PREFATORY NOTE.

In presenting to the Alumni of the Theological Institute the result of our labors, your committee beg indulgence for any remaining errors or poverty of statement which may mar the work. Knowing its imperfection, we offer it as the best which our resources could command, hoping that fuller details may be secured in the future.

We desire also to acknowledge the universal kindness and patience with which you have aided us in gathering the statistics for this catalogue, and the manifold most cordial expressions of tender regard for this, our "Alma Mater" which have flowed in upon us from far and near.

N. B.—It will be an invaluable aid in completing annals of future years if each alumnus will forward to the seminary any facts regarding his work and its changes, and also a copy of each publication from his pen as soon as issued, that the same may be preserved in alumni alcove as a perpetual memorial; arrangements are already made for the reception and record of all such facts, which may be addressed, "Theological Institute of Connecticut," Hartford, Conn.

Any item of information or correction from any source will be gratefully received.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

The Theological Institute of Connecticut was founded at East Windsor Hill by the Pastoral Union in 1833. It received its charter in 1834.

COMPARATIVE SECURITY.

The Board of Trustees is not a self-perpetuating body, but is elected by the Pastoral Union. Subscription to the seminary creed is necessary to membership in each of these bodies. Each professor is obliged to affirm his assent to the creed at the beginning of every year.

DOCTRINAL BASIS.

The creed, which is a part of the organic law of the Institution, embodies the old faith of the New England churches, and is grounded, it is believed, in the Divine Word. It has stood the ordeal of time, of Biblical research, and of violent assault.

CHARACTER AND METHOD OF INSTRUCTION.

From the first it has been Biblical. In recent years, however, Old and New Testament Exegesis has held a prominent place in the daily routine, while each of the other branches is so taught as to make the Bible a constant text-book. Instruction is given both by lectures and recitations, familiar intercourse between teacher and pupil being always encouraged.

CHANGE OF LOCATION.

The guardians of the Institution deemed it necessary in 1865 to remove it from East Windsor Hill to Hartford. For fourteen years it occupied three buildings on Prospect street. By a munificent donation of the late Mr. James B. Hosmer, a spacious edifice, bearing his name, was erected on Broad street, in 1879, where ample accommodations are provided for professors and students.

MUSIC.

Instruction is provided for all the classes in the theory and practice of music, and a room has lately been added to the main building for the special use of this department.

GYMNASIUM.

Near Hosmer Hall is a building supplied with complete apparatus for gymnastic practice, and class attendance is required at regular intervals.

LIBRARY.

Within the last three years, the library has been placed on a new footing, and enlarged by the careful expenditure of eighteen thousand dollars. The number of volumes at the present time is about sixteen thousand. A special feature of the library is the "Alumni Alcove," the gift of graduates, in which all their publications may be gathered.
