INTRODUCTION

THE collection of pictures in Christ Church Library owes its foundation to a bequest made by General John Guise, who died on June 12, 1765. In his will, dated April 26, 1760, this bequest is recorded in the following terms :—

‘Also I give, devise and bequeath to Christ Church Colledge in Oxford all my pictures, prints and drawings absolutely, in order that the same shall be carefully preserved, as the collections are very good, and that none of them or any part thereof shall be at any time sold, but kept for the use of the said Colledge.’

The great majority of the pictures shown at present in the Library belong to the collection of which Christ Church became possessed in this manner, and which consists of some 250 paintings, a certain number of which are, however, not exhibited owing to lack of space.

General Guise was born in 1683 or 1682, the son of William Guise, of Winterbourne, co. Gloucester; he matriculated at Gloucester Hall on July 6, 1697, and again at Merton College on July 12, 1698, but took his degree of B.A. from Christ Church on March 20, 1701-2, having been admitted a student of the Middle Temple in 1700.¹ His military career was a long and honourable one. He was appointed captain and lieutenant-colonel of the First Foot Guards in 1706 and fought in Flanders under Marlborough and Ormonde; subsequently he took part in the Vigo expedition in 1719, the Carthagena expedition in 1739, and the campaign in Scotland in 1745.¹ In 1753 he was appointed Governor of Berwick, and held this post to his death. He is referred to more than once in the letters of Horace Walpole, who described him as 'a very brave officer, but apt to romance; and a great connoisseur in pictures'.² Writing to Horace Mann on July 7, 1742, Walpole says: 'Your relation Guise is arrived from Carthagena, madder than ever. As he was marching up to one of the forts, all his men deserted him; his lieutenant advised him to retire; he replied, "He never had turned his back yet and would not now", and stood all the fire. When the pelicans were flying over his head, he cried out: "What would Chloe give for some of these to make a pelican pie!"'³ When he is brave enough to perform such actions really as are almost incredible, what pity it is that he should for ever persist in saying things that are totally so!⁴ 'I have heard Guise affirm', says Walpole in another place, 'that the colliers at Newcastle feed their children with fire-shovels.'¹

Dallaway states that Guise 'served under Field-Marshal Wade, and acquired a love of painting from him'. The same writer tells us, moreover, that Guise collected pictures for Frederick Louis, Prince of Wales, and was much patronized by the Duke of Cumberland.² According to an anonymous writer in vol. iv of the Library of the Fine Arts (London, 1832), the Guise collection 'was formed during a long residence on the Continent and especially at Rome'. That Guise visited Italy is certain—his portrait as a Roman general was painted by Gavin Hamilton at Rome; but a considerable part of the collection as now existing was undoubtedly brought together in England. The collection illustrates perfectly the prevalent taste among the cognoscenti of the period during which it was formed, consisting as it does almost entirely of works (or copies after works) of the Italian school of the sixteenth or seventeenth centuries. It must be owned, however, that the general standard of the collection is not very high; there are plenty of copies and poor school-pieces in it, and it does not contain any works of the first importance from the artistic or historical point of view—in this last respect the difference between the Guise collection of paintings and the Guise collection of drawings is certainly very marked. But while this is so, it is, on the other hand, only fair to acknowledge that many of the paintings, either through their artistic merit or for other reasons, have an incontestable claim on our attention. Among the most remarkable of the pictures of this class may be mentioned: the two Bacchiaccas (Nos. 59 and 60); the three fragments of the cartoons for the tapestries of the Consistorial Hall in the Vatican, from the school of Raphael (Nos. 79, 80, 81); the Portrait of a Man, attributed to Lodovico Carracci (No. 130); the Virgin and Child surrounded by Angels (No. 134) and the Butcher's Shop (No. 136), by Annibale Carracci; the Flight into Egypt, by Lanfranco (No. 148); the two landscapes by Domenichino (Nos. 149, 150); the brilliant Judith with the head of Holofernes, by Bernardino Strozzi (No. 178); Christ bearing the Cross, from the school of Andrea Mantegna (No. 183); the Adoration of the Shepherds, by Girolamo da Treviso (No. 202); the two Andrea Schiavones (Nos. 219 and 220); the Christ crowned with Thorns, by Francesco Bassano (No. 209); the Nativity, by Zuccarelli (No. 248); the Birth of the Virgin, by an unidentified but very accomplished artist of the Venetian school of the eighteenth century (No. 249); and the Soldier on Horseback, by Van Dyck (No. 323).

The collection in its present form did not exist at the time when General Guise made his will; on the contrary, during the last five years of his life he parted with some of the pictures owned by him and acquired over a hundred others. After the General's death, there arose a dispute between his executor, Mr. Barrow, and Christ Church, as to whether the pictures acquired after the will was made were also to become the property of Christ Church. The matter was settled in the Court of Chancery on Feb. 6, 1761, by a decree that the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church were entitled to all the pictures of which the testator had been possessed at the time of his death.¹ The writer in the Library of the Fine Arts, above quoted, stated that the relatives of General Guise 'were much disappointed at the bequest, the collection having been valued by the General at 25000*l.*, and esteemed by him and his friends equal to any at that time in England'. Consequently, we are told, the portrait of General Guise, by Gavin Hamilton, was sent by Christ Church to Sir John Guise, a near relation of the General, 'somewhat as a peace offering', together with a Madonna.

A melancholy chapter in the history of the Guise collection is the one relating to the restoration of the pictures soon after they had become the property of Christ Church. The following account is given of the episode in the Library of the Fine Arts: 'Upon obtaining possession of them [i. e. the pictures], the College fitted up a suite of rooms under the great library. Some years after, certain connoisseurs of the College, who had the care of them, decided that they all wanted cleaning, and in an evil hour they employed a German picture-restorer, commonly known as "Old Bonus", to undertake the perilous job.² The effect was a manifest and scarcely recoverable injury to many of the pictures, as the better informed had prognosticated would inevitably happen. He profusely applied strong spirit, varnishes, macguilp, and actual bodily scrubbing without remorse.' It can, unfortunately, not be said that this account in any way exaggerates the injury which was done to the collection through the exertions of the so-called restorer.

Next to the pictures of the Guise Bequest, the largest contingents of the collection are the two presented, respectively, in 1828 by the Hon. W. T. H. Fox-Strangways (subsequently fourth Earl of Ilchester), and in 1897 jointly by Miss C. E. Landor and Miss Duke. Both these contingents have very much the same character, the former consisting mainly, and the latter exclusively, of works of the Italian schools of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. The pictures presented by Miss Landor and Miss Duke once formed part of the collections of Walter Savage Landor, who is known to have been one of the pioneers in the appreciation of the Italian primitives. Mr. Fox-Strangways, who was born in 1795 and died in 1865 after a distinguished career as a diplomatist, was a student at Christ Church from 1813 to 1824, taking the degree of B.A. in 1816 and of M.A. in 1820. He entered the diplomatic career in 1819 and served as Secretary of Legation at Florence from 1825 to 1828, the year in which he presented the above-mentioned collection of pictures to Christ Church; later, in 1850, another collection of kindred character was given by him to the Ashmolean Museum, while a number of Italian paintings collected by him remained at Abbotsbury Castle, where they perished in the fire which in 1913 destroyed that building. The pictures presented by him to Christ Church were clearly collected during his years of residence at Florence; as for those given to the Ashmolean Museum, Mr. Fox-Strangways says himself, in a letter dated February 14, 1850, communicated to the present writer by Mr. C. F. Bell, that 'they were bought at Rome some years later'—a statement which cannot, however, refer to all the pictures of his second gift, since the Guidi collection at Florence, whence came two pictures now at Christ Church—the St. Francis by Granacci (No. 55) and The Philosopher by Salvator Rosa (No. 172)—is also the provenance of the portrait of Garcia de' Medici by Bronzino in the Ashmolean Museum, and no doubt, too, of the companion pictures, in the latter collection, to the Granacci at Christ Church. Walter Savage Landor was settled in Florence since 1821; and tradition has it that he and Mr. Fox-Strangways co-operated in their activity as collectors. It is no doubt true that both these contingents include a good many feeble and nondescript school-pieces; but one also finds among the pictures several works of considerable importance and interest. Among those in the Fox-Strangways collection may be quoted: the St. John the Baptist enthroned (No. 6), the Fragment of an Altar-piece (No. 7), the Male Saint (No. 12), and the Virgin and Child with Six Saints (No. 18) all of them works of the Florentine school of the Trecento; the Madonna, by the Maestro del Bambino Vispo (No. 20); the Virgin adoring the Child, by Jacopo del Sellaio (No. 32); the Sibyls, from the school of Botticelli (Nos. 33, 34); the Centaur, by

INTRODUCTION

Filippino Lippi (No. 38); the Madonna, by Bartolomeo di Giovanni (No. 39); the two Madonnas, by 'Giambattista Utili' (Nos. 40, 41); the Magdalen, by Raffaellino del Garbo (No. 42); the St. Francis, by Francesco Granacci (No. 55); the Pietà, by an artist akin to Ridolfo Ghirlandaio (No. 56); the little Triptych from the school of Duccio (No. 70); the Madonna with Saints, by Sano di Pietro (No. 71); the Madonna with Angels, from the school of Piero della Francesca (No. 75); and the St. Christopher, by Matteo Balducci (No. 77). Among the Italian pictures of later date may be mentioned the fine Philosopher, by Salvator Rosa (No. 172); and to this contingent also belongs the fragment of a Deposition of Christ, possibly by Hugo van der Goes (No. 313). The most remarkable of the pictures of the Landor-Duke Gift are the Madonna, by a Florentine artist of about 1350 (No. 8); the Virgin and Child, from the school of Lorenzo Monaco (No. 19); the little altar-piece by Neri di Bicci (No. 31); the Madonna and Saints, by Sano di Pietro (No. 72); the beautiful little Crucifixion, by Giovanni di Paolo (No. 73); and the Madonna with Angels, by Guidoccio Cozzarelli (No. 74).

In addition to the pictures from the sources now described, the collection in the Library also contains a number of other works, presented or bequeathed to Christ Church at various periods. Deserving of special mention among them are: the fragment of the cartoon for one of the tapestries for the Consistorial Hall in the Vatican, from the school of Raphael (No. 78), presented by Miss Anne Cracherode in 1799 or 1800; the two portraits by an artist of the Flemish school of about 1540

INTRODUCTION

(Nos. 315, 316), bequeathed by Dr. Stratford (d. 1729); the Continnence of Scipio, from the school of Rubens (No. 321), presented by Lord Frederick Campbell in 1809; the Deposition, a work of the Dutch school about 1500 (No. 330), presented by Dr. Vansittart in 1833; the Scullion of Christ Church, by John Riley (No. 339), formerly in the Chapter-house; and the portrait of General Guise by Sir Joshua Reynolds (No. 341), presented by the first Earl of Morley and in the collection by 1800. The whole collection, if it is not a representative one in the sense of the standard type of our modern museums, has, by compensation, the charm attaching to a gallery which clearly reflects the taste of the persons who have contributed to form it at different periods—whether this taste be the fashionable one of the day, as in the case of General Guise, or in advance of it, as in the case of the Hon. W. T. H. Fox-Strangways and Walter Savage Landor.

A word may now be said of the various catalogues of the collection which have preceded the present one. The earliest known catalogue of the Guise collection is the one which appears in vol. iii, pp. 18-36, of London and its Environs Described, an anonymous guide-book in six volumes printed for R. and J. Dodsley, Pall Mall, in 1761—that is to say, when General Guise was still alive.¹ The pictures are described as they hung in General Guise's house in George Street, Hanover Square; the list—which ¹ Mr. C. F. Bell, who kindly drew the attention of the present writer to this publication, points out that the materials for it were probably put together somewhat earlier than 1761; this is proved by the references to George II as the reigning sovereign, as well as by the dedication to the Prince of Wales, i. e. George III.

INTRODUCTION

is reprinted practically unchanged in the description of Christ Church in T. Martyn's work, The English Connoisseur, London, 1766, vol. ii, pp. 49-67—comprises 137 pictures, several of which are not now to be found at Christ Church, they having—as stated before—been sold by the General between 1760 and 1765. This catalogue is written in a very panegyric style, with plenty of high-sounding but absolutely untenable attributions; it evidently represents the views of the General and his friends and advisers, and must be identical with the catalogue which the report of the lawsuit referred to above mentions as having been prepared for the General in 1760 by 'Mr. Cypriani'—clearly none other than Giovanni Battista Cipriani, the well-known artist and friend of Bartolozzi, who had come to England in 1755. The earliest official catalogue of the collection after it had become the property of Christ Church bears the title 'A Catalogue of the Collection of Pictures in the Library at Christ-Church which were bequeathed to the College by the late General Guise. To which is added a Catalogue of the Portraits in Christ-Church Hall' (8vo, 17 pp.). It is undated, but the Catalogue of the British Museum Library suggests that it may date from 1770;¹ in the present catalogue it is referred to as the A Catalogue. The pictures are described according to their disposition in the rooms of the Library, no numbers or sizes being given; the descriptions are often exasperatingly laconic—'a sketch', 'a portrait', 'a small ¹ The only copy of this catalogue known to the present writer is the one in the British Museum, to which it was bequeathed by the Rev. C. M. Cracherode (d. 1799).

INTRODUCTION

head', &c.—and many of the attributions are anything but well-advised. The number of pictures and drawings described in this catalogue as being in the Library is 257, to which may be added three in the Anatomy School—all of these bequeathed by General Guise, except the portraits of Henry VIII (No. 312) and of Cardinal Wolsey (No. 337); moreover two pictures of the Guise collection, and certain others now shown in the Library, are mentioned as being in the Chapter-house. This catalogue is reprinted, in so far as it relates to the pictures in the Library and the Anatomy School, with slight modifications and alterations, in an article in the Library of the Fine Arts, vol. iv (London, 1832), pp. 116-23, entitled 'Guise Collection of Paintings at Oxford', which also contains some interesting information, quoted above, concerning the history of the collection. Reference of varying length is made to the collection in the Library in numerous Oxford guide-books of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries: as a full and useful list may be instanced the one given in The Perambulation of Oxford, Blenheim, and Nuneham, 1824, pp. 147 sqq.

In 1833 a catalogue of the collection in the Library appeared under the title 'A Catalogue of the Collection of Pictures in the Library at Christ Church, Oxford, bequeathed to the College by the late General Guise, 1765, and of the Additions made by subsequent Donations; also a Catalogue of the Pictures in Christ Church Hall' (Oxford, printed by W. Baxter, 8vo, viii + 32 pp.) In this catalogue the pictures are numbered (the highest number being 295); but these numbers have unfortunately not been recorded on the pictures in a permanent way, and as no sizes are given, as many of the descriptions are just as short as before, and many of the attributions just as fantastic, it is very often impossible to identify the entries in this catalogue with the pictures in the collection. Quite a number of pictures of a provenance other than the Guise collection are mentioned in this catalogue, among them most, though not all, of the pictures of the Fox-Strangways Gift. Of other works dealing with the collection, Dallaway's Anecdotes brings some valuable information.¹ Passavant's Kunstreise, on the other hand, contains but very brief notes on the pictures,² and Waagen dispatches them even more summarily.³

The present catalogue is arranged according to schools, and within them the pictures are disposed, as far as possible, in historical sequence. It only contains the pictures now on view in the Library; about seventy paintings, mostly from the Guise collection, were withdrawn from public view when, about fifty years ago, the space occupied by them was required for other purposes. The numbers left out in the present catalogue belong to these pictures, some of which would certainly be worthy of inclusion in the exhibited series, while the absence of others need not be regretted, even if they are not inferior to certain of the paintings shown. References are given, wherever possible, to the previous catalogues, and the perusal of the earlier attributions will presumably in many cases prove a source of mild amusement. Since so many of the pictures are works by minor artists of periods the scientific study of which has not yet been seriously taken in hand, it has been inevitable to leave certain attributions rather vague—a defect which, it is hoped, may be remedied in future years.

³ G. F. Waagen, Treasures of Art in Great Britain (London, 1854-57), iii. 47. He remarks: 'Among a series of pictures of the Tuscan school of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, which is a rarity in England, there are . . . several worthy of notice—the painters of which are in part erroneously given; of some of them I was able to tell Professor Buckland, with certainty, the real masters.'

INTRODUCTION

The author takes great pleasure in expressing his deep sense of obligation to all those who have assisted him in carrying out his task. He wishes, above all, to place on record his indebtedness to the authorities of Christ Church, and in particular to the Librarian, Mr. H. W. Blunt, for the facilities given him throughout the work; to Mr. C. F. Bell for constant help and counsel; and to the Earl of Ilchester, Mr. C. P. Sanger, and Mr. A. P. Oppé for valuable assistance in various ways.

NOTE

The measurements are given in inches and centimetres, height preceding width.

An asterisk denotes that the picture is included among the reproductions.

BYZANTINE SCHOOL

1. Byzantine School, XVI century.

St. George and the Dragon.

Panel, $10\frac{3}{8}$ by $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. (26.2 by 23.3 cm.).

Fox-Strangways Gift.

1833 Cat. No. 127 ('by a Greek Painter, 1514'. No date can, however, now be made out on the picture).

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 189.

Passavant, Kunstreise, p. 159 (mentioning a similar picture as having been seen by him 'at Naples'). A variant of this type of composition (St. George charging towards the right, and alone on the horse's back) is seen on the left wing of a Byzantine triptych in the Vatican (reproduced in A. Muñoz, L'Art byzantin à l'exposition de Grottaferrata, Rome, 1906, p. 43). Another oft-repeated Byzantine scheme of composition for this subject shows behind the saint a figure on a smaller scale, astride on the horse, holding a jug (cf. G. Schäfer, 'Ερμηνεία τῆς ζωγραφικῆς, Das Handbuch der Malerei vom Berge Athos, Trèves, 1855, p. 354, n. 1); as an instance of this scheme may be quoted a picture in the Museum at Syracuse (reproduced in Bollettino d'arte, vii. 224), in which the saint is charging towards the left.

2. Byzantine School, XVI century.

The Agony in the Garden.

Panel, 14 by $10\frac{7}{8}$ in. (35.4 by 2.75 cm.).

Apparently presented by the Rev. Frederick Barnes, D.D. (d. 1859).

Inscribed at the back 'Maestro Paolo' (this refers no doubt to the XIV-century painter, Paolo da Venezia). At the back is also a label, containing a MS. note, dated 1844, stating that the picture was presented by Mr. John W. Brett to the Rev. Frederick Barnes.

From certain features of style it seems likely that this picture is by one of the numerous Greek painters active in Venice, and that it was painted in the XVI century—certainly not before.

3. Byzantine School, XVI century (or later).

The Virgin and Child with four Saints (Laurence, a male saint with a book, Peter and a bishop with a book). (The Virgin and the Saints three-quarter length.)

Panel, $24\frac{3}{4}$ by $37\frac{1}{2}$ in. (62.7 by 95 cm.).

Fox-Strangways Gift.

Not identifiable with any picture mentioned in the 1833 Cat.

Especially the treatment of the landscape gives ground for the belief that this is the work of a Graeco-Venetian painter, executed in the XVI century, or later.

4. Russian School, XVII-XVIII century.

Ikon. In the sunk centre of the panel, the half-length of St. Nicholas of Bari, with small half-lengths of Christ and the Virgin on each side in the upper corners. On the borders of the panel, full-lengths of St. John the Baptist and a female Saint. Inscriptions in Slavonic characters.

Panel, $11\frac{3}{4}$ by $10\frac{1}{4}$ in. (29.8 by 26 cm.).

Fox-Strangways Gift.

Not mentioned in the 1833 Cat.

An ikon of similar type, a work of the Moscow school, is reproduced in Muñoz, L'Art byzantin, p. 23.

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 13.

Engraved in L'Etruria pittrice (Florence, 1791-5), vol. i, plate v, as a work by Buffalmacco. In the text to this plate it is stated that the picture, which at that time belonged to the Florentine painter Vincenzo Gotti, had formerly been in the sacristy of the church of S. Maria degli Ughi at Florence.

Prof. Suida (in the Jahrbuch der kön. preuss. Kunsts., xxvi. 110, Monatshefte für Kunstwissenschaft, vii. 3) has ascribed this picture to the 'Master of the St. Cecilia altar-piece', a follower of Giotto, whose real name is so far unknown, and to whom Prof. Suida attributes a number of works, two of them dated 1307 and 1310 respectively.

7. Florentine School, c. 1340.

Fragment of altar-piece : four Angels playing on musical instruments, and mutilated figures of St. John the Baptist and a Bishop.

Fox-Strangways Gift.

1833 Cat. No. 113 (as 'Giotto or Gaddi').

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 17.

In all likelihood a fragment of a picture of the Madonna and Child with Angels and Saints. Prof. Suida (in Monatshefte für Kunstwissenschaft, vii. 3) has expressed the opinion that it was probably painted in the atelier of Giotto. It recalls undoubtedly to a certain extent the style of Taddeo Gaddi (d. 1366), but its affinity to the art of that master is scarcely intimate enough to justify its being ascribed to him definitely.

8. Florentine School, c. 1350.

The Virgin and Child; in the gable, a medallion containing a half-length of Christ in the act of blessing.

Landor-Duke Gift.

Label at back, 'Simone Memini'.

Ascribed by Prof. Suida (in Monatshefte für Kunstwissenschaft, vii. 4) to the 'Master of the altar-piece of S. Spirito', a hitherto anonymous artistic personality among the following of Maso, which has been reconstructed by that critic (see Rivista d'arte, v. 49 sqq.).

These pictures are inspired by the great fresco in the Campo Santo at Pisa, representing the Hermits of the Thebaid, which is the work of a follower of Pietro Lorenzetti. There exist several imitations of this fresco, containing a great number of scenes in one picture; one is in the Uffizi (No. 16) and two are in the collection of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres. It is not impossible that the present nine pictures have been cut out of a large composition of that type; some of them appear to have been subsequently enlarged. The style points to a Florentine artist of the early XV century.

A variant of this composition, by the same artist (the Virgin and Child with the Infant St. John and St. Antony of Padua), is in the Gallery at Faenza. These pictures belong to the quite extensive and well-defined œuvre of an artist who, judging from his style, must have studied in Florence under Verrocchio. There are several works by him at Faenza, and he has been identified by Signor Corrado Ricci (in Rivista d'arte, iv [1906], pp. 137 sqq.) with Giovanni Battista Utili. That the author of these works was an artist of Faenza seems probable enough; but there is no documentary proof that any of these pictures is by Giovanni Battista Utili, of whose art we possess no authenticated example.

A not very distinguished version of a motive which, like that of the two preceding pictures, enjoyed a great vogue among Leonardo's Milanese following and probably has its foundation in a drawing by the master himself. In some examples (e.g. those in the Naples Museum [Sala VI, No. 19], at Hampton Court [No. 391], and in the Mond collection) the group of the two infants is seen, as here, alone; in others the figure of the Madonna is added (picture by Bernardino dei Conti in the Brera [No. 271], and by Luini in the Prado [No. 242], where St. Joseph is also introduced). (B) SIENESE SCHOOL

69. Sienese School, XIV century.

Altar-piece ; four tiers of compartments with three in each ; above, the Virgin and Child between St. Paul and a female saint ; below, nine scenes from the Passion (Last Supper ; Christ washing feet of Apostles ; Agony in the Garden ; Capture of Christ ; Pilate washing his hands ; Christ before Pilate ; Christ crowned with thorns ; Scourging of Christ ; Christ bearing the Cross).

Panel, trapezoidal top, $22\frac{1}{2}$ by 18 in. (57 by 45.5 cm.).

Landor-Duke Gift.

*70. Duccio (School of). Duccio di Buoninsegna, first mentioned in 1278 ; died in July 1319.

Triptych ; central compartment : The Virgin and Child enthroned, with six angels and a kneeling donor ; left wing : The Crucifixion ; right wing : St. Francis receiving the Stigmata.

Panel ; central compartment, $14\frac{1}{2}$ by 10 in. (36.7 by 25.3 cm.) ; wings, $11\frac{1}{4}$ by $3\frac{7}{8}$ in. (28.5 by 9.5 cm.).

Fox-Strangways Gift.

1833 Cat., No. 117 (as Cimabue).

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 7.

Crowe and Cavalcaselle, History of Painting in Italy, 2nd ed., i. 184, n. 2 (as the work of a follower of Duccio). Mr. Langton Douglas (ibid. iii. 28, n. 1) assigns this triptych to Segna di Buonaventura (a follower of Duccio whose name appears in records between 1298 to 1326) ; but this attribution does not seem quite convincing.

Piero della Francesca (School of)—continued.

Exhibited at the Burlington Fine Arts Club, Umbrian Exhibition, 1909-10, No. 3 (reproduced in Illustrated Catalogue).

This picture has been accepted as an original work of Piero della Francesca by some writers (e.g. H. Ulmann, in Repertorium für Kunstwissenschaft, xvii [1894], p. 494; F. Witting, Piero dei Franceschi, Strassburg, 1898, pp. 36 sqq., with reproduction; and W. G. Waters, Piero della Francesca, London, 1901, p. 66 sq., with reproduction); but most competent critics are agreed in refusing to take that view. Crowe and Cavalcaselle (History of Italian Painting, 2nd ed., v. 32, n. 2) justly note that it is 'in the same style' as a Madonna in the collection of the Marchesa di Villamarina at Rome (the figure of the Madonna being in part drawn from the same cartoon) which belongs to the school of Piero, and which the writings in question assign to a group of works 'bearing the impress, but not revealing the perfect manner of a great master', for which they think the name of Fra Carnevale—a painter of Urbino who died in 1484, but of whose style nothing is known—might be taken as a conventional label. Prof. A. Venturi (Storia dell' arte italiana, vol. vii, pt. i, pp. 478, 480, and pt. ii, p. 98, with reproduction) also connects the name of Fra Carnevale with this picture; while Mr. Berenson (Central Italian Painters, p. 144) assigns it to Don Bartolomeo della Gatta, a pupil of Piero della Francesca's, whose authentic works do not, however, seem to afford strong evidence in favour of that view.

Mr. Roger Fry, writing of the present picture in the Burlington Magazine (xvi. 267), 'cannot accept the meagre flaccid forms . . . for his (i. e. Piero della Francesca's) in spite of the disquieting strangeness of the design and the superb quality of the colour in those parts which have escaped restoration'. In this verdict the present writer fully concurs, and would look upon the picture as in all likelihood having been executed in the bottega of Piero, though only under the supervision of the master himself.

UMBRIAN SCHOOL

76. Umbrian School, c. 1500.

The Virgin and Child, with Four Angels (The Virgin and the two foremost Angels three-quarter lengths).

Panel, 11 by 10 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. (27.8 by 25.8 cm.).

Fox-Strangways Gift.

1833 Cat., No. 124 (as Francesco Francia).

The work of an Umbrian painter akin to Pinturicchio.

*77. Balducci, Matteo. Born at Fontignano towards the end of the XV century : still living in 1553. Active at Siena and Città della Pieve. Follower of Pinturicchio.

St. Christopher.

Panel, arched top, 28 $\frac{5}{8}$ by 18 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (72.5 by 47.5 cm.).

Raphael (School of)—continued.

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 34 (Old Master Drawings Section).

Exhibited at Burlington House, Old Masters, 1902, No. 290.

Fragment of one of the three cartoons, executed by Raphael's pupils for the subject of the Massacre of the Innocents, in the series of tapestries for the Consistorial Hall in the Vatican (now in the Galleria degli Arazzi). *79. Raphael (School of).

Woman in profile to the left (bust; fragment).

Paper, 22 by 15 in. (55.8 by 38 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

Lond. and Env. iii. 30; Eng. Conn. ii. 60.—A Cat., p. 7.—1833 Cat., one of Nos. 157-9.

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 35 (Old Master Drawings Section).

Exhibited at Burlington House, Old Masters, 1902, No. 292.

Fragment of the cartoon, executed by the pupils of Raphael for the subject of the Presentation in the Temple, in the series of tapestries for the Consistorial Hall in the Vatican. The present head is that of the woman on the extreme right (left of tapestry).

Passavant (Kunstreise, p. 60) mistakenly inclines to the belief that this head is identical with one in the cartoon of SS. Peter and John at the Beautiful Gate; the same wrong identification in Crowe and Cavalcaselle, Raphael, ii. 296 n.

*80. Raphael (School of).

Man, bearded, in profile to the right.

From the collection of Charles I (marked at the back by the 'CR' surmounted by a crown). One of a series of ten pictures referred to as follows, in the Mantuan Inventory of 1627: 'Dieci altri quadri dipintovi un Imperator per quadro a cavallo, opera di mano di Giulio Romano, con cornici fregiate d'oro, stimati scuti 100, L. 600' (Luzio, La Galleria dei Gonzaga venduta all' Inghilterra, Milan, 1913, p. 92). In the Commonwealth Inventory of Charles I's pictures, the series is however described as containing eleven numbers, and valued at £1,100, for which sum the set was sold. Two more pictures of this series are at Hampton Court (Nos. 149 and 168); the others cannot now be traced.

Panel (oak), $14\frac{1}{4}$ by $11\frac{1}{2}$ in. (36 by 29 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

A Cat., p. 9.—1833 Cat., No. 228.

Inscribed at the back, 'Paint par Perino Dell Vago pour les College des Domenecins à Florence 1541'. I have been unable to find any record of a picture painted by Perino del Vaga for 'the College of Dominicans' at Florence; if such a picture ever existed, this one would in all probability be a copy after it. But the style shows little or no resemblance to that of Perino del Vaga; indeed it points, in conjunction with the fact that the picture is painted on oak, to a Flemish or German artist of the time about 1600.

91. Daniele da Volterra (Copy after). Daniele Ricciarelli, called Daniele da Volterra, born at Volterra about 1509; died at Rome on April 4, 1566. Studied under Sodoma and Baldassare Peruzzi; assistant of Perino del Vaga; influenced by Michelangelo.

Panel, $28\frac{1}{2}$ by $21\frac{1}{4}$ in. (72.2 by 54 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

A Cat., p. 2.—1833 Cat., No. 283 (in both cases as Schidoni).

128. Schidoni (?).

The Lamentation over the Dead Christ (Christ supported by an Angel; on the left the grieving Virgin; behind, two Angels with candles).

Panel (oak), 42 by $29\frac{3}{4}$ in. (106.5 by 75.3 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

A Cat., p. 9.—1833 Cat., No. 285 (in both cases as Schidoni).

Not unlike Schidoni in style, but still doubtful as a work by him, especially as it is painted on oak.

129. Badalocchio, Sisto. Born at Parma on June 28, 1585; died at Bologna in 1647. Pupil of Annibale Carracci; imitator of Correggio.

According to a tradition, which cannot be traced back any further than to the list of the Guise pictures in Lond. and Env., this picture represents various members of the Carracci family. ‘Annibal is weighing some meat to a Swiss of the Cardinal of Bologna’s guard. Agostino is shaking a nail, and trying if it holds fast, that he may hang on it a leg of mutton which he holds in his left hand. The Gobbo is lifting up a calf to hang it on a beam, and Lodovico stoops down killing a sheep. The mother of them is represented as a servant-maid that comes to buy some meat' (Lond. and Env. u. s.). Dallaway (Anecdotes, pp. 489 sqq.) adds the following details concerning the history of the picture: 'There is an anecdote of this picture, that it was painted in order to mortify the pride of Lodovico, his [i. e. Annibale's] brother (sic), who affected to conceal the meanness of his origin. One day it was unexpectedly exhibited in the saloon of the cardinal Farnese, his patron, when surrounded by Roman nobility of whose notice and society Lodovico was so ambitious. . . . A striking resemblance in the heads will be found to those engraved from the originals, in the Museum Florentinum. . . . In every point of consideration this picture is a great curiosity, and is said to have cost Gen. Guise 1,000*l.* sterling at Naples, where it was removed with the Farnese collection.' It must be noted, however, that there is no entry corresponding to this picture in either of the inventories of the Farnese collection (of 1680 and 1708) printed in Campori's Raccolta di Cataloghi (Modena, 1870); and whether there is anything in the story that the figures are portraits of members of the Carracci family seems extremely doubtful, in spite of the fact that Lodovico's father is known to have been a butcher. Interiors of butchers' and fishmongers' shops are not unusual subjects in Italian painting of the Baroque period; attention may be drawn in this connexion to two pictures in the Messinger collection at Munich, which have been assigned to a Bolognese painter of an earlier generation than Annibale Carracci, namely, Bartolomeo Passerotti (see A. Venturi, in L'Arte, xvi. 152, with reproductions, p. 146 sq.).

BOLOGNESE SCHOOL

Companion picture to No. 138.

Another version of this composition (on copper, size 16 by 13 in.), assigned to Annibale Carracci, was formerly in the Leuchtenberg Gallery (No. 69) and is engraved in outline in the catalogue of that collection published in 1852. The present version is probably a copy, though not necessarily of the Leuchtenberg picture.

From the collection of Charles I (marked with the 'C. R.' surmounted by a crown, at the back of the second canvas).

Probably identical with the picture referred to in the Inventory of the pictures at Hampton Court that had belonged to Charles I (now in the Office of Land Revenue Records) as follows: 'No. 157. Christ carrying y^e Cross, by Andrea Mantenger' (appraised at £40), (see H. G. Hewlett, in the Nineteenth Century, August, 1890, vol. xxviii, p. 214); and again with the 'Carrying the Cross' by Montagna (sic) mentioned in the Inventory of Charles I's collection in the National Art Library (see Sir Claude Phillips, The Picture Gallery of Charles I, London, 1896, p. 73 sq.). Crowe and Cavalcaselle (History of Painting in North Italy, 2nd ed., ii, 119, n. 2) moreover suggest that the present picture may be the one described in the Inventory of the collection of the Duke of Mantua, drawn up in 1627, as follows: 'Un quadro con N. S. che porta la croce, mezza figura, oppera di Mantegna con ornamento fregiato d'oro, L. 90' (A. Luzio, La Galleria dei Gonzaga venduta all' Inghilterra, Milan, 1913, p. 97).

Exhibited at Manchester in 1857. No. 97.

Crowe and Cavalcaselle hold that there would be some reason for ascribing this picture to Francesco Mantegna, the son of Andrea, if the frescoes of the four Evangelists on the ceiling of the Mantegna Chapel in S. Andrea at Mantua could be regarded as a work by Francesco.

P. Kristeller, Andrea Mantegna, London, 1901, p. 453 ('by a Veronese pupil of Mantegna').

The picture is clearly by an artist imitating the style of Mantegna towards the end of his career.

A picture of the same subject and similar character is in the Museo Civico at Verona (No. 153).

Guise Bequest.

1833 Cat., No. 12 (as 'Giov. Bellini').

Two other versions of this composition, in a similar style, are known : one in the Venice Academy (No. 101), the other in the collection of Mr. R. H. Benson in London. The picture at Venice has long been assigned to Marco Belli, a pupil of Giovanni Bellini, who died in 1523, and whose only authenticated work is a copy, in the Gallery at Rovigo, of Bellini's Circumcision of Christ. That being the case, it is somewhat difficult to form an idea of the character of Marco Belli's style, but it does not seem that his art, as exemplified in that signed picture, shows any very close analogies to the three Madonnas above mentioned. As the antiquity of the tradition which connects Marco Belli's name with the Venice picture is not known, it seems preferable to abandon that name for the three paintings in question, which, on the other hand, as regards form, design, and colouring, remind one very strongly of the later work of Catena, though betraying the hand of a pupil rather than of the master himself.

185. Titian (School of). Tiziano Vecellio, born at Pieve di Cadore in 1477 ; died at Venice on Aug. 27, 1576. Studied first, for brief periods, under Sebastiano Zuccato and Gentile Bellini ; subsequently pupil of Giovanni Bellini ; influenced by Giorgione and Michelangelo.

Probably identical with a picture mentioned in the following entry in the Mantuan inventory of 1627: 'Doi quadri sopra l'ussi, in uno dipintovi un Presepio di mano di Titiano, con cornice nera fregiata d'oro, stimato scuti 40 . . .' A work of some interest, as showing the efforts of a retardataire to adapt himself to the methods of his more advanced contemporaries. The composition recalls, in its general lines, one which enjoyed a great vogue among the pupils of Bellini at the beginning of the XVI century (picture by Bartolomeo Veneto in the Gallery at Stuttgart [No. 428] &c.) ; and the drawing of the Virgin's left hand is very Bellinesque. At the same time, the type of the Madonna shows a distinct imitation of Titian, recalling especially that in a Marriage of St. Catherine existing in many versions (in the Cook collection, Richmond, the Reimers collection, Berlin, &c.), and in which there also occurs a figure of St. John very like the one in the present picture. There is, moreover, here an attempt to imitate Titian's breadth of treatment, though in certain passages the older methods of a minute realization of form still obtain. To connect the name of a definite artist with this picture does not seem possible.

This picture is stated in the 1833 Catalogue to have been in the collection of Charles I. There is, however, no earlier evidence to that effect, and the mark of Charles I is not, now at any rate, visible at the back of the panel.

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 173.

At least three versions of this composition are known to ~~artists~~ ^{ist}: the present one; one in the Dresden Gallery (No. 201 B; purchased at Madrid in 1744; size 86 by 118 cm.); and one which in 1828 belonged to Signor Serantoni, an engineer of Genoa, and is described in a publication entitled Memoria di tre quadri originali di Raffaele che fanno collezione alle sue tre maniere, but cannot be traced at present. One version—whether the present one must remain uncertain—has been engraved by C. Bloemaert (reversedly); the plate is dedicated to the Emperor Ferdinand III (1637-57) by the then owner of the picture, Giambattista Franceschi of Venice, who assigns it in his dedication to Raphael. It is presumably the same picture as that engraved by Pietro del Po (1610-92). According to Passavant (Raphaël d'Urbain, ii. 153) there also exists a description, in French, of a version of this composition, due to one Giacomo delli Ascani, and dedicated to Louis XV; an Italian translation of it, by S. M. Rangoni, appeared at Bologna in 1720. In this publication the theory is put forward that the picture discussed is identical with the Nativity which Raphael, according to Vasari, painted for the Canossa family, though this is now ascertained to be identical with the famous painting known as 'La Perla' in the Gallery at Madrid. The picture discussed by Ascani is probably the one engraved by Antonio Crespi (1704-81), and there exists yet a fourth engraving of this composition, in which, however, portions at each end are omitted; the engraving in question is anonymous, and published by Vallet in Paris. Already Mariette (Abecedario, i. 136) denied that the picture engraved by Bloemaert could be by Raphael, and ascribed it tentatively to Andrea Schiavone. The attribution to Girolamo da Treviso was apparently first put forward by the late Dr. G. Ludwig (see Loeser, in Repertorium für Kunstwissenschaft, xx. 330), and is indeed warranted beyond any doubt by the style of the picture. It may be noted that in the group of the Virgin and Child an influence from Raphael's lost Madonna di Loreto is clearly traceable. As the Serantoni version is now untraceable, it is for the present impossible to enter upon a discussion of the question as to which is the original of the three known examples.

This and the next three pictures are copies after some of the figures of gods and goddesses painted by Paul Veronese on the ceiling of a room in the Palazzo Trevisan at Murano. The frescoes in that building, which were executed by Paul Veronese and Zelotti, probably about 1557 (cf. Von Hadeln in the Jahrbuch der kön. preuss. Kunsts. xxxv. 177 and xxxvi. 116), no longer exist; they are referred to briefly by Vasari (ed. Sansoni, vi. 372), and at some length by Ridolfi (Le Maraviglie, i. 309 sqq.), according to whom the series of gods and goddesses above mentioned included figures of Janus and Saturn, Jupiter and Juno, Bacchus and Apollo, and Neptune and Cybele. The figures of Juno and Cybele are reproduced in A. M. Zanetti's Varie pitture a fresco de' principali maestri veneziani (Venice, 1760), plates 23, 24; and since they correspond to Nos. 224 and 226 in this collection, we are enabled to conclude that the other two pictures in the series, the present one and No. 225 (Neptune), also are copies after figures in the frescoes in question. This identification is a matter of some interest, as no other reproductions of the two last-mentioned figures are known to exist.

The author of this brilliant little sketch must clearly be looked for among the more distinguished exponents of the art of the Venetian Rococo; both Sebastiano Ricci (see above) and Giambattista Pittoni (1687-1767) are names which immediately suggest themselves in this connection, but neither of them may be said to carry conviction, and the authorship of this work must therefore for the present remain an open question.

In all the previous catalogues this picture is entered as a work by Viviani, the figures in which have been painted by Sebastiano Ricci. The figures show, indeed, some affinity to the style of Ricci, but there can be no question of his having worked in conjunction with Viviani (Viviano Codagora), who died in 1672. The style of the whole picture points to the XVIII century.

Assigned by Dr. L. Ozzola (in L'Arte, xvi. 116, n. 3) to Codagora.

SPANISH SCHOOL

306. Spanish School, XVII century.

Two Spanish Figures : a youth seated playing the lute ; behind him a boy.

Canvas, $37\frac{1}{2}$ by $28\frac{1}{2}$ in. (95 by 72.3 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

Lond. and Env. iii. 33 ; Eng. Com. ii. 63 ('by the celebrated Spanish disciple of Titian, Fernandos', which probably refers to Fernandez Navarrete, called El Mudo, c. 1506-79).—A Cat., p. 10 (as Fernandez).—1833 Cat., No. 188 (as 'Anton Ar. Fernandez', i.e. Antonio Arias Fernandez, an artist of the Madrid School, died in 1684).

FRENCH SCHOOL

308. Bourguignon. Jacques Courtois, called Le Bourguignon, born on Feb. 12, 1621, at St.-Hippolyte in the Franche-Comté; died at Rome on Nov. 14, 1675.

Battle Scene.

Canvas, 29 by 51 in. (73.5 by 129.2 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

Lond. and Env. iii. 20 sq.; Eng. Conn. ii. 51.—A Cat., p. 13.
—1833 Cat., No. 205 (everywhere as Bourguignon).

GERMAN SCHOOL

310. German School, c. 1520.

Portrait of a Man (bust).

Panel, oak, $10\frac{3}{4}$ by $8\frac{7}{8}$ in. (27.2 by 22.5 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

A Cat., p. 11 ('A small head, by Hans Holbein').—1833 Cat., No. 247 or 249 (Heads assigned to Holbein).

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 899 (as School of Bellini).

*311. German School, c. 1530.

Portrait of a Man (half-length).

Panel (oak), $14\frac{1}{2}$ by $12\frac{1}{4}$ in. (36.7 by 31 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

A Cat., p. 5 or p. 8 ('An head, by Hans Holbein').—1833 Cat., No. 250 (as Holbein).

From the collection of Charles I (marked at the back with the initials 'CR', surmounted by a crown).

312. Holbein (Imitator of). Hans Holbein the younger, born at Augsburg in 1497; died in London, in the autumn of 1543. Pupil of his father, Hans Holbein the elder.

Portrait of Henry VIII (bust).

Panel (oak), 19 by 14 in. (48 by 35.4 cm.).

Presented by Philip Barton, D.D. (d. 1765).

A Cat., p. 7.—1833 Cat., No. 2.

One of the numerous imitations of the portrait of Henry VIII, by Holbein, formerly at Whitehall Palace, and destroyed in 1648.

FLEMISH SCHOOL

*313. Goes, Hugo van der. Born, probably at Goes in Zeeland, about 1440; died in 1482 at Rooden Clooster, near Soignies.

The Virgin and St. John (fragment of a picture of the Lamentation over the Dead Christ).

Linen, 16 by 17 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (40.5 by 45 cm.).

Fox-Strangways Gift.

The 1833 Cat. (No. 129) assigns this picture to Mantegna, and states that it 'is the fragment of a picture saved from a fire in the Durazzo Palace at Genoa'. That it is the work of a Flemish artist is however clear, and was already recognized when the picture was exhibited at Manchester in 1857 (No. 408). In recent years attention was drawn to this picture by Mr. C. J. Holmes (in the Burlington Magazine, xi [1907], p. 328), who quotes a suggestion of Mr. W. H. J. Weale to the effect that the present picture is a work of the school of Tournai. The first to couple it with the name of Hugo van der Goes was apparently M. E. Durand-Gréville (in the Bulletin de l'art, Oct. 5, 1907; cf. La Chronique de l'art, 1908, p. 20); and M. Joseph Destrée (in L'Art flamand, viii, 1907, pp. 168-75) was able to point out that this is a fragment of a composition, which occurs in a great number of versions, of which the original—as shown by Dr. Friedländer in the Berlin Jahrbuch, xxv, 1904, p. 108—must be by Hugo van der Goes. Whether the present picture is a fragment of that original, as M. Destrée thinks (see his recent monograph Hugo van der Goes, Brussels, 1914, p. 46 sq.), does not seem quite certain, though it is unquestionably far superior to the other versions of that composition now known.

FLEMISH SCHOOL

314. Flemish School, first half of XVI century.

Portrait of a Youth (bust).

Panel, $11\frac{3}{4}$ by $8\frac{7}{8}$ in. (29.7 by 22.2 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

A Cat., p. 5 or p. 8 ('An head, by Hans Holbein').—1833 Cat., No. 247 or 249 (Heads assigned to Holbein).

*315. Flemish School, c. 1540.

Portrait of a Man (half-length).

Panel (oak), $23\frac{3}{4}$ by $21\frac{3}{4}$ in. (60.2 by 52.6 cm.).

Bequeathed by William Stratford, D.D. (d. 1729), together with No. 315. Both are described in Dr. Stratford's will (of Jan. 25, 1727-8) as being 'of the manner, if not of the hand of Hans Holben.'

Transferred from the Chapter-house to the Library in 1831.

A Cat., p. 17 ('by an unknown hand').—1833 Cat., No. 244. Marked at the back 'No. HR 25'.

Companion picture to No. 316. Walpole refers to these pictures in the following passage in a letter of July 19, 1760, to Gen. Montagu (Letters, iv. 409): '... in an old buttery at Christ Church I discovered two of the most glorious portraits by Holbein in the world. They call them Dutch heads. I took them down, washed them myself and fetched out a thousand beauties.' They are also referred to in Walpole's Anecdotes (ed. Wornum, i. 63, n. 4), where the view is expressed that they 'certainly belonged to Henry VII'. 'On the back of the one is the mark No. HR 22, on the other No. HR 25. In the catalogue of King Henry's pictures in the Augmentation Office, No. 25 is Frederick, Duke of Saxony, No. 26 is Philip, Archduke of Austria; in all probability these very pictures.' From the style of these paintings it is, however, clear that they belong to a later period than that of Henry VII; they bear considerable resemblance to the group of portraits usually associated with the name of Joos van Cleve the younger.

Flemish School—continued.

This and the following picture were both exhibited at Manchester in 1857, Nos. 506 and 507.

*316. Flemish School, c. 1540.

*321. Rubens (School of). Sir Peter Paul Rubens, born at Siegen on June 28, 1577 ; died at Antwerp on May 30, 1640. Pupil of Tobias Verhaegt, Adam van Noort, and Otho van Veen.

The Continnence of Scipio.

Canvas, 81 by 101 in. (205.4 by 256 cm.).

Presented by Lord Frederick Campbell in 1809.

1833 Cat., No. 164 (as Van Dyck).

FLEMISH SCHOOL

Engraved by T. Miller in 1766, when in the collection of the Duke of Argyll (as Van Dyck).

Smith (Catalogue Raisonné, original ed., vol. iii, [1831] p. 112) already pronounced this picture to be 'improperly ascribed to Van Dyck'. Although it certainly recalls Van Dyck's style in many respects, it also exhibits features differing from it, e.g. the cool and luminous tonality; and it seems advisable to ascribe it to a pupil of Rubens, working in close contact with Van Dyck.

A picture described as 'One great Piece, being Scipio', by Van Dyck, is mentioned in the inventory of the Duke of Buckingham's collection, dating from 1635 (see R. Davies in the Burlington Magazine, x. 379). If the present picture be identical with that work, the attribution to Van Dyck could be traced back to the master's lifetime.

A picture of the same subject by Theodor Boeyermans (1620-78) in the collection of the German Emperor (reproduced in Gemälde alter Meister im Besitze . . . des Deutschen Kaisers, p. 100) is possibly inspired by the present one.

323. Dyck, Sir Anthony van. Born at Antwerp on March 22, 1599; died in London on Dec. 9, 1641. Pupil of Hendrik van Balen; assistant to Rubens.

A Soldier on Horseback (monochrome sketch).

Canvas, $35\frac{1}{4}$ by $20\frac{3}{4}$ in. (89.5 by 52.5 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

Lond. and Env. iii. 36; Eng. Conn. ii. 66 ('A finished sketch of King Charles the First's white horse').—A Cat., p. 3.—1833 Cat., No. 160 (everywhere as Van Dyck).

Exhibited at Manchester, 1857, No. 585.

324. Dyck, Sir Anthony van.

A youthful Saint about to be decapitated (sketch; monochrome).

Panel (oak), $17\frac{1}{4}$ by $14\frac{1}{8}$ in. (43.5 by 35.7 cm.).

333. Laer, Pieter van (Attributed to).

Italian Landscape with figures.

Panel, octagonal, 11 by 17 in. (27.8 by 43 cm.).

Guise Bequest.

One of the two 'small landscapes' by Bamboccio, mentioned in the A Cat., pp. 7 and 8.—1833 Cat., No. 227.

DUTCH SCHOOL

334. Dutch School, XVII century.

Male Portrait (bust).

Panel (oak), $16\frac{3}{4}$ by $11\frac{1}{4}$ in. (42.4 by 28.4 cm.).

Probably Guise Bequest.

Not identifiable with any picture mentioned in the earlier catalogues.

336. Dutch School, XVIII century.

The Pawnbroker.

Canvas, $24\frac{1}{2}$ by $32\frac{1}{2}$ in. (62 by 82.3 cm.).

Unknown provenance; probably identical with the picture described in the 1833 Cat. (No. 132) as 'A Miser, &c.', and as having previously been in the Chapter-house.

ENGLISH SCHOOL

337. English School, XVI century.

Portrait of Cardinal Wolsey (half-length).

Panel (oak), $18\frac{1}{4}$ by $14\frac{3}{4}$ in. (46.2 by 37.3 cm.).

341. Reynolds, Sir Joshua. Born at Plympton Earl, Plymouth, on July 16, 1723; died in London, on February 23, 1792. Pupil of Thomas Hudson.

Portrait of General Guise.

Canvas, 29 by 24½ in. (73.5 by 62 cm.).

Presented by the 1st Earl of Morley; in this collection by 1800 (Dallaway, Anecdotes, p. 483, note e).

1833 Cat., No. 1.

'Sat in June 1755 and December 1757. Paid March 1, 1763, Mr. Parker, exchange of a picture and a frame for General Guise, £10. 10s. Memo. January, 1757, "Sent home General Guise"' (Graves and Cronin, A History of the Works of Sir Joshua Reynolds, i. 405).

'Mr. Parker' is evidently to be identified with John Parker, 1st Baron Boringdon, and father of the 1st Earl of Morley, the donor of the picture.

Exhibited at the Exhibition of Portraits of English Historical Personages who died between 1714 and 1837, Oxford, 1906 (No. 76).
