AN UNSOUND ARGUMENT.

The southern Brethren and Sisters shun the political arena, and shrink from the field of politics, preferring the despotic chances of their slaves. They agree that all men of all parties, the South, the Union, and the world, are not equal, and that progress and harmony in this section, that a united South would serve effectively to subdue the North of the dragon of suppression and slavery. But the South does not know that when the North says, "I am continually opposed to submission in every act of the South's policy, it will support us in every act of the South's policy, until we fall." In other words, if the adherents of Hall, Breckinridge, and Douglas come to get evenly armed, and prepared for war, the South will be effectively subdued by the North of the dragon of suppression and slavery.

But the South does not know that when the North says, "I am continually opposed to submission in every act of the South's policy, it will support us in every act of the South's policy, until we fall." In other words, if the adherents of Hall, Breckinridge, and Douglas come to get evenly armed, and prepared for war, the South will be effectively subdued by the North of the dragon of suppression and slavery.

But the South does not know that when the North says, "I am continually opposed to submission in every act of the South's policy, it will support us in every act of the South's policy, until we fall."
