As we had conjectured fast week, the foreign enlistment act in Rayland has been temporarily suspended, that troops may volunteer in favor of Spain. Ten thousand men are Admiral Napier and General Bacon, with Colonels Evate. and the stemast activity prevails in levying forces; even to Ireland have steamers been sent to 'transport' some of he superabandant pugni ciers-ever ready for war or love.

The system of intervention permitted on the part of the British, people doce not pledge a direct active interference on be part of the Ragion government: so that the same and can be obtained for Spain, without expense or responsibility to England, which morely permits to be done, what could have bem prevenied. Intervention is not therefore interference: non is it likely the British government will openly interfere na en a accord demonstration is made on the part of that it would be promptly strangled in the other house: Russia and Austria-now covertly supporting the Carlists.

The French government accords with this species of inpervention; and affords its assistance. But it is rumored that Tallevrand is inclined to make another move on the political gal-by marrying the daughter of Louis Philip to the sun of Don Carloss and a son of the former to the young queen of Portugal. Neither of the parties immediately interested are disposed to forbid the banns. Donus Maria is lovelily strengting to embrace the Duke of Nemours, in preference to the brother of her late humand; and has composed her new ministry to torward her desires-although the liberals of Portugal are not favorable to the project.

Our citizens have two long and hoarding houses in this city—where the demands on peralmost to amount to peculation; and this in consequence of a monopoly, or rather a want of competition : for the num her of hotels etc has not been commensurate with the demands of the community. Inhabitants and travelers are therefore compelled to submit to many inconveniences and discomforts; and have to pay very unfair y for their fare .no better than taverns, our very good houts make a pretty considerable sum' from their customere. They disdain to exact less than tel dollars a mouth from their permanent board---- and a arountinuate advance for their transitory. FOR THE BEE. Mr Edilors—I have recently ascended the Alabama river from Mobile, a distance of four hundred and fifty miles to Montgomery and was never more pleased with a inbiline nor even grand, but so varied by green foliage, white cliffs, bluffs and farms, as to cause one to magin-himself as passing by an artificial canal, through beautiful rects for our planters; indeed we believe that throughout the southern states, the crop of the present year will prove a fasture.

The 4th of July visited us while on the rive; and I question very much whether it ever received a more corona welcome. Col. Foster, of Georgia, whose remarks, as well as those of all other spankers, we are obliged to cartain, then addressed the meeting, which he would not have done, did he antifipate such a resolution as the one which was read. As, however, he was at the meeting ing, he tell besud to tell in the first place, because it gave too much importance to a set of fenatics, who, he believed, hed not the power to do mischief, and therefore the meeting but centemplate the consequences of this erasolution; a supposing it to be passed, and that the southers at states cencurred in it, and held a convention on the borders of Carolina or Kentucky; might not such a convention of lave holding states impress the country with an idea that there was going to be a dissolution of the Union? Any idea of this sort was, however, mere gasconading and nonsense. All the people of the south wanted, was to protect their property. The south itself would not approve of such a meeting, for the south the south relied upon it, and as for the function, possessed any influence whatever. He wished to let the north see that the south relied upon it, and as for the function, and the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and as for the function of the south relied upon it, and a to hear his reasons for dissenting from it.

"Col. Fosser, of Goorgia, whose remarks, as well as he south relied upon it, and as for the functice, he defied

He believed that the people of the south would, one day or other, see slavery at an end, but the people of the north did not want to force them prematurely to it. If it was believed for a moment that the innatics could injure the meanla of the south, the men of anatics could injure the people of the south, the men of he north would put their feet spon them and crush out their venom; and if a servile war should ever arise in the outh, let the men of the north be but called upon, and they will trample it down at once-[Cheers].

The meeting very properly concluded its or ratio, by the adoption of the following resolutions, with bot two dissenting voices, in lieu of both the presimble and resolution above mentioned.
