May it please your Grace,

He Favours have been fo many and fo great, which your Grace's unwearied Bounty has conferred upon me, that I cannot omit this oportunity of telling the World, how much I have been obliged, and by whom. My Gratitude will not fuffer me to smother the favours in silence; nor the Pride they have rais'd me to, let me conceal the Name of so Excellent a Patron. The honour of being favoured by the great Newcassle, is equal with any real Merit, I am sure infinitely above mine. Tet the encouragement I receive from your Grace, is the certain way to make A 2

the World believe I have some desert, or to create in. me the most favourable thoughts of my felf. - My Name may thus, when otherwise it would perifb, live in after Ages, under the protection of your Grace's, which, is famous abroad, and will be Eterniz'd in this Nation, for your Wit beyond all Poets; Judgment and Prudence, before all Statesmen; Courage and Conduct, above all Generals; Constancy and Loyalty, beyond all Subjects; Virtue and Temperance, above all Philosophers; for skill in Weapons, and Horfemanship, and all other Arts befitting your Quality, excelling all Noblemen: And lastly, for those eminent Services in defence of your King and Countrey, with an Interest and Power much exceeding all, and with Loyalty equalling any Nobleman. And indeed, the first was so great, that it might justly have made the greatest Prince asraid of it, had it not been so strongly secured by the latter. strongly secured by the latter.

All these Heroick Qualities I admired, and worshipped at a distance, before I had the Honour to wait upon your Grace at your House. For so wast was your Bounty to me, as to find me out in my obscurity, and oblige me several years, before you saw me at Welbeck; where (when I arrived) I found a Respect so extremely above the meanness of my Condition, that I still received it with blushes; having had nothing to recommend me, (but the Birth and Education, without the Fortune of a Gentleman) besides some Writings of mine, which your Grace was pleased to like. Then was soon added to my former Worship and Admiration, miration, infinite Love, and infinite Gratitude, and a Pride of being favour'd by one, in whom I observ'd a Majesty equal with greatest Princes, yet Affability exceeding ordinary Gentlemen. A Greatness, that none e'r approached without Awe, or parted from without Satisfa-Etion.

Then (by the great honour I had to be daily admitted into your Grace's publick and private Conversation) I observed that admirable Experience and Judgment surmounting all the Old, and that vigorousness of Wit, and smartness of Expression, exceeding all the Young, I ever knew; and not onely in tharp and apt Replies, the most excellent way of pursuing a Discourse; but (which is much more difficult) by giving easie and unforced occafions, the most admirable way of begining one; and all this adapted to men of all Circumstances and Conditions. Your Grace being able to difcourfe with every man in his own way, which, as it shows you to be a most accurate Obferver of all mens tempers, so it hows your Excellency in all their Arts. But when I had the favour daily to be admitted to your Grace's more retired Conversation, when I alone enjoyed the honour, I must declare, I never spent my bours with that pleasure, or improvement; nor shall I.ever enough acknowledge that, and the rest of the Honours done me by your Grace, as much above my Condition as my Merit.

And

The Epistle Dedicatory.

And now, my Lord, after alltbis, imagine not I intend this small Present of a Play (though favoured here by those I most wish it should be) as any return; for all the Services of my life cannot make a sufficient one. I onely lay hold on this occasion, to publish to the World your great Favours, and the grateful Acknowledgments of,

My most Noble Lord,

Your Grace's

Most obliged, humble,

and obedient Servant,

PREFACE.

He ftory from which I took the hint of this Play, is famous all over Spain, Italy, and France: It was first put into a Spanish Play (as I have been told) the Spaniards having a Tradition (which they believe) of fuch a vicious Spaniard, as is represented in this Play. From them the Italian Comedians took it, and from them the French took it, and four several French Plays were made upon the Story.

The Character of the Libertine, and confequently those of his Friends, are borrow'd; but all the Plot, till the latter end of the Fourth Act, is new: And all the rest is very much varied from any thing which has been done upon the Subject.

I hope the Readers will excufe the Irregularities of the Play, when they confider, that the Extravagance of the Subject forced me to it: And I had rather try new ways to pleafe, than to write on in the fame Road, as too many do I hope that the feverest Reader will not be offended at the representation of those Vices, on which which they will fee a dreadful punifhment inflicted. And I have been told by a worthy Gentleman, that many years agon (when first a Play was made upon this Story in Italy) he has feen it acted there by the name of Athersto Fulminato, in Churches, on Sundays, as a part of Devotion; and some, not of the least Judgment and Piety here, have thought it rather an useful Moral, than an incouragement to vice.

I have no reason to complain of the success of this Play, fince it pleased those, whom, of all the world, I would please most. Nor was the Town unkind to it, for which reason I must applaud my good Fortune, to have pleased with so little pains: there being no A& in it, which cost me above five days writing; and the last two, (the Play-house having great occasion for a Play) were both written in four days, as feveral can testifie. And this I dare declare, notwithstanding the foul, course, and ill-manner'd censure passed upon them, (who write Plays in three, four, or five weeks time) by a rough hobling Rhimer, in his Postfcript to another Man's Play, which he spoil'd, and call'd, Love and Revenge; 1 having before publickly owned the writing two Plays in fo short a time. He ought not to have measured any Man's Abilities, who writes for the Stage with his own; for fome may write that in three weeks, which he cannot in three years. But he is angry, that any man should write sense so easily, when he finds it fo laborious a thing to write, even Fustian, that he is believed to have been three years drudging upon the Conquest

PREFACE.

Conquest of Chind. But he ought not to be called a Poet, who cannot write ten times a better in three weeks.

I cannot here pass by his fawcy Epistle to this Conquest, which (instead of expressions of just respect, due to the Birth and Merit of his Patron) is stuffed with railing against others. And first, he begins with the vanity of his Tribe. What Tribe that really is, it is not hard to ghess; but all the Poets will bear me witness it is not theirs, who are sufficiently fatisfied, that he is no more a Poet than Servant to his Majesty, as he presumes to write himfelf; which I wonder he will do, fince Protections are taken off: I know not what Place he is Sworn into in Extraordinary, but I am sure there is no fuch thing as Poet in Extraordinary.

But I wonder (after all his railing) he will call these Poets his Brethren; if they were, me-thinks he might have more natural affection than to abuse his Brethren: but he might have spared that Title, for we can find no manner of Relation betwixt him and them; for they are all Gentlemen, that will not own him, or keep him company: and that, perhaps, is the cause which makes him so angry with them, to tax them, in his ill-manner'd Epistle, with Impudence, which he (having a particular affection for his own vice) calls by the name of Frailty. Impudence indeed is a very pretty Frailty.

But (what ever the Poets are guilty of) I with he had as much of Poetry in him, as he has of that Frailty, for the good of the Duke's Theatre; they might then have hopes of gaining as much by his good Senfe, as as they have loft by his Fustian.

Thus much I thought fit to fay in vindication of the Poets, though, I think, he has not Authority enough (with men of lense) to fix any calumny upon the Tribe, as he calls it. For which reason I shall never trouble my self to take notice of him hereaster, since all men of Wit will think, that he can do the Poets no greater injury, than pretending to be one. Nor had I said so much in answer to his course railing, but to reprehend his Arrogance, and lead him to a little better knowledge of himself; nor does his base Language in his Postfcript deferve a better Return.

PROLOGUE.

OUr Author fent me hither for a Scout, To spy what bloudy Criticks were come out; Those Piccaroons in Wit, wh'infest this Road, And (nap both Friend and Foe that come abroad. This favage Party crueller appears, Than in the Channel Oftend Privateers. You in this Road, or link or plunder all, Remorfle's as a Storm on us you fall : But as a Merchant, when by storms distress'd, Flings out his bulkey Goods to fave the reft, Hoping a Calm may come, he keeps the best. In this black Tempest which o'r us impends, Near Rocks and Quick lands, and no Ports of Friends, Our Poet gives this over to your rage, The most irregular Play upon the Stage, As wild and as extravagant as th' Age. Now, angry men, to all your splenes give vent ; When all your fury has on this been (pent, Else-where you with much worse shall be content. The Poet has no hopes you'll be appeas'd, Who come on purpose but to be displeas'd. Such corrupt Judges should excepted be, Who can condemn before they hear or fee. Ne'r were such bloudy Criticks yet in fashion; You damn by absolute Predestination. But why so many to run one man down? It were a mighty triumph when y'have done. Our scarcity of Plays you should not blame, When by foul poaching you destroy the Game. Let him but have fair play, and he may then Write himself into favour once again. If after this your anger you'll reveal, To Cæsar he must make his just appeal ; There Mercy and Judgment equally do meet, To pardon Faults, and to encourage Wit.

ACT I.

Enter Don John, Don Lopez, Don Antonio, Jacomo, Don John's Valet.

D.Job. THus far without a bound we have enjoy'd Our profp'rous pleafures, which dull Fools call [Sins ;

Laugh'd at old feeble Judges, and weak Laws; And at the fond fantaftick thing, call'd Confcience, Which ferves for nothing but to make men Cowards; An idle fear of future mifery; And is yet worfe than all that we can fear.

D. Lop. Confcience made up of dark and horrid thoughts, Rais'd from the fumes of a diftemper'd Spleen.

D. Anto. A fenfless fear, would make us contradict The onely certain Guide, Infallible Nature ; And at the call of Melancholly Fools, (Who ftile all actions which they like not, Sins) To filence all our Natural appetites.

D.John. Yet those conficientious Fools, that would perswade us To I know not what, which they call Piety, Have in referve private delicious fins, Great as the happy Libertine enjoys, With which, in corners, wantonly they roul.

D. Lop. Don John, thou art our Oracle ; thou hast Dispell'd the fumes which once clowded our brains.

D. Anto.

D. Anto. By thee, we have got loofe from Education, And the dull flavery of Pupillage, Recover'd all the liberty of Nature, Our own ftrong Reafon now can go alone, Without the feeble props of fplenatick Fools, Who contradict our common Mother, Nature.

D. Job. Nature gave us our Senfes, which we pleafe : Nor does our Reafon War againft our Senfe. By Nature's order Senfe fhould guide our Reafon, Since to themind all objects Senfe conveys. But Fools for fhaddows lofe fubftantial pleafures, For idle tales abandon true delight, And folid joys of day, for empty dreams at night. Away, thou foolifh thing, thou chollick of the mind, Thou Worm by ill-digetting ftomachs bred : In fpight of thee, we'll furfeit in delights, And never think ought can be ill that's pleafant.

Jacom. A most excellent Sermon, and no doubt, Gentlemen, you have edifi'd much by it.

D. Job. Away ! thou formal phlegmatick Coxcomb, thou Haft neither courage nor yet wit enough To fin thus. Thou art my dull confcientious Pimp. And when I am wanton with my Whore within, Thou, with thy Beads and Pray'r-book, keep it the door.

Jacom. Sir, I find your Worship is no more afraid to be damn'd, than other fashionable Gentlemen of the Age : but, me-thinks, Halters and Axes should terrifie you. With reverence to your Worships, I've seen civiller men hang'd, and men of as pretty parts too. There's scarce a City in Spain but is too hot for you, you have committed such outrages where so is you come.

D. Lop. Come, for diversion, pray let's hear your Fool preach a little.

Jaco. For my part, I cannot but be troubled, that I shall lose my honour by you, Sir; for people will be apt to say, Like Master, like Man.

D. Joh. Your honour, Rascal, a Sow-gelder may better pretend to it.

Jacom. But I have another fcruple, Sir. •

D. Jok.

D. Job. What's that?

Jacom. I fear I shall be hang'd in your company.

D. Job. That's an honour you will ne'r have courage to deferve.

Jacom. It is an honour I am not ambitious of.

D. Lop. Why does the Fool talk of hanging? we fcorn all Laws.

Jacom. It seems so, or you would not have cut your Elder Brother's throat. Don Lopez.

D. Lop. Why, you Coxcomb, he kept a good Estate from me, and I could not Whore and Revel sufficiently without it.

D. Anto. Look you, Jacomo, had he not reason?

Jacom. Yes, Antonio, fo had you to get both your Sifters with Child; 'twas very civil; Itake it.

D. Anto. Yes, you Fool, they were lufty young handfome Wenches, and pleas'd my appetite. Befides, I fav'd the Honour of the Family by it; for if I had not, fome body elfe would.

Jacom. O horrid villany ! But you are both Saints to my hopeful Master ; I'll turu him loofe to Belzebub himself,

He deall out do him at his own Wesness

He shall out-do him at his own Weapons.

D. Joh. I, you Rascal.

Jacom. Oh no, Sir, you are as innocent. To caufe your good old . Father to be kill'd was nothing.

D. Job. It was fomething, and a good thing too, Sirra: his whole defign was to debar me of my pleafures: he kept his purfe from me, and could not be content with that, but still would preach his sensibles Morals to me, his old dull foolish stuff against my pleasure. I caus'd him to be sent I know not whether. But he believ'd he was to go to Heav'n; I care not where he is, fince I am rid of him.

Jacom. Cutting his throat was a very good return for his begetting of you.

D. Job. That was before he was aware on't, 'twas for his own fake, he ne'r thought of me in the bulinefs.

Jacom. Heav'n bles us!

D. Joh. You Dog, I shall beat out your brains, if you date be foimpudent as to pray in my company.

Facom.

Jacom. Good Sir, I have done, Ihavedone-D. Lop. Prethee let the infipid Foolgo on.

D. Ant. Let's hear the Coxcomb number up your crimes, The patterns we intend to imitate.

Jacom. Sir, let me lay your horrid crimes before you: The unhappy minute may perhaps arrive,

When the fense of 'em may make you penitent.

D. Anto. 'Twere better thou wer't hang'd.

D. Lop. Repent! Cowards and Fools do that.

D. Job. Your valiant well-bred Gentlemen never repent : But what fhould I repent of?

Jacom. After the murder of your Father, the brave Don Pedro, Governour of Sevil, for whom the Town are still in grief, was, in his own house, barb'rously kill'd by you.

D. Job. Barbaroufly, you lie, you Rafcal, 'twas finely done ; I run him through the Lungs as handfomely, and kill'd him as decently, and as like a Gentleman as could be. The jealous Coxcomb deferv'd death, he kept his Sifter from me ; her eyes would have kill'd me if I had not enjoy'd her, which I could not do without killing him : Befides, I was alone, and kill'd him hand to fift.

Jacom. I never knew you go to Church but to take Sanctuary for a Murder, or to rob Churches of their Plate.

D. Job. Heav'n needs not be ferv'd in Plate, but I had use on't.

Jacom. How often have you scal'd the Walls of Monasteries? Two Nuns, I know, you ravish'd, and a third you dangerously wounded for her violent resistance.

D. Job. The perverse Jades were uncivill, and deferv'd fuchulage.

Jacom. Some thirty Murders, Rapes innumerable, frequent Sacrilege, Parricide; in fhort, not one in all the Catalogue of Sins have fcap'd you.

D. Job. My bus'nels is my pleafure, that end I will always compals, without fcrupling the means; there is no right or wrong, but what conduces to, or hinders pleafure. But, you tedious infipid Rafcal, if I hear more of your Morality, I will Carbonado you. D. Anto. We live the life of Senfe, which no fantaftick things. call'd Reafon, shall controul.

D. Lop. My reason tells me, I must please my Sense.

D. Job. My appetites are all I'm fure I have from Heav'n, fince they are Natural, and them I always will obey.

Jacom. I doubt it not, Sir, therefore I defire to shake hands. and part.

D. Joh. D' ye hear, Dog, talk once more of parting, and I will faw your Wind-pipe. I could find in my heart to cut your Rafcal's Nofe off, and fave the Pox a labour : I'll do't, Sirra, have at you.

Jacom. Good Sir, be not fo transported; I will live, Sir, and will ferve you in any thing; I'll fetch a Wench, or any thing in the world Sir. O how I tremble at this Tyrant's rage. [alidea

D. Anto. Come, 'tis night, we lose time to our adventures.

D. Lop. I have befpoke Mulick for our Serenading.

D. Job. Let's on, and live the noble life of Senfe. To all the powers of Love and mighty Luft, In fpight of formal Fops I will be juft. What ways foe'r conduce to my delight, My Senfe inftructs me, I must think 'em right. On, on, my Soul, and make no stop in pleasure, They're dull infipid Fools that live by measure.

Excunt all but Jacomo. Jacom. What will become of me? if I thould leave him, he'sfo revengeful, he would travel o'r all Spain to find me out, and cut my throat. I cannot live long with him neither : I thall be hang'd, or knock'd o'th' head, or thare fome dreadful Fate or other with him. 'Tis just between him and me, as between the Devil and the Witch, Who repents her bargain, and would be free from future ills, but for the fear of prefent durit not venture.

Enter Leonora.

Here comes Leonora, one of those multitudes of Ladies, he hassworn, li'd to, and betray'd.

Leon. Jacomo, where is Don John ? I could not live to endure alonger a longer absence from him. I havefigh'd and wept my felfaway: I move, but have no life left in me. His coldness and his absence have given me fearful and killing apprehensions. Where is my Dear?

Jacom. Your Dear, Madam! he's your's no more. Leon. Heav'n! what do I hear? Speak, is he dead? Jacom. To you he is.

Leon. Ah me, has he forgot his Vows and Oaths? Has he no Confeience, Faith, or Honour left?

Jacom. Left, Madam, hene'r had any."

Leon. It is impossible, you speak this out of malice sure.

Jacom. There's no man knows him better than I do.

I have a greater respect for you, than for any he has betray'd, and will undeceive you : he is the most perfidious Wretch alive.

Leon. Has he forgot the Sacred Contract, which was made privately betwixt us, and confirm'd before the altar, during the time of holy Mass?

Jacom. All times and places are alike to him.

Leon. Oh how affiduous was he in his paffion! how many thousand vows and fighs he breath'd! what tears he wept, seeming to suffer all the cruel pangs which Lovers e'r endur'd! how eloquent were all his words and actions!

Jacom. His perfon and his parts are excellent, but his bafe vices are beyond all measure : why would you believe him?

Leon. My own love brib'd me to believe him: I faw the man Ilov'd more than the world. Oft on his knees, with his eyes up to Heav'n, kifling my hand with fuch an amorous heat, and with fuch ardor, breathing fervent vows of loyal Love, and venting fad complaints of extreme fufferings. I poor eafle Soul, flattering my felf to think he meant as I did, loft all my Sexes faculty, Diffembling; and in a moneth muft I be thus betray'd?

Jacom. Poor Lady ! I cannot but have bowels for you; your fad Narration makes me weep in fadnefs: but you are better us'd than others. Ine'r knew him conftant a fortnight before.

Leon. Then, then he promis'd he would marry me.

Jacom. If he were to live here one moneth longer, he wou'd marry half the Town, ugly and handfome, old and young: nothing nothing that's Female comes amisto him

Leon. Does he not fear a thunderbolt from Heav'n.

Jacom. No, nor a Devil from Hell. He owns no Deity but his voluptuous appetite, whofe fatisfaction he will compass by Murders, Rapes, Treasons, or ought elfe. But pray let me ask you one civil question, Did you not give him earnest of your Body, Madam.

Leon. Mock not my mifery.

Oh ! that confounds me. Ah ! I thought him true, and lov'd him fo, I could deny him nothing.

Jacom. Why, there 'tis; I fear you have, or elfe he wou'd have marri'd you: he has marri'd fix within this moneth, and promis'd fifteen more, all whom he has enjoy'd, and left, and is this night gone on fome new adventure, fome Rape or Murder, fome fuch petty thing.

Leon. Oh Monster of impiety!

Oh falle Don John! wonder of cruelty ! [She fwounds.

Jacom. What a pox does the fwound at the news! Alas! poor Soul, the has mov'd me now to pity, as the did to love. Ha! the place is private _____ If I thould make use of a Natural Receit to refreth her, and bringher to life again, 'twould be a great pleasure to me, and no trouble to her. Hum! 'tis very private, and I dare fin in private. A deuce take her, the revives, and prevents me.

Leon. Where is the cruel Tyrant! inhumane Monfter! but I will ftrive to fortifie my felf. But Oh my misfortune! Oh my mifery ! Under what ftrange Enchantments am I bound ? Could he be yet a thousaud times more impious, I could not chuse but love his perfon ftill.

Jacom. Be not fo paffionate; if you could be discreet, and love your felf, I'd put you in a way to case your grief now, and all your careshereafter.

Leon. If you can now cafe an afflicted Woman, who else must shortly rid her felf of life, imploy your charity; 'twas never plac'd yet on a Wretchneeded it more than I.

Jacom. If Loyalty in a Lover be a Jewel! fay no more, I can tell you where you may have it...

Leon. Speak not of truth in man, it is impossible.

Jacom.

Jacom. Pardon me, I speak on my own knowledge.

Leon. Is your Master true then? and have you happily deceiv'd me? Speak.

Jacom. As true as all the power of Hell can make him. Leon. If he be falle, let all the world be fo.

Jacom. There's another-guess man than he, Madam.

Leon. Another ! who can that be ?

No, no, there's no truth found in the Sex.

Jacom. He is a civil vertuous and discreet sober person.

Leon. Can there be fuch a man? what does he mean?

Jacom. There is, Madam, a man of goodly prefence too_____ Something inclining to be fat, of a round plump face, with quick and fparkling eyes, and mouth of cheerful overture._____ His nofe, which is the onely fault, is fomewhat fhort, but that's no matter; his hair and eye-brows black, and fo forth.

Leon. How ! he may perhaps be brib'd by fome other man, and what he faid of his Master may be false.

Jacom. How the furveysme! Fa-la-la

[Sings, and struts about.

[Aside.

Leon. Who is this you speak of?

Jacom. A man, who, envy must confess, has excellent parts, but those are gifts, gifts — meer gifts — thanks be to Heav'n for them.

Leon. But shall I never know his name?

Jacom. He's one, whom many Ladies have honour'd with their affection; but no more of that. They have met difdain, and fo forth. But he'll be content to marry you. Fa-la-la-la

Leon. Again I ask you who he is ?

Jacom. Lord, how inapprehensive she is? Can you not guess? Leon. No.

Jacom. Your humble Servant, Madam.

Leon. Yours, Sir.

Jacom. It is my felf in perfon; and upon my honour, I will be true and conftant to you.

Leon. Infolent Varlet! am I fain fo low to be thy fcorn? Jacom. Scorn! as I am a Chriftian Soul, I am in earneft. Leon. Audacious Villain! Impudence it felf!

Jacom:

Sings.

Jacom. Ah, Madam ! your Servant, your true Lover must endure a thousand such bobs from his Mistris; I can bear, Madam, I can.

Leon. Because thy Master has betray'd me, am I become so infamous?

Jacom. Tis fomething hard, Madam, to preferve a good reputation in his company; I can fcarce do't my felf.

Leon. Am I fo miferable to defcend to his man?

Jacom. Descend, say you : Ha, ha, ha!

Leon. Now I perceive all's false which you have faid of him. Farewell, you base ingrateful Fellow.

Jacom. Hold, Madam, come in the morning and I will place you in the next room, where you shall over-hear our discours. You'll foon discover the mistake, and find who't is that loves you. Retire, Madam, I hear some body coming.

[Exeunt Jacomo, Leonora.

Enter Don John in the Street.

D. Job. Let me see, here lives a Lady: I have seen Don Octavio haunting about this house, and making private signs to her. I never saw her sace, but am resolv'd to enjoy her, because he likes her; besides, she's another Woman.

Enter Antonio.

Antonio, welcome to our place of randezvous. Well, what game! what adventure!

Enter Lopez.

- Come, dear Lopez.

Anto. I have had a rare adventure. Lop. What, dear Antonio ?

Ant. I faw at a Villa not far off, a grave mighty bearded Fool, drinking Lemonado with his Miftris; I miflik'd his face, pluck'd him by the Whiskers, pull'd all one fide of his Beard off, fought with him, run him through the thigh, carri'd away his Miftris, C ferv'd her in her kind, and then let her go.

D. Job. Gallantly perform'd, like a brave Souldier in an Enemies Countrey: When they will not pay Contribution, you fight for Forrage.

D. Lop. Pox on't, I have been damnably unfortunate; I have neither beat man, nor lain with Woman to night, but faln in love molt furioufly: I dogg'd my new Mistris to her Lodging; she's Don Bernardo's Sister, and shall be my Punk.

D. Job. I could meet with no willing Dame, but was fain to commit a Rape to pass away the time.

D. Anto. Oh! a Rape is the joy of my heart; I love a Rape, upon my Clavis, exceedingly.

D. Job. But mine, my Lads, was such a Rape, it ought to be Registred; a noble and heroick Rape.

D. Lop. Ah! dear Don John!

D. Anto. How was it?

D. Joh. 'Twas in a Church, Boys.

D. Anto. Ah! Gallant Leader!

D. Lop. Renown'd Don John!

D. Anto. Come, let's retire, you have done enough for once. D. Job. Not yet, Antonio, I have an Intrigue here.

Enter Fidlers.

Here are my Fidlers. Rank your felves clofe under this Window, and fing the Song I prepar'd.

SONG.

T Hou joy of all hearts, and delight of all eyes, Nature's chief Treasure, and Beauty's chief Prize, Look down, you'l discover, Here's a faithful young vigorous Lover ; With a heart full as true, As e'r languish'd for you; Here's a faithful young vigorous Lover.

The

D. Job. Now Fidlers, be gone. [Window opens, Maria looks out, and flings a Paper down. Mar. Retire, my Dear Octavia; read that Note. Adieu.

[Exit Mar. D. Job. Good, the takes me for Octavio. I warrant you, Boys, I thall fucceed in this adventure. Now my falfe Light affift me. [Reads by a dark Lantern.

Reads. So from this Window, within eight minutes you shall be admitted to the Garden dore. You know the Sign.

Ha! the Sign, Gad she lies, I know not the Sign.

D. Anto. What will you do? you know not the Sign. Let's away, and be contented this night.

D. Job. My friends, if you love me, retire. I'll venture, though Thunderbolts should fall upon my head.

D. Lop. Are you mad? as foon as fhe discovers the deceit, fhe'll raife the house upon you, and you'll be murder'd.

D. Job. She'll not raife the house for her own sake, but rather grant me all I ask to keep her counsell.

D. Anto. 'Tis very dangerous : be carefal of your felf.

D. Job. The more danger, the more delight: I hate the commonroad of pleafure. What! can I fear at fuch a time as this! The cowardly Deer are valiant in their Rutting time. I fay, Be gone _____

D. Anto. We'll not dispute your commands. Good luck to you. [Excunt Antonio, Lopez.

D. Joh. How shall I know this devillish Sign?

Enter

Enter Octavio with Fidlers, and stands under Maria's window.

Ha! whom have we hear? fome Serenading Coxcomb. Now fhall we have fome damn'd Song or other, a Cloris, or a Phillis at leaft.

SONG.

Cloris. When you disperse your influence, Your dazling Beams are quick and clear; You so surprize and wound the sense, So bright a Miracle y'appear. Admiring Mortals you astonish so, No other Deity they know, But think that all Divinity's below -----

> One charming look from your illustrious Face, Were able to subdue Mankind, So sweet, so powerful a Grace Makes all men Lovers but the blind: Nor can they freedom by resistance gain, For each embraces the soft Chain, And never struggles with the pleasant pain.

Octa. Begone! begone! the Window opens. D. Joh. 'Sdeath! this is Octavio. I must dispatch him, or he'll spoil all; but I would fain hear the Sign first. Mar. What strange mistake is this? Sure he did not receive my Note, and then I am ruin'd. Octa. She expects the Sign. Where's my Whistle? O here.

D. Joh. I have found it, that must be the Sign_____ Mar. I dare not speak aloud, go to the Garden door. [Don John rushes upon Octavio, and snatches the Whistle out of his hand. Octa. 'Sdeath, what Russian's this?

Whiftles.

D. Joh.

(13)

D. Job. One that will be fure to cut your throat.

Octa. Make not a promile to your felf of what you cann't, perform. [Fight.

D. Joh. I warrant you. Have at you.

Mir. O Heav'n! Octavio's fighting. Oh my heart!

Octa. Oh! Iam flain_____

D. Job. I knew I should be as good as my word. I think you have it, Sir Ha! he's dying — Now for the Lady—I'll draw him further off, that his groans may not disturb our pleasure — Stay----- by your leave, Sir, I'll change Hat and Cloak with you, it may help me in my design.

Octav. O barbarous Villain!

Mar. They have done fighting, and I hear no noife. Oh unfortunate Woman! my dear Odavio's kill'd_____

Flora. Perhaps, Madam, he has kill'd the other. I'll down to the Garden door; if he be well, he'll come thither, as well to fatisfic his appointment, as to take refuge. Your Brother's fafe, he may come in fecurely ______ [Ex. to the door.

Mar. Hafte ! hafte ! Fly ! fly ! Oh Octavio. I'll follow her. [She follows.

D. Joh. Now for the Garden door. This Whiftle will do me excellent fervice. Now good luck_____ [Goes to the door and whiftles.

Flo. Octavio ?

D. Job. The fame.

Flo. Heav'n be prais'd, my Lady thought you had been kill'd. D. Job. I am unhurt : let's quickly to her.

and any and there are and the state of Flo. Oh ! She'll be over-joy'd to fee you alive.

D. Job. I'll make her more over-joy'd before I have done with: her. This is a rare adventure!

Enter Maria at the door:

Flo. Here's your Jewel, Madam, speak softly.

Mar. O my dear Octavio! have I got you within these arms? D. Job. Ay, my Dear, unpierc'd by any thing but by. your. eyes.

Mar. Those will do you no hurt. But are you sure not wounded? D. Joh. D. Job. I am. Let me embrace my pretty Dear; and yet the may be a Blackamore for ought I know

Mar. We'll retire to my Chamber. Flora, go out, and prepare us a Collation.

D. Jon . O admirable adventure! Come, my Delight.

F Excunt.

D. Lov.

Enter Don Lopez, Antonio, Jacomo.

Jac. Where's my pious Master?

D. Ant. We left him hereabouts. I wonder what he has done in his adventure : I believe he has had fome bulle.

D. Lop. I thought I heard fighting hereabout.

7ac. Gad forgive me! fighting! where! where!

D. Ant. O thou incorrigible Coward !

D. Lop.See, here's some of his handy-work; here's a man kill'd. Jac. Another murder. Heav'n, what will become of me? I shall be hang'd, yet dare not run away from him.

Enter an Officer with a Guard, going the Round.

Officer. Stand! who are there? D. Lop. We do ftand, Rafcal, we never use to run. Jac. Now shall I be taken and hang'd for my Master's murder.

[Offers to run. D. Ant. Stand, you Dog! offer once more to run, and I'll put Bilbow in your guts.

Jac. Gad forgive me! what will become of me?

Officer. What's here? a man murder'd? yield, you are my prisoners.

Jac. With all my heart! but as I hope to be fav'd, we did not kill him, Sir

Offic. These must be the murderers, disarm 'em.

D. Ant. How now, Rascal! difarm us!

D. Lop. We are not us'd to part with our Swords.

Jac. I care not a farthing for my Sword, 'tis at your fervice.

D. Ant. Do you hear, Rascal; keep it, and fight, or I'll swear the murder against you.

D. Lop. Offer to flinch, and I'll run you through. Offic. Take their Swords, or knock 'em down.

[They fight. Jacomo offers to run, fome of the Guards stop him.

Jac. A pox on't, I had as good fight and die, as be taken and be hang'd. [Guards are beaten off:

D. Lop. Are you gone, you Dogs? I have pinck'd fome of you.

Jac. Ah Rogues! Villains! I have met with you.

D. Ant. Obrave Jacomo! you fought like an imprison'd Rat: The Rogue had conceal'd Courage, and did not know it.

Jac. O Cowards! Rascals! a man can get no honour by fighting with such Poletroons! but for all that, I will prudently withdraw, this place will suddenly be too hot for us.

D. Lop. Once in your life you are in the right, Jacomo.

Jac. O good Sir, there is as much to be alcribed to Conduct, as to Courage, I affure you.

Enter Don John and Maria in her Chamber.

Mar. Speak foftly, my Dear; should my Brother hear us, we are ruin'd.

D. Joh. Though I can scarce contain my joy, I will. Ofhe's a rare Creature in the dark, pray Heav'n she be so in the light.

Enter Flora with a Candle ; as foon as they difcover Don John, they shreike out.

Mar. OHeav'n ! I am ruin'd and betray'd. Flo. He has Octavio's clothes on. Mar. O he has murder'd him. My Brother shall revenge it. D. Joh. I will cut his throat if he offers it. Mar. { Thieves! Murder! Murder! Thieves! D. Job. I will stop your shrill wind-pipes.

Enter

Enter Maria's Brother, with his Sword drawn.

Broth. 'Sdeath ! a man in my Sifter's Chamber ! Have at you, Villain.

D. Joh. Come on, Villain. [Don John kills the Brother. Flo Murder! Murder!

Mar. O Villain, thou haft kill'd my Brother, and difhonour'd me.

Enter five or fix Servants, with drawn Swords.

O your Master's murder'd !

D. Job. So many of you; 'tis no matter: your Hero's in Plays beat five times as many. Have at you, Rogues.

[Maria runs away shrieking, and Don John beats the Servants off, and stops Flora.

Now give me the Key of the Garden, or I'll murder thee. Flo. Murder! Murder! There, take it — [She runs away. D. Joh. So, thus far it is well; this was a brave adventure. 'Mongst all the Joys which in the world are fought, None are sogreat as those by dangers bought. [Exit.

ACT II.

184. 2012 . UR

Jacomo folus.

Jac. W Hat will this leud Mafter of mine do? this Town of Sevil will not much care for his company after his last nights Atchievments: He must now either fly, or hang for't. Ha! me-thinks my bloud grows chill at the naming of that dreadful word, Hang What will become of me? I dare not leave him, and yet I fear that I shall perish with him. He's certainly the first that ever fet up a Religion to the Devil.

Enter Leonora.

Leon. I come to claim your promise ; is Don John within ?

Jacom. No, Madam, but I expect him every minute. You fee, Madam, what honour I have for you, for I venture my ears to do this.

Leon. You oblige me extremely; fo great is the prefent pain of doubt, that we defire to lofe it : though in exchange of certainty, that mult afflict us more.

Jac. I hear him coming, withdraw quickly.

- She withdraws.

tace ;

Enter Don John.

D. Joh. How now, Sir, what wife thoughts have you in your Noddle?

Jac. Why, Sir, I was confidering how well I could endure to be hang'd.

D. Job. And why fo, Buffle?

Jac. Why you will force me to wait upon you in all your fortunes, and you are making what halte you can to the Gallows

D: Job. Again at your reproofs. You inlipid Rafcal; I shall cut your ears off, Dog ------

Jac. Good Sir, I have done; yet I cannot but admire, fince you are refolv'd to go to the Devil, that you cannot be content with the common way of travelling, but must ride post to him.

D. Joh. Leave off your idle tales, found out by Priests to keep the Rabble in awe.

Jac. Oh horrid wickedness! If I may be bold to ask, what noble exploits did your Chivalry perform last night?

D. Joh. Why, Sir, I committed a Rape upon my Father's Monument.

7ac. Oh horror!

D. Job. Do you (tart, you Villain ? Hah!

Jac. I, Sir, who I, Sir? not I, Sir.

D. Joh. D'hear, Rascal, let me not see a frown upon your face; if I do, I will cut your throat, you Rogue.

Jac. No, Sir, no, Sir, I warrant you; Iam in a very good humour, Iassure you ——— Heav'n deliver me !

D. Joh. Now liften and learn. I kill'd a Lady's Lover, and fuppli'd his place, by ftratagem enjoy'd her: In came her foolifh Brother and furpriz'd me, but perifh'd by my hand; and I doubt not but I maul'd three or four of his Servants.

Jac. Oh horrid fact!

D. Job. Again, Villain, are you frowning?

Jac. No, Sir, no, Sir; don't think fo ill of me, Sir. Heav'n fend me from this wicked Wretch! What will become of us, Sir? we fhall be apprehended.

D. Joh. Can you fear your Rascally Carcase, when I venture mine? I observe always, those that have the most despicable persons, are most careful to preferve 'em.

Jac. Sir, I beg your pardon; but I have an odd humour, makes me fomething unfit for your Worship's fervice.

D. Joh. What's that, Sirra ?

Jac. Tis a very odd one, I am almost asham'd to tell it to you. D. Job. Out with it, Fool —

Jac. Why Sir, I cannot tell what is the reason, but I have a most unconquerable antipathy to Hemp. I could never endure a Bell-rope. Hanging is a kind of death I cannot abide, I am not able to endure it.

D. Job. I have taken care to avoid that ; my friends are gone to hire a Veffel, and we'll to Sea together to feek a refuge, and a new Scene of pleafure.

Jac. All three, Sir ?

D. Job. Yes, Sir. ----

Jac. Three as civil discreet sober persons, as a man wou'd wish to drink with.

Enter Leonora.

Leon. I can hold no longer ! D. Job. 'Sdeath, you Dog, how came fhe here ? Jac. I don't know, Sir, fhe ftole in _____

Leon

Jacomo starts.

Aside.

Leon. What Witchcraft do I fuffer under? that when I abhor his vices, I full love his perfon. Ah, Don John! have I deferv'd that you fhould fly me? are all your Oaths and Vows forgotten by you?

D. Job. No, no ; in these cases I always remember my Oaths, and never forget to break them.

Leon. Oh impiety!

Did I, for this, yield up my Honour to you ? after you had figh'd and languith'd many moneths, and thew'd all figns of a fincere affection, I trufted in your truth and conftancy, without the Bond of Marriage, yielded up a Virgin's Treafure, all my Innocence, believ'd your folemn Contract, when you invok'd all the Pow'rs above to teftifie your Vows.

D. Job. They think much of us, why don't they witness 'em for you _____ Pish, 'tis nothing but a way of speaking, which young amorous Fellows have gotten Leon. Did you not love me then? What injury had I e'r done you, that you shou'd feign affection to betray me ?

D. Job. Yes'faith, I did love you, and fhew'd you as frequent and as hearty figns of it as I could; and i'gad y'are an ungrateful Woman if you lay the contrary.

Leon. O heav'n! Did you, and do not now? What crime have I committed, that could make you break your Vows and Oaths, and banish all your passion? Ah! with what tenderness have I receiv'd your feign'd affection, and ne'r thought I liv'd but in your presence; my love was too fervent to be counterseit.

D. Joh. That I know not, for fince your Sex are fuch diffemblers, they can hold out against, and seem to hate the men they love; why may they not seem to love the men they hate?

Leon. O cruel man! could I diffemble? had I a thoufand lives, I ventur'd all each time I faw your face; nay, were I now difcover'd, I fhould inftantly be facrific'd to my raging Brother's fury; and can I diffemble?

D. Job. I do not know whether you do or no; you fee I don't, I am fomething free with you.

Leon. And do you not love me then?

D. Job. Faith, Madam, I lov'd you as long as I could for the heart

heart and bloud of me, and there's an end of it; what a Devil wou'd you have more?

Leon. O cruel man! how miferable have you made me!

D. Job. Miserable! use variety as I do, and you'll not be miserable. Ah! there's nothing so fweet to frail humane flesh as variety.

Leon. Inhumane Creature ! what have I been guilty of, that thou fhould ft thus remove thy affections from me?

D. Job. Guilty, no: but I have had enough of you, and I have done what I can for you, and there's no more to be faid.

Leon. Tigers would have more pity than thou haft.

D. Job. Unreasonable Woman! would you have a man love after enjoyment? I think the Devil's in you Leon. Do you upbraid me with the rash effects of Love, which you caus'd in me? and do you hate me for what you ought to love me for? were you not many moneths with Vows and Oaths betraying me to that weakness? Ungrateful Monster!

D. Job. Why the Devil did you not yield before? you Women always rook in Love; you'll never play upon the square with us.

Leon. False man! I yielded but too soon. Unfortunate Woman.!

D. Job. Your diffembling Arts and jilting tricks, taught you by your Mothers, and the phlegmatick coldnels of your conftitutions, make you fo long in yielding; that we love out almost all our love before you begin, and yet you would have our love last as long as yours. I got the start of you a long way, and have reason to reach the Goal before you.

Leon. Did you not swear you wou'd for ever love me?

D. Job. Why there 'tis; why did you put me to the trouble to fwear it? If you Women would be honeft, and follow the Dictates of Senfe and Nature, we fhou'd agree about the business prefently, and never be for fworn for the matter.

Leon. Are Oaths fo flighted by you? perfidious man!

D. Job. Oaths! Snares to catch conceited Women with; I wou'd have fworn all the Oathes under the Sun; why I wou'd have committed Treafon for you, and yet I knew I should be weary of you_____ Leon. I thought fuch love as mine might have deferv'd your conftancy, false and ungrateful man !

D. Job. Thus your own vanity, not we betray you: Each woman thinks, though men are falle to others, that the is fo fine a perfon, none can be fo to her. You thould not take our words of courfe in earnest.

Leon. Thus Devils do in Hell, who cruelly upbraid whom they have tempted thither.

D. Job. In fhort, my conflictution will not let me love you longer: and what ever fome Hypocrites pretend, all mankind obey their conflictutions, and cannot do otherwife ——

Leon. Heav'n, fure, will punish this vile treachery.

D. Job. Do you then leave it to Heav'n, and trouble your felf no farther about it.

Leon. Ye Sacred Pow'rs, who take care of injur'd innocence, affift me.

Enter Jacomo.

Jac. Sir, Sir! stand upon your guard.

D. Job. How now ! what's the matter ?

Jac. Here's a whole Batalion of couragious Women come to charge you.

STALL MALLING

Enter Six Women.

D. Joh. Keep 'em out, you Villain.

Jac. I cannot, they over-run me.

D. Joh. What an inundation of Strumpets is here?

Leon. O Heav'n ! I can stay no longer to be a witness of his falshood ______ [Exit Leonora.

I. Wom. My Dear, I defire a word in private with you.

D. Joh. Faith, my Dear, I am fomething busie, but I love thee dearly. [Aside. A pox on thee!]

2. Wom. Don John, a word : 'tis time now we fhould declare our marriage; 'tis now above three weeks.

D. Job. Ay, we will do it fuddenly _____

3. Wom. Pre'thee, Honey, what bus'ness can these idle Women have.

have? fend them packing, that we may confer about our affairs.

4. Wom.Lord! how am I amaz'd at the confidence of fome Women! who are these that will not let one converse with one's own Husband? By your leave, Ladies.

Jac. Now it works! teale him, Ladies, worry him soundly

5. Wom. Nay, by your leave, good Madam; if you go to that. [Pulls Don John from the other.

6. Wom. Ladies, by all your leaves; fure none of you will have the confidence to pretend an intereft in this Gentleman----

D. Job. I shall be torn in pieces : Jacomo, stand by me.

1. Lad. Lord, Madam, what's your meaning? none ought to claim a right to another Woman's Husband, let me tell you that.

2. Lad. You are in the right, Madam. Therefore prethee, Dear, let's withdraw, and leave them; I do not like their company.

D. Joh. Ay, prefently, my Dear. What an excellent thing is a Woman before enjoyment, and how infipid after it !

4. Wom: Come, prethee, put these Women out of doubt, and let them know our Marriage.

D. Joh. To morrow we'll declare and celebrate our Nuptials.

6. Wom. Ladies, the flort and the long on't is, you are very uncivil to press upon this Gentleman. Come, Love, e'en tell'em the truth of the flory_____

4. Wom. Uncivil, Madam, pardon me; one cannot be so in speaking to one's own.

2. Wom. That's true; fhe little thinks who that is.

6. Wom. To their own! Ha, ha, ha, that's true _____ Come, Honey, keep 'em no longer in ignorance.

4. Wom. Come, Ladies, I will undeceive you all; think no further of this Gentleman, I fay, think no further of him_____

I. Wom. What can this mean?

D. Joh. Hold, for Heav'n's fake; you know not what you do. 4. Wom. Yes, yes, I do; it fhall all out: I'll fend 'em away with Fleas in their Ears. Poor filly Creatures!

D. Job. Now will Civil Wars arife _____

4. Wom.

4. Wom. Trouble your felves no longer about Don John, he is mine _____ he is mine, Ladies_____

All. Yours!____

D. Job. Pox on't, I must fet a good face upon the bus'nes; I fee murder will out_____

6 Wom. Yours ! that's pleafant; he's mine____

5. Wom. I have been too long patient ; he is my Husband.

1. Wom. Yours, how can that be? I am fure I am his Wife.

3. Wom. Are you not asham'd, Ladies, to claim my Husband?

2. Wom. Are you all mad? Iam fure I am marri'd to him.

All.You!

D. Joh. Look you, Ladies, a Man's but a Man; here's my Body, tak't among you as far as 'twill go. The Devil cann't pleafe you all—

Jac. Pray, Ladies, will you difpatch; for there are a matter of fifteen more that are ready to put in their claims, and must be heard in their order_____

D. Joh. How now, Rogue ? this is your fault, Sirra.

Jac. My fault, Sir, no; the Ladies shall see I am no Traitor. Look you, Ladies_____

D. Joh. Peace, Villain, or I will cut your throat. Well, Ladies, know then, I am marri'd to one in this company; and to morrow morning, if you will repair to this place, I will declare my Marriage, which now, for fome fecret Reafons, I am oblig'd to conceal — Now will each Strumpet think 'tis her I mean.

I. Wom. That's well enough.

4. Wom. I knew he would own me at laft.

2. Wom. Now they will foon fee their errors.

5. Now we'll conceal it no longer, Deareft.

D. Joh. No, no, I warrant you -

6. Wom. Lord how blank these Ladies will look.

2. Wom. Poor Ladies -----

Jac. Ladies, pray let me ask a question, which of you is really marri'd to him?

Omn. I, I, I -

D. Job. 'Sdeath, you Son of a Baboon. Come, Pox on't, why fhould I dally any longer ! why fhould I conceal my good actions! in one word, I am married to every one of you, and have above above fourfcore more; nor will I ever give over, till I have as many Wives and Concubines as the Grand Seignior.

- Jac. A very modest civil perfon truly
- 4. Wom. O horrid Villain!

6. Wom. Perfidious Monster!

Enter Don Lopez and Antonio.

D. Ant. How now, Don John; Hah! you are a rav'nous Bird of prey indeed; do you fly at no less than a whole Covee of Whores at once? you fcorn a fingle Strumpet for your Quarry.

Ant. What, in tears too! Fie, Don John; thou art the most ungentle Knight alive : use your Ladies civilly for shame.

D. Joh. Ay, before the Victory, I grant you; but after it, they should wear Chains, and follow the Conqueror's Chariot.

D. Lop. Alas, poor Harlots!

D. Joh. Peace, peace, good words; these are certain Animals call'd Wives, and all of em are my Wives: Do you call a man of Honour's Wives, Harlots? out, on't.

I. Wom. Perfidious Monfter!

Ant. Excellent!

D. Joh. Come on, you are come very opportunely, to help to celebrate my feveral and refpective Weddings. Come, my Dears; 'faith we will have a Ballad at our Weddings. Where are my Fidlers?

6. Wom. O falvage Beaft !

4. Wom. Inhumane Villain ! revenge fhall follow. D. Job. Pox on revenge. Call in my Minftrils.

Enter Fidlers.

Since Liberty, Nature for all has design'd, Apox on the Fool who to one is confin'd. All Creatures besides, When they please change their Brides. All Females they get when they can, Whilst they nothing but Nature obey, How happy, how happy are they? But the filly fond Animal, Man, Makes Laws' gainst himself, which his Appetites smay; Poor Fools, how unhappy are they? Chor. Since Liberty, Nature for all has design'd, Apox on the Fool who to one is confin'd.

At the first going down, a Woman is good, But when e'er she comes up, I'll ne'r chew the Cud, But out she shall go, And I'll serve 'em all so. When with one my stomach is cloy'd, Another shall soon be enjoy'd. Then how happy, how happy are we? Let the Coxcomb, when weary, drudge on, And foolishly stay when he wou'd fain be gone. Poor Fool ! how unhappy is he? Chor. At the first going down, &c.

Let the Rabble obey, I'll live like a Man, Who, by Nature, is free to enjoy all he can: Wife Nature does teach More truth than Fools preach; They bind us, but she gives us ease. I'll revel and love where I please. She, she's my infallible Guide. But were the bless' d freedom deni' d Of variety in the things we love best, Dull Man were the slavishest Beast. Chor. Let the Rabble obey, & c.

D. Joh.

D. Job. Come, how do you like this? let's be merry, my Brides.

4. Wom. O monstrous Traitor! do you mock our milery?

D. Joh. Good Spoule, be not passionate_____ faith we'll have a Dance. Strike up ______ [Dance.

D. Lop. Be comforted, good Ladies; you have Companions in your misfortunes

D. Ant. He has been marri'd in all the Cities of Spain; what a breed of Don Johns thall we have?

D. Job. Come, Sweethearts; you must be civil to these Gentlemen; they are my Friends, and men of Honour.

6. Wom. Men of Honour! they are Devils if they be your Friends.

D. Job. I hate unreasonable, unconscionable fellows, who when they are weary of their Wives, will still keep 'em from other men. Gentlemen, ye shall command mine.

4. Wom. Thinkeft thou I will out-live this affront?

D. Job. I'll trust you for that, there's ne'r a Lucrece now adays, the Sex has learnt more wit fince. Let me see, Antonio, thou shalt have for thy present use, let me see, my sixth Wise — 'faith se a pretty buxom Wench, and deserves hearty usage from thee.

6. Wom. Traitor! I'll be reveng'd on all thy treachery.

Ant. A mettel'd Girl, I like her well: she'll endure a Rape gallantly. I love resistance, it endears the pleasure.

D. Job. And, Lopez, thou shalt have, let me see, ay, my fourth Spous; she's a brave Virago; and Gad if I had not been something familiar with her already, I would venture my life for her.

4. Wom. Vile Wretch! think it thou I will out-live this affront? Impious Villain! though thou halt no fense of Vertue or Honour left, thou shalt find I have.

D. Job. Vertue and Honour ! There's nothing good or ill, but as it feems to each man's natural appetite, if they will confent fieely. You must ravish friends: 'that's all I know, you must ravish.

1. Wom. Unheard of Villany ! Fly from this Hellish place. Ant. Ladies, you shall fly, but we must ravish first.

(27)

D. Lop. Yes, I assure you we must ravish-

4. Wom. No, Monster, I'll prevent you.

[Stabs her sclf.

Jac.

D. Ant. Sdeath, she's as good as her word. The first time I e'r knew a Woman so.

D. Lop. Pox on't, the has prevented me; the's dead.

D. Job. Say you so ? well, go thy ways, thou wer't a Girl of pretty parts, that's the truth on't; but I ne'r thought this had been in thee.

2. Wom. Thefe, fure, are Devils in the fhape of men.

D. Joh. Now fee my providence, if I had been marri'd to none but her, I had been a Widdower.

I. Wom. Ohorror! horror! flie! flie!

6. Wom. No, I'll be reveng'd first on this barbarous Wretch.

D. Job. Why look you, here's a Wench of mettle for you; go ravish quickly_____

6. Wom. Let's fly, and call for help, fome in the ftreet may help us _____ [They all run off, crying, Help, murder, murder!

D. Ant. Let 'em go, they are confin'd, they cann't get out.

D. Jok. It shall ne'r be said that a Woman went out of this house Reinfecta; but after that, 'twill be time for us to fly.

D. Lop. We have hir'd a Vessel, the Master is a brave Rogue of my acquaintance; he has been a Bandit.

D. Ant. A brave honeft wicked Fellow as heart can wish, I have ravish'd, robb'd, and murder'd with him.

D. Job. That's well. Hey, where are my Rogues? Hey!

Enter Servant and Jacomo.

Here, Sirra, do you send my Goods on Board.

Ant. My Man will direct you.

D. Job. Come, Sirra, do you remove this Body to another Room

Jac. O horrid fact ! what, another Murder ! what fhall I do ? D. Job. Leave your complaints, you Dog; I'll fend you after her.

Jac. Oh ! I fhall be hang'd, I fhall be hang'd. D. Joh. Take her up, Rafcal 3 or I'll cut your throat.

D. Job. Now, Sirra, do you run into the ftreets, and force in: the next Woman you meet, or I'll cut your Wind-pipe; and let nobody out-

Jac. What hellish fact will he now commit?

D. Joh. Take her up, you Hen-hearted compassionate Rascal. 'Jac. Heav'n! what will become of me? Oh! Oh ---

Carries her off. D. Joh. Now, Gentlemen, you shall see I'll be civil to you, you shall not ravish alone: indeed I am loath to meddle with. mine old acquaintance, but if my Man can meet with a Woman I have not lain withall, I'll keep you company; let her be old or young, ugly or handfome, no matter.

D. Lop. Faith I will ever fay, you are a well bred man. D. Ant. A very civil perfon, a man of Honour.

Enter Servant, forcing in an ugly old Woman, who cries out.

D. Job. This unlucky Rogue has made but a fcurvy choice. but I'll keep my word. Come, Bawd, you must be ravish'd. Bawd.

Old. Wom. O murder! murder! help! help! I was never ravish'd in my life.

D. Joh. That I dare fwear; but to fhow I am a very vigorous man, I'll begin with you. But, you Rafcal, Jaccall, I'll make you. Cater better next time.

Serv. Indeed, Sir, this was the first I met.

D. Job. Come on, Beldam, thy face shall not protect thee.

Old Wom. Oh my Honour! my Honour! help, help, my Honour!

D. Job. Come to our business.

leagu'ring us, it should not divert me from this Exploit.

D. Ant. Norme.

D. Lop. Nor me : let's on.

D. Job. Keep the doors fast, Sirra. Come on.

Jac. Oh what will become of me! Oh Heav'n! mercy on me! Oh! Oh! [Exeunt.

In Man's habit, Enter Maria, and her Maid Flora.

Mar. Thus I have abandon'd all my Fortune, and laid by My Sex. Revenge for thee. Affift me now, You Inftruments of Bloud, for my dear Brothers, And for my much more dear Octavio's fake. Where are my Bravo's?

Flo. They have befet the Villains Houfe, And he shall ne'r come out alive.

Mar.O let 'em show no more remorfe, Than hungry Lions o'r their prey will. How miferable am I made by that Inhumane Monster! No favage Bealt, Wild Deferts e'r brought forth, provok'd By all its hunger, and its natural rage, Could yet have been fo cruel. Oh my Octavio ! whether art thou fled, From the most loving and most wretched Creature of her Sex? What Ages of delight Each hour with thee brought forth! How much, when I had thee, was all the world Unenvi'd by me!. Nay, I piti'd all my Sex, That cou'd have nothing worth their care, Since all the treasure of Mankind was mine. Methought I cou'd look down on Queens, when he Was with me: but now, compar'd to me, How happy is the Wretched, whole finews Crack upon the merciles Engine Of his torture? I live with greater torments then he dies.

Flo. Leave your complaints. Tears are no Sacrifice for bloud.

Mar. Now my just grief to just revenge give place. I am atham'd of these foft Tears, till I've Reveng'd thy horrid Murder. Oh that I could Make the Villain linger out an Age in Torments! But I will revel in his bloud: Oh. I could fuck the laft drop that warms the Monfter's heart, that might infpire me with Such cruelty, as vile Man, with all his horrid Arts of power, is yet a stranger to; Then I might root out all his curfed Race.

Flo. I'll follow all your Fortunes, my dear Lady; Had I ten thousand lives, in this cause I'd Venture one by one to my last stake.

Mar. Thou art my dear and faithful Creature; Let not thy Fortunes thus be wrack'd with mine. Be gone, and leave thy most unhappy Mistris; One that has mileries enow to link the Sex.

Flo. I will not leave you, till death takes me from you.

Mar.O that I had been fome poor loft Mountain Girl, Nurs'd up by Goats, or fuckl'd by wild Beafts, Exposid to all the rage of heats and killing colds. I ne'r could have been aband on'd to fuch fury. More favage cruelty reigns in Cities, Than ever yet in Defarts among the Most venomous Serpents, and remorfless Ravenous Beafts, could once be found. So much has barb'rous Art debauch'd n's innocent Nature. Flo. Lay by your tears, till your revenge be finish'd 5 Man's innocent Nature.

Then, then you may have leifure to complain.

Mar. I will : 'tis bloud I now must spill, or Lofe my own in th'attempt. But if I can Have the fortune, with my own hand, to reach The Dogs vile heart: I then shall die Contented, and in the other World I'll Torture him fo, Devils shall learn of me to Usethe Damn'd.

Flo. Let's to our Sacred Instruments of revenge.

Mar.

Mar. Come on : fo just a cause would turn the Vilest Ruffian to a Saint.

[Bravo's watch at Don John's house.

Maria and Flora re-enter.

Mar. Come, friends, let once a Woman preach courage To you, infpir'd by my just rage this Arm Shall teach you wonders. I'll shew you now What Love with just Revenge can do.

1. Brav. We are so practis'd in the trade of death, We need no teaching.

Mar. There's Gold good ftore; if you difpatch the Dog, I'll give you yet much more; if not, If all the wealth I have can buy your lives, I'll have 'em in ftead of his.

Enter Don John, Don Antonio, Don Lopez, Jacome.

D. Job. Now we have finish'd our defign; let's make a Salley, and raise the Siege.

D. Ant. Jacomo, doyou lead the Van.

D. Lop. Lead on, Jacomo, or we are fure to lofe you; you are not good at bringing up the Rear.

Jac. Nay, good Gentlemen, I know my felf better than to take place of Men of Quality, especially upon this occasion.

D. Job. Sirra, go on: I'll prick him forward. Remember, if you do not fight, I am behind you.

Jac. Oh Heav'n! Oh Jacomo! what will become of thy dear perfon? Is this your Courage to put me forward, to what you dare not meet your felves?

D. Joh. No words, Rogue, on, or, I fay ----

Jac. O I shall be murder'd ! murder'd! Oh! Oh!

D. Joh. On, on, you Dog.

D. 70%.

Jac. Inhumane Master !, It must be so ! Heav'n have mercy on my better part.

Enter Maria.

Mar. Fall on, fall on, that's the Villain! Have at you, Dog---D. Job. Courage, Jacomo.

Mar. Poor Flora! But, Dog, I'll be reveng'd on thee yet ere I die.

Enter Don Lopez, Don Antonio, Jacomo.

Jac. What ! no thanks ! no reward !

D. Job. What's the matter, Sirra ?

Jac. What, no acknowledgment? you are but an ungrateful man, let me tell you that, to treat a man of my prowels thus.

D. Job. What has your valour done?

Jac. Nothing, nothing; fav'd your life onely, that's all: but men of valour are nothing now adays. 'Tis an ungrateful Age. Ifought like a Hero ----

D. Ant. Call'd a Stag at Bay.

D. Lop. You can fight, when there's no way of escape, without it.

Jac. Oh! what's here ! another murder ! fly, fly; we fhall be hang'd.

D. Job. Come on! let's now to Sea to try our fortunes. Jac. Ay, make hafte; I've laid Horfes, and will fhift by Land. Farewell, Sir; a good Voyage_____

D. Job. I will murder you, if you refuse to go to Sea-Jac. O, good Sir, confider, do but confider; I am fo Sea-fick always: that wicked Element does not agree with me.

D. Joh. Dare you dispute ! go on, I say.

Jac. O, good Sir, think, think a little; the merciles Waves will never confider a man of parts: besides, Sir, I can swim no more than I can fly.

D. Job. I'll leave you dead upon the place, if you refuse.

Jac. O Sir, on my knees I beg you'll let me stay. I am the last of all my Family ; my Race will fail, if I should fail.

D. Joh. Damn your Race ----

D. Ant. Do not we venture with you ?

Jac. You have nothing but your lives to venture, but I have a whole Family to fave ; I think upon Posterity. Besides, Gentlemen, I can look for no fafety in such wicked company.

D. Joh. I'll kill the Villain. His fear will elfe betray us.

7ac. Ohold! hold! for Heav'ns fake hold —

[Ghost of Don John's Father rifes.

Ghost. Hold! hold!

Jac. Ay, hold, hold. Oh Heav'n! your Father's Ghoft; a Choft! a Ghoft! Oh! [Falls down and roars.

D. Job. 'Sdeath! what'shere? my Fatheralive!

Ghoft. No, no; inhumaue Murderer, I am dead.

D. Job. That's well; I was afraid the old Gentleman had come for his Eftate again ; if you wou'd have that, 'tis too late ; 'tis fpent -----

Ghoft. Monster! behold these wounds.

D. Job. I do; they were well meant, and well perform'd, I fee.

D. Ant. This is strange ! how I am amaz'd!

D. Lop. Unheard of Wonder! ----

Ghoft. Repent, repent of all thy villanies;

My clamorous blood to Heav'n for vengeance cries.

Heav'n will pour out his judgmentson you all ; Hell gapes for you, for you each Fiend does call, And hourly waits your unrepenting fall. You with eternal horrours they'l torment, Except of all your crimes you fuddenly repent.

Gbost finks. Yac. Oh! Heav'n deliver me from these Monsters.

D. Job. Farewell, thou art a foolish Ghost; Repent, quoth he! what could this mean? our senses are all in a mist fure.

D. Ant. They are not, 'twas a Ghoft.

D. Lop. I ne'r believ'd those foolish Tales before.

D. Joh. Come, 'tisno matter ; let it be what it will, it must be natural

D. Ant. And Nature is unalterable in us too.

D. Joh. 'Tis true, the nature of a Ghost cannot change ours.

D. Lop. It was a filly Ghost, and I'll no sooner take his word than a Whores.

D. Job. Thou art in the right. Come, Fool, Fool, rife; the Ghoft is gone.

Fac. Oh ! I die, I die ; pray let me die in quiet.

D. Ant. Oh ! if he be dying, take him up; we'll give him burial in the Sea. Come on.

Jac. Hold, hold, Gentlemen; bury me not till I am dead, I befeech you_____

D. Job If you be not, Sirra, I'll run you through.

Jac. Hold, hold, Sir, I'll go, I'll go_____

D. Lop. Let's on.

D. Jok. Should all the Bugbears Cowards feign appear, I would urge on without one thought of fear.

D. Ant. And I.

D. Lop. And I.___

ACT III.

Enter Don John, Don Lopez, Don Antonio, Jacomo, Captain of the Ship, Master and Sailors.

Mast. MErcy upon us! what sudden dreadful storm is this? we are all lost; we shall split upon the Rocks. Loof, loof

Jac. Oh ! Oh ! Mercy ! Oh I was afraid of this ! See what your wickedness has brought me to ? Mercy ! mercy !

D. Joh. Takeaway thy Cowardly face, it offends me, Rascal.

Capt. Such dreadful claps of Thunder I never yet remember'd. D. Job.Let the Clowds roar on, and vomit all their Sulphur out, they ne'r fhall fright me.

D. Ant. These are the Squibs and Crackers of the Sky.

D. Lop. Fire on, fire on; we are unmov'd.

Capt. The Heav'ns are all on fire; these unheard of Prodigies amaze me.

D. Job. Can you, that have ftood fo many Cannons, be frighted at the farting and the belching of a Clowd?

Mast. Bless me, Captain! fix of our Foremast men are even now struck dead with Lightning.

Sail. O that clap has rent our Masts in funder.

Jac. O we are loft! You can fwim, Sir; pray fave me, Sir, for my own and Family's fake. ——

D.Joh. Tofs these cowardly Rogues over-board. Captain, Courage! let the Heav'ns do their worst, 'tis but drowning at last.

Jac. But---- in the name of Heav'n, but drowning, quoth he; your drowning will prepare you for burning, though Oh, Oh, Oh —

Sail. Captain, Captain, the Ship's on fire in the Forecastle-----

Capt. All hands to work upon the Forecastle. Heav'n! how it blazes already! _____ [Exit Captain.

Jac. Oh! Oh! we burn, we drown, we fink, Oh! we perifh, we are loft, we are loft. Oh, Oh, Oh.

Maft.

Mast. O horrid Apparitions! Devilsstand and guard the fire, and will not suffer us to quench it. We are lost.

Enter Captain.

Capt. In all the dangers I have been, fuch horrors I never knew; I am quite unmann'd.

D. Lop. A man and fear: 'tis but dying at laft.

D. Joh. I never yet could know what that foolifh thing Fear is.

Capt. Help, help, the fire increases. What horrid fights are these? where e'r I turn me, fearful Spirits appear.

Exeunt Captain and Sailers.

D. Joh. Let's into the Boat, and with our Swords keep out all others.

D. Ant. While they are busic 'bout the fire we may 'scape.

D. Lop. If we get from hence, we certainly shall perish on the Rocks _____

D. Job. I warrant you____

Jac. O good Gentlemen, let us shift for our selves, and let the rest burn, or drown, and be damn'd and they will.

D. Job. No, you have been often leaving me: now shall be the time we'll part. Farewell.

Jac. Oh! I'll stand by you while I live. Oh the Devil, the Devil! What horrors do I feel? Oh I am kill'd, I am dead!

> [AThunder-clap strikes Don John and Jacomo down.

D. Job. 'Sdeath! why this to me? you paltry foolifh bugbear Thunder, am I the mark of your fenfless rage?

D. Lop. Nothing but accident. Let's leap into the Boat.

D. Ant. The Sailors all make towards us; they'll in and fink it.

D. Joh. Sirra, if you come on, you run upon my Sword.

Jac. O cruel Tyrant ! I burn, I drown, I fink ! Oh I die, I am loft.

Capt. All shift aboard; we perish, we are lost. Mast. All lost, all lost.

[A great shreik, they all leap over-board. Enter

Enter an old Hermit.

Her. This fourty years I've liv'd in this neigbouring Cave, and from these dreadful Cliffs which are always beaten by the foaming Surges of the Sea; beheld the Ocean in its wildestrage, and ne'r yet faw a storm so dreadful: such horrid flasses of lightning, and such claps of thunder, never were in my remembrance. Yon Ship is all on fire, and the poor miserable Wretches must all perish. The dreadful object melts my heart, and brings a floud of tears into my eyes: It is prodigious, for on the sudden, all the Heavens are clear again, and the inraged Sea is become more patient.

Enter Don Francisco.

D. Fran. Oh Father, have you not been frighted at this prodigious ftorm, and at you dreadful spectacle ?

Herm. No man that has an apprehension, but wou'd have been mov'd with horrour.

D. Franc.'Twas the most violent Tempest I ever faw. Hold, yonder are some coming in a small Vessel, and must necessarily split upon the Rock; I'll go and help to succour 'em.

Herm. Here are some this way, just come in a small Boat : Go you to those, and these I will affist_____

D. Fran. I'll haste to their relief _____ [Exit Don Fran. Herm. Hah! these are come safe to Land, three men, goodly men they seem to be; I am bound in charity to serve them: they come towards me.

Enter Don John, Don Antonio, and Don Lopez.

D. Job. Much ado we are safe, but my Man's lost; pox on him, I shall miss the Fool, it was a necessary Blockhead.

D. Ant. But you have lost your Goods, which were more neceffary.

D. Lop. Our Jewels and Money we have all about us.

D. Job. It makes me laugh to think, how the Fools we left behind behind were puzzl'd which death to chufe, burning or drowning_____

D. Ant. But how shall we dispose of our selves, we are plaguy wet and cold. Hah! what old Fool is that?

D. Lop. It is an Hermit, a fellow of mighty Beard and Sanctity. D. Job. I know not what Sanctity he may have, but he has Beard enough to make an Owl's Neft, or ftuff a Saddle with.

Herm. Gentlemen, I see you are shipwrack'd, and in distress; and my Function obliges me in charity to succour you in what I may.

D. Ant. Alas! what canst thou help us to? dost thou know of ever a house near hand, where we may be furnished with some necessaries?

Herm. On the other fide of this valt Rock, there is a fertile and a pleafant Valley, where one Don Francisco, a rich and hofpitable man, has a fweet Dwelling; he will entertain you nobly: He's gone to affift fome fhipwrack'd perfons, and will be here prefently. In the mean time, what my poor Cave can afford, you fhall be welcome to.

D. Lop. What can that afford ? you oblige your felf to fasting and abstinence _____

Herm. I have ftudi'd Phyfick for the relief of needy people, and I have fome Cordials which will refresh you; I'll bring one to you ______ [Exit Hermit.

D. Job. A good civil old Hipocrite : but this is a pleafant kind of Religion, that obliges 'em to naftinefs and want of meat. I'll ha' none on't.

D. Ant. No, nor of any other, to my knowledge.

Enter Hermit with a Cordial.

Herm: Gentlemen, pray tafte of this Vial, it will comfort your cold ftomachs.

D. 70h. Ha! 'tis excellent 'faith. Let it go round.

Herm. Heav'n bless it to you.

D. Lop. Ha! it warms.

D. Ant. Thank thee, thou art a very honest old fellow i'faith. D. Jok. I fee thou art very civil; but you must supply us with with one neceffary more; a very neceffary thing, and very refreshing.

Herm. What's that, Sir?

D. Job. It is a Whore, a fine young buxom Whore.

D. Lop. S A Whore, Old man, a Whore.

Herm. Bless me, are you Men or Devils ?____

D. Joh. Men, men, and men of luft and vigour. Pre'thee, old Sot, leave thy prating, and help me to a Strumpet, a fine falacious Strumpet; I know you Zealots have enough of 'em. Women love your godly Whore-mafters.

Herm. O Monsters of impiety! are you so lately scap'd the wrath of Heaven, thus to provoke it?

D. Ant. How ! by following the Dictates of Nature, who can do otherwife?

D. Lop. All our actions are neceffitated, none command their own wills.

Herm. Oh horrid blasphemy! would you lay your dreadful and unheard of Vices upon Heaven? No, ill men, that has given you free-will to good.

D. Joh. I find thou retir'sthere, and never readst or thinkst. Can that blind faculty the Will be free, When it depends upon the Understanding?

Which argues first before the Will can chuse ; And the last Dictate of the Judgment sways The Will, asin a Balance, the last Weight Put in the Scale, lifts up the other end, And with the fame Neceffity.

Herm. But foolifh men and finners act against Their Understandings, which inform 'em better.

D. Ant. None willingly do anything against the last Dictates of their Judgments, whatfoe'r men do, Their prefent opinions lead 'em to.

D. Lep. As fools that are afraid of fin, are by the thought Of prefent pleafure, or fome other cafon, Necessarily byafs'd to purfue

The opinion they are of ar

D. Foh. better.

D. Job. The Understanding never can be free; For what we understand, spite of our selves we do: All objects are ready form'd and plac'd To our hands; and these the Senses to the Mind convey, And as those represent them, this must judge: How can the Will be free, when the Understanding, On which the Will depends, cannot be so.

Herm. Layby your devillish Philosophy, and change the dangerous and destructive course of your leud lives.

D. Ant. Change our natures? Go bid a Blackamore be white, wefollow our Conftitutions, which we did not give our felves.

D. Lop. What we are, we are by Nature, our reason tells us we must follow that.

D. Job. Our Conftitutions tell us one thing, and yours another; and which must we obey? If we behad, 'tis Nature's fault that madeus so.

Herm. Farewell. I dare no longer- hear your impious difcourfe. Such harden'd Wretches I ne'r heard of yet.

Exit Hermit.

D. Ant. Farewell, old Fool.

D. Job. Thus Sots condemn what they can never answer.

Enter Don Francisco.

This I believe is Francisco, whom he spoke of; if he has but a handsome Wife, or Daughters, we are happy.

D. Lop. Sir, we are fhipwrack'd men, and if you can direct us to a place, where we may be furnish'd with some necessaries, you will oblige us ———

D. Franc. Gentlemen, I have a Houfe hard by, you shall be welcome to it: I even now endeavoured to succour a Youth and beauteous Woman, who, with two Sailors, in a Boat, were driven towards these Rocks, but were forc'd back again, and, I fear, are lost by this time. I defire nothing more, than to affiss men in extremes, and am o'rjoy'd at the opportunity of ferving you.

D. Joh. We thank you.

D. Fran. You shall command my House as long as you please: I see I fee you are Cavaliers, and hope you will bear with fome inconvenience. I have two young, and, though I fay it, handfome Daughters, who are, to morrow morning to be marri'd; the Solemnity will bring much company together, which, I fear, may incommode my houfe and you - ----

D. Ant. You pose us with this kindness.

D. Job. What ever pleases you, cannot be inconvenient to us.

D. Lop. On the contrary, we shall be glad to affist you at the Ceremony, and help to make up the joyful Chorus.

D. Fran. You shall command my house and me; I'll shew you the way to it

D. Joh. Your humble Servant. We'll follow you.

[Exit Don Francisco.

This is an admirable adventure. He has Daughters, Boys, and to be marri'd too: If they have been fo foolifh, to preferve those Toys, they call Maidenheads; their fenfless Husbands shall not be troubled with them: I'll ease them of those. Pox, what should those dull Drudging Animals, call'd Husbands, do with such Treasures: No, they are for honest Whore-masters, Boys.

D. Ant. Well faid, Don; we will not be wanting in our endeavours to fucceed you.

D. Lop. To you alone we must give place. Allons. [Exeunt.

Enter Hermit, Maria in Man's habit, and Leonora.

Herm. Heaven be prais'd, you are fafely now on Land. Mar. We thank you, reverend Father, for your affiftance. Leon. We never thall forget the obligation.

Herm. I am happy to be fo good an Instrument.

Leon. We follow'd a Veffel, which we faw fir'd with Lightning, and we fear that none of 'em escap'd.

Mar. I hope the Villain I purfue has fcap'd. I would not be reveng'd by Heaven, but my own hand; or, if not by that, by the Hangman's.

Leon. Did any come to L and? for I most nearly am concern'd or one; the grief for whom, if he beloft, will foon, I fear, deftroy me.

Herm. Here were three of that company came fafe to Land; but fuch impious Wretches, as did not deferve to escape, and fuch as no vertuous person can be concern'd for, fure; I was stiff with fear and horrour when I heard 'em talk.

Mar. Three, fay you?

Leon. By this fad description it must be Don John, and his two wicked Affociates; I am asham'd to confess the tenderness I have for him. Why should I love that Wretch? Oh my too violent passion hurries me I know not whether ! into what fearful dangerous Labyrinths of misery will it conduct me?

Mar. Were they Gentlemen?

Herm. By their out-fides they seem'd so, but their in-fides declar'd them Devils.

Mar. Heaven! it must be the Villain and his barbarous Companions. They are referv'd for my revenge:

Affist me, Heaven, in that just cause.

Oh, Villain, Villain! inhumane Villain! Each minute is, me-thinks, a tedious Age, Till I have dipt my hands in thy hearts bloud.

Herm. You feem o'r-joy'd at the news of their fafe arrival : Can any have a kindnels for fuch diffolute abandon'd Atheifts ?

Mar. No; 'tis revenge that I perfue against the baseft of all Villains.

Herm. Have a care; Revenge is Heavens, and must not be usurp'd by Mortals.

Mar. Mine is revenge for Rapes and cruel murders, and those Heaven leaves to Earth to punish.

Herm. They are horrid crimes, but Magistrates must punish them.

Leon. What do I hear? were he the bafeft of all men, my love is fohead-ftrong and fo wild within me, I muft endeavour to preferve him, or deftroy my felf: to what deplorable condition am I fall'n? what Chains are these that hold me? Oh that. I could break them ! and yet I wou'd not if I cou'd; Oh my heart!

Herm. They are gon to one Don Francisco's house, that Road will will bring you to it; 'tis on the other fide of this Rock, in a pleafant Valley. I have not ftirr'd these fourty years from these small bounds, or I wou'd give him notice what Devils he harbours in his house. You will do well to do it.

Jac. (within) Help, help, murder! I am drown'd, I am dead; Help, help!

Herm. Hah! what voice is that? I must affist him____

Mar. Father, farewell. Come, Madam, will you go to this houfe? Now, Monster, for my revenge.

Leon. I will ; but for different ends we go ; 'Tis Love conducts me, but Revenge brings you.

[Exeunt Maria, Leonora.

7ac.Oh help, help! I fink, I fink!

Herm. Poor man, fure he is almost drown'd.

Jac. No, not yet; I have onely drunk fomething too much of a fourvy unpleafant Liquor.

Herm. Reach me your hand ----

FPulls him out.

But

Fac. Ay, and my heart too; Oh! Oh!

Sir, a thousand thanks to you: I vow to Gad, y'are a very civil perfon, and, as I am an honess man, have done me the greatess kindness in the world, next to the piece of the Mast which I floated upon, which I must ever love and honour; I am forry it fwam away, I wou'd have preferv'd it, and hung it up in the Seat of our antient Family.

Herm. Thank Heaven for your deliverance, and leave fuch vain thoughts.

Jac. I do with all my heart; but I am not fetled enough to fay my prayers yet: pray, Father, do you for me; 'tis nothing with you, you are us'd to it, it is your Trade.

Herm. Away, vain man; you speak as if you had drunk too deeply of another Liquor than Sea-water.

Jac. No, I have not, but I wou'd fain: Where may a man light of a good Glassof Wine? I would gladly have an Antidote to my Poison. Methinks, Pah! these Fishes have but a foury time; I am fure they have very ill drinking.

Herm. Farewell, and learn more devotion and thankfulness to Heav'n ______ [Exit Hermit, Jac.Ha! 'tis uncivilly done to leave a man in a ftrange Country.

But these Hermits have no breeding. Poor Jacomo, Dear Jacomo, how I love thy perfon, how glad am I to fee thee fafe? for I fwear, I think thou art as honeft a fellow as e'r I met with. Well, farewell, thou wicked Element; if ever I trust thee again _____ Well, Haddocks, I defie you, you shall have none of me, no, not a Collop; no, no, I will be eaten by Worms, as all my Ancestors have been. If Heaven will but preferve me from the Monsters of the Land, my Master and his two Companions (who, I hope, are drown'd) I'll preferve my felf from those of the Sea. Let me see, here is a path _____ this must lead to fome house. I'll go, for I am plaguy fick with this Salt-water. Pah____ Exit Jacomo.

Enter Clara and Flavia, with her two Maids.

Clar. Oh, Flavia, this will be our last happy night, to morrow is our Execution day; we must marry.

Flav. Ay, Clara, we are condemn'd without reprieve. 'Tis better to live as we have done, kept from all men, than for each to be confin'd to one, whom yet we never faw, and a thousand to one fhall never like.

Clar. Out on't, a Spanish Wife has a worse life than a coop'd Chicken.

. Flaw. A finging Bird in a Cage is a Princely creature, compar'd to that poor Animal, call'd a Wife, here.

Clar. Birds are made tame by being cag'd, but Women grow wild by confinement, and that, I fear, my Husband will find to his coft.

Flav. None live pleafantly here, but those who should be miserable, Strumpets: They can choose their Mates, but we must be like Slaves condemn'd to the Gallies; we have not liberty to fell our Selves, or venture one throw for our freedom.

Clar. O that we were in England! there, they fay, a Lady may choose a Footman, and run away with him, if she likes him, and no dishonour to the Family.

Flav. That's because the Families are fo very Honourable, that nothing can touch them: there Wives run and ramble whither and with whom they pleafe, and defie all cenfure.

Clar.

Clar. Ay, and a jealous Husband is a more monstrous Greature there, than a Wittall here, and wou'd be more pointed at: They fay, if a man be jealous there, the women wilf all joyn and pull him to pieces.

Flav. Oh happy Countrey! we ne'r touch money, there the Wives can fpend their Husbands Eftates for 'em. Oh blefs'd Countrey!

Clar. Ay, there, they fay, the Husbands are the prettieft civil eafie good natur'd indifferent perfons in the whole world; they ne'r mind what their Wives do, not they.

Flav. Nay, they fay, they love those men best that are kindess to their Wives. Good men! poor hearts. And here, if an honess Gentleman offers a Wise a civility by the By, our bloudy butcherly Husbands are cutting of throats presently _____ Clar. Oh that we had those frank civil Englishmen, instead of our grave dull furly Spanish Blockheads, whose greatest honour lies, in preferving their Beards and Foreheads inviolable.

Flav. In England, if a Husband and Wife like not one another, they draw two feveral ways, and make no bones on't, while the Husband treats his Miftris openly in his Glafs-Coach; the Wife, for decency's fake, puts on her Vizar, and whips away in a Hackney with a Gallant, and no harm done.

Clar. Though, of late, 'tis as unfashionable' for 'a Husband to love his Wife there, as 'tis here, yet 'tis fashionable for her to love fome body elfe, and that's something.

Flav. Nay, theyfay, Gentlemen will keep company with a Cuckold there, as foon as another man, and ne'r wonder at him.

Clar. Oh happy Countrey! there a Woman may chufe for her felf, and none will into the Trap of Matrimony, unlefs the likes the Bait; but here we are tumbl'd headlong and blindfold into it.

Flav. We are us'd as they use Hawks, never unhooded, or whistled off, till they are just upon the Quarry.

Clar. And 'tis for others, not our felves, we fly too.

Flav. No more, this does but put us in mind of our milery.

Clar. It does so : but prethee let's be merry one night, to morrow is our last. Farewell all happiness.

Flav. O that this happy day would last our lives-time. But prethee,

D. Ant. You may be fure of us, that have ferv'd you with our lives; belides, the justice of this caufe will make us ferve you. Adieu. [Exeunt Don Lop. Don. Ant.

D. Job. Nowfor my Virgins. Affiltme, Love. Fools, you shall have no Maiden-heads to morrow-night. Husbands have Maiden-heads! no, no — poor sneaking Fools.

Enter Jacomo.

Jac. I have lost my way, I think I shall never find this house: But I shall never think my felf out of my way, unless I meet my impious Master; Heaven grant hebe drown'd.

D. Joh. How now, Rafcal, are you alive?

Jac. Oh Heaven! he's here. Why was this leud Creature fav'd? Tam in a worfe condition than ever 3 now I have fcap'd drowning, he brings hanging fresh into my memory.

D. Job. What mute, Sirra?

Jac. Sir, I am no more your Servant, you parted with me, I thank you, Sir, I am beholding to you: Farewell, good Sir, I am my own man now_____

D. Joh. No: though you are a Rogue, you are a neceffary Rogue, and I'll not part with you.

Fac. I must be gone, I dare not venture further with you.

D. Job. Sirra, do you know me, and dare you fay this to me? have at your Guts, I will rip you from the Navel to the Chin.

Clar. Ha ! this is the Stranger ; What makes him here ?

D. Job. A delicate Creature. Ha! this is the Lady. How happy am I to meet you here

Clar. What mean you, Sir?

D. Joh. I was undone enough before, with feeing your Picture in the Gallery; but I fee you have more Excellencies than Beauty, your Voice needed not have confpir'd with that to ruine me.

Clar. Have you seen my Picture?

D. Joh. And lov'dit above all things I ever faw, but the Original. I am loft beyond redemption, unlefs you can pity me.

Jac. (aside) He has been lost a hundred times, but he always finds himself again —— and me too; a pox on him.

D. Joh. When Love had taken too fast hold on me, ever to let me go, I too late found you were to morrow to be marri'd.

Clar. Yes, I am condemn'd to one I never faw, and you are come to railly me and my misfortunes.

Jac. Ah, Madam, fay not fo, my Master is always in earnest.

D. Job. So much I am in earneft now, that if you have no way to break this marriage off, and pity me, I foon thall repent I ever came to Land; I thall fuffer a worfe wrack upon the Shoar, here I thall linger out my life in the worft of pains, defpairing Love; there, I thould have perifh'd quickly _____

D. Joh. Difpole of your felf, I'll do well enough with him, and my Fortune and Quality are too great for him, for whom you are intended, to difpute with me.

Clar. If this be true, wou'd you win a Woman at first fight?

D. Joh. Madam, this is like to be the first and last; to morrow is the fatal day that will undo me.

Fac. Courage, Don, matters go well.

Clar. Nay, I had rather have a Peafant of my own chooling, than an Emperor of another's. He is a handfome Gentleman, and feems to be of quality: Oh that he could rid me of my intended flavery.

Sir, talk not of imposiible things; for could I wish this, my Father's Honour will not suffer him to dispense with his promise.

D. Joh. I'll carry you beyond his power, and your intended Husband's too.

Clar. It cannot be; but I must leave you, I dare not be seen with you_____

D. Job. Remember the fhort time you have to think on this: will you let me perifh without relief? if you will have pity on a wretched man, I have a Prieft in my company, I'll marry you, and we'll find means to fly early in the morning, before the houfe are ftirring.

Clar. I confess I am to be condemn'd to a Slavery, that nothing can be worfe ; yet this were a rash attempt.

D. Job. Here is the other Sifter; have at her.

Jac. Why, Sir, Sir; have you no confeience?

Will not one at once ferve your turn?

D. Joh. Stand by, Fool. Let me fee, you are the Lady. Flav. What fay you, Sir?

D. Job. You have lately taken up a ftray heart of mine, I hope you do not intend to detain it, without giving me your own in exchange.

Flav. I a heart of yours? fince when, good Sir? you were but this day (hipwrack'd on this Coaft, and never faw my face before.

D. Joh. I faw your Picture, and I faw your motion, both fo charming, I could not refift them; but now I have a nearer view, I fee plainly I am loft.

Flav. A goodly handsome man! but what can this mean?

D. Job. Such killing Beauties I ne'r faw before; my heart is irrevocablygone.

Flav. Whether is it gone, Sir? I affure you I have no fuch thing about me, that I know of.

D. Joh. Ah, Madam, if you wou'd give me leave to fearch you, I fhould find it in fome little corner about you, that fhall be namelefs.

Flav. It cannot be about me, I have none but my own, and H 2 that that I must part with to morrow to I know not whom.

D. Job. If the most violent love that man e'r knew can e'r deferve that treasure, it ismine; if you give that away, you lose the truest Lover that e'r languish'd yet.

Jac. What can be the end of this? Sure Bloud must follow this dishonour of the Family, and I unfortunate, shall have my throat cut for company.

Flav. Do you know where you are?

D. Job. Yes, Madam, in Spain, where opportunities are very fcarce, and those that are wife make use of 'em as soon as they have 'em.

Flav. You have a mind to divert your felf; but I must leave you, I am dispos'd to be more ferious.

D. Job. Madam, I fwear by all____ fac. Hold, hold; will you be forfworn again?

D. Joh. Peace, Villain, I shall cut that tongue out.

D. Job. I'll not leave her; I'll thaw her, if the were Ice, before I have done with her.

Jac. There is no end of this lewdness. Well, I must be kill'd or hang'd once for all, and there's an end on't. [Exeunt.

Enter Maria and Leonora.

Leon. I am faint with what I fuffer'd at Sea, and with my wandring fince; let us repose a little, we shall not find this house to night.

Mar. I ne'r fhall reft till I have found Don Francisco's house; but I'll sit down a while.

Leon. I hope he will not find it, till I have found means to give Don John warning of his cruel intentions: I would fave his life, who, I fear, would not do that for me. But in the miferable cafe that I am in, if he denies his love, death would be the welcom'ft thing on earth to me.

Mar. Oh my Octavio! how does the loss of thee perplex me with defpair! the honour of Mankind is gone with thee. Why do I whine? grief shall no longer usurp the place of my revenge. How could I gnaw the Monster's heart, Villain! I'll be with you.

D. Lop. Th'old man's fafe; I long to know Don John's fuccels. D. Ant. He's engag'd upon a noble caufe: if he fucceeds, 'twill be a victory worth the owning.

D. Lop. Hah! whom have we here? a young man well habited, with a Lady too; they feem to be ftrangers.

D. Ant. A mischief comes into my head, that's worth the doing.

D. Lop. What's that, dear Antonio?

D. Ant. We are in a ftrange Countrey, and may want money : I would rob that young Fellow. We have not robb'd a good while; me-thinks'tis a new wickedness to me.

D. Lop. Thou art in the right. I hate to commit the fame dull fin over and over again, as if I were marri'd to it : variety makes all things pleafant.

D. Ant. But there's one thing we'll ne'r omit. When we have robb'd the Man, we'll ravish the Woman.

D. Lop. Agreed ; let's to't, man. Come on, young Gentleman, we must see what riches you have about you.

Mar. O Villains! Thieves! Thieves! these are the inhumane Companions of that bloudy Monster.

Enter Don John and Jacomo.

D. Job. I shall conquer'em both. Now, Sirra, what think you? Jac. Why I think you manage your business as differently, and take as much pains to have your throat cut, as any man in Spain.

D. Job. Your fear o'r-rules your fense, mine is a life Monarchs might envy.

Jac. 'Tis like to be a very flort one at this rate.

D. Joh. Away, Fool, 'tis dark, I must be gone; I shall scarce find the way home _____

Enter Leonora.

Leon. Heav'n guard me from these wicked Wretches. Help! help! they are here.

D. Joh. How now, Madam? what, afraid of a Man!

Leon. Don John, no, not of you; you are the man i'th' world I wou'd have met.

D. Job. Leonora, you are the woman i'th'world I would have avoided. 'Sdeath! fhe will fpoil my new defigns; but I have a trick for her. What miracle brought you hither?

Leon. Love, that works the greatest miracles, made me follow you; and the same Storm drove me on this shoar, on which you were thrown, and thus far I've wander'd till I have found you.

D. Job. This is the most unreasonable unsatiable loving Lady, that ever was abus'd by man; she has a kind of Spaniel love, the the worfe you use her, the more loving she is. Pox on her, I must be rid of her.

Leon. Iam very faint and weary, yet I was refolv'd not to reft till I had found you.

D. Joh. Your unweari'd love has o'rcome and convinc'd me, there is not fuch a Woman breathing.

Leon. This is a Sovereign Medicine for all my forrows, I now, methinks, am happier than ever : but I am faint and ill.

D. Job. Here, Madam, I have an excellent Cordial, 'twill refresh you ; and I'll conduct you where you shall never be unhappy more.

D. Job. And to your own destruction; you have drunk your last.

Drinks.

Leon. What means my Love?

D. Job. Y'have drunk the fubtleft poison that Art e'r yet invented.

Fac. O murder! murder! what have you done?

D. Job. Peace, Villain, leave your unseasonable pity ——— You cannot live two minutes.

Leon. O ungrateful Tyrant! thou haft murder'd the onely Creature living that cou'd love thee. Heaven will revenge it, though to me 'tis kindness. Here all my forrows shall for ever cease.

D. Job. Why would you perfecute me with your love?

Leon. I could not help it. I came to preferve you, and am deftroy'd for't.

Fac. Oh horrid fact!

D. Joh. To preferve me! I wear my fafety by my fide.

Leon.Oh I faint! Guard your felf. There's a young Gentleman purfues your life. Have a Care I came to tell you this, and thus I am rewarded. Heav'n pardon you. Farewell. I can no more.

Heav'n pardon you. Farewell. I can no more. [Dies. Jac. This object fure will ftrike your heart! Tygers would melt at this. Oh the Earth will open and fwallow you up, and me for company. There's no end of your murders —

D. Fran. These are to be my Sons in Law.

D. Job. And my Cuckolds before-hand.

D.Fran.Pray know 'em, Gentlemen ; they are men of Honour. D. Job. I shall be glad to ferve them ;

But first I'll ferve their Ladies.

D. Fran. Come, Gentlemen, I'll now conduct you to my Daughters; and beg your pardon for a moment, I'll wait on you again. [Exit Don Fran. and Bridegrooms.

D. Ant. These Fools will spoil your design.

D. Joh. No, poor Sots; I have perfwaded the Ladies to feign ficknefs, and put off their marriage till to morrow morning, to gain time; in the mean while I have 'em fafe, Boys.

D. Lop. But will not the Sifters betray you to one another?

D. Joh. No, I have wheedled each into a jealousie of the other, and each believes, that if the other knows it, she, in honour, will reveal it to the Father.

Jac. Sir, if you be fo very weary of your life, why don't you make use of a convenient Beam? 'tis the easier way; fo you may die without the filthy pother you keep about it.

D. Joh. Away, Coward ; 'tisa fign I aminot weary of my life, that I make fo much use on't.

Mar. Sir, when I've told you what I come for, I doubt not but I shall deferve your thanks. I come to do you service.

D. Fran. You have 'em, Sir, already _____

Mar. You have lodg'd within your house some shipwrack'd men, who are greater Villains than the Earth e'r bore; I come to give you warning of 'em, and to beg your power to revenge such horrid actions, as heart could never yet conceive, or tongue could utter. Ha! they are these_____ Revenge, revenge cruel, unnatural Rapes and Murders. They are Devils in the shapes of men. 1

D. Fran. What fay you, Sir?

Jac. Now the fnare is faln upon me; me-thinks I feel cold Steel already in my body. Too well I know that face.

D. Joh. I know that face. Now, Impudence, affift me. What mad young man is that?

D. Fran. Thefe, by their habits and their meens, are Gentlemen, and feem to be men of Honour.

Mar. By these two, last night, I was robb'd, and bound to a Tree, and there have been all night, and but this morning was reliev'd by Peafants_____ I had a Lady with me, whom they faid they would ravish, and this morning I faw her dead; they must have murder'd her.

D. Fran. Heav'n ! what do I hear?

Jac. Oh! I am noos'd already, I feel the knot, methinks, under my left ear.

D. Ant. The youth raves; we never faw his face, we never ftirr'd from the bounds of this house fince we came hither.

D. Lop. 'Sdeath, let me kill the Villain; shall he thus affront men of our quality and honour? D. Fran. D. Fran. Hold, confider I am a Magistrate.

D. Joh. The Youth was robb'd, and with the fright has loft o his wits. Poor Fool! let him be bound in's bed.

D. Fran. What means the Youth? put up your Sword.

D. Ant. We told you, Sir, he was mad.

Mar. Oh impudent Villains! I ask your pardon, Sir: My griefs and injuries transport me so, I scarce can utter them. That Villain is Don John, who basely murder'd the Governour of Sevil in his house, and then dishonour'd his fair Sister.

D. Job. Death and Hell! this injury is beyond all sufferance.

D. Joh. Hold, Sir, think in whole house you are.

Jac. O Lord ! what will this come to ? Ah Jacomo ! thy line of life is fhort.

Mar. This is the Villain, who kill'd the Lover of Antonio's Sifter, deflow'rd her, and murder'd her Brocher in his own houfe.

D. Job. I'll have no longer patience.

D. Ant. Such a Villain should have his throat cut, though in a Church.

D. Lop. No man of honour will protect those, who offer such injuries.

D. Joh. Have at you, Villain.

D. Fran. What is the matter, Friend, you tremble fo?

D. Lop.'Sdeath, the Dog's fear will betray us.

Jac. I tremble, Sir? no, no, Sir : I tremble _____ Though it would make any one tremble to hear one lie, as that young Gentleman does. Have you no conficience in you?

Mar. Heav'n can witnels for me, I fpeak not false. Octavio, my dear Octavio; being dearest to me of all the world, I would in Sevil have reveng'd his murder; but the Villain there escap'd me: I follow'd him to Sea, and in the same Storm in which their Ship perish'd, I was thrown on shoar. Oh my Octavio! if this foul unnatural murther be not reveng'd, there is no Justice left among mankind. His Ghost, and all the rest whom he has barbarously murder'd, will interrupt your quiet; they'll haunt you in your fleep. Revenge, revenge!

2. Bride. This is wonderful.

D. Fran. There must be something in this; his passion cannot be counterfeited, nor your man's fear.

Jac. My fear? I fcorn your words; I fear nothing under the Sun. I fear? Ha, ha, ha_____

D. Job. Will you believe this one false Villain against three, who are Gentlemen, and men of honour?

Jac. Nay, against four, who are Gentlemen, and men of bonour?

Mar. O Villain, that I had my Sword imbru'd in thy hearts bloud. Oh my dear Octavio ! Do Justice, Sir, or Heav'n will punish you.

Enter Clara.

D. Fran. Gentlemen, he is too earnest, in his grief and anger, to be what you wou'd have him, an Impostor. My house has been been your Sanctuary, and I am oblig'd in honour not to actasa Magistrate, but your Host, no violence shall here be offer'd to you; but you must instantly leave this house, and if you would have fastery, find it somewhere else. Be gone.

D. Job. This is very well.

Mar. Oh ! will you let 'em go unpunish'd? Whither shall I flie for vengeance ?

D. Fran. Pray leave this place immediately.

Jac. Ah, good Sir, let's be gone —— Sir, your most humble Servant.

Clar. Oh, Sir, confider what you do; do not banish Don John from hence.

1. Brideg. Ha! what means the?

D. Fran. What fay you ?

Clar. Oh, Sir, he is my Husband, we were last night contracted.

D. Fran. Oh Heav'n! what do I hear?

1. Brideg. I am dishonour'd, abus'd. Villain, thou dieft.

D. Joh. Villain, you lie; I will cut your throat first.

D. Fran. Hey, where are my people here.

Enter Servants and Flavia.

Flav. Oh, Sir, hold; if you banish Don John, I am lost for ever.

D. Fran. Oh Devil! what do I hear?

Flav. Heis my Husband, Sir, we were last night contracted.

Clar. Your Husband ! Heav'n ! what's this ?

2. Brideg. Hell and Damnation!

D. Fran. Oh! I have loft my fenfes.

Mar. Oh Monster! now am I to be believ'd?

Jac. Oh spare my life! I am innocent as I hope to live and breath.

D. Job. Dog, you shall fight for your life, if you have it.

D. Franc. First, I'll revengemy felf on these.

Job. Hold, hold, they are both my Wives, and I will have them.

[Runs at his Daughters, they run out. D. Frans.

D. Franc. Oh Devil! fall on Mar.Fall on, I will affift you.

[They fight, Maria and Don Francisco are kill'd, the two Bridegrooms are hurt, Jacomo runs away. D. Job. Now we've done their business.

Ah, cowardly Rogue! are not you a Son of a Whore?

Jac. Ay, Sir, what you pleafe: A man had better be a living Son of a Whore, than a dead Hero, by your favour.

¹D. Joh. I could find in my heart to kill the Rafcal; his fear, fome time or other, will undo us.

Jac. Hold, Sir; I went, Sir, to provide for your escape. Let's take Horses out of the Stable, and flie; abundance of Company are coming, expecting the Wedding, and we are irreparably lost if we take not this time. I think my fear will now preferve you.

D. Ant. I think he counfels well. Let's flie to a new place of pleafure.

D. Job. But I shall leave my business undone with the two Women.

D. Lop. 'Tis now scarce feizible. Let's fly; you'll light on others as handsom, where we come next.

D. Job. Well, dispose of me as you please; and yet it troubles me.

Jac. Haste, haste, or we shall be apprehended. [Exeunt.

Enter Clara and Flavia.

Flav. O that I ever liv'd to fee this day ! This fatall day! 'Twas our vile difobedience Caus'd our poor Father's death, which Heav'n Will revenge on us. So lewd a Villain As Don John was never heard of yet.

Clar. That we fhould be fo credulous! Oh dreadful Accident! Dear Father, what Expiation can We make? our crime's too foul for Tears to walh away, and all our lives will Be too fhort, to fpend in penitence for this Our levity and difobedience. He was the Best of Fathers, and of Men.

Flav. What will become of us, poor miferable Maids, Loft in our Fortunes and our Reputations ? Our intended Husbands, if they recover of their Wounds, will murder us; and 'tis but Juffice: Our lives too now cannot be worth the keeping. Those Devils in the shapes of men are fled.

Clar. Let us not waste our time in fruitles grief; Let us employ some to pursue the murderers. And for our selves, let's to the next Monastery, And there spend all our weary life in penitence.

Flav. Let's fly to our last Sanctuary in this world, And try, by a Religious life, to expiate this Crime : There is no fafety, or no hope but there. Let's go, and bid a long farewell to all the World; a thing too vain, and little worth our care.

Clar. Agreed ; farewell to all the vanity on Earth, Where wretched Mortals, tofs'd 'twixt hope and fear, Muft of all fix'd and folid joy defpair.

The Scene is a delightful Grove.

Enter two Shepherds and two Nimphs.

1. Shep. Come Nimphs and Shepherds, hafte away To th'happy Sports within these shady Groves, In pleasant lives time stides away apace, But with the wretched seems to creep too flow.

1. Nimph. Our happy leifure we employ in joys, As innocent as they are pleafant. We, Strangers to ftrife, and to tumultuous noife, To baneful envy, and to wretched cares, In rural pleafures fpend our happy days, And our foft nights in calm and quiet fleeps.

2. Shep. No rude Ambition interrupts our reft, Nor bafe and guilty thoughts how to be great.

2. Nimph. In humble Cottages we have fuch contents, As uncorrupted Nature does afford, Which Which the great, that furfeit under gilded Roofs, And wanton in Down Beds, can never know.

1. Shep. Nature is here not yet debauch'd by Art, 'Tis as it was in Saturn's happy days: Minds are not here by Luxury invaded ; A homely Plenty, with fharp Appetite, Does lightfome health, and vigorous ftrength impart.

1. Nimph. A chast-cold Spring does here refresh our thirst, Which by no feavourish surfeit is increas'd; Our food is such as Nature meant for Men, Ere with the Vicious, Eating wasan Art.

2. Nimph. In noifie Cities riot is perfu'd, And lewd luxurious living foftens men, Effeminates Fools in Body and in Mind, Weakens their Appetites, and decays their Nerves.

2. Shep. With filthy fteams from their excels of Meat, And clowdy vapours rais'd from dangerous Wine; Their heads are never clear or free to think, They wafte their lives in a continual mift.

1. Shep. Some fubtil and ill men chufe Temperance, Not as a Vertue, but a Bawd to Vice, And vigilantly wait toruine thole, Whom Luxury and Eafe have lull'd afleep.

2. Shep. Yes, in the clamorous Courts of tedious Law, Where what is meant for a relief's a gievance; Or in Kings Palaces, where Cunning strives, Not to advance King's Interests, but its own.

1. Nimph. There they in a continual hurry live, And feldom can, for all their fubtile Arts, Lay their foundations fure; but fome Are undermin'd, others blown down by ftorms.

2. Nimph. Their fubtilty is but a common Road Of flattering great men, and oppreffing little, Smiling on all they meet, and loving none.

1. Shep. In populous Cities, life is all a ftorm; But we enjoy a fweet perpetual calm: Here our own Flocks we keep, and here Land my Phillis can embrace unenvi'd. 2. Shep. And I and Calia without jealousie. But hark, the Pipes begin; now for our sports. [A Symphony of Rustick Musick.

> Imphs and Shepherds come away, Inthese Groves let's sport and play; Where each day is a Holy-day, Sacred to Ease and happy Love. To Dancing, Musick, Poetry: Your Flocks may now securely rove. Whilst you express your jollity.

Enter Shepherds and Shepherdeffes, finging in Chorme.

We come, we come, no joy like this. Now let us fing, rejoyce, and kifs. The Great can never know fuch blifs

1. All th' Inhabitants o'th'Wood, Now celebrate the Spring, That gives fresh vigour to the bloud Of every living thing.
Chor. The Birds have been sing and billing before us, And all the sweet Choristers joyn in the Chorus.

 The Nightingales with jugging throats, Warble out their pretty Notes, So fweet, fo fweet, fo fweet : And thus our Loves and Pleasures greet.
 Chor. Then let our Pipes found, let us dance, let us fing, Till the murmuring Groves with loud Eccho's shall ring. [Dance begins.

4. How happy are we, From all jealousse free; No dangers or cares can annoy us : We toy and we kiss, And Love's our chief bliss; A pleasure that never can cloy us.
Chor. Our days we consume in unenvi'd delights, And in love and soft rest our happy long nights.

4. Each Nimph does impart Her love without Art, To her Swain, who thinks that his chief Treasure. No envy is fear'd, No lighs are e'r heard, But those which are caus'd by our pleasure.
Chor. When we feel the bless'd Raptures of innocent Love, No joys exceed ours but the pleasures above.

General Chorus. Reverse in the cheerful Spring. In these delightful fragrant Groves, Let's celebrate our happy Loves. Let's pipe, and dance, and laugh, and ling; Thus every happy living thing, Revels in the cheerful Spring.

[Dance continues.

Enter Don John, Don Lopez, Don Antonio, Jacomo.

D. Job. So, thus far we are fafe, we have almost kill'd our Horse with riding cross out of all Roads.

Jac. Nay, you have had as little mercy on them, as if they had been Men or Women: But yet we are not fafe, let us fly farther.

D. Job. The house I lighted at wasmine during my life, which I fold to that fellow; he, fince he holds by that tenure, will carefully conceal us.

Jac. Tis a Tenure I will not give him two moneths purchase for.

D. Joh. Besides, our Swords are us'd to conquest.

. A nt.

D. Ant. At worft, there is a Church hard by; we'll put it to its proper use, take refuge in't.

(67)

D. Lop. Look here, here are Shepherds, and young pretty Wenches; shall we be idle, Don?

D. Ant. By no means; 'tis a long time, methinks, fince we were vicious.

D. Job. We'll ferve 'em as the Romans did the Sabines, we'll rob 'em of their Women; onely we'll return the Punks again, when we have us'd them.

For Heav'ns fake hold.

D. Joh. Sirra, nomore; do as we do, ravish, Rascal, or, by my Sword, I'll cut thee into fo many pieces, it shall pose an Arithmetician to fum up the fractions of thy body.

Fac. I ravifh! Oh, good Sir! my courage lies not that way; alas, I, I am almost famish'd, I have not eat to day.

D. Joh. Sirra, by Heaven do as I bid thee, or thou shalt never cat again. Shall I keep a Rascal for a Cypher

Fac. Oh! what will become of me? I must do it.

D. Job. Come on, Rogue, fall on.

D. Ant. Which are you for?

D. Joh. 'Tis all one, I am not in Love but in Luft, and to fuch a one a Belly-full's a Belly-full, and there's an end on't.

1. Shepherdes. What means this violence?

2. Shepherdess. Oh ! Heav'n protect us.

Jac. Well, Imust have one too; if I be hang'd, I had as good be hang'd for something.

[Every one runs off with a Woman. D. Lop. Rogues, come not on; we'll be in your guts.

All Shepherdess. Help, help. They cry out. Exeunt. I. Shep. What Devils are thefe?

[Three or four Shepherds return with Jacomo. I. Shep. Here's one Rogue. Have we caught you, Sir? we'll cool your courage.

Jac. Am I taken prisoner? I shall be kept as an honourable Hoftage, at leaft.

2. Shep. Where are these Villains, these Ravishers?

Jac. Why you need not keep fuch a ftir, Gentlemen, you will have have all your Women again, and no harm done. Let me go, I'll fetch 'em to you.

(68)

1. Shep. No, you libidinous Swine; we'll revenge the Rapes on vou.

Jac. Good kind civil people pass this by : 'Tis true, my Master's a very Tarquin; but Ine'r attempted to ravish before.

12. Shep. I'll fecure you from ever doing of it again. Where's your Knife?

Jac. Heav'n! what do you mean? Oh spare me! I am unprepar'd; let me be confest.

I. Shep. We will not kill you, we'll but geld you: Are you fo hot. Sir?

Jac. Oh bloudy Villains ! have a care, 'tis not a feason for that, the Sign's in Scorpio.

2. Shep. Down with him

Jac. Ohelp, help! murder, murder! Have a care what you do, I am the last of all my Race _____ Will you destroy a whole Stock, and take away my Representers of my Family ?----

1. Shep. There shall be no more of the Breed of you

Juc. I am of an antient Family; will you cut off all hopes of a Son and Heir? Help! help! Master, Don John? Oh! Oh! Oh!

Enter Don John, Don Lopez, Don Antonio.

D. Joh. Hownow, Rogues? do you abuse my Man? Jac. O Sir, this is the first good thing you ever did : if you had not come just in the Nick, I had lost my Manhood. D. Ant. 'Tis no matter for the use you make on't. D. Lop. But come, let's now to Supper. Jac. Come on, I am almost starv'd.

Exeunt.

Shepherds return.

1. Shep. Let's not complain, but Dog the Rogues, and when we have Hous'd 'em, we will to the next Magistrate, and beg his pow'r to apprehend 'em. FExeunt.

(69)

The Scene changes to a Church, with the Statue of Don Pedro on Horfeback in it.

D. Job. Let's in, and fee this Church.

Jac. Is this a time to fee Churches? But let me fee whofe Statue's this? Oh Heav'n! this is Don Pedro's, whom you murder'd at Sevil.

D. Job. Say you fo? Read the Infeription.

Jac. Here lies Don Pedro, Governour of Sevil, barbaroufly murder'd by that impious Villain, Don John, 'gainst whom his innocent bloud cries still for vengeance.

Jac What, a Statue! invite a Statue to Supper? Ha, ha ______. can Marble eat?

D. Joh. I fay, Rafcal, tell him I would have him Sup with me. Jac. Ha, ha, ha! who the Devil put this whimfey into your head? Ha, ha, ha! invite a Statue to Supper?

D. Joh. I shall spoil your mirth, Sirra ; I will have it done.

Jac. Why, 'tisimpoffible; wou'd you have me fuch a Coxcomb, invite Maible to eat? Ha, ha, ha.

> [He goes several times towards the Statue, and returns laughing.

Good Mr. Statue, if it shall please your Worship, my Master desires you to make Collation with him presently

> [The Statue nods his head, Jacomo falls down and roars.

Oh I am dead! Oh, Oh, Oh.

D. Job. The Statue nods its head ; 'tis odd-

D. Ant. 'Tis wonderful.

D. Lop. 1 am amaz'd.

Jac. Oh I cannot stir ! Help, help.

D. Joh. Well, Governour, come, take part of a Collation withme, 'tis by this time ready; make haste, 'tis I invite you.

[Statue nods again. Say you fo? come on, let's fet all things in order quickly. Jac. Qh fly, fly. D. Ant. This is prodigious.

[Excunt Don John, Don Lopez, Don Antonio, Jacomo.

The Scene is a Dining Room, a Table spread, Servants setting on Meat and Wine.

D. Job. Come, our meat is ready, let's fit. Pox on this foolish Statue, it puzles me to know the reason on't. Sirra, I'll give you leave to fit.

D. Ant. Let's eat, ne'r think on't.

Jac. Ay, come, let's eat; Iam too hungry now to think on the fright______ [Jacomo eats greedily.

D. Job. This is excellent Meat. How the Rogue eats. You'll choak your felf.

Jac. I warrant you, look to your felf. D. Ant. Why, Jacomo, is the Devil in you? Jac. No, no; if he be, 'tis a hungry Devil. D. Lop.Will you not drink? Jac. I'll lay a good foundation first. D. Job. The Rafcal eats like a Canibal. Jac. Ay, 'tis no matter for that. D. Job. Some Wine, Sirra. Jac. There, Sir, takeit; I am in haste. D. Ant. 'Sdeath, the Fool will be strangl'd. Jac. The Fool knows what he does. D. Job. Here's to Don Pedro's Ghost, he should have been welcome. Jac. O name him not.

D. Lop. The Rascal is afraid of you after death. Jac. Oh! Oh! fome Way, give me fome Wine.

Almost cionk'd.

D. Fob.

D. Ant. Takeit. Jac. So, now 'tis down. D. Ant. Are you not fatisfi'd yet? Jac. Peace, peace; I have but just begun.

Who's there? come in, I am very buffe.

D. Job. Rife, and in your duty. Jac. But onen , i come. What a pox, are your and it.

[Knocks again. [Opens the door.

Enter Ghoft.

Oh! the Devil, the Devil.

D. Job. Hah! it is the Ghoft, let's rife and receive him.

D. Ant. I am amaz'd.

D. Lop. Not frighted are you?

D. Ant. I fcorn the thoughts of fear.

[They falute the Ghoft. D. Joh. Come, Governour, you are welcome, fit there; if we had thought you would have come, we wou'd have staid foryou. But come on, Sirra, give me some Wine. [The Ghost sits.]

Jac. Oh! I am dead; what fhall I do? I dare not come near you.

D, Joh. Come, Rascal, or I'll cut your throat.

[Fills Wine, his hand trembles. Jac. I come, I come. Oh! Oh! D. Joh. Why do you tremble, Rafcal? hold it fteadily — Jac. Oh! I cannot.

[Jacomo snatches meat from the Table, and runs aside.

D. Job. Here, Governour, your health. Friends, put it about. Here's excellent meat; tafte of this Ragoust. If you had had a body of flesh, I would have given you cher entire _____ but the Women care not for Marble. Come, I'll help you. Come, eat, and let old quarrels be forgotten.

Ghost. I come not here to take repair with you; Heaven has permitted me to animate This Marble body, and I come to warn You of that vengeance is in ftore for you, If you amend not your pernicious lives.

'Jac. Oh Heav'n!

D. Ant. What, are you come to preach to us?

D. Lop. Keep your Harangues for Fools that will believe em. D. Job. We are too much confirm d. Pox o' this dry discourse, give me some Wine. Come, here's to your Mistris; you had one when you were living: not forgetting your sweet Sister. Sirra, more Wine.

Jac.Ay, Sir____ Good Sir, do not provoke the Ghost; his Marble fifts may fly about your ears, and knock your brains out.

D. Jah. Peace, Fool.

Ghost. Tremple, you impious Wretches, and repent ; Behold, the pow'rs of Hell wait for you _____ [Devils rife.

Jac. Oh! I will steal from hence. Oh the Devil!

D. Job. Sirra, stir not; by Heav'n I'll use thee worse than Devils can do. Come near, Coward.

Jac. OI dare not ftir; what will become of me?

D. Job. Come, Sirra, eat.

Jac. O, Sir, my appetite is fatisfied.

D. Job. Drink, Dog, the Ghost's health: Rogue, do't, or I'll run my Sword down your throat.

Jac. Oh! Oh! Here, Mr. Statue, your health.

D. Joh. Now, Rascal, sing to entertain him.

Jac. Sing, quoth he ! Oh ! I have loft my voice; I cannot be merry in fuch company. Sing _____

D. Ant. Who are thefe with ugly (hapes?

D. Lop. Their manner of appearing is fomething strange.

Ghost. They're Devils, that wait for fuch hard impious Men. They're Heavens Instruments of eternal vengeance.

D. Job. Are they fome of your Retinue? Devils; fay you? I am forry I have no Burnt Brandey to treat'em with, that's Diink fit for Devils_____ Hah! they vanish. [They link.

Ghost. Cannot the fear of Hell's eternal tortures, Change the horrid course of your abandon'd lives? Think on those Fires, those everlasting Fires, That shall without consuming burn you ever.

D. Job. Dreams, dreams, too flight to lofe my pleafure for. In fpight of all you fay I will go on, Till I have furfeited on all delights. Youth is a Fruit that can but once be gather'd, And I'll enjoy it to the full.

D. Ant.

D. Ant. Let's push it on; Nature chalks out the way that we should follow.

 $\langle 1 \rangle \rangle$

D. Lop. 'Tis her fault, if we do what we should not. Let's on. here's a Brimmer to our Leader's health.

Fac. What hellish Fiends are these?

D. Job. Let metell you, 'tisfomething ill bred to rail at your Hoft, that treats you civilly. You have not yet forgot your quarrel to me.

Ghost.'Tis for your good; by me Heaven warns you of its wrath, and gives you a longer time for your repentance. I invite you this night to a repart of mine.

D. Job. Where?

Ghoft. Atmy Tomb.

D. Ant. What time?

Ghoft. At dead of night.

D. Joh. We'll come.

Ghaft. Fail not.

D. Lop. I warrant you.

Ghoft. Farewell, and think upon your loft condition.

D. Job. Farewell, Governour; I'll fee what Treat you'll give us.

D. Ant. 3

D. Lop. S And I.

D. Set.

Jac. That will not I. Pox on him, I have had enough of his company, I shall not recover it this week. If I eat with such an Hoft, I'll be hang'd.

D. Joh. If you do not, by Heaven you shall be hang'd.

Fac. Whither will your lewdness carry me? I do not care for having a Ghoft for my Landlord. Will not these Miracles do good upon you?

D. Joh. There's nothing happens but by Natural Caufes, Which in unufual things Fools cannot find,

And then they stile 'em Miracles. But no Accident Can alter me from what I am by Nature. Were there_ Legions of Ghosts and Devils in my way, One moment in my course of pleasure I'd not stay.

Enter Jacomo, with Back, Breast, and Head-piece.

Jac. W Ell, this damn'd Mafter of mine will not part with me; and we must fight five or fix times a day, one day with another, that's certain: Therefore thou art wife, honest Jacomo, to arm thy felf, I take it. Sa, fa, fa — Methinks I am very valiant on the fudden. Sa, fa, fa — Methinks I am very valiant on the fudden. Sa, fa, fa. Hah! there I have you. Paph — Have at you. Hah — there I have you through: that was a fine thrust in tierce. Hah — Death! what noife is that ?

Enter Don John.

D. Job. How now, Sirra, what are you doing?

Jac. Nothing, but practifing to run people through the bodies, that's all; for I know fome body's throat must be cut before midnight.

D. Job. In Armour too! why, that cannot help you, you are fuch a cowardly Fool; fear will betray you faster within, than that can defend you without

Jac. I fear no body breathing, I; nothing can terrifie me but the Devillish Ghost. Ha! who's that coming? Oh Heaven!

[Leaps back. D. Job. Is this your courage? you are preparing for flight before an Enemy appears.

Jac. No, no, Sir, not I; Ionely leapt back to put my felf upon my guard — Fa, la, la —

Enter Don Lopez and Don Antonio.

D. Job. Whom have we here ? Jac. Oh where ! where ! who are they ? D. Job. Oh my Friends! where have you been?

D. Ant.

D. Ant. We went to view the ftately Nunnery hard by, and have been chatting with the poor fanctifi'd Fools, till it's dark; we have been chaffering for Nuns-flesh.

(75)

D. Lop. There I made fuch a discovery, if you do not affift me, I am ruin'd for ever. Don Bernardo's Sifter, whom I fell in love with in Sevil, is this day plac'd there for probation; and if you cannot advise me to some way or other of getting her out, for some present occasion I have for her, I am a lost man, that's certain.

D. Ant. The business is difficult, and we resolve to manage it in council.

Jac. Now will they bring me into fome wicked occasion or other of shewing my prowes: a pox on 'em.

D. Joh. Have you fo long followed my fortunes, to boggle at difficulty upon fo honourable an occasion; besides, here is no difficulty.

D. Lop. No? the Walls are fo high, and the Nunnery fo ftrongly fortifi'd, 'twill be impossible to do it by force; we must find fomestratagem.

D. Job. The stratagem is soon found out

D. Ant. As how, Don John?

D. Job. Why, I will fet fire on the Nunnery; fire the Hive, and the Drones mult out, or be burnt within: then may you; with eafe, under pretence of fuccour, take whom you will.

D. Lop. 'Tis a gallant defign.

D. Ant. I long to be about it. Well, Don, thou art the bravest Fellow breathing.

Jac. Gentlemen, pray what became of that brave Fellow, that fir'd the Temple at Ephefus? was he not hang'd, Gentlemen, hum _____

D. Ant. We are his Rivals, Fool; and who would not fuffer for fo brave an action?

D. Job. He's a Scoundrel and a Poultroon, that would not have his Death for his Fame.

D. Lop. That he is, a damn'd Son of a Whore, and not fit to drink with.

Jac. 'I's a rare thing to be a Martyr for the Devil; But what good will infamy do you, when you are dead? when Honour is nothing but a vapour to you, while you are living. For my part I'd not be hang'd to be Alexander the Great.

D. Ant. Whata phlegmatick dull Rascal is that, who has no Ambition in him.

Jac. Ambition! what, to be hang'd? befides, what's the intrinfick value of Honour when a man is under ground? Let 'em but call me honeft Jacomo, as I am, while I live, and let 'em call me, when I am dead, Don John if they will.

D. Job. Villain, dare you profane my name?

Jac. Hold, Sir, think what you do; you cannot hurt me, my Arms are Pistol-proof.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. I come to give you notice of an approaching danger: You mult fly; an Officer with fome Shepherds have found you were at our houfe, and are come to apprehend you, for fome outrage you have committed; I came to give you notice, knowing our Family has a great respect for you.

D. Joh. Yes, I know your Family has a great respect for me, for I have lain with every one in it, but thee and thy Master.

Jac. Why look you now, I thought what 'twou'd come to: Fly, Sir, fly; the darkness of the night will help us. Come, I'll lead the way.

D. Job. Stay, Sirra, you shall have one occasion more of showing your valour.

D. Ant. Did ever any Knight Errant fly, that was fo well appointed?

D. Lop. No; you shall stay, and get Honour, Facomo.

Jac. Pox of Honour, I am content with the Stock I have already.

D. Job. You are eafily fatisfied. But now let's fire the Nunnery.

D. Ant. Come on.

D. Lop. I long to be at it.

Jac. O Jacomo ! thy life is not worth a Piece of Eight. 'Tis in vain to diffwade 'em, Sir; I will never trouble you with another other request, if you'll be graciously pleas'd to leave me out of this adventure.

(77)

D. Joh. Well, you have your defire.

Jac. A thousand thanks; and when I see you again, I will be humbly content with a Halter.

D. Job. But, do you hear, Fool? ftand Centinel here; and if any thing happens extraordinary, give us notice of it.

Jac.O, good Sir! what do you mean? that's as bad as going with you.

D. Job. Let me find you here when I come again, or you are a dead man_____

Enter Officer, Guards, and Shepherds.

I. Shep. We are thus far right, the Ravishers went this way.

2. Shep. For Heavens sake take 'em dead or alive; such desperate Villains ne'r were seen.

Jac. So; if I be catch'd, I shall be hang'd; if not, I shall be kill'd. 'Tisvery fine. These are the Shepherds. I'll hide my felf.

[He stands up close against the Wall. 1. Shep. If we catch the Rogues, we will broil 'em alive; no death can be painful enough for fuch Wretches.

Fac. O bloudy minded men____

2. Shep. O impious vile Wretches! that we had you in our clutches! Open your Dark Lantern, and let's fearch for 'em.

Jac. What will become of met my Armour will not do now.

1. Shep. Thus far we hunted them upon a good scent : but now we are at a fault.

Jac. Let me see; I have one trick left, I have a Disguise will fright the Devil.

Fatio

2. Shep. They must be hereabouts.

Jac. I'll in amongst them, and certainly this will fright 'cm. 1. Shep. Oh Heav'n ! what horrid Object's this ? Jac. The Devil.

2. Shep. Oh fly, fly! the Devil, the Devil! fly _____

[Exeunt Shepherds frighted.

Jac. Farewell, good Gentlemen. This is the first time my face e'r did me good. But I'll not stay I take it; Yet whether shall I fly? Oh! what noise is that? I am in the dark, in a strange place too; what will follow? There lie. Oh! my Arms. Hah! Who's there? Let me go this way _____ Oh the Ghost! the Ghost! Gad forgive me, 'twas nothing but my fear _____

[A noife within, Fire, fire, the Nunnery's on fire.

Oh vile Wretches! they have done the deed. There is no flying; now the place will be full of people, and wicked Lights, that will difcover me, if I fly.

Within. Fire, fire, fire; the Nunnery's on fire; help, help_____ [Several people crofs the Stage, crying Fire. 'Jac. What fhall I do? there's no way but one, I'll go with the Crowd. Fire! Fire _____ Murder ! help ! help ! fire! fire---[More people cross the Stage, he runs with them.

Enter Don John, Don Antonio, Don Lopez, four Nuns.

D. Job. Fear not, Ladies, we'll protect you.

I. Nun. Our Sex and Habits will protect us.

D. Lop. Not enough, we will protect you better.

1. Nun. Pray leave us, we must not confort with men.

D. Ant. What would you run into the fire to avoid Mankind? you are zealous Ladies indeed.

D. Job. Come, Ladies, walk with us; we'll put you in a place of fafety.

1. Nun. We'll go no further, we are fafe enough; be gone, and help to quench the fire.

D. Job. We have another fire to quench; come along with us.

D. Lop. Ay, come, you must go.

D. Ant.

D. Ant. Come along, we know what's good for you; you mult go with us.

I. Nun. Heaven! what violence is this? what impious men are thefe? Help! help! [All cry Help.

Enter Flavia and Clara, Probationers.

Flav. Here are the bloudy Villains, the caufes of our mifery. Clar. Inhumane Butchers! now we'll have your lives.

D. Job. Hah! here are a brace of my Wives. If you have a mind to this Fool, take her betwixt you; for my part, I'll have my own. Come, Wives, along with me; we mult confummate, my Spoules, we mult confummate.

Clar. What Monfters are these?

All Nuns. Help! help!

• D. Ant. 'Sdeath ! these foolish Women are their own Enemies.

D. Lop. Here are so many people, if they cry out more, they'll interrupt us in our brave design.

D. Job. I warrant you; when they cry out, let us out-noife 'em. Come, Women, you must go along with us.

1. Nun. Heaven! what shall we do? Help! help!

D. Job. Help! help! Fire! fire! fire!

D. Lop. } Help! help!

[They hale the Women by the hands, who Still cryout, and they with them.

Enter several people, crying out Fire, Jacomo in the rear.

Jac. Fire! fire! fire! Help! help! 'Sdeath! here's my Master.

D. Job. Sirra, come along with me, I have use of you. Jac. I am caught.

D. Job. Here, Sirra, take one of my Wives, and force her after me. Do you refuse, Villain? Enter Shepherds, with Officer and Guards.

Nuns. Help! help! good people help! refeue us from these Villains.

1. Shep. Who are you, committing violence on Women ? 2. Shep. Heavens ! they are the Villains we feek for. Jac. Where is my Armour now? Oh my Armour. Officer. Fall on.

[They fight, Women fly, Jacomo falls down as kill'd, two Shepherds and the Officer are kill'd.

D. Joh. Say you fo, Rogues?

D. Lop. So, the Field's our own.

D. Job. But a pox on't, we have bought a Viceory too dear we have loft the Women.

D. Ant. We'll find 'em again. But poor Jacomo's kill'd. Jac. That's a lie.

D. Lop. 'Faith, let's carry offour dead.

D. Job. Agreed; we'll bury him in the Church, while the Ghoft treats us, we'll treat the Worms with the body of a Rafcal.

7ac. Not yet a while.

D. Lop. Come, let's take away the Fool.

Jac. No, the Fool can take up himfelf. 'Sdeath! you refolve not to let me alone dead or alive_____ Here are more Murders. Oh!

D. Lop. Oh counterfeiting Rafcal ! are you alive ?

[The Clock Strikes Twelve.

D. Ant. The Clock strikes Twelve.

D. Job. 'Slife, our times come, we must to the Tomb : I would not break my word with the Ghost for a thousand Doubloons---

Jac. Nor I keep it for ten times the Money. D. Joh. But you Ihall keep your word, Sir.

Jac. Sir, I am refolv'd to fast to night, 'tis a Vigil: Besides, I care not for eating in such base company.

Within. Follow, follow, follow____

Enter two Shepherds, with a great Rabble.

Here they went; follow, follow -----[Excunt omnes.

The Scene the Church, the Statue of Don Pedro on Horseback; on each side of the Church, Don John's Ghoft, Maria's, Don Francisco's, Leonora's, Flora's, Maria's Brothers, and others, with Torches in their hands.

Enter Don John, Don Antonio, Don Lopez, Jacomo.

Jac. Good Sir, let's go no farther ; look what horrid Attendants are here. This wicked Ghost has no good meaning in him.

D. Joh. He refolves to treat us in State ; I think he has robb'd all the Graves hereabouts of their Dead, to wait upon us.

D. Ant. I see no Entertainment prepar'd.

D. Lop. He has had the manners to light off his Horfe, and entertain us.

D. Job. He would not fure be fo ill bred, to make us wait on him on foot.

Jac. Pox on his breeding, I shall die with fear; I had as good have been taken and hang'd. What horror feizes me!

D. Joh. Well, Governour, you see we are as good as our words.

D. Ant. Where's your Collation?

D. Lop. Bid some of your Attendants give us some Wine.

[Ghoft de cends. Stat.

Stat. Have you not yet thought on your lost condition? Here are the Ghosts of some whom you have murder'd, That cry for vengeance on you Fathers Ghast. Repent, repent of all your horrid crimes: Monsters, repent, or Hell will swallow you.

D. Joh. That's my Old man's voice. D'hear, Old Gentleman, vou talk idly.

Jac. I do repent, O spare me. I do repent of all my sins, but especially of following this wicked Wretch. [Kneels.

D. Ant. Away, Fool _____ [Ant. kicks him.

D. Fran. Ghost. My bloud cries out upon thee, barbarous Wretch.

D. Joh. That's my Hoft Francisco, 'faith thou wert a good honeft Blockhead, that's the truth on't Flora's Ghost. Thou shalt not escape vengeance for all thy crimes.

D. Joh. What Fool's that, Iam not acquainted with her.

Leon. Ghost. In time lay hold on mercy, and repent.

D. Job. That was Leonora, a good natur'd filly Wench, fomething too loving, that was all her fault.

Mar. Villain, this is the last moment of thy life, And thou in flames eternally shalt howl.

D. Joh. Thou li'ft. This is the young hot-headed Fool we kill'd at Francisco's. Pox on him, he disappointed me in my defign upon the Daughters. Would thou wert alive again, that I might kill thee once more.

D. Lop. No more of this old foolifh ftuff; give us fome Wine to begin with.

D. Ant. Ay, give us some Wine, Governour.

D. Job. What, do you think to treat us thus ? I offer'd you a better entertainment. Prethee trouble us no more, but bid fome of your Attendants give us fome Wine; I'll drink to you and all the good Company.

Stat. Give 'em the Liquor they have most delighted in.

[Two of the Ghosts go out, and bring four Glasses full of bloud, then give 'em to D. John, D. Ant. D. Lop.

D. Lop. This is fomething.

D. Jok.

D. Joh. This is civil.

D. Lop. I hope a good defert will follow.

[Ghost offers a Glass to Jacomo, who runs round D.John, D.Ant. D. Lop. roaring.

Jac. Are you ftark diftracted? will you drink of that Liquor? Oh! Oh! what d'you mean? Good fweet Ghoft forbear your civility; Oh I am not dry, I thank you

D. Job. Give it me. Here, take it, Sirra.

Jac. By no means, Sir; I never drink between meals. Oh Sir---D. Job. Take it, Rascal.

Fac. Oh Heav'ns!

D. Joh. Now, Governour, your Health; 'tis the reddelt drink I ever faw.

D. Lop. Hah! pah! 'tis bloud.

D. Ant. Pah! it is ____

Fac. Oh! I'll have none of it.

They throw the Glasses down.

Cher.

D. Joh. 'Sdeath, do you mean to affront us? Stat. 'Tis fit for fuch bloud-thirfty Wretches.

D. Job. Do you upbraid me with my killing of you; I did it, and would do it again: I'd fight with all your Family one by one; and cut off root and branch to enjoy your Sifter. But will you treat us yet no otherwife?

Stat. Yes, I will, ye impious Wretches. [A Flourish. D. Lop. What's here? Mulick to treat us with? D. Ant. There is fome pleasure in this.

Song of Devils.

 Dev. PRepare, prepare, new Guests draw near, And on the brink of Hell appear.
 Dev. Kindle fresh flames of Sulphur there. Assemble all ye Fiends, Wait for the dreadful ends Of impious men, who far excel All th'Inhabitants of Hell.

 Dev. In mi chiefs they have all the damn'd outdone; Here they shall weep, and shall unpiti'd groan, Here they shall howl, and make eternal mom.
 Dev. By Blond and Lust they have deferv'd so well, That they shall feel the hottest flames of Hell.
 Dev. Invainthey shall here their past mischiefs bewail, In exquisite torments that never shall fail.
 Dev. Eternal darkness they shall find, And them eternall Chains shall bind To infinite pain of sense and mind.

Chorus Let 'em come, let 'em come, of all. To an eternal dreadful doom Let 'em come, let 'em come.

Stat. Will you not relent, and feel remorfe ?

D. Job. Cou'dst thou bestow another heart on me, I might; but with this heart I have, I cannot.

D. Lop. These things are prodigious.

D. Ant. I have a kind of grudging to relent, but something holds me back.

D. Lop. If we could, 'tis now too late; I will not.

D. Ant. We defie thee.

Stat. Perish, ye impious Wretches, go and find The punishments laid up in store for you.

[It Thunders, Don Lopez and Don Antonio are swallow'd up.

Behold their dreadful Fates, and know, that thy last moment's come.

D. Job. Think not to fright me, foolifh Ghoft ; I ll break your Marble body in pieces, and pull down your Horfe.

Jac. If fear has left me my ftrength, I'll steal away. D. Job. These things I see with wonder, but no tear.

EPILOGUE,

Spoken by Facomo.

Hrough all the Perils of the Play I've run, But know not how your fury I may thun; I'm in new dangers now to be undone I had but one fierce Master there, But I have many cruel Tyrants here. Who do most bloudily my life persue; Who takes my Livelihood, may take that too. Gainst little Players you great factions raise, Make Solemn Leagues and Cov nants against Plays. We, who by no Allies affifted are, Against the Great Confederates must make War. You need not Strive our Province to o'r-run, By our own Stratagems we are undone. We've laid out all our Pains, nay Wealth for you. And yet, hard-hearted men, all will not do. Tis not your Judgments sway for you can be Pleas'd with damn'd Plays (as heart can wish to see) 'Ounds, we do what we can, what wou'd you more ? Why do you come, and rant, and damn, and roar? Sdeath, what a Devil would you have us do? Eachtake a Prison, and there humbly sue, Angling for lingle Money with a Shoo. What, will you be Don Johns? have you no remorfe? Farewell then, bloudy men, and take your course. Yet Stay-If you'll be civil, we will treat of Peace, And th' Articles o'th' Treaty shall be these.

" First

" First, to the men of Wit we all submit ; The rest shall (wagger too within the Pit, And may roar out their little or no Wit. But do not wear fo loud to fright the City. Who neither care for wicked men, nor witty; They start at ills they do not like to do, But shall in Shops be wickeder than you. " Next, you'll no more be troubl'd with Machines. Item, you shall appear behind our Scenes, And there make love with the sweet chink of Guinnies, The unrelisted Eloquence of Ninnies. Some of our Women shall be kind to you, And promise free ingress and egress too. But if the Faces which we have wo'n't do. We will find out some of Sixteen for you. We will be civil when nought else will win ye ; We will new bait our Trap, and that will bring ye. " Come, faithlet all old breaches now be heal'd, And the faid Articles shall be Sign'd and Seal'd.
