BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

OF THE DIFFERENT WRITERS, SELECTIONS FROM WHOSE WORKS OCCUR IN THE COURSE OF THE PRESENT VOLUME.

ÆLIAN, Claudius, a native of Præaeste in Italy, who flourished during the reigns of Heliogabalus and Alexander Sevērus (218-235 A.D.). He composed in the Grecian language, of which he was a complete master, a work on the "Peculiarities of Animals" (II ερί ζώων ἰδιότητος), in seventeen books, chiefly a compilation from earlier writers, full of absurd intermingled occasionally stories, with interesting notices; another entitled "Various History" (Ποικίλη 'I $\sigma\tau c\rho(a)$, in fourteen books, a mere compilation, evincing little taste, judgment, or critical discrimination. He died at the age of about sixty vears.

Æsop, a celebrated fabulist, who is supposed to have flourished about 620 B.C. According to most authorities, he was born at Cotyæum, a town of Phrygia, of servile origin, and owned in succession by several masters, the last of whom, Iadmon, a Samian philosopher, gave him his liberty. Little, if anything, however, is known with certainty respecting his life. None of the fables which at present go under the name of Æsop were ever written by him. They appear to have been preserved for a long time in oral tradition, and only collected and reduced to writing at a comparatively late period.

ANACREON, a celebrated Greek lyric poet, who flourished at the court of Polycrates, the tyrant of Samos, in the sixth century B.C. Little is actually known concerning his life. It is, however, generally admitted that he was born at Teos, a city of tive of Nicomedia, who flourished

Ionia, where he is also reported to have died, at the age of eighty-five years, from suffocation, in consequence of swallowing a grapestone while in the act of drinking. Very few of the pieces ascribed to Anacreon are genuine; by far the greater portion having been added subse quently to his time.

APOLLODORUS, a native of Athens. flourished about 146 B.C., and was celebrated for his numerous productions, both in prose and verse. 0 the former we have, with the exception of a few fragments, only the work entitled "Library" (Βιβλιοθή $\kappa \eta$), which is a collection of the fa bles of antiquity, drawn from the poets and other writers, and related in a clear and simple style.

ARISTOTLE, a distinguished Gre cian philosopher, born at Stagīra in Macedonia, B.C. 384, whence he i frequently called the Stagirite. He went to Athens while young, studied philosophy under Plato, and became subsequently the instructer of Alex ander the Great. He died in Chal cis, B.C. 321. Aristotle was the most voluminous writer of the an cient philosophers. Besides his phil osophical and critical works, he ba given a "History of Animals" (IIrp ζώων ίστορίας), in ten books. There is also ascribed to him a treatise "Or Wonderful Reports" (Περί θαυμασί ωv), which, however, if ever written by Aristotle, has undergone great al teration since it came from the hand of the author.

ARRIAN, a Greek historian, a na in the second century under Hadrian and the Antonines. He has left us a history of the expedition of Alexander, in seven books, which is valuable as being compiled from the memoirs of Ptolemy Lagus and Aristobūlus, who both served under that monarch.

ATHENÆUS, a native of Naucrătis in Egypt, who flourished about the beginning of the third century A.D. He is the author of a very interesting compilation entitled "The Learned Men at Supper" ($\Delta \varepsilon \iota \pi \nu \sigma \sigma \phi \iota \sigma \tau a \iota$), from which the moderns have derived a large portion of their knowledge respecting the private life of the ancient Greeks.

BION, a pastoral poet, a native of Smyrna in Asia Minor, who flourished about B.C. 187, in the island of Sicily. He wrote in the Doric dialect, and followed Theocritus as a model.

Diddörus, an historian, surnamed Siculus, because born at Argyrium in Sicily, flourished under Julius Cæsar and Augustus. His "Historical Library" ($B\iota\delta\lambda\iota\partial\theta\eta\kappa\eta$ 'I $\sigma\tau\rho\rho \iota\kappa\eta$) consisted of forty books, and extended from the earliest times down to 60 B.C. Of these, only fifteen books remain, with fragments of the rest. To the preparation of this great work he had devoted thirty years of his life.

DIOGENES Laërtius, so called from his native city Laërtes in Cilicia. He wrote the lives of the philosophers in ten books, which are still extant. The period when he lived is not exactly known.

HERÖDÖTUS, a celebrated Greek historian, born at Hahcarnassus in Caria, B.C. 484. His history consists of nine books, which, for the ease and sweetness of the style, have been named after the nine muses. It was originally rehearsed in part at the Olympic games, and at the Panathenæan festivals of Athens, and ultimately improved and finished at Thurium in Lower Italy, where the historian passed the latter part of his life.

HOMER, the most distinguished of the Grecian epic poets. Of his history little, if anything, is known. He is commonly supposed to have been born near Smyrna, on the banks of the Meles, whence he is termed Melesigenes; but it still remains a contested question whether such a poet ever existed, and whether the poems that pass under his name are not the productions of several bards, collected together in a later age. These poems are the Iliad and the Odyssey. the former of which details the operations of the Grecian army before the city of Troy, ending with the death and funeral honours of Hector; the latter, the wanderings and adventures of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war to the island of Ithăca.

ISOCRĂTES, a celebrated Grecian orator, or rather oratorical writer, born at Athens B.C. 436. In youth he was a companion of Plato, and like him, a great admirer of Socrates. He is said to have died by voluntary starvation, from grief for the fatal battle of Chæronēa, in the 98th year of his age, B.C. 338. There are 21 orations ascribed to him.

LUCIAN, a celebrated Greek writer, was born at Samosăta in Syria, and flourished in the second century after Christ. His father, who was in humble circumstances, designed him for the profession of a sculptor, and with that view placed him under the instruction of his uncle. Becoming soon disgusted with this employment, he turned his attention to literature, and travelled into Greece and Asia Minor. and engaged in the business of an advocate at Antioch. This, however, he soon renounced for the more congenial pursuit of sophistic declamation, which brought him both fortune and fame. He subsequently took up his residence at Athens, and devoted himself to the study of philosophy; but embraced no one of the systems then in vogue. His writings, which are mostly in the dialogue form, display

• genius eminently satirical, great bulliancy of thought, a deep insight into the human heart, and a larger share of humour than any other author of antiquity, with the exception perhaps of Aristophanes and Horace.

Moschus, a Greek pastoral poet, born at Syracuse in the island of Sicily, but at what period is not clearly ascertained. He wrote in the Doric dialect, and adopted his master, Bion, as a model. There remain from Moschus four Idyls, and a few smaller pieces.

PAUSANIAS, a traveller and geographical writer, who is commonly supposed to have been born in Lydia, and to have flourished during the reigns of Hadrian and the Antonines. He travelled in Greece, Macedonia, Asia, Egypt, and even in Africa as far as the temple of Jupiter Ammon. After this, he appears to have taken up his residence at Rome, and to have there published his "Itincrary of Greece" (Έλλάδος περιήγησις), in ten books. This work is full of instructive details for the antiquarian, especially in reference to the history of art, combining, as it does, with a description of public edifices and works of art, the historical records and the legends connected with them.

PLATO, a distinguished philosopher, an Athenian by descent, but born in the island of Ægina, where his father Aristo resided, B.C. 429. At the age of twenty he became a disciple of Socrates, and attended the lectures of that philosopher for eight years. After the death of his master, Plato travelled into foreign countries, and on his return to Athens opened a school in a public grove called the Academy, which soon became famous, and attracted crowds of admiring auditors. Plato's works consist of numerous dialogues, thirty-five in number, on different subjects, metaphysical, political, moral, and dialectic. They are exceedingly valuable both for style and matter, rich in thought, and abounding in beautiful and poetical images.

PLUTARCH, a native of Chæronēa in Bœotia, flourished towards the end of the first century A.C. He was early engaged in civil affairs, and the Emperor Trajan, who patronised him, conferred on him high hon-Civil occupations, however, ours. did not prevent him from pursuing his literary and philosophical studies. He was an extremely voluminous writer, but the most celebrated of his productions is his "Parallel Lives" (Bíoi Παράλληλοι). In these he exhibits and compares, in a very full and instructive manner, the characters of the most distinguished Greeks and Romans. Thcre are twenty-two parallels, sketching the lives of forty-four persons, given in such a way that a Roman is always compared with a Greek. Five other biographies are isolated ones, and twelve or fourteen are lost.

STOBÆUS Johannes, a native of Stobi in Macedonia, whence his name Stobæus. He published, in four books, a collection of extracts in botk prose and verse, from upward of five hundred authors, whose works have in a great measure perished. These extracts he arranged systematical.y, under separate heads, according to their subjects.

STRABO, a celebrated geographer, born at Amasea in Pontus, about 54 B.C. After travelling through various countries of Asia and Africa, he was sent by Augustus on an expedition into Arabia. At a subsequent period he travelled over Greece, Macedonia, and most of Italy. By this means he became well qualified to compile his "Work on Geography' (Γεωγραφικά), in seventeen books This has come down to our time complete, with the exception of the seventh book, which is imperfect. The work is not a mere register of names and places, but a rich store of interesting facts and mature reflections, and of great utility in the study of ancient literature and art. There exists also an Epitome, or Chrestom- | the most worthy characters among athy, of Strabo, made subsequently to the disciples of Socrates. He has 980 A.C., by some unknown person.

Cryllus, distinguished as an histori-an, philosopher, and commander. He was born at Ercheia, a borough of Athens, B.C. 445, and was one of with sentiments truly Socratic.

left works on history, philosophy, and XENOPHON, an Athenian, son of politics, which have afforded to all 20 Κύκ. Συνεκάλεσα, ὦ πάτερ, καὶ ἦκον· ἐπεὶ δὲ ἤροντο τοῦ ἐπιβουλεύσαντος τοὖνομα, κἀγὼ ἔφην, ὅτι Οὔτις ἐστὶ, μελαγχολᾶν οἰηθέντες με, ὤχοντο ἀπιόντες. Οὕτω κατεσοφίσατό με ὁ κατάρατος τῷ ὀνόματι. I. EUROPE.

 'Η Εὐρώπη σύμπασα οἰκήσιμός ἐστι πλην ὀλίγης τῆς ἀοικητου διὰ ψύχος· αὕτη δ' ὁμορεῖτοῖς ᾿Αμαξοικοῖς, Ҍ τοῖς περὶ τὸν Τάναϊν, καὶ την Μαιῶτιν, καὶ τὸν Βορυσθένη. Τῆς δὲ οἰκησίμου, τὸ μὲν δυσχείμερον καὶ τὸ ὀρεινὸν μοχθηρῶς οἰκεῖται τῆ φύσει· ἐπιμελητὰς δὲ λαβόντα ἀγαθοὺς καὶ τὰ φαύλως οἰκούμενα ἡμεροῦται. Καθάπερ οἱ Ἐλληνες, ὄρη καὶ πέτρας κατέχοντες, ὤκουν καλῶς διὰ 10 την πρόνοιαν την περὶ τὰ πολιτικὰ, καὶ τὰς τέχνας, καὶ τὴν ἄλλην σύνεσιν τὴν περὶ βίον. 'Ρωμαῖοί τε πολλὰ ἔθνη παραλαβόντες κατὰ τὴν φύσιν ἀνήμερα, καὶ τοὺς ἀγριωτέρους πολιτικῶς ζῆν ἐδίδαξαν.

2. Διαφέρει δὲ ἡ Εὐρώπη καὶ ταύτη, διότι τοὺς καρποὺς 15 ἐκφέρει τοὺς ἀρίστους, καὶ τοὺς ἀναγκαίους τῷ βίῳ, καὶ μέταλλα ὅσα χρήσιμα· ϑυώματα δὲ καὶ λίϑους πολυτελεῖς ἔξωθεν μέτεισιν, ὦν τοῖς σπανιζομένοις οὐδὲν χείρων ὁ βίος ἐστὶν, ἢ τοῖς εὐπορουμένοις. ΄Ως δ' αὕτως βοσκημάτων μὲν πολλῶν ἀφθονίαν παρέχει, ϑηρίων δὲ σπάνιν. 20

3. Τῆς Ἰβηρίας τὸ μὲν πλέον οἰκεῖται φαύλως· ὄρη γὰρ καὶ δρυμοὺς καὶ πεδία λεπτὴν ἔχοντα γῆν, οὐδὲ ταύτην ὑμαλῶς εὔυδρον οἰκοῦσι τὴν πολλήν· ἡ δὲ πρόσβοἰρος ψυχρά ἐστι τελέως πρὸς τῆ τραχύτητι. 'Η δὲ νότιος πᾶσα εὐδαίμων σχεδόν τι, καὶ διαφερόντως ἡ ἔξω στηλῶν. 25

4 Τὴν Βαιτικὴν διαἰρἑεῖ ὁ Βαῖτις ποταμὸς, ἐξ ἀνατολῶν ὁρμώμενος. Οἰκοῦσιν αὐτὴν Τουρδιτανοὶ, σοφώτατοι τῶν ἰδήρων ὄντες. Ὁ Βαῖτις ἀναπλέεται ὁλκάσι μεγάλαις, καί εἰσι περὶ τὰς ὄχθας αὐτοῦ μέταλλα ἄλλα τε καὶ ἄργυρος πλεῖστος. ἰδηρία πᾶσα τῶν ὀλεθρίων θηρίων 30 Η 2 σπανίζει, πλην τῶν γεωρύχων λαγιδίων. Δυμαίνονται γὰρ οὖτοι καὶ φυτὰ καὶ σπέρματα ῥιζοφαγοῦντες.

5. 'Η Τουρδιτανία καὶ ἡ προσεχὴς αὐτῆ ℽῆ εὔκαρπός ἐστι, καὶ μετάλλοις πληθύει. Οὔτε γὰρ χρυσὸς, οὔτε ἄρ-5 γυρος, οὐδὲ δὴ χαλκὸς, οὐδὲ σίδηρος, οὐδαμοῦ τῆς γῆς οὕτε τοσοῦτος, οὕθ' οὕτως ἀγαθὸς ἐξήτασται γεννώμενος μέχρι νῦν· ὁ δὲ χρυσὸς οὐ μεταλλεύεται μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ σύρεται· καταφέρουσι δὲ οἱ ποταμοὶ καὶ οἱ χείμαἰροι τὴν χρυσιτιν ἄμμον, πολλαχοῦ καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἀνύδροις τόποις οὖσαν·

I. SOLON.

Solon procures the Athenians the Possession of Salamis

Έπεὶ μακρόν τινα καὶ δυσχερῆ πόλεμον οἱ ἐν ἄστει περὶ τῆς Σαλαμινίων νήσου Μεγαρεῦσι πολεμοῦντες ἐξέκαμον, καὶ νόμον ἔθεντο, μήτε γράψαι τινὰ, μήτ' εἰπεῖν αῦθις, ὡς χρὴ τὴν πόλιν ἀντιποιεῖσθαι τῆς Σαλαμῖνος, ἡ θανάτῳ ζημιοῦσθαι, βαρέως φέρων τὴν ἀδοξίαν ὁ Σόλων, 5 καὶ τῶν νέων ὀρῶν πολλοὺς δεομένους ἀρχῆς ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον, αὐτοὺς δὲ μὴ θαἰροῦντας ἄρξασθαι διὰ τὸν νόμον, ἐσκήψατο μὲν ἕκστασιν τῶν λογισμῶν, καὶ λόγος εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας διεδόθη παρακινητικῶς ἔχειν αὐτόν. Ἐλεγεῖα δὲ κρύφα συνθεἰς, καὶ μελετήσας ὥστε λέγειν 16 ἀπὸ στόματος, ἐξεπήδησεν εἰς τὴν ἀγορὰν ἄφνω, πιλίον περιθέμενος. Ὅχλου δὲ πολλοῦ συνδραμόντος, ἀναβὰς ἐπὶ τὸν τοῦ κήρυκος λίθον, ἐν ῷδῆ διεξῆλθε τὴν ἐλεγείαν, ἦς ἐστιν ἀρχή.

Αὐτὸς κήρυξ ἦλθον ἀφ' ἰμερτῆς Σαλαμῖνος, 15 Κόσμον ἐπέων, ὠδὴν ἀντ' ἀγορῆς, θέμενος.

Τοῦτο τὸ ποίημα Σαλαμὶς ἐπιγέγραπται, καὶ στίχων ἑκατόν ἐστι, χαριέντως πἀνυ πεποιημένων. Τότε δὲ ἀσθέντος αὐτοῦ, καὶ τῶν φίλων τοῦ Σόλωνος ἀρξαμένων ἐπαινεῖν, μάλιστα δὲ τοῦ Πεισιστράτου τοῖς πολίταις 20 ἐγκελευομένου, καὶ παρορμῶντος πεισθῆναι τῷ λέγοντι, λύσαντες τὸν νόμον, αὐθις ἥπτοντο τοῦ πολἕμου, προστησάμενοι τὸν Σόλωνα. Τὰ μὲν οὖν δημώδη τῶν λεγομένων τοιαῦτ' ἐστὶν, ὅτι πλεύσας ἐπὶ Κωλιάδα μετὰ τοῦ Πεισιστράτου, καὶ καταλαβῶν αὐτόθι πάσας τὰς γυναῖκας 28 τῆ Δήμητρι τὴν πάτριον θυσίαν ἐπιτελούσας, ἔπεμψεν ἄνδρα πιστὸν εἰς τὴν Σαλαμῖνα, προσποιούμενον αὐτόμολοι εἰναι, κελεύσοντα τοὺς Μεγαρεῖς, εἰ βούλονται τῶι Αθηναίων τὰς πρώτας λαβεῖν γυναῖκας, ἐπὶ Κωλιάδα μετ' αὐτοῦ πλεῖν τὴν ταχίστην. 'Ως δὲ πεισθέντες οἰ Μεγαρεῖς ἄνδρας ἐξέπεμψαν ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ, καὶ κατεῖδεν ὁ Σόλων τὸ πλοῖον ἐλαυνόμενον ἀπὸ τῆς νήσου, τὰς μετ γυναῖκας ἐκποδῶν ἀπελθεῖν ἐκέλευσε, τῶν δὲ νεωτέρων τοὺς μηδέπω γενειῶντας ἐνδύμασι καὶ μίτραις καὶ ὑποδή μασι τοῖς ἐκείνων σκευασαμένους, καὶ λαβόντας ἐγχειρίδια κρυπτὰ, παίζειν καὶ χορεύειν προσέταξε πρὸς τῆ θαλάσση μέχρις ἂν ἀποβῶσιν οἱ πολέμιοι, καὶ γένηται τὸ πλοῖοι ὑποχείριον. Οὕτω δὴ τούτων πραττομένων, ὑπαχθέντες οἱ Μεγαρεῖς τῆ ὄψει, ἐξεπήδων ὡς ἐπὶ γυναῖκας ἁμιλλώμενοι πρὸς ἀλλήλους. ὥστε μηδένα διαφυγεῖν, ἀλλὰ πάντας ἀπολέσθαι, καὶ τὴν νῆσον ἐπιπλεύσαντας εὐθὺς ἔχειν τοὺς ᾿Αθηναίους. Ἄλλοι δὲ ἄλλον τινὰ τρόπον 15 γενέσθαι τὴν κατάληψιν λέγουσιν.

Extracts from the Life of Aristides.

'Αριστείδης ὁ Λυσιμάχου, φυλῆς μὲν ἦν 'Αντιοχίδος τὸν δὲ δῆμον 'Αλωπεκῆθεν. Περὶ δ' οὐσίας αὐτοῦ λόγοι διάφοροι γεγόνασιν, οἱ μὲν, ὡς ἐν πενία συντόνῳ καταβιώσαντος, καὶ μετὰ τὴν τελευτὴν ἀπολιπόντος θυγατέρας
20 δύο πολὺν χρόνον ἀνεκδότους δι' ἀπορίαν γεγενημένας. Πρὸς δὲ τοῦτον τὸν λόγου ὑπὸ πολλῶν εἰρημένον ἀντιτασσόμενος ὁ Φαληρεὺς Δημήτριος, χωρίον τε Φαληροῖ φησὶ γινώσκειν 'Αριστείδου λεγόμενον, ἐν ῷ τέθαπται, καὶ ἄλλα πεκμήρια τῆς περὶ τὸν οἶκον εὐπορίας ἀγείρει, 25 οὐ μάλα πιθανὰ, φιλοτιμούμενος αὐτὸν τῆς πενίας ἐξελέσ θαι, ὡς μεγάλου κακοῦ.

Θαυμαστή δέ τις ἐφαίνετο αὐτοῦ παρὰ τὰς ἐν τῆ πολιτεία μεταβολὰς ἡ εὐστάθεια, μήτε ταῖς τιμαῖς ἐπαιρομένου, πρός τε τὰς δυσημερίας ἀθορύβως καὶ πράως ἔχοντος, και 30 ὑμοίως ἡγουμένου χρῆναι τῆ πατρίδι παρέχειν ἑαυτὸν, οὐ χρημάτων μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ δόξης προῖκα καὶ ἀμισθὶ πολιτευόμενον. "Οθεν, τῶν εἰς ᾿Αμφιάραον ὑπ' Αἰσχύλου πεποιημένων ἰαμβείων ἐν τῷ θεάτρω λεγομένων, Οὐ γὰρ δοκεῖν δίκαιος, ἀλλ' εἰναι θέλει, Βαθεῖαν ἄλοκα διὰ φρενὸς καρπούμενος, 'Αφ' ἦς τὰ κεδνὰ βλαστάνει βουλεύματα, πάντες ἀπέβλεψαν εἰς ᾿Αριστείδην, ὡς ἐκείνῷ μάλιστα τῆς ἀρετῆς ταύτης προσηκούσης. 5

Οὐ μόνον δὲ πρὸς εὖνοιαν καὶ χάριν, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς οργὴν καὶ πρὸς ἔχθραν ἰσχυρότατος ἦν ὑπὲρ τῶν δικαίων ἀντιβῆναι. Λέγεται γοῦν ποτε διώκων ἐχθρὸν ἐν δικαστηρίω, μετὰ τὴν κατηγορίαν οὐ βουλομένων ἀκούειν τοῦ κινδυνεύοντος τῶν δικαστῶν, ἀλλὰ τὴν ψῆφον εὐθὺς 10 αἰτούντων ἐπ' αὐτὸν, ἀναπηδήσας τῷ κρινομένῳ συνικετεύειν, ὅπως ἀκουσθείη καὶ τύχοι τῶν νομίμων.

Πάλιν δὲ κρίνων ἰδιώταις δυσὶ, τοῦ ἐτέρου λέγοντος, ὡς πολλὰ τυγχάνει τὸν ᾿Αριστείδην ὁ ἀντίδικος λελυπηκὼς, λέγ', ὡ 'γαθὲ, ἔφη, μᾶλλον εἴ τι σὲ κακὸν πεποίηκε 15 σοὶ γὰρ οὐκ ἐμαυτῷ δικάζω.

Πασῶν δὲ τῶν περὶ αὐτὸν ἀρετῶν ἡ δικαιοσύνη μάλιστα τοῖς πολλοῖς αἴσθησιν παρεῖχε, διὰ τὸ τὴν χρείαν ἐνδελεχεστάτην αὐτῆς καὶ κοινοτάτην ὑπάρχειν. "Οθεν, ἀνὴρ πένης καὶ δημοτικὸς, ἐκτήσατο τὴν βασιλικωτάτην καὶ 20 θειοτάτην προσηγορίαν τὸν Δίκαιον. "Ο τῶν βασιλέων καὶ τυράννων οὐδεὶς ἐζήλωσεν, ἀλλὰ Πολιορκήταὶ, καὶ Κεραυνοὶ, καὶ Νικάτορες, ἕνιοι δ' ᾿Αετοὶ καὶ 'Ιέρακες ἔχαιρον προσαγορευόμενοι, τὴν ἀπὸ τῆς βίας καὶ τῆς δυνάμεως, ὡς ἔοικε, μᾶλλον, ἢ τὴν ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρετῆς δόξαν 95 ἀγαπῶντες.

Τῷ δ' οὖν 'Αριστείδη συνέβη τὸ πρῶτον ἀγαπωμένῳ διὰ τὴν ἐπωνυμίαν, ὕστερον φθονεῖσθαι. 'Ο γὰρ δῆμος ἐπὶ τῆ νίκη μέγα φρονῶν, ἤχθετο τοῖς ὄνομα καὶ δόξαν ὑπὲρ τοὺς τολλοὺς ἔχουσιν. Καὶ συνελθόντες εἰς ἄστυ παν-30 ταχόθεν, ἐξοστρακίζουσι τὸν 'Αριστείδην, ὄνομα τῷ φθόνῳ τῆς δόξης φόβον τυραννίδος θέμενοι. Μοχθηρίας γὰρ οὐκ ἦν ζημία ὁ ἐξοστρακισμὸς, ἀλλ' ἐκαλεῖτο μὲν, δι' εὐπρέπειαν, ὅγκου καὶ δυνάμεως βαρυτέρας ταπείνωσις καὶ κόλασις.

Γραφομένων ούν τότς των δστράκων, λέγεταί τινα των

ἀγραμμάτων καὶ παντελῶς ἀγροίκων, ἀναδόντα τῷ ᾿Αριστείδη τὸ ὅστρακον, ὡς ἐνὶ τῶν τυχόντων, παρακαλεῖν ὅπως ᾿Αριστείδην ἐγγράψει. Τοῦ δὲ θαυμάσαντος καὶ πυθομένου, μή τι κακὸν αὐτῷ ᾿Αριστείδης πεποίηκεν, Προσετίθεντο γὰρ οἱ πλεῖστοι τῶν συμμάχων ἐκείνω τε καὶ 'Αριστείδη, τὴν χαλεπότητα τοῦ Παυσανίου καὶ ὑπεροψίαν μὴ φέροντες.

Κίμων δε, τῶν συμμάχων ἤδη προσκεχωρηκότων αὐτῷ, 15 στρατηγός είς Θράκην ἕπλευσε, πυνθανόμενος, Περσῶν ανδρας ἐνδόξους, καὶ συγγενεῖς βασιλέως, Ἡϊόνα πόλιν, επί τῷ Στρύμονι κειμένην ποταμῷ, κατέχοντας, ἐνοχλεῖν τοῖς περὶ τὸν τόπον ἐκεῖνον Ἐλλησιν. Τῶν δὲ πεζῶν ἐπικαταβάντων πρὸς τὴν θάλασσαν, μέγα μεν έργον έφαίνετο τῷ Κίμωνι τὸ βιάζεσθαι τὴν ἀπόβασιν, καί κεκμηκότας άκμησι καί πολλαπλασίοις ἐπάγειν τοὺς "Ελληνας. ὅμως δὲ ῥώμη καὶ φρονήματι τοῦ κρατεῖν ὁρῶν έπηρμένους, και προθύμους όμόσε χωρείν τοις βαρβάροις, 5 άπεβίβαζε τοὺς ὁπλίτας ἔτι θερμοὺς τῶ κατὰ τὴν ναυμαχίαν ἀγῶνι, μετὰ κραυγῆς καὶ δρόμου προσφερομένους. End of the Peloponnesian War, and the Taking of Athens.

'Εκ δὲ τούτου πλέων ὁ Λύσανδρος ἐπὶ τὰς πόλεις, 'Αθηναίων μὲν οἶς ἐπιτύχοι, ἐκέλευε πάντας εἰς 'Αθήνας 5 ἀπιέναι· φείσεσθαι γὰρ οὐδενὸς, ἀλλ' ἀποσφάξειν, ὃν ἂν ἔξω λάβη τῆς πόλεως. XI. PHOCION.

Φωκίωνα οὔτε γελάσαντά τις, οὔτε κλαύσαντα ῥαδίως
᾿Αθηναίων εἰδεν, οὐδ' ἐν βαλανείω δημοσιεύοντι λουσάμενον, οὐδ' ἐκτὸς ἔχοντα τὴν χεῖρα τῆς περιβολῆς, ὅτε τύχοι περιβεβλημένος. Ἐπεὶ κατά γε τὴν χώραν καὶ τὰς στρατ-15 είας ἀνυπόδητος ἀεὶ καὶ γυμνὸς ἐβάδιζεν, εἰ μὴ ψῦχος ὑπερβάλλον εἴη καὶ δυσκαρτέρητον, ὥστε καὶ παίζοντας ἢδη τοὺς στρατευομένους σύμβολον μεγάλου ποιεῖσθαι χειμῶνος ἐνδεδυμένον Φωκίωνα.

Τῷ δ' ἤθει προσηνέστατος ὢν καὶ φιλανθρωπότατος 20 ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου δυσξύμβολος ἐφαίνετο καὶ σκυθρωπὸς, ῶστε μὴ ἑαδίως ἀν τινα μόνον ἐντυχεῖν αὐτῷ τῶν ἀσυνήθων.
Διὸ καὶ Χάρητί ποτε πρὸς τὰς ὀφρῦς αὐτοῦ λέγοντι, τῶν 'Αθηναίων ἐπιγελώντων, οὐδὲν, εἶπεν, αὕτη ὑμᾶς
λελύπηκεν ἡ ὀφρύς · ὁ δὲ τούτων γέλως πολλὰ κλαῦσαι
25 τὴν πόλιν πεποίηκεν.

Ο Φωκίωνος λόγος πλεῖστον ἐν ἐλαχίστη λέξει νοῦν εἰχε. Καὶ πρὸς τοῦτ' ἔοικεν ἀπιδῶν ὁ Σφήττιος Πολύευκτος εἰπεῖν, ὅτι ῥήτωρ μὲν ἄριστος εἰη Δημοσθένης, εἰπεῖν δὲ δεινότατος ὁ Φωκίων. ΄Ο δὲ Δημοσθένης τῶν μὲν
30 ἄλλων κατεφρόνει πολὺ ῥητόρων, ἀνισταμένου δὲ Φωκίωνος, εἰώθει λέγει: ἀτρέμα πρὸς τοὺς φίλους, ἡ τῶν ἐμῶν λόγων κοπὶς πάρεστιν. ᾿Αλλὰ τοῦτο μὲν ἴσως πρὸς τὸ ἦθος ἀνοιστέον. Ἐπεὶ καὶ ῥῆμα καὶ νεῦμα μόνον ἀνδρὸς ἀγαθοῦ μυρίοις ἐνθυμήμασι καὶ περιόδοις ἀντίρροπον ἔχει

Οἱ τῶν 'Αθηναίων σύμμαχοι καὶ οἱ νησιῶται τοὺς Αθήνηθεν ἀποστόλους, ἑτέρου μὲν ἐκπλέοντος στρατη γοῦ, πολεμίους νομίζοντες, ἐφράγνυντο τείχη, καὶ λιμένας ἀπεχώννυσαν, καὶ κατεκόμιζον ἀπὸ τῆς χώρας εἰς τὰς πόλεις βοσκήματα, καὶ ἀνδράποδα, καὶ γυναῖκας, καὶ 5 παῖδας εἰ δὲ Φωκίων ἡγοῖτο, πόἰρω ναυσὶν ἰδίαις ἀπαντῶντες ἐστεφανωμένοι, καὶ χαίροντες, ὡς αὐτοὺς κατῆγον.

"Ηδη δὲ τῶν 'Αθηναίων πρὸς Φίλιππον ἐκπεπολεμωμένων παντάπασι, καὶ στρατηγὸν, αὐτοῦ μὴ παρόντος, ἕτερον ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον ἡρημένων, ὡς κατέπλευσεν ἀπὸ Ιἰ τῶν νήσων, πρῶτον μὲν ἔπειθε τὸν δῆμον, εἰρηνικῶς ἕχοντος τοῦ Φιλίππου, καὶ φοβουμένου τὸν κίνδυνον, ἰσχυρῶς δέχεσθαι τὰς διαλύσεις · καὶ τινὸς ἀντικρούσαντος αὐτῷ τῶν εἰωθότων συκοφαντεῖν, καὶ εἰπόντος, σὺ δὲ τολμᾶς, ὡ Φωκίων, ἀποτρέπειν 'Αθηναίους ἤδη τὰ Iἱ ὅπλα διὰ χειρῶν ἔχοντας; ἐγώ γε, εἶπε, καὶ ταῦτ' εἰδὼς, ὅτι, πολέμου μὲν ὅντος, ἐγὼ σοῦ, εἰρήνης δὲ γενομένης, σὺ ἐμοῦ ἄρξεις. 'Ως δ' οὐκ ἔπειθεν, ἀλλ' ὁ Δημοσθένης ἐκράτει, κελεύων ὡς ποἰρωτάτω τῆς 'Αττικῆς θέσθαι μάχην τοὺς 'Αθηναίους · ὡ τᾶν, ἔφη, μὴ, ποῦ μαχώμεθα, 20 σκοπῶμεν, ἀλλὰ πῶς νικήσωμεν. Οὕτω γὰρ ἔσται μακρὰν ἱ πόλεμος · ἡττωμένοις δὲ πᾶν ἀεὶ δεινὸν ἐγγὺς πάρεστι.

Συνεβούλευεν 'Αλεξάνδρω ὁ Φωκίων, εἰ μὲν ἡσυχίας ὀρέγεται, θέσθαι τὸν πόλεμον · εἰ δὲ δόξης, μεταθέσθαι πρὸς τοὺς βαρβάρους ἀπὸ τῶν ἘΑλλήνων τραπόμενον. 25 Καὶ πολλὰ καὶ πρὸς τὴν 'Αλεξάνδρου φύσιν καὶ βούλησιν εὐστόχως εἰπῶν, οὕτω μετέβαλε καὶ κατεπράϋνεν αὐτὸν, ὥστ' εἰπεῖν, ὅπως προσέξουσι τὸν νοῦν 'Αθηναῖοι τοῖς πράγμασιν, ὡς, εἴ τι γένοιτο περὶ αὐτὸν, ἐκείνοις ἄρχειν προσῆκον. 'Ιδία δὲ τὸν Φωκίωνα ποιησάμενος αὐτοῦ 30 φίλον καὶ ξένον, εἰς τοσαύτην ἔθετο ·ιμὴν, ὅσην εἶχον ὀλίγοι τῶν ἀεὶ συνόντων. 'Ο γοῦν Δοῦρις εἶρηκεν, ὡς μέγας γενόμενος, καὶ Δαρείου κρατήσας, ἀφεῖλε τῶν ἐπιστολῶν τὸ Χαίρειν, πλὴν ἐν ὅσαις ἕγραφε Φωκίωνι. Τοῦτον δὲ μόνον μετὰ τοῦ Χαίρειν προσηγόρευε.

Τὸ μέντοι περί τῶν χρημάτων ἡμολογούμενον ἔστιν, ὅτι δωρεὰν αὐτῷ κατέπεμψεν ἑκατον τάλαντα. Τούτων κομισθέντων είς 'Αθήνας, ήρώτησεν ό Φωκίων τους φέροντας, τί δή ποτε, πολλών ὄντων 'Αθηναίων, αὐτῷ μόνω 5 τοσαῦτα δίδωσιν 'Αλέξανδρος; Εἰπόντων δ' ἐκείνων, ὅτι σε κρίνει μόνον άνδρα καλον και άγαθόν. ούκουν, είπεν ό Φωκίων, ἐασάτω με καὶ δοκεῖν ἀεὶ καὶ εἶναι τοιοῦτον. [•]Ως δ' ἀκολουθήσαντες εἰς οἶκον αὐτῷ πολλὴν ἑώρων εὐτέλειαν, τὴν μὲν γυναῖκα μάττουσαν, ὁ δὲ Φωκίων αὐτὸς 10 ανιμήσας ὕδωρ ἐκ τοῦ φρέατος ἀπενίπτετο τοὺς πόδας. έτι μαλλον ένέκειντο, καὶ ήγανάκτουν, δεινὸν είναι λέγοντες, εί φίλος ών τοῦ βασιλέως οὕτω διαιτήσεται πονηρῶς. Ίδων οῦν ὁ Φωκίων πένητα πρεσβύτην, ἐν τριβωνίω ρυπαρῷ πορευόμενον, ήρώτησεν, εἰ τούτου χείρονα νομίζ-15 ουσιν αὐτόν εὐφημεῖν δ' ἐκείνων δεομένων, καὶ μὴν ούτος, είπεν, απ' έλαττόνων έμοῦ ζῆ, καὶ ἀρκεῖται. Τὸ δ' όλον, η μη χρώμενος, έφη, μάτην έξω τοσουτον χρυσίον, η χρώμενος, έμαυτον άμα κάκεῖνον διαβαλῶ προς την πόλιν. Ούτω μεν ούν έπανηλθε πάλιν τα χρήματα έξ 20 'Αθηνων, επιδείξαντα τοῖς Ελλησι πλουσιώτερον τοῦ διδόντος τοσαῦτα τὸν μὴ δεόμενον.

"Ωρμησε μέν οὖν ἐπὶ τὸ πράττειν τὰ κοινὰ, τοῦ Φωκικου πολέμου συνεστῶτος. Λαβῶν δὲ τῆς πολιτείας καλήν 5 ὑπόθεσιν, τὴν πρὸς Φίλιππον ὑπὲρ τῶν Ἐλλήνων δικαιολογίαν, καὶ πρὸς ταύτην ἀγωνιζόμενος ἀξίως, ταχὺ δόξαν ἔσχε, καὶ περίβλεπτος ὑπὸ τῶν λόγων ἤρθη καὶ τῆς παἰρἡησίας. ὥστε θαυμάζεσθαι μὲν ἐν τῆ Ἐλλάδι, θεραπεύεσθαι δ' ὑπὸ τοῦ μεγάλου βασιλέως, πλεῖστον δ' 10 αὐτοῦ λόγον εἰναι παρὰ τῷ Φιλίππῳ τῶν δημαγωγούντων. ὁμολογεῖν δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἀπεχθανομένους, ὅτι πρὸς ἔνδοξον αὐτοῖς ἄνθρωπον ὁ ἀγών ἐστιν.

28-30. $\lambda \dot{\epsilon}\gamma \epsilon \kappa \alpha \kappa \tilde{\omega} \varsigma$, &c., "ay, speak ill, since thou hast not learned how to speak well." There is here a play upon the words. The expression $\kappa \alpha \kappa \tilde{\omega} \varsigma \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \iota \nu$ signifies both "to speak incorrectly" and "to speak injuriously," and $\kappa \alpha \lambda \tilde{\omega} \varsigma \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \iota \nu$, on the other hand, both "to speak correctly" and "to praise." "To speak correctly" here, is to speak in accordance with the dictates of true wisdom, i. e., philosophy.— $\mu \epsilon \mu \dot{\alpha} \vartheta \eta \kappa \alpha \varsigma$, 2d sing. perf. indic. act. of $\mu \alpha \nu \vartheta \dot{\alpha} \nu \omega$.— $\delta \kappa \alpha \lambda \delta \varsigma \kappa \alpha \dot{\alpha} \dot{\alpha} \vartheta \partial \delta \varsigma \dot{\alpha} \nu \dot{\eta} \rho$, &c., "the man of moral excellence submits his own judgment to him who governs all things," i. e., to the ruler of the universe. The expression $\kappa \alpha \lambda \delta \varsigma \kappa \alpha \dot{\alpha} \dot{\alpha} \vartheta \partial \delta \dot{\varsigma} \dot{\alpha} \nu \dot{\eta} \rho$ is meant to indicate man as he should be, both externally and internally, and is best rendered by a paraphrase.— $\dot{\nu} \pi \sigma \tau \dot{\epsilon} \tau \alpha \chi \varepsilon$, 3d sing. perf. indic. act. of $\dot{\nu} \pi \sigma \tau \dot{\alpha} \sigma \omega$. Some verbs in Greek (of which $\epsilon\check{\iota}\delta\omega$ is one) take with them a participle, where we employ the simple conjunction that with its clause. If the subject indicated by the participle be the same as that of the preceding verb, the participle stands in the nominative : if the subject be different, the participle is in one of the oblique cases.— $\chi\rho\dot{\eta}\sigma\iota\mu$ for $\chi\rho\dot{\eta}\sigma\iota\mu\alpha.$ — $\epsilon\dot{\iota}\delta\dot{\omega}\varsigma$ for $\epsilon\dot{\iota}\delta\eta\kappa\dot{\omega}\varsigma$, perf. part. act. of $\epsilon\check{\iota}\delta\omega.$ — $\pi\delta\lambda\lambda'$ for $\pi\delta\lambda\lambdaa$.

The meaning is, that ravens will feed upor your remains only after death, whereas flatterers (i. e., parasites) will make you their prey while still living. There is a play upon the words $\kappa\delta\rho as$ and $\kappa\delta\lambda as$ in the Greek, the pronunciation of the two differing but slightly, and being frequently confounded by a species of Labdacismus or $\tau\rho a\nu\lambda\sigma\mu\delta s$. $-\epsilon\mu\pi\epsilon\sigma\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\nu$, 2d aor. infin. act. of $\epsilon\mu\pi(\pi\tau\omega.-a\pi\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\iota\rho\epsilon\nu)$ $\dot{\eta}\mu\omega\nu$, "has shorn away from us," i. e., has stripped us of: 3d sing. 1st aor. indic. act. of $d\pi\sigma\kappa\epsilon\iota\rho\omega.-\kappa\epsilon\lambda\mu\omega\delta$ $\dot{\lambda}\mu\omega\delta$ $\dot{\delta}\mu\mu\alpha\kappa\sigma\nu$ où $\delta\epsilon\nu$, " and there is no remedy against famine."

More literally, "the same thought it proper $that the young," 3d sing. imperf. indic. act. of <math>\dot{a} \xi \iota \delta \omega$. In construing, $v \dot{e} o v c$ becomes the accusative before $\kappa a \tau \sigma \pi \tau \rho \dot{\zeta} \dot{c} \sigma \vartheta a \iota ... - \dot{a} \xi \iota o \iota \gamma \dot{\eta} v \circ \iota v \tau o$, "they might prove worthy of it," i. e., might show forth in their lives a moral beauty in unison with, and worthy of, their external beauty.... $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \dot{e} \dot{q}$, "by a good education," i. e., by the treasures of wisdom.

14-22. πῶς ἄν μὴ γίγνοιτο ἀδίκημα, "how there might not be any offence," i. e., how there might be no offences committed.—eἰ ὁμοίως ἀγανακτοῖεν, &c., "if those who were not injured would be equally indignant with those who were injured."—θεωροίη, Attic form of the optative, for θεωροῖ.—εἰ, ἔợη, ὁρώη, &c., "replied, 'if he could see what they do who are intoxicated." Literally, "if he could see those who are intoxicated, what things they do." This is a common Greek construction, where, in place of the regular nominative, we have what ought to have been the nominative converted into an accusative and governed by the preceding verb, while in its place a nominative is understood. The plain Greek, in the present instance, would be εἰ ὁρώη οἶα ποιοῦσιν οἱ μεθύοντες. παφῥησίας δικαίας, "just freedom of speech." The plural implies, "on all occasions."—τοὺς ἀρχομένους, &c., "and should, by every means in his power, not neglect his subjects when injured," i. e., not overlook injuries done to them.—τοὺς ἀρχομένους, literally, "those who are ruled over."

25-31. διήνεγκεν, "differed from other men." Supply $å\lambda\lambda\omega v$. More freely, "surpassed other men," 3d sing. 2d aor. indic. act. of διαφέρω. δπότε μèν αὐτὸν ὁρῶεν, &c., "whenever they who were then ruling directed their view towards the man himself." Observe the peculiar force of the optative, as standing here in place of a past tense of the indicative, and consult the note on line 13. page 22.—ὑπότε δὲ εἰς τοὺς τρόπους ἀποβλέψαιεν, "as often as they looked (away from the man himself) to his moral character," i. c., looked from the external to the internal man. Observe the force of ἀπό in composition.—ὥστε καὶ εἰ τις ǚλλος, &c., " that if even any one else should dare to commit an offence against them, they were confident that Evagoras will prove a helper."— $\tau o \lambda \mu \tilde{\omega} \eta$ for $\tau o \lambda \mu \tilde{\omega}$, optative of $\tau o \lambda u \tilde{\omega} - o \hat{v} \varsigma$ ov $\delta e \hat{\varsigma} \hat{v} v$, &c., "as no one would have dared to utter," &c.

33-35. ό Σωκρατικός, "the Socratic," i. e., the pupil and follower of Socrates. This epithet serves to distinguish him from Euclid, the mathematician of Alexandria.—άκούσας τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ λέγοντος, "having heard his brother say." The participle here takes the place of the infinitive, and denotes more of continued action.—ἀπολοίμην, εἰ μή σε, &c., "may I perish, if I do not take vengeance upon thee:" ἀπολοίμην is the 1st sing. 2d aor. opt. mid. of ἀπόλλυμι, and, standing without any accompanying particle, indicates a wish. Both ἀπολοίμην and τιμωρησαίμην indicate, as aorists, quickness of action; and the more literal meaning of the clause, therefore, may be given as follows: "may I soon have perished, in case I may not have soon taken vengeance on thee."—ἐγὼ δὲ, εἰπεν, &c., " and may I perish, replied Euclīdes, if I do not prevail upon thee to love me.' With ἐγὼ supply ἀπολοίμην, and, for a literal translation, render as in the previous clause.—ἡμῶς, used here for ἐμέ. The plural, by its air of generality, imparts more of moderation and iorbearance to the remark of the speaker, than the singular would have done.

35–36. τί ἂν ἕτι ἀγαθὸν, &c., "what would there be any longer of value for us ?"—τι λαμπρὸν ἐργάσασθαι, "to perform any splendid achievement."

26 LINE 2-6. àvakaúσειaς àv, "thou mayest kindle wp," i. e., if thou wilt. The optative here implies possibility, depending upon the will of the party: 2d sing. 1st aor. opt. act. of àvakaíw, Æolir orm for àvakaúσαις.—àποσδέσειας, 2d sing. 1st aor. opt. act. of àποσδέννυμι, Æolic form for àποσδέσειας. μάλιστα àv εὐδοκιμοίης, "thou wilt be most highly thought of." A softened expression for the regular future, εὐδοκιμήσεις.—à τοις åλλοις àv, &c., "which thou wouldst censure others if doing," i. e., for the performance of which thou wouldst censure others.—πράττσυσιν, dat. plur. pres. part. act. of πράττω.—εἰ ἅπαντες μιμησαίμεθα, "if we should all imitate."—εὐθὺς àv ἀπολοίμεθα, "we would soon perish," i. e., be ruined.

9-13. $\lambda \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \iota \, \delta \iota a \phi \dot{\epsilon} \rho \epsilon \iota \nu$, "says that he differs." Pronoun understood before the infinitive in the nominative case. Compare note on line 24, page 14.—" ν " $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \vartheta (\omega \sigma \iota \nu)$, "in order that they may eat." We have now the subjunctive after a present tense ($\zeta \tilde{\omega} \sigma \iota \nu$); whereas, on a former occasion, we had the optative after a past tense. Compare note on line 10, page 25.— $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \kappa \sigma \mu \tilde{\mu} c$, the subjunctive again after a present tense ($\vartheta \epsilon \dot{\omega} \rho \epsilon \iota$).— $\dot{\epsilon} \dot{a} \nu \dot{a} \mu \dot{a} \rho$ - $\tau \eta$, "if he committed an offence," i. e., while under the influence of liquor, 3d sing. 2d aor. subj. act. of $\dot{a} \mu a \rho \tau \dot{a} \nu \omega$.

14-16. $\tau \partial v \ o \bar{l} v v \ \eta v \pi (v\eta)$, &c., "if one drink wine moderately, it benefits the body, and does not injure the mind." The plainer Greek would have been $\delta \ o \bar{l} v o \varsigma$, $\eta v \pi i v \eta \tau \iota \varsigma \ a v \tau \partial v \mu \epsilon \tau \rho i \omega \varsigma$, $\delta v \eta \sigma \epsilon \tau \delta \ \sigma \tilde{\omega} \mu a$, &c.— $\delta v \eta \sigma \epsilon$, 3d sing. 1st aor. indic. act. of $\delta v \eta \mu \iota$. Observe in $\delta v \eta \sigma \epsilon$ and $\delta \delta \lambda a \psi \epsilon v$ the peculiar force of the aorist, indicating what is customary, or wont to happen, and giving the tense, therefore, in our own idiom, the meaning of a present. — $\pi \rho \delta \varsigma \ v \pi \epsilon \rho \delta \delta \lambda \eta v$, "to excess."— $\kappa a \lambda \ \eta \delta \eta \ \mu \epsilon \vartheta v \delta \kappa \eta \tau a \iota$, "and be now intoxicated."— $a \delta c \chi \rho \lambda \ \pi a \delta c \chi \epsilon \iota$, "he acts disgracefully." Literally, "he suffers disgraceful things." Both persons and things are said in Greek, "to $u f \epsilon r' \ (\pi a \sigma \chi \epsilon \iota v)$, whatever of any kind happens to them, or in whatever way they may be influenced or affected.

¹⁷⁻²³ ἡτήσατο. "asked." Literally. "asked for himself." i e., to 216

Equivalent to the Latin moriturus sit.— $\tau \sigma \tilde{v} \vartheta av \dot{a} \tau ov$, "from the death that is impending." Observe the force of the article. The genitive is here gov erned by $\dot{a} \pi \delta$ in composition.— $\tilde{\epsilon} \lambda \eta \tau a\iota$, 3d sing. 2d aor. subj. mid of aip $\epsilon \omega$ — $\Pi \epsilon \mu \pi \eta tov \kappa a\iota$ Kaisapos $\delta \iota a \sigma \tau a v \tau av$, "when Pompey and Cæsar were a: variance." i. e., were in arms against each other.— $\delta v \phi \delta \gamma \omega$, "whom I am to avoid," i. e., which one of the two: 1st sing. 2d aor. subj. act. of $\phi \epsilon v \gamma \omega$.— $\mu \eta \gamma \iota \gamma v \omega \sigma \kappa \omega v \pi \rho \delta_{\delta} \delta v \phi v \gamma \omega$, "without knowing (at the same time) unto whom I am to flee." Cicero meant, by his witticism, that the one (Cæsar) was too bad, and the other (Pompey) not good enough, to follow. — $\kappa a v \mu \eta \delta \iota \omega \kappa \omega \tau a\iota$, "even though they be not pursued."— $\kappa a v \mu \eta \kappa a \kappa \tilde{\omega} \varsigma$ $\pi \rho a \tau \tau \omega \sigma \iota$, "even though they be not unfortunate :" $\kappa a \kappa \tilde{\omega} \varsigma \pi \rho a \tau \tau \epsilon v$ is "to be unfortunate" or "unsuccessful;" but $\kappa a \kappa \tilde{\omega} \varsigma \pi o \iota \epsilon \tilde{\iota} v$, "to do an injury," "to act badly," &c.

25-28. μετά τινος μελφδίας, "in connexion with a kind of melody," i. e., with a species of musical cadence or rhythm.—ΐνα ψυχαγαγῶνται, "in order that their souls may be influenced."—καὶ εὐκολώτερον αὐτοὺς &c., "and that they may receive them the more easily into their remembrance," i. e., in order that the accompanying cadence may aid the memory : παραλαμβάνωσιν refers to the boys, and αὐτοὺς to the laws. The dative τῆ μνήμη denotes more continuance than εἰς τὴν μνήμην would have done. —ΐνα μὴ πληγῶ. Supply ποιῶ τοῦτο: πληγῶ is the 1st sing 2d aor. subj. pass. of πλήσσω.

29-34. $\chi\omega\rho i\varsigma$, "independently of." This line, and the four that follow, are Iambic trimeters from Menander. To make the first complete, insert $i\mu\omega\epsilon_{\sigma} \delta \delta$ before $\chi\omega\rho i\varsigma$.— $a\dot{v}\tau o\dot{v} \pi a \sigma' a\dot{v}\tau \omega v$, &c., "we, of our own selves, add others." Literally, "from our own selves." $a\dot{v}\tau\omega v$ is for $\dot{\epsilon}av\tau\omega v$, and this for $\dot{\mu}\omega\nu a\dot{v}\tau\omega v$. The reflexive pronoun $\dot{\epsilon}av\tau\sigma v$ is often put for the reflexive pronouus of the first and second persons. (Matthiæ, G. G., § 489.)— $\dot{\eta}\nu \pi\tau a \rho \eta \tau \iota\varsigma$, "if one sneeze," 3d sing. 2d aor. subj. act. of $\pi\tau a i \rho \omega$. Sneezing, according to circumstances, was regarded as either a favourable or an unfavourable omen. Hence the custom of calling out, when a person sneezed, $Z\epsilon\bar{v}\sigma\omega\sigma\sigma\nu$, "Jove preserve thee."— $\dot{\eta}\nu \epsilon i\pi\eta \kappa a\kappa\omega\varsigma$, "if one utter a word of evil omen." Literally, "if one speak badly," i. e., in an ill-omened manner.— $\dot{\epsilon}\delta\iota\delta \alpha\chi \partial\eta$, 3d sing. 1st aor. indic. pass. of $\delta\iota\delta \alpha\kappa\omega$.

LINE 2-3. $\pi\lambda\eta\gamma\epsilon i\varsigma$, "having been struck," 2d aor. part. pass. of 27 $\tau\lambda\eta\sigma\sigma\omega$.— $i\pi\epsilon\varthetaa\nu\epsilon\nu$, 3d sing. 2d aor. indic. act. of $i\pi\sigma\vartheta\nu\eta\sigma\kappa\omega$. $i\pi\kappa\lambda\eta\xia\nu\tau a\gamma a\rho a vir o \nu$, &c., "for Hercules, having become incensed, slew im on his having chided and struck him a blow," i. e., Linus having chided he performance of Hercules, and struck the hero a blow, was killed by the atter in return. The verb $i\pi\iota\pi\lambda\eta\sigma\sigma\omega$ has here the double meaning of chiding and striking. For Hercules, as appears from Apollodorus, from whom. 'he present passage is taken, was acquitted by Rhadamanthus, because he i.ad received the first blow from Linus. (Consult Apollod., 2, 4, 9, and Heyne, ad loc.)

4-10. παρεγγυζυ, "to enjoin upon."—Θεούς, "by the gods."—φυτου ημερου, "any domesticated production of the earth," i. e., any production of earth that had experienced the benefits of human culture. $-\gamma \lambda \tilde{\omega} \tau \tau \eta \varsigma \kappa \rho a \tau$ είν, "to exercise control over the tongue :" κρατείν governs the genitive pere, as being equivalent, in effect, to κράτος ξχειν.—μη κακολογείν τοίς τλησίου, "not to speak evil against one's neighbours." 11-16. τον 'Αγήνορος. Supply νίον.—άποσταλῆναι, 2d aor. infin. pass. of ἀποστέλλω.—προζ ζήτησιν, "in quest of." Literally, "for a searching after."—ἐντολὰς λαβόντα, "having received a strict command." Observe the force of the plural ἐντολὰς.—μη δυνάμενον δὲ ἀνευρεῖν, &c., "that not being able, however, to find her, he gave up the idea of a return to his home." More literally, "he thought away from a return," &c., the primitive meaning of γινώσκω being "to think."—ἀνευρεῖν, 2d aor. infin. act. of ἀνευρίσκω —κατὰ, "in obedience to."—ἐνταῦϑα δὲ κατοικήσαντα, &c., "that, after having settled there, he married," &c. γήμαι is the 1st aor. infin. act. of γαμέω, for the more enlarged form γάμησαι.

19-23. εἰς τοὺς κρατῆρας, "into the crater." The Greek writers, in speaking of the crater of Ætna, often use the plural for the singular, to amplify, as it were, the sense.—ἐνάλασθαι, 1st aor. infin. mid. of ἐνάλλομαι. –ὅτι γεγόνοι θεός, "that he has become a god," 3d sing. perf. opt. mid. of γίνομαι.—ὕστερον δὲ γνωσθῆναι, "but that he was afterward found out." –ἀναβριφθείσης, "having been cast up," 1st aor. part. pass. of ἀναβρίπτω -χαλκᾶς γὰρ, &c., "for he was accustomed to wear brazen ones," 3d sing. pluperf. indic. pass. of ἐθίζω, and translated as an imperfect. More literally, "but the advising," &c. The article with the infinitive ($\tau \delta \sigma \nu \mu \delta \nu \lambda \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \sigma a \iota$) is here, as in the previous clause, equivalent to a verbal noun. In the present instance, however, this noun is in the nominative absolute, which serves to impart more force to the clause.— $\vartheta \epsilon \delta \nu \mu \epsilon \nu \nu \delta \sigma a \iota$, "to form any conception of deity."— $\phi \rho \dot{\alpha} \sigma a \iota$, "to speak of him," i. e., to imbody our conceptions, whatever they may be, in words. The infinitives $\nu \delta \sigma \sigma a \iota$ and $\phi \rho \dot{\alpha} \sigma a \iota$ are used as verbal nouns here, although no article is expressed with them.— $\tau \delta \gamma \dot{a} \rho \dot{a} \sigma \dot{\omega} \mu a \tau \circ \nu$, &c., "for it is impossible to express what is incorporeal by means of what is corporeal."

In the three verbs, $\dot{\delta}\sigma\dot{\nu}\lambda\rho\mu\alpha\iota$, $\dot{\delta}\dot{\nu}\nu\alpha\mu\alpha\iota$, and $\mu\epsilon\lambda\lambda\omega$, the Attics often add the temporal to the syllabic augment. The regular form, therefore, in the present case, would be $\dot{\epsilon}\delta\dot{\nu}\nu\alpha\tau\sigma$.— $\dot{\delta}\rho\gamma\iota\sigma\vartheta\epsilon\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma\,\sigma\dot{\nu}\nu$, "the other therefore, having become incensed." Referring to the foolish fellow.— $\kappa\dot{\alpha}\mu\dot{\epsilon}$, "that I also," contracted from $\kappa\alpha\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\epsilon}\mu\dot{\epsilon}$. When the reference in the sectrid verb is to the same person that is implied by the preceding verb, but an emphasis is required, then the accusative of the pronoun, not the nominative, is used.— $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\vartheta\sigma\nu\tau\iota$, "having come to see me."— $\dot{\alpha}\pi\sigma\kappa\rho\iota\nu\epsilon\bar{\iota}\sigma\vartheta\alpha\iota$, 2d fut. infin. mid. of $\dot{\alpha}\pi\sigma\kappa\rho\dot{\iota}\nu\omega$.

Supply τίκτω, which is to be supplied also with λέοντα.

6-8. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\alpha\vartheta\epsilon\sigma\vartheta\eta$, "had seated itself," 1st aor. indic. pass. of $\kappa\alpha\vartheta\epsilon\zeta\eta\mu a\iota$, and taken here in a middle sense.— $\kappa\alpha\dot{\iota}\eta\dot{\upsilon}\lambda\epsilon\iota$, "and hegan to buzz." Literally, "began to play upon the pipe," i. e., to wind its little horn: 3d sing. imperf. indic. act. of $\alpha\dot{\upsilon}\lambda\epsilon\omega$.— $\epsilon\ell\pi\epsilon$ dè, "at length he said."— $\epsilon\dot{\iota}\beta\alpha\rho\tilde{\omega}$ σου του $\tau\epsilon\dot{\upsilon}\upsilon\tau\alpha$, "if I press heavily upon the tendon of thy neck."— $\dot{\eta}\lambda\vartheta\epsilon\varsigma$, 2d sing 220 2d aor. indic. act. of $\epsilon \rho \chi \rho \mu a \iota$.— $\epsilon \gamma \nu \omega \nu$, 1st sing. 2d aor. indic. act. of $\gamma \iota \nu \omega \sigma \kappa \omega$.— $\mu \epsilon \lambda \eta \sigma \epsilon \iota \mu o \iota$, "will it be a care to me," i. e., will I at all care, 1st fut. of $\mu \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \iota$.

10-12. εύρων, 2d aor. part. act. of ευρίσκω.—πεπηγότα, "stiffened," perf. part. mid. of πήγνυμι.—ύπὸ κόλπου κατέθετο, "deposited it in his bosom." More literally, "put it down beneath his bosom."—θερμανθείς, "having become warmed," 1st aor. part. pass. of θερμαίνω.—ἀναλαδών, "having resumed."—ἕπληξε, 3d sing. 1st aor. indic. act. of πλήσσω. In Lessing's fables (2, 3), the serpent adroitly defends himself against the charge of ingratitude, by asserting that the peasant merely took him up, when stiffened with cold, in order to make use of his skin.

14-15. βότρυας πεπείρους κρεμαμένους, "clusters of grapes hanging ripe:" κρεμαμένους, part. part. pass. of κρεμάνυυμι, with an intransitive meaning. The attachment of foxes to grapes is alluded to by Nicander (Alex., 185) and Oppian (Cyneg., 3, 458).—έπειρατο, "kept trying for sometime." Literally, "kept trying for himself," 3d sing. imperf. indic. mid. of πειράω. Observe the continued action indicated by the imperfect.—πολλα δὲ καμοῦσα, "having toiled much, however." πολλα, the neuter plural of the adjective, is here taken adverbially : καμοῦσα is the 2d aor. part. act of κάμνω.—καὶ μὴ δυνηθεῖσα, "and not having been able," 1st aor. part. pass. of δύναμαι.—παραμυθουμένη, "striving to console," pres. part. mid. of παραμυθέομαι.—δμφακες ἕτι εἰσίν, "they are still unripe." The fos means, that he only leaves them now, because they are not yet worth taking and that he will come again when they are ripe, and then carry them off.

LINE 1-3. $\epsilon \pi i \tau i vog \delta \omega \mu a \tau og \epsilon \sigma \tau \omega g, "standing upon a certain 32$ $suilding," i. e., upon the roof: <math>\epsilon \sigma \tau \omega g$ is the perf. part. act. of $i \sigma \tau \eta \mu i$, contracted from $\epsilon \sigma \tau \eta \kappa \omega g. -\pi a \rho i \delta v \tau a, "passing by." - \omega o v \tau og, & c., "what$ a creature this is! why thou dost not revile me, but the place where thou $art does." The phrase <math>\omega$ ov τog is commonly, but erroneously, rendered, "oh thou," or, "hark you there." Its true force is the one just given by us, and it is to be viewed as applied, not so much to the individual with whom we are speaking, as to persons supposed to be standing by; and then by a sudden turn the discourse is again directed to the person previously addressed. (Consult the Index Gracitatis to De Furia's edition of Æsop s. v. ov $\tau o \tau o$.)

4-7. $\pi v \iota \gamma \tilde{\eta} v a \iota$, "of being drowned." Literally, "of being suffocated, i. e., by the waters.— $\dot{\epsilon} \mu \dot{\epsilon} \mu \phi \epsilon \tau \sigma \tau \tilde{\omega} \pi a \iota \delta \iota$, &c., "began to blame the boy for his rashness." More literally, "began to make his rashness a source of blame unto the boy."— $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda a$ võv, &c., "(what thou sayest is all right enough), but do just now assist me, and find fault with me afterward when I am once saved." The particle $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda a$, in the beginning of a sentence, shows that one acquiesces in what another says, but still wishes to call his attention to some other matter besides.

9-12. $i\pi\iota\sigma\tau\rho\alpha\phi\epsilon i\varsigma$, "having turned upon him," 2d aor. part. pass. of $i\pi\iota\sigma\tau\rho\epsilon\phi\omega$, in a middle sense.— $\epsilon i\varsigma \tau \dot{\alpha} \dot{\sigma}\pi i\sigma\omega \, \epsilon\phi\nu\gamma\epsilon\nu$, "fled back." Liter ally, "fled to the places behind." Supply $\chi\omega\rho\iota a.-\dot{\omega}\kappa\alpha\kappa\dot{\eta}\kappa\epsilon\phi\alpha\lambda\dot{\eta}$, "ah. thou cowardly fellow !" $\kappa\epsilon\phi\alpha\lambda\dot{\eta}$ is here used for the entire person, like caput in Latin.— $o\dot{v}\tau\iota\nu o\varsigma \, o\dot{v}\delta\dot{\epsilon} \, \tau\dot{o}\nu$, &c., "not even whose roar thou didst endure," i. e., when thou couldst not even endure its roar.— $\dot{v}\pi\dot{\eta}\nu\epsilon\gamma\kappa\alpha\varsigma$, 2d sing. 1st aor. indic. act. of $\dot{v}\pi o\phi\epsilon\rho\omega$.

13-17. vaov. The reference is to some temple placed on the public road. These were frequently used as asylums, or places of shelter, by

Page 32 persons when pursued.—προσκαλουμένου, "calling to." Genitive absolute.—τ $\tilde{\varphi}$ θε $\tilde{\varphi}$, "unto the god," i. e., of the temple.— $d\lambda\lambda$ aiρετώτερον, &c., "well, it is better for me," &c. Literally, "what thou sayest is very likely, but still it is better," &c.—θυσίαν είναι, "that I be a sacrifice." Supply έμέ before είναι in construing.—διαφθαρῆναι, 2d aor infin. pass. of διαφθείρω.

18-21. δορὰν λέοντος ἐπενδυθεὶς, "having put on a lion's skin," 1st aor. part. pass. of ἐπενδύω, and taken in a middle sense.—καὶ ψυγὴ μὲν ἦν, &c., "and there was a scampering of men," &c. The old English term "scampering" best expresses the quiet humour of the original.—βιαιότερον, 'more strongly than usual."—ἐπιδραμόντες, 2d aor. part. act. of ἐπιτρέχω.

24-27. τίκτουσαν, "which laid." Literally, "laying."—τέξεται, 3d sing. 1st fut. mid. of τίκτω.—δὶς τῆς ἡμέρας, "twice a day." Part of time (i. e., time when) is put in the genitive.—ἡδύνατο, 3d sing. imperf. indic. of δύναμαι. Consult, as regards the augment, the note on line 6, page 28.

33 LINE 1-3. $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \delta \rho \nu i \vartheta \omega \nu \beta \sigma \nu \lambda o \mu \ell \nu \omega \nu$, genitive absolute.— $\dot{\epsilon} a \nu \tau \delta \nu \eta \xi \delta \sigma \nu \chi \epsilon \iota \rho \sigma \tau \sigma \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \eta$, "thought himself worthy an electing," i. e., worthy to be elected. The active ($\chi \epsilon \iota \rho \sigma \tau \sigma \nu \epsilon \tilde{\nu}$) is not employed here for the passive, as some maintain. The fault lies in their translating it into English by a passive voice, for which there is no necessity here whatever. The infinitive appears in this passage in its primitive character of a verbal noun. (Compare Harris's Hermes, 1, 8.)— $\tau \sigma \nu \tau \sigma \nu$, referring to the peacock.— $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \lambda \lambda \omega \nu$, referring to the other birds, and the genitive absolute.— $\dot{\nu} \pi \sigma \lambda a \delta \omega \nu$, "having taken up the conversation," i. e., having broken in upon the remarks of the other birds.— $\dot{a} \lambda \lambda' \epsilon \dot{\ell}$, "ay, but if," i. e., "thou makest a fine-looking king, 'tis true, but if," &c.

ANECDOTES OF PHILOSOPHERS.

6-11. ἐμαστίγου, "was flogging," imperf. of μαστιγόω.—είμαρτο, "u was fated," pluperf. pass. of μείρομαι. The slave, in his excuse, endeavoured to shelter himself under the doctrine of immutable destiny, which formed so conspicuous a part of the philosophy of his master, the Stoic Zeno.—καὶ δαρῆναι ἔφη, "ay, replied Zeno, and to be scourged as often as thou mightst steal." Observe the force of the aorist in δαρῆναι, which is the 2d aor. infin. pass. of δέρω, and is governed by είμαρτο understood.—πρὸς τὸ φλναροῦν μειράκιον, "unto the prating youth." The article is here employed to indicate a well-known story.—ἕχομεν, the present tense here calls for subjunctives in the two verbs that follow.—συνεβρύηκεν, perf. ot συβρέω. A singular verb with the neuter plural.

19-2'. οὐ τὸν τρόπον, &c., "I compassionated, not the manner (of beha ring), but the man." There is in the Greek an intentional similari, y of sound between τρόπου and αυθρωπου, which we have endeavoured to imitate in English. - έφασκεν, "he used often to say." Observe the frequentative force in φάσκω.--εύρηκέναι, "had discovered," pluperf. infin. act. of ευρίσκω.-προς τον καυχώμενον, "to the one that boasted." The article is again employed as referring to a well-known story .--- wc ein, "that he was." The optative is here employed, as the subjunctive often is in Latin, to indicate the opinion merely of the person who speaks, not that also of the one who relates the story .- τοὺς προέχοντας διώκοντες, "while pursuing those who go on before," i. e., who outstrip them in the race after wisdom.-τούς ύστεροῦντας, "those who lag behind."-πῶς ἀν τοῖς φίλοις προσφεροίμεθα, "how we should act towards our friends." More literally, "how we should bear ourselves towards our friends." Observe the force of the middle voice.-ώς, "in the same way as." Supply ούτως before ώς.

LINE 1-2. $\dot{\epsilon}vo\chi\lambda o\dot{\iota}\mu\epsilon vo\varsigma$, "being annoyed."— $\kappa o\pi \tau \dot{\iota}\mu\epsilon vo\varsigma$, "tired 34 out." The literal meaning of this verb, in the present passage, has reference to something that comes frequently in contact with us, and disturbs more or less our equanimity, or our quietude of body. In Xenophon's treatise De Re Equestri (1, 4, and 8, 8), it is employed to indicate the jolting of a horse, and the consequent tiring out of the rider. (Compare Schneider and Weiske, ad loc.) In Athenaeus (7, p. 290, b.), it has the meaning of to stun, or deafen one, as it were, by constant talking. (Compare Casaubon, ad loc., and Pierson, ad Mar., p. 74.)

3-5. πολλάκις αὐτοῦ λέγοντος, "the talkative fellow frequently saying." Genitive absolute. - où vavµaστòv ὅ τι λέγω; "is not what I tell thee surprising ?" Supply $\tau \circ \tilde{v} \tau \circ \tilde{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota$ after $\vartheta a v \mu a \sigma \tau \delta v - \dot{a} \lambda \lambda' \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$ "but that." Equivalent to $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda'$ $\delta\tau\iota$.— $\sigma\dot{\epsilon}$ $\dot{v}\pi o\mu\dot{\epsilon}v\epsilon\iota$, "endures thee," i. e., does not run away.

6-8. Opaovvóusvov, "conducting himself arrogantly," pres. part. mid. of θρασύνω.- ού παύσει, " wilt thou not cease ?" 2d sing. 1st fut. mid. of $\pi a \dot{\upsilon} \omega$, with the Attic termination for $\pi a \dot{\upsilon} \sigma \eta$.— $\delta \dot{\iota}$ $\delta \nu$ $\mu \dot{\epsilon} \gamma a$ $\phi \rho o \nu \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu$ $\dot{a} \xi \iota \sigma \tilde{\iota} \varsigma$, "through whom thou claimest to think highly of thyself," i. e., through whom as the author of thy being. If he had not begotten thee, where wouldst thou have now been with thy fancied superiority to thine own parent? Be thankful to him for thy very existence.

9-10. έπιστάντος Ξενοκράτους, "while Xenocrates was standing by." Xenocrates was one of his followers.—ἐγὼ γὰρ ὀργίζομαι, "for I at present am angry," and therefore unfit to punish with judgment and discretion, or with any real advantage to the offender.

11-14. $\eta \equiv av \vartheta(\pi \pi \eta, "that Xanthippe of thine." - \lambdaordopovoa, "when$ she abuses one."-βοώντων, "when they cackle."- ἀνέχει, 2d sing. pres. indic. mid. of avexw, with the Attic termination, for the common form avexy. $-\dot{\eta} \equiv a \nu \vartheta i \pi \pi \eta$, "Xanthippe." The article Lere, with the proper name, is not to be translated. - uυρίων μεταβολῶν, &c., " that, although innumerable changes had befallen the state and them," i. e., the state and their own family. The pronoun avrovs refers to herself, her husband, and her chil. dren.-καταοχουσῶν, 2d aor. part. act. of κατέχω.-έν πάσαις ὅμοιον, &c., "she had beheld the countenance of Sourates wearing the same expression amid all," i. e., amid all these changes. With $\pi \dot{a}\sigma a \iota \varsigma$ supply $\mu \epsilon \tau a b o \lambda a \tilde{\iota} \varsigma$.

16-21. κακόν είναι το ζην. "that slive is an evil." More freely, "that 223

34 ife is an evil."—άλλὰ τὸ κακῶς ζῆν, "but to live badly." More freely, "but a bad life."—ό Σινωπεὺς, "the Sinopan." More freely, "of Sinope." This city, the native place of Diogenes, was situate in Paphlagonia, on the coast of the Euxine.—ό Κύων ἐπικαλούμενος, "who was nicknamed the Dog." More literally, "who was called," &c. This appellation was given him in allusion to his cynical and snarling manner.—elg πάντα, "for every purpose." This is one of the verbs in which the syllabic augment has maintained itself before a vowel LINE 2-7. ὅτε άλους, &c., "when, having been captured, and being 35 exposed to sale :" άλοὺς is the 2d aor. part. act. of άλίσκω. The 2d aor. and perf. act. of this verb are taken in a passive sense. Diogenes, in his old age, sailed to the island of Ægina, but, upon his passage, was taken by pirates, who carried him into Crete, and there exposed him to sale in the slave-market. $-\tau i$ olde $\pi o \iota \epsilon i \nu$, "what he knows how to do." -кήрика. "the crier," who officiated at auctions, proclaiming the nature of the article offered for sale, the prices bid, &c.-κήρυσσε εί τις έθέλει, "make proclamation, whether any one wishes," i. e., cry out, and ask whether, &c. $-\delta \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} v \pi \varepsilon (\vartheta \varepsilon \sigma \vartheta a \iota a \vartheta \tau \tilde{\omega}, \& c., "that the latter would have to only$ him, even though he were a slave," i. e., that Xeniades would have to obey Diogenes. More literally, "that it was incumbent to obey him," &c.--ei kai ein, the uncertainty implied by the optative amounts here to a tacit denial that Diogenes was in reality a slave. A philosophic spirit is ever free. - $\kappa a i \gamma a \rho i a \tau \rho \delta c$, &c., "for that, even if a physician or a pilot be a slave, we ought to obey him." Literally, "it was incumbent to obey him:" $\pi \epsilon \iota \sigma \vartheta n$ vat is the passive for the middle.

Observe the force of ǎν with the optative. —λοῦνται, "are bathing." Middle voice.—τῷ δὲ. Supply πυθομένω. ei πολὺς ὅχλος. Supply λοῦται.— ὡμολόγησεν, "he answered in the affirmative."—καὶ Διογένης; "even Diogenes."—δεῖ ἀριστῷν, "one ought to breakfast." Literally, "it behooves one to breakfast." Supply τινα after δεῖ.—ὅταν ἔχη, "when thou hast anything," i. e., to breakfast apon. More freely, "when thou canst."

19-20. $\delta\sigma\omega\tau\sigma\nu$ $\eta\tau\varepsilon\iota$ $\mu\nu\tilde{a}\nu$, "asked a spendthrift for a mina." We have here the imperfect of $al\tau\varepsilon\omega$, a verb of asking, with a double accusative. $u\nu\tilde{a}\nu$. The mina was not a coin, but a sum of money, and equivalent in our currency to seventeen dollars, fifty-nine cents.— $\tau\sigma\tilde{v}$ $\delta\varepsilon$, referring to the spendthrift.— $\tau\rho\iota\omega\delta\sigma\lambda a$, "a triobolon," i. e., three oboli. This was a piece of money equal in our currency to eight cents, seven mills.

22-24. 'ATTIKOŨ TIVOÇ, "a certain native of Attica." Genitive absolute. — $\delta\iota \delta\tau\iota$ Aakedauµovlovç, &c., "because, though praising the Lacedamonians (more than any other nation), he does not," &c.—ovde yàp latpoç, &c., "naturally enough, replied he, for neither does a physician, being one whose business it is to produce health, take up his residence among those who are healthy." More literally, "being qualified to produce health." The genitive $i\gamma\iota\epsilon lag$ is governed by the verbal adjective. The particle yàp refers to something understood, and which is supposed to precede. We have supplied the ellipsis by the words, "naturally enough." This may also be done by such expressions as, "no wonder," "be not surprised," &c.

25-28. την μετάβασιν αύτοῦ, "his own change of residence." Diogenes used to reside alternately at Athens and Corinth.--ταῖς τοῦ βασιλέως, &c., "to the abiding of the (Persian) king, in the spring at Susa," &c. Literally, "to the abidings," the plural indicating the frequent change of residence. The article ταῖς agrees with διατριβαῖς, at the end of the sentence. —τοῦ βασιλέως, this is a very common way of designating the Persian monarch, on the part of the Greek writers. Sometimes the expression δ μέγας βασιλεὺς, "the great king," is employed.—ἕαρος, the genitive of time.—χειμῶνος. The Persian king resided in winter at Babylon, on account of its being warmer there; and during summer in the cool and mountainous country of Media, the capital of which was Ecbatana.

30-31. $\dot{a}\gamma\omega\nu\iota\omega$, $\dot{\epsilon}\phi\eta$, &c., "remarked, I am very much afraid lest I have done some evil." More literally, "I am in an earnest struggle (with myself)," 1st sing. pres. indic. act. of $\dot{a}\gamma\omega\nu\iota\omega$, contracted form.— $\epsilon\dot{\iota}\rho\gamma\sigma\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$, perf. indic. of $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\dot{a}\zeta\phi\mu\alpha\iota$.— $\tau\dot{\iota} \ a\dot{\iota}\tau\phi\ \pi\epsilon\rho\iota\gamma\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\sigma\nu\epsilon\nu$, "what advantage has accrued to him." More literally, "what has resulted to him over and above," i. e., over and above what he might have obtained from other and ordinary sources.

LINE 1-5. $\tau o \dot{v} g$ $\delta v o v g$ $i \pi \pi o v g$ $\psi \eta \phi i \sigma a \sigma \vartheta a \iota$, "to vote their asses 36 (to be) horses," i. e., to declare, by a public decree, that their asses were horses.— $\dot{a}\lambda o \gamma o v$ $\dot{\delta} \dot{e} \eta \gamma o v \mu \dot{e} v \omega v$, "but they thinking this strange (advice)." Genitive absolute. The full sentence, supplying the ellipses, is, $\dot{a}\lambda o \gamma o v$ $\dot{\delta} \dot{e} a \dot{v} \tau \omega v$ $\tau o \tilde{v} \tau o$.— $\dot{a}\lambda \lambda \dot{a} \mu \eta v$ kai $\sigma \tau \rho a \tau \eta \gamma o \dot{c}$, &c., "and yet, replies he, generals who have learned nothing (of military matters), but have been merely voted into office, are created by you." Ten generals were annually chosen at Athens by the votes of the people. They attended to all matters appertaining to war, together with certain state concerns.— $e \dot{c} g \kappa \delta \rho \alpha \kappa a \varsigma$. Consult note on line 1, page 21.— $\dot{e} \mu \pi \varepsilon \sigma \bar{e} v$, 2d aor infin. act. of $\dot{e} \mu \pi i \pi \tau \omega$.— $\dot{a} \pi o \vartheta a v \delta v \tau \sigma \varsigma$, "of one when dead," 2d aor. part. act. of $\dot{a} \pi \sigma \vartheta v \eta \sigma \kappa \omega$.— $\zeta \tilde{\omega} v \tau \sigma \varsigma$, "of one while still living."

17-21. τi , "in what." Governed, according to some. by $\kappa a \tau a$ understood.-aύτοῦ ὁ viòς, "his son," referring to the son of the speaker -καί el under, &c., "why, even if in nothing else, in the theatre at least he will not sit a stone upon a stone." The seats in the ancient theatres were of stone.—καθεδήσεται, 3d sing. 1st fut. mid. of καθέζομαι.—συνίσταντός τινος, &c., "a certain person placing his son with him," i. e., for instruction.- ήτησε, "Aristippus asked," 3d sing. 1st aor. indic. act. of aiτέω.- $\delta \rho \alpha \chi \mu \dot{\alpha} \varsigma$. The drachma was equal to seventeen cents, six mills, of our currency. Hence five hundred drachmas would be equivalent to eightyeight dollars .- τοσούτου, " for so much," i. e., for that price. The genitive of price. For some valuable remarks on the price of slaves at Athens, consult Boeckh's Public Economy of Athens, vol. i., p. 92, seqq.-πρίω, έφη, &c., "buy, replied the philosopher, and then thou wilt have two," i. e., thy uneducated son and the purchased slave : 2d sing. pres. imperat. of $\pi \rho i a \mu a i$, contracted from $\pi \rho i a \sigma o$, (intermediate form, $\pi \rho i a o$).—Supply $\dot{a} \nu \delta \rho \dot{a} \pi o \delta a$ with $\delta \dot{v} o$.

22–27. $\dot{\epsilon}v \, \delta \delta \tilde{\omega}$, "on a journey."— $\tau \delta \pi \lambda \dot{\epsilon} ov$, "the greater part." Supply $\mu \dot{\epsilon} \rho o \varsigma$.— $o \dot{\iota} \mu \dot{\epsilon} v$, "the former," referring to philosophers.— $\dot{\omega}v \, \delta \dot{\epsilon} ov \tau a \iota$. The full form is $\tau \dot{a} \, \dot{\omega}v \, \delta \dot{\epsilon} ov \tau a \iota$.

29-35. $\tau a \tilde{\tau} a \pi \rho o \sigma \phi \epsilon \rho \varepsilon \sigma \vartheta a \iota$, "to put up with these things," pointing to the vegetables. Literally, "to bring thyself to these things."—oùk àv $\epsilon \vartheta \varepsilon \rho a \pi \varepsilon \upsilon \varepsilon$, &c., "thou wouldst not be an attendant at the courts of ty rants." Observe the force which av imparts to the indicative. The $a \vartheta \lambda \eta$ was properly an open space before a dwelling, forming a kind of court. Hence $\vartheta \varepsilon \rho a \pi \varepsilon \upsilon \varepsilon \upsilon \tau \lambda \varepsilon \alpha a \vartheta \lambda a \varepsilon$ is the same in effect as $\epsilon \rho \chi \varepsilon \sigma \vartheta a \iota \epsilon \pi \iota \tau \lambda \varepsilon \alpha \vartheta \lambda \alpha \varphi \alpha \epsilon \pi \iota \lambda \upsilon \varepsilon \omega \varepsilon$, "wouldst not now be washing vegetables."— $a \vartheta \tau \tilde{\rho} \sigma \upsilon \upsilon \delta \eta$, "it happened unto him."—où yàp $\pi \varepsilon \rho \iota \delta \omega \iota \alpha$ life of the same kind," i. e., we, philosophers, and you the unlearned. The term $\epsilon \kappa a \sigma \tau \sigma \iota$ refers to these two classes of persons. As respects the elliptical force of yàp in this passage, consult note on line 24, page 35.

37 LINE 1-13. ἕκλαυσεν, 1st aor. indic. act. of κλαίω.—οὐδὲν προὕρ γον, "no good."—δι αὐτὸ γάρ, &c., "(thou art right), for on this very account indeed do I weep." The particle γάρ again points to something understood, which we have expressed by the words, "thou art right." —διαίτη, governed by χρώμενος.—οὐδὲν οὐδέποτε, "anything at any time." The negatives here strengthen the negation in Greek, but require the affirmative in English.—πρὸς ἡδονὴν, "with a view to pleasure."—εἰ ἡδέως ἀποθνήσκοι, "whether he could die willingly."—ἀσμένως ἀπαλλάττομαι, "I gladly depart (from life)." Supply τοῦ βίου. Literally, "I gladly send myself away from," &c.—καταληφθεὶς, from καταλαμβάνω.—κατ ᠔λίγου εἰς ὕπνον, &c., "falling gradually into sleep, used to lie thus 226

More literally, "used to lie, slipping by little (and little) into sleep." 37—aύτον ήρετο, "asked him," i. e., as he lay thus, and while sleep was stealing upon him.— $\tau i \pi \rho i \pi \tau \sigma i$, "what he was doing." Literally, "what he might be doing."— $\tau \tilde{\rho} i \delta \epsilon \lambda \phi \tilde{\rho}$, referring to Death, who is beautifully alluded to as the brother of Sleep.

15-21. $\dot{a}\phi\tilde{\eta}\kappa\epsilon\nu$, "allowed him to pass unpunished." Literally, "sent him away (unpunished)," 1st aor. indic. act. of $\dot{a}\phi(\eta\mu\iota.-\tau\iota\mu\omega\rho(a\varsigma, \text{governed}))$ by $\dot{a}\mu\epsilon(\nu\omega\nu.-\tau\delta)\mu\epsilon\nu$, "the former," referring to $\sigma\nu\gamma\gamma\nu\omega\mu\eta$, but agreeing with $\pi\rho\tilde{a}\gamma\mu a$ understood.— $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau$, "is the characteristic."— $\pi\epsilon\rho\lambda$ Mav τ ($\nu\epsilon\iotaa\nu$, "at Mantinēa." More literally, "in the neighbourhood of Mantinea." The preposition $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota$ is often used in this way, with the accusative, where a place is pointed out generally.— $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\sigma\epsilon$, 2d aor. indic. act. of $\pi(\pi\tau\omega. \tau\eta\nu\iota\kappa\alpha\bar{\upsilon}\taua$, "about that same time." The adverb must not, of course, be rendered here too strongly, since Xenophon was at this time residing at Corinth, a considerable distance from the field of battle.— $\vartheta\epsilon\iota\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\epsilon\mu\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\nu\nu$, "was sacrificing, with a garland around his brow." The ancients were accustomed to wear garlands when sacrificing. (Consult Kuhn, ad Æl. V. H., 3, 3).— $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\epsilon\mu\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\nu$, perf. part. pass. of $\sigma\tau\dot{\epsilon}\phi\omega.-\dot{a}\pi\sigma\sigma\tau\epsilon\phia\nu\dot{\omega}\sigmaa\sigma\varthetaa\iota$, "that he took off his garland." Literally, "that he uncrowned himself." Observe the force of the middle.

22-24. $\delta\tau\iota$ γενναίως, "that he died bravely." Supply $d\pi \hat{\epsilon} \vartheta a \nu \epsilon. - \hat{\epsilon} \pi\iota$. $\vartheta \hat{\epsilon} \sigma \vartheta a \iota$, 2d aor. infin. mid. of $\hat{\epsilon} \pi \iota \tau \hat{\iota} \vartheta \eta \mu \iota$. Observe the force of the middle here, implying that he placed the garland again "upon his brow." - $d\lambda \lambda a$ $\gamma a \rho \epsilon i \pi \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu$, &c., "but remarked (why ought I to weep), for I knew that 1 had begotten him a mortal." The same as, $d\lambda \lambda a \epsilon i \pi \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu$, $\tau \iota \mu \epsilon \delta \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \delta a \kappa \rho \nu \epsilon \iota \nu$, $\tilde{\eta} \delta \epsilon \iota \nu \gamma a \rho$, &c. The particle $\gamma a \rho$ is again used in its elliptical sense. $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu \nu \eta \kappa \dot{\omega} \varsigma$. Observe the use of the nominative, the reference being to the same person that is implied in $\tilde{\eta} \delta \epsilon \iota \nu$. The participle also takes the place of the infinitive here, the idea of continuance being involved; as if he had said, "I knew myself all along as being one that had begotten him a mortal." Consult note on line 10, page 11.

25-27. Πολυκράτους. Polycrätes, tyrant of Samos, is meant. Anacreon was residing at his court when the circumstance alluded to in the text occurred.—πέντε τάλαντα. The ordinary Attic talent of silver was equal to one thousand and fifty-five dollars, sixty cents, of our currency. The sum received by the poet was equivalent, therefore, to five thousand two hundred and seventy-eight dollars.— $\dot{\omega}_{\varsigma}$ έφρόντισεν, &c., "after he had thought upon them for two nights," i. e., during two nights. The genitive of time is often to be rendered by "during," "within," " in the space of." (Matth., G. G., § 377.)— $\ddot{\eta}$ τις ἀναγκάζει ἀγρυπνεῖν, " which compels one to go without sleep."

LINE 2-8. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\rho\dot{\epsilon}v\epsilon\tau o\,\dot{a}\sigma\epsilon\delta\epsilon\dot{\epsilon}a\varsigma$, "was put to trial for profanation 38 in a vertain play." Æschylus had laid himself open to a charge of profanation, by too boldly introducing on the stage something connected with the mysteries of Elevsis.— $\dot{\epsilon}\tau o\dot{\iota}\mu\omega\nu$ $\delta\nu\tau\omega\nu$, "being ready," i. e., in case he were condemned : and so certain did his condemnation appear, that they had already taken up stones to hurl at him.— $\beta\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\epsilon\nu\nu$ $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{v}\nu$ $\lambda\dot{\iota}\vartheta o_{i\varsigma}$, "to stone him to death." Literally, "to strike him with stones." Stoning to death was the punishment for profanation and implety.— $\epsilon\rho\eta\mu\sigma\nu$ $\tau\eta\varsigma$ $\chi\epsilon\iota\rho\varsigma\varsigma$, "deprived of the hand." An adjective of deprivation, governing the genitive.— $\dot{\epsilon}\tau\nu\chi\epsilon$ $\dot{a}\rho\iota\sigma\tau\epsilon\dot{\nu}\omega\nu$, "happened to have distinguished himself." The clause more freely rendered would run as follows "now it happened fage 38 that this Ameinias had distinguished himself," &c. —καὶ πρωτος 'Aθηναίων, &c., "and was the first of the Athenians that gained the prize of valour (on that occasion)," i. e., was first in order of the Athenians who gained prizes for valour at the battle of Salamis; or, in other words, gained the first prize. (Compare Perizon, ad Æl. V. H., 5, 19.) τοῦ ἀνδρὸς τὸ πάθος, "what had befallen the man." Alluding to the loss of his hand.—ὑπεμνήσθησαν, from ὑπομιμνήσκω.—ἀφῆκαν, "acquitted." Literally, "sent away," or "discharged from custody."

9-13. $\pi a \rho a \delta o \vartheta \varepsilon i \varsigma$, "having been committed," i. e., having been sent — $\delta \iota a \tau \delta \phi a \upsilon \lambda i \zeta \varepsilon \iota \upsilon$, "on account of his disparaging."— $\check{\varepsilon} \pi \varepsilon \iota \tau a$, "therewpon." This is inserted to give more force to the concluding member of the sentence.— $\mu \acute{\varepsilon} \chi \rho \iota \tau \iota \upsilon \delta \varsigma$, "for some time." Supply $\chi \rho \acute{o} \tau \upsilon \upsilon$.— $\pi o \iota$ $\delta \eta \sigma \acute{\upsilon}$; "whither, pray, (art) thou (going)?" Supply $\check{\varepsilon} \rho \chi \varepsilon \iota$, and observe also the force of the particle $\delta \eta$, which is analogous here to the Latin tandem.

15-18. παρανοίας κρινόμενος, "being accused of dotage," i. e., of men tal imbecility, the result of advanced age, and of consequent unfitness to manage his affairs. The object of this false charge was to deprive the poet of the management of his property. The affection which Sophocles entertained for a grandchild by a second wife, had excited the jealousy of Iophon, and led to this unnatural suit.-άνέγνω, 2d aor. indic. act. of άναγιγνώσκω. -Οἰδίπουν τον ἐπὶ Κολωνῷ, " the Œdipus at Colonus." Supply ὄντα after $\tau o \nu$, for a literal translation, "the Œdipus, who is at Colonus." The Œdipus at Colonus is one of the seven remaining tragedies of Sophocles. According to some authorities, Sophocles read, on this occasion, the beautiful chorus only, in which he celebrates the loveliness of his native borough of Colonus.— $\delta \pi \omega \varsigma \tau \delta \nu \nu \delta \nu v \delta \nu i \gamma \iota a i \nu \varepsilon \nu$, " how sound he (still) was in mind, ' i. e., how vigorous his mental powers still were.-ώς, "so that."-καταψηφίσασθαι δε τοῦ νίοῦ, &c., "and adjudged his son to be insane." More literally, "adjudged insanity against his son," i. e., decided that the son, not the father, was wandering in intellect.

19-24. $\xi\pi\tau a \pi\rho\delta_{\zeta} \tau o\tilde{c}$, &c., "after having lived ninety-seven years." Literally, "seven years in addition to ninety." As regards the employment of the article with $\xi\nu\nu\epsilon\nu\eta\kappao\nu\tau a$, consult note on line 5, page 8.— $\kappa a\tau$ - $\xi\kappa\epsilon\iota\tau o \eta\rho\epsilon\mu\omega\nu$, "lay resting."— $a\dot{\nu}\tau\omega$, "for him," i. e., Philemon.— $\omega\rho\mu\eta\sigma\epsilon \ \mu\epsilon\nu \ \epsilon'_{\zeta} \ \gamma\epsilon\lambda\omega\tau a$, "burst into a laugh." More literally, "rushed into laughter."— $\epsilon i\pi\omega\nu$, "having told him."— $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\delta o\tilde{\nu}\nu a \ \tau\omega \ \delta\kappa\rho \dot{\alpha}\tau o\nu$ $\delta o\phi\epsilon \tilde{\iota}\nu$, "to give the ass some undiluted wine also to sup up." Literally, "to give in addition to the ass," &c. The genitive $\dot{\alpha}\kappa\rho\dot{\alpha}\tau o\nu$, having reference to a part, is exactly analogous to the English expression "some undiluted wine." The verb $\dot{\rho}o\phi\epsilon \tilde{\iota}\nu$ alludes to the peculiar mode of drinking on the part of the ass, horse, &c. With $\dot{\alpha}\kappa\rho\dot{\alpha}\tau o\nu$ supply o*ivov*. Undiluted wine was drunk after eating figs, as healthier than mixed wine, or water, would have been after such food. (Consult the commentators ad Val Max., 9, 12, ext.)

25-27. τον Κῶον, "the Coan," i. e., the native of the island of Cos.—το σῶμα, "as to his body." The accusative of nearer definition, where some supply κατά.—ἀνατραπῆναι, "to be overturned," 2d aor. infin. pass. of ἀνατρέπω.—ἐκ πάσης προφάσεως, "from any cause."—μολίβδου πεποιημένα, "made of leaa." The genitive of the material.—φασὶ, "they say." Equivalent to the Latin dicent or narrant.

31-36. τίνος σοὶ μεταδῶ, &c., "of what one of the things that v i mime shall I make thee a partaker?" The verb $\mu \epsilon \tau a \delta(\delta \omega \mu \iota)$ takes the 38 genitive here along with the dative, the reference being to a part. où $\beta o \delta \lambda \epsilon \iota$, "of whatsoever one thou wishest." More literally, "of that one, of which thou wishest to make me a partaker." Supply $\mu o \iota \mu \epsilon \tau a \delta o \tilde{\nu} a \iota$. — $\sigma \chi o \lambda a \zeta \epsilon \iota \nu$ a $v \tau \tilde{\varphi}$, "to be a pupil of his." More literally, "to enjoy (learned) leisure with him."— $\delta \iota \tau \tau o \iota \rho \iota \sigma \sigma v \delta \sigma \varsigma$, "a double fee."— $\epsilon \nu a \mu \epsilon \nu$, "I ask one fee." Supply $\mu \iota \sigma \vartheta o \nu a \iota \tau \tilde{\omega}$.— $\sigma \iota \gamma \tilde{q} \nu$. Supply $\mu a \vartheta \eta \varsigma$.

LINE 1-5. $dva\gamma vov \varsigma$, "after having read it," 2d aor. part. act. of 39 $vva\gamma v\gamma v \omega \sigma \kappa \omega$.— $\eta \kappa \varepsilon$, "came," imperf. indic. act. of $\eta \kappa \omega$.— $\tau \delta \mu \epsilon v$ $\pi \rho \omega \tau \sigma v$, &c., "that, to him going over it the first time."— $d\pi \rho a \kappa \tau \sigma v$, "inefficient," i. e., not calculated to accomplish what was intended.— $\tau i \ ov v$, &c., "what then? art thou not going to speak it (only) once before the judges?" As regards the use of $\epsilon \pi i$ in the sense of "before," with the genitive case, consult Matthia, G. G., § 584, (η).

7-11. $\pi a \bar{\iota} \delta e \bar{\iota} \delta v \tau e \bar{\varsigma}$, "while yet young." Literally, "being (as yet) boys." — $\dot{\eta} \rho \dot{\omega} \tau \omega v$. Observe here the force of the imperfect, the tense implying that the sons put this question to their father, each for himself, and at different times. The aorist, $\dot{\eta} \rho \dot{\omega} \tau \eta \sigma a v$, on the contrary, would merely indicate the fact of such a question's having been put, without any particular reference to person or time.— $\tau i \nu \iota \kappa a \tau a \lambda \epsilon i \psi \epsilon \iota$, "to whom he intends to leave."— $\delta c \dot{a} \nu$ $\dot{\nu} \mu \tilde{\omega} \nu \, \dot{\epsilon} \chi \eta$, "to whosoever of you may have." Observe the force which $\dot{a} \nu$ here imparts to the pronoun, although construed with the verb ($\dot{a} \nu \, \dot{\epsilon} \chi \eta$).— $\chi a \rho \iota \dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau \omega \varsigma \delta \, \beta a \sigma \iota \lambda \epsilon \dot{\iota} \varsigma$, "cleasantly did King Archelaus, when a talkative barber had," &c. The monarch here alluded to was King of Macedonia, and contemporary with the poet Euripides, who ended his days in his dominions.— $\pi \tilde{\omega} \varsigma \sigma \epsilon \kappa \epsilon i \rho \omega$; "how shall I trim thee ?" Literally, "how am I to trim thee ?" $\kappa \epsilon i \rho \omega$ being the subjunctive mood. The barber of antiquity trimmed the beard, cut the hair, and pared the nails. (Consult Böttiger, Sabina, vol. ii., p. 59.) To translate $\kappa \epsilon i \rho \omega$, in the present passage, by the English verb "to shave," would be therefore quite erroneous.

12-14. ό νεώτερος Διονύσιος, "Dionysius the younger." The son o. Dionysius the elder, and tyrant of Syracuse. He affected to be a great patron of the learned. (Consult Menage, ad Diog. Laert., 2, 61.)—πολλοὺς τρέφειν σοφιστὰς, "that he maintained many learned men." By σοφιστὰς are here meant the learned generally, including poets, philosophers, rhetoricians, &c. (Consult Wyttenbach, ad loc.—Plut. Apophth. Reg. et Duc, p. 176, C.)—θαυμάζων, "because he admired." Observe the employment of the nominative, as agreeing with the nominative of the pronoun understood before τρέφειν.—βουλόμενος, "because he wished."

15-20. στρατόπεδον, "that an encampment."—ό 'Αλεξάνδρου πατήρ. Referring still to the same monarch.—'Αθηναίους μακαρίζειν, "that he considered the Athenians a happy people," i. e., a lucky race.—εί καθ' ἕκαστον ἐνιαυτὸν, &c., "since they find every year ten generals to choose." Literally, "to choose for themselves," αἰρεῖσθαι being the middle voice. The Athenians chose ten generals annually. Their duties were partly military, partly civil.—αὐτὸς γὰρ εύρηκέναι "for that he himself had found." Observe the nominative with the infinitive, as referring back to the speaker.

22-23. τοὺς μέλλοντας, ἔφη, &c., "replied, 'I love most those who are going to betray to me, and I hate most those who have already betrayed to me.'" With προδιδόναι and προδεδωκότας, respectively, supply μοι. Philip alludes to the traitors among the nations with whom he at various times carried on war; and the whole answer is in full accordance with the cold and selfish character of the Macedonian king. All his love, such as

IJ

^{Fage} 39 it is, is based upon self-interest. The persons for whom he has most regard are the traitors in his pay, as long as their plans of treachery, for his benefit, remain to be consummated; for they are during this period his most valuable instruments. When, however, they have executed their task, and have betrayed unto him whatever was to be betrayed, he flings them aside as so many worthless tools, and despises them as much as he prized then, before this.

24-29. τον της τραγ4 Sias υποκριτην, "the actor in tragedy." More freely, "the tragic actor."— $\tau i \, \vartheta a v \mu \dot{\alpha} \zeta o \iota$, &c., "what one he admired of the (tragic) events treated of by Eschylus," &c. Literally, "what one he might admire."— $\delta \delta$, "but what."— $\Phi i \lambda i \pi \pi o \nu$, "namely, Philip." In apposition with δ that precedes.— $\kappa a i \tau \rho \iota \sigma \kappa a \iota \delta \epsilon \kappa a \tau o \nu \vartheta \epsilon \delta \nu \epsilon \pi \iota \kappa \lambda \eta \vartheta \epsilon \nu \tau a, " and$ styled a thirteenth god," i. e., saluted with the title of the thirteenth god. The greater deities were twelve in number, viz., Jupiter, Juno, Minerva, Vesta, Ceres, Neptune, Venus, Vulcan, Mars, Mercury, Apollo, and Diana. $-\tau \tilde{\eta}$ $\xi \xi \tilde{\eta} \varsigma$, "on the following day, however." Supply $\dot{\eta} \mu \epsilon \rho a$. $-\dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \sigma \phi a \gamma \epsilon \nu \tau a$, 2d aor. part. pass. of $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\iota\sigma\phi\dot{a}\tau\tau\omega$. Philip was slain by a young man named Pausanias, who had been outraged by a friend of the monarch's, and had been unable to procure redress from the latter. - και έβριμμένον, "and a thing of little account," perf. part. pass. of $\beta i \pi \tau \omega$. We must be careful not to give έρριμμένον here its literal meaning, "cast forth," but rather its figurative one, making it have the same peculiar force in this passage that projectus often has in Latin; as, for example, in Livy (2, 27), "projectum consulare imperium."

40 LINE 1-8. εὐτυχημάτων, "pieces of good fortune."--καιρὸν, used here as denoting a particular time.—ὅτι τεθρίππω νενίκηκεν Όλύμπια, "that he has conquered with a four-horse chariot at the Olympic games." After Όλύμπια supply ἀγωνίσματα, which is not, however, governed by νενίκηκεν, but is the accusative of nearer definition, where some understand κατά.—ἐνίκησε, "had overcome," the aorist rendered as a pluperfect.—ὦ δαῖμον, "oh fortune."—τούτοις ἀντίθες, "set off against these."
—φθονεῖν πέφνκεν, "is wont to envy." Consult, as regards the curious doctrine of which this forms a part, the remarks of Baehr, ad Herod., 7, 10.
—ἡ Τύχη, "this goddess." Literally, "Fortune." To be rendered freely, as δαῖμον has preoccupied the literal meaning, and Τύχη is merely brought in as explanatory of it.

9–11. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi a\rho\vartheta\epsilon i\varsigma$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ $\tau\tilde{\eta}$ $\epsilon\dot{\upsilon}\pi\rhoa\gamma(\dot{a}, "elated thereupon with his success," 1st aor. part. pass. of <math>\dot{\epsilon}\pi a(\rho\omega.-\delta\epsilon iv a\dot{\upsilon}\tau \partial v \dot{\upsilon}\pi o\mu\mu\nu\dot{\eta}\sigma\kappa\epsilon\sigma\vartheta a\iota$, "that it was right for him to be reminded."— τ ivi $\pi a\iota\delta$, "a certain slave."

14-19. κατεπλάγη, 2d aor. indic. pass. of καταπλήσσω.—τον βίον, "with the mode of life" Accusative of nearer definition.—αὐτοῦ μνημοννώων, "recalling him to mind."—εἰ μὴ ἤμην, "if I were not."—ῶν ἤμην. "I would like to be." Equivalent to ῶν εἰναι ἤθελον. Literally, "I would be."—εἰκόνας αὐτοῦ δημιουργεῖν, "to make statues of him." According to Pliny (7, 38), Alexander ordered, that Apelles alone should represent him on canvass, Pyrgoteles in marble, and Lysippus in bronze. Other writers, however, make mention merely of Apelles and Lysippus. (Cic. Ep. Div., 5, 12.—Horat. Epist., 2, 1, 239.) The term δημιουργεῖν, therefore, in our text, is equivalent, in the present instance, to the English verb "to cast."—κατεμήνυε τῷ χαλκῷ, &c., "represented in bronze his peculiar character." Literally, "by the bronze." The meaning of ἦθος in this passage may be gathered from the following remark of Pliny (35, 230 36) respecting the Theban painter Aristides: "is omnium primus animum pinxit, et sensus hominum expressit, que vocant Græci $\eta \vartheta \eta$."—κaì συνεξέφερε $\tau \tilde{\eta} \mu o \rho \phi \tilde{\eta}$, &c., "and brought out to view his martial spirit together with his form," i. e., blended them together in the same statue, giving each at the same time its distinctive character.

19-21. $\tau \eta \nu \, d\pi \sigma \sigma \tau \rho \sigma \phi \eta \nu \tau \sigma \tilde{\nu} \tau \rho a \chi \eta \lambda \sigma \nu$, "the bend of his neck." Plutarch elsewhere informs us (Vit. Alex., c. 4), that the monarch's neck had a slight bend, or turn, towards the left. Visconti, by a reference to remains of ancient sculpture, arrives at the conclusion, that the muscle on the left side of the neck was considerably enlarged in a lateral direction, which would have, of course, the effect of shortening it, and would consequently give the head a kind of bend towards the left shoulder. (Icon. Gr., 2, 2, p. 63, not.) $-\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \, \delta \mu \mu \dot{\alpha} \tau \omega \nu \, \tau \eta \nu \, \dot{\nu} \gamma \rho \dot{\sigma} \tau \eta \tau a$, "the humid brightness of his eyes." This was esteemed a great beauty by the ancient Greeks, and was assigned, as a striking characteristic, to their goddess Venus, the ideal type of female loveliness. It partook more or less, at the same time, of a soft and languishing expression, and, according to Winckelmann, was produced by a slight elevation of the lower eyelid. Compare Walker's Analysis of Female Beauty, p. 362, and also the remarks of Visconti (Icon. Gr. l. c.), who thinks that some bright substance was inserted into the bronze in order to form the pupil of the eye.—où $\delta \iota \epsilon \phi \dot{\lambda} \lambda \tau \tau \sigma v$, &c., "did not preserve his manly and lion-like expression of countenance."

22-25. περὶ κόσμων ἀπειρίας, "(discoursing) about an infinity of worlds." —εἰ ὄντων, "since, although there are."—ἑνὸς, agreeing with κόσμου understood.

26-34. $\tau \partial \nu \Lambda \dot{\alpha} \gamma ov$, "the son of Lagus." The Ptolemy here alluded to was the founder, after Alexander, of the Greek empire in Egypt. Supply $v \partial v - \kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \pi \lambda ov \tau i \zeta ov \tau \alpha$, "in enriching."—' $\Lambda \nu \tau i \gamma ov o \varsigma$, one of the generals of Alexander, and sovereign for a time of a large portion of Asia.— $\mu \alpha \kappa \alpha \rho$ $i \zeta ov \sigma \alpha \nu a \dot{v} \tau \dot{v}$, "who called him a happy man." More literally, "who felicitated him."— $\tau ov \tau i \tau \dot{\sigma} \dot{\rho} \dot{\alpha} \kappa o \varsigma$, "this rag here," pointing at the same time to it. The Attic form $\tau ov \tau i$ for $\tau o v \tau o$, is emphatic and indicative of gesture.— $\tau \dot{\sigma} \delta i \alpha \delta \eta \mu a$. From the term $\dot{\rho} \dot{\alpha} \kappa o \varsigma$, which precedes, the "diadem," in this case, would seem to have been, not a crown, but a species of bandeau, adorned probably with golden ornaments and precious stones. (Compare the remarks of Böttiger, Sabina, vol. i., p. 132.)— $\tau i \delta \dot{\epsilon} \delta o \kappa \alpha \varsigma$, &c., "of what art thou afraid? (is it) lest thou alone mayest not hear the trumpet?" i. e., the trumpet which is to give the signal for breaking up and marching.

LINE 1-5. $\vartheta \epsilon \omega \mu \epsilon \nu o \varsigma \tau \rho a \gamma \omega \delta \delta \nu$, "on beholding a tragic actor (perform)." The play to which he was listening was the Troades of Euripides. (Plut. Vit. Pelop., c. 29.)— $\epsilon \mu \pi a \vartheta \epsilon \sigma \tau \epsilon \rho o \nu \delta \iota \epsilon \tau \epsilon \vartheta \eta$, &c., "was disposed towards compassion in a more feeling manner (than was at all usual for him)."— $a \pi \iota \omega \nu \omega \kappa \epsilon \tau \sigma$, "he quickly departed." The verb olyopau is used with a participle to express quickness of movement.— $\epsilon \epsilon \iota \nu \delta \nu \epsilon \ell \kappa a$, "that it is bad (for the continuance of his power)."— $\tau \sigma \sigma o \nu \tau \sigma \nu \varsigma \omega \epsilon \ell \kappa a \varsigma \kappa \delta \eta \sigma \kappa \delta \ell \kappa \alpha \ell \pi \sigma \kappa \delta \kappa \delta \eta \sigma \kappa \delta \ell \kappa \alpha \ell \kappa \delta \eta \sigma \kappa \delta \eta \kappa \delta \eta \sigma \kappa \delta \eta \kappa \delta \eta \sigma \kappa \delta \delta \kappa \delta \eta \kappa \delta \eta \sigma \kappa \delta \eta \kappa \delta \eta \kappa \delta \eta \sigma \kappa \delta \eta \kappa \delta \eta$

6-13. $\eta \rho \chi \varepsilon$, equivalent to $\mathring{a} \rho \chi \omega \nu \mathring{\eta} \nu$, and therefore requiring the genitive - $\mathfrak{a} \mathfrak{a} \mathfrak{o} \mathfrak{d} \delta \mathfrak{e} \nu \mathring{a} \iota \mathfrak{e} \mathfrak{l} \eta$, &c., "and there would be no one of the things that grow upon the earth." Supply $\varphi v \mathfrak{o} \mu \mathfrak{e} \nu \omega \nu \ldots \mu \mathfrak{h} \tau \mathfrak{o} \mathfrak{v} \mathring{\eta} \lambda \mathfrak{l} \mathfrak{o} \nu \mathfrak{e} \pi \iota \lambda \mathfrak{a} \mu \pi \mathfrak{o} \nu \tau \mathfrak{o} \varsigma$, "if the sun did not shine on it." The particle $\mu \mathfrak{h}$, not $\mathfrak{o} \mathfrak{v}$, is here employed,

NOTES ON PAGES 41 AND 42.

Page 41 as being a conditional negative. $-\kappa i \nu \delta \nu \nu o \varsigma \pi a \nu \tau a$, &c., "there is danger of all things being wrapped in one general conflagration, and destroyed." Literally, "that all things, having been burned together, be destroyed." A participle and verb, in Greek, are often best rendered into English by two verbs. $-o\nu \kappa \ a\nu \ a\nu a \sigma \chi o \nu \tau \sigma$, "they would not be likely te endure for an instant." Observe the peculiar force of the aorist (2d aor. opt. mid. of $a\nu \epsilon \chi \omega$) in denoting instantaneous action. The optative with $a\nu$ is used here as a milder expression, instead of $a\nu \epsilon \xi o \nu \tau a$.

14-16. $\dot{\epsilon}v \pi \delta \tau \sigma \iota \varsigma \dot{\epsilon} \kappa v \lambda \iota v \delta \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \tau \sigma$, "was accustomed to indulge in convivial parties," i. e., in drinking bouts. The primitive meaning of $\kappa v \lambda \iota v \delta \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \sigma \vartheta a \iota$ in the middle voice, "to roll one's self about," connects the figurative meaning, here employed, with that of the English verb "to wallow."—ovk $\check{\epsilon} \tau \iota \eta v$, "it was no longer possible." ηv is here used for $\dot{\epsilon} \xi \eta v$, and has $\delta \dot{v} v \alpha \mu \iota \varsigma$ or $\dot{\epsilon} \xi \sigma v \sigma \iota a$ understood.

20-25. $\delta 60 \delta \lambda \epsilon \tau' \delta \nu \epsilon \ell \nu \alpha \iota$, "he would wish to be"— $\hbar \vartheta \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \epsilon$. Supply $\delta \nu$. - $\delta \nu$ 'O $\lambda \nu \mu \pi \iota \delta \sigma \iota \nu$. Supply $\delta \gamma \omega \nu (\sigma \mu \alpha \sigma \iota)$...- $\delta \kappa \eta \rho \nu \sigma \sigma \omega \nu$. A herald announced, at the games, the name of each conqueror, the names of his parents, and also the city and state that gave him birth. Dio Chrysostom (Or. 2, p. 2, B.) attributes the reply in the text to Alexander the Great...- $\tau \eta \nu \beta \alpha \kappa$. $\tau \eta \rho (\alpha \nu$. A staff was the badge of authority with the Spartan generals. Compare the remarks of Casaubon, ad Theophrast. Char., c. 5., and of Hudson and Duker, ad Thucyd., 8, 84...- $\pi \delta \tau \alpha \delta \rho \omega \rho \delta \delta$. The force of the aorists, in this admirable reply, is worthy of notice. To an English reader, however, their peculiar import is best conveyed by a paraphrase: "strike as soon as thou wilt: hear me, however, before thou strikest, though it be only for a moment."—"Hudeu $\delta \delta$, "for he knew." "Hudeu is to be pronounced as if written $\eta \delta \epsilon \iota$, the ι being placed by the side of capitals, but under other letters.

26-28. $\Sigma \varepsilon \rho i \phi (ov \tau i v \delta c, "a certain Scriphian," i. e., a native of the island$ $of Scriphus.—<math>\delta i' a v \tau \delta v, "on account of himself,"$ i. e., through any merits of his own.— $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda' o v \tau' \dot{a}v \dot{e}y \dot{o}, \&c., "and yet, neither would I be ever il$ lustrious were I a Scriphian, nor wouldst thou, wert thou an Athenian,"i. e., because Scriphus is so contemptible an island, that it can never bestowany kind of reputation on those who are born in it; while, on the otherhand, thou art so contemptible a character, that even wert thou an Athenian,the glory of Athens, great as it is, could never bring thee into any notice.We have here a bitter sarcasm against both the man and his native island.Scriphus and its inhabitants were held in very low estimation by the ancients. The island was poor and rocky, and became, under the Romansway, a place of exile. (Consult Strabo, 10, p. 746.—Isocr. Ægin., p. 386.—Hardouin, ad Plin., 4, 22.—Juv. Sat., 6, 564.)—ovτε σv. Supply <math>av $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma \dot{\epsilon}vov \dot{\epsilon}v \delta c co.$

30-31. $\dot{\varepsilon}\xi_{\alpha\iota\tau\sigma\sigma\nu\mu\varepsilon\nu\sigma\nu}$, "asking for his own advantage." Observe the force of the middle.— $\dot{q}\delta\sigma\nu\tau\alpha$ $\pi\alpha\rho\dot{a}$ $\mu\epsilon\lambda\sigma\varsigma$, "if he sang contrary to melody," i. e., by the side of melody; not as it were in the same direct path, or line with it. The Lyric poets at first were accustomed to chant their own compositions, accompanying themselves on the lyre.

42 LINE 2-4. alg $\dot{v}\pi\sigma\tau\rho\epsilon\chi$ ov $\sigma\iota$ $\chi\epsilon\iota\mu\alpha\zeta\delta\mu\epsilonvo\iota$, "under which persons overtaken by a storm run for shelter." The plane-tree (Platanus Orientalis of Linnæus) is remarkable for the breadth of its leaves, and hence forms a very convenient shelter.— $\gamma\epsilon vo\mu\epsilon v\eta\varsigma$ dè $\epsilon\dot{v}\delta\iota\alpha\varsigma$, "but when it is fair weather." More literally, "when fair weather has taken place."— $\taui\lambda\lambda\sigma_v$ 232 siv καὶ κολούουσιν, "pluck their leaves and mutilate them." The full expression, in Greek, would be, τίλλουσιν αὐτῶν τὰ φύλλα, καὶ κολούουσιν αὐτάς.

5-13. $\exists va \tau \rho i \delta \omega va, "one old cloak."$ (Consult Perizon., ad El. V. H., 5, 5.)— $\epsilon i \varsigma \gamma va \phi \epsilon i o va fuller's shop."$ As the ancients generally wore white garments, the fuller's aid was of course requisite for cleaning them. — $a \dot{v} r \delta \varsigma, "he himself."$ There is a pleasing antithesis here. He himself staid at home, while his cloak went abroad to the fuller's.— $\kappa a i \kappa \epsilon \phi a \lambda \eta v$ ov $\kappa \ \xi \chi \epsilon \iota$ " and yet it has no head !"— $\ \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon, "he recommended." - \tau \eta \varsigma$ $\dot{\alpha} \gamma \rho \rho \dot{\alpha} \varsigma.$ The "market-place," as we are accustomed to translate the term $\dot{\alpha} \gamma \rho \rho \dot{\alpha}$, was the place of public resort, where all business, whether of a public or private nature, was transacted. Some cities had more than one $\dot{\alpha} \gamma \rho \rho \dot{\alpha}$. Athens, for example, had several. (Compare Kuinoel, ad Act. Apost., 17, 17.)— $-\pi \rho \dot{\sigma} \epsilon \rho v \eta \dot{\eta}$, "before that." In a literal translation, $\pi \rho \dot{\sigma} \epsilon \rho \rho v$ qualifies $\dot{\alpha} \pi a \lambda \lambda \dot{\alpha} \tau \epsilon \sigma \vartheta a \iota$, in the sense of "sooner." Thus, "not sooner to depart before that," &c.— $\pi \rho \sigma \sigma \sigma \rho \rho i \sigma a$. "The particle $\pi \rho i \nu$ takes the infinitive with future actions. (Matthiæ, G. G., § 522, 2.) $-\mu \eta \tau \epsilon \dot{\rho} a \dot{\delta} i \omega \varsigma \dot{v} \tau \nu \chi \epsilon \dot{v}, &c., "that he had not easily met with another,$ $either knowing more," &c. The adverb <math>\dot{\rho} a \delta i \omega \varsigma$ has here the same force that facile often has in Latin. (Consult Wyttenbach, ad loc.—Plut. de rect. aud.rat, p. 39, B.)

15-19. διαβληθέντος αὐτῷ, "having been accused unto him," 1st aor. part. pass. of διαβúλλω.—ώς βλασφημήσαντος αὐτὸν, "as having calumniated him."—τὸ στράτευμα, "that the army (of every commander)." Observe the force of the article.—συντετάχθαι, "to be marshalled," perf. infin. pass. of συντάσσω. The idea of continuance is involved in the perfect h. re, though not expressed in the translation. It is not a mere marshalling, but an abiding in that state.—θώρακα, "as a corselet."

21-25. $i\nu \tau \tilde{\rho} \lambda o\iota\mu \tilde{\rho}$. Referring to the great pestilence, or plague, that ravaged Athens during the Peloponnesian war, and to which he himself eventually fell a victim.— $d\nu\delta\rho\varepsilon\iota\delta\tau a\tau a$, "in a most manly manner." The neuter plural of the adjective, accusative case, taken adverbially.— $\varepsilon\dot{\nu}\vartheta\nu$ $u\delta\tau\varepsilon\rho\nu$, "with more resignation." Literally, "with more cheerfulness." The neuter singular of the adjective, accusative case, taken adverbially.— $\varepsiloni\tau a \ o\iota\kappa \ a\gamma a\pi a\varsigma$, &c., "art thou not content, then. Thudippus, to die in company with Phocion ?" As regards the peculiar force of $a\gamma a\pi a\omega$ in this passage, consult Viger, Id. 4. 1. Literally, "art thou not content, then, dying with Phocion ?" or, "dying, then, with Phocion, dost thou not like it ?"

27-29. $\mu\dot{\eta}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\omega\tau\hat{\alpha}\nu$. Observe the use of the conditional or dependant negative $\mu\dot{\eta}$. The idea involved is, whenever such an occasion might present itself. On the other hand, $o\dot{\nu}\kappa$ $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\omega\tau\hat{\alpha}\nu$ would have referred to some particular or definite occasion.— $\delta\sigma\sigma\iota$, "as many as." Supply $\tau\dot{\sigma}\sigma\iota$.

LINE 1-5. τοὺς κακοὺς, "cowards."—κόπτοντος, "annoying." 4.3 Compare note on line 1, page 34.—καὶ δη, "and in particular." Literally, "and now." These two particles are here employed to usher in specification of what was more generally asserted in the previous part of the sentence.—o, "he that is." Supply હઁν.—ἀμαθεῖς ἀποκαλοῦντος,

"stigmatizing as unlearned."

9-12. Mà $\tau o \dot{v}_{\varsigma} \vartheta e o \dot{v}_{\varsigma}$, "by the gods !" The particle $\mu \dot{a}$ neither affirms nor denies. When an affirmation is to be expressed, the particle $\nu a i$, in Attic $\nu \eta$, is prefixed : when a negation, the negative $o \dot{v}$, $o \dot{v} \kappa$, &c. Frequently, however, neither of these particles appears, but the affirmation or 43 negation is discovered from what follows immediately after. - $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\eta_{p}$ τοιαύτην. Supply πόλιν.—τοὺς νόμους, "his laws."—τοῖς ἰλίγα λέγουσιν, "to those who say few things." Alluding to the brevity with which the Spartans were wont to express themselves.

14-16. $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\dot{a}\ \mu\dot{\eta}\nu\ \dot{\eta}\mu\epsilon\tilde{c}\varsigma$, &c., "in very truth we have often chased you,' &c. Literally, "but certainly," as if the full sentence had been as follows : "thou canst not deny what I am going to say; on the contrary $(\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\dot{a})$, thou must certainly $(\mu\dot{\eta}\nu)$ confess, that we have often," &c.— $\dot{\nu}\mu\tilde{a}\varsigma$, governed by $\dot{\epsilon}\delta\iota\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma\mu\epsilon\nu$ understood.— $\dot{a}\pi\dot{o}\ \tau\tilde{o}\tilde{\nu}\ E\dot{\nu}\rho\dot{\omega}\tau a$. The Cephissus and Eurotas were two rivers, the former near Athens, the latter near Sparta.— $E\dot{\nu}\rho\dot{\omega}\tau a$, Doric genitive of $E\dot{v}\rho\dot{\omega}\tau a\varsigma$.

17-21. σοφιστοῦ τινος, "a certain sophist." The allusion appears to be in strictness to "a rhetorician," and in this way perhaps the term σοφιστοῦ ought here to be rendered. On the confusion prevailing in the use of the word σοφιστής among the ancient writers, consult the remarks of Wyttenbach, ad Plut. de am. mult., p. 96, A.—τίς γàρ αὐτὸν ψέγει; "(why read), for who finds any fault with him?" We have here another instance of the elliptical úse of the particle γάρ. Supply διὰ τί ἀναγιγνώσκειν μέλλεις;—κιθαρφδὸν, "a citharædus." The κιθαρφδός played and sang, the κιθαριστής merely played. (Ammon. de Diff. voc. s. v. κίθαρις. Compare Baehr, ad Herod., 1, 24.)—& λῷστε, "my very good friend." Ironical. Analogous to our English phrase, "my good sir," and to the Latin, o bone ! —τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς ἀνδράσιν, "for brave men."—ἐπαινῆς, the subjunctive stands here, as the future ἔσται precedes.

22-24. $a\dot{v}\tau o\tilde{v}$. The reference is still to Archidamus.— $o\dot{v}\kappa$ $\dot{\epsilon}\delta\dot{\epsilon}\xi\sigma\tau o$, "he did not receive it." i. e., he refused to receive it. The present for the daughters was to pass through the hands of their father.— $\phi o \delta o \tilde{v} \mu a \mu \eta \pi \epsilon \rho \iota$ - $\vartheta \dot{\epsilon} \mu \epsilon v a \iota$, &c., "I am afraid, lest my girls, having arrayed themselves in this, may appear ugly in my eyes." There is a double meaning in the term $a i \sigma \chi \rho a \iota$ here. The young princesses will appear ugly to their father, from the contrast with the beauty of the garment; and they will also appear ugly in a moral sense, from their having arrayed themselves in such idle and foolish finery.

25-27. καταπελτικον βέλος, "a javelin intended for a catapulta." More literally, "a javelin suitable for a catapulta." Strictly speaking, the catapulta was an engine for discharging large and heavy iron javelins; and the ballista one for hurling ponderous stones. About Cæsar's time a less accurate mode of speaking began to arise, and we then read of catapultar for hurling stones as well as javelins. (Consult Lipsius, Poliorcet. 3, dial 2.)— $\dot{\alpha}\pi\delta\lambda\omega\lambda\epsilon\nu$ $\dot{\alpha}\nu\delta\rho\delta\varsigma$ $\dot{\alpha}\rho\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}$, "manly valour is ruined." More freely, "is no longer of avail," 3d sing. perf. indic. mid. of $\dot{\alpha}\pi\delta\lambda\lambda\nu\mu\iota$, with the Attic reduplication.— $\dot{\alpha}\rho\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}$, Doric for $\dot{\alpha}\rho\epsilon\tau\dot{\eta}$. The Spartans used the Doric dialect.

28-36. ἀκοῦσαι τοῦ τὴν, &c., "to listen to a person who imitated the nightingale." Literally, "to listen to him who imitated," &c.—παρητήσατο, "excused himself." More literally, "begged off for himself."—αὐτῆς, "the bird herself."—κατηγοροῦσιν Άγησιλάου, "blame Agesilaus." More literally, "speak against Agesilaus." The genitive is governed by κατά in composition.—ώς ταῖς συνεχέσι, &c., "as having rendered the Thebans, by his continued and frequent incursions," &c. The two epithets here are not by any means synonymous. The first conveys the idea of inroads between each of which only a short interval occurs, and the second of such as are short and rapid in themselves. $-\dot{a}\nu\tau\iota\pi\dot{a}\lambda ovc,$ "a match." 43 $\tau\epsilon\tau\rho\omega\mu\dot{e}\nuov$, perf. part. pass. of $\tau\iota\tau\rho\dot{\omega}\sigma\kappa\omega$. $-\kappa a\lambda\dot{a}$ $\tau\dot{a}$ $\delta\iota\dot{\omega}a\sigma\kappa\dot{a}\lambda\iota a$ $\dot{a}\pi\sigma\lambda\mu\mu\dot{b}\dot{a}\nu\epsilon\iota\varsigma,$ "thou art receiving a fine tuition-fee." More literally, "thou art receiving thy tuition-fee fine (of its kind)." — Observe the position of the article, the force of which is most apparent in the literal rendering.

LINE 1-7. $dv\eta\rho$ Keĩoç, "a Cean man," i. e., a native of the 44 Island of Ceos.— $\tau \dot{a} \mu \dot{e} v \dot{a} \lambda \lambda a \dot{a} \lambda a \zeta \dot{\omega} v$, "in other respects vain of his personal appearance." The true meaning of $\dot{a} \lambda a \zeta \dot{\omega} v$, in this passage, is generally misunderstood, and the term is erroneously rendered, "a boaster." Its proper force, however, is rendered fully apparent by what follows immediately after : $\dot{\eta}\delta\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\tau\sigma$ $\delta\epsilon$ $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\tilde{\iota}$ $\tau\tilde{\omega}$ $\gamma\tilde{\eta}\rho a$, " he was ashamed, however, of his old age," i. e., this operated as a serious drawback upon his vanity.-άφανίζειν, "to hide." $-\pi a \rho \epsilon \lambda \vartheta \omega \nu$ ov "having come thereupon into the public assembly."—ύπερ ών και ἀφίκετο, " on account of which he had even come." The conjunction is often used in this emphatic manner after the relative. $-\tau i \delta$ $\hat{v} v \dot{v} \tau \sigma \varsigma$, &c., "now, what could this man utter worthy of reliance." The particle $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$, in a literal translation, has here the meaning of "but," and points to a protasis, or previous clause, understood : as if Archidamus had said, "all that we have just heard is very fair in words indeed, but what certainty have we that it is true ?"- $\epsilon \pi i \tau \tilde{\eta} \psi v \chi \tilde{\eta}$, alluding to the wish to conceal his gray hairs, which prompted him to have recourse to the dye. The practice of dying the hair was regarded as disgraceful, not only by the Spartans, but also by most of the other Greeks. (Junius, de coma, c. 7.)

8-11. $K\lambda\epsilon o\mu\epsilon \nu\eta\varsigma$, the contemporary of Darius Hystaspis. (Perizon., ad El. V. H., 13. 19.)— $\kappa a\tau a$ $\tau \partial \nu \epsilon \pi i\chi \omega \rho i o\nu \tau \rho \delta \pi o\nu$, "after the manner of his country," i. e., with Laconic brevity and point.— $\lambda \epsilon \gamma o\nu \tau a$, "since he told."— $\tau \bar{\omega} \nu E i \lambda \omega \tau \omega \nu$, "of the Helots." The Helots were the slaves of the Spartans, and cultivated the ground.— $\omega \varsigma \chi \rho \eta \gamma \epsilon \omega \rho \gamma \epsilon \bar{\nu}$, "how one ought to cultivate the ground." The reference is to Hesiod's poem on husbandry, entitled ' $E\rho\gamma a \kappa a$ ' (H $\mu\epsilon\rho ai$, or "Works and Days." Dio Chrysostom (10, 2) makes Alexander the Great to have drawn a somewhat similar paralle' between these two ancient poets.

12-17. πηρωθείς ὀφθαλμῶν τὸν ἕτερον, "having been deprived of one of bis eyes." Plutarch (Vit. Lycurg., c. 11) informs us, that this happened during a tumult occasioned by the opposition of the rich to the code of Lycurgus; and the individual, who deprived the lawgiver of an eye, was Alcander, a young man hasty in his resentments, though not otherwise illdisposed.—τὸν νεανίσκον, referring to Alcander.—τιμωρήσαιτο, the optative, inasmuch as a past participle, παραλαβών, precedes.—τούτον, "from this," i. e., from inflicting punishment upon the young man.—ἀπόφηνας ἀνδρα ἀγαθὸν, "having made him a good man." Literally, "having shown him (away from his former character) as a good man."—τὸ ϑέατρον, "as you may well remember." The particle is here employed in a strongly affirmative sense, which is best expressed by a paraphrase.

21-28. πεντακόσια τάλαντα χρυσίου. The Attic talent of gold was equal to ten thousand five hundred and fifty-five dollars, ninety-three cents, of our currency. The whole sum received, therefore, by Pausanias, wou d amount to more than five millions of dollars. This part of the story, however, is very probably an exaggeration.—ἕμελλε προδιδόναι τὴν Σπάρτην, "was going to betray Sparta to him." More freely, "meditated the be traval of Sparta."—τῶν ἐπιστολῶν, referring to the letters between Pau-

Obscrve the force of $\sigma \dot{\nu} \nu$ in composition. More literally, "pursued his son together with (the rest)." $-\tau \ddot{\eta} \varsigma \chi a \lambda \kappa \iota o \dot{\kappa} \sigma \nu$ 'A $\vartheta \eta \nu \tilde{a} \varsigma$. Literally, "of Minerva of the brazen abode." The temple in question derived its name, very probably, from its being covered within with plates of brass. Compare the account which Sir W. Gell gives of the treasury of Atreus, at Mycenæ. (Argolis, p. 33.)-τοῦ τεμένους, "of the sacred structure." The term $\tau \epsilon \mu \epsilon \nu o c$ is generally applied to the sacred precincts of a temple, which is also its primitive signification.— $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\phi\rho\dot{\mu}\xi\alpha\zeta$, from $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\phi\rho\dot{\mu}\sigma\sigma\omega$.— $\kappa\alpha\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\mu\mu\ddot{\omega}\tau\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ προδότην ἀνείλεν, " and destroyed the traitor by starvation," 2d aor. indic. act. of ἀναιρέω. This was the only mode of reducing Pausanias, as the temple enjoyed the privilege of an asylum, and could not, of course, be forcibly entered. $-\dot{v}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\rho \tau o\dot{v}c \ \ddot{\rho}\rho vc \ \ddot{\epsilon}\dot{\rho}\dot{\rho}\psi\epsilon\nu$. A traitor could not be buried in his native land.--- "opovy, accus. plur. of "opoy, ov, " a frontier," &c.

30-34. $\delta\eta\chi\vartheta\epsilon i\varsigma$, 1st aor. part. pass. of $\delta i\kappa v\omega$.— $\dot{\omega}\varsigma$ où $\delta \epsilon v$ $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau iv$, "how there is nothing."-τολμῶν ἀμύνασθαι, " by daring to defend itself," i. e., whenever it is attacked. Observe the force of the aorist.-oi our auto τριακόσιοι. Consisting of Spartans and Thespians, especially the former. $-\mu\alpha\nu\tau\varepsilon\nu\delta\mu\varepsilon\nu\delta\nu$. Megistias, the diviner, had, from an inspection of the entrails, before the dawn of the third day, predicted destruction as then about to come upon the Greeks.— $i\nu$ $\Pi i\lambda aig, "at Thermopyla." The$ Greeks called any narrow pass by the name of $\pi i \lambda a \iota$ ("gates"). The first part of the name Thermopylæ is derived from the circumstance of there being warm saline springs in a part of the pass. Hence al $\vartheta \epsilon \rho \mu a i \pi i \lambda a i$, "the warm gates," or "pass." Herodotus (7, 201) informs us, that they who lived in the vicinity of the pass called it merely $\Pi i \lambda a \iota$, but that the rest of the Greeks styled it $\Theta \epsilon \rho \mu o \pi i \lambda a \iota$. The allusion in the text is to the famous battle of Thermopylæ, where Leonidas and his little band withstood. for so long a time the immense host of Xerxes.

LINE 1-5. $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \beta a \rho b u \rho \omega \nu$, referring to the Persians at Thermopylæ. 45

The Greeks called all foreign nations "barbarians." The term is, in general, equivalent to the English word "foreigner."--οὐδὲ ἔστιν, "it is not even possible." ἔστιν is equivalent here to ἔξεστιν. In strictness, however, there is an ellipsis of $\delta v v a \mu i \varsigma$ or $\dot{\epsilon} \xi o v \sigma i a$.— $\chi a \rho i \epsilon v$. Supply $\chi \rho \tilde{\eta} \mu a$ $\xi \sigma \tau a \iota - \varepsilon l$, "since." $- \xi \pi \iota \tau i \vartheta \varepsilon \sigma \vartheta a \iota$. The reference is still to the battle of Thermopylæ.— ἀριστοποιείσθαι, "that they should take their morning meal." Supply autous before the infinitive. — $\dot{\omega}_{\varsigma}$ $\dot{\epsilon}v$ $\ddot{a}dov$ $\delta\epsilon\iota\pi vo\pi o\iota\rho\sigma o\mu$ évous, "since they would take their evening repast in the shades." Literally, "as being about to take," &c. Observe the construction, the par ticiple agreeing in the accusative with autovic, understood before apioroποιείσθαι, where one would expect δ ειπνοποιησομένοις in the dative, as agreeing with στρατιώταις, and nothing understood with ἀριστοποιεῖσθαι.

6-13. $\mu\eta\tau\epsilon\rho\epsilon\varsigma$. In the text of Ælian, whence this extract is taken, $\mu\eta\tau\epsilon\rho\epsilon\varsigma$ is a nominative absolute, the reading of the next line being $d\lambda\lambda'$ aυταί γε, in place of αυταί. The present lection, however, obviates the necessity of such a construction. — avtai adukousvai, " having come in person," i. e., to the field of battle. $-\tau \acute{a} \tau \epsilon \check{\epsilon} \mu \pi \rho \sigma \vartheta \epsilon v$, &c. Supply $\check{o} \nu \tau a$ with both ἕμπροσθεν and ὅπισθεν respectively.—τὰ ἐναντία, "those in front," i. e., on the breast. Literally, "the opposite ones."-yavpovueval, "with

Literally, "but if they had themselves otherwise with respect to their wounds." With εἶχον, for a literal translation, supply ἐαυτούς. -ώς ἕνι μάλιστα, "as much as possible." In this form of expression, ἕνι stands for ἕνεστι, which is itself idiomatic, and takes the place, as such, ot the imperfect.—λαθεῖν, "to escape observation."—καταλιποῦσαι τοὺς νεκροὺς, &c., "having left the dead (for others) to inter in the public cemetery." 'acobs supplies ὥστε with θάψαι, but for this there is no necessity whatever. -ή, "or else."

17-20. $\dot{v}\pi o\mu\nu\eta\sigma\vartheta\eta\sigma\varepsilon\iota$, "thou wilt be reminded," 2d sing. 1st fut. indic. pass. of $\dot{v}\pi o\mu\mu\nu\eta\sigma\vartheta\eta\sigma\kappa\omega$, with the Attic termination.— $\dot{\eta}$ ταύταν $\dot{\eta}$ έπὶ ταύτα, 'either this, or upon this." More literally, "either bring back this, or be brought back slain upon this." Supply φέρε with ταύταν, and φέρου with ἐπὶ ταύτα. The forms ταύταν and ταύτα are Doric for ταύτην and ταύτη, the Doric dialect having been spoken by the Lacedæmonians.—It was esteemed most disgraceful to leave or throw away one's shield on the field of battle. Hence the highest testimonial of valour was to bear away the dead or wounded from the battle-field on their own shields.

21-22. $\dot{\omega}_{\varsigma} \mu \dot{\rho} \nu a t$, &c. The particle $\dot{\omega}_{\varsigma}$ is not to be translated here, but is equivalent merely to the inverted commas in English.— $\mu \dot{\rho} \nu a t \gamma \dot{a} \rho$, "(naturally enough), for we alone," &c. $\gamma \dot{a} \rho$ points here to something that precedes and is understood, which we have supplied by the words "naturally enough." Compare note on line 24, page 35.

25-33. τῶν ἐξ ᾿Αμφιπόλεως, "of the inhabitants of Amphipolis." Brasidas fell in defending this city against the Athenians, during the Peloponnesian war.—μη λεγετε, "say not so." Supply τοῦτο.—πέντε ὄντας, "being five in number."—τί ἀποδήσοιτο, "what would result," i. e., the result.—πνθομένης ἀπήγγειλε, "announced on her having inquired of him." With πνθομένης, the genitive absolute, supply αὐτῆς. The inquiry made oy the Spartan mother was a general one, "how goes the day?" The person to whom this was directed, answered it by a special reference to her own sons, conceiving her to be most interested in the fate of these.

LINE 1-4. $d\lambda\lambda'$ où $\tau o v \tau o$, &c., "vile slave, replied she, why I did not ask about this, but how my country fares." Observe the force of the initial $d\lambda\lambda\dot{a}$.— $\phi\eta\sigma av\tau oc$. Supply $a\dot{v}\tau o v$.— $\delta\tau\iota v\iota\kappa \tilde{a}$, "she is victorious." $\delta\tau\iota$ here is equivalent merely to the inverted commas in English.— $d\sigma\mu\epsilon v\eta$ $\tau o (vvv, &c., "gladly, then, do I hear even the death of my sons." Literally,$ $"do I receive," &c. <math>d\sigma\mu\epsilon v\eta$ is here equivalent to $d\sigma\mu\epsilon v \omega c$.

5-13. $\tau\rho\omega\vartheta\epsilon i\varsigma$, from $\tau\iota\tau\rho\omega\sigma\kappa\omega$.— $al\sigma\chi\nu\nu\rho\mu\epsilon\nu\omega$ o' $a\nu\tau\omega$, &c., "to him thereupon, ashamed of his ridiculous plight, his mother said."— $\mu\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\nu$ $\gamma\epsilon\gamma\eta\vartheta\epsilon\nua\iota$, "to rejoice rather." The adverb $\mu\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\nu$ sometimes appears along with the comparative in Greek. (Matthia, G. G., § 458.)— $\sigma\epsilon\mu\nu\nu$ - $\nu\rho\mu\epsilon\nu\eta\varsigma$, "priding herself."—'Iwνικῆς. The Ionians were remarkable for effeminacy and love of display.— $\kappa\sigma\sigma\mu\iota\omega\tau i\sigma\nu\varsigma$, "most orderly in deport ment."— $\epsilon\pi a i\rho\epsilon\sigma\varthetaa\iota$. Supply $\delta\epsilon i\nu$.

15-20. 'Αρισταγόρου τοῦ Μιλησίου, &c., "when Aristagoras, the Milesian, was urging him," &c. αὐτὸν refers to Cleomenes.—πρὸς βασιλέα, "against the King of Persia." Consult note on line 27, page 35. The reference is to Darius Hystaspis.—ὑπισχνουμένου, "promising at the same time."—καὶ ὅσῷ ἀντέλεγε, &c., "and adding more, the more the other opposed the step." More literally, "the more the other spoke against the ^{Fage} 46 measure." The full form of expression in Greek would be, 5. 4 πλείονα ἐκεῖνος ἀντέλεγε, τόσω πλείονα προστιθέντος.—τὸ ξενύλλιον, "this naughty stranger" The language of a child, Gorgo being at the time about eight or nine years of age, as Herodotus informs us (5, 51). —τάχιον, "quickly." Apparently the comparative for the positive; but in reality the true and strict comparative, as will appear from a paraphrase; "more quickly than you appear to be now doing."—τον 'Αρισταγόραν, "this same Aristagoras." The article here denotes renewed mention.— ⁱποδούμενον, "getting his sandals put on." Literally, "getting sandalled if we may coin the term.

22-30. $\delta Z \varepsilon \widetilde{v} \xi_{IG}$, "the celebrated Zeuxis."— $\delta \mu o \lambda o \gamma \widetilde{o} \ \varepsilon v \pi o \lambda \lambda \widetilde{o} \chi \rho \delta v \varphi$ $\gamma \rho \delta \phi \varepsilon v$, "I acknowledge that I am a long time in painting." Literaily, "that I paint in a long time." Observe the absence of the pronoun before the infinitive, the reference being to the same person indicated by $\delta \mu o \lambda o \gamma \widetilde{\omega}$.— $\kappa a \widetilde{i} \gamma a \rho \varepsilon \varepsilon \varepsilon \pi o \lambda \acute{v} v$, "and no wonder, since I paint for a long time," i. e., for after ages. The point of the reply is best preserved, if we translate the previous clause literally, "that I paint in a long time," to which for a long time will stand opposed.— $o \widetilde{i} E \phi o \rho \sigma \iota$, "the Ephori." Spartan magistrates, who watched over the constitution of the state, and had the superintendence also of public morals. They were five in number, and their power, in some respects, was superior to that of the kings.— $\tau o \widetilde{v}$ $\lambda o \iota \pi o \widetilde{v}$, "for the time to come." Supply $\chi \rho \delta v o v$.— $\phi \varepsilon \rho \varepsilon v \gamma a \rho a \dot{v} \tau o \widetilde{v} \tau \delta$ $\varepsilon l \delta \sigma \varsigma$, "for that his appearance, and the condition of his frame, carried with them disgrace to both Lacedæmon and its laws."

31-32. $\lambda\eta\phi\vartheta\epsilon i\varsigma$, from $\lambda\alpha\mu\beta\delta\nu\omega$.—καὶ συσταθεἰς αὐτῷ, "and having been brought before him," from συνίστημι.—ἐκείνου παρὰ πότον, &c., "the latter growing arrogant over his cups, and asking," &c. The participle σεμνυνομένου, as here employed, is an instance of what the grammarians term Zeugma, and includes, in effect, the words καὶ λέγοντος, or ἐρωτῶντος.

47 LINE 1-3. $\dot{\eta}$ εὐγένεια καὶ ὑπεροχὴ, "the lofty sentiments and the superiority."—'Aθηναίων. This and the other genitive, Μακεδόνων, are governed by ἐστρατήγει, which is equivalent, in fact, to στρατηγὸς ἦν. —Xάρης, the general of the Athenians in the battle of Chæronca. His ignorance and incapacity mainly contributed to the loss of the day.

4-5. $\delta \tau \bar{\omega} \nu \mu \epsilon \lambda \bar{\omega} \nu \pi ot \eta \tau \eta \varsigma$, "the Lyric poet." Literally, "the maker of Lyric pieces"— $\beta a \sigma t \lambda \epsilon \omega \varsigma$. Pausanias was only a general, and the guardian of Plistarchus, then a minor, who died before he came to the throne, and who was succeeded by Plistoanax, the son of Pausanias. This lastmentioned individual, therefore, is only called "king" by courtesy, as being of the royal family, and cousin to Plistarchus; unless we prefer translating the term $\beta a \sigma t \lambda \epsilon \omega \varsigma$ is applied to Pausanias, however, by other writers also; as, for example, by Thucydides (1, 107), Plutarch (Consol., ad Apollon., p. 182, ed. Steph.), Suidas (s. v. Παυσανίας), and the scholiast to Aristophanes (Equit., 84).

6-13. καὶ κελεύοντος μετὰ χλευασμοῦ, "and bidding the other, with an air of scornful derision."—συνεὶς, "Simonides, having perceived."—ό γενόμενος, &c., "who was one of the thirty tyrants," &c. Literally, "who had become," &c.—εὐδαιμονιζόμενος, "being felicitated."—εἰς τίνα καιρὸν, "for what occasion."—καταστρεβλωθεὶς, "having been put to the rack." This addition to the story is untrue. Ælian makes him to have druuk 238 nemlock merely, and says nothing of the torture (Consult Wyttenbach, ad loc. Plut. Consol., ad Apoll., 105, B.)

15-20. &v τισιν ἀπεγνωσμέναις θεοαπείαις, "in some desperate cu-es," perf. part. pass. of ἀπογιγνώσκω.—ἐπεκλήθη, from ἐπικαλίω.—φορτικῶς ταύτη, &c., "making use of this same title in a burdensome manner," i. e., in a manner so annoying to others, that they could with difficulty endure it. καὶ δὴ τολμήσαντος, "and having even had the assurance." The true force of καὶ δὴ is most apparent in a paraphrase : "and having now carried his vanity so far, as even to dare."—Μευεκράτης Ζεὺς, &c., "Menecrates, Jove, to Agesilaus the king, greeting." An imitation of the form usually observed in the beginning of letters. The infinitive χαίρειν, in such a case as the present, is said, by the writers on ellipsis, to be governed by εὐχομαι or εὐχεται understood. The more correct doctrine, however, was first given by Schoetgen, and afterward confirmed by Schaeffer (ad Bos. Ellips., s. v. εὐχεσθαι), according to which, the form χαίρειν in letters, and other forms of a similar kind, are infinitives, put absolutely for imperatives. ὑγιαίνειν, "a sound mind." Literally, "health," meaning to imply, that a disordered frame had produced a corresponding aberration of intellect, and wishing him therefore health both of body and mind, but more particularly the latter. (Compare Gierig, ad Plut., Lac. Apophth., p. 213.) As regards the construction of ὑγιαίνειν, consult the previous note.

21-25. $\epsilon i \varsigma \tau \sigma \sigma \sigma \tilde{v} \tau v \phi \sigma v$, "to such a degree of conceit."— $\epsilon a v \tau \delta v$ ovouáζειν Δία. This is Ælian's account (V. H., 12, 51). According to Plutarch's version of the story, as given in the preceding passage, the title in question was bestowed upon him by others.— $\delta \Phi(\lambda \iota \pi \tau \sigma \varsigma$, "the celebrated Philip." The article is here emphatic. The father of Alexander the Great is meant.—καί δη καί, "and in particular."— $\epsilon \pi i$ Φοίνην, "to a banquet."— $i\delta i \varsigma$, "by itself."— $\pi a \rho \epsilon \vartheta \eta \kappa \epsilon$, "placed before him." This is rendered according to modern customs. The literal meaning is, "placed beside him," the guests anciently reclining lengthwise on couches placed around the table.—καί εθυμιατο αντῷ, "and burned incense unto him." The middle voice here implies that it was done for the king's secret amusement. As, however, the previous tenour of the story makes this apparent enough already, it is very probable that the true reading is that given by the Sluisken MS., namely, και εθυμιατο αντὸς, οί δε λοιποί, &c., making εθυμιατο passive. By another, but less elegant construction, εθυμιατο in our text may be taken impersonally : "incense was burned unto him."

27-30. τὰ μὲν πρῶτα, "at first." Accusative plural taken adverbially. —κατὰ μικρὸν, "by degrees." Literally, "by little (and little)."—καὶ ἡλέγχετο, "and he felt convinced." Middle voice.—καὶ ταῦτα, "and that too."—ἀπιῶν ὅχετο, "he departed abruptly." οἰχομαι with a participle denotes haste, or abruptness of movement.—ἰδρίσθαι, "that he had been insulted," pluperf. infin. pass. of ἰδρίζω.—ἐμμελῶς πάνυ ἐκκαλίψαντος, "having very neatly exposed." The adjective ἐμμελῆς, whence ἐμμελῶς is derived, is sometimes employed by the Greek writers to indicate a neat and graceful turn of wit. Hence the peculiar force of the adverb in the present passage. Compare the remarks of Ruhnken (ad Longin., p. 261), as cited by Heindorf (ad Plat. Theætet. p. 79).

32-34. $\pi ap a \delta o \xi o v \dot{v} \delta o \eta \sigma \varepsilon \mu a v (av. "laboured under a strange kind of madness." More literally, "was afflicted with." The intransitive verb voc<math>\omega$ takes the accusative $\mu a v (av)$, the latter being regarded as a species of cognate noun, not indeed in form, but in its general reference to malad;

 $-\tau \delta$ $a \sigma \tau v$, "the city." Athens is here meant, to which the term 47 acrv is often thus applied by way of excellence or distinction.καί κατελθών είς τον Πειραια, " and having gone down to the Piraus." The Piræus was the main one of the three harbours of Athens. The names of the other two were Munychia and Phalerum.- ένταῦθα οἰκῶν. The Piræus was a town, as it were, of itself, and thickly inhabited. It was connected with Athens by what were called the Long Walls .- Tà kataíροντα έν αὐτῷ, "which entered and came to anchor in it." Observe the additional idea implied by $\dot{\epsilon}\nu \ a\dot{v}\tau\tilde{\varphi}$. To enter a harbour, with the intention of remaining only a short time, is expressed in Greek by $\kappa a \tau a i \rho \epsilon i \rho \lambda i$ μένα, and so the phrase is used by Dionysius of Halicarnassus (A. R., 1, 53), when speaking of the short visit paid by the fleet of Æneas to the harbour named by the Trojans Misenum. But καταίρειν έν λιμένι, is to enter a harbour and remain there some time, for the purpose of unloading, &c. As regards the true force of $\kappa a \tau a i \rho \omega$, consult the remarks of Hemsterhuis, ad Luc. Jud. Voc., 1.

35–36. καὶ ἀπεγράφετο αὐτὰ, " and he kept a register of them." Literally, "he wrote them off for himself."—αὖ πάλιν, " again anew."—τοῖς περισωζομένοις, " at those which were saved from shipwreck." Equivalent to τοῖς σωζομένοις ὥστε περιεῖναι.

48 LINE. 1-5. συνοικῶν τῷ ἀβρωστήματι τούτῷ, "holding communion with this malady," i. e., labouring under it. The verb συνοικέω is often joined, in a similar way, with κακῷ, λύπῃ, φόδῷ, and the like. Com pare the remarks of Jacobs, ad Achill. Tat., p. 433.—ἀναχθεἰς having sailed," from ἀνάγω, the passive for the middle.—οὕτως, " »pon this." Equivalent to the Latin hoc facto.—ἐμέμνητο δὲ πολλάκις, &c, "he often, kowever, called to mind the life led by him in his insane state." More iterally, "his stay in madness :" ἐμέμνητο is the pluperf. indic. pass. of ·ιιμνήσκω, in a middle sense.

14-19. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\iota}$ $\tau\ddot{\psi}$ $\epsilon lval$, "for being."—καὶ μὴν, "why in truth."—ἀρχεral, "begins," i. e., to be conspicuous.—ψάλτης 'Αντιγόνψ ἐπεδείκνυτο, "a harper was giving a specimen of his skill to Antigonus." More littrally, "was showing himself off." ἐπεδείκνυτο is the imperf. pass. in a middle sense. As regards the force of ἐπιδείκνυμι, in the middle, an relation to those who give a specimen of their skill in any department, such as music, oratory, &c., consult the remarks of Fischer, in he Index to Theophrastus, s. $v.-\tauὴν$ νήτην ἐπίσφιγξον, "tighten the lower string :" ἐπίσφιγζον refers literally to a grasping, and consequent sightening, of the string. In the Greek musical scale, the two extremes were the νήτη and the ὑπάτη, or lowest and highest strings, the formes 240 yrelding the sharpest, the latter the gravest tone. We must bear in 48 mind, however, that, in the musical nomenclature of the Greeks, the terms "highest" and "lowest," as applied to the strings of an instrument, had reference merely to their position, not to their tone, being thus directly opposed to the modern way of speaking in musical matters. (Plut., Plat. Quast., p. 1008.)— $\mu\eta$ yéroiró ooi, &c., "may it never turn out so ladly for thee, oh king, as to know these things more accurately than I do," i. e., never may so great a misfortune befall thee, as that thou shouldst become a more skilful musician than I am, for thou canst only become such by laying aside the crown and descending to the walks of private life.

20-26. τῶν ἄλλων, "of all."—ἐν συνόδω, "in company," i. e., while mixing in society.—ή Πυθαγορική φιλόσοφος, "the female Pythagorean." —φαλακρα οὐσα, "although bald."—προύθηκε, contracted for προέθηκε —åμεινον, "better (than the rest)."

NATURAL HISTORY.

28-30. $\tau \delta \pi \lambda \dot{a} \tau o \varsigma$, "of the breadth." Accusative of nearer definition. - $\pi\eta\chi$ swc. The sheep here referred to belong to the class ovis laticaudata of naturalists, having the tail long, and swelled out at the sides by an accumulation of fat in the cellular tissue. This singular modification is the result, according to Buffon, of a great abundance of nourishment. Trav ellers inform us, that, in some parts of Eastern Africa, the tails of the sheep are so long as to prove actually burdensome to the animal, and to require to be supported on a kind of moveable framework, or small carriage. (Dict. d'Hist. Nat., vol. xi., p. 268.)— $\sigma\pi\iota\vartheta a\mu\eta\varsigma$ κai $\pi a\lambda a\iota\sigma\tau\eta\varsigma$, "of a span and four fingers' length." The unit of linear measure adopted by the Greeks, was the foot $(\pi o \dot{v} \varsigma)$, of which the $\delta \dot{a} \kappa \tau v \lambda o \varsigma$, or finger's breadth, was one sixteenth, and the $\pi a \lambda a \iota \sigma \tau \eta$, or palm, one fourth. The $\sigma \pi \iota \vartheta a \mu \eta$, or span, equalled twelve $\delta \dot{\alpha} \kappa \tau \nu \lambda o \iota$, and is defined by Hesychius to be the distance from the extremity of the thumb to that of the little finger, when the hand is opened with the view of grasping or measuring any object. (Wurm, de Pond., &c., p. 90.)—καὶ ἐνίαι συμβάλλουσι, &c., "and some strike their ears, as they hang down, against one another," i. e., and in some, the ears, as they hang down, are brought into contact by the movements of the animal. Long ears, hanging laterally, are one of the types of the capra ægagrus, or wild goat, that inhabits the mountains of Caucasus, and the large chain which traverses Persia and Candahar, and joins the Himmalayan range. The capra ægagrus is the parent source of the domestic goat, and, among these, of the species described in the text.

LINE 1-4. $\kappa \epsilon \rho i \sigma \tau \eta \nu \kappa \rho i \delta \nu$. The elephant's antipathy to the ram rests on the authority of no other writer but Ælian. from whose History of Animals the extract in the text is made (1, 38. Compare Schneider, ad loc.).— $\chi o i \rho o \nu \beta o \eta \nu$, "the cry of the hog." Seneca (de Ira, 2, 12) corroborates the remark of Ælian: "elephantes porcina vox terret." (Compare Plut., de Sol. Am., p. 981.)— $\phi a \sigma i$, "they say." Supply äv $\partial \rho \omega$ - $\pi o \iota. - \sigma i \nu \Pi i j \delta \rho \tau \tilde{\rho}$ 'H $\pi \epsilon \iota \rho \omega \tau \eta$, "with Pyrrhus the Epirot," i. e., in the army of Pyrhus, king of Epirus. This monarch was invited over by the Tarentines to aid them against the Romans — $\dot{\eta} \nu i \kappa \eta$, &c. The story here told is false, for two reasons. I. There were only two battles between the Page 49 Romans and Pyrrhus, in both of which, according to Plutarch, the former were defeated (Vit. Pyrrh., c. 17, 21): and, II. The Romans only saw elephants for the first time, in the army of Pyrrhus, in Lucania, and were so ignorant of their true nature and character, as actually to call them "Lucanian oxen," the ox being the largest animal with which they had up to this time been acquainted. (Plin., 8, 6.) It would certainly require some previous knowledge of the habits of the elephant to enable one to understand its peculiar antipathies.

5-11. $\lambda a \mu b \acute{a} \nu \epsilon \iota \gamma \acute{a} \rho$, &c. The order is, $\mu \acute{o} \nu \nu \gamma \acute{a} \rho \tau \breve{\omega} \nu ζ \acute{\omega} \omega \nu \lambda a \mu b \acute{a} \nu \epsilon \iota$, "for it alone of animals takes," &c.—καί εἰς τὸ στόμα, &c. Hence the Greek name often applied to the trunk, namely, προbοσκίς (proboscis), or "fore-feeder." from πρό and βόσκω.— Ψαυμαστὸν ὄσον, "to a surprising degree." Literally, "it is surprising how much." Supply ἐστί after Ψαυμαστὸν, and compare the Latin immane quantum.

12-13. $\xi \tau \eta \pi \lambda \epsilon i \omega \tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \delta \iota \alpha \kappa o \sigma i \omega \nu$, "more than two hundred years." Literally, "more years than two hundred." The genitive is required here by the comparative $\pi \lambda \epsilon i \omega$, and the article $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu$ marks the sum, but is not translated. Other accounts, still more marvellous, are given by some of the ancient writers respecting the age of the elephant. Onesicritus, for example, as quoted by Strabo (15, p. 705, Cas.), makes this animal live three hundred years. Some few, according to him, even reach five hundred years. He also informs us, that the elephant is strongest in its two hundredth vear !—Aristotle makes the period of gestation, in the case of the elephant, to be two years ; which is very near the truth, the correct time being twenty months. (G. Cuvier, ad Plin., 8, 10.)— $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \Lambda \iota \delta \nu \kappa \tilde{\omega} \nu$, the genitive again, with the comparative.

15-17. $\delta \iota a \nu \iota \sigma \tau \dot{a} \mu \varepsilon \nu \circ \iota$, "standing upright." The force of $\delta \iota \dot{a}$ cannot well be expressed here in a translation, except in one bordering on paraphrase. It implies a distending of the legs, and, consequently, an enlargement of the base, in order to gain more strength, and it shows, at the same time, the instinct of the animal.— $\kappa a \iota \nu \varepsilon \iota \nu$. Strabo, from whom this is taken, has $\nu \varepsilon \iota \nu \tau \varepsilon \kappa \dot{a} \lambda \lambda \iota \sigma \tau a$. Pliny (8, 10) denies that the elephant can swim; but this, of course, is erroneous. (Compare Cuvier, ad loc.)

18-20. πολλῶν ἐλεφάντων προδιδασκομένων, &c., "when a large number of elephants were getting drilled to place themselves in certain bold postures, and to go again and again through complicated movements." Literally, "many elephants getting taught beforehand," &c., i. e., before exhibiting in public.—ἀνακυκλεῖν. Reiske is wrong in making ἀνακυκλεῖν κινήσεις refer to circular movements ("gyros"). The verb is merely used here by Plutarch in its secondary meaning of "to repeat," or "to go over the same thing again and again." (Compare Plut., Consol., ad Ap., p. 106, and Lucian, Nigrin., 6.)

21-22. ἀκούων κακῶς ἑκάστοτε, "being scolded on every occasion," i. e., at every drilling. More literally, "being called hard names," i. e., blockhead, dunce, &c. The primitive meaning of the phrase would be, "hearing himself spoken ill of."— $ǎ\phi\vartheta\eta$ νυκτὸς, &c., "was seen at night practising his lessons alone, of his own accord, by the light of the moon." The pronoun αὐτὸς is here equivalent to µόνος. Compare Heyne, ad Il., 8, 99, and Valckenaer, ad Eurip., Phæn., 1245. On many occasions αὐτός and µόνος both appear, and Homer (Od., 14, 450) joins αὐτός and oloς.

23-24. $\dot{\upsilon}\pi\dot{\upsilon}$ $\tau\omega\nu$ $\pi a\iota\delta a\rho (\omega\nu, "by the boys." e., the schoolboys in the eirects. -- <math>\tau o \tilde{\iota}_{\zeta}$ $\gamma \rho a\phi \epsilon (o \iota \zeta, "with their styles" The style (stylus) was 242$ of iron, and was used for writing on waxen tablets, plates of brass or lead, leaves of trees, &c. It was, in fact, a kind of iron pencil, sharp at one end and round or flat at the other. The round or flat end was used for smoothing over the wax anew, previous to writing; or, in other words, for obliterating what had been previously written.

26-28. $i\pi i\delta \delta_0 \xi_0 \eta v d\pi \sigma \tau v \mu \pi a v i \sigma \epsilon v, " was thought to be about to destroy$ $him." The literal meaning of <math>d\pi \sigma \tau v \mu \pi a v i \zeta \omega$ is " to kill, or injure severely, by beating." In the present case it has reference to a dashing on the ground, which it was thought the boy would experience from the elephant. This same verb is sometimes employed with the general signification of " to kill in any way." Compare the remarks of Casaubon, ad Athen., 4, p. 154, c.— $d\tau p \epsilon \mu a \pi \rho \delta \zeta \tau \eta v \gamma \eta v$, &c., " he quietly placed him down again on the ground," i. e., he put him down again on his feet, the verb indicating a placing down firmly or securely.— $d\rho \kappa o \delta \sigma a v \eta \gamma o \psi \mu \epsilon v o \xi \delta (\kappa \eta v, \& c.,$ " thinking it a sufficient punishment for one of such an age to be frightened," i. e., for a boy. A grown up person would have been handled more severely.

30-34. $a\lambda a$ $\tau \varepsilon$ $\vartheta a \nu \mu a \sigma i a$, &c., "they relate both many other wonderful things, and (especially) those which concern their crossing of rivers."— $\epsilon \pi \iota \delta o \vartheta \varepsilon \epsilon a \nu \tau \delta \nu$, "having intrusted himself to the stream." Supply $\tau \tilde{\varphi} \pi \sigma \tau a \mu \tilde{\varphi}$.—ol $\delta \varepsilon \epsilon \delta \tau \tilde{\omega} \tau \varepsilon \varepsilon a \pi \sigma \vartheta \varepsilon \omega \rho \sigma \tilde{\upsilon} \iota \nu$, "while the rest, standing on the bank, observe his movements from it." The compound $a \pi \sigma \vartheta \varepsilon \omega \rho \tilde{\upsilon} \sigma \iota \nu$ is equivalent here to $a \pi \delta \tau \tilde{\tau} \varsigma \gamma \tilde{\eta} \varsigma \vartheta \varepsilon \omega \rho \tilde{\upsilon} \sigma \iota \nu$... $- \delta \varsigma$, $a \nu \epsilon \kappa \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu \sigma \varsigma \tau \tilde{\upsilon} \sigma \delta \tau \tilde{\eta} \varsigma \gamma \tilde{\eta} \varsigma \vartheta \varepsilon \omega \rho \tilde{\upsilon} \sigma \iota \nu$. "(thinking) that if he, by his large size, overtop the stream, there is a great abundance of security unto the larger ones, as regards their confiding in the river," i. e., the larger ones may confide securely in their ability to cross. We have here the particle $\delta \varsigma$ with the accusative absolute, and, in order to seize the full sense of this concise mode of expression, we must in transla ting insert some word or words.

LINE 1-8. $dvabdv\tauec$, "the hunters having mounted." Supply 50 $\vartheta\eta\rho a\tau a \lambda$ —kai $dv\delta\rho e i\omega v$, "and courageous ones."— $\delta i \omega kov \sigma i$, "pursue the wild elephants." Supply $\tau o v c d \gamma \rho i o v c$.— $\tau v \pi \tau e v v$, "to keep striking them," i. e., the wild elephants. Supply $a v \tau o b c$.— $\tau o v \tau \sigma i c$, referring to the tame elephants, and governed by $\pi \rho \sigma \sigma \tau a \tau \tau \sigma v \sigma i c$., "having leaped on (the back of one of the wild ones)." Supply $d \gamma \rho i o v$.— $e \pi i \delta e \delta c$. $\eta \kappa \delta \tau \sigma c$, from $e \pi i \delta a i v \omega$.— $o i \mu v$, $o i \delta' o v$, "some are gentle, others are not." The full sentence would be, $o i \mu v \pi \rho a v c c i s v$. $\tau \omega v \delta c \gamma \rho i o v$, "of the very fierce ones."

10-17. $\dot{a}\pi\dot{\sigma}\tau\sigma\tilde{v}$ $\sigma\nu\mu\beta\epsilon\delta\eta\kappa\delta\tau\sigma\varsigma$, "from its peculiarity." Literally, "from what has occurred to it," i. e., in its peculiar formation. So also, $\tau\dot{a}$ $\sigma\nu\mu$ - $\delta\epsilon\delta\eta\kappa\delta\tau a$ signify "the attributes" of a thing.— $\tau\dot{\eta}\nu$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ $\chi\rho\deltaa\nu$ $\pi\nu\xi\sigma\epsilon\iota\delta\eta$. Strabo, on the contrary (16, p. 774, ed. Cas.), asserts that their colour resembles that of the elephant. He refers evidently to the Indian rhinoceros. (Cuvier, ad Plin., 8, 29.)— $\phi\epsilon\rho\epsilon\iota$ $\kappa\epsilon\rho\alpha\varsigma$. There are two grand classes of the rhi noceros; those, namely, with two horns, and those with but one. The two-horned rhinoceros is a native of Africa and also of Sumatra; the single-horned one is found in India and Java.— $\tau\tilde{\phi}$ $\pi\rho\sigma\epsilon\iota\rho\eta\mu\epsilon\nu\phi$ $\vartheta\eta\rho\ell\phi$, referring to the elephant.

23-26. δ καλούμενος ἕππος, "what is called the river-horse." Supply ποτάμιος after ἕππος. The ancient writers are very inaccurate in their description of the hippopotamus, and, what is very little to their credit, appear to have taken no pains to correct the errors in question, even when the means for so doing were afforded them. It is surprising, in particular,

NOTES ON PAGES 50 AND 51.

Page that Pliny's account should be so inaccurate, as several of these 50 animals had been exhibited at Rome. $-\delta i_{\chi}\eta\lambda o_{\zeta}$, $\pi \alpha \rho \alpha \pi \lambda \eta \sigma i \omega_{\zeta}$ $\tau \sigma i_{\zeta}$ βουσί This is incorrect. Abdollatiff describes the animal as having its foot divided, like that of a camel, into four parts, each furnished with a hoof, and the drawing given by Wilkinson (vol. iii., p. 71) from an Egyptian painting confirms this. Compare also Cuvier, ad Plin., 8, 39, who thinks that the ancient naturalists, in some parts of their description, confounded the hippopotamus with the gnou. $-\tau \tilde{\omega} v \, d\gamma \rho i \omega v \, \dot{v} \tilde{\omega} v$, "than those of wild boars." $-\tau \rho \epsilon \bar{\iota} \varsigma \, \dot{\epsilon} \varsigma \, d\mu \phi \sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \omega v$, &c. This is incorrect. The hippopotamus has four cutting-teeth in each jaw, those in the lower jaw straight, and pointing forward nearly horizontally, the two middle ones being the longest. The canine teeth, or tusks, are four in number, those in the upper jaw short, those in the lower jaw very long and obliquely truncated. $-\dot{\omega}\tau a$. The ears of the animal are small, pointed, and lined with fine short hairs .--κέρκον. The tail of the animal is not like that of the horse, but is, on the contrary, short, slightly compressed, and almost bare. $-\phi\omega\nu\eta\nu$. Some modern travellers, also, compare the cry of the animal to the neighing of a horse. Others, however, more correctly represent it as a very loud noise, between the bellowing of an ox and the roaring of an elephant. $-i\pi\pi\omega$ $\pi\alpha\rho\epsilon\mu$ - $\phi \epsilon \rho \tilde{\eta}$, "somewhat like those of a horse."

26-32. τὸ δ' ὅλον κύτος τοῦ σώματος, "while the whole cavity of the body."- $i\lambda \epsilon \phi a \nu \tau \iota$, "to that of an elephant." In figure, the hippopotamus more closely resembles an unwieldy ox than any other animal. -- logupóra- $\tau o \nu$. The natives of Africa, at the present day, convert the hide, which is very thick, into shields. Pliny (8, 39) states, that it was employed for a similar purpose by the ancient inhabitants of the country, and also for helinets, being quite impenetrable after having been steeped in water.-- κατανέμεται τόν τε σῖτον, &c. Although the hippopotamus is an inhabitant of the waters, his food is entirely of a vegetable character, and in searching for this he commits wide devastation through all the adjoining country. On the banks of the Nile, he often defeats the hopes of the husbandman; whole fields of grain and sugarcane being destroyed, not only to satisfy his appetite, but also trampled down by his great weight.

LINE 1-5. LOLOV EXOUGI, &c., "have, as peculiar to themselves, 51 beyond all other animals, what is called," &c.-Suapépovoi dè, &c. The distinction here mentioned is perfectly correct. The single-hump camel is commonly called the dromedary $-\delta\epsilon\kappa a \ \mu\eta\nu a\varsigma$. The correct time is twelve months.— εν μόνον, " one at a birth." Modern naturalists coincide in the truth of this remark. $-\pi \epsilon \nu \tau \eta \kappa o \nu \tau \alpha \, \epsilon \tau \eta$. The camel attains the full exercise of its functions within four or five years, and the duration of its life is from forty to fifty.

7-10. Κυνοκέφαλοι. The Cynocephali of the ancients were a species of large baboon, with elongated, dog-like head, flat and compressed cheeks, projecting and strong teeth, and a forehead depressed below the level of the superior margins of the orbits. Notwithstanding this close approxima. tion to the shape of the dog's head, the form and position of the eyes, combined with the similarity of the arms and hands, give to these creatures a resemblance to humanity as striking as it is disgusting.— $\tau \alpha i \varsigma$ dè $\phi \omega \nu \alpha i \varsigma$, &c., "while, in their cries, they emit human mutterings." The words $\tau a \tilde{i} c \phi \omega v a \tilde{i} c$ are merely inserted in order to make an antithesis with $\tau c \tilde{i} c \sigma \omega$ μασιν.- άγριώτατα δε ταῦτα, &c. The whole aspect of the animal, answering to the ancient cynocephalus, impresses the beholder with an idea of great physical strength, united with a temper at once incorrigibly vicious and brutally ferocious. The baboon is capable of being ruled only 51^{Page} by the severest treatment.

11-15. κροκόττας. Artemidorus (Strab., 16, p. 774, Cas.), Diodorus Siculus (3, 35), and Agatharchides (ap. Phot. cod., 250, c. 39), agree in making the crocottas to be produced from the wolf and dog, and in representing it as more ferocious than either of these animals. But the coupling of the wolf and dog, though easy, and often effected in menageries, at the present day, produces no durable species. It is more probable, therefore, that the crocottas answers to the hyena, since the latter has very strong teeth, and breaks bones with the greatest ease. The earliest passage respecting the crocottas is found in Ctesias (Indic., c. 32), and the description there given is almost the same with that by which the Oriental writers designate the hyena. (Cuvier, ad Plin., 8, 30.)—13. πάντων, "all animals." Supply ζώων.—πῶν ὀστῶν μέγεϑος, "all the largest bones." Literally, "every large size of bones." Equivalent to πάντα καὶ τὰ μέγιστα ὀστᾶ. —τὸ καταποθὲν, "what is swallowed," from καταπίνω, 1st aor. part. pass.

16-22. παγέντα, 2d aor. part. pass. of πήγνυμι.—ὑπάγουσα. Supply ή ἀλώπηξ.—παραβάλλει, "applies."—κἀν μὲν αἰσθηται, &c., "and if she perceive, by the sound, the stream flowing near under the ice :" αἰσθηται is the 2d aor. subj. mid. of αἰσθάνομαι. Observe also the force of ὑπό in the compound verb ὑποφέρω.—μὴ γεγονέναι, &c., "that the ice is not thick." More literally, "that the freezing has not-been through any depth."—κὰν ἑҳ τις, "and if one permit her," i. e., if no one prevent.—τῷ δὲ μὴ ψοφεῖν, &c., "while, on the other hand, taking courage from the stream's not making any noise, she crosses over." More freely, "while, on the other hand, if the stream make no noise under the ice, she crosses over boldly." —διῆλθεν. Observe the force of the aorist, as referring to what is usual or habitual, ε_Ad requiring to be rendered, therefore, by the English present.

25-27. ἕταν αίσθωνται βαρεῖς ὄντες, "whenever they perceive themselves to be incommoded." More literally, "to be heavy," i. e., in their movements. Observe the nominative after αἰσθωνται, as referring to the same person that is implied by the verb.—τῷ λανθάνειν, "by concealment." Literally, "by the lying concealed."—τῷ φεύγειν, "in flight," i. e., in their means of escape.

LINE 1-10. $\chi \epsilon \rho \sigma a(\omega \nu)$. This epithet is added for distinction' 52 sake, the marine echini being what naturalists call the sea-egg. Hence, $\chi \epsilon \rho \sigma a \delta c \xi \chi \delta \nu c c$ means, literally, "a land echinus," i. e., "a hedge hog."— $\pi \dot{\alpha} \nu \nu \gamma \lambda a \dot{\phi} \nu \rho \dot{\alpha} \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota$, "is very pretty."— $\mu \epsilon \tau \sigma \alpha \dot{\omega} \rho \nu$, genitive of time. — $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \kappa \nu \lambda \iota \sigma \vartheta \epsilon \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota$, "is very pretty."— $\mu \epsilon \tau \sigma \dot{\omega} \rho \nu$, genitive of time. — $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \kappa \nu \lambda \iota \sigma \vartheta \epsilon \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota$, "is very pretty."— $\mu \epsilon \tau \sigma \dot{\omega} \rho \nu$, genitive of time. — $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \kappa \nu \lambda \iota \sigma \vartheta \epsilon \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota$, "he takes them $u \rho$," i. e., the grapes. Supply $a \dot{\nu} \tau \dot{\alpha} \zeta$, as referring back to $\dot{\rho} \ddot{\alpha} \gamma \alpha \varsigma$.— kal $\lambda a \mu \dot{\omega} \dot{\omega} \epsilon \nu$, "and to take them from him, dividing them among one another." More freely, "in order to divide them," &c. Observe the force of the middle voice in $\tau a \mu \iota \epsilon \nu \rho \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \sigma \varsigma \varsigma$. The whole story here related is untrue. Equally untrue is the account, that they ascend fruit-trees, and come down with apples, pears, &c., stuck upon their bristles.— $\tau \dot{\sigma} \delta \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \iota \iota \tau a \delta \iota$. This is also untrue.— $\tau \eta \nu \kappa \alpha \tau'$ $\dot{a} \nu \epsilon \mu \rho \nu$, "the one that faces the wind." Supply o \dot{\sigma} \sigma \mu \dot{\sigma} \eta \nu.

12-14. $\pi\epsilon\phi\sigma\nu\epsilon\nu\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\nu$, "of a murdered person." Literally, "of one who had been murdered:" pluperf. part. pass. of $\phi\sigma\nu\epsilon\nu\omega - \dot{\eta}\mu\epsilon\rho\sigma\nu$ $\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\nu\eta\nu$, &c., "that he (the dog) was remaining for this the third day without food, by the side (of the corpse), and had not left it for an instant." Observe the continued action indicated by the imperfect infinitive, $\pi a \rho a \mu \epsilon \nu \epsilon \nu$, the force

^{rage} 52 of παρά in composition, and the force of the aorist in $\dot{a}πολιπειν.$ $\dot{ε}κέλενσε θάψαι, "he gave orders to inter." - μεθ' έαντοῦ, "along with him," i. e., in charge of one of his attendants.$

15-22. ἐξέτασις, "an inspection."—καὶ πάροδος, &c., "and a passing in review, the king being seated at the time," i. e., a marching-review before the king, who was seated. $-\kappa \alpha \theta \eta \mu \epsilon \nu o \nu$, genitive absolute. $-\pi \alpha \rho \iota \delta \nu \tau \alpha \varsigma$, " passing by," i. e., marching by in review. $-\xi \xi \delta \rho a \mu \varepsilon$, "he rushed forth." Observe the quickness of action indicated by the aorist : 2d aor. indic. act. of $\xi \kappa \tau \rho \xi \chi \omega$. -καθυλάκτει, "kept barking at them." Observe the continued action indicated by the imperfect, and the force, likewise, of κατά in composition. -- ωστε μη μόνον, &c. The order of construction is, ωστε τους άνθρωπους γενέσθαι δι' υποψίας μη μόνον ἐκείνω, ἀλλὰ καὶ πῶσι τοῖς παροῦσι, "so that the men straightway became suspected, not only by him," i. e., not only by Pyrrhus, &c. The preposition $\delta_i \dot{\alpha}$ forms various periphrases with $\epsilon l \nu \alpha i$, γίγνεσθαι, έχειν, &c. Thus, διὰ φόβου είναι, " to be afraid ;" δι' ὑποψίας víyveoval, "to be suspected," &c. These all arise from the primitive meaning "through."-μικρών τινων, &c., "some slight circumstantial proofs having been added." More literally, "some slight proofs having reference to appearance (merely)," i. e., looking like guilt, but not actually fixing the charge on them.

24-33. $\Lambda v \sigma (\mu a \chi o \varsigma)$, one of the successors of Alexander, who lost his life in the battle with Seleucus.— $a\dot{v}\tau \partial\varsigma \, \dot{\varepsilon} av\tau \partialv \, \dot{\varepsilon}\pi \dot{\varepsilon} \dot{\rho} \dot{\rho} \psi \varepsilon$, "he, of his own accord, threw himself on the pile." Supply $\tau \eta \, \pi v \rho \dot{q}$ after $\dot{\epsilon}\pi \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\rho} \dot{\rho} \psi \varepsilon$.— $\tau \dot{a} \, \dot{o}' \, a\dot{v}\tau \dot{a}$ kai $\tau \partial v 'A \sigma \tau \partial v$, &c., "they say that the (dog) Astus also did the same thing." kai $\pi \varepsilon \rho \dot{i} \, \tau \partial \, \kappa \lambda i v i \delta i ov$, &c., "and moving anxiously around the bier, as the body was getting carried forth," i. e., on the way from the house to the funeral pile. Supply $\tau o v \, v \varepsilon \kappa \rho o v$ after $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \phi \varepsilon \rho \rho \mu \dot{\epsilon} v ov$.— $\sigma v \gamma \kappa a \tau \dot{\epsilon} \kappa a v \sigma \varepsilon$, from $\sigma v \gamma \kappa a \tau a \kappa a \dot{\omega}$...— $\tau \partial v \, \pi \rho \omega \tau \varepsilon \dot{v} v \tau a \, v \dot{v} v \, i v \partial i \kappa \tilde{\omega} v$, "that the best of the Indian dogs." Literally, "that the best dog of the Indian ones."— $\kappa a \dot{a}$ $\pi \varepsilon \rho i \rho \rho \tilde{\rho} v$, "and took no notice of them." Literally, "looked around (at other objects)."

53 LINE 1-7. καὶ φανερὸν εἶναι, &c., "and evidently regarded it as a fit antagonist for himself." Literally, "and was evident as making it an antagonist of his own." Observe the force of the middle in ποιούμενον, the idea conveyed by which is more fully implied in αὐτοῦ. The adjective φανερὸν is masculine here, agreeing with τὸν κύνα understood, and not neuter.—
ό ἤδη γέρων, "that is now old," i. e., when now old.
Supply យν after γέρων.—
τὴν γένεσιν λαβεῖν, "took its origin."—κακοῦ κόρακος κακὸν ώόν. Equivalent to our own saying, "evil child of an evil parent." (Consult the remarks of Erasmus on this adage, Chil., 1, c. 9, col. 295.)

10-14. $\kappa\alpha\tau\epsilon\sigma\vartheta\epsilon\iota\nu$. The pelican first stores up its prey in its gular pouch, from which it is gradually transferred into the æsophagus, as the process of digestion goes on. This gular pouch is a kind of sac, fitted to the lower mandible, and formed of the dilated skin of the throat.— $\sigma\tau\rho\nu\nu$ - $\vartheta o\kappa \dot{\alpha}\mu\eta\lambda o\iota$. The latter part of the Greek name for the ostrich ($-\kappa \dot{\alpha}\mu\eta\lambda o\varsigma$) refers to the striking resemblance, in many parts of external form, which this bird bears to the camel. (Consult Kirby, vol. ii., p. 458.)— $\pi\epsilon\phi\rho\iota\kappa\nu\iota\alpha\varsigma$ $\vartheta\rho\iota\xi\iota\lambda\epsilon\pi\tau\alpha\iota\varsigma$, "all rough with small hairs." This is incorrect. The head of the ostrich has only a few scattered hairs.

16-22. ὑπάρχον, agreeing with ζῶον understood.—ῥύγχος ἔχει, &c., " it has a beak of very small size, and gathered to a point:" συνηγμένον is 246

NOTES ON PAGES 53 AND 54.

Page the perf. part. pass. of $\sigma v \nu \dot{a} \gamma \omega$. The account here given is not very 53 accurate. The beak of the ostrich is small, straight, and depressed towards the end, which is rounded off. $-\dot{\epsilon}\pi\tau\dot{\epsilon}\rho\omega\tau a\iota$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ $\tau a\rho\sigma o i \varsigma$, &c., " it is furnished, moreover, with soft and downy pinions." More literally, "it is winged, moreover, with," &c.— $\delta_{i\chi\eta\lambda ois}$, "two-toed."— $\delta_{i\dot{a}} \delta_{\dot{c}} \tau \delta_{\dot{b}} \delta_{c}$, &c. The difficulty lies in the shortness of its wings, which unfit it for flying .-κατὰ τῆς γῆς, &c., "it moves swiftly on tip-toe along the ground." The true force of $\dot{a}\kappa\rhooba\tau\epsilon\hat{i}$, in this passage, has been mistaken by some of the commentators. Diodorus Siculus, from whom the present extract is taken, explains the meaning of the verb very clearly in another part of his work (3, 27) : μικρόν ἄκροις ποσί τῆς γῆς ἐπιψαύειν.-τοῖς ποσί τοὺς ὑποπίπτοντας, &c., "it hurls against its pursuers, by means of its feet, as if from a sling, the stones that lie beneath it (in its course), with so good an aim." Observe here the peculiar meaning of $i\pi o\pi i\pi \tau ov \tau a_{\zeta}$, and compare the following passage of Strabo (6, 2, 5), where it is similarly used: $\tau \tilde{\eta} \gamma a \rho$ Καρχηδονία τούτων μάλιστα ύποπιπτόντων τῶν μερῶν, μακροὶ καὶ συνεχεῖς οί πόλεμοι γενόμενοι, τὰ πολλὰ κατέφθειραν.

25-29. $\pi\rho\delta$ $\tau\sigma\tilde{v}$ $\tau\epsilon\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\nu\varsigma$, &c., "fronting on the public place, which they call the forum of the Greeks :" τέμενος is most commonly employed to indicate a spot of ground set apart for some religious purpose, and consecrated to some divinity. Here, however, the allusion is a general one .--'Ελλήνων ἀγορὰν. The allusion, in all probability, is to what was termed the Græcostasis, a public structure at Rome, in the forum, not far from the Curia Hostilia. It was the place where the Grecian and other ambassadors took their station, if coming from friendly states, while waiting for an audience with the senate, or for an answer to their applications, after they had been admitted to an audience. It appears to have been a kind of portico, or arcade, richly adorned, and having public walks connected with it (Compare the remarks of Minutoli, in Sallengre's Nov. Thes. Antiq. Rom., vol. i., col. 167, &c.)- θαυμαστόν τι χρήμα, &c., " a wonderful thing of a talkative magpie." The literal translation, as here given, is much more playful and striking than a free one would be. The Greek in the text is a periphrasis for κίτταν θαυμασίως πολύφωνον, "a wonderfully talkative magpie."-αύτην έθίζουσα, " accustoming itself to do this."

LINE 2-6. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon\tilde{\iota}$, "in that neighbourhood."— $\dot{\epsilon}\tau\nu\chi\epsilon$ $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\kappa\omega\mu\iota\zeta\dot{\phi}\mu\epsilon\nu\varsigma$, 54 "happened to be carried out for interment," i. e., in order to be burned on the funeral pile, &c.— $\dot{\upsilon}\pi\dot{\sigma}$ $\sigma\dot{\alpha}\lambda\pi\iota\gamma\xi\iota$ $\pi\sigma\lambda\lambdaa\tilde{\iota}\varsigma$, "to the sound of many trumpets." At the funerals of the wealthier and nobler Romans both trumpeters and pipers (tibicines) were employed. The instruments used on these occasions were larger than ordinary, and emitted a grave and mournful sound. (Consult Rosini, Antiq. Rom., p. 441.)— $\ddot{\omega}\sigma\pi\epsilon\rho$ $\epsilon\dot{\iota}\omega\vartheta\epsilon$. It was customary for funeral processions to halt from time to time in the public places through which their route lay, especially in the fora.— $\dot{\epsilon}\nu\delta\iota\dot{\epsilon}$ - $\tau\rho\iota\psi\alpha\nu$, "remained there." Observe the force of $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ in composition.— $\ddot{\mu}\vartheta\partial\gamma\gamma\varsigma\varsigma$ kai $\ddot{u}vav\delta\varsigma\varsigma$, "without a note, and completely silent." Literally, "noteless and voiceless."

8-14. $\dot{\upsilon}\pi\sigma\psi$ íai dè ϕ apµáκων, &c., "there were suspicions, moreover, of magic arts against those in the same line of business," i. e., some suspected that the rival barbers had bewitched the magpie.— $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\pi\lambda\eta\xi$ ai $\tau\eta\nu$ åκο $\eta\nu$, "had deafened it." Literally, "had struck out its hearing."— $\sigma\nu\gamma\kappa\alpha\tau\varepsilon\sigma\delta\epsilon\sigma\vartheta$ ai, pluperf. infin. pass. of $\sigma\nu\gamma\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha\sigma\delta\epsilon\nu\nu\nu\mu$.— $\dot{\epsilon}\vartheta\vartheta$ ic å $\phi\eta\kappa\epsilon\nu$, &c., "it again sent forth, no one of those its accustomed and former imitations, but the

A period, in musical language, is any melodious portion of a tune which ends with a cadence, and carries with it a complete musical sense. Hence, in popular language, it may be designated "a turn."

18-21. $\tau \delta \mu \hat{\nu} \gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho \delta \hat{\epsilon} \rho \mu a$, &c. The body of the crocodile, above and below, and the entire length of the tail, are covered with square scales or plates; most of those on the back having ridges or spines of various lengths: the flanks are only protected by small round scales.— $\kappa a \lambda \tau \tilde{\eta} \sigma \kappa \lambda \eta \rho \delta \tau \eta \tau \tau \delta \iota a \phi \hat{\epsilon} \rho \nu$, "and surpassing in hardness," i. e., of surpassing hardness.— $\hat{\epsilon} \xi \dot{a} \mu \phi \sigma \hat{\epsilon} \rho \nu \tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \mu \epsilon \rho \tilde{\omega} \nu$, "in either jaw." Literally, "from either part (of the head)," i. e., in the upper and under jaw.— $\delta \dot{\nu} o \delta \hat{\epsilon} o i \chi a \nu \lambda \iota \delta \delta \sigma \tau \tau \epsilon$, "and two of these projecting," i. e., like those of the elephant or bog. "Larcher, ad Herod., 2, 68). Herodotus, in his description of the crocodile (given in the extract immediately after this, § 25), makes all the teeth to be "projecting," a remark that would apply with more correctness to the greater part of the teeth in the upper jaw, since, when the two jaws are closed, these are actually seen to project downward. (Compare Baehr, ad Herod., l. c.)

24-26. $\pi\lambda\eta\vartheta\sigma\varsigma\delta'a\vartheta\tau\omega\nu$, &c. The crocodile of Egypt is no longer found, except in the upper parts of that country, where the heat is greatest, and the population least numerous.— $\dot{\omega}\varsigma\,\,\ddot{\omega}\nu\,\,\pi\sigma\lambda\nu\gamma\delta\nu\omega\nu$, &c., "since they are both prolific animals," &c. Compare the remarks respecting $\dot{\omega}\varsigma\,\,\ddot{\omega}\nu$, in the note on line 15.

30-34. $\dot{u}\lambda\lambda'$ $\ddot{v}\mu\omega\varsigma$, &c., "but yet (numerous though they are) nature has furnished a great source of aid against this number's increasing to the injury of man." Literally, "growing against men."— $\dot{l}\chi\nu\epsilon\dot{v}\mu\omega\nu$. The ichneumon is called in Egypt and the adjacent countries, at the present day, by the name of Pharaoh's rat.— $\pi a\rho a\pi\lambda \dot{\eta}\sigma \iota o\varsigma \ \dot{\omega}\nu \mu\kappa\rho\tilde{\phi} \kappa v\nu i$. The Egyptian ichneumon is larger than a cat, but formed like the weasel. It is of a gray colour, and has a long tail, terminated by a black tuft. It is very common in the northern parts of Egypt, between the Mediterranean and Siout.— $\sigma v \nu \tau \rho i \delta \omega \nu$. The ichneumon digs the crocodile-eggs out of the sand, and sucks them.— $\dot{\delta} \kappa \rho \sigma \kappa \delta \delta \epsilon i \lambda \sigma \varsigma$. We come now to the description given by Herodotus. The previous one was by Diodorus Siculus.

55 LINE 1-2. ὀφθαλμοὺς μὲν ὑὸς. The eyes of the crocodile are small compared with the size of the body, although they are more like those of a cat than of a hog. (Baehr, ad Herod., 2, 68.)—καὶ χαν-λιόδοντας. Compare the note on line 19, page 54.—κατὰ λόγον τοῦ σώματος, "in proportion to its body," i. e., proportioned in size to that of the body.—γλῶσσαν δὲ μόνον, &c., " and it alone of animals has not a tongue from nature." Literally, "it alone of animals does not cause a tongue ta grow." This is an error on the part of the ancient writers, and the error is still perpetuated in popular belief. The crocodile has a tongue like the rest of animals, but it is connected by a rough skin with the lower jaw; and not being extensible, nor easily seen at first view, since it completely fills the cavity of the jaw, between the two rows of teeth, it has been supposed to have no actual existence.

3-6. $o\dot{v}\delta\dot{\varepsilon} \tau \eta \nu \kappa \dot{\alpha}\tau \omega \kappa \iota \nu \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \gamma \nu \dot{\alpha}\vartheta o \nu$, "neither does it move its lower jaw." This is another and very common error. The truth is, the lower jaw alone is moved, and not the upper. The lower jaw extends farther back than the scull, so that the neck must be somewhat bent when it is opened. The appearance thus produced has led to the very common error of believing that the crocodile moves its upper jaw, which is incapable of motion, except with the rest of the body.— $\tau \nu \phi \lambda \partial \nu \delta \dot{\varepsilon} \dot{\epsilon} \nu \, \delta \delta a \tau \iota$. This is not correct; unless Herodotus mean by $\tau \nu \phi \lambda \delta c$ here, "dim-sighted," or "comparatively weak of sight," i. e., when compared with its keenness of vision on the land.

7-12. TOV REPL BOGROPOV, &c., "which is in the vicinity of the Cimmerian Bosporus." There were two rivers named Hypanis by the ancients. The one here meant is the modern Kuban, which rises in the chain of Caucasus, and falls into the Sea of Azof, a little distance above the Cimmerian Bosporus, or Strait of Jenicali. The other Hypanis is the modern Bog. -καὶ ἅμα δυομένῳ, "and just as it goes down." Supply $\dot{\eta}\lambda i \varphi$. Literally, "and together with (the sun) going down." The dative here depends on άμα.-'Εφήμερον. The term is recognised also in modern zoology. The name Ephemera is now given to a genus of insects, which live but a few hours after becoming perfect. They appear generally a short time before sunset, flying about in the most singular manner, and descending like gnats in immense swarms. They are found in the greatest numbers in Carniola, and are used there for manure, the country-people thinking they have been unsuccessful if each does not procure twenty cart-loads of them for that purpose. In America they are rarely seen in such quantities as in Europe, and in no part of our country, indeed, are they so abundant as to be remarkable.

13-20. τὰ, "are the doings," i. e., is the practice. Supply πράγματα ἐστί.—καὶ τὰ, "as well as those."—ἐκεῖναι μὲν γὰρ, "for the former." ὑπὲρ τοῦ μὴ παραφέρεσθαι, "in order not to be carried out of their course." More literally, "carried away from (their route)."—δεδοικότες, from δείδω. —ὅταν ὑπερβάλλωσι τὸν Ταῦρον, "whenever they pass over the (range of) Mount Taurus," i. e., in their migratory flights.—olov ἐπιστομίζοντες, &c., "muzzling, as it were, and curbing (by these means) their chattering, and loquacious propensity."—ὅπως λάθωσι, "in order that they may escape observation," i. e., the observation of the eagles.—Both the stories here given are gravely repeated in substance by Ælian, Hist. An., 5, 13, and 29.

21-23. τῆς νάρκης. The account here given relates to the torpedo, a genus of fishes belonging to the family of the rays. The electrical appara tus, which has rendered this fish so remarkable, consists of small membranous tubes, disposed like honeycomb, and divided by horizontal partitions into small cells, which are filled with a mucous substance. This conformation is analogous, in many respects, to the galvanic pile. The electrical eel (gymnotus electricus) of the fresh waters of South America possesses the same power with the torpedo, but in a still more extraordinary degree $-\vartheta_i \gamma \acute{o} \tau \tau \varsigma$, 2d aor. part. act. of $\vartheta_i \gamma \gamma \acute{a} \nu \omega$.— $\beta a \rho \acute{v} \tau \eta \tau a \nu a \rho \kappa \acute{\omega} \delta \eta$, "a numb ing heaviness," i. e., a numb and heavy feeling. Page 24-27. πειραν αὐτῆς ἐπιπλέον λαμβανόντες, "obtaining an acquaint ance with it, from trial, in a more extensive degree (than others)." Literally, "obtaining a trial of it," &c., i. e., an experimental acquaintance with it.—âν ἐκπέση ζώσα, "that if it be brought alive from the water (unto the land)." Supply τοῦ ὕδατος after ἐκπέση. Literally, "that if it fall out (from the water) alive."—κατασκεδαννύντες ὕδωρ ἄνωθεν, &c., "on their pouring water down upon it from above, they feel the (torpid) affection running up along the hand," &c. Observe the nominative with the infinitive, the reference being to the same persons.—διὰ τοῦ ὕδατος τρεπομένον, &c., "through the agency of the water, changed in its nature and previous." acted upon itself," i. e., and itself previously acted upon by the numbing power of the fish. The explanation of this phenomenon is perfectly easy for modern science: the water acts as a conductor of the electric power.

28-31. δ πιννοτήρας, "the pinnoteras." This is a minute species of crab, found in the shell of the $\pi i \nu \nu a$, or pearl-muscle, and supposed by the ancients to act as a watch or guard for the latter. Hence its Greek name, from $\pi i \nu \nu a$, and $\tau \eta \rho \epsilon \omega$, "to preserve," or "keep," and hence also its other Greek appellation of $\pi_i \nu \nu o \phi \hat{\nu} \lambda a \xi$, from $\pi i \nu \nu a$, and $\phi \hat{\nu} \lambda a \xi$, "a guard," of "watch."— $\kappa a \rho \kappa_i \nu \tilde{\omega} \delta e \zeta$, "of the crab species." Literally, "crab-like."— $\kappa a \hat{\iota} \tau \tilde{\eta} \pi i \nu \nu \eta \sigma i \nu e \sigma \tau \iota$, "and associates with the pinna." The $\pi i \nu \nu a$ is a species of bivalved shellfish, of the muscle kind, and is the same with our pearl-muscle. Cuvier, in a dissertation on the crabs, &c., mentioned by the ancients, has examined all the passages relative to the pinnoteras, and its watching for the safety of the pinna, and regards the whole story as a pure invention. He informs us, also, that several other crustaceous animals have the same habit as the pinnoteras, of lodging in the shells of bivalved shellfish. (Guerin, Dict. d'Hist. Nat., s. v. Pinnothère, vol. xiii., p. 606.)-It will be observed, that we have adopted in the text the forms $\pi i \nu \nu \sigma \tau \eta \rho a \varsigma$ and $\pi i \nu \nu a$, as more correct than $\pi i \nu \sigma \tau \eta \rho a \varsigma$ and $\pi i \nu a$. Jacoba inadvertently gives the erroneous forms from the text of Reiske.

πυλωρεῖ τὴν κόγχην, "acts as gatekeeper to the shellfish, sitting down in front of it," i. e., keeps watch over the muscle, taking up its post in front.—ἑῶν ἀνεψγμένην καὶ διακεχηνυῖαν, "allowing it to remain open and gaping." Supply αὐτὴν εἶναι after ἑῶν.—ἀνεψγμένην, perf. part. pass. of ἀνοίγω.—διακεχηνυῖαν, perf. part. mid. of διαχαίνω.—προσπέση, "may come in contact with them."

56 LINE 1-2. $\pi a \rho \epsilon \iota \sigma \tilde{\eta} \lambda \vartheta \epsilon v$, "passes to the side and enters." The aorist here denotes what is habitually the case, and is therefore translated by the English present. Observe also the force of the prepositions in composition, especially $\pi a \rho \acute{a}$.— $\sigma v v \acute{\epsilon} \lambda \epsilon \iota \sigma \epsilon$, "closes." The aorist again refers to what is habitual.— $\dot{\epsilon} v \tau \delta \varsigma \ \tilde{\epsilon} \rho \kappa o v \varsigma$, "within the enclosure (of the shell)."

4-10. $\sigma \acute{v} \nu \varepsilon \sigma \tau \iota \nu$, "keeps company with."— $\delta \pi \omega \varsigma$ oùk $\acute{v} \sigma \chi \varepsilon \vartheta \acute{\eta} \sigma \varepsilon \tau \iota$, &c., 3d sing. 1st fut. indic. pass. of $\acute{v} \iota \acute{\chi} \omega$. The conjunction $\delta \pi \omega \varsigma$, like $\acute{t} \nu a$, $\acute{\omega} \varsigma$, &c., is joined either with the future indicative or with the subjunctive. In such constructions the future expresses, as in the present instance, a state that continues, or else something that will occur at an indefinite future time. On the contrary, the subjunctive indicates a transient state, occurring in particular cases, and then completely concluded.— $\check{\varepsilon} \pi \varepsilon \tau a \iota \gamma \grave{a} \rho \ a \grave{v} \tau \ddot{\rho}$, &c. The whole account is purely fabulous.— $\pi a \rho a \gamma \acute{\rho} \mu \varepsilon \nu \sigma \nu$, "being led along." Equivalent in effect to $\kappa a \iota \pi a \rho \acute{a} \vartheta \varepsilon \tau a \iota$. $-\tau \tilde{\varphi} \ \chi \acute{a} \sigma \mu a \tau$, "with his distended jaws."— $\delta \iota \acute{e} \vartheta \vartheta a \rho \tau a \iota$, from $\delta \iota a \vartheta \vartheta \varepsilon \iota \omega \omega$.— $\pi \tilde{a} \nu \ \acute{e} \mu \delta \varepsilon \vartheta \upsilon \vartheta \iota \sigma \mu \acute{e} \nu \sigma \nu$, "being comoletely ingulfed."

NOTES ON PAGES 56 AND 57.

11-16. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\nuo$ $\delta\epsilon$ $\gamma\iota\gamma\nu\omega\sigma\kappa\sigma\nu$, &c., "but, knowing that other one, J takes it up in its mouth, just as (a vessel takes up) an anchor and stows it away) within." With $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\nuo$ supply, for a literal translation, $\dot{\zeta}\omega\nu$. The reference is to the pilot-fish.— $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\kappa\alpha\vartheta\epsilon\dot{\upsilon}\delta\epsilon\iota$ $\gamma\dot{\alpha}\rho$ $a\dot{\upsilon}\tau\tilde{\varphi}$, "for the pilot-fish sleeps within him," i. e., in the mouth of the whale.— $\kappa\alpha\dot{\iota}$ $\tau\dot{\upsilon}\kappa\tilde{\eta}\tau_{05}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\eta\kappa\epsilon\nu$, &c., "and the whale, while the pilot-fish is reposing, remains stationary, and lies (as it were) at anchor." With $\dot{\alpha}\nu\alpha\pi\alpha\upsilon\phi\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\upsilon$ supply $\dot{\eta}\gamma\epsilon \mu\dot{\upsilon}\nu\varsigma.$ — $\ddot{\eta}$, "or else."— $\kappa\alpha\dot{\iota}$ $\pi\sigma\lambda\lambda\dot{\iota}$ $\delta\iota\epsilon\phi\vartheta\acute{\mu}\eta$, "and many whales are (in this way) destroyed." The aorist again refers to what is accustomed to happen.— $\kappa\alpha\vartheta\acute{\mu}\kappa\rho$ $\dot{\kappa}\kappa\psi\epsilon\rho\omega$.

18-29. τῶν γεννωμένων, "of its offspring." Literally, "of those produced (by it)."—πλησίον, "near it." The turtles always, at a certain season, visit the shore, for the purpose of depositing their eggs in the sand. —τὸ λειότατον καὶ μαλακώτατον. Supply μέρος.—ὅταν δὲ καταχώση, &c., "and whenever it has buried them up and hidden them securely from view." —τὴν ϑήλειαν. Supply χελώνην.—τρεπομένην, "being turned over." ἐναπολείπειν, "leaves on the spot."—ἐν τοσαύταις. Supply ἡμέραις. γνωρίσασα, "having recognised."—ὡς οὐδεἰς χρυσίον, &c., "as no one does a deposite of gold," i. e., each turtle recognises the spot where its eggs are buried, with even more accuracy than one does a sum of gold buried in the earth.

LINE 1-2. $\dot{\eta} \lambda i \vartheta o \varsigma$. The grammarians lay down the rule, that 57 ό λίθος refers to any ordinary stone, whereas $\dot{\eta}$ λίθος indicates a precious stone, and also any of the higher class of stones used for polishing, or for special architectural purposes. This, however, admits of so many exceptions, that the better distinction would appear to be as follows: namely, $\dot{\eta} \lambda i \vartheta \circ \varsigma$ is the more poetic form, whereas $\delta \lambda i \vartheta \circ \varsigma$ is the more common Attic prose form. (Compare Jacobs, Anth. Pal., p. 137.)-Evριπίδης. In a fragment of his Eneus, given by Suidas (s. v. 'Ηρακλεία $\lambda(\vartheta o_{\zeta}) = \mu a_{\gamma} v \tilde{\eta} \tau i v$. We must not confound this with the $\mu a_{\gamma} v \tilde{\eta} \tau i \zeta$, or λίθος μαγνήτης, mentioned by the Greek physicians. This last appears to have been a kind of talc or steatite, containing in large proportion the earth called magnesia; a name of which we may thus trace the origin, since both the loadstone and the mineral used in medicine were called "magnetic stone," from their being both found in a country named Magnesia. (Consult Moore's Anc. Mineralogy, p. 114, seqq.)- 'Hpakheiav, "the Heraclean (stone)." This is mistranslated by Bembo, Dutens, and others, "the stone of Hercules," or "the Herculean stone," as if it were so termed from its power over iron. It derives its true name, however, from the city of Heraclea, in Lydia, where probably it was found in greater abundance than elsewhere. (Salmas., Ex. Plin., 2, 1102.-Sydenham, ad Plat. Ion., § 5.)

5-10. ἄγει, "attracts." Literally, "draws (unto itself)."— ῶστε δύνασθαι, &c., "so that they are able to do the very same thing as the stone." Literally, "so as to be able to do," &c.— ταὐτὸν, for τὸ αὐτόν, and this for τὸ αὐτό.— ἡ λίθος. Supply ποιεῖ.— ἀγειν, "namely, to attract."— ἐξ ἀλλήλων ἤρτηται, "hangs connected one with another." More literally, "is connected from one another." Observe the continued force implied by the perfect, ἤοτηται being the perfect passive of ἀρτάω.— ἀνήρτηται, "is imparted by this suspension." More literally, "is connected throughout."—οῦτω νιτρῶδές ἐστι, "is so saturated with nitre." The "nitre" (νίτρον, nitrum) of the ancients is our nitrate of potass. (Compare Andréossy, Mem. sur la Vallée des lacs de Natron.— Décade Egyptienne, vol. 251

MYTHOLOGY.

14-19. $\epsilon l\sigma(ov\tau \iota \ \delta \epsilon)$, &c., "moreover, for him, on entering, the Hours first have their habitations," i. e., immediately, on one's entrance into the skies, he meets with the dwelling-place of the Hours. The idea is borrowed from Homer (Il., 5, 749, and 8, 393). In the Homeric mythology, the Hours presided over the charges of time, seasons, days, years, &c., and hence, with peculiar propriety, are called the keepers of the portals of heaven. $-i\pi a \sigma \eta \varsigma \tau \epsilon \chi v \eta \varsigma$, "of every work of art," i. e., of works of art of all kinds $-\mu \epsilon \tau a \delta \epsilon$, "and after this."— $\pi a v \tau \omega \varsigma \pi \epsilon \rho \iota \kappa a \lambda \lambda \eta$, "altogether very beautiful (of their kind)."

20-27. oi $\delta \delta \vartheta \varepsilon oi$, &c. The order is, oi $\delta \delta \vartheta \varepsilon oi e \vartheta \omega \chi o \tilde{v} \tau a \iota$, $\kappa a \vartheta \eta \mu \varepsilon \nu oi$ $\pi a \rho a Z \eta \nu i$. These words are borrowed from Homer (II., 4, 1), and hence we have the poetic form $Z \eta \nu i$, instead of $\Delta \iota i$.— $\vartheta \delta \rho \iota \sigma \tau a \iota \lambda a \lambda o \iota$, "insolent and loquacious." The first of these terms applies to Ixion, the second to Tantalus. Ixion was punished for forgetting the respect that was due to Juno; and Tantalus for divulging to mortals the secrets of the gods.— $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda a \tau \eta \nu \dot{a}\mu \delta \rho \sigma \delta a \nu \pi a \rho a \tau i \vartheta \varepsilon \nu \tau a \iota$, "but cause ambrosia to be served up before them." Literally, "to be placed by their side," referring to the ancient mode of reclining at table, and having the food in this way by one's side. Observe the use of the article with $\dot{a}\mu \delta \rho \sigma \delta a \nu \tau a \rho \sigma \sigma$, as implying renewed mention.— $\kappa a \iota \tau \sigma \vartheta \nu \epsilon \kappa \tau a \rho \sigma \varsigma \mu \varepsilon \vartheta \sigma \kappa \sigma \tau a \iota$, "and inebriate themselves with nectar." The genitive is here employed as referring to a part.

58 LINE 1-6. αὐτῆ κνίσση ἀνηνεγμένον, "carried up along with the savour." The expression αὐτῆ κνίσση is equivalent here to σὺν τῆ κνίσση.—ἀνηνεγμένον, perf. part. pass. of ἀναφέρω.—ϑνσίας ἀλλοι ἀλλας, &c., "some bring one kind of sacrifice, others another, unto the gods."—βοῦν, governed by προσάγει understood.—ὁ δἑ τις, "and some other." Equivalent to alius quis. (Dindorf, ad Aristoph. Av., 1444.)—ἰλάσκεται, "seeks to propitiate."—φιλήσας, &c. Hence the Latin verb adoro, "to adore," applying the hand to the lips literally (ad and os). This appears to have been a very ancient form of showing respect to the Deity. Mention is made of it in Job, 31, 27. with reference to the sun and moon. (Consult Böttiger, Kunst-Mythel., p. 52.)

Observe the force of the plural in $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\iota\sigma\tau\dot{\eta}$ - $\mu a \varsigma$.— $\kappa a \wr \tau \eta \nu \ a \lambda \lambda \eta \nu \ \epsilon \pi \iota \mu \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \iota a \nu$, &c., " and the other care that is still even at the present day exercised at marriages, in conjunction with the sacrifices," &c., i. e., and all those other matters that are carefully attended to at marriages, in relation to the sacrifices, &c.

33-36. και το κατάρχειν εύεργεσίας, " and to be the first to do an act of kindness." The names of the Hours, given immediately after, explain what is here meant. These names are Europia, $\Delta i \kappa \eta$, and Elphyn, or Wisdom of Legislation, Right, and Peace.

11-19. τήν τε των έλαιων, &c., "the having imparted unto men the domesticating and planting of olives, and the mode of operating upon this same fruit," i. e., and the manner of extracting oil from it. $-\dot{\epsilon}\tau\iota$ $\dot{\delta}\dot{\epsilon}$ $\pi o\lambda\lambda\dot{a}$ $\tau \tilde{\omega} v$, &c., " and, moreover, the having taught unto men many of the things connected with the other branches of (human) knowledge."-την κατασκευήν, "the forming."— $\tau \eta \nu$ συντελουμένην μουσικήν, "the melody that is produced."— $\tau \omega \nu$ φιλοτέχνων ἕργων, "of the labours that favour the advance ment of the arts."- $\dot{a}\phi' \,\dot{\omega}v$, "from all which."- $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\alpha\gamma\rho\rho\epsilon\dot{v}\epsilon\sigma\vartheta\alpha\iota$, governed by $\mu v \vartheta o \lambda o \gamma o \tilde{v} \sigma \iota$ understood.

Literally, "as receive their working through the fire." Supply as follows: kal εύρετην γενέσθαι τόσων των άλλων ὄσα, &c.—την έν ταῖς μάχαις, &c., "the energetic striving of battles." Literally, "in battles."

31-35. κατ' αὐτὴν, "belonging to it."—διὰ τῆς μαντικῆς τέχνης γινομέ-νην, "that is exercised by means of divination." The reference is to those internal maladies, which were regarded as the effect of the anger of the gods, and the remedies for which could only be obtained, as was thought, by consulting the gods through the medium of oracles. $-\sigma v \nu \epsilon \beta a v \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \epsilon a \epsilon \epsilon a \epsilon, \&c., "it happened that the sick obtained a cure." <math>-\tau a \pi \epsilon \rho i \tau \eta \nu \tau \sigma \xi \epsilon i a v.$ "the things that related to archery." Mercury is said to have caught the idea of, and to have formed, the first lyre from the shell of a tortoise. Hence the terms $\chi \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \nu \varsigma$ and testudo denote both the shell of a tortoise and a lyre, a usage introduced also into English poetry.— $\kappa a i \tau \sigma \tilde{\nu} \pi \sigma \lambda \lambda \sigma \dot{\nu} \varsigma$, &c., "and of the treasuring up many of the productions of autumn:" $\pi \sigma \lambda \lambda \sigma \dot{\nu} \varsigma \tau \tilde{\omega} \nu$ $\kappa a \rho \pi \tilde{\omega} \nu$ is here equivalent to $\pi \sigma \lambda \lambda \sigma \dot{\nu} \varsigma$.

15-26. 'Ησίοδος. The quotation in the text is from Hesiod's Theogony, v. 77, seqq.—σφεων, poetic form for σφῶν, from σφεῖς, and equivalent here to αὐτῶν. In scanning this hexameter line, σφέων and ἀπασέων must be pronounced as if written σφων and ἁπασων.—ό πολὺς ὅμιλος, "the numerous throng."—ἰδιώτας, "the unlearned." Compare the scholium cited by Cognatus (ad Lucian., de Luct., 2): Ἰδιώτης, ὁ ἀπολίτευτος, καὶ ὁ ἀμαθὴς, ἡ ἀγράμματος.—τόπον τινὰ ὑπὸ τῷ γῷ, &c., "have imagined a kind of place beneath the earth, of very great depth, as Hades."—ὑπειλήφασι, from ὑπολαμβάνω.—καὶ ζοφερὸν καὶ ἀνήλιον. This is, in fact, an explanation of the term Hades.—βασιλεύειν τοῦ χάσματος, "reigns over the wideyawning abyss." The verb βασιλεύειν τοῦ χάσματος, "and that his territory is flowed around," &c., i. e., his dominions in the lower world. καὶ ἐκ μόνων τῶν ὀνομάτων, "even in their mere names." A Zeugma operates in <math>\dot{\nu} \pi \sigma \delta \dot{\epsilon} \chi \epsilon \tau a \iota$, the verb having one meaning in connexion with $\lambda \epsilon \iota u \dot{\omega} \nu$, and another with $\pi \sigma \tau \dot{\sigma} \nu$.

MYTHOLOGICAL NARRATIONS.

16-21. τὰ περί θήραν ἀσκήσασα, "having pursued the chase and whatever pertains to it." Literally, "from passing by (the guard) and coming unto."—

 $\tau \delta \chi \dot{a} \sigma \mu a$. This was the sacred vent from which the gas or effluvia proceeded, that was regarded by the ancients as the breath of inspiration. Over this opening in the earth was placed the tripod on which the priestess sat.— $\pi a \rho a \lambda a \mu \ell \dot{a} \nu \epsilon \iota$. The use of the present tense here imparts more animation to the narrative than $\pi a \rho \epsilon \lambda a \ell \epsilon$ would have done.

23-28. ἐθήτευσε. Apollo had been banished for a season from the skies, and been compelled to serve with a mortal, as a punishment for having slain the Cyclopes.—ἡτήσατο, "asked." The middle voice here implies, that the request was made in order to gratify his own friendly feelings towards Admetus.—ϑελόντων, referring to both πατρὸς and μητρὸς, and therefore put in the plural, although the disjunctive precedes.—ὑπεραπέϑaνε, from ὑπεραποϑνήσκω.—πάλιν ἀνέπεμψεν, "sent back again (to life)."—ἡ Κόρη, "Proscrpina."

LINE 2-3. $\epsilon i \kappa a \sigma \vartheta \epsilon \nu \tau \epsilon \varsigma$, "having likened themselves." The citadel of Troy was called Pergamus.

8-14. προύθηκε, contracted for προέθηκε.— $\lambda \dot{\eta} \psi \varepsilon \tau a \iota$, from $\lambda a \mu b \dot{a} \nu \omega$. ποινὴν τῆς Γανυμήδους ἀρπαγῆς, "as a satisfaction for the carrying off of Ganymede." Ganymede was carried off, in early youth, by an eagle, to officiate as cup-bearer in the skies.—μὴ βουλομένου δὲ. Supply αὐτοῦ.

17-24. κατώκει τῆς 'Aσίας, &c., "he dwelt in that part of Asia which is now named Paphlagonia." The order for a literal translation is as follows: κατώκει περί τὴν νῦν ὀνομαζομένην Παφλαγονίαν τῆς 'Aσίας, "he dwelt in what is now called Paphlagonia, (a province) of Asia." Observe the use of περὶ in this construction, as pointing out a country or place in merely general language. (Matth., G. G., § 589.)—ἐπὶ πλεῖον, "to a greater degree (than other mortals)."—οὐ φέρων, "being unable to bear with moderation."—καὶ μετασχών κοινῆς τραπέζης, &c., "and having shared a common table with them, and full liberty of speech," i. e., having banqueted along with the gods, and conversed as freely with them as if he had been one of their number.—τὰ παρὰ τοῖς ἀθανάτοις ἀπόβϸητα, "the secrets of the immortals." The husband of Niobe was the Theban Amphion.—καὶ τῆς Δητοῦς, &c., " and declared herself more favoured, in point of offspring, than Latona."—συνέδη αὐτὴν ὑφ' ἕνα καιρὸν, &c., "it came to pass that she was at one and the same instant both favoured in, and deprived of, her offspring." Literally, "it came to pass that she was quickly, at one and the same time," &c.— $\Sigma i \pi v \lambda ov$. Sipylus was a mountain in Lydia near the northern confines.— $\chi ε i π v \lambda ov$. There is a beautiful allusion to this in the Antigone of Sophocles, v. 817, seqq., ed. Herm.

LINE 2-9. $\kappa\nu\nu\eta\gamma\delta\varsigma$ έδιδάχθη, "was taught to be a hunter," i. e., was brought up a hunter. The plain Greek would have been, κδιδάχθη την κυνηγε΄ κήν, "was taught the art of hunting."—κατεβρώθη, Page from $\kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \delta \iota \delta \rho \omega \sigma \kappa \omega$.—Ki $\vartheta \alpha \iota \rho \tilde{\omega} \nu \iota$. Cithæron was a mountain nearly 63 midway between Thebes and Corinth.— $\lambda ovo\mu \hat{\epsilon} v\eta v$, "bathing." Middle voice.— $\epsilon i \zeta \hat{\epsilon} \lambda a \phi ov$, "into that of a stag." Equivalent to $\epsilon i \zeta \hat{\epsilon} \lambda \hat{a} \phi ov$ μορφήν. Erroneously rendered by some, "yearly."

33-34. $\mu \epsilon \mu \eta \nu \omega c$, from $\mu a (\nu o \mu a \iota) - \nu o \mu (\zeta \omega \nu \kappa \delta \pi \tau \epsilon \iota \nu)$, "thinking that he was cutting."

LINE 1-4. έαυτον. Heyne reads αύτον, as referring, not to the 64 father, but to the son. $-\delta \vartheta \varepsilon \delta \varsigma$. Apollo, at Delphi. $-\Pi a \gamma \gamma a \tilde{\iota} \delta \nu$ Mount Pangæum, apparently connected with the central chain of όρος. Rhodope and Hæmus, branched off in a southeasterly direction, and closed upon the coast of Thrace, at the defile of Acontisma. It was famed for its mines. The modern name is Pundhar Dag.

6-10. καὶ τὴν Ἰνδικὴν, &c. From this to $\sigma \tau \eta \sigma \sigma \varsigma$ appears to be a later addition which has crept into the text of Apollodorus (from whom the extract is taken), after having been written by some on the margin of the MS. It is evidently out of place. $-\epsilon i \lambda \eta \phi \omega_{\zeta}$, from $\lambda a \mu b a \nu \omega$. $-\delta \iota \epsilon \kappa \omega \lambda \nu \epsilon \tau a \tilde{\nu} \tau a$ γίγνεσθαι, "endeavoured to prevent these things from taking place."

15-20. Τυβρηνών ληστρικήν, &c., " he hired a pirate-galley navigated by Tyrrhenians." The Tyrrhenians of antiquity were notorious for their piratical habits.— $\dot{a}\pi\epsilon\mu\pi\omega\lambda\eta\sigma\sigma\nu\tau\epsilon\varsigma$, "intending to sell him there." 30-34. Kakeivn, for kai ekeivn.-ekov, "having got out (of his cradle)." In the text of Apollodorus, whence this extract is taken, the words $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\iota}$ $\tau\sigma\dot{\upsilon}$ λίκνου κείμενος immediately precede ἐκδὺς. These show at once the reference in the latter term.--- $\dot{v}\pi\dot{\sigma}$ $\tau\omega\nu$ $i\chi\nu\omega\nu$, "by their tracks." Observe the use of $\dot{v}\pi\dot{o}$ here, in place of $\delta\iota\dot{a}$.

LINE 1-8. $\tau \circ \tilde{\iota} \varsigma \pi \circ \sigma \tilde{\iota}$. Supply $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \beta \circ \tilde{\omega} \nu$. Jacobs and Heyne are 65 directly at issue here, the latter making $\pi o \sigma i$ refer to the feet of Mercury, not to those of the oxen. (Heyne, ad Apollod., 3, 10, 2.) He refers, in support of his opinion, to the Homeric hymn to Metcury ; but Ja-

The reference, of course, is to a land-animal of the kind. $-\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \kappa a \vartheta \dot{\omega} \rho a \varsigma$, from $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \kappa a \vartheta \dot{\alpha} \rho \omega$. $-\epsilon \dot{\epsilon} \varsigma \tau \dot{\sigma}$ 65 кõtoς, "within the hollow of the shell."-кай тойс катогкойитас, &c., "and inquired of those who dwelt there (whether they had seen his cattle)." We may suppose the words $\epsilon i \tau a_{\varsigma} \beta \delta a_{\varsigma} i \delta \delta \epsilon v$ to be here understood. ούκ έχειν δε είπειν, "that they could not tell, however."-ποι ποτε, "whither then." ποτε is here equivalent to the Latin tandem.— $\dot{\eta}\lambda\dot{a}\vartheta\eta\sigma a\nu$, from έλαύνω.-διὰ τὸ μη εύρεῖν, &c. The order of construction is, διὰ τὸ μη δύνασθαι εύρεῖν ἴχνος.

Observe the force of the middle - ἕμελλον ἕχειν, &c., "they intended to enjoy each peculiar honours."—κατὰ μέσην τὴν ἀκρόπολιν, &c., "he caused a sea to appear in the middle of the Acropolis." What is here called a sea was in reality a salt spring, or well. It is sometimes called . the well of the Erechtheum. The popular belief was, that, whenever the south wind blew, this well emitted a noise like the roaring of waves. (Pausan., 1, 26.)—'Ερεχθηΐδα, "Erechtheis," i. e., the spring or well of the Erechtheum.

29-33. ¿laíav. This was the sacred olive-tree, to which the Attic writers so often refer. It is said to have been in existence as late as the second century of our era.— $\Pi a v \delta \rho o \sigma i \omega$. The Pandrosium was a small chapel on the Acropolis, forming part of the double temple called Erech-The following account will serve to remove every difficulty on theum. this subject. "The Erechtheum was a double building, of which the eastern division was consecrated to the worship of Minerva Polias, the protectress of the city; and the western, including the northern and southern porticoes, was called the Pandrosium, and was sacred to Pandrosos, the deified daughter of Cecrops. On the same site had formerly stood the temple of Erechtheus; and from this circumstance, as well as from the fact that his altar still remained, the entire building retained the name of Erechtheum." (Stuart and Revett's Athens, abridged, p. 37, seqq., Lond., 1837).—'Αθηνῶν καὶ Ποσειδῶνα διαλύσας. Evidently a mere interpola-tion; certainly not needed.—ή χώρα τῆς 'Αθηνῶς ἐκρίθη, "the country was adjudged to be Minerva's." The genitive of possession, where we may supply Elval.

Supply αὐτῷ.—τὰς ἀκοὰς, referring to Tiresias, where we may supply τοῦ Τειρεσίου.—πῶσαν ὀρνίθων ψωνὴν, "every note of birds," i. e., the notes of all kinds of birds.—σκῆπτρον, "a staff." —ὁμοίως τοῖς βλέπουσιν, "equally as well as those who see." Literally, "equally with those that see."

16-17. $\pi\rho\tilde{\sigma}\tau a\ \mu\tilde{e}\nu$, &c. The first labour of Hercules was the slaying of the Nemean lion, which ravaged the country around Nemea in Argolis. The hero choked it to death, and wore the skin as a trophy.— $\Delta\epsilon\tilde{v}\tau\epsilon\rho\sigma\nu\ \dot{e}\nu$ $\Lambda\epsilon\rho\nu\eta$, &c. The second labour was the destroying of an immense hydra or water-snake, in the marshes of Lerna, in Argolis. Alcæus, the ancient poet, gave it nine heads; and Apollodorus the same number as Alcæus, making eight of them to have been mortal, and the middle one immortal. Others assign it a hundred heads, &c. (Heyne, ad Apollod., 2, 5, 2.)

18-20. τὸ τρίτον αὐτ' ἐπὶ τοῖς, "thirdly, again, in addition to these labours." τοῖς is by poetic usage for τούτοις.— Ἐρνμάνθιον κάπρον. The Erymanthian boar, rushing forth from the mountain and forest of Erymanthus, in Arcadia, ravaged the country around Psophis.— χρυσόκερων ἕλαφον, &c. 21-23. 'Aµaζovíδoç. This was the Amazonian Hippolyte. The seat of her rule was the country around the river Thermodon, in Pontus .-ζωστήρα φαεινόν, "the bright girdle." The ζωστήρ of the Amazons, as delineated in ancient sculpture, passed around the hips, exactly like the one worn by the Homeric heroes. It was not, as some suppose, immediately below the bosom. (Winckelmann, Gesch. der Kunst des Alt., vol. iii., p. 23.)-Αὐγείου πολλην κόπρον ἐξεκάθηρεν, "he cleansed away the abundant dung of Augeas," i. e., of the stables of Augeas. Hercules cleansed the stables of Augeas, king of Elis, by causing the collected waters of the Alpheus and Elian Peneus to pass through them. These stables, containing immense herds of cattle, had never before been cleansed. $-\epsilon\kappa \ K\rho\eta\tau\eta\vartheta\varepsilon$, an old poetic form of expression, tinged with pleonasm, for the later $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa$ $K\rho\dot{\eta}\tau\eta\varsigma$. The ordinary termination is $-\vartheta\epsilon\nu$, but here the final y is omitted in order to keep the preceding vowel short, which would otherwise be long by position. This is very frequently done.--ήλασε, from $i\lambda a \hat{\nu} \omega \cdots \tau a \tilde{\nu} \rho o \nu$. According to the ancient mythologists, this bull, after having been brought to Eurystheus by Hercules, was set at liberty, and, passing over the inimediate country to the Marathonian plain, became known as the Marathonian bull, subdued by Theseus. (Apollod., 2, 5, 7.)

24-27. Διομήδεος $\[[mathbb{i} \pi \pi \sigma v \varsigma.]\]$ The horses of Diomede, king of the Bistones in Thrace. LINE 3-4. ' $\lambda\lambda\kappa\mu\eta\nu\eta\varsigma$. Alcmena, the mother of Hercules.— 67 ' $\lambda\mu\phi\iota\tau\rho\omega\nu\alpha$. Amphitryon, the reputed father of the hero.

9-13. ω_{ς} δὲ ἕμαθεν ἄτρωτον ὄντα, "but when he perceived that he was invulnerable." He observed that the arrows did not penetrate.—την ἑτέραν εἴσοδον, "the one entrance:" ἕτερος, like alter in Latin, refers to one of two.—κατέσχεν ἄγχων, "he kept squeezing it." Literally, "he held on, squeezing it."

15-24. ἐπέταξεν. Supply Εὐρυσθεὺς.—ὅρνεις. Pausanias (8, 22) calls them ἀνδροφάγοι. According to some of the poets, they had iron wings, and shot forth their plumes from them like so many arrows.—χάλκεα κρόταλα, "a brazen rattle." Apollonius Rhodius (2, 1055) calls the instrument in question, χαλκείην πλατάγην.—ἐτόξευσεν αὐτάς. According to others, he merely drove them away. Compare the poetic extract just given.

28-34. ψαύοντα γὰρ γῆς, &c., "for it happened that he became very strong, whenever he touched the earth." Literally, "when touching."— $\exists ιε ξ ήει$, from $\delta ι έ ξ ειμι. - ἕ θ ν εν$, "used to sacrifice." - τὴν ἐπιστήμην, "in is knowledge." Accusative of nearer definition.

(Pausan., 1, 17.)—λέγοντος, "bidding them," put for κελεύοντος. —οἱ 'Aθηναῖοι, &c., instead of οἱ 'Aθηναῖοι οἰκ ἐξέδοσαν, ἀλλὰ πόλεμον ὑπέστησαν.—"Υλλος, one of the sons of Hercules.—κερκίσι. Heyne prefers κερκίδι in the singular.

14-20. διὰ τὰς ἀπὸ τῆς, "in consequence of the plots of their step-mother," i. e., of Ino. Literally, "in consequence of the plots proceeding from their step-mother." The preposition ἀπό imparts additional strength to the meaning, as is apparent from the literal translation.—αὐτῶν, referring to Phrixus and Helle.—κατά τινα θεῶν πρόνοιαν, "in accordance with a certain providential admonition on the part of the gods."—ἀποπεσεῖν, from ἀποπίπτω.—ήν, for καὶ ταύτην. The plainer Greek for the whole clause would be, η̂ ἀπ' ἐκείνης Ἑλλήσποντος ὀνομασθῆναι λέγεται.—κατενεχ-ψῆναι, from καταφέρω.

24-29. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\pi\varepsilon\sigma\varepsilon\tilde{\iota}\nu$, depending on $\mu\nu\varthetao\lambda o\gamma o\tilde{\nu}\sigma\iota$ understood.— $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\varepsilon\nu\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\kappa\omega\sigma\iota$, rom $\dot{a}\pi o\phi\dot{\epsilon}\rho\omega$.— $\kappa a\tau a\delta\varepsilon\tilde{\iota}\xi a\iota$ $\vartheta\dot{\iota}\varepsilon\iota\nu$ $\tau o\dot{\iota}\varsigma$ $\xi\dot{\epsilon}\nu o\nu\varsigma$, "he introduced the custom of sacrificing strangers." More literally, "he pointed out, or indicated, the sacrificing of strangers."— $\tau o\lambda\mu\dot{\eta}\sigma a\iota$, optative mood, and the final syllable being long, the acute stands, of course, on the penult. On the other hand, in $\tau o\lambda\mu\ddot{\eta}\sigma\alpha\iota$ of the infinitive, the final syllable is considered short in accentuation, and hence the circumflex accent is placed on the penult, the first aorist infin. act. being always accented on the penultimate syllable.

31-32. φυλάξασθαι, "to beware of." Literally, "to guard himselt 259 68 against." Observe the force of the middle.— $\dot{\eta}\gamma\nu\delta\epsilon\iota$, 'he under stood not."— $\check{\epsilon}\gamma\nu\omega$, "he discovered its meaning."

More liter ally, "by one of the citizens."— $\pi\rho\sigma\delta\epsilon\tau a\tau\tau\sigma v \ \dot{a}v \ a\dot{v}\tau\tilde{\phi}$, "I would order him."

70 LINE 1-3. $\delta \tau \varepsilon \, \delta \nu$, equivalent to $\delta \tau a \nu$.— $\mu \eta \kappa a \tau a \lambda \delta \delta \omega \sigma \iota$. Supply $\tau \delta \delta \iota \omega \kappa \delta \mu \varepsilon \nu o \nu$.—'Extra dow. Apollodorus, from whom this is taken, makes a singular error here in geography. The islands called Echinades were at the mouth of the river Achelous, which separated Acarnania from Ætolia, whereas the Strophades were far to the south, off the coast of the lower part of Elis. It cannot be said in his defence, that the earlier name of the Strophades was probably Echinades, and that there were thus two clusters of the same name; for the first name of the Strophades was $\Pi \lambda \omega \tau a \iota$, the Flotæ. (Heyne, ad loc.)

5-8. γενομένη κατὰ τὴν ἠἴόνα, "having reached the shore."—πίπτει, "she falls and dies."—'Απολλώνιος. Apollonius, the author of a peem on the Argonautic expedition.—δούσας, accus. plur. fem. 2d aor. part. act. of δίδωμι.

Hence their name, from σύν, "together," and πλήσσω, "to strike," or "dash." They were also called Cyaneæ (Kvaνέαι), from their dark colour.

19-27. καταφρονοῦντας, "despising them," i. e., caring nothing for their threatening movements.—έὰν δὲ ἀπολομένην. Supply ἰδωσιν αὐτὴν.—μὴ πλεῖν βιάζεσθαι. "not to force a passage." Literally, "not to force a sailing (through)."—ή σύμπτωσις, "the collision."—συλλαδομένης "Ηρας, Juno having aided."—τὰ ἄκρα τῶν ἀφλάστων, &c., "the ship having the extremity of her stern ornaments shorn away."—ἕστησαν, "stood still." στῆναι παντελῶς, "to stop completely."

LINE 1-2. $\varepsilon l\chi \varepsilon \gamma \partial \rho$, $\lambda a \delta \partial v$, &c., "for he had in his possession, having received them from Minerva, the one half of those which Cadmus had sown at Thebes." The expression $\varepsilon l\chi \varepsilon \lambda a \delta \partial v$ is more definite than $\varepsilon l\lambda \eta \phi \varepsilon l$ would have been, and is analogous, moreover, to the Latin habebat acceptos.— δv , by attraction for $\delta v c$. The full clause would be $\tau o \delta c$ $\eta \mu (\sigma \varepsilon l c \tau o \delta \tau \sigma v o \delta c c c \tau c \sigma \varepsilon c \mu \varepsilon v, the aorist.$

4-8. αὐτοῦ ἔρωτα ἴσχει, " conceives a passion for him." – τῆς ἘΩκεανοῦ, " the daughter of Oceanus," i. e., one of the Oceanīdes. – ἐγχειριεῖν, Attic contracted future for ἐγχειρίσειν, from ἐγχειρίζω. – ὀμόση, from ὅμνυμι.

10-11. φάρμακον, "an unguent," i. e., a magic preparation.—καταζευγνύναι μέλλοντα, "when about to yoke." The whole clause, being arranged at the same time in the order of construction, is equivalent to και ἐκέλευσεν αὐτὸν, μέλλοντα καταζευγνύναι τοὺς ταύρους, χρῖσαι τούτῷ τήν τε ἀσπίδα, &c.

14-17. ἐδήλωσε δὲ αὐτῷ, "she pointed out to him, moreover," i. e., she warned him.—μέλλειν ἀναδύεσθαι, "will arise." 19-25. $\chi\rho\iota\sigma\dot{\alpha}\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\varsigma$, "having anointed himself," i. e., his person and his arms. Observe the force of the middle.— $\delta\rho\mu\dot{\eta}\sigma\alpha\nu\tau\alpha\varsigma$, "having rushed upon him."— $\dot{\alpha}\nu\dot{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\lambda\lambda\sigma\nu$. The imperfect here is very graphic. Literally, "more (than one or two)." The imperfect $\dot{\epsilon}\omega\rho\alpha$ shows that the reference here is to detached parties.— $\mu\alpha\chi\sigma\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\sigma\sigma\varsigma$ $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\sigma\sigma\varsigma$. They fell into a dispute with one another about the stones, imagining that some one of their own number had thrown them.

28-36. νυκτὸς, "by night." Part of time is put in the genitive.— ϕv λάσσοντα. Supply αὐτὸ.—τοῖς φαρμάκοις, "by her magic preparations," i. e., by throwing it something to eat, which lulled it to sleep.—ἀπογνοὺς, "having given up all idea of," from ἀπογιγνώσκω.—ταύρου alμa σπασάμενος, "having drunk bull's blood." This was a very common mode of self destruction among the ancients.

LINE 4-8. $\pi \epsilon \rho i \, \delta \nu \, \eta \delta \iota \kappa \eta \vartheta \eta$, "for the things in which he had been wronged," i. e., for the injuries he had received at the hands of Pelias: $\delta \nu$ is by attraction for a, and the clause is equivalent to $\pi \epsilon \rho i \tau \delta \nu$ $\delta \delta \iota \kappa \eta \mu \delta \tau \omega \lambda \eta \delta \iota \kappa \eta \vartheta \eta \, \vartheta \pi \delta \tau \sigma \delta \Pi \epsilon \lambda i \sigma \upsilon$.— $\kappa \epsilon \iota \rho \delta \nu \epsilon \xi \epsilon \delta \xi \epsilon \tau \sigma$, "he waited for an opportunity."— $a \vartheta \tau \tilde{\omega} \delta i \kappa \alpha \varsigma \, \vartheta \pi \sigma \sigma \chi \tilde{\eta}$, "may render him full atonement." $\vartheta \pi \sigma s \chi \tilde{\eta}$ from $\vartheta \pi \epsilon \chi \omega$. Observe the force of the plural in $\delta i \kappa \alpha \varsigma$.

10-12. διὰ φαρμάκων, "by means of drugs."—νέον, "young again." τοῦ πιστεῦσαι χάριν, "for the sake of inspiring them with confidence." Literally, "for the sake of their trusting (in her)."—πιστεύσασαι, "having confided."

16-22. $\phi \delta \omega v$, "by singing," i. e., by the power of song. $-\delta \eta \chi \vartheta \epsilon i \sigma \eta \varsigma$, 261

NOTES ON PAGES 72, 73, AND 74.

72 from $\delta \dot{a}\kappa \nu \omega$.— $\epsilon \dot{c} \dot{c} \dot{a} \delta ov$, "to Hades." Supply $\delta \tilde{\omega} \mu a$ or $o I \kappa o \nu$.-- $\dot{v}\pi \dot{c}\sigma \chi c \tau o$, from $\dot{v}\pi \iota \sigma \chi \nu \dot{c}o \mu a \iota$.— $\pi o \rho c \nu \dot{o} \mu c \nu o c$, "as he goes along," i. e., on his way back to the upper world.— $\dot{a}\pi \iota \sigma \tau \tilde{\omega} \nu$, "disobeying," equivalent here to $\dot{a}\pi \epsilon \iota \vartheta \tilde{\omega} \nu$.

25-34. τὴν ἡλικίαν, "in years." Accusative of nearer definition. παραχωρῆσαι τοῦ τεθρίππου, "to yield up to him his four-horse car." Literally, "to retire from his four-horse car (for him)."—κρατεῖν τῶν ἡνιῶν, "to manage the reins." Literally, "to control the reins." The verb κρατεῖν here governs the genitive, as being equivalent, in fact, to κράτος ἔχειν.—ἑξενεχθῆναι, from ἐκφέρω.—πλανωμένους, "wandering." Middle voice.—καὶ ποιῆσαι τὸν νῦν, &c, "and formed the circular path which is now called the milky way," i. e., the arched or curved path.—ἐπὶ τοῖς γεγενημένοις, "at what had taken place."

73 LINE 2-8. τὰς ἐκβολὰς. The ancients gave the Po seven months. —τοῦ νῦν καλουμένου, "of what is now called."—τὸ δὲ παλαιὸν προσαγορευομένου, "but was anciently styled."—κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν, "yearly." —ἀποτελεῖν, "makes."

10-16. καὶ πῦρ, "fire also."—ἐν νάρθηκι, "in a stalk of the ferula." The νάρθηξ of the Greeks is our ferula, or giant fennel. It is a large plant, growing to the height of six or eight feet. The stalk is thick, and full of a fungous pith, fit for tinder, and used for that purpose even at the present day in Sicily. Hence the fable, that Prometheus stole the celestial fire, and brought it to earth in a stalk of the ferula. (Consult Martyn, ad Virg., Eclog., 10, 25.)—ἤσθετο, from aἰσθάνομαι.--προσηλωθεἰς, following διετέλεσε in construction.—ἀριθμον, "for a period." Literally, "for a number."—aὐξανόμενον, "which grew again." Literally, "increasing." -κλαπέντος, 2d aor. part. pass. of κλέπτω.

19-23. βασιλεύων, governing the genitive, as being equivalent to βασι λεὺς ὤν.—πρώτην γυναῖκα, "as the first female." –τὸ χαλκοῦν γένος, "the brazen race," i. e., the race of the brazen age.—ύποθεμένον, "having suggested the idea."—ἐνθέμενος. Observe the force of the middle, as implying that this was done for his own benefit.

26-35. $\epsilon l_{\varsigma} \tau a \pi \lambda \eta \sigma i ov$, &c., "to the lofty mountains that were near." Supply $\delta v \tau a$ after $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma i ov$.— $v \dot{v} \kappa \tau a \varsigma$ $i \sigma a \varsigma$, "an equal number of nights." — $\kappa \dot{a} \kappa \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$, for $\kappa a \dot{\iota} \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$.— $\Delta \iota t \Phi v \xi i \omega$, "to Jove, the god of escape," i. e., who affords the means of escape, or who facilitates escape.— $o \vartheta \varsigma \mu \epsilon v$, &c., "as many as," &c. Literally, "what ones."— $\delta \vartheta \epsilon v \kappa a \lambda a o \lambda$, &c., "whence also they, who were thus produced, were figuratively called $\lambda a o \lambda$ from the word $\lambda \tilde{u} a \varsigma$, 'a stone.'" With $\dot{\omega} v \rho \mu \dot{a} \sigma \vartheta \eta \sigma a v$ supply of $o \vartheta \tau \omega \varsigma \gamma \epsilon \gamma \epsilon v \eta \mu \dot{\epsilon} v o \iota$. The etymology given in the text is, of course, good for nothing.

74 LINE 1-3. $\dot{\epsilon}av\tau\dot{\rho}v$ $\dot{\epsilon}lvai$ Δia , "that he himself was Jove." As emphasis is here required, the pronoun is not only expressed, but also put in the accusative.— $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon ivov$, "from that deity."— $\dot{\epsilon}\xi\eta\rho a\mu\mu\dot{\epsilon}vag$, from $\xi\eta\rho aiv\omega.$ — $\lambda\epsilon b\eta\tau\omega v \chi a\lambda\kappa \tilde{\omega}v$. The dried hides would produce a rattling, the brazen caldrons a hollow, rumbling sound. Salverte sees, in the legend of Salmoneus, an account of one who understood, even in that distant age, the art of drawing down the electric fluid from the clouds, and producing, in this way, the most fearful explosions. (Des Sciences Occultes, vol. ii., p. 160.)

14-19. καὶ αὐτοὶ, "themselves also," i. e., in like manner.—παύσασθαι, to cease from." Literally, "to cause himself to cease from."—ἅμα μὲν, both."—ἅμα δὲ καὶ, "and at the same time also."-μνησικακῶν, "enter-262

Laining secret resentment against them." More plainly and literally, "harbouring a grudge against them."— $\Delta \mu o \lambda \delta \gamma \epsilon \iota$, "agreed to." $-\Delta \varsigma \delta \delta \epsilon \kappa \lambda \eta \rho \omega \sigma a \nu \tau \sigma \tau \delta \delta \gamma \epsilon \iota$, "and when they had arranged by lot their respective nuptials," i. e., had drawn lots for their respective brides.

23-28. $i\nu \tau \tilde{\eta} \Lambda i \rho \nu \eta$, "in the marsh of Lerna." Supply $\lambda i \mu \nu \eta$.— $i\kappa i$. $\vartheta \eta \rho a \nu$. They are said to have been purified with the water of the Lernean marsh or lake, a circumstance that gave rise subsequently to certain mystic rites called Lernæa.— $i j_{\gamma} \gamma \mu \nu \iota \kappa \delta \nu i \delta \sigma i \nu i \delta \delta \kappa \epsilon \nu$, "he gave as prizes, in a gymnastic contest, to those who conquered." More iterally, "he gave, for a gymnastic contest, to those who conquered." Danaus appointed games, in which his daughters were assigned as prizes to the victors.

31-34. $\xi_{\chi o \nu \tau \iota} \gamma \dot{a} \rho \ a \dot{v} \tau \tilde{\rho}$, "for he having." To be rendered as if it were the dative absolute. In strictness, however, the dative $a \dot{v} \tau \tilde{\rho}$ is connected in construction with $\kappa o \iota \mu \omega \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \varphi$. Hence the literal translation will be, "for unto him having," or "since for him having."— $\kappa o \iota \mu \omega \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \varphi$, "as he slept."

LINE 2-7. $\tau \tilde{\varphi}$ δυναμέν φ λῦσαι, "to him that was able to solve it," 75 1. e., to whosoever was able, &c.—δι' ἀπορίαν, "through an utter inability (to explain it)."— ηv δε τὸ προτεθεν, &c., "now what was pro vosed by the sphinx was this."— τi ἐστι τὸ αὐτὸ, &c., "what animal is at the same time a biped," &c. Literally, "what same animal is a biped," &c.—άλλ' ὁπόταν, &c. This and the succeeding line are not in the text of Diodorus Siculus, from whom the remainder of the extract is taken, but are part of a poetical version of the enigma of the sphinx.—πλείστοισι πόδεσσι, poetic forms for πλείστοις ποσί.—ἕνθα, equivalent here to τότε. The order of construction is, ἕνθα μένος πέλει (i. e., ἐστιν) ἀφαυρότατον γυίοισιν (for γυίοις) αὐτοῦ.

8-14. $\dot{a}\pi opov\mu \dot{\epsilon}v \omega v$, "being completely at a loss."— $\dot{a}\pi \epsilon \phi \dot{\eta}v a \tau o$, "explained it." Literally "showed forth (its meaning for himself)," i. e., from his own resources of mind.— $\check{a}v\vartheta\rho\omega\pi ov\ \epsilon ivat\ \tau o\ \pi\rho o \dot{\delta}\lambda\eta\vartheta \dot{\epsilon}v$, "that the thing proposed for consideration was man." $\pi\rho o \delta\lambda\eta\vartheta \dot{\epsilon}v$, from $\pi\rho o \dot{\delta}\dot{\alpha}\lambda\omega$.— $\tau \eta v\ \mu\eta \tau \dot{\epsilon}\rho a$, "his mother," referring to Jocasta.— $\tau \tilde{\omega}\ \lambda \dot{\upsilon} c a v \tau i$, &c., "who was proposed as a prize to him that solved the enigma," i. e., to whosoever should solve it.

17-20. ἐπὶ τὸν αὐτῆς γάμον, "in quest of her hand." More literally, "on account of a union with her," or "for her marriage."—ἐδεδοίκει, "was afraid." As δέδοικα has the force of a present ("I am afraid"), so the pluperfect here is to be rendered as an imperfect.—κριθέντος, "having been selected."—προκριθεὶς, "selected in preference to the rest." Observe the force of πρό.

24-36. 'Η Θέτις, "the goddess Thetis." Observe the force of the article.— ἐγκρυδοῦσα, 2d aor. part. act. of ἐγκρύπτω.— δ ἦν αὐτῷ, &c., "what was mortal in him being derived from his father."—μεθ' ἡμέραν, "by day." Literally, "after day (was come)."—ἑπιτηρήσας, "having watched her."— πρὸς Νηρείδας. She was one of the Nereids, or sea-nymphs.—ὑπερέβαλεν, "surpassed (all human efforts)." More freely, "was excessive." We may supply πῶσαν ἀνθρωπίνην δύναμιν, or something equivalent.

1-10. oi $\pi\rho o\varepsilon\sigma\tau \tilde{\omega}\tau\varepsilon\varsigma\tau \tilde{\omega}\nu\pi \delta\lambda\varepsilon\omega\nu$, "the rulers of the (different) 76 entires." More literally, "they who stood at the head of," &c.— $\tau \dot{\alpha}\chi\iota\sigma\tau$ " $\dot{\omega}\nu\varepsilon\dot{\nu}\rho\dot{\varepsilon}\sigma\vartheta \omega\iota$, "that they would very speedily find." Observe the force of the middle, literally, "that they would find for themselves."- τυχύντες, "having obtained." Literally, "having met with. '-76 τῶν Ἐλλήνων, "in behalf of all the Greeks." Literally, "a common altar of the Greeks."- av διετέλεσεν, "he continued to live."- Κόρη, Proserpina. — $\pi a \rho \epsilon \delta \rho \epsilon \dot{\nu} \epsilon \nu \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \epsilon \dot{\nu} o \iota \varsigma$, "to sit as a judge with those deities," i. e., to be an associate judge (or what the Romans called an assessor, who sat by the side of the prætor, and aided him with his counsel in deciding). In the same way Æacus became a $\pi i \rho \epsilon \delta \rho o \varsigma$ to Pluto and Proserpina.

12-16. των άριστείων. The "prize of valour," on this occasion, was Hesione, daughter of Laomedon.-Θέτιδι τη Νηρέως, &c., "united himself with Thetis, the daughter of Nereus, a mortal with an immortal."-- Kal μόνου τούτου, &c., "and they say, that, at the nuptials of this individual alone, of all that ever existed, was a marriage song sung by the gods."— $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \pi \rho o \gamma \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu \eta \mu \epsilon \nu \omega \nu$. Literally, "of those that had previously been."

18-28. Oi, equivalent here, as standing at the head of a clause, to $\kappa \alpha i$ υύτοι. A similar usage occurs in the case of qui, in Latin.—έπι τοὺς Bapbúpovç. The allusion here is to the Trojan war.— $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa a \tau \dot{\epsilon} \rho \omega \vartheta \epsilon \nu$, "on sither side," i. e., on the side of the Greeks and that of the Trojans.— $a\pi o\lambda \epsilon\iota\phi \vartheta \epsilon \nu \tau o \varsigma$, "having been left behind." More literally, "having been left out."-τῶν ἄλλων οὐδενος, "to no one of the other (Grecian) warriors." -έπειδη Τροίαν συνεξείλεν, "when he had aided in taking Troy." συνεξείλεν, from συνεξαιρέω. Observe the force of σύν in composition. άφικόμενος είς Κύπρον. He was banished from Salamis by his father, for not having avenged the death of his brother Ajax.

30-35. τοὺς διφυεῖς, "the race of twofold nature," i. e., mai. and horse. —ἕπαυσεν, "quelled." Literally, "caused to cease."—τὸ γένος, "the entire race," referring to the Centaurs.— $\delta a \sigma \mu \partial \nu$, "as a tribute."— $o \hat{\nu}_{s}$ id $\hat{\omega}_{\nu}$. "having seen whom." More freely, "and when he saw these." Equiva lent to καί ώς είδε τούτους.

LINE 3-5. $\tau \tilde{\eta}_{\varsigma} \phi \hat{\upsilon} \sigma \varepsilon \omega_{\varsigma}$, "the creature."— $\tau o \hat{\upsilon}_{\varsigma} \mu \hat{\upsilon}_{\upsilon} \pi a \tilde{\iota} \delta a_{\varsigma}$, "the youths and maidens." Analogous here to our common English ex-77 pression, "the young people." $-o\tilde{v}\tau\omega\varsigma$ δεινοῦ πρυστάγματος, "from so dreadful a tribute imposed upon it."

DIALOGUES.

7-11. olova, "dost thou know ?" by syncope for oldaova, and this, with what grammarians call the Æolic paragoge, for $oldag. - \tau \eta v \kappa \alpha \lambda \eta v$, "that beautiful girl." Supply $\pi a \tilde{\iota} \delta a - \tau \tilde{\eta} \nu$ 'Iù $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \iota \varsigma$, "thou meanest Io." The article here becomes very graphic in a literal translation: "thou art talking of the Io," i. e., the far-famed Io.-έκείνη, "that Io."-τῶ $r\rho \delta \pi \omega \delta' \epsilon v \eta \lambda \lambda \delta \gamma \eta$; "but in what way was she changed ?" $\tau \tilde{\omega}$ is here the Attic form for the interrogative $\tau i \nu \iota$.— $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \eta \lambda \lambda \dot{a} \gamma \eta$, from $\dot{\epsilon} \nu a \lambda \lambda \dot{a} \sigma \sigma \omega$.

12-15. άλλὰ καὶ, &c., "nor this alone, but she has also contrived," &c. The particles ἀλλὰ καὶ are here elliptical. Supply as follows: οὐ μόνον δε τοῦτο ἐποίησε ἀλλὰ καὶ, &c.--τῆ κακοδαίμονι, "against the unhappy girl." Supply παίδι.- "Αργον τούνομα, "Argus, by name." Literally, "as to his name." $\tau o \dot{v} v o \mu a$ for $\tau \dot{o} \dot{o} v o \mu a$.— $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \eta \sigma e v$, "she has placed orer her," from equotion jui - - un avos un, " being sleepless himself " 284

Page 17-22. καταπτάμενος, ·· having flown down," from καταπέτομαι. -έκει που, "somewhere there."— Ισιν ποίησον, "make her Isis." 77

Isis was & celebrated Egyptian deity, and both she and Io were, in fact, types of agriculture and fertility. Hence the identity here alluded to .ro ho: nov, " for the time to cory." Neuter accusative of the adjective taken as an adverb. It is, in fact, however, an elliptical expression, and the same as το λοιπον μέρος τοῦ χρόνου.-τοῖς ἐκεῖ, "to those who are there," i. e., to the Egyptians. Supply, for a literal translation, τοῖς ἀνθρώποις οὖσιν έε: .- καί τον Νείλον άναγέτω, "and let her raise the Nile," i. e., let her preside over the inundations of the Nile. As the fertility of Egypt depended on the overflowings of the Nile, Isis, the great type of fertility, would, of course, he supposed to preside over and regulate these.- avéµovç Isis, as the great parent of fertility, sends genial winds. $-\sigma\omega\zeta\epsilon\tau\omega$ $\tau\delta\psi$ $\pi\lambda\epsilon\sigma\nu\tau\alpha\varsigma$. Isis, as the sender of mild and genial winds, would also be invoked by mariners in tempests. Hence the custom of dedicating votive tablets to this goddess after escapes from shipwreck. (Schol. ad Juv Sat., 12, 17.)

23-28. ήκω yàp, "for I am come."- έχων τον πέλεκυν όξύτατον, "having here my sharpest axe." Jacobs thinks that the article might better be away. It appears to us, however, purposely introduced to indicate something of gesture. Vulcan holds out the axe before Jupiter, while he describes its good qualities .- el kai, &c., "sharp enough, even if it should be necessary," &c. The clause begins elliptically, and we must supply $a\lambda\iota\varsigma$ $\delta\xi v$ $\delta\nu\tau a$, as implied in $\delta\xi v\tau a \tau o v$, that goes before.— $a\lambda\lambda a$ $\delta\iota\epsilon\lambda\epsilon$, "divide, then." The particle $a\lambda\lambda a$ is here elliptical. We may supply as follows, giving $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\dot{a}$, at the same time, its literal meaning, "Make no delay, therefore, but divide." δίελε is from διαιρέω.—κατενεγκών, "having brought it down." Supply αὐτόν, i. e., τὸν πέλεκυν.—πειρά μου, el μέμηνα; "art thou making trial of me, if I be mad?" i. e., art thou trying whether I am mad or not? $\pi \epsilon \iota \rho \tilde{a}$, from $\pi \epsilon \iota \rho \tilde{a} o \mu a \iota$, the middle voice implying that Jove does it from some motive best known to himself.-μέμηνα, from μαίνομαι.—πρόσταττε δ' οὖν τἀληθὲς, "command then in real earnest." The particle οὖν implies here some such train of thought as this on Vulcan's part : "This surely cannot be thy intention, command then," &c. $-\tau \dot{a}\lambda\eta \vartheta \dot{e}_{\zeta}$, for $\tau \dot{o} \dot{a}\lambda\eta \vartheta \dot{e}_{\zeta}$, the neuter accusative of the adjective taken adverbially.

LINE 1-4. $\delta\iota a\iota\rho \varepsilon \vartheta \eta \nu a\iota$, supply $\vartheta \varepsilon \lambda \omega$, or else $\pi \rho o \sigma \tau \dot{a} \tau \tau \omega$ from 78 the previous sentence.—où $\nu \bar{\nu} \nu \pi \rho \bar{\omega} \tau o \nu$, &c. Jupiter alludes to Vulcan's unceremonious expulsion from the skies, on a previous occasion, when he alighted, after his fall, on the island of Lemnos.-άλλα χρη kadikveiodal, &c., "thou must come down, then, with thy whole soul, and not delay," i. e., must come down with thy axe; must fetch a blow.-al μοι τον έγκέφαλον avastpégovsiv, "which confuse my brain." Literal'y, "which turn my brain topsyturvy."

5-8. őpa, "take care." More literally, "look out."-θαρρών, "being of good courage." More freely, "and be not afraid of the consequences." -το συμφέρον, "what is good for me."

9-10. κατοίσω, from καταφέρω. Supply αὐτόν.-τί γὰρ χρη ποιεῖν, &c., "for what is one to do when thou orderest?" i. e., what else can one do when thou orde-est, but obey thy orders ? On the absence of the negative from the expression $\tau i \chi \rho \eta \pi \sigma \iota \epsilon i \nu$, where one at first view might think it ought to be ir-orted, consult the remarks of Hemsterhuis, ad Luc., D. D., 8 -Some editions have, immediately after this, in the text, the words Ż

^{Fage} 78 "H ϕ aιστος $\int_i a \tau \epsilon \mu \nu \epsilon_i \tau o \hat{\nu} \Delta_i \hat{o}_{\zeta} \kappa \rho a \nu i o \nu$, enclosed in brackets. Thus however, form no part of the dialogue, and are merely a gloss that has crept into the text.

10-13. τί τοῦτο; After the words σοῦ κελεύοντος, Vulcan is supposed to bring down his axe upon Jupiter's head, when Minerva immediately springs forth in full armour, and Vulcan, starting back in surprise, exclaims, 'What's this?''-εἰκότως γοῦν, "with good reason then.''-τηλικούτην ind τῆ μήνιγγι, &c., "nourishing alive beneath the membrane of thy brain virgin of such a size, and that, too, in full armour.''--ħ που στρατόπεδον &c., "thou hadst indeed, it would seem, without knowing it, a camp, not a head (upon thy shoulders)." The particle ħ is affirmative and που conjectural, and hence, when combined, they denote something as very probable, though not demonstrable. They may be rendered, therefore, by "it would seem indeed," "doubtless," "in all probability," &c.--ἐλελήθεις ἐχων, literally, "thou wast escaping thy own observation in having," the pluperfect being rendered as an imperfect: ἐλελήθεις, from λανθάνω.

14-17. $\pi v \dot{\rho} \dot{\rho} \iota \chi \dot{\iota} \dot{\epsilon} \iota$, "dances the Pyrrhic dance." This was danced in full armour, and was accompanied with a brandishing and clashing of arms on the part of the performer.—καὶ ἐνθονσιῷ, "and is full of martial fury." —καὶ τὸ μέγιστον, "and above all." Literally, "and what is greatest." γλανκῶπις μὲν, "she has, to be sure, eyes of a bluish-green."—κοσμεῖ, "sets off to advantage." The meaning of the whole sentence is this: Minerva's eyes are, like those of the lion, &c., of a bluish-green; and have, therefore, a kind of threatening and fear-inspiring expression; the polished helm, however, serves to remedy this defect, and makes, in fact, the peculiar expression of her eye suit very well with her warlike attire.

In this dialogue, as in so many others, Lucian seeks to ridicule the popular mythology of Greece. The true meaning, however, of the legend which he here derides, is extremely beautiful. Minerva typifies the thought of Jove, and this thought springs forth from the head of the deity, pure, fully-formed, and resistless.

19-26. $\delta\sigma\pi\epsilon\rho$ $\delta\nu\vartheta\rho\omega\pi\sigma\iota$, "like mere mortals."— $d\lambda\lambda\dot{a}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\vartheta\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\iota\varsigma$, &c, "why? dost thou wish, oh Jupiter, that this drug-dealer here recline above me?" i. e., have a higher seat than myself at table. The reference is to a higher place on the same couch: τουτον*i*, Attic for τοῦτον, denotes contempt here, and is indicative of gesture.—κα*i* γάρ εἰμι, "for I am even." — $\dot{\delta}\dot{\epsilon}\mu\beta\rho\dot{\nu}\tau\eta\tau\epsilon$, "thou thunder-stricken wretch!" The term $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\beta\rho\dot{\nu}\tau\eta\tau\sigma\varsigma$; carries with it a double meaning, and implies injury done not only to the physical, but also to the mental, powers, producing stupidity, partial or total idiocy, &c.; and this combined idea must be kept in view in the present passage. Compare the Latin attonitus.— η διότι, "is it because."— \hat{a} $\mu\eta$ $\vartheta\epsilon\mu\iota\varsigma$ ποιούντα, "for doing things which are not lawful." He was struck with lightning for restoring mortals to life. The last one so restored was Hippolytus, son of Theseus.—μετείληφας, from μεταλαμβάνω, Attic for μεταλεληφας.

27-30. $\epsilon_{\pi\iota}\lambda\epsilon\lambda\eta\sigma\alpha\iota$ yàp kaì σ ù, &c., "what? hast thou, oh Hercules, on thy part, forgotten that thou wast burned on Mount Œta, in that," &c. Observe the force of kai, literally, "also." The particle yàp refers here to something understood, and hence we may supply, and translate more literally, as follows: "(why talk in this way ?) for hast thou, oh Hercules," &c.—Oir η , the funeral pile of Hercules was erected on Mount Œta, i the lower part of Thessaly, near the sea.—oŭκουν ioa kai õµoia, &c., w i. e., thou and I have by no means, &c. The student will distinguish between $o\dot{v}\kappa ovv$ with the acute accent, as here, and $o\dot{v}\kappa ovv$ with the circumflex on the last syllable. This last has the meaning of "therefore," whereas the former is a negative particle. The adjectives $i\sigma a$ and $\tilde{o}\mu ola$ are used as adverbs here, and $\beta \varepsilon \delta (\omega \tau a \iota)$ is taken impersonally.— $\tilde{o}\varsigma \varepsilon \iota \mu \iota$, "I who am."— $\tau \sigma \sigma a \tilde{v} \tau a \delta \tilde{c} \pi \varepsilon \pi \delta v \eta \kappa a$, " and have gone through so great labours."

33-34. τῶν φαρμάκων, "some of your drugs." The genitive here refers to a part, and is also expressive of great contempt.—iπιδεδειγμένος, rom iπιδείκνυμι.

LINE 1-3. $\varepsilon \tilde{v} \lambda \varepsilon \gamma \varepsilon \iota \varsigma$, "thou sayest well," i. e., thou art right in 79 what thou sayest about my being useful to the sick.— $\delta \tau \iota$, "seeing that."— $\dot{v}\pi' \dot{a}\mu\phi \delta \tilde{v} \delta \iota \varepsilon \phi \vartheta a \rho \mu \varepsilon v \varsigma \tau \delta \sigma \tilde{\omega}\mu a$, "having thy body all marred by both causes." More literally, "spoilt as to thy body."— $\tau \sigma \tilde{v} \chi \iota \tau \tilde{\omega} v \varsigma$. The words $\chi \iota \tau \tilde{\omega} v \varsigma$ and $\pi v \rho \delta \varsigma$ are put in apposition with $\dot{a}\mu\phi \delta \tilde{v}$. The reference in $\chi \iota \tau \tilde{\omega} v \varsigma$ is to the garment sent by Deïanira to Hercules, and which had been poisoned with the venom of the Lernean hydra. The term $\pi v \rho \delta \varsigma$, on the other hand, alludes to the funeral pile on Mount Œta.

4-6. εἰ καὶ μηδὲν ἄλλο, "even if I did nothing else." Supply ἐποίησα. —οὖτε ἐδούλευσα. Hercules served Omphale, queen of Lydia, for three years.—οὖτε ἑξαινον ἕρια, "nor did I card wool." Hercules carded woot among the female attendants of the Lydian queen, while she arrayed herself in his lion skin, and bore his club.—πορφυρίδα ἐνδεδυκὼς, "having put on a purple garment."—παιόμευος ὑπὸ τῆς Όμφάλης, "chastised by that Omphale." The article here denotes contempt.—ἀλλ' οὐδὲ μελαγχολήσας, &c., "no, nor did I, in a fit of madness, slay," &c. Literally, supplying at the same time the initial ellipsis, "I not only did not do this, but I neither, having become insane," &c. The allusion here is to the murder of his wife Megara, and her children.

8-15. $\epsilon \ell \mu \eta \pi a \delta \sigma \eta$, &c., "if thou cease not reviling me." The reference to instantaneous action, here implied by the aorist, is rendered still more apparent by $a \delta \tau \ell \kappa a \mu \ell \lambda a$ that follows after.— $a \delta \tau \ell \kappa a \mu \ell \lambda a$, "this very instant."— $\epsilon \ell \sigma \epsilon \iota$, 2d sing. fut. mid. of $\epsilon \ell \delta \omega$, with the Attic termination.— $\delta \sigma \tau \epsilon \mu \eta \delta \epsilon \tau \delta \nu$ Maufova, &c., "so that not even Pæeon shall heal thee, alt fractured as to thy scull." Pæeon, the god of medicine, different here from Apollo. (Compare Heyne, ad Il., 5, 401.)— $\delta \tau \epsilon \kappa a \ell \delta \pi \sigma \vartheta a \nu \delta \nu \tau a$, "inas much as he even died."

16-18. καλὰ μὲν γὰρ, &c. An elliptical sentence, where we must understand before γὰρ, in construction, the words εἰκότως ὑπερήφανος εἰ, or something equivalent. "With good reason art thou proud, Latona, for he children also are handsome, whom thou didst bear unto Jove," i. e., for not only thou thyself art handsome, but the children are so likewise, whom, &c. The expression τὰ τέκνα ἔτεκες is equivalent here to τὰ τέκνα ἅ ἔτεκες. The whole remark is bitterly ironical, and the dialogue opens as a continuation of some previous conversation.—οὐ πῶσαι, &c., "we goddesses are not all able to bear such children, Juno, as that Vulcan of thine is." A remark still more ironical than the observation of Juno. Equivalent to, "yes, my two children are handsome, to be sure, but thy Vulcan is far handsomer." Observe the force of the article with "Hoaιστος

20-22. $d\lambda\lambda'$ obtos $\mu \epsilon \nu$ o $\chi \omega \lambda \delta \varsigma$, &c., " and yet this same cripple is neverheless useful for his part."—ol $\delta \epsilon$ goi $\pi a \delta \epsilon \varsigma$, &c., " whereas those chil-

Thus the plain Greek would be, $\tau \bar{\omega} \nu \delta \delta \sigma \bar{\omega} \nu \pi a i \delta \bar{\omega} \nu$, $\dot{\eta} \mu \delta \nu \dot{a} \dot{\rho} \delta \nu \kappa \eta \pi \delta \kappa$, We must imagine, in such cases, a slight pause after the nominative, indicative of feelings of some kind or other, which pause has the effect of interrupting the continuity of the sentence, and therefore a new clause begins immediately after it. Juno pauses here with a bitter feeling, as she contrasts in thought the deformity of Vulcan with the symmetry of Apollo and Diana.

24. $\pi \acute{a} v \tau \epsilon \varsigma$ isoaciv ola ècolici, "all know what she eats." The allusion is to the Tauric Diana, or Diana worshipped in the Tauric Chersonese, the modern Crimea. Human sacrifices were offered to her, and sacrifices were regarded as the food of the gods. Juno purposely avoids, with well-feigned horror, to use the words ècolici κρέα ἀνθρώπινα, but employs a species of circumlocution.—ξενοκτονοῦσα. All strangers that came to the Tauric Chersonese, in earlier times, were sacrificed to Diana.

28-34. ἐργαστήρια τῆς μαντικῆς, "oracle-factories." Ironical. Literally, "workshops of divination."—τοὺς χρωμένους αὐτῷ, "those who consult him."—λοξὰ. Hence the epithet of Λοξίας, "the Loxian god," applied to Apollo, on account of the studied ambiguity of his answers.—ὡς ἀκίνδυνον εἶναι τὸ σφάλμα, "in order that a failure may be attended with no risk (to his credit)." Literally, "so as for the failure to be unattended by risk." Observe the peculiar construction here of ὡς with the accusative and infinitive, and consult the remarks of Matthiæ, G. G., § 545.—ἀπὸ τοιούτον, "from such a line of business as this."—πολλοὶ γὰρ. Supply εἰσί.—πλὴν οὐκ ἀγνοεῖται, &c., "the more intelligent, however, are not ignorant, that he is for the most part a mere wonder-worker," i. e., a mere juggler. Literally, "he is not, however, unknown to the more intelligent, as for the most part working wonders."—αὐτὸς γοῦν ὁ μάντις, &c., "accordingly, he himself, the god of prophecy, did not know," &c.

80 LINE 1-5. $\tau \delta \nu \epsilon \rho \omega \mu \epsilon \nu o \nu$. Hyacinthus.— $o \dot{\nu} \pi \rho o \epsilon \mu a \nu \tau \epsilon \dot{\nu} \sigma a \tau o \delta \dot{\epsilon}$, "he foretold not moreover unto himself."— $\kappa a \dot{\nu} \tau a \ddot{\nu} \tau a$, "although." Literally, "and that too."— $\tau \eta \varsigma$ Nibbarg, "than that poor Niobe," i. e., whose offspring your children so cruelly and unjustly slew. Observe the force of the article.— $\mu \epsilon \nu \tau o \iota$, "and yet."— $\dot{\eta} \xi \epsilon \nu o \kappa \tau \delta \nu o \varsigma$, "she that kills strangers."

9-12. $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\alpha\sigma a$, "I have to laugh." The aorist here refers to a rapid action, commenced but a moment before in past time, but the effect of which, and the idea connected with it, run on into the present. Several examples of this peculiar usage are given by Bernhardy, Wiss. Synt., &c., p. 381.— $\dot{\alpha}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\delta\epsilon\iota\rho\epsilon\nu$ $\dot{a}\nu$, "would have flayed." Marsyas contended with Apollo respecting skill in music, and was defeated, and flayed alive. Juno asserts, that, had the muses decided this contest fairly, they would have given the victory to Marsyas, and Apollo would have been the sufferer.— $\dot{\alpha}\vartheta\lambda\iotao\varsigma$, taken here as an adverb, $\dot{\alpha}\vartheta\lambda\dot{\omega}\varsigma.$ — $\dot{\alpha}\lambdao\dot{\varsigma}$, "having been conquered." Equivalent here to $\nu\iota\kappa\eta\vartheta\epsilon\dot{\varsigma}$. The perfect act. and 2d aor. act. of $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\omega$ have a passive signification.

13-19. ἐπεὶ ἐμαθεν ὀφθεῖσα, "when she perceived that she was seen ἑξαγορεύση, from ἐξαγορεύω.—ἐπαφῆκεν, from ἐπαφίημι.—τοὺς κύνας. The story of Actæon is given at page 63 of this volume —ταῦρος ἡ «ύκνος Alluding to the fables of Europa and Leda.

20-24. $i\gamma\omega$ $\mu i\nu$, &c., "I for my part would feel ashamed." 80 This implies, of course, that Jupiter, on the other hand, feels no shame.— $\delta\iota\epsilon\phi\vartheta a\rho\mu\epsilon\nuo\varsigma$ $\nu\pi\delta$ $\tau\eta\varsigma$ $\mu\epsilon\vartheta\eta\varsigma$, "quite spoiled by his habits of intoxication." Observe the force of the article.— $\mu\epsilon\tau\rhoa$, "with a head-band." The $\mu\epsilon\tau\rhoa$ was only worn among the Greeks by women, and was deemed effeminate for men. Bacchus is frequently represented with one in ancient sculpture, passing around the brow and confining the locks. Sometimes there are lappets hanging down at the side.— $\mu\alpha\iota\nuo\mu\epsilon\nu\alpha\iota\varsigma$ $\gamma\nu\nu\alpha\iota\xi$, referring to the Bacchantes.— $\pi\alpha\nu\tau$, "everything else."

26–34. καὶ μὴν, "and yet."—θηλνμίτρης, "effeminate wearer of the head-band."— $τ \overline{ω}ν$ γυναικῶν, "than the women in his train."— $\dot{υ}πηγάγετο$, "subjected." Literally, "brought under his power." Observe the force of the middle.— $τ \overline{ο}ν ζ έλέφαν τ ας$, "their elephants."— $πρ \overline{ο} ζ όλίγον$, "only in a small degree." Equivalent to the Latin paullulum.—όρχούμενος καὶ χορεύων, "dancing and leading choruses."—ένθεάζων, "raving."

LINE 1-6. $i\delta\rho i\sigma a\varsigma \ \epsilon \varsigma \ \tau \eta \nu \ \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \tau \eta \nu$, "having treated his rites 81 with contumely."— $\kappa \lambda \eta \mu a \sigma i \nu$, alluding to the story of Lycurgus, king of Thrace.— $\tau \eta \varsigma \ \mu \eta \tau \rho \delta \varsigma$, alluding to the story of Pentheus, king ot Thebes.— $\pi a \iota \delta \iota a$, "sportive trifling."— $o \delta \delta \epsilon \iota \varsigma \phi \vartheta \delta \nu \sigma \varsigma$, "this must not be grudged him." Supply $\epsilon \sigma \tau \omega$. Literally, "let there be no grudging (on this account)."— $o \delta \sigma \varsigma \ u \nu \eta \phi \omega \nu \ o \delta \tau \sigma \varsigma \ \eta \nu$, "what kind of a person this one would be when sober," i. e., how brave and manly.

8-18. $\xi \sigma \tau \iota \gamma \dot{a} \rho$. The particle $\gamma \dot{a} \rho$ here refers to a part of the conversation that had immediately preceded, and to some remark made by Maia, which calls forth the following reply from her son. "Why talk in this way ! for is there." Maia probably had been recommending obedience and resignation to her son. $-\mu \eta \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon$, $\tilde{\omega}$ 'Ep $\mu \eta$, &c., "my dear Mercury, don't say any such thing."— $\tau i \mu \eta \lambda \epsilon \gamma \omega$; "why am I not to say it?" $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \omega$. is here the subjunctive.— $\delta \varsigma$ τοσαῦτα πράγματα έχω, " who have duties, so burdensome, to attend to."-καὶ πρὸς τοσαύτας ὑπηρεσίας, &c., " and being distracted by so many offices."— $\delta\iota a \sigma \tau \rho \omega \sigma a \nu \tau a \tau \eta \nu \kappa \lambda \iota \sigma (a \nu, "having smoothed down each couch." Literally, "the couch." <math>\delta\iota a \sigma \tau \rho \omega \sigma a \nu \tau a$ is from διαστρώννυμι. Hemsterhuis and others read ἐκκλησίαν for κλισίαν, as referring to the "place of assembly." The meaning will then be, "having arranged the place of assembly." This lection, however, though sanctioned by great names, appears to us to make an awkward pleonasm with Evore. τήσαντα ἕκαστα.-καὶ διαφέρειν τὰς ἀγγελίας, &c., " and to carry about the messages which I may receive from him, running up and down the whole day." Mercury means, by this, that he is no better off than a mere ήμεροδρόμος, or day-runner.— ετι κεκονιμένον, "while yet covered with dust," i. e., before I have had time to brush the dust off: perf. part. pass. of $\kappa o \nu i \omega \dots \pi \rho i \nu$ dè $\tau o \nu$ $\nu \varepsilon \omega \nu \eta \tau o \nu$, &c., "before, too, this newly purchased cup-bearer came, I also used to pour out nectar." The allusion is to Ganymede, who was carried off from earth by the eagle of Jove, for the purpose of officiating as cup-bearer in the skies. The term $v \varepsilon \omega v \eta \tau o v$ appears to have reference to the legend of Jupiter's having given the famous steeds to Laomedon, as a recompense for the loss of his son. $-\dot{\epsilon}\nu\dot{\epsilon}\chi\epsilon\sigma\nu$, from $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\chi\dot{\epsilon}\omega$, and referring literally to the pouring of the nectar into the cups of the gods.

19-27. δεινότατον. Supply $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\dot{\iota}$ —μόνος τῶν ἀλλων, "I alone of all." —τῷ δικαστηρίω. Referring to the tribunal in the lower world.— $\dot{\epsilon}v$ παλαίστραις είναι. Mercury presided over all the exercises of the palestra. -κἀν ἐκκλησίαις κηρύττειν, "and to make proclamation in publiv assemblies." i. e., and to officiate as crier in public assemblies upon earth. 81 Mercury was regarded also as the god of criers, heralds, &c .και βήτορας εκδιδάσκειν. As the inventor of language, Mercury became the god of oratory.- άλλ' έτι νεκρικά, &c., "but I must, distracted as] am, take part, beside this, in the affairs of the dead :" μεμερισμένον is from μερίζω.-καίτοι τὰ μεν τῆς Λήδας, &c., " although the (two) sons of Leda are each (in turn) every other day in heaven or in hades." The reference is to Castor and Pollux. According to the old legend, Castor having been slain in an encounter (he being the mortal one of the two brothers), Pollux was inconsolable for his loss. Jove thereupon gave the latter his choice, of being taken up himself to Olympus and enjoying the honours of immortality, or of dividing them with his brother, and for the two to live day and day about in heaven and in the shades. Pollux chose the latter, and divided his immortality with Castor.-καί ταῦτα κάκεῖνα, " both these things as well as those :" ταῦτα applies to his duties in heaven, and έκεινα (literally, "those things yonder") to his offices on earth and in the shades.

28-33. καὶ οἱ μὲν ᾿Αλκμήνης καὶ Σεμέλης, "the sons of Alcmena and Semele also," i. e., Hercules and Bacchus. Hercules was the son of Jupiter and Alcmena; Bacchus the son of Jupiter and Semele the daughter of Cadmus. Supply vioί.—γενόμενοι, "although produced."—δ δὲ Maíaς, &c., "whereas I, the son of Maia, (who is) the daughter of Atlas." The full clause would be, ἐγῶ δὲ, ἀν ὁ viòς Maíaς. Mercury here prides him self on his descent, his mother being a goddess, and the daughter, too, of one of the earliest deities, whereas Hercules and Bacchus are the sons of mortal women.—ἀρτι ἥκοντα, "having just come."—'Αγήνορος θυγατρὸς. Alluding to Europa.—πέπομφε. The perfect appears to be used here for the aorist ἕπεμψε. Compare Matthiæ, G. G., § 502.—ὑψόμενον, " to see." Literally, " for the purpose of seeing."—ἐπισκεψόμενον, " to take a look at," i. e., to look, and see if all be well.

82 LINE 1-5. ἰδέ, "give a glance at."—δλως ἀπηγόρευκα, "I am completely tired out."—ἀν ήξίωσα πεπρῶσθαι, "I would this very instant claim the privilege of being sold." Observe the force of the aorist, as indicating instantaneous action : πεπρῶσθαι, perf. infin. pass. of πιπ-ράσκω. Observe the continuance of action here indicated by the perfect. Mercury does not wish to be sold merely for a season, but, as we would express it in common parlance, for good and all.—ὥσπερ οἱ ἐν γῆ κακῶς δουλεύοντες, "as those (slaves) on earth do, who lead too burdensome a servitude." The allusion here is to one of the Athenian laws, by which any slave, who was treated in too harsh and burdensome a manner, might claim the right of being sold to some gentler master.—ἑa ταῦτα, ὡ τέκνον, "don't mind these things, my child." Literally, "let these things (be so)." In this usage of ἑάω, some understand a verb in the infinitive, such as ἑκ-πίπτειν, or είναι.—πάντα, "in all things."—ὄντα, "since thou art."—σοδει, "hie."

9-12. $\dot{a}\phi'$ ov $\gamma\varepsilon$, &c, "from the time that I for my part exist and blow." In a literal translation the particle $\gamma\varepsilon$, which we have here applied to the person, imparts emphasis to $\dot{a}\phi'$ ov. With ov supply $\chi\rho\delta\nu\sigma\upsilon$. The whole clause, with the ellipsis supplied, will be, $\dot{a}\pi\dot{\sigma}\tau\sigma\dot{\nu}\tau\sigma\upsilon\tau\sigma\ddot{\upsilon}\chi\rho\delta\nu\sigma\upsilon$ $\dot{a}\phi'$ ov $\gamma\varepsilon$ $\chi\rho\delta\nu\sigma\upsilon$.— $\tau\dot{\nu}va\tau a\dot{\nu}\tau\eta\nu\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\varepsilon\iota\varsigma$, &c., "what is this procession of which thou art speaking, Zephyrus?" Literally, "what this procession art thou speaking of ?" i. e., of what procession art thou making mention in this? Observe the peculiar idiom, which appears to have a species of attraction for its basis. The plain Greek would be, $\tau i \varsigma \, \epsilon \sigma \tau i \nu \, a \tilde{v} \tau \eta \, \eta \, \pi o \mu \pi \eta$, $\frac{1}{\eta \nu} \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon i \varsigma$; or, $\pi \epsilon \rho i \, \tau i \nu o \varsigma \, \pi o \mu \pi \eta \varsigma \, \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon i \varsigma := - \eta \, \tau i \nu \epsilon \varsigma \, o i \, \pi \epsilon \mu \pi o \nu \tau \epsilon \varsigma$ $\frac{1}{\eta \sigma a \nu}$; "or who were they that made it?" Literally, "that sent it on its way."

13-17. ἀπελείφθης, "thou wast away from." More literally, 'thou wast left behind by."—olov οἰκ ἀν ἀλλο, &c., "such a one as thou, in all likelihood, wilt never hereafter see." Observe the force of ἀν with the optative, as denoting uncertainty. The literal meaning of the clause is, "such a one as thou, in all likelihood, wilt never hereafter see another (to bɛ)." —γὰρ. The particle is here elliptical, and we may supply some such phrase as οἰκ ἐδυνάμην ἰδεῖν aὐτό, "I couldn't help it, for," &c.—ἐπέπνευσα δέ τι, &c., "I had just blown, too, on a part of the Indian land, as much as lies along the shores of the sea." Observe the peculiar reference to time indicated by the aorist. The full clause, from ὅσα παράλια, &c., is as follows: ὅσα μέρη aὐτῆς ἑστι παράλια μέρη ἐκείνης τῆς χώρας. With 'Ινδικῆς supply χώρας.—ἀν, by attraction for ἄ.

18-22. ἀλλὰ, "well then."—τί μήν, "why don't I?" i. e., I know him very well. The particles τί μήν are here equivalent to the Latin quidni? and the more literal meaning of the clause, supplying at the same time the ellipsis, will be, "what indeed prevents my knowing him?" or, as Hoogeveen expresses it, "quid impedit, quo minus hoc sit ita?"—περί αὐτῆς ἐκείνης &c., "I am going to tell thee about that same Europa."—μῶν, ὅτι ὁ Ζεὺς, &c., "what? that Jupiter has been for a long time," &c. Literally, "whether is it that Jupiter," &c. With πολλοῦ supply χρόνου.—γὰρ. The particle is again elliptical. Supply as follows: "thou hast no need to tell me this, for," &c.

23-34. οὐκοῦν τὸν μὲν, &c., "thou knowest, then, about his attachment for her."—τὴν ἡἰόνa, the shore near Sidon.—τὰ κέρατα εὐκαμπὴς, "having his horns gracefully curved."—ἐσκίρτα οὖν καὶ αὐτὸς, &c., "he, of his own accord, thereupon, both began to leap about sportively on the shore." ὑρομαῖος, "on a run," i. e., at full speed.—ἐμπεσών, "having rushed in." —ἐκπλαγεῖσα, from ἐκπλήσσω.—εἶχετο τοῦ κέρατος, "kept clinging to his horn." Literally, "to the horn (nearest her)." The genitive is here employed, as referring to a part.—ἡνεμωμένον τὸν πέπλον συνεῖχεν, "she kept holding in her outer robe swelled forth by the wind." The πέπλος was an outer robe, or mantle, passing over the left shoulder and under the right arm, leaving the right shoulder and arm uncovered and free. According to Eustathius (ad Il., 5, 599), it was secured in front by a clasp. (Compare Winckelmann, Gesch. der Kunst des Alt., vol. iii., p. 26.)

LINE 1-6. $\dot{\eta}\delta\dot{\nu}$ τοῦτο θέαμα, &c., "thou didst see in this, oh Zephyrus, a pleasing sight." Literally, "thou didst see this as a pleasing sight."—καὶ μὴν, "yes, indeed, and."—ἡδίω, syncopated and contracted from ἡδίονα.—ἀκύμων, "without a wave."—'Ερωτες δὲ παραπετώμενοι, &c. In this, and what follows, Lucian appears to be describing, in fact, some ancient painting of the story of Europa.—ἡμμένας, from ἄπτω.

9-18. kai čí τi $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda o$, &c., "and if there was any other (race) of marine creatures, not fearful to behold," i. e., and whatever other marine creatures there were, not fearful to gaze upon. With $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda o$ supply $\gamma \epsilon vo \varsigma. - \pi a \rho$ $o \chi o \nu \mu \epsilon v \eta \nu$, "riding by his side." Literally, "conveyed along by his side." $-\tau \eta \nu$ 'A $\mu \rho \iota \tau \rho \iota \tau \eta \nu$, "his Amphitrite," i. e., his spouse Amphitrite. $-\tau \eta$ $\dot{\alpha} \delta \epsilon \lambda \phi \tilde{\rho}$. Jopiter, under the guise of the bull. $-\tau \eta \nu$ 'A $\phi \rho o \delta (\tau \eta \nu,$ "the goddess Venus." The article is here emphatic. $-o \dot{\nu} \kappa \epsilon \tau \iota \dot{\epsilon} \phi a \dot{\iota} \nu \epsilon \tau \eta$, "was no longer

83 visible." Literally, "no longer appeared."— ἐμπεσόντες, "having plunged (again) into (the deep)."— ἀλλος ἄλλο τοῦ πελάγους, &c.
"began to cleave, one one part, another another, of the deep."

19-20. ' Ω µakápie, &c., "ah, fortunate Zephyrus! on account of the sight which thou sawest," i. e., how fortunate wast thou in beholding sc charming a sight!— $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\omega$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$, &c., "I, however, was all the while beholding griffons," &c. The griffons were among the number of fabulous animals supposed to exist in India and the remote east.

21-25. ' Ω πάτερ. Polyphemus was the fabled son of Neptune and Thoosa daughter of Phorcys.—ola πέπονθα, &c., "what things I have suffered from that accursed stranger!" perf. mid. of πάσχω.—κοιμωμένα έπιχειρήσας, "having attacked me as I was sleeping." Supply μοι.—τὰ μὲν πρῶτον, &c., "at first, he called himself Outis, by a wrong name." Literally, "he called himself Outis, away from his true name." Observe the force of ảπό in composition. The narrative of Lucian is based on that given by Homer in the Odyssey (9, 305, seqq.).—καὶ ἑξω ἦν βέλους, "and was beyond the reach of any missile."—ουομάζεσθαι ἑφη, "he said he was called." The reference being to the same person implied in the previous verb ἑφη, the verb ὀνομάζεσθαι, which follows in construction, has the pronoun understood before it in the nominative, as will plainly appear from Oðvσσεὺς.

26-34. olda dv $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \iota \varsigma$, "I know whom thou meanest." Literally, "I know the one of whom thou art speaking."— $\kappa a \tau \epsilon \lambda a b ov \epsilon \nu \tau \tilde{\rho} \quad a \nu \tau \rho \rho,$ "I caught in my cave." The verb $\kappa a \tau a \lambda a \mu b a \nu \omega$, like deprehendo in Latin, often denotes a coming suddenly upon another. So here the literal meaning would be, "I came suddenly upon."— $\pi o \lambda \lambda o \upsilon \varsigma \tau \iota \nu a \varsigma$, "a number of fellows." $\tau \iota \nu a \varsigma$ denotes contempt here.— $\tau \tilde{\eta} \quad \vartheta \upsilon \rho a$, "at the opening."— $\tilde{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota$ $u o \iota,$ "I have (for this purpose)."— $d \nu \epsilon \kappa a \nu a \sigma a$, from $d \nu a \kappa a (\omega. -d) \quad \tilde{\epsilon} \phi \epsilon \rho o \nu$ $\delta \epsilon \nu \delta \rho o \nu, \quad \delta \quad \delta \epsilon \nu \delta \rho o \nu \quad \tilde{\epsilon} \phi \epsilon \rho o \nu.$ — $\tilde{\omega} \sigma \pi \epsilon \rho \quad \epsilon \iota \kappa \delta \varsigma \quad \tilde{\eta} \nu,$ "as was fair enough."

LINE 1-8. δίδωσί μοι, &c., "having poured it into a cup, gives me to 84 drink a kind of poison," &c. Polyphemus, having been till then unacquainted with wine, and judging of it by its effects, calls it very appropriately $\phi a \rho \mu a \kappa \delta \nu \tau \iota$. If we render these words, as some do, "a kind of drugged (or medicated) drink," all their force evaporates.—καὶ τὸ σπήλαιον, &c., " and the cave itself to be turned upside down."- "munv, equivalent here to $\eta v.-\kappa a \tau \varepsilon \sigma \pi \acute{a} \sigma \vartheta \eta v$, "I was dragged down." A very graphic term to express the overpowering effects of liquor.—'O $\delta \grave{e}$, "the fellow there-upon."— $\tau \grave{o} v \mu o \chi \lambda \grave{o} v$, "the stake (employed by him for the purpose)." Jacobs makes this refer to the trunk of the tree which the Cyclops had placed upon the fire. This, however, is not correct. As Lucian's dialogue is a kind of parody on the narrative of Homer, it is better to take the old bard for our guide. Homer states, that Ulysses cut off a portion of a large club, or walking-staff, and made use of this for blinding Polyphemus. As he afterward calls this instrument o μοχλος ελαϊνός, "the olive-stake," it is evident that Lucian, by his $\tau \partial \nu \mu o \chi \lambda \partial \nu$, means the same thing with Homer. The error in question has arisen, very probably, from not perceiving the peculiar force of the article. (Compare Hom., Od., 9, 319, seqq.)-and ἐκείνου. Supply χρόνου. – τυφλός εἰμί σοι, " am I blind for thee." The pronoun $\sigma o \iota$ is often employed thus, in familiar discourse, when the thing referred to is supposed to exert more or less influence upon the feelings of the party to whom the remark is addressed.

9-12. ws Badiv exolutions, " how soundly thou didst sleep." 84 With $\beta \alpha \vartheta v v$ supply $\vartheta \pi v o v$. The literal translation is, "in how deep a slumber hadst thou lulled thyself to rest." έκοιμήθης is the passive in a middle sense, and $\tilde{v}\pi\nu\rho\nu$ the accusative of nearer definition.— $\mu\epsilon\tau a\xi\dot{v}$ τυφλούμενος, "in the midst of being blinded," i. e., while the blinding was going on .-- où yàp âv, ev old ori, &c., " for he would not have been able, I know well, to remove," &c. The clause $\varepsilon \tilde{v}$ old $\delta \tau \iota$ is inserted paren-thetically. It is wrong, therefore, to make the order of construction here, εῦ οἶδ' ὅτι οὐκ ἀν ἐδυνήθη, &c. On the contrary, εὖ οἶδ' ὅτι is a clause by itself, and its full form is εῦ οἶδ' ὅτι τοῦτο ἀληθές ἐστι.

13-16. $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda'$ $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\dot{\omega}$ $\dot{a}\phi\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\lambda\sigma\nu$, "why, I myself took it away." Literally, "(he did not take it away) but I took it away." Observe the force of $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\dot{\omega}$. The personal pronouns are only expressed when emphasis or opposition is to be indicated.— $\mu \tilde{a}\lambda \lambda ov$, "the more easily."— $\kappa a \vartheta i \sigma a \varsigma$. In a middle sense, where we may supply έμαυτον.-έθήρων, " I kept hunting for him." -έντειλάμενος τῷ κριῷ, " having enjoined upon the ram."

17-19. μ avdáv ω , $\dot{v}\pi'$ čkeívoiç, &c., "I understand; he escaped thy search, namely, by having gone out (of the cave) under these." The order of construction is, $\mu a \nu \vartheta a \nu \omega$, $\delta \tau \iota \, \epsilon \lambda a \vartheta \epsilon \nu$, &c., but $\delta \tau \iota$ is to be rendered as equivalent merely to the Latin nempe or scilicet .- ekeivous, referring to the sheep. Homer makes the companions of Ulysses to have escaped by means of the sheep, and Ulysses himself by the aid of the ram.

20-22. συνεκάλεσα, $\ddot{\omega}$ πάτερ, καὶ ἡκον, "I did call them together, my father, and they did come."— $\eta \rho o \nu \tau o$, from $\xi \rho o \mu a \iota$.— $\kappa d \gamma \tilde{\omega} \xi \phi \eta \nu$, &c., "and I said, 'tis Outis." He tells them the name as a mere appellative, but they understand it in its original sense of "nobody," and hence conclude that he has lost his wits. $-\delta^{i}\eta \vartheta \epsilon \nu \tau \epsilon \varsigma$, from $\delta^{i} \delta \mu a \iota$. $-\delta^{i} \chi \delta \nu \tau \delta \sigma$ $\delta^{i} \delta \nu \tau \epsilon \varsigma$, "they straightway departed." The verb $\delta^{i} \chi \delta \mu a \iota$ with a participle is used to indicate quickness, &c., of movement.

23-28. και ο μάλιστα, &c., " and yet what grieved me most was this, that," &c. Supply ην τοῦτο before ὅτι.--θάρσει, "never mind." Literally, "be of good cheer."- άμυνουμαι γάρ αὐτον, "for I will take vengeance upon him."- Tà youv Tav TheovTwv, &c., "at least, then, the fate of those who sail depends upon me," i. e., the fate of navigators, of whom Ulysses at the moment was one.

29-34. $\dot{\eta}$ "Epis, "the (goddess of) Discord."- $\tau \dot{\partial} \delta \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \pi \nu o \nu$, referring to the banquet given at the nuptials of Peleus and Thetis, to which all the deities, except Discord, were invited. -διότι μη και αυτή, &c., "because. as is supposed, she too was not invited to the entertainment." The particle ov in Greek is employed where anything is immediately and directly denied ; but $\mu\eta$, where that which is denied is a mere matter of supposition or conjecture. We have endeavoured, therefore, to express the force of the latter particle, on the present occasion, by the words "as is supposed."— $i\nu \tau \sigma \sigma$ - $o \dot{\tau} \varphi$, "meanwhile." Supply $\chi \rho \delta \nu \varphi$. Literally, "during so much time," i. e., as the entertainment might last, and he himself be away from his watery realms. $-\mu \dot{\eta} \pi \alpha \rho o \tilde{v} \sigma \alpha$, "since she was not present," i. e., not having been invited.

LINE 1-6. $\dot{a}\pi\epsilon\lambda\eta\lambda\dot{v}\vartheta\epsilon\sigma a\nu$, Attic for $\dot{a}\pi\epsilon\lambda\eta\lambda\dot{v}\vartheta\epsilon\iota\sigma a\nu$, from $\dot{a}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\rho$ -85 χομαι.— λαθούσα πάντας, "having escaped the notice of all," i. e., unseen by any one. $-\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \mu \tilde{\epsilon} \nu \pi \iota \nu \acute{o} \nu \tau \omega \nu$, &c., "since some were carousing and some applauding, directing their attention either to Apollo as he played apon the lyre, or to the muses as they sang." The applauding divinities 273

Fage 85 are here distributed into two classes, those who listen to Apollo, and those who form the auditors of the muses. The words of the text, therefore, from $\hat{\eta} \tau \tilde{\varphi} \Lambda \pi \delta \lambda \lambda \omega \iota$ down to $\tau \delta \nu \nu \sigma \delta \nu$ inclusive, are merely an enlarged definition of $\ell \nu \iota \omega \nu \kappa \rho \sigma \tau \delta \nu \nu \sigma \delta \nu$. Gesner's Latin version, appended to several of the editions of Lucian, erroneously refers $\kappa \rho \sigma \tau \delta \nu \tau \delta \nu \tau \delta \nu \tau \delta \nu \tau \delta \lambda \kappa \tau$ to dancing.— $\tau \delta \sigma \nu \mu \pi \delta \sigma \iota \sigma \nu$, "the banqueting hall."— $\ell \nu \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \gamma \rho \pi \pi \sigma \delta \delta \lambda$, &c., "and there was inscribed upon it, 'LET HER THAT IS BEAUTIFUL TAKE ME.'" Literally, "let the beautiful one take me," i. e., the fairest among you.

8-15. $\kappa \alpha \tau \varepsilon \kappa \lambda i \nu o \nu \tau o$, "were reclining." Alluding to the ancient custom of reclining at meals.— $\kappa \dot{\alpha} \pi \varepsilon \iota \delta \eta$, for $\kappa \alpha i \dot{\epsilon} \pi \varepsilon \iota \delta \eta$.— $\tau i \gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho \dot{\epsilon} \delta \varepsilon \iota \pi \sigma \iota \varepsilon \nu$, &c., "for what did it behoove us to do when those goddesses were present?" . e., what had we, humble Nereids, to do with the matter, or how could we presume to contest the prize of beauty when, &c.— $a \dot{\iota} \delta \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha} \nu \tau \varepsilon \sigma \iota \sigma \upsilon \nu \tau \sigma$ $\kappa \dot{\alpha} \sigma \tau \eta$, &c., "they, however, each laid claim to it, and insisted," &c.— $\kappa a \dot{\iota} \dot{\iota} \chi \rho \iota \chi \varepsilon \iota \rho \omega \nu$, &c., "the affair would have advanced even to personal violence," . e., they would have assailed each other with their hands. Literally, "the affair would have advanced even unto hands."— $a \dot{\upsilon} \tau \partial \varsigma \mu \dot{\varepsilon} \nu \sigma \dot{\upsilon} \kappa \rho \iota \nu \tilde{\omega}$ to be the future, whereas the acute on the final syllable shows $\kappa \rho \iota \nu \tilde{\omega}$ o be the future, whereas the acute on the penult would convert it into the present. Moreover, the penult of $\kappa \rho \iota \nu \tilde{\omega}$ is short; of $\kappa \rho \iota \nu \omega$, on the other hand, long.— $a \dot{\upsilon} \tau \partial \nu \delta \iota \kappa \dot{\alpha} \sigma a \iota \dot{\eta} \xi (\sigma \nu \nu, "desired him to settle the point." More$ l.terally, "they deemed it right for him to act as judge."

16-22. τον Πριάμου παίδα. Paris.—δς, "for he," equivalent to ούτος yàp, as beginning a clause.—το καλλίον, "what is the more beautiful," i. e., whatever surpasses other things in beauty —τί οὖν al θεαl. Supply ἐποίησαν.—προζ τὴν ^{*}Ιδην, where Paris was then residing as a shepherd.—μετὰ uικμοι. Supply χρόνον.—ἤδη σοι φημὶ, "I tell thee now (beforehand)." Literally, "I tell thee already."—ἤν μή τι, &c., "unless the umpire be in some way or other very dull of vision."

23-27. $\delta \xi \xi a \iota \mu \varepsilon$, &c., "receive me, oh Sea, having suffered dreadful things:" $\pi \varepsilon \pi \sigma v \vartheta \delta \tau a$, from $\pi \delta \sigma \chi \omega$.— $\kappa a \tau \delta \sigma \delta \varepsilon \sigma \sigma v$, from $\kappa a \tau a \sigma \delta \delta \epsilon v v \nu \mu \iota$.— $\tau \iota$ rov τo ; "what is this?" i. e., what is this that I see in thy appearance?— $\kappa a \tau \varepsilon \kappa a v \sigma \varepsilon v$, from $\kappa a \tau a \kappa a (\omega ... - \dot{a} \lambda \lambda)$ " $\dot{a} \pi \eta v \vartheta \rho \dot{a} \kappa \omega \mu a \iota$ " $\delta \lambda \omega \varsigma$, &c., "but I am quite reduced to a cinder, unfortunate one that I am, and I boil." Literally, "but I, the unfortunate one, am quite reduced," &c.: $\dot{a} \pi \eta v \vartheta \rho \dot{a} \kappa \omega \mu a \iota$, perf. indic. pass. of $\dot{a} \pi a v \vartheta \rho a \kappa \delta \omega$.

29-30. $\delta i a \tau \partial \nu \tau a \dot{\tau} \tau \eta \varsigma$, &c., "on account of the son of Thetis here." The allusion is to Achilles, and the dialogue turns upon the narrative of Homer as given in the Iliad (21, 214, seqq.). Observe the force of $\tau a \dot{\tau} \tau \eta \varsigma$ in the text. As Thetis was a deity of the sea, she is supposed, of course, to be somewhere near. The pronouns $o \dot{\upsilon} \tau o \varsigma$ and $\delta \delta \varepsilon$ frequently obtain, in this way, the force of adverbs in English.— $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon i \gamma a \rho \phi o \nu \epsilon \dot{\upsilon} o \tau \pi a$, &c., "for when I implored him as he was slaughtering," &c., i. e., implored him to desist. Supply $a \dot{\upsilon} \tau \partial \nu$ as agreeing with $\phi o \nu \epsilon \dot{\upsilon} \sigma \tau \pi a$ and governed by ik $\dot{\epsilon} \tau \epsilon \nu \sigma a$.

31-34. $d\lambda\lambda'$ $\dot{v}\pi\dot{o}$ $\tau\omega\nu$ $v\epsilon\kappa\rho\omega\nu$, &c., "but kept damming up my current with the (bodies of the) dead," i. e., with the corses of those whom he was slaughtering. Observe the force of the imperfect $d\pi\epsilon\phi\rho\alpha\tau\tau\epsilon$, from $d\pi\sigma-\phi\rho\delta\tau\tau\omega$.— $\tau\sigma\dot{v}_{c}$ $d\vartheta\lambdaiov$, "the wretched ones."— $\epsilon\pi\eta\lambda\vartheta\sigma\nu$, "I went against him."— $\epsilon\tau\omega\kappa\lambda'\sigma\sigma\iota$, governing $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{v}$ understood.— $d\pi\delta\sigma\chi\sigma\iota\tau\sigma$ $\tau\omega\nu$ $d\nu\delta\rho\omega\nu$, "the might refrain from the men." Literally, "might hold himself from the men." Observe the rotes of the middle.— $\epsilon\tau\nu\chi\epsilon$ $\gamma\lambda\rho$, &c.. "for he 274 chanced to be somewhere in the vicinity." This is a common construction of $\tau v \gamma \chi \dot{a} v \omega$ with a participle, and is analogous to the Latin forte with a verb. $-\pi \tilde{a} v$, $\delta \mu a\iota$, $\delta \sigma ov \dot{e}v$, &c., "came upon me, bringing (with him) all his fire, 1 whink, as much as he had in Lemnos, and as much as he had in Ætna, and v (he had any more) anywhere else," i. c., and as much as he had in any other quarter. Lemnos and Ætna were the two fabled seats of Vulcan's labours, and where his forges were said to be placed.

LINE 4-5. $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{o}v$ $\delta\dot{e}$ $\dot{e}\mu\dot{e}$, &c., "and having caused me myself to boil over, he has almost made me entirely dry." Whenever the Attics wish to make the reflective pronouns $\dot{e}\mu av\tau o\tilde{v}$, $\sigma \epsilon av\tau o\tilde{v}$, &c., emphatic, they separate the component parts and invert them as in the present instance.— $\dot{v}\pi\epsilon\rho\kappa a\chi\lambda\dot{a}\sigma a\iota$. This verb has a particular reference, not expressed, however, in the translation, to the noise made by water in a boiling state. $u\kappa\rho o\tilde{v}\,\delta\epsilon\tilde{i}v$, "almost." An idiomatic form of expression, where $\ddot{\omega}\sigma\tau\epsilon$ seems to have been originally understood, "so as to want little." To the same effect is $\dot{o}\lambda\dot{i}\gamma ov$ $\delta\epsilon\tilde{i}v$. Directly opposite to these is the phrase $\pi o\lambda\lambda o\tilde{v}\,\delta\epsilon\tilde{i}v$. Thus, δ , $\pi o\lambda\lambda o\tilde{v}\,\delta\epsilon\tilde{i}v$, $\epsilon\dot{i}\pi o\iota\,\tau\iota\varsigma\,\dot{a}v$, "which any one would be far enough from saying."— $\delta\pi\omega\varsigma\,\delta\iota\dot{a}\kappa\epsilon\iota\mu\alpha\iota$, "in what state I am." Literally, "how I am affected."

7-8. $\vartheta o \lambda \varepsilon \rho \delta \varsigma$. Supply $\varepsilon l_{\varsigma} = \Xi \acute{a} \upsilon \vartheta \varepsilon$. The Xanthus and Simois were the two famous rivers of the plain of Troy. Another name for the Xanthus was the Scamander. According to Homer, the river was called Xanthus by the gods, and Scamander by men.— $\dot{\omega}_{\varsigma} \varepsilon l\kappa \delta \varsigma$, "as is but natural." Erroneously rendered here by some, "as it seems."— $\tau \delta$ alua $\mu \delta \nu$, &c., "tis the blood from the corses; and the heat, as thou sayest, from the fire." This is a much simpler way of rendering, with an ellipsis merely of $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \lambda$.

9-11. καὶ εἰκότως, "and rightly art thou in this condition." Supply οῦτω διάκεισαι.—ôς ὥρμησας, "since thou didst make an onset."--viωròν The Sea was the mother of Thetis.—oὐκ αἰδεσθεὶς, &c., "having shown him no respect for being the son of a Nereid." Literally, "because he was." Equivalent to οὐκ αἰδεσθεἰς αὐτὸν Νηρηΐδος viὸν ὄντα.—οὐκ ἔδει οὖν. Supply ἐμὲ.—γείτονας ὄντας, "who were my neighbours."

15-17. τί ἄγχεις, &c., "why, oh Protesilaus, having made an attack upon Helen, art thou trying to strangle her?"— $\dot{\eta}$ μιτελη μεν, &c., "having left my dwelling only half completed and my newly-married wife a widow." The female referred to is Laodamia. Much difference of opinion exists among the commentators on Lucian, with regard to the expression $\dot{\eta}$ μιτελη δόμον in the text. Hemsterhuis and others refer it to the want of offspring, &c., and think that Lucian means to explain it by what follows immediately after, namely, $\chi \dot{\eta} \rho a v \delta \epsilon \tau \dot{\eta} v v \epsilon \delta \gamma a \mu ov \gamma v v a \tilde{k} \alpha$. As, however, the expression is an Homeric one (for it occurs at Il., 2, 701, where the allusion is also to Protesilaus), it will be best to render it in accordance with Homeric simplicity, and the manners of an early age. The δόμος $\dot{\eta} \mu \iota \tau \epsilon \lambda \eta \varsigma$, then, of Protesilaus is merely the half-finished mansion, to which, when completed, he intended to remove his young bride Laodamia from her father's home; a plan frustrated, however, by the summons to join the Grecian army for Troy.

19-22. $ai\tau\iota \tilde{\omega} \tau oivvv$, &c., "blame, then, this Merelaus here:" $ai\tau\iota \tilde{\omega}$ is the 2d sing. pres. imperat. contracted for $ai\tau\iota \dot{a}ov$, from $ai\tau\iota \dot{a}o\mu a\iota$. Observe the force of the article here, which indicates a pointing towards Menelaus

fage $-i\pi \epsilon \rho$ τοιαύτης γυναικός, "on account of such a woman." Expressive of contempt, and referring to Helen.—έκεινόν μοι αιτιστέον, "him must I blame." Supply έστί. Verbals in στέον denote necessity, and govern the dative of the person together with the case of their own verb.—οὐκ ἐμὲ, ὡ βέλτιστε, "not me, my very good sir." οὐκ ἐμὲ is here elliptical, for οὐκ ἐμὲ αἰτιατέον σοι ἑστί, "thou must not blame me."

23-28. $\delta \varsigma \ \epsilon \mu o \tilde{v} \ \tau o \tilde{v} \ \xi \epsilon v o v$, &c., "who ran off with the wife of me his host, contrary to everything that was just." Literally, "who departed, having carried off the wife of me his host, contrary to all just things." Paris was hospitably entertained by Menelaus at the time of the abduction of Helen.— $\epsilon \mu o \tilde{v}$, the more emphatic form of the personal pronoun.— $- \check{a} \mu \epsilon v o v$ $o \tilde{v} \tau \omega$, "its better so," i. e., is better for me to act as thou hast just recommended. The full clause is, $\check{a} \mu \epsilon v o v \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau i \mu o i o \tilde{v} \tau \omega \sigma i \epsilon i v. ... - \sigma \dot{\epsilon} \tau o i \gamma a - \rho o \tilde{v} v$, $\check{\omega} \ \Delta v \sigma \pi a \rho i$, &c., "thee, therefore, ill-fated Paris, I will never, depend upon it, let escape from my hands." The appellation $\Delta v \sigma \pi a \rho i \varsigma$ is of Homeric origin (Il., 3, 39). Observe the force of $\tau o i \gamma a \rho o \tilde{v} v$, "on this account, depend upon it," or "on this very account truly," where four particles ($\tau o i$, $\gamma \varepsilon$, $\check{a} \rho a$, and o v v) are combined.

29-32. $\delta \delta \iota \kappa a \pi \sigma \iota \tilde{\omega} v$, &c., "acting unjustly towards me (all the while), oh Protesilaus, and that, too, when I am of the same calling with thyself." Supply $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\dot{\epsilon}$ with $\dot{\alpha}\delta\iota\kappa a \pi \sigma\iota\tilde{\omega} v$, the participle governing a double accusative. The words $\dot{\alpha}\delta\iota\kappa a \pi\sigma\iota\tilde{\omega} v$ must be taken in connexion with what immediately precedes. The full expression will be as follows : $\kappa a\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\epsilon}\mu\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\dot{\kappa}\dot{\kappa}\dot{a}\phi\eta\sigma\epsilon\iota\varsigma\pi\sigma\tau\dot{\epsilon}\dot{a}\pi\dot{\sigma}\tau\tilde{\omega} v \chi\epsilon\iota\rho\tilde{\omega} v$, $\dot{a}\delta\iota\kappa a \pi\sigma\iota\tilde{\omega} v$, " and thou wilt never (as thou sayest) let me escape from thy hands, acting unjustly towards me (all the while)," i. e., and if thou doest so thou wilt be acting an unjust part. Some very awkwardly make $\pi\sigma\iota\tilde{\omega} v$ here equivalent to $\pi\sigma\iota\epsilon\hat{c}$, and, what is very surprising, Jacobs himself is among the number.— $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\omega\tau\iota\kappa\delta\varsigma\gamma\dot{\alpha}\rho$ $\kappa\dot{\alpha}\dot{\epsilon}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma$ I myself, too, am a lover, and am held down (in subjugation) by the same god," i. e., by the god of love, or 'E $\rho\omega\varsigma$, as implied in $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\omega\tau\iota\kappa\delta\varsigma$ $\dot{\omega}\varsigma$ $\dot{\alpha}\kappa\sigma\dot{\nu}$ $\sigma\iota\delta\tau\dot{\tau}$, "what an involuntary thing it is." Referring to the passion of love. For a literal translation, say "what an involuntary thing the loving is," and supply $\tau\dot{\delta}\dot{\epsilon}\rho\tilde{\alpha}v$ $\dot{\delta}\delta\iota\mu\omega v$, "this divinity," referring again to Eros

87 LINE 1-9. είθε οὖν μοι, &c., "would, then, it were possible for me to catch that Love here !"—τὰ δίκαια, "what is just."—φήσει γὰρ aὐτὸς, &c., "for he will say, that he himself was perhaps the cause of love to Paris." Literally, "the cause of his loving," τοῦ ἐρὰν being equivalent to a verbal noun. Observe the nominative with the infinitive, as referring to the same person implied in φήσει.—τοῦ θανάτου δὲ, &c., "but that no one else was the cause of death to thee, save thine own self." Supply γε-γενῆσθαι aἴτιον, and observe the change to the accusative with the infinitive, the reference being no longer to the same person that is implied in φήσει.—έκλαθόμενος, "having completely forgotten," from ἐκλανθάνω —προεπήδησας τῶν ἄλλων, 'didst leap forth before the rest." The genitive ἄλλων is governed by πρό in composition.—δόξης ἐρασθεὶς, "enamoured of giery."—πρῶτος ἐν τῆ ἀποβάσει, &c. Compare Homer, Π., 2, 701.

10-13. ἀποκρινοῦμαι δικαιότερα, "I will give a still more just reply," i. e., still more just than that which thou hast just given for Eros.--καὶ τὸ οὕτως ἐπικεκλῶσθαι, "and its having been so decreed," i. e., by fate: perf. infin. pass. of ἐπικλώθω —τί οὖν τούτους αἰτιῷ; "why then dost thou blame these here?" 2d sing pres. indic. of αἰτιάομαι.

14-15. τὸ κῆτος ὑμιῦν, "that sea-monster of yours" The Greeks use 276

the personal for the possessive pronoun (as here, $i\mu\omega\nu$ for $i\mu\epsilon\tau\epsilon\rho\nu$) where an emphasis is required.— $\delta \epsilon\pi\epsilon\mu\psi\alpha\tau\epsilon$. The sea-monster was sent to ravage the coast of Æthiopia, because Cassiope, the mother of Andromeda, had boasted that she was fairer than Juno and the Nereids. The oracle of Ammon, on being consulted by Cepheus, monarch of the country, declared, that the only way of escaping from this evil was to expose Andromeda to the monster, which was accordingly done. This is what Lucian means by the words $\delta \epsilon\pi i \tau \eta\nu \tau o\tilde{v} K\eta\phi\epsilon\omega\varsigma \vartheta vyar\epsilon\rhoa \tau \eta\nu$ 'Av $\delta\rhoo\mu\epsilon\deltaav \epsilon\pi\epsilon\mu\psia\tau\epsilon$.

18-23. ἀπέκτεινεν. Supply αὐτὸ.—μετὰ πολλῆς δυνάμεως, "with a large force."—οὐκ, "no."—ὃ μετὰ τῆς μητρὸς, &c., "whom, together with his mother, in the coffer, when cast upon the sea by his maternal grand-father, you saved from destruction." Acrisius, king of Argos, exposed his daughter Danaë, and her offspring Perseus, in an open coffer on the sea They were saved by the Nereids, and wafted to the island of Seriphus.-- αὐτούς. Referring to the mother and the son.

24-32. $\epsilon i k \partial \varsigma \delta \delta$, "and it is a fair supposition." Supply $\epsilon \sigma \tau \delta$.— $\nu \epsilon a \nu (a \nu, a greeing with a \dot{\nu} \tau \delta \nu$ understood.— $i \delta \epsilon \bar{\nu}$, "to be beheld," i. e., to the view. où yàp dà aù tòv $\epsilon \chi p \bar{\eta} \nu$, "for it surely did not behove him."— $\epsilon \sigma \tau \delta \lambda \eta$, from $\sigma \tau \epsilon \lambda \lambda \omega$.— $\bar{u} \vartheta \lambda \delta \nu \tau \iota \nu a \tau o \bar{\nu} \tau \sigma \nu$, &c., "to perform in this a certain task for the king (of Seriphus)." Literally, "to perform this as a certain task." $\epsilon \pi \iota \tau \epsilon \lambda \delta \omega \nu$ is the future participle active, Attic contracted form for $\epsilon \pi \iota \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \sigma \omega \nu$.— $\tau \phi \beta \alpha \sigma \iota \lambda \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$. Alluding to Polydectes, king of Seriphus, to which island the coffer had been carried by the winds and waves.— $\epsilon \nu \vartheta a \ \eta \sigma a \nu$, "where were" ... he was going to add, "the Gorgons," but the other interrupts him. In strictness, therefore, $\eta \sigma a \nu$ agrees with al Topyóveç unenunciated.— $\sigma \nu \mu \mu \alpha \chi o \nu \varsigma$, "as auxiliaries."

LINE 2-6. $\delta \pi \sigma v \ \delta i \eta \tau \tilde{\omega} \tau \tau \sigma$, "to the quarter where they dwelt." 88 Alluding to the Gorgons. Supply $\dot{\epsilon} v \tau a \tilde{v} \vartheta a$ (indicating motion to a place) before $\delta \pi \sigma v. - \delta i \eta \tau \tilde{\omega} v \tau \sigma$, from $\delta i a i \tau \dot{a} \phi a i. - \phi \chi \epsilon \tau' \dot{a} \pi \sigma \pi \tau \dot{a} \mu \epsilon v \sigma \varsigma$, "flew quickly away." $-\pi \tilde{\omega} \varsigma \ i \delta \omega v$, &c., "in what way having got a view of them, for they are not lawful to be beheld," i. e., it is not lawful to look upon them. $-\eta \delta \varsigma \ a v \ i \delta \eta$, &c., "or else, whoever beholds them, will not in all like lihood, after this, behold anything else." Observe here the peculiar force which the particle $\dot{a} v$ gives to the optative, as a softening down of the future

13–17. καὶ πρὶν ἀνεγρέσθαι τὰς ἀδελφὰς, '' and before her sisters awoke :''

^{Fage} 2d aor. infin. m.d. of ἀνεγείρω.—ἐπεὶ δὲ κατὰ τὴν παράλιαν, &c.. "but when he was come unto this part of Ælhiopia, that lies along the sea."—προκειμένην, "lying exposed."—προσπεπατταλευμένην, "firmly riveted thereto," from προσπατταλεύω.—καθειμένην τὰς κόμας, "having her hair hanging down." Literally, "hanging down as to her hair :" καθειμένην, from καθίημι. The participle here, by a concise mode of expression, 1s made to agree with the person instead of the thing.

19-25. την τύχην αὐτῆς, "her lot."--τῆς καταδίκης, " of her condemnation," i. e., of her having been condemned to this state. - κατά μικρόν δέ alovs, &c., "having become, however, gradually enamoured, he resolved to aid her." Literally, "having, however, by little (and little) been captivated by love." $\dot{\alpha}\lambda o \dot{\nu} g$ is the 2d aor. part. act. of $\dot{\alpha}\lambda i \sigma \kappa \omega$, with a passive meaning. The 2d aor. and perfect act. of this verb have a passive force .- ws καταπιόμενον, "in order to devour," fut. part. mid. of καταπίνω. The particle ω_{c} is often joined with the future participle to indicate intention or design. $-\tau \tilde{\eta} \mu \tilde{\epsilon} v$. Supply $\chi \epsilon \iota \rho \iota$, as referring to the hand armed with the sword. $\tau \tilde{\eta}$ de. $\pi \rho o \delta \epsilon \iota \kappa v v \varsigma$, &c, "while, displaying in front of him with the other the Gorgon-head." Supply χειρί again.—αὐτὸ, referring to the monster. -την Γοργόνα, equivalent here to την Γοργόνος κεφαλήν.-το δε τέθνηκεν όμοῦ, &c., "it thereupon, at one and the same moment, died, and the greater part of it, as much as had seen Medusa, became stiffened (and petrified)." Literally, "and most parts of it, as many as," &c. With $\pi o \lambda \lambda \dot{a}$ supply $\mu \hat{\epsilon} \rho \eta$.

26-30. ὑποσχών τὴν χεῖρα, "having held his hand under," i. e., as support.—ὀλισθηρᾶς οὕσης, "which was smooth and slippery."—έν τοῦ Κηφέως, "in the mansion of Cepheus." Supply οἶκω.—καὶ ἀπάξει αὐτὴν, "and he intends to lead her away."—γάμον οὐ τὸν τυχόντα, "no ordinary match," i. e., a husband of no ordinary rank. The participle of τυγχάνω is often used in this sense. Thus, ὁ τυχών, "an ordinary person" (i. e., a person whom one meets with at any time or place); τὰ τυχόντα, "common" or "ordinary things." Hence γάμον οὐ τὸν τυχόντα would mean literally, "a match not such as one meets with every day," i. e., not an every-day match.

31-36. $\tau i \gamma \partial \rho \dot{\eta} \pi a \tilde{\iota} \varsigma$, &c., "for what harm did the girl do us?" Literally "in what did the girl wrong us ?"— $\tau \dot{\sigma} \tau \varepsilon$, "on that occasion," referring to the time, now gone by, when the offence was first given.— $\kappa a \dot{\eta} \dot{\xi} i ov \kappa a \lambda$ - $\lambda i \omega v \varepsilon i v a \iota$, "and claimed to be fairer than we." Supply $\dot{\eta} \mu \tilde{\omega} v$, as governed by the comparative.— $\ddot{\sigma} \tau \iota \ o \ddot{v} \tau \omega \varsigma \ a v$, &c. "(The girl ought to have perished notwithstanding), because in this way Cassiope would have grieved for her daughter, if she had at least a mother's feelings." Hemsterhuis correctly remarks, that these words are not meant as a direct answer to what immediately precedes, but that something must be supplied in order to connect them with what goes before.— $\mu \dot{\eta} \tau \eta \rho \gamma \varepsilon o \dot{v} \sigma a$. More literally, "if, at least, she were a mother."— $\varepsilon \dot{\tau} \tau i \beta \dot{a} \rho \delta a \rho \varsigma \gamma v v \dot{\eta}$, &c., "if a barbarian female has asserted anything beyond her merits," i. e., beyond what she had a right to assert. The expression $\varepsilon \dot{\tau} \tau \tau$ takes here the place of $\ddot{a} \tau \iota v a$ ("whatsoever things a barbarian female has uttered," &c.). So, in Latin, we have often si quid for qua.

GEOGRAPHY.

LINE 5. The doikhtov, "which is incapale of being inhabited." 89 Supply ovons after The Tois 'Auasoikous, "the wagon-inhabiting (Scythians)," i. e., the Scythians who live in wagons. These tribes had no towns or villages, and no fixed places of residence. Their wagons served them for dwellings, and they roamed about with their families and herds to any quarter where they could find good pasturage. Hence they are also called by the Greek writers 'Αμαξόδιοι (Hamaxobii). We have adopted in the text the reading 'Auažoikois, as far preferable to the common lection 'Aμαξικοῖς. Besides 'Aμάξοικοι occurs elsewhere in Strabo, from whom the present extract is made, but 'Aµaξικοί not at all. (Compare Tzschucke, ad Strab., 11, p. 492, Cas.) Jacobs speaks of 'Aµaξoíκoiç as a suggestion of Oertel's. Coray, on the other hand, appears to regard it as an emendation of his own, and it is assigned to him as such by Friedemann (ad Strab., 2, p. 126, Cas.). The alteration is, in fact, a very obvious one, and might have suggested itself to many at the same time. $-\tau \sigma i \zeta \pi \epsilon \rho i \tau \delta \nu T u \nu a i \nu$, &c., "who live around the Tanais and the sca Mæotis," &c. Literally, "who are." Supply ovoi.

7-10. $\tau \tilde{\eta} \varsigma$ Sè olk $\eta \sigma i \mu o v$, &c., "now, of the habitable region, the part that is very inclement, and that which is mountainous, are dwelt in with great toil, by reason of their very nature; and yet even those parts, that are with difficulty inhabited, are tamed down (and made productive) on having received skilful cultivators." With olknoi supply xwpas, with δυσχείμερον and $\delta \rho \epsilon \iota \nu \delta \nu$ supply $\mu \epsilon \rho \sigma \varsigma$, and $\mu \epsilon \rho \eta$ with $\tau a \delta \iota \kappa \delta \nu \mu \epsilon \nu a$. $-\kappa a \vartheta a \pi \epsilon \rho$, "as, for instance."—κατέχοντες, "though possessing."— $\mathring{\phi}$ κουν καλῶς, "neverthe less dwelt comfortably and well." καλῶς is here best expressed by two English adverbs.—διὰ τὴν πρόνοιαν τὴν, &c., "on account of the prudent foresight, exercised by them in things that appertained to government, and the arts, and to the knowledge that was otherwise requisite for the management of life." Literally, "on account of the foresight that was to them," &c. The full form is $\tau \eta \nu \pi \rho \delta \nu o \iota a \nu \tau \eta \nu o \upsilon \sigma a \nu$. So again, towards the end of the clause, the full form is $\tau \eta \nu \ a \lambda \lambda \eta \nu \ \sigma \delta \nu \epsilon \sigma \iota \nu \ \tau \eta \nu \ o \delta \sigma a \nu$. When an article is repeated in this way after a noun, it has generally a participle connected with it, either expressed or understood.— $\kappa a \lambda \tau o \delta \chi \delta \gamma \rho \iota \omega \tau \epsilon \rho o \nu c$, &c., " taught even those more savage than the rest to live under regular government," i. e., in regularly organized society. $-\dot{\alpha}\gamma\rho\iota\omega\tau\epsilon\rho\sigma\nu\varsigma$, agreeing with άνθρώπους, as implied in έθνη.

15-19. καὶ ταύτη, διότι, "in this respect also, that"— θνώματα δὲ καὶ, &c., "whereas they procure aromatics and precious stones from abroad, to those who are deprived of which things life is in no respect worse off than it is to those who abound in them," i. e., those, who have them not, live as happily as those who have them.— ὡς ὅ' αῦτως, "in like manner too," put for ὡσαύτως δὲ.

22-25. $\lambda \epsilon \pi \tau \eta \nu \epsilon \chi o \nu \tau \alpha \gamma \eta \nu$, "having only a thin covering of soil."— $\tau \eta \nu \pi o \lambda \lambda \eta \nu$, "for the most part." Supply $\mu \epsilon \rho i \delta \alpha$, and consult Bos, Ellips. Gr., s. ν . $\mu \epsilon \rho i \varsigma$.— $\eta \delta \epsilon \pi \rho \delta \sigma \delta \rho \delta \rho \delta \varsigma$. Supply $\mu \epsilon \rho i \varsigma$.— $\pi \rho \delta \varsigma \tau \eta \tau \rho \alpha \chi \delta \tau \eta \tau \iota$, "in addition to its ruggedness," i. e., the rough and uneven character of the ground.— $\pi \tilde{\alpha} \sigma \alpha \sigma \chi \epsilon \delta \delta \nu \tau \iota$, "is nearly all." The indefinite $\tau \iota$ is very often joined in this way with adverbs, or neuter adjectives standing as adverbs, in order to temper the expression. Consult Matth., G. G., § 487.— $\kappa \alpha \lambda$ given ^{fage} 89 διαφερόντως, "and especially the portion that lies without the Pillars (of Hercules)," i. e., without the Straits of Gibraltar. The full form of expression would be $\dot{\eta}$ μερίς $\dot{\eta}$ οὖσα ἑξω στηλῶν.

26-28. την Βαιτικην, "Bætica," one of the divisions of Spain Supply, for a literal translation, $\gamma \eta v. - \sigma o \phi \omega \tau a \tau o t,$ "the most intelligent." – ἀναπλέεται, εται, "is navigated up stream." Strabo, in explanation of ἀναπλέεται, adds εἰς την μεσογαῖαν, &c., which Jacobs here omits. – εἰσι, a deviation from the common rule, which would require ἐστὶ with neuters plural.

90 LINE 2-5. $o\dot{v}\tau o\iota \dots \dot{\rho}\iota\zeta o\phi a\gamma o\tilde{v}\tau \epsilon\varsigma$. Observe the masculine here, although the neuter, $\lambda a\gamma\iota\delta\iota\omega\nu$ (from $\lambda a\gamma\iota\delta\iota\sigma\nu$), precedes. Such deviations from the ordinary rule of gender frequently occur, when the writer has in his mind some other word, different in form, though the same in meaning with the word which he has just written. So here Strabo has $\lambda a\gamma\omegao\iota$ in view, not $\lambda a\gamma\iota\delta\iota a$. (Compare the remarks of Duker, ad Thucyd., 2, 47.) $o\dot{\upsilon}\delta\epsilon$ $\delta\eta$, "nor even indeed."— $o\dot{\upsilon}\delta a\mu o\tilde{\upsilon} \tau\eta\varsigma \gamma\eta\varsigma$, &c., "has been found to be produced anywhere on earth, up to the present day, either in so great abundance or of so good a quality," i. e., has been discovered to exist, &c. The verb $\dot{\epsilon}\xi\epsilon\tau\dot{a}\zeta\omega$ indicates here the result of actual examination and comparison. With the phrase $o\dot{\upsilon}\delta a\mu o\tilde{\upsilon} \tau\eta\varsigma \gamma\eta\varsigma$ (literally, "nowhere, in respect of earth"), compare the Latin nusquam terrarum.

7-13. où $\mu \epsilon \tau a \lambda \lambda \epsilon \dot{\nu} \epsilon \tau a \iota \mu \acute{o} vov, \&c., "is not obtained by mining merely,$ but is also washed down." Literally, "but is also dragged down," i. e., $by the force of the waters.—<math>\tau \eta \nu \chi \rho \nu \sigma \tilde{\iota} \tau \iota \dot{\nu} \dot{\mu} \mu \rho \nu$, "the auriferous sand." Sometimes expressed by a single word $\chi \rho \dot{\nu} \sigma a \mu \mu \rho \varsigma$.— $\dot{a} \lambda \lambda' \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$, "in the latter, however," i. e., in the places that are free from water.— $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \kappa \lambda \dot{\nu} \sigma \tau \sigma \varsigma$, "washed by bodies of water."— $\tau \dot{\rho} \psi \eta \gamma \mu a$, "the fine grain."— $\hat{\alpha} \varsigma \kappa a \lambda o \tilde{\nu} \sigma \tau$ "washed by bodies of water."— $\tau \dot{\rho} \psi \eta \gamma \mu a$, "the fine grain."— $\hat{\alpha} \varsigma \kappa a \lambda o \tilde{\nu} \sigma \tau$ "washed by bodies of water."— $\tau \dot{\rho} \psi \eta \gamma \mu a$, "the fine grain."— $\hat{\alpha} \varsigma \kappa a \lambda o \tilde{\nu} \sigma \tau$ "washed by bodies of gold "palacr" There appears to be some error here in the Greek text, as regards this native term. Pliny (33, 4) says that the Spaniards called the lumps of gold "palacra" or "palacrana," that is, making allowance for the Latin termination, "palacr" or "palacrana." He also states, that they called the fine grain of gold "balluc." (Hispani quod minutum est ballucem vocant, &c., 33, 3). For $\pi a \lambda \alpha \varsigma$, therefore, in Strabo we ought probably to read $\pi a \lambda \alpha \kappa \alpha \varsigma$.

16-23. διαπεπλεγμένας νεύροις, "formed of the sinews of animals interlacing each other."—περιττότερον, "unusually well." The ellipsis may be supplied by τοῦ κοινοῦ, just as περιττόν among the ancient rhetori cal writers is opposed to κοινόν and δημῶδες. (Ernesti, Lex. Techn., s. v.)-σαυνίοις όλοσιδήροις ἀγκιστρώδεσιν, "barbed javelins all of iron." As regards the force of ἀγκιστρώδεσιν here, compare the expression ἡγκισrρωμένας ἀκίδας employed by Plutarch in speaking of the barbed arrows of the Parthians. (Vit. Crass., c. 25).—εὐκίνητοι, "nimble."—ἐπιτηδεύουσι, "they perform."—καὶ περιέχουσαν, &c., "and requiring great agility of 'imbs."—πρὸς ῥυθμὸν, "with a regular cadence."

25-31. κατὰ τὸ ὕψος, "in their height." Literally, "as to their height." -τῶν ἄλλων, "from all others." Literally, "from the rest."—πολλῶν Sὲ ὄντων. The particle δὲ is equivalent here to γάρ.—ἀφέντων πῦρ, "who 'al been careless with fire." More literally, "having neglected fire." This is often erroneously rendered, "who had set fire to it." The source of the mistake is in the Latin version of Rhodomann.—κατακαῆναι, from κατακαίω.—συχνὰς ἡμέρας, "for many days in succession."—τὴν ἐπιφάνειαν, "the surfuce."—κληθῆναι Πυρηναῖα. The meaning is, that they were called Πυρηναῖα (ὄρη), from πῦρ, "fire," as we would say in Englis' 280

Page "the fire-mountains," or "the burnt mountains." This derivation, 90 like so many others on the part of the Greek writers, is good for nothing. The true etymology is from the Celtic Pyren, or Pyrn, meaning "a high mountain," and from this same root may be deduced the name of Mount Brenner in the Tyrol; that of Pyern in Upper Austria, and many others. (Consult Adelung, Mithridates, vol. ii., p. 67.)

33-36. της δε τούτου, " and that, the value of this metal being unknown to the natives."— $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\pi\sigma\rho\dot{\epsilon}a\iota\varsigma\,\chi\rho\omega\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\sigma\nu\varsigma$, "being traders." Literally," making use of traffickings."— $\dot{a}\gamma\sigma\rho\dot{a}\zeta\epsilon\iota\nu\,\tau\dot{o}\nu\,\dot{a}\rho\gamma\nu\rho\sigma\nu$, &c., "bought up the silver by a trifling exchange of other commodities," i. e., by giving in exchange for it some trifling articles of merchandise.

LINE 5-13. γυμνοὺς τῆς ἐσθῆτος, "bare of attire."-Baλλιαρεῖς, 91 "Balleāres."—κάλλιστα, "most skilfully."—κατὰ τὰς πολεμικὰς χρείας, "for warlike purposes." Literally, "for warlike uses."—ωστeδοκεῖν τὸ βληθὲν, &c., "that what is (thus) discharged appears to be borne onward from some catapulta," i. e., from some military engine. As regards the catapulta, consult the note on line 25, page 43.

15-23. $\dot{\eta} \Gamma a \lambda a \tau i a$. We must bear in mind, when reading the account of the Gallic climate in the text, that ancient Gaul extended northward to the mouths of the Rhine.— $\delta\iota a\phi \epsilon \rho \delta \nu \tau \omega \varsigma$, "in an especial degree."— $d\nu \tau i$ μέν τῶν ὄμβρων, " instead of the showers (that fall in more southern lands)." Ubserve the force of the article. $-\chi_i \delta \nu_i \pi o \lambda \lambda \tilde{\eta} \nu i \phi \epsilon \tau a_i$, "it is snowed upon with much snow." We must be careful not to regard vioeral here as an impersonal. Compare Herodotus (4, 31) and Xenophon (Hist. Gr., 2, 4, 2). where the passive voice of $\nu i \phi \omega$ is employed with the same meaning as in our text.— $\kappa a \tau a$ $\delta \epsilon \tau a c a d \rho i a c, "while, under clear, calm skies," i. e.,$ in clear, calm weather.— $\delta i \hat{\alpha} \tau \tilde{\eta} \varsigma i \delta i \alpha \varsigma \phi \upsilon \sigma \varepsilon \omega \varsigma \gamma \varepsilon \phi \upsilon \rho \sigma \tilde{\upsilon} \upsilon \tau \alpha i$, "are bridged over by their own nature," i. e., without the assistance of art .- oi τυχόντες όδιται, "ordinary travellers." Consult note on line 29, page 88 .- κατ' όλίγους, " in small parties."-κατὰ τοῦ κρυστάλλου, " along the ice," i. e., over the ice.-διαδαίνουσιν. Supply τούς ποτάμους.-στρατοπέδων μυpiúdes, "armies of ten thousand men." The definite number is here used as an indefinite. It is the same as saying, "entire armies of many thousand men."

26-35. $\tau \epsilon \mu \nu \delta \nu \tau \omega \nu$, "intersecting." — $\tau d \xi \pi \eta \gamma \partial \zeta \kappa \partial \tau \partial \zeta \epsilon \pi i \beta \rho \delta (a \zeta, "their$ sources and their supplies."— $\dot{\omega}\kappa\epsilon a\nu\dot{\rho}\nu$. The Atlantic.— $oi\ \delta\dot{\epsilon}\ \epsilon i\varsigma\ \tau\dot{\eta}\nu$, &c., "and others into our sea." Referring to the Mediterranean. The expression is analogous to the Marc nostrum of the Latin writers .- είς το καθ' ήμᾶς πέλαγος, "into our deep." The reference is the same as in the preceding sentence.-είς την έσω θάλασσαν, "to the inner sea." Again alluding to the Mediterranean. The Greek is nothing more than a translation of the well-known form Mare Internum.- Kai Eµπaliv, " and back again."-όλίγων τινῶν χωρίων, " only a few places."

LINE 3-10. ὀρυχθείσιν, from ὀρύσσω.-ἐπὶ μικρὸν, "to (only) 92a little depth." $-\pi\lambda$ ákeç, "plates," i. e., laminæ. $-\epsilon\sigma\vartheta$ őre, "some-times." Contracted from $\epsilon\sigma\tau\iota$ $\delta\tau\epsilon$. $-\tau\delta$ $\delta\epsilon$ $\lambda \iota \iota \pi \delta \nu$, &c., "the rest consists of the fine grain, and of lumps, these also requiring no great degree of labour," i. e., which in like manner require, &c.— $\kappa \rho i \kappa \sigma v \varsigma \pi a \chi \epsilon i \varsigma \delta \lambda \sigma \chi \rho v \sigma \sigma v \varsigma$, " thick collars of solid gold."

14-16. кай то кратиоточ, &c., " and these furnish the Romans with their best cavalry," i. e., the best cavalry in the Roman armies is obtained from Gaul. $-\tau \tilde{\varphi}$ δè $\dot{a}\pi \lambda \tilde{\varphi}$ καὶ $\vartheta v \mu \iota \kappa \tilde{\varphi}$, &c., "but (at the same time) there is added A 2 281

6 to this simple and irascible character, on the part of the Gauls, much of thoughtlessness, and vain-boasting, and fondness for ornament."
Literally, "there is added for the Gauls."—κάθυγροι και λευκοί, "succulent and fair."—άλλὰ και διὰ τῆς κατασκευῆς, &c., "but they strive also to increase the native peculiarity of its colour by artificial means." The expression τὴν ψυσικὴν τῆς χρόας ἰδιότητα refers to the τὸ ξανθόν, or ruddy colour of their hair.

23-24. $\delta_{1a}\phi_{a}\nu\epsilon_{1c}$, "of a clear, bright colour."—καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν μετώπων. &c., "they draw them back even from their foreheads to the top of the head. and (thence) to the tendons of the neck."- ὥστε την πρόσοψιν, &c., " so that their look appears like (that of) Satyrs and Pans." The Havec of the Greeks were the same with the Fauni or Panisci of the Latin writers. Sometimes, as we are informed by the scholiast on Theocritus (4, 62), both the Satyri and the Sileni were called Pans. (Consult Tcup, ad Schol., l. c.). The ancient artists always represented the hair of the Satyrs and Fauns as erect, and, at the same time, curling a little over towards the upper part. The term applied to this mode of arranging the hair was εὐθύθριξ (Pollux, 2, 22), and it is alluded to by Suetonius in speaking of the personal appearance of Augustus (" capillum leniter inflexum habuit." Aug., 79). The god Pan was also thus represented, and hence the epithet φριξοκόμης given him in poetry. (Brunck., Anal., 1, 197.) The object in arranging the hair thus was to make it resemble more that of the goat.---(Compare Winckelmann, Gesch. der Kunst des Alt., vol. ii., p. 220.)

25-26. παχύνονται ἀπὸ τῆς κατεργασίας, "are rendered coarse by this treatment," i. e., by working them in this way.—τῆς τῶν ἱππων, &c. The coarseness thus imparted to the hair of the Gauls, and which made it resemble horse's hair, gave, of course, a more animal-appearance to the visage, and hence the comparison between it and the look of Satyrs.

28-29. μετρίως ὑποτρέφουσιν, "nourish a moderate beard underneath." —τὰς δ' ὑπήνας, &c., "but leave the hair on the upper lip to itself," i. e., allow it to grow. More literally, "but permit the hair on the upper lip to pe left to itself."

32-36. $\sigma \nu \nu \omega \rho(\sigma \nu \nu)$. Analogous to the Latin big a.—kaì $\pi a \rho a b a \tau \eta \nu$, "and a warrior by his side."— $\tau \alpha \varsigma$ $\pi a \rho a \tau \alpha \zeta \varepsilon \varsigma \varsigma$, "their arrays of battle."— $\pi \rho o \alpha \dot{\sigma} \gamma \varepsilon \nu$ $\tau \eta \varsigma$ $\pi a \rho a \tau \alpha \zeta \varepsilon \varepsilon \varsigma$, "to advance in front of the line."— $\delta \tau a \nu \delta \varepsilon \tau \iota \varsigma \dot{\nu} \pi a - c \circ \sigma \eta$, &c., "and whenever any one lends a willing ear to them for the fight," i. e., whenever any one accepts the challenge.

93 LINE 1-10. $\xi \xi \nu \mu \nu o \tilde{\sigma} \sigma i$, "they hymn forth."— $\tau \delta \nu$ $d \nu \tau i \tau a \tau \tau \delta \mu \varepsilon \nu \nu \nu$, "their antagonist." Literally, "the one who stations himself over against them."— $\pi \varepsilon \rho i d \pi \tau o \nu \sigma i$, "they attach all around."— $\eta \mu a \gamma \mu \varepsilon \nu a$, from $a \iota \mu \dot{a} \sigma \sigma \omega$.— $\pi a \iota a \nu i \zeta o \nu \tau \varepsilon \varsigma$, "uttering $p \varepsilon a n s$."— $\kappa a \iota \tau \dot{a} \dot{a} \kappa \rho o \vartheta i \nu \iota a \tau a \tilde{\nu} \tau a$, "and these first fruits of their valour."— $\kappa \varepsilon \delta \rho \omega \sigma a \nu \tau \varepsilon \varsigma$, "having anointed them with oil of cedar." The oil of cedar so often mentioned, as an antiseptic, by the ancient writers, appears to have been analogous to our pyroligneous acid.

11-13. $\kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \nu \tau \iota \kappa \rho \dot{\nu} \tau \tilde{\omega} \nu$ 'Ep $\kappa \nu \nu \iota \omega \nu$, &c., "over against the woods called Hercynian," i. e., over against what are called the Hercynian woods. The reference is to the mountains and woods of Northern Germany. The Hercynian forest was of vast extent, and traversed a large part of ancient Germany, and it will be remembered that the term $\Gamma \alpha \lambda \alpha \tau i \alpha$, in the text, comprises more than modern France to the north.— $\dot{\omega} \epsilon \sigma \tau i \mu i \alpha \kappa \alpha i \mu \epsilon \gamma i \sigma \tau \eta$, "of which there is one even very large of size."

19-23. $\pi a \rho a \delta \acute{e} \delta o \nu \tau a \iota$, "are said." The verb literally refers to a 93 handing down by tradition.— $e\dot{\nu}\tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \varsigma$, "of cheap construction."— $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \nu \tilde{\nu} \nu \nu \delta \rho \omega \pi \omega \nu$, referring to the inhabitants of more civilized countries. — $\tau \acute{a} \varsigma \tau \epsilon \delta \iota a (\tau a \varsigma e \dot{\nu} \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \varsigma \epsilon \chi \epsilon \iota \nu$, &c., "that they lead, moreover, a frugal mode of life, and one far removed from the luxury engendered by wealth." More literally, "that they have, moreover, their rules of life frugal (in their character), and departing much from," &c.

29-34. Βελέριον. Called by the Latin writers Bolerium; now the Land's Eud, in Cornwall.—και δια την τῶν ξένων, &c., "and, by reason of the intermingling of foreign traders (with them), softened down in their habits of life." Literally, "tame as to their habits of life."—τὸν κασσίτερον κατασκευάζουσιν, "prepare the tin." The article is here employed as indicating a well-known commodity obtained from this quarter.—φιλοτέχνως έργαζόμενοι, "skilfully working," i. e., mining.—ή πλείστη. Supply μερίς. —πολλα. Supply μέρη.

INNE 4-12. ÉVIOL, "some of them."— $\delta\iota a$ tò $a\gamma vo \epsilon v$, "oul of 94 pure ignorance."— $\pi \delta \lambda \epsilon \iota \varsigma$ $\delta \epsilon$ $a v t \pi v$, &c., "their towns, moreover, are the forests," i. e., the forests supply the place of towns.— $\kappa a \tau a \delta \epsilon \delta \lambda \eta \mu \epsilon$ vois, "felled for the purpose."— $\kappa a \lambda v \delta \sigma \pi o \delta v \tau \tau a \delta \epsilon \delta \lambda \eta \mu \epsilon$ vois, "felled for the purpose."— $\kappa a \lambda v \delta \sigma \pi o \delta v \tau \tau a \delta \epsilon \delta \lambda \eta \mu \epsilon$ vois, "felled for the purpose."— $\kappa a \lambda v \delta \sigma \pi o \delta v \tau \tau a \delta \epsilon \delta \lambda \eta \mu \epsilon$ vois, "felled for the middle.— $o v \tau \rho \delta \varsigma \tau \sigma \delta \lambda v \tau \sigma \delta \tau s$, "not, however, for any long period." The accumulation of animal matter, occasioned by a long stay in one spot, would produce sickness.— $o i a \epsilon \rho \epsilon \varsigma$, "their climate." — $\kappa a \tau \epsilon \epsilon \chi \epsilon \iota$, "prevails." Literally, "holds possession of the country." Supply $\tau \eta v \gamma \eta v$.— $\tau a \varsigma \tau \epsilon \rho \iota \tau \eta v$, &c., "about midday." Literally, "which are about midday." Supply $o v \sigma a \varsigma$.

14-18. μικρον έξαλλάττουσι, "differ a little from the Gallic nation in both their greater degree of savageness, and stature, and ruddiness of looks," i. e., are still more savage, &c., than the Gauls, though the degree by which they go beyond them in these respects is but small. $-\tau \dot{a}\lambda\lambda a$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ παραπλήσιοι, &c., "in other respects, however, they resemble them, both as regards personal appearance and customs."-δύναται δε το όνομα γνήσιοι, "now the name is equivalent to men of the same race." The meaning is, that the Romans, seeing so close a resemblance between the Germans and Gauls, concluded that they were descended from the same common stock. and, therefore, called the former Germani, "Brothers," intending to convey the idea that the Germans were own brothers of the Gauls. This etymology, however, is altogether erroneous. The true explanation is as follows : The first Teutonic tribes that crossed the Rhine boastfully styled themselves Wermacnner, i. e., "War-men," from wer, "war," and man, "a man." The Romans, not having any w in their alphabet, converted this letter in the present case into a soft g, and Latinized Wermaenner by Germani, a name which became gradually extended to the whole Teutonic race.

20-24. διὰ τὸ μὴ ϑησαυρίζειν, "on account of their laying up no stores," i. e., on account of their not laying aside any portion of their present means for fature use.—τοιοῦτον, "of the following nature." Attic for τοιοῦτο. ταῖς γυναιξὶν, depending in construction on παρηκολούθουν.—συστρατευούσαις τοῖς ἀνδράσι, "when going to war along with their husbands." παρηκολούθουν. The imperfect is here employed as referring to a time, now past, when the Cimbri still existed as a nation, and before they were annihilated by the Roman arms.—γυναῖκες προμάντεις ἰέρειαι. Compare the account given of Velleda and Aminia by Tacitus (Germ., 8).—καρπασίνας ἐφαπτίδας, &ι, "arrayed in linen robes secured by a clasp."

94 26-28. διὰ τοῦ στρατιπέδου, "throughout the camp," i. e., in du ferent quarters of the camp, the captives being in the hands of different individuals.—καταστέψασαι. Victims were always crowned with a garland before being led to the altar for sacrifice. We see here this same custom prevailing, among the early Germans, in these horrid immolations a human beings.—ὅσον ἀμφορέων εἴκοσιν, "large enough to hold twenty am phora." Supply the ellipsis as follows: τοσούτου μέτρον, ὅσον ἐστὶ τἰ μέτρον ἀμφορέων εἴκοσιν. The amphora was a measure containing a little over five gallons, two quarts, one pint.

29-36. $i\pi\epsilon\rho\pi\epsilon\tau\eta\varsigma$, "bending over."—ἕκαστον. Supply τῶν αἰχμαλώτων —προχεομένου, "as it flowed forth."—μαντείαν τινὰ ἐποιοῦντο, "they formed a kind of divination."—διασχίσασαι, "having slit them up." ἀναφθεγγομέναι, "announcing in this way."—τὰς περιτεταμένας, &cc., "that were stretched over the wicker frame-work of their covered wagons." The ἀρμάμαξαι were covered wagons for the women and children. The top and sides were formed of skins stretched over an osier frame-work. περιτεταμένας, from περιτείνω.—μετὰ τὴν ὑπώρειαν τῶν "Αλπεων, " after the country at the foot of the Alps." By ὑπώρεια is here meant what may be called the roots of the mountains (radices montium), after leaving which we come to the level country where Italy begins.

95 LINE 1-12. καὶ τὰ μὲν. Supply μέρη.—μέσον πως, "nearly in the middle." More literally, "in the middle, after a manner."—ἀποδεδειγμέναι ἰστοροῦνται, "are said to be rendered." Literally, "are related to be shown."—"Ηρας ᾿Αργείας, &c. Juno was particularly revered in Argos, and Diana in Ætolia. The reference is to other animals, without the sacred precincts.—δεῦρο Equivalent to εἰς τοῦτο τὸ ἀλσος.—μηκέτι διώκεσθαι. The dogs dare not follow them within the sacred grove.

20-26. καὶ τοιαύτην ἐχοντες, &c., "and yet, though they have such hardship (to contend with) in their daily labours, they by their perseverance triumph over nature," i. e., triumph over the natural disadvantages under which their territory labours.—ἐπίσης τοῖς ἀνδράσιν, "equally with the men." The dative of equality.—τὴν ἐκ τῶν καρπῶν, &c., "they remedy the scarcity resulting from the productions of the earth."

28–33. $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\dot{a}$ καὶ πρὸς τὰς, &c., "but also as regards those circumstances in life that have great dangers connected with them."—ἐμπορευόμενοι γὰρ, "for, being traders." Equivalent, in fact, to ἐμπορίας γὰρ χάριν, "for, prompted by an eager pursuit of traffic."—πλέουσι, "they navigate."—τῶν σχεδιῶν εὐτελεστέροις, "of cheaper construction than our ordinary floats." Observe the force of the article.—ὑπομένουσι τὰς ἐκ τῶν χειμώνων, &c.,

"they endure, in a way that strikes one with astonishment, the most fearful circumstances resulting from tempests," i. e., attendant upon tempests.

LINE 1-5. $\xi\chi\sigma\nu\tau\epsilon\varsigma$, "occupying."— $\mu\epsilon\rho\sigma\varsigma$ $\mu\epsilon\nu\tau\sigma\iota$, "partly indeed." The accusative is here taken absolutely, as a species of adverb.— $\tau\delta$ δ' $\epsilon\phi\epsilon\xi\eta\varsigma$, "but farther on." The article is often joined thus with adverbs, the sentence being, in fact, elliptical, $\tau\delta$ $\delta\epsilon$ $\mu\epsilon\rho\sigma\varsigma$ $\delta\nu$ $\epsilon\phi\epsilon\xi\eta\varsigma$.— $\tau\delta\varsigma$ $\pi\rho\delta\varsigma$ $\tau\eta$ 'P $\delta\mu\eta$, &c., "who dwell near Rome, as far as the sea-coast," i. e., who lie immediately below Rome, and whose territory extends as far as the coast of the lower or Tyrrhenian sea. The reference is to the Latins.

7-16. $\delta\iota evé \gamma \kappa av \tau e \varsigma$, from $\delta\iota a\phi \acute e \rho \omega$.— $\check e \kappa \tau \iota \sigma a v$, from $\kappa \tau i \zeta \omega$.— $\pi o \lambda \lambda o \dot v \varsigma \chi \rho \acute v - o v \varsigma$, "for many years."— τa $\delta \grave \kappa a \tau a \tau a \varsigma \pi \epsilon \varsigma \iota \kappa a \varsigma$, & c., "having bestowed much labour, too, upon the things that related to their land-forces."— $\mu e \tau - \acute \eta v e \gamma \kappa a v \acute e \pi i \tau \eta v i \delta i a v \pi o \lambda \iota \tau e i a v$, "have transferred to their own polity."— $\gamma \rho \acute a \mu \mu a \tau a \tau \epsilon \kappa a \imath$, & c., "they cultivated assiduously, to a greater degree than any other people, both letters, and an acquaintance with natural phænomena, and with things relating to the gods." The term $\gamma \rho \acute a \mu \mu a \tau a$ does not refer here to a national literature, which the Etrurians never had, but to the use made of written characters in compiling religious forms, rituals, & c., of which they possessed a greater number than any other nation.— $\phi v \sigma \iota o \lambda \sigma \gamma i a v \kappa a \imath \vartheta e o \lambda \sigma \gamma i a v.$ Both of these were cultivated with reference merely to omens and divinations.— $\kappa a \imath \tau a \pi \epsilon \rho \imath \tau \eta v \kappa \epsilon \rho a v \sigma \kappa \sigma \pi i a v.$ "and they, most of all men, wrought out (into a regular system) the drawing of omens from lightning." The Etrurian priesthood were remarkable for their skill in every species of augury and divination.

Supply $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\dot{\iota}\ ...\dot{\eta}\ \dot{\epsilon}\dot{\iota}\ \tau\iota\nu a$, "or if there be any." Supply $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\dot{\iota}\ again.$ $\epsilon\dot{\iota}\ \tau\iota\nu a$ is here equivalent in effect to $\ddot{u}\tau\iota\nu a$, "whatsoever are."— $\kappa\alpha\dot{\iota}\ \tau\alpha\sigma\tau a\ \dot{\sigma}$, "and yet even these are."— $\tau\dot{\sigma}\ \delta\dot{\epsilon}\ Ka(\kappa\circ\nu\delta\sigma\nu.$ Supply $\chi\omega\rho(o\nu...-\tau\eta\nu\ \delta\epsilon\nu\delta\rho\iota\tau\iota\nu$, "trained on trees. This was a common practice in Italy, and was thought to improve the quality of the wine. Sometimes, however, juga or stages were employed. The Cæcuban wine subsequently lost its repute.

Literally, "burned as to their colour."—ἐκδεβρωμένων, from ἐκδιβρώσκω.—σδεσθῆναι δ' ἐπιλιπούσης τῆς ὕλης, "but that, fuel having failed, it was subsequently extinguished." σδεσθῆναι, from σδέννυμ. When Strabo wrote this, Vesuvius was in a state of repose, and, from the absence of traditions, must have been so for a considerable period

Page 97 antecedent. Evident traces of previous volcanic ac.ion, however presented themselves, as he himself informs us. The first eruption of Vesuvius, of which we have any account, took place after the time of Strabo, namely, in A.D. 79, during the reign of the Emperor Titus This is the famous eruption that proved fatal to the cities of Herculaneum, Pompeii, and Stabiæ, burying them under showers of volcanic sand, stones, and scoriæ.

17-20. ἐν μιῷ γοῦν 'Ολυμπιάδι, &c., "accordingly, at one Olympic contest, all the seven men who surpassed the rest in the foot-race were Crotoniats." Observe here the use of the term 'Ολυμπιάς as referring to the games themselves, which is not very usual. It occurs in this same sense in Herodotus (Schweigh., Lex. Herod., s. v.).—τῶν ἀλλων. The genitive follows προτερήσαντες here, from the force of πρότερος, a comparative, implied in the verb προτερέω.—εἰκότως, "with good reason."—διότι " that." Equivalent here to ὅτι.

22-24. $\delta\iota\dot{a} \ \tau\dot{o}\nu \ \phi\vartheta\phi\rho\nu$, &c Alluding to the overthrow which the Crotoniats received at the hands of the Locrians, in a battle fought on the banks of the Sagras. As long as the people of Crotona adhered to the precepts of Pythagoras and his followers, they were peculiarly distinguished for hardihood and vigour. After the overthrow of Sybaris, however, luxury and the love of pleasure took possession of the Crotoniats in their turn, and the warlike spirit of that people became changed to such a degree, that, in the battle of the Sagras, an army of one hundred and thirty thousand Crotoniats were routed by ten thousand of the Locrians. $-\pi\lambda\epsiloni\sigma\tau\omega\nu \ \tau\dot{o}\ \pi\lambda\bar{\eta}\vartheta o_{\zeta}$, "who were very many in number." Supply $\delta\nu\tau\omega\nu$.

24-30. $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \Pi v \vartheta a \gamma o \rho \epsilon i \omega \nu$, "of the Pythagoreans (who dwelt in it)." Observe the force of the article.— $\gamma \epsilon \gamma o \nu \omega \varsigma$, equivalent to $\omega \nu$.— $\delta \iota a \tau \rho i \psi a \nu \tau \sigma \varsigma$, "who resided."— $\epsilon \nu \tau \tilde{\omega} \sigma \nu \sigma \sigma \iota \tau i \omega$, &c. The followers of Pythagoras, who had passed through a certain period of probation, gave up their possessions to the common stock, and, from this time, lived upon a footing of perfect equality, and sat down together, daily, at a common table.— $\pi \sigma v \eta \sigma a \nu \tau \sigma \varsigma$, "having become insecure." Literally, "having laboured." The aorist indicates that this took place on a sudden.— $\pi \epsilon \pi \sigma \iota \vartheta \delta \tau a$, agreeing with $a \vartheta \tau \delta \nu$ and erstood.

32-36. $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\phi\eta\nu\omega\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\sigma\nu$, "wedged open."— $\tau\sigma\sigma\sigma\tilde{\nu}\tau\sigma\nu$ d' $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\chi\nu\sigma\epsilon$ $\mu\dot{\delta}\nu\sigma\nu$, &c., 'his strength, however, availed only so far, that the wedges dropped out." Literally, "he was strong, however, only to such a degree," &c.— $\dot{a}\pi\sigma$ - $\lambda\eta\phi\vartheta\dot{\epsilon}\nu\taua$, from $\dot{a}\pi\sigma\lambda\sigma\mu\dot{\delta}a\nu\omega$.

98 LINE 1-10. ἐφεξῆς, "further on."—διήνεγκεν, "surpassed alt others."—τὸ παλαιὸν, "in former times."—τῶν πλησίον, "that lived in its vicinity." Supply ὅντων.—ἐστράτευσαν δὲ, "they marched forth also."—τὴν εὐδαιμωνίαν, depending on ἀφηρέθησαν, which governs two accusatives in the active —ἐλόντες. Supply οἱ Κροτωνιᾶται.—ἐπήγαγον τὸν ποταμὸν, &c., "they brought the river upon the city, and inundated it." Supply τῷ πόλει after ἐπήγαγον, and αὐτὴν after κατέκλυσαν.

11-19. διαβόητοι, "notorious." Literally, "noised throughout (the world)."—ἐπιδημεῖν, "to dwell," i. e., to be exercised.—olov, "as, for example, those of ..." Supply al τέχναι.—હσιν, "may be." Subjunctive of εἰμί.—oὐκ ἐξῆν δ' oὐδ', &c., "it was not allowed, too, even," &c.— Τίμαιος. The author of an historical work on Italy and Sicily, which has aot come down to us.—aὐτὸς ῥῆγμα λαδεῖν, "that he himself had caught a ŝtrain," i. e., from merely seeing the others work. The term ῥῆγμα is 286 susceptible of a still plainer translation. Observe the nominative 98 with the infinitive, as referring to the same person implied by the previous verb.— $\pi\rho\delta\varsigma$ $\delta\nu$. Equivalent to $\kappa\alpha\lambda$ $\pi\rho\delta\varsigma$ $\tau o\bar{\nu}\tau o\nu$.— $a\bar{\nu}\tau\delta\varsigma$ $\delta\delta$ &c... "and I myself, while hearing thee tell this, have got a pain in my side."

21-26. $\phi \varepsilon i \delta(\tau i \circ v, "the public meal."$ The Spartans ate in common, in accordance with the institutions of Lycurgus.— $\dot{\varepsilon}\pi i \tau \tilde{\omega}v \xi i \lambda \omega v$. "upon the wooden benches." Another specimen of Spartan simplicity.— $\mu \varepsilon \tau' a \dot{\upsilon} \tau \tilde{\omega} v$, "with them," i. e., with the Lacedæmonians, the idea of whom is implied in $\Lambda a\kappa \varepsilon \delta a i \mu \circ v a$ that precedes.— $\pi v v \vartheta a v \delta \mu \varepsilon \circ \varsigma$, "while he knew it merely from hearsay."— $\vartheta \varepsilon a \sigma \dot{\alpha} \mu \varepsilon \circ \varsigma$, "on having seen things with his own eyes."— $\kappa a i \gamma a \rho \tau \delta v \ a \nu a \nu \delta \rho \delta \tau a \tau \circ v, \& c.$, "for that even the greatest coward would choose rather to die." The aorist $\dot{\varepsilon} \lambda \dot{\varepsilon} \sigma \vartheta a i$ implies that he would do this without a moment's hesitation.— $\tau \circ \iota \tilde{\upsilon} \tau \circ v \ \beta i \circ v$. This has a special reference to the black broth, and other plain fare, of the Spartans.

26-36. μετὰ, "in conjunction with," i. e., in addition to.—ό τόπος, "the situation."—ἐκτρυφῆσαι, "to indulge in luxury."—τοῦ μὲν θέρους, "in summer." Part of time.—ἔχει, "experiences."—ῥηθῆναι. Governed by δοκεῖ understood, and which is repeated from δοκεῖ, at the beginning of the sentence.—πρὸ μοίρας, "before his allotted time."—ἐς τηλικοῦτον τρυφῆς, "to such a pitch of luxury." As in Latin, co luxuriæ.—ἐληλακότες, from ἐλαύνω, with the reduplication.—πρὸς αὐλὸν, "to the music of the pipe."—ἐνέδοσαν τὸ ὀρχηστικὸν μέλος, "played a dancing tune," i. e., played a dance. Literally (so as to show the force of the article), "played the music adapted to a dance."

6-9. τῶν μυθολογουμένων, "of the legends connected with it." More literally, "of the fabulous legends related concerning it." $-\Sigma_{i\kappa\epsilon\lambda\omega\nu}$ These Siculi are said to have come from Latium.

13-17. παρειλήφασι, from παραλαμβάνω.—ἀεὶ τῆς φήμης, &c., "the tradition having been continually handed down to their descendants from the earliest times."—ἰερὰν ὑπάρχειν τὴν νῆσον, "that the island was sacred to Ceres and Proserpina." Literally, "that the island was a sacred one of Ceres," &c.—ταύτην. Supply τὴν νῆσον.

18-20. καὶ τῆς ἀρπαγῆς, &c., "they say, also, that a very manifest proof of the abduction of Proserpina having taken place in this island is (the circumstance) that," &c. Literally, "of the abduction that took place with reference to Proserpina." Supply γενομένης after the second τῆς. ai θεal, "these goddesses," referring to Ceres and Proserpina.

22-27. ἐν τοῖς λειμῶσι τοῖς. Supply κειμένοις.—την "Ενναν, "the plain of Enna."—της πόλεως, "the city of Enna." The city and plain bore the same name.—θέας άξιος, "worthy of being beheld." Observe the accentuation of θέας here: θεᾶς άξιος would mean "worthy of a goddess."—ἑμποδιζομένους την φυσικην αἴσθησιν, "being impeded in their natural perception (of the game)," i. e., their scent being obstructed.

28-31. κύκλω δε ύψηλός, &c., "but high all around, and on every side abrupt with precipitous descents." The plain of Enna was in fact a con-287 Page 99 siderable elevation above the surrounding country, with steep and precipitous sides. (Compare the account of Sir R. Hoare, Class. Tour, vol. ii., p. 247, seqq.)— $\partial\mu\phi\alpha\lambda\partial\varsigma$. This term appears to have been still more specially applied to a particular part of the plain itself. Sir R. Hoare thinks, that this is the spot where now stands a cross, in the garden belonging to the Padri Reformati, and where, according to vulgar tradition, a temple of Proserpina was built. This spot commands the finest view of the island.

100 LINE 2-12. κατὰ τὴν Αἴτνην, "on Etna."—μάλιστα, "most hos pitably."—διείληπται, "are covered." More literally, "are taken up with :" from διαλαμβάνω.—λαμβάνειν, "to experience." Literally, "to receive."—τὴν νομὴν, "the action." Literally, "the feeding."—τοτὲ μὲν τοτὲ δὲ, "at one time at another."—συμφερομένον, "borne all." Literally, "borne together," i. e., in one stream.—λιγνῦς, "pitchy clouds." (Blomf. Gloss., in Sept. c. Th., 490.)—ἀναφυσῶντος, "darting upward with a loud roar."

16-21. πολλην της χώρας, &c., "has much of its territory mountainous." The plainer Greek would have been, τὰ πολλὰ ὀρεινή ἐστι. τροφαῖς, "as means of subsistence."—τὰ δὲ πρὸς ἀλλήλους, "while, as regards their deportment towards each other." –παρὰ, "beyond."

22-28. κατὰ τὴν ὀρεινὴν, "throughout the mountainous country."—ἐστὶ, "belongs to," i. e., becomes the property of.—διειλημμένα, "being distinguished."—κἂν, "even though." Contracted for καὶ ἂν.—ἔ· τε ταῖς ἄλλαις, &c., "and in the other arrangements of life."—πύξος. " nat Diodorus here erroneously calls the "box-tree," is in reality the yew, the μίλος of Theophrastus (3, 4), and σμίλαξ of Dioscorides (4, 80). The Latin writers call it taxus. (Virg., Eclog., 9, 30.) The yew loves a mountainous and cold soil, and, therefore, flourishes in Corsica. (Fée, Flore de Virgile, p. 159.)—πλείστη καὶ διάφορος, "in great abundance and of superior quality."

30-33. $\xi \xi \eta \lambda \lambda a \gamma \mu \epsilon \nu \eta \nu$, "strange."— $\tau o \vartheta \varsigma$ $\tau \rho \iota \sigma \mu \nu \rho i o \nu \varsigma$. The article merely indicates here the sum total, without being translated. This usage has been already noticed.— $\phi \ell \lambda \lambda \varphi \ \pi \lambda a \tau a \nu o \nu$. This similitude must, of course, like many others of the kind, be taken with many grains of al lowance. In order to make it at all plausible, the Peloponnesus must be sup posed to lie on its western side. An illustration of this is given by Martyn, in his edition of the Georgics, at page 126.— $\tau \delta \ \sigma \chi \tilde{\eta} \mu a$, "as to its shape."

101 LINE 3-5. τελευτῷ εἰς, "it ends at."—ἡ Λακωνικὴ καὶ ἡ ᾿Αργεία, "the Laconic, and the Argive, territory." Supply γῷ with each.—μέχρι τοῦ ἰσθμοῦ καὶ αἰτή, "it also extending as far as the isth mus," i. e., extending in like manner. The reference is to Argolis.

8-12. ⁱdou $\tau_{i\varsigma}$ ^{àv} kal ^àkovisal, "one might see and hear of." Observe the accentuation of the optative ^àkovisal, where the long final syllable calls for the acute on the penult. On the other hand, in ^àkovisal of the infinitive, the short final syllable (as it is regarded in accentuation) gives the penult the circumflex.—^èξ ^àρχης µèv, "at first."—^èkeívov δ' ἐκλειφθέντος, "this oracle, however, having ceased." Literally, "having caused itself to be abandoned," i. e., by delivering no more responses. The passive for the middle.—καὶ τὴν aöξησιν, &c., "and it obtained its great increase of celebrity, with which we are at the present day acquainted," &c Supply, for a literal translation, τόσην with aöξησιν.

16-26. Δν, "in the number of which."—τούτων, "of these 101 offerings." Supply τῶν ἀναθημάτων.—Χαρμάδον, "son of Charmidas." Supply νίος.—χρυσοῦ καὶ ἐλέφαντος. Genitive of the material. —οἱ τῆ κεφαλῆ, "upon his head." Literally, "for him, upon his head." The pronoun οἱ here takes the place of αὐτῷ. The more usual form of expression would be τῆ αὐτοῦ κεφαλῆ.—Νίκην, "a Victory," i. e., an image of the goddess of Victory.—καὶ ταὐτην ἔχουσαν, "this also having." χάοιέν ἑστι σκῆπτρον. Siebelis takes χάριέν here for an adverbial form, equivalent to χαριέντως, and joins it in construction with ἡνθυσμένον. Equally unhappy is Porson's emendation of χειρὶ ἐνεστι for χάριέν ἑστι. ἡνϑισμένον, "diversified."—τῷ ϑεῷ, for τοῦ ϑεοῦ. Compare the remarkmade above en the words οἱ τῆ κεφαλῆ.

27-29. $\tau \tilde{\omega}$ dè lµa $\tau i \omega$, &c., "into the robe, moreover, are wrought both small figures of animals, and, of flowers, the lily," i. e., and also flowers, namely, lilies. Some archæologists think that the allusion is here to a kind of encaustic work. (Böttiger, Ideen zur Archæol. d. Mal., p. 243.—Qua tremère de Qaincy, Jup. Olymp., p. 310.—Siebelis, ad Pausan., 5, 11.)- $\lambda i \vartheta o \iota_{s}$, "precious stones."

31-36. E $\dot{v}\rho_i\pi(i\delta\eta\varsigma)$. In a fragment (No. xii.) of the Cresphontes.— $\pi o\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\nu$ µ $\dot{v}\dot{v}$ $\dot{a}\rho\sigma\tau\sigma\nu$, &c., "much arable land indeed, but not easy to cultivate."— $\kappa o(\lambda\eta \ \gamma\dot{u}\rho)$. The country of Sparta (the hollow Lacedæmon, as it is called in the Iliad and Odyssey) was flanked on the east and west by two long parallel ridges of mountains, which were connected together by a similar, but much shorter, barrier at the northern extremity; and hence it has been well compared to an ancient stadium. The bed of this natural stadium was the valley of Sparta. (Wordsworth's Greece, p. 53.)— $\kappa ai \beta ov\sigma i \kappa ai \pi oiµ$ vaisiv, &c., "and very well adapted for the rearing of cattle and flocks." $<math>\pi oiµvaisiv$ is poetical for $\pi oiµvai\varsigma$, being cited from fragment xiii. of the same play mentioned above.— $\varepsilon v \sigma \varepsilon i \sigma \delta \eta$, "and indeed."

LINE 1-4. λ ivov $\pi o\lambda v \tau c \lambda o \tilde{v}$, &c., "of a costly kind of marble, 102 the Tanarian namely," &c. This was a species of Verd Antique, highly prized by the Romans.— $\chi o \rho n \gamma \delta v$, "as a means of furnishing the expense," i. e., to patronise the undertaking. Literally, "as a furnisher of the expense."

7-14. $ai\sigma\chi\dot{v}vv\tau a\iota$, "they reverence."— $\gamma v\mu v\dot{a}\sigma\iota a$ $\delta' \ \omega\sigma\pi\epsilon\rho$, &c., "and as there are gymnasia for males, so also are there such for unmarried females."— $vo\mu i\sigma\mu a\tau\iota \sigma\kappa v\tau iv\varphi$. The legal currency of Sparta was iron money. If the remark in the text be correct, leather was also applied to the same purpose. (Consult Böckh, Pub. Econ. of Ath., vol. ii., p. 389.) $-\epsilon\pi i \tau \tilde{\varphi} a v \tau o i \varphi \pi a \rho \epsilon \chi \epsilon i v$, "in exhibiting themselves." This was situate on Mount Parnassus, above the city of Delphi. The inhabitants of Parnassus regarded it as sacred to the Corycian nymphs and the god Pan. Herodotus relates (8, 36) that, on the approach of the Persians, the greater part of the population of De.pm ascended the mountain, and sought refuge in this capacious recess.

27-33. Pearpoeidis, "shaped like a theatre," i. e., semicircular. The ancient theatres were not, strictly speaking, semicircular, but their shape closely resembled this. The site of Delphi has been well compared to a natural theatre, sloping upward, in a semicircular form, from the lower part of Parnassus.—κατά κορυφήν, " at the top (of this semicircle)."--κύκλον τληρούσαν, "embracing a circuit."-πνεύμα ένθουσιαστικόν, "an inspiring breath," i. e., a prophetic vapour. This appears to have been a kind of gas.— $a\pi o \vartheta \varepsilon \sigma \pi i \zeta \varepsilon \iota v \, \xi \mu \mu \varepsilon \tau \rho a \, \tau \varepsilon$, &c., " delivers oracles in both verse and prose." All the Grecian oracles gave their responses originally in verse. Prose was only introduced when their influence and authority began to decline. For a literal translation, supply $\vartheta \varepsilon \sigma \pi i \sigma u a \tau a$ after $\varepsilon u u \varepsilon \tau \rho a$ and ήμετρα.

34-36. $\pi \acute{e}\phi v \kappa e \nu$ ola, &c., " is naturally such as to yield the most abun dant returns," i. e., is such in its very nature. Observe the force of $\pi \dot{\epsilon} \phi v$ κεν.—καὶ αὐτὰ τὰ γιγνόμενα, "even the things themselves that are produced in this land."

LINE 4-14. $\pi \alpha \mu \phi o \rho \omega \tau \dot{\alpha} \tau \eta$, "most productive," i. e., not only 103is the land very productive, but the adjacent sea also abounds in fish. - où µóvov de kparei, "but not only does it surpass (other lands)." Supply $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \ \tilde{a} \lambda \lambda \omega \nu \ \chi \omega \rho i \omega \nu$.— $\dot{a} \tilde{c} \delta \iota a$. Literally, "feel the want of it." $-\epsilon \sigma \tau \iota \delta \epsilon \kappa \alpha \iota \gamma \eta$, "there is also a portion of this country :" $\gamma \tilde{\eta}$ is here equivalent to $\mu \epsilon \rho \rho \varsigma \tau \tau \tau \tilde{\eta} \varsigma$ iπaργυρός, &c., "for it has, in truth, silver beneath its surface, through divine allotment." The allusion is to Laurium, a range of hills near the Sunian promontory. Here the Athenians had silver mines.—πολλῶν γοῦν $\pi \delta \lambda \varepsilon \omega v$, &c., "accordingly, though there are many states in the vicinity of Attica," &c.

20-22. δ μυστικός σηκός, "the mystic cell." Referring to the cella or delubrum of the temple. This is said to have been as large as a theatre, and here the mysteries were played off. - TOV EV akponone, &c., "which stands in the Acropolis (at Athens), consecrated to Minerva." The Parthenon, or celebrated temple of Minerva, stood on the most elevated ground of the Acropolis.- έπιστατοῦντος, "patronising," i. e. watching over and aiding with the public resources. - έν δε τοῖς δήμοις, &c., "the city (of Eleusis), moreover, is numbered among the boroughs (of Attica)," i. e., forms one of the boroughs. The boroughs or $\delta \tilde{\eta} \mu o \iota$ were one hundred and seventy-four in number. The borough of Eleusis belonged to the tribe Hippothoontis.

They were demolished at the close of the Peloponnesian war, but rebuilt by Conon In the siege of Athens by Sylla they were again broken down and almost destroyed. Some traces still remain. These celebrated walls connected Athens with her several harbours $-\sigma v \nu \epsilon \sigma \tau \epsilon \iota \lambda a \nu$, "have contracted," from $\sigma v \sigma \tau \epsilon \iota \lambda \omega$.

33-34. $\pi\lambda\epsilon$ iovç, "very many." Literally, "more (than are usually found in islands of such a size)."— $\kappa\alpha$ ì "Oµnpoç ὑµνεĩ, "Homer also celebrates in song."— $\kappa\alpha$ ì oi ὕστερον, "as well as the poets (who came) after him."

LINE I-12. καὶ δỳ καὶ διετέλεσε, &c., "it continued, moreover, 104 for a long time enjoying the first rank." Literally, "bearing away for itself the first portions, or parts." Supply $\mu \epsilon \rho \eta$ (Bos, Ellips. Gr., s. v. $u \epsilon \rho \eta$). With $\pi o \lambda \lambda o \tilde{v}$ supply $\chi \rho \delta v o v. - \tau \tilde{\omega} v v o \mu (\mu \omega v, "of its privileges." –$ δι' ἐννέα ἐτῶν, "for the space of nine years." – ἐλέγετο. Supply είναι. – $<math>\delta \varsigma \gamma \epsilon v o \iota \tau o, "how that he was."$ The optative is here employed to express merely the opinion of others, for the accuracy of which the writer himself does not vouch. – $\tau \rho a \gamma \omega \delta \delta v \tau \epsilon c$, "detailing in tragic strain," i. e., with a tragic and declamatory air.

16-19. $\delta\iota\epsilon\lambda\delta\nu\tau\alpha\varsigma$, "having marked it out." By the common principle of construction, $\delta\iota\epsilon\lambda\delta\nu\tau\alpha\varsigma$ ought to be in the dative, on the supposition that the dative $\eta\mu$ i ν is understood with $\beta\eta\tau\epsilon\sigma\nu$. It will be found, however, that verbals in $-\tau\epsilon\sigma\nu$ sometimes have the person in the accusative (as here, $\eta\mu$ $\alpha\varsigma$), when the reference is, not so much to what must, as to what ought to be done. (Matthia, G. G., § 447.)—'O Ta $\tilde{\nu}\rho\sigma\rho$ $\mu\epsilon\sigma\eta\nu$ $\pi\omega\varsigma$, &c., "the range of Mount Taurus divides this continent nearly in the middle, as if with a girdle."— $\delta\iota\epsilon\zeta\omega\kappa\epsilon$, from $\delta\iota\alpha\zeta\omega\nu\nu\mu\iota$.— $\tau\epsilon\tau\alpha\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma$, from $\tau\epsilon\iota\nu\omega$.— $\tau \dot{\sigma}\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $a\dot{\nu}\tau\eta\varsigma$ $\dot{\alpha}\alpha\lambda\epsilon\epsilon\eta\omega\nu$, &c., "leaving one part of it towards the north, and the other towards the south." Literally, "and the other, a southern one." As the chain passes onward from west to east, it leaves on one side of it (i. e, cuts off) the northern, on the other the southern portion of the continent.— $\kappaa\lambda \delta v \sigma \iota$ $\dot{\sigma} a \dot{\sigma} \tau \omega \nu$, &c., "and the Greeks call the one of them (Asia) this side of Taurus, the other (Asia) beyond (Taurus)."

20-27. oi $\delta \epsilon \pi \sigma \tau a \mu o \delta$. Another instance of a nominative absolute before a clause expressing distribution.— $\omega_{\mathcal{S}} \epsilon \pi^* \ \tilde{a} \rho \kappa \tau \sigma \nu$, "towards the north." This usage of $\omega_{\mathcal{S}}$ with a proposition, becomes, as far as the English idiom is concerned, a mere pleonasm; in Greek, however, it points out strictly the direction alone which an object takes, leaving it undetermined whether it reaches the place or not.— $\delta \ E \delta \phi \rho \delta \tau \eta_{\mathcal{S}} \tau \epsilon \kappa a \delta$, &c, "namely, both the Euphrates, and Tigris," &c. These nominatives are in apposition with oi, in the clause oi $\delta \epsilon \delta \omega_{\mathcal{S}} \epsilon \pi i \nu \delta \tau \sigma \nu \delta \tau \mu \epsilon \nu \sigma \rho$, and this oi agrees with $\epsilon \chi \sigma \sigma \sigma \iota$ understood. Jacobs has altered here the text of Arrian in a somewhat slovenly manner.— $\epsilon \nu \mu \epsilon \sigma \omega$, "between."— η , "or else."

29-34. ἐστὶν ὑπερκείμενον, "is one that overhangs."—διατειχίζον τὸν ἰσθμὸν, "forming the isthmus between them like a wall."—ἕλη παντοδαπῆ, "with all kinds of timber."—κατ' ἀλκὴν καὶ δύναμιν, "in valour and resources."

The particle γε, in composition here with ή, lends emphasis to the latter.—ὥστε εἶναι, "so that there are here."—καὶ ἀρχιτεκτονικὴν τήν, &cc., "and a constructing of dwellings that displays architectural skill."—καὶ τἄλλα κοινά, "and other public erections."—τῆς δὲ χώρας τὰ μὲν, "one part of the country." For a literal translation supply μέρη, "these parts indeed."—κύκλφ περιέχεται, "is encompassed round about."—ἐσκενασμένοι, "attired." 'There is also in this, though not expressed in the translation, a reference to their habits of life.

16-19. οἱ πλείους, "the greater number."—ποιμενικώτεροι. Supply τῶν Ἰβήρων εἰσὶ.—γένους. Supply ἀνθρώπων.—ταύτη δὲ καὶ, "and for this reason also." Supply aἰτία.

106 LINE 2-12. εὕκαιρα, "in fit places."—τὰ κατακεκρυμμένα τῶν ὑδάτων, "the hidden waters," for τὰ κατακεκρυμμένα ὕδατα. ἀνοίγοντες, "uncovering."—οἱ δὲ ἀλλοεθνεῖς. The nominative absolute again, before a clause expressing distribution.—διατελοῦσιν ἀδούλωτοι, "remain ever unenslaved." Supply ὄντες. Literally, "continue to be."

13-25. $\dot{\eta}$ δ' έχομένη 'Apabía, "that part of Arabia which is contiguous to."—τοσοῦτο. As the extracts composing this volume are taken from different writers, we find some using the Attic τοσοῦτον, and others, as in the present instance, the more inelegant τοσοῦτο.—εὐδαίμονα 'Apabíaν, "the happy Arabia." In Latin, Arabia Felix.—καὶ τὴν ἄλλην ὕλην, &c., "and other productions of an aromatic character, in great abundance." Literally, "and the other wood that is aromatic."—φύλλων εὐωδίας, "fragrant leaves." Literally "fragrances of leaves."—καὶ τῶν ἀποσταζόντων &c., "and is filled with varied odours of tears, that distill from (the bark of trees)," i. e., with odoriferous tears of various kinds, &c.—ai ταύτης έσχατιαὶ, "the farthest portions of this land."—δαψιλὴς, "in rich abundance."—ǎπλατος, "to an extraordinary degree."—φύσεις εὐώδεις, &c., "fruitful odoriferous plants."—τὰς ἀποφροίας, &c., " their exuding juices and perfumes."

Literally, "having been bound," &c., from $\dot{\varepsilon} \nu \delta \dot{\omega} \dot{\eta} \sigma \mu \dot{\mu} \dot{\varepsilon} \sigma$, "who have chosen." The description here given takes in also the coast of the Persian Gulf.— $\dot{\nu} \pi \epsilon \rho \dot{a} \nu \omega$, "above," i. e., to the northeast.— $\dot{a} \rho \delta \epsilon \dot{\omega} \sigma \tau \epsilon \varsigma$. Supply of $\dot{\epsilon} \gamma \chi \dot{\omega} \rho \iota o \iota$.— $\kappa a \dot{\epsilon} \delta \iota \pi \lambda o \tilde{\upsilon} \varsigma \kappa a \rho \pi \sigma \dot{\upsilon} \varsigma \lambda a \mu \dot{\delta} \dot{a} \nu \sigma \sigma \iota$, "they even obtain double harvests."

19-26. $\pi v \rho \tilde{\omega} v \ \dot{\alpha} v \dot{\alpha} \dot{\delta} \dot{\epsilon} \kappa a$, &c., "ten medimni of wheat cach." Observe the distributive force which the preposition $\dot{\alpha} v \dot{\alpha}$ here imparts to the numeral. The medimnus was a Greek measure for things dry, and equivalent to six Roman modii. The modius (erroneously called, in the lexicons, "a bushel"), contained a little over one gallon, three quarts, one pint, dry measure; and hence the medimnus was equal to one bushel, one peck, one gallon, one quart, &c., of our measure.— $\kappa a \lambda \lambda a \gamma a \rho a \lambda \tau a \tilde{c} \sigma v \sigma \tau \dot{\alpha} \sigma \varepsilon a \tau i \cdot a n d$ slender in their make." Literally, "stretch over."— $\varepsilon i \varsigma \tau \dot{\alpha} \varsigma \mu \dot{\alpha} \chi a \varsigma$, &c. The order of construction is, $\ddot{\alpha} \gamma o v \tau a \varepsilon i \varsigma \tau \dot{\alpha} \varsigma \mu \dot{\alpha} \chi a \varsigma \delta \tau v \sigma \delta \sigma \tau \ldots d v \tau \kappa a \vartheta \eta u \dot{\varepsilon} v v \varsigma$, &c., "sitting over against one another, back to back."

29-35. $\tau \eta \nu \ \mu \epsilon \sigma \eta \nu \ \sigma \phi \tilde{\omega} \nu \ \Sigma \nu \rho (av, "that part of Syria which lies between$ them." Compare the Scripture name applied to this tract of country (Gen.xxiv., 10; Deut. xxiii., 4, &c.), namely, Aram Naharaim, or "Aramea $between (literally 'of') the rivers."—<math>\delta \vartheta \epsilon \nu \ \kappa a \iota \tau \delta \delta \nu \circ \mu a$, &c., "from which circumstance also its name is called Mesopotamia," &c. We have given the simpler and more natural translation to these words. Jacobs makes $\tau \delta$ $\delta \nu \circ \mu a$ a kind of pleonastic accusative, and supplies $\dot{\eta} \ \chi \omega \rho a$ as the nominative to $\kappa \lambda \eta t \zeta \epsilon \tau a \iota$, "from which circumstance, also, the country is called in name," &c.— $\pi \circ \lambda \dot{\upsilon} \tau \iota$, "for some considerable distance." Supply $\delta \iota a \sigma \tau \eta \mu a$. — $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \delta \dot{\alpha} \lambda \varepsilon \iota \dot{\epsilon} c \tau \delta \nu \ \pi \delta \nu \tau \sigma \nu$, &c., "empties into the Persian sea," i. e., Persian Gulf. The Tigris and Euphrates, if they ever had separate mouths, (which is very doubtful, though vouched for by the ancients), now unite near Koma, and the joint stream is called Shat-al-Arab, or "the river of Arabia."— $\dot{\epsilon} c \tau \dot{\epsilon} \tau \tau \dot{\mu} \nu \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \delta \circ \lambda \eta \nu$, "up to its mouth."

LINE 1-6. $\mu\epsilon\tau\epsilon\omega\rho\delta\varsigma$ $\tau\epsilon$ $\dot{\rho}\epsilon\tilde{\iota}$, "both flows along high ground, and 108 is," &c.— $i\sigma\sigma\chi\epsiloni\lambda\eta\varsigma$. In the text of Arrian (omitted by Jacobs) the banks of the Tigris are described as much higher than the surface of the stream, preventing, of course, any lateral waste of its waters. The case is directly the reverse with the Euphrates.— $\pi a\rho$ ' $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\dot{\alpha}\tau\epsilon\rhoa$, "along either bank." Supply $\chi\epsilon i\lambda\eta$.— $\dot{\delta}\pi\dot{\delta}\tau\epsilon$ $\sigma\phi i\sigma\iota\nu$ $\dot{\delta}\delta a\tau \delta\varsigma$, &c., "as often as they want water." Literally, "as often as it may have itself deficiently in respect of water."— $\kappa a i$ $\delta \tau \omega\varsigma$ $\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma$ δv $\pi \delta \lambda v$ $\delta \delta \omega \rho$, &c., "and the Euphrates, ending thus with no great quantity of water, and that marshy in its character, in this way terminates its course." Literally, "in this way ceases from (its course)."

27-30. $\beta \delta \sigma \mu o \rho o \nu$. An unknown kind of grain. Strabo, on the authority of Onesicritus, describes it elsewhere as smaller in size than wheat. $\delta \nu \ \eta \mu \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \epsilon \ a \pi \epsilon \iota \rho o \iota$. Supply $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \dots \tilde{\epsilon} \rho \iota a \ v \sigma \sigma \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$, "fleeces bloom forth." Observe the force of $\dot{v} \pi \dot{o}$ here, as marking gradual increase. The cotton plant is meant and what are here called fleeces are the contents of the

108 cotton-pods bursting forth.— $\sigma\iota\nu\delta\delta\nu\epsilon\varsigma$, "fine garments." The term $\sigma\iota\nu\delta\delta\nu$ generally means a garment of fine linen. Here, however, such an explanation will not, of course, answer. The reference appears to be to what Herodotus calls $\sigma\iota\nu\delta\delta\nu$ $\beta\nu\sigma\sigma\ell\nu\eta$. (2, 86. Consult Bähr, ad loc.) Muslins, therefore, are evidently meant, and $\sigma\iota\nu\delta\delta\nu\epsilon\varsigma$ might be translated, in this passage, saving the anachronism, "fine muslin garments," or simply, "fine muslins."

32-35. $\kappa\lambda\dot{a}\delta ovc$ $a\dot{c}\dot{z}\dot{\gamma}\sigma a\nu\tau a$, "having put forth branches." More literally, "having caused branches to grow."— $\varepsilon t\tau a \tau \eta \nu \lambda ot \pi \eta \nu$, &c., "take, upon this, the rest of their growth in a downward direction," i. e., have their branches after this bending towards the earth. We have here a description of the Indian fig, or banyan tree, which forms so conspicuous an object in Hindoo mythology. The branches of this tree, after projecting to a certain distance, drop and take root in the earth. These branches, in their turn, become trunks, and give out other branches; and thus a single tree forms a little forest.— $a\dot{v}\dot{z}\dot{a}\nu\nu\tau a\iota$, "grow." Middle voice.— $\dot{c}\dot{z}$ ov $\pi \dot{a}\lambda \iota \nu \dot{o}\mu o \dot{\omega} c$, &c., "after which, having been again, in like manner, bent downward in the course of their growth, they form another layer, then another," &c.

109 LINE 1-3. $\sigma \kappa \iota \dot{\alpha} \delta \iota ov \gamma \epsilon \nu \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \vartheta a \iota \mu \alpha \kappa \rho \dot{o} \nu$. The banyan tree stretches its immense branches, and its holy shade, not only over the pagodas, and the choultries, or caravanseras, but also over serpents and other venomous creatures. Hence it becomes an emblem of the eternal power of Nature, which cherishes both useful and hurtful beings. It is a variety of the Buddha tree, which is revered in the various countries between Hindoostan and China. This will explain the name given it by Linnæus, namely, Ficus religiosa.— $\kappa a l$, "even."

7-9. Περσίς. The reference is to Persia Proper, or what was sometimes called the royal province of Persia. $-\pi \sigma \lambda \lambda \eta \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau \eta \pi a \rho a \lambda (\eta, \&c., "lying in a great measure along the shore of the gulf that is named after it, but in a much greater degree inland." Supply obsa, or <math>\kappa \epsilon \iota \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \eta, -\tau \rho \iota \pi \lambda \eta \delta' \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \lambda$, &c., "it is, moreover, threefold in both its physical character, and the temperature of its climate," 1. e., it is, in fact, subdivided into three distinct regions, as regards, &c.

17-20. των. Supply πόλεων.-την πολυτέλειαν της κατασκευής, "the costly character of the structure."-- βραχέα διελθεῖν, " to enumerate a few brief particulars."—ούσης γùρ ἄκρας ἀξιολόγου, &c., " for, there being here a considerable elevation, a triple wall surrounded it," i. e., a triple wall encompassed an elevation here of considerable height. The ruins of Chehl-Menár are evidently the remains of the splendid structure which Diodorus is here describing. They are placed on a platform or terrace cut out of a rocky mountain, and having a higher part of the same mountain connected with its eastern side, being on the other three sides at a great elevation in a perpendicular precipice from the plain beneath. Above this platform or terrace rise two other terraces. The nature of the ground gives the whole structure the appearance of an amphitheatre erected on three terraces, rising successively one above the other. The whole is of marble quarried in the adjacent hills, of a dark gray colour, and the passages from the lower to the upper terraces are by broad marble staircases. These united elevations are comprehended under the general name of $\check{a}\kappa\rho a$ in the text, and the $\tau\rho\iota\pi\lambda o\tilde{v}\iota$ $\tau \epsilon i \chi o \zeta$ refers to the facings of the three terraces of rock in the case of the lowest, and of marble in that of the other two. These marble facings are formed of gigantic square blocks, without mortar, but fitted with such precision as to appear part of the solid mountain. Consult the plan of the ruins by Heeren (from Sir R. K. Porter's Travels), Hist. Rescarches, 109 vol. ii., p. 401, and Heeren's description of the same, vol. i., p. 147.

21-28. τὸ μὲν πρῶτον. Supply τεῖχος.—τὴν μὲν ἀλλην κατασκευὴν, "the rest of its structure."—περίβολος, "enclosure."—εὖ πεφυκότι, " uell calculated by its very nature." The whole structure, including the facings of the second and third terraces ($\tau \dot{a} \tau \epsilon i \chi \eta$), is built, as we have already said, of enormous blocks of marble, so skilfully disposed upon one another, that it is often difficult, by the nicest observation, to detect their junctures .-έν δὲ τῷ πρὸς ἀνατολὰς, &c., "in that part of the elevation, moreover, which faces the east, there is a mountain standing four hundred feet apart," &c. An examination of Heeren's plan will make all this very apparent, though the description, taken by itself here, seems somewhat obscure. The mountain of which Diodorus speaks is in fact the face of the rock from which the main terrace projects, and the distance between it and the ruins on the upper terrace corresponds accurately with the measurement given in the text. The English translator misinterprets Heeren when he makes him say, in describing the position of the "royal mountain" from Diodorus, that it lay "eastward of the city." The German writer merely states that it was "on the eastern side of the elevation," or "stronghold" (an der Ostseite der Burg).

29-33. $\beta a \sigma i \lambda i \kappa \delta v$. Ctesias calls it "the double mountain," an expression which has given rise to no little controversy, on the part of some of the German scholars. (Consult Bähr, ad Ctes., p. 138, seqq.)— $\pi \epsilon \tau \rho a \gamma \lambda \rho \eta v \kappa a \tau \epsilon \xi a \mu \mu \epsilon v \eta$, &c., "for it was a rock carefully heven, and containing several chambers within, in which were the sepulchres of the departed (monarchs)," i. e., carefully hewn within and without : $\kappa a \tau \epsilon \xi a \mu \mu \epsilon v \eta$ is from $\kappa a \tau a \xi a \epsilon v \omega$. The following description, from Heeren, will throw light upon this passage. "On the face of the rock from which the terrace projects are two sepulchral monuments. A façade has been formed in the surface of the cliff, at a considerable height from the ground, behind which is a square apartment. Beneath, the rock has been cut away perpendicularly, so as to make all access impracticable." (Hist. Res., vol. i., p. 149.)— $\pi \rho \delta \sigma \delta \sigma \tau v \omega \delta \epsilon \tau v \omega v$, &c., "but receiving the coffins of the deceased, who were raised upon high by means of skilfully constructed machines," i. e., the stone coffins containing the corpses were raised up to a level with the opening made above in the face of the rock, and in this way introduced into the hewn-out chambers within.

35-36. κατὰ δὲ τῆν ἄκραν, &c., "throughout this elevation there were very many royal places of entertainment, and treasuries," &c. The reference in καταλύσεις is to banqueting-halls, &c.

LINE 1-3. $\tau a \tilde{v} \tau a \beta a \sigma i \lambda \epsilon \iota a$, &c. Alexander destroyed, 110 neither the entire city of Perscopolis, as some suppose (for it was in existence long after his death), nor all the buildings mentioned by Diodorus as standing on different parts of the $\check{a}\kappa\rho a$. He appears to have set fire merely to a single edifice, on the third or uppermost terrace. This was the main banqueting-hall, where the monarch entertained the grandees of the court on solemn festivals. (Consult Porter, Travels, &c., vol. i., p. 646, and Heeren, Hist. Res., vol. i., p. 190.)— $\check{e}v \epsilon \pi \rho \eta \sigma \epsilon$, from $\check{e}\mu \pi \rho \dot{\eta} \vartheta \omega$.— $\delta \iota \epsilon \pi \delta \rho \vartheta \eta \sigma a \nu$, when Xerxes invaded Greece.

 11-16. λέγουσιν, referring, not to the boys, but to the Persians themselves.
 - ὅτι ἐπὶ τοῦτο ἔρχονται, &c., "that they go (to school) for this purpose, 295 Page just as with us those who are about to learn their letters (go with that view)." We have given γράμματα here its literal meaning The reference appears to be, however, not merely to letters, but to elemen tary studies in general. (Consult Sturz, Lex. Xen., s. v.)—γίγνεται "there arise." Literally, "there are produced."—καὶ ἄλλων οἶων δὴ εἰκός, "and other offences, of such a nature as it is natural for accusations to arise about," i. e., about which it is natural for accusations to arise Complete the clause as follows : καὶ ἄλλων τοιούτων, οἶων δὴ εἰκὸς ἐστὶs ἐγκλήματα γίγνεσθαι.

17-23. αν γνῶσι ἀδικοῦντας, "they may have ascertained to be offending." --ἐγκλήματος, "in the case of an accusation." Literally, "respecting an accusation."-δικάζονται, "go to law." Middle voice.--χάριν ἀποδιδόvaι, "to return a favour," i. e., to testify thankfulness.---καὶ περὶ θεοὺς, &c., "will, in all likelihood, be most negligent of their duty towards both gods," &c. For a literal translation supply ἑαυτοὺς after ἑχειν, "will, in all likelihood, have (i. e., bear) themselves, in an especial degree, negligently towards," &c.

25-33. σωφροσύνην, "discreteness of deportment."—φέρονται δὲ οἶκοθεν, &c., "they bring with them from home, moreover, for solid food, bread, and, to eat with their bread, water-cresses." Observe the force of the middle in φέρονται.—πιεῖν δ', "and for drinking."—ἀρύσασθαι, "to take up water for themselves." Observe the force of the middle. The acrist, too, indicates despatch and saving of time.—ἐκ τούτου δὲ, "but efter this." Supply χρόνου.

LINE 2-14. ên' everage, "straight onward." Supply with ev. 111 $\vartheta \epsilon i a \zeta$ (which is the gen. sing. fem. of $\epsilon i \vartheta \ell \zeta$) the noun $\delta \delta o \vartheta$. $σ_{\chi'}$ ζόμενος, "dividing." Literally, "dividing itself."— σ τόματα. Supply έστι.— δv τὰ ἕσχατα, "the extreme ones of whick." The nominative ab solute again before a clause indicating distribution .--αί γε άξιόλογοι, &c. " some of considerable, but the greater part of scarty, size."-μάλιστά πως. "pretty nearly." Observe the diminishing force of $\pi\omega c$. Literally, "very nearly, after a manner." $-\sigma \partial v$ als $\pi o \imath \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \tau a \imath \kappa a \mu \imath \sigma \tilde{\iota} \varsigma$, "including the bends which it makes." Literally, "together with the bends which," &c. Observe the attraction in alg $\kappa a \mu \pi a i g$. The plain Greek would be, $\sigma \nu \nu \tau a i e$ καμπαῖς ὡς (καμπὰς) ποιεῖται.—κατὰ δὲ τοὺς ὑποκάτω τόπους, &c., "in the low grounds, however, it is contracted in its volume of waters, the stream being continually drawn away more and more towards both continents," i. e., after leaving the mountains and reaching the level country at their base, the Nile loses by sending off two branches, in two opposite directions. This is all false. The Nile receives, in place of sending forth. The two continents are Africa and Asia: which, according to the ancient geographers, until the time of Ptolemy, v ero supposed to have the Nile as their common line of separation.

22-25. $\pi \tilde{a} \sigma a \dot{\eta} \chi \dot{\omega} \rho a$. The inundation is felt most extensively, and, of course, beneficially, in Lower Egypt.— $\dot{e} \pi \lambda \dot{\lambda} \dot{\phi} \phi \nu$, &c., "on natural hills or artificial mounds."— $\kappa a \tau \dot{a} \tau \eta \nu \pi \dot{\sigma} \dot{\rho} \dot{\rho} \omega \vartheta \epsilon$, $\dot{\phi} \psi \nu$, "when seen from a distance." More literally, "as regards the view from the distance."— $\pi \lambda \epsilon i \sigma \nu \sigma \dot{\sigma} \dot{\eta}$, &c., The rise of the Nile commences with the summer solstice (June 21). The river attains its greatest height at the autumnal equinox (Sept. 21), continues stationary for some days, and then diminishes at a less rapid rate than it rose. At the winter solstice (Dec. 21) it is very how, but some water still remains in the large canals. At this period the lands are put under culture.

29-33 $\pi\lambda\eta\rho o\tilde{\upsilon}\tau a\iota \delta \delta \, N \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \lambda o\varsigma$, &c. The inundation of the 111 Nile is caused by the heavy annual rains between the tropics. A similar increase of waters is common to all the rivers of the torrid zone, and, in low situations, occasions inundations as in Egypt. $-\kappa\lambda\nu\zeta o\mu \acute{e}\nu\eta\varsigma$, "being inundated by these." $-\kappa\alpha\tau\dot{\alpha}\tau\dot{\eta}\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\xi$ $\dot{a}\rho\chi\eta\varsigma$, &c., "in the first creation of all things."

LINE 1-10. $\tau \eta \nu$ εὐκρασίαν, "the excellent climate."— $\pi \circ \lambda \dot{\nu}$ -112yorov, "very fertilizing." The waters of the Nile are said, even at the present day, to possess the same character, as regards not only plants, but also the animal kingdom.-και τας τροφάς, &c, "and affording spontaneously its nutritious properties."- Tà ζωογονηθέντα, "the things that are born alive," i. e., animals, as opposed to plants. - TO Kai VEV ETI, &c., "the circumstance, namely, that still, even at the present day, the country in the Thebais produces at certain seasons so many and so large-sized mice."μενούσης έτι κατὰ φύσιν, &c., " the clod of earth still remaining (here) in its natural state," i. e., the latter half of the animal still remains a clod of earth. This foolish story is found in several of the ancient writers, and among the rest in Ælian (H. A., 2, 56). It is very surprising that it should elicit from Wesseling (ad Diod. Sic., 1, 10) only a "nondum credimus." The whole matter rests, very probably, on the appearance, in former days, at particular periods, of great numbers of the sorex, or "shrew-mouse." Some of these little animals, being seen only half out of the earth, may have given rise to the most amusing part of this preposterous fable. That the Egyptians worshipped a species of shrew-mouse (the sorex religiosus), perhaps on this very account, has been confirmed by the discoveries of Olivier and Passalacqua. (St. Hilaire, Dict. Hist. Nat., vol. xi., p. 323.)

12-15. τετταράκοντα ἀπὸ τῆς Μέμφιδος, &c., "to one having advanced forty stadia from Memphis a kind of mountain-ridge presents itself." Literally, "to one having advanced, &c., there is a kind of mountain-ridge." This ὀρεινὴ ὀφρός is called by modern writers a "rocky-platform," and is said to be about a hundred and fifty feet above the level of the surrounding desert. The number of pyramids now standing in Egypt is about forty. They are all in what is called Middle Egypt, and are divided into five groups. The pyramids alluded to in the text are those at the modern Gizeh or Djizeh, northwest of the ancient Memphis, and form the most remarkable of all the groups, since they contain the largest pyramid among them.—ἀξιόλογοι, "remarkable ones."—ἐν τοῖς ἑπτὰ ϑεάμασι, "among the seven wonders (of the world)." Literally, "the seven sights," i. e., great sights.

16-23. πρότερον. It was called Arsinoë, after the queen of Ptolemy Philadelphus. The appellation Κροκοδείλων πόλις is merely a Greek translation of its original Egyptian name.— ἐν τῷ Κυνοπολίτη νομῷ, "in the Cynopolītic nome." The Greek name nome (νομός) was applied to the jurisdictions, or districts, into which Egypt was divided.—δ *Ανουδις, "the god Anūbis," a dog-headed deity of the Egyptians.—καθ' ἑαυτοὺς ἕκαστοι, " each community by themselves," i. e., some animals were held sacred by the inhabitants of one part of Egypt, and not by those of another.

24-28. $i\kappa\alpha\tau\sigma\mu\pi\nu\lambda\sigma\nu\varsigma$. This, of course, is an exaggeration, either springing from the fancy of the bard himself, or resting or. false informaion received from the Phœnician traders. One difficulty, however, still remains. The Egyptian Thebes, contrary to the usual belief, was never surrounded by walls of any kind, and, therefore, even if we consider $i\kappa\alpha\tau\sigma\mu$ - $\tau\nu\lambda\sigma\nu\varsigma$ in the text as equivalent to "many-gated," still these gates or por-

112 tals must either be those of its numerous palaces, or, what is more probable, the openings in the great circus or hippodrome that was in the neighbourhood of the city. The mention of Thebes in Homer occurs at Il., 9, 381, $seqq.-a\dot{v}\tau\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$, as if $\pi\delta\lambda\iota\varsigma$ preceded, which is implied, in fact, in $\Theta\dot{\eta}\delta a\varsigma.-\check{\varepsilon}\sigma\tau\iota$ δ' lepà $\pi\lambda\epsilon\iota\omega$, "there are in it, also, numerous temples." $-\kappa\omega\mu\eta\delta\delta\nu$, "in villages," i. e., several settlements are scattered over the circuit of the ancient city, but they are like so many villages, and form separate clusters or groups.— $\check{\epsilon}\nu \tau\tilde{\eta} \pi\epsilon\rho a\iota\alpha$, "on the opposite side of the Nile." Supply $\chi\omega\rho a$.

29-33. δυοΐν κολοσσών. These are the two statues called by the Arabs. at the present day, Shamy and Damy. - σεισμοῦ γενηθέντος. The destruction of the upper part of this statue has been attributed to Cambyses, by the writers of some of the inscriptions on it, as well as by some ancient authors. This seems more probable than the cause assigned by Strabo, in our text, since the temple to which the statue belonged, and the other colossi in the dromos, have evidently been levelled and mutilated by the hand of man. (Wilkinson's Thebes, p. 36.)— ω_{ς} $\hat{u}v \pi \lambda \eta \gamma \tilde{\eta}\varsigma$ où $\mu \varepsilon \gamma \hat{u} \lambda \eta\varsigma$, "as of a slight blow." The sound which this statue, commonly called "the vocal Memnon," uttered, was said to resemble the breaking of a harpstring. One of the inscriptions, however, says it was like brass when struck $\dot{\omega}_{c}$ χαλκοίο τυπέντος), and this led Wilkinson to make an experiment deserving of mention here. There is, it seems, in the lap of the statue a stone, which, on being struck, emits a metallic sound; and, in the block behind, a square space is cut large enough to admit a person, who might thus lie concealed from the most scrutinizing observer in the plain below. Mr. Wilkinson placed some peasants below, and having ascended to the lap of the statue, struck the sonorous block with a small hammer. On inquiring of the peasants what they heard, their answer was, "you are striking brass." -It may be added, that the part of the statue which had been broken off is now carried away, and that the figure is again completed by courses of common sandstone, forming the back, neck, and head. By whom this was done has not been ascertained.

35-36. $\vartheta \tilde{\eta} \kappa a \,\beta a \sigma i \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \omega v$. These are the famous "tombs of the kings," in which Belzoni made some of his most brilliant discoveries. The paintings, with which they are adorned within, throw great and interesting light on the manners and customs of the ancient Egyptians.— $\lambda a \tau o \mu \eta \tau a \lambda$, "hol lowed out of the rock."

LINE 1-8. $\pi \epsilon \rho i \tau \dot{a} \varsigma \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \chi a \tau i \dot{a} \varsigma$, &c. The position of these mines 113is about southeast from Bahayreh, a village opposite the town o Edfou, or Apollinopolis Magna, and at a distance of nearly ten days' journey rom that place, in the mountains of the Bishareeh. The gold lies in veins of quartz, in the rocks bordering an inhospitable valley: but the small quantity which these mines are capable of producing by immense labour, added to the difficulty of procuring water, would probably render the reopening of them, at the present day, an unprofitable speculation; and indeed in the time of Abulfeda they only just covered their expenses, and have never been worked since they were abandoned by the Arab califs. (Wilkinson, Manners and Customs of Anc. Egypt, vol. i., p. 233.)-Tỹς yùp yỹς ushaivng ovong, &c. 9-11. oi $\gamma a \rho$ $\beta a \sigma i \lambda \epsilon i \varsigma$, &c. Diodorus, who copies this whole account from Agatharchides (de R. M., p. 23), refers here to the Ptolemies, or kings of the Greek dynasty. From his remarks, however, at the close of his narrative, it appears that the mode of mining described by him was brought in by the earliest Pharaohs.— $\epsilon \tau \iota \delta \epsilon \tau o \delta \varsigma \delta i \delta \iota o \delta \varsigma \delta i a \delta \delta \lambda a i \varsigma$, &c.. "and those, moreover, who have become involved in false accusations, and have through resentment been thrown into prison, sometimes themselves alone, at other times," &c. If the Greek text be correct, the reference in $\dot{a}\delta i \kappa o i \varsigma \delta i a \delta \delta \delta \lambda a i \varsigma \delta \sigma v \mu \dot{a} \nu$, have been thrown unbeard into prison. This appears to be the only intelligible explanation that can be given. Wilkinson suggests for a translation, "convicted of false accusations," but the Greek text will not admit of this.

19-23. $\tau\eta\varsigma$ $\delta\epsilon$ $\tau\delta\nu$ $\chi\rho\nu\sigma\delta\nu$, &c., "having, by the aid of a heavy fire, roasted the hardest part of the earth containing the gold, and (thus) made it porous and brittle, they bring to bear upon it the labour of the hands," i. e., they roast the quartz in which the gold lies imbedded. The term "earth" ($\gamma\eta\varsigma$) is here loosely applied to the rocky matrix itself.— $\tau\eta\nu$ $\delta\epsilon$ $\delta\nu\epsilon\mu\epsilon\nu\eta\nu$ $\pi\epsilon\tau\rho\alpha\nu$, &c., "thereupon, many thousands of (these) unfortunate persons labour with iron picks on the rock (thus) softened (by the fire) and able (now) to yield to moderate labour."— $\kappa\alpha\lambda$ $\tau\eta\varsigma$ $\mu\lambda\nu$ $\delta\lambda\eta\varsigma$ $\pi\rho\alpha\gamma\mu\alpha\tau\epsiloni\alpha\varsigma$, &c., "an engineer, moreover, who selects the stone, and points it out to the workmen, directs the whole work." Literally, "an artificer, &c., takes the lead of the whole operation."

They are called Stollen by the German miners.—ἀναβάλλουσιν, "pile up."—ὡρισμένον μέτρον τοῦ λατομήματος, "a piece of the quarried stone of certain dimensions." As the number was more commonly three than two, the greater numeral precedes. Observe the distributive force of $d\nu d$. There is no peculiar form in Greek for distributives. To express their meaning, sometimes the cardinal numbers compounded with $\sigma \upsilon \nu$ are used; sometimes the prepositions $d\nu d$, $\kappa \alpha \tau d$, $\& c. -\pi \rho \delta \varsigma \tau \eta \nu \kappa \omega \pi \eta \nu$, &c., "grind at the handle (of the same mill), reducing the size given (unto them) to the form of the finest flour."

For a literal translation, supply Elval with Dedv. "They think that there is a god, in part immortal," &c. We have here a gross kind of Dualism, suited to the conceptions of a barbarous race. $-\omega_{\zeta} \delta' \epsilon \pi \iota$ τοπολύ, " and for the most part." - θεούς νομίζουσι, " they regard as gods." Literally, "they consider to be gods." Supply $\epsilon lval. - \pi \epsilon \rho l\chi \epsilon a v \tau \epsilon \varsigma$ valor, "having poured around them a transparent kind of resin." The reference cannot, by any possibility, be to glass. Such a version would be totally inconsistent with the barbarous habits of the race. The meaning here given to valoc approximates very closely to its primitive acceptation, namely, any clear or transparent substance, such as crystal, amber, &c. $-\kappa \acute{\nu}\kappa \lambda \omega \tau \breve{\omega} \nu$ iερῶν, " round about the temples."—η άρετη, " or for superiority."

LINE 1-11. of TE Luéveç, &c., "both the harbours, and in par-118 ticular the one called Cothon." Carthage had two harbours, the outer and inner one. The inner harbour was named Cothon .- νησίον περι. φερές, &c., "a small circular island, surrounded by a canal."-νεωσοίκους "arsenals." These were, in fact, arsenals and dockyards combined, consisting of large covered buildings, capable of containing two hundred and twenty vessels of war, and having arsenals in the upper stories. (Appian, Pun., 96.)-λαόν, " a body of followers." -- ούτω δ' εύτυχης, &c., " so flourishing, moreover, did both this colony prove for the Phænicians, and also that sent as far as the other coast of Spain, and the part beyond the Columns of Hercules (in particular)." The meaning is, that not only Carthage proved a flourishing settlement, but also Carthago Nova, on the Mediterranean shore of Spain, and in particular Gades, on the Atlantic coast.- ένείμαντο, "appropriated unto themselves."- ὄσην μη νομαδικῶς, &c., "as much as it was possible to inhabit not in a nomadic manner," i. e., which admitted of any other than a pastoral, and, of course, wandering mode of life : oiov $\tau' \dot{\eta} v$ is the same as $\dot{\epsilon} \xi \ddot{\eta} v - a \dot{v} \tau o \dot{v} \zeta$, referring to the Romans.

12-20. αὐτῶν, referring to the Carthaginians.-τοῦ ὑστάτου πολέμου. The third Punic war, one of the three referred to in the previous paragraph. -έν τῆ πόλει, "in their own city," i. e., Carthage.-καταπελτικὰ ὄργανα, "catapultas." Literally, "catapultic engines."-ώς οὐ πολεμηθησόμενοι, "(thinking) that by doing this they will not be warred upon again by the Romans." We have already remarked, that in order to seize the full sense of $\dot{\omega}_{\zeta}$ with a participle, as in the present instance, we must in translating insert some word or clause.— $\kappa \rho \iota \vartheta \epsilon \nu \tau \circ \varsigma \delta \epsilon \pi a \lambda \iota \nu$, &c., "a renewal of hostilities, however, having again been determined on." Strabo here leans to the Roman side of the question. The truth was, that, after they had been stripped of nearly all their resources by their victorious foes, the Carthaginians were told that they must leave their city, and found one in the interior 301

118 of Africa, at a distance of not less than ten miles from the sea. This stroke of perfidy gave rise to the third Punic war, which closed with the fall of Carthage.

21-39. συνεστήσαντο, "they set on foot."—ἀνεφέροντο, "were laid up," i. e., made and stored up in the arsenal.—πεπηγότες, "well-compacted." βέλη καταπελτικά, "catapultic javelins," i. e., large iron javelins intended to be thrown from catapultas.—τρίχα. The ropes for managing the catapultas were made out of human hair, the Romans having stripped the Ca:thaginians of the proper materials.—καταφράκτους, "completely equipped." --φρουρουμένου, "being blockaded (by the Romans)."—ύλη γὰρ ἦν ἀποκειμένη παλαία, "for a quantity of old naval timber was lying stored up." προσεδρεῦον, "plied the work.—ἑάλω, from ἀλίσκω, in a passive sense.

HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

LINE 1-3. of $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\ddot{a}\sigma\tau\epsilon\iota$, "those in the city," i. e., the Athenians. 119 Whenever the reference is to Attic affairs, and the term $a\sigma\tau v$ is thus employed, the allusion is to the city of Athens. $-\pi o\lambda \epsilon \mu o \tilde{\nu} \tau \epsilon \zeta \dot{\epsilon} \xi \dot{\epsilon} \kappa a \mu o \nu$, "were wearied out with waging war."-vouov Everto. Observe the force of the middle. A legislator is said $\tau \iota \vartheta \epsilon \nu \alpha \iota \nu \delta \mu o \nu$, because he does it for others; but a people are said τίθεσθαι νόμον, because they do it for themselves.— $\mu\eta\tau\epsilon$ γράψαι τινά, &c., " that no one either propose in writing, or recommend by word of mouth, for the time to come, that it is incumbent on the state to lay claim to Salamis, or else that (if he do so) he be punished with death." Observe the distinction between $\gamma \rho \dot{a} \psi a \iota$ and $\epsilon \dot{\iota} \pi \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu$. No law could be proposed to the public assembly at Athens unless it had been written on a white tablet, and fixed up, some days before the time of meeting, at the statues of the heroes called $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\omega}\nu\nu\mu\sigma\iota$, in order that all the citizens might read what was to be proposed at their next meeting, and be able to give a more deliberate judgment thereon. Hence the expression ypátau in the text. The verb $\epsilon i \pi \epsilon i v$, on the other hand, refers to an oral recommendation of any measure either in conversation or debate.

5-9. $\tau \eta v$ ådožíav, "the ignominy (of this decree)."— $\delta \varepsilon o \mu \acute{e} v o v \varsigma$ å $\rho \chi \eta \varsigma$, "only wanting a pretext." å $\rho \chi \eta \varsigma$ is here equivalent to $\pi p o \phi \acute{a} \sigma \varepsilon \omega \varsigma$. av to $\dot{v},$ "of themselves."— $\check{e} \kappa \sigma \tau a \sigma \iota v \tau \delta v \lambda o \gamma \iota \sigma \mu \delta v$, "an alienation of kis reasoning faculties."— $\lambda \acute{o} \gamma \sigma \varsigma$ $\delta \iota \varepsilon \delta \acute{o} \vartheta \eta$, "a report was circulated."— $\pi a \rho a - \kappa \iota v \eta \tau \iota \kappa \omega \varsigma$ $\check{e} \chi \varepsilon \iota v$ av to v, "that he was disordered in intellect." Complete and construe as follows: au to $\check{v} \varepsilon \chi \varepsilon \iota v \dot{\varepsilon} a v \tau \delta v \pi a \rho a \kappa \iota v \eta \tau \iota \kappa \omega \varsigma \tau \delta v v o v v.$ Literally, "that he had himself in a disordered state as regarded his mind."

10-12. $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\tilde{\iota}a$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ $\kappa\rho\dot{\nu}\phi a$ $\sigma\nu\nu\vartheta\epsilon\dot{\epsilon}c$, &c., "having composed, however, in secret, some verses in elegiac measure, and having gone over these carefully, so as to repeat them offhand." Literally, "from the mouth," i. e., from memory. We must not attach to $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\tilde{\iota}a$ anything of an elegiac tone of meaning. It refers merely to the alternating hexameter and pentameter which formed the elegiac measure, and a specimen of which is given farther on. The word $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\gamma\sigma\varsigma$ was first applied to the alternating hexameter and pentameter in the time of Simonides. Previous to this, the measure was called, not $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\gamma\sigma\varsigma$, but $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\sigma\varsigma$, and was used for martial themes. Plutarch, therefore, uses $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\tilde{\iota}a$ here in the earlier sense of $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\eta$, and hence also we see why Solon, who in reality composed a kind of war-song, adopted the 302 measure in question. $-\pi i \lambda i ov \pi \epsilon \rho i \vartheta \epsilon \mu \epsilon v o \varsigma$, "having placed a cap on his head," i. e., as if he had just returned from a journey, the cap being most commonly worn by the Greeks only on journeys.

Observe the force of aὐτὸς, (literally, "I myself"), and also the instantaneous action denoted by the aorist.—κόσμον ἐπέων, &c., "having composed a fair order of words, a song in place of an harangue." The expression κόσμον ἐπέων θέμενος is equivalent, in fact, to ἕπη κοσμίως θέμενος. This line is a pentameter, following an hexameter, the peculiar characteristic of the elegiac metre. In scanning, we must pronounce ἐπέων as a word of two syllables, for the sake of the metre :

Instead, however, of this, we have an adversative clause, προς δε τοῦτον, &c—τέθαπται, "he lies buried." Observe the continued force of the perfect.—τῆς περὶ τον οἶκον εὐπορίας, "of the abundance of his private means."—οὐ μάλα πιθανὰ, "not very convincing, indeed."—τῆς πενίας, "from his poverty," 1. e., from the poverty alleged against him by others. Later writers, however, sometimes allow themselves, in a case like the present, the dative of the person, as marking the more distant object.

The mines of Laurium were in the neighbourhood of the promontory of Sunium.—τὴν διανομὴν ἐάσαντας, &c., "to give over this distribution (among themselves) and construct," &c. The verbs $\delta o \kappa \tilde{\omega}$ and $\phi \alpha (\nu o \mu a \iota)$ frequently refer, among the Attic writers, not so much to what appears, as to what is actually, the case. (Consult Hutch., ad Xen., Cyrop., p. 5.—Dorville, ad Charit., p. 413.)— $\kappa \alpha \lambda \lambda \iota o \nu$, "still more honourably."— $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \tau \epsilon \gamma \tilde{\alpha} \rho \ \mathring{\alpha} \gamma \rho \tilde{\omega} \nu$, &c., "for he both removed the fences from his grounds."— $\tilde{\iota} \nu \alpha \ \vartheta \pi \alpha \rho \chi \eta$, "in order that it may be permitted."— $\lambda \alpha \mu \beta \omega \epsilon \iota \nu \tau \eta \varsigma \ \vartheta \pi \omega \rho \alpha \varsigma$, "to take of his harvest." Literally, "contracted," i. e., brought into a narrower compass.—Où yàp àvñ kev, &c., "for he did not quit him on his departure from Greece, but, following as it were on his very footsteps, before the barbarians could take breath and make a stand, he ravaged and subdued some parts (of his dominions), and caused others to revolt and brought them over to the Greeks, so that he entirely freed Asia, from Ionia as far as Pamphylia, from Persian arms." The reference here is to the Greek cities along the coast of Asia Minor, from Ionia, one of the northwesternmost, to Pamphylia, one of the southern, provinces.

Literally, "after having laboured."- ρώμη και φρονήματι τοῦ κρατεῖν, " by a consciousness of strength and the pride of victory," i. e., by a conviction that what strength they had left was amply sufficient for success, considering the proof they had already given of their prowess, &c.—ἔτι θερμοὺς τῷ κατὰ τὴν ναυμαχίαν ἀγῶνι, "yet warm from their exertions in the naval conflict." — δεξaµένων. Dacier, not understanding the meaning of Plutarch, considers the present passage corrupt, and seeks to improve it by transposing $\pi \epsilon \zeta_{0} \mu a \chi i a$ and $\nu a \nu \mu a \chi i a$. The idea, however, intended to be conveyed by Plutarch is simply this : Cimon, by his victory on the present occasion, surpassed both the sea-fight at Salamis and the land-fight at Platæa : the first, because his own naval engagement was connected with a successful battle by land; and the second, because his battle by land was connected with a victory by sea. $-i\pi\eta\gamma\omega\nu$ $\tau a i \varsigma v i \kappa a i \varsigma$. This, of course, must have been with a view to deceive the Phœnicians. $-\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\delta\epsilon\delta\lambda\eta\kappa\epsilon\nu\alpha\iota$, "had run into."—oùdèv είδότων βέβαιον, &c. 23-27. ἔργον, "achievement."—εἰρήνην. The whole story respecting this peace is a mere fable. It appears to have sprung up, or to have acquired a distinct shape, in the rhetorical school of Isocrates, and to have been transmitted through the orators to the historians. Supply νήσων. This included all the western coast of Asia Minor, and a part of the northern and southern shores. The Cyanean islands were at the junction of the Euxine and Thracian Bosporus. The Chelidonian were off the coast of Lycia, opposite the Sacrum Promontorium.-μακρά νητ και χαλκεμβόλω, "with a long and brazen prowed ship." By μακρά ναῦς is meant a long galley, or regular vessel of war; by vavç χαλκέμβολος, an armed vessel of any kind. $-\pi\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\epsilon\nu$. The regular Attic form is $\pi\lambda\epsilon\bar{\iota}\nu$. But later writers sometimes employ the Ionic resolution. (Consult Lobeck, ad Phryn., p. 221.)

But, though the use of $\pi\iota\epsilon\zeta$. $\epsilon i \nu$ for $\pi i \epsilon \zeta \epsilon i \nu$ is clear enough, the employment of $\pi i \epsilon \zeta \epsilon i \sigma \vartheta a i$, on the other hand, is very uncertain.— $\dot{a}\nu a\gamma a\gamma \dot{a}\nu \pi\rho \dot{c}\varsigma \tau \dot{\sigma} \sigma \tau \dot{o}\mu a$, &c., "having brought up, in contact with his mouth, the arms of the one who was pressing him hard, while clasped around his neck." The expression τa $a \mu \mu a \tau a$ is borrowed from the exercise of wrestling, and is applied to the arms of an opponent thrown or clasped around one's neck, as the wrestling is going on.

The article is here employed, as referring to a well-known story; unless, perhaps, we ought to read $\tau \omega$, the Attic form for $\tau i \nu i - \phi o \rho \tau i \omega \nu$. "loaded with wares."- ὑπέπιπτε τη παρόδω της ὑμάξης, "was going to fall in the path of the wagon."-- διέσχον, "separated," i. e., made way for it. Supply έαυτούς.-καταβαλών. 134 μέν γὰρ καὶ λύρας, &c., "for he said, that the use of the plectrum and the lyre spoiled nothing either of the carriage or the look that became a freeman." Supply ἕλεγε.—αὐλοὺς δὲ φυσῶντος ἀνθρῶπου, &c., "whereas even his intimate friends could with very great difficulty recognise the features of one while playing upon the pipe." Literally, "of a man inflating pipes with the mouth." The reference in αὐλοὺς is, strictly speaking, as the plural indicates, to the double pipe. The term αὐλός is commonly translated "flute," but such a version will invariably lead to an erroneous idea of the term.—ἕτι δὲ τὴν μὲν λύραν, &c., "that the lyre, moreover, speaks and sings with him that uses it," i. e., that the lyre does not prevent the performer from speaking, or accompanying it with a song. ἑπιστομίζειν καὶ ἀποφράττειν, "muzzles and obstructs (the mouth of the performer)." We may supply, here, τὸ τοῦ αὐλοῦντος στόμα.

24-27. οὐ γὰρ ἴσασι διαλέγεσθαι, "for they know not how to converse." The Bœotians were always derided by the Athenians as a dull and unintellectual race.—πατρῷος, "an hereditary protector."—ἕρἑμψε τὸν αὐλὸν. Minerva threw away the pipe, on seeing accidentally, by the reflection in the waters of a fountain, the distortion of her features occasioned by playing upon it.—τὸν αὐλητὴν, "the one that played upon it." The allusion is to the satyr Marsyas, who found the pipe which Minerva had cast away, and, having challenged Apollo to a trial of skill, was defeated and flayed alive. —ἐξέδειρε, from ἐκδέρω.

27-31. τοιαῦτα παίζων, &c., "thus blending at the same time jest and earnest, Alcibiades kept both himself and the others from this branch of earning." Literally, "thus, at the same time jesting and being in earnest," 2. e., having a serious object in view.— $\delta\varsigma$ ποιῶν ὁ ᾿Αλκιδιάδης, &c., "that Alcibiades had done rightly in detesting the art of playing on the pipe," &c. Used here in its theatrical sense, as applied to actors or pieces that were driven from the stage, and equivalent to ἐξεδλήθη.

15-23. πρώτην δ' αὐτῷ πάροδον, &c., "they say, that his first appearince before the people took place in connexion with a voluntary contribution of money (to the state)." More literally, "that his first coming into public," &c.—άλλὰ παριόντα, "but that, while passing by," i. e., but that, happening to pass by.—ἐρέσθαι. This is the same Antiochus who was afterward intrusted by Alcibiades with the command of the Athenian fleet in his absence, and who took that opportunity to engage and was defeated. 26-30. ai δ' iπποτροφίαι, &c., " his rearing of steeds, moreover, (for the public games), was noised all about, and, particularly, on account of the number of his chariots." More freely, "his zeal, moreover, in training horses for the games was very celebrated, especially on account of," &c. The conjunction $\kappa a i$ is here equivalent in fact to $\kappa a i \mu a \lambda i \sigma \tau a - \epsilon \pi \tau a \gamma a \rho$ άλλος ούδεις, &c., "for no other private individual, (na, ... at even a king, but he alone, sent seven (to contend) at Olympia," i. e., seven charlots.-καὶ τὸ νικῆσαι δὲ, &c., "his gaining also the first prize, and his having been likewise second and fourth (victor), as Thucydides relates, or third, as Euripides says, surpasses in splendour and renown all the ambitious strivings (of others) in these respects." With $\tau \delta \nu \iota \kappa \eta \sigma a \iota$ supply $\tau a \pi \rho \tilde{\omega} \tau a$, just as the scholiast to Thucydides (6, 16), in the passage referred to by Plutarch, understands τa $\pi \rho \tilde{\omega} \tau a$ after $\dot{\epsilon} \nu i \kappa \eta \sigma a$.— $\dot{\delta} \delta' E \dot{\nu} \rho i \pi i \delta \eta \varsigma \tau \rho i \tau \sigma \nu$. With $a \dot{\upsilon} \xi \dot{\omega} \nu \epsilon \sigma \partial a \iota$ supply $\delta \delta \xi \eta$. The verb $\dot{a} \rho \chi \rho \mu a \iota$, "to begin," has the participle after it when the assigned state has already taken place; but the infinitive when it is either beginning or just about to commence. Observe the difference between $\lambda \alpha \lambda \epsilon \tilde{i} v$, "to talk," without any very serious object, and $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \iota v$, "to harangue," "to speak to set purpose." A similar difference exists in Latin between loquentia and eloquentia.

10-19. Περιθοίδης, "of the borough of Perithoedæ." This borough formed part of the tribe Eneïs.—ov μέμνηται μεν, &c., "of whom Thucydides also makes mention, as a bad man." (Compare Thucyd, 8, 73.) τοῖς δὲ κωμικοῖς ὑμοῦ, &c., "and who, being continually derided in the theatrical exhibitions (of the day), afforded a subject of merriment to nearly all the comic poets." The punishment of ostracism was never inflicted after this on any individual, as if it had been degraded in the person of Hyperbolus.

Alcibiades, on being recalled from his first exile, was placed at the head of the Athenian fleet. But the fickle populace soon stripped him of this high office, and compelled him to flee. Too much was expected of him, and too little time allowed him for fulfilling even a part of these expectations.— $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda'$ $\dot{v}\pi\eta\rho\dot{\epsilon}\tau\eta$ $\chi a\lambda\epsilon\pi\eta\nu a\nu\tau\epsilon\varsigma$, &c., "but, having become offended at an under-officer, who had lost a few ships in a disgraceful manner, they themselves, still more disgracefully, deprived the state of its ablest and most warlike commander." The under-officer referred to here was Antiochus, who, in the absence of Alcibiades, and against his 320 positive orders, engaged with the Spartan fleet, and was defeated 136 with the loss of a few of his ships.

Consult Passow, Wörterb., s. v.).-- ήδη δια της $\pi \rho \delta c$ έκεῖνον, &c., "making his way already to the rank and influence of a popular leader through the resentment felt towards that statesman by his fellow-citizens." Cleon was a most ignorant and turbulent demagogue, respecting whom consult Thucydides, 3, 36. He was often satirized by the comic muse of Aristophanes. On the present occasion he took advan tage of the unpopularity of Pericles to make himself a popular leader.

Ooserve the use of the singular as applying to $\dot{a}\rho\epsilon\tau\dot{\eta}$ and $\delta\dot{v}\nu\alpha\mu\iota\varsigma$ 139respectively, and the employment of the optative to indicate their private opinion. — $\kappa a i$ avenet pourto, " and recounted." — ωc ouker our event roc, &c., "thinking that he no longer understood (what was said), but had lost all consciousness."- έτύγχανε τον νούν, &c., "happened to have been attending," i. e., it so happened, however, that he was actually attending, Observe the ellipsis supplied in tov voiv. - Egn Savuáleiv, " said he was - surprised." Literally, "already."— $o i \delta \epsilon i \varsigma$, governing των όντων 'Αθηναίων.--μέλαν ιμάτιον περιεβάλετο, " ever put on mourning." Literally, "a black garment." Pericles means, that no one of the Athenians ever put on mourning for the loss of any relative unjustly condemned and punished by his means. Black garments were worn, not only on the death of a person, but also by the friends of an individual, and by the person himself, when any capital charge was pending against him. This was done in order to excite compassion. For a similar purpose, the Roman rei, or accused, assumed squalid attire, and allowed their hair and beard to grow.-περιεβάλετο. Literally, "threw around himself."

29-32. θαυμαστός ούν. Supply ήν.-άλλὰ καὶ τοῦ φρονήματος, "but also for the reach of mind (which he displayed)," i. e., in the remark which he had just made.— ϵi , "since." Equivalent here to $\delta \tau_{\nu}$.— $\tau \delta \mu \eta \tau \epsilon \phi \vartheta \delta \nu \varphi$, &c., "the never having, in anything, gratified either envy or resentment, through the means which so great power afforded, nor having indulged in any of his enmitties as if irreconcilable in its character," i. e., and the never having cherished an irreconcilable enmity. $-\frac{i}{2}\chi \vartheta \rho \tilde{\omega} \nu$. Genitive plural of $\xi_{\chi} \vartheta_{\rho \alpha}$, the noun, not $\xi_{\chi} \vartheta_{\rho \delta \zeta}$, the adjective.

LINE 3-5. ¿ĸ δὲ τούτου, "upon this then," i. e., after the 140battle of Ægospotamos, where Lysander had totally defeated the Athenian fleet, in the twenty-sixth year of the Peloponnesian war.—'A $\vartheta\eta$ vaίων μέν ols ἐπιτύχοι, &c., " as often as he met with any of the Athenians, kept ordering them all to depart for Athens." The particles $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\dot{a}$ kai are elliptical here. The full form is, $o\dot{v} \mu ovor \delta \dot{c} \tau o \tau \sigma$, $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda \dot{a}$ kai, "nor this alone, but . . . also."— $\Theta\epsilon \delta \pi o \mu \pi o \varsigma$. 141 LINE 4-7. $\phi \epsilon \nu \gamma \delta \nu \tau \omega \nu$, "being driven into exile."— $\tau \sigma \tilde{c} \varsigma \phi \nu \gamma \dot{\alpha} \sigma \iota$. The exiles here meant were the oligarchists who had been previously driven out by the democratic party in Samos. The Athenian month Munychion corresponded in a great degree with our April.— $\dot{\epsilon}\nu \, \dot{\eta} \, \kappa a i \, \tau \eta \nu \, \dot{\epsilon}\nu \, \Sigma a \lambda a \mu \tilde{\iota} \nu \iota$, &c., "on which day also they conquered the barbarian in the naval fight near Salamis." vavµaxíav is the accusative of nearer definition.— $\dot{\epsilon}\nu \, \Sigma a \lambda a \mu \tilde{\iota} \nu \iota$. The preposition $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ often denotes mere proximity or nearness.

13-14. $\delta v \sigma \pi \varepsilon \iota \vartheta \tilde{\omega} \varsigma$ $\delta \tilde{\varepsilon}$ kai $\tau \rho a \chi \tilde{\varepsilon} \omega \varsigma$, &c., "the Athenians, however, enduring this reluctantly and angrily."— $\tau \eta \nu \pi \delta \lambda \iota \nu \epsilon i \lambda \eta \phi \tilde{\varepsilon} \nu a \iota$, &c., "that he had caught the city violating the terms of the surrender, for that the walls were still standing, although the days in which they ought to have been pulled down had gone by; that he intends to propose, therefore, ancw (in the assembly of the allies) another (and harsher) plan of operations respecting them, since they have broken the agreements they had made." According to the plot of the Electra, this princess had been given over to a lowly peasant, after her father's murder, by Clytemnestra and her para-324 mour Ægisthus. The fall from princely splendour to poverty was compared by the hearers to that of Athens; once the mistress of nations, now bowed down to the dust. It will be observed that the chorus speak as one person by their leader.— $\pi \sigma \tau i \sigma a \nu a v \lambda a \nu \lambda$ Doric forms for $\pi \rho \delta \varsigma \sigma \eta \nu a v \lambda \eta \nu$.— $a \gamma \rho \delta \tau \epsilon \iota \rho a \nu$. Jacobs thinks that $\check{u}\rho \dot{\mu} \epsilon \nu o\varsigma$ or $\check{\nu} \pi a \rho \dot{\mu} \epsilon \nu o\varsigma$ would be a more correct reading. Not so by any means. The preposition $\sigma \acute{\nu} \nu$ is clearly required by the sense. The legs are suddenly brought together, the individual as suddenly raised, and then thrown to the ground. The narrowing of the base is the first and most important part of the operation.— $\sigma \kappa \epsilon \lambda \tilde{\omega} \nu$. The genitive of part.— $o\check{v} \sigma \nu\nu\eta\gamma a\nu\acute{\kappa}\tau\eta\sigma\epsilon\nu \acute{o} \Lambda\acute{\nu}\sigma a\nu\delta\rho o\varsigma$, "Lysander did not share in the indignation of Callibius." Lysander uses this term here as if the Athenians had only first attained to freedom under the new constitution which he had given them.

The language of Chares we may suppose to have been somewhat as follows : "What a pair of brows our Phocion has!" meaning to imply, "what a gloomybrowed, haughty-looking man he is!" There is a double meaning in the term $\delta \phi \rho \tilde{v} \varsigma$ here, the brow being regarded as the seat of haughtiness and overweening pride. The same remark will apply to the Latin supercilium. $-a\tilde{v}\tau \eta \dot{\eta} \dot{\phi} \phi \rho \dot{v} \varsigma$, "this brow of mine."— $\pi o \lambda \lambda \dot{\alpha} \kappa \lambda a \tilde{v} \sigma a \iota$, &c., "has made the state shed many a tear." Literally, "weep mucl."

26-28. $\pi\lambda\epsilon i\sigma\tau\sigma\nu$ èv è $\lambda\alpha\chi$ i $\sigma\tau\eta$, &c., "contained the most sense in the fewest words." More literally, "in the briefest (compass of) expression." — $\kappa\alpha\lambda$ $\pi\rho\delta\varsigma$ $\tau\sigma\sigma\tau$ čoukev $\dot{\alpha}\pi\iota\delta\omega\nu$, &c., "and it was this that the Sphettian Polyeuctus seems to have had in view when he said that Demosthenes was, in his opinion, a most accomplished orator, but Phoeion a most influentiat ^{Page} 142 speaker." Literally, "and the Sphettian Polyeuctus seems, from paving looked to this at the time, to have said," &c. Polyeuctus was a public speaker of the day, from the borough of Sphettus.— $\epsilon i\eta$ Observe the force of the optative here, as indicating the opinion of the speaker.

29-35. $\tau \bar{\omega} \nu \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \dot{a} \lambda \omega \nu \dot{p} \eta \tau \dot{o} \rho \omega \nu$, "this other public speakers of the day." — $\dot{a} \tau \rho \dot{\epsilon} \mu a$, "in an under tone."— $\dot{\eta} \tau \bar{\omega} \nu \dot{\epsilon} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu \lambda \dot{o} \gamma \omega \nu$, &c., "here comes the pruning knife of my expressions." Literally, "the pruning knife, &c., is present." The $\kappa \sigma \pi i \varsigma$ was properly a kind of Persian sword of a curved form, analogous in some degree to the ensis falcatus of the Romans. Here, however, the term is used in a more special sense, though the reference is still to a curved instrument. (Compare Sturz, Lex. Xen., s. v.) — $\pi \rho \dot{o} \varsigma \tau \dot{\sigma} \dot{\eta} \vartheta \sigma \varsigma$, "to his character," i. e., to the excellence of his character.— $\dot{a} \nu \tau i \dot{\rho} \sigma \sigma \sigma \dot{\epsilon} \chi \varepsilon \iota \pi i \sigma \tau \iota \nu$, "possess an influence that counterbalances." $\pi i \sigma \tau \iota \nu$ is here equivalent to $\delta \dot{\nu} \alpha \mu \iota \nu \varepsilon \dot{\iota} \varsigma \tau \dot{\sigma} \pi \varepsilon \dot{\vartheta} \varepsilon \iota \nu$. Literally, "a degree of credit."

143 LINE 1-7. $\tau o \dot{v} \varsigma' A \vartheta \eta v \eta \vartheta \varepsilon v \dot{a} \pi o \sigma \tau \delta \dot{\lambda} o v \varsigma$, "those sent from Athens," i. e., in command of fleets and expeditions.— $\dot{\varepsilon} \tau \dot{\varepsilon} \rho o v \mu \dot{\varepsilon} v \dot{\varepsilon} \kappa \pi \dot{\lambda} \dot{\varepsilon} o v$ $\tau o \varsigma \sigma \tau \rho a \tau \eta \gamma o \ddot{v}$, "when any other (than Phocion) sailed forth as commander." As, for example, Chares. The rapacity of the Athenian commanders and their followers was at this time a subject of universal complaint among the allies.— $\dot{\varepsilon} \phi \rho \dot{\alpha} \gamma v v \tau \sigma$, "strengthened."— $\dot{a} \pi \varepsilon \chi \dot{\omega} v v v \sigma a v$, "obstructed."— $\dot{\epsilon} i \dot{\delta} \dot{\epsilon}$ $\Phi \omega \kappa \dot{\iota} \omega v \dot{\eta} \gamma o \dot{\tau} \sigma$, "but whenever Phocion had the command."— $\pi \dot{\sigma} \dot{\rho} \dot{\rho} \omega$, "far out."— $\dot{\omega} \varsigma$ advrov $\varsigma \kappa a \tau \ddot{\eta} \gamma o v$, "they conducted him to their homes." $\dot{\omega} \varsigma$ stands here for $\pi \rho \dot{\sigma} \varsigma$, a usage confined chiefly, though not exclusively, to persons. (Rost, G. G., p. 381.)

8-22. ἐκπεπολεμωμένων παντάπασι, "being completely embroiled with Philip," i. e., in a state of decided hostility with him.—αὐτοῦ, referring to Phocion.—ήρημένων, from aἰρέω.—ώς κατέπλευσεν, "when he had sailed back."—ἕπειθε, "he strove to persuade."—εἰρηνικῶς ἔχοντος, "being peaceably disposed." Supply ἑαυτὸν.—ἰσχυρῶς δέχεσθαι τὰς διαλύσεις, "readily to receive the terms of peace (offered by Philip)."—ἀντικρούσαντος αὐτῷ, "having clamorously opposed him."—εἰωθότων, perf. part. mid. of ἑϑω.—ἐγώ γε, εἶπε, &c., "indeed I do, replied Phocion, and that, too, although knowing," &c. The particle γε here affirms and strengthens the question put by Phocion's opponent. Hence the propriety of writing ἐγώ γε in the text, not ἔγωγε.—έγὼ σοῦ. Supply ἄρξω.—ὡς ποφῥωτάτω, "as far as possible."—θέσθαι μάχην, "to make battle."—ῶ τᾶν, "my good friend." (Consult lexicon, under ὦ τᾶν.)—οὕτω γὰρ, "for thus," i. e., if we conquer.—πᾶν δεινὸν, "every danger." After the transactions mentioned in the text, the defeat of the Athenians at Chæronea ensued.

23-29. 'Aλεξάνδρφ. After Alexander's accession to the throne, Phocion was sent to him as ambassador. The monarch not only gave him a favourable audience, but listened to his advice, as stated in the text.—εἰ ὀρέγεται. The present is here employed, though a past action is related, as imparting more animation to the sentence, and bringing the affair more under the eyes of the reader.—ϑέτϑαι, "to put an end to." We have allowed the common text to stand here, as all the editors have done. It is more than probable, however, that Coray's suggestion of καταθέσθαι gives us the true reading, since ϑέσϑαι πόλεμον means rather "to begin a war." Moreover, the compound verb μεταθέσϑαι, that follows, evidently requires the opposition of another compound verb.—μεταθέσϑαι, "to transfer it," i. e., the 326 war.— $\kappa a \tilde{a} \pi o \lambda \lambda \tilde{a} \kappa a \tilde{a} \pi \rho \delta \varsigma \tau \tilde{n} v$, &c., "having said many things, moreover, dexterously adapted to both the disposition and inclination of Alexander." Literally, "with a skilful aim at both," &c.— $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma$ - $\epsilon\xi\sigma\nu\sigma\iota$ $\tau\delta\nu$ $\nu\sigma\tilde{\nu}\nu$ $\tau\sigma\tilde{\iota}\varsigma$ $\pi\rho\dot{\alpha}\gamma\mu\alpha\sigma\iota\nu$, "will have to pay close attention to the affairs of Greece."— $\epsilon\tilde{\iota}$ $\tau\iota$ $\gamma\epsilon\nu\iota\sigma\iota$ $\pi\epsilon\rho\tilde{\iota}$ $a\dot{\upsilon}\tau\delta\nu$, "if anything should happen unto him," i. e., in his intended expedition against Persia.— $\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\iota\nu\sigma\iota\varsigma$ $\dot{\alpha}\rho\chi\epsilon\iota\nu$ $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\eta\kappa\sigma\nu$, "it will be incumbent on them to take the lead," i. e., to assume the direction of affairs.

32-35. 'O yoũv Δo ^z $\rho i \varsigma$ e $i \rho \eta \kappa \varepsilon v$, "Duris, accordingly, has remarked." An historical writer, a native of Samos, who flourished about 257 B.C.- $\tau \delta$ Xa $i \rho \varepsilon v$, "the common salutation Xa $i \rho \varepsilon v$." Literally, "the word Xai $o \varepsilon v$." This was analogous to our English term "greeting."— $\pi \lambda \eta v \dot{\varepsilon} v$ $\delta \sigma a \iota \varsigma$, "except in as many as," i. e., in those which. Attic attraction, for $\dot{\varepsilon} v \tau \delta \sigma a \varsigma$, or, in other words, $\dot{\varepsilon} v \tau a \dot{\upsilon} \tau a \varsigma$, $\dot{a} \varsigma$.— $\mu \varepsilon \tau \dot{a} \tau o \tilde{v} Xa \dot{i} \rho \varepsilon v v$ $\pi \rho o \sigma \eta \gamma \dot{o} \rho \varepsilon v \varepsilon$, "he addressed with the salutation Xa $\dot{i} \rho \varepsilon v$."

LINE 1-4. $\tau \partial \mu \epsilon \nu \tau o \tau \pi \epsilon \rho \partial \tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \chi \rho \eta \mu \dot{\alpha} \tau \omega \nu$, &c., "what is acknowledged, however, to be true, with regard to the sum of money (that was offered him), is this." The particle $\mu \epsilon \nu \tau o \iota$ refers back to what immediately precedes, and the connexion is as follows: "if there be any doubt about this account which Duris gives, the following circumstance, however, about the sum of money that was offered Phocion, may be fully relied upon."-- $\epsilon \kappa \alpha \tau \partial \nu \tau \alpha \lambda \alpha \nu \tau \alpha$. Taking the lowest valuation of the talent, namely, the Attic one of silver, which was equivalent to about ten hundred and fifty-five dollars, fifty-nine cents, of our currency, the sum here sent exceeded one hundred and five thousand five hundred dollars. $-\tau i \delta \eta \pi \sigma \tau \epsilon$, "why, then ?" Literally, "why, then, pray ?" The addition of $\pi \sigma \tau \epsilon$ augments the signification of surprise in an earnest inquiry.

9-18. $\delta \delta \hat{e} \Phi \omega \kappa i \omega \nu a \dot{\nu} \tau \dot{\rho} c$. In regular construction we would expect to ind here. τον δε Φωκίωνα αυτον άνιμήσαντα ύδωρ, &c., as opposed to την uèν γυναϊκα μάττουσαν, which immediately precedes. Plutarch, however, moulds the second clause in such a way, as if the previous one had been, ότι ή μεν γυνή εματτε.- άπενίπτετο τούς πόδας, "began to wash his feet." Observe the force of the middle. - Ĕτι μαλλον ἐνέκειντο, "they urged him still more," i. e., to accept the present. -εἰ φίλος ῶν τοῦ βασιhéws, &c., "that one who was a friend of their king's should live in so wretched a manner." More literally, "that, being a friend of their king's, he should live," &c.— $\chi \epsilon i \rho o \nu a$, "worse off."— $\epsilon i \phi \eta \mu \epsilon i \nu \delta$ ' ἐκείνων δεομένων, " but they begging him not to talk in this way :" ευφημείν means literally, " to utter words of good omen," and the term is employed when we entreat a person not to talk in the way in which he has just been doing, but to hush and be silent, and avoid words of evil omen.-καὶ μὴν, " and yet I can assure you."— $\tau \delta$ δ' $\delta \lambda ov$, "in a word, then." In place of $\tau \delta$ δ' $\delta \lambda ov \epsilon i \pi \epsilon \tilde{\iota} v$. -έμαντὸν ὕμα κἀκεῖνον, &c., " I shall be exposing both myself and that monarch of yours to evil imputations from the city."

22-33. τον δε Φωκίωνα, &c. After the death of Antipater, his son Cassander, and Polysperchon, the guardian of the young Macedonian king Aridæus, strove each to obtain possession of Greece. Phocion, at Polysperchon's instigation, was accused by the people of a traitorous attachment to Cassander and, being deprived of his office of commander, was given over by Polysperchon into the hands of the populace to be tried by them. -είς 'Aθήνας. More literally, "the distressing appearance (which this presented)." With regard to the Ceramicus, consult note on page 130, line 12-18. $-\tau \partial \vartheta \epsilon a \tau \rho o \nu$. The people were often assembled in the theatre for public deliberations.-our artupov, "no infamous person." The aripot were they who, in consequence of some crime or misdeed, had been deprived of their rights and privileges as citizens, and particularly of the right of suffrage.- άλλα πῶσι καὶ πúσαις, &c., "but having thrown the tribunal and theatre wide open to all persons of both sexes." Literally, "having afforded the tribunal and theatre wide open," &c. $-a\dot{v}\tau\tilde{\omega}$ $\mu\tilde{v}v$ $\dot{e}\gamma v\tilde{\omega}\sigma\vartheta a\iota$, "that he had become convinced."— $\dot{e}\kappa \epsilon ivois$, referring to the Athenians. $-i\lambda\varepsilon\upsilon\vartheta$ έροις ήδη καὶ αὐτονόμοις, &c. These words, though meant to flatter, become, in fact, the language of derision, as proceeding from Polysperchon.

145 LINE 2-7. $\ell \nu \epsilon \kappa a \lambda \dot{\nu} \psi a \nu \tau o$, "enveloped their faces in their mantles." Observe the force of the middle.— $\ell \dot{\tau} \delta \lambda \mu \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu \epsilon \dot{\ell} \pi \epsilon \bar{\ell} \nu$, &c., "ventured to suggest, that, since the king has placed so important a trial in the hands of the people, it is but right that the slaves," &c.— $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \pi o \lambda \lambda \tilde{\omega} \nu$, "the mob." A term well applied here to the motley mass that filled the place of assembly, so many of whom had no claim to the right of suffrage or the privileges of citizens.— $\dot{u}\lambda\lambda' \dot{u}\nu \kappa \rho a \gamma \delta \nu \tau \omega \nu \beta \delta \lambda \lambda \epsilon \iota \nu$, "but having with loud cries given orders to stone the oligarchists and enemies of the people." More literally, "but having cried aloud to stone," &c. With $\beta \delta \lambda \lambda \epsilon \iota \nu$ supply $\lambda i \delta \sigma \iota \varsigma$.

11-14. $\delta\tau\iota \ \delta\iota\kappa a(\omega\varsigma, "justly." \ \delta\tau\iota$ is equivalent here merely to the inverted commas in English. $-\mu\eta$ $\dot{a}\kappa o \dot{\sigma} a \nu \tau \varepsilon\varsigma, "unless you have heard us," i. e., shall have heard what we have to say in our defence. Equivalent to <math>\varepsilon\iota \ \mu\eta \ \eta\kappa o \dot{\sigma} a \tau \varepsilon. - \dot{\epsilon} \pi \varepsilon i \ \delta' o \dot{v} \dot{\delta} \dot{\epsilon} \nu \ \mu \tilde{a} \lambda \lambda o \nu \ \eta \kappa o v \sigma \tau \cdots - \dot{a} \delta\iota \kappa \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu \ \dot{o} \mu o \lambda \sigma \gamma \tilde{\kappa}, score , "unless you have heard us," i. e., shall have heard what we have to say in our defence. Equivalent to <math>\varepsilon\iota \ \mu\eta \ \eta \kappa o \dot{\sigma} a \tau \varepsilon. - \dot{\epsilon} \pi \varepsilon i \ \delta' o \dot{v} \dot{\delta} \dot{\epsilon} \nu \ \mu \tilde{a} \lambda \lambda o \nu \ \eta \kappa o v \sigma \tau \cdots - \dot{a} \delta\iota \kappa \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu \ \dot{o} \mu o \lambda \sigma \gamma \tilde{\kappa}, score , "acknowledge that I am an offender, and I adjudge myself worthy of death on account of the things that have been done by me in the administration of the state." It was customary for the person accused to lay some penalty upon himself. Phocion chose the highest, thinking it might serve to reconcile the Athenians to his friends; but he was disappointed. The genitive (<math>\vartheta a \nu \dot{a} \tau o v$) is put with verbs denoting "to criminate," "to accuse," where the literal translation is "with respect to," & c. - \tau o \dot{v} \tau o v \varsigma. Pointing to his fellow-prisoners.

16-19. ὅτι, "because."—ἀποστὰς, "having stepped aside," i. e., having drawn back.—᾿Αγνωνίδης. The individual who had accused Phocion to Polysperchon.—γεγραμμένον, "written out," i. e., expressly prepared for the occasion.—εἰ δοκοῦσιν ἀδικεῖν, "whether they appear to be offenders."

21-23. $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\gamma\rho\dot{\alpha}\phi\epsilon\nu\nu$, "to add thereto." Literally, "to write in addition."— $5\pi\omega\varsigma$ κai $\sigma\tau\rho\epsilon\delta\lambda\omega\vartheta\epsilon\dot{}\varsigma$, &c., "that Phocion should die after having been also put to the torture," i. e., should be tortured before he was put to death. The torture was generally confined to slaves. In some cases, nowever, it was applied even to citizens, and made to precede capital punishment.— $\tau o \dot{\upsilon}\varsigma ~\dot{\upsilon}\pi\eta\rho\dot{\epsilon}\tau a\varsigma$, "the assistants," i. e., the managers of the torture.

26-27. Καλλιμέδοντα τὸν μαστιγίαν, "that vile wretch Callimedon." He was one of the orators of the day. The term μαστιγίας properly de-328 notes a slave that has been frequently scourged, or that deserves 145 frequent scourging : and then, figuratively, any vile wretch or worthless creature.— $\lambda ab \delta \nu \tau \epsilon \varsigma$. This seems hardly necessary here, as $\delta \tau a \nu \lambda \delta \delta \mu \epsilon \nu$ has just preceded. The Greeks, however, are fond of designating the individual moments of a transaction with the greatest possible fulness. Hence it happens, that the participles $\lambda ab \delta \nu$, $\delta \lambda \vartheta \delta \nu$, $\delta \kappa \vartheta \tau \epsilon \varsigma$, $u a \vartheta \delta \nu$, and the like, often wear for us a pleonastic appearance.

29-35. $\delta\rho\vartheta\tilde{\omega}_{\zeta}$ ye où $\pi o\iota\tilde{\omega}v$, "thou dost right indeed in saying so." An idiomatic and elliptical form of expression. The full clause, arranged at the same time in the order of construction, will be, $\sigma v \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \iota \varsigma \tau a \tilde{v} \tau a$, $\pi o \iota \tilde{\omega} v$ όρθῶς γε. The plainer Greek would be as follows : όρθῶς γε ποιεῖς, λέγων ταύτα. (Consult Viger, p. 296, ed. Glasg.) – σε τί ποιήσομεν; "what shall we do to thee ?" i. e., what punishment is left for thee ? Observe the double accusative with $\pi o \iota \tilde{\omega} - \dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \kappa v \rho \omega \vartheta \dot{\epsilon} v \tau o \varsigma$ dè $\tau o \tilde{v} \psi \eta \phi i \sigma \mu a \tau o \varsigma$, &c., "the decree having been passed, and the vote put." The purport of the decree was, that the people should decide, by their votes, whether Phocion and those with him appeared to be offenders or not. This decree was carried in the affirmative. The next step then was for the people to express by their votes the guilt or innocence of the accused.—oi $\delta \hat{\epsilon} \pi \lambda \hat{\epsilon i \sigma \tau o \iota} \kappa a \hat{\epsilon}$ στεφανωσώμενοι, "the greater part, too, having even crowned themselves." As if having gained some victory, it being customary to wear crowns after a victory.-κατεχειροτόνησαν αὐτῶν θάνατον, "condemned them to death by their votes." Literally, "voted death against them." The genitive aυτῶν is governed by κατά in composition.—Δημητρίου δὲ τοῦ Φαληρέως, "against Demetrius the Phalerian, moreover."-κατεψηφίσθη, "was decreed."

LINE 4-11. oi µèv ǎ $\lambda\lambda oi$, "the rest of the condemned." Supply 146 τῶν καταδικασθέντων...-τὸ δὲ Φωκίωνος πρόσωπον, &c., "people wondered, however, at the firmness and magnanimity of the man, on beholding the countenance of Phocion (to be) such as (it was wont to appear) when he was escorted from the public assembly invested with the office of commander."—olov ὅτε στρατηγῶν, &c. The full form of expression is, δν τοῖον, olov ἦν ὅτε, &c...-ἑξεναντίας προσελθών, "having come up full in front."—ὅτε καὶ τὸν Φωκίωνα λέγεται, &c., "on which occasion it is said that Phocion," &c. Some prefer rendering ὅτε here, as it begins a clause, by τότε. For this, however, there is no necessity.—où παύσει τις, &c., "will no one make this fellow cease from his disgraceful conduct?"

13-18. $\gamma \varepsilon v \delta \mu \varepsilon v o \varsigma$, "being come." (Compare Sturz, Lex. Xen., s. v. 13.) — $\kappa \delta \nu \varepsilon \iota o v$. The drinking of hemlock was an ordinary mode of despatching criminals at Athens. It was in this same way that Socrates was put to death.— $\delta \varsigma$ où $\pi \rho o \sigma \eta \kappa \delta \nu \tau \omega \varsigma$, &c., "as perishing undeservedly with Phocion," i. e., insisting that he did not deserve to die with Phocion.— $\epsilon i \tau$ ' où $\kappa \dot{a} \gamma a - \pi \tilde{a} \varsigma$, &c., "art thou not content then, said he, in that thou diest along with Phocion?"— $\epsilon i \tau \iota \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \iota$, "whether he has anything to say," i. e., whether he has any message to transmit.— $\pi \acute{a} \nu \nu \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu o \dot{\nu} \nu, \dot{\epsilon} \phi \eta, \&c.,$ "Ienjoin upon him by all means, said he, not to harbour any resentment against the Athenians." More literally, "not to remember evil against," &c.

20-24. καὶ ὁ δημόσιος οἰκ ἔφη, &c., "and the executioner said that he would not pound a second draught, unless he should receive twelve drachmas, as much as he buys the (requisite) weight (of hemlock) for." With ὁ δη μόσιος supply δοῦλος. Literally, "the public slave," slaves being employed for this purpose. The ellipsis is supplied in Artemidorus (5, 25), σφαγεῖσα

We have in ὅσου the genitive of the price. The term ὅλκή, strictly speaking, denotes the weight of a drachm, which was the usual portion of hemlock for those who were condemned. Observe the force of the article with ὅλκὴν.—χρόνου δὲ γενομένου, &c "some time having thereupon elapsed, and a delay having taken place." The more usual forms are ἑγγενομένου and διαγενομένου, which last Coray adopts here.—ἡ μηδὲ ἀποθανεῖν, &c., "verily, it is not permitted even to die at Athens gratis."—τὸ κερμάτιον, "the requisite sum," i. e., twelve drachmas, which would amount in our currency to a little over two dollars and ten cents. More literally, "the requisite change."

25-30. ἐνάτη ἐπὶ δέκα, " the ninetcenth."—καὶ τῷ Διἱ τὴν πομπὴν, &c., " and the knights passed by, celebrating their (annual) procession in honour of Jove." The festival here alluded to was called Diasia.—ων οἱ μὲν ἀφείλοντο, &c., " some of them took off their crowns," i. e., as mourners, whom it did not become to wear festal garlands.—καὶ διεφθαρμένοις τὴν ψυχὴν, " and corrupted in spirit."—ἀνοσιώτατον γεγονέναι, &c., " that a most unholy deed had taken place, namely, the state's having not even restrained itself during that day, nor kept itself unpolluted by a public execution while celebrating a festival." 33-37. où $\mu \eta \nu$ $\dot{a}\lambda \lambda$ $\dot{\omega}\sigma\pi\epsilon\rho$, &c., "it appeared good, however, to his foes, as if they had (still) contended (against him) in too insufficient a manner, to exclude even the corpse of Phocion from their confines, and that no one of the Athenians kindle a fire," &c., i. e., as if, in the contest of passion and vindictive cruelty, they had not even yet sufficiently gratified their feelings against him.—où $\mu \eta \nu$ $\dot{a}\lambda \lambda \dot{a}$. The particles où $\mu \eta \nu$, in this combination, deny something either before expressed, or to be assumed extraneously, while $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda \dot{a}$ opposes something different. The full expression would be où $u \eta \nu \pi \lambda \epsilon (\omega \nu \nu \nu i \pi \epsilon \rho i \tau o \dot{\tau} \sigma \omega , \dot{a}\lambda \lambda \dot{a}, &c.—\tau \delta \sigma \tilde{\omega} \mu a \dot{\epsilon} \xi o \rho i \sigma a i$. The bodies of traitors were not allowed the rites of interment within their native country The same indignity was here offered to the corpse of Phocion, as if he had been a traitor to his native land.— $\dot{\upsilon}\pi \sigma \nu \rho \tilde{\nu} \tilde{\nu} \tau \dot{\nu} \tau \sigma \iota a \tilde{\nu} \tau \sigma \psi \tilde{\nu}$, "to per form such offices for hire." Observe in $\mu \iota \sigma \vartheta o \tilde{\nu}$ the genitive of the price.

147 LINE 2-8. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa \tau \eta \varsigma M \epsilon \gamma a \rho \iota \kappa \eta \varsigma$, "from the country of Megaris." The Megaric territory lay just beyond Eleusis, to the northwest. $-\dot{\eta} \delta \epsilon M \epsilon \gamma a \rho \iota \kappa \eta \gamma \nu \nu \eta$, "and the Megaric female." Observe the use of the article here as referring to a well-known circumstance.— $\dot{\epsilon} \chi \omega \sigma \epsilon \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$ $a \dot{\nu} \tau \delta \vartheta \iota$, &c., "heaped up there a cenotaph (for him), and poured libations upon it."— $\pi a \rho \dot{a} \tau \eta \nu \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau i a \nu$, "by the side of her hearth," i. e., near the hearth, as near a consecrated place, under the protection of which the remains of Phocion were placed.— $\pi a \rho a \kappa a \tau a \tau i \vartheta \epsilon \mu a \iota$, "do I confide as a deposite."— $\sigma \omega \phi \rho \rho \nu \eta \sigma \omega \sigma \iota$, "shalt have returned to reason." The genitive of the whole, before mentioning the individuals that compose it.—aὐτοὶ, "the Athenians themselves." Supply oi 'Aθηναῖοι.

Supply $\dot{\rho}\eta\sigma'$ τ iva.— $\mu\epsilon\tau a\lambda abov \tau a$, "having taken it up after him." The construction, it will be perceived, still depends on $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \tau \alpha \iota$, at the beginning of the extract $-o\ddot{v}\tau\omega$ $\pi\lambda\dot{u}\sigma a\iota$ $\kappa a\dot{\iota}$ $\delta\iota\epsilon\xi\epsilon\lambda\vartheta\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\nu$, &c., "so moulded the same passage, and went over it with an air and delivery so appropriate, that it appeared to Demosthenes altogether different," i. e., quite another passage The terms $\eta \vartheta o_{\zeta}$ and $\delta_{i} \omega \vartheta \varepsilon \sigma_{i} \zeta$ are both taken here in their rhetorical sense, the former referring to the look and air, the latter to the gesture and general delivery.

28–34. πεισθέντα δὲ ὅσον, &c., "that Demosthenes thereupon, convanced how much of ornament and grace is added to a discourse by proper action, thought that mere exercise in composition is little or nothing to one neglecting the enunciation and delivery of what is said."—έκ τῆς ὑποκρίσεως. The term ὑπόκρισις here refers to action in its oratorical sense, comprehending the look, the gestures, the tone of voice, &c. (Consult Ernesti, Lex. Techn., s. v).—τῆς προφορᾶς. Compare the remark of Ernesti (Lex. Techn., s. v.), "προφορά est pronuntiatio, eadem quæ ὑπόκρισις, sed ad solam elocutionem pertinens."—ἐκ τούτον, "upon this." Literally, "after this." Supply χρόνου.—πάντως, "as a fixed rule."—πλάττειν τῆν ὑπόκρισιν, "he moulded his delivery."—πολλάκις δὲ καὶ μῆνας, &c., " and frequently also joined together two and three months in succession," i. e., stayed there for two or three months together.

The article is joined with $\dot{\varepsilon}\nu\delta\varepsilon\varepsilon\sigma\vartheta a\iota$ in construction, forming a kind of verbal noun which is governed by $\dot{\upsilon}\pi\varepsilon\rho$.— $\[mu]\omega\rho\mu\eta\sigma\varepsilon\ \mu\varepsilon\nu\ o\nu\nu$, &c., "he turned his attention to public affairs, while the Phocian war was prevailing." This is otherwise called the "sacred war," and was waged between the Phocians on one side, and the Bcotians, Locrians, and Thessalians on the other. The quarrel originated in a charge brought against the Phocians of having ploughed a small portion of the sacred territory, belonging to the temple at Delphi. It was aggravated, however, by the Phocians seizing, in selfdefence, the treasures of the Delphic shrine. The war broke out, according to Pausanias (10, 2), in the fourth year of the one hundred and fifth Olympiad, and lasted ten years. Demosthenes, at the period alluded to in the text, was twenty-nine years of age.

4-12. $\lambda \alpha \delta \omega \nu \delta \epsilon \tau \eta \varsigma \pi \sigma \lambda \iota \tau \epsilon \iota \alpha \varsigma, \& c., `` and having taken, as a glorious basis for his political career, the espousing the cause of justice against Philip, in behalf of the Greeks," i. e., the maintaining the rights and freedom of Greece against the encroachments of Philip.—<math>\pi \epsilon \rho (\delta \lambda \epsilon \pi \tau \sigma \varsigma, \eta \rho \vartheta \eta, `` was raised to a conspicuous eminence." — <math>\vartheta \epsilon \rho a \pi \epsilon \delta \epsilon \vartheta \vartheta \delta \epsilon, `` and was courted, ``$

More literally, "and there was the highest estimate of him, with Philip, of (any of) the popular leaders." $-\delta\tau\iota \pi\rho\delta\varsigma$ ev $\delta\delta\varsigma\sigma\nu$ avroic, &c., "that they have to contend with a distinguished man." Literally, "that they have a contest with," &c.

13-18. $\dot{\eta}$ dè $\tau o \tilde{v} \Delta \eta \mu o \sigma \vartheta \epsilon v o v \varsigma$, &c., "the political course pursued by Demosthenes was manifest, even while peace still existed, as allowing no one of the things done by the Macedonian (monarch) to pass uncensured," i. e., the principle that actuated the political course of Demosthenes was evidently this, to allow no one of the acts of Philip, &c. The plainer Greek would have been, $\phi a \nu \epsilon \rho \delta \nu$ $\dot{\eta} \nu$ $\delta \tau i \dot{\eta} \pi \sigma \lambda_i \tau \epsilon i a \tau \sigma \tilde{\nu} \Delta \eta \mu \sigma \vartheta \epsilon \nu \sigma \upsilon \varsigma \dot{\eta} \nu$, οὐδὲν ἐῷν ἀνεπιτίμητον, &c. Observe in the text the construction of the participle ἐῶντος, as agreeing with $\Delta \eta \mu o \sigma \vartheta έ v o v \varsigma$, in place of being put in the feminine and agreeing with $\pi o \lambda \iota \tau \epsilon i a$, although, in rendering, it must be regarded as the latter.— $\dot{\epsilon}\phi$ ' $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\dot{\alpha}\sigma\tau\phi$, "at every opportunity." Supply καίρω.-έπι τον άνθρωπον, "against the man," i. e., Philip. Demosthenes, in his orations, often applies the term $a\nu \vartheta \rho \omega \pi o \varsigma$ contemptuously to Philip, a usage which Plutarch here imitates. $-\delta\iota\delta$ καὶ παρὰ $\Phi\iota\lambda\iota\pi\pi\omega$, &c., "on which account also Philip regarded him as a person of the greatest importance." More literally, "there was the highest estimate of him with Philip."-δέκατος, "along with nine others." Literally, "as a tenth." Ir this construction the pronoun $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{o}_{\zeta}$ is generally expressed with the numeral

20-25. où un ve ve rais andais ripais, &c., " and yet, notwithstanding in the other honours and marks of friendship (bestowed by him) he did noi show himself equally well-disposed to Demosthenes, but testified more re-gard for Æschines and Philocrates." Literally, "but drew more closely unto himself (i. e., by favours, &c.) Æschines and Philocrates." Observe the peculiar phraseology, $\tau o \vartheta \varsigma$ $\pi \epsilon \rho \imath$ $A \imath \sigma \chi \imath v \eta v$ και $\Phi \imath \lambda o \kappa \rho \dot{\alpha} \tau \eta v$, as referring merely to the two individuals themselves, and consult Hermann, ad Viger., p. 700, 6. It must be borne in mind, however, that this same construction often applies to the individuals, who are named, together with their followers or companions; and in later writers to the followers or companions alone. In the present instance, however, Æschines and Philocrates alone are meant.-- ήναγκάζετο βασκαίνων, &c., "Demosthenes was compelled to deride (all this), with a disparaging intent, and to observe, that the first was an encomium applicable to a sophist, the second to a woman, and the third to a sponge; but no one (of them) an encomium that suited a king." Literally, "an encomium of a sophist," &c. Observe the force of $\ell \pi \iota$ σκώπτειν, which is here equivalent to ἐπισκώπτειν, καὶ λέγειν.

30-37. $\pi\rho\tilde{\sigma}\tau\sigma\nu$ µèv elç Evbouav, &c., "he, in the first place, incited the Athenians to send an armament to Eubæa, which had been brought by its tyrants into subjection to Philip." $\dot{\epsilon}\xi\dot{\omega}\rho\mu\eta\sigma\epsilon$ is equivalent here to $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\ell\nu\eta\sigma\epsilon$ $\sigma\tau\delta\lambda\sigma\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\pi\epsilon\mu\pi\epsilon\nu$.— $\tau\tilde{\omega}\nu$ $\tau\nu\rho\dot{\alpha}\nu\nu\omega\nu$. Alluding to Clitarchus and others, who had obtained the tyranny in their respective cities by the aid of Philip, and were supported in their usurped power by his troops.— $\sigma\nu\nu\epsilon\sigma\tau\eta\sigma\epsilon$, "he united."— $\omega\sigma\tau\epsilon\sigma\nu\tau\alpha\xi\iota\nu$ $\gamma\epsilon\nu\epsilon\sigma\varthetaa\iota$, "so that a confederate force was raised." The accusative with the 332 infinitive here depends, like $\sigma \dot{\nu} \tau a \xi i \nu \gamma \varepsilon \nu \dot{\varepsilon} \sigma \vartheta a i$, on $\ddot{\omega} \sigma \tau \varepsilon$ at the be-149ginning of the clause.— $i\pi\eta\rho\mu$ ένης πρός τὸ μέλλον, "being elated with respect to the future," i. e., being filled with flattering hopes of the future.—συνισταμένων κατ' έθνη, &c., "uniting by nations and cities." ό μέγιστος των ἀγώνων, "the most difficult of his labours."-έναγώνιον, "accustomed to war," i. e., inured to battle.—καὶ μάλιστα τότε τῶν, &c.. " and enjoying, at that time, the highest reputation in arms of any of the Greeks." This implies not only the idea of being conciliated, but also of being in some degree cajoled. Philip had bestowed very important advantages on the Thebans during the Phocian war.— $\tau \alpha i \zeta \pi \delta \lambda \epsilon \sigma i \nu$. Attica and Bœotia.

16-21. οὐ μὴν ἀλλ', "however." Consult note on page 146, line 33.— Ἐλάτειαν. The city of Elatea commanded the entrance into Phocis and Bœotia. Equivalent, in effect, to ἐν τῆ ἐκκλησία.—παρελθών, "having come for ward."—τῶν Θηβαίων ἔχεσθαι, "to attach themselves to the Thebans," i. e., to form a union with the Thebans against Philip.—καὶ τἄλλα παρα θαβῥύνας καὶ μετεωρίσας, "and having, in other respects, encouraged the people, as he was accustomed, and raised their hopes." Literally, " and having in other respects encouraged, and raised, as he was wont, the people with hopes."

23-30. τὸ μὲν οἶν συμφέρον, &c., "their true interest, thereupon, did not escape the consideration of the Thebans; on the contrary, each one had before his eyes the evils of war, their Phocian wounds yet remaining fresh: still, however, the power of the orator," &c. By τὸ συμφέρον (literally, "what was advantageous") is here meant the advantage of avoiding a war at the present time, and of remaining on friendly terms with Philip.—τῶν Φωκικῶν τραυμάτων, referring to the evils they had suffered in the Phocian war, before their union with Philip.—ἐπεσκότησε τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν, "cast all other considerations into the shade." Literally, "brought darkness upon everything else."—λογισμὸν, "calculation," i. e., a cautious calculation of advantages and disadvantages.—χάριν, "attachment," i. e., a friendly disposition towards Philip, for benefits conferred by him.—ἐνθουσιῶιτας ὑπὸ τοῦ λόγου, &c., "being inspired, by his eloquence, with an enthusiastic regard for what was honourable alone."

The Bœotian states were united in a confederacy, which was represented by a congress of deputies. There were also other national councils, which deliberated on peace or war. The chief magistrates of the league, called Bæotarchs, presided in these councils, and commanded the national forces. They were, in later times at least, elected annually, and rigidly restricted to their term of office.—διοικεῖσθαι

The plural τοὺς τραγωδίαν ὑποκρινόμενος, "in the representation of a tragedy." The expression $\tau \rho a \gamma \omega \delta(av v \pi o \kappa \rho v \delta \mu e v o \varsigma$ properly means, "acting in a tragedy." Here, however, the reference is to a tragic contest, where each party not only represents a play, but also acts in the same. $-\epsilon \dot{v}\eta\mu\epsilon\rho\tilde{\omega}\nu$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ $\kappa a\dot{\iota}$ $\kappa a\tau\dot{\epsilon}\chi\omega\nu$, &c., "but that, although gaining plaudits, and having the audience on his side, he was eventually overcome through the want of (sufficient) decoration and choral expenditure," i. e., from not having gone to sufficient expense in theatrical wardrobe and decorations, and in the array and training of the chorus. The chorus formed a very essential part of the drama during the best days of the Greek theatre. The splendour of the dresses, the music, the dancing, combined with the loftiest poetry, formed a spectacle peculiarly gratifying to the eye, ear, and intellect of an Attic audience. Hence the important bearing which the chorus always had on the success of a piece.

155 LINE 1-7. $\delta \zeta$ $\delta \rho a$, "thus then." $\delta \zeta$ for $o \delta \tau \omega \zeta$. Observe the accent.— $\phi \omega \nu \eta \sigma a \zeta$. Hector had been conversing with Helen in the house of his brother Paris.— $a \delta \psi a \delta' \delta \pi \varepsilon \iota \vartheta'$, "and quickly thereupon." — $\delta \delta \mu o \nu \zeta \varepsilon \delta \nu a \iota \varepsilon \tau \dot{a} o \nu \tau a \zeta$, "to his well-situated mansion," i. e., having a pleasing situation, and therefore agreeable to dwell in. (Consult Heyne, ad Il., 2, 626.) $\varepsilon \delta \nu a \iota \varepsilon \tau \dot{a} o \nu \tau a \zeta$ is the uncontracted poetic form fr $\varepsilon \nu \nu a \iota \varepsilon \tau \dot{\omega} \nu \tau a \zeta$.— $\delta \delta \delta v \delta \varepsilon \delta \rho'$, "but he found not."— $\delta \nu \mu \varepsilon \gamma \dot{a} \rho o \iota \sigma \iota v$, "in us halls."— $\delta \omega \sigma \sigma \dot{a}$. Poetic for $\gamma o \omega \sigma a$, from $\gamma o \dot{a} \omega$.— $\delta \sigma \tau \eta \delta \sigma \dot{i} \delta \nu i \dot{\omega} \nu$, "having gone unto the threshold, stood there." The preposition $\delta \pi i$ is likewise, in the case of verbs of rest, construed with the accusative, and we might therefore connect here in construction, $\delta \sigma \tau \eta \delta \sigma \dot{a} \sigma \dot{a} \delta \delta \nu$, "stood upon the threshold." The arrangement we have adopted, however, appears more correct.— $\mu \varepsilon \tau \dot{a}$, "among." This preposition takes a dative with the poets only, especially the epic writers.

8-12. $\epsilon i \delta' \check{a}\gamma \epsilon$. This form of expression is generally regarded as elliptical, and equivalent to $\epsilon i \delta \epsilon \beta o \epsilon i \lambda \epsilon \sigma \delta \epsilon$, $\check{a}\gamma \epsilon \delta \epsilon$. Supply, in the present case, $\beta o \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \sigma \delta \epsilon$, and translate, "come, ye hand-maidens, tell me truly, if you will." The words $\epsilon i \delta \epsilon$ are meant to soften down the abruptness of $\check{a}\gamma \epsilon \ldots \check{\eta} \epsilon \pi \eta \epsilon \epsilon \gamma a \lambda \delta \omega \nu$, "did she go either anywhere to the mansions of her sisters-in-law." Supply oixovs. Observe that $\pi \eta$ is here an enclitic, whereas in the previous line it has the accent, and is interrogative.— $\epsilon \epsilon \Lambda \delta \eta \nu a \delta \eta \epsilon \delta \nu \eta \nu \delta \epsilon \delta \nu \delta \lambda \delta \kappa \sigma \nu \tau a \epsilon$, "are striving to propitiate the dread goddess." Supply ποιήσομεν οὕτως, or something equivalent. This is a very natural and common ellipsis in the epic poets, where a gesture of obeisance takes the place of words.—άλλ' ἐπὶ πύργον, &c., "but she went to a lofty tower of Ilium." The allusion is to one of the towers in the city-wall, whence a view could be obtained of the field of battle.—ἀκουσεν for ἤκουσεν, the augment being frequently omitted by the epic writers.— $\tau\epsilon i\rho\epsilon\sigma \vartheta a\iota$, "were hard pressed."— $\mu\epsilon\gamma a\epsilon iva.$, 155 "was prevailing." Literally, "was great."— $d\phi\iota\kappa av\epsilon.$ The present instead of the past, to give more animation to the narrative, and bring the occurrence described more fully before the eyes of the reader. — $\mu a \iota v o \mu \epsilon i \kappa v i a$, "like one distracted." The verb $\mu a i v \epsilon \sigma \vartheta a\iota$ is often spplied to any strong and overmastering emotion, as in the present instance o deep anxiety and solicitude.

22-26. $\tilde{\eta}$ $\dot{\rho}a \gamma v v \eta$ $\tau a \mu i \eta$, "the female housekeeper said." Literally, "said then." $\tilde{\eta}$ is for $\check{\epsilon}\phi\eta$, from $\dot{\eta}\mu i$. The particle $\dot{\rho}a$, except in being more appropriate to poetry, differs in no respect from upa, either in its origin, power, or use. Its primary indication, which it has in the present instance, is that of something accomplished, and complete in every respect. -δ δ' ἀπέσσυτο δώματος "Εκτωρ, " he, thereupon, Hector, rushed forth from the mansion." In Homer, δ , $\dot{\eta}$, $\tau \delta$ is almost everywhere a demonstrative pronoun, those cases excepted where $\tau \delta$, $\tau \delta \nu$, &c., stand for δ , $\delta \nu$, &c. Especially must we be on our guard not to take this form as an article, where it is separated from the substantive by the verb and the whole clause. In the present passage, δ , as a demonstrative pronoun, becomes softened down into our personal pronoun he, to which the name "E $\kappa \tau \omega \rho$ is afterward subjoined, by apposition, in the poetical manner. (Buttmann's Larger Gr Gr., p. 348, Robinson's transl.)- μπέσσυτο. The syncopated 2d aor. mid. for $\dot{a}\pi\varepsilon\sigma\dot{v}\varepsilon\tau\sigma$, from $\dot{a}\pi\sigma\sigma\varepsilon\dot{v}\omega$, with the poetic doubling of the σ .— $\tau\eta\nu$ $a\dot{v}\tau\eta\nu$ όδον aυτις, "by the same way back again."-κατ', "along."-ευτε, "then." As beginning a clause. Literally, "when." $-\tau \tilde{\eta} \gamma d\rho$, "for there." $\tau \tilde{\eta}$ is for $\tau a \dot{\nu} \tau \eta$, with $\chi \omega \rho q$ understood. In other words $\tau \tilde{\eta}$ is here the demonstrative pronoun, in accordance with what has just been remarked.— $\delta\iota\epsilon\xi\iota\mu\epsilon$ val, poetic form for $\delta_{l} \in \xi_{l} \in val$. $-\pi \in \delta(ov\delta \varepsilon, "to the plain."$ The enclitic $\delta \varepsilon$ is appended to nouns in the accusative, in answer to the question whither ? and has then the force of a preposition .- Evo, "thereupon."

LINE 28-30. Heriwv. The nominative is here employed, by 156a careless species of construction, where we would expect to meet with the genitive or else the simple relative $\delta \varsigma$. This occurs also in the Thus we have, $Il., 2, 350, \dot{v}\pi\varepsilon\rho\mu\varepsilon\nu\dot{\varepsilon}a$ Kpoví $\omega\nu a \dots$ case of the participle. άστράπτων ἐπιδέξι', ἐναίσιμα σήματα φαίνων.—ύπὸ Πλάκω ύληέσση, "at the foot of the woody Placus." The expression $\xi_{\chi \in \mathcal{Y}}$ "Ektopi is equivalent to $\lambda_{\lambda_{\chi}} \circ \eta_{\nu}$ "Ektopos. The form $\xi_{\chi} \varepsilon \vartheta$ is for $\varepsilon \xi_{\chi} \varepsilon \tau \sigma$, the augment being dropped.—The particle $\pi \varepsilon \rho$ is explanatory here, like nempe in Latin, though not translated, and $\tau o \tilde{v}$, it will be perceived, is again demonstrative, and equivalent to $\tau o \dot{v} \tau o v$.

31-36. $\tilde{\eta}$ of $\tilde{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\tau'$ $\tilde{\eta}\nu\tau\eta\sigma'$, "she thereupon met him." The relative $\tilde{\eta}$, as beginning a clause, is equivalent here to $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{\eta}$.— $\kappa\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ for $\tilde{\epsilon}\kappa\iota\nu$, from $\kappa\iota\omega$, the augment being dropped.— $\nu\dot{\eta}\pi\iota\sigma\nu$ a $\ddot{v}\tau\omega\varsigma$, "(yet) so young." (Consult Heyne, ad loc.)— $\tau\dot{\sigma}\nu$ $\dot{\rho}$ " $E\kappa\tau\omega\rho$ $\kappa a\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\epsilon\sigma\kappa\epsilon$, &c., "him Hector used to call Scamandrius." $\tau\dot{\sigma}\nu$ is here equivalent to $\tau\sigma\ddot{v}\tau\sigma\nu$, softened down in our idiom to a personal pronoun. The particle $\dot{\rho}a$ is explanatory in this clause, and answers to the Latin scilicet, though not translated.— $\kappa a\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\epsilon\sigma\kappa\epsilon$ 3d sing. imperf. indic. act., a poetic form for $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\dot{a}\lambda\epsilon\iota$. When the poetic terminations $-\sigma\kappa\sigma\nu$, $-\sigma\kappa\epsilon\varsigma$, $-\sigma\kappa\epsilon$, &c., are employed, the augment is usually

The Trojans honoured Hector in the name which they bestowed on his son, the idea of protection and defence being implied in the name of "king," and Hector being, as is stated immediately after, the great defender of the city. -olog yàp èpóeto, &c., "for Hector alone defended Ilium." èpóeto is from $\dot{\rho}\omega\omega$, which has the long penult, not from $\dot{e}\rho\omega\omega$, the penult of which is short.— $\dot{\eta}\tau o\iota$ δ $\mu \dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\mu \epsilon i \delta \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$, &c., "the father, as may well be imagined, smiled as he looked in silence upon his boy." Observe the beautiful use of $\dot{\eta}\tau o\iota$ here, as marking strong affirmation.— δ $\mu \dot{\epsilon}\nu$. Literally, "he indeed." — $\mu \epsilon i \delta \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$ for $\dot{\epsilon}\mu \epsilon i \delta \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$, the augment being dropped.

38-43. $\check{\epsilon}\nu \tau'$ $\check{a}\rho a$ oi $\phi \tilde{\nu} \chi \epsilon \iota \rho i$, "and thereupon clung to his hand." Equivalent to $\check{\epsilon}\nu \epsilon \phi \nu \tau'$ $\check{a}\rho a$ $a \check{v}\tau \tilde{\omega}$. The idea intended to be conveyed in beautiful and striking. The literal meaning of $\check{\epsilon}\mu\phi \dot{\nu}\omega$ is "to cause to grow into," and hence the true force of the passage is, that she clung as closely to him as if growing into him, and forming part of his very nature.— $\phi \tilde{v}$ for $\xi\phi v$. We have regarded ξv here as a preposition, separated from its verb by tmesis. In strict Homeric parsing, however, the preposition, when thus employed, serves really as an adverb. (Matthiæ, Gr. Gr., § 594, 2.) -έπος τ' ἔφατ', ἔκ τ' ὀνόμαζεν, " and spoke and addressed him." As regards this old Homeric formula, which is equivalent merely to the simple $\phi \dot{a} \tau o$, consult the remarks of Heyne, ad Il., 1, 361.— $\dot{o} \nu \dot{o} \mu a \zeta \varepsilon \nu$ for $\dot{\omega} \nu \dot{o} \mu a \zeta \varepsilon \nu$. $-\Delta \alpha_{i\mu}\delta_{\nu_{i}\epsilon}$, "strange man !" The term $\delta \alpha_{i\mu}\delta_{\nu_{i}\epsilon}\delta_{i\epsilon}$ is employed by Homer, in the vocative, sometimes as an appellation of reverence and respect; more frequently, however, as indicating surprise, astonishment, &c., and hence carrying with it more or less of chiding and reproach. The idea that lies at the basis of the term, in either acceptation, is that of something strange and unusual. $-\tau \delta \sigma \delta \nu \mu \epsilon \nu o \varsigma$, "this thy impetuous valour." Observe the demonstrative force of $\tau \partial$, equivalent here to $\tau o \tilde{v} \tau o . - \sigma \epsilon \tilde{v}$, poetic for $\sigma o \tilde{v}$. κατακτανέουσιν for κατακτανοῦσιν, fut. of κατακτείνω.-κε είη, equivalent to $d\nu \, \epsilon \ell\eta$, the particle $\kappa \epsilon$ being poetic for $d\nu .-\sigma \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \, d\phi a\mu a\rho \tau o \delta \eta$, "deprived of thee." Literally, "having missed thee."— $\chi \vartheta \delta \nu a \, \delta \delta \mu \epsilon \nu a \iota$, "to go beneath the earth." Literally, "to enter the earth." $\delta \ell \mu \epsilon \nu a \iota$ for $\delta \tilde{\nu} \nu a \iota$.

44-52. ἐπεὶ ἄν σύγε, &c., "whenever thou mayest have met with thy fate." More literally, "mayest have followed after (and overtaken)." The expression is meant to indicate rashness, and the hastening of one's end. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi i\sigma\pi\eta c$ is the 2d aor. subj. act. of $\dot{\epsilon}\phi\dot{\epsilon}\pi\omega$.— $\sigma\dot{\nu}\gamma\epsilon$. There is a tenderness of reproach in this simple expression which is lost in a translation. It is somewhat like our own form of words, "thou, even thou."— $\eta \tau \sigma \iota \gamma \dot{a} \rho$, " for, as thou well knowest."-'Αχιλλεύς. Achilles, in the first year of the Trojan war, marched with a detachment of the Grecian army against the neighbouring cities in alliance with the Trojans, and destroyed many of them. -έκ δὲ πόλιν πέρσεν, &c., "and completely did he sack the well-situated city of the Cilicians." Here, again, $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa$ is in strictness an adverb, increas-μιν ἐξενάριξε, "but he stripped him not," i. e., of his armour. μιν is poetic for αὐτόν.—σεβάσσατο γὰρ τόγε θυμῷ, "for he had a religious fear of this in mind." σεβάσσατο is for ἐσεβάσατο, the augment being dropped, and the σ doubled for the sake of the metre.— $\kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon \kappa \eta \epsilon$, poetic 1st aor. for $\kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon$ καυσε, from κατακαίω.-συν έντεσι. According to the ancient custom of interring or burning with the dead whatever had pleased them most in life. $-\eta\delta'$ $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\iota}$ $\sigma\eta\mu'$ $\dot{\epsilon}\chi\epsilon\epsilon\nu$, "and upon him he heaped a tomb," i. e., a mound of earth. Separate tombs were only allowed to princes and heroes. - voudas ορεστιάδες, "the nymphs of the mountains." What was done by the hand of man is here poetically called the work of the mountainnymphs.— $ai\gamma_i \delta\chi_{0i0}$, poetic for $ai\gamma_i \delta\chi_{0v}$.

Accusative absolute. - $\hat{\eta} \beta a \sigma i \lambda \epsilon v \epsilon v$, "who was queen." $\beta a \sigma i \lambda \epsilon v \epsilon v$ for $\dot{\epsilon} b a \sigma i \lambda \epsilon v \epsilon v .-- \tau \eta v \dot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon i \dot{a} \rho$, &c., "when, then, he had led her hither." The term δεύρο implies here, not to the city, but to the Grecian camp in its vicinity, and is hence equivalent to eig Τροίην την χώραν.- άλλοισι for άλλοις.-κτεάτεσσιν for κτέασιν.- αψ ογε την aπέλυσε, "back this warrior allowed her to depart." Literally, "released her."— $\pi a \tau \rho \delta \varsigma \delta$ ' $\ell \nu \mu \epsilon \gamma \delta \rho o \iota \sigma \iota$, &c., "but Diana, delighting in the bow, smote her in the halls of her father," i. e., piersed her with an ar row. The allusion is to some sudden death, occasioned by severe illness All sudden deaths were ascribed to Apollo and Diana. It will be observed that by $\pi \alpha \tau \rho \delta \varsigma$, here, is not meant Eetion, but the father of Andromache' mother, and her own maternal grandfather.— $\beta \dot{a} \lambda'$ for $\dot{\epsilon} b a \lambda \epsilon$.

61-63. "Εκτορ, ἀτὰρ σύ, &c., "but thou, my Hector, art to me a father and revered mother," &c., i. e., in the place of.—ἐσσι for εἰς.—σὺ δέ μοι ϑaλερὸς πapaκοίτης, "thou, too, art my blooming husband."—ἀλλ' ἀγε νῦν "oh come, therefore, now."

64-71. $\mu \eta$ $\vartheta \epsilon i \eta \varsigma$, "do not make." Literally, "do not place," i. e, before the eyes of the world. $\vartheta \epsilon i \eta \varsigma$ is the 2d aor. subj. act. for $\vartheta \epsilon \eta \varsigma$, and this for $\vartheta \eta \varsigma - \pi a \rho$ ' $\epsilon \rho \iota \nu \epsilon \delta \nu$, "by the wild fig-tree." 157 Fron the language of Strabo and Eustathius, the reference here would appear to be, not so much to a single fig-tree, as to a hillock covered with them (Consult Heyne, ad loc.)-uubaroç, "accessible." Literally, "of ascent." $-\epsilon \pi i \delta \rho o \mu o \nu$. This part of the Trojan wall was fabled to have been built by Telamon, and was therefore weaker than the rest, which had been constructed by Apollo and Neptune.—ἕπλετο, "is." 3d sing. imperf. ind. of $\pi \epsilon \lambda_{0\mu\alpha\iota}$, contracted from $\epsilon \pi \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \tau_0$, and used here, and most commonly else. where, in the sense of a present. $-\tau \tilde{\eta} \gamma'$, "in this quarter." $-\epsilon \pi \epsilon \iota \rho \dot{\eta} \sigma a \nu \vartheta$ Supply avabaiveiv.- aug' Alavie Súw, &c., "the two Ajaces, and the illustrious Idomeneus, and also the two Atridæ, and the valiant son of Tydeus." Consult, also, note on page 148, line 20-25.-'Idouevña, poetic for 'Idouevéa .--- ň πού τίς, &c., "either, if I mistake not, some one well-acquainted with augury has advised them." The particle πov is equivalent here to the Latin ni fallor. $-\epsilon \nu \iota \sigma \pi \epsilon$, 3d sing, 2d aor. indic. act from ἐνέπω. (Consult Buttmann, larger Gr. With the augment it would be $\eta \nu \iota \sigma \pi \varepsilon . - \sigma \phi \iota \nu$ for $\sigma \phi \iota \sigma \iota v .$ έποτρύνει και άνώγει, "impels and directs them."

Observe that ὡς, coming after the adjective, is more emphatic, and therefore receives the accent. We must not confound this with ὡς for οὕτως—νόσφιν ἀλυσκάζω πολέμοιο, "I seek to flee apart from the war." Literally, "I avoid apart from the war," i. e., from the battle. πολέμοιο for πολέμου.—ἀνωγεν. Supply ἀλυσκάζειν. Observe the wan⁴

Compare the explanation of the scholiast, $\sigma \omega \sigma \omega \sigma \delta \omega \delta \omega v. -\eta \delta$ $\varepsilon \mu \delta v$ $\omega v \tau \sigma \tilde{v}$, "and also my own." $\omega \tau \sigma \tilde{v}$ is here put in apposition with the genitive implied in the possessive $\varepsilon \mu \delta v$, just as in Latin we would have meam ipsius gloriam.

79-81. $\varepsilon v \gamma \lambda \rho \dot{\varepsilon} \gamma \lambda$, &c. The connexion in the train of ideas is as fol lows: It is not, therefore, rashness that leads me to the battle-field, but this desire of upholding my father's glory and my own, as long as the fates allow Ilium to stand, for I well know that our city must eventually fall before the Greeks. While it stands, however, it shall stand with honour, if I can effect this.— $\varepsilon \sigma \sigma \varepsilon \tau a\iota$ for $\varepsilon \sigma \tau a\iota$.— $\delta \tau' \dot{a} v \pi \sigma \tau' \dot{o} \lambda \dot{\omega} \lambda \eta$, &c., "when, come it when it may, sacred Ilium shall perish." Observe the indefinite meaning implied by $\pi \sigma \tau \varepsilon$, literally, "at some time or other."— $\dot{o} \lambda \dot{\omega} \lambda \eta$, perf. subj. mid. with the reduplication, from $\delta \lambda \lambda \nu \mu \iota$.— $\dot{\varepsilon} \nu \mu \mu \varepsilon \lambda \dot{\omega} \omega$; contracted form $\dot{\varepsilon} \nu \mu \mu \varepsilon \lambda \dot{\omega}$.—Ip $\iota \dot{\omega} \mu \omega \iota$ for Ip $\iota \dot{\omega} \mu \omega \iota$.

82-87. άλλ' ου μοι Τρώων, &c., " but the sufferings of the Trojans, hereafter, are not so great a source of anguish unto me, nor those of Hecuba herself," &c. We have given $\delta\lambda\gamma\sigma\varsigma$ a plural translation, as suiting better the English idiom. Compare the explanation of Heyne: "mala quæ Trojani experturi sunt."— $\kappa \epsilon v \pi \epsilon \sigma \sigma \epsilon v$, "will in all likelihood fall." Observe the use of $\kappa \varepsilon \nu$ (i. e., $\hat{\alpha} \nu$) with the optative, as expressing what is both possible and probable. Compare also the explanation of Heyne: "forte occubituri sunt."-πολέες for πολλοί.-κονίησι for κονίαις.-δυσμενέεσσιν for δυσμένεσιν.— ὅσσον σεῖ', "as are thine." Supply as follows: ὅσσον σείο (for σοῦ) ἄλγος μέλει μοι.—κὲν ἄγηται, "shall perchance lead thee away." Observe the force of the middle, "lead thee away for himself," i. e., as his captive.—έλεύθερον ήμαρ ἀπούρας, "having taken away the day of freedom." Literally, "thy free day." An old form of expression, where $\eta \mu a \rho$ refers more particularly to the condition or state in which one passes the day. Compare δούλιον ημαρ, at verse 95.— $\dot{a}\pi o \dot{v} \rho a \varsigma$, 1st aor. part. act., formed by a peculiar anomaly of the vowels, and closely related In signification to the poetic forms $\dot{a}\pi\eta\dot{v}\rho\omega\nu$ and $\dot{a}\pi\eta\nu\rho\dot{a}\mu\eta\nu$, from $\dot{a}\pi a\nu\rho\dot{a}\omega$. No separate present occurs for it. The radical verb is aupw. (Buttmann's Lexil., 23, s. v. anavpav.-Id. larger Gr. Gr., p. 269, Robinson's transl.)

SS-92. καί κεν, "and perhaps."—έν ^{*}Αργει, "in Argos." The reference here is not to Argos, the capital of Argolis, but to Pelasgic Argos (Argos Pelasgicum) in Thessaly, which Strabo says stood once in the iminediate neighbourhood of Larissa, and near which he places the two fountains of Messēis and Hyperēa. mentioned in the succeeding line. (Consult Heyne, ad loc.)—πρòς ἀλλης, "at the orders of another." Literally, "from another."—Μεσσηΐδος η Υπερείης, "from (the fountain of) Messeis or Hyperea."—πόλλ ἀεκαζομένη, "much against thy will."—έπικείσετ, "shall hang over thee."—καί ποτέ τις εἶπησιν, "and (then) haply some one shall say." εἶπησιν is for εἶπη.—κατὰ δάκρυ καταχέουσαν. In ordinary parsing this would be regarded as a tmesis for δἰακρυ καταχέουσαν. In Homeric Greek, however, κατά thus situated has an adverbial force, and imparts energy to the simple verb.—δς ἀριστεύεσκε μάχεσθαι, "who was the bravest in battle."—ἀριστεύεσκε for ἡρίστευε. Consult note on verse 34.

i. e., through regret at the loss of a husband who could have saved thee from servitude. We must be careful not to render $\tau o \iota o v \delta' a v \delta \rho \delta \varsigma$, "of such a husband as I am." The term $\tau o \iota o v \delta \varepsilon$ is equivalent here, in fact, to the prosaic olov $\tau \varepsilon \delta v \tau o \varsigma$, so that the whole line, when converted into prose, would be as follows: $\sigma \tau \varepsilon \rho \eta \vartheta \varepsilon \sigma a a v \delta \rho \delta \varsigma$ olov $\tau \varepsilon \delta v \tau o \varsigma a \mu v \upsilon \varepsilon v$, &c., "having been deprived of a husband able to ward off," &c.— $\delta o v \lambda \iota o v \eta \mu a \rho$. Consult note on verse 87.— $a \lambda \lambda \dot{a} \mu \varepsilon \tau \varepsilon \vartheta v \eta \tilde{\omega} \tau a$, &c., "but may the heapedup earth cover me lying dead." The optative here, without $\kappa \varepsilon$ or $\kappa \varepsilon v$, has the force of a wish.— $\tau \varepsilon \vartheta v \eta \tilde{\omega} \tau a$ for $\tau \varepsilon \vartheta v \eta \kappa \delta \tau a$. Observe the continued force of the perfect.— $\tau \iota$, "aught."— $\sigma o \vartheta \vartheta \varepsilon \delta \kappa \eta \vartheta \mu u \delta o$, "and of thy being dragged away into captivity."— $o \vartheta \pi a \iota \delta \delta \varsigma \delta \rho \delta \xi a \tau o$, "stretched out his arms to receive his boy." Observe the force of the middle. Verbs indicating desire, &c., take the genitive of the object, from which that proceeds which gives rise to this feeling. $\delta \rho \delta \xi a \tau o$ wants the augment.

LINE 100-106. $i\kappa\lambda iv\vartheta\eta$, "shrunk." Passive in a middle sense. 158 —πατρός φίλον, "of his father." φίλος, in the epic language, has often the force of a possessive pronoun, "mine," thine," "his" or "hers," &c., according to the person.— $\delta \epsilon iv \partial \nu v \epsilon v o \nu \tau a$, "nodding fear fully."—νοήσας. Supply $a \dot{\nu} \tau \partial \nu$, i. e., $\tau \partial \nu \lambda \delta \phi o \nu$.— $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \delta$ ' $\dot{\epsilon} \gamma \dot{\epsilon} \lambda a \sigma \epsilon$, &c., "openly then smiled both his father," &c. $\dot{\epsilon} \gamma \dot{\epsilon} \lambda a \sigma \epsilon$ (for $\dot{\epsilon} \gamma \dot{\epsilon} \lambda a \sigma \epsilon$) appears to have here the force of $\dot{\epsilon} \mu \epsilon i \delta (a \sigma \epsilon)$. The plain translation, "out then laughed," is too strong for the general tone of feeling that pervades the whole passage. — $\kappa \rho a \tau \partial \varsigma$, gen. sing. of $\kappa \rho a \varsigma$.— $\kappa a i \tau \eta \nu \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$, "and this."— $\partial \nu \phi (\lambda o \nu v i \partial \nu,$ "his own loved son." The plain prose idiom would be $\pi \varepsilon \rho i a \vartheta \tau \sigma \tilde{\nu}$; but the Attic idiom is here the same as the Homeric, the Attic writers saying $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \varepsilon \iota \nu \tau \iota \nu a \delta \tau \delta \gamma \epsilon \iota \nu$ $\pi \varepsilon \rho t \tau \iota \nu o \varsigma.$ — $\chi a \rho \varepsilon t \eta$, 2d aor. opt. pass. of $\chi a (\rho \omega)$.

115-121. κηώδει κόλπω, "in her fragrant bosom." The reference here is to the use of perfumes. Compare the remark of Heyne, "quia vestes odoribus perfusæ erant."—δακρνόεν γελάσασα, "having smiled tearfully," i. e., having smiled through her tears. The neuter of the adjective taken adverbially.—μιν κατέρεξεν, "caressed her." μιν for $a\dot{v}\tau\eta\nu$.—δαιμονίη, "foolish one." Indicative of mingled tenderness and chiding. The literal reference is to strangeness of conduct. Consult note on verse 39.—μη άκαχίζεο, "be not afflicted." ἀκαχίζεο for ἀκαχίζου.—ὑπερ alσaν, "contrary to fate," i. e., prematurely.— ^{}Alδι. Equivalent to ἐς ^{}Alδα.—πραiáψει, "shall hurl." The preposition πρό, in composition here, does not signify "prematurely," but "onward," to some destined mark.—πεφυγμένον ἕμμεναι, "has escaped." Passive for the middle.—ἐπὴν τὰ πρῶτα γένηται, "after he has once been born." More literally, "after he has first peen born."

122-125. τὰ κ' αὐτῆς ἕργα κόμιζε, " attend to thy own employments." F F 2 341 ^{Page} 158 These words, and those which immediately follow, sound somewhat harshly to our ears, and seem not fully in unison with the previous tone of feeling exhibited by Hector. Allowance must be made, however, for the simple manners of an early age. Besides, Hector merely recommends to Andromache, that she turn her attention to domestic affairs, as a means of calling off her thoughts from the gloomy scenes on which they have just been dwelling.— $a\dot{v}\tau\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$, put in apposition with the genitive implied in $\sigma \dot{a}$.— $\xi \rho \gamma c v \dot{\epsilon} \pi o i \chi \epsilon \sigma \vartheta a \iota$, "to ply their work." Literally, "to go unto," "to approach."— $av \delta \rho \epsilon \sigma \iota$ for $av \delta \rho a \sigma \iota$.— $\tau o i l\lambda i \omega \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \gamma \epsilon \gamma \dot{a} \sigma \sigma \iota$, and formed as if coming from an obsolete verb $\dot{\epsilon} \gamma \gamma \dot{a} \omega$.

127-133. οἰκόνδε βεβήκει, "had meanwhile departed for her home." Observe the rapidity of action indicated by the pluperfect.—ἐντροπαλιζομένη, "looking back from time to time." A beautiful touch of nature.—τῆσιν δὲ γόον πάσησιν ἐνῶρσεν, "and excited lamentation among them all." τῆσιν πάσησιν is for ταῖς πάσαις.—ai μὲν ἔτι ζωὸν, &c., "these, indeed, lamented Hector, though still alive, in his own mansion."—γόον. According to some, a syncopated form for ἐγόαον, ἐγόων, but more probably, according to others, a second aorist act irregularly formed from γοάω. In either case, the augment is wanted.—ῷ for ἑῷ, from ὅς for ἑός.—ἐνὶ for ἐν. —οὐ γàρ μιν ἑτ' ἑφαντο, &c., "for they thought that he will no longer return," &c. Literally, "they said unto themselves," i. e., unto their own bosoms. Observe the force of the middle.

159 LINE 1-4. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\dot{\delta}\nu a\tau o$, "was diffusing her radiance." Literally. "was diffusing herself." Middle voice.— $\pi o\iota\dot{\eta}\sigma a\tau o$, "convened." Literally, "made for himself," i. e., in his own good pleasure. $\pi o\iota\dot{\eta}\sigma a\tau o$ for $\dot{\epsilon}\pi o\iota\dot{\eta}\sigma a\tau o$.— $O\dot{\upsilon}\lambda\dot{\upsilon}\mu\pi o\iota o$ for ' $O\lambda\dot{\upsilon}\mu\pi o\upsilon$. Olympus, in Thessaly, with its cloudy summits, was the fabled abode of the Grecian gods.— $\sigma\phi$ ' $\dot{a}\gamma\dot{o}\rho\epsilon\upsilon\epsilon$, "harangued them." Literally, "spoke unto them." $\sigma\phi$ ' is for $\sigma\phi$, and inat for $\phi\phi i\sigma\iota\nu$, equivalent, in the epic language, to $a\dot{\upsilon}\tau olc$.— $\dot{\upsilon}\pi\dot{\sigma}$ $\dot{a}\kappa o\upsilon o\nu$, "attentively listened." $\dot{\upsilon}\pi\dot{\sigma}$ denotes here inferiority of power, and conse quent subjection and obedience.

5-9. $\kappa \epsilon \kappa \lambda \upsilon \tau \epsilon$, 2d plur. 2d aor. imper. from $\kappa \lambda \acute{\omega} \omega$, with the poetic reduplication, for $\kappa \lambda \breve{\upsilon} \tau \epsilon$. — $\mu \epsilon \upsilon$ for $\mu \upsilon \upsilon$. — $\tau \acute{\omega} \mu \epsilon \vartheta \upsilon \mu \delta \varsigma$, &c., "what things my mind within my bosom commands," i. e., bids me utter. $\tau \acute{\omega}$ is for $\dddot{\omega}$, and $\grave{\epsilon} \upsilon \imath \sigma \tau \eta \vartheta \epsilon \sigma \sigma \iota$ for $\grave{\epsilon} \upsilon \sigma \tau \eta \vartheta \epsilon \sigma \iota$. — $\tau \acute{o} \gamma \epsilon \delta \iota \alpha \kappa \acute{\epsilon} \rho \sigma \alpha \iota$ $\grave{\epsilon} \mu \diamond \upsilon \nu$ $\check{\epsilon} \pi \sigma \varsigma$, "to violate this my mandate." Literally, "to cut through," or "in pieces." $\tau \acute{o} \gamma \epsilon$ is for $\tau \upsilon \breve{\upsilon} \tau \sigma \gamma \epsilon$, and $\delta \iota \alpha \kappa \acute{\epsilon} \rho \sigma \omega$, 1st aor. Æol. $\delta \iota \acute{\kappa} \epsilon \rho \sigma a$. So we have $\kappa \epsilon \lambda \lambda \omega$, fut. $\kappa \acute{\epsilon} \lambda \sigma \omega$: $\check{\sigma} \rho \omega$, fut. $\check{\sigma} \rho \sigma \omega$, &c. — $\check{\epsilon} \pi \sigma \varsigma$. The mandate of Jove is implied in the words $\delta \upsilon \delta' \mathring{a} \upsilon \grave{\epsilon} \gamma \grave{\omega} \upsilon$, &c., verse 10, and is an order to the gods not to aid either the Trojans or Greeks. — $a \grave{\iota} \upsilon \epsilon \iota \tau, \ \alpha \delta \rho \sigma a \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \upsilon \tau \eta \sigma \omega$, "that I may accomplish." 1st aor. subj. act. — $\tau \acute{a} \delta \epsilon \grave{\epsilon} \rho \gamma a$, "these things (which I nave in view)." Literally, "these operations."

to the thunderbolt. $-O\check{v}\lambda\nu\mu\pi\acute{o}v\delta\varepsilon$, "to Olympus," equivalent to 159 $\pi\rho\acute{o}\varsigma$ "O $\lambda\nu\mu\pi\circ\nu$. Consult note on verse 25, page 155.

13-18. μιν for αὐτὸν.—τῆλε μάλ', "very far off."—βάθιστον βέρεθρον, "a very deep abyss." βέρεθρον is an epic form for βάραθρον, from which last comes the Latin barăthrum.—πύλαι. The gates here spoken of were fabled to separate Hades from Tartarus, and to confine the wicked in the latter as their place of punishment.—'Aίδεω for ἄδου.—γνώσετ' ἐπειθ', &c., "then will he know by how much I am the most powerful of all the gods." ἐπειθ' is for ἐπειτα.—εἰ δ', ἄγε, "but come, if ye will." Supply βούλεσθε after εἰ δ', and consult note on verse 8, page 155.—πειρήσασθε, θεοὶ, &c., "make trial for yourselves, ye gods, that ye all may know." Observe the force of the middle in πειρήσασθε.—εἶδετε, an epic form for εἰδητε, the long vowel being shortened for the convenience of the verse.

19-21. χρυσείην for χρυσέην, and that for χρυσῆν.—έξ οὐρανόθεν, "from heaven." The preposition έξ is here employed pleonastically, according to earlier usage. In like manner we have έξ ἐμέθεν, ἐκ πρώραθεν, &c. πάντες δ' ἑξάπτεσθε, "do ye all, thereupon, attach yourselves unto it."– πεδίονδε, "to the plain," i. e., to earth, considered as a level surface.

23-29. $d\lambda\lambda'$ ore $\delta\eta$ kai $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\dot{\omega}$, "but when now I even." - $a\dot{\sigma}\tau\eta$ kev $\gamma a\eta$, &c., "I will draw it together with the earth itself, and the sea itself." The preposition $\sigma v v$ is here supposed to be understood, an omission of very common occurrence with the pronoun avrog in the dative .- έρύσαιμ'. Supply $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{\eta}v$, as referring to $\sigma\epsilon\iota\rho\dot{\eta}v$. $-\pi\epsilon\rho\dot{\iota}\dot{\rho}\iota ov O\dot{v}\lambda\dot{v}\mu\pi o\iota o$. Olympus is here considered to be entirely detached from earth, and forming part of the heavens. The chain is to be bound to its peak or loftiest summit, and, from this chain, earth, sea, and the gods are to hang. $-\tau \hat{a} \,\delta \hat{\epsilon} \,\kappa' \,a \hat{v} \tau \epsilon$, &c., "and all these things, on their part, shall be suspended in the air." $\tau \dot{a}$ for $\tau a \tilde{v} \tau a . - \dot{u} \kappa \eta v$ έγένοντο $\sigma \iota \omega \pi \eta$, "were profoundly silent." The term $\dot{u}\kappa\dot{\eta}\nu$ appears to be, here, an old adverbial form, arising from the accus. fem. of the adjective akaos; namely, akaav, changed in Ionic to akénv and akhv. The adjective $\ddot{u}\kappa a o c$ is thought to be derived from a privative and $\gamma a \dot{v} \omega$. to gape, so that its meaning will be, "with unopened lips." Hence, perhaps, the literal sense of $\dot{u}\kappa\eta\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\dot{\epsilon}\nu\sigma\nu\tau\sigma$ $\sigma\iota\omega\pi\eta$ is, "were in a state of silence with unopened lips," i. e., kept their lips firmly compressed in silence. (Consult Buttmann's Lexil., p. 73, s. v. akéwv, akhv). - μῦθον aγaσσaμεvoi, " having wondered at the speech," i. e., struck with surprise and fear at what was said. Compare the explanation of Heyne : "percussi his dictis ac perculsi." $-\mu$ άλα κρατερῶς, "in a very threatening manner."

10-14. $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\dot{a} \tau i\eta \mu o\iota \tau a \tilde{v} \tau a$, &c., "but why does my mind hold converse with me about these things?" i. e., why do I think of these things when my friend Patroclus lies unburied? Achilles now recollects that his friend lay,

160 as yet without funeral rites, whom he had declared (Il., 18, 335 seq.) that he would not inter, until he should have brought the arms and person of Hector before the corpse of that friend.— $i \kappa \lambda a v \tau o \varsigma$, "unwept," i. e., unhonoured as yet with the lamentations, that are raised, in due form, for the departed.— $\delta \phi \rho'$ $av \epsilon \gamma \omega \gamma \epsilon$, &c., "as long as I, for my part, may be among the living." $\mu \epsilon \tau \epsilon \omega$ is for $\mu \epsilon \tau \omega$, from $\mu \epsilon \tau \epsilon \iota \mu \iota$.— $\kappa a \epsilon \mu \epsilon \iota$ $\phi i \lambda a \gamma o \delta v a \tau' \delta \rho \omega \rho \eta$, "and as long as my knees may continue to move them selves for me," i. e., as long as my frame may continue vigorous. Observe the continued action denoted by the perfect. $\delta \rho \omega \rho \eta$, perf. subj. mid. with the reduplication, from $\delta \rho \omega$.— $\epsilon i \delta \epsilon \vartheta a v \delta v \tau \omega v \pi \epsilon \rho$, &c., "for even if the rest of men forget the dead in Hades, yet will I remember my friend even there." With $\kappa a \tau a \lambda \eta \vartheta o v \tau a \iota$ supply of $\omega \lambda \lambda o \iota$.

16-19 võv ở ảγ. Observe the use of ảγε in the singular, with the plural following.— $\pi a\iota\eta ova$, "a song of victory."—vηνσίν γλαφυρησι for vavoiv γλαφυραζς. The expression έπι νηνσίν is used here for έπι νησς. τόνδε ở ἀγωμεν, "and let us bear this one away." Alluding to the corpse of Hector.— ϕ Tρωες κατά ἀστν, &c., "to whom the Trojans, throughout the city, rendered homage as to a god," i. e., treated or honoured him as a god. The verb literally means, "to address vows or prayers to one." It is here taken in a general sense, however, to indicate implicit confidence and unbounded respect.—εὐχετώωντο for εὐχετῶντο, from εὐχετοάομαι for εὐχετῶμαι.

20-27. $\dot{\eta}$ $\dot{\rho}a$, "he said then." $\ddot{\eta}$ for $\ddot{\epsilon}\phi\eta$. from $\dot{\eta}\mu\dot{\iota}$.— $\mu\dot{\eta}\delta\epsilon\tau o$, "devised." Observe the double accusative ($\xi \rho \gamma a$ and "E $\kappa \tau o \rho a$) governed by this verb.έξηπτεν, "he fastened to them." — ἕασεν for εἴασεν. — ἀνά τε κλυτὰ τεύχε acipac, " and having lifted up into it the renowned arms (of Hector)," i. e., as battle spoils.— $\mu \acute{a}\sigma\tau\imath\xi\epsilon\nu$ δ' $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\acute{a}a\nu$, "he thereupon lashed (the steeds) to advance."— $\tau \dot{\omega}$ δ' , " and they two," referring to the steeds. Supply $i\pi\pi\omega$. The steeds of Achilles, of immortal origin, were two in number, Xanthus and Balius, the offspring of the harpy Podarge and the wind Zephyrus. A third steed, Pedasus, was of mortal birth. (Il., 16, 145, seq.) $-\tau \circ \tilde{v} \delta' \eta \nu$ έλκομένοιο κονίσαλος, "from him, getting dragged along, the dust arose," 1. e., from the corpse of Hector. Literally, "there was dust."- $\dot{a}\mu\phi\dot{c}\delta\dot{e}$ χαῖται κνάνεαι πίτναντο, " and his dark locks streamed all around." More literally, "were spread forth all around." $\pi i \tau \nu a \nu \tau o$, from $\pi i \tau \nu \eta \mu i$, is equivalent to $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\tau\dot{a}\nu\nu\nu\nu\tau\sigma$. This is Heyne's reading, and far superior to $\pi i\lambda$ vaντο, which many give. The latter form is regarded as equivalent to προσεπελάζοντο, and the translation will then be, "and his dark locks all around were brought near to it," i. e., to the dust, with an ellipsis of κονισ- $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\omega$ or $\kappa\sigma\nui\alpha\iota_{\mathcal{C}}$. This, however, is far inferior, and has a pleonastic effect, considering that $\kappa \alpha \rho \eta \delta' \alpha \pi a \nu$, &c., follows.

29-30. $\dot{\alpha}\varepsilon\iota\kappa(\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\vartheta\alpha\iota)$. Supply $a\dot{v}\tau\delta\nu$, as referring to Hector.— $\kappa\varepsilon\kappa\delta\nu\iota\tau\sigma$, "was defiled with dust," pluperfect of $\kappa\sigma\nu\iota\omega$.— $\dot{\eta}$ $\delta\epsilon$ $\nu\nu$ $\mu\dot{\eta}\tau\eta\rho$, &c. Hecuba, Priam, and many others, had witnessed the combat between Achilles and Hector from the ramparts of Troy.

161 LINE 33-35. $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\epsilon\iota\nu\dot{a}$, "pitcously."— $\dot{\epsilon}\chi\rho\nu\tau\rho$, "were occupied." — $\tau\tilde{\varphi}$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ $\mu\dot{a}\lambda\iota\sigma\tau$ ' $\dot{a}\rho$ ' $\dot{\epsilon}\eta\nu$, &c., "and it was most like to this, as if all lofty llium were being consumed from its summit by smouldering fire." A most beautiful and appropriate simile, and one deriving its chief force from the peculiar meaning of the verb. The lamentations, that re-echoed through out Ilium, are compared to the cry of distress occasioned by some secret conflagration, the smouldering fires of which are spreading far and wide, but are as yet more or less concealed from view, and give few outward tokens of the extent of their ravages. So the dread of evil, now that Hector is slain, comes upon the Trojans as something indistinct and undefined, but on that very account the more calculated to alarm.

37-40. ἔχον, "restrained," for εἶχον.—ἀσχαλόωντα, "filled with indignant grief," for ἀσχαλῶντα, from ἀσχαλοάω for ἀσχαλάω.—ἐλλιτάνευε for ἐλιτάνευε, on account of the metre.—κατὰ κόπρον, "amid the mire."-ονομάζων, "addressing."

41-47. $\sigma\chi\epsilon\sigma\vartheta\epsilon$, "desist." More literally, "hold yourselves back," i. e., cease trying to detain me.—olov, "alone," i. e., unattended.— $\kappa\eta\delta\phi\mu\epsilonvol$ $\pi\epsilon\rho$, "anxious though ye be."— $\pi\delta\lambda\eta\sigma\varsigma$ for $\pi\delta\lambda\epsilon\omega\varsigma$.— $\lambda\iota\sigma\sigma\omega\mu$, "let me supplicate." Observe the use of the 1st person sing. of the subjunctive, in a case of entreaty and supplication, and consult Matthiæ, Gr. Gr., § 516.— $\eta\nu$ $\pi\omega\varsigma$ $\eta\lambda\iota\kappa\eta\nu$ aldésoretal, "if perchance he will reverence my years." aldésoretal for aldésontal, 1st aor. subj. mid. of aldéoµal.— κ al dé $\nu\nu$ $\tau\phi\delta\epsilon$ $\pi a\tau\eta\rho$, &c., "for his father Peleus is even such as myself." Literally, "is even such as this man." Accompanied by a gesture, as indicating himself.— $\pi\epsilon\rho\lambda$ $\pi\omega\tau\omega\nu$, "above all."

49-52. τῶν πάντων, "for all of these."—οὐ ἄχος ὀξὺ, "my keen sorrow for whom."—"Εκτορος · ὡς ὄφελεν, &c., "my Hector : oh would that he had died in my arms!" "Εκτορος is put in apposition with ἑνὸς, and, in construing, comes in with most force at the end of the clause.—ὡς ὄφελεν ϑανέειν. Literally, "how he ought to have died !" ὄφελεν is for ὡφελεν, from ὀφείλω.—ϑανέειν for ϑανεῖν.—ἐμῆσιν for ἐμαῖς.—τῷ κε κορεσσάμεϑa, &c., "in that event we would have sated ourselves, both weeping and mourning (over him)," i. e., we would have had our fill of tears and sorrow over the body of our son.

54-61. ἐπὶ δὲ στενάχοντο πολῖται, "and the people also groaned."— Τρωῆσιν δ' Ἐκάδη, &c., "then, among the Trojan females, Hecuba began her loud lament." Τρωῆσιν for Τρωαῖς. As regards the peculiar force of ἀδινός in this and similar passages, consult the remarks of Buttmann, Lexil., p. 36, § 6, s. v. ἀδινός.—γόοιο for γόον.—ἐγὼ δειλὴ τί νυ βείομαι; "why do I, a wretched woman, now live?" βείομαι, poetic for βέομαι. ἀποτεθνηῶτος for ἀποτεθνηκότος.—ὅ μοι πελέσκεο, "that wast unto me." ὅ is for ὅς.—πελέσκεο, poetic for ἐπέλον.—δειδέχατο σε, "received thee," i. e., on thy return from the fight. (Consult Heyne, ad loc.) δειδέχατο is an Ionic and poetic form for δεδεγμένοι ἦσαν, 3d plur. pluperf. indic. of δέχομαι.—ἦ γάρ κέ σφι, &c., "for assuredly thou wouldst have been a very great glory to them, hadst thou continued alive." κε ἕησθa is for ἀν ἦς. The form ἕησθa is poetic for ἦσθa, and this, with what the grammarians call the Æolic paragoge, but what is, in reality, an old tense-suffix, stands for the common imperf. indic. ἦς.—νῦν αὖ, "now, on the contrary." κιχάνει. Supply σε: "overtake and hold thee for their own."

62-66. $\delta^{\nu}\pi\omega \tau \iota \pi^{\epsilon}\pi\nu\sigma\tau\sigma$, "had not as yet learned aught," i. e., of what had befallen him. $\pi^{\epsilon}\pi\nu\sigma\tau\sigma$ for $\epsilon^{\mu}\pi^{\epsilon}\pi\nu\sigma\tau\sigma$, pluperf. indic. of $\pi\nu\nu\vartheta^{\epsilon}\alpha\nu\mu\mu\mu$. - σ^{ν} , "unto her."— $\delta^{\nu}\tau\iota$ bá ol $\pi^{\epsilon}\sigma\iota\varsigma$, &c., "that her husband, namely, was remaining without the gates," i. e., a corpse in the hands of the foe. bá is here equivalent, as an explanatory particle, to the Latin scilicet or nempe.— $\pi\nu\lambda\dot{\alpha}\omega\nu$ for $\pi\nu\lambda\omega\nu.-\mu\nu\chi\omega$, "in an inner apartment."— $\delta(\pi\lambda\alpha\kappa\alpha \pi\rho\rho\psi\rho\epsilon\eta\nu,$ "a purple double robe." The reference is to a robe of large dimensions, to be worn doubled, and intended to cover the whole person down to the feet. (Consult Heyne, ad Il., 3, 126.)— $\epsilon\nu$ $\delta\epsilon$ $\vartheta\rho\delta\mu\alpha \pi\delta\kappa(\lambda')$ $\epsilon\pi\alpha\sigma\delta\epsilon\nu$, "and was sprinkling over it flowers of varied hue," i. e., was embroi-345 Page 161. dering into it, &c. Nothing can be more beautifully expressive than the verb $\pi \dot{a} \sigma \sigma \omega$, here, of graceful skill on the part of Andromache. It is as if she were strewing bright-hued flowers, with a gentle waving of the hand, over the web in the loom.— $\vartheta \rho \dot{\rho} va$. Consult, as regards the peculiar force of this term, the commentators on Theocritus, Id., 2, 59.

162 LINE 70-74. νηπίη, "foolish one."—ὅ μιν for ὅτι αὐτὸν –-τῆς δ' ἐλελίχϑη γυῖα, "and her limbs trembled." Literally, "were shaken," or "made to tremble."—ἕκπεσε for ἐξέπεσε.—ἡ δ' αὖτις ὅμωῆσιν, &c., "she then again spoke among her fair-haired female domestics." ℌμωῆσιν for ὅμωαῖς.

75-84. idou', "let me see with my own eyes." Observe the force of the middle, and consult, as regards the use of the subjunctive here, the note on verse 43.—τέτυκται, "have been done."-όπος ἕκλυον, "I heard just now the voice." Observe the force of the aorist. $\delta \pi \delta \varsigma$ is from $\delta \psi$. $- \dot{\epsilon} \nu \delta' \dot{\epsilon} \mu \delta \dot{\epsilon}$ $a\dot{v}\tau\tilde{\eta}, \&c., ``and within my own self, in my bosom, my heart palpitates up$ to my mouth." $\sigma \tau \hat{\eta} \vartheta \varepsilon \sigma \iota$ is intended as a nearer definition of $\dot{\xi} \mu o \hat{\iota} a \dot{\upsilon} \tau \hat{\eta}$. Observe the force which the simple and natural language of the text carries with it. $-\pi \eta \gamma \nu \nu \tau a \iota$, " are growing torpid." $-a \iota \gamma \dot{a} \rho \dot{a} \pi$ o $\dot{\nu} a \tau o \varsigma$, &c., " far away from my ear be the tidings of it." Compare the version of Heyne, "procul ab aure sit mea dictum." at is for ϵi , as equivalent to $\epsilon i \vartheta \epsilon$, and expressive of a wish. $-ova\tau oc$, from the earlier nominative ovac. In later Greek, οὖς, ὠτός.- ἀποτμήξας, "having cut him off," i. e., having intercepted his retreat to. $-\pi\varepsilon\delta(ov\delta\varepsilon, "to the plain," i. e., down from the higher$ ground, where the city was situate, to the plain beneath where the contending armies were wont to engage.—και δή μιν, &c., " and lest he may have caused him now to cease from the fatal valour that used to possess him," i. e., may have conquered and slain him. $\xi \chi \varepsilon \sigma \kappa \varepsilon$ is for $\varepsilon l \chi \varepsilon$. $-\mu \varepsilon \nu \varepsilon \nu$ for $\xi \mu \varepsilon \nu \varepsilon \nu$.— $d\lambda \lambda d$ $\pi o \lambda v$ $\pi \rho o \vartheta \epsilon \varepsilon \sigma \kappa \varepsilon$, &c., "but used to rush far in advance (of the rest), yielding in that valour of his to no one." $\pi \rho c \vartheta \varepsilon \varepsilon \sigma \kappa \varepsilon$ is for προεθεί, from προθέω.-το δν μένος for τοῦτο (or ἐκείνο) ἑον μένος.

85-90. διέσσυτο, "she rushed through." Consult note on ἀπέσσυτο, verse 22, page 155.—μαινάδι ἴση, "like a phrensied woman."—παλλομένη κραδίην, "with a palpitating heart." Literally, "agitated in heart." lξεν from ἴκω.—ἕστη παπτήνασ' ἐπὶ τείχεϊ, "she stood upon the rampart, looking forth for an instant with anxious eye." Observe the quickness of action indicated by the aorist.—ἕλκον ἀκηδέστως, "were dragging unfeelingly." Hesychius explains ἀκηδέστως by ἀνηλεῶς, ἀφροντίστως, in accordance with the version we have here given. It may also be translated, "deprived of funeral obsequies," which would be less forcible in the present case, however, though nearer the literal meaning of the term.

91-94. $\tau \eta \nu$ δè $\kappa a \tau'$ ỏ $\phi \vartheta a \lambda \mu \tilde{\omega} \nu$, &c., "thereupon dark night covered her on her eyes." More literally, "down upon her eyes."— $d\pi \delta$ δè $\psi \nu \chi \eta \nu$ ἐκά- $\pi \nu \sigma \sigma \varepsilon \nu$, "and breathed forth her life," i. e., fainted. The reference is not to death itself, but to a struggling as it were with death, and the panting and exhaustion attendant on such a conflict. It is analogous to the Latin animam agere.— $\tau \eta \lambda \varepsilon$ δ' $d\pi \delta$ $\kappa \rho a \tau \delta \varsigma$, &c., "far from her head thereupon did she cause to fall the bright ornaments attached to it." As she fell these were thrown to a distance. Consult the remarks of Heyne on the objections raised by the scholiasts to this passage.— $\chi \varepsilon \varepsilon$ is for $\xi \chi \varepsilon \varepsilon$, and this for $\xi \chi \varepsilon \iota$, from $\chi \varepsilon \omega$.— $d\mu \pi \nu \kappa \alpha$, $\kappa \kappa \kappa \rho \omega \phi a \lambda \delta \nu \tau'$, &c., "the fillet for the brow, and network for the hair, and also the twisted cord for the temples, and the weil." The poet here specifies what in the previous line was expressed generally by the term $\delta \epsilon \sigma \mu a \tau a$. The $\delta \mu \pi v \xi$ was a fillet, or bandeau, passing around the upper part of the forehead, and thus confining the hair on the top of the head. Over this was placed the $\kappa \epsilon \kappa \rho v \phi a \lambda \rho v$, a kind of network, covering the entire hair of the head, like a species of cap. To keep on this $\kappa \epsilon \kappa \rho \dot{\nu} \phi a \lambda o \nu$ they tied around the border of it the $\pi \lambda \epsilon \kappa \tau \dot{\eta}$ $\dot{a}\nu a \delta \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \mu \eta$, which passed from the top of the head, along the temples, and was fastened behind. It appears to have been a species of cord, and is called $\sigma \epsilon \iota \rho \dot{a}$ by some of the scholiasts. The $\kappa \rho \eta \delta \epsilon \mu v o \nu$ came last. This was a kind of covering, which, when folded, veiled merely the brow, but, when unfolded, the entire head; for it was the custom with women not to appear in public except veiled. (Consult Terpstra, Antiq. Hom., p. 171, and Heyne, ad Il., 22, 469, seqq.)

95-99. $\chi\rho\nu\sigma\epsilon\eta$ 'A $\phi\rho\sigma\delta(\tau\eta,$ "golden Venus." We have here the ordinary epithet bestowed upon Venus, and which appears synonymous with "beauteous" or "resplendent."— $\mu\nu\nu$ $\dot{\eta}\gamma\dot{\alpha}\gamma\epsilon\vartheta$, "led her away as his bride." Literally, "led for himself."— $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\dot{\epsilon}$ $\pi\delta\rho\epsilon$, "after he had bestowed." $\pi\delta\rho\epsilon$ for $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\sigma\rho\epsilon$, from $\pi\delta\rho\omega$.— $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\alpha\nu$ for $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\eta\sigma\alpha\nu$.— $a\tilde{i}$ $\dot{\epsilon}$ $\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}$ $\sigma\phi(\sigma\nu,$ &c., "who held her among them so completely overcome as to appear to have perished," i. e., as to appear a lifeless object. Equivalent to $\delta\tau\omega\varsigma$ $\dot{\alpha}\tau\nu\zeta\circ\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\eta\nu$ $\omega\sigma\tau\epsilon$ $\dot{\alpha}\pi\delta\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\varthetaa\iota$ $\delta\kappa\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\nu$.

100–102. ή δ' ἐπεὶ οὖν ἄμπνυτο, &c., " but when, then, she respired once more, and her mind was collected in her bosom." ἄμπνυτο is the syncopated 2d aor. mid. for ἀνέπνυτο, from ἀναπνέω.—ἀμβλήδην γοόωσα, "mourning with deep-drawn sobs," i. e., deeply sobbing. As regards the different explanations given to ἀμβλήδην here, consult the remarks of Heyne, ad loc.— Ἐκτορ, ἐγὼ δύστηνος, &c., "oh Hector, oh unhappy me! to one (and the same) destiny were we both then born." γεινόμεθ for ἐγενόμεθα.

113-116. aleí τοι τούτ φ γε, &c., "still, indeed, toil and sorrows will be ever his for the time to come." Literally, "will be to this one for his part." — $a\lambda\lambda oi$ γ ϕo oi, &c., "for others will deprive him of the land-marks of his fields," i. e., will deprive him of his fields by removing the land-marks. $a\pi ov \rho (\sigma \sigma ov \sigma v)$ is for $a\phi o \rho (\sigma \sigma v \sigma v)$, the Attic $\delta \rho \sigma \varsigma$ being $ov \rho \sigma \varsigma$ in the poetic and Ionic language; and hence $a\phi o \rho (\zeta \omega$ becomes in these $a\pi ov \rho (\zeta \omega)$. — $\hbar \mu a \rho$ $\delta' \delta \rho \phi a v \iota \kappa \delta v$, "the day that makes him an orphan, causes a boy to be deserted by all his companions in years." This is intended for a general assertion. The application to Astyanax comes in afterward. Compare the remark of Heyne: "ad generales sententias delabitur Andromache."— $\pi av \tau a \delta' v \pi \epsilon \mu u \mu u v \kappa \epsilon$, sc., "then is he altogether cast down, and his cheeks are wet with tears" $v \pi \epsilon \mu u \mu u v \kappa \epsilon$ is the perf. act. of $v \pi \eta u v \omega$, with the reduplication, for $v \pi \eta u v \kappa \epsilon$, and with the first μ doubled for the sake of the metre. This is the reading of Toup and Heyne. The common text has

163 ύπεμνήμυκε, from the same verb, but with ν inserted after μ (in place of doubling the latter), according to the analogy of νώνυμνος and παλαμναῖος. This has among its advocates Buttmann and Passow. The former reading, however, is by far the more simple and natural of the two.

117-123. δευόμενος, "being in want," for δεόμενος.- άνεισι, "shall ge up." The verb ɛiµı, "to go," and its compounds, are commonly used in the present with the signification of the future.— $\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma \pi a \tau \rho \delta \varsigma \dot{\epsilon} \tau a \dot{\ell} \rho \delta \varsigma$. The preposition $\dot{\epsilon}_{\varsigma}$ is here employed for $\pi p \delta_{\varsigma}$.— $\dot{a} \lambda \lambda o \nu \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \chi \lambda a \dot{\iota} \nu \eta \varsigma \dot{\epsilon} p \dot{\upsilon} \omega \nu$, " pulling one by the cloak." The genitive of part.— $\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \delta' \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \epsilon \eta \sigma \dot{\omega} \tau \omega \nu$, &c.. "thereupon one of those that have compassionated him offers him, for a brief moment, a small-sized cup." We have taken $\tau v \tau \vartheta \delta v$ here as an adverb, since the idea of smallness is implied in $\kappa \sigma \tau \nu \lambda \eta$ itself. Observe the use of the aorist $i \pi i \sigma \chi \epsilon \nu$, as applying to what is accustomed to happen, and hence having, in our idiom, the force of a present. The same remark will apply to the aorists coming after.- ¿dínve, "he moistens." Aorist as a present.άμφιθαλής, "some one having both parents alive." Compare the explanation of Apollonius, Lex. Hom., s. v. ό έπ' ἀμφοτέροις τοῖς γονεῦσι θάλλων, η έφ' $\dot{\phi}$ $\dot{a}\mu\phi\sigma\tau$ έροι οἱ γονεῖς θάλλουσι.—έστυφέλιξεν, "pushes away." Aorist again for the present.—ἕρρ' οὕτως · "there, take that, and away with thee." The reference is to the blows that have just been inflicted on the boy. Hence the clause is equivalent to $\tau o \tilde{v} \tau o$ (i. e., $\tau \dot{u}\varsigma \pi \lambda \eta \gamma \dot{u}\varsigma$) $\lambda a \dot{b} \dot{u} \nu$ έρρε. The literal meaning is, "get thee gone, thus," or "away with thee to destruction, thus." Observe the graphic force of $o\ddot{v}\tau\omega\varsigma$, as indicating gesture.

124-132. aveioi, "will return." Observe the change of meaning which avá now has in composition. It is here equivalent to the Latin inseparable preposition, or, more correctly speaking, prefix, re-. Consult note on verse 117.- ές μητέρα. Equivalent to πρός μητέρα.- 'Αστυάναξ, "my Astyanax !" There is something extremely beautiful in this sudden change from general remark to the particular case of her own son. It is the same as if she had said, "and this boy is my Astyanax !"-έδεσκε, "was wont to eat," 3d sing. imperf. indic. act. for $\eta \delta s$, from $\xi \delta \omega - \pi i \partial v a \delta \eta \mu \delta v$, " the rich fat." Observe the accentuation of $\delta n \mu \delta c$ here, as differing from that of $\delta \tilde{\eta} \mu o \varsigma$, "a people," &c.— $a \dot{v} \tau \dot{a} \rho$, "and who." Literally, "but he."— $v \eta \pi \iota$ axevwv, "from his childish sports." Literally, "sporting like a child."εύδεσκ', "used to sleep," 3d sing. imperf. indic. act. for ηύδε, from εύδω. $-\dot{a}\gamma\kappa a\lambda i\delta\varepsilon\sigma\sigma\iota$ for $\dot{a}\gamma\kappa \dot{a}\lambda\iota\sigma\iota.-\vartheta a\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\omega\nu$, "with delicacies." Compare the explanation of Heyne, "satiatus opimis cibis."-νῦν δ' ἀν πολλὰ πάθησι, &c., "now, however, in all likelihood, will he suffer many things, deprived of his father, he, Astyanax, whom the Trojans call so by surname." It is more forcible, and, at the same time, more Homeric, to regard 'A $\sigma\tau v \dot{a} v a \xi$, here, not as the nominative to the verb, but as in apposition with a nominative understood, or rather implied in the verb.— $\pi \dot{\alpha} \vartheta \eta \sigma \iota$ for $\pi \dot{\alpha} \vartheta \eta$.— $\dot{a} \pi \dot{\sigma}$ άμαρτών. More literally, "having erred from," i. e., having missed.-oloς yàp. Consult note on verse 35, page 156.- žpvoo. The reference now, to the end of the extract, is to Hector.

&c., "being of no use to thee indeed."— $d\lambda\lambda a$ $\pi p \delta_c T p \omega \omega v$, &c., 163 "but yet that they may be an honour unto thee in the presence of," &c. Literally, "but to be a source of honour for thee from the Trojan men and women." The meaning of the whole passage is this: thy rich garments will prove of no use to thee in being burned on a funerai pile, since thy body is in the hands of the foe: still, however, I will burn them in thy honour in the presence of all. Rich and splendid vestments were accustomed to be burned with the corpses of the noble and wealthy, in order to impart becoming honour to their funeral rites.

LINE 1-13. ivy olkov, "straight into the tent." ivy is here 164taken adverbially, as it often is in Homer, and followed by the genitive of the direction. Literally, "straight onward in respect of the $\vartheta \epsilon i \nu \tau o$, and this for the more common $\kappa a \vartheta \tilde{\eta} \nu \tau o$, or, with the augment, $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa a$ θηντο.-ποίπνυον, "were ministering."-νέον ἀπέληγεν, "he had just ceased." More literally, "he had lately ceased."- Tous ELay, "escaped the observation of these."— $\pi o\lambda \epsilon a \varsigma$ for $\pi o\lambda \lambda o \delta \varsigma$.— $v l a \varsigma$, from an obsolete nominative, or, more correctly speaking, theme, viς.--ώς δ' ὅταν ἄνδρ', &c., "but as when severe calamity may have seized upon a man," &c., i. e., the calamity or evil resulting from some heavy misdeed.- άλλων έξίκετο δημον. " hath come to the state of others," i. e., to another state, to a land of strangers.- άνδρος ές ἀφνειοῦ, " to the mansion of some wealthy man." Supply δῶμα.—ὡς ᾿Αχιλεὺς ϑάμβησεν, '' so did Achilles wonder.'' ὡς for οὕτως.— Peoerdéa, to be read as three syllables.

16-31. μνησαι πατρός σείο, "oh think of thine own father." The address of Priam to Achilles stands unrivalled for true pathos and touching simplicity.- όλοῷ ἐπὶ γήραος οὐδῷ, " on the sad threshold of old age." More literally, "the destructive threshold," as referring to the wasting away of the physical powers. The epithet όλοός is here, by a species of poetical usage, applied to oùdóç in place of $\gamma \tilde{\eta} \rho a \varsigma$.— $\kappa a i \pi o v$, " and perchance." -περιναιέται, "his neighbours," from περιναιέτης.-ούδε τις έστιν, "nor is there any one near." $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\dot{\imath}v$ in the sense of $\pi\dot{a}\rho\epsilon\sigma\tau\imathv.-\dot{a}\lambda\lambda'$ $\dot{\eta}\tau oi$, "but yet."- $\sigma \epsilon \vartheta \epsilon \nu$, from $\sigma \epsilon \sigma \vartheta \epsilon \nu$, for $\sigma \sigma \tilde{\nu}$, the syllable $\vartheta \epsilon \nu$ being an old genitivesuffix.—ζώοντος for ζῶντος.—aπδ Τροίηθε, a pleonasm of the preposition, as in έξ οὐρανόθεν, verse 19, page 159.-τῶν δ' οὐτινά for τούτων δ' οὐτινά. $-\tau \tilde{\omega} v$ μεν πολλών, "of the most of these." $-\dot{v}\pi \delta$, "beneath them." Taken adverbially .- os dé por olos env, "but him who was alone to me." The term olog, according to the sense, stands in close connexion with what follows, and the whole passage is the same in effect as if Priam had said, "but him who was alone able to defend my city and its people." Olog cannot, of course, mean that Hector was the last remaining son of Priam, since there were many sons still surviving.-τον, " this one," for τοῦτον.-κτείνας for ἐκτεῖνας.- ἀμυνόμενον περὶ πάτρης, "fighting for his country." More literally, "while warding off the foe round about his native land," i. e., native city .- "Ektopa, "my Hector." Observe with what force and feeling the name comes in at the close of the sentence. $-\tau o \tilde{v} v \tilde{v} v \epsilon i v \epsilon \chi'$, "for his sake now." $-\lambda v \sigma \delta \mu \epsilon v o \varsigma$, "to redeem him." Observe the force of the middle : to redeem him for myself, and in so doing gratify a father's feelings. $-\dot{a}\lambda\lambda'$ aldero ϑ eoùç, &c., "oh, then, have respect, Achilles, for the gods, and compassion for me," i. e., have respect for the gods, the protectors of suppliants, and grant my prayer for their sakes and for mine $-a\dot{v}\tau\dot{\tau}$

164 Equivalent here to $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\dot{\epsilon}$, the reference being indicated by some gesture on the part of the speaker.

165 LINE 32-34. ἐγὼ δ' ἐλεεινότερός περ, &c., "I, however, am even worthier of compassion, for I have endured such things as no other mortal, dwelling upon the earth, has as yet (endured), to move towards my lips the hands of a man who is the slayer of my son." ἔτλην governs τοῖα understood, while with βροτὸς we must supply ἔτλη. The succeeding line, ἀνδρὸς παιδοφόνοιο, &c., has given rise to much diversity of opinion. We have adopted, as the most natural, the explanation of Heyne, which is based on verse 8, where Priam is said to have kissed the hands of Achilles. In the present passage, therefore, χεῖρ' will be for χεῖρε, the accusative dual. -ποτὶ στόμα for πρὸς στόμα.

35-42. τῷ δ' ἀρα πατρὸς, &c., "and thereupon he excited secretly withm him a desire of mourning for his father." Literally, "unto him." Observe the double genitive γόοιο πατρὸς, the latter of which is the genitive of the cause, being equivalent in effect to ἕνεκα πατρὸς.—ἁψάμενος χειρὸς, &c., "having touched him by the hand, he put away the old man gently from him." Observe the force of the middle in ἁψάμενος and ἀπώσατο. τὼ δὲ μνησαμένω, the nominative (dual) absolute, followed by distributive clauses.—ἀδινὰ, "loudly."—ἐλυσθείς. Passive for the middle.—ἄλλοτε δ' αὖτε, "and at other times, in turn." The more usual way is to have another ἄλλοτε preceding πατέρα, just as we have a double ἄλλοτε in verse 57.—ὀρώρει, "arose." Pluperfect in the sense of an imperfect.—γόοιο τετάρπετο, "had sated himself with grief." 2d aor. indic. mid., with the reduplication, for ἐτάρπετο, from τέρπω.—ἀπὸ ϑρόνου ὡρτο, "he arose from his seat." ὡρτο is the syncopated 2d aor. mid. for ὥρετο, from ὅρνυμι. χειρὸς, "having taken him by the hand."

45-53. $\frac{1}{7}$ δη, "assuredly now."—μνσχεο, "thou hast endured," for $d\nu$ έσχου.— $d\nu\delta\rho\delta\varsigma$ ές όφθαλμοὺς, δς, &c., "into the presence of a man (such as I am) who have slain," &c. Observe the change from the third person to the first, which we have endeavoured to express in English by a paraphrastic version. In the Greek there is supposed to be a gesture at $d\nu\delta\rho\delta\varsigma$, which takes away from the apparent harshness of the transition.— $\sigma\iota\delta\eta\rho\epsilon\iota\delta\nu$ νν τοι ητορ, "thou hast, then, an iron heart," i. e., a heart uninfluenced by fear, since otherwise thou wouldst not have ventured to come to me.— $\xi\zeta cv$ for $\xi\zeta ov.$ — $d\lambda\gamma\epsilon a$ δ' $\xi\mu\pi\eta\varsigma$, &c., "for, afflicted though we be, we will nevertheless allow the sorrows in our bosom to repose there, since there is no avail in chilling grief."—ζώειν $d\chi v \nu \mu \epsilon v o ι$, "that they should live exposed to sorrow." Compare the explanation of Heyne, "non tam semper contristatos, sed obnoxios sollicitudinibus."— $aν to ι \delta \epsilon \tau' dκη \delta \epsilon \epsilon so (ν, "while$ they themselves are free from care."

54-60. $\pi(\vartheta o\iota)$, "vessels."— $\kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \kappa \epsilon(\alpha \tau \alpha \iota)$ for $\kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \kappa \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu \tau \alpha \iota$.— $o\check{v}\delta \epsilon\iota$ from $o\check{v}\delta \alpha\varsigma$.— $\delta \omega \rho \omega \nu$, $o\check{\iota}a \ \delta(\delta \omega \sigma \iota)$, &c., "of gifts, such as he bestows, the one of evil, and the other of good." Before $\kappa \alpha \kappa \tilde{\omega} \nu$ supply $\check{\epsilon} \tau \epsilon \rho o \varsigma u \grave{\epsilon} \nu$. Both $\kappa \alpha \kappa \tilde{\omega} \nu$ and $\check{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha} \omega \nu$ refer to $\delta \dot{\omega} \rho \omega \nu$, for both are neuter, the latter coming from $\check{\epsilon} o \varsigma, \acute{\alpha}, \acute{o} \nu$, another form for $\check{\epsilon} \dot{v} \varsigma$, and having in its neuter plural $\tau \dot{\alpha} \grave{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha}$, whence the genitive $\check{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha} \omega \nu$ in the present case; for in the ancient language the neuter plural in α appears to have had the genitive in $\check{\alpha} \omega \nu$. (Buttmann, larger Gr. Gr., p. 71, Robinson's transl.) Jacobs, less correctly, makes $\dot{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha} \omega \nu$ feminine here, and supplies $\delta \delta \sigma \epsilon \omega \nu$.— $\dot{\alpha} \mu \mu \iota \varsigma \alpha \varsigma$. "having mixed them up," i. e., the evil with the good: for $\dot{\alpha} \nu \alpha \mu \iota \varsigma \alpha \varsigma$. (Buttmann, due of forms were $\delta \delta \eta$ and $\delta o \delta \eta$.— $\kappa \dot{\nu} \rho \epsilon \tau \alpha \iota$, "meets with." We have here an old deponent form. The ordinary verb is $\kappa \dot{\nu} \rho \phi$. (Buttmann, Ausf. Gr. Gr., vol

1., p. 177) $-\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \lambda \nu \gamma \rho \tilde{\omega} \nu$, "of the mournful ones alone." Supply 165 uóνον, i. e., without any admixture of good ones. Observe the genitive of part in $\lambda \nu \gamma \rho \tilde{\omega} \nu$. $-\lambda \omega \delta \eta \tau \delta \nu \, \tilde{\epsilon} \vartheta \eta \kappa \epsilon \nu$, "this one he renders exposed to misfortune." Supply $\tau \sigma \tilde{\nu} \tau \sigma \nu$, and observe the employment of the aorist to indicate what is accustomed to take place, whence it obtains in our idiom the force of a present. $-\kappa \kappa \kappa \eta \, \beta \sigma \delta \delta \rho \omega \sigma \tau \iota \varsigma$, "evil and excessive hunger." We have given $\beta \sigma \delta \delta \rho \omega \sigma \tau \iota \varsigma$ its proper meaning here, in place of rendering it, as many do, "excessive" or "consuming care." (Consult Heyne, ad oc.) $-\sigma \tilde{\upsilon} \tau \epsilon \vartheta \epsilon \sigma \tilde{\iota} \sigma \tau \epsilon \tau \iota \mu \epsilon \nu \sigma \varsigma$. In accordance with the early belief that wealth ind power were favours bestowed by the gods on those whom they delighted to honour.

62-67. ἐπ' ἀνθρώπους for ἐν ἀνθρώποις.—ἐκέκαστο, " he was adorned," pluperf. of καίνυμαι.—θεὰν. Thetis.—ἀλλ' ἐπὶ καὶ τῷ, " and yet even upon him."—ὅττι οἱ οὖτι παίδων, &c., " in that there was not at all unto him in his halls a race of sons about to succeed him." More literally, " of sons that were princes," or, as Damm translates it, "filiorum soboles principum."—παναώριον, " destined prematurely to perish."

LINE 68-73. κομίζω, " do I cherish," i. e., remain by and nourish. 166 $-\dot{a}\kappa o \dot{v} o \mu \varepsilon v$. Not the imperfect, for $\dot{\eta}\kappa o \dot{v} o \mu \varepsilon v$, but the present, this latter tense of akova being often employed when speaking of past time .οσσον Λέσβος άνω, &c., "as much land, lying above it, as Lesbos, seat of Macar, bounds; and as much, lying below them, as do Phrygia and the vast Hellespont; of those that duelt therein they say that thou, old man, were (most) adorned with wealth and sons." With $\delta\sigma\sigma\sigma\nu$ we must supply $\gamma\eta\varsigma$, but when we reach $\tau \tilde{\omega} v$ the reference changes from the land to those dwelling in it. The poet intends to give the whole extent of Priam's kingdom from south to north, and to describe the monarch himself as the most distinguished among his subjects in wealth and progeny. Macar, son of Ilus, colonized Lesbos, and this island is named as the southern boundary of the Trojan dominion in its flourishing times. The reference, therefore, in avo is to all the territory lying north of this limit, including, of course, the island itself, and $\dot{\epsilon}\nu\tau\dot{\rho}\zeta$ $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\epsilon\iota$ is equivalent merely to $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\rho\rho\dot{\zeta}\epsilon\iota$. On the other hand, Phrygia and the Hellespont are the northern boundaries of the kingdom of Priam, at the period to which Achilles alludes, and $\kappa \alpha \vartheta \upsilon \pi \epsilon \rho \vartheta \epsilon$ marks all the country lying to the south. We must be careful, however, not to fall into a very common mistake with regard to what is here denominated Phrygia, a mistake from which even Jacobs himself has not been saved. The poet does not mean what was called Phrygia at a later day, occupying nearly the centre of Asia Minor, and lying at a considerable distance to the southeast of the Troad, but he refers, on the contrary, to an earlier Phrygia on the shores of the Hellespont, and around Mount Ida. The Phrygians, as we gather from ancient writers (Conon, ap. Phot., cod 186), crossed over from Europe into Asia, under their leader Midas, nearly a hundred years before the Trojan war, and first settled in the spot we have nust referred to. From this they gradually extended themselves to the shores of the Ascanian lake and the valley of the Sangarius. At a later period they occupied the country called after them, farther to the south. Cramer's Asia Minor, vol. ii., p. 6.-Heyne, ad loc.-Strab., 12, p. 842, Cas.)

With regard to $\epsilon \eta o \varsigma$, it

Page used to be the custom in Homeric parsing to write the word in 166such a case as the present, where it has a pronominal force, with the rough breathing $(i\tilde{\eta}o_{\zeta})$, and to regard it as the genitive of an old form 'EYΣ for έός, "his," which, like other forms of the third person, stood also for the second. This served to distinguish it, as was thought, from $\dot{\epsilon}\tilde{\eta}o_{\varsigma}$, the genitive of $\dot{\epsilon}v_{\varsigma}$, "good." This whole doctrine is erroneous. The word must never be written with the rough breathing, but always $i\eta o c$, and it is in every instance the genitive of $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{v}_c$. When it has, as in the present passage, a pronominal force, this arises from a usage similar to that by which φίλος so often supplies the place of a possessive pronoun. (Buttmann, larger Gr. Gr., p. 97, Robinson's transl.-Id. Lexil., p. 246, s. v. έῆος.)οὐδέ μιν ἀνστήσεις, πρὶν, &c., "nor wilt thou raise him up before thou suf-fer even another misfortune." The meaning is this: thou canst not, by thus sorrowing, raise Hector from the dead. On the contrary, by continuing to indulge in grief, thou wilt only bring upon thyself some new evil. For the effect of this long-protracted sorrow will be to make thee querulous and ungentle of temper, careless of all around, and enfeebled both in body and mind. $-\pi \dot{a} \vartheta \eta \sigma \vartheta a$ for $\pi \dot{a} \vartheta \eta \varsigma$.

80-84. $\mu\eta\mu\epsilon\pi\omega$ is $\vartheta\rho\delta\nu\nu\nu$ is: "do not yet place me upon a seat." For $\mu \eta \pi \omega \mu \varepsilon \, i \zeta \varepsilon$. Observe the difference of meaning between the active $i \zeta \omega$, "I seat another," and the middle ίζομαι, " I seat myself."-όφρα κεν Έκτωρ κείται, "while my Hector lies, as is said." Observe the force of κεν with the indicative. Priam had received the information from Mercury, and hence the use of the indicative as denoting his trust in the intelligence. On the other hand, $\kappa \varepsilon \nu$ is added, in order to show that his information is derived from others, not from his own personal knowledge. Hence KEV $\kappa \tilde{\eta} \tau a \iota$ is inferior, as a reading, to $\kappa \epsilon \nu \kappa \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \tau a \iota$, since it implies too much uncertainty.— $\tau \dot{a} \tau \sigma \iota \phi \dot{\epsilon} \rho \sigma \mu \epsilon \nu$ for $\ddot{a} \sigma \sigma \iota \phi \dot{\epsilon} \rho \sigma \mu \epsilon \nu$.— $\sigma \dot{\nu} \delta \dot{\epsilon} \tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \delta' \dot{a} \pi \dot{o} \nu a \iota o$, "and mayest thou derive pleasure from these." More literally, "and mayest thou benefit thyself from these." 2d aor. opt. mid. of $d\pi o \nu i \nu \eta \mu \iota$.— $e^{i\pi \epsilon i} \mu \epsilon$ $\pi\rho\tilde{\omega}\tau\sigma\nu$ žavaç, "since thou hast first suffered me to be safe from harm." $\pi\rho\tilde{\omega}\tau\sigma\nu$, if freely rendered, will have the meaning of "previously," i. e., may this happen unto thee, since thou hast previously been kind unto me. With $\varepsilon a \sigma a \varsigma$ (for $\varepsilon i a \sigma a \varsigma$) supply $\sigma \omega o \nu \varepsilon i \nu a \iota$, and compare a similar usage of $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{a}\omega$ in verse 95. Many editions (and among them Heyne's) have an entire line after $\tilde{\epsilon}a\sigma ac$ (from which word they remove the comma), namely, $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{o}v$ τε ζώειν καὶ ὀρậν φάος ἠελίοιο. It is, however, of very doubtful authenticity, and we have therefore rejected it with Jacobs.

86-96. $\mu\eta\kappa\epsilon\tau\iota \ \nu\nu\nu\mu' \ \epsilon\rho\epsilon\vartheta\iota\xi\epsilon, \gamma\epsilon\rho\nu, "irritate me no longer, old man,"$ i e., by thus continually repeating thy request. Many circumstances tendto irritate the impetuous Achilles: the impatience, namely, of Priam; hisapparent distrust of the good intentions of the Grecian warrior; his refusing $to sit at the hospitable board, &c. <math>-\mu\eta\tau\eta\rho$. Supply $\delta \nu \tau a$ after $\lambda \gamma \varepsilon \sigma \iota$.— $\mu \eta \sigma \varepsilon$, $\gamma \varepsilon \rho \sigma \nu$, $o \delta \delta' a \delta \tau \delta \nu$, &c., "lest I allow not even thee thyself, old man, to be safe within my tents, even though thou art a suppliant, and lest," &c. With $\varepsilon \delta \sigma \omega$ supply $\sigma \omega \sigma \nu \varepsilon \delta \nu \sigma \iota$, and compare the note on verse 84.— $\kappa a \iota i \kappa \varepsilon \tau \eta \nu \tau \sigma \sigma$ $\varepsilon \delta \nu \tau a$, i. e., notwithstanding thy sacred character of suppliant.

98-103. oľkowo, λέων ὡς, &c., "sprang, like a lion, forth from the tent." The particle ὡς, coming after its noun, has the accent, as the tone rests upon it.— $d\lambda \tau o$, 3d sing. of the syncopated 1st aor. mid. $\dot{\eta}\lambda \dot{\mu}\eta \nu$, from $\ddot{u}\lambda\lambda \mu a.$ — $\ddot{e}\pi \sigma \nu \tau o$ for $\epsilon \ddot{l}\pi \sigma \nu \tau o$.— $o \dddot{v}_{\varsigma} \dot{\rho} a$, "whom." Literally, "whom, namely," as in Latin, quos scilicet.— $\tau \dddot{v}$ for $\breve{e}\tau e.$ — $\mu e \tau \grave{u}$ II $\dot{a}\tau \rho \sigma \kappa \dot{\delta} \nu \gamma e \pounds a.$ - $\acute{o}\nu \tau a$, "at least after Patroclus was dead." Observe the limiting force of $\gamma e.$ — $o \grave{\iota} \tau \dot{\sigma} \vartheta$, "they then."- $\zeta \nu \gamma \dot{\phi} \dot{\phi} \nu$ for $\zeta \nu \gamma o \dddot{v}$, with the old case-suffix, called by grammarians $\phi \iota$ paragogicum.— $\lambda \dot{\nu} o \nu$ for $\breve{e}\lambda vov.$ — $\breve{l}\pi \pi \sigma v \varsigma \dot{\eta} \mu \dot{\nu} o v o \varsigma$ $\tau e.$ The horses drew the chariot in which Priam and the herald had come; the mules were harnessed to the mule-car, or wagon, in which were conveyed the presents intended by Priam as a ransom for the corpse of his son. — $\dot{e}_{\varsigma} \eth$ ǎ ǎ µ ǎ µ ǒ ν κ ἡ ρ ν κ ǎ, & c., " and into the tent they led the herald, the caller of the aged monarch." καλή τωρ is a mere epithet coupled with κή ρ ν ξ, and denoting one accustomed to call or summon. $\tau o \ddot{v} o$ is for $\tau o \ddot{v}$.

LINE 104-111. $\kappa a \delta \delta' \epsilon \pi i \delta \phi \rho ov \epsilon \delta \sigma av$, "and down on a seat 167they placed him." καδ is for κατ, a shortened form of κατά, the τ being changed into δ before the following δ' .— $\varepsilon i \sigma a \nu$, 1st aor. of a defec tive verb. It is commonly, though not very correctly, assigned to $\xi \zeta \omega$. The corpse was to be arrayed in the tunic, and one of the cloaks was to be placed beneath the body, while the other was to be thrown over it like a pall.— $\pi \dot{\nu} \kappa a \sigma a \varsigma$, "having covered (with these)."— $\delta \dot{\omega} \eta$ for $\delta \tilde{\omega}$. -νόσφιν ἀειράσας, "having lifted it up and borne it apart." Literally, "having lifted it apart."-χόλον οὐκ ἐρύσαιτο, "might not restrain his unger," i. e., the anger he would naturally feel, on beholding the mangled corpse of his son, and on thinking of the indignities it had experienced from Achilles.—'Axi $\lambda \eta \tilde{\imath} \delta$ ' $\delta \rho \iota v \vartheta \epsilon (\eta \phi \tilde{\imath} \lambda ov \eta \tau op, " and might stir up the soul of$ Achilles." 115-121. αὐτὸς τόνγ' ᾿Αχιλεὺς, &c., "Achilles himself, having raised, placed him on a bier, and his companions, together with (the warrior), lifted (the corpse) upon the well-polished wagon." In this wagon, as above mentioned, the presents had been brought.— ϕ ίλον δ' ὀνόμηνεν ἑταῖρον, "and he called by name upon his beloved friend."—μή μοι σκυδμαινέμεν, "be not angry with me." σκυδμαινέμεν for σκυδμαίνειν. The infinitive is here used for the imperative. (Matthiæ, Gr. Gr., § 546.)—aἴ κε πύθηαι, &c., "if thou perchance mayest hear, though being in Hades." The prose form would be ἐàν (εἰ âν) πύθη ἐν, &c.—σοι δ' aὖ ἐγὼ καὶ τῶνδ', &c., "and unto thee, on thy part, will I give a share even of these, as much as is fitting." Achilles promises to his departed friend a share of the gifts of Priam, intending to consecrate these to him on his tomb. ἀποδάσσομαι for ἀποδάσομαι, the σ being doubled for the sake of the metre.

123-133. ἕνθεν ἀνέστη, "from which he had arisen."—τοίχου τοῦ ἑτέρου, "against the opposite wall." Literally, "of the opposite wall," the genitive τοίχου being in fact governed by κλισμῷ. Observe that ἑτέροι is here equivalent to ἐναντίου.-τοι λέλυται for σοι λέλυται.-λεχέεσσι for λέχεσι.— μα δ' ήοι φαινομενηφιν, &c., "and, at the first appear ance of the dawn, thou shalt thyself behold him, bearing him away."

More literally, "together with the appearing dawn." φαινομένηφιν for φαινομένη.— δψεαι for δψει. Compare note on verse 108, p. 163.— και γάρ τ' ηΰκομος Νιόδη, &c., "for even the fair-haired Niobe, too, was mindful of food, though twelve children perished unto her in her halls." The number of her offspring is, of course, differently given by different fabulists. (Consult Heyne, ad loc.)— άπ' ἀργυρέοιο βιοῖο, "from his silver bow." The preposition refers to something proceeding from the bow, namely, the deathbringing arrows.— οὕνεκ' ἀρα Αητοῖ, &c., "because she sought to equal herself with the fair-cheeked Latona." Literally, "because, namely ;" ἄρα being explanatory here, and analogous to the Latin scilicet. Observe the force of the imperfect. ἰσάσκετο, according to Passow, is the imperfect mid. for ἰσάζετο, from ἰσάζω.

134-139. $\phi \bar{\eta}$ δοιὰ τεκέειν, &c., "she said that (Latona) had borne but two, whereas she herself had become the mother of many." $\phi \bar{\eta}$ for $\xi \phi \eta$ Observe the change of construction, a dependant clause being changed into an independent one. The plain construction would have been, $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{\eta}\nu$ $\delta \tilde{\epsilon} \pi o \lambda \lambda o \dot{v}_{\zeta}$, scil. $\tau \epsilon \kappa \dot{\epsilon} \epsilon \iota \nu ... - \tau \tilde{\omega} \delta' ~ \mu \rho_a$, καὶ δοιώ $\pi \epsilon \rho$ ἐόντ', &c., "and yet those, though two in number, quite destroyed the whole of these." Observe the adverbial force of $\dot{a}\pi \delta$... - $\kappa \dot{\epsilon} a \tau o$ for $\check{\epsilon} \kappa \epsilon \iota \nu \tau o$... $\dot{\epsilon} \nu ~ \phi \delta \nu \omega$, "in the place where they had been slain." Compare the explanation of Eustathius, $\dot{\epsilon} \nu$ $\tau \tilde{\omega} ~ \tau \delta \pi \omega$, $o \check{v}$ ἐφονεύθησαν. Others render it, "in their gore."--oὐ δ $\epsilon \tau \iota \varsigma$ $\dot{\eta} \epsilon \nu ~ \kappa a \tau \vartheta \acute{a} \psi a \iota$- $\lambda a o \dot{v}_{\zeta} \delta \tilde{\epsilon} \lambda \acute{t} \vartheta o v \varsigma$, "for the son of Saturn had made the people stones." This is to be taken either literally, or else the meaning is, that Jove had made the people unpitying and hard-hearted, who therefore refused to the offspring of Niobe the rites of interment. The former explanation is the simpler, and, of course, the more Homeric, one. The whole legend differs from that of a later day, and is involved in obscurity. $-\dot{\eta} \delta' ~ \check{a} \rho a$, "and yet she."--\acute{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon i ~ \kappa \acute{a} \mu \epsilon ~ \delta \kappa \rho \nu \chi \acute{e} o \sigma a, "after she had become weary with weeping."

LINE 140-143. που έν πέτρησιν, "somewhere among the rocks." 168πέτρησιν for πέτραις.-ουρεσιν for δρεσιν.-έν Σιπύλω, "on Sipylus." A mountain of Lydia.- or where they say are the couches of the goddess-nymphs," i. e., where they say dwell the goddess-nymphs.— $ai\tau$ $\dot{a}\mu\phi$ 'A $\chi\epsilon\lambda\omega\bar{i}\sigma\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\dot{j}\omega\sigma\sigma\nu\tau\sigma$, "who dance around the river Acheloüs." Observe the use of the aorist here, with reference to what is customary or habitual. A difficulty exists respecting the term 'Aχελώϊον (scil. $\delta \delta \omega \rho$) in this passage. The Grecian Achelous cannot, of course, be meant, bu' some stream of Lydia proceeding from Mount Sipylus. Unfortunately, however, there is very great doubt whether any Lydian Achelous ever existed. It is mentioned, to be sure, in Villoison's scholia, and also in Pausanias (8, 38, 7); but these authorities are of but little weight amid she silence of other writers. The best way is to consider the line an interpolation. According to one of the scholiasts, the four verses, from vvv $\delta \varepsilon \pi \sigma v$, &c., to $\varepsilon v \vartheta a \lambda i \vartheta \sigma \varsigma \pi \varepsilon \rho \varepsilon \delta v \sigma a$, &c., both inclusive, were rejected by the grammarian Aristophanes. (Consult Heyne, ad loc.)-θεῶν ἐκ κήδεα $\pi \epsilon \sigma \sigma \epsilon \iota$, "she digests the woes sent upon her from the gods," i. e., learns to endure them.

145-159. ἔπειτά κεν αὖτε, &c., "after this thou mayest again weep for thy son." κλαίησθα for κλαίης.—πολυδάκρυτος δέ τοι ἕσται for πολυδάκρυτος γάρ σοι ἕσται.—ἕδερον, from δέρω.—ἄμφεπον εὖ κατὰ κόσμοι 354 "attended to it well and in due order."— $\epsilon \rho \dot{\nu} \sigma a \nu \tau \dot{\sigma} \tau e \pi \dot{a} \nu \tau a$, "and drew them all off," i. e., from the spits.— $\sigma \tilde{\iota} \tau \sigma \nu$, "bread."— $\tau \rho a$ - πέζη, "over the table."—κρέα νεῖμεν, "portioned out the flesh."—οί δ' ἐπ δνείαθ' ἑτοῖμα, &c., "they thereupon stretched forth their hands to the prcpared viands lying before them."—ἰξ ἕρον ἕντο, "had taken away the destre." Literally, "had sent away." ἕντο is the 2d aor. mid. of ἵημι. ἤτοι, "as may well be imagined."—θαύμαζ' ᾿Αχιλλῆα, ὅσσος ἔην, &c., "admired Achilles, so great and such as he was," i. e., ὄντα τοσοῦτον, ὅσσος, καὶ τοιοῦτον, οἰος ἦν.—θεοῖσι γὰρ ἄντα ἐζκει, "for, as he sat facing him, he resembled the gods." ἄντα is equivalent here to ἄντα ἑαντοῦ. Compare the explanation of Heyne, "in conspectu, ex adverso sibi."—ὄψιν ἀγαθὴν, "his fine mien." ὄψιν is equivalent here to εἰδος.—ἐπεὶ τάρπησαν, "when they were satisfied."

161-167. λέξον νῦν με τάχιστα, "let me now lie down very quickly." Compare the remark of Eustathius, τὸ δὲ λέξον ἀντὶ τοῦ κοίμησον.—ταρπώμεθα, "we may refresh ourselves." Literally, "delight ourselves." Aristarchus is said to have condemned this reading, as inconsistent with Priam's character as a mourner, and to have substituted παυσώμεθα. The objection is too refined. The physical exhaustion of the aged king, who had passed so many nights without sleep, and the simplicity of the Homeric style, furnish a sufficient answer to the objection of the critic.—οὐ γάρ πω, i. e., οὖπω γὰρ.—μύσαν ὀσσε, "have my eyes closed."—ἐξ οὖ, "since." The full form is, ἐκ τοῦ χρόνου, ἐξ οὖ.—αὐλῆς ἐν χόρτοισι, "within the enclosure of my court," i. e., in my courtyard. The aὐλά here denotes an open space or court around a building, Homer always using the term with reference to a place open to the air above, ἐπὶ τῶν ὑπαίθρων τόπων. Hence the employment of the term κόπρον, "qua aulam pecudes e stabulis educta perambulant." (Heyne, ad loc.)—λαυκανίης καθέηκα, "have sent down my throat."

170-172. δέμνι' ύπ' alθούση θέμεναι, "to place couches under the portico." The couches of guests and strangers were accustomed to be placed in the portico connected with the main building. By $\delta \epsilon \mu \nu \iota o \nu$ is here properly meant the frame-work of the couch (what we would call the bedstead), with merely a species of mattress upon it, but as yet no couch-coverings, or vestes stragulæ.--- ρήγεα καλά πορφύρεα, "beautiful purple coverlets." The $\dot{\rho}\eta\gamma\sigma\varsigma$ appears to have resembled, in some respects, a modern blanket or rug. It was of a coarser texture than the $\tau \dot{a} \pi \eta \varsigma$, and formed, if we may so speak, the second substratum of the couch, the sleeper lying upon it. The $\tau \dot{\alpha} \pi \eta \tau \epsilon \varsigma$ were finer than the $\dot{\rho} \dot{\eta} \gamma \epsilon a$, and also softer, and were spread over these. They were probably of sufficient length to allow of being rolled or folded up at one end, and thus answered the purpose of a modern pillow, for we read of their being used as a support for the head. (Heyne, ad loc. -Terpstra, Antiq. Hom., p. 178.)-- $\chi\lambda aivag \tau'$ every $\xi c., "and to$ lay, on the top of these, woollen cloaks, with long nap, in which to wrap themselves." The $\chi \lambda aivai$ were meant to supply the place of outer covering. The sleepers wrapped themselves in these. - ovlag. The epithet ovlog carries with it the associate ideas of a long nap and softness. (Consult Heyne, ad Il., 16, 224.)—ἕσασθαι, from ἕννυμι.

174–175. ἐγκονέουσαι, "making haste."—ἐπικερτομέων, "in sportive tone." Hesychius explains ἐπικερτομέων here by ἐπισκώπτων, but Eustathius somewhat better ου μετρίως χλευάζων. Achilles assumes, on this occasion, a sportive tone and manner, in order to dispel any anxiety or alarm 168 which his words might otherwise have occasioned in the breast or Priam. (Compare Heyne, ad loc.)

169 LINE 176-184. ἐκτὸς μὲν δη λέξο, &c., "he now without, es teemed old man." λέξο for λέλεξο, perf. imperat. pars., the redupli cation being dropped.—ἐπέλθησιν for ἐπέλθη.—οἶτε μει αἰεὶ βονλὰς, &c. "(of those) who, sitting by my side, always deliberate upon plans, as is proper." Supply τῶν (i. e., τούτων) before οἶτε.—ή θέμις ἰστίν. The full form would be, τῆ όδῷ ἦ θέμις ἐστίν.—τῶν εἶ τίς, "if any orz of these." —ἀνάβλησις λύσιος νεκροῖο, "a delay in the surrender of the corpse." More literally, "a putting off of the deliverance of the corpse."—ποσσῆματ μέμονας, &c., "for how many days dost thou purpose to celebrate the obse quies of the noble Hector?" ποσσῆμαρ is equivalent to πόσας ἡμέρας. μέμονας, 2d sing. perf. mid. from a form μένω not extant in the present, bu' which is related to μέμαα, just as γέγονα is to γέγαα. (Buttmann, larger Gr. Gr., p. 292, Robinson's trans.)—κτερειζέμεν for κτερείζειν.—αὐτός τι μένω, &c., " both I myself may remain quiet, and may restrain the forces."

186-193. εἰ μèν δή μ' ἐθέλεις, &c., "since, then, thou wishest me te perform funeral rites for the noble Hector." rápov is here equivalent as the scholiast well remarks, to κηδείαν.- ὦδέ κέ μοι ῥέζων, &c., "by acting as follows thou wouldst do," &c., i. e., by sanctioning the following arrangement, as to the number of days we shall require .- wy kara uori έέλμεθα, " how we are shut up within the city." More literally, " pressed together" or "pent up." $-\dot{\epsilon}\epsilon\lambda\mu\epsilon\vartheta a$, 1st plur. perf. pass. of $\epsilon\lambda\omega$ or $\epsilon\lambda\lambda\omega$, more commonly eiléw or eiléw. $-\tau\eta\lambda\delta\vartheta\iota\delta$ ' $\vartheta\lambda\eta$ azéµev, &c., " and that the wood (for the funeral pile) is afar, in order to bring it from the mountain." More freely, "is far to fetch from the mountain." With $d\xi \epsilon \mu \epsilon \nu$ (for $d\xi \epsilon \nu$) we may supply ώστε.-κε γοάσιμεν, "we will mourn him (if naught prevent)." Observe the peculiar use of the optative with $\kappa \varepsilon$ as a softening down of the future, and indicating possibility under existing circumstances. $-\delta a$ ίνυτο. Syncopated form of the optative, for δαινύοιτο. -πολεμίξομεν. Dorico-poetic form for $\pi o \lambda \epsilon \mu i \sigma \sigma \mu \epsilon \nu$. Observe the change from the optative with $\kappa \epsilon$ to the simple future. This tense indicates that the thing to which it refers will take place as a matter of course, and strikingly indicates the yet unsubdued spirit of the aged king.

197-200. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\iota}$ $\kappa \alpha\rho\pi\tilde{\omega}$, "near the wrist." The reference is to a full grasping of the hand. Eustathius calls the attention of the reader to the circumstance of the ancients' touching, when they gave a pledge of this nature, not the palm of the hand, but the wrist : opa de kai we ov devapoe οί δεξιούμενοι, άλλα καρποῦ, ήπτοντο.—πυκινα φρεσι μήδε' ἔχοντες, "having many cares in mind."-One of the scholiasts asks how Achilles could deliver up the corpse of Hector without the consent of Agamemnon, and low he could promise a general cessation of arms on the Grecian side for the space of so many days. The answer is an easy one. He could not romise a cessation of hostilities in his own right, but he trusted to his influence among the other leaders in bringing this about, and he well knew 'low great that influence was. Besides, if they refused to ratify his agreement with Priam, he could again retire from the war. As to the delivery of the corpse of Hector, this lay entirely within the power of Achilles, since, by the rules of early Grecian warfare, the victor was allowed either to slay and despoil his foe, or preserve his life and sell him as a captive, or receive a ransom for his corpse.

ANACREON.*

Ode I.

LINE 1-4. $\vartheta \ell \lambda \omega \lambda \ell \gamma \epsilon \iota \nu' \lambda \tau \rho \epsilon \ell \delta a \varsigma$, "I wish to tell of the sons of 170 Atreus," i. e., to tell on my lyre of Agamemnon and Menelaus, and the events of the Trojan war.—K $\dot{\omega} \delta \mu o \nu$, "of Cadmus," i. e., of Cad mus, founder of Thebes, and the wars that prevailed among his descendants The early Theban history was equally rich in mythological incidents with the narrative of Trojan times.— $\dot{\eta} \ \delta \omega \rho \delta \iota \tau o \varsigma$ $\delta \varepsilon$, $\delta \varepsilon$., "but my lyre sounds love alone with its chords." We have given $\dot{\eta} \ \delta \omega \rho \delta \iota \tau o \varsigma$, which savours of the Doric. Mehlhorn has $\dot{\delta} \ \delta \omega \rho \delta \iota \tau o \varsigma$.

5-11. $\eta\mu\epsilon\iota\psi a \ \nu\epsilon\bar{\nu}\rho a \ \pi\rho\omega\eta\nu$, "I changed of late the strings," i. e., I had recourse to strings that sent forth a louder and stronger sound, and one better adapted to epic themes.— $\eta\delta\sigma\nu$, "began to sing of."— $\epsilon\rho\omega\tau ac \ a\nu\tau\epsilon\phi\omega$. $\nu\epsilon\iota$, "responded only love." Literally, "spoke of loves in reply."— $\chi a\iota$ - $\rhoo\iota\tau\epsilon \ \lambda o\iota\pi\partial\nu \ \eta\mu\bar{\nu}\nu$, &c., "farewell, henceforth, ye heroes, for us," i. e., as far as I and my lyre are concerned. With these words the poet renounces epic themes.

Ode II.

1-2. $\tau \partial \rho \delta \partial v \tau \partial \tau \omega v 'E \rho \omega \tau \omega v$, &c., "let us mingle with wine the rose, the rose of the Loves." Literally, "the rose which is that of the Loves," $\tau \partial \rho \delta \partial v \tau \partial v 'E \rho \omega \tau \omega v .- dv a \mu i \xi \omega \mu \varepsilon v$. We have given this reading, for the sake of the metre, in place of the common lection $\mu i \xi \omega \mu \varepsilon v$. $-\Delta \iota o v \upsilon \sigma \omega$. The name $\Delta \iota \delta v \upsilon \sigma \sigma$ in Greek, like Bacchus in Latin, is often used by the poets for wine.

4-11. κροτάφοισιν άρμόσαντες, "having fitted to our temples." The allusion is to chaplets of roses. The ancients imagined, that, partly by the flowers of which it was composed, and partly by the constriction of the chaplet itself, ebriety might be prevented.— άβρα γελῶντες, "laughing gayly."— ρόδον είαρος μέλημα, "oh rose, favourite of spring." More literally, "object of care," i. e., fostered and called into full life and beauty by the sunny skies and genial breezes of spring. $-\kappa a \partial \varepsilon o \delta \sigma \iota$. The deities particularly meant are Bacchus, Venus, Cupid, and the Muses - Kvonρης. The form Κυθήρη for Κυθέρεια is unusual, and occurs only in some of the odes of Anacreon, and in the 30th Idyl ascribed to Theocritus .-ρόδα στέφεται καλοις ιούλοις, "is crowned with roses on his beauteous curling locks." Many of the commentators, with singular want of good taste, condemn the dative here, and substitute the accusative, kalove iovlove. But the dative alone is correct, the reference being to the chaplet as reposing on the locks.—Xapíreoai for Xápiai, governed by $\sigma i\nu$ in composition. The Graces are here very properly chosen as companions for the god ot love, since every quality that can adorn a female is ascribed by the poets to these divinities.

13-16. $\pi a \rho a$ $\sigma o \bar{c} \varsigma$, $\Delta i \delta v v \sigma \varepsilon$, $\sigma \eta \kappa o \bar{c} \varsigma$, "near thy shrine, oh Bacchus." The $\sigma \eta \kappa \delta \varsigma$ was the same with "he Latin cella, forming the innermost part of the temple, and containing the statue of the divinity.— $\beta a \vartheta v \kappa \delta \lambda \pi o v$,

" deep-bosomed." The term $\beta a \vartheta \dot{\nu} \kappa o \lambda \pi o \varsigma$ refers to the peculiar 170 appearance presented by the Ionic female dress, the girdle being worn low, the waist being consequently long, and the bosom of the garment gathered into large and full folds. This species of dress was generally reserved for festal celebrations, and hence the poet alludes to it on the present occasion in connexion with the dance in the temple. Compare the remarks of Böckh on the term Gadúζωνος (ad Pind., Ol., 3, 36), and Passow, s. v. $\beta a \vartheta \dot{\nu} \kappa o \lambda \pi o \varsigma$. — $\pi \epsilon \pi v \kappa a \sigma \mu \dot{\epsilon} v o \varsigma$, "profusely decked." ODE III.

LINE 1-5. πέλεια. The ode is addressed to a dove or carrier-171 pigeon, this species of bird being employed in ancient, as in mod. ern times, for the rapid transmission of intelligence. When an individua, went upon a journey of any length, he took carrier-pigeons with him, one or more, and when he wished to send back any intelligence with more than ordinary expedition, he let a pigeon or dove fly off, with a letter tied to its neck; for the bird, it was well known, would make no delay, being anxious to return to its home and young ones. It will be observed that the poet here, as if he were unknown to her, questions his own dove concerning itself.— $\pi \delta \vartheta \varepsilon v$, $\pi \delta \vartheta \varepsilon v$ $\pi \delta \tau \tilde{a} \sigma a i$; "whence, whence art thou winging thy way?" $\pi \delta \tau \tilde{a} \sigma a i$ is from $\pi \delta \tau a \delta a a i$. The common text has $\pi \delta \tau a \sigma a i$, where the penult must be lengthened by the arsis, unless we double the σ with Jacobs, and read $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau a \sigma \sigma a \iota$. Brunck and others prefer $\pi \epsilon \tau \tilde{a} \sigma a \iota$ from $\pi \epsilon \tau$ áoµaı, but this verb is to be regarded rather as a late prose form, whereas ποτάομαι is employed by both the epic and Attic poets. $-π \acute{o} \vartheta εν$ μύρων τοσούτων, &c., "whence, moving swiftly upon the air, dost thou both breathe and distil fragrance from such an abundance of odours?" Literally, "dost thou breathe and drop from so many odours?" Observe the genitive of part in μύρων τοσούτων. The ancients, observes Madame Dacier, perfumed their doves, as the moderns do their lapdogs.

6-14. τ is ϵ is; τ i σ ou μ é λ eu δ é; "who art thou, and what is thy errand?" Literally, "and what is a care to thee ?" As regards the various conjectural emendations of this line, consult Mehlhorn, ad loc.—'Avakpéwv μ ' $\epsilon\pi\epsilon\mu\psi\epsilon$. The reply of the dove here begins, and occupies the rest of the ode. $-\tau \partial \nu$ άρτι των άπάντων, &c., "who now rules, and is monarch, over all," i. e., who now rules like a monarch over the affections of all. The term $\tau \dot{v} \rho a \nu$ - $\nu o_{\mathcal{C}}$ is used here in its earlier sense, as equivalent to $\beta a \sigma \iota \lambda \varepsilon \upsilon \varsigma$. $\lambda a \delta o \tilde{\upsilon} \sigma a$ икро̀v טµvov, "having received a small hymn (in return)." The poet's effusions are of so much intrinsic excellence, that even Venus herself pur chases a little hymn with one of her favourite doves $!-\delta\iota \alpha \kappa o \nu \tilde{\omega} \tau o \sigma a \tilde{\nu} \tau a$, "perform such important services as these." There is something very pleasing here in the use of $\tau \sigma \sigma a \tilde{v} \tau a$. The dove prides herself on the important errands which she has to execute as the messenger of the ardent Anacreon.

16-29. $i\pi\iota\sigma\tau\circ\lambda a\varsigma$ κομίζω. Alluding to the letter tied about her neck, many of which she carries from time to time. Compare note on verse 1.έλευθέρην ποιήσειν. adapháoaoa $\chi \varepsilon \iota \rho \tilde{\omega} v$, "having plucked it from the hands," equivalent to $\dot{a}\rho \pi \dot{a}\sigma a\sigma a \ a\dot{v}\tau \dot{o}v \ \dot{a}\pi \dot{o} \ \tau \tilde{\omega}v \ \chi \varepsilon \cdot \rho \tilde{\omega}v \dots \partial v \ \pi \rho \sigma \pi \dot{v} \upsilon \varepsilon \iota$, "which he pledges." Literally, "of which he quaffs before me." The ancient mode of drinking healths, or pledging, was by first drinking a part of the contents of the cup, and then passing the same cup, with what remained in it, to another to quaff from. Anacreon and his dove are here pleasantly represented in the light of boon companions.

30-34. $\pi\iota o v \sigma a \delta' a v \chi o \rho \varepsilon v \omega$, "and having quaffed it, I may perhaps dance," i. e., I sometimes dance. Pauw first conjectured av $\chi o \rho \varepsilon v \omega$, which has been generally received since his time. Most editors, however, who adopt this reading, together with Pauw himself, regard $\chi o \rho \varepsilon v \omega$ as the in dicative, and translate $a v \chi o \rho \varepsilon v \omega$, "I am accustomed to dance." The particle a v, however, is most commonly joined with the imperfect indicative, sometimes with the aorist, to express a habit or custom; but the use of a vwith the present indicative is extremely uncertain. (Hermann, Opusc., vol. iv., p. 38.—Matthia, Gr. Gr., § 599, e.) It is better, therefore, to regard $\chi o \rho \varepsilon v \omega \kappa i a \zeta \omega$, and $\kappa a \vartheta \varepsilon v \delta \omega$, as so many subjunctives.— $\sigma v \sigma \kappa i a \zeta \omega$. We have here given the conjectural emendation of Salmasius, in place of the earlier reading $\sigma v \gamma \kappa a \lambda v \psi \omega$.— $\kappa o \iota \mu \omega \mu \varepsilon v \eta \delta' \dot{\varepsilon} \pi' a \dot{v} \tau \tilde{\phi}$, &c., "and then betaking myself to repose, may sleep on the lyre itself." Observe the force of the middle in $\kappa o \iota \mu \omega \mu \varepsilon v \eta$.

LINE 35-37. $\xi\chi\epsilon\iota\varsigma\ a\pi a\nu\tau$, "thou hast all (that I can tell thee)." 172 — $\lambda a\lambda\iota\sigma\tau\epsilon\rho a\nu\mu$ ' $\xi\vartheta\eta\kappa a\varsigma$, &c., "thou hast made me, oh man, more talkative even than the crow." The crow is called by Homer (Od., 5, 66) $\tau a\nu \nu\gamma\lambda\omega\sigma\sigma o\varsigma$, "long-tongued," and by Ovid (Am., 3, 5, 22) "garrula."— $\lambda a\lambda\iota\sigma\tau\epsilon\rho a\nu$ from $\lambda\dot{a}\lambda o\varsigma$.

Ode IV.

1-5. $\chi \epsilon \lambda \iota \delta \delta v$. We have given here the older form of the vocative, called Eolic, according to the grammarians, and following the Æolic accentuation in the nominative $\chi \epsilon \lambda \iota \delta \omega v$. (Compare Mehlhorn, ad Anacr., Od., 12, 2.— Hermann, ad Soph., Antig., 39.—Matthiæ, Gr. Gr., § 74, c.)— $\epsilon \tau \eta \sigma i \eta \mu \rho \lambda$ ovoa, "coming every year."— $\epsilon i \varsigma \delta \phi a v \tau \circ \varsigma$, "disappearing, thou goest." $\epsilon i \varsigma$ from $\epsilon i \mu \iota$, "to go."— η Ne $i \lambda ov$, η " $\pi \iota$ Méµ $\phi \iota v$, for $\eta \epsilon \pi i$ Ne $i \lambda ov$, $\eta \epsilon \pi \iota$ Méµ $\phi \iota v$. The reference is to the more sunny land of Egypt.

6-19. "Ερως δέ, "love, on the contrary."-πόθος δ' ό μέν πτεροῦται, &c., " and one passion is just fledging, and another is as yet an egg, while a third is already half hatched." $\pi \circ \vartheta \circ \varsigma$ is here equivalent to $\xi \circ \omega \varsigma$.— $\beta \circ \eta$ $\delta \varepsilon \gamma (\gamma \nu \varepsilon \tau' a \iota \varepsilon \iota)$, &c., "and there is continually a chirping of the gaping young ones." κεχηνότων refers to the opening the mouth for food.-'Ερωτιδείς, "lovelings." Ἐρωτιδεύς now takes the place of πόθος. As regards the form 'Epuridevic itself, compare the remark of Valckenaer (ad Theocr., Adon., v. 121), " In pullis animantium designandis devs erat forma velut patronymica."-κύουσιν, "bring forth."-τί μῆχος οὖν γένηται; "what remedy, then, shall there be ?" i. e., what escape from this evil. $\mu \tilde{\eta} \chi o \zeta$ is an Homeric term, and answers here to the Latin remedium. (Consult Blomfield, ad Æsch., Agam., 2, and Bähr, ad Herod., 2, 181.)-où yàp σθένω τοσούτους, &c., "for I have no strength of my own to drive away so many loves." ἐκσοδησαι is the reading of Brunck. It was previously mentioned by Pauw, who preferred, however, $\varepsilon \tilde{v} \phi o \rho \tilde{\eta} \sigma \alpha \iota$. Fischer retains the common lection ekboñoai, which he explains by "clamande exigere ex orde" Mehlhorn, in commenting on this interpretation, very correctly calls it tetra imago.

Page 1-6. čapos pavévros, " the spring having appeared," i. e., now that 172the spring has come. -- ρόδα βρύουσιν, "scatter roses all around." The verb $\beta \rho \dot{\nu} \omega$ always carries with it the idea of profusion and abundance, and properly applies to plants and flowers of all kinds poured forth richly from a fertile soil. Its literal meaning is "to abound," "to be profusely decked with," in which sense it commonly takes the genitive, and sometimes (as in Anacr., 58, 2) the dative. Its use, on the present occasion, with the accusative, is a poetic construction. (Consult Fischer, Ind. ad Æschin., Dial. s. v).— άπαλύνεται γαλήνη, "is softening down into a calm." Observe the idea of continuance indicated by the dative. -- odever, " proceeds on its journey (to other climes)," i. e., is leaving us and departing for the north. This passage has been very generally misunderstood, and most commentators refer odever, not to the departure, but to the return, of the crane. The true state of the case, however, is as follows: the cranes, originally northern birds, spend the winter in southern lands, appearing there about the end of autumn, but they prefer the summer of the north, since a moderate degree of temperature appears to agree with them best. The period of their departure for the north is the commencement of spring. (Compare the remarks of Madame Dacier, ad loc., and Dictionnaire des Sciences Naturelles, vol. xix., p. 518, seqq.)

7-10. $\dot{a}\phi\epsilon\lambda\tilde{\omega}\varsigma\delta$ ' $\ddot{\epsilon}\lambda a\mu\psi\epsilon T\iota\tau\dot{a}\nu$, "then, too, the sun is wont to shine brightly." Observe the force of the aorist, in denoting what is customary, or wont to happen.- Sovovvrai, " are dissipated." The dark clouds of winter, obscuring the beams of the sun, are now dispelled by the radiance of spring, before which they flee, as if unable to endure its brightness and beauty .-τὰ βροτῶν δ' ἕλαμψεν ἕργα, "the labours of men also are conspicuous to the view," i. e., the incipient labours of agriculture. Observe again the peculiar force of the aorist in referring to what is wont to happen. The term $\xi_{\rho\gamma a}$ is here applied peculiarly to agricultural labours, just as labores is often used in Latin. Compare the remark of Schweighaeuser, Lex. Herod., s. v. "Tà έργα sunt opera rustica, agri culti arva." Consult also Grævius, ad Hes., Op. et D., v. 409.— $\kappa a \rho \pi o \tilde{l} \sigma l \gamma a \tilde{l} a \pi \rho \kappa v \pi \tau \epsilon l$, "the earth is protuberant with fruits." This line is manifestly spurious, and appears to have arisen from some various reading of the succeeding verse. Madame Dacier, in commenting on the line that follows after, observes with great naïveté, " Avant ce vers il y en a un que je n'ai pas expliqué, parce qu'il n'est point Grec, et qu'il est même ridicule, comme mon père l'a remarqué." To this, "le citoyen Gail" rather ungallantly replies : " Ce vers, quoi qu'en disent les deux Dacier, n'est nullement ridicule : προκύπτειν signifie prominere, porter la tête en avant." Gail appears to confound, here, the father of the learned lady with her husband. Faber, Brunck, Mæbius, Degen, &c., all regard the line as either spurious or else needing emendation.

In the season of spring, moreover, the wine of the previo's autumn had become mellow, the period of winter having intervened. Comt are Virgil's "mollissima vina" (Georg., 1, 341), and consult Heyne, ad l.c— $\kappa a \tau a \phi v \lambda \lambda v v$, $\kappa a \tau a \kappa \lambda \tilde{\omega} v a$, "along the leaf, along the bough, the fruit flourishes, having pulled them down." troverted passage, on which almost every editor has exercised his ingenuity in the shape of an emendation. We have given the Greek of the ordinary text, and have assigned it what appears to be the plainest and most natural interpretation. The aorist $\eta v \vartheta \iota \sigma \varepsilon$ refers to what is customary, or wont to happen, and hence has in our idiom a meaning like that of the present.

Ode VI.

3-5. ἀλλ' ἐτρώθη τὸν δάκτυλον, "but was stung in his finger." Laterally, "was wounded." ἐτρώθη from τιτρώσκω.—παταχθεὶς τὰς χεῖρας, ἀλόλυξεν, "having struck his hands together (with the pain), he screamed aloud." παταχθεἰς is the passive for the middle. We have followed here the reading of Mehlhorn. The common text has a full stop after ἐτρώθη in the third line, and gives the fourth and fifth as follows:

τὸν δάκτυλον δὲ δαχθεὶς τᾶς χεῖρος, ὠλόλυξε,

"and having been bitten as to the finger of his hand, he screamed aloud." Brunck, justly regarding $\tau \tilde{a}_{\varsigma} \chi \epsilon \tilde{i} \rho o_{\varsigma}$ as an awkward pleonasm after $\delta \dot{a} \kappa \tau \nu \lambda o \nu$, corrects the text, as we have given it, except that he reads $\pi a \tau \dot{a} \xi a_{\varsigma}$ where we have preferred $\pi a \tau a \chi \vartheta \epsilon i_{\varsigma}$. This latter form seems a simpler and more natural change from the $\delta \epsilon \delta a \chi \vartheta \epsilon i_{\varsigma}$ of the common text.

6-16. $\delta \rho a \mu \partial \nu$ $\delta \epsilon$ kal $\pi \epsilon \tau a \sigma \vartheta \epsilon l \varsigma$, "then, running and flying." Baxter makes a singular comparison here: "hoc est, anseris ritu, quo velocius properaret, currendo volavit, et volando cucurrit."— $\pi \epsilon \tau a \sigma \vartheta \epsilon l \varsigma$, passive for the middle.— $\delta \lambda \omega \lambda a$, "I am undone." $-\kappa \ell \pi \sigma \vartheta \nu \eta \sigma \kappa \omega$ for kal $\ell \pi \sigma \vartheta \nu \eta \sigma \kappa \omega$.— $\eta \delta$ " $\epsilon l \pi \epsilon \nu$. The common text gives the Doric ℓ for η - $-\epsilon \ell$ $\tau \delta$ $\kappa \epsilon \nu \tau \rho \nu \nu$ $\pi \sigma \nu \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$, &c., "if the sting of the bee pains (so much)." $\pi \sigma \nu \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$ is here used, in an unusual signification, for the transitive $\lambda \nu \pi \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$.— $\pi \sigma \nu \sigma \tilde{\upsilon} \iota \nu$, "do they suffer." Literally, "labour," i. e., with anguish. In close construction, supply $\tau \sigma \sigma \tilde{\upsilon} \tau \iota$

ODE VII.

1-4. μακαρίζομέν σε, τέττιξ, "we deem thee happy, oh cicāda." According to Dodwell (Class. Tour, vol. ii., p. 45) the tettix, or cicada, is formed like a large fly, with long transparent wings, a dark brown back, and a yellow belly. It is originally a caterpillar, then a chrysalis, and is converted into a fly late in the spring. Its song, which it makes with its wings, is much louder and shriller than that of the grasshopper, as Dodwell terms it. The ancient writers, especially the poets, praise the sweetness of its song, and Plutarch says that they were sacred to the muses. According to Ælian (H. A., 1, 20.-11, 26), only the male tettix sings, and that in the hottest weather. Dodwell says, that nothing is so piercing as their note, nothing, at the same time, so tiresome and inharmonious. And yet, notwithstanding this, the song of the cicada may easily have charmed the Greeks, from the association of ideas, since it never occurs but in the most lovely summer-weather. The tettix is extremely common in the south of Italy. It is found also in the United States, being called, in some parts, "the har-vest-fly," and in others, very erroneously, "the locust."— $\delta \tau \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \delta \rho \epsilon \omega \nu \epsilon \pi$ aκρων, &c., "because, having sipped a little dew, thou singest (enthroned) on lofty trees, like a king." The tettix has a sucker instead of a mouth, by which it lives entirely on liquids, as dew and the juices of plants.

7-11. $\chi \dot{\omega} \pi \dot{\sigma} \sigma a$ for $\kappa a \dot{c} \dot{\sigma} \sigma \sigma a$. Some editors, and among them Jacobs, give the less correct form $\chi' \dot{\sigma} \pi \dot{\sigma} \sigma a$. (Consult Buttmann, larger Gr. Gr., ^{Fage} 173 p. 6 n. 7, Robinson's transl., and Ellendt. Lex. Soph., 50 p. 898.)— $\delta\rho a\iota$, "the seasons." Brunck prefers $\delta\lambda a\iota$, "A woods," on very slight authority, and is f howed by Degen and Moebius. The more correct accentuation is undoubtedly $\delta\lambda a\iota$. With regard to the superiority of $\delta\rho a\iota$, as a reading here, consult Mehlhorn, Prolegom., § 4.— $\dot{a}\pi \delta \mu\eta\delta\epsilon\nu\delta\varsigma \tau\iota \beta\lambda\dot{a}\pi\tau\omega\nu$, "and not consult Mehlhorn, Prolegom., § 4.— $\dot{a}\pi\delta \mu\eta\delta\epsilon\nu\delta\varsigma$, as Jacobs well explains it, is equivalent here to $\mu\eta\delta\epsilon\nu\iota$ - $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\omega$, the preposition $\dot{a}\pi\delta$ with its genitive being often employed instead of the dative of the instrument. (Consult Matthia, Gr. Gr., § 573.—Bernhardy, Wiss. Synt., p. 224.) The common way of explaining this clause is, "injuring nothing belonging to any one." Literally, "injuring something from no one."— $\vartheta\epsilon\rho\epsilono\varsigma \gamma\lambda\nu\kappa\lambda\varsigma \pi\rhoo\phi\eta\tau\eta\varsigma$, "sweet harbinger of summer." Madame Dacier thinks that Anacreon has here put the summer for the spring. Not so. The tettix begins to sing late in the spring, and may therefore well be regarded as the precursor of summer.

174 LINE 15. $\tau \delta \delta \epsilon \gamma \tilde{\eta} \rho a_{\mathcal{S}} o v \sigma \epsilon \tau \epsilon i \rho \epsilon \iota$, "old age, too, wastes thee not away." Anacreon here has reference to the fable of Tithonus. the favourite of Aurora, who having wished for immortality, without having asked, at the same time, for perpetual youth, became so decrepit that Aurora, out of compassion, changed him into a tettix, because this insect, as the ancients believed, laid aside its skin every summer, and renewed its youth. Lucretius (4, 56) alludes to this circumstance in a beautiful simile. The truth is, that the tettix, or cicada, like all the other species of the gryllus, though existing but for a single season, since it dies at the close of the summer, casts its skin in the same manner as the caterpillar, and deposites in the fields a membrane so accurately true to its entire shape, that it is often mistaken, at first sight, for the tettix itself. (Consult Good, ad Lucret., l. c.)

16-18. σοφέ, "skilful insect," i. e., insect skilled in song. The epithet $\sigma o \phi \delta c$ is often applied to the votaries of the Muse. $-\gamma \eta \gamma \varepsilon v \eta \varsigma$, "offspring of earth." Observe, in this and $\dot{a}\pi a \vartheta \eta \varsigma$, the intermingling of nominative forms with vocatives. There is nothing very unusual in this, since the nominative often supplies the place of the vocative. With regard to the term $\gamma\eta\gamma\varepsilon\nu\eta\varsigma$, itself, it may be remarked, that the Athenians, in order to show their indigenous origin (for they boasted that they were autoxvove, that is, sprung from the soil of Attica), used to wear golden cicadæ, in the shape of clasps, for keeping up the hair of the head behind, on its being gathered into a knot. (Thucyd., 1, 6.)— $\dot{a}\pi a \vartheta \eta \varsigma$, "exempt from every malady." Literally, "impassible," or "free from suffering." The reason of this is assigned by the poet immediately after in the word avaimooapke, "of bloodless flesh." The absence of red blood, according to the bard, occasions the absence of every malady. Insects are not furnished with red blood, but their vessels contain a transparent lymph. This last, in the eyes of the poet, resembles the ichor $(i\chi\omega\rho)$ of the gods, and therefore assimilates the tettix, in its freedom from suffering, to these celestial personages.

ODE VIII.

2-4. $\chi o \rho \varepsilon \upsilon \tau \eta \nu$. We have retained this form with Mehihorn, in place of the Doric $\chi o \rho \varepsilon \upsilon \tau \alpha \nu$, unnecessarily preferred by Brunck, Baxter, and some more recent editors.— $\tau \rho i \chi \alpha \varsigma \gamma \epsilon \rho \omega \nu \mu \epsilon \nu \epsilon \sigma \tau \iota \nu$, &c., "he is old indeed as to his locks, but in spirit he is young." $\tau \rho i \chi \alpha \varsigma$ and $\phi \rho \epsilon \nu \alpha \varsigma$ are accusatives of nearer definition, where some supply $\kappa \alpha \tau \dot{\alpha}$.

BION.

I.

LINE 1-2 Aláζω τον 'Aδωνιν, &c., "I mourn Adonis, the Loves join in the lament." Adonis, the favourite of Venus, was slain by a wild boar in hunting. His death was commemorated in an annual festival called * $A\delta\omega\nu\iota a$. The cry of mourning employed on this occasion, namely, $ai ai \tau \delta \nu * A\delta\omega\nu\iota \nu$, here assumes a poetic garb, $ai ai \omega$ $\tau \delta \nu * A\delta\omega\nu\iota \nu$.— $\Delta\rho\epsilon\sigma\iota$, Doric for $\delta\rho\epsilon\sigma\iota$. Bion wrote in what is called the new Doric, which approximates closely to the softness of the Ionic.— $\mu\eta\rho\delta\nu \ \delta\delta\delta\nu\tau\iota \ \lambda\epsilon\nu\kappa\delta\nu, \ \&c., " wounded in his white thigh by a tusk,$ $a white tusk." <math>\mu\eta\rho\delta\nu$ is here the accusative of nearer definition. One of the editors of Bion, in order to avoid what he considers an unbecoming play upon words, suggests $\lambda\nu\gamma\rho\delta$ for $\lambda\epsilon\nu\kappa\delta$. If any change, however, be needed, it is that of $\delta\delta\delta\nu\tau\iota$, at the end of the second line, into " $A\delta\omega\nu\iota\varsigma$, so as to have the proper name twice in the same verse. This is the conjectural emendation of Ruardi, which is commended, though not adopted, by Valckenaer.

3–9. καὶ Κύπριν ἀνιậ, &c., "and, feebly breathing, fills Venus with anguish," i. e., by his feeble breathings, as life is passing away.—εἰβεται, "trickles." Poetic form for λείβεται.—χιονέας κατὰ σαρκός, "down along his snowy flesh."—ναρκῆ, "grow heavy." 3d sing. pres. indic. act. of ναρκάω. In Doric ναρκάει is contracted into ναρκῆ, instead of ναρκậ. This Doric contraction remains in several verbs, even in Attic, as ζῆ, διψῆ, &c.—καὶ τὸ ῥόδον ῥεύγει, &c., "and the rosy hue of his lip flees away." τῶ, Doric for τοῦ.—ἀμφὶ δὲ τήνῳ, &c., "while around that lip dies also the kiss, which Venus will never relinquish." τήνῳ, Doric for ἐκείνῳ, and θνάσκει τὸ φίλαμα for θνήσκει τὸ φίλημα. The broad a was the favourite letter of the Dorians.—τὸ μήποτε for ὃ μήποτε.—καὶ οὐ ζώοντος, "even when dead." ζώοντος for ζῶντος.—ὅ μιν θνάσκοντ' ἑφίλασεν, "who kissed him as he died." ὅ is here for ὅς, and not, as some main tain, for ὅτι. The forms θνάσκοντ' ἑφίλασεν are Doric for θνήσκοντ' ἑφίλησεν.

10-16. aì aì tàv Kuô épeiav, "alas ! alas ! for the goddess of Cythēra.' The accusative of exclamation is in fact dependant on some verb understood, the emotion with which the words are uttered naturally giving rise to elliptical modes of speech. In the present instance we may supply alá $\zeta\omega$.— $\dot{\omega}_{\zeta}$ loev, $\dot{\omega}_{\zeta}$ evónorev, &c., "when she saw, when she considered, the incurable wound of Adonis."—µapatvoµév φ περὶ µηρ $\ddot{\varphi}$, "around his wasting thigh."—πáχεας ἀµπετάσασα κινύρετο, "having stretched out her arms, she exclaimed in a mournful tone." πάχεας is Doric for πήχεας, and ἀµπετάσασα poetic for ἀναπετάσασα. In κινύρετο the augment is dropped.—µεῖνον, "stay but for one moment." Observe the force of the aorist, as indicating momentaneous action —κιχεί ω , poetic for κιχέ ω , pres. subj.— $\ddot{\omega}_{\zeta}$ σε περιπτύ $\zeta\omega$, &c., "that I may but for one moment fold thee in my embrace, and blend my lips with thine." The aorist again has its peculiar force. περιπτύ $\zeta\omega$, 1st aor. subj. act. of πεοιπτύσσ ω .—µακοὸν, "afar."—ἕρχεαι for ἕρχει, in the common dialect ἕρχ η . Consult note on line 108, page 163.

LINE 17–19. $\beta a \sigma i \lambda \tilde{\eta} a$. Referring to Pluto. The accusative, here, depends on ϵi_{ς} that precedes. This preposition is frequently 175

175 found with persons in the place of $\pi\rho\delta\varsigma.-\dot{a}\delta\epsilon \tau\dot{a}\lambda aiva$, &c., "but I, the wretched one, live, and am a goddess," i. e., live, and shall ever live. \dot{a} is Doric for $\dot{\eta}$. The full clause is $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\dot{a}\delta\dot{\epsilon}\dot{a}\tau\dot{a}\lambda aiva.- <math>\zeta\dot{\omega}\omega$, poetic for $\zeta\tilde{\omega}.-\dot{\epsilon}\mu\mu\dot{a}$, Æolic and Doric for $\epsilon\dot{\iota}\mu\dot{a}.-\Pi\epsilon\rho\sigma\epsilon\phi\deltava$, Doric for $\Pi\epsilon\rho\sigma\epsilon\phi\deltav\eta.-\tau\delta v \dot{\epsilon}\mu\delta v \pi\delta\sigma iv$, "this my spouse." Observe the de monstrative force of $\tau\delta v$, equivalent here to $\tau\sigma\bar{v}\tau\sigma v \tau\delta v$.- $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\sigma\dot{i}\gamma\dot{a}\rho a\dot{v}\tau\dot{a}$, &c., "for thou, thou art far more powerful than I; and everything fair descends unto thee." Doric for $\epsilon\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\dot{a}\rho a\dot{v}\tau\dot{\eta}$. There is something beautifully emphatic in the use of $a\dot{v}\tau\dot{a}$ here (literally, "thou thyself"), and which we have translated by the double pronoun. It portrays briefly but forcibly the anguish of Venus at her own comparatively powerless state, and at the superiority enjoyed, in this respect, by the queen of Hades.- $\pi\sigma\lambda$ - $\lambda\delta v$, poetic for $\pi\sigma\lambda\dot{v}$.- $\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma$ $\sigma\dot{\epsilon}$ for $\pi\rho\delta\varsigma$ $\sigma\dot{\epsilon}$. Consult note on $\beta a\sigma\iota\lambda\eta a$, at the beginning of this paragraph.

21-23. $\tau \rho_{i} \pi \delta \vartheta a \tau \epsilon$, Doric for $\tau \rho_{i} \pi \delta \vartheta \eta \tau \epsilon$.— $\pi \delta \vartheta \sigma_{0} \delta \delta \epsilon \mu_{0i}$, &c., "and my love has fled, on a sudden, like a dream." Observe the quickness of action indicated by the aorist. By $\pi \circ \vartheta \circ \varsigma$ is here meant, in fact, not love itself, but the object of one's love. This explanation will save the necessity of Valckenaer's proposed correction of the text, namely, $\pi \delta \sigma \iota_{\zeta}$ for $\pi \delta \vartheta \circ \varsigma$. $\kappa \epsilon \sigma \tau \delta \varsigma$ $\delta \lambda \omega \lambda \epsilon$, "the cestus has perished," i.e., has lost all its potency The cestus was the mysterious cincture of Venus, and all-powerful in kin dling the softer emotions. (Compare Hom., Il., 14, 214, seqq.) Her griet for the loss of Adonis will deaden, for the future, all desire, on the part of the goddess, of arraying herself in the habiliments of loveliness $-\tau i \gamma \dot{\mu} \rho$, τολμηρέ, κυνάγεις; &c., "for why, oh rash one, didst thou engage in the hunt ?" The abruptness with which the sentence begins is strikingly indicative of emotion on the part of the goddess. We have retained the common reading κυνάγεις, being the Doric for κυνήγεις, and this last the 2d sing. imperf. indic. for ἐκυνήγεις. Valckenaer proposes the following lection for this and the succeeding line : τί γὰρ, τολμηρὲ κυναγὲ, Kaλός ἐῶν τοσσοῦτο μέμηνας ϑηρσὶ παλαίειν; Brunck reads ἑμεινας, in the sense of sustinuisti, but makes mention also of ἐμήναο (from Theocr., 24, 31) as a lection that might be introduced here, and this last is given by Jacobs, whose example we have followed.— $\kappa a \lambda \partial \zeta \dot{\epsilon} \partial \nu \tau \sigma \sigma \sigma \tilde{\upsilon} \tau \sigma \nu \dot{\epsilon} \mu \eta \nu a \sigma$, &c. " (why), being so beautiful, didst thou madly desire to contend with savage beasts ?" Supply τi , from the previous line, before $\kappa a \lambda \partial \varsigma \dot{\varepsilon} \dot{\omega} v$. We must join here, in construction, τοσσοῦτον with καλός, not with ἐμήναο. So in Sophocles, Trach., 1107, μή τοσοῦτον ὡς δάκνη ϑυμῷ δύσοργος, i. e., τοσοῦτον δύσοργος. The form τοσσοῦτον in our text is equivalent to $\dot{\epsilon}$ ς τοσοῦτο.— εμήναο, poetic for εμήνω, 2d sing. 1st aor. indic. mid. of μαίνω.

26-28. à Haφía, "the goddess of Paphos," i. e., Venus. à is Doric for $\dot{\eta}$.— τa $\delta \epsilon \pi a \nu \tau a$, &c., "and all these become flowers upon the earth," i. e., the tears of Venus and the blood of Adonis are converted into flowers. The expression $\tau a \delta \epsilon \pi a \nu \tau a$ is equivalent to $\tau a \delta \epsilon \delta a \kappa \rho \nu a \kappa a \tau \delta a l \mu a$.— $\pi \sigma \tau i$, Doric for $\pi \rho \delta c$.— $\tau a \nu a \nu \epsilon \mu \omega \nu a \nu$, Doric for $\tau \eta \nu a \nu \epsilon \mu \omega \nu \eta \nu$. The anemone, or wind-rose, has its name from the Greek word $a \nu \epsilon \mu o c$ ("wind"), either because, according to Pliny (21, 23), it never opens except when tho wind blows; or because, as Hesychius states, its leaves are most easily scattered by the wind ($\tau a \chi \epsilon \omega c \nu \pi \delta a \nu \epsilon \mu \omega \nu \phi \vartheta \epsilon \iota \rho \delta \mu \epsilon \nu \sigma \nu$). With this last agrees the account of Ovid (Met., 10, 738, seq.).

> "Namque male hærentem, et nimia levitate caducum Excutiunt idem, qui præstant nomina venti."

The general opinion of the learned inclines to regard the anemone of the 364 classic writers as the anemone coronaria of the botanists. Some, 175however, are in favour of the Adonis æstivalis, and among the number is Sprengel. (Hist. Rei Herb., 1, 34.) The question is a difficul, one to decide. According to Dioscorides, there were two kinds of anemone, the wild and the cultivated. (2, 207.) The cultivated kind was very variable in the colour of its flowers, these being either blue, violet purple, or white; whereas the wild kind had merely a flower of purple hue This may serve to explain the discrepance in the poetic legends respecting Adonis, some writers, like Bion, making the anemone to have sprung from the tears of Venus; and others, like Ovid, from the blood of her favourite The reference may be, in the one case, to the white flower of the wind-rose in the other to that of purple hue. (Consult Sibthorp, Flora Græca, 1, 375. -Fée, ad Plin., l. c.)

30-34. μηκέτ' ένὶ δρυμοῖσι, &c., "no longer, oh goddess of Cyprus, mourn for thy loved one in the woods; there is (here) a goodly couch (prepared for him); there is (here) a bed of leaves ready for Adonis." At the celebration of the Adonia, an image of the favourite of Venus was represented as reclining, in death, on a bed of state. (Theocrit., 15, 125, seqq.) It is to this custom that the line contains an allusion. Luzac, without any necessity, conjectures έσθ' άπαλα στιβάς.- άγαθα, Doric for άγαθη.-καλός νέκυς ola καθεύδων, "though dead, he is beautiful as one that sleeps."-κέκλιται, "lies." Literally, "reclines." Passive for middle.-κειράμενοι χαίτας ἐπ' 'Αδώνιδι, " having shorn their locks on account of Adonis." Cutting off the hair of the head was one of the usual acts of mourning among the Greeks. The hair thus cut off was sometimes laid upon the corpse (Il., 23, 135), and from this may have arisen the meaning of $i \pi i$ in such cases as the present, where the idea of placing the shorn locks upon the dead body appears to lie at the basis of the expression. Thus Higtius, in his beautiful trochaics, renders the line as follows : " Luteos po nunt capillos, triste donum mortuo."

35-37. $\chi \dot{\omega} \ \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \ \delta i \sigma \tau \dot{\omega} \varsigma$, &c., "and one trampled upon his arrows, and another upon his bow, while a third broke his well-winged quiver," i. e., and one, trampling under foot, broke his arrows, &c. Literally, "and one went upon his arrows," where observe the continued action indicated by the imperfect. $\chi \dot{\omega} \ \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \ \delta i \sigma \tau \dot{\omega} \varsigma$ is for $\kappa a \dot{\ell} \ \delta \ \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \ \delta i \sigma \tau \dot{\omega} \varsigma$, the Dorians using $\dot{\omega} \varsigma$ for ov's in the termination of the accusative plural.— $\delta \varsigma \ \delta \dot{\epsilon}$ for $\delta \ \delta \dot{\epsilon}$. The article appears here under one of its earlier forms, which was afterward appropriated exclusively to the relative. Poetic usage, however, as in the present instance, often recalled the form $\delta \varsigma$ for $\delta \ \delta' \ \delta \phi \eta$.— $\epsilon \dot{\nu} \pi \tau \epsilon \rho o \nu$. An epithet applied to the quiver as the receptacle of the feathered arrows — $\dot{d} \gamma \epsilon$, Doric for $\dot{\eta} \gamma \epsilon$, imperf. of $\dot{a} \gamma \omega$, or, more correctly speaking, $\dot{a} \gamma \nu \nu \mu$, "to break." As regards the whole passage, compare the language of Ovid (Am., 3, 9, 7) in lamenting the death of Tibullus:

"Ecce, puer Veneris fert eversamque pharetram Et fractos arcus, et sine luce facem."

38-40. $\xi\lambda\nu\sigma\varepsilon$. A momentary act, and, therefore, requiring the acrist. — $\chi\rho\nu\sigma\epsilon$ iors for $\chi\rho\nu\sigma\epsilon$ iors, and this for $\chi\rho\nu\sigma\sigma\delta$.— $\phi o\rho\epsilon\eta\sigma\nu$ for $\phi o\rho\eta\sigma\nu$, from $\phi o\rho\eta\mu\mu$. Some branches of the Doric dialect formed the 1st pers. sing. pres. indic. of many common verbs in $\mu\nu$ instead of ω , and likewise the 3d sing. in $\sigma\iota$. (Buttmann, larger Gr. Gr., p. 220, Robinson's trans.) Hence $\phi o\rho\eta\mu\mu$ is for $\phi o\rho\epsilon\omega$, and $\phi o\rho\eta\sigma\iota$ for $\phi o\rho\epsilon\delta$. The attachment to forms H H 2 365

Page 1.75 in μι, however, was.still more marked in Æolic Greek.—πτερύγεσσιν for πτέρυξιν (i. e., πτερύγεσι, πτέρυγσι, πτέρυξι).—ἀναψύχει, "fans." Literally, "cools."

41-44. αὐτὰν. Lennep conjectured ai ai in place of $av \tau av$, and Brunck admits the emendation into the text. Jacobs thinks we ought to read καύταν, i. e., και αύταν, the Loves mourning not only for Adonis, but also for Venus herself. This, however, is sufficiently implied in avrav, without the need of any connective.—ἕσβεσε λαμπάδα πũσαν, &c., " Hymen has extinguished every torch upon the thresholds, and has untwined (and cast from him) the marriage crown." Literally, "has opened the marriage crown." There is a double idea conveyed, in fact, by the verb $\xi \in \pi \notin \pi \sigma \sigma \sigma$, not only of untwining, but also of casting away, and hence Valckenaer renders it, "coronam resolutam projecit." So Higtius, "nuptialem nunc coronam spargit irata manu." Nor has Voss failed to express the same meaning, "und die vermählende krone zerstreut." The meaning intended to be conveyed by the whole passage is striking and beautiful: the torches, by the light of which the bride was wont to be conducted from the dwelling of her parent to that of the bridegroom, and to the threshold of the nuptial chamber; the crown, the symbol of union, worn, not only by the married pair, but also by their attendant train; and the song of marriage itself ('Tµàv, ω 'Υμέναιε!), all these cease to exist on the death of Adonis.--οὐκέτι δ' 'Yuuv, &c., "no longer is the song of 'Hymen, Hymen,' sung; 'alas! alas !' is chanted." The funeral dirge succeeds the bridal song .- acidéμενον for ἀδόμενον.

45-47. $\kappa \lambda a iov \tau i$, Doric for $\kappa \lambda a iov \sigma i$. Observe the analogy between the Latin 3d pers. plur. in -unt, and the Doric termination in -ovTL.-Tŵ Kuvi- ρao , Doric for $\tau o \tilde{v} K \iota v \dot{v} \rho o v$. Adonis was the fabled son of Cinyras, king of Cyprus.— $\kappa \alpha i \mu i \nu \epsilon \pi \alpha \epsilon i \delta o \nu \sigma i \nu$, " and seek by their strains to charm him back unto life." The verb $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\alpha\epsilon i\delta\omega$ has reference properly to magic rites and incantations, and is here beautifully employed in this sense. (Compare Theocrit., 2, 91, and consult Blomfield, Gloss. ad Esch., Prom. Vinct., 180, s. v. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi a o i \delta \eta$.)— $\dot{\delta} \delta \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \phi i \sigma i v o \dot{v} \chi \dot{v}\pi a \kappa o \dot{v} \epsilon i$, "he, however, obeys them not," i. e., yields not to the sweet influence of their strains. The common reading is $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\alpha\kappa\sigma\dot{\nu}\epsilon\iota$, for which we have not hesitated to substitute, with Jacobs, iπακούει, as recommended by Valckenaer.—ού μαν, εί κ' έθέλοι, &c., "no, indeed, even if he should wish so to do; for Proserpina leaves him not free," i. e., he will not, at their invocation, return to the upper world, even if the draught of Lethe should lose its influence, and he himself should feel inclined to listen to the call, for Proserpina now holds him as her own. The common text has où µùv oùk ¿θέλει, which Jacobs retains, making oùk έθέλει equivalent to avaivεται. The meaning will then be, "he does not, indeed, refuse (so to do)," as in Latin, non quod ipse nolit. This construction of the second $o\dot{v}\kappa$, however, appears to us extremely harsh, if not actu ally inelegant. Koen suggested, ού μαν, ὅκκ' ἐθέλει, of which Brunck and Valckenaer both approve, except that the latter changes $\dot{\epsilon}\vartheta\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\iota$ to $\dot{\epsilon}\vartheta\dot{\epsilon}\lambda o\iota$. This reading, however, appears to us deficient in spirit. We have adopted, therefore, the emendation of Higtius, où $\mu \dot{\alpha} \nu$, $\epsilon i \kappa' \dot{\epsilon} \vartheta \dot{\epsilon} \lambda o \iota$, as decidedly the best that can be offered. The version of Eobanus accords with this: "Quas, et si cupiat, Stygia non audit ab umbra :" as does that of Voss : " Nein doch, ob er auch wollte; Persefone loset ihn nimmer!"-Kúpa, Doric for Κόρα.

1-3. Ίξευτὰς, Doric for ἰξευτὴς.--κῶρος, Doric for κοῦρος.-δενδρά-366

εντι, Doric for δενδρήεντι.—τον ἀπότροπον είδεν Ἐρωτα, "saw 175 Love, that being whom all should avoid." The term ἀπότροπον is here equivalent to the Latin abominandum. So we have in Sophocles (Ajax, 602), τον ἀπότροπον ἀἰδηλον ᾿Αιδαν, where one of the scholiasts remarks, τον ἀπότροπον, ἡγουν τον ἀποστροφῆς καὶ ἀποτροπιασμοῦ ἀξιον. Compare Sophocles, Œdipus Tyr., 1314.—ἐσδόμενον, Doric for ἑζόμενον.—πύξοιο for πύξου.—ποτὶ, Doric for προς.—ἐνόασε, Doric for ἑνόησε.

INNE 4-6. $\tilde{\omega}\nu\epsilon\kappa a \delta \tilde{\eta}$, "because, for sooth." $\tilde{\omega}\nu\epsilon\kappa a$ is Doric for 176 $\tilde{\omega}\nu\epsilon\kappa a.-\tau \tilde{\omega}\varsigma \kappa a\lambda \tilde{a}\mu \omega\varsigma \tilde{\omega}\mu a \pi \tilde{\omega}\nu\tau a\varsigma, \&c., "joining, at one and$ $the same time, all his rods to each other." <math>\tau \tilde{\omega}\varsigma \kappa a\lambda \tilde{a}\mu \omega\varsigma$ is Doric for $\tau \tilde{\omega}\varsigma \kappa a\lambda \tilde{a}\mu \omega\varsigma$, and $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda \tilde{a}\lambda \omega \iota \sigma\iota$ Doric for $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda \tilde{\eta}\lambda \omega\varsigma$. The reference is to catching birds by means of rods smeared with birdlime. This mode of capture is commonly employed against small birds merely; and hence the young fowler on the present occasion, believing that he has met with a bird of more than ordinary size, prepares to use all his rods at once. $-\tau \tilde{q} \kappa a \tilde{\iota} \tau q$ $\tau \tilde{\upsilon} \nu ~ E\rho \omega \tau a, \&c.,$ "watched Cupid, having darted in this direction and in that," i. e., who kept darting, &c. $\tau \tilde{q} \kappa a \tilde{\iota} \tau \tilde{q}$ is Doric for $\tau \tilde{\eta} \kappa a \tilde{\iota} \tau \tilde{\eta}$, where we are to supply $\delta \delta \tilde{\omega}$ or $\chi \delta \rho a.-\mu \varepsilon \tau \tilde{a}\lambda \mu \varepsilon \nu \sigma \nu$, syncopated 2d aor. part. middle, with the soft breathing (in $\tilde{a}\lambda \mu \varepsilon \nu \sigma \nu$), from $\mu \varepsilon \vartheta \tilde{a}\lambda \omega \rho \mu a.$ (Buttmann, larger Gr. Gr., p. 266, Robinson's transl.)

7-11. $\chi\dot{\omega}$ for $\kappa \alpha\dot{\alpha}\dot{\delta}$.— $\tilde{\epsilon}\nu\epsilon\chi'$ oi $\tau\dot{\epsilon}\lambda \rho\varsigma$, &c., "because no end (of this) appeared to him." Literally, "met him." $\tilde{\epsilon}\nu\epsilon\chi'$, before an aspirated vowel for $\tilde{\epsilon}\nu\epsilon\kappa a$, has here the force of $\rho\ddot{\nu}\nu\epsilon\kappa a$. (Schneider, Wörterb., s. v.) In a strict, literal translation, however, $\tilde{\epsilon}\nu\epsilon\kappa a$ retains its proper meaning, and the clause following after supplies the place of a genitive.— $d\pi d\nu\tau\eta$, Doric for $d\pi \eta\nu\tau a$, 3d sing. imperf. indic. act. of $d\pi a\nu\tau d\omega$." ($d\pi \eta\nu\tau a\epsilon, d\pi \eta\nu-\tau a$, Doric $d\pi d\nu\tau\eta$, dropping the augment.)— $\pi \rho \tau$. $d\rho \sigma \tau \rho \epsilon a$. The form $\pi \rho \tau$ is by apostrophe for $\pi \rho \tau$, and this Doric for $\pi \rho \delta \varsigma$.— $\tau \delta \nu \delta \epsilon \tau \epsilon \chi \nu \eta \nu$.— $\kappa a t$ $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu a v \tau \tilde{\rho}$, "and mentioned the circumstance to him." $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu$ for $\epsilon \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu$, augment dropped.— $\delta \epsilon t \tilde{\epsilon} \epsilon \nu \epsilon \sigma$ for $\epsilon \delta \epsilon \iota \epsilon \epsilon \nu \ell \nu \eta \sigma \epsilon$ for $\epsilon \kappa \ell \nu \eta \sigma \epsilon$. There is no need whatever of supplying $\pi \rho \delta \varsigma$ here to govern the accusative, as some do. The case depends at once upon the verb. $d\mu \epsilon \ell \epsilon \tau \sigma$ or $\eta \mu \epsilon \epsilon \ell \epsilon \tau \epsilon \sigma$ and impressive manner which it indicates on the part of the speaker.

12-16. $\phi \epsilon i \delta \epsilon \sigma \tau \tilde{a} \varsigma \vartheta \eta \rho a \varsigma$, &c., "refrain from the hunt, and approach not this winged creature here." $\phi \epsilon i \delta \epsilon \sigma$ is for $\phi \epsilon i \delta \sigma \upsilon$, and $\tau \tilde{a} \varsigma$ Doric for $\tau \eta \varsigma$.— $\epsilon \varsigma \tau \delta \delta \epsilon$, in the sense of $\pi \rho \delta \varsigma \tau \delta \delta \epsilon$.— $\tau \check{\omega} \rho \nu \epsilon \sigma \upsilon \check{\epsilon} \rho \chi \epsilon \upsilon$ for $\tau \delta \check{\sigma} \rho \nu \epsilon \sigma \upsilon$ $\epsilon \rho \chi \epsilon \upsilon \gamma \epsilon \mu a \kappa \rho \acute{a} \upsilon$, "flee far away." Supply $\delta \delta \delta \upsilon$.— $\epsilon \upsilon \tau \iota$, Doric for $\epsilon \sigma \tau \iota$.— $\epsilon \sigma \sigma \eta$ for $\epsilon \sigma \eta$, Attic $\epsilon \sigma \epsilon \iota$, 2d sing. fut. of $\epsilon \iota \mu \iota$.— $\epsilon \iota \sigma \delta \kappa a \mu \eta \mu \iota \upsilon \tilde{\epsilon} \lambda \eta \varsigma$, "as long as thou shalt not have taken him."— $\dot{a} \pi \acute{a} \lambda \mu \epsilon \upsilon \sigma \varsigma$, syncopated 2d aor. part. mid., with the soft breathing ($\check{a} \lambda \mu \epsilon \nu \sigma \varsigma$), from $\dot{a} \phi \acute{a} \lambda \lambda \sigma \mu a \iota$.— $a \upsilon \tau \delta \varsigma$ $\dot{a} \phi' a \upsilon \tau \tilde{\omega}$, "himself, of himself," i. e., moved by his own impulse. $a \upsilon \tau \tilde{\omega}$ is for $a \upsilon \tau \sigma \upsilon$, and this for $\dot{\epsilon} a \upsilon \tau \sigma \upsilon$.— $\kappa \epsilon \phi a \lambda \dot{a} \upsilon \epsilon \epsilon \delta \sigma \kappa a \vartheta \iota \varsigma \epsilon \iota$, "will alight upon thy head." A figurative expression, for "will occupy thy every thought." $\kappa \epsilon \phi a \lambda \dot{a} \nu$, Doric for $\kappa \epsilon \phi a \lambda \dot{\eta} \nu$, $\sigma \epsilon \iota \sigma$ for $\sigma \sigma \upsilon$, and $\kappa a \vartheta \iota \varsigma \epsilon \iota$ Doric for $\kappa a \vartheta \iota \sigma \epsilon \iota$. The Dorians change the future in $\sigma \omega$, with the short penult, into $\varsigma \omega$.

III.

1-2. εἶαρος ὦ Μύρσων, &c., "in spring, oh Myrson, or in winter, or autumn, or summer, what is pleasing unto thee? and what one (of these 367 176 seasons) dost thou wish to come more than the rest?" elapog, $\chi \epsilon i \mu a \tau o \varsigma$, &c., are the genitives of part of time. $\epsilon l a \rho o \varsigma$ for $\epsilon a \rho o \varsigma$. $-\phi \vartheta \iota \nu o \pi \omega \rho o \nu$. The $\phi \vartheta \iota \nu o \pi \omega \rho o \nu$ of the Greek writers was, strictly speaking, the latter part of autumn, from the rising of Arcturus to that of the Pleiades. The Grecian year was commonly divided into seven parts, $\epsilon a \rho$, $\vartheta \epsilon \rho o \varsigma$, $\delta \pi \omega \rho a$, $\phi \vartheta \iota \nu o \pi \omega \rho o \nu$, $\sigma \pi o \rho \eta \tau \delta \varsigma$, $\chi \epsilon \iota \mu \omega \nu$, and $\phi \nu \tau a \lambda \iota \dot{a}$. The position of $\phi \vartheta \iota \nu o \pi \omega \rho o \nu$, in the text, before $\vartheta \epsilon \rho \epsilon o \varsigma$, is a mere poetic arrangement for the sake of the line. The true order comes in immediately after.

3-4. $\hat{\eta}$ $\vartheta \acute{e}ooc$, &c., "is it summer, when all the things on which we bestow labour are drawing to a close," i. e., when our rural labours are ending, and the objects of them are perfecting and ripening. $\acute{a}\nu \acute{k}\kappa a$ and $\mu o\gamma \epsilon \vartheta \mu \epsilon_{\zeta}$ are Doric forms for $\dot{\eta}\nu \acute{k}\kappa a$ and $\mu o\gamma \sigma \vartheta \mu \epsilon \nu$. The literal translation is as follows: "(am I wrong), or (dost thou wish) summer (to come)," where observe that the particle $\dot{\eta}$, though apparently interrogative in a free translation, is, in reality, always disjunctive and elliptical.— $\delta \tau' \dot{a}\nu \delta \rho \acute{a}\sigma \iota \lambda \mu \partial \varsigma \dot{\epsilon} \lambda a \phi \rho \acute{a}$, "when famine possesses no terrors for men," i. e., in consequence of the abundance which then prevails. Literally, "when famine is light for men." Compare the version of Eobanus, "aut ferax, qui, cuncta donans, pellit auctumnus famem?" Grotius, following Canter, read $\lambda \iota \mu \delta \varsigma \dot{\epsilon} \lambda a \phi \rho \delta \varsigma$. But $\dot{a} \lambda \iota \mu \delta \varsigma$ was said in Doric, and $\dot{\eta} \lambda \iota \mu \delta \varsigma$ occurs in the Homeric hymn to Ceres, 312. In the later and common language, the feminine was the prevalent form. (Jacobs, Anthol. Pal., p. 19, 1042.)

5-8. δύσεργον, "difficult for labour," i. e., in which we find it difficult to work, and are lazily inclined.— $\vartheta a\lambda \pi \delta \mu \epsilon \nu \sigma \iota$ $\vartheta \epsilon \lambda, \gamma \sigma \nu \tau a\iota$, &c., "warming themselves (by the fire), are charmed with both inaction and indolence." $\dot{a}\epsilon\rho\gamma\epsilon i\eta$ for $\dot{a}\epsilon\rho\gamma ia$. By $\dot{a}\epsilon\rho\gamma\epsilon i\eta$ is here meant the state of inaction, which, recurring day after day, produces eventually the habit denominated $\delta\kappa\nu\sigma c$ — η $\tau \sigma\iota$ $\kappa a\lambda \partial\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}a\rho$, &c., "or is the beauteous spring wont to delight thee more?" Observe the force of the aorist in denoting what is customary or usual. $\epsilon \dot{\nu} a \delta \epsilon \nu$ is the 3d sing. 2d aor. indic. act. of $\dot{a}\nu \delta \dot{a}\kappa \omega$, and is for $\dot{\epsilon}a \delta \epsilon \nu$. The form $\epsilon \dot{\nu} a \delta \sigma \nu$ is thought to have arisen from doubling the digamma after the augment (EFFA Δ ON like $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda a \delta \sigma \nu$), for here, where this letter made a position, it could not fall away as in other cases. The apparent significance of this $\epsilon \dot{\nu}$, "well," as in English, "well pleased," may have contributed to the preservation of this form. (Buttmann, larger Gr. Gr., p. 267, Robinson's transl.)— $a \dot{l} \rho \epsilon i \tau a \iota$, "prefers."— $\lambda a \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \epsilon \nu \gamma \dot{\rho} \dot{\epsilon} \pi \dot{\epsilon} \tau \rho a \pi \epsilon \nu$, $\dot{\omega} c.,$ " since our leisure has permitted us to converse." $\lambda a \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \epsilon \nu$ for $\lambda a \lambda \epsilon \tilde{\epsilon} \nu$.— $\dot{a} \sigma \chi o \lambda \dot{a}$, Doric for $\dot{\eta} \sigma \chi o \lambda \eta$.

9-11. $\vartheta \varepsilon \eta i a$ for $\vartheta \varepsilon i a$.— $i \varepsilon \rho a$. Lennep conjectures $\omega \rho i a$, an extremely neat emendation.— $i \delta \delta \varepsilon a$, Doric for $\eta \delta \delta \varepsilon a$.— $\sigma \varepsilon v \delta \delta \varepsilon \varepsilon \kappa a \tau i$, &c., "for thy sake, however, will I declare, oh Cleodāmus, what one is more pleasing to me than the rest."— $i \xi \varepsilon \rho \varepsilon \omega$. Oldest form $i \xi \varepsilon \rho \varepsilon \omega$, Ionic and poetic $i \xi \varepsilon \rho \varepsilon \omega$, Attic $i \xi \varepsilon \rho \omega$, future to $i \xi \varepsilon i \pi \varepsilon i v$.— $\tau \delta \rho \omega i$ for $\delta \rho i \mu \omega ... - \pi \varepsilon \lambda \varepsilon v$ for $\xi \pi \varepsilon \lambda \varepsilon v$, imperf. of $\pi \varepsilon \lambda \omega$, with the signification of the present.— $u \delta i \omega v$, Doric for $\eta \delta i \omega v$.

12-18. $\frac{1}{2}\mu\epsilon\nu$, Doric for $\frac{\epsilon}{\mu}\epsilon\nu$, and this by apocope from $\frac{\epsilon}{\mu}\epsilon\nua\iota$, which stands for the common $\frac{\epsilon}{\nu}a\iota$.— $\tau\delta\kappa a$, Doric for $\tau\delta\tau\epsilon$.— $\delta\pi\tau\eta$, "scorches." Doric for $\delta\pi\tau\bar{a}$.— $\phi\vartheta\iota\nu\delta\pi\omega\rho\sigma\nu$. Supply $\frac{1}{\mu}\mu\epsilon\nu$, i. e., $\frac{\epsilon}{\nu}a\iota$.— $\tilde{\omega}\rho\iota a$, "the fruits of the season." Literally, "the seasonable things." The reference here, of course, is to an immoderate indulgence in these.— $\sigma\delta\lambda\sigma\nu$ $\chi\epsilon\bar{\iota}\mu a$ $\phi\epsilon\rho\epsilon\nu$, &c., "I dread to endure the dire winter, its falls of snow, and its frosts." $\phi\delta\delta\epsilon\delta\mu a\iota$ for $\phi\delta\delta\delta\delta\mu a\iota$.— $\epsilon la\rho$ $\frac{\epsilon}{\mu}\omega$ $\tau\rho\iota\pi\delta\vartheta a\tau\sigma\nu$, &c., "for me, indeed, may the thrice-beloved spring be present throughout the whole year." Observe 368 the employment of the emphatic $\xi\mu oi$, and also the use of the 176 optative, without $\kappa \varepsilon$ or δv , as indicating a wish.— $\delta v (\kappa \alpha, Doric for <math>\eta v (\kappa \alpha, -\delta \mu \mu \varepsilon)$ for $\eta \mu \tilde{a}_{\mathcal{C}}$.— $\kappa \varepsilon \varepsilon \iota$, "are pregnant with life."— $\epsilon \delta a \rho o \varepsilon$. The genitive of part of time, for which the dative has just been employed at the beginning of the line.— $\chi \delta v \delta \xi \delta v \delta \rho \delta \pi o \iota \sigma \iota v$, &c., "and the night is equal unto men, and like (to the night) is the day," i. e., and the days and nights are equal. The labours of the day are compensated by the long repose of night. $\chi \delta v \delta \xi \delta \sigma \delta$, Doric for $\kappa \alpha \delta \eta v \delta \xi \delta \sigma \eta$. Supply $\delta \sigma \tau \delta$.— $\delta \omega \varsigma$, Doric for $\eta \delta \varsigma$. The morning is here taken for the entire day, the beginning of light for its continuance. Compare the version of Higtius : "vere noctis aqua currunt, aqua lucis tempora."

LINE 1-3. 'A Kúπρις τον Έρωτα, &c., "the goddess of Cyprus made loud proclamation for Cupid her son." Literally, "was calling aloud for." \dot{a} Kúπρις, Doric for $\dot{\eta}$ Kúπρις.— $\dot{c}\dot{b}\dot{\omega}\sigma\tau\rho\epsilon\iota$, from $\beta\omega\sigma\tau\rho\epsilon\omega$. This verb is commonly regarded as Doric for $\beta o \dot{a} \omega$. Passow, however, regards it as formed from $\beta o \dot{a} \omega$, just as $\kappa a \lambda \iota \sigma \tau \rho \epsilon \omega$ comes from $\kappa a \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \omega$, $\dot{c} \lambda a \sigma \tau \rho \dot{\epsilon} \omega$ from $\dot{c} \lambda a \dot{v} v \omega$, &c.— $\epsilon \dot{c} \iota \iota \varsigma \dot{\epsilon} v \dot{\iota} \tau \rho \iota \dot{o} \delta o \iota \sigma \iota$, "if any one has seen Cupid wandering at the cross-roads." The $\tau \rho \dot{\iota} o \dot{\delta} o \iota$, or places where three roads met, were always a kind of public thoroughfare, where many persons were found. Venus thinks it likely that her runaway may be in one of these spots. Some understand before $\epsilon \dot{\iota} \tau \iota \varsigma$ the words $\lambda \dot{\epsilon} \gamma o v \sigma a \tau \dot{a} \delta \epsilon$. They are certainly implied in $\dot{\epsilon} \dot{\delta} \omega \sigma \tau \rho \epsilon \iota$, but by no means actually under stood.— $\delta \rho a \pi \epsilon \tau i \delta a \varsigma$, Doric for $\delta \rho a \pi \epsilon \tau i \delta \eta \varsigma$. So also $\mu a v v \tau \dot{\alpha} \varsigma$ for $\mu \eta v v \tau \dot{\eta} \varsigma$.

11--19. μικκύλα μὲν τήνω, &c., "his little hands are very small, but they shoot a great way." τήνω, Doric for ἐκείνου.—μακρὰ, taken adverbially. —κ' εἰς, "even to." for καὶ εἰς.—'Aἰδεω for 'Aἰδου. In reading, 'Aἰδεω is to be pronounced 'Aἰδω here, on account of the metre.—τόγε σῶμα, "as to his body, indeed."—ἑμπεπύκασται, "is closely covered," i. e., is closely concealed from view.—καὶ πτερόεις, ὅσον ὅρνις, &c., "and having wings, wike a bɨrd, he flies at one time on one, at another on another, of men and

Literally, "the arrow unto him," &c.—ἕνδοθι δ' ἐντὶ τοὶ πικροὶ κάλαμοι, &c., " and within it are those bitter shafts, with which he often wounds even me." ἐντὶ, Doric for εἰσὶ, and τοὶ, Doric for οἱ in the sense of ἐκεῖνοι.—τοῖς, pcetic for οἰς.—κἡμὲ, Doric for καὶ ἐμὲ.

Literally, "the little torch, being unto himself," i. e., which is unto himself. We have followed, in this passage, the readings of Luzac. The common text has $\pi \acute{a}\nu\tau a \ \mu \grave{\epsilon}\nu \ \check{a}\gamma\rho\iota a$, $\pi \acute{a}\nu\tau a$, and in the succeeding line, $\tau \grave{o}\nu \ \check{a}\lambda\iota o\nu \ a\dot{v}\tau \grave{o}\nu \ \dot{a}\nu a(\vartheta\epsilon\iota)$. There can be but one opinion as to the inferiority of the common lection.- έοῖσα, Doric for ἐοῦσα, and this for οὖσα. $-\tau \tilde{a}$, Doric for \tilde{a} , and this for $\tilde{\eta}$. $-\tilde{a}\lambda \iota o \nu$. Brunck suggests μη τυ θίγης, which Valckenaer commends. It is certainly a spirited emendation, though not more so than the received reading.

178 LINE 1-5. ^{*}Αρχετε, Σικελικαί, &c., "begin, Sicilian Muses, be gin the strain of wo," i. e., the funeral dirge. By the Siciliar Muses are here meant the Muses of pastoral or bucolic verse, which had been carried to its highest perfection by Theocritus, a native of Syracuse in the island of Sicily. Bion and Moschus had both taken him for their model in this department of composition.—άδόνες, Doric for άηδόνες. πυκινοίσιν ποτι φύλλοις, "amid the thick foliage." ποτι, Doric for πρός. -νάμασι τοῖς Σικελοῖς, &c., "tell unto the Sicilian waters of the (fount of) Arethusa." τᾶς ᾿Αρεθούσας, Doric for τῆς ᾿Αρεθούσης.—τέθνακεν, Doric for τέθνηκεν.—βωκόλος, Doric for βουκόλος.—ὅττι σὺν αὐτῷ καl τὸ μέλος τέθνακε, &c., "that with him both melody itself has died, and the Doric song is no more." ἀοιδά, Doric for ἀοιδή.

By a beautiful figure, a feeling of loneliness, at the loss of the bard, is as cribed to the very oaks under which he was wont to sing.— $\dot{a} \lambda \lambda \dot{a} \pi a \rho \dot{a}$ $\Pi \lambda o v \tau \eta \tilde{\iota}$, &c., "but he sings with Pluto the song of oblivion," i. e., but he now sings in the lower world, where all is oblivion of the past. Compare the version of Eobanus:

> "Sed Ditis in aula Immemores hymnos, et longa oblivia cantat."

11-16. τίς ποτὶ σῷ σύριγγι, &c., "who shall play upon thy pipe?" The common text has μελίσδεται, the Doric present for μελίζεται. The true reading, however, is μελίξετα, the Doric future for μελίσεται, as adopted 370

Page by Brunck, Valckenaer, Jacobs, and many others. - ou suyye. The 178 syrinx was a pipe of many reeds, joined side by side, and each of different length. The usual number of reeds, thus connected, was seven; but we read on some occasions of less, on others of more than this. The Pandean pipe of modern times is a species of syrinx. (Consult Voss, ad Virg., Eclog, 2, 33.)— $\kappa a \lambda \dot{a} \mu o i g$. Referring to the reeds that composed the syrinx.— $\vartheta \dot{a} \sigma \epsilon i$ Doric for $\vartheta \dot{\eta} \sigma \epsilon i$.— $\epsilon i \sigma \epsilon \tau i$ $\gamma \dot{a} \rho \pi \nu \epsilon \epsilon i \epsilon \tau \dot{a} \sigma \dot{a} \chi \epsilon i \lambda \epsilon a$, &c., "for it still breathes the music of thy lips and of thy breath, and echo among its rec is still feeds upon thy strains." Supply $\dot{\eta} \sigma i \rho_i \gamma \xi$. The idea is a most beautiful one: the breathings of song still linger on the syrinx of the hard, and their echoes still murmur in its reeds. $-\pi\nu\epsiloni\epsilon\iota$ for $\pi\nu\epsilon\epsilon\iota$. $-\dot{a}\chi\dot{\omega}$ Doric for ήχώ.-δονάκεσσι for δόναξι.-Πανί φέρω το μέλισμα, " I offer the strain to Pan," i. e., I offer thy syrinx unto Pan, that from it he may produce sweet melody. Valckenaer and others read $\mu \epsilon \lambda \iota \gamma \mu a$, in the sense of "pipe," though Valckenaer himself appears to have considerable doubts about the propriety of using $\mu \epsilon \lambda \iota \gamma \mu \alpha$ in this signification $-\tau \dot{\alpha} \chi' \dot{\alpha} \nu \kappa \dot{\alpha} \kappa \epsilon \tilde{\iota} r_{3}$ έρεῖσαι, &c., " perhaps even he would fear to apply his lips (unto thy reeds), lest he bear away the second prize to thee," i. e., lest he be deemed inferior to thee. After $\tau \delta \sigma \tau \delta \mu a$ we must supply, in thought, the words $\sigma \tilde{a} \sigma \delta \rho \iota \gamma \gamma \iota$, the idea of which naturally arises from $\tau \delta \mu \epsilon \lambda \iota \sigma \mu a$ that precedes. With τa δεύτερα supply $\dot{a}\partial\lambda a$, and observe the genitive σείο (for σοῦ) following δεύτερα, since this last here implies comparison.—φ έρηται. force of the middle, "bear off for himself," or, "as his own." Observe the 17-22. ὦ ποταμῶν λιγυρώτατε, "oh most tuneful of rivers." The allusion is to the river Meles, in Ionia, which flowed by the city of Smyrna. According to one account, Homer was born on its banks, from which circum stance he obtained the appellation of Melesigenes (Μελεσιγενής). Bion having been born in the city of Smyrna, the river Meles is here poetically styled "most tuneful" of streams, from its flowing by the native seats of two so eminent poets.— $\dot{a}\pi\dot{\omega}\lambda$ ετο πράν τοι "Ομηρος, "in former days thy Homer perished." Literally, "in former days Homer perished for thee."—τηνο τὸ Καλλιόπας γλυκερον στόμα, "that sweet mouth of Calliope." τηνο, Doric for $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\nuo$, and $Ka\lambda\lambda\iota\delta\pi a\varsigma$ for $Ka\lambda\lambda\iota\delta\pi\eta\varsigma$. Homer is here, by a striking figure, called the $\sigma \tau \delta \mu a \ K a \lambda \lambda i \delta \pi a \zeta$, since the muse, through him, poured forth her strains unto men. So in Theocritus (Id., 7, 37), a poet is called Moισãv στόμα, and, in one of the Epigrams of the Anthology, Pindar is styled Μουσαν ίερον στόμα.-λέγοντι Doric for λέγουσι.-πολυκλαύσιοισι όεέθροις, "with thy deeply-lamenting waters." The true reading, very probably, is πολυκλύστοισι ρεέθροις, "with thy swelling tide of waters."— $\pi \tilde{a}\sigma a\nu \delta' \check{\epsilon}\pi \lambda \eta \sigma a\varsigma \phi \omega \nu \tilde{a}\varsigma \check{a}\lambda a, `` and didst fill the whole sea with the voice$ of thy lament." φωνας, Doric for φωνης.-άλλον viéa. Referring to Bion. $-\tau \dot{\alpha}\kappa \eta$, Doric for $\tau \dot{\eta}\kappa \eta$, and this for the Attic $\tau \dot{\eta}\kappa \epsilon \iota$.

23-25. παγαῖς πεφιλαμένοι Doric for πηγαῖς πεφιλημένοι.—δς μὲν ἔπινε, &c., "the one drank of the Pegasēan fountain, while the other had a draught of that of Arethusa." δς μὲν for δ μὲν.—Παγασίδος κράνας, Doric for Πηγασίδος κρήνης. By the Παγασίδος κράνα is meant the fountain of Hippocrēnē, on Mount Helicon, fabled to have been produced from the earth by a stamp of the foot, on the part of the winged steed Pegasus.—ἔχεν for εἰχεν, augment dropped.—The meaning of the poet in this passage is as follows: as Homer drank from the Pegasean fountain the inspiration of epic verse, so Bion quaffed that of bucolic poetry from the fount of Arethusa, its native home. The whole, however, is figurative, and must not be understood as if Bion had been personally present in the island of Sicily.

178 $-\chi\dot{\omega} \ \mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu$. Referring to Homer, as the singer of the Iliad, in which poem Helen, daughter of Tyndarus, and likewise Achilles and Menelaus were introduced. To the song that has war and slaughter for its themes is opposed the bucolic strain, breathing peace and all that is pleasing and joyous.— $\check{a}\epsilon\iota\sigma\epsilon$ for $i\sigma\epsilon$, from $\dot{a}\epsiloni\delta\omega$ for $\check{e}\delta\omega$.

27-31. $\kappa \epsilon i \nu o \varsigma \delta'$ où $\pi o \lambda \epsilon \mu o \upsilon \varsigma$, &c., "the other, however, sang not of wars, nor of tears, but of Pan; and told in clear-toned strains of the keepers of herds, and pastured (the cattle) as he sang," i. e., told of herdsmen, and the scenes of bucolic and pastoral life.— $\beta \omega \tau a \varsigma$, Doric for $\beta o \upsilon \tau a \varsigma$.— $\alpha \delta \delta \epsilon a$, Doric for $\eta \delta \epsilon i a \nu$. This Dorico-poetic accusative is more commonly emcloved as a masculine ending, as, for example, $\epsilon \upsilon \rho \epsilon a \pi \delta \nu \tau o \nu$, &c.— $\pi a \delta \delta \omega \nu$, "of the young."— $\eta \rho \epsilon \sigma \epsilon$ from $d \circ \delta \tau \kappa \omega$. We have here retained the common reading, as in every respect superior to $\eta \circ \epsilon \vartheta \epsilon$, the lection of Valckenaer, Brunck, and others. Compare the version of Higtius: "et Cupidinem, Diona, fovit, acceptus, sinu."

33-34. ἄστεα πάντα. Supp¹y θρηνεῖ.— ^{*}Ασκρα. A town of Bœotia, situate on a rocky eminence belorging to Helicon, and famed, in the annals of poetry, as the residence of Hesiod.—γοάει for γοῷ.

179 LINE 35-38. Πίνδαρον. Pindar was a native of Thebes in Bœotia.—ποθέοντι, Doric for ποθέονσι, and this for ποθοῦσι.—οὐδὲ τόσον τὸν ἀοιδὸν, &c., "nor is the Teian city accustomed to mourn so deeply for its bard." The reference is to Anacreon, a native of Teios, in Ionia. Some editions read Κήΐον for Τήΐον, making the passage refer, not to Anacreon, but to Simonides, a native of Iulis in the island of Ceos. The lection Τήΐον, however, is regarded by Valckenaer as the genuine one, although he retains Κήΐον in the text. Τήΐον is given by two Paris MSS. and the Florence edition.—ἐμύρατο. Observe the force of the aorist.— ᾿Αρχιλόχοιο, "than her Archilochus." Archilochus was born in the island of Paros.—ἀντὶ δὲ Σαπφοῦς, &c., "and Mitylene still mourns for thy song, instead of that of Sappho." Observe the conciseness of expression in ἀντι δὲ Σαπφοῦς for αντὶ δὲ τοῦ μελίσματος Σαπφοῦς.—ἁ Μιτυλάνα. Doric for ή Μιτυλήνη.

40-46. $\tau a i \mu a \lambda a \chi a \iota$, Doric for a $\mu a \lambda a \chi a \iota$. Dioscorides (2, 3) and Theophrastus (1, 5) designate mallows as aliment, and the former of these authors makes the mallow of the gardens superior to the wild kind, as an article of food. — $\kappa \tilde{a} \pi \sigma \nu$, Doric for $\kappa \tilde{\eta} \pi \sigma \nu$. — $\tau \delta \tau' \epsilon \dot{\upsilon} \vartheta a \lambda \dot{\epsilon}_{\varsigma} \sigma \dot{\upsilon} \lambda \sigma \nu \dot{u} \nu \eta \vartheta \sigma \nu$, "and the verdant, crisped-leaf anise."- vorepov av ζώοντι, &c., "they afterward live again, and spring up for another year." ζώοντι, Doric for the common poetic form $\zeta \omega o v \sigma \iota$, and this last for $\zeta \tilde{\omega} \sigma \iota$.-- $\phi \dot{v} o v \tau \iota$, Doric for φύουσι.— μμμες, Doric for ήμεῖς.— δππότε πρᾶτα θάνωμες, "when once we have died." $\pi\rho\tilde{a}\tau a$, Doric for $\pi\rho\tilde{\omega}\tau a$, the adjective taken as an adverb. θάνωμες, Doric for θάνωμεν.—άνάκοοι έν χθονί κοίλα, &c., "sleep, un hearing, in the hollow earth, the long, long, endless sleep, from which we never shall awake." The melancholy flow of the line is heightened by the gloomy and chilling disbelief in a future state, which it seeks to inculcate. άνάκοοι, Doric for ἀνήκοοι.—κοίλα, Doric for κοίλη.—εὕδομες, Doric for εὕδομεν.—εὐ μάλα μακρὸν. This combination cannot we. be expressed by a literal version. We have endeavoured to convey the meaning by the repetition of the adjective. $-\kappa \alpha i \sigma v \mu \epsilon v \epsilon v \sigma \iota \gamma \tilde{q}$, &c. This verse is considered supposititious by Valckenaer. $-\sigma\iota\gamma\tilde{a}$, Doric for $\sigma\iota\gamma\tilde{\eta}$. $-\pi\epsilon\pi\iota\kappa\alpha\sigma\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\varsigma$ έσσεαι, "shalt remain hidden." Observe the continued action indicated by the perfect participle.—žooeal for žoel, common form žon.

METRICAL KEY.

I. EXTRACTS FROM HOMER.

1. The measure employed in these extracts is the Hexameter.

2. In Greek hexameters, and especially those of the Homeric class, when 'wo vowels come in contact, one at the end and the other at the beginning of a word, the following is the result :

(A.) Either the previous vowel is found to be elided by the poet; as, $\check{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\vartheta$ inave for $\check{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\tau a$ inave;

- (B.) Or, a long vowel, or diphthong, at the end of a word, loses a portion of its length before the vowel at the beginning of the next word; as, πύργῷ ἐφεστήκει;
- (C.) Or, in order to explain away the hiatus, we must have recourse to the intervention of the digamma, or else to some emendation of the text; though cases still remain where these expedients are nugatory, and where critical sagacity is completely baffled.*

3. In Greek, much more frequently than in Latin, hexameters, we find a short vowel lengthened by the Arsis, or stress of the voice on the first part of the foot. †

4. On the other hand, it is almost a constant rule, in the Greek epic poets, that if a word end in a long vowel, or a diphthong, and the next word begin with a vowel, the long vowel, or diphthong, becomes short.

5. The principle on which the preceding rule depends is as follows. The long vowels in Greek, namely, η and ω , are supposed to consist, in fact, of two short vowels, the η of $\varepsilon\varepsilon$, and the ω of oo. Hence, when the long vowel comes before another vowel, at the beginning of the next word, it loses one of its short component vowels by this collision, and the other remains, of course, short by nature.

6. In the same way, a diphthong loses one of its component vowels, and the other, if not short already, becomes so before the vowel at the beginning of the next word.

7. It must be borne in mind, however, with regard to diphthongs, that in q, η, ω , the subscript iota so far coalesces with the vowel to which it is appended as to be considered, in Homeric scanning, as forming only one sound with it. Hence q, η , ω , are to be here regarded as consisting, in fact, or only two short vowels, and not, as would otherwise be the case, of three.

8. But when the long vowel, or the diphthong, falls in the arsis of the foot, it retains its natural measure, because the stress of the voice then compensates for whatever the long vowel, or the diphthong, may have lost by collision with another vowel. An instance of this occurs in the fourth line of the first extract, page 155, where the final ω in $d\mu\phi\iota\pi\delta\lambda\omega$, after losing one of its two short component vowels before the initial vowel in the next word, has the remaining short one again lengthened by the stress of .he voice, the syllable $\lambda \phi$ being in the arsis of the foot $\lambda \bar{\phi} \ \bar{\epsilon} \bar{\nu}$.

9. In the remarks that follow, we will first call attention to such peculiarities, in a few lines, at the commencement of the first extract from Homer, as may serve to elucidate the rules that have just been laid down, and will then only note more important particulars.

FIRST EXTRACT.

LINE 4. $\pi a \bar{\iota} \delta \check{\iota} \kappa a \check{\iota}$, $\dot{a} \mu \phi \iota \pi \delta \lambda \phi$. The diphthong loses its final vowel before the initial vowel in $\dot{a} \mu \phi \iota \pi \delta \lambda \phi$, and the a that remains is shortened before the a in the next word. The ϕ in $\dot{a} \mu \phi \iota \pi \delta \lambda \phi$ has already been explained.

5. πυργῷ ἔφεστήκει. The ω loses one of the two component omicrons, and the remaining omicron continues short before the succeeding epsilon The iota subscript is not regarded as a separate vowel.

7. $\bar{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\eta$ $\bar{\epsilon}\pi'$. The η loses one of its two component epsilons, and the remaining one continues short before the succeeding vowel in $\dot{\epsilon}\pi'$.

9. $\pi \eta \ \tilde{\epsilon} \delta \eta$. The $\eta \ in \ \pi \eta$ loses one of its component epsilons, but the remaining one, being in the arsis of the foot, is again lengthened by the stress of the voice. On the other hand, the $\eta \ in \ \tilde{\epsilon} \delta \eta$, after losing one of its epsilons before the initial A in 'Avdopuá $\chi \eta$, keeps the other epsilon short, since this last-mentioned vowel is in the thesis of the foot, and is not, therefore, acted upon by any stress of the voice.

10. $\hat{\eta} \epsilon i v a \tau \epsilon \rho \omega v$. This hiatus can only be remedied by a change of reading, since we cannot have recourse to the digamma, $\epsilon i v a \tau \epsilon \rho \omega v$ not being a digammated word, as appears from line 15. As the $\hat{\eta}$ is in the thesis of the foot, it ought, strictly speaking, to lose one of its epsilons before the succeeding vowel, and then remain short.

24. $\mu \epsilon \gamma a \ a \sigma \tau v$. The hiatus here is prevented by the digamma: META FAZTY.

LINE 33. $\kappa \tilde{a} \lambda \tilde{\varphi}$. The first syllable of $\kappa a \lambda \delta \varsigma$ is long in Homer, short in Attic.

34. $\kappa \alpha \lambda \hat{\epsilon} \varepsilon \sigma \kappa \tilde{\epsilon} \Sigma \kappa \alpha \mu \hat{\alpha} \nu \delta \rho \iota o \nu$. The ε here remains short, though $\sigma \kappa$ follows. This license appears to have been allowed from the difficulty otherwise of introducing the proper name into verse. A similar license is found in the case of the double consonant ζ , before which Homer keeps a vowel short in such words as $Z \hat{\alpha} \kappa \nu \nu \vartheta o \varsigma$, $Z \hat{\epsilon} \lambda \varepsilon \iota a$. To remove these shortenings, Knight writes $\Delta \hat{\alpha} \kappa \nu \nu \vartheta o \varsigma$, $\Delta \hat{\epsilon} \lambda \varepsilon \iota a$, and refers, in support of his opinion, to the coins of Zancle (Messana), of the seventh century B.C., which give the name of the place in the old form, $\Delta ANKAH$. (Prolegom. ad Hom., § 79.)

35. $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\bar{\nu}\epsilon\tau\bar{o}$. From $\dot{\rho}\bar{\nu}\omega$, not from $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\bar{\nu}\omega$, which has the digamma (FEP- $\Upsilon\Omega$), and would consequently lengthen $\gamma\dot{a}\rho$ and vitiate the line. Compare the remark of Knight (Prolegom., p. 158, ed. Ruhkopf), in speaking of $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\bar{\nu}\omega$: "Verbum mire corruptum rhapsodorum et grammaticorum licentia; et cum PYF Ω ($\dot{\rho}\omega$) perpetuo confusum."

38. $\delta \rho \alpha \ ol = \chi \epsilon \iota \rho l \ \epsilon \pi \sigma c$. A double hiatus in one and the same line, but remedied, in each case, by the digamma : APA FOI—XEIPI FEIIOZ.

54. yuari 'Aidog The hiatus in this line induced Bentley to correct the verse as follows: of $\mu \hat{\epsilon} \nu \pi \hat{a} \nu \tau \epsilon \epsilon i \eta \kappa (o \nu \eta \mu \hat{\epsilon} \rho \eta Ai \delta o \epsilon i \sigma \omega$. It is better. however, to consider the hiatus as allowable here, from the circumstance of ηματι terminating a foot. (Consult Heyne, ad loc.)

PAGE 157.

LINE 75. $\kappa \alpha \kappa \delta \varsigma$ $\hat{\omega} \varsigma$. The final syllable of $\kappa \alpha \kappa \delta \varsigma$ is lengthened by the stress of the voice, it being in the arsis of the foot.

79. $\tau \delta \varepsilon$ olda. The hiatus here is remedied by the digamma: TOAE FOIΔA.

80. $\partial\lambda\omega\lambda\eta$ Ilios. The final syllable in $\partial\lambda\omega\lambda\eta$ ought properly to be short, since it comes before a vowel in the next word, and is, moreover, in the thesis of the foot. The digamma, however, remedies this : OAQAHI FIAIOS.

91. $\tau i \varsigma \epsilon i \pi \eta \sigma i \nu$. The pronoun $\tau i \varsigma$ is here lengthened by the stress of the voice, being in the arsis of the foot.

93. $\delta \tau \varepsilon$ "Iliov. Hiatus prevented by the digamma : FOTE FIAION. 94. $\tau \overline{\iota}_{\mathcal{S}} \dot{\epsilon} \rho \dot{\epsilon} \varepsilon \iota$. The pronoun again lengthened by the stress of the voice

LINE 101. $\dot{\eta}\delta\bar{\varepsilon} \lambda \delta\phi ov$. The final syllable of $\dot{\eta}\delta\hat{\varepsilon}$ is lengthened here by the stress of the voice. The old reading, $\chi a \lambda \kappa \delta \nu \tau \epsilon$, $i \delta \epsilon$, &c., produces an hiatus.

110. καὶ 'Ιλίου. The digamma (FIAIOY) prevents the diphthong's losing its final vowel before the initial vowel of 'I λ iov, and therefore κai remains long. Still, however, the line contains a violation of metre, for the last syllable of 'I λ iov cannot be shortened before $l\phi\iota$, since this last has the digamma (FIØI). The verse, therefore, is most probably an interpolation (the sense itself not requiring it), and must have been inserted by the rhapsodists at a time when the digamma had gone out of use. (Consult Heyne, ad loc.)

111. $\tau i \varsigma \epsilon i \pi \eta \sigma \iota$. The pronoun again lengthened by the stress of the voice.

125. $\tau o \tilde{\iota}$ 'I $\lambda i \omega$. The measure is vitiated here, and the line is consequently incorrect, since $\tau o \iota$ cannot be shortened before the initial vowel of Ίλί φ , this last having the digamma (FIΛΙΩΙ). Bentley suggests $\mu \dot{\alpha} \lambda \iota \sigma \vartheta$, ol Ίλίω. It is better, however, to regard the line as an interpolation, similar in its nature to that of verse 110.

127. $i\pi\pi\sigma\nu\rho\bar{i}\nu$. Final syllable lengthened by the stress of the voice. 132. $\dot{\epsilon}\nu\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\kappa\phi$. Hiatus prevented by the digamma : ENI FOIKΩI.

133. $\mu \bar{\nu} \nu$. Lengthened by the stress of the voice. The measure is violated, however, by the hiatus in $\xi \phi a \nu \tau o \ \upsilon \pi \dot{c}$, $\sigma \pi o \nu$, unless we insert γ' with Bentley, or else consider the cæsura of the verse as allowing such hiatus to exist.

SECOND EXTRACT.

PAGE 159.

LINE 6. $\delta\phi\rho' \epsilon i\pi\omega$. The verse is faulty here, since $\epsilon i\pi\omega$ has the digamma (FEIII Ω), and the a ought not to be cut off by apostrophe in $\delta\phi\rho a$. Bentley reads ὄφρ' αὐδῶ. The line, however, is probably an interpolation.

8. ¿µov. Last syllable lengthened by the stress of the voice.

9. $\tau \dot{a} \delta \varepsilon \, \dot{\epsilon} \rho \gamma a$. Hiatus prevented by the digamma : TA $\Delta E \, FEPTA$.

16 'At $\delta \varepsilon \omega$. Pronounced here, by synizesis, 'At $\delta \omega$, as if of three syllables. Observe how the accent indicates that the ω in 'Atoe ω is only a halflength. Hence this half-long ω , with the short vowel preceding it, are more capable of being pronounced as but one syllable.

18. $iva \ \epsilon i\delta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$. Hiatus prevented by the digamma: HINA FEI Δ ETE 21. av. Lengthened by the stress of the voice.

23. ἐθέλοιμι ἐρύσσαι. Hiatus prevented by the digamma: ΕΘΕΛΟΙΜ FEPYSSAI.

The following rule is laid down by Spitzner: "Particula yáp non minus, quam aliæ syllabæ breves, et in arsi et in thesi ante ol longa est, non solum in Homeri et Hesiodi libris, verum etiam in seriorum poëtarum operibus." 84. $\tau \delta \delta v$. Hiatus prevented by the digamma: TO FON. The words $\delta v \delta v \delta v$, however, present an hiatus for which there is no aid found is the digamma, $\epsilon i \kappa \omega$ not being a digammated word. Heyne, therefore, con siders the whole line an interpolation.

There is something erroneous here, since $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\pi\epsilon\tau a\iota$ is entitled to the digamma, but then EIII T' FEAIIETAI could never stand. Bentley conjectures KAI FEAIIETAI; and Heyne kai έέλπεται but thinks it likely that the early reading was $i\pi i \tau' i\lambda \delta i \tau ai$.

LINE 104. $\delta i \phi \rho ov \varepsilon \overline{i} \sigma a v$. As $\varepsilon \overline{i} \sigma a v$ is not entitled to the digamma, we must, in order to prevent the hiatus, make $\delta i \phi \rho ov \varepsilon$ - a dactyl (resolving the $\varepsilon \iota$ by diæresis), and must lengthen, by the stress of the voice, the first sylable of the next foot $-\overline{i}\sigma a v \varepsilon$ -. There is some error, however, most probably in the line.

(Consult Heyne, ad loc., and Spitzner, Vers. Her. Grac., p. 75.)

II. EXTRACTS FROM ANACREON.

I. The Anacreontic verse is generally ranked under the Ionic a minore class (- - -); it belongs, however, more properly, to the Ionic a majore kind (- - - -).

II. The poems which pass at the present day under the name of Anacreon are not genuine, but are the productions of persons who lived at a much later period, and some of whom appear to have been quite ignorant. Hence the doubt and difficulty to which they have given rise. III. As a great part of these poems consist of pure iambi, we ought to rank such, no doubt, with iambic, rather than Ionic, numbers; as, for example, the following: $\Theta \tilde{\epsilon} \lambda \tilde{\omega} \mid \lambda \tilde{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu \mid | \Lambda \tau \rho \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \delta \mid \alpha \varsigma$.

IV. But of those which are really fonic there appear to be two kinds; one with a monosyllabic, the other with a dissyllabic, anacrusis or base.*

V. The kind which has a monosyllabic anacrusis admits of two forms only, of which the proper one is this:

$$\bar{v} \mid - - \smile \smile \mid - -$$

while the other, which changes the dactyl of the Ionic foot into an amphibrach $(\frown - \frown)$, is as follows:

VI. The Anacreontics that have a dissyllabic anacrusis are divided into two forms or classes, as follows :

The first of these is much less used than the second. Sometimes the first long syllable is found resolved.

ODE I.

This ode consists of iambic lines throughout, namely, iambic dimeters catalectic, i. e., iambic dimeters wanting the last syllable. The iambus is admitted everywhere. Sometimes a spondee is found in the first place, but never in the second. The scanning is as follows:

 $\begin{array}{l} \displaystyle \varTheta \tilde{\epsilon} \lambda \tilde{\omega} & | \lambda \tilde{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu \mid | {}^{\sim} \Lambda \tau \rho \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \delta \mid a_{\mathcal{S}} \\ \displaystyle \vartheta \tilde{\epsilon} \lambda \tilde{\omega} & | \delta \tilde{\epsilon} \quad K \tilde{\omega} \delta \mu \mid | \delta \nu \quad \tilde{a} \delta \mid \epsilon \iota \nu \\ \bar{\eta} \quad \ell \tilde{u} \rho \delta \mid \tilde{\iota} \tau \tilde{\iota} \varsigma \mid | \delta \tilde{\epsilon} \quad \chi \tilde{\iota} \rho \delta \mid a \iota \varsigma, \& c. \end{array}$

ODE II.

The scanning in this ode is to be referred to Anacreontics with a dissyllabic anacrusis, as explained under δ vi. Variations, however, occur throughout.

Verses 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 16, are all scanned after the following manner, namely, two short syllables forming a dissyllabic anacrusis, then a double trochee (or pure trochaic syzygy), and finally two long syllables.

The measure is, therefore, Ionic a majore dimeter, brachycatalectic, with dissyllabic anacrusis, or $\frown [--] \frown - \frown [--]$, for it must be observed that the Ionic a majore verse admits a trochaic syzygy promiscuously with its proper foot $(--] \frown \frown$. The lines we have enumerated are therefore scanned as follows:

^{*} An anacrusis is a prefix of one syllable, or of two syllables, to a verse, and which are to be pronounced somewhat apart from the measure. A dissyllabic anacrusis is commonly styled a base. The anacrusis of an iambus is the part before the arsis.

 τὄ
 ρ δ δ ρ v τὄ
 τ δ v $τ \delta v$ $\tau \delta v$ \tau \delta v
 \tau \delta v<

Verse 2. In this line, the first of the included iambi has a long anacrusis $(\bar{\omega})$, the second a dissyllabic one $(\Delta i \bar{o})$.*

ἄνὰ μ*ĩξῶμε̄ν* Δἴὄν νσῷ.

5. In this line, the dissyllabic anacrusis is contracted into one long, and the third syllable of the trochaic syzygy is resolved into two short :

πί | νῶμἕν ἄβρἄ γἕ | λῶντες.

12. We have here a trochaic anacrusis, $\sigma \tau \hat{\epsilon} \psi \delta v$. The rest of the verse is similar to line 1.

13. In this line the first iambus has a dissyllabic anacrusis ($\Delta \breve{\iota} \breve{o}$ -).

πἄρά | σοῖς Δἴὄνῦσἕ | σῆκοῖς.

14. The Ionic a majore appears here in place of the trochaic syzygy. In other words, we have a regular verse.

μἕτά | κοῦρῆς βάθῦ | κολποῦ.

15. Here also, as in the preceding line, a regular Ionic a majore occurs $\dot{\rho} \delta \delta \tilde{\iota} \nu \mid \delta \delta \tilde{\iota} \nu \mid \delta \sigma \tau \tilde{\epsilon} \phi \tilde{\mu} \nu \mid \tilde{\iota} \sigma \kappa \delta \tilde{\iota} \varsigma$.

ODE III.

PAGE 171.

The measure of this ode is like that of the first one, $\Theta \hat{\epsilon} \lambda \omega \lambda \hat{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \iota \nu A \tau \rho \epsilon i \delta a \varsigma$. Thus,

ερāσ | μιτη || πελει | ā, &c.

ODE IV.

PAGE 172.

The measure of this is also the same as that of the first ode. Thus, $\sigma \tilde{\nu} \ \mu \tilde{\epsilon} \nu \ | \ \phi \tilde{\iota} \lambda \bar{\eta} \ || \ \chi \tilde{\epsilon} \lambda \tilde{\iota} \ | \ \delta \bar{o} \nu$, &c.

ODE V.

This ode, in its general features, resembles the second. Thus, the 2d, 4th, 7th, 8th, and 9th verses are scanned with the dissyllabic anacrusis, trochaic syzygy, and two long syllables :

^{*} Hermann maintains, that such a dissyllabic anacrusis is not allowed in Anacreontics, and therefore proposes to read $\Delta \varepsilon \dot{\nu} \nu \sigma \varepsilon$, a form which the grammarians say was actually employed by Anacreon. As, however, a similar dissyllabic anacrusis is used by the comic poets in choriambic verses, it might also have been employed in the Anacreontic lines, the author or authors of which were far from accurate, and were disposed, besides to avail themselves of every license.

X ăp $i \tau$ | $\bar{\epsilon}_{\varsigma}$ p δ δ \bar{a} β p \check{v} | o $\bar{v}\sigma\bar{v}$ ν ă π \check{a} | λ \bar{v} ν \check{v} τ a i γ \check{a} λ | $\bar{\eta}$ ν $\bar{\eta}$, &c.

VERSE 1. In this line the first of the included iambi has a dissyllable anacrusis; as,

ζδε | πῶς ἔἄρος φἄν | εντος.*

3. This line presents a regular Ionic a majore; as,

ίδε | πῶς κῦμἄ θἄλ | ἀσσῆς.

5. An Ionic a majore like the preceding :

ίδε | πῶς νησσα κολ | ῦμβα.

6. Scanned like the second, except that the second arsis, or second long syllable of the trochaic syzygy, is resolved into two short; as,

ίδε | πως γεράνος οδ | ευει.

10. In this line, if the common reading be correct, of which there are strong doubts, we have a second Pæon in place of an Ionic a majore, and the base consists of two long syllables, as,

κūρποις | ἴ γαϊά προ̆ | κῦπτει.†

11. If this line be genuine, which is hardly possible, it contains a resolution of the first arsis, and a lengthening of the anacrusis of the first iambus. The anacrusis of the line, moreover, is one long in place of two short. Thus,

κāρπ | ὄς ἕλαῑας πρὄ | κῦπτει.

12. In this line we have inserted $\tau \delta$ before $v \tilde{a} \mu a$, and the verse will then be scanned like the 13th of Ode II. Thus,

Βρὄμί | οῦ στἔφἔται τὄ | νāμā.

13. We have here a regular Ionic a majore.

κάτα | φυλλον κάτα | κλωνα.

14. By adopting in part Hermann's emendation of this line, namely, $\eta \nu \vartheta_{l\sigma\varepsilon}$, instead of the common $\eta \nu \vartheta_{\eta\sigma\varepsilon}$, we have here, as in the previous verse, an Ionic a majore. Thus,

κάθελ | ων ηνθίσε | καρπος.

ODE VI.

PAGE 173.

The scanning of this ode is like that of the first one. Thus, $\begin{array}{c} {}^{} \mathbf{E}\rho\bar{\omega}\varsigma \mid \pi\bar{\sigma}\tau' \ \bar{\epsilon}\nu \mid\mid \dot{\rho}\bar{\delta}\delta\bar{\sigma}\bar{\sigma}\mid \bar{\iota} \\ \kappa\bar{\epsilon}\bar{\mu}\bar{\omega}\mid \mu\bar{\epsilon}\nu\bar{\eta}\nu\mid\mid \mu\bar{\epsilon}\lambda\bar{\iota}\tau\tau\mid \bar{u}\nu, \ \&\mathbf{c}. \end{array}$

ODE VII.

The scanning of this ode is like that of the second one in its general leatures. Thus,

† Hermann reads, καρποίς γαία προκύπτει

^{*} Hermann reads, ίδε πως φανέντος ήρος.

METRICAL KEY.

μακαρ | ίζομεν σε | τεττίξ ότι | δενδρεών επ' | ακρών όλιγ | ην δρόσον πεπ | ωκως, &c.

VERSE 7. In this line the anacrusis is one long syllable, and there is als a resolution of the first arsis, or first long syllable of the trochaic syzygy Thus,

χώ | πὄσŭ φἕροῦσῖν | ῶραῖ.

8. Here also we have a resolution of the first arsis, but with the ordinary dissyllabic anacrusis. Thus,

σῦ δἕ | φἴλἴὄς εῖ γἕ | ῶργῶν.

ODE VIII.

The scanning is like that of the first ode. Thus, $\phi \tilde{\iota} \lambda \tilde{\omega}$, $| \gamma \tilde{\epsilon} \rho \tilde{\upsilon} \nu \tau | \tilde{\alpha} \tau \tilde{\epsilon} \rho \pi | \nu \tilde{\upsilon} \nu$, &c.

The extracts from Bion and Moschus are in the ordinary nexamete verse, and present no difficulty.
