THE

Life and Death

OF FAIR

ROSAMOND,

Concubine to King Henry the II.

KILMARNOCK:

Printed for the Booksellers.

FAIR ROSAMOND.

WHEN as King Henry rul'd this land, the second of that name; Besides the queen he loved dear, a fair and comely dame.

Most peerless was her beauty found, her favour and her face; A sweeter creature in the world could never prince embrace.

Her crisped locks, like threads of gold, appear'd to each man's sight, Her comely eyes like orient pearl, did cast a heavenly light.

The blood within her crystal cheeks did such a colour drive, As tho' the lily and the rose for mastership did strive.

Fair Rosamond, Fair Rosamond, her name was called so, To whom dame Eleanor our Queen, was known a deadly foe.

The King therefore for her defence, against the furious Queen, At Woodstock builded such a bower, The like was never seen.

Most curiously that bower was built,
 Of stone and timber strong,
 An hundred and fifty doors, did to this bower belong.

And they so cunningly contriv'd, with turnings round about,
 That none without a clue of thread, could enter in or out.

Now for his love and lady's sake, who was both fair and bright, The keeping of this bower he gave unto a valiant Knight.

But fortune that doth often frown, where it before did smile, The King's delight, the lady's joy, full soon she did beguile.

For why, the King's ungracious son, whom he did high advance, Against his father raised wars, within the realms of France.

But yet before our gracious King, the English land forsook, Of Rosamond, his fair lady, his farewell thus he took.

My Rosamond, my only Rose, who pleaseth best mine eye, The fairest flower in all the world to feed my phantasy.

The flower of my affected heart, whose sweetness doth excel, My royal Rose, a hundred times I bid you now farewell.

For I must leave my fairest Rose, my sweetest Rose a space, And cross the ocean into France, Proud rebels to debase.

But still my Rose, be sure thou shalt my coming shortly see,
 And in my heart, when hence I am, I'll bear my Rose with me.

When Rosamond, the lady bright, did hear the King say so, The sorrows of her grieved heart, her outward looks did show.

And from her clear and chrystal eyes the tears gush'd out a-pace, Which like the silver pearly dew ran down her comely face.

Her lips like to the coral red did wax both wan and pale, And for the sorrow she conceiv'd, her vital spirits fail.

And falling down into a swoon before King Henry's face, Full oft within his princely arms her body did embrace.

and twenty times with wat'ry eyes he kiss'd her tender cheek, Until he had reviv'd again her spirit, mild and meek.

Why grieves my Rose? my sweetest Rose, the King did often say, because, said she, to bloody wars my lord must pass away.

But since your Grace in foreign parts, among your foes unkind must go to hazard life and limb, why must I stay behind?

Nay, rather let me, like a page, thy sword and target bear, that on my breast the blow may light, that would offend my dear.

Let me in your royal tent prepare your bed at night, and with sweet baths refresh you there, as you return from fight.

If your presence may enjoy, no toil I will refuse;
 that wanting you my life is death, which doth true love abuse.

Content thyself, my dearest love, thy rest at home shall be England's sweet and pleasing court, for travels fit not thee.

Fair ladies, brook not bloody wars, sweet peace their pleasure breed, The nourisher of hearts content, whose fancy first did feed.

My Rose shall rest in Woodstock bower, with music's sweet delight, While I among the piercing pikes against my foes do fight.

My Rose in robes of pearl and gold, with diamonds rich and bright, Shall dance the galliards of my love, while I my foes do smite.

And you, Sir Thomas, whom I trust to be my love's defence, Be careful of my gallant Rose, when I am parted hence.

And here withal he fetch'd a sigh, as tho' his heart would break, And Rosamond, for very grief, not one plain word could speak.

And at their parting well they might in heart be grieved sore, After that day fair Rosamond the King did see no more.

For when his Grace passed the seas, and into France was gone, Queen Eleanor with envious heart, to Woodstock came anon.

and forth she calls the trusty Knight, who kept this curious bower, and with a clue of twisted thread, came from this famous flower.

at when that they had wounded him, the Queen his thread did get, and went where lady Rosamond was like an angel set.

at when the Queen with stedfast eyes beheld this lovely face, she was amazed in her mind at such exceeding grace.

st off, said she, these fine wrought robes, that rich and costly be,
and drink you up this deadly draught which I have brought to thee.

presently upon her knees, fair Rosamond did fall, and pardon of the Queen she crav'd, for her offences all.

the pity on my youthful years fair Rosamond did cry, let me not with poison strong be forced for to die.

will renounce my sinful life, and in some cloister hide, else be banish'd if you please, to range the world so wide.

And sure the fault which I have done, I was forced thereunto, Preserve my life, and punish me as you think fit to do.

And with these words her lily hands she wrung full often there, And down along her comely face, proceeded many a tear.

But nothing could this furious Queen herewith appeased be,
 The cup of deadly poison strong, which she held on her knee.

She gave this comely dame to drink, who took it from her hand, And from her bended knees arose, and on her feet did stand.

When casting up her eyes to heaven, she did for mercy call,
 And drinking up the poison strong, she lost her life withal.

And when that death thro' ev'ry limb had done its greatest spite, Her chiefest foes could but confess she was a glorious sight.

Her body then they did entomb, when life was fled away, At Woodstock, near to Oxford town, as may be seen this day.
