

BRIGHT SIDE OF WAR

PAUL WILLIAMS APPRECIATES THE GREAT LESSONS TO BE LEARNED BY AMERICANS

The following letter from Paul Williams to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Williams of 1228 Maple avenue, will be read with interest by his many friends here:

Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio,
June 26, 1918.

Dear Folks:
How am I going to write a letter when I have nothing to write about? I must at least make an attempt so that you may know that I am still on the map.

This experience that I am having and that I have had since I have been in the army has been worth more to me than I could have ever realized without actually being in it. It has been an experience that has taught me more about life and about people than I could have ever learned in civil life. The big thing too is that I am able to get it now, whereas in civil life it would come gradually and in hard knocks. There is one thing though that I appreciate more every day and that is my training at home. It has been that training that has enabled me to get the helpful experience that one can obtain in this life. Every day that passes I am thankful for the views of life that I have been taught to know and understand and the education that I have had and which I now am able to express to greater or less degree depending upon myself.

This war may be frightful and uncivilized, which it is, but it can carry with it the lesson which, if the American people only will learn, will be the greatest thing that could ever happen to the future generation. The world has worked itself into this situation and it is now feeling the pangs of its terrible destruction and can learn if it will open its sleepy eyes the utter uselessness and foolishness of this awful destruction. Everyone knows that there can be no material gain, so why should so many people as it has appeared to me from what I have seen hang on to what they were doing or try to continue to make that big profit with the expression that, "The war will soon be over so why shouldn't I make money while I can?" Some of these people have perfectly good intentions. That makes no difference. It is these people who are holding back not only in what they do but just as much, if not more, by the mental attitude that they convey. Until these people will learn that they and everyone must put heart, soul and body into this enterprise in order to stop this fire of hell from burning, we will not be gaining on the spreading flames. Until we learn to change our mental attitude in regard to this war we will not learn the lesson that is here to learn, which is, above all things, the spirit of working from a principle for a principle for one and all, that is, the destruction of all war and the building of nations. The value of the mental attitude has been proven by Germany, which has worked in the right manner, but it is the utter lack of principle of the Germans that has made her (as she should be) hated by all civilized countries and which has started this fire of hell which can be quenched only by unified thought and power. Until America learns that the work we apply as individuals must be for the progress of mankind as well as man, we will not win the war.

Well, this was quite an outburst and I do not know what I have said and done, so I will quit for a while and let it ride as such. If it is worth while, pass it on.

With the best of love for all,
PAUL R. WILLIAMS.

BIG QUOTAS

WORK WHICH GLENDALE RED CROSS IS EXPECTED TO ACCOMPLISH BY SEPT. 1ST

The quota of work to be turned out before September 1st by the Glendale Red Cross Chapter has just been received from Washington officials by Acting Vice-Chairman Olin Spencer. As inventoried by him it reads as follows:

- Knitting Department
    - 250 pairs of socks.
    - 25 sweaters.
  - Garment Department
    - 300 pairs of bed socks.
    - 200 girls' dresses, 8-year size.
    - 200 children's petticoats, 4-year size.
    - 200 pajamas.
- Mr. Spencer explained that these articles must all be made of new material and stated that the stocks are now on hand or have been ordered. The girls' dresses will be made of woolen material of brown or blue, probably of serge. Mrs. Lawrence Ellis, Chairman of Hospital Garments Section, will have general charge of this expansion of work, and should have the co-operation of every worker who has been associated with her in the past, and of every needwoman who is a patriotic citizen and member of the Red Cross. It is hardly possible to enroll two many workers for this great task.

Miss Coral Griffith and her associates in the Aviation Vest Department were busy yesterday. Twenty vests are now ready for shipment and more are in process of making. Miss Griffith says there is great need of gloves and other soft leather which can be used in this department and she asks that an appeal be made to citizens to again look over their stocks of gloves, old handbags, pillow tops, etc., and bring the gleanings to the Red Cross headquarters.

RED CROSS SHIPMENT

Six large boxes have been packed this week under the supervision of Mrs. A. S. Chase, Chairman of Packing for the Red Cross, which will probably go forward today together with four boxes containing 196 pairs of crutches, made by boys of the Manual Arts Department of the High School.

The inventory of articles prepared by the Knitting, Hospital Garment and Surgical Dressings Departments which were included in this shipment, was as follows:

- 58 Comfort bags.
- 960 Rolls gauze.
- 16 Comfort bags (unfilled).
- 9 Hot water bag covers.
- 80 Operating caps.
- 140 Operating gowns.
- 20 Operating masks.
- 1 Bed jacket.
- 4 Bed shirts.
- 145 Abdominal bandages.
- 445 Triangular bandages.
- 160 Scultetus.
- 35 Helmets.
- 16 Mufflers.
- 307 Pairs socks.
- 60 Sweaters.
- 10 Wristlets.

WORKERS SHOULD TRANSFER SERVICES

Acting Vice-Chairman and Manager Olin Spencer announces that the Surgical Dressings Department of the Glendale Chapter of the American Red Cross has not received its allotment of work for July and August, consequently there will be nothing doing in that department for a few days. As soon as work can be resumed you will be notified through this paper. In the meantime workers may transfer their help to the knitting or the hospital garment department.

It is requested by the department of production that the working force be transferred from one line to another. For the coming week the allotment of hospital garments is heavy and for surgical dressings and knitting light, so it will be to the advantage of the work to have the working force of the two latter departments transferred to the hospital garments department.

NO MORE LINEN

Mr. Moore of the Irish Linen Store received a letter Friday from a patron in Detroit, Michigan, to whom he has sold about $400 worth of goods within the past few months, enclosing an order and stating that no pure linen has been on sale in that city for three months. It is simply off the market. Mr. Moore says that the union linen, which is part cotton, is getting scarce, too, and the time is soon coming when American housewives will have to content themselves with "pure cotton" table linen, which is already being manufactured.

JOHN PURROY MITCHELL KILLED

RUSSIAN INTERVENTION URGED

INTER-ALLIED WAR COUNCIL'S RECOMMENDATION HAS REACHED PRESIDENT—ALLIED TROOPS IN RUSSIA

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)
WASHINGTON, July 6.—Immediate military and economic intervention in Russia is urgently recommended by the Inter-Allied War Council and General Foch. The Council's report reached President Wilson Wednesday. Allied diplomats believe he will concur with the wishes of the Council. If he refuses it is possible the other allies will act without the United States. It developed today that American, British, French and Japanese marines have landed at Vladivostok to guard the consulate there. England and France plans to land several thousand troops there and Italy has several thousand Dalmatians recently released as Russian prisoners there now. China and Japan are awaiting America's decision before announcing their plans.

ON THE BATTLE FRONTS

FOURTH OF AMERICAN FORCES ABROAD ARE ON BATTLE LINE—SECOND DIVISION HEROES AT VAUX

PACIFIC ELECTRIC CONFERENCE

FOUNDATION LAID FOR APPEAL TO WAR LABOR BOARD IN DIFFERENCE BETWEEN P. E. AND EMPLOYEES

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)
LOS ANGELES, July 6.—The foundation for an appeal to the War Labor Board for a settlement of the differences between the Pacific Electric and its employees who went on strike Tuesday was laid this morning at a conference between President Shoup, Captain Connell and Governor Stephens' mediation committee. It is understood that Connell is preparing a series of questions which Shoup will answer before Monday. President Shoup still refuses to recognize the recently formed union.

WILSON WANTS QUICK ACTION ON EMPOWERING BILL

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)
WASHINGTON, July 6.—President Wilson clashed with the Senate today over the question of passing the resolution empowering him to seize communication lines. While Senator Martin was sending a letter to the President declaring it was "absolutely impossible" for the Senate to act in this matter before recess, a messenger from the White House was en route to Senator Martin urging action. Senator Martin holds that passage of the measure is unnecessary as the President already has the authority he asks for, should he need it. Senator Overman holds that a law passed in 1866 gives him this power. Senator Borah fought for immediate action on the measure. Senator Lewis is the author of a bill creating a department of transportation and telegraph to manage government controlled utilities with a Secretary of Transportation and Telegraph as a new cabinet member.

SEARCH FOR DEAD IN ILLINOIS RIVER

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)
PEORIA, Ill., July 6.—Professional divers are searching the submerged decks and salon of the excursion steamer Columbia, which sank after midnight in the Illinois river. Sixty-four bodies have been recovered and nearly a hundred are missing. Telephone messages from the scene indicate that 11 more bodies have been located by the divers. A coroner's jury is starting a sweeping investigation.

The minutes of the adjourned meeting were read and approved. A communication was read from Francy and Lee in reference to the payment of delinquent taxes on Lot 78 of the Glendalia Park Tract instead of Lot 75 as intended, requesting a refund. On motion, referred to the Finance Committee.

A communication was read from Alfred M. Land requesting permission to shoot rabbits within the City of Glendale. The communication was referred back to the applicant to amend by statement as to where he expects to hunt.

Reports were presented from the Building Inspector, Tax Collector and the City Recorder.

The City Manager presented a communication and report in regard to the budget for the forthcoming year, setting forth in detail his estimates of the amount of money for the different departments.

Trustee Shaw called for the reading of a Resolution in regard to the adoption of the budget, and upon reading of the same, the resolution was adopted, on motion of Trustee Henry, as Resolution No. 1025, "A Resolution of the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale adopting budget for the departments of general government, public welfare, public safety and public works, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919."

Trustee Shaw made a motion, seconded by Trustee Henry, which was adopted, that preparations be made to have the Glendale City taxes assessed and collected by the County of Los Angeles for the year beginning July 1, 1919. ### RECLASSIFICATIONS

Messrs. Lanterman, Muhleman and Jones, members of the Exemption Board for the 7th County District, have been in session this (Saturday) morning examining certain men originally placed in deferred classes whose status is being reviewed under the "Work or Fight" instructions of the Government. The Board is awaiting information in regard to the employments of the majority of the men summoned, but some examinations have been effected and three new soldiers were secured this a. m. as a result, viz.:

Earl Price Thompson of Burbank, Orin Jesse Kinman of Lankershim, Joseph Stanley Nobles of Lankershim, all of whom have passed through the hands of physicians and been pronounced physically fit for general military service.

SAW LAUNCHING OF THE SHIPS

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Packer drove to San Pedro July 4th to witness the launching of the steel ships which were christened that day and on which we are depending so much for the winning of the war. While they were not near enough to hear all of the ceremonial, they secured a point of vantage where they could see them slip into the water and according to Mrs. Packer it was a most impressive vision and a most significant one in the present circumstances.

IMPORTANT RED CROSS MEETING

The directors of the Glendale Chapter of the American Red Cross and the heads of the various departments are requested to meet at Red Cross headquarters over the Bank of Glendale, Brand boulevard, Monday evening, July 8. Important business. By order of the Chairman,
J. H. BRALY.

THE MILITARY BALL

GREAT PATRIOTIC AND INSPIRING SUCCESS WARMLY APPRECIATED BY SOLDIERS

The military ball given by Masonic organizations of Glendale was a function which should go down in the annals of history. It was a beautiful affair and a revelation in more ways than one of the awakening to a sense of dignity and manhood which the war has wrought in the ranks of our soldiery. There has been much talk of the degeneracy of the dance and the exhibitions offensive to a fastidious taste which are to be seen on the floor of every modern ball room. For that reason the dignity and beautiful courtesy shown by the boys in khaki from Companies C and D of the Coast Artillery, who were the guests of honor Friday night, was a joy to behold. It was a dance which should have been seen by every carping critic. The boys seemed to appreciate to the full the spirit which prompted the courtesy, and most anxious that their hosts and hostesses, their partners and all Glendale should realize that they appreciated it and would always remember it.

Ideal music was furnished by the Imes three-piece orchestra and dancing began at nine o'clock. Only about one-third of the soldiers were on the floor at that time as they were late in leaving camp. When all were assembled and the grand march took place, led by Miss Della Marie Echols, Matron of the Eastern Star, there were one hundred soldiers who at the close lined up sixteen abreast at attention opposite the big flags on the platform, stood at attention and saluted the Stars and Stripes while the orchestra played "The Star-Spangled Banner." It was an impressive scene and one which will not soon be forgotten.

Another feature which marked it as more than simply a dance was the beautiful little speech of farewell which Miss Cora Hickman, Past Matron of the Eastern Star, was delegated to make on behalf of the Masonic bodies who were acting as hosts and hostesses. She said exactly the right things, which were cheerful and inspiring and told them that in giving them to the cause we had given our best. For that reason we were ready to give them the best we had and we were doing it in giving them the best and prettiest girls Glendale possesses as partners in this last function in their honor. She declared that it will be the happiest moment in the life of every American when our boys march down the Unter den Linden in Berlin to "Yankee Doodle" or "The Star-Spangled Banner," as we know they will, because that will mean real victory for the Democracy of the world, and until that moment comes, no satisfying victory is possible. The deafening applause of the boys testified to the unity of sentiment and later the boys individually thanked her for the speech.

The orchestra played until 12 o'clock and the concluding numbers were "The End of a Perfect Day" and "Aloha." As the strains died away the girls and women present gave a cheer for the soldiers, who sprang to the center of the hall and in mass formation gave three cheers and a tiger for the girls and for Glendale which nearly lifted the roof and which must have awakened every sleeper within many blocks. They declared that when they broke camp this morning, which they would do at 8 a. m., they would give Glendale a parting salute in which they would try to express their real appreciation.

Dr. R. V. Hogue, Ben Wilde and Robert Grumbling constituted the original committee of arrangements for the ball, but others in the Masonic bodies promptly rallied to their assistance. Messrs. Echols, Rattray and Priaulx constituted the committee having charge of the refreshments which consisted of delicious fruit punch (with no stick in it), Miss Della Marie Echols and Mrs. M. Ogden Ryan supervised the beautiful floral decorations. Others who assisted as hosts and chaperones were Mrs. Adelaide Imler, Miss Cora Hickman, Mrs. R. V. Hogue, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rattray, Mr. and Mrs. Clem Moore, W. A. Echols, Thomas D. Ogg, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Beamon, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Chase, Mrs. S. A. Pollock, Mr. and Mrs. E. U. Emery.

The swelling tide of patriotism which dominated the affair demonstrated its ennobling influence in a really wonderful manner, and it is doubtful if Glendale has ever witnessed as brilliant and impressive a ballroom scene as was presented at the Masonic Temple last night. It must prove a very pleasant memory to the boys who expect to leave our coast within a very few weeks to go they know not where.

SUBMARINE SINKINGS

As usual, there is a wide margin between the British and German figures for submarine sinkings—a difference of nearly 300,000 tons for May. The fact is, that, after almost a year and a half of unrestricted U-boat warfare, it has been pretty well established that the German Admiralty consistently exaggerates shipping losses. If this were not so, we could not have a million troops in France today, and the Allies would, at the present time, be starving. The British official figures are, on the whole, very reassuring. There has been a slight decrease since April in British tonnage sunk, but, at the same time, a slight increase in Allied and neutral tonnage accounted for by Germany. But as compared with any other month in 1918, the current showing is excellent. Only January, the worst season for undersea operations, did better by a scant 2000 tons. Meanwhile, shipbuilding has caught up with current ship-destruction. England alone built nearly enough vessels in May to overcome her own losses. Our production of 263,000 tons during the same month not only made good England's deficit of 28,000 tons, but the losses as well of our own marine and those of our allies and the neutrals. In fact, after making good all losses, there was a considerable figure to the credit side of our ledger the very considerable number of vessels built by France and Italy and the neutrals. The submarine menace has been met.

DEPORTED I. W. W.'S FILE DAMAGE SUITS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

TUCSON, Arizona, July 6.—Two hundred men of the 1200 deported from Bisbee a year ago have filed claims aggregating $4,000,000 against a railroad company, a copper company and fourteen individuals, alleging unlawful removal. In most cases they asked $10,000 actual damages and $10,000 punitive damages.

CITY TRUSTEES

 which upon being read was on motion of Trustee Henry adopted as Resolution No. 1027.

Trustee Muhleman asked for the reading of a resolution fixing the salaries of the members of the Fire Department, and the same upon being read was on motion of Trustee Muhleman adopted as Resolution No. 1028. "A Resolution of the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale fixing the salaries or compensation of the members of the Fire Department and rescinding Resolution No. 891."

Trustee Muhleman called for the reading of a resolution fixing the salary of City Attorney, Health Officer, Recorder, Milk Inspector, City Forester and Assistant City Forester. The same was read and amended by striking out Section 1 fixing the salary of the City Attorney, and as amended the Resolution was adopted as Resolution No. 1029. "A Resolution of the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale fixing the salary of Health Officer, Recorder, Milk Inspector, City Forester and Assistant City Forester, and rescinding all resolutions in conflict therewith."

A resolution was presented declaring weeds growing upon certain lots to be a nuisance and on motion was adopted as Resolution No. 1030. "A Resolution of the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale declaring weeds growing upon and in front of certain lots in said City to be a public nuisance."

Trustee Henry called for the reading of a resolution providing for the organization of the Glendale Police Department, and the same upon being read was, on motion of Trustee Shaw, referred back to the City Manager to be redrafted.

A motion of Trustee Shaw was adopted, instructing the City Attorney to prepare an ordinance limiting the length of time vehicles may be parked in any one place on a public street.

The City Attorney submitted a report in regard to the petition for the annexation of Syramore Canyon District, to the effect that while the petition is legally sufficient, there is a serious question as to whether or not the territory embraced within the petition, when taken as a whole, can fairly be said to be inhabited territory, as all of the residents thereof reside in a very limited portion of the same; recommending that the petition be declared not sufficient for this reason, and that the parties be given an opportunity to reform the territory so as to comply with the suggestions contained in this communication. On motion of Trustee Henry the petition was declared insufficient in accordance with the recommendation of the City Attorney.

A motion of Trustee Shaw was adopted, instructing the City Attorney to take up with the Capital Issues Committee the question of the issue of bonds for Municipal Improvement District No. 2; that he prepare the necessary papers, and that the proper officials are hereby instructed to sign the same.

On motion of Trustee Shaw, Ordinance read at the last meeting, changing the names of certain streets, was declared adopted as Ordinance No. 337. "An Ordinance of the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale, changing the name of certain streets in said city."

On motion of Trustee Muhleman, the ordinance read at the last meeting approving annexation of Kenilworth District, was adopted as Ordinance No. 338.

On motion of Trustee Shaw, it was ordered that the sum of $90.00 be appropriated from the Advertising and Promotion Fund for keeping open during the summer the playgrounds at Magnolia avenue school.

On motion of Trustee Shaw, a committee consisting of John A. Logan and Enima V. Bacon was appointed to have control of the above playground.

DOLORES

By Margaret A. Henderson
 For an instant the man stood as in a dream, before him in the twilight the girl he had thought so lovely.

Her frock, which reached nearly to her shoe tops, was of sheer pink lawn, its low round neck and elbow sleeves finished in narrow, lace-edged ruffles. She wore a buff-colored sash and large leghorn hat with a bit of the same buff ribbon around the crown and ending with a generous bow and streamers in the back, while a wreath of small, pink roses pressed close to the broad drooping brim. She threw around her a cape of soft, white woolen material with wide rippling collar lined with light blue satin and embroidered in clusters of forget-me-nots.

"The most beautiful thing I ever saw," said the man almost aloud, as she tied the long blue silken strings beneath her dimpled chin. Dolores chatted sociably as they sped over the country roads, the man listening as he would to the prattle of an innocent child, talking little excepting to start her on a new theme when she would lapse into silence.

"You will call me a chatterbox if I talk so much," she said, laughing. "A dear little chatterbox," he replied with a sigh, as he felt the yearning in his soul for a sweet little girl like this one by his side.

Upon their return, when Jose lifted her from the buggy as though she had been a doll, a sudden light shone in her eyes and she exclaimed, "Now I know; now I know."

"I do not understand you. What did you say?"

"Oh! I was talking to myself—how impolite of me," and she blushed at the thought of her shortcomings, "but I'll tell you."

"The day you met me on the bridge, I thought I had seen you before, and I have tried and tried to think where. Now I know, and I am so glad. But I really had not seen you at all—it was my father who was in my mind. He was tall and broad and strong like you. Your voice is soft like his and you laugh just as he used to laugh when I'd run my fingers through his thick black curls and sometimes pull his hair."

"I see," said the man, and the thought of those dainty fingers playing with his own curly locks sent a quiver through his stalwart frame.

"It all came back to me," she continued, "when you caught me in your arms just now as he has done so many, many times. Now I remember," she mused, "my own dear father," and with a half sad smile she clasped the hand of the surprised Mexican as she said "good night" and for the first time in her life Juan Ortega's little girl realized that she was alone in the world.

There were other drives—why not? Dolores looked forward to them now. "How fortunate," she would say to herself, "to have such a good friend. I never, never was so happy before," and her child mind thought it was the outings that made her happy. She did not know her own soul well enough to realize it was the man.

"Jose," she said one evening as they were driving slowly home, "I'm so happy I'm almost bubbling over."

"That's good," he answered, amused. "You know," she went on, "I was making blanc mange this morning and before I knew it I sputtered over and burnt my hand," and the little white hand was silhouetted there in the moonlight.

He hid it for a moment in his own broad palm as he said sympathetically, "I'm so sorry."

"But I was going to say," she continued, hardly noticing the interruption, "that I am so full of joy I just sputter it out like the blanc mange."

"And sear my very soul," he groaned in an undertone. "Dolores," he said presently, "I'd give the whole world to be as happy as you are."

"Why, aren't you happy, too, Jose?" and eyes filled with wonder gazed into his own.

"No, child, I am very, very sad."

"You're joking, Jose, how could you be sad when everything is so lovely and we are having such a good time?"

"It may seem strange," he answered, as though analyzing his own thoughts, "but, no, my sorrow is a stern reality."

"Reality," she echoed with a toss of the head that sent her hat back to her shoulders, "means something real, I suppose, so perhaps, after all, you are only joking. Because Mrs. Stevens says only good is real and surely sorrow isn't good."

He shook his head. "I wish it were true, dear."

"Well, let's make believe it is true, Jose, then we shall both be happy."

"But, Dolores, suppose—"

"Suppose what?"

"Well, suppose you saw something that you wanted very much and you couldn't have it—what would you do?"

"Why, I suppose," she replied slowly in tones a solemn as his own, "I suppose I should grab it and run away." Then she laughed that infectious, happy laugh and Jose laughed too as she had never heard him laugh before.

"But," still laughing, "what is it you are going to grab?"

"Why, you, my little care-killer, of course."

"But you don't need to grab me—I'm already here."

"I want you close to me, Dolores." "Close to you! What a funny man you are, Jose. Can't you see you are so big you nearly fill the buggy? I have to sit close to you."

"But Dolores, I want you always." "Always," and her eyes met his. "Yes, that would be nice, but you are too busy to have me always. Did you know we are home now, Jose?"

Four weeks later Dolores was settled in her own little home.

"We will go down to San Diego to be married," Jose had said, and stay a while there. Then you shall furnish the little flat to suit yourself." He had found a brand new one in the south part of town and Dolores had selected the furnishings, to the finest detail. Everything was in perfect order now.

"How lovely to have such a pretty home, and you, all to myself, my own, my very own," she said to Jose, but he made no reply. With an inaudible sigh he caressed the happy girl and went his way.

Time passed quickly. Who could wish a better fate than had befallen the simple, childish, trusting Dolores? Jose was always gentle and kind. Every day she compared him with her father, whose memory he had revived. To be sure, she was much alone, but Jose had told her his work was mostly out of town, so she was prepared for this, and with the little home to care for and her fancy work, which she adored, she was never lonesome, although she looked forward continually to Jose's coming.

So the weeks lengthened into months with never a care, a cross word nor look to mar their happiness.

On afternoon as she sat on the little veranda sewing, she was seized with a desire to see Jose. He had been home to lunch but would not be back until tomorrow noon, he had said, and she might have a little dinner for him then. There was nothing unusual in this and heretofore she had not seemed to mind. But today, she could not tell why, she was so uneasy, if she could only speak to him before he left the city, she would be herself again. No, she must not go to him, Jose would not like that. There were always so many of his men around, he had told her, and she would not displease Jose, no, not for the whole world. But the more she thought of him the more uneasy she became.

Finally it occurred to her that she might call him on the telephone. It was after five o'clock now. She would hurry, perhaps he had not left and if she could only hear his voice she would be happy.

The drug store was only a few blocks away but she walked so fast her hand trembled as she held the transmitter.

A faint feeling came over her as "just gone" came to her ear, in response to her earnest inquiry.

"I'm so sorry. I wanted to reach him tonight," she replied before she realized she was speaking.

"Yes?" came back the voice from the other end. "Then you can find him at number ..... street."

She had never heard of the street before, but surely she could find it and Jose would not be offended if she went this once. Indeed, she rather felt that he would be glad, because she should be happy then, and Jose always wanted her to be happy.

She asked an officer on the corner if he knew where that street was.

"Sure," he replied, "it's in Sonoratown."

"But where is Sonoratown?"

"Well, just take this car that's coming and show that paper to the conductor and he'll put you off right."

"Can I get there before dark," she ventured timidly.

"Sure, it's just beyond the Plaza. Now, here you are," and the genial officer fairly lifted her aboard the waiting street car.

Strange, she had gone over this same road many times during the two years she had lived with Mrs. Stevens and yet had never heard of Sonoratown.

"Your stop, lady," called the conductor. "Go two or three blocks that way (pointing west) and you'll come to your street; then turn to the left and you're there."

She nodded her thanks and walked hurriedly in the direction indicated. It would not be dark for more than an hour yet. How glad she was.

It was a warm evening in June and the street was lively with children playing everywhere, while grown folks, in little groups, chatted and laughed, apparently as care free as the children themselves.

She noticed all were Mexicans. Sonoratown then, was the Mexican settlement, but here was her street, and she turned to the left.

The street was unpaved, but there was no work being done upon it so far as she could see, and there was no evidence of a grading camp as she had expected. Surely she had misunderstood, and after all she would not see Jose who was doubtless now at some distant camp, but she would go to the end of the block any way.

She had never been in this part of town before and it interested her greatly. She looked for numbers, but there weren't any. But here was a house that attracted her attention. It was a broad, flat adobe with a veranda across the entire front. The house had recently been given a coat of whitewash, there was not a blemish on it—the door and window frames were painted a bright blue

SERVICE FLAGS

In a window on a quiet street,
 Two service stars were hung so neat,
 Side by side they hang each day
 In honor of the lads who went away.
 One in the khaki colors true,
 The other in the navy blue.

A mother gave them with a proud
 but aching heart,
 To their country's call, each one to do his part,
 Praying each night to God above
 To bring back her boys to home and love.

Oh, God, from your great white throne above,
 Look down on these boys with pity
 and love,
 And grant that this sacrifice may not be in vain,
 And that all will be peace on earth
 again.

As a help to housekeepers who are in the midst of the canning season, Mrs. G. H. Rowe of this city is spreading the information that Karo or Corn Syrup can be used to advantage with fruits like peaches and apricots for which a syrup is used. Her proportions are two cups of sugar to one-half cup of syrup, and she says it makes a combination which gives the fruit a fine flavor and conserves sugar.

Miss Marie Carter, who has been conducting a Bible Class at the home of Mrs. A. B. Morrison, 1327 Colorado street, closed the class with the completion of the Book of Acts. Miss Carter is a graduate of the Bible Institute under the teachings of Dr. R. A. Torrey and Dean Evans. She is a very efficient teacher and is of pleasing personality.

Chapter A. H. of the P. E. It was well attended and marked by great enthusiasm.

He and Mrs. Hazard have been active in Red Cross work ever since the war began and she has just completed a six weeks' home service course in Los Angeles which deals with the relief of the families and relatives of soldiers. She will be here for a day or two and will then return to San Diego, to resume her Red Cross work there.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Logan kept open house and entertained relatives and friends for the afternoon and a picnic supper to the number of about forty, Independence Day. Their guest list included the Hobbs, Stephenson and Ripley families, Mrs. Ella Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Rudling, and other friends who dropped in informally. Their nephew, Dwight Stephenson, came up from San Diego and three soldiers boys of the Coast Artillery were there from San Pedro. Mrs. Hallie Ilse, who was also a guest, read letters from her son Jim Henry. In the evening the young people attended the dance at the home of Mrs. Richardson.

ENDOWMENTS

Most people regard an Endowment Policy as purely a 10, 15 or 20 year proposition with a high premium and consequent small protection for a given amount of money, so they condemn it as being unsuited to most men's insurance needs.

Except at the older ages I rarely recommend a short Endowment for men, but at the younger and middle ages an Endowment maturing at 60 or 65 has many advantages over any other form and when every feature of the case is considered, is ideal.

"Ordinary Life" and 20-Pay Life is Endowment at age 96, and if their Endowment features were removed very few men would buy them.

Let me show you how little sacrifice is required to reduce that maturity by 30 or 35 years.

WRITES TO MOTHERS

American Red Cross
 Base Hospital
 Camp Lewis, Washington,
 June 28th, 1918.

Mrs. E. W. Richardson,
 805 South Central St.,
 Glendale, Cal.

My dear friend:

My one desire has been to write you a personal note, telling of your loved one's departure for overseas Thursday night, June 27th.

Only too well do I appreciate your sacrifice, since I myself have had to make the same. Captain Thornberry was so desirous of reaching every home represented by his men with a personal letter, but this being impossible, I have promised to do this myself, since his boys are mine.

We truly feel as parents to our beloved boys of Company B. They say "love is blind" and perhaps it is in our case, for we see absolutely no imperfections in our flock—we love each alike. You may rest assured that every care will be taken of them by Captain Thornberry, and no sacrifice will be too great in order to bring every one safely home.

How proud you would have been to have seen the splendid line-up in front of the barracks. Every man eager to get started. They knew it was no play, but a big game of life and death they were entering, and each felt the sooner he was engaged, the quicker would come the victory.

As few of their mothers or sisters could be there, I took the position (as I have tried to take ever since they came into the Company) of mother, and every boy is dear to me. The last thing as the train pulled out, they reached out eager hands with "Good-bye, Mother, we'll see you 'Over There,'" and I promised them to write and let you know how brave and noble they were.

Captain Nyman and I, co-workers in the Base Hospital as Red Cross representatives, hope to follow our boys overseas shortly, working in a still larger capacity than here for this wonderful organization. It will be such a pleasure to be able to keep in touch with dear ones at home, especially during any illness the boys may have. So while Captain Thornberry has the privilege of "Fathering" them, through the efforts of the noble Red Cross, I shall doubtless be permitted to "Mother" these precious boys again.

Proud indeed are we of them, and will do our best to protect and care for each and every one of them.

Sincerely yours,
 GENEVIEVE C. THORNBERY.

Forces are being lined up for the big Epworth League meeting which will begin a week from next Monday at Huntington Beach and which will be attended by many members in Glendale. It will be followed by the Methodist Assembly of Southern California.

DON PACKER MAKES GOOD

Don Packer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Packer of this city, who has been taking a Master Gunner's course at Fort Scott, San Francisco, and who recently passed his examinations with honor, left last Sunday for Fortress Monroe, where he has probably arrived by this time, and where he will enter upon a three months' course in an officers' training camp. It is said to be the only officers' training camp for the Coast Artillery, and its graduates when sent abroad are enrolled in the heavy artillery ranks. His parents have been made very happy by the splendid record he has made, being one of 35 out of the 225 students who took the course who passed the technical examinations satisfactorily and the physical examinations to which they were subjected at the close of the course, all of which were very exacting, as was the entire training, which was calculated to test the mental and physical endurance of every man who took it. The list included many college graduates and some professors. Don declared he could never have made good had it not been for his college training. He also says the physical tests are quite severe. He has been called upon to take about fifty physical examinations to date and the end is not yet. Before leaving for Fortress Monroe he spent three days with his parents in Glendale.

FAREWELL RECEPTION

An audience which filled the auditorium gathered at the Baptist church Friday evening for a farewell reception to the pastor, Rev. Vernon H. Cowser, who recently tendered his resignation and accepted a call to Corning, California, in the Sacramento Valley. The church had been beautifully decorated for the occasion.

A short but pleasing program had been arranged by the committee, of which Mrs. Houdyshele was chairman, the first number of which was "America," sung by the audience to an accompaniment furnished by Mr. Lowinsky.

Roy Kent made a little address of farewell in which he expressed the feeling of loss which the church experienced in severing relations with Mr. Cowser, and also tendered him the good wishes of the church and congregation and a Godspeed in the new field he is about to enter. His sentiments were reinforced later by Deacon Maxwell, who said it would be difficult to fill the place which has been made vacant by this resignation, and he bespoke the patience of the church towards the officials in their attempts to deal with the problem.

Other numbers on the program were a reading by Miss May Wright and a whistling solo by Miss Green.

In his speech of response Mr. Cowser expressed the hope that the church would prosper in all ways and said he did not like to dwell upon the thought of farewell. He closed by quoting a very beautiful poem appropriate to the occasion, which was written by a personal friend, now dead.

Following the program an informal social hour was enjoyed and friends of the pastor and his wife were given an opportunity to make their adieus and also to greet Vernon Cowser, Jr., and his bride, who were likewise guest of honor.

CONGRESSMAN RANDALL AND HIS RECORD

Editor Glendale News:

I regret to see that an injustice is being done to Congressman Randall. For while he is diligently attending to his duties at Washington, his competitors and political opponents are holding conferences, and while they can not agree at all as to the process of elimination of candidates they all join in a chorus of condemnation of Congressman Randall, somewhat based on facts and again not based on the truth. It is true that Mr. Randall did not vote for the United States to enter the war. I wish he had. But he did not. He made the mistake of thinking it could be averted. And so did some other good people think likewise. Henry Ford, Dr. David Starr Jordan, Wm. J. Bryan, Congresswoman Helen Rankin and even President Wilson have all been berated because they favored war as a last resort. The question that confronts the honest voter is not so much how men differed before war was declared as to their actions since. If C. H. Randall has opposed the president's war policy and voted against it he should not be re-elected. If, on the other hand, he has consistently assisted it by voice and vote, he deserves reelection and it is to the interest of the 9th Congressional District to see that he is returned. Mr. Randall has been a conscientious, painstaking and hardworking official, always at his task, and the voters of this district will want to hear both sides before making a decision. A conference of office seekers is not noted for rendering unbiased decisions. Let us have the facts in the case, not a general blanket charge that "he has opposed the president." I do remember that in one instance he differed with the president. When he voted that ex-President Roosevelt be permitted to go to France in charge of a regiment. Perhaps this is one of the votes referred to. An American principle of law is that no one is guilty until proven so. Let's give Mr. Randall the same fair treatment, the man who is the central figure in the fight to outlaw the German brewer and distiller, who are at this very hour robbing the children and poor of the sugar and bread they so much need, also our soldiers and allies, and the fight is still on. Let's be fair and hear both sides.

W. F. TOWER,
 Glendale.

The editor of the Evening News is firmly of the opinion that no man should be re-elected to Congress who in any way opposed military preparedness in the United States since the opening of the war in Europe in 1914. The man who was not sufficiently broad to get the "preparedness vision" before the war will not be sufficiently broad to get the "peace treaty vision" at the close of the war. Millions of young men have been drafted into service and owe it to them to place in Congress men who have a clean record on the preparedness question. It was on account of a lack of preparedness on the part of this country that brought on such strenuous war conditions, and a lack of wise decisions in the closing of the war will cause additional embarrassment for this country and all allied nations.

A SONNET TO A SERVICE FLAG

Written by Mrs. Edith L. Y. Braswell, formerly of Glendale.
 O Service Flag!

You are making our hearts so sad,
 With your stars of deepest blue,
 That represent our sons, so loyal and true;
 And your border, the color of blood so red,
 That was gladly given and will be bravely shed;
 But, if it should be His will
 That our hopes and prayers He would fulfill
 And safely back our boys may come—
 Not a few of the number,
 But every one—
 Our minds will be at rest, and our hearts be glad.
 Then take out your stars,
 O Service Flag!

By W. D. GILMAN,
 Deputy Sheriff.

Just as a Mighty Oak

Can grow from a small acorn—so can a fortune grow from a small bank account.

Both when well started have a steady growth. You can start your account this month. Even though it be a small one at first, if you will steadily add to it in a few years you will have a capital worth working for.

If you live in Glendale, make up your mind to start an account in this Glendale Bank and watch your money grow with the bank and the town.

DOLORES

and around the roof was a picket fence about a foot and a half high of the same bright color.
"What taste," she said to herself, and for a moment forgot her disappointment.

The next house was rich and modern by contrast. It was of red brick, set well up from the ground, with a bay window of wood on the protruding half of the front, while a six-foot porch extended across the other half and well around the side. The wood-work was gray and newly painted, madeira vines, now a mass of blossoms, climbed over the porch to the roof, and the yard was bright with flowers of every hue and color. This, thought Dolores, was once the home of some rich Mexican.

Now her eyes rested upon a young woman leaning on the heavy iron fence as she talked sociably with two others in the adjoining yard. These people were different from any she had ever known, still they interested her. The young woman was rather pretty, with straight, jet black hair combed back from her forehead and caught in a knot at the neck. She was large and untidy in appearance, but clean; her skirt was of blue, gathered full at the waist and her pink blouse loose and turned in at the neck. A pretty, chubby baby in a bright red slip was thrown carelessly over her shoulder amusing itself with the flower in its mother's hair.

"How odd!" thought Dolores, as she walked on leisurely.

Two little boys were romping with a dog on the lawn at the side of the house, and a bay horse grazed near by. In a chair, tilted back against the house, a paper in his hand and his head down as though asleep, sat a large man. Dolores hesitated a moment. It couldn't be—yes, the man was Jose.

Dolores busied herself with the noonday meal. Jose would soon come and she must have a nice lunch ready. But how tired she was! She had not slept yet. She could not recall how she had gotten home the night before. Something was wrong and her head ached so. But Jose would make it right, dear Jose, and while she mused the object of her confiding love caught her in his arms.
"Dolores, Dolores, what have you done?" he exclaimed when she had told him her experience of the day before, and sinking upon the couch he buried his face in the cushions and his giant frame shook as though he were in an ague.

"O, Jose, is it so bad? I did not mean to hurt you. Tell me, Jose, what have I done?" she pleaded as her fingers played nervously with his curly hair.

With a mighty effort he regained his self control and, taking the bewildered girl in his arms caressed her tenderly.
"No, no, Dolores, you have done nothing. You are an angel, a dear, innocent child, and I should have protected you. Instead I have put this awful blight upon your sweet young life."

"But, I do not understand, Jose."
"You will despise me, Dolores, but I will not deceive you longer, and may God forgive me this heinous sin, but I was young when I married—"

"Married!" she repeated, as the truth dawned upon her.
He seemed not to hear. "I was not twenty, Dolores," he continued, "my character was not formed nor my tastes matured. Then I went out into the world. I prospered, I broadened, I grew apart from my own people; until now I seem to be in another world from them. You saw—don't you understand now that I can not be happy except with you?"

"And now you can not have me," and unmindful of her own sorrow she sobbed piteously, "Poor Jose! Poor Jose!"

"Jose," she said presently through her tears.
"Yes, Dolores."
"It's a dreadful disgrace to be born without a father, isn't it, Jose?"
"Yes, dear."
"Then out—" she hesitated.
"Yes, yes, I understand, Dolores."
"Then Jose," she said softly, and a far-away look came into her big brown eyes and a sad, sweet smile spread over her tear-stained face, "then, Jose, our baby must never know."

The days of intense mental suffering that followed changed Dolores from a light-hearted girl of seventeen to a woman of mature mind. She had lost Jose, but she had the baby now and would devote her life to him.

She could never have Jose again. He had really never been hers. But he belonged to the baby and the baby was Jose's and hers.

She made no friends, she must guard her secret, and too, the baby needed her.

Jose's devotion to the child was beautiful. Every day he came and none ever knew the sorrow that lurked in the strong man's bosom nor suspected that the cheerful smile of the fond little mother hid an almost broken heart.

Twenty years have passed. Dolores, still slight of figure, sweet and cheery, has kept her secret. Her boy, tall, broad and handsome, is the joy and comfort of her life. But a new sorrow awaits her.

War is declared against Germany. The President calls for volunteers and Raymond Rodriguez answers the call of his country.

Long days and gloomy nights follow for the little woman left alone, but mother love is strong and she could suffer anything for him.

"Raymond is so brave," she would say to herself, "and when the war is over he will return to me a grand and noble man."

She was musing thus when, lifting her eyes from her sewing, she found Jose at her side.

"Why, you here, but what is it, Jose?"

He had taken a bit of yellow paper from his pocket and was reading "Somewhere in France."

Dolores gazed wistfully for a moment into the eyes of the man she loved. "My boy, my boy," she sobbed. Then a wan, sad smile played 'round her lips as she murmured, "He will never know."

Warns You In Plenty of Time

Far ahead of you goes the intensely bright road-beam of the McKee Standard Lens. Every obstruction, every irregularity, every danger-point in the full width of the road is shown up clearly. At 300 feet you can read a newspaper held at your knees. At 600 feet the light still searches the road.

The McKee is legal—no blinding light goes above the 42-inch dead-line. All the light goes through the crystal-clear glass down to the road and out to the sides—where you need it. Why risk your life with makeshift devices that must weaken the light in order to comply with the law? Use the safe McKee.

If your dealer cannot supply you, send price, size of lens, model of car direct to us.

Distinctive In Appearance

The McKee is free from disfiguring accessories. In the daytime it presents a neat combination of vertical and horizontal prisms of crystal-clear glass. "The cut-glass lens," some users term it, because of its brilliancy.

Night comes, and those prisms get to work with scientific accuracy. The vertical prisms stop 53% of the light (that is wasted by window glass lens) and send it back to the parabolic reflector. Here it is added to the road beam which is held down to the road by the horizontal prisms. The exclusive concave-convex shape gives a bright side light, necessary to safety in passing cars and turning corners.
