Worth more than Gold!

DEATH OF THE GIANT
RHEUMATISM.

FOR the last five hundred years, thousands have perished in an attempt to bring to perfection a medical cure for one of the most distressing afflictions of mankind, the giant RHEUMATISM. Of the many remedies used for this great evil, but one that will permanently cure and drive away this great affliction, EDGAR F. COOPER'S, of East Weymouth, has at last discovered and perfected a SAFE AND RADICAL CURE FOR THE WORST CASES OF

RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, NEURALGIA, LAMENESS,
STIFF AND CONTRACTED JOINTS

This specific has been practically tested and has already cured the most cases of SCIATICA, RHEUMATISM. The persons cured are residents of East Weymouth, and can testify to the truth of the statement. One has had the complaint for five months, and another for two years, and both would gladly give their lives for relief. The first application gave instant relief, and in one week's time he was cured. The second case, after a year, and he has not had a touch of it since.
The following testimonials are presented in proof of the above statements, and the value of which has been cured as to testify to the value of

LITERATURE

BACKBONE.

When you see a fellow mortal
Without face and features visible, Hanging on the skirts of others,
Walking in their cast shoes;
Bowing low to wealth and power;
With abject uncovered head,
Ready to retreat or flee, Willing to be done or led;
Walk yourself with finer bearing;
Throw your moral shoulders back!
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the thing which his must lack.

A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone
Than this, backbone.

When you see a theologian Hugging close some ugly creed, Fearing to reject or question
Dogmas which his priest may read;
Holding back all noble feelings;
Choking down each manly view;
Caring more for forms and symbols
Than to know the good and true;
Walk yourself with finer bearing;
Throw your moral shoulders back!

When you see a politician
Crawling through contracted holes;
Begging for some fat position,
In the ring and at the polls;
With no sterling manhood in him,
Nothing stable, or broad or sound
Destitute of pluck and ballast,
Double sided all around;
Walk yourself with finer bearing;
Throw your moral shoulders back!

When you see a miser
With no sterling manhood in him,
Nothing stable, or broad or sound
Destitute of pluck and ballast,
Double sided all around;
Walk yourself with finer bearing;
Throw your moral shoulders back!

and precisely on the 32d line, a little hour later we pulled rein in front of the dingy posada, the sole caravansary of El Paso, with a yankee yell along the whole line that awoke the echoes of the distant mountains, rang through the lonely flower bordered streets and brought a frowny, bedraggled señora, as old as the hills and as ugly as Satan, to the doorway with a frightened look on her repulsive countenance that promised anything but the welcome we anticipated.
However, we cared little for that; we were famished, cold and worn out from our long ride to be sure, would have broiled and eaten the venerable hag with delight and served her up in the cold saucers of her own villainous nationality; but there was something far more important to attend to that called for the coolest cool and the utmost bravery on the part of our whole party. It was the morning of the "Fourth" and the sun of Independence about to rise from over the blue hazy hills-top would have hung his head in shame and possibly have veiled his countenance from our view, had we failed to greet him in the language of juristic avowals at this, the eastern corner of his kingdom.

So leaving the chattering señora to evolve the meaning of our sudden appearance and disappearance from the inner consciousness of her own stupid brain, we put spurs to our horses and dashed down the narrow street with the speed and clatter of madmen in pursuit of the little chapel in whose belfry we knew would be hung the only bell in the village. And at last we discerned it, peeping out from the midst of a dense orange grove and almost hid in the mass of creepers that wound up and down the cabe walls and mounted the belfry and soared to the very summit of the cross that lifted itself into the blue per air, and then having reached the summit of their ambition, turned gracefully about and descended with original tendils and leaves and blossoms, ignominiously back to terra firma. Of course would have been a long and fruitless task to have searched out the village cure and craved his kind permission to enter the chapel and ring such a salvo of sounds from the little bell as would have satisfied the genius of liberty and our own ideas of the eternal fitness of things, and we didn't entertain the idea for a moment. But Jack threw himself from his horse, grasped a long creeping arm of myrtle and was half way toward the belfry before the dull Mexican servant who stood at the doorway had at all comprehended the situation, and in another moment the clanging cracked bell rang out in the morning air as if every demon was pulling it to action. An instant and a few more bold than the rest, spoke to him warningly, but kindly; but he turned away from the warning with a sneer of derision.

The months and years went on—from twenty-two to twenty-eight. Six years of married life—six years of blessings, so far as the outer things of life can give blessings. In the bank Arthur had assumed a place very near to the head, and his salary was munificent.

From early youth, Arthur Gravelly had found the wine cup among the symbols of life's social phase. He had kept wine in his house; he had used it upon his sideboard, and he had partaken freely abroad. In the earlier years it was wine, and only wine of the best and purest. Later, strong liquors were required to keep the tone. At the age of eight-and-twenty, there had come an undue flush upon Arthur's cheeks, and there were blotches which ought not to have been there.

He now took brandy before breakfast, and through the day he was forced to supply fuel to feed a fire which else might have consumed all bodily comfort. As yet he had never been helplessly intoxicated. He was confident in his own strength.

Alas! for the man thus fading, he knew that his powers for understanding are dying out as the body fades and then perishes.

At length Mr. Vanderlain called Arthur into his private office and told him he was going to suspend business.

"I have money enough," said Mr.
Vanderlain, "and I know that my close application to business is wearing upon me. I am growing in years and need rest. I think of going to Europe."

"And of closing up your business?"
"Yes."
"But, sir, there is no need of that.
If you will trust your business under the guidance of some capable and responsible agent, with your name at the head, it might go prosperously on, and you could go away upon your trip at will."

A cloud came over the banker's face,
and he shook his head.
"It is too late," he said. "Some time I may tell you more."

Shortly after this, in process of closing up his business, Mr. Vanderlain sent Arthur to a distant city to make some important settlements. Arriving at his destination, the young man called upon the correspondents, and having made preliminary arrangements, he found himself with a few days upon his hands which he might enjoy in pleasure.

On the very evening of his arrival, he had fallen in with John Hatton and William Roberts, two friends and classmates of early years. He was startled when he saw them. They were evidently going down hill; drinking to excess. Yet they were gentlemen, and Arthur joined them.

He spent a first and second night in their company. On the second night, for the first time in his life, Arthur Gravelly drank to a state of hopeless stupor. He awoke on the next day feeling sad and humiliated. When he met his companions, in a parlor connected with their sleeping apartments, he found them with a bowl of hot brandy between them. A spirit of true thus ended One Fourth of July.

Is there a moral concealed in the story?
Why to be sure there is several of them in fact. Did you ever read a boy's story without a moral? In the first place celebrate your Fourth of July early in the morning; and at noon-day, and late at night too for that matter. It comes but once a year and it is all your own; second, celebrate it with all your mind, might and strength, and with a will as if you enjoyed it. Third, find out why you celebrate it, and why it means more to you than any other day in the year, or than to any other boys in any other section of the world; and the fourth and fifth and sixth and all the other morals will suggest themselves to you before the day is ended; but finally boys whatever you do, however you choose to enjoy yourselves, don't get into trouble on the Fourth of July, as did once upon a time.

CARL.

ON THE BRINK.

I have known Arthur Gravelly well and intimately. A part of his story came to my knowledge through my own observation, and a part he told me himself.

Arthur came of an old, well-defined, and respectable stock, with just enough of aristocratic pride inherited from his progenitors to give him refinement and self-reliance. At an early age he was left an orphan, and received most of his education under the care of an uncle.

When he was one-and-twenty he was admitted to the employ of a banker named Vanderlain, and very soon took a position of trust and responsibility in the house. A year later he took for his wife Fanny Sumner—one of the fairest and sweetest of earthly creatures, and he loved her long and truly, and her love in return had been single and devoted.

This was life opening for Arthur Gravelly, with bright and happy promises. He had friends wherever he went; his business prospects were of the very best; and his home was an earthly paradise.

One enemy and one enemy alone, at this time stood in Arthur's path. His wife did not see it then. She loved him fondly and so trustingly that she could not see a fault.

A few of Arthur's friends feared danger, and one of them, more bold than the rest, spoke to him warningly, but kindly; but he turned away from the warning with a sneer of derision.

The months and years went on—from twenty-two to twenty-eight. Six years
of married life—six years of blessings,
so far as the outer things of life can give blessings. In the bank Arthur had assumed a place very near to the head,
and his salary was munificent.

From early youth, Arthur Gravelly
had found the wine cup among the symbols of life's social phase. He had kept wine in his house; he had used it upon
his sideboard, and he had partaken freely abroad. In the earlier years it was wine, and only wine of the best and purest. Later, strong liquors were required to keep the tone. At the age of eight-and-twenty, there had come an
undue flush upon Arthur's cheeks, and there were blotches which ought not to have been there.

He now took brandy before breakfast,
and through the day he was forced to
supply fuel to feed a fire which else
might have consumed all bodily comfort. As yet he had never been helplessly intoxicated. He was confident in his own strength.

Alas! for the man thus fading, he knew that his powers for understanding are dying out as the body fades and
then perishes.

At length Mr. Vanderlain called Arthur into his private office and told him
he was going to suspend business.

"I have money enough," said Mr.
Vanderlain, "and I know that my close
application to business is wearing upon
me. I am growing in years and need rest. I think of going to Europe."

"And of closing up your business?"
"Yes."
"But, sir, there is no need of that.
If you will trust your business under
the guidance of some capable and responsible agent, with your name at the head, it might go prosperously on, and you could go away upon your trip at
will."

A cloud came over the banker's face,
and he shook his head.
"It is too late," he said. "Some time I may tell you more."

Shortly after this, in process of closing up his business, Mr. Vanderlain sent Arthur to a distant city to make some important settlements. Arriving at his destination, the young man called upon the correspondents, and having made preliminary arrangements, he found himself with a few days upon his hands which he might enjoy in pleasure.

On the very evening of his arrival,
he had fallen in with John Hatton and William Roberts, two friends and classmates of early years. He was startled
when he saw them. They were evidently going down hill; drinking to excess. Yet they were gentlemen, and Arthur joined them.

He spent a first and second night in their company. On the second night,
for the first time in his life, Arthur Gravelly drank to a state of hopeless
stupor. He awoke on the next day feeling sad and humiliated. When he met his companions, in a parlor
connected with their sleeping apartments, he found them with a bowl of hot brandy between them. A spirit of true friendship came upon him, when he saw the marks of the destroyers so deeply fixed upon the companions of his boyhood.

"Boys," said he, "this won't do.
You are going down!"
They regarded him curiously, and asked him what he meant.

He told them what he meant. They were in a dangerous way.
"You forget, old boy," said Hatton,
"that you are in the same boat. If you took passage before you, it is no less sure that our route now is the same.
Don't preach, Arthur; try a bit of hot brandy."

There are moments in a life-time—great crises—when the events of the past dash before the mind as upon a magic mirror—when a man, in a brief instant, recalls every salient point in his early career. Such a moment was the present to Arthur Gravelly.

"Let it alone," he said solemnly; "I tell you, Jack, and you, Will, that you are going down; you cannot last much longer at this rate."

"Well," retorted Robert, with an attempt to laugh, "it appears to me that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Hadn't you better try to leave it alone yourself?"

"If I will try, will you try it?" asked Arthur.

"Will you try it?" demanded Hatton.
"I will if you will join me."
"Done!"

And they did it. They joined hands and promised one another that they would be true and steadfast.

A new surprise was in store for Arthur. He found, upon cutting off his spirited liquors, that his body weakened and his hand shook as though with palsy. He applied to a physician for help.

Fortunately he applied to a man of sense and understanding.
"Can you give me something to steady my nerves and restore my appetite?" Arthur asked, after he had frankly stated his case.

"This shows you, my dear sir," said the physician, "into what a dangerous state you had fallen. I can give you something to steady your nerves, but it will not help you in the end. If you will be brave and true, you will come out all right in a few days."

He wanted no stimulant—no more of that.

The trial was a severe one, and it may have been a blessing thing for Arthur Gravelly that it was so. He felt more heroic in the conquest, and he also saw more clearly how deep the evil habit had become fixed upon him.

On the morning of the fourth day he awoke with an appetite for food, and was able to eat a hearty breakfast. He was a new man from that time forth.
The physician had given him certain hygienic directions, which he followed implicitly, and thus he held fast upon his health as it came back to him.

And on the fourth day, Arthur saw Hatton and Roberts. They had kept faith, and had unexpectedly prospered.
An excellent opening in business had been presented and accepted.

On the fifth day the business which had brought Gravelly from his home was concluded, and he set out on his return.

The last struggle had passed. His nerves had become steady, his appetite had started up as if by magic, his cheeks had grown fair, and the white of his eyes was growing clear and peerless again.

He reached his own city in the morning, and went first to the bank, and gave in a return of his business. Mr.
Vanderlain had glanced quickly and eagerly into his face when he first entered, and a wondrous change came upon the banker's manners as the business proceeded. Something outside his mind was in hand was evidently on his mind.

Arthur did not reach his home until time for dinner, but he had sent a boy from the bank with word that he should

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING, AT WEYMOUTH, MASS.

THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1878.

THE COTTAGE CITY.

Among the persons we expect here this summer are, Francis Murphy, Rev. T. De Witt Talmadge, Bishops Haven and Foster, Dr. Tucker, of New York, A. S. Barnes, of Brooklyn, Joseph S. Spinnery, of New York, and many others whom I will mention in my next.

OAK BLUFFS, July 1st, 1878.

So much has already been said and repeated by summer correspondents from this place, concerning the many excellencies as a watering place, that it would seem that there is hardly anything new which I can say. But after I arrived here, I found that with the many decided changes and improvements that are being made, I could obtain enough gossip for two or three letters, each of which would be more lengthy than I intend to make this one.

McFlinnigan, up at the Corners, who evidently expects the GAZETTE to know everything, and to solve every human problem that involves doubt and complication, sends around and modestly inquires how he shall spend the Fourth. Now really, we should like to oblige McFlinnigan, who is a worthy citizen of credit and renown, and so we will give him the benefit of our own superior knowledge and penetration, as deduced from our observation, and then permit him to draw his own moral, if it has any. After an experience of something less than a hundred years, we are thoroughly convinced that there are at least a hundred thousand different ways of spending the Fourth, each and all of which present particular attractions to their advocates.

There's Smith, now, who wouldn't give a penny to spend the Fourth at any other spot on the green earth except at that mecca of yankee pilgrimage and adoration yeelp "the Common." "Where the hobby-horse goes round and round and the bands begin to play," and the militia plays at mince-war, and the balloons inflate and swell simultaneously with the Aldermen, and the rockets soar and drop exhausted on the heads of admiring spectators. And so Mrs. Smith and all the second generation of that particular breed of Smiths are dressed in immaculate linen and sun hats and bonnets so constructed that the sun can pour unreservedly over every portion of their patriotic heads, and escorted by their proud head of the family, they go to the depot and are borne away to swell the crowd that scrambles and sweats and worries away the day in town.

Then there's Jones, who has promised to make up a little party for a picnic in the woods, where the sun can't penetrate and the children can enjoy themselves so much and a dainty little spread can be laid in the shade by the side of a cool spring and all the Joneses and their party can swing in sylvan hammocks and pity poor Smith and his tribe on the Common.

And then there's Robinson, who isn't troubled with urban ambitions nor suburban longings, who proposes by jove to celebrate the fourth in a rational manner, none of your nonsense about him you know. He will stay at home, under the shade of his own vine and fig tree, and help the children to fire their crackers and spin their pin-wheels and eat their ice-cream and peanuts and read them the Declaration and tell them all about the day they celebrate. Not any foolishness for him, understand. And these three examples of a free and enlightened citizenship fulfill their individual destinies and assert their independence by transcending foreign and domestic by celebrating the Fourth in accordance with their own inclinations.

But toward noon, as we sit solitary and alone in our inner sanctum, preparing our leader for next week's GAZETTE—for the poor wretched editor has no holidays, you know—we observe Mr. Robinson crossing the street to a neighbor, for a little while in which to preserve a healthy belief in the cracker while patetivillius is searching the neighborhood for Tommy, who hasn't been seen since morning, and the baby is howling in the front yard, having tumbled out the window and been forgotten in the general demoralization. And an hour later the Jones party straggle in from the woods with Kansas grasshoppers, and the children were always thirsty, and the nearest water three miles away, to which Jones had made three separate pilgrimages since morning, and the ants got into the luncheon and all manner of creeping bugs down their backs, and it was their last picnic in the woods and they disappeared thro' the doorway which is slammed reverently shut.

And the last of the day is spent by the Smiths from town, loaded with as much of the town dust as can conveniently deposit itself about their persons, the immaculate linen converted into brown holland, and Mrs. Smith has fainted from the heat and is taken home in a carriage, and the children have to be wakened and shaken and it is irrevocably lost, and Smith goes into a row with a drunken man and will take his oath on it, and will curse their misfortunes all summer, and recount their misadventures in the fall, and laugh over their mishaps thro' the winter evenings; and when the next Fourth swings around they will do precisely as they did before. And thus runs the world away. Now Mr. McFlinnigan, now for the moral. A good story comes to us from the West, that belittled section of greenbackers and communists and buccolic farmers, and is based upon the fact that the greenback is so dear to the western heart, and the silver dollar so hateful, that it is peddled about the country at from two to eight per cent discount.

A Sunday school superintendent is addressing his school at the monthly "Concert," and desires of impressing upon their youthful minds some moral precept, which by never of the substance given, which by never of the silver dollar, bearing on the obverse the pathetic spectacle of a hen leaving her nest prematurely—the new dollar coin in fact, and says, "Now, my dear children, can any of you tell me what is this I hold in my fingers?" "Ninety-six cents," speaks a frowny-headedurchin with the usual volume and force common to Sunday-school boys on such occasions.

"That wasn't precisely what the speaker desired, but smothering his confusion he takes another tack. "Er, can any of you tell me what words are these printed just above the head of the eagle?" "I don't trust," responds a second youth, proud of displaying his sagacity. "Precisely right my lad, but what do we trust him for?" "The other four cents?" "And that ended the dialogue.

The Park. Don't forget that the Fourth is to be appropriately recognized by the Weymouth Society, who announce a grand trot on the track in the afternoon, for which a large number of horses have been entered, in addition to which a baseball match between the Tildens and Rangers and a Bicycle Race will be added. No better place can be found for the enjoyment of the national holiday, and all are invited to attend.

TOWN AND VICINITY.

"Eae Non Videt." EXHIBITION AND ORATORATING EXERCISES OF THE NORTH HIGH SCHOOL OF WEYMOUTH, FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 28th, 1878.

The exhibition and graduating exercises of the North High School of Weymouth, which were held at the Methodist Church, East Weymouth, last Friday evening, and from the crowd of spectators present it may well be inferred that the occasion was one of more than usual interest with the general public, an interest, too, which must have been very gratifying to the young ladies and gentlemen who had fought the educational fight and were now to receive their diplomas and school certificates.

A quartette composed of Misses Holbrook and Dowse, Master Lyon and Baker, gave the selection, "Echoes from the Lake," and Master James E. Humphrey then delivered the oration with valedictory, "Victory Emanuel," presenting the changes of the periods between the century before the christian era, when Rome was mistress of the world and the coming of the Saviour Emanuel, from the time he commenced the struggle to lay the foundations of Italian independence, in successive conflicts rescuing the fair provinces of the north from the grasp of tyrants, and at last planting the standard in Rome as the capital of the nation, was graphically depicted by the orator, who proceeded in his conclusion, to bid farewell to the committee, teachers, and schoolmates, in well chosen and impressive words.

The presentation of diplomas to the graduates was then made by the chairman of the School Committee, Hon. James Humphrey, who, in his address to the graduates, said, in allusion to the class motto, "Sincerity is a cardinal virtue in christian ethics, and may it be deeply imprinted on your hearts." In the full conviction that you have earned the right to these diplomas, and express the earnest hope that yet richer attainments in knowledge may bless your future lives.

The parting hymn was then sung by the class, and Rev. Mr. Eldredge pronounced the benediction. PARTING HYMN. WORDS BY O. W. SHAW. School days are over; the hour has come for parting; Sad are the words resounding in our ears. Yet from the past our thoughts are forced to turn; Joyful we feel though triumph o'er our fears.

Though stern the toils and duties that attend the school, yet the storms and dangers we must brave, Our hearts are strong, on God's sure help we rely; Forward we press, our rest beyond the grave. Truth we seek, and by the truth be guided; Full on our hearts, Lord, let its radiance stream. In thine eyes right, let all the world condemn us; Thou, what we are; men judge us what we seem.

Present. The Amazon Engine Co. was presented last Tuesday evening, with a photographic picture of the Active Engine Co., with their machine, the picture having been taken by Mr. E. Chamberlain, and presented to the Fair. The picture was handsomely framed.

South Weymouth. In addition to the list of presents made to Mr. and Mrs. Almon B. Raymond at their wedding, we are pleased to record the gift of a solid silver beer spoon, from Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tirrell, for which the wedded pair desire to return their sincere thanks, as well as to the other friends who so generously remembered them on that occasion. An omission was made in the published list of a pair of silver napkin rings from Mr. and Mrs. Melvin S. Raymond, and baskets and beautiful bouquets of beautiful flowers from Mrs. Silas Canterbury and others. Where profusion was the condition of the display, it was a matter of difficulty for the reporter to obtain every item, and furnishes a sufficient excuse for omissions.

Surgical. Amputations have been the order of the day in South Weymouth during the hay-making season, the several "operations" having been performed by Mr. Wilbur Loud, whose "practice" in this line, though unwillingly performed, proves that he wields a sharp scalpel. While mowing a field of grass for Mr. Seth Curtis, his scythe came in contact with Mr. Curtis' pet dog, sisting in tall grass, unperceived by Mr. Curtis, and the contact of steel and dog resulted in the animal being suddenly deprived of one hind leg and one fore leg. The dog ran for a short distance on the remaining limbs before he was killed.

Party. Mrs. Henry Loud entertained the past and present members of her Sabbath-school class at her residence on Saturday last. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by those present, their hosts doing all in her power to make the occasion long to be remembered by the participants.

Party. It is customary to exclude the Church Trustees when the High School hold their exercises in a church? We are informed that the members of the M. E. Church were trustees of tickets at a party given at the exhibition.

Mr. Eben Poole has a thermometer which he has owned for forty years, and last Monday afternoon the glass was 107 in the shade, the highest he has seen it since he purchased the thermometer.

Mr. John Carroll begins work in his new shop, next Monday.

Mr. Charles Pearce is erecting a house on the lot purchased of Captain Wm. Rice. The house is nearly completed, being built by Mr. E. W. Richards, of the Landing.

Mr. Wm. Cook, of East Weymouth, is building him a house at South Weymouth and will move soon.

Residents of East Weymouth have purchased a watering cart, and travels through the principal streets of the village, being driven by M. L. Cushing, with three horses.

Rev. Mr. Eldredge gave an able discourse on Temperance, last Sunday forenoon, in the Cong'l church, the house being well filled.

The Cong'l church held a praise meeting in the church last Sunday evening. Considering the hot weather, the house was well filled. Addresses being made by several gentlemen.

There will be no preaching in the Cong'l church, after next Sunday, for three weeks, Rev. Mr. Eldredge taking his vacation at the Vineyard. The Sunday School will continue at 10 1/2 A. M.

As some young men were passing through the yard of Charles Dyer, Saturday night, they happened to look up to Mr. Dyer's chamber window and saw an appearance of fire in the room. They rushed the inmates, who found a paper lying on a stand and the curtain burned. It was extinguished before any other damage was done. The fire was caused by a lighted match, which it was supposed had been extinguished after being used.

Mr. A. F. Bicknell, formerly of Old Spain is doing a rushing business at present at his bakery in Hingham, working nights to keep up with his orders.

Miss Cynthia Holbrook leaves for the West to-morrow, to make a visit to friends in that section.

FRESH FISH!

Dr. Gupplid dressed the wound of Mr. Phillips, instead of Dr. Andrews, as mentioned last week—an error which justice requires should be corrected, as the wound was dressed in the most scientific manner.

Messrs. Edgar F. Cooper and Wm. H. Cooper, who left town last week with their new carriage, for the purpose of introducing "Cooper's Great Rheumatic Cure" in the "regions roundabout," returned home last Friday, having met with abundant success. The business has so largely increased, that they have placed the routes in the hands of agents, and will devote their time to the preparation of the Cure, and the oversight of their rendering and naphtha cleansing business, which demands their whole attention. Mr. E. F. Cooper received a letter Tuesday, from a resident of "Lumberton," offering him $100, if he could enable a young man in that place, who has been severely afflicted with rheumatism, to return home to the store, without assistance.

A young gentleman residing on Middle St. undertook to kill his cat a few days ago, so he took her into the cellar and holding the cat in one hand and revolver in the other fired, when the cat made good her escape. On a few days she was out, but she made her appearance again, so he took another method, carrying her to the water for playing, at the Fair. He could not imagine his surprise when the next morning the cat sat on the doorstep of the house, ready for another method of extinction.

Messrs. Vinal & Hall, carpenters closed their job on the new factory of Mr. Carroll, last Monday, having completed the entire work in five weeks from the day they commenced framing a foot and a half over the roof, and the work has been done in the best manner. The factory is four stories, 28x75 in dimensions, and will contain over 100,000 feet of lumber, and the building is of a most substantial character.

C. G. EASTERBROOK, EDITOR.
On Sabbath evening, June 30th, the Braintree Temperance Union held its monthly meeting with the Congregational Church, South Braintree.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Edwin Howard, and opened with the reading of the prayer which was offered by Rev. Mr. Carter. There was a scripture reading by Mr. E. Howard, when a short verbal report of the last meeting was given by the secretary.

At this stage of the meeting, Mr. John F. Cole of Boston was introduced as the speaker of the evening, who, in a very interesting and instructive address held the attention of the audience for more than an hour, notwithstanding the intense heat which prevailed.

He stated that for the purpose of promoting harmony we wished temperance principles to prevail, for that purpose were putting forth their efforts to create a people to a standard of right, harmonious action and living.

We love the sound of music when it is regular and precise, working together in harmony; it pleases the eye. And so when religion and temperance controls the life, there is harmony of wisdom, temperance and truth until communities are educated to a standard of right living.

These lessons of wisdom, temperance and truth until communities are educated to a standard of right living. We are glad to see that the people are beginning to understand that the only way to a better life is through the study of the Bible.

Drinking is an education; we go to school and learn the alphabet, so the man who becomes a drunkard must commence to learn. He begins by taking his glass of beer, light wine or French cord.

Nothing bad in that, he says, and others make him believe it, still it is the beginning of a drunkard's life. He goes on step by step until he has learned not only the alphabet, but can take his glass of rum, brandy or whiskey, and he takes one after another, thinking another glass will make him feel better until he is tripped and lies a drunken man.

After a long and interesting address, Mr. Cole was followed by a number of other speakers, who all spoke in favor of the temperance cause. The meeting closed with a prayer and the singing of hymns.

Another yet of our young people has been called suddenly away. Mrs. A. W. Taylor, who was married only a few weeks ago, has just been called to her home in heaven.

The Sewing Circle connected with the First Parish met at Dr. Dearing's cottage, South Braintree, on Wednesday evening, June 25th.

On the morning of the 4th of July the friends and neighbors of Mr. James and Mrs. Minnie Miller proceeded to their residence for the purpose of celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

Finally the prepering company reached River Street, North Braintree, and here they learned that the fire was all out, and that the temptation to proceed and show the good people of South Braintree their glittering (?) engine (resplendent with its new (?) red paint and polished metal), was very strong, the umbrageous element being so attractive, and the entire company adjourned to various recumbent positions beneath their wide spreading branches.

DEATH OF THE GIANT

RHEUMATISM.

FOR the last few hundred years, thousands have experimented in attempts to bring to perfection a radical cure for one of the most afflictive and painful of diseases, the great Rheumatism.

RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, NEURALGIA, LAMENESS, STIFF AND CONTRACTED JOINTS.

This specific has been practically tested and has already cured several most obstinate cases of RHEUMATISM. The persons cured are residents of West Weymouth, and can testify to the truth of this statement.

EDGAR F. COOPER, of East Weymouth, has all low rheumatism and perfected a sure, and RADICAL CURE FOR THE WORST CASES OF RHEUMATISM.

COOPER'S Great Rheumatic Cure.

A WONDERFUL CURE.

Weymouth, Mass., May 13, 1878. Messrs. Edgar F. Cooper & Co., West Weymouth, Mass.:—I have been afflicted with RHEUMATISM for several years, and have tried every remedy known to me, but have not been able to get any relief.

Weymouth, Mass., May 21, 1878. I, Charlotte Phillips, of East Weymouth, Mass., aged 75 years, do hereby testify that I was troubled with RHEUMATISM for several years, and have tried every remedy known to me, but have not been able to get any relief.

As a rule, the wind is always blowing somewhere else in sultry weather.

If you happen to have no south window, there is just where it swings a vine or sways a tree.

There is quite a breeze in the next town, and a gale in the adjoining county, possibly a tornado, but with you it is as calm as the Sea of Galilee.

Fans? To be sure—but then if you have got to work them, you prefer to wait till cool weather for it.

Fourth-of-July orations and fans are alike: windy but not exhilarating, and very fatiguing withal.

Wasps, as if by black rapiers should take wing, dart through the open window like shuttles through a loom.

You dodge every red tongue with a dog to it, lest the attachment has grown mad with heat.

You hunt for a cabbage-leaf for your hat lest you be sun-struck, and you grow such an absorbent of water that the leaf is about as much at home as if you were a cabbage grower.

The sun has such a habit of rising that it cannot avoid it, and it comes up clear and red in the latter part of every night.

If it could only spend an autumn or two in Indiana, and get "the chills" and have an intermittent fever instead of the steady, unwinking blaze!

Peel like an onion, to get as near as possible to the carbonate of lime without becoming an outright anatomy, I have been trying to write. My face and hands beaded with sweat like a savage's wampum, a sudorific, saline stream trickling down the pen and diluting the ink and picking the words, and making the wet paper as pleasant to write upon as a jelly-fish, and as appetizing to sleep as a salt-lick.

When a man's pen can get about hot enough in the sun to brand a mark, it is time he plunged it into the trough with the water of the wash-basin.

And so the glowing days burned on. The chills stood about as dusty as elephants and supple as sled-sticks. The air grew murky, and fancy limped as if it had lost a foot. It was like holding the scythe and turning the grindstone. Nature is rich in compensations, and her losses and her gains are paired like the embarking manager of the first Admiral, when the Ark put to sea with the greatest and only show on earth, bound for Arrarat and a market.

I have been seeking a cool place. The ambition of the mercury wears me. The thought of Dr. Kane's chronometer, that was so cold it burned him, is no comfort. Even the "Exiles of Siberia" are selfish as oysters. There they are to-day comfortably freezing their feet, and do not offer so much as a chill of a chance to frost a finger.

The little arrow that swings from the top of the barn seems to be welded to the spire in the solar force, and to be drawing fire with its barbed point out of the fire South. The leaves of a tree by its window curl in the sun, as if they were trying to get back into the bud again, and be cozy and cool as they were when the world went Maying.

The robins sit on the cherry-tree with bills apart like a V, and their wings at trail arms. I can almost detect the smell of burned feathers. A match on the window-sill sets off of its own accord, and commits suicide to get out of its misery.

Lawyer's clients grow irritable, and desire to "sue" somebody right away, and talk in a salamanderish style about making the defendant "sweat." Doctors' patients languish and wail. Heat expands most things but sermons.

They shrink from an hour to twenty minutes, and sometimes they are so much themselves are scorched out of their pulp, and fall like the mountains and islands of the sea.

The fire-men, dragon flies and sun-flowers are happy, and never was a day so bright that a soda-fountain was unable to play. Yes, and scarlet geraniums, there is one of them now, both upright in an iron vase painted a comfortable color to warm you up just by looking at it, standing out in the burden and heat of the day, and hot enough to take a helpless egg beyond the third week of incubation, and a minute or two towards the boiling-point of "eggs rare." That geranium has fairly taken fire with its flowers, and flares as bright as a torch in a triumphal procession.

People are never so like one another as in a heated term. They get melted down into a homogeneous mass of humanity. Had I written it "measles" it would have been no matter. Their anguaries are fused off. They cease to be original. They say, "Isn't it hot!" They blow it. They say "where's anybody to drop like a bomb's ears." They expand into broad-brimmed hats. They blossom out with umbrellas. They festinate lute.

The clouds come up every day and lay their rugged heads on the rim of the horizon, and watch the landscape to see if it is done brown or done to a turn, but it isn't, and so those drowsy heads sink back and leave the sky all clear for the setting sun to give us a parting glare at short range. How the walls throbs and the pavements dance with color! And the earth turns over and over and fails to find a cool side. We feel the sun as it fires the windows, and grills the roof, and sits down on every shingle, and scorches the front room, and cooks the west room, and toasts the veranda, and bakes the walls till they begin to be as much at home as they ever were in the brick-kiln.

And we are all the while watching for wind. A popular lift of an ear of a leaf as if it heard something, and we take courage, but nothing comes of it.

RACING ON THE RAIL.

The local train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, which starts from Jersey City at 7.37 in the evening, leaped out of the station on Monday like a charger that had been spurred. An old gentleman in the smoking car said "Bless me!" with what little breath remained in his body, and recovering his equilibrium and his cigar, held tightly on to the back of the seat in front of him.

The

S. S. CONCERT IN BRAIN TREE.

On Sabbath evening last, the Sabbath School connected with the First Church held their Sabbath School concert.

After the usual reports etc., there was a very pleasant exercise by the infant class, which always does well, and never better than at this time; then singing; next an exercise upon the Creation of Man, by the smaller children, which was very appropriate, familiarizing as it did, their minds with the scripture account of the crowning work of the creation.

Science has recently constructed an automaton so nearly resembling the living human being, in outline, lineaments, motion and tones imitating the voice, that many a casual observer might be deceived and think he was looking upon the work of God, a living man.

I said they were moulds. If the physical system is a mould, into which is run the life essence, if that governs, modifies the qualities and quantities of the spiritual life essence, then why may we not at a glance at one's physique, his physiognomy, estimate his character, and all the probabilities of his life?

Fourth. Have thy immortal souls which shall live forever? Presented by Mr. W. F. Locke, who answered it in the affirmative, and briefly referred to a few of the proofs around and in us, and then leaving his subject, spoke of the unrest of the soul and its reaching after something substantial and enduring.

Fifth. If then we have souls that are to live forever how shall we value the soul? Mr. A. B. Keith, holding up two silver coins before the children, said, when I hold these up you can tell their value by the size, but you can value the soul, the difference between life now and life to come.

Second. There is need of keeping these systems in good working condition or they will not answer their ends. They will fail in both quality and quantity of work. The feather duster with many of its feathers broken and torn, or the silk one full of holes and in shreds will but poorly do the intended dusting.

During the exercises there was a reading by Miss Clara Keith. Also one entitled "Echoing Steps," by Mrs. L. P. Holbrook.

I ought to have mentioned in connection with the exercise by the infant department, that it was conducted by the superintendent, who presided with his usual dignity, courtesy and affability.

—Red used on a railway signifies danger, and says "Stop!" It is the same thing displayed on a man's nose. —The individual chiefly anxious to see the rule laid down is the school-boy.

—About 360,000 acres of heavily timbered Virginia land was recently sold by auction for an average of one cent an acre.

VEGETINE. FOR DROPSY.

Forget the first Dose. I never shall. Mr. H. R. STEVENS.—I have been a great sufferer from dropsy. I was confined to my house more than a year. Six months of the time I was entirely helpless.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD. GREAT THROUGH LINE AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE. The attention of the traveling public is respectfully invited to some of the merits of this great highway, in the confident assertion and belief that no other line can offer equal inducements as a route of through travel.

Construction and Equipment PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD stands conspicuously at the head of American rail-ways. The track is double the entire length of the line, of steel rails on oak ties, which are imbedded in a foundation of rock ballast, eighteen inches in depth. All bridges are of iron or stone, and built upon the most approved plans.

The Safety Appliances in use on this line will illustrate the far-seeing and liberal policy of its management. The appliances with which the utility only of an iron, steel and not its cost has been the question of consideration. Among many may be noticed The Block System of Safety, Signaling, Janney Coupler, Buffer and Platform, The Warton Patent Switch, and the Westinghouse Air-Brake, forming in conjunction with a perfect double track and road-bed a combination of safeguards against accidents which have rendered them practically impossible.

Pullman Palace Cars are run on all Express Trains From New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, To Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis and St. Louis.

Without Change, and to all principal points in the far West and South with but one change of cars. Connections are made in Union Depots, and are assured to all important points.

The Scenery PENNSYLVANIA ROUTE is admitted to be unsurpassed in the world for grand, beauty, and variety. Superior refreshment facilities are provided. Employees are courteous and attentive, and it is an inevitable result that a trip by the Pennsylvania Railroad is not only a pleasant one, but a profitable one.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption. The reputation it has attained, in consequence of the marvelous cures it has produced during the last half century is a sufficient assurance to the public that it will continue to relieve the happiest results that can be desired. In almost every section of country there are persons, publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs, by its use. All who have tried it, acknowledge its superiority; and when its virtues are known, no one hesitates as to what medicine to employ to relieve the distress and suffering peculiar to pulmonary affections. CHERRY PECTORAL always affords instant relief, and performs rapid cures of the milder varieties of bronchial disorder, as well as the more formidable diseases of the lungs. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of Childhood, it is invaluable, for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued and restored to health. This medicine gains friends at every trial, as the cures it is constantly producing are too remarkable to be forgotten. No family should be without it, and those who have once used it never will forget it. Eminent Physicians throughout the country prescribe it, and Clergymen often recommend it from their knowledge of its effects.
