TO THE KING

SIRE,

THIS CONCORDANCE was begun with a design to promote the study and knowledge of the holy Sc. ptures, and the method taken therein is deemed by competent judges to be the best towards a complete Concordance that hath hitherto appeared in our language. It is acknowledged to be an useful book to private Christians who search the Scriptures, and to be very necessary for all the Preachers of the Gospel: Therefore to whom can this new Edition be more properly offered than to your Majesty, now in the beginning of your reign, having already manifested a great regard to religion, and an earnest concern for promoting it among your subjects?

ALL other books are of little or no importance in comparison of the holy Scriptures, which are a revelanot only "to read the law of Moses all the days of their life, but also to write out a copy of it with their own hand, that they might learn to fear the Lord their God, and keep all the words of his law;" it may be reasonably expected that Christian Princes should make the glorious Gospel of our Lord and Saviour

JESUS CHRIST their daily study, that it may become their constant guide and rule for the government of their people, as well as for their own salvation.

It hath been often observed, that the most effectual way to a general external reformation is "to make "Religion a step to preferment, and Irreligion a bar to it;" because example has a more powerful influence over the minds of men than precept, or even than punishment. The early declarations and strong resolu-tions your Majesty was pleased to make at your coming to the throne, "That you would encourage those "who are religious, and discourage those that are otherwise," rejoiced the hearts of all who earnestly desire the revival of vital and practical religion, and to see your Majesty's subjects a holy and happy people.

True piety has been in all ages accounted the truest honour; for Religion diffuses the greatest glory around a human character, and sweetens and embalms the memory of Princes. A pious Prince, who hath shewn a hearty concern for the eternal happiness of his people, as well as for their present protection, will be remembered with great esteem and honour; for the Scripture says, that "the memory of the just is "blessed." When they are spoken of, it is with praise and commendation by all good men. All other accomplishments, without true grace and real religion, cannot make the children of men happy, who must all die and rise again, "and appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, to receive according to what they "have done in the body, whether good or bad."

THE memory of Hezekiah, the religious King of Judah, is precious: he hath been celebrated in all ages of the Church for his pious zeal in the reformation of his people at the beginning of his reign; for "God horours those that honour him, and they who despise him shall be lightly esteemed." It is said of that pious King, that "he trusted in the Lord God of Israel, so that after him there was none like him "among all the Kings of Judah, nor any that were before him: for he clave to the Lord, and departed not "from following him, but kept his commandments, which the Lord commanded Moses." Hezekiah, like your Majesty, began his reign in his youth, yet his zeal for the worship of God, and for promoting Religion among his subjects, carried him through the great difficulties of reforming a people, who had so much degenerated into gross idolatry. May the great God be the guide of your life, and direct and prosper you, that it may be said by the present and future ages, that KING GEORGE THE THIRD hath been an HEZEKIAH to our British Israel.

I DOUBT not but your Majesty will pardon my forbearing to enter upon your valuable personal accomplishments: I shall only add that, when it pleased God, the sovereign Lord of life and death, to deprive us of the blessing of your Royal Graudfather King George the Second, the Protector of our Religion and Liberties for many years, it was esteemed a national blessing that God had favoured Great Britain with a Prince born and educated among us, who makes the happiness of his People the rule of his government; and without Religion there can be no real happiness for Prince or People.

When your Majesty came to the throne, the loyal and affectionate addresses from your subjects in all parts of the British dominions, shewed their great hopes and strong expectations of heing happy under your Majesty's government. We of the British nation have reason thankfully to remember the appearances of Divine Providence in the preservation of our Religion and Liberties, particularly in settling and establishing the Protestant Succession, and in disappointing from time to time all the contrivances and attempts of its enemies, whether secret or open; and in your Majesty's coming to the throne with the hearts of all your subjects united to you as the heart of one man.

May it please God to bestow his choicest gifts upon your Majesty, upon your Royal Mother the Princess Dowager of Wales, and all the Royal Family, and upon your numerous and powerful People. May you be blessed, and made a real blessing, and may your reign be long and prosperous; and after you have been enabled to serve God faithfully here upon earth, may you reign for ever with him in heaven through Jesus Christ. This is the sincere and earnest prayer of him who is, with great humility and profound respect.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most dutiful,

And most obedient subject and servant,

TO THE OUEEN.

MADAM,

THIS CONCORDANCE, the work of several years, was begin with a design to promote the study of the holy Scriptures; and, in pursuance thereof, is now published with many improvements beyond any book of this kind in the English language.

Long before this Work was ready for the press, I designed humbly to offer it to your Majesty, and to beg leave to publish it under your royal protection. Your Majesty's illustrious qualities and example in the great secues of your valuable life, encourage me humbly to beg your countenance to a well-meant attempt for promoting the knowledge of our holy Religion.

THE beauty of your person, and the fine accomplishments of your mind, were so celebrated in your father's court, that there was no Prince in the Empire, who had room for such an alliance, that was not ambitious of gaining a Princess of such noble virtues into his Family, either as a Daughter, or as a Consort.

And though the heir to all the dominions of the house of Austria was desirous of your alliance, yet you generously declined the prospect of a Crown that was inconsistent with the enjoyment of your Religion. The great Disposer of all things, however, kept in store a reward for such exalted virtue, and by the secret methods of his wisdom hath brought your Majesty to a Crown, as famous for defending and supporting the Protestant Religion, as it is conspicuous for its glory and splendor; which is such a return of Divine Providence as is to be admired with great thankfulness, though without the least surprise, since He whose kingdom ruleth over all hath declared, that such as honour Him, He will honour.

It was the fame of this heroic constancy that determined his Majesty to desire in marriage a Princess who was now more celebrated for her Christian magnanimity, than for the beauty of her person, which had been so universally admired. We of the British nation have reason to rejoice that such a proposal was made and accepted, and that your Majesty, with regard to these two successive treaties, shewed as much prudence in your compliance with the one, as piety in your refusal of the other. You no sooner arrived at Hanover than you improved the lustre of that court, which was before reckoned among the politest in European dispersed the lustre of that court, which was before reckoned among the politest in European dispersed the lustre of that court, which was before reckoned among the politest in European dispersed the lustre of that court, which was before reckoned among the politest in European dispersed the lustre of the court, which was before reckoned among the politest in European dispersed the lustre of the court rope, and increased the happiness of a people, who were before looked upon as the happiest in the Empire. And you immediately became the darling of the Princess Sophia, a Princess, justly acknowledged to be one of the most accomplished women of the age in which she lived, who was much pleased with the con-WE daily discover those admirable qualities for which your Majesty was famed in other countries, and rejnice to see them exerted in our Island, where we ourselves are made happy by their influence. We behold the throne of these kingdoms surrounded by your Majesty's royal and numerous Progeny, and hear with pleasure of the great care your Majesty takes to instil early into their minds the principles of Religion, Virtue, and Honour.

Your Majesty is possessed of all those talents which make conversation either delightful or improving. Your fine taste in the elegant arts, and skill in several modern languages, is such, that your discourse is not confined to the ordinary subjects of conversation, but is adapted, with an uncommon grace, to every occasion, and entertains the politest persons of different nations. That agreeable turn which appears in your sentiments upon the most ordinary affairs of life, which is so suitable to the delicacy of your sex, the politeness of your education, and the splendor of your quality, is observed by every one that has the honour to approach you.

But the great regard your Majesty has shewn to Religion, which diffuses the greatest glory around a human character, encourages me to hope that this Work will meet with your favourable acceptance. May it, therefore, please your Majesty to take into your royal protection this Concordance, the design of which is to render the study of the Scriptures more easy. Whatever may be wanting either in the Work or Author, is abundantly supplied by the dignity of the subject; which consideration chiefly encouraged me to presume to offer it to your Majesty, whom God hath exalted to the most eminent station, and blessed with the supplier of the subject of the subject of the supplier of the subject of the supplier of the subject of with extraordinary endowments of mind, and with a benevolent and beneficent disposition: To whom then can I more properly offer this Work than to your Majesty, who is celebrated both for your inclination and capacity to do good?

May the great God continue to multiply his blessings upon the King, your Majesty, and every branch of your Royal Family: May your life be long continued to serve God faithfully on earth, and may you reign for ever with Him in heaven, through JESUS CHRIST our Lord. Amen.

These are the sincere prayers of him who is, with the most profound respect,

May it please your Majesty,

Your MAJESTY'S

Most dutiful, and

Most obedient servant

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

CONCORDANCE is a DICTIONARY, or an INDEX to the BIBLE, wherein all the words used through the inspired writings are ranged alphabetically, and the various places where they occur are referred to, to assist us in finding out passages, and comparing the several significations of the same word. A work of this kind, which tends so much to render the study of the holy Scriptures more easy to all Christians, must be acknowledged to be very useful; for if a good Index to any other book is to be valued, much more ought one to the Bible, which is a revelation from God, given as the only rule of our faith and practice, and to discover to us the way to eternal life through our Lord JESUS CHRIST.

I no not here propose to treat of the incomparable excellencies of that divine book, which is above all commendation, and will be in the highest esteem by all the true members of the church of God, whose faith, hope, and comfort are built upon these divine Oracles.

What I shall further do in this Preface, shall be to present the Reader with a short historical account of Concordances, which will tend to display their great usefulness; and then acquaint him with the method

I have followed in this.

Hugo de S. Charo, a preaching Friar of the Dominican order, who was afterwards a Cardinal, was the first who compiled a Concordance to the holy Scriptures: he died in the year 1262. He had studied the Bible very closely, and for carrying on this great and laborious work the more successfully, we are told he employed five hundred Monks of his order to assist him. He framed an Index of all the declinable words, and referred to the places where they were to be found.

This Latin Concordance has been frequently printed with improvements; and since that time works of this sort have been brought to much greater perfection than formerly. At first it was thought sufficient to specify the chapter wherein the word occurred, with these letters a, b, c, d, as marks to point out the beginning, the middle, or the end of the chapter. But after Robert Stephens, in the year 1545, had divided the chapters of the Bible into verses, the verses likewise began to be numbered, and the letters in the editions of the Concordances to be suppressed. And in 1555 this eminent Printer published his fine Concordance, wherein the chapters and verses are exactly distinguished.

It could not be thought that when so useful a work as Cardinal Hugo's came to be known, men, who carefully studied the Scriptures, would be satisfied that such assistance should be confined only to those who understood Latin: Accordingly several have been published in various languages, particulary Rabbi Mordecai Nathan, otherwise called Isaac Nathan, composed an Hebrew Concordance in imitation of Cardinal Hugo's. He began it in the year 1438, and completed it in 1448, being no less than ten years in finishing it; and besides, as he himself says, he was obliged to employ a great many writers in this work. After printing was invented, it was printed several times: first at Venice by Daniel Bomberg in the year 1523, under the title of Meir Netib, that is to say, Which giveth light in the way; at Basil by Frobenius in 1581, and at Rome in 1621. This was the foundation of that noble work published by John Buxtorf, the son, being assisted by his father's papers, at Basil in 1632.

As to the Greek text of the New Testament, a Concordance was published by Henry Stephens at Geneva in 1599, and republished in 1624: But a more accurate one was compiled by Erasmus Schmidius and published at Wittenberg in 1638, which was republished more correctly at Leipsic in 1716, and is reckoned a very complete performance.

A Greek Concordance to the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament, must be owned to be very useful to such as are for comparing the expressions used in it with those of the New Testament, and to those who read the Fathers. Courad Kircher of Augsbourg is celebrated for his Greek Concordance of the Old Testament, printed at Francfort in 1602. This author has inserted the Hebrew words in an alphebetical order, and placed under them the Greek words to which they answer. But since that time, an excellent Concordance to the Old Testament has been published at Amsterdam in 1718, by the aged and worthy Minister of Groningen, M. Abraham Trommius, who instead of following the Hebrew alphabet with Kircher, has chosen rather to observe the order of the Greek alphabet.

There have been Concordances likewise published in various modern languages; in French by M. Gravelin; in High-dutch and Low-dutch by several; the most complete one in Low-dutch is that begun by M. Martinitz, and finished by M. Trommins before-mentioned. In English we have had many. The first was published by Mr. Marbeck in 1550, which is dedicated to the pious King Edward VI. but this referred only to chapters, not verses: Then Mr. Cotton published a pretty large Concordance, which has been often printed: Afterwards Mr. Newman published one more complete; and lastly, we have had one published under the title of the Concordance. There have been several abstracts have had one published under the title of the Cambridge Concordance. There have been several abstracts or small Concordances published: First by Mr. Downame, the next by Mr. Vavas or Powell, then by Mr. John Jackson, and afterwards by Mr. Samuel Clarke. As also other works of this nature have been written by way of a Dictionary or Concordance, but in a different method, as Mr. Wilson's Christian Dictionary, Mr. Knight's Axiomatical Concordance, Mr. Bernard's Thesaurus Biblicus, and Mr. Wickens's Concordance, &c.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THUS it appears that we have had Concordances to the BIBLE some centuries ago; and the world has been so sensible of their usefulness, that many of them have been composed and published in different languages: But as there are several in our language, it may be inquired, What occasioned my undertaking this great and laborious work, or what advantage it has above any other hitherto published?

WHEN I first began this work, I designed to compose an useful Concordance in Octavo, but after I had printed several specimens I found it necessary to alter my scheme, and to compile one to be printed in this large volume, in order to make those improvements which now render it preferable to any other.

THE method is easy and regular, and each text of Scripture is generally contained in one line, whereby the reader may readily find the place he wants, if he remembers any material word. When there are two or more texts of Scripture that are parallel, I have generally mentioned the first that occurs in order in the Bible, and have directly added the parallel texts. It is printed with a good letter, though pretty small, which was necessary in order to bring it into this volume, and make it contain multum in parvo, much in a little compass; and great care has been taken that the figures referring to the chapters and verses of the BIBLE be exact and correct. When a text is marked with a t, it denotes a marginal reading.

THIS CONCORDANCE is divided into three Alphabets.

This first Alphabet contains the appellative or common words, which is the principal part. It is very full and large, and any text may be found by looking for any material word, whether it be substantive, adjective, verb, &c.

In this part, I have given the various SIGNIFICATIONS of the principal words, which, I hope, will be esteemed an useful improvement, there not being any thing of this kind in the other large Concordances: By this improvement the Reader will have many texts explained, and difficulties removed; and the meaning of the Scripture may be here known by that which is accounted the best rule of interpreting Scripture, namely, by comparing one Scripture with another. There is so large a collection of the various Significant of the scripture with another. fications of many words in Scripture, as may, perhaps, be not only useful to private Christians, but also to those who preach the Gospel; for hereby many important things may be observed at one view, without the trouble of turning over several volumes; and occasion is sometimes taken to give an account of the Jewish customs and ceremonies, by which the Reader is led into the meaning of many passages of Scripture, as may be seen in the words, Elder, Ephod, Synagogue, &c.

The second Alphabet contains the Proper Names in the holy Scriptures, which the Reader will receive with approvements, as in Abraham, David, &c. The texts referred to where those names are mentioned, and the second of the respectable things recorded in Springer conserving them.

give a short historical account of the remarkable things recorded in Scripture concerning them. To this part is perfixed a Table, containing the Significations of the words in the original languages from which they are derived.

THE third and last Alphabet is a Concordance for those books that are called APOCRYPHAL, which is only added that this work might not be deficient in any thing that is treated of in any other Concordance; those books not being of divine Inspiration, nor any part of the Canon of Scripture, and therefore are of no authority in the church of God.

I CONCLUDE this Preface, with praying that God, who hath graciously enabled me to bring this large Work to a conclusion, would render it useful to those who scriously and carefully search the Scriptures; and grant that the sacred writings, which are so important and highly worthy of esteem, may meet with all Revelation from God, apply themselves to the reading and study of them; and may they by the holy Spirit of God, who indited the Scriptures, be made wise to salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. Amen. that affection and regard which they deserve. May those who profess to believe the Scriptures to be a

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

AS to what respects this NEW EDITION, notwithstanding the great pains taken in the First, there was room for improvements. The filling up of the lines to make the text fuller could not so well be done in the manuscript copy, as in the printed. This renders the sentences more complete in many thousands of places: moreover the texts are more distinct in many places by the leading words being distinguished in Italic characters. Some texts are added, and some improvements are made in the Significations of words, and an historical account is given of some eminent persons under their Proper Names; and other things that need not be particularly mentioned.

THE labours of many persons to compile Concordances to the BIBLE, and their acceptance from time to time by the public, shew their great usefulness: It may be reckoned a good sign that religion is revived in some considerable degree in the present age, by the great demand for Concordances and religious books. The First Edition of several thousands in number has been long sold off, which shews this book's favourable reception from the public; and a demand has been long made for a new Edition. There are few books more necessary to those who study their BIELES than a Concordance, whether private Christians, or Ministers of the Gospel who make the Scripture the standard of their preaching. I was told by an eminent Minister, that the Bible and this Concordance taught him to preach: This Dictionary may be a help but the Spirit of God is the best Teacher, who alone can powerfully and effectually teach and impress the heart with the truths revealed in the Scriptures, and make those who read and study the sacred writings wise to salvation.

My great aim and design in this Work is, that it may be the means of propagating among my countrymen, and through all the British dominions, the knowledge of God through our Lord Jesus Christ, and of ourselves, as the same is revealed in the Scriptures; for whose good I heartly wish that it were more complete than it is: For though it be called in the title-page, A Complete Concordance, poor sinful man can do nothing absolutely perfect and complete, and therefore the word complete is only to be taken in a comparative sense: yet competent judges are of opinion that the method here taken is the best which has appeared in our language towards a complete Concordance.

1T is hoped that the above-mentioned improvements in this new Edition will serve to recommend the Work more and more to the favour of the public. May it please God, by the powerful operations of his Spirit, to make it useful for the spiritual benefit of those who diligently and carefully use it.

> LONDON, June 11, 1761.

A, C.

THE First and Second Editions of this Concordance having been well received by the public, seems to shew the great usefulness of such a Dictionary to the BIBLE; for it may be justly said, that, if Christians were convinced that Concordances tended so much as they really do to promote the study and knowledge of t'e holy Scriptures, they would be more desirous of having one: And some Ministers have expressed so great an esteem for this Concordance, that they have said, "If they could not have another copy, they would not part with it for many pounds." This third Edition now appears, with some improvements, which it is hoped will engage the continuance of the public approbation this work has already been favoured with. May it please Got to make it more and more useful and a blessing to the Church of Got through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen

PREFACE TO THE OCTAVO EDITION.

NEXT to the Sacred Writings, no volume better deserves a place in the library of the Christian, than CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE TO THE HOLY SCRIPTURES. On the principle now generally recognized by Christians of all denominations, that Scripture is the best interpreter of Scripture, a more accurate knowledge of the contents of the Bible may be attained by means of a correct and copious CONCORDANCE, than by any other means. As a common dictionary is referred to, for the signification of words in ordinary use, so, by comparing together the different passages of Scripture in which any word occurs, as arranged in a CONCORDANCE, the Scripture acceptation of the term will be discovered; and the inquirer freed from the drudgery of consulting Commentaries, and antiquated systems of divinity, in which every passage is generally explained in conformity with the creed of the Author, rather than according to "the analogy of faith."

The learned Bishop Horsley has recorded his opinion on this subject. He says, "It should be a rule with every one who would read the Holy Scriptures with advantage and improvement, to compare every text which may seem important for the doctrine it may contain, or remarkable for the turn of the expression, with the parallel passages in other parts of Holy Writ; that is, with the passages in which the subject matter is the same, the sense equivalent or the turn of the expression similar."—It is incredible to any one, who has not in some degree made the experiment, what a proficiency may be made in that knowledge that maketh wise unto salvation, by studying the Scriptures in this manner, without any other commentary or exposition, than what the different parts of the Sacred Volume mutually furnish for each other. I will not scruple to assert, that the most illiterate Christian, if he can but read his English Bible, and will take the pains to read it in this manner, will not only attain all that practical knowledge that is necessary to his salvation; but, by God's blessing, he will become learned in every thing relating to his religion, in such a degree, that he will not be liable to be misled, either by the refined arguments or the false assertions of those who endeavour to engraft their own opinions upon the Oracles of God. He may safely be ignorant of all philosophy, except what is to be learned from the Sacred Books; which, indeed, contain the highest philosophy adapted to the lowest comprehensions. He may safely remain ignorant of all history, except so much of the first ages of the Jewish and of the Christian Church as is to be gathered from the Canonical Books of the Old and New Testaments. Let him study these in the manner I recommend, and let him never cease to pray for the illumination of that Spirit by which these books were dictated, and the whole compass of abstruse philosophy, and recondite history, shall furnish no argument with which the perverse will of man shall be able to shake this learned Chris

Practice; a helmet of salvation, which alone may quench the fiery darts of the wicked."

The Rev. T. H. Horne, in his Introduction to the Critical Study of the Scriptures, † (a work which for extent of research, and felicity of arrangement, is unequalled in the department of literature to which it belongs,) observes: "The comparison of parallel passages is a most important help for interpreting such parts of Scripture as may appear to us obscure or uncertain; for, on almost every subject, there will be found a multitude of phrases, that, when diligently collated, will afford mutual illustration and support to each other; the truth which is more obscurely intimated in one place being expressed with greater precision in others. Thus, a part of the attributes, or circumstances, relating to both persons and things, is stated in one text, and part in another; so that it is only by searching out several passages, and connecting them together, that we can obtain a just apprehension of them."

If these remarks be just, (and the authorities from which they proceed place them above all reasonable objection,) then the value of such a work as "CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE TO THE HOLY SCRIPTURES," affording such facility to the study of the Sacred Volume, will be readily admitted. The peculiar claims of the present edition remain to be noticed.

The first and most important point to be regarded in such a work, is the general correctness of the various references to Scripture Texts. To secure this, the utmost pains have been employed; every passage has been carefully compared with the last edition published under the eye of the Author, in 1769, and collated with subsequent editions; and where any difference appeared, the passage was traced out, and corrected from the Scriptures. This extraordinary care will, it is confidently hoped, obtain for this Edition the high recommendation of being the most correct edition of Cruden's Concordance ever published.

The Octavo form in which the Concordance now appears, so much more portable than a ponderous Quarto, enables the Publishers to offer it at a considerably reduced price; while the clearness and beauty of its type render it a specimen of that high degree of excellence the art of Stereotype Printing has attained in this country.

A Memoir of Mr. Cruden, on an extended scale, containing some scarce and interesting particulars of his life, and several characteristic and authentic Anecdotes, has been compiled by the Editor, with great care expressly for this Edition.

MEMOIR

MR. ALEXANDER CRUDEN.

THE facilities afforded by the following Work, to the Minister of the Gospel, the Biblical student, and the more private Christian, when searching the Scriptures, whether for the instruction of others, or their own individual benefit, have embalmed the name of CRUDEN in their grateful affections; and cannot fail to attach a more than ordinary interest to the events of his life, so large a portion of which was laboriously employed for their benefit.

Mr. ALEXANDER CRUDEN was born at Aberdeen on the 31st of May, 1701. His father, Mr. WILLIAM CRUDEN, was a merchant of some eminence; and possessed the esteem and confidence of his fellowcitizens sufficiently to procure his election as one of their Baillies, or chief magistrates. In both public and private life his integrity and uprightness were exemplary; and the terms of veneration in which his son ALEXANDER was accustomed to speak of him, were doubtless dictated by truth no less than by strong filial affection.

Few particulars of Mr. Cruden's early years have been preserved. 'The acknowledged piety of his parents, and the commendable attention paid in Scotland to the religious instruction of youth, doubtless conferred on him great moral advantages; and led him, even from childhood, to revere the sacred volume. It is more than probable that the habits thus early formed had considerable influence on his subsequent life and studies.

A higher motive than mere secular advantage led him to make choice of the Christian ministry, as the business of his future life. He had previously received a good elementary education in the grammar school of his native city; and, as an introduction to the clerical profession, and in order to secure the advantages of that respectable seat of learning, he entered himself a student of Mareschal College, and diligently attended the lectures of the several professors. Here he made considerable proficiency in the learned languages, and in general literature; the degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him; and he was on the point of being proposed as a licentiate, when circumstances, which are in a great measure enveloped in mystery, caused a total change in his destination. Though posterity is left in igno- ter, he was indebted for the appointment of Bookseller rance of the precise nature of these circumstances, there is abundant evidence that the purity of his moral character remained unsullied, and that his love for theological studies had experienced no abatement. Possibly some symptoms of that aberration of mind which more strongly discovered itself at a subsequent period of his life, rendered the abandon ment of a profession so replete with mental anxiety and abour, when its duties are properly performed, highly prudential, if not essentially necessary.

As the malady from which he so severely suffered was not hereditary, it has been referred to various causes. Some have attributed it to the bite of a mad dog; but the peculiar symptoms of hydrophobia furnish no confirmation of such an opinion. Others, with more consistency, ascribe it to a disappointment in love, which he experienced about this period; but it is doubtful whether this operated as a cause or a consequence. If the rejection of his addresses, in terms, as would appear, not the most gentle, did not originally excite the malady, the effect produced by the disappointment, on a mind pre-disposed to insanity, caused him frequently to use such unseasonable and sometimes outrageous attempts to obtain an interview with the object of his affections, as to oblige his friends to send him to a place of confinement." his release from confinement, he resolved to leave the scene of his early and bitter sorrows. In the year 1722 he arrived in London; and was employed at Ware, in Hertfordshire, as classical tutor to some young persons. Several following years were spent in the Isle of Man, in similar occupations. In 1732 he finally settled in London, and engaged as corrector of the press; blending with this occupation the trade of a bookseller, which he carried on in a shop under the Royal Exchange. Here his literary attainments, indefatigable industry, and strict integrity, procured for him the esteem, not only of those who availed themselves of his professional labours, but of several persons eminent for their wealth and influence. To the strong recommendations of the Lord Mayor, and several of the Aldermen, and other distinguished Citizens of London, who were well known to Sir Robert Walpole, then Prime Minis

The young lady above referred to was the daughter of a clergyman of Aberdeen. Shortly after Mr. Cruden was placed under cestraint, it was discovered that a criminal intercourse had subsisted between her and her own brother, by whom she was actually originant. About ten or eleven years afterwards, Mr. Cruden, then resident in London, was taken by Mr. Crualers, a Printer of Aberdeen, to the house of a merchant near the Royal Exchange, who was deemed likely to assist him in his business. The door was opened by the unworthy object of Mr. Cruden's tenderest regards; who, upon leaving Aberdeen, had, unknown to Mr. Cruden by hierof, there found a refuge, far from the scene of her guilt and ruin. Mr. Cruden started back; with the utmost intensity of teeling he grasped the hand of Mr. Chalmers, and exclaimed, "Ah! she has still her fine black eyes!" No inducement could prevail on mm to have any comunication with the owner of the house, who was a younger hrother of the lady. As to the wretched woman herself, he never mention ed her name but with the bitterest grief, and most tender compassion.

to the Queen, vacant by the death of Mr. MATTHEWS; Jut, though eventually successful, his patience was severely tried by the tardy measures of the Minister.

About a year or two before he received this distinction, he determined to begin that great work upon which he had long deliberated, A Complete Concordance of the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. If the merit of labour alone be given to this work of Mr. CRUDEN, it must be acknowledged that it required labour the most intense, and perseverance which knew no interval. He was well qualified for such an undertaking; for habits of industry were familiar to him; and his conviction of the high utility of such a work led him both to form and to execute the plan previously to his receiving any encouragement from the public. The first edition was published in 1737; the preface to which explains his plan, and the motives which led to its publication. He had the honour of presenting a copy of the work to Queen Caroline, consort of George II. a short time prior to its publication; when her Majesty "smiled upon the Author, and assured him, she was highly obliged to him." A dedication to his Royal Patroness, couched in most eulogistic terms, was prefixed; and the Author's expectations of receiving some solid proof of royal munificence were very sanguine. The uncertain nature of all earthly dependencies was, however, strikingly manifested by the sudden death of the Queen, only sixteen days after the presentation of the work; and "her declared intention of remembering the Author never took

As Mr. CRUDEN had undertaken the work on his own responsibility, the expenses necessarily attendant on its publication had nearly exhausted his limited resources; and the time it occupied had possibly diverted his attention from the duties of his shop. His embarrassments obliged him to dispose of his stock in trade, and to abandon his shop; and his disappointed hopes depressed his mind, which had possibly suffered from the intensity of application to which it had been subjected while preparing the work. His malady returning with increased violence, his friends deemed his confinement necessary, and he was sent to a private asylum for lunatics at Bethnal Green; from which he, however, contrived to escape, though he was chained to the bedstead on which he lay. In March, 1739, Mr. CRUDEN published a journal of his sufferings while confined at Bethnal Green, entitled: The London Citizen exceedingly injured; giving an account of his severe and long campaign at Bethnal Green, for nine weeks and six days; the Citizen being sent there in March, 1738, by Robert Wightman, a notorionsly conceited, whimsical man; where he was chained, handenffed, strait-waistcoated, and imprisoned; with a history of Wightman's Blind Bench; a sort of Court that met at Wightman's room, and unaccountably proceeded to pass decrees in relation to the London Citizen, &c. &c. Not content with bringing the parties by whom he supposed himself aggrieved to the bar of public opinion, he instituted legal proceedings against Wightman, the proprietor of the asylum, and Dr. Monro, the Physician. Mr. Cruden pleaded his own cause, and furnished sufficient proof of the deranged state of his intellect. A verdict was, of course, found for the defendants. When the verdict was returned, Mr. CRUDEN betrayed no agitation; but on hearing it said, "I trust in God." The Judge replied "I wish you had trusted more in God, and had not come hither." The trials, with remarks, were subsequently published by Mr. CRUDEN, with a dedication to King George 11.

The former employers of Mr. CRUDEN did not deem him disqualified for resuming his labours as corrector of the press. After his release, he was employed for a considerable number of years, in those services which Printers and Publishers constantly need from men of education and learning. Under his inspection several editions of the Greek and Roman Classics were published with great accuracy. His manners were invariably simple and inoffensive; he was always to be trusted, and performed his engagements with the strictest fidelity. Fifteen years had passed away in this laborious and useful employment, without any alarming indications of mental incapacity; when his relatives, induced by reasons which charity would hope justified them in having recourse to such extreme measures, placed him a third time in confinement, which was but of short duration; being from the 12th to the 29th of September, 1753. No proof was ever adduced of a mischievous propensity; his madness was sui generis: we find nothing like it in the annals of medicine; nor can it be accounted for on any known principles of physiology. It is more than probable that the restraint to which he was subjected, and the discipline employed by those under whose care he was placed, irritated his mind, and increased his melancholy disorder.

Upon his liberation, he afforded some rather ludicrous proofs of the light in which he regarded those who had procured his recent confinement. As his sister, Mrs. WILD, being his nearest relative, had sanctioned that proceeding, he required from her a reparation of the injury. In a letter, addressed to a friend of Mrs. Wild, he makes what he ealls "proposals of reconciliation;" and begs her good offices to induce Mrs. Wild to accede to them. These proposals were, that Mrs. WILD would "voluntarily submit to confinement in the prison of Newgate for forty-eight hours, and pay to Mr. CRUDEN the sum of ten pounds." On its being intimated that a confinement in Newgate might prove prejudicial to her health, as the jail dis temper was then prevalent in that prison, Mr. CRUDEN offered to commute the imprisonment in Newgate for one of twice forty-eight hours in the Tower, and a sum of fifteen pounds. These "reconciling proposals" were, however, not agreed to by Mrs. Wild, though her guardian, and other friends were urged to employ their persuasions. Mr. CRUDEN was much surprised at the failure of these overtures; and observed, "It is a little comical, that there should be so much trouble in getting this woman confined for forty-eight hours, who by a word of her mouth confined the Corrector for seventeen days." At length, despairing of a pacific termination of the business, he brought an action against his sister, and three other persons. which was tried in Westminster Hall, February 20, 1754. The damages were laid at ten thousand pounds, and a verdiet was returned for the defendants. At the commencement of the following term, Mr. CRUDEN moved the Court in person for a new trial, which was refused. He then published his case, entitled, The Adventures of Alexander the Corrector; three parts of which successively appeared. It is not easy to convey an idea of the contents of these publications. They are evidently the production of a mind in which reason tottered, if she were not entirely dethroned. Various, whimsical, serious, and jocose, they form a fair specimen of the publications which he, from time to time, presented to the public relative to himself.

His insanity now discovered itself in a variety of whimsical, and occasionally extravagant actions; the narration of which, though it might gratify curiosity, would answer no valuable purpose; only a few instances shall be adduced. Fully persuaded that he was intended by Divine Providence to accomplish a great national benefit, he assumed the title of, "ALEX-ANDER THE CORRECTOR;" and gave out that he was commissioned by Heaven to reform the manners of the age; particularly to restore the due observance of the sabbath. To convince the public of the validity of his claims to the high prerogatives he exercised, he printed and circulated detached sentences from the sermons and writings of eminent ministers and others; all anonymous, or with the initials only of the authors' names. The substance of these predictions was, "That Mr. CRUDEN was to be a second Joseph, to be a great man at Court, and to perform great things for the spiritual Israel in Egypt." Furnished with these credentials, he went to Oxford, and other places, and exhorted the people whom he found in the public walks on the sabbath, to go home, and keep the sabbath-day holy; generally enforcing his admonition with denunciations of eternal wrath in case of noncompliance.

Mr. CRUDEN's mind seems to have cherished with no ordinary enthusiasm the scheme of reformation we have described; and that his power might be co-extensive with his aims, he urged the necessity of a formal recognition of his authority by the King in Council; and even, should it be found necessary, that an Act of the Legislature should constitute him "Corrector of the People." To obtain these, the aid of persons high in office was solicited; and the influence of the ladies of London was diligently sought. He drew up a testimonial of his integrity, and zeal for the public good; and obtained the signatures of the Lady Mayoress, and some other females of rank; who appear to have considered his ambition of so harmless a character, that it was better to indulge him by a seeming acquiescence with his pretensions, than to irritate his malady by unnecessary opposition.

About the same time he made a formal application to His Majesty for the honour of Knighthood; to which distinction he aspired, not from fondness for the title, but from a persuasion that it would introduce him to greater usefulness: "for thinking men," he observed, "ought to seek after titles rather to please others than themselves." The account he gave of his attendances at Court on this business, and of his interviews with the Lords in Waiting, the Secretaries of State, and other persons of rank, is highly amusing. His eccentricities seem to have become familiar with the attendants; and his acknowledged reputation for uprightness and worth appears to have preserved him from the treatment generally met with by impertment intruders. He complains, however, that his applica-cons were not attended to; but exempts Earl PAULETT from the censures which he applies to others. That nobleman, he says, "spoke civilly to him; for, being goutish in his feet, he could not run away from the Corrector, as others were apt to do.'

The endeavours of his friends to dis-To the suggestion of some, that he was too late in his application, he replied, "that he was not to look backward, but forward." He obtained an interview with one of the Bishops, who treated him with humane attention; commended his Concondance; but intimated his opinion that he was not likely to obtain his election, unless Providence specially appeared for him. "This," says Cruden, in his account of the interview, "the Corrector readily acknowledged." Indeed, he appears confidently to have anticipated some extraordinary interposition in his favour; and even hoped that the other candidates, in consideration of the uncommon motives by which he was actuated in applying for the honour, would decline all opposition. To the London ministers he sent circular letters; stating, that if Christian directions were given to the people by their reverend pastors, it might cause the Electors to act with caution and conscience; -and that wicked men are not fit to be chosen senators, and entrusted with the religion and liberties of the nation. His various addresses to the Livery, through the medium of the public press, were equally singular in style and sentiment. lowing is a fair specimen of both:

" To the worthy Livery of the City of London."

"London, April 30, 1754.

"Gentlemen "Your votes and interest are humbly requested for ALEXANDER CRUDEN, THE CORREC-TOR, Citizen and Stationer, and author of the New Concordance to the Bible, a work in much esteem, to be one of the Representatives in Parliament for this City.

" It is thought that God in his providence signally favours the Corrector. And in order to fulfil the prophecies concerning him, he earnestly requests, that the Sheriffs, Candidates, and Liverymen, may seriously, as in the sight of God, consider the Appendix to Alexander the Corrector's Adventures, and his letters and advertisements published for some days past; which it is hoped will have a good effect on the candidates themselves, and all persons concerned for the honour of God, and of true religion.

"If there is just ground to think that God will be pleased to make the Corrector an instrument to reform the nation, and particularly to promote the reformation, the peace, and the prosperity of this great city, and to bring them into a more religious temper and conduct, no good man, in such au extraordinary case, will deny him his vote. And the Corrector's election is believed to be the means of paving the way to his being a Joseph, and an useful, prosperous man.

The Corrector's earnest prayers are put up from time to time for your happiness in this world, and the world to come, through Jesus Christ.

"I am, very respectfully, "Gentlemen,

"Your most obedient and affectionate Humble servant, "ALEXANDER CRUDEN."

It is needless to say, that Mr. Cruden was not more successful at the hustings than at Court. Bu: distinction, he next aspired to parliamentary ho- he bore this new disappointment with the most entire resignation; consoling himself with the reflection, "that he had the hearts of the people, though their hands had been promised away." The Corrector, he adds, "was very cheerful and contented; and not at all affected at the loss of his election. God's time is the best time." Shortly after the election, Mr. Cruden published a statement of the motives which induced him to aspire to the dignity and duties of a senator; interspersed with some shrewd observations on the injurious influence of faction on the morals and happiness of a people.

While Mr. Cruden was aspiring to the honours of Knighthood, and a seat in Parliament, he appears to have been brought under the powerful influence of love; and with an ardour suited to the importance of the pursuit, he sought the hand of Mrs. ELIZABETH ABNEY, the daughter of Sir Thomas Abney, who filled the office of Lord Mayor of London towards the close of the reign of WILLIAM III. The object of his affection is described by him in his Love Adventures, as "a woman of good understanding, of good principles, and of amiable temper, with a liberal educa-tion, and acceptable person." Whether these valu-able qualities would have been sufficient to captivate his heart, unaccompanied by, what he terms, greatest revenues of any lady of the puritanical denomination," which he also states her to have possessed, is doubtful. That his ruling passion, even in this affair, was the desire of promoting the public good, may be easily conceived. He supposed that the large fortune, which was at the lady's own disposal, would put him in possession of the influence essential to the success of his benevolent schemes. As Mrs. Abney peremptorily refused to see him, he urged his suit for months, by letters, memorials, and remonstrances innumerable, of which he published some laughable specimens. As milder measures had failed of producing a favourable termination, he at length sent to her a paper of great length, formally signed and sealed, which he styled a Declaration of War. In this he rehearsed his grievances; stated the means he had hitherto adopted to reduce Mrs. Abney to a compliance with his reasonable requests; and that he was now reduced to the necessity of employing other measures. Being an extraordinary man, he would thenceforth carry on the war in an extraordinary manner, "by shooting off great numbers of bullets from his camp; namely, by earnest prayer to heaven, day and night, that her mind may be enlightened, and her heart softened." He also had recourse to another stratagem, which, though highly ludicrous, could not, from its public nature, have been altogether pleasant, to the lady herself. In 1754, Mrs. Abney, being in the west of England, her eccentric lover evinced his affectionate concern for her welfare, by causing "praying bills" to be delivered every sabbath at several places of worship, requesting the prayers of the minister and congregation for the pre-servation of herself and attendants. And on her return he sent similar bills, desiring that thanksgivings might be addressed to Almighty God for her safe arrival. In an epistle he subsequently addressed to her, he urges these exertions in her behalf as a powerful argument in his favour, and a proof that he was "more thoughtful about her than all her friends."

Notwithstanding these multifarious and persevering attempts to produce a favourable impression on her heart, Mrs. Abney remained obdurate; and even his letters, he states, "were quickly tossed back." It is even said, that the discipline of the blanket was at length tried by the servants, to cure his troublesome attempts to obtain a personal interview. Justice however compels us to state, that Mr. Crunen makes no allusion in his Adventures to any such occurrence.

At the close of the year 1754, Mr. CRUDEN was engaged by Mr. Woonfall, senior, as corrrector of the press to the Public Advertiser, a popular daily journal, in which the well known Letters of Junio, first appeared. The close application required by the regular routine of business at Mr. WOODFALL'S office, doubtless did much towards diverting him from his quixotic love enterprize. Preparations for a new edition of his Concordance became shortly after necessary; and the requisite corrections and additions furnished him with ample employment. The business of the printing-office was rarely over before one o'clock in the morning. Mr. CRUDEN seldom allotted more than four or five hours to rest; and before six in the morning might be found turning over the leaves of his Bible, and adding to, amending, and improving his Concordance with most scrupulous attention. At this he laboured till the evening, when he repaired to the printing-office. These habits were well calculated to counteract the mental disease under which he had so long laboured; and the reader will learn with benevolent satisfaction, that his mind was restored to a degree of calm regularity to which he had been long a stranger. From 1758, to the close of his life, he was mercifully preserved, in a very con-siderable degree, from those distressing visitations which had painfully characterised the earlier periods of his history. In 1762, a circumstance occurred in Mr. CRUDEN's history, which, while it illustrates the charity of his disposition, will tend to show that the eccentric enthusiast in benevolence is sometimes neither a ridiculous nor an useless being. One RICHARD POTTER, was tried and capitally convicted at the Old Bailey, of forging, or rather uttering with a guilty knowledge of its being a forgery, a seaman's will, a crime very rarely pardoued. Mr. CRUDEN was in court during the trial; and was so fully convinced that POTTER was a poor illiterate creature, the tool of another, and ignorant of the nature of the crime he committed, that he determined to exert himself to obtain for him the royal elemency He visited him after his trial; prayed with him, exhorted him, taught him the principles of religion, and, under the divine blessing produced in him a due sense of the wickedness of his past life; and directed his inquiring mind to him "whose blood cleanseth from all sin." With the activity of enlightened zeal he represented the case of this poor man to the Earl of HALIFAX, then principal Secretary of State; and the result of his unwearied applications was successful. The original sentence was commuted for transportation; and Mr. Cruden tasted "the god-like luxury" of delivering a fellow-creature from the jaws of death, and of instrumentally saving his soul from "the death that never dies." Mr. CRUDEN accompanied his application to the Earl of HALIFAX in the behalf of the above unfortunate man with a copy of the second edition of his Concordance, to which was prefixed an elegant Latin dedication to his Lordship.

The success which had attended his benevolent exertions to instruct and reform RICHARD POTTER, induced Mr. CRUDEN to continue his visits to Newgate, in the hope that among the numerous prisoners some might, possibly, derive benefit from his labours. He visited them every day; furnished them with copies of the New Testament, Catechisms, &c.; catechised | them himself; and bestowed small pecuniary rewards on the most attentive. His efforts were, however, productive of little apparent good in a place where, from want of proper attention to the classification of the prisoners, the vicious of every age, and of every degree in vice, were permitted to associate indiscrim-nately, and to harden each other. The books distributed among them by Mr. CRUDEN were sold, and the money spent in spirituous liquors. At length, discouraged by the unpropitious effects of his wellmeant efforts, he discontinued his visits.

Though disappointed, Mr. CRUDEN's zeal for the present and future welfare of his fellow-creatures suffered no abatement. The ardour of his mind sometimes carried him beyond the boundaries of prudence; and he often appeared obtrusive, when he only meant to be kind. When successful in rescuing any poor creature from the barbarity of ignorance, or the open practice of wickedness, his joy knew no bounds. Another instance of his success is upon record, and well authenticated. Returning on a Sunday evening from a place of worship, Mr. CRUDEN observed a man whose countenance was expressive of the deepest melancholy, if not of absolute despair. To behold misery in any of its diversified forms, and to attempt its removal, or mitigation, were necessarily connected in Mr. CRUDEN's philanthropic mind. He immediately accosted this man; and drew from him a confession, that the privations to which himself and family were reduced from his extreme poverty, with other causes, had induced him to determine on committing the desperate act of suicide. Mr. CRUDEN expostulated with him; unfolded the wickedness of his intention; and administered such seasonable in-struction and consolation, with present pecuniary assistance, and a promise of future support, that the poor man became cheerful, resigned, and hopeful.

The following instance, though not so generally known, is inserted on the testimony of a gentleman whose character for veracity is a sufficient security for its truth. Mr. CRUDEN was one evening accosted by one of those daughters of infamy, who nightly prowl through the streets of the metropolis; and who laid hold of his arm, with the familiarity of her wretched profession. He made no reply, but allowed her to walk with him, till he arrived at his own door, when he told her he must leave her; but could not do so, without expressing his sorrow at finding her engaged in so sinful and ruinous a course; and earnestly exhorted her to abandon it. The poor girl told him with tears, she had no alternative: that she would willingly quit her present mode of life, but knew not where to go. Mr. CRUDEN observed, it was too late that night, to enter into the particulars of her situation; but, if she continued in the same mind the next day, she might call at his house, and he would befriend her. She came accordingly; and expressed her willingness to engage in any situation, however menial and laborious, rather than continue her pursuits of infamy. Mr. CRUDEN told her, that he knew of no situation suitable for her; but offered her an asylum in his house, as an assistant to his servant, till a situation could be procured for her. She gratefully accepted his proposal; and immediately entered upon the duties of her new office. She continued in Mr. Cruden's service till his death; and conducted herself with such modesty and propriety, as proved that her reformation was complete, and ner penitence genuine. Such actions shed on the state of the service of the serv memory of Mr. CRUDEN a glory more pure and last ing than that obtained by the conqueror of nations His record is on high; and though his eccentricities occasionally obscured the benevolent motives by which he was influenced, the great Searcher of Hearts will, in the day of his coming, reward him openly.

Loyalty was a prominent feature in Mr. CRUDEN'S character. He was of opinion that a bad man cannot make a good patriot. In the political struggle between Mr. WILKES and the administration of the country, which threw the whole nation into a violent ferment, Mr. CRUDEN took a decided part against that political demagogue, whose name he could never endure to hear mentioned. He wrote a small pamphlet against him; and also testified his aversion to him, in a way peculiar to himself, by effacing "No. 45," wherever he found it chalked on doors or window-shutters. His instrument was a large piece of spunge, which he carried in his pocket, partly for this purpose, and partly for the purpose of destroying those inscriptions offensive to decency and good morals, which so frequently disgrace the walls of the metropolis. This employment occasionally made his walks very tedious. Neither time nor circumstances can wholly dissolve, though they may suspend, those powerful attachments to the place of his birth, and the scenes of his childhood and youth, which have a place in the breast of every man of sensibility. When Mr. CRUDEN was enabled to detach himself from those laborious ccupations which had engrossed so large a portion of his life, he yielded to the force of these feelings; and m the year 1769, visited Aberdeen, his native city. Here he also endeavoured to serve the cause of religion and public morals. He applied for, and obtained permission to deliver a lecture in one of the Public Halls of that city, on his favourite topic, the necessity of a reformation of manners. He printed the Fourth Commandment in the form of a hand-bill, and distributed several thousands among his fellowcitizens, especially on the Lord's day. His pockets were always well stored with Catechisms and other religious tracts, on which he expended considerable sums; and these he bestowed freely on young persons, and others who promised to read them. Mr. CHALM-ERS records with a grateful feeling, which does credit to his head and his heart, his recollection of the tender regard and winning manners by which he endeavoured to allure children to read their Bibles, Catechisms, &c. By the inhabitants at large he was received with considerable respect; and the occasional singularities of his conduct were readily excused in consideration of the general excellence of his character. Mr. CRUDEN measured the qualifications and conduct of ministers of the gospel, by no ordinary standard; and wherever he discovered any marked inconsistency between the office and the man, he never failed to express his disapprobation by some word or action too unequivocal to be misunderstood. On one occasion, during this visit, he happened to meet with a young clergyman, whose spruce and conceited manners excited his disgust. With great solemnity he presented him with a child's catechism, well known in Scotland, entitled, The Mother's attending his dissolution were sufficiently remarkable to warrant a particular insertion in a Memoir of his life. His health had undergone no visible change. He had, indeed, complained for some days of a slight asthmatic affection, but the evening before his decease he retired to rest, as usual. In the morning the maid rang the bell, to summon him to breakfast. Receiving no answer, she went into his bed-room, but he was not there. She then entered his closet; where she found him kneeling against a chair, his hands supported by its back; but he was quite dead! As he never married, he bequeathed his moderate savings to his relations: except a certain sum to his native city, to be employed in the purchase of religious books, for the use of the poor; and he founded an exhibition of five pounds per annum, to assist in educating a student at Mareschal College. This exhibition was to be obtained on certain terms mentioned in his will; one of which was a perfect acquaintance with Vincent's Catechism.

Mr. CRUDEN's religious sentiments were decidedly Calvinistic, as the definitions of various terms in his CONCORDANCE sufficiently testify. But he was no bigot; and often censured with much severity the principles and practices of narrow-minded men. He was evidently warmly attached to that cause in which all true Christians, of whatever denomination, must agree; the cause of practical religion. His zeal for the reformation of manners, among all ranks of men could proceed only from a mind deeply affected with the evil of sin; and though his exertions in promoting the cause of rightcourness, were marked with a certain degree of eccentricity, arising from occasional mental infirmity, yet they entitle him to the warmest approbation of all who wish well to the best interests of mankind. His CONCORDANCE is a lasting monument of his supreme regard for the SACRED WRITINGS. None but a person who possessed the highest esteem and veneration for the Scriptures, would have undergone the immense toil which this work must have cost him.

A conscientious regard for the public institutions of religion, and an habitual respect to the duties of private devotion, shewed the gennineness of Mr. CRUDEN's piety towards God. Nor did he attempt to separate communion with God, from communion with the church of God; but having first given himself to the Lord, he made an open and decided profession of serious godliness, by closely uniting himself with the Independent Church, which assembled in Great St. Helen's, under the care of Dr. Guyse, whom he termed, his "faithful and beloved pastor." About 1762, when age and infirmities obliged Dr. Guyse to resign the pastoral office, Mr. CRUDEN was induced to attend the ministry of Dr. CONDER, in Moorfields; and, subsequently, that of Mr. CRUICK-SHANK, in Swallow Street. He, however, never wholly sepa. ated from the church at Great St. Helen's, but attended the first Sunday in every month, when the Lord's Supper was administered.

In private life Mr. CRUDEN was courteous and affable; prone to give his opinions, and firm in his every sense, were ready to perish."

religious views. To the poor he was as liberal of his money as of his advice; he seldom, indeed, separated the one from the other. His concern for them must have been sincerc, for interest he could have none; and his generosity must have been pure, for he often gave more than he retained for his own use. To such young men as were recommended to his notice. especially from his native city, he behaved with the kindness of an affectionate and judicious friend; affording them pecuniary aid, when needed; and invariably cautioning them against the temptations which assail youth in the great metropolis.

Though Mr. CRUDEN may not obtain a niche in the temple of genius, his name will stand high on the records of utility. Besides the works already referred to, he wrote an Account of the History and Excellency of the Holy Scriptures, prefixed to a Compendium of the Holy Bible. He also published the History of Richard Potter; the poor man who was rescued from an ignominious death by his exertions. A Scripture Dictionary, was compiled by him, and published in two octavo volumes at Aberdeen shortly after his decease. He also compiled the very elaborate verbal index which belongs to Bishop Newton's edition of MILTON's Works; an undertaking inferior only to that of his CONCORD-ANCE, and which he undertook at the request of Auditor Benson. But his great work was his Concor-DANCE, to the revision and improvement of which he devoted all his leisure in the later periods of his life; a second edition was published in 1761, dedicated to his late Majesty, GEORGE the Third, who had newly succeeded to the throne; and who during his reign, the longest in the annals of the British Empire, fully maintained the truly honourable character ascribed to him in that dedication, of "having manifested a high regard for religion, and an earnest concern for promoting it among his subjects." This edition was well received, and a Third was required, which appeared in 1769, with the Author's last corrections. These two editions reimbursed Mr. CRUDEN for the losses he sustained by the first. For his second edition he received five hundred pounds; and when the third was published, the Booksellers made him a further present of three hundred pounds, besides twenty copies of the work on fine paper. These sums, with the product of some other literary labours, placed him in easy and comfortable circumstances during the last years of his life; and enabled him to indulge the benevolence of his heart, in relieving the necessities of others.

Such are the brief Memoirs we have been able, after considerable research, to collect of Alexander CRUDEN; to whom the religious world lies under very great obligations: "whose character," to use the words of Mr. Chalmers, "notwithstanding his mental infirmities, we cannot but venerate; whom neither infirmity nor neglect could debase; who sought consolation where only it could be found; whose sorrows served to instruct him in the distresses of others; and who employed his prosperity to relieve those who, in Urim and Thummin, Lev. 8. 8. It was called the Breast-plate of judgment, Exod. 28. 15. because from thence the Israelites were to expect and receive their judgment, and the mind of God in all those weighty and momentous matters of war and yeace, wherein they consulted God

Breast-plate is likewise a piece of defensive armour, Rev. 9. 9. In which sense, faith and are called Breast-plates; 1 Thess. 5. 8. Fi Faith are cutted treas-plates; 1 1165t. 5.8. Faith is a defensive grace; not only as it assents to the doctrine of the goipel as true, but also as it doth depend upon God's faithfulness and all-sufficiency to perform his promises, and apply them to our souls for our support and confurt. Love, when it worketh, will defend against the perto our souts for our support and confurt. Love, when it worketh, will defend against the persecutions, afflictions, and temptations of the world, Cant. 8.7. Slavish fear will overcome us, if we want love to defend against it, when us, if we want tove to aejena uganes, true religion is under disgrace, and persecuted in the world. I John 4. 18. Love will defend the world, 1 John 4.18. Love will defend against apostacy, and so help us to persceere to the coming of Christ; and love, being seated in the heart, is fiely compared to a Breast-plate that encompasseth the heart.

Dun, 2, 25. I have found a man of the c. of Judah CAPIYVIFY
God generally muished the vices and infidelities of his people by different captivities or servitudes whereint he permitted them to full. After the delicerance of the Israelites out of Egypt, there are reckned six bondages or captuities during the government of Judges: The first under Chushan-rishathaim, king of Mesopotamia, which continued about eight years, Judg. 3. 8. The second under Eglon, king of Mosh, from which they were delivered by Ehud, Judg. 3. 14, 15. The third number the Philistines, out of which they were reserved by Shangar, Judg. 3. 31. The fourth under Jahin, king of Hazor, from which they were delivered by Deborah and Barak, Judg. 4, 22, 23. The fifth under the Midianites, from which Gideon freed them, Judg. 6, 2, 12. The sixth under the Amunomites and Philistines, during the judicatures of Jephthah, Ilvzan, Elon, Abdon, Eli, Samson, Samuel.

The grentest and most remerkable captivities of the Hebrews, were those of Judah and Israel, which happened under the kings of each of these king-dom.

Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, in the year of iglath-pileser, king of Assyrna, in the year of the world 3264, took several cities belonging to the kingdom of Israel, and carried away a great number of captives, principally from the tribes of Reuben, (sad, and the half tribe of Manas-Tiglath-pileser.

was no return from this capiting, that the tenth in terms tribes never came back again after their dispersion. Is to the capitivities of Judah; in the fifth year of Rehohoam, son of Solomon, Shishak, king of Egypt, came up against Jernsalem with a numerous army, and sacked the city, took away the treasures ont of the house of the Lord, and out of the house of the king, 2 Chron. 12. 2. Ifterwards, in the reign of Hezekiah, Sennacherib king of Asyria sent a great army and luid close siege to it. Upon this Hezekiah fortified and repaired it, 2 Chron. 32. 5. and the hand of the Lord being with him, for he was a pions good king, the Assyrians, after a time, were forced to raise the stege, not being able to take the to raise the steer, not being able to take the city, yet after this, it was taken and plundered three several times by Nebuchadnezzar king of Bahylon; first, in the reign of Jeholakini; again, in that of Jeholachin, his son; and a third time, in that of Zedekiah his brother; when he burnt the whole city, and carried away all the people to Bahylon, where they remained seventy years, Jer. 25, 12.

Dou, their being vernitted to return by Cytus seventy years, Jer. 25, 12.

Upon their being permitted to return by Cyrus king of Persia, after they had remained in captituty seventy years, Zerubbabel rebuilt the temple, and Nehemiah the city; and Exxa the priest and serihe retweat the low. And thus they stood, till the time of Autiochus Epiphanes, who pluidered the city, burned the law, and profaned the temble.

But all was soon after set right again by the valority conduct of Judas Maccabeus; and they continued in a flourishing condition for many years; till Hyrcanus and Aristovilus, two horbers, contending about the crown, Pompey, who at that time was at the head of the Roman army in Syria, took advantage of the dissension, and seized the city; which Antigonus, the son of Aristobulus, by the assistance of the l'arthians, soon after revovered.

soon ofter recovered, com him it was presently after taken by the first Herod, who, by the favour of the Remans, and the assistance of their Provousul of Syria, was declared king thereof.

henceforward it continued in subjection, sometime. neuespormard trentificant its inspections, sometimes to the Herods, but mostly to governors sent from Rome, till about forty years after the Jews had crucified Christ, because of the rebellious disposition of its inhabitants, it was, together with the temple, utterly destroyed and levelled with the granud, by litus, the som of Vespasian Caesar. After which, the Jews never attempted nove to return to it.

This tree is much celebrated in the scriptures: It shots out its branches at ten or twelve feet from the ground: Its branches are large, and at a distance from one another; its leaves are someatting like those of resementy; it is always green, and distils a kind of gum, to which different effects are attributed: The wood of it is incor-ruptible, beautiful, solid, and inclining to a brown riptiole, beautiful, solid, and including to a brown colour, it bears a small apple, like that of the pine. They made use of this wood not only for the beams and planks which covered edifices, and served for cellings to aparaments, but they placed them likewise in the substance of their walls, and them likewise in the substance of their walts, and so disposed them and the stone together, that there were three rows of stone and one of cedur wood, 1 Kings 6, 36. This word in the Hebrew signifies fulness of knowledge; and angels are so called from their ex-quivite knowledge, and were therefore used for quarte knowledge, and were therefore used for the punishment of man, who snamed by affecting divine knowledge, Gen. 3, 24. There is but an obscure description given us in scripture of the cherulius, which Moses pluced upon the ark of the coreannt, Exod. 25, 18, as well as no of the coverant, Exod. 25. 18. as well as of those which God posted at the entrance of that delightful garden ou, of which he had driven Adam and live. But it is probable that both one and the other had a human figure, since it is raid of those which were placed as the entrance. is said of those which were placed at the entrance of Poradise, that they had their station there assigned them, to guard the entrance to it, and hidd a fluming sword in their hands. And Exeksel compares the king of Tyre to the cherub that covered the ark of the covenant, Exek 28. 14. that is, he was like to this cherub, glittering all over with gold and glory. Moses says, that two che ubbins covered the mercy-scat with their many created in hints side, and looked one to over with gota and giory. Mosses say, that is a chesubins covered the mercy-seat with their wings criended on both sides, and looked one to another, having their faces turned toward the mercy-seat which covered the ark. Gid is supposed to sit on the mercy-seat, whose face the posed to sit on the mercy-seat, whose face the ungels in heaven always behold, and upon whom their eyes are fixed to observe and receive his commands, and towards Christ, the true Propinatory, which mystery they desire to look in: 1 1 Pet. 1 12, not encying mankind their near 1 Pet. 1 12, not encying mannens in and happy relation to him, but taking pleasure and happy relation of it. CHARITY

Is a principle of prevaiting love to God and good will to men, which effectually inclines one endued with it to zlorgy God, and to do good to theirs; to be patient, slow to anger, and ready so put up wrongs; to show kindness to all, and seck the good of others, though with prejudent to himself. A preson endued therewith does not interpret douby all things so the worst ense, but he have a worst for the size of there, have a the best; is sorry for the sins of others, bu rejuices when any one does well, and is apt to bear with their failings and infirmities; and lastly, this grace is never lost, but goes with us into another world, and is exercised there,

HILD, CHILDREN, or SONS, are taken different ways in Scripture. The descendants of a man, how remote soever they may be, are called sons, or children. For example: the children man, now remote soever they may or, are values sons, or children of Edom, the children of Moab, the children of Isael. These expressions, the children of light, the children of darkness, are used to signify those who follow light, and those who remain in darkness: the children of the king and the king and the children of the chi dom, those who belong to the kingdom. Per dom, those who belong to the kingdom. Persons who are almost of age, are often called children. For example: Joseph is called a child, though he was at least sixteen years old, Gen. 37. 30, and Benjamin of the age of above thirty, is still called a little child, Gen. 44. 20. Listewise men of full age have often the name of children given them, Isa. 65. 20. The child shall The child shall position to the wicked, are likewise called by the name; the children of Seth's family, in opposition to the race of Cain, Gen. 6.2. The sons of Giossaw the daughters of men. Judges and magistrates are likewise termed children of God. Pal. 82. 6. I have said, you are gods; and all of you are the children of the Most High.

In the New Testament, Believers are commonly called the children of God, by virtue of their adoption, and the prerogatives which Christ purchased for them by the ments of his death and sufferings. John 1. 12, 4th hath given us power to become the sons of God: and elsewhere; see Rom. 8. 14. Gal. 3. 26.

CHILDREN, or Sons of men. This name is given to the men of Cain's family, who lived before the deluge; and in particular to the giants, those violent and corrupt men, who before the deluge had corrupted their ways, and drew down the most ter-rible effects of God's anger upon the earth. Af rible effects of Coal's anger upon the earth. Afterwards the improust, the wecked Israelites were catled the sons of men, Psal. 4. 2. O ye sous of men, how long will ye love vanity? Trialty, Mat. 28. 19. 1 John 5. 8. In his drivine nature he is equal with the Pather, and over all, God blessed for ever; but in his human nature, subordinate and inferior to the Father. over all, God blessed for ever; but it his human nature, subordinate and inferior to the lather, being like to men in all things, sin excepted, Both natures are united in the person of Christ, lioth natures are united in the person of Christ, that he might be our prophet, priest, and king, and the author of a complete, perfect, all-nificient, and eternal salvation. He ever lives to intercede for all that come to him, Heb. 7, 25. In Christ all the types, prophecies, and promises centre. He is the most suitable object for the context, but he was suitable object for the centre. He is the most untable object for the sumer to look to, trust in, and expect all his hopes, joys, and consolations from, as by him alone life and solation are procured. He is the head of principalities and youers, the brightness of his lather agony; and the express image of his person, Heb. 1. 3 the glory of all worlds, and the refulzent luminary of the universe, John

1. 9. the merhaustible formtain of all the trea sures of nature, grace, and glory, Jer. 2. 13, and the matchless, incomparable Redeemer of all that come to s.n., John 6. 37. Christ was the grand subject of all the apostles' ministry, Acts 8. 5. and, indeed, a sermon missing the Acts grand subject of an ine aposites ministry, Acts 8. 5. and, indeed, a sermon without Christ is like a cloud without water, or a hadow withou, substance. One moment's communion with Christ is of more worth than ten thousand worlds; his person most gloruns, and he is altogether lovely, Cant. 5. 16.

he ancient Hebrews, being instructed by the prone ancient Horsews, being mistracted by the pro-phets, had very clear autions of the Messiah: but they were changed by little and little, so that when Christ appeared in Judea, they had enter-tained a very wrong notion of the Messias, ex-pecting a temporal monarch and conjuners, that should bring the whole world under subjection. should bring the whole world under subjection. From whence it came to pass, that they were much scandalized at the outward appearance, the humility, and seeming weakness of our Savour which lindered them from acknowledging him as the Christ whom they expected. He ancient prophets had portedly, that the Messias should be God and Man, exoliced and abased, Muster and Sevenat, Priest and Victim, King and Subject, mortal, and a conquerer of death, wich and war a hum a conquerer, obvious net a man of poor, a king, a conjucter, glorious, yet a man of griefs, involved in our infirmities, in a state of great humiliation. All these seeming contrarie ties were to be reconciled in the person of the the person o, Messiah, as they did really meet in the person of Christ. It was known that the Messiah was to Christ. It was known that the steered was no be bonn of a virgin, of the title of Judah, of the rave of David, in the village of Beth-lehen: that he was to continue for ever, that his name should he was to continue for ever, that his name should be continued as long as the sun, that he was the great prophet promised in the law, that he was both the Son and Lord of David, that he was to perform great miracles, that he should restow all things, that he should die and vise again, thut Plias shudd be the forerunner of his appearance, that a proof of his conning should be, the cure of the lipers, lipe restored to the dead, and the gospel preached to the poor; that he should not destroy the law, but should perfect and fulfil it; that he should he a stone of offence, and a stumbling-block, against which many should bruse themselves; should be a stone of effence, and a stumbling-block, against which many should brune themselves; that he should suffer oppositions and contradictions, and that a strange people should come and submit themselves to his discipline.

When Christ appeared, these notions of him were still common among the Jews. Our Savrons herein appeals even to themselves, and asks them if they were not the characters of the Mexicola.

nerein appeals even to themserves, and assist nem if these were must the characters of the Messaid, and if they do not see the completion of them in himself. The Loungelists take care to put them in mind of them, to prove thereby, that Jesus is the Christ whom they expected. The I rangelist Luke says, that our Saviour enter-ing rate a synagogue at Nazaveth, there opened the book of the prophet Isaiah, where he read, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor, Luke 4. 18. After which he should them poor, Luke 4, 18. After unite he shawed item that this prophecy was accomplished in his person, And St. Peter and the other believers being assembled together, Acts 4, 24, 25, 5, c. say to God from, Psal. 2, 1, 2, Why did the heathen race, Sc. and opply this prophecy to Christ, terse 27, And he Acts 10, 38. Peter, speaking to Corne live the activities and the their terse with hims the continuous and to those that were with him, tells them that the Lord had sent peace to men, by Jesus Christ, whom God had anointed with the Holy Ghost and with power. So that with the Italy close and with power. So had when Christ, or his disciples, are said to be anointed, it is to be understood of the spiritual and internal unction of grove and of the Holy Ghest, of which the univard and sensible unction, with which they aricinally anomated kings, priests, with which they aricinally anomated kings, priests, with which they anciently anomical kings, priests, and prophets, was but the figure and symbol, See MESSIAH.

Christ is taken for the mystical body of Christ, both himself the Head, and the church as his members, which make but one body, I Cor. 12, 12. Likewise for the doctrine of Christ, or the rule of life prescribed by him, 12th 4, 20. And for the Spiritt, and spiritual gifts and graces of Christ, Ison, 8, 10.

CIRCUMCISION.

This term is taken from the Latin, circuoneidere, which signifies to cut all round, because the Jens who circumcised their children, cut off the little skin, or prepute after that monner, which covers the nut of the pents, or natural part. God enjoined Abraham to use circumcistion, is a sign if that covenant which he had entered into with him, Gen. 17, 10, 11, 4c. This was a sign, evidence, and assurance, both of the Messing promised by that God who appointed this or disance, narticulaity that he would give them ing promised by that God who appromised this or dinance, particularly, that he would give them Christ, the promised seed, out of the lains of Alvaham, and in him accept of them for his peculiar people, pardon their suns, and eleanse them from their natural corruption, signified by the cutting off of their fore-skuns; and also of men's obligation to the duties required; manely, or believe in this Messiah, to put off the old to helieve in this Messiah, to put of the old man, and serve him as new creatures; which is signified by his acceptance of, and submission to the ordinance. Around for the Jews, who were circumcised, as uncircumcision is put for the uncircumcised Gentiles, Gal. 2.7, 8, 9. And for such as are spiritually circumcised, who are the true spiritual seed of Abraham, who have the time spiritual seed of Abraham, who have the thing signified by that sign, or ceremony, and perform that which circumcision was designed Signifies, [1] A congeries chiefly of watery parti ignines, [1] A congeries energy of watery parti-cles, drawn or sent out of the earth in vapours, into the middle region of the air, 2 Sam, 22, 12, [2] The heavens, 1/8al, 36, 5, [68, 34, [3]] A great number, Heb. 12, 1, [4] A fog, or mist, Hos. 6, 4.

The scripture represents the clouds as conservato ries of water, or rain, which are scattered upon the earth at God's command, lob 26. 8. Ils bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds. God confines the waters in the clouds, as in a hottle he scatters them afterwards upon the earth, as it were through a watering-pot. Job speaking of the matter of the Chaos, which covered the whole earth at the beginning of the world, says, that God had hemmed in the sea, or the waters, as it were with a cloud, and covered it with darkness, were with a cloud, and covered it with darkness, as a child is weapped up its swaddling-clothes, Job 38. 9. When the sacred writers speak of the second coming of Christ, they describe him to us of sescending upon the clouds, encompased with all his majerty, Mat. 24. 80. Rev. 1. 7. The prophet Isaith, speaking of the conversion of the Gentiles, compares their flocking into the church to the flight or quick motion of a cloud; roting that they should come in great multitudes and with great speed and engerness, Isa. 60, 8, and with great speed and eagorness, Isa. 60. 8. St. Peter compares seducers to clouds that are carried with a tempest, 2 Pet. 2. 17. By which comparison he sets furth both the inconstancy of these seducers, that, like chouds driven with the wind, they are tossed to and fio from one doctrine to another; and likewise their deciffulness, that they make a shew of what they have not, as clouds do of rain, and yet are scattered without yielding any. And Solomon compares the infirmities of old age, which arise successively one after another, to clouds returning after rain, Ecd. 12. 2.

ing after rain, Eccl. 12. 2.

When the Israelites departed out of Egypt, God gave them a pillar of cloud to direct them in their march. This pillar was commonly in the front of the Israelitish army; but when they were come to the Red Sea, and the Legytian army appeared to them, the pillar of cloud which stood before the camp of Israel, placed itself between that and the camp of the Egyptians, so that the Egyptians could not come near the Israelites all night, Exod. 14. 19, 20. But in the morning about break of day, seeing the cloud moving on toward the sea, and following the Israelites who had passed through its channel, which was left dry for them in the night time, the Egyptians, resolved upon prusuing them, and were all ans, resolved upon pursuing them, and were all covered with the waters of the Red Sea, which returned upon them and destroyed them. This cloud continued always from that time to attend clind continued always from that time to attend the Israeliuse in the utilierness. It was clean and bright during the night, in order to give them light when it grew dark; ond in the day time it was thick and glowny, the better to defen them from the excessive heats of the Arabian deserts, through which they performed their journey. He same cloud by its motions gave likewise the

he same cloud by its motions gave takense the signal to the Israeliues, either to encamp or to decamp; so that where that stayed, the people stoyed till it rose again; then they broke m, their camp, and followed it till it stopped. It was called a Pillar, by reason of its form, which was high and elevated, as it were a yule ond head of fogs. This cloud not only enlightened the travelues has also was a proceed them and was a of fugs. This cloud not only enlightened the Israelites, but also protected them, and was a continual pledge of God's presence, power, and protection. To this the prophet Isaiah although ahen he says, The Lord will create upon every dwelling place of mount Zion, and upon he assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaoning fire by night, Ira. 4, 5, that is, That God would be the director, protecton, and glory of his church. This word signifies fellowship, concord, or agreement, 2 Cor. 6. 11. What communion hath light with darkness? Such as are enlightened by the word and Spirit of God can have na profitable, word and Spirit of God can have na propitable, agreeable, or comfortable converse with such as are in darkness or ignorance. Communion is likewise taken for a sacrament, or sacred sign of our spiritual fellouship with Christ, 1 Cor. 10, 16. The cup of blessing, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? Our drinking of the wine in the cop, is a religious action, where wherein Christ communicates himself and and wherem Cartsi communicates himself and his grace to us, and we communicate our souls to him; so that Christ, and believers in that ac-tion, have a mutual communion one with another. tion, have a mutual communion one with another. Believers have communion with Christ by election in him; by their kindred with his humanity; and by a participation of his Spirit. They have communion with the Father and the Son, 1 John 1, 3 They partake of all those blessings that God the Father has promised to those that are in evocuant with him; and also of all those privileges which Christ has purchased for his members; such as, pardon, reconciliation, adoption, sanctification. See tion, sanctification, &a. he Communion of saints: That fellowship which the sasuts have with Christ, and all his benefits by faith, and among themselves by love, 1 John by faith, and among themselves by twee, 1 some 1.3. This Communion is both active and passive; that is, it consists both in daing good to, and receiving good from, one another. There be divers sorts of it, as, (1) lellowship in doctrine, or helief, Acts 2.32. Gal. 2.9. (2) In exhortation, Heb. 10. 24.25. (3) In consolation, Eph. 5. 19. 1 Thess. 4.18. (4) In humility, or submission, Rom. 12. 10. (6) In pily, Rom. 12. 10. (7) In prayer, Eph. 6. 18, 19. (8) In helping and relieving one another, Acts 4. 32, 34, 35.

Prov. 1, 21, she crieth in the chief place of c. Acts 19.40. whereby we may give account of this c. CONCUBINE.

Acts 19.40. whereby we may give account of this.

This term in scripture signifies a wife of the second rank, who was inferior to the matron, or mistress of the house. The chief wives differed into fellowship with their husbands by solemn stipulation, and with consent and solemn rejoining of friends. (?) They brought with them dowries to their husbands. (3) They had the government of their families under and with their husbands. (3) They had the government of their families under and with their husbands. (4) The inheritance belonged to the children from the first letter of the children of concubines did not inherit their families the father in his life-time might provide for thom, and make presents to them. Thus Sarah was Abraham's wife, of when he had lesace, the heir of all his wealth: But he had besides two concubines, namely, I lagar and Keturah; of these he had other children, whom he distinguished from Isaac, and made presents to them. As polygamy was sometimes practised by the patriarchs and among the Jews, either by God's permission, who could rightly dispense with his own laws when and where he pleased; or by their mistake about the lawfulness of it; as this was their practice, it was a common thing to see one, two, or mistake about the lawfulness, 2 Sam. 3. 2, 3, 4, 5, 20. 3. 5 and 1. 3. Rhowing we shall receive the greater concubines, 2 Sam. 3. 2, 3, 4, 5, 20. 5. 10 mon had seven hundred wives, who all lived in the quality of queens, and three hundred che devil the quality of queens, and three hundred che devil to concubines, 2 Sam. 3. 2, 3, 4, 5, 20. 3. 5 and 1. 3. Rom. 8. 37. in all these things we are more than c. CONSCIINCE 15 the testimony and secret judgment of the soul, which gives its approbation to actions that it thinks good, or reproactes itself with those which it helieves to be evil: Or, it is a particular knowledge which we have with no four own deedge, good or evil, arising out of the general knowledge of the mind, which shews his what is good, or evil; and Conscience tells us when we have done the one, or the other, Rom. 2. 15. It is called, [1] A conscience void of offence toward God and men; which does not accuse a person for any wilful offence, either against God, or men. Acts 24. 16. [2] A conscience hearing a person witness in the Holy Ghost, that is, by the conduct and guidance of the Holy Ghost, who cannot lie, Rom. 9. 1. [3] Pure and good, acting partified by the blood of Christ, Heb. 9. 14. 1 Tim. 3. 9. [4] Furged from dead works: that is, freed from that sentence of death which trectives by reason of sin, Heb. 9. 14. [5] A conscience nut traibled with a sense of guilt Heb. 10. 2. [6] A conscience checking and condemning persons, then they have gone against their light, and approving and justifying them, when they have gone against their light, and approving and justifying them, condemning persons, when they have gone against their light, and approxing and justifying them, when they have conformed to it. Rom. 2.15. Or, (11) Evil, Heb. 10.22. when it is defiled with vicious habits, so that it does not perform its office aright. It is called, [1] A conscience seared with a bot iron; that is, quite extinct and cut off, or utterly hardened, which has lost all sense and feeling, 1 Tim. 4.2. [2] A defiled conscience; whentit is blinded and perverted, so that it cannot judge of its own actions, Tit. 1.15. This evil conscience is sometimes quiet, sometimes stirring and troubled: It accused when it should accuse, and excused when it should accuse, and then erroneous and doubtful.

CONSECRATE.

To consecrate, is to offer, or devote any thing to God's worship and service. In the Old Testament, God ordained that all the first-born, both of man and beast, should be consecrated, Exod.

13. 2, 12, 15. He consecrated the whole race of Israel particularly to his worthip, Exod. 19.

O. And likewise he devoted the tribe of Levi, and the family of Aaron, in a more especial manner to his service, Num. 1. 49, 3. 12. Besides these consecrations, which God thus ordained by his own aboults and sovereign authorized. manner to his service, Num. 1. 49, [3, 12, 12]. Besides these conservations, which God thus ordained by his own absolute and sovereign authority, there were others which depended on the good will of men, who consecrated themselves, or the things belonging to them, or the persons depending on them, to the service of God, for ever, or for a time only. Hannah, Samuel's mother, offered her son to the Lord, to serve all his life-time in the tabernacle, I Sam. 1. 11, 22. Some of the Nazarites consecrated themselves to the Lord only for a certain time, Num. 6, 13. And the Helvews sometimer devoted their fields, or cattle to the Lord; after which they were no longer in their power, Lev. 27. 28. The cords of the wicked, are the snares with which they catch wenk and murary people, Psal, 129. 4. The cords of sin, Prov. 5. 22. are the consequences of crimes and had habits. Sin never goes unpunished; and the bud habits which are contracted, are as it were indisscluble bands from which it is almost impossible to get free. Let us cast away their cords from us, Psal. 2. 3. Let us east off their government, and free our-selves from subjection to their laws, which like selves from subjection to their laws, which like fetters restrain us from our purposes. To draw iniquity with cords of vanity, Isa. 5. 18. that is, to spare no cost nor pains in the purity worldly wanters and pleasures, profit or preference, by which as hy co dis, the devic with draws persons from God and his laws, and the way to heaven, and leads them down to the bottomless pit: Or, those vain and deceiffed arguments and pretences, whereby sinners generally draw themselves to sin, as laye of immunity and ments and pretences, whereby sinners generally draw themselves to sin, as lope of impunity and the like. I drew them with the cords of a man, Hos, 11, 4. I used all fair and gentle means, such as are fitted to man's temper, as he is a reasonable creature, to allure them to obscience: I found them backward and unapt to lend, I therefore in my pity laid my hand on them, and as a lather or friend drew them gently to me. To stretch a line or cord about a city, Lam. 2, 8, vignifies, to ruin, to destroy it utterly, to level it with the ground. The cords extended in setting hytents, do likewise furnish several metaphors, dewith the ground. The cords extended in setting up tents, do likewise furnish several metaphors, dewhetents, as the was pitting as each attention grither the stability or run of a place or eight, according as they are said to be extended or lone, 1 s.a. 33. 20. Dan. 2. 9.

Corruption sometimes signifies rottenness or putre faction, such as our bodies are subject to in the grave, Psal. 16. 10, Thou will oot suffer thine holy One to see corruption; 1 Cor. 15. 42. It is sown in corruption: Like seed it is land in the earth, subject to rottenness. It likewise signifies the infectious and poisonous nature of sin, which sprittally wastes the soul, being contrary to that integrity and soundness in which we were created. Eph. 4. 22, Put off the old man which is corrupt; that is, labour to mor tify and subdue that corruption of nature which has infected the whole man, both soul and tify and subdue that corruption of nature which his injected the whole man, both soul and body, and which daily grows worse and more corrupt by the fulfilling of its lusts. The apostle Peter, speaking of seducers, says, that they are the servants of corruption, 2 Pet. 2.19. They are slaves to their lists, and under the power and dominion of sin. COVENANT

Is a mutual agreement between two or more parties, Gen. 21, 32. There is [1] A covenant of works, the terms whereof are, Do and live; sin and die, Geo. 2, 17, 18a. 1, 19, 20, which covenant was broken by our first parents sinning against God, in eating the forbidden fruit, and the covenant being made with Adam as a public person, not only for himself but forths posterity, all mankind, descending from him by ordinary generation, sinued in him, and fell with him in their first transgression, Rom. 5, 12, 20. generation, sinued in him, and fell with him in their first transgression, Rom. 5. 12, 20. [2] The covenant of redemption, and solvation by grace, entered into by the sacred Thiee, in behalf of elect sinners, on whom grace, and glory were settled for ever, in Christ, their covenanthead, Psal. 89, 3, 28. Eph. 1. 3, 4. 2 Tim. 1. 9. This covenant is, (1) The first of the sovereign love and good will of God, John 3. 16. Col. 1. 19. (2) Sure, 1sa. 55, 3. (3) It is exclusive, 1sa. 61. 8. (4) Absolute, 1er. 32, 38, 40. (5) A covenant filled with all spiritual blessings to true believers in Christ, Eph. 1. 5. (6) Called new, 11eb. 8, 6, 8, not in respect of its date, it being made from cverlasting, but in the manner of its dispensation and manifestathe manner of its dispensation and manifesta-tion: Not that it differed in substance from the tion: Not that it differed in substance from the old, for therein Christ was promised, his death, and sufferings shadowed forth by the legal sacrifices; and such as were saved under the Old Testament, were so only by fatth in the blood of the Messiah that was to come; Gal. 4.3, Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for rightcousness; he believed in a special manner the promise of the covenant concerning Christ ner the promise of the covenant concerning Christ, in whom believers of all nations should be blessed, Gen. 12. 3. But this tostament or covenant is called new, in regard of the manner of its dispensation; being ratified afresh by the blood and actual sufferings of Christ; being freed from those rites or ceremonies whereuith it was formerly administreed; he it contains a more full and clear revelation of the mysteries of religion; as it is attended with a larger measure of the gifts and orarse at the Switter measure of the gifts and graves of the Spirit and as it is never to war old or be abolished (2) for circumcision, which was the sign or scale of the old covenant Gen. 17, 9, 13. (3) for the duties of the covenant; Foal. 25, 14, lie will shew them his covenant; He will reced to them, and make them understand the duties, and them, and make them thuser hand the autist, and bestow on them the blessings of the covenant (4) For the laws or conditions required of men by the covenant; or the precepts of God, which are the testimonies or witnesses of God's will and or the testimonies or witnesses of God's will and of man's duty, Psal. 25. 10. (5) For the deciding, or ten commandments, which contain the articles of the covenant, Deut. 4. 13. (6) For the law, religion, and people of the Jews, who were covenant with God, Dan. 11. 28. (7) For the vow, promise, or engagement, whereby a man and woman mutually bind themselves to each otter in woman mutually bind themselves to each other in marriage; and this is called the covenant of God, Prov. 2, 17, because God is the institution of that society and mutual obligation; and because God is called to be the witness and judge of that solemn promise and covenant, and the avenger of the transgression of it.

To cover the feet, Judg. 3. 24. and I Sam. 24. 3. This phrase is commonly understood in both these places, of easing nature; because the men not overring breecher as we do, but long coats, they did in that act ever their feet. But others expound it, of composing one's self to take conts, they did in that act ower their feet. But others expound it, of composing one's self to take a little sleep or rest, as was very usual to do in the day-time in those hot countries, 2 Sam. 4.5, and when they did so in a cool place, they used to cover their feet, as appears from Ruth 3.7, that this exposition seems best to agree with the history in hoth places where this phrase is found. For the expostre of Pund trainers to love for history in hoth places where this pirate is found. For the sexuants of Ehud staying so long for their lord, seems to imply, that they judged him gone to sleep, which might take up a considerable time, rather than to that other work, which takes up but a little time. And if Saul was askep in the cave, then it is not strange that he neither heard David and his men talking of him, nor perceived when David cut off the skir of his robe.

This word is sometimes taken in a good tense, as in 1 Cor. 12. 31, Covet earnestly the best gifts. This conctousness is good and commendable, when pristual blessings are earnestly desired and sought opiritual olessings are earnessing desired and songhi-after. But most commonly it is taken in a bad-tense, for an eager and immoderate desire after-earthy things, Josh, 7, 21. Prov. 21. 66. Covetousness is called idolatry, Col. 3, 5, he-tause the conetous man places that love, delight, and confidence in riches which are due to Godaline. This sin is condemned in all sorts of aline. This sin is condemned in all ports of persons, and is expressly forbidden by the tenth commandment, Thou shalt not covet, Esod. 20.

17. Such as are addicted to this sin, are hated of God, Psal, 10.3. They are cruel and oppressive, Mic. 2.2. The riches they are so eager in the pursuit of, prove but puison to kill them, and thus they are miserable, 304 20, 15, 16, 17. Prov. 1. 19. The inordinate love of wealth does likewise betray men to manifold sins, and exposes them to manifold sufferings; both from themselves, in denying themselves the comfort of their extent can disconnicted. themselves, in acquiring themselves the comfort of their estates; and from others, are extortioners, therees, and the like, Deut, 16, 19. CRIMSON.

Some think that it is the same with scarlet; others that it is of a deeper due. In the Hebrew it is called Tolahat Slami; that is, the double worm, or the worm Shani; as if Shani were the proper name of this worm: In the Arabic it is culled, Kermes, or Karmes; whence comes the word crimson, because they made use of these word crimson, because they made use of these word crimson, because they made use of these word crimson shell, membraneous, thin, smooth, and shining; of a reddish brown colour, month, and shining; of a reddish brown colour, moth, and shining; of a reddish brown colour, and, and the smaller capal carries, the greatest of which is full of a vast number of little oual eggs, very red, or vermillon; and the smaller cavity is full of a kind of liquor, which is red likewise, and not much different from blood. This cod, or shell, grows upon a kind of green oak, that grows only to the height of a shruh. These shrubs are jound in Palestine, in Provence, in Languedoc, in Spain, and elsewhere. They loosen these cods, ar shells, from the langue which they are factured, and They loosen these cods, or shells, and elsewhere. and elsewhere. They loosen these cods, or shells, from the leaves to which they are fastened, and the worms of which they are full came out of the hole made by taking them from the leaf; they separate these little animals from the shells with a siere, and put them together by pressing them lightly, and make them into balls of the bigness

By the word cross is understood a gibbet made of two pieces of wood punt aiross; whether they cross with right angles at the top, as a T. or in the middle of their length like an X. The cross was the punishmant of the vilest slaves, and was called a servile punishment: This punishment over Saxiour underwent, Mat. 27. 35. Phil. 2. 8.

This penalty was so common among the Romans, that pains, affictions, troubles, and unprosperous affairs were called crosses: and the verb cruciare affairs were called crosses: and the verb cruciare

This penalty was so common among the Romans, that pains, affictions, troubles, and unprosperous affairs were called crosses; and the verb cruciare was used for all sorts of chastisements, and pains of body and mind. See PUNISHMENT. Our Saviour says often in his gespel, that he who would be his disciple, must take up his cross and follow him, Mat. 16. 24. He must submit readily to whatseever afficients God alway upon him, or any suffering that befals him in the service of Cod, even to death itself. Cross is taken for the whole of Christ's sufferings, from his birth to his death, but especially those upon the tree, Eph. 2. 16. Heb, 12. 2. And for the doctrine of the gospel; that is, of salvation through Christ crucified, 1 Cor. 1. B. False teachers, who pressed the observation of the law of Moses, as necessary to salvation, besides faith in Christ, are called enemies of the cross of Christ, Phil. 3. 18. because by such doctrine they did really oppuse and undermine the pawer and merit of Christ's passion, and sought to axial persecution, which they would have been exposed to, had they preached salvation only by Christ crucified, as the aposite Paul was, Gal. 5, 11.

o crucity, is not only taken for putting to death on a cross, Mat. 27. 35. but also for the subduing and mortifying sin; for breaking the strength, and suppressing the motions and breakings out, of corrupt nature, Gal. 5. 24. They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh. Christ's death on the cross has not only merited recenciliation with Gad, but is also made ef fectual to mortify and subdue the lasts of the flesh, Gal. 2. 20, I am crucified with Christ. It is said of them, who for some time have made profession of religion, and afterward turn apostates, that they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, Heb. 6. 6. that is, They show themselves to be of the same upinion with those that did crustly Christ, and would do it again, were it in they moved. do it again, were it in their power. he aposite tells the Galatians, that Christ Jesus

Is properly taken for a cap of state worn on the heads of sovereign princes, I Chron. 20. 2. But in a figurative sense it signifies honour, splendour, or dignity, Lam. 5. 16, The crown is fallen from our head. And the apostle says of the Philippiaos, that they were his joy and crown, Phil. 4. 1. They were his honour and glary, the great ornament of his ministry, by means whereof they had been converted to Christ. It is used likewise for reward, because conquerors in the public games were crowned, 1 Cor. 9. 25, They do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible: that is, the westlers 9. 25, They do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible: that is, the westlers in those games which are practised among you contend in order to obtain a wreath, ar garland of flowers, herbs, or leaves of laurel, oftwe, and the like; but we Christians strive for an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for us. To curse, signifies to imprecate, to call down mis-chief upon, or to wish evil to: Noah cursed his grandson Canaan, Gen. 9. 25. Cursed be Ca-naan; may he be hateful to God, abhorted by men, and miverable in his person and posterity. Jacob cursed the fury of his two sons Simeon and Levi, who massacred the Shechemites, and plundered their city, Gen. 49.7. Moses enjoins the people of Israel to denounce curses against the violaters of the law, Deut. 27. 15, 16, &c. And Joshua cursed him who should undertake to And Joshua cursea nem and somme build Jericho, Josh. 6.26. These curses were either ordained by God himself, and pronounced by men abounding with the Spirit; or were pre-dictions of what evil should happen to a person, dictions of what evil should happen to a person, or people, uttered in the terms of imprecations, which had their accumplishment: They were not the effects of passion, impatience, or revenge, and therefore were not such as God condemns in his law, and in his word. For example: he ordains that no one shall presume to curse his father, or his mother upon pain of death, Exod. 21. 17. He shall not wish any mischief to be fat them, nor we any kind of malicious resulting 21. 17. He shall not wish any mischief to befal them, nor use any kind of malicious revuling spechos, which argue a contempt of his parents. He ordains that no one curse the p ince of his people, Exod. 22. 28, or one that is deaf, Lev. 19. 14. In the gospel, our Sovious pronounces those of his disciples to be blessed, who are loaded with curses, and requires them to bless those that curse them, to render blessing for cursing, Mat. 5. 11. Luke 6. 28. Rom. 12. 14. and dramanged his curse against the servency which

He cursed Cain also, who had imbrued his hands in his brother Abel's blood, Gen. 4, 11. He was devoted to destruction, cast out from God's presence and the communion of the church, and the society of his kindred and acomaintance, and wandered from communion of the church, and the society from kindred and acquaintance, and wandered from one construy to austher by reason of the trouble conscience. The day is distinguished into natural, civil, and he day is distinguished into natural, civil, and artificial. The natural or solar day, is the duration of four and twenty hours. The artificial day, is the time of the smis continuous above the horizon, which is unequal, according to different times and seasons, by reason of the obtiquity of the sphere. God called the light day, that is, the artificial day. The evening and the morning were the first day, namely, natural, Gen. 1.5. The civil day, is that, the beginning and end whereof is determined by the common custom of any nation. The Hebrews been their and end whereof is determined by the common costom of any nation. The Hebrews began their civil and ecclesiastical day from one evening to another. From even unto even shall be celebrate your sabhath, Lev. 23, 32. The Bahylonians reckoned their days from one sun-riving to another; the Italians from one sun-set to another; some from noon to noon; and others from midnight to midnieht.

This day, or to-day, do not only signify the particular day on which one is queaking, but likewise ony indefinite time. Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, Deut. 9.1, that is, in a short stretter day on which one is speaking, but like-wise any indefinite time. Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, Deut. 9. 1. that is, in a short time after this, the word day being often put for time, as in Gen. 2. 4, 17. In the day when God made the earth and the heavens: in the God made the earth and the heavens; in the day thou eatest thereof thon shalt surely die, that is, at the time when thou eatest thereof, To-day, if ye will hear his voice, Heb, 3. 15; that is, in this present season of grace, whate you enjoy the means of grace. The night is far spent, the day is at hand, Tom. 13. 12. The time of heathenish is gnoranct and profaneness is in a great measure over; and the time of gospellight and swing knowledge is begin among us. The day of Jerusalem, is the time of its calomity and destruction, Psal. 137. 7. Ahraham desired to see my day, says our Sarvour, John 8. 56. He desired to have a prospect of the time of my coming in the flesh. One man esteemeth one day above another, Rom. 14. 5. He thinks of my coming in the fish. One man exteeneth one day above another, Rom, 14.5. He thinks that the Jewish festivals are helier than other days, and still to be observed. He seeth that his day is coming, Paol. 37.13. The time appointed by God for his minishment or destruction. This day have I begotten thee, Paul. 2.7, that is, from all eternity, in which there is no succession, no yesterday, no to-morrow, but it is all as the continued day or morner, without is no succession, no yesterday, no to-morrow, but it is all as one continued day or moment, without change or flux. Or, this day, may refer to the manifestation of Christ's eternal sonship in time; either in his birth and life, when his being the Son of God was demonstrated by the testimony of the angel, luke 1.32. And of God the Facher, Mat, 3.17. 17.5. But chiefly at his reasurcection, by which he was declared to be the Son of God with power, Rom. 1.4. In one day, that is, suddenly and mespectedly, Rev. 18, 8. The Christian subbath is called the Lord's day. Rev. 1.10, as the secrement is called the Lord's day. that it, inddenly and inverpectedly, Rev. 18, 8, The Christian sablath is called the Lord's day, Rev. 1, 10, as the sacrament is called the Lord's supper, 1 Cor. 11, 20, because Christ instituted it, or, because the end of its institution was the remembrance of Christ's resurrection, as the end of the Lord's supper was the commemoration of his death; or, because it is employed in his worship and service. The day of judgment is thewase called the Lord's day, 1 Thess, 5, 2, It is his by destination, because thereon he has appointed to judge the world; but the subbath is his by consecration, choice, and institution, Gen. 1.5, God called the light d, and darkness night 32, 26, he said, let me go, for the d, breaketh Exad, 21, 21, if he continue a d, or two, he shall 40, 37, journeyed not, till the d, it was taken up Lev. 23, 32, feasts of Lord, every thing upon his d, 25 hms. 3, 13, on the d, 1 smote first-born in Egypt 11, each prince shall offer his offering on his d, 14, 44, each d, for a year shall hear your iniquities 30. 8, if her husband disallow her on the d, 12, Deut. 4, 10, the d, thou stoodest before L, in Horeb 15, we saw no manner of similities on the 15, we saw no manner of similities on the 15, we saw no manner of similities on the 15, we saw no manner of similities on the 15.

Signifies, [1] One whose soul is separated from his body, either by a natural or violent death, Ruth 1. B. Joh. 1. 19. [2] Such as are in a state of spiritual death, being void of grace, lying under the power of sin, and as mubble to do any thing that is spiritually good, or to convert and raise themselves, as a dead body is to quicken itself, Eph. 2. 1. 1 Tim. 5. 6. [3] Such as have no being at all, but are estinct, both body and soul; Mat. 22. 32, God is not the God of the dead, that is, of such us are finally and irrecverably perished, without any possibility of living again, as the Sadducees though; but he is the God of the living; that is, of such whose sends again, as the Sadducees thought; but he is the God of the living; that is, of such whose souls do live and are in being, and whose bodies, though now dead, shall be made alive again. [4] Such as were like dead persons, as the Jews, who seemed to be lost in Babylon, of whom there was no more hope that they should return and live in their own land, than that a dead man should rise to life. Isa. 26. 19, Thy dead men shall live. [5] One very neur to death, as good as dead, Gen. 20. 3, Thou art but a dead man, says Grd to Abimelech: Thou descrees a precent and nuttinely death; and if thou proceedest in thy intended wickedness, it shall be inflicted upon thee. DEATH Signifies, [1] The separation of the soul from the body, Geo. 25. 11. This is temporal death. [2] A separation of soul and body from God's favour in this tife, which is the state of all unregenerated and unrenewed persons, who are withgenerated and unrenewed persons, who are without the light of knowledge, and the quackening power of grace, Luke 1, 79. This is spiritual death. [3] The perpetual separation of the whole man from God's heavently presence and glovy, to be tormented for ever with the devil and his angels, Rev. 2, 11. This is the second death, or eternal death. To all these kinds of death, Adam made himself and his posterity liable, by transgressing the commandment of God in cating the forbidden fruit, Gen. 2, 17. [4] Some possonous deadly thing, 2 Kings 4, 40. [5] Imminent dangers of death, 2 Cor. 11. 23. [6] The pestilence of contagious diseases, Jer. 15. 2. By the gates of death, the grave is signified, and the state of the dead after this life, Job 38, 17. Have the gatees of death heen opened unto thee Hast thou seen, or dost then perjectly know, the

Have the gates of death been opened unto thee that thou seen, or dost thou perfectly know, the place and state of the dead; the depths and bowels of that earth, in which the generality of dead men are brief; or the several ways and methods of deatn; or the states and conditions of men after death? And the Psalmist says, Thou liftest me up from the gates of death, Psal, 9. 13. Then didst being me back from the brink or mouth of the grave, into which I was ready to drop, being as near death as a mun is to the city arop, soing as near death are man is to the city that is come to the very gains of it. By the instruments of death, dangerous and deadly vea pous are meant, Psalif, 1.3. Love is strong as death, Caut. 8.6. "The spiritual love of the church to Christ is strong as death, which overcomes the strongest man, Psal. 89, 48.

DEBT
Is what is due by one man to another, Neh. 10. 31.
Sins are by recombinance called debts, Mat. 6. 12.
As a debt obliges the debtor to payment, so sin doth the sunner to punishment. And as the creatior hash a right to exact the punyment from the debtor, so God buth a right to inflict punishment on the guilty. Thus men use debtors to God, by tremasking against him; and to their neighbours. trespassing against him; and to their neightour when they wong, injure, or offered them, Mat. 6. 12. The aposite Paul says, Rom. 1. 14. I am adulto both to the Greeks and Barbarsaus. I am bound by my affect to preach the geoget is all nations, whether more civilized, or more ride-and speaking of such as looked upon extrumer-tion as necessary to their justification and sal-vation, he says, I testify to every min that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law, Gal. 5. 3. Ile obliges himself to keep the whole law, as the condition of life, and so virtually disclaims all pardon by Christ.

DEGREE, S.
Psalms, or Songs of degrees: This title is given to fifteen Psalms, which are the 120th, and all that follow to the 134th, inclusive. The Hebrew test calls them, A song of ascents. Junius and Trecalls them, A song of ascents. Junius and Tre-mellius translate the Hebrew by, A song of ex-cellencies, or, An excellent song; because of the excellent matter of them, as eminent persons ura colled men of high degree, I Chron. 17. 17. Some call them Psalms of elevation; because, say Some call them Psalms of elevation; because, say they they were sung with an exalted voice, or because at every Psalm the voice was raised. But the common translation, or, Psalms of degrees, har more generally obtained. Some tretry reters think that they were so called, because they were sung upon the fifteen steps of the tender they are not agreed about the public; but they are not agreed about the year where these fifteen steps were. Others think they were so called, because they were sung integliery, which they say, was in the court of Israel, where sometimes the Levilles read this law. But others are of winner, that the most Israel, where sometimes the Levilles read that. But others are of opinion, that the most probable reason why they are called songs of degrees, or of ascent, is, because they were composed and sung by the Jews in the occasion of their deliverance from the capitality of Babylon, P ov. 1, 22, how long will scorners d, in scorning? whether it were to implore this deliverance from Coa, or to return thunks for it after it had happened. All these Psalms have some relation to rened. All these Fraults have some election to this great event. And the scripture commonly applies the phrase, to accoud, or go up, to ex-press this return, Fera 1, 3, 5, 11, 7, 6, 7, 9, because Babylon was situated in a plain, and though one of the Psalms is ascribed to David, though one of the Psalms is ascribed to David. and another to Solomon, yet they also, as well as the test, might have been used on this occa-

as the rest, might have been used on this occa-sion, though they serve composed by David and Solomon upon other occasions. The upostle Paul says, That such as have used the office of a deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree, I Tim. 3, 13. They gain great human, request, and conditions.

To destroy, signifies to pull down, or ruin a city, or building, levelling it with the ground, Gen. 19. 14. The Lord will destroy this city, Exod. 34. 13. Ye shall destroy their altars; that is, 34. 13. Ye shall destroy their altars; that is, ye shall not leave one stone upon another, as our Saviour speaks in Luke 21. 6. Also it signifies, to take away a thing quite, so as it he no more; in this sense Chrive is said to destroy sin, Rom. 6. 6. That the hody of sin might he destroyed; that is, that it might be weakened and subdued more and more, until it he quite taken out of our nature. Sometimes it signifies to bring persons into irrecoverable and signifies to oring persons into irrecoverable and inter rain, and miscry; thus God destroys the wicked, Psal. 37, 38. The transgressors shall be destroyed together: and Job 21, 29. The wicked is reserved to the day of destruction. God preserves the wicked from the common calamities of this life such as destroy therm of the common calamities of this life such as destroy them. mities of this life, only to destroy them, and display his vengeance against them. It is taken for punishing transgressors by death, as magistrates do. I'sal. 101. 8, I will early destroy all the wicked of the land, says David. I will set about wicked of the land, says David, I will set adont this work upon the first opportunity, at soon as I am seated on the thinne, that so I may both prevent all that mischief which otherwise they might do; and hinder the injection of others by their evil example; and discourage and deter ull my subjects from the the practices. The apos-tle Paul says, Ron. 14. 15. Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died. To edify, signifies to build up, strengthen and encourage between it their faith and participion, he and gesignifies to build up, strengthen and encourage behavers in their faith and profession, by endeav ouring to make them more wise, buly, and humble, and to live more to the glory of God. On the contrary, to destroy, implies a doing of that which may tend to the destruction of a neak believer, by drawing him to act against his con-science in the use of things indifferent, or by giving him so great an otherce as may always giving him so great an offence as may alienate his mind from the Christian profession. The evil spirits say to our Saviour, Mark 1. 24. Art thou come to destroy us? that is, either, art thou come to dispossess us; or, art than come to execute the final judgment upon us, and to command us to our chains, before the day of judgment? Ind Christ by his death is said to destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, Heh. 2. 14. The devil is said to have the devil, Heh. 2. 14. The devil is said to have the power of death, because he induces men to commit sins that meritoriously render them liable to death; because he inspires them with furious thoughts, and inflames the passions, from whence proceed strifes and wars, that efficiently caused death; because he is many times the executioner of God's wrath, and inflicts death upon rebellions. and incorrigible sumers; hence says the Psalorist, That God cast upon the Egyptians the fierceness of his anger, wrath, indignation, Lad trouble, hy sending evil angels among them

Psal. 78. 40. He is likewise so called, because Jer. 49. 9. if thieves by night they will d. till have 2 Sam. 20.19, thou seekest to d. a city and a mother he makes death more formulable to sincers, by 51.3, spare ye now, d., ve litterly all her host 4. 16, stretched out his hand on Jerusalem to d. heightening their guilty fears of God's tribinal; Lam. 3, 66, persecute and d, them in anger Fisal, 78, 49. He is theuries of cairea, because the makes death more formidable to sinuers, by acignicating their guilty fears of God's tribuous; and this title may also signify his tormenting sinand this tive may also signify his commencing som-ners with intrelecting cruelly in hell, which is the second death. These peual crits which Satan t mgs upon mankind, are upon the account of our essobednence; and his mighty power in temptaelsobedience; and his mighty price in templa-tion is from our mixed corruption. The Lord Jesus hy his death hath taken away the guilt and power of six: the guilt, in enduring the curse of the law, thereby satisfying the injuned justice of tod; and the power of it, by crucifying our old man with him, that the holy of sin might be man with him, that the hody of sm might be destroyed, Rom. 6. 6. And this one Surious by his death destroys the cruel tyrining of the death. Destruction is taken for a temporal death, Psal. 30, 3, Thou turnes man to destruction. For mortification, I Cor. 5. 5. To deliver such an one to Satan, for the destruction of the flesh. For damnation, 2 Pet. 2. 1, And bring upon themselves swift destruction. Also for hell, the above the riched are eternally tormented. themselves swift destruction. Also for hell, the place where the wicked are eternally tormented, Mat. 7, 13, Broad is the way that leadeth to Mat. 7. 13, Broad is the way that reactin to destruction. For extripation, or utter rooting ont, Esth. 8. 6, How can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred? For n consoming plagne, Psal. 91. 6, the destruction that wastern at noon-day. Ind for a corruptus, painful, and deally disease, I Sam. 5, 9. Destroy signifies to affect, Job 2, 3, to destroy him without cause.
