INTRODUCTION

The Salmasian Codex preserves, in incomplete form, an ancient anthology compiled at Carthage between the years 532 and 534 A. D.¹ In this collection is found the anonymous epistle of Dido to Aeneas which is here presented.

DATE² AND AUTHORSHIP

The only external evidence for the date of this poem is furnished by the known time of the compilation of the Salmasian ¹Riese, Praefatio, pp. XXIV-XXV; Schubert, pp. 17 ff.

²Monceaux apparently assigns it to the 3rd century, Schanz to the end of the 3rd century. Teuffel and Palmer think it is probably not earlier than the 4th century. Schoell places it in the 6th century.

Anthology, according to which it must be earlier than 534 A. D. A further indication may possibly be found in the fact that the poem is anonymous. A number of poems in the Anthology which are given under the names of their authors have in addition to the name the title vir clarissimus, vir illustris, or some such complimentary expression; from this the conclusion has been drawn that these poets were contemporaries of the compiler of the Anthology.³ Consequently there is a presumption that the poems which appear without such a title are of earlier date. While some weight may be given to this evidence, it cannot be regarded as conclusive, for there is always the possibility that the name or complimentary title originally attached to any particular poem may have been lost in copying; also, while it is not probable that the work of an author still living would be inserted anonymously in an anthology, it is by no means impossible.

For further evidence we must examine the poem itself. In two passages⁴ the author expresses Epicurean views, suggesting that he was not a Christian. This fact leads Teuffel and Schanz to date the poem just before the official triumph of Christianity.⁵ Here again we must beware of attaching too much importance to these expressions, for paganism still lived on and flourished side by side with Christianity long after the official recognition of the latter.⁶ There were, too, nominal Christians, like Ausonius, whose religion rested lightly upon them, and did not prevent them from employing the old mythological subjects and the language of paganism. Further, it must be remembered that the opinions which the author attributes to Dido are not necessarily his own. Consequently, while we may conclude that the author was probably a pagan, we are not justified in going so far as to say that the poem must have been written before Christianity became the official religion of Rome.

³Riese, pp. XXVI-XXVIII.

⁴41 and 121-2; cf. also 63 and note.

⁵Cf. Teuffel, Vol. 3, §398: "Aus der Zeit vor dem amtlichen Siege des Christentums scheint eine Anzahl von Schriftwerken in gebundener Form zu stammen, die sich mit Unbefangenheit oder gar Heiterkeit auf dem Boden der alten Götterwelt bewegen und die überlieferten Formen meist mit leidlicher Sicherheit handhaben."

⁶Dill, pp. 385 ff.

Aside from the foregoing indications, we have only the evidence of language and style, an uncertain means of determining the date of a poem so short as this, so imitative, and so full of reminiscences of earlier authors. The writer was consciously using Vergil and Ovid as models; his diction frequently echoes that of other classical poets. Thus the language of his own time is overlaid with that of the writers whom he imitates. We may, however, note the following indications of later date:

(1) Metre. The metre is correct according to classical standards, except that in three places⁷ initial h is counted as a consonant in making position. This is a peculiarity of Christian poetry, and first appears in the fourth century.⁸ Our author does not follow this rule consistently, for in sixteen places h is treated just as in verse of the classical period. Elision is remarkably rare, occurring only five times.⁹

(2) Syntax. The following variations from classical usage occur:¹⁰

Double negative for emphasis (29).

Fruor with the accusative case (49).

Licet as a conjunction with the pluperfect subjunctive (115) and with the indicative (148-9). The former is first found in the early imperial period, the latter from the time of Apuleius.

Perfect infinitive used with the force of the present (115, 128). This is not peculiar to late Latin, but becomes more frequent in the later period, and according to Schmalz¹¹ is a favorite use with Christian writers.

⁷98, 119, 132. ⁸See note on 98.

The infrequency of elision is not of much value in establishing the date; from the time of the Silver Age elision was avoided by some poets, but there is no regular decrease in the frequency of its occurrence; cf. E. H. Sturtevant and R. G. Kent, Transactions of the American Philological Association, 46, pp. 146 ff.

Birt (pp. 61-2) points out a further peculiarity in the very frequent use of two caesuras, dividing the line into three parts. He finds the same peculiarity in the short poem of 20 lines on Phaedra, attributed to Vincentius (Anth. 279). On these grounds he concludes that this epistle also is the work of Vincentius. These metrical peculiarities are not in themselves sufficient reason for attributing the two poems to the same author, in the absence of other marked resemblances; moreover, the poem on Phaedra is much more faulty metrically, containing several mistakes in quantity within its short limits.

¹⁰For fuller discussion see notes on verses cited.

¹¹Pp. 435-6.

Future participle used more frequently than in the classical period (45, 56, 74, 87).¹²

Asyndeton (124 and 129) is noted by Teuffel¹³ as an indication of late date.

(3) Vocabulary. The following words or expressions show certain peculiarities:¹⁴ libenter habe (2), incole (3), dictare salutem (6), pendet (144) apex (22), sacramenta (33), convincere (37) and resolvere (9), for the corresponding simple verbs, capit (69), fluctus (75), vota queror (87), durum tuli (103-4), vota cupis (137), sidere (141), meus as vocative (144).

These peculiarities of usage, taken all together, point decidedly to a date not earlier than the fourth century. The choice of subject and the general treatment lead to the same conclusion. In the time of barren imitation which succeeded the great creative period of Roman literature, admiration for the masterpieces of the past so dominated the minds of educated men that it left little room for originality, or rather whatever originality existed spent itself on mere matters of form and language. The old themes were treated again and again, and ornamented with new rhetorical devices. Among the great poets Vergil was revered above all, his works were studied in the schools and used as models for imitation.¹⁵ The absurd length to which this veneration was carried is shown in the Vergilian cento, consisting of phrases from that poet fitted together with much ingenuity so as to make a new poem on a totally different subject.¹⁶ A regular school exercise was the dictio, an expansion of a line of passage from Vergil.¹⁷ The works of Macrobius and of Martir anus Capella are an indication of the reverence which was paid to him in the fourth century. Of such a period as this our poem is evidently a production.

¹⁶Anth. 1.7-18'

¹⁷Three of these have been preserved in the Anthology (223, 244, 255) under the heading Locus Vergilianus or Thema Vergilianum. Among the Dictiones of Ennodius is one (in prose) entitled Verba Didonis cum abeuntem videret Aeneas (Dict. 28). The grammarian was occupied with Vergil to such an extent that to say he knew Vergil was sufficient designation of his calling, as in the epigram beginning Arma virumque docens atque arma virumque peritus, Baehrens Poetae Latini Minores 5, p. 98.

In regard to the place of composition we have no indication except the fact that the Salmasian Anthology was compiled at Carthage. Apparently all the contemporary poets included in the collection are African,¹⁸ and it is natural to suppose that many of the anonymous works also have the same origin. We know that Carthage was a flourishing centre of culture and literary activity during the early centuries of the Christian era.¹⁹ Many minor works must have been produced there by mediocre writers whose names have not survived, and it is much more probable that compositions of slight merit found their way into an anthology put together at the place where they originated, than that they came from other parts of the Empire. The subject of Dido and her sorrows is one that might naturally be expected to appeal particularly to a Carthaginian poet.

The epistle itself shows that the author was some one who was familiar with the early poets, especially with Vergil, Ovid, Horace, and Lucretius, for it abounds in verbal reminiscences of their works. The correctness of the versification, too, proves that he was well trained in the schools. On the other hand it shows little originality, and there is an entire absence of poetic inspiration or deep feeling. Such a writer might naturally be found among those whose profession was the study and teaching of literature, and it seems reasonable to conclude that the author may have been a Carthaginian rhetorician or grammarian of the latter part of the fourth or the beginning of the fifth century. The poem is valuable in showing what were the interests and literary activities of educated men of this period, and in indicating the strength of the influence which was still exercised by Vergil and Ovid.

STYLE AND LITERARY CHARACTERISTICS

By the majority of those who mention it, the poem is briefly dismissed as a mere rhetorical exercise. Palmer²⁰ is the only one of its critics who allows it any merit. The choice of a theme already treated by Vergil and Ovid inevitably challenges comparison with the works of those poets, and such comparison is not to the advantage of our poem. Yet if we accept the author's own estimate of himself as modicus poeta,²¹ and keep in mind the narrow limits within which he confines his work, it is not altogether without charm and interest. While in a sense it is nothing more than a rhetorical exercise, a comparison with the dictiones referred to above shows that it is of much greater length than they, and much more original in its treatment of the subject chosen.

The poet doubtless had Ovid's epistle of Dido²² before him as his model. The setting in the story is the same as Ovid's, namely the time when Dido asks her sister Anna to carry her appeals to Aeneas.²³ The conception of Dido's character also is Ovid's rather than Vergil's—she is gentle and forgiving, resigned to death. She reproaches Aeneas, it is true, after the manner of Vergil's heroine, but her remonstrances are only a mild echo of Vergil's passionate words, and her brief anger is soon succeeded by gentler emotion. Her last wish is for Aeneas' safety. The language, as well as the general treatment, is more suggestive of Ovid than of Vergil, as might be expected; for the former could be imitated much more easily by a writer of mediocre ability. Again and again phrases occur which echo those of Ovid,²⁴ showing that the author must have been sufficiently familiar with his works to reproduce his language unconsciously.

Yet at the same time he altogether lacks the smooth, easy flow of Ovid's verse. The thought is frequently difficult to follow, partly because the language is condensed to the point of obscurity. A noticeable characteristic is a certain poverty of vocabulary, which shows itself in the repetition of the same words and phrases, e. g. vota nocentis (39, 99), honesto pericula (97, 136), peritura (74, 87), perfide (35, 119, 124). Nocens in different forms occurs six times, and vota eleven times. Quite striking is a tendency to repeat a word three or four lines after its first occurrence, e. g. ipse dolor (11), dolor ipse (16), cf. ipse dolor (89); ligavit (17), ligat (20); conscia (29 and 32); pendet (14), pependet (18); alitura (56), alut (59); reparare (69), reparant (73); miseram (90 and 92); manus (92), manu (94); nefas (97 and 99).

²⁰p. XX, footnote 1. ²¹5 ²²*Epist.* 7.

²³*Verg. Aen.* 4.437-8; cf. Palmer p. 339.

²⁴See notes passim.

The most original and the best part of the poem is the long passage²⁵ contrasting the constant changes in nature with the enduring grief of unhappy love. The idea is by no means new, but it is developed here to an unusual length and with considerable skill. As we should expect, the details are of literary origin, not drawn directly from nature. The passage is divided into stanzas of equal length by the refrain Sua taedia solus fallere nescit amor. Less effective is the second refrain,²⁶ Cui digna rependes, si mihi dura paras? It does not mark off a distinct division of the poem, as does the first one, the stanzas are not so clearly separated in thought, and one of them is longer by a line than the others.

A marked feature of the poem is the use that is made of alliteration. The following lines show striking instances of this:

8. modo, me magis, mortis	78-9. roscida, rident, rosis
15. calamus celerare querellas	87. vota, vellem
17. vias et verba	92. membra manus, miseram
27-8. conubium, crimen, credula, cuncta	95. morte, mersum, figere ferrum
40. verba, voco, vulnera	96. pectore pulsum
	97. pericula passus

²⁵42-82. ²⁶100 ff.

SIGLA*

A = Codex Parisinus 10318, commonly known as Salmasianus, from its former owner Salmasius (Claude de Saumaise), into whose possession it came between the years 1609 and 1620. This is the only original ms. authority. It is written in uncials, and belongs to the seventh, or perhaps the beginning of the eighth century. A description of it, with an account of its history, is given by Riese (pp. XII ff.); see also Traube, Philologus 54, p. 124. It is reproduced in facsimile under the title: Bibliothèque Nationale: département des manuscrits: Anthologie de Poètes Latins dite de Saumaise; reproduction réduite du manuscrit en onciale, Latin 10318, de la Bibliothèque Nationale; Paris, 1903.

A' = Corrections of A in the original hand.

a = Emendations of Salmasius, written in the margin of A.

α = Emendations made by the writer of the Schedae Divionenses, a copy of A made at Divio (Dijon) between the years 1651 and 1756, and now at Heidelberg. This ms. was used by Burman, who regarded it as of great value.

C = Codex Parisinus 8069, containing selections which were probably intended for use in schools; see Riese pp. XLI-XLII. It contains only two verses of this poem, 4 and 6.

The apparatus criticus is based on that of Riese's second edition, but for the sake of the completeness which seems desirable, a number of proposed conjectures are included which Riese does not note.

The text represents the reading of A when not otherwise noted.

The abbreviations used in the notes are those of the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae.

*Those used in Riese's edition; see Riese p. 33.

ANALYSIS

1-5 Preface, in which the author asks the reader's indulgence.

6-26. Pride should have kept me from appealing to you, but love has overcome my pride. Let this confession be my excuse.

27-41. My only fault was that I trusted you too much; is this the reward I deserve? The reasons that you give for going are only excuses to hide your faithlessness.

42-82. Everything in nature changes; love alone is unchanging:

43-47. The moon and the sun alternately prevail.

48-52. Quiet night succeeds the day.

53-57. The nightingale through the influence of the night forgets her grief for a time.

58-62. Night brings joy to the happily married husband and wife.

63-67. Spring brings the renewal of vegetation on the earth.

68-72. Sleep restores the strength of the weary husbandman.

73-77. The tides of the sea rise again after their ebb.

78-81. After winter the flowers reappear.

82-86. But the changing times and seasons bring me no peace.

87-91. Grief and love do not allow me to remain silent.

91-99. My thoughts of vengeance were overcome by love.

100-144. I sympathized with Creüsa's fate, I showed kindness to Iulus, I welcomed you when you were a shipwrecked stranger, and even gave up my throne to you, but for all this you show no gratitude.

144-150. Yet love is stronger than anger, and my last wish is for your welfare.

DIDO TO AENEAS

PREFACE

As you wish to be ever pleased with your lot, whoever you may be who seek what piety may ask, grant your favor to my work; with kindness look upon the verses that leisure composes for a pastime, and, as an upright judge, cultivate an impartial spirit. Sweet is the sound of what love sings; let anyone who can find delight in pleasure deign to love even a humble poet.

2. libenter habe: this expression is used twice in Sanctae Silviae Peregrinatio, Bechtel p. 24. 26 itaque ergo, si libenter habes, quaecumque loca sum hic grata ad videndum christianis, ostendimus tibi, and p. 32.9 quia libenter haberetis haec cognoscere. It does not seem to occur elsewhere, though habeo is found with other similar adverbs, e. g. Sall. Catil. 51. 11 multi eas (sc. iniurias) gravius aequo habuere. Liv. 7. 5.7 Ita aegre habuit filium id pro parente ausum. Tac. Ann. 4. 21.2 quae in praesens Tiberius civiliter habuit. The use of this expression, which occurs apparently only in one Latin work, is of some importance for dating the poem. The Peregrinatio of S. Silvia belongs probably to the last quarter of the fourth century, though some scholars attribute the work to a certain Aetheria, and place it about the middle of the sixth century.

ludant: of the composition of light or playful verses. Cf.

Catull. 50. 2-5

Multum lusimus in meis tabellis,

Ut convenerat esse delicatos.

Scribens versiculos uterque nostrum

Ludebat numero modo hoc modo illoc.

Verg. Ecl. 1. 9-10

Ludere quae vellem calamo permisit agresti.

Hor. Carm. 4. 9. 9-10

Nec, si quid olim lusit Anacreon,

Delevit aetas.

3. incole, the ms. reading, is kept by Wernsdorf, and explained as the use of a compound for simple verb, characteristic of late Latin. All the other editors change to indue or indole. The dictionaries give one instance of incolo for colo, Codex Theodos. 13. 1. 3. (361 A. D.) si ea homines vestri ac rustici etiam in vestris possessionibus commorantes distrahant, quae in his terris quas incolunt adque in eodem rure gignuntur. There is a peculiar use of the word in Tert. Spect. 10 Videmus igitur etiam artes eorum honoribus dicatas esse qui nomina incolunt auctorum earum. (Cf. Hoppe p. 189, who translates "welche die Namen der Urheber tragen.") On the whole it seems best to retain the ms. reading, although no exact parallel can be quoted.

6. salutem refers to the usual beginning of a letter, salutem dicit. Cf. Ov. Epist. 13. 1 Mittit, et optat amans quo mittitur ire salutem. dictare salutem means merely "write a letter." Owing to the fact that dictation was the usual custom, dictare came to mean nothing more than write. Cf. Juv. 6. 218

Non unus tibi rivalis dictabitur heres.

Suet. Tit. 6. 1 Cum patris nomine et epistulas ipse dictaret et edicta con-scriberet. Sidon. Epist. 1. 7 dominum dictasse profitebatur, se dictasse pro-clamat, quod ipse dictasset. Numerous other examples are cited in the Thesaurus. This use became very common in the Middle Ages; see W. Wattenbach, Das Schriftwesen im Mittelalter, pp. 266 ff.

7. convitia: a late spelling for convicia.

8. Si vacet: the si clause expresses a wish. Cf. Verg. Aen. 6. 187-8 Si nunc se nobis ille aureus arbore ramus

Ostendat nemore in tanto.

flere vacet: cf. Ov. Met. 10. 387 Tum denique flere vacavit.

Nam: the connection of thought is: (But there is no time to weep,) for the cruel fate, etc.

magis: potius, or some expression meaning "on the other hand" might be expected here.

POEM

Injured love should have written no word of greeting to one who is ungrateful. But reproaches are no remedy for tears — if only there were time for tears! Instead the cruel fate of death summons me. Guilty Trojan, is this the gift you send me in return? However often I try to still my weeping by writing bitter verses, my very grief proves stronger; no words can satisfy the grief that my too patient heart endures, inproba: Riese changes the ms. reading to inprobe, apparently because the vocative occurs in 34 and 124. There is no reason for any change; inproba is an appropriate epithet to apply to fata.

mortis fata: cf. Cic. Tim. 40 neque vos ulla mortis fata periment; also the Homeric κῆρες θανάτου, Il. 2. 302, 834; 12. 326, etc.

9. fata vocant: cf. Verg. Aen. 10. 471–2

Ov. Epist. 6. 28 me quoque fata vocant.

7. 1 Sic ubi fata vocant.

Sil. 16. 698–9 Talibus adcesi patres, fatoquo vocante, Consulis adnuerunt dictis.

Voco and κηλέω are used especially of the summons of death or of the dead; see Peerlkamp's note on Hor. Carm. 2. 20. 6, where examples are cited.

nocens is a favorite word of our author, cf. 24, 39, 99, 124, 132.

dona refers to Dido's death (mortis fata), as Wernsdorf points out, not to the sword with which she killed herself, as Burman took it. The same idea is repeated in 31 Hanc reddis, Troiane, vicem?

remittis: i. e. as a return for the kindness that I have shown you.

10. For the thought cf. Hor. Carm. 4. 11. 35–36 Minuentur atrae carmine curae, and Ov. Trist. 4. 10. 111–2 Hic ego, finitimis quamvis circumsoner armis, Tristia quo possum carmine fata levo.

gravi applied to poetry generally means serious, or on a serious theme. Here it refers rather to the bitterness of Dido's feeling toward Aeneas.

12. patientis suggests too patient endurance. Cf. Bell. Afr. 31. 8 patientem se timidumque hostium opinioni praebebat. Nep. Epam. 7 fuisse patientem suorumque iniurias ferentem civium.

12-13. The ms. reading is clearly corrupt. The emendation adopted in the text, that of Traube, is palaeographically easy, involving only one change, regna to egena. The thought (10-13) is: "I ought to feel only anger, but when I try to reproach you, grief overcomes me; I cannot now, even though I wish, bring myself to utter such bitter reproaches as I used at first, when my wrong was still fresh in my mind." The substitution of regna may be explained on the supposition that the scribe may have looked ahead to domus in 14, or that he was influenced by the re in requiro.

13. maledicta: such as those which Vergil makes her utter, Aen. 4. 365-387; and her dying prayer, 612-629.

14. This line has been generally regarded as corrupt, and has called forth a great variety of emendations. The ms. reading, however, may be explained so as to make good sense, and should therefore be retained. The difficulty is in pendet. Wernsdorf explains it as equivalent to in ruinam pendet, pessum data est. This is not an unnatural extension of the usual meaning of the word, and is paralleled by Lucan. 1. 24 At nunc semirutis pendent quod moenia tectis. It is used with the meaning which labor has in Verg. Aen. 4. 318 miserere domus labentis, which the poet doubtless had in mind. It is also supported by the couplet on Venus, Anth. 56

Uritur igne suo fumantibus Aetna cavernis.

Pendet amore Venus: uritur igne suo.

In the latter Riese explains pendet as = suspensa est.

or in my need I seek in vain the imprecations that I uttered when encompassed by an evil destiny. Because of love my house is tottering to its fall, my guiltless sorrow but increases my love. While my pen in eager haste was striving to give expression to angry complaints, grief itself stayed my hand, and love, permitting me to say no more, checked both the course of my thoughts and my words. Ah, how often was my hand recalled from its task, how often was it poised in doubt! What could it do with thumb atremble? Numbness binds fast hand and lips, while they are forming the harsh words, and what I write condemns the thought not yet expressed. The pen, guided Vel quo festines ire, vel unde, vide.

Ah, quotiens certam me sum mentitus habere

Horam, praepositae quae foret apta viae.

dubium: adverbial; the adjective dubia might have been expected.

19. trepidanti pollice: cf. Ov. Met. 9. 520

Et meditata manu componit verba trementi.

pollex may be used for the fingers in general, as in Ov. Amor. 3. 6. 71

Sera tamen scindens inimico pollice crinem.

20. Torpor . . . ligat: cf. Ov. Met. 1. 548

Vix prece finita, torpor gravis alligat artus.

ora: the ms. ira gives a meaning exactly the opposite of what is required. It is ira that urges her to write the harsh words, dolor that checks her. Ora is supported by Ov. Met. 9. 514-5

Coget amor, potero; vel si pudor ora tenebit,

Littera celatos arcana fatebitur ignes.

Riese's change to ora necessitates the further change of the verb to formant.

22. Torsit seems to indicate a wavering, unsteady line. The phrase occurs in Stat. Theb. 11. 312-3

paulum si devius hostis

but in a different sense, meaning merely "turned aside."

iter: accusative of inner object.

male: owing to the trembling of her fingers.

apex: the Thesaurus gives no instance of the use of apex to mean pen. The word, however, indicates any pointed top or end, e. g. of a spear, cf. Sil. 1. 466-7

iacit igneus hastae

Dirum lumen apex.

Hence it might easily be applied to the stilus. Apex was also the name given to the sign placed over a long vowel to indicate its quantity, and from this in late Latin it came to mean a letter, then writing or anything written. The latter is probably the meaning in Anth. 107. 5 apicum dat felle figuras, though possibly it may there mean pen.

23. notat: Ovid frequently uses noto to mean write; cf.
Met. 9. 522-3 Incipit, et dubitat; scribit, damnatque tabellas;
Et notat et delet; mutat, culpatque, probatque.

with difficulty, traced its crooked way, and shame was banished from my doubtful heart, while love's baleful flame, growing weary of anger, wrote the words and dictated the expressions. The slumbering fire has sped through my inmost being, and with pitiless flame is consuming my very marrow. Let no one reproach one who admits her love.

Was marriage then my sin? Too ready to believe your promises (nor is my trust surprising), I gave all, as the right of the

24. iram taedens: I am indebted to Professor McDaniel for this reading. It requires only a very slight change (the omission of one letter) in the ms. reading; the unfamiliar and unclassical use of taedens may have been the cause of the corruption. The noun taedium is a favorite word with the author, cf. the refrain, 42, etc. In late Latin taedeo was used personally, and is found with the accusative as well as the genitive. Cf. Hier. Vita Malchi 7 Coepi taedere captivitatis et monasterii cellulas quaerere. Lact. Inst. 4. 19. 4 Exterrita est quae parit et taedit animam. Alc. Avit. Carm. 4. 328-9 numquam nec: double negative for emphasis, which is found in early Latin, and quite frequently in later Latin from the time of Gellius and Apuleius. Instances of it occur even in classical writers; cf. Schmalz pp. 637-8.

Cf. Enn. Trag. 130 Lapideo sunt corde multi, quos non miseret neminis.

conscia vota are vows that lovers know along with each other, the knowledge of which they share, i. e. mutual.

husband to whom I too belonged. Never will mutual vows gain credence, if such faith as mine is not worthy of a husband's love. Trojan, is this the return you make? Is this what my love deserves? Does the remembrance of our marriage couch not hold you, nor the oaths of fidelity that we there exchanged? As if guilty of crime do I lose all that I gave for love?

Grant that it is by the decrees of fate, base wretch, that you are seeking a kingdom that will rival mine, there is no reason, traitor, for your reiterating this; by treachery, not by fate, is your honor lost. But (you say) you were seeking the kingdom that was rightfully yours, you could not overcome

32. conscia lecti: cf. Verg. Aen. 4. 167-8 consciis aether conubii (or conubiis according to another reading).

Mart. 14. 39 Dulcis conscia lectuli lucerna, Quidquid vis facias licet, tacebo.

32-33. Cf. Verg. Aen. 4. 307-8

Nec te noster amor, nec te data dextera quondam, Nec moritura tenet crudeli funere Dido?

The whole series of questions in this passage is modeled on Dido's appeal to Aeneas in Verg. Aen. 4. 305-330.

33. Sacramenta seems to be used, as Wernsdorf says, with special reference to marriage, as in late and ecclesiastical Latin. Cf. Mart. Cap. 2. 117 sonus . . . quem Musarum convenientium chorus impendens nuptialibus sacramentis concinebat. The word properly means something which is set apart as sacred, also, in the active sense, something which sets apart; the latter gives its commonest meaning in classical Latin, the oath of allegiance taken by a soldier. From this it may be used to mean any solemn oath or pledge. By Christian writers it is used to translate the Greek μυστήριον, and applied to the sacraments of the church.

34. inprobe: Vergil makes Dido address Aeneas with this epithet (Aen. 4. 386), also with perfidie (Aen. 4. 366).

tendens with accusative of limit of motion = "make your way to," "go to," as in Verg. Aen. 1. 553-4 and 6. 696 haec limina tendere adegit.

Si datur Italiam sociis et rege recepto Tendere

35. nihil est quod occurs again in 39 and 117. In 39 it is used in a somewhat different sense, and is followed by the indicative.

36-37. Sed regna etc.: this refers to Aeneas' defense of his conduct, ending with Italiam non sponte sequor (Verg. Aen. 4. 333-361) and Dido's scornful reply (376-380). Cf. Ov. Epist. 7. 139

Sed quia fas nulli humanam vincere sortem.

Ov. Met. 2. 617-8 seraque ope vincere fata Nititur.

Ad Liv. 234 Non tibi, non ullis, vincere fata datur.

The compound has the sense of the simple verb vincere, a use which is one of the characteristics of late Latin. There is no reason for Baehrens' change of convincere to convertere, nor for Riese's reading mecum . . . coniungere.

38. placet: se. mihi.

38-41. A difficult passage. Wernsdorf explains vota nocentis as propositum nocendi. Nam quod . . . habes is interpreted by Baehrens thus: "Quod eo fugis unde facile huc redire potes, ideo fraudem adhibes;" and by Reise: "Quod ad me redire poteris, ego 'nocens' votis meis te ire iubeo." The latter gives the most satisfactory sense, and is adopted in the translation above. Nocentis refers to Dido; she is "nocens" as a result of her wrongs. The vota nocentis are wishes such as those given by Vergil Aen. 4. 381-4

I, sequere Italiam ventis, pete regna per undas;

 Spero equidem mediis, si quid pia numina possunt,*

Supplicia hausurum scopulis, et nomine Dido

Saepe vocaturum.

The phrase vota nocentis occurs again in 99.

The general sense of the passage is as follows: "If your departure were really the will of the gods, I would offer no objection; but you are only making their commands an excuse; the fact that return is possible shows that the separation need not be final unless you wish it. But my reproaches are useless; after all it is not your guilt that is the cause of my suffering, but chance, which controls everything."

the destiny that controls all things. If it is fated that you go, I acquiesce; for it is because you flee to a place from which return is possible, that you carry with you the curses of one who would do you harm. But it is of no avail that in my complaints I call your words and your faithlessness cruel. Let all who weep for my wrongs deny that hatred was their cause; chance draws all things in its train.

While nature hastens on its appointed course, love alone cannot beguile its own weariness. Cynthia renews her splendor

39. Nihil est etc.: the abrupt change of thought represents the sudden variation of Dido's mood as she wavers between anger and resignation; cf. 6-26 and 125.

dura: predicate adjective with both verba and fidem. Hence fidem = lack of faith.

querellis: cf. Verg. Aen. 4. 360

Desine meque tuis incendere teque querellis.

41. Invidiam: subject of fecisse.

trahit omnia casus: cf. Cic. Epist. 4. 12. 1 quoniam casus et natura in nobis dominatur.

Verg. Aen. 9. 723 qui casus agit res.

Ov. Met. 7. 815 and Trist. 2. 341 me mea fata trahebant.

For the Epicurean sentiment cf. 121-2.

42. taedia: cf. Ov. Epist. 3. 139

Aut si versus amor tuus est in taedia nostri.

- 42-43. sua . . . amor: this refrain is repeated nine times, marking off the different aspects of nature whose changes are contrasted with the unchanging grief of love. The refrain probably originated among the artificialities of Alexandrian poetry. It was used by Theocritus (1 and 2), and from him was adopted by Vergil in Ecl. 8. Catullus employs it in three poems (61, 62, 64), and Ovid twice makes use of it (Epist. 9, Am. 1. 6). It is also found in the Pervigilium Veneris, in Nemesianus (Ecl. 4), and in Calpurnius Siculus (Ecl. 11). None of these shows the refrain divided between two lines, as here.

43. Fallere: cf. Verg. Aen. 4. 85 infandum si fallere possit amorem.

Ov. Trist. 3. 2. 16 Fallebat curas aegraque corda labor.

44. arcus: Riese marks this word with a dagger as not genuine, and emendations are proposed by Maehly and Baehrens. Its use, however, can be justified. Though arcus is apparently not elsewhere used of the moon, cornua is regularly applied both to the moon and to a bow. Cynthia, the moon goddess, was represented as a huntress armed with the bow; thus we have here a confusion between the goddess drawing her bow, and the moon itself gradually forming a complete circle as it reaches its fulness. Cf. Sen. Med. 97-8

*Cum Phoebe solidum lumine non suo with the glory of light, and curves the horns of her bow, glowing with brightness borrowed from her brother. The god of day, destined by law to yield in turn to his sister, uses up his privileges; thus he encompasses the earth with light. While nature renews her changes, love alone cannot beguile its own weariness.

48. Mersum: proleptic, cf. reparatum, v. 43. Mergo is used of the sun disappearing beneath the horizon. Cf. Sen. Thyest. 776-7

49. tenebras, the ms. reading, has been changed to the ablative by most editors. The accusative should be kept, for the deponent verbs which take the ablative in classical Latin are found with the accusative in early and late Latin. (See Lane, Lat. Gram. § 1380, Schmalz p. 382.) E. g.

Cato Agr. 149. 1 pabulum frui occipito.

Lucr. 3. 940 ea quae fructus cumque es, periere profusa.

Ter. Haut. 401 meo modo ingenium frui.

Apul. Met. 8. 12 nuptias non frueris.

Apol. 72 prospectum maris me esse fruiturum.

Tert. Virg. Vel. 17 dimidiam frui lucem.

Patient. 1 super eo quod frui non datur.

50. Riese supposes a lacuna between 50 and 51, containing the end of the comparison between day and night, and the beginning of one between calm and storm. There is no necessity for this; peace and quiet are regarded as an essential element of night, as in Vergil's description (Aen. 4. 522-8) which this passage imitates. Other aspects of night are dealt with in the next two "stanzas."
micantia is regularly used of the stars, e. g. Lucr. 5. 1205, Hor. Carm. 1. 12. 46, Sen. Herc. Fur. 125, Oed. 46, etc.
51. Navifragi: cf. Verg. Aen. 3. 553 navifragum Scylaceum, and Ov. Met. 14. 6. navifragum fretum.
52. flexum: proleptic, cf. reparatum, 43, and mersum, 48.
53. The unmetrical ms. reading has caused great difficulty. Riese adopts the change due to Burman, explaining male garrula as = iam non garrula. It is true that male with certain adjectives practically = non, but only with adjectives whose meaning is such that the qualifying adverb "badly" would negative their meaning, as is the case with sanus, gratus, fidus. "Badly garrulous," however, is not equivalent to "silent." Further, pinnis has to be changed to ramis to fit the context. Other emendations proposed by Baehrens and Traube have still less probability.

It seems possible to correct the line with a slighter change than any of the above. The translation of the line offers no difficulty as the ms. reads; some adverb of time is expected in contrast with iam in the next line. When mane and garrula are transposed, the only difficulty remaining is the scansion of mane. I would substitute modo for the unmetrical mane. Modo is found in 112 and 135 in the sense of lately. Mane may have found its way into the text as a gloss; this would account for its heavens; the twinkling stars complete their courses. The waves of the shipwrecking sea are still, the south wind makes no murmur, no breeze bends and sways the woods. Love alone cannot beguile its own weariness.

The nightingale, but lately singing, poised on her wings, now is silent, utterly overcome by the loss of her chastity; sheltering in her embrace her twittering nestlings near the tree-top, being misplaced in the line.

Another way of solving the difficulty is to keep mane, scanning it with the a short, and assuming that the poet has made a mistake in the quantity. This explanation is by no means impossible in a work as late as this; it would be, however, the only wrong quantity in the poem.

pinnis pendere occurs also in Ovid, cf.

Met. 6. 667-8 Corpora Cecropidum pinnis pendere putares; Pendebant pinnis.

Met. 7. 379 Factus olor niveis pendebat in aera pinnis.

garrulus is frequently used of birds, e. g. (of the nightingale) Mart. 14. 75

Flet Philomela nefas incesti Tereos, et quae

Muta puella fuit, garrula fertur avis.

Plin. Nat. 10. 43. 81 Lusciniis diebus ac noctibus continuis quindecim garrulus sine intermissu cantus.

The nightingale was regarded by the Greeks and Romans as a harbinger of dawn and a singer by day as well as by night. For complete discussion, with many quotations, see E. W. Martin, Birds of the Latin Poets, pp. 125-142 and 236-244; E. W. Fay, Class. Rev. 1904 pp. 303 ff., and a series of articles by E. H. Barker, Class. Jour. 27. p. 92, 29. p. 255, 30. pp. 180 and 341.

56. Pensat: cf. Ov. Epist. 2. 143 Stat nece matura tenerum pensare pudorem. amore: i. e. her love for her young.

alitura: the author shows marked fondness for the future participle, cf. cessurus, 45, and peritura, 74 and 87.

querellas: used here with reference to the story of Philomela's metamorphosis, as also in

Verg. Georg. 4. 511-2 Qualis populea maerens Philomela sub umbra Amissos queritur fetus.

Hor. Carm. 4. 12. 5-6 Nidum ponit Ityn flebiliter gemens Infelix avis.

Ov. Fast. 4. 481-2 Quaecumque ingreditur miseris loca cuncta querellis Implet, ut amissum cum gemit ales Ityn.

Querella and the related words, however, are often used of the song of birds in general. Cf. querulos, 55, and Hor. Epod. 2. 26 Queruntur in silvis aves.

Ov. Am. 3. 1. 4 Et latere ex omni dulce querunter aves.

she finds in love the compensation for her wrong, and though she will again cherish her sorrowful complaints, she now at night represses the laments which she utters in the day. Love alone cannot beguile its own weariness.

Now the ardor of well-mated love fosters the lover's affection, and the fidelity of the marriage chamber is made perfect by those who pledge it, the wife rejoicing in her husband, the husband happy in his wife. Love reviews its desires and secret joys; sleep and night complete their wedded harmony. Love alone cannot beguile its own weariness.

Cf. Porphyrio's scholium on Hor. Epod. 2. 26 "Queruntur," inquit, quoniam veteres omnium animalium voces praeterquam hominum "querellas" dicebant. For a discussion of this use of queror see T. Frank, American Journal of Philology 34, p. 322.

58. iunctus: transferred epithet. Cf. Ov. Epist. 13. 117 Quando erit ut lecto mecum bene iunctus in uno.

amantem: there is no need of Maehly's somewhat prosaic change to the plural.

59. pignera: cf. 109, where the form pignore is used.

60. Cf. Ov. Met. 7. 799 Coniuge eram felix, felix erat illa marito. Coniunx and maritus are in apposition with pignora. The emphasis is on the adjectives laeta and felix rather than on the nouns, i. e. the fact that husband and wife rejoice in each other is a pledge that they will be faithful to each other.

62. Concordat: cf. Pervig. Ven. 3 Vere concordant amores.

Papin. Dig. 48. 5. 12 bene concordatum matrimonium.

Concordo is more commonly intransitive, but the Thesaurus cites a number of instances of its transitive use, as here.

63. semine rerum: cf. Lucr. 1. 58-60

Quae (primordia) nos materiem et genitalia corpora rebus

Appellare suemus.

Ov. Met. 1. 419 fecundaque semina rerum.

This is one of the expressions that show the influence of Epicureanism on our author; cf. 41 and 121-2.

64. Mutat terra vices: taken from Hor. Carm. 4. 7. 3. Cf. also 65–66 with 1–2 of the same ode:

Diffugere nives, redeunt iam gramina campis, Arboribusque comae.

See note on 43, where this ode of Horace was imitated.

alumni temporis = spring. According to the Thesaurus, alumnus with active meaning is quite common, e. g.

Mart. 12. 60 .1 Martis alumne dies.

Auson. 3S1. 7–8 Hoc numero mensisque Numae redit, autumnique Principium referens Bacchi September alumnus.

Isid. Orig. 10. 3 et qui alit et alitur alumnus dici potest.

alumni . . . auras: cf. Lucr. 1. 10–11

Nam simul ac species patefactast verna diei, Et reserata uiget genitalibus aura fauoni.

66. vitreas . . . comas: of the grain bound into sheaves. Vitreas refers to the brilliant semi-transparent appearance of the ripe grain. This adjective is frequently applied to water, in the sense of clear or shining. Both herba and coma are often used of grain, e. g.
Verg. Georg. 1. 134 sulcis frumenti quaereret herbam.
Prop. 4. 2. 14 Et coma lactenti spicea fruge tumet.

By the life-giving principle of nature earth brings her changes and gladly summons the breezes of the fostering season; the fields are clothed again with the thick verdure of grass, the grain binds its shining tresses, and the advancing season does not cheat the ears of grain of their promise of a better harvest. Love alone cannot beguile its own weariness.

The weary plowman unfastens the yoke, and welcomes the night in answer to his prayers; grateful rest has power to refresh his toil, sleep, pervading his limbs, is not slow to restore his energy, and at all times brings to husbandmen strength to care for their fields. Love alone cannot beguile its own weariness.

The seas by their incoming tides restore their shores

Ov. Fast. 3. 854 Sustulerat nullas, ut solet, herba comas.

Met. 5. 482 Primis segetes moriuntur in herbis.

67. Proventu: ablative of separation, as with verbs of depriving.
dies: in the general sense of a period of time.

68. Fessus etc.: cf. Verg. Ecl. 4. 41

Robustus quoque iam tauris iuga solvet arator.

69. noctem capit seems to be a reminiscence of Verg. Aen. 4. 529-31

neque unquam

Solvitur in somnos, oculisque aut pectore noctem

Accipit.

Here capit is somewhat stronger than receives or accepts, having rather the force of captat; literally, "grasps at the night through prayers."

reparare labores: cf. Ov. Met. 11. 623-5

Somme, quies rerum, placidissime, Somne, deorum,

Pax animi, quem cura fugit, qui corda diurnis

Fessa ministeriis mulces reparasque labori.

71. ruris: objective genitive with the adjective ministram: "ministering to the country"; Riese translates it "ackerpfliegende Kraft" (Jahrbücher für Philologie und Paedagogik 121, p. 262).

74. Riese's emendation has been adopted in the text as the best correction of this corrupt line.

Successu = "the rising tide." The word is used, though not very commonly, in its literal sense of "advance" or "approach," therefore may naturally be applied to the tide. Accessus is used of the tide, cf. Cic. Div. 2. 34 aestibus . . . quorum accessus et recessus lunae motu gubernantur.

For damna and incrementa referring to the tide cf. Sen. Dial. 12. 9. 6 modo allevans nos subitis incrementis, modo maioribus damnis deferens.

75. fluctus must here mean "tide."

76. Lite: most editors have adopted Wernsdorf's emendation, lege. It seems quite possible, however, to keep the ms. reading, making it refer to the conflict of the alternate ebb and flow; cf. Ov. Fast. 1. 107-8

Ut semel haec rerum recessit lite suarum, Inque novas abiit massa soluta domos.

77. Officiis: dative.

78. One line is lacking to the number elsewhere found between the refrains; also as the text stands in the ms., this "stanza" lacks the contrast which is brought out in all the others. The line supplied by L. Müller (p. 584) gives the sense that is evidently required. Wernsdorf and Baehrens place the lacuna after 80, and Birt after 79.

again after their losses, the rising waves of the ever changing ocean play along the shore, though destined to recede, the tide rules the deep by its own alternation, and in due succession restores all that is lost. Nature has time to fulfill her tasks. Love alone cannot beguile its own weariness the dewy meadows in springtime smile with jewelled roses, and the fields burst into bloom. The ground is hidden beneath an embroidery of flowers, and nature, with a riotous abundance of roses, provides leafy garlands. Love alone cannot beguile its own weariness.

But neither the welcome silence of night nor the blessed boon of sleep brings any relief, nor does love enjoy the gifts of gemmais: bejewelled with drops of dew; suggested by roscida.

Cf. Lucr. 2. 319 Invitant herbae gemmantes rore recenti.

Culex 70-71 Florida cum tellus gemmantis picta per herbas

Vere notat dubiis distincta coloribus arva.

verni: the ms. reading Vesui (for Vesuvi) is hardly possible. Aside from the anachronism of making Dido mention a place in Italy, as Wernsdorf points out, there is no reason for the choice of this particular locality. Wernsdorf's change to visu is easy palaeographically, but there is no point in the use of this word. Riese's verni or Birt's veris makes much better sense.

79. For rideo used metaphorically cf.

Catull. 64. 284 Quo permulsa domus iucundo risit odore.

Verg. Ecl. 4. 20 Mixtaque ridenti colocasia fundet acantho.

Ov. Met. 15. 204-5 florumque coloribus almus Ridet ager.

80. Pictus: cf. Lucr. 5. 1395-6

Praesertim cum tempestas ridebat et anni

Tempora pingebant viridantis floribus herbas.

and Culex 70-71, cited on 78.

fronde coronas: cf. Lucr. 1. 118 perenni fronde coronam.

fronde is ablative of material, which is rare without a limiting adjective; see Lane § 1313; but cf. Verg. Aen. 5. 663 pictas abiete puppis.

81. Lascivis: "luxuriant;" cf. Hor. Carm. 1. 36. 18-20

nec Damalis novo

Divelletur adultero

Lascivis hederis ambitiosior.

This passage is not quite parallel, for lascivis has a more figurative meaning than in the text.

 7. 414 Iam mediam nigra carpebat nocte quietem.
indutias: trisyllabic; unless u is regarded as short; see note on mane, 53.
 85. sua: equivalent to subjective genitive—"inflicted by itself."
vulnera pascit: cf. Verg. Aen. 4. 2 vulnus alit venis.
 86. piacula has generally been changed to pericula; but it may be explained as sufferings that are an expiation of Dido's faithlessness to her husband's memory, though this aspect of her grief is not brought out elsewhere in the poem.
 87. Vota seems to be used as accusative of inner object with queror, though it is a striking instance of that construction. Cf. 137 mala vota cupis and Ov. Met. 9. 303-4 moturaque duras Verba queror silices.
 88. domo: "at home", i. e. in private, to myself. Domo for domi, though rare, is found even in classical writers, e. g. Cic. Clu. 27, Varro Rust. 1. 8. 2, Nep. Epam. 10. 3, Suet. Caes. 20. 1, Apul. Apol. 541.

light nor take any respite throughout the fleeting year; but baffled in its hopes it only keeps alive its own wounds, in the midst of a thousand deceits and as many atonements for faithlessness.

I break forth into complaining wishes: I would rather weep at home, doomed to perish with complaints unuttered, I would rather exhaust my sorrow in silence. But grief itself denies me what shame before denied. Love has bidden me write, hapless that I am, who by my own fault have made an honorable compact.

tacitos consumere: Burman's correction, to which the ms. seems to point. For consumere cf. Cic. Phil. 2. 64 Consumptis enim lacrimis tamen infixus animo haeret dolor.

Sen. Dial. 6. 8. 1 Dolorem dies longa consumit.

89. quod pudor negavit: i. e. the comfort of the free expression of her feelings, cf. 6 and 22-3. Pudor at first kept her from making any appeal; now dolor does not allow her the solace of keeping her suffering to herself.

90. Scribere iussit amor: cf. Ov. Epist. 4. 10

Dicere quae puduit, scribere iussit amor, and 20. 230 Haec tibi me vigilem scribere iussit amor.

For pudor and amor opposed to each other cf.

Ov. Am. 3. 10. 28-9 Hinc pudor, ex illa parte trahebat amor;
Victus amore pudor.

Met. 9. 514-5 Coget amor, potero; vel si pudor ora tenebit,
Littera celatos arcana fatebitur ignes.

miseram me: a common expression in Vergil, e. g.

Georg. 4. 494 "Quis et me" inquit "miseram et te perdidit?"

Ecl. 2. 58 Quid volui misero mihi!

Aen. 2. 70 Quid iam misero mihi denique restat?

See also Aen. 4. 315, 420; 9. 285; 10. 849.

91. culpa: nominative; literally "whose fault has made," etc. The word refers to Dido's love, which restrains her from doing Aeneas any harm. The expression is thus interpreted by Wernsdorf: "Miseram me, quae mea culpa honestum hospitii et coniugii foedus cum Aenea feci, cuius fide nunc impedior quominus nefas aliquod in eum cogitare et me ulcisci possim."

Poteram: i. e. "I was angry enough to." Cf. Verg. Aen. 4. 600-602

the expression has a different sense.)

I could have scattered your limbs and your hands over the sea, and hastened your evil day of death in the swelling waves; I could have snapped the thread of life of the growing boy Iulus with my own hand, and destroyed his little body by a cruel death; I could have fixed the steel deep in his flesh, or given his limbs to wild beasts; but the evil impulse has departed, driven from my heart by love, and love, having endured honorable dangers, has restrained my angry feelings. Who would dare to commit so great a wrong as this against a guest? Who would wish to have the curses of one who would do him harm? No love is hidden beneath treachery. Whom will you resolvere: destroy or kill; the simple verb solvo is generally used in this sense. Cf.

Sen. Epist. 66. 43 alius inter cenandum solutus est.

Tro. 600-601 me fata maturo exitu

Facilique solvant.

Curt. 8.9. 32 corporibus quae senectus solvit.

Flor Epil. 2.21. 11 sic morte quasi somno soluta est.

97. honesto pericula: the phrase occurs again in 136.

98. Corda: "anger"; cf.

Verg. Aen. 1. 303 ponuntque ferocia Poeni corda.

6. 407 tumida ex ira tum corda residunt.

Val. Flac. 6. 2 (Mars) acri corde tumet.

Sil. 10. 490 mansuescere corda nescia.

in hospite: in two other places in the poem (119 and 132) initial h is counted as a consonant and makes position. This was the rule in Christian poets, cf. Müller pp. 14, 382, 391. It is first found in Porphyrius (early 4th century), it appears also in Juvencus, Ausonius, Dracontius, Venantius Fortunatus, Luxorius. Our author is not consistent in his treatment of initial h, for there are 16 places where, as in classical poetry, it fails to make position.

99. Hoc nefas: the cruelty which her imagination suggested in 91-96.

vota nocentis: cf. 39.

100. fraude is the easiest emendation for the ms. laude. It is to be taken closely with the preceding sentences. Fraude here is violation of the obligations of hospitality; it is because of her love that she cannot harm Aeneas.

101. fata Creusae: related by Vergil (Aen. 2. 738-795). Cf. Ov. Epist. 7. 83-6 Si quaeras ubi sit formosi mater Iuli, Occidit, a duro sola relicta viro. Haec mihi narraras; at me movere; merentem Ure; minor culpa poena futura mea est.
102. Lamentis gemituque: cf. Verg. Aen. 4. 667-8 peregi vota: cf. Ov. Met. 6. 468 agit sua vota sub illis.

Auson. 426. 4 (Hecuba) peragit vota cum matribus.
103. durum . . . tuli: Wernsdorf explains tuli as equivalent to molestae tuli, but cites no parallels to support his interpretation. Tuli without a modifier can hardly have this meaning, but durum may be taken as predicate adjective with nefas and sortem: "I bore or felt her wrong and evil destiny as cruel." Hence the meaning is about the same as that of molestae or gravitur tuli. Cf. the use of dura in 39.
104. gemitus mentisque dolorem: hendiadys.
106. Dulcis Ascanius: cf. Verg. Aen. 1. 659 pro dulci Ascanio.

worthily repay, if you desire cruelty for me?

While prolonging with laments and sighs the story of unhappy Creusa's fate, I offered unutterable prayers to the gods, and I grieved for her wrong and her evil destiny as you told the tale; I was myself the first to give way to the sighs and tears of an anguished mind. Whom will you worthily repay, if you desire cruelty for me?

Sweet Ascanius caressed my neck, and the boy pierced my heart with a hapless passion; while my sense of duty desired merely to restore to him his lost mother, love, with lying promise, made the name a true one, and grief, shown in sympathy, uttered deep sighs and imprinted kisses. Whom will you worthily repay, if you desire cruelty for me?

But lately you were a stranger on our shore, destitute

106-7. Cf. Verg. Aen. 1. 685-8

*Ut, cum te gremio accipiet laetissima Dido, Regales inter mensas laticemque Lyaeum,
Cum dabit amplexus atque oscula dulcia figet,
Occultum inspires ignem fallasque veneno.*

and 1. 717-9

*Haec oculis, haec pectore toto
Haeret, et interdum gremio fovet, inscia Dido Insidat quantus miseræ deus.*

107. Birt rejects this line because this "stanza" is longer by a line than the others. He thinks it was added by an interpolator who felt that the name of Ascanius was required. But with the line omitted the sense is not clear. It seems better to attribute the extra line to the writer's carelessness or lack of skill than to interpolation. Birt objects to Oudendorp's conjecture figebat on account of the recurrence of the word in 110; but this may be really an argument in its favor; see Introduction p. 10.

108. fides: faithfulness to the requirements of hospitality. Dido's kindness to Ascanius was at first prompted merely by a sense of duty to the motherless boy.

109. mentito pignore: i. e. the false hopes of happiness which love aroused. The juxtaposition of verum and mentito is no doubt intentional. nomen: i. e. of "mother."

110. figit governs gemitus as well as oscula—zeugma.

oscula figit: cf. Verg. Aen. 1. 687 oscula dulcia figet.

111. Confessus: passive meaning.

 Amissam classem, socios a morte reduxi.*
 Ov. Epist. 7. 89-90 Fluctibus eiectum tuta statione recepi, Vixque bene audito nomine regna dedi.

115. Inpendisse: the perfect infinitive has here the force of the present, as was often the case in late Latin, cf. Schmalz pp. 435-6. It is not, however, peculiar to late Latin, but was common in poetry, especially elegiac poetry of the classical period, where it was often used for metrical convenience; hence it came to be used in all poetry with merely present force. See A. A. Howard, Harvard Studies 1. p. 111.

fuissent: licet should properly be followed only by present or perfect subjunctive, but in late Latin it is often found with secondary tenses, and even with the indicative (cf. 149). The earliest instance of its use with a secondary tense of the subjunctive is in Bell. Hisp. 16. 3 quod factum licet necopinantibus nostris esset gestum; cf. also Juv. 13. 56, Mart. 5. 39. 8, 9. 91. 3, etc. It occurs three times in S. Silvia (see Bechtel p. 124). For discussion and further examples see Schmalz, Neue Jahrbücher 1891. p. 216; E. B. Lease, Archiv für Lat. Lexicog. 1900. p. 25, and American Journal of Philology 1900, p. 453.

and exiled, shipwrecked, your fleet scattered over the waves, to say nothing of all the disasters that you saw threatening you. Although all this had been your lot, yet Carthage offered you a throne. Whom will you worthily repay, if you desire cruelty for me?

There is no reason for my demanding a cruel requital. I should wish rather to have given in vain! What I could lose, I never count as loss. But, traitor, grant me at least what love owes itself, if deeds of kindness deserve no reward.

Nature teaches that there are gods, experience proves that they are not to be feared. How can I not believe it?

117. Nihil est quod: used as in 35, with the subjunctive of characteristic, if the reading repscā is accepted.

118. Nequiquam etc.: i. e. "I gave without expectation of return, consequently I do not desire to exact vengeance because my kindness has been wasted."

119. Vel hoc: for scansion see note on 98. Vel is here intensive, emphasizing hoc.

perfide: cf. 35.

121-2. This Epicurean doctrine is the whole theme of Lucretius. Cf. also Enn. Trag. 269-71

126. Non odit etc.: cf. Ov. Epist. 7. 29–30

Sed queror infidum, quaeque peius amo.

digna rependit: cf. digna rependes of the refrain, 100 etc.

You remain safe in your treachery, and I die because of loyalty! Base, ruthless, guilty, cruel, treacherous, false, ungrateful for my kindnesses! But why these threatening words? He does not hate who repents of his wishes, nor does she who is wronged exact a fitting penalty for that for which she grieves. By you doubtless love is thought to be freed from the restraint of honor. To whom could I refuse to give so much—my sceptre, my house, the Tyrian people, my kingdom, the citadels of Carthage, and whatever belonged to a ruler? It is of my husband, false one, that I complain, not of my rights, if my passion has not the return it deserves. But you were my guest, and I think you not more guilty than pitiable, Trojan, you who reject what is worthy while you seek what is worthless—though your garments are as yet scarcely dry you hasten again to the sea, and though

127. laesa is the simplest of the various emendations proposed, though it is not altogether satisfactory; the change to the feminine after the masculine qui is very harsh. Riese prints lexa marked with a dagger.

128. dedisse: see note on perfect infinitive, 115.

129. Cf. Ov. Epist. 7. 11–12

*Nec nova Carthago, nec te crescentia tangunt

132. quod hospes: for scansion cf. 98 and 119.

133. digna: i. e. what Dido offers. The contrast between what Dido has given Aeneas and what awaits him in Italy is developed at greater length by Ovid (Epist. 7. 13–22).

134. Anacoluthon; the quod clause beginning in 132 is not followed by a principal clause that logically completes it.

Verg. Aen. 3. 477 hanc (Ausoniam) arripe velis.

9. 13 turbata arripe castra.

10. 298 arrepta tellure semel.

11. 531 arripuit locum.

136. honesto pericula: cf. 97.

nescis: there is no need of changing to poscis, as has generally been done. The emphasis is on honesto—in leaving the safety of Carthage Aeneas is seeking dangers, but this is no proof of courage, for they are not dangers incurred in pursuing an honorable course of conduct.

137. vota: accusative of inner object; cf. vota queror, 87.

solus: i. e. you have only yourself to blame.

profecto: perfect participle.

140. sacro diademate, etc.: cf.

Lucan 5. 60 Cingere Pollaero pressos diademate crines.

Claud. 7. 84 sacro . . . ornat diademate crines.

Prud. c. Symm. 2. 430 caput augustum diademate cinxit.

Prisc. Anast. 163 Quo caput ipse tuum primo diademate cinxit.

The epithet sacrum is often used with diadema (cf. Thesaurus).

lately shipwrecked you are hurrying to distant seas. You are afraid to be safer, and yet you know nothing of dangers that are honorable. While you cherish your evil desires, you alone are preparing cruel disaster for yourself by your departure. You flee, lo! you flee and abandon my household gods, and leave the unhappy court of Carthage, which gave you a throne, which encircled your hair with the sacred diadem, placed on your majestic brow the jewelled constellation, and entrusted you with my love. You have nothing greater, I think, than this, and you still reign without a consort, my ungrateful Aeneas! Let anger rule the counsels of one who grieves! But love is.

The diadema was originally a purple fillet worn by the Persian king around the tiara. Among the Romans it was always regarded as a symbol of kingly power. From the time of Constantine it was adopted by the Caesars as a sign of their imperial dignity; it was often adorned with a row of pearls or precious stones, or made of gold and jewels. See Pauly-Wissowa, Real-Encyclopädie, and S. M. Stevenson, Dictionary of Roman Coins, s. v. diadema.

141. sidere may refer to the form of the diadem, or merely to the brilliance of the jewels of which it is composed.

143. maius: sc. nostro amore from previous line.

144. meus: vocative. Cf. Verg. Aen. 6. 835 sanguis meus.

In early Latin meus is used as vocative only with a noun having the vocative like the nominative; with later writers this rule is not observed. Cf. Kühner I. p. 447. 7.

ira: contrasted with amor; cf. 15 ff.

145. vellem: the present subjunctive might have been expected here.

Fletibus augeri, sed iam discrimine mortis

146. fletibus augeri: Dido here recurs to the same thought as was expressed at the beginning of the epistle (cf. 8); she would like to have the satisfaction of dwelling on her wrongs.

Aen. 4. 376 Heu Furiis incensa feror.
luctus: sc. erit.

148. fratre: Dido's brother, Pygmalion.

149. eras, haberis: indicative with licet, which is found from the time of Apul-

150. Vive: cf. Ov. Epist. 7. 63-4

Vive precor, sic te melius quam funere perdam.

better. I should wish that my wounds might grow through lamentations, but already I hasten on, conquered by my determination to die. Nor indeed will there be such mourning for my death as there was because of my brother's crime. Though you were at once base as an exile and faithless as a guest, and everywhere are regarded as one to be feared, yet live, and after my death remember the wrong that you did to me.
