TRAGEDY AVERTED ON BROAD STREET

Broncho Breaks Away With Gig and Occupants—Young Man's Plucky Action

An incident that might have developed a tragic aspect occurred yesterday afternoon on Broad street, between Yates and Johnson. A smartly rigged broncho, attached to a dainty gig containing three occupants, a boy and two girls staid at some passing object on the street, and before the boy could gather up the reins, his charge had broken into a gallop. Careering along the street at a terrific clip, the gig swaying ominously from side to side in the rear, a crushing disaster seemed imminent, when a young fellow of robust proportions, who was in advance of the oncoming vehicle, left the sidewalk, braced himself for an effort, and as the frightened animal passed, threw himself at its head.

For a second or two it seemed as if the young man would be crushed under the horses feet, for he was dragged along a considerable distance. He had secured a firm hold, however, and once he had regained his balance, he speedily brought the runaway to a standstill. In a moment the animal was perfectly quiet, and the scared occupants of the gig had an opportunity of returning thanks. Their scared faces gave the spectators some indication of the sensation they had just undergone.

The name of the young man who so pluckily averted what might have been a disaster is Van Raalte. He is in the employ of the Canadian Northern in the Pemberton block.

BIBLE SOCIETY ANNUAL

Interesting Addresses Were Delivered by Dean Doull and Rev. J. J. Knox Wright.

The Centennial Methodist church, Gorge road, was last night the scene of the annual meeting of the local branch of the Canadian Bible society. The choir, which was in attendance, rendered a number of solos in a most pleasing manner, and Mrs. Edward Parsons earned favor with her vocal efforts.

Interesting addresses were delivered by Very Rev. Dean Doull, of Christ Church cathedral, and the Very Rev. J. Knox Wright, of Vancouver. Noah Shakespeare was re-elected to the position of president for another year, and Arthur Lee was re-elected secretary and treasurer. The various committees to carry on the work of the society during the ensuing year were also named.

Rehearsals will start next week for the Victoria Amateur Dramatic Club's performance to be given in the Victoria theatre in May. The members of the select committee, elected by the executive council of the club, are Mrs. Harry Pooley, Mrs. Montague Burke, Rev. T. R. Hennege, A. E. Craddock (hon. assistant stage manager) and H. Sheridan (hon. producer).

SPEED BURST COSTS STOCKBROKER FINE

Strict Interpretation of Act to Be Exacted by the Police

Victor A. G. Elliot, a stockbroker, was fined $20 in the Police court this morning, having pleaded guilty, with a reservation, to auto speeding on Rockland avenue.

The reservation was advanced by Ald. Moresby, who represented defendant, that there were extenuating circumstances.

On the evidence of Mounted Constable Wright being given, that Mr. Elliot was speeding for some distance, prior to reaching the constable, Ald. Moresby decided not to put defendant in the box.

The extenuating circumstances were that he had to increase the speed of his machine to avoid running into the constable and his horse. The constable, however, said the motorist had a straight track and had made fast time on it.

Ald. Moresby hinted to the court that something might possibly happen regarding the case, and the Hippobile driver wrote out a cheque. The civic authorities in charge of the administration of the automobile laws propose to take action inside ten days and prosecute all who do not comply with the regulations as laid down in the act. Among these, in addition to speeding, owners of machines are required to have, on the front of the machine a lamp bearing the number of the licence in one-inch letters on frosted glass. A tail-light showing the number is also necessary.

A charge of riding a bicycle on the sidewalk against J. D. Lewis, and a charge of having a horse untied against J. Renfrew, were dealt with and fines ordered.

Max Dill Coming.

"Lonesome Town," as delightful a musical comedy as is on the boards today, is the attraction that Max Dill, the famous German comedian, late of Koll and Dill, is to offer at the Victoria theatre on Monday evening.

It was in "Lonesome Town" that Dill scored his greatest success. In the piece he impersonates Bakersfield Bill, a tramp of Teutonic persuasion, who is desirous of acquiring wealth without the formality of laboring for it. An opportunity in this direction is disclosed in the town of Watts, a boom community of Southern California.

Isaac Watts, the founder of the town, having died without apparently leaving a will, is suddenly discovered to have left many claimants for his pro-

MUNICIPAL LIGHT AND POWER PLANT

Surplus of Nearly $31,000 for City of Lethbridge Rates Are Reduced

Lethbridge, Albt., March 31.—The city's electric light and power plant was operated during the year 1910 at a net profit of $30,832.22. The total receipts of the plant for the year were $96,221.30 and the expenditures, including debentures, interest and sinking fund apportionments, $65,389.08. These figures, remarkable in their way, are taken from the report, just made public, of W. A. Henderson & Co., chartered accountants of Winnipeg and auditors to the city of Lethbridge.

The surplus of nearly $31,000 has been placed into the city's general municipal fund, and will go towards reducing the taxes. Reductions in the light and power rates, varying from 20 to 25 per cent., have been put into effect by the city council, the reductions dating from the first of the present month. In the year 1909 the electric department was operated at a loss of $2,967. This was due to the heavy cost of operating and maintaining the old electric plant purchased by the city in September, 1908, from the Lethbridge Electric Company, Ltd., a private corporation which previous to that time had supplied the city with light and power. Eighteen months ago the installation of a completely new plant was commenced, which, when completed, will represent an investment of $238,000. The first units installed were put into use early in 1910, and the handsome profit of over $30,000 represents the first year of operation. And that, too, in spite of the difficulties of operating the station while construction work is still going on.

A comparison of the records for the two years, 1909 and 1910, the former with the old plant and the latter with the new, shows that the revenue in 1909 was $61,604, and in 1910 $86,221, an increase of $24,617, or 40 per cent., and yet the total expenditure of 1910 was only $65,387, as against $64,371 in 1909, a decrease of $9,014, or 14 per cent.

One of the reasons for the splendid showing made by Lethbridge's municipally owned electric plant is the operation in conjunction with it of a municipally owned coal mine. The mine entry is less than 200 feet from the power house and the coal is handled automatically from the time it is loaded into the cars at the mine face, a half mile underground, until it is fed into the furnaces. The coal is charged to the electric plant at the rate of $1.50 per ton, and even at this low rate the mine netted the ratepayers a nice little profit for the year 1910.

The citizens of Lethbridge, naturally, are jubilant at the splendid showing made by their new plant during the first year of its operation, and at the big reductions in the light and power rates made possible.

MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE

Independence, Kas., March 31.—Attorneys for A. Truskett, a wealthy business man of Caney, Kas., who was found guilty of having murdered D. S. Neely, a millionaire oil operator, declared that they will appeal the case. The jury returned a verdict of murder in the second degree. The attorneys assert that Truskett killed Neely while his mind was temporarily unbalanced on account of worry over a suit which Neely, as president of the Wichita Pipeline Company, has filed against Truskett to declare some of Truskett's oil leases illegal.

SUNDAY BASEBALL

Lincoln, Neb., March 31.—While there is little doubt that the lower house will pass the bill permitting Sunday baseball in Nebraska save when it is forbidden by municipal authorities, it is doubtful whether it will become a law. Governor Aldrich has indicated that he will veto the measure. The bill, which has already passed the senate, has been recommended for passage by the house acting as a committee of the whole, and will be up for consideration within a day or two.

DESERTS POLITICS

Mexico City, March 31.—Probability that Enrique Creel, who resigned recently from President Diaz' cabinet, is definitely out of politics, is indicated here in the announcement that Creel has been elected managing director of the Central Bank of Mexico, an institution with resources exceeding $15,000,000. Creel will assume his new duties immediately.

THINKING THEMES

BY DR. FRAN ANE

The artist is the one who can do two things: See the Beautiful and Reproduce it. We cannot all be artists, in the common use of the word, as we are lacking in the natural gifts; but we can all cultivate Artistry of Life. That is to say, we can learn to see the beautiful and to reproduce it, in our thoughts, feelings and acts.

Now the beautiful is not easy, but very hard to see. As a rule we are ignorant of it and pass it over until the Genius points it out—it is interesting, for instance, to note how long it took the world to appreciate natural beauty; in Homer and Virgil and Dante there is very little said of the charm of mountain, stream and sunlight, while modern poets, especially since Wordsworth, are full of such things.

There is marvellous beauty in all of Nature's products, even in grey skies and fallen leaves and bare trees, and in rocks, deserts and ocean wastes. It is a sign of a cheap and ignorant soul to see only ugliness in one's surroundings. Careful, persistent effort, and long, loving familiarity with Nature, at last opens to us her treasures.

Then we can reproduce what we see in our character: It is not a trick of calling natural objects by fanciful spiritual names, as to say violets are modest and trees noble and the sun strong, but rather the subtle absorption into the soul of Nature's infinite order and symmetry and calm purposes; of her harmonious lights and shadows and of her immutable, patient gladness. It is rather difficult to express but it is none the less very real and vital.

DECLARE INFORMER GUILTY OF MURDER

Attorneys for Camorraists Declare They Have Evidence Against State Witness

Viterbo, Italy, March 31.—That Abbatemaggio, the informer, will become a defendant instead of a witness in the famous Camorra trial was intimated yesterday by the attorneys for the defence. They asserted that Abbatemaggio and his confederates murdered Gennaro Cuoco and his wife and sought to fasten the crime upon the Camorra, believing that the public readily would accept such a story.

The attorneys promised to produce evidence to prove that Abbatemaggio's testimony is all lies. According to the revelations of Abbatemaggio, Naples is divided into fourteen Camorra districts, each having its Camorra hierarchy. In each district a member of the organization is daily entrusted with the maintenance of order among those affiliated with the Camorra. His powers and influence are greater than those of the police, as he is expected to denounce those who commit disorders and thus compromise the association, which is destined for more important enterprises.

Abbatemaggio said that shortly after the murder of Cuoco, when he was in the company of Giovanni Rapi, the alleged treasurer of the Camorra, he met the priest Vitozzi, who suggested that Erricone, so that they might not be suspected, should go frequently to the Miami, a Moorish cafe, in order to give the police the impression that he was a frequenter of the place. It was in this way that the report of the murder of Cuoco is alleged to have been communicated to Erricone. Rapi on hearing this statement by the witness raised his hands and eyes and with a horrified expression exclaimed, turning towards the prisoners' cage: "If I had ever suspected that Erricone was stained with such a monstrous crime I would have delivered him myself to justice, saying to him 'bear that burden of your sins.'"

The tone of his voice was so melodramatic that all burst into laughter. Rapi appearing even more amused than the others.

ROOSEVELT'S TOUR

San Francisco, Cal., March 30.—Colonel Roosevelt said yesterday that he would make no further public addresses in this city, that the remainder of his stay here would be devoted exclusively to his family and to recreation. The colonel will leave here Sunday evening for Reno, Nev., where he will spend Monday. Returning Monday night to Sacramento, he will be the guest of Governor Johnson until Tuesday, when he will start for Portland to speak before the Commercial club. Hence he goes to Seattle and home by the northern route.

'HOME RULE' DEFEATED

Columbus, Ohio, March 31.—Proponents of the Home Rule bill, which was defeated in the House by a vote of 56 to 69, declared that they would not attempt to bring the bill up for reconsideration, believing that the effort would prove unsuccessful. The bill proposed to give cities of 5,000 and over the right to decide whether actions would be allowed to operate within city limits regardless of the vote on liquor matters in the country.

LADY MACDONALD DEAD

Widow of Fighting Mac Died at Edinburgh.

Lady Macdonald, widow of General Sir Hector Macdonald, died at Edinburgh recently. Lady Macdonald had lived for some time at Newcastle with her son, who is an engineer, and had done much public work of a social and educational character. Three months ago she left the Tyneside on account of her health, and had lately undergone a serious operation.

Sir Hector and Lady Macdonald met in Edinburgh in 1822, when he was a subaltern in the Gordon Highlanders. Lady Macdonald was then Miss Christina Duncan, whose father was a teacher, and afterwards a shipowner of Perth.

In June, 1844, Sir Hector, whose regiment was ordered to the south of England, persuaded her to contract a secret marriage according to Scottish law. The end of the romance came just ten years later, when Lady Macdonald was granted a decree of divorce.

GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION VANISH

Settles Your Out-of-Order Stomach and Ends All Indigestion Five Minutes Later.

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of indigestion or dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach, if you will take a little Diapiesin occasionally.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes belching, dizziness, a feeling of fullness after eating, nausea, indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), biliousness, heartburn, water brash, pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapiesin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. A single dose will digest all the food you eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour and upset the stomach.

Get a large 50-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin from your druggist and start taking now, and in a little while you will actually brag about your healthy, strong stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Should you at this moment be suffering from indigestion or any stomach disorder, you can get relief within five minutes.

DROWNED IN NATATORIUM

Seattle, Wash., March 31.—Pearl Moore, 12 years old, living at 827 Alder street, sank without a cry in the Washington natatorium and died before help could reach her. The girl, who was large for her age, was grasping the rail inside the 5-foot 6-inch mark when last seen by her companion and died in water which would barely reach her chin when standing. She was unable to swim and was amusing herself by walking around the edge of the tank, when her companion, whose name could not be learned, saw her throw up her hands. Thinking that her friend was playing she paid no attention at first, but when she realized that the girl's plight might be serious she gave the alarm. It is asserted that the girl was subject to heart trouble and the belief is that she strangled when she fell in a faint.

Notice to Advertisers

Owing to the rapidly increasing circulation of the Times and the growing demands for space, it has become absolutely necessary to place a limit upon the time at which changes for advertisements will be accepted and guaranteed publication. Copy for changes must be handed in to the business office not later than 5 p. m. the previous day. Arrangements for the insertion of new advertisements must be made before 10 a. m. day of publication. Classified advertisements before 2 p. m.

IMPERIAL AFFAIRS

Any federation of empire which is arranged must of necessity be at first very loose. The idea of an empire with a single code of laws is for many years to come out of the question. Nobody wants the empire solidified into a nation. What it always must be is a collection of nations under the same flag, but with a central governing or advisory body which will look after such things as peace and war, navigation laws and other matters affecting the whole body. That the question is about to be brought to the front is matter for congratulation. It may with profit be discussed at the Imperial Conference, for that is the body which must take any steps which will lead to fruition.

Just now, however, the British government is so actively engaged in wrestling with great domestic constitutional changes that it is hardly to be expected that sufficient time could be given to the larger question. In Canada, too, the government has in hand enough large problems to engage its attention for some time to come. If the matter is brought up at the forthcoming conference, and the discussion started, that is as much as can be expected at present. A federation scheme cannot be worked out in a hurry; that of the Canadian provinces forty years ago is a case in point.

GERMANY'S ATTITUDE

Only the most optimistic expect that Germany was at the present time prepared to join with Great Britain, the United States and France in an arbitration treaty, with the idea of limiting armaments. Germany is not ready. The majority of the people there will still support the present government, which is kept in power by the jingo element. Yet there is a strong democratic feeling growing up in the Fatherland, which is already finding expression, and which eventually will assert itself. When this feeling has spread to include a sufficient number of the electors, the country will be ready.

In the meantime, the good work has commenced. The whole world is once more discussing peace and arbitration. Since the first call of the Czar of Russia to the nations, some years ago, public opinion has been forming. The very fact that the German chancellor says he considers the principle of arbitration right is a concession. Some day a practical solution will be found, success cannot be expected at once, but with the majority of the people looking honestly for a means of avoiding war that means will be found.

If nothing else has been done, the hope of German supremacy has been destroyed for many a year to come. With what really amounts to treaties of defence between Great Britain, the United States and France—a triple alliance twice as strong as that of Germany, Italy and Austria—there is no fear of German aggression for many years to come. The countries which are acknowledged to be among the foremost in working out the true principles of responsible government and the accompanying social problems, will now have an opportunity to continue dealing with these problems without fear of interruption. They will be able to set up standards for other nations to follow.

On account of the prominence of Great Britain, the United States and France, their influence will be felt throughout the world more than ever. It has been before. Their forms of government will be copied. Already this is done to a very large extent. No country goes to Germany looking for a model in self-government. It is to the constitutional monarchy of Great Britain and to the republics that they turn. With the Anglo-Saxon union, supplemented by the strength of France, dominating the world, civilization will spread with greater rapidity than ever before. Great changes may be expected within the next half century, far greater than have ever before been seen in the same space of time.

NATIVE BIRDS

The birds are here once more, the visitors from the South that come to British Columbia to raise their young. Of course everyone knows that many birds remain with us all winter, more than in any other part of Canada. The majority, however, leave in the autumn, going as far south as the Southern States, Mexico, and even to Central America. These are now returning. The first swallow was reported on March 14th, although there were very likely some here before that time. Yesterday the white crowned and chipping sparrows were heard singing at Oak Bay, and everywhere now of a morning the singing of the feathered tribe makes the woods and fields particularly pleasant places to visit.

While a few birds will commence nesting at once, the majority do not take up the work just yet. The robins and some of the sparrows are among the first to busy themselves with domestic duties. Many of the visitors raise two broods before they leave, and nearly all, if they lost the first set of eggs or the young, will at once recommence the work of nest building. Much more interest is being manifested in natural life than ever before. A great many people are inquiring, and that soon leads to knowledge and increased interest. The plants are fairly well known except by recent arrivals. With the trees the people are becoming familiar. The birds, however, are shy, and to become acquainted with many of them necessitates spending time and curbing of desire to be boisterous. British Columbia birds have not yet learned to be sociable with man, and for that reason must be sought with care if an acquaintance is desired. As the country grows older, doubtless the summer visitors will become more obtrusive, and probably more numerous, if they are protected. We commend the study of the native bird life to those who wish for a pleasant hobby.

J. G. O'Donoghue, solicitor of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, says he thinks reciprocity will be of incalculable benefit to the working classes. That is what we have said time and again. A bill has been introduced into the Nova Scotia legislature permitting the city of Halifax to borrow $200,000 with which to bonus a company to build steel ships. Apparently Halifax is about to make a bold bid for business. Whether the giving away of such a large sum for such a purpose is wise it

FOUR MORE VICTIMS OF SECHET IDENTIFIED

Were Men Who Had Come to the City Looking for Employment

As time passes, the names of the unfortunate victims who met their death in the steamer Sechet, when she foundered off Church Point last Friday, are being slowly learned. Today the proprietor of the Wilson hotel announced that four men who were stopping at his hotel, had taken passage on the vessel for Sooke, and as he has heard nothing from them he feels positive that they are among the lost. The names of the men, who were laborers, are: James Williams, T. Costello, H. Jones and Pete Peary.

Several of their comrades who had journeyed to the dock to bid them goodbye, tried to induce them to remain in town owing to the stress of the weather outside. The men, however, stated that they had no fear and took passage. It was their intention, according to the proprietor of the hotel, to go to Sooke and then walk to the railroad camp in search of work.

They had arrived in this city on Thursday, the day previous to the disaster, and as they were in rather hard straits they were anxious to secure work. They are not known locally, but are thought to have friends on the mainland. Costello is stated to have a brother residing in Winnipeg, and the authorities here are trying to establish communication with him in order to apprise him of his brother's death.

Very little wreckage was discovered yesterday by the patrol which is covering the coast line. Little pieces of wood supposed to have broken away from the vessel are drifting ashore and parts of her cargo are also being cast up on the beach. No more bodies have been sighted by any of those who are cruising about in launches or those on the shore.

Some of the Canadian clubs are publishing the addresses read before them in the course of the year. The idea is rather a good one, but it costs a good deal to issue booklets and the money might perhaps be better spent. The newspapers publish a more or less full account of the addresses at the time they are delivered, and some of them would need polishing before they could be published in full.

Winston Churchill says the people of London enjoy more freedom than any other people in the world, because no man knows or cares about his neighbor. Dr. Cook says that London is the best place in the world in which to hide. Mixed among the seven or eight million others there is not much fear of a man being bothered by his neighbors as long as he keeps the law and holds his tongue. The larger the city the more of this measure of freedom a man enjoys. In a small village every person knows every other person and forms an opinion about him. A man cannot well live all to himself in a rural community, but in the city he can.

SKIPPER CROSSES UNKNOWN DIVIDE

Capt. T. A. Whistler, Well Known on Sound, Passes Away at Hotel

Evidently having been attacked by a hemorrhage while lying in his bed, Captain Thomas Averil Whistler, a well known skipper both in this city and on the Sound, answered his last call yesterday afternoon, passing away at the Pandora hotel, Pandora avenue. For several days prior to his death he had stated to his friends that he was feeling unwell, suffering severely from asthma, and had remained inside in order to recuperate.

A friend who called on him yesterday afternoon, not receiving an answer became anxious and informed the bartender. After trying the door himself and receiving no answer he looked through the transom and saw the old captain lying in his bed with the clothes around him covered with blood. The door was then forced open and the body removed to the parlors of the Victoria Undertaking Company. An inquest is to be held although no date has yet been set for it.

The late Captain Whistler has been in the city for the past five months and on many previous occasions he had visited Victoria. At the time of his death he was watchman on the ship Yucatan, lying at the outer wharf. He had followed a seafaring life for many years. First he came to this coast on the Olympia, as chief officer, and later took command of the Tacoma. At a still later date he fitted out an expedition which sailed from Hongkong for Alaska, where he became interested in mining property at Nome. He returned to Tacoma, where he became involved in litigation over this property and he practically lost all his interests in the north.

Among his effects, which were taken charge of by the police authorities, were two medals which had been presented to him for life-saving. One, the Royal Albert medal, was given to him for saving the life of a seaman of the steamer Ennedale, on which he was serving as chief officer, on September 12, 1885, off Cape Horn, and the next year he jumped overboard in Cork harbor and saved the life of an apprentice on the same ship. For the latter act of bravery he received the Humane Society's medal and clasp, and a pair of binoculars was also presented to him by the Liverpool Shipwreck and Humane Society for his conspicuous bravery.

The late Captain Whistler was about 45 years of age. He leaves a son, residing in Tacoma, who was telegraphed to yesterday and who arrived here this afternoon. An impromptu "Guest Day" is being arranged at the Alexandra club on Monday next, April 3, when Mrs. and Miss Fitzgibbon, and Miss Mara will be the guests of honor. Members are asked to excuse this short notice, and to assist with their usual effort to make the event a success.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' SHOW

A daffodil and spring flower show will be held at the Empress hotel on Wednesday, April 19 (Primrose Day), under the auspices of the Order of the King's Daughters in Victoria.

Price lists are now ready and will be mailed to all friends known to be interested in horticulture. Should any desire those who are unknown to the committee, applications for the same may be made at the Alexandra Club.

There will be a promenade concert during the evening, and the public are cordially invited to mark this date and to give their usual kind patronage to this popular event.

LIEUT. GOV. BROWN HERE

Lieut. Governor George W. Brown, of Saskatchewan, is at present a visitor in Victoria. He arrived in the city yesterday direct from the prairies and put up at the Empress hotel. There is no official or political significance attaching to the visit of this distinguished guest within the gates of the Queen City; he is merely here to bask in the sunshine of the outer west and enjoy for a brief period the pleasures of a Victorian climate. Hon. Walter Scott, premier of the golden province, met the chief executive on his arrival.

OBITUARY RECORD

The funeral of the late Capt. Whistler, who died in his rooms in the Pandora hotel yesterday afternoon, will take place from the Victoria Undertaking Parlors, where the remains are now reposing, at 8:45 o'clock to-morrow morning and at ten minutes later at the Roman Catholic cathedral. His son arrived from Tacoma to-day to make the arrangements.

The funeral of the late Charles Lewis took place this morning at 10:15 o'clock from the chapel of the B. C. Funeral Furnishing Company, proceeding direct to the Ross Bay cemetery. Rev. T. W. Gladstone conducted the services.

The remains of the late John I. Henderson were laid to rest yesterday afternoon in the Ross Bay cemetery. The funeral cortege started from the B. C. Funeral Furnishing Company's parlors at 2:45 o'clock and was attended by a great many friends. Services were conducted at Christ Church cathedral by Rev. Dean Doull, who also officiated at the graveside. The casket was covered with beautiful floral wreaths, among them being a large one from Grant Smith & Co., by whom the deceased was employed. The following acted as pallbearers: E. H. King, W. H. Harrison, H. H. King, A. R. Ringo, J. R. King and W. Sealy.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Catherine McRae took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, "Twin Oaks," Cedar Hill. Services were conducted by the Rev. R. W. Collins.

ALLEN'S APPEAL

(Special to the Times) Ottawa, Ont., March 31.—The Supreme court this morning gave judgment ordering a new trial in the murder case of King vs. Allen. The appeal from the British Columbia court was taken on the ground that some of the evidence submitted to the jury was not legally admissible, and that it influenced the jury's decision. Justice Sir Louis Davies and Mr. Justice Inglis dissented from the judgment.

THE NAVY LEAGUE

DECLARES ITSELF

Endorses the Action of Headquarters in Condemning the Declaration of London

The propaganda work of the Victoria and Esquimalt branch of the Navy League continues to be carried on with unabated vigor. This fact was demonstrated fully at the annual meeting of the league, when it was shown that during the year several new branches had been formed. Much of the success that has resulted from the work is due to the untiring efforts of the president, Captain Clive Philipps-Wolley. The captain presided over the meeting. It was shown from the financial report that the league was in a sound financial position, having a handsome balance on the credit side.

With acclamation the meeting adopted a resolution endorsing the action of the Navy League in London in condemning the "Declaration of London."

It was also decided by resolution to celebrate Trafalgar Day with a great public meeting at which several eminent Canadians will be invited to speak.

The following gentlemen were elected as the committee for the ensuing year: The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Columbia, Col. R. Wolfenden, I.S.O.; Capt. C. Phillipps-Wolley, Capt. W. H. Langley, Capt. A. B. Walbran, S. M., and Messrs. C. E. Redfern, W. E. Oliver, Joseph Pierston, G. W. Wollett, F. L. Neale, J. E. Jeffcott, Frank V. Holt, G. A. A. Hanks, W. Blakemore, T. J. Comiskey, D. Osborne, A. S. Farton, H. P. Bishop, J. W. Taylor, R. P. Bishop, W. H. Price, C. R. de Salla and Godfrey Booth, hon. treasurer, Bernard Walker, and H. L. Salmon and Maurice Cane, joint secretaries. The committee will meet in the office of Hind and Cane, Pemberton block, next Wednesday evening to name officers.

A formal verdict of "found drowned" was returned yesterday afternoon by the jury empanelled under Coroner Hart to investigate the circumstances attending the death of Patrick Levin, formerly a fireman on the tug Queen, whose body was picked up on Wednesday in the inner harbor. Beyond the fact that Levin went missing from the tug on February 12th, and had not been seen by any of his friends since that date there was little direct evidence to be obtained concerning his death. The jury consisted of J. A. Macaulay, P. Flannigan, F. Rutledge, P. Rooney and W. Ward.

BUILDING RECORD

BROKEN IN MARCH

Tremendous Activity in Building Circles—Many Beautiful Homes Erected

If building activity is any criterion of a city's ascendancy then the city of Victoria is going to break records this year. March, the rhapsodic month, takes its leave to-day, with a record number of issued permits over every other month of every other year, with the single exception of last July. Up to last night the figure represented by the permits issued during the month is $278,275, as against $244,760 for the same period of last year. Before the current twenty-four hours have run their course it is not unlikely that the $300,000 mark will have been reached.

Included among the permits issued were some of very notable pretensions. For instance, there was a permit issued to Col. E. G. Prior for a residence on Charles street to cost $17,000. The plans for this handsome edifice were drawn by Ridgway Wilson, and the contract for erection has been let to Thomas Ash. Another residence of beautiful proportions is that to be built by A. J. Bechtel on Rockland avenue, at a cost of $12,000.

The commercial end of the permits is sustained by one for a bakery on Russell street to be erected by Messrs. Popham, at a cost of $20,000. This new structure has been necessitated by growing business. The plans have been prepared by H. S. Griffin, and the contract is in the hands of Laney Bros. The building will be two storeys high and modern in every department. Other permits issued were as follows: To J. T. Redding, dwelling on McPherson street, $1800; to A. F. Moffat, dwelling on Fort street, $3550; Thomas Perkins, dwelling on Alma place, $2200; W. Dunford & Son, for two dwellings on Cornwall street, to cost $1500 each; to Henry Ball, dwelling on Queen's avenue, to cost $2000; to Mary A. Craig, dwelling on Princess avenue, to cost $1500.

NEW SEWERAGE SYSTEM FOR ESQUIMALT AREA

Will Borrow $125,000 From Government—Increased Population

A system of sewerage estimated to cost $125,000, is what the residents of that portion of Esquimalt which lies between the E. & N. railway tracks, intend to establish throughout their district.

The money for the proposed sewerage system will be borrowed from the provincial government under the provisions of the District Sewerage Act, 1910, and amendments thereto passed at the recent session of the legislature. The present situation in regard to sewerage demands urgency and the meeting decided to proceed at once with the installation of the new system.

A. R. Wolfenden, James McAdam, and T. B. Sedger were appointed commissioners to administer the expenditure entailed and also to define the area proposed to be served by the new system. The cost of the new system will be borne by those residents whose properties will benefit by the improvement.

The meeting also took up the question of organizing a municipality but did not come to any decision upon the matter.

BOY SCOUTS TAKE UP FIRE-FIGHTING

Chief Davis Gives Them a Lecture and a Demonstration Prior to Examination

The Victoria Boy Scouts who assembled in the Christ Church school-room last night had a glorious time listening to an absorbingly interesting lecture on fire-fighting by no less distinguished a person than Chief Davis himself. The boys present armed themselves with paper and pencil and took careful and copious notes of the points of the address with a view to assisting them later in qualifying for the Fireman's badge.

The fire chief told them how to give alarms correctly; gave them a detailed description of Victoria's fire-fighting department, which he claimed was now becoming very complete and up-to-date. He further told them of the improvements and apparatus which was soon to be added to the department.

He also gave them individual instruction as to the coupling and uncoupling of hose, of which he had several lengths in the room for the purpose; and demonstrated to them how animals should be removed from a burning building, how to safely enter a building without being overcome by smoke, how to carry unconscious persons down the ladder and how to treat persons injured by fire.

And at the end of the lecture and the demonstration came what was to the boys perhaps the tit-bit of the evening, an invitation to visit headquarters to see the members of the brigade drilling with the ladders and nets, etc. The chief has consented to prepare an examination paper for the scouts wishing to contend for the Fireman's badge.

ISLANDERS TAKE A SLUMP IN PRACTICE

No Players to Be Released for a While—Applications Being Received

The Islanders took somewhat of a slump in their practice game yesterday afternoon. The playing was not half so snappy as it was on the previous day and in some places was distinctly ragged. This was surprising, too, for in the early part of the afternoon they were in splendid form and as lively as crickets. It was just a case of follow the leader. Someone made a mistake and the rest did likewise. Errors were counted against Millon in left field, Parks in right, Ward at short stop, and Dashwood catching. They were allowed to put something on the ball and they certainly did it. Marshall was the star, pitching the full nine innings for the Peps. He showed that he had everything, plenty of speed and curves which shot the ball in, out, down and some said up, but that is not authentic. Starkell and Roche were the other pitchers, and while they both did well the former's exhibition was the most interesting as he gave a correct illustration of how to pitch a spit ball. The sphere comes up to the plate without a twist and then breaks in either direction, right or left, in a downward path. Even the catcher is not sure about it and sometimes gets the wrong hand in the way. Dashwood did that the other day and is now going around with a split finger. A pretty double play was executed when Ward picked up a difficult grounder straightening up and the latter threw to first, putting the batter and the man on first out. Kellar did not occupy his usual position at short stop, owing to the fact that he has become afflicted with that disease so dreaded by all ball players, a sore arm. He played in centre field, while Navarre covered the ground between the second and third basemen. This, the midget twirler did so well as to arouse the fans to enthusiasm on several occasions. The batting was fairly good, although not so much was done because the pitchers were using their speed and putting over the kinky ones. It has been announced by the managers that all the players now in camp will be given a thorough try-out before any are let out. It was expected that several more would receive their fare home this week, but as some who were not showing up well have improved greatly, and others who looked like big leaguers in the first practices, have fallen down considerably, this will not

WILL CHANGE NAME OF LACROSSE CLUB

Last Year's Cloverdale Players to Organize—Compromise to Be Arranged

It has been practically decided by those who were members of the Cloverdale lacrosse club last year that the organization will assume a new name this season. However, with one or two exceptions the same team will take the field in the race for the city championship. The first practice of this team is being held on Sunday morning at the Royal Athletic park. After the practice there will be a meeting at which the question of securing a new name will be brought up and the club organized for the season. There has been a lot of talk lately of forming a city lacrosse team apart from the teams playing in the senior league. This will be settled at a meeting of the executive of the Victoria Lacrosse association to be held some time next week, and although the idea will not, it is said, be carried out in full, a compromise will probably be arranged. That is, the best players in Victoria, no matter to what club they belong, will be asked to practice together and then, when a game against Vancouver or New Westminster is to be played, a team of men who are accustomed to one another's play may take the field for Victoria. The North Ward men have been practicing on their grounds every Sunday morning and so have the Oak Bays, so that with the arrival of the Cloverdale in the training arena the lacrosse season may be said to be fairly ushered in. The Wests have been slower than the others but are expected to fall into line shortly.

HUNT CLUB TO HOLD LAST RUN TO-MORROW

After Next Saturday Members Will Disband Until Next Season

The last Hunt club run of the season will be held to-morrow afternoon, starting at 2.45 o'clock. The trail is being laid by Miss Pooley and will commence at Parson's Bridge, extending from there through the Colwood district and ending up at the Exhibition grounds, where refreshments will be served. A large attendance is expected, as this is the last chance the hunters will have of displaying their horsemanship before they take part in the gymkhana next Saturday. That event will conclude the season and the members will not meet again in an affair arranged by the club until next fall. Releases approved by the National League were announced by President Lynch at New York yesterday: Spokane, Northwestern league, Philip Cooney; Cincinnati to Los Angeles, Pacific Coast league, infielder Moore. Charles Irby, the old Northwestern player who has been named manager of the Helena club in the Union Association, arrived in Spokane on Wednesday to look over the Indians with a view to grabbing a few recruits.

WESTS DOWN EASTS.

In an interesting game of basketball played in the Fernwood hall on Wednesday evening, between the Victoria West and East End teams, the former were victorious by the narrow margin of 2 points. The score was 14 to 12. The game was not only almost even in score, but also in play. The teams were well matched and neither at any time had any great advantage. They were: Victoria West—Shakespeare, 5; Kennedy, Stock, 2; and Turnbull, 2. East End—Hawk, 2; Pynn, 3; McDonald, 1; and Baker, 6. The largest sewing machine in the world is in operation in Leeds. It weighs 6,500 pounds, and sews cotton betting.

SPORT NOTES

The Ward lacrosse and baseball players will practice at the North Ward park on Sunday morning. The Beacon Hill baseballers will hold their usual practice at the Hill. All players are requested to attend and to bring along a glove. Last year's Cloverdale lacrosse team will turn out for the first practice of the season at the Royal Athletic park on Sunday morning. There is almost bound to be a squabble at the North Ward park on Sunday morning, for besides the Wards, both the Capitals and the Prides have announced that they will hold a practice on those grounds. Fight fans are to be given a real line on Cyclone Johnny Thompson's calibre as a contender for the middleweight championship. Thompson is signed today to meet Hugo Kelly in a 10-round fight in Milwaukee, April 28. With his shoulder in good shape again, Abe Attell, featherweight champion, will fight Frankie Burns of Jersey City, in New York, to-night. The boys will enter the ring at 11.5 p.m. C. M. Daniels, the national swimming champion of 500 yards, will forfeit his title this season. He announced on Wednesday that business engagements would prevent him from going to St. Louis to take part in the aquatic races

April 1. In his absence the fight for this honor will rest between James Rilly, of the New York A. C., and Richard Friselle, of the Missouri A. C. Both men have been travelling close to 6 minutes 29 seconds. Christy Mathewson, Al Bridwell and "Big Chief" Meyers, stars of the New York Giants, are recovering at Atlanta, Ga., to-day, from bruises inflicted by Erskine Brewster, a big husky southerner. The trouble started when Meyers alleged that Brewster had called him a "nigger." Manager McGraw took exception to this and replied to Brewster. When the southerner started for McGraw the New York manager retreated and Mathewson tried to stop Brewster. The latter tossed Mathewson over his head. At this stage, Meyers took a hand in the fracas and was promptly knocked down. Bridwell got into the row and received a badly cut mouth and smashed nose. Bridwell again dashed at Brewster and was again knocked down. At this point the police quelled the disturbance. On Wednesday at New York, Gwynne Henry, the Texas sprinter, in a trial, ran seventy-five yards in 7.3-4 seconds, equalling the world's mark twenty years ago, by L. H. Carey. Napoleon Lajoie, who has been playing in major league company since 1896, is so lively at the Cleveland's training camp that the youngsters are looking on in open-mouthed astonishment. Lajoie says he has discovered the elixir of life in the shape of two glasses of Buttermilk with each meal.

KENNEL CLUB SHOW NOW IN PROGRESS

Setters and Pointers Judged
Yesterday—Some Surprises for Fanciers

Yesterday afternoon J. Cole, the bench show judge, one of the leading authorities on dogs in America, began judging at the Kennel Club's show in the drill hall.

The St. Bernards and the Chesapeake Bays occupied very little of the judge's time, as there are few entered, but when it came to the English setters' turn it was different. As usual, there is a large number of these on show and many are very evenly matched. The Hickford-Withers kennels took a majority of the ribbons, but not as many as fanciers thought they would. Mailwyd Major, of course, took first prize in the open class and the red ribbon was awarded to one of the pups he sired, Arbutus Roy.

The competition among the bitches was even more marked. Miss Effie Collister's Winnie and George Smith's Arbutus Beauty were so closely matched that they took a lot of examining before the winner could be picked, but in the end Winnie went out and Arbutus Beauty had to be content with second place. Arbutus Swallow had no trouble in taking the blue ribbon in the open class. In the brace and team classes the

An English Setter, several of whose progeny have taken ribbons at the Bench Show.

Hickford-Withers kennels again came to the fore. There was no defeating those two old champions, Mailwyd Major and Arbutus Swallow, although Sensation and Prince gave them a close race. The blue ribbon in the team class was awarded Swallow, Major, Roy and Arbutus Bob.

Among the Irish setters, of which there is a good entry, C. A. Goodwin's Irish Charlie and Killarney Boy took more than their share of the ribbons. Harry Ella's Prince went down to defeat before the latter, Mr. Ella's Wentworth Girl, as pretty a little animal as one could wish to see and which was sired by Prince, took first in her class.

A surprise was furnished the fanciers when the pointers came up for judgment. T. P. McConnell's Red Wing, a beautiful imported dog, was just beaten out by W. Gatt's King Hickory.

Walters will referee at Beacon Hill and Locke at Duncan.

CRICKETERS MAY PRACTICE.

M. Coppinger Arrives—Albions Use Steam Roller on Green.

If the fine weather continues, the cricketers of both the Albion and Victoria clubs will be out practicing to-morrow.

M. Coppinger, who has again accepted the position as coach for the Victoria club, arrived in town two or three days ago, and is already at work on the grounds, getting everything arranged for an early start. The members of this club were talking of holding a practice last Saturday, but the bad weather prevented that. However, they are hoping to be able to don their helmets to-morrow.

The Albion grounds are also being put into shape. There is no danger of them being rough or lumpy for

INCENDIARY FIRE.

Tampa, Fla., March 31.—An incendiary fire early to-day entirely destroyed the grand stand and horse sheds at the West Tampa race track. The loss will exceed $50,000.

GAVE LIFE FOR ANOTHER.

British Officer Bravely Rescues Man, But is Drowned.

Lieut. Harold Fisher, Alderton, who commanded torpedo-boat 115, lost his life off Stangate creek, in the Medway, recently, while trying to save one of his crew from drowning.

The torpedo-boat had steamed up to No. 64 buoy, and Seaman Headman was attempting to make her fast, when, owing to the strong wind, he lost his footing and fell into the sea.

The lieutenant, hearing cries of "man overboard," dashed from the bridge and threw a lifebuoy to the man's assistance. This the bluejacket failed to secure, and Lieut. Alderton in going to his assistance landed on the buoy where the seaman had been at work. Owing to the choppy condition of the water, and a stiff north-westerly breeze blowing, the vessel hauling on the line caused the buoy to lurch heavily and the officer was thrown into the water. He, however, secured the lifebuoy, and pushed it to the bluejacket, who managed to seize it.

Owing to the heavy sea-boards that he was wearing, the lieutenant was soon in a helpless condition, and the strong current which runs in the Medway at that point carried him away before assistance could be rendered.

The seaman was picked up in a very exhausted condition by the ship's boat which was launched, and taken aboard the Acton, where, under the careful medical attendance, he revived. Several boats were engaged in the search for the lieutenant, but failed to find anything except his cap.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED MIGRATION IN PROGRESS

Canadian Northern Party on Way From Bristol to British Columbia

A striking new departure in emigration to British Columbia will be made by the Canadian Northern railway this spring, in connection with the colonization scheme recently inaugurated by Sir William Mackenzie, the president of that company, says a correspondent of the London Daily Mail. Early in March, a large party, numbering some hundreds of selected emigrants, will leave Bristol on the Royal Edward for British Columbia. The party will be personally conducted by experienced officials right through from England to their destination. From Halifax the new colonists will travel in tourist cars to Vancouver, regular meals being prepared and served on the train by a staff of trained cooks.

The Hon. J. H. Turner, the agent-general for British Columbia in London, is keenly interested in this accession of desirable population to the Pacific province, and has promised to see the emigrants off at Paddington. This party will be the forerunner of a series of similar parties throughout the spring and summer. All the arrangements on this side are being made by Mr. Fred J. Moss, the European emigration agent of the Canadian Northern railway, while the reception and settlement of the new colonists will be supervised by Mr. Thomas Howell, the general immigration agent of the company, who has successfully settled 50,000 British immigrants in Canada during the past seven years. Practically all the emigrants will be agriculturists or domestic servants, and both men and women will be guaranteed employment before leaving England.

In the course of an interview with Mr. Edward Adair, of Vancouver, who has come over to England to act as conductor to the party, I obtained some interesting information concerning the many English settlers in British Columbia who are personally known to Mr. Adair. Having lived in British Columbia for twenty-five years, and made a fortune in that province as a lumberman, gold miner, and fruit-grower, Mr. Adair is well qualified to speak of the prospects which British Columbia holds out to the capitalist and the worker. For some years past Mr. Adair and his wife have made a hobby of assisting to settle British emigrants on the Pacific slope, and have placed their experience and time at the service of their fellow countrymen without pecuniary remuneration of any kind. Mr. Adair has personally placed hundreds of immigrants in situations throughout British Columbia, and he says frankly he knows of none of them who have failed.

"British Columbia can absorb thousands of agriculturists and domestic servants as fast as they can come," said Mr. Adair. "For the hard-working man with a growing family I consider there is no country in the Empire that offers better prospects. I know one man who had to borrow his passage money before he could come to Vancouver four years ago. A few weeks back I learned that he had £2,000 in the bank. Another British settler who had had a hard struggle to live in England recently informed me that within a week of arrival in British Columbia every member of his family had started work. He himself at £3 a week, his daughter, aged sixteen, at 2s. a week and board, and his wife, who until they had a home together had decided to go charring, at 8s. a week.

"After being in the country four months this industrious family saved £60; this without touching a penny of the daughter's earnings. In England he had never been able to save anything at all. So much for men who may be described as laborers. I could multiply these instances by quoting the experiences of scores of other laboring men who were practically penniless when they arrived in British Columbia, and who now have homes of their own, and who have steady work, and are earning quite double the wages they had in England. I say nothing of the fact that in British Columbia they are able to find far better openings for their children than they could have done in the Old Country.

"Naturally," continued Mr. Adair, "the man who has some capital has an immense advantage, especially in a country like British Columbia, which is developing so rapidly, and where the values are always advancing. I know one man, a very well-to-do Scotchman, whom I assisted to select a fruit farm comprising 164 acres not far from New Westminster. We made a very good bargain with the owner, the price being fixed at £900; £200 only was paid down; an instalment of another £100 was due six months later, the balance being spread over three years at seven per cent. There was a splendid seven-roomed house on the ranch, and altogether the property was a very fine one. The new owner had fully intended to settle there and make a living by fruit-growing, but after being the occupier for only eight months, and having the year's crop off, he sold the ranch at a clear profit to himself of £1,000. This may seem an extraordinary advance in value, but I could easily quote many similar instances.

"Another immigrant who came to me a year or two back also wished to buy a small farm. I spent some time visiting likely districts with him, and at last we heard of an old man and his wife who wished to sell their farm and get into the city to spend the remainder of their days there. The farm consisted of 160 acres, twenty-five acres of which were cleared and under crop. Included in these twenty-five acres were seven acres of the finest orchard I have ever seen; there was a seven-roomed house, and the price was $55 an acre, or £90 for the whole place, only one-third cash to be paid down. This was an extraordinary bargain, and I advised the new settler to close with the offer, which he did. Less than twelve months afterwards this man came to me at Vancouver and told me that he had received an offer for his farm, namely, the return of all the money he had paid; and in addition a clear profit of £300 and the year's crop.

I advised him not to take it, as he was making a good living, and if he held on the land was certain to increase, even further in value. When I was leaving Vancouver to come over to Great Britain, a few weeks ago, a neighbor told me that this man had been offered $70 an acre for the land for which he had paid only $25 an acre, but he had wisely decided not to sell.

"These high values," said Mr. Adair, "are not the result of speculation in land, but are undoubtedly justified by the extraordinary crops which can be grown on the soil of British Columbia. I have myself taken five tons of fruit from one acre of strawberries in a single season, and sold that quantity for £248. More remarkable still, that crop was the sixth yearly crop from the same plants. As we have no killing frosts in that part of British Columbia, strawberry plants do not become practically unproductive after two seasons as in England. A crop worth £160 an acre from strawberries in the Fraser River valley is not at all exceptional. One man sold his worth from three acres in one season.

"The demand for trained domestic servants is still far from being satisfied, notwithstanding the fact that my wife and I have assisted to settle some hundreds of British girls in British Columbia during the past few years. It would seem that no matter how many girls come in the demand will continue almost as great as ever, owing to the fact that a large proportion of the girls get married within a very short time. Some of these girls have made very good marriages indeed. One girl I know married a farmer who owns a square mile of land. Another married a man worth £20,000. I might mention the experience of a young woman who was left a widow in this country with three children before she was 30 years of age. She came to British Columbia three years ago, leaving two of her children in England. She was immediately placed in a situation in Vancouver as a domestic help, her wages being $20 a month, or £1 a week, with a room and board for herself and the little boy, aged nine, whom she had brought to Canada with her. She remained in that situation three months, and then accepted another situation at 25s. a week and board as nurse to one child. She was married from that situation to a lumberman, whose wages she sent to England for the other two children she had left behind, and today this little family are living in a beautiful cottage of their own, have every comfort, and are perfectly happy and satisfied with the country.

"The climate in British Columbia is good, and the conditions of life are such that I have known educated women who would have scorned the idea of becoming domestic servants in England, who find the life as a domestic help in British Columbia quite congenial."

STEWART CITY AN EXPORT TERMINUS

Cut Off of 350 Miles Over Existing Roads for Prairie Wheat

Stewart as a prairie export town, by a three-hundred-and-fifty-mile cut-off, is the view-point of Robert Stewart, one of the founders of Stewart on Portland Canal, who, with J. W. Stewart, arrived in Victoria last night. He points out that the coast is 500 mile distant from the prairie on the C. P. R., that 750 miles intervene on the Grand Trunk line, but that with the proposed C. N. R. line to be built from the head of Portland Canal through Bear, Naas and Peace valleys to reach the C. N. R. at Edmonton, the distance from prairie to ocean will be but 400 miles, and that the easier excess will mean cheaper transportation and large grain shipments to the northern terminus. There he figures that Stewart will be come an important shipping point.

Prospectors are busy in the Naas river, and J. W. Stewart says the Fitzgerald part, which went in last January, has returned for supplies and gone back to continue its prospect with an outfit for the summer. Samples running to 200 ounces silver have been found on the White river, says Mr. Stewart, and these carry fair gold values. He also speaks of the opportunities for the rancher in the valleys to the north between the Naas and Stikine rivers. He expects that a rush of locators and settlers will be there this summer.

INDICTED BY GRAND JURY.

Seattle, Wash., March 31.—Frank and John Clancy, brothers, old-time political bosses, saloonkeepers and gamblers, in the early days of the Alaskan rush, are out on $10,000 bail each under indictment returned by the grand jury charging the men with operating a handbook. That the Clancys controlled the handbooks' string was the charge made openly by the prosecutor's office. The indictment was the first active steps taken against them.

BIG STEAM SHOVELS.

Six big steam shovels, to be used for construction work in the mountains, and a huge gasoline launch, known jocularly among the contractors as the "G. T. P. Dreadnought," are being shipped from Edmonton to the end of steel at Prairie creek, says the Fort George Tribune. The steam shovels are to be taken up into the mountains beyond the summit, where they will be employed by Foley, Welch & Stewart.

GOOD RESULTS OF OIL AS FUEL

ITS ADAPTABILITY TO MARINE USE CERTAIN

Local Steamship Lines Are
Up-to-Date in the Adoption of This System

The uniformly good results obtained whenever oil fuel has been given a properly-arranged test on an ocean-going steamship, have made it certain that some day, and not so far in the future, oil will take the place of coal as the fuel of the great trans-Atlantic steamships. One remarkable fact in favor of oil fuel is that, in spite of the unusual number of advantages to be derived from the change, there is practically no serious disadvantage. Furthermore, the larger the ship, the more marked are the conveniences and economies attending the change from oil, says the Scientific American.

cent issue of our Scottish contemporary, The Steamship, which briefly summarizes the advantages of oil firing, as follows: Steady steam pressure; an absence of "dirty" fires, and no necessity for cleaning fires (which last because of the opening of fire doors and cooling off of furnaces, is estimated to cause a loss of 12½ per cent of steam on a seven-day voyage, with a corresponding loss of speed); reduction of bunker space to five-eighths of that required for coal, and a great reduction of the force of stokers.

It is pointed out that portions of the ship which are now useless as coal bunkers, because of their narrowness or inaccessible position, are always available for the storage of oil fuel. The double bottom may be thus used, and the trim of the ship may be preserved by admitting sea water to the emptied oil tanks. The objectionable list to the port or starboard, due to using more coal from one side of the ship than from the other, is avoided; a steam pump serving to transfer oil fuel from side to side at a moment's call.

"Lusitania," which shows, in a very striking manner, what fuel oil could do for these great ships. The average consumption, at a sea speed of 25 knots is 5,500 tons of coal for the single voyage, or 11,000 tons for the round trip. If oil were used, 3,300 tons could be stored in the double bottom of the ship, leaving the coal bunkers available for cargo. It is estimated that 600 tons of oil would do, in twenty-four hours the work that could be accomplished by 1,000 tons of coal; and this would represent a saving of about 2,000 tons of fuel on the five-day single voyage, or of 4,000 tons on the round trip. If the vacant bunker space, or its equivalent, in a ship of similar size and speed, were utilized for freight at $5 per ton, the earning capacity of the ship would be greatly increased. Of the 312 firemen and coal trimmers now carried by the Mauretania, 285 could be sent ashore and used in handling the extra cargo that would be carried. In place of 312 firemen it is estimated that 27 greasers would be sufficient to attend to the oil burners and to the water feed of the boilers. By alterations of the accommodation now reserved for the 312 firemen and trimmers, it is estimated that at least 200 third-class passengers additional could be carried at $25 per passenger. An estimate of the total economies shows that the increased earning capacity of the Mauretania on a round voyage from Liverpool to New York and back, would be about $60,000.

Lastly, on the important question of speed, it is argued that since 22 fires out of 192 furnaces in the boiler rooms of the Mauretania are cleaned every four hours, some 10,000 out of 70,000 horse-power would be lost through that disturbance of the fires and the cooling off of the furnaces which is inseparable from cleaning—all of which is avoided under oil firing. Our contemporary believes that the use of oil fuel alone would reduce the time of the voyage between Queenstown and New York by from eight to ten hours. If so, the Mauretania might be able to make the voyage in an even four days.

BRITISH LABOR MEN.

Conference With Home Secretary—
Judges Criticized by Mr. Churchill.

Winston Churchill, at the home office recently received a deputation from the Trades Union Congress parliamentary committee, when resolutions passed at last year's Trades Union Congress were submitted to him by Mr. Bowerman, M. P. Will Thorne, M. P. and others.

W. J. Davies urged that the present constitution of juries was unfair and partial, and declared that a reorganization of the system was desirable in order to insure that all classes were fairly included on jury lists. The system of common and special juries should be abolished, and juries should be paid adequately for services rendered. Since the limited liability companies had come into existence they never knew who was trying them, and if workmen offended a large firm and were prosecuted, perhaps two or three of the largest ancient members of the company were empanelled on the special jury.

J. B. Williams said the majority of the members of the legal profession would agree that the ordinary trade unionist who went into the high court before certain judges need not hope for a fair trial. The case was prejudiced before he got into the box. He thought an age limit should be put upon judges, as by that means they would remove a good number of the undesirable gentlemen who were dispensing justice.

Replying to the question of the administration of justice, Mr. Churchill said the speakers had spoken more of the conduct of judges than of the character of juries, and he could not follow them into that field.

Any question of that kind should be really more properly addressed by a deputation to the Lord Chancellor, or else should be raised in the House

Cold in Head— Deep Cough.

Mr. J. W. Finch's simple prescription is a most efficient remedy for preventing and curing coughs, colds, pneumonia, grip and all throat and lung troubles that are so prevalent at this dangerous time.

"I dissolve about 3 ounces pure roo, andy in 1-3 of a bottle of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for coughs and ordinary purposes, I was laboring under a severe attack of catarrhal cold in my head and chest, with a deep, heavy cough, when I went to bed last night, but, thank the Lord, this morning it seems to be all gone, and less than a gill of this remedy in table-spoonful doses, was taken.

"Oh, that men would use it with discretion and not abuse so valuable a remedy!"—J. Wordan Finch, McComb, Miss.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain, great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus producing a liquid food, tonic and stimulant, requiring no digestion, in the form of a medicinal whiskey. of Commons. He, however, joined with them in deprecating any general expression of opinion from the bench calculated to destroy or to weaken the confidence of the great mass of the wage-earning classes of the country in the impartial administration of justice.

He was not going to mention names or cases, but it was true that on several occasions statements had been made from the bench reflecting on trade unions in language which was extremely ignorant and out of touch with modern thought, and which had greatly complicated the administration of justice.

He should be glad, if support were forthcoming, to endeavor to bring the actual working of their jury system into closer harmony with the thoroughly old-fashioned British democratic theory, on which it had been based, but from which it had so long departed.

As to the Workmen's Compensation Act, he did not think they had reached the moment for fresh amendments.

With reference to naturalization, Mr. Churchill pointed out that in these days of old-age pensions, insurance, etc., naturalization would become an increasing privilege, and if he were to reduce the fee he would be bound to couple with that reduction a more strict investigation as to the character and qualification of the person, so as to justify himself before the public.

ANCIENT SKELETON.

Remains of Man Found Supposed to Be 170,000 Years Old.

The skeleton of a man recently found in the Thames behind Galley Hill, near the chalk pits of North Fleet, is declared by Prof. Arthur Keith to be 170,000 years old. In delivering the humanitarian lecture, before the Royal College of Surgeons recently, on the "Antiquity of man," Professor Keith said he had arrived at his estimate of the time when the level of the river was from 30 to 100 feet higher than it is to-day.

A consideration of the parts of this skeleton shows how old the modern type of man is.

The Galley Hill man, although differing in several features, is essentially modern in type and is the only representative known of thousands of generations of Englishmen which span the vast period of human life in this country from the glacial period to to-day.

The Famous Rayo

A Lamp with Diffused Light should always be used where several people sit, because it does not strain the eyes of those sitting far from it.

The Rayo Lamp is constructed to give the maximum diffused white light. Every detail that increases its light-giving value has been included.

The Rayo is a low-priced lamp. You may pay $5, $10 or even $20 for other lamps and get a more expensive container—but you cannot get a better light than the Rayo gives.

This season's Rayo has a new and strengthened burner. A strong, durable shade-holder keeps the shade on firm and true. Easy to keep polished, as it is made of solid brass, finished in nickel.

WAS THE SECHELT WELL-BUILT BOAT?

Some Important Evidence is Taken on the Point at To-day's Hearing

Some important evidence was given at the preliminary inquiry into the Sechelt disaster, which was resumed in the post office building this morning under the chairmanship of Captain C. Eddie, examiner of masters and mates. Master Martin H. C. Jarvis stated that the Sechelt had been selected from a number of other vessels for the run to Sooke as being the most suitable that could be obtained. Captain James, who met his death in the vessel's last fateful expedition, surveyed her twice before she was actually purchased. They did not dock her for examination on purchase. Captain Stromgren took her one voyage and lost a propeller. When this discovery was made she was docked. It was then that Mr. Jarvis examined her and found that she had the lines of a yacht. Her stern post was in good condition, and the planking (hood ends) also. Her stern bearing was then renewed and when she left the ways she was in first class order.

On the day of sailing Mr. Jarvis said that the weather was moderately rough. He knew Captain James to be extremely capable, he had the highest qualifications, and had also passed in marine engineering and naval architecture.

W. Turpel, shipwright, who had hauled out the Sechelt on March 14 to break off the opposite propeller blade to the one that had been lost had a casual look over the vessel. He found her pretty well painted and in good condition generally. Her stern post looked to him to be a little farred but he did not consider it unsafe. In his opinion as a shipwright he thought she had a little too much dead rise. She would be apt to be cranky unless well ballasted.

Captain Eddie asked him if he thought she carried too much house for her hull. Witness replied that he could not say definitely as he had not examined her closely. Her house could not be higher than the law allowed.

"Do you consider her the lines of a good boat?"

"No, I do not."

"Well, then, why not?"

"She has such lines that she might be cranky if she did not have enough ballast."

Her house was in proportion to her hull all right but he thought she had too much dead rise. However, as he had never examined to give any definite statement as to whether he considered her safe or not.

The other witness heard at the morning session was Douglas McLeod, a C. P. R. wharfinger, who gave the presiding officer a list of the cargo which the vessel took aboard on the day of the disaster. The total weight of the cargo taken on, so far as he was aware, amounted to 8,900 lbs. It consisted of 33 pairs of car wheels, 73 axle boxes, 2 switches, 30 steel rails.

Mr. McLeod was of the opinion that the cargo was stowed as best it could be under the circumstances. His check of the cargo was taken from the official returns, of which he promised to give Captain Eddie a copy.

O. C. Bass is watching the inquiry on behalf of the company.

COULDN'T RETAIN SAILORS.

Captain of Steamship Belle of Scotland Tried to Beat Boarding Houses.

Tacoma, March 31.—An attempt by Captain Nuttman of the British steamship Belle of Scotland, to beat the sail-or boarding houses in San Francisco, came to an inglorious finish to-day, himself and obtained their discharge from the boat from British Vice-Consul C. E. L. Agassiz.

On leaving San Francisco Captain Nuttman ignored the boarding houses and took two men, P. Pillaluga and L. Casaja, to sea without signing them. He intended having them sign the ship's articles after they passed out of the Golden Gate harbor, but once on the high seas Pillaluga and Casaja developed an obstinate streak. They refused to sign and as both are pretty good sea lawyers the captain found himself in an odd position. Tacoma was his first port after leaving San Francisco, and he could not get rid of the men.

As soon as they could get away from the vessel Wednesday morning, Pillaluga and Casaja hastened to the British vice-consul's office demanding that he sign them off the steamship. As they were clearly within their legal rights, there was no other course to follow.

The departure of the two men leaves the Belle of Scotland alone short in her crew. Two Japanese deserted just before leaving San Francisco, and five white sailors deserted on the boat's arrival here.

The Belle of Scotland is loading 4,000,000 feet of lumber for Australia, which will be the largest lumber cargo to leave port this season.

CHARMS OF SEA FORGOTTEN.

Skipper Thinks Fame Can Only Be Got in the Aviation World.

"Cast off your headline."

"Aye, aye, sir."

"Let go your stern line."

"Aye, aye, sir."

"All clear?"

"All clear, sir."

"Let 'er go."

With the above formula Capt. George William Tapp, former master mariner, will embark next week at Seattle on one of the most novel voyages ever undertaken by a hardened sea dog. For Captain Tapp, wearying of the monotony of the sea, has sold his command, the good ship Belle, and has purchased a Curtiss biplane, and following a few preliminary flights he says he will essay to cross the continent from Seattle to New York.

Captain Tapp has never before operated a biplane, but he is confident that but a few days will be required to master the intricacies of aerial navigation.

"It is this way," said Captain Tapp yesterday, when seen on the bridge of the Belle. "Your engine is the main hickey. If your engine starts and keeps moving it's just like falling off a log. Look at Hamilton. The reason he couldn't fly last year was because his engine wouldn't run. Now it's different with me. The Belle has an auxiliary power gasoline engine, and all I have to do is to tinker around with the thing a minute and she always starts."

"No, I never ran a biplane or any other plane before, but I once rode 150 feet in one at an exhibition, and I know what it is to fly."

Entirely innocent of an intended pun, Captain Tapp declared to-day that he was going to take up aviation so that he could get up in the world.

BANNOCKBURN MUTINY.

Case Brought Before London Court and Dismissed—Officer Acted Harshly.

The mutiny on board the Bannockburn while the ship was beached at Dover after a Channel collision, was described in the police court at London recently by the two Chinamen who were shot, and by Archibald Douglas, the chief officer, who was charged with shooting the men.

The Chinese boatswain said the crew had only been at dinner about five minutes when they were ordered to start work again. Witness said: "Half a minute," on which defendant kicked over the tray on which was their dinner. Some of them went out of the fore-castle, and then a shot was fired by defendant and Seaman Wang fell wounded. Witness was wounded through the finger by another shot. The other injured Chinaman told a similar story.

Defendant's version was that after the men had been sent to dinner, it became urgently necessary to equipt a further length of hose with the salvage steamer which was pumping out the Bannockburn. The boatswain said the men should come when they had finished dinner, and witness asked: "What foolery is this?" He continued:

"The boatswain used abusive language, and picked up a tray and threw it at me. He called out to the men in Chinese and they surrounded me. One of the men had a hammer raised. I fired high to frighten them, as two or three had iron bars. The boatswain got hold of the revolver, and in the struggle it went off, perfectly by accident. I was down with a dozen men over me when the captain arrived." A Dover boatman bore out this version of the affair.

The magistrates dismissed the case, as they considered no jury would convict on the evidence. The chairman added, however, that the bench were of opinion that defendant might have used a little more discretion in his actions towards the Chinese crew. Defendant was somewhat inclined-in plain English—to be rather a nigger-driver. That was the opinion of the bench. They would advise him to let this be a warning to him in the future. Although he had foreigners to deal with, he must remember they were human beings.

WESTERN LAND PRICES ADVANCED

Increases Announced by the Hudson's Bay Company—Buying is Active

Winnipeg, March 31.—Western Canada lands are certainly increasing in value, and it is quite evident that there will soon be no more $15 an acre land in the west. Whether this is through the reciprocity talk, railroad construction or the natural law of supply and demand reasonably priced land as measured by former standards, is certainly vanishing at a wonderful rate.

It was learned yesterday that the Hudson's Bay Company has put into effect a remarkable increase in the prices of their lands, ranging from $5 to $10 per acre, additional lands located on lines which three weeks ago were generally quoted at $14 and $15 per acre, cannot now be purchased from the company at less than $12 and $25 per acre. This will no doubt be the signal for the general increase on the part of all companies in price of their lands in the west.

Sir G. L. Gomme, clerk to the London County Council, believes that the Roman boat recently discovered on the site of the new county hall at Westminster Bridge, is probably a relic of the first fleet formed to protect the shores of Britain. A coin of Allectus, which was found in the boat, points to its date being about 200-204 A.D.

THE PASSING SHOW

New Empire Theatre.

One of the prettiest and most realistic films yet shown in Victoria is "Hako's Sacrifice," which depicts scenes from Japan. The story revolves round the devotion of an unhappy, ill-used apprentice to the little girl, "Morning Glory," who has shown him kindness. Eldora, the Fruit Girl, is full of human interest and portrays the touching love of a fruit girl, who was willing to sacrifice her life to save her lover.

Colonel Roosevelt's historic smile can be seen in the pictures of his triumphant return to New York after his African hunting experiences. "The Emancipator's Daughter" is a combination of romance and comedy, the scene being set in Southern Europe.

A splendid programme is completed, with one of Lubin's best films, entitled "A Father's Love," a moving story of poverty and pride.

Romano Photoplay Theatre.

The week-end bill of pictures at the Romano is an exceptionally good one, the head-line being "Sweet Memories," one of the most fascinating pictures you have yet seen. Announcement of pledged truth recalls life story of a mater who lapses into a reverie and her past is vividly portrayed from the cradle to old age. A pretty romance is enacted with all its attendant features. The painting of the portrait, the betrothal, the dancing of the minuet, the duel, the marriage, the motherhood, illness and death, and love and devotion of dutiful son, all combine to tell a story replete with pathos and incidents.

"The Harem Skirt" is a sensational dramatic exposition of the ruinous results of gambling. "The Hindu Prince" is a stirring drama. "Tweedle-dum Wants to Be a Jockey" is a good comedy. "The Launching of the Italian Dreadnought" is a good scenic picture, and the Romano orchestra will furnish the music for the pictures.

Majestic Theatre.

"Cast up by the Deep" depicts a wealthy lover and a poor fisher maiden who appeals very much to his fancy because of her extreme simplicity. However the fisher maiden marries one of her own class. Years after when she was a widow and he still a bachelor, he wrote a note to her, and putting it in a champagne bottle consigned it to the waves. It is cast up at her feet. Her companion gets the bottle, breaks it, and in doing so cuts his finger. Full of sympathy because of the injury, the girl fails to read the note.

"An Eventful Evening" is an interesting subject dealing with modern up-to-date womanhood and picturing a modern woman with heroism in her veins and direction in her methods. "The Stranger," a poetic picture representing happiness in the guise of an old man going about from place to place where he is needed. His work in a typical home of discontent is shown. "Hank and Hank Make a Mash," a comedy from the series now being produced by the S. and A. company. "The Jilted Joker," another comedy which is sure to cure the blues.

Cystal Theatre.

For Friday and Saturday the management have ordered a splendid set of films, all of them being released this week. A very fine film by the famous Nestor company, ranking high in the profession, is entitled "Could You Blame Him?"

Another fine picture is "Ogallah," the greatest Indian film ever taken—a broad assertion, but absolutely true. This is another special by the Powers company. "Divorce" is a very touching drama by the "Hambro" company depicting the quarrels of a young couple, after which they try to get a divorce. Before they leave for court, however, they go for a last look at their little children, who are playing at "divorce," and go through the quarrels which they have seen their parents enact. They divide their mutual belongings until they come to the dollies. The little girl refuses to be separated from her dollies, and rather than wound her, the little boy decides that divorce is a horrid game, because it makes her cry. The parents now realize the sorrow that separation would mean to their children and become reunited. There is also a Gaumont Graphic and an exceedingly funny comedy.

Bioscope and Amateurs.

Every professional actor and vaudeville artist in the world was an amateur once, and it is just by the kind of performance the Victoria theatre is giving that many famous stars in the world's musical and theatrical ranks have been discovered.

There are some very good performers on at the Victoria theatre amateur contests now, and the public criticism is to decide the merits, so it is well only to give the names of the performers. They are Ed. Hendry, Miss Lily Fish, J. Young, Miss Edna McGregor, Miss Quennie McDougall, and Messrs. Roberts and Fraser. When the ballots have been cast to-morrow night and the final count made, the winner will be presented with $50, the second $15 and the third $10.

There is a special five-cent matinee for children to-morrow afternoon, at which the full list of seven amateur performers appear. Besides the amateur pictures to be shown as follows: Corinne in Dollyland, Conquered Again, Golden Secret, The Hiding Place, The Fashions of the Past Fifty Years, The Bicycle Highwayman and Friendship, comedy.

New Grand Theatre.

Unfortunately this week has only six show nights in it, and with it close the great pianist, Vilmos Westony, will leave Victoria, and the musical people who have paid frequent visits to the popular theatre, where everybody goes, are wishing that either Westony could stay longer or the week was longer.

This player has been the one musical feature in vaudeville ever since he landed on this continent. His style of playing phrases and his variety of selections is very entertaining. The four other acts on the Grand bill are up to standard as feature acts. They are H. T. McConnell & Co., the three Leyghtons wonderful globe rollers and performers; Harry Booker and company, Irish humorists, and Vivian and Walton, musical comedy artists in a farce sketch. There are pictures by the grandioscope.

NEWSPAPER SUBSIDIES.

Government of India to Aid Papers Published in Vernacular.

In order to counteract anti-British propaganda, the government of India have decided to issue weekly newspapers in the native tongue.

This novel departure was announced in the British House of Commons by Mr. Montague, under-secretary for India. In answer to a question on the subject, Mr. Montague said: "The government of India telegraph as follows: 'An agreement has been entered into between the government of Bengal and the editor of the Indian Mirror, Rai Narendra Nath San Bahadur, who has undertaken to publish, on the lines of the Indian Mirror, a weekly vernacular paper, of which the government engage to subscribe for 25,000 copies. The term of the agreement is three years, with the condition that during that period the Rai Bahadur retains the paper under his direction. An annual sum of about $20,000, one-quarter of which has been paid in advance, will cover the cost to government. The proposal is to distribute the copies widely in the districts. In government offices, educational institutions and the parichayats. No precedent for this course can be cited.'

"The government of India explain that they considered it necessary, pari passu with repressive legislation, to attempt positive measures to assist and encourage the spread of sober opinions and accurate information where the intention and acts of government were concerned.

"A similar scheme has been undertaken in Eastern Bengal and Assam for one year at a cost of $6,500."

A government subsidized press is a new experiment under British rule, though it is common enough on the continent. There were said to be several hundred journals subsidized in Germany, where the newspapers concerned were once known as "Bismarck's reptile press."

India is a country of many newspapers. Some are printed in English by Britishers, and some in English by natives, while the number of sheets in the vernacular is legion.

The nut trees of the world, it is calculated, could provide food all the year round for the population of the globe. Brazil nuts grow in such profusion that thousands of tons of them are wasted every year.

HENRY S. TAYLOR, of Kansas City, tells the following story, and the present writing is from notes furnished by him. After returning from the Philippines he worked in a cyanide mine at Bisbee, Ariz. A judicious speculation in a copper mine netted him a comfortable fortune, and two months ago he went to Kansas City, where his family resides. The lure of the East is too strong and Mr. Taylor is now preparing to make an extended trip through the South Pacific Islands. George Stivers is a fictitious name. The real name of Henry Taylor is alive, but requests that his name be not used. His friends will know him from the story and from his relation to Mr. Taylor, but he desires to avoid publicity. Neither Mr. Taylor nor his uncle has heard from Father Pablo since January, 1903, when he was a Dominican convent in Barcelona.

In 1900, after the cruise of Charleston had been lost on a coral reef off Henigun Island, near the northwest coast of Luzon; the Manila had spent several days aground in the Sibutu Channel and several mishaps had occurred to the United States Coast Survey decided to chart the waters of the Philippines. I was assigned to the Second Division of Civil Engineers in the island of Mindanao, under Arnold P. Rawley, chief of the division. After five months of steady work the food and the climate got hold of my constitution and I obtained a furlough. Wanting a complete rest, I decided to visit my uncle, George A. Stivers, who had gone into the Province of Abra, Luzon, as a Baptist missionary shortly after the signing of the Treaty of Paris in 1898.

Letters I had recently received from him did not denote a healthy state of mind, which made me the more anxious to visit him. The last spirit of the East gets into one's blood after a time, and even missionaries are not always exempt. In short, I was afraid for Uncle George. He had never been cut out for the life he had undertaken.

The missionary business had not been very good, and three years after he had gone to the island he could boast of only fifteen converts—that is, fifteen living converts. In Abra Christianity proved to be quite as efficient a check to longevity as the typhoid. One night in March, 1901, the fifteen living converts reverted to paganism, which is the story.

We were sitting in the cool, mesh enclosed cahida of George Stivers' nipa bungalow smoking Manila cigars of a brand which never reaches the States. About three-quarters of a mile across the narrow, fertile valley smoke was rising from a score of huts in a little Igorotte hamlet, or barrio. A barefoot native servant noiselessly removed the coffee cups and other dishes. There was not enough wind to rustle the leaves of the trees, nothing was stirring, and the silence was indescribable. If you have ever experienced the stillness in the wilderness you can imagine the scene. If you have not, there are no words which could make you appreciate it.

This atmosphere of tranquillity was just what my nerves needed. The missionary was brooding—I suppose over the intractability of the heathen. I was engrossed in the quiet beauty spreading before me, thinking that were I an Igorotte, living in that semi-paradise, I would have been quite contented with my life and not at all eager to respond to the call of civilization. So we sat and smoked, the sight of the blue nicotine haze curling from our cigars accentuating the stillness.

Abruptly, in the midst of it all, the Igorotte servant ran into the cahida, excitedly mumbling some words in the vernacular to my uncle. The latter produced a startling effect. He jumped to his feet.

"Come on, Hank," he called, "there's trouble afoot." Stivers was a man of action as well as of words, commanding either as occasion demanded. I followed him through the bungalow and along a path which wound into the jungle. About three hundred yards from the shack we found the body of a man, which Stivers turned over, and in the fading light we saw a face all streaked red. Had I not known my uncle's aversion for profanity I should have thought he swore.

"It's Father Pablo," he said, "a Dominican friar who often visits me. He teaches school in Ullalo." Ullalo was a native Philippine village some two miles down the river. We did not stop for talk, but carried the man into the house, where the missionary dressed his wounds and administered stimulants.

"Do you see that little perforation in his skull?" he asked me. I examined a small, clean, round hole in the crown of the priest's skull. The hair had been shaved.

"It's not a bullet wound, is it?" I asked.

"No," replied Stivers, "as he worked over the unconscious man. 'He is the victim of a podung. That's just a little form of legal procedure they have over here. If a man is accused of crime he and the complainant are haled before a tribunal of old men, both have holes bored in their skulls, and the one who bleeds the least is adjudged to be in the right. In his own work among these people Father Pablo has met with even less success than I. The Igorottes, sharing the hatred of the native Filipinos for the priesthood, I'm telling you all this now because when Father Pablo comes to we shall probably learn that there is trouble ahead and shall have to act rather than talk."

The Test by the Gimlet.

All the time his fingers were flying nimbly, dressing cuts and adjusting bandages, while occasionally I forced brandy between the tightly closed, pallid lips of the friar. At last he groaned, but we did not let him speak as soon as he regained consciousness and he lay there nursing his strength. His first words were that he must leave us.

"Why?" asked my uncle.

"Because," he replied, "I am endangering your lives every moment I stay here. I only came to ask you for a gun."

We flatly refused to allow him to go under any circumstances, and he was so weak that he ceased to resist us. In fact, he was unable to stand. Briefly he told his story. He had gone to the band, and for an ailing child, but despite his efforts it died, and the parents accused him of causing the death by magic because they were not Christians. The Igorottes had listened with eager sympathy to the story told by the parents and had declared a podung. The priest made frantic efforts to escape, but the Dominicans never carry weapons, and he was easily overpowered. A dozen old men squatted, doubled up like packhorses, in a semicircle on the ground, and the principals in the case were dragged before them.

During the ordeal the crude gimlet with which the skull of the complainant was perforated slipped, entered his brain and killed him. As a rule this would have been considered a vindication of the defendant, but the prejudice against the Catholic caused the council to decide that he had invoked an evil spirit to bring about the death of his enemy. Sentence was passed that he should be strangled by suspending him by the neck between the forked branches of a tree.

Father Pablo ceased to be the Dominican friar and became an animal fighting for life. With a titanic effort he wrenched himself free and, snatching a creese from one of his captives, killed him. A desperate struggle ensued, but Father Pablo was fighting for the higher stake, and in the confusion he escaped. His body showed how terrific the struggle had been. By doubling on his tracks he eluded his pursuers in the dense jungle, waded a half mile or so in a running brook, circled the barrio and had found his way to Stivers' bungalow. When the Igorotte servant went for water he found the priest where he had dropped from exhaustion.

Father Pablo's story had suffered from frequent interruptions due to weakness. When he had finished Stivers sat buried in thought for several minutes.

"Didn't any of the Christian Igorottes interfere in your behalf?" he asked.

The padre laughed harshly, gratingly. "Two of your converts sat in the council," he said. "One of them bored the hole in my head."

The missionary swallowed hard. It was a cruel blow to him.

"We shall hear from them very soon," he said. "If they do not track you here my servant will probably inform them."

He called the man, but elicited no response. We searched the bungalow, the store house and the kitchen, which was in a small nipa hut detached from the bungalow, but we found no trace of the Igorotte. A trip to the spring was quite as fruitless, but we carried four large jars of water back to the shack, thinking we would have need for them.

We held a council of war and Stivers explained the situation, while I helped him inspect our rifles and get together all the ammunition we had in the place.

The Christian Igorotte had evidently deserted us and we could not rely on help from Ullalo. Although the Filipinos were more or less devout Catholics, they hated the friars, who from time immemorial had been at the root of trouble in the islands. It had been the desire of the natives that when the United States acquired the islands from Spain, or gave them their freedom, they would have their own secular clergy; but the treaty of Paris expressly stipulated that all inhabitants of whatever nationality should enjoy the same civil and property rights under the new régime as they had under the old. To the Filipino this meant that the friars were to continue in power over their lives and property, and their hatred of the ecclesiastics was redoubled.

Flight was out of the question, because of the condition of the priest. While we were talking three Igorottes emerged from the jungle and Stivers went to the door to receive them. They asked in the vernacular that Father Pablo be delivered to them. The missionary refused, warning them that we were well armed and meant to fight. The natives scoffed at this and one of them, who had formerly embraced Christianity, made an insulting grimace. Stivers upbraided him for his treachery, but the man only shrugged his shoulders, saying in very bad Spanish,

"No good healthy to be Christian. Too much die."

"All right," said Stivers, thoroughly angered, "there will be a few of you die if you come monkeying around us."

The Igorottes evidently did not hold a very high opinion of the Christian fighting spirit, for they went away sneering and flinging back coarse taunts. We had decided to make our defence in the store house, a one-room shack constructed of nipa palms with small windows in the walls at about the height of a man's shoulder.

The mission station was on a sort of terrace a little way up the side of Monte Corrojo and the storehouse huddled close against the almost perpendicular face of the mountain. This protected one side, but the other three were open to a fire from the surrounding woods.

Father Pablo was fast gaining strength, but we figured that he would need it later, so we carried him into the storehouse, cot and all. It required only a few minutes to collect all our firearms and ammunition there. Of provisions there was plenty, and the water we had brought from the well we poured into a large clothes boiler and buried it so as to protect it from bullets. The floor of the storehouse was the bare ground.

We began to barricade our position, while the priest, lying on the cot, aimed the barrels of our three magazine rifles, two shotguns and three revolvers. Stivers and I, with a pick and shovel, broke up a quantity of earth from the floor and filled some empty flour sacks with it. These we piled around the sides of the room to a height of about three feet, except at the windows, which we covered, leaving only one open in each wall. It was a long, tedious job, for the ground at a depth of a few inches was hard and full of stones, and we expected at any instant to hear the yells of attacking savages.

Constructing the Barricades.

We were unmolested, however, and managed to construct very decent breastworks, even reinforcing them to the height of two bags laid on their sides. Our plan was for each of us to guard a window if the attack should be from three sides. The mountain side we thought was pretty well protected. Our barricade would permit of only one man at a time firing from one side of the room, but if the attack of the enemy should be concentrated on one side we could temporarily tear down the bags from one of the other windows. The position of the shack, facing a dense jungle on three sides, precluded any great amount of offensive work on our part. We planned our hopes on being able to protect ourselves from the enemy's bullets and ward off any direct attack across the open space between us and the woods long enough for some detachment of troops to hear the firing and ride to our rescue. We would consider ourselves fortunate if the Filipinos from Ullalo kept out of the fracas, for we entertained no hope that they would range themselves on our side.

Our preparations complete, we sat down to wait.

The dead silence of the night crushed down on us. The soft rustle of our breathing was the only sound, for we did not speak. Stivers guarded the window which faced away from the mountain, I stood by the opening to the side to his left, and Father Pablo lay upon his cot, close against the other side, where he would be protected from the bullets. He was stronger, but we jealously nursed his vitality for emergency. I suppose we remained on for perhaps half an hour. I have no way of telling, for it seemed an age. The moon shone and I swept the open space between the shack and the woods ceaselessly with my eyes, straining them unconsciously until it seemed that they were bursting from my head. Stivers sighed once painfully from the tension.

Suddenly, as if I were walking from a dream, I saw a wavering of the tall grass near the edge of the jungle. It rippled toward us, not very fast, and left no sign of motion behind it. I whispered to Stivers.

"They will probably make for the house," he replied quickly. "We would better not let them get there. They would fire it and sparks might reach us here. Warn them off."

I knew a few things about Igorottes and warfare in the Philippines myself and had my own ideas of a proper warning. Judging from the wavering line in the grass where the men must be, I emptied five of the cartridges in my magazine rifle. There was a yell, one bullet sprang erect, plunged, thrashing with its arms and disappeared in the grass. I do not think it moved again. The fire coming from an unexpected quarter stampeded the savages and they broke from cover, running wildly for the shelter of the woods. As they fled I stopped two of them. It seemed needlessly brutal, but it behooved us to impress them with our power. Time meant everything to us, and the greater their casualties the longer they would consider before they attempted another attack across the clearing. Besides, when a man is fighting for his life the life of the other fellow seems cheap. The just to kill is in us all, and when it is aroused we are less of the man than of the animal.

I replaced the seven shells I had used and took up my station at the window again. Next time the natives would know where to direct their attack, and if

Then we both opened on them. We could see them partly hidden in the grass, and we fired two or three shots at a time, then ducked back before they had an opportunity to hit us. They retreated a little way on Stivers' side and lay in the grass, making it too hot for him to show his head at the window. The party which had attacked me broke and ran for the woods.

Repulse of the Enemy.

At Father Pablo's suggestion, he and I slipped out through the door in the hut which faced the mountain and stole around the corner of the shack, taking positions one at each corner of the wall which was open to the fire from the natives. It was a dangerous piece of business, for we did not know what had become of the party which attacked my side. Luckily they had joined the main body in the woods and did not molest me. When I had reached the corner of the hut I whistled softly, and the priest answered, showing that he was ready. At my second whistle we both stood up and opened fire on the men in the grass. It was effective, and Stivers did some shooting from the windows. When the Igorottes finally retreated to the jungle they left a number of their dead in the grass. Father Pablo and I crept back into the hut.

"I don't think they will try an open attack again," said Stivers. "We might as well close up the windows on every side but one, and leave three open there."

It seemed like a good plan, so we tore down the bags from in front of two additional openings on the side Stivers had been defending and piled them up in front of the windows on the other two sides. The plan was to let them shoot all they wanted to on every side but the front. There was a door there, and it was imperative to keep the enemy from reaching that. The door in the back of the room, facing the mountain, opened outward and could not be very effectively bolted, so we used the last of our empty flour sacks in reinforcing the barricade there.

While we were speculating as to what form of attack the natives would employ next we heard the distant gallop of horses. We scarcely dared hope it was friendly troops, and yet we could not quite crush out the thought. While the riders must have been still far away the sound ceased, and we lay breathless behind our defence, hoping against hope and waiting for some sign as to the character of the new arrivals. At last it came. A number of shots rang from the woods, and then a wild, fierce cry, "Abajo los Frailes!" and we then a number of the native Filipinos from Ullalo had joined the Igorottes. The cry of "Down with the friars!" was followed closely by a fusillade on all three exposed sides of the shack.

It was impossible to see through the windows, and Stivers cut a small hole with a creese in the wall and looked through it. Ugly covers of the heavy fire from the jungle a number of men were creeping through the grass. It was a desperate attempt, but we had to stop them, and we cut holes in the wall just above the second layer of bags, tearing the upper ones down and lying prone behind the lower ones. The priest loaded the guns as fast as we discharged them, and we were thankful that we had had the foresight to teach him to handle them. The attacking party was perplexed by the fire from a new angle, and halted. Several more rounds of shots were exchanged, but our protection outweighed their advantage in numbers and our weapons were decades in advance of theirs. The result was that once more we repulsed them. Then we rebuilt the breastworks we had torn down.

We had not a great deal of ammunition left, and the addition of the Filipinos to the force of the enemy disheartened us. Stivers was wounded in the shoulder, I was bleeding freely from the fleshy part of my right breast, and Father Pablo was so weak from loss of blood from his old wounds that he could not stand. We placed him upon the cot and stuck it up close against the wall. We did not have long to wait this time. Two or three shots tore through the roof and barely missed us. The worst had come. An attack was to be made from some distance up the mountain and we were exposed to an almost perpendicular fire. We could not hope to resist that. The natives must have reasoned that we were protected by some kind of breastworks, and had hit upon a plan which meant that we would be killed like rats. There was but one thing to do.

Working frantically, we built a square cave, like a snow house, from the bags of earth. There could not have been many marksmen on the mountain at the time, for only a few straggling shots came through the roof. In the shack were a number of bamboo poles usually used to hang bananas and other provisions from. These we placed across the top of our new barricade, besmilke, and laid bags of earth on them. This gave us a pretty cozy little bulletproof compartment. We left a space through which we could crawl in and out. Father Pablo suffered terribly when we dragged him into our cave, and we worked over him for a long time, fearing he was dying. After a few minutes the fusillade became heavier and the leaden slugs rained upon our retreat. So long as the firing continued we felt comparatively safe, for we supposed their intention was to kill us before they approached. They had had almost enough of open attacks, so we lay there and waited. No one spoke. Father Pablo groaned once in a while.

The enemy could have burned us out, but that would have been more apt to attract attention than the firing. The Twelfth United States Cavalry had been doing some scouting in the province, but none as knew what locality the troopers were in. Their interference was our only chance, and it was hardly worth considering. At last the firing stopped and we all held our breath. I experienced a feeling of pressure as one does under water. Unable to endure it any longer I crawled from our haven and crept to one of the windows. I could see nothing—only the short stretch of open ground, then the jungle, like a wall. Suddenly a bullet slipped into the bag of earth near my head, and I ducked back into the cave. I passed my hands over the priest to see if he was all right. He was clasping a crucifix, his eyes were closed and his lips were moving.

Stivers seemed to have forgotten that he was ever a missionary. The ink's blackness prevented me from seeing his eyes, but he rallied softly to himself at a government which left an acre of land in the whole archipelago unpatrolled by troops. I was turning over in my mind a plan by which I might escape and procure aid, and was just about to suggest it to my uncle when we heard a rustling, tearing sound overhead. Noiselessly I wiggled along on my back until my head and shoulders were through the opening and I was facing the roof. Some one was up there, I could tell that, but at just what point was uncertain. The others quieted their breathing. Inch by inch I dragged my gun out and put it to my shoulder, ready to fire when there was some certain mark. The man on the roof was cutting through the nipa palms. My fingers ached, so tense were they drawn and so keen was my desire to close on the trigger. But I held myself, the sweat standing all over me and literally drenching my clothes. At last the point of a large knife appeared through the roof. Evidently the man thought we were dead, for he kept on sawing through. I judged where his body must be from the position of the knife, and fired. There was a scream, but I had not killed him, for we heard him scramble from the roof and run off.

Troopers to the Rescue.

I was sorry almost that some of the bullets had not put an end to it all. We could not stand the strain much longer. I felt an impulsive longing to charge the men in the woods. Suddenly there was a wild cry from the direction of the front of the shack. The heaviest firing we had yet experienced sounded from the woods, and a few moments later a wild scramble of feet, and we could hear a large body of men rushing toward us.

"It's all up now," I cried, and we all sprang from our shelter and ran to the windows to make the best fight possible.

Forty or fifty Igorottes and Filipinos were charging toward us, but they were not firing and very few bullets were pelting our walls. Instead of trying to carry the hut, the charging men scurried past us and disappeared somewhere in the rear. On the heels of the flying savages a thin, irregular line of brown clad men emerged from the jungle. Halting in the open they fired, but the bullets were not directed at us. A few straggling shots came from the woods at the sides, but they were not effective, and the brown clad men started on a run for the shack. The situation flashed across my mind, and I shouted, I don't know what, at them through the window. They cheered and a moment later our barricade had been overthrown and a score of troopers crowded around the door.

I don't remember what was said. It was an orgy of relief. We laughed, shook hands and poured long, cool draughts of water down our parched throats. In the excitement and tension we had been under we had forgotten thirst. Our rescuers were a detachment of twenty-two troopers under Lieutenant Gilmartin, of the Twelfth Cavalry. They had been scouting in the district and had heard the shots, ridden miles to investigate and had stolen upon the Igorottes and Filipinos from the rear.

In the morning we scoured the country for hostile bands, but the savages and the Filipinos were working the fields. All ran to greet us and to declare themselves "amisgos." That is the way of war in the Philippines. The bloodthirsty gentils of the one day is the "amisgo" of the next.

That night the troops camped at the mission station and escorted us on the first stage of our journey the next day. We made a litter for Father Pablo, which served well enough until we hired a cart and a carabao from a native, who acted as our guide after the cavalrymen left us. The priest showed remarkable vitality in the way he gained strength and we left him convalescent, with friends at Bugunin. Stivers and I bought horses and went on to Lagupuan, a large town on the Gulf of Lingayen, in the Province of Pangasinan. From there we went by what purported to be a railroad to Manila.

I returned to my work in Mindanao and my uncle resumed mission work in the island of Sulu, achieving some degree of success among the Moros there. Pod Gilmartin was killed in a skirmish with Indians near Surigao, Mindanao, in 1902.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

"Said Love to the young knight: I am the humble task. I am the high adventure behind the visored mask. I am the fire of youth that fails not with the years. I am the master of passion and comforter of tears."
—Theodore Roberts.

A few weeks ago an Italian princess, lady-in-waiting to Queen Helena, was stabbed to death by her lover who immediately afterwards killed himself. Of course you read about it at the time. But did you wonder, I wonder, feel, beneath the scandal and sensation of the case, its impressiveness as a testimonial to the primitive, world-wide, not-to-be-denied power of the universal passion?

Just think, these two people, so important in the eyes of the world that the remotest country town chronicles the details of their love affair, were as powerless in the grip of this passion as the feeblest and least important of mortals.

Of course, it is an old, old story, but as I read the cabled reports of this affair I was impressed anew with it, and wanted to bring it home to you anew.

Yesterday in the park near my home I came upon two young people sauntering along with the arm-in-arm obliviousness of the last stages of heart disease.

To the casual observer they were both thoroughly commonplace, thoroughly uninteresting and thoroughly homely.

He had a wobbly chin, red hair and a somewhat irrupted complexion. She was thin and pallid, with a large nose, prominent teeth and straight, dark hair that hung in unattractive wisps about her face.

They were both plainly dressed and evidently possessed of but little of this world's goods.

And yet, on the faces of these two eminently commonplace people shone a contentment and a happiness that not the costliest pleasures of earth could have enhanced.

Just think—merely by gazing into each others' homely faces and knowing that each was beloved by the other, these two people were finding as great happiness as the richest men and women in the world can have.

Just because you see this sort of thing every day you forget the significance and power of it, but they are here just the same.

We rave of the justice of the fate that makes it possible for one man to have fine linen and rich food and magnificent horses, jewels, lawns, and leisure, while another spends long toilsome hours each day to earn enough to keep himself and his family from starvation.

Ah, but suppose fate had let all these things be evenly distributed, but had given to one man the power to feel this strange overpowering happiness and withheld it from another.

Wouldn't that have been a much less happy state of affairs?

Suppose we had to buy this happiness such as these rustic folk find and the Princess lost. What high price would we give for it? But now that it is "without money and without price," do we half appreciate it? I wonder.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Dr. Elliott S. Rowe, Vancouver, is spending a few days at the Empress.

Miss Charlotte King left yesterday via the Northern Pacific on a visit to friends in Missoula, Mont.

The Bridge Club is meeting this afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Joseph Hunter, 814 Government street.

Mrs. Neat, Quatsino, is spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wall, Spring road.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Peverett, Regina, enroute home from an extended trip through Colorado, California, Oregon and Washington, and who have been visiting W. E. Loosce, of Tod Inlet, left for the east yesterday afternoon.

Last evening at the First Presbyterian church, in the presence of a number of friends, Rev. Dr. Campbell celebrated the marriage of Mr. William James Kelly and Miss Edith Appleby, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Appleby, Victoria.

At St. Paul's church, Esquimalt, on Wednesday afternoon a marriage was solemnized by Rev. W. B. Allen between Mr. W. Howard, of the Dominion Wireless Telegraphs, and Miss M. H. Purrott, of Harmondon, England. The bride was attended by Miss L. Paesbaw and was given away by her brother, Mr. D. Purrott. A reception was afterwards held at the Dominion wireless station, Gonzales Hill.

At Llanderwen, the home of Mrs. David Spencer on Wednesday night, the young ladies belonging to the Metropolitan Club and their friends asked Mrs. Gleason to meet them, when they presented her with a beautiful cut glass bowl in recognition of the part she had taken in the preliminary arrangements for the performance of the "Temple of Fame." Being called from the city, Mrs. Gleason was obliged to be absent when the entertainment was held.

COQUITLAM MILL DESTROYED BY FIRE

Loss Estimated at Nearly $200,000—Plant Will Be Rebuilt

New Westminster, March 31.—The actual loss of about $200,000 caused by the destruction by fire of the Pitt River Lumber Company's new mill at Coquitlam, the total loss reaching around the $200,000 mark with only from $65,000 to $70,000 insurance.

With the high east wind that was blowing the flames soon had complete mastery over the mill and it was soon evident that the fine structure was doomed.

The mill was equipped with fire fighting devices, including a pump, with a capacity of 750 gallons a minute. Before the water had been playing on the flames for any length of time the fire had twisted the iron pipe, used for supplying water, which crossed the building, out of shape, and rendered the pump useless.

T. W. Gray, vice-president of the company, said that the company was too good to be neglected because of a fire. In addition to the plant and machinery, about 2,000,000 feet of dressed lumber and several carloads of shingles were burned. Only a few shingles, one shed of lumber and the office were saved.

STATE WILL TAKE OVER TELEPHONES

British Postmaster - General Says Question of Rates Not Yet Settled

Next year the state takes over the national telephone system, and the question of the cost of administration and the rate of charges is already beginning to exercise the minds of business corporations and municipal bodies, says a London exchange.

Mr. Samuel, postmaster-general, replying to the views put forward by an influential deputation, said that he had already announced that it was his intention to make no change of rates until it had been decided what sum the post office would have to pay for the National Telephone Company's plant. With regard to the method of charging, expert opinion in the United States, in Germany, and in this country was almost unanimous in favor of the measured rate.

It had been pointed out that since the "measured rate" of payment by calls had been imposed for new telephones, traders starting in business were under a disadvantage compared with their older rivals who paid the "flat rate," an inclusive yearly sum.

Mr. Samuel quite agreed with the injustice of this. The flat rate was a great convenience to the subscriber, who knew precisely what he was paying for the telephone, and it was a great economy for the large consumer, who got his service often under cost price.

The measured rates now charged had, in fact, to be somewhat higher than would otherwise be necessary, just because a large number of telephone subscribers were getting their telephones below cost price.

With respect to municipal control, he was doubtful whether telephony was a field in which municipal authorities could venture with advantage, in view of the necessity for highly-paid capital, and in view of the fact that municipal areas did not make ideal telephone areas.

Under the Act passed in 1899, authorizing municipalities to undertake telephone services, only six started services, and of those six only two survived, two having been sold to the National Telephone Company.

Regarding the appointment of a select committee, Mr. Samuel said he had no objection to an inquiry being held before an inquiry into the system of rates was made, if the rates which the post office found itself able to offer after the transfer of the National Telephone Company's undertaking were not acceptable to the community.

In the case of a London firm which uses three telephone lines, each of them on the "flat rate" system costs £17 10s. a year. On the measured system, so much per number of calls, in addition to the fixed charge of 4 10s. per line, each line would cost on an average £120 per year.

The postmaster-general states that the employees of the National Telephone Co. in receipt of less than £200 a year, who have served not less than two years, will be taken into the service of the post office.

To thaw out frozen water pipes without danger of bursting them or of igniting surrounding woodwork is the purpose of a new electrical appliance.

KING GEORGE ON ENGLISH BIBLE

Translation of the Scriptures Came Like Broad Light in the Darkness

The tercentenary of the authorized version of the English Bible was commemorated in London by the Presentation of a specially bound copy to King George by a deputation headed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and representing the various Protestant bodies of the United Kingdom.

The King's reply was directed to a wider public than that of his own dominions. His Majesty spoke of "the joint celebration" by English-speaking peoples of this glorious and memorable achievement, which, coming like a broad light in the darkness, gave freely to the whole English-speaking people the right and power to search for themselves for the truths and consolation of our faith. During three hundred years, multiplying millions of English-speaking races, spreading evermore widely over the surface of the globe, have turned in their need to the grand simplicity of the authorized version, and drawn upon its inexhaustible springs of wisdom for their courage and joy.

REPLACE COAL BY HEAT OF SUN

Radiant Energy to Extent of 7,000 Horse Power Per Acre Wasted

To every inhabitant of the solar system, said Sir James Thomson in a recent lecture, whether resident on the earth or Mars, the subject of radiant energy was one of vital importance; for the planets were not living on their own resources. They were dependent for their energy from day to day, on the supplies they received from the sun. The solar system was a power distribution scheme on an enormous scale, and the sun was the power station.

The method by which energy was transmitted was practically wireless telegraphy; for they had every reason to believe that radiant energy travelled to us from the sun in the form of something mechanically equivalent to electrical waves. Practically the whole of the power which we used for the purpose of the world's work came to us from the sun.

For example, the energy in coal was just energy sent to us from the sun and transformed by plants into the energy corresponding to chemical separation. The amount of energy sent to us from the sun was, he thought, larger than many people would believe. Measurements had shown that when the sun was shining in a clear sky it was transmitting to the earth power which corresponded to 7,000 horse-power per acre. At present, that power was practically wasted.

Attempts had been made from time to time to utilize this enormous supply of energy. If we knew how to harness this power we could, by lowering the temperature of the earth by a degree or so, obtain all the power necessary to run the work of the world.

There was no doubt that in the energy of the sun we had a great resource to fall back upon when coal power was exhausted. The sun's rays, Prof. Thomson pointed out that in the course of his addresses he wanted to study the laws according to which radiant energy is propagated and how it depended upon the temperature, and he proceeded to deal with the total amount of energy that came out and what was emitted through other than the body's various temperatures. It was necessary to have some means of detecting this energy other than the eye. Bodies gave out radiant energy at all temperatures, except absolute zero, but the energy they gave out did not affect the eye until the temperature rose to 500 or 600 degrees Fahrenheit.

Radiant heat, he explained, was not heat at all until it had fallen upon bodies whose temperature might be raised. It might as well be called electricity; for it was, he believed, electrical phenomena. The method that had been used to detect and measure this energy depended upon absorbing it and transforming it into heat.

Many people had the idea that the sun's heat might be maintained by the constant influx of meteors. They believed that the sun was catching meteors all round the solar system, and that that was sufficient to account for the heat. There was, however, an objection to that, because, if that were the case, we should be acting as a kind of umbrella to the sun, and the number of meteors that would fall on the earth itself red hot. The only hypothesis at

 CORONATION VISITORS

Immense Sums to Be Paid for Houses by American Millionaires

Among the vast army of Americans who are to visit London for the coronation will be many multi-millionaires, some of whom have already secured West End houses or flats in the chief hotels.
 One Liberal peer has refused an American offer of £10,000 for the use of his residence for six weeks. Another American has offered £17,000 for the tenancy of a house in Hill street during May, June and July, but the owner refuses to take less than £20,000.
 Mrs. William Leeds, Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Goebel, American widows possessing vast wealth, will be important hostesses this year. All these ladies have already entertained royalty in the person of King Edward, or the Kaiser, while yachting in southern seas. Mrs. Leeds has secured a lease of Mrs. George Keppel's fine house in Grosvenor street. Mrs. J. J. Astor is in search of a new London home, as her occupancy of 17, Portman square, is soon to terminate.
 The private residence of the prime minister, 28, Cavendish square, always greatly coveted by reason of its splendid reception rooms, old mahogany staircase and walls painted by Sir John Thornhill, two centuries ago, has been secured by Lady Cunard, an Anglo-American hostess of great prominence.
 The selection of Mr. Hays Hammond, as the special representative of the United States at the coronation has given great satisfaction. He is an immensely popular man, an ideal host and a great sportsman.
 While in London Mr. Hammond will stay at 1, Stratton street, the old Piccadilly home of the late Baroness Burdett Coutts, where the present Queen frequently stayed as a child, the honoree being a personal friend of her mother, the late Duchess of Teck.
 Besides the marvellous collection of Queen Anne and Early Georgian silver, there is a vast quantity of very valuable china at No. 1, Stratton street. If Mr. Hammond chooses to entertain on an extensive scale he will be able to cover the huge dinner table with Flaxman silver, or he can make use of a service of gold with beakers and goblets of exquisite workmanship.
 In the gallery is Sir Joshua Reynolds' favorite chair, while on the walls hang many pictures by this famous painter. The frescoed "Winged Victory" from Yannis, showing the wonderful gold work of the Greeks with the chisel 2,000 years ago, first folio Shakespeare, Raeburn pictures of Scott, and the Mulgrave picture of Pitt, painted in the year of his death by Hoppner, are a few of the other treasures of which Mr. Hammond will be the temporary guardian. It is said that he will pay £2,000 a week for the use of the house during the six weeks of his occupancy.
 It is expected that there will be a brilliant coronation entertainment at Dorchester house, and that the Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid's royal guests will include the Kings and Queens of England, Spain and Norway.

ROYAL WARRANT IS GRANTED YACHTSMEN

Annual Meeting of Royal Victoria Yacht Club—Club House Sites

The members of the Victoria Yacht Club assembled last night at the annual meeting in the Pioneer hall, and departed as members of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. The retiring commodore, Granville Cuppage, stated that he had made it known to the admiralty several months ago that the club was eligible in every way to fly the blue ensign, and a few days ago the royal warrant arrived. This was read at the meeting. The distinctive sign chosen by the club for their ensign is very pretty, being composed of the letters V and I, standing for Vancouver Island, and surmounted by a crown. The enthusiasm aroused by the commodore's announcement having subsided, the main business of the evening was brought up. This was the selection of a new site for the club house. Three different sites, but although the discussion lasted for over an hour, nothing definite could be settled, owing to the divergence of opinion. It was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the committee for a while longer, and have them report at a meeting to be called as soon as they are aware of being able to secure any one location.

There was a question whether it would not be better to go to Esquimalt harbor or Cadboro Bay. Two plans are feasible in regard to the former site, one the obtaining of a piece of land close to the old naval club, and the other the buying of the hulk "Glory of the Seas" and reconstructing her as a floating club house.

J. Musgrave reported that the company in possession of the Uplands Farm subdivision, Cadboro Bay, are almost certain to donate an acre, or at least a half acre to the Victoria Yacht Club. The objections raised by some of the members were that the Bay was too shallow, that it was exposed to the wind from the southeast, and that it was not handy to the racing course. In answer to these arguments J. S. Gibb, and Alderman Langley replied that they did not think the bay was unduly exposed, and, in any case, it would not be at all impossible to build a small marine railway by means of which the boats could be hauled on to the shore in winter, the reason to be feared. He also said that in the present prosperous financial condition of the club, and from the money which would be returned from the sale of the old site, a power boat might be purchased, which, if necessary, could tow the boats to the racing course. They were sure the car line would be built long before the club could become settled at Cadboro Bay.

The fact that the "Glory of the Seas" would constantly depreciate in value, while the land at Cadboro Bay would, as time went on, become more valuable, was another point in favor of the latter. Also the reconstructing of the hulk would cost in the neighborhood of $1,000. Someone asked what the club would have in two or three years if the decision went in favor of the hulk, and one of the members answered facetiously: "the hulk."

The Victoria Automobile Association had hinted that if the site at Cadboro Bay was secured they would affiliate with the Yacht Club and form a large country club. Here again there was discussion. Some of the members thought that they should remain absolutely independent while others said the plan was an ideal one. It was explained to the doubtful ones that the Automobile Association would have to join the Yacht Club and vice versa. It would still be the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

A tribute to the memory of the late Capt. James, who was a victim of the Sechart disaster was put upon record. Capt. Jarvis made the motion and it was unanimously carried. It is as follows: "That the officers of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club do deeply lament the death of their greatly esteemed helper and member, Capt. Harold Victor James, whose manly Christian character and example endeared him to all who were privileged to know him and whose ability and zeal in promoting the interests of the R. V. Y. C. merited for him the highest appreciation and warmest thanks of the entire club."

Another matter discussed was whether or not the club should unite with the International Power Boat Association, which arranges handicaps and all details of long distance motor boat races and in return for this charges each club a fee of 25 cents per member.

Concerning the international regatta to be held here from July 1 to 6 it was decided that each club taking part written to explaining that the expenses would run up to about $1,750 and asking them to forward their share before the meeting.

In recognition of the valuable service he has rendered the club in many ways and particularly in securing the royal warrant, Granville Cuppage was made a life member. Mr. Cuppage explained that Capt. Clive Phillips-Wolley had greatly assisted him in this work, upon which it was unanimously agreed that Capt. Wiley also be made an honorary member. The following officers were elected: Commodore, J. Musgrave; vice-commodore, Walter Adams; rear-commodore, Mr. O'Reilly; secretary-treasurer, H. G. Jarvis; committee of management, Mr. Beaton, Dr. Harper, C. Bennett, Thompson, W. A. Turner, G. Bennett, E. S. Wise, W. D. O. Rochford and H. T. Barnes.

RUMORS OF BIG BATTLE IN MEXICO

(Times Leased Wire.) El Paso, Texas, March 31.—Conflicting reports are coming to-day from Douglas and Nogales, relative to a reported battle at Ures, Mexico, in which 1,000 persons are said to have been killed and wounded.

American officials at Nogales declare the affair was merely a long distance skirmish between 100 federals and 80 rebels. Douglas reports on the contrary, insist that it was a big fight with many killed. No direct confirmation of either story has yet been obtained.

DISCUSS PROPOSED ARBITRATION TREATY

(Times Leased Wire.) Washington, D. C., March 31.—Details of the proposed arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States were discussed this afternoon at a conference between Secretary Knox and Ambassador Bryce.

UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE

(Special to the Times.) London, March 31.—The annual boat race between Oxford and Cambridge, from Putney to Mortlake, will be rowed to-morrow, starting at half-past two in the afternoon, when the tide serves. Betting was three to one on Oxford until Cambridge bucked up in the trials, with ineluctable weather conditions after the odds fell to six to four on Oxford, at which they now rule. The general opinion is that the race will be remarkably close, and it is singular that while Oxford is undoubtedly the favorite, every one agrees that Cambridge looks a better crew on the water. There has been no change in either crews since a change was made in the Dark Blues owing to the retirement of C. A. Gladstone by medical orders.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS FOR THE DOMINION

Returns for Year Show Increase of More Than $13,000,000

(Special to the Times.) Ottawa, March 31.—Customs returns of the Dominion for the fiscal year ending to-day will, when all returns are in, show an increase of over $13,000,000 compared with the preceding year. The returns received to noon show total receipts of $72,345,868, an increase of $12,250,939, and this will be further increased by about $1,600,000 when the books for the year are finally closed.

a Pair of Scissors!

When the ad-reader gets busy with a pair of scissors, and begins to clip out ads yours OUGHT TO BE THERE.

For these clipped ads serve as memoranda on little trips—little buying excursions—shopping, house hunting, property hunting, servant hunting trips. They decide the trend of the day's quests. They influence the day's business deals—more than that; they initiate them. Many of the day's deals, sales and purchases would not have been made at all but for them. So have your ad. in the Times when the ad-reader looks for a pair of scissors.

EXTRACT FROM "BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL" March 23, 1907.

"A Most Valuable Food"

At a time when the preparation of artificial foodstuffs is receiving more attention than ever before, and when new forms of easily assimilable fat to take the place of cod liver oil are being frequently brought to the notice of the medical profession, it is desirable that some of the older forms of administering natural fats should not be lost sight of. Among natural fats, butter easily takes first place for nutritive value, and when combined with a suitable soluble carbohydrate, a most valuable food is produced.

The BUTTER SCOTCH which Messrs. Callard & Bowser (Duke's Road, Euston Road, W. C.) have prepared for fifty years, is such an article, which has the great advantage of being palatable, so palatable in fact, that children are more likely to meet resistance from excess than any persuading to take it. This BUTTER SCOTCH is stated to contain 87 per cent. of fat and 7.3 per cent. of sugar, and the results of an analysis which we have made recently of a specimen substantially confirm these figures. Further chemical examination of the fat extracted showed it to be genuine butter fat. This confection can therefore be recommended, not only as a harmless sweetmeat, but also as a very useful addition to the diet in suitable cases.

NOTICE OF SLACK

WATER IN PASSES

Marine and Fisheries Department Issues Guide for Benefit of Mariners

At the local offices of the marine and fisheries department a large number of notices dealing with the slack water in Seymour Narrows and other dangerous passes between Vancouver Island and the mainland have been received. Any mariners or persons who wish to secure a copy of them may do so by calling at the department's office on Wharf street. They read as follows: The northern passes between Vancouver Island and the mainland of British Columbia include Seymour Narrows, the Yuculta, and several other narrow channels and passages between the islands, in which rapids occur during the run of the tide. A knowledge of the time of slack water in these is of the first importance to the lumber industry, as well as for navigation in general.

The rapid current in these passes, amounting to 10 or 12 knots, is due to the difference in the time of the tide to the north and to the south. The difference is five hours, or practically the tidal interval; and consequently, high water at the northern end of the straits leading to the narrows is simultaneous with low water to the south in the Strait of Georgia and vice versa. There is thus a difference of level in the two directions equal to the whole range of the tide, which may well account for the swiftness of the current.

The time of slack water in these passes has now been ascertained correctly from observations and investigations made by the tidal and current survey, under Dr. W. B. Dawson, the superintendent. It has thus become clear that the attempt formerly made to refer these passes to Port Townsend is far from satisfactory; and for the half tide the result is so far out as to be misleading.

Observations of the turn of the current in Seymour Narrows were obtained by the United States coast survey in 1897. Further observations were obtained by the Canadian tidal survey in 1910, taken simultaneously at Seymour Narrows and the Yuculta, by two observers in camp for six months, with chronometers for accurate time.

The reduction of these observations has proved difficult. In the first place, the relation of slack water to the time of high and low water in the locality is very irregular; the time interval between them varying from ten minutes to four hours. A comparison with simultaneous observations at Seattle, in the Strait of Georgia also shows a wide variation in time, amounting occasionally to 1 1/2 hours earlier or later than the average value. Investigation has proved, however, that the time of slack water is more closely related to the tide of the open Pacific than to any type of tide found within Vancouver Island. From this clue, a practical method has eventually been discovered, as satisfactory results can be obtained by the use of the differences with Port Simpson given below; provided that the difference for low water is subtracted from the next following tide at Port Simpson. The relation of the time of slack water to the tide when worked out in any other way is so variable as to be quite uncertain. Differences with the tide tables for Port Simpson are as follows:

For high water slack add to time of high water, as under: Seymour Narrows, add 3 hr. 54 min.; Yuculta; at southern end of Stuart Island, add 3 hr. 58 min.

For low water slack subtract from time of low water, as under: Seymour Narrows, subtract 3 hr. 37 min.; Yuculta, subtract 3 hr. 27 min.

Full tables for slack water in Seymour Narrows are in preparation for next year's tide tables; and in their calculation a further improvement in accuracy will be obtained by distinguishing the lower low water from the half tides.

Seymour Narrows and the Yuculta are the two extreme passes, next Vancouver Island and next the mainland. Information regarding the intermediate passes has been obtained from captains having long experience in the region; and the best time relations with the other passes are being ascertained by a most careful digest of this information.

KIDNAPPERS STEAL

BOY FROM MOTHER

Child Held Until Parents Pay $12,000 — Kidnappers Make Their Escape

(Times Leased-Wire.)

Albuquerque, N. M., March 31.—Details of a coup by which four masked kidnapers stole the grandchild of Judge H. L. Waldo, general counsel for the Santa Fe railroad, and returned him only after a ransom of $12,000 had been paid, were revealed here today with a beginning of a hunt for the criminals.

The kidnaping occurred at East Las Vegas and the baby victim was Waldo, two-year-old son of Attorney A. T. Rogers.

On Wednesday night at midnight, while Rogers was away from his home, four masked men appeared at the Rogers' villa, covered Mrs. Rogers with a revolver and ordered her to take her child from the crib, dress him and deliver him to them. Frenzied with apprehension for her baby, Mrs. Rogers offered the kidnapers all her jewels and silver if they would spare the child. Her pleas were curtly refused and the kidnapers handed her a typewritten letter demanding $12,000 in bills of no greater denomination than $10 by at least midnight of Thursday. Failing payment, they said the child would be killed.

Mrs. Rogers was told to display a red light from the rear of her house at 11 o'clock Thursday night if it was decided to pay the ransom.

All day Thursday the mother of the kidnaped child endured the killing suspense and at the appointed hour that night the red light flamed from the designated window.

According to instructions, William Rogers, the child's uncle, then left in an automobile for Onama, 15 miles east of Las Vegas, where he had been instructed to pay over the money. When Rogers arrived at the designated spot the four masked men stepped out of their concealment and ordered him to keep his hands on the steering gear wheel of his machine. Then they searched his pockets, got the $12,000 in cash and the letter of instructions they had left. Rogers was instructed to go to Kearney's Gap, 15 miles in another direction, where he was told how to find the child.

Rogers complied to the letter and found the child asleep in an arroyo in the mountains. The baby had been carefully covered with a blanket and, screened from the chilly winds, was sleeping soundly.

Putting on all speed, Rogers at once returned to East Las Vegas and delivered the baby to his mother. He then gave the alarm and within an hour the hunt was on for the kidnapers.

One of the kidnapers is said to have been partially identified as Dennis Hart, bank robber and escaped convict, who recently escaped from jail at Albuquerque.

BUSINESS IN STATES

New York Banker Says Capitalists Are Awaiting Decisions of Supreme Court.

Portland, Ore., March 31.—"Business throughout the United States is good, though not up to the top notch," said Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York, here today.

Vanderlip is en route to the east after a tour of the southwest. He declared that while business is good and prospects for crops are promising, capital is not active, for the reason that investors are waiting the decision of the United States supreme court in suits involving the anti-trust act.

In discussing the financial lethargy, Vanderlip said:

"The Supreme court decisions in the Standard Oil and American Tobacco cases will have much to do in affecting the concentration of capital in enterprises that in any way appear to infringe the anti-trust law. Capital is awaiting the decision before investing."

The opening of the tariff question by congress also has its relative power of depression. There are other depressing influences too, but despite all of them there exists in this country a hopeful, optimistic feeling.

Vanderlip will tour the northwest states before returning to New York.
