The Triumvirate Enlists

The Electric Iron, the Electric Sweeper and the Electric Washer have Enlisted in the Service of the American Housewife!

For today's housewife knows that she must use the quickest, the easiest, the most economical way of accomplishing her housework if she is going to do her bit to serve her country. And the application of Electric Service to her household duties is the answer.

Electric labor-saving appliances are, first of all, truly practical. They are not luxuries for the rich, nor toys for the fad-inclined. It is in the modest, average homes of this country that the hundreds of thousands of electric labor-savers manufactured every year are found. It is in these homes that electric labor-savers are satisfactorily and economically doing the rough, heavy, work which otherwise the housewife would have to do herself.

So, if you would serve yourself, your family and your country to the best advantage, enlist the sweeper-iron-washer triumvirate in your household service!

Picnic Grounds

EAST OF SCHUYLKILL RIVER.

Lemon Hill picnic grounds, situated southwest from Poplar street entrance, are well shaded with trees, with a spring on east side of hill near Fish Pond to add to the comfort of the thirsty. The goat carriages and carousels afford amusement for the young. Picnic grounds can also be found on hill northwest from Poplar street entrance, extending to Girard avenue. In front of Sedgeley Guard House, a fountain containing ice water, during the summer months, materially adds to the comfort of picnickers in this vicinity.

The Smith Memorial Playhouse for Children, in East Park, above Columbia avenue entrance, under the supervision of Superintendent H. M. Shipe and Matron Mrs. Catharine E. Shipe, affords a series of amusements for children under 10 years of age. The playhouse is open every day from May 1st to October 31st, 9 o'clock A. M. to 7 o'clock P. M., and from November 1st to April 30th, 9 o'clock A. M. to 5 o'clock P. M.

The picnic grounds in East Park extend from line of Pennsylvania Railroad, west of Thirty-third and Oxford streets, north to line of Diamond street, including the Dairy (Mount Pleasant), Rockland and Ormiston. Many shaded groves can be found between Diamond street and York street, west of Thirty-third street, well adapted for picnic purposes. Strawberry Hill is the mecca for church and society outings, suppers, etc. On the hill will be found swings and carousel. Tuesdays and Fridays, during the summer months, the Fairmount Park Band, 40 pieces, gives concerts in the Strawberry Music Pavilion.

Quite a number of picnickers assemble on the lawns, between the east river drive and river front, Fountain Green to Strawberry Landing, where a beautiful view of the river, dotted with numerous rowing shells, canoes, launches, and row boats, is obtained.

Picnic grounds on west pathside of Wissahickon Creek, extend from Ridge avenue, north to above Hermit lane. Allen's lane, Valley Green and Devil's Pool are inviting for picnic purposes. Boating is quite a favorite pastime along the Wissahickon Creek.

Places of Interest

WILSTACH GALLERIES.

Wilstach Gallery, located in Memorial Hall, West Fairmount Park, was opened to the public July 4, 1893. Private ceremonies preliminary thereto were conducted the preceding day, the address of welcome being delivered by the late Justice Samuel Gustine Thompson, Chairman of Committee on Wilstach Gallery.

By will dated July 31st, 1873, Anna H. Wilstach, widow of William P. Wilstach, bequeathed to the City of Philadelphia, under the control of the Commissioners of Fairmount Park, one hundred and forty paintings; also all her books on Art, Statuary, and the one-fourth part of her residuary estate, amounting to approximately $600,000.

This bequest was accepted by the Commissioners of Fairmount Park and in accordance with the will of Mrs. Wilstach was placed in Memorial Hall, Fairmount Park.

In compliance with the desire of the testatrix, the collection is known as the W. P. Wilstach Collection, in memory of her husband. Only the interest of the money is used for the maintenance of the Gallery and the purchase of such paintings as the Committee shall deem advisable.

Since the Fund has been at the disposal of the Committee, there have been acquired by purchase and gift three hundred and seventy-eight paintings, making a total of more than five hundred paintings at the present time.

Fairmount Park Aquarium

There are only five municipal aquaria open to the public in the United States, although there are others projected or under construction in some of the other progressive cities. Philadelphia is one of the five municipalities that has this important and popular free educational and attractive institution, and is visited by nearly half a million people annually.

Although only one room of the several designed for the display of live fishes and one for the hatching of fish eggs is finished, the Fairmount Park Aquarium, as the institution is called, is the second largest in point of glass surface of the other existing aquaria. When finished, it will be at least equal in size to the famous aquarium, the largest in the world, in Battery Park, New York City.

The Fairmount Park Aquarium is located near the Green and Spring Garden street entrances to the Park in the buildings formerly known as the Fairmount Water Works.

No location more beautiful or better suited for aquarium purposes could have been selected. The rocky promontory of old Faire-Mount fronting the east side of the buildings, the Schuylkill, which laps the walls on the west, and the winding, hill-bound river to the northward, combine a picturesque scene as lovely as may be found in any other part of Pennsylvania. The buildings themselves, although when turned over to the Commissioners of Fairmount Park were dilapidated from long neglect, are justly famed as exceptionally fine American examples of Grecian architecture, and make a perfect picture in the setting of the surrounding scenery.

The forebay from a beautiful stone bridge to the lower end, has been fitted up as a pool more than 200 feet long and over 75 feet wide as a seal pool, and here summer and winter a herd of sea lions give a vociferous and noisy welcome to the thousands that come weekly to see them fed and disport themselves in the water and on the rocks of the pool.

The one room completed for the display of live fishes is the smaller of the two rooms formerly containing the big turbine pumps that at one time supplied water for a great part of Philadelphia. It is one hundred feet long and fifty feet wide, and contains 33 tanks, not counting a dozen in a hall that connects the main room with another yet to be completed for aquarium purposes.

Eventually the room now completed and open to the public during week-days from April to October from 9 A. M. until 5 P. M. and on Sundays from 9 A. M. until 6 P. M., and from October until April on week-days from 9 A. M. until 4.30 P. M. and on Sundays from 9 A. M. until 5 P. M., is to be used exclusively for tropical sea water fishes. At present all types are on display. One side is devoted to fresh water fishes, and six of the eight centre tanks to sea water fishes. Here are displayed from eighty to nearly one hundred species of fish, from Key West, the Bermudas and West India Islands and from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other States.

Twenty-four of the twenty-five tanks around the sides are each seven feet long, five feet high and five feet deep and hold over 1,300 gallons of water. The twenty-fifth tank is twelve feet long, six feet high and six feet deep. The centre tanks are all about five feet long and two and one-half feet wide and deep.

The sea water used in the Fairmount Park Aquarium is brought from far out in the ocean and is used over and over again, being filtered and aerated each time by ingenious processes behind the scenes.

The incubator room is in a small building on the plaza, and is only open to the public from November to June, when the eggs of different fishes are available. The large hall in what is known as the Groff Mansion is designed to be used in time for free lecture purposes. At present it is used to display the model of the new Art Gallery, which is to be placed on the summit of old Faire-Mount where the water reservoirs used to be.

The Zoological Garden

The Philadelphia Zoological Garden is the oldest institution of its kind in America; since it was opened to the public in 1874 it has been one of the principal attractions of the city. It is situated on the west bank of the Schuylkill River, fronting on Girard avenue, and is easily reached by way of the cars on this avenue and intersecting lines.

The forty-one acres occupied by the Garden are part of Fairmount Park, but, since 1873, by agreement with the Commissioners, have been under the management of the Zoological Society of Philadelphia.

This Society was incorporated in 1859 for the purpose of public exhibition of living animals for the instruction and recreation of the people.

The grounds are well laid out, the walks are comparatively dry in wet weather and shaded by many fine native and foreign trees.

The animal houses and other enclosures are close together, making it an easy matter for those who so desire to see the collections without loss of time.

The buildings are substantial and well lighted and, at all times, are filled with typical specimens of the mammals, birds, reptiles and batrachians of the world, all of which are suitably labeled with their common and scientific names and habitats.

In its effort to make the collections as educational as possible, the Society has endeavored to exhibit representative species rather than series of those closely related to each other.

Of particular interest among the American fauna are two magnificent specimens of the large Alaskan brown bears, five grizzlies from the Rocky Mountains, otter and California sea lions in large pools, mountain lions, bison, wapiti, white tail and other deer.

PHILADELPHIA

The collection of monkeys is extensive and contains many rare species, including, at present, an unusually large chimpanzee and two rare gibbons.

The Lion House contains all of the larger cats as well as a number of smaller species not commonly seen.

The chief attractions in the Elephant House are an African rhinoceros, a pair of hippopotamuses and a Malayan tapir.

In the Antelope House are to be found the giraffe and many other species belonging to this wonderfully varied group.

Among the other buildings may be mentioned the Small Mammal House, the Ostrich, Bird and Reptile Houses. There are also many small enclosures for raccoons, porcupines, prairie dogs, opossums, etc.

The Aviaries contain good collections of native and foreign birds, which are supplemented by the many species of water and other birds found on the large lake and smaller ponds scattered through the Garden.

The reptile collection, while comprehensive, is particularly rich in North American forms; here are the various species of rattlesnake as well as specimens of all the other poisonous snakes of this country; the gila monster of the deserts of the southwest, which, with the exception of a closely allied species in Mexico, is the one poisonous lizard of the world.

The Laboratory of the Garden, occupying a large two floor building, is the first of its kind in the world devoted exclusively to the study of wild animal pathology. Its objects are: first, for assistance in hygienic control of the Garden; second, for the collection of statistics upon disease in wild animals, and, third, for research.

Anyone who is interested in the subject will be gladly welcomed at the Laboratory.

The centrally located restaurant has a good reputation for well cooked meals at moderate prices.

The Garden is open every day in the week, including Sunday, and as a place of recreation and study is not surpassed by anything our city has to offer.

The renewal and extension of the collections are mainly dependent on the receipts from admissions, which are 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children between 5 and 12 years of age.

General Ulysses S. Grant

The equestrian statue of General Ulysses S. Grant is of heroic size, was cast in bronze by Bureau Bros., at Philadelphia, and is placed on a pedestal of pale pink Jonesboro granite, designed by Frank Miles & Bro., in consultation with the sculptors. Its total height to the bronze plinth supporting the statue is 15 feet 3¾ inches. The pedestal is supported on a step, which supports a seat entirely surrounding the moulded base of the monument. On this rests the die, a plain mass of granite, diminishing towards the top with considerable entasis, and crowned with a moulded cornice and neck mouldings. The die carries on its front a bronze wreath surrounding the word "Grant." The height of the statue from bottom of plinth to top of rider's hat is 15 feet 1 inch; the size of the plinth is 5 feet 6 inches, and the total weight of the statue is five tons.

The total cost of the statue and pedestal was $32,675.35. Of this amount $9,000.00 was expended for the construction of the pedestal, this sum having been voted by the City Councils of Philadelphia, and constituting a very generous contribution from the Municipal Government.

The artists chose for their motive a moment when General Grant was surveying a battlefield from an eminence, intent upon the operation of the forces before him. The horse is merely obedient to the will of the rider. In the figure of Grant has been given something of the latent force of the man, manifesting itself through perfect passivity, and the sphinx-like character which has mystified all who have studied him has been portrayed. General Grant's costume and its arrangement were chosen from the few collections available, with a view to carrying out the impression as forcible as possible. General Frederick D. Grant is the authority for the long cape to the overcoat; his father wore one much longer than was usual. The hat was also made on his authority.

The model selected for the horse was the gray gelding, "General Grant," nineteen years old, whose sire was "Leopard," an Arabian stallion, presented to General U. S. Grant by the Sultan of Turkey, in 1878.

The unveiling took place in Fairmount Park, on Thursday, April 27th, 1899, and the ceremonies were participated in by His Excellency, William McKinley, President of the United States, members of his cabinet, Mrs. U. S. Grant, the widow of General Grant, and members of her family, Major-General Miles and many distinguished guests both in military and civic life.

Grant's Log Cabin

The log cabin, now located on west side of main drive below Fairmount Park entrance, east end of Girard Avenue Bridge, near Thirty-third street, occupied by General U. S. Grant at City Point, Va., during the siege of Richmond, was the scene of the hospitable entertainments of many distinguished visitors, but none were more warmly welcomed than President George H. Stuart, of Philadelphia, then at the head of the Christian Commission. At his disposal General Grant placed the famous log cabin, and left to him the choice of its future location, as will appear from the following letter:

Headquarters Armies of the United States, Washington, D. C., July 21, 1865. George H. Stuart, Esq., Philadelphia. My Dear Sir: Lieutenant-General Grant directs me to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 20th inst. and to state that he is perfectly willing for the cabin in which he lived at City Point to be placed wherever you or the citizens of Philadelphia may prefer.

He also directs me to state, in reply to your communication for a history of the cabin, and especially to your reference to a supposed council of war between President Lincoln, General Sherman and himself, that he held no council of war at City Point, or any other place at any time; that the interviews between Mr. Lincoln, General Sherman and himself, to which you allude, were rather insignificant than "momentous," and that the only conversation of any importance which did occur between them took place in a steamboat. It consisted of General Grant's announcement that he intended to move out against General Lee at a certain time, with his directions to General Sherman to co-operate in North Carolina.

The cabin, however, you will permit me to say, has an interest beyond that to which, in General Grant's eyes, it seems entitled. It was built in November, 1863, so that the last four months of the rebellion, immediately prior to the great movements which resulted in its overthrow, were passed by him within its walls. Here he received the reports of his great subordinates almost daily, and sent them each their orders and their rewards. There he watched Sherman's route as he came across the continent to the sea, and afterwards along his memorable march through the Carolinas; from here he despatched his instructions to Thomas, which resulted in the battle of Nashville and the discomfiture of Hood, so that concentration of any great force in front of Sherman was impossible. From here he directed Terry in the operations which culminated in the fall of Fort Fisher. From here he directed Sherman and Schofield, bringing one northward through the Carolinas, and the other eastward in dead winter across the north, and then sending him by sea to meet his great captain at Goldsboro, the co-operation being so complete that the two arrived, one from Nashville and the other from Savannah, on the same day. Here he received the rebel commissioners on their way to meet President Lincoln; here he ordered Sheridan's glorious movements, whose importance in producing the last great result can hardly be overestimated; from here he directed Canby in the campaign whose conclusion was the fall of Mobile; from here he despatched Wilson and Stoneman on their final raids; here he received the President, General Sherman, General Sheridan, General Meade, and Admiral Porter, in an interview interesting beyond comparison in the meeting at the one time and place of so many men of such importance by their talents and their positions, and here the lamented Lincoln passed many of the latest hours of his life before its crowning success had been achieved; here the last orders for all these generals were penned before the commencement of the great campaign which terminated the war.

These are reminiscences which I have ventured to recall, conscious that they must always be of transcending interest to the patriot and the historical student, although to the appreciation of my chief they seem, as he directs me to style them—insignificant.

I am, my dear sir, with great respect,

Your obedient servant,
