The Two Bushrangers.

We extract the following Australian sketch from an article in Tail's Magazine:
To waste as few words as possible in unnecessary details, or by way of preface—the names of these two bushrangers were Dalton and Kelly, both prisoners of the Crown in Van Dieman's Land, where their many outrages, escapes, and deeds of daring will long be remembered by those who suffered thereby. Dalton, at the time of which our narrative opens, was a powerfully built, active man, about thirty years of age. He had been transported when in his teen's to Van Dieman's Land, and had besides passed a short portion of his time in Norfolk Island, well called the "Convict's Ocean Hall." Those who wish to know how far it was possible to convert one of the fairest Isles of the South Pacific into an earthly pandemonium have only to read the Blue Book published with reference to that place of penal servitude before the convicts were removed thence by a recent Government order.—Therein will be found facts almost too horrible for credence—but which in their official shape demand it.

From this abode of crime and suffering, hardened by the evil association of the place working on a nature already brutalized, was Dalton taken back to Van Dieman's Land once more. There he and his friend and accomplice, Kelly, then about two and twenty, were confined in a penal establishment on an arm of the sea or strait, which the officials thought wide enough to prevent the possibility of an escape. But desperate men love desperate means, and where there is a will, salt water will not prevent them finding a way to liberty. And so, one day, reckless of the loaded muskets of their guards, whose vigilance for a while they had ingeniously managed to elude, Dalton, Kelly and some half dozen more convicts, made up their minds, shackled with fetters as their legs were, to reach the opposite shore by swimming, or perish in the attempt.

They were all stalwart men, but save Dalton and Kelly, none were particularly versed in the art of keeping their heads long above water. Four of them had not swam far when they began to sink, one after the other—then there was a shriek—a stifled cry—and the billows rolled over the heads of the dying. But still Dalton and Kelly swam desperately on for life and liberty. Dalton had outstripped Kelly by twenty or thirty yards, when he heard a "convulsive splash" behind him, formed by that appalling

"bubbling cry
Of a strong swimmer in his agony."
It came from Kelly. Dalton swam back to his dying companion and succeeded in keeping his head above water, and encouraging him by exclaiming, "Take hold of me, old boy; I can swim for another hour yet!" And so, at last, greatly exhausted, their feet touched terra firma—and they were free.

To knock off their fetters was, of course, their first step. To obtain arms, which, as knowing they would soon be hotly pursued, they needed to protect themselves from capture, they started off on a pillaging expedition, robbing the neighboring stations one after another—with the intention, ultimately of reaching Victoria across Bass' Straits.

Their mode of procedure at one of these stations, in its audacity is almost unparalleled, when we consider its apparently poor chance of success. Indeed, did we not know of other and like cases occurring about that time, we would not venture to ask anybody to believe us.—Let our readers picture to themselves a hut outside one of those stations filled with the settler's servants, some free hands, others "ticket of leavers," some eating, others smoking their pipes placidly in the door-way. Two men approached the station, and one of them falls behind the other who goes up to the door-way of the hut and asks one of the smokers if he knows the bushrangers are about.

On being answered in the affirmative, he points his gun at his respondent's breast, saying—"I'm one of them, and you're a dead man if you don't go into the hut." This was Kelly. The man could see no valid reason for non-compliance under such peculiarly unpleasant pressure, and was obeying the imperious order when turning round, he saw another of his fellow servants standing against a corner of the hut, and another man standing over him, with a gun levelled at his heart.—This other man was Kelly's accomplice, Dalton.

Kelly still kept his position at the hut's door-way, gun in hand, informing those inside—there was actually fourteen of them—that he would blow out the brains of the first man who offered to move. It may here be said by an incredulous reader that we are crediting an absurdity. Facts are stubborn things. These fourteen men were afterwards tried for alleged collusion with Dalton and Kelly, when those who were "ticket-of-leavers" were imprisoned, till the Governor being petitioned by their free fellow servants who strenuously declared their innocence, they were set at liberty. And such cases were by no means uncommon; two armed bushrangers, before and since, have cowed more men than these, as any Australian settler might testify. But to continue; Kelly then called out to his craven captives that if there were any Crown prisoners amongst them, they were to speak. One man only replied in the affirmative. The others, possibly, were too frightened to speak at all. The bushrangers then with many fearful imprecations ordered him to tie the arms of his companions together, one by one. And this was actually done, the servants offering no resistance whatever.

As soon as they were all tied "tight and safe," as Kelly ordered, the desperado went out to his worthy friend Dalton, who was still "mounting guard" over the unhappy man against the corner of the hut, as aforesaid. Kelly then tied his hands behind his back and dragged him into the hut to his fellow victims.—Whereupon Dalton proceeded to deliver with emphasis greatly assisted with the murderous weapon he kept leveled point-blank at their heads, a speech such as follows, divested of the oaths that garnished it.

"Hark ye, my lads, this sort of game ain't my choice, and I'll oath it. The fault lies with them that 'lagged' me (transported him, in polite English) when I was only fourteen years old. I've tried hard over and over again, to get my freedom by fair means. And I think I've got it now. What I want is money, my boys, and money I'll have. I don't want to hurt a man of you. I'd be sorry to hurt a good man any how. So only keep you mute as mice—or I'll scatter your brains on the floor."

Thus adjured it may readily be imagined the poor men stood still enough, while Dalton walked off, leaving them under Kelly's charge, to the house of the settler whose servants they were. On arriving there he pursued similar tactics; advancing towards the sitting-room, where several men and women were assembled, with his gun cocked and pointed at the occupants. Luckily a lady was sitting behind the door, and on Dalton's opening it, she perceived, through the chink, his gun; and so, with great presence of mind, she slammed the door in his face; which gave the others time to collect their energies, and reach guns, &c., which hung over the chimney-piece. Dalton hearing these bellicose preparations going on inside, to use an Americanism "made himself scarce;" and after laying hands on what he could conveniently carry away, joined Kelly, who was guarding the servants in the hut, and with him at his side, made good his flight.

Not satisfied with this lawless deed, they went to robbing station after station, with the police now fairly awoken on their trail. Their ammunition was fast failing, and it became necessary to replenish at a lonely hut, whose occupants they resolved should contribute powder and bullets, if nothing more. They accordingly opened the doors aforesaid, guns in hand—but for once they made a mistake as to a hut's occupants—some of whom happened to be the police officers who were on the lookout for them.

No sooner had Kelly opened the door than one of the officers, with (as old Fuller quaintly phrases it in his "English Worthless") "more of the sails of valor than the ballast of discretion," rushed to capture him when Dalton fired, and the hapless delegate of colonial justice fell dead on the threshold, shot through the heart. With a sardonic smile on his face and his second barrel ready cocked, Dalton said to the rest of the party inside:

"What do you think of that for one? Now, then, can't you send another?"

This probably for the occasion saved his neck and Kelly's—for they got away without trouble.

But their impunity was of brief duration. Heavier rewards were offered for their capture, and they were hunted up and down the island which had been the scene of their lawless exploits, like wolves. At last, seeing no other means of escape, they had the hardihood to seize a whaleboat, and by their threats of instant death in case of refusal, prevailed on three or four boatmen to man and work it over Bass' Straits to Victoria. In this open whaleboat, after narrowly escaping death by water, they landed to risk their necks on land on the beach of Western Port, whence they made their way straight to Melbourne. The police of Victoria, were, however, keeping a sharp look-out for such visitors. The unfortunate boatmen who had safely worked the whaleboat across Bass' Straits were arrested at a place between Western Point and Melbourne. But nothing more as to the whereabouts of the fugitives was ascertained till the capture of Dalton at Melbourne, which, as a sample of Australian "cuteness" deserves commendation.

After playing "hide and seek" in the most disreputable quarter of that city for some days, Dalton had resolved on taking a berth in a ship bound for England.

But he was not to escape outraged justice. The following account of his capture is correct in its principal details. At the time it occurred the Melbourne Argus was full of nothing else. About the hour of midnight the desperado entered the tavern with a man to whom he had promised £4 if put on board "The Northumberland," at daylight. Little did the man think that his intended employer was no other than the famous bushranger for whose apprehension such heavy rewards had been offered day after day.—Dalton then asked the landlord to change some Van Dieman's Land notes into gold for him, saying that he was going to sail the next morning for England. The landlord had not gold enough for that purpose, and while they were talking, a gentleman, who had formerly been a cadet in the police force, came in and went up to the bar. He immediately, for some reason or other, suspected that there was a "screw loose some where," and resolved on seeing into the matter.

Accordingly, having first hieroglyphed or telegraphed the landlord, who was his friend, to keep his own counsel, he civilly accosted Dalton, saying that he was a broker, and would change the notes for him if he would accompany him to his place of business, whereupon Dalton and the boatman followed the officer, who led the way. The night was pitch dark, and by the time they had walked a short distance, they came to the police court. Fortunately, owing to the murkiness of the night, the outline of the building was not clear, even to the quick eye of the convict. The officer, pointing to the door—which was no other than the private entrance for the magistrate—said "this is my office." As another piece of good fortune for society, the policeman at the door was in plain clothes, and so were several detectives who were lounging about the threshold. As soon as they were fairly inside, said he had these men, pointing to Dalton, and the boatman, there on suspicion of having received certain notes (which the convict had given him as they were coming along) by foul means. Dalton by this time, of course, was aware of the nature of the place, but knowing the necessity of coolness, he preserved his sang froid admirably, puffing leisurely at a cigar, and expressing surprise at being beguiled to a police station on so absurd and groundless a charge.

The inspector on duty finding that there was really no sustainable charge, returned his notes, and as he was, much to the chagrin of the ex-officer, swaggering out of the office, when three of the detectives outside, probably recognizing him from his description published over and over again, rushed upon him. The convict struggled desperately to draw a pistol from his belt, but the police were too many for him, and he was overpowered, after fighting sternly and silently for liberty, like a fox among a pack of hounds, for a few minutes. And when he saw further resistance was useless, he accepted his awkward position quietly, and ejaculated bitterly "You have secured £500 among you, for my name is Dalton."

After a while he sternly added that if the night had not been so dark, and if he had only seen the bars of the station windows, he assuredly would have sent a bullet through his friend's, the pretended gold broker's head for his reward. He was handcuffed speedily, and when searched, besides three or four horse pistols, there was found on him a stock of jewelry sufficient to set up any humbled tradesman on a small scale; for watches, rings, pencil cases, pins, seals and keys, nuggets, notes and sovereigns, were all neatly stowed away about different parts of his apparel. On being brought before the magistrate, his demeanor was reckless in the extreme. He said he was guilty not only of the murder of the policeman before narrated, but of many other crimes not then laid to his charge; that he was utterly sick and weary of the hopeless life he had so long led; and so far as he was concerned he only wished he could be hung immediately.

Kelly, his old confederate, was soon after arrested, and they were both sent back strongly guarded and heavily fettered to Van Dieman's Land, where they were tried and executed, dying as reckless as they had lived, like men, to use Shakespeare's words, "that apprehended death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken sleep; reckless, fearless of what's past, present, or to come; insensible of mortality, desperately mortal."

A SMALL shopkeeper in Chicago professes his services to the public as a letter writer. He guarantees his letters to "start a parent's tear, establish the durability of a friend's affection, and awaken the full ecstasy of a lover's heart." Can any letter writer promise more!

RELIEVED.—An afflicted husband was returning from the funeral of his wife, when a friend asked him how he was.
"Well," he said, pathetically, "I think I feel better of that little walk."

A MOTHER'S DEVOTION.—The wife of a farm laborer living in Buckinghamshire has a little son whose lower limbs are unfortunately useless. Medical advice and skill likely to be of any service was not to be had except in the metropolis, and was available to her except in connection with one of the public hospitals. The poor child's case, though not by any means hopeless, was not one which, according to hospital regulations, could be admitted for indoor treatment; as an outdoor patient, all that was possible might be done for him. Out of her husband's scanty earnings, however, it was impossible that she could pay for the conveyance to and from London; but a mother's love was not to be defrauded of its object by any such obstacle. It was possible that the boy might be cured, and that was enough.

The thirty miles intervening between him and the means of his possible restoration were to her affection but as a step. She put her boy on her shoulder, and, week by week, she carried him all those weary miles, slept for a night at the hospital, and next day, resuming her precious load, bore him cheerfully home again. For nearly four months did she do this, till her great exertions brought on a serious illness, and she herself had to seek hospital care, and was some weeks stretched upon one of its pallets. Recovered, but never again to be the strong and healthy woman she was before, she resumed the task of maternal affection, and though less frequently, still carries her child to receive the attention of the kind and skillful physicians of the noble establishment. Last week we know that she did so.—Manchester Guardian.

BEAUTIFUL PARAGRAPH.—The following lines are taken from Sir Humphrey Davy's Salmonia: "I envy no quality of mind and intellect in others—be it genius, power, wit or fancy—but if I could choose what would be most delightful, and I believe most useful to me, I should prefer a religious belief to any blessing; for it makes life a discipline of goodness; breathes new hopes; vanishes and throws over decay, the destruction of existence, the most gorgeous of light; awakens life even in death, and from corruption and decay calls up beauty and divinity; makes misfortune and shame the ladder of ascent to Paradise; and far above all combinations of earthly hopes, calls up the most delightful visions of psalms and amaranths, the gardens of the blest, and security of everlasting joys, where the sensualist and skeptic view only gloom, decay, annihilation and despair."

WHEN the news of the nomination of Douglas flashed along the wires, a village post-master summoned "the unterrified" to bring out the gun and fire a salute. They had got about half way through the allotted number of discharges, when a messenger from the telegraph office informed them that the seceders had nominated Breckinridge. "The d—l they have!" said the Postmaster. Standing a moment in a brown study, he shouted, "Boys there's no knowing into whose hands we may fall. Load for Breckinridge."

WHY THE FINGERS ARE NOT OF EQUAL LENGTH.—A master, in illustration of this question, made his scholar grasp a ball of ivory, to show him that the points of his fingers are equal. It would have been better (says Sir Charles Bell) had he closed his fingers upon the palm, and then asked whether or not they corresponded. This difference in the length of the fingers serves a thousand little ends, adapting the form of the hand and fingers of different purposes—as, for holding a rod, a switch, a sword, a hammer, a pen or pencil, engraving tools, etc.—in all which a secure hold and freedom of motion are admirably combined.

THE latest invention is a segar making machine which can be regulated to making any size or shape of segars at the rate of 15 per minute, making them all so as to draw freely and using no binder in wrapping. Segars made by this machine cost, for manufacturing, $1.62 per thousand, while those of the same quality, made by hand, cost from $7 to $8 per thousand for making.

"A SHARP student was called up by the worthy professor of a celebrated college, and asked the questions:

"Can a man see without eyes?
"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply.
"How, sir," said the amazed professor,
"can a man see without eyes? Pray, sir, how do you make that out?"
"He can see with one, sir," replied the ready witted youth; and the whole class shouted with delight at his triumph over metaphysics.

It is with certain good qualities, as with the senses—those who are entirely deprived of them can neither appreciate nor comprehend them.

THE AGES.—Vanity Fair says the three ages of a Senator are mile-age, post-age and patronage.

EXAMINATION OF SCHOOL TEACHERS.

The following persons were approved, and received certificates of qualification as teachers in the Public Schools of this county, by the Board of Examination, at its session held in Cacheville on the 8th inst.: Messrs. H. A. Pierce, E. S. Woodward, E. B. Frink, A. S. Greenlaw, A. C. Cox and Miss C. Templeton.

THE Sacramento Daily Union has just entered upon its twentieth volume, under a tide of unprecedented prosperity. We are happy to congratulate its proprietors on their unparalleled success. The attainment which has been accomplished by the judicious and practical application of enterprise, tact, forethought and liberality never before attempted and carried out in this or any sister State by any public journal. Long may it live, as a pattern of industry and perseverance—as a beacon light for the frugal, but poor, though otherwise truly deserving journalist. Honesty, firmness and indomitable go-aheadiveness are sure to win. They, like truth, are mighty, and will prevail.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Mr. Woodside was killed, on Tuesday last, at Weaverville, while working in his claim, by the bank caving in upon him. Only a few days ago Mr. Woodside was the finder of a piece of quartz at Lewistown, Trinity county, which weighs 170 ounces, and is estimated to be worth from $700 to $800.

WORK AT THE MINT.—There were 7,038 ounces of gold bullion and 3,767 of silver deposited in the mint last week, and $150,000 in double eagles and $10,000 in half dollars coined.

NOT HIS JIMMY.—In San Francisco, Jims vs. Jims, each against the other, sue for divorce; and whilst the jury was out on Monday night last sitting on their case, Jims, the feminine, was delivered of a boy. Jims, masculine, swears that Jims Jr. is not his child; and Mrs. Jims reciprocates the compliment by averring that Mr. Jims has frequently stayed out late o' nights, without just cause.

SHIPMENTS OF GRAIN.—Visurgis, for Liverpool, cleared with 29,228 sacks wheat, 6,000 quarter sacks flour, and 627 sacks barley. The Comet, for Hongkong, carries 200 Mumber, 7,979 quarter sacks, 104 barrels and 50 half barrels flour, 2,134 sacks potatoes. The Lockett, for Melbourne carries 9,500 sacks wheat, 4,230 sacks oats, 4,000 quarter sacks flour. The Electra, for Sidney, carries 14,139 sacks wheat, 4,000 quarter sacks flour, and 120 sacks barley, while the John Land, for Manila, carries 2,353 sacks wheat, 5,200 quarter sacks flour, and 550 sacks potatoes. The whole combined value of domestic produce exported by these five vessels amounts to upwards of $160,000.

The Iconium is under charter to load grain, while the brig, Sheet Anchor will carry 75 tons barley to Valparaiso. By the arrival of the Uncle Sam, we note that the clipper ship James Brown, with a full cargo of barley, had arrived at that port from San Francisco, which sold at $3 18 1/2, fanegas of 156 pounds.—S. F. Times.

THE MAIL STAGES TO PORTLAND.—The Overland mail stage commenced running on Saturday, agreeable to notice. When the hour arrived for starting, it was most unexpectedly ascertained that there was a large amount of mail matter in readiness, and also a goodly number of passengers. Most of the mail matter, consisting of public documents, has ordinarily gone by the ocean steamer, and as that service still continues, it was supposed it would still go by that route. There were some six sacks of letters for Portland and way stations. The number of passengers for the same destination was twenty-six. It took three Concord coaches to supply the requirements of the first overland mail and passenger service to Portland. One of the coaches, inside, and outside, was occupied by the mails, and the other two conveyed passengers. The demonstration was quite a formidable one.—Union.

Seventh Annual Fair of the State Agricultural Society.

Opening of the Pavilion.

At eight o'clock on Wednesday evening last, says the Union, the Seventh Annual Fair of the State Agricultural Society was formally inaugurated in the Agricultural Hall of this city. The doors were opened an hour before, and the great crowd which annually assembles from all parts of Northern California at these Exhibitions, and which has already begun to jostle each other in our hotels, surge along our principal streets, and eddy into open saloons and the places of amusement with which the city now abounds, were pouring into the Pavilion at a rate of speed which we shall call a sixty-man current, equivalent to one in a second. When the hour arrived for the opening of the Exhibition, with the exercises from the stand, there could not have been less than two thousand persons assembled in different parts of the building.

The Hall, or Pavilion as it is commonly called, never presented so brilliant, tasteful and animated an appearance as at this time. The money spent in decorations has been laid out to some purpose this year. A splendid canopy of flags of all nations hide the bare and unfinished rafters and wood work overhead. In the center of the ceiling is a blue and white cross, from which radiate on four sides, four mammoth specimens of the striped and starry bunting peculiar to the land in which we reside. Where the stripes leave off, and the stars fade out, other nations take their chance in the commingling of colors, which, being arranged with a view to ocular effect, bring some of the great powers into small company for the nonce. Besides this mosaic of banner work, there are pendant flags and festooned streamers suspended from the ceiling, to break the monotony and give picturesqueness to the view. The adornment of the hall overhead was taken in hand by James Lausing, of this city, and well has he acquitted himself of his trust.

The following is a list of the contributors from this county, which shows that we are able to compete with any other county in the state:

- Miss Nellie R. Brown, Yolo county, woasted embroidered chair.
- David Megowan, Yolo, apples, pears, peaches.
- Mrs. J. V. Hoag, Yolo, patchwork bedquilt.

ADVENT CHURCH LECTURES.—Gen. Shields, Hon. Reverdy Johnson, Hon. J. P. Benjamin, Hon. Ogdon Hoffman, and Hon. M. Hall McAllister, have been engaged to deliver a course of lectures in aid of the building fund of the Church of the Advent. Some $12,000 has already been raised toward the construction of the new building; and about twice that sum is required for the full prosecution of the work. Mr. McAllister, and his charge in the Advent Church, have struggled long and arduously to obtain an efficient organization. Through difficulties and vicissitudes of the most disheartening character they have passed into the sunny land of promise. We are confident, in common with the members of this young Episcopal parish, that this project for securing considerable aid for building purposes will be marked by great success. The contract for the new church was given out to-day, to Mr. Murdoch, under the supervision of the architect, Wm. Patton. The object of the Trustees of this Church seems to be to obtain a more agreeable and suitable place of worship, and to secure the position which they have gained in the Southern part of the city. They are therefore making efforts to build, forthwith, a Gothic edifice, carefully proportioned and in every respect ornamental. They have already raised considerable sum of money and hope to increase it by the course of lectures above announced. If these prove as successful as the honorable names of the lecturers warrant us in supposing, then the Church will be able to complete its present enterprise without encumbering itself with any permanent debt. We urge our citizens to co-operate in these deserving efforts, and we wish every success to the New Church of the Advent.—San Francisco Gazette.

A SEWING MACHINE WAR.—A jolly muss has been brewing about the sewing machines that have been on exhibition at Fair. We heard from one quarter that the sewing machine exhibitors, all except Grover & Baker's people, were to-day to withdraw for the sake of being punctually on hand at Sacramento at the State Fair. But we perceive by an advertisement in another column that the exhibitors have already withdrawn, and for another reason. They give as the cause of precipitating their retreat to Sacramento that one of the ladies on the committee had publicly, and in writing, expressed her preference for Grover & Baker's machine above Wheeler & Wilson's, and of course above all others, before she was appointed on the committee. It is a hot war that is waging, but considering the high state of the mercury and the fact that there is a lady in the case, we cannot think of saying anything more about it. Those who chafe to learn more of the particulars of this outbreak will find it among our advertisements.—San Francisco Bulletin.

THE census of Tehama county shows a population of 4,100, who have 780 houses, and are worth in personal and real property, $4,125,090, or about $1,006 each, which is a pretty high figure. A whole population worth over $1,000 apiece may be considered pretty rich.

Arrival of the Pony Express!

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19th. The following is the news brought by the Pony to the Associated Press: The dates are to the 8th from St. Louis. The progress of Gov. Seward and party from Detroit, yesterday, was a continuous ovation.

Returns from 143 towns in Vermont, gives Fairbanks 21,475 majority. A Republican gain since last year of 3,937. Fairbanks' majority will probably reach 22,000. The Senate is unanimously Republican. The House stands 175 Republicans and 17 Democrats; this is a Republican gain of 6 over last year.

WHEELING, Va., Sept. 6.—Extensive preparations are making for the reception of Mr. Douglas who will arrive on Saturday, and leave for Philadelphia the same afternoon.

A letter had been received by Col. McLean from Mr. Douglas accepting the invitation to be present at the grand barbecue at Jones Woods, New York, and assuring him he would positively be on hand on that occasion and that he intends to make a speech.

European.

The steamship America brings dates from Liverpool to the 25th of August. The invasion of Calabria by Garibaldi, is fully confirmed.

The town of Reggio had been attacked and taken by Garibaldi.

Four thousand Calabrian insurgents had joined the Garibaldians.

A general battle with the Neapolitans was imminent. The Emperor and Empress of France had gone to Savoy and Nice.

It was said that a French corps d'armee of ten thousand men, with camping materials and artillery was ordered to be ready to move at short notice.

COSO SILVER MINES.—The Visalia Sun of September 12th says: James Hitchen called on us on Saturday last, and exhibited some beautiful specimens of silver ore, taken from the Galena lead. This lead seems to increase in richness as it descends, and there is little doubt that the fortunate owners will realize handsomely from it. At a depth of 15 feet the ore assayed $800, while the specimens exhibited to us, taken from a depth of 40 feet, will assay at least $2,000 per ton. Hughes & Co., are erecting smelting apparatus, which is nearly completed. Upwards of 4,000 lbs. of ore, from No 2 vein arrived here a day or so ago, on its way to San Francisco to be smelted.—Twelve companies are now at work, and all have very encouraging prospects.—About 20 miles south from No. 2 Vein, some gentlemen from Taachepay have discovered a silver lead which promises well.

Since writing the above we have been favored with an interview with Smith & Bennett, who arrived in town last evening, and who report the discovery of a lead, which they have aptly christened the Mammoth. The lead is from 40 to 60 feet thick and looks splendidly. Six thousand five hundred and fifty feet are already recorded in the Clerk's Office, besides a whole mountain called "Mineral Butte." If this lead should at all equal the expectations of its discoverers, Washoe may hide its diminished head.

The same gentleman had specimens from an alleged tin mine, which has been discovered in the vicinity, and which certainly gives indications of unsurpassed richness. It assays 60 per cent of tin. Our informant said, in speaking of the size of this lead, "It is as large as all the mines in Cromwell."

THE Trinity Journal gives the following account of a little affray which occurred in Weaverville on the 12th inst.

On account of an existing difference between two residents, the party considering himself most aggrieved forwarded a challenge to the other. The document was presented by his friend, at Wormell's saloon, and the recipient not relishing the proceedings in every respect, tore it to atoms, threw it into the face of the person presenting it, and in addition administered several well directed blows with a cane he held. The challenger's friend drew a knife, with which he made several attempts to open his antagonist, and failing in this, took to his heels. As he was retreating through the back entrance to the saloon, a ball from a Derringer pistol in the hands of the other grazed his right leg, doing no damage. The affair created considerable excitement.

THE SHOT-GUN WOMAN.—Mrs. Hurlbert, the double barreled shot-gun woman, who threatened to blow Merritt Welton into small atoms, was on Saturday bound over to answer before the Court of Sessions in $800 bail. The charge against her is, exhibiting a deadly weapon.—San Francisco Times.

FREMONT QUARTZ MINES.—The Mariposa Gazette says that Col. Fremont is erecting a quartz mill of twelve stamps upon the Princeton vein, near Upper Augus Fria. The machinery is on the ground, and the mill will soon be running. The erection of other mills upon the grant is now under consideration. Extraordinary results or yields from quartz at present encourage the enterprise. Last week $17,000 was taken from the amalgamators of the River, Mount Ophir, and Bear Valley mills.

RECEIPTS.—The amount taken in at the State Fair on Thursday last was $3,000.

Later from Washoe.

We take from the Territorial Enterprise, of the 15 instant., the following items:

CHINATOWN.—This ancient settlement, situated about twelve miles to the north-east on the immigrant road, through the extensive water power afforded by the river at that point, is rapidly growing into a place of importance. For six or eight years there was considerable mining population here; but after the silver discoveries, less attention was paid to the diggings, and for nearly a year the place was pretty much deserted. But the water power having been secured by various parties, extensive ditches are being dug, and preparations are in progress for erecting several quartz mills in the neighborhood. With these new enterprises and improved prospects population is again returning, some few houses are being built, and a good deal of teaming is going on in hauling machinery, lumber and other material for mills. Should the quartz ledges in the vicinity turn out as well as anticipated quite a mining town will, no doubt, spring up there within a short time.

The Daggett road is now completed, and the travel over it is immense. The enterprising builders, Kingsbury & McDonald, are now removing their tools over to Lake Valley, preparatory to commencing a road from a point in that valley to the summit of the mountain. The new road will be well graded, and besides saving some six or eight miles of travel between here and Placerville, will enable travelers to avoid the old grade from the summit to Hawley's in Lake Valley, which always has been a terror to travelers.

Virginia city now presents quite a metropolitan appearance, the grading of the streets and the erection of a number of fire proof buildings conducing much to that result. Quite a number of mining claims have been sold there recently. The new road of Caperton & Co., from that place to Carson city by Washoe valley, is being prosecuted with vigor by its enterprising projectors.

Some of our public spirited citizens have donated to Father Gallagher a block of ground bounded by Division, Proctor and Minnesota streets for a church site. He intends immediately to commence the construction of a fine Gothic structure upon it. The church will front on Division street. The location is one of the finest in town.

From Honey lake valley we learn that the crops have been very abundant. A large proportion of the emigration is going in by that route, the road built by Col. Lander attracting much travel in that direction. The people there are gradually becoming convinced that Honey lake is in California. The boundary line between Plumas and Shasta counties has been run. The line places the entire valley in Plumas county.

On Saturday last, at Fort Churchill, an emigrant named Davidson killed a man named Frazer, who accompanied him across the Plains, and wounded a soldier very badly. Davidson was arrested at the Fort, and handed over to the civil authorities. He had his examination last Tuesday before the Grand Jury, who refused to find a bill against him—the evidence adduced warranting them in believing him justified in the act.

The case of the Ophir Company vs. Farmer & Co., of the Middle lead, has excited much attention during the past week, owing to the fact that it is the first mining case of importance ever tried here; and the decision made in this case will be a precedent for future action. After a trial of three days the case was submitted to a jury, who failed to agree. Judge Baldwin and W. Stewart, counsel for plaintiffs; Judges Bryan and Terry for defendants.

SUMMONS.
By Order of County Judge.
STATE OF CALIFORNIA, }
COUNTY OF YOLO, }
In the District Court of the Eleventh Judicial District of the State of California.
THE People of the State of California—to G. H. Smith, greeting:
You are hereby summoned to answer the complaint of W. H. Denise in said Court, filed against you, within ten days from the service of this Writ, exclusive of the day of the service, if served on you in this County; but if served on you without said County; then in forty days from such service, exclusive of the day of service, in an action commenced on the ninth day of June, 1860, in said Court. Who sues to recover the sum of six hundred dollars, with interest at 3 per cent per month from date, due upon a promissory Note made and executed by you to said Denise on the 14th January, 1858, payable on demand, with 3 per cent per month interest from date; which note has a credit upon it of $216 interest paid on the 14th January 1859, also about $200 paid on or about the month of Sept. 1859 which last credit is not endorsed on said note, and for his costs of suit. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to answer the complaint as directed, Plaintiff will demand judgement against you by default for said amount and costs.
In testimony Whereof, I, J. T. Daly, clerk of the Eleventh Judicial District Court aforesaid, do hereunto set my hand, and impress the Seal of said Court, at Office in Cacheville, this 21st day of June, A. D., 1860.

POTERY.

Said I to Myself, Said I.

BY CHARLES MACKAY.

I'm poor and quite unknown,
I have neither fame or rank,
My labor is all my own,
I have no gold in the bank:
I'm one of the common crowd,
Despised of the passer-by,
Condemned by the rich and proud—
Said I to myself, said I.

I want and I cannot obtain
The luxuries of the earth;
My raiment is scant and plain,
"And I live in the fear of death;"
While others can laugh or sing,
I have ever some cause to sigh;
I am a weary wanderer—
Said I to myself, said I.

But is this grieving just?
Is it wise to fret and wail?
Is it right thou speck of dust,
Thine envy shall prevail?
Is it fitting thou shouldst close
Thy sight to the sunny sky,
And an utter dark suppose?
Said I to myself, said I.

If poor, though hast thy health;
If humble, thou art strong;
And the lark, that knows no wealth,
Ever sings a happy song.
The flowers rejoice in the air,
And give their needs the lie;
Thou'rt a fool to foster care,
Said I to myself, said I.

If the wants of thy pride be great,
The needs of thy health are small,
And the world is the man's estate,
Who can wisely enjoy it all.
For him is the landscape spread,
For him do the breezes ply,
For him is the day-beam shed—
Said I to myself, said I.

For him are the oceans rolled,
For him do the rivers run;
For him doth the year unfold
Her bounties to the sun;
For him, if his heart is pure,
Shall common things supply
All pleasures that endure—
Said I to myself, said I.

For him each blade of grass
Waves pleasure as it grows;
For him as the light clouds pass,
A spirit of beauty flows;
For him as the streamlets leap,
Or the winds on the tree-tops sigh,
Comes a music sweet and deep—
Said I to myself, said I.

I will mould my life afresh,
I will circumscribe desire;
Farewell to ye griefs of flesh!
And let my soul aspire.
I will make my wants few,
That my joys may multiply;
Adieu, false wants, adieu!
Said I to myself, said I.

The La France Hippique relates the following anecdote: Gerard, the celebrated painter, was charged by the Emperor Napoleon I. to paint the battle of Austerlitz. In his composition of that great feat of arms, General Rapp was to be represented coming up at full gallop, to announce the gain of the battle. Everything was prepared on the canvass, and there only remained to place Rapp on horseback; but Gerard could not find a charger which suited his ideas. The Emperor had placed at his disposal not only all the horses of his own stables, but ordered that those of all the cavalry regiments should be open to him. The animals were made to gallop, rear, and perform all kinds of movements; but none of them pleased the painter, and Rapp still remained unmounted. One day, while walking along the Boulevard, the painter, in passing before a toy shop, uttered an exclamation of delight on observing a small pasteboard horse, painted grey, and with a black head, which, from its position, looked as if it was about to leap out of the window, "Ah!" cried Gerard, "that is the horse for Rapp." And entering, he asked the price of it. "Twenty-five sous," was the reply; and the artist, paying the money, carried off the horse under his arm. It is this animal which, it is said, figures in the famous picture of the museum at Versailles, carrying Rapp to the emperor, the general, in his haste, having lost his hat.

WHY couldn't Job sleep at night?—Because he had such bad comforters.

DISTRESS.—A minister called at the house of a friend the other day and the wife in tears.

"What is the matter my good sister?" he asked.

"Oh, dear, John, my husband, has run away with widow Smith, and I ain't got any bit of snuff!"

A VETERAN POACHER.—An old and very large bear, who has been hunted on the San Joaquin and fired into frequently, was captured recently about 50 miles from Stockton. His body contained 18 balls.
