature, under God,
Under worst trials, was I driven to think
Under the vengeance of her cruel son,
Under a long-lived storm of great events—

- Under-agents. Words are but under-agents in their souls ;
Underboughs. Like leafless underboughs, in some thick wood,
Under-countenance. And placid under-countenance, first endeared ;
Under-coverts. In under-coverts, yet the countenance
Under-current. Calm as an under-current, strong to draw

 For you should undergo a sudden change ;
Undergoes. Or beautifies, like changes undergoes,

 And, since their date, my soul hath undergone
 Is undergone ; the transit made that shows
 And hardship undergone in various climes,
Underground. As he were twenty fathoms under-ground,
 Deep underground ? Or in the upper air,
 But not a hint from under-ground, no sign
Undergrove. I sat within an undergrove . . .
 While all the undergrove is thick with leaves,
Undervived. Of fragrance, undervived from earth,
Underlings. With mighty Nations for his underlings,
Undermine. To undermine with secret guile,
 Than if their wish had been to undermine
 That mood, or undermine my first resolve."
Undermined. (By throbbing waves long undermined)

- Understanding's. Could through my understanding's natural growth . . .
Understood. The truth should now be better understood ;
 Of such high course was felt and understood ; . . .
 In its degree was understood ; . . .
 So shall the truth be better understood, . . .
 Which yet I understood, articulate sounds,
 Least understood. Yet, 'mid the fervent swarm
 Felt deeply, but not thoroughly understood
 Of being understood at once, or else . . .
 What was not understood, though known to be ;
 All gratulant, if rightly understood . . .

Undertakes. 'Twas Nature's will ; who sometimes undertakes,
Undertaking. That, in the undertaking which has caused
Under-thirst. Mixed something of stern mood, an under-thirst Undertook. And undertook premonished, if unsound
 Who promptly undertook the Wain to guide . . .
 Filled with vague hopes, he undertook the charge
 And undertook with dutiful content
Underwalden's. Of pensive Underwalden's pastoral heights,
Underwent. The Muses' modest nurslings underwent
Underwood. Of nature's unambitious underwood,
Undeserted. In which a cabin undeserted stood ;
Undeserved. "Whence the undeserved mistrust ?
 Too wide apart
 Not undeserved, of the memorial rhymes . . .
 These gashes whence ? This undeserved disgrace !
Undetermined. Worked with a dim and undetermined sense
 Yet, undetermined to what course of life
Undeterred. Will force upon his notice, undeterred
 My words too long have hindered." Undeterred,
 Who, by humiliation undeterred,
Undevoutly. To cope with Sages undevoutly free,
Undiminished. With undiminished glee, in hoary age,
Undimmed. That views, undimmed, Einsiedlen's wretched fane, Undiscerning. Not dull art Thou as discerning Night ;
Undischarged. Still undischarged ; yet doth she little more Undisciplined. Hard task ! exclaim the undisciplined, to lean
 While yet a youth undisciplined in verse, . . .
Undiscoloured. Yet undiscoloured. A capacious pew Undiscordant. Of discordant themes ; . . .
Undiscouraged. But, undiscouraged, we began to climb
Undiscover'd. Unfathom'd dells and undiscover'd woods ;
Undiscriminating. Yet then, from the indiscriminating sweep
Undisguised. The undisguised extent, of mortal sway!
 This was their undisguised intent, and they
 And undisguised, and strong and serious thought ;
Undishonoured. O come, if undishonoured by the prayer,
Undismantled. Rapt in the grace of undismantled age,
Undismayed. By the blind Goddess,—ruthless, undismayed ;
 Struggling for liberty, while undismayed . . .
 Upon his throne ; " unsoftened, undismayed
 At providential judgments, undismayed
Undisordered. With undisordered sight. 'But leaving this,
Undisputed. Were undisputed ! Like a mendicant,
 An undisputed symbol of command, . . .
 Enthroned aloft in undisputed power,
Undisquieted. Where she may work, safe, undisquieted,
Undissolved. Was undissolved ; and, in or out of sight,
 Of Egypt, unsubverted, undissolved—
 And conglabated bubbles undissolved,
Undissolving. To form, an undissolving cloud ;
 An undissolving fellowship ?—What but this,
Undistempere. With undistempere and unclouded spirit,
Undistinguishable. An undistinguishable style appears
 Of undistinguishable sympathies,
 Of undistinguishable motion, steps
 Amid the undistinguishable crowd
Undistinguished. Round undistinguished clouds, and rocks, and snow :
 Not undistinguished, for of wells that ooze
Undistinguishing. Liberal and undistinguishing, should hide . . .

Undistracted. With undistracted reverence, the effect
The Deity, with undistracted mind, . . . 473
Undisturbed. Undisturbed and undistrest, . . . 551
Undisturbed. Where, undisturbed by winds, Win-ander sleeps ; . . . 415
Not undisturbed by the delight it feels, . . . 184
With affars undisturbed of mossy stone, . . . 185
Pure transport undisturbed by doubt or fear . . . 213
In undisturbed vicissitude . . . 228
In undisturbed immensity . . . 244
The otter crouching undisturbed, . . . 299
Ye, in your low and undisturbed estate, . . . 332
The undisturbed abodes where Sea-nymphs dwell !
Where Spirits dwell in undisturbed repose—
An undisturbed repose of heart, . . . 353
Of undisturbed humanity ! " . . . 349
Undisturbed and undistrest, . . . 399
Of undisturbed mortality, . . . 402
Should find an undisturbed retreat . . . 415
Long months of ease and undisturbed delight
Forgot her functions, and slept undisturbed, . . . 416
That garden of great intellects, undisturbed, . . . 580
Of reason, undisturbed by space or time ; . . . 632
Beside the mountain-chapel, undisturbed, . . . 648
In sylvan meditation undisturbed ; . . . 653
Arbiter undisturbed of right and wrong, . . . 667
Lord of himself, in undisturbed delight—
Stood undisturbed behind the door. And when,
There, undisturbed, could think of and could thank
" Seven years of occupation undisturbed
Might'st hold, on earth, communion undisturbed ;
Obscurity, and undisturbed repose. . . . 692
By foresight, or remembrance, undisturbed ! . . . 716
Aod undisturbed proportions ; but a thing
Of undisturbed humanity ; a cheek . . . 721
And by ambitious longings undisturbed ; . . . 731
An undisturbed abode. Here, then, they met,
Glitter—but undisturbed, undisturbed ; . . . 759
Human and brute, possessors undisturbed

Undisturbed. Glitter—but undisturbed, undisturbed ; . . . 794
Undiversified. Not undiversified though smooth and even ; . . . 802
Undiverted. And, undiverted from the blessed mood
Undivided. That undivided we from year to year . . .
That, undivided, their remains should lie. . . . 823
Undo. Spirits busy to do and undo :
The symbol yield ; and would undo this clasp,
When that which has been done no wishes can undo.
Ah ! why should we undo it ?
Raised up to sway the world, to do, undo,
Was it to disenchant, and to undo ;
And prayers that would undo her forced farewell ;
Bent in quick turns each other to undo,
With wishes the past to undo ; . . .
Others shall e'er be able to undo.

Undoing. Among the ghosts his own undoing ;
Here, where, of havoc tired and rash undoing,
Hope for the few, who, at the world's undoing,
Were bent upon undoing what was done :

Undomestic. I led an undomestic wanderer's life,
Undone. Oh ! we are undone for ever.
Oh find me, prosperous or undone !
What do, and what to leave undone,
Though nought was left undone which staff, or voice,
Whate'er you do, leave this undone ;
For old magnificence undone ;
Unworthier far we are undone—
When such good work is doomed to be undone,
Impatiently, ill-done, or left undone,
With their united force, have left undone ?

Undoubtedly. And a pale face that seemed undoubtedly . . . 831
Undreaded. And carved, on mural cliff's undreaded
side, . . . 830
In the short course of one undreaded year, . . . 774 Undressed. Undressed the pathway leading to the door ; . . . 390
Undrooping. Of their undrooping Father's widow-
hood, . . . 855
Undue. Its own ; though Rulers, with undue respect, Undulation. Breathe Thou, this day, a vital undulation ! . . . 255
Undulations. Of undulations varying as might please Undyed. A hood of mountain-wool undyed) . . . 331
Undying. All are the undying offspring of one Sire :
Undying recollections ; Nature there . . . 680
And both the undying fish that swim . . . 413
Of Spirits, and the undying Lay, . . . 151
A Patriot's heart, warm with undying fire . . . 205
Swing on th' astounded ear it's dull undying roar :
Calmly they banded their own undying life . . . 300
Unearned. Such dispositions then were mine unearned
Unearth. To unearth the root of an old tree,
To hunt the badger and unearth the fox . . . 616
Unearthed. Had to his joy unearthed a hedgehog, teased . . . 365
Unearthly. And, after prelude of unearthly sound .
Is so unearthly, and what shape so fair ? . . . 616
Uneasiness. Uneasiness, or pain, or jealousy : . . . 643

Uneasy. A sleeping man uneasy in his bed, . . . 50
And Grief, uneasy lover ! never rest . . . 88
Aloft !—momentous but uneasy bliss ! . . . 123
She is uneasy everywhere ; . . . 130
Most pleased when most uneasy ; . . . 157
Or with a less uneasy lustre shine ; . . . 167
Of life's uneasy game the stake, . . . 214
The moon uneasy looked and dimmer,
A remnant of uneasy light,
Strange scene, fantastic and uneasy . . . 294
From Love's uneasy sovereignty—
Proceeds, from some uneasy seat . . . 344
For this uneasy heart of ours, I find . . . 498
Tired, and uneasy at the halts I made . . . 648
Or some uneasy thought ; yet still his form
Uneasy and unsettled, yoke-fellows . . . 660
Without uneasy forethought of the pain, . . . 664
Like an uneasy snake. From hour to hour
The heifer lows, uneasy at the voice . . . 673
Continually, like an uneasy place . . . 680
Thus interrupted by uneasy bursts . . . 685
Not seldom, and his own uneasy heart : . . . 699
Amusing, yet uneasy, novelty, . . . 712
Amid the uneasy thoughts which filled my mind,
To his worn cheek ; or with uneasy shame
Disturbed, uneasy in itself as seemed, . . . 727
Unelaborate. Call forth the unelaborate sounds,
Unelbowed. Unelbowed by such objects as oppress Unembellished. Earth, nowhere unembellished by some trace . . . 815
Unembowered. The smokeless chimney-top.—All unembowered . . . 858
Unencumbered. See Unincumbered.
That unencumbered whole of blank and still, . . . 277
A festival of unencumbered ease ; . . . 869
Unendangered. The unendangered myrtle, decked with flowers, . . . 793
Unendeared. Strange places, covertly unendeared, . . . 156
Unenduring. Of azure heaven, the unenduring clouds,
Unenfeebled. The comeliness of unenfeebled age, . . . 884
Unenlightened. Not sunless gloom or unenlightened,
To the unenlightened swains of pagan Greece . . . 860 Unenlivened. And unenlivened ; who exists whole years . . . 415
Unenriched. A story—unenriched with strange events, . . . 131
Unenslaved. By personal ambition unenslaved,
Unenthralled. By vain affections unenthralled,
Unenvied. Revive unenvied ;—mightier far,
Be happy and unenvied, thou who art
Unequal. Join twenty tapers of unequal height
Which to unequal laws gave birth, . . . 65
Unequally. Is matched unequally with custom, time, Unerring. That builds, as thy unerring precepts teach, . . . 331
And to his Father give its own unerring aim . . . 339
And some a bold unerring answer made : . . . 277
When love is an unerring light, . . . 442
Was present, one who with unerring skill . . . 495
That course unchecked, unerring, and untired,
648 Unescutcheoned. With unescutcheoned privacy interred . . . 767
Uneven. Alas ! my journey, rugged and uneven,
Uneventful. That in this uneventful place,
In any age of uneventful calm . . . 180
Unexalted. Not unexalted by religious faith,
Unexampld. An unexampld voice of awful memory !
With unexampld union meet in thee, . . . 126
And carriage, marked by unexampld grace . . . 471 Unexcluded. His beams ; which, unexcluded in their fall, . . . 691
Unexclusively. From culture, unexclusively bestowed
Unexpected. Not unexpected that by early day . . . 830
Unexpected. Unthought-of, unexpected, as the stir
An unexpected sight ! . . . 80
A slender unexpected strain ; . . . 85
And, if an unexpected cloud should lower,
Save when the Owllet's unexpected scream
Or if an unexpected call succeeded,
In the old wall, an unexpected glimpse
Your unexpected presence had so roused
Without excess of unexpected strength.
By the unexpected transports of our age
Of unexpected promise, where a grief
Was overcome by unexpected sleep
Of unexpected pleasure.—Soon the hoard
Of lordly birds, an unexpected sound
Unexpectedly. That answers unexpectedly awry,
Which it had unexpectedly received, Unexperienced. Of unexperienced joys that might have been ; . . . 524
Unexposed. There shall endure,—existence unexposed . . . 197
Unextinguished. Of splendour unextinguished, pomp unscathed, . . . 812
Her only unextinguished light ; . . . 355
With unextinguished taper I kept watch, . . . 400
Unfaded. Unfaded, yet prepared to fade, . . . 719
Of the unfaded rose that still blooms on his cheek. . . . 498

Unfaded—continued.

Of yet unfaded trees she lifts her head
Unfading. Of blissful quiet 'mid unfading bowers.
While I was planting green unfading bowers,
Far-lifted towards the unfading sky;
Unfading constancy?
—Unfading recollections! at this hour
Unfailing. Our faith in Heaven's unfailing love
Still have my pilgrim feet unfailing found
Be with me;—so shall thy unfailing love
Unfailing; not a hamlet could we pass,
We, whose established and unfailing trust
Unfaithful. And how, unfaithful to a virtuous wife
Unfamilarly. We since that time not unfamiliarly
Unfathered. Like an unfathered vapour that enwraps
Unfathomable. Still deepens its unfathomable depth.
Amid the unfathomable deeps;
That dark unfathomable eye,
The unfathomable gulf, where all is still!

Unfolding—continued.

Employed, and man's unfolding intellect:
It was the season of unfolding leaves,
Unfolds. That region left, the vale unfolds
Unfolds a willing breast| with infant glee
The Place unfolds, from pavement skinned with moss,
Unforbidden. Those willing tears, and unforbidden sighs,
Where towers are crushed, and unforbidden weeds
To leave.—Unwooded, yet unforbidden,
Unforced. And now, unforced by time to part.
That so a Church, unforced, uncalled to brook
Unforced by wind or wave
Unforeseen. But unforeseen misfortunes suddenly.
When unforeseen distress spreads far and wide
A new and unforeseen creation rise
Unforewarned. And unforewarned, that in some distant spot
Is sympathy with the unforewarned, who died
Viewless obstruction; whence, all unforewarned,
Unforgiven. Not unforgiven the suppliant knee might bend,
Unforgiving. To an unforgiving judgment from just Heaven.
Unforgotten. Nor Taliesin's unforgotten lays,
Unfortunate. (May they not?) the unfortunate.
On the forlorn unfortunate,
Call not the royal Swede unfortunate,
Unfought. (And can it be?) an unfought field!—
Unfound. By Pain and her sad family unfound, Unfrequented. With not unfrequent rapture fondly hailed.
Save when the startling cliff unfrequent rends:
Unfrequented as in deserts; at late hours
This is the good man's not unfrequent pang!
A not unfrequent pastime from the hum
Unfrequented. When through the unfrequented Waste
Yet unfrequented, while the morning light
The voiceless worm on the unfrequented hills,
Unfrequently. Yet tempered, not unfrequently, with strains
Perchance you not unfrequently have marked
Unfriended. And can ye thus unfriended leave me;
Unfrozen. Of blue unfrozen water, where they lodged,
Unfruitful. An emblem of his own unfruitful life:
Unfruitful solitudes, that seemed to upbraid
Even in what seem our most unfruitful hours?
Unfulfilled. She spake, not was the assurance unfulfilled;
Unfurled. The impatient mariner the sail unfurled,
Fresh as a banner bright, unfurled
As sail hath been unfurled;
He took the Banner, and unfurled
I see a matchless blazonry unfurled
Tartarean flags are caught at, and unfurled—
Ensigns of mimic outrage are unfurled.
Unfurled. A far, his tail he closes and unfurled;
Unfurnished. Towered like the imperial thistle, not unfurnished
Unfurrowed. Or whistling thro' thin grass along the unfurrowed plain.
Unfurlanted. Why are they unfurlanted?
Ungathered. The target mouldering like ungathered fruit;
Those laureat wreaths ungathered which the Nymphs
Ungenerous. That overcame some not ungenerous Knights;
Recal my song the ungenerous thought; forgive,
Ungential. That bliss awaits her which the ungenial Hollow
Ungentle. Ungentle, or untouched by seemly ruth,
Within the folds of no ungentle breast
The ungentle mind can easily find means
Ungently. I surely not a man ungently made,
Ungifted. Left them ungifted with a power to yield Ungovernable. One the rash Youth's unmanageable hand
A fervent, not unmanageable, love.
Some with unmanageable impulse rush;
Ungovernable, and your terrifying winds,
Ungraced. Of cold neglect she leaves thy head ungraced, Ungracious. Drooped with its withered leaves, ungracious sign
Are made of; an ungracious matter this!
In no ungracious opposition given
Ungraciously. Ungraciously receives. Too daring choice!
Ungrateful. But why, ungrateful, dwell on idle pain?
By his ungrateful daughters turned adrift.
As one that lived ungrateful for the stay
Be that ungrateful Son allowed to hear
O winds without remorse! O shore ungrateful!
A barren and ungrateful soil.
Ungrateful Country, if thou e'er forget
Is he ungrateful, and doth little heed
Nought but her changes. Thus, ungrateful Nation!
Not by the sluggish and ungrateful pains . . .

 Unhallowed actions—planted like a crown
 In their unhallowed principles ; the bad
 Unworthy therefore, and unhallowed ; no,
Unhappy. Unhappy Woman ! Nay, it was my duty
 Each word of that unhappy letter fell
 —So much for my remorse ! Unhappy Man !
 That is the blond of an unhappy Man.
 In an unhappy home.
 That unhappy Figure near him,
 Am grieved for that unhappy sin
 Can this unhappy Woman go,
 That it was all for that unhappy Hart.
 Dismounted in most unhappy plight.
 Unhappy Nuns, whose common breath's a sigh
 For old, unhappy, far-off things,
 Toussaint, the most unhappy man of men !
 More for mankind at this unhappy day
 Unhappy ghosts in troops by moonlight seen ;
 The unhappy Banner Francis saw,
 " Though this unhappy freight I bear ;
 Wept for that pair's unhappy fate,
 Large draughts of love unhappy Dido drew ;
 Of some unhappy woman, now and then
 Upon the borders of the unhappy Loire,
 A mortal beauty, their unhappy thrall.
 The prison where the unhappy Monarch lay,
 His famous Optimist, " Unhappy Man !"
 The unhappy alien hoping to obtain
 Of this unhappy lot, in early youth
Unharnessed. Unharnessed, naked, troops of Moorish horse
Unhealthy. Unhealthy and vexatious. With the hour,
Unheard. The song of mountain-streams, unheard
 by day,
 Crowded with ear-piercing power till then unheard ;
 The morning came, and still he was unheard of :
 All unheard of as thou art,
 Unheard of is, like this, a book
 Calvert ! it must not be unheard by them
 Unheard by them, their deeds shall celebrate !
 Even when a child, the Streams—unheard, unseen ;
 Seems, 'mid inverted mountains, not unheard.
 Long, and long was he unheard of :
 And benedictions not unheard in heaven :
 Left to herself unheard of and unknown.
 Unheard by her, that she, not falsely taught,
 Unheard, the savage nations bowed the head
 Unheard of, save in one small hamlet, here Unheard-of. Does yet the unheard-of vessel ride the wave ?
 Like this unheard-of, and their channels wear
 Unheard-of days, though loving peaceful thoughts.
Unheeded. Unheeded night has overcome the vales :
 Unheeded, and the mute repose
 Nor let me pass unheeded other loves
Unheeding. The unheeding Ass moves slowly on,
Unhelped. Unhelped by the poetic voice
Unhewn. Appears a straggling heap of unhewn stones !
 And hence, this upright shaft of unhewn stone,
 There is a shapeless crowd of unhewn stones . . . 318 Ah!* where 3

Unknown—continued.

- Of culture hath been utterly unknown,
A sound unknown to you; else, honoured Friend!
From unknown objects I received; and those,
Of arrogance, unknown Wanderer as I am,
Recovered; or, if hitherto unknown,
Of evil inclinations are unknown;
Unknown to you that in these simple vales
Into that pure and unknown world of love
Much to the last remained unknown: but this
These mountains echoed to an unknown sound;
Unknown and unknown. A pleasing thought —The discipline of slavery is unknown
On unknown snows, a spot unknown
- As one unknown by others, aptly called
With cheerful heart, an unknown voice of joy,
That extreme penury is here unknown,
Unlaborious. In unlaborious pleasure, with no task
Unlaid. Returning, like a ghost unlaid,
The feudal Warrior-chief, a Ghost unlaid,
Unlamented. Unpitied havoc! Victims unlamented!
From Age, that often unlamented drops,
Unlawful. Unlawful, ever. O be wiser, Thou!
For the convenience of unlawful gain,
Unlearned. Unlearned Book and rude, as well I know,
Unless. Unless beneath your roof I may remain:
Unless I differ from the thing I am
Unless our Landlord be your host to-night,
Is a true friend to sorrow; and, unless
Their labour did not cease; unless when all
Unless, while with admiring eye
Their quiet being: and unless I now
Unless the glow-worm to the skies
Unless Thou show to us thine own true way
Nor be unthank'd, unless I fondly err.
For why—unless for liberty enrolled

Their spirit; or, unless they for reproof
Unless they chasten fancies that presume
And how—unless it were the sense
Unless to Peter's Chair the viewless wind
Nor turn aside, unless to shape a way
Unless, perchance rejecting in despite
Duly before thy sight, unless they perish here.
Unless it always stay with him, I wis
And shall, unless I see her soon in Troy.
Unless it leap upon him in a dream,
Unless itself be pleased, here more than once
Unless this love by a still higher love
And that unless above himself he can
Unless resolved in mercy to the law
Unlettered. The unlettered ploughboy pities when he wins
Still let him prompt the unlettered villagers
"Smooth verse, inspired by no unlettered Muse," Unlike. "Ah! how unlike those late terrific sleeps,
So like, yet so unlike, a living Creature!
In drowsy sequence—how unlike the sound
(By transit not unlike man's frequent doom)
Dreams not unlike to those which once beget
Awaits us! Oh, how much unlike the past!
Stood near, of smaller size, and not unlike
With process not unlike to that which cheers
Unlikely. Perhaps, and no unlikely thought!
Unlisten'd. The thicket, where th' unlisten'd stock-dove coos.
Unlock. Then did the boy his tongue unlock,
Egyptian tombs unlock their dead,
That best unlock the secrets of St. Bees.
These hoards of truth you can unlock at will:
Unlocked. Shakspeare unlocked his heart; the melody
Was changed. As she unlocked the door, she said,
Unlocking. Unlocking bleeding Thought's "memorial cell."
Unlocks. To his might well he likened, who unlocks Unlocked. The fancy pleased by spectacles unlocked for.
Unlooked-for. Than half his substance. This unlooked-for claim,
Invisible, unlooked-for, minister
Of lawless will, unlooked-for streams of good,
A silent and unlooked-for change,
A timely promise of unlooked-for fruit,
Unlooked-for outlet to an open sea,
A glorious opening, the unlooked-for dawn,
Unlooked-for gladness in the desert place,
"The Father—him at this unlooked-for gift
Itself had been unlooked-for; oh! dire stroke
By importation of unlooked-for arts,
Unloose. Whose piercing sweetness can unloose
Unloosed. But nor joint pains unloosed the cloak,
Straight I unloosed her chain, and stepping in Unlovely. At like unlovely process in the May
And in my own unlovely cell sat down
Unluckiest. The unluckiest hulk that stems the brine Unlucky. It was unlucky!—no, no, no;

- Unluxuriant. Were the unluxuriant produce of a life
Unmailed. With breast unmailed, unweaponed hand.
Unman. It would unman the firmest heart to hear.
Unmanageable. But each unmanageable hill
Unmanageable thoughts; his mind, best pleased
By nature an unmanageable sight,
Unmanly. And where the foot with no unmanly fear
Unmarried. Unmarried, unstripped of her attire, Unmatchable. Unmatchable on earth is their disquiet!
Unmatched. Elsewhere unmatched, her ever-varying lay;
Unmatched in delicate beneficence;
Unmeaning. To these appear not an unmeaning voice,
Unmeasured. With an unmeasured welcome.
Through the night,
Unmeet. Beware of kindling hopes for me unmeet!
Nor, I deem, for me unmeet;
Why mention other thoughts unmeet
(Would that it were!) the sacrifice unmeet
Upon a way of life unmeet
Unmellowed. With an inconstant and unmellowed light;
Unmenaced. Though not unmenaced, among those who lean Unmerited. Did meekly hear the pang unmerited;
Of an unmerited distress;
Unmindful. A Muse, who, not unmindful of her Sire
Disporting, Nor unmindful was the Boy
Unmingled. Eternal farewell to unmingled joy
Unmitigated. Than his unmitigated beams allow,
Unmolested. Green unmolested light upon their mossy bed.
Sit unmolested on his staff.—Innocent!
Or top serene of unmolested mountain,
Lead unmolested lives, and die of age,
That spreads its leaves in unmolested peace,
Whence, unmolested wanderers, we behold
And, to his unmolested mansion, death
Unmoved. Unmoved with each rude form of peril nigh;
And heard with heart unmoved, with soul unraised:
He not unmoved did notice now
So have I, not unmoved in mind,
And fishes front, unmoved, the torrent's sweep,—
With those adversities unmoved;
Yet be unmoved with wishes to attest
Upon this solemn Company unmoved
This quiet spot; and, Stranger! not unmoved
Unmov'd with each rude form of Danger nigh,
Of life's sweet season—could have seen unmoved
Unmoved. I could not always lightly pass
Was neither slow nor eager; but, unmoved,
Wrought for them in old time: yea, not unmoved,
Determined and unmoved, with steady beams
Who can reflect, unmoved, upon the round
Unmoving. Hail to the firm unmoving cross,
And, on the shape of that unmoving man,
Unnamed. The student's bower for gold, some fears unnamed
Unnamed among the chronicles of kings,
Of Emont, hitherto unnamed in song,
Unnatural. 'Twas a dull spark—a most unnatural fire
To the unnatural harvest of that time
Along a track of most unnatural years;
And, should a less unnatural doom confide
On which he stood, by spells unnatural bound,
That burthen of my own unnatural self,
Is smitten thence with an unnatural taint,
Was not puffed up by false unnatural hopes,
For this unnatural growth the trainer blame,
He tossed them with a false unnatural joy:
And pensive quiet, an unnatural light
A not unnatural longing felt,
Unnavigable. For whom the sea was made unnavigable.
Unnecessary. Nor selfish with unnecessary cares,
Unneighbourly. That are by nature most unneighbourly,
Unnoticed. The loiterer, not unnoticed by his comrades,
And bloom unnoticed even to this late hour?
And for two days unnoticed slept,
Of melancholy not unnoticed, while the stars
Unnoticed did I stand some minutes' space,
Unnoticed, thus continuing,— "From yon crag
Unnumbered. Unnumber'd streams with hollow roar profound.
Where, unnumbered with the dead,
Unobnoxious. In quarters unobnoxious to such chance,
Unobserved. I unobserved could see the workings of her face:
This Beast not unobserved by Nature fell;
An oaken staff by me yet unobserved—
Unobserving. His lonesome path, with unobserving eye
Unobstructed. Of unobstructed prospect may be seen Unobtrusive. His unobtrusive merit; but his life,
Unoccupied. Unoccupied by sorrow of its own,

Unoffending. And such a Man—so meek and unoffending—
 For the unoffending creatures whom he loves.
 They bind the unoffending creature's brows
 The unoffending Emily,
 But unoffending creatures find release
 Destroyed their unoffending commonwealth,
Unopposed. Approach their revered graces, unopposed;
Unordained. Be it not unordained that solemn rites, Unorganic. To unorganic natures were transferred Unparticipated. Glistening with unparticipated ray,
 With unparticipated gaze;
Unpathwayed. Along the smooth unpathwayed plain,
 By whose unpathway'd margin still and dread
Unpeaceful. Unpeaceful in itself. A single tree
Unpeopled. Surrounded by those wild unpeopled hills,
 To roam at large among unpeopled glens
Unperceivable. And in their process unperceivable;
Unperceived.—The road is dim, the current unperceived,
Unperilous. If in the season of unperilous choice,
Unperplexed. Yet unperplexed, as if one spirit swayed
 Not unperplexed nor free from pain,
 Such do I mean who, unperplexed by doubt,
Unperverted. That Church, the unperverted Gospel's seat;
Unpierced. Not entered them; her heart is yet unpierced
Unpitied. Remain unpitied, pity is not in man.
 Did press this semblance of unpitied smart . . .
 Unpitied by the wise, all censure stilled,
 Than ever forced unpitied hearts to bleed.
 Unpitied havoc! Victims unlamented!
Unpleased. Shrink from thy name, pure Rill, with unpleased ears.
Unpleasing. Pure, or with no unpleasing sadness mixed;
Unpossession. A grace by thee unsought and unpossession,
Unpractised. Not only in that raw unpractised time
 Shy, and unpractised in the strife of phrase;
Unpraised. Nor pass unpraised the robe and veil divine,
 And dearest helpers, left unthanked, unpraised,
Unprecedented. Of warnings—from the unprecedented might,
 Methinks 'twere no unprecedented feat
 Did this unprecedented course imply
Unpremeditated. Pleas'd with some unpremeditated strains
 And, in this unpremeditated slight
Unprepared. That he is unprepared to rise,
 Which may seem strange; but I was unprepared
Unpresumptuous. Yields, if with unpresumptuous faith explored,
Unpretending. From the unpretending ground we mortals tread;—
 There is a little unpretending Rill
 That voice of unpretending harmony
 The beetle loves his unpretending track,
 Of nave and aisle, in unpretending guise,
 Our unpretending valley.—How the quoit
Unprized. Even by the sun and air unprized;
Unproclaimed. Had darkness fallen—untreated, unproclaimed—
 Slip by him unproclaimed, and told the hours
 His graces unrevealed and unproclaimed.
Unproductive. An unproductive slip of rugged ground,
Unprofaned. Or image unprofaned; and I would stand,
Unprofessed. A solitude, unchosen, unprofessed;
Unprofitable. Unprofitable, and the lever of the world,
 Spurning the unprofitable yoke of care,
 Near this unprofitable dust
 And leave a dead unprofitable name—
 Unprofitable talk at morning hours;
 Unprofitable kindness, hestowed
Unprofitably. Unprofitably travelling toward the grave,
 Are oftines not unprofitably shown
Unproped. Nor dares to move unproped upon the staff
 That we must stand unproped, or be laid low
 Where he, unproped, and by the gathering flood
 Though I had learnt betimes to stand unproped,
 Those arts, and high inventions, if unproped
Unprotected. Along his path? His unprotected bed
 Not unprotected in her mouldering state,
Unpursued. By that sweet taste of pleasure unpursued,
Unqualified. From the unqualified disdain, that once
Unquenched. To firm devotion, zeal unquenched,
Unquenched. The particle divine remained unquenched
Unquestionable. Unquestionable lines of that wild Suppliant's face
 Unquestionable meanings—still bespeak
 To an unquestionable Source have led
 The unquestionable good—which, England, safe

Unquestionably. Unquestionably kenned, that cone-shaped hill
 Its will unquestionably shown—
 Of mortal power unquestionably sprung)
Unquestioned. And she shall love him. With unquestioned title
Unquiet. Unquiet Childhood here by special grace
 But, leaving each unquiet theme
 Internal darkness and unquiet breath;
 For One who breathed unquiet air
 Accordant to the cheek's unquiet glow;
 Of peaceful houses with unquiet sounds.
 She lingered in unquiet widowhood;
Unraised. And heard with heart unmoved, with soul unraised:
 Unchastened, unsubdued, unawed, unraised
 That we should pry far off yet he unraised;
Unravell'd. And the mazy stream unravell'd
 The mazy Forth unravell'd;
Unreached. Through passes yet unreached, a brighter road.
Unready. To his grave touch with no unready strings,
Unreal. Of its vague mountains and unreal sky!
Unreasoning. That in the unreasoning progress of the world
 Is for Society's unreasoning herd
Unrecognised. Unrecognised through many a household tear
 Unrecognised; but, stricken by the sight,
Unrecompens'd. Yet not unrecompens'd the man shall roam,
 Yet not unrecompens'd are they who learn,
Unreconciled. And everything unreconciled;
Unrecorded. Pass unrecorded, that I still had loved Unredem'd. Unrectified, unguided, unstained,
Unredeem'd. Of an assembled Senate unredeem'd
Unredressed. Wrongs unredressed, or insults unavenged
Unreflecting. But habit rules the unreflecting herd,
 By some of unreflecting mind, as calling
 From unreflecting ignorance preserved,
 "A noble—and, to unreflecting minds,
Unregarded. Whence the poor unregarded Favourite, true
 By unregarded age from stroke
 When we are unregarded by the world.
Unrejoic'd. Not unrejoic'd I see these climb the sky
Unrejoicing. With unrejoicing berries—ghostly Shapes
Unrelaxing. Thy diligence, thy unrelaxing use
 Her prostrate frame with unrelaxing power,
 An unrelaxing bond, a mutual need;
Unrelenting. In the unrelenting east.—Through all her courts
 To unrelenting mandates that pursue
 By unrelenting Death. O People keen
 How Juno's hate with unrelenting force
 And by an unrelenting agency
 Had watched him with an unrelenting eye.
 Through these two months of unrelenting storm,
Unrelentingly. And unrelentingly possessed by thirst
Unrelieved. Of anguish unrelieved, and lack of power
Unreligious. If unreligious, let him be at once,
Unreluctant. Say, will my Friend, with unreluctant ear,
 I see its truth with unreluctant eyes;
 And Fancy, keeping unreluctant watch,
 Returning unreluctant sweets;
Unremembered. Of unremembered pleasure: such, perhaps,
 His little, nameless, unremembered, acts
 Else unremembered, and so keeps alive
Unremitting. Powers that support an unremitting strife
 Where unremitting frosts the rocky crescent bleach.
 The unremitting voice of nightly streams
 Through unremitting vigils of the night,
 The churlish gales, that unremitting blow
 And unremitting progress to ensure
 An unremitting, avaricious thirst;
 O'er which the smoke of unremitting fires
 Nor hodies crushed by unremitting toil;
 For neither unremitting rains avail
 Where pity shrinks from unremitting calls,
Unremittingly. Viewing all objects unremittingly
 Urged unremittingly the stubborn work,
Unremoved. Whose veil is unremoved,
Unrepeated. And judgments unrepeated,
Unrepented. Guilt unrepeated, pardon unimplored.
Unrepinning. I pace it unrepinning, for my thoughts
 While unrepinning sadness is allied
Unreproved. A brief and unreproved farewell!
 Take, then, thy seat, Vicegerent unreproved!
 And Fancy, unreproved, even yet may trace
 If unreproved the ambitious eagle mount
 To vacant musing, unreproved neglect
 And unreproved enchantment led us on Consorting in one mansion unreproved
 It comes, to works of unreproved delight,
 Appeared, of high pretensions—unreproved
 Nor unreproved by Providence, thus speaking..

Unrequited—continued.

Of unreproved enjoyment ; and is pleased
Decent and unreproved. The voice, that greets .
I must not walk in unreproved delight .
Unrequited. And the besprinkled nursing, unre-quired
Unrequited. By unrequited love, he scaled the rocks,
Unresentful. Not unresentful where self-justified ;
Unreserved. Vanish before the unreserved embrace
Unresisting. Athwart the unresisting tide
Unrest. Tired with its daily share of earth's unrest,— Unrestrained. So cruel Sussex, unrestrained
Words by thy presence unrestrained may speak .

At large and unrestrained, nor damped too soon .
Unrestricted. Range unrestricted as the wind,
Of unrestricted and unthinking man.
Unreturned. Friendship betrayed, affection unre-
turned,
Unrevealed. His graces unrevealed and unpro-claimed.
Unripe. Winds rustling over plots of unripe grain,
And though of unripe years, a stripping only,
Which at this season, with their unripe fruits,
Our unripe years, not wasted, should be taught .
Or heard, was fitted to our unripe state
Nature herself was, at this unripe time,
So, with more ardour than an unripe girl
And unripe sex with sex, for mutual taint ; Unripened. And pines the unripened pear in summer's kindest ray
Unrivaled. That not for thy reward, unrivall'd Vale !
This fair unrivaled Brotherhood,
Of all adventurers. With unrivall'd skill,
Unroll. Some Theban fragment, or unroll .

Unrolled. How fast the Marian death-list is unrolled !
Unroofed. And, 'mid their choirs unroofed by selfish rage,
Unruffled. The unruffled Innocent,—I see thy face,
And when the keen unruffled weather,
To which, on some unruffled morning, clings
On Grasmere's clear unruffled breast
On the mute sea in this unruffled bay ;
Unruffled doth the blue lake lie,
Or nowhere ; days unruffled by the gale
Or, on the waters of the unruffled lake,
The other, glassed in thy unruffled breast,
I came not dreaming of unruffled life,
Unruliness. Some vapoured in the unruliness of joy,
To license some unruliness of mind ;
Unruly. In her breast, unruly fire,

Hath, like the Lover, his unruly times ;
Nor that unruly child of mountain birth,
Unsafe. And midway in the unsafe morass,
Such as in unsafe times of border-war
Unsaid. And left—but be the rest unsaid,
Unsaluted. Long unsaluted, nor the sunny seat
Unsanctifies. Unsanctifies our tears—made sport Unsanctioned. Bodings unsanctioned by the will
To some unsanctioned fear ? " If this be so, Unsepp'd. Unsepp'd by delicate viands ; for, exclude
Unsatisfied. And, being still unsatisfied with aught
Break down all grandeur, still unsatisfied
So deeply, that, unsatisfied with aught Unscared. Of Easter winds, unscared, from hut or hall
Unscared by thronging fancies of strange hue

Press forward by the teasing dogs unscared .

Associates, and, unscared by blustering winds,
Unscathed. Of splendour unextinguished, pomp unscathed,
Unscattered. By the rough wind unscattered, at whose call
Unscorned. Unscorned the peasant's whistling breath, that lightens
Unscoured. Of the grave Elders, men unscoured, grotesque
Unsealed. A hoard of grievances unsealed ;
Unsearchable. Lost in unsearchable eternity !
Unsearched. I leave unsearched : enough that memory clings,
Unseasonably. Of midnight hours, unseasonably twinkling
Unseconded. Unseconded, uncountenanced ; then, as time
Unsedentary. Meanwhile the sedentary Master's hand
Unseduced. Unshaken, unsexuced, unterrified ;
Unseen. While others, not unseen, are free to shed
They cannot mount the hill, by us unseen.
Unseen by Leonard, at the church-yard gate
The Astrologer was not unseen
The voice of tears that fell unseen ;
And fade, unquiet by any human eye ;
But he flowed quiet and unseen —
" Be Yarrow stream unseen, unknown !

Unseen—continued.

Could I leavethem unseen, and not yield to regret ?

Even when a child, the Streams—unheard, unseen ;
Soothed by the unseen River's gentle roar .
And streams unknown, hills yet unseen,
To dream-light dard while yet unseen,
With some loved friend, or by the unseen hawk
Herself, in spots unseen before
Who'er ye be, that thus, yourselves unseen,
More imminent. Not unseen do they approach ;
Or an unseen companionship, a breath,
What Power unseen diffuses far
Above the babe, unseen ;
Was kindling, not unseen, from humble cope
Myself unseen. He was of stature tall,
Reckless of me : I followed, not unseen,
Heard, though unseen,—a devious traveller,
Celestial, lay unseen the pastoral vales
Objects unseen before, thou wilt not blame
Unseen, perchance above all power of sight—
Himself unseen ! But no tradition tells
Sauntering to pluck the strawberries wild unseen.
Unselfish. Blest Statesman He, whose Mind's unselfish will
Unsensualise. By art to unsensualise the mind .
Unsettled. Disarmed of power to unsettle present good
To unsettle or perplex it : yet with pain
Unsettled. 'Tis a poor wretch of an unsettled mind,
Stole forth, unsettled by the shock ;
Old things have been unsettled ; we have seen
To human life's unsettled atmosphere ;
Uneasy and unsettled, yoke-fellows
Had been erewhile unsettled and disturbed,
With an unsettled liberty of thought,
Unsettled by a waaton blow from foot
Unsettles. And the motion unsettles a tear ;
That instantly unsettles and recedes,— Unsettling. The roof, self-moved, unsettling o'er his head ;
At length, himself unsettling, he the pond Unshackled. The unshackled layman's natural liberty ;
Pleased to perceive his own unshackled life,
Unshaded. There, all unshaded, blazing forests throw
Unshaded, eying far below, the flood,
Unshaken. And, to atone for it, with soul unshaken
But, by the storms of circumstance unshaken,
Suffices ; and unshaken bears the assault
" Unshaken, unsexuced, unterrified ;"
Unshaped. " To all the unshaped half-human thoughts
Unshared. To impart a joy, imperfect while un-shared.
Unsheath. 'Mid thy soft glooms the glittering steel unsheath ;
Unsheathed. Unsheathed in wrath to strike the offender's head,
Unshed. The name untouched, the tear unshed ;
Unsheltered. Which the unsheltered traveller might receive
Where, from the barren wall's unshelter'd end,
That, thither driven from some unsheltered place,
Unshifting. Like an unshifting weathercock which proves
Unshorn. Who gathered in betimes the unshorn flock
Spreads out his limbs, while, yet unshorn, the Sheep, Unshrouded. Daily exposed, woe that unshrouded lies ;
Dissolved, have left him an unshrouded head.
Unsigned. The past unsigned for, and the future sure ;
Unsignly. Or moist with dew ; what more unsignly now,
Unsignly marks of violence or harm .
Gloomy as coffins, and unsightly lanes
Unsignly objects and uncoveted,
Unsigned. Walk through the fire with unsigned hair.
Like one of those who walked with hair unsigned
Unskill'd. Nor unskill'd his darts to ply, Unsleeping. Yet, arts are thine that rock th' un-sleeping heart,
Unsmitten. By wasteful steel unsmitten—then would I
By sorrow not unsmitten ; yet for me .
Unsocially. Unsocially sequestered, and encroaching
Unsocial. Of all unsocial courses, is least fit Unsoftened. Upon his throne ;" unsoftened, undismayed
Unsolicited. Unsolicited reply
Unsought. At times, and tales unsought beguile the day,
Unsought for was the help that did my life recall.
As if all needful things would come unsought
By unsought means for gracious purposes ;
A grace by thee unsought and unpossest,
The fount of feeling, if unsought elsewhere,
But while a thousand pleasures come unsought,
Whether withheld, or for her sake unsought—
By nourishment that came unsought ; for still Sought or unsought, and influxes of power

Unto—continued.

And unto him declare why men sing so ;
" My throat is cut unto the bone, I trow,
And after that thus said she unto me ;
He can make low, and unto death bring nigh ;
This unto their remembrance doth bring
And also ' tis not likely unto me,
Unto the God of Love I make a vow,
Send unto thee as middle joy this day,
Nor leisure unto thee more worth to give ;
And unto Pandarus, his own Brother dear,
And yonder once she unto me 'gan say—
That hers unto the death my heart I hold.
My Lady first me took unto her grace.
Unto the blood of Troy, I pray of thee,
As Juno was unto the Theban blood,
Enriching and adorning. Unto thee,
And unto this he frames his song :
From transitory passion, unto this
To cleave unto this man ; but when I prayed
And specially delightful unto me
Compelled to be a life unto herself,
Nor made unto myself a secret hoast
The human nature unto which I felt
Accomplished, giving thus unto events
Add unto this, subservience from the first
In part lay here, that unto me the events
With the most noble, but unto the poor
The width of those huge forests, unto me
Unto a heifer's motion, by a cord
Brought less encouragement, and unto these
By circumstance to take unto the height
Their lost affections unto thee and thine ! "
Had yet to travel far, but unto us,
Various, but unto each some tribute paid ;
Unto the men who see not as we see
A throne, that may be likened unto his,
The greeting " peace be with you " unto them,
Or profit unto any but ourselves.
Untold. Quick—to the point—if any untold crime
Nor leave untold our happy fight in that adventurous dream.
A Poet's history, may I leave untold
' Tis left untold if here he first drew breath,
My future labours may not leave untold.
Untouched. Untouched by his breath see the candle shines bright,
Moving untouched in silver purity,
Untouched,—in spite of many a gleam
If thou appear untouched by solemn thought,
Untouched through all severity of cold ;
That treasures, yet untouched, may grace some future Lay.
Ungentle, or untouched by seemly ruth,
Untouched memento of her hapless doom !
Untouched, unbreathed upon. Thrice happy quest,
The name untouched, the tear nourished,—
Emblem of faith untouched, miraculous attestation !
Untouched by due regret I marked your fall !
Untouched the hawthorn bough,
Think not that I could pass along untouched.
Hath left no corner of the land untouched :
Nor must I leave untouched (the picture else Untoward. The Woman thus retraced her own untoward fate,
By some untoward death among the rocks :
When I with these untoward thoughts had striven,
Untoward or unfit ;
Who, with a toward or untoward lot,
Unconscious of its own untoward lot,
With an untoward fate was long involved
Alas ! to few in this untoward world,
Why should we thus, with an untoward mind,
Precipitations, and untoward straits,
In spite of many a rough untoward blast,
Impose, whence' or untoward chance
Untowardness. But through untowardness of fate ;
Untraced. A length of journey yet remains untraced :
Wholly untraced a more forbidding way.
Untrained. Men who, to business of the world untrained.
Untransmuted. The untransmuted shapes of many worlds.
Untravelled. To the deep shade of those untravelled
Wilds ;
By those untravelled Dalesmen. With less pride,
Untrembling. And shows in the untrembling frame
Untried. This untried world, and to prepare thy way
Untried our Brothers have been loved.
I, loving freedom, and untried ;
Implores the dreadful untried sleep of Death.
Arts yet untried, upon new counsels bent,
Of settling time in this untried abode.
With some untried adventure, in a course
To exercise their untried faculties)
With mysteries ;—far, if Faith were left untried, Untrud. A track pursuing, not untrud before, Untrodden. Theirs he these holms untrodden, still,
and green,
She dwelt among the untrodden ways

Untrodden—continued.

Of the untrodden lunar mountains ;
To what untrodden shore ?
Of morning dew upon the untrodden meads,
Its green untrodden turf, and howling fowers ;
These fairy holms untrodden, still, and green,
So to th' untrodden floor, where round him looks
Amid the untrodden desert, tells his beads, Untroubled. With angels when their own untrobled home
Meanwhile untrobled I admire
But where untrobled peace and concord dwell,
Untroubled at the sight ?
Love ebb and flow untrobled by caprice ;
And more than eighty, of untrobled life,
In its untrobled element will shine
Untrue. Silent, and to the gazer's eye untrue,
To us, who war against the Untrue ;—
And bold transfigurations, more untrue
To the confiding Bark, untrue ;
For to th' untrue he oft gives ease and joy ;
" Beshrew all them that are in love untrue."
Portrayed with happiest pencil, not untrue
Untruth. A weak and cowardly untruth !
Untuned. For cold and raw the air was, and untuned ; Untuneful. " Why, Minstrel, these untuneful murmuring—
Untunes. And nought untunes that Infant's voice ;
no trace
Untunes full oft the pleasures of the day ;
Untutored. And is it among rude untutored Dales,
Though yet untutored and inordinate,
" The untutored bird may found, and so construct,
Home of untutored shepherds as it is,
Unuplifted. Most sweet it is with unuplifted eyes
In silent grief their unuplifted heads,
Unused. Are not unused to trouble friends.
But, though to such demands unused,
Though not unused to mutter loonesome songs,
Unusual. Of an unusual strength ; his mind was keen,
Of an unusual strength. Among the rocks
Unusual in its cry :
Beset me, and to height unusual rose,
Then fading with unusual quietness,—
And night succeeded with unusual gloom,
Keen anglers with unusual spoil elated.
In an unusual way, and give to them
Unusual aspects, or by questions apt
Unutterable. And fittest to unutterable thought
Unutterable woe.
Eyed the poor babe with love unutterable.
Unutterable love. Sound needed none,
Unutterably. Unutterably helpless, and a look Unvanquished. Of awful prudence, keep the unvanquished soul :
Unvaried. Such have we, but unvaried in its style ;
Broke only by th' unvaried torrent's sound,
Unveiled. That what has been unveiled to-day,
From centre to circumference, unveiled !
Unveiled the summit of Mont Blanc, and grieved
Unveiling. Goes forth—unveiling timidly a cheek Unversed. In music all unversed, nor blessed with skill
A mind in all heart-mysteries unversed.
Unvexed. Here, ' mid his own unvexed domains,
Of ordinary life ; unvexed, unwarped
Unviolated. Amid the unviolated grove
" So, westward, tow'rd the unviolated woods
Unvisited. Unvisited, where not a broken hough
Unvisited, endeavoured to retrace
Leaving this nook unvisited : but, in sooth, Unvouchsafed. Not unvouchsafed—a light that warmed and cheered
Unvoyageable. Here standing, with the unvoyage-able sky
Unwarped. Of ordinary life ; unvexed, unwarped
Unwary. And deluding the unwary
Unwatched. So, unwatched by love maternal, Unwatchful. Perceived in things, where, to the un-watchful eye,
Unwealthy. On an unwealthy mountain Benice." Unweaponed. Thrilling the unweaponed crowd with plumeless heads ?—
With breast unmailed, unweaponed hand.
Unwearied. See Unweary'd.
Beholds the unwearied sweep of wood that scales
By pacing here, unwearied and alone,
Unwearied in that service ; rather say
Chime forth unwearied canticles.
Unwearied joy, and life without its cares.
A pen unwearied—to indite,
The unwearied arrow hath pursued its flight !
Th' unwearied glance of woodman's echo'd stroke ;
Th' unwearied sweep of wood thy cliffs that scales,
With pulseless hand, and fix'd unwearied gaze,
Checked our unwearied steps. Let this alone
I have protracted, in the unwearied heavens
By that unwearied signal, kenne'd afar ;
Two months unwearied of severest storm,
Be ready and unwearied without plea

Unweary'd. Forgets, unweary'd watchiog every side,
Unwedded. Unwedded Julia, terror-smitten, hears
 And Matrons and unwedded Sisters old ;
Unweeting. Bounded before him,—but the unweet-ing Child
 Unweeting that to him the joy was given Unwelcome. Unwelcome insight ! Yet there are
 A not unwelcome aid may lend,
 O'er man and beast a not unwelcome boon
 I feign not ; witness that unwelcome shock
 Unwelcome mixtures as the uncouth noise
 Appeared unwelcome dawn
 Duty ?—an unwelcome clog ;
 You and your not unwelcome days of mirth
 A language not unwelcome to sick hearts
 A warning not unwelcome. Fare thee well !
 Upon unwelcome things, which unawares
Unwept. There was he left alone, unwept,
Unwel. Hail, Zaragoza ! If with unwept eye
Unwholesome. Of winter evenings, when unwholesome rains
 Food not unwholesome ; earth and air correct
Unwildly. Thence issuing oft, unwildly as ye stalk,
Unwieldy. Thence issuing often with unwieldy stalk,
 Forced hard against the wind a thick unwieldy flight.
 And, if you can, the unwieldy toad
 Of the unwieldy creature he bestrode,
Unwilling. And here the unwilling mind may more than trace
 —Therefore, unwilling to forget that day,
 Recall the not unwilling Maid,
 And hope that is unwilling to be fed ;
 Not unwilling to obey ;
 Though not unwilling here to admit
 Unwilling to surrender
 Although with no unwilling mind
 That, by the unwilling ploughshare, died to prove
 But, ah ! th' unwilling mind may more than trace
 Content and not unwilling now to give
 Unwilling to forego, confess, submit,
 He paused, as if unwilling to proceed,
Unwillingly. And what the Dell unwillingly reveals Listeners who not unwillingly admit
 Will not unwillingly their place resign ;
 Which now we too unwillingly resign
 Yet mingled not unwillingly with sneers
 Wilingly or unwillingly revealed,
 Since I withdrew unwillingly from France,
Unwillingness. It is not from unwillingness to praise,
Unwise. Not always is the heart unwise,
 Forbear to deem the Chronider unwise,
Unwisely. Even now, who, not unwisely bold, Unwithered. When I beheld thy blanched unwithered cheeks
 Or canopy of yet unwithered fern,
Unwithered. Hath flow'd, "with pomp of waters, unwithered too,"
Unwooded. To leave.—Unwooded, yet unforbidden,
 Unwooded, unthought-of even—simplicity.
Unworldly. With its unworldly votaries, for the sake
 (If with unworldly ends and aims compared) Unworldly-minded. A wild, unworldly-minded youth, given up
Unworm. Move where the blasted soil is not unworm,
 Put on fresh raiment—fill that hour unworm :
Unworthy. Unworthy far we are undone—
Unworthily. Unworthily admires.
 Unworthily, disliking here, and there
 Of aught unworthily conceived, endured Unworthiness. Trembling, through my unworthiness, with fear
 Alas, poor Book ! for thy unworthiness,
 Upon her own unworthiness. To me,
Unworthy. Marmaduke ! I suspect unworthy tales
 But how unworthy of that sire was he !
 Unworthy things she talked, and wild ;
 And forced unworthy stripes to bear,
 Unworthy successors of thee,
 Earth knows, is all unworthy to survey.
 As no unworthy Partner in their flight
 And yawn for his unworthy sake,
 Am not unworthy of thy fellowship ;
 Degenerate Douglas ! oh, the unworthy Lord !
 As being all unworthy to detain
 An offering not unworthy to find place,
 From her unworthy seat, the cloudy stall
 Full oft the unworthy brow of lawless force ;
 Not utterly unworthy to endure
 If aught unworthy be my choice,
 Lonsdale ! it were unworthy of a Guest,
 In those unworthy vestments worn
 And no unworthy aim,
 In some of its-unworthy vanities,
 Passions unworthy of youth's generous heart .
 In that unworthy service was prepared
 Is labour not unworthy of regard ;
 To yield him no unworthy maintenance.
 The forms of things with an unworthy eye ?
 With no unworthy prospect. But enough ;

Unworthy—continued.
 Unworthy therefore, and unhallowed : no,
 The inmates not unworthy of their home
Unwrinkled. That Time, unwrinkled grand sire, fings
Unwritten. Upon unwritten story fondly traced
Up, omitted.
Upbore. "The staff I well remember which upbore Upborne. No longer) with what ecstasy upborne
 Upborne, at evening, on replenished wing,
Upbraided. Approaching, and upbraided the tardy gale ;
 Those idle Shepherd-hoys upbraid,
 The Stranger sighs, nor scruples to upbraid
 Unfruitful solitudes, that seemed to upbraid
 Woke from the dream, the dreamer to upbraid,
 Leaving the intermeddler to upbraid
Upbraided. Upbraided him with slackness, he returned
 Yet, thus upbraided, I may show
 Upbraided his distempered folly.
 Outstretching flameward his upbraided hand
Upbraiddings. With suppliant gestures and upbraiddings stern ;
Upbraids. And half upbraids their silence. But that night
Up-caught. Up-caught in whirlwinds, nowhere can find rest.
Up-colling. Up-colling, and inveterately convolved ;
Up-conjured. For, suddenly up-conjured from the Main,
Up-gathered. And are up-gathered now like sleeping
 flowers ;
Upheave. Upheave, so seems it, from her natural station
Upheaved. Disease consumed thy vitals ; War upheaved
 Dread hour ! when, upheaved by war's sulphurous blast,
 A hundred hills their dusky backs upheaved
Upheld. Whether the mighty beam, in scorn upheld,
 Upheld by warnings heeded not too late
 That took upheld as with maternal care
 Hath still upheld me, and upholds me now
 When she upheld the cool refreshment drawn
 With no determined object, though upheld
 With pillars crowded, and the roof upheld
 This pleasing fancy (cherished and upheld
 Upheld, he dutiously pursued the round
 Fellows to those that lustily upheld
Uphold. By which they uphold their craft from age to age
 By Heaven afforded to uphold her maimed
 Aid, with congenial influence, to uphold
 With magnitude and strength fit to uphold
 Would re-establish and uphold :
 Justice and Peace through Her uphold their claims ;
 Peaceful abodes, where Justice might uphold
 Uphold our Spirits urged to kindred flight
 Uphold a Monument as fair
 Uphold us, cherish, and have power to make
 By solitary study, to uphold
Upholder. Of the Upholder of the tranquil soul, Upholders. Who are their own upholders, to themselves
Upholds. And God upholds them all :
 Hath still upheld me, and upholds me now
 Which the imaginative Will upholds
Upholstery. And all the mean upholstery of the place, Upland. And gives, where woods the chequered upland strew,
 On airy upland, and by forest rills,
 And gives, where woods the chequer'd upland strew,
 Or moonlight Upland lifts her hoary breast ;
Uplands. My sheep upon the uplands fed,
Up-leaping. And, now and then, a fish up-leaping snapped
Up-led. Ever beheld. Up-led with mutual help,
Uplift. He views the suo uplift his golden fire,
 Uplift in quiet their illumined forms,
 Uplift his hand—that would be evidence.
 And ventures now to uplift his eyes ;
 "Uplift the Standard !" was the cry
 "Uplift it !" cried once more the Band,
 "Uplift it !" said Northumberland—
 Weep not, meek Bride ! uplift thy timid brow.
 Abstract those gleaming relics, and uplift them,
Uplifted. Uplifted by the tempest whirling by ;
 The uplifted arm of Suicide ;
 Whence I have risen, uplifted on the breeze
 In choral song ; and, while the uplifted cross
 —Divinest Object which the uplifted eye
 The uplifted palms, the silent marble lips
 Full soon to be uplifted high,
 Uplifted to the purest sky
 Though without one uplifted look,
 Uplifted to the purest sky
 While he, uplifted towards thee, laughs outright,
 Will reappear before the uplifted eye
 Above his head uplifted in vain prayer
 The Promise, with uplifted ear ;
 Uplifted in his arms the child,

Uplifted—continued.

Thanks with uplifted heart, that I was reared
Uplifted, he, as through an instrument,
Issued, and with uplifted eyes beheld,
Was oftentimes uplifted, and they seemed
On me uplifted from the vantage-ground
Uplifted; why deceive ourselves? in sooth,
Uplifted, pointing to the starry sky,
A lowly valed, and yet uplifted high
Uplifted; here, serene pavilions bright,
Uplifting. The Ass, uplifting a hind hoof,
Stood like a lofty mount, uplifting slowly
Uplifting toward high Heaven her fiery brand,
Himself above each lower thought uplifting,
Uplifts. The swan uplifts his chest, and backward flings
Nearer she draws; a breeze uplifts her veil;
Uplighted. In barn uplighted; and companions boom,
Uplinking. Foot-bound uplooking at this lovely tree
Upon. (Partial list.)
Upon the midland Sea. You knew his bearing
That you do press upon me. There—indeed—
And look upon the pleasant face of Nature—
Flashes a look of terror upon guilt,
I caught her voice; she threw herself upon me,
That, when your praise was warm upon my tongue,
It struck upon my heart I know not how.
Upon the self-same spot, in rain or storm,
I cast a look upon the Girl, and felt
That died the moment the air breathed upon it.
Upon the self-same spot, still round and round,
Upon these savage confines, we have seen you
And nowhere upon earth its place so fit
Something I strike upon which turns my mind
I could have dropped asleep upon his breast.
And when I felt your hand upon my arm
To stand upon our guard, and with our swords
Prattling upon his knee, to call him Father—
Trottering upon the very verge of life,
Some uncouth name upon the native rock,
From the wan Moon, upon the towers and walls,
Prayer, text, or symbol, graven upon the stone;
Upon the breast Thy name do glorify.
Upon thy heart, whence, through that glory's might,
"Upon his bier this Innocent doth lie
Methought she laid a grain upon my tongue.
Upon Saint Valentine's returning day.
And that was right upon a tree fast by,
Now, God, quoth I, that died upon the rood,
And there she sat and sung—upon that tree—
To think upon my truth and steadfastness,
For which upon the tenth night if thou fall
Thy horns were old as now upon that morrow,
Upon the walls fast also would he walk,
Upon the second step of that small pile,
And careless hand his aims upon the ground,
Upon his lips or anger at his heart.
Been doomed so long to settle upon earth
Intent upon thy way, pause, though in haste I
Upon herself resting immovably.
Upper. Of Arthur,—who, to upper light restored,
Thy Husband walks the paths of upper air;
Hell to the lyre bowed low; the upper arch
Deep underground? Or in the upper air,
Of April, smiling high in upper air?
Warned thee these upper regions to forego;
To breathe the Elysian peace in upper air.
Rapt into upper regions, like the bee
To upper air from Mammon's loathsome den.
Through upper air to an Idalian glade,
Rides high; then all the upper air they fill
The raven croaks, and fills the upper air
Uppermost. Of gay confusion still be uppermost.
Uppermost in the midst of fiercest strife.
With hind endeavours? Yet, still uppermost,
Up-plied. His pinnace, a small vagrant barge, up-plied
Up-raised. From her bare straw the Woman half upraised
His lips were moving; and his eyes, upraised to sue for grace.
Once more the Rood had been upraised
As his own soul. And, when with eye upraised
Was less upraised in spirit than abashed;
How can you droop, if willing to be upraised?
Victoriously upraised his clear bright eye;
Uprear. Pines, on the coast, through mist their tops uprear,
He views the Sun uprear his golden fire,
Up-reared. The swans that with white chests up-reared in pride
Up-reared its head. I struck and struck again,
And, from the plain, with toil immense, upreared
Up-rearing. She prayed, her withered hand up-rearing, Upright. Heaven grant that he spare but that one upright twig
One upright arm sustains the cheek,
Sits upright on a feeding horse?
You will suppose that with an upright path
And that herself and hers should stand upright
The tall and upright figure of a Man.

Upright—continued.

The largest of her upright leaves;
With its upright living tree
And standing upright and alone,
Wise, upright, valiant; not a servile band,
And upright weapons innocently gleaming,
Grasped in his hand; and lo! with upright sword
A vault where the bodies are hurried upright!
Then, resting on her upright mind,
Then, where with mangled throat he lay upright,
Stiff, lank, and upright; a more meagre man
Of trees and hills and water, bolt upright
Of a blind Beggar, who, with upright face,
Enclosed between an upright mass of rock
A hospitable chink, and stood upright,
And hence, this upright shaft of unheven stone,
Ending in dust; of upright magistrates,
A ragged Offspring, with their upright hair
With the same upright form! The sun is fixed,
Uprisen. Of worshippers kneeling to their up-risen
God?
Uprisen, as if to check approaching Night,
Uprisen—to lodge among ancestral kings;
When thou, uprisen, shalt break thy double yoke,
Uprisen betimes, our journey we renewed,
Of shameful imbecility uprisen,
Uprisses. Uprisses like a ghost!
Uprising. And long ere the uprising of the Sun
And each uprising or receding spire
On the thrilled ear, and flags uprising, yield
Up-roar. Its way with uproar, till the ruin, drowned
That there was a loud uproar in the hills.
An uproar and a drunken din.
Of boys that bathe remote the faint uproar,
While, as Night bids the startling uproar die,
'Mid tumult and uproar this man must repose;
Not seldom from the uproar I retired
Continued and the loud uproar; at last,
Amid the uproar of the rabblement,
Analogy to uproar and misrule,
And while the uproar of that desperate strife
Softens its evening uproar towards a close Uprooted. See Storm-uprooted.
Or let the aged tree uprooted lie,
Uprooted; would re-consecrate our wells
Uprose. At whose hehest uprore on British ground
Uprose the morning sun;
Till from his couch the wished-for Sun uprose.
Uproused. Uproused by recollection injuried, railed
Upset. When, to upset his spiteful mirth,
By us with expo encountered, be upset.
Upstart. Exploding upstart Theory, insists
By each new upstart notion? In the ports
Upstarting. But now, upstarting with affright
Up-starting, Cynthia skimming the mountain-dew
Upstarts. Upstarts a glittering snake,
Blithe Flora from her couch upstarts,
Up-stay. Glad meetings, tender partings, that up-stay
Upstayed. Unsteadfast, by a blasted yew upstay'd;
And, by some friendly finger's help upstay'd
Upslirring. Upslirring hulk, abstracted by a charm
Upswell. Alps overlooking Alps their state upswell;
Upswelled. The azure sea upswelled upon the sight.
His wasp's nest in Jew's heart, upswelled—O woe,
Up-torn. That sang of trees up-torn and vessels tost—
Up-turned. These are strange sights—the mind of man, upturned,
Upturned with curious pains, the Bard, a Seer,
Upturned the soil;
The upturned soil receives the hopeful seed—
Glanc'd off upturn'd along the breezy shore,
A stranded ship, with keel upturned, that rests
Upturned, as if his mind were rapt, or lost
A sad and lovely face, with upturn'd eyes,
Up-turning. Up-turning, then, along an open field, Upward. And wild Impatience, pointing upward,
showed,
Winding in ordered pomp their upward way,
Shouts upward, darting his long neck before.
Upward he looks—"and calls it luxury."
Stretched at his feet, with steadfast upward eye,
That faded silent from the upward eye
Or distant herds that pasturing upward creep,
And sending upward sparkling light.
Fixed on a Star his upward eye;
In her upward eye of fire!
And upward, high as Malvern's cloudy crest:
One upward hand, as if she needed rest
Fulfilling; but, we trust, her upward track
Wandering, with upward eye, the tall tower grow
Our upward and our downward way;
Must needs be conversant with upward looks,
And wild Impatience, panting upward, show'd
Soon fading "silent" from her upward eye,
Nought but the herds that pasturing upward creep,
While flash her upward eyes severe delight.
To glance an upward look on two huge Peaks,
Upward it winds, as if, in summer heats,
Have rendered prone, can upward look to heaven;

And we have always used him well ;
Used to sing in heavenly tone,
As used to be that sign of love
To kirk she had been used to go,
For he, with tongue not used to falter,
And Love—a charmer's voice, that used to lend,
Maylead the thoughts, thus struggling used to stand
That used to spread its boughs, and ring
Made room where wolf and boar were used to range?

But Fortune, who had long been used to sport

Like a sick Lover, then this dog was used
Where an old man had used to sit alone, . . .
Wert used to lie and gaze upon the clouds
Than other intellects had mine been used
The wondrous influence of power gently used,
O'er paths they used to deck : carnations, once
He said that she was used to ramble far.—

For gentler uses, oft-times Nature takes
To finer uses. They for me must cease ;

Useth. Who most it useth, him 'twill most impair.
Usher. —Well does thine aspect usher in this Day ;
Ushering. Far oftener then, had ushering worse event,
Using. The Man was using his best skill to gain
Usual. Within a rocky cave, its usual home.
Went through his usual tasks, a silent change
Usurp. Dare to usurp ;—thou has a sword to wield, Usurpation. Of Nature, by a cunning usurpation
Of usurpation, when the light of sense
Usurpations. And over fancied usurpations brood,
Usurped. I found how my domains had been usurped,
Of power usurped ; with proclamation high,
No—some fierce Maniac hath usurped her name ;
A smart Assembly-room usurped the ground
The old Lion and usurped his place, in slight
That had usurped upon a living thought
Usurped upon far as the sight could reach.
Widely—invetrately usurped upon,
Produced, when thoughtless Folly hath usurped
Usurping. Usurping where the fairest herbage smiled :
Usurping, with a prevalence
In these usurping times of fear and pain ?
Meek eye shuts up the whole usurping host

Intent to use his utmost haste,
The utmost anger of the sky :
And does his utmost to display
To the utmost of his force !
Of joy, that from her utmost walls
Survive, and Fortune's utmost anger try ;
Their utmost bounty on thy head :
Snows, torrents —to the region's utmost bound,
Have perished ?—Verily, to her utmost depth,
And though you with your utmost skill
The utmost solitude of age to face,
The horizon's utmost boundary ; far above
This label seemed of the utmost we can know,
And helpful to his utmost power : and there
Which unassisted reason's utmost power
Of days advancing toward their utmost length,
That filled her plains, that reached her utmost shores,
Even at the utmost distance of two miles

Than these, and utter your devotion there
To utter melancholy moans
To utter notes of gladness,
And utter England's name with sadly-plausive voice.
Their utter stillness, and the silent grace
To move in sunshine ?—Utter thanks, my Soul !
In solitude, and utter peace :
Of utter desolation made
And what a pensive Sage doth utter, hear !
And let, for them, thy fountains utter strange
And let us utter thanks for blessings sown

Utterance. With something of a lofty utterance

With that faint utterance, which tells
Their natural utterance ? whence this strange re-lease
She sues for help with piteous utterance ! . . .
Deep feeling, that found utterance loud,
Utterance of thanks that we have past with ease,
His utterance finds ; and, conscious of the gain,
While they give utterance to the prayer
Surpass all science and all utterance ;
A timely utterance gave that thought relief,
With what strange utterance did the loud dry wind
For utterance, to think what easy change
Nor can my tongue give utterance to a name
I would give utterance in numerous verse,
By vocal utterance, or blaze of light,
Impulse and utterance. The whispering air
Which then were silent ; but crave utterance now.
To which the lips give public utterance
His own peculiar utterance for distress
Prompt utterance ; but the Vicar interposed
My voice the utterance of a keen regret,

Must hear, first uttered from my orchard trees ;
Those words were uttered as in pensive mood
And tongues that uttered wisdom—better none :
Uttered to Heaven in ecstasy devout !

A Visitant by whom these words were uttered :—
No sound is uttered,—but a deep
The words are uttered from my heart,

Without word uttered, forth he 'gan to pace ;
Timidly uttered, for she lives, the meek,
One word he softly uttered,
An Ode, in passion uttered, which foretold
Was Nature's, uttered from her Alpine throne ;
And every word he uttered, on my ears
They uttered was a dart, by counter-winds
Was uttered, midnight darkness seemed to take
The words he uttered shall not pass away
The words he uttered, and the scene that lay

A soundless waste, a trackless vacancy!
To vacancy, and horror strong:
The vacancy between me and those days
Nor aught of blinder vacancy, scooped out
And on the very edge of vacancy
Or range the grass lawn in vacancy;
Supplanted, not for treacherous vacancy
Vacant. Yet still the tender, vacant gloom remains;
Left vacant for the day, I loved to roam.
Through vacant worlds where Nature never gave
And vacant, a huge waste around him spread;
And on the vacant throne his worthier Brother placed.
The vacant city slept; the busy winds,
Her long and vacant holiday;
Of the dry wreck. And in our vacant mood,
What solemn, vacant, interesting,
And on the vacant air. Then up I rose,
In vacant or in pensive mood,
Looks to the earth, and to the vacant air;
And vacant doth the region which they thronged
He sits, and with a vacant eye
Into a vacant mind. Can written book
But Francis, in the vacant hall,
Methinks that to some vacant hermitage
To cheer the long dark hours of vacant night—
Upon some vacant sunny day,
The vacant and the busy, maids and youths,
While round a vacant board the chiefs recline,
To vacant musing, unproved neglect
Now vacant; pale-faced babes whom I had left
Hid in her vacant interlunar cave."
Or animate an hour of vacant ease.
Of Death, and win the vacant and the vain
Alone, through half the vacant sabbath day;
Thought I, if master of a vacant hour,
Filling a space, else vacant, to exalt
With vacant mind, not seldom may observe
To hold a vacant commerce day by day
Vacation. Yet was this deep vacation not given up
A breathing-time, vacation, or a truce,
Vacillating. The vacillating Bondman of the Pope
The vacillating, inconsistent good.
Vacillous. No sad vacillous his heart annoy.
Vacuna's. Extolled, behind Vacuna's crumbling fane.
Vagarlas. Such as pursue their feared vagaries
Of these vagaries, with an eye so rich
Vagary. Had crossed her purpose with some quaint vagary,
Vaga's. On Vaga's breast the fretful waves,
Vagrant. Then sets. In total gloom the Vagrant sighs,
Pursued his vagrant way, with feet half bare;
He fled, a vagrant sinner, the murderer's fate to shun.
The Vagrant must, no doubt, be loitering somewhere
You are found at last, thanks to the vagrant Troop
Ha! it is so!—That vagrant Hag!—this comes Vagrant over desert sands,
This vagrant owl is playing here—

Vagrant—continued.

Had roamed about, with vagrant hands
But of the Vagrant none took thought;
Of vagrant dwellers in the houseless woods,
To the soft murmur of the vagrant Bee.
"My little vagrant Form of light,
A gratulation from that vagrant Voice
Plenteously yielded to the vagrant breeze.
Farewell the solace of the vagrant reed!
His pinnace, a small vagrant herge, up-piled
Well pleased to pitch a vagrant tent among
Some vagrant mother, whose arch little ones,
A vagrant Merchant under a heavy load
Or even found pleasure, in such vagrant course,
Of vagrant poverty; from rifted barns
Vagrants. Off to some other play the Joyous Vagrants flew!
From many other uncouth vagrants (passed
—But, like the vagrants of the gipsy tribe,
Vague. And restrain the vague desire?
Sheds round the transient harm or vague mischance
No quest was hers of vague desire,
Vague minds, while men are growing out of boys;
Conjecture vague, and idle fear,
By vague thoughts, lured by fancies wild;
Of its vague mountains and unreal sky!
How fancy sickens by vague hopes beset;
Vague sympathies have urged her to take flight:
Tempt the vague will tried standards to disown;
Vague longing, haply bred by want of power,
Or walks of open scandal, but in vague
On the vague reading of a truant youth
Vague and unsound; and having brought the books
Filled with vague hopes, he undertook the charge
Of contradiction, from some vague desire
"Vague thoughts are these; but, if belief may rest
Valled. For tournament, his beaver valled,
Vain. Till higher mounted, strives in vain to cheer
Vain thought!—Yet be as now thou art,
And so he sent a feeble shout—in vain
But sought in vain; for now, all wild, forlorn,
Vain hope! for fraud took all that he had earned.
Of the mind's phantoms, horrible as vain.
But vain were wishes, efforts vain as they;
In such dismay my prayers and tears were vain:
Was come, I tried in vain the crowd's resort,
And not in vain, while they went pacing side by side.
She strove, and not in vain, her head to rear;
In vain to find a friendly face we try,
To make the proud and vain his tributaries,
Listening in vain. He has a tender heart!
But that was a vain hope. You have struck home,
'Tis all in vain.
And words that tell these things be heard in vain?
O vain and causeless melancholy!
Struggled with the flood in vain:
Doth seemingly in vain its fragrance yield,
He urged his persevering suit in vain.
For two months now in vain we shall be sought;
And certes not in vain; he had inventions rare.
And, feeling that the hope is vain,
And wishes, vain as mine, may be
And the vain rank the pilgrims bore while yet on earth.
Much wondering how I could have sought in vain
With sailors longing for a breeze in vain,
Is rendered vain as love for great.
Than in old time;—thou not in vain
Poets, vain men in their mood!
Vain is the glory of the sky,
The beauty vain of field and grove,
Though she appear not, and be sought in vain.
Looked up for it in vain:
That not in vain aspired
And the air is calm in vain;
'Tis vain to strive for mastery.
Rattled his chain;—'twas all in vain,
False thoughts, thoughts bold and vain,
And all the ways of men, so vain and melancholy.
Be but a vain belief, yet, oh! how oft—
"No Spectre greets me,—no vain Shadow this;
Could draw, when we had parted, vain delight,
Round the dear Shade she would have clung—'tis vain:
Thus, all in vain exhorted and reproved,
Whence doubts that came too late, and wishes vain,
The Chamouis-chaser awed in vain
—I sing in vain;—the pines have hushed their waving:
And not in vain, when thoughts are cast
To keep the treasure unimpaired. Vain thought!
Which ever strives in vain itself to satisfy,
"The vain distress-gun,—from a leeward shore,
Groaned the poor Beast—alas! in vain;
"In vain, through every changeable year,
"In vain, through water, earth, and air,
Were a vain notion; but the hope is dear
Even then we may perhaps in vain implore
She soared—and I awoke, struggling in vain to follow.

Had paid to woman ; somewhat vain he was,
A light, a cruel, and vain world out off
How could it otherwise ? for not in vain

That my demerits did not sue in vain
A course of vain delights and thoughtless guilt,
Of vain endeavours tired ; and by his own,
Yet, should this confidence prove vain, the wise
For the small wren to build in,—not in vain,
The weeds of Romish phantasy, in vain
And shrunk from vain observations, to lurk
Yet so it pleased a fond, a vain, old Man,
And manhood's vain anxiety dismissed ;
How vain, thought I, is it by change of place
Some vain distinctions, marks of earthly state
With empty actions and vain passions stuffed,
Are abject, vain, presumptuous, and perverse.

 Silent, and steadfast as the vaulted sky.
 Known and familiar, which the vaulted sky Vault's. And the vault's hoary sides to which they cling,
Vaults. To loathsome vaults, where heart-sick anguish tossed,
 The mouldy vaults of the dull idiot's brain,
 The captive 'mid damp vaults unsunned, unaired,
 Poured from his vaults of everlasting snow ;
 In whose dark vaults my own shall soon be laid,
 Ere we descend into these silent vaults,
Vault. So vault a throng of followers, filled with pride
Vaunted. The free-born Soul—that World whose

Veil, Of vehicles and travellers, horse and foot,

Their veil, but not for me—'twas in fit place
By veil of noontide darkness overcast ? . . . 70
Whose veil is unremoved
Said she, lifting up her veil ; . . . 139
Through a thin veil of glittering haze was seen
The Primrose for a veil had spread . . . 149
Veil of such celestial hue ;
Which through that veil is indistinctly seen,
The liquid veil that seeks not to hide them.
Most potent when mists veil the sky,
A veil is lifted—can she slight
But neither veil thy head in shadows dim,
With awe, receives the hallowed veil,
Nearer she draws ; a breeze uplifts her veil ;
" Bright is thy veil, O Moon, as thou art bright !"
Meanwhile that veil, removed or thrown aside,
Nor veil, with restless film, his staring eyes.
Those trees, a veil just half withdrawn ;
The solemnising veil was drawn
Saw ye the soft yet awful veil . . . 344
If foresight could have rent the veil
Thy veil in mercy o'er the records, hung
Of the devout, a veil of ecstasy !
Truths whose thick veil Science has drawn aside ?
And out of sun-bright waves, a lucid veil,
White all-too-daringly the veil . . . 499
How delicate the leafy veil . . . 508
A voice—that world whose veil no hand can lift .
Reviewed through Love's transparent veil of years ?
Thus, Lady, is retiredness a veil . . . 539
Without a veil between :
That lifts up the veil of our nature in thee.
Nor pass unprais'd the robe and veil divine,
Put off her veil, and, self-transmuted, stood
By that transparent veil with light divine,
Too justly bore a part. A veil had been
To which the heaven of heavens is but a veil.
Their leafy umbrage, turns the dusky veil
And admiration ; lifting up a veil,
Or, in the garden, under friendly veil
As if with wish to veil the restless orb ;
A veil of glory for the ascending moon ;
Without reserve or veil ; and as a power
The veil, or where it parts at once, to spy
Veiled. See Half-veiled.
The sky is veiled, and every cheerful sight ;
(Slow-moving ark of all his hopes !) that veiled
Know them no more. If Truth, who veiled her face
While clouds of incense mounting veiled the roof,
He veiled, attendant on Thessalian flocks)
Of water-lilies veiled in misty steam—
Veiled nun, or pilgrim resting on his staff ;
To self-importance, hallowed it, and veiled
That which is veiled from waking thought ; conjured
Open, and day's pure cheerfulness, but veiled
Pan or Apollo, veiled in human form ;
Retired behind the mountain-tops or veiled

It was a vein that never stopped—
And sooth for Benjamin a vein . . . 180
Or, like the nightingale, her joyous vein
No fond hand left to stanch the unclosing vein,
In languid streams through every thrilling vein ;
And vein of water, glad to be rolled on
In this blind world the guiding vein of hope ;
Veins. See Life-veins.
Sweet poison spreads along the listener's veins,

Along the corpse runs in veins of gold.

Venerably. Wondrously meek or venerably calm,
Venerate. Nothing is left which I can venerate ;
His actions witness, venerate his mien,
A face to fear and venerate ;
Of polity which wise men venerate,
Veneration. In veneration and the people's love ;
Vengeance. The spirit of vengeance seemed to ride the air.
And doth call out for vengeance. Do not add, Hear me, ye Heavens !—may vengeance haunt the fiend
Hence, and how soon ! that war of vengeance waged
With insincere intent, on me her vengeance wreak !
Vengeance upon his head will fall,
How long shall vengeance sleep ? Ye patient
Heavens, how long ?
Of righteous Vengeance side by side appear,
An old weak Man for vengeance thrown aside,
Hell opens, and the heavens in vengeance crack
That he on her would vengeance take.
That vengeance on this Cuckoo I may wreak.
Full of one passion, vengeance, rage, or fear ?
Fed on the day of vengeance yet to come.
Under the vengeance of her cruel son,
No vengeance, and no hatred—needs must feel
Malice so subtle, vengeance so refin'd.
Vengeful. Which they behold, whom vengeful Furies

Of vengeful retribution, theirs who throned

 The human dwelling, or the vernal thrush
 The fermentation, and the vernal flower?
 What joy more lasting than a vernal flower?
 Then will a vernal prospect greet your eye.
 Enough!—I fear, too much.—One vernal evening,
 The vernal cuckoo shouted; not for him
 Like vernal food to sabbath sunshine left.
 The vernal field infuses fresh delight

Vernon. From nearest kindred, Vernon her new name;
Verse. With suit that I would speak in verse of that sequestered child
 And for the Subject of my Verse I heaved a pensive sigh.

In verse, which to thy ear might come, would treat this simple theme,
 But verse was what he had been wedded to;
 In more delightful verse than skill of mine
 Submissive to the might of verse
 To accompany the verse? The mountain blast
 In old time worshipped as the god of verse,
 Rejoiced that clamorous spell and magic verse
 In my past verse; or shall be, in the lays
 How Verse may build a princely throne
 And Pity sanctifies the Verse
 Thus far contented, that for You her verse
 To whose dear memories his sepulchral verse
 Illustrated with never-dying verse,
 By love of beauty moved, to enshrine in verse
 Verse to glad notes prophetic of the hour
 Pure flow the verse, pure, vigorous, free, and bright,
 Pleased could my verse, a speaking monument,
 A Pastor such as Chaucer's verse portrays;
 And echoes from old verse speak true,
 And this poor verse, and worthier lays,
 Verse that would guard thy memory, HART'S-HORN TREE!

Such as my verse now yields, while moonbeams play
 Should here be welcome, and in verse enwrought:
 One measure, Orpheus! of thy verse;
 Even for a moment, has our verse deplored
 That verse of mine, whate'er its varying mood,
 Now prose and verse sunk into disrepute
 For deathless powers to verse belong, . . . 393 Hart's-horn 14

What a fair world were ours for verse to paint,
 Domestic Portrait! have to verse consigned
 And aid my verse, content with local bounds
 Attuned to verse that, crowning light Distress
 And shall the Verse not tell of lighter gifts
 Till the first verse he learned it all by rote.
 For I'd take my last leave both of verse and of prose.
 —Brother and friend, if verse of mine
 As long as verse of mine shall breathe the air
 Matsins and vespers of harmonious verse!
 Recesses in man's heart, immortal verse
 In strife too humble to be named in verse
 I have been harassed with the toil of verse,
 In progress through this Verse, my mind hath looked Poor earthly casket of immortal verse,
 In slender accents of sweet verse, some tale
 Whether by native prose, or numerous verse,
 This verse is dedicate to Nature's self,
 By glittering verse; but further, doth receive,
 And, through the turnings intricate of verse,
 Of magic fiction, verse of mine perchance
 While yet a youth undisciplined in verse,
 A glad preamble to this Verse: I sang
 Erewhile my verse played idly with the flowers
 The record; and, in faithful verse, was given
 That would profane the sanctity of verse.
 Will I record the praises, making verse
 Thus wrongfully of verse, however rude,
 Thanks in sincerest verse have been elsewhere . . . 749 Prelude 14, 233

Verse—continued.

I would give utterance in numerous verse . . . 755
 Would chant, in lonely peace, the spousal verse . . . 755
 Yet wanting the accomplishment of verse, . . . 757
 Had delat with—I will here record in verse ; . . . 757
 By melody, and by the charm of verse. . . . 771
 Scribbled with verse ; a broken angling-rod . . . 781
 "Smooth verse, inspired by no unlettered Muse," . . . 846
 And wisdom married to immortal verse ?" . . . 865
 That many, sweet to hear of in soft verse, . . . 880
 Make him more thankful, then to call on verse . . . K.8. 239
 Methinks I could repeat in tuneful verse, . . . K.8. 248
Versed. To tuneful tongues in mystery versed ; . . . 237
 Meek, nobly versed in simple discipline— . . . 254
 In ancient story versed, whose breast had heaved . . . 695
 Polished in arts, and in punctilio versed ; . . . 711
 Versed in the characters of men ; and bound, . . . 875
Verses. Muttering the verses which I muttered first . . . 151
 And Angels favoured these far-echoed verses ;— . . . 374
 Repeating favourite verses with one voice, . . . 674
 With tender pleasure of the verses graven . . . 726
Very. (Partial list.)
 The very ocean hath its hour of rest. . . . 30
 He seemed to quarrel with the very thought. . . . 38
 He has the very hardest heart on earth ; . . . 45
 I think, good Woman, you are the very person . . . 45
 And very superstition of the place, . . . 49
 Tottering upon the very verge of life, . . . 57
 Old Man ! you were a very Lynx, you knew . . . 61
 A very hunter did I rush . . . 79
 Her very heart, her grief grew strong ; . . . 82
 In very wantonness of heart. . . . 84
 In very idleness. . . . 86
 Through my very heart they shine ; . . . 112
 My very moments are too full . . . 113
 Sometimes with thoughts of very bliss ! . . . 117
 The very shadows of the clouds . . . 117
 He's idle all for very joy. . . . 127
 And like the very soul of evil, . . . 129
 And that's the very Pony, too ! . . . 130
 (His very words I give to you,) . . . 131
 His very feet bright as the dazzling soow . . . 139
 A very Harp in all but size ! . . . 163
 A very reptile could presume . . . 167
 The very pulse of the machine ; . . . 186
 Life which the very stars reprove . . . 192
 With lichens to the very top, . . . 197
 Down to the very fountain where he lies. . . . 201
 Green to the very door ; and wreaths of smoke . . . 206
 As if a very Delity he were ! . . . 213
 Mortals, rejoice ! the very Angels quit . . . 227
 In shape a very crescent-moon : . . . 236
 The very flowers are sacred to the Poor, . . . 230
 Dear God ! the very houses seem asleep ; . . . 269
 Sweet Highland Girl, a very shower . . . 287
 "Sweet HIGHLAND Girl ! a very shower . . . 344
 Such ground I from my very heart enjoy ! . . . 349
 Things in their very essences at strife, . . . 364
 Yea, by her brother's very name, . . . 409
 The very Doe of other years ! . . . 414
 Methinks their very names shine still and bright ; . . . 414
 Like thoughts whose very sweetness yieldeth proof . . . 451
 Her very self stood there. . . . 479
 Of this the very brother. . . . 486
 A very nightingale. . . . 486
 A very hands as you would say ! . . . 490
 So that the very heaving of his breath . . . 523
 Alas, alas ! my very heart will break, . . . 560
 For very grief of which my heart shall cleave ;— . . . 564
 Destined to war from very infancy . . . 575
 Start at the reliques of that very thigh, . . . 600
 Nor rest till they had reached the very door . . . 633
 Before the very sun that brightens it, . . . 635
 Whom chance had stationed in the very room . . . 653
 It seemed the very garments that I wore . . . 663
 Well do I call to mind the very week . . . 672
 Four years and thirty, told this very week, . . . 675
 Maintained even by the very name and thought . . . 676
 To land at Calais on the very eve . . . 680
 Too soon, while yet the very flash and gleam . . . 682
 The very gilding, lamps and painted scrolls, . . . 693
 Born in a land whose very name appeared . . . 712
 Yet at this very moment do tears start . . . 713
 Along that very Loire, with festal mirth . . . 716
 That very morning had I turned aside . . . 726
 Along that very shore which I had skimmed . . . 727
 But to be young was very Heaven ! O times, . . . 728
 The very being of the immortal soul. . . . 730
 Her very presence such a sweetness breathed, . . . 736
 Must live within the very light and air . . . 742
 No other than the very heart of man, . . . 743
 (Still to the very going-out of youth) . . . 749
 Or, rather say, safe down by very chance, . . . 776
 Yet, in the very centre of the crowd, . . . 799
 Whom, for the very sake of love, he loves. . . . 806
 Why ?—for this very reason that they felt, . . . 815
 A very hero till his point was gained, . . . 842
 As by the very presence of the Fiend . . . 843
 And on the very edge of vacancy . . . 865
 Its very spring a season of decay ! . . . 878

Very—continued.

And where the very monarch of the brook, . . . 882

 Thee, Vesper ! brightening still, as if the nearer . . . 281
 But bright as Vesper shines her lamp : . . . 294
 Soft in its temper as those vesper lays . . . 454
 As Vesper, ere the star hath kissed . . . 583
Vespers. Their vespers in the grove ; . . . 457
 These vespers of another year, . . . 498
 Matins and vespers of harmonious verse ! . . . 632
 Her vespers,—Nature fails not to provide . . . 818
Vesper-service. This vesper-service closed, without . . . 895 delay,
Vessel. To break my dream the vessel reached its . . . 31

 The water of the vessel was exhausted ; . . . 175
 Moved like a vessel in the wind ! . . . 258
 A goodly Vessel did I then espy . . . 296
 He in a vessel of his own . . . 296
 In such a vessel never more . . . 296
 He launched his vessel,—and in pride . . . 318
 Does yet the unheard-of vessel ride the wave ? . . . 318
 Driving some vessel toward a dangerous beach— . . . 336
 Aloft, yet in a tilting vessel rode, . . . 346
 Of a storm-shattered Vessel saved from Wreck . . . 447
 Half of a Vessel, half—no more ; the rest . . . 540
 Ill-fated Vessel !—ghastly shock ! . . . 579
 Than that brave vessel, though she sailed so far ; . . . S.3. 442
Vessel's. Over the vessel's side, and gaze and gaze ; . . . 96
 His short domain upon the vessel's deck, . . . 150
 Art pacing thoughtfully the vessel's deck . . . 151
 Against an anchored vessel's side ; . . . 397
 Availd not to my Vessel's overthrow. . . . 574
 From the receding vessel's deck, we chanced . . . 680
Vessels. That, of a thousand vessels, mine should be . . . 211
 That sang of trees up-torn and vessels tost— . . . 314
 Still they were faithful ; like two vessels launched . . . 586
 When those two vessels with their daring freight, . . . 715
 To mingle, I beheld the vessels lie, . . . 722
 Of two brave vessels matched in deadly fight, . . . K.8. 256
Vest. Thy vest is torn, thy cheek is deadly pale ; . . . 76
 A starveling in a scanty vest ; . . . 158
 A regal vest of fur he wears, . . . 166
 From east to west, in ample vest . . . 180
 To the rude Briton, when, in wolf-skin vest . . . 265
 Dwell, clothed in radiance, their immortal vest ; . . . 266
 Or steds, in warlike vest, . . . 300
 So seemly as the radiant vest of Joy ? . . . 331
 Like foresters in leaf-green vest, . . . 342
 By ruder hands in homelier vest. . . . 390
 In priestly vest, with holy offerings charged, . . . 394
 (A vest with woollen cincture tied, . . . 413
 Around the Pastor, each in new-wrought vest, . . . 445
 In a white vest, clad in radiant neck . . . 508
 Not seldom, clad in wolf-skin vest, . . . 550
 A single Briton clothed in wolf-skin vest, . . . 550
 In plaided vest,—his fellow-countrymen, . . . 774
 There hang thy trophies ; bid the jockey's vest, . . . L.1. 94

Vestige. No vestige then was left that such had ever . . . 102 been. . . . 151
 Nor from this vestige of thy musing hours . . . 201
 Or of his flock ?—joint vestige of them both. . . . 301
 Or glory, not a vestige seems to endure, . . . 367
 Is traceable a vestige of the notes . . . 378
 No vestige now remains ; yet thither creep . . . 458
 For, if a vestige of those gleams . . . 812

 Attire the peaceful corse in vestments white ; . . . 347
 From a long train—in hooded vestments fair . . . 542
 In those unworthy vestments worn . . . 542

 His history, the veteran, in reply, . . . 664
 Which the neglected veteran had dropped, . . . 783

Veteran's. The blind man's gloom, exalts the veteran's mirth ;
Then shall a Veteran's heart be thrilled with joy,
Veterans. Six thousand veterans practised in war's game,
Vex. Hence, amid ills that vex and wrongs that crush
Vexation. Limped on with sore vexation.
With hatred and vexation.
Of anger, and vexation, and despite,
Into vexation. Let us, then, I said,
Bound—by vexation, and regret, and scorn,
Vexations. Regrets, vexations, lassitudes interused
That losses and vexations, less severe
Vexatious. Unhealthy and vexatious. With the hour,
Vexed. That drops down dead out of a sky it vexed.
With a vexed people, and the tyrant chased ;
It knows how ye were vexed and strained,
Now on the water vexed with mockery.
Vexed and disordered, as our own, may shed
Vexed is he, and screams loud. The last I saw
It was a pang that vexed him then ;
Of the vexed waters, and the indignant rage
—Vex'd by the darkness, from the piny gulf
Hollow as ever vexed the tranquil air ;
Mine eyes were crossed by butterflies, ears vexed
With anger vexed, with disappointment sore,
The female and her garments vexed and tossed
And teasing ways of children vexed not him ;
And vexed, and chafed, by levity and scorn,
Probed, vexed, and criticised?—Accuse me not
And vexed the market-place. But in the breasts
Rule over her, and vexed her daily life ;
But fretted, vexed, and wrought upon, almost Vexing. Must still have sad or vexing thoughts to endure,
Vexing its own creation. Thanks to both,
With sorrow, disappointment, vexing thoughts,
From vain, and, that worse evil, vexing thoughts,
Rid of a vexing and a heavy load,
Vext. See Storm-vext.
Via. See Viamala.
Or, led where Via Mala's chasms confine Viaduct. Canal, and Viaduct, and Railway, tell !
Viamala. Of Viamala /, There I seem to stand
Viand. To cup or viand its appointed place.
Viands. Now when the viands were withdrawn, and cease'd Unspangled by delicate viands ; for, exclude
Vibrate. To vibrate between yes and no
Vibrate, as if a voice complain'd within ;
Continued yet to vibrate on his ear,
Vibrates. And vibrates, to its central stone,
And the bridge vibrates, totering to its fall.
Heard while the dwelling vibrates to the din
Vibration. And such vibration through the Mother went
Their dread vibration to this hour prolonged ?
Vicar. Ay, thought the Vicar, smiling to himself,
By Leonard to the Vicar as to one
The Vicar did not hear the words : and now
The Vicar from his gloomy house hard by
“ There sits the Vicar and his Dame,
To cure his malady ! ” The Vicar smiled,—
“ He loved,” the Vicar answered, “ deeply loved,
“ There,” said the Vicar, pointing as he spake,
The Vicar paused ; and toward a seat advanced,
The Vicar ceased ; and downcast looks made known
Of Wilfred Armathwaite ? ” The Vicar answered,
“ Observe,” the Vicar said, “ yon rocky isle
To endure for aye. The Vicar, taking note
Prompt utterance ; but the Vicar interposed
—“ Observe,” the Vicar said, “ yon rocky isle
Vicar's. The Vicar's dwelling, and the whole domain,
—Now was there bustle in the Vicar's house
The dewy fields ; but ere the Vicar's door
Vice. To that abhorred den of brutish vice !—
And gratitude to ministers of vice,
Of vice—thenceforth unable to subvert
Had Peter joined whatever vice
Watch, and be firm ! for soul-subduing vice,
Loose livers he can make abate their vice,
Or all the gaudy pomp of splendid Vice,
Abandoned, and the pride of public vice ;
Looked out for admiration. Folly, vice,
From vice and folly, wretchedness and fear ;
Of vice and folly thrust upon my view,
To vice and guilt, forerunning wretchedness,
Of human nature. Neither vice nor guilt,
One spirit over ignorance and vice
With vice at home. We added dearest themes—
Of selfishness, and cruelty, and vice ;
By the deformities of brutish vice :
From vice and premature decay preserved
In spite of vice, and misery, and disease,
Of sordid vice, or desperate breach of law,
A standing grievance, an indigenous vice,
Vicegerent. Take, then, thy seat, Vicegerent unproved !
Vice's. And purge from Vice's dross my tender charge.

Vices. Those wild men's vices he received,
But human vices have provok'd the rod
Of Kings, their vices and their better deeds,
Vicissitude. In undisturbed vicissitude
That spot which no vicissitude can find ?
His day-break note, a sad vicissitude !
With filial love the sad vicissitude ;
Toil unimposed, vicissitude unknown,
And from vicissitude remove its sting ;
And function, or, through strict vicissitude
Without vicissitude ; which, if the like
Through each vicissitude of loss and gain,
Vicissitudes. And through your sweet vicissitudes to range !
Through all vicissitudes, till genial Spring
Through which with strange vicissitudes he passed,
Through the vicissitudes of many a year—
Nor the vicissitudes of frost and thaw
Victim. His Victim—haply to this desolate house.
Prime mover in a plot to damn his Victim
—We recognise in this old Man a victim
Poor Victim ! not a virtue under heaven
A generous cause a victim did demand ;
But in calm peace the appointed Victim slept,
Thou Victim of the stormy gale ;
Self-offered victim, for his friend he died,
On proud temptations, till the victim groaned
“ Poor victim ! no idle intruder has stood
Victims. Or leading victims drest for sacrifice.
Unpitied havoc ! Victims unlamented !
And innocent victims sinking under fear,
To victims, which the merciful can see
Nor think that they are victims—turned to wrongs,
Of human victims, offered up to appease
That victims yet were wanting to assuage
Victoria. “VICTORIA he her name !
The Pride of the Islands, VICTORIA THE QUEEN !
Victories. For victories there won by flower-crowned Spring,
He drooped, mid else unclouded victories,
Or praises for our country's victories ;
Victorious. Victorious England ! bid the silent Art
Victorious, and composure would ensue, Victoriously. Victoriously upraised his clear bright eye ;
Victor's. Nemean victor's brow ; less bright was worn,
Victory. For many a marvellous victory renowned,
Round his wife's neck ; the prize of victory laid
I witness'd, and now hail your victory.
Groan thou with our victory !
Ye men of Kent, 'tis victory or death !
Shout, for a mighty Victory is won !
“ Finish the strife by deadliest victory ! ”
By one day's feat, one mighty victory,
Shall comprehend this victory sublime ;
Now, from Heaven-sanctioned victory, Peace is sprung ;
Stooped to the Victory on that Belgic field
Songs of victory and praise,
And that we need no second victory !
And that we need no second victory !—
For victory shaped an open space,
The struggle, clap their wings for victory !
Of victory, that struck through heart and reins
Mutual the victory, mutual the defeat !
In open victory o'er the weight
All confident of victory !—
Fit offering of glad victory !
Stretched in the sunny light of victory hark
For instant victory. But Heaven's high will
(So might they dream) till victory was achieved,
Have chased far off by righteous victory
Of victory mounts high, and blood is quaffed
To the bare head. The victory is complete ;
And Victory sickens, ignorant where to rest !
Where is thy Sting?—O Grave, where is thy Victory ? ”
Thou, who art victory and law
Where Freedom off, with Victory and Death,
Pierced by thy spear in glorious victory.
And by what combatants victory must be won ;
One victory with another, higher far,—
But, above all, the victory is most sure
Have fairly earned a victory o'er the weak,
One who achieved a humbler victory,
(For so they fancied) glorious victory.
To wrestle with, and victory to complete,
Vie. Not with God's bounty, Nature's love, to vie,
33
The concert, for the happy, then may vie
Vied. Vied with this waterfall, and made a song
Where simple art with bounteous nature vied,
Viee. With pearl or gleaming agate vies
With that great Leader vies, who, sick of strife
A new magnificence that vies with old ;
Of cheek that with carnation vies,
Vievw. My soul will cast the backward view,
How pleasant, as the sun declines, to view

Vigour—continued.

- With increasing vigour climb,
His hat gives him vigour, with boons dropping in,
Of vigour seldom utterly allied :
Of lusty vigour, more than faintive
But by the native vigour of his mind,
Depresses the soul's vigour. Quit your couch—
Upon his sprightly vigour cannot fix
Of her own native vigour; thence can hear.
- Vile. That would have been a vile mischance. It would.
On Johnny vile reflections cast :
And from vile indignities ;
Quicken the slothful, and exalt the vile —
Slaves, vile as ever were befooled by words,
Avant this vile abuse of pictured page !
Ere the vile Cuckoo's note he uttered,
Of forms created the most vile and brute,
Nor that vile wretch who bade the tender age
- Vileness. Trampling upon his vileness. Stranger, pass
- Vilest. Dear Reliques ! from a pit of vilest mould
Vilest hypocrisy—the laughing, gay
- Vill. From thorp or vill his matins sound for me,
Among the tenantry of thorp and vill ;
- Villa. Villa, or cottage, lurking among rocks
- Village. See Market-village.
In these secluded vales, if village fame,
While unsuspended wheels the village dance,
Aloft, here, half a village shines, arrayed
And nightingales desert the village grove,
That casts its shade over our village school,
Not a soul in the village this morning will stay ;
And westward to the village near the lake ;
And, after short exchange of village news,
That 'tis the village MERRY-NIGHT !
In city or in village small,
I love, where spreads the village lawn,
The village Children, while the sky is red
Nor does the village Church-clock's iron tone
The sleepers of the village.
Upon the village Common.
And murmur of the village school.
A village schoolmaster was he,
In a straggling village stood.
Vitruvius of our village had no help
All white with flour, the dole of village dames,
Every face in the village is dimpled with smiles.
Strange apparitions mock the village sight.
These all to swell the village murmurs blend,
Here half a village shines, in gold array'd,
To break the quiet of the village shade
And heard, the pausing village hum between,
And sweep him from the village !
And sweep him from the village !
The village clock tolled six,—I wheeled about,
Of our small market village, was the goal
Whose worship, 'mid remotest village trees,
Upon a slope above the village school,
That self-same village church ; I see her sit
Covers, or sprinkles o'er, yon village green ?
Of a village steeple, as I do, can judge,
When the next village hears the show announced
- Village-churchyard. Nor reached the village-churchyard till the sun
- Village-clock. The village-clock tolled six—I wheeled about,
- Village-green. Still from the village-green a vow Remote from sheltered village-green,
Already formed upon the village-green.
- Village-inn. A village-inn,—our evening resting-place.
- Villager. A northern villager. As if the change
- Villagers. What means this riotous noise ? The villagers
Where a few villagers on hended knees
Well may the villagers rejoice !
This old Man creeps, the villagers in him
Still let him prompt the unlettered villagers
Of his compatriot villagers (that hung
- Villages. By lonely farms and secret villages.
The sorrow, through the Villages,
Hamlets and thinly-scattered villages,
By secret villages and lonely farms,
Of ragged villages and crazy huts,
Among sequestered villages we walked
Of the suburban villages, I first
- Village-school. Upon a slope above the village-school ;
A village-school—'but wandering thoughts were then
On the smooth playground of the village-school ?"
The thriving prisoners of their village-school :
- Village-tow'r. His larum-bell from village-tow'r to tow'r
- Villain. The villain, Clifford. He hates you, and he knows
- Villains. Rush in—the villains seize us— Seize !
Yes, they—
The Villains rose in mutiny to destroy me ;
I overheard the Villains—every word
- Villain-service. Of villain-service, passing with the soil
- Villas. O'er villas, terraces, and towers ;

- Vindicators. As if to vindicate her beauty's right,
Our virtue, and to vindicate mankind.
To vindicate the majesty of truth.
To vindicate the ideal rights
- Vindictive. Yet, though a wild vindictive Race, untamed
With scorn, invoking a vindictive ban
Of fierce vindictive song.
- And keep vindictive thirstings from the soul,
- Vine. Now gads the wild vine o'er the pathless ascent —
Some lofty elm-tree, mounts the daring vine ;
That he hath been an Elm without his Vine,
- Vine-clad. Among the vine-clad mountains of Auvergne,
For warm Vesuvio's vine-clad slopes ;
The vine-clad hills and clods of Burgundy,
- Vine-leaf. Beneath her vine-leaf crown the green Earth reels :
- Vines. And Silence loves its purple roof of vines,
That in high triumph drew the Lord of vines,
Thy lofty steeps, and pathways roofed with vines,
- Vineyard. The vineyard and the olive-hower,
Upon his rich domains, vineyard and tilth,
- Viny. No more, along thy vales and viny groves,
- Viol. On a rude viol touched with withered hand.
The harp or viol which himself had framed,
- Violate. No guile seduced, no force could violate ;
To violate the Tree,
Who would not lightly violate the grace
Should breathe a word tending to violate
- Violated. Yea, to avenge her violated rights,
- Violating. Not violating any just restraint,
- Violence. Till one was found by stroke of violence dead,
A maiden from the ruffian violence
Under pretence of violence, he seized.
Not even in theirs—whose brutal violence
'Tis needless; spare your violence. His Daughter—
Suffered or done. When lawless violence
By violence laid waste,
Man's headstrong violence and Time's fleetness,
Unhurt by violence, from menaced taint
His violence is stilled.
And to abridge my sorrow's violence,
Unsightly marks of violence or harm.
And the strong hand of outward violence
Dismantled, but by violence abrupt—
By violence, at one decisive rent,
Fell to the ground,—by violence overthrown
- Violent. He turns his face to heaven. But why so violent
Of stormy war, and violent death ;
By violent and ignominious death,
Along the midway cliffs with violent speed ;
That violent commotion, which o'erthrew,
- Violet. A violet by a mossy stone
From humble violet—modest thyme—
And veins of violet hue ;
Whose life was, like the violet, sweet,
The violet, and the lily of the vale ;
Yet, like the sweet-breathed violet of the shade,
- Violets. Violets, a barren kind,
Violets in families !
Be violets in their secret mews
Long as there are violets,
The violets of five seasons re-appear
Beneath an old-grey oak as violets lie,
- Viper. The cruel Viper !—Poor devoted Maid,
Oh yes, that mole, that viper in the path ;
- Viperous. Save when the stings of viperous remorse,
- Vipers. For rather would I have a nest of vipers
The coronal that coiling vipers make ;
- Virgilian. Parthenope's Domain—Virgilian haunt,
- Virgin. Around him plays at the virgin heart.
Kind pious hands did to the virgin heart
While across her virgin cheek pure blushes strayed,
A virgin scene !—A little while I stood,
Her virgin bosom swell ;
The aspiring virgin kneels ; and, pale
The Virgin as she shone with kindred light ;
Meek Virgin Mother, more benign
And hence, O Virgin Mother mild !
Not virgin lies marshalled in bright row,
Of flowers the Virgin without fear may own,
Thy Knights must touch the cold hand of the Virgin ;
Disturbed upon her virgin head ;
Behold her, like a virgin Queen,
The virgin sculptured on his Christian shield :—
Mother ! whose virgin bosom was uncrossed
Hail, Virgin Queen ! o'er many an envious bar
Be this the chosen site ; the virgin sod,
Sung to the virgin while accordant oars
Prest in the tenderness of virgin love
In thy gentle virgin heart ;
Choose from the bowers of virgin earth
The Holy Virgin gives to me
Nature, as in her prime, her virgin reign
Their wives, their children, and their virgin loves,

Virgin—continued.

And the first virgin passion of a soul . . . 760
 Of virgin ore, that gold which we, by pains . . . 832
 In virgin fearelessness, with step that seemed . . . 850
 Or of the blessed Virgin, looking down . . . 881
 Have caused her to abate the virgin pride, . . . 882
Virginal.—I sang; and lo! from pastimes virginal Virgin-choirs. Was sung by Virgin-choirs in festal lays; . . . 221
Virginian. Herbs moistened by Virginian dew, . . . 460
Virginitly. "O Martyr" established in virginitly . . . 348
Virgin-liberty. And steps of virgin-liberty; . . . 534
Virgin-mother. Albeit oft the Virgin-mother mild . . . 186 Virgin-Mountain. The Virgin-Mountain, wearing like a Queen . . . 465
Virgin's. What space hath Virgin's beauty to disclose . . . 439
 The moment it has left the virgin's eye, . . . 110

Virgins. Haste, Virgins, haste!—the flowers which summer gave . . . 323
 Haste, Virgins, haste; and you, ye Matrons grave,
 Of virgins crowned with roses. Not in vain . . . 324
Virginal-saints. And Virgin-saints, who not in vain . . . 734
Virithatus. Redoubted Virithatus breathes again; . . . 343
Virtual. Our nature, but had virtual faith that He Viruta. That virtue languishes and pleasure fails, . . . 320
 Your single virtue has transformed a Band
 Poor Victim! not a virtue under heaven . . . 669
 Did not virtue give the meanest . . . 21
 Thy virtue, who may hate? . . . 57
 In him the savage virtue of the Race, . . . 90
 For fearless virtue bringeth boundless gain.
 That privilege by virtue—"Ill," said he,
 That with moist virtue softly cleaves
 From men of pensive virtue go,
 By which such virtue may in me be bred
 And virtue grew. . . .
 But that's a loyal virtue, never sown
 And give us manners, virtue, freedom, power.
 That virtue and the faculties within
 Of Nations wanting virtue to be strong
 Our virtue, and to vindicate mankind.
 Of peaceful civic virtue: they attest
 In whose pure sight all virtue doth succeed.
 And hence, wherever virtue is revered,
 A corresponding virtue to beguile
 Of virtue crowned with glory's deathless meed:
 Against the life of virtue in mankind; . . .
 Or whence could virtue flow?
 To recognise, the lasting virtue lodged
 To virtue consecrate, stoop ye from your height
 Humane, and virtue of his innocent life)
 Whose souls take pride in freedom, virtue, fame,
 To more than Man, by virtue deified.
 Superior? Help do virtue does she give?
 To sap your hardy virtue, and abate
 His Country's virtue, fought, and breathes no more;
 Against her ancient virtue. High and Low,
 Whose virtue changes to a christian Flower
 Should fall; that She, whose virtue put to shame,
 There's virtue, the title it surely may claim,
 To virtue every triumph that he knows:
 Domestic virtue vitally depends,
 And virtue, flown, come back;
 Into Bethesda's pool, with healing virtue
 Has virtue in it, why should hope to me
 Thus Virtue lives debarred from Virtue's need;
 And Heaven doth to her virtue grant
 Lest virtue should be harbourous,
 Thy virtue, and thy great humility,
 In virtue of the holy Trinity
 To virtue and true goodness. Some there are,
 But did not fall; for Virtue braves all shocks,
 By genuine virtue he inspired a hope
 The glimmering fires of Virtue to enlarge,
 And all that Virtue dictates, dare to do;
 When Virtue weeps in agony of woe,
 That tear proclaims—in thee each virtue dwells,
 All soothers of sense their soft virtue shall yield,
 With quickening virtue, but is now become
 A virtue which irradiates and exalts
 A virtue not its own. My morning walks
 Whether of truth or virtue, to ensue.
 This spurious virtue, rather let it bear . . .
 As virtue is, or goodness; sweet as love, . . .
 To majesty. Like virtue have the forms . . .
 Of self-respect and virtue in the few . . .
 But that the virtue of one paramount mind
 Of memory, to virtue lost and hope, . . .
 A renovating virtue, whence, depressed . . .
 A virtue, by which pleasure is enhanced, . . .
 And genuine virtue, they possess who live . . .
 If virtue be indeed so hard to rear,
 With star-like virtue in its place may shine,
 A power to virtue friendly; were 't not so,
 By virtue of that sacred instrument
 Or for progressive virtue, by the search
 As Brutus did to Virtue, 'Liberty
 Lack virtue to receive; what I myself,
 Zeal, and the virtue to exist by faith . . .

Virtue—continued.

For him, who, seeking faith by virtue, strives . . . 804
 As they who have opposed her; in which Virtue . . . 806
 In man's celestial spirit; virtue thus . . . 817
 Can carry virtue, virtue is professed; . . . 826
 Is virtue, or no better than a name, . . . 829
 As virtue's self; like virtue is beset . . . 830
 To virtue lost, insensible of peace, . . . 836
 Whose oath had virtue to protect the land . . . 844
 Which else the Christian virtue might have claimed.
 These elements of virtue, that declare . . . 845
 A labourer, with moral virtue girl, . . . 848
 That virtue, like the fumes and vapour clouds . . . 862
 Their virtue, service, happiness, and state . . . 863
 By virtue.—He, sighing with pensive grief,
 And virtue, difficult, abstruse, and dark; . . . 872
 The discipline of virtue; or order else . . . 877
 Havé virtue to send forth. Upon the marge . . . 880
Virtus. By virtue's holiest Powers attended. . . .
 Him Virtue's Nurse, Adversity, in vain . . .
 That peace of mind is Virtue's sure effect.
 Thus Virtue lives debarred from Virtue's need; . . .
 Though in virtue's proud mouth thy report be a stain, . . .
 Of intellect and virtue's self-esteem? . . .
 As virtue's self; like virtue is beset
 Nor summoned to contend for virtue's prize,
 Their virtue's humbler mark; a sigh of pain . . .
Virtuss. Her virtues are his instruments.—A Man . . .
 For youthful faults ripe virtues shall atone; . . .
 On Dion's virtues, while the lunar beam . . .
 To household virtues. Venerable Art,
 Thanks to thy virtues, to the eternal youth . . .
 By Virtues that diffused, in every part,
 And virtues through the mass infused, . . .
 The midnight virtues of your harmony:—
 Virtues laid low, and mouldering energies,
 O'er men in dauntless virtues schooled,
 Of their protection, gentle virtues thrive; . . .
 In what they see of virtues pushed to extremes,
 Oh could we copy their mild virtues, then
 Fathers! your Virtues, such the power of grace, Like Angels from their bowers, our virtues to befriend; . . .
 Hail to the virtues which that perilous life
 What humanizing virtues near her cell
 Shall place thy virtues out of Envy's reach.
 Yet they to whom thy virtues made thee dear
 Of many virtues, mildly bright,
 Words which the virtues of thy Lord inspired,
 The high-souled virtues which forgetful earth
 For many a one hath virtues manifold,
 Have power to make thy virtues known,
 Thy virtues He must judge, and He alone,
 Whose virtues called them forth. That aim is missed; . . .
 With its own Virtues springs another earth: . . .
 Upon their virtues; saw, in rudest men,
 And in the virtues which mine eyes had seen.
 That their best virtues were not free from taint
 Of virtues bloomed beneath this lowly roof.
 Among the first of Powers and Virtues—proved?
 Its rights and virtues—by that Deity . . .
 The retrospective virtues. Festive songs . . .
 Lamenting ancient virtues overthrow, . . .
Virtuous. Of virtuous life, by pious parents bred: . . .
 Which with the motion of a virtuous act . . .
 He dreads the presence of a virtuous man
 To fear the virtuous, and reverence misery,
 Awaits on virtuous life, and ever most
 Then shall love teach some virtuous Youth
 Virtuous restraint—ah, speak it, think it, not!
 Her virtuous scruples to remove, her fears allay.
 And, if the virtuous feel a pang too sharp,
 Virtuous and wise. Winds blow, and waters roll,
 Of virtuous hope, of liberty, and right,
 That virtuous Liberty hath been the scope
 That, for the virtuous, Life prepares; . . .
 Of virtuous action; all that courage dares, . . .

Visaged. See Pale-visaged, Sweet-visaged.
Visages. Throngs of celestial visages,
By royal visages. Meanwhile abroad
Viscount. The box resound on Viscount Bufo's ear.
Visible. (Visible though they be to half the earth,
The downs were visible—and now revealed
Of foul pollution. . . . The whole visible world
Composed and silent, without visible sign
Full-flowered, and visible on every steep,
Is visible; and often seems to send
And sometimes on a speck of visible earth,
Outshining like a visible God
Winds the mute Creature without visible Mate
He who stood visible to Mirza's eye,
Beyond the visible world she soars to seek
The power of Armies is a visible thing,
This sea of life without a visible shore,
As to a visible Power, in which did blend
Of Powers endowed with visible form, instinct
And fare thee well, to Fancy visible,
In visible quest of immortality,
And of all visible motion destitute,
To render visible her own soft dreams,
Aloft the Raven hangs a visible nest,
By message sent through air or visible token,
Was set, and visible for many a mile
With visible motion her diurnal round!
Were visible, a daily sight; and thus
A visible scene, on which the sun is shining?
Daily the common range of visible things
Seeking the visible world, nor knowing why.
By outward gestures and by visible looks:
Of mountain torrents; or the visible scene
In silence visible and perpetual calm.
The only track now visible was one
The mountains more by blackness visible
As if to make the strong wind visible,
Subordinate to her, her visible forms
As, of all visible natures, crown, though born
And visible to philosophers of old,
Their madnass stands declared and visible;
Perverted, even the visible Universe
The characters are fresh and visible;
That is the visible quality and shape
Of act and circumstance, and visible form,
The Desert visible by dismal flames;
Made visible; as ruled by those fixed laws
And, ere the stars were visible, had reached
Low lay beneath my feet 'twas visible—
Proceed all visible ministers of good
Upon this visible fabric of the world,
Kind and degree, among all visible Beings;
As if the visible mountain made the cry
Faith, Hope, and Charity—from the visible world
From visible nature, or the inner self
No visible recompense. For our relief
The visible quiet of this holy ground,
Unfolded still the more, more visible
But, while the gross and visible frame of things
Through earth, sky, water, and all visible space,
Hail to the visible Presence, hail to thee,
Made visible, amid a noise of winds
In every quarter something visible,
Visibly. And visibly engirding Mona's Isle
The bright assurance, visibly return:
Sweeps visibly the Wallace Wight;
Is visibly delighted;
Visibly leading on the thunder's harmonies.
Broods, visibly portrayed, the mystic Dove,
Frowns deepening visibly his native gloom,
Done visibly for other minds, words, signs,
Where mighty minds lie visibly entombed,
Into fleet Oreads sporting visibly,
Vision. On the dark earth the wearied vision fails;
Flying till vision can no more pursue!
And oft, when that dread vision hath past by,
Gleaned like a vision of delight,
O blessed vision! happy child!
A vision, and adored the thing he saw.
To the last point of vision, and beyond,
With their enraptured vision see—
At length the Vision closes; and the mind,
A mountain ascending, a vision of trees;
Through dream and vision did she sink,
Confirm, I pray, the vision with thy voice:
Mere Mortals, hodied forth in vision still,
Of Dawn—or Eve, fair vision of the west,
That vision of endurance and repose.
Of vision?—o'er this tempting flower
Organ of vision! And a Spirit aerial
This miserable vision!
Lingers beside that Rill, in vision clear.
Even so for me a Vision sanctified
The self-same Vision which we now behold,
Such tempting spots as into vision come
Into one vision, future, present, past.
Swept onwards, did the vision cross your view?
Was wreathed—"The Vision" tells us how—

Vision—continued.
I bless Thee, Vision as thou art,
We have a vision of our own;
In many a midnight vision bowed
Of past events; to whom, in vision clear,
Dazzling the vision that presumes to gaze.
Like vision, pensive though not cold,
Gay vision under sullen skies,
For my enjoyment meet in vision strange;
Issues, revealed in no presumptuous vision,
Than for like scenes in moral vision shown,
And the realised vision is clasped to my heart.
Becomes with all her years a vision of the Mind.
Whose features he had seen in noontide vision.
For vision so composed and sweet?
Raised, as the Vision gave command,
'Tis flown—the Vision, and the sense
Fair Vision! when it crossed the Maid
In the clear land of vision, but foreseen
Last night, without a voice, that Vision spake
Opened a vision of that blissful place
(Nor in this vision be thou slow to trust)
Till into one loved vision all things melt:
In vision exquisitely clear,
Of future change, that point of vision, whence
Of the great Vision,—faith in Providence;
Thy mental vision further and ascend
And the pure vision closed in darkness infinite.
And by the vision splendid
On the dark earth the baff'd vision fails,
And oft, when pass'd that solemn vision by,
The wretch, the short-lived vision of an hour;
To a schoolboy's vision, I had raised a pile
Through pregnant vision, separate or conjoined.
In microscopic vision, Rome herself;
In vision, yet constrained by natural laws
Our dim ancestral Past in vision clear;
That vision, given to spirits of the night
Didst chaunt the vision of that Ancient Man,
This Vision; when and where, and how he lived;
The vision and the faculty divine;
In vision—forms uncouth of mightiest power
To realize the vision, with intense (Whether of actual vision, sensible
Unbaffed powers of vision hath prepared,
Earth's melancholy vision through the space
Of vision less and less distinct, descending
(Such strength of vision to the shepherd's eye

Visionary. Silent the visionary warriors go,
On visionary views would fancy feed,
With dreams and visionary impulses
Of the dark fire, a visionary scene!
And reeled with visionary stir
Of visionary hours.
Of the visionary eye whose lid,
Flow from your visionary skill,
And sweep away life's visionary stir;
The visionary Arches are not there,
His visionary brow: a glow-worm lamp,
Thy visionary majesties of light,
—'Tis past, the visionary splendour fades;
Whither is fled the visionary gleam?
I gazed upon the visionary train,
Of visionary things, those lovely forms
Thence did I drink the visionary power;
On visionary minds; if, in this time,
Did better suit my visionary mind,
Of mighty Poets. Visionary power
To paint the visionary dreariness
Inscribed upon its visionary sides,
What visionary powers of eye and soul
That visionary voice; and, at this day,
And no such visionary views belong
Had visionary faculties to see
Visions. In a deep vision's intellectual scene,
Visions. Stay! pensive, sadly-pleasing visions, stay!
As lovely visions by thy side
As visions still more bright have done, and left no trace behind.
Visions with all but beatific light
O Nature—in thy changeful visions,
And silent fetters? Yes, if visions bright
Ah, no! the visions of the past
Of good works, mingling with the visions, raise
Fair sights, and visions of romantic joy!
And on the earth! Ye Visions of the hills!
Could have more tranquil visions in his youth,
Such ghastly visions had I of despair
I called on dreams and visions, to disclose
At the sword's point, visions conceived in love.
Visit. Permit to visit any but a man
To visit me, and me alone;
To visit earthly chambers,—and for whom?
Thou, too, dost visit oft my midnight dream;
Of thee to visit them with lenient aid.
Might one like me now visit many a tract
Visitant. From the wild sea a cherished Visitant;
Upon the mountains visitant;
Saint George himself this Visitant must be
A Visitant by whom these words were uttered:—

 If such a Visitant of Earth there be 503 Warning 38
 Or, he the Visitant other than she seems,
 A visitant that while it fans my cheek 522 Epist. Beaumont 50
 Fit resting-place for such a visitant.
 Her endless streets, a transient visitant!
 Year after year, a punctual visitant!
 In turn its visitant, telling there his hours
 She must be visitant to shake this man,
 A punctual visitant, to shake this man,
 Where Fear sate thus, a cherished visitant,
 Hands joined he with his Visitant,—a grasp.
 Of a prized visitant, in the jolly hall

Visitants. His only visitants a straggling sheep,
 Clouds do not name those Visitants; they were
 But these may no such boisterous visitants

Visitation. Of visitation.—A hold word from you!
 Some visitation worse than all
 By Christmas snows, by visitation bleak
 Which by the visitation was disturbed.
 That anxious visitation;—moon and stars
 Of visitation from the living God,
 This second visitation had no power
 Whose visitation had not wholly spared
 881 Excursion 8, 503

Visitations. Your visitations are a test
 Whether thy punctual visitations smite
 Gentle awakenings, visitations meek;
 Yet, thro' all visitations and all trials,
 Æolian visitations; but the harp
 Or mildest visitations of pure thought,
 My earliest visitations, careless then
 Those visitations, ceased to send her forth;
 The gentle visitations of the sun,
 879 Excursion 8, 330

Visited. Together visited.
 Our Highland Boy oft visited
 By whom we were first visited;
 A mansion visited (as fame reports)
 Sojourning a few days, I visited
 Seems, when the first time visited, to one

Visiting. Of heaven in pity visiting the place.

 And visiting, though not with saintly zeal,
 Before the greedy visiting was closed,

Visitings. For no unholy visitings,
 From quick and eager visitings 216 Enterprise 73
 In soft and breeze-like visitings,
 Whether her fearless visitings, or those Incumbencies more awful, visitings
 Visitings of imaginative power 737 Prælude 12, 203

Visitor. The visitor retired. Thus lived the Youth
 A Visitor—in quest of herbs and flowers;
Visits. Worn by his daily visits to and from
 Many and idle, visits not his ear:
Vista. Beyond, along the vista of the brook,
 In long-drawn vista, rustling in the breeze;
 This long-roofed Vista penetrate—but see
Vistas. Of those long vistas, sacred catcombs,
Visual. What else can mean the visual plea
 Upon the rights of visual sense
 The visual powers of Nature satisfy,
 By visual pomp, and by the tie
 Of visual sovereignty—hills multitudinous,
 This vital warmth too cold, these visual orbs,
 Whose visual nerve shrinks from a painful glare

Vital. "And vital feelings of delight
 His vital presence? his corporeal mould?
 —And though to every draught of vital breath,
 Even She who toils to spin our vital thread
 With vital sounds and monitory gleams
 That neither feeds nor wastes its vital power
 Are vital,—and that riches are akin
 If vital hope he wanting to restore,
 Breathe Thou, this day, a vital undulation!
 Of vital principle's controlling law,
 Close to the vital seat of human clay;
 Her bane, her vital energies recruit.
 How faint their portion of his vital beams!

Vitals. With blindness linked, did on my vitals fall;
 Whose very shadow gnaws us to the vitals.
 Disease consumed thy vitals; War upheaved
 Drawn from his vitals? Say what meant the woes
Vitruvius. Vitruvius of our village had no help.
Vivacious. Are all vivacious as his mien and looks;
Vivid. See Vat-vivid.
 Almost as vivid as a dream, produced a dream at night?
 So vivid that they take from keenest sight
 How vivid, yet how delicate, her glee!
 A vivid repetition of the stars;
 Trusts to your love and vivid memory;
 Still in the vivid freshness of a dream,
 Of recollections vivid as the dreams
 Dreams, vivid dreams, that are meagre fugitive;
 Black hair, and vivid eye, and meagre cheek,
 Of thy soft breath!—Less vivid wreath entwined
 The fitting halcyon's vivid dyes;
 The vivid flashes of his spoken words.
 Vivid the transport, vivid though not profound;
 And cordial greeting.—Vivid was the light
 Replete with vivid promise, bright as spring.
 Vivid remembrance of those long-past hours;
 To impress a vivid feeling on the mind
 My grey-haired Friend was moved; his vivid eye
 How pure his spirit! in what vivid hues
 Vivid as fire; clouds separately poised,
Vividly. Vividly pictured in some glassy pool,
 The encircling region vividly express
 Here on my view, confronting vividly 657 Prælude 3, 547

Vivified. A thrilling voice was heard, that vivified
 Of earth, sky, sea, and air, was vivified.
Vocal. And hures from hay to bay the vocal barge.
 Bright gem instinct with music, vocal spark;

 By bird or beast made vocal, sought a cause

 Her flight by vocal wings;
 The vocal raptures of fresh poesy,
 And winds between thine isles the vocal barge.
 Their modulation with these vocal streams—
 By vocal utterance, or blaze of light,
 Vocal thanksgivings to the eternal King;
Vocation. As if his whole vocation
 Of his sublime vocation, in the walks
 The fine vocation of the sword and lance Voice. See Earth-voice.
 Again with his shrill voice the mountain rings,
 Where with loud voice the power of water shakes
 —The voice of blasphemy the fane alarms,
 Thro' worlds where Life, and Voice, and Motion
 sleep;
 An idle voice the sabbath region fills
 And with that voice accords the soothing sound
 No voice made answer, he could only hear
 But soon his voice and words of kind intent
 Nor voice, nor sound, that moment's pain expressed,
 They paused, and heard a hoarser voice blaspheme,
 His voice with indignation rising high
 Then, with a voice which inward trouble broke
 May my end be! Soon will this voice be dumb:
 To tell the change that voice within her wrought
 This Marmaduke—O could you hear his voice:
 I caught her voice; she threw herself upon me,
 Traitor to both. Oh, could you hear his voice!
 Ten years; and no one ever heard her voice;
 His voice—methinks I hear it now, his voice
 I had led him 'cross the torrent, his voice blessed
 me:
 I do not hear the voice of my friend Oswald.
 Thou hast left me ears to hear my Daughter's voice,
 To have heard your voice. Your couch, I fear, good Baron,
 You thought his voice the echo of Idonea's.
 The giant's strength; and, at the voice of Justice,
 Fitting his low voice to the minstrel's harp,
 How glad I am to hear your voice! I know not Soon would her gentle voice make peace between us:
 There is a vein of her voice that runs through his Check his loud whip and hail us with mild voice,
 And speak with milder voice to his poor beasts.
 More with delight than grief—I heard a voice
 He heard a voice—a shepherd-lad came to him
 A human voice distinct, struck on my ear.
 My voice was silent, but my heart hath joined thee.
 And then I would have prayed, and had no voice.
 And, with a voice at which the dead will quake,
 Ad shout, and, with the echo of my voice,
 But neither cry, nor voice, nor shout, 51 Borâ. 745

Voice—continued.

I heard a voice; it said, "Drink, pretty creature, drink!"

The Child, as if the thunder's voice spake with articulate call,

What mournful sighs have here been heard, and, when the voice was stopt

The other thanked him with an earnest voice; Ye lightning, hear his voice—I they cannot hear, Of his own voice confirmed, he leaps upon the ground.

His voice came to us from the neighbouring height: Within the sound of Emma's voice, nor know

But hand and voice alike are still; . . .
In the world's voice, was passing fair;
Of the survivor's sweetest voice (dear child,
Nor could the voice of Freedom, which through France
The foot of horse, the voice of man;
Though nought was left undone which staff, or voice,
The Youth made answer with a jocund voice;
"Feeling tunes your voice, fair Princess!
If the soft voice he throws about
One chiefly, who with voice and look
Ran with a young man's speed; and yet the voice
Which I till then had heard appeared the voice.
Took up the Lady's voice, and laughed again;
Carried the Lady's voice,—old Skiddaw blew
Of Glamara southward came the voice;
Steeped in dire grief the voice of Philomel;
In power of wing and never-wearied voice.
Exclaimed an angry Voice,
Had little voice or none.

When, in a voice sedate with age,
"Her voice was blithe, her heart was light;
In joy of voice and pinion!
I spake, when whispered a low voice,
In figure and in voice.
This knowledge, from an Angel's voice
Had heart or voice for me.
Which with such friendly voice will call;
His whip they do not dread—his voice
A voice that comes from some one near,
A female voice:—"Whoe'er you be,
The voice of tears that fell unseen;
Another voice, in tone as hoarse
And now the same strong voice more near
This, and the manner, and the voice,
Or but a wandering Voice?
A voice, a mystery;
His voice was buried among trees,
Over his own sweet voice the Stock-dove broods;
But now his voice to me was like a stream
Loud voice the Land has uttered forth,
My dear, dear Friend; and in thy voice I catch
Thy voice, nor catch from thy wild eyes these gleams

Confirm, I pray, the vision with thy voice:
Nor doth the general voice abstain from prayer,
And the dear voice of harmony,
Her voice would utter, aught ensue
The voice of grateful memory
Her flight, and take its voice away!
By a sure voice that can most sweetly tell,
I speak with knowledge,—by that Voice beguiled,
To mock the wandering Voice beside some haunted stream.

With thunderous voice? Or are ye jubilant,
And Images of voice—to hound and horn.
That voice of Freedom, in its power
And voice and shell drew forth a tear
From the babe's first cry to voice of regal city,
Your inarticulate notes with the voice of words!
A Voice to Light gave Being;
A Voice shall finish doubt and dim foreseeing,
I spake with faltering voice, like one
—O, would that some more skilful voice
Let them whose voice can stop the clouds,
A voice to Peter's ear ascends,
His voice, though clamorous as a horn
His voice is weak with perturbation;
To thee appear not an unmeaning voice,
And Love—a charmer's voice, that used to lend,
An unexampld voice of awful memory!
And thy erratic voice be faithful to the Spring!
Forced from that voice so lately tuned to a strain
And nought untunes that Infant's voice; no trace
His voice to suit the temper of yon Moon.
Trembling I gazed, but heard a voice—it said,
And constant voice, protest against the wrong.
And from one voice a Hymn with tuneful sound
The voice was soft, and she who spake
The echo of the voice enwrought
A voice so thrilling ne'er was heard
But hark! a gratulating voice,
Where they thy voice can hear;
In dust, that voice is dear!
The Voice of song from distant lands shall call
One of the mountains; each a mighty Voice:

Voice—continued.

And neither awful Voice be heard by thee!
Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the sea:
Assembled, He, by a herald's voice, proclaims
Until all voices in one voice are drowned;
Yet were the thoughtful grieved; and still that voice

Hast heard the constant Voice its charge repeat,
Her own calm fires?—But list! a voice is near;

(So faith too fondly deemed) a voice divine
No pitying voice commands a halt,

Exalt his still small voice—to quell that Host
A thrilling voice was heard, that vivified
In words like these: "Up, Voice of song! pro-claim
And utter England's name with sadly-plausive voice.

He with enraptured voice will tell
To a voice of thrilling power.
When silent were both voice and chords,
Resounded—but the voice obeyed
Aloud, saluted by her voice!

As the dread Voice that speaks from out the sea
Of God's eternal Word, the Voice of Time
Given with a voice and by a look returned
The tone of voice which wedded borrowed words
To that mild breeze with motion and with voice
Heard I that voice! and catch it now, though faint,
A gratulation from that vagrant Voice
On the great Prophet, styled the Voice of One
Voice of the Desert, fare-thee-well; sweet Bird!
Therefore the Voice spake from the Desert, thence
He heard a voice, and saw, with half-raised head,
And Nina heard a sweeter voice
With thy clear voice, I caught the fitful sound
That tunes on Duddon's banks her slender voice.
No voice replies;—both air and earth are mute;
Attended but by thy own voice, save when Sworn by that voice—whose murmur musical
Whence that low voice?—A whisper from the heart,

Unhelped by the poetic voice
Saddens his voice again, and yet again.
For Souls familiar with the eternal Voice;
But Praise can waste her voice on work of tears,
For us the voice of melody was mute.
Is standing with a voice of power,
That ancient voice which went to call
Filling the church with a lofty voice!
The only voice which you can hear
With awful cheer a voice of praise;
A voice is with us—a command
A voice to which the hills replied!
They are my all!—voice failed him here—
A voice of uttermost joy broke out:
At Percy's voice: and Neville sees
To greet him with a voice, and say—
The voice restored, the eye of Truth
He told; and oftentimes with voice
From look, deportment, voice, or mien,
Whose voice we heard, whose hand and wings
Flew open, by an Angel's voice unbarred!
And heeded not the voice of clashing swords,
Ye heavy laden! such the inviting voice
A benediction from his voice or hand;
Through "Nature's hollow arch" that voice re-sounds.

And, in the sternest sentence which his voice
While Mercy, uttering, through their voice, a sound
Requiem which Earth takes up with voice un-daunted,

Ages ere Valdo raised his voice to preach
Forthwith that ancient Voice which Streams can hear

Thus speaks (that Voice which walks upon the wind,
And taught the general voice to prophesy
Unto itself, the Crown assumes a voice
Stilled by thy voice! But quickly from afar
Last night, without a voice, that Vision spake
Darkness before and danger's voice behind;
A voice, from long-expecting thousands sent,
And Hooker's voice the spectacle approves!
In admonitions of thy softest voice!
Hush, not a voice is here! but my repine,
When I shall scorn thy voice or mock thy mien!
No less than Nature's threatening voice,
Where thy deep voice could lull me! Faint the beam

When her sweet Voice, that instrument of love,
What time the Benedictine Brethren's voice,
Despond who will—I heard a voice exclaim,
That voice which soothed the Nuns while on the steps

His voice—beheld, his speaking face;
Sweet is thy voice at pensive even;
Stern Daughter of the Voice of God!
Still act according to the voice
To matins joined a mournful voice, —What trick of memory to my voice hath brought Voices—continued.

- Where it begins to stir, yet voiceless as a snake.
Told, also, how the voiceless heavens declare
Prayer's voiceless service; but now, seeking nought
Stirred them, not voiceless. Often have I stood
The voiceless worn on the unfrequented hills,
—Voiceless the stream descends into the gulf.
- Voices. Whence lutes and voices down the enchanted woods
All motions, sounds, and voices, far and nigh,
Tries his two voices for a favourite strain—
Some plainly living, voices were;
Were voices of the dead;
By Voices how men lived of old.
Voices of two different natures?
Will not depart when mortal voices bid;
Ye Voices, and ye Shadows
Innumerable voices fill
While hearts and voices in the song unite.
And add your voices to the quire
Two Voices are there; one is of the sea,
Until all voices in one voice are drowned;
Give, herds and flocks, your voices to the wind!
From voices into zealous passion stung,
Their voices into liquid music swell,
Of penetrating harps and voices sweet!
Of airy voices locked in unison,
Their orisons with voices half-suppressed,
By voices never mute when Heaven unties
Voices, thy winds break forth in prophecy,
Sweet voices for the passing wind;
While heaven's vast sea of voices chants their praise.
- He dearly loves their voices!
Their voices mount symbolical of praise—
What are fears but voices airy?
With one accord our voices raise,
Of all her Voices, One!
And, far beneath, Banditti voices talk;
And talking voices, and the low of herds,
'Tho' now no more thy maids their voices suit
Voices of gladness roll the walls around;
Those gladsome voices from the courts rebound;
Had voices more than all the winds, with power
Shrill voices from the hawkers in the throng,
Its voices issuing forth to silent light
Or several voices in one solemn sound
Yet ring with all their voices, or before
And hear the voices of the winds and flowers.
- Void. "Twas dark and void as ocean's watery realm
As void of sunshine, when, from that wide plain,
Her thoughts less deep, or void of grave intent
Of something void and vain;
Of sandy wilderness, all black and void,
Or from its death-like void, with punctual care,
What place so destitute and void—but there
- Volant. A volant Tribe of Bards on earth are found,
His volant Spirit will, he trusts, ascend
- Volatile. Arch, volatile, a sportive bird
And volatile their love of transient bowers,
Hurried and hurrying, volatile and loud.
Gay, volatile, ingenious, quick to learn,

- Volcanic. The ground beneath thee with volcanic force:
Volcanic burst, earthquake, and hurricane,
Volcano's. He springs the hushed Volcano's mine,
Volley. A volley, thrice repeated o'er the Corse
Voltaire. In the French tongue, a Novel of Voltaire, Volatile. Matter wherein right volatile I am,
Of their sensations, and in volatile phrase
- Volume. A slender volume grasping in thy hand—
Of a closed volume lingering in thy hand
No single volume paramount, no code,
Was like a volume to me; some were hailed
When I have held a volume in my hand,
To land a single volume, saved by chance,
Upon a volume whose contents he knows
A straggling volume, torn and incomplete,
To reverence the volume that displays
That volume—as a compass for the soul—
Were as a volume, shut, yet capable
- Volumes. Bright volumes of vapour through Loth-
bury glide,
Volumes of sound, from the Cathedral rolled,
That there were four large volumes, laden all
- Voluminous. In fleecy folds voluminous, enwrapped,
Bedimmed with smoke, in wreaths voluminous,
Voluntary. Drives from their creatures, a voluntary prey
As if with voluntary power instinct
Partly from voluntary holiday,
Volunteer. Blind Chance, a volunteer ally,
Voluptuary. Resembled much that cold voluptuary, Voluptuous. Breathes o'er the failing soul voluptuous dreams,
Voluptuous, fearless of a rival, eyed
Nor less, to feed voluptuous thought,
To a voluptuous influence
Of a voluptuous indolence, should meet
Breathe o'er the failing soul voluptuous dreams;
- On the wild Goddess of Voluptuous Jov.

Voluptuous—continued.

- Of royal courts, and that voluptuous life
To a voluptuous unconcern, preferring
Hired minstrel of voluptuous blandishment; Voluptuously. Voluptuously through fields and rural walks,
Voluptuousness. Its own voluptuousness;—on this resolved,
Vomit. Returning to his vomit; when the sun
Vomiting. Are vomiting, receiving on all sides,
Vortex. Within the vortex of a foaming flood,
123 V. and J. 143
Voitress. Our Lady's laggard Voitress,
The Voitress by Lugano's side;
To aid the Voitress, miracles believed
To this fair Voitress a fate
- Voitresses. By hooded Voitresses with saintly cheer;
Voitaries. Thy voitaries, woefully resigned
Thee have thy Voitaries aptly styled,
Of number, pure and silent Voitaries
Which the chaste Voitaries seek, beyond the grave;
And cleared a way for the first Voitaries,
With its unworl'dly voitaries, for the sake
- Voitary. For thy contented Voitary.
Of thy contented Voitary
For is she not the votary of Apollo?
Then, pensive Voitary! let thy feet repair
Aspiring Voitary, ere thy hand present
And by one Voitary who at might stand
Voitary (in vast cathedral, where no foot
I see thee linger a glad votary,
Thus would the Voitary say—this severed hair,
Voitary's. Comes she with a votary's task,
Vote. For Lubbock vote—no legislative hack Votive. By many a votive death-cross planted near,
Rise, then, ye votive Towers! and catch a gleam
Or kneel, before the votive shrine
If a new Temple lift her votive brow
We reached a votive Stone that bears
A votive Column, spared by fire and flood
Whose votive burthen—'OUR KINGDOM'S HERE'
Extinct that echoed to the votive strains;
Shall stain this votive lay;
Shall stand a votive Tablet, haply free,
Through ever-changing scenes of votive quest
A votive Column and haply votive altars vouch
Vouch. I will not call on Heaven to vouch for me,
And for the fact will vouch,—one night
With their softest whispers vouch,
Exults in freedom, can with rapture vouch
(As books and haply votive altars vouch)
- Vouchsafe. Dread King of Kings, vouchsafe a ray divine
Who didst vouchsafe for man to die;
(Should Providence such grace to us vouchsafe)
Vouchsafe sweet influence, while her Poet speaks
- Vouchsafed. Then, to the measure of the light vouchsafed,
Was such bright Spectacle vouchsafed to me?
Vouchsafed no sparrow falleth to the ground?
Vouchsafed in pity or in wrath assigned;
Vouchsafed in gentleness to brood
Vouchsafed, in radiant ministry
All promises vouchsafed by Heaven will shine
Once to these cells vouchsafed. And when I note
But for some precious boons vouchsafed to thee,
Nor was this fellowship vouchsafed to me
Vouchsafed her inspiration, and diffused,
Vouchsafed for union or communion, feeds
Oh! next to one dear state of bliss, vouchsafed
That unto him hath also been vouchsafed
Of much exalted good by Heaven vouchsafed
Under his spiritual sway. He hath vouchsafed
Gifts nobler are vouchsafed alike to all;
Vouchsafed; this local transitory type
To me hath been vouchsafed; among the bowers
That an internal brightness is vouchsafed
- Vouchsafes. Vouchsafes her lessons, bounteous
Nymph
Vouchsafing. The light to us vouchsafing of thy prayer,
Vow. See Marriage-vow.
A broken vow, or bind a true,
Is fragrant with a humbler vow;
Shall I fancy pay to thee a grateful vow?
Erroneously renewing a sad vow
Maintains in violate its slightest vow!
Too frail to keep the lofty vow
The words of truth's memorial vow
And habit of his vow. That ancient Man—
This Baouer (for such vow I made)
The vow performed, in cross-legged effigy,
Shame if the consecrated Vow be found
For they are taking the baptismal Vow
So pray the Church, to consecrate a Vow
And, from her vow well weighed in Heaven's decrees,
The Tragic Muse thee served with thoughtful vow
Still from the village-green a vow
Out of the bosom of a wiser vow
That woman ne'er should forfeit, keep thy vow;

 The drooping mind of absence, by vows sworn
 And vows, that bind the will, in silence made.
 Vows to rapt Fancy humble fealty,
 And many chained by vows, with eager glees
 Stung with remorse for broken vows;
 Beneath the boughs that heard their vows,
 Above her head and so forgets her vows—
 Nor the vows which she has made;
 My heart was full; I made no vows, but vows
 Who lacks not will to use them; vows, renewed
 These inward feelings, and the aspiring vows
 Constrained forgiveness, and relenting vows,
Voyage. That I embarked for Syria. On our voyage
 So we pursued our voyage: when we landed,
 Fair blew the wished-for wind—the voyage sped;
 They mount—how short a voyage brings
 There, when they had closed their voyage,
 They for the voyage were prepared,
 In never-slackening voyage go
 Prompt voyage shall to you reveal
 The Ark, her melancholy voyage done!
 As with the Stream our voyage we pursue,
 For many a voyage made in her swift bark,
 And One a Tempest—and, the voyage o'er,
 With these blithe friends our voyage we renewed
 To speed my voyage; every sound or sight,
 To a long voyage on the silent deep!
 Their voyage was begun: nor is its power
 On homeward voyage,—what if wind and wave,
 Pursued her voyage, till a natural pier
Voyager. His passion drove him—then a Voyager
 Thou faery voyager! that dost float
 How sad a welcome! To each voyager
 However attractive, Fellow voyager!
 When spells forbade the voyager to land,
 And, like a weary voyager escaped.
Voyagers. Our youthful Voyagers bound fast her

Voyages. He kept it: many voyages
Voyaging. Voyaging through stragge seas of Thought,

Vulcan. With scoffs and taunts, like Vulcan out of Vulgar. Here where we stand—that tribe of vulgar wretches

 Hence motions, even amid the vulgar throng,
 And 'tis no vulgar service, makes them felt.
 Made not, as thousands do, a vulgar sleep;
 —No vulgar joy is his, at even tide
 Not with the mean and vulgar works of man,
 A vulgar hope was yours when ye employed
 Thus oft amid those fits of vulgar joy
 —And if the vulgar joy by its own weight
 Yet was there surely then no vulgar power
 Coarse manners, vulgar passions, that heat in
 Has been set forth; yet here the vulgar light
 With vulgar men about me, trivial forms
 Of vulgar nature; that its growth requires
 Upon the vulgar forms of present things,
 Under a graving weight of vulgar sense,
 Upon the vulgar ordinances of the world;
 For, in such portraits, though a vulgar face
 However gently, toward the vulgar air,
 This way and that the } vulgar } are inclined,

Wading. Wading beneath the conduct of their guide
Waft. —Waft her to glory, winged Powers,
 Waft fragrant greetings to each silent grave; . . . 272 Where holy 10*

 Fresh gales to waft them to the far-off port;
Wafted. Bees, wafted on the breezy air,
 Is wafted in mute harmonies; . . . 105 Damish Boy 17
 Wafted down the wind from lake or stream;
 Even such, this day, came wafted on the breeze
 Waft her hither, interpose . . . 372 Eg. Maid 245
 Wafted o'er sullen moss and craggy mound—
 Now toiling, wafted now on wings of prayer—
 In thoughtful moments, wafted by the gales . . . 438 Ecc. Sonn. 2. 39. 13
 Wafted o'er waves, or creeping through close trees,
 And she shall lodge us, wafted on her wings,
 A pleasant promise, wafted from her shores, . . . 733 Prelude 11. 429
 Wafted, at intervals, from many a bower . . . 735 Prelude 12. 55
 Wafted upon the wind from distant lands,
 And waves have wafted to this distant shore,
Wafting. Wafting your Charge to soft Parthenope!
 Of meek repentance, wafting wallflower scents
Wafts. And wafts at will the contrite soul to bliss.
 Then wafts him, cherish'd on her careful breast,
 Which wafts that prayer to heaven, is due to all,
Wage. Where ruthless mortals wage incessant wars.
 "With Nature never do they wage
 Their badge, attests the holy fight they wage."

 The mastiff, from beneath the waggon,
 If he were tethered to the waggon,
 The stately waggon is ascending,

 Sir Walter walked all round, north, south, and west,
 The gentlest Shade that walked Elysian plains
 Such was her office while she walked with men,
 Walked round, affronting the daylight;
 He did not arm, he walked aloof!
 Walked quick or slowly, every mood
 In sleep She sometimes walked abroad,
 We walked along, while bright and red
 The simple ways in which my childhood walked;
 In which I walked with Nature. . . . But let this Walked proudly at my side: she guided me,
 While on I walked, a comfort seemed to touch
 A dedicated Spirit. . . . On I walked
 Among sequestered villages we walked
 Like one of those who walked with hair unringed
 Had been inspired, and walked about in dreams.
 Louvet walked single through the avenue,
 In fear) have walked with quicker step; but why
 We sat—we walked—he pleased me with report
 And walked with me along the miry road,
 And walked along my road in happiness.
 He walked—protected from the sword of war
 Of social vanity, he walked the world.
 To soothe a Child, who walked beside him, weeping
 Man walked; and when and wherso'er he moved,
 If, having walked with Nature threescore years,
 Wishes and endless schemes; by daylight walked
 But in projection carried, as she walked
 In him the spirit of a hero walked
 Yet walked beneath the sun, in human shape, . . . 147 Joanna 36

Walking. But standing, walking, stretching forth his arms,
 Was walking by her native lake:
 'Till the Sun walking on his western field
 The bliss of walking daily in life's prime Walks. Sweetly ferocious, round his native walks,
 And who, that walks where men of ancient days
 In walks whose boundary is the lost One's grave,
 Let itself in upon him!—pathways, walks,
 Walks to and fro—watchings at every hour;
 The Danish Boy walks here alone:
 Beyond his wish he walks secure;
 How he, long forced in humble walks to go,
 Thy Husband walks the paths of upper air;
 Your once sweet memory, studious walks and
 shades!
 Rich are his walks with supernatural cheer;
 'Tis his who walks about in the open air, . . . 213 Dion 45

 The Bard who walks with Duddon for his guide,
 Recovers not his loss; but walks with shame,
 Enjoys the walks his predecessors trod,
 Together,—mid trim walks and artful bowers,
 Walks, pools, and arbours, homestead, hall—
 Converging walks, and fountains gay,
 Upon the height walks to and fro;
 Now walks in unanimity.
 Pools, terraces, and walks are sown
 Here walks amid the mournful waste
More promptly rises, walks with stricter heed,
 Thus speaks (that Voice which walks upon the wind,
 That union ceased: then, cleaving easy walks
 And shap'd these pleasant walks by Emont's side,
 The task, in smoother walks to stray;
 Of lofty station, female goodness walks,
 To aid the work, what time these walks and bowers
 Where danger roofs the narrow walks of death;
 Who walks, when honour'd men of ancient days
 Secure she walks, Philosophy her guide.
 E'er they smooth'd the rugged walks of life,
 Puts off his wings, and walks, with proud delight,
 Voluntuously through fields and rural walks,
 A virtue not its own. My morning walks
 Drifted about along the streets and walks,
 Or walks of open scandal, but in vague
 And wild outlandish walks of simple youth
 Those walks well worthy to be prized and loved—
 Those walks in all their freshness now came back
 And tributary walks; the last, and oft
 While Winter like a well-tamed lion walks,
 Sole link that binds them to each other; walks;
 Look out on waters, walks, and gardens green.
 Walks, and achieves his wonders, from the eye
 And with the ruddy produce she walks round
 Walks a lone Monk, when service hath expired,
 And when the partner of those varied walks
 He walks about and looks upon the spot
 I prized such walks still more, for there I found
 There are among the walks of homely life
 Her goodness, that, not seldom, in my walks
 Nor wanting ornament of walks between,
 —Wild were the walks upon those lonely Downs,
 That spreads into successive seas, he walks;
 And labyrinthine walks, her sunny glades
 And puissant to range the solemn walks
 "A favourite boundary to their lengthened walks
 Of his sublime vocation, in the walks
 Do we revert so fondly to the walks
 The rustic Boy, who walks the fields, untaught;
 Admiring the man who walks below
 'Tis true, bath in my walks been often heard,

Here wanders like a gliding ghost, . . .
Spontaneous wanders, hand in hand with Fear, . . .
Thus while my fancy wanders, thou, clear Spring,
Wands. Brushing with lucid wands the water's face :

As renders needless spells and magic wands, . . .
To which the silver wands of saints in Heaven,
Beheld long-bearded teachers, with white wands,
Wana. Doubly depressed, setting, and in her wane ?
Before her wane begins on heaven's blue coast ;
Where joys are perfect—neither wax nor wane, . . .
And subject neither to eclipse nor wane, . . .
Waned. Ye, when the orb of life had waned, . . .
Wanes. Hope wanes with her, while lustre fills Waning. Only the waning moon hangs dull and red

Want. Beat round to clear the streets of want and pain, . . .
Might want no cover, and rapacity, . . .
Good morrow, Strangers ! If you want a Guide,
Driven out in troops to want and nakedness ;
And did not want glimmering of quiet hope ;
Many there whose eyes will not want cause
We want not store of them—a water-spout . . .
And then, for our immortal part ! we want
"I'm here, what is 't you want with me ?"
Since reason failed want is her threatened doom,
A Speedwell may not want its place . . .
We want your streamers, friend, you know ;
By ever-changing shape and want of rest ;
If she is prest by want of food,
I want a comrade, and for you
Want, through neglect of hoar Antiquity, . . .
But equally a want of books and men !
Alas ! that from the lips of abject Want
With all who want not skill to couple grief
And yet want courage at their need :
Thought he, may want not skill to save,
And some to want—as if by tempests wrecked
Is conscious of her want ; through England's bounds, . . .
Or want of love, that here no Stone we raise ;
Why fix upon his wealth or want a thought ?
Such rapture, nor want power to feed ;
In solitude, with every want
And honour want a home ;
And to the stirring breezes, does he want
Where want and sorrow were. The easy man
And smiles to Solitude and Want impart.
How Want may press thee down, and with thee sink
Vague longing, haply bred by want of power,
Supplied our want, we haply might employ
And over the tree-tops ; nor did we want
Want store of leafy arbutus where the light
Majestic edifices, should not want
Nor was there want of milder thoughts, of love,
From languages that want the living voice
And no one seems to want his share,—Immense
And want of hope where evidence divine
So that disastrous period did not want
Through want of better knowledge in the heads
Shall want no humbler tenderness ; his heart . . .
Though not of want : the little fields, made green
At our entreaty ; less from want of power
Prosperity subverted, maddening want,
Perpetual sabbath ; come, disease and want ;
Want due consistence ; like a pillar of smoke,
That, though immovably convinced, we want
Evince the want and weakness whence they spring,
Abundant recompense for every want, . . .
And sink, through utter want of cheering light ;
And, through improvidence or want of love
The slave of ignorance, and oft of want,
Yet were there times in which they did not want
What want we ? have we not perpetual streams,
That they who want, are not too great a weight
Their sheep might neither want (from perilous
storms
Not want, for this, your own subordinate place
Nor pipe for want of pleasure in the life
Nor fear, though thou confide in me, a want Wanted. And near a thousand tables pied and wanded food,
And wanted neither food, nor clothes, nor love :
If things ensued that wanted grace,
When such are wanted,
Nor wanted sun, nor rain, nor dew,
Their very wishes wanted aid
Still last to come where thou art wanted most !
And all the oppressed, who wanted strength,
Nor wanted lurking hamlet, dusky towns,
Nor wanted, when their fortitude had held
Nor wanted at this time rich store
Nor wanted 'mid the pressing crowd
Nor wanted we rich pastime of this kind,
I wanted not that joy, I did not need
Wanted not animation, when the tide . . .

That this particular strife had wanted power . . .
Wanted not consolations, nor a creed
Where wanted most : "The lordly attributes
When wanted most ; a confidence impaired
Nor wanted timely treat of fish or fowl
Bred also there, I wanted not a scale
That doubtless wanted not its tender moods,
Wanting. A worthier wanting, shall itself entwine
Nor was there wanting other aid—
"What is it thou wouldst seek ? What is wanting to thy heart ?
And hence, so far from wanting facts or dates
That, wanting not wild grace, are from all mischief
free !
That Julia, wanting yet the name of wife,
Tears not wanting, nor a knell
Of Nations wanting virtue to be strong
If vital hope be wanting to restore,
Or fortitude be wanting to sustain,
Was wanting ;—and most happily till now,
Though Christian rites be wanting ! From what bank
Wanting accustomed food, must pass from earth,
Be wanting that sometimes, where fancied ills
Abstuse, nor wanting punctual service high,
Much wanting, so much wanting, in myself, . . .
Nor wanting a fair face of water-weeds
And pillow ; yet not wanting love that makes
Were wanting here, I took what might be found
This was not wanting, Carelessly I roamed
Wanting,—the tragedies of former times,
Yet everything was wanting that might give
Nor tender yearnings, wanting for my good
But much was wanting ; therefore did I turn
What'er was wanting, something had I gained,
Yet wanting the accomplishment of verse,
Was wanting yet the pulse delight of love
Thus was he reared ; much wanting to assist
Declined their languid heads, wanting support.
Were wanting ; and simplicity of life ;
Nor wanting ornament of walks between,
This wanting, he would leave the sight of men,
Henceforth, what'er is wanting to yourselves
Of faith was wanting, Tell me, why refused
Nor wanting here, to entertain the thought,
Ill-sheltered, and oft wanting fire and food ;
Of knightly race, nor wanting powerful friends,
Yet much, I feel, is wanting—else the task
Nor wanting, at wide intervals, the bulk
Wanting all relish for her strenuous mind,
With backward will ; but, wanting not address
Was wanting ; but interior lights appeared
A single sheep was wanting, They had sought
With objects wanting life, repelling love ;
Beauty not therefore wanting change to stir
That victims yet were wanting to assuage
Wanton. Or playing wanton with the floating grass,
I could have joined the wanton chase . . .
With many a wanton stroke
Did wanton fawn and kid forbear
The flowers the wanton Zephyrs choose ;
That they all are wanton wooers ;
Made such wanton spoil and rout,
Where are they now, those wanton Boys ?
For summer pastime into wanton air ;
To wanton cruelty.
The obstinate pride and wanton revelry
Less than they heed a breath of wanton air.
Too learned, or too good ; but wanton, fresh,
Unsettled by a wanton blow from foot
Sparkle about the feet of wanton boys.
Wantoned. Wantoned, fast rooted on the ancient tower
Together wantoned in wild Poesy, . . .
Wantonly. Rolled wantonly between their slippery 2 wings, . . .
Or from before it chasing wantonly
And glance, while wantonly the rough wind blows,
Behold, how wantonly she laves
Wantonly breaking in upon the Swiss, . . .
Wantonness. In very wantonness of heart.
Now but in wantonness she frets,
To wantonness,—Away, Circean revels !
Had run abroad in wantonness, to sport,
In wantonness of heart, through rough and smooth
In wantonness of heart, a joyous hand
"It were a wantonness, and would demand
In wantonness of conquest, or puts on Wanton's. I know that Wanton's noisy station,
Want's. Rest not in hope want's icy chain to thaw Wants. For supplying all deficiencies, all wants of the rude nest
What then wants the Child to temper, . . .
With such allowance as his wants required ;
That knew not of his wants, I will not say
Of natures, for our wants provides
Even thine, though few thy wants !—Roof, window, door, . . .

 86 Anecdote 41

Warm—continued.

I bring thee draughts of milk, warm milk it is and new.
That, as the day was warm, he had lain down
Blessings upon that soft, warm face,
My long-frozen heart grows warm !
And underneath the hay-stack warm,
Breathed gently from the warm south-west :
So warm, so beautiful withal,
Green pasture and the soft warm air
Within that warm and peaceful berth,
"Thy wife and child are snug and warm,
Made the warm earth his lazy bed."
And shrubs—to hang upon the warm alcove,
Speak—though this soft warm heart, once free to hold
Thou who dost warm Earth's universal mould,
A Patriot's heart, warm with undying fire.
While the warm hearth exalts the mantling ale,
For warm Vesuvio's vine-clad slopes ;
Of a once warm Abode, and that new Pile,
But not before the warm life-blood
While in the Body lodged, her warm abode ;
From the warm breeze that bears thee on, alight
And dissolution and decay, the warm
With Young and Old warm greetings we exchange,
Or in warm valley, seeks his part to fill ;
The loog, warm, lightsome summer-day,
Enough to warm her for three days.
And oft from his warm fire he'd go,
"May he never more be warm !"
He never will be warm again.
Affections, warm as sunshine, free as air ;
Fresh flowers ; while the sun shines warm,
Of day or the warm light,
When warm from myrtle bays and tranquil seas,
Our home-amusements by the warm peat-fire
Add recent things yet warm with life ; and a sea-night,
It was a close, warm, breezeless summer night,
Of the warm summer, from a belt of hemp
Nor lacked, for more delight on that warm day,
By the warm sunshine, and the jocund voice
Which the warm sun solicited, and earth
The warm lap of his mother earth : and so,
Not for reproof, but high and warm delight,
Warm woods, and sunny hills, and fresh greenfields,
What arts had better claim with wrath to warm .
Warm-clad. Will, among us warm-clad and warmly housed,
Warmed. But the poor ragged Thing whose ways my human heart had warmed.
Not unouchsafed—a light that warmed and cheered
Is warmed thro' winter by her feathery breast.
So beautiful of late, with sunshine warmed,
Warmed our sad being with celestial light,
Warmed by thy influence, creeping things
Which checked discussion ere it warmed to strife ;
Nor less when spring had warmed the cultured Vale,
For all ; and yet how few are warmed or cheered !
Warmer. With warmer love—oh ! with far deeper zeal
With warmer suns and softer gales,
But not a whit the warmer he . . .
And when the flock, with warmer weather, climbs
Wood-drinking comfort from the warmer sun,
Warmest. Even for the man who wears the warmest fleece ;
Warmly. Will, among us warm-clad and warmly
housed,
Warm-reeking. And sent ' warm-reeking, rich and sweet,
Warms. No tears can chill them, and no bosom warms,
Which the Muse warms ; and I, whose head is grey,
No ; their dread service nerves the heart it warms,
Does that benignity pervade, that warms . . .
This favoured Land, or sunshine warms her soil.
Warmth. Our little fire sent forth a cheering warmth
Light to thy path, warmth to thy blood !—Together
For clothes, for warmth, for food, and fire ;
What warmth, what comfort would it yield . . .
When we've little warmth, or none . . .
But, till the warmth of summer skies
His mid-day warmth abate not, seeming less
Seemed from each other a faint warmth to borrow.
Day's grateful warmth, tho' moist with falling dews,
Can draw warmth from the cheek of my Love ;
In the first warmth of their original sunshine,
The light of Knowledge, and the warmth of Love.
What on the Plain we have of warmth and light,
With warmth, as much as needed, from a sun
And the wild paths ; and, by the summer's warmth
When, in the warmth of midsummer, the wheat
Beside a fire whose genial warmth seemed met
This vital warmth too cold, these visual orbs,

Warmth—continued.

Of outward sunshine and internal warmth ; . . .
How thankful for the warmth of summer days,
For seamless and warmth, on festal days,
Or foot, or lip, in summer's warmth—perceived,
—What kindly warmth from touch of fostering
hand,
Howl from the north, what kindly warmth, methought,
Warn. To warn, to comfort, and command ;
To warn the living ; if truth were ever told
Thy whereabouts, to warn the approaching sail.
Warned. Stranger ! henceforth be warned ; and know that pride,
Thus warned he sought some shepherd's spreading thorn
Warned in a dream, the Wanderer long had sought
Be warned—"His zeal the Chiefs confounded,
Warned thee these upper regions to forego,
Shouts to him from behind ; and, if thus warned
But, timely warned, He would have stayed his steps
Warning. The black disguise, the warning whistle shrill,
Warning solemn and profound . . .
The clock gives warning for eleven ;
The Shepherd, at such warning, of his flock
"From me this friendly warning take"
And gave his doleful warning.
Saviour, for our warning, seen . . .

Warnings. Forgotten ? have my warnings passed so quickly
"Tis said that warnings ye dispense,
Of warnings—from the unprecedented might,
How shall your ancient warnings work for good
Upheld by warnings heeded not too late . . .
Questions, directions, warnings and advice,
Warrant. Leonard and James ! I warrant, every corner
The warrant hail, exulting to be free ;
Their warrant. Bodies fall by wild sword-law ;
The sweet of fame his warrant :
And, stebst Mother ! under warrant
I ask what warrant fixed them (like a spell
Parching Summer hath no warrant
But from Him I crav'd no warrant,
Warred. Review the past, I warred against myself—
Warring. Troubled long with warring notions
And lul'd the warring passions into rest,
Warrior. If here a warrior left a spell,
Upon the common weal ; a warrior hold,
By Art's hold privilege Warrior and War-horse stand
High lodged the Warrior, like a bird of prey ;
Descends :—beneath this godlike Warrior, see !
He smote the blossoms of their warrior youth ; . . .
Resting upon his arms each warrior stood,
Of young or old, warrior, or saint, or sage,
—She sees a warrior carved in stone,
A warrior, with his shield of pride
Who is the happy Warrior ? Who is he
This is the happy Warrior ; this is He Toils long and hard.—The warrior will report
A crest of purple tops his warrior head.
By the dismantled warrior in old age,
Of some gigantic warrior clad in mail,
The warrior from the field—all perished, all—
Sage, warrior, patriot, hero ; for it seemed
And armed warrior ; and in every grove
Of their rude homesteads. Here the Warrior dwelt ;
Warrior-chief. The feudal Warrior-chief, a Ghost
unlaid,
Warrior's. See Patriot-warrior's.
A crest of purple tops the warrior's head . . .
In many a court, and many a warrior's tent,
The frith that glittered like a warrior's shield,
As faith thus sanctified the warrior's crest,
Of Thirlmere flashes like a warrior's shield
Then farewell to the Warrior's schemes, farewell . . .
Warriors. See Land-warriors.
Silent the visionary warrior go,
The warriors leap upon the land,
Five thousand warriors—O the rapturous day !
Sleep, Warriors, sleep ! among your hills repose !
Kings, warriors, high-souled poets, saint-like sages,

Watch—continued.

We watch their splendour, shall we covet storms,
To watch while Morn first crowns thee with her rays,

And watch these mute Companions, in the pool,
Here to elude and there surmount, they watch
Well did I watch, much labour'd, nor had power

To watch the spreading lawns with cattle grazed,
Watch-dog. Their watch-dog ne'er his angry bark forgoes,

Watch-dog's. At our approach, a jealous watch-dog's bark,

Watched. No labourer watched his red kiln glaring bright,
I watched them with delight, they were a lovely pair.

Had watched her with fixed eyes while to and fro
Not wholly free, I watched him thus; at length
We had been followed, hourly watched, and noosed,

Faithfully watched, and, by that loving care
How my eyes watched the foe,

Watches. With stern composure watches to the plain—
She watches till he's out of sight,
That watches and receives.

Winding in ordered pomp their upward way, . . .
Like Una shining on her gloomy way, . . .
(Sole bourn, sole wish, sole object of my way; . . .
Now hardly heard, beguiles my homeward way . . .
To light him shaken by his rugged way . . .
Yet thither the world's business finds its way . . .
Through which rough Garry cleaves his way, can tell
Its way with uproar, till the ruin, drowned
Is all we have to cheer our wintry way; . . .
Close on the remnant of their weary way; . . .
With shrill winds whistling round my lonely way,
Pursued his vagrant way, with feet half bare;
But, when the trance was gone, feebly pursued his way.
Their way, the Woman thus her mournful tale
renewed.
The wain pursued its way; and following near
When I gave way to your request; and now,
Lies on your way; accept us as your Guides.
Chancing to pass this way some six months gone,
Cooling our heels in this way—I'll begin
Which way so'er I turn, I am perplexed.
His Power is this way tending. It hefts us
Each in his way? Troth, I begin to think so.
The motion of a muscle—this way or that—
It might have found it's way into my heart,
All vanished. I gave way—do you attend?
Through words and things, a dim and perilous way;
Life stretched before me smooth as some broad way
You were not able to bring him all the way
Too quickly moved, too easily giving way,
What way does the Wind come? What way does
he go?
That unto him, where'er shall lie his life's appointed
way,
He took his way, impatient to accost
Ay—you may turn that way—it is a grave
I to her cottage bent my way,
That in some ether way yon smoke

The way my friends their course did bend,
Their way to me: 'tis falsely said
A long, long way of land and sea!
I fear you're in a dreadful way,
Which way to turn she cannot tell.
If from the public way you turn your steps
The public way, he put on a bold face;
He to that valley took his way, and there
No good but by the way that leads to bliss
For a sunny thought to cheer the Stranger's way,
Into a path or public way
When clouds gave way at dead of night
Along the public way, this Peak, so high
Sauntered on this retired and difficult way.
With which I, in my humble way,
And hitherward pursued its way;
And find his way to me,
Had closed upon his weary way,
That way look, my Infant, lo!
Will walk through life in such a way
This untired world, and to prepare thy way
Who loag hath trod this toilsome way,
Steep the way and wearisome.
Their way, without mishap or fault;
"Go you your way, and mind not me;
The family had come that way,
The way the Waggon went before.
Again behold them on their way!
Grinding through rough and smooth our way;
Which called their thoughts another way:
A thousand, if they cross our way.
Forcing my way, I came to one dear nook
And twinkle on the milky way;
I left her, and pursued my way;
Behold the mighty Moon! this way
Runs with her all the way, wherever she doth run.
And in this way he gained an honest maintenance.
And, if no worthier led the way, resolved
He through the portal takes his silent way,
And Fancy smooths the way.
Surviving near the public way,
Through India's spicy regions wing their way,

They move; but soon the appointed way . . .
This way and that, with wild-flowers crowned. . .

Way—continued.
If I along that lowly way . . .
Then take thy way, adventurous Skiff,
But nature ne'er could find the way . . .
That promised to cut short the way;
Did Peter boldly press his way . . .
And while the Ass pursues his way . . .
And in a light and careless way, . . .
And, in the best way that he could,
Furrowing its shallow way with dubious will;
Which stopped that band of travellers on their way, . . .
With gentleness, in that becoming way
Unless Thou show to us thine own true way
Smooth way; and I beheld the face of one . . .
She finds familiar names, a beaten way . . .

"As the cold aspect of a sunless way . . .
In opposite directions urged their way . . .
Like them. The unguilty Power pursues his way,
Points heavenward, indicate the end and way . . .
And clear way made for her triumphal car . . .
A soothing spirit follows in the way . . .
Ne'er can the way be irksome or forlorn . . .
Shall guide, his fancy cheer, your way;
Was moved; and in such way expressed . . .
Before me in my endless way . . .
I'll take the shortest way." . . .
The great Sea-water finds its way . . .
If this or that way he should stir, . . .
And let him, let him go his way,
Went pacing side by side, this public Way . . .
Calais is not: and I have bent my way
O Friend! I know not which way I must look
So didst thou travel on life's common way,
That, having forced its way from birth to birth,
And through the human heart explore my way;
And guard the way of life from all offence
Hath followed wheresoe'er a way was made
Cleaves its glad way, a cry of harvest home
That, slowly making way for peaceful night,
But on!—a tempting downward way, . . .
A way with shadows overspread;
Though the toil of the way with dear Friends we divide,
Go forth, my little Book! pursue thy way;
The toils nor felt the crosses of the way,
Not, therefore, shall my mind give way to sadness;—
Shoot hut a little way—'tis all they can—
Bend that way her desires. The dew, the storm—
Further to force their way, endowed its trunk
His way to Rome? Ah, no,—round hill and plain
Strange and familiar, might beguile the way,
Farewell!—but go thy way, no need hast thou
Light which to God is both the way and guide;
Neither put forth that way Thy arm severe;
See, where his difficult way that Old Man wins
Pursued its way with bird-like sweep,
Instructs the Swans their way to measure;
My seat, while I give way to such intent;
The clouds and fowls of the air thy way pursue!
Else unapproachable, their huoyant way;
I thanked the Leader of my onward way,
This way or that, or give it even a thought
Love wound his way by soft approach,
That down the steep hills force their way,
Now a step or two her way
From Rylstone she hath found her way
He found his way to a postern-gate;
Not seldom foremost in the way;
Which way so'er our fate incline,
Which way the tide is doomed to flow.
But her Faith leaned another way . . .
That passion, prudently gave way;
Her way into forbidden ground;
Approaching in her gentle way,
How can I serve you? point the way."
To Rylstone-hall her way she took.
And up the vale of Wharf his way . . .
Or have given way to slow mutation,
A more divine and loftier way!
Fluds entrance through yon arch, where way . . .
A way first opened; and, with Roman chains,
For Souls whose doom is fixed! The way is smooth
That, like the Red-cross Knight, they urge their way,
As thence she holds her way to Palestine . . .
If good can smooth the way to evil choice,
Pastors who neither take nor point the way . . .
By which the Prioress beguiled the way, . . .
Tempest, or length of way, or weight of toil?—
Then to the new-found World explored their way,
Of lofty thoughts, the way before us lies . . .
Monastic Domes! following my downward way,
Opens a way for life, or consonance
Ye mariners, that plough your onward way, . . .
That ever walk content with Nature's way,
Rest smooths the way for sleep; in field and dnwer
Their practicable way.
Their way, with thy pure help, to heart and mind;
Furrowing its way right nward. The most rude,

 And after that they rose, and took their way,
 That every wight, who in the way passed by,
 By longer way than he was wont to go; . . . 553 Prioresse 106
 Up the Haymarket bill he oft whistles his way,
 Intent upon thy way, pause, though in haste! . . . 554 Prioresse 151

 When to that Ship he bent his way, . . . 564 Troilus 107
 Upon a way of life unmeet . . . 564 Troilus 144
 And to the few who pass this way, . . . 570 Farmer 81
 Is on his way attended; . . . 573 Chiabrera 3. 2
 Hath dragg'd her babes along this weary way; . . . 575 Chiabrera 6. 15
 —The whistling swain that plods his ringing way
 To light him shaken by his viewless way, . . . 577 Centoph 13
 With pensive step to measure my slow way, . . . 577 *I came 47
 Gives way, and half it's pines torment the flood;
 Attend, or dare with minute-steps their way;
 And Conscience dogging close his bleeding way,
 And meet the gladdening pilgrims on their way,
 Her shrill winds roaring round my lonely way;
 If e'er they pointed forth the blissful way . . . 579 *Sweet Flower 9
 It chanc'd that Andrew pass'd that way . . . 580 *Sweet Flower 60
 How fast that length of way was left behind, . . . 581 John Wards. 65
 Shun the broad way too easily explored,
 That crossed her way. Now stoops she to entreat
 But salutation taking its glad way . . . 584 Ch. Lamb 27
 I cannot miss my way. I breathe again! . . . 588 Immortality 74
 My way beneath the mellowing sun, that shed
 And through the silent water stole my way
 And nothing cheered our way till first we saw
 Of loneliness gave way to empty noise . . . 596 Ev. Wk. Quarto 244
 That way I leaned by nature; for my heart
 Or looked that way for aught that might be clothed
 Like caterpillars eating out their way . . . 597 Ev. Wk. Quarto 315
 Thrust out abruptly into Fortune's way . . . 602 Desc. Sh. Quarto 36
 An artless rustic's notice, this way less,
 More that way, was not wasted upon me—
 And has its brief perusal, then gives way . . . 605 Desc. Sh. Quarto 165
 Up the familiar hill I took my way . . . 606 Desc. Sh. Quarto 212
 And when at evening on the public way
 Of awe or tremulous dread, that had given way
 That he himself had oftentimes given way
 And through that churchyard when my way has led
 When craving for the marvellous gives way
 That streamlet whose blue current works its way
 We held our way, direct through hamlets, towns,
 Then paced the beaten downward way that led
 We take our way. A rare-show is here,
 The Italian, as he thrids his way with care,
 Intolerant, as is the way of youth . . . 613 Desc. Sh. Quarto 640
 Though obstinate on this way, yet on that . . . 614 Desc. Sh. Quarto 665
 Commingled—shapes which met me in the way
 Turned this way—that way! sportive and alert
 Some aged woman finds her way again,
 Had shed beside the public way its bells, . . . 615 Desc. Sh. Quarto 716

 Nor heat, nor cold, nor weary ways, . . . 533 Blest* is 32
 Along forbidden ways ; . . . 544 Russ. Fug. 196
 The massy Ways, carried across these heights
 The simple ways in which my childhood walked ;
 (How could we less ?) the manners and the ways
 He would not linger in the public ways,
 These lighter graces ; and the rural ways . . . 701
 A toilsome burden up the craggy ways,
 Leads, though by sinuous ways, if here I show
 In which the meagre, stale, forbidding ways
 With long long ways before, by cottage bench,
 And backward wanderings along thorny ways :
 And the lamb's mother, and their tender ways
 Among the ways of Nature, for a time
 In human nature and her subtle ways,
 Then, though (too weak to tread the ways of truth)
 Through hot and dusty ways, or pelting storm,
 And teasing ways of children vexed not him ;
 From childhood up, the ways of poverty ;
 Observe their ways ; and, free from envy, find
 Take courage, and withdraw yourself from ways
 Revolts, offended at the ways of men . . . 816
 And as we fall by various ways, and sink . . . 818
 So manifold and various are the ways . . . 823
 Through his acquaintance with the ways of truth,
 Have ye withdrawn from passion's crooked ways,
 The habitations, and the ways of men,
 By poets skilled in nature's secret ways . . . 840
 At their false ways disdainfully,—and oft . . . 860
 Not fearing toil, nor length of weary ways,
 Rides to and fro : I know them and their ways.
Wayside. Black drizzling crags that spake by the wayside . . . 186
 This brief this simple wayside Call can slight,
 Stretched under wayside hedge-rows, ballad tunes,
 Black drizzling crags that spake by the way-side
Wayward. Wayward, yet by all who knew her . . . 94
 That hast thy wayward moods, as thou dost show
 What fond and wayward thoughts will slide
 And Instinct is neither wayward nor blind . . . 142
 Full oft is pleased a wayward dart to throw ; . . . 153
 Where rivulets dance their wayward round ; . . . 187
 Then coming from the wayward world,
 The wayward brain, to saunter through a wood !
Way-worn. Taking her for some way-worn rover,
 Soft and cool to way-worn feet . . . 176
 And way-worn Wanderers, poorly fed, . . . 181
 Bathed duteously her wayworn feet,
 Nor longer naked he your way-worn feet, . . . 542
We, omitted.
Weak. Weak raked a covering form two habes to shield, . . . 7
 Drowsy and weak, and shattered memory ;
 Becomes at last weak and contemptible . . . 31
 If I could think one weak or partial feeling,—
 Their verdict would abolish these weak scruples.
 Weak ! I am weak—there does my torment lie,
 Were there a Man who, being weak and helpless . . . 56
 Now, this is as it should be ! I am weak !— . . . 61
 My Daughter does not know how weak I am ;
 Who lives but to protect the weak or injured,
 Where he, in his poor self so weak, by Providence was placed, . . . 91
 But, as I said, old Walter was too weak
 Thy enemies are neither weak nor few ;
 Of our weak nature rest not, must be deemed
 Too weak to labour in the harvest field,
 Wise, foolish, weak, or strong . . . 156
 Or second my weak Muse ? . . . 168
 Weak as a lamb the hour that it is yeaned ;
 A weak and cowardly untruth !
 " And Thou, though strong in love, art all too weak
 By the just Gods whom no weak pity moved,
 " What'er the weak may dread, the wicked dare,
 The Sage, who feels how blind, how weak . . . 215
 The cry grows weak—and weaker still ;
 Each fibre of his frame was weak ; . . . 247
 Weak all the animal within ; . . . 247
 His voice is weak with perturbation ;
 For human-kind, weak slaves of cumbrous pride !
 (For what delights the sense is false and weak)
 " Weak is the will of Man, his judgment blind ;
 By some weak aims at services assigned
 Off shall the lowly weak, till nature bring
 Of such weak fibre that the treacherous air
 Weak Spirits are there—who would ask,
 The same weak wish returns, that had before
 deceived him.
 Then, the strained heart of fortitude proves weak ;
 Whom no weak hopes deceived ; whose mind ensued, . . . 323
 This sword that one of our weak times might wear !
 To mild, to lowly, and to seeming weak, . . . 335

Weak—continued.

" Though vast thy power, thy words are weak," . . . 372
 To thee, a woman, and thence weak ; . . . 402
 Oh weak, weak moment ! to what end . . . 411
 The weak One hath subdued her heart ;
 They come—they spread—the weak, the suffering,
 hear ; . . . 419
 With equal wrath the steps of strong and weak)
 An old weak Man for vengeance thrown aside,
 The strong were merciless, without hope the weak ;
 Blest in their pious ignorance, though weak
 Do his weak ankles swell . . . 468
 But he is weak ; both Man and Boy, . . . 485
 Come, weak as is a breaking wave ! . . . 485
 Too weak to stand against its sportive breath,
 Hush, feeble lyre ! weak words refuse . . . 507
 In the weak love of life his least command . . . 518
 While polity and discipline were weak,
 Casting weak words amid a host of thoughts
 " My knowledge is so weak, O blissful Queen ! . . . 553
 Weak sinful folk, that God, with pitying eye,
 Weak and more weak the issuing current eyes
 Too weak to gather it, already love
 With hand however weak, but in the main
 (The idol weak as the idolater), . . . 657
 Though weak his step and cautious, he appeared
 Why call upon a few weak words to say
 That Man is only weak through his mistrust . . . 720
 To Brutus—that tyrannic power is weak,
 Weak, and of heartless omen, had not power
 Is lost in light, the weak in the more strong . . . 729
 Of something false and weak, that could not stand
 Then, though (too weak to tread the ways of truth)
 Were baffled ; nor could my weak arm disperse
 Wherefore, when humbled Liberty grew weak,
 Without desert, what he desired ; weak men,
 Too weak even for his envy or his hate ! . . . 791
 Too weak for suffering, and for hope too tame)
 The weak were praised, rewarded, and advanced ;
 Primeval Nature's child. A creature weak
 And the weak functions of one busy day,
 Have fairly earned a victory o'er the weak,
 If to he weak is to be wretched—miserable,
 And trusting only to his own weak hands,
 That which he had been weak enough to do
 Else had the strongest fastnesses proved weak
 On mere material instruments—how weak
 Soft murmuring) was too weak to overcome, Weakened. There dwelt, weakened in spirit more and more ; . . . 718
 Returned with sinews weakened and relaxed, . . . 870
Waikening. From diminution safe and weakening
 age ; . . . 812
Weaker. The cry grows weak—and weaker still ;
 The weaker perished to a man ; . . . 244
 Grew weaker, and I hasten on to tell . . . 391
Weakest. The weakest of God's creatures, stand
 resolved . . . 65
 Or as the weakest things, if frost . . . 246
 Though sensitive, yet, in their weakest part, . . . 260
 All other strength the weakest may withstand,
 Might leap, the weakest nerve of superstition start ;
 Such grief for there would be the weakest thought Weak-mindedness. Brook no continuance of weak-mindedness— . . . 260
Weakness. With tales of weakness and infirmity !
 When such a sudden weakness fell upon me,
 Obey you more. Your weakness, to the Band,
 Made weakness a protection, and obscured
 Nay, then—I am mistaken. There's a weakness
 But he had failed through weakness. From his hand . . . 73
 And weakness crowned with the impotence of death !— . . . 77
 That it was from the weakness of his heart . . . 102
 To perilous weakness, and entrust his cause . . . 122
 From weakness now and pain defended, . . . 157
 In power, where once he trembled in his weakness ;
 Forget thy weakness, upon which is built,
 As though his weakness were disturbed by pain :
 Who through the abyss of weakness dive . . . 330
 How subtly works man's weakness, signs may heave
 O weakness of the Great ! O folly of the Wise ! . . . 363
 And wounds and weakness oft his labour's sole remains . . . 459
 There's weakness, and strength both redundant
 and vain ;
 Oh, let my weakness have an end !
 Beautiful, while very weakness . . . 492
 The weakness of their love . . . 544
 Out of his weakness and his melancholy . . . 564
 Thus in the weakness of my heart
 (What weakness prompts the voice to tell it here ?)
 Ye will forgive the weakness of that hour,
 Strength came where weakness was not known to be,
 Confession of man's weakness and his lovèd . . . 690
 Through utter weakness pitifully dear, . . . 700
 Maimed, spiritless ; and, in their weakness strong,
 Their power or weakness, wealth or poverty, . . . 713

Weakness—continued.

- And in the weakness of humanity, . . . 765
 I turned aside in weakness, nor had power
 Perplexed with currents; of his weakness sick;
 Yet, through this weakness of the general heart,
 In spite of all the weakness that life brings,
 All weakness fathoms, can supply all needs:
 Evince the want and weakness whence they spring;
 And doth commend their weakness and disease
 Indignantly, the weakness of her sex.
 The weakness painful and most pitiful,
 Perverted thus, but weakness in all good,
Weal. A tuncful offering for the weal
 For innocence and youth, for weal and woe?
 Upon the common weal; a warrior bold,
 Through the realms of woe and weal;
 Thought Peter then, come weal or woe,
 But to promote and fortify the weal
 To human weal and woe.
 Of right and wrong, of weal and woe,
 Can spare, and humblest earthly Weal demands,
 Of rash change, ominous for the public weal,
 Be at their side, come weal or woe:
 If, when at home our private weal . . .
 And, for their sakes, come weal or woe,
 But from what world She came, what woe or weal
 From the Baptismal hour, thro' weal and woe,
 But infinite its grasp of weal and woe!
 Locked in our world's embrace through weal and
 woe;
 That public order, private weal,
 Balanced by vigilance for others' weal.
 For the State's guidance, or the Church's weal,
 Have pondered here their country's weal,
 Or rather skulking for the common weal
Wealth. From perils manifold, with some small wealth
 But the comfort, the blessings, and wealth that we had,
 Exulting, rich beyond the wealth of kings,
 What wealth the show to me had brought:
 Without Thee what is all the morning's wealth?
 Kind Nature's various wealth was all your own;
 Fireside, the heroic wealth of hall and bower,
 On fleets and armies, and external wealth:
 With his most sacred wealth, heroic dust,
 Glory, and wealth, which, perils as they are,
 Tokens, once kept as boasted wealth,
 And ambrosial wealth—the shame of your estate;
 Who daily piles up wealth in Mammon's cave—
 Of wealth and power and honours, long for rest;
 Though poor, yet rich, without the wealth of books,
 She has a world of ready wealth,
 For wealth, or honours, or for worldly state;
 That to an Idol, falsely called "the Wealth"
 Why fix upon his wealth or want a thought?
 And there, with small wealth but his legs and his hands,
 In brighter rows her table wealth aspires,
 For objects hitherto the absolute wealth
 Through claims of wealth or blood; nor was it least
 And wealth and titles were in less esteem
 Their power or weakness, wealth or poverty,
 "The Wealth of Nations," where alone that wealth
 Of books how much! and even of the other wealth
 Apart from all that leads to wealth, or even
 Nor sparingly endowed with worldly wealth,
 You have decry'd the wealth which is your own.
 Enriched by mutual and reflected wealth,
 By ease and leisure; by the very wealth
 No wish for wealth had place within his mind;
 New wealth upon the burthen of the old,
 Kind nature's various wealth is all their own.
 When, prizing knowledge as her noblest wealth
 —Such is our wealth; O Vale of Peace, we are Wealthier. Wealthier, and doubtless wiser, than before!
Wealthiest. The wealthiest man among us is the best:
Wealthy. They said, I was a wealthy man;
 Over wealthy in the treasure
 From judgments of the wealthy Few, who see
 The wealthy, the luxurious, by the stress
 Spread with the spreading of her wealthy arts,
Wean. See Wear.
 England! the time is come when thou shouldst
 wean
 From labour could not wean them,
 Wrongs and the terror of redress, would wean
 In which worst losses easily might wear [? wean]
 Might tend to wean him. Therefore with her hues, Weapon. Or ruder weapon which their course might yield,
 Ensign of civil power, weapon of war,
 With malice ne'er to deadliest weapon linked,
 The forked weapon of the skies can send Weaponless. He stood,—nor weaponless was now; Weapons. Stirred nowhere without weapons, that full soon
 Not loth to furnish weapons for the hands
 With weapons grasped in fearless hands, to assert

Weapons—continued.

- And upright weapons innocently gleaming,
 And graced with shining weapons, weekly marched,
Wear. See Wean.
 We should deserve to wear a cap and bells,
 Which for a season I have stooped to wear,
 Those Shepherds wear the time away,
 Which selected spirits wear,
 To me it does not seem to wear the face
 Or hast thou put off wings which thou in heaven
 dost wear?
 More fresh, more bright, than princes wear;
 Was doomed to wear out her appointed time,
 As labour'd minstrelsies through ages wear!
 So do not let me wear to-night away:
 Their smoothest paths, to wear their lightest chains?
 This City now doth, like a garment, wear
 And age to wear away in!
 Wear rather in thy bonds a cheerful brow:
 One of a Nation who, henceforth, must wear
 This sword that one of our weak times might wear!
 Beyond these transient spheres, doth wear a crown
 Not so with such as loosely wear the chain
 Like this unheard-of, and their channels wear
 'Twas said that She all shapes could wear;
 And deigned to wear the robe of flesh we wear,
 Of yesterday, which royally did wear
 Garlands shall wear of amaranthine bloom,
 We wear a face of joy, because
 These all wear out of me, like Forms with chalk
 Ingrates who wear a smileless face
 Stern Lawgiver! yet thou dost wear
 That Phebus wont to wear
 You, Lady, forced to wear
 It chance to wear, is sweetest if the heart
 Such as at least do wear a prouder face,
 Of these, and of the living shapes they wear,
 Hope takes, or Doubt or Fear is forced to wear,
 In which worst losses easily might wear,
 Thus might we wear a midnight hour away,
 The face which rural solitude might wear
 How saintlike is the look those features wear!
Wear'st. Then wear'st upon thy forehead clear
Wearied. See Never-wearied, Trumpet-wearied, War- wearied, World-wearied.
 Forgetting, calls the wearied to her side;
 On the dark earth the wearied vision falls;
 Their wearied frames, she hoped, would soon regale
 Of panting Wood-nymph, wearied with the chase.
 How thou hast wearied me on every side,
 Wearied itself out of the memory,
 Sick, wearied out with contrarities,
 So, wearied to your hut shall you return,
Wearily. And crazily and wearily
 And wearily at length should fare;
 And thus a day or two drove wearily;
Weariness. 'Tis weariness that breeds these gloomy fancies,
 Than bodily weariness. While here we sit
 She is gone before, to spare my weariness.
 This morning, when I spoke of weariness,
 Through weariness, or, haply, to indulge
 In hours of weariness, sensations sweet,
 Of unacknowledged weariness. I took
 By weariness of life—he fixed his home,
 And, in some fit of weariness, if he,
 Doubt to cast off and weariness; in trust
 Sought for his weariness a place of rest
Wearing. The Virgin-Mountain, wearing like a Queen
 Wearing a written paper, to explain
 Or wearing, (shall we say?) in that white growth
 —Not shaped by simple wearing of the foot
Wearisome. Steep the way and wearisome,
 Employment hazardous and wearisome!
 Burst, when repose grew wearisome;
 By noise and strife, and questions wearisome,
 Had stopped, with wearisome Cassandra voice
 The repetitions wearisome of sense,
Wears. Even for the man who wears the warmest fleece;
 You see yon precipice;—it wears the shape
 He wears a jewel in his head!
 Where sits the Dame, and wears away
 Thee Winter in the garland wears
 A regal vest of fur he wears,
 And still impatient of the shape she wears,
 That to the sparkling crown Urania wears,
 The fetters which the Matron wears,
 That Wisdom wears, or take his treacherous staff
 A choice that wears the aspect of a doom;
 And wears a frontlet edged with gold.
 In cunning patience, from the head that wears it,
 Time a chequered mantle wears—
 The garb he wears is black as death, the word
 A high-prized plume which female Beauty wears
 The natural crown that sage Experience wears.
 That wears a look so full of peace and hope
 Time wears the features of Eternity;

Weary. The weary hills, Impervious, blackening near ;
 Stoops her sick head, and shuts her weary eyes ;
 Close on the remnant of their weary way ;
 The weary eye—which, wheresoe'er it strays,
 " O come," he cried, " come, after weary night
 Who soon grew weary of her ; but, alas !
 In such a weary night, and such a place.
 Send forth such noises—and that weary bell !
 Weary of the open sky,
 Lengthening invisibly its weary line
 Here rest your wings when, they are weary ;
 Come to him thus, and drove the weary Wight along.
 O weary struggle ! silent years 108
 In spite of all my weary pain 110
 And I have travelled weary miles to see
 Beneath a sun that wakes a weary world
 Not fearing toil, nor length of weary ways,
 " Eight weary weeks, through rock and clay,
 And to-day my heart is weary ;
 When the weary fingers feel 159
 Had closed upon his weary way,
 Hushed the dark earth, fast closing weary eyes,
 And weary expectation, have been blest
 The weary have life, and the hungry have bliss ;
 The weary Sun betook himself to rest ;—
 About the weary moors continually,
 Follow, and up the weary mountain strain.
 And thankful through a weary time,
 In which the heavy and the weary weight
 When life is at a weary pause,
 Poised like a weary cloud, in middle air
 With weary pace is drawing nigh ;
 While Soldiers, weary of the arms they wield,
 Her doom it is to press a weary bed—
 For a sick heart made weary of this life
 More welcome notes to weary bands
 Of soul-sick flesh and weary bones ;
 Was it by mortals sculptured ?—weary slaves
 Gentle as a weary wave
 His weary spirits gather rest.
 My heart is sick ;—this weary pause
 Of which the Lord was weary. Weep, oh ! weep,
 And if some traveller, weary of his road,
 The floods are roused, and will not soon be weary ;
 And calm't the weary strife of frail humanity !
 Each weary step, dwarfing the trail below,
 With weary feet by all of woman born)—
 By those bright eyes, what weary vigils kept,
 They rise, or rest the weary head,
 Nor heat, nor cold, nor weary ways,
 Now rests her weary head.
 A weary while in pain he toseth thus,
 He plies his weary journey ; seeing still,
 Weary of barking at him. Boys and girls,
 Long for some moments in a weary life
 Alternately relieves their weary feet ;
 Hath dragg'd her babes along this weary way ;
 There turns for glad repose the weary eye ;
 In the wide range of many a weary round,
 With many rules perplex the weary mind ;
 The heavy weight of many a weary day ;
 Eager and never weary we pursued
 Feverish with weary joints and beating minds.
 Idleness halting with his weary clog,
 Lie melancholy among weary bones.
 At last we stretched our weary limbs for sleep,
 Grow weary of attending on a track
 But though the picture weary out the eye,
 (How welcome to the weary traveller's eyes !)
 And black dishonour, France was weary of.
 Or well-spring where the weary traveller rests.
 That rule alternately the weary hours,
 And, like a weary voyager escaped 794
 And Heaven is weary, of the hollow words
 Weary and faint, and longs to be released.
 To drudge through a weary life without the help
 Time's weary course ! Or if, by thy decree,
 Not fearing toil, nor length of weary ways,
Wearying. And restless piper wearying out the shore ;
Weary-worm. The weary-worm.—You gentlefolk

Weather. In weather rough and bleak ;
 And when the keen unruddied weather,
 Of spring's unclouded weather,
 Like clouds in stormy weather ;
 Playmates in the sunny weather,
 Dread pair that, spite of wind and weather,
 Which once, be weather as it might,
 Of this Elysian weather ;
 By lovely forms, and silent weather,
 That day of balmy April weather,
 She may look for serene weather ;
 There are ninety good seasons of fair and foul weather

 Who knew not to what quiet depths a weight
 Your Pony's worth his weight in gold :
 Of One, a Widow, left beneath a weight
 The mountains against heaven's grave weight
 Fell with the weight of drops of lead ;—
 Among the rocks ; with weight of rain,
 The Porter sits down on the weight which he bore ;
 A more than human weight upon his frame had cast.
 In which the heavy and the weary weight
 Medea's spells dispersed the weight of years,
 A flaky weight of winter's purest snows !
 And the blows fell with heavier weight
 Who have felt the weight of too much liberty,
 The weight of sadness was in wonder lost.
 If the whole weight of what we think and feel,
 Does the hour's drowsy weight his glee restrain ?
 Off weight—nor press on weight !—away
 The weight of more than seventy years,
 A weight of languid speech, or to the same
 Of thy offences be a heavy weight :
 A weight of hostile corpses : drenched with gore
 If clay could think and mind were weight,
 The patriot Mother's weight of anxious cares !
 How patiently the weight of wrong is borne ;
 Tardily sinking by its proper weight
 Stood silent under dreary weight,—
 In open victory o'er the weight
 This weight of anguish and despair.
 Under the weight of mortal wretchedness !
 Tempest, or length of way, or weight of toil ?—
 Through gloomiest shade ; put on (nor dread its weight)
 The mortal weight cast off to be laid low.
 Down-bearing with his whole Atlantic weight
 A weight of awe, not easy to be borne,
 Month falls on month with heavier weight ;
 In thee had yielded to the weight of years ;
 I feel the weight of chance-desires :
 Groan underneath a weight of slavish toil,
 That I the weight of it may not sustain ;
 And custom lie upon thee with a weight,
 Shakes her numb arm that slumbers with its weight,
 Then with despair's whole weight his spirits sink,
 That the weight can no longer be borne,
 Some solace under weight of royal care,

 The heavy weight of many a weary day
 —And if the vulgar joy by its own weight
 Even with a weight of pleasure, and the sky,
 A weight must surely hang on days begun
 That thou endurest ; heavy though that weight be,
 Bending beneath our life's mysterious weight.
 Under the weight of classic eloquence,
 Against the weight of meanness, selfish cares,
 A weight of ages did at once descend
 Distinct remembrances, hut weight and power,
 Power growing under weight : alas ! I feel
 That I both was and must be of small weight,
 Or ought of heavier or more deadly weight,
 Their due proportion, under all the weight
 Under a growing weight of vulgar sense,
 With still increasing weight ; he was o'erpowered
 Became a weight in which no pleasure was :
 Four dear supporters of one senseless weight,
 Even to the dust ; apparently, through weight
 The rational creature, left, to feel the weight
 And more secure, by very weight of all
 Proved all unable to support the weight
 By her offence to lay a twofold weight
 Nor could endure the weight of his own shame.
 —Nor deem that his mild presence was a weight
 Whose flexible boughs low bending with a weight
 Friendly lie weight of leisure to remove,

 That they who want, are not too great a weight
 To be no arbitrary weight imposed, Weightier. We came with weightier purses, that sufficed
 Weightiest. Of perilous war her weightiest armies fail, Weighty. Some weighty matter ; then, with fervent voice
 Weight. See Ever-welcome.
 Host of his welcome inn, the noon-tide bower,
 Thrice every day, the pail and welcome hand.
 Wound in more welcome cadence down the vale ;
 That welcome in such house for him was none.
 And gave me food—and rest, more welcome, more desired.
 " O welcome sentence which will end though late,"
 Would be most welcome. Yon white hawthorn gained,
 (Not the less welcome to my Lord for that)
 The lame, the hungry, will be welcome there.
 Gave me a hearty welcome ; they had laid
 To feed remorse, to welcome every sting
 To welcome in the May.

Welcome—continued.

And who would grieve and fret, if, welcome come
 And welcome gone, they are so like each other,
 Runs a deafening noise of welcome !—
 Most soothing was it for a welcome Friend,
 Urania's self might welcome with pleased ear
 That nod to welcome transient guests ;
 Night has brought the welcome hour,
 A welcome greeting he can hear ;—
 Thrice welcome, darling of the Spring !
 Luminous or gloomy, welcome to the vale
 Which they are entering, welcome to mine eye
 A gladsome and a welcome noise.
 Has filled the laughing vales with welcome flowers.
 Yet art thou welcome, welcome as a friend
 Thee with the welcome Snowdrop I compare ;
 And the old day was welcome as the young,
 As welcome, and as beautiful—in sooth
 And prompt to welcome every gleam
 More welcome notes to weary bands
 The chronicle were welcome that should call
 Stroke merciful and welcome would that be
 That will be welcome, if by you entwined ;
 Angels might welcome with a choral shout !
 Most fair, most welcome, when they drank the dew
 Is welcome as a star, that doth present
 A gracious welcome shall be thine,
 And welcome, as a gift of grace,
 His be a welcome cordially bestowed !"
 Of faith invites. More welcome to no land
 The soothing recompense, the welcome change.
 How welcome wouldst thou be to this green Vale
 And welcome glory won in battles fought
 Welcome, though silent and intangible !—
 Poor as thou art. A welcome sacrifice
 Should here be welcome, and in verse enwrought :
 How sad a welcome ! To each voyager
 Welcome !—but lay thy sword aside,
 Thee will he welcome to his hand and heart,
 Be ours to welcome it ;
 Then welcome, above all, the Guest
 To welcome thee, repel the fears that crowd
 Tears of salvation. Welcome death ! while Heaven
 Will flow, and on a welcome page appear
 Of our migration.—Ere the welcome dawn
 Put on, to welcome spring, their best attire,
 And all shall welcome the new ray
 But welcome fortitude, and patient cheer,
 I welcome thee once more :
 Three times a day the pail and welcome hand.
 I gave a fervent welcome to the sight,
 That hope hath been discouraged ; welcome light
 Sent welcome notice of the rising moon.
 This labour will be welcome, honoured Friend !
 Of welcome faces up and down I roved ;
 Friendships, acquaintances, were welcome all.
 Glad welcome had I, with some tears, perhaps,
 In my accustomed bed, more welcome now,
 Guests welcome almost as the angels were
 With an unmeasured welcome. Through the night,
 Thrice welcome Presence ! how can patience e'er
 They give it welcome. Long ere heat of noon,
 Was welcome, softened, if not solemnised,
 (How welcome to the weary traveller's eyes !)
 Found ready welcome. Tempting region that
 Which lacked not voice to welcome me in turn :
 Still deeper welcome found his pure discourse :
 A daughter's welcome gave me, and I loved her
 But he was welcome : no one went away
 Which with a look of welcome she received ;
 The welcome of an Inmate from afar,
 Conducted hither your most welcome feet,
 Following the guidance of these welcome feet
 Before the threshold stands to welcome us !
 Where now that boasted liberty ? No welcome
 I guess that, welcome to your lonely hearth,
 A welcome interruption to discourse
 Of giving welcome to the first of May
 Had earned for him sure welcome, and the rights
 Wished-for, or welcome, wheresoe'er he came—
 The Wanderer ever welcome ! A prompt kiss
 Of Man may rise, as to a welcome close
 But turned not without welcome promise made
 So welcome, no temptation half so dear
 Welcomed. Welcomed wisely ; though a growth
 And welcomed the poor Child.
 She welcomed what was given, and craved no more ;
 Rest, and be welcomed there to livelier joy.
 But we are kindly welcomed—promptly served
 Welcomes. All Nature welcomes Her whose sway
 Welcomes the Consort of a happy Queen.
 Welcoming. To the new year a welcoming ;
 Our streams proclaim a welcoming ;
 That faced us with a passionate welcoming,
 Welcomings. Their own creation. Such glad welcomings

Welkin—continued.

Full oft, when storms the welkin rend
Well. See Fare-thee-well, Mountain-well.
Of banished bliss, by fancy loved too well.
—Well taught by that to feel his rights, prepared
Well pleased upon some simple annual feast,
I well remember.—He was one who owned
Half raised, for well his arm might lose its force
And well it was that of the course there found.
“ The staff I well remember which upbore
He well could love in grief; his faith he kept;
Well met from far with revelry secure,
The carman wet her lips as well behaved;
The Sailor knew too well. That wickedness
Well may we wonder he has gained such power
May well deceive his Child—What I leave her thus,
Take care of him, and feed the truant well,
Well as the wreck I am permits. And you, Sir?
About this ground; she hath a tongue well skilled,
For this good deed!—Well, Sirs, this passed away;
Well I they might turn a beggar from their doors;
Have I been waiting for him? Well, but softly,
Well—he has often spurned me like a toad,
Well then, says I—I’ll out with it; at which,
And he seemed angry. Angry! well he might;
You will be firm; but though we well may trust,
I hope Idonea is well housed. That horseman,
As well indeed it might. And this your deem,
That well may put some fears into your heart,
That all is well prepared. We will obey you,
A sound of laughter, too!—tis well—I feared
Feed on her leaves. You knew her well—ay, there,
Knowing what otherwise we know too well,
I know him well; there needs no other motive
To the oath of fealty, I well remember,
I know not what I said—all may be well.
This is a dismal place—well—that is well—
Of all this world is solved, well may we envy.
Without the strength to rise. Well, well, he lives,
You will do well; unjust suspicion may
All last summer, as well you know.
It is not well with thee? well both for bed and board?
Paid to One who loved her well.
‘Twas one well known to him in former days,
Through fields which once had been well known to him:
Was known as well as to the flowers that grow there,
Then they could write, ay, and speak too, as well
Well—all was gone, and they were destitute,
Ay, that he did— And all went well with him?—
And placed together near our rocky Well.
A comfortless and hidden well.
A well of love—it may be deep—
When I was well, I wished to live,
Well born, well bred; I sent him forth
Turn rather, though I love her well:
A portion of the tale may well be left
Which Betty well could understand.
His steed and he right well agree;
Now, though he knows poor Johnny well,
With Betty all was not so well;
And we have always used him well;
Ye Muses! whom I love so well?
And thus resumed—“ Well, Isabel! this scheme
As well thou knowest, in us the old and young
Bestir them in good deeds. Now, fare thee well—
I have conversed with more than one who well
‘Tis well for me thou canst not see
My love for thee has well been tried:
Among the woods and fields, we love you well,
On its firm margin, even as from a well,
‘Tis well that some sage instinct, when the stars
He loved the wars so well.
To each and all might well belong:
And felt that all was well.
The place to Benjamin right well
Well! that is past—and in despite
And near that lurid light, full well
This little place may well be dizzy!
He’d drag as well what he is dragging;
“ You owl!—pray God that all be well!
Well pleased in rustic garb to feed
The Showman chooses well his place, ‘tis Leicester’s busy Chase;
Might well be dangerous food
But some remember well
From this day forth, shall call it HART-LEAF WELL.
A cup of stone received the living well;
And one, not four yards distant, near a well.
But as to the great Lodge! you might as well
And come and make his death-bed near the well.
“ Grey-headed Shepherd, thou hast spoken well;
And what perceive; well pleased to recognise
But her humility is well content
And if to lure the truant back be well,
Well may our hearts have faith that blessings come,
Of the Unsubstantial, pondered well!
Well have you played your friendly part:
And I, as well as I was able,

Well—continued.

As well he knew the spire of Sarum;
“ As well might Peter in the Fleet
Must mount, he shows well as he can:
Well may you tremble and look grave!
The listening Ass conjectures well;
And this poor slave who loved him well,
Yet, potent Spirits! well I know,
Whom in my fear I love so well;
Our Travellers, ye remember well,
I cannot well express the thoughts
For well did Peter know the sound;
For he is dead—I know it well!”
Well may’st thou halt—and gaze with brightening
eye!
Lingers, but Fancy is well satisfied;
But some (who brook those hackneyed themes
full well,
Well pleased to skim the plain with wild flowers
deckt,
Heaven’s sapphire pavement, yet breathed well content,
Well pleased, her foot should print earth’s common grass,
Well have you Railway Labourers to this ground
Well might such thoughts, dear Sister, throng
The picture of a life well spent:
When one day (and now mark me well,
Which he, poor Child, had studied well;
On England’s bosom; yet well pleased to rest,
‘Tis well! from this day forward we shall know
Well obeyed was that command—
And well might it besem that mighty Town
—Well does thine aspect usher in this Day;
Well judged the Friend who placed it there
Might well be styled this noble body’s HEAN;
Well—let him pace this noted beach once more,
May well suffice, till noon-tide’s sultry heat
Out of her early struggles well inspired
Humanity, sang feats that well might call
So well, that by its help and through His grace
Lo! by a destiny well known
Well pleased that future Bards should chant
Well sang the Bard who called the grave, in strains
And fresh with rivers, well did it become
With perfect cunning framed as well
Of all we loved, and loved so well:
“ Rights have you, and may well be bold:
‘Tis well that she hath heard the tale,
‘Tis well, for he the worst defied,
Then well may their accord be true,
What Powers, presiding o’er the sacred well
Hail countless Temples! that so well befit
Well worthy to be magnified are they
Ere nightfall—truth that well may claim a sigh,
‘Tis well—but what are helps of time and place,
Through cloudy umbrage, well might that fair face,
Of the pure spring (they call it the “ Nun’s Well,”
And, from her vow well weighed in Heaven’s
decrees,
Tides of aggressive war, oft served as well.
And fare thee well, to Fancy visible,
There set, and guarded well;
They parted.—Well with him it fared
“ Our work,” said I, “ was well begun,
This wonder merits well.
From well to better, daily self-surpass:
May well afford to mortal ear
Are well assigned to Memory
‘Twere well in little, as in great, to pause,
On thee I look, not sorrowing; fare thee well,
Yes, though He well may tremble at the sound
Without reserve to those whom we love well—
Of those old Patriarchs when from well to well
As well we knew, together had grown grey.
To the fresh waters of a living Well—
Upon the Sabine farm he loved so well;
And flowers they well might seem to passers-by
Well may the villagers rejoice!
So were both right well content:
‘Twas well enough, when summer came,
Yet never had she, well or sick,
To consume this crystal Well;
And then he sang it well and fearlessly,
“ This well of mercy, Jesu’s Mother sweet,
By cursed Jews—thing well and widely known,
Well did they know that service all by rote,
Methought I wist right well what these birds meant,
It seems to me I sing as well as thou;
Is only fit to die, I dare well say,
For trust me well, in spite of thy quaint cry,
Well satisfied, I thanked her, and she said,
And, God of Love, that can right well and may,
The Cuckoo—‘tis not well that I should hide
Under a maple that is well beseen,
Unlearned Book and rude, as well I know,
Well nigh for sorrow down he ’gan to fall.
Now, my sweet Troilus, love me well, I pray!

Well—continued.

Singing so well, so goodly, and so clear, . . .
 Well hast thou wreaked on me by pain and grief;
 Now mercy, Lord! thou know'st well I desire
 Then know I well that she would not sojourn.
 With a sore heart well ought I to bewail,
 Well did I watch, much labour'd, nor had power
 O 'tis a passionate Work!—yet wise and well,
 Well chosen is the spirit that is here;
 But they as well as I have gains;—
 For hope's deserted well why wistful look?
 Had noted well the stars, all flowers that grew
 Guide hither, O sweet Moon, the maid I love so well.
 His fits when he is neither sick nor well,
 In this our deep devotion. Fare thee well!
 To in-door study than was wise or well,
 And yet the spectacle may well demand
 Well might sarcastic Fancy then have whispered,
 Among the favourites whom it pleased me well
 Those walks well worthy to be prized and loved—
 Of a thick hawthorn, I could mark him well,
 Knowing too well the importance of his theme,
 It might have well besemed me to repeat
 Though fledged and feathered, and well pleased to part
 There was a Boy: ye knew him well, ye cliffs
 Well do I call to mind the very week
 That round us chaunted. Well might we be glad,
 Who love as we do. Speed thee well! divide
 Well might a stranger look with bounding heart
 Well pleased to pitch a vagrant tent among
 An idler's place; an idler well content
 With no unthinking mind, well pleased to note
 False tints too well accorded with the glare
 Although well pleased to be where they were found,
 To drink the waters of some sainted well,
 Some pensive musings which might well he seem
 As well they might, the impersonated thought,
 Never forsaken, that, by acting well,
 To reason well of polity or law,
 Less than might well bent my youth, the cause
 "I, Rholespierre, accuse thee!" Well is known
 Well might my wishes be intense, my thoughts
 The snakes about her cradle; that was well,
 As well of License as of Liberty;
 (Too well I loved, in that my spring of life,
 And their impassioned sounds, which well might make
 From our first childhood. I remember well,
 Witness and judge; and I remember well . . .
 And drinking from the well of homely life . . .
 Joined in a cold damp nook, espied a well . . .
 And well remember, o'er that fence she looked,
 I well remember that those very plumes, . . .
 He answered, "to the Person suited well, . . .
 He answered, "has been here; but could not well
 And well those lofty brethren bear their part . . .
 Our housewife knew full well what she possessed!
 And, even as these are well and widely fixed, . . .
 Guides to destruction? Is it well to trust . . .
 He with a smile exclaimed:—"This well you speak
 With such embellishment as well besemes . . .
 Ows that presiding aspect which might well . . .
 "For me, I looked upon the pair, well pleased:
 Full well I recollect. We often crossed . . .
 I well remember, while I passed her door . . .
 To end my days; well pleased was I to see
 O rights to him; but he remained well pleased,
 The Pastor answered, "You have read him well.
 Down on this spot, well pleased would be have seen
 Be satisfied, 'tis well,—the end is gained;
 Of trivial occupations well devised,
 And wild-flowers known as well as if our hands
 A warning not unwelcome. Fare thee well!
 Hernani knows well . . .
 Hard to believe, yet could they well discern . . .
 To drink of the cold well. When in like sort . . .
 Had slaked his thirst out of a famous well . . .
 Before the boy knew well what he had seen . . .
 He well remembers, though the year be gone . . .
 Their safe retreat. We knew them well, I guess . . .
 They were more dear than may be well believed,
 A friendly covert. "And they knew it well."
 Till, at the last, thou hear the voice—"Well done, cross

"We'll sport amid the boreal morning;
 "Or we'll into the realm of Faery,
 "We'll show that we can help to frame
 "Whate'er betide, we'll turn aside,

Well-a-day. Ah, well-a-day for Peter Bell!
Well-appointed. Of well-appointed chivalry.
Well-beloved. The well-beloved, the fortunate, the wise,—
Well-born. Were men well-born; the chivalry of France.
Well-deserving. Calm is the well-deserving brute,
Well-doing. Of Luke and his well-doing; and the Boy
Well-earned. Withdrew, on summons to their well-earned meal;
Well-formed. Of well-formed characters, with chalk inscribed
Well-girl. Has on the well-girt saddle set
Welling. Continual waters welling cheered the waste,
 Continual fountains welling cheer'd the waste,
Well-known. Give, on this well-known couch, one cuptil kiss
 A form discover'd at the well-known seat,
 And sail that glides the well-known alders by.
 I did not step into the well-known boat
 Beside the well-known charnel-house had then Well-matched. To glance a look upon the well-matched pair;
 From things well-matched or ill, and words for
 things,
Well-measured. She plants well-measured terrors in the road
Well-pleased. Well-pleased, the arm'd Company Well-poised. Two ruddy children hung, a well-poised freight,
Well-remembered. The well-remembered debt."
Wells. Fed in the Libyan waste by gushing wells,
 Half-rural Sadler's Wells? Though at that time
 Uprooted; would re-consecrate our wells
 Not undistinguished, for of wells that ooze
Well-shaped. Some limber twigs into a Cross, well-shaped with fingers nice,
Well-spring. Who from the well-spring of his own clear breast
 To reach the well-spring of this woe!
 Or well-spring where the weary traveller rests.
 Assisting, lucid well-spring! thou revalesst
Well-steered. Over the well-steered galleys did I rule—
Well-tamed. While Winter like a well-tamed lion
 walks,
Well-tended. Where many a sheltered and well-tended plant
Well-wrought. A Vender of the well-wrought Scale, Welter. Welter and flash, a synod might detain . . .
 If my spirit toss and welter
Weltering. There, waves that, hardly weltering, die away.
Welterings. Nor touched by welterings of passion—
Wend. While our four travellers homeward wend;
 Else let the dastard backward wend, and roam,
 And through this street who list might ride and
 wend;
 Now farewell, quoth she, for I hence must wend;
Wends. Now up, now down, the Rover wends,
 With the green path; and now he wends
 But now, while down that slope he wends,
Wensley. The Knight had ridden down from Wensley
 Moor . . .
Wensley's. Wensley's rich Vale and Sedbergh's naked heights.
Went. See Up-went.
 Of lofty hopes, he to the world went forth
 He rose, and to the ruin's portal went,
 And not in vain, while they went pacing side by side.
 A minute past, he went to fetch a draught
 Since your dear Mother went away,—
 And all "since Mother went away!"
 Went shouting far and wide;
 And then she went away . . .
 They went and they built up another . . .
 —As homeward through the lane I went with lazy
 feet,
 On that service she went forth;
 While half an hour went by, the Priest had sent . . .
 And went into his grave before his time . . .
 And it all went into each other's hearts . . .
 Like roe-bucks they went bounding o'er the hills;
 The very night before he went away,
 Ay, that he did— And all went well with him?
 This done, he went on shipboard, and is now . . .
 From realm to realm the jumbled Exile went,
 Too soon, my friends, ye went away;
 I went my work about;

Went—continued.

And he went to the chase with a tear on his cheek.
And, grumbling, he went back to bed!
He with his Father daily went, and they Went up to London, found a master there,

Of order and of good. Whate'er we see, . . .
Yet cause was none, whate'er regret might hang.
Whate'er exists hath properties that spread . . .
Whate'er. See Whate'er.
'Twill be between us; but, whatever fate . . .
They from morning to even take whatever is

With him whatever comes in course, . . .
Whatever be the cause, 'tis sure that they who

Whatever in those climes he found . . .
Whatever star is in the skies, . . .
Whatever wind may blow? . . .

That—whatever griefs may fret,
Whatever boon is granted or withheld.
And yet, into whatever sin they may fall,
Whatever formal gait of discipline
When so disturbed, whatever palms are won.

At least, whatever fate the noon of life
And to whatever else of outward form
What's. Shall give me half. What's this?—I fear, good Woman,
How say you? in disguise?— But what's your

"But what's the Thorn? and what the pond?
"What's Yarrow but a river bare,
What's a tempest to him, or the dry parching heats?
Whate'er. See Whate'er.
But whate'er of such rare treasure lay . . .
Whate'er we feel and know
Patience, with trust that, whate'er the way
There was a time when whate'er is feigned
Induced, effect, in whate'er degree,

Whate'er. See Whate'er.
Whate'er check they bring,
That whate'er point they gain, they yet
Or whatsoever else the heart holds dear;
In whatsoever place, but seemed in this
To watch their goings, whatsoever track
From whatsoever region of our cares
And dealt with whatsoever they found there
That, whatsoever falls my better mind,
Henceforth in whatsoever nook he may,
On whatsoever errand, urged her steps:
Wheat. When, in the warmth of midsummer, the wheat
Wheaten. Rest near your little plots of wheaten glade;
Rest, near their little plots of wheaten glade;
Wheedle. Smooth words he had to wheedle simple souls;
Wheel. See Chariot-wheel, Cistern-wheel, Spinning- wheel.
Calm is all nature as a resting wheel. . . .
The empty loom, cold hearth, and silent wheel,
I saw it in the wheel entangled, . . .
And they were butterfies to wheel about Her large round wheel was turning. Towards the field
And she I cherished turned her wheel
That small, for fax; and, if one wheel had rest,
Swiftly turn the murmuring wheel!
Turn the swift wheel round and round!
Man and Maidens wheel,
Drive as she drives: how fast they wheel away,
Maids at the wheel, the weaver at his loom,
Thou turn'st the Wheel that slept with dust o'er-spread;
Is but a glimmering spoke in the swift wheel . . .
The clouds, and wheel around the mountain tops
Through the rough cope wheel thou with hasty
stride;
To wheel with languid motion round and round,
She turns her wheel, if on the road she sees
Wheel pale and silent her diminish'd round,
For cottagers and spinners at the wheel,
The little child who sates to turn the wheel
Following the rugged road, by sledge or wheel
Dependants, comforters—my wheel, my fire,
I see the eldest Daughter at her wheel
No daughters round her, busy at the wheel,
Serving as doth a spindle or a wheel;
The pastoral Muse laments the Wheel—no more . . .

Wheel—continued.
There too did Fancy prize the murmuring wheel; . . .
Mount with a thoughtless impulse, and wheel there,
Wheel through the sky, and see them now at rest,
Wheel-barrow. Let thy wheel-barrow alone—
Wheeled. Wheeled her back in full apparel; . . .
The village clock tolled six,—I wheeled about,
Wheeled by me—even as if the earth had rolled . . .
Wheeling. Glances the wheeling eagle's glorious form!
Who would stop the swallow, wheeling . . .
Watchful as a wheeling eagle, . . .
The buzzing dor-hawk, round and round, is wheeling,—
Light as the wheeling butterfly she moves; . . .
Is wheeling hitherward. Thanks, happy Creature,
Glances the fire-clad eagle's wheeling form; . . .
A pair of falcons wheeling on the wing,
The wheeling swallow, and the darting snipe,
Wheels. In many a whistling circle wheels her flight;
While unsuspended wheels the village dance, . . .
And slow the insulted eagle wheels away.
Whose heart was in her house: two wheels she had
There he wheels in downward mazes; . . .
For, spite of rumbling of the wheels, . . .
He wheels—and, making many stops,
The Lass with her harrow wheels hither her store
Backward, in rapid evanescence, wheels
O Death! the ensanguined yet triumphant wheels,
Wheels and the tread of hoofs are heard no more;
Of sleepless Labour, 'mid whose dizzy wheels . . .
The post-boy, when his rattling wheels o'ertake
Turns with less noisy wheels to the roadside,
It was a dreary morning when the wheels . . .
Of a congenial future, that the wheels . . .
That turns the multitude of dizzy wheels,
Whelming. Alike in whelming snows and roaring waves.
Whelps. They cannot rest, they gambol like young whelps;
When. (Partial list.)
Person, and place—the where, the when, the how,
It is no common thing when one like you . . .
There cannot come a day when I shall cease . . .
When I had been most happy. Pardon me
You paced along, when the bewildering moonlight
When I behold the ruins of that face,
But when thy Father must lie down and die,
When, Antioch blazing to her topmost towers,
That when, on our return from Palestine, . . .
When first I saw him sitting there, alone, . . .
When I had none to give him; whereupon
When into one of those same spotted hells
When next inclined to sleep, take my advice
When, after a broad flash that filled the cave,
When you had told him the mischance, was troubled
In helplessness, when innocence is with them.
When from the Holy Land I had returned . . .
When my old Leader slipped into the flood . . .
But when you were an Outcast?—Heaven is just;
When the tempestuous wind first drove us hither,
When such a sudden weakness fell upon me,
This Boy—when he comes forth with bloody hands— . . .
When round my wrist I felt a cord drawn tight,
When he should give her up, a Woman grown,
When my heart does not ache to think of it!—
When I returned with water from the brook,
"When we arranged the affair, she wept a little . . .
And eke, when he the image did behold . . .
Calling to mind this matter when I may, . . .
And, when they holy water on him cast, . . .
Yet spake this Child when sprinkled was the water;
And, when the Abbot had this wonder seen,
And, when it likes him, joy enough them sendeth,
And knows not when he hurts and when he heals;
When next May comes, if I am not afraid,
For when he saw her doors fast bolted all,
And when he might his time aright espy,
When I the process have in memory, . . .
Dread Lord! so fearful when provoked, thine ire
And said: I wis, when thou art horn'd anew,
When hence did journey my bright Lady dear,
When they can know and feel that they have been,
And let him, where and when he will, sit down
Of the fields, he collected that bloom, when a boy;
When hailstones have been falling, swarm on swarm,
And, when beneath this stone the Corse was laid,
Whence. (Partial list.)
Whence lutes and voices down the enchanted woods
Thy glittering steeples, whence the matin bell
More than we see, or whence this strong aversion?
Laws, but we ask not whence those laws have come?
"Whence comes," said I, "this piteous moan?"
Whence by our shepherds it is called THE PILLAR.
Whence golden harvests, cities, warlike towers,
Whence all the fixed delights of house and home,
"Whence the undeserved mistrust? Too wide apart . . .

 His looks—for pondering he was mute the while.
 Pity the Maiden did not wait a while;
 I whispered, "Yet a little while, dear Child! thou
 art my own,
 A while the astonished Artegal stood mute,
 And all the while my eyes I kept
 The while on thee they gaze in simple truth,
 In all its sportive wanderings, all the while,
 Yet all the while his whip is dumb!
 'Twere worth a wise man's while to try
 A virgin scene!—A little while I stood,
 I am glad for him, blind as he is—all the while
 And all the while," said he, "to know
 Delighted all the while to think
 'Twas worth your while, though in the dark,
 Of thy wild eyes. Oh! yet a little while
 That a brief while heaves with convulsive throes—
 Of silent rapture; but we felt the while
 A silent he stood upon his feet;
 Her splendours, seen, not felt, the while he stood
 Nor giving heed to aught that passed the while,
 Sad relit, but how fair the while!
 Aimed at the White Man's ignorance the while,
 Thus checked, a little while it stayed;
 Did holy Paul a while in Britain dwell,
 Warbled a while with faint and fainter powers,
 To Liberty? Her sun is up the while,
 Not free from boddy thoughts, a while
 The while a Thrush, urged rather than restrained
 For it was done a little while ago—
 Hence hast thou stayed a little while too long;
 A weary while in pain he toseth thou,
 And his heart all the while is in Tilsbury Vale.
 Short while a Pilgrim in our nether world,
 I saw thee every day; and all the while
 He all the while was in demeanour calm,
 A while on trivial things we held discourse,
 A little while; then turned her head away
 'Go to the hills,' said one, 'remit a while
 But Heaven was gracious; yet a little while,
 And steal away, and for a while deceive

While-as. While-as a swimming darkness came Whil-as. Canute the King is rowing by:
Whilom. O Palace whilom day that now art night,
Whilist. The whilst the rest their anthem-book repeat

Whimsy. No whimsy of the purse is here,
Whine. Each ready with a plaintive whine!
 And Rover whine, as at a second sight
Whining. And whining voice denote them suppli-
 cants
Whip. Check his loud whip and hail us with mild voice,
 The boy then smacked his whip, and fast
 There is no need of whip or wand;
 He quite forgot his holy whip,
 And in thy iteration, "WHIP PUNK WILL!"
 Yet all the while his whip is dumb!
 His whip they do not dread—his voice
 —Said Benjamin, "This whip shall lay
 Laid down his whip—and served no more.
 He neither cracked his whip, nor blew his horn,
 With whip and spur we through the chauntry flew
 The carter's whip that on his shoulder rests
 The whip, the cap, and spurs, thy praise attest;
Whipping. A whipping to the Morlocks who preach.
Whip's. The who's loud notice from the door, Whips. Whip, in old time, attired with snakes and whips
 To give a hint of whips and the cart's tail,
Whirl. Or caught amid a whirl of desert sands—
 Living amid the same perpetual whirl
 That it may whirl the faster. Amid the depth
Whirl-blast. A whirl-blast from behind the hill
 Of many a furious whirl-blast sweeping by,
Whirled. Whirled adown the rocky channel,
 And whirled, and whirled him far away;
 Whirled us o'er unseen ground beneath a sky
 And the Stream whirled her down the dell
Whirling. Uplifted by the tempest whirling by;
 When every whirling bout is o'er—
 Like Austex whirling to and fro,
 Or, whirling with reiterated shock,
 And children whirling in their roundabouts;
 And oaken leaves that, driven by whirling blasts,
Whirlpool. Where the whirlpool frets and raves
 Within this whirlpool, they each other chase
Whirls. Where Pleasure whirls about incessantly,
 That whirls (how slow itself!) ten thousand spindles:
Whirlwind. See State-whirlwind.
 Begone, ye Slaves, or I will raise a whirlwind
 Driven by the autumnal whirlwind to and fro
 Shepherds and herdsmen.—Like a whirlwind came
 And, from the whirlwind of his anger, drink
 When the whirlwind of human destruction is spent,
 Or whirlwind, reckless what his might
 Sunshine and cloud, whirlwind and breeze,
 Of hopeful life,—by battle's whirlwind blown
 Rush down the living rocks with whirlwind sound,
 To reap the whirlwind on a Libyan rock.
 And tossed about in whirlwind. I rejoiced,
 Confines the shrill-voiced whirlwind, round and round
Whirlwind's. The Plain resounding to the whirl-wind's sweep,
 And many perished in the whirlwind's sweep.
 And when the whirlwind's on the hill,
 Or when the whirlwind's on the bill Whirlwinds. Up-caught in whirlwinds, nowhere can find rest.
Whirred. Whirred from among the fern beneath our feet,
Whiskered. And, by that whiskered tabby's aid, set forth
Whisper. But now of this no whisper; not the less,
 His tongue could whisper words of might.
 Whisper it to the billows of the main,
 Nor be a whisper stifled, if it say
 Whence that low voice?—A whisper from the heart;
 Comes on, to whisper hooe, the vernal breeze,
 Their faintest whisper to the passing breeze,
 With gentle whisper. Withered boughs grotesque,
 With whisper soft my venerable Friend
 Would lead me, I should whisper to myself;
 And whisper while the stars twinkle among them
Whispered. In a deep sleep. I whispered to him thrice.
 I whispered, "Yet a little while, dear Child! thou
 art my own,
 I asked—'twas whispered; The device
 I spake, when whispered a low voice,
 A Spirit whispered, "Let all wonder cease;
 Again the Mother whispered low,
 Come secrets, whispered nightly to his ear;
 Then whispered she, "The Bill is carrying out!"
 And his willows whispered in its light,
 Well might sarcastic Fancy then have whispered,
 She whispered still that brightness would return,
 The Lady whispered, while we stood and gazed
 And whispered as it flew,
Whispering. See Low-whispering.
 Or whispering like two reeds that in the cold moon-
 beam
 Whispering how meek and gentle he can be!
 Or kettling whispering its faint undersong.
 Yet, for the Initiate, rocks and whispering trees.

Whispering—continued.

When May is whispering, "Come!
To scenes Arcadian, whispering, through soft air,
Whispering of promise, where no blight
Whispering harm where harm is not;
And Whispering Gallery of St. Paul's; the tombs
Upon his tombstone, whispering to myself:
And now the 'trotting brooks' and whispering trees,
Impulse and utterance. The whispering air
The voice of wisdom whispering scripture texts
Whispering those truths in stillness, which the

WORD,

Whispers. See Love-whispers.

Though every passing zephyr whispers joy;
Binds her wild wreaths, and whispers his return.
And whispers for the heart, their slave;
Faith in the whispers of the lonely Muse,
And whispers to the silent birds, "Prepare
If Hope's familiar whispers merit faith,
And whispers caught, and speeches small,
But something whispers to my heart
With their softest whispers vouch,
Than he was wont; and that in whispers soft
A timid voice, that asks in whispers,
Blows not a Zephyr but it whispers joy;
What God in whispers from the wood
Smote me, and, listening, I in whispers said,
For, though in whispers speaking, the full heart
Whist. And to the combat, Loo or Whist, led on Whistle. The black disguise, the warlike whistle
shrill,
Then whistle as shrill as the buzzard cock;
And Peter, wont to whistle loud
Hear ye that Whistle? As her long-linked Train
Nor shout, nor whistle strikes his ear;
A blackbird's whistle in a budding grove.

Whistled. Whistled the waggoner with merry note,
That whistled like the wind, and rang
The Sheep-boy whistled loud, and lo!
And whistled many a snatch of merry tunes

Whistlers. Seen the SEVEN WHISTLERS in their nightly rounds,

Whistles. That whistles in the wind.
"We'll for our whistles run a race."
Up the Haymarket hill he oft whistles his way,
A sightless labourer, whistles at his work—

Whistling. In many a whistling circle wheels her flight;

With shrill winds whistling round my lonely way,
Or whistling thro' thin grass along the unfurrowed plain.

And, whistling, called the wind that hardly curled
Makes of the whistling shrouds a toy,
Unscorned the peasant's whistling breath, that lights

And whistling loud may yet he heard,
Whether the whistling Rustic tend his plough
Hears combats whistling o'er the easanguined

heath
No meaner Poet than the whistling Blast,
Whistling to clouds and sky-born streams, that shine
—The whistling swain that plods his ringing way
'Is this the whistling plough-boy whose shrill notes
Repeated, like the whistling of a kite.

Whit. See Tu-whit.

Would not a whit the better be;
But not a whit the warmer he;

White. See Clear-white, Fleecy-white, Milk-white, Snow-white.

Of praise from Heaven. To Thee, O saintly WHITE,
Even the white stems of birch, the cottage white,
Far to the western slopes with hamlets white;
But lo! the Alps, ascending white in air,
Shorn of his beams, insufferably white,
Fell where the blue flood rippled into white;
Where'er the dreary roads their bare white lines extend.

The swans that with white chests upreared in pride
Would be most welcome. Yeon white hawthorn gained,

And long beard white with age—yet evermore,
By a bare rock, narrow, and white, and hare;
"And when the ground was white with snow,
He had as white a head and fresh a cheek
—My fire is dead, and snowy white
With their comely blue aprons, and caps white as snow,

His raiment of angelic white, and lo!
Built round by those white clouds, enormous clouds,
And on her head a cap as white as new-fallen snow.
Green, red, and pearl white!
And white with foam as if with cleaving sleet.
Both roses flourish, red and white:
And in a white, far-beaming, corselet clad!
The white plumes of the floating swan;
The white dust sleeps upon the lane;
They shall be white as snow!"
Smooth fields, white sheets of water, and pure sky;
White, radiant, spotless, exquisitely pure,
Lone Flower, hemmed in with snows, and white as they

White—continued.

Thy temples fringed with locks of gleaming white,
A thousand like it, white as snow—
Attire the peaceful corse in vestments white;
With happy garlands of the pure white rose:
A garland fashioned of the pure white rose
In robes of dazzling white;
Of yon ethereal summits white with snow,
White as the snows of Apennine
Under the white cliff's battlemented crown,
Dashed their white foam against the palace walls
Came two mute Swans, whose plumes of dusky
white

Aimed at the White Man's ignorance the while,
Appears to cherish most that Torment white,
Green as the salt-sea billows, white and green—
White she is as lily of June,
The white Doe, to her service true,
In the ruthless wars of the White and Red;
Oft does the White Doe loiter there,
The hairs are white upon your head;
Fair creature, and more white than snow!
The White Doe, in the hawthorn brake;
I helmeted a brow though white,
The White Doe tracked with faithful pace
The White Doe followed up the vale,
The White Doe on the Mountain hroving,
White as whitest cloud on high
But with the White Doe at her side
(A spotless Youngling white as foam)
Screams round the Arch-druid's brow the sea-mew
—white

Bulls, pardons, relics, cows black, white, and grey—
The busy dor-hawk chases the white moth
In white arrayed, glides on the Maid
Her brow was smooth and white:
White as the pair that sidle along the plains
In a white vest, white as her marble neck
The white swans southward passed,
Like marble, white, like ether, pure;
Jesu! of Thee, and the white Lily-flower
Till to a lawo I came all white and green,
All green and white; and nothing else was seen.
All white with flour, the dote of village dames,
Impressed on the white road,—In the same line,
In Malta the white symbol of the Cross:
Play with the locks of his white hair
That hit the dark slant woods with silvery white!
To where the Alps, ascending white in air,
Quits, growling, the white bones that strew his lair;
Shorn of his beams, insufferably white,
A lone ascends that mountain nam'd of white
Dead muttering lips, and hair of hungry white,
Whose white belt scared him thence, or wind that blew

White Sirius glittering o'er the southern crags,
Cast on the white cliffs of our native shore
And Negro Ladies in white muslin gowns,
O'er the blue firmament a radiant white,
Trackless and smooth, or paced the bare white roads
Beheld long-bearded teachers, with white wands
A napkin, white as foam of that rough brook
Thus, when in changeful April fields are white
Of yon white torrent falling down the rocks
And mountains white with everlasting snow!
Or wearing, (shall we say?) in that white growth
Golden and white, that float upon the waves,

White-cliffed. Ere Julius landed on her white-cliffed shore,

Whitened. And o'er the whitened wave their shadows flieg—
Heavy and wan, all whitened by the Moon,
That in the morning whitened hill and plain
His raiment, whitened o'er with cotton-flakes

Whiteness. Save where that pearly whiteness
Whitening. Whitening a pine tree's northern side,
Fretting and whitening, keener and more keen;
Whitens. Bristles, and whitens in the moon!
Whiter. Round as a pillow, and whiter than milk,
And whiter is the hospitable bed.

White-rimmed. Below the white-rimmed bonnet, far-described.
White-robed. A white-robed Negro, like a lady gay,
While the white-robed choir attendant,
Still, with those white-robed Shapes—a living
Stream,
Of white-robed Scholars only—this immense
A gentle, pensive, white-robed sisterhood,
Into a loud and white-robed waterfall.

White-sleeved. In white-sleeved shirts are playing;
and the roar
Whitest. Soft clouds, the whitest of the year,
Of whitest garniture, like fir-tree houghs
White as whitest cloud on high
Whither. Whither is fled that Power whose frown severe
Concealed some cottage, whither he might turn
Oh! tell me whither—for o earthly friend
Now he had fled, and whither none could say,

Whither—continued.

Now, whither are you wandering? That a man,
But whither did you carry him? He was torn,
But how he will come, and whither he goes,
"And whither are you going, child,
A blessed day for thee! then whither wouldst thou roam?"
Seek for him,—he is fled; and whither none can say.
And all uncertain whither he should turn,
A stately Fir-grove, whither I was wont
Nor whither going.
Whither spiteful Satan steered;
Oh whither with such eagerness of speed?
When will she turn, and whither? "She will brook
Whither, at length, a Wretch retired
Whither, by care of Libyan Jove,
If fall they must. Now, whither doth it tend?
Say, Spirit! whither hath she fled
Whither it goes. Even such, that transient Thing,
The threshold, whither shall they turn to find
And no one can tell whither. Dearest Friend!

And whither could they dart, if seized with fear?
"But whither would you, could you, flee?
That on the summit whither thou art bound,
Whither is fled the visionary gleam?
Are mine in prospect; whither shall I turn,
Of a known Vale, whither my feet should turn,
By thoughts of what and whither, when and how,
Upon the region whither we are bound,
In that retirement; whither, by such course
To fly—but whither! And this gracious Church,
To that still region whither all are bound.
Whither, as to a little private cell,
"Wild wanderers, whither through my dark domain?"

Let grandeur tell thee whither now is flown
Whittington. A change of purpose in young Whittington,
The lucky venture of sage Whittington,
Whizzed. Whizzed from the Stripling's arm! If touched by him,
The Ball whizz'd by,—it grazed his ear,
Whizzing. Was pierced by whizzing shaft of hunter keen!

What is pride?—a whizzing rocket

Who might have found a nothing-doing hour . . .
Who here, upon the borders of the Tweed,
Who has so practised on the world's cold sense,
Who soon grew weary of her; but, alas!
Who is it that hath wronged you? Mark you me;
You saw, who was it? Nay, I dare not speak;
With those who take the spirit of their rule
Who live in these disputed tracts, that own
The majesty of Him who rules the world . . .
Men who are little given to sift and weigh—
Who at full speed swept by us where the wood

Who day by day unto this school hath gone,
Who will do evil, evil shall he hear;
Them who are whole in body and in mind,
Who were so joyful at the light of day,
And who was then ill satisfied but I?
Who do not think in love their life to lead;
Who most it useth, him 'twill most impair.

Who had been nought, if Love had never been.
That every wight, who in the way passed by,
Who lead their horses down the steep rough road
Who have a broom still ready in your hands
Who sits at his own door,—and, like the pear
Who live a life of virtuous decency,
Men who can hear the Decalogue and feel . . .
Who went something farther than others have gone,
Who will gladly repair all the damage that's done;
O Thou who movest onward with a mind . . .
There never breathed a man who, when his life

Whole—continued.

Soon with despair's whole weight his spirits sink;
"Here will I dwell," said I, "my whole life long;
Whole hours, with idle arms in moping sorrow knit.
How would you like to travel on whole hours
Of foul pollution—The whole visible world
And in this desert? If never—then the whole
You are safe; the whole world shall not harm you.
For the whole dale, and one for each fire-side—
One side of our whole vale with grandeur rare;
Through his whole body something ran,
For the whole house is Robin's cage.
Andrew's whole fire-side is there.
Whole Summer-fields are thine by right;
Of the whole spectacle the same!
Like the whole sky when to the east
My whole life I have lived in pleasant thought,
And the whole body of the Man did seem
In the whole fulness of its bloom, affords
Till the whole air is overcharged;
Whole ages if I here should roam,
In his whole figure and his mien
Or map of the whole world: thoughts, link by link,
While the whole world seems adverse to desert.
If the whole weight of what we think and feel,
Not the whole warbling grove in concert heard
That unnumbered whole of blank and still,
Of knowledge; that whole myriads should unite
Whole legions sink—and, in one instant, find

And the whole world, not envious but admiring,
Surrendering the whole heart to sacred pleasures?
Her hope of lasting glory for the whole.
When a whole people shall kneel down in prayer,
The whole design of Scripture history;
The whole world's Darling—free to rove at will Supplanted the whole majesty of Rome
Of freedom, with mind grasping the whole theme
To enslave whole nations on their native soil;
Of the whole world's good wishes with him goes;
His whole bold carriage (which had quelled
The consummation, the whole rath
"GOD WILLETH IT," the whole assembly cry;
His whole life long tills it, with heartless toil
Till madness seizes on the whole wide Flood,
Till the whole City rings like one vast quire.
Meek eve shuts up the whole usurping host.
Thy domination; as the whole vast Sea
If the whole State must suffer mortal change,
With ear not coveting the whole,
Down-hearing with his whole Atlantic weight
And whole artillery of the western blast,
The whole year through.
And the whole person. Words have something told
Hence whole day wanderings, broken nightly sleeps

The whole day long, and all days of the year. . . 523 Epist. Beaumont

Domestic carnage now filled the whole year
With their whole souls went culling from the day

Through the whole compass of the sky; ye brooks,
Of the whole human race one brotherhood,
With the whole compass of the universe . . . 734

Wild—continued.

Ye, too, wild Flowers! that no one beeds, Puts, when the high-swoll Flood runs fierce and wild,
 That ruled those dances wild in character?—
 Wild shapes for many a strange comparison!
 Loose fragments of wild wailing, that bestrew
 Yet, though a wild vindictive Race, untamed
 See what gay wild flowers deck this earth-built Cot,
 Yet still, though unappropriate Wild be none,
 From blossoms wild of fancies innocent.
 Where the wild rose blossoms fair;
 Wild notes she in his hearing sang,
 By vague thoughts, lured by fancies wild;
 Some island which the wild waves beat—
 Omsome of humbler name, to these wild shores
 On a wild coast, rough monitors to feed
 A marvellous study of wild accident;
 But passions spread like plagues, and thousands
 wild
 On a wild coast; how destitute! did they
 Their warrant. Bodies fall by wild sword-law;
 And wild deer bounded through the forest glade,
 And the wild storm hath somewhere found a nest;
 Dread cliff of Baruth! that wild wish may sleep,
 To reinstate wild Fancy, would we were
 Wild stream of Afra, hold thy course,
 That every hour thy heart runs wild,
 Its motions, too, are wild and shy;
 Of yon wild cave, whose jagged brows are fringed
 Foundations broken up, the deeps run wild,
 Where the slim wild deer roves;
 Grieve for the land on whose wild woods his name
 And the "wild justice of revenge" prevail.
 That in wild Arden's brakes was ever heard,
 Strawberries from lane nr woodland, offering wild
 To expectations spreading with wild growth,
 More duly shall wild wandering Youth
 And Thou, wild Stream, that giv'st the honoured
 name
 Nor roof, nor window;—all seemed wild
 There, on the margin of a streamlet wild,
 Them therefore with wild horses did he draw,
 Surrounded by those wild unpeopled hills,
 That flings itself on wild relief
 Humour and wild instinctive wit, and all
 In youth's wild eye the livelong day was bright,
 And wild Impatience, panting upward, show'd
 In dark-brown bason its wild waves repose,
 Along the "wild meand'ring" shore to view,
 Than waters dashing wild, or rocking shades.
 Wild round the steeps the little pathway twines,
 While thro' the stillness scatters wild dismay,
 Pipe wild along the hollow-blustering coast,
 Pain's wild rebellious burst proclaims her rights aloud.
 On the wild Goddess of Voluptuous Jov.
 A wild delirium first the infant thrill'd;
 Bleak season was it, turbulent and wild,
 Of Wallace to be found, like a wild flower,
 Nothing but a wild field where they were sown.
 That miscellaneous garland of wild flowers
 And wild unlandish walks of simple youth
 A wild, unworl'dly-minded youth, given up
 Redoubled and redoubled, concourse wild
 Of wild ideal pageantry, shaped out
 Of modern Merlins, Wild Beasts, Puppet-shows,
 The wild brooks prattling from invisible haunts;
 Entered, with Shakspeare's genius, the wild woods
 Like one of these, where Fancy might run wild,
 In the wild turf: the lingering dews of morn
 To Hawkers and Haranguers, hubbub wild!
 Nor wanted such half-insight as grew wild
 Remained for all whose fancies had run wild
 Withal a season dangerous and wild,
 Wild blasts of music thus could find their way
 Of wild belief engrafted on their names
 As from the first, wild theories were afloat,
 Tempestuous, dark, and wild, and on the grass
 In that wild place and at the dead of night,
 Together wantoned in wild Poesy,
 No wild varieties of joy and grief.
 And the wild paths; and, by the summer's warmth
 Of garden ground run wild, its matted weeds.
 In the wild concert—chiefly when the storm
 Whether to such wild objects he were led
 —Wild were the walks upon those lonely Downs,
 And those wild paths were left to me alone.
 Of these wild hills. For, lo! the dread Bastille,
 And, 'mid the wild weeds of a rugged soil,
 By flowing stream, through wood, or craggy wild,
 Chase the wild goat; and if the bold red deer
 On thinly-peopled mountains and wild heaths,
 These were the lurking Satyrs, a wild brood
 And the wild birds that gather round my porch.
 A dismal prospect yields the wild shore strewn
 A plant no longer wild; the cultured rose
 Roof-high; and the wild pink crows the garden-wall,

Wild—continued.

Had been irregular, I might say, wild ;
 Or the wild brooks ; from which he now returned
 Behind yon hill, a poor and rugged wild,
 Yet, of the wild brooks ask if he complained ;
 Where nature works in wild and craggy spots,
 Like wild beasts without home ! Their hour was come ;
 The foot-path faintly marked, the horse-track wild,
 Wild pursuivants ! until their breath is lost,
 Into a wild disorder ; or be forced
 Wild tracts of forest-ground, and scattered groves,
 Of that wild spot, the Solitary said
 " Once," and with wild demeanour, as he spake,
 Though aided by wild winds, the groans and shrieks
 Shagged with wild pale green tufts of fragrant hay,
 Sauntering to pluck the strawberries wild unseen.
 " Wild wanderers, whither through my dark domain ?"
 Wild creatures, and of many homes, that come
 Among wild appetites and blind desires,
 Of speech as wild as ever heightened mirth.
Wild-bird's. A Chapel, like a wild-bird's nest,
Wild-cat. Nor wild-cat in a woody glen !
Wild-duck's. A youngling of the wild-duck's nest
Wildier. And wilder graces sport around their brow ;
Wildered. And rain he wildered on, no moon to stream
 No night-duck clamours for his wilder'd mate,
 To call from other worlds the wilder'd mind,
Wildering. Tumbles, the wildering Thunder slips abroad ;
Wilderness. Freshening the wilderness with shades and springs
 Flings o'er the wilderness a stream of fire :
 In wood or wilderness, in camp or town,
 She was my Raven in the wilderness,
 In such a wilderness—to see no thing,
 A desert wilderness will be !
 Of Eden's blissful wilderness,
 The panther in the wilderness
 The wilderness shall hear the lion roar ;
 And in the wilderness were bound
 Recoiled into the wilderness.
 For his delight, a solemn wilderness
Crying amid the wilderness, and given,
 Urged o'er the wilderness in sportive gallop.
 There bloomed the strawberry of the wilderness ;
 And through this wilderness a passage cleave
 Over the burning wilderness, and charge
 Within the wilderness her seat ?
 " What beast in wilderness or cultured field
 Her peak destroyed ! her hopes a wilderness !
 A look of thine the wilderness pervades,
 A temple of the wilderness,
 We may find pleasure : wilderness and wood,
 But with a wilderness of waves between ;
 A wilderness is rich with liberty.
 Kneeling amid the wilderness
 " From Moscow to the Wilderness
 Deep in the bosom of the wilderness ;
 Of sandy wilderness, all black and void,
 Saw, over half the wilderness diffused,
 The breathless wilderness of clouds ; the clock
 Of your green groves, and wilderness of lamps
 To me a heart-depressing wilderness ;
 A wilderness of building, sinking far
 For thy own glory, in the wilderness !
 In the waste wilderness : the Soul ascends
 Such as, remote, 'mid savage wilderness,
 Amid a wilderness of rocks and stones
 He sees the barren wilderness erased,
 His steps to govern in the Wilderness ;
 Far from the living and dead wilderness
 She seeks a wilderness of weed and thorn,

Wilds—continued.

Among her native wilds of Craven ;
 On Snowdon's wilds, amid Brigantian coves,
 'Mid woods and wilds, on Nature's craggy throne,
 To Wilds where both were utterly unknown ;
 Who in these Wilds then struggled for command ;
 Among Tartarian wilds—fell short, far short,
 Not such as Saturn ruled 'mid Latian wilds,
 Was thronged with impregnations like the Wilds
 Not less ambitious once among the wilds
 The employment common through these wilds, and gained,
 Among the wilds of Scotland, in a tract
 " These craggy regions, these chaotic wilds,
 Of sweet civility, on rustic wilds.
 Amid these wilds, this answer may suffice ;
 To the deep shade of those untravelled Wilds ;
 By which our northern wilds could then be crossed ;
 With gentle language ; in remotest wilds,
 Through Cumbrian wilds, in many a mountain cave,
 strain ;
 And wild-wood sorrows, speedily
 The wild-wood fruits to gather,
 And wild-wood mountain lutes of saddest swell.
Wild. Triumphant, snatched from many a treacherous wile !
Wiles. She weighs them in one scale. The wiles of woman,
 Thy looks, thy cunning, and thy wiles,
 With ever-varying wiles,
 For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
 Their daring wiles, their sportive cheer ?
 There, too, ere wiles and politic dispute
 And mount, at every step, with living wiles
 And, wherever they carry their plots and their wiles,
 Would I, by previous wiles, inflame the queen
 " But nay—the fatal wiles, O guest, recount, Wilfred. For such he is— Your busy fancies, Wilfred,
 And be at rest. Oh, Sir ! Peace, my good Wilfred ;
 Discerning Monitor, my faithful Wilfred,
 Wallace and Wilfred, I commend the Lady,
 And grey-haired Wilfred of the glen
 Of Wilfred Armathwaite ?" The Vicar answered,
Wilful. Your Father, Lady, from a wilful hand
 She perished ; and, as for a wilful crime,
 Father of all ! though wilful Manhood read
 He made by wilful breach of law divine.
 And some, we know, when they by wilful act
 To wilful alienation from the right,
 Thus wilful Fancy, in no hurtful mood,
 Too oft by wilful forfeiture, have lost
 He, who by wilful disteem of life
 And lifts his wilful hand on mischief bent,
Wilfully. Mean, miserable, wilfully depraved,
 To loiter wilfully within a creek,
 Wilfully to mean cares or low pursuits,
Wilfulness. So diverse in his wilfulness is he.
 A wilfulness of fancy and conceit :
Wilkinson. Spade ! with which Wilkinson hath tilled his lands,
Will. (Partial list.) See Good-will, Self-will, 'Twill.
 And in thy iteration, " WHIP POOR WILL !"
 The Troop will be impatient ; let us hie
 —Pity that our young Chief will have no part
 I will not call on Heaven to vouch for me,
 You will look down into a dell, and there
 Will see an ash from which a sign-board hangs ;
 We will not waste an hour in such a cause.
 I will not play the sluggard. Nay, sit down.
 Fear not, I will obey you ;—but One so young,
 Is broken, you will hear no more of him.
 To-day will clear up all!—You marked a Cottage,
 And I will tell you all!—You know not, Sir,
 What must be done ? We will conduct her hither ;
 You will not disappoint them ; and hereafter—
 The deed is done—if you will have it so—
 The cloud will soon disperse—farewell—but stay,
 And will be so through every change of fortune
 Moves me beyond my bearing—I will try
 You will forgive me, but my heart runs over.
 I will not murmur, but I have been, have been,
 He will deny it to the last. He lies.
 Begone, ye Slaves, or I will raise a whirlwind
 Will retribution show itself again
 Herbert ! since you will have it, Baron Herbert ;
 Henceforth, then, will I never in camp or field
 Or duty sanctions. We will have ample justice.
 His death will be a monument for ages.
 That all is well prepared. We will obey you.
 I will explain the cause.
 And said, " My Father he will have it so."
 But she will wake, and she will weep for me,
 Seek who will delight in fable,
 Seeking less bold achievement, where he will !
 To tell a story I will use my power ;
 ' Now, certes, I will use my diligence
 Our Lady I will praise with all my power.

Will—continued.

Murder will out; certes it will not fail; . . . 554
 Who will do evil, evil shall he bear; . . . 555
 Will that His glory last, and be in mind; . . . 556
 ' My little Child, then will I come for thee . . . 556
 Be not dismayed, I will not thee forsake! . . . 556
 All that he will have bound, or have unbound. . . . 556
 For he may do all that he will devise; . . . 557
 In brief, the whole of what he will, he may; . . . 557
 To humble or afflict whom'er he will, . . . 557
 And dread of shame that will not do amiss; . . . 559
 Alas, alas I my very heart will break, . . . 560
 And one thing will I counsel thee also, . . . 561
 And therefore we a Parliament will have. . . . 562
 And live and die I will in thy belief; . . . 563
 I am right sorry Troilus will die: . . . 564
 Will live, and spread, and kindle: even such minds . . . 567
 And let him, where and when he will, sit down . . . 569
 And tears of fifteen will come into his eyes. . . . 570
 Old Adam will smile at the pains that have made . . . 570
 Will hear the wind sigh through the leaves of a tree. . . . 571
 Old Daniel his hand to the treasure will slide! . . . 572
 Will tell of fraud and never-ceasing hate, . . . 574
 For thee she mourns, nor e'er will cease to mourn; . . . 575
 Free as a bird to settle where I will. . . . 632
 And slighted Hope will he avenged; and, when . . . 792
 Around him plays at will the virgin heart. . . . 11
 I pondered patiently your wish and will . . . 39
 I owe him no ill will, but in good sooth . . . 45
 Which with their foam could cover it at will. . . . 69
 He may work his own will, and what shall we care? . . . 81
 The little Maid would have her will, . . . 84
 James stopped with no good will: . . . 85
 They please Him best who labour most to do in . . .
 peace His will will: . . . 93
 No sound here sweeps away the will . . . 112
 O teach me calm submission to thy Will! . . . 118
 Acting, in furtherance of the Father's will, . . . 123
 Feeding at will along the lane, . . . 126
 Lays it by, at will resumes! . . . 163
 That at my will burns on the dewy lawn, . . . 167
 The reason firm, the temperate will, . . . 186
 A slighted child, at her own will, . . . 192
 —Again he wanders forth at will, . . . 205
 Thy nest which thou canst drop into at will, . . . 209
 Of duty with reluctant will . . . 215
 Bodings unsanctioned by the will . . . 225
 Conforming to the eternal Will, . . . 246
 From land to land a reckless will . . . 251
 Furrowing its shallow way with dubious will; . . . 257
 'Tis sense, unbridled will, and not true love, . . . 257
 'Weak is the will of Man, his judgment blind; . . . 259
 So joys, remembered without wish or will . . . 267
 The river glideth at his own sweet will: . . . 269
 Of lawless will, unlooked-for streams of good, . . . 271

 Or hide, at will,—for freedom combating . . . 321
 Thy law, and live henceforth in peace, in pure good . . .
 will. . . . 349
 A croning purpose—a distracted will— . . . 350
 To muse, to creep, to halt at will, to gaze— . . . 350

 Was subject to a freakish will . . . 369
 Not froward to thy sovereign will . . . 372
 Vain aspiration of an earnest will! . . . 395
 The doubt returns against his will: . . . 398
 Too perfectly his headstrong will: . . . 400
 With hope upon the Will divine," . . . 408
 Nor did he (such Heaven's will) in vain . . . 409
 For, with God's will, it shall be done!— . . . 410
 Its will unquestionably shown— . . . 411
 He sighed, submitting will and power . . . 411
 So forward with a steady will . . . 412
 For instant victory. But Heaven's high will . . . 421
 And vows, that bind the will, in silence made. . . . 423
 Indulging thus at will the creeping feet . . . 424
 Moulding the credulous people at his will. . . . 425
 Informed, were resolute to do his will, . . . 436
 Of headstrong will! Can this be Piety? . . . 439
 And to Religion's self no friendly will . . . 442
 A will by sovereign Conscience sanctified; . . . 443
 A better will; and, in the imagined view . . . 447
 A State whose generous will through earth is dealt; . . . 450
 Instinct—to discourse the heart and lead the will . . . 451
 Whatever discipline thy Will ordain . . . 454
 At will, and stay thy migratory flight; . . . 455
 These spreading towns a cloak for lawless will? . . . 464
 Through lawless will the Brotherhood was driven . . . 468
 She in her own would merge the eternal will: . . . 468

Willingly—continued.

When Fancy was Truth's willing Page ; ('Tis Fancy guides me willingly to be led,
And long shall be so yet—God willing ! ”
And Nature here were willing to decay,
Back flows the willing current of my Song ;
Steals from the deck o'er willing waves,
Some willing neighbour must be found.
Yet ever willing to be reconciled ;
In willing admiration and respect,
The Arabian desert shapes a willing road
Unfolds a willing breast) with infant glee
The work of Fancy from her willing hands ;
Again we wandered, willing to partake
With the symbolic ring, and willing hands
Yet pleased and willing ;
To hope, and makes truth willing to be seen !
I willing, nay—pay, wishing to be led.
And wise men, willing to grow wiser, caught,
Such willing note, as, on some errand bound
Yet would I at this time with willing heart
If willing audience fail not, Nature's self,
Willing to work and to be wrought upon,
And moved, a willing Page, as he was bid,
From Fancy, willing to set off her stores
How can you droop, if willing to be upraised ?
These may be range, if willing to partake
Who, with obedience willing and sincere,
On a kind parent willing to forget
Time, which had thus afforded willing help
A willing, nay, at times, a forward part ;
So wide the difference, a willing mind .
Is fled ; we must depart, willing or not ;
Willingly. Most willingly !—Come, let me lead you in,
Stoops willingly to animate and spur .
Now ye, who willingly have heard
Receiving, willingly or not, fresh strength
And willingly have laid these here at last :
Willingly or unwillingly revealed,
How willingly we travel, and how far !
That to devotion willingly would rise,
London, to thee I willingly return.
Thou gratest, willingly deceived—
We parted, nothing willingly ; and now
Most willingly she put her work aside,
I would not willingly, methinks, lose sight
Here would not linger, willingly detained ?
How willingly their aid they would unite
And I as willingly did cherish mine,
Thrice sank as willingly. For he—whose nerves
The Pastor said, “ I willingly confine Willingness. With willingness, to whom the general

Willow. We left the willow shade by the brook-side,
To her ; for her the willow bend ;
But 'tis a rueful thought that willow bands
Age ?—a drooping, tottering willow
A little boat tied to a willow tree
Back to the covert of the willow tree ;
And gilded sympathies, the willow wreath, Willow-flowers. Shrouded with willow-flowers and plumy fern.
Willow-pannier. One bears a willow-pannier on his back,
Willows. Long grass and willows form the woven wall,
Into you row of willows fit,
Thick boughs of palm, and willows from the brook,
Dwarf willows gliding ; and by ferny brake.
The willows weeping trees, that twinkling hoar,
And his willows whispered in its light,
Willow-skirted. Far as the willow-skirted pool, Willow-tree. The cowslip-bank and shady willow-tree ;
Willowy. To willowy hedge-rows, and to emerald meads ;
Lo ! where through flat Batavia's willowy groves,
Plied steadily between those willowy shores, Wills. Wills that your peace, your beauty, shall be sold,
Of fainting hopes and backward wills,
And sometimes, so relenting justice wills,
To Argos. So wills angry Jupiter,

Wilt. (Partial list.)
To make it what thou wilt. Thou hast been told,
Thou wilt relate the story. Am I neither
Thou wilt come with half a call,
Of tender joy wilt thou remember me,
Of holier love. Nor wilt thou then forget
Thou wilt be eased, and less wilt droop and pine.
Wily. And thy arch and wily ways,
Or as the wily sailors creep.

Than from her wily praise, her peaceful gown,
This wily interchange of snaky hues,

Wimple. The Queen drew back the wimple that she

Win. To win belief, such as my plot requires .
Shall by his beauty win his grandise's heart,
Recovering breath, and pleased to win
And Thou, thy favourite food to win,
And could not win thee Sleep ! by any stealth :
To Her from heights that Reason may not win.
She trained her Burns to win applause
Did from the Norman win a gallant wreath ;
Must either win, through effort of his own,
To win me at first sight ; and be there joined
To win a happier hour.
His Father served Jehovah ; but how win
Her port she could not win it .
A pleased attention I may win .
Her features, could they win us,
Win rest, and ease, and peace, with bliss that Angels share .
To win some look of love, or gain
To win this bright Bird from her cage,
Provoking punishment, to win reward ;
To win the palm of gaiety and wit ;
Caught at propitious intervals, may win
Madly played to win a name ;
That win their way into the heart by stealth,
Of Death, and win the vacant and the vain
He asked repose ; and, falling off to win
Ambition to attempt, and skill to win .
The ends of being would secure, and win
That the bereft their recompense may win ;
His Grace and his protection win the prize .
Winander. Where, undisturbed by winds, Winander sleeps ;
Where, bosom'd deep, the shy Winander peeps
And islands of Winander !—many a time .
Winandermere. See Windermere .
From the smooth breast of gay Winandermere Winander's. Midway on long Winander's eastern shore,
Upon Winander's spacious breast, it chanced .
Wind. See North-wind, Sea-wind, Thaw-wind, Westwind.
He hears the chiding of the baffled wind,
Yet, if the wind breathe soft, the curling waves,
And the sharp wind his head he oft hath bared ;
Forced hard against the wind a thick unwieldy fight.
Banished that dismal thought ; and now the wind
And, whistling, called the wind that hardly curled
The darkness overtook me—wind and rain
For sight of a warm fire. The wind blows keen ;
The wind should pipe a little, while we stand .
When the tempestuous wind first drove us hither,
Like mountain oaks rocked by the stormy wind .
Hush !—'tis the feeble and earth-loving wind
My Child—my Child—dark—dark—! faint—this wind—
Trees creaking in the wind (but none are here)
Was, I believed, prime Agent. The wind fell ;
It is a dismal night—how the wind howls !
Subsided in a moment, like a wind
And, when the stormy wind blows o'er the peak,
What way does the Wind come ? What way does
he go ?
As if the wind blew many ways,
That whistles in the wind.
Just half a week after, the wind sallied forth,
My playmate thou shalt be ; and when the wind is cold
For covert from the keen north wind, his hands a hut had made .
Of caves and trees—ad when the regular wind
Fair blew the wished-for wind—the voyage sped ;
A pipe on which the wind would deftly play ;
And, when against the wind she strains,
O wind, that o'er my head art flying
Wind slowly through the woody dale ;
Light to the sun and music to the wind ;
He shall possess it, free as is the wind
And listened to the wind ; and, as before,
Or wind from any quarter, ever come,
Shine hot, or wind blows troublesome and strong ;
The wind was roaring, on his knees
Through prickly moors or dusty ways must wind ;
Fresh blows the wind, a western wind,
It fears not rain, nor wind, nor dew ;
If the wind do but stir for his proper delight,
Moved like a vessel in the wind !
Dread pair that, spite of wind and weather,
Sails spread, as if to catch the wind !
Regales them as they wind along ;
Come straggling through the wind and rain ;
Yet vanish not !—the wind is in the tree,
The music stirs in him like wind through a tree .
The wind, the tempest roaring high,
There was a roaring in the wind all night ;
And every wind that blows ;
Whatever wind may blow ?
The wind blew from the mountain-peak,

Wind—continued.

And then the wind! In sooth, it was
A wind full ten times over.
Sir Walter, restless as a veering wind,
A leafy shelter from the sun and wind.
Light as the wind along the grass.
"The wished-for wind was given;—I then revolved
This venerable Tree; for, when the wind
The flowery ground is conscious. But no wind
His strong hand on the wind, if it were bent
Like clouds before the wind,
They wander with the breeze, they wind
And the wind loves them; and the gentle gales—
Ye handed instruments of wind and chords;
"His face was keen as is the wind
Against the wind and open sky!"
Light plaything for the sportive wind
Whose cunning eye can see the wind,
Surprised by joy—impatient as the Wind
Ever before her, and a wind to blow.

And do not shrink from sorrow's keenest wind.
Wafted down the wind from lake or stream;
And glance, while wantonly the rough wind blows,
Of the fierce wind, while mid-day lightnings prow
The northern Wind, to call thee to the chase,
Nor does that roaring wind deaden his strain.
Thus beating up against the wind.
Save when the wind sweeps by and sounds are caught.

And those that travel on the wind!
The wind might force the deep-grooved harp
Is it a reed that's shaken by the wind,
There's not a breathing of the common wind
I dropped my pen, and listened to the Wind
Give, herds and flocks, your voices to the wind!
Like the strong wind, or sleeping like the wind
But fleetier far the pinions of the Wind,

No Mermaids warble—to allay the wind
More sweetly breathes the wind.
His head from mist; and, as the wind sobbed through

Soft was the wind, that landward blew;
Of wind or wave—a meek and guileless Maiden.
On the shrill wind of midnight? or where floats
Their prayers out to the wind and naked skies.
The wind is now thy organist;—a clank
The wind with terror while they roar for food.
That whistled like the wind, and rang
A shelter from the nipping wind:
Of cruel men do like the wind
Range unrestricted as the wind,
From wind, or frost, or vapours wet—
Unless to Peter's Chair the viewless wind
Thus speaks (that Voice which walks upon the wind,
But from the ghostly tenants of the wind,
Yet Truth is keenly sought for, and the wind
And a far-off wind that rushes,
Swept by a favouring wind that leaves thought free,
Toss in the fanning wind a humbler plume."
Fleet as the west wind, is for him no quarry;
Sweet voices for the passing wind;
A shelter under every wind,
To this plain truth, or fling it to the wind;
How cold the quarter that the wind best loves,
Gives plaintive ditties to the heedless wind,
Of feasts, or scandal, eddying like the wind
More than the feeblest wind that idly blows.

But all might see it float, obedient to the wind;
Like a loose casement in the wind.
With thankful spirit. The descendant, and the wind
With the sharp wind, and seem to court the shower,
Impervious to the wind.
Creep forth, and through the forest wind
The new-dropped lamb finds shelter from the wind.
Toward my death with wind I steer and sail;
And certainly this wind, that more and more
Feel I a wind, that soundeth so like pain;
And let the chartered wind that sweeps the heath
Will hear the wind sigh through the leaves of a tree,
Could hear the wind and mark the showers
The lightning, the fierce wind, and trampling waves.
Unforced by wind or wave
A Spirit sang in tones more plaintive than the wind:
Secure, the chiding of the baffled wind,
In waves, like two enormous serpents, wind
Or fragrance independent of the wind.
The frosty wind, as if to make amends
But, like a thirsty wind, to roam about
Frost, and the breath of frosty wind, had snapped
With what strange utterance did the loud dry
wind

When we had given our bodies to the wind,
Beheld her breast the wind, then suddenly
Left by the west wind sweeping overhead
That waits upon the touches of the wind.
Was a spoiled child, and, rambling like the wind,
Whose white belt scared him thence, or wind that

Wind—continued.

That lowly bed whence I had heard the wind
Now here, now there, moved by the straggling
wind,
Of those glad respites, though a soft west wind
The wind that swayed them; once, and more than once,
As if to make the strong wind visible,
That into music touch the passing wind.
The tender mercies of the dismal wind
Not caring if the wind did now and then
Against the blowing wind. It was, in truth,
By the strong wind. When, in the blessed hours
And, afterwards, the wind and sleety rain,
In a strong wind, some working of the spirit,
Wafted upon the wind from distant lands,
Her tattered clothes were ruffled by the wind,
Which, in his tuneful course, the wind draws forth
With morning we renewed our quest: the wind
Boldest of plants that ever faced the wind,
"Fresh blew the wind, when o'er the Atlantic Main
Than the loose pendant—to the idle wind
By the rough wind unscattered, at whose call
He heard, borne on the wind, the articulate voice
Assaulting and defending, and the wind,
Dispersed, like music that the wind takes up
And if the blustering wind that drives the clouds
Said I, "like surges heaving in the wind
Is still a prisoner; when the wind is up
On homeward voyage,—what if wind and wave,
Through a strong net, and mounts upon the wind,
Like felds of ice rent by the polar wind,
And court the wind; and leaves of that shy plant,
Woods waving in the wind their lofty heads,
Of ocean press right on, or gently wind,
And the strong wind have reverenced,
Light to the sun and music to the wind;
Sprang like a gust of wind; [and with a heart

Winding. See Boldly-winding, Far-winding.
Winding from side to side up the steep road;
Directs his winding dog the cliffs to scale,—
Winding in ordered pomp their upward way,
Where, winding on along some secret bay,
Where wreaths of vapour tracked a winding brook,
They saw and heard, and, winding with the road
Between the water and a winding slope
And winding on with such an easy line
By concert winds with a sway
Among the rocks and winding scars;
Along the river's winding banks
Among the rocks and winding crags;
Winding away between the fern.
With Yarrow winding through the pomp
Enwrapt—and winding, between Alpine trees
Deeply embosomed, and your winding shores
Group winding after group with dream-like ease;
And clomb the winding stair that once
On the steep rocks of winding Tees;—
The aspiring Mountains and the winding Streams,
But I have traced thee on thy winding way
And now precede thee, winding to and fro,
Trips down the pathways of some winding dale;
Of horsemen shadows winding to and fro;
Obsequious Grace the winding swan pursue.
Your young on winter's winding sheet of snow.
Winding it's dark-green wood and emerald glade,
Its one green Island and its winding shores;
O Derwent! winding among grassy holms
A winding passage with majestic ease
Winding from house to house, from town to town,
Along the winding margin of the lake,
Of the world's greatness, winding round with train
A minut course; and, winding up his mouth,
A narrow, winding, entry opened out
Winding away its never-ending line
Winding Euphrates, and the city vast —So we descend: and winding round a rock

Windings. The stream-like windings of that glorious street—
Through long, long windings of the hills,
Had traced its windings.—This Savona knows,
Among the windings hid of mountain brooks.
That in its broken windings we shall need
The darksome windings of a broken stair,
The windings of a public way? the sight,
Nor need the windings of his devious course

Winding-sheet. Wrapt in a winding-sheet of spotless snows!

Window—continued.

On the window pane bedropped with rain :
 My father from the window sees him too ;
 It seemed—wall, window, roof and tower—
 Even thine, though few thy wants !—Roof, window,
 door,
 Before my window, oftentimes and long
 Darkening the window, ill defends the door
 Pace between door and window muttering rhyme,
 Whence the tall window drinks the morning rays ;
 Nor roof, nor window ;—all seemed wild
 How shut was every window of the place,
 Fronting the window of that little cell,
 Whose window, somewhat sadly, it adorns.
 Laid open through the blazing window :—there
Windowed. See Many-windowed.
Window-garlands. And window-garlands. On the public roads,
Window's. And through each window's open fret-work looked
 Forth, through some Gothic window's open space,
 Along the window's edge, profusely grew
Windows. See Abbey-windows, Cottage-windows.
 May drive at the windows,—we'll laugh at his din ;
 When windows flap and chimney roars,
 Beneath my windows, one by one,
 With gradual stealth the lateral windows hide
 The cottage windows blazed through twilight
 gloom,
 Before the doors or windows of their cells
 That eventide, when under windows bright
 Yet were the windows of the low abode
 The low wide windows with their mullions old ;
Window-seat. And, in like sort, chair, window-seat,
 and shelf,
Wind's. Nay, said a voice, soft as the south wind's breath,
 His tongue, and give it the wind's freedom ; then,
Winds. See Autumn-winds, Counter-winds, Cross-winds, March-winds, Mountain-winds.
 Where, undisturbed by winds, Winander sleeps ;
 Winds neither road nor path for foot to tread :
 With shrill winds whistling round my lonely way,
 Winds rustling over plots of unripe grain,
 Winds met in conflict, each by turns supreme ;
 With rotten boughs and leaves, such as the winds
 That half a word should blow it to the winds !
 Only by suzerance of the winds and waves,
 I've heard of fearful winds and darkness that come
 there ;
 His expectations to the fickle winds
 Nor can the winds restore his simple gift.
 Like branches when strong winds the trees annoy.
 When up she winds along the brook
 The vacant city slept ; the busy winds,
 Hence had he learned the meaning of all winds,
 "The winds are no devising work for me !"
 Winds our deep Vale, two heath-clad Rocks ascend
 To the bleak winds she sometimes gives
 Escaped from boisterous winds that rage without,
 By reason fenced from winds that sigh
 Like sounds of winds and floods ;
 That heareth not the loud winds when they call ;
 Winds the mute Creature without visible Mate
 Where winds and waters cease to strive—
 FLOWER OF THE WINDS, beneath her bosom worn—
 Dead pause abrupt of midnight winds,
 But the winds roar, shaking the rooted trees,
 Whether among the winds we strive,
 Murmuring ; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,
 Of Easter winds, unsecured, from hut or hall
 Not tarrying ; where She comes the winds must stir :
 The winds that will be howling at all hours,
 To winds abandoned and the prying stars,
 Faith had her arch—her arch, when winds blow loud,
 Speak, passing winds ; ye torrents, with your strong
 That winds into itself for sweet return.
 Towers rent, winds combating with woods,
 Virtuous and wise. Winds blow, and waters roll,
 In conflict ; whose rough winds forgot their jars
 (While all the ruffing winds are fled—
 Nor turns, nor winds, as doth the liquid flood ;
 Extended, clasp the winds, with mutual moan
 They follow their dear Lord ! Time flows—nor winds,
 And the winds roused the Deep with fiercer scourges.
 O winds without remorse ! O shore ungrateful !
 Snow-muffled winds, and all is dark,
 Gay Wind would scorn us. But when bleak winds
 roar
 Of winds—though winds were silent—struck a deep
 The passing Winds memorial tribute pay ;
 Ye winds of ocean, and the midland sea,
 Leaf-scattering winds ; and hoar-frost sprinklings fell
 Of the sharp winds ;—fair Creatures !—to whom
 Heaven
 Of babbling winds as they go by,
 In polar ice, propitious winds have made
 Tempestuous winds her holy errand crossed :
 Voices, thy winds break forth in prophecy,

Winds—continued.

Pleased when the sullen winds resound the knell .
 Be calm as water when the winds are gone,
 That winds through secret wards ; . . .
 Disputes would then relax, like stormy winds
 List, the winds of March are blowing ; . . .
 From sunshine, clouds, winds, waves,
 No winds disturb ; the mirror of whose breast
 That life—the flowery path that winds hysteach—
 The winds at night had made a rout ;
 Driven by strong winds at play among the clouds.
 Has witnessed. Oh ! that winds and waves could speak
 Send forth a song of triumph. Waves and Winds,
 No longer, scattering to the heedless winds
 (Winds behind, and rocks before !)
 True, as inexorable winds, or bars
 The Winds come to me from the fields of sleep,
 Where winds the road along the secret bay ;
 Where the slow waggon winds along the bay ;
 And winds between thine isles the vocal varge.
 Her shrill winds roaring round my lonely way ;
 And to the door a neater pathway winds,
 Hush'd are the winds and silent are the tides ;
 Whence inspiration for a song that winds
 Or make their dim abode in distant winds.
 And sounding cataracts, ye mists and winds
 Ye winds and sounding cataracts ! 'tis yours,
 Had voices more than all the winds, with power
 Mad at their sports like withered leaves in winds ;
 Attends the motions of the viewless winds,
 A pensive sky, sad days, and piping fair
 Upon the stretch, when winds are blowing fair :
 Winds thwarting winds, bewildered and forlorn,
 Associates, and, unsecured by blustering winds,
 Still as a sheltered place when winds blow loud !
 While winds are eddying round her, among straws
 He winds away his never-ending horn ;
 As the winds fret within the Æolian cave,
 Ungovernable, and your terrifying winds,
 Within the breast, as ever-varying winds
 From the four quarters of the winds to do
 As Lear reproached the winds—I could almost Rejoiced through early youth, before the winds
 Full often wished he that the winds might rage
 My best companions now the driving winds,
 Upward it winds, as if, in summer heats,
 Fearless of winds and waves. Three several stones
 That our existence winds her stately course —"Blow winds of autumn !—let your chilling breath"
 "Calm as a frozen lake when ruthless winds
 To One by storms annoyed and adverse winds ;
 As he desires that they should be, whom winds
 And to the winds and mother elements,
 When winds are blowing strong. The traveller
 slaked
 Winds far in reaches hidden from our sight,
 To the four quarters of the winds, proclaim.
 Winds an inscriptive legend."—"At these words
 Lurks in safe shelter from the winds of March Winds pipe through fading woods ; but those blithe notes . . .
 Frequented, and beset with howling winds.
 Murmured the labouring bee. When stormy winds
 Tall ash-tree, sown by winds, by vapours nursed,
 The winds of March, smiting insidiously,
 A mightier river, winds from realm to realm ;
 That gave them nourishment. When frosty winds
 Though aided by wild winds, the groans and shrieks
 The rains at length have ceas'd, the winds are still'd,
 And hear the voices of the winds and flowers.
 And make a stormy harbour for the winds.
 That sail on winds, of breezes that delight
 Made visible, amid a noise of winds
 Of winds, this deep Vale,—as it doth in part
 The gift of winds, and whom the winds again
Windsor's. From the collegiate pomps on Windsor's height
Wind-swept. Of wind-swept corn that wide around us rolled . . .
 Such are thoughts !—A wind-swept meadow
Windy. On windy days, in one of those stray brooks,
 If on windy days the Raven
Wine. Thou sing'st as if the God of wine
 Down the long street, rich goblets filled with wine
 Huge goblets are brought forth ; they crown the wine
 From Belus, filled it to the brim with wine ;
 Then sipp'd the bowl whence she the wine had pour'd
 Decanters, glasses, and the blood-red wine.
 With invitations, suppers, wine and fruit,
 Never excited by the fumes of wine
 More bright than madness or the dreams of wine ;
 Brought from the cupboard wine and stouter cheer,
Wing. Where hum on busier wing her happy bees ;
 The startled bird quivered upon the wing,
 Now cooling, with his passing wing,

Winter. See Mid-Winter.
 Humbly to hang, like twinkling winter lamps,
 Exulting 'mid the winter of the skies,
 Food for his beasts in time of winter snows.
 Nor Winter yet his frozen stores had piled,
 When downward to his winter hut he goes,
 Hears Winter calling all his horrors round,
 Where the bees hummed, and chair by winter fire;
 Was of Kirkoswald—many a snowy winter
 —These fools of feeling are mere birds of winter.
 Lay passive as a dormouse in mid winter.
 We talked of change, of winter gone,
 Where the frosts of winter lie.
 A foggy day in winter time).
 Then Michael from a winter coppice cut
 And her soothing song by the winter fire,
 Of waters which the winter had supplied
 Wherewith to cheer him in the winter time."
 In deepest winter; and, from week to week,
 Would deck you many a winter day,
 Thee Winter in the garland wears
 Is warmed thro' winter by her feathery breast.
 A Barn her winter bed supplies;
 Where oft the stormy winter gale
 "And all that winter, when at night
 Her thirty years of winter past,
 From one oblivious winter called
 Safe through the winter storm in quiet dwells!
 Stern Winter loves a dirge-like sound.
 Sent from some distant clime where Winter winds
 While I was shaping beds for winter flowers;
 I gave this paradise for winter hours,
 That child of winter, prompting thoughts that climb
 He rules 'mid winter snows, and when
 Through summer heat and winter snow:
 Whose vernal covers winter hath laid bare.
 Hath painted Winter like a traveller old,
 But mighty Winter the device shall scorn.
 For he it was—dread Winter! who beset,
 That old decrepit Winter—He hath slain
 Which even in deepest winter testify
 Of Winter, but the storms of life,
 When winter the grove of its mantle bereaves,
 Of Winter—but a name.
 Revive, their obstinate winter pass away,
 Had a musical charm, which the winter of age
 (Foretaste of winter) on the moorland heights;
 As winter trees, yield no fallacious sign
 Aliens, is God's good winter for their haunts.
 Of winter storms, yet budding cheerfully;
 That, in rough winter, oft indicates a fear
 Has seduced the poor fool from his winter retreat,
 But list!—though winter storms be nigh,
 Such tribute as to winter chill . . .

Though cold as winter, gloomy as the grave,
 Of winter rushing in, to close
 With hoary winter, and Life touch,
 O joy for her! whenever free to choose,
 Struggle with frosty air and winter snows;
 Poor winter look fine in such strange masquerade.
 The fodder of his herds in winter snows.
 With panting breast, now pale as winter snows,
 —Why suns in winter, shunning heaven's steep
 heights
 Planting my snowdrops among winter snows:
 What spring and autumn, what the winter snows,
 No longer haunting the dark winter night.
 The labouring time of autumn, winter, spring,
 All winter long, whenever free to choose,
 Grew there; an ash which Winter for himself
 While Winter like a well-tamed lion walks,
 Of Winter that had warbled at my door,
 Of winter evenings, when unwholesome rains
 There, 'tis the shepherd's task the winter long
 Their leaves, as often Winter had put on
 As at a fountain; and on winter nights,
 Of long-continuing winter, he repaired,
 The history of many a winter storm,
 I, with my freight of winter raiment, saw
 Of summer, autumn, winter, and of spring.
 No winter greenness; of her herbs and flowers,
 Through the long winter, reckless and alone;
 For winter fuel—to his noontide meal
 Of winter, and protect that pleasant place.
 Which all acknowledged. The dark winter night,
 Of winter cannot thin; the fresh air lodged
 There to defend themselves the winter long.
 Are opened. Churlish Winter hath given leave

Winter's—continued.

If we are creatures of a winter's day;
 Till a winter's noon-day placed her buried Son
 One winter's night, when through the trees
 News of winter's vanishing,
 A flaky weight of winter's purest snows!
 'Mid summer storms or winter's ice,
 And loud and long of Winter's triumph sing!
 Of Winter's breath surcharged with sleety showers,
 Blithe Autumn's purple crown, and Winter's icy mail!
 And winter's dreariest hour.
 "I speak not of the winter's cold
 Were shaped to cheer dark winter's lonely hours.
 Feeds on in light, nor thinks of winter's shock;
 Your young on winter's winding sheet of snow.
 Her crest a bough of Winter's bleakest pine,
 Sent in on Winter's service, to announce,
 The redbreast, ruffled up by winter's cold
 "Life's autumn past, I stand on winter's verge;
 Foretelling aged Winter's desolate sway.
 The summer's day, and winter's; with success
 Of winter's household, they keep festival

Winters. Of half these graves? For eight-score winters past,
 Whom he twenty winters tended,
 Of five long winters! and again I hear
 Yes, Traveller! fifty winters have been told
 More to myself. Two winters may be passed
 Long springs and tepid winters, on the banks
 Full seventy winters hath he lived, and mark!
 With silent increase: summers, winters—past,
 Ten summers and ten winters of a space

Wintry. Is all we have to cheer our wintry way;
 He sang—"No wintry desolations,
 To meet the wintry season.
 Issuing or issued from a wintry fount;
 Safe from the wintry tempest. Fluttering,
 Round your pale eyes a wintry lustre wake.
 Earth awakes from wintry sleep:
 Yet would I not be of such wintry hareness
 From paradise transplanted: wintry age
 With more than wintry cheerlessness and gloom.
 Death and its two-fold aspect! wintry—one,
 Upon its Master's frame, a wintry grace;

Wipe. To wipe those briny tears away,
 Tears wipe away, and pleasant tidings bring;
Wiped. Sir Walter wiped his face, and cried, "Till now
 Or wiped his honourable brows . . . 287 Sons of Burns 33

Wires. He once had a heart which was moved by the wires

Wiry. The darts of song from out its wiry cage;
 That writhes and chatters in her wiry cage,
 Wis. Oft as I say Osee, Osee, I wis,
 For Love in young folk is but rage, I wis;
 Unless it always stay with him, I wis
 And said: I wis, when thou art horn'd anew,
Wisdom. See Half-Wisdom.
 Of happy wisdom, meditating good,
 By wisdom, moralise his pensive road.
 The wise man to that scorn which wisdom holds
 Wisdom, if Justice speak the word, beats down
 Mark the Almighty Wisdom, which decreed
 It shall be done as Wisdom shall decide:
 Oh, Wisdom! a most wise resolve! and then,
 "The devil take his wisdom!" said
 A wisdom fitted to the needs
 Find my wisdom in my bliss;
 The wisdom which adversity had bred,
 Framed in the schools where Wisdom dwelt retired,
 Whose wisdom fixed the scale
 Of divine Love, where Wisdom, Beauty, Truth
 When Wisdom prospered in his sight
 That seeks its wisdom through the heart?
 Wisdom doth live with children round her knees:
 And tongues that uttered wisdom—better none:
 That Wisdom wears, or take his treacherous staff
 For he and he only with wisdom is best
 Attuned to words with sacred wisdom fraught;
 His Brothers' wisdom or their love—
 As to the one sole fount whence wisdom bowed,
 Of wisdom, magnanimity, and love;
 Of awe-struck wisdom droops: or let my path
 Drawn from the wisdom that begins with fear,
 When wisdom stands in need of nature's grace;
 And Wisdom, as she holds a Christian place
 There's more of wisdom in it.
 Spontaneous wisdom breathed by health,
 By paths no human wisdom can foretrace!
 Wisdom exists not; nor the humbler skill
 Nor is, they feel, its wisdom obsolete—
 Who are so restless in your wisdom, ye
 Your talents, power, or wisdom, deem him not
 And all the wisdom of the Stagyrte,
 Recall not there the wisdom of the Tomb,
 Knowledge and wisdom, gained from converse sweet
 Inform'd his pen, or wisdom of the heart,
 "Infancy, by Wisdom mild,
 Wisdom and Spirit of the universe!

Wisdom—continued.

And wisdom and the pledges interchanged
Each little drop of wisdom as it falls
When Wisdom like the Goddess from Jove's brain,
Her wisdom stifled, and her justice scared,
That wisdom could, in any shape, come near
To wisdom; or, as lightsome as a bird
Wisdom, which works thro' patience; thence he learned
And in the wisdom of our daily life.
From natural wisdom turn our hearts away;
The purposes of wisdom ask no more:
In the transcendent wisdom of the age,
Wisdom is ofttimes nearer when we stoop
The crown of wisdom—to yield up their souls
In perfect wisdom, guiding mightiest power,
Misery and shame. But Wisdom of her sons
The wisdom of the prayer that daily asks
Enquire of ancient Wisdom; go, demand
And benefits his wisdom had conferred;
When wisdom shows her seasonable fruit,
Alas! such wisdom bids a creature fly
In seats of wisdom, not to be approached
By your persuasive wisdom shall the heart
The voice of wisdom whispering scripture texts
Cemented; by the hands of Wisdom reared
Was forced to vent his wisdom with a sigh
Wisdom enjoins; but if the thing we seek
His knowledge, wisdom, love of truth, and love
In his suspicious wisdom; oftener still,
And wisdom married to immortal verse?
" Oh, banish far such wisdom as condemns
And wisdom loves.—But when a stately ship
To know what they must do; their wisdom is
That what in wisdom for herself she doth,
Ye Kings, in wisdom, sense, and power supreme,
Wisdom's. Where lies the truth? has Man, in wisdom's creed,
Would braid his golden locks at Wisdom's side;
From Wisdom's heavenly Father. Hence hath flowed
From each to all, for wisdom's sake!—This truth
Ah! sleep not there in shame! Shall Wisdom's voice
Wise. See Captive-wise, Half-wise, Indian-wise,
Sheepfold-wise.
The wise man to that scorn which wisdom holds
And in such wise to rack her gentle heart
Oh, Wisdom! a most wise resolve! and then,
To occupy—both fools, or wise alike,
For a wise purpose—verily to weep with!
For such a world as this. The wise abjure
Long as the summer lasted; some, as wise,
Than wise Gorbantian ruled not in his day;
Thou art reputed wise, but in my mind
O be to thou wise as they, soul-gifted Maid!
He's not so wise as some folks be:
Sought by a wise though late exchange, and here
Wise, foolish, weak, or strong.
Who is not wise at all.
Where life is wise and innocent
'Twere worth a wise man's while to try
As joy delights in; and with wise restraint
Type of the wise who soar, but never roam;

Wise—continued.

Learu to make Time the father of wise Hope;
Is the wise Legislator's view confined.
What is a State? The wise behold in her
That no tribunal, though most wise to sift
Who bends to happier duties, who more wise
Though young so wise, though meek so resolute—
Foolish men he can make them out of wise;—
Now, God of Love! thou help me in some wise,
O 'tis a passionate Work!—yet wise and well,
Companion of the wise and good,
The Memories of the Wise and Just,
Like that Wise ancestor of thine
To in-door study than was wise or well,
And ended with such mockery. Be wise,
With few wise longings and but little love,
A race of real children; not too wise,
And wise men, willing to grow wiser, caught,
As individual in the wise and good,
To imitate, not wise enough to avoid;
Of wise in passion, and sublime in power,
Their ministers,—who in lordly wise had stirred Perplex her mind; but, wise as women are
More wise desires, and simpler manners;—nurse
Than slow and torpid; paying in this wise
As the prime object of a wise man's aim,
Most grateful, if in such wise to enjoy
Yet, should this confidence prove vain, the wise
We shall be wise perforce; and, while inspired
Of one whom time and nature had made wise,
Wise in that union, and without it blind!
This is the wise man's sigh; how far we err—
With wise reluctance; you would I extol,
And by the care prospective of our wise
Grant to the wise his firmness of resolve!
And reason that in man is wise and good,
The well-beloved, the fortunate, the wise,—
No just remembrance, scruple, or wise doubt?
That good and wise ever will be allowed,
I spake of mischief by the wise diffused
Discourse both wise and pleasant, shrewd remarks
More than a wise man ought to be. I wish,
Though very happy are not very wise
Wisest. Who, loving most, should wiseliest love, their only strife.

Wish—continued.

Beaumont ! it was thy wish that I should rear
So joys, remembered without wish or will,
If wish were mine some type of thee to view,
The mind's least generous wish a mendicant
And wish the Lord of day his slow decline
To thy heart's wish, thy labour blest by God !
But I could frame a wish for thee
The same weak wish returns, that had before
deceived him.
Nor wish for earthly friend,
Or wish to share it ?—One there surely was,
Or Sabine vales explored inspire a wish
Full oft, our wish obtained, deeply we sigh ;
Of a good wish sent after thee ; from bower
Fond wish that was granted at last, and the Flood,
A glance suffices ;—should we wish for more,
Than blame the present, that our wish hath crost.
My Son, the last wish of my heart.
My wish is known, and I have done :
But long as god-like wish, or hope divine,
Dread clift of Baruth ! that wild wish may sleep,
Impotent wish ! which reason would despise
Nor felt a wish that heaven would show
My sister ! ('tis a wish of mine)
And did not wish her mine !"
She hath neither wish nor heart,
Of my own wish ; and feel past doubt
That every man in arms should wish to be ?
Prosperous or adverse, to his wish or not—
That every Man in arms should wish to be.
From the sage Nymph appearing at his wish . . .
That, might a wish avail, would never fade,
Yet more, we wish that men by men despised,
Oh ! can a brave Man wish to take
That Reason dictates ; and, as even the wish
Yet one word more—one farewell word—a wish
And couch—all ready to a wish
"Leave open to my wish the course,
Caused by the wish, as knows your sapience,
Small cause there is for that fond wish of ours
His wish was gained : a little time
Those simple lines flowed with an earnest wish,
But one, whose first wish is the wish to be good,
I wish the press-gang or the drum
Mild influence ; nor left in me one wish
Vain is her wish ; where'er she turns she finds
Mist into air dissolving ! Then a wish,
Nor were we ever masters of our wish,
Ruffled the waters to the angler's wish,
Who make our wish, our power, our thought a deed,
That wish for something loftier, more adorned,
And pure simplicity of wish and will,
Self-pleasing, which, if we would wish to think
The wish to bring me over to their cause.
Unthwarted in her wish to recompense
Than if their wish had been to undermine
And stuff at hand, plastic as they could wish,— Searched to its heart. Share with me, Friend !
the wish
Dare I avow that wish was mine to see,
And to my wish and to my hope espied
She thanked me for my wish ;—but for my hope
She had no wish to live, that she must die
Such is the summer pilgrim's frequent wish ;
I do not wish to wrong him ; though the course
Had been from eldest time by wish of theirs
With curious subtlety, from wish to cheat
We signified a wish to leave that place
To my heart's wish, my tender Mate became
Who neither hears, nor feels a wish to hear,
Sate by my side, had vanished, if a wish
And unnoticed by a wish to look
Need a bewildered traveller wish for more ?
Hoping far less than I could wish to hope,
Concealment, or seduced by wish to find,
"Wish could be ours that you, for such poor gain,
In due observance of her pious wish,
As if with wish to veil the restless orb ;
No wish for wealth had place within his mind ;
May creep (I wish that they would softly creep)
Have sense of one connatural wish, nor yet
Than the old hereditary wish fulfilled ;
The wish for liberty to live—content
"The fire, that burned so brightly to our wish,
Directing notice, merely from a wish
And feel no wish to be alive . . .
Scarcely a wish, but one bright pleasing thought,
On lovely objects, and we wish to part
More than a wise man ought to be. I wish,
If I some type of thee did wish to view,
Wished. See Long-wished.
Did all he wished, and wished but what he ought.
For our departure ; wished and wished—nor knew,
as if he wished to settle into sleep.
Nor to this moment have I ever wished
In this our valley all of us have wished,
When I was well, I wished to live,
As if he wished himself to hide :

Wished—continued.

I wished they all were gone—
And the dear haven where he wished to be
I wished that thou shouldst live the life they lived,
The fair Joanna drew, as if she wished
Less than I wished to prize, that calm recess.
And once again he wished to live
And "Merry Christmas" wished to all !
This Clifford wished for worthier might ;
'Twere madness—wished we, therefore, to detain,
Thus oft, when we in vain have wished a way
We grieved for thee, and wished thy end were past ;
And wish'd the press-gang, or the drum
More than we wished we knew the blessing then
This genuine prowess, which I wished to touch
Of our scholastic studies ; could have wished
Not seldom since that moment have I wished
But seldom led, or wished to go ; in truth
A more exalted nature ; wished that Man
Full often wished he that the winds might rage
Not wished for ; sometimes noticed with a sigh,
That, like the fabled Lethæ, wished to flow
Might have been wished for and contrived, to elude
Was the particular spot, in which they wished
As if he wished the firmament of heaven
Became a clog to him, whose spirit wished
Sweet, perfect, to be wished for I save that here
Ye wished for act and circumstance, that make
And wished, at least, to hear the biarney
Ah, if I wished to follow where the sight

I wished-for. Fair blew the wished-for wind—the voyage sped ;
When they the wished-for greeting heard,
The wished-for object is in sight ;
"The wished-for wind was given"—I then revolved
The wished-for point was reached—but at an hour
This is the wished-for Bride, the Maid
Both feel, when he renews the wished-for aid :
Who, that has gained at length the wished-for Height
In rival haste, the wished-for Temples rise !
Gave him first the wished-for part
Till from his couch the wished-for Sun uprose.
His bark to land upon the wished-for shore,
The wished-for port to which my course was bound.
Such was their scheme : and though the wished-for end
"Long wished-for sight, the Western World appeared ;
In order, drawing toward their wished-for home.
Wished-for, or welcome, wheresoe'er he came—

Wishful. And, as if wishful to disarm
Wishful to leave an opening for my choice,
Wishing. Dreading, tho' wishing, to be near it:
A captive never wishing to be free.
Sweet-voiced, nor wishing for a flight
Wishing to hope without a hope, some fears
I willing, nay—nay, wishing to be led.
Of my beloved country, wishing not
Not wishing more; repining not to tread
Of various intercourse, nor wishing aught
Wishing-cap. Oh! give us once again the wishing-cap
Wishing-gate. The rustic Wishing-gate!
Upon the Wishing-gate.
And yet, lost Wishing-gate, to thee
Wist. That of this murder wist, and that anon:
Methought I wist right well what these birds meant,
Ah, fool! quoth she, wist thou not what it is?
Wept bitterly. I wist not what to do,
Wistful. And long, with wistful gaze, his walk survey'd
For hope's deserted well why wistful look?
The pilgrim's wistful eye hath never stay'd.
Wistfully. And on the third, as wistfully she raised
Would lift, and in his face look wistfully:
Wit. And now, God help me for my little wit!
Of Johnny's wit, and Johnny's glory,
With tools for ready wit to guide;
And kindly sportive wit—
Who hath no lack of wit mercurial;
But if the Poet's wit ye share,
By strength of prowess or of wit:
With the inoffensive sword of native wit,
Outweighs the world; whom self-deceiving wit
To win the palm of gaiety and wit;

To tell his might my wit may not suffice;
Oh! it repents me I have neither wit
Humour and wild instinctive wit, and all
Cheap matter offered they to boyish wit,
Of character, in points of wit as broad,
This is no trifer, nor short-flighted wit,
In sign of conquest by his wit achieved
With personal gifts, and bright instinctive wit,
By his malicious wit; then, all enchained
The moments' humour, rough Tars spend their wit,
And more who feed with this Patricia wit
Witch. More thrilling melodies; Witch answering Witch,
In old time haunted by that Danish Witch,
Witchcraft. Some ugly witchcraft must be here!
Of witchcraft fixed them in the crystal cell;
Had been ensnared by witchcraft. On the rock
What witchcraft, mild enchantment, may with thee Witchery. There's witchery in't. I never knew a maid
The witchery of the soft blue sky!
What witchery, for pure gifts of inward seeing,
Witch's. Or imp from witch's lap let fall?
With. omitted.
Withal. Modest, yet withal an Elf
So warm, so beautiful withal,
Frail as the frailest, one withal (it that
Earlier from cleansing fires, and gains withal
So fair, so sweet, withal so sensitive,
Tremblings withal and commendable fears,
Unsound, of spongy texture, yet withal
Yet innocent himself withal, though shrewd,
Poems withal of name, which at that time
Withal a season dangerous and wild,
In temperament, withal a happy man,
Frugal, affectionate, sober, and withal
Withal so graceful in his gentleness,
Freedom and hope; but keen, withal, and shrewd,
And real evil, yet he sweet withal,
Withdraw. Thither do I withdraw when cloudless suns
That all must love or die; but I withdraw,
Take courage, and withdraw yourself from ways
Their legislative licence to withdraw Withdrawing. To shady rest withdrawing or withdrawn
And, lastly, the withdrawing moon, that set
Withdrawing, straightway to the shade returned.
That, studiously withdrawing from the eye
Withdrawings. Stealthy withdrawings, interminglings mild
Withdrawn. See Self-withdrawn.
A season after Julia had withdrawn
To you accorded, never be withdrawn,
Withdrawn for noontide rest. They sit, they walk
Those trees, a veil just half withdrawn;
And to the chapel far withdrawn,
To shady rest withdrawing or withdrawn
Observe how dewy Twilight has withdrawn
Of nature was withdrawn!

Had from the east her silver star withdrawn,
When reunited, and by choice withdrawn
Now when the viands were withdrawn, and ceas'd
Have ye withdrawn from passion's crooked ways,
Withdrawn,—to while away the summer hours

Withdrawn—continued.

From whom, in early childhood, was withdrawn
He had withdrawn from bustle, care, and noise,
Withdrawn. In quietness withdraws;
Thus into narrow room withdraws;
His outstretched hand He tauntingly withdraws—Withdraw. The parting signal streamed—at last the land withdrew.
The attendant lords withdrew;
Whenever from our Valley he withdrew;
Of four-and-twenty summers he withdrew;
World-wearied Men withdrew of yore;
I could not—while from Venice we withdrew,
But calmly from the spot withdrew;
They to the Tower withdrew, and there
She from her sylvan haunt withdrew,
Both stricken, as she entered or withdrew,
Proved tedious, and I gradually withdrew
Since I withdrew unwillingly from France,
And sighed among its playthings. I withdrew,
In timid selfishness withdrew, I sought
Of nature indivisible, withdrew
Withdraw, and fixed me in a still retreat;
Hither, in prime of manhood, he withdrew
Withdraw; and straight we followed,—to a spot
Withdraw, on summons to their well-earned meal;
Stormy and fierce, the Maid of Arc withdrew Wither. Ere it wither and grow pale,
But garlands wither; festal shows depart,
To wither in the sun and breeze
His transports? wither his heroic strains?
Put forth to wither, many a hopeful shoot)
And wither, every human generation
Flowers left to wither on triumphal arcs,
A happler fortune than to wither there:
In mockery, to wither in the sun,
If the flowers wither, I am worse than dead!
Withered. On withered briars that o'er the crags
recline;
On a rude violet touched with withered hand,
Twice did I spring to grasp his withered throat,
Sigh at the dead? Hew down a withered tree,
Withered on the ground must lie;
There was he, where of branches rent and withered
and decayed,
When he came back to us, a withered flower,—
Are withered; thou no longer canst be mine,
Feather, or leaf, or weed, or withered bough,
With withered leaves is covered o'er,
The withered leaves all skip and hop;
Dry and withered, light and yellow;
When withered is the guardian Flower,
Withered leaves—one—two—and three—
Drooped with its withered leaves, ungracious sign
The trees' tall summits withered at the sight;
And withered leaves, from earth's cold breast
O'er hopeless dust, for withered age—
—A withered leaf is close behind,
Quicken, as now, the withered health;—
Those new-horn Kings she withered like a flame.
The chosen sceptre is a withered bough,

Withered, grotesque, immeasurably old,
Withered at eve. From scenes of art which chase
Magnific limbs of withered state;
Driven forward like a withered leaf,
She prayed, her withered hand uprearing,
With plenteous store of heath and withered fern,
Beat his grey locks against his withered face.
Stiff in its members, withered, changed of hue."

Touch'd with his wither'd hand an aged lyre;
Which, from a tree, a stone, a withered leaf,
Mad at their sports like withered leaves in winds;
For ever withered. Through this retrospect
The hardened soil, and knots of withered grass:
With books, maps, fossils, withered plants and flowers,
With gentle whisper. Withered boughs grotesque,
Fall to refresh a parched and withered land?
All withered by the depth of shade above.
Of all the mighty, withered and consumed!
Upon thy chance-defilements—withered twigs Withereth. Grows green, and is cut down and withereth
Withering. Take from her brow the withering flowers of eve,
All speak of manners withering to the root,
Among its withering topmost branches mixed,
The garland withering on their brows;
Sons, mothers, maidens withering on the stalk,
Lay on the moral will a withering ban?
Withering the Oppressor: how Gustavus sought
Clothed in the sunshine of the withering fern;
Withering by slow degrees, 'mid genteel airs,
She withering in her loneliness. Be this
Withers. Of absence withers what was once so fair?
Withheld. As light itself—be there withheld from Her
Were not some gifts withheld by jealous hands,
Kindles intense desire for powers withheld

Withheld—continued.

Whatever boon is granted or withheld.
Whether withheld or for her sake unsought—
Of pleasure won, and knowledge not withheld,
That by endowments not from me withheld
Deem not that proof is here of woe withheld
On you have been conferred? what gifts, withheld
Thy gifts were utterly withheld from him

Withhold. Could I withhold thy honoured name,— and now

Should die; but me the threat could not withhold:
But these poetic mysteries I withhold;
Not to withhold his bounteous aid, Sebeto

Withholds. Your courtesy withholds not from my words

That loves the ground, and from the sun withholds
Within. (Partial list.)

Heavier than work, raised it: within that but Within those empty walls. I too have seen her;
Roared in the tempest, was within an ace
A farm or dwelling-house within five leagues,
Within the Vault, a spear's length to the left.
Within this grove of firs! and, on the fork
And all is hushed, without and within;
And peace of God within his single breast!
Aghast within its gloomy cavity
Within a little time, as hath been found,
Within this court full seldom Truth avails,
To all the Birds that lodged within that dale,
Approached within the length of half his staff,
Within the old Man's hat; nor quits him so,
Within Savona's walls, of gentle blood,
Vibrate, as if a voice complain'd within;
Within himself, a measure and a rule,

Without. (Partial list.)

And then, without a moment's stay,
Moves on without a moment's stop,
And all is hushed, without and within;
Ye weave—no danger from without,
And full-assured trust, joy without measure,
And without ceasing, since it was daylight;
And all this shall be done, without a nay,
Without word uttered, forth he 'gan to pace;
And passes gently by, without a curse.
So low as to be scorned without a sin;
Without offence to God cast out of view;
That not without some effort they behold
Then (what is too true) without hinting a word,
Together move in fellowship without end,—
May read them not without some bitter tears.
Not without heavy grief of heart did He Withstand. And cease the acknowledged purpose to withstand;

That could withstand it. True," continued he,
His daughter, once his daughter? could I withstand
Nor discipline nor valour can withstand
A yearning survives which few hearts shall withstand:

All other strength the weakest may withstand,
No intervention, to withstand
Whose absolute rule permits not to withstand
That no self-cherished sadness could withstand:

Withstood. The oppressor he withstood;
Not long the Avenger was withstood—
Who, with a keenness not to be withstood,

And when he had in vain withstood
And laurelled armies, not to be withstood—
Neither to be diverted nor withstood
With skill and power that might not be withstood,
From paramount impulse not to be withstood,
Which might not be withstood, that poverty
Neither to be diverted nor withstood

Witness. With witness hope to bring her near!—
The little witness shepherd-boy
The witness shepherd who persists to drive
And poor misguided Shame, and witness Fear,

Witness. These walls shall witness it—from first to last

Nor be its witness? I had many hopes
In speechless admiration. I, a witness
And (strange to witness!) from the frame
Yet, witness all that stirs in heaven or earth!
Witness this symbol of your sway,
Bear witness ye who seldom passed
Bear witness many a pensive sigh
Bear witness, rueful Yarrow!
I feign not; witness that unwelcome shock
His actions witness, venerate his mien,
(Heaven only witness of the toil)
Of ignorance thou might'st witness heretofore,
Bear witness, Ye, whose thoughts that day
I may bear witness in my breast
Of long-drawn rampart, witness what they were.
Witness the Church that oft-times, with effect
Have long borne witness as the Scriptures teach?—
Witness you Pile that greets us from St. Bees.
Yet, God is my witness, thou small helpless Thing!
Witness those glances of indignant scorn
"Wha! I speak this Horn shall witness
High-born Augusta! Witness, Towers and Groves!

Witness—continued.

Of Lowther to this ancient Line, bear witness
Witness how oft upon my noble Friend
The scenes which were a witness of that joy
Bear witness Truth, endowed with holy powers
Witness and judge; and I remember well
I turned, that ye in mind might witness where,
This Land shall witness; and as days roll on,
Witness thou

In my affections. Witness the delight Witnessed. Of what I witnessed. This day will suffice

But for the scene which we by chance have witnessed.

In Story, what men now alive have witnessed,
I witness'd, and now hail your victory.
As the dying mother witnessed

With what I've witnessed, and with what I've heard,
Since I their pastime witnessed here,
As was witnessed through thine eye
My youth here witnessed, in a prouder time;
Soon witnessed, and the city of seven hills,
Hath witnessed their captivity.
"I witnessed when to York they came—
Earth never witnessed object more sublime
Had sow the spot, that witnessed them, with seeds
Which they had witnessed, sway the man who built
Has witnessed. Oh! that winds and waves could speak

Such intercourse I witnessed, while we roved,
Which it hath witnessed; render back an echo
Had also witnessed, in his morn of life,

We both have witnessed, lot which I myself
Witnessing. Much witnessing of change and cheer,
Wits. Thou, a flower of wiser wits,

Puzzling aloft his curious wits;
Witted. See Half-witted.
Witty. It neither damps the gay, nor checks the witty.

That half-mad thing of witty rhymes
He sang those witty rhymes

Wives. See Sister-wives.
As between two wedded Wives—
He had a dozen wedded wives.
"Nay, start not!—wedded wives—and twelve!
Make merry, wives! ye little children, stun
Their wives, their children, and their virgin loves,
Assembled with their children and their wives,
They, and their wives and children—happier far

Wizard. "The Wizard of the North," with anxious hope

His wizard course where hoary Derwent takes
The wizard instantaneously dissolves

Woe. 'O'er life's long deserts with its charge of woe,
Death would be else the favourite friend of woe.
This bitterness of woe.

For innocence and youth, for weal and woe? "
There's be the blame who caused the woe, not mine!
"O woe is me! O woe is me!
I cannot work thee any woe!

Peopling the harmless fields with signs of woe:
And Benjamin—ah, woe is me!
That we were in a world of woe,

Oh woe is me! oh misery!
Oh woe is me! oh misery!
Oh woe is me! oh misery!
Through the realms of woe and weal:

Thought Peter then, come weal or woe:
Through paths of wickedness and woe,
Heavy is woe;—and joy, for human-kind,

Woe to the poor blind Mariner!
To human weal and woe.

Shame followed shame, and woe supplanted woe—
—Woe to them all! but heaviest woe and shame
Of states and kingdoms, to their joy or woe,

Woe, woe to all that face her in the field!
And, with the guilt and shame, the Woe hath vanished,

Of right and wrong, of weal and woe,
"Alas! and I have caused this woe;
What feuds, not quenched but fed by mutual woe.

Be at their side, come weal or woe:
To reach the well-spring of this woe!
Turn from us all the coming woe:

Received the bitterness of woe:
Carrying this instrument of woe,
And, for their sakes, come weal or woe,

Storm-driven; who, having seen the cup of woe
But from what world She came, what woe or weal
Woe to the Crown that doth the Cowl obey!

"Woe to you, Prelates! rioting in ease
From blissful transport some—from clefts of woe
From the Baptismal hour, thro' weal and woe,
But infinite its grasp of weal and woe!
Woe! woe to Tyrants! from the lyre

Woe—continued.

Woe to the purblind crew who fill
 "Knowledge will save me from the threatened woe."
 By laws immutable. But woe for him
 Locked in our world's embrace through weal and
 woe;
 Daily exposed, woe that unshrouded lies;
 "I cannot bring to utter woe
 His wasp's nest in Jew's heart, upswelled— O woe,
 Most feeling have of sorrow, woe and care,
 For Love, and it hath done me mighty woe.
 But, Lord, this simple Troilus was woe,
 O cause of woe, that cause has been of bliss:
 The occasion of his woe, as heist he might;
 Unutterable woe.
 Where fierce the rays of woe collected burn.
 When Virtue weeps in agony of woe,
 By false philosophy had caused the woe,
 Detained us, on what spectacles of woe
 Than to be left unconscious of the woe.

Of marble; for while shameless wrong and woe

But whence this gall, this leaghtened face of woe?
Woeful. A woeful time it was for me,
 For me it was a woeful day.
 Though at my bosom nursed; this woeful gain
 Poor Martha I on that woeful day
 Dark is the time—a woeful day!
 In Rylstone's woeful neighbourhood,
 Prescribed to duty;—woeful forfeiture
 And under cover of this woeful strife,
 Somewhat his woeful heart to make more light;
 Oh! I could be on that woeful night
 A woeful time for them whose hopes survived
 The shock; most woeful for those few who still

Woes. Touched by the beggar's moan of human woes;
 And cold and hunger are his least of woes;
 A correspondent calm stole gentle'er his woes.
 Some tidings that my woes may end;
 Such woes, I knew, could never be;
 Or, to forget their madness and their woes,
 And when impatient of her guilt and woes,
 Needful amid life's ordinary woes;—
 Their Country's woes. But scarcely have they met,
 Of woes and degradations hand in hand—
 And bids her soldier come her woes to share,
 Earth's paramount Creature! not so much for woes
 Imaginations, sense of woes to come,
 The bright-eyed Mariner, and rueful woes
 On her—at once superior to my woes
 Perchance, the heavier woes of guilt; feel not
 Drawn from his vitals? Say what meant the woes

Wolka. I would take care she never woke again;
 When from these lofty thoughts I woke,
 Woke from the dream, the dreamer to upbraid,
Wold. With shield and stone-axe, stride across the wold;

Wolf. Howls near and nearer yet the famished wolf.
 Why, if a wolf should leap from out a thicket,
 The wolf keeps festival these stormy nights;
 The wolf has come to me to-night,
 Of tenderness—the Wolf, whose suckling Twins
 Made room where wolf and boar were used to range?

Ascending, nearer howls the famish'd wolf,
Wolf-dog. A solitary Wolf-dog, ranging on Wolfs. Where breathe the gale that caught
 Wolfe's happiest sigh,

Wolf-skin. To the rude Briton, when, in wolf-skin vest
 A single Briton clothed in wolf-skin vest,
Wolves. When you are by my side. Idonea, wolves
 And shivering wolves, surprised with darkness, howl
 From wolves your portion of His chosen sheep:
 Protracted yelling, like the noise of wolves

Woman. And saw a woman in the naked room
 The Woman thus retraced her own onward fate.
 Their way, the Woman thus her mournful tale
 renewed.
 A woman stood with quivering lips and pale,
 A pale-faced Woman, in disease far gone.
 From her bare straw the Woman half upraised
 Two Travellers! The woman is Idonea.
 Unhappy Woman! Nay, it was my duty
 And put your head, good Woman, under cover.
 This woman is a prater. Pray, good Lady!
 I think, good Woman, you are the very person
 Shall give me half. What's this?—I fear, good
 Woman,

And will misuse me, Sir! No trifling, woman!—
 Speak out. Oh, Sir, I've been a wicked Woman.
 Yours, Woman, are you Herbert's wife?
 A lucky woman!—go, you have done good service.
 Rooted I stood; for, looking at the woman,
 Be known unto you, you will love this Woman,
 Woman, thou hast a helpless Infant—keep
 When he should give her up, a Woman grown,
 She weighs them in one scale. The wiles of woman,
 That Woman will come o'er this Waste to save thee.
 Ere I can shed a tear. I was a woman;

Woman—continued.

Oh heavens! you've been deceived. Thou art a
 Woman
 Woman, I've lent my body to the service
 Of resurrection. Miserable Woman,
 She is not dead. Why!—If I loved this Woman,
 A Woman rules my prison's key;
 A woman who was not thy mother.
 A Woman on the road I met,
 An aged woman. It consoled him here
 But Betty, poor good woman! she,
 "What, Woman I should I know of him?"
 She was a woman of a stirring life,
 That ancient Woman seated on Helm-crag
 With no one but the ANCIENT WOMAN,
 The Woman urged her supplication,
 The Woman, as if half afraid:
 A Spirit, yet a Woman too!
 A perfect Woman, nobly planned,
 A Woman in a scarlet cloak,
 This wretched Woman thither goes;
 Does this poor Woman go?
 Can this unhappy Woman go,
 A Woman seated on the ground.
 A Woman may be made.
 As he beheld the Woman lie
 The Woman waked—and when she spied
 Beside the Woman Peter stands;
 The Woman rises from the ground—
 Upon a stone the Woman sits
 The joyous Woman is the Mate
 Or woman, man, or child.
 Yet downcast as a woman fearing blame;
 For woman, even of tears bereft
 To thee, a woman, and thence weak:
 Woman! above all women glorified,
 Woman! the Power who left His throne on high,
 His wife, an aged woman,
 Both man and woman wept when thou wert dead;
 Will to the woman be supplied!
 With weary feet by all of woman born)—
 That woman ne'er should forfeit, keep thy vow;

But she, poor Woman! housed alone.
 One is a Woman, a poor earthy sister,
 That never fleshly woman they did know.
 The voice of woman utter blasphemy—
 Saw woman as she is, to open shame
 Of some unhappy woman, now and then
 Some aged woman finds her way again,
 Had paid to woman: somewhat vain he was,
 She was a Woman of a steady mind,
 I thought of that poor Woman as of one
 To that poor Woman!—so familiarly
 "A woman rests in peace; surpassed by few
 This was the death-doomed Woman heard to say
 By which a virtuous woman, in pure youth,
 A woman of soft speech and gracious smile,
Woman-grown. Woman-grown, meek-hearted, sage,

Woman-hearted. The woman-hearted Confessor prepares.
Womanhood. Pledged till thou reach the verge of womanhood,
 Thoughts motherly, and meek as womanhood.
 Has but approached the gates of womanhood,
 Womanhood in pure renown,
Womankind. To womankind with duty to my Father,
Womanly. So womanly, with voice melodious
Woman's. His cradle, as with a woman's gentle hand.
 Woman's birthright into dust.
 She grew to woman's height.
 And though his favourite seat be feeble woman's breast.
 A woman's garb the Phantom wore,
 By woman's gentle fortitude,
 The roseate bloom on woman's cheek;
 On woman's quiet hours;
 That woman's fortitude—so tried, so proved—
 In woman's shape. But why prolong the tale,
 A suffering woman's word;
 Is a cart-load of turf at an old woman's door?
 With woman's gentleness, yet firm and staid;

Reviewed that Woman's sufferings; and it seemed
 And nature that is kind in woman's breast,
 Thus wronged in woman's breast: in vain I pleaded—
 Of Castaly attest that Woman's heart
Womb. That lit Her holy features, from whose womb Women. We kill a worn-out horse, and who but women

Women, in your land, may pity

Women—continued.

Men, Women, three-years' Children, Babes in arms. Perplex her mind; but, wise as women are By women, who have children of their own, Won. Your generous qualities have won due praise, I bore her in my arms; her looks won pity; She smiles as if a martyr's crown were won: Won from the world of mind, dost thou prepare Then, when old Helvellyn won thee That, struggling through the western sky, have won Through It have won a passage to thy heart; Loved Yarrow, have I won thee; Shout, for a mighty Victory is won! Is won, and by all Nations shall be worn! Tyrants exult to hear of kingdoms won, Be won for feeble Innocence. While clariors prate of kingdoms to be won—

Of England—who in hope her coast had won, Of what is won, we overlook or scorn For victories there won by flower-crowned Spring, Sir Agravaune advanced; no sign he won Leap down into the court;—"Tis won"— From showers, or when the prize was won, Won for herself a lasting resting-place; The conquests lost that were so hardly won:— Over the bowl, whose silver lip hath won However hardly won or justly dear: Of Christian unity, and won a meed When first our infant brows their lustre won; A portion of the gift is won; And welcome glory won in battles fought A happy people won for thee that name Loose vapours have I watched, that won And charters won and guarded by the sword That bliss is ne'er so surely won Where what he most doth value must be won: Won confidence, now ruthlessly betrayed For everlasting glory won by faith. The haven of her hope she won, Which ever to man's ear a passage won. Another race hath been, and other palms are won. Of less regard, though won perhaps with toil And little won. Yet from the first crude days If but by labour won, and fit to endure When so disturbed, whatever palms are won. Retainers won away from solid good; At last, or glorious, by endurance won. Of pleasure won, and knowledge not withheld, Won from me those minute obeisances And by what combatants victory must be won; Before his sight in power or fame, and won, Where passage could be won; and, as the last Or learns, at least, that 'tis not to be won: Might, by the promise that is here, be won Still to be courted—never to be won. Hard to be won, and only by a few Sister of Mercy, bravely hast thou won

Wonder. Well may I wonder he has gained such power I was alarmed. No wonder; this is a place We wonder at ourselves like men betrayed; How beautiful is holiness!—what wonder if the sight, Of any wonder Normandy, or all proud France, can boast! From floor to roof, all round his eyes the Child with wonder cast, Many a long look of wonder: and at last, What wonder, then, if in such ample field A mighty wonder bred among our quiet crew. Great wonder to our gentle tribe it was No wonder if her senses fail; And, still and mute, in wonder lost, Little be the wonder then, the blame be none, What wonder? at her bidding, ancient lays He is astounded,—wonder not,— And less in pity than in wonder, They stand the wonder of the bowers Wonder to all who do the same espy, No wonder if you quite forget The weight of sadness was in wonder lost. Of mortal sympathy; what wonder then As worthy of your wonder." Gifts which, for wonder or delight, For ingress to a world of wonder: What wonder if a Poet now and then, Of wonder, I have watched this sea-side Town, A Spirit whispered, "Let all wonder cease; What wonder if at midnight, by the side And, suddenly, behold a wonder! Fair Court of Edward! wonder of the world! Wonder that aught of aspect so serene And wonder how they could elude the sight! With wonder smit by its transparency, But hear a wonder, for whose sake This wonder merits well. With wonder mixed—that Man could e'er be tied, Or sacred wonder, growing with the power

Wonder—continued.

What wonder at this hour of stillness deep, Beheld with wonder; whether floor or path But wonder, pity, soon were quelled; Come to the spot in wonder at the thing; And, when the Abbot had this wonder seen, They look with wonder on the gifts—they gaze And mighty depth of waters. Wonder not Touches him not. To enhance the wonder, see Of human life. What wonder, then, if sounds With Indian awe and wonder, ignorance pleased Less strong of wonder and obscure delight. With wonder heightened, or sublimed by awe— All moveables of wonder, from all parts, No wonder, then, if advocates like these, What wonder, then, if, to a mind so far What wonder if his being thus became What wonder, then, if I, whose favourite school And He, what wonder! took a mortal taint. Of some bare hill, with wonder kenne'd from far. And with that help the wonder shall be seen Wonder, and admiration, things that wrought What wonder? on my soul 'twould split a tub Wondered. The more I looked, I wondered more— Had wondered at the work. But blame him not, I wondered not, although I plainly saw Wonderful. Within thy bosom. "Wonderful" hath been Honour assumed or given; and him, the WONDERFUL, Wondering. Much wondering by what fit of crazing care, And wondering looked at me. Much wondering how I could have sought in vain The Mastiff wondering, and perplex Sir Walter led his wondering Paramour; That wide-spanded arch, wondering how it was raised, Ploughs her bold course across the wondering seas; And sift her laws—much wondering that the wrong, To whom, by wondering Fancy stirred, Much wondering what sad stroke of crazing Care We sat and sate, wondering as if the night And wondering at its new inhabitants. Wonderous. See Wondrous. Then mean I, that I should be wonderous fain O, wonderous power of words, by simple faith Wonders. With half the wonders that were wrought for him, What wonders in that circle lie! And take to herself all the wonders of old;— The wonders of a wild career, Or wonders of the Deep. What stirring wonders wilt thou see Of marvels, broad-day wonders permanent: Walks, and achieves his wonders, from the eye By specious wonders, and too slow to tell Whose wonders in a covered wain lie hid. Wondrous. See Wonderous. I should make wondrous revolution here; Beyond the seas; where he grew wondrous rich, Wrote loving letters, full of wondrous news, Rise up, and grow to wondrous height; It seems that all looks wondrous cold; And wondrous length and strength of arm: I saw, in wondrous perspective displayed, Through the bleak concave, wakes this wondrous chime Follow this wondrous Potentate. Be true, Called forth by wondrous potency But hear you now a wondrous thing, I pray; Good Nightingale! thou speakest wondrous fair, —The pomp is fled, and mute the wondrous strains, That never more could be. Want—continued.

A treatise of Geometry, he wunt,
As is their wunt, a pittance from strict time,
Enrapt; but brightest things are wunt to draw
Which they were wunt to be. Through kindred scenes,

Wanted. Enter, and each the wanted task resumes
Woo. Some thought he was a lover, and did woo:
I thine—the conscience-stricken must not woo

Wood. See Box-wood, Chestnut-wood, Greenwood, Wild-wood.

Through bare grey dell, high wood, and pastoral cove;
Of bright obscurity, hill, lawn, and wood;
Of charcoal-smoke, that, o'er the fallen wood,
The leafy wood, or sleeps in quiet lakes.
Beholds the unwearied sweep of wood that scales
But once I pierced the mazes of a wood
In some dense wood or gulf of snow profound,
In wood or wilderness, in camp or town,
Down a thick wood, they dropt into the vale;
And he had done the deed in the dark wood—
This wood is rich in plants and curious simples.
I have been waiting in the wood hard by
We'll stroll into the wood; lean on my arm.
In a deep wood remote from any town.
Who at full speed swept by us where the wood
Through wood, and through vale; and o'er rocky height,
And thence they saw the bridge of wood,
The thrush is busy in the wood,
A wood is felled;—and then for our own homes!
And Betty's husband's at the wood,
Or bringing fagots from the wood.
And carried Johnny to the wood.
I'll to the wood!—The word scarce said,
And to the wood at length is come;
We'll find thy father in the wood.
Rushed o'er the wood with startling sound;
On the moor, and in the wood,
So painfully in the wood?
Nor herd-boy of the wood.
Or lofty wood, shower-proof.
Others slunk to moor and wood,
Thence look thou forth o'er wood and lawn
Crag, lawn, and wood—with rosy light.
Tow'rd some far-distant wood, a Figure quaint,
At the corner of Wood Street, when daylight
appears,
She from her dwelling in the wood
Upon a long grey staff of shaven wood:
"You see these lifeless stumps of aspen wood—
Of sportive wood run wild: these pastoral farms,
The mountain, and the deep and gloomy wood,
Leave to the nightingale her shady wood;
Vanish inverted hill, and shadowy wood,
Nor leaf-crowned Dryad from a pathless wood,
In the green wood and hollow dell;
To a thick wood he soon is brought
Sky-ward he looks—to rock and wood—
This cry—that rings along the wood,
The like on heath, in lonely wood;
Ere they were lost within the shady wood;
The wayward brain, to saunter through a wood!
When, haply under shade of that same wood,
While we have wandered over wood and wild—
The dull leaf in this thick wood
Thundering adown a rocky wood.
Not there; but in dark wood and rocky cave,
In dreary billows, wood, and meagre cot,
Her beauty dazzles the thick wood;
Vallombrosa! I longed in thy shadiest wood
Pride of two nations, wood and lake and plains,
"Vallombrosa—I longed in thy shadiest wood
Amid a fertile region green with wood
Amid the trees of some thick wood,
Through park, or chase, or savage wood,
Among the ruins of a wood,
They tarried in the wood together.
O'er heaps of slain;—from Cambrian wood and moss
Their Gods of wood and stone; and, at the sound
Of dread Jehovah; then should wood and waste
For England's shame, O Sister Realm! from wood,
Where wood or stream by thee was never greeted.
That shines aloft, while through the wood
One impulse from a vernal wood
A stump of rotten wood.
And through the wood we went;
We may find pleasure: wilderness and wood,
If, mixed with what appeared of rock, lawn, wood,
Its brightest splendour round a leafy wood;
To cheerful intercourse with wood and field,
Or herries of the wood;
And where the wood was clear,
Bat straightway to a wood that was hard by,
Echoing thorough all the green wood wide.
Thou Woodman, in the distant wood!
That, o'er the ruins of the fallen wood,
Th' unwearied sweep of wood thy cliffs that scales,

Wood—continued.

The redrest peace had bury'd it in wood,
—Fierce comes the river down; the crashing wood
Winding it's dark-green wood and emerald glade,
Rang loud through the meadow and wood.
What God in whispers from the wood
Thus musing, in a wood I sate me down
In silence through a wood gloomy and still.
A frame locked up in wood and stone, doth still,
By scale exact, in model, wood or clay,
Inglorious, buried in the dusky wood:
Aghast and prayerless. Into a deep wood
Defenceless as a wood where tigers roam.
In wood or echoing cave, for discipline
The noise of wood and water, and the mist
And travelled through the wood, with no one near
Through many a wood and many an open ground
Or with some merry outlaws of the wood;
Through wood or open field, the harmless Man
Regions of wood and wide savannah, vast
By flowing stream, through wood, or craggy wild,
Like leaping underboughs, in some thick wood,
Fair Rosamond, and the Children of the Wood,
His old employments, goes to field or wood,
Of some thick wood, her place of covert, cleaves
Of meadow-flowers into a tuft of wood,
Woodbine. Or woodbine wreaths, a smoother path is wound;
In woodbine bower or birchen grove,
That mossy slope, o'er which the woodbine throws
The woodbine so, with spiral grace, and breathes
This Nook—with woodbine hung and straggling weed,
Hung with late-flowering woodbine, spread (While from the pendent woodbine came
The casement shade more luscious woodbine binds,
Woodhines. And woodhines were hanging above.
Wood-boy. I see a blooming Wood-boy there Wood-built. By naked huts, wood-built, and sown like tents
Woodcocks. Was heard, or woodcocks roamed the moonlight hill.
Or the first woodcocks roam'd the moonlight hills.
To range the open heights where woodcocks run
Wood-cottages. Here, on the brown wood-cottages they sleep,
Wood-crowned. The wood-crowned cliffs that o'er the lake recline;
Wooden. To the small wooden isle where, their work to hegule,
As aught by wooden images performed
Profuse in garniture of wooden cuts
The useless fragment of a wooden howl,
The wooden stools for everlasting use,
Wood-hut. To reach a small wood-hut hung boldly on the steep.
And hangs his small wood-hut upon the steeps.
Wood-huts. On the low brown wood-huts delighted sleep
Woodland. Her rocky sheepwalks, and her woodland bounds;
She had a rustic, woodland air,
Had been a wild and woodland rover;
The owl of evening and the woodland fox
Come, hear the woodland linnet,
Put on with speed your woodland dress;
With speed put on your woodland dress;
Strawberries on lane or woodland, offering wild
The pleasant melody of woodland birds.
And woodland pleasures,—the resounding horn,
Unthought of: in their woodland beds the flowers
Of happy instinct which the woodland bird
That is to come, the throng of woodland flowers, Woodland's. His flock, along the woodland's edge with relics sprinkled o'er
Woodlands. Crag, woodlands, waterfalls, and rills;
Far as the woodlands—with the trill to blend Woodlark. And the soft woodlark here did never chant
Woodman. Calls forth the woodman from his desert cell,
A woodman in the distant vale,
The Quantock woodman hears.
The Woodman knew, for such the craft
She sought in vain, the woodman smiled;
Thou Woodman, in the distant wood!
Calling the woodman from his desert cell,
I saw the quiet woodman in the woods,
If, when the woodman languished with disease
Woodman's. There was no road, nor any woodman's path;
No woodman's hut, no cottage light—
Th' unwearied glance of woodman's echo'd stroke;
Wood-nymph. Of panting Wood-nymph, wearied with the chase.
From Wood-nymph of Diana's throng?
Wood-nymph's. Running among the clouds a Woodnymph's race!
Wood's. See Pine-wood's.
Near the wood's edge—rest there to-night, I pray you:

Woods. Even here, amid the sweep of endless woods,
With towers and woods, a "prospect all on fire;"
O'er all its vanished dells, and lawns, and woods;
And gives, where woods the chequered upland
strew,
How fair its lawns and sheltering woods appear!
Or yell, in the deep woods, of lonely sound.
Whence lutes and voices down the enchanted woods
'Mid smoking woods gleams hid from morning's ray
Where, 'mid dim towers and woods, her waters
gleam.
There, safely guarded by the woods behind,
With rocks and gloomy woods her fertile fields:
And you mistake the cause: you hear the woods
Meanwhile the storm fell heavy on the woods;
And followed on, through woods of gloomy cedar,
"For here are woods, hills smooth and warm:
Among the woods and fields, and that the rocks,
But oft the woods renewed their green,
Enriched the earth, or Faery of the woods
From half-stripped woods and pastures bare,
She talked and sung the woods among,
Now laugh and be gay, to the woods away!
Among the woods and fields, we love you well,
And a small bed of water in the woods.
Among the woods and hills.
Through woods and on the green;
Touch—for there is a spirit in the woods.
An infant of the woods.
My helpmate in the woods to be,
His name in the wild woods,
The birds are singing in the distant woods;
I heard the woods and distant waters roar;
And them who dwell among the woods of Ure!"
His daily teachers had been woods and rills,
Of vagrant dwellers in the houseless woods,
O sylvan Wye! thou wanderer thro' the woods,
A lover of the meadows and the woods,
Of absence, these steep woods and lofty cliffs,
Who, for thy service trained in lonely woods,
Lo! the dwindled woods and meadows;
To rocks, fields, woods. Nor doth our human sense
(Above the general roar of woods and crags)
So, truant in waste woods, the blithe Euphrosyne!
With annual verdure, and revive the woods,
The woods, my Friends, are round you roaring,
There's nothing to be seen but woods,
All, all is silent—rocks and woods,
His Father through the loomesome woods,
From the dread chasm, woods climbing above
woods.
Whose mountains, torrents, lake, and woods, unite
Between the woods and lofty rocks;
Towers rent, winds combating with woods,
Hills, torrents, woods, embodied to bemock
Cliffs, woods and caves, her viewless steps resound
Is it by rocks and woods that man prevails?
Through tangled woods, impending rocks between;
And if, as Yarrow, through the woods
The river glides, the woods before me wave;
"Even she will to her peaceful woods
And still, 'mid you thick woods, the primal truth
Their radiance through the woods—may yet suffice
Who, as the fields and woods have given them birth,
'Mid woods and wilds, on Nature's craggy throne,
Rekindled thus, from dens and savage woods,
Blest while their Spirits from the woods ascend
To sit in leafy woods by fountains clear!
Thinned the rank woods; and for the cheerful
grange
—Young Romilly through Barden woods
Through woods and spacious forests,—to behold
The umbrageous woods are left—how far beneath!
Grieve for the land on whose wild woods his name
Into strange woods, where he at large may live
How fondly will the woods embrace
Ancient castle, woods, and mountains
But he could see the woods and plains,
That lit the dark slant woods with silvery white!
—As thro' th' astonish'd woods the notes ascend,
And gives, where woods the chequered upland
strew,
How fair its lawn and silvery woods appear!
Unfathom'd dells and undiscover'd woods;
That breath'd a death-like peace these woods around,
—Thy lake, mid smoking woods, that blue and grey
While fill each pause the ringing woods of morn.
I lov'd, mid thy most desert woods astray,
While mid dim towers and woods her waters gleam:
And insect buzz, that stuns the sultry shore
Of cabins, woods, and lawns a pleasant shore
There hears, protected by the woods behind,
Bosom'd in gloomy woods, her golden fields,
The woods, and distant Skiddaw's lofty height,
A lonely scene more lonesome, among woods,
On caves and trees, upon the woods and hills,
The woods of autumn, and their hazel bowers
Of rivers, woods, and fields. The passion yet . . .

Stirs in the mighty woods.—So did he speak:
Among steep hills and woods embosomed, flowed
Dived into caves, and pierced the matted woods,
Court the fresh air, explore the heaths and woods;
Winds pipe through fading woods; but those

Amid impending rocks and gloomy woods—
Woods waving in the wind their lofty heaths,
Through tall green silent woods and ruins grey.

wooded a Maid
How she wooed an English man;
And somewhat pensively he wooed:
Had wooed the Maiden, day and night
And life's unspiritual pleasures daily wooed!
No change;—the fair Isolda he had wooed
One wooed the silent Art with studious pains:
And wooed the artless daughter of the hills,
By the first Francis wooed, and bound to him
Lacked not, for love, fair objects whom they wooed

Word. That word was hasty. Ey! no more of it.
'Tis but a word and then— Something is here
Justice—is there not thunder in the word?
Wisdom, if Justice speak the word, beats down
That half a word should blow it to the winds!
I overheard the Villains—every word
Of visitation— A bold word from you!
Now, for a word about your Barony:
It is most strange. Murder!—what's in the word!—
Each word of that unhappy letter fell
Ay, in the word a thousand scorpions lodge:
He stopped his horses at the word,
'My cloak!' no other word she spake,
The other took him at his word,
But of this in my ears not a word did he speak;
If ever an obtrusive word were dropped
Yea, his first word of greeting was,—'All right
The word, by others dreaded, he can hear
No word of indignation or reproof,
For that her Master never uttered word
At the first word that Susan said
'I'll to the wood.'—The word scarce said,
'He shall depart to-morrow.' To this word
By word, look, deed, with hope that he might love again.
Fell down and clasped his knees for joy, not uttering word.
Each word greedier than the last;
A word from me was like a charm;
A parting word—though not of grace,
Gave the word—the horses heard
Choice word and measured phrase, above the reach
Scarce heard; nor word from word could I divide;
Alas! for him who gave the word;
Is in the Worn, that shall not pass away.
No word of kind commiseration
A word—which to his dying day
The ghostly word, thus plainly seen,
The very word was plainly heard,
How oft the malice of one luckless word
Nought but that word assigned to the unknown,
That solitary word—to separate
And, if the word had been fulfilled,
Fame taxes him,) that he could send forth word
Who on that day the word of onset gave!
And, mocking its own pledged word,
'Good morrow, Citizens!' a hollow word,
No sign of answer made to word or face:
He hears the word—he flies—
Of God's eternal Word, the Voice of Time
Parting, the casual word had power to reach
With thrilling word, and potent sign
Had freed his Realm, he pledged word
Spots where a word, ghost-like, survives to show
The Father had given solemn word
Pronounced the word,—and the Earls descry,
But word was given, and the trumpet sounded:
'The pledge obtained, the solemn word
Was then reviewed, and prompt word given,
Nor leaves her Speech one word to aid the sigh
In Gallic ears the unadulterate Word,
And speak the word —' Alas! of fearful things
The temples of their hearts who, with his word
Her Lord might worship and his word obey
An idle form, the Word an empty sound!
That my Redeemer liveth,—hears each word
Coil within coil, at noon-tide? For the Word
Whose sterner judgments deem that word a snare
In urgent contrast? To diffuse the Worn
And at the word right gladly he
Who had betrayed their country. The stern word
To every act, word, thought, and look of love,
With this day's work, in thought and word.
Thou hast a dungeon, speak the word!
No word to any man he utters,
Yet one word more—one farewell word—a wish
A suffering woman's word;
Thy smile is sure, Thy plighted word
From word to word according to the note:
Not one word have I now, I am so forlorn,—
And with that word, she into tears burst out
Without word uttered, forth he 'gan to pace;
Then (what is too true) without hitting a word,

Word—continued.

But hark the word!—the ship is gone;—
To that calm word a shriek replied,
All vanished in a single word,
Wert given to her) a Sister—'his a word
Like Lightning's eager for th' almighty word,
Love, at the word, before his mother's sight
The living Rock of God's eternal Word.
One word he softly uttered,
The trumpet of the Living Word
Long months of peace (if such bold word accord
Regretted!—that word, too, was on my tongue,
'Is something of more worth;'' and at the word
Or His pure Word by miracle revealed.
A passing word erewhile did lightly touch
Upon the word of heaven-impacted truth,
But every word that from the peasant's lips
Be mentioned as a parting word, that not
And every word he uttered, on my ears
That, fronted with a most imposing word,
The garb he wears is black as death, the word
Forth like a Polar summer: every word
I called on Darkness—before the word
Yet one word more of personal concern;—
Stern self-respect, a reverence for God's word,
Have somewhere found relief." He, at the word,
So speaking, on he went, and at the word
To speak the word—with rapture! Nature's boon,
With him can talk; nor blush to waste a word
Tyrants who utter the destroying word,
Whispering those truths in stillness, which the Word,
Should breathe a word tending to violate
And freak put on, and arch word dropped—to swell
Science severe, or word of holy Writ
Be yet far distant, let thy Word prevail,
Oh! let thy Word prevail, to take away
Towards him, bade-him leap, which word scarce said
A single word on Kings, and sons of Kings,
Word-preserving. Honour to word-preserving Arts, and hail
Words. Her he addressed in words of cheering sound;
But soon his voice and words of kind intent
Tempered fit words of hope; and the lark warbled near.
Proverbial words of comfort he applied,
With her last words, unable to suppress
You are wasting words; hear me then once for all:
Your words are precious to my ears; go on.
My words were rashly spoken; I recall them:
By heaven, his words are reason! Yes, my Friends,
To give it back again! What mean your words?
Through words and things, a dim and perilous way;
My own wild words? Young Man, the seed must lie
And all is safe: what said he? But few words:
And, though it smote me more than words can tell,
Why dost thou come to me with words like these?
Wild words for me to hear, for me, an orphan,
Thy perturbation, and these frantic words.
His words and tones and gestures, did but serve
And words that tell these things he heard in vain?
That may record my story: nor let words—
'Twas throwing words away; for still
Who of thy words dost make a mock'apparel,
Words which tenderness can speak:
Just as those final words were penned, the sun
broke out in power,
The Boy no answer made by words, but, so earnest was his look,
The Vicar did not hear the words: and now
Thus Elidure, by words, relieved his struggling heart.
'But, if my looks did with my words agree,
Tell that these words thy humbleness offend;
Muttered the Father.—From these words the Youth
Then with the father's name she coupled words
And then! his words were not a few,
(His very words I give to you),
First uttering, without words, a natural tone;
Luke had a manly heart; but at these words
Else these words would come like mockery,
Less impassioned words might tell
There's more in words than I can teach:
Have lutes (believe my words)
She says, in faint words by sighs broken,
To words of a forgotten tongue
In rueful words, with sobs between—
Made of wild words, her cup of wrong
And him with further words I thus bespake,
His words came feebly, from a feeble chest,
He with a smile did then his words repeat;
The words of ancient time I thus translate,
That those dear words should be fulfilled,
The Lady's words, when forced away
His tongue could whisper words of might.
Admit no bondage and my words have wings.
Your inarticulate notes with the voice of words!
'Temptation lurks among your words;
Even as he passed the door, these words
In loving words he talks to him,

 Fond words have oft been spoken to thee, Sleep ! 253 *Fond words 1
 Words cannot paint the o'ershadowing yew-tree bough,
 (Whether the instrument of words she use,
 Those words were uttered as in pensive mood
 Reader, farewell ! My last words let them be—
 As soon we shall be, may these words attest
 Of thy few words of English speech :
 —Strange words they seemed of slight and scorn ;
 With words of apprehension and despair :
 To France be words of invitation sent !
 Slaves, vile as ever were befooled by words,
 THE LIBERTY OF GREECE :—the words rebound
 Ah ! that a Conqueror's words should be so dear
 In words like these : "Up, Voice of song ! proclaim
 Inviting words—perchance already flung
 Yet sad as sweet,—for English words . . .
 The words of truth's memorial vow
 Had his sunk eye kindled at those dear words
 The tone of voice which wedded borrowed words
 Survive, uninjured ;—glory then to words,
 By casual outbreak of his passionate words,
 I raise my thoughts, inform my deeds and words,
 Spake bitter words ; words that did ill agree
 A Visitant by whom these words were uttered :—
 " Though vast thy power, thy words are weak ;"
 Attuned to words with sacred wisdom fraught ;
 To whom the words were softly said,
 And fervent words a passage found,
 And even this Creature ! " which words saying,
 Sad words to that mute Animal,
 His last words in the yew-tree shade,
 His farewell words ; and by the same,
 His words, more calmly thus pursued,
 Words which she slighted at that day ;
 But here her Brother's words have failed ;
 His words remains for her, and loves,
 And everlasting deeds to burning words ! . . .

 Charged with rich words poured out in thought's defence ; . . .

 Is Nature felt, or can be ; nor do words,
 Bold words affirmed, in days when faith was strong
 Authentic words be given, or none !

 Hush, feeble lyre ! weak words refuse
 And the whole person. Words have something told
 Breathed out these words :—" Here daily do we sit,
 In thy calm presence those heart-moving words :
 Words that can soothe, more than they agitate ;
 Words that require no sanction from an oath,

 Why alle upon a few weak words to say
 Take firmer hold of us, and words themselves
 Of words in tuneful order, found them sweet

 Had burst innocuous. Say in holder words,
 Some words of indirect reproof had been
 And gave it vent in her last words. O Friend !

Cased in the gleaming mail the monarch wore,
Of my associates: some of these wore swords
The beauty wore of promise—that which stands by
Her cottage, then a cheerful object, wore
Such the reward he sought; and wore out life,
What arms the son of bright Aurora wore,

In airy baskets hanging, work and sing.
The work of Freedom daring to oppose,
For years the work of carriage did not cease,
And when the miserable work was done
Heavier than work, raised it: within that hut
Nor moves her hands to any needful work:
And tell me if 'tis fit for such a work.

And the poor Boy was busier still, with work of anxious heed.

92 Poet's Dream 36

Employed in winter's work. Upon the stone
I went my work about;
"The winds are now devising work for me!"
It was because the other was at work.
To such convenient work as might employ
The Housewife plied her own peculiar work,
To stop her in her work: for, when she lay
With daylight Isabel resumed her work;
Lay thrown together, ready for the work.
I toiled and toiled; God blessed me in my work,
"This was a work for us; and now, my Son,
It is a work for me. But, lay one stone—
A work which is not here; a covenant
The Shepherd went about his daily work
And left the work unfinished when he died.
In the world's eye. Her work when daylight failed
My father for slave's work may seek a slave in mind."

A wiser spirit is at work for us,
Of shadowy things work endless changes,—there,
Alone, beneath this fairy work of earth.
"Your impious work forbear: perish what may,
Has failed; too slowly moves the promised work.
To watch crude Nature work in untaught minds;
And from his work this moment had been stolen)
A work completed to our hands, that lays,
When'er it comes! needful in work so long,
'Tis true, had gone before this hour, dire work
A work of honour; think not that to this.
I added, work of safety: from all doubt
Into one service, busy with one work.
A prime enchantress—to assist the work,
That throwing off oppression must be work,
Where passions had the privilege to work,
Than suit the work we fashion, might set forth
Work for the reasoning faculty enthroned.
A privilege whereby a work of his,
That yet survive, a work, as some divine,
Willing to work and to be wrought upon,
No other can divide with thee this work:
Of building up a Work that shall endure.
To thee the work shall justify itself.
Of firmer trust, joint labourers in the work
Before thee, LONSDALE, and this Work present,
After his daily work, until the light
In house or garden, any casual work
And he would leave his work—and to the town
She told me—interrupting not the work
Most willingly she put her work aside,
From week to week,) I found to be a work
Heaven bless them, and their inconsiderate work!
To lonely nature's casual work: they bear
This universe shall pass away—a work
At the fond work, demolished with a touch;
A sightless labourer, whistles at his work—
Oh! there is laughter at their work in heaven!
That had beguiled the work from which he came,
By intermingled work of house and field

Worked. The Horses have worked with right good-will.
 He might have worked for ever.
 Worked with a dim and undetermined sense
Worketh. That worketh out of view;
Working. See Inly-working.

That 'tis thy mother's heart which is working so in thee?
 A most strange working did I see;
 On working out an ill intent?
 In working out a pure intent?
 And each tumultuous working left behind
 Off, working by her Husband's side,
 The shores and channels, working Nature's will
 Working but in alliance with the works
 Working within us,—nothing less, in truth,
 Man free, man working for himself, with choice
 In a strong wind, some working of the spirit,
 Are various engines working, not the same
 Were working the broad bosom of the lake
 Working through love, such conquest shall it gain,
 The shores and channels, working Nature's will

Workings. I unobserved could see the workings of her face:
 My song the workings of her heart expressed.
 The workings of his heart.
 Amid my strongest workings evermore
 Were all like workings of one mind, the features
 To sanction the proud workings of the soul,
Workman. (Workman worthy to be sainted)
Workmanship. Uncouth the workmanship, and rude!

Of airy workmanship whereon we stood,
 (October's workmanship to rival May)
 Of his best workmanship by plan and tool.
 Inscrutable workmanship that reconciles
 Of nicest workmanship; that once had held
Workmen. These mighty workmen of our later age,
Work's. Her work and her work's partners she can cheer,
 Their work's foundation, gave with careful hand.

Works. See Fireworks.
 Abortive joy, and hope that works in fear;
 The least of Nature's works, one who might move
 His good works will be balm and life to him.
 —Some little I've seen of blind boisterous works
 Fond spirit that blindly works in the blood of all—
 All works which I was wont to do alone,
 Now she works with three or four,
 His station is there; and he works on the crowd,
 The spectacle, how pure!—Of Nature's works,
 Of good and pious works Thou art the seed,
 Now and for ever, She, to works that came
 Shed gentle favours: rural works are there,
 By Works of spirit high and passion pure!
 —Long may these homely Works devised of old,
 Doth sometimes here predominate, and works
 How subtly works man's weakness, sighs may heaven

Which Angels make, on works of love descending.
 Whose good works formed an endless retinue:
 On Earth, who works in the heaven of heavens, alone.
 And, 'mid the works of skillful hands,
 But they and their good works are fled,
 Works busy as the lightning; but instinct
 Prompt transformation works the novel Lore;
 Of good works, mingling with the visions, raise
 By works of Art, that shed, on the outward frame
 To her fair works did Nature link
 For still, the more he works, the more
 Yet, like a tool of Fancy, works
 Works not the righteousness of God? Oh bend,

Imagination works with bolder hope
 The spear, yet gave to works divine
 Of fields with rural works, of hill and dale,
 By their good works exalted, lofty minds,
 In works of love, in these alone,
 And poured out truth in works by thoughtful love
 Inspired—works potent over smiles and tears.
 To works that ne'er shall forfeit their renown,

Works—continued.

Not with the mean and vulgar works of man,
 Which, like a tempest, works along the blood
 Working but in alliance with the works
 And slipped into the ordinary works
 To minister to works of high attempt—
 Works which the enthusiast would perform with love.
 To the end and written spirit of God's works,
 The consecrated works of Bard and Sage,
 Where still it works, though hidden from all search
 'Tis just that in behalf of these, the works,
 A dignity, a smoothness, like the works
 It comes, to works of unproved delight,
 From the great Nature that exists in works
 In summer, making quest for works of art,
 That streamlet whose blue current works its way
 Crowded with Gemli busy among works
 From early converse with the works of God
 That after a short space works less and less,
 Reading of nations and their works, in faith,
 And all the homely in their homely works,
 On works of love or freedom, or revolved
 But indignation works when hope is not,
 Fields with their rural works; recalled to mind
 That intermingles with those works of man
 To which she summons him; although the works
 The works of man and face of human life;
 Her works, as they present to Fancy's choice Wisdom, which works thro' patience; thence he learned

By loneliness, and goodness, and kind works,
 Rudely to mock the works of toiling Man.
 And, by their aspects, signifying works
 And ocean, and look down upon the works,
 "Those pleasing works the Housewife's skill produced:
 In works of havoc; taking from these vales,
 Where nature works in wild and craggy spots,
 And at the self-same moment, works its way
 That works but by extinction? On themselves
 And in good works; and him, who is endowed
 And of his works: or, yielding to the bent
 The works by faith ordained. Pursue thy path,

 Through tears have seen him towards that world descend
 "Bad is the world, and hard is the world's law
 For all this world can give. Nay, be composed:
 The majesty of Him who rules the world
 Seemed to remember me. To the wide world
 That things will work to ends the slaves of the world
 The world is poisoned at the heart. What mean you?
 But in a world like ours— This self-same Man—
 Of foul pollution— The whole visible world
 But have they not a world of common ground
 So meet extremes in this mysterious world,
 For such a world as this. The wise abjure
 The faintest breath that breathes can move a world;
 Of all this world is solved, well may we envy
 The world in substance, not deceive by show,
 I am spited by the world—
 You are safe; the whole world shall not harm you.
 With horror is this world) am unto thee
 Yet all in the broad highway of the world.
 That God who made the great hook of the world
 Seems the wide world, far brighter than before!
 And all the world appears unkind
 The smiles, worth all the world to me

Arabian fiction never filled the world
 Beneath a sun that wakes a weary world
 First cam'st into the world—as oft befalls
 From her narrow world, she passed for evermore.
 When, to the attractions of the busy world
 Of things that in the great world be,
 To this lower world descending,
 And first—thy sinless progress, through a world
 This untried world, and to prepare thy way
 Because not of this noisy world, but silent and divine!
 That we were in a world of woe,
 "Before me shone a glorious world—
 Far from the world I walk, and from all care;
 Of all this unintelligible world.
 Unprofitable, and the fever of the world,
 From this green earth; of all the mighty world
 Whence thou dost pour upon the world a flood
 The invisible world with thee hath sympathised;
 How beautiful the world below;
 'Mid the blank world of snow and ice,
 Won from the world of mind, dost thou prepare

Worm—continued.

The far-fetched worm with pleasure would disown
Where the charm'd worm of pain shall gnaw no more.

The voiceless worm on the unfrequented hills,
Of dust, and kindred to the worm; a Being,
And, the meek worm that feeds her lonely lamp
The trailing worm reprove her thoughtless pride?

Worm-like. Should start out of his earthy, worm-like state,

Worm's. See Glow-worm's.
Appears his lot, to the small Worm's compared,

Worms. See Glow-worms.
Or hidden under ground, like sleeping worms.

Wormy. Though under covert of the wormy ground!

Worn. See Deep-worn, Foot-worn, Knee-worn, Time-worn, Toll-worn, War-worn, Wave-worn, Way-worn, Weary-worn.

Were hardy, though his cheek seemed worn with care
You seem worn out with travel—shall I support you?

And in the Churchyard sod her feet have worn
That a fierce storm o'ertook us, worn with travel,
Fallen am I, and worn out, a useless Man;
Which he himself had worn. And now, at last,
Thy royal mantle worn . . .
To greet us—and we saw a Man worn down
A heart more wakeful; and had worn the track
How they in sprightly dance are worn . . .

FLOWER OF THE WINDS, beneath her bosom worn—
She to the very bone was worn,
The prize, or he content to see it worn
Is won, and by all Nations shall be worn!
That simple crest, a heron's plume, is worn.
To night, the desecrated floors are worn
With fasts, with vigils worn, depressed by years,
Nor deem it strange; the Youth had wore
For these, and hopes and recollections worn
Worn at the breast of some grave Dame
Grown sad as night—no seemly garb is worn,
Hourly exposed to death, with famine worn,
Glad music! yet there he that, worn with pain
Nemean victor's brow; less bright was worn,
And, when Thou art past service, worn away,
The track that was, and is, and must be, worn
But Ceres, in her garland, might have worn
In those unworthy vestments worn
That you have worn a sword,
Worn out and worthless. While from door to door,
So shall that earthly crown thy brows have worn . . .

How bright a face is worn when joy of one
Worn out in greatness, stripp'd of novelty,
Of spurious notions—worn as open signs
And of design not wholly worn away . . .
Track leading into track; how marked, how worn
Worn in the moorland, till I overtook . . .
Worn by his daily visits to and from
Of the path worn by mournful tread of her
To his worn cheek; or with uneasy shame
By all that breathe in Troy, how tired and worn . . .

Worn-out. Why thus that worn-out wretch must there sustain . . .
We kill a worn-out horse, and who but women
An easy seat this worn-out Labourer found
And momentary hope, and worn-out prayer,
—Come, labour, when the worn-out frame requires Worse. But yesterday was worse than all; at last Worse is he far, far worse (if foul dishonour
Be worse than death) to that confiding Creature.
Some thought far worse of him, and judged him
wrong;

Where art thou, worse to me than dead?
The Mother, in her turns of anguish, worse
And Susan's growing worse and worse,
And, as her mind grew worse and worse,
"Worse than idle is compassion
I trespassed lately worse than ever—
The better fortune or the worse;
Is hardly worse beset than mine,
'Tis worse than any funeral bell;
'O Ruth! I have been worse than dead;
Of a wild dream, or worse illusion;
Some visitation worse than all
Change for the worse might please, incursion bold
And worse, against ourselves,
Beneath worse ailments of the mind.
Renouncing here, as worse than dead,
There is a bondage worse, far worse, to bear . . .

But worse, more ignorant in love and hate,
In worn than former helplessness—and lie
Our ancient freedom; else 'twere worse than vain
—So bad proceeded propagating worse;
All worse assaults may safely be defied,
Sickened than the product of that dismal night,
Sickened by injuries, dreading worse designed,
Self-doomed, to worse inaction, till his eye
To evil for a guard against worse ill,
Oft worse to bear, or deadlier in effect.

Worse—continued.

May rise to break it: effort worse than vain
Far oftener then, had ushering worse event,
For thou art worse than mad a thousand fold;
To be a Prodigal's Favourite—then, worse truth,

Such sights, or worse, as are before me here—
And the worse fear of future ill (which oft
Worse than the Dragon that howled low his crest,
No fear had they of had becoming worse,
The same in quality,—that, as the worse
That he, who would sow death, reaps death, or worse,

True is it, where oppression worse than death
A worse affliction in the plague of war:
And he continued, when worse days were come,
From vain, and, that worse evil, vexing thoughts,
If the flowers wither, I am worse than dead!
Change manifold, for better or for worse:
—Yet, while the better part is missed, the worse
But worse affliction must he borne—far worse;
These freaks are worse than any sick man's dream.
Shame of such dye, but worse remains behind.

Worship. See After-worship.

Where thousands meet to worship God under a mighty Dome;
United worship; or in mute repose
Still constant in her worship, still Consul for life. With worship France proclaims
In a blind worship; I mean perversely hold
Their heads in sign of worship, Nature's God,
And worship, seemed a recompense
To worship in simplicity
Of worship, glory and grace, which who shall blame
Can they, in faith and worship, train the mind
And worship him in spirit and in truth.
Lifting them up, the worship to confound
Her Lord might worship and his word obey
In worship neither raised nor limited
Thy worship is performed and precious laud;
To worship aye, and he forgot it not;
And, for the worship of His Mother dear,
Thence worship comes, content and true heart's
pleasure,

Whose worship, 'mid remotest village trees,
Full early trained to worship seemliness,
To think, to hope, to worship, and to feel,
A different worship. Fioally, whate'er
Of the Charthouse, for worship. Thus was man
Pay fruitless worship to humanity,
To meet for worship on that central height)—
Of public worship, where, the glowing phrase
To worship, here, and everywhere—as one
Adore, and worship, when you know it not;
Who seek the House of worship, while the bells
The existing worship; and with those compared,
And worship Mayors, Tipstafs, Aldermen and all.
Worshipful. In loyalty, and worshipful desire, Worshipped. In old time worshipped as the god of verse,

Was worshipped, or where Man abode;
O still beloved, once worshipped! Time, that frowns
The Druids worshipped, or the antique walls
Is worshipped in that idol proudly named
I worshipped thee, and find thee but a Shade!
When British floods were worshipped, some faint trace

Worshipper. A worshipper of Nature, hither came
Or cease to please the fickle worshipper;

Worshippers. Of worshippers kneeling to their up-rised God?
Whether the worshippers entreat
As his own worshippers; and Nile, reclined
To kneeling Worshippers no earthly floor
And, 'mid the simple worshippers, perchance
Its simple worshippers from sun and shower.
Of his devoted worshippers, far-stretched,
How many scrupulous worshippers fall down
The worshippers how innocent and blest!

Worship'pst. And worship'pst at the Temple's inner shrine,

Worshipping. Worshipping then among the depth of things,

Worst. Nay, you have had the worst. Ferocity
'Tis that worst principle of ill which dooms
At my worst need, my crimes have in a net
To fear the very worst. My father is dead;
And faithful service of his heart in the worst that might ensue

I only pray to know the worst;
Yon minarets, would gladly leave for his worst
home."

That is the worst of his employment:
Yet, in his worst pursuits I ween
The worst of Fortune's malice, wert Thou near,
Call thee worst Tyrant by which Flesh is cross?
Was the worst pang that sorrow ever bore,
That triumph, when the very worst, the pain,
In the worst moment of these evil days;
Privation's worst extremities, and die . . .

Worst—continued.

'Tis well, for he the worst defied
Worst Traitor of them all is he,
Through life's worst trials, whether shocks or snares,

For thy worst rage, forgotten. Oft as Spring
A little part, and that the worst, he sees
With the worst shape mock-patience ever wore;

For worst offenders: though the heart will weave
On best or worst which they and Nature give?
And, worst of all, a treasonable growth
Great rendezvous of worst and best, the walk
For worst to them was come; nor would have stirred,

He, on his part, accoutred for the worst,
Or personal memory of his own worst wrongs,
In which worst losses easily might wear
So that worst tempests might be listened to.
Under worst trials, was I driven to think
Who, in her worst distress, had ofttimes felt
Ethereal natures and the worst of slaves;

Worthier. A thing worth further notice, we must act
A thought that's worth a thousand worlds! I grieve
Than you have entered, were it worth the pains.
Pray tell me what this land is worth by the acre.
Even so thy latent worth will re-appear,
He was among the prime in worth,

Worthies. 'Mid those surrounding Worthies, haughty
Kings,
Among the humbler Worthies, at our feet

865 Excursion 7. 537

Worthiest. And Love, when worthiest of his name,
"Wherefore in praise, the worthiest that I may,
Stand near the worthiest of Antiquity)

Worthily. Shall worthily rehearse the hideous rout,
Exalted office, worthily sustained!

Worthiness. To tell abroad thy mighty worthiness,
Of grace and honour, power and worthiness.

Worthless. For worthless brows, while in the pensive shade
Worn out and worthless. While from door to door,

Worthy. See Ill-worthy.
Esteemed you worthy to conduct the affair
Worthy the hearing. Fool was I to dream

A KING more worthy of respect and love
For thou art worthy,
(Workman worthy to be sainted)
"O Lady, worthy of earth's proudest throne!

It gladdens me, O worthy, short-lived, Youth!
A Poet worthy of Rob Roy
As worthy of your wonder."
A Champion worthy of the stream,
More worthy of this favoured Spot;

A labour worthy of eternal youth!
The eagle worthy of her ancestry?
How beautiful! how worthy to be sung
But worthy of the name she bore

Be strong;—be worthy of the grace
Such Priest, when service worthy of his care
Well worthy to be magnified are they
And thy bold rocks are worthy of their fame.

Yet wants heaven knows what to be worthy the name.

He will seem worthy of your love.
And Canute (fact more worthy to be known)
All ranks! What Sovereign, worthy of the name,

For that which is most worthy to be blest;
Let the new Church be worthy of its aim,
Am worthy of myself! Praise to the end!

More worthy of a poet's love, a hut,
These walks well worthy to be prized and loved—
Do find a worthy fellow-labourer there—
Worthy of liberty, all spirits filled

Worthy of poets who attuned their harps
Which, seeing little worthy or sublime
Most worthy then of trust when most intense.
I cried, "more worthy of regard, the Power,

And only then, be worthy of her name:
Of those pure altars worthy; ministers
Survives, for worthy mention, of a pair
Less worthy, less religious even, than his!

And common; yet all worthy if fulfilled
Wot. (I wot not what ill tongue has wronged him with you)
And for delight, but how I never wot,

As thou dost in thy throat, I wot not how.
Would. (Partial list.) See 'Twould.
And nothing less would satisfy him? No less;

Should yet be true? Would it were possible!
I thought the Convent never would appear;
Father, I would not change that sacred feeling
Would fail you ere our journey's end be reached.

Would stoop to skulk about a Cottage door—
Good Host, such tendance as you would expect
And for less fee than I would let him run
A look of mine would send him scouring back,

Now she is gone, I fain would call her back.
That noise!—would I had gone with her as far
More speedily than you helike would wish.
And suddenly grew black, as he would die.

Oh, Sir, you would not talk thus, if you knew
How would you like to travel on whole hours
As if my heart would burst; and so I left him.
Would wreak on us the passion of the moment.

I would preserve thee. How may this he done?
Would there perhaps have gathered the first fruits
Would drive those Scottish Rovers to their dens
That would have been a vile mischance. It would.

The torrent would have dashed an oak to splinters.
I swear the sight of him would quell me more
Your piety would not miss its due reward;
The little Orphan then would be your succour,

I would so long have struggled with my Nature,
'Twelve honest men, plain men, would set us right;
How his old heart would leap to hear her steps,
Would I could find the old Man and his Daughter.

Should he, by tales which would draw tears from
iron,
How you would be disturbed by this dire news,
That would have loved the bright-haired Boy!

Where wreaths of vapour tracked a winding brook,
By a dim lantern's light I saw that wreaths
Before you hang my wreaths to tell
Green to the very door; and wreaths of smoke
And though for bridal wreaths and tokens true
Rich fragrance in emhodied wreaths;
Wreaths that endure affliction's heaviest shower,
Luxuriant wreaths around thy forehead hoar;
Adorned with wreaths of myrtle;
Those palms and amarantine wreaths
And fittest serve to crown with fragrant wreaths
Wide-spreading odours from her flowery wreaths.

Yea, his first word of greeting was,—“ All right
Which they are touching; yea far brighter, even
Share their empyrean spirits—yea,
Men, women, children, yea the frame
Yea! even the Stranger from afar,
Yea, both for souls who God's forbearance try,
Yea, all, that now enchants thee, from the day
Yea, veriest reptiles have sufficed to prove
“ What, you are stepping westward? ”—“ Yea.”
Yea, let our Mary's one companion child—
Yea, what were mighty Nature's self?
The Boy had seen her, yea, more bright;
Yea, many overcome in spite
Yea, trusting in God's holy aid,
Yea, by her brother's very name,
Yea, offered up this noble Brood,
Yea, like a heavenly messenger
Yea, like a ship at random blown
Yea, his dry bones to ashes are consumed
Yea, many, haply wont to entertain
Shun not this Rite, neglected, yea abhorred,
Yea, for thy fellow-brutes in thee we saw
Or charm it out of memory; yea, might fill
Yea, to celestial Choirs, GRACE DARLING's name!
Yea, to the stars, if they were horn
I should have died, yea many hours ago
Yea, hath it? use, quoque she, this medicine;
Yea, appertained by a peculiar right
Beneath the wave, yea, in the wave itself,
Yea, our blind Poet, who, in his later day,
Yea, all the adamantine holds of truth
The other that was a god, yea many gods,
Enow to stir for these; yea, will I say
Though mutually unknown, yea, nursed and reared
Yea, when a glimpse of those imperial hovers
Was agitated; yea, I could almost
Yea, afterwards—truth most painful to record!—
Yea, could not but be right, because we saw
Yea, the whole body of society
Wrought for them in old time; yea, not unmoved,
Yea, never thought of judging; with the gift
Yea, by the very mourners who had knelt
Yea, with her own incorporated, by power
Rejected, yea repelled; and, if with scorn
Past or to come; yea, boldly might I say,
Yea, to avenge her violated rights,
Of those two boys! yea in the very words
Yea almost on the Mind herself, and seems Beheld without compassion, yea, with praise!
Up to their highest measure, yea and more.
Yea to this hour I cannot read a tale
Yean. A faithful nurse thou hast; the dam that did thee yean
Yeaned. Weak as a lamb the hour that it is yeaned;
Year. Remembered half the year and hoped the rest
Inmate of lonesome Nature's endless year;
All perished—all in one remorseless year;
Pluck them, and another year
You'll find a task for half a year.
A long, long year before.
Is the longest of the year.
Lord of heaven's unchanging year!
A Shepherd-lad; who ere his sixteenth year
Year after year the old man still kept up
And travel with the year at a soft pace.
The threshold of another year;
To the new year a welcoming;
Hark! the death-note of the year
And every year increased my store.
“ Year after year my stock it grew;
So lived he till his eightieth year was past.
Which, going by from year to year, had found,
And now, when Luke had reached his eighteenth
year,
And now, when he had reached his eighteenth year,
Year followed year, my Brother! and we two,
From year to year the spacious floor
And all the year the bower is green.
My father many a happy year
Child of the Year! that round dost run
When the year was in its prime,
Through “ heaven's eternal year.”—Yet hail to Thee,
Through all the changes of the year,
Soft clouds, the whitest of the year,
That she in half a year was mad,
The hour that in a distant year.
“ In vain, through every changeful year,
That undivided we from year to year
Months perish with their moons; year treads on
year;
Through the long year the House of Prayer would seek
Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the year;
Secure foundations. As the year runs round,
And, through the sunny portion of the year,
As if his hues were of the passing year,
From year to year this shaggy Mortal went Another year!—another deadly blow!

Y

Yard. See Churchyard, Graveyard.

Yards. But ere ten yards were gone her footsteps did she stay.
That, till full fifty yards were gone,
So said, so done; and masts, sails, yards,
Not five yards from the mountain path,
And to the left, three yards beyond,
And, for full fifty yards around,
And one, not four yards distant, near a well.
Not four yards from the broad highway:
Went twice two hundred yards or more,
Yarrow. And see the Braes of Yarrow.
“ Let Yarrow folk, I'rae Selkirk town,
Go back to Yarrow, 'tis their own;
Nor turn aside to Yarrow.
To go in search of Yarrow?
“ What's Yarrow but a river bare,
I thus could speak of Yarrow!
And sweet is Yarrow flowing!
Into the dale of Yarrow.
There's such a place as Yarrow.
“ Be Yarrow stream unseen, unknown!
‘Twill be another Yarrow!
The bonny holms of Yarrow!
And is this—Yarrow?—This the Stream
A blue sky bends o'er Yarrow vale,
Of Yarrow Vale lay bleeding?
Bear witness, rueful Yarrow!
With Yarrow winding through the pomp
Loved Yarrow, have I won thee;
Thy genuine image, Yarrow!
‘Twill be another Yarrow.” Prophecy
When first I looked on Yarrow;
And if, as Yarrow, through the woods
Hast shed the power of Yarrow;
As thy own Yarrow gave to me
Flow on for ever, Yarrow Stream!
Shalt take thy place with Yarrow!
A name more sad than Yarrow.
I saw the Stream of Yarrow glide
And death upon the braes of Yarrow,
With sharper grief is Yarrow smitten,
Yarrow's. On Yarrow's banks let herons feed,
“ Oh! green,” said I, “ are Yarrow's holms,
In Yarrow's groves were centred;
Yawn. And yawn for his unworthy sake,
Yawning. And through the yawning fissures old,
And tempt the icy valley yawning deep,
Ye, omitted.
Yea. I did believe all things were shadows—yea,
Yea, from the utmost corners of the earth,
Of penitential anguish, yea with tears.

Year—continued.

A dungeon dark! where he must waste the year,
 And thus from year to year his walk they thwart,
 Within its awful caves.—From year to year
 Lulling the year, with all its cares, to rest!
 Thus doth she keep, from year to year,
 Equal to his deserts, who, like the year,
 As through a zodiac, moves the ritual year
 Year after year I strove, but strove in vain,
 The opening of the year.
 We for the year to come may take
 And all the long year through the heir
 The whole year through.
 Shall find thee through all changes of the year:
 These vespers of another year,
 In flows the joyous year,
 "Another year is ours,"
 The whole day long, and all days of the year.

With thy Forerunners that through many a year
 Was like the crowding of the year
 Of pillars, branching off from year to year,
 Through the vicissitudes of many a year—
 That learned in that school from year to year
 For yet had I heard none, of all that year,
 The same as they had chosen for the year,
 Nor has the rolling year twice measured,
 "Rocking as in a dream the tedious year,"
 Such ministry, when ye through many a year
 Of exercise and play, to which the year
 The faces of the moving year, even then
 We ran a boisterous course; the year span round
 Through three divisions of the quartered year
 To passive minds. My seventeenth year was come;
 Far distant, thus beheld from year to year
 And the whole year breathed tenderness and love.
 Year after year, a punctual visitant
 Preserved, I moved about, year after year.
 She must be visitant the whole year through,
 Distinguished. Scarcely was a year thus spent
 Domestic carage now filled the whole year,
 In times long past; but still, from year to year,
 From his sixth year, the Boy of whom I speak,
 And thus before his eighteenth year was told,
 Amid the hounties of the year, the peace
 In the short course of one undreaded year,
 Through the long year in constant quiet bound,
 Abides, from year to year, a genuine Priest,
 In peace, from morn to night, from year to year.
 A true reflection of the circling year.
 These ornaments, that fade not with the year,
 From year to year in loneliness of soul;
 Year after year is added to his store
 That there should pass a moment of the year,
 To time and season, as the year rolled round?
 What lamentable change, a year—a month—
 Their happy year spins round. The youth obeys
 And make the chalice of the big round year
 Through all the seasons of the changeful year,
 Life will pass on, the year, if years be given,
 Days through Heaven's eternal year:
 And now when he had reached his eighteenth year,
 Year after year, with many a sleep between,
 He well remembers, though the year be gone.
 Faithful companions, yet another year
 From year to year, not shunning Man's abode,
 Pass with a thought the life of the whole year
 And months, and let me add the long year through.

Yearly. See Half-yearly.

Yeann. For better lore would seldom yearn, Yearned. Which men call Earth," have yearned to seek,

Yearning. Yet does my yearning heart to thee
 That make the good, tow'rds which he's yearning,
 "Learn, by a mortal yearning, to ascend—
 A yearning survives which few hearts shall withstand:

Out of a farewell yearning—favoured more
 With yearning toward some philosophic song
 Appeased his yearning—in the after-day
 "What other yearning was the master tie
 And over-constant yearning;—there—there lies
 Shall he feel yearning to those lifeless forms, Yearnings. When kindred thoughts and yearnings bear

Yearnings she hath in her own natural kind,
 In later youth to yearnings of a love.
 And damp those yearnings which had once been mine—

Dumb yearnings, hidden appetites, are ours,
 Nor tender yearnings, wanting for my good
 And confidential yearnings, tow'rds its home, years. That is transported to excess; that yearns,
 Year's. Through the year's successive portals;
 A last year's nest, conspicuously built
 My last year's friends together.

Proved last year's leaves, pushed from the spray
 Our roads, through many a long year's space,
 And while the youthful year's prolific art—
 Aught of the fading year's inclemency!

Year's—continued.

When Nature marks the year's decline,
 Tempers the year's extremes;
 The last year's cup whose Ram or Heifer gained,

Years. See Half-years.

For years the work of carnage did not cease,
 The red-breast, known for years, which at my casement pecked.

"Two years were passed since to a distant town
 Three years a wanderer now my course I head—
 Your pains shall ever with your years increase?"—
 And, through all converse of our later years,
 Where now we dwell.—For many years I hore
 I'd wager on his life for twenty years.
 Ten years; and no one ever heard her voice;
 He has been two years in his grave. Enough.
 These ten years she has moved her lips all day
 These ten years she had sate all day alone.
 Three good round years, for playing the fool here
 Over your head twice twenty years must roll,
 These fifteen years— Ha! speak—what Thing art thou

Where, hid from me, he counted many years,
 The Blessing of my later years
 She was eight years old, she said;
 I have a boy of five years old;
 For what may he thy lot in future years.
 (Ten years scarcely had she fold)

Your years make up one peaceful family;
 And see, that with our threescore years and ten
 (For many years ago I passed this road)
 Was two years taller: 'twas a joy to see,
 And though of unripe years, a stripling only,
 Had clothed the Ewhanks for a thousand years—
 Twelve years are past since we had tidings from him.
 (It will be twelve years since when Spring returns)
 You say that he saw many happy years
 It had been caught mid-way; and there for years
 All that the Priest had said, his early years.
 And those that Milton loved in youthful years;
 Help us to tell Her tales of years gone by,
 O weary struggle! silent years
 And there is one whom I five years have known;

Three years had Barbara in her grave been laid

For years to me are sad and dull;
 Seven years, alas! to have received
 Years to a mother bring distress;
 And for its promises to future years,
 The high-born Vaudracour was brought, by years
 Of their maturer years, his present mind.
 And should he live a thousand years,
 Five years of happiness or more
 These fourteen years, by strong indentures;
 Though younger than himself full twenty years.
 When Michael, telling o'er his years, began
 Thus living on through such a length of years,
 Two steady roses that were five years old,
 But soon as Luke, full ten years old, could stand
 "I have been toiling more than seventy years,
 And see so little gain from threescore years.
 Till I was forty years of age, not more
 Years after he had heard this heavy news.
 The length of full seven years, from time to time,
 Three years, or little more, did Isabel
 Years contracting to a moment,
 Reflected from the years gone by,
 Years after we are gone and in our graves,
 From years of quiet industry, to love
 So distant from us now for two long years,
 And yet, just three years back—no more—
 Seven widowed years without my Jane,
 Thirty years or more, and yet
 A thousand years are but as yesterday;
 Not less capacious than a thousand years.
 From hiding-places ten years deep;
 Three years she grew in sun and shower,
 The touch of earthly years.

Hangs a Thrush that sings loud, it has sung for three years:
 And Ruth, not seven years old,
 "What days and what bright years! Ah me!
 "Full twenty years are past and gone
 Her thirty years of winter past,
 Of years be on her!—She shall reap
 Five years have past; five summers, with the length

For future years. And so I dare to hope,
 Through all the years of this our life, to lead
 To blow against thee: and, in after years,
 That after many wanderings, many years
 Medea's spells dispersed the weight of years,
 The hours are past—too brief had they been years;
 On which four thousand years have gazed
 With rolling years thy strength increased;
 As doth with mellowing years agree,
 Our threescore years and ten.
 Of all his years—a company
 The golden years maintained a course

Years—continued.

Yet evermore, through years renewed
 To vanish—fleet as days and months and years,
 O Silence! are Man's noisy years
 "He, two-and-thirty years or more,
 Though he has been, full thirty years,
 Through years that have been long asleep!
 And many years did this poor Ass,
 Those many records of my childish years,
 That neither present time, nor years unborn
 Owed many years of early liberty.
 And pensive monitor of fleeting years!
 In this deep knell, silent for threescore years,
 Couldst thou go back into far-distant years,
 And many years ensuing,
 Twice seven consenting years have shed
 God shield thee to thy latest years!
 The toils and struggles of thy infant years!
 "If Care with freezing years should come,
 The weight of more than seventy years,
 Till he was ten years old.
 Along a track of most unnatural years;
 What stores for years to come!
 An uncouth Chronicle of glorious years.
 Years followed years, and when, upon the eve
 Life's cup when almost filled with years, like mine.
 With fasts, with vigils worn, depressed by years,
 More readily the more my years require
 Murmuring but one smooth story for all years,
 Becomes with all her years a vision of the Mind.
 Thousands of years before the silent air
 Like vapours, years have rolled and spread;
 Of years hence remote, had dwelt, prepared to try
 When years of wedded life were as a day
 What would they there?—full fifty years
 Rode full of years to Flodden-field,
 Twelve years had reigned, a Sovereign dread;
 Of seventy years, to loftier height;
 And mysteries above her years.
 Into a deep recess of years!
 The very Doe of other years!
 In light confirmed while years their course shall run,
 Poet! that, stricken as both are by years,
 Dropped from the lenient cloud of years.
 The power of years—pre-eminent, and placed
 Than years of toiling reason:
 Full five-and-thirty years he lived
 His history of two hundred years.
 Full thirty years behind.
 'Twill murmur on a thousand years.
 In the had yielded to the weight of years;
 A thousand years hath it borne that name,
 Stain her cheek in future years—
 That, when a thousand years are told,
 By shock of circumstance, or lapse of years,
 Whose rugged walls may still for years demand
 Reviewed through Love's transparent veil of years?
 So changes mortal life with fleeting years;
 Months and years went smilingly;
 As on the wings of years.
 A little scholar, scarcely seven years old,
 The kindly mood in hearts which lapse of years,
 Thus thirty smooth years did he thrive on his farm:
 Of Auster and Boötes. Fifty years
 Of noble parents: seventy years and three
 Six months to six years added he remained
 Of peaceful years; a chronicle of heaven;—
 Of threescore years, and to thy latest hour,
 Was as the love of mothers; and when years,
 The years to bring the inevitable yoke,
 The thought of our past years in me doth breed
 Our noisy years seem moments in the being
 In years that bring the philosophic mind.
 Six thousand years amid his lonely hours
 Extend through unambitious years to come,
 Call thee, though known but for a few fleet years,
 That had been floating loose about for years,
 Now living, or to live in future years.
 And, hidden in the cloud of years, became
 Of Liberty, which fifteen hundred years
 That mellower years will bring a riper mind
 Invigorating thoughts from former years.
 Through later years the story of my life.
 Assiduous, through the length of sixty years.
 By uniform control of after years,
 Would he peruse these lines! For many years
 Thus while the days flew by, and years passed on,
 In youth, or to be changed in after years.
 Or suited to those years. Yet I, though used
 Our unripe years, not wasted, should be taught
 Of calm enjoyments, after eighty years,
 In childhood, ere he was full twelve years old.
 Young as I was, a child not nine years old,
 Fresh emment of spectators. Twice five years
 Of present happiness, while future years
 Four years and thirty, told this very week,
 Six changeful years have vanished since I first
 Then stopped for years; not audible again

Years—continued.

From dangerous passions free. Three years had flown
 Four rapid years had scarcely then been told
 And ardent meditation. Later years
 Of one so overloaded with his years.
 How small, of intervening years! For then,
 And in the lapse of many years may come
 In our first years, or think that it is found,
 Maturer years. A grove there is whose boughs
 Looked thitherward. One, reckoning by years,
 Of many benefits, in later years
 Through months, through years, long after the last beat
 After the lapse of full eight years, those words,
 Though with the wreck of loftier years hestrewn.
 If future years mature me for the task,
 Or fancied in the obscurity of years
 Here, the foundation of his future years!
 Oh! yet a few short years of useful life,
 For my grave looks, too thoughtful for my years.
 A precious gift; for, as he grew in years,
 Familiar with forgotten years, that shows
 From years of youth; which, like a Being made
 To blend with knowledge of the years to come,
 Green with the moss of years, and subject only
 "Not twenty years ago, but you I think
 Went struggling on through those calamitous years
 To whom this cottage, till those hapless years,
 Into this tract again. Nine tedious years;
 From their first separation, nine long years,
 By husbandry of many thrifty years,
 Of public news or private; years that pass
 The still contentedness of seventy years.
 And they as happy years; the present still
 "Seven years of occupation undisturbed
 Returned,—a progeny of golden years.
 What all the slowly-moving years of time,
 And unenlivened; who exists whole years
 That flowing years repealed not; and distress
 If, having walked with Nature threescore years,
 The fruits of earth through space of twice ten years,
 (Full eight years past) the solitary prop
 Young was I then, a schoolboy of eight years;
 A charitable door. So days and years
 She, far behind him in the race of years,
 "Our very first in eminence of years
 Had never come, through space of forty years,
 "At length, when sixty years and five were told,
 "Each by the thoughts best suited to his years:
 Languished beneath accumulated years,
 That Man descends into the VALE of years;
 Twelve tedious years ago,

 Years'. See Three-years'.
 Of scarcely seven years' growth, beneath the Elm
 Not higher than a two years' child
 A six years' Darling of a pigmy size!
 Oh, many a time have I, a five years' child,
 Yell. Or yell, in the deep woods, of lonely hound.
 Or stubborn spirit doomed to yell
 His yell repeating; yet it was in truth
 Yelling. Protracted yelling, like the noise of wolves Yellow. Deep yellow beams the scattered stems illume,
 And track the yellow lights from steep to steep,
 Self-poised upon that yellow flower;
 Ill befall the yellow flowers,
 For us your yellow ringlets comb,
 Dry and withered, light and yellow;—
 Just as light and just as yellow;
 Wreathed round with yellow flowers the gayest of the land.
 Green, sable, shining yellow, shadowy brown,

Yellow—continued.

The yellow stone-crop, suffered to take root
Leaving behind of yellow radiance spread
With yellow in full flow.
A flag of yellow dye.
Her wished-for yellow she foreswore,
Is clad with yellow flowers.

Yellowed. The old Tower's brow yellowed as with the beams Yellowing. Of yellowing corn, the same that over-topped With haycocks studded, striped with yellowing grain—

How pleasant, as the yellowing sun declines,
Was yellowing the hill tops, I went abroad
Yells. When first, above the yells of bigot strife,
Yeoman. Knight, squire, and yeoman, page and groom:
Knight, burgher, yeoman, and esquire,
Yeomanry. The best part of their Yeomanry!

Yes. (Partial list.)
Yes, I must see you when ye first behold
Yes, as I roamed where Loiret's waters glide
Yes, to my sorrow—under the great oak
Yes, loves him; 'tis a truth that multiplies
Yes, yes. I will not murmur, merciful God!
By heaven, his words are reason! Yes, my Friends,
Carry him to the Camp! Yes, to the Camp.
Oh yes, that mole, that viper in the path;
Of what I have been—yes, I thank thee, Heaven!
Yes, he it so;—repent and he forgiven—
Yes, you are right, we need not hunt for motives:
Ay, come to me and weep. Yes, Varlet, look,
Yes, the wild Girl of the mountains

They were such darlings of each other. Yes,
Yes, long before he died, he found that time
Yes! thou art fair, yet he not moved
With many hopes; it should be so—yes—yes—
" Yes, kind Lady! otherwise man could not bear
Yes, the sight so stirs and charms
Yes, let my master fume and fret,
—Yes, without me, up hills so high
To vibrate between yes and no;
—Yes, I, and all about me here,
An Orpheus! an Orpheus! yes, Faith may grow hold,
Yes, it was the mountain Echo,
Have not we too?—yes, we have
Yes! hope may with my strong desire keep pace,
Yes! when the sun of life more feebly shines,
Yes, there was One—for One, asunder fly
Yes, Traveller! fifty winters have been told
Yes, I will forth, bold Bird! and front the blast,
Yes, ye were startled—and, in balance true,
Yes, freely let our hearts expand,
Yes, they can make, who fail to find,
Yes, she is soothed: an Image faint,
" Yes—God is rich in mercy," said
Yes, to thy domination, Roman See,
Yes, if the intensities of hope and fear
Yes, lovely Moon! if thou so mildly bright
Yes, Lady, while about your neck is wound
Yes, proof was plain that, since the day
Yes, for them whose souls have scope
Yes! where Love nestles thou canst teach
Yes, though He well may tremble at the sound
Yes I will see you when ye first behold
—Yes, were it mine, the cottage meal to share
Yes, I remember when the changeful earth,
Yes, I had something of a subtler sense,
Yes; for even then no other than a place
Yes, something of the grandeur which invests
—Yes, in those wanderings deeply did I feel
Yes, shall the fine immunities she boasts
" Yes," said the Sage, resuming the discourse
" Yes," said the Wanderer, taking from my lips
—Yes, you have felt, and may not cease to feel.
" Yes!" said the Solitary with a smile
" Yes," said the Priest, " the Genius of our hills—
" Yes," he continued, kindling as he spake,
Yes, the realities of life so cold,

Yesterday. Our march of yesterday had better suited
Why now—but yesterday I overtook
But yesterday was worse than all; at last
And long as I can stir I'll dog him.—Yesterday,
Will be rejoiced to greet you. It seems but yesterday
As I have told you: He left us yesterday
And, of my fifty, yesterday
Sate yesterday, and made a nest

A thousand years are but as yesterday;
Starting the flight of timid Yesterday!
Thronged yesterday by airy ghosts;
Of yesterday, which royally did wear
The elastic vanities of yesterday?—
Creation, as it were, of yesterday—

Yesterday—continued.

As if but yesterday departed,
Than any liveliest sight of yesterday,
" Much, yesterday, was said in glowing phrase
Brought yesterday from our sequestered dell
Yesterday's. Our yesterday's procession did not sue Yesterday's. " A Man he seems of cheerful yesterdays
Yesterday-even: After the hour of sunset yester-even,
Yesterday-evening's. 'Tis He whose yester-evening's high disdain

Yet. (Partial list.)
Are yet of no diviner origin,
Through passes yet unreached, a brighter road.
Yet still, the sport of some malignant power,
To show what pleasures yet to me remain,
Yet still the tender, vacant gloom remains;
Yet does she still, undaunted, throw the while
Yet not unrequited the man shall roam,
Yet are thy softer arts with power indued
Howls near and nearer yet the famished wolf.
Yet here and there, if 'mid the savage scene
Yet more;—compelled by Powers which only deign
—Yet hast thou found that Freedom spreads her power

Yet not for this will sober reason frown
Yet, if the wind breathe soft, the curling waves,
Yet when faint beams of light that ruin showed,
Yet happy thou, poor hoy! compared with me,
Should yet be true? Would it were possible!
And long beard white with age—yet evermore,
And yet I had within me evermore
Yet loathing life—till auger is appeased
You yet may spy the fawn at play,
Yet by some grave thoughts attended
Yet, at this impressive season,
I whispered, " Yet a little while, dear Child! thou
art my own,
Listen yet awhile;—with patience

Yet all in the broad highway of the world.
Which yet he brandishes for future war,
Yet some did think that he had little business here:
Yet bear me up—else faltering in the rear
And yet they are upon my eyes,
And yet I am alive;
Yet is it dead, and I remain:
Were yet with pensive fear and gentle awe
In prayer, yet blending with that solemn rite
There was a smile or two—yet—yet

Yet as the troubled seed and tortured bough
Beneath the moon, yet shining fair,
The CLIPPING TREE, a name which yet it bears.
Entrance and exit both yet free;
And all day long I number yet,
Yet seeming still to hover;
Yet, what'er enjoyments dwell
While yet the valley is arrayed,
Even yet thou art to me
A Spirit, yet a Woman too!
And yet a Spirit still, and bright
Yet still I persevere, and find them where I may,
Yet there the Soul shall enter which hath earned
—Yet tears to human suffering are due;
And whistling loud may yet be heard,
Yet standing in the clear moonshine;
Blue ether still surrounds him—yet—and yet;
Yet have my thoughts for thee been vigilant—
And the green silent pastures, yet remain.

And yet be melancholy;
Doth yet frequent the hill of storms,
On England's bosom; yet well pleased to rest,
In cheerful godliness; and yet thy heart
Dread trials! yet encountered and sustained
Yet, yet, Biscayans! we must meet our Foes
With firmer soul, yet labour to regain
Where it begins to stir, yet voiceless as a snake.
One solace yet remains for who came
Which yet it bears, sweet Stream! as crystal pure.
Where Man, yet mortal, rarely finds a place.
Yet glorious Art the power of Time defies,
Conspicuous yet where Oroonoko flows;
The lonely Primrose yet renews its bloom,
Albeit sickness, lingering yet,
A solemn fancy yet sustains
" Yet, Lady! shines, through this black night,
Who in their private cells have yet a care
Yet Truth is keenly sought for, and the wind
Yet will we not conceal the precious Cross,
If yet To-morrow, unbelied, may say,
Which yet in thy behalf the Poet claims,
Yet pleased and willing;
Yet seek thy firm support, according to their need.
Yet being to myself a guide,
Stern Lawgiver! yet thou dost wear
Is yet a Soul whose master-bias leans
And oft returned, again, and yet again.
Thou see'st a homely Pile, yet to these walls
Yet spake this Child when sprinkled was the water;
Yet may I sing, O Alma! loud and clear.

Yet—continued

Yet have we found bow slowly genuine grief
 But yet I know, where'er I go, . . .
 Thou best Philosopher, who yet dost keep
 That nature yet remembers . . .
 Are yet the fountain-light of all our day,
 . . . master-light of all our seeing;
 . . . heart of hearts I feel your might;
 . . . yet;
 . . . band of yet remembered names
 . . . yet liveth to the heart;
 . . . him again and yet again.
 . . . of the living Presence still subsist
 . . . ndent study seemed a course . . .
And . . . the books which then I valued most . . .
 . . . him again, and yet again;
 . . . While yet a youth undisciplined in verse,
 . . . Or canopy of yet unwithered fern,
 . . . Yet rich in beauty, beauty that was felt.
 . . . In honour to their honour: zeal, which yet
 . . . Whereof he was a part: yet this was meek
 . . . Again, and yet again, a farewell look;
 . . . Yet, with a revelation's liveliness,
 . . . For lingering yet an image in my mind
 . . . A noble aspiration! yet I feel
 . . . While reason yet might hesitate, diffusing
 . . . While yet our hearts are young, while yet we . . . breathe
 . . . And yet a spirit, there for me enshrined
 . . . Oh, yet a few short years of useful life,
 . . . Yet wanting the accomplishment of verse,
 . . . Hath yet his bracelet or his lock of hair,
 . . . Continued yet to vibrate on his ear,
 . . . Are yet made desparate by ' too quick a sense
 . . . Of all companionship, the Sufferer yet . . .
 . . . Yet keeping her first mildness, was advanced . . .
 . . . Of yet unfaded trees she lifts her head
 . . . That victims yet were wanting to assuage
 . . . Though yet the star some hearts at court may charm
 . . . Yet happy they who in life's later scene
Yet-distempered, That, o'er the yet-distempered Deep,
Yet-vivid, Broke from the sable orbs of his yet-vivid eyes.

Yew. "Down to the stump of you old yew
 The yew, the holly, and the bright green thorn,
 A dark plume fetch me from you blasted yew,
 She sat beneath the spreading yew—
 At the dim centre of a churchyard yew;
 Beside the churchyard yew,
 Unsteadfast, by a blasted yew upstay'd;
 Those native plants, the holly and the yew,
 Of an old yew, their favourite resting-place.
 Of yew, in which survived some traces, here . . .
Yewdale's. Descend and reach, in Yewdale's depths, a plain
Yew's. Urged less for this Yew's shade, though he . . .
Yews. Of giant yew that frown on Rydale's mere;
Yew-tree. And yew-tree o'er the silver rocks recline,
 Nay, Traveller! rest. This lonely Yew-tree stands
 There is a Yew-tree, pride of Lorton Vale,
 Words cannot paint the o'ershadowing yew-tree
 bough,
 He led her from the yew-tree shade,
 His last words in the yew-tree shade,
 To Emily in the yew-tree shade:
 A dismal look; the yew-tree had its ghost,
 Of yew black Yew-tree, whose protruded boughs . . .
Yew-tree's. Under a fancied yew-tree's futility
 shade;
Yew-trees. And yew-trees o'er the silver rocks
 recline,
Yield. Bandusia's praise, wild stream, should yield to thine!
 And faint the fire a dying heart can yield!
 Have power to yield? perhaps he looks elsewhere,—
 By penury, to yield him up her Daughter,
 Therein for ever you must yield to me.
 Dost seemingly in vain its fragrance yield,
 The symbol yield; and would into this clasp,
 What warmth, what comfort would it yield
 Yield him no domestic cave,
 Or heath-besprinkled copse might yield,
 Or ruder weapon which their course might yield,
 Which a thousand ridges yield;
 Of thoughtfulness and beauty, yield
 While flowing rivers yield a blameless sport,
 Yield to such after-thought the sole reply
 And Faith—these only yield secure relief.
 By breezeless air to smoothest polish, yield
 And neither hope nor steadfast promise yield . . .
 Endangered States may yield to terms unjust;
 But the green thickets plenteously shall yield
 From all that martial feats could yield
 Appalled she may not be, and cannot yield.
 Yield not to terror or despondency,
 Yield to the Music's touching influence;
 Could I leave them unseen, and not yield to regret?

Yield—continued

To appease the Gods; or public thanks to yield;
 Yield to the lure of vain regret, and hover
 That would yield him fit help while prefiguring that Place
 How sweet were leisure! could it yield no more . . .
 Shall yield no light of love or praise;
 And thus abruptly spake;—" Yield
 "This night yon faithless Towers must yield,
 That, if the Priest should yield assent
 Did now a very gladness yield . . .
 As winter trees, yield no fallacious sign
 That to the towering lily doth not yield?
 Yield timely fruit of peace and love and joy.
 The solace beads and masses yield,
 Which seems a sense of joy to yield
 Again unfolded, passage clear shall yield
 Perpetual lessons of forbearance yield;
 Only faint news her mountain-sunbeams yield,
 O yielded him back his privilege!—No sea
 Sustained by what her scrip might yield . . .
 Who saw thee, on his margin, yield to death,
 To Him a resting-place should yield,
 All soothers of sense their soft virtue shall yield,
 Yet, blessed Art, we yield not to dejection;
 And now it would content me to yield up . . .
 (If now I yield not to a flattering dream)
 To yield myself to Nature, when that strong
 That doth not yield a solace to my grief:
 And the world's tumult unto me could yield,
 Of selfish passions; nor did ever yield
 To yield him no unworthy maintenance . . .
 Rarely a house, that did not yield to him . . .
 On the thrilled ear, and flags uprising, yield . . .
 Left them ungifted with a power to yield . . .
 The crown of wisdom—to yield up their souls
 If fixed or wandering star could tidings yield . . .
 To yield entire submission to the law . . .
 That, for the day's consumption, books may yield
 From these imaginative heights, that yield
 Which silently they yield, are multiplied
 By slow sollicitation, earth to yield . . .
 These yield, and these to sudden overthrow:
 To stop, and yield our gracious Teacher thanks . . .
 And season yield; but, as we re-embarked,
 Yield not, to scorn, or sorrow, living men . . .

Yielded. Was to be yielded up. Now, by the head
 I yielded up those precious hopes, which might . . .
 Each struggled, and each yielded as before
 Too soon I yielded to despair;
 Had altogether yielded to the sun,
 Reclined, shall I have yielded up my soul . . .
 Plenteously yielded to the vagrant breeze.
 As it hath yielded to thy tender heart.
 Led on, and yielded up their breath;
 She yielded, and with gentle pace,
 In thee had yielded to the weight of years;
 Yielded by this crazy rent,
 Lived 1—then yielded to a slow disease.
 Ground where the grass had yielded to the steps . . .
 A flower till it have yielded up its sweets
 And yielded to all changes of the scene
 Yielded up moral questions in despair.
 He yielded not; but, pointing to a slope
 Yielded, that day, a confidence sublime
 Yielded to mortal reflux; her pure glory,
 Of civil action, yielded to a power . . .
 He yielded, though reluctant; for his mind
 By nature yielded to his practised hand;
Yield'st. And Thou, hure Streamlet, murmuring yield'st no more
 The breathing faculty with which thou yield'st
Yieldth. Like thoughts whose very sweetness yieldth proof
Yielding. See Peat-yielding.
 And bore him high through yielding air my debt of love to pay.
 A dull, contracted circle, yielding light
 Only their fire seems holder, yielding light,
 —Yielding to this gentle spell,
 Against the yielding gate he pressed
 Who, yielding not to changes Time has made,
 Aod oft-times he—who, yielding to the force
 Methought, was yielding inwardly,
 Which love had prompted, yielding scope . . .
 When teeming Matrons—yielding to rude faith
 Was yielding, on a mountain height
 Meek, yielding to the occasion's call,
 I press thee, through the yielding soil, with pride.
 My senses yielding to the sultry air,
 Of pain, and doubt, and fear, yet yielding not
 Yielding to old remembrances, and swayed
 Far as she finds a yielding element . . .
 And yielding surely some relief to his,
 Yielding his soul, the Babylonian framed . . .
 Its kindly influence, o'er the yielding brow
 Of yielding its contents to eye and ear,
 To exclaim—"O happy! yielding to the law
 And of his works; or, yielding to the bent
 Pursue each other through the yielding plain . . .

Yields. Trusted my life to what chance bounty yields,

Yields, could not chuck his babe beneath the chin,
It is my royal state that yields
With ornaments—the prettiest, nature yields
And bounty never yields so much but it seems to do her wrong?

Divine monition Nature yields,
That the poor Harp distempered music yields
His icy scimitar, a forestate yields
Who meekly yields, and is obscured—content
Has sown as yields, we trust, the fruit of fame
Yields every thing to discipline of swords?

You isle conceals their home, their hut-like bower;
Above you eastern hill, where darkness broods
Lo, where she sits beneath you shaggy rock,
Would be most welcome. You white hawthorn

Yon—continued.

Her heart was still more sad. And hy yon gate,
The turf of yon large pasture will be skimmed ;
Among yon mountain fastnesses concealed,
To comfort ;—but how came ye ?—if yon track
Unnoticed, thus continuing—“ From yon crag
Of yon black Yew-tree, whose protruded boughs
From yon huge breast of rock, a voice sent forth
That seek yon pool, and there prolong their stay
On new-blown heath ; let yon commanding rock
Save for yon stately House beneath whose roof
He is who cultivates yon hanging field ;
The family who dwell within yon house
High on the breast of yon dark mountain, dark
In the sweet spring that lurks mid yon green fields ;
While traversing alone yon mountain-pass.
Perhaps yon loose sods cover, the poor Pensioner
Within the bosom of yon crystal Lake,
To harmony restored.—But yon dark mould
Yon structure, framing, with the ascent of steps
Of yon white torrent falling down the rocks
Beneath yon hawthorn, planted by myself
The length of road that from yon mountain’s base
Behind yon hill, a poor and rugged wild,
Along the sharp edge of yon lofty crags,
(Yon cottage shaded by the woody crags)
—And yon tall pine-tree, whose composing sound
Whose place of rest is near yon ivied porch.
Among the mountain coves. Yon household fir,
Borne by yon clustering cottages, that sprang
Like that reflected in yon quiet pool,
—“ Observe,” the Vicar said, “ yon rocky isle
Then, in the bosom of yon mountain-cove,
To kneel devoutly in yon reverend Pile,
Or founts that gurgle from yon craggy steep,
Once to the verge of yon steep harrier came
Not less than half-way up yon Mountain’s side
Yon curling smoke from the grey cot below,
The heifer in yon little croft belongs
From all reproach is yon ethereal vault,
But whence yon swarm that loads the western bridge,
How throngs the crowd to yon theatric school

Yonder. You know we left him sitting—see him yonder.
And ‘yonder is the moon !’
Why can he tarry yonder ?—In our church-yard
That chasm is much the same— But, surely,
yonder—
You see it yonder ! and those few green fields.
I see them yonder—what a load
—Yonder is a man in sight—
Yonder is a house—but where ?
This is our palace,—yonder is thy throne ;
While Faith, from yonder opening cloud,
That calls from yonder leafy shade .

Lo, yonder saw I mine own Lady dance,
And yonder with joy-smitten heart have I
I yonder saw her eke full blissfully ;
And yonder once she unto me ‘gan say—
And up to yonder hill was I her guide ;
Yonder I saw her to her Father ride,
Lo ! yonder is my own bright Lady free ;
Or yonder is it that the tents must be ;
What Genius smiles on yonder flood ?
How would you pity her who yonder rests ;
Whence comes it, then, that yonder we behold
See yonder the same pageant, and again

Yore. Transmits of happier lot in times of yore !
Of its own darkness, as it stood of yore :
Like planet-stricken men of yore,

World-wearied Men withdrew of yore ;
Left single, in bold parody, ye, of yore,
Mankind of yore were prompted to devise
For safety, they of yore enclasped the Cross
Tarpeian named of yore, and keeping still
But delicate of yore its mould,
Such strength that Earldom held of yore ;
Back to the Land those Pilgrims left of yore,
Of daisies, shepherds sate of yore and wove
An idolizing dreamer as of yore !
Thy way for increase puerual as of yore,
When Bega sought of yore the Cumbrian coast,
Ruled here of yore, till what men felt they saw,
Heart-stricken by stern destiny of yore
We have been glad of yore.
A name which it took of yore :
In the magnific Convent built of yore
A bounteous help in days of yore,
It is not now as it hath been of yore—
Transmits of days more blessed in times of yore.
Were distant some famed temple where of yore
In days of yore how fortunately fared
In days of yore, as pagan temples stood of yore,
In days of yore, when of yore received
In days of yore, at Doncaster, at York, and Leeds,
In days of yore, in seven days’ space, will to York be led
In days of yore, I witnessed when to York they came—

York—continued.

Along the plain of York he past ;
Thou, stately York ! and Ye, whose splendours
cheer
So would I plead for York ; but long disgrace
Yorkshire. And he had trudged through Yorkshire dales,
Pried into Yorkshire dales, or bidden tracts
Yon, omitted.
You’d. You’d better like we should descend together,
Felt warm as a wren’s nest. You’d better turn
In truth, you’d find it hard to say
So close, you’d say that they are bent.
You’ll. What is become of you.—You’ll sit down and sigh it ;
Of water from the torrent. ‘Tis, you’ll say,
Lady, you’ll find your Father at the Convent
You’ll find a task for half a year.
You’ll find you’ve munch in little here !
Near the stately Pantheon you’ll meet with the same
Or surely you’ll grow double :
Perhaps a tale you’ll make it.
If you pass by at morning, you’ll meet with him
there.
Young. At times, while young Content forsook her seat,
Bows his young head with sorrow to the grave.
Of young imagination have kept pure.
—Pity that our young Chief will have no part
Fear not, I will obey you ;—but One so young,
He was that One so young should pass his youth
Is very dear to you. Oh ! but you are young ;
Young as he is, diverted wish and hope
Of towns in flames, fields ravaged, young and old
Young as I am, I might go forth a teacher,
And whither were you going ? Learn, young Man,—
Now would you ? and for ever ?—My young
Friend,
My own wild words ? Young Man, the seed must lie
Than when both young and old sit gathered round “ What ails thee, young One ? what ? Why pull so at thy cord ?
Rest, little young One, rest ; what is’t that aileth
thee ?
“ Rest, little young One, rest ; thou hast forgot the day
A young lamb’s heart among the full-grown flocks.
They played like two young ravens on the crags :
Live to such end is what both old and young .
And summer days, when we were young ;
Young as I am, my course is run,
“ When I was young, a single man,
For sake of a young Child whose home was there.
Admittance was denied. The young man spake .
Both old and young, was named THE EVENING STAR.
As well thou knowest, in us the old and young
Ran with a young man’s speed ; and yet the voice
Our being, whether young or old,
Rest, Mother-bird ! and when thy young
From the old and the young, from the poorest ; and there !
A young and happy Child !
How it could ever have been young,
For this young Bird that is distrust ;
Keep for the Young the impassioned smile
Whom sue to young Ambition bore,
In hearts no longer young ;
A light to young and old.
The buds, and freshens the young leaves,
Sick, hale, old, young, who cried before that cloud,
Where the young lions couch ; for so, by leave
From that young Stream, that smites the throbbing rocks,
Over the minds of Poets, young or old !
And the old day was welcome as the young,
So the bright faces of the young and gay .
Young Adam Bruce beside her lay,
The cries which broke from old and young
Young Bacchus was conveyed—to lie
This is young Buonaparte’s natal day,
Young Vane, and others who called Milton friend.
Pregnant with good, Young, Middle-aged, and Old,
Of young or old, warrior, or saint, or sage,
A young Ascetic—Poet, Hero, Sage,
Thy gifts, magnificent Region, ever young
To be for ever fresh and young,
The enrapt, the beautiful, the young,
While young delights on old encroach,
(Even with the young, the hopeful, or the gay)
And thither young and old repair,
Of middle-aged, and old, and young,
The young horse must forsake his manger,
Hope guides the young ; but when the old must pass
Make thy young thoughts acquainted with the grave ;
Of a young maiden, only not divine.
A pair of friends, though I was young,
—Young Romilly through Barden woods

Youth—continued.

To that great King: shall hail the crown'd Youth
 He sate the blossoms of their warrior youth;

A labour worthy of eternal youth!
 When youth had faded, did hope still bless
 Lamented youth! to thy cold day
 Youth, a solitary Mother;
 Dear as they lie to unsuspecting Youth,
 Turned to Elysian delights, in which youth might confide.

Nor deem it strange; the Youth had worn
We Men, who in our morn of youth defied
 The gallant Youth, who may have gained,
 Brisk Youth appeared; the Meas of Youth,
 That slender Youth, a scholar pale,
 If thou art beautiful, and youth
 Re-opened that inspired my youth;
 Proceeds from infancy to lusty youth;
 Of all, himself a Spirit, in the youth
 Sweet is the holiness of Youth"—so felt
 The saintly Youth has ceased to rule, discredited
 A youth too certain of his power to wade
 From early youth I ploughed the restless Main,
 A happy youth, and their old age
 Upon the genial sense of youth:
 Transparent as the soul of innocent youth,
 In youth we love the darksome lawn
 Of youth into the breast:
 And if the harp pleased his gay youth, it rings
 With rapture thrilled; whose Youth revered the crown

Into a shameful grave. Among thy youth,
 Before the world had past her time of youth
 More duly shall wild wandering Youth
 Of the world's freezing cares—to generous Youth—
 And of that famous Youth, full soon removed
 From youth a zealous follower of the Art
 What is youth?—a dancing willow,
 Sweet is the holiness of youth: and hence,
 O Man, that from thy fair and shining youth

Age might but take the things Youth needed not!

On Tiber's banks my youth was dedicate
 I, who on shipboard lived from earliest youth,
 Youth amiable; O friend so true of soul
 What profit riches? what does youth avail?
 FRANCESCO was the name the Youth had borne,
 Who checked or turned thy headstrong youth,
 For slaughtered Youth or love-lorn Maid!
 The Youth, who daily farther from the east
 But she who trains the generous British youth
 Nor less to guide the fluctuating youth
 The confidence of Youth our only Art,
 And glorifies the truant youth of Vannes.
 Youth, by pleasure unbeguiled
 Guards the sacred heart of youth,
 In youth, but oh! what happiness to live
 If in my youth I have been pure in heart,
 In youth, or to be changed in after years.
 The glory of my youth. Of genius, power,
 Of careless youth, unburdened, unalarmed,
 Bounding before me, yet a stripling youth—
 Have often stirred the heart of youth, and bred
 Youth should be awed, religiously possessed
 Of ancient times revive, and youth be trained
 To see a sanctuary for our country's youth
 I grieve not; happy is the gowned youth,
 And wild outlandish walks of simple youth
 From youth our own adopted, he had passed
 In later youth to yearnings of a love
 A wild, unworl'dly-minded youth, given up
 In which his youth did first extravagate;
 On that delightful time of growing youth
 Of modesty, that he, who in his youth
 I bade farewell; and, one among the youth
 In lightsome mood—such privilege has youth
 Could have more tranquil visions in his youth,
 On the vague reading of a truant youth
 By common inexperience of youth,
 That were a frequent comfort to my youth.
 By her exulting outside look of youth
 And all the strength and plumage of thy youth,
 That battered on thy youth. But thou hast trod
 Oh! sorrow for the youth who could have seen
 While yet a youth undisciplined in verse,
 And the independent spirit of pure youth
 Intolerant, as is the way of youth
 On those ingenuous moments of our youth
 It slept, even in the pregnant season of youth.
 Yet, in the estimate of youth at least,
 Startling the Synod. Could a youth, and one
 Which I beheld of shepherds in my youth,
 And upwards through late youth, until not less
 Such is the strength and glory of our youth!
 Then, or had ever, even in crudest youth,
 Less than might well befit my youth, the cause
 Were crowded with the bravest youth of France,
 At leisure, how the enamoured youth was driven,
 Nor did the inexperience of my youth

Youth—continued.

But in the minds of all ingenuous youth,
 From the best youth in England their dear pride,
 An honoured teacher of my youth was laid,
 The heart that first had roused him. Youth maintains,
 Rejoiced through early youth, before the winds
 The observations made in later youth,
 Oh! next to such enjoyment of our youth,
 (Still to the very going-out of youth)
 Or Cambrian solitudes. A youth—(he hore
 In youth I roamed, on youthful pleasures bent;
 (Which, in the docile season of their youth,
 Such was the Boy—but for the growing Youth
 A misery to him; and the Youth resigned
 Not ignorant was the Youth that still no few
 What'er, in docile childhood or in youth,
 From years of youth; which, like a Being made
 Such grateful promises his youth displayed:
 Of forward youth—that scruples not to solve
 In youth were mine; when, stationed on the top
 The strain of transport, "whosoe'er in youth
 As those with which your soul in youth was moved,
 A heedless Youth, who touched a golden lute,
 And from the mansions where our youth was taught.
 To Youth or Maiden gone before their time,
 In early youth, among my native hills,
 The thinking, thoughtless, school-boy; the hold youth
 Two sets of manners could the Youth put on;
 Whom, in their youth, sweet study has enthralled,
 By which a virtuous woman, in pure youth,
 Home to her mother's house. The Youth was fled;
 A wandering Youth, I listened with delight
 From youth or maiden, or some honoured chief
 From his youth up, and high as manhood's noon,
 In youth, and sanctioned by the ripe mind,
 Dear Youth, by young and old alike beloved,
 Such and so glorious did this Youth appear;
 When he had risen alone! No braver Youth
 This generous Youth, too negligent of self,
 Of the poor calling which my youth embraced
 Which, in his youth, he trod, and trod again,
 Their happy year spins round. The youth obeys.
 Of this unhappy lot, in early youth
 A Youth, I practised this delightful art;
 And hopeless pangs the spirit of that youth,
 Of the gay mind, as ofttimes splenic youth
 Who pushed by thoughtless youth to deeds of shame

Youthful. See Ever-youthful.
 Such views the youthful Bard allure;
 Upon her cheek, to which its youthful hue
 In you a mirror of my youthful self;
 Be thou wiser, youthful Maiden!
 And those that Milton loved in youthful years;
 For youthful faults ripe virtues shall atone;
 And after youthful follies ran,
 O happy time of youthful lovers (thus
 Of youthful Poets, who among these hills
 "Prisoner" pardon youthful lancies,
 The youthful Rovers follow.
 And Æson stood a youth 'mid youthful peers.
 "And while my youthful peers before my eyes
 And while the youthful year's prolific art—
 Youthful as Spring.—Shade of departed Power,
 Lives in the light of youthful glee,
 Not so that Pair whose youthful spirits dance
 When there the youthful Nortons met,
 A bright-haired company of youthful slaves,
 Of youthful heroes, is no sullen fire,
 The innocent eyes of youthful Monarchs driven
 To youthful Hooker, in familiar style
 For her youthful Romilly.
 Sang youthful tales of shepherds and their flocks;
 Of happiness and hope, a youthful Bride.
 Have I been speaking, and my youthful mind.
 'Twas not indifferent to a youthful mind
 By youthful squires; adventures endless, spun
 A youthful friend, he too a mountaineer,
 And mighty forms, seizing a youthful fancy,
 On every side, in prime of youthful strength,
 Made a sweet jingling in our youthful ears;
 To youthful minds, by objects over near
 So call it, of a youthful patriot's mind;
 O, happy time of youthful lovers, (thus
 A youthful pilgrim; above all reviewed
 The perturbations of a youthful mind
 A youthful traveller, and see daily now
 Of Sarum's Plain, my youthful spirit was raised;
 Of Cambria ranging with a youthful friend,
 In youth I roamed, on youthful pleasures bent;
 In the devotedness of youthful love,
 Fresh, youthful, and aspiring! What are these
 Our youthful Voyagers bound fast her prow,
 Youthfulness. Go forth with rival youthfulness of mind, Youth's. In youth's keen eye the livelong day was bright,
 Than Youth's spontaneous products; and to-day
 While youth's roses are thy crown.
 Was the Youth's birth-place. There he wooed a

Youth—continued.

One's rash Youth's ungovernable hand
 Freely as in youth's season bland,
 How, for exciting youth's heroic flame,
 (Her Father told her so) in youth's gay dawn
 By Youth's surviving spirit? What agile grace!
 In youth's wild eye the livelong day was bright,
 Passions unworthy of youth's generous heart
 Redundancy of youth's contentedness.
 The spirit of pleasure, and youth's golden gleam.
 A stranger, with youth's further privilege,
 When I began in youth's delightful prime
 A spirit of pleasure in youth's golden gleam;
 Youth's season yet with him was scarcely past,
 And she was in youth's prime. How free their love,
 Where youth's ambitious feet might move at large;
 When youth's presumptuousness is mellowed down,

Youths. First among youths of knightly breeding,
 One

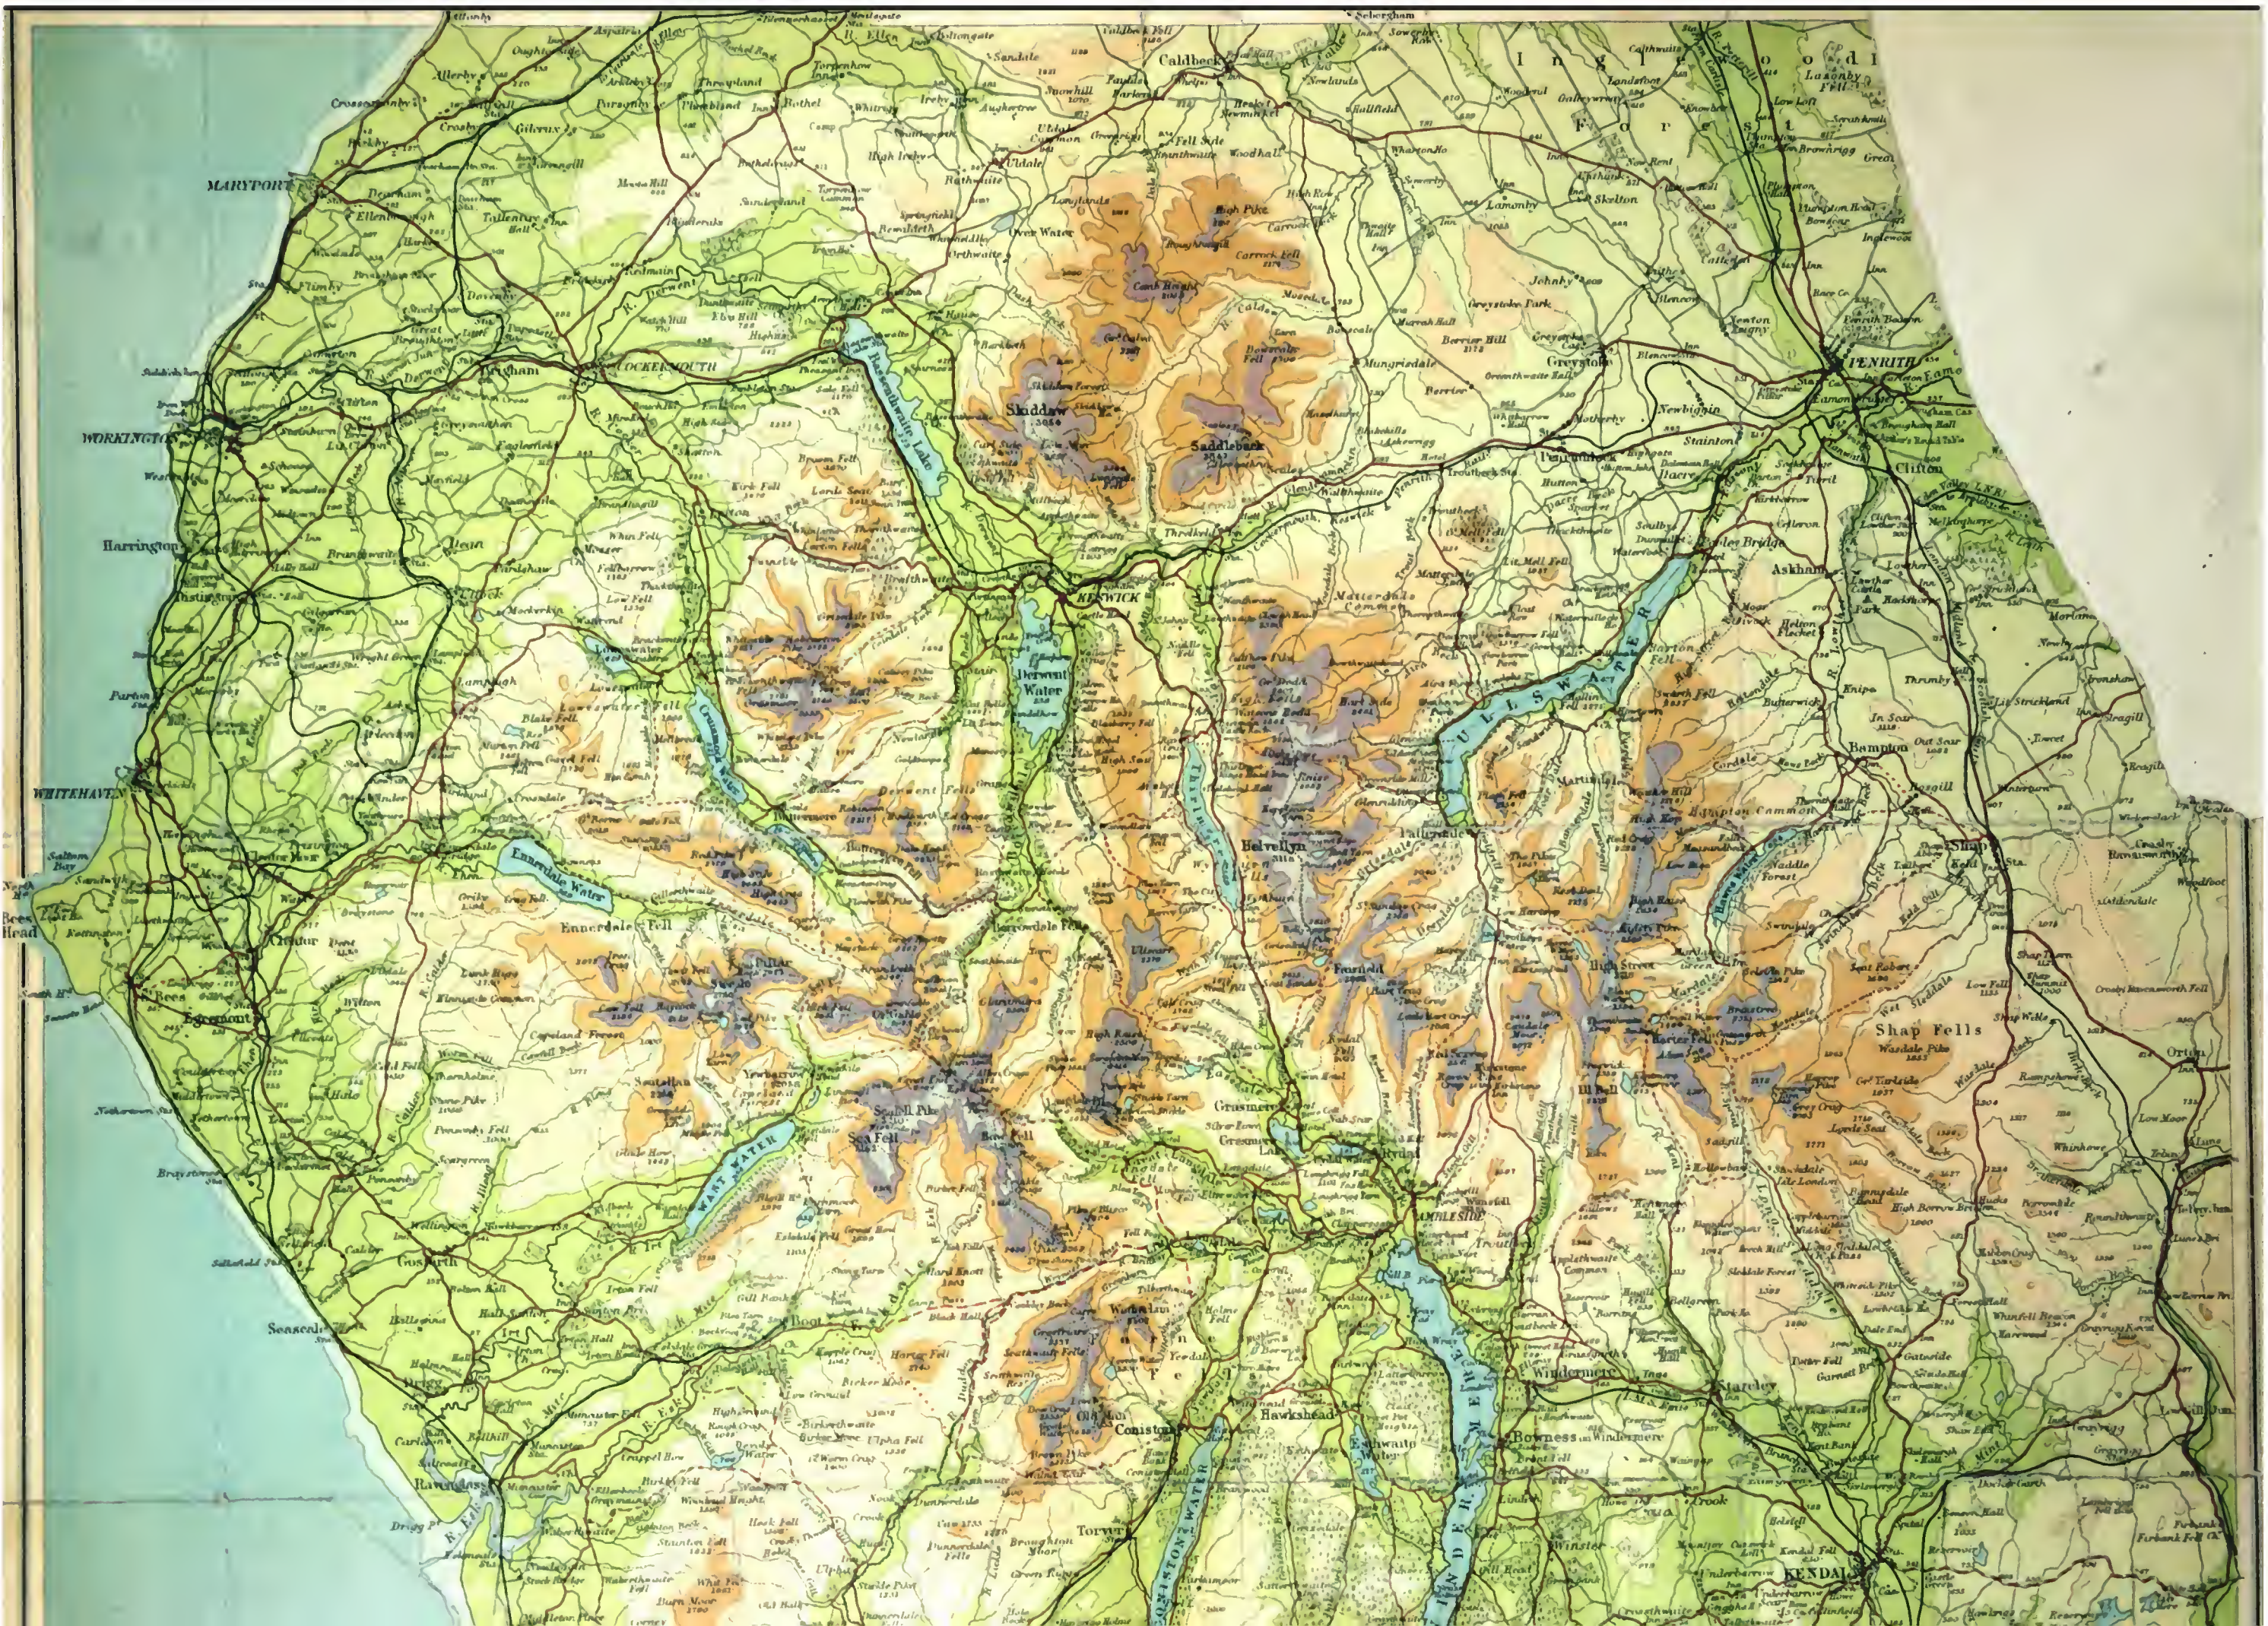

Time was, blest Power! when youths and maids
 The vacant and the busy, maids and youths,
 So many happy youths, so wide and fair
 Peasant and king; when boys and youths, the growth
 Of maids and youths, old men, and matrons staid,
 Porch, door-way, or kirk-pillar; and of youths,
 I had approached, like other youths, the shield
 Like Youths released from labour, and yet bound
 Among the rocks below. Men, maidens, youths,
You've. Which you've collected for the noblest ends,
 Of every tongue—as you are now. You've heard
 You've done your best, and that is all:
 You'll find you've much in little here!
 You've often heard of magic wands,
 How patiently you've waited,

GENERAL MAP OF THE LAKE DISTRICT

SCALE 2 MILES TO AN INCH

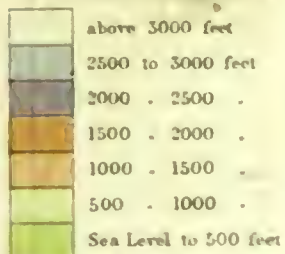

Note

- Good roads, irrespective of hills.
- Narrower, but quite practicable, and in many cases easy.
- Passable, but very awkward roads for cycling.
- Bridle paths only.

Here Mountain Paths are left in black dots; they will be found coloured on the Section Maps.

REFERENCE TO CONTOURS OF ALTITUDE

The tints indicate the contours of altitude at intervals of 500 feet
