"SWEETEST SHAKSPEARE, FANCY'S CHILD."—Milton.

Born 1564.

Died 1616.

“THYSELF IN THY LIKENESS.”—

Tempest iii. 2.

THE CAST
FROM
THE FACE OF SHAKSPEARE
After DEATH, 1616.

Extracts from “Friswell's Life Portraits of William Shakspeare.”

The History is as follows :—

A German nobleman had an ancestor who was attached to one of the ambassadors accredited to the Court of King James I. This gentleman was, like many of his countrymen at a later period, a great admirer of the genius of Shakspeare, and as a memorial of him, bought the Cast, in all probability from the sculptor of his tomb, Gerard Johnson ; had it carefully preserved, and took it with him to his own country. There it was shown in his castle, and looked upon with much awe by his friends and neighbours.* The nobleman who brought it home employed a pupil of Vandyke to paint the miniature which accompanied it. The mask and miniature remained in the family, and descended from father to son for many generations, until they came into the possession of the last of the family, a dignitary of the Church in Cologne.† Dr. Becker (the brother to the Secretary of the late Prince Consort) purchased the Cast and also the miniature, and about twelve years since, lodged them in the private possession of Professor Owen, but subsequently the brother of Dr. Becker took it back to Germany. It is believed that Dr. Becker perished in the disastrous South Australian expedition.

All the original legal documents connected with this precious Relic were likewise in the possession of Professor Owen. Amongst them was a letter from Professor Muller, stating that the Kessalsdadt family kept up a lively commerce in works of art with London for nearly 300 years, and that they had a large collection of the Portraits of Gustavus Adolphus, Henry IV., Luther, Melancthon, &c., &c., and that among the savans who visited the collection, not the least doubt existed as to the authenticity of the Shakspeare Relic.

It has been admirably and artistically posed and copied by the Stereoscopic Company, and the mask of the face of the dead Poet, reposing on a rich velvet, and wearing the drawn and refined expression of Death, as well as its calm repose, is a very striking one.

HAIN FRISWELL.

The late Chief Baron Pollock, after considering the whole of the historical evidence laid before him by Professor Owen, declared that if called upon to pronounce a judicial decision, it would be that it was none other than the Cast from the Head and Face of Shakspeare.

* Fanny Kemble was so much impressed with its vivid truthfulness, that on seeing it she burst into tears.

† The back of the Cast bears the inscription—A.D. 1616—the year Shakspeare died.

“ HE WAS NOT FOR AN AGE, BUT FOR ALL TIME.”

A DAILY CHRONICLE OF EVENTS,

WITH

APPROPRIATE QUOTATIONS

FROM THE POET'S WORKS.

Printed for Private Circulation.

Prefatory Note.

THAT works, written from two hundred and fifty to three hundred years since, should furnish an apt and appropriate quotation against each daily event recorded in the following pages, is another proof of the marvellous, and almost miraculous, power and versatility of Shakspeare's genius,* and will impress the mind, perhaps, more forcibly than many works of a more elaborate and ambitious character, that our great master-spirit "was not for an age, but

"FOR ALL TIME."

This little work is another tribute laid humbly upon his shrine.

* It may be mentioned incidentally, and as a fact not generally known, that the late Lord Palmerston was of opinion—and this he expressed to the writer—that Shakspeare did not write the plays which pass as his productions, but that his name was merely used to introduce them to the world. The main point or principle in his argument was, that as these works are admitted by all to be the greatest works of any age or country, was it in any degree probable that they should be the productions of an actor, actively engaged in his profession, born in a provincial town, and with comparatively no education? On the other hand, there was one man living at the time these works were produced, whose great intellect, extended knowledge, and profound philosophy were equal to their production, and, therefore, BACON, and not Shakspeare, wrote "Shakspeare." It was easy to answer these arguments, but not easy to convince the veteran statesman that the facts were all against him. It is singular that the practical mind of Lord Palmerston should have harboured, and so stoutly defended, such an opinion.

NOTE.

The ruled lines are intended for the admirers of the great poet to make other quotations appropriate to the events which their memories may recall, and which may possibly be more striking than the one selected by the compiler. Thus, for the event on the 15th April (the Boat-Race), another very apt quotation might strike the reader in the play of Henry VI., which he would do well to record :—

"O cheerful colours! see where OXFORD comes!"

"No day without a deed to crown it."
