NOTE

THIS book consists of the Poems and Masks (as apart from the Dramas) contained in the collected editions of the Poetical Works of Robert Bridges, together with two groups of Later Poems and Poems in Classical Prosody now published for the first time or now first collected.

A record of the previous publication of the poems will be found in the bibliographical notes prefixed to the various sections of the present book.

The spelling of certain words is not uniform throughout the poems. This is due to observance of the text of the earlier editions of different dates, in the notes to which the author's justification of these peculiarities was given.

ARGUMENT

Prometheus coming on earth to give fire to men appears before the palace of Inachus in Argos on a festival of Zeus. He interrupts the ceremony by announcing fire and persuades Inachus to dare the anger of Zeus and accept the gift. Inachus fetching Argeia his wife from the palace has in turn to quiet her fears. He asks a prophecy of Prometheus who foretells the fate of Io their daughter. Prometheus then setting flame to the altar and writing his own name thereon in the place of Zeus disappears.

The Chorus sing (1) a Hymn to Zeus with the stories of the birth of Zeus and the marriage of Hera with the dances of the Curetes and the Hesperides, (2) their anticipation of fire with an Ode on Wonder, (3) a Tragic Hymn on the lot of man, (4) a Fire-chorus, (5) a final Chorus in praise of Prometheus.

All the characters are good. Prometheus prologizes. He carries a long reed.

PROMETHEUS THE FIREGIVER

PROMETHEUS.

FROM high Olympus and the ætherial courts, Where mighty Zeus our angry king confirms The Fates' decrees and bends the wills of the gods, I come : and on the earth step with glad foot.

This variegated ocean-floor of the air, The changeful circle of fair land, that lies Heaven's dial, sisterly mirror of night and day: The wide o'er-wandered plain, this nether world My truant haunt is, when from jealous eyes I steal, for hither 'tis I steal, and here Unseen repair my joy : yet not unseen Methinks, nor seen unguessed of him I seek. Rather by swath or furrow, or where the path Is walled with corn I am found, by trellised vine Or olive set in banks or orchard trim : I watch all toil and tilth, farm, field and fold, And taste the mortal joy; since not in heaven Among our easeful gods hath facile time A touch so keen, to wake such love of life As stirs the frail and careful being, who here, The king of sorrows, melancholy man, Bows at his labour, but in heart erect A god stands, nor for any gift of god Would barter his immortal-hearted prime.

Could I but win this world from Zeus for mine With not a god to vex my happy rule, I would inhabit here and leave high heaven : So much I love it and its race of men,

Even as he hates them, hates both them, and me For loving what he hates, and would destroy me, Outcast in the scorn of all his cringing crew, For daring but to save what he would slay : And me must first destroy. Thus he denieth My heart's wish, thus my counsel sets at naught, Which him saved once, when all at stake he stood Uprisen in rebellion to overthrow The elderseated Titans, for I that day Gave him the counsels which his foes despised. Unhappy they, who had still their blissful seats Preserved and their Olympian majesty, Had they been one with me. Alas, my kin !

But he, when he had taken the throne and chained His foes in wasteful Tartarus, said no more Where is Prometheus our wise counsellor? What saith Prometheus? tell us, O Prometheus, What Fate requires! but waxing confident And wanton, as a youth first tasting power, He wrecked the timeless monuments of heaven, The witness of the wisdom of the gods, And making all about him new, beyond Determined to destroy the race of men, And that create afresh or else have none.

Then his vain mind imagined a device, And at his bidding all the opposed winds Blew, and the scattered clouds and furled snows, From every part of heaven together flying, He with brute hands in huge disorder heaped : They with the winds' weight and his angry breath Were thawed: in cataracts they fell, and earth In darkness deep and whelmed tempest lay, Drowned 'neath the waters. Yet on the mountain-tops Some few escaped, and some, thus warned by me, Made shift to live in vessels which outrode The season and the fury of the flood.

And when his rain was spent and from clear skies Zeus looking down upon the watery world, Beheld these few, the remnant of mankind, Who yet stood up and breathed; he next withdrew The seeds of fire, that else had still lain hid In withered branch and the blue flakes of flint For man to exact and use, but these withdrawn, Man with the brutes degraded would be man No more; and so the tyrant was content.

But I, despised again, again upheld The weak, and pitying them sent sweet Hope, Bearer of dreams, enchantress fond and kind. From heaven descending on the unhindered rays Of every star, to cheer with visions fair Their unamending pains. And now this day Behold I come bearing the seal of all Which Hope had promised : for within this reed A prisoner I bring them stolen from heaven, The flash of mastering fire, and it have borne So swift to earth, that when yon noontide sun Rose from the sea at morning I was by, And unperceived of Hêlios plunged the point I' the burning axle, and withdrew a tongue Of breathing flame, which lives to leap on earth For man the father of all fire to come.

And hither have I brought it even to Argos Unto king Inachus, him having chosen Above all mortals to receive my gift: For he is hopeful, careful, wise, and brave.

He first, when first the floods left bare the land, Grew warm with enterprise, and gathered men Together, and disposed their various tasks For common weal combined; for soon were seen The long straight channels dwindling on the plain, Which slow from stagnant pool and wide morass The pestilent waters to the rivers bore :

Then in the ruined dwellings and old tombs He dug, unbedding from the wormed ooze Vessels and tools of trade and husbandry; Wherewith, all seasonable works restored, Oil made he and wine anew, and taught mankind To live not brutally though without fire, Tending their flocks and herds and weaving wool, Living on fruit and milk and shepherds' fare, Till time should bring back flame to smithy and hearth, Or Zeus relent. Now at these gates I stand, 110 At this mid hour, when Inachus comes forth To offer sacrifice unto his foe. For never hath his faithful zeal forborne To pay the power, though hard, that rules the world The smokeless sacrifice ; which first to-day Shall smoke, and rise at heaven in flame to brave The baffled god. See here a servant bears For the cold altar ceremonial wood : My shepherd's cloak will serve me for disguise.

SERVANT.

With much toil have I hewn these sapless logs. 120 PR. But toil brings health, and health is happiness.

SERV. Here's one I know not—nay, how came he here Unseen by me? I pray thee, stranger, tell me What wouldst thou at the house of Inachus?

PR. Intruders, friend, and travellers have glib tongues, Silence will question such.

SERV. If 'tis a message,

To-day is not thy day-who sent thee hither?

PR. The business of my leisure was well guessed : But he that sent me hither is I that come.

SERV. I smell the matter—thou wouldst serve the house ? PR. 'Twas for that very cause I fled my own. SERV. From cruelty or fear of punishment ? PR. Cruel was my master, for he slew his father.

His punishments thou speakest of are crimes. SERV. Thou dost well flying one that slew his father. PR. Thy lord, they say, is kind. SERV. Well, thou wilt see. Thou may'st at once begin-come, give a hand. PR. A day of freedom is a day of pleasure : And what thou doest have I never done, And understanding not might mar thy work. SERV. Ay true-there is a right way and a wrong In laying wood. Pr. Then let me see thee lay it : The sight of a skill'd hand will teach an art. SERV. Thou seest this faggot which I now unbind, How it is packed within. PR. I see the cones And needles of the fir, which by the wind In melancholy places ceaselessly Sighing are strewn upon the tufted floor. SERV. These took I from a sheltered bank, whereon The sun looks down at noon; for there is need The things be dry. These first I spread; and then Small sticks that snap i' the hand. Pr. Such are enough To burden the slow flight of labouring rooks, When on the leafless tree-tops in young March Their glossy herds assembling soothe the air With cries of solemn joy and cawings loud. And such the long-necked herons will bear to mend Their airy platform, when the loving spring Bids them take thought for their expected young.

SERV. See even so I cross them and cross them so: Larger and by degrees a steady stack Have built, whereon the heaviest logs may lie: And all of sun-dried wood : and now 'tis done.

PR. And now 'tis done, what means it now 'tis done? SERV. Well, thus 'tis rightly done : but why 'tis so

I cannot tell, nor any man here knows; Save that our master when he sacrificeth, As thou wilt hear anon, speaketh of fire ; And fire he saith is good for gods and men; And the gods have it and men have it not : 170 And then he prays the gods to send us fire ; And we, against they send it, must have wood Laid ready thus as I have shewn thee here. PR. To-day he sacrificeth? SERV. Ay, this noon. Hark ! hear'st thou not? they come. The solemn flutes Warn us away; we must not here be seen In these our soiled habits, yet may stand Where we may hear and see and not be seen. Exeunt R.

Enter CHORUS, and from the palace INACHUS bearing cakes: be comes to stand behind the altar.

	The range and rule of the sky;
	When thy lot, first of three

	And won Olympus for thee,

Attending with tireless ears To the song of adoring love, With which the separate spheres Are voiced that turn above: And all that is hidden under The clouds thy footing has furl'd Fears the hand that holdeth the thunder, The eye that looks on the world.

Semichorus of youths.

Of all the isles of the sea Is Crete most famed in story : Above all mountains famous to me Is Ida and crowned with glory. There guarded of Heaven and Earth Came Rhea at fall of night To hide a wondrous birth From the Sire's unfathering sight. The halls of Cronos rang With omens of coming ill, And the mad Curêtes danced and sang Adown the slopes of the hill.

Then all the peaks of Gnossus kindled red Beckoning afar unto the sinking sun, He thro' the vaporous west plunged to his bed Sunk, and the day was done. But they, though he was fled, Such light still held, as oft Hanging in air aloft, At eve from shadowed ship The Egyptian sailor sees : Or like the twofold tip That o'er the topmost trees Flares on Parnassus, and the Thebe n dames Quake at the ghostly flames.

Then friendly night arose To succour Earth, and spread Her mantle o'er the snows 230 And quenched their rosy red ; But in the east upsprings Another light on them, Selêné with white wings And hueless diadem. Little could she befriend Her father's house and state, Nor her weak beams defend Hypérion from his fate. Only where'er she shines, 24C In terror looking forth, She sees the wailing pines Stoop to the bitter North: Or searching twice or thrice Along the rocky walls, She marks the columned ice Of frozen waterfalls : But still the darkened cave Grew darker as she shone, Wherein was Rhea gone 2 50 Her child to bear and save. [ They dance

Then danced the Dactyls and Curêtes wild, And drowned with yells the cries of mother and child; Big-armed Damnámeneus gan prance and shout : And burly Acmon struck the echoes out : And Kermis leaped and howled : and Titias pranced And broad Cyllenus tore the air and danced : While deep within the shadowed cave at rest Lay Rhea, with her babe upon her breast.

INACHUS.

If any here there be whose impure hands Among pure hands, or guilty heart among Our guiltless hearts be stained with blood or wrong, Let him depart !

If there be any here in whom high Zeus Seeing impiety might turn away, Now from our sacrifice and from his sin Let him depart !

Semichorus of maidens.

I have chosen to praise Hêra the wife, and bring A hymn for the feast on marriage days To the wife of the gods' king. How on her festival The gods had loving strife, Which should give of them all The fairest gift to the wife. But Earth said, Fair to see Is mine and yields to none, I have grown for her joy a sacred tree, With apples of gold thereon.

Then Hêra, when she heard what Earth had given, Smiled for her joy, and longed and came to see: On dovewings flying from the height of heaven, Down to the golden tree : As tired birds at even Come flying straight to house On their accustomed boughs. 'Twas where, on tortured hands Bearing the mighty pole. Devoted Atlas stands : And round his bowed head roll

Day-light and night, and stars unmingled dance, Nor can he raise his glance.

She saw the rocky coast Whereon the azured waves Are laced in foam, or lost In water-lighted caves ; The olive island where, Amid the purple seas. Night unto Darkness bare The four Hesperides : 30 And came into the shade Of Atlas, where she found The garden Earth had made And fenced with groves around. And in the midst it grew Alone, the priceless stem, As careful, clear and true As graving on a gem. *Nature had kissed Art And borne a child to stir 310 With jealousy the heart Of heaven's Artificer. From crown to swelling root It mocked the goddess' praise, The green enamelled sprays, The emblazoned golden fruit. They dance And 'neath the tree, with hair and zone unbound, The fair Hesperides aye danced around, And Ægle danced and sang 'O welcome, Oueen !' And Erytheia sang 'The tree is green !' 321 And Hestia danced and sang 'The fruit is gold !' And Arethusa sang 'Fair Queen, behold !'

And all joined hands and danced about the tree,

And sang 'O Queen, we dance and sing for thee !'

(12)

IN. If there be any here who has complaint Against our rule or claim or supplication, Now in the name of Zeus let it appear, Now let him speak !

Prometheus re-enters.

PR. All hail, most worthy king, such claim have I. IN. May grace be with thee, stranger; speak thy mind PR. To Argos, king of Argos, at thy house I bring long journeying to an end this hour, Bearing no idle message for thine ears. For know that far thy fame has reached, and men That ne'er have seen thee tell that thou art set Upon the throne of virtue, that goodwill And love thy servants are, that in thy land Toy, honour, trust and modesty abide And drink the air of peace, that kings must see Thy city, would they know their peoples' good And stablish them therein by wholesome laws. But one thing mars the tale, for o'er thy lands/ Travelling I have not seen from morn till eve, Either from house or farm or labourer's cot, In any village, nor this town of Argos A blue-wreathed smoke arise : the hearths are cold. This altar cold: I see the wood and cakes Unbaken-O king, where is the fire?

IN. If hither, stranger, thou wert come to find That which thou findest wanting, join with us Now in our sacrifice, take food within, And having learnt our simple way of life Return unto thy country whence thou camest. But hast thou skill or knowledge of this thing, How best it may be sought, or by what means Hope to be reached, O speak! I wait to hear.

PR. There is, O king, fire on the earth this day. IN. On earth there is fire thou sayest ! PR. There is fire.

IN. On earth this day!

PR. There is fire on earth this day IN. This is a sacred place, a solemn hour, Thy speech is earnest : yet even if thou speak truth, O welcome messenger of happy tidings, And though I hear aright, yet to believe Is hard : thou canst not know what words thou speakest Into what ears : they never heard before This sound but in old tales of happier times, In sighs of prayer and faint unhearted hope : Maybe they heard not rightly, speak again !

PR. There is, O king, fire on the earth this day.

IN. Yes, yes, again. Now let sweet Music blab Her secret and give o'er; here is a trumpet That mocks her method. Yet 'tis but the word. Maybe thy fire is not the fire I seek; Maybe though thou didst see it, now 'tis quenched, Or guarded out of reach: speak yet again And swear by heaven's truth is there fire or no; And if there be, what means may make it mine.

PR. There is, O king, fire on the earth this day: But not as thou dost seek it to be found.

IN. How seeking wrongly shall I seek aright?

PR. Thou prayest here to Zeus, and him thou callest Almighty, knowing he could grant thy prayer: That if 'twere but his will, the journeying sun Might drop a spark into thine outstretched hand: That at his breath the splashing mountain brooks That fall from Orneæ, and cold Lerne's pool Would change their element, and their chill streams Bend in their burning banks a molten flood: That at his word so many messengers Would bring thee fire from heaven, that not a hearth In all thy land but straight would have a god To kneel and fan the flame: and yet to him, It is to him thou prayest.

In.

Therefore to him. PR. Is this thy wisdom, king, to sow thy seed Year after year in this unsprouting soil?

Hast thou not proved and found the will of Zeus A barren rock for man with prayer to plough?

IN. His anger be averted ! we judge not god Evil, because our wishes please him not. Oft our shortsighted prayers to heaven ascending Ask there our ruin, and are then denied In kindness above granting: were't not so, Scarce could we pray for fear to pluck our doom Out of the merciful withholding hands.

PR. Why then provokest thou such great goodwill In long denial and kind silence shown?

IN. Fie, fie ! Thou lackest piety : the god's denial Being nought but kindness, there is hope that he Will make that good which is not :---or if indeed Good be withheld in punishment, 'tis well Still to seek on and pray that god relent.

PR. O Sire of Argos, Zeus will not relent.

IN. Yet fire thou say'st is on the earth this day.

PR. Not of his knowledge nor his gift, O king.

IN. By kindness of what god then has man fire?

PR. I say but on the earth unknown to Zeus.

IN. How boastest thou to know, not of his knowledge?

PR. I boast not : he that knoweth not may boast.

IN. Thy daring words bewilder sense with sound.

PR. I thought to find thee ripe for daring deeds. 4

IN. And what the deed for which I prove unripe?

PR. To take of heaven's fire.

In.

And were I ripe,

- What should I dare, beseech you? Pr. The wrath of Zeus.
- IN. Madman, pretending in one hand to hold The wrath of god and in the other fire.

PR. Thou meanest rather holding both in one.

IN. Both impious art thou and incredible.

I

PR. Yet impious only till thou dost believe.

IN. And what believe? Ah, if I could believe! It was but now thou saidst that there was fire, And I was near believing; I believed: Now to believe were to be mad as thou.

CHORUS. He may be mad and yet say true—maybe The heat of prophecy like a strong wine Shameth his reason with exultant speech.

PR. Thou say'st I am mad, and of my sober words Hast called those impious which thou fearest true, Those which thou knowest good, incredible. Consider ere thou judge : be first assured All is not good for man that seems god's will, See, on thy farming skill, thy country toil Which bends to aid the willing fruits of earth, And would promote the seasonable year, The face of nature is not always kind : And if thou search the sum of visible being To find thy blessing featured, 'tis not there: Her best gifts cannot brim the golden cup Of expectation which thine eager arms Lift to her mouthed horn-what then is this Whose wide capacity outbids the scale Of prodigal beauty, so that the seeing eye And hearing ear, retiring unamazed Within their quiet chambers, sit to feast With dear imagination, nor look forth As once they did upon the varying air? Whence is the fathering of this desire Which mocks at fated circumstance? nay though Obstruction lie as cumbrous as the mountains, Nor thy particular hap hath armed desire Against the brunt of evil,-yet not for this Faints man's desire : it is the unquenchable Original cause, the immortal breath of being :

(r6)

Nor is there any spirit on Earth astir, Nor 'neath the airy vault, nor yet beyond In any dweller in far-reaching space, Nobler or dearer than the spirit of man: That spirit which lives in each and will not die, That wooeth beauty, and for all good things Urgeth a voice, or in still passion sigheth, And where he loveth draweth the heart with him. Hast thou not heard him speaking oft and oft, Prompting thy secret musings and now shooting His feathered fancies, or in cloudy sleep Piling his painted dreams? O hark to him ! For else if folly shut his joyous strength To mope in her dark prison without praise, The hidden tears with which he wails his wrong Will sour the fount of life. Q hark to him ! Him may'st thou trust beyond the things thou seest For many things there be upon this earth Unblest and fallen from beauty, to mislead Man's mind, and in a shadow justify The evil thoughts and deeds that work his ill; Fear, hatred, lust and strife, which, if man question The heavenborn spirit within him, are not there. Yet are they bold of face, and Zeus himself, Seeing that Mischief held her head on high, Lest she should go beyond his power to quell And draw the inevitable Fate that waits On utmost ill, himself preventing Fate Hasted to drown the world, and now would crush Thy little remnant : but among the gods Is one whose love and courage stir for thee; Who being of manlike spirit, by many shifts Has stayed the hand of the enemy, who crieth Thy world is not destroyed, thy good shall live :... Thou hast more power for good than Zeus for ill, More courage, justice, more abundant art, (17)

17,

More love, more joy, more reason: though around thee Rank-rooting evil bloom with poisonous crown, Though wan and dolorous and crooked things Have made their home with thee, thy good shall live. Know thy desire: and know that if thou seek it, And seek, and seek, and fear not, thou shalt find.

SEM. (youths). Is this a god that speaketh thus ? SEM. (maidens). He speaketh as a man In love or great affliction yields his soul.

In. Thou, whencesoe'er thou comest, whoe'er thou art Who breakest on our solemn sacrifice With solemn words, I pray thee not depart Till thou hast told me more. This fire I seek Not for myself, whose thin and silvery hair Tells that my toilsome age nears to its end, But for my children and the aftertime, For great the need thereof, wretched our state; Nay, set by what has been, our happiness Is very want, so that what now is not Is but the measure of what yet may be. And first are barest needs, which well I know Fire would supply, but I have hope beyond, That Nature in recovering her right Would kinder prove to man who seeks to learn Her secrets and unfold the cause of life. So tell me, if thou knowest, what is fire? Doth earth contain it? or, since from the sun Fire reaches us, since in the glimmering stars And pallid moon, in lightning, and the glance Of tracking meteors that at nightfall show How in the air a thousand sightless things Travel, and ever on their windswift course Flame when they list and into darkness go,-Since in all these a fiery nature dwells, Is fire an airy essence, a thing of heaven, That. could we poise it, were an alien power (18)

To make our wisdom less, our wonder more? PR. Thy wish to know is good, and happy is he Who thus from chance and change has launched his mind To dwell for ever with undisturbed truth. This high ambition doth not prompt his hand To crime, his right and pleasure are not wronged 540 By folly of his fellows, nor his eye Dimmed by the griefs that move the tears of men. Son of the earth, and citizen may be Of Argos or of Athens and her laws, But still the eternal nature, where he looks, O'errules him with the laws which laws obey, And in her heavenly city enrols his heart. IN. Thus ever have I held of happiness,

The child of heavenly truth, and thus have found it In prayer and meditation and still thought, And thus my peace of mind based on a floor That doth not quaver like the joys of sense : Those I possess enough in seeing my slaves And citizens enjoy, having myself Tasted for once and put their sweets away. But of that heavenly city, of which thou sayest Her laws o'errule us, have I little learnt, For when my wandering spirit hath dared alone The unearthly terror of her voiceless halls, She hath fallen from delight, and without guide Turned back, and from her errand fled for fear.

PR. Think not that thou canst all things know, nor deem Such knowledge happiness : the all-knowing Fates No pleasure have, who sit eternally Spinning the unnumbered threads that Time hath woven, And weaves, upgathering in his furthest house To store from sight; but what 'tis joy to learn Or use to know, that may'st thou ask of right. IN. Then tell me, for thou knowest, what is fire?

PR. Know then, O king, that this fair earth of men, 5701

The Olympus of the gods, and all the heavens Are lesser kingdoms of the boundless space Wherein Fate rules; they have their several times, Their seasons and the limit of their thrones, And from the nature of eternal things Springing, themselves are changed; even as the trees Or birds or beasts of earth, which now arise To being, now in turn decay and die.

The heaven and earth thou seest, for long were held By Fire, a raging power, to whom the Fates 58 Decreed a slow diminishing old age, But to his daughter, who is that gentle goddess, Queen of the clear and azure firmament, In heaven called Hygra, but by mortals Air, To her, the child of his slow doting years, Was given a beauteous youth, not long to outlast His life, but be the pride of his decay, And win to gentler sway his lost domains.

And when the day of time arrived, when Air Took o'er from her decrepit sire the third Of the Sun's kingdoms, the one-mooned earth, Straight came she down to her inheritance.

Gaze on the sun with thine unshaded eye And shrink from what she saw. Forests of fire Whose waving trunks, sucking their fuel, reared In branched flame roaring, and their torrid shades Aye underlit with fire. The mountains lifted And fell and followed like a running sea, And from their swelling flanks spumed froth of fire ; Or, like awakening monsters, mighty mounds Rose on the plain awhile.

SEM. (maidens). He discovers a foe. SEM. (youths). An enemy he paints. PR. These all she quenched Or charmed their fury into the dens and bowels Of earth to smoulder, there the vital heat

To hold for her creation, which then—to her aid Summoning high Reason from his home in heaven,— She wrought anew upon the temperate lands.

- SEM. (maidens). 'Twas well Air won this kingdom of her sire.
- SEM. (youths). Now say how made she green this home of fire.

PR. The waters first she brought, that in their streams And pools and seas innumerable things 611 Brought forth, from whence she drew the fertile seeds Of trees and plants, and last of footed life, That wandered forth, and roaming to and fro, The rejoicing earth peopled with living sound. Reason advised, and Reason praised her toil; Which when she had done she gave him thanks, and said, 'Fair comrade, since thou praisest what is done, Grant me this favour ere thou part from me: Make thou one fair thing for me, which shall suit 620 With what is made, and be the best of all.' 'Twas evening, and that night Reason made man.

- SEM. (maidens). Children of Air are we, and live by fire.
- SEM. (youths). The sons of Reason dwelling on the earth.
- SEM. (maidens). Folk of a pleasant kingdom held between

Fire's reign of terror and the latter day

When dying, soon in turn his child must die.

SEM. (youths). Having a wise creator, above time Or youth or change, from whom our kind inherit The grace and pleasure of the eternal gods.

IN. But how came gods to rule this earth of Air?

PR. They also were her children who first ruled,

Cronos, Iapetus, Hypérion,

- Theia and Rhea, and other mighty names
- That are but names—whom Zeus drave out from heaven, And with his tribe sits on their injured thrones.

IN. There is no greater god in heaven than he. PR. Nor none more cruel nor more tyrannous. In. But what can man against the power of god? PR. Doth not man strive with him? thyself dost pray. IN. That he may pardon our contrarious deeds. б. PR. Alas ! alas ! what more contrarious deed. What greater miracle of wrong than this, That man should know his good and take it not? To what god wilt thou pray to pardon this? In vain was reason given, if man therewith Shame truth, and name it wisdom to cry down The unschooled promptings of his best desire. The beasts that have no speech nor argument Confute him, and the wild hog in the wood 61 That feels his longing, hurries straight thereto, And will not turn his head. How mean'st thou this? ĪΝ. PR. Thou hast desired the good, and now canst feel >How hard it is to kill the heart's desire. IN. Shall Inachus rise against Zeus, as he Rose against Cronos and made war in heaven? PR. I say not so, yet, if thou didst rebel, The tongue that counselled Zeus should counsel thee. SEM. (maidens). This is strange counsel. SEM. (youths). He is not A counsellor for gods or men. б IN. O that I knew where I might counsel find, That one were sent, nay, were 't the least of all The myriad messengers of heaven, to me ! One that should say 'This morn I stood with Zeus. He hath heard thy prayer and sent me : ask a boon, What thing thou wilt, it shall be given thee.' PR. What wouldst thou say to such a messenger?

IN. No need to ask then what I now might ask, How 'tis the gods, if they have care for mortals, Slubber our worst necessities—and the boon, б

No need to tell him that. Pr. Now, king, thou seest Zeus sends no messenger, but I am here. IN. Thy speech is hard, and even thy kindest words Unkind. If fire thou hast, in thee 'tis kind To proffer it: but thou art more unkind Yoking heaven's wrath therewith. Nay, and how knowest thou Zeus will be angry if I take of it? Thou art a prophet : ay, but of the prophets Some have been taken in error, and honest time Has honoured many with forgetfulness. 680 I'll make this proof of thee; Show me thy fire-Nay, give 't me now-if thou be true at all, Be true so far: for the rest there's none will lose, Nor blame thee being false-where is thy fire? PR. O rather, had it thus been mine to give, I would have given it thus: not adding aught Of danger or diminishment or loss ; So strong is my goodwill; nor less than this My knowledge, but in knowledge all my power. Yet since wise guidance with a little means 690 Can more than force unminded, I have skill To conjure evil and outcompass strength. Now give I thee my best, a little gift To work a world of wonder ; 'tis thine own Of long desire, and with it I will give The cunning of invention and all arts In which thy hand instructed may command, Interpret, comfort, or ennoble nature ; With all provision that in wisdom is, And what prevention in foreknowledge lies. 700 IN. Great is the gain. Pr. O king, the gain is thine, The penalty I more than share. Enough, IN. (23)

I take thy gift; nor hast thou stood more firm To every point of thy strange chequered tale, Revealing, threatening, offering more and more, And never all, than I to this resolve.

PR. I knew thy heart would fail not at the hour.

IN. Nay, failed I now, what were my years of toil More than the endurance of a harnessed brute, Flogged to his daily work, that cannot view 710 The high design to which his labour steps? And I of all men were dishonoured most Shrinking in fear, who never shrank from toil. And found abjuring, thrusting stiffly back, The very gift for which I stretched my hands. What though I suffer? are these wintry years Of growing desolation to be held As cherishable as the suns of spring? Nay, only joyful can they be in seeing Long hopes accomplished, long desires fulfilled. 720 And since thou hast touched ambition on the side Of nobleness, and stirred my proudest hope, And wilt fulfil this, shall I count the cost? Rather decay will triumph, and cold death Be lapped in glory, seeing strength arise From weakness, from the tomb go forth a flame.

PR. 'Tis well; thou art exalted now, the grace Becomes thy valiant spirit.

IN. Lo! on this day Which hope despaired to see, hope manifests A vision bright as were the dreams of youth ; When life was easy as a sleeper's faith Who swims in the air and dances on the sea ; When all the good that scarce by toil is won, Or not at all is won, is as a flower Growing in plenty to be plucked at will: Is it a dream again or is it truth, This vision fair of Greece inhabited ?

A fairer sight than all fair Iris sees, Footing her airy arch of colours spun From Ida to Olympus, when she stays To look on Greece and thinks the sight is fair; Far fairer now, clothed with the works of men.

PR. Ay, fairer far: for nature's varied pleasaunce Without man's life is but a desert wild, Which most, where most she mocks him, needs his aid She knows her silence sweeter when it girds His murmurous cities, her wide wasteful curves Larger beside his economic line; Or what can add a mystery to the dark, As doth his measured music when it moves With rhythmic sweetness through the void of night? Nay, all her loveliest places are but grounds Of vantage, where with geometric hand, True square and careful compass he may come To plan and plant and spread abroad his towers, His gardens, temples, palaces and tombs.

And yet not all thou seest, with tranced eye Looking upon the beauty that shall be, The temple-crowned heights, the walled towns, Farms and cool summer seats, nor the broad ways That bridge the rivers and subdue the mountains, Nor all that travels on them, pomp or war Or needful merchandise, nor all the sails Piloting over the wind-dappled blue Of the summer-soothed Ægean, to thy mind Can picture what shall be: these are the face And form of beauty, but her heart and life Shall they be who shall see it, born to shield A happier birthright with intrepid arms, To tread down tyranny and fashion forth A virgin wisdom to subdue the world, To build for passion an eternal song, To shape her dreams in marble, and so sweet

Their speech, that envious Time hearkening shall stay In fear to snatch, and hide his rugged hand. Now is the birthday of thy conquering youth, O man, and lo! thy priest and prophet stand Beside the altar and have blessed the day.

IN. Ay, blessed be this day. Where is thy fire? Or is aught else to do, ere I may take?

PR. This was my message, speak and there is fire.

IN. There shall be fire. Await me here awhile.

I go to acquaint my house, and bring them forth.

Exit.

CHORUS.

Hearken, O Argos, hearken ! There will be fire. And thou, O Earth, give ear ! There will be fire.

SEM. (maidens). Who shall be sent to fetch this fire for the king?

SEM. (youths). Shall we put forth in boats to reap, And shall the waves for harvest yield The rootless flames that nimbly leap Upon their ever-shifting field?

SEM. (maidens). Or we in olive-groves go shake And beat the fruiting sprays, till all The silv'ry glitter which they make Beneath into our baskets fall?

SEM. (youths). To bind in sheaves and bear away The white unshafted darts of day?

SEM. (maidens). And from the shadow one by one Pick up the playful oes of sun?

SEM. (youths). Or wouldst thou mine a passage deep Until the darksome fire is found,

Which prisoned long in seething sleep

Vexes the caverns underground?

SEM. (maidens). Or bid us join our palms perchance,

(26)

To cup the slant and chinkèd beam,
Which mounting morn hath sent to dance
Across our chamber while we dream ?
SEM. (youths). Say whence and how shall we fetch this fire for the king?
Our hope is impatient of vain debating. SIO
SEM. (maidens). My heart is stirred at the name of the wondrous thing,
And trembles awaiting.

ODE.

A coy inquisitive spirit, the spirit of wonder, Possesses the child in his cradle, when mortal things Are new, yet a varied surface and nothing under. It busies the mind on trifles and toys and brings Her grasp from nearer to further, from smaller to greater, And slowly teaches flight to her fledgeling wings.

Where'er she flutters and falls surprises await her : She soars, and beauty's miracles open in sight, . 820 The flowers and trees and beasts of the earth ; and later The skies of day, the moon and the stars of night ; 'Neath which she scarcely venturing goes demurely, With mystery clad, in the awe of depth and height.

O happy for still unconscious, for ah ! how surely, How soon and surely will disenchantment come, When first to herself she boasts to walk securely, And drives the master spirit away from his home;

Seeing the marvellous things that make the morning Are marvels of every-day, familiar, and some 830 Have lost with use, like earthly robes, their adorning, As earthly joys the charm of a first delight, And some are fallen from awe to neglect and scorning ; Until—

O tarry not long, dear needed sprite!

Till thou, though uninvited, with fancy returnest To hallow beauty and make the dull heart bright : To inhabit again thy gladdened kingdom in earnest ; Wherein—from the smile of beauty afar forecasting The pleasure of god, thou livest at peace and yearnest With wonder everlasting.

SECOND PART

Re-enter from the palace INACHUS, with ARGEIA and IO

INACHUS.

THAT but a small and easy thing now seems, Which from my house when I came forth at noon A dream was and beyond the reach of man. 'Tis now a fancy of the will, a word, Liberty's lightest prize. Yet still as one Who loiters on the threshold of delight, Delaying pleasure for the love of pleasure, I dally—Come, Argeia, and share my triumph ! And set our daughter by thee; though her eyes Are young, there are no eyes this day so young As shall forget this day—while one thing more I ask of thee; this evil, will it light On me or on my house or on mankind?

PR. Scarce on mankind, O Inachus, for Zeus A second time failing will not again Measure his spite against their better fate. And now the terror, which awhile o'er Earth Its black wings spread, shall up to Heaven ascend And gnaw the tyrant's heart : for there is whispered A word gone forth to scare the mighty gods ; How one must soon be born, and born of men,

Who shall drive out their impious host from heaven, And from their skyey dwellings rule mankind In truth and love. So scarce on man will fall This evil, nay, nor on thyself, O king; Thy name shall live an honoured name in Greece.

IN. Then on my house 'twill be. Know'st thou no more? PR. Know I no more? Ay, if my purpose fail
'Tis not for lack of knowing: if I suffer,
'Tis not that poisonous fear hath slurred her task, 870
Or let brave resolution walk unarmed.
My ears are callous to the threats of Zeus,
The direful penalties his oath hath laid
On every good that I in heart and hand
Am sworn to accomplish, and for all his threats,
Lest their accomplishment should outrun mine,
Am bound the more. Nay, nor his evil minions,
Nor force, nor strength, shall bend me to his will.

ARGEIA.

Alas, alas, what heavy words are these, That in the place of joy forbid your tongue, 880 That cloud and change his face, while desperate sorrow Sighs in his heart? I came to share a triumph : All is dismay and terror. What is this?

IN. True, wife, I spake of triumph, and I told thee The winter-withering hope of my whole life Has flower'd to-day in amaranth : what the hope Thou knowest, who hast shared ; but the condition I told thee not and thou hast heard : this prophet, Who comes to bring us fire, hath said that Zeus Wills not the gift he brings, and will be wroth With us that take it.

AR. O doleful change, I came In pious purpose, nay, I heard within The hymn to glorious Zeus : I rose and said, The mighty god now bends, he thrusts aside 890

His heavenly supplicants to hear the prayer Of Inachus his servant; let him hear. O let him turn away now lest he hear. Nay, frown not on me; though a woman's voice That counsels is but heard impatiently, Yet by thy love, and by the sons I bare thee, By this our daughter, our last ripening fruit, By our long happiness and hope of more, Hear me and let me speak.

IN. Well, wife, speak on.

AR. Thy voice forbids more than thy words invite : Yet say whence comes this stranger. Know'st thou not? Yet whencesoe'er, if he but wish us well, He will not bound his kindness in a day. Do nought in haste. Send now to Sicyon And fetch thy son Phorôneus, for his stake In this is more than thine, and he is wise. 'Twere well Phorôneus and Ægialeus Were both here : maybe they would both refuse The strange conditions which this stranger brings. Were we not happy too before he came? Doth he not offer us unhappiness? Bid him depart, and at some other time, When you have well considered, then return.

IN. 'Tis his conditions that we now shall hear.

AR. O hide them yet! Are there not tales enough Of what the wrathful gods have wrought on men? Nay, 'twas this very fire thou now wouldst take, Which vain Salmoneus, son of Æolus, Made boast to have, and from his rattling car Threw up at heaven to mock the lightning. Him The thunderer stayed not to deride, but sent One blinding fork, that in the vacant sky Shook like a serpent's tongue, which is but seen In memory, and he was not, or for burial Rode with the ashes of his royal city

Upon the whirlwind of the riven air. And after him his brother Athamas. King of Orchomenos, in frenzy fell For Hera's wrath, and raving killed his son; And would have killed fair Ino, but that she fled Into the sea, preferring there to woo The choking waters, rather than that the arm Which had so oft embraced should do her wrong. For which old crimes the gods yet unappeased Demand a sacrifice, and the king's son Dreads the priest's knife, and all the city mourns. Or shall I say what shameful fury it was With which Poseidon smote Pasiphaë, But for neglect of a recorded vow: Or how Actaon fared of Artemis When he surprised her, most himself surprised : And even while he looked his boasted bow Fell from his hands, and through his veins there ran A strange oblivious trouble, darkening sense Till he knew nothing but a hideous fear Which bade him fly, and faster, as behind . He heard his hounds give tongue, that through the wood Were following, closing, caught him and tore him down. And many more thus perished in their prime; Lycaon and his fifty sons, whom Zeus In their own house spied on, and unawares Watching at hand, from his disguise arose And overset the table where they sat Around their impious feast and slew them all: Alcyone and Ceyx, queen and king, Who for their arrogance were changed to birds : ŧ And Cadmus now a serpent, once a king : And saddest Niobe, whom not the love Of Leto aught availed, when once her boast Went out, though all her crime was too much pride Of heaven's most precious gift, her children fair.

Six daughters had she, and six stalwart sons ; But Leto bade her two destroy the twelve. And somewhere now, among lone mountain rocks On Sipylus, where couch the nymphs at night Who dance all day by Achelous' stream, 970 The once proud mother lies, herself a rock, And in cold breast broods o'er the goddess' wrong.

IN. Now hush thy fear. See how thou tremblest still. Or if thou fear, fear passion; for the freshes Of tenderness and motherly love will drown The eye of judgment: yet, since even excess Of the soft quality fits woman well, I praise thee; nor would ask thee less to aid With counsel, than in love to share my choice. Tho' weak thy hands to poise, thine eye may mark This balance, how the good of all outweighs The good of one or two, though these be us. Let not reluctance shame the sacrifice Which in another thou wert first to praise.

AR. Alas for me, for thee and for our children, Who, being our being, having all our having, If they fare ill, our pride lies in the dust.

IN. O deem not a man's children are but those Out of his loins engendered—our spirit's love Hath such prolific consequence, that Virtue Cometh of ancestry more pure than blood, And counts her seed as sand upon the shore. Happy is he whose body's sons proclaim Their father's honour, but more blest to whom The world is dutiful, whose children spring Out of all nations, and whose pride the proud Rise to regenerate when they call him sire.

AR. Thus, husband, ever have I bought and buy Nobleness cheaply being linked with thee. Forgive my weakness; see, I now am bold; Tell me the worst I'll hear and wish 'twere more.

IN. Retire-thy tears perchance may stir again. AR. Nav. I am full of wonder and would hear. PR. Bid me not tell if ye have fear to hear; But have no fear. Knowledge of future things Can nothing change man's spirit : and though he seem To aim his passion darkly, like a shaft Shot toward some fearful sound in thickest night, He hath an owl's eye, and must blink at day. The springs of memory, that feed alike 1010 His thought and action, draw from furthest time Their constant source, and hardly brook constraint Of actual circumstance, far less attend On glassed futurity; nay, death itself, His fate unquestioned, his foretasted pain, The certainty foreknown of things unknown, Cannot discourage his habitual being In its appointed motions, to make waver His eager hand, nor loosen the desire Of the most feeble melancholy heart 1020 Even from the unhopefullest of all her dreams. IN. Since then I long to know, now something say Of what will come to mine when I am gone. PR. And let the maid too hear, for 'tis of her I speak, to tell her whither she should turn The day ye drive her forth from hearth and home. IN. What say'st thou? drive her out? and we? from home? Banish the comfort of our eyes? Nay rather Believe that these obedient hands will tear The heart out of my breast, ere it do this. 1030 PR. When her wild cries arouse the house at night, And, running to her bed, ye see her set Upright in trancèd sleep, her starting hair With deathly sweat bedewed, in horror shaking, Her eyeballs fixed upon the unbodied dark, Through which a draping mist of luminous gloom (33)D

Drifts from her couch away,—when, if asleep, She walks as if awake, and if awake Dreams, and as one who nothing hears or sees, Lives in a sick and frantic mood, whose cause She understands not or is loth to tell—

AR. Ah, ah, my child, my child !—Dost thou feel aught? Speak to me—nay, 'tis nothing—hearken not.

PR. Ye then distraught with sorrow, neither knowing Whether to save were best or lose, will seek Apollo's oracle.

IN. And what the answer? Will it discover nought to avert this sorrow?

PR. Or else thy whole race perish root and branch.

In. Alas! alas!

PR. Yet shall she live though lost; from human form Changed, that thou wilt not know thy daughter more. 1051

IN. Woe, woe! my thought was praying for her death.

PR. In Hera's temple shall her prison be At high Mycenæ, till from heaven be sent Hermes, with song to soothe and sword to slay The beast whose hundred eyes devour the door.

IN. Enough, enough is told, unless indeed, The beast once slain, thou canst restore our child.

PR. Nay, with her freedom will her wanderings Begin. Come hither, child—nay, let her come : What words remain to speak will not offend her, And shall in memory quicken, when she looks To learn where she should go ;—for go she must, Stung by the venomous fly, whose angry flight She still will hear about her, till she come To lay her sevenfold-carried burden down Upon the Æthiop shore where he shall reign.

IN. But say—say first, what form— PR. In snow-white hide Of those that feel the goad and wear the yoke. 1069 IN. Round-hoofed, or such as tread with cloven foot?

PR. Wide-horned, large-eyed, broad-fronted, and the feet Cloven which carry her to her far goal.

IN. Will that of all these evils be the term?

PR. Ay, but the journey first which she must learn. Hear now, my child ; the day when thou art free, Leaving the lion-gate, descend and strike The Trêtan road to Nemea, skirting wide The unhunted forest o'er the watered plain To walled Cleônæ, whence the traversed stream To Corinth guides : there enter not, but pass 1080 To narrow Isthmus, where Poseidon won A country from Apollo, and through the town Of Crommyon, till along the robber's road Pacing, thy left eye meet the westering sun O'er Geraneia, and thou reach the hill Of Megara, where Car thy brother's babe In time shall rule; next past Eleusis climb Stony Panactum and the pine-clad slopes Of Phyle; shun the left-hand way, and keep The rocks; the second day thy feet shall tread 1090 The plains of Græa, whence the roadway serves Aulis and Mycalessus to the point Of vext Euripus: fear not then the stream, Nor scenting think to taste, but plunging in Breast its salt current to the further shore. For cn this island mayst thou lose awhile Thy maddening pest, and rest and pasture find, And from the heafs of bold Macistus see The country left and sought : but when thou feel Thy torment urge, move down, recross the flood, 1100 And west by Harma's fenced gap arrive At seven-gated Thebes: thy friendly goddess Ongan Athenè has her seat without.

I pray that she may slay for thee the maddening fly.

CHOR. Now if she may not stay thy toilsome destined steps,

PR. Keep not her sanctuary long, but seek Bœotian Ascra, where the Muses' fount, Famed Aganippè, wells : Ocalea Pass, and Tilphusa's northern steeps descend By Alalcomenæ, the goddess' town. 1110 Guard now the lake's low shore, till thou have crossed Hyrcana and Cephissus, the last streams Which feed its reedy pools, when thou shalt come Between two mountains that enclose the way By peaked Abæ to Hyampolis. The right-hand path that thither parts the vale Opes to Cyrtonè and the Locrian lands ; Toward Elateia thou, where o'er the marsh A path with stones is laid; and thence beyond To Thronium, Tarphè, and Thermopylæ, 1120 Where rocky Lamia views the Maliac gulf. CHOR. If further she should go, will she not see

That other Argos, the Dodonian land?

PR. Crossing the Phthian hills thou next shalt reach Pharsalus, and Olympus' peakèd snows Shall guide thee o'er the green Pelasgic plains For many a day, but to Argissa come Let old Peneius thy slow pilot be Through Tempè, till they turn upon his left Crowning the wooded slopes with splendours bare. 113c Thence issuing forth on the Pierian shore Northward of Ossa thou shalt touch the lands Of Macedon.

CHOR. Alas, we wish thee speed, But bid thee here farewell; for out of Greece Thou goest 'mongst the folk whose chattering speech Is like the voice of birds, nor home again Wilt thou return.

PR. Thy way along the coast Lies till it southward turn, when thou shalt seek Where wide on Strymon's plain the hindered flood

Spreads like a lake ; thy course to his oppose 1140 And face him to the mountain whence he comes : Which doubled, Thrace receives thee : barbarous names Of mountain, town and river, and a people Strange to thine eyes and ears, the Agathyrsi, Of pictured skins, who owe no marriage law, And o'er whose gay-spun garments sprent with gold Their hanging hair is blue. Their torrent swim That measures Europe in two parts, and go Eastward along the sea, to mount the lands Beyond man's dwelling, and the rising steeps 1150 That face the sun untrodden and unnamed.—

Know to earth's verge remote thou then art come, The Scythian tract and wilderness forlorn, Through whose rude rocks and frosty silences No path shall guide thee then, nor my words now. There as thou toilest o'er the treacherous snows, A sound then thou shalt hear to stop thy breath, And prick thy trembling ears; a far-off cry, Whose throat seems the white mountain and its passion The woe of earth. Flee not, nor turn not back : 1160 Let thine ears drink and guide thine eyes to see That sight whose terrors shall assuage thy terror. Whose pain shall kill thy pain. Stretched on the rock, Naked to scorching sun, to pinching frost, To wind and storm and beaks of winged fiends From year to year he lies. Refrain to ask His name and crime-nay, haply when thou see him Thou wilt remember-'tis thy tyrant's foe, Man's friend, who pays his chosen penalty. Draw near, my child, for he will know thy need, 1170 And point from land to land thy further path.

CHORUS.

O miserable man, hear now the worst. O weak and tearful race,

(37)

Born to unhappiness, see now thy cause Doomed and accurst !

It surely were enough, the bad and good Together mingled, against chance and ill To strive, and prospering by turns, Now these, now those, now folly and now skill, Alike by means well understood ruse Or 'gainst all likelihood ; Loveliness slaving to the unlovely will That overrides the right and laughs at law.

But always all in awe And imminent dread : Because there is no mischief thought or said, Imaginable or unguessed, But it may come to be; nor home of rest, Nor hour secure : but anywhere, At any moment ; in the air, 1190 Or on the earth or sea. Or in the fair And tender body itself it lurks, creeps in, Or seizes suddenly, Torturing, burning, withering, devouring, Shaking, destroying; till tormented life Sides with the slaver, not to be, And from the cruel strife Falls to fate overpowering.

Or if some patient heart, 1200 In toilsome steps of duty tread apart, Thinking to win her peace within herself, And thus awhile succeed : She must see others bleed, At others' misery moan, And learn the common suffering is her own, From which it is no freedom to be freed :

Nay, Nature, her best nurse, Is tender but to breed a finer sense, Which she may easier wound, with smart the worse 1210 And torture more intense.

And no strength for thee but the thought of duty, Nor any solace but the love of beauty. O Right's toil unrewarded ! O Love's prize unaccorded !

I say this might suffice, O tearful and unstable And miserable man, Were 't but from day to day Thy miserable lot, 1220 This might suffice, I say, To term thee miserable. But thou of all thine ills too must take thought, Must grow familiar till no curse astound thee, With tears recall the past, With tears the times forecast ; With tears, with tears thou hast The scapeless net spread in thy sight around thee.

How then support thy fate, O miserable man, if this befall, That he who loves thee and would aid thee, daring To raise an arm for thy deliverance, Must for his courage suffer worse than all?

IN. Bravest deliverer, for thy prophecy Has torn the veil which hid thee from my eyes, If thyself art that spirit, of whom some things Were darkly spoken,—nor can I doubt thou art, Being that the heaven its fire withholds not from thee Nor time his secrets,—tell me now thy name, That I may praise thee rightly; and my late (39)

Unwitting words pardon thou, and these who still In blinded wonder kneel not to thy love.

PR. Speak not of love. See, I am moved with hate, And fiercest anger, which will sometimes spur The heart to extremity, till it forget That there is any joy save furious war. Nay, were there now another deed to do, Which more could hurt our enemy than this, Which here I stand to venture, here would I leave thee Conspiring at his altar, and fly off To plunge the branding terror in his soul. But now the rising passion of my will Already jars his reaching sense, already From heaven he bids his minion Hermes forth To bring his only rebel to his feet. Therefore no more delay, the time is short.

IN. I take, I take. 'Tis but for thee to give.

PR. O heavenly fire, life's life, the eye of day, Whose nimble waves upon the starry night Of boundless ether love to play, Carrying commands to every gliding sprite To feed all things with colour, from the ray Of thy bright-glancing, white And silver-spinning light : Unweaving its thin tissue for the bow Of Iris, separating countless hues Of various splendour for the grateful flowers To crown the hasting hours, Changing their special garlands as they choose.

O spirit of rage and might, Who canst unchain the links of winter stark, And bid earth's stubborn metals flow like oil. Her porphyrous heart-veins boil; Whose arrows pierce the cloudy shields of dark; Let now this flame, which did to life awaken

t

Beyond the cold dew-gathering veils of morn, And thence by me was taken, And in this reed was borne, A smothered theft and gift to man below, Here with my breath revive, Restore thy lapsèd realm, and be the sire Of many an earthly fire.	1 28a
O flame, flame bright and live, Appear upon the altar as I blow.
CHOR. 'Twas in the marish reed. See to his mouth he sets its hollow flute And breathes therein with heed, As one who from a pipe with breathings mute Will nusic's voice evoke.— See, the curl of a cloud. IN. The smoke, the smoke ! SEMICHORUS. Thin clouds mounting higher. IN. 'Tis smoke, the smoke of fire. SEMICHORUS. Thick they come and thicker, Quick arise and quicker, Higher still and higher. Their wreaths the wood enfold. —I see a spot of gold. They spring from a spot of gold, Red gold, deep among The leaves : a golden tongue. O behold, behold, Dancing tongues of gold, That leaping aloft flicker, Higher still and higher. IN. 'Tis fire, the flame of fire ! SEMICHORUS. The blue smoke overhead Is turned to angry red.	1290
The fire, the fire, it stirs. Hark, a crackling sound, ( 41 )	1310

As when all around Ripened pods of furze Split in the parching sun Their dry caps one by one, And shed their seeds on the ground. -Ah! what clouds arise. Away! O come away. The wind-wafted smoke, Blowing all astray, Blinds and pricks my eyes. Ah! I choke, I choke, -All the midst is rent : See, the twigs are all By the flaming spent White and gold, and fall. How they writhe, resist, Blacken, flake, and twist, Snap in gold and fall. -See the stars that mount, Momentary bright Flitting specks of light More than eye can count. Insects of the air, As in summer night Show a fire in flying Flickering here and there, Waving past and dying. -Look, a common cone Of the mountain pine Solid gold is grown; Till its scales outshine, Standing each alone In the spiral rows Of their fair design, All the brightest shows Of the sun's decline.

1340

-Hark, there came a hiss, Like a startled snake Sliding through the brake. Oh, and what is this? 135 Smaller flames that flee Sidelong from the tree, Hark, they hiss, they hiss. -How the gay flames flicker, Spurting, dancing, leaping Quicker yet and guicker, Higher yet and higher, -Flaming, flaring, fuming, Cracking, crackling, creeping, Hissing and consuming : 136 Mighty is the fire. IN. Stay, stay, cease your rejoicings. Where is he, The prophet,-nay, what say I,-the god, the giver? CHOR. He is not here—he is gone. Search, search around IN. Search all, search well. He is gone,—he is not here. CHOR. IN. The palace gate lies open : go, Argeia, Maybe he went within : go seek him there. Exit AR Look down the sea road, down the country road : Follow him if ye see him. He is not there. CHOR. IN. Strain, strain your eyes : look well : search everywhere Look townwards-is he there? Part of CHORUS returning. He is not there.— 137: Other part returning. He is not there. Argeia re-entering. He is not there. AR. CHOR. O see! See where? CHOR. (43)

Prometheus

See on the altar-see ! CHOR. CHOR. What see ye on the altar? Here in front CHOR. Words newly writ. What words? CHOR. CHOR. Λ name— Ay true-Τn. There is the name. How like a child was I, That I must wait till these dumb letters gave The shape and soul to knowledge : when the god Stood here so self-revealed to ears and eyes That, 'tis a god I said, yet wavering still, Doubting what god,-and now, who else but he? I knew him, yet not well; I knew him not: Prometheus-ay, Prometheus. Know ye, my children, This name we see was writ by him we seek. 'Tis his own name, his own heart-stirring name, Feared and revered among the immortal gods · Divine Prometheus: see how here the large Cadmeian characters run, scoring out The hated title of his ancient foe,-To Zeus 'twas made,-and now 'tis to Prometheus-Writ with the charrèd reed-theft upon theft. He hath stolen from Zeus his altar, and with his fire Hath lit our sacrifice unto himself. 16 Prometheus, friend and firegiver, For good or ill thy thefts and gifts are ours. We worshipped thee unknowing. But now where is he? CHOR. IN. No need to search-we shall not see him more. We look in vain. The high gods when they choose Put on and off the solid visible shape Which more deceives our hasty sense, than when Seeing them not we judge they stand aloof. And he, he now is gone ; his work is done : 'Tis ours to see it be not done in vain.

(44)

CHOR. What is to do? speak, bid, command, we fly. IN. Go some and fetch more wood to feed the fire : And some into the city to proclaim That fire is ours : and send out messengers To Corinth, Sicyon, Megara and Athens And to Mycenæ, telling we have fire: And bid that in the temples they prepare 1410 Their altars, and send hither careful men To learn of me what things the time requires. Exit part of CHORUS. The rest remain to end our feast; and now Seeing this altar is no more to Zeus, But shall for ever be with smouldering heat Fed for the god who first set fire thereon, Change ye your hymns, which in the praise of Zeus Ye came to sing, and change the prayer for fire Which ye were wont to raise, to high thanksgiving, Praising aloud the giver and his gift. 1420

Part of CHORUS. Now our happy feast hath ending, While the sun in heaven descending Sees us gathered round a light Born to cheer his vacant night. Praising him to-day who came Bearing far his heavenly flame : Came to crown our king's desire With his gift of golden fire.

SEMICHORUS. My heart, my heart is freed. Now can I sing. I loose a shaft from my bow, 143c A song from my heart to heaven, and watch it speed. It revels in the air, and straight to its goal doth go. I have no fear. I praise distinguishing duly: I praise the love that I love and I worship truly. Goodness I praise, not might, Nor more will I speak of wrong,

But of lovingkindness and right ; -And the god of my love shall rejoice at the sound of my song. I praise him whom I have seen: As a man he is beautiful, blending prime and youth, 1440 Of gentle and lovely mien, With the step and the eyes of truth, As a god, -O were I a god, but thus to be man ! As a god, I set him above The rest of the gods; for his gifts are pledges of love, The words of his mouth rare and precious, His eyes' glance and the smile of his lips are love. He is the one Alone of all the gods, Of righteous Themis the lofty-spirited son, 1450 Who hates the wrongs they have done. He is the one I adore. For if there be love in heaven with evil to cope,-And he promised us more and more,-For what may we not hope?

ODE.

My soul is drunk with joy, her new desire In far forbidden places wanders away. Her hopes with free bright-coloured wings of fire Upon the gloom of thought Are sailing out. Awhile they rise, awhile to rest they softly fall, Like butterflies, that flit Across the mountains, or upon a wall Winking their idle fans at pleasure sit.

O my vague desires ! Ye lambent flames of the soul, her offspring fires : That are my soul herself in pangs sublime Rising and flying to heaven before her time :

What doth tempt you forth To melt in the south or shiver in the frosty north? 1470 What seek ye or find ye in your random flying, For ever soaring aloft, soaring and dying? Joy, the joy of flight; They hide in the sun, they flare and dance in the night. Gone up, gone out of sight-and ever again Follow fresh tongues of fire, fresh pangs of pain. Ah! could I control These vague desires, these leaping flames of the soul : Could I but quench the fire, ah ! could I stay My soul that flieth, alas, and dieth away ! 1480 Enter other part of CHORUS. Part of CHOR. Here is wood to feed the fire-Never let its flames expire. Sing ye still while we advance Round the fire in measured dance. While the sun in heaven descending Sees our happy feast have ending. Weave ye still your joyous song, While we bear the wood along. SEMICHORUS. But O return. Return, thou flower of the gods ! 1490 Remember the limbs that toil and the hearts that yearn, Remember, and soon return ! To prosper with peace and skill Our hands in the works of pleasure, beauty and use. Return, and be for us still Our shield from the anger of Zeus. And he, if he raise his arm in anger to smite thee, And think for the good thou hast done with pain to requit $\epsilon$ thee, Vengeance I heard thee tell, And the curse I take for my own, \$500 That his place is prepared in hell, (47)

- And a greater than he shall hurl him down from his throne. Down, down from his throne !
- For the god who shall rule mankind from the deathless skies
- By mercy and truth shall be known,
- In love and peace shall arise.
- For him,---if again I hear him thunder above,
- O then, if I crouch or start,
- I will press thy lovingkindness more to my heart,
- Remember the words of thy mouth rare and precious, 1510 Thy heart of hearts and gifts of divine love.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY

The scene is in the flowery valley below Enna. Hades prologizes, and tells how he has come with consent of Zeus to carry off Persephone to be his queen. The Chorus of Ocean nymphs entering praise Sicily and the spring. Persephone enters with Athena and Artemis to gather flowers for the festival of Zeus. Persephone being left alone is carried off by Hades.

In the second act, which is ten days later, the Chorus deplore the loss of Persephone. Demeter entering upbraids them in a choric scene and describes her search for Persephone until she learnt her fate from Helios. Afterwards she describes her plan for compelling Zeus to restore her. Hermes brings from Zeus a command to Demeter that she shall return to Olympus. She sends defiance to Zeus, and the Chorus end the scene by votwing to win Poseidon to aid Demeter.

In the third act, which is a year later, the Chorus, who have been summoned by Demeter to witness the restoration of Persephone, lament Demeter's anger. Demeter narrates the Eleusinian episode of her wanderings, until Hermes enters leading Persephone. After their greeting Demeter hears from Hermes the terms of Persephone's restoration; she is reconciled thereto by Persephone, and invites her to Eleusis. The Chorus sing and crown Persephone with flowers.

HADES.

I AM the King of Hell, nor prone to vex Eternal destiny with weak complaint; Nor when I took my kingdom did I mourn My lot, from heav'n expell'd, deny'd to enjoy Its radiant revelry and ambrosial feast, Nor blamed our mighty Sisters, that not one Would share my empire in the shades of night.

But when a younger race of gods arose, And Zeus set many sons on heav'nly seats, And many daughters dower'd with new domain, And year by year were multiply'd on earth Their temples and their statu'd sanctities, Mirrors of man's ideas that grow apace, Yea, since man's mind was one with my desire That Hell should have a queen,—for heav'n hath queens Many, nor on all earth reigns any king In unkind isolation like to me,— I claimed from Zeus that of the fair immortals One should be given to mè to grace my throne.

Willing he was, and quick to praise my rule, And of mere justice thêre had granted me Whome'er I chose : but 'Brother mine,' he said, 'Great as my power among the gods, this thing I cannot compass, that a child of mine, Who once hath tasted of celestial life, Should all forgo, and destitute of bliss Descend into the shades, albeit to sit An equal on thy throne. Take whom thou wilt;

But by triumphant force persuade, as erst I conquer'd heav'n.' Said I 'My heart is set : I take Demeter's child Persephone; Dost thou consent?' Whereto he gave his nod. And I am come to-day with hidden powers, Ev'n unto Enna's fair Sicilian field, To rob her from the earth. 'Tis here she wanders With all her train : nor is this flow'ry vale Fairer among the fairest vales of earth, Nor any flower within this flow'ry vale Fair above other flowers, as she is fairest Among immortal goddesses, the daughter Of gentle-eyed Demeter; and her passion Is for the flowers, and every tenderness That I have long'd for in my fierce abodes. But she hath always in attendant guard The dancing nymphs of Ocean, and to-day The wise Athena and chaste Artemis Indulge her girlish fancy, gathering flowers To deck the banner of my golden brother, Whose thought they guess not, tho' their presence here Affront his will and mine. If once alone I spy her, I can snatch her swiftly down : And after shall find favour for my fault, When I by gentle means have won her love.

I hear their music now. • Hither they come : I'll to my ambush in the rocky cave.

ACT I

Enter Chorus of Oceanides, with baskets.

OCEANIDES.

Gay and lovely is earth, man's decorate dwelling; With fresh beauty ever varying hour to hour. As now bathed in azure joy she awakeneth With bright morn to the sun's life-giving effluence, Or sunk into solemn darkness aneath the stars In mysterious awe slumbereth out the night, Then from darkness again plunging again to day; Like dolphins in a swift herd that accompany Poseidon's chariot whén he rebukes the waves. But no country to mè 'neath the enarching air Is fair as Sicily's flowery fruitful isle: Always lovely, whether winter adorn the hills With his silvery snow, or generous summer Outpour her heavy gold on the river-valleys. Her rare beauty giveth gaiety unto man,

A delite dear to immortals.

And one season of all chiefly deliteth us, When fair Spring is afield. O happy is the Spring ! Now birds early arouse their pretty minstreling ; Now down its rocky hill murmureth ev'ry rill ; Now all bursteth anew, wantoning in the dew Their bells of bonny blue, their chalices honey'd. Unkind frost is away ; now sunny is the day ; Now man thinketh aright, Life it is all delite. Now maids playfully dance o'er enamel'd meadows, And with goldy blossom deck forehead and bosom ; While old Pan rollicketh thro' the budding shadows, Voicing his merry reed, laughing aloud to lead

The echoes madly rejoicing.

We be Ocëanids, Persephone's lovers, Who all came hurrying joyfully from the sca Ere daybreak to obey her belovëd summons. At her fancy to pluck these violets, lilies, Windflow'rs and daffodils, all for a festival Whereat shé will adorn Zeuses honour'd banner. And with Persephone there cometh Artemis And grave Pallas . . . Hilloo ! already they approach ! Haste, haste ! stoop to gather ! seem busy ev'ryone ! Crowd all your wicker arcs with the meadow-lilies ; Lest our disreverenc'd deity should rebuke

The divine children of Ocean.

[Enter ATHENA, PERSEPHONE, and ARTEMIS. Persephone has a basket half fill'd with gather'd flowers.]

ATHENA.

These then are Enna's flowery fields, and here In midmost isle the garden of thy choice?

PERSEPHONE.

Is not all as I promist? Feel ye not Your earthborn ecstasy concenter'd here ? 100 Tell me, Athena, of thy wisdom, whénce Cometh this joy of earth, this penetrant Palpitant exultation so unlike The balanc't calm of high Olympian state? Is 't in the air, the tinted atmosphere Whose gauzy veil, thrown on the hills, will paint Their features, changing with the gradual day, Rosy or azure, clouded now, and now Again afire? Or is it that the sun's Electric beams-which shot in circling fans 110 Whirl all things with them-as they strike the earth Excite her yearning heart, till stir'd beneath

(54)

The rocks and silent plains, she cannot hold Her fond desires, but sends them bursting forth In scents and colour'd blossoms of the spring?—-Breathes it not in the flowers?

ATH. Fair are the flowers, Dear child; and yet to me far lovelier Than all their beauty is thy love for them. Whate'er I love, I contemplate my love More than the object, and am so rejoic'd. For life is one, and like a level sea Life's flood of joy. Thou wond'rest at the flowers, But I would teach thee wonder of thy wonder : Would shew thee beauty in the desert-sand, The worth of things unreckt of, and the truth That thy desire and love may spring of evil And ugliness, and that Earth's ecstasy May dwell in darkness also, in sorrow and tears.

PER. I'd not believe it : why then should we pluck The flowers and not the stalks without the flowers ? Or do thy stones breathe scent? Would not men laugh To see the banner of almighty Zeus Adorn'd with ragged roots and straws?—Dear Artemis, How lovest thou the flowers ?

ARTEMIS.

I'll love them better

Ever for thy sake, Cora; but for me The joy of Earth is in the breath of life And animal motions: nor are flowery sweets Dear as the scent of life. This petal'd cup, What is it by the wild fawn's liquid eye Eloquent as love-music 'neath the moon ? Nay, not a flower in all thy garden here, Nor wer't a thousand-thousand-fold enhanc't In every charm, but thou wouldst turn from it To view the antler'd stag, that in the glade

With the coy gaze of his majestic fear Faced thee a moment ere he turn'd to fly. PER. But why, then, hunt and kill what thou so lovest? AR. Dost thou not pluck thy flowers? 'Tis not the same PER. Thy victims fly for life : they pant, they scream. AR. Were they not mortal, sweet, I coud not kill them. They kill each other in their lust for life; 15 Nay, cruelly persecute their blemisht kin : And they that thus are exiled from the herd Slink heart-brok'n to sepulchral solitudes, Defenceless and dishonour'd ; there to fall Prey to the hungry glutton of the cave, Or stand in mute pain lingering, till they drop In their last lair upon the ancestral bones. PER. What is it that offends me? 'Tis Pity, child, ATH. The mortal thought that clouds the brow of man тбс With dark reserve, or poisoning all delite Drives him upon his knees in tearful prayer To avert his momentary qualms : till Zeus At his reiterated plaint grows wrath, And burdens with fresh curse the curse of care. And they that haunt with men are apt to take Infection of his mind : thy mighty mother Leans to his tenderness. Per. How should man, dwelling On earth that is so gay, himself be sad? Is not earth gay? Look on the sea, the sky, 170 The flowers ! 'Tis sad to him because 'tis gay.----Атн. For whether he consider how the flowers, -Thy miracles of beauty above praise,-Are wither'd in the moment of their glory, So that of all the mounting summer's wealth The show is chang'd each day, and each day dies, (56)

Of no more count in Nature's estimate Than crowded bubbles of the fighting foam : Or whether 'tis the sea, whose azure waves Play'd in the same infinity of motion Ages ere he beheld it, and will play For ages after him ;—alike 'tis sad To read how beauty dies and he must die.

PER. Were I a man, I would not worship thee, Thou cold essential wisdom. If, as thou say'st, Thought makes men sorrowful, why help his thought To quench enjoyment, who might else as I Revel among bright things, and feast his sense With beauty well-discern'd? Nay, why came ye To share my pastime? Ye love not the flowers.

ATH. Indeed I love thee, child; and love thy flowers, Nor less for loving wisely. All emotions, Whether of gods or men, all loves and passions, Are of two kinds; they are either inform'd by wisdom, To reason obedient,—or they are unconducted, Flames of the burning life. The brutes of earth And Pan their master know these last; the first Are seen in me: betwixt the extremes there lie Innumerable alloys and all of evil.

PER. Nay, and I guess your purpose with me well: I am a child, and ye would nurse me up A pupil in your school. I know ye twain Of all the immortals are at one in this; Ye wage of cold disdain a bitter feud With Aphrodite, and ye fear for me, Lest she should draw me to her wanton way. Fear not: my party is taken. Hark! I'll tell What I have chosen, what mankind shall hold Devote and consecrate to me on earth: It is the flowers: but only among the flowers Those that men love for beauty, scent, or hue, Having no other uses: I have found

Demeter, my good mother, heeds them not.--She loves vines, olives, orchards, 'the rich leas Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and peas,' But for the idle flowers she hath little care: She will resign them willingly. And think not, Thou wise Athena, I shall go unhonour'd, Or rank a meaner goddess unto man. His spirit setteth beauty before wisdom, 220 Pleasures above necessities, and thus He ever adoreth flowers. Nor this I guess Where rich men only and superfluous kings Around their palaces reform the land To terraces and level lawns, whereon Appointed slaves are told, to tend and feed Lilies and roses and all rarest plants Fetch'd from all lands; that they-these lordly men-'Twixt flaunting avenues and wafted odours May pace in indolence : this is their bliss ; 230 This first they do: and after, it may be, Within their garden set their academe :---But in the poorest villages, around The meanest cottage, where no other solace Comforts the eye, some simple gaiety Of flowers in tended garden is seen; some pinks, Tulips, or crocuses that edge the path; Where oft at eve the grateful labourer Sits in his jasmin'd porch, and takes the sun : And even the children, that half-naked go, 240 Have posies in their hands, and of themselves Will choose a queen in whom to honour Spring, Dancing before her garlanded with may. The cowslip makes them truant, they forget The hour of hunger and their homely feast So they may cull the delicate primrose, Sealing their birthright with the touch of beauty; With unconsider'd hecatombs assuring

Their dim sense of immortal mystery.---Yea, rich and poor, from cradle unto grave 250 All men shall love me, shall adore my name, And heap my everlasting shrine with flowers. ATH. Thou sayest rightly thou art a child. May Zeus Give thee a better province than thy thought. Music heard. AR. Listen ! the nymphs are dancing. Let us go ! They move off. Come, Cora; wilt thou learn a hunting dance? I'll teach thee. PER. Can I learn thy hunter-step Without thy bare legs and well-buskin'd feet? AR. Give me thy hand. PER. Stay! stay! I have left my flowers. I follow. Exeunt Athena and Artemis. Persephone returning to right slowly. They understand not-Now, praise be to Zeus, 261 That, tho' I sprang not from his head, I know Something that Pallas knows not. She has come to where her basket lies. In stooping towards it she kneels to pluck a flower : and then comes to sit on a bank with the basket in hand on her knees, facing the audience.] Thou tiny flower ! Art thou not wise? Who taught thee else, thou frail anemone, Thy starry notion, thy wind-wavering motion, Thy complex of chaste beauty, unimagin'd Till thou art seen ?- And how so wisely, thou, Indifferent to the number of thy rays, 270 While others are so strict? This six-leaved tulip, -He would not risk a seventh for all his worth,-He thought to attain unique magnificence By sheer simplicity-a pointed oval Bare on a stalk erect : and yet, grown old He will his young idea quite abandon, (59)

In his dishevel'd fury wantoning Beyond belief . . . Some are four-leaved : this poppy Will have but four. He, like a hurried thief, Stuffs his rich silks into too small a bag-280 I think he watch'd a summer-butterfly Creep out all crumpled from his winter-case, Trusting the sun to smooth his tender tissue And sleek the velvet of his painted wings :---And so doth he.-Between such different schemes, Such widely varied loveliness, how choose? Yet loving all, one should be most belov'd, Most intimately mine ; to mortal men My emblem : tho' I never find in one The sum of all distinctions.-Rose were best: 200 But she is passion's darling, and unkind To handle-set her by.-Choosing for odour, The violet were mine-men call her modest, Because she hides, and when in company Lacks manner and the assertive style of worth :---While this narcissus here scorns modesty, Will stand up what she is, tho' something prim : Her scent, a saturation of one tone, Like her plain symmetry, leaves nought to fancy :---Whereas this iris,-she outvieth man's 300 Excellent artistry; elaboration Confounded with simplicity, till none Can tell which sprang of which. Coud I but find A scented iris, I should be content: Yet men would call me proud : Iris is Pride.-To-day I'll favour thee, sweet violet; Thou canst live in my bosom. I'll not wrong thee Wearing thee in Olympus.-Help ! help ! Ay me ! Persephone rises to her feet, and amidst a contrivance of confused darkness Hades is seen rushing from behind. He seizes her and drags her backward. Her basket is thrown up and the flowers scattered.]

DEMETER (entering).

Here is the hateful spot, the hollow rock Whence the fierce ravisher sprang forth-(seeing the nymphs) Ah! ye! I know you well: ye are the nymphs of Ocean. Ye, graceful as your watery names And idle as the mimic flames That skip upon his briny floor, 370 When the hot sun smiteth thereo'er; Why did ye leave your native waves? Did false Poseidon, to my hurt Leagued with my foe, bid you desert Your opalescent pearly caves, Your dances on the shelly strand? CH. Poseidon gave us no command, Lady; it was thy child Persephone, Whose beauty drew us from the sea. DEM. Ill company ye lent, ill-fated guards ! 380 How was she stolen from your distracted eyes? CH. There, where thou standest now, stood she companion'd By wise Athena and bright Artemis. We in flower-gathering dance and idle song Were wander'd off apart ; we fear'd no wrong. DEM. In heav'n I heard her cry: ye nothing heard? CH. We heard no cry-How coudst thou hear in heaven? Ask us not of her :---we have nought to tell.---DEM. I seek not knowledge of you, for I know. CH. Thou knowest? Ah, mighty Queen, deign then to tell If thou hast found her. Tell us-tell us-tell ! 391 DEM. Oh, there are calls that love can hear. That strike not on the outward ear. None heard save I: but with a dart Of lightning-pain it pierc'd my heart, (63)

That call for aid, that cry of fear. It echo'd from the mountain-steeps Down to the dark of Ocean-deeps; O'er all the isle, from ev'ry hill It pierc'd my heart and echoes still, Ay me! Ay me! CH. Where is she, O mighty Queen ?- Tell us-O tell ! DEM. Swift unto earth, in frenzy led By Cora's cry, from heav'n I sped. Immortal terror froze my mind : I fear'd, ev'n as I yearn'd to find My child, my joy, faln from my care Wrong'd or distresst, I knew not where, Cora, my Cora! Nor thought I whither first to fly. Answ'ring the appeal of that wild cry: But still it drew me till I came To Enna, calling still her name, Cora, my Cora! CH. If thou hast found her, tell us, Queen, O tell! DEM. Nine days I wander'd o'er the land. From Enna to the eastern strand I sought, and when the first night came I lit my torch in Etna's flame. But neither 'mid the chestnut woods 4 That rustle o'er his stony floods; Nor yet at daybreak on the meads Where bountiful Symaethus leads His chaunting boatmen to the main ; Nor where the road on Hybla's plain Is skirted by the spacious corn ; Nor where embattled Syracuse With lustrous temple fronts the morn ; Nor yet by dolphin'd Arethuse; Nor when I crossed Anapus wide, Where Cyane, his reedy bride,

Uprushing from her crystal well, Doth not his cold embrace repel; Nor yet by western Eryx, where Gay Aphrodite high in air Beams gladness from her marble chair; Nor 'mong the mountains that enfold Panormos in her shell of gold, Found I my Cora: no reply Came to my call, my helpless cry, 44 Cora, my Cora! CH. Hast thou not found her, then? Tell us-O tell ! DEM. What wonder that I never found Her whom I sought on mortal ground, When she-(now will ye understand?)-Dwelt in the land that is no land, The fruitless and unseason'd plain Where all lost things are found again ; Where man's distract imaginings Head-downward hang on bat-like wings, 45 'Mid mummied hopes, sleep-walking cares, Crest-faln illusions and despairs, The tortur'd memories of crime. The outcasts of forgotten time? CH. Where is she, Queen ?--where ?--where ? Nor had I known DEM. Had not himself high Helios seen and told me. CH. Alas! Alas! we cannot understand— We pray, dear Queen, may great Zeus comfort thee. DEM. Yea, pray to Zeus; but pray ye for yourselves, That he have pity on you, for there is need. 460 Or let Zeus hear a strange, unwonted prayer That in his peril he will aid himself; For I have said, nor coud his Stygian oath Add any sanction to a mother's word, That, if he give not back my daughter to me, Him will I slay, and lock his pining ghost (65) F

II]

In sleepy prisons of unhallowing hell. CH. (aside). Alas ! alas ! she is distraught with grief.-What comfort can we make?—How reason with her?— 465 (to D.) This coud not be, great Queen. How coud it be That Zeus should be destroy'd, or thou destroy him ? DEM. Yea, and you too: so make your prayer betimes. CH. We pray thee, Lady, sit thou on this bank And we will bring thee food ; or if thou thirst, Water. We know too in what cooling caves The sly Fauns have bestow'd their skins of wine. DEM. Ye simple creatures, I need not these things, And stand above your pity. Think ye me A woman of the earth derang'd with grief? Nay, nay: but I have pity on your pity, 48c And for your kindness I will ease the trouble Wherewith it wounds your gentleness : attend ! Ye see this jewel here, that from my neck Hangs by this golden chain. They crowd near to see. Look, 'tis a picture, 'Tis of Persephone. How ?-Is that she ?---Сн. A crown she weareth .--- She was never wont Thus . . .-- nor her robe thus--- and her countenance Hath not the smile which drew us from the sea. DEM. Daedalus cut it, in the year he made The Zibian Aphrodite, and Hephaestus 499 O'erlookt and praised the work. I treasure it Beyond all other jewels that I have, And on this chain I guard it. Say now: think ye It cannot fall loose until every link Of all the chain be broken, or if one Break, will it fall? Surely if one break, Lady, Сн. The chain is broken and the jewel falls.

DEM. 'Tis so. Now hearken diligently. All life Is as this chain, and Zeus is as the jewel.

The universal life dwells first in the Earth, The stones and soil; therefrom the plants and trees Exhale their being; and on them the brutes Feeding elaborate their sentient life, And from these twain mankind; and in mankind A spirit lastly is form'd of subtler sort Whereon the high gods live, sustain'd thereby, And feeding on it, as plants on the soil, Or animals on plants. Now see! I hold, As well ye know, one whole link of this chain: If I should kill the plants, must not man perish? And if he perish, then the gods must die.

CH. If this were so, thou wouldst destroy thyself.

DEM. And therefore Zeus will not believe my word

CH. Nor we believe thee, Lady: it cannot be That thou shouldst seek to mend a private fortune By universal ruin, and restore Thy daughter by destruction of thyself.

DEM. Ye are not mothers, or ye would not wonder. In me, who hold from great all-mother Rhea Heritage of essential motherhood, Ye would look rather for unbounded passion. Coud I, the tenderness of Nature's heart, Exist, were I unheedful to protect From wrong and ill the being that I gave, The unweeting passions that I fondly nurtured To hopes of glory, the young confidence In growing happiness? Shall I throw by As self-delusion the supreme ambition, Which I encourag'd till parental fondness Bore the prophetic blessing, on whose truth My spirit throve? Oh never! nay, nay, nay! That were the one disaster, and if aid I cannot, I can mightily avenge. On irremediable wrong I shrink not To pile immortal ruin, there to lie

F

As trophies on a carven tomb: nor less For that no memory of my deed survive, Nor any eye to see, nor tongue to tell.

Сн. So vast injustice, Lady, were not good. DEM. To you I seem unjust involving man. CH. Why should man suffer in thy feud with Zeus?

DEM. Let Zeus relent. There is no other way. I will destroy the seeds of plant and tree : Vineyard and orchard, oliveyard and cornland Shall all withhold their fruits, and in their stead Shall flourish the gay blooms that Cora loved. There shall be dearth, and yet so gay the dearth That all the land shall look in holiday With mockery of foison; every field With splendour aflame. For wheat the useless poppy In sheeted scarlet; and for barley and oats The blue and yellow weeds that mock men's toil, Centaury and marigold in chequer'd plots : Where seed is sown, or none, shall dandelions And wretched ragwort vie, orchis and iris And garish daisy, and for every flower That in this vale she pluckt, shall spring a thousand. Where'er she stept anemones shall crowd. And the sweet violet. These things shall ye see. -But I behold him whom I came to meet. Hermes :--- he, be he laden howsoe'er. Will heavier-laden to his lord return.

HERMES (entering).

Mighty Demeter, Mother of the seasons, Bountiful all-sustainer, fairest daughter Of arch-ancestral Rhea,—to thee Zeus sendeth Kindly message. He grieves seeing thy godhead Offended wrongly at eternal justice, 'Gainst destiny ordain'd idly revolting.

(68)

Ever will he, thy brother, honour thee And willingly aid thee; but since now thy daughter Is raised to a place on the tripartite throne, He finds thee honour'd duly and not injur'd. Wherefore he bids thee now lament no more, But with thy presence grace the courts of heav'n.

DEM. Bright Hermes, Argus-slayer, born of Maia, Who bearest empty words, the mask of war, To Zeus make thine own words, that thou hast found me Offended,—that I still lament my daughter, Nor heed his summons to the courts of heav'n.

HER. Giv'st thou me nought but these relentless words?

DEM. I send not words, nor dost thou carry deeds. 58: But know, since heav'n denies my claim, I take Earth for my battle-field. Curse and defiance Shall shake his throne, and, readier then for justice, Zeus will enquire my terms : thou, on that day, Remember them ; that he shall bid thee lead Persephone from Hades by the hand, And on this spot, whence she was stol'n, restore her Into mine arms. Execute that ; and praise Shall rise from earth and peace return to heav'n. 59c

HER. How dare I carry unto Zeus thy threats?

DEM. Approach him with a gift : this little wallet.

Giving a little bag of seeds

I will not see thee again until the day Thou lead my daughter hither thro' the gates of Hell. [Going

HER. Ah! mighty Queen, the lightness of thy gift Is greater burden than thy weighty words.

CHORUS.

(1) Sisters ! what have we heard !

Our fair Persephone, the flower of the earth,

By Hades stolen away, his queen to be.

(others) Alas !---alas !---ay me !

60'

(2) And great Demeter's bold relentless word
To Hermes given,
Threatening mankind with dearth.
(others) Ay me! alas! alas!—
(3  or  1) She in her sorrow strong
Fears not to impeach the King of Heaven,
And combat wrong with wrong
(others confusedly) What can we do?—Alas !—
Back to our ocean-haunts return
To weep and mourn.—	610
What use to mourn?—
Nay, nay !—Away with sorrow :
Let us forget to-day
And look for joy to morrow :
[(1) Nay, nay! hearken to me!]
Nay, how forget that on us too,—
Yea, on us all
The curse will fall.—
[(1) Hearken! I say!]
What can we do? Alas! alas!	620
(1) Hearken! There's nought so light,
Nothing of weight so small,
But that in even balance 'twill avail
Wholly to turn the scale.
Let us our feeble force unite,
And giving voice to tears,
Assail Poseidon's ears ;
Rob pleasure from his days,
Darken with sorrow all his ways,
Until his shifty mind	630
Become to pity inclined,
And 'gainst his brother turn.
(others) 'Tis well, thou sayest well.
(2) Yea; for if Zeus should learn
That earth and sea were both combined
Against his cruel intent,
( 70 )

Sooner will he relent.

(others) 'Tis well-we do it-'tis well-

 Come let us vow. Vow all with one accord To harden every heart

Till we have won Poseidon to our part.

(all) We vow-we do it-we vow.

(r) Till we have conquer'd heav'n's almighty lord And seen Persephone restored.

(all) We vow-we vow.

(1) Come then all; and, as ye go, Begin the song of woe.

Song.

Close up, bright flow'rs, and hang the head, Ye beauties of the plain,

The Queen of Spring is with the dead, Ye deck the earth in vain.

From your deserted vale we fly,

And where the salt waves mourn

Our song shall swell their burd'ning sigh Until sweet joy return.

ACT III

CHORUS.

Song.

Lo where the virgin veilëd in airy beams, All-holy Morn, in splendor awakening, Heav'n's gate hath unbarrèd, the golden Aerial lattices set open.

With music endeth night's prisoning terror,With flow'ry incense : Haste to salute the sun,That for the day's chase, like a huntsman,With flashing arms cometh o'er the mountain.

ſ

ŧ

Inter se. That were a song for Artemis—I have heard Men thus salute the rising sun in spring— --See, we have wreaths enough and garlands plenty To hide our lov'd Persephone from sight If she should come.— But think you she will come ?— If one might trust the heavens, it is a morn Promising happiness—'Tis like the day That brought us all our grief a year ago.—

ODE.

O that the earth, or only this fair isle wer' ours Amid the ocean's blue billows. With flow'ry woodland, stately mountain and valley, Cascading and lilied river; Nor ever a mortal envious, laborious, By anguish or dull care opprest, Should come polluting with remorseful countenance Our haunt of easy gaiety. For us the grassy slopes, the country's airiness, The lofty whispering forest, Where rapturously Philomel invoketh the night And million eager throats the morn; With doves at evening softly cooing, and mellow Cadences of the dewy thrush. We love the gentle deer, the nimble antelope; Mice love we and springing squirrels; To watch the gaudy flies visit the blooms, to hear On ev'ry mead the grasshopper. All thro' the spring-tide, thro' the indolent summer, (If only this fair isle wer' ours) Here might we dwell, forgetful of the weedy caves Beneath the ocean's blue billows.

Enter Demeter.

CH. Hail, mighty Mother !—Welcome, great Demeter ! (1) This day bring joy to thee, and peace to man !

DEM. I welcome you, my loving true allies, And thank you, who for me your gentle tempers Have stiffen'd in rebellion, and so long Harass'd the foe. Here on this field of flowers I have bid you share my victory or defeat. For Hermes hath this day command from Zeus To lead our lost Persephone from Hell, Hither whence she was stolen.—And yet, alas ! Tho' Zeus is won, some secret power thwarts me ; All is not won : a cloud is o'er my spirit. Wherefore not yet I boast, nor will rejoice Till mine eyes see her, and my arms enfold her, And breast to breast we meet in fond embrace.

CH. Well hast thou fought, great goddess, so to wrest Zeus from his word. We thank thee, call'd to share Thy triumph, and rejoice. Yet O, we pray, Make thou this day a day of peace for man ! Even if Persephone be not restored, Whether Aidoneus hold her or release, Relent thou.—Stay thine anger, mighty goddess ; Nor with thy hateful famine slay mankind.

DEM. Say not that word 'relent' lest Hades hear!

CH. Consider rather if mankind should hear.

DEM. Do ye love man?

CH. We have seen his sorrows, Lady DEM. And what can ye have seen that I know not?— His sorrow?—Ah my sorrow !—and ye bid Me to relent; whose deeds of fond compassion Have in this year of agony built up A story for all time that shall go wand'ring Further than I have wander'd ;—whereto all ears Shall hearken ever, as ye will hearken now.

CH. Happy are we, who first shall hear the tale From thine own lips, and tell it to the sea.

DEM. Attend then while I tell.--

-Parting from Hermes hence, anger'd at heart,

(73)

Self-exiled from the heav'ns, forgone, alone, My anguish fasten'd on me, as I went Wandering an alien in the haunts of men. To screen my woe I put my godhead off, Taking the likeness of a worthy dame, A woman of the people well in years; Till going unobserv'd, it irked me soon To be unoccupy'd save by my grief, While men might find distraction for their sorrows In useful toil. Then, of my pity rather Than hope to find their simple cure my own, I took resolve to share and serve their needs, And be as one of them.

CH. Ah, mighty goddess, Coudst thou so put thy dignities away, And suffer the familiar brunt of men?

DEM. In all things even as they .-- And sitting down One evening at Eleusis, by the well Under an olive-tree, likening myself Outwardly to some kindly-hearted matron, Whose wisdom and experience are of worth Either where childhood clamorously speaks The engrossing charge of Aphrodite's gifts, Or merry maidens in wide-echoing halls Want sober governance ;---to me, as there I sat, the daughters of King Keleos came, Tall noble damsels, as kings' daughters are, And, marking me a stranger, they drew from me A tale told so engagingly, that they Grew fain to find employment for my skill; -As men devise in mutual recompense, Hoping the main advantage for themselves ;---And so they bad me follow, and I enter'd The palace of King Keleos, and received There on my knees the youngest of the house, A babe, to nurse him as a mother would :

And in that menial service I was proud To outrun duty and trust : and there I liv'd Disguised among the maidens many months.

CH. Often as have our guesses aim'd, dear Lady, Where thou didst hide thyself, oft as we wonder'd What chosen work was thine, none ever thought That thou didst deign to tend a mortal babe.

DEM. What life I led shall be for men to tell. But for this babe, the nursling of my sorrow, Whose peevish cry was my consoling care, How much I came to love him ye shall hear.

CH. What was he named, Lady? DEM. Demophoön.

Yea, ye shall hear how much I came to love him. For in his small epitome I read The trouble of mankind; in him I saw The hero's helplessness, the countless perils In ambush of life's promise, the desire Blind and instinctive, and the will perverse. His petty needs were man's necessities; In him I nurst all mortal natur', embrac'd With whole affection to my breast, and lull'd Wailing humanity upon my knee.

CH. We see thou wilt not now destroy mankind.

DEM. What I coud do to save man was my thought And, since my love was center'd in the boy, My thought was first for him, to rescue him; That, thro' my providence, he ne'er should know Suffering, nor disease, nor fear of death. Therefore I fed him on immortal food, And should have gain'd my wish, so well he throve, But by ill-chance it hapt, once, as I held him Bathed in the fire at midnight (as was my wont),— His mother stole upon us, and ascare At the strange sight, screaming in loud dismay Compel'd me to unmask, and leave for ever

The halls of Keleos, and my work undone. CH. 'Twas pity that she came !- Didst thou not grieve to lose The small Demophoön ?- Coudst thou not save him? DEM. I had been blinded. Think ye for yourselves ... What vantage were it to mankind at large That one should be immortal,---if all beside Must die and suffer misery as before? CH. Nay, truly. And great envy borne to one So favour'd might have more embitter'd all. DEM. I had been foolish. My sojourn with men 810 Had warpt my mind with mortal tenderness. So, questioning myself what real gift I might bestow on man to help his state, I saw that sorrow was his life-companion, To be embrac't bravely, not weakly shun'd : That as by toil man winneth happiness, Thro' tribulation he must come to peace. How to make sorrow his friend then,-this my task. Here was a mystery . . . and how persuade This thorny truth?... Ye do not hearken me. 820 CH. Yea, honour'd goddess, yea, we hearken still : Stint not thy tale. Ye might not understand. DEM. My tale to you must be a tale of deeds-How first I bade King Keleos build for me A temple in Eleusis, and ordain'd My worship, and the mysteries of my thought; Where in the sorrow that I underwent Man's state is pattern'd; and in picture shewn The way of his salvation. . . . Now with me -Here is a matter grateful to your ears-830 Your lov'd Persephone hath equal honour, And in the spring her festival of flowers : And if she should return . . . Listening. Ah! hark! what hear I? (76)

Сн. We hear no sound.

DEM. Hush ye! Hermes : he comes. CH. What hearest thou?

DEM. Hermes; and not alone. She is there. 'Tis she : I have won.

CH. Where? where? DEM. (aside). Ah! can it be that out of sorrow's night, From tears, from yearning pain, from long despair, Into joy's sunlight I shall come again?— Aside! stand ye aside! 8.

Enter Hermes leading Persephone.

HER. Mighty Demeter, lo! I execute

The will of Zeus and here restore thy daughter.

DEM. I have won.

PER. Sweet Mother, thy embrace is as the welcome Of all the earth, thy kiss the breath of life.

DEM. Ah! but to me, Cora! Thy voice again ... My tongue is trammel'd with excess of joy.

PER. Arise, my nymphs, my Oceanides ! My Nereids all, arise ! and welcome me ! Put off your strange solemnity ! arise !

CH. Welcome ! all welcome, fair Persephone !

(r) We came to welcome thee, but fell abash'd Seeing thy purple robe and crystal crown.

PER. Arise and serve my pleasure as of yore.

DEM. And thou too doff thy strange solemnity, That all may see thee as thou art, my Cora, Restor'd and ever mine. Put off thy crown!

PER. Awhile ! dear Mother—what thou say'st is true ;I am restor'd to thee, and evermoreShall be restor'd. Yet am I none the lessStevermore Queen of Hades : and 'tis meetI wear the crown, the symbol of my reign.

DEM. What words are these, my Cora! Evermore Restor'd to me thou say'st . . . 'tis well—but then

(77)

Evermore Queen of Hades . . . what is this? I had a dark foreboding till I saw thee ; Alas, alas! it lives again : destroy it ! Solve me this riddle quickly, if thou mayest.

PER. Let Hermes speak, nor fear thou. All is well

HER. Divine Demeter, thou hast won thy will, And the command of Zeus have I obey'd. Thy daughter is restor'd, and evermore Shall be restor'd to thee as on this day. But Hades holding to his bride, the Fates Were kind also to him, that she should be His queen in Hades as thy child on earth. Yearly, as spring-tide cometh, she is thine While flowers bloom and all the land is gay; But when thy corn is gather'd, and the fields Are bare, and earth withdraws her budding life From the sharp bite of winter's angry fang, Yearly will she return and hold her throne With great Aidoneus and the living dead : And she hath eaten with him of such fruit As holds her his true bride for evermore.

DEM. Alas ! alas !

PER. Rejoice, dear Mother. Let not vain lament Trouble our joy this day, nor idle tears.

DEM. Alas! from my own deed my trouble comes: He gave thee of the fruit which I had curs'd: I made the poison that enchanted thee.

PER. Repent not in thy triumph, but rejoice, Who hast thy will in all, as I have mine.

DEM. I have but half my will, how hast thou more?

PER. It was my childish fancy (thou rememb'rest), I would be goddess of the flowers : I thought That men should innocently honour me With bloodless sacrifice and spring-tide joy. Now Fate, that look'd contrary, hath fulfill'd My project with mysterious efficacy :

And as a plant that yearly dieth down When summer is o'er, and hideth in the earth, Nor showeth promise in its wither'd leaves That it shall reawaken and put forth Its blossoms any more to deck the spring; So I, the mutual symbol of my choice, Shall die with winter, and with spring revive. (How without winter coud I have my spring? How come to resurrection without death? Lo thus our joyful meeting of to-day, 910 Born of our separation, shall renew Its annual ecstasy, by grief refresht: And no more pall than doth the joy of spring Yearly returning to the hearts of men. See then the accomplishment of all my hope: Rejoice, and think not to put off my crown.

DEM. What hast thou seen below to reconcile thee "To the dark moiety of thy strange fate?

PER. Where have I been, mother? what have I seen? The downward pathway to the gates of death: 920 The skeleton of earthly being, stript Of all disguise: the sudden void of night: The spectral records of unwholesome fear:---Why was it given to me to see these things? The ruin'd godheads, disesteem'd, condemn'd To toil of deathless mockery: conquerors In the reverse of glory, doom'd to rule The multitudinous army of their crimes: The naked retribution of all wrong:---Why was it given to me to see such things? 930

DEM. Not without terror, as I think, thou speakest, Nor as one reconcil'd to brook return.

PER. But since I have seen these things, with salt and fire My spirit is purged, and by this crystal crown Terror is tamed within me. If my words Seem'd to be tinged with terror, 'twas because

Demeter [III

I knew one hour of terror (on the day That took me hence) and with that memory Colour'd my speech, using the terms which paint The blindfold fears of men, who little reckon 94a How they by holy innocence and love, By reverence and gentle lives may win A title to the fair Elysian fields, Where the good spirits dwell in ease and light And entertainment of those fair desires That made earth beautiful . . . brave souls that spent Their lives for liberty and truth, grave seers Whose vision conquer'd darkness, pious poets Whose words have won Apollo's deathless praise, Who all escape Hell's mysteries, nor come nigh 950 The Cave of Cacophysia. Mysteries ! DEM. What mysteries are these? and what the Cave? PER. The mysteries of evil, and the cave Of blackness that obscures them. Even in hell The worst is hidden, and unfructuous night Stifles her essence in her truthless heart. DEM. What is the arch-falsity? I seek to know The mystery of evil. Hast thou seen it? PER. I have seen it. Coud I truly rule my kingdom Not having seen it? Dem. Tell me what it is. 965 PER. 'Tis not that I forget it; tho' the thought Is banisht from me. But 'tis like a dream Whose sense is an impression lacking words. DEM. If it would pain thee telling . . . PER. Nay, but surely

The words of gods and men are names of things And thoughts accustom'd: but of things unknown And unimagin'd are no words at all.

DEM. And yet will words sometimes outrun the thought. PER. What can be spoken is nothing : 'twere a path

That leading t'ward some prospect ne'er arrived. 970 DEM. The more thou holdest back, the more I long. PER. The outward aspect only mocks my words. DEM. Yet what is outward easy is to tell. PER. Something is possible. This cavern lies In very midmost of deep-hollow'd hell. O'er its torn mouth the black Plutonic rock Is split in sharp disorder'd pinnacles And broken ledges, whereon sit, like apes Upon a wither'd tree, the hideous sins Of all the world: once having seen within 980 The magnetism is heavy on them, and they crawl Palsied with filthy thought upon the peaks; Or, squatting thro' long ages, have become Rooted like plants into the griping clefts: And there they pullulate, and moan, and strew The rock with fragments of their mildew'd growth. DEM. Cora, my child ! and hast thou seen these things ! PER. Nay but the outward aspect, figur'd thus In mere material loathsomeness, is nought Beside the mystery that is hid within. 990 DEM. Search thou for words, I pray, somewhat to tell. PER. Are there not matters past the thought of men Or gods to know? Dem Thou meanest wherefore things Should be at all? Or, if they be, why thus, As hot, cold, hard and soft : and wherefore Zeus Had but two brothers; why the stars of heaven Are so innumerable, constellated Just as they are; or why this Sicily Should be three-corner'd? Yes, thou sayest well, Why things are as they are, nor gods nor men 1000 Can know. We say that Fate appointed thus,

And are content.—

III]

PER. Suppose, dear Mother, there wer' a temple in heaven,

III

Which, dedicated to the unknown Cause And worship of the unseen, had power to draw All that was worthy and good within its gate : And that the spirits who enter'd there became Not only purified and comforted, But that the mysteries of the shrine were such, That the initiated bathed in light 1010 Of infinite intelligence, and saw The meaning and the reason of all things, All at a glance distinctly, and perceived The origin of all things to be good, And the énd good, and that what appears as evil Is as a film of dust, that faln thereon, May,-at one stroke of the hand,-Be brush'd away, and show the good beneath, Solid and fair and shining : If moreover This blessëd vision were of so great power 1020 That none coud e'er forget it or relapse To doubtful ignorance :-- I say, dear Mother, Suppose that there were such a temple in heaven.

DEM. O child, my child ! that were a temple indeed. Tis such a temple as man needs on earth ; A holy shrine that makes no pact with sin, A worthy shrine to draw the worthy and good, A shrine of wisdom trifling not with folly, A shrine of beauty, where the initiated Drank love and light... Strange thou shouldst speak of it. I have inaugurated such a temple These last days in Eleusis, have ordain'd These very mysteries !--Strange thou speakest of it. But by what path return we to the Cave Of Cacophysia?

PER. By this path, dear Mother. The Cave of Cacophysia is in all things T'ward evil, as that temple were t'ward good. I enter'd in. Outside the darkness was

But as accumulated sunlessness ; Within 'twas positive as light itself, 1040 A blackness that extinguish'd: Yet I knew, For Hades told me, that I was to see; And so I waited, till a forking flash Of sudden lightning dazzlingly reveal'd All at a glance. As on a pitchy night The warder of some high acropolis . Looks down into the dark, and suddenly Sees all the city with its roofs and streets, Houses and walls, clear as in summer noon, And ere he think of it, 'tis dark again,-1050 So I saw all within the Cave, and held The vision, 'twas so burnt upon my sense. DEM. What saw'st thou, child? what saw'st thou? PER. Nay, the things Not to be told, because there are no words Of gods or men to paint the inscrutable And full initiation of hell.---I saw The meaning and the reason of all things, All at a glance, and in that glance perceiv'd The origin of all things to be evil, And the énd evil: that what seems as good 1060 Is as a bloom of gold that spread thereo'er May, by one stroke of the hand, Be brush'd away, and leave the ill beneath Solid and foul and black. . . . Now tell me, child, DEM. If Hades love thee, that he sent thee thither. PER. He said it coud not harm me : and I think It hath not. Going up to Demeter, who kisses her. Nay it hath not, ... and I know Dem. The power of evil is no power at all Against eternal good. 'Tis fire on water, As darkness against sunlight, like a dream 1070 To waken'd will. Foolish was I to fear (83) G 2

III]

[III |

That aught coud hurt thee, Cora. But to-day Speak we no more. . . . This mystery of Hell Will do me service : I'll not tell thee now : But sure it is that Fate o'erruleth all For good or ill : and we (no more than men) Have power to oppose, nor any will nor choice Beyond such wisdom as a fisher hath Who driven by sudden gale far out to sea Handles his fragile boat safe thro' the waves, Making what harbour the wild storm allows.

To-day hard-featured and inscrutable Fate Stands to mine eyes reveal'd, nor frowns upon me. I thought to find thee as I knew thee, and fear'd Only to find thee sorrowful : I find thee Far other than thou wert, nor hurt by Hell. I thought I must console thee, but 'tis thou Playest the comforter : I thought to teach thee, And had prepared my lesson, word by word ; But thou art still beyond me. One thing only Of all my predetermin'd plan endures : My purpose was to bid thee to Eleusis For thy spring festival, which three days hence Inaugurates my temple. Thou wilt come ?

PER. I come. And art thou reconcil'd, dear Mother?

DEM. Joy and surprise make tempest in my mind; When their bright stir is o'er, there will be peace. But ere we leave this flowery field, the scene Of strange and beauteous memories evermore, I thank thee, Hermes, for thy willing service.

PER. I thank thee, son of Maia, and bid farewell.

HER. Have thy joy now, great Mother ; and have thou joy, Fairest Persephone, Queen of the Spring.

CHORUS.

Fair Persephone, garlands we bring thee,
Flow'rs and spring-tide welcome sing thee.
Hades held thee not,
Darkness quell'd thee not.
Gay and joyful welcome !
Welcome, Queen, evermore.
Earth shall own thee,
Thy nymphs crown thee,
Garland thee and crown thee,
Crown thee Queen evermore.

In midmost length of hundred-citied Crete, The land that cradl'd Zeus, of old renown, Where grave Demeter nurseried her wheat, And Minos fashion'd law, ere he went down To judge the quaking hordes of Hell's domain, There dwelt a King on the Omphalian plain Eastward of Ida, in a little town.

Three daughters had this King, of whom my tale Time hath preserved, that loveth to despise The wealth which men misdeem of much avail, Their glories for themselves that they devise; For clerkly is he, old hard-featured Time, And poets' fabl'd song and lovers' rhyme He storeth on his shelves to please his eyes.

These three princesses all were fairest fair And of the elder twain 'tis truth to say That if they stood not high above compare, Yet in their prime they bore the palm away; Outwards of loveliness; but Nature's mood, Gracious to make, had grudgingly endued And marr'd by gifting ill the beauteous clay.

4

And being in honour they were well content To feed on lovers' looks and courtly smiles, To hang their necks with jewel'd ornament, And gold, that vanity in vain beguiles, And live in gaze, and take their praise for due, To be the fairest maidens then to view Within the shores of Greece and all her isles.

5

But of that youngest one, the third princess, There is no likeness; since she was as far From pictured beauty as is ugliness, Though on the side where heavenly wonders are, Ideals out of being and above, Which music worshippeth, but if love love, 'Tis, as the poet saith, to love a star.

6

Her vision rather drave from passion's heart What earthly soil it had afore possest; Since to man's purer unsubstantial part The brightness of her presence was addrest: And such as mock'd at God, when once they saw Her heavenly glance, were humbl'd, and in awe Of things unseen, return'd to praise the Best.

And so before her, wheresoe'er she went, Hushing the crowd a thrilling whisper ran, And silent heads were reverently bent; Till from the people the belief began That Love's own mother had come down on earth Sweet Cytherea, or of mortal birth A greater Goddess was vouchsaft to man.

8

Then Aphrodite's statue in its place Stood without worshippers; if Cretans pray'd For beauty or for children, love or grace, The prayer and vow were offer'd to the maid; Unto the maid their hymns of praise were sung, Their victims bled for her, for her they hung Garland and golden gift, and none forbade.

And thence opinion spread beyond the shores, From isle to isle the wonder flew, it came Across the  $\pounds$ gæan on a thousand oars, Athens and Smyrna caught the virgin's fame; And East or West, where'er the tale had been, The adoration of the foam-born queen Fell to neglect, and men forgot her name.

10

No longer to high Paphos now 'twas sail'd; The fragrant altar by the Graces served At Cnidus was forsaken; pilgrims fail'd The rocky island to her name reserved, Proud Ephyra, and Meropis renown'd; 'Twas all for Crete her votaries were bound, And to the Cretan maid her worship swerved.

Which when in heaven great Aphrodite saw, Who is the breather of the year's bright morn, Fount of desire and beauty without flaw, Herself the life that doth the world adorn; Seeing that without her generative might Nothing can spring upon the shores of light, Nor any bud of joy or love be born;

12

She, when she saw the insult, did not hide Her indignation, that a mortal frail With her eterne divinity had vied, Her fair Hellenic empire to assail, For which she had fled the doom of Ninus old, And left her wanton images unsoul'd In Babylon and Zidon soon to fail.

13

'Not long,' she cried, 'shall that poor girl of Crete God it in my despite; for I will bring Such mischief on the sickly counterfeit As soon shall cure her tribe of worshipping: Her beauty will I mock with loathed lust, Bow down her dainty spirit to the dust, And leave her long alive to feel the sting.'

14

With that she calls to her her comely boy, The limber scion of the God of War, The fruit adulterous, which for man's annoy To that fierce partner Cytherea bore, EROS, the ever young, who only grew In mischief, and was Cupid named anew In westering aftertime of latin lore.

What the first dawn of manhood is, the hour When beauty, from its fleshy bud unpent, Flaunts like the corol of a summer flower, As if all life were for that ornament, Such Eros seemed in years, a trifler gay, The prodigal of an immortal day For ever spending, and yet never spent.

16

His skin is brilliant with the nimble flood Of ichor, that comes dancing from his heart, Lively as fire, and redder than the blood, And maketh in his eyes small flashes dart, And curleth his hair golden, and distilleth Honey on his tongue, and all his body filleth With wanton lightsomeness in every part.

17

Naked he goeth, but with sprightly wings Red, iridescent, are his shoulders fledged. A bow his weapon, which he deftly strings, And little arrows barb'd and keenly edged; And these he shooteth true; but else the youth For all his seeming recketh naught of truth, But most deceiveth where he most is pledged.

18

'Tis he that maketh in men's heart a strife Between remorseful reason and desire, Till with life lost they lose the love of life, And by their own hands wretchedly expire; Or slain in bloody rivalries they miss Even the short embracement of their bliss, His smile of fury and his kiss of fire.

He makes the strong man weak, the weak man wild; Ruins great business and purpose high; Brings down the wise to folly reconciled, And martial captains on their knees to sigh: He changeth dynasties, and on the head Of duteous heroes, who for honour bled, Smircheth the laurel that can never die.

Him then she call'd, and gravely kissing told The great dishonour to her godhead done; And how, if he from that in heaven would hold, On earth he must maintain it as her son; The rather that his weapons were most fit, As was his skill ordain'd to champion it; And flattering thus his ready zeal she won.

Whereon she quickly led him down on earth, And show'd him FSYCHE, thus the maid was named; Whom when she show'd, but coud not hide her worth She grew with envy tenfold more enflamed. 'But if,' she cried, 'thou smite her as I bid, Soon shall our glory of this affront be rid, And she and all her likes for ever shamed.

22

'Make her to love the loathliest, basest wretch, Deform'd in body, and of moonstruck mind, A hideous brute and vicious, born to fetch Anger from dogs and cursing from the blind. And let her passion for the monster be As shameless and detestable as he Is most extreme and vile of humankind.'

Which said, when he agreed, she spake no more But left him to his task, and took her way Beside the ripples of the shell-strewn shore, The southward stretching margin of a bay, Whose sandy curves she pass'd, and taking stand Upon its taper horn of furthest land, Lookt left and right to rise and set of day.

24

Fair was the sight; for now, though full an hour The sun had sunk, she saw the evening light In shifting colour to the zenith tower, And grow more gorgeous ever and more bright. Bathed in the warm and comfortable glow, The fair delighted queen forgot her woe, And watch'd the unwonted pageant of the night.

25

Broad and low down, where late the sun had been A wealth of orange-gold was thickly shed, Fading above into a field of green, Like apples ere they ripen into red; Then to the height a variable hue Of rose and pink and crimson freak'd with blue, And olive-border'd clouds o'er lilac led.

26

High in the opposed west the wondering moon All silvery green in flying green was fleec't; And round the blazing South the splendour soon Caught all the heaven, and ran to North and East; And Aphrodite knew the thing was wrought By cunning of Poseidon, and she thought She would go see with whom he kept his feast.

27

Swift to her wish came swimming on the waves His lovely ocean nymphs, her guides to be, The Nereids all, who live among the caves And valleys of the deep, Cymodocè, Agavè, blue-eyed Hallia and Nesæa, Speio, and Thoë, Glaucè and Actæa, Iaira, Melitè and Amphinomè,

28

Apseudès and Nemertès, Callianassa, Cymothoë, Thaleia, Limnorrhea, . Clymenè, Ianeira and Ianassa, Doris and Panopè and Galatea, Dynamenè, Dexamenè and Maira, Ferusa, Doto, Proto, Callianeira, Amphithoë, Oreithuia and Amathea.

29

And after them sad Melicertes drave His chariot, that with swift unfellied wheel, By his two dolphins drawn along the wave, Flew as they plunged, yet did not dip nor reel, But like a plough that shears the heavy land Stood on the flood, and back on either hand O'erturn'd the briny furrow with its keel.

30

Behind came Tritons, that their conches blew, Greenbearded, tail'd like fish, all sleek and stark; And hippocampi tamed, a bristly crew, The browzers of old Proteus' weedy park, Whose chiefer Mermen brought a shell for boat, And balancing its hollow fan afloat, Push'd it to shore and bade the queen embark:

And then the goddess stept upon the shell Which took her weight; and others threw a train Of soft silk o'er her, that unfurl'd to swell In sails, at breath of flying Zephyrs twain; And all her way with foam in laughter strewn, With stir of music and of conches blown, Was Aphrodite launch'd upon the main.

But fairest Psyche still in favour rose, Nor knew the jealous power against her sworn : And more her beauty now surpass't her foe's, Since 'twas transfigured by the spirit forlorn, That writeth, to the perfecting of grace, Immortal question in a mortal face, The vague desire whereunto man is born.

Already in good time her sisters both, Whose honest charms were never famed as hers, With princes of the isle had plighted troth, And gone to rule their foreign courtiers; But she, exalted evermore beyond Their loveliness, made yet no lover fond, And gain'd but number to her worshippers.

(97)

To joy in others' joy had been her lot, And now that that was gone she wept to see How her transcendent beauty overshot The common aim of all felicity. For love she sigh'd; and had some peasant rude For true love's sake in simple passion woo'd, Then Psyche had not scorn'd his wife to be.

4

For what is Beauty, if it doth not fire The loving answer of an eager soul? Since 'tis the native food of man's desire, And doth to good our varying world control; Which, when it was not, was for Beauty's sake Desired and made by Love, who still doth make A beauteous path thereon to Beauty's goal.

Should all men by some hateful venom die, The pity were that o'er the unpeopl'd sphere The sun would still bedeck the evening sky And the unimaginable hues appear, With none to mark the rose and gold and green; That Spring should walk the earth, and nothing seen Of her fresh delicacy year by year.

6

And if some beauteous things,—whose heavenly worth And function overpass our mortal sense,— Lie waste and unregarded on the earth By reason of our gross intelligence, These are not vain, because in nature's scheme It lives that we shall grow from dream to dream In time to gather an enchantment thence.

Even as we see the fairest works of men Awhile neglected, and the makers die; But Truth comes weeping to their graves, and then Their fames victoriously mounting high Do battle with the regnant names of eld, To win their seats; as when the Gods rebel'd Against their sires and drave them from the sky.

8

But to be praised for beauty and denied The meed of beauty, this was yet unknown: The best and bravest men have ever vied To win the fairest women for their own.

Thus Psyche spake, or reason'd in her mind, Disconsolate; and with self-pity pined, In the deserted halls wandering alone.

9

And grieved grew the King to see her woe: And blaming first the gods for her disease, He purposed to their oracle to go To question how he might their wrath appease, Or, if that might not be, the worst to hear,— Which is the last poor hope of them that fear.— So he took his ship upon the northern seas,

10

And journeying to the shrine of Delphi went, The temple of Apollo Pythian, Where when the god he question'd if 'twas meant That Psyche should be wed, and to what man, The tripod shook, and o'er the vaporous well The chanting Pythoness gave oracle, And thus in priestly verse the sentence ran :

High on the topmost rock with funeral feast Convey and leave the maid, nor look to find A mortal husband, but a savage beast, The viperous scourge of gods and humankind; Who shames and vexes all, and as he flies With sword and fire, Zeus trembles in the skies, And groans arise from souls to hell consign'd.

12

With which reply the King return'd full sad : For though he nothing more might understand, Yet in the bitter bidding that he had No man made question of the plain command, That he must sacrifice the tender flower Of his own blood to a demonian power, Upon the rocky mount with his own hand.

13

Some said that she to Talos was devote, The metal giant, who with mile-long stride Cover'd the isle, walking around by rote Thrice every day at his appointed tide; Who shepherded the sea-goats on the coast, And, as he past, caught up and live would roast, Pressing them to his burning ribs and side:

Whose head was made of fine gold-beaten work Of silver pure his arms and gleaming chest, Thence of green-bloomèd bronze far as the fork, Of iron weather-rusted all the rest. A little while they spent in sad delay, Then order'd, as the oracle had said, The cold feast and funereal display Wherewith the fated bridal should be sped : And their black pageantry and vain despairing When Psyche saw, and for herself preparing The hopeless ceremonial of the dead,

16

Then spake she to the King and said 'O Sire, Why wilt thou veil those venerable eyes With piteous tears, which must of me require More tears again than for myself arise? Then, on the day my beauty first o'erstept Its mortal place it had been well to have wept; But now the fault beyond our ruing lies.

17

• As to be worship'd was my whole undoing, So my submission must the forfeit pay: And welcome were the morning of my wooing, . Tho' after it should dawn no other day. Up to the mountain ! for I hear the voice Of my beloved on the winds, Rejoice, Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away !'

18

With such distemper'd speech, that little cheer'd Her mourning house, she went to choose with care The raiment for her day of wedlock weird, Her body as for burial to prepare; But laved with bridal water, from the stream Where Hera bathed; for still her fate supreme Was doubtful, whether Love or Death it were:

19

Love that is made of joy, and Death of fear: Nay, but not these held Psyche in suspense; Hers was the hope that following by the bier Boweth its head beneath the dark immense: Her fear the dread of life that turns to hide Its tragic tears, what hour the happy bride Ventures for love her maiden innocence.

20

They set on high upon the bridal wain Her bed for bier, and yet no corpse thereon; But like as when unto a warrior slain And not brought home the ceremonies done Are empty, for afar his body brave Lies lost, deep buried by the wandering wave Or 'neath the foes his fury fell upon,—

21

So was her hearse : and with it went afore, Singing the solemn dirge that moves to tears, The singers ; and behind, clad as for war, The King uncrown'd among his mournful peers, All 'neath their armour robed in linen white ; And in their left were shields, and in their right Torches they bore aloft instead of spears.

22

And next the virgin tribe in white forth sail'd, With wreaths of dittany; and 'midst them there Went Psyche, all in lily-whiteness veil'd, The white Quince-blossom chapleting her hair: And last the common folk, a weeping crowd, Far as the city-gates with wailings loud Follow'd the sad procession in despair.

( 102 )

Thus forth and up the mount they went, until The funeral chariot must be left behind, Since road was none for steepness of the hill; And slowly by the narrow path they wind : All afternoon their white and scatter'd file Toil'd on distinct, ascending many a mile Over the long brown slopes and crags unkind.

24

But ere unto the snowy peak they came Of that stormshapen pyramid so high, 'Twas evening, and with footsteps slow and lame They gather'd up their lagging company : And then her sire, even as Apollo bade, Set on the topmost rock the hapless maid, With trembling hands and melancholy cry.

25

And now the sun was sunk ; only the peak Flash'd like a jewel in the deepening blue : And from the shade beneath none dared to speak, But all look'd up, where glorified anew Psyche sat islanded in living day. Breathless they watcht her, till the last red ray Fled from her lifted arm that waved adjeu.

26

There left they her, turning with sad farewells To haste their homeward course, as best they might But night was crowding up the barren fells, And hid full soon their rocky path from sight; And each unto his stumbling foot to hold His torch was fain, for o'er the moon was roll'd A mighty cloud from heaven, to blot her light.

27

And thro' the darkness for long while was seen That armour'd train with waving fires to thread Downwards, by pass, defile, and black ravine, Each leading on the way that he was led. Slowly they gain'd the plain, and one by one Into the shadows of the woods were gone, Or in the clinging mists were quench'd and fled.

28

But unto Psyche, pondering o'er her doom In tearful silence on her stony chair, A Zephyr straying out of heaven's wide room Rush'd down, and gathering round her unaware Fill'd with his breath her vesture and her veil; And like a ship, that crowding all her sail Leans to accompany the tranquil air,

29

She yielded, and was borne with swimming brain And airy joy, along the mountain side, Till, hid from earth by ridging summits twain, They came upon a valley deep and wide; Where the strong Zephyr with his burden sank, And laid her down upon a grassy bank, 'Mong thyme and violets and daisies pied.

30

And straight upon the touch of that sweet bed Both woe and wonder melted fast away: And sleep with gentle stress her sense o'erspread, Gathering as darkness doth on drooping day: And nestling to the ground, she slowly drew Her wearied limbs together, and, ere she knew, Wrapt in forgetfulness and slumber lay.

( 104 )

MAY

AFTER long sleep when Psyche first awoke Among the grasses 'neath the open skies, And heard the mounting larks, whose carol spoke Delighted invitation to arise, She lay as one who after many a league Hath slept off memory with his long fatigue, And waking knows not in what place he lies :

Anon her quickening thought took up its task, And all came back as it had happ'd o'ernight; The sad procession of the wedding mask, The melancholy toiling up the height, The solitary rock where she was left; And thence in dark and airy waftage reft, How on the flowers she had been disburden'd light

Thereafter she would rise and see what place That voyage had its haven in, and found She stood upon a little hill, whose base Shelved off into the valley all around; And all round that the steep cliffs rose away, Save on one side where to the break of day The widening dale withdrew in falling ground.

There, out from over sea, and scarce so high As she, the sun above his watery blaze Upbroke the grey dome of the morning sky, And struck the island with his level rays; Sifting his gold thro' lazy mists, that still Climb'd on-the shadowy roots of every hill, And in the tree-tops breathed their silvery haze.

At hand on either side there was a wood; And on the upward lawn, that sloped between, Not many paces back a temple stood, By even steps ascending from the green; With shaft and pediment of marble made, It fill'd the passage of the rising glade, And there withstay'd the sun in dazzling sheen.

Too fair for human art, so Psyche thought, It might the fancy of some god rejoice; Like to those halls which lame Hephæstos wrought, Original, for each god to his choice, In high Olympus; where his matchless lyre Apollo wakes, and the responsive choir Of Muses sing alternate with sweet voice.

Wondering she drew anigh, and in a while Went up the steps as she would entrance win, And faced her shadow 'neath the peristyle Upon the golden gate, whose flanges twin— As there she stood, irresolute at heart To try—swung to her of themselves apart; Whereat she past between and stood within.

( 106 )

May 8

A foursquare court it was with marble floor'd, Embay'd about with pillar'd porticoes, That echo'd in a somnolent accord The music of a fountain, which arose Sparkling in air, and splashing in its tank; Whose wanton babble, as it swell'd or sank, Gave idle voice to silence and repose.

9

Thro' doors beneath the further colonnade. Like a deep cup's reflected glooms of gold, The inner rooms glow'd with inviting shade : And, standing in the court, she might behold Cedar, and silk, and silver ; and that all The pargeting of ceiling and of wall Was fresco'd o'er with figures manifold.

10

Then making bold to go within, she heard Murmur of gentle welcome in her ear; And seeing none that coud have spoken word, She waited : when again Lady, draw near; Enter! was cried; and now more voices came From all the air around calling her name, And bidding her rejoice and have no fear.

IΪ

And one, if she would rest, would show her bed, Pillow'd for sleep, with fragrant linen fine; One, were she hungry, had a table spread Like as the high gods have it when they dine: Or, would she bathe, were those would heat the bath The joyous cries contending in her path, Bspche, they said, What wilt thou? all is thine.

12

Then Psyche would have thank'd their service true, But that she fear'd her echoing words might scare Those sightless tongues ; and well by dream she knew The voices of the messengers of prayer, Which fly upon the gods' commandment, when They answer the supreme desires of men, Or for a while in pity hush their care.

13

'Twas fancy's consummation, and because She would do joy no curious despite, She made no wonder how the wonder was; Only concern'd to take her full delight. So to the bath,—what luxury could be Better enhanced by eyeless ministry?— She follows with the voices that invite.

14

There being deliciously refresht, from soil Of earth made pure by water, fire, and air, They clad her in soft robes of Asian toil, Scented, that in her queenly wardrobe were; And led her forth to dine, and all around Sang as they served, the while a choral sound Of strings unseen and reeds the burden bare.

15

P athetic strains and passionate they wove, U rgent in ecstasies of heavenly sense; R esponsive rivalries, that, while they strove C ombined in full harmonious suspense, E ntrancing wild desire, then fell at last L ull'd in soft closes, and with gay contrast L aunch'd forth their fresh unwearied excellence.

16

Now Psyche, when her twofold feast was o'er, Would feed her eye; and choosing for her guide A low-voiced singer, bade her come explore The wondrous house; until on every side As surfeited with beauty, and seeing nought But what was rich and fair beyond her thought, And all her own, thus to the voice she cried:

17

'Am I indeed a goddess, or is this But to be dead : and through the gates of death Passing unwittingly doth man not miss Body nor memory nor living breath ; Nor by demerits of his deeds is cast, But, paid with the desire he holdeth fast, Is holp with all his heart imagineth ?'

18

But her for all reply the wandering tongue Call'd to the chamber where her bed was laid With flower'd broideries of linen hung: And round the walls in painting were portray'd Love's victories over the gods renown'd. Ares and Aphrodite here lay bound In the fine net that dark Hephæstus made:

19

Here Zeus, in likeness of a tawny bull, Stoop'd on the Cretan shore his mighty knee, While off his back Europa beautiful Stept pale against the blue Carpathian sea; And here Apollo, as he caught amazed Daphne, for lo ! her hands shot forth upraised In leaves, her feet were rooted like a tree:

Here Dionysos, springing from his car At sight of Ariadne; here uplept Adonis to the chase, breaking the bar Of Aphrodite's arm for love who wept: He spear in hand, with leashed dogs at strain; A marvellous work. But Psyche soon grown fain Of rest, betook her to her bed and slept.

2 I

Nor long had slept, when at a sudden stir She woke ; and one, that thro' the dark made way, Drew near, and stood beside ; and over her The curtain rustl'd. Trembling now she lay, Fainting with terror : till upon her face A kiss, and with two gentle arms' embrace, A voice that call'd her name in loving play.

22

Though for the darkness she coud nothing sec, She wish'd not then for what the night denied : This was the lover she had lack'd, and she, Loving his loving, was his willing bride. O'erjoy'd she slept again, o'erjoy'd awoke At break of morn upon her love to look; When lo! his empty place lay by her side.

23

So all that day she spent in company Of the soft voices; and Of right, they said, Art thou our Lady now. Be happily Thy bridal morrow by thy serbants sped. But she but long'd for night, if that might bring Her lover back; and he on secret wing Came with the dark, and in the darkness fled.

( 110 )

May

24

And this was all her life; for every night He came, and though his name she never learn'd, Nor was his image yielded to her sight At morn or eve, she neither look'd nor yearn'd Beyond her happiness: and custom brought An ease to pleasure; nor would Psyche's thought Have ever to her earthly home return'd,

25

But that one night he said 'Psyche, my soul, Sad danger threatens us : thy sisters twain Come to the mountain top, whence I thee stole, And thou wilt hear their voices thence complain. Answer them not: for it must end our love If they should hear or spy thee from above.' And Psyche said 'Their cry shall be in vain.'

26

But being again alone, she thought 'twas hard On her own blood ; and blamed her joy as thief Of theirs, her comfort which their comfort barr'd; When she their care might be their care's relief. All day she brooded on her father's woe, And when at night her lover kisst her, lo! Her tender face was wet with tears of grief.

27

Then question'd why she wept, she all confest; And begg'd of him she might but once go nigh To set her sire's and sisters' fears at rest; Till he for pity coud not but comply: 'Only if they should ask thee of thy love Discover nothing to their ears above.' And Psyche said 'In vain shall be their cry.'

28

And yet with day no sooner was alone, Than she for loneliness her promise rued: That having so much pleasure for her own, 'Twas all unshared and spent in solitude. And when at night her love flew to his place, More than afore she shamed his fond embrace, And piteously with tears her plaint renew'd.

29

The more he now denied, the more she wept; Nor would in anywise be comforted, Unless her sisters, on the Zephyr swept, Should in those halls be one day bathed and fed, And see themselves the palace where she reign'd. And he, by force of tears at last constrain'd, Granted her wish unwillingly, and said:

30

'Much to our peril hast thou won thy will; Thy sisters' love, seeing thee honour'd so, Will sour to envy, and with jealous skill Will pry to learn the thing that none may know. Answer not, nor inquire; for know that I The day thou seest my face far hence shall fly, And thou anew to bitterest fate must go.'

31

But Psyche said, 'Thy love is more than life; To have thee leaveth nothing to be won: For should the noonday prove me to be wife Even of the beauteous Eros, who is son Of Cypris, I coud never love thee more.' Whereat he fondly kisst her o'er and o'er, And peace was 'twixt them till the night was done.

AND truly need there was to the old King For consolation : since the mournful day Of Psyche's fate he took no comforting, But only for a speedy death would pray ; And on his head his hair grew silver-white. —Such on life's topmost bough is sorrow's blight, When the stout heart is cankering to decay.

Which when his daughters learnt, they both were quick Comfort and solace to their sire to lend. But as not seldom they who nurse the sick Will take the malady from them they tend, So happ'd it now; for they who fail'd to cheer Grew sad themselves, and in that palace drear Increased the evil that they came to mend.

And them the unhappy father sent to seek Where Psyche had been left, if they might find What monster held her on the savage peak; Or if she there had died of hunger pined, And, by wild eagles stript, her scatter'd bones Might still be gather'd from the barren stones; Or if her fate had left no trace behind.

4

So just upon this time her sisters both Climb'd on the cliff that hung o'er Psyche's vale; And finding there no sign, to leave were loth Ere well assured she lurk'd not within hail. So calling loud her name, 'Psyche!' they cried, 'Psyche, O Psyche!' and when none replied They sank upon the rocks to weep and wail.

But Psyche heard their voices where she sat, And summoning the Zephyr bade him fleet Those mourners down unto the grassy plat 'Midst of her garden, where she had her seat. Then from the dizzy steep the wondering pair Came swiftly sinking on his buoyant air, And stood upon the terrace at her feet.

6

Upsprang she then, and kiss'd them and embraced, And said 'Lo, here am I, I whom ye mourn. I am not dead, nor tortured, nor disgraced, But blest above all days since I was born : Wherefore be glad. Enter my home and see How little cause has been to grieve for me, And my desertion on the rocks forlorn.'

7

So entering by the golden gate, or e'er The marvel of their hither flight had waned, Fresh wonder took them now, for everywhere Their eyes that lit on beauty were enchain'd; And Psyche's airy service, as she bade, Perform'd its magic office, and display'd The riches of the palace where she reign'd.

8

And through the perfumed chambers they were led And bathed therein; and after, set to sup, Were upon dreamlike delicacies fed, And wine more precious than its golden cup. Till seeing nothing lack'd and naught was theirs, Their happiness fell from them unawares, And bitter envy in their hearts sprang up.

9

At last one said 'Psyche, since not alone Thou livest here in joy, as well we wot, Who is the man who should these wonders own, Or god, I say, and still appeareth not? What is his name? What rank and guise hath he, Whom winds and spirits serve, who honoureth thee Above all others in thy blissful lot?'

10

But Psyche when that wistful speech she heard Was ware of all her spouse had warn'd her of: And uttering a disingenuous word, Said 'A youth yet unbearded is my love; He goeth hunting on the plains to-day, And with his dogs hath wander'd far away; And not till eve can he return above.'

11

Then fearing to be nearer plied, she rose And brought her richest jewels one by one, Bidding them choose and take whate'er they chose; And beckoning the Zephyr spake anon That he should waft her sisters to the peak; The which he did, and, ere they more coud speak, They rose on high, and in the wind were gone.

12

Nor till again they came upon the road, Which from the mountain shoulder o'er the plain Led to the city of their sire's abode, Found they their tongues, though full of high disdain Their hearts were, but kept silence, till the strength Of pride and envious hatred burst at length In voice, and thus the elder gan complain :

13

'Cruel and unjust fortune ! that of three Sisters, whose being from one fountain well'd, Exalts the last so high from her degree, And leaves the first to be so far excel'd. My husband is a poor and niggard churl To him, whoe'er he be, that loves the girl. Oh ! in what godlike state her house is held !'

14

'Ay,' said the other, 'to a gouty loon Am I not wedded? Lo! thy hurt is mine: But never call me woman more, if soon I cannot lure her from her height divine. Nay, she shall need her cunning wit to save The wealth of which so grudgingly she gave ; Wherefore thy hand and heart with me combine.

15

'She but received us out of pride, to show Her state, well deeming that her happiness Was little worth while there was none to know; So is our lot uninjured if none guess. Reveal we nothing therefore, but the while Together scheme this wanton to beguile, And bring her boasting godhead to distress.'

16

So fresh disordering their dress and hair, With loud lament they to their sire return, Telling they found not Psyche anywhere, And of her sure mischance could nothing learn : And with that lie the wounded man they slew, Hiding the saving truth which well they knew ; Nor did his piteous grief their heart concern.

17

Meanwhile her unknown lover did not cease To warn poor Psyche how her sisters plan'd To undermine her love and joy and peace; And urged how well she might their wiles withstand By keeping them from her delight aloof: For better is security than proof, And malice held afar than near at hand.

18

• And, dearest wife,' he said, ' since 'tis not long Ere one will come to share thy secrecy, And be thy babe and mine ; let nothing wrong The happy months of thy maternity. If thou keep trust, then shalt thou see thy child A god ; but if to pry thou be beguiled, The lot of both is death and misery.'

19

Then Psyche's simple heart was fill'd with joy, And counting to herself the months and days, Look'd for the time, when she should bear a boy To be her growing stay and godlike praise. And 'O be sure,' she said, 'be sure, my pride Having so rich a promise cannot slide, Even if my love coud fail which thee obeys.'

20

And so most happily her life went by, In thoughts of love dear to her new estate; Until at length the evil day drew nigh, When now her sisters, joined in jealous hate, Set forth again, and plotted by the way How they might best allure her to betray Her secret; with what lie their angle bait.

21

That night her husband spake to her, and said 'Psyche, thy sisters come : and when they climb The peak they will not tarry to be sped Down by the Zephyr, as that other time, But winging to the wind will cast themselves Out in the air, and on the rocky shelves Be dasht, and pay the penalty of crime.

22

'So let it be, and so shall we be saved.' Which meditated vengeance of his fear When Psyche heard, now for their life she craved, Whose mere distress erewhile had toucht her near. Around her lover's neck her arms she threw, And pleaded for them by her faith so true, Although they went on doom in judgment clear.

In terror of bloodguiltiness she now Forgot all other danger; she adjured; Or using playfulness deep sobs would plow Her soft entreaties, not to be endured: Till he at last was fain once more to grant The service of the Zephyr, to enchant That wicked couple from their fate assured.

24

So ere 'twas noon were noises at the door Of knocking loud and voices high in glee; Such as within that vale never before Had been, and now seem'd most unmeet to be. And Psyche blush'd, though being alone, and rose To meet her sisters and herself unclose The gate that made them of her palace free.

25

Fondly she kiss'd them, and with kindly cheer Sought to amuse; and they with outward smile O'ermask'd their hate, and called her sweet and dear Finding affection easy to beguile: And all was smooth, until at last one said 'Tell us, I pray, to whom 'tis thou art wed; 'Mong gods or men, what is his rank and style?

26

'Thou canst not think to hide the truth from us, Who knew thy peevish sorrows when a maid, And see thee now so glad and rapturous, As changed from what thou wert as light from shade Thy jewels, too, the palace of a king, Nor least the serviceable spiriting, By everything thy secret is betray'd:

27

'And yet thou talkest of thy wondrous man No more than if his face thou didst not know.' At which incontinently she began, Forgetful of her word a month ago, Answering 'A merchant rich, of middle age, My husband is ; and o'er his features sage His temples are already touch'd with snow.

28

'But 'gainst his wish since hither ye were brought 'Twere best depart.' Then her accustom'd spell Sped them upon the summit quick as thought; And being alone her doing pleased her well: So was she vext to find her love at night More sad than ever, of her sisters' spite Speaking as one that coud the end foretell.

29

And ere long,' said he, 'they will spy again : Let them be dash'd upon the rocks and die; 'Tis they must come to death or thou to pain, To separation, Psyche, thou and I; Nay, and our babe to ill. I therefore crave Thou wilt not even once more these vipers save, Nor to thy love his only boon deny.'

30

But Psyche would not think her sisters' crime So gross and strange, nor coud her danger see; Since 'twere so easy, if at any time They show'd the venom of their hearts, that she Should fan them off upon the willing gust. So she refused, and claiming truer trust, Would in no wise unto their death agree.

JULY

"WHAT think you, sister :' thus one envious fiend To other spake upon their homeward route, "What of the story that our wit hath glean'd Of this mysterious lover, who can shoot In thirty days from beardless youth to prime, With wisdom in his face before his time, And snowy locks upon his head to boot?"

'Ay,' said the other, 'true, she lied not well; And thence I gather knows no more than we: For surely 'tis a spirit insensible To whom she is wedded, one she cannot see. 'Tis that I fear; for if 'tis so, her child Will be a god, and she a goddess styled, Which, though I die to let it, shall not be.

'Lament we thus no longer. Come, consult What may be done.' And home they came at night Yet not to rest, but of their plots occult Sat whispering on their beds; and ere 'twas light Resolving on the deed coud not defer; But roused the sleeping house with sudden stir, And sallied forth alone to work their spite.

And with the noon were climb'd upon the peak, And swam down on the Zephyr as before; But now with piercing cry and doleful shriek They force their entrance through the golden door, Feigning the urgency of bitter truth; Such as deforms a friendly face with ruth, When kindness may not hide ill tidings more.

5

Then Psyche when she heard their wailful din, And saw their countenances wan and worn With travel, vigil, and disfiguring sin, Their hair dishevel'd and their habits torn, For trembling scarce coud ask what ill had hapt; And they alert with joy to see her trapt, Launch'd forth amain, and on their drift were borne.

6

'O Psyche, happiest certainly and blest Up to this hour,' they said, 'thou surely wert, Being of thy fearful peril unpossest ; Which now we would not tell but to avert. But we in solemn truth thy spouse have found To be the dragon of this mountain ground, Who holds thee here to work thy shame and hurt.

7

'As yesternight we rode upon the wind He issued to pursue us from the wood; We saw his back, that through the tree-tops finn'd, His fiery eyes glared from their wrinkl'd hood. Lo, now betimes the oracle, which said How to the savage beast thou shouldst be wed, Is plainly for thy safety understood.

July

'Long time hath he been known to all that dwell Upon the plain; but now his secret lair Have we discover'd, which none else coud tell: Though many women fallen in his snare Hath he enchanted; who, tradition saith, Taste love awhile, ere to their cruel death They pass in turn upon the summits bare.

9

'Fly with us while thou may'st: no more delay; Renounce the spells of this accursed vale. We come to save thee, but we dare not stay; Among these sightless spirits our senses quail. Fly with us, fly !' Then Psyche, for her soul Was soft and simple, lost her self-control, And, thinking only of the horrid tale,

10

' Dear sisters,' said she, and her sobbing speech Was broken by her terror, 'it is true That much hath hapt to stablish what ye teach; For ne'er hath it been granted me to view My husband; and, for aught I know, he may Be even that cruel dragon, which ye say Peer'd at you from the forest to pursue.

11

"Tis sure that scarcely can I win his grace To see you here; and still he mischief vows If ever I should ask to see his face, Which, coming in the dark, he ne'er allows. Therefore, if ye can help, of pity show, Since doubt I must, how I may come to know What kind of spirit it is that is my spouse."

ľ 2

Then to her cue the younger was afore : 'Hide thou a razor,' cried she, 'near thy bed ; And have a lamp prepared, but whelm thereo'er Some cover, that no light be from it shed. And when securely in first sleep he lies, Look on him well, and ere he can arise, Gashing his throat, cut off his hideous head.'

Which both persuading, off they flew content, Divining that whate'er she was forbid Was by her lover for her safety meant, Which only coud be sure while he was hid.

But Psyche, to that miserable deed Being now already in her mind agreed, Wander'd alone, and knew not what she did.

r4

Now she would trust her lover, now in turn Made question of his bidding as unjust; But thirsting curiosity to learn His secret overcame her simple trust, O'ercame her spoken troth, o'ercame her fear; And she prepared, as now the hour drew near, The mean contrivances, nor felt disgust.

r 5

She set the lamp beneath a chair, and cloked Thickly its rebel lustre from the eye: And laid the knife, to mortal keenness stroked, Within her reach, where she was wont to lie: And took her place full early; but her heart Beat fast, and stay'd her breath with sudden start, Feeling her lover's arm laid fond thereby.

Fuly

But when at last he slept, then she arose, All faint and tremulous : and though it be That wrong betrayeth innocence with shews Of novelty, its guilt from shame to free, Yet 'twas for shame her hand so strangely shook That held the steel, and from the cloke that took The lamp, and raised it o'er the bed to see.

17

She had some fear she might not well discern By that small flame a monster in the gloom; When lo! the air about her seem'd to burn, And bright celestial radiance fill'd the room. Too plainly O she saw, O fair to see! Eros, 'twas Eros' self, her lover, he, The God of love, reveal'd in deathless bloom.

18

Her fainting strength forsook her; on her knees Down by the bed she sank; the shameless knife Fell flashing, and her heart took thought to seize Its desperate haft, and end her wicked life. Yet coud she not her loving eyes withdraw From her fair sleeping lover, whom she saw Only to know she was no more his wife.

19

O treasure of all treasures, late her own ! O loss above all losses, lost for aye ! Since there was no repentance coud atone For her dishonour, nor her fate withstay. But yet 'twas joy to have her love in sight ; And, to the rapture yielding while she might, She gazed upon his body where he lay.

20

Above all mortal beauty, as was hers, She saw a rival; but if passion's heart Be rightly read by subtle questioners, It owns a wanton and a gentler part. And Psyche wonder'd, noting every sign By which the immortal God, her spouse divine, Betray'd the image of our earthly art;

2 I

His thickly curling hair, his ruddy cheeks, And pouting lips, his soft and dimpl'd chin, The full and cushion'd eye, that idly speaks Of self-content and vanity within, The forward, froward ear, and smooth to touch His body sleek, but rounded overmuch For dignity of mind and pride akin.

22

She noted that the small irradiant wings, That from his shoulders lay along at rest, Were yet disturb'd with airy quiverings, As if some wakeful spirit his blood possest; She feared he was awaking, but they kept Their sweet commotion still, and still he slept, And still she gazed with never-tiring zest.

23

And now the colour of her pride and joy Outflush'd the hue of Eros; she, so cold, To have fired the passion of the heartless boy, Whom none in heaven or earth were found to hold ! Psyche, the earthborn, to be prized above The heavenly Graces by the God of love, And worshipt by his wantonness untold!

(126)

Fuly

Nay, for that very thing she loved him more, More than herself her sweet self's complement: Until the sight of him again upbore Her courage, and renew'd her vigour spent. And looking now around, she first espied Where at the bed's foot, cast in haste aside, Lay his full quiver, and his bow unbent.

25

One of those darts, of which she had heard so oft. She took to try if 'twas so very keen ; And held its point against her finger soft So gently, that to touch it scarce was seen; Yet was she sharply prickt, and felt the fire Run through her veins ; and now a strange desire Troubl'd her heart, which ne'er before had been ;

26

Straight sprang she to her lover on the bed, And kisst his cheek, and was not satisfied : When, O the lamp, held ill-balanced o'erhead, One drop of burning oil spill'd from its side On Eros' naked shoulder as he slept, Who waken'd by the sudden smart uplept Upon the floor, and all the mischief eyed.

27

With nervous speed he seized his bow, and past Out of the guilty chamber at a bound; But Psyche, following his flight as fast, Caught him, and crying threw her arms around: Till coming to the court he rose in air; And she, close clinging in her last despair, Was dragg'd, and then lost hold and fell to ground

28

Wailing she fell; but he, upon the roof Staying his feet, awhile his flight delay'd: And turning to her as he stood aloof Beside a cypress, whose profoundest shade Drank the reflections of the dreamy night In its stiff pinnacle, the nimble light Of million stars upon his body play'd:

29

'O simple-hearted Psyche,' thus he spake, And she upraised her piteous eyes and hands, 'O simple-hearted Psyche, for thy sake I dared to break my mother's stern commands; And gave thee godlike marriage in the place Of vilest shame; and, not to hurt thy grace, Spared thee my arrows, which no heart withstands.

30

• But thou, for doubt I was some evil beast, Hast mock'd the warnings of my love, to spy Upon my secret, which concern'd thee least, Seeing that thy joy was never touch'd thereby. By faithless prying thou hast work'd thy fall, And, even as I foretold thee, losest all For looking on thy happiness too nigh :

31

'Which loss may be thine ample punishment. But to those fiends, by whom thou wert misled, Go tell each one in turn that I have sent This message, that I love her in thy stead ; And bid them by their love haste hither soon.' Whereat he fled ; and Psyche in a swoon Fell back upon the marble floor as dead.

AUGUST

I

WHEN from the lowest ebbing of her blood The fluttering pulses thrill'd and swell'd again, Her stricken heart recovering force to flood With life the sunken conduits of her brain, Then Psyche, where she had fallen, numb and cold Arose, but scarce her quaking sense control'd, Seeing the couch where she that night had lain.

The level sunbeams search'd the grassy ground For diamond dewdrops. Ah! was this the place? Where was the court, her home? she look'd around And question'd with her memory for a space. There was the cypress, there the well-known wood, That wall'd the spot : 'twas here her palace stood, As surely as 'twas vanish'd without trace.

Was all a dream? To think that all was dreamt Were now the happier thought; but arguing o'er That dream it was, she fell from her attempt, Feeling the wifely burden that she bore. Nay, true, 'twas true. She had had all and lost; The joy, the reckless wrong, the heavy cost Were hers, the dead end now, and woe in store.

What to be done? Fainting and shelterless Upon the mountain it were death to bide: And harbour knew she none, where her distress Might comfort find, or love's dishonour hide; Nor felt she any dread like that of home: . Yet forth she must, albeit to rove and roam An outcast o'er the country far and wide.

5

Anon she marvel'd noting from the vale A path lead downward to the plain below, Crossing the very site, whereon the pale Of all her joy had stood few hours ago; A run of mountain beasts, that keep their track Through generations, and for ages back Had trod the self-same footing to and fro.

That would she try: so forth she took her way, Turning her face from the dishonour'd dell, Adown the broadening eastward lawns, which lay In gentle slant, till suddenly they fell In sheer cliff; whence the path that went around, Clomb by the bluffs, or e'er it downward wound Beneath that precipice impassable.

There once she turn'd, and gazing up the slope She bid the scene of all her joy adieu; 'Ay, and farewell,' she cried, 'farewell to hope, Since there is none will rescue me anew, Who have kill'd God's perfection with a doubt.' Which said, she took the path that led about, And hid the upland pleasance from her view.

( 130 )

But soon it left her, entering 'neath the shade Of cedar old and russeted tall pine, Whose mighty tops, seen from the thorny glade, Belted the hills about ; and now no sign Had she to guide her, save the slow descent. But swiftly o'er the springy floor she went, And drew the odorous air like draughts of wine.

9

Then next she past a forest thick and dark With heavy ilexes and platanes high, And came to long lush grass ; and now coud mark By many a token that the plain was nigh. ' When lo ! a river : to whose brink at last Being come, upon the bank her limbs she cast, And through her sad tears watch'd the stream go by

10

And now the thought came o'er her that in death There was a cure for sorrow, that before Her eyes ran Lethe, she might take one breath Of water and be freed for evermore. Leaning to look into her tomb, thereon She saw the horror of her image wan, And up she rose at height to leap from shore.

1 I

When suddenly a mighty voice, that fell With fury on her ears, their sense to scare, That bounding from the tree trunks like the yell Of hundred brazen trumpets, cried 'Forbear ! Forbear, fond maid, that froward step to take, For life can cure the ills that love may make ; But for the harm of death is no repair.'

(13r)

Then looking up she saw an uncouth form Perch'd on the further bank, whose parted lips Volley'd their friendly warning in a storm : A man he might have been, but for the tips Of horns appearing from his shaggy head, For o'er his matted beard his face was red, And all his shape was manlike to the hips.

13

In forehead low, keen eye, and nostril flat He bore the human grace in mean degree, But, set beneath his body squat and fat, Legs like a goat's, and from the hairy knee The shank fell spare ; and, though crosswise he put His limbs in easeful posture, for the foot The beast's divided hoof was plain to see.

14

Him then she knew the mighty choric God, The great hill-haunting and tree-loving Pan ; Whom Zeus had laught to see when first he trod Olympus, neither god nor beast nor man : Who every rocky peak and snowy crest Of the Aspran mountains for his own possest, And all their alps with bacchic rout o'erran :

15

Whom, when his pipe he plays on loud and sweet, And o'er the fitted reeds his moist lip flees, Around in measured step with nimble feet Water-nymphs dance and Hamadryades : And all the woodland's airy folk, who shun Man's presence, to his frolic pastime run From their perennial wells and sacred trees,

(132)

August

Now on his knee his pipe laid by, he spoke With flippant tongue, wounding unwittingly The heart he sought to cheer with jest and joke. 'And what hast thou to do with misery,' He said, 'who hast such beauty as might gain The love of Eros? Cast away thy pain, And give thy soul to mirth and jollity.

17

'Thy mortal life is but a brittle vase, But as thee list with wine or tears to fill; For all the drops therein are Ohs and Ahs Of joy or grief according to thy will; And wouldst thou learn of me my merry way, I'd teach thee change thy lover every day, And prize the cup that thou wert fain to spill.

18

'Nay, if thou plunge thou shalt not drown nor sink For I will to thee o'er the stream afloat, And bear thee safe; and O I know a drink For care, that makes sweet music in the throat. Come live with me, my love; I'll cure thy chance: For I can laugh and quaff, and pipe and dance, Swim like a fish, and caper like a goat.'

19

Speaking, his brute divinity explored The secret of her silence; and old Pan Grew kind and told her of a shallow ford Where lower down the stream o'er pebbles ran, And one might pass at ease with ankles dry: Whither she went, and crossing o'er thereby, Her lonely wanderings through the isle began.

Eut none coud tell, no, nor herself had told Where food she found, or shelter through the land By day or night; until by fate control'd She came by steep ways to the southern strand, Where, sacred to the Twins and Britomart, Pent in its rocky theatre apart, A little town stood on the level sand.

2 I

'Twas where her younger sister's husband reign'd : And Fsyche to the palace gate drew near, Helplessly still by Eros' hest constrain'd, And knocking begg'd to see her sister dear; But when in state stepp'd down that haughty queen, And saw the wan face spent with tears and teen, She smiled, and said 'Psyche, what dost thou here?'

22

Then Psyche told how, having well employ'd Their means, and done their bidding not amiss, Looking on him her hand would have destroy'd, 'Twas Eros ; whom in love leaning to kiss, Even as she kisst, a drop of burning oil Fall'n from the lamp had served her scheme to foil, Discovering her in vision of her bliss ;

23

Wherewith the god stung, like a startled bird Arose in air, and she fell back in swoon; 'But ere he parted,' said she, 'he confer'd On thee the irrecoverable boon By prying lost to me: Go tell, he said, Thy sister that I love her in thy stead, And bid her by her love haste hither soon.'

(131)

August

Which when that heart of malice heard, it took The jealous fancy of her silly lust : And pitilessly with triumphant look She drank the flattery, and gave full trust ; And leaving Psyche ere she more coud tell, Ran off to bid her spouse for aye farewell, And in his ear this ready lie she thrust :

25

' My dearest sister Psyche, she whose fate We mourn'd, hath reappear'd alive and hale, But brings sad news; my father dies: full late These tidings come, but love may yet avail; Let me be gone.' And stealing blind consent, Forth on that well-remember'd road she went, And climb'd upon the peak above the dale.

26

There on the topmost rock, where Psyche first Had by her weeping sire been left to die, She stood a moment, in her hope accurst Being happy; and the cliffs took up her cry With chuckling mockery from her tongue above, Zephyr, sweet Zephyr, waft me to my love ! When off she lept upon his wings to fly.

27

But as a dead stone, from a height let fall, Silent and straight is gather'd by the force Of earth's vast mass upon its weight so small, In speed increasing as it nears its source Of motion—by which law all things soe'er Are clutch'd and dragg'd and held—so fell she there Like a dead stone, down in her headlong course.

28

The disregardful silence heard her strike Upon the solid crags; her dismal shriek Rang on the rocks and died out laughter-like Along the vale in hurried trebles weak; And soon upon her, from their skiey haunt Fell to their feast the great birds bald and gaunt And gorged on her fair flesh with bloody beak.

29

But Psyche, when her sister was gone forth, Went out again her wandering way to take : And following a stream that led her north, After some days she pass'd the Corian Lake, Whereby Athena's temple stands, and he Who traverses the isle from sea to sea May by the plain his shortest journey make :

30

Till on the northern coast arrived she came Upon a city built about a port, The which she knew, soon as she heard the name, Was where her elder sister had her court; To whom, as Eros had commanded her, She now in turn became the messenger Of vengeful punishment, that fell not short:

31

For she too hearing gan her heart exalt, Nor pity felt for Psyche's tears and moans, But, fellow'd with that other in her fault, Follow'd her to her fate upon the stones; And from the peak leaping like her below The self-same way unto the self-same woe, Lay dasht to death upon her sister's bones.

PSYCHE'S WANDERINGS

SEPTEMBER

r

ON the Hellenic board of Crete's fair isle, Westward of Drepanon, along a reach Which massy Cyamum for many a mile Jutting to sea delivers from the breach Of North and East,—returning to embay The favour'd shore—an ancient city lay, Aptera, which is Wingless in our speech.

And hence the name; that here in rocky cove, Thence called Museion, was the trial waged What day the Sirens with the Muses strove, By jealous Hera in that war engaged : Wherein the daughters of Mnemosyne O'ercame the chauntresses who vex'd the sea, Nor vengeance spared them by their pride enraged

For those strange creatures, who with women's words And wiles made ravenous prey of passers-by, Were throated with the liquid pipe of birds : Of love they sang ; and none, who sail'd anigh Through the grey hazes of the cyanine sea, Had wit the whirlpool of that song to flee, Nor fear'd the talon hook'd and feather'd thigh.

But them the singers of the gods o'ercame, And pluck'd them of their plumage, where in fright They vainly flutter'd off to hide their shame, Upon two rocks that lie within the bight, Under the headland, barren and alone; Which, being with the scatter'd feathers strewn, Were by the folk named Leukæ, which is White.

5

Thereon about this time the snowy gull, Minion of Aphrodite, being come, Plumed himself, standing on the sea-wrack dull, That drifted from the foot of Cyamum; And 'twas his thought, that had the goddess learnt The tale of Psyche loved and Eros burnt, She ne'er so long had kept aloof and dumb.

Wherefore that duteous gossip of Love's queen Devised that he the messenger would be; And rising from the rock, he skim'd between The chasing waves—such grace have none but he;— Into the middle deep then down he dived, And rowing with his glistening wings arrived At Aphrodite's bower beneath the sea.

September

The eddies from his silver pinions swirl'd The crimson, green, and yellow floss, that grew About the caves, and at his passing curl'd Its graceful silk, and gently waved anew : Till, oaring here and there, the queen he found Stray'd from her haunt unto a sandy ground, Dappl'd with eye-rings in the sunlight blue.

She, as he came upon her from above, With Hora play'd; Hora, her herald fair, That lays the soft necessity of Love On maidens' eyelids, and with tender care Marketh the hour, as in all works is fit: And happy they in love who time outwit, Fondly constrained in her season rare.

But he with garrulous and laughing tongue Broke up his news; how Eros, fallen sick, Lay tossing on his bed, to frenzy stung -By such a burn as did but barely prick : A little bleb, no bigger than a pease, Upon his shoulder 'twas, that kill'd his ease, Fever'd his heart, and made his breathing thick.

10

' For which disaster hath he not been seen This many a day at all in any place : And thou, dear mistress,' piped he, 'hast not been Thyself amongst us now a dreary space : The pining mortals suffer from a dearth Of love; and for this sadness of the earth Thy family is darken'd with disgrace.

11

*Now on the secret paths of dale and wood, Where lovers walk'd are lovers none to find : And friends, besworn to equal brotherhood, Forget their faith, and part with words unkind : In the first moon thy honey-bond is loath'd : And I coud tell even of the new-betroth'd That fly o'ersea, and leave their loves behind.

12

'Summer is over, but the merry pipe, That wont to cheer the harvesting, is mute : And in the vineyards, where the grape is ripe, No voice is heard of them that take the fruit. No workman singeth at eve nor maiden danceth : All joy is dead, and as the year advanceth The signs of woe increase on man and brute.

I 3

"Tis plain that if thy pleasure longer pause, Thy mighty rule on earth hath seen its day: The race must come to perish, and no cause But that thou sittest with thy nymphs at play, While on a Cretan hill thy truant boy Hath with his pretty mistress turn'd to toy, And less for pain than love pineth away."

14

'Ha! Mistress!' cried she; 'Hath my beardless son Been hunting for himself his lovely game? Some young Orestiad hath his fancy won? Some Naiad? say; or is a Grace his flame? Or maybe Muse, and then 'tis Erato, The trifling wanton. Tell me, if thou know, Woman or goddess is she? and her name.'

15

Then said the snowy gull, 'O heavenly queen, What is my knowledge, who am but a bird? Yet is she only mortal, as I ween, And namèd Psyche, if I rightly heard.'— But Aphrodite's look daunted his cheer, Ascare he fled away, screaming in fear, To see what wrath his simple tale had stirr'd.

16

He flasht his pens, and sweeping widely round Tower'd to air; so swift in all his way, That whence he dived he there again was found As soon as if he had but dipt for prey: And now, or e'er he join'd his wailful flock, Once more he stood upon the Sirens' rock, And preen'd his ruffl'd quills for fresh display.

17

But as ill tidings will their truth assure Without more witness than their fatal sense, So, since was nothing bitterer to endure, The injured goddess guess'd the full offence : And doubted only whether first to smite Or Psyche for her new presumptuous flight, Or Eros for his disobedience.

18

But full of anger to her son she went, And found him in his golden chamber laid; And with him sweet Euphrosynè, attent Upon his murmur'd wants, aye as he bade Shifted the pillows with each fretful whim; But scornfully his mother look'd at him, And reckless of his pain gan thus upbraid;

19

"O worthy deeds, I say, and true to blood, The crown and pledge of promise! thou that wast In estimation my perpetual bud, Now fruiting thus untimely to my cost; Backsliding from commandment, ay, and worse, With bliss to favour one I bade thee curse, And save the life I left with thee for lost!

20

'Thou too to burn with love, and love of her Whom I did hate; and to thy bed to take My rival, that my trusted officer Might of mine enemy my daughter make! Dost thou then think my love for thee so fond, And miserably doting, that the bond By such dishonour strained will not break?

2 I

'Or that I cannot bear another son As good as thou; or, if I choose not bear, Not beg as good a lusty boy of one Of all my nymphs,—and some have boys to spare,— Whom I might train, to whom thine arms made o'er Should do me kinder service than before, To smite my foes and keep my honour fair?

22

'For thou hast ever mockt me, and beguiled In amours strange my God, thy valiant sire : And having smirch'd our fame while yet a child Wilt further foul it now with earthly fire. But I—do as thou may—have vow'd to kill Thy fancied girl, whether thou love her still, Or of her silly charms already tire.

23.

'Tell me but where she hides.' And Eros now, Proud in his woe, boasted his happy theft : Confessing he had loved her well, and how By her own doing she was lost and left ; And homeless in such sorrow as outwent The utmost pain of other punishment, Was wandering of his love and favour reft.

24

By which was Cypris gladden'd, not appeased, But hid her joy and spake no more her threat : And left with face like one that much displeased Hath yet betray'd that he can wrong forget.

When lo! as swiftly she came stepping down From her fair house into the heavenly town The Kronian sisters on the way she met;

25

Hera, the Wife of Zeus, her placid front Dark with the shadow of his troubl'd reign, And tall Demeter, who with men once wont, Holding the high Olympians in disdain For Persephassa's rape; which now forgiven, She had return'd unto the courts of Heaven, And 'mong the immortals liv'd at peace again :

26

Whose smile told Aphrodite that they knew The meaning of her visit; and a flush Of anger answer'd them, while hot she grew. But Hera laugh'd outright: 'Why thou dost blush ! Now see we modest manners on my life ! And all thy little son has got a wife Can make the crimson to thy forehead rush.

27

<sup>c</sup> Didst think he, whom thou madest passion's prince, No privy dart then for himself would poise? Nay, by the cuckoo on my sceptre, since 'Twas love that made thee mother of his joys, Art thou the foremost to his favour bound; As thou shouldst be the last to think to sound The heart, and least of all thy wanton boy's.'

28

But her Demeter, on whose stalwart arm She lean'd, took up: 'If thou wilt hark to me, This Psyche,' said she, 'hath the heavenly charm, And will become immortal. And maybe To marry with a woman is as well As wed a god and live below in Hell: As 'twas my lot in child of mine to see.'

29

Which things they both said, fearing in their hearts That savage Eros, if they mockt his case, Would kill their peace with his revengeful darts, And bring them haply to a worse disgrace: But Aphrodite, saying 'Good ! my dames; Behind this smoke I see the spite that flames,' Left them, and on her journey went apace.

30

For having purposed she would hold no truce With Psyche or her son, 'twas in her mind To go forthwith unto the throne of Zeus, And beg that Hermes might be sent to find The wanderer ; and secure that in such quest He would not fail, she ponder'd but how best She might inflict her yengeance long-design'd.

I

HEAVY meanwhile at heart, with bruisèd feet Was Psyche wandering many nights and days Upon the paths of hundred-citied Crete, And chose to step the most deserted ways; Being least unhappy when she went unseen; Since else her secret sorrow had no screen From the plain question of men's idle gaze.

Yet wheresoe'er she went one hope she had; Like mortal mourners, who 'gainst reason strong Hope to be unexpectedly made glad With sight of their dead friends, so much they long; So she for him, whom loss a thousandfold Endear'd and made desired; nor coud she hold He would not turn and quite forgive her wrong.

Wherefore her eager eyes in every place Lookt for her lover; and 'twixt hope and fear She follow'd oft afar some form of grace, In pain alike to lose or venture near. And still this thought cheer'd her fatigue, that he, Or on some hill, or by some brook or tree, But waited for her coming to appear.

And then for comfort many an old love-crost And doleful ditty would she gently sing, Writ by sad poets of a lover lost, Now sounding sweeter for her sorrowing: Echo, sweet Echo, watching up on high, Say hast thou seen to-day my love go by, Or where thou sittest by thy mossy spring?

5

Or say ye nymphs, that from the crystal rills, When ye have bathed your limbs from morn till eve, Flying at midnight to the bare-topt hills, Beneath the stars your mazy dances weave, Say, my deserter whom ye well may know By his small wings, his quiver, and his bow, Say, have ye seen my love, whose loss I grieve?

Till climb'd one evening on a rocky steep Above the plain of Cisamos, that lay, Robb'd of its golden harvest, in the deep Mountainous shadows of the dying day, She saw a temple, whose tall columns fair Recall'd her home; and 'O if thou be there, My love,' she cried, 'fly not again away.'

Swiftly she ran, and entering by the door She stood alone within an empty fane Of great Demeter : and, behold, the floor Was litter'd with thank-offerings of grain, With wheat and barley-sheaves together heapt In holy harvest-home of them that reapt The goddess plenteous gifts upon the plain;

And on the tithe the tackle of the tithe Thrown by in such confusion, as are laid Upon the swath sickle, and hook, and scythe, When midday drives the reapers to the shade. And Psyche, since had come no priestess there To trim the temple, in her pious care Forgat herself, and lent her duteous aid.

9

She drew the offerings from the midst aside, And piled the sheaves at every pillar's base; And sweeping therebetween a passage wide, Made clear of corn and chaff the temple space : As countrymen who bring their wheat to mart, Set out their show along the walls apart By their allotted stations, each in place;

IO

Thus she, and felt no weariness,—such strength Hath duty to support our feeble frame,— Till all was set in order, and at length Up to the threshold of the shrine she came : When lo! before her face with friendly smile, Tall as a pillar of the peristyle, The goddess stood reveal'd, and call'd her name

ır

'Unhappy Psyche,' said she, 'know'st thou not How Aphrodite to thy hurt is sworn? And thou, thy peril and her wrath forgot, Spendest thy thought my temple to adorn. Take better heed!'—And Psyche, at the voice Even of so little comfort, gan rejoice, And at her feet pour'd out this prayer forlorn.

12

"O Gracious giver of the golden grain, Hide me, I pray thee, from her wrath unkind; For who can pity as canst thou my pain, Who wert thyself a wanderer, vex'd in mind For loss of thy dear Corè once, whenas, Ravisht to hell by fierce Agesilas, Thou soughtest her on earth and coudst not find.

r 3

'How coud thy feet bear thee to western night, And where swart Libyans watch the sacred tree, And thrice to ford o'er Achelous bright, And all the streams of beauteous Sicily? And thrice to Enna cam'st thou, thrice, they tell, Satest athirst by Callichorus' well, Nor tookest of the spring to comfort thee.

14

'By that remember'd anguish of thine heart, Lady, have pity even on me, and show Where I may find my love; and take my part For peace, I pray, against my cruel foe: Or if thou canst not from her anger shield, Here let me lie among the sheaves conceal'd Such time till forth I may in safety go.'

15

Demeter answer'd, 'Nay, though thou constrain My favour with thy plea, my help must still Be hidden, else I work for thee in vain To thwart my mighty sister in her will. Thou must fly hence: Yet though I not oppose, Less will I aid her; and if now I close My temple doors to thee, take it not ill.'

rб

Then Psyche's hope founder'd; as when a ship, The morrow of the gale can hardly ride The swollen seas, fetching a deeper dip At every wave, and through her gaping side And o'er her shattered bulwark ever drinks, Till plunging in the watery wild she sinks, To scoop her grave beneath the crushing tide:

17

So with each word her broken spirit drank Its doom; and overwhelm'd with deep despair She turn'd away, and coming forth she sank Silently weeping on the temple stair, In midmost night, forspent with long turmoil: But sleep, the gracious pursuivant of toil, Came swiftly down, and nursed away her care.

r8

And when the sun awaked her with his beams She found new hope, that still her sorrow's cure Lay with the gods, who in her morning dreams Had sent her comfort in a vision sure; Wherein the Cretan-born, almightiest god, Cloud-gathering Zeus himself had seem'd to nod, And bid her with good heart her woes endure.

19

So coming that same day unto a shrine Of Hera, she took courage and went in : And like to one that to the cell divine For favour ventures or a suit to win, She drew anigh the altar, from her face Wiping the tears, ere to the heavenly grace, As thus she pray'd, she would her prayer begin.

20

'Most honour'd Lady, who from ancient doom Wert made heaven's wife, and art on earth besought With gracious happiness of all to whom Thy holy wedlock hath my burden brought, Save me from Aphrodite's fell pursuit, And guard unto the birth Love's hapless fruit, Which she for cruel spite would bring to nought.

21

'As once from her thou wert not shamed to take Her beauty's zone, thy beauty to enhance; For which again Zeus loved thee, to forsake His warlike ire in faithful dalliance; Show me what means may win my Love to me, Or how that I may come, if so may be, Within the favour of his countenance.

22

'If there be any place for tears or prayer, If there be need for succour in distress, Now is the very hour of all despair, Here is the heart of grief and bitterness. Motherly pity, bend thy face and grant One beam of ruth to thy poor suppliant, Nor turn me from thine altar comfortless.'

23

Even as she pray'd a cloud spread through the cell, And 'mid the wreathings of the vapour dim The goddess grew in glory visible, Like some barbaric queen in festal trim ; Such the attire and ornaments she wore, When o'er the forgèd threshold of the floor Of Zeus's house she stept to visit him.

(150)

October

24

From either ear, ring'd to its piercèd lobe A triple jewel hung, with gold enchas't; And o'er her breasts her wide ambrosial robe With many a shining golden clasp was brac't; The flowering on its smooth embroider'd lawn Gather'd to colour where the zone was drawn In fringe of golden tassels at her waist.

25

Her curling hair with plaited braid and brail, Pendant or loop'd about her head divine, Lay hidden half beneath a golden veil, Bright as the rippling ocean in sunshine : And on the ground, flashing whene'er she stept, Beneath her feet the dazzling lightnings lept From the gold network of her sandals fine.

26

Thus Hera stood in royal guise bedeckt Before poor Psyche on the stair that knelt, Whose new-nursed hope at that display was checkt And all her happier thoughts gan fade and melt. She saw no kindness in such haughty mien, And venturing not to look upon the queen, Bow'd down in woe to hear her sentence dealt.

27

And thus the goddess spake, 'In vain thou suest, Most miserable Psyche; though my heart Be full of hate for her whose hate thou ruest, And pride and pity move me to thy part : Yet not till Zeus make known his will, coud I, Least of the blameless gods that dwell on high, Assist thee, wert thou worthier than thou art.

28

'But know if Eros love thee, that thy hopes Should rest on him; and I would bid thee go Where in his mother's house apart he mopes Grieving for loss of thee in secret woe: For should he take thee back, there is no power In earth or heaven will hurt thee from that hour, Nay, not if Zeus himself should prove thy foe.'

29

Thus saying she was gone, and Psyche now Surprised by comfort rose and went her way, Resolved in heart, and only wondering how 'Twas possible to come where Eros lay; Since that her feet, however she might roam, Coud never travel to the heavenly home Of Love, beyond the bounds of mortal day:

30

Yet must she come to him. And now 'twas proved How that to Lovers, as is told in song, Seeking the way no place is far removed; Nor is there any obstacle so strong, Nor bar so fix'd that it can hinder them : And how to reach heaven's gate by stratagem Vex'd not the venturous heart of Psyche long.

31

To face her enemy might well avail: Wherefore to Cypris' shrine her steps she bent, Hoping the goddess in her hate might hale Her body to the skies for punishment, Whate'er to be; yet now her fiercest wrath Seem'd happiest fortune, seeing 'twas the path Whereby alone unto her love she went.

NOVEMBER

I

Bur Aphrodite to the house of Zeus Being bound, bade beckon out her milkwhite steeds Four doves, that ready to her royal use In golden cages stood and peck'd the seeds: Best of the nimble air's high-sailing folk That wore with pride the marking of her yoke, And cooed in envy of her gentle needs.

These drew in turn her chariot, when in state Along the heaven with all her train she fared; And oft in journeying to the skiey gate Of Zeus's palace high their flight had dared, Which darkest vapour and thick glooms enshroud Above all else in the perpetual cloud, Wherethro' to mount again they stood prepared,

Sleeking their feathers, by her shining car;

The same Hephæstos wrought for her, when he, Bruised in his hideous fall from heaven afar, Was nursed by Thetis, and Eurynomè, The daughter of the ever-refluent main; With whom he dwelt till he grew sound again, Down in a hollow cave beside the sea:

And them for kindness done was prompt to serve, Forging them brooches rich in make and mode, Earrings, and supple chains of jointed curve, And other trinkets, while he there abode : And none of gods or men knew of his home, But they two only ; and the salt sea-foam To and fro past his cavern ever flow'd.

'Twas then he wrought this work within the cave, Emboss'd with rich design, a mooned car; And when return'd to heaven to Venus gave, In form imagined like her crescent star; Which circling nearest earth, maketh at night To wakeful mortal men shadow and light Alone of all the stars in heaven that are.

Two slender wheels it had, with fretted tires Of biting adamant, to take firm hold Of cloud or ether; and their whirling fires Threw off the air in halo where they roll'd: And either nave that round the axle turn'd A ruby was, whose steady crimson burn'd Betwixt the twin speed-mingling fans of gold.

Thereon the naked goddess mounting, shook The reins; whereat the doves their wings outspread, And rising high their flight to heaven they took : And all the birds, that in those courts were bred, Of her broad eaves the nested families, Sparrows and swallows, join'd their companies Awhile and twitter'd to her overhead.

But onward she with fading tracks of flame Sped swiftly, till she reacht her journey's end : And when within the house of Zeus she came, She pray'd the Sire of Heaven that he would lend Hermes, the Argus slayer, for her hest ; And he being granted her at her request, She went forthwith to seek him and to send.

9

Who happ'd within the palace then to wait Upon the almighty pleasure; and her tale Was quickly told, and he made answer straight That he would find the truant without fail; Asking the goddess by what signs her slave Might best be known, and what the price she gave For capture, or admitted for the bail.

10

All which he took his silver stile to write In letters large upon a waxed board; Her age and name, her colour, face and height, Her home, and parentage, and the reward: And then read o'er as 'twas to be proclaim'd. And she took oath to give the price she named, Without demur, when Psyche was restored.

II

Then on his head he closely set his cap With eared wings erect, and o'er his knee He cross'd each foot in turn to prove the strap That bound his winged sandals, and shook free His chlamys, and gat up, and in his hand Taking his fair white-ribbon'd herald's wand, Lept forth on air, accoutred cap-a-pè.

12

And piloting along the mid-day sky, Held southward, till the narrow map of Crete Lay like a fleck in azure 'neath his eye; When down he came, and as an eagle fleet Drops in some combe, then checks his headlong stoop With wide-flung wing, wheeling in level swoop To strike the bleating quarry with his feet,

13

Thus he alighted ; and in every town In all the isle before the close of day Had cried the message, which he carried down, Of Psyche, Aphrodite's runaway ; That whosoever found the same and caught, And by such time unto her temple brought, To him the goddess would this guerdon pay :

14

SIX HONIED KISSES FROM HER ROSY MOUTH WOULD CYTHEREA GIVE, AND ONE BESIDE TO QUENCH AT HEART FOR AYE LOVE'S MORTAL DROUTH: BUT UNTO HIM THAT HID HER, WOE BETIDE ! Which now was on all tongues, and Psyche's name Herself o'erheard, or ever nigh she came To Aphrodite's temple where she hied.

15

When since she found her way to heaven was safe, She only wisht to make it soon and sure; Nor fear'd to meet the goddess in her chafe, So she her self-surrender might secure, And not be given of other for the price; Nor was there need of any artifice Her once resplendent beauty to obscure.

( 156 )

November

16

For now so changed she was by heavy woe, That for the little likeness that she bore To her description she was fear'd to go Within the fane; and when she stood before The priestess, scarce coud she with oath persuade That she was Psyche, the renowned maid, Whom men had left the temple to adore.

17

But when to Hermes she was shown and given, He took no doubt, but eager to be quit, And proud of speed, return'd with her to heaven, And left her with the proclamation writ, Hung at her neck, the board with letters large, At Aphrodite's gate with those in charge ; And up whence first he came made haste to flit.

18

But hapless Psyche fell, for so it chanced, To moody SYNETHEA'S care, the one Of Aphrodite's train whom she advanced To try the work abandon'd by her son. Who by perpetual presence made ill end Of good or bad; though she coud both amend, And merit praise for work hy her begun.

19

But she to better thought her heart had shut, And proved she had a spite beyond compare : Nor coud the keenest taunts her anger glut, Which she when sour'd was never wont to spare : And now she mock'd at Psyche's shame and grief, As only she might do, and to her chief Along the courtyard dragg'd her by the hair.

20

Nor now was Aphrodite kinder grown : Having her hated rival in her power, She laught for joy, and in triumphant tone Bade her a merry welcome to her bower : ''Tis fit indeed daughters-in-law should wait Upon their mothers ; but thou comest late, Psyche ; I lookt for thee before this hour.

2 I

'And yet,' thus gave she rein to jeer and gibe,
'Forgive me if I held thee negligent,
Or if accustom'd vanity ascribe
An honour to myself that was not meant.
Thy lover is it, who so dearly prized
The pretty soul, then left her and despised?
To him more like thy heavenward steps were bent:

22

'Nor without reason : Zeus, I tell thee, swoon'd To hear the story of the drop of oil, The revelation and the ghastly wound : My merriment is but my fear's recoil. But if my son was unkind, thou shalt see How kind a goddess can his mother be To bring thy tainted honour clear of soil.'

23

And so, to match her promise with her mirth, Two of her ministers she call'd in ken, That work the melancholy of the earth; MERIMNA that with care perplexes, when The hearts of mortals have the gods forgot, And Lypè, that her sorrow spares them not, When mortals have forgot their fellow men.

24

These, like twin sharks that in a fair ship's wake Swim constant, showing 'bove the water blue Their shearing fins, and hasty ravin make Of overthrow or offal, so these two On Aphrodite's passing follow hard ; And now she offer'd to their glut's regard Sweet Psyche, with command their wont to do.

25

But in what secret chamber their foul task These soul-tormentors plied, or what their skill, Pity of tender nature may not ask, Nor poet stain his rhyme with such an ill. But they at last themselves turn'd from their rack, Weary of cruelty, and led her back, Saying that further torture were to kill.

26

Then when the goddess saw her, more she mockt 'Art thou the woman of the earth,' she said, 'That hast in sorceries mine Eros lockt, And stood thyself for worship in my stead? Looking that I should pity thee, or care For what illicit offspring thou may'st bear; Or let thee to that god my son be wed?

27

'I know thy trick ; and thou art one of them Who steal love's favour in the gentle way, Wearing submission for a diadem, Patience and suffering for thy rich array : Thou wilt be modest, kind, implicit, so To rest thy wily spirit out of show That it may leap the livelier into play :

28

•Devout at doing nothing, if so be The grace become thee well; but active yet Above all others be there none to see Thy business, and thine eager face asweat. Lo! I will prove thy talent : thou may'st live, And all that thou desirest will I give, If thou perform the task which I shall set.'

29

She took her then aside, and bade her heed A heap of grains piled high upon the floor, Millet and mustard, hemp and poppy seed, And fern-bloom's undistinguishable spore, All kinds of pulse, of grasses, and of spice, Clover and linseed, rape, and corn, and rice, Dodder, and sesame, and many more.

30

'Sort me these seeds' she said; 'it now is night, I will return at morning; if I find That thou hast separated all aright, Each grain from other grain after its kind, And set them in unmingl'd heaps apart, Then shall thy wish be granted to thine heart. Whereat she turn'd, and closed the door behind.

PSYCHE'S TRIALS AND RECEPTION INTO HEAVEN

DECEMBER

I

A SINGLE lamp there stood beside the heap, And shed thereon its mocking golden light; Such as might tempt the weary eye to sleep Rather than prick the nerve of tasked sight. Yet Psyche, not to fail for lack of zeal, With good will sat her down to her ordeal, Sorting the larger seeds as best she might.

When lo! upon the wall, a shadow past Of doubtful shape, across the chamber dim Moving with speed : and seeing nought that cast The shade, she bent her down the flame to trim And there the beast itself, a little ant, Climb'd up in compass of the lustre scant, Upon the bowl of oil ran round the rim.

3

Smiling to see the creature of her fear So dwarf'd by truth, she watcht him where he crept, For mere distraction telling in his ear What straits she then was in, and telling wept. Whereat he stood and trim'd his horns; but ere Her tale was done resumed his manner scare, Ran down, and on his way in darkness kept.

4

But she intent drew forth with dextrous hand The larger seeds, or push'd the smaller back, Or light from heavy with her breathing fan'd. When suddenly she saw the floor grow black, And troops of ants, flowing in noiseless train, Moved to the hill of seeds, as o'er a plain Armies approach a city for attack;

5

And gathering on the grain, began to strive With grappling horns: and each from out the heap His burden drew, and all their motion live Struggled and slid upon the surface steep. And Psyche wonder'd, watching them, to find The creatures separated kind from kind: Till dizzied with the sight she fell asleep.

And when she woke 'twas with the morning sound Of Aphrodite's anger at the door, Whom high amaze stay'd backward, as she found Her foe asleep with all her trouble o'er : And round the room beheld, in order due, The piles arranged distinct and sorted true, Grain with grain, seed with seed, and spore with spore

(162)

December

7

She fiercely cried 'Thou shalt not thus escape; For to this marvel dar'st thou not pretend. There is but one that coud this order shape, Demeter, —but I knew her not thy friend. Therefore another trial will I set, In which she cannot aid thee nor abet, But thou thyself must bring it fair to end.'

8

Thereon she sped her to the bounds of Thrace And set her by a river deep and wide, And said 'To east beyond this stream, a race Of golden-fleecèd sheep at pasture bide. Go seek them out; and this thy task, to pull But one lock for me of their precious wool, And give it in my hands at eventide :

9

'This do and thou shalt have thy heart's desire.' Which said, she fled and left her by the stream : And Psyche then, with courage still entire, Had plunged therein ; but now of great esteem Her life she rated, while it lent a spell Wherein she yet might hope to quit her well, And in one winning all her woes redeem.

10

There as she stood in doubt, a fluting voice Rose from the flood, 'Psyche, be not afraid To hear a reed give tongue, for 'twas of choice That I from mortal flesh a plant was made. My name is Syrinx; once from mighty Pan Into the drowning river as I ran, A fearful prayer my steps for ever stay'd.

II

'But by that change in many climes I live; And Pan, my lover, who to me alone Is true and does me honour, I forgive---Nor if I speak in sorrow is't my own: Rather for thee my voice I now uplift To warn thee plunge not in the river swift, Nor seek the golden sheep to men unknown.

12

'If thou should cross the stream, which may not be, Thou coudst not climb upon the hanging rocks, Nor ever, as the goddess bade thee, see The pasture of the yellow-fleecèd flocks : Or if thou coud, their herded horns would gore And slay thee on the crags, or thrust thee o'er Ere thou coudst rob them of their golden locks.

13

'The goddess means thy death. But I can show How thy obedience yet may thwart her will. At noon the golden flocks descend below, Leaving the scented herbage of the hill, And where the shelving banks to shallows fall, Drink at the rippling water one and all, Nor back return till they have drawn their fill.

r4

'I will command a thornbush, that it stoop Over some ram that steppeth by in peace, And him in all its prickles firmly coop, Making thee seizure of his golden fleece; So without peril of his angry horns Shalt thou be quit: for he upon the thorns Must leave his ransom ere he win release.'

(164)

December

15

Then Psyche thankt her for her kind befriending, And hid among the rushes looking east; And when noon came she saw the flock descending Out of the hills; and lo! one golden beast Caught in a thornbush; and the mighty brute Struggl'd and tore it from its twisted root Into the stream, or e'er he was releas't.

16

And when they water'd were and gone, the breeze Floated the freighted thorn where Psyche lay: Whence she unhook'd the golden wool at ease, And back to heaven for passage swift gan pray. And Hermes, who was sent to be her guide Ifso she lived, came down at eventide, And bore her thither ere the close of day.

17

But when the goddess saw the locks of gold Held to her hands, her heart with wrath o'erran : 'Most desperate thou, and by abetting bold, That dost outwit me, prove thee as I can. Yet this work is not thine : there is but one Of all the gods who coud the thing have done. Hast thou a friend too in the lusty Pan?

18

'I'll give thee trial where he cannot aid.'

Which said, she led her to a torrid land, Level and black, but not with flood or shade, For nothing coud the mighty heat withstand, Which aye from morn till eve the naked sun Pour'd on that plain; where never foot had run, Nor any herb sprung on its molten sand.

19

Far off a gloomy mountain rose alone : And Aphrodite, thither pointing, said 'There lies thy task. Out of the topmost stone Of yonder hill upwells a fountain head. Take thou this goblet ; brimming must thou bring Its cup with water from that sacred spring, If ever to my son thou wouldst be wed.'

20

Saying, she gave into her hands a bowl Cut of one crystal, open, broad and fair; And bade her at all hazard keep it whole, For heaven held nought beside so fine or rare. Then was she gone; and Psyche on the plain Now doubted if she ever should regain The love of Eros, strove she howsoe'er.

2 r

Yet as a helmsman, at the word to tack, Swiftly without a thought puts down his helm, So Psyche turn'd to tread that desert black, Since was no fear that coud her heart o'erwhelm; Nor knew she that she went the fount to seek Of cold Cocytus, springing to the peak, Secretly from his source in Pluto's realm.

22

All night and day she journey'd, and at last Come to the rock gazed up in vain around : Nothing she saw but precipices vast O'er ruined scarps, with rugged ridges crown'd : And creeping to a cleft to rest in shade, Or e'er the desperate venture she assay'd, She fell asleep upon the stony ground.

( 166 )

December

23

A dream came to her, thus : she stood alone Within her palace in the high ravine ; Where nought but she was changed, but she to stone. Worshippers throng'd the court, and still were seen Folk flying from the peak, who, ever more Flying and flying, lighted on the floor, Hail / cried they, wife of Eros, adored queen !

24

A hurtling of the battl'd air disturb'd Her sunken sense, and waked her eyes to meet The kingly bird of Zeus, himself that curb'd His swooping course, alighting at her feet; With motion gentle, his far-darting eye In kindness dim'd upon her, he drew nigh, And thus in words unveil'd her foe's deceit:

25

'In vain, poor Psyche, hast thou hither striven Across the fiery plain toiling so well; Cruelly to destruction art thou driven By her, whose hate thou canst not quit nor quell. No mortal foot may scale this horrid mount, And those black waters of its topmost fount Are guarded by the hornèd snakes of hell.

26

'Its little rill is an upleaping jet Of cold Cocytus, which for ever licks Earth's base, and when with Acheron 'tis met, Its waters with that other cannot mix, Which holds the elemental air dissolved ; But with it in its ceaseless course revolved Issues unmingl'd in the lake of Styx.

27

'The souls of murderers, in guise of fish, Scream as they swim therein and wail for cold, Their times of woe determined by the wish Of them they murder'd on the earth of old : Whom each five years they see, whene'er they make Their passage to the Acherusian lake, And there release may win from pains condoled.

28

'For if the pitying ear of them they slew Be haply pierced by their voices spare, Then are they freed from pain; as are some few; But, for the most, again they forward fare To Tartarus obscene, and outcast thence Are hurried back into the cold intense, And with new company their torments share.

29

'Its biting lymph may not be touch'd of man Or god, unless the Fates have so ordain'd; Nor coud I in thy favour break the ban, Nor pass the dragons that thereby are chain'd, Didst thou not bear the sacred cup of Zeus; Which, for thy peril lent, shall turn to use, And truly do the service which it feign'd.'

30

Thus as he spake, his talons made he ring Around the crystal bowl, and soaring high Descended as from heaven upon the spring : Nor dared the hornèd snakes of hell deny The minister of Zeus, that bore his cup, To fill it with their trusted water up, Thence to the King of heaven therewith to fly.

( 168 )

December

31

But he to Psyche bent his gracious speed, And bidding her to mount his feather'd back Bore her aloft as once young Ganymede; Nor ever made his steady flight to slack, Ere that he set her down beside her goal, And gave into her hands the crystal bowl Unspill'd, o'erbrimming with the water black.

JANUARY

I

BUT Eros now recover'd from his hurt, Felt other pangs; for who would not relent Weighing the small crime and unmatch'd desert Of Psyche with her cruel punishment? And shamed he grew to be so near allied To her, who by her taunts awoke his pride, As his compassion by her spite unspent.

2

Which Aphrodite seeing, wax'd more firm That he should never meet with Psyche more; And had in thought already set the term To their communion with that trial sore, Which sent her forth upon a quest accurst, And not to be accomplisht, that of thirst She there might perish on hell's torrid shore.

And now it chanced that she had called her son Into her presence-chamber, to unfold Psyche's destruction, that her fate might stun What love remained by duty uncontrol'd; And he to hide his tears' rebellious storm Was fled; when in his place another form Rose 'neath the golden lintel; and behold

Psyche herself, in slow and balanced strain, Poising the crystal bowl with fearful heed, Her eyes at watch upon the steadied plane, And whole soul gather'd in the single deed. Onward she came, and stooping to the floor Set down the cup unspill'd and brimming o'er At Aphrodite's feet, and rose up freed.

Surprise o'ercame the goddess, and she too Stood like a statue, but with passion pale : Till, when her victim nothing spake, she threw Some kindness in her voice, and bade her hail ; But in the smiling judge 'twas plain to see— Saying 'What water bringst thou here to me?'— That justice over hate should not prevail.

Then Psyche said 'This is the biting flood Of black Cocytus, silver'd with the gleam Of souls, that guilty of another's blood Are pent therein, and as they swim they scream. The horned snakes of hell, upon the mount Enchain'd, for ever guard the livid fount : And but the Fates can grant to touch the stream.'

( 170 )

'Wherefore,' the goddess cried, ''tis plain that none But one I wot of coud this thing have wrought. That which another doth may well be done, Nor thou the nearer to my promise brought. Thou buildest on a hope to be destroy'd, If thou accept conditions, and avoid Thy parcel, nor thyself accomplish aught.

8

'Was it not kindness in me, being averse To all thy wish, to yield me thus to grant Thy heart's desire,-and nothing loathe I worse,-If thou wouldst only work as well as want? See, now I will not yet be all denial, But offer thee one last determining trial ; And let it be a mutual covenant :

9

'This box,' and in her hands she took a pyx Square-cut, of dark obsidian's rarest green, 'Take; and therewith beyond Tartarean Styx Go thou, and entering Hades' house obscene, Say to Persephone. If 'tis thy will To shew me so much favour, prithee fill This little vase with beauty for Love's queen.

τo

' She begs but what shall well o'erlast a day ; For of her own was much of late outspent In nursing of her son, in bed who lay Wounded by me, who for the gift am sent. Then bring me what she gives, and with all speed; For truth to say I stand, thou seest, in need Of some such charm in my disparagement.

(171)

II

'If thou return to me with that acquist, Having thyself the journey made, I swear That day to give thee whatsoe'er thou list, An be it my son. Now, Psyche, wilt thou dare?' And Psyche said 'If this thou truly mean, I will go down to Tartarus obscene, And beg of Hades' queen thy beauty there.

12

'Show me the way.' But Aphrodite said, 'That may'st thou find. Yet I will place thee whence A way there is : mortals have on it sped ; Ay, and return'd thereby : so let us hence.' Then swift to earth her willing prey she bore, And left her on the wide Laconian shore, Alone, at midnight, in the darkness dense.

13

'Twas winter ; and as shivering Psyche sat Waiting for morn, she question'd in her mind What place the goddess meant, arrived whereat She might descend to hell, or how should find The way which Gods to living men deny. 'No Orpheus, nay, nor Hercules am I,' Said she, 'to loosen where the great Gods bind.'

14

And when at length the long-delaying dawn Broke on the peaks of huge Taÿgetus, And Psyche through the skirts of dark withdrawn Look'd on that promontory mountainous, And saw high-crested Taleton in snow, Her heart sank, and she wept with head bent low The malice of her foe dispiteous.

15

And seeing near at hand an ancient tower, Deserted now, but once a hold of men, She came thereto, and, though 'twas all her power, Mounted its steep unbroken stair again. ' Surely,' she said, for now a second time She thought to die—' this little height I climb Will prove my shortest road to Pluto's den.

16

'Hence must I come to Tartarus; once there Turn as I may,' and straight to death had sprung; When in the mossy tower the imprison'd air Was shaken, and the hoary stones gave tongue, 'Stand firm! Stand firm!' that rugged voice outcried; 'Of such as choose despondency for guide Hast thou not heard what bitterest fate is sung?

17

'Hearken; for I the road and means can teach How thou may'st come to hell and yet escape. And first must thou, that upper gate to reach, Along these seagirt hills thy journey shape, To where the land in sea dips furthest South At Tænarus and Hades' earthly mouth, Hard by Poseidon's temple at the cape.

18

'Thereby may one descend: but they that make That passage down must go provided well. So take in either hand a honey-cake Of pearlèd barley mix'd with hydromel; And in thy mouth two doits, first having bound The pyx beneath thy robe enwrap'd around: Thus set thou forth; and mark what more I tell.

19

"When thou hast gone alone some half thy road Thou wilt o'ertake a lame outwearied ass; And one that beats him, tottering 'neath his load Of loosely bundl'd wood, will cry Alas; Help me, kind friend, my faggots to adjust ! But thou that silly cripple's words mistrust; 'Tis planted for thy death. Note it and pass.

20

'And when thy road the Stygian river joins, Where woolly Charon ferries o'er the dead, He will demand his fare : one of thy coins Force with thy tongue between thy teeth, thy head Offering instead of hand to give the doit. His fingers in this custom are adroit, And thine must not set down the barleybread.

2 I

Then in his crazy bark as, ferrying o'er The stream, thou sittest, one that seems to float Rather than swim, midway 'twixt shore and shore, Will stretch his fleshless hand upon the boat, And beg thee of thy pity take him in. Shut thy soft ear unto his clamour thin, Nor for a phantom deed thyself devote.

22

"Next, on the further bank when thou art stept, Three wizen'd women weaving at the woof Will stop, and pray thee in their art adept To free their tangl'd threads. Hold thou aloof; For this and other traps thy foe hath plan'd To make thee drop the cakes out of thy hand, Putting thy prudence to perpetual proof.

23

• For by one cake thou comest into Hell, And by one cake departest ; since the hound That guards the gate is ever pleased well To taste man's meal, or sweeten'd grain unground. Cast him a cake ; for that thou may'st go free Even to the mansion of Persephone, Withouten stay or peril, safe and sound.

24

'She will receive thee kindly; thou decline Her courtesies, and make the floor thy seat; Refusing what is offer'd, food or wine; Save only beg a crust of bread to eat. Then tell thy mission, and her present take; Which when thou hast, set forth with pyx and cake, One in each hand, while yet thou may'st retreat.

25

'Giving thy second cake to Cerberus, The coin to Charon, and that way whereby Thou camest following, thou comest thus To see again the starry choir on high. But guard thou well the pyx, nor once uplift The lid to look on Persephassa's gift; Else 'tis in vain I bid thee now not die.'

26

Then Psyche thank'd the tower, and stoopt her mouth

To kiss the stones upon his rampart hoary; And coming down his stair went hasting south, Along the steep Tænarian promontory; And found the cave and temple by the cape, And took the cakes and coins, and made escape Beneath the earth, according to his story.

27

And overtook the ass, but lent no aid; And offer'd Charon with her teeth his fee; And pass'd the floating ghost, in vain who pray'd; And turned her back upon the weavers three; And threw the honey-cake to that hell-hound Three-headed Cerberus; and safe and sound, Came to the mansion of Persephonè.

28

Kindly received, she courtesy declined : Sat on the ground ; ate not, save where she lay, A crust of bread ; reveal'd the goddess' mind ; The gift took ; and return'd upon her way : Gave Cerberus his cake, Charon his fare, And saw through Hell's mouth to the purple air And one by one the keen stars melt in day.

29

Awhile from so long journeying in the shades Resting at Tænarus she came to know How, up the eastern coast some forty stades, There stood a temple of her goddess foe. There would she make her offering, there reclaim The prize, which now 'twas happiness to name, The joy that should redeem all passèd woe.

30

And wending by the sunny shore at noon, She with her pyx, and wondering what it hid, Of what kind, what the fashion of the boon Coud be, that she to look on was forbid,— Alas for Innocence so hard to teach !— At fancy's prick she sat her on the beach, And to content desire lifted the lid.

31

She saw within nothing: But o'er her sight That looked on nothing gan a darkness creep. A cloudy poison, mix'd of Stygian night, Rapt her to deadly and infernal sleep. Backward she fell, like one when all is o'er, And lay outstretch'd, as lies upon the shore A drown'd corpse cast up by the murmuring deep.

FEBRUARY

Ι

WHILE Eros in his chamber hid his tears, Mourning the loss of Psyche and her fate, The rumour of her safety reacht his ears And how she came to Aphrodite's gate : Whereat with hope return'd his hardihood, And secretly he purposed while he coud Himself to save her from the goddess' hate.

Then learning what he might and guessing more, His ready wit came soon to understand The journey to the far Laconian shore ; Whither to fly and seek his love he plan'd : And making good escape in dark of night, Ere the sun crost his true meridian flight He by Teuthronè struck the southern strand.

There as it chanct he found that snowy bird Of Crete, that late made mischief with his queen, And now along the cliffs with wings unstir'd Sail'd, and that morn had cross'd the sea between : Whom as he past he hail'd, and question'd thus, 'O snowy gull, if thou from Tænarus Be come, say, hast thou there my Psyche seen?'

The gull replied 'Thy Psyche have I seen ; Walking beside the sea she joy'th to bear A pyx of dark obsidian's rarest green, Wherein she gazeth on her features fair. She is not hence by now six miles at most.' Then Eros bade him speed, and down the coast Held on his passage through the buoyant air.

With eager eye he search'd the salty marge, Boding all mischief from his mother's glee ; And wondering of her wiles, and what the charge Shut in the dark obsidian pyx might be. And lo ! at last, outstretch'd beside the rocks, Psyche as lifeless ; and the open box Laid with the weedy refuse of the sea.

He guess'd all, flew down, and beside her knelt, With both his hands stroking her temples wan; And for the poison with his fingers felt, And drew it gently from her; and anon She slowly from those Stygian fumes was freed; Which he with magic handling and good heed Replaced in pyx, and shut the lid thereon.

7

<sup>6</sup>O Psyche,' thus, and kissing her he cried, <sup>6</sup>O simple-hearted Psyche, once again Hast thou thy foolish longing gratified, A second time hath prying been thy bane. But lo ! I, love, am come, for I am thine : Nor ever more shall any fate malign, Or spite of goddess smite our love in twain.

8

'Let now that I have saved thee twice outweigh The once that I deserted thee: and thou Hast much obey'd for once to disobey, And wilt no more my bidding disallow. Take up thy pyx; to Aphrodite go, And claim the promise of thy mighty foe; Maybe that she will grant it to thee now.

'If she should yet refuse, despair not yet !' Then Psyche, when she felt his arms restore Their old embrace, and as their bodies met, Knew the great joy that grief is pardon'd for; And how it doth first ecstasy excel, When love well-known, long-lost, and mourned well In long days of no hope, comes home once more.

10

But Eros leaping up with purpose keen Into the air, as only love can fly, Bore her to heaven, and setting her unseen At Aphrodite's golden gate,—whereby They came as night was close on twilight dim,— There left, and bidding her say nought of him Went onward to the house of Zeus most high.

11

Where winning audience of the heavenly sire, Who well disposed to him was used to be, He told the story of his strong desire; And boldly begg'd that Zeus would grant his plea That he might have sweet Psyche for his wife, And she be dower'd with immortal life, Since she was worthy, by his firm decree.

12

And great Zeus smiled ; and at the smile of Zeus All heaven was glad, and on the earth below Was calm and peace awhile and sorrow's truce : The sun shone forth and smote the winter snow, The flowërs sprang, the birds gan sing and pair, And mortals, as they drew the brighten'd air, Marvel'd, and quite forgot their common woe.

13

Yet gave the Thunderer not his full consent Without some words : 'At length is come the day,' Thus spake he, 'when for all thy youth misspent, Thy mischief-making and thy wanton play Thou art upgrown to taste the sweet and sour : Good shall it work upon thee : from this hour Look we for better things. And this I say,

14

'That since thy birth, which all we took for bliss, Thou hast but mock'd us; and no less on me Hast brought disfavour and contempt, ywiss, Than others that have had to do with thee : Till only such as vow'd themselves aloof From thee and thine were held in good approof; And few there were, who thus of shame went free.

( 180 )

15

'That punishment is shapen as reward Is like thy fortune: but our good estate We honour, while we sit to be adored : And thus 'twas written in the book of Fate. Not for thy pleasure, but the general weal Grant I the grace for which thou here dost kneel; And that which I determine shall not wait.'

16

So wingèd Hermes through the heaven he sped, To warn the high celestials to his hall, Where they should Psyche see with Eros wed, And keep the day with feast ambrosial. And Hermes, flying through the skiey ways Of high Olympus, spread sweet Psyche's praise, And bade the mighty gods obey his call.

17

Then all the Kronian gods and goddesses Assembl'd at his cry,—and now 'twas known Why Zeus had smiled,—the lesser majesties Attending them before his royal throne. Athena, mistress good of them that know, Came, and Apollo, warder off of woe, Who had to Psyche's sire her fate foreshown;

18

Demeter, giver of the golden corn, Fair Hebe, honour'd at her Attic shrine, And Artemis with hunting spear and horn, And Dionysos, planter of the vine, With old Poseidon from the barren sea, And Leto, and the lame Hephæstos, he Himself who built those halls with skill divine.

And ruddy Pan with many a quip and quirk Air'd 'mong those lofty gods his mirth illbred, Bearing a mighty bowl of cretan work : Stern Arês, with his crisp hair helmeted, Came, and retirèd Hestia, and the god Hermes, with wingèd cap and ribbon'd rod, By whom the company was heralded.

20

And Hera sat by Zeus, and all around The Muses, that of learning make their choice ; Who, when Apollo struck his strings to sound, Sang in alternate music with sweet voice : And righteous Themis, and the Graces three Ushering the anger'd Aphrodite ; she Alone of all were there might not rejoice

2 I

But ere they sat to feast, Zeus bade them fill The cup ambrosial of immortal life, And said 'If Psyche drink,—and 'tis my will,— There is an end of this unhappy strife. Nor can the goddess, whose mislike had birth From too great honour paid the bride on earth, Forbid her any more for Eros' wife.'

22

Then Aphrodite said 'So let it be.' And Psyche was brought in, with such a flush Of joy upon her face, as there to see Was fairer to love's eye than beauty's blush. And then she drank the eternal wine, whose draught Can Terror cease : which flesh hath never quafft, Nor doth it flow from grape that mortals crush.

23

And next stood Eros forth, and took her hand, And kisst her happy face before them all : And Zeus proclaim'd them married, and outban'd From heaven whoever should that word miscall. And then all sat to feast, and one by one Pledged Psyche ere they drank and cried Well done ! And merry laughter rang throughout the hall.

24

So thus was Eros unto Psyche wed, The heavenly bridegroom to his earthly bride, Who won his love, in simple maidenhead : And by her love herself she glorified, And him from wanton wildness disinclined ; Since in his love for her he came to find A joy unknown through all Olympus wide.

25

And Psyche for her fall was quite forgiven, Since 'gainst herself when tempted to rebel, By others' malice on her ruin driven, Only of sweet simplicity she fell:— Wherein who fall may fall unto the skies ;— And being foolish she was yet most wise, And took her trials patiently and well.

26

And Aphrodite since her full defeat Is kinder and less jealous than before, And smiling on them both, calls Psyche sweet; But thinks her son less manly than of yore: Though still she holds his arm of some renown, When he goes smiting mortals up and down, Piercing their marrow with his weapons sore.

27

So now in steadfast love and happy state They hold for aye their mansion in the sky, And send down heavenly peace on those who mate, In virgin love, to find their joy thereby : Whom gently Eros shooteth, and apart Keepeth for them from all his sheaf that dart Which Psyche in his chamber pickt to try.

28

Now in that same month Psyche bare a child, Who straight in heaven was named Hedone In mortal tongues by other letters styled; Whom all to love, however named, agree: Whom in our noble English JOY we call, And honour them among us most of all, Whose happy children are as fair as she.

THE GROWTH OF LOVE

I

THEY that in play can do the thing they would, Having an instinct throned in reason's place, —And every perfect action hath the grace Of indolence or thoughtless hardihood— These are the best : yet be there workmen good Who lose in earnestness control of face, Or reckon means, and rapt in effort base Reach to their end by steps well understood.

For thou art mine: and now I am ashamed To have used means to win so pure acquist, And of my trembling fear that might have misst Thro' very care the gold at which I aim'd; And am as happy but to hear thee named, As are those gentle souls by angels kisst In pictures seen leaving their marble cist To go before the throne of grace unblamed.

Nor surer am I water hath the skill To quench my thirst, or that my strength is freed In delicate ordination as I will, Than that to be myself is all I need For thee to be most mine : so I stand still, And save to taste my joy no more take heed.

THE whole world now is but the minister Of thee to me: I see no other scheme But universal love, from timeless dream Waking to thee his joy's interpreter. I walk around and in the fields confer Of love at large with tree and flower and stream, And list the lark descant upon my theme, Heaven's musical accepted worshipper.

Thy smile outfaceth ill: and that old feud 'Twixt things and me is quash'd in our new truce; And nature now dearly with thee endued No more in shame ponders her old excuse, But quite forgets her frowns and antics rude, So kindly hath she grown to her new use.

THE very names of things belov'd are dear, And sounds will gather beauty from their sense, As many a face thro' love's long residence Groweth to fair instead of plain and sere : But when I say thy name it hath no peer, And I suppose fortune determined thence Her dower, that such beauty's excellence Should have a perfect title for the ear.

Thus may I think the adopting Muses chose Their sons by name, knowing none would be heard Or writ so oft in all the world as those,— Dan Chaucer, mighty Shakespeare, then for third The classic Milton, and to us arose Shelley with liquid music in the word.

THE poets were good teachers, for they taught Earth had this joy; but that 'twould ever be That fortune should be perfected in me, My heart of hope dared not engage the thought. So I stood low, and now but to be caught By any self-styled lords of the age with thee Vexes my modesty, lest they should see I hold them owls and peacocks, things of nought.

And when we sit alone, and as I please I taste thy love's full smile, and can enstate The pleasure of my kingly heart at ease, My thought swims like a ship, that with the weight Of her rich burden sleeps on the infinite seas Becalm'd, and cannot stir her golden freight.

WHILE yet we wait for spring, and from the dry And blackening east that so embitters March, Well-housed must watch grey fields and meadows parch, And driven dust and withering snowflake fly; Already in glimpses of the tarnish'd sky The sun is warm and beckons to the larch, And where the covert hazels interarch Their tassell'd twigs, fair beds of primrose lie.

Beneath the crisp and wintry carpet hid A million buds but stay their blossoming; And trustful birds have built their nests amid The shuddering boughs, and only wait to sing Till one soft shower from the south shall bid, And hither tempt the pilgrim steps of spring.

7

In thee my spring of life hath bid the while A rose unfold beyond the summer's best, The mystery of joy made manifest In love's self-answering and awakening smile; Whereby the lips in wonder reconcile Passion with peace, and show desire at rest,— A grace of silence by the Greek unguesst, That bloom'd to immortalize the Tuscan style:

When first the angel-song that faith hath ken'd Fancy pourtray'd, above recorded oath Of Israel's God, or light of poem pen'd; The very countenance of plighted troth 'Twixt heaven and earth, where in one moment blend The hope of one and happiness of both.

8

For beauty being the best of all we know Sums up the unsearchable and secret aims Of nature, and on joys whose earthly names Were never told can form and sense bestow; And man hath sped his instinct to outgo The step of science; and against her shames Imagination stakes out heavenly claims, Building a tower above the head of woe.

Nor is there fairer work for beauty found Than that she win in nature her release From all the woes that in the world abound : Nay with his sorrow may his love increase, If from man's greater need beauty redound, And claim his tears for homage of his peace.

9

THUS to thy beauty doth my fond heart look, That late dismay'd her faithless faith forbore; And wins again her love lost in the lore Of schools and script of many a learned book : For thou what ruthless death untimely took Shalt now in better brotherhood restore, And save my batter'd ship that far from shore High on the dismal deep in tempest shook.

So in despite of sorrow lately learn'd I still hold true to truth since thou art true, Nor wail the woe which thou to joy hast turn'd Nor come the heavenly sun and bathing blue To my life's need more splendid and unearn'd Than hath thy gift outmatch'd desire and due.

10

WINTER was not unkind because uncouth; His prison'd time made me a closer guest, And gave thy graciousness a warmer zest, Biting all else with keen and angry tooth : And bravelier the triumphant blood of youth Mantling thy cheek its happy home possest, And sterner sport by day put strength to test, And custom's feast at night gave tongue to truth.

Or say hath flaunting summer a device To match our midnight revely, that rang With steel and flame along the snow-girt ice? Or when we hark't to nightingales that sang On dewy eves in spring, did they entice To gentler love than winter's icy fang?

ΙI

THERE'S many a would-be poet at this hour, Rhymes of a love that he hath never woo'd, And o'er his lamplit desk in solitude Deems that he sitteth in the Muses' bower : And some the flames of earthly love devour, Who have taken no kiss of Nature, nor renew'd In the world's wilderness with heavenly food The sickly body of their perishing power.

So none of all our company, I boast, But now would mock my penning, coud they see How down the right it maps a jagged coast; Seeing they hold the manlier praise to be Strong hand and will, and the heart best when most 'Tis sober, simple, true, and fancy-free.

I 2

How coud I quarrel or blame you, most dear, Who all thy virtues gavest and kept back none; Kindness and gentleness, truth without peer, And beauty that my fancy fed upon?

Now not my life's contrition for my fault Can blot that day, nor work me recompence, Tho' I might worthily thy worth exalt, Making thee long amends for short offence.

For surely nowhere, love, if not in thee Are grace and truth and beauty to be found; And all my praise of these can only be  $\Lambda$  praise of thee, howe'er by thee disown'd :

While still thou must be mine tho' far removed, And I for one offence no more beloved.

13

Now since to me altho' by thee refused The world is left, I shall find pleasure still; The art that most I have loved but little used Will yield a world of fancies at my will:

And tho' where'er thou goest it is from me, I where I go thee in my heart must bear; And what thou wert that wilt thou ever be, My choice, my best, my loved, and only fair.

Farewell, yet think not such farewell a change From tenderness, tho' once to meet or part But on short absence so coud sense derange That tears have graced the greeting of my heart;

They were proud drops and had my leave to fall Not on thy pity for my pain to call.

14

WHEN sometimes in an ancient house where state From noble ancestry is handed on, We see but desolation thro' the gate, And richest heirlooms all to ruin gone;

Because maybe some fancied shame or fear, Bred of disease or melancholy fate, Hath driven the owner from his rightful sphere To wander nameless save to pity or hate :

What is the wreck of all he hath in fief, When he that hath is wrecking? nought is fine Unto the sick, nor doth it burden grief That the house perish when the soul doth pine.

Thus I my state despise, slain by a sting So slight 'twould not have hurt a meaner thing.

15

WHO builds a ship must first lay down the keel Of health, whereto the ribs of mirth are wed : And knit, with beams and knees of strength, a bed For decks of purity, her floor and ceil. Upon her masts, Adventure, Pride, and Zeal, To fortune's wind the sails of purpose spread : And at the prow make figured maidenhead O'erride the seas and answer to the wheel.

And let him deep in memory's hold have stor'd Water of Helicon : and let him fit The needle that doth true with heaven accord : Then bid her crew, love, diligence and wit With justice, courage, temperance come aboard, And at her helm the master reason sit.

16

THIS world is unto God a work of art, Of which the unaccomplish'd heavenly plan Is hid in life within the creature's heart, And for perfection looketh unto man.

Ah me! those thousand ages: with what slow Pains and persistence were his idols made, Destroy'd and made, ere ever he coud know The mighty mother must be so obey'd.

For lack of knowledge and thro' little skill His childish mimicry outwent his aim; His effort shaped the genius of his will; Till thro' distinction and revolt he came, True to his simple terms of good and ill, Seeking the face of Beauty without blame.

17

SAY who be these light-bearded, sunburnt faces In negligent and travel-stain'd array, That in the city of Dante come to-day, Haughtily visiting her holy places? O these be noble men that hide their graces, True England's blood, her ancient glory's stay, By tales of fame diverted on their way Home from the rule of oriental races.

Life-trifling lions these, of gentle eyes And motion delicate, but swift to fire For honour, passionate where duty lies, Most loved and loving: and they quickly tire Of Florence, that she one day more denies The embrace of wife and son, of sister or sire.

18

WHERE San Miniato's convent from the sun At forenoon overlooks the city of flowers I sat, and gazing on her domes and towers Call'd up her famous children one by one: And three who all the rest had far outdone, Mild Giotto first, who stole the morning hours, I saw, and god-like Buonarroti's powers, And Dante, gravest poet, her much-wrong'd son.

Is all this glory, I said, another's praise? Are these heroic triumphs things of old, And do I dead upon the living gaze? Or rather doth the mind, that can behold The wondrous beauty of the works and days, Create the image that her thoughts enfold?

19

REJOICE, ye dead, where'er your spirits dwell, Rejoice that yet on earth your fame is bright; And that your names, remember'd day and night, Live on the lips of those that love you well. 'Tis ye that conquer'd have the powers of hell, Each with the special grace of your delight: Ye are the world's creators, and thro' might Of everlasting love ye did excel.

Now ye are starry names, above the storm And war of Time and nature's endless wrong Ye flit, in pictured truth and peaceful form, Wing'd with bright music and melodious song,----

The flaming flowers of heaven, making May-dance In dear Imagination's rich pleasance.

20

THE world still goeth about to shew and hide, Befool'd of all opinion, fond of fame : But he that can do well taketh no pride, And see'th his error, undisturb'd by shame :

So poor's the best that longest life can do, The most so little, diligently done; So mighty is the beauty that doth woo, So vast the joy that love from love hath won.

God's love to win is easy, for He loveth Desire's fair attitude, nor strictly weighs The broken thing, but all alike approveth Which love hath aim'd at Him : that is heaven's praise

And if we look for any praise on earth, 'Tis in man's love : all else is nothing worth.

2 I

O FLESH and blood, comrade to tragic pain And clownish merriment; whose sense could wake Sermons in stones, and count death but an ache, All things as vanity, yet nothing vain: The world, set in thy heart, thy passionate strain Reveal'd anew; but thou for man didst make Nature twice natural, only to shake Her kingdom with the creatures of thy brain.

Lo, Shakespeare, since thy time nature is loth To yield to art her fair supremacy; In conquering one thou hast so enriched both. What shall I say? for God—whose wise decree Confirmeth all He did by all He doth— Doubled His whole creation making thee.

I would be a bird, and straight on wings I arise, And carry purpose up to the ends of the air : In calm and storm my sails I feather, and where By freezing cliffs the unransom'd wreckage lies : Or, strutting on hot meridian banks, surprise · The silence : over plains in the moonlight bare I chase my shadow, and perch where no bird dare In treetops torn by fiercest winds of the skies.

Poor simple birds, foolish birds! then I cry, Ye pretty pictures of delight, unstir'd By the only joy of knowing that ye fly; Ye are nót what ye are, but rather, sum'd in a word, The alphabet of a god's idea, and I Who master it, I am the only bird.

23

O WEARY pilgrims, chanting of your woe, That turn your eyes to all the peaks that shine, Hailing in each the citadel divine The which ye thought to have enter'd long ago; Until at length your feeble steps and slow Falter upon the threshold of the shrine, And your hearts overburden'd doubt in fine Whether it be Jerusalem or no:

Dishearten'd pilgrims, I am one of you; For, having worshipp'd many a barren face, I scarce now greet the goal I journey'd to: I stand a pagan in the holy place; Beneath the lamp of truth I am found untrue, And question with the God that I embrace.

SPRING hath her own bright days of calm and peace Her melting air, at every breath we draw, Floods heart with love to praise God's gracious law : But suddenly—so short is pleasure's lease— The cold returns, the buds from growing cease, And nature's conquer'd face is full of awe ; As now the trait'rous north with icy flaw Freezes the dew upon the sick lamb's fleece,

And 'neath the mock sun searching everywhere Rattles the crispèd leaves with shivering din : So that the birds are silent with despair Within the thickets; nor their armour thin Will gaudy flies adventure in the air, Nor any lizard sun his spotted skin.

25

NOTHING is joy without thee: I can find No rapture in the first relays of spring, In songs of birds, in young buds opening, Nothing inspiriting and nothing kind; For lack of thee, who once wert throned behind All beauty, like a strength where graces cling,— The jewel and heart of light, which everything Wrestled in rivalry to hold enshrined.

Ah! since thou'rt fled, and I in each fair sight The sweet occasion of my joy deplore, Where shall I seek thee best, or whom invite Within thy sacred temples and adore? Who shall fill thought and truth with old delight, And lead my soul in life as heretofore?

THE work is done, and from the fingers fall The bloodwarm tools that brought the labour thro': The tasking eye that overrunneth all Rests, and affirms there is no more to do.

Now the third joy of making, the sweet flower Of blessed work, bloometh in godlike spirit; Which whoso plucketh holdeth for an hour The shrivelling vanity of mortal merit.

And thou, my perfect work, thou'rt of to-day; To-morrow a poor and alien thing wilt be, True only should the swift life stand at stay: Therefore farewell, nor look to bide with me.

Go find thy friends, if there be one to love thee : Casting thee forth, my child, I rise above thee.

THE fabled sea-snake, old Leviathan, Or else what grisly beast of scaly chine That champ'd the ocean-wrack and swash'd the brine, Before the new and milder days of man, Had never rib nor bray nor swindging fan Like his iron swimmer of the Clyde or Tyne, Late-born of golden seed to breed a line Of offspring swifter and more huge of plan.

Straight is her going, for upon the sun When once she hath look'd, her path and place are plain; With tireless speed she smitch one by one The shuddering seas and foams along the main; And her eased breath, when her wild race is run, Roars thro' her nostrils like a hurricane.

A THOUSAND times hath in my heart's behoof My tongue been set his passion to impart; A thousand times hath my too coward heart My mouth reclosed and fix'd it to the roof; Then with such cunning hath it held aloof, A thousand times kept silence with such art That words coud do no more: yet on thy part Hath silence given a thousand times reproof.

I should be bolder, seeing I commend Love, that my dilatory purpose primes, But fear lest with my fears my hope should end: Nay, I would truth deny and burn my rhymes, Renew my sorrows rather than offend, A thousand times, and yet a thousand times.

29

I TRAVEL to thee with the sun's first rays, That lift the dark west and unwrap the night; I dwell beside thee when he walks the height, And fondly toward thee at his setting gaze. I wait upon thy coming, but always— Dancing to meet my thoughts if they invite— Thou hast outrun their longing with delight, And in my solitude dost mock my praise.

Now doth my drop of time transcend the whole I see no fame in Khufu's pyramid, No history where loveless Nile doth roll. —This is eternal life, which doth forbid Mortal detraction to the exalted soul, And from her inward eye all fate hath hid.

30

My lady pleases me and I please her; This know we both, and I besides know well Wherefore I love her, and I love to tell My love, as all my loving songs aver. But what on her part could the passion stir, Tho' 'tis more difficult for love to spell, Yet can I dare divine how this befel, Nor will her lips deny it if I err.

She loves me first because I love her, then Loves me for knowing why she should be loved, And that I love to praise her, loves again. So from her beauty both our loves are moved, And by her beauty are sustain'd; nor when The earth falls from the sun is this disproved.

31

In all things beautiful, I cannot see Her sit or stand, but love is stir'd anew: 'Tis joy to watch the folds fall as they do, And all that comes is past expectancy. If she be silent, silence let it be; He who would bid her speak might sit and sue The deep-brow'd Phidian Jove to be untrue To his two thousand years' solemnity.

Ah, but her launchèd passion, when she sings, Wins on the hearing like a shapen prow Borne by the mastery of its urgent wings : Or if she deign her wisdom, she doth show She hath the intelligence of heavenly things, Unsullied by man's mortal overthrow.

THUS to be humbled: 'tis that ranging pride No refuge hath; that in his castle strong Brave reason sits beleaguer'd, who so long Kept field, but now must starve where he doth hide; That industry, who once the foe defied, Lies slaughter'd in the trenches; that the throng Of idle fancies pipe their foolish song, Where late the puissant captains fought and died.

Thus to be humbled: 'tis to be undone; A forest fell'd; a city razed to ground; A cloak unsewn, unwoven and unspun Till not a thread remains that can be wound. And yet, O lover, thee, the ruin'd one, Love who hath humbled thus hath also crown'd.

33

I CARE not if I live, tho' life and breath Have never been to me so dear and sweet. I care not if I die, for I coud meet---Being so happy---happily my death. I care not if I love; to-day she saith She loveth, and love's history is complete. Nor care I if she love me; at her feet My spirit bows entranced and worshippeth.

I have no care for what was most my care, But all around me see fresh beauty born, And common sights grown lovelier than they were: I dream of love, and in the light of morn Tremble, beholding all things very fair And strong with strength that puts my strength to scorn (203)

34

O my goddess divine sometimes I say :---Now let this word for ever and all suffice ; Thou art insatiable, and yet not twice Can even thy lover give his soul away : And for my acts, that at thy feet I lay ; For never any other, by device Of wisdom, love or beauty, could entice My homage to the measure of this day.

I have no more to give thee: lo, I have sold My life, have emptied out my heart, and spent Whate'er I had; till like a beggar, bold With nought to lose, I laugh and am content. A beggar kisses thee; nay, love, behold, I fear not: thou too art in beggarment.

35

ALL earthly beauty hath one cause and proof, To lead the pilgrim soul to beauty above: Yet lieth the greater bliss so far aloof, That few there be are wean'd from earthly love.

Joy's ladder it is, reaching from home to home, The best of all the work that all was good; Whereof 'twas writ the angels aye upclomb, Down sped, and at the top the Lord God stood.

But I my time abuse, my eyes by day Center'd on thee, by night my heart on fire— Letting my number'd moments run away— Nor e'en 'twixt night and day to heaven aspire :

So true it is that what the eye seeth not But slow is loved, and loved is soon forgot.

36

O MY life's mischief, once my love's delight, That drew'st a mortgage on my heart's estate, Whose baneful clause is never out of date, Nor can avenging time restore my right : Whom first to lose sounded that note of spite, Whereto my doleful days were tuned by fate : That art the well-loved cause of all my hate, The sun whose wandering makes my hopeless night

Thou being in all my lacking all I lack, It is thy goodness turns my grace to crime, Thy fleetness from my goal which holds me back; Wherefore my feet go out of step with time, My very grasp of life is old and slack, And even my passion falters in my rhyme.

37

At times with hurried hoofs and scattering dust I race by field or highway, and my horse Spare not, but urge direct in headlong course Unto some fair far hill that gain I must: But near arrived the vision soon mistrust, Rein in, and stand as one who sees the source Of strong illusion, shaming thought to force From off his mind the soil of passion's gust.

My brow I bare then, and with slacken'd speed Can view the country pleasant on all sides, And to kind salutation give good heed: I ride as one who for his pleasure rides, And stroke the neck of my delighted steed, And seek what cheer the village inn provides.

An idle June day on the sunny Thames, Floating or rowing as our fancy led, Now in the high beams basking as we sped, Now in green shade gliding by mirror'd stems;

By lock and weir and isle, and many a spot Of memoried pleasure, glad with strength and skill, Friendship, good wine, and mirth, that serve not ill The heavenly Muse, tho' she requite them not :

I would have life—thou saidst—all as this day, Simple enjoyment calm in its excess, With not a grief to cloud, and not a ray Of passion overhot my peace to oppress; With no ambition to reproach delay, Nor rapture to disturb its happiness.

A MAN that sees by chance his picture, made As once a child he was, handling some toy, Will gaze to find his spirit within the boy, Yet hath no secret with the soul pourtray'd : He cannot think the simple thought which play'd Upon those features then so frank and coy ; 'Tis his, yet oh ! not his : and o'er the joy His fatherly pity bends in tears dismay'd.

Proud of his prime maybe he stand at best, And lightly wear his strength, or aim it high, In knowledge, skill and courage self-possest :— Yet in the pictured face a charm doth lie, The one thing lost more worth than all the rest, Which seeing, he fears to say This child was I.

40

TEARS of love, tears of joy and tears of care, Comforting tears that fell uncomforted, Tears o'er the new-born, tears beside the dead, Tears of hope, pride and pity, trust and prayer, Tears of contrition; all tears whatsoe'er Of tenderness or kindness had she shed Who here is pictured, ere upon her head The fine gold might be turn'd to silver there.

The smile that charm'd the father hath given place Unto the furrow'd care wrought by the son; But virtue hath transform'd all change to grace: So that I praise the artist, who hath done  $\Lambda$  portrait, for my worship, of the face Won by the heart my father's heart that won.

4 I

IF I coud but forget and not recall So well my time of pleasure and of play, When ancient nature was all new and gay, Light as the fashion that doth last enthrall,— Ah mighty nature, when my heart was small, Nor dream'd what fearful searchings underlay The flowers and leafy ecstasy of May, The breathing summer sloth, the scented fall :

Coud I forget, then were the fight not hard, Press'd in the mêlée of accursed things, Having such help in love and such reward : But that 'tis I who once—'tis this that stings— Once dwelt within the gate that angels guard, Where yet I'd be had I but heavenly wings.

42

WHEN I see childhood on the threshold seize The prize of life from age and likelihood, I mourn time's change that will not be withstood, Thinking how Christ said Be like one of these. For in the forest among many trees Scarce one in all is found that hath made good The virgin pattern of its slender wood, That courtesied in joy to every breeze;

But scath'd, but knotted trunks that raise on high Their arms in stiff contortion, strain'd and bare; Whose patriarchal crowns in sorrow sigh. So, little children, ye—nay nay, ye ne'er From me shall learn how sure the change and nigh, When ye shall share our strength and mourn to share

43

WHEN parch'd with thirst, astray on sultry sand The traveller faints, upon his closing ear Steals a fantastic music: he may hear The babbling fountain of his native land. Before his eyes the vision seems to stand, Where at its terraced brink the maids appear, Who fill their deep urns at its waters clear, And not refuse the help of lover's hand.

O cruel jest—he cries, as some one flings The sparkling drops in sport or shew of ire— O shameless, O contempt of holy things. But never of their wanton play they tire, As not athirst they sit beside the springs, While he must quench in death his lost desire.

44

THE image of thy love, rising on dark And desperate days over my sullen sea, Wakens again fresh hope and peace in me, Gleaming above upon my groaning bark. Whate'er my sorrow be, I then may hark A loving voice : whate'er my terror be, This heavenly comfort still I win from thee, To shine my lodestar that wert once my mark.

Prodigal nature makes us but to taste One perfect joy, which given she niggard grows; And lest her precious gift should run to waste, Adds to its loss a thousand lesser woes: So to the memory of the gift that graced Her hand, her graceless hand more grace bestows

45

In this neglected, ruin'd edifice Of works unperfected and broken schemes, Where is the promise of my early dreams, The smile of beauty and the pearl of price? No charm is left now that could once entice Wind-wavering fortune from her golden streams, And full in flight decrepit purpose seems, Trailing the banner of his old device.

Within the house a frore and numbing air Has chill'd endeavour : sickly memories reign In every room, and ghosts are on the stair : And hope behind the dusty window-pane Watches the days go by, and bow'd with care Forecasts her last reproach and mortal stain.

46

ONCE I would say, before thy vision came, My joy, my life, my love, and with some kind Of knowledge speak, and think I knew my mind Of heaven and hope, and each word hit its aim. Whate'er their sounds be, now all mean the same, Denoting each the fair that none can find; Or if I say them, 'tis as one long blind Forgets the sights that he was used to name.

Now if men speak of love, 'tis not my love; Nor are their hopes nor joys mine, nor their life Of praise the life that I think honour of: Nay tho' they turn from house and child and wife And self, and in the thought of heaven above Hold, as do I, all mortal things at strife.

47

SINCE then 'tis only pity looking back, Fear looking forward, and the busy mind Will in one woeful moment more upwind Than lifelong years unroll of bitter or black; What is man's privilege, his hoarding knack Of memory with foreboding so combined, Whereby he comes to dream he hath of kind The perpetuity which all things lack?

Which but to hope is doubtful joy, to have Being a continuance of what, alas, We mourn, and scarcely bear with to the grave; Or something so unknown that it o'erpass The thought of comfort, and the sense that gave Cannot consider it thro' any glass.

48

COME gentle sleep, I woo thee : come and take Not now the child into thine arms, from fright Composed by drowsy tune and shaded light, Whom ignorant of thee thou didst nurse and make Nor now the boy, who scorn'd thee for the sake Of growing knowledge or mysterious night, Tho' with fatigue thou didst his limbs invite, And heavily weigh the eyes that would not wake;

No, nor the man severe, who from his best Failing, alert fled to thee, that his breath, Blood, force and fire should come at morn redrest But me, from whom thy comfort tarrieth, For all my wakeful prayer sent without rest To thee, O shew and shadow of my death.

49

THE spirit's eager sense for sad or gay Filleth with what he will our vessel full: Be joy his bent, he waiteth not joy's day But like a child at any toy will pull:

If sorrow, he will weep for fancy's sake, And spoil heaven's plenty with forbidden care. What fortune most denies we slave to take; Nor can fate load us more than we can bear.

Since pleasure with the having disappeareth, He who hath least in hand hath most at heart, While he keep hope: as he who alway feareth A grief that never comes hath yet the smart;

And heavier far is our self-wrought distress, For when God sendeth sorrow, it doth bless.

50

THE world comes not to an end: her city-hives Swarm with the tokens of a changeless trade, With rolling wheel, driver and flagging jade, Rich men and beggars, children, priests and wives. New homes on old are set, as lives on lives; Invention with invention overlaid: But still or tool or toy or book or blade Shaped for the hand, that holds and toils and strives.

The men to-day toil as their fathers taught, With little better'd means; for works depend On works and overlap, and thought on thought: And thro' all change the smiles of hope amend The weariest face, the same love changed in nought: In this thing too the world comes not to an end.

51

O MY uncared-for songs, what are ye worth, That in my secret book with so much care I write you, this one here and that one there, Marking the time and order of your birth? How, with a fancy so unkind to mirth, A sense so hard, a style so worn and bare, Look ye for any welcome anywhere From any shelf or heart-home on the earth?

Should others ask you this, say then I yearn'd To write you such as once, when I was young, Finding I should have loved and thereto turn'd. 'Twere something yet to live again among The gentle youth beloved, and where I learn'd My art, be there remember'd for my song.

52

WHO takes the census of the living dead, Ere the day come when memory shall o'ercrowd The kingdom of their fame, and for that proud And airy people find no room nor stead?

Ere hoarding Time, that ever thrusteth back The fairest treasures of his ancient store, Better with best confound, so he may pack His greedy gatherings closer, more and more?

Let the true Muse rewrite her sullied page, And purge her story of the men of hate, That they go dirgeless down to Satan's rage With all else foul, deform'd and miscreate :

She hath full toil to keep the names of love Honour'd on earth, as they are bright above.

53

I HEARD great Hector sounding war's alarms, Where thro' the listless ghosts chiding he strode, . As tho' the Greeks besieged his last abode, And he his Troy's hope still, her king-at-arms. But on those gentle meads, which Lethe charms With weary oblivion, his passion glow'd Like the cold night-worm's candle, and only show'd -Such mimic flame as neither heats nor harms.

'Twas plain to read, even by those shadows quaint How rude catastrophe had dim'd his day, And blighted all his cheer with stern complaint: To arms l to arms l what more the voice would say Was swallow'd in the valleys, and grew faint Upon the thin air, as he pass'd away.

54

SINCE not the enamour'd sun with glance more fond Kisses the foliage of his sacred tree, Than doth my waking thought arise on thee, Loving none near thee, like thee nor beyond; Nay, since I am sworn thy slave, and in the bond Is writ my promise of eternity; Since to such high hope thou'st encouraged me, That if thou look but from me I despond;

Since thou'rt my all in all, O think of this: Think of the dedication of my youth: Think of my loyalty, my joy, my bliss: Think of my sorrow, my despair and ruth, My sheer annihilation if I miss: Think—if thou shouldst be false—think of thy truth.

55

THESE meagre rhymes, which a returning mood Sometimes o'errateth, I as oft despise; And knowing them illnatured, stiff and rude, See them as others with contemptuous eyes.

Nay, and I wonder less at God's respect For man, a minim jot in time and space, Than at the soaring faith of His elect, That gift of gifts, the comfort of His grace.

O truth unsearchable, O heavenly love, Most infinitely tender, so to touch The work that we can meanly reckon of : Surely—I say—we are favour'd overmuch.

But of this wonder, what doth most amaze Is that we know our love is held for praise.

56

BEAUTY sat with me all the summer day, Awaiting the sure triumph of her eye; Nor mark'd I till we parted, how, hard by, Love in her train stood ready for his prey. She, as too proud to join herself the fray, Trusting too much to her divine ally, When she saw victory tarry, chid him—'Why Dost thou not at one stroke this rebel slay?'

Then generous Love, who holds my heart in fee, Told of our ancient truce: so from the fight We straight withdrew our forces, all the three. Baffled but not dishearten'd she took flight Scheming new tactics: Love came home with me, And prompts my measured verses as I write.

57

In autumn moonlight, when the white air wan Is fragrant in the wake of summer hence, 'Tis sweet to sit entranced, and muse thereon In melancholy and godlike indolence :

When the proud spirit, lull'd by mortal prime To fond pretence of immortality, Vieweth all moments from the birth of time, All things whate'er have been or yet shall be.

And like the garden, where the year is spent, The ruin of old life is full of yearning, Mingling poetic rapture of lament With flowers and sunshine of spring's sure returning;

Only in visions of the white air wan By godlike fancy seized and dwelt upon.

58

WHEN first I saw thee, dearest, if I say The spells that conjure back the hour and place, And evermore I look upon thy face, As in the spring of years long pass'd away; No fading of thy beauty's rich array, No detriment of age on thee I trace, But time's defeat written in spoils of grace, From rivals robb'd, whom thou didst pity and slay.

So hath thy growth been, thus thy faith is true, Unchanged in change, still to my growing sense, To life's desire the same, and nothing new : But as thou wert in dream and prescience At love's arising, now thou stand'st to view In the broad noon of his magnificence.

59

'Twas on the very day winter took leave Of those fair fields I love, when to the skies The fragrant Earth was smiling in surprise At that her heaven-descended, quick reprieve, I wander'd forth my sorrow to relieve ; Yet walk'd amid sweet pleasure in such wise As Adam went alone in Paradise, Before God of His pity fashion'd Eve.

And out of tune with all the joy around I laid me down beneath a flowering tree, And o'er my senses crept a sleep profound; In which it seem'd that thou wert given to me, Rending my body, where with hurried sound I feel my heart beat, when I think of thee.

60

Love that I know, love I am wise in, love, My strength, my pride, my grace, my skill untaught, My faith here upon earth, my hope above, My contemplation and perpetual thought:

The pleasure of my fancy, my heart's fire, My joy, my peace, my praise, my happy theme, The aim of all my doing, my desire Of being, my life by day, by night my dream :

Love, my sweet melancholy, my distress, My pain, my doubt, my trouble, my despair, My only folly and unhappiness, And in my careless moments still my care :

O love, sweet love, earthly love, love divine, Say'st thou to-day, O love, that thou art mine?

61

THE dark and serious angel, who so long Vex'd his immortal strength in charge of me, Hath smiled for joy and fled in liberty To take his pastime with the peerless throng. Oft had I done his noble keeping wrong, Wounding his heart to wonder what might be God's purpose in a soul of such degree ; And there he had left me but for mandate strong.

But seeing thee with me now, his task at close He knoweth, and wherefore he was bid to stay, And work confusion of so many foes: The thanks that he doth look for, here I pay, Yet fear some heavenly envy, as he goes Unto what great reward I cannot say.

62

I wILL be what God made me, nor protest Against the bent of genius in my time, That science of my friends robs all the best, While I love beauty, and was born to rhyme.

Be they our mighty men, and let me dwell In shadow among the mighty shades of old, With love's forsaken palace for my cell; Whence I look forth and all the world behold,

And say, These better days, in best things worse, This bastardy of time's magnificence, Will mend in fashion and throw off the curse, To crown new love with higher excellence.

Curs'd tho' I be to live my life alone, My toil is for man's joy, his joy my own.

63

I LIVE on hope and that I think do all Who come into this world, and since I see Myself in swim with such good company, I take my comfort whatsoe'er befall. I abide and abide, as if more stout and tall My spirit would grow by waiting like a tree; And, clear of others' toil, it pleaseth me In dreams their quick ambition to forestall.

And if thro' careless eagerness I slide To some accomplishment, I give my voice Still to desire, and in desire abide. I have no stake abroad ; if I rejoice In what is done or doing, I confide Neither to friend nor foe my secret choice.

64

YE blessed saints, that now in heaven enjoy The purchase of those tears, the world's disdain, Doth Love still with his war your peace annoy, Or hath Death freed you from his ancient pain?

Have ye no springtide, and no burst of May In flowers and leafy trees, when solemn night Pants with love-music, and the holy day Breaks on the ear with songs of heavenly light?

What make ye and what strive for? keep ye thought Of us, or in new excellence divine Is old forgot? or do ye count for nought What the Greek did and what the Florentine?

We keep your memories well : O in your store Live not our best joys treasured evermore?

65

AH heavenly joy! But who hath ever heard, Who hath seen joy, or who shall ever find Joy's language? There is neither speech nor word; Nought but itself to teach it to mankind.

Scarce in our twenty thousand painful days We may touch something : but there lives—beyond The best of art, or nature's kindest phase— The hope whereof our spirit is fain and fond :

The cause of beauty given to man's desires Writ in the expectancy of starry skies, The faith which gloweth in our fleeting fires, The aim of all the good that here we prize;

Which but to love, pursue and pray for well Maketh earth heaven, and to forget it, hell.

66

Mv wearied heart, whenever, after all, Its loves and yearnings shall be told complete, When gentle death shall bid it cease to beat, And from all dear illusions disenthrall : However then thou shalt appear to call My fearful heart, since down at others' feet It bade me kneel so oft, I'll not retreat From thee, nor fear before thy feet to fall.

And I shall say, 'Receive this loving heart Which err'd in sorrow only; and in sin Took no delight; but being forced apart From thee, without thee hoping thee to win, Most prized what most thou madest as thou art On earth, till heaven were open to enter in.'

67

DREARV was winter, wet with changeful sting Of clinging snowfall and fast-flying frost; And bitterer northwinds then withheld the spring, That dallied with her promise till 'twas lost.

A sunless and half-hearted summer drown'd The flowers in needful and unwelcom'd rain; And Autumn with a sad smile fled uncrown'd From fruitless orchards and unripen'd grain.

But coud the skies of this most desolate year In its last month learn with our love to glow, Men yet should rank its cloudless atmosphere Above the sunsets of five years ago :

Of my great praise too part should be its own, Now reckon'd peerless for thy love alone.

68

Away now, lovely Muse, roam and be free : Our commerce ends for aye, thy task is done : Tho' to win thee I left all else unwon, Thou, whom I most have won, art not for me. My first desire, thou too forgone must be, Thou too, O much lamented now, tho' none Will turn to pity thy forsaken son, Nor thy divine sisters will weep for thee.

None will weep for thee : thou return, O Muse, To thy Sicilian fields : I once have been On thy loved hills, and where thou first didst use Thy sweetly balanced rhyme, O thankless queen, Have pluck'd and wreath'd thy flowers; but do thou choose Some happier brow to wear thy garlands green.

69

ETERNAL Father, who didst all create, In whom we live, and to whose bosom move, To all men be Thy name known, which is Love, Till its loud praises sound at heaven's high gate. Perfect Thy kingdom in our passing state, That here on earth Thou may'st as well approve Our service, as Thou ownest theirs above, Whose joy we echo and in pain await.

Grant body and soul each day their daily bread : And should in spite of grace fresh woe begin, Even as our anger soon is past and dead Be Thy remembrance mortal of our sin :

By Thee in paths of peace Thy sheep be led, And in the vale of terror comforted.

CLEAR and gentle stream ! Known and loved so long, That hast heard the song And the idle dream Of my boyish day; While I once again Down thy margin stray, In the selfsame strain Still my voice is spent, With my old lament And my idle dream, Clear and gentle stream !

Where my old seat was Here again I sit, Where the long boughs knit Over stream and grass A translucent eaves :

Shorter Poems

Where back eddies play Shipwreck with the leaves, And the proud swans stray, Sailing one by one Out of stream and sun, And the fish lie cool In their chosen pool.

Many an afternoon Of the summer day Dreaming here I lay; And I know how soon, Idly at its hour, First the deep bell hums From the minster tower, And then evening comes, Creeping up the glade, With her lengthening shade, And the tardy boon Of her brightening moon.

Clear and gentle stream ! Ere again I go Where thou dost not flow, Well does it beseem Thee to hear again Once my youthful song, That familiar strain Silent now so long: Be as I content With my old lament And my idle dream, Clear and gentle stream.

ELEGY

THE wood is bare : a river-mist is steeping The trees that winter's chill of life bereaves : Only their stiffened boughs break silence, weeping Over their fallen leaves ; That lie upon the dank earth brown and rotten, Miry and matted in the soaking wet : Forgotten with the spring, that is forgotten By them that can forget. Yet it was here we walked when ferns were springing, And through the mossy bank shot bud and blade : Here found in summer, when the birds were singing, A green and pleasant shade. 'Twas here we loved in sunnier days and greener; And now, in this disconsolate decay, I come to see her where I most have seen her, And touch the happier day. For on this path, at every turn and corner, The fancy of her figure on me falls: Yet walks she with the slow step of a mourner, Nor hears my voice that calls. So through my heart there winds a track of feeling, A path of memory, that is all her own : Whereto her phantom beauty ever stealing Haunts the sad spot alone. About her steps the trunks are bare, the branches Drip heavy tears upon her downcast head; And bleed from unseen wounds that no sun stanches. For the year's sun is dead.

And dead leaves wrap the fruits that summer planted And birds that love the South have taken wing. The wanderer, loitering o'er the scene enchanted, Weeps, and despairs of spring.

> 3 POOR withered rose and dry, Skeleton of a rose, Risen to testify To love's sad close: Treasured for love's sweet sake, That of joy past Thou might'st again awake Memory at last. Yet is thy perfume sweet; Thy petals red Yet tell of summer heat. And the gay bed: Yet, yet recall the glow Of the gazing sun, When at thy bush we two Joined hands in one. But, rose, thou hast not seen, Thou hast not wept The change that passed between, Whilst thou hast slept. To me thou seemest yet The dead dream's thrall: While I live and forget Dream, truth and all. Thou art more fresh than I, Rose, sweet and red: Salt on my pale cheeks lie The tears I shed. (228)

THE CLIFF-TOP

THE cliff-top has a carpet Of lilac, gold and green: The blue sky bounds the ocean, The white clouds scud between.

A flock of gulls are wheeling And wailing round my seat; Above my head the heaven, The sea beneath my feet.

THE OCEAN.

Were I a cloud I'd gather My skirts up in the air, And fly I well know whither, And rest I well know where. As pointed the star surely, The legend tells of old, Where the wise kings might offer Myrrh, frankincense, and gold; Above the house I'd hover Where dwells my love, and wait Till haply I might spy her Throw back the garden-gate. There in the summer evening I would bedeck the moon; I would float down and screen her From the sun's rays at noon ; And if her flowers should languish, Or wither in the drought Upon her tall white lilies I'd pour my heart's blood out : (229)

So if she wore one only, And shook not out the rain, Were I a cloud, O cloudlet, I had not lived in vain.

A cloud speaks.

A CLOUD.

But were I thou, O ocean, I would not chafe and fret As thou, because a limit To thy desires is set.

I would be blue, and gentle, Patient, and calm, and see If my smiles might not tempt her, My love, to come to me.

I'd make my depths transparent, And still, that she should lean O'er the boat's edge to ponder The sights that swam between.

I would command strange creatures, Of bright hue and quick fin, To stir the water near her, And tempt her bare arm in.

I'd teach her spend the summer With me: and I can tell, That, were I thou, O ocean, My love should love me well.

But on the mad cloud scudded, The breeze it blew so stiff; And the sad ocean bellowed, And pounded at the cliff.

I HEARD a linnet courting His lady in the spring:
His mates were idly sporting, Nor stayed to hear him sing His song of love.—
I fear my speech distorting His tender love.

The phrases of his pleading Were full of young delight; And she that gave him heeding Interpreted aright His gay, sweet notes,— So sadly marred in the reading,— His tender notes.

And when he ceased, the hearer Awaited the refrain, Till swiftly perching nearer He sang his song again, His pretty song :----Would that my verse spake clearer His tender song !

Ye happy, airy creatures ! That in the merry spring Think not of what misfeatures Or cares the year may bring; But unto love Resign your simple natures To tender love.

DEAR lady, when thou frownest, And my true love despisest, And all thy vows disownest

That sealed my venture wisest; I think thy pride's displeasure Neglects a matchless treasure Exceeding price and measure.

But when again thou smilest, And love for love returnest, And fear with joy beguilest,

And takest truth in earnest; Then, though I sheer adore thee, The sum of my love for thee Seems poor, scant, and unworthy.

I WILL not let thee go. Ends all our month-long love in this? Can it be summed up so, Quit in a single kiss? I will not let thee go.

I will not let thee go. If thy words' breath could scare thy deeds, As the soft south can blow And toss the feathered seeds, Then might I let thee go.

I will not let thee go.

I FOUND to-day out walking The flower my love loves best. What, when I stooped to pluck it, Could dare my hand arrest? Was it a snake lay curling About the root's thick crown? A POPPY grows upon the shore, Bursts her twin cup in summer late : Her leaves are glaucous-green and hoar, Her petals yellow, delicate.

Oft to her cousins turns her thought, In wonder if they care that she Is fed with spray for dew, and caught By every gale that sweeps the sea.

She has no lovers like the red, That dances with the noble corn : Her blossoms on the waves are shed, Where she stands shivering and forlorn.

SOMETIMES when my lady sits by me My rapture's so great, that I tear My mind from the thought that she's nigh me, And strive to forget that she's there. And sometimes when she is away Her absence so sorely does try me, That I shut to my eyes, and assay To think she is there sitting by me.

LONG are the hours the sun is above, But when evening comes I go home to my love.

I'm away the daylight hours and more, Yet she comes not down to open the door.

She does not meet me upon the stair,— She sits in my chamber and waits for me there.

As I enter the room she does not move: I always walk straight up to my love;

And she lets me take my wonted place At her side, and gaze in her dear dear face.

There as I sit, from her head thrown back Her hair falls straight in a shadow black.

Aching and hot as my tired eyes be, She is all that I wish to see.

And in my wearied and toil-dinned ear, She says all things that I wish to hear.

Dusky and duskier grows the room, Yet I see her best in the darker gloom.

When the winter eves are early and cold, The firelight hours are a dream of gold.

And so I sit here night by night, In rest and enjoyment of love's delight.

But a knock at the door, a step on the stair Will startle, alas, my love from her chair.

If a stranger comes she will not stay: At the first alarm she is off and away.

And he wonders, my guest, usurping her throne That I sit so much by myself alone.

WHO has not walked upon the shore, And who does not the morning know, The day the angry gale is o'er, The hour the wind has ceased to blow?

The horses of the strong south-west Are pastured round his tropic tent, Careless how long the ocean's breast Sob on and sigh for passion spent.

The frightened birds, that fled inland To house in rock and tower and tree, Are gathering on the peaceful strand, To tempt again the sunny sea;

Whereon the timid ships steal out And laugh to find their foe asleep, That lately scattered them about, And drave them to the fold like sheep.

The snow-white clouds he northward chased Break into phalanx, line, and band : All one way to the south they haste, The south, their pleasant fatherland.

From distant hills their shadows creep, Arrive in turn and mount the lea, And flit across the downs, and leap Sheer off the cliff upon the sea;

And sail and sail far out of sight. But still I watch their fleecy trains, That piling all the south with light, Dapple in France the fertile plains.

I MADE another song, In likeness of my love : And sang it all day long, Around, beneath, above ; I told my secret out, That none might be in doubt.

I sang it to the sky, That veiled his face to hear How far her azure eye Outdoes his splendid sphere ; But at her eyelids' name His white clouds fled for shame.

I told it to the trees, And to the flowers confest, And said not one of these Is like my lily drest; Nor spathe nor petal dared Vie with her body bared.

I shouted to the sea, That set his waves a-prance; Her floating hair is free, Free are her feet to dance; And for thy wrath, I swear Her frown is more to fear.

And as in happy mood I walked and sang alone, At eve beside the wood I met my love, my own: And sang to her the song I had sung all day long. (237)

ON A LADY WHOM GRIEF FOR THE DEATH OF HER BETROTHED KILLED

ASSEMBLE, all ye maidens, at the door, And all ye loves, assemble; far and wide Proclaim the bridal, that proclaimed before Has been deferred to this late eventide : For on this night the bride, The days of her betrothal over, Leaves the parental hearth for evermore; To-night the bride goes forth to meet her lover. Reach down the wedding vesture, that has lain Yet all unvisited, the silken gown : Bring out the bracelets, and the golden chain

Her dearer friends provided : sere and brown Bring out the festal crown, And set it on her forehead lightly :

Though it be withered, twine no wreath again; This only is the crown she can wear rightly.

Cloke her in ermine, for the night is cold, And wrap her warmly, for the night is long, In pious hands the flaming torches hold, While her attendants, chosen from among

Her faithful virgin throng,

May lay her in her cedar litter,

Decking her coverlet with sprigs of gold, Roses, and lilies white that best befit her.

( 238 )

Sound flute and tabor, that the bridal be Not without music, nor with these alone; But let the viol lead the melody, With lesser intervals, and plaintive moan Of sinking semitone; And, all in choir, the virgin voices Rest not from singing in skilled harmony The song that aye the bridegroom's ear rejoices.

Let the priests go before, arrayed in white, And let the dark-stoled minstrels follow slow, Next they that bear her, honoured on this night, And then the maidens, in a double row,

Each singing soft and low, And each on high a torch upstaying : Unto her lover lead her forth with light, With music, and with singing, and with praying.

'Twas at this sheltering hour he nightly came, And found her trusty window open wide, And knew the signal of the timorous flame, That long the restless curtain would not hide Her form that stood beside;

As scarce she dared to be delighted, Listening to that sweet tale, that is no shame To faithful lovers, that their hearts have plighted

But now for many days the dewy grass Has shown no markings of his feet at morn : And watching she has seen no shadow pass The moonlit walk, and heard no music borne

Upon her ear forlorn.

In vain has she looked out to greet him; He has not come, he will not come, alas! So let us bear her out where she must meet him.

Now to the river bank the priests are come : The bark is ready to receive its freight : Let some prepare her place therein, and some Embark the litter with its slender weight:

The rest stand by in state,

And sing her a safe passage over; While she is oared across to her new home, Into the arms of her expectant lover.

And thou, O lover, that art on the watch, Where, on the banks of the forgetful streams, The pale indifferent ghosts wander, and snatch The sweeter moments of their broken dreams,—

Thou, when the torchlight gleams, When thou shalt see the slow procession, And when thine ears the fitful music catch, Rejoice, for thou art near to thy possession.

A PASSER-BY

WHITHER, O splendid ship, thy white sails crowding, Leaning across the bosom of the urgent West, That fearest nor sea rising, nor sky clouding,

Whither away, fair rover, and what thy quest?

Ah ! soon, when Winter has all our vales opprest, When skies are cold and misty, and hail is hurling,

Wilt thou glide on the blue Pacific, or rest In a summer haven asleep, thy white sails furling.

I there before thee, in the country that well thou knowest, Already arrived am inhaling the odorous air :

I watch thee enter unerringly where thou goest, And anchor queen of the strange shipping there, Thy sails for awnings spread, thy masts bare;

Nor is aught from the foaming reef to the snow-capped, grandest

Peak, that is over the feathery palms more fair Than thou, so upright, so stately, and still thou standest.

And yet, O splendid ship, unhailed and nameless,

I know not if, aiming a fancy, I rightly divine

That thou hast a purpose joyful, a courage blameless,

Thy port assured in a happier land than mine.

But for all I have given thee, beauty enough is thine, As thou, aslant with trim tackle and shrouding,

From the proud nostril curve of a prow's line In the offing scatterest foam, thy white sails crowding.

LATE SPRING EVENING

I saw the Virgin-mother clad in green, Walking the sprinkled meadows at sundown; While yet the moon's cold flame was hung between The day and night, above the dusky town: I saw her brighter than the Western gold, Whereto she faced in splendour to behold.

Her dress was greener than the tenderest leaf That trembled in the sunset glare aglow : Herself more delicate than is the brief, Pink apple-blossom, that May showers lay low, And more delicious than's the earliest streak The blushing rose shows of her crimson cheek.

As if to match the sight that so did please, A music entered, making passion fain : Three nightingales sat singing in the trees, And praised the Goddess for the fallen rain ; Which yet their unseen motions did arouse, Or parting Zephyrs shook out from the boughs.

And o'er the treetops, scattered in mid air, The exhausted clouds laden with crimson light Floated, or seemed to sleep; and, highest there, One planet broke the lingering ranks of night; Daring day's company, so he might spy The Virgin-queen once with his watchful eye.

( 245 )

And when I saw her, then I worshipped her, And said, —O bounteous Spring, O beauteous Spring, Mother of all my years, thou who dost stir My heart to adore thee and my tongue to sing, Flower of my fruit, of my heart's blood the fire, Of all my satisfaction the desire !

How art thou every year more beautiful, Younger for all the winters thou hast cast: And I, for all my love grows, grow more dull, Decaying with each season overpast ! In vain to teach him love must man employ thee, The more he learns the less he can enjoy thee.

WOOING

I KNOW not how I came, New on my knightly journey, To win the fairest dame That graced my maiden tourney.

Chivalry's lovely prize With all men's gaze upon her, Why did she free her eyes On me, to do me honour?

Ah! ne'er had I my mind With such high hope delighted, Had she not first inclined, And with her eyes invited.

But never doubt I knew, Having their glance to cheer me, Until the day joy grew Too great, too sure, too near me. ( 246 )

When hope a fear became, And passion, grown too tender, Now trembled at the shame Of a despised surrender;

And where my love at first Saw kindness in her smiling,

I read her pride, and cursed The arts of her beguiling.

Till winning less than won, And liker wooed than wooing,

Too late I turned undone Away from my undoing ;

And stood beside the door, Whereto she followed, making My hard leave-taking more Hard by her sweet leave-taking.

Her speech would have betrayed Her thought, had mine been colder : Her eyes' distress had made A lesser lover bolder.

But no ! Fond heart, distrust, Cried Wisdom, and consider :

And brisk upon my way I smote the stroke to sever, And should have lost that day My life's delight for ever :

But when I saw her start And turn aside and tremble ;—

Ah ! she was true, her heart I knew did not dissemble.

THERE is a hill beside the silver Thames, Shady with birch and beech and odorous pine : And brilliant underfoot with thousand gems Steeply the thickets to his floods decline.

Straight trees in every place

Their thick tops interlace,

And pendant branches trail their foliage fine Upon his watery face.

Swift from the sweltering pasturage he flows : His stream, alert to seek the pleasant shade, Pictures his gentle purpose, as he goes Straight to the caverned pool his toil has made.

His winter floods lay bare

The stout roots in the air :

His summer streams are cool, when they have played Among their fibrous hair.

A rushy island guards the sacred bower, And hides it from the meadow, where in peace The lazy cows wrench many a scented flower, Robbing the golden market of the bees :

And laden barges float

By banks of myosote;

And scented flag and golden flower-de-lys Delay the loitering boat.

And on this side the island, where the pool Eddies away, are tangled mass on mass The water-weeds, that net the fishes cool,

And scarce allow a narrow stream to pass;

Where spreading crowfoot mars

The drowning nenuphars,

Waving the tassels of her silken grass Below her silver stars.

(248)

But in the purple pool there nothing grows, Not the white water-lily spoked with gold; Though best she loves the hollows, and well knows On quiet streams her broad shields to unfold: Yet should her roots but try Within these deeps to lie, Not her long reaching stalk could ever hold Her waxen head so high.

Sometimes an angler comes, and drops his hook Within its hidden depths, and 'gainst a tree Leaning his rod, reads in some pleasant book, Forgetting soon his pride of fishery;

And dreams, or falls asleep, While curious fishes peep About his nibbled bait, or scornfully Dart off and rise and leap.

And sometimes a slow figure 'neath the trees, In ancient-fashioned smock, with tottering care Upon a staff propping his weary knees, May by the pathway of the forest fare : As from a buried day Across the mind will stray Some perishing mute shadow,—and unaware

He passeth on his way.

Else, he that wishes solitude is safe, Whether he bathe at morning in the stream : Or lead his love there when the hot hours chafe The meadows, busy with a blurring steam ;

Or watch, as fades the light,

The gibbous moon grow bright, Until her magic rays dance in a dream, And glorify the night.

( 249 )

Where is this bower beside the silver Thames? O pool and flowery thickets, hear my vow ! O trees of freshest foliage and straight stems, No sharer of my secret I allow :

Lest ere I come the while Strange feet your shades defile;

Or lest the burly oarsman turn his prow Within your guardian isle.

A WATER-PARTY

LET us, as by this verdant bank we float, Search down the marge to find some shady pool Where we may rest awhile and moor our boat, And bathe our tired limbs in the waters cool.

> Beneath the noonday sun, Swiftly, O river, run !

Here is a mirror for Narcissus, see ! I cannot sound it, plumbing with my oar. Lay the stern in beneath this bowering tree ! Now, stepping on this stump, we are ashore.

> Guard, Hamadryades, Our clothes laid by your trees!

How the birds warble in the woods! I pick The waxen lilies, diving to the root. But swim not far in the stream, the weeds grow thick, And hot on the bare head the sunbeams shoot.

Until our sport be done,

O merry birds, sing on !

If but to-night the sky be clear, the moon Will serve us well, for she is near the full. We shall row safely home; only too soon,— So pleasant 'tis, whether we float or pull.

To guide us through the night,

O summer moon, shine bright !

THE DOWNS

O BOLD majestic downs, smooth, fair and lonely;
O still solitude, only matched in the skies: Perilous in steep places, Soft in the level races,
Where sweeping in phantom silence the cloudland flies;
With lovely undulation of fall and rise; Entrenched with thickets thorned,
By delicate miniature dainty flowers adorned !
I climb your crown, and lo ! a sight surprising
Of sea in front uprising, steep and wide : And scattered ships ascending To heaven, lost in the blending

Of distant blues, where water and sky divide,

Urging their engines against wind and tide,

And all so small and slow

They seem to be wearily pointing the way they would go

The accumulated murmur of soft plashing,

Of waves on rocks dashing and searching the sands,

Takes my ear, in the veering

Baffled wind, as rearing

Upright at the cliff, to the gullies and rifts he stands; And his conquering surges scour out over the lands;

While again at the foot of the downs He masses his strength to recover the topmost crowns.

ODE I

INVITATION TO THE COUNTRY

AGAIN with pleasant green Has Spring renewed the wood, And where the bare trunks stood Are leafy arbours seen ; And back on budding boughs Come birds, to court and pair, Whose rival amorous vows Amaze the scented air.

The freshets are unbound, And leaping from the hill, Their mossy banks refill With streams of light and sound : And scattered down the meads, From hour to hour unfold A thousand buds and beads In stars and cups of gold.

Now hear, and see, and note, The farms are all astir, And every labourer Has doffed his winter coat; And how with specks of white They dot the brown hillside, Or jaunt and sing outright As by their teams they stride.

They sing to feel the Sun Regain his wanton strength; To know the year at length Rewards their labour done; To see the rootless stake They set bare in the ground, Burst into leaf, and shake Its grateful scent around.

Ah now an evil lot Is his, who toils for gain, Where crowded chimneys stain The heavens his choice forgot; 'Tis on the blighted trees That deck his garden dim, And in the tainted breeze, That sweet Spring comes to him.

Far sooner I would choose The life of brutes that bask, Than set myself a task, Which inborn powers refuse: And rather far enjoy The body, than invent A duty, to destroy The ease which nature sent;

And country life I praise, And lead, because I find The philosophic mind Can take no middle ways; She will not leave her love To mix with men, her art Is all to strive above The crowd, or stand apart.

(253)

Thrice happy he, the rare Prometheus, who can play With hidden things, and lay New realms of nature bare; Whose venturous step has trod Hell underfoot, and won A crown from man and God For all that he has done.—

That highest gift of all, Since crabbèd fate did flood My heart with sluggish blood, I look not mine to call; But, like a truant freed, Fly to the woods, and claim A pleasure for the deed Of my inglorious name :

And am content, denied The best, in choosing right; For Nature can delight Fancies unoccupied With ecstasies so sweet As none can even guess, Who walk not with the feet Of joy in idleness.

Then leave your joyless ways, My friend, my joys to see. The day you come shall be The choice of chosen days : You shall be lost, and learn New being, and forget The world, till your return Shall bring your first regret.

SPRING

ODE II

REPLY

BEHOLD ! the radiant Spring, In splendour decked anew, Down from her heaven of blue Returns on sunlit wing : The zephyrs of her train In fleecy clouds disport, And birds to greet her reign Summon their silvan court.

And here in street and square The prisoned trees contest Her favour with the best, To robe themselves full fair : And forth their buds provoke, Forgetting winter brown, And all the mire and smoke That wrapped the dingy town.

Now he that loves indeed His pleasure must awake, Lest any pleasure take Its flight, and he not heed ; For of his few short years Another now invites His hungry soul, and cheers His life with new delights.

( 255 )

And who loves Nature more Than he, whose painful art Has taught and skilled his heart To read her skill and lore? Whose spirit leaps more high, Plucking the pale primrose, Than his whose feet must fly The pasture where it grows?

One long in city pent Forgets, or must complain: But think not I can stain My heaven with discontent; Nor wallow with that sad, Backsliding herd, who cry That Truth must make man bad, And pleasure is a lie.

Rather while Reason lives To mark me from the beast, I'll teach her serve at least To heal the wound she gives : Nor need she strain her powers Beyond a common flight, To make the passing hours Happy from morn till night.

Since health our toil rewards, And strength is labour's prize, I hate not, nor despise The work my lot accords; Nor fret with fears unkind The tender joys, that bless My hard-won peace of mind, In hours of idleness.

Then what charm company Can give, know I,—if wine Go round, or throats combine To set dumb music free. Or deep in wintertide When winds without make moan, I love my own fireside Not least when most alone.

Then oft I turn the page In which our country's name, Spoiling the Greek of fame, Shall sound in every age : Or some Terentian play Renew, whose excellent Adjusted folds betray How once Menander went.

Or if grave study suit The yet unwearied brain, Plato can teach again, And Socrates dispute; Till fancy in a dream Confront their souls with mine, Crowning the mind supreme, And her delights divine.

While pleasure yet can be Pleasant, and fancy sweet, I bid all care retreat From my philosophy; Which, when I come to try Your simpler life, will find, I doubt not, joys to vie With those I leave behind.

AMONG THE TOMES

SAD, sombre place, beneath whose antique yews I come, unquiet sorrows to control; Amid thy silent mossgrown graves to muse With my neglected solitary soul; And to poetic sadness care confide, Trusting sweet Melancholy for my guide : They will not ask why in thy shades I stray, Among the tombs finding my rare delight, Beneath the sun at indolent noonday, Or in the windy moon-enchanted night, Who have once reined in their steeds at any shrine, And given them water from the well divine.—

The orchards are all ripened, and the sun Spots the deserted gleanings with decay; The seeds are perfected : his work is done, And Autumn lingers but to outsmile the May; Bidding his tinted leaves glide, bidding clear Unto clear skies the birds applaud the year. Lo, here I sit, and to the world I call, The world my solemn fancy leaves behind,

The world my solemn fancy leaves behind, Come ! pass within the inviolable wall, Come pride, come pleasure, come distracted mind; Within the fated refuge, hither, turn, And learn your wisdom ere 'tis late to learn.

Come with me now, and taste the fount of tears; For many eyes have sanctified this spot, Where grief's unbroken lineage endears The charm untimely Folly injures not, And slays the intruding thoughts, that overleap The simple fence its holiness doth keep.

Read the worn names of the forgotten dead, Their pompous legends will no smile awake; Even the vainglorious title o'er the head Wins its pride pardon for its sorrow's sake; And carven Loves scorn not their dusty prize, Though fallen so far from tender sympathies.

Here where a mother laid her only son, Here where a lover left his bride, below The treasured names their own are added on To those whom they have followed long ago : Sealing the record of the tears they shed, That 'where their treasure there their hearts are fled.'

Grandfather, father, son, and then again Child, grandchild, and great-grandchild laid beneath Numbered in turn among the sons of men, And gathered each one in his turn to death : While he that occupies their house and name To-day,—to-morrow too their grave shall claim.

And where are all their spirits? Ah! could we tell The manner of our being when we die, And see beyond the scene we know so well The country that so much obscured doth lie! With brightest visions our fond hopes repair, Or crown our melancholy with despair;

From death, still death, still would a comfort come: Since of this world the essential joy must fall In all distributed, in each thing some, In nothing all, and all complete in all; Till pleasure, ageing to her full increase, Puts on perfection, and is throned in peace.

Yea, sweetest peace, unsought-for, undesired, Loathed and misnamed, 'tis thee I worship here : Though in most black habiliments attired, Thou art sweet peace, and thee I cannot fear. Nay, were my last hope quenched, I here would sit And praise the annihilation of the pit.

Nor quickly disenchanted will my feet Back to the busy town return, but yet Linger, ere I my loving friends would greet, Or touch their hands, or share without regret The warmth of that kind hearth, whosè sacred ties Only shall dim with tears my dying eyes.

WHEREFORE to-night so full of care, My soul, revolving hopeless strife, Pointing at hindrance, and the bare Painful escapes of fitful life?

Shaping the doom that may befall By precedent of terror past : By love dishonoured, and the call Of friendship slighted at the last?

By treasured names, the little store That memory out of wreck could save Of loving hearts, that gone before Call their old comrade to the grave?

O soul, be patient: thou shalt find A little matter mend all this; Some strain of music to thy mind, Some praise for skill not spent amiss.

(260)

Again shall pleasure overflow Thy cup with sweetness, thou shalt taste Nothing but sweetness, and shalt grow Half sad for sweetness run to waste.

O happy life! I hear thee sing, O rare delight of mortal stuff! I praise my days for all they bring, Yet are they only not enough.

MORNING HYMN

O GOLDEN Sun, whose ray My path illumineth : Light of the circling day, Whose night is birth and death :

That dost not stint the prime Of wise and strong, nor stay The changeful ordering time, That brings their sure decay:

Though thou, the central sphere, Dost seem to turn around Thy creature world, and near As father fond art found;

Thereon, as from above To shine, and make rejoice With beauty, life, and love, The garden of thy choice,

(261)

To dress the jocund Spring With bounteous promise gay Of hotter months, that bring The full perfected day;

To touch with richest gold The ripe fruit, ere it fall; And smile through cloud and cold On Winter's funeral.

Now with resplendent flood Gladden my waking eyes, And stir my slothful blood To joyous enterprise.

Arise, arise, as when At first God said LIGHT BE! That He might make us men With eyes His light to see.

Scatter the clouds that hide The face of heaven, and show Where sweet Peace doth abide, Where Truth and Beauty grow.

Awaken, cheer, adorn, Invite, inspire, assure The joys that praise thy morn, The toil thy noons mature :

And soothe the eve of day, That darkens back to death; O golden Sun, whose ray Our path illumineth!

I HAVE loved flowers that fade, Within whose magic tents Rich hues have marriage made With sweet unmemoried scents: A honeymoon delight,— A joy of love at sight, That ages in an hour :— My song be like a flower !

I have loved airs, that die Before their charm is writ Along a liquid sky Trembling to welcome it. Notes, that with pulse of fire Proclaim the spirit's desire, Then die, and are nowhere :----My song be like an air !

Die, song, die like a breath, And wither as a bloom : Fear not a flowery death, Dread not an airy tomb ! Fly with delight, fly hence ! 'Twas thine love's tender sense To feast; now on thy bier Beauty shall shed a tear.

Ι

O MY vague desires ! Ye lambent flames of the soul, her offspring fires : That are my soul herself in pangs sublime Rising and flying to heaven before her time :

What doth tempt you forth To drown in the south or shiver in the frosty north? What seek ye or find ye in your random flying, Ever soaring aloft, soaring and dying?

Joy, the joy of flight ! They hide in the sun, they flare and dance in the night ; Gone up, gone out of sight : and ever again Follow fresh tongues of fire, fresh pangs of pain.

Ah! they burn my soul, The fires, devour my soul that once was whole: She is scattered in fiery phantoms day by day, But whither, whither? ay whither? away, away!

Could I but control These vague desires, these leaping flames of the soul : Could I but quench the fire: ah! could I stay My soul that flieth, alas, and dieth away!

LONDON SNOW

WHEN men were all asleep the snow came flying, In large white flakes falling on the city brown, Stealthily and perpetually settling and loosely lying,

Hushing the latest traffic of the drowsy town; Deadening, muffling, stifling its murmurs failing; Lazily and incessantly floating down and down:

Silently sifting and veiling road, roof and railing; Hiding difference, making unevenness even, Into angles and crevices softly drifting and sailing.

All night it fell, and when full inches seven It lay in the depth of its uncompacted lightness, The clouds blew off from a high and frosty heaven;

And all woke earlier for the unaccustomed brightness Of the winter dawning, the strange unheavenly glare: The eye marvelled—marvelled at the dazzling whiteness;

The ear hearkened to the stillness of the solemn air; No sound of wheel rumbling nor of foot falling, And the busy morning cries came thin and spare.

Then boys I heard, as they went to school, calling, They gathered up the crystal manna to freeze Their tongues with tasting, their hands with snowballing;

Or rioted in a drift, plunging up to the knees; Or peering up from under the white-mossed wonder, 'O look at the trees!' they cried, 'O look at the trees!'

With lessened load a few carts creak and blunder, Following along the white deserted way, A country company long dispersed asunder :

When now already the sun, in pale display Standing by Paul's high dome, spread forth below His sparkling beams, and awoke the stir of the day.

For now doors open, and war is waged with the snow; And trains of sombre men, past tale of number, Tread long brown paths, as toward their toil they go:

But even for them awhile no cares encumber Their minds diverted; the daily word is ünspoken, The daily thoughts of labour and sorrow slumber At the sight of the beauty that greets them, for the charm they have broken.

THE VOICE OF NATURE

I STAND on the cliff and watch the veiled sun paling A silver field afar in the mournful sea,

The scourge of the surf, and plaintive gulls sailing At ease on the gale that smites the shuddering lea :

Whose smile severe and chaste

June never hath stirred to vanity, nor age defaced. In lofty thought strive, O spirit, for ever : In courage and strength pursue thine own endeavour.

Ah! if it were only for thee, thou restless ocean Of waves that follow and roar, the sweep of the tides;
Wer't only for thee, impetuous wind, whose motion Precipitate all o'errides, and turns, nor abides: For you sad birds and fair, Or only for thee, bleak cliff, erect in the air;
Then well could I read wisdom in every feature, O well should I understand the voice of Nature.
But far away, I think, in the Thames valley, The silent river glides by flowery banks:
And birds sing sweetly in branches that arch an alley Of cloistered trees, moss-grown in their ancient ranks: Where if a light air stray,
'Tis laden with hum of bees and scent of may.
( 266 )

Love and peace be thine, O spirit, for ever : Serve thy sweet desire : despise endeavour.

And if it were only for thee, entrancèd river, That scarce dost rock the lily on her airy stem,
Or stir a wave to murmur, or a rush to quiver;
Wer't but for the woods, and summer asleep in them : For you my bowers green,
My hedges of rose and woodbine, with walks between,
Then well could I read wisdom in every feature,
O well should I understand the voice of Nature.

ON A DEAD CHILD

PERFECT little body, without fault or stain on thee, With promise of strength and manhood full and fair ! Though cold and stark and bare, The bloom and the charm of life doth awhile remain on thee. Thy mother's treasure wert thou ;--alas ! no longer To visit her heart with wondrous joy; to be Thy father's pride ;--ah, he Must gather his faith together, and his strength make stronger. To me, as I move thee now in the last duty, Dost thou with a turn or gesture anon respond ; Startling my fancy fond With a chance attitude of the head, a freak of beauty. Thy hand clasps, as 'twas wont, my finger, and holds it: But the grasp is the clasp of Death, heartbreaking and stiff; Yet feels to my hand as if 'Twas still thy will, thy pleasure and trust that enfolds it. (267)

So I lay thee there, thy sunken eyelids closing,— Go lie thou there in thy coffin, thy last little bed !— Propping thy wise, sad head,
Thy firm, pale hands across thy chest disposing.
So quiet ! doth the change content thee?—Death, whither hath he taken thee?
To a world, do I think, that rights the disaster of this? The vision of which I miss,
Who weep for the body, and wish but to warm thee and awaken thee?
Ah ! little at best can all our hopes avail us To lift this sorrow, or cheer us, when in the dark, Unwilling, alone we embark,
And the things we have seen and have known and have heard of, fail us.

THE PHILOSOPHER TO HIS MISTRESS

BECAUSE thou canst not see, Because thou canst not know The black and hopeless woe That hath encompassed me : Because, should I confess The thought of my despair, My words would wound thee less Than swords can hurt the air :

Because with thee I seem As one invited near To taste the faery cheer Of spirits in a dream; Of whom he knoweth nought Save that they vie to make All motion, voice and thought A pleasure for his sake :

(268)

Therefore more sweet and strange Has been the mystery Of thy long love to me, That doth not quit, nor change, Nor tax my solemn heart, That kisseth in a gloom, Knowing not who thou art That givest, nor to whom.

Therefore the tender touch Is more; more dear the smile: And thy light words beguile My wisdom overmuch: And O with swiftness fly The fancies of my song To happy worlds, where I Still in thy love belong.

6

HASTE on, my joys ! your treasure lies In swift, unceasing flight. O haste : for while your beauty flies I seize your full delight. Lo! I have seen the scented flower, Whose tender stems I cull, For her brief date and meted hour Appear more beautiful. O youth, O strength, O most divine For that so short ye prove; Were but your rare gifts longer mine, Ye scarce would win my love. Nay, life itself the heart would spurn, Did once the days restore The days, that once enjoyed return, Return-ah! nevermore. (269)

INDOLENCE

WE left the city when the summer day Had verged already on its hot decline, And charmed Indolence in languor lay In her gay gardens, 'neath her towers divine : 'Farewell,' we said, 'dear city of youth and dream !' And in our boat we stepped and took the stream.

All through that idle afternoon we strayed Upon our proposed travel well begun, As loitering by the woodland's dreamy shade, Past shallow islets floating in the sun, Or searching down the banks for rarer flowers We lingered out the pleasurable hours.

Till when that loveliest came, which mowers home Turns from their longest labour, as we steered Along a straitened channel flecked with foam, We lost our landscape wide, and slowly neared An ancient bridge, that like a blind wall lay Low on its buried vaults to block the way.

Then soon the narrow tunnels broader showed, Where with its arches three it sucked the mass . Of water, that in swirl thereunder flowed, Or stood piled at the piers waiting to pass; And pulling for the middle span, we drew The tender blades aboard and floated through.

But past the bridge what change we found below ! The stream, that all day long had laughed and played Betwixt the happy shires, ran dark and slow, And with its easy flood no murmur made : And weeds spread on its surface, and about The stagnant margin reared their stout heads out.

( 270 )

Upon the left high elms, with giant wood Skirting the water-meadows, interwove Their slumbrous crowns, o'ershadowing where they stood The floor and heavy pillars of the grove : And in the shade, through reeds and sedges dank, A footpath led along the moated bank.

Across, all down the right; an old brick wall, Above and o'er the channel, red did lean; Here buttressed up, and bulging there to fall, Tufted with grass and plants and lichen green; And crumbling to the flood, which at its base Slid gently nor disturbed its mirrored face.

Sheer on the wall the houses rose, their backs All windowless, neglected and awry, With tottering coigns, and crooked chimney stacks; And here and there an unused door, set high Above the fragments of its mouldering stair, With rail and broken step led out on air.

Beyond, deserted wharfs and vacant sheds, With empty boats and barges moored along, And rafts half-sunken, fringed with weedy shreds, And sodden beams, once soaked to season strong. No sight of man, nor sight of life, no stroke, No voice the somnolence and silence broke.

Then I who rowed leant on my oar, whose drip Fell without sparkle, and I rowed no more; And he that steered moved neither hand nor lip, But turned his wondering eye from shore to shore; And our trim boat let her swift motion die, Between the dim reflections floating by.

8

I PRAISE the tender flower, That on a mournful day Bloomed in my garden bower And made the winter gay. Its loveliness contented My heart tormented.

I praise the gentle maid Whose happy voice and smile To confidence betrayed My doleful heart awhile : And gave my spirit deploring Fresh wings for soaring.

The maid for very fear Of love I durst not tell: The rose could never hear, Though I bespake her well: So in my song I bind them For all to find them.

9

A WINTER'S night with the snow about : 'Twas silent within and cold without : Both father and mother to bed were gone : The son sat yet by the fire alone.

He gazed on the fire, and dreamed again Of one that was now no more among men: As still he sat and never aware How close was the spirit beside his chair.

( 272 )

Book III

Nay, sad were his thoughts, for he wept and said Ah, woe for the dead ! ah, woe for the dead ! How heavy the earth lies now on her breast, The lips that I kissed, and the hand I pressed.

The spirit he saw not, he could not hear The comforting word she spake in his ear : His heart in the grave with her mouldering clay No welcome gave—and she fled away.

10

Mv bed and pillow are cold, My heart is faint with dread, The air hath an odour of mould, I dream I lie with the dead : I cannot move, O come to me, Love, Or else I am dead.

The feet I hear on the floor Tread heavily overhead : O Love, come down to the door, Come, Love, come, ere I be dead : Make shine thy light, O Love, in the night ; Or else I am dead.

11

O THOU unfaithful, still as ever dearest That in thy beauty to my eyes appearest In fancy rising now to re-awaken My love unshaken;

All thou'st forgotten, but no change can free thee No hate unmake thee; as thou wert I see thee, And am contented, eye from fond eye meeting Its ample greeting.

т

O thou my star of stars, among things wholly Devoted, sacred, dim and melancholy, The only joy of all the joys I cherished That hast not perished,

Why now on others squand'rest thou the treasure, That to be jealous of is still my pleasure : As still I dream 'tis me whom thou invitest, Me thou delightest?

But day by day my joy hath feebler being, The fading picture tires my painful seeing, And facry fancy leaves her habitation To desolation.

Of two things open left for lovers parted 'Twas thine to scorn the past and go lighthearted : But I would ever dream I still possess it, And thus caress it.

I 2

THOU didst delight my eyes : Yet who am I? nor first Nor last nor best, that durst Once dream of thee for prize; Nor this the only time Thou shalt set love to rhyme.

Thou didst delight my ear: Ah! little praise; thy voice Makes other hearts rejoice, Makes all ears glad that hear; And short my joy: but yet, O song, do not forget.

( 274 )

Book III

For what wert thou to me? How shall I say? The moon, That poured her midnight noon Upon his wrecking sea;— A sail, that for a day Has cheered the castaway.

13

Jov, sweetest lifeborn joy, where dost thou dwell? Upon the formless moments of our being Flitting, to mock the ear that heareth well, To escape the trainèd eye that strains in seeing, Dost thou fly with us whither we are fleeing; Or home in our creations, to withstand Black-wingèd death, that slays the making hand?

The making mind, that must untimely perish Amidst its work which time may not destroy, The beauteous forms which man shall love to cherish The glorious songs that combat earth's annoy? Thou dost dwell here, I know, divinest Joy: But they who build thy towers fair and strong, Of all that toil, feel most of care and wrong.

Sense is so tender, O and hope so high, That common pleasures mock their hope and sense; And swifter than doth lightning from the sky The ecstasy they pine for flashes hence, Leaving the darkness and the woe immense, Wherewith it seems no thread of life was woven, Nor doth the track remain where once 'twas cloven.

And heaven and all the stable elements That guard God's purpose mock us, though the mind Be spent in searching : for his old intents We see were never for our joy designed : They shine as doth the bright sun on the blind,

Т2

Or like his pensioned stars, that hymn above His praise, but not toward us, that God is Love.

For who so well hath wooed the maiden hours As quite to have won the worth of their rich show, To rob the night of mystery, or the flowers Of their sweet delicacy ere they go? Nay, even the dear occasion when we know, We miss the joy, and on the gliding day The special glories float and pass away.

Only life's common plod : still to repair The body and the thing which perisheth : The soil, the smutch, the toil and ache and wear, The grinding enginry of blood and breath, Pain's random darts, the heartless spade of death ; All is but grief, and heavily we call On the last terror for the end of all.

Then comes the happy moment : not a stir In any tree, no portent in the sky : The morn doth neither hasten nor defer, The morrow hath no name to call it by, But life and joy are one,—we know not why,— As though our very blood long breathless lain Had tasted of the breath of God again.

And having tasted it I speak of it, And praise him thinking how I trembled then When his touch strengthened me, as now I sit In wonder, reaching out beyond my ken, Reaching to turn the day back, and my pen Urging to tell a tale which told would seem The witless phantasy of them that dream.

Book III

But O most blessed truth, for truth thou art, Abide thou with me till my life shall end. Divinity hath surely touched my heart; I have possessed more joy than earth can lend: I may attain what time shall never spend. Only let not my duller days destroy The memory of thy witness and my joy.

14

THE full moon from her cloudless skies Turneth her face, I think, on me; And from the hour when she doth rise Till when she sets, none else will see. One only other ray she hath, That makes an angle close with mine, And glancing down its happy path Upon another spot doth shine. But that ray too is sent to me, For where it lights there dwells my heart : And if I were where I would be,

Both rays would shine, love, where thou art.

15

AWAKE, my heart, to be loved, awake, awake ! The darkness silvers away, the morn doth break, It leaps in the sky : unrisen lustres slake The o'ertaken moon. Awake, O heart, awake ! She too that loveth awaketh and hopes for thee ; Her eyes already have sped the shades that flee, Already they watch the path thy feet shall take : Awake, O heart, to be loved, awake, awake ! And if thou tarry from her,—if this could be,—

She cometh herself, O heart, to be loved, to thee For thee would unashamèd herself forsake : Awake to be loved, my heart, awake, awake !

Awake, the land is scattered with light, and see, Uncanopied sleep is flying from field and tree : And blossoming boughs of April in laughter shake ; Awake, O heart, to be loved, awake, awake !

Lo all things wake and tarry and look for thee: She looketh and saith, 'O sun, now bring him to me. Come more adored, O adored, for his coming's sake, And awake my heart to be loved: awake, awake!'

16

SONG

I LOVE my lady's eyes Above the beauties rare She most is wont to prize, Above her sunny hair, And all that face to face Her glass repeats of grace.

For those are still the same To her and all that see: But oh! her eyes will flame When they do look on me: And so above the rest I love her eyes the best.

Now say, [Say, O say ! saith the music] who likes my song?— I knew you by your eyes, That rest on nothing long, And have forgot surprise; And stray [Stray, O stray ! saith the music] as mine will stray, The while my love's away.

17

SINCE thou, O fondest and truest, Hast loved me best and longest, And now with trust the strongest The joy of my heart renewest;

Since thou art dearer and dearer While other hearts grow colder And ever, as love is older, More lovingly drawest nearer:

Since now I see in the measure Of all my giving and taking, Thou wert my hand in the making, The sense and soul of my pleasure;

The good I have ne'er repaid thee In heaven I pray be recorded, And all thy love rewarded By God, thy master that made thee.

18

THE evening darkens over After a day so bright The windcapt waves discover That wild will be the night. There's sound of distant thunder.

The latest sea-birds hover Along the cliff's sheer height; As in the memory wander Last flutterings of delight, White wings lost on the white.

( 279 )

There's not a ship in sight; And as the sun goes under Thick clouds conspire to cover The moon that should rise yonder. Thou art alone, fond lover.

19

O vouth whose hope is high, Who dost to Truth aspire, Whether thou live or die, O look not back nor tire.

Thou that art bold to fly Through tempest, flood and fire, Nor dost not shrink to try Thy heart in torments dire :

If thou canst Death defy, If thy Faith is entire, Press onward, for thine eye Shall see thy heart's desire.

Beauty and love are nigh, And with their deathless quire Soon shall thine eager cry Be numbered and expire.

I

I LOVE all beauteous things, I seek and adore them ; God hath no better praise, And man in his hasty days Is honoured for them.

I too will something make And joy in the making; Altho' to-morrow it seem Like the empty words of a dream Remembered on waking.

2

My spirit sang all day O my joy. Nothing my tongue could say, Only My joy !

My heart an echo caught— O my joy— And spake, Tell me thy thought, Hide not thy joy. ( 281 )

My eyes gan peer around,— O my joy— What beauty hast thou found ? Shew us thy joy.

My jealous ears grew whist ;— O my joy— Music from heaven is 't, Sent for our joy?

She also came and heard; O my joy, What, said she, is this word? What is thy joy?

And I replied, O see, O my joy,'Tis thee, I cried, 'tis thee: Thou art my joy.

3

THE upper skies are palest blue Mottled with pearl and fretted snow : With tattered fleece of inky hue Close overhead the storm-clouds go.

Their shadows fly along the hill And o'er the crest mount one by one : The whitened planking of the mill Is now in shade and now in sun.

THE clouds have left the sky, The wind hath left the sea, The half-moon up on high Shrinketh her face of dree

She lightens on the comb Of leaden waves, that roar And thrust their hurried foam Up on the dusky shore.

Behind the western bars The shrouded day retreats, And unperceived the stars Steal to their sovran seats.

And whiter grows the foam, The small moon lightens more; And as I turn me home, My shadow walks before.

LAST WEEK OF FEBRUARY, 1890

HARK to the merry birds, hark how they sing! Although 'tis not yet spring And keen the air ;
Hale Winter, half resigning ere he go, Doth to his heiress shew His kingdom fair.
In patient russet is his forest spread, All bright with bramble red, With beechen moss
And holly sheen : the oak silver and stark Sunneth his aged bark

And wrinkled boss.

(283)

But neath the ruin of the withered brake Primroses now awake From nursing shades : The crumpled carpet of the dry leaves brown Avails not to keep down The hyacinth blades.

The hazel hath put forth his tassels ruffed ; The willow's flossy tuft Hath slipped him free : The rose amid her ransacked orange hips Braggeth the tender tips Of bowers to be.

A' black rook stirs the branches here and there, Foraging to repair His broken home :And hark, on the ash-boughs ! Never thrush did sing Louder in praise of spring,

When spring is come.

APRIL, 1885

WANTON with long delay the gay spring leaping cometh; The blackthorn starreth now his bough on the eve of May All day in the sweet box-tree the bee for pleasure hummeth The cuckoo sends afloat his note on the air all day.

Now dewy nights again and rain in gentle shower At root of tree and flower have quenched the winter's drouth On high the hot sun smiles, and banks of cloud uptower In bulging heads that crowd for miles the dazzling south.

Gáy Róbin is seen no more: He is gone with the snow, For winter is o'er And Robin will go. In need he was fed, and now he is fled Away to his secret nest. No more will he stand Begging for crumbs, No longer he comes Beseeching our hand And showing his breast At window and door :---Gay Robin is seen no more. Blithe Robin is heard no more: He gave us his song When summer was o'er And winter was long : He sang for his bread and now he is fled Away to his secret nest. And there in the green Early and late Alone to his mate

He pipeth unseen

And swelleth his breast;

For us it is o'er :—

Blithe Robin is heard no more.

SPRING goeth all in white, Crowned with milk-white may : In fleecy flocks of light O'er heaven the white clouds stray :

White butterflies in the air; White daisies prank the ground: The cherry and hoary pear Scatter their snow around.

9

Mv eyes for beauty pine, My soul for Goddës grace : No other care nor hope is mine ; To heaven I turn my face.

One splendour thence is shed From all the stars above : 'Tis namèd when God's name is said, 'Tis Love, 'tis heavenly Love.

And every gentle heart, That burns with true desire, Is lit from eyes that mirror part Of that celestial fire.

10

O Love, my muse, how was't for me Among the best to dare, In thy high courts that bowed the knee With sacrifice and prayer?

(286)

Their mighty offerings at thy shrine Shamed me, who nothing bore Their suits were mockeries of mine, I sued for so much more.

Full many I met that crowned with bay In triumph home returned, And many a master on the way Proud of the prize I scorned.

I wished no garland on my head Nor treasure in my hand; My gift the longing that me led, My prayer thy high command,

My love, my muse; and when I spake Thou mad'st me thine that day, And more than hundred hearts could take Gav'st me to bear away.

ΙI

LOVE on my heart from heaven fell, Soft as the dew on flowers of spring, Sweet as the hidden drops that swell Their honey-throated chalicing.

Now never from him do I part, Hosanna evermore I cry: I taste his savour in my heart, And bid all praise him as do I.

Without him noughtsoever is, Nor was afore, nor e'er shall be : Nor any other joy than his Wish I for mine to comfort me.

I 2

THE hill pines were sighing, O'ercast and chill was the day : A mist in the valley lying Blotted the pleasant May.

But deep in the glen's bosom Summer slept in the fire Of the odorous gorse-blossom And the hot scent of the brier.

A ribald cuckoo clamoured, And out of the copse the stroke Of the iron axe that hammered The iron heart of the oak.

Anon a sound appalling, As a hundred years of pride Crashed, in the silence falling : And the shadowy pine-trees sighed.

13

THE WINDMILL

THE green corn waving in the dale, The ripe grass waving on the hill: I lean across the paddock pale And gaze upon the giddy mill.

Its hurtling sails a mighty sweep Cut thro' the air : with rushing sound Each strikes in fury down the steep, Rattles, and whirls in chase around.

(288)

Beside his sacks the miller stands On high within the open door : A book and pencil in his hands, His grist and meal he reckoneth o'er.

His tireless merry slave the wind Is busy with his work to-day : From whencesoe'er, he comes to grind; He hath a will and knows the way.

He gives the creaking sails a spin, The circling millstones faster flee, The shuddering timbers groan within, And down the shoot the meal runs free.

The miller giveth him no thanks, And doth not much his work o'erlook: He stands beside the sacks, and ranks The figures in his dusty book.

14

WHEN June is come, then all the day I'll sit with my love in the scented hay: And watch the sunshot palaces high, That the white clouds build in the breezy sky

She singeth, and I do make her a song, And read sweet poems the whole day long: Unseen as we lie in our haybuilt home. O life is delight when June is come.

15

THE pinks along my garden walks Have all shot forth their summer stalks, Thronging their buds 'mong tulips hot, And blue forget-me-not.

(289)

Their dazzling snows forth-bursting soon Will lade the idle breath of June : And waken thro' the fragrant night To steal the pale moonlight.

The nightingale at end of May Lingers each year for their display, Till when he sees their blossoms blown, He knows the spring is flown.

June's birth they greet, and when their bloom Dislustres, withering on his tomb, Then summer hath a shortening day; And steps slow to decay.

16

FIRE of heaven, whose starry arrow Pierces the veil of timeless night : Molten spheres, whose tempests narrow

Their floods to a beam of gentle light, To charm with a moon-ray quenched from fire The land of delight, the land of desire !

Smile of love, a flower planted, Sprung in the garden of joy that art : Eyes that shine with a glow enchanted,

Whose spreading fires encircle my heart, And warm with a noon-ray drenched in fire My land of delight, my land of desire !

17

THE idle life I lead Is like a pleasant sleep, Wherein I rest and heed The dreams that by me sweep

t

And still of all my dreams In turn so swiftly past, Each in its fancy seems A nobler than the last.

And every eve I say, Noting my step in bliss, That I have known no day In all my life like this.

18

ANGEL spirits of sleep, White-robed, with silver hair, In your meadows fair, Where the willows weep, And the sad moonbeam On the gliding stream Writes her scattered dream :

Angel spirits of sleep, Dancing to the weir In the hollow roar Of its waters deep; Know ye how men say That ye haunt no more Isle and grassy shore With your moonlit play; That ye dance not here, White-robed spirits of sleep, All the summer night Threading dances light?

(29r)

19

ANNIVERSARY

WHAT is sweeter than new-mown hay, Fresher than winds o'er-sea that blow, Innocent above children's play, Fairer and purer than winter snow, Frolic as are the morns of May?

-If it should be what best I know!

What is richer than thoughts that stray From reading of poems that smoothly flow? What is solemn like the delay Of concords linked in a music slow Dying thro' vaulted aisles away?

-If it should be what best I know !

What gives faith to me when I pray, Setteth my heart with joy aglow, Filleth my song with fancies gay, Maketh the heaven to which I go, The gladness of earth that lasteth for aye? —If it should be what best I know!

But tell me thou—'twas on this day That first we loved five years ago— If 'tis a thing that I can say,

Though it must be what best we know.

20

THE summer trees are tempest-torn, The hills are wrapped in a mantle wide Of folding rain by the mad wind borne Across the country side.

( 292 )

His scourge of fury is lashing down The delicate-ranked golden corn, That never more shall rear its crown And curtsey to the morn. There shews no care in heaven to save

Man's pitiful patience, or provide A season for the season's slave,

Whose trust hath toiled and died. So my proud spirit in me is sad, A wreck of fairer fields to mourn, The ruin of golden hopes she had, My delicate-rankèd corn.

THE birds that sing on autumn eves Among the golden-tinted leaves, Are but the few that true remain Of budding May's rejoicing train.

Like autumn flowers that brave the frost, And make their show when hope is lost, These 'mong the fruits and mellow scent Mourn not the high-sunned summer spent.

Their notes thro' all the jocund spring Were mixed in merry musicking: They sang for love the whole day long, But now their love is all for song.

Now each hath perfected his lay To praise the year that hastes away : They sit on boughs apart, and vie In single songs and rich reply :

And oft as in the copse I hear These anthems of the dying year, The passions, once her peace that stole, With flattering love my heart console.

WHEN my love was away, Full three days were not sped. I caught my fancy astray Thinking if she were dead,

And I alone, alone: It seemed in my misery In all the world was none Ever so lone as I.

I wept; but it did not shame Nor comfort my heart: away I rode as I might, and came To my love at close of day.

The sight of her stilled my fears, My fairest-hearted love : And yet in her eyes were tears : Which when I questioned of,

O now thou art come, she cried, 'Tis fled : but I thought to-day I never could here abide, If thou wert longer away.

23

THE storm is over, the land hushes to rest : The tyrannous wind, its strength fordone, Is fallen back in the west To couch with the sinking sun. The last clouds fare With fainting speed, and their thin streamers fly In melting drifts of the sky. Already the birds in the air

(294)

Appear again; the rooks return to their haunt, And one by one, Proclaiming aloud their care, Renew their peaceful chant. Torn and shattered the trees their branches again reset, They trim afresh the fair Few green and golden leaves withheld from the storm, And awhile will be handsome vet. To-morrow's sun shall caress Their remnant of loveliness : In quiet days for a time Sad Autumn lingering warm Shall humour their faded prime. But ah! the leaves of summer that lie on the ground! What havoc! The laughing timbrels of June, That curtained the birds' cradles, and screened their song, That sheltered the cooing doves at noon, Of airy fans the delicate throng,-Torn and scattered around : Far out afield they lie. In the watery furrows die, In grassy pools of the flood they sink and drown, Green-golden, orange, vermilion, golden and brown, The high year's flaunting crown Shattered and trampled down. The day is done: the tired land looks for night: She prays to the night to keep In peace her nerves of delight: While silver mist upstealeth silently, And the broad cloud-driving moon in the clear sky Lifts o'er the firs her shining shield, And in her tranquil light Sleep falls on forest and field. Sée ! sléep hath fallen : the trees are asleep : The night is come. The land is wrapt in sleep. ( 295 )

24

YE thrilled me once, ye mournful strains, Ye anthems of plaintive woe, My spirit was sad when I was young; Ah sorrowful long-ago! But since I have found the beauty of joy I have done with proud dismay: For howsoe'er man hug his care The best of his art is gay. And yet if voices of fancy's choir Again in mine ear awake Your old lament, 'tis dear to me still, Nor all for memory's sake : 'Tis like the dirge of sorrow dead, Whose tears are wiped away; Or drops of the shower when rain is o'er, That jewel the brightened day.

25

SAY who is this with silvered hair, So pale and worn and thin, Who passeth here, and passeth there, And looketh out and in?

That useth not our garb nor tongue And knoweth things untold : Who teacheth pleasure to the young, And wisdom to the old?

No toil he maketh his by day, No home his own by night; But wheresoe'er he take his way, He killeth our delight.

(296)

Since he is come there's nothing wise Nor fair in man or child, Unless his deep divining eyes Have looked on it and smiled.

Whence came he hither all alone Among our folk to spy? There's nought that we can call our own, Till he shall hap to die.

And I would dig his grave full deep Beneath the churchyard yew,Lest thence his wizard eyes might peep To mark the things we do.

26

CROWN Winter with green, And give him good drink To physic his spleen Or ever he think.

His mouth to the bowl, His feet to the fire ; And let him, good soul, No comfort desire.

So merry he be, I bid him abide : And merry be we This good Yuletide.

27

THE snow lies sprinkled on the beach, And whitens all the marshy lea : The sad gulls wail adown the gale, The day is dark and black the sea.

Shorn of their crests the blighted waves With driven foam the offing fleck : The ebb is low and barely laves The red rust of the giant wreck.

On such a stony, breaking beach My childhood chanced and chose to be: 'Twas here I played, and musing made My friend the melancholy sea.

He from his dim enchanted caves With shuddering roar and onrush wild Fell down in sacrificial waves At feet of his exulting child.

Unto a spirit too light for fear His wrath was mirth, his wail was glee :----My heart is now too fixed to bow Tho' all his tempests howl at me :

For to the gain life's summer saves, My solemn joy's increasing store, The tossing of his mournful waves Makes sweetest music evermore.

28

My spirit kisseth thine, My spirit embraceth thee : I feel thy being twine Her graces over me, ( 298 )

In the life-kindling fold Of God's breath ; where on high, In furthest space untold Like a lost world I lie :

And o'er my dreaming plains Lightens, most pale and fair, A moon that never wanes; Or more, if I compare,

Like what the shepherd sees On late mid-winter dawns, When thro' the branchèd trees,  $\Omega$ 'er the white-frosted lawns,

The huge unclouded sun, Surprising the world whist, Is all uprisen thereon, Golden with melting mist.

29

ARIEL, O,—my angel, my own,— Whither away then art thou flown

Beyond my spirit's dominion? That makest my heart run over with rhyme, Renewing at will my youth for a time,

My servant, my pretty minion.

Now indeed I have cause to mourn, Now thou returnest scorn for scorn :

Leave me not to my folly: For when thou art with me is none so gay As I, and none when thou'rt away

Was ever so melancholy.

30

LAUS DEO

LET praise devote thy work, and skill employ Thy whole mind, and thy heart be lost in joy. Well-doing bringeth pride, this constant thought Humility, that thy best done is nought. Man doeth nothing well, be it great or small, Save to praise God; but that hath saved all: For God requires no more than thou hast done, And takes thy work to bless it for his own.

THE WINNOWERS

BETWIXT two billows of the downs The little hamlet lies, And nothing sees but the bald crowns Of the hills, and the blue skies.

Clustering beneath the long descent And grey slopes of the wold, The red roofs nestle, oversprent With lichen yellow as gold.

We found it in the mid-day sun Basking, what time of year The thrush his singing has begun, Ere the first leaves appear.

High from his load a woodman pitched His faggots on the stack :

Knee-deep in straw the cattle twitched Sweet hay from crib and rack :

And from the barn hard by was borne A steady muffled din,

By which we knew that threshed corn Was winnowing, and went in.

( 301 )

The sunbeams on the motey air Streamed through the open door,
And on the brown arms moving bare, And the grain upon the floor.
One turns the crank, one stoops to feed The hopper, lest it lack,
One in the bushel scoops the seed, One stands to hold the sack.
We watched the good grain rattle down, And the awns fly in the draught;
To see us both so pensive grown The honest labourers laughed :

Merry they were, because the wheat Was clean and plump and good, Pleasant to hand and eye, and meet For market and for food.

It chanced we from the city were, And had not gat us free In spirit from the store and stir Of its immensity :

But here we found ourselves again. Where humble harvests bring After much toil but little grain, 'Tis merry winnowing.

THE AFFLICTION OF RICHARD

Love not too much. But how, When thou hast made me such, And dost thy gifts bestow, How can I love too much?

( 302 )

Though I must fear to lose, And drown my joy in care, With all its thorns I choose The path of love and prayer.

Though thou, I know not why, Didst kill my childish trust, That breach with toil did I Repair, because I must :

And spite of frighting schemes, With which the fiends of Hell Blaspheme thee in my dreams, So far I have hoped well.

But what the heavenly key, What marvel in me wrought Shall quite exculpate thee, I have no shadow of thought.

What am I that complain? The love, from which began My question sad and vain, Justifies thee to man.

SINCE to be loved endures, To love is wise : Earth hath no good but yours, Brave, joyful eyes :

Earth hath no sin but thine, Dull eye of scorn : O'er thee the sun doth pine And angels mourn. ( 303 )

THE GARDEN IN SEPTEMBER

Now thin mists temper the slow-ripening beams Of the September sun : his golden gleans On gaudy flowers shine, that prank the rows Of high-grown hollyhocks, and all tall shows That Autumn flaunteth in his bushy bowers; Where tomtits, hanging from the drooping heads Of giant sunflowers, peck the nutty seeds ; And in the feathery aster bees on wing Seize and set free the honied flowers. Till thousand stars leap with their visiting: While ever across the path mazily flit, Unpiloted in the sun, The dreamy butterflies With dazzling colours powdered and soft glooms, White, black and crimson stripes, and peacock eyes, Or on chance flowers sit. With idle effort plundering one by one The nectaries of deepest-throated blooms.

With gentle flaws the western breeze Into the garden saileth, Scarce here and there stirring the single trees, For his sharpness he vaileth : So long a comrade of the bearded corn, Now from the stubbles whence the shocks are borne, O'er dewy lawns he turns to stray, As mindful of the kisses and soft play Wherewith he enamoured the light-hearted May, Ere he deserted her; Lover of fragrance, and too late repents; Nor more of heavy hyacinth now may drink, Nor spicy pink,

Nor summer's rose, nor garnered lavender, But the few lingering scents Of streaked pea, and gillyflower, and stocks Of courtly purple, and aromatic phlox.

And at all times to hear are drowsy tones Of dizzy flies, and humming drones, With sudden flap of pigeon wings in the sky, Or the wild cry Of thirsty rooks, that scour ascare The distant blue, to watering as they fare With creaking pinions, or—on business bent, If aught their ancient polity displease,— Come gathering to their colony, and there Settling in ragged parliament, Some stormy council hold in the high trees.

So sweet love seemed that April morn, When first we kissed beside the thorn, So strangely sweet, it was not strange We thought that love could never change.

But I can tell—let truth be told— That love will change in growing old; Though day by day is nought to see, So delicate his motions be.

And in the end 'twill come to pass Quite to forget what once he was, Nor even in fancy to recall The pleasure that was all in all.

His little spring, that sweet we found, So deep in summer floods is drowned, I wonder, bathed in joy complete, How love so young could be so sweet.

LARKS

WHAT voice of gladness, hark ! In heaven is ringing ? From the sad fields the lark Is upward winging.

High through the mournful mist that blots our day Their songs betray them soaring in the grey. See them ! Nay, they In sunlight swim ; above the furthest stain Of cloud attain ; their hearts in music rain Upon the plain.

> Sweet birds, far out of sight Your songs of pleasure Dome us with joy as bright As heaven's best azure.

THE PALM WILLOW

SEE, whirling snow sprinkles the starved fields, The birds have stayed to sing;
No covert yet their fairy harbour yields. When cometh Spring?
Ah ! in their tiny throats what songs unborn Are quenched each morn.
The lenten lilies, through the frost that push, Their yellow heads withhold :
The woodland willow stands a lonely bush Of nebulous gold;
There the Spring-goddess cowers in faint attire Of frightened fire.

ASIAN BIRDS

In this May-month, by grace of heaven, things shoot apace. The waiting multitude of fair boughs in the wood, How few days have arrayed their beauty in green shade. What have I seen or heard? it was the yellow bird Sang in the tree: he flew a flame against the blue; Upward he flashed. Again, hark ! 'tis his heavenly strain. Another ! Hush ! Behold, many, like boats of gold, From waving branch to branch their airy bodies launch. What music is like this, where each note is a kiss? The golden willows lift their boughs the sun to sift: Their sprays they droop to screen the sky with veils of green, A floating cage of song, where feathered lovers throng. How the delicious notes come bubbling from their throats ! Full and sweet how they are shed like round pearls from a thread ! The motions of their flight are wishes of delight. (307)

Hearing their song I trace the secret of their grace. Ah, could I this fair time so fashion into rhyme, The poem that I sing would be the voice of spring.

JANUARY

COLD is the winter day, misty and dark : The sunless sky with faded gleams is rent: And patches of thin snow outlying, mark The landscape with a drear disfigurement.

The trees their mournful branches lift aloft: The oak with knotty twigs is full of trust, With bud-thronged bough the cherry in the croft; The chestnut holds her gluey knops upthrust.

No birds sing, but the starling chaps his bill And chatters mockingly; the newborn lambs Within their strawbuilt fold beneath the hill Answer with plaintive cry their bleating dams.

Their voices melt in welcome dreams of spring, Green grass and leafy trees and sunny skies: My fancy decks the woods, the thrushes sing, Meadows are gay, bees hum and scents arise.

And God the Maker doth my heart grow bold To praise for wintry works not understood, Who all the worlds and ages doth behold, Evil and good as one, and all as good.

A ROBIN

FLAME-THROATED robin on the topmost bough Of the leafless oak, what singest thou? Hark ! he telleth how-'Spring is coming now; Spring is coming now. Now ruddy are the elm-tops against the blue sky, The pale larch donneth her jewelry; Red fir and black fir sigh. And I am lamenting the year gone by. The bushes where I nested are all cut down, They are felling the tall trees one by one, And my mate is dead and gone, In the winter she died and left me lone. She lay in the thicket where I fear to go; For when the March-winds after the snow The leaves away did blow. She was not there, and my heart is woe: And sad is my song, when I begin to sing, As I sit in the sunshine this merry spring: Like a withered leaf I cling To the white oak-bough, while the wood doth ring Spring is coming now, the sun again is gay; Each day like a last spring's happy day.'---Thus sang he; then from his spray He saw me listening and flew away.

II

I NEVER shall love the snow again Since Maurice died : With corniced drift it blocked the lane And sheeted in a desolate plain The country side.

( 309 )

Shorter Poems

The trees with silvery rime bedight Their branches bare. By day no sun appeared ; by night The hidden moon shed thievish light In the misty air.

We fed the birds that flew around In flocks to be fed : No shelter in holly or brake they found. The speckled thrush on the frozen ground Lay frozen and dead.

We skated on stream and pond; we cut The crinching snow To Doric temple or Arctic hut; We laughed and sang at nightfall, shut By the fireside glow.

Yet grudged we our keen delights before Maurice should come. We said, In-door or out-of-door We shall love life for a month or more, When he is home.

They brought him home; 'twas two days late For Christmas day: Wrapped in white, in solemn state, A flower in his hand, all still and straight Our Maurice lay.

And two days ere the year outgave We laid him low. The best of us truly were not brave, When we laid Maurice down in his grave Under the snow.

NIGHTINGALES

BEAUTIFUL must be the mountains whence ye come. And bright in the fruitful valleys the streams, wherefrom Ye learn your song : Where are those starry woods? O might I wander there, Among the flowers, which in that heavenly air Bloom the year long! Nay, barren are those mountains and spent the streams : Our song is the voice of desire, that haunts our dreams, A three of the heart. Whose pining visions dim, forbidden hopes profound, No dying cadence nor long sigh can sound. For all our art. Alone, aloud in the raptured ear of men We pour our dark nocturnal secret; and then, As night is withdrawn From these sweet-springing meads and bursting boughs of May. Dream, while the innumerable choir of day Welcome the dawn.

Or a hum of bees in the queenly robes of the lime: Or a descant in pairing time Of warbling birds: or watery bells Of rivulets in the hills · Or whether on blazing downs a high lark's hymn Alone in the azure dim : Or a sough of pines, when the midnight wold Is solitary and cold: Or a lapping river-ripple all day chiding The bow of my wherry gliding Down Thames, between his flowery shores Re-echoing to the oars: Or anthem notes, wherever in arched guires The unheeded music twires, And, centuries by, to the stony shade Flies following and to fade: Or a homely prattle of children's voices gay 'Mong garden joys at play: Or a sundown chaunting of solemn rooks : Or memory of my books, Which hold the words that poets in many a tongue To the irksome world have sung: Or the voice, my happy lover, of thee Now separated from me. A ruby of fire in the burning sleep of my brain Long hid my thought had lain, Forgotten dreams of a thousand days Ingathering to its rays, The light of life in darkness tempering long; Till now a perfect song.

FOUNDER'S DAY. A SECULAR ODE ON THE NINTH JUBILEE OF ETON COLLEGE

CHRIST and his Mother, heavenly maid, Mary, in whose fair name was laid Eton's corner, bless our youth With truth, and purity, mother of truth !

O ye, 'neath breezy skies of June, By silver Thames's lulling tune, In shade of willow or oak, who try The golden gates of poesy;

Or on the tabled sward all day Match your strength in England's play, Scholars of Henry, giving grace To toil and force in game or race;

Exceed the prayer and keep the fame Of him, the sorrowful king, who came Here in his realm a realm to found, Where he might stand for ever crowned.

Or whether with naked bodies flashing Ye plunge in the lashing weir; or dashing The oars of cedar skiffs, ye strain Round the rushes and home again;—

Or what pursuit soe'er it be That makes your mingled presence free, When by the schoolgate 'neath the limes Ye muster waiting the lazy chimes;

( 313 )

Shorter Poems

May Peace, that conquereth sin and death, Temper for you her sword of faith; Crown with honour the loving eyes, And touch with mirth the mouth of the wise.

Here is eternal spring: for you The very stars of heaven are new; And aged Fame again is born, Fresh as a peeping flower of morn.

For you shall Shakespeare's scene unroll, Mozart shall steal your ravished soul, Homer his bardic hymn rehearse, Virgil recite his maiden verse.

Now learn, love, have, do, be the best; Each in one thing excel the rest: Strive; and hold fast this truth of heaven— To him that hath shall more be given.

Slow on your dial the shadows creep, So many hours for food and sleep, So many hours till study tire, So many hours for heart's desire.

These suns and moons shall memory save, Mirrors bright for her magic cave; Wherein may steadfast eyes behold A self that groweth never old.

O in such prime enjoy your lot, And when ye leave regret it not; With wishing gifts in festal state Pass ye the angel-sworded gate.

Then to the world let shine your light, Children in play be lions in fight, And match with red immortal deeds The victory that made ring the meads :

Or by firm wisdom save your land From giddy head and grasping hand : IMPROVE THE BEST; so shall your sons Better what ye have bettered once.

Send them here to the court of grace Bearing your name to fill your place: Ye in their time shall live again The happy dream of Henry's reign:

And on his day your steps be bent Where, saint and king, crowned with content He biddeth a prayer to bless his youth With truth, and purity, mother of truth.

THE north wind came up yesternight With the new year's full moon, And rising as she gained her height, Grew to a tempest soon. Yet found he not on heaven's face A task of cloud to clear; There was no speck that he might chase Off the blue hemisphere, Nor vapour from the land to drive: The frost-bound country held Nought motionable or alive, That 'gainst his wrath rebelled. There scarce was hanging in the wood A shrivelled leaf to reave; ( 315 )

No bud had burst its swathing hood That he could rend or grieve: Only the tall tree-skeletons, Where they were shadowed all, Wavered a little on the stones, And on the white church-wall. Like as an artist in his mood. Who reckons all as nought, So he may quickly paint his nude, Unutterable thought: So Nature in a frenzied hour By day or night will show Dim indications of the power That doometh man to woe. Ah, many have my visions been, And some I know full well: I would that all that I have seen Were fit for speech to tell.-And by the churchyard as I came, It seemed my spirit passed Into a land that hath no name. Grey, melancholy and vast; Where nothing comes : but Memory, The widowed queen of Death, Reigns, and with fixed, sepulchral eye All slumber banisheth. Each grain of writhen dust, that drapes That sickly, staring shore, Its old chaotic change of shapes Remembers evermore. And ghosts of cities long decayed And ruined shrines of Fate Gather the paths, that Time hath made Foolish and desolate.

NORTH WIND IN OCTOBER

In the golden glade the chestnuts are fallen all; From the sered boughs of the oak the acorns fall The beech scatters her ruddy fire; The lime hath stripped to the cold, And standeth naked above her yellow attire: The larch thinneth her spire To lay the ways of the wood with cloth of gold.

Out of the golden-green and white Of the brake the fir-trees stand upright In the forest of flame, and wave aloft To the blue of heaven their blue-green tuftings soft.

But swiftly in shuddering gloom the splendours fail, As the harrying North-wind beareth A cloud of skirmishing hail The grieved woodland to smite : In a hurricane through the trees he teareth, Raking the boughs and the leaves rending, And whistleth to the descending Blows of his icy flail. Gold and snow he mixetn in spite, And whirleth afar ; as away on his winnowing flight He passeth, and all again for awhile is bright.

LOOK! Look! the spring is come : O feel the gentle air, That wanders thro' the boughs to burst The thick buds everywhere! The birds are glad to see The high unclouded sun : Winter is fled away, they sing, The gay time is begun.

Adown the meadows green Let us go dance and play, And look for violets in the lane, And ramble far away To gather primroses, That in the woodland grow, And hunt for oxlips, or if yet The blades of bluebells show :

There the old woodman gruff Hath half the coppice cut, And weaves the hurdles all day long Beside his willow hut. We'll steal on him, and then Startle him, all with glee Singing our song of winter fled And summer soon to be.

A VILLAGER

THERE was no lad handsomer than Willie was The day that he came to father's house : There was none had an eye as soft an' blue As Willie's was, when he came to woo.

To a labouring life though bound thee be, An' I on my father's ground live free, I'll take thee, I said, for thy manly grace, Thy gentle voice an' thy loving face.

'Tis forty years now since we were wed : We are ailing an' grey needs not to be said : But Willie's eye is as blue an' soft As the day when he wooed me in father's croft

Yet changed am I in body an' mind, For Willie to me has ne'er been kind : Merrily drinking an' singing with the men He 'ud come home late six nights o' the se'n.

An' since the children be grown an' gone He 'as shunned the house an' left me lone : An' less an' less he brings me in Of the little he now has strength to win.

The roof lets through the wind an' the wet, An' master won't mend it with us in 's debt : An' all looks every day more worn, An' the best of my gowns be shabby an' torn.

No wonder if words hav' a-grown to blows; That matters not while nobody knows: For love him I shall to the end of life, An' be, as I swore, his own true wife.

THE MONTHS

BASIL AND EDWARD

MAN hath with man on earth no holier bond Than that the Muse weaves with her dreamy thread Nor e'er was such transcendent love more fond Than that which Edward unto Basil led, Wandering alone across the woody shires To hear the living voice of that wide heart, To see the eyes that read the world's desires, And touch the hand that wrote the roving rhyme. Diverse their lots as distant were their homes, And since that early meeting, jealous Time Knitting their loves had held their lives apart.

But now again were these fine lovers met And sat together on a rocky hill Looking upon the vales of Somerset, Where the far sea gleani'd o'er the bosky combes, Satisfying their spirits the livelong day With various mirth and revelation due And delicate intimacy of delight, As there in happy indolence they lay And drank the sun, while round the breezy height Beneath their feet rabbit and listless ewe Nibbled the scented herb and grass at will.

Much talked they at their ease; and at the last Spoke Edward thus, ''Twas on this very hill This time of the year,-but now twelve years are past, That you provoked in verse my younger skill To praise the months against your rival song; And ere the sun had westered ten degrees Our rhyme had brought him thro' the Zodiac. Have you remembered?'-Basil answer'd back, 'Guest of my solace, how could I forget? Years fly as months that seem'd in youth so long. The precious life that, like indifferent gold, Is disregarded in its worth to hold Some jewel of love that God therein would set. It passeth and is gone.'-- 'And yet not all,' Edward replied : 'The passion as I please Of that past day I can to-day recall; And if but you, as I, remember yet Your part thereof, and will again rehearse, For half an hour we may old Time outwit.' And Basil said, 'Alas for my poor verse! What happy memory of it still endures Will thank your love: I have forgotten it. Speak you my stanzas, I will ransom yours. Begin you then as I that day began, And I will follow as your answers ran.'

DECEMBER

BA. I pray thee don thy jerkin of olden time, Bring us good ice, and silver the trees with rime; And I will good cheer, good music and wine bestow, When the Christmas guest comes galloping over the snow.

Thus they in verse alternate sang the year For rabbit shy and listless ewe to hear, Among the grey rocks on the mountain green Beneath the sky in fair and pastoral scene, Like those Sicilian swains, whose doric tongue After two thousand years is ever young,— Sweet the pine's murmur, and, shepherd, sweet thy pipe,— Or that which gentle Virgil, yet unripe, Of Tityrus sang under the spreading beech And gave to rustic clowns immortal speech, By rocky fountain or on flowery mead ( 326 )

Bidding their idle flocks at will to feed, While they, retreated to some bosky glade, Together told their loves, and as they played Sang what sweet thing soe'er the poet feigned :

But these were men when good Victoria reigned Poets themselves, who without shepherd gear Each of his native fancy sang the year.

GIOVANNI DUPRÈ

LAWRENCE AND RICHARD

LAWRENCE

LOOK down the river—against the western sky— The Ponte Santa Trinità—what throng Slowly trails o'er with waving banners high, With foot and horse ! Surely they bear along The spoil of one whom Florence honoureth : And hark ! the drum, the trumpeting dismay, The wail of the triumphal march of death.

RICHARD

'Twill be the funeral of Giovánn Duprè Wending to Santa Croce. Let us go And see what relic of old splendour cheers The dying ritual.

LAWRENCE

They esteem him well

To lay his bones with Michael Angelo. Who might he be?

Richard

He too a sculptor, one Who left a work long to resist the years.

LAWRENCE

You make me question further.

( 327 )

Richard

I can tell

All as we walk. A poor woodcarver's son, Prenticed to cut his father's rude designs (We have it from himself), maker of shrines, In his mean workshop in Siena dreamed; And saw as gods the artists of the earth, And long'd to stand on their immortal shore, And be as they, who in his vision gleam'd, Dowering the world with grace for evermore. So, taxing rest and leisure to one aim, The boy of single will and inbred skill Rose step by step to academic fame.

LAWRENCE

Do I not know him then? His figures fill The tympana o'er Santa Croce's gate; In the museum too, his Cain, that stands A left-handed discobolos . . . . .

Richard

So great

His vogue, that elder art of classic worth Went to the wall to give his statues room ; And last—his country's praise could do no more— He cut the stone that honoured good Cavour.

LAWRENCE

I have seen the things.

Richard

He, finding in his hands

His life-desire possest, fell not in gloom, Nor froth'd in vanity: his Sabbath earn'd He look'd to spend in meditative rest: So laying chisel by, he took a pen To tell his story to his countrymen, And prove (he did it) that the flower of all, Rarest to attain, is in the power of all.

( 328 )

LAWRENCE

Yet nought he ever made, that I have learn'd, In wood or stone deserved, nay not his best, The Greek or Tuscan name for beautiful. 'Twas level with its praise, had force to pull Favour from fashion.

Richard

Vet he made one thing Worthy of the lily city in her spring; For while in vain the forms of beauty he aped, A perfect spirit in himself he shaped; And all his lifetime doing less than well Where he profess'd nor doubted to excel, Now, where he had no scholarship, but drew His art from love, 'twas better than he knew: And when he sat to write, lo! by him stood The heavenly Muse, who smiles on all things good; And for his truth's sake, for his stainless mind, His homely love and faith, she now grew kind, And changed the crown, that from the folk he got, For her green laurel, and he knew it not.

LAWRENCE

Ah! Love of Beauty! This man then mistook Ambition for her?

Richard

In simplicity

Erring he kept his truth ; and in his book The statue of his grace is fair to see.

LAWRENCE

Then buried with their great he well may be.

RICHARD

And number'd with the saints, not among them Who painted saints. Join we his requiem.

FOURTH OF JUNE AT ETON

RICHARD AND GODFREY

Richard

BENEATH the wattled bank the eddies swarm In wandering dimples o'er the shady pool : The same their chase as when I was at school ; The same the music, where in shallows warm The current, sunder'd by the bushy isles, Returns to join the main, and struggles free Above the willows, gurgling thro' the piles : Nothing is changed, and yet how changed are we ! —What can bring Godfrey to the Muses' bower ?

Godfrey

What but brings you? The festal day of the year; To live in boyish memories for an hour; See and be seen: tho' you come seldom here.

RICHARD

Dread of the pang it was, fear to behold What once was all myself, that kept me away.

GODFREY

You miss new pleasures coveting the old.

RICHARD

They need have prudence, who in courage lack; 'Twas that I might go on I looked not back.

GODFREY

Of all our company he, who, we say, Fruited the laughing flower of liberty!

( 330 )

Richard

Ah! had I my desire, so should it be.

GODFREY

Nay, but I know this melancholy mood; 'Twas your poetic fancy when a boy.

Richard

For Fancy cannot live on real food : In youth she will despise familiar joy To dwell in mournful shades ; as they grow real, Then buildeth she of joy her far ideal.

Godfrey

And so perverteth all. This stream to me Sings, and in sunny ripples lingeringly The water saith 'Ah me! where have I lept? Into what garden of life? what banks are these, What secret lawns, what ancient towers and trees? Where the young sons of heav'n, with shouts of play Or low delighted speech, welcome the day, As if the poetry of the earth had slept To wake in ecstasy. O stay me! alas! Stay me, ye happy isles, ere that I pass Without a memory on my sullen course By the black city to the tossing seas!'

Richard

So might this old oak say 'My heart is sere; With greater effort every year I force My stubborn leafage: soon my branch will crack, And I shall fall or perish in the wrack: And here another tree its crown will rear, And see for centuries the boys at play: And 'neath its boughs, on some fine holiday, Old men shall prate as these.' Come see the game.

( 331 )

GODFREY

Yes, if you will. 'Tis all one picture fair.

RICHARD

Made in a mirror, and who looketh there Must see himself. Is not a dream the same? GODFREY

Life is a dream.

RICHARD

And you, who say it, seem Dreaming to speak to a phantom in a dream.

Î

THE SUMMER-HOUSE ON THE MOUND

How well my eyes remember the dim path ! My homing heart no happier playground hath. I need not close my lids but it appears Through the bewilderment of forty years To tempt my feet, my childish feet, between Its leafy walls, beneath its arching green ; Fairer than dream of sleep, than Hope more fair Leading to dreamless sleep her sister Care.

There grew two fellow limes, two rising trees, Shadowing the lawn, the summer haunt of bees, Whose stems, engraved with many a russet scar From the spear-hurlings of our mimic war, Pillar'd the portico to that wide walk, A mossy terrace of the native chalk Fashion'd, that led thro' the dark shades around Straight to the wooden temple on the mound. There live the memories of my early days, There still with childish heart my spirit plays;

Yea, terror-stricken by the fiend despair When she hath fled me, I have found her there; And there 'tis ever noon, and glad suns bring Alternate days of summer and of spring, With childish thought, and childish faces bright, And all unknown save but the hour's delight.

High on the mound the ivied arbour stood, A dome of straw upheld on rustic wood : Hidden in fern the steps of the ascent, Whereby unto the southern front we went, And from the dark plantation climbing free, Over a valley look'd out on the sea.

That sea is ever bright and blue, the sky Serene and blue, and ever white ships lie High on the horizon steadfast in full sail, Or nearer in the roads pass within hail, Of naked brigs and barques that windbound ride At their taut cables heading to the tide.

There many an hour I have sat to watch; nay, now The brazen disk is cold against my brow, And in my sight a circle of the sea Enlarged to swiftness, where the salt waves flee, And ships in stately motion pass so near That what I see is speaking to my ear: I hear the waves dash and the tackle strain, The canvas flap, the rattle of the chain That runs out thro' the hawse, the clank of the winch Winding the rusty cable inch by inch, Till half I wonder if they have no care, Those sailors, that my glass is brought to bear On all their doings, if I vex them not On every petty task of their rough lot Prying and spying, searching every craft From painted truck to gunnel, fore and aft,-(333)

Thro' idle Sundays as I have watch'd them lean Long hours upon the rail, or neath its screen Prone on the deck to lie outstretch'd at length, Sunk in renewal of their wearied strength.

But what a feast of joy to me, if some Fast-sailing frigate to the Channel come Back'd here her topsail, or brought gently up Let from her bow the splashing anchor drop, By faint contrary wind stay'd in her cruise, The Phaethon or dancing Arethuse, Or some immense three-decker of the line, Romantic as the tale of Troy divine; Ere yet our iron age had doom'd to fall The towering freeboard of the wooden wall, And for the engines of a mightier Mars Clipp'd their wide wings, and dock'd their soaring spars The gale that in their tackle sang, the wave That neath their gilded galleries dasht so brave Lost then their merriment, nor look to play With the heavy-hearted monsters of to-day.

One noon in March upon that anchoring ground Came Napier's fleet unto the Baltic bound : Cloudless the sky and calm and blue the sea, As round Saint Margaret's cliff mysteriously, Those murderous queens walking in Sabbath sleep Glided in line upon the windless deep : For in those days was first seen low and black Beside the full-rigg'd mast the strange smoke-stack, And neath their stern revolv'd the twisted fan. Many I knew as soon as I might scan, The heavy Royal George, the Acre bright, The Hogue and Ajax, and could name aright Others that I remember now no more; But chief, her blue flag flying at the fore,

With fighting guns a hundred thirty and one, The Admiral ship The Duke of Wellington, Whereon sail'd George, who in her gig had flown The silken ensign by our sisters sewn. The iron Duke himself,—whose soldier fame To England's proudest ship had given her name, And whose white hairs in this my earliest scene Had scarce more honour'd than accustom'd been,— Was two years since to his last haven past : I had seen his castle-flag to fall half-mast One morn as I sat looking on the sea, When thus all England's grief came first to me, Who hold my childhood favour'd that I knew So well the face that won at Waterloo.

But now 'tis other wars, and other men ;— The year that Napier sail'd, my years were ten— Yea, and new homes and loves my heart hath found A priest has there usurped the ivied mound, The bell that call'd to horse calls now to prayers, And silent nuns tread the familiar stairs. Within the peach-clad walls that old outlaw, The Roman wolf, scratches with privy paw.

O Love, I complain, Complain of thee often, Because thou dost soften My being to pain:

Thou makest me fear The mind that createth, That loves not nor hateth In justice austere; ( 335 )

Who, ere he make one, With millions toyeth, And lightly destroyeth Whate'er is begun.

An' wer't not for thee, My glorious passion, My heart I could fashion To sternness, as he.

But thee, Love, he made Lest man should defy him, Connive and outvie him, And not be afraid :

Nay, thee, Love, he gave His terrors to cover, And turn to a lover His insolent slave.

THE SOUTH WIND

THE south wind rose at dusk of the winter day, The warm breath of the western sea Circling wrapp'd the isle with his cloke of cloud, And it now reach'd even to me, at dusk of the day, And moan'd in the branches aloud : While here and there, in patches of dark space, A star shone forth from its heavenly place, As a spark that is borne in the smoky chase ; And, looking up, there fell on my face— Could it be drops of rain Soft as the wind, that fell on my face ? Gossamers light as threads of the summer dawn, ( 336 )

Suck'd by the sun from midmost calms of the main, From groves of coral islands secretly drawn, O'er half the round of earth to be driven, Now to fall on my face In silky skeins spun from the mists of heaven.

Who art thou, in wind and darkness and soft rain Thyself that robest, that bendest in sighing pines To whisper thy truth? that usest for signs A hurried glimpse of the moon, the glance of a star In the rifted sky? Who art thou, that with thee I Woo and am wooed? That robing thyself in darkness and soft rain Choosest my chosen solitude, Coming so far To tell thy secret again, As a mother her child, in her folding arm Of a winter night by a flickering fire, Telleth the same tale o'er and o'er With gentle voice, and I never tire, So imperceptibly changeth the charm, As Love on buried ecstasy buildeth his tower, —Like as the stem that beareth the flower By trembling is knit to power;-Ah! long ago In thy first rapture I renounced my lot, The vanity, the despondency and the woe, And seeking thee to know Well was 't for me, and evermore I am thine, I know not what.

For me thou seekest ever, me wondering a day In the eternal alternations, me Free for a stolen moment of chance To dream a beautiful dream

In the everlasting dance Of speechless worlds, the unsearchable scheme, To me thou findest the way, Me and whomsoe'er I have found my dream to share Still with thy charm encircling; even to-night To me and my love in darkness and soft rain Under the sighing pines thou comest again, And staying our speech with mystery of delight, Of the kiss that I give a wonder thou makest, And the kiss that I take thou takest.

I CLIMB the mossy bank of the glade : My love awaiteth me in the shade.

She holdeth a book that she never heedeth : In Goddës work her spirit readeth.

She is all to me, and I to her: When we embrace, the stars confer.

O my love, from beyond the sky I am calling thy heart, and who but I?

Fresh as love is the breeze of June, In the dappled shade of the summer noon.

Catullus, throwing his heart away, Gave fewer kisses every day.

Heracleitus, spending his youth In search of wisdom, had less of truth.

Flame of fire was the poet's desire : The thinker found that life was fire.

O my love! my song is done: My kiss hath both their fires in one.

To my love I whisper, and say Knowest thou why I love thee?—Nay: Nay, she saith; O tell me again.—

When in her ear the secret I tell, She smileth with joy incredible—

Ha! she is vain—O nay— Then tell us !—Nay, O nay.

But this is in my heart, That Love is Nature's perfect art, And man hath got his fancy hence, To clothe his thought in forms of sense.

Fair are thy works, O man, and fair Thy dreams of soul in garments rare,

Beautiful past compare, Yea, godlike when thou hast the skill To steal a stir of the heavenly thrill:

But O, have care, have care ! 'Tis envious even to dare : And many a fiend is watching well To flush thy reed with the fire of hell.

9

My delight and thy delight Walking, like two angels white, In the gardens of the night :

My desire and thy desire Twining to a tongue of fire, Leaping live, and laughing higher;

Ζ2

Thro' the everlasting strife In the mystery of life.

Love, from whom the world begun, Hath the secret of the sun.

Love can tell, and love alone, Whence the million stars were strewn, Why each atom knows its own, How, in spite of woe and death, Gay is life, and sweet is breath :

This he taught us, this we knew, Happy in his science true, Hand in hand as we stood Neath the shadows of the wood, Heart to heart as we lay In the dawning of the day.

10

SEPTUAGESIMA

Now all the windows with frost are blinded, As punctual day with greedy smile Lifts like a Cyclops evil-minded His ruddy eyeball over the isle.

In an hour 'tis paled, in an hour ascended A dazzling light in the cloudless grey. Steel is the ice; the snow unblended Is trod to dust on the white highway.

The lambkins frisk; the shepherd is melting Drink for the ewes with a fire of straw: The red flames leap at the wild air pelting Bitterly thro' the leafless shaw.

( 340 )

Around, from many a village steeple The sabbath-bells hum over the snow :

I give a blessing to parson and people Across the fields as away I go.

Over the hills and over the meadows Gay is my way till day be done : Blue as the heaven are all the shadows, And every light is gold in the sun.

ΙI

THE sea keeps not the Sabbath day, llis waves come rolling evermore; His noisy toil grindeth the shore, And all the cliff is drencht with spray.

Here as we sit, my love and I, Under the pine upon the hill, The sadness of the clouded sky, The bitter wind, the gloomy roar, The seamew's melancholy cry With loving fancy suit but ill.

We talk of moons and cooling suns, Of geologic time and tide, The eternal sluggards that abide While our fair love so swiftly runs,

Of nature that doth half consent That man should guess her dreary scheme 'Lest he should live too well content In his fair house of mirth and dream :

Whose labour irks his ageing heart, His heart that wearies of desire, Being so fugitive a part Of what so slowly must expire.

(341)

She in her agelong toil and care Persistent, wearies not nor stays, Mocking alike hope and despair.

-Ah, but she too can mock our praise, Enchanted on her brighter days,

Days, that the thought of grief refuse, Days that are one with human art, Worthy of the Virgilian muse, Fit for the gaiety of Mozart.

I 2

RIDING adown the country lanes One day in spring, Heavy at heart with all the pains Of man's imagining :---

The mist was not yet melted quite Into the sky: The small round sun was dazzling white,

The merry larks sang high :

The grassy northern slopes were laid In sparkling dew, Out of the slow-retreating shade

Turning from sleep anew:

Deep in the sunny vale a burn Ran with the lane,

O'erhung with ivy, moss and fern It laughed in joyful strain :

And primroses shot long and lush Their cluster'd cream; Robin and wren and amorous thrush Carol'd above the stream:

(342)

The stillness of the lenten air Call'd into sound The motions of all life that were In field and farm around :

So fair it was, so sweet and bright, The jocund Spring Awoke in me the old delight Of man's imagining,

Riding adown the country lanes : The larks sang high.— O heart! for all thy griefs and pains Thou shalt be loth to die.

13

PATER FILIO

SENSE with keenest edge unused,

Yet unsteel'd by scathing fire; Lovely feet as yet unbruisèd

On the ways of dark desire ; Sweetest hope that lookest smiling O'er the wilderness defiling !

Why such beauty, to be blighted

By the swarm of foul destruction? Why such innocence delighted,

When sin stalks to thy seduction? All the litanies e'er chaunted Shall not keep thy faith undaunted.

I have pray'd the sainted Morning

To unclasp her hands to hold thee; From resignful Eve's adorning

Stol'n a robe of peace to enfold thee; With all charms of man's contriving Arm'd thee for thy lonely striving.

(343)

Me too once unthinking Nature, —Whence Love's timeless mockery took me,— Fashion'd so divine a creature, Yea, and like a beast forsook me. I forgave, but tell the measure Of her crime in thee, my treasure.

NOVEMBER

THE lonely season in lonely lands, when fied Are half the birds, and mists lie low, and the sun Is rarely seen, nor strayeth far from his bed; The short days pass unwelcomed one by one.

Out by the ricks the mantled engine stands Crestfallen, deserted,-for now all hands Are told to the plough,-and ere it is dawn appear The teams following and crossing far and near, As hour by hour they broaden the brown bands Of the striped fields; and behind them firk and prance The heavy rooks, and daws grey-pated dance : As awhile, surmounting a crest, in sharp outline (A miniature of toil, a gem's design,) They are pictured, horses and men, or now near by Above the lane they shout lifting the share, By the trim hedgerow bloom'd with purple air; Where, under the thorns, dead leaves in huddle lie Packed by the gales of Autumn, and in and out The small wrens glide With a happy note of cheer, And yellow amorets flutter above and about, Gay, familiar in fear.

( 344 )

And now, if the night shall be cold, across the sky Linnets and twites, in small flocks helter-skelter, All the afternoon to the gardens fly, From thistle-pastures hurrying to gain the shelter Of American rhododendron or cherry-laurel : And here and there, near chilly setting of sun, In an isolated tree a congregation Of starlings chatter and chide, Thickset as summer leaves, in garrulous quarrel: Suddenly they hush as one,---The tree top springs,-And off, with a whirr of wings, They fly by the score To the holly-thicket, and there with myriads more Dispute for the roosts; and from the unseen nation A babel of tongues, like running water unceasing, Makes live the wood, the flocking cries increasing, Wrangling discordantly, incessantly, While falls the night on them self-occupied; The long dark night, that lengthens slow, Deepening with Winter to starve grass and tree, And soon to bury in snow The Earth, that, sleeping 'neath her frozen stole, Shall dream a dream crept from the sunless pole Of how her end shall be.

15

WINTER NIGHTFALL

THE day begins to droop,— Its course is done: But nothing tells the place Of the setting sun.

(345)

The hazy darkness deepens, And up the lane You may hear, but cannot see, The homing wain. An engine pants and hums In the farm hard by: Its lowering smoke is lost In the lowering sky. The soaking branches drip, And all night through The dropping will not cease In the avenue. A tall man there in the house Must keep his chair: He knows he will never again Breathe the spring air : His heart is worn with work:

His heart is worn with work He is giddy and sick If he rise to go as far As the nearest rick :

He thinks of his morn of life, His hale, strong years; And braves as he may the night Of darkness and tears.

16

SINCE we loved,—(the earth that shook As we kissed, fresh beauty took)— Love hath been as poets paint, Life as heaven is to a saint;

All my joys my hope excel, All my work hath prosper'd well, All my songs have happy been, O my love, my life, my queen. ( 346 )

17

WHEN Death to either shall come,---I pray it be first to me,---Be happy as ever at home, If so, as I wish, it be.

Possess thy heart, my own; And sing to the child on thy knee, Or read to thyself alone

The songs that I made for thee.

18

WISHES

I WISH'D to sing thy grace, but nought Found upon earth that could compare : Some day, maybe, in heaven, I thought,— If I should win the welcome there,—

There might I make thee many a song: But now it is enough to say I ne'er have done our life the wrong Of wishing for a happier day.

19

A LOVE LYRIC

Why art thou sad, my dearest? What terror is it thou fearest, Braver who art than I The fiend to defy?

Why art thou sad, my dearest? And why in tears appearest, Closer than I that wert At hiding thy hurt?

(347)

Why art thou sad, my dearest, Since now my voice thou hearest? Who with a kiss restore Thy valour of vore.

20

έρωΣ

WHY hast thou nothing in thy face? Thou idol of the human race, Thou tyrant of the human heart, The flower of lovely youth that art; Yea, and that standest in thy youth An image of eternal Truth, With thy exuberant flesh so fair, That only Pheidias might compare, Ere from his chaste marmoreal form Time had decayed the colours warm; _______ds in thy proud dress, Thy starry sheen of nakedness.

Surely thy body is thy mind, For in thy face is nought to find, Only thy soft unchristen'd smile, That shadows neither love nor guile, But shameless will and power immense, In secret sensuous innocence.

O king of joy, what is thy thought? I dream thou knowest it is nought, And wouldst in darkness come, but thou Makest the light where'er thou go. Ah yet no victim of thy grace, None who e'er long'd for thy embrace, Hath cared to look upon thy face.

THE FAIR BRASS

An effigy of brass Trodden by careless feet Of worshippers that pass, Beautiful and complete,

Lieth in the sombre aisle Of this old church unwreckt, And still from modern style Shielded by kind neglect.

It shows a warrior arm'd: Across his iron breast His hands by death are charm'd To leave his sword at rest, Wherewith he led his men O'ersea, and smote to holl The astonisht Saraceir, Nor doubted he did well.

Would wé could teach our sons His trust in face of doom, Or give our bravest ones A comparable tomb :

Such as to look on shrives The heart of half its care; So in each line survives The spirit that made it fair;

So fair the characters, With which the dusty scroll, That tells his title, stirs A requiem for his soul.

(349)

Yet dearer far to me, And brave as he are they, Who fight by land and sea For England at this day;

Whose vile memorials, In mournful marbles gilt, Deface the beauteous walls By growing glory built:

Heirs of our antique shrines, Sires of our future fame, Whose starry honour shines In many a noble name

Across the deathful days, Link'd in the brotherhood That loves our country's praise, And lives for heavenly good.

22

THE DUTEOUS HEART

SPIRIT of grace and beauty, Whom men so much miscall: Maidenly, modest duty, I cry thee fair befall!

Pity for them that shun thee, Sorrow for them that hate, Glory, hath any won thee To dwell in high estate l

But rather thou delightest To walk in humble ways, Keeping thy favour brightest Uncrown'd by foolish praise; ( 350)

In such retirement dwelling, Where, hath the worldling been, He straight returneth telling Of sights that he hath seen,

Of simple men and truest Faces of girl and boy; The souls whom thou enduest With gentle peace and joy.

Fair from my song befall thee, Spirit of beauty and grace ! Men that so much miscall thee Have never seen thy face.

23

THE IDLE FLOWERS

I HAVE sown upon the fields Eyebright and Pimpernel, And Pansy and Poppy-seed Ripen'd and scatter'd well,

And silver Lady-smock The meads with light to fill, Cowslip and Buttercup, Daisy and Daffodil;

King-cup and Fleur-de-lys Upon the marsh to meet With Comfrey, Watermint, Loose-strife and Meadowsweet;

And all along the stream My care hath not forgot Crowfoot's white galaxy And love's Forget-me-not:

(35r)

And where high grasses wave Shall great Moon-daisies blink, With Rattle and Sorrel sharp And Robin's ragged pink.

Thick on the woodland floor Gay company shall be, Primrose and Hyacinth And frail Anemone,

Perennial Strawberry-bloom, Woodsorrel's pencilled veil, Dishevel'd Willow-weed And Orchis purple and pale,

Bugle, that blushes blue, And Woodruff's snowy gem, Proud Foxglove's finger-bells And Spurge with milky stem.

High on the downs so bare, Where thou dost love to climb, Pink Thrift and Milkwort are, Lotus and scented Thyme;

And in the shady lanes Bold Arum's hood of green, Herb Robert, Violet, Starwort and Celandine;

And by the dusty road Bedstraw and Mullein tall, With red Valerian And Toadflax on the wall,

Yarrow and Chicory, That hath for hue no like, Silene and Mallow mild And Agrimony's spike, (352)

Blue-eyed Vcronicas And grey-faced Scabious And downy Silverweed And striped Convolvulus:

Harebell shall haunt the banks, And thro' the hedgerow peer Withwind and Snapdragon And Nightshade's flower of fear.

And where men never sow, Have I my Thistles set, Ragwort and stiff Wormwood And straggling Mignonette, Bugloss and Burdock rank And prickly Teasel high, With Umbels yellow and white, That come to kexes dry.

Pale Chlora shalt thou find, Sun-loving Centaury, Cranesbill and Sinjunwort, Cinquefoil and Betony:

Shock-headed Dandelion, That drank the fire of the sun : Hawkweed and Marigold, Cornflower and Campion.

Let Oak and Ash grow strong, Let Beech her branches spread; Let Grass and Barley throng And waving Wheat for bread;

Be share and sickle bright To labour at all hours; For thee and thy delight I have made the idle flowers.

(353)

But now 'tis Winter, child, And bitter northwinds blow, The ways are wet and wild, The land is laid in snow.

DUNSTONE HILL

A COTTAGE built of native stone Stands on the mountain-moor alone, High from man's dwelling on the wide And solitary mountain-side,

The purple mountain-side, where all The dewy night the meteors fall, And the pale stars musically set To the watery bells of the rivulet,

And all day long, purple and dun, The vast moors stretch beneath the sun, The wide wind passeth fresh and hale, And whirring grouse and blackcock sail.

Ah, heavenly Peace, where dost thou dwell? Surely 'twas here thou hadst a cell, Till flaming Love, wandering astray With fury and blood, drove thee away.—

Far down across the valley deep The town is hid in smoky sleep, At moonless nightfall wakening slow Upon the dark with lurid glow:

Beyond, afar the widening view Merges into the soften'd blue, Cornfield and forest, hill and stream, Fair England in her pastoral dream.

To one who looketh from this hill Life seems asleep, all is so still: Nought passeth save the travelling shade Of clouds on high that float and fade:

Nor since this landscape saw the sun Might other motion o'er it run, Till to man's scheming heart it came To make a steed of steel and flame.

Him may you mark in every vale Moving beneath his fleecy trail, And tell whene'er the motions die Where every town and hamlet lie.

He gives the distance life to-day, Rushing upon his level'd way From man's abode to man's abode, And mocks the Roman's vaunted road,

Which o'er the moor purple and dun Still wanders white beneath the sun, Deserted now of men and lone Save for this cot of native stone.

There ever by the whiten'd wall Standeth a maiden fair and tall, And all day long in vacant dream Watcheth afar the flying steam.

25

SCREAMING TARN

THE saddest place that e'er I saw Is the deep tarn above the inn That crowns the mountain-road, whereby One southward bound his way must win.

а 2

Sunk on the table of the ridge From its deep shores is nought to see: The unresting wind lashes and chills Its shivering ripples ceaselessly. Three sides 'tis banked with stones aslant, And down the fourth the rushes grow, And yellow sedge fringing the edge With lengthen'd image all arow. 'Tis square and black, and on its face When noon is still, the mirror'd sky Looks dark and further from the earth Than when you gaze at it on high. At mid of night, if one be there, -So say the people of the hill-A fearful shriek of death is heard. One sudden scream both loud and shrill, And some have seen on stilly nights, And when the moon was clear and round, Bubbles which to the surface swam And burst as if they held the sound,----'Twas in the days ere hapless Charles Losing his crown had lost his head, This tale is told of him who kept The inn upon the watershed: He was a lowbred ruin'd man Whom lawless times set free from fear: One evening to his house there rode A young and gentle cavalier. With curling hair and linen fair And jewel-hilted sword he went ; The horse he rode he had ridden far. And he was with his journey spent. (356)

He asked a lodging for the night, His valise from his steed unbound, He let none bear it but himself And set it by him on the ground. 'Here's gold or jewels,' thought the host, 'That's carrying south to find the king.' He chattered many a loyal word, And scraps of royal airs gan sing. His guest thereat grew more at ease And o'er his wine he gave a toast, But little ate, and to his room Carried his sack behind the host. 'Now rest you well,' the host he said, But of his wish the word fell wide; Nor did he now forget his son Who fell in fight by Cromwell's side. Revenge and poverty have brought Full gentler heart than his to crime; And he was one by nature rude, Born to foul deeds at any time. With unshod feet at dead of night In stealth he to the guest-room crept, Lantern and dagger in his hand, And stabbed his victim while he slept. But as he struck a scream there came, A fearful scream so loud and shrill : He whelm'd the face with pillows o'er, And lean'd till all had long been still. Then to the face the flame he held To see there should no life remain :--When lo! his brutal heart was quell'd: 'Twas a fair woman he had slain.

The tan upon her face was paint, The manly hair was torn away, Soft was the breast that he had pierced; Beautiful in her death she lay.

His was no heart to faint at crime, Tho' half he wished the deed undone.He pulled the valise from the bed To find what booty he had won.

He cut the straps, and pushed within -His murderous fingers to their theft.

A deathly sweat came o'er his brow, He had no sense nor meaning left.

He touched not gold, it was not cold, It was not hard, it felt like flesh.

He drew out by the curling hair A young man's head, and murder'd fresh;

A young man's head, cut by the neck. But what was dreader still to see,

Her whom he had slain he saw again, The twain were like as like can be.

Brother and sister if they were, Both in one shroud they now were wound.— Across his back and down the stair, Out of the house without a sound.

He made his way unto the tarn, The night was dark and still and dank; The ripple chuckling neath the boat Laughed as he drew it to the bank.

Upon the bottom of the boat He laid his burden flat and low, And on them laid the square sandstones That round about the margin go.

(358)

Stone upon stone he weighed them down, Until the boat would hold no more;The freeboard now was scarce an inch: He stripp'd his clothes and push'd from shore.

All naked to the middle pool He swam behind in the dark night; And there he let the water in And sank his terror out of sight.

He swam ashore, and donn'd his dress, And scraped his bloody fingers clean; Ran home and on his victim's steed Mounted, and never more was seen.

But to a comrade ere he died He told his story guess'd of none: So from his lips the crime returned To haunt the spot where it was done.

THE ISLE OF ACHILLES

(FROM THE GREEK)

Τὸν φίλτατόν σοι παίδ' ἐμοί τ', ᾿Αχιλλέα ὄψει δόμους ναίοντα νησιωτικοὺς Λευκὴν κατ' ἀκτὴν ἐντὸς Εὐξείνου πόρου. Eur. And. 1250=

VOYAGING northwards by the western strand Of the Euxine sea we came to where the land Sinks low in salt morass and wooded plain : Here mighty Ister pushes to the main, Forking his turbid flood in channels three To plough the sands wherewith he chokes the sea.

(359:)

Against his middle arm, not many a mile In the offing of black water is the isle Named of Achilles, or as Leukê known, Which tender Thetis, counselling alone With her wise sire beneath the ocean-wave Unto her child's departed spirit gave, Where he might still his love and fame enjoy, Through the vain Danaan cause fordone at Troy. Thither Achilles passed, and long fulfill'd His earthly lot, as the high gods had will'd, Far from the rivalries of men, from strife, From arms, from woman's love and toil of life. Now of his lone abode I will unfold What there I saw, or was by others told.

There is in truth a temple on the isle; Therein a wooden statue of rude style And workmanship antique with helm of lead: Else all is desert, uninhabited; Only a few goats browse the wind-swept rocks, And oft the stragglers of their starving flocks Are caught and sacrificed by whomsoe'er, Whoever of chance or purpose hither fare: About the fence lie strewn their bleaching bones.

But in the temple jewels and precious stones, Upheapt with golden rings and vials lie, Thankofferings to Achilles, and thereby, Written or scratch'd upon the walls in view, Inscriptions, with the givers' names thereto, Some in Romaic character, some Greek, As each man in the tongue that he might speak Wrote verse of praise, or prayer for good to come, To Achilles most, but to Patroclus some; For those who strongly would Achilles move Approach him by the pathway of his love,

Thousands of birds frequent the sheltering shrine, The dippers and the swimmers of the brine, Sea-mew and gull and diving cormorant, Fishers that on the high cliff make their haunt Sheer inaccessible, and sun themselves Huddled arow upon the narrow shelves :---And surely no like wonder e'er hath been As that such birds should keep the temple clean; But thus they do: at earliest dawn of day They flock to sea and in the waters play, And when they well have wet their plumage light, Back to the sanctuary they take flight Splashing the walls and columns with fresh brine, Till all the stone doth fairly drip and shine, When off again they skim asea for more And soon returning sprinkle steps and floor, And sweep all cleanly with their wide-spread wings.

From other men I have learnt further things. If any of free purpose, thus they tell, Sail'd hither to consult the oracle,-For oracle there was, - they sacrificed Such victims as they brought, if such sufficed, And some they slew, some to the god set free: But they who driven from their course at sea Chanced on the isle, took of the goats thereon And pray'd Achilles to accept his own. Then made they a gift, and when they had offer'd once, If to their question there was no response, They added to the gift and asked again; Yea twice and more, until the god should deign Answer to give, their offering they renew'd; Whereby great riches to the shrine ensued. And when both sacrifice and gifts were made They worship'd at the shrine, and as they pray'd

Sailors aver that often hath been seen A man like to a god, of warrior mien. A beauteous form of figure swift and strong : Down on his shoulders his light hair hung long And his full armour was enchast with gold : While some, who with their eyes might nought behold, Say that with music strange the air was stir'd; And some there are, who have both seen and heard : And if a man wish to be favour'd more, He need but spend one night upon the shore; To him in sleep Achilles will appear And lead him to his tent, and with good cheer Show him all friendliness that men desire; Patroclus pours the wine, and he his lyre Takes from the pole and plays the strains thereon Which Cheiron taught him first on Pelion.

These things I tell as they were told to me, Nor do I question but it well may be: For sure I am that, if man ever was, Achilles was a hero, both because Of his high birth and beauty, his country's call, His valour of soul, his early death withal, For Homer's praise, the crown of human art; And that above all praise he had at heart A gentler passion in her sovran sway, And when his love died threw his life away.

REGINA CARA

JUBILEE-SONG, FOR MUSIC, 1897

HARK! The world is full of thy praise, England's Queen of many days; Who, knowing how to rule the free, Hast given a crown to monarchy.

Honour, Truth and growing Peace Follow Britannia's wide increase, And Nature yield her strength unknown To the wisdom born beneath thy throne !

In wisdom and love firm is thy fame: Enemies bow to revere thy name: The world shall never tire to tell Praise of the queen that reigned well.

O FELIX ANIMA, DOMINA PRAECLARA, Amore semper coronabere Regina cara.

RECOLLECTIONS OF SOLITUDE

AN ELEGY

ENDED are many days, and now but few Remain; since therefore it is happy and true That memoried joys keep ever their delight, Like steadfast stars in the blue vault of night, While hours of pain (among those heavenly spheres Like falling meteors, the martyr's tears) Dart their long trails at random, and anon, Ere we exclaim, pass, and for aye are gone; Therefore my heedy thought will oft restore The long light-hearted days that are no more, Save where in her memorial crypt they shine Spangling the silent past with joy divine.

But why in dream of this enchanted mood Should all my boyhood seem a solitude ? Good reason know I, when I wander there, In that transmuted scene, why all is fair ; The woods as when in holiday of spring Million buds burst, and flowers are blossoming ; The meadows deep in grass, the fields unshorn In beauty of the multitudinous corn, Where the strait alleys hide me, wall'd between High bloomy stalks and rustling banners green ; The gardens, too, in dazzling hues full-blown, With wafted scent and blazing petals strewn ; The orchards reddening thro' the patient hours, While idle autumn in his mossy bowers

Inviteth meditation to endear The sanctuaries of the mellowing year; And every spot wherein I loved to stray Hath borrowed radiance of eternal day: But why am I ever alone, alone? Here in the corner of a field my throne, Now in the branching chair of some tall tree Drinking the gale in bird-like liberty; Or to the seashore wandered in the sun To watch the fateful waves break one by one ; Or if on basking downs supine I lie Bathing my spirit in blue calms of the sky; Or to the river bank am stolen by night Hearkening unto the moonlit ripple bright That warbles o'er the shallows of smooth stone : Why should my memory find me all alone, When I had such companions every day Jocund and dear? 'Twixt glimpses of their play 'Tis a vast solitude, wherein I see Only myself and what I came to be.

Yet never think, dear spirits, if now ye may Remember aught of that brief earthly day, Ere ye the mournful Stygian river crost, From our familiar home too early lost,— O never think that I your tears forget, Or that I loved not well, or love not yet.

Nor ye who held my heart in passion's chain,— As kings and queens succeed in glorious reign— When, as a man, I made you to outvie God's work, and, as a god, then set you by Among the sainted throng in holiest shrine Of mythic creed and poetry divine; True was my faith, and still your loves endure, The jewels of my fancy, bright and pure.

Nor only in fair places do I see The picture fair now it has ceased to be: For fate once led me, and myself some days Did I devote, to dull laborious ways, By soaring thought detained to tread full low,— Yea might I say unbeauteous paths of woe And dreary abodes, had not my youthful sprite Hallow'd each nook with legends of delight.

Ah! o'er that smoky town who looketh now By winter sunset from the dark hill-brow, Under the dying trees exultantly Nursing the sting of human tragedy? Or in that little room upstair'd so high, Where London's roofs in thickest huddle lie, Who now returns at evening to entice To his fireside the joys of Paradise? Once sacred was that hearth, and bright the air; The flame of man's redemption flickered there, In worship of those spirits, whose deathless fames Have thrilled the stars of heaven to hear their names They that excell'd in wisdom to create Beauty, with mortal passion conquering fate; And, mid the sovran powers of elder time, The loveliness of music and new rhyme, The masters young that first enthralled me; Of whom if I should name, whom then but thee, Sweet Shelley, or the boy whose book was found Thrust in thy bosom on thy body drowned?

O mighty Muse, wooer of virgin thought, Beside thy charm all else counteth as nought; The revelation of thy smile doth make Him whom thou lovest reckless for thy sake; Earthborn of suffering, that knowest well To call thine own, and with enamouring spell

( 369 )

Feedest the stolen powers of godlike youth On dear imagination's only truth, Building with song a temple of desire ; And with the yearning music of thy quire, In nuptial sacrament of thought and sense Hallowest for toil the hours of indolence : Thou in thy melancholic beauty drest, Subduest ill to serve thy fair behest, With tragic tears, and sevenfold purified Silver of mirth; and with extremest pride, With secret doctrine and unfathomed lore Remainest yet a child for evermore, The only enchantress of the earth that art To cheer his day and staunch man's bleeding heart.

O heavenly Muse, for heavenly thee we call Who in the fire of love refinest all. Accurst is he who heark'neth not thy voice; But happy he who, numbered of thy choice, Walketh aloof from nature's clouded plan : For all God's world is but the thought of man; Wherein hast thou re-formed a world apart, The mutual mirror of his better heart. There is no foulness, misery, nor sin, But he who loves finds his desire therein, And there with thee in lonely commerce lives : Nay, all that nature gave or fortune gives, Joys that his spirit is most jealous of, His only-embraced and best-deserving love, Who walketh in the noon of heavenly praise, The troubled godhead of his children's gaze, Wear thine eternity, and are loved best By thee transfigured and in thee possest; Who madest beauty, and from thy boundless store Of beauty shalt create for evermore.

GAV Marigold is frolic, She laughs till summer is done; She hears the Grillie chirping All day i' the blazing sun.

But when the pale moon rises, She fain her face would hide; For the high Queen of sorrows Disdains her empty pride.

Fair Primrose haunts the shadow With children of the Spring, Till in the bloomy woodland The nightingale will sing.

And when he lauds the May-night And spirits throng the grove, The moon shines thro' the branches And floods her heart with love.

MATRES DOLOROSAE

YE Spartan mothers, gentle ones, Of lion-hearted, loving sons, Fal'n, the flower of English youth, To a barbarous foe in a land uncouth :---

O what a delicate sacrifice ! Unequal the stake and costly the price As when the queen of Love deplor'd Her darling by the wild-beast gor'd.

They rode to war as if to the hunt, But ye at home, ye bore the brunt, Bore the siege of torturing fears, Fed your hope on the bread of tears.

Proud and spotless warriors they With love or sword to lead the way; For ye had cradled heart and hand, The commander hearken'd to your command.

Ah, weeping mothers, now all is o'er, Ye know your honour and mourn no more : Nor ask ye a name in England's story, Who gave your dearest for her glory.

A VIGNETTE

Among the meadows lightly going, With worship and joy my heart o'erflowing,

Far from town and toil of living, To a holy day my spirit giving, ...

Thou tender flower, I kneel beside thee Wondering why God so beautified thee.---( 372 )

An answering thought within me springeth,A bloom of the mind her vision bringeth.

Between the dim hill's distant azure And flowery foreground of sparkling pleasure

I see the company of figures sainted, For whom the picture of earth was painted.

Those robèd seërs who made man's story The crown of Nature, Her cause his glory.

They walk in the city which they have builded, The city of God from evil shielded :

To them for canopy the vault of heaven, The flowery earth for carpet is given;

Whereon I wander not unknowing, With worship and joy my heart o'erflowing.

THOU dimpled Millicent, of merry guesses, Strong-limb'd and tall, tossing thy wayward tresses, What mystery of the heart can so surprise The mirth and music of thy brimming eyes?

Pale-brow, thou knowest not and diest to learn The mortal secret that doth in thee burn; With look imploring 'If you love me, tell, What is it in me that you love so well?'

And suddenly thou stakest all thy charms, And leapest on me; and in thy circling arms When almost stifled with their wild embrace, I feel thy hot tears sheltering on my face.

VIVAMUS

WHEN thou didst give thy love to me, Asking no more of gods or men
I vow'd I would contented be, If Fate should grant us summers ten.
But now that twice the term is sped, And ever young my heart and gay,

To bid thee happily good-bye I have no hope that I can see,
No way that I shall bravely die, Unless I give my life for thee.

MELANCHOLIA

THE sickness of desire, that in dark days Looks on the imagination of despair, Forgetteth man, and stinteth God his praise; Nor but in sleep findeth a cure for care.

Incertainty that once gave scope to dream Of laughing enterprise and glory untold, Is now a blackness that no stars redeem, A wall of terror in a night of cold.

Fool! thou that hast impossibly desired And now impatiently despairest, see How nought is changed : Joy's wisdom is attired Splendid for others' eyes if not for thee :

Not love or beauty or youth from earth is fled: If they delite thee not, 'tis thou art dead.

TO THE PRESIDENT OF MAGDALEN COLLEGE, OXFORD

SINCE now from woodland mist and flooded clay I am fled beside the steep Devonian shore, Nor stand for welcome at your gothic door, 'Neath the fair tower of Magdalen and May, Such tribute, Warren, as fond poets pay For generous esteem, I write, not more Enhearten'd than my need is, reckoning o'cr My life-long wanderings on the heavenly way :

TO JOSEPH JOACHIM

BELOV'D of all to whom that Muse is dear Who hid her spirit of rapture from the Greek, Whereby our art excelleth the antique, Perfecting formal beauty to the ear; Thou that hast been in England many a year The interpreter who left us nought to seek, Making Beethoven's inmost passion speak, Bringing the soul of great Sebastian near

·(·377)

Their music liveth ever, and 'tis just That thou, good Joachim, so high thy skill, Rank (as thou shalt upon the heavenly hill) Laurel'd with them, for thy ennobling trust Remember'd when thy loving hand is still And every ear that heard thee stopt with dust.

TO THOS. FLOYD

How fares it, friend, since I by Fate annoy'd Left the old home in need of livelier play For body and mind? How fare, this many a day, The stubborn thews and ageless heart of Floyd? If not too well with country sport employ'd, Visit my flock, the breezy hill that they Choose for their fold; and see, for thence you may, From rising walls all roofless yet and void,

The lovely city, thronging tower and spire, The mind of the wide landscape, dreaming deep, Grey-silvery in the vale ; a shrine where keep Memorial hopes their pale celestial fire : Like man's immortal conscience of desire, The spirit that watcheth in me ev'n in my sleep.

LA GLOIRE DE VOLTAIRE

A DIALOGUE IN VERSE.

A.

Je donnerais pour revivre à vingt ans L'or de Rothschild, la gloire de Voltaire. I like that : Béranger in his printems, Voltaire and Rothschild : what three graces there Foot it together ! But of old Voltaire, I'd ask what Béranger found so sublime In that man's glory to adorn his rhyme. Was it mere fame ?

В.

Nay: for as wide a fame Was won by the gold-garnering millionaire, Who in the poet's verse might read his name And what is that ? when so much froth and scum Float down the stream of Time (as Bacon saith), What is that for deliverance from the death ? Could any sober man be proud to hold A lease of common talk, or die consoled For thinking that on lips of fools to come He'll live with Pontius Pilate and Tom Thumb ? That were more like eternal punishment, The true fool's Paradise by all consent. Béranger thought to set a crown on merit.

А.

Man's merit ! and to crown it in Voltaire ? The modest eye, the gentle, fearless heart, The mouth of peace and truth, the angelic spirit ! Why Arouet was soufflé with the leaven,

(379)

Of which the little flock was bid beware : His very ambition was to play a part ; Indifferent whether he did wrong or right, So he won credit ; eager to deny A lie that failed, by adding lie to lie ; Repaying evil unto seven-times-seven ; A fount of slander, flattery and spite ; Vain, irritable ; true but to his face Of mockery and mischievous grimace, A monkey of the schools, the saints' despair !

В.

Yet for his voice half Europe stood at pause To hear, and when he spoke rang with applause.

А.

Granted he was a wonder of his kind. There is a devilish mockery in things Which only a born devil can enjoy. True banter is of melancholy mind, Akin to madness; thus must Shakespeare toy With Hamlet's reason, ere his fine art dare Push his relentless humour to the quick; And so his mortal thrusts pierce not the skin. But for the superficial bickerings That poison life and never seem to prick, The reasonable educated grin. Truly no wag is equal to Voltaire; His never-dying ripple, wide and light, Has nigh the force of Nature : to compare, 'Tis like the ocean when the sky is bright, And the cold north-wind tickles with surprise The briny levels of the infinite sea. -Shall we conclude his merit was his wit, His magic art and versatility?

в.

And think of those foredoom'd in Dante's pit, Who, sunk at bottom of the loathly slough, Made the black mud up-bubble with their sighs; And all because they were unkind to Mirth, And went with smoky heart and gloomy brow The while they lived upon the pleasant earth In the sweet air that rallies to the sun, And ne'er so much as smiled or gave God thanks: Surely a sparkle of the Frenchman's fun Had rescued all their souls.

А.

I think I see The Deity who in this Heaven abides, Le bon Dieu, holding both his aching sides, With radiant face of Pan, ruddy and hairy: Give him his famous whistles and goat-shanks, And then present him to Alighieri.

в.

Nay, 'twixt the Frenchman and the Florentine I ask no truce, grave Dante weaving well His dark-eyed thought into a song divine, Drawing high poetry from heaven and hell— And him who lightly mockt at all in turn.

A

It follow'd from his mundane thought of art That he contemn'd religion : his concern Was comfort, taste, and wit : he had no heart For man's attempt to build and beautify His home in Nature ; so he set all by That wisdom had evolved with purpose kind ;

( 381 )

Stamped it as folly, or as fraud attacked; Never discerning how his callow zest Was impiously defiling his own nest; Whereas the least philosophy may find The truths are the ideas; the sole fact Is the long story of man's growing mind.

В.

Upon your thistle now I see my fig— Béranger thought of Voltaire as a seer, A latter-day John Baptist in a wig; A herald of that furious gospel-storm Of words and blood, that made the nations fear; When sickening France adulterously sinn'd With Virtue, and went mad conceiving wind. He ranks him with those captains of reform, Luther and Calvin; who, whate'er they taught, Led folk from superstition to free thought.

А.

They did. But whence or whither led Voltaire? The steward with fifty talents given in charge, Who spent them on himself, and liv'd at large; His only virtue that he did not hide The pounds, but squander'd them to serve his pride; His praise that, cunning in his generation, He of the heavenly treasure did not spare To win himself an earthly habitation.

в.

Deny him not this laurel, nor to France The apostolate of modern tolerance : Their Theseus he, who slew the Minotaur, The Dragon Persecution, in which war He tipp'd the shafts that made the devil bleed;

( 382 )

And won a victory that hath overcome Many misdoings in a well-done deed; And more, I think, the mind of Christ revealing, Yea, more of common-sense and human feeling Than all the Creeds and Bulls of Christendom.

A.

Yet was he only one of them that slew: The fiend had taken a deadly wound from Bayle; And did he 'roar to see his kingdom fail' 'Neath Robespierre, or raise his head anew? Nay, Voltaire's teaching never cured the heart: The lack of human feeling blots his art. When most his phrase with indignation burns, Still to the gallery his face he turns.

в.

You bear him hard. Men are of common stuff, Each hath some fault, and he had faults enough: But of all slanderers that ever were A virtuous critic is the most unfair. In greatness ever is some good to see; And what is character, unless it be The colour of persistent qualities, That, like a ground in painting, balances All hues and forms, combining with one tone Whatever lights or shades are on it thrown? Now Voltaire had of Nature a rich ground, Two virtues rarely in conjunction found : Industry, which no pedant could excel, He matched with gaiety inexhaustible; And with heroic courage held these fast, As sailors nail their colours to the mast, With ruling excellence atoning all. Though, for the rest, he still for praise may call;

( 383 )

Prudent to gain, as generous to share Le superflu, chose si nécessaire; To most a rare companion above scorn, To not a few a kind, devoted friend Through his long battling life, which in the end He strove with good works richly to adorn. I have admired, and why should I abuse A man who can so long and well amuse?

Λ.

To some Parisian art there's this objection, 'Tis mediocrity pushed to perfection.

в.

'Judge not,' say I, 'and ye shall not be judged !'

А.

Let me say, 'praise men, if ye would be praised :' Let your unwholesome flattery flow ungrudged, And with ungrudging measure shall men pour Their stifling homage back till ye be crazed, And sane men humour you as fools past cure. But these wise maxims deal not with the dead, 'Tis by example that the young are led, And judgement owes its kindness but to them; Nor will I praise, call you me hard or nice, One that degraded art, and varnished vice. They that praise ill thereby themselves condemn.

В.

Béranger could not praise.

А.

Few are who can;

Not he: if ever he assay'd to impart A title loftier than his own renown,

( 384 )

Native irreverence defied his art, His fingers soil'd the lustre of his crown. Here he adored what he was envious of, The vogue and dazzling fashion of the man. But man's true praise, the poet's praise, is love

В.

And that, perhaps, was hardly his affair ... Pray, now, what set you talking of Voltaire?

А.

This only, that in weeding out my shelves, In fatherly regard for babes upgrown, Until they learn to garden for themselves, Much as I like to keep my sets entire, When I came out to you I had just thrown Three of his precious works behind the fire.

Of pleasurable ways, to find Severe perfection.

6

For Nature did not idly spend Pleasure: she ruled it should attend On every act that doth amend

Our life's condition :

'Tis therefore not well-being's end, But its fruition.

7

Beasts that inherited delight In what promoted health or might, Survived their cousins in the fight :

If some—like Adam—

Prefer'd the wrong tree to the right, The devil had 'em.

8

So when man's Reason took the reins, She found that she was saved her pains; She had but to approve the gains Of agelong inscience, And spin it fresh into her brains As moral conscience.

But Instinct in the beasts that live Is of three kinds; (Nature did give To man three shakings in her sieve)— The first is Racial, The second Self-preservative, The third is Social.

ιo

Without the first no race could be, So 'tis the strongest of the three ; Nay, of such forceful tyranny

'Tis hard to attune it, Because 'twas never made to agree

To serve the unit :

Art will not picture it, its name In common talk is utter shame : And yet hath Reason learn'd to tame Its conflagration

Into a sacramental flame

Of consecration.

Those hundred thousand years, ah me! Of budding soul! What slow degree, With aim so dim, so true! We see,

Now that we know them,

Our humble cave-folk ancestry,

How much we owe them :

THE PORTRAIT OF A GRANDFATHER

WITH mild eyes agaze, and lips ready to speak, Whereon the yearning of love, the warning of wisdom plays, One portrait ever charms me and teaches me when I seek :

It is of him whom I, remembering my young days, Imagine fathering my father; when he, in sonship afore, Liv'd honouring and obeying the eyes now pictur'd agaze,

The lips ready to speak, that promise but speak no more.

O high parental claim, that were not but for the knowing,

O fateful bond of duty, O more than body that bore,

The smile that guides me to right, the gaze that follows my going,

How had I stray'd without thee ! and yet how few will seek The spirit-hands, that heaven, in tender-free bestowing,

Holds to her children, to guide the wandering and aid the weak.

And Thee ! ah what of thee, thou lover of men? if truly A painter had stell'd thee there, with thy lips ready to speak,

In all-fathering passion to souls enchanted newly,

-Tenderer call than of sire to son, or of lover to maiden,-Ever ready to speak to us, if we will hearken duly,

'Come, O come unto me, ye weary and heavy-laden !'

AN INVITATION TO THE OXFORD PAGEANT, JULY 1907

FAIR lady of learning, playfellow of spring; Who to thy towery hospice in the vale
Invitest all, with queenly claim to bring
Scholars from every land within thy pale;
If aught our pageantry may now avail
To paint thine antique story to the eye,
Inspire the scene, and bid thy herald cry
Welcome to all, and to all comers hail !

Come hither, then he crieth, and hail to all. Bow each his heart a pilgrim at her shrine, Whatever chance hath led you to my call, Ye that love pomp, and ye that seek a sign, (392)

Or on the low earth look for things divine; Nor ye, whom reverend Camus near-allied, Writes in the roll of his ennobled pride, Refrain your praise and love to mix with mine.

Praise her, the mother of celestial moods, Who o'er the saints' inviolate array Hath starr'd her robe of fair beatitudes With jewels worn by Hellas, on the day She grew from girlhood into wisdom gay; And hath laid by her crozier, evermore With both hands gathering to enrich her store, And make her courts with music ring alway.

Love her, for that the world is in her heart, Man's rude antiquity and doubtful goal, The heaven-enthralling luxury of art, The burden'd pleading of his clay-bound soul, The mutual office of delight and dole, The merry laugh of youth, the joy of life Older than thought, and the unamending strife 'Twixt liberty and politic control.

There is none holier, not the lilied town By Arno, whither the spirit of Athens fled, Escap't from Hades to a less renown, Yet joyful to be risen from the dead; Nor she whose wide imperious arms were spread To spoil mankind, until the avenger came In darkening storm, and left a ruin'd name, A triple crown upon a vanquish't head.

What love in myriad hearts in every clime The vision of her beauty calls to pray'r: Where at his feet Himâlaya sublime

Holds up aslope the Arabian floods, or where

(391)

Patriarchal Nile rears at his watery stair; In the broad islands of the Antipodes, By Esperanza, or in the coral seas Where Buddha's vain pagodas throng the air;

Or where the chivalry of Nipon smote The wily Muscovite, intent to creep Around the world with half his pride afloat, And sent his battle to the soundless deep; Or with our pilgrim-kin, and them that reap The prairie-corn beyond cold Labrador To California and the Alaskan shore, Her exiled sons their pious memory keep:

Bright memories of young poetic pleasure In free companionship, the loving stress Of all life-beauty lull'd in studious leisure, When every Muse was jocund with excess Of fine delight and tremulous happiness; The breath of an indolent unbridled June, When delicate thought fell from the dreamy moon: But now strange care, sorrow, and grief oppress.

Ah I fewer tears shall be,—'tis thus they dream,— Ah, fewer, softer tears, when we lie low : On younger brows shall brighter laurel gleam : Lovelier and earlier shall the rosebuds blow.'

For in this hope she nurs'd them, and to know That Truth, while men regard a tetter'd page, Leaps on the mountains, and from age to age

Reveals the dayspring's inexhausted glow.

Yet all their joy is mingled with regret:

As the lone scholar on a neighbouring height, Brooding disconsolate with eyelids wet

Ere o'er the unkind world he took his flight,

( 392 )

Look'd down upon her festal lamps at night, And while the far call of her warning bell Reach't to his heart, sang us his fond farewell, Beneath the stars thinking of lost delight;

'Farewell! for whether we be young or old, Thou dost remain, but we shall pass away: Time shall against himself thy house uphold, And build thy sanctuary from decay; Children unborn shall be thy pride and stay. May Earth protect thee, and thy sons be true; And God with heavenly food thy life renew, Thy pleasure and thy grace from day to day.'

IN MEMORY OF THE OLD-ETONIANS WHOSE LIVES WERE LOST IN THE S. AFRICAN WAR

An ode set to music by Sir Hubert Parry and performed when K. Edward VII inaugurated the Memorial Hall at Eton College

I

RESOUND! Resound! To jubilant music ring! Your birthday trumpets sound the alarm of strenuous days. Ye new-built walls, awake! and welcome England's King With a high GLORY-TO-GOD, and holy cheer of praise. Awake to fairest hope of fames unknown, unseen,

When ye-too silver and solemn with age shall be: For all that is fair upon earth is reared with tend'rest teen, As the burden'd years to memory flee.

Lament, O Muse of the Thames, in pride lament again, With low melodious grief remember them in this hour !---Beyond your dauntless joy, my brother, was our pain. Above all gold, my country, the lavish price of thy power----The ancient groves have mourn'd our sons, for whom no more

The sisterly kisses of life, the loved embraces. Remember the love of them who came not home from the war.

The fatherly tears and the veil'd faces.

111

Now henceforth their shrine is builded, high and vast, Alway drawing noble hearts to noble deeds; In the toil of glory to be, and the tale of glory past: While ever the laughing waves of youth pass over the meads, And the tongue of Hellas is heard, and old Time slumbereth light

In the cradle of Peace. O let thy dancing feet Roam in our land and abide, dear Peace, thou child of Right, Giver of happiness, gentle and sweet.

ODE TO MUSIC

WRITTEN FOR THE BICENTENARY COMMEMORATION OF #### HENRY PURCELL

Music composed by Sir Hubert Parry, and performed at the Leeds Festival and Commemoration Festival in London, 1895

I

MYRIAD-VOICED Queen, Enchantress of the air, Bride of the life of man ! With tuneful reed, With string and horn and high-adoring quire Thy welcome we prepare. In silver-speaking mirrors of desire,

(394)

In joyous ravishment of mystery draw thou near, With heavenly echo of thoughts, that dreaming lie Chain'd in unborn oblivion drear, Thy many-hearted grace restore Unto our isle our own to be, And make again our Graces three.

Π

Turn, O return ! In merry England Foster'd thou wert with infant Liberty. Her gloried oaks, that stand With trembling leaves and giant heart Drinking in beauty from the summer moon, Her wild-wood once was dear to thee.

There the birds with tiny art Earth's immemorial cradle-tune Warble at dawn to fern and fawn, In the budding thickets making merry; And for their love the primrose faint Floods the green shade with youthful scent.

Come, thy jocund spring renew By hyacinthine lakes of blue: Thy beauty shall enchant the buxom May; And all the summer months shall strew thy way, And rose and honeysuckle rear Their flowery screens, till under fruit and berry The tall brake groweth golden with the year.

III

Thee fair Poetry oft hath sought, Wandering lone in wayward thought, On level meads by gliding streams, When summer noon is full of dreams : And thy loved airs her soul invade, Haunting retired the willow shade.

(395)

Or in some walled orchard nook She communes with her ancient book, Beneath the branches laden low; While the high sun o'er bosom'd snow Smiteth all day the long hill-side With ripening cornfields waving wide.

There if thou linger all the year, No jar of man can reach thine ear, Or sweetly comes, as when the sound From hidden villages around, Threading the woody knolls, is borne Of bells that dong the Sabbath morn.

The sea with melancholy war Moateth about our castled shore; . His world-wide elemental moan Girdeth our lives with tragic zone.

He, ere men dared his watery path, Fenced them aloof in wrath; Their jealous brotherhoods Sund'ring with bitter floods: Till science grew and skill, And their adventurous will Challenged his boundaries, and went free To know the round world, and the sea From midday night to midnight sun Binding all nations into one.

Yet shall his storm and mastering wave Assure the empire to the brave;

(396)

And to his billowy bass belongs The music of our patriot songs, When to the wind his ridges go In furious following, careering a-row, Lasht with hail and withering snow : And ever undaunted hearts outride

His rushing waters wide.

But when the winds fatigued or fled Have left the drooping barks unsped, And nothing stirs his idle plain Save fire-breathed ships with silvery train, While lovingly his waves he layeth, And his slow heart in passion swells To the pale moon in heav'n that strayeth, And all his mighty music deep Whispers among the heap'ed shells, Or in dark caverns lies asleep ;—

Then dreams of Peace invite, Haunting our shore with kisses light : Nay—even Love's Paphian Queen hath come Out of her long retirèd home To show again her beauty bright ; And twice or thrice in sight hath play'd Of a young lover unaffray'd, And all his verse immortal made.

Love to Love calleth,

Love unto Love replieth :

From the ends of the earth, drawn by invisible bands Over the dawning and darkening lands

Love cometh to Love.

(397)

To the pangs of desire ; To the heart by courage and might Escaped from hell, From the torment of raging fire, From the sighs of the drowning main, From shipwreck of fear and pain, From the terror of night.

All mankind by Love shall be banded To combat Evil, the many-handed : For the spirit of man on beauty feedeth, The airy fancy he heedeth, He regardeth Truth in the heavenly height, In changeful pavilions of loveliness dight, The sovran sun that knows not the night; He loveth the beauty of earth, And the sweet birds' mirth ; And out of his heart there falleth A melody-making river Of passion, that runneth ever To the ends of the earth and crieth, That yearneth and calleth: And Love from the heart of man To the heart of man replieth : On the wings of desire Love cometh to Love.

To me, to me, fair hearted Goddess, come, To Sorrow come, Where by the grave I linger dumb; With sorrow bow thine head, For all my beauty is dead, ( 398 )

Leave Freedom's vaunt and playful thought awhile, Come with thine unimpassioned smile Of heavenly peace. and with thy fourfold choir

Of fair uncloying harmony Unveil the palaces where man's desire Keepeth celestial solemnity.

Lament, fair hearted queen, lament with me : For when thy seer died no song was sung, Nor for our heroes fal'n by land or sea

Hath honour found a tongue :
Nor aught of beauty for their tomb can frame Worthy their noble name.
Let Mirth go bare : make mute thy dancing string :
With thy majestic consolation
Sweeten our suffering.
Speak thou my woe ; that from her pain
My spirit arise to see again
The Truth unknown that keeps our faith,
The Beauty unseen that bates our breath,
The heaven that doth our joy renew,
And drinketh up our tears as dew.

DIRGE

Man born of desire Cometh out of the night, A wandering spark of fire, A lonely word of eternal thought Echoing in chance and forgot.

I

He seeth the sun, He calleth the stars by name,

(399)

He saluteth the flowers.— Wonders of land and sea, The mountain towers Of ice and air He seeth, and calleth them fair : Then he hideth his face ;— Whence he came to pass away Where all is forgot, Unmade—lost for aye With the things that are not.

He striveth to know, To unravel the Mind That veileth in horror : He wills to adore. In wisdom he walketh And loveth his kind ; His labouring breath Would keep evermore :

Then he hideth his face ;— Whence he came to pass away Where all is forgot, Unmade—lost for aye With the things that are not.

He dreameth of beauty, He seeks to create Fairer and fairer To vanquish his Fatc ; No hindrance he— No curse will brook, He maketh a law No ill shall be : ( 400 )

<sup>3</sup>

Then he hideth his face ;— Whence he came to pass away Where all is forgot, Unmade—lost for aye With the things that are not.

VIII

Rejoice, ye dead, where'er your spirits dwell, Rejoice that yet on earth your fame is bright, And that your names, remember'd day and night, Live on the lips of those who love you well.

'Tis ye that conquer'd have the powers of Heli Each with the special grace of your delight; Ye are the world's creators, and by might Alone of Heavenly love ye did excel.

> Now ye are starry names Behind the sun ye climb To light the glooms of Time With deathless flames.

$\mathbf{IX}$

Open for me the gates of delight, The gates of the garden of man's desire; Where spirits touch'd by heavenly fire Have planted the trees of life.---Their branches in beauty are spread, Their fruit divine To the nations is given for bread, And crush'd into wine.

To thee, O man, the sun his truth hath given, The moon hath whisper'd in love her silvery dreams; Night hath unlockt the starry heaven, The sea the trust of his streams:

( 401 )

And the rapture of woodland spring Is stay'd in its flying; And Death cannot sting Its beauty undying.

Fear and Pity disentwine Their aching beams in colours fine; Pain and woe forgo their might. After darkness thy leaping sight, After dumbness thy dancing sound, After fainting thy heavenly flight, After sorrow thy pleasure crown'd: O enter the garden of thy delight, Thy solace is found.

Х

To us, O Queen of sinless grace, Now at our prayer unveil thy face: Awake again thy beauty free; Return and make our Graces three. And with our thronging strength to the ends of the earth Thy myriad-voiced loveliness go forth, To lead o'er all the world's wide ways God's everlasting praise, And every heart inspire With the joy of man in the beauty of Love's desire.

A HYMN OF NATURE

AN ODE WRITTEN FOR MUSIC

The music composed by Sir Hubert Parry, performed at the Gloucester Festival, 1898

Ι

Power eternal, power unknown, uncreate : Force of force, fate of fate.

Beauty and light are thy seeing, Wisdom and right thy decreeing, Life of life is thy being.

In the smile of thine infinite starry gleam, Without beginning or end, Measure or number, Beyond time and space, Without foe or friend,

In the void of thy formless embrace, All things pass as a dream Of thine unbroken slumber.

II

Gloom and the night are thine: On the face of thy mirror darkness and terror, The smoke of thy blood, the frost of thy breath.

In silence and woful awe Thy harrying angels of death Destroy whate'er thou makest— Makest, destroyest, destroyest and makest. Thy gems of life thou dost squander,

(403)

Their virginal beauty givest to plunder, Doomest to uttermost regions of age-long ice

To starve and expire:

Consumest with glance of fire,

Or back to confusion shakest

With earthquake, elemental storm and thunder.

$\mathbf{III}$

In ways of beauty and peace Fair desire, companion of man, Leadeth the children of earth.

As when the storm doth cease, The loving sun the clouds dispelleth, And woodland walks are sweet in spring; The birds they merrily sing And every flower-bud swelleth. Or where the heav'ns o'erspan The lonely downs When summer is high: Below their breezy crowns And grassy steep Spreadeth the infinite smile of the sunlit sea: Whereon the white ships swim. And steal to havens far Across the horizon dim, Or lie becalm'd upon the windless deep, Like thoughts of beauty and peace, When the storm doth cease. And fair desire, companion of man. Leadeth the children of earth.

IV

Man, born to toil, in his labour rejoiceth; His voice is heard in the morn:

(404)

He armeth his hand and sallieth forth To engage with the generous teeming earth, And drinks from the rocky rills The laughter of life.

Or else, in crowded cities gathering close, He traffics morn and eve In thronging market-halls; Or within echoing walls Of busy arsenals Weldeth the stubborn iron to engines vast; Or tends the thousand looms Where, with black smoke o'ercast, The land mourns in deep glooms.

> Life is toil, and life is good: There in loving brotherhood Beateth the nation's heart of fire.

Strife! Strife! The strife is strong! There battle thought and voice, and spirits conspire In joyous dance around the tree of life,

And from the ringing choir Riseth the praise of God from hearts in tuneful song

v

Hark ! What spirit doth entreat The love-obedient air ? All the pomp of his delight Revels on the ravisht night, Wandering wilful, soaring fair: There ! 'Tis there, 'tis there. Like a flower of primal fire Late redeem'd by man's desire.

Away, on wings away My spirit far hath flown,

(405)

To a land of love and peace, Of beauty unknown. The world that earth-born man, By evil undismay'd, Out of the breath of God Hath for his heaven made.

Where all his dreams soe'er Of holy things and fair In splendour are upgrown, Which thro' the toilsome years Martyrs and faithful seers And poets with holy tears Of hope have sown.

There, beyond power of ill, In joy and blessing crown'd, Christ with His lamp of truth Sitteth upon the hill Of everlasting youth, And calls His saints around.

$\mathbf{VI}$

Sweet compassionate tears Have dimm'd my earthly sight, Tears of love, the showers wherewith The eternal morn is bright: Dews of the heav'nly spheres. With tears my eyes are wet, Tears not of vain regret, Tears of no lost delight, Dews of the heav'nly spheres Have dimm'd my earthly sight, Sweet compassionate tears

( 406 )

VII

Gird on thy sword, O man, thy strength endue, In fair desire thine earth-born joy renew. Live thou thy life beneath the making sun Till Beauty, Truth, and Love in thee are one.

Thro' thousand ages hath thy childhood run: On timeless ruin hath thy glory been: From the forgotten night of loves fordone Thou risest in the dawn of hopes unseen.

Higher and higher shall thy thoughts aspire, Unto the stars of heaven, and pass away, And earth renew the buds of thy desire In fleeting blooms of everlasting day.

Thy work with beauty crown, thy life with love Thy mind with truth uplift to God above: For whom all is, from whom was all begun, In whom all Beauty, Truth, and Love are one.

THESE experiments in quantitive verse were made in fulfilment of a promise to William Johnson Stone that I would some day test his theory. His premature death converted my consent into a serious oblightion. This personal explanation is due to myself for two reasons : because I might otherwise appear firstly as an advocate of the system, secondly as responsible for Stone's determination of the lengths of English syllables. Before writing quantitive verse it is necessary to learn to think in quantities. This is no light task, and a beginner requires fixed rules. Except for a few minor details, which I had disputed with Mr. Stone, I was bound to take his rules as he had elaborated them; and it was not until I had made some progress and could think fairly well in his prosody that I seriously criticized it. The two chief errors that I find in it are that he relied too much on the quality of a vowel in determining its syllabic length, and that he regarded the h as always consonantal in quality. His valuation of the er sound is doubtful, but defensible and convenient, and I have never discarded it. My earlier experiments contain therefore a good many 'false quantities', and these, where they could not be very easily (though inconsistently) amended, I have left, and marked most of them in the text : a few false quantities do not make a poem less readable. Thus a long mark over a syllable means that Stone reckoned it as long, and that the verse requires it to be so pronounced, hut that I regard it as short, or at least as doubtful. For example on p. 414 Ruin is thus written. Of all accented long vowels in 'open' position the long u seems perhaps to retain its quantity best, but there is evidence that Tennyson held it to be shortened, and I do not know whether it might be an exception or go with theory, piety, poetry, &c. Again, where a final syllable should be lengthened or not shortened by position, but lacks its consonantal support, I have put a ' in the gap: these weak places are chiefly due to my accepting Stone's unchanging valuation of h. My emancipation from Stone's rules was gradual, so that I have not been able to distinguish definitely my earlier experiments from the later, in which the quantities are such as I have now come to approve of: but my line-for-line paraphrase of Virgil is such a later experiment. It was accompanied in the New Ouarterly by a long examination of the Virgilian hexameter, to which I would refer any one who is interested in the subject. In these English hexameters I have used and advocate the use of Miltonic elision. The mark 1 in the text shows where I have purposely allowed a short syllable to sustain a long place. Though the difficulty of adapting our English syllables to the Greek rules is very great, and even deterrent-for I cannot pretend. to have attained to an absolutely consistent scheme-vet the experiments that I have made reveal a vast unexplored field of delicate and expressive rhythms hitherto unknown in our poetry : and this amply rewarded me for my friendly undertaking.

WINTRY DELIGHTS

Now in wintry delights, and long fireside meditation, 'Twixt studies and routine paying due court to the Muses, My solace in solitude, when broken roads barricade me Mudbound, unvisited for months with my merry children, Grateful t'ward Providence, and heeding a slander against me Less than a rheum, think of me to-day, dear Lionel, and take This letter as some account of Will Stone's versification.

We, whose first memories reach half of a century backward, May praise our fortune to have outliv'd so many dangers,-Faultiness of Nature's unruly machinery or man's-; 10 For, once born, whatever 'tis worth, LIFE is to be held to, Its mere persistence esteem'd as real attainment, Its crown of silver reverenc'd as one promise of youth Fruiting, of existence one needful purpose accomplish'd: And 'twere worth the living, howe'er unkindly bereft of Those joys and comforts, throu' which we chiefly regard it: Nay,-set aside the pleasant unhinder'd order of our life, Our happy enchantments of Fortune, easy surroundings, Courteous acquaintance, dwelling in fair homes, the delight of Long-plann'd excursions, the romance of journeying in lands Historic, of seeing their glory, the famous adornments 2 I Giv'n to memorial Earth by man, decorator of all-time, (-As we saw with virginal eyes travelling to behold them,-) Her gorgeous palaces, wher tow'rs and stately cathedrals; Where the turrets and domes of pictured Tuscany slumber,

Or the havoc'd splendours of Rome imperial, or where Glare the fretted minarets and mosks of trespassing Islam, And old Nilus, amid the mummied suzerainty of Egypt, Glideth, a godly presence, consciously regardless of all things, Save his unending toil and ēternal recollections :— 30

Set these out of account, and with them too put away ART, Those ravishings of mind, those sensuous intelligences, By whose grace the elect enjoy their sacred aloofness From Life's meagre affairs, in beauty's regenerate youth Reading immortality's sublime revelation, adoring Their own heav'nly desire; nor alone in worship assist they, But take, call'd of God, part and pleasure in creation Of that beauty, the first of His first purposes extoll'd :---

Put these out of account; yea, more I say, banish also From the credit sum of enjoyment those simple AFFECTIONS, Whose common exercise informs our natural instinct; That, set in our animal flesh-fabric, of our very lifeblood Draw their subsistence, and even in ungenerous hearts

Root, like plants in stony deserts and 'neath pitiless snows. Yea, put away all Love, the blessings and pīeties of home, All delicate heart-bonds, vital tendernesses untold, Joys that fear to be named, feelings too holy to gaze on; 60 And with his inviolate peace-trīumph his passionate war Be forgone, his mighty desire, thrilling ecstasies, ardours Of mystic reverence, his fierce flame-eager emotions, Idolatrous service, blind faith and ritual of fire.

If from us all these things were taken away, (that is all art And all beauty whate'er, and all love's varied affection,) Yet would enough subsist in other concerns to suffice us, And feed intelligence, and make life's justification.

What this is, if you should ask me, beyond or above the rejoicing

In vegetant or brute existence, answer is easy; 70 'Tis the reflective effort of mind that, conscious of itself, Fares forth exploring nature for principle and cause, Keenly with all the cunning pleasure and instinct of a hunter, Who, in craft fashioning weapon and sly snare, tracketh after His prey flying afield, and that which his arm killeth eateth.

I must wond'ring attend, nay learn myself to decipher Time's rich hieroglyph, with vast elemental pencil Scor'd upon Earth's rocky crust,--minute shells slowly collecting ς0 Press'd to a stone, uprais'd to a mountain, again to a fine sand Worn, burying the remains of an alien organic epoch, In the flat accretions of new sedimentary strata; All to be crush'd, crumpled, confused, contorted, abandon'd, Broke, as a child's puzzle is, to be recompos'd with attention; Nature's history-book, which she hath torn as asham'd of; And lest those pictures on<sup>v</sup>her fragmentary pages Should too lightly reveal frustrate Antiquity, hath laid Rūin upon rūin, revolution upon revolution : Yet no single atom, no least insignificant grain 100 But, having order alike of fate, and faulty disorder, Holds a record of Time, very vestiges of the Creation; Which who will not attend scorns blindly the only commandments

By God's finger of old inscribed on table of earth-stone.

This for me wer' enough: yet confin'd Gēology's field Counts not in all Science more than the planet to the Cosmos; Where our central Sun, almighty material author, And sustainer, appears as a half-consumed vanishing spark, Bearing along with it, entangled in immensity's onward Spiral eddies, the blacken'd dust-motes whirl'd off from around it.

But tho' man's microscopical functions measure all things By his small footprints, finger-spans and ticking of clocks, And thereby conceive the immense—such multiple extent As to defy Idēas of imperative cerebration,—

None the less observing, measuring, patiently recording, Hē mappeth out the utter wilderness of unlimited space; Carefully weigheth a weight to the sun, reckoneth for it its path .

Of the planets and their satellites, their annual orbits, Times, perturbations of times, and orbit of orbit.

What was Alexander's subduing of Asia, or that Sheep-worry of Europe, when pigmy Napoleon enter'd Her sovereign chambers, and her kings with terror eclips'd? His footsore soldiers inciting across the ravag'd plains, Thro' bloody fields of death tramping to an ugly disaster? Shows any crown, set above the promise (so rudely accomplisht)

And if these wonders we must with wonder abandon, Astronomy's Cosmos, the Immense, and those physical laws That link mind to matter, laws mutual in revelation, Which measure and analyse Nature's primordial orgasm, Lifegiving omnipotential LIGHT, its speed to determine, Untwist its rainbow of various earthcoloring rays, Counting strictly to each its own millionth-millimetred Wave-length, and mapping out on fray'd diffraction of ether All the adust elements and furnaced alchemy of heav'n ; Laws which atone the disorder of infinit observation With tyrannous numbers and abstract theory, closing

Protean Nature with nets of principle exact; Her metamorphoses transmuting by correlation, All heat, all chemical concourse or electrical action, All force and all motion of all matter, or subtle or gross:—

If we these wonders, I say, with wonder abandon, Nor can for mental heaviness their high study pursue, Yet no story of adventures or fabulous exploit Of famous'd heroes hath so rōmantic a discourse, As these growing annals of long heav'n-scaling achievement And far discoveries, which he who<sup>x</sup>idly neglecteth Is but a boor as truly ridiculous as the village clown, In whose thought the pleasant sun-ball performeth a circuit Daily above mother earth, and resteth nightly beneath her.

Nor will a man, whose mind respects its own operations, Lightly resign himself to remain in darkness uninform'd, While any true science of fact lies easy within reach Concerning Nature's ēternal essential object, Self-matter, embodying substratum of ev'ry relation Both of Time and Space, at once the machinery and stuff Of those Idēas ; carrier, giver, only receiver 171 Of such perceptions as arise in sensible organs.

Now whether each element is a coherency of equal Strictly symmetric atoms, or among themselves the atoms are Like animals in a herd, having each an identity distinct, ---So that atoms of gold compar'd with sulphur or iron Are but as ancient Greeks compar'd with Chinamen and Turks :---

Nor whether all elements are untransmutable offspring From one kind or more thro' endless eternity changing, Or whether invisibles claim rightly the name of immortals, I make novenquiry; matter minutely divided 181 Showing a like paradox, with ever-continuous extent, And, as Adam, the atom will pose as a naked assumption :---But since all the knowledge which man was born to attain to Hath these only channels, (which must limit and qualifyvit,)

We shall con the grammar, the material alphabet of life, Yea, ev'n more from error to preserve our inquisitive mind, Than to secure well-bēing against adversity and ill. Surely if all is a flux, 'tis well to look into the fluid, Inspect and question the apparent, shifty behaviour, Wherein lurketh alone our witness of all physical law, As we read the habits unchanging of invisible things, Their timeless chronicles, the unintelligent ethic of dust: In which dense labyrinth he who was guiding avised me, With caution saying 'Were this globe's area of land 'Wholly cover'd from sight, pack'd close to the watery margins

'With mere empty vessels, I could myself put in each one

'Some different substance, and write its formula thereon.'

Thus would speak the chemist; and Nature's superabundance,

Her vast infinitude of waste vārīety untold, 200 As<sup>v</sup>her immense extent and inconceivable object, Squandering activities throughout eternity, dwarfeth Man's little aim and hour, his doubtful fancy: what are we? Our petty selfseekings, our speedily passing affections? Life having existed so extravagantly before us; Earth bearing so slight a regard or care for us; and all After us unconcern'd to remain, strange, beautiful as now, May not an idle echovof an antique poetry haunt me, 'Friendship is all feigning, yeavall loving is folly only'? -Yet doth not very mention of antique poetry and love 210 Quickly recall to better motions my dispirited faith? And I see man's discontent as witness asserting His moral ideal, that, born of Nature, is heir to Her children's titles, which nought may cancel or impugn: Not wer' of all her works man least, but ranking among them Highly or ev'n as best, he wrongs himself to imagine His soul foe to her aim, or fromvher sanction an outlaw.

Nay, but just as man should appear more fully accordant With things not himself, would they rank with<sup>v</sup>him as equals: Judging other creatures he sets them wholly beneath him; His disquīet among manifold and alien objects 221 Bēing sure evidence, the effect of an understanding, And perception allow'd by Nature solely to himself.

Highly then is to be prais'd the resourceful wisdom of our time,

That spunged out the written science and theories of life, And, laying foundation of its knowledge in physical law, Gave it preeminence o'er all enquiry, erecting Superstructive of all, bringing ev'ry research to the object, Boldly a new science of MAN, from dreamy scholastic Imprisoning set free, and inveterate divination, Into the light of truth, to the touch of history and fact.

Since 'the proper study of mankind is man',--nor aforetime

Was the proverb esteem'd as a truism less than it is now,— 'Tis strange that the method lay out of sight unaccomplisht, And that we, so late to arrive, should first set a value On the delusive efforts of human babyhood; and so Witnessing impatiently the rear of their disappearance, Upgathering the relics and vestiges of primitive man, Should ratify'instinct for science, look to the darkness For light, find a knowledge where 'twas most groping or unknown:

known: 240 While civilization's advances mutely regarding Talk we of old scapegoats, discuss bloodrites, immolations, Worship of ancestors; explain complexities involved Of tribal marriages, derivation of early religions, Priestly taboos, totems, archaic mysteries of trees, All the devils and dreams abhorr'd of barbarous ages.

And 'tis a far escape from wires, wheels and penny papers And the worried congestion of our Victorian era,

Whose many inventions of world-wide luxury have changed Life's very face :--but enough wē hear of progress, enough have 250

Our conscious science and comforts trumpeted ; altho' Hardly can I, who so many years eagerly frequented Bartholomew's fountain, not speak of things to awaken Kind old HIPPOCRATES, howe'er hē slumbereth, entomb'd 'Neath the shatter'd winejars and rūined factories of Cos, Or where hē wander'd in Thessalian Larissa:

For when his doctrine, which Rome had wisely adopted, Sank lost with the treasures of her deep-foundering empire, No<sup>v</sup>art or science grew so contemptible, order'd 259 So by mere folly, windy caprice, superstition and chance, As boastful MEDICINE, with humours fit for a madhouse, Save when some Sydenham, like Samson among the Philistines.

Strode bond-bursting along with a smile of genial instinct. Nor when here and there some ray, in darkness arising, Hopefully seem'd to herald the coming dawn, (as when a

Laennec

Or Jenner invented his meed of worthy remembrance,) Did one mind foresee, one seer foretell the appearance Of that unexpected daylight that arose upon our time.

Who dream'd that living air poison'd our SURGERY, coating All our sheeny weapons with germs of an invisible death, 2;0 Till he saw the sterile steel work with immunity, and save Quickly as its warring scimitars of victory had slain? Saw what school-tradition for nature's kind method admir'd, —In those lifedraining slow cures and bedridden agues,— Forgotten, or condemn'd as want of care in a surgeon?

Tho' MEDICINE makes not so plain an appeal to the vulgar, Yet she lags not a whit: her pregnant theory touches Deeper discoveries, 'her more complete revolution Gives promise of wider benefits in larger abundance.

Where she nam'd the disease she now separates the bacillus; 280

Sets the atoms of offence, those blind and sickly bloodeaters, 'Neath lens and daylight, forcing their foul propagations, Which had ever prosper'd in dark impunity unguest, Now to behave in sight, deliver their poisonous extract And their strange self-brew'd, self-slaying juice to be handled, Experimented upon, set aside and stor'd to oppose them.

So novel and obscure a research, such hard revelations Of Nature's cabinet,-tho' with fact amply accordant, And by hypothesis much dark difficulty resolving, Are not quickly receiv'd nor approv'd, and sensitive idlers, Venturing in the profound terrible penetralia of life, 291 Are shock'd byva method that shuns not contamination With cruel Nature's most secret processes unmaskt. And yet in all mankind's disappointed history, now first Have his scouts push'd surely within his foul enemies' lines, And his sharpshooters descried their insidious foe, Those swarming parasites, that barely within the detection Of manifold search-light, have bred, swimming unsuspected Thro' man's brain and limbs, slaying with loathly pollution His beauty's children, vhis sweet scions of affection, 300 In fev'rous torment and tears, his home desolating Of their fair innocence, breaking his proud passionate heart, And his kindly belief in GOD's good justice arraigning.

With what wildly directed attack, what an armory illjudged, Has he, (alas, poor man,) with what cumbrous machination Sought to defend himself from their Lilliputian onslaught; Aye discharging around him, in obscure night, at a venture, Ev'ry missile which'his despair confus'dly imagin'd; His simples, compounds, specifics, chemical therapeutics, Juice of plants, whatever was nam'd in lordly Salerno's 310 Herbaries and gardens, vipers, snails, all animal filth, Incredible quackeries, the pretentious jugglery of knaves, Green electricities, saints' bones and priestly anointings. Fools ! that oppose his one scientific intelligent hope ! Grant us an hundred years, and man shall hold in abeyance. These foul distempers, and with this world's benefactors.

Shall PASTEUR obtain the reward of saintly devotion, His crown heroic, who fought not destiny in vain.

'Tis success that attracts : 'twas therefore so many workers Ran pellmell to the schools of Nature in our generation, 320 While other employments have lack'd their genius and pined. Our fathers' likings we thought semibarbarous, our art Self-consciously sickens in qualms of an æsthetic aura, Noisily in the shallows splashing and disporting uninspir'd. Our famed vulgarities whether in speech, taste or amusement, Are not amended: Is it foolish, hoping for a rescue, First to appeal to the strong, for health to the healthy amongst us? -For the Sophists' doctrine that GRACE is dying of old age I hold in derision, their inkpot theories of man, Of his cradle of art, his deathbed of algebra;—and see 330 How Science has wrought, since we went idling at Eton, One thing above surmise :---An' if I may dare to remind you How Vergil praises your lov'd Lucretius, (of whom My matter and metrevhave set you thinking, as I fear.) In that glory which ends 'et inexorabile fatum Subjecit pedibus strepitumque Acherontis avari': Sounded not most empty to us such boast of a pagan, Strangely to us tutor'd to believe, with faith mediæval, Torture everlasting to be justly the portion of all souls, Nor but by the elects' secret predestiny escaped? 340 If you think to reply,-making this question in answer,-'Did the belief disturb for a moment our pleasure in life?' No.—And men gather in harvest on slopes of an active Volcano: natheless the terror's enormity was there; Now 'tis away: Science has pierced man's cloudy commonsense,

Dow'rd his homely vision with more expansive an embrace, And the rotten foundation of old superstition exposed. That trouble of Pascal, those vain paradoxes of Austin, Those Semitic parables of Paul, those tomes of Aquinas,

All are thrown to the limbo of antediluvian idols, 350 Only because we learn mankind's true history, and know That not at all from a high perfection sinfully man fell, But from baseness arose : We have with sympathy enter'd Those dark caves, his joyless abodes, where with ravening brutes.

Bear or filthy hyena, he once disputed a shelter :---

That was his Paradise, his garden of Eden,—abandon'd Ages since to the drift and drip, the cementing accretions Whence we now separate his bones buried in the stalagma, His household makeshifts, his hunting tools, his adornments, From the scatter'd skeletons of a lost prehistoric order, 360 Its mammoth and woolly rhinoceros, the machairodos, and beasts

Whose unnamed pastures the immense Atlantic inundates.

In what corner of earth lie not dispersed the familiar Flinty relics of his old primitive stone-cutlery? what child Kens not now the design, the adapted structure of each one Of those hand-labor'd chert-flakes, whether axe, chisel, or knife,

Spearhead, barb of arrow, rough plane or rudely serrate saw? Stones that in our grandsires' time told no sermon, (awaiting Indestructible, unnumber'd, on chary attention,) From their prēadamite pulpits now cry Revelation.

Not to a Greek his chanted epic had mortal allurement, Conjuring old-world fancies of Ilium and of Olympus, As this story to me, this tale primæval of unsung, Unwritten, ancestral fate and adversity, this siege Of courage and happiness protracted so many thousand Thousand years in a slow persistent victory of brain And right hand o'er all the venom'd stings, sharpnesses of fang

And dread fury whate'er Nature, tirelessly devising, Could develop with tooth, claw, tusk, or horn to oppose them. See now Herakles, who strangled snakes when an infant 380 In<sup>h</sup>is cradle alone; and nought but those petty stonechips

For the battle : 'twas wonder above wonders his achievement : Yea, and since he thought as a child 'twas natural in<sup>v</sup>him, Meeting in existence with purposes antagonistic, Circumstances oppos'd to desire, vast activities, which Thwarted effort, to assume All-might as spiteful against him. Nay, as an artist born, impell'd to devise a religion,---So to relate himself ideally with the immortal,-This quarrel of reason with what displeas'd his affections Was not amiss. The desire and love of beauty possess man: Art is of all that beauty the best outwardly presented; 391 Truth to the soul is merely the best that mind can imagine. No lover ēternal will hold to an older opinion If but lovelier ideas, with Nature agreeing, Are to his understanding offer'd...But enough : 'tis an unsolv'd Mystery.—Yet man dreams to flatter his deity saying 'Beautiful is Nature !' rather 'tis various, endless, And her efforts fertile in error tho' grand in attainment. If we, while praising her scheme and infinite order, Are compell'd to select, our choice condemns the remainder : Nor can wisdom honour those loathly polluting offences, 401 Whose very names to the Muse are either accursed or unknown.

Nay, if such foul things thou deemest worthy, the fault was Making us, O Nature, thy judge and tearful accuser.

Turn our thought for awhile to the symphonies of Beethoven,

Or the rever'd preludes of mighty Sebastian; Is there One work of Nature's contrivance beautiful as these? Judg'd by beauty alone man wins, as sensuous artist; And for other qualities, the spirit's differentia, Nature Scarce observes them at all: that keen unfaltering insight, 410 Whereby*earthly desire's roaming wildernesses are changed Into a garden a-bloom; its wandering impossible ways Into pillar'd avenues, alleys and fair-flow'ry terrac'd walks, (Where GoD talks with man, as once 'twas fancied of Eden ;) That transcendental supreme interpreting of sense,

Rendering intelligence passionate with mystery, linking Sympathy with grandeur, the reserve of dignity with play; Those soul-formalities, the balance held 'twixt the denīal And the betrayal of intention, whose masteries invite, Entice, welcome ever, meet, and with kindliness embrace; 420 Those guarded floodgates of boundless, lovely resources, Whence nothing ill issues, no distraction nor abortion Hindering enjoyment, but in easy security flow forth Ecstasies of fitness, raptures and harmonies of heav'n. Surely before such work of man, so kindly attemper'd, Nature must be asham'd, had shē not this ready answer, 'Fool, and who made thee?'—

I shall not seem a deserter, Where in an idle essay my verse to a fancy abandon'd Praiseth others : rather while art and beauty delight us, While hope, faith and love are warm and lively in our hearts, Sweet our earthly desire and dear our human affection, 431 We may, joyfully despising the pedantries of old age, Hold to the time, nor lose the delight of mortal attainment; Keenly rejoicing in all that wisdom approves, nor allowing Ourselves at the challenge of younger craft to be outsailed; But trimming our old canvas in all change of weather and wind, Freely without fear urge o'erseas our good vessel onward, Piloting into the far, unmapp'd futurity.—Farewell.

EPISTLE II

TO A SOCIALIST IN LONDON

Novethical system, no contemplation or action, No reason'd attitude of mind nor principle of faith, Neither Socratical wisdom nor saintly devotion, Buildeth a fortress against heart-ache & compassionate grief, Nor responds to desire, nor with true mastery yieldeth Easy repose to the mind ; And since all our study endeth Emptily in full doubt,-fathoming the divine intention In this one thing alone, that, howsoe'er it affect us, 'Twas never intended for mortal fancy to compass,-Ivhave concluded that from first purposes unknown τo None should seek to deduce ideal laws to be liv'd by: And, loving art, am true to the Muse, & poetry extol: Therefore 'twas that afore I prais'd & heartily enjoy'd Your human verses, FRASER, when nobody bought them, More than again I praise those serious exhortations, Wherewith you wu'd amend the degraded people about you. Nay tho' like a prophet with heav'n-sent dignity inspir'd, With ready convincement and stern example assuring, Mightily you proclaim your love-messag' in the assembly, Exhibiting panaceas of ancient ill, propagating 20 Out of a Scotch cerebrum the reforming zeal of a TOLSTOI, I listen all unmov'd, as a sceptic among the believers. Yet what a charm has an earnest soul, whom sympathy uncheckt

For human suffering has strengthen'd and dedicated Bravely to serve his kind, to renounce his natural instinct, And liv' apart, indulging in acts of mercy, delighted In wisdom's rock-hewn citadel<sup>h</sup>er law to illustrate, Embodying the pattern of self-integrity complete.

(425)

Yea, what a charm pervades discourse, that loftily reason'd Points the narrow pathway throu' this world's ugly disorder; How very fair wil appear any gate of cleanliness, open 30 From the city's tumult, its rank impurity, its dread Vulgarity's trīumph: Nay sure & bounteous as Truth, Beautiful in confusion appeareth Simplicity's way.

- 'Simple it is, (you say) God is good,-Nature is ample,-
- ' Earth yields plenty for all,—and all might share in abundance,
- 'Were profit and labour but fairly divided among them.

'Scarce any laws are needed in our Utopia but these,-

- 'No fruitless labour to provide mere useless adornment,
- 'No money encouraging man's sloth & slavery, no rents 40
- 'Of titeld landlords, no pamper'd luxury breeding
- 'Fleshly disease, worst fiend & foe of mind body and soul;
- 'All should work, and only produce life's only requirements :
- 'So with days all halfholidays, toil healthfully enjoy'd,
- 'Each might, throu' leisure hours of amusement piety and peace,
- 'In the domestic joys & holy community partake .---'
- -This wer' a downleveling, my friend; yoū need, to assure me,
- Fix a limit to the folk; else, as their number is increas't, Their happiness may dwindle away, & what was at outset Goal & prize, the provoker of all your wise revolution, Will by subdivision disappear in course of atainment.

When goods are<sup>v</sup>increas'd, mouths are<sup>v</sup>increas'd to devour them :

- If the famine be reliev'd this season in India, next dearth Will be a worse. You know how one day Herschel acosted Súch a philanthropical Save-all, who claimed to acomplish
- Some greatest happiness for a greatest number; 'Attend, man;
- (Saíd-he) Resólve me anon one query : Suppose Adam and Eve
- First created on Earth but twice ten centuries ere Christ,

That they gat four children in all, who liv'd, getting also Four to the pair : Had thus mankind ever equaly increast 60 By moderate families but doubling in each generation,

How many souls would now be alive to revise the conundrum

Of greatest happiness? Novanswer? Well, 'tis a long sum.

Say if on earth such a crowd could stand. No? Pray then imágine

All earth's land as a plain, & all this company thereon,

- Piled together like peas in a pintpot : How many layers?
- No guess? Then how high the column? How far wu'd it extend
- Into the sky ?—To the moon ?—Further—To the sun ?—To the sun ! Pshaw !
- That column of happy men would reach up, as I fathom its height,

Million diameters of Neptune's infinit' orbit.' 70

My vobjection annoys your kindly philanthropy?----'It proves

'Too much.'—Yes nature shows in that scrutiny bankrupt; Mere matter in deposit gives out. You wish to determine No limit of future polities: your actual object

Is to relieve suffering, to repeal injustice acruing

From monied inheritance, which makes a nonentity potent For public mischief, who might, if usefully harness'd

In common employment, have assisted social order.

Why should Law give fifty talents where Nature alloys one? For money is the talent of supreme empery: Gold, Gold 80 Envieth all, getteth all, absorbeth, mastereth all things:

It pusheth out & thrusteth away pitilessly the weak ones,

Those ill-fated, opprest, unfortun'd needy : Beneath them

Yawns the abyss. Down down they fall, as a stream on a mountain,

With ceaseless cataract. None hearkeneth; only the silent Grave, that darkly devours their cry of desperate anguish. Spáre me the story; believe more feel this grief than avow it:

'Tis put aside from thought with death's incurable evil; Left for them, that assume mankind as cause, to lament it. And what if all Nature ratify this merciless outrage? 90 If her wonder of arch-wonders, her fair animal life, Her generate creatures, her motion'd warmblooded offspring, Haunters of the forest & royal country, her antler'd Mild-gazers, that keep silvan sabbath idly without end; Her herded galopers, sleeksided stately careerers Of trembling nostril; her coy unapproachable estrays, Stealthy treaders, climbers; her leapers furry, lissom-limb'd; Her timorous burrowers, and grangers thrifty, the sandy Playmates of the warren; her clumsy-footed, shaggy roamers; Her soarers, the feather'd fast-fliers, loftily floating 100 Sky-sailers, exiles of high solitudinous eyries ; Her perching carolers, twitterers, & sweetly singing birds : All ocean's finny clans, mute-mouthers, watery breathers, Furtive arrow-darters, and fan-tail'd easy balancers, Silvery-scale, gilt-head, thorn-back, frill'd harlequinading Globe and slimy ribbon : Shell-builders of many-chamber'd Pearly dwellings, soft shapes mosslike or starry, adorning With rich floral fancy the gay rock-garden of ebb-tide: All life, from the massive-bulkt, ivory-tusht, elephantine Centenarian, acknowledging with crouching obeisance 110 Man's will, ev'n to the least petty whiffling ephemeral insect, Which in a hot sunbeam engend'ring, when summer is high, Vaunteth an hour his speck of tinsely gaudiness and dies : Ah! what if all & each of Nature's favorite offspring, 'Mong many distinctions, have this portentous agreement. MOUTH, STOMACH, INTESTINE? Ouestion that brute apparatus,

So manifoldly devis'd, set alert with furious instinct: What doth it interpret but this, that LIFE LIVETH ON LIFE? That the select creatures, who'inherit earth's domination, Whose happy existence is Nature's intelligent smile, 120 Are bloody survivors of a mortal combat, a-tweenwhiles Chanting a brief pæan for victory on the battlefield?

( 428 )

Since that of all their kinds most owe their prosperous estate Unto the art, whereby they more successfully destroy'd Their weaker brethren, more insatiably devour'd them; And all fine qualities, their forms pictorial, admired, Their symmetries, their grace. & beauty, the loveliness of them,

Were by Murder evolv'd, to 'scape from it or to effect it. 'Surely again (yoū say) too much is proven, it argues 'Mere horror & despair; unless persuasion avail us 'That the moral virtues are man's idēa, awaken'd 'By the spirit's motions; & therefore not to be conceiv'd 'In Nature's outward & mainly material aspect, 'As that is understood. You, since you hold that opinion, 'Run your own ship aground invoking Nature against me.'---

Then withdraw the appeal, my friend, to her active aliance; Bē pessimist Nature with a pitchfork manfully expell'd, Not to return. Yet soul in hand, with brutal alegiance, Hunters & warriors do not forget the comandment. See how lively the old animal continueth in them: 140 Of what triffing account they hold life, yet what a practis'd Art pursue to preserve it: if I should rightly define sport SLAUGHTER WITH DANGER, what were more serious and brave? Their love of air, of strength, of wildness, afford us an inkling Of the delight of beasts, with whom they might innocently Boast a fellow-feeling, summoning them forth to the combat. Nay dream not so quickly to see her ladyship expell'd. Those prowling Lions of stony Kabylia, whose roar

Frights from sleep the huddled herdsmen, soon as the sudden night

Falls on Mount Atlas, those grave uxorious outlaws 150 Wandering in the Somali desert or waste Kalahari,

- Sound a challenge that amid summer-idling London is answer'd
- Haply in Old Bond Street, where some fashionably attired youth

Daintily stands poising the weapon foredoom'd to appay them:

(429)

Or<sup>v</sup>he mentally sighteth a tiger of India, that low Crouches among the river jungles, or hunts desolating Grassy Tarâi, 'neath lofty Himálya, or far southward Outacamund, Mysore's residency, the Nilgherry mountains By Malabar; yea, and ere-long shall sight him in earnest, Stalked as a deer, surprised where hē lay slumbering at noon Under a rock full-gorged, or deep in reedy covert hid 160 By the trackers disturbed : Two grand eyes shall for a moment Glare upon either side the muzzle. Woe then to the hunter, If hē blench ! That fury beclouded in invisible speed What marksman could arrest? what mortal abide his arrachement?

Standing above the immense carcase hē gratefully praiseth God for a man-eater so fine, so worthy the slaying.

See him again; 'tis war: one hill-rock strongly defended Checks advance, to be stormed at cost of half the assailants. Gaily away they go, Highlanders, English, or Irish,

- Or swart Ghoorkas against the leaden hail, climbing, ascending,
- Lost in a smoke, scattering, creeping, here there, ever upwards:
- Till some change cometh o'er confusion. Who winneth? ah! see!
- Ours have arrived, and he who led their bravery is there.
- None that heard will ever forget that far-echoing cheer :
- Such heard Nelson, above the crashings & thundering of guns :

At Marathon 'twas heard and all time's story remembers.

See him again, when at home visiting<sup>v</sup>his episcopal uncle: That good priest contrast with this good captain, assay them: Find a common-measure equating their rival emotions; 180 Evaporate the rubbish, the degrading pestiferous fuss

- Of stuck-up importance, the palatial coterie, weigh out
- Then the solids: whose life would claim the award of an umpire

For greatest happiness ? High-priest or soldier r Adjudge it (430)

'I forbid the appeal.'-Well, style my humour atrocious;

Granted a child cannot understand; yet see what a huge growth

Stands to be extermin'd, ere you can set dibble in ground.

Nay, more yet; that mighty forest, whose wildness offends you,

And silences appal, where earth-life self-suffocating

Seethes, lavish as sun-life in a red star's fi'ry corona;

That waste magnificence, and vain fecundity, breeding Giants & parasites embrac'd in flowery tangle,

Interwoven alive and dead, where one tyrannous tree 200 Blights desolating around it a swamp of rank vegetation; Where Reason yet dreams unawakt, & throu' the solemn day Only the monkey chatters, & discordant the parrot screams: All this is in man's heart with dateless sympathy worshipt, With filial reverence, & awful pieties involv'd;

While that other picture, your formal fancy, the garden Of your stingy promise, must that not quench his imágin'd Idēals of beauty, his angel hope of attainment?

What to him are the level'd borders, the symmetric allotments,

Where nothing exceedeth, nothing encroacheth, nor assaileth; Where Reason now drudgeth a sad monomaniac, all day 211 Watering & weeding, digging & diligently manuring Her label'd families, starch-makers, nitrogen-extract-Purveyors, classified potherbs & empty pretenders Of medical virtues; nay ev'n and their little impulse

When succour is needed 'gainst fainting weariness of flesh; Shall Wine not be belov'd? Or now let Aristotle answer

What goods are,—Time leaves the scholar's inventory unchang'd;—

All Virtues & Pow'rs, Honour & Pleasure, all that in our life Makes us self-sufficient, Friends, Riches, Comeliness, and Strength;

(432)

They that have these things in plenty desire to retain them, And win more; while they that lack are pleas'd to desire them.

Nay and since possession will leave the desire unappeased, Save in mere appetites that vary with our physical state, 250 Surely delight in goods is an ecstasy rather attendant On their mental image, than on experienc'd operation.

- So the shepherd envies the monarch, the monarch the shepherd's lot,-
- 'O what a life were this, How sweet, how lovely!' the king cries.

Whence, I say, as a man feels brave who reads of ACHILLES,
One looking on riches may learn some kindred elation,
And whatever notions of fortune, luxury, comfort,
Genius or virtue, are shown to him, only as aspects
Of possible being, 'tis so much gain to desire them;
Learning Magnificence in mean obscurity, tasting 260
Something of all those goods which Fate outwardly denies him.

But say none shall again be king or prosperous or great,— Arguing 'all eminence is unequal, unequal is unjust',— Should that once come about, then alas for this merry England, Sunk in a grey monotone of drudgery, dreamily poring O'er her illumin'd page of history, faln to regretful Worship of ancestors, with nought now left to delight her, Nought to attain, save one nurst hope, one ambition only Red Revolution, a wild Reawakening, & a Renaissance.

Impatiently enough yoū hear me, longing to refute me, 270 While I'in privileg'd pulpit my period expand.

Who could allow such a list of strange miscellaneous items, So-call'd goods, Strength, Ríches, Honour, Gold, Genius, and Wine?

Is not Wisdom above Rubies? more than Coral or Pearl? Yours is a scheme deep-laid on true distinctive asortment, Parting use or good from useless or evil asunder; Dismissing accessories, while half my heathenish invoice

Are Vanity's vanities. Well; truly, as old SOLOMON said, So they be: What is excepted? What scapes his araignment? Is 't Pleasure or Wisdom? Nay ask THEOLOGIA: Goodworks, 280

Saith-she, offend her nostril. If I distinguish, asserting, Say, that if I<sup>v</sup>enjoyed my neighbour's excessive income I would hire me a string-quartett not an automaton car, You blame equally both our tastes for luxury, indeed His shows more of a use. If man's propensity is vain, Vulgar, inane, unworthy; 'tis also vain to bewail it: Think you to change his skin? 'Twere scale by scale to regraft it

With purer traditions; and who shall amend the amenders? Nay let bé the bubbles, till man grow more solid in mind, Condemn not the follies: My neighbour's foolery were worse, Sat he agape listening to Mozart, intently desiring 291 All that time to be rattling alóng on a furious engine In caoutchouc carapace, with a trail of damnable oilstench. Yea, blame not the pleasures; they are not enough; pleasure only

Makes this life liveable : nor scout that doctrine as unsound: Consider if mankind from puling birth to bitter death Knew nought but the sorrows, endured unrespited always Those agonizing assaults which no flesh wholly can escape; Were his hunger a pang like his starvation, alievement Thereof a worse torture, like that which full many die with; Did love burn his soul as fire his skin; did affections 300 Rend his will, as Turks rend men with horses asunder; Were his labour a breathless effort ; his slumber occasion For visiting Furies to repair his temple of anguish; Were thoughts all mockeries; slow intelligence a deception; His mind's far ventures, her voyages into the unseen But horror & terrified nightmare; None then had ever heard Praise of a Creator, nor seen any Deity worshipped. 'Twas for heav'nly Pleasure that God did first fashion all thing,

(434)

Nor with other benefit would holy Religion attract us 310 Picturing of Paradise. Consult our Lady's Evangel,

Where Saint Luke,—colouring (was it unconsciously, suppose you?)

Fact and fable alike,—contrasts a beggar with a rich man, And from holding a fool's happiness too greatly in esteem Makes pleasure ēternal the balance of temporal evil, And the reverse; nor shrinks, ascribing thus to the next world Vaster inequalities, harsher perversity than this.

You have a soul's paradise, its entry the loop of a needle, Come hither & prithy tell me what I must do to be saved, I, that feeding on Ideals in temperat' estate 320 Seem so wealthy to poor Lazarus, so needy to Dives : What from my heav'n-bound schooner's dispensable outfit Has to be cast o'erboard? What see you here that offends you?

These myriad volumes, these tons of music :-- allow them

Or disallow? Fiddle and trichord?—Must all be relinquished?

Such toys have not a place in your society; you say

Nobody shall make them, nor made may justly acquire them.

Yet, should a plea be alleged for life's most gracious adornment,

For contemplative art's last transcendental achievement, Grief's almighty solace, frolicking Mirth's Purification, 330 For Man's unparagon'd High-pōetess, inseparate Muse Companion, the belov'd most dearly among her sisters, Revivifier of age, fairest instructor of all grace, His peacemaker alert with varied sympathy, whose speech Not to arede and love is wholly to miss the celestial Consolatries, the divine interpreting of physical life,— Yoū wince? make exception? allow things musical? admit So many faked viols, penny trumpets, and amateurish Performers? Nay, nay! stand firm, for concession is vain. Music is outmeasurably a barefaced luxury, her plea 340 Will cover art, (—almost to atone art's vile imitations—);

My Japanese paintings, my fair blue Cheney, Hellenic Statues and Caroline silver, my beautiful Aldines,

Prized more highly because so few, so fondly familiar,

Need no tongue to defend them against rude hands, that assail them

Only because their name is RARITY; hands insensate, Rending away pitilessly the fair embroideries of life, That close-clust'ring man, his comfort pared to the outskirts Of his discomfort, may share in meanness unenvied But what if I unveil the figure that closely beside you 350 Half hides his Hell-charred skeleton with mysteries obscene, That foul one, that Moloch of all Utopias, ancient Poisoner & destroyer-elect of innumerous unborn?

Know you the story of our hive-bees, the yellow honeymakers,

Whose images from of old have haunted Poetry, settling On the blossoms of man's dream-garden, as on the summer-flow'rs,

Pictures of happy toil, sunny glances, gendering always Such sweet thoughts, as be by slumbrous music awaken'd? How all their outward happiness,—that fairy demeanour Of busy contentment, singing at their work,—is an inborn 360 Empty habit, the relics of a time when considerate joy Truly possest their tiny bodies; when golden abundance Was not a State-kept hoard; when feasts were plentiful indulg'd

With wine well-fermented, or old-stored spicy metheglin: For they died not then miserably within the second moon Forgotten, unrespected of all; but slept many winters, Saw many springs, liv'd, lov'd like men, consciously rejoicing In Nature's promises, with like hopes and recollections. Intelligence had brought them Science, Genius enter'd; Seers and sages arose, great Bees, perfecting among them 370 Copious inventions, with man's art worthily compared. Then was a time when that, which haps not in ages of ages, Strangely befel: they stole from Nature's secresy one key,

Found the hidden motive which works to variety of kind; And thus came wondrously possest of pow'r to determine Their children's qualities, habitudes, yea their specialized form

Masculine or feminine to produce, or asexual offspring Redow'rd and differenced with such alternative organs As they chose, to whate'er preferential function adapted, Wax-pocket or honey-bag, with an instinct rightly acordant.

We know well the result, but not what causes effected 381 Their decision to prefer so blindly the race to the unit, As to renounce happiness for a problem, a vain abstraction; Making home and kingdom a vast egg-factory, wherein Food and life are stor'd up alike, and strictly proportion'd In loveless labour with mean anxiety. Wondrous Their reason'd motive, their altruistic obedience Unto a self-impos'd life-sentence of prison or toil. Wonder wisely ! then ask if these ingenious insects, (Who made Natur' against her will their activ' acomplice, And, methodizing anew her heartless system, averted 301 From their house the torrent of whelming natural increase,) Are blood-guiltless among their own-born prógeny: What skill

Keeps their peace, or what price buys it? Alack! 'tis murder,

Murder again. No worst Oriental despot, assuring 'Gainst birthright or faction or envy his ill-gotten empire, So decimates his kin, as do these rown-bodied egg-queens Surprise competitors, and stab their slumbering infants, Into the wax-cradles replunging their double-edged stings. Or what a deed of blood some high-day, when the summery hath

Their clammy cells o'erbrim'd, and already ripening orchards And late flow'rs proclaim that starving winter approacheth, Nor will again any queen lead forth her swarm, dispeopling Their strawbuilt citadel; then watch how these busy workers Cease for awhile from toil; how crowding upon the devoted

Drones they fall; those easy fellows gave some provocation; Yet 'tis a foul massacre, cold murder of unsuspecting Life-long companions; and done bloodthirstily:—is not Exercise of pow'r a delight? have you not a doctrine That calls duty pleasure? What an if they make merry, saying 'Lazy-livers, runagates, evil beasts, greedy devourers, 411 'Too happy and too long ye've liv'd, unashamed to have outliv'd 'Your breeders, feeders, warmers and toiling attendants; 'Had-ye ever been worthy a public good to accomplish,

'Each had nobly perish'd long-ago. Unneeded, obese ones, 'Impious encumbrance, whose hope of service is over,

'Who did not, now can not, assist the community, YE DIE!'

My parable may serve. What wisdom man hath attain'd to Came to him of Nature's goodwill throu' tardy selection : Should her teaching accuse herself and her method impugn, I may share with her the reproach of approving as artist 421 Far other idēals than what seem needful in action. This difficulty besets our time. If you have an answer, Write me it, as you keep your salt in savour; or if toil Grant you an indulgence, here lies fair country, direct then Your Sabbath excursion westward, and spend a summer-day Preaching among the lilies what you'have preached to the chimneys.

PEACE ODE

ON CONCLUSION OF THE BOER WAR, JUNE 1902

Now joy in all hearts with happy auguries, And praise on all lips : for sunny June cometh Chasing the thick warcloud, that outspread Sulfurous and sullen over England.

Full thirty moons since unwilling enmity, Since daily suspense for hideous peril Of brethren unrescued, beleaguer'd Plague-stricken in cities unprovided,

Had quencht accustom'd gaiety, from the day When first the Dutchman's implacable folly, The country of Shakspeare defying, Thought with a curse to appal the nation

Whose threat to quell their kinsmen in Africa Anger'd awhile our easy democracy; That, reckless and patient of insult, Will not abide arrogant defiance :

They called to arms; and war began evilly. From slily forestor'd, well-hidden armouries, And early advantage, the despot Stood for a time prevalent against us

Till from the coil of slow-gathering battle He rancorous, with full moneybags hurried, Peddling to European envy His traffic of pennyworthy slander. ( 439 )

For since the first keel launch'd upon Ocean Ne'er had before so mighty an armament O'errun the realm of dark Poseidon, So resolutely measur'd the waters,

As soon from our ports in diligent passage O'er half the round world plow'd hither & thither The pathless Atlantic, revengeful Soldiery pouring on Esperanza:

Nor shows the Argive story of Ilium, With tale of ancient auxiliar cities, So vast a roll of wide alliance As, rallying to the aid of England,

Came from the swarming counties accoutering, And misty highlands of Caledonia, With Cambria's half-Celtic offspring, And the ever-merry fighting Irish:

Came too the new world's hardy Canadians, And from remote Australia champions Like huntsmen, and from those twin islands Lying off antipodal beyond her,

Under the old flag sailing across the sea: For mighty is blood's empery, where honour And freedom ancestral have upbuilt Inheritance to a lovely glory.

Thee, France, love I, fair lawgiver and scholar; Thy lively grace, thy temper illustrious; And thee, in all wisdom Diviner, Germany, deep melodist immortal;

Nor less have envied soft Italy's spirit, In marble unveil'd and eloquent colour: But best love I England, wer' I not Born to her aery should envy also.

(440)

Wherefore to-day one gift above every gift Let us beseech, that God will accord to her Always a right judgement in all things; Ev'n to celestial excellencies;

And grant us in long peace to accumulate Joy, and to stablish friendliness and commerce, And barter in markets for unpriced Beauty, the pearl of unending empire. May, 1902.

EVENING

FROM WM. BLAKE 1

COME, rosy angel, thy coronet donning Of starry jewels, smile upon ev'ry bed, And grant what each day-weary mortal, Labourer or lover, asketh of thee.

Smile thou on our loves, enveloping the land With dusky curtain : consider each blossom That timely upcloseth, that opens Her treasure of heavy-laden odours.

Now, while the west-wind slumbereth on the lake, Silently dost thou with delicate shimmer O'erbloom the frowning front of awful Night to a glance of unearthly silver.

No hungry wild beast rangeth in our forest, No tiger or wolf prowleth around the fold : Keep thou from our sheepcotes the tainting Invisible peril of the darkness.

THE FOURTH DIMENSION

(Hendecasyllables)

TRUEST-HEARTED of early friends, that Eton Long since gave to me,—Ah! 'tis all a life-time,— With my faithfully festive auspication Of Christmas merriment, this idle item.

Plato truly believ'd his archetypal Idēas to possess the fourth dimension: For since our solid is triple, but always Its shade only double, solids as umbrae Must lack equally one dimension also. Could Plato'have avoided or denied it?

(442)

So Saint Paul, when in argument opposing To our earthly bodies bodies celestial, Meant just those pretty Greek aforesaid abstracts Of four Plātonical divine dimensions.

If this be not a holy consolation More than plumpudding and a turkey roasted, Whereto you but address a third dimension, Try it, pray, as a pill to aid digestion : I can't find anything better to send you.

SINCE I believe in God the Father Almighty,
Man's Maker and Judge, Overruler of Fortune,
'Twere strange should I praise anything and refuse Him praise,
Should love the creature forgetting the Crēator,
Nor unto Him<sup>v</sup>in suff'ring and sorrow turn me:

Nay how coud I withdraw me from His embracing?

But since that I have seen not, and cannot know Him, Nor in my earthly temple apprehend rightly His wisdom and the heav'nly purpose ēternal; Therefore will I be bound to no studied system Nor argument, nor with delusion enslave me, Nor seek to pleáse Him in any foolish invention, Which my spirit within me, that loveth beauty And hateth evil, hath reprov'd as unworthy:

But I cherish my freedom in loving service, Gratefully adoring for delight beyond asking Or thinking, and in hours of anguish and darkness Confiding always on<sup>x</sup>His excellent greatness.

PYTHAGORAS

Scazons

THOU vainly, O Man, self-deceiver, exaltest Thyself the king and only thinker of this world, Where life aboundeth infinite to destroy thee.

Well-guided are thy forces and govern'd bravely, But like a tyrant cruel or savage monster Thou disregardest ignorantly all being Save only thine own insubordinate ruling:

As if the flower held not a happy pact with Spring; As if the brutes lack'd reason and sorrow's torment; Or ev'n divine love from the small atoms grew not, Their grave affection unto thy passion mingling.

An truly were it nobler and better wisdom To fear the blind thing blindly, lest it espy thee; And scrupulously do<sup>v</sup>honour to dumb creatures,

No one offending impiously, nor forcing To service of vile uses; ordering rather Thy slave to beauty, compelling lovingkindness.

So should desire, the only priestess of Nature Divinely inspir'd, like a good monarch rule thee, And lead thee onward in the consummate motion >Of life eternal unto heav'nly perfection.

AMIEL

WHY, O Maker of all, madest thou man with affections Tender above thyself, scrupulous and passionate?

Nay, if compassionate thou art, why, thou lover of men, Hidest thou thy face so pitilessly from us?

If thou in priesthoods and altar-glory delitest,

In torment and tears of trouble and suffering,

- Then wert thou displeas'd looking on soft human emotion, Thou must scorn the devout love of a sire to a son.
- 'Twas but vainly of old, Man, making Faith to approach thee, Held an imagin'd scheme of providence in honour;
- And, to redeem thy praise, judg'd himself cause, took upon him
  - Humbly the impossible burden of all misery.

Now casteth he away his books and logical idols Leaveth again his cell of terrified penitence;

- And that stony goddess, his first-born fancy, dethroning, Hath made after his own homelier art another;
- Made sweet Hope, the modest unportion'd daughter of anguish,

Whose brimming eye sees but dimly what it looketh on; Dreaming a day when fully, without curse or horrible cross,

Thou wilt deign to reveal her vision of happiness.

10

AH, what a change ! Thou, who didst emptily thy happiness seek

In pleasure, art finding thy pleasure in happiness.

Slave to the soul, whom thou heldest in slavery, art thou?

Thou, that wert but a vain idol, adored a goddess?

IBANT OBSCURI

A line for line paraphrase of a part of Virgil's Æneid, Bk. VI.

THEY wer' amid the shadows by night in loneliness obscure Walking forth i' the void and vasty dominyon of Ades; As by an uncertain moonray secretly illumin'd 270 One goeth in the forest, when heav'n is gloomily clouded, And black night hath robb'd the colours and beauty from all things.

Here in Hell's very jaws, the threshold of darkening Orcus, Have the avenging Cares laid their sleepless habitation, Wailing Grief, pallid Infections, & heart-stricken Old-age, Dismal Fear, unholy Famine, with low-groveling Want, Forms of spectral horror, gaunt Toil and Death the devourer, And Death's drowsy brother, Torpor; with whom, an inane rout, 278

All the Pleasures of Sin; there also the Furies in ambusht

(448)

Chamber of iron, afore whose bars wild War bloodyhanded Raged, and mad Discord high brandisht her venomous locks.

Midway of all this tract, with secular arms an immense elm Reareth a crowd of branches, aneath whose leafy protection Vain dreams thickly nestle, clinging unto the foliage on high: And many strange creatures of monstrous form and features Stable about th' entrance, Centaur and Scylla's abortion, And hundred handed Briareus, and Lerna the wildbeast Roaring amain, and clothed in frightful flame the Chimæra, Gorgons and Harpies, ' and Pluto's three-bodied ogre.

In terror Æneas upheld his sword to defend him, 290 With ready naked point confronting their dreaded onset : And had not the Sibyl warn'd how these lively spirits were All incorporeal, flitting in thin maskery of form,

He had assail'd their host, and wounded vainly the void air. Hence is a road that led them a-down to the Tartarean streams,

Where Acheron's whirlpool impetuous, into the reeky Deep of Cokytos disgorgeth, with muddy burden.

These floods one ferryman serveth, most awful of aspect, Of squalor infernal, Chāron : all filthily unkempt

That woolly white cheek-fleece, and fiery the blood-shotten eyeballs : 300

On one shoulder a cloak knotted-up his nudity vaunteth. He himself plieth oar or pole, manageth tiller and sheet, And the relics of mén in his ash-grey barge ferries over; Already old, but green to a god and hearty will age be.

Now hitherward to the bank much folk were crowding, a medley

Of men and matrons; nor did death's injury conceal Bravespirited heroes, young maidens beauteous unwed, And boys borne to the grave in sight of their sorrowing sires.

Countless as in the forest, at a first white frosting of autumn Sere leaves fall to the ground; or like whenas over the ocean Myrîad birds come thickly flocking, when wintry December 311 Drives them afar southward for shelter upon sunnier shores,

(449)

So throng'd they; and each his watery journey demanded, All to the further bank stretching-out their arms impatient: But the sullen boatman took now one now other at will, While some from the river forbade he', an' drave to a distance.

Æneas in wonder alike and deep pity then spake.

'Tell-me,' said he, 'my guide, why flock these crowds to the water?

Or what seek the spirits? or by what prejudice are these

Rudely denied, while those may upon the solemn river embark?' 320

T'whom * then briefly again the Avernian priestess in answer.

'O Son of Anchises, heavn's true-born glorious offspring,

Deep Cokytos it is thou seest & Hell's Stygian flood,

Whose dread sanction alone Jove's oath from falsehood assureth.

These whom thou pitiedst, th' outcast and unburied are they; That ferryman Chāron; those whom his bark carries over Are the buried; nor ever may mortal across the livid lake Journey, or e'er upon Earth his bones lie peacefully entomb'd: Haunting a hundred years this mournful plain they wander Doom'd for a term, which term expired they win to deliv'rance.'

Then he that harken'd stood agaze, his journey arrested, Grieving at heart and much pitying their unmerited lot.

There miserably fellow'd in death's indignity saw he

Leucaspis with his old Lycian seachieften Orontes,

Whom together from Troy in home-coming over the waters Wild weather o'ermaster'd, engulphing both shipping and men.

And lo! his helmsman, Palinurus, in eager emotion, Who on th' Afric course, in bright star-light, with a fair wind,

Fell by slumber opprest unheedfully into the wide sea :

Whom i' the gloom when hardly he knew, now changed in affliction, 340

* Line 321. 'T'whom' is from Milton, in imitation of Virgil's admired Olli. It is not admitted in the ordinary prosody.

- First he addrest. 'What God, tell-me O Palinurus, of all gods
- Plúckt you away and drown'd i' the swift wake-water abandon'd?
- For never erst nor in else hath kind responsive Apollo Led-me astray, but alone in this thing wholly deluded,
- When he aver'd that you, to remote Ausonia steering,
- Safe would arrive. Where now his truth? Is this the promis'd faith?'
- But he, 'Neither again did Phœbus wrongly bespeak thee,
- My general, nor yet did a god in his enmity drown me:
- For the tiller, wherewith I led thy fleet's navigation,
- And still clung to, was in my struggling hold of it unshipt, 350 And came with-me' o'erboard. Ah! then, by ev'ry accurst sea.
- Tho' in utter despair, far less mine own peril awed me
- Than my thought o' the ship, what harm might háp to her, yawing
- In the billows helmless, with a high wind and threatening gale.
- Two nights and one day buffeted held I to the good spar
- Windborne, with the current far-drifting, an' on the second morn
- Saw, when a great wave raised me aloft, the Italyan highlands;
- And swimming-on with effort got ashore, nay already was saved,
- I ad not there the wrecking savages, who spied-me defenceless,
- Scarce clinging outwearied to a rock, half-drowned & speechless, 360

Beat me to death for hope of an unfound booty upon me. Now to the wind and tidewash a sport my poor body rolleth.

Wherefore thee, by heav'n's sweet light & airness, I pray, By thy Sire's memories, thy hope of youthful Iulus,

Rescue-me from these ills, brave master; Go to Velija, O'er my mortality's spoil cast thou th' all-hallowing dust:

G g 2

Or better, if so be the goddess, heav'n's lady-Creatress, Show-thee the way, —nor surely without high favoring impulse Mak'st thouventur' across these floods & black Ereban lake,— Give thy hand-to-me', an' o'er their watery boundary bring me 370

Unto the haven of all, death's home of quiet abiding.' Thus-he lamented, anon spake sternly the maid of Avernus. 'Whence can such unruly desire, Palinurus, assail thee? Wilt thou th' Eumenidan waters visit unburied? o'erpass Hell's Stygian barrier? Chāron's boat unbidden enter? Cease to believe that fate can bé by prayër averted. Let my sooth a litel thy cruel destiny comfort Surely the people of all thy new-found country, determin'd By heav'n-sent omens will achieve thy purification, 379 Build thee a tomb of honour with yearly solemnity ordain'd, And dedicate for ever thy storied name to the headland.'

These words lighten awhile his fear, his sadness allaying, Nor vain was the promise his name should eternally survive.

They forthwith their journey renew, tending to the water: Whom when th' old boatman descried silently emerging Out o' the leafy shadows, advancing t'ward the river-shore, Angrily gave-he challenge, imperious in salutation. 'Whosoever thou be, that approachest my river all-arm'd, Stand to announce thyself, nor further make footing onward. Here 'tis a place of ghosts, of night & drowsy delusion: 390 Forbidden unto living mortals is my Stygian keel: Truly not Alkides embarkt I cheerfully, nor took Of Theseus or Pirithous glad custody, nay though God-sprung were they both, warriors invincible in might: Hé 'twas would sportively the guard of Tartarus enchain, Yea and from the palace with gay contumely dragged him: Théy to ravish Hell's Queen from Pluto's chamber attempted.'

Then thus th' Amphrysian prophetess spake briefly in answer.

'No such doughty designs are ours, Cease thou to be moved! Nor these sheeny weapons intend force. Cerberus unvext

Surely for us may affray the spirits with 'howling eternal, 401 And chaste Persephone enjoy her queenly seclusion.

Troian Æneas, bravest and gentlest-hearted,

Hath left earth to behold his father in out-lying Ades.

If the image of a so great virtue doth not affect thee,

Yet this bough'-glittering she reveal'd its golden avouchment-

'Thou mayst know.' Forthwith his bluster of heart was appeased :

Nor word gave-he, but admiring the celestial omen,

That bright sprigg of weird for so long period unseen,

Quickly he-túrneth about his boat, to the margin approaching, 410

And the spirits, that along the gun'al benchways sat in order, Drave he ashore, offering readyroom: but when the vessel took Ponderous Æneas, her timbers crankily straining

Creak'd, an' a brown water came trickling through the upper seams.

Natheless both Sibyl and Hero, slow wafted across stream, Safe on th' ooze & slime's hideous desolation alighted.

Hence the triple-throated bellowings of Cerberus invade All Hell, where opposite the arrival he lies in a vast den.

But the Sibyl, who mark'd his necklaces of stiffening snakes,

Cast him a cake, poppy-drench'd with drowsiness and honeysweeten'd. 420

He, rabid and distending a-hungry' his triply-cavern'd jaws,

Gulp'd the proffer'd morsel ; when slow he relaxt his immense bulk,

And helplessly diffused fell out-sprawl'd over the whole cave. Æneas fled by, and left full boldly the streamway,

That biddeth all men across but alloweth ne'er a returning.

Already now i' the air were voices heard, lamentation, And shrilly crying of infant souls by th' entry of Ades. Babes, whom unportion'd of sweet life, unblossoming buds, One black day carried off and chokt in dusty corruption.— Next are they who falsely accused were wrongfully condemn'd

Unto the death : but here their lot by justice is order'd. 431 Inquisitor Minos, with his urn, summoning to assembly His silent council, their deed or slander arraigneth. — Next the sullen-hearted, who rashly with else-innocent hand Their own life did-away, for hate or weariness of light, Imperiling their souls. How gladly, if only in Earth's air, Would-they again their toil, discomfort, and pities endure ! Fate obstructs : deep sadness now, unloveliness awful Rings them about, & Styx with ninefold circle enarmeth.—

Not far hence they come to a land extensive on all sides; 440 Weeping Plain 'tis call'd:—such name such country deserveth.

Here the lovers, whom fiery passion hath cruelly consumed, Hide in leafy alleys and pathways bow'ry, sequester'd By woodland myrtle, nor hath Death their sorrow ended. Here was Phædra to see, Procris and sád Eriphyle, She of her unfilial deathdoing wound not ashamed,

Evadne, 'and Pasiphae 'and Laodamia,

And epicene Keneus, a woman to a man metamorphos'd, Now by Fate converted again to her old feminine form.

'Mong these shades, her wound yet smarting ruefully, Dido Wander'd throu' the forest-obscurity; and Æncas 451 Standing anigh knew surely the dim form, though i' the darkness

Veil'd,—as when one seëth a young moon on the horizon, Or thinketh to 'have seen i' the gloaming her delicate horn; Tearfully in oncelov'd accents he-lovingly addrest her.

'Unhappy ! ah ! too true 'twas told me' O unhappy Dido, Dead thou wert ; to the fell extreme didst thy passion ensue. And was it I that slew-thee? Alas ! Smite falsity, ye heav'ns !

And Hell-fury attest-me', if here any sanctity reigneth,

Unwilling, O my Queen, my step thy kingdom abandon'd. 460 Me the command of a god, who here my journey determines Through Ereban darkness, through fields sown with desolation,

Drave-me to wrong my heart. Nay tho' deep-pain'd to desert thee

I ne'er thought to provoke thy pain of mourning eternal.

Stay yet awhile, ev'n here unlook'd for again look upon me :

Fly-me not ere the supreme words that Fate grantcth us are said.'

Thus he: but the spirit was raging, fiercely defiant, Whom he approach'd with words to appease, with tears for atonement.

She to the ground downcast her 'eyes in fixity averted; Nor were her features more by his pleading affected, Than wer' a face of flint, or of ensculptur'd alabaster. At length she started disdainful, an' angrily withdrew Into a shady thicket : where her grief kindly Sychæus Sooth'd with other memories, first love and virginal embrace. And ever Æneas, to remorse by deep pity soften'd, With brimming eyes pursued her queenly figure disappearing.

Thence the Sibyl to the plain's extremest boundary led him, Where world-fam'd warriors, a lionlike company, haunted. Here great Tydeus saw he eclips'd, & here the benighted Phantom of Adrastus, ' of stalwart Parthenopæus. 480 Here long mourn'd upon earth went all that prowess of Ilium Fallen in arms; whom, when he-beheld them, so many and great,

Much he-bewail'd. By Thersilochus his mighty brothers stood,

Children of Antenor; here Demetrian Polyphates,

And Idæus, in old chariot-pose dreamily stalking.

- Right and left the spirits flocking on stood crowding around him;
- Nor their eyes have enough ; they touch, find joy unwonted Marching in equal stép, and eager of his coming enquire.
- But th' Argive leaders, and they that obey'd Agamemnon
- When they saw that Trojan in arms come striding among them, 490

Old terror invaded their ranks : some fled stricken, as once

(455)

They to the ships had fled for shelter ; others the alarm raise, But their thín utterance mock'd vainly the lips wide parted. Here too Deiphobus he espied, his fair body mangled,

Cruelly dismember'd, disfeatur'd cruelly his face,

Face and hands; and lo! shorn closely from either temple, Gone wer' his ears, and maim'd each nostril in impious outrage.

Barely he-knew him again cow'ring shamefastly' an' hiding His dire plight, & thus he 'his old companyon accosted.

'Noblest Deiphobus, great Teucer's intrepid offspring, 500 Who was it, inhuman, coveted so cruel a vengeance?

Who can hav' adventur'd on thee? That last terrible night Thou wert said to hav' exceeded thy bravery, an' only

On thy faln enemies wert faln by weariness o'ercome.

Wherefor' upon the belov'd sea-shore thine empty sepulchral Mound I erected, aloud on thy ghost tearfully calling.

Name and shield keep for-thee the place ; but thy body, dear friend,

Found I not, to commit to the land ere sadly' I left it.'

Then the son of Priam ' 'I thought not, friend, to reproach thee :

- Thou didst all to the full, ev'n my shade's service, accomplish. 501
- 'Twas that uninterdicted adultress from Lacedæmon

Drave-me to doom, & planted in hell, her trophy triumphant. On that night,—how vain a security and merrymaking

Then sullied us thou know'st, yea must too keenly remember,---

When the ill-omened horse o'erleapt Troy's lofty defences,

Dragg'd in amidst our town pregnant with a burden of arm'd men.

She then, her Phrygian women in feign'd phrenzy collecting, All with torches aflame, in wild Bacchic orgy paraded, Flaring a signal aloft to her ambusht confederate Greeks.

I from a world of care had fled with weariful eyelids 520 Unto my unhappy chamber', an' lay fast lockt in oblivyon,

Sunk to the depth of rest as a child that nought will awaken. Meanwhile that paragon helpmate had robb'd me of all arms, E'en from aneath the pillow my blade of trust purloining ;— Then to the gate ; wide flings she it op'n an' calls Menelaus. Would not a so great service attach her faithful adorer ? Might not it extinguish the repute of her earlier illdeeds ? Brief-be the tale. Menelaus arrives : in company there came His crime-counsellor Æolides. . So, and more also Déal-ye', O Gods, to the Greeks ! an' if I call justly upon you.—

But thou; what fortune hitherward, in turn prithy tell me, Sent-thee alive, whether erring upon the bewildering Ocean, Or high-prompted of heav'n, or by Fate wearily hunted, That to the sunless abodes and dusky demesnes thou approachest?'

Ev'n as awhile they thus converse it is already mid-day Unperceiv'd, but aloft earth's star had turn'd to declining. And haply 'Æneas his time in parley had outgone, Had not then the Sibyl with word of warning avized him. 'Night hieth, Æneas; in tears our journey delayeth. See our road, that it here in twain disparteth asunder; 540 This to the right, skirting by th' high city-fortresses of Dis, Endeth in Elysium, our path; but that to the leftward Only receives their feet who wend to eternal affliction.' Deiphobus then again, 'Speak not, great priestess, in anger; I will away to refill my number among th' unfortun'd. Thou, my champyon, adieu ! Go where thy glory awaits thee!'

When these words he 'had spok'n, he-turn'd and hastily was fled.

Æneas then look'd where leftward, under a mountain, Outspread a wide city lay, threefold with fortresses engirt, Lickt by a Tartarean river of live fire, the torrential 550 Red Phlegethon, and huge boulders his roundy bubbles be : Right i' the front stareth the columnar gate adamantine, Such that no battering warfare of mén or immortals

- E'er might shake; blank-faced to the cloud its bastion upstands.
- Tisiphone thereby in a bloodspotty robe sitteth alway
- Night and day guarding sleeplessly the desperat entrance,
- Wherefrom an awestirring groan-cry and fierce clamour outburst,
- Sharp lashes, insane yells, dragg'd chains and clanking of iron.
  - Æneas drew back, his heart by' his hearing affrighted :
- 'What manner of criminals, my guide, now tell-me,' hequestion'd, 560

'Or what their penalties? what this great wail that ariseth?' Answering him the divine priestess, 'Brave hero of Ilîûm, O'er that guilty threshold no breath of purity may come : But Hecate, who gave me to rule i' the groves of Avernus, Herself led me around, & taught heav'n's high retribution. Here Cretan Rhadamanthus in unblest empery reigneth, Secret crime to punish,—full surely he wringeth avowal Even of all that on earth, by vain impunity harden'd, Men sinning have put away from thought till'impenitent death.

On those convicted tremblers then leapeth avenging 570 Tisiphone with keen flesh-whips and vipery scourges, And of her implacable sisters inviteth attendance.' —Now sudden on screeching hinges that portal accursed Flung wide its barriers.—'In what dire custody, mark thou, Is the threshold ! guarded by how grim sentry the doorway ! More terrible than they the ravin'd insatiable Hydra That sitteth angry within. Know too that Tartarus itself Dives sheer gaping aneath in gloomy profundity downward Twice that height that a man looketh-up t'ward airy Olympus.

Lowest there those children of Earth, Titanian elders, 580 In the abyss, where once they fell hurl'd, yet wallowing lie. There the Alöïdæ saw I, th' ungainly rebel twins Primæval, that assay'd to devastate th' Empyræan

With huge hands, and rob from Jove his kingdom immortal. And there Salmoneus I saw, rend'ring heavy payment,

For that he idly' had mockt heav'n's fire and thunder electric;

With chariot many-yoked and torches brandishing on high Driving among 'his Graian folk in Olympian Elis;

Exultant as a God he rode in blasphemy worshipt. 589 Fool, who th' unreckoning tempest and deadly dreaded bolt Thought to mimic with brass and confus'd trample of horses ! But 'him th' Omnipotent, from amidst his cloudy pavilyon,

Blasted, an' eke his rattling car and smoky pretences

- Extinguish'd at a stroke, scattering his dust to the whirlwind. There too huge Tityos, whom Earth that gendereth all things
- Once foster'd, spreadeth-out o'er nine full roods his immense limbs.
- On him a wild vulture with hook-beak greedily gorgeth
- His liver upsprouting quick as that Hell-chicken eateth.
- Shé diggeth and dwelleth under the vast ribs, her bloody bare neck
- Lifting anon: ne'er loathes she the food, ne'er fails the renewal. 6co
- Where wer' an end their names to relate, their crimes and torments?
- Some o'er whom a hanging black rock, slipping at very point of Falling, ever threateneth: Couches luxurious invite Softly-cushion'd to repose: Tables for banqueting outlaid Tempt them ever-famishing: hard by them a Fury regardeth, And should they but a hand uplift, trembling to the dainties, She with live firebrand and direful yell springeth on them.

Their crimes,—not to' hav lov'd a brother while love was allow'd them;

ĩ

Or to' hav struck their father, or inveigled a dependant; 609 Or who chancing alone on wealth prey'd lustfully thereon, Nor made share with others, no greater company than they:

- Some for adultery slain; some their bright swords had offended
- Drawn i' the wrong: or a master's trust with perfidy had met :
- Dungeon'd their penalties they await. Look not to be answer'd
- What that doom, nor th' end of these men think to determine.

Sóme aye roll heavy rocks, some whirl dizzy on the revolving Spokes of a pendant wheel : sitteth and to eternity shall sit Unfortun'd Theseus; while sad Phlegias saddeneth hell With vain oyez to' all loud crying a tardy repentance, "Walk, O man, i' the fear of Gód, and learn to be righteous!" Here another, who sold for gold his country, promoting 621 Her tyrant; or annull'd for a base bribe th' inviolate law. This one had unfather'd his blood with bestial incest : All some fearful crime had dared & vaunted achievement. What mind could harbour the offence of such recollection, Or lend welcoming ear to the tale of iniquity and shame, And to the pains wherewith such deeds are justly requited?

Ev'n when thus she' had spok'n, the priestess dear to Apollo,

'But, ready, come let us ón, perform-we the order appointed ! Hast'n-we (saith-she), the wall forged on Cyclopian anvils Now I see, an' th' archway in Ætna's furnace attemper'd, 631

Where my lore biddeth us to depose our high-privileg'd gift.'

Then together they trace i' the drooping dimness a footpath,

Whereby, faring across, they arrive at th' arches of iron. Æneas stept into the porch, and duly besprinkling

His body with clear water affixt his bough to the lintel;

And, having all perform'd at length with ritual exact,

They came out on a lovely pleasance, that dream'd-of oasis, Fortunate isle, the abode o' the blest, their fair Happy Woodland.

Here is an ampler sky, those meads ar' azur'd by a gentler

Sun than th' Earth, an' a new starworld their darkness adorneth. 641

Some were matching afoot their speed on a grassy arena, In playful combat some wrestling upon the yellow sand, Part in a dance-rhythm or poetry's fine phantasy engage; While full-toga'd anear their high-priest musical Orpheus Bade his prime sev'n tones in varied harmony discourse, Now with finger, anon sounding with an ivory plectrum. And here Æneas met Teucer's fortunate offspring, High-spirited heroes, fair-favor'd sons o' the morning, Assarac and Ilos and Dardan founder of Ilium: 650 Their radiant chariots he' espied rank't empty afar off, Their spears planted afield, their horses wandering at large, Grazing around:-as on earth their joy had been, whether armour

- Or chariot had charmed them, or if 'twer' good manage and care
- Of the gallant warhorse, the delight liv'd here unabated:
- Lo! then others, that about the meadow sat feasting in idless.
- And chanting for joy a familyar pæan of old earth,

By fragrant laurel o'ercanopied, where 'twixt enamel'd banks Bountiful Eridanus glides throu' their bosky retirement.

Here were men who bled for honour, their country defending; 660

Priests, whose lives wer' a flame of chastity on God's altar; Holy poets, content to await their crown of Apollo;

Discoverers, whose labour had aided life or ennobled;

Or who fair memories had left through kindly deserving.

On their brow a fillet pearl-white distinguisheth all these:

Whom the Sibyl, for they drew round, in question accosted, And most Musæus, who tower'd noble among them,

Center of all that sea of bright faces looking upward.

'Tell, happy souls, and thou poet and high mystic illustrious, Where dwelleth Anchises? what home hath he? for 'tis in 670 his quest

(461)

We hither have made journey across Hell's watery marches.'

Thertó with brief parley rejoin'd that mystic of old-time. 'In no certain abode we-remain : by turn the forest glade Haunt-we, lilied stream-bank, sunny mead; and o'er valley and rock

At will rove-we: but if ye aright your purpose arede me,

Mount-ye the hill: myself will prove how easy the pathway.'

- Speaking he léd: and come to the upland, sheweth a fair plain
- Gleaming aneath; and they, with grateful adieu, the descent made.

Now Lord Anchises was down i' the green valley musing, Where the spirits confin'd that await mortal resurrection 680 While diligently he mark'd, his thought had turn'd to his own kin,

Whose numbers he-reckon'd, an' of all their progeny foretold Their fate and fortune, their ripen'd temper an' action.

He then, when he' espied Æneas t'ward him approaching

O'er the meadow, both hands uprais'd and ran to receive him,

- Tears in his eyes, while thus his voice in high passion outbrake.
- 'Ah, thou'rt come, thou'rt come! at length thy dearly belov'd grace
- Conquering all hath won-tnee the way. 'Tis allow'd to behold thee,

O my son,---yea again the familyar raptur' of our speech.

Nay, I look't for 't thus, counting patiently the moments, 690 And ever expected; nor did fond fancy betray me.

From what lands, my son, from what life-dangering ocean Art-thou arrived? full mighty perils thy path hav' opposed: And how nearly the dark Libyan thy destiny o'erthrew !' Then 'he, 'Thy spirit, O my sire, 'twas thy spirit often Sadly appearing aroused-me to seek thy fair habitation. My fleet moors i' the blue Tyrrhene : all with-me goeth well. Grant-me to touch thy hand as of old, and thy body embrace.' Speaking, awhile in tears his feeling mutinied, and when For the longing contact of mortal affection, he out-held 700

His strong arms, the figure sustain'd them not: 'twas as empty

E'en as a windworn cloud, or a phantom of irrelevant sleep.

On the level bosom of this vale more thickly the tall trees Grow, an' aneath quivering poplars and whispering alders Lethe's dreamy river throu' peaceful scenery windeth. Whereby now flitted in vast swarms many people of all lands, As when in early summer 'honey-bees on a flowery pasture Pill the blossoms, hurrying to' an' fro,—innumerous are they, Revisiting the ravish'd lily cups, while all the meadow hums.

Æneas was turn'd to the sight, and marvelling inquired, 710 'Say, sir, what the river that there i' the vale-bottom I see? And who they that thickly along its bank have assembled?'

Then Lord Anchises, 'The spirits for whom a second life And body are destined ar' arriving thirsty to Lethe, And here drink th' unmindful draught from wells of oblivyon. My heart greatly desired of this very thing to acquaint thee, Yea, and show-thee the men to-be-born, our glory her'after, So to gladden thine heart where now thy voyaging endeth.' 'Must it then be-believ'd, my sire, that a soul which attaineth Elysium will again submit to her old body-burden? 720 Is this well? what hap can awake such dire longing in them ?' 'I will tell thee', O son, nor keep thy wonder awaiting,'

Answereth Anchises, and all expoundeth in order.

'Know first that the heavens, and th' Earth, and space fluid or void,

Night's pallid orb, day's Sun, and all his starry coævals, Are by one spirit inly quickened, and, mingling in each part, Mind informs the matter, nature's complexity ruling.

Thence the living creatures, man, brute, and ev'ry feather'd fowl,

And what breedeth in Ocean aneath her surface of argent : Their seed knoweth a fiery vigour, 'tis of airy divine birth, 730 In so far as unimpeded by an alien evil,

Nor dull'd by the body's framework condemn'd to corruption. Hence the desires and vain tremblings that assail them, unable

Darkly prison'd to arise to celestial exaltation; Nor when death summoneth them anon earth-life to relinquish,

Can they in all discard their stain, nor wholly away with Mortality's plaguespots. It must-be that, O, many wild graffs Deeply at 'heart engrain'd have rooted strangely upon them : Wherefore must suffering purge them, yea, Justice atone them With penalties heavy as their guilt : some purify exposed 740 Hung to the viewless winds, or others long watery searchings Low i' the deep wash clean, some bathe in fiery renewal : Each cometh unto his own retribution, --- if after in ample Elysium we attain, but a few, to the fair Happy Woodland, Yet slow time still worketh on us to remove the defilement, Till it hath eaten away the acquir'd dross, leaving again free That first fiery vigour, the celestial virtue of our life. All whom here thou seest, hav' accomplished purification : Unto the stream of Lethe a god their company calleth, That forgetful of old failure, pain & disappointment, 750 They may again into' earthly bodies with glad courage enter.'

Twin be the gates o' the house of sleep : as fable opineth 893 One is of horn, and thence for a true dream outlet is easy: Fair the other, shining perfected of ivory carven ; But false are the visions that thereby find passage upward. Soon then as Anchises had spok'n, he-led the Sibyl forth And his son, and both dismisst from th' ivory portal.
