TIM UNGON-IT MOST SE PRINCAVED. " MONDAY MORNING, FEB. 2, 1825.

The following gentlemen are recommended for the Direct tors of the Union Bank by a large majority of stockholders with their duties, and feeling all the dignity which he longe to the sacred character with which they are invested, would never have manifested so great a susceptibility. With a view better to exhibit all the imperfection, felly and impruduce of the proceedings instituted by a portion of the memhere of the house, we shall proceed to examine the circum stance which produced them, for we have nothing to appre hend in making this warfare upon us public, which let it resuit as it may, can alone produce melancholy results to those who have been without sufficiently reflecting upon the conrequences, the instigators. We shall succintly and briefly explain our position towards the house. We are the state Explain our position towards the house. We are the state printer, an occupation which does not make us, as is pretended, an Overetz or the State, since we are not required to take an oath of office, as is every functionary of the state. We are simply a contractor with the state to do certain work for which it pays us, and nothing more. How, state. We are simply a contractor with the state to do cartain work for which it pays us, and nothing more. How, in that especity, can we be accused of having insulted the house, merely for replying to an attack male against us by one of its members? That member charged us with not having fulfilled our duties. We thought it indispensable to justify ourselves, and in doing this, we showed that his attack was undeserved. It, is true, that in a spirit of frankmess, but little parliamentary pethaps, we resented the imputation sought to be cast upon us. But if there was any thing which should have aroused the isedignation of the house, it was not the herskness of our language, but rather the improper assault which the gentleman shade, who, without knawing the cause, and in the most complete ignorance as to the work then upon sur hands, attributed to as a fault of which we are altogether guiltless. That the member of which we are altogether guiltless. That the member of which we are altogether guiltless. That the inember of which we are altogether guiltless. That the inember of the legislar which are also at the work then upon such contents and in the columns to the columns the formation of the columns the inemperature of forms are represented to be further preceded tain work for which it pays us, and nothing more. How, the improper assault which the gentleman made, who, without knawing the cause, and in the most complete ignorance whom we addressed complained of our resparks, that he thought himself offended, is not in harmony, as we should

thought himself offended, is not in harmony, as we should guidge, with those sentiments which should animate a man clevated to an eminent position in seciety; and we see every

Notwithstanding in similar circumstances we might have been disposed to excuse the member who aposthrophised is, for human weakness does not always lose its right; it speaks londer than reason; but that the whole house should have considered itself insulted in the person of one of its members, that it should take up his cause against seeing mificant an individual as ue, surpasses our belief. As a memorable instance of the great advantage of useful prince at all, a false position, and the public will have cause to regret that in investigating the question, more mode, ration was not shown, or rather that it sliculd not have been exhibited in its real point of view.

We have understood that it is the intention of the House to return again to the discussion of this question; we declare it to be out warment desire that they should further prosecute it, not upon our account as simple citizens, but on account of the principle ve have defended; and since we have had accusers, we wish now to have judges. It is at the House of Representatives,—but it is a question in which the fiberty of the press and the right of defence are involved corpower (or withdraw ourselves from the consequences).

Truly surprising.

It must be, else the House must triumph ever that I lierty of action which it has so impredently at tacked, or that great privilege triumph over the House. If that body thinks it proper to persist in the opinion it has incidentally emitted, that our article in answer to Mr. Bra-Shear was as insult to it, we shall be under the necessity of demanding for judges. It will be then that a most important question will be decided, whether the representatives of a free people have the right to attack the liberty of that people.

We perceive by our latest Washington papers, that a bill has been intreduced into congress, by Mr. King of this state, to authorize Mr. George Bidwell to import an Iran Steamboat, in detached parts, free of duty. A similar application is before congress in behalf of J. T. Lamar, which we notuced as me time since. The subject is one of importance to Alabama, and indeed to the Southern States generally. The value of an improved model of navigating our rivers, at low stages of the water, can hardly be estimated too highly.
