STATION AND POST OFFICE IMPROVEMENTS

Last week "Our Town" featured an article on the proposed station and post office improvements.

That this movement is one that is close to the hearts of the inhabitants of Narberth was evidenced by the favorable comment and general expression of hopefulness that the railroad might see the equity of our request and consent to proceed without delay to give Narberth that which we all believe she has earned.

Already many hundreds of our citizens—who have increased from about 1800 to over 3000 in the last two or three years—monthly walk up to the ticket window and pay their toll of the P. R. R. Most of these Narberthites do so without regret, knowing that the P. R. R. gives us most excellent train service.

But every man, woman and child would be really grateful to the P. R. R. if they would grant our present request—which would be but a simple act of justice on their part.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has had the use of Essex avenue ever since the town was started. We only ask that the railroad return for our use a roadbed that should never have been forfeited.

Many citizens signed a petition some time ago which was presented to the P. R. R. authorities. Since the publication of our article last week, many have telephoned us or spoken to members of our staff about the great need of this improvement.

If you believe in the fairness of the request, write to Samuel Rea, president of the P. R. R. and urge that the work be pushed forward to completion.

GOVERNOR BRUMBAUGH ATTENDS FIRST UNION TWILIGHT MEETING

The first meeting of the Union twilight services was held on Sunday evening, July 2, 1917, at Woodbine and Narberth avenues, with the Rev. John VanNess presiding. Opening prayer was rendered by Rev. Avery S. Demmy.

The Rev. Chris. G. Koppel introduced Hon. Fletcher W. Stites, who in turn presented the Governor, and in brief praising his Excellency as having always been on the side of things that were decent, right and proper in the last session of the Legislature.

Governor Brumbaugh spoke along the lines of food conserving and asking that the people economize during the present world war so that there would be no duplication of the American soldiers who starved for lack of foods at Valley Forge during 1777-78.

Some of his chief epigrams were as follows:

"It is a source of considerable regret that your Congress and the executive authorities at Washington are hesitating to put into pending legislation for food control as absolute prohibition of the rum traffic. I am glad that as candidate and as Governor I have stood for local option because I believe that abolition of the liquor traffic will make the State cleaner, saner and wholesomer in every way."

"No kind of war can be fought successfully if you befog your brains with liquor, and Nations at war have learned that you must abolish the rum traffic if you want to win."

"We have poked fun too long at the farmers as 'rubes' and 'clodhoppers.' Now we are coming to realize that farmers are the first army that will save us."

"This war and the conservation of food will teach wasteful, extravagant America that wastefulness is one of the things that sap our national vigor and destroy our energy as a Nation."

"A Nation that wins wars to-day conserves at every point its spiritual forces and advances its spiritual organization. See to it that the altars burn brighter in the days of war than ever before. For the Nation which forgets its God shall perish, but the Nation which follows God shall never be defeated."

Duets and solos were rendered by Mrs. John G. Wilson and Miss Emma Stratton, of Philadelphia.

On Sunday, July 8, 1917, the Rev. John VanNess will preside and preach at the Union twilight services to be held on the lawn at Narberth and Woodbine avenues.

Steps are being provided for the Narberth avenue entrance which will save the folks from walking around to the Woodbine avenue entrance.

THE BELGIAN CHILDREN'S RELIEF FUND

Several weeks ago the sum of $105 was sent to the Literary Digest for the Belgian children. It was collected from Narberth by canvass; and the members of the committee who did the canvassing desire to thank all those who courteously and generously responded to their petition for money. The Literary Digest has thankfully acknowledged the receipt of the money.

Our base ball boys should receive all the support possible from our townspeople and there should be no abatement of interest on account of a little let-up in their winning streak of the past two years. It is unfortunate that the war has taken away a number of the players. At the present writing it is rumored that on account of conditions, the team may withdraw from the Main Line League.

To the Editor of Our Town:

The enclosed article, I believe, you will find interesting, as it appears peculiarly appropriate just at this time when we are hearing so much about the needs and activities of the Red Cross, but so little as to its original history.

Citizen.

The present Red Cross Society was founded more than half a century ago as a philanthropic organization to care for the wounded in time of war and to secure the safety and neutrality of the nurses and hospitals, as well as to relieve sufferers by pestilence, floods, great fires and other calamities.

Its name dates back to St. Camillus de Lillis, a soldier who instituted reforms in the care of the wounded and sick and also in the hospitals on battlefields.

Pope Sixtus the Fifth gave him permission to use the Red Cross to distinguish a society he was forming. The origin of his request for this badge being a dream his mother had before his birth, in which she saw her son with a red cross on his breast, followed by other children with the same emblem.

The funds now being collected by this great charity are for our own people now being hurled into the strife and it may easily happen that before snow flies many may be in need of the Red Cross helpers. Their work is exceedingly dangerous, for they plant their flag (Red Cross on white ground) close to the battle line and while all nations strive to respect it, frequently nurses, doctors, ambulance drivers and litter carriers though wearing the Cross on their sleeves, fall victims to their devotion.

A CLIPPING

The following interesting article appeared in Monday's Ledger:

Brumbaugh Breaks Speed Law—Constable Worried—Doesn't Know Whether to Fine Governor, Who Could Remit Assessment Anyhow

Constable Fred J. Walzer, of Narberth, is determined that no one shall fracture with impunity the speed laws of that town. So, in pursuance of his duties yesterday, he took the number of the automobile in which Governor Brumbaugh was riding, and last night Constable Fred didn't know whether he would make a formal complaint and tax the chief executive of the State the usual fine in such cases.

The Governor was due to speak at a patriotic rally of the union churches in Narberth last night, and yesterday he motored to the home of Representative Fletcher S. Stites, in Narberth, to be his guest until he filed his assignment. He went to Narberth in company with Colonel Louis J. Kolb and Mrs. Brumbaugh.

The chauffeur of the Kolb machine reckoned without the eagle-eyed Fred and the speed laws, so he let out a notch or two and spun along the roads in speed-defying time. Constable Fred was on his usual Sunday post, and he jotted down the number of the license. The Governor and the Colonel saw the operation, and didn't say anything about it—then.

The constable went to hear the Governor and, after the meeting ended, stepped into line to greet the Governor and shake his Executive hand. Stites spied the constable, and when he reached the Governor the Representative said:

"This is the man who took your number to-day."

The constable's smile was a mile wide and he didn't deny the allegation. In fact, he admitted it, and rather glorified in the incident.

"Good for you," said the Governor. "I like to see the way you enforce the law. But you better send the summons to me, instead of Colonel Kolb, for—"

Here the Governor smiled quizzically.

"You know," he added, "one of the privileges of the Governor of Pennsylvania is to remit fines in some cases."

FOR YOU AND ME

The local Board of Health has received a communication from the State Health Department, which points out the need of an energetic clean up in all localities, in order to assist in the controlling of any possible epidemic of infantile paralysis that may occur this summer. There were 2000 cases in Pennsylvania between July 1, 1916, and the end of the year, with 500 deaths. The fatalities might have been much greater had not the citizens adopted the measures suggested by the State authorities and it is urged that no effort be spared to repeat, or rather redouble, those measures this season. Space does not allow us to print the full text of the Harrisburg communication, but the following extracts should be carefully noted by every resident of the borough and followed to the letter. The Board of Health is instructed to enforce these rules:

Stables—In Towns and Villages

Manure must not be allowed to accumulate in open piles. The daily contents should be placed in pits or bins tightly covered or thoroughly fly screened.

It must be removed once a week from the first day of May until the last day of November.

Stables must be cleansed daily.

Garbage

Garbage when kept must be placed in covered containers. The containers must be scrubbed clean with the liberal use of soap and water before refilling.

It must be collected at least three times a week from May 1 until November 1; the balance of the year it must be removed often enough to permit the container being kept closed.

Rubbish and Ashes

Rubbish, and ashes mixed with rubbish, must be collected regularly and disposed of in such a way as not to cause a nuisance.

House Cleaning

All vermin, such as lice, bedbugs, roaches, flies, mosquitoes, rats and mice should be exterminated.

Kennels, boxes and cages used by household pets should be frequently cleansed and disinfected, including floors, carpets, etc., used by them.

Cellars should be kept clean at all times; this includes the floors, walls and ceilings. Cellars should be kept dry. Cellars should have the windows as well as all other openings for ventilation, etc., fly-screened.

All houses should be thoroughly screened by the end of April and the screens kept in good condition until cold weather, or when insect life has ceased its activities.

General

Surface drainage of kitchen, laundry and bath waste water should not be permitted unless it is sprinkled over a large surface, where it will not reach a stream, and never to such an extent as to sour the ground.

Where no sewer system is available, separate cess pools had better be built to receive this waste water.

Streams must not be used for the dumping of sewage, garbage, ashes or rubbish of any kind.

Pools of stagnant water or any mosquito breeding places should be drained.

Water barrels, cisterns, etc., should be covered or screened.

All highways should be treated so as to keep down dust.

Street gutters should be frequently flushed out and kept free from accumulations of rubbish.

Ground where manure or garbage has stood or where made foul by surface drainage should be cleaned and treated with unslaked lime.

Foodstuffs exposed for sale must be protected from flies, dirt and domestic animals, and where exposed for sale on sidewalks they must be elevated above the pavement at least 24 inches.

It would be well during the coming summer that children under sixteen years of age should not be allowed to congregate unnecessarily in public places.

Samuel G. Dixon,
 Commissioner of Health.

An experiment bordering close to the wonderful has been made in the clay-testing department of a machinery company, at Bucyrus, O., in which a toad was placed in a twenty-ton brick-press and was four times subjected to a pressure of 11,000 pounds without injury. The question at issue was whether such pressure would kill the toad or whether its ability to compress itself was sufficient to allow it to come out of the ordeal alive. The toad was first placed in a lump of granular clay and the whole pressed into a brick. After the huge press had done its work the solid brick was lifted from the machine, and the toad winked its eyes contentedly, stretched its legs and hopped away.—Popular Mechanics.

 Membership fee, including Our Town. $2.00

The committee (appointed by the Civic Association at the annual meeting) decided upon a membership fee of $2 per annum, which is to include a copy of Our Town each week. One dollar for the use of the Civic Association and one dollar to the support of Our Town. The increased cost of material and labor in getting out the paper necessitates the withdrawal of the combination price of $1.50.

It should be a matter of local pride in your community that would prompt you to contribute such a trifling sum as 4 cents per week for the support of your association and circulation of your paper.

Remember, every householder in Narberth is a member of the Civic Association and will receive Our Town, but should it not be a matter of honor for him to do his bit, 4 cents per week, toward the support of the community in which he lives? However, no compulsion is used, "the volunteer system" is in full force in Narberth and all will continue to receive a copy of Our Town, except, of course, those (and there are very few, we are glad to say) who refuse to take the paper from the post office.

Arrangements are being made to have all the volunteer membership fees of $2 in the Civic Association fall due together at a specified time each year.

Church Notes

On Sunday morning, July 8, the pastor begins a series of four sermons entitled, "Live Questions About the Church of To-day." A large number of people seem to be convinced that the church is not essential to their peace and prosperity, for the welfare of the community and the Nation. Every institution in the land is now passing through an acid test as to its usefulness to the welfare of humanity. This series of sermons will throw the searchlight on the church. If she has served her day and is a thing of the past, then indeed she is not essential, but if she to-day has a definite, practical and vital work to perform, then every individual to do their part for the cause of humanity should gladly reconsecrate themselves to attain the objects for which the church is striving. These discussions deal with the church and the problems of this world, not some other world to come by and by.

The subjects are as follows:

July 15—"What Do You Think of the Church? Has She Met the Issues of the Day?"

July 22—"What Does it Mean to Join the Church? Of What Value Are Our Vows?"

July 29—"What About the Man Who Stays Away From Church? The Things That Matter Most."

Everyone welcome to these services

MARY'S LESSON

MARY STABLER lived in Sandy Spring—a community that was marked by thrift. Thrift had built the houses of Sandy Spring big and broad; thrift had made the roads good; thrift had tended the fields, built up fences and kept lawns green; and thrift had established a bank and a big school and built a big meeting-house. But Mary Stabler was not thrifty.

Sandy Spring women and girls sent their cakes and their beaten biscuit, baked from century-old receipts, along the pike to Washington; and when the parcel post was established they doubled their offerings at the restaurants. Every girl turned from the school door to try her hand at some venture, old or new. Rose, on the hill opposite Mary, baked pies. Debbie, Mary's neighbor on the left, made jellies and apple butter. Mary did nothing, and she should have done more than any of them.

For Mary lived in the house that Elizabeth Lea had made famous. Elizabeth Lea had come there from Philadelphia, a seventeen-year-old bride, frail and pretty; and she had become the most famous housekeeper in the neighborhood. The Dutch oven in the dining room had been in constant use, pots and kettles had always hung on the crane in the fireplace of the outside kitchen; and when ill health had at last made her a prisoner in her own room upstairs, she had busily written down her receipts and had had them published in a book that became the law in the neighborhood for pie and jelly and butter making.

When Mary lived in the house the Dutch oven in the dining room was merely an ornament, and the big fireplace in the outside kitchen was bare and gaping; but the inside kitchen and the wood stove were still in use. And "Cousin Lizzie Lea's" spirit ought to have moved her granddaughter.

But Mary was a dreamer. She was a poet—that was the secret of it all. She did not like to work, because her dreams were so delightful. Wonderful phrases kept flitting through her mind. When it was wheat year for the field in front of the house and wheat ran down the hillside to the stream and winds blew through the stalks, all sorts of original ideas ran in phrases through Mary's mind; but they never would link themselves together.

At dusk, when fireflies fluttered in and out among the bearded grain, her heart ached with words; and when she walked down to the stream itself and watched it flow brown and laughing under the bridge, she seemed not only to grip the fact that the world swung but to feel the very thrill and rhythm of the swing itself. And so the moments that she might have put to labor she spent in seeing and watching and living along with green and silent things.

After a while, with a sort of agonized joy, she did get some of her thoughts pieced together. The lawn in front of the house had clover sown in it. It bloomed purple and white and big-leaved at the foot of the old sundial. When the night winds stole up from the Patuxent meadows and the fireflies came out, the clover leaves closed up tight and went to sleep. Mary loved them—loved them as much as she did her kitten when it was curled up for a nap.

The fireflies glow,
The night winds blow,
The clover leaves are sleeping.

Those were the first phrases that Mary put together. Then, little by little, dusk after dusk, when the barnyard was still and the house itself quiet and the thrush was singing melodiously in the walnut tree, other phrases and words fitted and fitted in Mary's mind until she had a whole verse. She put her first words at the end of them in a sort of refrain.

There's a glinting sheen of silver seen
All over the field of clover, Where the leaflets three as tight as can be
Are folded over and over.
The fireflies glow,
The night winds blow,
And the clover leaves are sleeping.

In a week Mary had added another verse:

There's a faint perfume from the purple bloom
Where its evening watch is keeping

O'er the diamond dew that the whole night through Will feed the plant a-sleeping.

Mary knew nature habits, and when the blackberry vines burst into bloom she added her third and last verse:

The blackberry bowers, o'er fence corner flowers,
Think of sun that ripens and mellows.

The butterfly dreams of the rose's gleams,
The bee's at rest with his fellows.

Mary's heart fairly sang with the joy of getting it into shape. She wrote it all down together in three nicely spaced verses on a white sheet of paper and carried it whenever she could. But she need not have bothered with having the copy upon her person, for she carried it in a much safer place than any pocket would afford—and that was her heart.

Then, before she knew it, Mary was longing to show the verses to some one who might be likely to appreciate them. She could not show them to Rose; Rose would never understand. And Debbie might laugh. At just that critical moment Mary picked up a magazine, turned over the pages carelessly and saw in the back of it the following advertisement:

"Song poems wanted. Do you know you can make hundreds of dollars by writing a successful song? Send us your verses. Five dollars at least paid for all accepted. And to those deserving still further success we will show the way to make hundreds.

At the gate that very noon Mary put her beloved verses in the shining box to await the R. F. D. collection. She was practical enough to realize that she would not get an answer in less than a week: two days for her verses to go, three days for office consideration, and two days for an answer to reach her. Considering the ardent tone of the advertisement, she thought that a week was enough to allow.

It was. In exactly seven days after trusting her precious thoughts to the box at the gate, Mary found in that box a letter bearing the imprint of the firm that had advertised. When she had read the letter she sat down on the bank outside the gate for fear some one from the house might see her. She had to keep that moment of delight all to herself. The letter began:

"Dear Madam. We are much impressed with the beauty of the verses you have sent us, and we hasten to say that we consider them capable of being made into a beautiful lullaby. We suggest that you get Mr. Thornton to set them at once to music. Mr. Thornton is the composer of "The Rose and the Bee" and of "The Honeymoon Crowd," which netted him two thousand dollars, and if you should be able—"

What the letter was getting to was that Mr. Thornton's time was now so valuable that a fee must be paid him before he would examine any verses at all. But with these verses success was sure—so sure that, if Miss Stabler would forward them five dollars and promise to send one dollar weekly until Mr. Thornton's fee of twenty-five dollars had been paid, they would venture to put the matter into his hands at once. Would she? Mary's birthday five dollars went out on the evening mail.

But how was she to get the weekly dollar? It did not take her long to decide. No one could make more delicious beaten biscuit than Mary, even if she did not make them very often.

When Jonathan Gilpin went to Washington in his motor truck on Friday, he had a covered basket with two hundred of Mary's biscuit in it. When he came back, Mary had two dollars, less Jonathan's commission. She evened up the amount and sent off the two dollars. So far she was a week ahead. The sooner she paid the money the sooner her song would be published.

Cousin Elizabeth Lea had left a wonderful receipt from cream cake. Mary tried it. It was too light and breakable to trust to parcel post, but Rose's brother was going to town with some of Rose's pies. He took news item, in which event the name would be withheld.

Please don't forget the auxiliary silver tea at the residence of Mrs. D. D.
Stickney on Thursday, July 12, and remember that by your attendance you may very readily "kill three birds with one stone," i. e., spend a very pleasant afternoon among an agreeable body of women, you may also accomplish two good hours' work for Red Cross, and last but very important, your silver offering will benefit the Y. M. C. A. July 12 at 216 Wayne avenue.

The Arcade Theatre, Narberth, is showing some very high-class photoplays. It is open every Tuesday, Friday and Saturday. Program for week of July 2 is as follows: Friday, July 6, the Biograph Company presents Charles J. West in "The Wife," sixth episode of "Pearl of the Army." Saturday, July 7, program of "Triangle" pictures. Tuesday, July 10, America's daintiest actress, Miss Anita Stewart, in "The Suspect." Other pictures always included. Admission 10 and 15 cents; always good music. Coming Tuesday, July 24, Charley Chaplin in the two-part comedy, "The Woman."

A miscellaneous shower was given Miss Mary Melchior by the members of their Bible class at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Van Ness, on last Friday evening. Miss Melchior was making a quiet little call upon the minister and his wife when suddenly, to her great amazement, the class appeared standing in front of the verandah. Upon entering the house the gifts were discovered hanging upon a clothes line and Miss Mary arrayed in bonnet and apron was required to take down the delightful "wash" and open each package in the presence of the excited onlookers. Later, some young men joined the party and all spent a most enjoyable evening together.

The Red Cross Headquarters in the Y. M. C. A. looked very business like on Monday morning when it opened for work. Quite a number of ladies were present to do their bit for their country. The different organizations in the town will have charge of certain days for Red Cross work, but everybody is invited and urged to be present any morning or afternoon. The Red Cross class started in Mrs. Stitt's house, but as the membership increased to such an extent (seventy-five in one week) she could not accommodate so many, so asks anyone who along Mary's cake. She got a whole dollar for that.

Two hundred more beaten biscuit followed the first. Mary was beating the game, but that was not all she was doing; she was filling everyone with astonishment.

She made the beaten biscuit in the outside kitchen. The block that had been hewn for Elizabeth Lea was still there. First, Mary mixed the dough, then she placed it on the top of the block, which was wonderfully clean and yellow, and then she beat it with an axe. One, two, three; one, two, three—rhythmic and regular were the strokes. The wind droned in the chimney; the crane creaked softly. It was delightful work, rounding up the biscuit, pricking them and browning them.

And Mary was not haunted with words while she worked; she just seemed to be living them out. In three weeks she had ten dollars; in two weeks more she would be discussing, by mail of course, the music of her song with the wonderful composer. Once or twice she wondered whether she had not better prepare her family for what was coming. But she kept her secret; and the days went by so full and happy that they seemed to fly.

The rural delivery cart left the Washington daily paper in the box at the gate. Mary had read the war news one afternoon, and had turned to the inside sheets, when she felt every drop of blood squeezed from her heart. These were the words that caught her eye:

"Poets young, poets old, poets white, poets black, crowded Federal Judge William Foster's courtroom yesterday, to be called as witnesses against John H. Heran, on trial for alleged misuse of mails in dealing with song writers."

There followed a complete exposure of the way in which he had wrung money from his victims—just as he had wrung her dollars from Mary.
At the end there was a list of persons who had been cheated, and, worst of all to Mary, sample after sample of verse—highly phrased and empty of thought.

Mary went about the house so badly frightened that she looked as if she were ill. The doctor, who lived in one of the houses up the winding road, was called in; he found nothing vitaly wrong and wisely concluded to let nature and Mary work it out.
Nature and Judge Foster's court did.
The trial came to an end, and Mary's secret was still her own.

And while she had been so badly frightened she had worked harder than ever. If she had stopped suddenly, the secret of what she had been doing with her money might have come out; everyone was laughing at the "poets."

Mary, who was more practical than people thought, decided that before she did anything else she must make up the money that she had thrown away. And she must pay her family back for the flour and butter and eggs that she had used. So every end of the week and every midweek she sent to market.

"Why, who would have thought that Mary would ever wake up so?" said Debbie.

But Mary had done more than that.
And in doing it she had done more than Debbie would ever do. Mary had learned, as the fear of Judge Foster's court died out of her heart, that the joy of creation is in whatever is well done. Poetry was in beautiful biscuit; poetry in sweet, light cake—poetry of work and accomplishment.
Maybe, later, the joy of poetry in words would come, too.—Youth's Companion.

GLORIOUS PROSPECT.

The Rev. Sol Broils was preaching what he considered his best sermon, but for some unaccountable reason it failed to arouse sufficient interest.

He decided to try his audience on another theme, "Brethren," he shouted, "in dat Glory Land dar ain't gwine ter be no mo' scuffin' fer de good things to eat! Everything gwine ter be fotch to yo'—sassage, sparerib, chittlin', 'possum'. Think uv dat!"

Old Uncle Bill Franklin, who had been sound asleep, woke up at this point and yelled out fervidly: "Parson, say dem greasy wuhds agn!"

Old Gentleman: "My, what a nice little boy you are, aren't you?" Small Boy: "No, I ain't no nice little boy, neither; I'm Dutch Sickles, der terror, and I can lick anybody my size around here!"

NEEDLEWORK GUILD LAWN FETE

The lawn fete given in Narberth on Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Needlework Guild was a great success in every respect. The weather was all that could be desired and the people turned out in full force both afternoon and evening.
The grounds of Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt formed a beautiful setting for the event and were much admired. The ladies in charge were kept as busy as bees in showing the visitors what they had to sell and proved themselves capable saleswomen for everything was sold before closing time and netted the handsome return of over $300.

At 4 o'clock the Boy Scouts gave a most interesting and creditable exhibition. The illustrations given, rendering first aid to the injured indicated careful training and ski-service. At the conclusion of these exercises Mr. Richard H. Wallace was called upon to present on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Percival Roberts, Jr., a beautiful flag to the Boy Scouts' organization together with a Scribe Record Book. Mr. Wallace reviewed the splendid service that had been quietly performed by the loyal and generous hearted women of the Guild during the past fourteen years, distributing thousands of new garments each year and ministering to the needs and comfort of the poor in homes and hospitals. They were moved to arrange this lawn fete for the purpose of raising funds to provide comforts for the boys who have enlisted for service in the great war in our country is now engaged. This appeal met a hearty response, not only on the ground of patriotism in a noble cause, but also in the conscio-ness that some of the boys of Nar-berth, who have already gone forth and others who will follow, may be among the beneficiaries. The Directors of the Guild wish to thank everyone for this most generous response.

The next sewing meeting of the Guild will be held at the home of Mrs. Hewitt on Wednesday afternoon July 11, at 2.30 o'clock.

CONTRIBUTORS, NOTICE!

For the past two and a half years the following item has appeared, with a few exceptions, in every week's issue:

OUR TOWN will gladly print any news item about any subject that is of interest to Narberth folks, but in order to meet the printing schedule, all "copy"— manuscripts—must reach the editor by 6 P. M. Monday each week.
And still many of our good contributors who help so much toward making Our Town a success, continue to mail their "copy"—manuscript—on Tuesday, and even sometimes on Wednesday—the very day on which this paper is mailed. It is imperative that all items must be in the editor's hands on Monday evening, as hereafter all items received after the specified time will not appear in the current week's issue, thereby in most instances making the "copy" stale news for the following week.

The Editor.

- The above department should be of the greatest use to the community, the list contains the name of every professional man, tradesman, mechanic, shopkeeper, etc., who does or can in any way serve his fellowtownsman, and who is progressive enough to add name to list of Register.
As it is difficult for those contributing their time and efforts to the production of "Our Town" to personally either know or interview all such, it would be most helpful if those not now found in the printed list would send in a memo of their names, address, phone numbers and businesses or professions for listing. This will cost as follows: 10 cents each issue for 2 lines; 5 cents for each additional line.
