Further contingents will come out to be employed on the same work. These immigrants are a stalwart aggregation of Scotchmen, who intend to settle in Canada and are determined to gain experience here by working on the railroad before deciding upon a place to locate on farm lands. Harvest Excursions. Montreal, Sept. 29.—Final figures for the western harvest excursion season show that 23,577 laborers went West, many more than ever before. This means that "considerably over $600,000 will be paid directly into the treasuries of the railways of Canada merely to get men to the West to engage in harvest operations and bring them back East again. The increase for the present year is more marked in that every province in the East of Canada shows a proportionate growth over the previous figures. At $12 apiece the harvesters paid $184,081 for tickets. About three-quarters of them, or 17,743 will return East and pay an additional $18 to get back or a total of $310,056, making in all $494,140 for transportation.

NEW WESTMINSTER MYSTERY.

Two Arrests in Connection With the Death of G. W. Gilley. New Westminster, Sept. 29.—On November 2nd, 1904, G. A. Gilley, a well-known resident found a watery grave in the Fraser river below Gilley's wharf, which was operated by himself and his brothers. A few days later the body was recovered, and although the head bore evidence of having sustained a blow, no blood had been found on the wharf, neither the police nor the coroner's jury believed that death had resulted from foul play. It was believed that the deceased had accidentally fallen off the wharf, and a verdict to this effect was returned by the coroner's jury.

At that time Mr. Miller was at the head of the New Westminster police. Chief McIntosh was appointed, and he recently heard rumors that caused him to institute inquiries into the alleged accidental death.

As a result of these inquiries Detective Bradshaw proceeded to North Yakima, Wash., and secured a confession of a woman who alleged she had witnessed the murder of G. W. Gilley. She stated that Mr. Gilley and three fishermen, A. M. Munn, Chester Jackson and another, had a quarrel with Mr. Gilley on the wharf on the night in question; one of the men struck Gilley over the head, and he either fell or was pushed into the river. Detective Bradshaw at once located Munn, who was living at Yakima, and with the assistance of the United States police, effected his arrest, and he is now held awaiting extradition proceedings.

She Was Wild With Pain. From Willow Creek, Ont., Miss E. Diegel writes: "A few years ago I was drenched with rain and got lumbered. It was like a steel rod piercing my back. I also had earache and was just wild with pain. I applied bathing soaked with Nerviline to my ear and rubbed on Nerviline for the lumberg. That rubbing relieved and in a few hours I was well. No other liniment could do this. It's the penetrating power of Nerviline that makes it superior to all other liniments. Nothing costs it, 25c. at all dealers."

HI HENRY'S MINSTRELS. Splendid Scenic Production For This Evening at the Victoria Opera House.

Says Hi Henry: "Now and then some person champions the old style of minstrelsy, but the masses would not tolerate the one man star system; but demand a good old round collection of new modern performers. The 'frighth-vig' the stuffed-chuck, the handful of flour, the dummy—the public relegate original minstrelsy to the past. The quartette must give way to the full chorus, necessitating four times the original number of singers, and the old spike-tail coat must be replaced by the finest most elaborate brocade. But a few years ago, comparatively, a well-known comedian in presenting his monologue called attention to the elegant satin dress suit used for the occasion. The bill reading that the costume worn would be the finest ever used by any minstrel star." Mr. Henry presents comic comedians, all of whom wear satin brocade costumes, each of which is double the value of the one so prominently starred.

The voting on the by-law took place Saturday. At South Westminister 30 voted for and 1 against the tramway by-law and at for and none against the lighting by-law. Desire Brohier has been committed for trial by Magistrate Williams in Vancouver on a charge of uttering a false document. Judge Henderson recently decided that the forgery of the certificate in question had not been proved, but Mr. Woodworth, counsel for the crown in the second instance, proceeded on the ground that the document was at least admittedly false, and had been uttered. A. L. Belyea appeared for Brohier and argued that it was absurd to say that a man could be tried twice on practically the same charge. A few days ago the court had declared that there was no proof that the document in question was forged, and that it was indicting the prisoner for uttering it as a forged document. Magistrate Williams decided that the question of law was something that the higher court might well decide upon. On the question of fact he felt justified in committing the prisoner on the evidence before him.

ROLLER SKATING BECOMING POPULAR

MANY PRESENT AT RE-OPENING OF RINK

Assembly Hall Thronged All Day Saturday—Strathcona Lacrosse Team Will Play Here.

On Saturday the skating rink at Assembly Hall was opened for the first time since the installation of the new floor. There was a record attendance, throngs indulging in the recreation throughout the morning, afternoon and evening.

The improvement effected by the even, billiard-board levelness of the hard wood was commented upon by all who put on skates. With the smooth running rollers and the glossy finish of the floor, the possibilities of the sport, as far as enjoyment is concerned, are increased immensely.

The recreation now more nearly approaches that of ice skating in fact, by some it has been held to exceed that of ice skating in pleasure and healthful recreation. However, that is a point upon which there is likely to be considerable difference of opinion. At any rate it is safe to say that with the installation of the new floor the popularity of roller skating will increase, rather than decline—an outcome that has frequently been predicted.

The renovation of Assembly hall has not been confined to the floor. Its lighting arrangements have been improved, a new cloak room installed and every provision made for the comfort and convenience of lady and gentlemen skaters. Nothing essential to a winter evening's enjoyment is lacking, and if Manager Painter does not make a success of his venture it will not be for lack of effort and the expenditure of money in the endeavor to please a somewhat fickle public.

It is the intention, hereafter, to manage the rink to open the rink three times a day to the public—in the morning, afternoon and evening. In the evening skates will be taken off at 10 o'clock promptly. From that hour until midnight the hall will be free for the use of private clubs. A number of the latter are now in process of organization, and there is every indication that the rink will be constantly in use during the ensuing few months.

LACROSSE

VICTORIA v. STRATHCONA.
An exhibition match will be played between the Victoria and Strathcona teams on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 4th, at Oak Bay. The representative of the latter was in the city yesterday for the purpose of arranging for the game. His twelve are now on the mainland awaiting the opening of a series of matches with New Westminster, which will take place during the fall. He wanted the Victoria club to guarantee the expenses of the Strathconas on a run to Victoria. They, however, they were not their way clear to do so, and then J. A. Virtue, with characteristic generosity, stepped into the breach and invited the Strathconas to Victoria, giving his personal assurance that their expenses would be paid. The offer was accepted with alacrity, and as a result Victorians will see one more exhibition of the Canadian national game before the close of the season.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

GAMES AT VANCOUVER.
Two games were played at Vancouver on Saturday. The Shamrocks defeated the Thistles by three goals to one, while the match between Westham Island and the Celtics ended in a draw, neither side being able to score.

RUGBY FOOTBALL

OPENING OF THE SEASON.
The opening game of the season in the Terminal City between teams representing Vancouver College, past and present, and the city, drew quite a number of spectators to Recreation park on Saturday afternoon. The game resulted in a win for the College, three points to nil.

THE RIFLE

INTERNATIONAL MATCH.
"By defeating the Sixth Regiment, D. C. O. R., team from Vancouver, B. C., at the Orilla range on Saturday, the Washington National Guard won an important possession, for at least one year, of the handsome 500 silver cup donated by Hiram Walker & Sons, of Walkerville, Ontario, for the international matches between Washington and British Columbia teams," says the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. "Private Potter led in the grand aggregate, and by doing so he wins the dogs were occasionally conspicuous objects on Elk lake and made it look as if it were breaking off in small pieces, and the Indians are still about the lake, and their feet are not so objectionable—still I don't like them, nor farm sewage. I am told that two companies want to buy power from "waste" water, drawing from one of the companies in the company. I did not get this information from the water company, but it is true.

WATERWORKS

To the Editor:—At last a majority of the council have agreed to submit a scheme for the approval of the ratepayers.
The first item on the bill of fare is the construction of a reservoir at Smith's Hill connecting with an elevated tank at some point on the hillside, ridge, or Charles Street. Total estimated cost, $18,000.

If we are to look to Elk lake for the whole of the permanent supply, not only for today, but for the future with an increased population, such a proposition might not on the whole be an improper one. It is, however, universally admitted that some other source of supply is necessary. The present filter beds have only an efficiency of about 1,500,000 gallons a day, while according to the statements authoritatively made, we were using about double the amount last summer, which fully accounts for the filthy liquid furnished. If we want to obtain 3,000,000 gallons of filtered water a day from the lake we must double the capacity of the filter beds.

If we go to Goldstream or Highland, the proper place for a reservoir, as suggested in my letter of the 2nd inst., is at Mount Tolmie, whence we can supply both the reservoir and from it the whole city by gravitation.
It may be said that Mr. Adams did not recommend Mount Tolmie, and it appears to be for the simple reason, as seems obvious from his report, that having only such information to guide him as was supplied by the city, he never heard of it as a suggested reservoir site, and did not consider the matter.

Mr. Adams states that the Smith's Hill site is rocky and construction will be costly, and it is doubtful if he or any engineer of reputation would select Smith's Hill in preference to Mount Tolmie, unless possibly it is proposed to be entirely dependent upon the water supply, which is an absurdity.
The cost of purchasing the sites for the reservoir and tank is possibly included in the estimate, possibly not.

Wherever the reservoir is placed, it must be connected with the distribution system; and, though nothing is said about redistribution, it is a matter which requires a certain degree of skill to provide a system which shall combine a high degree of efficiency with a due regard to economy. A well thought out and carefully devised scheme should be submitted to some competent authority, say, Mr. Adams, for his approval.

One proposition made by His Worship, viz., to extend the 24-inch main to the lake, was certainly a most reasonable suggestion.

It is almost incredible that for 15 years past successive city councils and their professional advisers have been going to feed a 24-inch pipe with a 12-inch whilly, under equal conditions, it would take more than five 12-inch pipes to supply the 24-inch to its capacity. When such crass ignorance of the principles of hydraulics governs, it is not remarkable that a certain lack of faith in the competency of the city council and its advisers to carry out large and important engineering work should manifest itself, though no one dreams of suggesting that they do not act to the best of their ability and in perfect good faith.

With regard to the pump, the lake and of the 24-inch main, it is not a very costly matter. The point which naturally strikes one is whether the factor of safety in a main laid to discharge 24 inches is large enough to stand the increased pressure when used as a force main.
The amount, $5,000, for cleaning the lake is clearly unnecessary, and should be charged to revenue, and not, as proposed, to capital account; nor does it add to the credit of those responsible that this necessary work had been neglected for ten years, as stated by Mr. Adams.

The only course open to us if we desire a good supply at the earliest moment is to supplement Elk lake with the Goldstream water, until such time as a reservoir is constructed at the respective sites of Highland and Goldstream, but to depend entirely on Elk lake until such time as the Highland works, if completed, are finally approved. It is argued that a failure to understand the pressing necessity of taking immediate steps to obtain relief.
Probably the heavy rains have something to do with the want of interest evinced by the public in a matter on which the prosperity of the city is so largely dependent.

THE RULE OF THE ROAD

To the Editor:—About two months ago one of the aldermen asked the mayor why was it he does not see the "rule of the road," or regulation of the traffic in the streets. The mayor replied that the matter would receive attention, I, along with a good many others, have been hurt or killed, and that attention ever since, but so far have failed to see it. I have lived in several large cities in various parts of the world, and in not one of them has the "rule of the road" been observed than in Victoria. Strictly speaking, it is not observed here at all, but simply a case of go as you please. Perhaps when some one gets seriously hurt or killed, the matter will receive the necessary attention.

THE DOMESTIC PROBLEM

To the Editor:—Seeing a letter in tonight's Times, Saturday, September 29th, on "The Servant Girl Question," and having always been interested in the cause of mistress and servant in the Old Country, I beg leave to state a few facts. Within the last few months a good many girls have landed in British Columbia for domestic service, the outcome of a letter that appeared in a popular Old Country magazine on life as we enjoy it in this fair city of Victoria, both as regards climatic conditions and general brightness that makes life better worth living. It went on to say that girls for domestic service were not to be had here; that girls who had a thought of going to Canada would do well to consider the advisability of coming to Victoria. Soon letters poured in from all parts of Scotland, England and Ireland requesting further information respecting Victoria, some saying they always thought Vancouver was the best place to go to. In consequence of so many to answer, a letter was written to the secretary of the Tourist Association enclosing a list of names of those desiring information from the different places.
No notice was taken of that letter, nor was there literature sent. Consequently, was many landed and settled in Vancouver.

A home certainly is greatly needed where they could go when they land here, with a capable woman at its head, one who would attend to their needs, and have the interests of the mistress as well as that of the girls at heart, and I for one would be glad to help forward that movement by doing what lies in my power.

The Permanent Style and Shape of Semi-ready Garments

Everyone wants style in his clothes. Some men say they don't, but they are mistaken.
Almost all ready-made clothing has style in it. In fact, it is style that sells "half the ordinary ready-made clothes."
But there are two kinds of style—surface style and through-and-through tailored style. There is, as much difference between them as there is between a wooden house painted to look like stone and a solid stone house.
Surface-style is created principally in the pressing room—put in with the hot iron—it pleases you when you try it on, but after a couple of weeks wear it looks as if it had been drawn through a knot-hole.
Our styles are designed by the acknowledged best clothing designer in America. Semi-ready styles are right—then we tailor them permanently.
Semi-ready style is built from the foundation out. Every step in the construction is in the hands of expert tailors. The shoulders are permanently stitch-moulded into shape (see the illustration), not pressed and shrunk by a hot iron only to sag out of shape after a little wear.
Every part of every Semi-ready garment is stitched into permanent shape. If the least unevenness shows it is ripped and re-stitched, not smoothed over with a hot iron. Every garment is passed by an expert as perfect in shape before it goes to the pressers.
Semi-ready fit is a certainty. Our plan of physique types cover every class of figure. Short stouts and tall men, sloping shoulders and over-erect, all variations of figure are provided for in the Semi-ready plan.
These points give you style, fit and comfort—now for wear.
Every piece of cloth that comes into our tailors has been selected at the mill by our cloth experts; before it is placed in stock it is tested by the most severe tests. Some cloth men say we are too severe, but we think not, for we put our reputation back of every thread of it when we sew the Semi-ready label in a garment.
The silk-woven seams, the carefully selected linings, the perfectly made button-holes, every little detail is carefully watched so as to make Semi-ready tailoring the best produced.
You can see the style, fit and fitness of a Semi-ready garment when you try it on—there is no guess work—and our guarantee covers any possible development.
Next time you are thinking of clothes drop in and see us—in justice to yourself, you should investigate our claims.

FRUIT INSPECTION

Board of Horticulture Will Continue Examination of Japanese Oranges—Other Changes.

The board of horticulture for the province held its semi-annual meeting in the city during the closing days of last week. There were present the deputy minister of agriculture, J. R. Anderson; R. M. Palmer, W. E. Scott, of Salt Spring Island; Martin Burrell, of Grand Forks, and Thos. Cunningham, the chief inspector. The minister of agriculture, Hon. R. G. Tatlow, attended several of the sittings also.

After disposing of the routine work arising out of correspondence from various parts of the province a protest from the fruit firms was disposed of. Representatives waited upon the board from the following firms: F. R. Stewart & Co., Oscar Brown & Co., Hainsford & Co., Munro & Co., and Simon Leiser & Co.

At previous meeting of the board the fruit dealers had taken exception to the inspection of Japanese oranges and asked for the abolition of fees on citrus fruits. On Friday when the board was again approached it was strongly urged that the fees should be abolished. It was represented that the "rule of the road" in the prevention of infected fruit coming in and the dealers should not be made to bear the whole cost.
The board, after consideration, decided that San Jose scale might be transmitted to the deciduous fruits of the province by infected oranges, and that, therefore, the inspection of citrus fruits from China and Japan should be continued.

The systematic inspection of California citrus fruits it was decided should be discontinued until fuller information relative to the scale was obtained. It was provided, however, that inspection might be resumed and fees charged should the conditions warrant it.
On the matter of abolishing fees the board decided that it could not see its way clear to do it. The efforts of Chief Inspector Cunningham to prevent the introduction of fruit diseases was strongly approved.

The board revised the lists of varieties of fruits, which it was recommended should be grown for commercial purposes. The lists will be published and circulated shortly.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

After Crane had left the money for Porter's note with Mortimer the latter took the three one-thousand-dollar bills, pinned them to the note, placed them in a cigar box and put the box away carefully.

Crane in writing to the cashier about other affairs of the bank touched upon the subject of Porter's obligation, stating that he had left money with Mr. Mortimer to meet the note when it matured.

The day before the Derby, the 12th of the month, Alan asked his day's leave and got it. The cashier more readily granted Alan's request, as Crane had intimated in his letter that it would please him if the lad were to have a holiday.

Alan went up to New York that evening. Earlier in the day he somewhat hesitatingly confided to Mortimer that he had backed Lucretia when she was well and looked to have a good chance to win her race; now she was scratched, and his money was lost.

Mortimer had a little less horror of betting and its evil influence than Alan, but under the circumstances he would perhaps have complied with the boy's request had he been provided with sufficient funds. As it was, he said: "I don't like the idea of lending you money to bet with, Alan; your mother wouldn't thank me for doing so; besides, if you lost it you'd feel uncomfortable owing me the money. At any rate, I'll only get you half of it. I suppose I haven't got a hundred to my credit."

Mortimer had a little less horror of betting and its evil influence than Alan, but under the circumstances he would perhaps have complied with the boy's request had he been provided with sufficient funds. As it was, he said: "I don't like the idea of lending you money to bet with, Alan; your mother wouldn't thank me for doing so; besides, if you lost it you'd feel uncomfortable owing me the money. At any rate, I'll only get you half of it. I suppose I haven't got a hundred to my credit."

"Oh, never mind then," answered Alan, angrily stiffening up, because of Mortimer's lecture. "I'll lend you what I've got."

"I don't want it. I can get it some other place."

"You'd better take—"

"Take nothing—I don't want it."

"Very well, I'm sorry I can't oblige you. But take my advice and don't bet any more till you get into trouble."

"Thank you, I don't need your advice. I was a fool to ask you for the money."

"I say, Alan," began Mortimer, in a coaxing tone. "Please don't 'Alan' me any more. I can get along without your money and without your friendship. I don't want either."

Mortimer remained silent. What was the use of angering the boy further? He would come to see that he had meant it in good part, and would be all right in a day or two.

During the rest of the day Alan preserved a surlily distance of manner, speaking to Mortimer only once—a constrained request for a bunch of keys in the latter's possession which unlocked some private drawers in the vault.

The next morning it suddenly occurred to Mortimer that Porter's note fell due that day—either that day or the next, he wasn't sure. The easiest way to settle it was to look at the date on the note.

He stepped into the vault, took out the little cigar box, opened it, and as he handled the crisp papers a sudden shock of horror ran through his veins. One of the bills was gone; there were only two one-thousand-dollar notes left.

ly to Mortimer's mind with absolute conviction. Alan, infatuated with the prospect of winning a large sum over The Dutchman, and failing to borrow from him, had taken the money.

The gravity of the situation calmed Mortimer, and his mind worked with a cool method that surprised him. Bit by bit he pieced it out. The boy, incessantly enough, had reasoned that the money was his father's, and that he was only borrowing family property.

No doubt he had felt sure of winning, and that he would be back in time to replace the thousand before it was needed. This sophisticated reasoning had, without doubt, tempted the lad to commit this—this—Mortimer felt a little reluctance to bestow the proper name upon Alan's Act, but undoubtedly it was stealing.

And if the boy lost the money, what would happen? He couldn't repay it; the shortage would be discovered and Allan's brother would be ruined, branded as a thief.

Mortimer would willingly have put the money back himself for Allan's sake; but he hadn't it. What was he to do? If he could find Alan and force him to give up the stolen money, he could yet save the boy. But Alan had gone to Gravesend.

Like an inspiration the thought came to Mortimer that he must go after him and get the money before it was lost. He shoved the box back in its place, and came out into the office.

It was past ten by the clock. Luckily the cashier had not come yet. Mortimer's mind worked rapidly. He must make some excuse to get away, any-thing; he must even lie, if he saved the boy it would be justifiable. Why did not the cashier come, now that he was ready for him? Each minute seemed an age, with the honor of Allan's brother hanging in the balance. He would need money. He drew a check for a hundred dollars. A hastily inspection showed that he had a "little more" than this amount to his credit. Why he took a hundred he hardly knew; fate seemed writing the check. He had barely finished when the cashier appeared. At once Mortimer spoke to him.

"I want leave of absence to-day, sir," he said, speaking hurriedly.

The cashier frowned in astonishment. "Impossible! We are short-handed with young Porter away."

"I'll be back in the morning," pleaded Mortimer. "My mother is very ill. I've opened up, and Mr. Cass can manage. I'm sure, if you'll let me go, I wouldn't ask it, but it's a matter of almost life and death. He had nearly said of honor."

Unwillingly the cashier consented. It probably meant extra work for him; he would certainly have to take a hand in the office routine. There was not a busy bank, and that day was not likely to be a very pressing one, but still he would have to shoulder some of the labor.

Full of the terrible situation, Mortimer cared for not who worked, so that he got away in time to save Allan's brother from himself. At last he was free. He almost ran to the station.

Looking across the window of the bank, the cashier seeing Mortimer's rapid pace, muttered: "I guess the poor man's mother is pretty bad; I'm glad I let him go. He's a good son to that mother of his."

At eleven o'clock Mortimer got a train for New York. During the wait at the station he had paced up and down the platform with nervous stride. A dozen times he looked at his watch—could he not take it to reach Gravesend; he knew nothing of the race track's location. As the train whirled him through Emerson, where his mother lived, he could see the little drab cottage, and wondered pathetically what the good woman would say if she knew her son was going to a race meeting. At twelve he was in New York.

Mortimer found that he could take the train to the bridge, and transfer there to another taking him directly to the course. At the Bridge he was thrust into a motley crowd, eager, expectant, full of joyous anticipation of assured good luck. He was but a tiny unit of this many-voiced throng; he drifted a speck on the bosom of the flood that pored into the waiting race train. He was tossed into a seat by the swirling tide, and as the train moved he looked at his fellow-passengers. There was a pleasant air of confidence all about him. Gold chains of fair prominence, diamonds of lustrious hue, decorated the always rosy cheeks. He fell to wondering why the men were all of a gross physique; why did the ladies wear dresses of such interminable variety of color; from whence came the money for this plethora of rich apparel?

The race literature that had come Mortimer's way had generally dealt with the unfortunate part of racing. Somehow he had got the impression that everybody lost money at it. He was sure Alan Porter had, also the father.

True, on the train were some bearing undeniable evidence of poverty; but not many. One man of this latter unfortunate aspect sat next to him. His whole appearance was suggestive of the shady side of life. With the industry of a student he pored over a disheveled sporting paper for half an hour, then throwing it under the seat he cast a furtive look at the neighbor, and presently said: "Der'll be big fields to-day."

"That's too bad," Mortimer answered, through ignorance, thinking that the other preferred perhaps a considerable walk across country to reach the course.

"I like it," declared the man of sad drapery; "it means long odds if you're next something good."

Mortimer confirmed his remarks to a brief "Oh!" for the other man might as well have been speaking Chockaw. "Have you doped 'em out for de Derby?" asked the stranger.

Mortimer shook his head. Whatever it was it was connected with horse racing, and he felt sure that he hadn't done it.

"Well, I'll tell you something—I will you put down a good bet if I steer you straight."

Mortimer was growing weary; his mind, troubled by the dreadful disaster that threatened Allan's family, wanted to draw within itself and ponder deeply over a proper course of action; so he answered: "My dear sir, I'm afraid you're mistaken. I never bet on races. But I thank you for your kind offer."

The unwatched face looked at him in blank astonishment; then it wrinkled in a mirthful laugh of derision. "What 'er all you going to do with that?" Blamed if I don't believe you dought you look it. Say, is dat straight goods—did you never have a bet in your life?"

"Never did."

"Well, I'm damned! Say, I believe you've got the best of it, dough. Wish my nose worked agin de bookies."

"Why don't you stop it now, then?" "Say, pard, do you drink?" "No."

"Smoke?" "No."

A hopeless air of utter defeat came into the thin, sharp face. Its owner had been searching for a smile. He wanted to point a moral and he couldn't do it. This young man, with his elbow was too immediate. He tried to explain: "Ragin' like any other loosed 'im'—it's like tobacco, or drink, or stealing money out of a bank."

Mortimer shivered. He had felt a moral superiority in denying the implied bad habits.

"It's all right," continued the sagacious philosopher; "a 'y' starts simply as a kid, an' he gets de 'frow-down'. He takes a bracer at 'imself, and swears he'll give it de go-by, but he can't—nit on 'your life'."

Mortimer had read much about confidence men, and half expected that his self-imposed acquaintance would try to borrow money, but he was disappointed presently.

"But de ring ain't broke Ole Bill yet. I'll clean up a 'tousand to-day, say, I like your muss; you ain't no stiff, or I miss my guess; an' I'll put you next a good 'ting, damme if I don't, an' you don't need to divvy up, neither. Dere's a chestnut runnin' in de Derby what they call Laceran, an' I'm goin' to plank down a 'undred chicks on 'em."

"He detected a look of incredulous unbelief in Mortimer's face, evidently, for he added, "You 'ink I ain't got no dough, eh?" He dug down into the folds of his somewhat voluminous "pants" and drew forth a fair-sized roll of money, ready to be taken straight. I see him—da gallop good enough for my stuff; but they got a stable-boy on him, an' dat's why he'll be t'n me. But dat don't cut no Joe wit' me. He'll be out for de goods; it's a gal owin' him, an' der'll be put'n 'em in 'doin'. Gal's name's Porter."

Again Mortimer started. What a little world it was! Laceran was here on the ferry boat, crowded with men of unchristian aspect, he heard the name of the woman he loved, and standing symbolical of honesty. "What's the name of this—this horse?" he asked. "Laceran."

HOUSEBREAKERS HAVE BEEN BUSY IN CITY

Quantity of Jewelry Taken From Residence of Capt. and Mrs. Heater Last Evening.

The housebreaker was at work in the residential and other sections of Victoria last evening. Several robberies have been reported to the police and every member of the detective force is busy endeavoring to discover the perpetrators. The residence of Capt. and Mrs. Heater, on upper Johnson street, was one of the first entered. A quantity of jewelry valued at from $100 to $200 having been removed therefrom between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening. It is believed also that the house adjoining that of Mrs. Westcott, who is out of the city, was burglarized. Then the coffee house, Broad street, of which Miss Langton is proprietress, was broken into. The fact that the burglaries took place about the same time appears to indicate the presence of some organized gang, attracted here, no doubt, by last week's exhibition.

Of the losses reported so far that of the Heater family is the most serious. To a Times reporter they explained the circumstances. They left the house last night shortly before 8 o'clock and were absent less than two hours. On entering upon their return the hall looked a little disordered and investigations were made, which resulted in the discovery of burnt matches upon the stairs and in one of the sleeping apartments. Now thoroughly alarmed Mrs. Heater and her daughter looked to see if their valuables, most of which were in one of the bureau drawers, were safe. They found most of the jewelry gone. Among the articles missed were a gold watch, two gold chains with lockets, several gold buckles, two seal tooth pins and brooches. The police were notified immediately.

It is believed that the robber or robbers got into the house by the front door. Mrs. Heater thinks that it may inadvertently have been left ajar, so that the thieves found their path practically unobstructed. There is every indication, as stated, that they pursued their depredations to the home of Mrs. Westcott, next door. The front window was found open this morning. The family, however, is now away from town, and it is impossible to say whether any of their belongings have been stolen.

An account of the breaking into the Broad street restaurant, already referred to, appears in another column. -During the month of September there were five alarms turned into the city fire department. No loss resulted from any.

This morning, Bessie Foxford, a child a little over two years old, wandered away from her home, 181 Douglas street, and has not been seen since. She wore a grey coat and had her hair done up in papers. Any information leading to the discovery of the whereabouts will be gratefully received by her parents at the home mentioned.

NOMINATIONS TO-DAY. Angus McKeown and W. McKay Have Entered Contest For Place Upon School Board.

Nominations for school trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss A. D. Cameron took place this morning. Two candidates presented themselves, namely, Angus McKeown and W. McKay. The former declared himself several days ago. Bill Mr. McKay's candidature was a surprise. Mr. McKeown was proposed by Fred Carge, and seconded by Henry A. Porter, while John Meaten and P. B. Smith proposed and seconded Mr. McKay. The election will take place on Thursday, the vote on the water by-law being held on the same occasion.

INCREASE IN RETURNS. Revenue of Local Customs House For Last Three Months Shows Big Improvement.

The returns of the Victoria customs house for the past three months make a most satisfactory showing. An increase is noticeable over that for the same period last year. The total revenue collected in September was $71,705.70, of which $71,097.80 was received in duties. The increase over the same month last year is $3,458.70. A comparative statement showing the increase during the past three months is as follows:

Table with columns for months (July, August, September) and years (1906, 1905), showing revenue increases.

This increase is ascribed to general prosperity in business. The exports are not given in this month's returns, for in future statistics relating to these are to be forwarded to Ottawa.

She will arrive at the Outer wharf at noon.

There was a conference this morning between Hon. Wm. Templeman, minister of inland revenue, and members of the council of the board of trade. G. E. Keefe, Dominion resident engineer, and Capt. James Gaudin, agent of the marine and fisheries, were also present. The council represented various matters of interest to the city to Hon. Mr. Templeman, who explained the position regarding things submitted to him for attention. The subjects taken up at the conference will be submitted to the board in a report now being prepared by the secretary.
