De injusta vexatione Willelmi episcopi primi per Willelmum regem filium Willelmi magni regis. E Bibliotheca Bodleiana. MS. Fairfax VI.

ANNO ab incarnatione Domini 1080, interfecto a suis Parochianis Walchero episcopo, post 6 menses et decem dies ei successit in presulatum Dunelmensis ecclesie Willelmus, electus 5 Idus Novembris, ordinatus a Thoma Eboracensi archiepiscopo die Dominica tertio Nonas Januar. apud Glocester, presente Willelmo rege, et totius Anglie astantibus episcopis. Ex Clero Baiocensis ecclesie in monasterio sancti Karilephi monachico habitu suscepto, primo prior claustrum, deinde major prior, postmodum abbas est effectus in monasterio sancti Vincentii. Postremo comperta in rebus difficillimis ejus industria, rex Willelmus eum ad episcopum transtulit Dunelmensem. Erat namque acerrimus ingenio, subtilis consilio, magne eloquentie simul et sapiencie. Et quia in ecclesiastica gentis Anglorum historia, atque in vita beati Cuthberti legerat, monachorum conventum et ante patrem Cuthbertum, et post multis annis in hac ecclesia Deo deservisse, sed postmodum supervenientibus Paganis cum omnibus pene ecclesiis et monasteriis deletum: antiquum eidem ecclesie sedulo meditabatur servitium reparare. Jussu itaque regis Willelmi Romam adiit, et Domino pape Gregorio qualiter antiquitus et qualiter nunc se Dunelmensis ecclesia habuerit, veraciter ostendit. Rediens cum precepto et auctoritate apostolica monachicam circa corpus beati Cuthberti vitam restauravit, quinto Kal. Junii, die sancto Pentecostes, tertio anno sui episcopatus, et 17 anno regni Willelmi. Quo defuncto, Willelmus filius ejus sexto Kal. Octob. in regem consecratur, a quo, sicut a patre, magno honore habebatur episcopus: sed orta inter regem et primates Anglie magna dissensione, episcopus ab invidis circumventus usque ad expulsionem iram regis per- tulit, quam rem sequens libellus manifestat ex ordine.

“Sciatis, Domine, quod homines vestri de Eboraco et de Lincolnia homines meos in captione detinent, et terras meas saisiverunt, et meipsum, si possent, capere vo- luerunt, et per preceptum vestrum dicunt se fecisse hec omnia. Requiro autem vos inde, sicut dominum meum, ut homines meos et terras meas cum pecunia mihi reddi faciatis, sicut vestro homini et fideli, quem de nullo un- quam foris facto appellastis, et qui vobis nunquam de- fendit justitiam. Postea vero si me de foris facto aliquo appellaveritis, presto sum in curia vestra vobis justiciam facere convenienti termino, securitate veniendi accepta. Precor autem vos diligenter, ne per consilium inimico- rum meorum me tam turpiter et inhoneste tractetis, vel in- juste dissaisiatis: non est enim omnium hominum epis- copos judicare, et ego vobis secundum ordinem meum omnem justitiam offero: et si ad presens vultis habere servicium meum vel hominum meorum, illud idem secundum placere vestrum vobis offero.” Rex vero acceptis et auditis istis literis episcopi, dedit baronibus suis terras episcopi, vidente legato quem sibi miserat episcopus; re- mandavit autem episcopo, ut ad eum tali condicione veni- ret, quod si cum eo secundum velle regis remanere nollet, liceret ei Dunelmum secure reverti. Cumque episcopus, auditis hujusmodi responsis, ad regem ire disponderet, pre- misit Eboracum ad vicecomitem, querens ab eo pacem ad requirendum regem. Radulphus vero Paganellus, qui tunc erat vicecomes, non solum episcopo sed et omnibus legatis et hominibus suis regem adire volentibus pacem defendit: ipsum quoque monachum episcopi, qui de rege redibat, accepit, et equum suum ei occidit, postea peditem abire permisit: et super hec omnia precepit omnibus regis fidelibus de parte regis, ut malum facerent episcopo ubi- cunque et quomodocunque possent. Cumque episcopus per se vel per legatos suos regem non posset requirere, et terras suas destrui et vastari absque ulla ulcione per vii sep- timanas et amplius sustineret, tandem misit sibi rex abba- tem sancti Augustini, mandans ei ut, sicut prius manda- verat, sibi ad curiam suam cum abbate veniret. Episco- pus autem inimicorum suorum insidias cum regis ira me- tuens, sine bono conductu se non posse venire respondit, et legatos suos per abbatis conductum cum subscriptis literis regi misit.”

“NOTUM vobis est, domine, quod postquam ego de curia vestra veni, statim legatum et literas meas vobis misi, in quibus servicium meum et omnium calumniarum rectitudinem vobis ut regi meo et domino presentavi, mi- sericordiam quoque vestram requisivi, ut homines meos et terras et pecuniam, quam vicecomites vestri, ubicunque poterant, mihi abstulerunt, scilicet Offedene et Welle- tune quas diviserunt Odoni et Alano comitibus, cum ceteris terris in Ewerwickschire, sine ratione aliqua de parte vestra mihi facta, me semper offerente justiciam, mihi reddi faceretis, sicut vestro homini et fideli, qui mihi hoc fieri debere nunquam foris feceram, sed fideliter servieram vobis et servire volebam. Vobis vero vice illa non placuit mea mihi reddere, sicut ego requirebam et justum mihi videbatur, sed per breve vestrum pacem mihi dedistis ad vos secure veniendi, et vobiscum morandi, et a vobis re- deundi, et in eodem brevi fidelibus vestris per totam An- gliam precepistis, ut omnia mea in pace essent donec sciretis si vobiscum remanerem: quod breve cum misis- sem Radulpho Paganello, non solum mihi pacem negavit sed et de parte vestra me diffidavit, et in crastinum terras ecclesie nostre rapina invasit, predicta distribuit, homi- num vero quosdam vendidit, quosdam redimi permisit; monachum autem portantem breve pacis vestre homines Paganelli in captione miserunt, et equum suum ei occide- runt. Super hec omnia dictum est mihi vos dedisse par- tem terrarum mearum: et cum ad vos pro hijs omnibus mittere vellem, defendit Paganellus legatis meis transitum per terram vestram. Nunc vero vestri gratia per Abba- tem sancti Augustini et literas vestras mihi mandatis, ut ad vos secure venirem; ego autem precor vos et requiro sicut regem meum et dominum, ut mea mihi reddatis que sine ratione et judicio mihi abstulistis, et ego libenter ve- niam in curiam vestram, et secundum ordinem meum, quicquid juste judicabitur, vobis faciam; si hoc apud vos impetrare valeo, Deo vobisque gracias inde referam. Si vero nunc modo mea mihi reddere vobis placuerit, paratus sum tamen venire in curiam vestram per talem conductum qui me salvum conducat usque ad vos, salvumque reducat quoque usque ad ecclesiam meam, et videntibus cunctis baronibus vestris me defendam, quod de dampno corporis vestri, vel vestrarum terrarum, vel honoris vestri, nulli fiduciam vel sacramentum feci vel ab aliquo recepi; nec consilium vestrum alicui ad dampnum vestrum me sciente detexi: nec dampnum vestrum ut audivi quod vobis no- quam esset celavi, sed quam cicius potui vobis verbo, vel legato, vel litteris notificavi, usque ad eam diem qua no- vissime de curia vestra veni. Et hoc in veritate vobis mando, quod libenter cum hoc abbate venissem, nisi plus inimicos meos, et indoctam populi multitudinem timuis- sem, quod de vestro brevi et baronum vestrorum fiducia dubitasset. Precor igitur vos, ut talem mihi conductum mittatis, qui cum honore vestro et salute mea me ducat et reducat; firmiter enim credo verbo vestro, quod per vo- luntatem vestram nemo mihi contumeliam inferret, sed si contra voluntatem vestram mihi fieret, parum commodi sequens ulcio mihi daret: quod si dissaisitus ad vos venero nullum aliud placitum preter purgacionis mee defensionem hac vice subintrabo.”

Rex vero visis hijs litteris misit conductum episcopo et bene affidavit eum per litteras suas, quod per eum vel per suos homines nullum illi dampnum eveniret usque quo de rege rediens Dunelmum intraret. Porrexit ergo epis- copus ad regem et deprecatus est eum ut rectitudinem sibi consentiret sicut episcopo suo. Rex autem respondit ei, “Quod si laicaliter placitare vellet, et extra pacem quam rex ei dederat se mitteret, hoc modo rectitudinem sibi consentiret, et si hoc modo placitare recusaret, Dunel- mum faceret eum reconduci.” Episcopus vero requisivit archiepiscopum Eboracensem et episcopos qui aderant, ut inde sibi consulerent. Episcopi autem responderunt, re- gem sibi prohibuisse ne ei consulerent. Tunc episcopus archiepiscopum suum per debitum, quod ecclesie sue si- bique debebat, summonuit ut sibi consuleret; cumque archiepiscopus regem inde requisisset, remandavit epis- copo, se non posse consilium sibi dare. Precatus est ergo regem episcopus, ut consilium archiepiscopi et primatis sui et comparium suorum episcoporum sibi consentiret, et hoc totum sibi defendit rex. Tunc episcopus purga- cionem sceleris et perjuri regis obtulit, quam cum rex suscipere nolisset, Dunelmum redijt episcopus; cui rex interim plus quam septingentos homines cum multa preda abstulerat. Misit autem episcopus iterum ad regem quen- dam suum monachum cum subnotatis litteris.

“NOTUM est vobis, charissime domine, quod ego sepius per litteras meas et legatos plures misericordiam vestram requisivi, offerens diligentissime de infidelitate et perjurio me purgaturum in curia vestra recto judicio mei ordinis: quod quia sic impetrare non potui, idem requi-rens ad vos veni, sed inimicorum meorum prevalente con- silio parum mihi profuit, et quoniam dilectionem vestram, quam injuste amisi, recuperare cupio, mando vobis ut domino et regi meo, quatenus intra securitatem pacis vestre rectitudinem de me ut de homine et episcopo vestro secundum rectum mei ordinis judicium recipiatis; et si adhuc in sententia illa, ut me purgare debeam laico more, perseveratis, de hoc prius paratus sum recto judicio judi-

cari, ea quidem condicione, ut si quis me in justo iudicio opprimere voluerit, securitate predictae pacis conservata, liceat mihi contradicere secundum recta iudicia mei ordinis in eo loco ubi canonice iudicatum fuerit, et quicquid ibi recte iudicabitur, ex toto profiteor me sequi, sive carcerali pena cruciari, seu honoris dignitate privari, vel, quod concedat Deus, ut justum est, dilectionis vestre solacio refoveri, unde convenientem fiduciam presto sum dare vobis. Si vero hoc mihi denegatis, et ita immutabiliter disposuistis quod nullam rectitudinem mihi consentire velitis, saltem in curia vestra liceat me purgare recto iudicio de calumnia perjurij et infidelitatis; nullam enim habeo voluntatem tenere terram de vobis contra voluntatem vestram, talis enim dominus dedit mihi terram quam habeo, qui me eam et honorifice tenere permittebat, et multa mihi daturum promittebat."

Rex vero visis litteris, monachum, qui eos portaverat, capi et custodiri fecit, et exercitum suum misit super episcopum; et cum exercitus ille incendio et rapina terram vastasset episcopi, locuti sunt barones cum episcopo, et subscriptam convencionem per fidem suam firmaverunt.

"Comes Alanus et Rogerus Putavensis et comes Odo dederunt fidem suam Dunelmensi episcopo in natiuitate sancte Marie, quod eum sanum et saluum ad curiam regis cum suis omnibus ea condicione conducerent, quod si rex ei nollet consentire rectitudinem secundum legem episcopi per tales iudices qui episcopum iuste iudicare deberent, tunc predicti comites episcopum cum suis omnibus Dunelmum reducerent absque mora, que contra voluntatem episcopi fieret: si vero tale iudicium episcopo diceretur, quod sibi videretur iniustum, et ipse contradiceret, et in rege vel in iudicibus ad confirmandum iudicium illuc ire remaneret, ubi contentiosa pontificum iudicia iuste debent terminari, sicut supradictum est, ad castellum suum reduceretur episcopus. Et si rex rectitudinem, que iuste contradici non posset, episcopo consentiret, et nulla inde contradictio nasceretur; vel si nasceretur in rege vel in iudicibus, non remaneret quin ibi iudicium suum confirmarent ubi huiusmodi iudicia iuste debent confirmari vel destrui, et episcopus rectitudinem ullam intrare vel facere vel nollet vel non posset, tunc rex inveniret episcopum sine aliqua detensione vel mora portum et naves quantum necesse essent sibi et suis omnibus qui eum sequi vellent, ut ipse eligeret ab Exonia usque ad Sanguichium et securitatem et conductum regis, et episcopus et sui haberent donec ultra mare ad terram siccam cum rebus suis essent; et liceret eos per conductum regis secum ducere et portare aurum et argentum, equos, et pannos, et arma, et canes, et accipitres, et sua prorsus omnia que de terra portari debent: et quod nulla alia convencio vel fiducia ab episcopo vel a suis vi vel ingenio exigeretur, vel aliud facere cogerentur, quam ibidem episcopus et sui homines Rogero Putaviensi promiserunt. Episcopus dedit fidem suam Rogero Putavensi, quod si ipse per prescriptam condicionem castellum reduceretur, et major fortitudo in castello missa vel facta esset in hominibus vel in municione vel in castelli fortitudine, quam eadem die ibi erat, episcopus totum illud destrui faceret, ita quod episcopus inde nullum proficuum haberet nec rex dampnum; et priusquam episcopus intraret viam veniendi ad curiam, non quereretur vel reciperetur dampnum regis de quo male eum tractaret se sciente usque festum sancti Michaelis."

Preterea iuraverunt septem ex precepto episcopi Rogero Putavensi vice regis hoc suscipienti, quod si episcopus rectam rectitudinem, ut supradictum, recusaret, transfretare eligeret, ipsi castellum Dunelmense redderent. Promisit autem episcopus fidem suam Rogero Putavensi de parte sua convencionem istam se regi servaturum, quamdiu comitum convencio sibi attenderetur sine omni malo ingenio, excepto ingenio placiti quod facturus erat contra regem. Comites vero promiserunt episcopo fidem suam regem sibi servaturum convencionem istam et quod inceptio placiti non differetur ultra proximum festum sancti Michaelis, nisi per consensum episcopi, vel per tales terminos quales iudices legales dictis causis inter regem et episcopum iuste poni debere decernerent: Et si aliquem hominum vel equorum episcopi contingeret egrotare, ipsi et eorum custodes pacem regis haberent, quamdiu eos infirmitas detineret, et postea vel alii homines episcopi per conductum regis post episcopum ducerentur, qui vero vellent per consensum episcopi remanere et fidelitatem regi facere cum suis omnibus pacifice remanerent. Quod si rex prescriptam convencionem aliquo modo frangeret in comitibus, vel in suorum quolibet per eorum voluntatem vel consensum nullum ulterius proficuum haberent, donec episcopus sine vi vel ingenio eos inde grantanter absolveret. Accepta igitur fide ista, respectatum est utrinque placitum usque in quarto nonas Novembris; ea vero die venit episcopus Salisburiam, quem cum Ursus de Habetot unus ex servientibus regis ad regem intrare moneret, premisit episcopus legatos suos ad regem, et deprecatus est eum ut liceret ei loqui cum quibusdam fratrum suorum episcoporum qui aderant, nemo enim illorum, ut aiebant, audebat eum osculari vel alloqui quod episcopus iam de ipso metropolitano suo expertus erat: cumque rex hoc facturum se negasset, nec eorum ullus hanc fraternitatis vicem et legis sancte preceptum ei exhiberet. Ingressus tandem episcopus requisivit ab archiepiscopis utrum revestitus ingredi deberet, dixitque "Nihil se prorsus acturum ibi nisi canonice et secundum ordinem suum, et sibi videbatur quod ecclesiastica consuetudo exigebat, ut ipse revestitus ante revestitos causam suam diceret, et causantibus canonice responderet." Cui Lanfrancus archiepiscopus respondens, "Bene possumus, inquit, hoc modo vestiti de regalibus tuisque negociis disceptare, vestes enim non impediunt veritatem." Episcopus ergo surgens precatus est regem, ut episcopatum suum quem jamdiu sine iudicio abstulerat sibi redderet. Lanfrancus vero rege tacente dixit, "Rex de episcopatu tuo nihil tibi abstulit, vel aliquis per eum, neque breve suum vidisti per quod te de episcopatu tuo dissaisiret vel dissaisiri preciperet;" et episcopus, "Vidi, inquit, Rogerum Paganellum, quem hic video, qui ex precepto regis me dissaisivit de toto episcopatu meo quem habeo in Eboracensi comitatu; cumque ego per litteras et legatos meos regem inde requisissem, deprecans ut res meas mihi redderet, et si de qualibet causa me calumniari vellet, de me sicut de ipso suo episcopo plenam rectitudinem reciperet: Rex mihi nihil reddidit, sed baronibus suis terras ecclesie prout sibi placuit distribuit; postea vero cum per memetipsum in curia sua regi plenam rectitudinem obtulissem, et ipse eam penitus mihi denegasset, non solum quod prius abstulerat detinuit, sed quicquid mihi supererat auferri precepit, misitque baronibus suis ad partes nostras litteras sigillatas, conjurans eos et precipiens ut, quicquid mali poterant, mihi facerent, et cum nec ista sibi sufficerent, misit comites et barones cum exercitu suo et per eos totum episcopatum meum vastavit, terras quoque et homines et pecuniam sancti Cuthberti et meam mihi abstulit, nostram etiam sedem me ad tempus abjurare coegit: ipsi etiam casati ecclesie, qui mei homines ligii fuerant et quicquid habebant de casamento ecclesie tenebant, ex precepto regis guerram mihi fecerunt, et terras suas de rege tenentes pacifice, hic eos cum rege video adversum me convenisse." Lanfrancus ergo dixit, "Rex te invitat, ut rectitudinem sibi facias, et barones sui ad hoc te adduxerunt ut rectitudinem sibi facias, et tu requiris ut ipse tibi prior rectitudinem faciat; fac sibi prius rectitudinem, et postea require ab eo hoc quod modo requiris." Cui respondens episcopus ait, "Domine archiepiscope, hoc quod modo dicitis, dicitis pro consilio vel pro iudicio;" "Certe, inquit, non dico pro iudicio, sed si rex mihi crediderit, satis cito faciet inde iudicium fieri." Tunc Laici huiusmodi verbis Lanfranci tocius Anglie primatis animati, adversus episcopum exclamantes dixerunt, "Iniustum esse quod rex episcopo responderet antequam regi fecisset iusticiam." Laicis vero hec et alia multa declamantibus et iterantibus, facto silentio dixit episcopus, "Domini barones et laici, permittite me queso que dicturus sum regi dicere, archiepiscopis et episcopis respondere, quia nihil vobis habeo dicere, et sicut huc non veni iudicium vestrum recepturus, ita illud omnino recuso; et si domino nostro regi et archiepiscopis et episcopis placuisset vos huic negotio interesse, nec me taliter obloqui decuisset." Tunc rex ait, "Sperabam quod episcopus prius mihi respondere deberet de hiis de quibus eum accusarem, et multum miror quod ipse aliud requirit." Comes vero Alanus et comes Rogerus dixerunt, "Ad hoc episcopum adduximus, ut ipse regi rectitudinem faciat;" "Presto sum, inquit episcopus, si mihi canonice iudicatur despo-

liatus respondere, nullo enim modo ordinis mei legem in hoc placito transgrediar." Tunc Rogerus Bygotus dixit regi, "Vos debetis episcopo dicere unde eum appellare vultis, et postea si ipse nobis voluerit respondere, de responsione sua facite eum judicari; sin autem facite inde quod barones vestri vobis consulerint." Ad hec episcopus, "Jam dixi et iterum dicam quod laicale iudicium, et quicquid est contra canones prorsus respuo; nec aliquam accusationem recipio nisi prius de episcopatu meo investiar, vel canonice mihi iudicetur, quod ante investituram debeam accusari, et respondere, et iudicari." Tunc Hugo de Bello-Monte ex precepto regis surgens dixit episcopo, "Rex te appellat, quod cum ipse audivit quod inimici sui super eum veniebant, et homines sui, episcopus scilicet Baiocensis, et Rogerus comes et alii plures regnum suum pariter sibi et coronam auferre volebant, et ipse per consilium tuum contra illos equitabat: Ipse te, me audiente, summonuit, ut cum eo equitares, tu vero respondisti ei, te cum septem militibus, quos ibi habebas, libenter iturum, et pro pluribus ad castellum tuum sub festinatione missurum, et postea fugisti de curia sua sine ejus licentia, et quosdam de familia sua tecum adduxisti, et ita in necessitate sua sibi defecisti, et modo vult ut inde sibi facias quod curia sua iudicabit, et si necesse fuerit postea te pluribus appellabit." Episcopus autem Hugoni respondit, "Hugo, dicas quicquid volueris, non tibi tamen hodie respondebo, nec accusationem aliquam recipiam, vel placitum aliquod ingrediar usque quo juste iudicetur quod despoliatus debeam placitare, vel canonice de episcopatu meo investiar; et postea de quibuscunque rex me appellaverit voluntarie respondebo, et quicquid feci me legaliter fecisse monstrabo, faciamque dictante iusticia quod in nullo prorsus reus inveniar." Tumque multum tumultuantes laici, quidam rationibus, quidam vero contumeliis adversus episcopum deiterarent, et ipse ei nullo respondere vellet. S. Constantiensis episcopus ait, "Domini archiepiscopi nos non oporteret diucius hec ita considerare, sed deceret nos surgere, et episcopos et abbates convocare, quosdam etiam baronum et comitum istorum nobiscum habere; et cum eis juste decernere, si episcopus debeat prius investiri, vel ante investituram de querelis regis intrare in placitum." Ad hec Lanfrancus archiepiscopus, "Non est necesse, inquit, nos surgere, sed episcopus et homines sui egrediantur et nos remanentes tam clerici quam laici consideremus equaliter, quid inde juste facere debeamus." "Ego, inquit episcopus, libenter egrediar, sed bene vobis dico, archiepiscopi et episcopi, ut quicquid in mea causa feceritis, ordinabiliter et canonice faciatis, nec eos in vestro iudicio habeatis quos ab episcoporum iudiciis decreta sequestrant et canones." "Vade, inquit Lanfrancus archiepiscopus, nos enim juste faciemus quicquid fecerimus." Hugo de Bello-Monte dixit episcopo, "Si ego hodie te et tuum ordinem iudicare non potero, tu vel tuus ordo nunquam me amplius iudicabit." "Vide autem, inquit episcopus, qui in domo ista remanent et me iudicare disponunt, ut et canonicos iudices habeant, et canonice me iudicent; si enim aliter agerent, eorum iudicia penitus recusarem." Egresso itaque episcopo cum suis, et rege cum suis episcopis et consulibus, et vicecomitibus, et prepositis, et venatoribus, aliisque quorumlibet officiorum, in iudicio remanente: et post diutinas moras revocato et reverso episcopo, Thomas Eborum archiepiscopus ait, "Domine episcope, dominus noster archiepiscopus et regis curia vobis iudicat quod rectitudinem regi facere debetis antequam de vestro fedo revestiat." Et episcopus respondit, "Investituram episcopatus mei mihi reddi precatus, despoliatus sum enim sine omni vocatione et iudicio; et de episcopatu iudicandus exivi domum istam, et inde requiro iudicium, quod nullus mihi hodie, vel ego alicui de fedo feci verbum;" et idem archiepiscopus ait, "Vobis iudicat curia ista, quia de nulla re debet vos rex resaisire, antequam sibi rectitudinem faciatis;" et episcopus, "Vellem, inquit, mihi canonicam aliquam sententiam demonstrari, per quam iudicium istud canonicum esse cognoscerem; iudicium enim huiusmodi nec ecclesiasticis usibus nec in lege Christiana didici vel audivi: et si iudicium contra canones susciperem, in sanctam Dei ecclesiam, et in sanctum sacerdotalem ordinem graviter peccarem; quod enim ad presens me fortassis parum lederet, plures in posterum hoc exemplo confunderet; ideoque certam mihi queso monstrare sententiam per quod iustum hoc esse cognoscam." Tunc Lanfrancus archiepiscopus ait, "Iudicium istud iustum est, et illud oportet te concedere et sequi, vel contradicere;" et episcopus, "Vellem inquit, ex consensu regis et vestro cum quibusdam episcoporum istorum loqui, et per eorum consilium facienda facere et dimittenda dimittere," et Lanfrancus archiepiscopus ait, "Episcopi sunt iudices, et eos ad consilium tuum habere non debes." "Precor, inquit episcopus, regem ut illos mihi consentiat, et eos ut mihi fraterna consulant caritate." Rex vero respondit, "Cum tuis tibi consule, quia de nostris in consilio tuo nullum prorsus habebis;" et episcopus, "Parum consilii, inquit, in hiis septem hominibus habeo contra virtutem atque scienciam tocius huius regni, quod hic adversum me video congregatam." Accepta tamen consilii licentia, et egresso cum suis episcopo, et in placitum regresso archiepiscopo ait, "Iudicium quod hic dictum est respuo, quia contra canones et contra legem nostram factum est, neque enim ego canonice vocatus sum sed coactus vi regalis exercitus adsum, et despoliatus episcopio extra provinciam meam, absentibus omnibus comprovincialibus meis, in laicali conventu causam meam dicere compellor, et inimici mei, qui mihi consilium et colloquium suum et pacis osculum denegant, postpositis dictis meis de hiis que non dixi me iudicant, et accusatores sunt simul et iudices, et in lege nostra prohibitum invenio, ne tale iudicium suscipiam, quod ex fatuitate mea vellem suscipere. Archiepiscopus et primas meus Dei ordinis que respectu ab huiusmodi presumptione me deberent caritative compescere: et quia per regis odium vos omnes adversarios scio, apostolicam sedem Romanam, sanctam ecclesiam, et beatum Petrum ejusque vicarium appello, ut ipsius ordinatione negotii mei iustam sententiam suscipere merear: cujus dispositioni majores causas ecclesiasticas et episcoporum iudicia antiqua apostolorum eorumque successorum atque canonum autoritas reservavit." Tunc Lanfrancus archiepiscopus respondit, "Nos non de episcopio sed de tuo te fedo iudicamus, et hoc modo iudicavimus Baiocensem episcopum ante patrem huius regis de fedo suo, nec rex vocabat eum, episcopum in placito illo, sed fratrem et comitem." Et episcopus ait, "Domine archiepiscope, ego nullam feci hodie mentionem vel fedum habere me dixi, sed de episcopii mei dissaisione conquestus sum et conqueror," et archiepiscopus, "Si nunquam, inquit, audiam te loqui de fedo, scio te tamen magnum fedum habuisse, et inde te iudicavimus;" et episcopus, "Domine archiepiscope, modo audio quod vos omnia dicta mea dimisistis et de vestra me consciencia iudicastis; sed quia Dei gracia sapientissimus et nominatissimus estis, in hoc sapere vestrum tam sublime intelligo, quod parvitas mea illud comprehendere non potest; sed apostolicam sedem quam ex necessitate appellavi per licenciam regis et vestram adire volo;" Egredere, inquit archiepiscopus, et rex, cum suis habito consilio, dicet tibi quid sibi placuerit;" Cumque episcopus egrederetur et vocatus regrederetur, Hugo de Bello-Monte surgens dixit episcopo, "Domine episcope, regis curia et barones isti vobis pro iusto iudicant, quando sibi vos respondere non vultis de hiis de quibus vos per me appellavit, sed de placito suo invitatis eum Romam, quod vos fedum vestrum inde foris facitis; et episcopus respondit, "In omni loco in quo non violentia sed iusticia dominetur, de scelere et perjurio me purgare paratus sum, et hoc quod hic pro iudicio recitasti in Romana ecclesia falsum et iniuste dictum esse monstrabo." "Ego, inquit Hugo, et compares mei parati sumus iudicium nostrum in hac curia confirmare;" et episcopus respondit, "In curia ista nullum ad presens placitum subintrabo, quia nihil ibi tam bene dicerem quin fautores regis depravando perverterent, qui ipsammet non reverentes apostolicam auctoritatem post ejus appellacionem me iudicio non legali gravant, sed Dei et sancti Petri postulans auxilium Romam vadam:" Tunc rex ait, "Modo volo ut castellum tuum mihi reddas quoniam iudicium mee curie non sequeris," et episcopus respondit, "Nunquam vobis in convencionem huiusmodi me castellum meum vobis redditurum nisi canonicum iudicium sequi nollem, et si iudicii contradictio oriretur, illuc ire ad contradicendum recusarem, ubi contradictionis huiusmodi finalem sententiam iuste deberem suscipere: Et ego presto sum judicia mihi facta in Romana ecclesia contradicere, de qua pendet et pependit ab apostolorum tempore et infra ordinis mei diffinitiva sententia;" et rex ait, "Per vultum de Luca nunquam exibis de manibus meis, donec castellum habeam;" et episcopus respondit, "Domine mi rex, ego passus sum per tres servientes vestros auferri mihi terras et pecuniam ecclesie presentibus centum meis militibus, et in nullo prorsus vobis restiti; et cum nihil mihi remanserit de episcopatu meo preter urbem ipsam in qua sedes est ecclesie et eandem mihi auferre vultis, nulla nisi Dei virtute resistam vobis; sed de parte Dei et sancti Petri et ejus vicarii domini pape dico vobis eam mihi auferatis; paratus sum enim bonos obsides et fiducias dare vobis quod homines mei quos ibi, dum Romam vado, volo dimittere in fidelitate vestra, eam custodient, et si volueritis libenter vobis servient." Tunc rex ait, "In veritate credas, episcope, quod nullo modo Dunelmum reverteris, et quod homines tui Dunelmi nullatenus remanebunt, nec tu manus meas evades donec castellum tuum liberum mihi reddas;" "Bene, inquit episcopus, confido de fide quam mihi comites promiserunt, quod usque ad ecclesiam meam securus perducatur, sicut inter nos condicio firmata est, et ipsi coram vobis in hoc placito cognoverunt." Tunc Lanfrancus archiepiscopus dixit regi, "Si episcopus amplius castellum suum vobis contradixerit bene eum capere potestis, quia conductum, quem hactenus habuit, nunc dimittit, cum prior conventionem frangit, et barones vestros probare appetit quod fidem suam servarent non bene:" Tunc Radulphus Piprellus et omnes laici unanimiter conclamantes dixerunt, "Capite eum, capite eum, bene enim loquitur iste vetulus ligaminarius:" Quod Alanus comes audiens surrexit et dixit, "Ego eum interposita fide mea de castello suo eduxi et ad regis curiam adduxi, ea condicione quod si rex nollet ei consentire justiciam que juste contradici non posset, sicut episcopo suo, ego eum ad castellum suum cum suis omnibus sanum reducerem; et si rex ei rectitudinem sicut episcopo suo, que juste contradici non posset, offerret, et ipse eam sequi vel nollet vel non posset, tunc rex sibi et suis omnibus secundum voluntatem episcopi ubi ipse eligeret ab Exonia usque ad Sanguicium naves et portum inveniret; et liceret ei omnes homines suos quos ipse vellet et qui cum eo ire vellent, cum omnibus suis et eorum pecunia secum ducere per securitatem et conductum regis usque quo ultra mare ad siccam terram cum rebus suis essent, et multum precor dominum meum regem ne fidem meam inde faciat me mentiri, nullum enim proficuum in me haberet ulterius." Cumque hoc idem comites Rogerus et Odo precarentur, Lanfrancus archiepiscopus ait, "Rex bene vos adquietavit; plenam namque rectitudinem episcopo obtulit et ipse eam vobis audientibus recusavit, regem quoque Romam injuste invitavit; recognoscat igitur episcopus hoc justum fecisse judicium et se illud sequi nolle, et rex sibi naves inveniet et conductum:" Et episcopus, "Bene, inquit, vos moneo comites qui promissa fide vestra me ducendum suscepistis, ut me Dunelmum reducat, quia rex mihi nullam rectitudinem consentit et hoc paratus sum in Romana ecclesia demonstrare." "Non est, inquit Lanfrancus, justum ut placitum vel judicium regis pro aliqua contradictione longius procedat, sed quotiens in curia sua judicium agitur ibidem necesse est ut concedatur vel contradicatur, tu ergo judicium nostrum vel hic concede vel hic evidenti ratione contradicito." Ad hec episcopus, "Hic, inquit, optime contradico, et Rome ubi debeo, et ubi justitia magis quam violentia donatur, hujus contradictionis sententiam suscipere appeto, et quia nemo vestrum judicando vel testificando dicere audeat quod regi displiceat, cum alios testes non habeam, Christianam legem, quam hic scriptam habeo, testem invoco, me Romam, sicut dixi, juste posse pergere et hujus cause finalem sententiam ex auctoritate Romani pontificis debere procedere." Et rex ait, "Dicis licet quicquid velis non tamen effugies manus meas nisi castellum prius mihi reddas;" et episcopus respondit, "Cum vos non solum episcopatum verum et omnia mea injuste abstuleritis, et ipsam modo sedem violenter auferre velitis, pro nulla re quam facere possim, capi me patiar." Constituta est ergo dies qua episcopus urbem suis hominibus vacuaret, et rex suos ibi poneret; tunc episcopus dixit regi, "Domine mi rex, a vobis scire volo, si deepiscopatu meo aliquid mihi dimittetis, unde saltem vivere valeam," et Lanfrancus archiepiscopus respondit, "Tu pro regis dampno et omnium nostrorum dedecore vadis Romam, et ipse tibi terram dimitteret? remane in terra sua et ipse episcopatum tuum preter urbem tibi reddet ea condicione, quod in curia sua judicio baronum suorum rectitudinem sibi facias:" "Ego, inquit episcopus, apostolicam sedem appellavi, quia in curia ejus nullum justum judicium audio, et nullo modo dimittam quin illuc vadam:" "Si tu, inquit archiepiscopus, sine regis licencia Romam perrexeris, nos dicemus ei quid de episcopatu tuo sibi sit faciendum;" et episcopus; "Vos, inquit, ad presens ad opus meum nil boni sibi dicitis, et quicquid vultis satis libere dicere potestis, sed antequam hinc decedam paratus sum coram omnibus baronibus istis ab omni scelere et perjurio me purgare et modis omnibus me defendere, quod dampnum regis de corpore suo vel de terra sua nullo modo me sciente feci vel quesivi, et quod inde nulli fiduciam feci vel ab aliquo recepi, et cum prius hoc dampnum suum intellexi, cum inde quam citius potui premunivi et contra hostes suos fideliter eum juvi, et hoc legaliter me fecisse monstrabo; monstrabo enim quod Dornbernum et Hastings, que jam pene perdidit, in sua fidelitate detinui, Londoniam quoque que jam rebellaverat in ejus fidelitate sedavi, meliores etiam duodecim ejusdem urbis cives ad eum mecum duxi, ut per illos melius ceteros animaret, et hoc ita me fecisse per testimonium baronum suorum, si eis licenciam dederit, demonstrabo, et multum precor eum ut purgacionem quam predixi modo suscipiat, et post modum servicium meum juste me monstrare permittat, et si ei placeret, et benignam eis licenciam dare vellet, ad hanc purgacionem faciendam plures episcoporum istorum testes haberem." Et cum hoc multum multoties deprecaretur episcopus, et rex omnino recusaret, Lanfrancus archiepiscopus ait episcopo, "Melius ageres si in misericordiam regis totum te poneres, et ego ad pedes ejus libenter tui causa venirem," et episcopus, "Misericordiam, inquit, ejus obviare deprecor ut pro amore Dei et honore sancte ecclesie, judicia que hic ad detrimentum, sancte Dei ecclesie et confusionem sanctorum ordinum, et Christiane legis ignominiam injuste prolata sunt, legaliter faciat emendari, et propter hoc libenter ei serviam, et de meo, si placeat ei tribuam:" "Ex toto, inquit archiepiscopus, in misericordia ejus te pone, et judicio curie sue refragare penitus dimitte:" Et episcopus, "Absit, inquit, ut judicium contra canones immo ad destructionem canonum suscipiam vel concedam." Tunc rex ait, "Faciatur mihi episcopus fiduciam quod dampnum meum citra mare non querat vel recipiat, et quod naves meas, quas sibi inveniam, non detinebit frater meus, vel aliquis suorum ad dampnum meum contra nautarum voluntatem:" Et episcopus respondit, "Domine, comites vestri fidem suam mihi promiserunt, quod nullam fiduciam quam ego vel homines mei facere cogemur vi vel ingenio, super fiduciam quam eis Dunelmi fecimus, et hanc quam modo fiduciam queritis, nullo modo nisi coactus faciam." Et Reginaldus Paganellus ait, "Certe comites vestri promiserunt hoc quod dicit episcopus, et convenienter inde eos custodite;" "Tace, inquit rex, quia pro nullius fiducia naves meas perdere patiar, sed si episcopus inde se fiduciam fecisse cognoverit, super illam aliam non requiram:" Et episcopus ait, "De multis rebus baronibus vestris fiduciam me fecisse cognosco, et super illam nec vos querere, nec ego aliam facere debeo;" tunc rex iratus ait, "Per vultum de Luca, in hoc anno mare non transibis nisi fiduciam, quam de navibus requiro, prius modo feceris;" "Faciatur, inquit episcopus, hanc et multo majorem, si necesse fuerit, fiduciam ante quam hic in captione detinear, sed bene omnes audiant, quod ea invitatus faciam et captivum timore coactus:" Fecit itaque episcopus fiduciam, et naves et conductum quesivit; et rex ait, "Nullum conductum habebis sed Wiltone moraberis donec ego vere sciam quod castellum habeam in mea potestate, et tunc demum naves recipies et conductum;" et episcopus respondit, "Cum quod vellem et deberem facere non valeam, hoc ipsum quod dicitis injuste patiar, et coactus." Tunc Willelmus de Merlao surgens dixit regi, "Domine, homines episcopi qui in castello suo sunt abstulerunt domino meo Constantiensi episcopo CCta. animalia in conductu vestro, priusquam episcopus modo venit ad curiam vestram; et dominus meus requisivit eos ut sibi redderent pecuniam suam, et noluerint: postea vero precepit eis Walterus de Haiencorn de parte vestra ut redderent pecuniam et noluerunt: modo autem precamur vos ut faciatis domino meo reddi pecuniam suam;” et rex ait, “Videant barones isti si ego juste possum implacitare episcopum;” et Lanfrancus archiepiscopus ait, “Injustum esset si amplius implacitaretis eum, cum de vobis mihi teneat et securum conductum habere debeat.” Recessit itaque illa die episcopus ad eligendum portum rediturus in crastinum; die vero crastina requisivit comitem Alanum ut Hamptone sibi naves et portum inveniret: quod cum rex audisset, dixit episcopo, “Bene scias, episcope, quod nunquam transfretabis donec castellum tuum habeam, episcopus enim Baiocensis inde me castigavit, sed bene vide ut castellum Dunelmi homines mei habeant 18. Kal. Decemb. et si homines mei ea die castellum habuerint in mea potestate, tunc sine ulla dubitatione vel mora habebis naves et conductum.” Precepit itaque Gilberto vicecomiti audiente episcopo, et Alano comite ceterisque baronibus suis, ut 11 Kal. Decembr. liberaret episcopo tot naves Hamptone quot sibi suisque ad transfretandum essent necessarie. Episcopus autem dixit Alano comiti, “Domine comes, videte vos et socii vestri, per quorum fidem debeo conducere, ne ultra hunc terminum disturbar: et dum in Anglia fuero, habetote mecum unum bonum hominem qui et hospicia mihi inveniat, et ab impedimento me defendat, ut et vos de vestra fiducia salvi sitis et ego non fatiger ulterius.” Et comes Alanus respondit, “hoc faciet vobis rex per quendam suum servientem.” Remansit itaque episcopus Wiltone, et Robertus de Comitibus villa cum eo ut hospitia ei liberaret, et eum secure conduceret Hamptonam termino constituto ad recipiendas naves et ventum expectandum. Acceperunt ergo Ino Taillesboci et Ernesius de Burone castellum Dunelmense in manus regis, et dissaisiverunt episcopum de ecclesia et de castello, et de omni terra sua 18 Kal. Decembr. et liberaverunt hominibus episcopi Helponem Balistarium regis, et Breve regis de foris sigillatum hec verba continentem.

Willelmus rex Anglorum omnibus fidelibus suis per totam Angliam salutem: “Sciatis Dunelmensem episcopum et omnes suos homines pacem meam habere per totum regnum Anglie, et licencia et pace mea mare transire: ideoque defendo omnibus mee potestatis hominibus, ne aliquid mali eis faciant.”

Cum autem sperarent homines episcopi securos se esse per comitum fiduciam et per sigillum regis et conductum Helponis, accepit Ino Taillesbosci duos milites episcopi et coegit eos placitare de animalibus Constantiensis episcopi, de quibus iudicatum fuerat ante regem Dunelmensi episcopo non debere respondere; et iterum fecit auferri Ino Taillesbosci cujdam militi episcopi equum suum in predicto conducto. Episcopus vero requisivit Gilbertum et Robertum XI. Kal. Decembr. ut naves sibi liberarent, et liceret ei transfretare cum Rogero de Molbraio qui eodem termino transfretaret; et illi responderunt se nullam sibi navem liberaturos et dixerunt regem sibi precepisse, ut bene servarent episcopum ne de potestate regis exiret, usque quo quid de eo fieri preciperet, illis per suas sigillatas litteras remandaret. Servaverunt itaque episcopum usque 6 Kal. Decembr. et ea die adduxit eum Robertus Hamptonam: quo cum venisset episcopus naves intrare voluit; erat enim ventus bonus et omnia ad transfretandum prospera. Predicti vero servientes regis defenderunt ei naves et transitum et in crastinum cum ventum defecisset viderunt, dederunt episcopo transfretandi licenciam et liberaverunt ei naves. Episcopus ergo dato naulo ventum necessarium expectavit; postea venerunt ad eum O. Salesberiensis episcopus et Robertus de Insula et Ricardus de Cultura, et summonuerunt eum de parte regis. Kal. Decembr. ut in nativitate Domini esset Londonie ad curiam regis, et faceret ei rectitudinem de Gaufrido monacho suo, qui postquam episcopus ad curiam venerat, de dominicatu episcopi quingenta et triginta novem animalia acceperat, et munitionem castelli abstulerat de quibusdam suis aliis hominibus qui unum hominem regis occiderant. Episcopus vero respondit eis, “Per me nihil horum factum est; et ego et homines mei conductum securum habemus: et ad curiam ejus amplius ire non possum, ipse enim omnia mea mihi abstulit et equos meos jam venditos manducavi: sed si ipse me et meos homines abire permiserit, et fidem comitum suorum servaverit, Romanam ecclesiam, quam ex necessitate appellavi, Deo miserante, requiram. Sin autem; antequam capiar, me solum ab hiis omnibus que meis hominibus imponitis hic coram vobis per sacramenta defendam, quod per preceptum meum vel per conscientiam meam nihil horum factum est, quamvis juste facere potuissem; potui enim de meis facere quicquid volui, usque quo de mea sede me dissaisivit.” Tunc ministri regis dixerunt episcopo, “Modo defendimus tibi naves,” et episcopus respondit, “Rex omnem terram et pecuniam meam mihi abstulit, et si homines meos auferre voluerit, pro nullo eorum in placitum intrabo, sed solus, mihi si liceat, transfretabo.” Misit autem episcopus ad regem quendam suum militem, et deprecatus est eum, ut pro amore Dei et sancti Petri eum Romam ire permetteret. Rex vero misit ei Wintoniensem episcopum, et Hugonem de Portu et Gaufridum de Traileio, et per illos sibi mandavit, ut Gaufridum monachum ad placitandum de predictis foris factis Dunelmum mitteret, et ipse Londoniam iret, ut in nativitate Domini de hominibus suis ibi rectitudinem regi faceret: Quibus episcopus respondit, “Ego semper rex quo convencionem cum regis comitibus feci, in regis custodia mansi; et comites mihi fidem suam promiserunt, quod si castellum Dunelmense traderetur regi, ego et homines mei, qui me sequi vellent, securum conductum haberemus, et naves et portum absque detentione vel mora per aliquem hominem contra voluntatem meam mihi facta. Cum rex Dunelmum habeat, et nos per conductum regis et comitum ad portum venerimus, et naves per preceptum regis receperimus, et precium pro eis dederimus, et apostolicam sedem requirendo Romam tendamus, multum peccat qui nos ita detinet: Presto sum tamen, si propter hoc me abire permiseritis, sine dilacione me purgare coram vobis quod nihil horum que dicitis, per preceptum meum vel per conscientiam meam factum est, vel quod ego unius panis precium inde non habui vel expecto habere; postea si homines meos retinuerit, sustineant quicquid eis fecerit, quia pro nullo dimittam quin Romam vadam, si captione ista valeam liberari.” Tunc servientes regis fecerunt episcopum die noctuque custodiri, episcopus ergo tristis misit ad comites Alanum et Rogerum et Odonem mandans eis impedimenta sua; et conjuravit eos per eam fidem quam in baptismo susceperant, et quam sibi promiserant, ut eum de captione sua liberarent, et naves sibi et portum et conductum sine mora invenirent, et impedimentum et dampnum quod injuste sustinebat juste sibi emendarent. Tandem de illorum instantia rex permisit episcopo transitum. Anno sui episcopatus octavo expulsus est ab Anglia, sed a Roberto fratre regis comite Normannorum honorifice susceptus tocius Normannie curam suscepit. Tercio autem anno repacificatus regi recepit episcopatum suum, ipso rege cum fratre suo totoque Anglie exercitu, cum Scotiam contra Malcolmum tenderent, eum in sedem suam restituentibus, ipsa videlicet die qua inde pulsus fuerat. Tercio Idus Septembris secundo anno sue reversionis, ecclesiam veterem, quam Aldunus quondam episcopus construxerat a fundamentis destruxit, et sequenti anno, hoc est millesimo nonagesimo tercio ab incarnatione Domini, alium meliori opere incepit, id est, anno sui episcopatus tertio decimo, ex quo autem monachos congregaverat in Dunelmum undecimo; ipso namque anno, ille et qui post eum secundus erat in ecclesia prior Turgotus primus in fundamento lapides posuerunt tercio Idus Augusti, feria quinta: ^aaderant ibi tunc et rex Scotorum Malcolmus qui una cum eis in fundamento lapides co-operabatur. Tercio post inceptam ecclesiam anno, apud Windesoram ipso dominice nativitatis die acius solito morbo corripitur, ubi sepius a sancte memorie Anselmo Cantuariensi archiepiscopo visitatur, et in confessione peccatorum ejus absolucione et crebra benedictione perfruitur; ubi et a Thoma Eboracensi archiepiscopo, et Walchelino Wintoniensi, et Jo-

WILTSHIRE.

ONCERNING the foundation of this abbey, Dugdale gives the following extract from William of Malmesbury, De Gestis Regum Anglorum, lib. 2. 'Meydulphus, a Scotchman, as is said, a philosopher and monk, raised the monastery of Malmesbury from a mean to a flourishing condition; whereas before it could scarce give the inhabitants a subsistence, and resigned the government thereof to Aldhelm, a monk of the same, as appears by the grant of the bishop Leuthereus, bestowing on them the land called Maildulfesburch, made in the year 673. Thus the affairs of the monks prospered, by the industry of the abbot and favour of the bishop, many resorting to the monastery from all parts, some out of piety, and some for the sake of learning.'

Stevens gives the following more full account from Leland's Collectanea, vol. I. part ii. page 302, who quotes the second book of the original of the monastery of Malmesbury.^a

'There was in the parts of Scotland a certain monk called Maildulph, who was so much molested in his own country by thieves and robbers, that he could scarce live. He, knowing that he could not long stay there, fled, and travelling came into England. Here going about the country, thinking where God would dispose of him, at length stayed under the castle of Bladon, which in the Saxon is called Ingelbourne castle. Which castle was built by a certain British king, the 18th from Brute, by name Dunwallo, surnamed Molmutius, before the incarnation of our Lord about 642 years. There had once been a city, which had been utterly destroyed by strangers: the castle preserved itself fortified, which stood many years after the incarnation of our Lord, without any dwelling near it. The royal habitation and manor, as well of Christians, as of Pagans, was at Caidurburgh, now called Brukeburgh, or otherwise Brokenburgh. The aforesaid anchorite, called Maildulph, chose to himself a place of hermitage under the castle, which place he begged for himself of those in the castle, and had it granted him; for there was no great resort of men. Being here destitute of necessaries he chose to himself scholars to instruct, to improve the meanness of his subsistence by their liberality.'

Camden says that he instituted a school here, and was the first Saxon who wrote Latin, and instructed the Saxons to compose verses in that language. A very old manuscript is preserved in the Bodleian Library, (MS. Bodl. 49) beautifully written in the Saxon character, of some Latin verses of St. Aldhelm, ^b De laude sanctorum patrum et virginum, et De octo vitiis principalibus. Hobbes, in his life, states that the first school, where Latin was taught, was at this place, and it appears to have continued to flourish for many years after, since we find in an old register of this abbey (MS. Bodl. 191) the signature of 'Magister Ricardus rector scholarum Malmesb.' a very short time before the death of abbot John Wallensis, which happened in 1246.

Dr. Milner, in his History of Winchester, speaks highly of the exertions and talents of St. Aldhelm. "He was a person of noble birth, great talents, and intense application; who, under great disadvantages, in the infancy of literature, became an eminent scholar, both in the Latin and Greek tongues, and wrote with spirit and elegance in verse as well as prose. It appears, by extracts from his works, that he was a proficient in law and astronomy, no less than in divinity and polite literature; nor did he disdain to unbend his own mind, and the minds of his scholars, with poetical anagrams and enigmas. It was to his indefatigable pains in his monastery of Malmesbury, whilst he was abbot and chief master there, that a taste for classical, as well as sacred learning, was diffused amongst our rude ancestors; but the Irish hermit, Maydulph, must not be forgotten, to whom Aldhelm himself was indebted for the ground-work of his learning. A more important and honourable employment was that which was imposed on him by an episcopal synod, of writing a treatise, in order to convince the Britons of their error concerning Easter, which treatise produced the desired effect."

'In a short time those scholars, instructed in their rudiments, grew up to a small monastery. For Aldhelm, being fully informed by their example and conversation, added the liberal sciences to the fulness of knowledge, the which that he might fully acquire, he went into Kent, and studied some time at the feet of Adrian, the philosopher, who was afterwards made archbishop; after which he returned to Meldun, and was shorn in the fellowship of Maildulph with his disciples. The castle above mentioned was then in the lordship of the bishop Eleutherius, who ruled over all the West-Saxon country, and gave the ground of the monastery, which is now called Malmesbury, to St. Aldhelm with the pastoral staff.

'That Aldhelm was bred up and taught from his tender years in the monastery of Malmesbury, Eleutherius, bishop of the West-Saxons, signifies in the privileges he granted to the said Aldhelm, and in his charters with the abbey and ground of the monastery.

'That Maildulph was the first religious man, who or-

^a Stevens is in this instance mistaken. Leland quotes a chronicle of Malmesbury abbey, divided into five books, the second of which was entitled 'De prima origine Mædulphesbyriensis monasterii.'

^b It consists of 152 quarto pages of twenty lines, and begins thus: Metrica tyrones nunc promant carmina castos,

*Et laudem capiat quadrato cardine virgo ;
Trinus in arce deus, qui pollens sæcla creavit,
Regnator mundi, regnans in sedibus altis,
Indigno conferre mihi dignetur in æthra

dained a monastery at Malmesbury, then called Ingelbourne castle, pope Sergius, above named, sufficiently declares in the privileges he granted to St. Aldhelm.

‘That Aldhelm was under the direction of Maildolph and his disciple, the priest Bede fully shews.

‘That the doctrine and knowledge of St. Aldhelm was honoured throughout all the world, where Christianity prevailed, is magnificently demonstrated by his epistles sent to the students at Bononia, Cologn, Paris, Montpellier, and other foreign parts, as is plainly shewn in his life.

‘Moreover a certain abbot of Abingdon, by name Fari-tius, had writ his life and published an history of him, but afterwards, because the composition was rude, William monk of Malmesbury and precentor there, in a decent manner and elegant style searched out, and composed all his life, concerning his tender years, his youth, his old age, his being a monk and bishop, his death, his miracles before his decease and after, which he sufficiently and duly performed by the help of the books of Bede the priest.

‘The said holy man departed to our Lord in the year of the incarnation 709, and was buried by the blessed Egwin in the chappel which he had, during his life, built in honour of God and St. Michael, as he had before appointed. He died 18 years before king Ina, before Bede 15-7.^a He held the pastoral staff, given him by bishop Eleutherius, 31 years. He held the bishop’s crosier, delivered to him by archbishop Brightwald, four years, and died in the fifth. For no history has computed all the years of his life; but it is a probable conjecture that the holy man lived to a great age.

‘St. Aldhelm was translated the first time by the blessed Dunstan, archbishop of Canterbury, the year 91 after his burial. Many years, that is about 100, after, he was taken out of his coffin, for fear of the Danes and barbarians, and hid in the chapter-house, and after some years he was taken up again, and placed on the right hand of the high altar, with the ashes of the other saints, about 179 years after his death, after the incarnation of our Lord 1049, after the coming of the Normans into England 13.

‘He was first translated after the hiding of his body by the venerable bishop of Sarum, Osmund, by the abbot of Gloucester, Serlo, Warin abbot of Malmesbury ministring the aforesaid year.

‘The first translation was in the reign of king Edwin, St. Dunstan favouring the same.

‘The life of St. Aldhelm, and the acts of the English kings, say St. Aldhelm was nephew to king Ina.

‘They say that certain nuns had lived near the castle of Ingelbourne, in a certain little town or village called Ilanburgh, but in the Saxon, Burchton, who had been all debauched by those in the castle; and therefore the archbishop of the Saxons quite put them away, and they were under the obedience of the abbot Dinot, who in several places ruled 2000 monks, living after the manner of the monks on the Glass mountain in Greece. It is thought that the nuns lived, where now is made the hospital of lepers, near the bridge.

‘The castle was built in the year 174, after the founding of Rome. From the building of that city to the birth of Christ were 715 years, and then from the building of the castle of Malmesbury to Christ 596 years.

‘In the days of king Edwin the monastery of Malmesbury was abandoned by the monks for a long time.

‘The translation is as near as well can be to the Latin, for which reason there will above appear an error in chronology, where speaking of the translation of St. Aldhelm, he says, it was in the year 1049, 13 years after the coming of the Normans; whereas those people came not into England till the year 1066, that is 17 years after 1049, so that the year of our Lord for the translation should be 1079, or else the other date in relation to the coming of the Normans should be 17 years before; but it is most likely that it should be the first way, because it is easy for a figure of 4 to be placed by mistake instead of 7.’^b

King Berthwald gave to Aldhelm the abbot, and his successors for ever, Sumerford, which is near the river Thames, in the year 635.^c

Lutherius, bishop of Winchester, gave to the said monastery the land of Malmesbury by his grant of the year 680.^d

Athelard, king of the Mercians, gave to it Treventune and Charletone near Tettebury, ann. 681. King Chedwall gave lands on both sides of the wood called Kemele, ann. 682.

In the year 688, king Baldred made an exchange with the abbey of a part of this land, which Chedwall confirmed in a subsequent grant.

Ina, king of Wessex, in the year 701 gave to the abbey some lands in Herdim and Redburne, and in 704 he confirmed a grant of pope Sergius to Aldhelm the then abbot, both of which are in William of Malmesbury.^e

His successor Cuthred, in 745, gave it to Wdecun, and in 758 we find a grant from Kinewulf, of Meardene and Reodburne.

In 796 king Egforth restored to the abbey a part of the possessions which his father Offa had taken from it.

Edelwolfe appears also a particular benefactor; besides his general grants to the church, in which this abbey always participated, in the years 850, 854, and 880, he increased its possessions in Dometesey, Toccanham, and Minti.^f

We shall here add what we find in Harpsfeld’s Ecclesiastical History concerning this monastery.^g

King Ethelstan, at the time when Hugh king of France demanded his daughter in marriage, received from him several presents far exceeding all human treasures, and, among the rest, a piece of the holy cross on which our redemption was wrought, and of the crown of thorns, which the soldiers in scorn placed on the head of our Saviour. This treasure of the cross and crown the king bestowed on the monastery of Malmesbury. He had also enriched this monastery with possessions, which had been forfeited to him on account of the rebellious practices of Aelfred. I have thought fit to insert this charter or deed of gift, the original whereof was preserved at Malmesbury, as well on account of its antiquity, as for the notable piece of history it contains, in the same words as that king granted and transmitted the same to posterity. It is here faithfully translated for the satisfaction of the English reader.

‘Be it known to the wise men of our country, that I did not unjustly seize these lands by violence, and give the rapine to God; but I received them by the judgment of all the nobility of the kingdom of the English, as also of John the apostolical pope of the Roman church, when Elfred was dead who rivalled our happiness and life, consenting to the wickedness of our enemies, when, after the death of my father, they would have murdered me in the city of Winchester, had not God in his goodness delivered me. But their machinations being disclosed, he was sent to the city of Rome, there to clear himself upon oath before the apostolical John. And this he did at the altar of St. Peter; but when he had taken the oaths, he fell down before the altar, and was carried by his servants to the English school, and there he ended his life the third night. And yet the apostolical (pope) sent to us, and advised with us, what should be done with him? Whether his body should be laid among other Christians? These things being transacted, and told to us, the great men of our country, with a number of his relations, most humbly requested, that, with our leave, his body might be laid with the bodies of Christians; and we consenting to their request, sent back to Rome; and the pope consenting, he was laid with other Christians,

^a Hearne, who published Leland’s Collectanea, has here drawn Stevens into an error. Upon referring to the original MS. in the Bodleian Library, (Arch. Bodl. A. we find that Leland at first wrote it 15; above the first figure he afterwards placed another figure of 1; if therefore adding them together we read 25, it will allow the date to correspond with the year on which Cave and others say that Bede died. The date respecting Ina is correct.

^b It is to be regretted that the Chronicle itself is not extant, as all the dates relating to his translation are, as Leland has given them, quite irreconcilable. The parts of this history between single inverted commas are from Stevens.

^c William of Malmesbury, and MS. Bodl. 191, place this grant in the year 635.

^d According to William of Malmesbury and MS. Bodl. 191, this was given in 675.

though unworthy; and so all his possessions great and small were adjudged to me. And this we have committed to writing, to the end, that, as long as Christianity reigns, it may not be unknown whence I received the aforesaid possession, which I have given to God and to St. Peter. Nor do I know any thing more just than to bestow this possession on God and St. Peter, who caused my rival to fall in the sight of all men, and conferred on me the prosperity of my kingdom.'

He also in the year 931 gave to it some lands in Nortun, Sumerford, and Ewelme. This grant he confirmed seven years after, together with other lands in Breomel and Wdecun.^a King Ethelred in 982 increased its possessions in Reodburne. In 956 king Edwin gave to it some lands in Breokneberg. Although this king is among the benefactors to this abbey, yet it by no means escaped the effects of his quarrel with St. Dunstan, as William of Malmesbury^b indignantly notices.

King Edgar increased the possessions of this monastery with lands, which he confesses he took from unlearned secular clergy, who unjustly possessed them, and thereby he applied them to better uses.^c

King Edward the Confessor in 1065 confirmed all former grants, and king William the Conqueror added many privileges and immunities.

The latter also established a feast in honour of St. Aldhelm, which was to last five days, and which his queen afterwards increased to eight.

'Maud, his queen, gave to it the lands called Gersdun, in 1081. Earl Godwyn and his wife Turund gave to it the church of St. Nicholas in London, and all their houses there, in 1084.'

King John gave the monks leave to raise the castle for the enlargement of the abbey.

Lastly, pope Innocent, in 1248, confirmed to these monks all their lands; as also their privileges and immunities, adding more to them: all which grants will be given among the charters relating to this monastery.

The following Catalogue of the Abbots of Malmesbury, is collected from Leland, Gale, Wharton, &c.

1. MAILDULPH, the first founder of the monastery, is deservedly reckoned the first abbot; for it is certain, that though at first his dwelling was more like a college or a school, yet afterwards he and many of his scholars were regular monks, and he their chief, till about the year 676, when he was succeeded by

2. ALDHELM, his scholar, of whom enough has been said, which need not be here repeated.^d

3. DANIEL was the next abbot, the time of whose promotion is not so certain, as that his successor was

4. ALDHELM, in the year 746, but how long he presided, we have not found.

5. ETHELARD, the next abbot, who ruled till 780, was then made bishop of Winchester, and in 793 or 794, translated to Canterbury, leaving his abbey to

6. CUTHBERT, of the time of whose government there is no account, or who were his successors for a considerable time; for the next abbot we meet with was

7. ELFRIC, or ELFRED, in the year 977, a man famous for his singular learning, and no less for piety, on both which accounts he was promoted to be bishop of Crediton, which it is likely was in the year 982; for then

8. ATHELWERD, or ETHELWERD, appears to have been abbot, and after him

9. KINEWARD, then

10. BRECHTELM, next

11. BRITCHWOLD, after him
12. EDRIC, who was succeeded by
13. WULSIN, whose successor was
14. BRITCHWOLD II. of all whom we have nothing more than the bare names, without even a single date.

15. EGELWARD is said to have been abbot ten years, and

16. EDWIN an year and half, ending his government in the year 1052, when

17. BRITCHWOLD III. was promoted, and held it till 1059.^e

18. BRITHRIC was then made abbot in the reign of Edward the Confessor; but afterwards deposed by king William the Conqueror, upon what account is not known, unless it were to prefer

19. TUROLD, a monk of the famous monastery of Fescan in Normandy, who in the year 1070, was again promoted to the bishopric of Peterborough, and succeeded in this abbey by

20. WARIN DE LYRA, who died in the year 1081.

21. GODFREY GEMETICENSIS, monk and procurator of the abbey of Ely, was next appointed abbot of this monastery by king William the Conqueror, and governed it till the year 1105, when he died.

22. EDULF, monk of Winchester, having been chosen abbot here upon the death of the latter, held it twelve years, and was then turned out of it by Roger bishop of Salisbury; (who kept possession of it till his death, in the year 1139: yet we cannot reckon him an abbot as not knowing how he held the same.) But after his death

23. JOHN,^f a monk of the same monastery, was preferred to that dignity by king Stephen, but died within the year, that is in 1140. The next was

24. PETER, but how long he governed does not appear, nor consequently when his successor

25. GREGORY came into that preferment, only that he enjoyed it in 1159.

26. ROBERT was also abbot in the year 1174, and from that time till 1180, when

27. OSBERT FOLIOT, then prior of Gloucester, came into his place, but died in 1181 or 1182.

28. NICHOLAS, first monk of St. Albans, and next prior of Wallingford, was now preferred to this abbey, and again deposed in 1187, for what reason is not known. But

29. ROBERT DE MELUN, at that time sub-prior of Winchester, was put into his place, and died in 1205.

30. WALTER LORING was the next abbot, and died in 1222.

31. JOHN WALLENSIS comes next, and after him

32. JEFFRY, in the year 1246, and till 1260.

33. WILLIAM DE COLERN died in 1296. He appears to have studied the comforts, or rather increased the luxuries of the monks almost equal to what they could have been at the time of the dissolution. In a register of this abbey in the exchequer, he is stated to have planted vineyards, laid out gardens, made fish ponds, and when he instituted an anniversary for himself, his father and mother, he directed that with the money a cask of the best wine should also be bought, and first tasted on that day, in order that those who drank it, might be the more mindful of his salvation, and pray for him with the greater fervency. In the year 1293, there appears to have been a dispute or jealousy among the monks, which obliged him to issue an edict respecting their diet, and the necessity of the richer class of monks shewing their liberality equally to their poorer brethren. The anathema against such as disobeyed is most severe, particularly as to their punishment in another world.

lected a great variety of interesting matter relating to this abbey, with equal judgment and accuracy.

^e On the death of this abbot, says Tanner, (Notitia Monast.) in the reign of Edward the Confessor, Herman bishop of Winchester had once obtained the king's consent to remove the episcopal seat from Ramsbury to this abbey, but it was soon revoked by the interest of the monks with earl Godwin. Gul. Malmsb. De gestis pontif. lib. ii. p. 249. Rog. de Hoveden states this to have happened in 1055.—See Script. post Bedom. fol. Franc. 1501, p. 444.

^f It was during his government that an attempt was made, according to Will. of Malmesb. (Hist. Novell. lib. ii.) to destroy the monastery and murder all the monks, by a soldier named Robert, who had possessed himself of the castle of Devizes.

^a This prince, renowned for his bravery, political knowledge, and efforts to advance literature and commerce, having displayed such liberality towards Malmesbury, and the inhabitants of the town having also been distinguished by his beneficence, in testimony of their gratitude, instituted a festival in commemoration of their royal benefactor. It is annually kept on the second Tuesday after Trinity Sunday, and is deemed the principal holiday in the year. Moffat's History of Malmesbury, p. 40.

34. WILLIAM DE BADMENTON died in 1324. These two last abbots seem to have been very long lived.

35. ADAM ATTE HOK, or DE LA HOK, died in 1339,^a and was succeeded by

36. JOHN DE TINTERN, who lived till 1348; his successor was

37. SIMON DE AUMENEY, who died in 1360.

38. WALTER CAMME. Whether he lived to the year 1396, which is a very extraordinary time to continue abbot, cannot be positively asserted; yet it may rationally enough be allowed, since he might be so, and not live to above eighty years of age; but the next abbot we find,

39. THOMAS DE CHELESWORTH, occurs in 1419: but how long he held it cannot be affirmed, because we have not the precise time of the election of

40. WILLIAM, only that he was abbot in 1423.

41. ROBERT PERSORE was advanced to this dignity in 1424, and died possessed of it in 1434.

42. THOMAS BRISTOW lived till 1456.

43. JOHN ANDOVER died in 1462.

44. JOHN AYLEE, supposed to have departed this life in 1479,^b because then

45. THOMAS OLVESTON was put into possession of this abbey, and died in 1509.

46. RICHARD FRAMPTON. [His name was Robert Frampton alias Selwin, according to the pension list, of which a copy is subjoined.] He was the last abbot, and surrendered his monastery, and all the revenues belonging to the same, to king Henry VIII. at the time of the general dissolution, on the 15th of December 1539, when he had a salary of 200 marks per annum assigned him during life, as a reward for that sacrilegious surrender.

Leland, in his Itinerary, gives the following description of the church in his time.

'The abbey church^c is a right magnificent thing; there were two steeples to it, one that had a stately pyramid, which fell within the memory of man. It stood in the middle of the church, and was a land-mark to all the country round about. The other was a great square tower, at the west end of the church. There were also in the abbey churchyard two other churches, one of them a little church joining to the south side of the abbey church, and the other at some distance. One Stump, a rich clothier, after the dissolution, bought the house of the king, and all the offices were full of looms to weave cloth.

Leland adds, that he intended to have made a street or two for clothiers of the vacant ground of the abbey; and that weavers had also looms in the little church. This Stump however, he also informs us, was the chief causer and contributor afterwards to have the abbey church made a parish church.^d

'In short, this stately structure both of church and monastery are so far destroyed, as scarce to give any notion of what they formerly were: and of all the noble monuments there were in the church, none remains but that of king Athelstan, much inferior to what it formerly was.'

The remains of this noble abbey church, says Willis, appear even by the draught of it in the Monasticon (which is not above a third part of it,) to have been a very large structure, and equal if not superior, to most of our cathedrals in England. The spire steeple in the middle, and tower at the west end made it, as I guess, resemble the cathedral of Hereford, but these as well as the great cross isle, choir, cloysters, and chapter-house, are all entirely demolished. That which yet standeth is only part of the body or nave of the church, and is walled up at each end and between the two steeples; it is in length about 140 feet, and about 90 in breadth.

'The abbey offices are likewise ruined. Collinson, in his Beauties of British Antiquities, remarks, that the abbey, with the buildings belonging to it, covered (as tradition saith) the space of 45 acres.

'The steeples were replenished with several bells, no less than ten, as the inhabitants informed me, hanging together in the middle tower, and two in the western one. On one of them was this inscription,

Elysiam cœli nunquam conscendit ad aulam,
Qui furat hanc nolam Aldelmi sede beati.

'The monuments of the Saxon saints, and other persons buried here, such as St. Maeldun, or Maiduff, St. Aldhelm and St. Johannes Sapiens, are entirely destroyed, and there is not one ancient inscription or tomb remaining in the whole church, except king Athelstan's.'^e

According to William of Worcester, in Henry the sixth's reign, the length of the whole church, with the choir, was one hundred and seventy-two of his steps,^f and its breadth forty-two steps; the length of the chapel at the east end, dedicated to the blessed Mary, was thirty-six steps, the breadth fourteen steps; the length of the cloisters each way about sixty-three steps; the breadth of the principal nave of the church beyond the wings, was twenty-two steps.

We shall conclude with a list of the pensions assigned to the abbot and the monks at the dissolution.^g

"The names of th' abbot and bretherne of the late monastery of Malmesburye, with their pensyons to theym assigned by the kings comyssioners, appointed to take the surrendre of the saide monasterye; the same to be paid unto them yerely during their lyves, at 2 termes of the yere, viz. at the feaste of th' annunciation of our Lady, and saint Michael th' Archangel; the first payment to begynne at the fest of th' annunciation of our Lady which shal be in the year of our Lord God 1540.

Gul. Malmesburiensis de gestis regum Anglorum. MS. in Bibliotheca Cottoniana. fol. 6. a.

.....AMPLECTENDA erat predicabilis viri mencio, qui Malmesburiense Monasterium, in quo ferreni incolatus pretendimus militiam, acri et pene diuino mentis intuitu ex humili ad amplissimum statum provexit, quod a quodam Meyldulpho, nacione, ut aiunt, Scotto, erudicione philosopho, professione monacho adeo angustis sumptibus elaboratum, ut inhabitantes quotidianum victum egre expedirent, ipse diu multumque librato consilio Aldelmo ejusdem loci monacho, pro jure tunc episcoporum regendum contradidit. De qua re, ut omnem sermo noster dubietatis deprecetur offensam, verba ejus hic aliqua atexam.

Ego Leutherius gracia diuina episcopus, pontificatus Saxonie gubernacula regens, rogatus sum ab abbatibus, qui sub iure parochie nostre coenobiali monachorum agmini pastoralis sollicitudine preesse noscuntur, uti terram illam, cui inditum est vocabulum Maildulfesburch, Aldelmo presbytero ad degendam regulariter vitam conferri largirique dignarer. In quo videlicet loco a primo euo infancie atque ab ipso tirocinio rudimentorum liberalibus literarum studiis eruditus, et in gremio sancte matris ecclesie nutritus vitam duxit; et ob hoc potissimum hanc petitionem fraterna caritas suggerere videtur; quapropter predictorum abbatum precibus annuens ipsum locum tam sibi quam successoribus suis normam sancte regule solerti deuocione sequentibus fraterna petitione coactus vltro nunc concedo. Actum publice iuxta flumen Bladon 8 kalend. Septemb. anno incarnationis Dom. 675.

Cum igitur industria abbatis accederet fauori pontificis, tunc res monasterii in immensum efferi, tunc monachii vndique aggregari; currebatur ad Aldelmu totis compitis: his vite sanctimoniam, his literarum scientiam desiderantibus. Erat enim vir ille cum religione simplex, tum erudicione multiplex, et qui famam virtute preiret, liberalium artium epotator, ut esset mirabilis in singulis et in omnibus singularis. Mentior, si hoc non testantur codices de virginitate immortalis ejus ingenii indices, quibus meo iudicio nihil dulcius, nihil splendidius; quamuis, vt est nostri seculi desidia, quibusdam pariant nauseam, non attendentibus, quia iuxta mores gencium varientur modi dictaminum; denique Greci inuolute, Romani circumspecte, Galli splendide, Angli pompatice dictare solent: sane; quoniam dulce videtur maiorum inherere gratie eorumque exemplis ignire memoriam. Non inuitus evolverem quantos his sanctus pro ecclesie nostre priuilegio sudores insumpserit, quot miraculis vitam insignierit, nisi quia alias auocamur; et facta eius eciam lippienti meracius apparent oculo, quam nostro possint adumbrari penicello. Innumera signa, que modo apud eius fiunt memoriam, ostendunt presentibus preterite illius vite sanctimoniam. Habet ille ergo laudes suas, habet meritis paratam gloriam, nostra oratio prosequatur historiam.

tell; fuit autem constructum a quodam Rege Britanno, nomine Dumwallo Molvicius. Civitas quondam ibi fuerat, que penitus destructa fuit ab alienigenis, Castellum se munitum custodivit, quod per multum tempus stetit sine habitatione propinqua. Regia enim habitatio, et ejus manerium tam Paganorum, quam Christianorum, non longe fuit a Castello apud Kairdurberg, quod Saxonice dicitur Brohambergh, nunc vero Brokenberg. Predictus Heremica petiit a castellanis tugurium sibi fieri sub castello, et obtinuit; non enim ibi erat magna hominum frequentatio. Hic dum sibi necessaria deficerent, scholares sibi in disciplinatum adunavit, ut eorum liberalitate tenuitatem victus emendaret. Brevi enim tempore scholares in exiguum conventum coaluere. Horum consortio et exemplo S. Aldelmus ad plenum informatus, artem dialecticam adjecit erudire. Unde hinc fugiens ad pedes Adriani philosophi, abbatis S. Augustini Cantuar. per aliquod tempus studuit, et sufficienter edoctus Meldunum repetiit. Qui postea, cum sociis suis, sub Maidulpho monacho attonsus est, vivente Maidulpho post tonsionem ejus annos xiv. Castellum prenotatum tunc fuit sub dominio Elutherii episcopi Wintoniensis, qui dominabatur in tota West-Saxonia. Mortuo Maidulpho, predictus episcopus dedit situum Malmesburie S. Aldhelmo.

INNOCENCIUS episcopus servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis abbati monasterii Malmesburie ejusque fratribus tam presentibus quam futuris regularem vitam professis. Preterea quascunque possessiones, quecunque bona idem monasterium in presentiarum juste ac canonice possidet, aut in futurum concessione pontificum, largicione regum vel principum, oblatione fidelium seu aliis justis modis procurante Domino poterit adipisci, firma vobis vestrisque successoribus et illibata permaneant. Sane novalium vestrorum que propriis manibus vel sumptibus colitis, de quibus aliquis hactenus non percepit, sive de vestrorum animantium nutrimentis, nullus a vobis decimas exigere vel extorquere presumat. Liceat quoque vobis clericos vel laicos liberos et absolutos, et seculo fugientes, ad conversionem recipere, et eos absque contradiccione aliqua retinere. Prohibemus insuper ut nulli fratrum vestrorum, post factam in monasterio vestro professionem, fas sit, sine abbatis sui licencia, de eodem loco nisi arctioris religionis obtentu, discedere. Discedentem vero, absque communium literarum vestrarum caucione, nullus audeat retinere. Cum autem generale interdictum terre fuerit, liceat vobis, clausis januis, exclusis excommunicatis et interdictis, non pulsatis campanis, suppressa voce, divina officia celebrare, dummodo causam non dederitis interdicto. Crisma vero, oleum sanctum, consecraciones altarum, seu basilicarum, ordinationes clericorum, qui ad ordines fuerint promovendi, a diocesano suscipietis episcopo, siquidem catholicus fuerit, et graciam et communionem sacrosancte Romane sedis habuerit, et ea vobis voluerit sine pravitate aliqua exhibere. Prohibemus insuper ut, infra fines parochie vestre, nullus sine assensu diocesani episcopi et vestro, capellam seu oratorium de novo construere audeat, salvo privilegio pontificum Romanorum. Ad hec, novas et indebitas exactiones, ab archiepiscopis, et episcopis, archidiaconis seu decanis, aliisque omnibus ecclesiasticis secularibusve personis, a vobis omnino fieri prohibemus; sepulturam quoque ipsius loci liberam esse decernimus, ut eorum devotioni et extreme voluntati qui se illic sepeliri deliberaverint, nisi forte excommunicati vel interdicti sint, aut eciam publice usurarii, nullus obsistat; salva tamen justicia illarum ecclesiarum a quibus mortuorum corpora assumuntur. Decimas preterea et possessiones, ad jus ecclesiarum vestrarum spectantes, que a laicis detinentur, redimendi et legitime liberandi de manibus eorum, et ad ecclesias ad quas pertinet revocandi, libera sit vobis, de vestra auctoritate, facultas. Obeunte vero te nunc ejusdem loci abbate, vel tuorum quolibet successorum, nullus ibi, qualibet surrepcionis astucia, seu violencia, preponatur, nisi quem fratres, communi consensu, vel fratrum major pars consilii sanioris, secundum Deum et beati Benedicti regulam providerint eligendum. Paci quoque et tranquillitati vestre, paterna imposterum sollicitudine providere volentes, auctoritate apostolica prohibemus, ut, infra clausuras locorum seu grangiarum vestrarum, nullus rapinam seu furtum facere, ignem apponere, sanguinem fundere, hominem temere capere vel interficere, seu violenciam audeat exercere.

Preterea omnes libertates et immunitates a predecessoribus nostris Romanis pontificibus monasterio vestro concessas; nec non libertates et exempciones secularium exactionum a regibus et principibus vel aliis fidelibus rationabiliter vobis indultis, auctoritate apostolica, confirmamus, et presentis scripti privilegio communimus. Decernimus ergo ut nulli omnino hominum licet prefatum monasterium temere perturbare, aut ejus possessiones auferre, vel ablatas retinere, minuere, seu quibuslibet vexacioni-bus fatigare, sed omnia integra conserventur, eorum pro quorum gubernacione et sustentacione concessa sunt usibus omnimodis profutura; salva sedis apostolice auctoritate et diocesani episcopi canonica iusticia, et in predictis decimis moderacione consilii generalis. Si qua igitur in futurum ecclesiastica secularisve persona, huic nostre constitutionis paginam sciens, contra eam temere venire temptaverit, secundo, tertiove commonita, nisi reatum suum, congrua satisfaccione, correxerit, potestatis honorisque sui careat dignitate, reamque se divino iudicio existere de perpetrata iniquitate cognoscat, et a sacratissimo corpore et sanguine Dei et Domini redemptoris nostri Jesu Christi aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine districte subjaceat ultioni. Cunctis autem eodem loco sua jura servantibus sit pax Domini nostri Jesu Christi, quatinus et hic fructum bone accionis percipiant, et apud districtum iudicem premia eterne pacis inveniant, Amen, Amen.

Ego Innocencius catholice ecclesie episc. (&c.) Datum Lugduni (&c.) tertio Id. Octobris; indict. vij. Incarnationis Dominice MCCXLVIII. Pontificatus vero domini Innocencii quarti, anno sexto.

Westminster Abbey,

IN

THE particulars of the first foundation of Westminster Abbey are variously related.

Richard Sporley, a monk of this Monastery, who flourished about 1450, cited by Sir William Dugdale, carries the period of its erection as far back as the year 184, when king Lucius is supposed to have embraced Christianity.^a He states it at that time to have been not only dedicated to religion, but to have been a place of royal sepulture, as well as the repository of regalia. In the persecution under Dioclesian, he adds, it was converted into a Temple of Apollo.^b

Sulcardus, who lived in the time of William the Conqueror, gives a different account. He calls the founder a citizen of London, who, with his wife, was encouraged in the work by Ethelbert king of Kent. He says they outlived the completion of the building, in which they were afterwards buried: their leaden coffins having been found at a later period by one of the abbats.^c The notice of the founder as a citizen of London likewise occurs in Thorn's Chronicle.^d

An interlineation in one copy of Sulcardus's manuscript,^e gives "Sebbertus" as the name of the citizen: in another,^f as well as in Edgar's larger charter,^g he is called "Saberthus subregulus London." Ailred of Rievaulx,^h however, and several other writers, call him Sebert, king of the East Saxons, and nephew of Ethelbert. They assert, that he founded the abbey very early in the seventh century.ⁱ

Gervase of Canterbury says, the abbey was founded by Sebert at the entreaty of Mellitus, bishop of London, one of the companions of St. Augustine:^k and Ralph de Diceto,^l and Malmesbury,^m give the credit of the foundation to Mellitus himself.

In this contention of authorities it is somewhat remarkable that Bede who, in his Ecclesiastical History notices the foundation of St. Paul's,ⁿ makes no mention whatever of Westminster.

Sulcardus gives a minute account of the miracle supposed to have been worked at the consecration of the abbey.

The church had been prepared against the next day for dedication. On the night preceding, St. Peter appeared on the opposite side of the water to a fisherman, desiring to be conveyed to the farther shore. Having left the boat, St. Peter ordered the fisherman to wait, promising him a reward on his return. An innumerable host from heaven accompanied the apostle, singing choral hymns, while every thing was illuminated with a supernatural light. The dedication having been completed, St. Peter returned to the fisherman, quieted his alarm at what had passed, and announced himself as the apostle. He directed the fisherman to go as soon as it was day to Mellitus, to state what he had seen and heard, and to inform him that, in corroboration of his testimony, he would find the marks of consecration on the walls of the church. St. Peter, then, as a farther corroboration of the miracle to the fisherman, ordered him to cast his nets into the river,

^b The original name of the spot on which the church was founded, derived from its situation in a marshy ground overgrown with briars, was THORNEY. The church itself, from its position in respect of London, was called WEST-minster. See Polychr. Ran. Higd. p. 228. Gale's Script. vol. iii. See also Lel. Collect. edit. 1770, vol. ii. p. 329, vol. iv. p. 69.

Sporley, according to Bishop Tanner, became a monk of Westminster about 1430. His work appears to have been principally copied from that of John Flete, who had been successively sacrist and prior of the monastery. The original of Sporley's work is still preserved among the Cotton Manuscripts, Claud. A. viii. fol. 16. Bishop Tanner (Biblioth. Brit. Hib. p. 685,) places the date of his death about 1490. A copy of Flete's manuscript may be found in the library of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth. Codd. MSS. Whart. dxciii.

^c "Ecce quidam civium urbis non infimus, cum uxore sua regi astitit, diutinam cordis sui voluntatem super construenda cidem apostolorum principi ecclesia edicit, et super hoc ab ipso inclito rege licentiam devotus, petiit, quo audito, rex nimium est gavisus annuitque et exhortatur prædiviti ad desideratum opus, et ut hoc quam citius inciperet commonet attentius qui regio favore lætatus, Deo gratias agens domum repedavit lætissimus." * * * * * "Constructor autem ecclesiæ multis cum uxore sua supervixit annis et in ejus augendo propectu laborant studio sanctæ intentionis: peractoque vitæ mortalis cursu in eadem sepulti sunt in plumbeis sarcophagis, sicut postea reperti sunt a quodam abbate ecclesiam revocante edificiis." Sporley, cap. v. says, that Sebert and his wife, (who is called elsewhere Ethelgoda,) were buried near the altar which Saint Peter had dedicated. Sir Joseph Ayloff, in his Account of some Monuments in Westminster Abbey, p. 13, tells us that, on the rebuilding of the abbey by Henry the third, their bodies, with those of Hugolin Edward the Confessor's chamberlain, abbot Edwine, and Sulcardus the historian, are said to have been put under one monument in the vaulted room on the east side of the great cloisters, where the regalia were formerly kept, and where the trial-pieces of the pix are now deposited. See also Widmore's Hist. p. 18. Walsingham, however, (edit. 1574, p. 65,) speaks as if the removal of Sebert's body to the new structure in 1308, had been direct from the old church. and, that of the fish he should take, one should be presented to Mellitus in the apostle's name as a token of the miracle. Having forbade the fisherman to follow his calling in future on a Sunday, St. Peter was taken from his sight: when the fisherman, letting down his nets, was rewarded with such a miraculous draught of salmon, that his nets could hardly contain them. In obedience to the apostle's direction, the fisherman waited on Mellitus, who, going to the church, found not only marks of the chrism, but of the tapers with which the church had been illuminated. Mellitus therefore desisted from proceeding to a new consecration, and contented himself with the celebration of the Mass.

Ailred of Rievaulx gives a more embellished account of this miracle; ^a which is related at still greater length in Sporley's manuscript.

Sporley gives several relations of this transaction: the first professes to have been taken from an old Chronicle; the second from the Life of Mellitus; the third from Sulcardus, with additions; and the fourth from a Chronicle, intitled Liber regius.^b

Sulcardus assures us, that from the time of Ethelbert to Offa's time, the church of Westminster stood neglected. Offa however is noticed as a restorer of the building, and as one who added to its endowment. Sulcardus states him to have given to the church five ploughlands at Blekenham, in the parish of Hendon; and Widmore has given a faithful copy of a charter from the abbey archives, in which that monarch grants to the monks ten cassates of land at Aldenham: ^c the latter, dated in the year 785.

Widmore has given a charter from king Edgar, dated in 951, which, directing the reformation of the monastery by archbishop Dunstan, confirms the privileges stated to have been granted by king Offa.^d

Two other charters of considerable beauty are still preserved in the archives of the abbey, one from king Edgar,^e and one from Dunstan^f when bishop of London.

Edgar's charter, one of the most splendid instruments ascribed to the Saxon times, contains much, if it may be relied on, to illustrate the early history of the monastery. It recites Sebert's foundation in the year 604; the dedication by St. Peter himself; and the benefactions of Offa and Kynwlf. A rescript from pope John the thirteenth is introduced, confirming the exemption of the monastery from the jurisdiction of the bishops of London. Edgar's charter also confirms Hamne, Wynton, Mordun, Fentune, Aldenham, Bleccenham, and Loyereslege, partly as the gifts of preceding kings, and partly as purchases made by Dunstan, as well Holewelle, Decewrthe, Wattune, and Cillingtune, with the monastery called Stana, and its appurtenances in Tudinton, Halgefurd, Feltham, and Ecclesford, as mentioned in a charter from king Offa, granted, as it is said, at the suggestion of archbishop Wlfred.

Dunstan's charter confirms the exempt jurisdiction; releases the payment of romescot; and names Alfred in addition to the former kings noticed as benefactors. Dunstan is also represented in it to have purchased several of the lands noticed in the abstract of Edgar's charter, and to have bestowed them on the church. He is said to have bought five manses in the neighbourhood of the monastery from Edgar, for twenty mancuses of gold, and five manses in Blekenham, and six in Loyereslege from the same king, for ten mancuses; lands in Hendune from ^a Ailred of Rievaulx seems to explain the intention of the monks in circulating the story of this miracle. St. Peter tells the fisherman, not merely that he had dedicated the church, but, "Episcopalem benedictionem meam sanctificationis autoritate praeveni." Of course, the abbey was to be exempt from episcopal jurisdiction. See Twysd. Script. x. col. 385, 386.

^b Sporley in the fifth chapter of his manuscript, relates that St. Peter told the fisherman that neither he, nor any one succeeding to his trade, should want this kind of fish, provided they made an offering of every tenth fish to the church of Westminster: and in his thirteenth chapter Sporley records the names of nine members of the monastery, who, up to the year 1380, had seen salmon offered upon the altar of the church. He adds, that in 1382, a large fish was presented by four fishermen, whose names he has preserved. He goes on to quote the Liber Consuetudinarum of the Monastery, to show that the fisherman who made his offering had a right to sit at the table of the prior, and might demand of the cellarer ale and bread, and the cellarer in return might take as much of the fishes tail as he would, with four fingers and his thumb erect.

A composition on the subject of the title of salmon appears to Ethelwold bishop of Winchester and Wlnoth a knight; three cassates of land from Ednoth for twelve pounds, in Eddenhlead; eight manses from Elpwine in Hanewell; ten cassates from Alfegus, a duke, at Sunnabiri, for two hundred mancuses of gold; and land at Scepertun of Alflada, a widow, for sixty smaller bezants. Aelphelm Wolga is said to have given to the monastery, for the salvation of his soul, five manses at Bricandune; and Elfwine, the king's praefect of Kent, three cassates of land at Schollingtune. Dunstan, it is also said, gave the reversion of some land at Perham, a small estate at Padingtune, with estates at Cofenlea and in Ewelle. The charter is dated A.D. 959, the fourth year of king Edgar.

It must not, however, be concealed, that the three charters here mentioned have been considered as the fabrication of the monks.

The first, of king Edgar, is dated in 951, at least six years before he ascended the throne of England, according to the Saxon Chronicle; and ten years before Dunstan, who is called in it archbishop, came to the see of Canterbury. Widmore points out another anachronism. Offa is said to have been a benefactor to the monastery at the instigation of archbishop Wulfred; whereas it appears from the Saxon Chronicle, that Wulfred did not succeed to the archbishoprick till 803, eight years after Offa's death.

To Edgar's larger charter, as well as to that of Dunstan as bishop of London, Dr. Hickes has made numerous objections.^g The hand they are written in is of a later period than the time when the deeds are supposed to have been granted. The phraseology is, in different instances, partly Norman. Edgar's charter has the mark of a pendent seal having been attached, and the waxen impression is still remaining to Dunstan's; a practice of Norman origin, acknowledged to have been introduced by king Edward the Confessor.^h In Dunstan's charter the year 959 is called the fourth, which was really the second year of king Edgar.

In stating these objections it is by no means intended to insinuate that Westminster Abbey was not founded at an early period.

Widmore is probably right in dating it at least as far back as the time of Offa.ⁱ

The opinion is certainly probable that it suffered by the Danes, who, in the ninth century, did considerable mischief several times to London.

Ralph de Diceto and Malmsbury assure us^k that Dunstan, at its restoration, made it but a little monastery of twelve monks only, and that he made Wlsinus abbat.

The monks, to secure their property, probably preferred forging charters in a language which the Normans could read, to the production of instruments in the vernacular tongue, which, however genuine, would be despised. And Edgar was universally known to have been the common restorer of monasteries: and therefore a proper person for the restoration of Westminster Abbey to be referred to.^l

Sporley's manuscript professes to give us the complete succession of the abbats of Westminster from the time of Sebert to abbat Litlington.^m

He names ORBRIHTUS as the first Abbat, who after having ruled the monastery twelve years, is said to have died Jan. 13th, A.D. 616.

The seven next persons who presided over the monastery are called Priors.

GERMANUS, the first prior, is said to have succeeded Orbriht.

ALDREDUS, the second prior, contemporary with St. Erkenwald, is stated to have died in 675;

SYWARDUS, to have died in 684.^a

OSMUNDUS is said to have ruled the abbey twenty-one years: dying in 705.

SELREDUS is stated to have died in 744.

ORGARUS, having ruled twenty-two years, in 756; and BRITHSTANUS, the sixth of the priors, in 785.

Of these, Orbriht, Aldredus, Sywardus, and Orgarus are said to have been buried in the monastery.

Another ORBRIHTUS, is called the second Abbat. He is said to have been afterwards bishop of Devon:^b and to have died A.D. 797, after having ruled twelve years. He is noticed in Offa's charter of 785.^c

ALWYUS is said to have succeeded Orbriht, and to have been afterwards promoted to the bishopric of Wells. Stevens calls him ALFWIN. He is stated to have retained the abbacy till his death, A.D. 820. After him, we are told of another

ALWYUS, who died A.D. 837.

ALGARUS is said to have died A.D. 889.

EDMERUS,^d A.D. 922;

ALFNODUS, A.D. 939.

ALFRICUS, who succeeded to the abbacy in 939, is stated to have been removed to the bishopric of Crediton. After his retirement from Westminster the church is said to have fallen into decay, till it was restored by Dunstan. Alfricus is stated to have died A.D. 956, and to have been buried in the church belonging to his see. His four immediate predecessors are said to have been buried at Westminster.

Whence Sporley obtained his account of the abbats of Westminster thus far, we are not told, nor can it be at all relied on as authentic. No such persons as Orbriht, Alwyus, or Alfricus, are to be found in any lists of bishops at so remote a period.

WULSINUS is the first abbat with whom we are made regularly acquainted by our historians. Sporley, from Flete's MS., states him to have been a native of London, bred in the monastery. He is said to have been nominated to the rule of the abbey by Dunstan, in 958.^e Widmore, however, hazards a conjecture, that he was bred under Dunstan at Glastonbury:^f and Ralph de Diceto^g places the time of his appointment by Dunstan A.D. 962. Before 970, Wulsinus appears to have been promoted to the bishopric of Shirborn,^h where he dismissed the secular clergy from his cathedral, and introduced the monks. The time of his death is placed A.D. 1004.ⁱ The abbat next mentioned is ALFWYUS, or ALWYUS, who is said to have been elected by the monks. According to Sporley's manuscript he died A. D. 1017.

WULNOTH, the successor of Alfwyus, appears to have been bred in the monastery. He is mentioned as much in favour with Cnut; and remained abbat till 1049, the seventh year of Edward the Confessor. He is noticed in what is called the second charter of that king. Florence of Worcester records his death.^k During his time, Harold Harfager was buried in the church.^l

EADWINE appears to have succeeded Wulnoth in 1049.^m It was in his time that the church of Westminster was pulled down, and rebuilt in a more splendid form by king Edward the Confessor.

Ailred of Rievaulx informs us that Edward the Confessor, while in exile, during the usurpation of the Danes, made a vow, that if it should please God to restore him to the throne of his father, he would go in pilgrimage to Rome. Soon after his coronation he made his intention known to the principal nobility, who, partly fearing disturbances in the absence of the king, and partly dreading a contest for the succession, should he die upon the journey, endeavoured to dissuade him from it. Aelred archbishop of York, and Harman bishop of Winchester, with two abbats of monasteries, are stated to have been sent on an embassy to Rome, to procure the Pope's absolution from the vow, who returned with a rescript from pope Leo IX. enjoining the king, by way of commutation, to expend the sums of money intended for his journey in the foundation or repair of some religious house dedicated to St. Peter.ⁿ A revelation to one Wlfine, or Wulsine, a monk of Worcester, is said to have determined the king to bestow his benefaction at Westminster.^o

Before we notice the three charters ascribed to king Edward the Confessor, it may be proper to state that Mr. Widmore thinks but lightly of the story of king Edward's vow. He conceives it "more likely that it was the prudent management of this abbat Eadwine, and the good opinion the Confessor had of him, who, as living in the neighbourhood of the palace, must have been known to that prince, which induced him to bestow his benefactions so amply here. But," he adds, "whatever was the inducement, the king rebuilt it in a very magnificent manner."^p

Sulcardus tells us the church was finished in a few years, and that it was supported by many pillars and arches.^q Matthew Paris speaks of it as having been built "novo compositionis genere," and says it served as a pattern much followed in the erection of other churches.^r Camden has left us a third description translated from a manuscript of the very period. "The principal area or nave of the church stood on lofty arches of hewn stone, jointed together in the nicest manner, and the vault was covered with a strong double arched roof of stone on both sides. The cross which embraced the choir, and by its transept supported a high tower in the middle, rose first with a low strong arch, and then swelled out with several winding staircases to the single wall, up to the wooden roof, which was carefully covered with lead."^s

"What more of the buildings of the monastery," says Mr. Widmore, "beside the church itself, owed their erection to this prince, it is not easy at this distance of time to say: the remains of something very ancient appear in a yard on the east side of the little cloysters, where, or near to which, the chapel of St. Katherine, or the infirmary, now demolished, formerly stood; and there were cloysters in that place, most probably in this king's time; for the famous Geoffry Mandeville, who distinguished himself at the battle of Hastings, mentions his having buried his first wife Athelais in those cloysters, and his intention to lie there himself." Hist. Westm. Ab. p. 11, from Niger Quaternus, a Register Book of the Abbey so called.

The author of the Pursuits of Architectural Innovation, Gent. Mag. April, 1810, p. 331, says, "The parts of the buildings raised by the Confessor, yet in being, may be explored in a long double aisle, against which the east cloister and the south transept of the church are attached. This aisle is run out in about six divisions; the two first are kept as a repository for the pix, used for trying the value of modern gold; and the others are parted off, into avenues, store-vaults, and cellars. The arrangement of the architecture is grand, though the lines them-

We now come to speak of the three greater charters represented to have been granted to the monastery by the Confessor: two of which, at least, have been considered by our best antiquaries as very dubious in their authority. It is singular that Reyner calls that the second, which sir Henry Spelman has printed as the third charter. The transcripts of these charters, given in the Appendix to the present account, have been copied from an antient register of the abbey, and will be found more correct in several instances than the copies printed in the Concilia.

The first and third charters bear date on the same day, the fifth of the kalends of January, 1066. The second bears date the fifth of the kalends of August, 1045. This, in point of time, ought certainly to have been considered as the first.

The first, of the date of Jan. 5th, 1066, opens with a recital of the afflictions of the kingdom under previous sovereigns; it more particularly notices the Danish usurpations, the death of Alfred the king's brother, and the circumstances already copied from Ailred of Rievaulx, relating to the restoration of Westminster, in consequence of the royal vow. It states, that to accomplish his object, the king had decimated his property of every kind; goes on to notice the reliques with which he had furnished the monastery; and recites the confirmation of privileges as stated to have been granted by Edgar, Edward the elder, Dunstan, and Etheldred. The donations of former monarchs are next specifically recited, then the gifts of the great men of the Confessor's court, and lastly the king's own endowments. The whole closing with an anathema against those who should oppose the intent of the deed, and with a list of witnesses.

The second charter, dated in 1045, granted during the rule of Wulnoth as abbat, contains little more than a recital of privileges, with a confirmation of the exempt jurisdiction which is said to have been disputed by Robert bishop of London.

The third charter, being the second of the date of Jan. 5th, 1066, recites the early foundation of the church in the time of Mellitus, the miraculous consecration by St. Peter, the ravages of the Danes, and the king's application after the death of Leo IX. to pope Nicholas, whose rescript is inserted, making Westminster the place for the future inauguration of the kings of England, as well as a monastery of monks exempt from all but royal jurisdiction. This, like the first charter, finishes with an anathema against those who may hinder the operation of the instrument, and with a list of witnesses.^a

Be the authority of either or all of these charters what it may, certain it is that Edward the Confessor not only rebuilt the monastery, but endowed it with numerous lands. The many English, or rather Saxon charters,^b as well as the record of Domesday,^c prove the extent of its possessions at this period beyond a question.

Malmesbury says he enlarged the number of monks.^d

And now the king proceeded to his last act in favour of the monastery. The new church having been magnificently finished, he summoned the nobility and clergy to attend its consecration. On the evening of Christmas-day selves are extremely plain, excepting the capitals, which are sculptured to a degree hardly to be surpassed. Under the great circular window of the south transept, is a large semicircular arch, part of the upper story over the double aisle above described, the continuation of which, southwards, is destroyed, until we come to that part now used as the college school-room; and the walls, though numerous modern building innovations have been done on them, still leave some pleasing Saxon windows, and on the east side of the little cloisters are more vestiges of the Confessor's work; but of late built against, or environed by coal-holes and other domestic conveniences. No indications of any pointed features."

^a The two last charters here noticed have been considered as spurious, not merely as they differ from the usual Anglo Saxon style, but as they make an assumption on the part of pope Nicholas of a larger portion of pontifical power than the see of Rome at that time claimed. he fell ill: and, hastening the solemnity, he had barely completed it when he died, Jan. 5th, 1066. The day after which, on the feast of the Epiphany, he was buried in the church.^e

The last thing to be noticed in the time of abbat Eadwine is what is called in the Cotton Chartulary the first charter of king William the Conqueror, granted, it should seem, but a short time after his coronation in the church by Aldred archbishop of York; and bearing date in 1067. In gratitude to the Confessor, who had nominated him as his heir, the king states himself on his first entrance into the church to have offered fifty marks of silver and a rich pall on the altar of St. Peter, two palls on the place of Edward's sepulture, and two marks of gold and two palls on the great altar. The remainder of the charter notices the exchange of Windsor for Woken-dune and Feringes, recites the grants of Wandsworth, Piriford, and Battersey, and confirms numerous other smaller donations, as well as the privileges granted by king Edward. This however has been deemed a forged charter: although the donations enumerated in it are almost all corroborated by other instruments of undoubted authenticity.

Sporley's manuscript,^f places Eadwine's death in 1068: but he is mentioned as abbat here, in a grant wherein Remigius is called bishop of Lincoln, a title not given him before 1070.^g Mr. Widmore, however, says he must have died in or before 1072, for in that year we find his successor here witnessing to a charter^h as abbat of this place.ⁱ

The extracts from the Domesday Survey, which form an important document of the revenues of the abbey in the time of the Conqueror,^k afford the names of two or three benefactors in the early part of the eleventh century who are not otherwise noticed.

Daneham in Buckinghamshire appears to have been given to the abbey before king Edward's death, by Vlstan a theign.

Land in Totinges, in Surrey, is said to have been granted after Edward's death, by Alnod of London "pro sua anima."

And Kelvedon in Essex appears to have been the gift of Ailricus under very singular circumstances.

GALFRIDUS, or GOIFFRIDUS, who had been abbat of Jumieges in Normandy, succeeded Eadwine at Westminster. He was brought to England by the Conqueror. Sporley tells us that he ruled but four years, when, having been admonished for particular and just causes by the king and archbishop Lanfrank, and not amending, he was deprived and sent back to his former monastery in Normandy.^l He occurs as a witness to an instrument printed in William of Malmesbury's History, in 1072.^m

In his time Editha, the widow of Edward the Confessor, was buried at Westminster. She died in 1075, and had a costly tomb erected at the Conqueror's expence.ⁿ

VITALIS, another of the Conqueror's Norman favourites, who had ruled the monastery of Bernay, or Berneges, a cell to the abbey of Fescamp in Normandy, succeeded Galfridus.^o The annals of Waverley, as well as ⁱ In the Domesday Survey, tom. i. fol. 146, col. 2. Goduinus is noticed as an abbat of Westminster in the time of Edward the Confessor. The variety with which the same name is continually written in that venerable record leaves no doubt but Goduinus and Eadwinus were the same person. Above the name in a smaller character the word Cilt is added. Mr. Kelham interprets Cilt one allied to the royal family, a great Thane. Sporley assures us that Eadwine was of English descent. In one of the Conqueror's charters he is called Algwi.

the Saxon Chronicle, give the year 1076 as the date of his accession. He died, says Sporley, June 19th, 1082, and was buried in the south cloister of the abbey, with this epitaph :

“ Qui nomen traxit a vita, morte vocante

Vitalis was the patron of Sulcardus, the first literary monk of Westminster whose works have reached us.

GILBERT, or GISLEBERTUS CRISPINUS,^b was the next abbat: and he also was of a Norman family. Archbishop Lanfrank, under whom he had been educated in the abbey of Bee, is said to have promoted his interest. In his time the coffin of Edward the Confessor, thirty-six years after its interment, was opened, and the corpse found perfectly uncorrupted.^c Gilbert, who retained the abbacy thirty-two years, was occasionally employed by king Henry the first in embassies.^d Widmore says he died December 6th, 1117;^e but Sporley says in 1114. The following was his epitaph :

“ Hic pater insignis, genus altum, virgo senexque

Mitis eras, justus, prudens, fortis, moderatus,
Doctus quadrivio, nec minus in trivio.

Bishop Tanner gives a list of his works, none of which, however, throw any light on the history of his abbey.^g

In 1118, in the interval between the death of Gilbert and the appointment of his successor, Matilda the queen of Henry the first was buried at Westminster.^h

HEREBERT, or HEREBERTUS, almoner of the monastery, was chosen abbat, according to Simeon of Durham, in 1121.ⁱ Sporley says he was a Norman, though Widmore thinks only by descent. He founded the nunnery of Kilburn, near Hampstead, as a cell to Westminster, about 1130,^k reserving to himself the jurisdiction and power of visitation. Sporley places his death on the third of September, A.D. 1140; and gives the following as his epitaph :

“ Abbatis nostri corpus jacet hic Hereberti;
Vivat post obitum spiritus ante Deum.”^l

GERVASE DE BLOIS, a natural son of king Stephen, succeeded Herebertus. He appears to have been the first of the abbats who solicited the canonization of Edward the Confessor, though without success.^m His administration of the affairs of the monastery was ruinous. He disposed of many of the abbey lands in fee-farm, to his mother Dameta, and others of his friends and favourites.

sceptrum et coronam totius regni Angliæ suscepi. Tandem, consilio Lanfranni archiepiscopi, meorumque procerum, Vitalem abbatem, quamvis invitum, ad hoc coegi ut illam assumeret. Cum enim abbatiam de Bernaco ex minimo multum, ut patet, sublimaverit; intellexi illum dignum esse abbatia de Westmonasterio, et utilitate et prudentia. Quapropter liceat mihi istud fieri, quod de eo communi consilio meorum providi procerum, licentia tua et bona voluntate et conventus fratrum. Volo etiam tibi notum esse me elegisse Osbernum, fratrem scilicet Vitalis abbatis, ut habeat abbatiam de Bernaco: et hoc tuâ licentiâ mihi fieri liceat, Vale.”

Sporley adds, “ Quolibet Anno die Anniversarii ipsius ponatur unum tapetum cum panno serico auro texto, et duo cerei pond. ii li. quos sacrista providebit ab hora vesperarum usque in crastinum. Finita Missa de Requiem ibidem jugiter ardeunt, et prior vel alius custos ordinis in ejus absentia Missam celebrabit.”

Some say, he was made a bishop of Ireland towards his latter days. In his return home through Germany, he met at Mentz with a learned Jew, and had a very long dispute with him, which he reduced into a Dialogue, published and dedicated to St. Anselm.”

Widmore says, several of these were afterwards recovered by the good management of some of the succeeding abbats; but the greater part continued in fee-farm down to the dissolution.ⁿ His principal grant to his mother was of the manor and village of Chelchethe, now Chelsea.^o The complaint of the monks against his dilapidation of the church revenues, produced an admonitory Bull from pope Innocent the second, a copy of which is extant,^p but the effect of which is not known. He continued abbat through the remainder of the reign of Stephen, and died according to Sporley, on the 21st of August, A.D. 1160. Though John of Hexham, who continued Simeon of Durham's History, assures us that Henry the second deposed him from the abbacy, as one “ qui res loci illius juveniliter dissipabat.”^q His epitaph, preserved by Sporley, is in the wretched taste of the twelfth century :

“ De Regum genere, pater hic Gervasius ecce,
Monstrat defunctus Mors rapit omne genus.”^r

During the war between Stephen and the Empress Maud, the lands belonging to the abbey in Worcestershire, Gloucestershire, and Oxfordshire, were either seized or ravaged. Those, however, which were seized, were recovered in the reign of Henry the second.^s

LAURENTIUS, or LAURENCE, a Norman by birth, though bred at Durham, was the next abbat. Upon the death of William de Sancta Barbara, bishop of Durham, he, at that time either the archdeacon or precentor, and the prior, a Laurence also, being the two persons of the greatest sway in that monastery, endeavoured each to get himself chosen bishop, but not able to effect that, and neither willing to give way to the other, they after some time pitched upon a third person, and Hugh Pudsay, nephew to king Stephen, was elected; for which choice, they, and some other of the monks, were excommunicated, and very ill used by Henry Murdok, then archbishop of York; however, they maintained their point, and carried their cause at the court of Rome. A little while after this our Laurence, for what reason it is not said, left Durham and went to St. Alban's; from whence he was, by king Henry II. brought in the abbat here upon the removal of Gervase.^t

He appears, says Widmore,ⁿ to have been in good esteem at court, by the manner of his being made abbat here, by the several offices in which he was employed, by procuring from the king, and Maud the empress, the repairing and covering with lead several of the out-offices of the abbey, which were very much decayed, and by recovering those estates which had been seized or ravaged in the time of his predecessor: he also should stand well in the opinion of pope Alexander III. for we find him to have written a letter to that pope in favour of Gilbert Foliot, bishop of London.^a

He applied with better success than Gervase de Blois had done, to the Papal court, for the canonization of king Edward.^b

The Life of Edward the Confessor by Ailred of Rievaulx is addressed to him.^c

Laurentius, also, obtained the use of the mitre, ring, and gloves, which had been esteemed part of the episcopal habit, but were often, to the great displeasure of the bishops, granted by popes to such abbats as were considerable for wealth and power, and who would pay largely to obtain these marks of power.^d

Sporley's manuscript says he died April 11th, 1176; that his image in marble was placed upon his tomb, and had these lines circumscribed,

"Clauditur hoc tumulo vir quondam clarus in orbe
Quo preclarus erat hic locus, est, et erit,
Pro meritis Vitæ dedit illi Laurea nomen
Detur et Vitæ Laurea pro meritis."^e

A pension of six marks from the churches of Battersea and Wandsworth, the appropriation of which he had procured, were set apart for the celebration of his anniversary.^f Widmore says, it is not easy at this time to distinguish his works from those of his namesake Laurence, prior of Durham, with whom he is confounded by Leland, Bale, and Pits, in their accounts; yet some Homilies on the Festivals were generally thought to be his.^g

WALTER, prior of Winchester, succeeded Laurence. He procured from the Pope, for the abbats of Westminster, the use of the dalmatica, tunic, and sandals, to be added to the mitre, ring, and gloves, the grant of which his predecessor Laurence had obtained, but did not live to use, these arriving just after his death: and the first time abbat Walter attempted to wear them, the Pope's nuncio, who thought himself not received at Westminster with sufficient respect, interdicted him the use of them, as also the prior the liberty of entering into the choir.^h Abbat Walter is said to have written the Lives of William Gifford, and Henry, bishops of Winchester. Sporley says he granted out several of the abbey estates in fee-farm: more particularly the manor of Denham in Buckinghamshire, for fifteen pounds per annum; the tithes of Bulby, or Boleby, in Lincolnshire, for four shillings per annum; the church of St. Alban, Wood-street, to the hospital of St. James, Westminster, for 13s. 4d. per annum; certain possessions in Stanyng-lane, for 12s. per annum; others in Fryday-street, for 15s. per annum; land in St. Matthew's parish, in the same street, for 20s. per annum; and the manor of Pakelesham in Benflete, in the county of Essex, for nine pounds.ⁱ He died September 27th, 1191:^k aud had this epitaph,

"Hic qui tu pausas dictus Walterius Abbas
Ex aliis fueras, nec alienus eras."

WILLIAM POSTARD,^l already alluded to as prior of Westminster, succeeded Walter as abbat. He was elected Oct. 9th, 1191. The election was made before the king's justices, the king himself being absent in an expedition to the Holy Land.^m The bishop of London confirmed the election, and installed the abbat. According to Sporley, he governed the monastery nine years and five months; in seven years he eased the house of a debt of fifteen hundred marks; and died May 4th, 1201.ⁿ He was buried on the south side of the great cloister, and had the following epitaph,

"Postard Willelmus jacet in tellure sepultus, Hic pater et pastor qui fuit ante Prior."

RALPH PAPILON, or DE ARUNDEL, was the next abbat; a native of London.^o Having been bred a monk here, he first became almoner of the monastery, and afterwards prior of Hurley, a dependant cell on Westminster.^p A contention with the convent brought on a visitation by the pope's legate, Nicholas bishop of Tusculum, who, according to Matthew of Westminster,^q having passed eighteen days in enquiring into and reforming the monastery, both in spirituals and temporals, in the autumn of 1213, finally deposed the abbat. The sentence was executed on the 23d of January following, by Nicholas abbat of Waltham, who had been deputed by the legate for the purpose. One particular relating to the form of deprivation at this time, was the breaking the abbat's seal in the chapter-house.^r Matthew Paris informs us, that the abbat's crimes were dilapidations and incontinence.^s The manors of Teddington and Sudbury were assigned for his support after his disgrace. Sporley says he died on the twelfth of August, but leaves a space for the year. Widmore places his death in 1223.^t He was buried in the nave of the church: and, according to Widmore, was the first abbat we read of so buried.

WILLIAM DE HUMETO, or HUMEZ, was elected abbat May 4th, 1214.^u He was of Norman descent, and the last abbat of Westminster of that country.^x This person was bred a monk at Caen, and from thence was made prior of Frampton, or Frompton in Dorsetshire, which at that time was a cell to Caen. This Humez, says Widmore, is the same man, that king John had, in 1207, recommended for abbat of Ramsey; and upon the monks' refusal to choose him, had kept that abbey vacant for seven years, even till, on the deprivation of Arundel, Humez was by the pope's nuncio appointed abbat of Westminster. Widmore thinks the legate appointed Humez to Westminster by his own authority, without any election or concurrence of the Convent.

Shortly after his promotion, viz. in September, he was appointed by King John, one of his commissioners, or plenipotentiaries to treat of a peace between him and the king of France:^y and, in 1215, he was at the fourth Lateral council, held by pope Innocent III.^z In 1219 we find him employed with the bishop of Salisbury, the abbat of Waltham, and the prior of the Holy Trinity, London, in arbitrating between Hugh de Wells, bishop of Lincoln, and the abbat of St. Alban's.^a

During this abbat's time, in 1221, the new work of the Lady-chapel at Westminster was undertaken, the first stone of which was laid that year on Whitson eve by king

Henry the third :^a and which finally gave way to the chapel of Henry VII. since erected on its site.

Another remarkable event during the abbacy of Humez, was the final adjustment between the bishop of London, and the convent of Westminster, on the point of jurisdiction. The matter having been referred to arbitration, the final issue of the cause was, that the monastery was declared to be totally exempt from the bishop of London, and subject immediately to the Pope. The arbitrators, however, in some measure to content the see of London, gave from the monastery the manor of Sunbury to the bishop, and the church there to the chapter of St. Paul's.^b

In the time of this abbat, also, a confederation was made with the monastery of St. Edmundsbury: a kind of agreement which gave a title to civility and entertainment when business led any member of the one place to the other.^c

Sporley places the death of abbat Humez on the 12th of the kalends of May, 1222.^d Matthew Paris, by mistake says 1223.^e He appears to have been buried in the south cloister, at the head of abbat Gervase, his effigies in pontificalibus being placed upon his tomb,^f with this epitaph:

“Ortus ab Humeto Willelmus, huic venerando
Præfuit iste loco, nunc tumulatus humo.”^g

RICHARD DE BERKYNG, prior of the monastery, was elected abbat on the death of Humez, and on the 14th of the kalends of October, received the benediction from Peter de Rupibus, bishop of Winchester.^h An affray between the Londoners and the people of the abbey, soon after his election, occasioned some disturbance and even mischief to the monastery; but the tumult was finally quelled by Hubert de Burgh, the king's justiciary.ⁱ

Abbat Berkyng appears to have held some of the highest offices in the state. He was a privy counsellor, chief baron of the Exchequer, and at length lord treasurer. He also, in 1245, was one of the lords justices of the kingdom during the king's absence in his Welsh wars.^k Matthew of Westminster gives him this character, “Vir prudens et competenter literatus, et multis moribus decoratus: qui sua strenuitate redditus domus suæ incremento circiter ccc. marcarum annuatim, prudenter ampliaverat; et multarum libertatum munimentis roboraverat; nulli tamen vicinorum suorum molestus et onerosus.”^l He procured a Charter of Liberties to the monastery, which is printed in the Annals of the monastery of Burton,^m larger and fuller than any which had been obtained before it: another for eight bucks yearly out of Windsor forest:ⁿ and a third relating to fines and returns of writs.^o Sporley enumerates the acquisitions which he obtained for the monastery in lands and endowments. Among these were the church of Ocham and the manor of Thorpe, the church of Aschewell, the castle of Morton Folet, and the moiety of the manors of Langedon and of Chadesley in Worcestershire. He purchased also the church of Strengesham; built the village of New Morton in Henmersche in Gloucestershire, which he assigned for his anniversary; and made various minor additions to the estates of the convent in different counties. He also increased the splendor of the celebration of king Edward the Confessor's translation.^p

In 1231, during the rule of this abbat there was a law-suit between the convent and the parson of Rotherhithe, for the tithes of salmon caught in his parish.^q

Having governed this monastery twenty-four years, Richard de Berkyng died Nov. 23d, 1246. He was buried before the altar of the Virgin Mary, in the Lady-chapel already noticed, beneath a tomb of marble, which was destroyed in the time of abbat Colchester; when one Peter Combe, sacrist of the convent, laid down a flat stone for him, the inscription of which has been long since torn away, but is preserved in Sporley's manuscript as follows:

“Ricardus Berkyng prior, et post inelytus abbas, Henrici regis prudens fuit iste minister,
Hujus erat prima laus insula rebus opima,
Altera laus æque Thorp census, Ocham decimæque,
Tertia Mortonæ Castrum simili ratione,
Et regis quarta de multis commoda carta.
Clementis festo mundo migravit ab isto,
M. domini C. bis XL. sextoque sub anno
Cui detur venia per te pia virgo Maria.”^r

RICHARD DE CROKESLEYE, or CROCKELCE,^s said to have been so called from a place of that name in Suffolk, was unanimously chosen the successor of abbat Berkyng. In 1245, twenty-five years after the erection of the Lady-chapel, king Henry the third pulled down the greater part of the church to renew it, as some assert, upon the old foundations. Matthew Paris says, he ordered the east end, the tower, and the transept, to be taken down and rebuilt in a more elegant form, at his own expence.^t Of this work, Crokesleye, when archdeacon of Westminster only, was made one of the two treasurers; a circumstance to which he was probably indebted for the king's favour in his promotion.^u He was elected the Sunday before Christmas, which happening to be the very day Pope Innocent the IVth canonized St. Edmund, the late archbishop of Canterbury, and this abbat having been an acquaintance and an admirer of that prelate while living, he caused a chapel which he had made by the north door of the church, to be called St. Edmund's chapel; and in this chapel the abbat himself was buried; but the thing being in the way when they came to rebuild that part of the church, it was pulled down, and his body removed to St. Nicholas chapel.^x During this abbat's time the king made great progress in rebuilding the church. In 1246, he is said to have ordered to this use £2591, due from the widow of one David of Oxford, a Jew: and in 1254, the king's treasurer and the barons of the Exchequer were ordered to apply to it the annual sum of three thousand marks.^y Matthew Paris gives a minute relation^z of the circumstances attending the presentation of an extraordinary relique to this church by the king, in 1247; no other than some of the blood which came out Virginis apud Westmonasterium; rege Henrico existente fundatore, et primum lapidem operis in fundamento ponente.” Mat. Par. Hist. Angl. edit. 1684, p. 261. By founder, however, we are to understand merely the patron and principal benefactor of the work, as Henry was then but thirteen years of age; and there are instruments still remaining in the Archives of the Dean and Chapter, in some of which spiritual, and in others temporal benefits are granted to such as should contribute toward the building.

of our Saviour's wounds at his crucifixion. It was presented to the king by the master of the Templars, and attested by the Patriarch of Jerusalem. On the day of St. Edward's translation the king carried it in solemn procession, and on foot, from St. Paul's to Westminster, where he presented it upon the altar. Two years after this, in 1249, he presented another relique, a marble stone, brought from the holy land by the Friars preachers, with the impression of a foot affirmed to have been made by our Lord in stepping from it at his ascension.^a

Abbat Crokesleye appears to have been for a considerable time in great favour with the king. In 1247 he went with John Mansel, provost of Beverley, on an embassy to Brabant, concerning a marriage between prince Edward the king's eldest son, and a daughter of the duke.^b In 1251, he went again abroad, as was reported, concerning the king's intended visit to Pontigny, to pay his devotions at the tomb of St. Edmund, archbishop of Canterbury, who was buried there.^c At this time our abbat visited the Pope, who was then at Lyons, and by his address procured a composition to be set aside which abbat Berkyng had entered into with the monks of Westminster to enlarge their allowance.^d This brought him into disgrace, not only with the monks but with the king, who appears to have acted toward him with a determined resolution to restore the monks to their privileges. A charter of Henry the third is still extant, in which the goods of the convent are declared to be separate from those of the abbat. The matter, however, was afterwards referred to the bishop of Bath and Wells and John Mansel, before mentioned, and a new composition made; by which the things chiefly objected to by the abbat, as the being obliged to find flesh for the monks dinners, from Twelfth-day to Septuagesima Sunday, and the being restrained either from visiting the estates assigned to the convent's share, or from removing the monks, who were officers of the monastery, from their respective offices, were altered or qualified in his favour: the instrument of this agreement, says Widmore, to give it the greater weight, was sealed not only with the seals of the abbat and convent, but also with those of the two arbitrators, and even with the king's great seal.^e But still the king was jealous and distrustful of the abbat, and in 1256, when he sent him to Rome concerning the affairs of Sicily, he obliged him to take an oath, and sign an instrument, that he would not attempt any thing at that court to the prejudice of the said composition.^f

In 1258, the parliament refusing the king a supply, an effort was made to borrow money by persuading the religious houses to be engaged for the payment; when abbat Crokesleye entered into an obligation for the sum of 2500 marks. Others of the greater abbats, however, refusing their assistance, the king's design miscarried.^g

In the same year he was made a baron of the Exchequer; as also one of the twelve on the king's side, who with twelve more appointed by the barons, were to draw up rules for the government of the kingdom.^h

He died July 17th, 1258, at Winchester, not without

Matthew Paris has left the following character of him. "Vir quidem elegans, facundus, juris utriusque peritus, canonici scilicet et civilis, regi specialissimus, in cujus obsequio magnos et multos, tam in transmarinis quam in cismarinis partibus, labores libenter consumpserat sumptuosus."^j

This abbat assigned for his anniversary the produce of the whole manors of Hampstead and Stoke, with certain other rents and profits acquired to the monastery by himself.^m This anniversary, says Mr. Park,ⁿ was one of uncommon solemnity; and was to be accompanied with a liberality of distribution which must have drawn great numbers of indigent to the gates of the monastery, on the day of celebration. For the further security of the performance of this ordination, abbat Crokesley, having set forth that it had been made with provident deliberation, and with the consent of the king, as founder and [patron of the monastery, obtained a bull of confirmation from pope Alexander IV. denouncing the usual sentence of ire against infringers.^o The abbat himself likewise, by his own authority, promulgated sentence of excommunication against them. It was fortunate in this, Mr. Park observes, as in many other instances, that the supreme head of the Romish church had the power of dispensing with the most solemn anathemas; for, if the assignments of anniversaries had not been sometimes recalled, the whole peculiar of the abbat's office must by degrees have been granted away, and the convent ruined; as every abbat had his anniversary. In less than ten years after Crokesley's death, the burthen of commemorating him in the way he had ordained, was found too heavy to be borne, and the convent petitioned the pope to absolve those who had unwilfully infringed the ordinance, and to cause the whole to be revoked, or at least reduced to moderation, by discreet persons appointed by him. The pope accordingly sent his mandates to the abbat of Chertsey^p and the abbat of Waltham, dated 5 kal. Jun. 1267, declaring that he found "these things to abound more in pomp than the good of souls; and that it was evident they accorded not with religion, or were suitable to religious persons," and directing them, therefore, to use their discretion in moderating the ordinance, according to the deserts of the deceased abbat, and the advantage which they might judge had accrued to the monastery by his administration. By virtue of this authority, the abbat of Waltham ordained that the said manors and revenues should be under the free disposal of the abbat and convent of Westminster, towards the welfare of their monastery, and exonerated from the charges of the anniversary; provided that an annual portion of ten marks should be assigned from these or other estates, for making such celebration as that sum would admit of. The abbat of Chertsey likewise confirmed this disposition, and absolved the brethren from

PHILIP LEWESHAM, prior of the monastery, succeeded Crokesley as abbat in the month of August 1258.^b Sporley says he went to Rome for confirmation, and died there in 1259.^c Matthew Paris, however, informs us that some of the monks were sent thither instead, to get his personal appearance excused, and that when they returned from Rome they found their labour had been to little purpose, the elected abbat having died in their absence:^d Widmore says at the latter end of October, 1258.^e

RICHARD DE WARE, on the death of Lewesham, was elected to the abbacy "per viam compromissi,"^f by compromise, or the choice by agreement committed to a few of the monks; it was a manner of electing, says Widmore, much used at that time, and the two succeeding abbats came in the same way.^g Abbat Ware went shortly after his election to Rome, for confirmation. He appears to have been again at Rome in 1267, when, Mr. Widmore apprehends, and not before, he brought from thence the beautiful materials of the Mosaic pavement which was laid down the next year before the high altar of the church, of which a sufficient portion is still remaining to indicate its former beauty.^h

Among the Instruments in Rymer's Fœdera are several which explain the public employments in which this abbat was engaged abroad in the reigns of Henry the third and his successor.ⁱ In 1271 he went on an embassy to France: and in 1278 he was sent to John duke of Brabant to negotiate a marriage between Margaret the king's daughter, and the son and heir of the duke. His interest at court procured many immunities to the monastery.^k About 1280 a dispute arose with the bishop of Worcester concerning the cell of Great Malvern, which had belonged to Westminster from the time of its foundation.

^d Mat. Par. edit. 1684, p. 834. Widmore says, "The necessity of thus applying to the pope, and so of all the expence and hazard of such a journey, was the consequence of the monastery's getting itself exempted from the jurisdiction of the bishop of London, and becoming immediately subject to the pope. By the twenty-sixth canon of the fourth Lateran Council, the exempt abbats of Italy were to be confirmed by the pope himself; and A.D. 1257, the year before this election, by a constitution of pope Alexander IV. this was extended to all other exempt abbats wheresoever.

The burden of this was soon felt, but it was not till 1478-9, that the abbots got themselves excused from it; and then too, not but after an endeavour of many years, and with great difficulty; king Edward IV. writing several times to the then pope, and some of the cardinals, and that very pressing in their behalf: and they were obliged to pay yearly a hundred florens to the pope's collector on that account." The firmness of the abbat, however, established the right of the parent over the subordinate monastery. For the two or three last years of his life, abbat Ware became the king's treasurer, and died in that office in the beginning of December, 1283.¹ Sporley has preserved his epitaph:

"Abbas Ricardus de Wara, qui requiescit
Hic, portat lapides, quos huc portavit ab Urbe."^m

During this abbat's time, in 1269, "the xiii. daye of Octobre, the kyngge lette translate with great solempnytie the holy body of seynt Edwarde kyngge and confessour, that before laye in the side of the quere, into the chapell at the back of the hygh aulter of Westmester abbey, and there layde it in a ryche shryne."ⁿ

In 1272, Henry the third, the great restorer of the church,^o died at Westminster; the favours which he heaped upon the monastery prove him to have been a constant and munificent benefactor during the whole of his long reign. Fabyan says, a tablet hanging upon the tomb of this prince, on the south side of the Confessor's chapel, had the following lines:

"Tercius Henricus jacet hic, pietatis amicus:
Ecclesiam stravit istam, quam post renovavit.
Reddat ei munus qui regnat trinus et unus."^p

These were probably written by abbat Ware himself.

Sporley gives a particular account of a Consuetudinary, or Book of Customs of this monastery, which abbat Ware ordered to be made. "Predictus vero venerabilis pater Librum Consuetudinarium, in quatuor partes divisum, et ad communem omnium utilitatem per maxime necessarium, tam pro divino officio, tam etiam pro diversis hujus monasterii consuetudinibus ex totius conventus assensu fieri mandavit, ac tres partes ejusdem in uno volumine, in custodia Precentoris et Succentoris remanere decrevit, quartam autem partem ordinis sub custodibus re-

^o The rebuilding of the abbey, as far as it was prosecuted in the reign of king Henry III. may be easily distinguished from the part erected at a subsequent period. It consists of Edward the Confessor's chapel, the side aisles and chapels, the choir (to somewhat lower than Sir Isaac Newton's monument,) and the transepts. The four pillars westward of the present choir, which have brass fillets, appear to finish Henry's work: the conclusion of which is also marked by a striped chalky stone which forms the roof.

Widmore and Dart inform us that the last or principal part of this work remained long after the Reformation in the Cotton Library, where it was unhappily destroyed by a fire at Westminster, in the month of October, 1731.^a

WALTER DE WENLOK was elected abbat on the eve of the Circumcision, anno 1283, “per viam compromissi;”^b and soon after went to Rome for confirmation.^c He appears to have recovered for the monastery, by purchase, the manors of Dourherst and Hardwyke in Gloucestershire, with the hamlets of Waleton, Apperley, Whitfeld, Trynley, Cors, and Hanrigge, and the fourth part of the hundred of Derhurst, all which had been granted in fee-farm by abbat Gervase de Blois.

During his abbacy, in 1285, king Edward the first is said to have given to the church a large piece of our Saviour’s cross, richly adorned, which he had met with in Wales.^d In 1290, also, the same king bestowed several manors upon the monastery for religious services to be performed for his queen, Eleanor of Castile,^e who was buried in the Confessor’s chapel. Widmore gives the particulars of a controversy which happened about the same time between the convent and the Friars Minors.

In 1292, the abbat delivered the heart of king Henry the third to the abbess of Font-Evraud in Normandy, to whom it appears from an instrument upon the patent roll the king had promised it.^f His body being buried in Westminster-abbey.^g

In the year 1296, king Edward the first brought from Scotland the regalia of that kingdom, with the stone used at the coronation of the Scottish kings; the latter, which he deposited in the abbey, is still preserved beneath the coronation chair.^h

In 1303, the king’s treasury at Westminster having been broken into and robbed to the value of one hundred thousand pounds, and the depositions taken on the occasion throwing a strong suspicion on the monks, the abbat and forty-eight brethren of the monastery were sent to the Tower, and some at least of them, says Widmore, were kept there two years. Matthew of Westminster speaks of ten only as remaining in prison. Walsingham and he agree that the imprisonment was unjust.ⁱ In the appendix of Charters a copy of the instrument is recited appointing the inquiry, in consequence of which the abbat and monks were liberated by the king.^k

Sporley says our abbat died at his manor of Pirfford, in Surrey, December the 25th, 1307, and had this epitaph :

“Abbas Walterus jacet hic sub marmore tectus ;
Non fuit austerus sed mitis fame rectus.”^l

decessors had been, “per viam compromissi,” on the morrow of St. Paul 1308.^m The king’s instrument of confirmation, however, was not procured for several months.ⁿ The papal confirmation was obtained with still greater difficulty, and even at last, not without the abbat’s agreement that the convent should pay eight thousand florens.^o Abbat Sudbury died April 9th, 1315: and is said by Widmore to have been the first who had an epitaph in prose,^p “Hic jacet Ricardus de Sudbury, quondam abbas hujus loci, cujus anime propicietur Deus. Amen. Pater noster. Ave Maria.”

WILLIAM CURTLYNGTON was elected abbat “per viam spiritus sancti,” April 24th, 1315.^q He rebuilt the manor house of Islip in Oxfordshire upon a new site, as well as the manor house of Sutton in Gloucestershire.^r In 1320, according to Widmore,^s he visited, and reformed the statutes of the hospital of St. James. Sporley says it was in 1322. He died September the 11th, 1331.^t

The following epitaph for him is preserved by Sporley, together with the form of his anniversary.

“Hæc est abbatis Willielmi tumba sciatis,
Quem mors amovit et Curtlingtonia fovit,
In mortis portu se Christi corpore pavit,
Sic expiravit mundus confessus ab ortu.”

THOMAS HENLEY received the royal assent to his election as abbat, Sept. 30th, 1333.^u He was confirmed by the archbishop of Canterbury in the pope’s name, and had the temporalities restored to him on the 29th of June following.^x He had a long controversy with the king’s treasurers respecting the right of visiting the hospital of St. James; a privilege which was at last determined to belong to the abbats of Westminster exclusively: although, upon a new trial, in the time of his successor, the abbey lost the right.^y In 1335, this abbat had the king’s licence to absent himself from his monastery for seven years, to study at Oxford.^z And in 1338, he was chosen one of the presidents of the Benedictines at their triennial chapter.^a He died October the 29th, 1342, and was buried near abbat Ware, under the lower part of the pavement before the high altar. Sporley gives his rhyming epitaph :

“Hic abbas Thomas Henle jacet aspicio mors.

SYMON DE BURCHESTON was elected abbat on the vigil of St. Martin, in the month of November, 1342.^c The temporalities of the monastery were restored on the 23d of March following.^d Widmore, from a Cotton

He assigned for its support the sum of eight pounds, arising from the profits of St. Edward's fair, which belonged to the abbats portion, the rest of the profits to be applied to the fabric of the church.^c Burcheston was buried in the cloister near the entrance to the chapter house, and had this epitaph :

"De Berchestona Symon venerabilis abbas

Jam precibus fratrum fultus cum patribus almīs

SIMON LANGHAM, the successor of Burcheston, is stated by Widmore to have become a monk here in 1335. In April 1349 he became prior, and at the latter end of the next month abbat. He went soon after to Avignon for confirmation from the pope : and had his temporalities restored to him on the 16th of September.^e He was a man of singular learning, and remarkable for the integrity of his life : his merit alone raising him from a mean condition to the highest honours of his country both in church and state. While abbat here, he paid the debts contracted by his predecessors to the amount of two thousand two hundred marks, beside two hundred more discharged by him for which the convent stood engaged. He also bought-in the place of Serjeant of the Cellar, which had become an office of inheritance.^f His attention to the abuses and discipline of the monastery are particularly eulogized by Sporley.

In November, 1360, Langham was made lord treasurer of England. In 1361, he was elected bishop of London, but chose the bishoprick of Ely (which became vacant about the same time) in preference. He was consecrated to the latter March 20th, 1362. In 1364, from the treasurership, he was advanced to be lord chancellor : and in 1366 was translated to the see of Canterbury.^g He received his pall in the month of November, and was enthronized on the Lady-day following.^h He was archbishop of Canterbury but a little above two years : during that time, however, he settled a dispute between the Londoners and their clergy about tithes, ordaining that the payment should be after the rate of a halfpenny for every pound of yearly rent on each Sunday and festival of the year that had a vigil.ⁱ He assisted pope Urban V. in correcting the excess of pluralities : and by his treatment of the celebrated Wiclif, is supposed to have sharpened the enquiries of that learned man into the then received opinions of religion and the pope's power. Wiclif had been made the Head of Canterbury-Hall in Oxford by archbishop Islip, but was removed by Langham that the institution might be made a college of monks.^k

In 1368, Langham was created cardinal of St. Sixtus, and, in consequence, vacated the see of Canterbury. He had several minor pieces of preferment in England afterwards conferred upon him : and, retiring to Avignon, was made bishop of Præneste by pope Gregory XI.^l He died at Avignon, July 22, 1376 : and was first buried in the church of the Carthusians which he had himself founded in that city : but his body was afterwards removed agreeably to his own appointment,^m and finally interred at Westminster in the chapel of St. Benedict, beneath a tomb of alabaster.

His different preferments of the higher kind were expressed in an epitaph for him preserved by Sporley :

"Symon de Langham sub petris hijs tumultatus
Istius ecclesie monachus fuerat, prior, abbas.
Sede vacante fuit electus Londoniensis
Presul et insignis, Heli sed postea primas
Totius regni magnus Regisque minister,

The following is the prose inscription on his tomb preserved by Dart and Widmore :

"Hic jacet dominus Simon de Langham quondam Abbas hujus loci, Thesaurarius Angliæ, electus London. Ep. Elien. Cancellar. Angliæ, Archiep. Cantuar. Presbyter Cardinalis, et postea Ep. Prenestrinus"

Widmore informs us that the whole of abbat Langham's benefactions to Westminster, between the time of his election and his death, amounted to no less than £10,800.ⁿ

NICHOLAS LITLINGTON became abbat in the month of April, 1362, immediately on the advancement of his predecessor to the see of Ely. He was of a provident turn, and husbanded the resources of the monastery. He is said to have built from the foundation the great hall of the abbey, the Jerusalem chamber, and the granary which has since become the dormitory of the king's scholars. He likewise finished the south and west sides of the great cloister : and added many ornaments of plate and furniture for the interior of the church. A contest began in the time of this abbat between the monastery and the dean and canons of St. Stephen's chapel founded within the palace adjoining, respecting jurisdiction ; which was not settled till 1394 : and then only by compromise.^o

In 1378 one Robert Hawley, who had sought sanctuary at Westminster, was followed by sir Alan Boxhull constable of the Tower, and sir Ralph Ferrars, with divers armed men, into the church, and there, upon his resistance, killed in the quire at the time of high mass.^p The church, as profaned by this murder, was shut up for about four months. In two subsequent parliaments, one held at Gloucester and the other at Westminster, abbat Litlington is stated to have brought this violation of sanctuary before the legislature, and to have obtained for it a farther confirmation of its privileges.^q

Litlington died Nov. 29, 1386 ; and was buried before the altar of St. Blase.^r Sporley has preserved the epitaph which was formerly inscribed upon his tomb :

"Si liceat laudare virum post fata, perhenni
Ere tuos sonet, abba, pios ut versus honores,
Facta, genus, mores, pietas, prudentia, virtus,
Poscunt, urget, avent, suadet, monet, incitat, atque.
Os, ratione, manus, aures, vaga lumina, gressus
Subtrahis a viciis, morum gravitate modestus.
Constanter pro jure Dei bellans tua virtus
Contulit exemplar aliis pastoribus ingens.
Senciat alma parens Litlyngton nunc Nicholaus
Morte quod in vita tibi det devotus amavit.
Fit fatata dies penultima mense Novembris
C. ter, et x. ter, et l.m. sex, hujus necis annus."

Stevens quotes another epitaph for him from Weever, which the latter found as follows in a nameless manuscript in sir Robert Cotton's library :

"Hacce domo ductor Nicholaus erat quoque structor,
Et sibi tunc celo sedem construxit et edem.
M. semel, C. ter erat annus sex octuagenus
Cum perit iste abbas divino flamine plenus.
Quinta dies, sit ei requies, in fine Novembris, Detur ei, pietate Dei, merces requiei. Amen."

WILLIAM DE COLCHESTER succeeded to the abbacy before the end of the year 1386, and received the king's assent to his election the 21st of January following. In 1399 he accompanied king Richard II. in his fatal expe-moir of Wiclif's Life, prefixed to the recent edition of his Testament by the rev. Mr. Baber, pp. xi. xiii.

dition to Ireland:^a and in 1414 was an ambassador to the council of Constance. During the latter part of his abbacy, in the reign of Henry the fifth, some further progress was made in rebuilding the west part of the church. He died sometime in October 1420, and was buried in the chapel of St. John Baptist. His figure upon an altar tomb is still remaining, with the initials W. C. upon the pillow under his head supported by angels.

RICHARD HAROUNDEN, HAROUDEN, or HARWEDEN, was the next abbat; of whom scarcely any thing is known. He became a monk of the abbey about 1398, and appears at one time to have had the care of the buildings of the monastery. He resigned the abbacy April 2d 1440: retiring upon a pension.

EDMUND KYRTON, according to Widmore (who is good authority), succeeded Harounden between May 27th and August 20th, 1440; ^b having been a monk of the abbey seven and thirty years. He resigned his office on account of age and infirmities, Oct. 23, 1462: and had a pension, which he held four years only, of two hundred marks. He died in the month of October 1466; and was buried in St. Andrew's chapel, the screen of which he had richly adorned with curious carving. The following is his epitaph,

"Pastor pacificus, subjectis vir moderatus,
Hac sub marmorea petra requiescit humatus.
Edmundus Kirton, hic quondam qui fuit abbas
Bis denis annis cum binis connumerandis.
Sacrae Scripturae doctor probus, immo probatus,
Illustri stirpe de Cobildik generatus;
Coram Martino Papa proposuit iste
Ob quod multiplices laudes habuit et honores.
Qui obiit tertio die mensis Octobris Anno Dom. m.cccc.lx.vi.
Eleyson Kyrie, curando morbida mundi."

GEORGE NORWYCH, one of the senior monks, was the successor to Kyrtion. His management of the monastery appears to have been improvident; insomuch, that the monks either petitioned, or prepared to petition the king for a visitation.^c He held the office of abbat but for a short time: retiring to some other house of Benedictine monks upon a pension of a hundred marks. He died in 1469.^d Widmore says, "He seems to have been an easy person, and too much governed by one of the monks."

THOMAS MILLYNG, who became a monk of the house about 1447, was elected abbat in 1469.^e Leland gives him a high character for learning.^f Fabyan informs us that on the return of Henry the sixth to the throne of England in 1470, Elizabeth the queen of Edward the 4th sought sanctuary at Westminster, where she "was lyghted of a fayre prince. And within the sayd place the sayd childe, without pompe, was after cristenyd, whose godfaders were the abbot and priour of the sayd place, and the lady Scrope godmoder."^g This prince was afterwards king Edward the fifth. In 1474 Millyng was promoted to the bishoprick of Hereford. In 1492 he died; and was buried here in the chapel of St. John Baptist.

JOHN ESTENEY was made abbat, on Millyng's promotion, in 1474. In 1478, partly by the solicitation of the king,^h and partly by an engagement that the monastery should pay a hundred florins yearly to the pope's treasury, he obtained a release for his successors from the usual journey to Rome for confirmation. In the same year the king bestowed upon the monastery the manors of Cradeley and Hagley, in Worcestershire.ⁱ During this abbat's time the work of the west end of the church proceeded, the vaultings were finished, and the great west window set up.^k It was in this abbat's time, and not in that of Millyng, or of abbat Islip, that Caxton exercised the art of printing at Westminster. He is said to have erected his office in one of the side chapels of the abbey, supposed by some of our historians to have been the Ambry, or Eleemosynary.^l Like his predecessor also, Esteney, in 1483, had the honour of receiving the queen of Edward the fourth in sanctuary, whither she fled with the five princesses and the Duke of York, on the arrest of the earl of Rivers.^m Esteney, says Widmore, obtained from the Pope, that the monks of Westminster might be ordained priests three years sooner than the stated time,

^a See Walsingham, edit. 1574, p. 396. King Richard II. was a great benefactor to the buildings of the abbey during his life. The north porch was the most striking of his works. In his Will he made large bequests toward the completion of the church, his burial, and the foundation of a chantry. See Sandf. Geneal. Hist. p. 191. Nichols's Royal Wills, pp. 195, 196.

^b Stevens (who follows Newcourt,) and Dart, speak of George Flaccet and Richard Sudbury as the immediate successors of Harounden. GEORGE FASCET however, (for that was his right name,) did not become abbat till 1498; and RICHARD SUDBURY was no other than Richard de Kedyngton, already mentioned as abbat in 1307.

^l Compare Dibdin's edition of Herbert's Typogr. Antiquities, vol. i. Life of Caxton, p. xcix. The first of Caxton's productions in the colophon of which Westminster is mentioned, is "The Dictes and Sayinges of Philosophres," 1447. In "The Cronicles of England," 1480, "th'abbey of Westmynstre" is mentioned as the place of imprint. "The noble Hystories of Kynge Arthur and of certeyn of his Knyghtes," 1485, is the last of Caxton's books which mentions both the one and the other in the same colophon.

^m The particulars are thus related in the Life of Edward the fifth, usually ascribed to sir Thomas More. "In this maner as you have heard, the Duke of Gloucester took on hym the governance of the younge kyng, whom with much reverence he conveyed towards London. These tidynges came hastily to the quene before mydnight by a very sore reporte, that the king hir soonne was taken, and that hir brother and her other soonne, and other hir frendes were arested and sent no manne wyst whither. With this hevye tydynges the quene bewayled hir childe ruyn, hir frendes mischaunce, and her owne infortune; curssyng the tyme that ever she was perswaded to leave the gatheryng of people to bryng up the kyng with a greate powre: but that was passed, and therefore nowe she tooke hir younger soonne the Duke of Yorke, and hir daughters, and went oute of the palais at Westminster into the sanctuary, and there lodged in the abbotes place, and she and all her children and compaignie were registryed for sanctuary persones. The same night there came to docter Rotherham, archebysshop of Yorke and Lorde Chanceloure, a messenger from the Lorde Chamberlayne, to York place besyde Westminster: the messenger was brought to the bysshopes bed syde, and declared to hym that the Dukes were gone backe with the younge kyng to Northampton, and declared farther that the Lorde Hastings his master sent hym woord that he should feare nothyng for all should bee well. 'Well,' (quoth the bishop) 'bee it as well as it will, it will never bee so well as we have seen it:' and then the messenger departed. Whereupon the bysshop called up his servants before daylight, and tooke with hym the great seale, and came before daye to the quene, about whom he founde much hevynesse, rumble, haste, busynesse, conveyance, and caryage of hir stuffe into sanctuary. Every manne was busye to carye, beare, and convey stuffe, chestes, and ferdelles; no man was unoccupied, and some caryed more then they were commaunded to another place. The quene sat alone belowe on the russes all desolate and dysmaied, whom the archebysshop comforted in the best manner that he coulede, shewyng her that the matter was nothyng so sore as she tooke it for, and that he was put in good hope and oute of feare by the message sente to hym from the Lorde Hastings. 'A wo worth him,' quoth the quene, 'for it is he that goeth aboute to destroye me and my bloodde.' 'Madame,' quoth he, 'be of good comforte, and I assure you yf they crowne anye other king then your soonne whome they now have, we shal on the morowe crowne his brother whom you have here with you; and here is the greate seale which in lykewise as your noble husbnde delivered it to me, so I deliver it to you to the use of your sonne;' and therewith delivered her the greate seale, and departed home in the dawninge of the daye. And when he opened his windowes and looked on the Themys, he myght see the river ful of boates of the Duke of Gloucester hys servautes, watchyng that no person shoulde goo to sanctuary ner nonc shoulde passe unsearched." Contin. of Hardyng's Chronicle, edit. 1812, pp. 479, 480. The discussion of the privilege of sanctuary, and the account of the delivering up the Duke of York, which follow in this Continuation of Hardyng's Chronicle are worth attention.

The privilege of sanctuary is mentioned by Stow to have been one of those granted to the monastery by king Edward the Confessor, whose charter for it he translates. See his Collections, MS. Harl. Brit. Mus. 540. fol. 51. Widmore however seems not to acknowledge the authenticity of this charter; he says, "the privilege came must probably from canonizing the founder, and from the high veneration the people had for him, which of course would be also shewn to the place of his burial: and not from a regard to the reliques, which by those charters he is said to have given to the church." Hist. West. Ab. p. 15.

One of the last persons of notoriety who took shelter here was John Skelton, poet laureate to king Henry the eighth, who had dared to attack the dignity of Cardinal Wolsey in his satires. He was kindly entertained and protected by abbat Islip to the time of his death, which happened in 1529. Warton, Hist. Engl. Poet. vol. ii. pp. 337, 338.

The Sanctuary-church was pulled down in 1750. See Dr. Stukely's Remarks upon the structure in the Archaeologia of the Society of Antiquaries, vol. i. p. 39.

The Register of this Sanctuary was purchased by the celebrated Humphrey Wanley (Lord Oxford's librarian) at the auction of sir Henry Spelman's Manuscripts, for Lord Weymouth, and is now in the library of the Earl of Bath at Long-Leat.

or immediately after one and twenty. This dispensation seems to have been no common thing, for though indulgences of this kind had been frequently granted to particular persons of high birth or great interest, yet not often to communities.^a Abbat Esteney died in 1498, and was buried in the chapel of St. John the Evangelist. In Camden's time the following inscription was legible round his tomb: "Hic jacet Dominus Johannes Estney quondam abbas hujus loci, qui obiit xxiv die mensis Maii, anno Dom. 1498. Cujus anime propicietur Deus. Amen." Widmore informs us that in 1706 by digging near Esteney's tomb, in a large coffin lined with lead, his corpse, clothed in crimson silk was found entire. The lid was carefully closed again. His monument is engraved, with that of abbat Kirton, in Gough's Sepulchral Monuments of Great Britain, vol. ii. part ii. pl. 81.

^d Holinshed is minute on this point. He says, "in this xviii. yeare, the xxiiiij. day of January, a quarter of an houre after three of the clocke at after noone of the same day, the first stone of our ladie chapel within the monasterie of Westmynster was layde hy the handes of John Islip ahhot of the same monasterie, sir Reinalde Bray knight of the garter, Doctor Barnes master of the Rolles, Doctor Wall chaplaine to the King's Majestie, Maister Hugh Oldham chaplayne to the countesse of Derhie and Richmond the king's mother, sir Edward Stanhope knight, and diverse other. Upon the same stone was this scripture engraven: "Illustrissimus Henricus septimus rex Angliæ & Franciæ & Dominus Hiberniæ, posuit hanc petram in honore beate virginis Mariæ, 24 die Januarii, Anno Domini 1502, et anno dicti regis Henrici septimi decimo octavo." Chronicles of Engl. edit. 1577, vol. ii. p. 1457. The Lady Chapel mentioned in a former page as the first work of king Henry III. and a tavern called the White Rose, were pulled down to make way for it. The Will of king Henry the seventh furnishes us with numerous particulars concerning the king's intentions to complete the new Work. The charges, as the chapel was finished, are said to have amounted to no less than fourteen thousand pounds. For the endowment of this chapel king Henry the seventh procured leave from the pope to dissolve two religious houses. Mottesfont in Hampshire and Luffield in Buckinghamshire. See the Appendix of Charters.

Widmore says, "Not long after the building was begun, the king gave several estates to the monastery, for the following purposes, viz. for the maintenance of three additional monks to serve in this chapel; of two lay brothers, and three students in the university, likewise additional; for distributions at his anniversary and weekly obits; for fees to the lords, chancellor, and treasurer, to the chiefs of the law, to the lord mayor, the recorder, and sheriffs of London, if present at his anniversary, or in their absence, to the prisons of the King's-bench and Marshalsea; for the charge of his anniversary to be kept by the two Universities; by three cathedrals, Canterbury, London, and Rochester; by two collegiate churches, Windsor and St. Stephen's Westminster; and thirteen religious houses; (viz. Abingdon, St. Alban's, St. Augustine's at Canterbury, Bermondsey, Charter-house, Christ Church in London, Fryars-Augustines, Carmelites, Grey Preachers, Shene, Sion, and New Abbey in the Tower of London;) for wax for tapers and torches to be used in this chapel; for sermons in the abbey on the Sundays of the year, and holidays: for twelve almsmen, a priest to say mass to them, and three old women to attend them: and for some other things, which the abbat of Westminster was, by solemn oath, taken in the Chancery-court the next term after his appointment, and under various penalties to see performed. The estates so given amounted to more than one thousand marks per year, a good part of them from several religious houses dissolved by leave from the pope, as the priory of Luffield already mentioned, the college of St. Martin le Grand, the free chapel of Tickhill in Yorkshire, Pleshey in Essex, Uplamborne in Berkshire, and Playdon by Rye in Sussex."

"About the same time (Widmore continues) that the king determined to build a chapel here, his mother, the countess of Richmond, resolved also to be a benefactress; she had a licence of Mortmain for one hundred and fifty pounds per year, and proceeded so far as to convey ninety of it to the convent for the purposes of an anniversary for herself, for three monks to celebrate mass here, and for payment of the salaries of the professors founded by her in the two Universities, and of her Cambridge preacher. She was diverted from proceeding further in this matter by her confessor, the well-known Fisher bishop of Rochester, who recommended to her the building and endowing colleges in the Universities as a better charity, more useful, and more wanted." Hist. Westm. Ab. pp. 121, 122.

Among the Harleian manuscripts in the British Museum, No. 1498, a book richly bound in crimson velvet, with ornamented silver bosses and clasps enameled, contains four original Indentures, the first or principal letters of three of which have a picture of the king upon his throne giving the hook to abbat Islip who kneels before him, holding his crozier in his left arm, accompanied by several of the monks. Appended to this hook are five seals in cases.

The first Indenture between the king and the convent is dated July 16th, in the nineteenth year of his reign, and concerns the finding of three chantry monks for his anniversary. At folio 52 b. we have "The Livelood amortised to th'Abbey of Westminster for this Fundaproperly named, FLACCET, succeeded Esteney July 9th 1498. He became a monk of the monastery in 1474, and was made prior about 1493. He died about Michaelmas 1500, and was buried in St. John Baptist's chapel. The following imperfect inscription is still remaining on his tomb: "Hic jacet Georgius Fascet quondam abbas Westmonasteriensis, qui obiit anno Domini"

JOHN ISLIP, who had succeeded Fascet in the office of prior, was unanimously elected abbat October 27th 1500. About this time Henry the Sixth having been canonized, the abbat and convent petitioned the king to procure the removal of that prince's remains from Windsor to Westminster: and in 1501 it is said the convent actually did remove it at the expence of £500.^c

On January the 24th 1502-3, abbat Islip, accompanied by some of the king's ministers laid the first stone of king Henry the seventh's chapel.^d

From this first indenture it appears that the whole estate was reckoned at the clear yearly value, above all reprises, of 668*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; out of which, what the abbat and convent were to do for the king was, at the most to cost them but 582*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.* yearly; so that, as it was then reckoned, the abbat and convent had of the king's gift 87*l.* 6*s.* 0*d.* yearly, over and above all he had charged them with; besides a licence, without fee, to appropriate the said church of Chesterforde, and ten pounde given unto them for the other charges of that appropriation: and another licence, without fee, to appropriate the church of Seynt Bride in the citie of London, of their own patronage."

The second Indenture, of the same date, contains the especial covenants made with the king by the same ahhat, prior, and convent of Westminster, for the maintenance of thirteen poor men within the precinct of their monastery.

The third contains an abstract of the first Indenture, apparently intended for reading at the anniversary.

The fourth Indenture bears the same date with the former; and the covenanters are "K. Henry VII. on the oon partie, and John Islippe ahhat of Westminster, with the Prior and Convent of the same monastery of the other partie; and witnesseth that the said Abbot, Priour, and Convent by indentures septipartited, of the date of these presents, between the said King of the oon partie, William archbishop of Caunterbury of the second partie, Richard bisshope of Wynchester of the third partie, the said Abbot, Prioure, and Convent of the fourth partie, the Dean and Chanons of the free chapell of our Ladie and Sainte Stephen within the king's palace of Westminster of the fyfte

In 1511 he visited the priory of Great Malverne in Worcestershire, one of the cells to Westminster, and again in 1516, when he suspended the prior of that house.^a

In 1518 the cardinals Wolsey and Campegius were joined in a legatine power to visit monasteries:^b and Polydore Vergil takes particular notice of the strictness with which Westminster was visited.^c

In 1525 Wolsey again visited it by his commissary Doctor Allen, and received from the convent one hundred marks at five yearly payments for such visitation.^d

About 1531 the king granted to the convent the priory of Poghley^e in Berkshire, which had been sup-

partie, the Deane and Chapitre of the cathedral church of Sainte Paule in the city of London of the sixte partie, and the Maire and Commynaltie of the cite of London, of the seventhe partie; stande and been bounden in many several grete penalties and sommes of money to be forfaited and paied as often as the said Abbot, Priour, and Convent, or their successors, shalle make defaulte in observyng and perfourmyng of any of the covenants, or graunts, conteigned and specified in the original Indenture conteynyng the fundacion of the holie and devoute wille of the said kyng, to be perpetually performed, as it is enclosed with this boke."

The Harleian Manuscript Number 28, with the king's arms and badges at the beginning, contains another Indenture quadripartite, made between king Henry VII. (20th November in the 20th year of his reign,) the Abbat and Convent of Westminster, the Abbat and Convent of St. Albans, and the Mayor and Commonalty of London, concerning the holding a solemn anniversary in the church of St. Albans for ever, and praying there for the king, the royal family, and the realm.

The Lansdowne Manuscript, Number 452, also preserved in the British Museum, contains two original Indentures on vellum, with illuminated frontispieces, but without seals, between Margaret Countess of Richmond and abbat Islip concerning her benefactions to the monastery, dated 2d March, 21 Henry VII.

King Henry the seventh left, by his Will, five hundred marks toward finishing the building at the west end of the abbey. See Widm. Hist. Westm. Ab. p. 122.

In 1807 pecuniary aid was voted by Parliament for restoring King Henry the Seventh's Chapel. All the decayed and dilapidated parts were to be renewed with stone, and all the carvings and ornaments to be imitated from analagous members. The money paid for this repair up to Dec. 31, 1810 was 4288*l.* The whole proposed expence was estimated at 9363*l.*

^k Widmore, in the Appendix to his Hist. Westm. Ab. N^o. X. gives an imperfect account of his interment. A Roll in the library of the Society of Antiquaries representing it, in five compartments, is engraved in the fourth volume of the Vetusta Monumenta, Pl. xvi, xvii, xviii, xix, xx. The following is the correct account of the ceremony accompanying it, communicated to the Society by Francis Townsend, Esq. Windsor Herald, the original of which is preserved in the College of Arms.

liams, gives a character of Islip, but Widmore considers it as breathing more of rhetoric than truth.

Weever says, upon the wall of Saint Erasmus chapel, over Islip's tomb, "was the picture of our Saviour Christ, hanging on the crosse, seeming to call and to give good counsell unto mankind in these rimes :

'Aspice serve Dei sic me posuere Judei.
Aspice devote quoniam sic pendeo pro te.
Aspice mortalis pro te datur hostia talis.
Introitum vite reddo tibi, redde mihi te.
In cruce sum pro te, qui peccas desine pro me,
Desine, do veniam, dic culpam, corrige vitam.'

"Under this crucifixe was the picture of the abbot, holding up his hands and praying thus in old poetrie,

'En cruce qui pendis Islip miserere Johannis,
Sanguine perfuso reparasti quem pretioso.'

WILLIAM BOSTON, or BENSON, succeeded Islip, who had before been abbat of Burton upon Trent.

"Before we leave this abbat Benson or Boston," says Stevens, "it will be proper here to insert the Oath he took whilst in that dignity, that is in the year 1533, being the 25th of Henry VIII. for fulfilling the last Will of king Henry VII. in relation to his chapel annexed to the abby church. This oath is in Rymer's Fœdera, vol. xiv. p. 459, and being in English, properly belongs to this place. The Memorandum before it of the time, place, and other circumstances of taking the same being in Latin, shall be here exactly translated, and is as follows.

The Oath of William Boston, alias Benson, for fulfilling the Will of king Henry VII.^a vice, prayers, observances, and ceremonies, and with the light of thirtie tapers and foure torches, and with the distribution of almesse, and such other rewards as be conteyned in the forsaid indentures.

‘ Item, I shall cause every monk that shall syng and say the masse of Requiem with note, at every of the said wekely obitez, and also the monks then there beyng in the quere to syng and sey perpetuelly whilles the world shall endure, after the decese of the said king, devoutly for the same king at every suche masse after the fraccion of the holy sacrament, and before the holie prayer of Agnus Dei, all suche special psalmes, oracions and prayers for the same kyng, as be conteigned in the same indentures.

‘ And also, I shall fynde, provide, ordeigne, and have foure tapers of wexe, every one of them of the weight of xii l. at the first making, to stande, and perpetually to breene upon and about the tombe and herse of the said kyng, in the said monasterie, in suche forme as is conteigned in the said indentures.

‘ And also, I shall fynd, and kepe in the said monasterie too brothern called Converses, over and besides sixe other converses, which ought to be founden in the said monasterie, before the making of the said indentures, and mynster to every of the said two brethren, like lyvyng, meate, drinke, clothing, lodgyng, and all other things as any other broder, called a converse hath used to have in the said monasterie.

‘ And also, I shall provide, fynde, and have in the Universitie of Oxenford three monkes, scollers of the said monasterie, over and besides three monkes, scollers of the same monasterie, which ought to be funden there before the making of the said indentures, and there to continue in studie and learning in the science of divinitie, in such maner and fourme as is conteigned in the same indentures, and to yeve to every of them yerely for his exhibition x l. as longe as he shall there contynue soo.

‘ Item, I shall well and truely content and pay all such severall sommes of money as be appointed to be paide for twenty several sollempne anniversaries, to be holden and kepte for the said kyng in several cathedral churches, monasteries, collegiez, priories, abbasies, places of friers, and in the Universities of Oxenford and Cambridge, and other places, in suche forme as is conteigned in the same indentures.

‘ Item, I shall provide and susteyne within the said monasterie, in the almes houses therefore made and appointed by the said kyng, xiiii pore men, oon of them being a preste, and the other xiii having no wifes, in suche maner and forme as is conteigned in the same indentures, and give to every of them, that is to say, to hym of theym that shall be preest, for every day in the weke iv d. and to the other xiii of them for every day in the weke ii d. to be paied every Saturday, and every yere such clothing and fewell as is conteigned in the said indentures.

‘ And also, I shall depute and ordeigne a sad and discrete monke of the said monasterie, to have the rewle and governance of the said xiiii pore men, and to see that they shall kepe all such statutes and ordinances, prayers, and observances as to be them appoynted and assigned, and I shall yeve to every such monke yerely for his labour xl s. and also I shall provide, and find, t[h]ree honeste, sad, and discrete women to dresse meate and drink for the said xiiii pore men, and kepe them in their seckness, and yeve to every of the said thre pore women wekely xvi d. and every yere a gownne redie made, for their labour, according to the tenour and effecte of the said indenture.

^a “ I must here observe, that whereas it is said in the sixth article of this oath, that the persons preaching on the Sundays therein named, shall for every such sermon receive the reward of xiii s. iv d. I cannot but believe the same to be an error either of the first transcriber from the original, or else of the printer, that being too great a sum in those days for a sermon, and this plainly appears by what afterwards follows in the eighth article of the same oath where the preacher appointed to preach at St. Paul’s Cross is ordered to receive iii s. iv d. which in those days was a generous reward for a sermon, and consequently the first of them ought to be the same sum.

“ Whether ever this abbat Boston or Benson remembered his oath, when he consented to the dissolution of his monastery, and breaking through all the particulars he had sworn to observe, is hard to decide; but how far he was from performing any part thereof plainly appears; but as he broke through his religious vows to pass from an abbat to be a

‘ Item, I shall cause the abstracte conteigning the effect of the said indentures, annexed to the same indentures, to be openly and distinctly redde in the chapitre house of the said monastery yerely, within too days next before every such anniversarie, in such form and manner as is conteigned in the same indentures.

‘ And, I shall cause every priour of the said monasterie to make solempne othe in the said chapitre house of the same monasterie, within viii daies next after he shall be made priour of the said monasterie, to be and cause all the premisses, and all other things conteigned in the same indentures to be observed and kepte as well in the tyme of vacation of the said abbathe as other tymes.

‘ And I shall well and truely kepe and perfourme, and see and cause to be truely kepte and perfourmed all and every of the premisses, and all other things conteigned, and specified in the same indentures, covenanted and grounded by me and the priour and convent of the said monasterie to be kepte, don, observed, and performed, according to the hole will, mynde, and extent of the said kyng sole founder of all the premisses, and of all other things more largely expressed in the said indentures, according to the tenour and effecte of the said indentures in every behalve, with all such sollempnities and circumstances as be conteigned in the same indentures in as large and ample wise as though they were specially and particularly rehearsed and expressed in this my Othe.

‘ So helpe me God and all Seynts, and by this Book, and as I shall therefore aunswere to Almightye God at the dreadful day of final judgement.”

Widmore says, “ Anno Domini 1534, the famous Sir Thomas More then in trouble about refusing to swear to the king’s supremacy, was committed for some days to the custody of abbat Boston, and what he hath related concerning our abbat, shews, that his conscience was not likely to stand in his way on any occasion; for when that great man had alledged that it was against his conscience to acknowledge the supremacy, he told him, that he had cause to fear that his mind was erroneous, when he saw the great council of the realm determine contrary to his mind, and therefore he ought to change his conscience.”^b

In 1536, the ancient manors called Nayte and Hyde, belonging to Westminster, were exchanged with the king, together with the advowson of Chelsey, for the priory of Hurley in Berkshire.^c Covent, or the Convent Garden, appears to have passed at the same time from the abbat and convent to the crown.

Three years after this, on January the 16th 1539-40, the abbey of Westminster was surrendered to king Henry the Eighth by this abbat and twenty-four of the monks.^d

The yearly value of this monastery at the dissolution, according to Speed, was 3977l. 6s. 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.; according to Dugdale 3471l. 0s. 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

On the 17th of December 1540, king Henry the Eighth by his Letters Patent erected the ABBEY of WESTMINSTER into a CATHEDRAL, consisting of a bishop, dean, and twelve prebendaries.^e

“ In this new establishment,” says Widmore, “ THOMAS THIRLBY, then dean of the king’s chapel, was appointed the bishop, with all Middlesex, except Fulham, for his diocese: the late abbat was made the Dean; the prior and five more of the monks, prebendaries; four other monks became minor canons; and four more, the king’s students in the two universities. The remaining monks had pensions given them, and were dismissed on the dissolution. The several sums assigned to the dean so by the same authority he dispensed with this solemn oath, and in all likelihood never more gave himself the trouble to think of it.”

monks ordered to depart, were ten, eight, and six pounds, and five marks."^a

In a little more than a month after the foundation, the king endowed the bishoprick, granting the bishop the late abbat's house for his palace, and a revenue taken from the estate of the dissolved monastery, to the yearly value, according to Strype,^b of 804*l.* or according to Widmore, from the Archives, of 586*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*^c

The patent for the endowment of the Dean and Chapter, was not granted till August 5th, 1542. They had lands assigned from the estate of the late monastery to 2164*l.* and from those of Evesham and Pershore in Worcestershire, of Merton in Surrey, of Newstede in Nottinghamshire, of Mountgrace in Yorkshire, of Bardeney, Haverholme, and Grymesby (both nuns and Austin fryars) in Lincolnshire, to 434*l.* yearly value. By this settlement, the choir was larger than at present; the chapter also was charged with the payment of 400*l.* a year to ten readers or professors, five in each University, viz. of Divinity, Law, Physick, Hebrew, and Greek, and likewise with the stipends of twenty students in those two places, amounting to 166*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* In other points, particularly in two masters and forty grammar scholars, it differed not from the present foundation of queen Elizabeth.^d Widmore adds, that in the year 1544 the church gave up lands of one hundred and sixty-seven pounds a year, to be freed from paying the stipends of the King's University students, and in 1546, four hundred pounds a year more to be discharged from the salaries of the professors: a part of which last lands were given to Trinity College in Cambridge, and others to Christ Church in Oxford.^e

Dean BOSTON or BENSON died in the month of September 1549.^f He was buried in the Abbey, but the inscription on his tomb has been obliterated.

RICHARD COX was installed dean October 22d 1549.^g He was born at Whaddon in Buckinghamshire in the year 1499; educated at Eton-school; and was afterwards elected to Cambridge, where he became a fellow of King's College in 1519. Having the same year taken his bachelor of arts degree and being eminent for his piety and learning, he was invited to Oxford by Cardinal Wolsey to fill up his new foundation: and was accordingly preferred to be one of the junior canons of Cardinal College. He was, for a time, master of Eton school. In 1540, archdeacon of Ely: and in 1541, the first prebendary of the same cathedral upon the new foundation. In 1542 he became prebendary of Lincoln. In 1544 dean of Oseney near Oxford, and in 1546 dean of Christ Church. In 1547 he was elected Chancellor of the University of Oxford: and both in the reign of king Henry the eighth as well as in that of Edward the sixth, when an act passed for giving all chantries, colleges, &c. to the king, through his powerful intercession, the Colleges in both the Universities were excepted out of the act. In November 1552 he resigned the office of Chancellor of Oxford; and soon after Queen Mary's accession to the crown, he was stripped of his preferments. He ceased to be Dean of Westminster toward the latter end of July 1553. Foreseeing the persecution which followed, he withdrew, with other English exiles, to Germany; but returned after Mary's death, and was one of the divines appointed to revise the Liturgy. In 1559 he was preferred to the see of Ely.

The greater acts of his life, and the important services which he rendered to the reformation of the Church of England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, are fully detailed, with a list of his works, in Mr. A. Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, whence the greater part of the above particulars have been taken. Toward the close of life

Bishop Cox was much persecuted by the Lord North. He died July 22, 1581, in the eighty-second year of his age.

ON March 29th 1550, Bishop THYRLBY surrendered his bishoprick, and it was suppressed, and the diocese reunited to London. "The lands of this bishoprick," says Widmore, "were several of them exchanged with Ridley, just then made bishop of London, for some belonging to that bishoprick: Ridley had also the convicts' prison, an house between the west end of the Abbey and the gate-house: the bishop's palace, formerly the abbat's house, was given to the Lord Wentworth: a small parcel of lands were sold to Bishop Thirleby: several granted to one Sir Thomas Wroth, and others, said to be applied to the repair of St. Pauls, and to occasion the saying of robbing Peter to pay Paul. This bishop is reported to have impoverished his bishoprick very much by granting long leases of the estates, but how truly, the leases not remaining at Westminster, I do not know. He was immediately after his surrender translated to Norwich, and from thence after some years to Ely: his character may be read in the history of the Reformation."^h

In 1551 an act of parliament passed for Westminster to remain a cathedral within the diocese of London.

HUGH WESTON, D.D. on the deprivation of Coxe, was installed dean Sept. 18th 1553. Anthony Wood saysⁱ he was a Leicestershire man born, was entered a student of Baliol College Oxford about 1526, and took the degree of B.A. in 1530; about which time being chosen a fellow of Lincoln college, he proceeded in his faculty, studied physic, and was afterwards one of the proctors of the University. In 1538, he was elected rector of the said college, was admitted the year after to the reading of the sentences, and in 1540 he proceeded in divinity: about which time he was made Margaret Professor, and afterwards rector of Cliff in Kent. On May 19th 1543 he was instituted to the rectory of St. Botolph Bishopsgate in London. In the first year of queen Mary he had not only the deanery of Westminster bestowed upon him, but was made prolocutor of the convocation of the clergy of the diocese of Canterbury, where in speaking and acting he behaved himself with great commendation. The same year, being forced to leave the said deanery^k to make room for John Feckenham, who became abbat, he was promoted, though unwillingly, to the deanery of Windsor. On January 22d 1553 he was collated to the archdeaconry of Colchester. Being taken in adultery (as some say) he was deprived of his deanery of Windsor by Cardinal Pole, archbishop of Canterbury, in 1557; from which judgement he appealed to Rome, and would have fled the realm, but was seized and sent prisoner to the Tower of London. Wood, and Stevens after him, say he died in the Tower; but Strype assures us^l that he was discharged on bail in the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth, that he died in the house of one Wintour his friend, in Fleet Street, in December 1558, and was buried in the Savoy. Omitting the scurrilous anecdotes which Bale and Michael Wood have related of him, it may be sufficient to say that Leland speaks of him as a noted preacher and orator of his time. In his will, dated 26 Nov. 1558, he bestowed most of his wealth on pious and public uses, took a great deal of care about the ceremony to be performed at his funeral, and for the praying for his soul by several persons in several places, and money for a dirge and mass to be said, 1st by the master and fellows of Baliol College, 2^{dly} by the rector and fellows of Lincoln College, 3^{dly} by the chaplain or priest of the University of Oxford, 4^{thly} by the priest of Islip near Oxford, of which he is supposed to have been rector, and 5^{thly} by the priest of Burton Overy where his family had considerable property, and probably where he was born; all indicating him to have been a zealous catholic. The living of St. Botolph Bishopsgate, it is said, he was allowed to keep till his death. His works are said to have been, 1. "Oratio coram Patribus et Clero habita xvi. Octob. 1553." 2. "Disputations with Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, in the Divinity School at Oxon. an. 1554." He also wrote "a Prayer for the happy Delivery of Queen Mary in Child-bearing."

A. D. 1556, the CHURCH of WESTMINSTER was again changed into a MONASTERY: the dean being promoted, as has been already noticed, and the prebendaries receiving pensions. "In this alteration^a and new settlement of this church, great regard was shewn to the Pope's authority: the Chapter had a licence from the legate to give up their estate to the queen, that it might be applied to the new foundation: they surrendered to him: he gave the new abbat and monks possession here; and it was left to him to draw up rules and orders for them. This new establishment differed from that of the old monastery in several respects: the abbats were to continue not for life, but only three years; there was to be no conge d'elire before the election, nor any royal assent to confirm it."^b

The abbat appointed on this occasion was

JOHN FECKENHAM, so called because he was born of poor parents in a cottage near the forest of Feckenham in Worcestershire, his right name being HOWMAN. Discovering in his youth very good parts, and a strong propensity to learning, the priest of the parish took him under his care, instructed him some years, and then procured him admission into Evesham monastery. At eighteen, he was sent by his abbat to Gloucester Hall Oxford; from whence, when he had sufficiently improved himself in academical learning, he was recalled to his abbey: which being dissolved Nov. 17th 1536, he had a yearly pension of an hundred florins allowed him for his life. Upon this he returned to Gloucester Hall, where he pursued his studies some years; and in 1539 took the degree of bachelor of divinity, being then chaplain to Bell bishop of Worcester. That prelate resigning his see in 1543, he became chaplain to Bonner bishop of London; but Bonner being deprived of his bishoprick in 1549, by the reformers, Feckenham was committed to the Tower of London, because, as some say, he refused to administer the sacraments after the protestant manner. Stapleton, however, says it was for his defending the fast of Lent, and opposing justification by faith alone; these causes, he says, are alledged against Feckenham in archbishop Cranmer's register. Feckenham was allowed to come out of that prison to dispute, at the request of Mr. Philip Hobbs, who, to use Feckenham's own words, borrowed him out of the Tower for some time. Being brought out of prison to this effect, he had seven solemn disputations about the principal articles of faith, whereof particular mention is made by Stapleton in his answer to Horn. The first was at the Earl of Bedford's in the Savoy, London; another at Mr. William Cecil's in Cannon Street; the third at Mr. John Cheek's house, which had been before the monastery of the Carmelites, or White Fryers; and in these three disputes about religion, he was civilly enough treated by reason of the quality of those men in which they were managed. But he was obliged to finish this disputation begun in London, in Worcestershire, where he still held a benefice; there at the instance of Mr. Philip Hobbs, as has been said, he appeared to dispute, where Hooper the protestant bishop of Worcester held four solemn disputations, the first of them at the said Hooper's visitation at Pershore (formerly a Benedictine abbey), the last in the cathedral of Worcester, John Juel, bishop of Salisbury, among others opposing. Stapleton says that Feckenham answered Hooper so solidly, that Hooper with good reason said he was satisfied, and Feckenham being dismissed from thence was returned to his prison in the Tower, where he continued till Queen Mary's accession to the crown in 1553. He was then released, and made chaplain to the queen. He became, also, again chaplain to Bonner, prebendary of St. Pauls, dean of St. Pauls, rector of Finchley in Middlesex, which he held only a few months, and then rector of Greenford in the same county. In 1554 he was one of the disputants at Oxford against Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, before they suffered martyrdom, but said very little against them; and during Mary's reign, he was constantly employed in doing good offices to the afflicted protestants from the highest to the lowest. Francis Russel Earl of Bedford, Ambrose and Robert Dudley, afterwards Earls of Warwick and Leicester, were benefited by his kindness; as was also Sir John Cheke, whose life he and Sir Thomas Pope, the founder of Trinity College Oxford, are said to have saved, by a joint application to Queen Mary. Feckenham was very intimate with Sir Thomas, and often visited him at Tyttenhanger house. Feckenham also interceded with Queen Mary for the Lady Elizabeth's enlargement out of prison, and that so earnestly, that the queen was actually displeased with him for some time. In May 1556, he was complimented by the University of Oxford with the degree of Doctor in Divinity; being then in universal esteem for his learning, piety, charity, moderation, humility, and other virtues. The September following he was made abbat of Westminster, and fourteen Benedictine monks placed there under his government. Upon the death of Mary, in 1558, her successor Elizabeth, not unmindful of her obligations to Feckenham, sent for him before her coronation, to consult and reward him. The first messenger sent to him, says Stevens, is said to have found him planting elms, which are still growing in the garden at Westminster abbey; nor would he go with the messenger till he had finished the work he was about. What discourse he had with the queen is uncertainly reported; it is likely she pressed that Feckenham and the monks would in some measure conform to her, that so they might continue in possession of the abbey; for Sanders says, the queen did heartily wish to have a new sort of monks in her innovation in religious affairs. But it was in vain, for Feckenham could not be drawn from the received faith of the church by any allurements or threats, though the queen offered him the

"The King and Queen to all, &c. greeting. Whereas the monastery of St. Peter seated at Westminster, and of the order of St. Benedict, which was from the most ancient times founded and endowed by the kings our predecessors, has been during the calamity of the late past times dissolved and extinct, and a college of secular canons instituted and erected therein. We most earnestly desiring that this same Church of St. Peter, of the late holy Monastery, wherein the regalia are wont to be kept and the kings to be anointed and consecrated, and where the bodies of many kings our predecessors aforesaid are entombed, should, by removing the dean and canons, and other secular priests serving therein, and by introducing an abbat and monks of the order of St. Benedict, return from the secular state, in which it is at present, to the same regular state it was in before; and that a monastery of monks, who shall live and serve the Most High, according to the rule of the same St. Benedict, and the other statutes and customs of the same order, should be restored, re-established, or new erected, do, pursuant to that right which appertains and belongs to our royal crown in the aforesaid church and college, of our proper motion, and of our certain knowledge for our selves and the kings our successors, to the glory and praise of the Almighty God, and the glorious Virgin Mary, and St. Peter, and the whole Court of Heaven, and the advancement of the divine worship, consent, and give our assent to any cession and resignation of and concerning the Church of St. Peter aforesaid, with its dependencies and all its rights and appurtenances, and to all the right of the college brought into it by the dean and canons there serving the chapter, into the hands of the most reverend Father in God the Lord Reginald Pole, Archbishop of Canterbury, Legate a latere of our most Holy Father the Pope and the See Apostolick, to us and our kingdoms of England and Ireland, and all other places subject to the same, and to the adjacent parts, our most dear kinsman, and to the extinction, suppression, and dissolution of the same college of the Church of St. Peter aforesaid, and to the restoration, restitution, introduction, or new erection of the monastery, and of the order of St. Benedict in the same church, by the same most reverend Lord Legate, or any others sufficiently empowered for doing and performing the same. And we do by the same motion and knowledge wholly and totally take away and abolish all impediments, if any such there be, to the end that the premises may be done and executed, and attain their due end and effect, whatsoever laws, statutes, and ordinances of our kingdom, of any sort, may give them being, which we will here have to be looked upon as premised, as if they had been inserted and set down word for word. archbishoprick of Canterbury upon that condition. He appeared, however, in her first Parliament, taking the lowest place on the bishops' form; and was the last mitred abbat that sat in the House of Peers. During his attendance there he spoke and protested against every thing tending towards the Reformation; and the strong opposition which he could not be restrained from making, occasioned his commitment to the Tower in 1560. After nearly three years' confinement there, he was committed to the custody of Horne, bishop of Winchester: but having been old antagonists on the subject of the oath of supremacy, their present connection was mutually irksome, and Feckenham was remanded to the Tower in 1564. Afterwards he was removed to the Marshalsea, and then to a private house in Holborn. In 1571 he attended Dr. John Storie before his execution. In 1578 we find him in free custody with Cox, bishop of Ely, whom the queen had requested to use his endeavours to induce Feckenham to acknowledge her supremacy, and come over to the church: and he was at length prevailed on to allow her supremacy, but could never be brought to a thorough conformity. Soon after, the restless spirit of some Roman catholics, and their frequent attempts upon the queen's life, obliged her to imprison the most considerable among them: upon which Feckenham was sent to Wisbich-Castle in the Isle of Ely, where he continued a prisoner to the time of his death, which happened in 1585. As to his character, Camden calls him "a learned and good man, who lived long, did a great deal of good to the poor, and always solicited the minds of his adversaries to benevolence." Fuller styles him, "a man cruel to none; courteous to all who needed his help or liberality." Burnet says, "he was a charitable and generous man who lived in great esteem in England." And Dart concludes his account of him in these words: "though I cannot go so far as Reyner, to call him a martyr; yet I cannot gather but that he was a good, mild, modest, charitable man, and a devout Christian."^a

Strype says it was not in September but on the 21st of November 1556 that Feckenham was made abbat of Westminster. "And the morrow after," he adds, "the lord abbot with his convent went a procession after the old fashion in their monks' weeds, in coats of black say, with two vergers carrying two silver rods in their hands; and even-song time the vergers went through the cloysters to the abbot, and so went into the church afore the high altar, and there my lord kneeled down and his convent; and after his prayer made, was brought to the choir with the vergers, and so into his place; and presently he began the even-song, being St. Clement's even." "On the 29th day, at Westminster abbey was the lord abbot stalled, and did wear a Mitre. The lord cardinal was there, and many bishops, and the lord treasurer, and a great company; the lord chancellor sang mass, and the abbot made the sermon."^b "On the 6th of December following, the abbot went a procession with his convent; before him went all the sanctuary men with cross keys upon their garments; and after went three for murther, one whereof was the Lord Dacres son of the North, who was whipt, with a sheet about him, for killing of one West, esquire, dwelling beside the Lord Darcy."^c

Anno 1557, March 21st, Strype says, "was made the paschal of the abbey of Westminster, which consisted

Feckenham is said to have repaired the shrine of King Edward the Confessor as we now see it.^e

May 31, 1557, the Lord Wentworth gave up the episcopal palace, the old house of the abbats, granted to his father by King Edward on the suppression of the bishoprick, and had from the queen, in exchange, the manor of Cannonbury in Middlesex, that is, says Widmore, I suppose, what is now called Canbury or Canonbury house near Islington; or Canons near Edgware, now in selling, the estate of the late Duke of Chandois.^f That it was the former however, is evident, from the letters patents 3 and 4 Phil. and Mary, p. 9, dated June 10th.^g

On the death of Queen Mary, November 17th 1558, the first Parliament of Queen Elizabeth gave her all the religious houses revived or erected by her sister, in the condition they were on the first day of October preceding, with an exception for the leases fairly made by the abbat and convent of Westminster after that time. In pursuance of this act the abbat and monks were removed from Westminster July 12th 1559.^h

The monastery being again suppressed, the queen made a new foundation here, and Westminster became a COLLEGIATE CHURCH, endowed with the same lands which had recently belonged to the Abbat and Convent. This foundation, says Widmore, differed but little from that of King Henry the Eighth: a Dean, and the same number of Prebendaries; a school, with a chief and an under master, and the same number of scholars; only the quire had not quite so many persons belonging to it. The charter bears date May 21, 1560. The commission to the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of Bath and Wells, and the dean of St. Paul's to give the dean and prebendaries possession was granted the 21st, and they were installed the 30th of June.ⁱ

The first DEAN on the new foundation was WILLIAM BILL. He was born at Ashwell in Hertfordshire, and received his education at St. John's College in Cambridge, where he became a fellow in 1523. In 1542 he became Greek-professor in his university: and March 10th 1546 was elected master of his college. In 1551 he was removed to the headship of Trinity College Cambridge, whence he was ejected on the accession of Queen Mary, and restored again on the accession of Queen Elizabeth: to whom he was also almoner. On July 5th 1559 he was made provost of Eton. Huggett in his Manuscript Collections for a History of Eton College says "Contulit Coll. Westmon. vasa quædam argentea, et xx peristromata, ad lectos regiis ibidem alumnis instruendos. Unus è sex clericis insignioribus qui capellan. Edw. Regis constituti sunt ut prædicandi munus per diversas Angliæ partes solennius obirent. A.D. 1551."^k Roger Ascham has some verses addressed to him among the poems at the end of his Epistles. Doctor Bill died July 15th 1561. He was buried in the abbey, with the following lines beneath his effigies in St. Bennet's chapel.

"Billus'et ipse bonus fuit et virtutis amator,
Et coluit doctos, doctus et ipse fuit.
Officii custos erat, atque magister honesti;
Et bene perfecit multa, loquendo parum.

Feckenham also wrote a medical work, preserved in manuscript. MS. Sloan. Brit. Mus. num. 3919. Bishop Kennett, in a MS. note on Wood's Athene Oxonienses, preserved at Oxford, says, "Abbot Feckenham left what he had to the Church of Westminster and gave the dean good directions about such lands leased out, which could not otherwise have been easily discovered, in letters which are still preserved among the records."

The inscription on the verge of the tomb is "Hic jacet Guliel. Bill, sacræ theologiæ doctor, Decanus Westmonasterii primarius, Collegii Ætonensis, Collegii Trinitatis apud Cantabrigiam Præfectus, et serenissimæ reginæ Elizabethæ summus Eleemosynarius. Obiit xv. Julii, anno salutis M. D. lxi."^a

GABRIEL GOODMAN, the twelfth of the prebends here appointed by Queen Elizabeth in 1560, was the successor to Dr. Bill. Widmore says he was educated in St. John's College Cambridge. He adds, "Anno 1566, a bill to take away sanctuaries for debt being brought into the House of Commons, the Chapter upon their petition were heard in behalf of their Sanctuary at Westminster: they had two persons, one a common lawyer, the other a civilian, to plead for them; the dean also himself spoke on the occasion, and the bill was thrown out. A brief account of the proceeding, and of the heads of what was said of this sanctuary, may be seen in Strype's Annals of the Reformation. Whatever there might be in any other arguments, there was one strong temporal reason for its continuance here: this privilege of sanctuary had caused the houses within the district to let well; and they had been rated high in the estimate for King Henry the Eighth's establishment: and the college must have felt very sensibly the lowering their rents occasioned by such suppression."^b Dr. Goodman was one of the two executors of William Lord Burleigh: and the Countess of Sussex appointed him, with Archbishop Whitgift, one of the overseers of her will towards founding her college. He died June 17th 1601; and was buried in St. Bennets chapel, with this inscription beneath his effigies, against the south wall:

" D. O. M.

"Gabriel Goodman, sacræ Theologiæ Doctor, Decanus hujus Ecclesiæ quintus, cui cum summa laude XL. annos præfuisset, et Ruthiniæ in comitatu Denbighensi, ubi natus, hospitalem fundasset, scholamque instituisset, vitæ sanctimonia Deo bonisque charus, in cœlestem patriam pie emigravit, xvii Junii, anno salutis M.D.C.I. æt. suæ LXXIII."

Widmore says he was much esteemed by the two archbishops, Parker and Whitgift, and several times by them recommended for a bishoprick; for Norwich 1574, for Worcester, Chichester, and Rochester, 1584; but what hindered the effect of their endeavours for him we are not told. In 1590 he founded the hospital and school at Ruthin mentioned in the inscription on his monument: the nomination of the warden of which he left with the dean and chapter of Westminster.^c

LANCELOT ANDREWS, DD. succeeded Goodman here as dean July 4th 1601. He was born in London in 1555; received the early part of his education at Merchant Taylors' school; and completed his studies at Pembroke-hall in Cambridge. The founder of Jesus College Oxford, Hugh Price, afterwards appointed him one of his first or honorary fellows in the sister University. In 1589, he was chosen master of Pembroke-hall. During the reign of Queen Elizabeth he is said to have refused the acceptance of any bishoprick, because he would not basely submit to an alienation of the episcopal revenue. From the prebend of St. Pancras and a residentiaryship at St. Paul's, he was promoted in 1605 to the bishoprick of Chichester, whence he was translated to Ely in 1609, and in 1618 to Winchester; this last preferment, with the deanery of the King's Chapel, he held till his death, which happened at Winchester-house in Southwark Sept. 26th 1626. He was buried in the parish church of St. Saviour adjoining; where his executors erected to him a monument of alabaster on which is an elegant Latin inscription written by one of his chaplains. Not many years ago, his bones were dispersed, to make room for some corpse; and the hair of his beard, and his silken cap, were found undecayed in the remains of his coffin.^d

RICHARD NEILE, NEYLE, or NEALE, was the fourth dean of Westminster on Queen Elizabeth's foundation: and was installed November the 5th 1605, on the promotion of his predecessor to the see of Chichester. Neile was the son of a tallow-chandler in King-street Westminster, and was educated at Westminster school under Mr. Camden.^e At the recommendation of Dean Goodman he was sent to St. John's College Cambridge, and was maintained there by Mildred Lady Burleigh. He afterwards became a fellow of his college, and in 1598 was presented to the vicarage of Cheshunt in Hertfordshire.^f In 1608 he became bishop of Rochester, continuing to hold the deanery of Westminster in commendam. In 1610 he was translated to Litchfield and Coventry; in 1614 to Lincoln; in 1617 to Durham; in 1628 to Winchester; and, finally, in 1632, to the archbishoprick of York. Lord Orford says, that in 1635 he put up a monument for Casaubon which cost him 60*l.* by the famous statuary Stone.^g He died October 31st 1640: and was buried in the cathedral.

GEORGE MONTAIGNE, or MONTEINE, DD. was installed dean December the 10th 1610, on the translation of Neile to the see of Litchfield and Coventry. He was born at Cawood-castle in Yorkshire: and had been a fellow of Queen's College Cambridge, a Gresham professor, and master of the Savoy, before his promotion to Westminster. In 1617 he was consecrated bishop of Lincoln; translated to London in 1621; in 1627 to Durham; and in 1628 to the archbishoprick of York. Soon after his last promotion he died, and was buried in the chancel of Cawood church.

ROBERT TOWNSON, DD. was installed December 16th 1617, on the promotion of his predecessor to the see of Lincoln. He was born in the parish of St. Botolph in Cambridge; where he was admitted a sizar of Queen's College Dec. 28th 1587, and became a fellow of that foundation^h Sept. 2d 1597. He was uncle to Fuller the historian; and attended King James the First to Scotland as his chaplain. On July 9th 1620 he was consecrated bishop of Salisbury; and died May 15th 1621.ⁱ Fuller has left us this character of him: "Doctor Townson had a hospitable heart, a generous disposition, free from covetousness, and was always confident in God's providence, that, if he should die, his children (and those were many^k) would be provided for; wherein he was not mistaken. He lived in his bishoprick but a year; and, being appointed at very short warning to preach before the Parliament, by unseasonable sitting up to study contracted a fever, whereof he died."^l He was buried in Westminster Abbey, by St. Edmund's Chapel, but had no monument erected to his memory.

JOHN WILLIAMS, installed dean July 16th 1620, was the son of Edward Williams of Aberconway, in Carnarvonshire, proceeded master of arts of Cambridge, but incorporated at Oxford in the year 1608. Afterwards he became chaplain to Thomas Lord Egerton, Lord Chancellor of England, and in 1611, one of the proctors of the University of Cambridge. About the same time he had several benefices conferred on him, as the rectory of Walgrave in Northamptonshire, Dinan and Grason, a residentiaryship in the church of Lincoln, a prebend therein, and the office of chantor; besides a prebend in the church of Peterburgh, and a donative in Wales. Afterwards he was made rector of the Savoy, chaplain in ordinary to the king, and in 1619 dean of Salisbury. Next by the favour of George Duke of Buckingham, he was made a privy councillor, in July 1621, bishop of Lincoln, and lord keeper of the great seal, being allowed to hold the deanery of Westminster in commendam. Sir Antony Weldon, in his Court and Character of King James, printed 1650, tells us, that Williams was brought in by

Buckingham, to serve such turns as none of the laity could be found bad enough to undertake; but that being a very scandalous writer, we shall not insist upon his authority, though the bishop's following behaviour plainly shewed that nothing too bad could be said of him. Thus far under King James I. When King Charles I. came to the crown, Buckingham still continuing in favour, caused the seal to be taken from this bishop in the year 1625, for having been ungrateful to him; he was also obstructed officiating at the king's coronation, and interdicted the Parliament. Thereupon Williams grew discontented and enraged, sided with the Presbyterians, and finding the king to decline in the inclinations of the people, fomented popular discourses, tending to his majesty's dishonour, till by degrees his words grew up to be not only disloyal, but scandalous, and bordering upon treason. For these offences he was questioned in the Star-chamber, and the chief testimony for his purgation depended on one John Pregon, registry of Lincoln, Williams knowing that the said person was infamous for having a bastard child laid to him, by suborning of witnesses, and such other wicked methods, procured the said child to be fathered upon another. But being then charged in the Star-chamber for corrupting of witnesses, and fully convicted of the same, in July 1637, he was adjudged to pay 0,000*l.* fine to the king, to be imprisoned in the Tower of London, during his majesty's pleasure, and to be suspended of offices and benefices, none pitying him but the professed enemies of the government; for he was known to be a man of a corrupt nature, whose passions transported him into the worst of actions. He had a singular faculty of lying, framing discourses with circumstances, answers, and replies, as if they had been real, which, upon examination, were found to have nothing in them of truth, but to be the pure effect of his own invention. To this effect he forged a conference between himself and his lawyers, pretending that they had advised him to stand his trial, to vindicate his honour, and afterwards to submit himself to the king, which was so false, that they had unanimously advised him to make his submission before any trial, because his crimes were so evident that he could not avoid being convicted. This fiction gained him much compassion among the king's enemies; but all loyal men were fully convinced, that it was an imposture. The king had been well inclined to spare him; but his pride and malice were so great, that some intimation of it having been made to him, he presently gave out, and insinuated, that the court being ashamed of what they had done, were for persuading him to a composition, which obliged the king to proceed against him. In the year 1640, when the Parliament began barefaced to fly at the king, he was, by means of the faction, discharged out of the Tower, herded with the most mutinous sectaries, and seconded the Lord Say in the House of Peers, in railing against Archbishop Laud. At the same time, he made mighty professions of duty to the king, the better to delude and ensnare his majesty. However, when it was resolved to proceed against the Earl of Strafford by bill of attainder, because a legal trial would have acquitted that great man, this graceless prelate, well knowing that the bishops sitting in the house would have carried it against that unjust bill, openly declared that they ought not to be present, and offered, not only in his name, but also for the rest of the bishops, to withdraw whensoever that business was entered upon, thus betraying that whole order, and contributing what in him lay to murder that earl. Not so satisfied, when he found the king wholly averse from giving his assent to that wicked bill, which had passed both houses, he invented the most vile piece of casuistry that ever came from the mouth of a scandalous prelate. He told the King that he must consider, that as he had a private capacity and a public, so he had a public conscience as well as a private; that though his private conscience, as a man, would not permit him to do an act contrary to his understanding, judgment, and conscience; yet his public conscience, as a king, which obliged him to do all things for the good of his people, and to preserve his kingdom in peace for himself and his posterity, would not only permit him to do that, but even oblige and require him, &c. Such was the advice of this abominable casuist. Notwithstanding all these scandalous practices, the king, in 1641, translated him to the archbishoprick of York,^a to please the sectaries, who were fond of him; yet he being insulted by the rabble, as he went to the House of Lords, was the great promoter and penner of the Protestation which the bishops soon after presented to the King and the House of Lords, for he was so proud, that he could not forgive that mistaken disrespect of his own party. For this being again imprisoned in the Tower by the lords, he continued there eighteen weeks, and when released, retired to Oxford, whence he went into his own country, repaired his castle at Aberconway, and fortified it, after the rebellion was broke out. The king well knowing his rebellious temper, did not think fit to trust him with the keeping of such a place of strength, and therefore put a governor and garrison into it. The unworthy archbishop highly resenting this, or making it a pretence to run into actual rebellion, retired to his house at Penryn, not far from Aberconway, which he also fortified, and being acceptable to the parliament, as a traitor, put a garrison into it, and declared for them. Then getting some forces from one Mitton, a rebel colonel in those parts, he besieged Aberconway castle, took and kept it to his dying day. This action happened in the year 1645, and for this and other his traitorous actions, the royalists justly called him a perfidious prelate, the shame of the clergy, and the apostate archbishop of York. He died the 25th of March, 1649.^b

An apology for his life was written by bishop Hacket, who had been one of his chaplains.

Widmore says that in no long time after his accession to the deanery of Westminster, Williams laid out in repairing the most decayed parts of the church no less than 4500*l.* of his own money; and when some person had mis-reported the matter, as if done by shortening the table-allowance of the prebendaries, he had an attestation from them to vindicate his character and acknowledge his benefaction.^c He also converted a room in the east part of the cloysters, which had been the monks' parlour into a library which he furnished with books; the fitting, up and furnishing of which cost not less than 2000*l.* beside other benefactions which he had procured to it.

Archbishop Williams lies buried in the church of Llandegay in Carnarvonshire, not far from Bangor.

Dr. RICHARD STEWARD, on the expiration of archbishop Williams's commendam, had the deanery of Westminster given to him by King Charles 1st in 1644. But he appears never to have had possession. He died at Paris Nov. 14th 1651.

JOHN EARLE, D.D., was installed dean very soon after the restoration of King Charles the Second, in 1660. According to Dr. Barwicke's Life he had the grant or promise of this deanery even before the restoration. Dr. Earle was a native of the city of York. He was entered a commoner of Christ Church College Oxford at a very early age, and in 1620 became a probationer fellow of Merton College. He took the degree of M.A. in 1624; and in 1631 was one of the proctors of the University; about which time he was also appointed chaplain to the Earl of Pembroke, then Chancellor of Oxford. Soon after this he was presented by that nobleman to the rectory of Bishopstone in Wiltshire. Having been introduced by his patron to the notice of the king, Dr. Earle was promoted to be chaplain and tutor to Prince Charles on the removal of Dr. Duppa from those posts to the bishoprick of Salisbury. In 1642 Earle took his degree of doctor in divinity; and in 1643 became chancellor of the cathedral of Salisbury, of which situation, as well as of his living of Bishopstone, he was deprived by the ill-success of the royal cause. After the defeat at Worcester he attached himself to the fallen fortunes of his sovereign, accompanied him in France, and was made chaplain and clerk of the closet. During the time that Charles was in Scotland, and probably afterward, Dr. Earle resided at Antwerp with his friend Dr. Morley, afterwards bishop of Winchester. In 1661 he was appointed one of the commissioners for a review of the Liturgy; and on Nov. 30th 1662 was consecrated bishop of Worcester; from which see he was translated Sept. 28th 1663 to that of Salisbury. When the court retired to Oxford, during the great plague in 1665, he attended their majesties to the place of his early education, and died at his apartments in University College on the 17th of November. He was buried on the 25th of the same month, near the high altar, in Merton College chapel. The inscription on his tomb begins in this singular manner, "Amice, si quis hic sepultus est roges, Ille, qui nec meruit unquam, nec, quod majus est, habuit Inimicum." During the earlier part of his life, he appears to have possessed considerable reputation as a poet, and to have been as remarkable for the pleasantry of his conversation, as for his learning, virtues, and piety. Izaak Walton makes this mention of him in the Life of Mr. Richard Hooker: "Dr. Earle, now lord bishop of Salisbury, of whom I may justly say, (and let it not offend him, because it is such a truth as ought not to be concealed from posterity, or those that now live and yet know him not,) that since Mr. Hooker died, none have lived whom God hath blessed with more innocent wisdom, more sanctified learning, or a more pious, peaceable, primitive temper: so that this excellent person seems to be only like himself and our venerable Richard Hooker."^a Dr. Earle's principal works were his "Microcosmography, or a Piece of the World discovered in Essays and Characters." 12°. Lond. 1623, &c.; "A Translation of Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity into Latin, never published;" and "a Latin Version of the Εἰκὼν βασιλική." 12°. Hag. Com. 1649.

JOHN DOLBEN, D.D., was installed dean December 3d 1662, on the promotion of Dr. Earle to the bishoprick of Worcester. He was born at Stanwick in Northamptonshire, where his father was rector, in 1625. He was admitted a king's scholar at Westminster school in 1636; and in 1640 was elected student of Christ Church Oxford. When the civil wars broke out he took up arms for the royal cause in the garrison of Oxford; and, serving as an ensign, received a severe musquet wound in the battle of Marston Moor. He was afterwards advanced to the rank of captain, and, according to Wood, of major. In 1646, Oxford having been surrendered, and the army disbanded, he retired again to his studies at Christ Church. In 1647 he took the degree of M.A.; and in 1648 was ejected from his college by the parliamentary visitors. In 1656 he entered into holy orders; and in 1657 married the niece of Dr. Gilbert Sheldon, then-tofore warden of All Souls College, though afterwards archbishop of Canterbury. From this time to the king's restoration, in conjunction with Dr. Fell and Dr. Allestree, he constantly performed divine service and administered the sacraments according to the Liturgy of the church of England, to the great comfort of the royalists then resident in Oxford. The house appropriated to this purpose was then the residence of Dr. Thomas Willis the celebrated physician, and is yet standing, opposite Merton College. In 1660, being then D.D., he was appointed a canon of Christ Church, and had, the same year, the rectory of Newington-cum-Britwell in Oxfordshire. In 1661 he became a prebendary of St. Pauls. In 1662 he was appointed archdeacon of London, and vicar of St. Giles's Cripplegate. In 1666 he was consecrated bishop of Rochester, and allowed to hold the deanery of Westminster in commendam. In 1675 he was made lord almoner: and in 1683 archbishop of York. He died at Bishopsthorp April 11th 1686.^b Widmore says "that on the day of Dr. Dolbens instalment at Westminster, the chapter agreed to make the fabrick of the church an equal sharer with the prebendaries in their dividends of fines."^c

THOMAS SPRAT, D.D., was installed dean September 21st 1683; who, November 2d 1684 was consecrated bishop of Rochester. He was born at Tallaton in Devonshire, in 1636. After receiving the rudiments of his education at a private school, he was removed A.D. 1651, to Wadham College Oxford. His first preferment was the prebend of Carleton cum Thurleby in the church of Lincoln, of which he took possession in 1660. In 1685 he became dean of the Chapel Royal. He died of an apoplexy at Bromley in Kent, May 20th 1713, and was interred in Westminster-abbey, where his monument still remains with an inscription from the pen of bishop Smalridge.^d

During the time of his deanery, in the latter end of the year 1694, the manuscripts belonging to the library of the abbey were all burnt, except one: they were in number about two hundred and thirty.^e In 1706 the marble altar-piece which had been removed from the chapel at White-hall to Hampton-court, was taken by the queen's order from the stores there and presented to the dean and chapter.^f

FRANCIS ATTERBURY, D.D., was the next dean. He succeeded bishop Sprat here in the month of June 1713, and shortly after was consecrated bishop of Rochester. He was born in 1663, at Milton, or Middleton-Keynes, near Newport-Pagnel in Buckinghamshire: was admitted a king's scholar at Westminster in 1676: and thence, in 1680, elected a student of Christ-church Oxford. About 1698 he was engaged in a controversy with Dr. Bentley. In 1700 he was engaged in another controversy with Dr. Wake, on the rights, powers, and privileges of Convocations. In 1701 he became archdeacon of Totness: in 1704 dean of Carlisle: and in 1712 dean of Christ-church Oxford. After his arrival at the bishoprick of Rochester, the tide of his prosperity began to turn; and he received a sensible mortification presently after the coronation of king George I. when, upon his offering to present his Majesty (with a view, no doubt, of standing better in his favour,) with the chair of state and royal canopy, his own perquisites as dean of Westminster, the offer was rejected, not without some evident marks of dislike to his person. In 1722, the government, on a suspicion of his being concerned in a plot in favour of the Pretender, had him apprehended and committed prisoner to the tower. In 1723 a bill for inflicting pains and penalties upon him having passed both houses of parliament, he was deprived of his dignities and benefices, and was condemned to perpetual exile. He died at Paris, Feb. 15th 1732. His writings and correspondence are too well known to be particularly mentioned here.^g

SAMUEL BRADFORD, D.D., was installed dean June 27th 1723: and shortly after translated from the bishoprick of Carlisle, which he then held, to Rochester. He was born in 1652, in the parish of St. Anne Blackfriars; and was educated at St. Paul's school. In 1669 he was admitted a student of Bennet College Cambridge, though he was not matriculated till March 27th 1672. In 1710 he refused the bishoprick of St. Davids. In 1716 he was unanimously chosen master of his college: and in 1718 was consecrated bishop of Carlisle. He died May 17th 1731.^h

During the time of his deanery, the order of knights of the Bath being revived in 1725, and the chapel of king Henry the seventh being appointed for the place of their installment, he, as the dean of the church, was constituted the first dean of the order.

JOSEPH WILCOCKS, D.D., became bishop of Rochester, with liberty to hold the deanery of Westminster in commendam, in 1731. He received his education at Magdalen College Oxford, where he was chosen a demy of the society at the same election with Mr. Addison. He was afterwards chaplain to the English factory at Lisbon; became prebendary of Westminster in 1721; and at the close of the same year was consecrated bishop of Gloucester. After his translation to Rochester, he declined higher promotion, even that of the archbishoprick of York. He died Feb. 28th 1756.^a

The towers at the west end of the abbey-church of Westminster, which had been originally carried little higher than the roof of the building, were, during dean Wilcocks's time, finished as we now see them. The new work was begun in 1735, and, with the assistance of several parliamentary grants, finished in 1745, in stone-work and tracery, after a design, suitable to the original scheme, given by sir Christopher Wren.^b

ZACHARY PEARCE, D.D. was installed dean of Westminster May 4th 1756: succeeding Dr. Wilcocks both here and in the bishoprick of Rochester. He was originally a fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. His first preferment was the rectory of St. Bartholomew behind the Royal Exchange, bestowed upon him by lord chancellor Macclesfield in 1719; who in 1724 gave him the vicarage of St. Martin's in the fields. In 1739 he became dean of Winchester; and in 1747 was promoted to the bishoprick of Bangor. In the month of June 1768, having with much difficulty obtained the king's leave, he signed the instrument of resignation of the deanery of Westminster.^c He died June 29th 1774. His principal works were Commentaries on the Evangelists, an edition of Cicero "De Oratore" and "De Officiis," an edition of Longinus, and some controversial Tracts against Middleton and Woolston. He published also several Sermons and contributed to the Spectator and Guardian.^d

JOHN THOMAS, D.D. succeeded bishop Pearce in the deanery of Westminster in the month of July 1768, and in the bishoprick of Rochester in 1774. He was for several years vicar of St. Bride's in Fleet-street. He died at Bromley in Kent, at the age of 83, August 22d 1793: and was buried at Bletchingley in Surrey.^e It was during the deanery of bishop Thomas, on May 2d 1774, that the tomb of king Edward the first was opened, the Account of which, written by sir Joseph Ayloffe, was published in a quarto pamphlet in 1775.

SAMUEL HORSLEY, LL.D. became dean of Westminster and bishop of Rochester in October 1793. He was installed dean, Dec. 6th 1793. He was born in 1733; and finished his education at Trinity Hall in Cambridge, where he took the degree of bachelor in civil law. In 1759 he was presented to the rectory of Newington in Surrey. In 1768 he went to Oxford as private tutor to Heneage earl of Aylesford, then lord Guernsey, where he became attached to the sister University, and in 1774 was incorporated in his degree of B.C.L., proceeding Doctor of Civil Law immediately afterwards. In 1773 he became one of the secretaries of the Royal Society: and in 1782 was presented to the vicarage of South Weald in Essex. His patron Lord Thurlow, in 1782, procured for him the bishoprick of St. David's. His charge to the clergy of his diocese in 1790, and his speech in the House of Lords on the Catholic Bill, May 31 1791, occasioned his promotion to Rochester; whence being translated in 1802 to St. Asaph, he resigned the deanery of Westminster. He died Oct. 4th 1806.^f

WILLIAM VINCENT, D.D. was installed dean Aug. 7th 1802: the rev. Thomas Dampier, D.D. succeeding Dr. Horsley in the bishoprick of Rochester. Dr. Vincent was admitted scholar of St. Peter's Westminster in 1753, at the age of thirteen: whence, in 1757, he was elected to Trinity College Cambridge. He became usher of Westminster-school in 1762; second master, 1771, and chaplain to his Majesty; D.D. 1776; rector of Al-Hallows the greater and less, London, 1778; sub-almoner to his Majesty 1784; head master of Westminster-school, Sept. 1788; prebendary of Westminster 1800. He holds with his deanery the rectory of Islip in Oxfordshire. The more important of his literary works have been, "The Periplus of the Erythrean Sea," Part I. 4to. Lond. 1800. Part II. 4to. Lond. 1805. "The Commerce and Navigation of the Ancients in the Indian Ocean," 2 vol. 4to. Lond. 1807. "The Voyage of Nearchus, and the Periplus of the Erythrean Sea, translated from the Greek," 4to. Lond. 1809.

On July 9th 1803, about three o'clock in the afternoon, an alarming fire broke out on the summit of the lantern tower of the abbey, which appeared to threaten destruction to the whole fabrick; but which was happily extinguished with less damage than might have been expected. It was said to have been caused by a portable furnace which had been left without any attendant.^g Till May 19th 1805, the service of the church was performed in king Henry the seventh's chapel, when it was again celebrated in the choir for the first time.^h

The abbey church of Westminster, though stripped of much of its internal splendor by king Henry the VIIIth, and greatly damaged in the civil wars of Charles the first's time, still remains among the finest monuments of ancient art which this country can furnish; and preserves at least the outline of its former grandeur.

The length of the building within the walls is three hundred and sixty feet; at the nave it is seventy-two feet broad; and at the cross a hundred and ninety-five. The arches which separate the body of the church from the side ailes are supported by forty-eight pillars, each composed of clusters of more slender ones. These pillars are terminated at the east end by a sweep, enclosing the chapel of king Edward the Confessor in a kind of semi-circle.ⁱ The chapels exclusive of king Henry the seventh's, which is a distinct structure joined to the abbey, stand, ten in number, round the chapel of king Edward the Confessor. They are king Henry the fifth's, St. Andrew's, St. Michael's, St. John the Evangelist's, St. Erasmus's or Islip's chapel, St. John Baptist's, St. Paul's, St. Nicholas's, St. Edmund's, and St. Benedict's.

Cartae ad Westmonasteriense Coenobium, infra Comitatum Middlesexiae, spectantes.

[Ex Historia fundacionis Abbatie Westmonasteriensis per Ricardum Sporley, Monachum ejusdem loci, in Bibliotheca Cottoniana sub effigie Claudii A. VIII.]

Pro Fundacione hujus Abbatie Westmonasterii, et dedicatione ejusdem, ex antiquitate patet evidenter ex vetustissimo Cronicarum libro, veteri Anglorum sive Saxonum lingua conscripto. Cap. i.

PRIMITIVO tempore Christiane fidei inter Britones habite, hoc est a diebus Lucii Regis eorundem, qui primus in hoc regno, id est, sub anno gracie C.lxxxiv., legem divinam simul, et sancte regenerationis lavacrum legitur suscepisse, iste locus ad honorem Dei fundatus et consecratus fuerat, atque ad regiam sepulturam, regaliumque repositorium specialiter erat deputatus. Qui quidem locus in eadem per multa regum tempora permansit dignitate, quousque seviente, per totam Britanniam gravissima Dioclesiani Imperatoris persecucione, dejectum est inter cætera hoc ipsum Christianorum habitaculum, ac deinde, juxta morem ritumque gentilium, in prophanum Apollinis templum sacrilega potestate commutatum. Sicque factum est, ut ubi prius in sua Deus colebatur ecclesia, ibidem postea fierent idolorum sacrificia, et ablata memoria Christianorum fidelium, caput efficeretur immolationis regum paganorum. Evolutis itaque, sub hac tempestate, non paucis annorum curriculis, sed et multo postea tempore, languescente demum Brittanorum fide et justitia, convenit, per vices, in diversas Britannie partes incredule gentis Anglorum et Saxonum multitudo copiosa. Qui tandem totius Insule nacti dominium, secundum patrias leges, in cunctis regni provinciis, aras et phana diis suis erigunt, ecclesias Christi subvertunt, Christianos ejiciunt, et paganismi cultum in omnes fines terre sue dilatant. Rediit itaque veteris abhominacionis ubique sententia; a sua Britones expelluntur patria, immolat Diane Londonia, thurificat Apollini suburbana Thorneia, et vanis erroribus circumquaque seducta regio paganisat universa. Fuerat autem ipsa Thorneia insula Thamensi fluvio circumdata, ab occidente civitatis posita, que nunc plaga Westmonasterii est appellata. Anglorum denique populo tenebris ignorancie diucius eccæcato illuxit sol justicie, Dominus oriens ex alto nempe, sub anno gracie sexcentesimo quarto, beatus Gregorius misit in Britanniam servum Dei Augustinum monachum, una cum aliis ejusdem regionis viris clarissimis, Mellito scilicet et Justo, atque Laurencio, reliquisque multis, quibus orientalem regni plagam, id est, Kanciam ingressis, et verbum salutis eterne ibidem predicantibus, rex ipse nomine Ethelbertus, gracie sancti Spiritus illustratus, cum populo sibi subdito, relicto mox gentilitatis errore, sacre fidei doctrinam, simul et baptismi gratiam consecutus est salutarem. Denique rex Orientalium Saxonum Sebertus, dicti regis Ethelberti ex sorore nepos, similiter accepto sancte regenerationis lavacro, dejecit funditus Apollinis templum prope London in Thornensi insula, ut dictum est, situatum, et Ecclesiam ibidem in honore beati Petri apostolorum principis, devote fundavit et construxit, quam postea idem celestis claviger, in spiritu, cum supernorum civium comitatu, Deo et sibi consecravit.

TEMPORE quo rex Ethelbertus, qui regnavit in Kancia, predicante beato Augustino, fidem sacram suscepit; nepos quoque ejus Sebertus, qui Orientalibus Saxonibus prefuit, fidem, beato Mellito predicante, suscepit. Igitur in Londonia civitate, rex Cantuariorum Ethelbertus, juxta muros, ecclesiam in honore beati Pauli construens, episcopali eam sede voluit esse sublimem. Cui Sanctus Mellitus, quem beatus papa Gregorius, cum pluribus aliis, in adjutorium miserat Augustino, merito simul et honore pontificali, primus omnium prefuit. Sebertus autem, rex Essexie, beato Petro devotus, in occidentali parte ejusdem civitatis extra muros, in honore beati Petri, Monasterium insigne fundavit, multis illud donariis ornans, et ditans possessionibus. Venerat autem tempus, quo ecclesia in eo fuerat dedicanda, paratisque omnibus pro loco, pro tempore, pro monasterii dignitate, agente etiam ea nocte in tentoriis episcopo, dies crastina prestolabatur; magna plebis expectacio, que adhuc rudis in fide, hiis solenniis interesse non solum pro devocione, sed etiam pro admiracione gaudebat. Eadem nocte piscatori cuidam in Thamensis fluvii, qui eidem monasterio subter fuit, ulteriori ripa, in habitu peregrino, beatus Petrus apparens, promissa mercede, transponi se ab eodem, et peccit, et promeruit. Egressus autem e navicula, ecclesiam, piscatore cernente, ingreditur; et ecce subito lux celestis emicuit, miroque splendore collustrans omnia, noctem convertit in diem. Affuit cum apostolo multitudo civium supernorum, et choris Christum dicens preeuntibus, melodia insonuit; omnia plena lumine, omnia refecta dulcedine, aures angelice vocis mulcebat jocunditas, nares indicibilis odoris fragrantia perfundebat, oculos lux etherea illustrabat. Videbantur quasi mixta terrena celestibus, humana conjuncta divinis, et, quasi in scala Jacobi, angeli descendentes et ascendentes, in illis sacris solempniis, visebantur. Quid plura? Peractis omnibus, que ad ecclesie dedicacionem spectant, solempniis, rediit ad piscatorem piscium piscator egregius hominum; quem, cum, divini luminis fulgore perterritum, alienatum pene sensibus reperisset, blanda consolacione reddidit hominem sibi, animum rationi.

Ingredientes cimbam simul uterque piscator inter loquendum apostolus hominem eisdem, quibus se quondam magister suus conveniens verbis, 'Nunquid ait pulmentarium non habes?' Et ille, timui enim inconsuete lucis perfusione stupidus, cum expectacione tui detentus nihil cepi, sed promissam a te mercedem, securus expectavi. Ad hec apostolus, 'Laxa nunc inquit recia incapturam.' Paruit imperanti piscator, et mox implevit rete piscium maxima multitudo, quibus ad ripam extractis, Hunc, inquit, salmonem, Apostolus, qui ceteris magnitudine, precioque precellit, Mellito ex mea parte piscem defer episcopo; pro nautica vero mercede, cetera tibi tolle. Ego sum Petrus qui loquor tecum, qui cum meis concivibus constructam in meo nomine basilicam dedicavi, episcopalemque benedictionem mee sanctificationis auctoritate preveni. Dic ergo pontifici que vidisti et audisti, tuoque sermoni signa parietibus impressa, testimonium perhibebunt. Supersedeat igitur dedicacioni, suppleat quod omisimus, Dominici scilicet corporis et sanguinis sacro-sancta misteria, populumque sermone erudiens, et confirmans benedictione, notificet omnibus hunc me locum crebro visitaturum; hic me fidelium votis ac precibus affuturum, sobrie vero, juste, et pie, in hoc loco viventibus, celi januam reseraturum. Hiis dictis clavicularius celestis disparuit, et jam nocturnis tenebris finem dedit aurora, cum beato Mellito, ut putabat, ad future dedicacionis celebranda misteria processuro, cum pisce piscator occurrit, quem cum episcopo resignasset, omnia, que ei ab apostolo fuerant mandata, prosequitur. Stupet pontifex, reseratisque sacre jam basilice valvis, videt pavementum utriusque alphabeti inscripcione signatum, parietem bis senis in locis sanctificatis oleo litum, tot cereorum reliquias duodenis crucibus inherere; et quasi recenti respersione adhuc cuncta madescere. Nihil ulterius ambiguitatis de hiis que piscator astruxerat, in cujusquam animo potuit residere, cujus assercioni signa celestia testabantur. Refert hoc episcopus populo, et mox una vox omnium pulsat celos laudantium Deum, et benedicentium, qui ad fidem omnium confirmandam, in hujus templi sanctissimi dedicationem celi terreque patriam unam fecit rempublicam. Dat fidem miraculo piscatoris illius tota successio, que, sicut a patre acceperat, totius emolumentum, quod ei ars illa deinceps conferret, beato Petro, eique servientibus offerre decimas non desineret.

Capitulum tertium, de eadem materia, prout reperitur in vita Sancti Melliti Episcopi Londinensis, contemporanei Sancti Augustini, &c.

ANNO Dominice incarnationis sexcentesimo quarto, beatus Augustinus Britanniarum archiepiscopus, ordinavit duos episcopos, Mellitum et Justum; Mellitum ad predicandum provincie Orientalium-Saxonum, qui Thamensi fluvio dirimuntur a Kancia, et ipsi orientali mari contigui, quorum metropolis Londonia civitas est super ripam Thamensis fluminis posita, et ipsa multorum emporium populorum terra marique venientium. In qua gente, tunc temporis, Sebertus, nepos Ethelberti regis ex sororcula, sub ejusdem Ethelberti potestate positus regnabat. Ubi vero hec provincia, cum ipso rege, verbum veritatis predicante beato Mellito suscepit, fecit rex Ethelbertus in civitate Londonia ecclesiam Sancti Pauli apostoli, in qua locum sedis episcopalis, et ipse Sanctus Mellitus et successores ejus haberent. Beatum vero Justum, in ipsa Kancia, Deo dilectus pater Augustinus episcopum ordinavit, in civitate Roffensi, in qua rex Ethelbertus beati Andree apostoli ecclesiam fecit, quam vero dilectus Deo et supernis civibus mellifluus Mellitus extiterit, etiam in inclita ecclesia, que sub urbe Londonia ab occidente sua attollit fastigia, et ab ipsa plaga Westmonasterium est appellata, divinitus clarescit; cujus dedicationis officium sui honori decretum per se beatissimus apostolorum princeps Petrus, pro ipso Mellito hoc ordine explevit. Venerat idem pontifex paratis rebus ad hanc dedicationem, et fixis tentoriis a dimidio miliario, crastinum dominici diei diluculum expectabat; ipsa igitur nocte dominica, etherius ille janitor stans in ulteriori Thamensis fluvii ripa, qui ipsum monasterium alluit, vocato piscatore qui tunc noctis fluvialem predam exercebat, transponi se ad illam ecclesiam, promissa mercede, postulat, expositusque prestolari se jubet donec redeat. Interea nauta, dum expectat, dum stupide et trepide que sit illa tam ignote persone majestas, non mortale spirans, secum reputat, conspicatur repente totam ecclesiam supernis luminaribus flammescere, populosum candelorum chorum nunc intus, nunc foris, ecclesiam, cum angelicis concentibus ambire. Audit et insuetam mortalibus, celestis suavitate armonie, poteratque, si prius interfuisset, ecclesiastice dedicationis morem perpendere, sed pre timore tante visionis vix poterat spirare. Exacto tandem omni sacramento dedicationis, dux sidereus ducem suum repetit exanimatum pavore, clementissime lenit, utque de tam salutiferis misteriis que vidit, amplius confidat, instruit. Cum ergo, remigantes superiori ripe appropinquarent, summus apostolus percunctaret hominem, an aliquid ipsa nocte cepisset; illo prorsus negante, nunc inquit, Jace rete et capias habundanter; paruit, et continuo plenum rete traxit; omnes erant pene ejusdem generis pisces, preter unum mire enormitatis esicium; Hunc, inquit apostolus, maximum piscem representa mane Mellito pontifici, ex nostra benedictione, ceteri omnes sunt mercedis et ditionis tue. Hujus generis copia habundabis in vita tua, et longo tempore post te progenies tua; tamen ne piscari ultra audeatis in celebritate dominica. Dic etiam episcopo cum nostro munere ne ecclesiam mihi paratam sollicitus sit dedicare, quia hanc ego modo dedicavi per me, sicut apertis indiciis poterit videre, quamquam hoc jam comperit ex mea revelatione, tantum quod restat missas dedicationis populo confluente peragat, et absolutionem ac benedictionem mea vice impendat. Ac ne quid dubites de auctoris majestate, ego sum Petrus apostolus Jesu Christi Domini nostri, qui hec loquor tibi, et mando ei. Ut ergo ille omnia visa et audita, mane episcopo retulit, et apostolico munere in pisce mirando fidem fecit, hic nomine et pietate Mellitus Domino protinus in beato suffragatore suo Petro graciaram favos gratissime mellificavit. Ecclesiam alatis pedibus caritatis irrupit. Videt totam Jordanicis fluentis baptizatam, pavimenta tipicis caracteribus inscripta, parietes duodenis crucibus crismatos, totidem cereorum conflagratorum reliquias. Quid amplius faceret edituus domini in domo sibi perfecta et consecrata, missas celebravit, populum absolvit, ac benedixit, et Deo possessori domus sue, regique regnanti in aula sua gloriam et honorem et benedictionem imperpetuum dedit.

ILLUSTRAT urbem Londonie regius ampnis equoria subterfluens vastitate Thamesis, nunc emittens itemque recipiens fluctus cursu et recurso pelagi et fluminis, insulamque Thorneie dictam tingit, ab urbe duobus miliaribus. Complacitum est Deo, ut creditur, et beato apostolorum principi, in hac insula mansionem parari sibi, in qua et Deus in suo coleretur apostolo, et per ejus patrocinium et interventum misereatur supplici populo suo. Instat ergo predives Christicola Sebertus in fundanda ecclesia, brevique tempore perfectam reddidit instanti labore et opera. Commonuit interea ejus diocesis presulem Mellitum, ut beato Mellito cordis Petro fundatum consecraret locum. Addito Dei minister opere perfecto gaudet de beati Petri honore, diemque denominat quo ad dedicandum velit exsolvere; parantur interea que erant tante dedicationi necessaria, et annunciantur circumquaque manentibus deicolis, ut accurrant ad celestium nuptiarum celebria solempnia. Statutum diem prevenit Deo dilectus pontifex Mellitus, longeque a constructa ecclesia dimidio miliario ad vespera sancte diei tentoria candescunt eminens: tumor enim Thamesinus obtunderat undique Thornensem insulam, et intrare volentibus non nisi navigio aliquam affectabat viam. Clauditur celum nocturna caligine, et requiescunt singula, celitus indulto sopore; diurnosque labores nocturne absolvunt reliquie, cum celestis dignatio omnem acceptans devocionem humilis et quieti cordis clare intendit electi gloriam clientis. Audite queso et cunctis mentibus percipite, quam sublimi prerogativa Thornensem insulam princeps apostolorum sibi dignatus sit consecrare, et quam fiducialiter in ea Deo servientes ejus debeant suffragia implorare. Omnibus, ut dictum est, sompno oppressis, adest ipse pastor noster beatus Petrus, super ripam Thamesie, visum in alia fluvii parte piscatorem inclamat ad se venire, qui si vellet, et in ipsa insula poterat apparuisse. Sed voluit, ut arbitrator, testem habere operis agendi hominem officii sui, unde bis terque accitum piscatorem habet cum navi. Transducit tandem petentem apostolum, non sine admiratione tamen, quid ignotus ille et in illa omnium rerum quiete petere vellet trans fluvium. Transvectus celi claviger commonet illic expectare socium, laborisque sui certissimum pollicetur premium. Evadit e navi ad siccum, illoque spectante, terre infigens baculum creat post se fontem fluidum; processusque paululum item infigendo qui ferebat baculum potestate sua educit et alterum; qui duo fontes longo defluerunt tempore, donec absorberentur in fluminis alveo, litus devorante equoreo reumate. Hoc in ducis sui intuitu peracto, vadit ad sibi delegatam ecclesiam, comitantur eum celestes chori celestem melodificantes armoniam, vocesque angelice ad usque celsitudinem personuere etheream. Nova Dei nupta, consecrante eo qui celum claudit et aperit, celestibus resplendet luminaribus, totoque solis lucente ambitu candidatus insulam illustrat exercitus; patescunt desuper ethera, quodque agit apostolus in terra, actum favet in celis divine magestatis potencia. Spectator stupet attonitus, nedum discedere posset, permanendi caret viribus, tenetur solo corporis tremore sui inops, apostolico nutu ligatus. Si se haberet in suo jure, discessisset utique, sed retinetur apostolicis vinculis, absolvendus testimonio gloriose visionis. Peracto ad quod venerat officio, ad nautam suum redit apostolus tremebundum; ne paveat amplius blandis suadet sermonibus. Ne, inquit, timeas super hiis que audisti et vidisti, sunt enim ita ex voluntate Domini, michique ne dubites audita et visa edicere, ut sciam utrum, obstante pavore, potueris visorum capax esse, et quid per te notaveris gestam rem et actorem significare. Edocente diucius apostolo, pavor abicitur, fiducia loquendi inducitur, tandemque, resumtis viribus, ad responsum piscator * resolvitur; licet domine mi scienciam meam grandis excesserit visio, te jubente dicam quod sencio, voces cantantium mira suavitate audivi, claritatem magni luminis vidi, et ad hec, ultra quam sciam extimui: Tu vero, domine mi, quis vel quid sis certius nescio, sed aliquid boni esse te credens non dubito. Tunc apostolus sic recepit confitentem: Quem, inquit, bonum bene percipis, apercius intellige, que etiam expones aliis. Ego sum Christi apostolus Petrus, cui hanc ecclesiam fabricavit michi ille meus amicus Sebertus, pro cuius amore et devocione, locique ejus eterna sanctificatione, per meipsum volui eam Deo et mihi consecrare. Que facta sunt jam tu ipse vidisti et audisti; in his que restant obsecundato michi; facto die adi Mellitum episcopum, rem ut est gesta edoce illum. Ipse adveniens signa consecrationis crismate illitis parietibus poterit videre, in hiis jam suo non indigemus labore. Verum cetera, id est, missas et ministerium perficiat episcopale, ad testimonium ergo visionis tue et allocutionis nostre retia proicias in flumine, cedetque tibi nostro interventu prospere. De captis piscibus unum illi presentabis mea ex parte, ut scilicet et de relatis tibi credat, et que a me illi dixeris exequens perficiat, tametsi credo quia jam illi nostre accionis aliquid celitus sit ostensum, ut tuum cercius confirmetur alloquium. Te etiam commoneo ne in dominica nocte vel die amplius velis piscari, cedetque in prosperum tibi, tueque posteritati future, proficietisque plurimum in piscatoria arte. Erat enim nox dominica cum hic piscator visione et allocutione usus est apostolica. Hiis dictis apostolus ejus visibus subtrahitur, celoque receptus piscatori relicto in captura copiosissime, ut promiserat, auxiliatur. Expansis enim retibus in flumine tantam piscium, quos salmones nuncupant, copiam traxit in litore, ut vix recia captis possent sufficere. Credulus piscator apostolice largitati facto die adest puericie presulis designati, novoque modo dictis illum salutatur beati Petri, et jussa dicens munus pariter exponit quod miserat illi. Assurgit episcopus devotissime, graciasque Deo et apostolo agens letabatur se memorari et munerari a tanto celorum principe. Ingrediens autem ecclesiam, ubi oravit diligencius, circuiens et intuens parietes sacro signatos invenit crismate, et signa defixarum candelarum apparen- cia in pariete. Excitis ergo omnibus, undique a plateis, et vicis, a civitate occurrit et oppidis, devotisque assunt animis missarum celebracioni Deo electi presulis, habitu- que sermone de re gesta, et de reliquis animarum profec- tibus suscitantur quamplures ad letabundos pie compunc- tionis gemitus, graciasque Deo et apostolo suo agentes, cum festivo gaudio propriis remittuntur quisque mansio- nibus. Consecrata ecclesia, ut nova Dei sponsa, novum nomen obtinuit, vetusque nomen Thorneye, id est spine insula, amisit, et a civitatis situ, occidentale monasterium nomen cepit. Acta sunt hec regis Cantuarie Ethelberti tempore; quo tocius carnis viam ingresso, multisque ne- cilegenciis habita est eadem ecclesia, utpote non adeo magna, usque ad regnum regis Offe, regis Orientalium-Saxonum. Hic itaque diligencius colens apostoli memo- riam, opere ampliavit ecclesiam. Hec Sulcardus.

Capitulum quintum, de eadem materia ut habetur in qua- dam Cronica que intitulum liber Regius, libro primo, prope finem.

REGES autem Orientalium-Saxonum dominabantur in Essexia, et Middlesexia, et dimidia Hertfordia. In hiis itaque plagis regnavit quondam Sebertus rex, qui cum avunculo suo Ethelberto Cantuariorum rege, utrorumque proceribus, a sancto Augustino baptizatus, in occidentali Londonii parte, de quodam phano, quod nunc Apol- linis habebatur, et locus Thorneya dictus, basilicam Deo et sancto Petro fabricavit, sanctoque Mellito Londoniensi episcopo commendandam commendavit; qui cum die statuta quadam dominica, eam dedicare disposuisset, nocte precedente cuidam piscatori, Edrico nomine, sanctus Pe- trus apparens, et quasi mercede compacta, in navicula cum eodem piscatore Thamensem fluvium transfretans prefatam basilicam cum celestium comitatu, et laudibus angelicis, vidente tremebundo prenominate piscatore, Deo et sibi consecravit. Mane autem facto, sanctus Pontifex, piscatore nuncio, a sancto Petro hoc mandatum accepit, ut ecclesiam de se dedicatam rededicare non presumeret, signa dedicacionis universa reperiens, sed transfretans (in- accessibilis quippe absque navigio undique erat locus ille) et signa dedicacionis videns, quod restabat, scilicet mis- sam, celebraret, penitentibus pro arbitrio afflictionis dies indulgeret, et sic finitis omnibus Dei et suam benediccio- nem populo daret, signa autem dedicacionis hec erant: parietes intrinsecus et extra madidi, oleum et cruces in ipsis, cereique semicombusti alphabetum utrumque Gre- cum et Latinum in atrio depictum, magna aqua a Sancto Petro benedicta, in medio altare oleo perfusum, incensum in ipso altari super tres cruces in eodem sculptas semi- combustum, cujus reliquum tunc temporis loci illius mo- nachi noviter adunati, diligenter collectum in scrinio re- condiderunt. Dedicato itaque cenobio quod hactenus Westmonasterium, eo quod in civitatis occidentali parte situm sit, dicitur, ad piscatorem suum rediens sanctus Petrus, ab interrogato qualiter se haberet responsum ac- cepit, pre timore se pene fore mortuum insuete claritatis visione, et jubilancium inaudito strepitu, cujus timorem compescens jussit ut se reducens mereretur naulum. Cum itaque in medio fluminis devenissent, interrogatus ab apos- tolo, si ipsa nocte ars sua ei aliquid contulisset, respondet se nihil cepisse. Ad quem apostolus, mitte, inquit, in dextram navicule rete, et coadjutor tuus ero, novi enim et ego aliquantisper artem piscandi; quod cum fecisset, tantam ejus piscis, qui Esicius dicitur, cepit copiam, ut navicula pene mergeretur. Cui apostolus, sume, inquit, extremum quem cepisti piscem, et ex mea parte defer episcopo pro munere. Decimacionem nunc dedicate ec- clesie dabis pro graciaram accione, ceterum vero tibi tolle pro naulo. Sed et hujus dedicacionis signum erit perpe- tuum, quod tu, et tota sequens hujus artis progenies, hu- jus generis piscium decimacionem illi ecclesie dabitis im- perpetuum, quatinus vobis sit capiendi facultas, fluminis- que fecunditas. Orationisque causa eam ecclesiam fre- quantantibus erit benedictio, et possessiones ei largientibus eterna in celis retribucio. Pavens igitur piscator, et ad- mirans cum miraculo jubentis imperium, quisnam esset tanta promittens, inquit. Cui apostolus, ego sum, in- quid, quem Christiani sanctum Petrum apostolum vocant, qui hanc ecclesiam meam, hac nocte, Deo dedicavi. Hec dicens apostolus, et de navi exiens disparuit. Ab illa itaque usque in hodiernam diem ejus piscatoris progenies Esiciorum decimacionem Deo et sancto Petro, prout au- dent, conferunt. Presbiteri quippe, quorum parochiani ipsi piscatores existunt, malicia placitorum crescente et dolo, arctant ipsos piscatores, ut sancti Petri decimacio- nem sibi conferant, propter quod et flumini ingerunt sterilitatem, et sibi maledictionem; asserunt enim etiam ipsi piscatores, ob hoc ipsam fluminis esse sterilitatem, et ob capiendi difficultatem se maximam pati penuriam, &c. Rex autem Sebertus, soluto nature debito, in prefata ec- clesia quam ipse construxerat, juxta altare quod S. Petrus dedicaverat, cum conjuge sua tumulatur.

Item de dedicacione hujus loci Westmonasterii, sic legitur in vita Sancti Dunstani. Cap. vj.

BEATUS presul Dunstanus, cum ecclesiis sibi com- missis curiose invigilaret, a perfectis viris probatisque per- sonis didicit, quanta dignacione beatus Petrus, apostolo- rum princeps, oratorium suum quod Westmonasterium di- citur insignivisset, et per seipsum dedicavisset, regi, vide- licet Edgardo persuadet, ut ob veneracionem tanti apostoli loci honori intendat, &c.

Item de renovatione Westmonasterii sic habetur in vita S. Regis et Confessoris Edwardi, ex literis cujusdam sancti viri et Monachi inclusi, nomine Wulfini, facta sibi celi- tus revelacione per sanctum Petrum apostolum.

Est autem michi locus in occidentali parte Londonie a me electus, michi dilectus, quem quondam michi propriis manibus consecravi, mea nobilitavi presencia, divinis in- super miraculis illustravi. Thorneya nomen est loci, qui quondam ob peccata populi, barbarorum traditus potes- tati, pauperrimus ex divite, humilis ex sublimi, ex nobili factus est contemptibilis. Hunc rex, me precipiente, in habitaculum monachorum suscipiet reparandum, subli- mandum, edificiis et possessionibus ampliandum. Non erit ibi aliud nisi domus Dei et porta celi. Ibi erigenda est scala illa per quam descendentes et ascendentes angeli preces et vota hominum Deo perferant, et referant gratiam. Inde ascendentes reserabo januam paradisi, ut ex officio, quod meus michi dominus ac salvator injunxit, et ligatos absolvam, et absolutos suscipiam, et quam eis delictum obcluserat, justificatis portam patrie celestis aperiam, &c.

Item de dedicatione Westmonasterii sic legimus in fine cujusdam sermonis de S. Petro editi, et vetustissima litera conscripti, cujus tale est principium et infra.

VENIT huc in partes Cesaree Philippi &c. Cum igitur tantam habeat potestatem, tantam dignitatem nos-ter advocatus, honoremus illum, amemus eum, serviamus ei in sanctitate et justitia omnibus diebus nostris, nos, inquam, quos spirituales adoptavit in filios, quos in ecclesia sua adunavit, quam propriam elegit in filiam, quam majestate sue presencie nobilitavit, quam propriis manibus consecravit; celebremus igitur devote solempnitatem illius, &c.

Item sic habetur in Cronica R. Cestrensis, sive Polycronicon.

QUIDAM ad instigationem regis Ethelberti construxit ecclesiam beato Petro in occidentali parte urbis Londonie in loco, qui Thorneya dicebatur, quod sonat spinarum Insula, nunc autem dicitur Westmonasterium.

[MSS. Cotton. Titus A. VIII. fol. 4 b. Faustina A. III. fol. 17.]

REGNANTE Domino nostro Jesu Christo in perpetuum Ego Eadgarus Dei gratia Anglorum rex, omnibus episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, vicecomitibus, centenariis, ceterisque agentibus, presentibus scilicet et futuris, salutem. Dignum et conveniens est Clementie principali inter ceteras actiones illud quod ad salutem anime pertinet quod pro divino amore postulatur, pio auditu suscipere et studiose ad effectum perducere quatenus de caducis rebus presentis seculi que nunquam sine inquinamento et erumpna possidentur emundatio et vite eterne securitas adquiratur juxta preceptum Domini dicentis 'Date Elemosinam et omnia munda sunt vobis, ergo dando elemosinam, juxta hoc ipsius dictum, oportet nos emercari peccatorum nostrorum emundacionem ut dum ecclesiis Christi impartimur congrua beneficia et justas bonorum virorum petitiones efficaciter audimus retributorem domini ex hoc habere mereamur. Igitur postquam dono Dei et paterna successione in regnum Anglorum inthronizatus et confirmatus fui ubi vidi ecclesias dei tam peccatis exigentibus quam crebris barbarorum irruptionibus dirutas, et maxime sanctam et apostolicam vitam, id est monachicum ordinem, per omnes regni mei provincias funditus deperisse, graviter dolens, et concilium a sancto spiritu accipiens, Dunstano archiepiscopo et Adthelwoldo Wynton' episcopo indixi ut omnia monasteria que inter terminum totius Anglie sita sunt, supra vel infra circumirent, ac reedificarent possessiones que ad fiscum redacte erant de ipsis monasteris vel ab aliis secularibus potestatibus peruase ubicumque, Cartis vel Testimoniis recognoscerent, mea auctoritate freti, in integrum restituerent, et tanquam dicente michi domino a capite incipe inprimis ecclesiam specialis patroni ac protectoris nostri beati Petri que sita est in loco terribili qui ab incolis Thorneye nuncupatur ab occidente scilicet urbis London' que olim, id est dominice incarnationis anno DC^{mo}. iij. beati Adalbrihti hortatu, primi Anglorum regis Christiani, destructo prius ibidem abhominacionis templo regum paganorum a Sabertho predivite quodam subregulo London' nepote, uidelicet ipsius regis, constructa est, et non ab alio sed ab ipso sancto Petro apostolorum principe in suum ipsius proprium honorem dedicata, dehinc ab Offa et Kenulpho regibus celeberrimis possessionum privilegiis et variis ornamentorum speciebus vehementer fuerat ditata, et in qua sedes regia et locus eciam consecracionis regum antiquus erat, hanc precepi ut studiosi restruerent et omnes possessiones ejus readimarent et ipse de dominicatis terris meis aliquanta addidi, et cartis atque legitimis testibus corroboravi. Deinde, succedente tempore, concilio habito intra basilicam ipsam presidente me cum filio meo Edwardo, et eodem archiepiscopo venerabili Dunstano et universis episcopis et baronibus meis, secutus exemplum majorum meorum, renovavi, addidi, et corroboravi cartas, et privilegia ejusdem loci et ad apostolicam sedem legenda et confirmanda transmissi, atque legitima concessione in hunc modum astipulata recepi. 'Johannes episcopus Urbis Rome, servus servorum Dei, domino excellentissimo Edgardo filio suo regi Anglorum salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Quia litteris tue celsitudinis fili Karissime nobis innotuisti de Monasterio sancti Petri specialis patroni tui, quod ab antiquis Anglie regibus a potestate London' sedis episcopi cum consilio pontificum ejusdem patrie fuerit creptum, et ab hinc sub regimine regum vel clarissimorum abbatum semper dispositum, et postulasti a nobis ut privilegium episcoporum de eodem monasterio factum nostro privilegio immo magis apostolorum principis roborarcimus auctoritate, libentissime secundum tue benevolencie petitionem facimus. Auctoritate siquidem beati Petri apostolorum principis, qui potestatem ligandi atque solvendi a domino accepit, cujusque nos vicarii existimus, stabilimus ut ipse locus regum preceptis et privilegiis apostolicis fultus, per omnia tempora sine repeticione cujuscunque Londonice urbis episcopi, aut alicujus judiciarie potestatis, vel cujuscunque prepotentis hominis cujuscunque ordinis vel dignitatis sit, semper sicut preoptat et expetit tua benevolentia ratus futuro tempore permaneat. Venerabiles igitur ejusdem loci fratres ydoneos ex se, vel ex quacunque voluerint congregacione, Abbates sive Decanos sibi per successiones eligendi ex auctoritate hujus sancte Romane sedis et nostra, sicut postulastis, amplius habeant potestatem ne impediuntur, auctoritate apostolica prohibemus neque per violenciam extranea persona introducatur nisi quam omnis concors congregatio elegerit. Preterea illi loco quicquid contuleris, vel collatum est, vel conferetur, divina auctoritate et nostra roboramus. Privilegia vero possessionum et dignitatum karissimi fratris nostri venerabilis Dunstani aliorumque fidelium ibidem indulta, necnon et privilegia vestra ad honorem Dei pertinencia que ibi instituere volueris gratanti affectu annuimus, confirmamus, et confirmando in perpetuum rata inviolataque stare decrevimus, et infractores eorum eterna maledictione dampnamus. Observatores autem hujus firmitatis gratiam et misericordiam a domino consequi mereantur. Causa igitur infractionis nostri privilegii ad posteros nostros perveniat. Dat. Ravenne ix^o kal. Februarii.' Cognoscat ergo magnitudo seu utilitas vestra quam decrevimus et in perpetuum mansurum jubemus atque constituimus, ut pro reverencia reliquiarum gloriosissimi apostoli Petri, et pro quiete monachorum ibidem Deo famulantium, honor et laus ejusdem ecclesie habeatur et observetur; id est ut quisquis fugitivorum pro quolibet scelere ad prefatam basilicam beati apostoli fugiens, procinctum ejus intraverit sive pedes, sive eques, sive de curia regali, sive de civitate, sive de villa, seu cujuscunque condicionis sit, quocunque delicto facinoris contra nos vel succedentes reges Anglorum, vel contra alium quemlibet fidelem, sancte ecclesie Dei forisfactus sit, relaxetur, et liberetur et vitam atque membra absque ulla contradictione obtineat. Preterea interminamur divina auctoritate et nostra ut neque nos neque successores nostri, neque quilibet episcopus vel archiepiscopus, nec quicunque de judiciaria potestate, in ipsam sanctam basilicam vel in manentes in ipsa, vel in homines qui cum sua substantia vel rebus ad ipsam tradere vel devovere se voluerint, nisi per voluntatem abbatis et suorum monachorum ullam unquam habeant potestatem sed sit hec sancta mater ecclesia peculiaris patroni nostri beati Petri apostoli libera et absoluta ab omni invasione vel inquietudine omnium hominum, cujuscunque ordinis vel potestatis esse vidcantur. In maneria vero vel curtes prefate basilice ubi in quascunque regiones vel pagos in regno nostro quicquid a die presenti ipsum monasterium possidere et dominari videtur, vel quod a deum timentibus hominibus per legitima cartarum instrumenta ibidem fuit concessum vel in antea est additum vel delcgatum, nec ad causas audiendas nec ad fidejussores tollendos, nec ad freda vel bannos exigendos, nec ad mansiones vel paratas faciendum, nec ullas redibiciones requirendas infra immunitatem sancti Petri ingredi vel requirere quoquo tempore presumatur, sed quicquid exinde fiscus noster exauctare poterat, omnia et ex omnibus pro mercedis nostre augmento sub integra et firmissima immunitate concedimus ad ipsum sanctum locum et imperpetuo confirmamus. Concedo eciam et confirmo omnes libertates et donaciones terrarum que a predictis regibus seu aliis sicut legitur in antiquo telligrapho libertatis ante me donate sunt: scilicet Hamne, Wynton', Mordun, Fentun, Aldenham, Bleccenham, Loyerlesge, quas tamen venerabilis Dunstanus a me, una cum predicto loco, emerat, necnon et libertates atque empciones quas idem Dunstanus, me credente, ab optimatibus meis mercatus est, et quas eciam coram legitimis testibus sigillo suo et anulo episcopali ibidem in usum fratrum prefate ecclesie in perpetuam perstrinxit possessionem. Nos itaque ad laudem nominis Dei et ad honorem sancti Petri terras que hic caraxantur ibidem donavimus, Holewelle, Decewrthe, Wattun', Cillingtun'. Hec igitur supradicta rura, cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus, et cum cenobio quod Stana vocatur, et omnibus sibi pertinentibus scilicet Tudington, Halgefurd, Feltham, Ecelesforde, priscis temporibus ad eandem perhibentur ecclesiam sancti Petri pertinere, sicut legitur, ut diximus, in antiquo Telligrapho libertatis quam rex Offa illi monasterio contulit: quando ecclesiis per universas regiones Anglorum recuperativa privilegia, Wilfredo archiepiscopo hortante, scribere jussit quod cenobium Stanense jam olim regulari et monachorum examine pollebat, postea vero hostili quadam expedicione, fratribus dispersis, solotenus dirutum. Hanc eandem itaque libertatem prefate ecclesie sancti Petri principis apostolorum concessi, quia locus predictus, qui templum fuerat dudum Apollinis, Dei providencia nunc mirabiliter ab ipso clavigero est consecratus ac dedicatus, quatinus ab omni seculari sit semper quieta servitute. Et ne quis presencium vel magis futurorum ambigat que sit illa libertas quam amabiliter et firmiter concedo, omnimodis cuncta illius monasterii possessio nullis sit unquam gravata oneribus nec expedicionis, nec pontis et arcis edificamine, nec juris regalis fragmine, nec furis apprehensione, et ut omnia simul comprehendam nil debet exsolvi, nec regi, nec regis preposito, vel episcopo, vel duci, vel ulli hominum, sed omnia debita exsolvant jugiter que in ipsa dominacione fuerint ad supradictum sanctum locum secundum quod ordinaverunt fratres ejusdem cenobii. Obsecramus eciam omnes successores nostros, reges et principes, per sanctam et individuum Trinitatem et per adventum justii judicis, ut quemadmodum ex munificencia antecessorum nostrorum ipse locus videtur esse ditatus, nullus episcoporum vel abbatum aut eorum ordinatores, vel quelibet persona possit quoquo ordine de loco ipso aliquid auferre aut aliquam potestatem sibi in ipso monasterio usurpare, vel aliquid quasi per commutationis titulum absque voluntate ipsius congregacionis, vel nostrum permissum, minuere, aut calices, aut cruces, seu indumenta altaris, vel sacros codices, aurum, argentum, vel qualemcunque speciem ibidem collatam auferre, vel alias deferre presumat; sed liceat ipsi congregacioni, quod sibi per rectam delcgacionem collatum est, perpecius possidere, et pro stabilitate regni nostri jugiter exorare quod nos, pro Dei amore et reverencia sancti apostoli, et adipiscenda vita eterna, hoc beneficium ad locum illum terribilem et sanctum, cum consilio pontificum et illustrium virorum nostrorum procerum, gratissimo animo et integra voluntate nisi sumus prestitisse, eo videlicet ordine ut sicut tempore predecessorum meorum ibidem chorus psallencium per turmas fuit institutus, ita die noctuque in loco ipso celebretur. Si autem quispiam hanc nostram auctoritatem vel immunitatem infringere voluerit, et alios ad hoc conduxerit, unusquisque pro seipso libras v. partibus sancti Petri solvat, et, ut dictum est, quicquid ex inde fiscus noster ad partem nostram separare poterat in luminaribus vel stipendiis monachorum, seu etiam elemosinis pauperum ipsius monasterii, perenniter per nostra oracula ad integrum sit concessum atque indultum. Et ut hec auctoritas nostris et futuris temporibus circa ipsum sanctum locum perenniter firma et inviolata permaneat, vel per omnia tempora illesa custodiatur atque conservetur, et ab omnibus optimatibus nostris et iudicibus publicis et privatis melius ac certius credatur, manus nostre subscriptionis subtus eam decrevimus roborare, et de sigillo nostro jussimus sigillare. NUM. IV.

[Autographum in Bibliotheca Hattoniana. A. 1640.]

IN nomine sancte et individue Trinitatis, ego Edwardus Ethelredi regis filius, gratia Dei Anglorum rex, futuris post me regibus, et omnium dignitatum gradibus, omniumque etatum hominibus salutem, et hujus rei noticiam. Scire vos volo quoniam tempore avorum meorum patrisque mei multa et gravia bellorum pericula afflixerunt gentem Anglorum, et ipsos, tam a suis, quam ab extraneis concitata, adeo ut pcne periclitata sit hereditaria regum successio, magnumque interstitium inter fratrem meum Eadmundum, qui patri meo mortuo successit, meque habitum sit, invadentibus regnum Suuegeno et Cnuto filio ejus, regibus Danorum, ac filiis ipsius Chnuti Haroldo et Hardechnuto; a quibus eciam alter meus frater Aelfredus crudeliter occisus est, solusque sicut Joas occisionem Otholice, sic ego illorum crudelitatem evasi. Tandem respectu misericordie Dei post plures annos ego Edwardus ad paternum regnum reaccessi, et eo potitus, sine ullo bellorum labore, sicut amabilis Deo Salomon tanta pace et rerum opulentia abundavi, ut nullus antecessorum regum similis mei fuerit in gloria et divitiis. Sed gracia Dei non me, ut assolet, ex opulencia superbia et contemptus invasit, immo cepi recogitare, cujus dono et auxilio ad regni culmen evasi, quoniam Dei est regnum et cui vult dat illud, et quia mundus transit et concupiscencia ejus, qui autem totum se subdit Deo feliciter regnat et perpetualiter dives est. Itaque deliberavi ire ad limina sublimium apostolorum Petri et Pauli, et ibi gracias agere pro collatis beneficiis, et exorare ut eam pacem firmaret Deus perpetuam mihi et posteris meis. Preparavi ergo et dinumeravi expensas necessarias itineri, et honorabilia dona que ferrem sanctis apostolis. Sed gravis^a super hac re mœror habebat optimates meos, utpote memores malorum que sub aliis regibus pertulerant, ne tanto domino et pio patrie rege absente, regnum noviter sedatum aliqua turbaretur hostilitate, et metuentes id quod et sanctus Ezechias, ne si forte in via aut egritudine aut alio incommodo deficerem, hereditariis regibus carerent, maxime quod nullum habebam filium. Itaque communi habito consilio, rogabant me ut ab hac intencione desisterem, pollicentes se satisfacturos Deo pro voto meo, tam in misarum et oracionum oblacione, quam in elemosinarum larga distribucione. Sed cum obnixè contra-dicerem, tandem utrisque placuit, ut mitterentur legati duo ab utraque parte Ealdridus^b et Heremannus^c episcopi, et abbates Welfricus et Aelfwinus qui apostolico meam voluntatem et votum et illorum petitionem indicarent; et secundum ejus sentenciam quam mihi mandaret, promisi me omnino facturum. Factum est ergo quod voluimus et venientes Romam legati nostri, ex voluntate Dei, invenerunt collectam synodum in eadem urbe. Cumque exposuissent meam voluntatem et suam petitionem coram ccl. episcopis et alia multitudine sanctorum patrum, tunc apostolicus, ex consultu sancte synodi, hanc epistolam mihi scripsit: ‘Leo episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilecto filio Eaduardo Anglorum regi, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Quoniam voluntatem tuam laudabilem et Deo gratam agnovimus, gratias agimus ei per quem reges regnant et principes justa decernunt. Sed quia prope est dominus in omni loco omnibus invocantibus eum in veritate, et sancti apostoli cum suo capite conjuncti unus spiritus sunt, et pias preces equaliter audiunt; et quia constat periclitari regionem Anglicam ex tua discessione, qui freno justicie sediciosos ejus motus cohibes, ex auctoritate Dei et sanctorum apostolorum, et sancte synodi absolvi-mus te a peccato illius voti pro quo Dei offensam times, et ab omnibus negligenciis et iniquitatibus tuis; ea nimirum potestate usi, quam dominus in beato Petro concessit nobis, dicens, Quecunque solveritis super terram, soluta erunt et in cœlis. Deinde precipimus tibi sub nomine sancte obediencie et penitencie, ut expensas quas ad iter istud paraveras pauperibus eroges, et cenobium monachorum in honore sancti Petri apostolorum principis, aut novum construas, aut vetustum emendes et augeas, et sufficientiam victualium fratribus de tuis redditibus constituas quatinus dum illi assidue inibi Deum laudaverint, et sanctis augeatur gloria et tibi indulgencia. Cui loco quicquid contuleris, vel collatum est, vel conferetur, ut ratum sit apostolica auctoritate precipimus, et ut semper habitatio monachorum sit et nuli laice persone nisi regi subdatur; et quecunque privilegia ibi instituere volueris ad honorem Dei pertinencia concedimus, et robustissima auctoritate confirmamus, et infractores eorum eterna maledictione damnamus.’ Hec et alia apostolici mandata cum referrent nobis legati, interea revelavit beatus Petrus cui-dam probabilis vite monacho incluso, nomine Wlfino, ^a voluntatem suam esse ut restruerem locum qui dicitur Westmonasterium, quod a tempore sancti Augustini, primi Anglorum episcopi, institutum, multaue veterum regum munificencia honoratum, propter vetustatem et frequentes bellorum tumultus pene videbatur destructum. Cumque hanc visionem mihi meisque retulisset, et apostolice literae equalia precepta detulissent, contuli voluntatem meam cum voluntate Dei, et cum tocius regni eleccione, dedidi me ad restruccionem ejusdem loci. Itaque decimari precepi omnem substantiam meam, tam in auro et argento quam in pecudibus et omni genere possessionis^b, et destruens veterem, novam a fundamentis basilicam construxi et constructam dedicari feci v. kal. Januarii: in qua collocavi ipsa die reliquias quas Martinus papa, et Leo, qui eum consecravit, dederunt Alfredo regi, et quas ipse a Carlomanno rege Francorum dari sibi impetravit; cujus filiam pater ejus Æthelwlfus rex, post mortem prime conjugis duxerat uxorem, quae ab ipso ad successorem ejus Æthelstanum, deinde ad Edgarum, ad ultimum ad nos pervenerunt, scilicet duas partes crucis Domini, et partem unius clavi, partemque tunice ejus inconsutilis, et de vestimentis sancte Marie, et reliquias apostolorum Petri et Pauli, André, Bartholomei, Barnabe, et aliorum plurimorum sanctorum, et quinque capsas aliis sanctorum reliquiis plenas; et statui ut quicumque reus majestatis regie vel cuiuslibet alterius offense ad locum in quo pausant iste reliquie confugerit, ejus rei, et membrorum, ac vite impunitatem consequatur. Eodem die renovavi, confirmavi, et emendavi privilegia que famosissimus avus meus Eadgarus, patruusque meus, deo amabilis, rex et martyr gloriosus Eaduardus, ejusdem Eadgari filius, et sanctissimus pater Dunstanus Cantuariensis archiepiscopus, ac piissimus rex Ætheldredus pater meus, illi loco contulerunt; meam quoque auctoritatem adjeci, augmentans decreta utilia, admonicione venerabilium archiepiscoporum Stigandi et Ealdredi et aliorum optimatum meorum, videlicet, ut ille locus in perpetuum ab omni seculari servicio sit liber, et secundum beati Benedicti tradicionem, post obitum abbatis, ex eadem congregacione eligatur alter qui dignus sit, aliorum verò nullus, nisi culpis promerentibus inibi inveniri nequiverit qui dignus sit tali officio fungi. Quod si evenerit quod absit, potestatem habeant de alio noto et familiari loco abbatem eligendi, cujus vita sapiencia et religione clarescat. Laicorum autem vel clericorum nemo ipsius loci dominium usurpare presumat. Possessiones vero que ibi a quibuscunque donate sunt, non abbas non ^c alia quelibet persona licenciam habeat vendendi vel extraneis dandi, sed regum munimine deinceps locus ipse tueatur, ipseque abbas regi soli serviens comissum sibi gregem spirituali et temporali pastu abundanter foveat. Concessi etiam et confirmavi donaciones que ab eisdem regibus ante me donate sunt, hoc est circa ipsum monasterium xvij. hidas et dimidiam, in Heandune xx, in Heamstede v, in Greneford xii et unam virgam, in Hanewelle viij, in Scepertune viij, in Sunnabyri vij, in Ealdenham x, in Decewyrthe iiij et unam virgam, in Wattune iiij et dimidiam, in Holewelle vj et dimidiam, in Hamme ij, in Wuntune^d iiij, in Kynlevedene v, in Fentune iiij, in Mordune x, in Aewelle ij, in Wereham^e vij, in Fillingtune iiij,^f in Cillingtune^g iiij, necnon et illas quas optimates mei meo tempore addiderunt, scilicet Leofield, Mulesham cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Agelricus Kylewendun cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Wlwinus Mapulderstede cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Gudermundus Kynlevedene et Raeine et Laecedune cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus, Alfricus Waenstede cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Atsereswerte Lygetun cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Ingulf Padesham^h cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus, Atsere Leosne cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Tostig Cleigate cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Alfwine Gottun-Aegete cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Wlstanus Deneham cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Siwardus dimidiam hydram in Agmodesham, et unam in Weodune. Leoffi de Lundonia ij. hidas et dimidiam in Wurmelea. Postremo ego ipse, pro spē retribucionis eterne, et pro remissione delictorum meorum, et pro animabus patris mei et matris mee et omnium parentum meorum, ad laudem omnipotentis Dei posui in dotalicium et in perpetuum hereditatem super altare varia ornamentorum genera quibus ecclesie serviretur vel in quotidianis vel solennibus ministeriis, et ad usus fratrum inibi Deo serviendum, de meo jure quod mihi soli competeat absque ullius reclamacione, vel contradiccione, ista; in primis Langtun cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Gibtslepe cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Stana cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Windlesoram cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Huuaet Hampstedeⁱ cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Stithenaece cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Aescewelle cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Dene cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Pertun cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Roteland cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Post mortem Edgithae regine, Cingismeae.^k Percoram cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Deorhyrste cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus. Relaxavi igitur istis et omnibus supranominatis terris consuetudines omnes et exacciones regalium et episcopialium ministrorum sicut antecessores mei reges prius fecerunt, ut nullis graventer oneribus expedicionum, nec poncium vel castrorum restruccionem, nec furis apprehensione. Et omnia que ad locum ipsum pertinent sint omnino libera, celle, ecclesie, cimiteria, terre, pascua, silve, venaciones, aque, piscaciones, cum redditibus, serviciis, debitis, oblacionibus, luminariibus, decimis, donariis, censu morthidis, legibus, consuetudinibus, causarum discussionibus, emendacionibus sive ecclesiasticis sive secularibus, et omnibus quecunque scriptis et testimonio bonorum hominum rememorari potuerunt, que a regibus concessa vel concedenda sunt, ut nullus ex his subtrahere, vel diminuere, aut disperdere qualibet occasione iudicio vel potestate presumat. Donavi etiam religioso abbati Eadwino, qui tunc illi loco preerat, et omnibus futuris post eum ibidem abbatibus in tota possessione monasterii, sacam et socam, theloneumque suum in terra et in aqua, et consuetudinem que dicitur Teames, latrones, latronumque capciones vel emissiones, et pacis fracturam, et pugnam in domo factam, et domus invasionem, et omnes assaultus in suo jure, in via et extra, in festo et extra, in urbe et extra, et omnes leges et consuetudines tam plene et tam libere sicut eas habebam in manu mea. Et ut omnia concludam, nullus succedencium regum per vim aut per consuetudinem pastum ab eorum possessionibus exigat, sed omnimodam libertatem perpetualiter habeant. Post hanc donacionem excommunicaverunt omnes episcopi et abbates tocius Anglie et monachi ac clerici, secundum apostolici Leonis preceptum, eos qui hoc constitutum infringerent vel infringi permetterent, quantum in ipsis esset. Si quis vero hanc nostram dationem^l augere et amplificare voluerit, augeat Deus dies ejus prosperos hic et in futuro: si autem evenerit ut aliquis aut regum succedencium, vel alicujus persone homo, quod non optamus, diabolica temeritate fuerit elatus vel seductus, quatenus hoc nostrum statutum infringere vel minuere aut in aliud mutare velit, sciat se perpetuo anathemate damnatum, nisi tamen digna satisfaccione emendaverit. Sin autem emendacione fuerit indignus, ipse quidem cum Juda traditore gehenne ignibus cremabitur. Sed hec Carta nichilominus in sua libertate permanebit quamdiu Christiani nominis timor et amor in hac nostra gente perseveraverit. Ad ultimum, Cartam istam conscribi et sigillari jussi, et ipse manu mea signum sancte crucis impressi, et idoneos testes annotari precepi. Secunda Carta Sancti Regis Edwardi.

[MS. Cotton. Faust. A. III. fol. 30.]

IN nomine sancte et individue Trinitatis ego Edwardus Dei gratia Anglorum rex futuris post me regibus episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, vicecomitibus, et omnibus omnino Christianis salutem. Cum pie voluntatis desiderium et laudande devocionis intencio regalibus sit semper studiis adjuvanda, cura est sollicitudinis adhibenda ut ea que pro quiete religiose conservacionis sunt ordinata, nec dissimulacio negligere nec ulla valeat presumpcio perturbare. Sed sicut hoc quod ratio exigebat oportuit definiri ita quod definitum est non debet violari: quapropter noverit presencium futurorumque universitas quod fidelissimus noster Wlnothus abbas, et monachi monasterii beati apostolorum principis Petri peculiaris patroni nostri, adierunt serenitatem nostram, humiliter obsecrantes ut sicut antiqui et gloriosi Anglorum reges, Edgarus, Edwardus, Etheldredus, Edmundus, Cnhutus, et reliqui qui usque ad nostra tempora idem Westmonasterium supradicti sancti apostoli decretorum suorum sanctionibus contra iniquorum pervasionem munierant, atque episcoporum et apostolicorum consensu et auctoritate postulacione regia plenissime roborari poposcerant, ita nos, Dei nostri voluntatem in omnibus sequentes, et illos predecessores nostros in hoc fideliter imitantes, nostram illi monasterio adderemus, immo nostram sancionem illorum roboraremus. Et quum in ipsis diebus nostris, inter Robertum episcopum clerumque London' et abbatem prefati monasterii monachosque orta quedam contencio fuerat, episcopo et clero sibi volentibus in supradicto monasterio sancti Petri contra leges atque decreta supra memorata quasdam consuetudines et obsonia usurpare, et abbacie monachisque contra sese defendentibus regum et apostolicorum et maxime sancti Dunstani qui prius fuerat Londoniensis episcopus, et postea Cantuarie archiepiscopus, prolata privilegii auctoritate hujus convencionis causa coram episcopis et optimatibus regni nostri, et in presencia nostra ventilata et finita, nos demum justicie faventes diffinite cause consensus nostri vigorem prestaremus. Igitur fidelium nostrorum atque palatinorum usi consilio, et hoc prospicientes ipsi ecclesie et habitantibus in ea sine pertinentibus ad eam utile fore non solum in presenti sed et in futuro regum qui fuerunt ante nos decreta, sed et sancti Dunstani privilegium et Anglicorum episcoporum seu Romanorum apostolicorum privilegia sancti et egregii apostoli Petri monasterio indulta, per hanc percepcionis nostre paginam decernimus in perpetuum servanda, et ut sine ulla perturbacione vel inquietudine episcopi London' clericorumque ejus fratres ibidem omnipotenti Deo valeant familiari et pro nobis ipsis et stabilitate regni nostri attentius deprecari, omnino generales eorum accessus ad monasterium prohibemus fieri, et communes staciones ab eisdem ne inde prava consuetudo surrepat aliquando in eodem sepefato monasterio celebrari qualiter sicut est in ejus monasterii privilegiis constitutum, in perpetuis temporibus maneat inviolatum. Si quis autem contra hanc perceptionis nostre paginam senserit, quicumque ille fuerit, cujuscunque nominis et honoris, etatis et potestatis, gradus et ordinis, et eam vel in magno vel in minimo infringere voluerit, et id quod cupit non efficiat et ad erarium nostre domus xij. libras ex auro purissimo coactus addat et insuper reus majestatis habeatur et prophanus ab omnibus nisi satis pro emendacione fecerit computetur. Ut igitur hoc decretum a nobis promulgatum pleniorum obtineat vigorem, nostra manu subter apposito signo roboravimus, atque fidelibus nostris presentibus roborandum tradidimus nostreque imaginis sigillo insuper assignari jussimus. Ego Edwardus Christi gracia largiente Anglorum rex sigillo eciam sancte crucis † signo hoc privilegium, ut si quis illud infregerit ab eo qui pro nobis crucifixus est eterna perdicione damnatur. † Ego Alfgipha Imma mater ejusdem regis assensum accomodavi. † Ego Eadgytha ejusdem collaterana regis eidem donationi regali consensi. † Ego Eadsinus Dorobernensis ecclesie archiepiscopus hanc donacionem confirmavi. † Ego Alfricus Eborascensis ecclesie archiepiscopus hanc pietatem corroboravi. † Ego Alswinus episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Brythwoldus episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Lywingus episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Athelstanus episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Ednothus episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Agelricus episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Bnduco episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Grymcillus episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Elfwinus abbas consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Athelwoldus abbas consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Siwardus abbas consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Elfstanus abbas consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Godwinus comes. † Ego Siwardus comes. † Ego Sweynus comes. † Ego Osgodus minister. † Ego Ordgarus minister. † Ego Odda minister. † Ego Elfstanus minister. † Ego Ordulfus minister. † Wlfwyus regie dignitatis cancellarius relegit et sigillavit. Tertia Carta sancti regis Edwardi. Ibid. fol. 31. b.

IN nomine sancte et individue Trinitatis propter eos qui justiciam Dei contemnunt et suam volunt constituere. Quoniam justicie Dei non sunt subjecti, procurandum est hiis qui ecclesiarum Dei privilegia constituunt, ut multiplices cartas et multitudinem testium atque maledictionum congerant, quibus etsi non semper tamen aliquociens pessimorum hominum impia protervia, et pernicioza presumpcio, tucius proteratur, retundatur, ac reverberetur, necnon fortissimo defensionis robore funditus eradicetur. Quapropter ego Edwardus gratia Dei Anglorum rex notum facio omnibus futuris post me seculi generacionibus, quoniam precepto Leonis Pape pro penitentia et remissione peccatorum meorum, renovavi et melioravi basilicam sancti Petri, que sita est prope menia principalis Anglorum urbis Londonie et ab occidentali ora ejusdem urbis, dicitur Westmonasterium, que edificata quidem fuerat antiquitus sub Melito Londonie primo episcopo, socio et contemporaneo sancti Augustini primi Cantuariensis archiepiscopi, et per ipsum beatum Petrum, angelico famulante servicio, sancte crucis impressione et sacri crismatis peruncione dedicata; sed per frequentes incursiones barbarorum, et maxime Danorum, qui patre meo Atheldredo vivente irrupcionem in Angliam fecerant, et eo mortuo cum fratre meo Edmundo dimidium regnum sub amiciciarum pacione tenuerant, fratremque meum alium Alfredum miserabiliter interemptum evocaverant neglecta et penitus destructa videbatur. Cum ergo renovassem eam et multa privilegia regie potestatis et apostolice auctoritatis per beatum Leonem papam in ea constituissem, placuit mihi renovare, meliorare, et confirmare consuetudines et donaciones pecuniarum quas antecessores mei reges sancto Petro instituerant propter summam devocionem quam habuit semper Anglorum gens erga eum et ejus vicarios. Itaque propter hoc negocium et alia quamplura legatos misi Romam, episcopum unum Aldredum et duos electos ad ordinandos episcopos, Ghysonem scilicet et Walterum, ut a domino Papa sacrentur. Venientes autem Romam ab apostolico Nicholao honore quo decebat sunt suscepti invenerunt ibi ad Sinod' congregatam multitudinem magnam episcoporum, abbatum, monachorum, clericorum ceterorumque fidelium. Cumque audiente sinodo sue legacionis caussam perorarent, hujus summam epistole domino Pape obtulerunt: 'Summo universalis ecclesie patri Nicholao, Edwardus gracia Dei Anglorum rex debitam subjeccionem et omnimodum servicium. Glorificamus Deum quia curam habet sue electe ecclesie quam in loco boni predecessoris vos optimum successorem constituit, quapropter justum judicamus apud vos velut ad solidam petram acuere et probare omnes bonas intenciones nostras, et vestram noticiam atque societatem in bono habere, quatinus eas donaciones et privilegia que obtinuimus apud predecessorem vestrum renovetis et augetis nobis; videlicet ut quod ille injunxit nobis sub nomine obediencie ac penitencie propter votum quod voveram ire Romam, et in remissionem omnium peccatorum meorum, construere cenobium monachorum in honore apostoli Petri, ratum faciatis, et privilegia possessionum et dignitatum ejusdem loci confirmetis, renovetis, atque augeatis, et imperpetuum immutabilia stare decernatis. Ego quoque pro modulo meo augeo et confirmo donaciones et consuetudines pecuniarum quas habet sanctus Petrus in Anglia, et ipsas pecunias collectas cum regalibus donis mitto vobis ut oretis pro me et pro pace regni mei, et continuam ac sollempnem memoriam haberi instituatis tocus gentis Anglorum coram corporibus sanctorum apostolorum. Valet. Hiis igitur litteris a summo pontifice susceptis, cum feliciter ad votum suum omnibus pactis a Roma redirent, consulente sancta synodo, transmissam a domino Papa mihi detulerunt epistolam: 'Nicholaus episcopus, servus servorum Dei gloriosissimo ac piissimo omnique honore dignissimo spiritali, quoque filio nostro, Edwardo Anglorum regi visitacionem omnimodam, salutem mellifluam, et benedictionem apostolicam. Omnipotenti Deo referimus grates qui vestram prudentissimam excellenciam in omnibus ornavit ac decoravit erga beatum Petrum apostolorum principem, et nobiscum habere dileccionem et in omnibus apostolicis consentire censuris, literas igitur vestre nobilitati transmittimus, et per eas societatem sanctorum apostolorum et nostram vobis damus, orantes misericordiam illius qui est dominus omnium et rex super omnia solus, ut ipse vos participem faciat ex omnibus si qua sunt coram Deo bonis operibus nostris et fratres nos ac socios in sua dileccione constituat in omni tempore amplius, ac non minorem partem nostri obsequii vobis reassignet in suo regno quam nobismet ipsis provenire optamus. Erimus etiam deinceps pro vobis sine dubio orantes assidue ut ipse Deus vobis subjiciat hostes et inimicos qui contra vos voluerunt surgere, et confirmet vos in paterno solio et propria hereditate; ac beatus Petrus sit vobis custos et adjutor semper in omni tribulacione. Claret enim Anglorum reges pro reverencia et devocione quam exhibuerunt beato Petro gloria et honore floruisse, ac ipsius patrocinio famosos triumphos obtinuisse, cujus beati apostoli meritis vestro desiderio et voluntati omnipotens Deus prestet effectum, et confirmet vobis paterni regni imperium, et tribuat pacis incrementum, et post presentis vite decursum perducatur ad eternum permanentis glorie imperium. Renovamus ergo et confirmamus et augemus vobis privilegia vestra, scilicet ut absoluti sitis ab illo voto quod timebatis, et ab omnibus aliis peccatis et iniquitatibus vestris, auctoritate illius qui me licet indignum sue sancte sedi preesse voluit. Preterea illi loco quem sub nomine sancte penitencie construend' et meliorand' suscepistis, quia ut fertur primam antiquitus consecracionem a beato Petro accepit, cujus licet indigni vicarii simus, et quia regia antiquitus sedes est, ex auctoritate Dei et sanctorum apostolorum atque hujus Romane sedis et nostra, concedimus, permittimus, et solidissime confirmamus ut amplius imperpetuum regie constitucionis et consecracionis locus sit, atque repositorium regalium insignium, et habitacio perpetua monachorum, qui nulli omnino persone nisi regi subdantur, habeantque potestatem secundum regulam sancti Benedicti per successiones eligere ex se idoneos abbates, neque introducat per violenciam extranea persona nisi quem concors congregacio sibi preesse elegerit. Absolvimus etiam illum locum ab omni servicio et dominacione episcopali, ut nullus episcopus illuc introeat ordinaturus aut precepturus aliquid, nisi ex petitione et consensu abbatis et monachorum, et habeat idem locus liberum procinctum, ambitum, et cimiterium mortuorum circa se, absque episcopali vel cujuscunque respectu vel exaccione, et omnia que ad libertatem et exaltacionem illius loci ad honorem Dei pertinencia per nostram auctoritatem accedere possunt, hilari et promptissima voluntate concedimus. Possessiones autem quas antiqui reges seu quicunque alii homines vos quoque ac vestri barones ad eundem locum contulistis, et cartas que ex eis facte sunt, divina et nostra auctoritate roboramus et ratas ac stabiles esse decernimus, et infractores earum, vel invasores, aut diminutores, aut dispersores, venditores eciam eterna malediccione cum Juda proditore dampnamus, ut non habeant partem in beata resurrectione sed a beato Petro se judicandos sciant quando sedebit cum suis coapostolis judicans xij tribus Israel. Vobis vero et posteris vestris regibus committimus advocacionem et tuicionem ejusdem loci et omnium tocus Anglie ecclesiarum, ut vice nostra, cum consilio episcoporum et abbatum constituatis ubique que justa sunt, scientes pro hoc vos recepturos dignam mercedem ab eo cujus regnum et imperium nec desinet nec minuetur in seculum. Valet.' Hanc igitur epistolam apostolici privilegii placuit inserere huic nostre confirmacioni ut secundum quod sancto Leoni prius placuerat michique preceperat, concordante ad hoc successore ejus Nicholao, et eadem aut majora mihi preciente. Sciant omnes future generaciones, me voti predicti absolucione, peccatorumque meorum omnium remissione, et eterne vite remuneracione, pro animabus regum tam successorum quam predecessorum meorum et omnium parentum meorum, et pro pace et stabilitate regni mei et prosperitate tocus Anglorum populi, loco illi omnimodam libertatem quantum ad potestatem terrenam concessisse, et quod illi de ecclesiastica hoc de regia libertate statuo. Ejus igitur amoris stimulo et fide plenissima ac devotissima suffultus, cujus largiflua miseracione in cathedra regali promotus sum cum consilio et decreto archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, comitum, aliorumque omnium meorum optimatum, prospiciens hoc ipsum ecclesie et habitantibus in ea sive pertinentibus ad eam utile fore, non solum in presenti sed eciam in futuro elegi sanctiendum atque perpetuo stabilimento ab omnibus confirmandum ut pro Christi honore et amore, et pro reverencia summi apostolorum principis Petri cujus patrocinio meipsum commisi, et pro devocione et veneracione sanctarum reliquiarum quas eidem loco contuli, beatorum videlicet apostolorum, martirum, confessorum, et virginum, ut omnipotens dominus per istorum suffragia sanctorum depulsis cunctis adversitatibus, cum pacis et honoris sui stabilitate, ac perpetue tranquillitatis sullimacione locum illum custodiat, disponat, et protegat, et pro magnifica dignitate, sive regali excellencia, ipsius ecclesie, et pro quiete monachorum ibidem Deo famulancium, tantus honor eidem ecclesie habeatur imperpetuum et observetur, ut neque nos, neque successores nostri, neque quilibet episcopus nec quicunque de judiciaria potestate in ipsam sanctam basilicam, vel in manentes in ipsa, vel in homines qui cum suis terris vel quibuslibet cunctis substantiis ad ipsam tradere vel devovere se voluerint, nisi per voluntatem abbatis et suorum monachorum, ullam unquam habeant potestatem. Sed sit hec sancta Mater ecclesia peculiaris patroni et nostri domini et magni apostoli ter beati Petri, libera et absoluta ab omni invasione vel inquietudine omnium hominum cujuscunque ordinis vel potestatis esse videantur. Preterea aliud constituo atque imperpetuo confirmo, ut quisque fugitivorum, de quocunque loco, pro quacunque causa, cujuscunque condicionis sit, ipsum sanctum locum vel procinctum fugiens ejus intraverit, immunis sit . . .^a ac plenam libertatem consequatur. Placuit eciam mihi hanc opcionis eleccionem et libertatis donum gratissimo animo et integra voluntate augere, et privilegio isto corroborare, et insuper dono meo inviolabiliter confirmare omnes donaciones terrarum vel ecclesiarum aut aliarum rerum que ibi ab antecessoribus meis regibus, seu a quibuscunque ante me, donate sunt, necnon et illas quas vel ego vel optimates mei vel eciam quilibet de civibus intra Londoniam donaverant, tam terras quam consuetudines, et omnia jura qualiumcunque causarum in omnibus terris que vel in London' vel in aliis quibuscunque locis predicto monasterio adjacent, vel adjiciende sunt per gracionem Dei. Huic libertati concedo additamentum, in qua ut ab omnibus apercius et plenius intelligatur nomina consuetudinum, Anglice precepi ponere. Scilicet, Mundbryche, Burthbryce, Miskenninge, Scewinge, Lastinge, Frytsoene, Flimnafirmthe, Wergelwef, Uthlep, Forfange, Fyhfang, Firdwite, Fythwite, Wardwite, Hangewite, Hamsocne, Forstal, Infangenethef, Saka, Socna, Toll, et Team, aliasque omnes leges et consuetudines que ad me pertinent. Renovavi eciam privilegia antiquorum regum, et ex nomine Sancte Trinitatis et omnium sanctorum nostra eciam regia auctoritate cum consensu atque

H. REX Anglie episcopo Lundoniensi, et vicecomitibus, et omnibus baronibus et fidelibus suis et ministris Lundonie salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et concessisse Deo et sancto Petro Westmonasterii pro statu regni mei, et pro salute anime mee, et Edwardi regis cognati mei, et Willielmi regis patris mei, et Willielmi regis fratris mei, et Willielmi filii mei, et Mathildis regine matris mee, et Mathildis regine uxoris mee, et antecessorum et successorum meorum, omnes terras quas rex Edwardus eidem ecclesie dederat, et quas S. Petrus antea in Lundonia tenebat, quicunque eas dedisset. Et volo et concedo et firmiter precipio, ut bene, et quiete, et honorifice teneat, cum saca et soca, et toll, et team, et infangenetheof, et flemenefyrthe, et miskeninge, et sceawinge, et pacis infractione, et domus invasione, et assultu in suo jure, et navium applicatione, et omnibus consuetudinibus que per privilegium carte regis Edwardi confirmate sunt. Nolo autem ullo modo consentire, ut aliquis hanc ecclesie sancti Petri a nobis concessam libertatem ullo tempore infringere presumat, aut in aliquo de omnibus que ecclesie juris fuerint, se intromittat nisi abbas et monachi ad utilitatem monasterii. Et si quis a modo in eadem urbe terram aut ecclesiam sive domum prefato monasterio donaverit; volo et firmiter precipio ut eas sic solutas et ab omni cujuscunque exactionis inquietudine liberam sepepredicta ecclesia teneat, sicut quas melius habuit tempore prescripti regis Edwardi. Mercatores autem tam nostrates quam extranei qui in terrâ S. Petri hospitabuntur, soluti et liberi sint ab omni consuetudine et exactione, sancto Petro et abbati reddentes quod justum fuerit; et sicut rex Edwardus et rex Willielmus pater meus per cartas suas concesserunt; et super hoc nullus eos inquietet vel disturbet in veniendo neque in redeundo. INNOCENCIUS episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis G. abbati et fratribus sancti Petri Westmonasterii salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Quum religiosum virum, priorem Osbertum, a vestra fraternitate cum litteris vestris directum, gratanter excepimus, eum pro merito probitatis et conversacionis egregie, ut dilectum filium nostrum, proprie et specialiter vobis commendamus; cujus honesta importunitas adeo nos coegit vestro satisfacere desiderio, ut si sufficiencia præ manibus habuissemus testimonia episcoporum et abbatum, jam, canonizatum in catalogo sanctorum, a Romana secum curia reportasset regem vestrum. Ea de causa, consulentibus fratribus nostris, episcopis et cardinalibus, petitionem vestram perficere hac vice distulimus, quia cum tanta festivitas debeat fieri ad honorem et profectum tocus regni, ab omni regno pariter debet postulari. Canonizatio Sancti Edwardi Regis Angliæ, ejusque Adscriptio in numerum Sanctorum Confessorum.

*Hujus Sancti Festum agitur die quinto Januarii.

ALEXANDER episcopus, servus servorum Dei, venerabilibus fratribus, archiepiscopis, episcopis, ac dilectis filiis, abbatibus, prioribus, aliisque ecclesiarum prelatibus per Angliam constitutis, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem.

Illius devocionis constanciam et fidei firmitatem quam circa matrem vestram sacrosanctam Romanam ecclesiam exhibetis, diligencius attendentes, in id propositum voluntatis adducimur, ut vos sicut charissimos fratres, et speciales ecclesie filios, sincera charitate in domino diligamus, propensius honoremus, et postulaciones vestras, quantum cum Deo possumus, libenti animo admittamus.

* Edita A.D. 1161.

Inde utique fuit, quod super petitione, quam de Edwardo glorioso quondam rege Anglorum, canonizando et in sanctorum catalogo ascribendo, tam charissimus in Christo filius noster Henricus, illustris Anglorum rex, quam vos ipsi nobis instancius porrexistis, sollicitam cum fratribus nostris deliberacionem habentes, libro miraculorum inspecto, que dum in carne mortali viveret, et postquam de presenti seculo est assumptus, omnipotens dominus per suam misericordiam declaravit. Visis etiam literis antecessoris nostri pie recordacionis Innocencii pape, vestris quoque testimoniis inde receptis; quamvis negocium tam arduum et sublime, non frequenter soleat, nisi in solemnibus conciliis de more concedi.

De communi tamen fratrum nostrorum consilio, juxta votum et desiderium predicti filii nostri regis ac vestrum, corpus ipsius Confessoris ita glorificandum censuimus, et debitis preconiiis honorandum in terris, sicut eundem Confessorem dominus per suam gratiam glorificavit in coelis. Unde videlicet inter sanctos Confessores de cetero numeretur, qui hoc ipsum apud Deum signis meruit ac virtutibus obtinere.

Quia igitur decet honestatis vestre prudentiam eum pie colere et toto studio venerari, quem auctoritate apostolica venerandum vestra postulavit devotio et colendum, universitatem vestram per apostolica scripta monemus et exhortamur in domino, quatenus eum ita deinceps studatis debitis obsequiis honorare, ut ipsius intercessionibus apud districtum iudicem mereamini veniam obtinere, et gloriosam in eterna beatitudine premium invenire. ALEXANDER episcopus, servus servorum Dei, ad perpetuam rei memoriam.

Injunctum nobis desuper apostolice servitutis officium mentem nostram excitat et inducit, ut ad ea, que pro ecclesiarum et monasteriorum omnium, necnon capellarum et hospitalium necessitatibus valeant provideri, quantum cum Deo possumus, operosis studiis et remediis favorabiliter intendamus. Dudum siquidem, pro parte carissimi in Christo filii nostri Henrici Anglie regis illustris, nobis exposito quod ipse, de propria salute recogitans, ac cupiens terrena in cœlestia et transitoria in eterna felici commercio commutare, qua ductus devotione, quandam Capellam, cum una Cantaria, sub invocacione beate Marie virginis, cum sufficienti numero presbyterorum, qui inibi pro anime sue salute celebrare tenerentur, juxta ecclesiam collegiatam sancti Georgii opidi Windesore Sarrisburiensis dioecesis, ac unum Hospitale, in dicto opido pro pauperibus et aliis miserabilibus personis, ad illud pro tempore declinantibus in illo recipiendis, confovendis et alendis, de bonis propriis fundare et edificare proponebat, nos tunc, dicti regis in ea parte supplicacionibus inclinati, de Montisfont alias de Montisfonte ac de Luffeldia prioratus sancti Augustini et sancti Benedicti ordinum Wintoniensis et Lincolniensis dioeceseum, qui conventuales de jure patronatus regis Anglie pro tempore existentis erant, illorumque nomina, ordines, dignitates, et dependencias, auctoritate apostolica penitus suppressimus et Proviso quod dicti prioratus propterea ad prophanos usus non redigantur, sed in illorum ecclesiis interdum misse celebrentur.

Nos enim presentes litteras et in eis contenta, per quascumque revocaciones unionum, annexionum, et incorporacionum effectum non sortiturum, quascumque derogatoriarum derogatorias, aliasque fortiores et efficaciores clausulas in se continentes nullatenus revocari seu suspendi posse, irritum quoque et inane quicquid secus super hiis a quoquam quavis auctoritate scienter vel ignoranter contigerit attemptari decernimus.

Monastery of Sherbourne,

IN DORSETSHIRE.

THE Church of SHERBOURNE was anciently the Seat of a BISHOPRICK as well as a BENEDICTINE ABBEY.

Ina, king of the West Saxons, is stated by our historians to have founded the BISHOPRICK in the year 705, appropriating to it the counties of Dorset, Berks, Wilts, Somerset, Devonshire, and Cornwall, all of which had previously formed a part of the more extensive See of Winchester.^a The erection, in the tenth century, however, of the Sees of Wells, Crediton, and St. Germain's, appears to have robbed Sherbourne of the Counties of Somerset, Devonshire, and Cornwall.^b Godwin, Camden, and Dr. Heylin say that in 904, or according to other writers in 909, a bishoprick was founded at Wilton, whose bishops, sometimes residing also at Ramsbury and Sunning, were likewise styled bishops of those places.^c Its diocese was Berks and Wilts; so that, in fact, Dorset was at last, for a time, the only county left to the See of Sherbourne.^d Herman, however, the last bishop of Wilton, reunited that See to Sherbourne in 1058.^e

The oldest series of the bishops of Sherbourne now extant of any great length, is probably to be found in the Cotton Manuscript Tiberius B. v. unquestionably of the eleventh century: containing nineteen only out of the twenty-six bishops. It is as follows:

- I. Eldhelm.
- II. Fordhere.
- III. Herewald.
- IIII. Wdelmod.
- V. Cenefrid.
- VI. Sigbriht.
- VII. Ealhstan.
- VIII. Weahmund.
- IX. Ædelheah.
- X. Wulfsige.
- XI. Asser.
- XII. Ædelweard.
- XIII. Waerstan.
- XIV. Ædelbald.
- XV. Sigelm.
- XVI. Alfred.
- XVII. Wulfsige.
- XVIII. Alfwold.
- XIX. Æthelsige.^f

Hutchins, in his History of Dorsetshire, has given a fuller series from the Register of St. Osmund, Leland's Collectanea, vol. ii. p. 317, and a Manuscript of Bishop Ward in the possession of the Bishop of Salisbury. It is here transcribed. The dates, he adds, are all taken from Bishop Ward's manuscript.^g one of his Treatises on Metre, he was the first who introduced Poetry into England. William of Malmesbury says that the people in Aldhelm's time were half-barbarians, and little attentive to religious discourses: wherefore the holy man, placing himself upon a bridge, used often to stop them, and sing ballads of his own composition. He thereby gained the favour and attention of the populace, and insensibly mixing grave and religious things with those of a joocular kind, he by this means succeeded better than he could have done by austere gravity. He died May 25th, A.D. 709. The more important of his works were, 1. "De octo Vitiis principalibus." 2. "Ænigmatum Liber," published with other of his poetical pieces by Mart. Delrio, 12^o Mog. 1601. 3. "A Book, addressed to Alfred King of Northumberland, on various subjects." 4. "De Vita Monachorum." 5. "De Laude Sanctorum." 6. "De Arithmetica." 7. "De Astrologia." 8. "On the mistake of the Britons concerning the celebration of Easter," printed by Sonius in 1576. 9. "De Laude Virginitatis," published with Bede's Works, 4to. Lond. 1693. 10. "De Metrorum Generibus:" besides numerous Epistles, Homilies, and Sonnets in the Saxon Language. Tanner, Bibl. Brit. Hib. p. 25, says "Shireburnæ basilicam construxit." For other particulars concerning him the reader may consult Malmesb. de Gestis Pontif. lib. ij. Godwin de Præsulibus. Biog. Brit. old edit. vol. i. p. 91. Warton, Hist. Eng. Poet. vol. i. Dissert. p. 26, and Sir John Hawkins's History of Music. In the Acta Sanctorum of the Bollandists, tom. vi. pp. 79, 84. are two Latin Lives of St. Aldhelm, one from William of Malmesbury, the other from a Cotton MS. with notes. Some Observations on his Latin Poetry will be found in Turner's History of the Manners, Landed Property, Government, &c. of the Anglo-Saxons, 8vo. Lond. 1805, p. 343. Several Manuscripts of his Treatise "De Laude Virginitatis," as old as the eighth century, are existing in our public libraries.

709. FROTHERUS.

ALDELMUS.^h

¹ Mat. Westm. fol. Francof. 1602, p. 133, calls him "vir et ipse in scripturis sanctis laudabiliter eruditus." In 737 according to the Saxon Chronicle, or in 738 according to Matthew of Westminster, he accompanied Fritlegitha queen of the West Saxons to Rome. Pitts ranks him among our writers, and calls him Durotrix.

^c Hutchins ut supr. See also Godw. de Præsul. p. 333.

^d Godwin says Dorset and Berks remained to the See of Sherbourne, probably from Wil. Malmesbury, Script. post Bedam, p. 114: but Mr. Hutchins thinks it highly probable that Berks was part of Wilton diocese; the bishop's residence being sometimes at Sunning near Reading in that county.

During the time that Wilton was a bishop's see, Godwin gives us the following list of the bishops:

Ethelstan,	Alfstan, 970.	Alfric, 989.
Osulf, 934.	Siricius.	Herman, 1045.

Leland, Itin. vol. ii. p. 316, gives us a list of the bishops of Sunning. They are exactly the same with those of Wilton. Compare Hutchins's Hist. of Dorset.

^e Flor. Wigorn.

^f There is an older series in the Cotton MS. Vesp. B. vi. fol. 108 b. containing the names of Aldhelm, Fordhere, Hereuuald, Ædelmod, Deneфрид, Uuigberht, and Alhstan, only: the last in a hand later than the rest.

^g The notices respecting the different Bishops here given in the notes, have been compiled from the most authentic sources. In some places differing materially from Mr. Hutchins's account.

^h Aldelmus or St. Aldhelm. William of Malmesbury says he was the son of Kenred, or Kenter, brother of Ina king of the West Saxons. He was born at Malmesbury in Wiltshire; and was in part educated abroad in France and Italy, and partly under Maildulphus, an Irish Scot, who had built a little monastery where Malmesbury now stands. Upon the death of Maildulphus, Aldhelm, by the help of Eleutherius bishop of Winchester, built a stately monastery there, and was himself the first abbat. He was consecrated bishop of Sherbourne, at Rome, by Pope Sergius I. in 705, and Godwin tells us that he had the courage to reprove his holiness for having a bastard. Aldhelm is said to have been the first Englishman who wrote in Latin; and, as he himself tells us in

^a Le Neve, from Isaacson, makes him bishop here in 739. Godwin says he was living in 747 and 766. He appears to have been present at the Council of Clovesho, held by Cuthbert, archbishop of Canterbury, in 742. Concil. Angl. vol. i. p. 94. His name is entirely omitted in the Cotton MS. Faust. A. ii. although it occurs in the more ancient series of the Bishops of Sherbourne.

^b Ethelinodus, Ethelbold, or Wthelmod, is said by Isaacson in his Chronology to have succeeded to this bishoprick in the year 755.

^c Isaacson affixes the date of 779 to Denefrith, who is also called Cenefrid. Hutchins, vol. iv. p. 89, gives the year 790 for his election. He is said to have made his profession to Athelard, archbishop of Canterbury. He occurs 796. Malmesb. Vit. Aldh. ap. Gale. p. 359.

^d Wibert, or Wigberht, who is also called Wilbert, and Sigbriht, has the date of 798 affixed to him by Isaacson. The Saxon Chronicle calls him bishop of the West Saxons. Elsewhere, says Le Neve, I find that he was present at two national Synods held in 803 and 824. Fasti Eccl. Angl. p. 255. from Concil. Angl. vol. i. pp. 161, 175. His death is noticed in the Saxon Chronicle. He was slain by the Danes in 833. Le Neve, who follows Isaacson and the Antiq. Britan. by a strange mistake mentions Migfred as another bishop of Sherbourne slain by the Danes in the same year. Matt. of Westminster, by a still more extraordinary mistake, says "Anno gratiæ 784. Wilbertus Scireburnensis antistes obiit, et Castanus successit." Flor. Hist. fol. Francof. 1602, p. 145.

^e The year 817 is mentioned as the date of Alchstan's accession in the Chronicle of Mailros. See Gale, Rerum Anglic. Script. Vet. tom. i. p. 141. though it is irreconcilable with the time of his predecessor's death. The Saxon Chronicle however countenances the statement of the Chronicle of Mailros: as it notices his death in the year 867, and expressly says he had held the bishoprick of Sherbourne fifty years. Chron. Sax. p. 79. Hutchins notices him as of royal extraction. That he was a military prelate, and no less eminent in the cabinet, may be gathered from the following passage of William of Malmesbury, who calls him Alstanus. "Hic tempore Egbrithi regis Westsaxonum et Adulfii filii ejus simul, et ultra, magnæ in sæculo potentia, et ingens in consiliis autor fuit. Egbritho regi Cantuaritas et Orientales Anglos bellicis subegit laboribus. Aldulfum videns mansuetioris ingenii, sedulis admonitionibus ad scientiam regni stimulabat contra Danos qui tum primum insulam infestabant, segnem animans, ipse pecunias ex fisco sufficiens, ipse exercitum componens. Multa per eum in talibus et inchoata constanter, et perfecta feliciter, qui Annales legerit, inveniet." Malmesbury adds also, "Vixit in episcopatu annis quinquaginta." Script. post Bedam. fol. 141. Alchstan appears to have fought many successful battles against the Danes. His principal one was that of Pedredesmuthe, at the mouth of the river Perret near Huntspill in the county of Somerset in 845. See Mat. Westm. p. 156. Or according to the Chronicle of Mailros in 847. The Saxon Chronicle, p. 79, informs us that he was buried at Sherbourne. See also Sim. Dunelm.

^f Heahmundus, Hamund, Edmund, or as he is called in the Chronicle of Mailros Alchmund, was slain by the Danes at Merdon in Wiltshire in the year 871. Chron. Sax. p. 81. Godwin, from some other authority, says in 872.

^g The Cotton MS. Faust. A. ii. calls him Altelteth.

^h Le Neve calls him Alsius, and after Isaacson assigns to him the date of 875. Fasti Eccl. Angl. ut supr.

ⁱ Asser, a monk of St. David's in Wales, was one of King Alfred's greatest favourites, and wrote his life, to which we are chiefly indebted for our knowledge of the actions and character of that great prince. He was invited to the court of Alfred merely from the reputation of his learning. Whether the date above assigned to him be correct, may be doubted. Le Neve says he became bishop of Sherbourne in 879. Mr. Chalmers thinks his arrival at Court could not have been much before 880. Soon after his arrival he had Exeter bestowed upon him, and then Sherbourne, which Mr. Chalmers says he seems to have quitted in the year 883; though he always retained the title. When, or where he died, seems doubtful, but the Saxon Chronicle positively fixes the time to the year 910. There is no less controversy about the works of Asser than about his preferments. Some writers allege that he never wrote any thing but the Annals of Alfred; though Pits gives us the titles of no less than five other books of his writing, and says that he wrote many more. His Life of Alfred was first published by archbishop Parker with Walsingham's History, fol. Lond. 1574. It was reprinted by Camden in his "Anglia, Normannica," &c. fol. Francof. 1603; and again, in an elegant octavo volume, by Mr. Wise, at Oxford, in 1722. See Chalmers's Gen. Biogr. Dict. vol. iii. p. 65. Tann. Bibl. Brit. Hib. p. 53. Warton Hist. Eng. Poet. The celebrated manuscript of Asser formerly in the Cotton Library, marked Otho A. xii. was burnt in the fire at Westminster in 1731. In the will of king Alfred, p. 20, we find a hundred mancuses bequeathed to the bishop of Sherbourne.

^k SWITHELM, or SIGELMUS, is mentioned by several writers before Athelwardus. The following is the account of him given in Hutchins's Dorset, vol. iv. p. 92. "Bishop Godwin has another Sigelmus, who seems to be the same person with this. Florilegus mentions one of this name killed by the Danes in 834; which bishop Godwin thinks a mistake for 934. This last is omitted by William of Malmesbury, the Cotton MS. and all other lists. Swithelm is said to have visited the sepulchre of Christ, and to have travelled into India to the place where St. Thomas was buried with large sums of money for the poor there, in the name of Alfred, and to have brought thence many precious stones and spices which he deposited in his church. This might be before his advancement to the See. Hackluyt, vol. ii. p. 5. says, Alfred sent him to these Christians of St. Thomas, and he brought home many jewels, aromatics, &c. some of which remained long at Sherbourne. I wish, says Dr. Vincent, I had more authority for this than the tradition of Sherbourne; for Alfred deserves any honour which can be added to his name. He was consecrated, as bishop Godwin, A.D. 883; as Ralph de Diceto and Brompton, A.D. 885; as bishop Ward's MS. 889; and as the Chronological Table at the end of archbishop Parker's Antiquitat. Britan. A.D. 884. He is placed in bishop Ward's MS. between Ethelbald and Elfred 934; and omitted in Osmund's Register. It is doubted whether he was a bishop; for the Continuator of Florence does not mention him in his Catalogue of Bishops, nor Mr. Wharton, in his Angl. Sacra, vol. i. p. 554. But Mr. Tyrrel says, Wisen or Sigelm, bishop of Seyrborn, died 883. He was buried in the monastery, as the Cotton MS."

Ethelwald, or Athelwardus, who is said to have been a younger son of king Alfred, is stated by Godwin to have died in 898.

Dr. Richardson excludes both Swithelm and Ethelwald, though both are mentioned by Malmesbury. See Hutchins ut supr. p. 91.

^l The generality of our historians speak of Werstan as consecrated in 909. See Twysd. Script. x. col. 453. He was killed in battle by the Danes in 918. "Werstanum ferunt in proelio contra Analafum a rege Ethelstano susceptum a paganis trucidatum." Will. Malmesb. Script. post Bedam. fol. Lond. 1596, fol. 141.

^m Athelbaldus, or Ethelbald, is barely mentioned by Malmesbury, Matthew of Westminster, and Florence of Worcester.

ⁿ See the note on the former Swithelm or Sigelmus.

^o Wharton, Angl. Sacra, vol. ii. p. 23, mentions him as bishop of Sherbourne in 938. Matthew of Westminster places his death in the year 940: Florence of Worcester in 941.

^p Godwin calls him Wlffin: and the Cotton MS. Faustina, A. ii. Wlsige. He is said to have died in 958. If this was the real date of his death he could hardly have been the same with Wulsinus abbat of Westminster, whom Mr. Widmore conjectures to have been Ethelsius, or Edelsinus, bishop here at a later period. See this point further discussed in the Notes to the new edition of Hutchins's Hist. Dors. vol. iv. p. 91. Malmesbury certainly calls him Wlfsinus, he says, "Hunc Dunstanus archiepiscopus cum esset episcopus Londoniæ abbatem apud Westmonasterium fecerat." He adds, "Servatur adhuc baculus ejus, et quadam alia pontificis insignia, mediocritatis et humilitatis ejus, vivum (ut ita dicam) simulachrum præferentia." Script. post Bedam. edit. 1596, fol. 141 b.

^q Eadmer, Hist. Novorum, p. 160, notices him among the witnesses to a charter granted by king Edgar to the monastery of Winchester in 966. Florence of Worcester places his death in 978.

^s Or Æthelsinus. In the Cotton MS. Tib. B. v. Æthelsige. According to the History of Abingdon Abbey, where he is said to have been buried, he died in 980. See Hutchins, ut supr. p. 91. According to William of Malmesbury, Script. post Bedam. p. 36, he was sent on an embassy to Normandy in 991. Several writers appear to call him WLSINUS: (See note ^p.) and it is not improbable that the charter under that name by which the monastery of Sherbourne was refounded in 998 must be ascribed to him. Compare Mores de Ælfrico Dorobernensi Episcopo Commentarius, pp. 29. 33.

^t Le Neve calls him Brithwin or Brithric; and gives 998 as the date of his succession. Matthew of Westminster places his death in 1006. Godwin says 1009.

^u Brithwinus. Godw. de Præsul. ed. 1743, p. 335. Hutchins, Hist. Dors. vol. iv. p. 91, says, "He was elected abbat of St. Augustine's at Canterbury, A.D. 1006; was made bishop of Sherbourne 1022 (f. 1012); but falling blind after some years resigned his bishopric, and retired to his monastery, where he died and was buried over against the altar of St. John. The Chronicle of Gotseline says, he was advanced to this see in 1017. Thorn adds, that though his sanctity was indisputable, and a blaze of light frequently shone near his tomb, the monks dared not celebrate mass in his honour without authority from the pope."

HERMANUS.	HEREMANNUS.

There is another list of the bishops of Sherbourne in the Cotton Manuscript Faustina A. ii. fol. 29. It differs from the lists already given very immaterially. The variations in the spelling of the names of the different bishops as they occur in our historians are carefully marked by Mr. Hutchins.

Heremanus, or Hereman, as has been already noticed, was the last bishop both of Wilton and Sherbourne: for the Council at London in 1075, having ordained that bishops' sees should be removed from obscure places to towns of the greatest note in their dioceses, he translated his to Old Sarum in 1076, where he began a cathedral, but did not live to finish it. This removal seems to have been made rather out of favour or partiality, than from the smallness of Sherbourne, which certainly occupied a greater extent of ground than Old Sarum, which was, as Malmesbury expresses it, little more than a castle.^d

The bishops of Sherbourne, says Mr. Hutchins, and afterwards of Sarum, held a large extent of land in Sherbourne and its environs. Almost all the vills in the hundreds of Sherbourne and Yetminster belonged to them. They held many manors and knights' fees, and were lords paramount in all; but in process of time many of these lands were given to the Abbey, as appears by Domesday Book.^e

SHERBOURNE ABBEY, according to Leland, was founded by King Ethelred,^f but the Cotton Manuscript Faustina A. ii. copied by Dugdale, mentions donations to the canons there, made not only by King Ina, but by Kenwale and Sigebert who lived before him.^g

Hutchins, in his History of Dorsetshire, gives the following enumeration of its earliest benefactors.

"A.D. 671, Cenwalch, king of Wessex, gave several liberties to the pontifical see of the church of Scireburn, where some religious men in and before that time inhabited: but this charter seems a forgery, Laurence the archbishop who is one of the witnesses dying many years before.

"A.D. 774, Cynewulf, king of the West Saxons, by charter gave to this church the land of one mansion near the western bank of the river commonly called Lim.

"A.D. 841, Indict. 4, on the day on which St. Stephen the protomartyr was celebrated in the royal vill called Æseantum, king Ethelwulf gave by charter fifteen cassates in the place called Halganstoc, for the honour of God and love of St. Michael the Archangel, whose church remains in the said little monastery^h to Eadberth the deacon, for his faithful service there, in everlasting alms.

"A.D. 844. By another charter he gave to this church two cassates in a place called Osanstoc, for the redemption of his soul, and the souls of his sons, king Ethelbald and king Ethelbert, who were afterwards buried here.ⁱ

"A.D. 903, King Eadred gave to Wulfsig the bishop, and after him to the monastery, lands at Thornford.

"A.D. 933, King Alfred by charter gave lands in Bradford and Weston."^k

Hearne, from a Book of Charters of the Abbey, now not known to be extant,^l supplies us with the earliest deeds of an authentic charter which relate to the restoration of the monastery. Wlsin bishop of Sherbourne, in 998, appears to have changed the secular Canons here for Benedictine Monks.^m

In 1035, King Canute gave, or rather restored lands in Corscomb to this Abbey.ⁿ

The nine manors which appear to have been appropriated to the support of the monks at the time of the Domesday Survey, were the following: Scireburne, Wocburne, Torneford, Bradeford, Cumtune, Stapelbrigge, Westune, Coriscumbe, and Stoce. Under Stapelbrigge, now Stalbridge, three virgates of land are stated to be held by the monks, which had been previously usurped from the church without consent either from the bishop or the religious by William the son of the Conqueror.^o

In 1122, according to the Cotton MS. Faustina A. ii. the Abbeys of Sherbourne and Horton were united by a grant of King Henry the First and Roger bishop of Sarum.^p William of Malmesbury says this was done in the fourth year of King Stephen, A.D. 1139.^q

A Bull of Pope Eugenius, dated non. Febr. 1145, gives a full recital of the possessions of the Abbey at that time.^r A similar recital occurs in a Bull of Pope Alexander the Third, in 1163.^s

In the first year of King Richard I. the Abbey was in the king's hands, and Thomas de Husseborn accounted for 102*l.* 5*d.* of the rents of assize.^t

By inquisition taken before John de Kirkeby, in the time of Edward the First, the abbat held in the hundred of Sherbourne the vills of Thornford, Bradford, Compton, Stawel, and Woburn of the king in chief by barony, for which he did service of two knights in the king's army for forty days, at his own costs. In the eighteenth of Edward I. he had a charter of free warren in Weston, Woburn, Wyke, Bradford, Thornford, Corscomb Abbas, and Stawel, which was confirmed 39 Edw. III.^u

The abbat was to find a proper and strong house within the Abbey to hold the monies collected for the

^a Brinwinus. Will. Malmesb. fol. 141.

^b Called in the Domesday Survey Alfwold. Malmesbury speaks of him as brother to his predecessor, and famous for his temperance and frugality. Knyghton says he was a monk of Winchester in the time of King Edward the Confessor. "Cirea hos dies (t. W. Conq.) obiit Sanctus Alfwaldus ultimus Schirburnensis præsul, qui ex monacho Wyntoniensi præsul factus." Twysd. Script. x. col. 2332. The Saxon Chronicle says he held the bishoprick thirty-eight years, and died in 1043. Chron. Sax. p. 158.

^c Hereman was by birth a Fleming; originally, chaplain to King Edward the Confessor. In 1045 he succeeded Brithwold in the bishoprick of Wilton, when, wishing to move his see to Malmesbury, he was driven from it, and went to St. Bertin's, where he remained three years: Aldred bishop of Woreester in the mean time administering the affairs of his bishoprick. He afterwards united Wilton and Sherbourne in one see; and finally removed them both to Sarum. Alfwold is called the last bishop of Sherbourne in Knyghton, because Hereman gave a new name to the bishoprick. Hereman, according to our historians, assisted at the consecration of Lanfranc, archbishop of Canterbury, in 1071. The Saxon Chronicle, and Wikes Hist. Anglie. Script. v. ap. Gale, p. 23, place his death in 1077.

^d Malmesbury's words, however, respecting Sherbourne, must not be concealed. "Schireburnia est viculus, nec habitantium frequentia nec positionis gratia suavis, in quo mirandum, et pene pudendum, sedem Episcopalem per tot durasse sæcula." Script. post Bedam. fol. 140 b.

^e Hutchins's History of Dorsetshire, Gough's edit. vol. iv. p. 92 The specification of the lands entered in the Survey belonging to the bishop, as well as those appropriated to the monks, will be found in the Appendix of Charters, Num. iv.

^f Lel. Collect. edit. 1715, tom. i. p. 66. "Etheldredus rex fundator." Within brackets is added "[cirea 870]." But the Ethelred alluded to, who, in fact, only patronised the restoration of the abbey, must have been the father of King Edward the Confessor, who lived above a century later.

^l Hearne gives a minute account of this manuscript, which appears to have been in two parts. tenths and fifteenths, 18 Edw. III.; and permit free ingress and egress to the collectors, who were to answer for the said sums to the king.^a

In the 16th of Richard II. it was found not to the king's detriment to grant licence to Peter de Coryndon to give one messuage, two carucates, fifty-two acres of land, and 4s. 6d. rent in Coryndon to the abbat and convent.^b

Hutchins gives the substance of an inquisition taken on the death of abbat Bruning in 1414; adding to the Dorsetshire possessions the manors of Bere, Littleham, Seton, and Carswell, in the county of Devon.

In the rental from the First Fruits Office, he adds, these particulars are mentioned: the manors of Thornford, Bradford, Corscomb, Sherbourne prebend; the rectories or advowsons of Carswell and Bere, in Devon; of Horton, Wotton, St. Trinity Wareham, and pensions from Woburn, and Over and Nether Compton.

The considerable revenues of this Abbey^c made it liable to various services and taxations.^d

The rectory of Sherbourne was a prebend of Sarum, and consequently became a peculiar to that cathedral. The abbat was a prebendary and had a stall in the cathedral till the Dissolution, when the prebend, being jure et virtute officii, became extinct. In Pope Nicholas's taxation, the prebend of Sherbourne Abbas stands at sixty marks.^e

ABBATS OF SHERBOURNE.

IN the most early times of the monastery, says Hutchins, at or soon after its foundation, a prior, sometimes styled praepositus primus and decanus, presided over the secular canons, and when they were ejected, over the monks. For where a church was cathedral and episcopal, the bishop was always supposed to be the abbat: but on the removal of the see, and the partition of the church lands between the bishop and the abbat, this house became an abbey, and the church conventual, and continued so till the Dissolution. We have no account, nor even the names of the first abbats.^f The first that occurs is

THURSTANUS, or THURSTINUS, who was consecrated in 1122.^g

PETER occurs as abbat about 1142.^h

CLEMENT occurs in 1163.ⁱ

In the account of the Rectories, Vicarages, and perpetual Curacies in the Diocese of Bath and Wells, at the end of Hearne's Hemingford, vol. ii. p. 638, it is said, "The abbat of Shirbourn, Dorset, received from Corton and Ilchester yearly viii. marks."

held lands of the abbey, a taxation of the spiritualities and temporalities of the monastery, salaries of servants, payments of tenants, and the renewal of the customaries during his time, to the 19th of Richard II. He appears to have been succeeded by a namesake in

JOHN BRUNYNG, to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored March 6th, 1415.^a On his death,

WILLIAM DE BRADFORD became abbat. His election received the royal assent August 23d, and the temporalities of the Abbey were restored to him September the 2d, 1436.^b He died Oct. 31st, 1459.^c

JOHN SAUNDER, prior of the monastery, was elected in 1459: on the 24th of November in which year the temporalities were restored to him.^d On the 22d of October 1475, on his death, a licence was granted for the election of a new abbat, when

PETER RAMPSHAM was chosen; to whose election the king gave his assent November the 4th.^e

JOHN MEER, MERE, or MYER was elected abbat Jan. 29th, 1504.^f Hutchins, who gives the names of the persons by whom he was chosen,^g says he resigned in 1535, and had a pension of forty pounds per annum allowed to him.

JOHN BARNSTABLE, on the resignation of Mere, was elected and confirmed abbat May 31st, 1535.^h He surrendered the monastery, with sixteen of his monks, March 18th, 1539.ⁱ He was afterwards rector of Stalbridge; and in 1547 one of the overseers of the will of Sir John Horsey.^k Tanner says he died parson of Stallbridge in 1560, and willed to be buried there.^l

Hutchins says, Jan. 4th, 31 Hen. VIII. 1539, the king demised to Sir John Horsey, knt. the house and site of the late dissolved Monastery, and all houses, &c. in the site and precincts of it: all lands called the Great Court, Abbots Garden, Covent Garden, West Garden, Pyggy's Barton, Ryke's Barton, Prior's Garden, Quarre and Harmondy's Closes, thirty-eight acres of land in East Field, five in Berkenham, nine in North Field, sixteen in Old Down, eight in Stoke Hill, three at Hareborough, forty-eight in West Field, a meadow of one acre and a half at More Yeate, another called Parleys of twenty acres, and another called Iver Mead of ten acres, all which were commonly called the demesne lands of the monastery, and were situate in Sherbourne, and were in the occupation of the abbat for the use of the house, ad usum hospitii, paying yearly 104s. 8d.: also the manor of Wyke. May 1st, 1539, for the sum of 1242l. 3s. 9d. the king granted the reversion of the premises, and the rents of 104s. 1d. and 16l. 10s. 6d. also the site of the church steeple, campanile, and church-yard of the monastery, a water-mill, a messuage within and without, or near the said site and precincts, all timber, &c. on the premises, Iverwood, and the land thereof near Ivermead, paying yearly 15s. also the manors of Bradford and Wyke (except the rectory and advowson of the vicarage of Bradford), Trill in Clifton, parcel of ditto, the manor of Creech in Purbeck; and within these manors and other premises to have court leets, hundred, view of frank pledge, &c. and all rights, &c. in as ample a manner as the last abbat of Sherbourne or any of his predecessors enjoyed it.^m

In 1610, Sir Ralph Horsey and George his son conveyed to John Foyle and Richard Ryves, the manor, monastery, and abbey of Sherbourne, and their lands in Sherbourne and Alveston. Foyle and Ryves by their order conveyed the same to Robert Coker, Esq. and his heirs for ever. Mr. Coker the next year paid 100l. for the premises. But Sir Henry Spelman, in his History of Sacrilege, p. 279, informs us that Sir Ralph Horsey sold the demesnes of the monastery and the parsonage to Mr. Sticles, and he, about 1620, to Lord Digby, in whose family it still continues.ⁿ

In the parish register of Sherbourne, which begins November, 1st, 1538, is the following entry, fol. 4. a.

"The ffest of the Anun'cation of our Lady beinge the Shere Thursday in Cena Domini, the yeare of our Lord 1540, and the 31. of our Soueraigne Lord King Henry the 8th, the Monks being expelled and the house suppressed by the Kings auctoritie, Master John Horsy knight, counceller to the said Kinges grace, bought the said suppressed Howse to him seeulf and to his heyers in ffee for ever, and then the said Master Horsy knight sold the said Church and the ground to the Vicar and parish of Shurbourn for one C. markes, to them and their successors for ever, and the said Vicar and parish toke possession one the same the daye and yeare aboue said.

P^r. me D. Jol'em Chettmyll vic."

The Conventual, now the parish church of Sherbourne, is a venerable structure, built in the form of a cross. On the north side, in the arches and pillars which support the tower, in the south porch, and at the lower part of the west end, are the remains of Norman architecture: but the main body of the building, as well as its architectural decorations, are of the time of Henry the Sixth.

Dugdale, in his Monasticon, in a subsequent page to that in which he made the first mention of Sherbourne,^o gave the following extract from Leland's Itinerary, in English and Latin. The Latin, for the sake of compression, has been here placed as a note. The greater part of it describes the fire of 1436, with the rebuilding of the church.

"The bishops of Sarum sete was a long time at Shirburne. Syns, monks were set there for chanons. The body of the abbay chirch dedicate to our Lady, servid ontille a hunderithe yeres syns for the chife parochie chirch of the town. This was the cause of the abolition of the paroch chirch there: the monks and the tounes menne felle at variaunce bycause the tounes men tooke privilege to use the sacrament of baptisme in the chappelle of Alhalows, whereupon one Walter Gallor a stoute bocher dwelling in Shirburne defacid clene the font stone, and aftyr, the variaunce growing to a playne sedition, and the townes menne by the mene of an erle of Huntendune lying in those quarters and taking the tounes menses part, and the bishops of Saresbyri the monks part; a prest of Alhawlois shot a shaft with fier into the toppe of that part of S. Mary chirch that divided the est part that the monks usyd from that the tounes menne usid: and this partition chancing at that tyme to be thakkid in, the roffe was set a fier, and consequently al the hole chirch, the lede and bells meltid, was defacid. Then Bradeford, abbate of Shirburne, persecutid this in-cell of Horton, John Crab alias Gyll seneschall, William Meyr alias Skynner hospitalarius, John Maere elemosynarius, Henry Gybbys, John London pincerna, Edmond Salisbury infirmarius, Henry Frome subscrista, and William Mor, expresse professi; Roger Pyers, Thomas Punchardon, Thomas Harrys, and Robert Coker, monks.

^g These were, John Sherborn prior, John Dorchester prior of the jurie, and the tounes men were forcid to contribute to the reedifying of this chirch. But after this time Alhalowes chirch, & not S. Maries, was usid for the parochie chirche. Al the est part of S. Mary chirch was reedyfied yn abbate Bradefords tyme, saving a chapelle of our Lady, an old pece of worke that the fier came not to by reason that it was of an elder building.

"There were of ancient time buried two kings, sonnes to Ethelwolve King of West Saxons, yn a place behinde the highe altare of S. Marie chirche, but ther now be no tumbes, nor no writing of them sene.^a

"A noble man caullid Philip Fitzpayne was buryid and his wife with hym, under an arch on the north side of the presbyterie. This tumbre was of late defacyd.

"Peter Ramesunne, next abbate savinge one to Bradeford, building a fundamentis at^b the west part of S. Marie chirche. The porche of the south side of the body of S. Mary chirche ys an ancient pece of worke and was not defacid with fyer bycause it stode with a far lower rofe then the body of the chirch did.

"The cloyster of the abbay on the north side of the chirch was buildyd by one abbate Frithe. This abbate was not very long afore Bradeford's tyme. Myer the last abbate of Shirburne savinge one, made the fair castel over the conduit in the cloister and the spouts of it. The hedde of this water is in a pere^c of the toun, and is caullid New-Welle. The chapiter house ys ancient, and in the volte of it be payntid the image of bishops that had ther sete at Shirburne. One saint John a nobleman lyith in the chapitre house. Ramesune abbate sette a chapele caullid our Lady of Bow hard to the south side of the old Lady chapelle. Ther is an old arch of a gate at the est southeast end of S. Mary chirch, as a tokyn that of old tyme the close of chanons or monks was enwallid about."^d

Among the ornaments which are carved upon the wall and roof of Sherbourne church the initial of Abbat Rampsham, or Ramsam's christian name, with his rebus, frequently occur. His rebus was a scroll with the word SAM, and a large P enclosing a ram and a crozier. In the angle on the south side of the great west door is a shield, with the figure of a ram holding a scroll with the words Peter Ramsam. The rebus likewise occurs in stained glass.

Leland, in his Itinerary, says, "The Prior of Shirburn lying in the Town can bring me to the old Librarie yn Shirburne." In his Collectanea he has preserved the names of several of the works he found there.

"Adam Berchingensis, monachus Sireburnensis, de divina et humana Natura, carmine, sed rithmico.

"Idem super quatuor Evangelia ad Joannem canonicum Saresbiriensem: soluta oratione.

Hutchins has engraved a broken impression of the seal of Sherbourne Abbey. In the centre is the rude representation of a church. The legend round appears to be "SIGILLU SĒE MA NSIS ÆCCLĒ."

Tanner, in his Notitia Monastica, notices a Roll of Charters to Sherbourne Abbey as preserved among the Records of the Court of Augmentations. Dugdale, it will be seen, had access to it.

The Harleian Manuscript in the British Museum, No. 2044, art. 8, contains abstracts of several charters to Sherbourne. Among them, one from John de Port, confirming lands in Sherbourne and Sipford, and one from Robert de St. John in 1247, respecting the patronage of St. Andrew's church in Sherbourne.

Horton in Dorsetshire, and Cadweli or Kidwelly in Caermarthenshire, were subordinate priories or cells to Sherbourne.

Charta Æthelredi regis, qua licentiam concedit Episcopo Wlsino ordinandi et instituendi monachos Benedictinos in cœnobio Scireburnensis Ecclesiae: qua etiam Cœnobia rus annotavit.^b

ANNO ab incarnationis dominicæ^c DCCCC. nonagesimo octavo, ego Æthelredus totius Albionis dei gubernante moderamine basileus, suadente archiepiscopo Ælfrico, cum consilio meorum episcoporum ac principum, seu nobilium, michique fidelium assistentium, annui episcopo Wlsino ordinare monachicæ conversationis normam, castamque vitam et deo amabilem secundum institutionem sancti patris Benedicti, in cœnobio Scireburnensis Ecclesiae; ea ratione videlicet ut quisquis successor ei advenerit, sive pius sive crudelis, non habeat facultatem male tractare res monachorum, sit pastor non tyrannus, gubernet ad fratrum utilitatem, secundum pastorem auctoritatem, non ad lupinam rapacitatem; pascat suos et se sequentes; habeat ipse solus victum inter fratres: sicut scriptum est, principem populorum te constitui. Esto in illis quasi unus ex illis. Regat ipse juxta animarum et corporum utilitatem substantiam monasterii, ita duntaxat ut fratrum consilio non sit ignotum quicquid agatur. Et si forte, quod absit, evenerit ut pastor et grex discordantur,^d semper ad examen archiepiscopi reservetur, et ipse regi intimet ut justa correctio sequatur. Et quia mos minime apud nos consentit ut in episcopali sede abbas constitua-tur, fiat ipse episcopus eis abbas et pater, et ipsi fratres obedientes ei sint sicuti filii, et monachi cum castitate et humilitate et subjectione secundum disciplinam almi patris nostri Benedicti, ut una bravium æternæ coronæ accipere mereantur. Et quoniam, sicut ait apostolus, nos sumus in quos fines seculorum devenerunt, et multiplicato jam genere humano, adeo ut per plures græ^e inopiæ ruris non habentes ubi vel arando, vel fodiendo, agriculturam

Hoc est in ipsa Scireburna centum agelli in loco qui dicitur Stocland, et prædium monasterii sicut Wlsinus episcopus fossis sæpibusque girare curavit; deinde novem cassatos in loco qui ab incolis Holancumb nuncupatur: item, in Halganstoke xv. in Thorford vii. in Bradanford x. in Wonburna v. in Westun viii. in Stapulbreicge xx. in Wulfheardigstoke x. in Cumbtun viii. in Osanstoke ii. et massam unam juxta ripam maris quæ dicitur Ætlim. Et quicquid deus his auxerit ex donis fidelium, continua securitate et jugi libertate possideant fratres inibi degentes, tribus exceptis, quæ omnibus communicata sunt, scilicet expeditione, pontis, arcisve restauratione: tamen nulli debitores sint in rogi constructione, eo quod monasterium hoc opus indigere novimus. Si forte, quod absit, hanc nostram donationem quispiam annullare temptaverit, et ad libitum proprios deflectere, sciat se æquissimo judici rationem redditurum, clangente tuba archangeli extremo examine, ubi omnis æquitas et justitia, Christo judicante, cunctis manifestabitur. Ego Æthelredus rex Anglorum hanc libertatem concedo sæpedito monasterio sub episcopo quemcunque elegerit semper regendo, et signaculo sanctæ Crucis ✠ hanc munificentiam consigno coram his testibus. Monastery of Lestingeham,

LESTINGEHAM, a destroyed Monastery, called also Lastingei,^a Lestingay,^b Laestingaeu,^c and Leastingaeig,^d was situated in the Deanry of Rydale and Archdeaconry of Cleveland, at no great distance from Whitby.^e

Bede and John of Tinemouth, in passages of their Histories, the originals of which will presently be quoted, assure us that

Oidilvald or Edilbald, king of Deira, the son of St. Oswald, gave to Cedd, bishop of the East Angles, a plot of ground on which to found a monastery; the site of which was afterwards called Laestingaeu, or Lestingay. John of Tinemouth places the foundation in the year 648. Bede places it a few years later.

Cedd, who was by birth a Northumbrian, appears to have been greatly assisted in his work by his brother Cynebil, who formed the convent in religious customs according to the rites of that at Lindisfarne. Cedd, however, though principally occupied in ruling a distant bishoprick, was uniform in his attentions to the monastery, and, visiting it at a time of sickness, died there in 664. He was first buried without the monastery, but afterwards, when a church was built of stone in honour of the Virgin Mary, his body was removed into it, and interred on the right hand side of the altar.

At his death he bestowed the government of the monastery on his brother CEADDA, who was afterwards consecrated in the see of York.^f Of Ceadda more particulars will be found in the fourth book of Bede's History. The Saxon Chronicle places his consecration in 664.^g Bede in 669.^h Florence of Worcester and one or two other of our historiansⁱ state, that having governed the see of York three years, he returned to his monastery of Lestingeham. He died in the year 674.

From this time to the period of the Norman Conquest we know little of the history of Lestingeham. The monastery is said to have been completely ruined in the Danish wars: probably during the irruption of Hinguar and Hubba in 870.^k

Dugdale, relating the history of the foundation of St. Mary's abbey at York, quotes the narrative of Stephen the first abbat. Stephen, it appears, became a monk of Whitby in 1078, where he soon after succeeded Renfrid as abbat; but finding the monastery exposed to pirates and robbers, as well as oppressed by the lord of the fee, he besought the king to permit his removal with his monks from Whitby to Lestingeham, where the former convent had long ceased to exist.^l Lestingeham being also at that time a part of the royal domain, where greater protection could be looked for by monks than from an individual lord.

The king having acceded to his request, the restoration of the place began; "Hunc ergo locum, à rege nobis datum, paulatim restaurare, et quæ habitationi monachicæ erant necessaria cœpimus edificare." The monastery, however, being still infested by robbers, and Alan earl of Brittany^m having endowed it with the church of St. Olave and four acres of land at York, the fraternity with their abbat removed their residence in 1088 to that city.

The later history of the restored monastery, after its removal, is reserved for another place.

Ut idem Episcopus Cedd, locum monasterii construendi ab Oswaldo rege accipiens, orationibus et jejuniis Domino consecraverit, et de obitu ipsius. Cap. xxiii.

SOLEBAT autem vir Domini, cum apud Orientales-Saxones episcopatus officio fungeretur, sæpius etiam suam, id est Nord-Humbrorum^a provinciam, exhortandi gratia, revisere. Quem cum Edilwaldus,^b filius Oswaldi regis, qui in Deirorum partibus regnum habebat, virum sanctum, et sapientem, probumque moribus videret, postulavit eum possessionem terræ aliquam a se, ad construendum monasterium,^c in quo ipse rex, et frequentius ad deprecandum Dominum, verbumque audiendum advenire, et defunctos^d sepelire deberet. Nam et ipsum^e fideliter credidit, multum juvari eorum orationibus quotidianis, qui illo in loco Domino servirent. Habuerat autem idem rex secum fratrem germanum ejusdem episcopi, vocabulo Celin,^f virum æquè Deo devotum, qui et ipsi ac familiæ ipsius verbum et sacramenta fidei (erat enim presbyter) ministrare solebat, per cujus notitiam maximè ad diligendum noscendumque episcopum pervenit. Favens ergo votis regis Antistes, elegit sibi locum monasterii construendi in montibus arduis ac remotis; in quibus latronum magis latibula ac lustra ferarum quam habitacula fuisse videbantur hominum: ut juxta Prophetiam Esaïæ in cubilibus in quibus prius dracones habitabant, orientur viro^g calami et junci, id est quod fructus bonorum operum ibi nascerentur, ubi prius vel bestię comorari, vel homines bestialiter vivere consueverant. Studens autem vir Domini acceptum monasterii locum primò precibus ac jejuniis à pristina flagitiorum, sorde purgare, et sic in eo monasterii fundamenta jacere, postulavit a rege, ut sibi per totum quadragesimæ tempus, quod instabat, facultatem ac licentiam ibidem orationis causa, demorandi concederet. Quibus diebus cunctis, excepta dominica, jejunium ad vesperam juxta morem protelans, nec tunc^h nisi panis per modicum, et unum ovum gallinaceum, cum parvo lacte aqua mixto percipiebat. Dicebat enim hanc esse consuetudinem eorum a quibus normam disciplinæ regularis didicerat, ut accepta nuper loca ad faciendum monasterium vel ecclesiam, priùs orationibus ac jejuniis domino consecrent. Cumque decem dies quadragesimæ restarent, venit qui clamaret eum ad regem; at ille ne opus religiosum negotiorum regalium causâ intermitteretur, petiit presbyterum suum Cymbellum,ⁱ qui etiam frater germanus erat ipsius, pia cepta^k complere. Cui cum ille libenter acquiesceret, expleto studio jejuniorum ut rationis,^l fecit ibi monasterium quod nunc Lestinghen vocatur, et religiosis moribus juxta ritum^m Lindisfarnensium ubi educatus erat, instituit. Qui cum annis multis et in præfata provincia episcopatum administraret, et hujus quoque monasterii statutis præpositisⁿ curam gereret, casu contigit ut ad ipsum monasterium tempore mortalitatis adveniens, tactus ibidem infirmitate corporis obiret. Qui primò quidem foris sepultus est, tempore autem procedente, in monasterio ecclesia est in honorem beatæ Dei Genetricis de lapide facta, et in illa corpus ipsius ad dextram altaris reconditum.

ANNO Domini DCXLVIII. Rex Deirorum Edilbaldus, filius sancti Oswaldi, dedit Cedde locum in arduis montibus qui vocatur Lestingay ad construendum inibi monasterium. Sed Cedde præfatus, antequam monasterium illud fundaret, per totam quadragesimam jejunavit usque ad vesperam, et tunc modicum panis, unum ovum gallinaceum, cum parvo lacte aqua mixto sumebat, juxta morem discipulorum Aidani, à quibus edoctus fuerat. Hunc locum frater suus Thimbel rexit post eum, et tempore mortalitatis ibidem sepultus est.

Peterborough Monastery,

I N

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

THE Monastery of Peterborough was anciently named Medeshamsted, as is supposed, from the meads or meadows which lie on both sides of the river Nen. It retained this name until the time of Adulphus, the eighth abbat, in the reign of King Edgar, when the monastery having been burnt by the Danes, its name was changed to Burch or Burg.

Matthew of Westminster, speaking of the inroad by the Danes under Hinguar and Hubba in the year 870, and of the monasteries which were burnt at that time, calls it Hamstede; he says, "horum autem nomina cœnobiorum sunt, Croulandia, Thorneia, Rameseia, Hamstede quod nunc BURGUM SANCTI PETRI dicitur."^a

Peterborough was the name given to the monastery of Burgh after its restoration by Ethelwold bishop of Winchester in 970.^b

A monasterio S. Petro dicato, et PRIVILEGIIS VATICANIS imbuto BURGUS S. PETRI appellatus est." Malmesbury, de Gestis Pontif. lib. iv. ed. Savile, p. 166, refers the change of name to the time of abbat Kenulfus, soon after 992. "Postquam Kenulfus abbas locum muro erexit a similitudine urbis BURCH vocatus est." Peada king of Mercia, the son of Penda, is agreed to have been the first founder of Medeshamsted about the year 650: after whose death in 656 the encouragement of the foundation was taken up by his brother Wulfere or Wulferus, his younger brother Ætheldred and his sisters Kyneburga and Kyneswitha assisting him therein until the same was perfected.^d The monastery was dedicated to St. Peter, and had large privileges and immunities bestowed upon it as well as fair possessions.^e

SAXULFUS, or, as Bede calls him, Sexuulfus, was the first abbat. Bede indeed, who appears to have been followed by other historians, calls him the builder of the monastery; "Sexuulfus qui erat Constructor et abbas monasterii quod dicitur Medeshamstedi, in regione Gyrviorum:"^f and we find the same language held in the charter granted by Wulferus. Hugh Whyte, or Candidus, relates that in the foundation of the church such stones were laid as that eight yoke of oxen could scarcely draw one of them.^g

The Saxon Chronicle is minute on the progress of the structure under Wulferus. At its consecration that monarch is stated to have announced his endowment of the monastery, as well as its privileges, in person.^h The Immanissimos itaque lapides in fundamentis cœpit jacere, quales octo paria boum, vix unum traherent; quos et nos vidimus, cum esset combustum et destructum ipsum monasterium, ut domus Dei firmiter staret super firmam Petram ædificata." Hug. Candidi Hist. p. 4. ed. Sparke. These stones are supposed to have been dug in Bernack Quarries. See Bridges, Hist. Northamptonshire, vol. ii. p. 546.

^h "An. DCLVI. Hoc anno, fuit Peada occisus; et Wulferus, filius Pendæ, capessit Merciorum regnum. Ejus tempore, auctum est admodum divitiis Medeshamstede, quod ejus frater ædificare incœperat. Ei enim favebat Rex magnopere, gratia fratris sui Peadæ, et gratia Oswii, dilecti in Christiana fide con-fratris, et gratia Saxulfi Abbatis. Quocirca dixit se id insigne facturum et ornaturum, adductus hortatu fratrum suorum Æthelredi et Merwalæ; et hortatu sororum suarum, Kyneburgæ et Kyneswithæ; et hortatu archiepiscopi, qui dictus est Deus-dedit; et hortatu omnium suorum optimatum, clericorum et laicorum qui in regno suo essent: quod quidem fecit. Tum mittebat Rex ad Abbatem, ut is quam celerrime ad se veniret: quod et factum. Tum dicebat Rex Abbati; "Dilecte Saxulfe, accessivi te ob animæ meæ utilitatem; idque ejus rei causa factum sit diserte enarrabo. Frater meus Peada, meusque dilectus amicus Oswius incœperunt quoddam Monasterium, Christi in honorem, ac Sancti Petri. Verum frater meus decessit ex hac vita. uti Christo visum est; atque te oratum velim, dilecte amice, ut occupentur sedulo in isto opere; ego autem tibi eam in rem subministrabo aurum et argentum, terras et possessiones, et quicquid isti operi usui futurum est." Tum profectus est Abbas domum, cœpitque operari et eo provexit, ut ei Christo favente paucis annis esset Monasterium effectum. Ubi Regi id narraretur, admodum gavisus est, ac jussit iudici per totam nationem, omnibus Thanis, Archiepiscopo, Episcopis, Comitibus, omniisque qui Deum diligerent, ut ad se venirent; et constituit diem quo Monasterium consecraretur. Dum consecrarent Monasterium, adfuit Rex Wulferus, ac ejus frater Æthelredus, ejusque sorores, Kyneburga et Kyneswitha. Monasterium autem consecrabat Deus-dedit, archiepiscopus de Cantwarbyrig; et episcopus de Rofecæster, Ithamarus; et episcopus de Lundonia, qui dictus est Wina; et Merciorum episcopus, Jeruman nuncupatus; et Tuda episcopus. Interfuit etiam Wilfridus presbyter, qui postea factus est episcopus; et ibi fuerunt omnes illius thani, quotquot essent in suo regno. Ubi Monasterium fuisset consecratum sancti Petri nomine, et sancti Pauli, et sancti Andree, de sede surrexit Rex coram omnibus thanis, ac dixit elata voce: "Gratiæ sint altissimo omnipotenti Deo ob hunc honorem qui ei hic præstitus est: ipse autem hodie celebrabo Christum et sanctum Petrum; volo item ut vos omnes confirmetis mea verba."

The "Chronicon Angliæ per Johannem Abbatem Burgi S. Petri" stiles Saxulfus Comes, or Earl; though he is generally spoken of merely as an ecclesiastic. His foundation of a Hermitage at Thorney otherwise Ancarig in Cambridgeshire, will be hereafter noticed in its proper place. He is represented to have been a pious, prudent man, and, having ruled the Monastery of Medeshamstede thirteen years, was translated, according to Gunton, to the bishoprick of Durham, then called Lindisfarne; but according to the more general testimony of Historians, to the bishoprick of the Middle English or Mercians.^b This See was, in fact, that of Litchfield and Coventry, among the possessors of which Bishop Godwin^c notices Saxulphus. According to the Chronicon Litchfeldense^d he was advanced to it in 673; though Ralph de Diceto says in 678.^e The Litchfield Chronicle places his death in 674:^f but Bede, mentioning the devastation of Kent by Æthelred in 676, describes Putta bishop of Rochester as flying to Saxulfus for safety.^g Simeon of Durham, indeed, quotes a Charter of the year 685 in which Saxulfus describes himself as bishop of the Mercians.^h

CUTHBALDUS, a monk of Medeshamsted, succeeded Saxulfus as abbat, on the promotion of the latter to the See of Litchfield. Hugh Candidus describes him as a person of singular piety and wisdom, and withal so prudent in ecclesiastical affairs, that the monks of many other places, dependant on Medeshamsted, as Ancarig or Thorney, Brickleswith, Bredun, Wermundeseya, Reppingas, and Wochingas, finding they could not have him for their governor, desired to have superiors of his appointing.ⁱ He is stated to have been elected "Saxulfi consensu et voluntate." In the time of this Cuthbaldus, Wulfere or Wulferus, died according to the Saxon Chronicle, in the year 675; and was succeeded by his brother Etheldred who has been already mentioned.^k Etheldred appears to have been a greater benefactor to the Monastery than either of his brothers.^l He not only bestowed

Ego Wulferus dono hodie sancto Petro, et abbati Saxulfo, monachisque de Monasterio, has terras, et aquas, et stagna, et paludes, et piscinas, et omnes terras circumjacentes quæ de meo jure regali sunt, adeo immuncs, ut non quisquam habeat inde ullum vectigal, præter Abbatem, et monachos. Hæ sunt terræ atque paludes quas Rex donavit sancti Petri Monasterio. Deinde dixit Rex: 'Exiguum hoc munus est; volo autem ut ii id teneant adeo regaliter, adeoque libere, ut inde nullum exigatur gildum, aut gavlum, nisi quod penditur Monachis solis. Hoc ita liberabo Monasterium, ut nulli subiciatur, nisi soli Romæ: volo item ut hic quæramus sanctum Petrum universi, qui Romam haud poterimus proficisci.' Dum hæc loqueretur Rex, rogavit Abbas ut sibi id concederet quod ab eo esset petiturus: Rex autem id ei concessit. 'Habeo hic (inquit Abbas) religiosos Monachos, qui vellent in his partibus agere vitam in Anachoresi, si ubi id fieret cognoscerent. Prope autem est quædam Insula quæ dicitur Ancarig, atque cam peto, ut ibi exstruamus Monasterium sanctæ Mariæ in honorem, quo ibi possint degere, quotquot suam vitam agere cupiunt in pace ac quiete.' Tum respondens Rex, ita locutus est: 'Saxulfe dilecte, non id solum quod petis, verum omnia quæ cognovero te rogare Domini nostri gratia, pariter probo ac concedo. Rogo item te, frater Æthelrede, meæque sorores, Cyneburga, et Cyneswitha, in animæ vestræ redemptionem, ut sitis testes, utque id scribatis vestris digitis. Peto etiam ab omnibus qui mihi successerint, sint ii mei filii, sint mei fratres, aut Reges (alii quicunque) mei successores, ut nostrum munus inviolatum permaneat, sicut vellent esse participes vitæ æternæ, et sicut vellent evadere æternum supplicium. Quicumque nostrum munus, aut alterius cujuspiam boni viri munus diminuerit, diminuat ejus partem cœlestis Janitor in regno cœlorum.' Hi sunt testes qui adfuerunt, quique ei subscriperunt cum suis digitis Christi crucem, ac confirmabant cum suis linguis. Id est, primus Rex Wulferus, qui id confirmabat primum cum suo verbo, ac deinde cum suis digitis subscripsit Christi crucem, atque ita locutus est. 'Ego Wulferus Rex, cum Regibus, et cum Comitibus, et cum Ducibus, et cum Thanis testibus mei muneris, coram Archiepiscopo Deus-dedit, confirmo cum Christi cruce.' ✠. Et ego Oswi, Northynbrorum Rex, hujus Monasterii amicus, atque Abbatis Saxulfi, illud laudo cum Christi cruce. ✠. Et ego Sigherus Rex isti consentio cum Christi cruce. ✠. Et ego Sibbi Rex istud subscribo cum Christi cruce. ✠. Et ego Æthelredus, Regis frater, eidem consentio cum Christi cruce. ✠. Et nos Regis sorores, Cyneburga et Cyneswitha, id laudamus. Et ego Cantwarensis Archiepiscopus Deus-dedit isti consentio. Deinde id confirmabant reliqui omnes, quotquot ibi essent, cum Christi cruce. ✠. Isti fuerunt nominatim: Ithamarus, Episcopus de Rofceester; et Wina, Episcopus de Lundonia; et Jerumanus, qui fuit Merciorum Episcopus; et Eoppa presbyter, quem Rex Wulferus misit ad prædicandum Christianismum in Vecta; et Saxulfus Abbas; et Imminus Præfectus; et Eadberhtus Præfectus; et Herefridus Præfectus; et Wilberhtus Præfectus; et Abon Præfectus; Æthelboldus; Brordanus; Wilberhtus; Æthelmundus; Frethegisus. Hi alique multi, qui fuerunt, Regis Optimates id confirmabant universi. Hæc Charta scripta est post Domini nostri Nativitatem DCLXIV. Regis Wulferi septimo anno, Archiepiscopi Deus-dedit ix. anno. Denunciabant deinde Dei execrationem, et omnium Sanctorum execrationem, ac universi populi Christiani, in eum qui aliquid violaret quod ibi esset factum. ESTO, respondent omnes. AMEN. Ubi hoc factum esset, mittebat Rex Romam ad Papam, qui tum fuit Vitalianus, ac rogabat ut confirmaret suis literis, suaque benedictione, omnia hæc supradicta: Itaque Papa mittebat literas hujusmodi. 'Ego Vitalianus Papa concedo tibi, Wulfere Rex, ac Deus-dedit Archiepis-

Si quispiam de hoc aliquid violarit, sanctus Petrus cum suo gladio eum perdat: quisquis id observarit, sanctus Petrus cum cœlorum clave aperiat ei cœlorum regnum.' ⁱ Hug. Candidi Historia, ap. Sparke, pp. 8, 9. Bishop Tanner, Notit. Mon. ed. Nasmith, Northampt. vi. says, these monasteries of BRICKLESWORTH, BREDON, WERMUNDSEY, REPPINGAS, and WOOCKINGAS, are all mentioned as daughter abbies that had their rise from Medeshamstede, and were Cells to it or dependents upon it in the time of Cuthbaldus the second abbat, or about A.D. 690. and are supposed to have been near Peterborough, though the particular situations of them are not now known. He hazards a conjecture that Bricklesworth, Bredon, and Woockingas may be Brixworth, Braden, and Wickens. Of these abbies Bredon seems to have been the chief; see the Charter granted to it by Berhtwulfus in the year 844. Num. V. See also 'Carta de Woccinges,' Num. IV. They were all destroyed in 870, and never restored.

^k See Chron. Sax. p. 41.

^l Gunton says, p. 4, "King Wolfere dying without issue, his brother Etheldred succeeded him, and continued his good affection to the monastery of Medeshamsted; the royal founder whereof built also an House for the Abbot, which, upon the dissolution by Henry the Eighth, became the Bishop's Palace; a building very large and stately, as this present age can testify: all the rooms of common habitation being built above stairs, and underneath were very fair vaults and goodly cellars for several uses. The great hall, a magnificent room, had at the upper end, in the wall, very high above the ground, three stately thrones, wherein were placed, sitting, the three royal Founders carved curiously of wood, painted and gilt, which in the year 1644 were pulled down, and broken to pieces. Under them were written in ancient characters, lately renewed, these three verses,

'Per Peadam primo domus hæc fundatur ab imo.

Post per Wolferum stabat possessio rerum.

Favit Ethelredus fraternum ponere fœdus.'

To which there was added a fourth when the three old ones were renewed,

'Præbeat exemplum, rara est concordia fratrum.'

A very ancient Register of Peterborough abbey which will be more fully noticed hereafter, preserved among the manuscripts belonging to the Society of Antiquaries of London, No. 60. gives the following account of Ethelred's donations,

"Ætelredus gloriosus rex Mercianorum cum venisset gratia orationum lucrandarum et visitandi dei servos ad monasterium monachorum quod constructum erat in loco cui vocabulum est Medeshamstede in regione Gyrviorum, pro remedio animæ suæ et desiderio vitæ æternæ, inventis fratribus in prædicto monasterio terram tradidit, quæ vocatur Leugttredun. xxx. manentes habentem. Post non multum vero temporis cum ex supradictis fratribus quidam eundem regem Ædilredum quandam ob causam adirent ipse rex ob confirmationem et in testimonium suæ donationis in proprio cubiculo et coram multis testibus glebanum sumptum de præfata terra Leugttredun imposuit super codicem Evangeliorum. Hi sunt testes qui præsentibus aderant; Scxulfus episcopus Mercianorum, Wecca et Berhtun monachi, et Hosthryda ipsius regis regina, Herifrit et Eadfrith principes regis Ædilredi ut in perpetuum nullus fragili et ancipite ac invita huic benedicta donatione christiani regis Ædilredi contraire ausu temerario temptaret, qui sibi divinam donationem adesse optaret in futura vita. Amen."

upon it numerous lordships, but sent Wilfrid Archbishop of York to Rome, who procured from Pope Agatho several extraordinary privileges, with a confirmation of its former liberties.^a Etheldred however died in 705, and was buried at Bardney;^b having, according to the Saxon Chronicle, become a monk there in the year preceding. The time of Cuthbaldus's death is uncertain, but from the circumstance of Bishop Wylfrid being stated to have died in his time at the manor of Oundle, it is conjectured to have been after the year 709.^c

Of EGBALDUS, the successor of Cuthbald, nothing more is known than that he was one of the witnesses to the Charter granted by King Ethelbald to Croyland Abbey in the year 716.^d

Of PUSE or PUSA, the next abbat, we have the name only.^e

BENNA, or BEONNA, the fifth abbat, was a witness to the Charter of King Offa granted to the Monastery of Croyland in 793.^f Dr. Patrick, in the Supplement to Gunton's History, quotes a Charter of his respecting lands in Suinesheade.^g

CELREDUS, or SELREDUS, occurs abbat here in 806. His brother, Siwardus, was the third abbat of Croyland.^h Dr. Patrick supposes him to have been the same with Ceolred, who in the year 849 subscribed to a Charter of King Berthwulfus or Beorthwulfus, in which great privileges were granted to the Monastery of Breodun (dependant on Medeshamstede), then governed by the venerable Abbat Eanmundus.ⁱ The Saxon Chronicle represents him as still abbat of Medeshamstede in the year 852.^k

To HEDDA, who succeeded Celredus as abbat here, several dates are assigned not at all compatible with the last notice of Celredus in the Saxon Chronicle. Ingulphus gives us copies of Charters to Croyland Abbey from Witlaf King of Mercia in 833, from Bertulphus in 851, and from Beorred in 866, to all of which the name of Hedda Abbat of Medeshamstede occurs as a subscribing witness.^l Certain it is that he was abbat here in 870, when the Monastery was destroyed by the Danes. For the best account of this remarkable event we are indebted to Ingulphus. The Monastery of Croyland was the first object of their vengeance: on the fourth day from the ruin of which they proceeded to Medeshamstede, where the inhabitants of the surrounding country had retired. On a renewed assault of the Danes, Tulba the brother of Earl Hulba was severely wounded, when Hulba, becoming enraged, having forced an entrance into the Monastery, slew all the monks with his own hand, leaving the slaughter of the rest to his soldiers. Hedda fell with his monks. The altars, monuments, library, and evidences of the Monastery were destroyed or torn in pieces, and the church and offices devoured by a fire which lasted fifteen days.^m Godricus, who was elected Abbat of Croyland by such of the monks of that monastery as survived, is stated to have gone over to Medeshamstede and to have buried the bodies of Hedda and the monks who were there slain, amounting to the number of eighty-four, in one large grave, in the middle of the church yard by the east front of the monastery; setting up over them a pyramidal stone, three feet in height, three in length, and one in thickness, engraven with the pictures of the abbat and his monks about him. This stone, in memory of the destroyed monastery, he named Medeshamsted; and every year after, while he lived, he visited that place, pitching his tent over the stone, and saying mass, two several days, for the souls of abbat Hedda and his monks. The high-way, then, into Holand, was through the church yard, having that monumental stone on the right hand, and a cross of stone over against it, also erected by Godricus, on the left, that passers by, in memory of the ruined monastery, might remember to pray for the souls of those there buried.ⁿ

Beorred King of Mercia, the year after the destruction of Medeshamsted by the Danes, A.D. 871, possessed himself by violence of all the lands between Stamford, Huntingdon, and Wisbeach, belonging to the church: giving those which lay more remote to his soldiers and stipendiaries.^o

Secundo assultu irrupentibus Paganis, Tulba, frater Hulbæ Comitis, jactu lapidis graviter læsus corrui in ipso introitu, et manibus satellitum suorum portatus in tentorium Hulbæ fratris sui, etiam de vita desperatus est. Unde Hulba supra modum ira æstuans, et maxime in monachos effratus, omnes sanctæ religionis schemate vestitos manu sua interfecit; ceteri in ceteros grassabantur; nemo de toto monasterio salvatus est; tam venerabilis pater dominus Hedda abbas, quam monachi sui universi cum omnibus compatriotis occiduntur." Altaria omnia suffossa, monumenta universa confracta, sanctorum librorum ingens bibliotheca combusta, chartarum Monasterii immensa copia discepta, sanctorum virginum Kyneburgæ, Kyneswitæ, ac Tibbæ pretiosa pignora pedibus conculcata, muri funditus eversi, ipsa Ecclesia cum omnibus officinis concremata, per totam quindenam sequentem jugi incendio conflabat." ⁿ Gunton, Hist. Peterb. p. 8. from Ingulphus ut supr. p. 24. The Cross, Gunton adds, has been long since demolished, and the place where it stood is not exactly known: but the stone is remaining agreeable to Ingulphus's description." Dr. Patrick has engraved this monument in the Supplement to Gunton, p. 243: and it has been since engraved better, though not yet with sufficient fidelity, by Carter, in his "Specimens of ancient Sculpture and Painting." It is of black and blue marble: and is now placed behind the high altar of the Minster. It is shaped like a shrine, and is undoubtedly of high antiquity; but whether it is the monument of Hedda and his monks may be less certain, as the figures on it are unquestionably those of our Saviour and his Apostles. The date upon it of 870 is in modern characters.

Gunton says, p. 9. "There was within these few years a door in the church (of Peterborough) having the picture of Abbot Hedda, and the king or captain of the Danes, as it were expostulating the business, and underneath were these four verses written in ancient Saxon letters, as if they had been spoken by the abbot:

"Fers mala, pejora timeas, cetasque rigori,
Nec tenere mora, ne tenere mori.

Hoc ne dabo domitus quod Barbarus advena quærit?

Da, necer immeritus, mors mihi munus erit."

lay buried in its own ruins almost a hundred years: till, in the time of Edgar, about the year 966, its restoration was undertaken by Athelwold Bishop of Winchester. Hugh Whyte, or Candidus, informs us^a that Athelwold was warned of God in the night that he should go to the midland English or Mercians, and repair the monastery of St. Peter; that taking his journey into these parts, he came to Undala (now Oundle), supposing that to be the place: but, being warned a second time, that he should follow the course of the river, he came at length to Medeshamsted. "Et ecce iterum ei Dominus apparere dignatus est, monens ipsum ut per crepidinem ipsius alvei paululum progrediretur, donec ad ipsos parietes ipsius combusti monasterii perveniret." Having cleared the area of the church, which he found used as a receptacle for herds of cattle, he returned to Winchester to make preparations for the restoration of the Monastery. When, having put up his fervent prayers to God to incline the hearts of King Edgar, and his queen and court, to contribute their assistance in the work, he was overheard by the queen, who thenceforth solicited the king for its reparation. Edgar patronized the undertaking, and Athelwold completed the Monastery in 970.

"The Monastery," says Gunton, "thus reedified, King Edgar desirous to see it, went thither, with Dunstan then archbishop of Canterbury, and Oswald archbishop of York, attended also with most of the nobility and clergy of England, who all approved and applauded both the place and work. But when King Edgar heard that some charters and writings, which some monks had secured from the fury of the Danes, were found, he desired to see them, and having read the privileges of this place, that he had a second Rome within his own kingdom, he wept for joy: and, in the presence of that assembly, he confirmed their former privileges and possessions:^b the king, nobles, and clergy, offering large oblations, some of lands, some of gold, and silver. At this glorious assembly the name of the place was changed from Medeshamsted to Burgh, and by reason of the fair building, pleasant situation, large privileges, rich possessions, plenty of gold and silver, which this Monastery was endowed withal, there was an addition to the name, as to be called Gildenburgh, though in reference to the dedication, it hath ever since been known by the name of Peterburgh."^c

ADULFUS, King Edgar's chancellor, became the first abbat on the new foundation. The reason of his changing a court for a monastic life is given at length by Hugh Candidus. Having been the accidental cause of his son's death, he had determined on a penitentiary visit to St. Peter at Rome, but imparting his intention to Athelwold, the bishop dissuaded him from it, telling him it would be better if he would labour in the restoration of St. Peter's church in this place, and here visit him. Adulphus approving the advice, and accompanying the king to Burgh, offered all his wealth to the monastery, assumed the monk's habit, and became abbat of the monastery in 972.^d Having ruled the abbey twenty years, in 992, he succeeded to the archbishoprick of York, with which he also held the bishoprick of Worcester.^e His successor here, was

KENULFUS, whom Hugo Candidus calls "flos litteralis disciplinæ, torrens eloquentiæ, decus et norma rerum divinarum et sæcularium."^f Pits has made an author of him, but without enumerating the titles of his works.^g During his abbacy the Monastery of Peterborough appears to have borne a high character. He is stated to have improved both its literary treasures, and its revenues: and to have surrounded the abbey with a wall.^h He procured a confirmation of the privileges of the church from King Etheldred;ⁱ and, in the fourteenth year of his rule, on the translation of St. Elphege to the see of Canterbury, became Bishop of Winchester, A.D. 1006.^k Malmesbury accuses him of having obtained this high preferment by simony: "Wentanum enim Episcopatum Kenulphus Burghensis abbas nummis nundinatus fuerat; sed non diu sacrilego ausu lætatus, ante duos annos hominem exiit."^l

ÆLSINUS, or ÆLFSIUS, succeeded Kenulfus in the abbacy. His principal commendation appears to have been his industry in procuring reliques for the Monastery. Among those which the Abbey most boasted of was the right arm of St. Oswald. Hugh the historian is extremely particular in his description of it.^m He has also a compleat section, in his account of Ælsinus, "De Reliquiis Burgi."ⁿ Our abbat was three years in Nor-bus occupatus, qui crebris irruptionibus occidentalem partem Regni sui Mercie inquietabant, audiensque Danos plagam ejus orientalem plaga miserabili percussisse, venit Londonias; et contracto maximo exercitu, pertransiens per regni sui plagas orientales, totam Helyensem insulam fisco suo applicavit; procedensque in patriam Girviorum, omnes terras de Medeshamstedensi monasterio in manum suam cepit, scilicet quicquid inter Stanford, Huntynghdown, et Wysebeck dicto Monasterio dudum pertinuerat; remotiores vero terras sparsim per patriam jacentes stipendiariis militibus exercitus sui assignavit." Ingulphus, ed. Gale, p. 25. This is the oldest authority for the anecdote. Abbat John, who probably copies Ingulphus, in his History edited by Sparke, p. 21, instead of "Beorredus" reads "Goredus rex Merciorum."

Invenit tandem reconditam in veteri pariete Chartam quam Headda Abbas olim scripserat; unde constitit Wulferum Regem et Æthelredum ejus fratrem illud Monasterium exædificasse; eosque id liberasse cum Rege et cum Episcopo, et ab omni sæculari servitute; Papamque Agathonem id confirmasse cum suis literis, ut et Archiepiscopum Deus-dedit. Unde factum est, ut ecclesia ista et multæ aliæ perdidit." During Ælsinus's time also the irruption of Sweyn took place, when Burgh, with many of the neighbouring villages and manors belonging to the Monastery, were again laid waste.^c Ælsinus, having been abbat fifty years, died in the year 1055:^d and was succeeded by ARNWIUS, or ERWINUS, a monk of the Monastery. This worthy man appears to have had more sanctity than worldly wisdom: for Hugo Candidus informs us that in his simplicity he exchanged the royal vill of Holneie (a part of the ancient demesne of St. Peter) for Stokes, for no other reason than that it was a nearer way to go to his own farm by Stokes. Gunton says, that "liking better a private and solitary life, he freely surrendered his government after eight years' continuance therein." Doctor Patrick corrects the mistake; Arnwius lived eight years after he had resigned his abbacy. Hugh Whyte, or Candidus's words are, "Et hic in prosperitate vitæ suæ, et voluntarie, dimisit abbatiam suam, octo postea feliciter vivens annos: and abbat John places his resignation in the year 1057. "Anno MLVII. Arnewinus abbas Burgi demisit se de abbatia."^e belonging to the church; as Fiskerton for twenty marks,^g Fleton for eight marks, and Burleigh for eight marks.^h In the third year of this abbat according to Gunton, but in his thirteenth year according to Hugo Candidus, the Conqueror invaded England.ⁱ Abbot Leofric was then in the English army, where sickening, he returned to the Monastery of Burgh, and died on the third of the kalends of November.^k The Saxon Chronicle gives him a high character. "Ejus tempore fuit omnis lætitia, omniaque bona in Burh: erat is dilectus omnibus. Tantum boni præstitit Monasterio de Burh, datis auro, et argento, et vestibus, et terris quantum ante eum aut post eum non alius quisquam."^l He is said to have been nephew to Leofric earl of Mercia.

BRAND, or BRANDO, a monk of Burgh, the coadjutor of Leofric, and a benefactor to the monastery even while a brother only,^m succeeded to the abbacy on Leofric's death. The Saxon Chronicle states, that on his election he applied to Edgar Clito to be confirmed.ⁿ King William being exceedingly incensed at this contempt of his authority, the new abbat had great difficulty in obtaining a reconciliation: and was at last obliged to pay a fine of forty marks of gold before either his own election or the privileges of the monastery could be established.^o That Brand, however, continued his enmity to the Conqueror even after the reconciliation, cannot be doubted. On the arrival of the celebrated Hereward, his nephew (the lord of Brunne in Lincolnshire) from Flanders, to recover his patrimony, Brand conferred upon him the honour of military investiture, with religious ceremonies after the manner of the Anglo Saxons. Ingulphus the Conqueror's secretary gives a minute relation of the particulars.^p The writer of the Saxon Chronicle places the death of Brand on the 5th of the kalends of December, A.D. 1069.^q abbat. He appears to have received his appointment from the Conqueror.^a Gunton says, "He being a stranger, neither loved his monastery, nor his convent him." He made a strange dispersion of the church lands; bestowing no less than sixty-two hides upon certain stipendiary knights, that they might defend him against Hereward le Wake, the same who has been already mentioned. Hugo Candidus has preserved a minute enumeration, in his history, of the different lands thus alienated.^b It happened about this time that a chief, or earl, of the name of Osbern, with other followers of Sueyn king of Denmark, had taken possession of the Isle of Ely. These were joined by Hereward le Wake, who incited them to make an attack upon the monastery of Peterborough because the king had bestowed it upon a Norman. Turolodus was fortunately absent from the monastery, having retired to Stamford with his retinue.^c Hereward and the Danes upon their first onset, meeting with a stronger resistance than they expected at the gate called Bulehithe, set fire to the neighbouring houses: and thus forced an entrance to the monastery. The offices of the abbey, and the town; all, except the church and one house, were destroyed.^d Hugh Candidus enters at length upon the riches and the reliques which were carried off. Adelwold the prior, with some of the elder monks, were taken to Ely with them. Adelwold, however, watching an opportunity when the danes were carousing, secured a considerable quantity of gold and silver, and some of the principal reliques, with the arm of St. Oswald, to himself; secreting the latter in the straw of his bed. A treaty being entered into between the Conqueror and Sweyn, the danes departed from Ely, carrying with them the greater part of the reliques: some of which were lost at sea; though the remainder were afterwards recovered by Ywarus, or Ynnarus, (the secretary of the Monastery) who made a voyage to Denmark for the purpose, and were brought back to Peterborough.^e Adelwold, on the departure of the Danes, returned to his Monastery by the way of Ramsey, where the monks were as anxious to become possessed of his reliques as the Danes. "Sed gratia Dei," says the historian, "illis non licuit."

Turolodus having returned to his Monastery, according to Hugo Candidus with a hundred and forty, but according to Ingulphus with a hundred and sixty Normans, constructed a fortification nigh the church, which for many years went by the name of Mount Thorold:^f he also allied himself in defence with Yvo Talbois, one of the most powerful of the Norman chieftains in his neighbourhood: notwithstanding which, he was taken prisoner in fight by Hereward, who claimed for his release an enormous ransom.^g Hugo Candidus states the profusion of this abbat to have been so great in respect to the goods of the Monastery, that what was valued at fifteen hundred pounds when he first entered on his office, was reduced to five hundred before he had left it.^h He is stated to have allowed two monks, who came to the Monastery from beyond the sea, to plunder it of considerable wealth: and to have made no scruple at embezzling its goods himself when endeavouring to procure the bishoprick of Beauvois in France. In this bishoprick he is said to have remained but four days: returning, and by the influence of money which he gave the king, reseating himself in the abbacy of Burgh.ⁱ

During the time of this abbat the Domesday Register of property was compiled, which is still remaining in the Exchequer: whence it appears, that in Huntingdonshire the Monastery of Peterborough then held the manors of Alwoltune, Fletun, and Ovretune: in Bedfordshire, Stanwige: in Northamptonshire, Adclintone, Ascetone, Burgh, Castre, Cateringe, Cotingeham, Eglesworde, Erdiburne, Glintone, Pillesgate, Sliptone, Stanurge, Stocche, Tadinwelle, Torp, Vnde (where was a market yielding annually twenty-five shillings), Wermintone, and Widerintone, in demesne; while the "Terra Hominum ejusdem Ecclesiæ," the lands of the homagers of the Monastery, were in Asechirce, Ascetone, Burglea, Cateworde, Chingestorp, Clstone, Codestocche, Craneford, Dailintone, Edintone, Eglesworde, Eldewincle, Erdinburne, Glintone, Hinintone, Lidintone, Lullintone, Meletone, Mermeston, Pihteslea (where an "ædificium dominicum" occurs), Pilchetone, Pochebroc, Stocche, Sudtorp, Tircemesse, Wadenho, Warmintone, Wermintone, Widerintone, Winewiche, Witheringham, Wodefod, and Writorp: in Leicestershire, at Estone and Langetone: in Nottinghamshire, at Colingeham and Northmuscham: and in Lincolnshire, at Adewelle, Alchebarg, Aplebi, Bercaham, Bergestorp, Binthun, Cletham, Duninctune, Escumetorp, Eston, Fiscartune, Hiboldeston, Hoctune, Hodebi, Lolestorp, Mameltune, Mannetor, Mannetorp, Messingeham, Offintone, Osgoteby, Rageneltorp, Risebi, Risun, Saleclif, Scotere, Scotorne, Toftlund, Turoldebi, Tuolvebi, Werche, and Witham.^k

Turolodus having continued in the government of the abbey twenty-eight years, died according to Hugo Candidus in 1098:^l or according to another authority in 1100.

GODRICUS was the next abbat, the brother of abba' Brando, the predecessor of Turolodus. Hugo Candidus says that the monks, thoughtful of the inconveniences they had suffered under Turolodus, gave the king three hundred marks of silver to have their own election on this vacancy. Whether the simoniacal contract thus made was objected to, is not uniformly stated; but in 1102 Godric, who had not been consecrated, was deposed: according to Simeon of Durham, and the generality of writers, in the Council at Westminster.^m During the short time of Godric's rule foreign thieves appear to have broken by violence into the church. The Saxon Chronicle says, "Hoc ipso anno, [MCII.] in hebdomada festi Pentecostes, venerunt direptores, alii de Aluearnie, alii de Francia, alii de Flandria, et vi ingressi sunt Monasterium de Burh, atque inde ceperunt plurima bona, aurea et argentea, nempe cruces, calices, et candelabra."ⁿ Hugo Candidus, (who for Aluarnie reads "de Alemania,") says they broke through a window of the church over the altar of St. Philip and St. James, whence they stole a large ornamented cross of gold, two chalices and patens of the same metal, and two golden candelabra which had been given by Archbishop Ælfric.^o He adds, that although the thieves were pursued and taken, the

On the deposition of Godricus, MATTHIAS was made abbat of the Monastery by King Henry the First. He was brother to Geoffrey Ridel the king's justiciary, to whom he appears to have made a conveyance of the manor of Pithesle or Pightsly. He held the abbacy but a year, dying on the twelfth of the kalends of November, the very day twelve months from his entrance.^a After his death, the king is stated again to have seized upon the monastery, and to have kept it in his hands for more than three years.

In 1107, a Council being held at London, in which many were promoted to ecclesiastical dignities, ERNULPHUS Prior of Canterbury was offered to the monks of Peterborough as their abbat, and by them very readily accepted.^b William of Malmesbury informs us that he was by birth a Frenchman, and originally a monk of the abbey of St. Lucian at Beauvais; whence he removed to Canterbury, and became a monk under Lanfranc.^c At Peterborough he built the dormitory, and the refectory, and finished the chapter-house.^d Hugo Candidus says that one Robert de Caste came in Ernulphus's time to Peterborough, and gave to St. Peter, the abbat, and the monks, fifty pounds of silver; becoming a monk of the Monastery with his son. Out of the money thus given, Ernulphus is stated to have appointed twenty pounds for the purchase of palls and copes, by the hands of Wictricus and Reinaldus Spiritus the sacrists.^e In 1114 Ernulphus was promoted to the bishoprick of Rochester:^f in which year he appears to have procured a confirmation of the lands and liberties of Peterborough previous to his removal from the monastery.^g Malmesbury says, "Cantia dejectam priorem partem ecclesiæ quam Lanfrancus

Of the suit which afterwards took place between the Monastery and Geoffrey Ridel respecting the manor of Pightsle, Hugo Candidus gives the following account: "Hic concessit fratri suo Galfrido manerium de Pithesle ad firmam uno anno, sed postquam abbas mortuus est, ipse illam villam vi tenuit quamdiu vixit: sed tamen juravit post se et pro hæredibus suis super sanctum altare, et super sanctas reliquias sancti Petri in Burch, quando accusatus fuit apud regem, et promisit compulsurum se feminam suam et filios suos hoc idem sacramentum facere, scilicet hoc idem manerium cum corpore suo et cum catallis suis, et cum restauratione ipsius villæ eidem monasterio reddere sine calumpnia, et omnibus annis quamdiu teneret quatuor libras redderet. Hoc sacramentum fecit in tempore Ernulfi abbatis. In tempore vero Johannis abbatis, anno ab incarnatione Domini millesimo centesimo decimo septimo, indictione undecima, idem Gaufridus Ridel per se et per multos alios probos viros, expetens eundem abbatem Johannem, tandem impetravit ut sibi concederet in vita sua ipsum manerium Pithesle. Venit igitur prædictus Galfridus Ridel ad abbatem Johannem, et in camera sua apud Burch concessit ei abbas supradictam terram pro quatuor libris ad firmam, ad opus abbatis tali pacto talique conventionem ut post mortem Galfridi ipsum monasterium cum omni restauratione quæ esset in eo in illo die quo Galfridus esset vivus et mortuus, sine aliqua calumpnia uxoris suæ et filiorum, in dominium sancti Petri de Burch atque monachorum rediret, atque hoc sibi juraret. Juravit igitur super Textum Evangelii Galfridus hoc pactum quod fecerat et conventionem: scilicet sicut prædictum est, manerium illud sine aliqua calumpnia in dominium redire; atque jurando promisit; hoc idem uxorem suam atque filium suum concedere atque jurare fecit. Hujus vero pacti seu conventionis atque sacramenti multi testes fuerunt audientes et videntes, quos nominare superfluum duxi, quia in Texto Evangelii scripti sunt. Tertio autem anno postquam hæc conventio facta fuit, anno viz. millesimo centesimo vicesimo, supradictus Galfridus Ridel in mare demersus cum filio regis Willelmo obiit: abbasque Johannes manerium suum saisivit in dominio sicut pactum inter eos fuerat; timensque ne aliquid calumpniæ oriretur regem expetit, atque ei sexaginta marcas argenti dedit, et tunc rex per breve suum concessit ut manerium illud Pithesle, videlicet in dominio sancti Petri de Burch atque abbatis et monachorum firmiter atque in perpetuum esset atque remaneret. He adds, "Vixit in episcopatu aliquot dies super novennium: decessitque quatuor et octoginta annos natus, multa probitatis suæ monumenta relinquens."^h While at Rochester he compiled the collection of Instruments still known and venerated as the "Textus Roffensis."ⁱ He died, according to abbat John and Brompton, in 1124.^k

On the promotion of Ernulphus in 1114, the king bestowed the abbacy of Peterborough upon JOHN DE SAIS, or as Gunton calls him JOHN OF SALISBURY.^l The election of the new abbat had hardly taken place, when he was dispatched to Rome by Ralph archbishop of Canterbury to bring the pall from Pope Paschal. His companions in this journey were Guarnerius a monk, and Johannes Archidiaconus nephew to the archbishop.^m Ralph had been abbat of Sais or Sees in Normandy,ⁿ where it should seem that John de Sais had been originally professed:^o a circumstance which clearly proves that Gunton's John of Salisbury is a misnomer. Soon after the return of our abbat, in 1116, the Monastery of Peterborough was again burnt; on Friday the second of the Nones of August: the whole Monastery, according to the Saxon Chronicle, excepting the Chapter House and Dormitory being consumed:^p though Hugo Candidus says the recently-built Refectory was preserved. The village or town of Burgh also fell a sacrifice.^q

HENRY DE ANGELI, OR OF ANJOU.^c A Manuscript Register of Peterborough in the Library of the Society of Antiquaries, says, "MC.XXVIII. x kal. Maij. Henricus Abbas Andegavensis Ecclesiæ precibus optinuit Abbatiam Burg. a Rege Henrico."^d Hugo Candidus says that he was first of all bishop of Soissons, and afterwards a monk and prior of Cluni; and then prior of Savenni. After which, because he was cousin to the king of England and the count of Aquitain, the same count gave him the abbey of St. John Angeli, whence he received his name. He afterwards obtained the archbishoprick of Besenscun, which he is said to have retained no more than three days, and the bishoprick of Seintes, which he retained but seven days. Having obtained the office of Collector of the Peter-Pence in England, he procured the abbey of Burgh from the king: still retaining the abbey of Angeli.^e The Saxon Chronicle calls him Henry of Peitowe.^f In 1132, this abbat accused the monks of Burgh to the king, that he might more easily accomplish his intention of annexing the monastery to the abbey of Cluni: but, failing in the attempt, he was forced to surrender his abbey and quit the realm. His successor, appointed by the king, was

MARTIN DE VECTI;^g whom, according to Gunton, some writers call MARTIN COOK.^h He was originally prior of St. Neots in Huntingdonshire, and was honourably received by the monks of Peterborough as their head on St. Peter's day, A.D. 1133.ⁱ The Saxon Chronicle gives him a high character. He appears to have been industrious in increasing the revenues and perfecting the buildings of the monastery; though he lived in times when it must have been difficult to do either.^k Among other improvemets, he changed the situation of the village of Burgh to the western side of the monastery, which had before been on the east side.^l He appointed the market place, Gunton says, as now it is, and built many houses about it: he likewise removed the church of Saint John Baptist to the Close: pulled down a castle near the church, which Gunton supposes to have been Mount Thorold formerly mentioned: and also planted the vineyard.^m During his time also, on its completion the Convent entered into their new church; according to the Saxon Chronicle and Hugo Candidus, on the feast of St. Peter in the year 1140,ⁿ but according to more received authorities, in 1143.^o "A.D. MCXLIII. Conventus Burgi intravit novam Ecclesiam." At this solemnity Alexander bishop of Lincoln, the abbats of Ramsey, Thorney, and Croyland, with a numerous assemblage of all ranks, were present; when the arm of St. Oswald with the other reliques of the monastery were publicly exhibited. Hugo Candidus is minute on the miracles which were wrought on this occasion.^p He says it had been ^l Hugo Candidus says "Et Villam mutavit, et multa operatus est." Bishop Kennet, commenting on this passage, and the last sentence already quoted from the Saxon Chronicle, says, "When Abbot Martin thus increased the buildings, and restored the town to a much better condition, it is plainly meant that he changed the passage over the river, and built a bridge a little more up the river westward, where it now continues, which bridge, from him the founder, was called Pons Martini, and the street leading from it was called Brigg Street, which name it still retains. And by this change of passage, the town which before lay eastward of the Abbey, with the common road through Bungeate, was by degrees altered to the west side of the Abbey by means of the new bridge and direct passage through Brigg Street, &c. Yet Mr. Gunton and Dr. Patrick did not describe this alteration. The first only hints that abbat Martin changed also the place of wharfage for boats, to that place which is now commonly used; when that change of wharfage was owing purely to the change of passing the river by the new bridge: and Dr. Patrick goes a little further from the true occasion of this change, by imagining the new bridge was built by Martin the second above a hundred and twenty years after this time; saying under him, there was a bridge then in Burgh called Pons Martini, Martin's Bridge, which was sometimes called Bruni." Et facta jejuniis, et altera die post capitulum cantatis septem psalmis cum magna compunctione, aperuerunt thecam et protulerunt illam integram, et cum illa benedixerunt omnem congregationem, et laverunt illam cum magno timore, sicut antea in tempore Matthiæ abbatis fecerant. Et tertia vice ostensa est ipsa dextra regi Stephano, quando illuc venit, et ei annulum suum optulit; et ex debitis, quæ debebantur ei, pro ejus amore ecclesiæ quadraginta marcas dimisit. This manuscript opens with a description of the manors belonging to the church, as they were received by Walter the archdeacon, on the property of the monastery being taken into the king's hands on the death of John de Sais: whence it appears that the landed property of the church at that time amounted to somewhat more than a hundred and twenty-three hides. The sum of the money rents (exclusive of payments in kind) amounted to 284*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* In the abbey were sixty monks, "ad plenum victum monachorum." In the Bakehouse there were two pistores "et habent victum militis:" a Vannator who had the same; two other pistores, or bakers, who had daily two white loaves, and two brown loaves with beer: two caratores, or carriers, who had four brown loaves and beer: and two servants for grinding, servientes molantes, who had four brown loaves and beer. In the Brewery, six servants. In the Kitchen of the monks, a master and an under cook, with five inferior servants. In Sartrinio five servants. In the Infirmary no fewer than forty servants.

^k The passage of the Saxon Chronicle which principally details his history, has been unnoticed by any of the writers on Peterborough. "Inter omnes has calamitates tenuit Martinus abbas suam abbatiam xx. annos et dimidium anni, et viii. dies, admodum difficulter; atque suppeditavit monachis et hospitibus omnia ad vitam necessaria, fuitque egregia erga pauperes liberalitate: nihilominus etiam restauravit Ecclesiam, ac eam auxit terris et redditibus, multumque ditavit; vestes item comparavit, et introduxit eos [sc. monachos] in novum monasterium in sancti Petri festo perhonorifice; anno, scilicet, ab incarnatione Dom. m.e.xl. a combustionem loci xxiii. Postea profectus est Romam, ubi fuit humaniter receptus a Papa Eugenio, et adeptus est privilegia, unum pro omnibus terris istius Abbatiae, et alterum pro terris quæ adjacent Monasterio; atque si diutius vixisset, adeptus fuisset privilegia pro Recuperavit item terras quas viri summi per vim tenuerunt, à Willielmo Malduit, qui tenuit castellum de Rogingham, adeptus est Cotingham et Estun; et ab Hugone Waluile adeptus est Hyrtlingburgh et Stanewig, et lx. solidos ex Aldewingle singulis annis. Monachorum enim numerus auxit, et vinetum plantavit, et struxit multa ædificia, inque longe meliorem statum oppidum restituit: fuit enim shewn before this time to satisfy Martin himself, who desired to see it either out of curiosity, or because he doubted of its being uncorrupted: and, a third time, he adds, it was shewn to King Stephen, who came to Burgh and offered his ring, forgiving the church a debt of forty marks, and afterwards making it a Grant of Privileges.

Martin de Vecti, at a later period, having bestowed the vill of Pillesgate on the church, with all the tithes, &c. belonging to it, made a journey to Rome, where being favourably received by Pope Eugenius the Third, he obtained a Bull, dated the 16th of the kalends of January, A.D. 1146, confirming all the tenements and possessions of the abbey, the knights' fees, liberties of the church, &c.^a The Pope also added a second Bull, concerning the goods of the Sacristy. On his return abbat Martin was received by his convent with great joy and honour. During his absence, the care of the church had been committed to Richard the prior, a wise and provident man, who, soon after his superior's return to his monastery, was chosen abbat of Whitby.^b Martin is said to have added twenty monks to the number of those supported by the church. Dr. Patrick tells us that in the next year after his return from Rome, A.D. 1147, Robert de Torpel being very weak, came to the Hospital of the Infirm in Burch, "apud Capellam Sancti Leonardi," and there, before many witnesses, gave himself, body and soul, to God and Saint Peter and the church of Burch, with all his lands in Codestoch and Glapetorp, both in wood, and arable, and meadows, &c. and for the confirmation of this donation, "misit vadimonium suum ad altare, ramum scilicet viridem bis in die, per quendam monachum Ecclesiæ," upon this condition, that he for his life should have the diet of a monk, and four servants of his the diet of a miles from the Church, and that at his death they should receive him in the habit of a monk.^c

Abbat Martin died on the fourth of the nones of January, A.D. 1155. Hugo Candidus says, "Dominica ante Natalem Domini idem Abbas in lectum incidit, et non multo post, heu proh dolor, quarto nonas Januarii vitam finivit et mortuus est; multum monachis moerentibus, flentibus, et lugentibus, et patrem suum se perdidisse clamantibus."^d On the very day of his death, however, fearing to have a stranger thrust upon them, the monks met that they might choose one of their own body to succeed as abbat. The manner of the election is described at length by Hugo Candidus. They chose twelve seniors and discreet persons out of their whole number, who were again to make a choice and agree in the selection of one man: the twelve being first sworn upon the holy Gospels and the reliques of the monastery, to be swayed in their choice neither by personal Dies mihi deficeret, si cuncta ejus miracula per ipsam aquam patrata scriberem." Hug. Candidi Hist. pp. 76, 77, 78.

^a See Num. XXVI. Gunton, Hist. Peterb. p. 23. says that abbat Martin took "along with him the charter of King Ethelred, that the then Pope Eugenius the third might grant his Confirmation: but in the consistency there arose a debate about the form of the charter, which hitherto had gone current for the space of almost five hundred years: for one of the cardinals present besought the Pope, that he would not give the honour of his name to another; whereupon a new charter was granted to abbat Martin in the name of Eugenius, and the name of King Ethelred, founder and benefactor, was put out." Dr. Patrick, who has engraved the leaden seal or bull of Pope Eugenius's grant in his Supplement, p. 280. says the very original, signed by Pope Eugenius himself, and attested by the Cardinal of St. George, came to light about thir-

teer affection nor hatred. Hugo the Eldest (supposed to have been Candidus himself,) beginning to take the oath: after which the whole Convent swore that they would accept the person chosen by the twelve. This being done, the twelve went into the abbat's chamber, while the prior and those who remained in the chapter-house sung the Seven Psalms, and prayed that the grace of the Holy Spirit might direct them; which the twelve also begged, by singing "Veni creator Spiritus," and then conferred among themselves. It was agreed that Hugo should hear them each separately confess, and tell what God had put into their hearts: which being done, he asked if they would know every man's opinion singly: this being refused, he declared that they were all in a manner agreed upon the choice of one man,

WILLIAM DE WATERVILLE; and that if any one wished to contradict it he had still the power. The electors being now unanimous, they entered into the chapter-house, and there declaring what they had done, the whole company praised God.^e The next day, the obsequies of the late abbat having been performed, Reinaldus the prior and Hugo Spiritus went with the abbat elect to the king at Oxford, who finding that the election had been made by the whole convent, confirmed the choice by his charter.^f Having performed his homage to the king, and received benediction from the bishop of Lincoln, he was installed on the Sunday called Sexagesima with great ceremony at Burgh.

He discharged the debts of his predecessor, amounting to the sum of three hundred marks; beside which he obtained the king's pardon for sixty marks owing as interest. He recovered for the monastery the fee and service of Geoffrey de la Mare, for a hundred marks which he gave the king. He also gave a hundred marks to the king for the confirmation of nine knights fees which had been held by Earl Simon.^g His foundation of the Priory of St. Mary Stamford will be more fully detailed hereafter. Hugo Candidus gives a particular enumeration of the lands, rents, and pensions which he purchased for the monastery: as, land at London producing annually a mark; two virgates of land in Hyrlig-burch; four shillings rent at Haregrave; ten acres of arable land and ten of pasture in Eston; a wood at Caste; land in Wermigtun to the annual amount of four marks; a mill at Sutton producing fifty shillings; land to the rent of four shillings at Cambridge; ten acres of better land at Walton; and the whole vill of Stamford on this side the bridge. He also redeemed for a sum of money fourteen houses with the ground belonging to them beyond the bridge, which a certain knight claimed as his inheritance. He purchased and granted to the Eleemosynarius of the monastery an annual rent teen years ago (1673) when some workmen were employed in repairing the roof of Peterborough minster. He supposes it to have been concealed during the insurrection of Jack Straw, when the destruction of the monastery is said to have been intended.

^c Gunton, Supplem. p. 281. In a preceding page Dr. Patrick presents us with two or three other remarkable instances, during the time of this abbat, of seisin of lands being given to the monastery by the delivery of knives. In 1140 Ralph de Clinton gave six acres in Pey-chirche, demising his knife in the very church, laying it upon the altar. In 1141 Guido Malfet and Adeliza his wife came into the Chapter House of Burgh, and there restored to God and to St. Peter, and the monks of the church, two parts of all the tythes of the land he held of St. Peter; which tithes he had, in part, before kept wrongfully from the church: and after he had done this in the Chapter House, he went to the altar of St. Peter and confirmed what he had done "per cultellum super altare positum." In the year 1150, also, Ingelramus Wardeden came to Burgh with his three sons, and there made a solemn acknowledgement that the thirty shillings which he yearly claimed from the abbey, had been unjustly and to the peril of his soul received by him: and therefore before the high altar, in the presence of the Convent, he both promised amendment of his fault, which he acknowledged by laying his knife on the altar, and also disclaimed all right in the premises by the same knife. of ten shillings from the church of Pastun, with the third of the tithes of the whole parish. He increased the receipt from the church of Peikirke from three to fifteen shillings, that from the church of Castre from a mark to a hundred shillings, and from Wermington from twenty shillings to two marks. He also increased the rents both of the market and town of Burgh: and made improvements in all the manors of the monastery. Nor did he neglect the buildings of the abbey: he covered the monks' cloister with lead; and built the transept and three stories of the great tower of the church: he founded the chapel of St. Thomas Becket which was finished by his successor, as well as a chapel in his own house and other offices: he likewise bestowed numerous ornaments and vestments on the church. Notwithstanding all these good deeds, and the universal kindness of the society, in 1175 we find him accused by his monks to the archbishop and deposed: Hugo says without the conviction or confession of any crime deserving such censure.^a Bromton however states a specific crime, "pro eo quod ipse contra voluntatem monachorum suorum armata manu militum claustrum et ecclesiam vi et violentia intrans, reliquias Sanctorum simul cum brachio sancti Oswaldi pro denariis ad Judæos invadendos extraxit, et pro eo quod ipsi milites monachis et ecclesiæ ministris eis repugnantibus et reliquias suas defendentibus, mortifera vulnera infixerunt:"^b whence it seems probable that the borrowing of money to too great an extent laid the foundation of the abbat's ruin. Benedictus Abbas and Hoveden give another reason for his downfall. He had fallen under the displeasure of, and been impleaded by the king, because he had received his brother Ralph de Waterville, who was with the king's enemies at Huntingdon.^c The deposed abbat, thinking himself wronged by the sentence, made his appeal to Pope Alexander, who, upon a mature hearing of the cause, confirmed the deposition and commanded him silence for ever. So we are told in a Bull of this Pope's successor, Pope Urban, still extant, directed to Benedict the immediate successor in the abbacy, confirming the aforesaid deposition of William de Waterville, by whose malignity the monastery, saith the Bull, was much "attritum et gravatum," and he himself also "de prava conversatione graviter infamatus." The same Bull relieves the monks from all obligation to pay the different sums of money which had been taken up by the deposed abbat, or in his name.^d

At length, the king having held the abbey in his hands two years,

BENEDICT prior of Canterbury was made abbat in 1177; better known by the name of BENEDICTUS ABBAS: a man of considerable reputation for literature, and one of the intimates of Thomas Becket.^e His name has been already mentioned in the account of William Waterville. He appears to have been originally chancellor to Richard archbishop of Canterbury, by whom he was recommended to the king. He assisted at the coronation of King Richard I. in 1189;^f and was advanced to be keeper of the Great Seal in 1191.^g But he did not long enjoy this high dignity, as he died on Michaelmas day, A.D. 1193.^h

^a Hug. Candidi Hist. pp. 92, 93. The following are Hugo's words as they relate to his deposition. Having noticed the great benefactions to the monastery by Waterville, he says,—“et plura bona fecit, et fecisset majora, nisi præpeditus esset magnis infortuniis et perturbationibus, quas tum a domesticis falsis, tum a divitibus hominibus sæpius sustinuit. Plane a domino rege Henrico et ab archiepiscopis videlicet Tebaldo et Sancto Thoma, et Ricardo, propter ineptas accusationes expositus multotiens ad gravandum et ad deponendum. Tandem per iram et acquisitionem regis, a R. archiepiscopo in capitulo Burgi coram multitudine abbatum et monachorum, non victus neque confessus ab aliquo de aliquo crimine, sed tantum clam a monachis ad ipsum archiepiscopum accusatus vicesimo primo.” Ralph de Diceto, Script. x. Twysd. col. 587. also says, “Willelmus Abbas de Burgo multis impetitus notoriis et in præsentia Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi testimonio multorum convictus, sententiam depositionis accepit iii. kal. Novembris.”

^b Script. x. Twysd. col. 1107, 1108. The same words with a few trifling variations occur in the History of Benedictus Abbas, de Vita et Gestis Hen. II. et Ric. I. pp. 128, 129. Hearne, however, who places the whole in brackets, considers it as an interpolation. “Uncis inclusa tanquam ab alio interpolata.”

^d Supplem. to Gunton, p. 284. from Swaph. fol. lxxvi. In or about Abbat Waterville's time, Gamiel bishop of the Isle of Man was buried

Benedict, like William de Waterville, entered upon the rule of his monastery by endeavouring to liberate the church from the debts incurred by his predecessor; amounting in England and abroad to a sum no smaller than fifteen hundred marks.ⁱ The ornaments of the church, moreover, he found dispersed and pawned in different places. He built the nave of the church from the tower to the porch; and set up a new pulpit. He also finished the chapel of St. Thomas Becket, which had been begun by his predecessor. Robert Swapham has a long chapter on his gifts to the monastery, containing many more than are enumerated by Gunton: and among them certain reliques of Becket, his shirt and surplice, two crystal vessels of his blood, and two altars of the stones on which he fell.^k He was the person who suggested the sale of church-plate to ransom King Richard the First, after he had been taken prisoner by the Archduke Leopold: a circumstance which sufficiently accounts for the favour afterwards shewn by that monarch in his charters to the monastery.^l

Beside the History of King Henry II. and King Richard I. edited by Hearne^m from a manuscript in the Harleian Library, he is agreed to have been the author of a Life of Becket. Swapham calls it “egregium volumen de passione et miraculis Sancti Thomæ.”ⁿ The same writer has also a section “de Libris ejus,” containing the names of the works transcribed by his direction.^o Among these, beside numerous detached portions of the Scriptures, and Decretals, we find Justinian's Institutes, the works of Seneca, Martial, Terence, and the Meditations of St. Anselm; with Almazor, and Dioscorides on the Virtues of Plants. During his rule the monastery had a high character for its hospitality.

ANDREAS, who was first a monk of Peterborough, and afterwards Prior, succeeded Benedict as Abbat in 1194. He is said to have given the villages of Alwalton and Fletton, which then belonged to him as abbat, to the monks' kitchen for the augmentation of their commons. Robert Swapham, and Dr. Patrick after him, enumerate other benefactions to the monastery of a smaller kind.^p He died in 1199:^q and was buried in the south aisle of the church, in the same grave in which two of his predecessors had been buried before, as the following epitaph on the wall above his monument testified:

“Hos tres Abbates quibus est prior Abba Johannes,
Alter Martinus, Andreas ultimus, unus
Hic claudit tumulus; pro clausis ergo rogemus.”^r

ACHARIUS, prior of St. Albans, whom Hoveden calls ZACHARIAS,^s succeeded to the abbacy in 1200. During the interval between the death of Andreas and Acharius's appointment the custody of the abbey had been committed to the archbishop of St. Andrews in Scotland; by whom every thing that was portable appears to have been carried away. Acharius it appears found the abbey so bare on his first arrival that it was not even supplied with a single day's provision.^t By good management, however, he soon supplied it not merely with necessaries but even with superfluities. sitions obtained for the monastery, were some houses near the church of St. Paul in London, which he purchased for two hundred and fifty marks; and the recovery of the manor of Walcote.^a He also gave two hundred marks to King John for a Charter of Liberties: and discharged the house of above a thousand marks in the Exchequer.^b In several manors of the church he caused halls, chambers, and other edifices to be built, as at Scotere, Fiskertone, Gosberchirch, Tynewelle, Irtlingburch, and Stanewigge.^c The account of the suit which he maintained with the abbat of Croyland for the marsh between Singlesholt and that monastery is detailed in the first volume of Gale's Scriptores.^d Having recovered it for Peterborough he again leased it to the abbey of Croyland for an annual acknowledgement of ten stone of wax.^d The Bull which was sent to him by Pope Gregory the Ninth relating to certain monks of his church who had incurred the sentence of excommunication, will be found in the Appendix of Charters.^e

Acharius died on the 2d of the ides of March 1210: after which King John held the revenues of the abbey in his hands near four years; when, in 1214,

ROBERT DE LYNDESHEYE, monk and sacrist of the monastery, was elected to succeed him.^f This worthy man appears to have paved the way to his preferment by the most assiduous attention in his office as sacrist, at which time he is said to have glazed more than thirty windows of the church, which till that time had been stuffed with reeds and straw to keep out the weather. He made one window also of glass in the parlour of the monastery; another in the chapter-house, on the side where the prior sat; nine in the dormitory; and three in the chapel of St. Nicholas.^g He built also the chancel of the church at Oxney. Having been presented to the king at Winchester and his election confirmed, he received the customary benediction from the bishop of Lincoln. One of the very first acts of his abbacy on his return to Burgh was the deafforestation of the district called the Nasse of Burgh, for which he procured an express charter from King John.^h The description of the woods disafforested at this time forms a curious article in the older of the two Registers of Peterborough preserved in the library of the Society of Antiquaries,ⁱ the contents of both of which will be described at greater length hereafter. Dr. Patrick has translated from Swapham a minute detail of Robert de Lyndesheye's alterations in the buildings as well as in the internal administration of the monastery. One of his principal purchases appears to have been the advowson of the church of Clopton.^k "In his time," Dr. Patrick adds, "the monastery petitioned Pope Gregory the Ninth, representing the danger they were in to lose some tythes, which they had held from the very foundation of the church; because some Deeds concerning them were lost, or could not be found: and therefore desiring that he would command some very old men to be examined about this matter, before they died, lest they should lose all possible proof of their right. Whereupon the Pope sent his apostolical Letters to the priors of Deeping and St. Leonard in Stamford and to the dean of Stamford, that they should hear and examine such witnesses as the abbat and convent could produce, and cause their testimony to be recorded, and to make a publick instrument thereof. Datum Laterani 7 kalend. April. Pontif. nostri anno 7."^l Our abbat also is said to have made a lavatory of marble for the monks to wash their hands at, in the south cloister. This lavatory, according to Gunton, continued entire till the year 1651, when, with the whole cloister, it was destroyed.^m

In 1215, Robert de Lyndesheye went to Rome, to attend the fourth Council of Lateran: on his return he continued his exertions to improve the discipline and credit of his Abbey. He died October the 25th, 1222.ⁿ

Gunton says he was not very rich in books, his library consisting only of these few: "Numerale Magistri W. de Montibus cum aliis rebus; Tropi Magistri Petri cum diversis summis; Sententiæ Petri Pretanensis; Psalterium glossatum; Aurora; Psalterium non glossatum; Historiale."^o One of these, the "Psalterium glossatum," containing a Calendar prefixed, with numerous Obits of the abbats of Peterborough in the margin, is now among the manuscripts in the library of the Society of Antiquaries.^p

ALEXANDER DE HOLDERNESSE was the next abbat; who had been first a monk, and then prior of the monastery. The king's assent to his election was given on November the thirtieth. He built the hall at Castre as well as at Oundle, and the "solarium magnum" at the door of the abbat's chamber.^q This abbat, among others, signed the Confirmation of the Great Charter of England and the Charter de Foresta in the ninth year of King Henry the Third: to which the great bishops, and abbats, and earls were witnesses.^r He died November the 20th, 1226. Gunton has also given a catalogue of his library. It consisted of, "Psalterium; Concordantiæ utriusque Testamenti; Claustum Animæ; Opus alterum quod perfecit Rogerus de Helpston; Aurora; Pœnitentiale; Tria Breviaria; Concilium Lateranense, cum aliis rebus; Corrogationes Promethei; Missale."^s

MARTIN DE RAMISEYA or RAMSEYE, another monk of Peterborough, succeeded Alexander. His election was ratified by King Henry III. on the eve of St. Andrew, and confirmed the same day by Hugh bishop of Lincoln in the chapel of St. Catherine at Westminster. In the following year, 1227, he paid into the exchequer a debt of fifty marks due to the king from abbat Robert, for the deafforestation of the Nasse of Burgh: and for six score marks of silver paid to the king, and twenty-eight to the chancellor, exclusive of other gifts, he obtained a general confirmation of the abbey-charters.^t In the year 1230 he asserted the liberties of the church in Alwalton and Fletton against the pretences of the abbat of Thorney.^u In the year following the church of Burgh was visited by the bishop of Lincoln, when certain regulations were agreed upon by the common consent of the abbat and convent, and confirmed by the episcopal authority, under pain of excommunication. One was that the abbat should not borrow any money upon usury, of the Jews; nor of Christians, "cum aliqua pœnæ adjectione," without the consent of the convent; nor, even in that case, ever engage the monastery, or the goods of the monastery, moveable or immoveable. Another was, that the sacrist of the church should have, as had been accustomed, the horses and all other things, with the bodies of the milites deceased; with this moderation, that if any horse of a deceased knight was worth more than four marks, the abbat should have it: and his arms, or the price of them, should be laid up in some safe place by the abbat, with the privity of the convent, for the defence of the country and the peace of the church; and that with the money, arms should be mended and sustained.^a

^p During this abbat's time Hugh Whyte, who has been hitherto quoted in this Account of Peterborough as Hugo Candidus (from the title of his History), is said to have flourished. Writers differ as to the exact time, but the best authorities agree in placing him between the year 1130 and the year 1217. His History, edited by Sparke in 1723, appears among our older writers to have had the name, and to have been quoted as Swapham, probably from the thread of his story having been taken up by Robert Swapham already quoted. The testimonies of Leland, Bale, Pits, Vossius, and Hicke concerning him, are brought together in Mr. Sparke's Preface. The reader may also consult Bp. Tanner, Bibl. Brit. Hib. p. 764.

In this year also, says Dr. Patrick, an inquisition was made, by his order, into all the manors belonging to the church.

Two years after this he died, on the eve of St. John Baptist, 1233.^b Gunton says his library was but thin.^c From the catalogue one cannot suppose it to have been the abbat's private collection. It consisted of, "Missale; item, Missale ad Altare S. Katharinæ; Capitula collecta Evangelica in duobus voluminibus, ad magnum altare." These must have been service-books of the church.

The king's assent to the election of WALTER DE ST. EDMUND as abbat, who had been previously sacrist of the monastery, was given July 8th, 1233.^d At his installation he offered a pall covered with peacocks;^e with a rich cope and other things of value. Swapham, whose portion of the History of Peterborough Abbey closes with this Walter, gives a very extended account of his good deeds to the monastery. He appears to have journeyed three times either to or toward Rome.^f Once while sacrist of the church to obtain redress concerning the church of Castre. A second time, after he was abbat, he went as far as Anvers on the road to Rome to attend a Council summoned by Pope Gregory the Ninth. His third journey, in which he went again entirely to Rome, was after the Council of Lyons, when he was summoned to answer for a contempt with which he was charged in giving the church of Castre according to the King's commandment, contrary to the provision made by the Pope.^g

During this abbat's time, in 1237, in obedience to certain Constitutions made in a Council at London, the ^g Gunton thinks that the following passage in Matthew Paris, under the year 1241, relates either to this last journey, or to some cause of a similar nature. "Dominus Papa Gregorius, cuidam suo cupiens speciali subvenire, missis in Angliam literis, quosdam super ecclesiis dignoscitur sic aggravare. Missum est tunc temporis Abbati et Conventui de Burgo mandatum apostolicum, eum preeibus armatis, et monitis terrificis, ut redditum alicujus ecclesiæ, ejus patronatus ad eos spectabat, quæ annuatim centum ad minus valeret marcas, Papæ conferrent. Et si in duplo plus valeret, bene ei complaceret: concederet autem dominus Papa ipsis illam ecclesiam tenendam ab eo ad firmam annuam, ita scilicet, ut pro ea annuatim centum marcas solverent domino Papæ, omne residuum in proprios usus convertentes. Et ut memoratos abbatem et conventum ad consensum hujusmodi provisionis (imò potiùs perniciosæ pactionis, et symoniæ, et occultæ fraudis) quasi proprio usui necessariæ, inde faciliùs dominus Papa inclinarer, scripsit quibusdam clericis transalpinis, in Anglia optimè beneficiatis, ut ipsos super hoc efficaciter admonerent, deinde compellerent, eis concessa potestate. Walter de St. Edmund appears to have busied himself much in the repairs and enlargement of the monastery and its revenues: though he appears to have undertaken no building of extraordinary magnitude. His hospitality was extremely great. He appears to have twice had the honour of entertaining King Henry the Third: once, with the queen and Prince Edward.ⁱ His increase of the number of monks by thirty is supposed by Dr. Patrick to have been an act like that of abbat Acharius for his own time only.^k His death has been already mentioned in a note as having happened on the 10th of the kalends of January 1245. Gunton says the 11th, and Matthew Paris the 2d of the kalends of that month; while Dr. Patrick observes that in the calendar of the church the 26th of December is mentioned.^l Gunton says this Walter's library was copious in comparison of his predecessor's, consisting of these books: "Decretale; Aurora; Claustrum Animæ; Biblia; Hexæmeron S. Cantuariæ versificæ; Rabanus de natura Rerum, et Interpretationes Hebraicorum Nominum, in uno volumine; Versus M. W. de Montibus; Psalterium glossatum; Summa Magistri J. de Cantia de Pœnitentia; Templum Domini cum Arte Confessionum; Regula S. Benedicti; Psalterium cum Hymnario; Item duo Psalteria; Duo Missalia; Duo Gradualia; Liber Evangeliorum; Liber Orationum ad magnum altare."

Swapham gives an inventory of the plate, ornaments, &c. found in the abbat's lodgings after his death. He also informs us that the custody of the monastery, ad interim, was given by the king to one "Magister R. de Gosebek," by whom every thing that was moveable was wasted, sold, or carried away.^m

WILLIAM DE HOTOT, or HOTOFT, a monk professed of Burgh, born at Carleton near Cottingham, was the next abbat. He was elected on the day of St. Vedast and St. Amand, Feb. 6th, 1246. He appears to have built a chapel and chamber at Cottingham; and obtained the king's charter for a fair at Oxeneye. Walter de Whytleseye says, "plures ordinationes seu constitutiones bonas fecit; et eas per cartam suam confirmavit, sic dicendo: 'sine communi consensu conventus nullam compositionem de libertatibus, vel possessionibus alienandis de cætero faciemus; nec wardas conferemus; nec boscum, vel alnetum vendemus, sine conventus consilio ut prædictum est: nec aliquid arduum ipsis inconsultis attemptabimus, vel faciemus.'" Whytleseye gives other particulars

Ipsi autem responderunt, se sine regis permissione hoc facere non posse, qui patronus est et fundator hujus et multarum in hæc regione ecclesiarum. At ipsi elanculò hæc fieri flagitabant, similia in aliis ecclesiis facturos se seperantes, et ab illa concessione sumentes exempli consequentiam. Monachi autem nolentes fallacibus circumveniri sermocinationibus, inducias petierunt, donec abbas eorum, qui tunc absens erat, domum rediens, assensum si videret expedire, huic præberet postulationi. Miserunt igitur ad abbatem suum, hujus rei seriem eidem explicantes. Hist. Major. edit. Lond. 1684. pp. 493, 494. It was, however, in 1245, that our abbat returned from the last journey. "M. cc. xlv. Concilium generale Lugdun. celebratur. of his administration too minute to be inserted here.^a When he had held his abbey about three years he resigned it on St. Nicholas's day 1249; and there was assigned to him the manor of Collingham, where he abode for a time, until he was called thence by John his successor, who appointed him his abode at Oxeney, allowing him the portion of four monks.^b The reason of Hotot's cession will be found in Matthew Paris's history: the monks made an appeal to the bishop of Lincoln, in consequence of the abbat enriching his kindred at the expence of the church. He died at Oxeney, and was afterwards buried at Peterborough before the altar of St. Benet.^c Gunton says, the following works formed his library: "Antissiodorensis abbreviatus; Tractatus super canonem Missæ; Templum Domini cum aliis rebus; Libellus de diversis rebus; Missale ad altare Michaelis."

JOHN DE KALETO, or CAUZ,^d a native of Normandy, and of noble descent, was the thirtieth abbat of Peterborough. He entered the monastic life at seven years of age, and afterwards became a monk, and finally prior of St. Swithin Winchester.^e The licence for choosing a successor to Hotot here was granted Dec. 27th, 1249; and the king's assent to the election of John de Kaleto was given January the 15th, 1250.^f Gunton says, he was allied to Queen Eleanor wife of king Henry, and such a ray of favour shone upon him through that relation that he was made one of the king's chief justices, and rode in the circuit to execute justice in the kingdom. He was also the king's treasurer. In his time, A.D. 1250, Pope Innocent the Fourth granted leave to the monks, in consideration of the coldness of winter in these parts, to perform their service in the church hooded.^g

Among other benefactions he is said to have given a great bell to the church, whereon was written,

'Jon de Caux Abbas Oswaldo consecrat hoc vas.'

He died, according to Whytleseye,^h at London, the fifth of the nones of March, 1262. The annals of Dunstaple say at Lande.ⁱ His body was brought to Burgh and buried before the altar of St. Andrew. Gunton, who is minute on the libraries of most of the abbats, gives us the following short list as the stock of Caleto's books, as he found it in an ancient Manuscript: "Flores Evangeliorum; Tractatus de Theologia; Concilium Lateranense; Templum Domini; Testamentum XII. Patriarcharum."

ROBERT DE SUTTON, or SOTTON, a native of the parish of Castre in the Nasse of Burgh, was the next abbat. Walter de Whytleseye says he was elected "per formam compromissi"^k on the 17th of the kalends of April 1262: receiving the king's confirmation on the sixth of the kalends of the same month.^l In the month of May following he received benediction from the bishop of Lincoln: and was installed with great splendour by Giles archdeacon of Northampton, on the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul. In 1264 the barons having fortified the town of Northampton against the king, our abbat contrary to the fidelity he had sworn, joined in the defence of the place. When, as Walter de Whytleseye relates, the king and his son Edward seeing the banner of the abbey among other ensigns on the walls, vowed the destruction of the monastery.^m Abbat Robert, however, by the mediation of friends, and at no moderate expence, saved both himself and his monastery. At the Easter following, at Nottingham, he was fined in three hundred marks. The next year he paid twenty pounds "de auro Reginae:" sixty pounds to Prince Edward the king's eldest son: six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence to the Lord la Zouche: and fifty-eight shillings and a penny for the expences of the monks carrying the money.ⁿ The abbat and convent moreover agreed to take part with the king. Soon after this the battle of Lewes took place, when the king and Prince Edward were taken prisoners: and the barons, in their turn, demanded heavy fines from the abbat. Simon de Montfort earl of Leicester had twenty pounds of silver; Gilbert earl of Gloucester twenty pounds; Henry de Montfort, six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence; Simon de Montfort the younger, six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence; John Fitz-John, six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence; Henry de Hastinge, six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence; Roger de Leyburne, a hundred pounds; the bailiffs of the earl of Warren, nine pounds and eight pence; the castellan of Benifeld, fifty-three shillings and four pence; Gerard de Hedone, four pounds: "et cum multis aliis magnatibus, qui non scribuntur, nec currunt ad memoriam."^o During the whole of the contest between the king and the barons the hospitality of the monastery was continued, and partaken of by the partizans of either side. "Unum multum valuit abbati et abbatia," says the historian; "toto enim tempore, guerra durante, idem abbas panem et cervisiam cum aliis cibariis, in quantum potuit, semper parari fecit. Ita quod omnes, qui venerant, sive ex parte regis, sive ex parte baronum, portis abbatia semper apertis, fertiliter erant refecti. Ob illam causam maneria abbatia Burgi in pluribus locis salvata fuerunt ab incendiis et aliis malis; tanto tamen populo superveniente, multotiens contingit, quod quando conventus post servitium celebratum, hora nona, more solito, in refectorio pro se victum sperabat optinuisse, non erat companagium in tota abbatia, nec in partibus propinquis, quousque de Stanforde abduceretur. Et aliquando in itinerando fuit deprædatum."^p

After the battle of Evesham, where prince Edward overthrew the Earl of Leicester with his whole army, the king having recovered himself, called a parliament at Winchester, on the day of the nativity of the Virgin Mary; and there demanding large sums from the prelates of England, and other church-men, he again fined the abbat of Peterborough for his tergiversation. On this occasion our abbat is stated to have paid the following sums: to the king, three hundred and thirty-three pounds six shillings and eight pence; as Queen-gold ("de Auro Reginae"),^q thirty-three pounds six shillings and eight pence; to prince Edward, two hundred pounds; to the earl of Gloucester, a hundred and thirty-three pounds six shillings and eight pence; to the earl of Warren for the manors of Castre, Tinewelle, and Thurleby, a hundred pounds; to Warin de Bassingburne, forty-two pounds; to the castellan of Fodringeye, a hundred and six shillings and eight pence; to Robert Tynetot for the manors of Fiskerton and Scotere, sixty-five pounds thirteen shillings and four pence; to the lord of Fanecourt for the manor of Colingham, twelve pounds thirteen shillings and four pence; to Robert Picot for several manors, fourteen pounds six shillings and eight pence; to Thomas de Bul-tone, six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence; in expenses of the monks and others bringing this money to Winchester, sixty shillings. The king going from Winchester to Northampton, the abbat followed him, and made him a voluntary tender of fifty-three pounds six shillings and eight pence; to the queen, a hundred and six shillings and eight pence; and to prince Edward, twenty-six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence. He also attended the king, subsequently, with his military retainers at the siege of Kenilworth Castle. Whytleseye enumerates still further sums of money which the abbat paid before he entirely recovered the favour of the king.^a The total of his different fines, according to the historian, amounted to a sum no smaller than four thousand three hundred and twenty-four pounds eighteen shillings and five pence.

In these times, says Gunton, prince Edward having occasion for money, he borrowed a great sum of certain merchants, for which the abbat of Peterborough and his convent became sureties: and the prince granted unto them his manor of Graham, until he should repay that money unto them. Edward was no sooner king, than in the first year of his reign he came to Peterborough, where he was entertained by this abbat Robert: and from hence he dated a Charter which he granted to the church of Ely, as the close thereof testifieth, "teste meipso apud Burgum Sancti Petri 13^o die Aprilis, anno regni nostri primo."^b

In the eleventh and last year of his government, A.D. 1274, Robert de Sutton was cited by Pope Gregory the Tenth^c to a general Council at Lyons: returning whence toward England, he died at a place called Heringisham, and was buried at a monastery near "Bononia Sanctæ Mariæ," Ralph abbat of Croyland performing the funeral service, and many prelates, with the abbat of Thorney, &c. being present. His heart, brought in a cup to Burgh, was interred before the altar of St. Oswald.^d

Gunton says he had these books in his library: "Psalterium glossatum; Summa Raimundi cum apparatu; Summa Fratris R. de Fissacre super Sententias in iv. voluminibus; Summa Qui bene præsent, Templum domini cum Tractatu de Professione, in uno volumine; Summa M. J. de Cantia cum aliis rebus; Secunda Pars Hugucionis super Decreta; Summa Gaufridi; Liber Naturalium Aristotelis; Raimundus abbreviatus, cum Meditationibus Bernardi; Manuale; Liber de miseria humanæ conditionis; Psalterium Beatæ Virginis; Vita S. Thomæ et S. Oswaldi, versificè; Psalterium Parvum."^e

RICHARD DE LONDON^f succeeded as abbat on the fifth of the ides of April 1274. This worthy man, who had held successively the offices of sub-camerarius, prior, and sacrist of the monastery, was sixty years of age at the time of his election. He was of great experience, and governed the convent both carefully and happily. While sacrist he had erected one of the greater steeples of the church. During his administration of the abbacy he built the granary: and, with the assistance of the convent, purchased the manor of Gounethorp and the wood of Hawelound of Galfrid de Suthorpe, for two hundred and fifty marks. This manor produced twenty marks per annum, ten of which the abbat afterwards assigned for the celebration of his anniversary: five of them for the refectory of the brethren, and five to be distributed among the poor. In his time also, Gilbert de Clare earl of Gloucester A.D. 1285, impleaded the convent concerning the manor of Bigginge before the Justices Itinerant at Northampton. The cause of the monastery, however, was successfully defended by William de Wodeford, one of the monks: and the abbat had the good fortune to have it again defended successfully before the king at Westminster.^g

Whytleseye tells us it was in the time of this abbat, A.D. 1272, that William Parys, then prior, began the Lady Chapel at Peterborough, laying the first stone with his own hand; "plurimaque evangelia in quadam scedula scripta sub eodem lapide apposuit." Parys, he adds, not only laid the foundation, but lived to complete the structure: it was of stone and wood, covered with lead: the windows and walls richly ornamented: and had an annual rent of five pounds a year settled on it by its founder.^h

Having lived to liquidate the debts of his predecessor to the amount of two thousand marks, abbat Richard de London died on the morrow of the Virgin Mary's Assumption, A.D. 1295. His funeral was attended by the abbats of Ramsey, Thorney, and Croyland, and by the prior of Spalding. Gunton found the books in his library thus recorded: "Quatuor Evangelia glossata; Psalterium; Regula Sancti Augustini cum Speculo Caritatis, edita à Beato Bernardo; Nova Logica in duobus voluminibus; Priscianus de Constructione cum aliis rebus; Boetius de Consolatione, et Libellus diversarum rerum, in uno volumine; Parabola Salomonis, et Ecclesiastes; Processionarium cum Hymnario; Psalterium cum Gradale, in choro."

Immediately after the funeral of abbat Richard de London, the funeral-feast being ended, there came one in the king's name to seize the abbey, taking homage of the tenants as had been usually accustomed: after which William de Wodeforde, then sacrist, and Richard de Colstone, pitanciarus of the monastery, were dispatched to obtain the king's licence to elect a successor. The licence being obtained from the king, the monks returned; when, on the feast of the decollation of St. John Baptist next following, the election "per viam compromissi" fell upon

WILLIAM DE WODEFORDE.ⁱ He was born at Schelton, and called "de Wodeforde" from the place where he was first brought up. For two years before his election, under an injunction from Oliver bishop of Lincoln, he had been the coadjutor of abbat Richard during the time of his infirmity; and had in fact the whole care of the monastery even then given to his charge. Whytleseye relates one or two instances of his economy in managing the revenues of the convent.^k

^g Ibid. pp. 148, 149. Whytleseye says that while sacrist of the monastery, our abbat gave two bells to the church, which from his name were called "les Londreis." The homages to him from the tenants of the monastery during the greater part of his enjoyment of the abbacy

While only sacrist he purchased the manor of Suthorp, of the value of twenty pounds a year; which when he became abbat he assigned to the monks. He settled a daily proportion of bread upon some of the inferior officers of the convent; added much to the buildings of the monastery;^a and was careful that dependant eleemosynaries might receive their dues.

In the fourth year of his government, September 2d. 1299, he died. Dr. Patrick in the Supplement to Gunton, p. 316, considers the taxation of all the manors of the abbey made by papal authority in 1296 (by twenty four jurates, twelve of them clergymen and twelve laymen,) as the most memorable transaction of this abbat's time.^b He was buried in the south aisle of Peterborough church, near the choir. In his library were these books: "Instituta apparitata; Decreta apparitata; Apparatus Decretalium cum casibus; Summa de Vitiis; Summa de Virtutibus; Summa Reynfridi; Psalterium cum Exequiis Majorum; Statuta Westmonasterii; Statuta Capituli General.; Constitutiones Extravagantes; Regula Sanctor. Basil. et Benedicti; Cartæ Regum cum Libertatibus; Liber de arte Prædicandi; Processionarium; Missale in duobus volumibus; Duo Gradalia; Breviarium."^c

GODFREY DE CROYLAND, celerar of Burgh, was elected abbat on the death of Wodeford. He appears to have been in royal favour even before his election, as upon his entrance on the government of the monastery the king sent him a silver cup, gilt; and when Walter de Langetone the king's treasurer demanded of Godfrey a thousand marks for his confirmation, the king remitted them, allowing only the fees of the exchequer to be taken.^d

In the first year of this abbat, certain persons having fled for sanctuary into the chapel of St. Thomas Becket at Burgh, were pursued; and blood being shed in seizing them against the privilege of the place, the chapel was suspended from the performance of divine service: but after the bishop's absolution, the sprinkling of holy water, &c. it was returned to its former use. The persons seized having been restored to liberty. The same year, says Gunton, being 1300, a marriage being intended between the heirs of Ufford and Southorp, King Edward supposing himself to be concerned therein, appointed inquisition to be made whether the disposal of that marriage belonged to him, or the abbat of Peterborough, his letters bearing date February the 23d. and the twenty-ninth year of his reign: and it being upon the inquisition certified that those heirs, and their progenitors, held their lands of the abbey of Peterborough, the right of disposal of those heirs did theretofore belong to the abbat, which the king understanding, desisted.^e

Whytleseye has given an enumeration of the good deeds of this abbat, year after year, during the whole time of his administration. Many of these, though apparently trifling, shew that he spared no pains in improving the property of the monastery: more especially in building granges, stables, and other requisite appendages upon the different manors, erecting mills, planting woods and orchards, building ovens, and even making enclosures. In his fourth year he began a new entrance to the abbey, which he completed in his ninth year. He lengthened the chancel of Oxeney church, and built a new bridge across the Nen in his ninth year, which being carried away by ice, he rebuilt of more handsome dimensions the year following. Nor was he indifferent to the acquisition of new property. Beside smaller purchases in Waltone, Pastone, Gunthorp, Witherington, Dodisthorp, Cartone,

Newerke, Thorpe, and Eye, he bought in his fifth year the manor and advowson of Lullington for a hundred and thirteen pounds six shillings and eight pence. He assigned, in his fourth year, twenty shillings for the anniversary of his predecessor, and afterwards a mark from Alwalton and Fletton by the name of Wether-silver. The vestments and ornaments of plate which he bestowed upon the church were both rich and numerous; and are enumerated in separate sections by Whytleseye.^f

In his third year he entertained the king and queen in his monastery with great splendour. He also entertained prince Edward and Piers Gaveston. On this last occasion the abbat presented the prince with a rich robe: but the prince asking the messenger if his friend Piers was to have one also, and finding that he was not, he refused the one which the abbat sent: whereupon another rich robe was sent to Gaveston, whose mediation the messenger solicited for the prince's acceptance of the robe which had been at first sent: whereupon says Whytleseye, "Vocavit dominus Petrus [de Gaveston] camerarium suum sic dicens ei, 'vadas ad dominum Edwardum et dicas ei quod volo ut recipiat donum abbatis;' venientibus illis ad dictum dominum Edwardum cum prædicta coupa ut præmittitur, qui feliciter illam recepit, gratias conferens abbati de donis suis."

The contributions of abbat Godfrey to the king in his wars with Scotland were numerous: he also received the king at Burgh a second time, when, in his entertainment and in presents, he expended no less than one thousand five hundred and forty-three pounds thirteen shillings and four pence.

He likewise entertained two cardinals who travelled toward Scotland to mediate a peace between king Edward and the Scots, with their retinue: presenting to one of them, by name Gaucelinus, a Psalter written in gold letters, and richly illuminated. And again entertaining them on their return, he gave to Gaucelinus a cope of gold-cloth richly embroidered, which he had purchased at the price of a hundred marks sterling; together with a cup which had cost eighty marks. He also presented to Lucas de Fliske, Gaucelinus's companion, a silver cup gilt which had been given to him by King Edward, of the value of a hundred shillings; beside fifty ells of fine scarlet cloth.^g

The sums of money expended by abbat Godfrey in vestments and ornaments for the church, in the purchasing of lands and rents which he bestowed upon the monks, and in gifts, are stated by Whytleseye to have amounted to three thousand six hundred and forty-six pounds four shillings and three pence.^h

He died in the month of September 1321; having governed the monastery twenty-two years: and was buried at the upper end of the choir of the church. The brass of his monument, says Gunton, was divorced from his marble, in the year 1643, being his portraiture, and a small inscription in the verge.ⁱ Willis, however, describes the tomb and inscription as tolerably perfect in 1718. He says, under an arch at the end of the choir, on a gravestone, is the portrait of an abbat bareheaded, with a crozier in his hand. At top, the arms of Peterborough abbey, and the crown of England; round the verge, in capitals, the word "Amen" written, and this inscription:

"De Croiland natus jacet hic Godefridus humatus, Burgi Prelatus cui solvas Christe reatus."^k

Whilst he lived, says Gunton, his library consisted of these books: "Duæ Bibliæ, una Gallice scripta; Avi-juramentum aliquod emisit: boscum, vel alnetum, vel aliquod genus arborum nunquam vendere voluit: sed si miles, vel aliquis alius vicinus arborem ab eo postulasset, xx. sol. vel unam marcam, vel x. sol. aut dimidium marcæ ei dare præcepit, secundum postulantis conditionem; dicens se non ausum esse consumere thesauros ecclesiæ suæ. Confratres suos, et præcipue infirmos, de cibis sibi apposis, et vino frequenter visitavit." Whytles. p. 152.

^a "Dum fuit sacrista fecit fieri in hostillaria conventus magnas camcras. Ac etiam dum abbas erat, in abbacia capellam abbatis renovavit magnis sumptibus. Similiter in abbacia fieri fecit unam grangiam feni. Et apud Eye unum molendinum ventricum, et aulam ibidem in manerio incepit." Ibid.

Whytleseye, at the end of his history, has preserved the extent from the crown against the lands of the abbey and barony of the abbat on Godfrey's death, as returned by a jury upon oath: ^b distinctly describing the rents and receipts of each manor from every sort of property contained in it.

The several sums from the manor of Castre appear to have amounted to 18*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*

The sum produced by the Northamptonshire manors amounted to 409*l.* 10*s.* 2¾*d.*; that from the possessions of the abbey in the counties of Lincoln, Nottingham, Leicester, and Rutland, to 212*l.* 6*s.* 0½*d.*: making a total of 621*l.* 16*s.* 3¼*d.* Gunton, who varies in his account of this extent in a trifling degree from the present statement, says, “Yet was not this the whole demesnes of the abbat in those times, for there were many other manors, and many rents and lands, in and about Peterborough, and in several counties, but these are all which Whytleseye hath recorded, and I have no leisure to examine why there were no more returned.”^c

The king's licence for the election of a new abbat was obtained on September the 3d, 1321; which accordingly took place “per viam compromissi” four days after, when the choice fell on

ADAM DE BOTHEBY, who had been sub-cellarer of the monastery, and to whom the temporalities were restored on the 7th of October.^d The anonymous continuator of Whytleseye's history fills no less than fifteen pages with the annals of abbat Botheby's time, from which the principal facts of his life have been here selected. He appears to have received his confirmation from the king in the Isle of Thanet. During his first year, exclusive of the great costs and charges on his entrance upon the abbacy, he paid a hundred and thirty-three pounds six shillings and eight pence to the king, by way of subsidy to him in his war with the earl of Lancaster; and also two hundred more as an aid to the king in his Scotch war, with twenty pounds “pro auro Reginae,” beside fourteen pounds eleven shillings and eight pence, as his portion, when the clergy of the province of Canterbury gave the king five pence out of every mark.

In his fourth year the manor of Torpel and Upton having come into the possession of Edmund of Wodestock earl of Kent, and there arising great troubles and oppressions between the earl's officers and the tenants of the abbat, all were at last quieted by the abbat paying for the firm of it to the earl the annual sum of 106*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*: although the real value of the manor did not amount to more than eighty pounds.^e

In his sixth year, King Edward the Third, with Isabella the queen mother, John of Eltham, the king's sisters, and in fact the whole court, passed their Easter at Burgh; staying ten days. The abbat's expenditure, including presents, on this occasion, amounted to 487*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.* The same year, however, in consideration of 53*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* paid to the king, he obtained a confirmation of the abbey charters, with additional liberties, “et unam novam cartam de uno saltero habendo ad parcum de Bygginge.”^f

In the seventh year of our abbat a contention arose between him and John de Bohun earl of Hereford and Essex, concerning the son of Geoffrey de la Mare; which Geoffrey died in 1327, holding three knights' fees of the abbey, and was buried at Peterborough, in the chapel of St. Mary, with his ancestors. This Geoffrey also held of the earl lands and tenements in Essex by knights' service. He had three wives, the last of whom, Margaret, he put away when she was with child, at Peterborough abbey, where the child was born, and by his friends baptized and named Geoffrey. This younger Geoffrey had two sisters by his father's side, who averred that the said Margaret was not the wife but the concubine of the first Geoffrey de la Mare, and consequently that the younger Geoffrey was illegitimate, and thus incapable of any hereditary right to his father's lands. Abbat Adam de Botheby, as guardian to the child, defended the cause against the sisters in the Consistory court at Lincoln for three years, and ultimately forced them to desist in their claim. But the earl of Hereford and Essex coming to Burgh in the train of Philippa, afterwards queen of Edward III. (who was then proceeding to York to the solemnization of her marriage), and demanding the person of the young Geoffrey with threats of vengeance on the abbey, the abbat gave him up; contenting himself with the pursuit of the earl in the course of law. Whereupon the earl, on the other side, accused the abbat and his monks and servants of certain outrages committed in his castle and park of Pleshey, which the abbat was obliged to compound for by paying to the earl 100*l.* At length the earl being struck with remorse, restored the child to the abbat, acknowledging his fault; and the abbat afterwards married this Geoffrey to the daughter of Geoffrey de Scrope, one of the king's justiciaries. The earl, subsequently, languishing in illness, and drawing near his end, ordered his executors to repay the 100*l.* obtained from the abbat by way of composition.^g

About this time, says Gunton, the sheriff of Northampton required assistance and contribution from the abbat of Peterborough and his tenants towards the wall of Northampton park, which requisition was put an end to by the king's letters, dated February the 12th in the second year of his reign, wherein he certified the sheriff that, by ancient charters of kings his predecessors, the abbat and convent of Peterborough with all their lands and dominions should be free from all works of castles, parks, bridges, and enclosures.^h pp. 213, 219. The king had given his assent to the election Sept. 25th.

^e “Sed quia idem dominus abbas,” says the historian, “oppressiones predictas evitare voluit, de consensu conventus et totius consilii sui præfatum manerium pro summa ita excessiva ad firmam admisit. Et fuerunt solutiones dicti manerii de Torpel majores per sex annos quam firmam de ccccxlvii. lib. vi. sol. ix. den.” Ibid. p. 225.

In the ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth years of Adam de Botheby, we find him expending large sums for the period, either in presents to or entertainments of the king and queen with the queen dowager: amounting altogether to the sum of 816*l.* 18*s.* 3*d.*^b

In his fourteenth year our abbat entertained Prince Edward, the king's eldest son, with his sisters and their suite, for eight weeks and four days.^c

He died in the beginning of his eighteenth year, November the 25th, 1338. His funeral service being performed by the abbat of Ramsey.^d

The continuator of Whytleseye's history gives the following list of his books: "Decretales; Sermones; Johannis de Abbeville media pars; Missale; Breviarium; Manuale; Liber Cartarum; Actus Apostolorum, et Epistolæ Canonice; Gerardus super Psalterium; Summa Summarum; Diurnale; Dicta Senecæ, cum xxxvi. The royal consent having been obtained for a new election, the choice of a successor to Botheby was made again "per viam compromissi," when

HENRY DE MORCOTE became abbat;^f and after numerous delays in consequence of the king's absence at Antwerp, was installed on the seventh of the ides of February 1339.^g

Gunton says, he had a sharp and long contest with Sir Nicholas de Ry and the abbat of Swinestead, for lands recovered from the sea to his manor of Gosberchirch in Lincolnshire, the story whereof Mr. Dugdale hath set down at large from a Peterborough manuscript in his History of Imbanking and Draining, p. 235. He died in 1353, the 27th year of King Edward the Third.

His library consisted of these books: "Parva Biblia; Decreta; Decretale; Apparatus sexti Libri Decretalium; Liber qui vocatur Innocentius; Hostiensis in summa; Breviarium; Antiphonarium cum Psalterio; Processionarium; item Decretale; Catholicon."^h

Henry, Gunton adds, being dead, was buried between the choir and the great altar of the church, near unto his predecessor Adam.ⁱ

In this manuscript we have copies of the earliest instruments now to be found in the registers of the monastery respecting the sitting of the abbats of Peterborough in Parliament. Dugdale, however, speaks of the abbat as summoned to Parliament in the 49th year of King Henry the Third. Summons to Parl. p. 2.
- ^f The continuator of Whytleseye gives us a curious account of the election. On its being announced "Te Deum laudamus" was sung, while the monks carried the abbat elect on their shoulders to the high altar, who being afterwards brought as far as the pulpit, the prior, according to ancient custom, ("sicut moris est") announced the election to all present in a speech. The abbat was then brought "ad hosteleriam," where he was entertained, and slept that night, as a guest of the monastery: whence, the next day, he departed on his journey to London to obtain the royal confirmation. - ⁱ His grave being in the year 1648, Jan. 11th, opened to receive the body of bishop Towers, there was found a seal of lead (the Instrument wholly consumed) having on the one side these letters thus inscribed: S.P.A S.P.E over two heads, on the reverse "Clemens PP. vi." Gunton conjectures that the Instrument was an indulgence obtained at the Jubilee three years before. Ibid.
- ^k The king's licence for the election was dated June 3d. The assent to it was given June 20th, and the temporalities restored July 15th. Pat. 27 Edw. III. p. 2.

of whom little more is known than that he died on the 6th of October 1361;^a and that these books were the materials of his study: "Prima pars et secunda Hostiensis in Decreta, in duobus voluminibus; Hostiensis in Summa; Speculum Judiciale; Decretale; Derivationes Hugutionis; Prima pars et secunda Hostiensis in Decreta."^b

HENRY DE OVERTON was the next abbat; elected, according to Wharton, in the year that Ramsey died.^c Gunton states that no memorable act of his administration was preserved in any record that he had seen: only that he instituted a yearly solemnity for the soul of William Courtney archbishop of Canterbury, of Mary Courtney his mother, and Hugh Courtney her husband, earl of Devon, for the souls of the brethren and sisters of the said archbishop, and for the souls of the abbats of Peterborough, his predecessors and successors; for which annual solemnity he appointed by his charter, bearing date in 1390, the sum of fifteen pounds out of the manor of Thulby and some other lands.

Knyghton, in his account of the commotions in the time of Richard II. A.D. 1381, mentions an intended tumult for the destruction of the abbey of Peterborough: "Similiter apud Peterburgh compatriotæ et tenentes Abbatis ejusdem surrexerunt contra eandem domum scilicet Abbathiam, et eam exterminare cupiebant atque proposuerunt, quod et irremediabiliter fecissent nisi Deus manum resistricem eis inopinate immisisset."^d From the mention, however, of the bishop of Norwich as the queller of this tumult, as well as of the rising in Norfolk in the preceding sentence, there seems more than a probability that the abbey of St. Edmund's Bury in Suffolk was the place intended: a more minute account of the tumults at which is given by Walsingham.^e

Gunton says that Henry was abbat here twenty-nine years complete, and died in his thirtieth year, anno 1391, the fourteenth or fifteenth year of King Richard II.

His library, Gunton adds, was but small; only these books: "Decretale; Johannes de Deo; Breviarium novum; Catholicon; Breviarium in duobus voluminibus; Innocentius; Liber de Vita et Moribus Tartarorum."

NICHOLAS ELMSTOW or ELNESTOW became abbat in 1391:^f and continued so the space of five years. Gunton says, in the accmpt of his Celerarius for the second year of his being abbat, wherein the daily expences of his table are recorded, that his provision for that year (all entertainments of strangers being also considered) amounted to no more than 79*l.* 0*s.* 11*d.* He adds, his library had in it these books: "Digestum vetus; Digestum novum; Codex Justiniani; Liber Azonis; Raymondus; Liber Pœnitentiale; Parvum Volumen; Digestum infortiatum; Instituta; Quaterna de Lege; unus Liber de Physica; alius Liber de Lege; Psalterium pulchrum; Psalterium Latinè et Gallicè scriptum."^g

WILLIAM GENGE, who succeeded in 1396, is stated to have been the first mitred abbat of Peterborough. Gunton says the brass of his monument was destroyed in 1643, but Willis represents it as remaining in 1718. "In the choir on the ground, the portraiture of an abbat under an arch, at top two coats of arms, viz. England and France, and the arms of Peterborough church. At his feet this inscription:

"Prudens prelatas, Wilielmus Genge vocitatus,
Primus mitratus Abbas, jacet hic tumulatus.
Summe vivebat, elastrum summeque regebat,
Mundum spernebat, que fecerat, illa docebat:
Vixerat ornatus virtutibus, immaculatus;
Tonsus, quadratus, temptatus, et igne probatus.
Annis bis senis Burgum rexit bene plenis,
Ut careat penis precibus potiatur amenis."^h

He died in 1408, and was succeeded by

JOHN DEEPING: to whom, however, the temporalities were not restored till Jan. 29, 1410.ⁱ Gunton says, he having held the office thirty years, resigned it in 1438, accepting a corrody for the remainder of his life. Deeping died in 1439. Gunton speaks as if the brass of his monument had been torn away in the great rebellion.^k Willis, however, describes it as near that of Geoffrey de Croiland, beneath an arch, at the end of the choir. His portrait mitred; on each side a coat of arms, viz. Peterborough and Westminster; above the arch the arms of the church of Westminster, and of France and England; at his feet this inscription: "Orate pro anima Domini Johannis Depinge, quondam Abbatis hujus Monasterii, qui obiit 5^o Decemb. 1439."^l

The licence for the election of a new abbat was granted Aug. 27th, 1438: and on Sept. 24th the royal assent was given to the choice made of

RICHARD ASSHTON, AYSHETON, or ASHTON, to whom the temporalities were restored the 14th of October following.^m In this abbat's second year, King Henry the Sixth, by his charter bearing date July 14th in the seventeenth year of his reign, granted to the abbat and convent of Peterborough the keeping of a Fair for three days; on St. Matthew's Day, the day before and the day after; and that they should hold the said fair as well in Huntingdonshire as in Northamptonshire.ⁿ This fair, says Gunton, is now commonly called Brigge Fair.^o

Many Corrodies were granted by this abbat Richard: two of which are noticed by Gunton as remarkable. One, to John Delaber, bishop of St. David's, who had bestowed upon the monks his mitre, cross, dalmatics, sandals, sabbatines, gloves, and mass-book. The bishop received a corrody which he might take at his own choice, either at Peterborough or at the abbat's manor of Eyebury; with a yearly pension of 32*l.* to be received during his life out of the abbat's manor of Kettering, in consideration of a large sum of money lent to the abbey but not reclaimed. The other corrody was to Alice Garton widow; for whose family the pavement of the church, in Gunton's time, bore several inscriptions.^p

This abbat Richard, says Gunton, was summoned to sit in parliament at Westminster, and being unable to undertake such a journey, delegated William Tresham, and John Kirkby clerk of the parliament, to sit in his place, and to act for him, and in his name, as if himself were present, as appeareth by his letter to the king, dated February the 12th, 1444.

"I Richard Ashton th' abbot of Peterburgh knowlege you most high, and mighty, and most crysten prince King Henry the sixth, to be my most redoubted soverayn lord, and rightwesly by succession born to reign upon me, and all your lege people. Whereupon y voluntarily without cohertion promitte, and oblish me by the faith and trouthe that y owe unto God, and by the faith, and trouthe, and ligeance that y owe unto you my most redoubted soveraign lord, that y shall be, without any variance, true, faithful, humble, and obeysaunt subyet and liegeman unto you my most redoubted soveraign lord, and that y shall be unto my lifes end, at all times and places, redy and attending in my most harty wise and maner as eny liegeman oweth to be unto his soveraign lord, putting me in my true undelayed devoir to do all that that may be unto the wele and suerty of your most royall person, of your most noble estate. “But the most remarkable thing,” Bishop Patrick says,^b “in this abbat’s time, was the pains he took in the regulation of divine service in this monastery: about which he made many ordinances, with the consent of all the convent; and drew up a Customary out of the ancient usages of the church, for all the Sundays from the Octaves of Whitsunday to the first Sunday in Advent. All which are yet extant in his Grace’s the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury’s library at Lambeth in two volumes: one written by Simon of Yarwell, as he tells us in six verses at the beginning of the book; the other by John Trentam, who concludes it with the like verses.”^c By this Customary they were directed how to sing their offices, longer or shorter, every day: as is expressed in the last rubrick of it. Before these books is prefixed the Ecclesiastical Kalendar, at the side of which are set down those festivals or anniversaries which were peculiar to this church and their neighbour, as follows:

Gunton says, after Richard Ashton had been abbat here about thirty three years,^a he surrendered his government into the hands of the bishop of Lincoln June 27th, 1471. The licence for a new election was granted July 16th, when

WILLIAM RAMSEY succeeded as abbat; to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored on August the 12th following.^b He contributed with John Maldon toward the purchase of the stand supporting an eagle, on which the Bible is still placed to read the lessons from. This distich was placed upon it :

"John Maldon Prior et Willelmus de Ramiseya Hæc tibi lectrina dant Petre metallica bina."

In his ninth year, A.D. 1480, he was indicted at the sessions before John Catesby and Guido Walston, justices of the peace, for receiving a bribe of forty shillings to connive at the escape of a felon committed to the gaol at Peterborough, when, being found guilty, he was forced to give the security of six sufficient men for his good behaviour.^c

In his tenth year, 1481, the church of Oundle was appropriated to the monastery.

In 1483 the abbat and convent were summoned to attend the bishop of Lincoln at his visitation, when he gave the members of the convent injunctions for their behaviour one towards another, as well as toward their abbat.

In the same year a contention with Croyland abbey concerning the Fen of Alderlond, which had been long pending, was renewed; and finally compromised by the appropriation to the monks of Peterborough of the church of Bringhurst in Leicestershire A.D. 1486.^d

Dr. Patrick says it was in this abbat's days also, that the abbat of Croyland procured an exchange of the four stone of wax, which had been yearly paid by his convent to the church of Burgh, for a yearly pension of twenty shillings in money.^e

The following was William de Ramsey's epitaph, at the upper end of the body of the church :

"Abbas Burgensis Will'elmus ut hic tumulatus,
Ramisey natus, prelatu, jam nece stratus.
En qui protrusis rodendus vermibus instat,
Vir prudens, justus, pius, omnibus et honorandus,
Custus, benignus, omni virtute decorus,
Corde suo statuit nunquam offendere Christum
Castigans rigidos, tractans pietate modestos,
Debita persolvi, et diruta multa novari.^f
Prestet plena suis stipendia jam cenobitis,
Et propter missas celebrandas cotidianas
Ipse monasterio semper servabat honorem.
Pax donetur ei"

^a From the initial letters R.A. over one or two of the windows of what is called The New Building at Peterborough, as well as from the name standing at full length, abbat Ashton is thought to have been the founder of the structure: though Gunton ascribes it entirely to abbat Kirton.

^b Pat. 11 Edw. IV. p. 1. Gunton gives the following account of his election, as it was written by Roger Bird his chaplain. "In quo quidem termino, videlicet xxvii die Julii supra scripta hora capitulari, celebrata primitus, et solemniter prout decuit, ad magnum altare in Ecclesia conventuali Monasterii nostri antedicti Missa de Sancto Spiritu, pulsataque campana more solito et consueto, convenerunt et de facto capitulariter pariter et communiter ob hoc et ad hoc congregati fuerunt in dicta domo nostra capitulari omnes qui voluerunt potuerunt et debuerunt hujusmodi electioni futuri abbatis nostri commode interesse; videlicet, Ego dompnus Johannes Maldon prior et præsidents prædictus, Johannes York magnus senn. in firmaria, Willielmus Walmesford senn. in firmaria, Willielmus Burgh, Robertus Lydington, Robertus Notyngham subprior, Johannes Pynchley gardianus de Oxney, Richardus Oxford subeleemosinarius, Johannes Burgh præcentor, Willielmus Spalding infirmarius, Henricus Lynne sufficienter licentiatus ad peregrinandum comperuit per Willielmum Burgh confratrem suum nomine procuratoris, qui quidem Willielmus Burgh onus procuratoris hujusmodi in se ad omnem juris effectum acceptavit et admisit, cujus tenor inferius describitur, Johannes Nall celerarius, Johannes Hill tertius prior claustralis, Johannes Baston camerarius, Nicolaus Overton magister operis et pitanciarius, Johannes Glynton Sacrista, Willielmus Bury quartus prior claustralis, Willielmus Ramsey receptor et senescallus, Robertus Burgh scholaris, Johannes Croyland senior refectarius, Johannes Rypon magnus eleemosinarius, Thomas Burgh hostiliarius, Johannes Morys, Johannes Gent scholaris, Edmundus Lynne, Georgius Burgh subsacrista, Johannes Tylly, Thomas London

ROBERT KIRTON, or KIRKTON, was made abbat in 1496, or, according to Dr. Patrick, in 1497. In 1499 the church of North Collingham was appropriated to the monastery. From the Visitation which took place in abbat Kirton's nineteenth year 1515, great irregularities appear to have crept into the convent. The complaints, however, were for the most part of a trivial nature, and soon rectified by the bishop of Lincoln. Some of the monks were said to have haunted a tavern near the monastery, and to have given themselves up to singing and dancing till ten or eleven o'clock at night, to the trouble of the rest. It was also stated, that at the funeral of abbat William de Ramsey, the sum of 6s. 8d. was withholden from every priest, and 3s. 4d. from every monk, which had been usually given at such times.^g Gunton notices a contention between abbat Kirton and the tenants in the neighbourhood of the monastery, about pasturage in the fen called Burgh. They also accused him of suffering dilapidations in the houses of Boongate-street. But, notwithstanding these contests, Gunton adds, our abbat forgot not to enlarge the buildings of the monastery. About 1518 he completed "The New Building" begun by abbat Ashton, and placed in it three altars, opposite to three pair of stairs descending from the back of the great altar. He built a chamber in his own dwelling-house, called Heaven-gate-chamber: made a bow-window in his great hall, overlooking the cloister: set up the crucifixorium or rood-loft in the church: and the gate leading to the deanry. On this last building his rebus of a crozier with the letter R, and a kirk or church placed upon a tun, for Robert Kirton, still remains. He likewise beautified the Lady chapel, or chapel of the Virgin Mary, with pictures and gilding. He maintained a long suit in law against Margaret countess of Richmond and Derby, concerning knight-service for lands in Torpell, Thorpe, Waterville, and Achirch, wherein at last he prevailed.^h The exact time of his death is not stated, but he was buried in St. Mary's chapel. His monument, in 1651, was levelled with the ground, above which it was erected about four feet, and placed upon a hollow arch where his body lay, at the head of which was a stone lying even with the pavement, which covered a pair of stairs going down into the sepulchre.ⁱ

JOHN BOROWE, or BURGH, alias CHAMBERS, was the last Abbat and first Bishop of Peterborough. His name of Borowe or Burgh was probably taken from Peterborough, where he was born. Gunton says, his advancement to the abbatial chair was anno 1528.^k The temporalities of the monastery, however, are stated upon other authority to have been restored to him on the fourth of April 1526.^l Gunton says, in his first year, Cardinal Wolsey came to Peterborough, where he kept his Easter: upon Palm-Sunday he carried his palm, going with the monks in procession, and the Thursday following he kept his Maundy, washing and kissing the feet of fifty-nine poor people, and having dried them, he gave to every one of them twelve pence, and three ells of canvas for a shirt; he gave also to each of them a pair of shoes, and a portion of red herrings. On Easter day he went in procession in his cardinal's vestments, and sang the high mass himself after a solemn manner, which he concluded with his benediction and remission upon all the hearers.^a

On July 27th, 1534, this abbat John, with John Walpoole prior, and thirty-seven other monks, under their hands and seals professed faith and obedience to the king, and acknowledged him supreme head of the church of England.^b

On January the 8th in the next year, Catharine, the first wife of King Henry the Eighth, then called the princess dowager, died at Kimbolton in Huntingdonshire,^b and was buried in the church of Peterborough, betwixt two pillars on the north side of the choir, near to the great altar;^d her hearse being covered with a black velvet pall, crossed with white cloth of silver: this pall was afterwards changed for one of meaner value, which had her Spanish escutcheons affixed to it; but even that was taken away in 1643.^e Lord Herbert tells us it was "for the honour of her memory" that King Henry reserved the monastery of Peterborough, when all the rest fell, and erected it into a bishop's see.^f

Bridges, in his history of Northamptonshire, says, by a Survey of the Lands and Revenues which the abbey held in 1535, 26 Hen. VIII.^g it appears that the site of the convent, with the houses, orchards, and gardens, within its precincts, and its meadows, pastures, and demesne lands, was valued at lv^l. iii^s. x^d. Gunton says, "I have not as yet seen any record Cromwell had mentioned some personages of honour to be sent to attend her funeral; the said officers wrote, "that as to the entertainment of them, with others, as should repair thither by commandment, it should be, to the best they could devise, accomplished in as ample manner as provision could be had for the king's honour." Gough, in his additions to Camden's Britannia. edit. 1789, vol. ii. p. 185, mentioning the plain slab for Queen Catherine, yet remaining, inscribed with her name, adds, "Her body was discovered in the late new paving, but immediately closed up again." A manuscript Note by Mr. Sparke, in a copy of Gunton's History, says the plain altar stone for Queen Catherine was put down by Mr. Taylor, one of the prebendaries.

^d Strype, Eccles. Concerning this, he dispatched his letters to the aforesaid gentlemen; and that they should acquaint him with the preparations made for her funeral. The sum of their answer was 'that the boweling and cering was done in the best manner: the leading and chesting was preparing, no lacking any thing: and that it should be finished with all speed.' And the king having sent Mr. Comptroller thither, to order all things belonging to the interment, they shewed themselves very joyous at his coming." "And whereas

The Cotton Manuscript Cleopatra E. iv. fol. 205, however, contains a letter from William Parre, one of the Visitors of the Religious Houses, to Lord Cromwell, a part of which relates to Peterborough, and sufficiently explains the abbat's mode of conduct. It is dated "At Horton the xviiith daye of Marche" 1537.

"Pleasethe your Lordship to be advertised that according to the tenor of my last Lettre sente vnto your Lordship by this berer I have bene at Petirbourgh, where the Abbot vpon the rumor that was spred abroad of the comyng downe of the Visitors, and not upon any occasion geven or ministred to hym either in worde or dede by Doctor Layton, shewed himself to be affrayed, inso-moche as at my furst comyng thidder he required me of myne advise and favor what was best for hym to doo. And in this state I left hym without any ferther prouf or treatie bitwene hym and me. Howe be it if shall pleas your Lordship to commaunde me without any ferther service in th' approving hym, eftesones in this matier I shall most humble ensue the same, supposing that small treatie wold moeve hym to accomlishe his furst offre."

In this endowment of the see, JOHN CHAMBERS, B.D. was nominated the first bishop, having the temporalities delivered to him September the 14th, and being consecrated October the 23d, 1541.

Godwin, in his Commentary "de Præsulibus," speaks of him by mistake as the same John Chambers who was doctor of medicine and dean of St. Stephen's chapel, Westminster.^a

From an inscription in brass about the verge of his monument, he appears to have prepared his own tomb while abbat, in 1530. Gunton says the inscription was thus: "Credo quod redemptor meus vivit, et in novissimo die de terra surrecturus sum, et in carne mea videbo Deum, salvatorem meum: reposita est hæc spes mea in sinu meo. Moritur die Anno Domini millesimo, quingentesimo tricesimo." Upon the same stone, at the foot of his figure, was a plate of brass, wherein these verses were engraven:

"En pius, en validus pastor jacet hic Johannes Burgh, Burgo natus, ac domus hujus apex.
Cui caro, mundus, opes cesserunt, id genus omne
Prælia divinus carnea vincit amor.
Ordinis infestos redigens sub vindice mores,
Dum comes ipse fuit, norma, locique decor.
Pauperimos ditans, lapsis peccata remittens,
Mitibus ipse pius, asperimus rigidis.
Sta, lege, funde preces, Deus est cui singula cedunt,
Dic, velit ipse dare celica regna sibi."^b

He died in 1556. By his last will, dated December 31st, 1554, and proved December 3d, 1556, he gave to the poor xx^l; to the reparation of Peterborough bridge xx^l; and xx^l to the repairs of his cathedral, to which he also gave a pix, and two silver candlesticks gilt.^c

His successor was DAVID POOL or POLE, LL.D. who in 1520 was elected a fellow of All Souls college, Oxford.^d He became Dean of the Arches in 1556;^e and, according to Godwin, was consecrated bishop of Peterborough Aug. 15th, 1557.^f Gunton has printed the nomination and confirmation of him in the bishoprick by Pope Paul the Fourth, dated at St. Peter's in Rome, the 9th of the kalends of April, 1556.^g In 1559, he was deprived by Queen Elizabeth. "What became of him after his ejection," says Gunton, "let the late learned and reverend Bishop Andrews be the informer:^h for the author of a Romish pamphlet, I mean Bellarmine, having charged those times with cruelty, that such bishops as were deposed by Queen Elizabeth were yet more hardly used, and died in misery; the bishop gives us account of them, and particularly of this our David in these words, 'Polus Petriburgensis summa comitate habitus, liber semper, Principis beneficio, et in agro suo matura ætate decessit.'ⁱ Dr. Heylin, in his History of the Reformation, an. 1559, says that Bishop Pole, by the clemency of the queen, "enjoyed the like freedom, was courteously treated by all persons among whom he lived, his letters patent, appointed that the dean and six prebendaries, of which the chapter was to consist, should be exempt from the bishop of Lincoln and his jurisdiction, and distinct also from the bishop of Peterburgh, and be an entire ecclesiastical corporation of themselves. The lands and rents assigned them were, first, the whole site or bounds of the monastery, those excepted which had been allotted to the bishop; wherein were dwelling-houses for the dean, prebendaries, and such clergy as were engaged in the daily service of the church; with all those messuages, lands, and tenements, called the convent lands, within the town of Peterburgh; and the manors of Peterburgh, Longthorpe, Sutton, Castre, Glynton, Peykirk, Maxey, Northburrow, Stamford, Irtlingburgh, Stanwigge, and Pokebroke; with Hamond's meadow, in Peterburgh, containing twelve acres; five acres of pasture there, called Coldham-close; four acres of pasture, called the Holts; and those woods and underwoods, with the soil of the same, named Burghe-parke, Grynshawe, and Dame Anne's wood, containing one hundred and six acres in Peterburgh aforesaid; the rectory of Maxey, with the advowson of the vicarage, and all those tithes and pensions in Castre, Peykirk, Maxey, Northborough, Thornhaw, Ufford, Barnake, Irtlingburgh, Stanwigge, Pokebroke, Woodford, and Stoke-Doyly; and the rectories of Peykirke, Norburgh, Stanwigge, and All-Saints in Irtlingburgh in the county of Northampton; the manors of Fiskerton, Repham, Scotthorne, Sudbroke, Scotter, Walcote, and Grantham; with the hundred of Scotter, and tithes and pensions in Fiskerton, Scotter, and Carby, and the rectory of Fiskerton, in the county of Lincoln; the manors of North-Colyngam, and South-Colyngam, and tithes and pensions in South-Colyngam in Nottinghamshire; the manor and rectory of Eston, and vicarage of Bringhurst in Leicestershire; and the manor, of Overton, Botilbridge, and Alwalton, and rectory of Alwalton, in the county of Huntingdon; and at last died, upon one of his farms, in a good old age. He died in May or June 1568.^k

EDMUND SCAMBLER, a native of Gressingham in Lancashire, and chaplain to Archbishop Parker, was consecrated bishop of Peterborough, Feb. 16th, 1560.^l Gunton says, he was authorized to hold in commendam, with his bishoprick of Peterborough, a prebend at York and another at Westminster, for the space of three years, by commission from the queen bearing date May 13th, 3 Eliz. and from Matthew archbishop of Canterbury, bearing the same date. "What he was," Gunton adds, "for learning and integrity of religion in the now reformed church of England wherein he was a bishop, may appear by these doctrinal Articles, which in his first episcopal Visitation he prescribed to the dean and prebendaries of his church, requiring their subscription thereunto. For as yet the general Articles of the church of England were not formed, until about two years after, Jan. 29th, 1562. Bishop Scambler's Articles were these:

' 1. Sacra Scriptura in se continet omnem doctrinam pietatis, ex qua sufficienter, et error convinci possit, et veritas stabiliri.

2. Symbolum Nicænum, Athanasii, et quod communiter Apostolorum dicitur, continent brevissime articulos fidei nostræ sparsim in Scripturis ostentos: qui istis non crediderint, inter veros Catholicos non sunt recipiendi.

3. Ecclesia Christi est, in qua purum Dei verbum prædicatur, et sacramenta juxta Christi ordinationem administrantur, et in qua clavium autoritas retinetur.

4. Quævis Ecclesia particularis auctoritatem habet instituendi, mutandi, et abrogandi cæremonias, et ritus Ecclesiasticos, modo ad decorem, ordinem, et ædificationem fiat.

5. Christus tantum duo sacramenta expresse nobis commendat, Baptisma et Eucharistiam, quæ conferunt gratiam rite summentibus, etiamsi malus sit minister, et non prosunt indigne summentibus, quamvis bonus sit minister.

6. Laudandus Ecclesiæ mos baptizandi parvulos, et retinendus.

7. Cæna Dominica non est tantum Symbolum benevolentia Christianorum inter se, sed magis Symbolum est nostræ redemptionis per Christi mortem, et nostræ conjunctionis cum Christo, ubi fidelibus vere datur, et exhibetur communio corporis et sanguinis Domini.

8. Sacramentum Eucharistiæ ex usu primitivæ Ecclesiæ, neque servabatur, vel elevabatur, vel adorabatur.

9. Missa, quæ consuevit a sacerdotibus dici, non erat a Christo constituta, sed a multis Romanis Pontificibus confirmata; nec est Eucharistia ex se sacrificium propitiatorium, sed recordatio sacrificii semel peracti.

10. Scholastica Transubstantiatio Panis et Vini in corpus et sanguinem Christi, probari non potest ex sacris literis.

On Dec. 15th, 1584, Bishop Scambler was translated to the see of Norwich.^b

Whilst at Peterborough he impaired the honour, privileges, and revenues of his bishoprick, passing quite away the hundred of Nassaburgh, with the whole liberties thereof, the gaol, the manor of Thirlby, the manor of Southorpe, &c. to the queen, from whom the earls of Exeter enjoyed them.^c

He died May 7th, 1594. The original inscription on his tomb, in Norwich cathedral, which appears to have been materially injured in 1651, is given in Sir Thomas Browne's Repertorium, p. 3; as well as an engraving of it, as it was restored by his grandson in 1691, at p. 38. In the nineteenth year of Queen Elizabeth, Nassaburgh or Langdyke hundred was surrendered to the crown by Bishop Scambler, reserving to the bishoprick a yearly rent of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* by indenture, bearing date 19th of December, confirmed the next day by the dean and chapter of Peterburgh, and afterwards enrolled in chancery. RICHARD HOWLAND, D.D. was elected bishop of Peterborough January the 22d, and consecrated at Lambeth Feb. 6th, 1584.^d He was originally of Peter-House college, Cambridge, where he was admitted fellow Nov. 11th, 1562. In 1577 he became Master of St. John's college in that university.^e Walton erroneously states him^f to have preached the funeral sermon of the queen of Scots, which was in fact preached by the bishop of Lincoln.^g Dr. Fletcher, however, the dean of Peterborough, attended that unfortunate queen in her last moments; and Gunton has preserved a Relation of her Funeral-ceremony, attested in one of the Church Registers by Dr. Fletcher himself.^h

Bishop Howland died June 23d, 1600, at Castre,ⁱ and was buried at Peterborough, but had no tomb erected for him. His successor was

THOMAS DOVE, dean of Norwich, and chaplain to Queen Elizabeth, who was chosen bishop March 31st, confirmed April 24th, and consecrated at Lambeth by the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishops of London, Winchester, Chichester, and Ely, April 26th, 1601.^k Baker, in one of his manuscript notes on Gunton, says he kept his vicarage of Saffron Walden in commendam, and resided there after he was bishop. He was also rector of Heydon in Essex.^l He died Aug. 30, 1630, at the age of seventy-five:^m and was buried in his cathedral. His monument was destroyed in 1643. Gunton has preserved his epitaph.ⁿ

WILLIAM PIERS, or PIERSE, D.D. dean of Peterborough, and canon of Christ church, Oxford, was elected bishop Sept. 17, 1630, and was consecrated in the chapel at Croydon October 24th, 1630.^o He is said to have been a good divine, and a good lawyer, and to have projected many things for the advantage of his see. He was, however, translated, two years after his advancement, to the bishopric of Bath and Wells.^p He was buried at Walthamstow in Essex, where he died in 1670.^q

AUGUSTINE LINDSELL, D.D. was elected bishop December 22d, 1632:^r and had the temporalities restored to him Feb. 20th following. He was a native of brother who was one of the bearers at the queen of Scots' funeral. See Archæol. vol. i. p. 357.

Shortly after her interment a table was placed against the wall of the church containing a Latin inscription, which was taken away during the great rebellion. Gunton says, the royal ensigns of a helmet, sword, and scutcheon remained to the year 1643. In 1612 a letter was addressed by King James I. to the dean and chapter, ordering the body to be removed to Westminster. Gough, in his Additions to Camden's Account of Northamptonshire, Britannia, edit. 1789, vol. ii. p. 185, says that the shrine of St. Tibba at Peterborough was mistaken for a cenotaph with an herse over it for the queen of Scots, who was only buried in a grave or vault near it.

Bumstead in Essex, and fellow of Clare Hall in Cambridge; afterwards rector of Houghton le Spring in the country palatine of Durham, and in 1628 made dean of Litchfield. In 1633 he was removed to the see of Hereford. He gave proof of his learning by an excellent edition of Theophylact on St. Paul's Epistles.^a

FRANCIS DEE, D.D., dean of Chichester, was elected bishop April 9th, and was installed by proxy May 28th, 1634.^b He was descended from an ancient family of Shropshire; and having been fellow of St. John's college in Cambridge, became rector of Allhallows Lombard Street, in London. He was afterwards chancellor of the church of Salisbury, and in 1630 dean of Chichester.^c Having held the bishoprick four years and six months, he died Oct. 8, 1638, bequeathing by his will towards the reparation of his cathedral church the sum of a hundred pounds. He was buried, without any memorial, in the choir, near the bishop's throne.^d

JOHN TOWERS, originally fellow of Queen's college, Cambridge, and afterwards dean of Peterborough, was elected bishop Nov. 11th, and confirmed Jan. 7th, 1638.^e Gunton says he was installed March 8th following.^f He shared deeply in the troubles of the times which succeeded; and once fled to the king's garrison at Oxford.

Dr. Patrick, in the Supplement to Gunton's History, has given a narrative of the rifling and defacing the church of Peterborough in 1643: and another narrative occurs in "Querela Cantabrigiensis," printed with Mercurius Rusticus, 8vo. 1646. The destruction of the screen behind the high altar, the violation of the tombs of the two queens, the tearing of sepulchral brasses from the different monuments, the breaking of the painted windows, the destruction of all carved work, and the ransacking and burning of the records,^g were the leading features of the havoc made by Cromwell's soldiers.

The church being thus ruined and desolate, was used for a considerable time as a new parochial church for the city: the Lady chapel, which had become ruinous, being taken down, and the materials sold to provide money for the general repairs of the structure.

Dr. Towers died Jan. 10th, 1648.^h He was buried between the choir and the altar, in the grave of abbat Henry de Morcot.ⁱ

After his decease, the see of Peterborough continued vacant twelve years: till, on the restoration of King Charles the Second,

BENJAMIN LANEY, D.D., was elected October the 20th, confirmed November the 17th, and consecrated December the 2d, 1660, by the archbishop of York, in King Henry the Seventh's chapel.^k He had been before dean of Rochester, and Master of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge. Having been a benefactor to the repairs of the cathedral, he was in 1662 translated to the bishoprick of Lincoln.^l He was employed in the service of King Charles I. at Uxbridge, and attended King Charles the Second in his exile.^m

JOSEPH HENSHAW, D.D., for whom the conge d'elire had passed April 9th, was elected April 15th, and inthroned May 28th, 1663.ⁿ He had been previously advanced to the deanry of Chichester within a few months after the king's restoration.^o He died suddenly March 9th, 1678, at London, and was buried near his wife in the chancel of East Lavant church in Sussex, without any gravestone or inscription to his memory.

WILLIAM LLOYD, D. D. bishop of Landaff, was translated to Peterborough May 16th, 1679.^p In July 1685, he was again translated, to the bishoprick of Norwich, of which he was deprived February 1st, 1690, for refusing to take the oaths to King William and Queen Mary.^q He retired to Hammersmith in Middlesex, where he died January the 1st, 1710, and was buried in the belfry of the chapel there by his own order and appointment.^r

THOMAS WHITE, D. D., was elected to this see Sept. 3d, 1685. He was consecrated October 25th, and inthroned November 9th following.^s He was deprived February 1st, 1690, and died May 29th, 1698.^t Bridges says, he was educated in St. John's College, Cambridge, and became archdeacon of Nottingham, and rector of St. Andrew's Holbourn in London. In 1688, he was one of the six bishops, who, with archbishop Sancroft, were committed to the Tower for presenting a petition to King James II. and refusing to distribute in their respective dioceses his declaration for liberty of conscience. Yet, on the accession of William the Third to the crown, refusing to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, he was deprived of his see. It is said, that his executors could not obtain the burial service to be read at his grave by Dr. Hicks, whom he appointed to inter him.^u

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, D. D., was elected to this see May 20th, 1691, consecrated July 5th, and inthroned September 12th following.^x He was born in the parish of St. Anne's Aldersgate, London, in 1632: educated at St. Paul's school: and received his university education at Magdalen college, Cambridge. Before his nomination to this bishoprick, he had been rector of Brampton in Northamptonshire, and of All Saints in Stamford, which last he held in commendam with it. In 1672 he published at London his famous book, in confutation of the principles maintained by Hobbes of Malmsbury, intitled "De Legibus Naturæ Disquisitio Philosophica," &c. He also wrote "An Essay towards the Recovery of the Jewish Measures and Weights" in 1686. He died at his palace in Peterborough Oct. 9th, 1718, and was buried behind the altar in the cathedral.^y

WHITE KENNET, D. D., was preferred to this see from the deanery of the church in the month of November, 1718. He was the son of the reverend Basil Kennet, vicar of Postling near Hithe, in Kent: and was born at Dover Aug. 10th, 1660. In 1678 he was entered of Edmund Hall, Oxford, and in 1684 became vicar of Ambrosden in Oxfordshire. He was afterwards rector of Shottesbrook in Berkshire; and in 1707 was promoted to the deanery of Peterborough. In 1712 he founded "an antiquarian and historical library" at Peterborough; for which purpose he had long been gathering up pieces from the very beginning of printing in England to the latter end of Queen Elizabeth's reign. This collection, amounting to about fifteen hundred volumes and small tracts, was placed in a private room at Peterborough, with a view of being daily supplied and augmented by the care of the Rev. Mr. Sparke, a member of that church, of very good literature, and well qualified to assist in the design. There is a large written catalogue of this collection, inscribed "Index Librorum aliquot vetustorum quos in commune bonum congesit W. K. Decan. Petriburgh. 1712." This library is now arranged in the chapel of St. Thomas Becket, over the west porch of the cathedral church.

"One Book indeed, and but one, still remains, which was happily redeemed from the fire, by the then Chaunter of the Church, Mr. Humfry Austin: who, knowing the great value of it, first hid it, in February 1642, under a seat in the Quire; and when it was found by a Souldier on the 22d April 1643 (when all the seats were pulled down) rescued it again, by the offer of ten shillings for that old Latine Bible as he called it; after which he pretended to enquire. The name of the Bible, by the help of the ten shillings, preserved this precious treasure from the flames, whither it was going: as Mr. Austin hath left upon record in the beginning of the Book; with a Copy of the Souldier's acknowledgment, that he had given him satisfaction for it, in these words:

'I pray let this Scripture Book alone, for he hath paid me for it, and therefore I would desire you to let it alone. By me HENRY TOPCLYFFE souldier under Captain Cromwell, Colonel Cromwell's son; therefore I pray let it alone.'

Bishop Kennet died December 19th, 1728, and was buried behind the altar of the cathedral of Peterborough, under a black marble slab, with this inscription:

ROBERT CLAVERING, D.D., bishop of Landaff, was translated to this see Jan. 28th, 1728-9, holding his rectory of Mersh-Gibbon in Buckinghamshire, and a canonry of Christ's church Oxford, in commendam. He died in the month of July 1747, and was buried under the altar rails of his cathedral.

JOHN THOMAS, D.D., one of the canons residentiary of St. Paul's, succeeded Dr. Clavering in the bishoprick of Peterborough. He had been originally fellow of All Souls college Oxford, and had been made dean of Peterborough in 1740. In 1757 he was translated to the see of Salisbury, and again in 1761, on the death of Bishop Hoadley, to Winchester.

RICHARD TERRICK, D.D., succeeded to Peterborough in 1757, where he was consecrated in the month of July. He was in early life a fellow of Clare Hall, Cambridge; canon of Windsor, and vicar of Twickenham in Middlesex, 1742; and became a canon residentiary of St. Paul's in the same year in which he came to Peterborough. On the death of Bishop Osbaldeston, in 1764, he was translated to the see of London. He died March 31st, 1777.

ROBERT LAMB, D.D., from being dean of Peterborough, was preferred to the bishoprick in 1764, with which he held the living of Hatfield in Hertfordshire in commendam. On his death, in 1769, by the interest of the duke of Grafton, then prime minister,

JOHN HINCHLIFFE, D.D., was promoted to this see. He was born in Swallow Street, Westminster, in 1731, where his father was in the humble employment of a stable-keeper. He was educated, however, at Westminster school, and in 1750 was elected to Trinity college, Cambridge. For about six years he was an usher at Westminster school, where, after an interval during which he had travelled through Germany, Italy, and France, he became head-master in 1764: but his health permitting him to hold this employment for a few months only, he became tutor and chaplain to the duke of Devonshire. In 1768 he was removed to the mastership of Trinity college Cambridge, which he held with his bishoprick till he was appointed dean of Durham. He died at his palace at Peterborough Jan. 11th, 1794.^b

SPENSER MADAN, D.D., was translated to this see on Bishop Hinchliffe's death. He was the son of Col. Martin Madan, and was elected a scholar of Trinity college Cambridge, in 1746. In 1791, on the death of Dr. Christopher Wilson, he was promoted to the bishoprick of Bristol. He died in the palace at Peterborough Nov. 8th, 1813, at the advanced age of 85.

JOHN PARSONS, D.D., master of Baliol college Oxford and dean of Bristol, was promoted to the bishoprick of Peterborough on Dr. Madan's death.

The church of Peterborough, as it now remains, is considered in respect of its size the sixth cathedral in England. It consists of a nave and side ailes, a transept, and a choir finishing semicircularly at the east end. The choir is surrounded with a continuation of the side ailes of the nave: and is terminated at the east by the structure called the New Building. In the centre of the cross is the lantern or great tower. Nigh the north-western extremity of the building is the Bell tower, corresponding with which was formerly a tower on the south-west, which is intended to be rebuilt. The west front is formed by a portico of three lofty arches; the middle one being the narrowest, in which is the great west door, and over it, inserted by abbat Waterville, the chapel of St. Thomas Becket. This front is flanked on each side by an elegant tower with pinnacles. The pillars in the interior of the building are massive, supporting round arches; and the walls are adorned with interlaced arches.

Mr. Cole, in one of his manuscript volumes now preserved in the British Museum, gives the following description of the church, said to have been taken by Dr. William Parker, about fifty years ago. "Length of the whole fabric from east to west, 479 feet 10 inches; whereof the west porch comprehends 30 feet; from whence to the choir door, 231 feet 2 inches; from the choir door to the altar, 138 feet; from whence the library called the New Building extends 80 feet 8 inches, and is in breadth equal to the body and side ailes. The breadth of the west front, where there are three large arches, is 156 feet. Height of the arches, 82 feet. At the north and south of the front, two steeples in height 153 feet. At a little distance, over the north arch, is the great steeple, where there are ten bells; it is in height 188 feet 4 inches. Over the south arch a flat tower, in height 120 feet. Length of the great cross-aisle, with only six pillars, 203 feet. Breadth of the cross-aisle, 69 feet. The breadth of the body and side-aisles, with two rows of pillars, is 91 feet 4 inches: and it is the same in the eastern or choir part thereof, where four of those pillars support the tower over the choir, which is large, and in height 150 feet. Height of the body from the pavement to the vaulting, 78 feet. The cloisters are down; but the walls are standing, and are in length 138 feet, in breadth 131 feet."

The close, west of the cathedral, is nearly surrounded by ancient monastic buildings, in the centre of which is a towered gateway leading to the bishop's palace. The palace itself was anciently the abbat's residence. At the west end of the close is the entrance gateway from the town.

Among the registers of this monastery noticed by Bishop Tanner in the Notitia Monastica, is one of abbat William, called The White Book, which appears, in 1636, to have been in the possession of Sir Robert Wingfield. Another register quoted by Dugdale, is, or was in the possession of the dean and chapter of the Church. There are two Chartularies, one in continuation of the other, marked Cleopatra C. I. and C. II. in the Cotton Collection of Manuscripts in the British Museum: apparently of the early part of the fifteenth century. The register of transactions in abbat Botheby's time, marked Vesp. E. XXI. in the same collection, has been already spoken of at some length in a former page. The Cotton Manuscript Vespasian E. XXII. contains another collection of deeds, principally of the latter end of the thirteenth and beginning of the fourteenth centuries:^c and in the Manuscript Faustina B. III. are numerous instruments relating to Gunton has given us a very large catalogue of the library of the monastery, amounting to several hundred volumes:^b among which one only relates to the abbey itself: "Conventio facta tempore Godfridi Abbatis inter sacristam et vicarium Burgi ex una parte, et sub-eleemosynarium Burgi ex altera de Oblationibus percipiendis in Capella S. Thomæ Martyris juxta portam."

Leland gives another list of a few books which he found there in the time of Henry the Eighth.^c

NUM. I.

De prima fundatione Ecclesiae Medeshamstedensis, quod nunc Burgh vocatur.

[Ex Registro Abbatiae de Peterborough, penes Decan. et Capl. de Peterborough. a. 1640.]

REX Alhfridus regis Peadae sororem habebat reginam Kynesburgam, et Peada mutua cognatione sororem Alhfridi acceperat Alfedam. Alfridus filius erat regis Northanhumborum Oswii fratris sceptrigeri martyris Oswaldi. Peada filius Pendæ regis Merciorum. Hic suadente fidei cognato et pia sorore baptizatus est à Finano pontifice; plus jam gaudens de æterna salute quam de petita virgine, assumptisque secum quatuor evangelizatoribus religiosis cum conjuge fidem Christi et suo et paterno regno, patre licet pagano satis consentiente, primus invexit. Hiis accessit comes et cooperator illustris Saxulphus, vir præpotens et seculo et religione, regique et ecclesiae acceptissimus. Qui cupiens novellam plantationem Christianitatis sua vice in gentes dilatare, Dei clementia et Christiani regis benevolentia molitus est monasterium nobile quod Medeshamstede dicitur, in regione Girviorum, quod beato Petro in quo scilicet Dominus ecclesiam suam ædificavit, tanquam ecclesiae primicias consecravit. Hic itaque, aggregato numero fratrū contubernio, sedit abbas et doctor mediterraneorum Anglorum ac Merciorum, donec in episcopum assumptus est, docens incredulos, baptizans credentes, habens discipulos intus monachos religiosos, foras propagandæ fidei magistros post suum principale monasterium parturiens, et ædificans suffraganea cœnobia et alias ecclesias tanquam hujus fœcundæ matris filias. Cultu quoque divino sub christianissimis et beneficis regibus Peada, Osuuio, Wlfero, atque Ethelredo qui sibi successerant latiùs regnante, ut sapiens Machabeus Symon dilatavit terminos suos, et augmentavit gloriam ecclesiae suæ. Utque domum suam contra tam varias mundi tempestates perpetuò muniret, quam supra firmam petram fundaverat, etiam regiis cartis et privilegiis fulcire studuit. Igitur post biennium susceptæ fidei, Penda idolatriæ capite exciso, victor Oswius regnum Merciorum triennio obtinuit, totam gentem subjectam ad Christum convertit, monasterium Medeshamstede regulariter provexit. Interea amabilis indolis et regno condecensimus Peada indigna et immatura nece ablatu, fervorem dilatandæ ecclesiae successuris fratribus dereliquit. Deinde excluso rege Mercii susceptam Christianitatem cum naturali rege Wlphero, alio Pendæ filio, constanter servaverunt. Anni erant ab adventu Augustini Anglorum luciferi quinquaginta quinque, ab incarnatione salvatoris DCL. exacti, jam sextus à beato Augustino sacer Deusedit Dorovernensi cathedræ archiepiscopus apostolicè præfulgebat. Cum igitur Elferus adeo flagraret in Christi cultura ut non solùm patrias gentes verùm etiam subjectos sibi Australium reges et populos regiis muneribus et ampliatis regnis ad veram Dei sectam accenderit, celestis verò clavigeri domum in Medeshamstede autenticam ac si Romanam coluit ecclesiam, regia largitate qua finitimas illustraret ecclesias provexit, æterna libertate ne cui regia sponsa serviret donavit, fines possessionum seu extenta linea attribuit. Auctoritate extulit privilegiis, ut prænotatum est, sagacitate abbas Saxulphi sicut et successores sui corroboravit. Quarum rerum exemplaria seorsum descripta jubente Rege Ethelredo suum fraterno testamento adjungi, atque unicum votum in unum corpus redigi, ad perpetuam videlicet monasterii stabilitatem subtractis aliquibus versibus causa breviandi, hic inseruntur.

Anno Domini 654. Fundatum est monasterium de Burgo sancti Petri à Peada rege Merciorum, Saxulfo comite facto ejus abbate primo.

Anno Domini 870. Pagani Eboracum relinquentes, in Lyndesay navigio applicant, ubi patriam depopulantes, etiam monasterium de Bardney, monachis omnibus absque ulla misericordia interfectis, ignibus tradiderunt; pertranseuntesque in Kestiven omnia conterunt, perimunt, et incendunt. Contra quos, cum comes Algarus, dictus junior, colligeret exercitum, contraxit universam juventutem Hoylandiæ. Ipse duoque milites senescalli sui, Wibertus et Lefricus, de quorum nominibus, adhuc villis in quibus manserant nomina retinentibus, senes et rustici relictis, vocabula dederant; scilicet Wyberton, id est, villam Wiberti, et Lefricton, id est, villam Lefrici, appellantes, unà cum cohorte Croylandensis monasterii, videlicet ducentis bellatoribus robustissimis, eo quòd maxima pars illorum de fugitivis fuerat, quibus præfuit frater Tolius, monachus laicus ejusdem monasterii, miles ante suam conversionem, per totam Merciam in armorum exercitio nominatissimus, sed tunc amore cœlestis patriæ, relicto seculo, spirituali miliciæ apud Croyland mancipatus. Langtoff, et Baston, circa CCC. viros fortes, et aptos ad bellum; insuper Morcardum dominum, cum familia sua, quæ fortissima fuit et numerosa: occurrenteque vice-dominio Lincolnæ, nomine Osgoto, veterano ac validissimo bellatore, cum cuneo Lincolnensi, numero D. omnes collecti in Kestiven, in festo sancti Mauricii martyris, bellum cum paganis commiserunt, et largiente domino, victoriam, occisis tribus regibus, cum ingenti multitudine paganorum, Christiani cedentes Barbaros, usque ad portas tentorium suorum persequerentur, ubi cum acerrimè restiterunt, nox bellum dirimit, et invictissimus comes suum exercitum revocavit. Venerunt, in ipsa nocte, in castra paganorum omnes cæteri reges de patria, qui dividentes inter se provinciam, ad depredandum processerunt; scilicet, Godron, Baseg, Oskitell, Halfdenne, et Hamond, et totidem comites, scilicet Frena, Vnguar, Vbba, et uterque Sidrok senior et junior, cum suis exercitibus, et præda magna nimis, mulierumque ac parvulorum multitudine infinita, quorum adventu cognito, pars magna Christianorum, timore perterrita, noctanter diffugit, et remanserunt cum prædicto comite, ac ducibus suis de octo mille virorum vix duo millia, cum quibus, summo diluculo, auditis divinis officiis, et sumpto sacro viatico, omnes ad moriendum pro Christi fide, patriæque suæ defensione paratissimi, in campum contra Barbaros processerunt; et videns validissimus comes suum exercitum nimis imminutum, statuit iterum fratrem Tolium cum suis quingentis viris, eò quòd fortissimi fuerant, in dextro cornu, assignans ei alam etiam fortissimam, illustrem militem Morcardum de Brunne, cum omnibus qui ejus vexillum sequebantur, inclitum verò vice-dominum Lincolnæ, Osgotum, cum suis quingentis, in cornu sinistro posuit, donans ei alam strenuam, scilicet militem Hardingun de Reihalle, cum omnibus Stanfordsiensibus, eò quòd omnes juvenes erant, et nimium bellicosi; ipseque cum suis senescallis in acie media versabatur, utriq; cornu, cum necesse fuerit, affuturus. Dani verò pro cæde suorum exeunt magis efferati, summo mane sepelientes tres reges suos in villa, quæ antea Laundon vocabatur; nunc vero pro trium regum Danorum sepultura, Trekingham nuncupatur, scilicet iv. reges et octo comites, nam ij. reges et iv. comites castra sua, et captivos suos conservabant. Porro Christiani, pro paucitate sua in unum cuneum conglobati, contra sagittariorum impetum durissimam testudinem clipcorum, et contra violentiam equitum densissimam aciem lancearum, omnes optimè instructi à ducibus suis tota die statione immobili prætendebant. Cùmq; sic invicti usque ad vesperam perdurassent, et adversariorum sagittarii tela sua in vacuum perdidissent, equitesque jam longo labore lassati deficere inciperent, barbari ex condicto fugam fingentes, campum relinquere ceperunt; quod videntes Christiani, ducibus suis invitatis ac multum dissuadentibus, aciem suam dissolvunt, et persequendo paganos dispersi per planiciem, sine ordine ducumque custodia dividuntur: revertentes autem barbari tanquam leones in paucas oviculas pro libito debaccantur, strenuissimus comes Algarus, præclarissimique milites prædicti, et frater Tolius, in quodam campi cumulo cætera planicie aliquantulum altiore in orbem conserti, barbaros arietantes diutissimè sustinebant. Cumque præfatus comes illustrissimus et imperpetuum nominandus Algarus, præactique duces robustissimi, omnes robustos sui exercitus cecidisse cernerent, in confertissimum cumulum corporum Christianorum simul irrupentes, ibique pro viribus quicumque accessisset suum sanguinem vindicantes, tandem innumeris confossi vulneribus, super fratrum suorum cadavera corruerunt, pauci juvenes de Sutton, et de Gedney, projectis armis, in vicinam silvam vix evadentes, proxima nocte sequenti, Croyland ingressi, stragem Christianorum, et fratris Toli, totiusque cohortis suæ internecionem, dum abbas Theodorus, et conventus suus suas vigilias matutinas persolverent, lugubri ac lachrimabili ejulatu, ad ostium ecclesiæ nunciabant cunctis. Itaque de nuncio confusus abbas, retentis secum senioribus monachis, et paucis infantibus, si forsitan illorum imbecillitas ad pietatem barbaros inclinaret, non recolens illud poeticum, omnes fortiores, et adolescentiores, assumptis secum sa-

cris reliquiis monasterii, aliis etiam jocalibus, cartis et munimentis, &c. Barbari tandem indignati, quod speratos thesauros non invenissent, universa sanctorum corpora de tumulis effractis miserabiliter contracta, immisso igne die tertio, more suo, cum ecclesia et omnibus monasterii officinis, et edificiis, vij. kal. Octobris, funestissimi combusscrunt quarto die. Tandem cum animalium et jumentorum innumeris gregibus versus Medeshamstede transmigrabant, ubi patriam collectam infra monasterium portasque obseratas offendentes, sagittariis ac machinis undique muros aggrediuntur, secundo assulto paganis irrumpentibus, Lubba, frater Hubbæ comitis, jactu lapidis graviter lesus corruit in ipso introitu, et manibus satellitum suorum portatus in tentorium fratris sui, etiam de vita desperatus est; unde Hubba supra modum ira estuans, et maximè in monachos efferatus, omnes sanctæ religionis scemate vestitos, manu sua interfecit, cæteri in cæteros grassabantur, nemo de toto monasterio salvatus est, tam venerabilis pater abbas Hedda senex valde, quàm monachi sui universi, cum omnibus.

Monitus est tunc frater Turgarus per Sidrok comitem dominum suum, ne in aliquo loco unquam Hubbæ comiti obviaret, altaria omnia suffossa, monumenta universa confracta, sanctorum librorum ingens biblioteca combusta, cartarum monasticarum immensa copia discepta, sanctarum virginum Kyneburgæ, Kyneswythæ, ac Tilbæ, preciosa pignora pedibus conculcata, muri funditus eversi, ipsa ecclesia cum omnibus cæteris edificiis concremata, per totam quindenam sequentem jugi incendio conflagravit. Porro iii. die, cum prædictis innumeris de tota patria congestis, exercitus congregatus versus Huntingdoniam procedebat. Cùmq; duo comites, Sidrok senior et junior, in transitu fluviorum ad tutandum caudam totius exercitus semper ultimi proficiscerentur, totusque exercitus eorum fluvium de Neene salvus pertransisset, ipsi tandem transeuntes in gurgite fluvii, ad levam pontis lapidei profundissimi, duos currus immensis opibus, et vario suppellectili onustos, cum omnibus jumentis demersis, et antequam extrahi poterant enecatis, subito infortunio perdidit. Occupata itaque tota familia junioris Sidrok ad extrahendum dictos currus, ut in alia plaustra et vehicula prædictas contentas plures solliciti transmutarent, frater Turgarus per fugam elapsus in proxima parietina perque totam noctem ambulans, summo diluculo Croyland ingressus est, invenit ergo fratres suos commonachos de Ankarig pridè redisse, et ad extinguendum ignes adhuc in multis monasterii locis durantes fortissimè insudare; quem, cum sanum et incolumem cernerent, aliquantulum confortati, sed audientes ab eodem quibus in locis, tam abbas eorum, quàm cæteri confratres et seniores eorum occisi jacebant, et quomodo omnia sanctorum sepulchra, et fundamenta, sacraque volumina, cum corporibus sanctorum, confracta fuerant et combusta, inestimabili dolore omnes contristati sunt, planctusque et ploratus diutissimè factus est. Tandem lachrimis satiati ad extinguendum incendia revertuntur...egentes verò ruinam tecti ecclesiæ suæ, circa magnum altare corpus venerabilis patris Theodori abbatis reperierunt, erudatoque monasterio toto cum longo maximoque labore, et de cineribus aliisq; immunditiis juxta possibilitatem temporis expurgato, de inter eos pastore eligendo invicem colloquuntur, celebrataque electione venerabilis pater Godricus, omnium consensu, licet invitatus et multum renitens, abbas tandem est effectus; ad quem veniens venerabilis senex Prior de Ankarig Toretus, ac ejus subprior dominus Tisa, ambo anachoritæ sanctissimi, devotissimè supplicabant, quatinus, assumptis secum fratribus, quibus dignaretur Medeshamstede adire, et abbatis sui, et aliorum confratrum suorum corpora, feris, avibusque adhuc obnoxia et insepulta Christianæ sepulturæ charitatis intuitu commendare: obtemperans itaque precibus illorum venerabilis abbas Godricus, cum multis fratribus, inter quos frater Turgarus aderat, occurrentibus eis ibidem omnibus fratribus de Ankarig, Medeshamsted adiit, et multo sudore omnia monachorum dicti monasterii corpora compta, numero LXXXIII. in medio cimiterio dicti monasterii, contra frontem ecclesiæ quondam orientalem, scilicet in uno latissimo tumulo ad hoc aptato, in festo sanctæ Cecilie virginis sepelivit, ponens etiam super corpus abbatis in medio filiorum suorum quiescentis, petram pyramidalem tres pedes in altitudine, et tres in longitudine, et unum in latitudine continentem, insculptasque imagines abbatis ac monachorum suorum circumstantium gestantem, quam in memoriam monasterii destructi Medeshamsted deinceps vocari omnes consenserunt, et omni anno, quamdiu vixit, dictus abbas Godricus semel locum visitans, superque petram suum tentorium figens, pro animabus ibidem sepulcorum, missas per bidduum devotione continua celebravit. Jacebat in regia via per medium dicti cimiterii habens dictam petram ascendentibus de prædicto ponte lapideo versùs Hoyland ad dextram, et crucem lapideam similiter imagine salvatoris insculptam, quam prædictus abbas Godricus tunc ibidem posuit ad sinistram, ut transeuntes viatores memores sanctissimi monasterii, pro animabus fidelium, in ipso cimiterio quiescentium preces domino solverent, et à maleficiis, ac latrociniiis in sancti monasterii parietinis nullo modo patrandis, saltem pro Christi reverentia continerent. Tunc etiam dominus Toretus, prior de Ankarig, per fratrem Turgarum edoctus, quomodo et in quo angulo ecclesie sanctissima pignora beatarum virginum Kyneburgæ &c. per paganos projecta et conculcata, sed per prædictum fratrem Turgarum prout potuit reverenter recollecta fuerant, et imposita, de communi via, prædictas reliquias secum assumpsit, et cum fratribus suis ad Ankarig rediens, honorificentius quam potuit, in suo oratorio collocavit. Pagani verò de Medeshamstede exeuntes ac deprædantes provincias usque ad Cantabrigiam, monasterium sanctimonialium celeberrimum in Eliensi insula situatum, omnibus inventis in eo, tam virginibus quam viris crudeliter interemptis, catallis, ac immensis divitiis, de tota patria, pro loci securitate allatis sed per barbaros tunc direptis, ignibus ultimò tradiderunt, et transeuntes in East Angliam, &c. regem ejusdem provincie sanctissimum Edmundum, captum per eosdem, ad quendam stipitem alligatum, tanquam signum ad sagittam, telis suis et sagittis aggressi, horrida crudelitate, pro fide Christi et patriæ suæ defensione decollantes martyrizaverunt. Sic tota East-Anglia ab eis optenta et occupata ibidem per totam biennem residebat, &c.

Anno DCCCCLXX. S. Adelwoldus episcopus Wintoniæ, transtulit de cimiterio in ecclesiam reliquias S. Swithuni prædecessoris sui, ac ante altare S. Petri honorificè collocavit. Monasterium etiam de Medeshamstede restaurare cepit, et Burgum sancti Petri appellavit, anno desolationis suæ equaliter centesimo.

Historia de fundatione hujus cænobii, elegantissimè in fenestris vitreatis, ex occidentali parte claustris ibidem depicta fuit, cum Anglicanis hisce carminibus argumentum ejusdem illustrantibus.

KING Penda a Paynim, as writing sayth,
Got these five children of Christen fayth.

Kyneburga and Keniswitha, as I reade,
Peada, Wlfer, and Ethelred.

The noble king Peada, by God's grace,
Was the first founder of this place.

By Queene Ermenild had king Wlfere
These twae sonnes that yee see here.

Wlfade went forth, as he was wont,
In the Forest, the Hart to hunt.

Fro all his men Wlfade is gon,
And suyeth, himselfe, the hart alone.

The harte brought Wlfade to a well
That was besides St. Chad's cell.

Wlfade asked of St. Chad,
Where is the harte that me hath lad :

Wlfade prayeth Chad, that gostly leach,
The faith of Christ him for to teach.

St. Chad teacheth Wlfade the fayth,
And words of baptisme over him sayth,

St. Chad devoutly to messe him dight,
And shrived Wlfade Christ his knight.

Wlfade stayed with St. Chad that day,
And bad him for his brothor Rufine pray.

Wlfade told his brother Rufine,
How he was christned by Chad's doctrine.

Rufine said to Wlfade againe,
Christned also would I bee fayne.

Wlfade Rufine to St. Chad brought,
And Chad with love of Christ him taught.

Rufine is christned of St. Chad, I wis,
And Wlfade, his brother, his fader is.

Werbode, Steward to king Wlfere, Told his sonnes both christned were.

To Chad's cell Wlfere gan go,
And Werbode brought him hitherto.

Into the chappell entred the king,
And found his sonnes Christ worshipinge.

Wlfere, in woodnesse, his sword out drew,
And both his sonnes anon he slew.

King Wlfere with Werbode tho
Buried in grave his sonnes two.

Werbode for vengeance his owne flesh tare,
The Divell him strangled, and to hell bare.

Wlfere for sorrow was sick,
In bed he lay a dead man like.

Saint Ermenild, that blessed Queene,
Councelled Wlfere to shrive him cleane.

Wlfere contrite shrift him to Chad,
As Ermenild his wife him councill'd had.

Chad bad Wlfere, for his sinne, Abbies to found this rewme within.

Wlfere in haste performed then
To build what Peada his brother began.

The abbot Saxulfe, with his monkes there,
Did worship to king Wlfere.

Wlfere indued, with great devotion,
The abby of Burgh with great possession.

The third brother, king Etheldred,
Confirmed both his brothers deed.

Saxulfe, that here first abbot was,
For ancoris at Thorney made a place.

After came Danes and Burgh brent,
And slew the monkes er they went.

Fourescore yeares and sixteene
Stood Burgh destroyed by Danes téene.

Then Athelwold, the bishop of Wilton,
Was micle vext in contemplation.

To build some cloister was his intent ;
Yet where, or how, had no revelement.

An angell appeared to him, by God's lore,
And bad him this place to restore.

St. Athelwold to king Edgar went,
And prayed him to help his intent.

Edgar bod Athelwold that work begin,
And him to help he would not linne.

Thus Edgar and Athelwold restored this place,
God save it, and keepe it for his grace.

NUM. II.

Carta Wulferi regis.

UULFERE Dei beneficio rex Merciorum et Mediteraneorum Anglorum australiumque regnorum præsentibus et posteris omnibus Christum sanctamque ejus ecclesiam colentibus perpetuam salutem. Benedicat anima mea dominum Jesum salvatorem meum, et coram omnibus viventibus confitear ei cum fratribus et sororibus meis populisque meis novo nuper baptisinate iniciatis, quia sol justicie ortus est nobis, qui nos de tenebris idolatriæ transtulit in admirabile lumen suæ agnitionis. Qui non solùm reos paternis erroribus absolvit, et advenas et pupillos suscepit, sed etiam in filios adoptionis credentes elegit. Cumque æterna regna omnium regnorum distributor suis fidelibus repromisit, etiam in hac brevi via qua ad æternitatem transitur nos regnare facit. Quid ergo retribuam domino pro omnibus quæ retribuit mihi? Cum sine ipso nichil habeamus, nichil valeamus, nichil scimus, magna etiam aviditate salutis nostræ omnium largitor accipit parva et infima nostra, quatinus causam habeat retribuendi maxima sua, quodque dederimus sanctis suis, quodque dilectæ ecclesiæ suæ, hoc sibi datum et acceptum ipse testabitur in fine, mercedem quoque justi justi susceptorem promittit accepturum esse. Quia propter illum divinæ fidei et ecclesiarum principem, regnique Dei clavigerum, per quem admittar in paradysum domini specialiùs reconciliari michi gestio per privilegium domus suæ quæ in Medeshamstede studio venerabilis abbatis Saxulfi gloriosè est condita, et divina monachorum familia bene disposita. Cui quicquid antecessor germanus meus Peada vel Osuinus Christiana fide confrater et conregnator concesserunt, non solùm mea auctoritate cupio stabilire, verùm etiam de meo aliqua addere. Ego itaque faventibus fratribus meis Athelredo ac Merwala, cum beatissimis sororibus meis Kyneburga et Kyneswida, quarum prior regina mutavit imperium in Christi ancillatum præsidens monasterio Kyneburgensi, quod suo nomine decoratur, mater sacrarum virginum, altera illibata virginitate in divinum flagrat thalamum. Hiis inquam consentientibus trado beato Petro ad præfatum Medeshamstede monasterium hæc stagna et paludes et lacus et piscaturas, cum terris videlicet et omnibus infra jacentibus, quæ de meo regali jure, vel principum meorum mutuacione et assensu, amodò inperpetuum liberè famulentur Deo famulantibus. Quæ ita hîc determinari volumus. Ab ipso Medeshamstede ad Nortburc, et inde usque ad locum quem vocant Folies, et inde totam paludem in directum usque ad Esendic, et de Esendic ad locum quem Fethermuthe dicunt, et deinde in directum ad locum via decem leugiarum quem Cuggedic circa habitantes nominant, et deinde ad Raggewill, et de Raggewill quinque miliariis ad magistram aquam quæ ducit ad Elm et ad Wyseberch, atque inde sicut itur tribus leugiis contra cursum magistræ aquæ usque ad Throkenholt, et de Trokenholt in directum per immensam paludem ad Dereforde longitudine viginti leugiarum, et inde ad Gratescros per unam pulcram aquam Bardanea nomine sex leugiis ad Paccelade, sic et in medium partitis stagnis plurimis et immensis paludibus cum habitatoribus Huntedunensis provinciæ, unà cum stagnis et lacis Scalfremere et Witlesmere, et aliis quamplurimis ad hæc pertinentibus, cum terris quoque et mansionibus quæ adjacent in australi parte Scalfremere, et cum infrasepta undique palude usque ad Medeshamstede et sic de Medeshamstede usque ad Walmisford, et de Walmesford usque ad Clive, et inde ad Estune, et de Estune ad Stanford, et de Stanford sicut aqua decurrit ad supradictam Northburch. Hiis ergo terminis omnia sint juris ejusdem apostolici monasterii. Hæc, inquam, omnia licet parva ita concedo sicut ego regaliter tenui, vel ab aliis effeci libera, quatinus ab omni servitute absoluta, in proprias tantùm expensas liberrima possideat ecclesia tanquam regina non tanquam famula. Hæc nobis beato Petro principante principalis in sua regione et specialiùs Romana sit ecclesia: hic quæramus ipsum patronum qui Romæ non possumus. Non decet, immo non expedit nobis ut hæc serviat quæ fide ipsius Petri Christo regaliter desponsata est. Reges gentium, ait dominus Petro, à quibus accipiunt tributa à filiis, an ab alienis? ab alienis, inquit Petrus. Ergo liberi sunt filii, dicit dominus. Ergo et à nobis sit libera hæc regina mater cum filiis suis ministris Dei nostri, ut dimissis hiis quæ regis erant, tota libertate quæ sunt Dei Deo reddant. Alia quoque monasteria quæ Dei famuli Saxulfi instancia assurgunt, cum aliis ecclesiis finitimis quæ deinceps generantur, hujus primævæ matris visceribus fovenda et educanda pignora commendamus, quatinus Christiana religio nostris primùm temporibus nostrum regnum ingressa ubique propagetur, confirmetur, perpetuetur, hanc oblationem nostram beatissime pater Deusdedit apostolica manu tua obsecro perhenniter corroborari, qui successor legationis fidei beati Gregorii et propagator evangelii pacis prothodocoris nostri Augustini, sextus ab ipso beato Augustino apostolicus vicarius præsidens ecclesiæ Dorovernensi. Tu quoque mi frater Athelrede, et vos sorores piissimæ Kyneburga et Kyneswida, pro mutua animarum nostrarum redemptione huic testamento nostro testes optimi ut præmiis condigniores subscribite.

Precor etiam omnes successores meos, sive filii, sive fratres, sive externi reges successerint, ut hoc nostrum partum ita servant inviolatum sicuti volunt recipere recititudinis præmium et evadere rapacitatis supplicium. Inter has donationes et sanctiones venerabilis pater monasterii Saxulfus, habens monachos anachoriticæ conversationis amatores, suggessit michi cum nonnullis fratribus velle se quidem Dei nutu et nostro assensu monasterium in ipsa subjacente heremo cum heremiticis cellulis in honore Dei genetricis construere in loco qui jam nomen accepit Ancharig, quatinus ibi vel cœnobitæ pro anachoritis vel anachoritæ pro cœnobitis divina pace possint conversari. Quibus tum ego: quod semel inquam vobis perpetuam etiamsi ad alios vestros usus converteretis non habuissem contradicere, quanto magis cum id proposueritis in ædificationem ecclesiæ et in augmentationem religionis divinæ. Immò ego faveo et laudo ut perficiatur eo loci hæc bona et laudabilis voluntas vestra juxta vestram ditionem in domino. Quicumque ergo hæc quæ nostra vel cæterorum fidelium donatione beato Petro consecrata sunt auferre vel diminuere presumpserit, ipse janitor cœli diminuatur ejus partem in retributione beata: ejus verò qui hæc largiùs auxerit augeat gaudia sempiterna. Hujus confirmationis isti testes subscribuntur. Ego Ulfero rex cum sociis regibus et patribus ac ducibus hoc testamentum donationis meæ præsentem apostolico patre nostro Deusdedit confirmavi. Ego Oswius rex Northanhumborum, amicus abbatis Saxulfi, immò ecclesiæ Dei debitus adjutor, laudavi. Ego Sighere rex, voluntariè, immò Christianæ fidei recenti perceptione regi Wlfero subjectus consensi. Ego Siwius rex, simili gratia devotionis ac nova industria baptismatis eundem Wlfero habens prælatum subscripsi. Ego Athelredus, frater regis cum eodem consensi. Ego Kyneburga, soror regis amplector. Ego quoque soror regis Kyneswida favi. Ego Dorovernensis ecclesiæ pontifex Deusdedit annui. Ego Ithamor Rofensis episcopus corroboravi. Ego Wina Londoniensis episcopus subnotavi. Ego Jerumannus Merciorum episcopus approbavi. Ego Tuda episcopus aspiravi. Ego Wilfridus presbyter famulus ecclesiarum et bajulus evangelii Dei in gentes affectavi. Ego Eoppa presbyter missus à rege Wlfero legatione Dei convertendis gentibus in Wyiht benedixi. Ego abbas Saxulfus specie dicti monasterii gratificè conclamavi. Signum in nomine principis. S. Eadberhti principis. S. Yithberhti principis. S. Abonis principis. S. Athelboldi ministri. S. Brordani ministri. S. Walberti ministri. S. Alhmundi ministri. S. Fethegysi ministri. Hiis et ceteris optimatibus ac ministris regis hæc collaudata sunt. Sancitum est hoc privilegium anno domini DCLXIII. Wlferi regis VII. Deusdedit IX. Quod nullius insana et puniunda cupiditas violet.

NUM. III.

Privilegium Agathonis Papæ.

GLORIOSISSIMO filio regi Merciorum Ethelredo, fratribus quoque et coepiscopis Theodoro Dorobernensi, et Saxulfo mediterraneorum Anglorum vel Merciorum episcopo, ceterisque consacerdotibus, Agatho servus servorum Dei in domino salutem. Dominus regnavit, exultet terra, lætentur insulæ multæ, reges terræ et omnes populi et cætera omnia laudent nomen domini, quia exaltatum est nomen ejus solius. Gratia domini nostri Jesu Christi, regis omnium seculorum, feliciter cotidie adimpletur hæc prophetica exhilaratio, quando reges et gentes orbis terrarum et præcipuè juxta divinum oraculum reges insularum multarum adorant et colunt ipsum Jesum Christum unicum dominum et regem suum: unde etiam sanctum nomen ejus specialiùs benedicimus quod vos, præcellentissime fili, cum vestris piæ memoriæ fratribus, non solùm dampnosa sculptilia dæmoniorum cum paternis erroribus exterminantes, verum salvatorem agnovistis et veræ divinitatis effecti estis cultores, verum etiam ad vertendos subjectos vobis reges et populos fidei balteo, ut boni ministri Christi, vos accinxistis. Cumque in ecclesiis et baptisteriis extruendis, quibus populus acquisitionis Dei multiplicetur, devotè laboretis, hanc caritatis vestræ flagrantiam familiaris amplectimur, quod de ecclesia beati Petri quam adeo primitivam abbatiam censetis in regione vestri imperii, quæ est mediterraneorum Anglorum, in loco qui appellatur Medeshamstede præclaram tam benevola vota nobis regia scilicet legatione mandaveritis. Hanc quippe (ut perhibetis) antecessores vestri et fratres Christianissimi per venerabilem virum nuper abbatem nunc consacerdotem Saxulfum regaliter condidère, et amore beati Petri præcipuè coluère, hanc regia largitate necnon et libertate regia cum privilegii descriptionibus gloriosius extulere, hanc et vos clarissimi filii non minori fervore regalis industriæ vultis Romana et apostolica auctoritate contra omnes impetus procellosi mundi perpetuò muniri, immò et jam quantum est in vobis prompta vestri benevolentia Romanam et apostolicam eam facere, ubi beatum Petrum, nobis quidem corpore, vobis verò spiritu semper præsentem possideatis, ubi et à vobis et à toto regno vestro ac si Romæ requiratur et piis veneretur votis fidelium. Apparet nimirum vos esse intimum filium hujus quæ totius orbis mater est principalis ecclesiarum, et ipsum ejus præsidium affectare patronum qui clavigeri potestate vobis aperiat regna cælorum. Quapropter non solum voluntariè, sed et maxime gratias agentes annuimus piæ vestræ petitioni, quatinus prædicta ecclesia in Medeshamstede, sicut regia, auctoritate regia, ita apostolica confirmatione sit apostolica, sit ab omni servitute seculari libera, ita videlicet ut quemadmodum vos dictastis, nec rex, nec episcopus, nec præses aliquis abbati ipsius post electionem ecclesiæ et regis assensum quicquam terreni oneris injungat, non census, non tributum, non milicia, non aliqua unquam servitutis occasio de omnibus rebus ad ipsam ecclesiam pertinentibus vel in magno vel in minimo ab ullo exigatur, quatinus sub rege suo defensore non tyranno liberè Christo soli deserviat. Episcopus quoque dioceseos non typo prælationis sed officio caritatis huic se impendat, abbatemque ipsius, ac si Romanum legatum et comministrum evangelii habeat, et secundum sibi socium æstimet non subjectum. Nullum verò potentatum in hoc monasterium præripiat, nec ordinationem ibi nec quodlibet officium sine abbatis favore arroget, sed neque ab ipsius intimis et peculiaribus locis aut parochiis vel in omni privilegio ipsius, juris quicquam præter ejusdem abbatis assensum accipiat vel faciat, ne qua scilicet abusione pacem perturbet gregis dominici, quales scandalizare est cum mola asinaria in profundo dimergi. Ubi autem electus ab ipsa congregatione abbas ordinandus erit, ab archiepiscopo Dorobernensi, Romani pontificis vicario, aut à quo ipse modò inefficacior jusserit rege favente ordinetur, nec parochianus pontifex, sive ipse sive aliquis alius prædicta dumtaxat auctoritate ordinaverit, quicquam in eum præter fraternitatis obsequium præripiat. Hanc autem ecclesiam cæteris imperii vestri monasteriis quæ modò assurgunt, vel deinceps in omnem posteritatem nascentur, tanquam religionis primicias excipimus, quatinus Apostolica gratia sui que Petri vestræque promotionis prærogativa præstet cæteris à Tamense fluvio in aquilonem, sicut et orta perhibetur mater primaria: abbas quoque ejus aliquis arctoæ plagæ prior habeatur et in omnibus conventibus anterior sedeat, ita dumtaxat ut ad sacræ fidei, religionis, caritatis, et concordie compaginem, loco primo-geniti et vice Romana affectuosè præluceat, confratribus non imparet, sed et in aula regia et regalibus consiliis sicut et monasterii præstantia laudamus, ut primus vel inter primos adhæreat, et exemplo Saxulfi omnes successores opportunè seu importunè regem frequentent, religiosa conversatione à terrenis revocent, ad cœlestia erigant, ad pictatem, ad justitiam, ad Dei cultum hortatu crebro accendant. Hanc quoque, ad vestrum votum, non solum voluntariè, verum etiam necessariè concedimus benedictionem huic apostolicæ ecclesiæ, quatinus tam vos quam cæteri populi vestri imperii totius quoque Britannia, sed et proximorum regnorum nationes, quicumque, vel viæ longinquitate vel varia necessitudine præpediti, Romæ beatum Petrum in urbe sua revisere non sufficitis, hinc eum spiritu vobis cohabitantem plena fide requiratis, hinc vota persolvatis, hinc absolutionem peccatorum et apostolicam benedictionem per ipsum ligandi ac solvendi principem fideliter speretis et justa desideria cum precibus exaudiri, ac cœli januam vobis aperiri credatis. Hæc igitur, &c. quæcumque sunt tam à vobis quam à fratribus et antecessoribus vestris huic monasterio in æternam libertatem hæreditatemque perpetuam donata, ac privilegiorum sanctionibus perhenniter commendata, quæcumque etiam in posterum aut à vobis aut à successoribus vestris vel à quibuslibet personis usque in finem jure tradentur, omnia scilicet secundum vestram postulationem apostolica beati Petri auctoritate confirmamus, et ita hæc observanda ab omnibus regibus et principibus Britannia contestamur, sicut ipsum cœli janitorem timent offendere. Siquis autem hæc in aliquo, quod absit, violare præsumperit, cujuscumque potestatis aut ordinis sit, excommunicatorio ipsius sancti Petri gladio nisi emendaverit excidatur. Qui verò custodierit, quique res ecclesiæ amplificare maluerit, ipsius clavigeri gratiâ suscipiatur, et sicut infernus raptoribus, ita defensoribus ejus paradus aperiatur. Huic ergo definitioni regia dignitas vestra, ut vestram majestatem decet, indelebiter subscribat. Tua quoque devotio, reverentissime frater Theodore, quem tam Græcis quam Romanis institutionibus atque eruditionibus præstantissimum, in lucem totius Britannia, beatæ memoriæ Vitalianus prædecessor meus destinavit, hanc quæso regiam et apostolicam sæpèdictæ ecclesiæ libertatem vobiscum corroborare, et omnem perversorum injuriam divina animadversione recidere satagat; sed et cætera aquilonalia à Tamense monasteria hoc sibi cum abbate suo paterna auctoritate præstare unanimi corpore foveant. Similiter et tua caritas frater Saxulfe, sicut et obnixè petisti hanc confirmationem perseverabiliter cum coepiscopis et amicis subscribi, ut videlicet, nec tu, nec quisquam successorum episcoporum quicquam hujus ecclesiæ usurpet præter abbatis præsentis voluntatem, ne qua contentionis oriatur occasio. Sic vos omnes cum vestro rege filio nostro karissimo in pace custodiat Dei gratia.

Hoc privilegium à sancto papa Agathone, assentiente concilio centum xxv. episcoporum per reverentissimum episcopum Wilfridum destinatum, ego Athelredus Dei dono rex, anno domini dclxxx. meique regni vj. suscipiens, approbante etiam domino archiepiscopo Theodoro, cum concilio celebrato in campo Estfeld, tam grante regali subscriptione confirmo, quam ipse desideriosus in hoc exactor extiti, ut scilicet dilectum nobis monasterium beati Petri in Medeshamstede, per industriam spiritualis patris nostri Saxulfi alienigena carnis genitore præeunte, benignissimæ memoriæ fratres mei Peada regaliter instituit Wilferus regali opulentia et privilegio principaliter nobilitavit, ego quoque tam pro meæ animæ quam ipsorum fratrum salute, necnon et pro sacratissimis sororibus meis, beatissimæ scilicet memoriæ Kyneburga, et quæ adhuc superstes sacrata Christo virginitate deservit Kyneswida, et rebus augere et divina auctoritate munire curavi. Proinde trado beato Petro in hoc loco Medeshamstede has terras et possessiones cum omnibus rebus, ad eas pertinentibus, hoc est, Bredune, Hrepinges, Cedevac, Swineshafed, Heanbyrig, Lodeshale, Scuffanhalch, Costesford, Stratford, Watelleburne, Lusgard, Aethelhuniglond, Bardunig. Hæc, inquam, beato Petro regaliter habita regaliter concedo, habenda in perpetuam hæreditatem atque liberrimam ecclesiæ proprietatem, obsecrans per ipsum apostolorum principem et per apostolicam sententiam præsumptam, ne quis unquam succedentium, tam de hiis quam de omnibus rebus ad ipsam ecclesiam appendentibus quicquam detrahat: quod si quis fecerit, omnibus episcopis dampnantibus et hiis præsentialiter subscribentibus apostolico gladio animadvertatur.

Ego Theodorus, Romana legatione in hos fines terræ destinatus, et licet indignus, vice beatæ memoriæ Augustini, Dorobernensi cathedra intronizatus, juxta apostolicum papæ Agathonis mandatum, privilegium monasterii

Ego quoque omnem violentiæ abusionem anathemate hinc excludo.

Ego Wilfridus, apostolico favore repetens sedem Eboracensem, testis et relator hujus sanctionis votivæ assentior.

Ego Ostrich, regina Athelredi regis, prompto animo hiis annuo.

Ego Adrianus, apostolicus legatus et comes et suffraganeus reverentissimo Theodoro, hæc approbo.

Ego Johannes, Romanus legatus conlaudo.

Ego Putta, Rofensis episcopus ultrò subscribo.

Ego Waldhere, Lundeniensis episcopus confirmo.

Ego abbas Cuthbaldus ejusdem monasterii Medeshamstede, successor venerabilis Saxulfi speciali amore amplector, ut quisquis hæc servaverit valeat, quisquis prævaricatus fuerit, quod absit, omnium episcoporum ac sacerdotum excommunicatione dispereat. Amen.

Iccirco ego Offa, ipso piissimo præordinante Deo, rex Merciorum, rogatus a venerabili abbati meo nomine Pusa, simul et a præfecto meo vocabulo Brorda, ut aliquam liberalitatem ejus ecclesiæ quæ sita est in loco ubi dicitur Woccingas concederem, quod et libenter facere juxta eorum petitionem providi, et pro expiatione piaculorum meorum domino devote largitus sum, et ut memoria nominis mei apud eandem ecclesiam pro domino perpetualiter perseveret. Hæc est ergo præfata munificentia quam in posteros protelatam decrevi. xx. tantum manentium in loco in quo illud Monasterium situm est, ut absque impedimento sæcularium negotiorum ac regalium tributorum, sive expeditionum aut jussionum incognitarum, soli domino serviens sancta congregatio, juris sui ac dominationis potestate propria non privetur. Si quis vero hanc prædictam liberalitatem extraneorum, sive regum sive judicum, vel etiam principum in modico seu in magno irritam ducere aut infringere temptaverit, sciat se in magno judicii die districtam ac tremebundam coram Christo atque Angelis ejus subire sententiam. Carta Berhtwulfi Regis de libertate Breodunensis Monasterii.

IN nomine et almi agye sophie.^a Qui monarchiam mundi tocius ac celsitudinem cælorum abditamque profunditatem turgentis oceani in altis et in imis, omnia cum suo majestatis imperio. Qui in primordio mundi creavit, et nunc in ævum gubernat et regit, summus pater, omnipotens deus. Status hujus mundi in velocitate deficiet, et rotunda sæculorum volubilitas facesset, sic alternando creaturarum qualitas decrescit, sic mu-tando mortalis vitæ fragilitas fatescit. De qua miserrima humani status vicissitudine ecclesiastes cælesti afflatus spiritu competentem protulit sententiam. 'Generatio inquit venit et generatio vadit.' Alii nascuntur et alii moriuntur. Ita universa divitiarum facultas et temporales^b gazæ possessio quod præcessorum anxia sollicitudo per indefesso^c laborum emolumenta lucratur, prohdolor, incertis hæredibus, interdum optatis, interdum exosis relinquitur. Quemadmodum Psalmista in providam humani generis socordiam conquerens increpitet. The-saurizat, et ignorat, cui congregat ea. Ideo sunt omnes nostras serie et sermocinationis litterarum apicibus confirmandos^d ne unquam ullo oblivione tradantur, sed perpetua memoria servantur, quicquid reges ac præcedentes patres firmiter constituerunt. Qua de re ego Berhtwulfus divino fultus suffragia^e Rex Merciorum, cum consensu et consilio principum ac magistratum^f Mercianorum gentis donans, donabo venerabili abbati Æanmundo et ejus familiæ sanctæ congregationis Breodunensis monasterii istam libertatis gratiam illius monasterii æt Breodune mihi et omnibus Mærcis tam pro deo quam pro sæculo in eleemosinam sempiternam. Id est ut sit liberatum et absolutum illud monasterium ab illis causis quas cum feornre et eafor vocitemus; tam a pastu ancipitrorum meorum omnium quam etiam venatorum omnium, vel a pastu equorum meorum omnium, sive ministrorum eorum. Quid plura, ab omni illa incommoditate æfres et cum feorme, nisi istis causis quas hic nominamus. Præcones si trans mare venirent ad regem venturi, vel nuncii de gente occidentalium Saxonum, vel de gente Northanhymbrorum, si venirent ad horam tertiam diei, vel ad medium diem, dabatur illis prandium; si venirent supra nonam horam, tunc dabatur eis noctis pastum, et iterum de mane pergant in viam suam. Ob hujus ergo rei gratiam, ipse vero supradictus Eanmund abbas, ac illius supranominata familia æt Breodune, ad commerciam hujus libertatis, cum testimonio optimatum gentis Merciorum dederunt Berhtuulfo regi Merciorum clxxx. mancupas^g in auro puro, et terram xv. manentium, in duabus locis, æt Stanlege, et æt Bellanforde. Vt ista libertatis gratia cum Dei testimonia,^h et omnium Sanctorum in cælo, et eorum hominum in terra qui Dei præcepta custodiunt, et tremendum diem judicii metuunt, et honorem sanctæ crucis Christi colunt, ac illorum baptismatis donam firmiter perenniterque firmata, nullo hominum interdicente, sed Deo favente ac angelis ejus stabilis permaneat tamdiu fides Christiana ac baptismum Christi apud Anglorum gentem in Britannia maneat. Insuper etiam Humberht princeps optinebam a domino meo Berhtuulfo regi Merciorum cum consensu optimatum illo abbati Eanmundo et familiæ illius supradicto on Breodune hanc libertatis gratiam pro eorum venerali pecunio quod mihi impendebant in uno vasoⁱ preciosa potatoria, quod fuit de nobile genere pulchraliter factum, et ex parte cum auro ornatum. Hoc est ut sit illud monasterium on Breodune liberatum et absolutum ab omnibus causis, magnis vel modicis, notis ac ignotis, quæ mihi aut principibus Tonsetorum unquam ante ea pertinebant ex illo monasterio, tamdiu voluerit Deus ut baptismi gratia et recta fides cum regibus ac principibus Christianis in populo fidei firmiter fideliterque permaneat in ævum. Et ut memoria Regis Beorhtuulfi, ac Humberhti principis, et omnium optimatum gentis Merciorum, in eorum sacris orationibus, diebus ac noctibus, memoretur, et nullus homo alicujus personis, rex aut princeps, magnis sive modicis, in aliquo tempore, diabolica tempestate fretus, per tyrannicam phylargiriam vel gastrimargiam hanc nostram statutionem fringere^k præsumat, sed semper stabilis et indiscussa hæc donatio conservetur inperpetuum, et ut merita ac clemosinas nostras^l ante Deum florescant, ac nomina nostra coram throno Domini scribentur in libro viventium, Amen. Carta Regis Edgari de libertatibus Ecclesiæ Burgi et aliis rebus.

GRATIA domini nostri Jesu Christi, omnium sæculorum omnia suo nutu distribuentis regna terrarum et moderantis habenas rerum. Ego Eadgar sub ipso sidereo rege præsidens regno magnæ Britanniæ sæpe petitionem venerabilis et Deo dilecti pontificis Adeluoldi super stabilitate ecclesiarum quarum ipse est infatigabilis constructor accepi, maximè autem super antiqui monasterii restitutione ac libertate quod primitus Medeshamstede, modò Dei adiutorio ac sua ac nostra instancia restauratum, Burch appellatur, quod scilicet quadam prærogativa gratiæ sancti Petri ac pristinæ nobilitatis eminentiùs diligit. Recolens enim illud à pristinis regibus Wlfero, necnon Athelredo aliisque successoribus magnificè ditatum, et regalibus privilegiis fortissimè stabilitum, sed ab externo paganorum exercitu destitutum, hic Dei sapiens architectus magno zelo domus Dei studuit reparare, et acquisitis ac redemptis undique possessionibus rerum cum nostra regali donatione prout potuit amplificare. Ego itaque, pro gratia Sancti Petri, tantique patris caritate, ac animæ meæ redemptione, concedo gratantissimè illud sanctum et apostolicum cœnobium inperpetuum esse liberum ab omni seculari causa et servitute, ut nullus ecclesiasticorum vel laicorum super ipsum vel super ipsius abbatem ullum unquam habeat dominium. Sed ipso abbate cum subjecta Christi familia in pace Dei et superni janitoris Petri patrocinio illud regente, ac rege in omnibus necessitatibus adjuvante, ab omni mundiali jugo tam securum æternaliter persistat, quam liberum, sed etiam ab episcopali exactione et inquietudine, ex apostolica libertate et reverentissimi Archiepiscopi nostri Dunstani auctoritate, cum suis appendiciis, id est, Dodesthorp et Ege et Pastune perpetuò maneat absolutum. Villam quoque Undale cum toto jure adjacentium, quod Eahtahundred Anglicè nominatur, et cum mercato ac theloneo ea prorsus libertate donamus, quatinus nec rex, nec comes, nec episcopus, præter Christianitatem attinentium parochiarum, nec vicecomes, nec ulla umquam major minorve persona ulla dominatione occupare, nec de ipsa villa Undale, ubi legitimè consedere debet, in alium locum transferre ulla tenus præsumat. Sed tantùm abbas prædicti cœnobij illud cum suis causis et legibus totum in sua potestate liberrimè teneat, et quando vel in quo loco sibi placuerit sine ulla contradictione sedere faciat. Item terras nostro adiutorio vel dono vel optimatum mcorum per præfatum episcopum eidem monasterio adjectas, quæ hic ex parte titulantur, id est, Barue, Wermington, Asctun, Kyteringas, Castre, Eilsworth, Waltun, Witheringtun, Ege, Thorp, et unum monetarium in Stanford, in perpetuam libertatem concedimus. Sint ergo tam istæ villæ quàm ceteræ omnes quæ ad ipsum monasterium pertinent, cum universis rebus et rationibus suis, et totum quod appellatur Saca et Socne, ab omni regali jure et ab omni seculari jugo in æternum liberæ, et in magnis et in minimis, in silvis, campis, pascuis, pratis, paludibus, venationibus, omnimodis mercationibus, theloneis, omnium reruum procurationibus Dei beneficio provenientibus. Concedimus etiam quartam partem stagni quod dicitur Witlesmere, per episcopum Adeluoldum acquisitam, cum omnibus scilicet aquis, piscariis, stagnis et paludibus attinentibus usque ad hos terminos circumjacentes, quorum septentrionalis est ubi primùm intratur Merelade de amne Nen, orientalis ad Kingesdelf, australis ad Aldwinesbarue, qui locus est in palude contra medietatem viæ Umberlade, occidentalis ubi aqua deopbece finitur ad terram; quæ omnia antiquitus ad illud sacrosanctum monasterium multo latiùs et longiùs pertinuisse probantur. Mercatum quoque constituimus in Burch singulare, ut nullum aliud habeatur inter Stanfordiam et Hunte-dune, et ad illud damus ibidemque persolvi jubemus totum sine ulla contradictione theloneum, hoc est, primò de tota Witlesmere usque ad theloneum regis quod jacet ad hundred de Normannescros, et de Witlesmere sicut Merelade venit ad aquam Nen, et inde sicut aqua currit ad Welmesforde, et de Welmesforde usque ad Stanforde, et de Stanforde iuxta cursum aquæ usque ad Crulande, et de Crulande usque ad Must, et de Must usque ad Kingesdelf, et deinde usque prædictum Witlesmere. Propter varia quippe lucra, et corporalium et spiritualium utilitatum, hoc mercatum decernimus illic celebrari et undique illud requiri, quatinus et Dei ministri inde adjuventur propinquius, et à concurrente populo inter terrena necessaria cœlestia petantur subsidia, dummodo per sancti Petri quæsita patrocinia; et per missarum audita misteria, secundum fidem cujuslibet ibi possint redimi diversarum offensionum debita. Porro, decedente abbate, de eadem congregatione fratres successorem idoneum eligant, et regis favore ordinetur.

Hanc igitur totius abbatiæ tam in longinquis quam proximis possessionibus regificam libertatem ab omnibus approbatam, excepta modo rata expeditione et pontis arcisve restauratione, satagimus per ipsum devotissimum hujus descriptionis auctorem Athelwoldum à sede apostolica Romanæ ecclesiæ, juxta primitivam ejusdem monasterii institutionem, perpetuò corroborare. Quam quicumque in aliquo violare præsumperit, ipsius summi præsidis Petri, et Romanæ ierarchiæ, omniumque sacerorum ordinum animadversione in infernum æternum damnatur. Qui verò provexerit et defensaverit, in sorte electorum Dei remuneretur. Sancitum est hoc privilegium anno dominicæ incarnationis nongentesimo septuagesimo secundo, meiq; imperii terreni anno sextodecimo. Quod hujusmodi probabilibus testibus tum sanctæ crucis indicio subnotatur juxta meam subscriptionem. Ego Eadgar, totius Albionis basileus, hoc privilegium cum signo sanctæ crucis confirmavi. Carta Edwardi Regis de Fiskerton.

OPORTET nos quos Deus præfecit temporaliter Rectores populo suo, ad omnes facere justitiam. Maxime autem ad Matrem nostræ salutis Ecclesiam, per quam Christiani facti perveniamus ad æternam Dei misericordiam, qui iudicabit Reges terræ, et secundum opera sua reddet unicuique. Quapropter ego Edwardus Rex Anglorum pro villa Fiskertuna data in Burgh Sancto Petro jubeo fieri nostræ Confirmationis Testamentum contra omnium scilicet calumniam iniquorum. Hanc quippe Villam cum Leofriva fœmina Lundonica haberet omnino propriam et liberam Beato Petro in prædictum locum, per obitum suum donavit eam sicut fidei testimonio nobis probatum est, perpetuo possidendam eâ scilicet plena libertate qua ipsa possidebat. Hæc obiit in via Hierosolymæ. Quod ubi Leofricus Abbas de Burgh cognovit, ad nos causam suam retulit, et per idoneos testes justum comprobavit, nostrumque assensum inde postulavit. At Regina mea Edryd cum terram vendicasset, dicendo quod hanc sibi eadem fœmina decrevisset, idem Abbas per me et Principes meos, Reginae fratres Haroldum et Tostinum, ipsius potentiam flexit, datisque ei in gratiam xx. marcis auri et ornamentis Ecclesiæ quæ ad alia xx. marca appreciantur, terram Monasterio suo liberrimam et integerrimam restituit. Hanc igitur donationem Ego Rex Eduardus cum ipsa Regina ita annuo, concedo, et confirmo quatenus tota illa possessio Fiscartuna in æternum sit perpetua et dominica ipsius Sancti Petri in Burgh ad usus sibi servientium, atque ita maneat libera in terris, aquis, silvis, pratis, pascuis, cunctisque rebus et justitiis pertinentibus, cum saca et socna, ut nullus inde quicquam repetat præter arcis vel expeditionis subsidium. Hanc ergo contestor omnes posteros meos Reges et Judices, per Dominum omnium iudicem, justitiæ amatorem, et totius injustitiæ vindicem, nequis unquam audeat quicquam tam ex his quam de omni jure Sancti Petri detrahere aut diminuere, quia revera sicut illi consequuntur æternam vitam qui Ecclesiam Dei amplificant, ita illis manent sempiterna tormenta qui eam in aliquo spoliant. Qui autem hæc violaverit, omnium Sacerdotum et Ministrorum Dei ore Anathema sit. Anno ab Incarnatione Domini millesimo lxx. confirmatum est hoc Testamentum. CUM universorum Dominus et Judex dicit iudicate pupillo defendite viduam, quanto magis nos oportet iudicare Ecclesiæ suæ et in omnibus ejus causas et judicia adjuvare, et ipsi testes adesse, sine qua nec Christiani esse, nec ad Dominum possumus pertinere. Inter varias etiam rerum mutationes necessaria sunt litterarum testimonia, quæ fideliter confirmant et representant præterita. Quapropter ego tocius Albionis rex Eduardus rogatus a venerabili Leofrico Abbate de Burch de quadam commodatione et conventionem terrarum quæ coram me facta est, annui ut hujusmodi carta fieret in testimonium et possessionem æternam Ecclesiæ suæ. Igitur monachus Brand tres terras suas quas sub abbate Leofrico in propriam hæreditatem monasterii sui acquisierat fratri suo Askytelo per Conventionem interim commendaverat, unam Scottun quam de sua proprietate emerat, alteram Scotere quam ei frater suus Siric donaverat, terciam Malmestun quam ei pater suus viva voce concesserat. Conventio autem talis fuit, ut pro duabus prioribus pecuniam singulis annis quamdiu teneret persolveret, pro Malmestun vero aliam terram nomine Thorp post obitum fratris, simul et suas recipere deberet. Hanc Conventionem, sicut coram me et optimatibus meis approbata est, ita Cartæ testimonio tam præsentibus quam posteris iussum demonstrari, ea videlicet animadversione ut nulla occasio mali ingenii post hæc interveniat, quo sancta Ecclesia quicquid ad se vel ad suos pertinet, quod absit, perdat; sed nunc prædictas terras secundum prædictam conventionem integre recipiat, et inperpetuum ea libertate qua dominicas et liberrimas terras tenet, Dei nutu et

IN nomine almæ trinitatis et individuae unitatis Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, quibus est una essentia, par deitas et indivisa majestas, communis apex, trinitas in nomine, unitas in deitate, æternus ante omnia sæcula. In fine sæculi homo factus ex virgine ut nos redimeret quos creavit. Ideoque necesse est ut in istis transitoriis ac fugitivis opibus adquiramus nobis in cœlis manentem substantiam, quam nec oculus vidit, nec auris audivit, nec mens percipere potuit humana, cujus prædestinatione iccirco ego Ædmundus Ætheling rex pro amore redemptoris nostri, et propter nomen sanctum qui dixit 'date et datibur vobis.' Ideoque nunc donabo Deo omnipotenti exiguum munus ruriculæ in loco qui ab incolis vocitatur æt Pegecyrcan in perpetua hereditate, ad locum quod dicitur novum Monasterium sanctæ Trinitatis ac genetricis domini nostri atque omnium sanctorum, pro redemptione animæ meæ et conjugii meæ, et pro anima Siuerthi, id est unam mansam et dimidiam in supradicta uilla, et tres perticas in uilla quæ dicitur Wealtun. Ita habeant sicut Siuerthus habebat in vita, in longitudine et in latitudine, in magnis et in modicis rebus, campis, pascuis, pratis, silvis, theloneum aquarum, piscationem in paludibus. Sit autem prædictum rus liberum ab omni servili tributo, seculariumque servitiumque exinanitum, tribus exceptis, rata videlicet expeditione et pontis arcive restauratione. Præcipioque in nomine sancti Salvatoris tam nobis viventibus quam etiam qui christianitatis nomine et divinæ agnitionis fide censentur, ut hujus libertatis statuta ad irrita deducere quispiam minime præsumat. Quisquis autem benevola mente hanc nostram donationem et elemosinam amplificare satagerit, in hoc præsentis seculo vitæ illius prospera feliciter augeantur, et eternæ vitæ gaudia æterna succedant. Si quis igitur diabolica illectus pravitate, et hoc donum in aliud quam quod constituimus pervertere molitus fuerit, maneat æternaliter retrusus inter flamivomas estuantis gehennæ incorruptiones lugubre sibi solium vendicans inter tres nefandissimos proditores Christi, Judam, Annam, et Caiaphan, et in Satanæ faucibus maneat deglutendus, omnium infernalium morsibus carnificum sine fine lace-retur, nisi hic digna satisfactione emendare curaverit, quod contra nostrum decretum inique commisit.

Ex parte tua fili abbas fuit propositum coram nobis quod nonnulli monasterii tui, monachi, pro violenta manuum injectione in se ipsos, in canonem inciderunt sententiæ promulgatæ; quidam autem pro detentione proprii super quo correxerunt, se postmodum excommunicationis sententiam incurserunt; aliqui autem symoniacum habuerunt ingressum in monasterio memorato; et quidam ipsorum, tanquam simplices et juris ignari, non obtento absolutionis beneficio ad sacros promoti sunt ordines, et celebraverunt postmodum in eisdem. De ipsorum itaque salute sollicitus postulasti ut cum eos venire ad sedem apostolicam oporteret, et verendum asseras ne veniendo de facili vagarentur, et salutis cujus causa venirent incurrerent detrimentum, misericorditer super hoc agere dignaremur. De prædictis autem muragio et tolneto si a prædictis hominibus præfati abbatis de cætero, quod absit, contra formam prædictam, aliquid exigatur, eis credatur si affidaverint, vel affidare parati fuerint cum effectu, se esse homines prædicti abbatis mercandisam non facientes de rebus quibus petitur tolnetum, ad tunc quieti recedant. Whitby Abbey, Yorkshire, 1814.

YORKSHIRE.

HITBY Monastery, called also STREONESHALH,^a SINUS PHARI,^b and PRESTEBY,^c is situated in the Deanery and Archdeaconry of Cleveland, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. Oswy king of Northumberland having given an allotment of territory in this place to HILDA abbess of Heruteu, in consequence of a vow, she founded here, about A.D. 657, a monastery for men and women; in which Aelfleda the daughter of Oswy became a nun.^d Charlton, in his History of Whitby, speaks of the abbey constructed by Hilda as if the ruins of the present structure had furnished its description and dimensions.^e Our older writers, however, have left us

no details whatever respecting the first building: but that it was large may be gathered from the circumstance of a Council being assembled here in 664, to determine the controversy respecting Easter.^f

Among the monks who were admitted into Streoneshall monastery, one of the most eminent was Cædmon, to whom, as Bede informs us, the most sublime strains of poetry were so natural that he dreamed in verse, and composed the most admirable poems in his sleep; which he repeated as soon as he awoke. A part of one of those poems is preserved in King Alfred's Saxon version of Bede's History, and is much admired by those who are most capable of forming a right judgement of its merit.^g Bosa, Aetla, Oftsor, John, and Wilfrid, five prelates of singular merit and sanctity, were also bred at Streoneshall.^h

Hilda died, according to the Saxon Chronicle, in the year 680;ⁱ in the sixty-sixth year of her age; and was succeeded as abbess here by

"Streoneshalc quod Hwiteby appellatus;" Sim. Dunelm. ap. Twysd. Script. x. col. 45. Streneshalde; Jo. Brompt. ibid. col. 790. Somner gives us the following etymology of its name. "Stræneþ-healh. Stræneþ-halch. Stræneþ-heale. Sinus fari: the bay of a watch-tower. Sic Beda, cujus autoritas magna quidem apud me, alioquin dicturum: Littoris angulus, cornu, vel anfractus: a rpeonð vel rþand, littus, et heal, angulus: vel healc, al. hylc, anfractus, inflexio, flexura, cornu, curvamen, curvatura, a hooking, nooking, crooking, turning, winding, or bowing. Ibi enim littus est mire flexuosum, et pluribus excavatur sinibus, quorum unus hoc in loco (de quo vide Camden. in Brigantibus) WHITBY, al. White-bay vulgo dictus." Dict. Saxon. in voce.

^b Or rather such is the explanation of Streoneshalh given by Bede, Hist. Eccl. lib. iii. c. 25. "In monasterio quod dicitur Strenaeshalch, quod interpretatur SINUS FARI."

^c The Register of Whitby, quoted Num. II. notices PRESTEBI as a kind of intermediate name in point of time, "in loco qui olim Streoneshale vocabatur, deinde Prestebi appellabatur, nunc vero Witebi vocabatur." Prestebi occurs in Domesday Book, tom. i. col. 305 a. It signified the habitation of Religious: from Ppeort a priest and Bi or By a dwelling. Charlton, mentioning a Charter of King William Rufus, A.D. 1088, says, "after the destruction of Streanshall by the Danes, some few huts or cottages were in process of time erected on its ruins, which, from the neighbourhood of the abbey where the priests or monks had formerly resided, got the name or appellation of Presteby: and by this name it several times occurs in our records, though never any more after the date of this charter." Hist. of Whitby, p. 58.

^d Compare Bede, Hist. Eccl. lib. iii. c. 24, from whose work the particulars related, Num. I. were probably obtained. Bede has a whole chapter in another part of his work, lib. iv. c. 23, on the History of Hilda.

^f Henry, in his History of Great Britain, edit. 8vo. Lond. 1805, vol. iii. p. 203, says, "It appears that the English in the kingdoms of Kent and Wessex were converted to and instructed in the Christian religion by missionaries from Rome and France; while those of Mercia and Northumberland received the light of the Gospel from preachers of the Scotch nation. All these different teachers established the rites and usages of the churches from whence they came in those which they planted; which gave rise to many controversies between the English churches in the south and those in the north about their respective customs, particularly about the time of keeping Easter, and the form of the ecclesiastical tonsure. The churches planted by the Roman missionaries kept Easter on the first Sunday after the fourteenth and before the twenty-second day of the first moon after the vernal equinox; and those planted by the Scotch kept that festival on the first Sunday after the thirteenth and before the twenty-first day of the same moon. By this means, when the fourteenth day of that moon happened to be a Sunday, those of the Scotch communion celebrated the feast of Easter on that day; whereas those of the Romish communion did not celebrate theirs till the Sunday after. The Roman clergy in the south of England, animated with the haughty intolerant spirit of the church from whence they came, were not contented with enjoying their own customs in peace, but laboured with much violence to impose them upon the Britons, Scots, and northern English, who were all abundantly tenacious of their own usages. At length a famous council was summoned by Oswi king of Northumberland at Whitby in Yorkshire, A.D. 664, to determine this mighty controversy; which occasioned no little confusion in his own family, his queen and son following the Roman ritual, while he observed the Scotch. The principal champions on the Romish side at this council were, Agelbert bishop of the West Saxons, with Agatho, James, Romanus, and Wilfred, priests; while Colman bishop of Lindisfarne, with some of his clergy, managed the argument on the other side. The Scotch orators maintained, that their manner of celebrating Easter was prescribed by St. John the beloved disciple; and the Romanists affirmed, with equal confidence, that theirs was instituted by St. Peter, the prince of the apostles, and the door-keeper of heaven. Oswi was struck with this last circumstance; and both parties acknowledging that Peter kept the keys of heaven, the king declared that he was determined not to disoblige this celestial porter upon any account, but to observe all his institutions to the utmost of his power, for fear he should turn his back upon him when he came to the gate of heaven. This sagacious declaration was applauded by the whole assembly, and the Roman orators obtained a complete victory; at which Bishop Colman, and many of his clergy, were so much offended, that they left England, and returned to their native country."

ⁱ Chron. Sax. edit. Gibs. p. 45. See also Asserii Annales, Gale, tom. iii. p. 146. She was the daughter of Hereric, nephew, or, as some say, grandson, of Edwin king of the Northumbrians; and was baptized by Paulinus, together with that prince, when she was but fourteen years old. Having passed a year at Chelles in France, where her sister Heresuit was abbess, she returned to Northumberland, became abbess of a small nunnery upon the river Were, and afterwards of the more numerous monastery of Hereuteu, now Hartlepool in the bishoprick of Durham. Hence she was removed to Streoneshall. Bede has a long relation how a nun at Hakenes, thirteen miles from Whitby, on the strand, saw her death in a vision.

Camden, speaking of Whitby, says, "Here are found stones resembling snakes rolled up, the sports of nature, which she, as one observes, amuses herself with creating when weary of producing realities and serious productions. You would think they had once been snakes, covered over with a crust of stone. Report ascribes them to the prayers of Hilda, as if changed by her, who in the early Saxon church opposed with all her might the tonsure of priests and the celebration of Easter according to the Roman ritual."—"To her sanctity," he adds, "they

ELFLEDA, or AELFLEDA, the daughter of Oswy.^a Of the administration of the monastery under this lady little is preserved: but Bede informs us that she died in the year 714, at the age of sixty; and was buried, as Edwin, Oswy, her mother Enfleda, and Hilda, had been before her, at Streoneshall.^b

Burton says, the monastery continued in an increasing and flourishing condition during the presidency of St. Hilda and her successors, till about the year 867, when the Danes landed in the Dunus Sinus of Ptolemy, now Dunesley-Bay, in the parish, though two miles to the west of Whitby, under the conduct of Hinguar and Hubba, who, after plundering the place, destroyed it. The community was, of course, dispersed: TITUS the abbat fled with the relics of Hilda to Glastonbury: and the buildings of the monastery lay in ruins for more than two hundred years.^c

After the Norman conquest, Whitby, and a large tract of land in its neighbourhood, which had belonged in the Saxon times to Siward earl of Northumberland, was bestowed on Hugh de Abrincis, surnamed Lupus, the first earl of Chester; who granted it to William de Perci, ancestor of the earls of Northumberland.^d

Charlton states the monastery of Whitby to have been refounded by William de Percy in the year 1074:^e although this is probably too early a date, as no mention either of the church or its possessions occurs in the Domesday Survey, which was not completed till twelve years afterwards.

Certain however it is that the monastery was refounded in the reign of the Conqueror,^f and that the monks placed in it, under the government of

REINFRID, or RENFRID, the first Prior, were brought from the Benedictine abbey of Evesham in Worcestershire. A grant occurs among the Charters of the monastery from Hugh earl of Chester, in which the name of Reinfrid is mentioned.^g

Sir William Dugdale, in his account of the foundation of St. Mary's Abbey at York, quotes a Bodleian manuscript, in which

STEPHEN, who became a monk of Whitby in 1078, is stated to have succeeded Reinfrid in the rule of the monastery:^h but being oppressed by William de Perci, the lord of the fee, he is represented to have retired to Lestingeham.ⁱ

Charlton, however, tells us that Reinfrid continued to live beloved and respected at Whitby till the year 1083 or 1084, when, meeting an accidental death, he was succeeded as Prior of Whitby by

also ascribe it that the wild geese, which in winter resort in flocks to the pools and rivers in the south parts where the frost has not reached, in their passage over certain fields hereabouts suddenly drop down to the astonishment of all, which I should not have mentioned had I not heard it from many credible persons. Such as have not a superstitious credulity will ascribe this to some hidden quality of the soil, and some secret antipathy those geese have to it." *Camd. Brit. edit. ^d See Num. I. Dugdale gives the following account of the origin of the Percies in his Baronage, "This ancient and right noble family do derive their descent from Mainfred de Perei. Which Mainfred came out of Denmark into Normandy, before the adventure of the famous Rollo thither; and had issue Geoffrey, who accompanied Rollo into those parts. From which Geoffrey sprung successively these four generations, viz. William, Geoffrey, William, and Geoffrey, all born in Normandy; and from the last Geoffrey two sons, William and Serlo, who came into England with William the Conqueror. Which William de Percy being much beloved by that king, and one of his barons, enjoyed, through his bounty, vast possessions in this realm: for it appears by the General Survey, that he then had Amblethorpe in Hantsire, as also thirty-two lordships in Lincolnshire, and in Yorkshire eighty-six, whereof Topelive in the North Riding was one, and Spofford in the West Riding another, which became their chief seats, in those parts, for divers ages afterwards." Baron. of Engl. vol. i. p. 269. At the time of the formation of the Domesday Survey, William de Perci was an under-tenant only of Earl Hugh. SERLO DE PERCI, brother of William de Perci the founder.^k The Conqueror's Charter of Privileges granted to the monastery under his government is still extant.^l

Dugdale, in the account of the monastery of Hacknas, quotes the Register of Whitby Abbey for the persecution of Serlo in the reign of William Rufus: when robbers and pirates appear to have made the removal of the monks necessary.^m William de Perci's Charter of foundation will be hereafter given.ⁿ He is stated, however, to have reassumed two of his donations, the towns of Seaxby and Everley, and to have bestowed them on Ralph de Everley, one of his retainers: but Serlo making his complaint to William Rufus, restitution was effected.^o

Serlo continued to preside with great reputation as prior of Whitby, for nearly twenty years; and died, according to Charlton, about the year 1102. He was succeeded as prior by his nephew

WILLIAM DE PERCI, who had for several years lived as a canon or monk in the monastery.^p Burton dates his election in the year 1109.^q During his government Alan de Perci, son of the founder, confirmed the gifts of his father, making great additions to the lands of the monastery.^r He also granted a second Charter in which his numerous donations are more minutely specified.^s

The monastery thus increasing, Henry the First bestowed a Charter upon the monks, in which he not only confirmed their former endowments, but granted them the port or haven of Whitby, together with the wreck and all other appurtenances: he also ordained that the church should enjoy the same privileges as the churches of St. Wilfred at Ripon and St. John of Beverley.^t

In this reign also, and in the time of abbat William, the monastery was changed from a Priory to an ABBEY.^u

It was also in abbat William's time, when the second Hugh was dean of York, that an agreement was made with the prior of Bridlington, that when the fishermen of Whitby plied at Fivleia, or Filey-Bay, they should pay their fish-tithe there, and that when the fishermen of Filey plied at Whitby, they should pay the tithe of their fish to Whitby monastery.^x

William de Perci is stated by Charlton to have died in 1127,^y when, or, as Burton says, between 1130 and 1146, he was succeeded by

NICHOLAS, a monk, the intimate friend of Thurstin then archbishop of York;^z to whom a Bull of Confirmation of the Abbey possessions appears to have been ^z Burton says, Thurstin, who sat from A.D. 1109, 10 Hen. I. to 1114, confirmed to the monks the church of St. Mary of Whitby, with the chapels of Snetun and St. Stephen of Philinch, now Filing, and other chapels thereto belonging; the churches of Hackness and Hoton, with archiepiscopal rights, &c. in all of them, saving that of Whitby, which he exempted from synodals; the church of All Saints in Phischer-gate in York, and that of St. Hilda at Midelsburgh, two cells to their abbey, free from all episcopal dues and customs, with the same privileges, &c. as the churches of St. John at Beverley and St. Wilfrid of Ripon had. He also granted to them the ferrum judiciale at Fossam, with what thereto belonged.

Henry Murdoc, he adds, who sat from 1147, 12 Steph. to 1153, the 18th of the same king's reign, confirmed to them the grants of his predecessor Thurstin; and also confirmed the churches of Semara, Crossly-Ravenswath, and Ettum, with the chapel of Newton under Ohtneberg, and the church of Kirkly; reserving his archiepiscopal rights in all of them, saving as his predecessor had done.

St. William, he continues, who was restored to the archbishoprick, A.D. 1153, 18 Steph. and died the year ensuiug, confirmed the several granted by Pope Honorius the Second.^a Charlton places his death in 1139. His successor here was BENEDICT, who is noticed by Burton as occurring in the year 1144^b and 1148: a foreign ecclesiastic.

Burton, and other writers, have printed an idle legendary tale concerning the penance or tenure of keeping up the harbour fence of Whitby, by way of commutation for the murder of a hermit at Eskdale Side, A.D. 1159.^c Charlton, however, represents it as a service called Horn-garth, from the sounding of a horn used in the ceremony, which appears to be first mentioned in a Charter of this Benedict to William son of Richard de Perci of Dunsley.^d The service, it is added, is still annually kept up, on Holy Thursday, by one only of the many tenants on the original spot.^e

Under the government of abbat Benedict, Charlton also gives a translation of a Charter, in which Aschetine de Houkasgart is represented to have given his chapel at Houkesgar, or Haukesgarth, to the monastery in 1145.^f In the copy, however, of the original Charter, preserved among the Donation MSS. in the British Museum,^g R. occurs as the initial of the abbat mentioned in it: and Charlton himself informs us that Aschetine, having professed himself a monk, was one of those who composed the convent at the decease of abbat Richard, in 1175. Abbat Benedict appears to have obtained a Bull of Confirmation for his abbey from Pope Eugenius III. in 1146:^h but in 1148 we find him deposed for squandering its revenues.ⁱ He was succeeded by

RICHARD, prior of Peterborough;^k in whose time the Norwegians landed at Whitby, and plundered the place. This Richard ruled the monastery twenty-six years, seven months, and fifteen days: and dying in the kal. of January, A.D. 1175, was buried in the chapter-house of the abbey, which he had rebuilt. At the time of his death the monastery is said to have consisted of thirty-six or thirty-eight monks.^l In the second year after his decease,

RICHARD DE WATERVILLE, prior of Kirley, or as Charlton says Kircheby, a monk of the monastery of St. Nicholas at Angiers, was elected abbat: in whose time considerable privileges appear to have been granted from the convent to the burgesses of Whitby.^m In his time also King Henry the Second confirmed the privileges of the monastery. A short time before the death of Henry II. abbat Richard de Waterville died, and was succeeded by

PETER, whose name occurs in a Charter of King Richard I. in the first year of his reign. One of the earliest acts of this abbat's government, was an endeavour to set aside the Charter granted by his predecessor to the burgesses of Whitby: and in the reign of John we find him giving a hundred marks fine that the burgesses should not be permitted to make use of the liberties so granted, till it should be decided in the king's court whether the abbat and convent had the power of granting them.ⁿ The burgesses of Whitby proffered four score marks that they might have a confirmation of the liberties according to the first grant. Madox says, the abbat and convent, above grants of his predecessors, with the like reservations, exemptions, &c. together with the addition of the church of Ingelby in Cleveland, and the confirmations of the several grants and exemptions of kings William, Henry the First, and Stephen. See Burton, Monastic. Ebor. p. 70.

as it seems, prevailed.^o Abbat Peter died in 1211, when, according to Charlton, the kingdom being under an interdict, the revenues of the abbey were seized into the king's hands.^p

JOHN OF EVESHAM is stated by Charlton to have been made abbat by the Pope's legate in 1214: although his name is entirely omitted by Burton.^q He died in 1222, and was succeeded, in 1223, by

ROGER DE SCARBROUGH, who had resided many years in the cell of Middleburgh,^r and was afterwards prior here.^s Charlton gives translations of the different deeds by which benefactions were bestowed upon the monastery during the twenty-two years of his rule over the abbey. He died in the beginning of the year 1244.^t During his administration Pope Honorius the Third granted two Bulls of privileges to Whitby.^u

JOHN DE SANGRIVE, or STEYNGRAVE, sub-prior, received the king's assent to his election as abbat June 17th, 1245;^x on whose cession,^y a licence was granted for the election of a new abbat on Dec. 6th, 1258: and on the 6th of January following the royal assent was given to the choice of

WILLIAM DE BRIMSTON:^z whom Burton calls BRINISTON. Upon his death, in 1265,

ROBERT DE LANGETOFT was elected abbat, and the temporalities of the monastery restored on February the 6th that year:^a soon after which abbat Robert was summoned to Parliament.^b He died in 1278, and was succeeded by WILLIAM KIRKHAM, to whose election the king consented October the 27th, and restored the temporalities Nov. 7th following.^c He died in 1304.

THOMAS DE MALTON was elected abbat soon after the death of Kirkham.^d He was summoned to Parliament both by King Edward the First and King Edward the Second: but in 1322 he resigned his office, and became again a monk:^e when the chapter elected

THOMAS DE HAUKEGARTH, to whom the temporalities were restored on August the first.^f Abbat Haukesgarth having held the abbacy thirty years, copied the example of his predecessor, resigned his office, and became a simple monk of the convent in 1352.^g After a vacancy of near three years,

WILLIAM DE BURTON was chosen abbat, and received the royal assent to his election April 13th, 1355.^h Burton says he was elected on the 22d of March.

JOHN DE RICHEMUND was elected abbat June 13th, 1374:ⁱ upon whose death, in 1393, the chapter proceeded to the election of

PETER DE HERTILPOLE, who was chosen September the 4th. The substance of the notarial Instrument, containing a minute account of the election, is given by Charlton.^k He died August the 2d, 1394.

THOMAS DE BOLTON was elected abbat September the 16th following.^l From an inventory of the effects of the monastery, taken in 1395, the net revenues of the abbey at his accession appear to have been 654*l.* 5*s.* 2½*d.*^m Upon his death, in 1413, poralities of the monastery were restored on November the 10th that year.^a He was succeeded here May 10th, 1437, by

HUGH ELLERTON, D.D.^b during whose time the last and most ample of the royal Charters bestowed on Whitby was granted by King Henry the Sixth.^c Abbat Ellerton, or Elyrton, died in 1462: when

THOMAS PICKERING, a monk of the convent, was chosen March 16th.^d He died in 1475, and was succeeded by

WILLIAM COLSON, whose election received the royal assent on October the 11th,^e and on whose death, in 1499,

JOHN LOVEL was elected abbat, July the 23d.^f

WILLIAM DE EVISHAM was elected abbat, on the death of Lovel, Oct. 2d, 1501:^g he was succeeded in his office on Aug. 12th, 1505, by

JOHN BENESTED,^h who dying in 1514, was succeeded by

THOMAS BYDNELL, who by the chapter of Whitby was elected in his room on November the 11th that year.ⁱ Burton calls him THOMAS BEDWELL. He died in 1516, when

JOHN WHITBY, a native of the town, and who had been long resident in the monastery, was elected to succeed him.^k His government, however, was of short duration, as he paid the debt of nature the next year.^l

THOMAS YORK, presbiter of Mytton, was chosen his successor on Jan. 8th, 1517.^m During his administration a fresh account was inserted in the abbey records of the boundaries of Whitby Strand, but Charlton says they varied in nothing from the account which was taken in the time of abbat William de Percy.ⁿ He died in 1527, in which year, on April 13th,

JOHN TOPCLIFFE, alias HEXHAM,^o succeeded to the abbacy. The first name of this abbat was derived from the place of his birth, the last from his residence for many years in Hexham priory as a canon.^p In 1537, the general dissolution of religious houses being in contemplation, and the different rebellions of the north, which were much countenanced by the religious, affording a pretext, the king seized the revenues of Whitby monastery into his own hands; when, the remonstrances of the abbat in favour of his convent being unavailing, he resigned his power to the chapter from whom he had received it, and became once more a private monk.^q In a short time after this, Dec. 9th, 1538, the royal assent was given to the election of

HENRY DAVELL,^r or, as Charlton calls him, DE VALL, at that time Prior: by whom the abbey was surrendered to the king December the 14th, 1540.^s

Burton says, "On a survey taken of the revenues of religious houses in A.D. 1534, 26 Hen. VIII. those of Whitby, according to Speed, who gives the gross annual rent, amounted to 505*l.* 9*s.* 1*d.*: and, according to Dugdale, neat rent 437*l.* 2*s.*: so that there must have been paid in pensions or other out-payments 68*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* But it must be considered, that as they in general demised their lands at easy rents, the tenants, being for the most part obliged to keep their tenements in repair, and that they were liable to boon-days and other services; and gave fines on entrance upon their leases to the monks; such casualties, if estimated on an average, would have made their real annual income considerably more."^t

Burton has enumerated the different possessions of the abbey alphabetically. William de Percy, the founder, is stated to have bestowed on the monks, beside Whitby and the church, extensive lands at Balderby, Bertwaite, Bilroch, Brecca, Brachesley, Dales, Dunesley, Fieling, Flora, Gateley, Hackness, Hawkesgarth alias Grip, Heredale, Leirpol, Newham, Netherby, Normanby, Northfeld, Overby, Resebec, Risewarp, Rochemnue, Semar, Setwait and Silphon, Snetune with its church, Sourebi, Stachesbi, Staupe, Suffled, Thingal, Tornesleia, Uglebardby, and Wilton: two parts of his tithe-corn at Caprimont or Chevremont, and Colethorpe and Covenham in Lindesey: two parts of his tithes in Elkintun and Emmingham in Lindesey: half of his fishery in Ergum: a hermitage in Eskdale: two parts of his tithes in Everley: two parts of his tithes at Ludford in Lindesey: the hermitage of Mulgrif: two parts of his tithes in Naferton: two parts of his tithes at Sinerledebi in Lindesey: two parts of the tithes of Stachestune: two parts of the tithes in Stantune in Lindesey: and two parts of tithes at Uplium.

The other possessions of greater consequence were the church of Hatun in Cleveland, with the chapel of Newton under Ornebach: lands in Brineston, alias Burneston, in Richmondshire: the chapel of Carleton in Cleveland: the church of Crossley Ravenswath, with large possessions in land: the chapel of Fieling, dependant on the church of Whitby: the church of Flemesburgh, given by Hugh earl of Chester: lands in Fordun: the township of Hackness: the chapel of Hartlesey in Cleveland: Haukesgarth chapel: lands in Hilderwell, Hislham, and Hoton-Buscel with the church: the church and mill of Ingleby Grenehou: the church of Kirkby in Cleveland: lands in Merton, Milham, Oxenham, and Rothwel, or Rowal: the hermitage of Salteburne: the church and fifty acres of land at Scirpenbec: lands at Smeleswell: the church of Sutton upon Derwent, or Quenresutton: lands at Thornton, Tolleston, Thouthorp sub Gautris, Westcroft near Derwent, Wyham, and Yburne: with different dwellings and manses in the city of York.

The site of the abbey was granted, in the fourth of Edw. VI. to John earl of Warwick, who obtained, the next year, the king's licence to alienate the manors of Whitby, Layrpole, Ulathe, Stanesley-carr, and Hawkesgarth, with other demesne lands and messuages in Whitby, to John York and his heirs.

King Henry VIII. in the 37th year of his reign, granted the manor of Estdale-hall, with several messuages, lands, and closes in Whitby, and the manor of Uglebardby in the parish of Whitby, to Sir Richard Cholmley, Knt. to be held of the king in capite.

In the 1st and 2d of Philip and Mary, the queen granted licence to Sir John York to alienate the manor of Whitby-Lathes to Sir Richard Cholmley, Knt. in the possession of whose descendants the site of the abbey and its neighbourhood still remains.^u

Charlton, enlarging on the destruction of the monasteries in general, says, "Among others, Whitby Abbey, after being plundered of the wood, the timber, and lead on its roof, as also of its bells, and every thing else belonging thereto that could be sold, was left standing with its stone walls, a mere skeleton of what it had formerly been, to crumble away by degrees into dust, or to form a heap of rubbish which might barely shew passers in future ages that there Whitby formerly stood. It is true some part of this lead was laid upon the church of St. Mary, which was still permitted to be the parish church of Whitby, and which seems till then to have had only a thatched roof; but that lead was only a small part of the whole, and all the remainder was carried away and converted into money." ^a

Of Whitby abbey nothing is now left standing but the ruins of the church, placed on a high cliff on the east side of the town, about a quarter of a mile from the sea.

The CELLS, or subordinate houses to this abbey, were Hackness in Whitby Strand, Midlesburgh, the church of All Saints in Fishergate at York, and Godeland or Gotheland; beside several Hermitages.

The abbat of Whitby was one of those abbats who were considered as spiritual barons, but did not sit in Parliament.

Historia Foundationis Cœnobii.

[Flores Hist. per Math. Westm.]

ANNO gratiæ dclv. Penda rex Merciorum, jubente Cadwallino Britonum rege, innumerabili exercitu collecto, Northanhumbriam petivit. At Oswius necessitate compulsus, promisit ei donaria multa, et ornamenta regalia, ut rebus bellicis prætermisissis, amicabiliter ad propria rediret. Cumque ille precio, nec precibus acquiescere vellet, rex ad divinum confugit auxilium, ut ab impietate barbarica possent liberari, votoque sese obligans ait: 'Si paganus nescit nostra accipere donaria, offeramus ei qui novit, domino Deo nostro.' Vovit ergo quòd si victor existeret, filiam suam domino sacra virginitate dicaret, simul et xij. mansiones prædiorum ad construenda monasteria donaret. Et sic parvo stipatus agmine se certamini dedit, denique fertur paganum tricies majorem exercitum habuisse. Nam ducibus xxx. ad bellum diligenter instructis, Oswius solus, cum filio Aelfrido, Christo duce occurrens, illos fugâ vicit, et in sequendo peremit.

Cecidit, inter cæteros, Penda rex nequissimus, qui tot nobiles vita temporali privavit. Cecidit rex Aethelherus frater Annæ regis, de quo supra meminimus, author ipse belli, qui, perditis militibus, noluit solus perire. Et quia prope fluvium, qui Winwed dicitur, pugnatum est, qui tunc per inundantiam pluviarum omnes metas suas transierat, contigit ut multò plures aqua fugientes, quàm bellantes perderet ensis. Unde exivit proverbium: 'In Winwed amne vindicata est cædes Annæ, cædes regum Segeberti et Egrici, cædes Oswaldi et Eadwini.'

Tunc Rex Oswius, juxta quod domino voverat, pro collata sibi victoria gratias Deo referens, dedit filiam suam, quæ vix unius anni ætatem impleverat perpetua ei virginitate consecrandam, in monasterio quod Herteseie, id est, insula cervi nuncupatur, cui tunc Hilda præfuit abbatissa. Quæ comparata possessione decem familiarum, in loco qui Streneshalh appellatur, monasterium ibi construxit.

Et idem Willielmus de Percy, fundator dictæ abba-thiæ, genuit Alanum de Percy, et Richardum fratrem ejus, et idem Alanus confirmavit cartam patris sui, et obiit sine hærede de corpore suo, et sepultus apud Whitteby, et sic descendit hæreditas Ricardo fratri suo et hæredi ejusdem Alani, et prædictus Richardus nil dedit nec confirmavit. Et de prædicto Richardo processit Willielmus de Percy, qui quidem Willielmus de Percy filius Richardi fundavit domum de Grededall (nunc vo-catam Handall) in honore beate Mariæ virginis tempore Henrici regis Angliæ, filii Willielmi Conquestoris, anno domini MCCCXIII. per cartam suam. Et idem Williel-mus de Percy dedit illis monialibus duas toftas in campis de Dunsley super mare; unam scilicet Willielmi filii Ermoth, et alteram Aldewin, et alibi in campis de Stax-ton, scilicet in Depedale, decem acras terræ de suis do-minicis, et pasturam ducentarum ovium, sicut in campis de Grededall, et in campis de Dunsley, in perpetuam elemosinam. Et idem Willielmus de Percy, filius Ri-chardi de Percy, dedit monachis de Whitteby tres bo-vatas terræ in Dunsley, et quinque toftas, per cartam suam.

NUM. II.

De Dotatione Monasterii.

[Adhuc ex Registro de Whitby, fol. 139 b.]

NOTUM sit omnibus Deo et sanctæ Hildæ abbatissæ servientibus in loco qui olim Streoneshale vocabatur deinde Prestebi appellabatur, nunc verò Witebi vocatur; quod Willielmus de Perci, cognomento Algernuns, tem-pore Willielmi Bastard, regis Anglorum, ibi fundavit monasterium in honore sancti Petri apostoli, et sanctæ Hildæ abbatissæ, atque Reinfrido monacho de Evesham, cum sociis suis quos sibi adquisiverat, ipsum locum com-mendavit, et primò duas carucatas terræ in Prestebi illi tradidit: deinde, crescente numero monachorum, cum Serlo de Perci frater prædicti Willielmi de Perci, ibi monachus fuisset effectus, villas, terras, ecclesias, et de-cimas, eis in perpetuam elemosinam dedit, concedenti-bus et confirmantibus nobilissima Emma de Port uxore ejus, cum Alano de Perci filio eorum. Nam prædictus Reinfridus, cum esset miles strenuissimus, in obsequio domini sui Willielmi Bastard, regis Anglorum, cum per provinciam Northanymbrorum transiret, divertit ad præ-fatam locum Streoneshale: cum verò cognovisset quod sanctus ille locus à crudelissimis piratis, Ingwar, et Ubba, ducibus Alariorum et Danorum, cum præfata provincia Northanymbrorum feroci depopulatione esset devastata;

à quibus etiam rex sanctus Edmundus decollatus est, ac deinceps per ducentos et eo ampliùs annos vacabat re-ligio monachorum et sanctimonialum in eodem loco, compunctus est corde. Deinde in provincia Merciorum, apud Evesham monachus factus est, et monasticis disci-plinis benè instructus, divino instinctu, cum Aldwino Priore de Winhecumbe, et Elwino monacho regressus est in provinciam Northanymbrorum ad suscitandam monachicam religionem: venitque ad Willielmum de Perci, et ab eo honorificè susceptus est. Dedit autem illi strenuissimus prædictus Willielmus de Perci anti-quum monasterium sancti Petri apostoli, cum duabus carucatis terræ in Prestebi, in elemosinam perpetuam. Erant enim tunc temporis in eadem villa, ut antiqui patriotæ nobis retulerunt, monasteria vel oratoria penè quadraginta, tantùm parietes et altaria vacua et disco-operta remanserant, post destructionem exercitus pirata-rum. Suscepto ergo Reinfridus monasterio, ad inhabi-tandum vel regendum, cepit regulariter conversari cum sociis suis in humilitate, patientia, paupertate, et caritate, exemplum omnibus tribuens ad benè agendum, et ad Deo serviendum: ita ut infra breve tempus prudentissi-mos viros ad monachicum habitum suscipiendum socios sibi aggregaverit. Transactis igitur plurimis annorum curriculum, cumque causa monasterii sui iter ageret, venit ad Ormesbrigge, ubi artifices faciebant pontem trans Darwentam, et desiliens equo ut illos adjuvaret incautè, lignum super ipsum cecidit, et confracto cerebro, mox extremum exalavit spiritum, cujus corpusculum perduc-tum est ad Hachanos, sepultumque in cimiterio sancti Petri apostoli in medio parietis orientalis contra altare. Post obitum verò Deo dilecti Reinfridi prioris, Serlo frater Willielmi de Perci, officium ejus susceptus, in eo permansit donec dominus Willielmus, nepos eorum, ab-bas de Witebi effectus est. Denique nobilissimus Williel-mus de Perci Jerosolimam petens, apud locum qui vo-catur Mons gaudii, qui est in provincia Jerosolymitana, migravit ad dominum, ibique à suis honorificè sepultus est. Itaque omnes terras, possessiones, forestas, eccle-sias, decimas, et libertates, quas sæpe nominatus idem Willielmus de Perci, cum Alano de Perci filio suo, mo-nasterio de Witebi dederat, imprimis, nec non in ultimis temporibus suis, antequam Jerosolymam peteret, vel qui-que fideles monasterio nostro de Witebi dederunt, vel concesserunt in elemosinam perpetuam, ad monumen-tum hic breviter annotabimus. Villam et portum maris de Witebi, Overbi, et Nethrebi, id est, Stenisecher, Thingwala, Leirpel, Helredale, Gnip, id est, Hauches-gard, Normanebi, Fielingham, et aliam Fielingham, Bertwait, Setwait, Snetune, Hugelbardibi, Sourebi, Rise-warp, Newham, Stachesbi, Baldebi, Breceha, Flore, Dunesleia, heremitoria de Eschedale, et de Mulegrif, forestas quæ pertinent ad ecclesiam de Witebi, ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ ejusdem villæ, cum sex capellis, et ap-pendiciis ejus, Aggemilne, Kocchemnue, molendinum de Risewarp, novum molendinum de Fielinga, villam de Hachanesse, et duo molendina, et ecclesiam sanctæ Ma-riæ ejusdem villæ, ecclesiam sancti Petri ubi monachi nostri Deo servierunt, obierunt, et sepulti sunt, Dales, Everlai, Brochesei, Northfeld sine Danegeld, et Silf-hou, Suthfeld, et vaccharias de Stoupe, et totam Gaitelai et de Thornlei, et de Kesebec, et de Billoche, in Uplium duas partes decimæ bladi de dominio, et de Wiltune, de Semara, de Nafretune, in Lindeseia similiter de Im-mingheham, de Sumerledebi, de Stantune, de Capri-monte, de Ludford, de Eschintune, de Saletorp, de Co-venham, et Aulnebi, dimidium piscariæ de Hergum. Conventio inter Domum de Whitby et Domum Giseburna.

SCIENDUM est quod monachi et abbas de Wytebi solebant tenere totam decimam et omnes parochianas consuetudines, præter corpora mortuorum, ad ecclesiam de Midelburg quæ tunc erat capella de duodecim carucatis terræ; et canonici ecclesiæ de Giseburna tenebant ad ecclesiam suam de Stayntona sepulturas mortuorum de eisdem duodecim carucatis terræ, et calumpniabantur ad jus prædictæ ecclesiæ suæ de Stainton totam decimam et omnes parochianas consuetudines de prædictis duodecim carucatis terræ; cumque calumpniam illam sæpe moverent, prædicti canonici contra monachos de Wytebi, tandem tota contentio ejusdem calumpniæ finita est hoc modo in præsentia Roberti de Brus de cujus elemosina canonici habebant ecclesiam de Stainton, et monachi de Wytebi capellam de Midlesburg, et in præsentia Domini Willielmi prioris et Nicholai abbatis: siquidem ex utraque parte concordie dispensatione diffinitum et concessum ut canonici de Gisburn deinceps perpetua possessione habeant totam decimam et omnes parochianas consuetudines, et sepulturas, sine alicujus rei exceptione, ad opus ecclesiæ suæ de Stainton, sex carucatis de prædictis duodecim carucatis terræ; similiter quod prædicti monachi de Wytebi deinceps perpetua possessione habeant totam decimam et omnes parochianas consuetudines et sepulturas sine alicujus rei exceptione ad opus prædictæ ecclesiæ de Midelesburg vi. carucatas de prædictis carucatis terræ; et si velint prædicti monachi, prædicta capella de Midlesburg deinceps absque ulla calumpnia sit mater ecclesia, et ne in posterum ulla contentio possit fieri inter prædictos canonicos et monachos post hanc concordiam de prædictis parochiis, notum sit quod prædictis monachis nominatim remanserunt iii. carucata de feudo Johannis Ingeram in Arusum, et quinta de feudo Malet hominis Rogeri de Mubray in Leungtorp, et sexta ipsorum propria in Midelburg, prædictis vero canonicis nominatim remanserunt iii. carucata de feudo Alfred hominis Roberti de Brus in Aclum, et iii. de feudo Roberti Esturmith in Aclum, et quinta de feudo Malet quam tenebat de feudo Roberti de Brus, et sexta ipsorum propria in Arusum. Sciendum quoque quod prædicti monachi clamaverunt quietum et solutum prædictis canonicis quicquid poterant calumpniari adversus parochias illorum propter donum Hugonis Cestrensis comitis. Hanc finem et concordiam inter prædictos canonicos et monachos concessit et confirmavit ex sua parte capitulum canonicorum de Gisburn et capitulum monachorum de Witeby, et Robertus de Brus ex parte sua. Habend’ et tenend’ omnia prædicta, advocacionem ecclesiæ prædictæ, terras, et tenementa, cum pratis, pasturis, et omnibus suis perti-entiis Deo et ecclesiæ sancti Petri et sanctæ Hildæ de Whiteby, et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, in puram, liberam, et perpetuam elemosinam, libere et quiete, de me et hæredibus meis, ab omnibus serviciis secularibus et demandis. Volo etiam et concedo pro me et hæredibus meis quod illa placea terræ quæ est pars prædictarum duarum bovatarum, sicut circumcluditur per fossatum, jacens juxta prædictam villam de Ponte Belli, inter alteram stratam ex una parte et aquam de Derwent ex altera, jaceat et teneatur in separali et defenso, singulis annis et temporibus, sicut aliæ terræ seminatae et prata in eadem villa jacent et tenentur in separali et defenso sine impedimento vel contradictione mei vel hæredum meorum in futurum. Ita vero quod nec ego prædictus Thomas, nec hæredes mei, nec aliquis nomine meo vel hæredum meorum in prædictis advocacione ecclesiæ prædictæ, terris et tenementis cum pratis, pasturis, et omnibus suis pertinentiis, aliquid juris vel clamei exigere vel vindicare poterimus in futurum. In cujus rei [testimonium] sigillum meum præsentibus apposui, hiis testibus, domino Petro de Malo lacu le quint, domino Radulpho de Hastings, domino Willielmo Plaice, Roberto de Wyern, Willielmo filio Willielmi Bard de Osgoteby, Willielmo Friboys, et aliis. PAPÆ rex devota pedum oscula beatorum. Ad decorem ecclesiæ et vitæ monasticæ puritatem nostræ considerationis obtuitus dirigentes, et si cunctis Deo famulantibus in observantia regulari prodesse cupimus, et in oportunitatibus subvenire, illorum tamen restaurari deperdita et depressionis incommoda reparari intensiori desiderio præoptamus, quos non propriæ culpæ demeritum sed servientis fortunæ calamitas inopinate supposuit egestati. Cum itaque monasterium de Whiteby, ordinis sancti Benedicti, Eborum dioc. quod in loco vastato et sterili situm est, per hostiles Scotorum aggressus qui villas et oppida bonaque mobilia ejusdem monasterii feritate barbarica pluries devastarunt, necnon per communem morinam animalium, et alios insperatos eventus, ad tantam quod dolenter referimus inopiam jam pervenit, quod nisi celerius ipsius desolationi per apostolicæ liberalitatis providentiam succuratur, non solum de subtractione elemosinarum et aliorum operum caritatis quæ ibidem fieri consueverunt, sed etiam de dispersione monachorum ejusdem loci verisimiliter formidatur. Nos dilectorum nobis in Christo abbatis et conventus loci illius paupertati et angustiae pie compatientes affectu, advertentesque ipsorum depressionem, per appropriationem ecclesiæ de Semere dictæ Eborum dioc., quæ de ipsorum patronatu existit, posse in præsentiarum convenientius reparari, sanctitati vestræ devota precum instantia supplicamus, quatenus ad relevandam ipsorum supplicationem quam ut nostræ mentis desiderium plenius vestræ clementiæ innotescat, fecimus hiis includi benigne suscipere ipsamque ad exauditionis gratiam admittere dignemini gratiose speramus, etenim quod iidem religiosi qui suis viribus non possunt adicerent resurgant de fructibus ecclesiæ supradictæ qui valorem annum quater viginti marcarum sterlingorum juxta taxationem decimæ non excedunt, si eis in proprios usus apostolica liberalitate concedantur, divino fulti præsidio, a tanta egestate processu temporis se exuent et incumbentia eis onera congrue supportabunt. De Hospitale Sancti Michaelis Archangeli.

NOTUM sit omnibus Deo servientibus apud Whiteby quomodo vel qua de causa et a quibus personis Hospitale sancti Michaelis archangeli et sancti Petri et sanctæ Hildæ de Whiteby constitutum est in elemosinam perpetuam. Temporibus Deo dilecti Willielmi abbatis de Whiteby erat vir quidem nomine Orm, vir bonus et justus sed leprosus, ipse vero petiit de prædicto abbate Willielmo de Whiteby et conventu ejusdem loci ut darent illi locum manendi in loco qui nunc vocatur ad pontem Hospitalis, et septem panes in ebdomada, et impetravit ab eis quod caritative et devote petierat. Deinde assensu prædictorum abbatis et conventus etiam et sani et leprosi ibi manserunt, et Deo servierunt, et usque in hodiernum diem plurimi ibi permanent expectantes a Domino coronam æternam. Constitutum est vero a prædictis abbate et conventu nec non et a successoribus eorum tam abbatibus Nicholao videlicet et Benedicto quam conventu illius ecclesiæ quod quicumque in prædicto Hospitali sive sanus vel leprosus fuerit, et ibi defunctus fuerit, ad monasterium sancti Petri et sanctæ Hildæ de Whitby deferetur corpus ejus, et a monachis ejusdem loci pro Dei amore suscipietur, et in cimiterio ejusdem loci sepelietur. Habebit vero prædictum Hospitale magistrum monachum assignatum per abbatem de Whiteby, ita tamen quod prædictus magister vel fratres et sorores ejusdem Hospitalis nullum fratrem nec sororem recipere possint in societate domus nisi per abbatem de Whiteby, quia ipsa elemosina a principio proprie est de mensa abbatis et conventus. Ipsa vero elemosina libera et quietata est ab omni decimatione et consuetudine et exactione seculari. Capellanus vero ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ de Whiteby infra prædictum Hospitale nullam omnino consuetudinem et potestatem habebit, sed habebit illud Hospitale proprium capellanum qui curam animarum gerat apud Whiteby, et vaccariam de Billothe. Temporibus prædicti abbatis datum est ab ipso et conventu ejusdem loci unum corrodium monachale de rectorio de elemosina monachorum ad prædictum Hospitale in elemosinam perpetuam, et septem panes prædicti quos Willielmus abbas dedit prædicto Orm, post obitum ejus et deinceps usque in hodiernum diem eidem Hospitali permanserunt, et terra juxta Hospitale quod vocatur le croft Hospitalis. Hæc omnia dederunt sancto Michaeli et fratribus ejusdem loci in elemosinam perpetuam. Attamen Dominus Galfridus cognomento Mansellus monachus de Whiteby ab abbate suo Benedicto et a quibusdam monachis loci illius pro leproso habitus est, qua de causa ibi mansit multis annis, videlicet usque ad diem obitus sui, qui prædictum croft de Helredale de denso nemore et vepribus sarculari fecit, et coli, ac fossari. Quidam vero monachus de Whiteby, Robertus de Alneto nomine, erat magister prædicti Hospitalis qui petiit Dominam Gundredam uxorem Nigelli de Albini quæ dedit prædicto Hospitali et sancto Michaeli et fratribus illius loci in elemosinam perpetuam, pro anima viri sui, et pro Rogero de Moubray filio eorum, et pro seipsa, duas bovatas terræ in Honeton cum uno tofto quas monachi Rievall tenent de prædicto Hospitali reddentes ipsi Hospitali annuatim sex solidos ad Pentecostem. Concessit vero et promisit bonæ memoriæ Ailredus abbas Rievallis et conventus ejusdem loci quando receperunt prædictas duas bovatas terræ cum uno tofto tenendas eas de prædicto Hospitali, adjuvare et succurrere prædicto Hospitali annuatim et fratribus ejusdem loci in necessitatibus eorum, scilicet de veteribus vestimentis et aliis additamentis quæ dare voluerint ad festum sancti Martini in elemosinam. Temporibus Stephani regis Angliæ, et magnæ guerræ quæ erat in diebus ejus, erat quidam comes Willielmus de Albemarle nomine, vir strenuissimus et magnæ militiæ et potestatis, qui forestas propter venatum nimis diligebat, et per totam Eboracam siram a plurimis timebatur, destruxit vaccariam abbatis et monachorum de Whiteby de Kesbek, et mansiones de Corneley et eas inhabitabiles fecit propter bestias silvestres. Deinde villas aliquorum militum in ipsa provincia destruxit, et villas de West'iby, et Lenum, et Slethom inhabitabiles fecit. Erat tamen prædictus comes amator pauperum et maxime leprosum et eis largas elemosinas libenter distribuebat. Hoc autem audiens Dominus Benedictus abbas et conventus de Whitby timuerunt ne vaccaria de Billothe destrueretur. Consilio vero accepto concesserunt fratribus et leprosis illius Hospitalis ut apud Billothe haberent pecuniam suam ne a prædicto comite locus destrueretur, pepercit enim comes Willielmus illi loco propter leprosum, et deinceps usque in hodiernum diem assensu abbatum et conventus pecunia Hospitalis ibi bene et in pace permanet. Beatæ vero memoriæ Ricardus primus abbas de Whiteby inter multa bona quæ fecit Hospitali de Whitby unum corrodium monachale assensu totius conventus dedit prædicto Hospitali in elemosinam perpetuam. Deinde secundus abbas Ricardus de Whitby assensu conventus restituit corrodium peregrini in refectorio pro anniversariis abbatum et monachorum de Persore quando societas capituli inter utrumque monasterium facta est, remanente eidem Hospitali corrodio quod datum est eidem in elemosinam perpetuam. Eodem autem modo Simon abbas de Persore constituit peregrini in monasterio de Persore pro anniversariis abbatum et monachorum de Whitby. Dedit itaque bonæ memoriæ prædictus Ricardus primus abbas assensu conventus sancto Michaeli et prædicto Hospitali et fratribus ejusdem loci per Petrum Danum monachum et magistrum ejusdem loci terram de Helredale ad colendam quæ vocatur le Rig, qui locus erat spinis et vepribus et tribulis condensus et incultus, et illam terram sarculaverunt et coluerunt. Quidam etiam miles, Walterus de Rosels nomine, dedit Deo et sancto Michaeli et prædicto Hospitali et fratribus ejusdem loci in elemosinam perpetuam unum toftum cum una acra terræ in Esertona pro seipso et pro omnibus parentibus suis. Deinde Rogerus de Rosel filius ejus illam elemosinam ampliavit et carta sua confirmavit in elemosinam perpetuam.

Chertsey Monastery,

IN

SURREY.

HERTSEY Monastery was another of the mitred abbies: but its abbats, though looked upon as spiritual barons, did not sit in parliament.^a It appears to have been founded about the year 666, in the reign of Egbert king of Kent, by Frithewald viceroy or earl of Surrey under Wlfarius king of Mercia, and Erkenwald who was afterwards made bishop of London.^b

The Register of Chertsey in the Cotton library, marked Vitellius, A. xiii. contains the charter of privileges granted to the monastery by Pope Agatho and brought from Rome by Erkenwald himself. The boundaries of the abbey lands as detailed at the close of the earlier charters are extremely curious.

The Cotton Register contains a confirmation of the possessions of the abbey by Offa king of Mercia, dated at Æcleath in 787; and another from King Æthelwlf dated in 827.^c

During the Danish wars in the latter part of the ninth century, BECCA the abbat, Ethor a presbyter, and all the monks to the number of ninety, were slain, the church and monastery burnt, and the surrounding possessions laid waste.

The restoration of the monastery is said to have been effected, near a century after, by Æthelwald bishop of Winchester, who, sending to Abingdon, procured thirteen monks from that monastery and placed them at Chertsey, where one was elected abbat over the rest. These it is said began to rebuild the church, and received full and quiet possession of the abbey lands from the bishop.^d Leland, in his Collectanea, says of Chertsey abbey, "Eldredus rex primus fundator per Erkenwaldum episcopum: Edgarus per Ethelwaldum reparator."^e But

^b Reyner, from Capgrave's Life of St. Erkenwald, will have this abbey to have been founded as early as A.D. 630. The year 666, however, is the exact date fixed in the Chertsey Register. See Num. I. Bede, Hist. Eccl. lib. iv. c. 6, says of Erkenwald "Hic sane priusquam episcopus factus esset, duo preclara monasteria, unum sibi, alterum sorori suæ Aedilbergæ construxerat, quod utrumque regularibus disciplinis optime instituerat. Sibi quidem in regione Sudergeona, juxta fluvium Tamensem, in loco qui vocatur Cerotaesi, id est Ceroti insula; sorori autem in Orientali Saxonum provincia, in loco qui nuncupatur in Berecingum, in quo ipsa Deo devotarum mater ac nutrix posset existere feminarum." edit. Smith, p. 150. The time of Erkenwald's death is not certain: some placing it in 685. Stow says he died in 697. See Newcourt's Repert. Eccles. vol. i. p. 7. The charter of Frithewald and Erkenwald, however, Num. IV., is dated in 727.

The account of the destruction of the monastery by the Danes concludes, "Acta sunt hæc anno dominicæ incarnationis octingentesimo octogesimo quarto tempore Ethelredi regis filii regis Ethelwulfi." Alfred, however, was the king really reigning in 884. Manning, Hist. of Surrey, vol. iii. p. 217, places Becca as abbat in 1044, by some mistake. The remains of the monks who were slain were afterwards collected and placed in a wooden shrine.

ORDBYRHT, or ORDBRYHT, to be abbat.^f

DANIEL is mentioned by Mr. Manning as the successor of Abbat Hugh in 1149: but from the "Privilegium Certeseie quod Danieli abbati Johannis papa dedit," who must have been John the nineteenth or twentieth, we must place this abbat between 1024 and 1033.^g

WLNOTH is said by Manning to have been abbat in 1072.^h He quotes Baxter's Glossarium Antiquitat. Britann. p. 79, as his authority: but, upon referring to that work, no such name appears: and from the circumstance of

WLUVOLDE, or WULFUOLD, occurring as abbat of Chertsey not only in the English charters of Edward the Confessor, which must have been before 1066, but in those of William the Conqueror;ⁱ and from the mention of that abbat's death in the Saxon Chronicle as late as the year 1084;^k we may certainly consider Wluolde and Wlnoth as the same person.^l In Wluolde's time King Edward the Confessor appears to have bestowed upon the monastery the hundred of Goddeley,^m and also the village and church of White Waltham in Berkshire, with Halewik and Lidlege woods, and twenty acres of pasture at Cookham.ⁿ His name is also mentioned in the Conqueror's charter of liberties.^o

Odo succeeded Wluolde as abbat in 1084,^p who appears to have been superseded in 1092 by

ODO, however, was restored in 1100, on the accession of King Henry the First.^r

WILLIAM is noticed by Mr. Manning as abbat of Chertsey in 1106.^s His name occurs in two charters of King Henry the First.^t He appears to have been succeeded in 1107 by

HUGH, a monk of Winchester,^u who, in the Cotton chartulary, is subsequently mentioned as related to King

Stephen.^a Whether the abbey was again destroyed in his time, or by what means, we are not told, but in the Saxon Chronicle, under the year 1110, it is said, the new monastery of Chertsey was then begun.^b This Hugh, in 1116, was joined with Ralph archbishop of Canterbury and Herebert bishop of Norwich on a mission to the Pope, and returned in the following year.^c

DANIEL is noticed by Bishop Tanner as abbat in 1149.

AYMER is the next abbat who occurs. Mr. Manning says, "Abbat Aymer bought of Aymer Fureth, rector of Coveham, all his lay fee in Coveham, Chertsey, Egeham, and Thorpe. This deed has no date, but the witnesses are Robert de Hame, John Cappes, and others. John Cappes sold the manor of East Clendon, in 1202, to abbat Martin, who was elected in 1197, so that this must have taken place previous to that election."^d Indeed he occurs as abbat in the Liber Niger Scaccarii as early as 1175, if not earlier.^e

BERTAN is named by Mr. Manning as the successor of Aymer. He occurs in the Exchequer Leiger-Book of Chertsey as having purchased land in Cobham.^f

Of the election of abbat Martin in 1197, we have the following account in the Annales Ecclesie Wintoniensis: "Magister Martinus monachus, olim Prior de Tudford, licet non electus canonicè, abbas tamen Certesie factus est, cuicumque piguit vel cui non, vivente adhuc altero abbate. In cujus susceptione quasi infaustum aliquod accidit prognosticon. Cum enim ad processionem à conventu de more susciperetur; serviens quidam deprendens pallia statim ut ingressus est abbas ecclesiam corrui; et tam cito minister introitus sensit pœnam, quam citò ministraturus abbas abbatie suscepit honorem."^g He and the convent granted to the elemosinary, for the use of travellers and the poor, the moiety of their tithes in the lordships of Bocham, Chesham, Sutton, Colesdon, Whattingdon, and Thorpe, which their predecessors had so assigned.^h His death is noticed in the Annals of Worcester under the year 1206.ⁱ The vacancy of the abbey in 1207 occurs upon the Patent Rolls,^k although in Dr. Hutton's Excerpts no notice whatever is taken of the name of abbat Martin's successor. Mr. Manning^l gives the name of

ADAM, but whether correctly may be doubted.^m

ALAN, a monk of the monastery, received the king's assent to his election as abbat April 9th, 1223.ⁿ In 1237, in the time of this abbat, there was a dispute between the abbey of Chertsey and the prior of Newark as to tithe in Trindele and Osle in the parish of Chertsey. Mr. Manning says it was amicably settled by reference, when Newark gave up all tithe great and small in Trindele and in all other places in Wodeham, as belonging to Chertsey, de jure parochiali, the bounds being described; and Chertsey gave up all tithe great and small in the parish of Horsill.^o

JOHN DE MEDMEHAM, or MEDMENHAM, became abbat in 1261, the king consenting to his election July 18th.^p Mr. Manning says, he "granted to Ralph de Thorpe and his heirs a mesuage in Certesey, one loaf of the convent bread, two pitchers of the convent ale, one ferculum from the abbat's kitchen every day, and ten shillings for a gown for the service of keeping the abbey gate. The prudent John de Rutherwyk," he adds, (the next abbat but one to Medmenham,) "thought it advisable to buy in this grant, and accordingly, in the 18th Edward II. 1325, he obtained from Richard of the Hall of Thorpe, probably son or grandson of Ralph the grantee, a surrender of the grant; but in lieu of it he granted to Richard for his life, a chamber built without the court of the almonry, seven convent loaves called miches, and fourteen loaves called knyght loaves, twelve pitchers of convent ale, and twenty shillings for his kitchen per annum, and one robe, to be received for the term of his life."^q On the death of John de Medmeham, in 1272,

BARTHOLOMEW DE WINTON was elected abbat. The royal assent was given to the election October the 10th, and the temporalities restored October the 21st.^r

^a A Charter of King Stephen, "de libertatibus Abbatie," begins, "Stephanus, &c. Sciatis me concessisse Hugoni abbati nepoti meo abbatiam Certeseye tenendam et regendam." MS. Cotton. Vitell. A. xiii. fol. 56.

^b Chron. Sax. edit. Gibs. p. 216. an. mxc. "Hoc anno cœperunt ædificare novum monasterium in Ceortesige." Manning ascribes its destruction a second time to the Danes in 1010 or 1011; but this is a mistake. Hist. of Surr. vol. iii. p. 209.

The Cotton manuscript so often quoted, having spoken of the burial of Harold at Waltham, fol. 46 b. says, "Istis autem temporibus destructum iterum fuit monasterium Sancti Petri de Certes; res, villulæ, et omnes ejus possessiones pene ablatae sunt, ita ut vix remanserit hoc parvum quod modo habitatores prædicti monasterii possident, videlicet Certes, Thorp, Egeham, Chabelham, et Fremeleya, in hundredo de Goddeley, et ultra Waie Coveham, Ebesham, Piterichesham, Sutton, Culesdune, et terra de Horneleya, Bocham, Clendune, Esse, et Waltham."

Iste

Adam ob meritorum suorum exigentiam ad curam pastoralem monasterii de CERTESEYE postea assumptus est." This account, however, is not easily to be reconciled with the dates of entries respecting the abbats immediately subsequent upon the Patent Rolls.

The Cotton MS. Vitell. A. xiii. fol. 81 b. has the following entry respecting abbat Adam's Anniversary: "Assignavit dompnus Adam abbas per voluntatem totius conventus ad anniversarium suum faciendum totum redditum de gurgite juxta Nipenhale quem de novo construxit, et de una perprestura quam Godwinus de Lollewrth tenet, et de altera perprestura quam Robertus de Forda tenet apud Lollewurthe, et de tertia perprestura quam Ewlfus de Forda tenet apud Chabeham elemosinario de Certes' recipiendum et fideliter distribuendum, et in anniversario obitus sui die, scilicet ad opus abbatis et conventus panem, vinum, et piscem, et pauperibus panem, pro anima ejus et pro animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum."

Among the ancient customs of the abbey, about the time of Henry the Third, we read, "In Festo Nativitatis Dominicæ debet Celerarius invenire abbati et conventui una cum socio suo, scilicet Thesaurario qui pro tempore fuerit, vinum; scilicet abbati sextarium unum et cuilibet de conventu karitatem. In 1277 and 1304, abbat Bartholomew appears to have made purchases of land in Ash.^a Before 1279, Mr. Manning adds, the monks had a contest with Peter rector of Fecham, for tithes of lands of the lordship of the prior of Merton, and other lands within the bounds of that parish, formerly given to the monastery of Chertsey by Robert White. This was referred to the prior of St. Frideswide in Oxford, who determined in favour of the rector. The abbat appealed to the court of Rome, when a reference was made to the prior of Reading, who determined in favour of the abbat as to the tithe of certain lands, and as to two parts of the tithes of other lands there mentioned.^b During his administration also complaints appear to have been made to Pope Gregory the Tenth, that the possessions of the abbey were alienated to clerks and laymen, whereupon the Pope issued a bull, directed to the prior of Dorchester, ordering such grants to be revoked.^c

JOHN DE RUTHERWYK was the next abbat, of whom the Exchequer Leiger speaks in the strongest terms, styling him "religiosissimus pater, prudentissimus et utilissimus dominus:" and in another place, "venerandus Abbas quasi dicti loci secundus fundator, et omnium substantialium bonorum reformator, et maneriorum præfati monasterii substantialis reparator."^d

A very fine Leiger-Book of the transactions at Chertsey under this abbat is preserved among the Lansdowne Manuscripts in the British Museum.^e It opens with the notice of his election as abbat on the 9th of August 1307:^f and goes, year by year, minutely through the details of his administration.

In his first year, 1307, he is stated to have planted oaks and sown acorns at Herdewych in Chertsey; and to have surrounded the manor-house of Chabeham with running water.^g He also planted and enclosed a wood called Southgrove. In 1308 he procured from the king the remission of an old debt of ten pounds, and purchased the site of a mill at Hurst.^h In 1309 he obtained licence from the king to appropriate fifty pounds worth of land or rents,ⁱ and purchased the quit-claim of a hostell in London belonging to the abbey: he also purchased the profits of the church of Ewell, by which he gained sixty-two marks.^k In 1311 he bestowed different vestments on the church: "Contulit Deo et ecclesiæ sancti Petri Certes' casulam, tunicam, et dalmaticam de rubeo velveto."^l In 1312 he procured a Charter for the appropriation of the churches of Ebesham and Horlee.^m In years immediately subsequent he made various purchases of land in Horlee.ⁿ In 1317 he purchased a tene-ment in Coueham, which, with another purchase at Loderlake, he afterwards assigned for his anniversary.^o In 1318, notwithstanding the statute of mortmain, he procured the appropriation of different possessions.^p In 1323 he bought the images of St. Katharine and St. Margaret for the high altar of the church, and also a new pastoral-staff or crozier.^q In 1327 he built a new chancel to Egham church belonging to the monastery.^r In 1330 he repaired the chancel of Ebesham church.^s These, with innumerable acquisitions of a smaller kind, detailed in the manuscript, appear, in 1335, to have excited the jealousy of certain brethren of the monastery, as we learn from an entry in folio 156.^t The abbat, however, in the following year, continued his exertions. In 1341 he procured from the king a confirmation of the Abbey-Charter.^u

Abbat Rutherwyke died in 1346,^x on the 28th of January, in which year the royal assent was given to the election of

JOHN DE BENHAM as abbat, to whom the temporalities were restored on February the 15th.^y Two years after which, in 1348, he obtained a licence to appropriate the church of White Waltham in Berkshire.^z On the death of this abbat in 1361,

WILLIAM DE CLYVE was elected, to whom the temporalities were restored on December the 5th.^a

JOHN USK, or DE USKE, was elected abbat on the death of Clyve, in 1370: the royal assent being given to his election August 25th, and the temporalities of the monastery restored September the 1st.^b He enjoyed the abbacy thirty years; dying on the 7th of September 1400.^c He was succeeded by

THOMAS DE CULVERDON, to whose election the royal assent was given on the 24th of October following, though the temporalities were not restored till December the 3d.^d During this abbat's time, in 1402, the archbishop of Canterbury issued a commission to inspect the muniments of the abbey. Mr. Manning says, on what occasion does not appear. It was found, however, that the abbey had the parish churches of Certesey, Egham with the chapel of Thorpe, Chabeham, Great Bokeham, Ebesham, and Horley; pensions from the churches of Ewel, Compton, Ashe, Waibrigg, Coveham, and Bushelegh, as well as from the vicarages of Ebesham and Chabeham, from the prior of Merton, and the rectors of Chepsteade and Esher, with the perception of portions of tithes in Fecham, Coveham, and Colesdone.^e In the se-

In this same year, Philip de Barton, archdeacon of Surrey, very often mentioned in the Leiger in the Exchequer, at his death, gave 250*l.* (a large sum at that time) to the abbat and convent for founding two chantries in their conventual church, for the souls of this Philip, his father and mother, Richard his brother, his sisters, their parents and benefactors, and of all faithful persons deceased. Mr. Manning says, in the Exchequer Leiger Book, near the end, we find the title of a great work undertaken by this abbat in 1316, being an admeasurement of all the lands of the abbey and of the customary lands held of them, and an account of the rents and services due therefrom. Unfortunately the work itself is not preserved. See the Hist. of Surr. vol. iii. p. 213.

^x In this year William de Rutherwyk, one of his family, granted to the abbey all his goods and chattels, and lands, in Egham and Thorpe, three mesuages, a hundred and twenty acres of land, a moiety of ten acres of meadow, twelve acres of pasture, twenty of wood, twelve of heath, three of alder, and 12*s.* 5*d.* rent in Thorpe and Egham. JOHN DE HERMONDES WORTH succeeded to the abbacy in 1419, on the death of Culverdon; the temporalities being restored December 28th.^b He died December 30th, 1458,^c when his successor was

THOMAS ANGEWYN, whose election received the royal assent on January the 14th.^d He resigned in 1462, on complaint of great dilapidations committed by him; on which occasion the bishop issued a mandate to William Wroughton, D.D., a monk of Winchester, to inquire and determine, and proceed accordingly, when, on April 8th, the convent devolved the election on the bishop:^e after which

WILLIAM WROUGHTON was himself made abbat.^f He was deprived in 1464, when

THOMAS ANGEWYN was re-elected. The royal assent being obtained on March 8th, 1465.^g

JOHN MAY was chosen abbat in 1467:^h during whose time the body of King Henry the Sixth was temporarily interred at Chertsey. The continuator of the History of Croyland (Gale, vol. i. p. 556), speaking of the death of Henry VI. says, "Taceo, hoc temporum interstitio, inventum esse corpus Regis Henrici in turri Londoniarum exanime: parcat Deus, et spatium pœnitentiæ ei donet, quicumque tam sacrilegas manus in Christum Domini ausus est immittere. Unde et agens, tyranni; patiensque, gloriosi martyris titulum mereatur. cum luminaribus solenniter præparata barga, defertur humandum." King Henry VIII. in his nineteenth year, 1504, had the body removed to Windsor.

THOMAS PEKET, or PIGOT, was elected abbat in 1479.ⁱ He died bishop of Bangor in 1504, but, Mr. Manning says, retained the abbey, being mentioned as bishop of Bangor and abbat 18 Hen. VII. A.D. 1503.^k

... PARKER is mentioned by Mr. Manning as the next abbat, who resigned in 1529.

JOHN CORDREY, or CORDEROY, succeeded Parker. This abbat, with fourteen monks, surrendered the monastery to the king July 6th, 1538, 29 Hen. VII. when they were translated, with the possessions of their abbey, to the monastery of Bisham in Berkshire, the former convent of which had been previously dissolved, and a new foundation erected in it by the king. The favour of the king, however, was of short continuance. The new abbat and his brethren were obliged to surrender the refounded abbey of Bisham within twelve months, the same abbat Cordrey, or Corderoy, signing the act June 19th, 1539.^l

At the Dissolution, the revenues of the abbey, according to Speed, were valued at 744*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*; according to Dugdale at 659*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.*; the former giving the gross rents, the latter the nett amount.^m

After the Dissolution, the site of the abbey was granted in the 7th of Edward VI. to Sir William Fitz-Williams.ⁿ

Of this extensive monastery nothing now remains but some small fragments of walls.

A small priory of Black Monks at Cardigan was a cell to the monastery: which, as a part of Chertsey, was granted to Bisham abbey.

Of the Registers of Chertsey abbey, that in the Cottonian library, now in the British Museum, is probably the most important as well as the earliest.^o Of the Leiger-

Beside the arms already given in an initial letter, Bishop Tanner, in his Notitia Monastica, folio edition, assigns a second coat to Chertsey monastery.

NUM. I.

Incipit Prologus de fundatione Domus Certesia.

[Ex Registro Abbatiae de Certeseye in Bibl. Cottoniana, sub effigie Vitellii, A. xiii. fol. 19.]

ANNO ab incarnatione Domini dclxvj. regnante glorioso rege Anglorum Egbertho, fundata est domus Certesia à Fritheuualdo; et à venerando patre Erkenuualdo, cujus vita et conversatio legitur tam fuisse sanctissima ut in interiore homine divitias gloriae caelestis perscrutatus, caduca et secularia cuncta postponeret. Habebat autem germanam Ælthelburgam nomine, quam ita disciplinis caelestibus inflammaverat, ut ipsa virgo et vita, et moribus, et conversatione sanctissima Deo per omnia placere satageret. Renunciatis igitur seculi pompis, gloriae caelestis amore, terrenam dignitatem et ampla patrimoniam in divinam et ecclesiasticam hereditatem transtulere. Unde unico affectu amborum ipse inclitus frater, scilicet Erkenuualdus, ante pontificium suum primitivus conditor emicuit duorum illustrium coenobiorum et utrumque, suum videlicet ac sororis, divina familia et rerum copia ac regulari stabilivit disciplina: suum in regione Surreyae super flumen Thamise in loco qui dicitur Certeseya, id est, Cirotis Insula, celeberrimè adhuc suis floret plantationibus, ubi ipse pater monachorum conversatione sanctissima perluxit primus: Aethelburgæ verò in Orientalium Saxonum provincia, in loco qui appellatur Berkinga, in quo et ipsa benignissima parens sacro contubernio virginum perfulsit prima, et uterque monasterialium animarum primitias obtulerunt ad sydera.

Explicit prologus.

Barking Monastery,

ESSEX.

ARKING, or Berking Monastery, has been already noticed incidentally in the account of Chertsey.^a It was founded by Erkenwald bishop of London, for Nuns of the Order of St. Benedict; according to Reyner, who is evidently mistaken, in the year 630;^b according to the Register of Chertsey, in 666;^c according to Leland, in 675;^d and according to the founder's own Charter in 677.^e The structure appears to have been first dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and afterwards to her jointly with St. Ethelburgha or Alburgh, the first abbess, sister to Erkenwald.

Weever and Reyner say it was the first,^f and the author of Magna Britannia Nova et Antiqua^g that it was the richest nunnery in England; but both were undoubtedly in error. Folkestone nunnery in Kent was founded many years before it; and both Shaftsbury and Syon nunneries were possessed of larger revenues.^h

Whether Erkenwald's charter of foundation is authentic seems to be disputed.ⁱ The Charter of Hodilred king of the East Saxons, however, coeval with the foundation of the monastery, is unquestionably genuine. It is still extant in a volume of original Charters among the Cottonian Manuscripts in the British Museum. It is written in a large character, and ranks among the earliest records of its kind.^k Of the places mentioned in it, Widmundesfelth is supposed to have been the manor of Wyfield in Berking, and Deccanhaam to have been Dagenham, although that place is not mentioned among the possessions of the abbey in the Domesday Survey.^l

Of ETHELBURGH, or ETHELBURGHHA, the first abbess, but little is known: even the time of her death is uncertain.^m She was buried at Barking; and afterwards received the honour of canonization.

Her successor was HILDELITHA, to whom St. Aldhelm addressed his work "de Virginitate."ⁿ She had been sent for originally by Erkenwald, from France, to instruct his sister Ethelburgh in the duties of her station.^o She also obtained a place among the Romish saints. After her, Mr. Lysons, from Mr. Lethieullier's manuscript, enumerates several abbesses of the Saxon blood-royal; OSWYTH, daughter of Edifrith king of Northumberland; QUEEN ETHELBURGH, wife to Ina king of the West Saxons, who was canonized; and CUTHBERGH, sister of king Ina, who had been a nun at Berking in the time of St. Hildelitha.^p

In 870, the monastery is stated to have been burnt by the Danes; though no authority of early date is quoted for the fact.^q Mr. Lysons, on the authority of Mr. Lethieullier's manuscript, says, it lay desolate about a hundred years, being within the territories which were ceded by Alfred to Gormund the Danish king.^r King Edgar, the general restorer of monasteries, is spoken of as the refounder.

Mr. Lethieullier's manuscript notices WULFHILDA as abbess in the time of Edgar, and ÆLFGIVA in the time of Edward the Confessor.^s

The Domesday Survey states the possessions of the abbey, in 1086, to have consisted of seven hides at Westone, and two hides in the Hundred of Waletone, in Surrey; the manor of Tiburne in Middlesex; six hides at Slapetone in Buckinghamshire; and ten hides at Litinctone in Bedfordshire. In Essex, where the principal property of the abbey lay, the nuns had seven hides at Mucinga; seven hides at Bulgeven; forty acres in Fantuna; half a hide at Perenduna; thirty hides in Berchinges; eleven hides at Wicgheberga; three hides in Wareleia;^t forty acres in Stifordia; three hides and a half at Inga; a virgate and a half at Festinges; seven hides and a half, with the manor of Hocheleia; and eight hides, with the manor at Folesberia.^u

William the Conqueror is said to have retired to Barking after his coronation, till the Tower of London was built.^x

MATILDA, queen of Henry the First, is stated to have taken the government of the monastery into her own hands on the death of Alfgiva.^y Her connection with Barking is supposed to have induced her the more readily to have built the two bridges at Bow.^a The manors, and a mill called Wiggon mill, which she gave to the abbess for the repairing of the bridges and highway,^b were afterwards transferred with their burthen to the monastery of Stratford.

MAUD, wife of King Stephen, is said to have followed the example of her aunt on the death of AGNES, the abbess, in 1136; but soon resigned the government of the convent to ADELIZA the sister of Pain Fitz-John.^c Adeliza founded and endowed the hospital of Ilford as a cell to Barking.

MARY, the sister of Thomas Becket archbishop of Canterbury, became abbess in 1173.^d

An ancient list of the subsequent abbesses, in French, occurs among Anthony à Wood's Manuscripts at Oxford.^e Mr. Lysons has given the following more copious one from Mr. Lethieullier's papers.^f ^g Mr. Lysons supposes these ladies to have been the daughters of William lord Montacute, and sisters of William earl of Salisbury.

^k Newcourt, Repert. Eccles. vol. ii. p. 33, says, "In 1395, here was a chantry founded for one chaplain to say mass daily, for ever, at the tomb of St. Ethelburgh, in the Conventual Church of this abbey, for the good estate of Sibilla de Felton, then abbess, and Margaret Sayham, one of the nuns there, and also of Sir Jolin de Felton, and John Hermesthorp, and of every abbess for the time being, and of all the nuns of this monastery, and of all the benefactors to this abbey whilst living, and for the soul of the said Sibilla, and the souls of all the others when dead; and also for the souls of Sir Thomas de Felton, and Johu and Agnes Say, and of all the faithful deceased; which chantry, I suppose, was founded by the said Sibilla, or one of her family, for that she alone, without the sisters of the convent, or any of them, presented to it whilst she lived; and after her decease, the abbess alone, for the most part, did the like."

Cole, in his manuscript additions to Willis's Mitred Abbies, mentions ANNE SEGRAVE, daughter to John lord Segrave, as abbess in 1395. Sibilla de Felton, he says, presented to Slapton rectory in Buckinghamshire in 1407. MS. Cole, Brit. Mus. vol. xxi. p. 191.

MS. Wood F. xxx. from which some curious extracts will be hereafter made, appears to have been compiled by order of this abbess. "Memorandum quod anno domini millesimo quadringentesimo quarto, domina Syhilla permissione divina abhatissa de Berkyng, hunc librum ad usum abhatissarum in dicta domo in futuro existentium concessit; et in librario ejusdem loci post mortem cujusunque in perpetuum commoraturum ordinavit, donec electio inter moniales fiat. Tunc prædictus liber eidem electæ in abbatissam per superiores domus post stalationem delihcretur."

The following passage, respecting the creation of the prioress of Barking, occurs in this manuscript in English. "When a pryoresse shall bee made thabbes shall commaunde hyr the Rule, injoyning her that shee hee unto hyr helping and the points of the Rule to meyntene Religion. And shee shall set hyr in hyr sete. And than shall come the chaplaine with ensens against hyr. And the abbes and shee shall go before the covent in the qwere. And the same day shall give pitaunce of good fysh to the covent: and when shee deye, shee must gyve to the covent" (cætera desunt.)

A second English passage occurs in another page: "Be it knowen to all men that yf any servante of my ladyes or any servante of any lady of the place fall syke and be hade in the towne, the chapytre priste

No Register of the Charters of this monastery is at present known to exist: but Mr. Lysons has given references to the principal records in the Tower relating to it. "Copies of Hodelred's Charter, and those of William the Conqueror, Henry I. King Stephen, Henry II. and Richard I." he says, "are to be found among the 'Brevia Regum' in the Tower, having been exhibited by the abbess of Barking, anno 1324, 17 Edw. II. Rot. Fin. 5 Hen. There is likewise a Latin paragraph relating to the forms of service: though in the first sentence scarcely intelligible. "Nota quod diversis temporibus intra Conventum nonnullæ emanarunt altercationes et discordiæ et discordiæ Horarum Psalterii et Missæ observantiam tenendam (sic). Igitur nos cupientes dictas altercationes et discordias radicitus extirpari præsentibus declaramus edicto secundum antiquas consuetudines istius domus approbatas, quod conventus prædictus tres modos diversos haheat sui servicii dicendi: primo horas suas dicat secundum regulam Sancti Benedicti; Psalterium suum secundum cursum Curie Romanæ; Missam vero secundum usum ecclesiæ Sancti Pauli Londoniarum."

^m Daughter of Michael de la Pole, earl of Suffolk. Rymer, in his Fœdera, tom. x. p. 323, has printed the petition of this abbess to King Henry V. for a sum of money due to her for the maintenance of Edmund and Jasper Tudor, sons of Catherine the queen dowager by Owen Tudor, who were sent to be educated at this abbey.

"To the King oure Soverain Lord. Dorothy Barley surrendered this abbey to King Henry the Eighth November 14th, 1539, 31 Hen. VIII. and was pensioned, together with thirty nuns:^b her own pension amounting to 133*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* per annum. The site of the monastery, with the conventual house and demesne lands, was granted in 1551, by King Edward VI. to Edward lord Clinton.

An ancient gateway, over which is the chapel of the Holy-rood, forms now the principal remain of this once magnificent abbey. Mr. Lysons has engraved a ground-plan of the church taken from the ruins of the foundation in 1724, from a drawing in the possession of Edward Hulse, Esq. He has also engraved the seal of the monastery.

[Abbrev. Placit. 6 Edw. II. p. 316.]

DOMINUS Edwardus pater regis mandavit anno xxxj. regni sui Rogero le Brabanzon, Willielmo de Bereford, Rogero de Hegham, et Stephano de Gravesend, quod inquirent qui deberent reparare pontes et calceta in regia strata inter Stratford atte Bowe et Hamme Stratford, et de defectu sustentationis et reparationis eorundem; qui inde inquisitionem ceperunt per juratores, scilicet per xij. de comitatu Essexiæ et per alios xij. de comitatu Middlesexiæ, qui dicunt quod passagium ultra aquam de Luye apud Stratford atte Bowe antiquitus solebat esse in quodam loco qui vocatur de Oldeforde, qui distat a loco ubi pontes et calcetum nunc sunt fere per unam leucam, ad quem passagium plures transeuntes diversis vicibus submersi et periclitati fuerunt: et cum postea tanti periculi notitia ad dominam Matildam tunc reginam Angliæ consortem domini Henrici Regis primi perveniret, ipsa pietate mota jussit inquiri ubi pontes et calcetum melius et commodius fieri possent ad utilitatem et aisiamentum patriæ et transeuntium, &c. Quo facto ipsa Regina fieri fecit duos pontes de petra, scilicet pontem ultra aquam de Luye ad caput villæ de Stratford atte Bowe, et alium ultra aliud trenchetum ejusdem aquæ versus Essex qui vocatur Chanelesbrigge; et etiam unum calcetum inter eosdem pontes ita quod omnes transeuntes bene et secure transire potuerunt. Et quia eadem regina voluit quod pontes et calcetum prædicta, sicuti de elemosina sua facta, ex tunc in posterum sustentarentur et repararentur, emit quasdam terras, redditus, prata, et unum molendinum aquaticum quod vocabatur Wiggemulne, et ea constituit et ordinavit ad sustentationem et reparationem pontium et calceti prædictorum. Et quia sperabat sustentationem et reparationem illas melius et securius fieri per religiosos si inde onerati essent quam per sæculares, ne forte sæculares ipsos vel eorum hæredes per lapsum temporis deficere contingerent, nec fuit tunc aliqua domus religiosa propinquior pontibus et calceto prædictis quam Abbatia de Berkinggs, eo quod abbatia de Stratford nondum fundata fuit, prædicta terras, redditus, prata, et molendinum, cum pertinentiis, dedit cuidam tunc abbatissæ et domui suæ de Berkinggs, ita quod ipsa et ejus successor, &c. dictos pontes et calcetum repararent et sustentarent quatenus necesse esset imperpetuum. Sed postea Gilbertus de Mountfichet fundavit abbatiam de Stratford, &c. et quidam abbas ejusdem domus acquisivit terras, &c. a prædicta abbatissa eo quod fuerant prope abbatiam suam, et ad commodum domus suæ jacebant et sita fuerunt, faciend. videlicet ipse et successores sui, &c. reparationem pontium et calcetorum prædictorum pro ipsa abbatissa, &c. et reddendo eisdem ulterius iiij. marcas argenti per annum, &c. Et sic per eandem Inquisitionem comperti sunt defectus et qui debent reparare et sustentare dictos pontes et calceta. Quam Inquisitionem dominus rex venire fecit per Breve suum, &c. et super hoc præceptum est vicecomiti quod venire faciet prædictum abbatem, magistrum domus beati Thomæ de Acre, et custodem pontis London, ad respond. quare dictos pontes non repararant, &c. Ideo inter regem et abbatem venerunt juratores qui dicunt quod dictus abbas non tenetur reparare nisi unum pontem vocatum Chanelesbrigge, nec quod aliquis prædecessorum suorum dictos pontem et calcetum unquam reparaverunt, nec quod aliquas terras seu tenementa tenent pro quibus ea facere, reparare, seu sustentare consueverunt. Ideo abbas sine die. Sed per aliam Juratam compertum est quod dicta abbatissa dictos pontes debet reparare. Et demum concordia facta inter dictum abbatem et abbatissam in præsentia comitis Herefordiæ et Essexiæ, cancellarii Angliæ, utriusque capitalis justic. capitalis baronis, et escaetorum domini regis citra Trentam, hic irrotulata est per quam dictus abbas se et successores suos ad reparand. semper imposterum; pro quo dicta abbatissa dat dicto abbati cc. lib. salvis tamen dictæ abbatissæ iiij. marcis suis annuis.

St. Mildred's Monastery,

IN THE

ISLE OF THANET, IN KENT.

HE Monastery of St. Mildred was founded, according to Bishop Tanner, about the year 670:^a when King Edgar bestowed upon his niece Domnena, Dompneva, or Domneva, several ploughlands in that island, in order to found and endow a monastery, which she did, to the honour of the Virgin Mary, and placed her daughter St. MILDRED abbess here over seventy nuns.^b Other accounts state Domneva herself to have been the first abbess. Lewis, in his History of the Isle of Tenet or Thanet, gives no fewer than twelve Charters granted to this monastery during the Heptarchy. He transcribed them from a manuscript in the library of Trinity Hall Cambridge, intitled "Annales Monasterii S. Augustini:" but the whole are evidently spurious. The two first are from Oswyn (whose name occurs no where else as) king of Kent, to Dompneva, who in these instruments is called Aebbe,^c granting ten tenements, with woods, fields, &c. in Sturrie, and eighteen tenements in the Isle of Thanet. The third Charter is from Suabbert, another king of Kent of doubtful authenticity, granting the land in Thanet called Sudanie, together with a court-lodge and twelve tenements, out of the island, at a place called Sturgeh. The fourth Charter is also from Suabbert, and grants two ploughlands in Sturridge, and three ploughlands in the place called Botdesham.^d The fifth, sixth, and seventh Charters are from Withred king of Kent, granting Hummatum and Haeg to Dompneva, and certain privileges to

^a Not A.D. 596, as Leland, Collect. vol. i. p. 97, for that was before Domneva's time, though Speed also makes her to have lived A.D. 590. See Tanner, Notit. Monast. edit. Nasm. Kent lx.

^b Lewis, Hist. of the Isle of Tenet, 4to. Lond. 1723, p. 51, says, "Thorne, a native of this parish, and afterwards a monk of St. Austin's, tells us that A.D. 670, in the seventy-second year of the coming of St. Austin the monk, a monastery was founded here, which he says was done on the following occasion: Ermenred king of Kent had, he says, by his queen Oslana two sons, Ethelred and Ethebryth, and four daughters, Ermemburg, Dompnena, Ermemburg, and Ermemgriha. King Ermenred dying (who for ought appears was never living) left his two sons to the care of his brother Ercumbert, who fulfilled his brother's will so long as he lived. But he dying before the two princes came of age (though Ercumbert reigned twenty-four years), left them to his son Egbrit, who succeeded him likewise in the regency. He, Thorne says, to secure the kingdom to himself, ordered his lieutenant Tunor to put the two princes to death; who, in obedience to his master's commands, murdered them at Estry (about six miles from hence), where they were kept in the king's palace; and the more effectually to prevent any discovery, buried their bodies under the royal throne. But the murder being detected by a light from heaven, which pointed to the very place where the bodies of the royal infants lay, Egbert was, it seems very much afraid, and if you'll believe the Chronicler, was prevailed with by St. Theodore archbishop of Canterbury, and St. Adrian abbat of the monastery of St. Austin's, and by the clamours of his subjects, to send to Dompnena (who having been married to Penda king of the Mercians, and borne him one son named Merfin and three daughters, who it seems were all saints, viz. St. Milburgh, St. Mildred, and St. Milgith, had with her husband taken on her the vow of chastity) to ask her pardon, and make her satisfaction for his consenting to the parricide and wickedness that was committed. Accordingly, the king, it's said, did send for her, and came before her in a very sorrowful manner, asking her pardon, and laying before her a great many rich presents. But Dompnena very generously pardoned the king without accepting any of the rich presents, and only requested him to grant her a place in Tenet where she might build a monastery in memory of her two brothers, with a competent maintenance, in which she might with the virgins devoted to God, and obliged to her, pray to the Lord to pardon and forgive the king for the murder of her brothers. Egbert granting this petition of hers, asked her how much land she pleased to have, Dompnena very modestly answers, only as much as my deer can run over at one course (which, according to the monks account, was above ten thousand acres of some of the best land in Kent). This being granted, the deer was let loose, at a place called West-gate, in the presence of the king and many of his nobles and people, the king and they following her, and expecting the event. Tunor the king's lieutenant and the envious murderer, as he is called, of the two princes, being, it seems, present, cried out that Dompnena was a witch, and the king a fool in yielding so far to her as to let so noble and fruitful a soil be taken from him by the decision of a brute, and whilst the king and the rest of the company were diverted with seeing the deer run, he endeavoured to put her by, with riding across and meeting her. But whilst he was thus acting, the wrath of God came upon him; the earth opening swallowed him up, and he went down with Dathan and Abirom alive into hell, leaving the name of Tunorsleap, or Thunor-Hyslepe to the field and place where he fell, to perpetuate the memory of his punishment, though we are told it was afterwards called Heglighdale: so that, it seems, the name of the place did not long preserve the memory of this wonder. The king on this, as well he might, very much feared and trembled, and his guilty conscience smote him. But now, the deer having finished her course from one side of the island to the other, and run over in length and breadth forty eight plowlands, followed her mistress Dompnena: and the king immediately gave thanks to Christ Jesus, and delivered to the most illustrious Dompnena the whole tract of land which the deer had run over, and confirmed it to her ecclesiastical posterity: St. Theodore with the most devout abbat Adrian, and all the rest who were present, blessing it."

"Thus," continues Lewis, "do the monks tell the story of the foundation of this famous abbey, known afterwards by the name of St. Mildred's abbey. But it seems to me to be a great part of it fable and invention. What they call the Deer's Course is no more than a lynch or balk cast up to divide the two capital manors of Minstre and Monkton in this island, and to the bounds of them: and, very probably was here before ever the manor of Mynstre was granted to Dompnena. The Puteus Thunor or Thunors-lep is very plainly the old chalk-pit, called Mynstre chalk-pit, which it is not unlikely was first sunk when the abbey and church at Minstre were built, and the bottom of it, in process of time, being grown over with grass, the crafty monks invented this fable of it to frighten the poor people who are very much addicted to hearken to such dismal stories or lying wonders. The Annalist of St. Augustine's monastery thus describes the place: Puteus, says he, apparet prope cursum cervæ juxta Aldelond. The place of the king's standing to see this course is represented to be by this place, where formerly was a beacon, it being some of the highest land hereabouts, and where the king might see the deer run almost all the way in case there was ever any such course. However this be, I can't find that any place in this island goes now by the name of Thunorsleap, or even of what the Annalist calls the modern one, the name of Heglighdale.

"Mr. Archdeacon Harpsfield tells this story of Thunor, whom he calls Thymnius, another way; and relates that he died miserably by a fall from his horse, and that the place where this happened being in this island, was in memory of his tragical end called Thumer-land."

Stevens quotes Harpsfield's account. Addit. to Mon. Angl. tom. i. p. 519. Compare also Weever, Fun. Mon. 4to. Lond. 1631, p. 261.

^c Lewis says, from the Annales Monast. S. August. "Nota quod Dompneva quæ alio nomine dicitur Ermenburga postquam sanctimoniali habitu professa fuerat, Aebba a regibus et magnatibus notabatur." Hist. Thanet. 4to. Lond. 1723, p. 57.

the abbey in the time of her daughter Mildred. The eighth Charter is from Ethelbert the son of Withred, and grants a ploughland near the river Limene, together with lands at Hammespot. The ninth and tenth Charters, from Ethelbald king of Mercia, grant an exemption from customs, and all the dues of shipping anciently belonging to him and his predecessors in the port of London, as likewise the tribute or toll of a merchant transport ship. These are to the abbess Mildred. The eleventh Charter is also from Ethelbald, but to the abbess Edburga, and grants a moiety of the customs of a ship recently purchased. The twelfth Charter is from Offa king of Mercia to the abbess Mildred, confirming a previous donation from Ethelbald.

EDBURGA is said to have been the successor of St. Mildred;^a who, about the year 740, finding the abbey founded by Domneva too crowded with inhabitants, built another at the distance of about a mile eastward, which she dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul: into which monastery she also translated the body of St. Mildred.^b Edburga is stated to have died A.D. 751, having been abbess above three score years.^c

SIGEBURGA, or SIGEBURTHA, was ordained to the care of St. Mildred's monastery by Archbishop Cuthbert: in whose time the Danes began their devastations on the Isle of Thanet.^d

SELEDRITHA was consecrated abbess by Archbishop Athelard A.D. 793.^e

Of the abbesses immediately succeeding no account remains. Thorne says, "De aliis abbatissis istam consequentibus, nisi de ultima, per Danos captivata, quicquam non reperi scripturis."^f

LEOFRIMA, or LEOFRUNA, was abbess when the monastery was entirely destroyed by the Danes; according to some writers, in the year 978; but, according to Thorne, in 1011, on the invasion of Sweyn. The nuns are said to have been burnt with their monastery, the abbess only being taken prisoner alive.^g After this time, says Tanner, there were no more nuns, but a few secular priests only, and their church and lands were granted by King Canute A.D. 1027, together with the body of St. Mildred, to the monks of St. Augustine, Canterbury: which gift was afterwards confirmed by King Edward the Confessor.^h The monks also translated the body of St. Mildred to their own church.

^a Wcever, p. 262, calls her ETHELINGA.

^b Chron. W. Thorn. Script. x. Twysd. col. 1907, 1908, in Vita S. Mildredæ. On this occasion St. Mildred's body is said to have been taken up whole and incorrupt. Her remains were afterwards translated to St. Austin's Canterbury by Abbat Elstan. See Num. I.

The following Charter relating to the Monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul is here transcribed from the Appendix of Records to Lewis's History of Thanet. It is inserted here, because the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul is not intended to form a separate article. The authority for it is the manuscript already quoted from Lewis, preserved at Trinity Hall in Cambridge.

Regnante in perpetuum Domino nostro Jesu Christo, unicuique mortalium vitæ suæ terminus omnipotentis Dei dispensatione incertus esse dinoscitur; venit enim Dominus ad visitandum servum suum in die qua non sperat, in hora qua non putat. Qua de re ego Eadbertus rex Cantia anno xxxvi. regni nostri, una cum consensu et concilio Archiepiscopi Bregwyni et principum meorum pro æterna redemptione animæ meæ aliquid ex his quæ mihi idem ipse Deus et Salvator noster, cunctorum bonorum largitor, tribuerit, statuens donare decreveram i. e. duarum Navium transvectionis censum, qui etiam juris nostri erat, in loco cujus vocabulum est ad Serre, juxta petitionem venerabilis abbatissæ Sigeburgæ ejusque sane conversationis familiæ in monasterio S. Petri quod situm est in insula Tenet, sicut a regibus Merciorum Aethilbaldo, viz. clementissimo et Rege Offan longe ante concessum est tributum in loco cujus vocabulum est ad Lundenwic, alterius vero quod nuper edificatum est in monasterio ejusdem religiosæ Dei famulæ omne tributum atque vectigal concedimus, quod etiam a theloneariis nostris justè impetitur publicis in locis qui appellantur Fordwic et Seorre. Hinc igitur præcipio et precor in nomine omnipotentis Dei, patriciis, ducibus, comitibus, theloneariis, actionariis, publicis dignitatibus, ut hæc nostra concessio in Dei donationem eternaliter sit confirmata, ita ut nec mihi nec alicui successorum meorum regum sive principum, seu cujuslibet conditionis dignitatibus nefario temeritatis ausu de supradicta donatione aliquid fraudare vel minuere liceat. Si autem contigerit ut navis ista rupta et contracta sit, vel nimia vetustate consumpta, sive item, quod absit, naufragio perita, ut alia in loco illius ad utilitatem ibidem Deo servientium famulorum Christi et famularum construat, ad hanc, viz. conditionem, ut quicquid in suis mercimoniis, in diversis speciebus acquirere possint, nobis fideliter inoffense offerre debeant, simul cum ipsa navi ad locum qui appellatur Fordwic. Et quicumque de hac donatione nostra, quod et spiritualiter omnipotenti Deo firmiter concessum est, aliquid nefario caliditatis ausu abstrahere vel minuere temptaverit, sciat se a consortio sanctorum omnium separatam, et cum diabolo et angelis ejus in perpetuum esse dampnandum, qui sanctum locum istum dehonestare conatus est in quo primi apostolorum principis Petri intercessio orationibus assiduis et eleemosynis floret pro omni populo Christiano. Idcirco vivens benedictione Dei carebit, et moriens maledictioni debite subacebit, nisi digna satisfactione emendaverit, quod iniquè studuit depravare. Quicumque vero hæc agenda custodierit sit benedictus in perpetuum, et beatissimam vocem audire mereatur cum sanctis, Venite benedicti Patris mei. ✠ Ego Eadbertus Rex hanc donationem a me factam propria manu signo S. crucis roboravi. ✠ Ego Bregwynus Archiepiscopus, ad petitionem Eadberti Regis, signum S. crucis expressi. ✠ Signum manus Jamberti Abbatis. ✠ Signum manus Daenæ Abbatis. ✠ Signum manus Bruni Abbatis. ✠ Signum manus Baltheardi Comitis. ✠ Signum manus Ealthun Principis. ✠ Signum manus Redfridi. ✠ Signum manus Budda. ✠ Signum manus Eathelberti. Historia Foundationis.

ANNO domini 1262, decimo kalendas Martii, positum est corpus S. Mildredae virginis in feretro in quo nunc jacet. Sed ut apertius hoc valeam referre, ordinem nativitatis et vitae progressum breviter demonstrabo. Mildreda virgo ab utroque parente regalem sanctamque traxit originem: nam patrem habuit Merwaldum, Pendæ, Merciorum regis filium, cujus Pendæ frater Wulferus, rex Merciorum, ad fidem Christi quam expulso Mellito abjecerat, Orientales-Saxones revocavit. Hujus Wulheri filia sancta Wereburga fuit. Matrem verò habuit Mildreda Domneva, de stirpe regum Cantuariæ, filiam scilicet Ermenredi, qui fuit filius Eadbald, qui Eadbaldus fuit filius Ethelberti primi regum Angliæ Christiani. Hujus Mildredæ mater Domneva, relictis postea pompis regalibus, elegit Christo perpetuò deservire; quod contigit isto modo. Ermenredus pater Domnevæ duos habebat filios, scilicet Ethelredum et Ethelbertum, quos fratri suo Ercomberto, filio Eadbald, tradidit nutriendos, ut cum adulti essent, iisdem hæreditatem suam resignaret. Erat tum quidam regis Egberti (qui filius erat Ercomberti) præfectus, nomine Thymur,^a qui prædictos parvulos in villâ de Eastri clam fecit occidi. Beati autem Theodorus et Adrianus regem super hoc scelere arguentes, ad hoc eum excitaverunt, ut vocatâ ad se Domneva Merciorum reginâ, et prædictorum Christi martyrum germanâ, eidem pro ipsorum jure satisfaceret. Quæ veniens recepit terram in Thaneto, scilicet terram XLVIII. aratrorum, quod terræ spatium cerva sua unico currebat cursu. Ipsa verò Domneva cum regis adjutorio construxit ibidem cœnobium virginale, et filiam suam Mildredam, Merwaldi Merciorum regis filiam, de partibus transmarinis (monasterio videlicet Calensi prope Parisios) revocavit, et eidem cœnobio à sancto Theodoro abbatissam consecravit, ubi septuaginta virginibus, quas sua mater congregaverat, præsidebat. Vixit autem cum sororibus suis usque ad terminum vitæ suæ. Qua mortua, et cum matre sua Domneva in eodem monasterio sepulta, successit Eadburga. Ista Eadburga corpus sanctæ Mildredæ transtulit in novam ecclesiam ab ipsa fabricatam, et ab episcopo Cuthberto in honorem principum apostolorum dedicatam. Cui Eadburgæ sub annum domini 751. successit Sigeberta, et à prædicto Cuthberto benedicta. Hujus tempore piratæ Danorum ipsum Mildredæ monasterium ferè singulis annis devastabant. Cui successit Siledritha, per regem Coendredum ab Athelardo archiepiscopo, qui sedit anno 753. consecrata, quæ statum sui monasterii tam in possessionibus quàm in numero sororum restituendo quamplurimum elaborabat. Cui etiam plures matres in ipso monasterio successerunt, quarum ultima Leofrina censebatur abbatissa, cujus tempore, scilicet anno 1011. Suanus cum Danis et Gentilibus, non jam ad prædandum sed ad subdendam totam Angliam venientes, ipsum primo Thanetum, nulli sexui vel ordini parentes, devastabant, et dictum ipsum cœnobium cum suis virginibus funditus concremarunt; à quo tamen incendio mira Dei operatione Mildredæ monumentum permansit illæsum. Extunc autem nullæ ibidem virgines permanserunt, sed reædificato loco, facta est ecclesia duorum vel trium clericorum plebeie parchia, donec regnante Cnuto, prædicti Suani filio, prædictum virginale monasterium cum tota sua substantia monasterio S. Augustini esset incorporatum. Dilata est tum per regem virginis transferendæ licentia, donec rex Romam peregrè proficiscens hoc permittendum super tumbam S. Augustini solemniter juraverit, si prosperè remearet. Qui rediens, in medio mari B. Augustino visibiliter sibi in forma episcopi apparente, à naufragio liberatus, votum gratissimè adimplevit. Abbas autem, habita licentia de virgine transferenda sciens insulanorum ferocitatem, ut cautiùs celaret conceptum animi propositum, convocat eosdem insulanos die festo Pentecostes ad celebre convivium, ubi beata virgo quiescebat, ut, deluso populo, noctu aggredereetur tumbam virginalem. Sed ipsa durior chalybe resistebat, donec facta promissione quod ipsius virginis festum inter festa solenniora annotaretur. Tali promisso virgine placata, permollitur durities lapidum, et aperitur virginis sepulchrum. Abbas verò exhaustis quicquid reperire poterat in monumento, vix ullum pulverem reliquiarum insulæ orbatae relinquens. Vix ad naves pervenerant, et ecce tota ferè occurrit insula, vi et armis ablatum sibi pretium repetendo; quorum tamen viribus et precibus prævaluerunt orationes monachorum devotiores. Necdum à Thaneto exivit ista fama, cum jam transito maris brachio tota ferè provincia, vel, ut veriùs dicam, tota Cantia obvia virgini venienti processit. Facta est autem hæc translatio anno domini 1030. decimo quinto kalendas Junii sub Benedicto papa, Henrico imperatore, Knuto Angliæ rege, Agelnotho archipræsule, Aelstano tunc S. Augustini abbate. Conditam autem est tunc ante principale altare S. Petri, ubi et habebat præminentem tumbam, et altare, super quod, juxta votum quod prædictus abbas fecerat virgini transferendæ, missa matutinalis quotidie celebratur. Conditum est autem corpus sanctæ virginis in loculo plumbeo cum hoc epitaphio desuper posito:

Clauditur hoc saxo Mildreda sacerrima virgo;
Cujus nos precibus adjuvet ipse Deus.

Anno Mxxxiiij. Hic transtulit abbas Ethelstanus sanctam Mildretham de Thaneto ad sanctum Augustinum.

Ego Cnud per Dei misericordiam Basileus, Agelnotho archiepiscopo, et omnibus episcopis, et abbatibus, et comitibus, vice-comitibus, et omnibus fidelibus totius Angliæ salutem et amicitiam. Notum sit vobis omnibus me dedisse sancto Augustino patrono meo corpus sanctæ Mildredæ gloriosæ virginis cum tota terra sua infra insulam Thaneti et extra, cum omnibus consuetudinibus ad suam ecclesiam pertinentibus. Hæc omnia ita libera et quietam reddo Deo et abbati Aelstano et fratribus loci, sicut ego unquam meliùs habui tam in terra quàm in mari et in littore, ut habeant et possideant in perpetuum. CONDITOR cœli terræque Deus, universitate totius creaturæ de nihilo perfecta, primum hominem de limo formavit, eumque ad imaginem suam configuravit, cui etiam omnium operum suorum dominari præcepit, ea videlicet ratione, ut homo rationabilis irrationali uteretur creatura, et ipse Deo serviens obediret, et obediendo creatorem honoraret. Deinde succedente generatione in generationem, templa et ecclesias fieri constituens, de primitiis et decimis ac de substantia suæ largitionis eas in nomine suo honorari præcepit. Insuper et per evangelium nos instruens, ait, "Thesaurizate vobis thesauros in cœlo." Quapropter Ego Edwardus, regis regum gratiâ, rex et Anglorum princeps, post longam exultationem solius miserentis Dei nutu in regnum meum reversus, et in solio patrum meorum residens, ecclesiam quam hortatu B. Augustini rex Adelbright in honorem apostolorum Petri et Pauli à fundamento construxit, diversisque donis ditavit, in quâ ipsius regis et omnium episcoporum Cantuariæ et regum corpora poni possent, cum omnibus appendiciis vel adjacentiis suis liberam esse annuo et statuo. Quoniam quidem in eadem ecclesia supradicta rex conditus jacet, ejusque stirpis progenies Deo dilecta requiescit virgo Mildreda, ego etiam ejusdem regis stemmate ortus, et regno ejus, Deo juvante, potitus, Thanatos insulam trado, quam Egbertus rex jure hæreditario concessit venerabili reginæ Domnevæ, matri scilicet sanctæ Mildredæ, quantum cerva cursu suo lustraverat, pro interemptione duorum fratrum ejus Ætheldredi atque Æthelberti, quos jussu ejusdem principis Deo odibilis Thimur iniqua stravit morte, quem mox cælestis ultio terribiliter subsecuta est, ipsum perimendo. Sed et omnes donationes possessionum vel facultatum quas prisco sive moderno tempore prædecessores mei reges eidem ecclesiæ contulerunt, et ego regia potestate contrado, atque firma astipulatione, cum consensu et testimonio episcoporum, ducum, principum et satellitum meorum, abbati Ælstano ac monachis ibidem sub regula B. Benedicti abbatis Deo militantibus, ad habenda et perfruenda sibi perpetua libertate constituens attribuo. Si cui verò hæc largitio displicet, vel si quis, quod absit, hanc donationem zelo ductus diaboli, quoquo ingenio infringere temptaverit, iram Dei et omnium sanctorum maledicta incurrat et subita morte intereat, sicut prædictus Dei inimicus Thymur interiit: percutiat eum Deus amentia et cæcitate, ac furore mentis, omnique tempore calumpniam maledictionis Dei sustineat, nec sit qui eum liberet, nisi pœnitens resipiscat et digna emendatione satisfaciat. Hæc autem traditio regalis in eodem loco servetur inconculsa et incontaminata, Deo teste, qui dixit, "Mihi vindictam, et ego retribuam:" contradicentibus verò ad ruinam, et ad condemnationem in die furoris Domini, cum eis qui dixerunt Domino, "Recede à nobis, scientiam viarum tuarum nolumus," &c.

ANSWITHA, daughter to Edbald, or Eadbald king of Kent, choosing a religious life, her father, about A.D. 630, built at Folkstone, for the use of her and her companions, a Church and Nunnery dedicated to St. Peter, which, in process of time, according to Capgrave, was swallowed up by the sea;^a but, according to other and better authorities,^b was destroyed by the Danes, and the land after that granted by King Æthelstan, A.D. 927, to Christ Church, Canterbury.^c From the "Donationes Ecclesiæ Christi," however, already printed in a former page, the site appears to have been afterwards taken from Christ Church, as King Canute in 1038, at the time Eadsine his chaplain was made a monk, is recorded to have restored to that church the parish of Folkstane, which had been given to it by King Æthelstan.

Weever says, St. Eanswithe, or Eanswitha, died a veiled virgin, about the year 673;^d being interred in the church of the monastery.^e

Of the subsequent foundation at Folkestone, in the year 1095, an account will be hereafter given among the Alien Pories.

ÆTHELBERTUS rex Canciae per sanctum Augustinum episcopum ad fidem conuersus, genuit Edbaldum et Ethelburgam virginem, quam pater suus Ethelbertus dedit Edwino regi Northanhumbrorum in uxorem; sicut inferius in vita ejusdem sancti regis clarius patet. Edbaldus verò ex Emma, regis Francorum filia, genuit Ermenredum et Ercombertum, et filiam Eanswidam. Quæ ab infantia pompis secularibus renuncians, Deo servire studuit, preciosa quæque mundi calcavit, et ad vitam regni cœlestis tota virtute sanctam amplexata doctrinam jugi desiderio suspiravit, et sanctimonialis vitæ regulam subire deliberavit. Ad cujus observantiæ opportunitatem commodum elegit locum à vulgi frequentatione remotum, Folkstan nominatum, ubi et pater ejus Eadbaldus in honore beati Petri apostoli ecclesiam construxit. Ibi ergo ex parte maris quæ remotior dicitur esse ab ipsis ruri- culis hujusmodi competentem fundavit ecclesiam cum officinis sibi suisque comitibus professioni ejus necessariis, à pleno tamen maris gurgite septem jugerum latitudine, id est viginti octo partiarum distantem. In qua castimoniam virginalem sub regulari habitu ducens die nocteque Dei famulatu dedita ad beatum finem pervenire meruit pridie kal. Septembris. Liming Monastery,

THE destroyed Monastery of Liming was founded by Ethelburgha, or, as some call her, Eadburga, daughter of King Ethelbert; who, returning into Kent, A.D. 633, after the death of her husband Edwin king of Northumberland, by the favour of her brother King Eadbald, built it to the honour of the Virgin Mary and St. Mildred.^a Tanner says, this religious house might perhaps consist of nuns at first, but afterwards it came under the government of an abbat.^b CUTHBERT, who is noticed as archbishop of Canterbury in 742, is said to have been previously abbat of Liming.^c The possessions of this monastery were given to it at different times; principally during the Saxon Heptarchy. Withred king of Kent has been already noticed in a former page as the donor of four ploughlands at Nunhelmestun.^d The grant of a larger donation from the same monarch is preserved among the Cotton manuscripts.^e In 741, Eadbright, or Aethilberht, king of Kent, gave other possessions to the church.^f In 804, Cenulf, or Ceonulf, king of Mercia, with Cuthred his brother, king of Kent, gave six manses in Canterbury, at a place called Eadburgeuuell:^g and, in 964, King Athelstan granted to the church, with the approbation of Archbishop Dunstan, one yoke of land in a place called Ulaham.^h Subsequent to this last donation the monastery of Liming was destroyed by the Danes: when the lands and possessions belonging to it became attached to the monastery of Christ-church Canterbury.

Reculver Monastery,

IN

KENT.

HE Saxon Chronicle ascribes the building of the Monastery of Reculver to one Basse, or Bassa, to whom King Egbert, A. D. 669, had given the land on which it was erected.^a Hasted says, in atonement for the murder of his two nephews.^b Basse is stated to have been one of the nobles of King Egbert's court, and to have been also a priest.^c The church was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

In a manuscript Chartulary of the archbishoprick of Canterbury in the Bodleian library at Oxford, several grants of lands and privileges to this monastery are recorded, as well as the substance of them, in the "Evidentiæ Ecclesiæ Christi Cantuariæ," printed in the Decem Scriptores by Twysden.

Lothaire king of Kent gave Westanea and twelve manses in Sturege to this monastery, A. D. 679.^d Eadbert king of Kent, A. D. 747, gave the toll of one ship in the port of Fordwich.^e Ealmund, or Eadmund, king of Kent, gave twelve ploughlands in Scilwith (now Sheldwich) A. D. 784:^f and Eardulf king of Kent one ploughland called Perhamstede.^g

In these Charters the names of several of the Abbats are preserved.

BRITHWOLD, or BERTHWALD, occurs abbat A. D.

679, who, according to the Saxon Chronicle, became archbishop of Canterbury in 690.^h Having sat longer than any other archbishop of Canterbury, he died Jan. 9th, 731, and was buried in St. Austin's monastery.ⁱ

HEAHBERT is mentioned by Mr. Duncombe as the next abbat.^k

DENEHAEH occurs A. D. 747.

HWITREDE is noticed as abbat A. D. 784.^l

A. D. 949, the monastery and its possessions were annexed to Christ-church Canterbury by the grant of King Edred, in the presence of Queen Edgiva his mother, and of Archbishop Odo. The lands adjoining being estimated at twenty-six cassates, with all appurtenances on the shore, in the field, meadows, forests, &c.^m Notwithstanding which, it appears to have continued as a religious society, only with the alteration of the superior's title from that of Abbat to Dean, till a few years before the Norman Conquest. In a grant or demise of part of the demesnes of Reculver monastery, made by Archbishop Agelnoth to two of his ministers, GIVEHARDUS occurs as dean.ⁿ After this, nothing more is found relating to Reculver monastery. It is supposed to have ceased to be a religious house, and to have come into the hands of William the Conqueror, who restored it, with its revenues, to Archbishop Lanfranc, as having been given to his church of Canterbury: and soon afterwards, on the separation of the estates of it, between the archbishop and the priory of Christ-church there, the manor of Reculver with its demesnes, of which the ancient site of the abbey was esteemed part, and the church appurtenant, was allotted to the former.^o

^a Chron. Sax. ed. Gibs. p. 40. Bishop Tanner says, "That K. Ethelbert founded a monastery here, as Cressy, p. 300, doth not appear to me from any good authority: all agree he built a palace." Notit. Mon. Kent, XLVIII. Raculfe, Raculfcestre, and Raculfminstre, were the ancient names of the monastery, which appears also to have been sometimes called GENLADE, from its situation at the mouth of a river bearing that appellation. ^l Duncombe names WETRED as his predecessor, A. D. 783, but he appears to have been the same person with Hwitrede. EDBERT is also mentioned as abbat in 949, but he appears to have been the same person with Heahbert already mentioned, with the addition of a wrong date.

Monastery of Ely,

IN

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

Penda king of Mercia.^a

THELDREDA, daughter of Anna king of the East Angles, was the foundress of the monastery of Ely. Her first design was to build it, and the structure was actually commenced at Cratendune, about a mile distant from the present city, where Ethelbert king of the East Angles is said to have founded a monastery, which was some time afterwards destroyed by the army of

From the Saxon Chronicle we learn that ETHELDREDA began her buildings at Ely in the year 673;^b and the year after was consecrated abbess of her own foundation.^c She was born about the year 630 at Ixning in the western part of Suffolk: her mother's name being Herewitha. She was first married to Tonbert, a nobleman of the East Angles, and afterwards to Egfrid king of Northumberland; persevering with both husbands to live in a state of virginity. Having obtained Egfrid's consent to depart the court, she retired to the monastery of Coldingham, where St. Ebba, the king's aunt, then presided as abbess; and received the veil from the hands of Wilfrid bishop of York. Egfrid having been persuaded to draw Etheldreda again from her retirement, she fled to the Isle of Ely, which she had received in dower from her first husband Tonbert. Here she was assisted in carrying on her buildings by Adulfus her brother, at that time king of the East Angles, who defrayed great part of the expense. Bentham conjectures that Bishop Wilfrid had the ordering and direction of the work. Bede informs us that from Etheldreda's entering upon her office as abbess, she never wore any linen, but only woollen garments; that she usually eat only once a day, except on the greater festivals, or in times of sickness; and, if her health permitted, she never returned to bed after matins, which were held at midnight, but continued her prayers in the church till break of day.^d Her sanctity, and the discipline observed in her monastery, recommended this austerity of life to the esteem of many, and gained abundance of converts. Persons of the noblest families, and matrons of high rank, devoted themselves to religion under her government; and some even of royal state thought proper to quit their high stations to become members of her society, as her eldest sister Sexburga queen of Kent, Ermenilda (the daughter of Sexburga) queen of Mercia, and Werburga, the daughter of Ermenilda; all of whom are stated to have been members of the monastery in the life-time of Etheldreda, and to have succeeded her in their order as abbesses of Ely.^e Etheldreda settled the whole Isle of Ely on her monastery; and, in 678, Bishop Wilfrid going to Rome, she engaged him to procure the Pope's confirmation of her grant. Wilfrid is said to have obtained the confirmation; but, before his return, Etheldreda had been carried off, June 23d, 679, by an epidemical disorder then prevalent in the monastery. She is said, by the spirit of prophecy, to have foretold this contagious distemper, and the exact number of her household that would be taken out of the world by it, and herself among the rest.^f Her funeral rites were performed by Huna her priest and one of her monks, attended by all the members of her monastery; she was buried in a wooden coffin, and, by her express order, in the common cemetery of the nuns.^g

SEXBURGA, the second abbess of Ely, has been already mentioned as the eldest sister of Etheldreda. She had been married to Ercombert king of Kent about the year 640; upon whose death, A.D. 664, she became for a time regent of the kingdom, till her son Egbert coming of age, she resigned the administration of government; and having founded a monastery in the Isle of Shepey for seventy seven nuns, over whom she placed her daughter Ermenilda, queen dowager of Mercia, abbess, she retired to Ely, placing herself under the government of her sister Etheldreda as a nun. Under the administration of Sexburga, October 17th, 695, the body of St. Etheldreda was translated into the church of Ely, and deposited in a marble coffin.^h Cressy places the death

^a Bentham, Hist. of Ely, edit. 1771, p. 54. The reality of a monastery having been founded so early as that at Cratendune, A.D. 607, has been disputed. See Tanner, Notit. Mon. Cambr. ix. Willis, Mit. Ab. vol. i. p. 265. Bentham, p. 11. Stevens, vol. i. p. 391. Dugdale, from the Cotton manuscript Nero A. xv. (See Num. 1.), makes the date of Ethelbert's foundation A.D. 627; but the reading of the original is 607: the year 627 being interlinearly inserted by another hand, Stevens argues for the actual existence of the monastery. Bentham says the name of the old town is still preserved in a field about a mile south of the present city of Ely, called "Cratendon Field."

abbatissæ levari ossa ejus, et in locello novo posita in ecclesiam transferri; jussitque quosdam fratres quærere lapidem, de quo locellum in hoc facere possent: qui ascensa navi, ipsa enim regio Elge undique est aquis ac plaudibus circumdata, neque lapides majores habet, venerunt ad civitatulam quandam desolatam, non procul inde sitam, quæ lingua Anglorum Grantaceaster vocatur: et mox invenerunt juxta muros civitatis locellum de marmore albo pulcherrime factum, operculo quoque similis lapidis aptissime tectum. Unde intelligentes a Domino suum iter esse prosperatum, gratias agentes retulerunt ad Monasterium.

"Cumque corpus sacræ virginis ac sponsæ Christi aperto sepulcro esset prolatum in lucem, ita incorruptum inventum est, ac si eodem die fuisset defuncta, sive humo condita; sicut et præfatus antistes Vilfrid, et multi alii qui novere, testantur. Sed certiori notitia medicus Cynifrid, qui et morienti illi, et elevata de tumulo adfuit: qui referre erat solitus, quod illa infirmata habuerit tumorem maximum sub maxilla. Jusscruntque me, inquit, incidere tumorem illum, ut efflueret noxius humor qui inerat: quod dum facerem, videbatur illa per biduum aliquanto levius habere; ita ut multi putarent, quia sanari posset a languore. Tertia autem die prioribus adgravata doloribus, et rapta confestim de mundo, dolorem omnem ac mortem perpetua salute ac vita mutavit. Cumque post tot annos elevanda essent ossa de sepulchro, et extento

ERMENILDA, the daughter of Sexburga, succeeded as the third abbess. She had been married to Wulfhere king of Mercia, on whose death, in 675, she entered into the monastery of Ely. Her appointment as abbess of Shepey monastery has been already mentioned. She remained there till the death of Sexburga. Bentham says, her decease was commemorated on the 13th of February; but the year of her death is not known.^c

WERBURGA, the daughter of Ermenilda, was the fourth abbess of Ely. She entered the monastery as a nun even earlier than her mother: but was taken thence by her uncle King Ethelred to be placed as superior over several of the monasteries of Mercia. The religious houses of Heanburge and Tricengham in Staffordshire were committed to her immediate care; and she is said to have converted the royal palace of Weedon on the Street into a nunnery: till, on the death of Ermenilda, she succeeded to the administration of the monastery of Ely.

Bentham says, the year of Werburga's death is also uncertain. She desired to be buried in the monastery of Heanburge. Her death, however, happening at Tricengham, the society of that place were desirous of retaining the body; but the nuns of Heanburge carried it off by force, and buried and enshrined it in their monastery: whence, upon the destruction of the place in 875, it was translated to Chester.^d

Although Werburga is the last abbess whose name is recorded, the nunnery of Ely continued in the full observance of monastic discipline till the year 870, when the church and nuns were destroyed together by the Danes under Inguar and Hubba. Some years afterwards eight priests who had belonged to the monastery returning, repaired as much of the church as served for the purpose of divine offices.^e Their superior was called Archi-presbyter, or Præpositus.^f Their endowment, however, was nothing, compared with the ancient domains of the monastery. Bentham says, King Edred, in 955, gave them Stapilford, and part of a wood at Berdfield, consisting of three hides of land, and a mill at Dernford, with some large pastures adjoining. Wolstan of Delham, about the same time, gave them Stuntney, and a fishery belonging to it: and one Ogga of Mildenhall, one hide of land at Cambridge.^g The successors of these priests are stated to have led disorderly lives.^h At length, in the year 970, King Edgar having determined on the restoration of the monastery, the carrying his design into effect was committed to Athelwold, or Ethelwold, bishop of Winchester; who having obtained the Isle of Ely free of regal jurisdiction,ⁱ dismissed the priests, gave orders for repairing the church, and established therein a convent of monks,

BRITHNOTH, prior of Winchester, being appointed the first ABBAT:^k who was consecrated by Dunstan archbishop of Canterbury and Bishop Ethelwold. Brithnoth is represented to have been a man of extraordinary prudence and abstinence; by whose exertions the new church was completed: the fabric being dedicated, and the charter of endowment promulgated,^l by Archbishop Dunstan, on the day after the Purification of the Virgin Mary. At this time, the east end of the church was consecrated to St. Peter, and the south side to the honour of the Virgin Mary.

In the first endowment granted to Ethelwold, five hides of land at Meldeburne, three hides and a half at Earningeforde, and twelve hides at Northwalde, appear to have been included: and King Edgar afterwards added forty hides at Hatfield in Hertfordshire,^m with the village of Derham, or East Dereham, in Norfolk.ⁿ

Among the purchases made for the monastery by Ethelwold and abbat Brithnoth, we find the manor of Lindune in Cambridgeshire, with the appendages of Hylle, and Wicheham, and Wilberton:^o nine hides and two "gurgites" at Stretham,^p to which twenty-four acres of land were afterwards added by another purchase: six hides in Dunham, with two hides subsequently purchased:^q two hundred acres at Wicheford:^r a hundred acres in Walde, given by Athelstan the son of Manne:^s at Helle and Hederham seventy acres:^t seventy-six acres in Hederham by another purchase:^u very large possessions by different purchases at Wilbertone:^v with others in Grantebrige, Dudingtune, Wimiligtune, Duningtune, Weremere, Bluntesham, Toftes, Havekestun, Wambford, Fordham, Horningeseie, Suafham, Berlea, Brandune, Livremere, Sudburne, Wdebrygge, Stocche, Nordwolde, Pulham, Wetinge, Grantedene, Messewrde, and Chillinge.^w The lady Ælftreda is said to have given five hides of land in Holand in Essex, which were afterwards exchanged with the church of St. Paul London for lands at Middleton, or Milton, near Cambridge. In Suffolk, the bishop gave to the monks the manor of Sudburn, which King Edgar had granted him for translating the Rule of St. Benedict into the Saxon or English tongue; and procured for them of the king ten hides of land and two mills in Stoke, near Ipswich. There were also purchased five hides in Brandune and Liveremere; one hide in Chippenham; three hides at Woodbridge; and two hides at Eye; all in Suffolk: the manor of Bluntesham in the county of Huntingdon: and Berlea in Hertfordshire.^z

Bentham has given a full account of all the particulars attending the translation of the body of St. Withburga, the younger sister of Etheldreda, from the church of Derham in which she had been buried, to Ely, in the year 974.

Abbat Brithnoth, having ruled the monastery about eleven years, is said to have been assassinated by order of Elfrida the queen dowager of Edgar, A.D. 981.^a red in the room of Brithnoth. By this abbat the body of St. Wendreda was added to those already translated to the church of Ely: it was brought from the village of Merch, and was enclosed in a shrine of gold. This abbat purchased of the king nineteen cassates of land in Cadenhyo, Lynton, and Strethele, "pro quorum possessione idem abbas eidem regi contulit appensuram auri purissimi juxta magnum pondus Normannorum."^a In his time one Godwin gave the village of Hoo, and Elmer, brother of Godwin, an estate at Hecham.^b Large possessions were likewise given to the monastery by Leofwin the son of Adulf, in atonement for the murder of his mother: these were the estates of Cingestune, the Rodings, and Undeleia; lands in Lackingheth, Withlesseye, Esterie, and Cotenham; an estate in London afterwards called Abbotes-haie; Glemesford; the fisheries at Upstane; and an annual rent in Hethfield, now Hatfield. Leofwin also made considerable additions to the church.^c Other benefactors in his time were Etheliva and Elfwara, two Saxon ladies; Duke Brithnoth; Ethelfleda, wife of Duke Ethelstan; Uva; Oswi; Ederic; Elfelm; Athelstan bishop of Elmham; Alfwin, or Ailwin, who was afterwards the successor of Bishop Athelstan; and Alfgar, chaplain to Dunstan archbishop of Canterbury. Elfgiva, or Emma, queen of King Canute, was also a great benefactor to the ornaments and decorations of the church.^d

Elsin, or Elsi, died, according to Wharton, in 1019: Bentham says in 1016.^f

LEOFWIN, who succeeded Elsin as abbat, is noticed in the Saxon Chronicle: where it is said that, being deposed by his monks, he accompanied Archbishop Egelnoth to Rome, A.D. 1022: when, in the presence of Pope Benedict, he cleared himself of the crimes laid to his charge, and, on his return home, was reinstated in his office.^e Bentham says he was otherwise called OSCHITEL.^h He is stated to have presided three years.

LEOFRIC succeeded to the abbacy in 1022; being promoted to it by King Canute. He had been previously prior of the monastery. In this year the king made an exchange of the village of Dictune, or Wood-Ditton, with the monks for certain possessions at Cheafle.ⁱ During abbat Leofric's time Wlstan archbishop of York was buried at Ely: and Alfwin bishop of Elmham, who had been educated at Ely, resigned his bishoprick and returned to the monastery.^k Leofric is said to have died A.D. 1029.

LEOFSIN, or LEOFFIN as he is called in the History of Ely,^l succeeded Leofric. He was consecrated abbat, in the presence of King Canute, by Egelnoth archbishop of Canterbury, at Walewych: though not till some time after his appointment.

Thomas of Ely, whose work has been already quoted for numerous facts, informs us that Leofsin bestowed many ornaments upon the church.^m He likewise, with the king's consent, appointed particular estates for the sustenance of the church: obliging the tenants to bring in provisions in course, throughout the year; Shelforth supplying provisions for two weeks, Stapilford one week, Litolbyry two, Trippelawe two, Hauchestone one, Newton one, Meldeburne two, Grantedene two, Tostes one,

Cotenham one, Wyvelingham one, Dittone two, Hornyngesey two, Stewchewerch two, Botlesham two, Catenho four, Swafham three days, Spaldewyke two weeks, Somersham two, Bluntesham one, Colne one, Hertest one, Brenchestone one, Batelesdene two, Hecham two, Berkyng two, Nedyng one, Wederyngsete one, Bercham two, Pulham two, Thorpe and Derham two, Northwolde two, and Feltham two. Merham was assigned to carry the rents of the church from Norfolk, and to entertain the comers and goers to and from the monastery: and in case of any deficiency of these rents occurring, the failure was to be supplied from the estates in the Isle of Ely.ⁿ

The Liber Eliensis mentions several visits which Canute made to the monastery in this abbat's time.^o

Abbat Leofsine died in the second year of King Edward the Confessor, A.D. 1044; and was buried in the church. Bentham^p says he died November the 15th; the Obituary of Ely, quoted by Stevens, November 26th.^q

WILFRICUS, or WILFRIC, who is called the kinsman of King Edward the Confessor, was the next abbat: being promoted from the New Monastery of Winchester. Thomas of Ely says he was consecrated abbat by Stigand archbishop of Canterbury. Wilfric purchased for his monastery the manor of Bercham, for twenty-five marks of gold. At a later period of his administration, however, he conveyed away from the monastery to his brother Gudmund, and without the consent of the monks, several of the most valuable possessions of the church: a part of Marlham, with the court of the vill, and the manors of Lyvermere, Nachentune, Acholt, Bedenesdene, and Gerboldsham. The disgrace occasioned by his conduct is said to have led him first to retirement from the monastery, and afterwards to have brought on a sickness which closed his life. Gudmund, it appears, was too firmly fixed in the possessions which had been conveyed to him, to be made to quit upon his brother's death: and Thurstan, the succeeding abbat, and the convent, were necessitated to compound with Gudmund that he might hold them of the church during his life: and Hugh de Munford invading these estates, upon the Norman Conquest, they are said to have been never after recovered to the church.^r

Edward the Confessor, who had received the earliest part of his education in the monastery of Ely, appears to have been a great benefactor to the monks in the time of Wilfric: he gave them not only the village of Lakingehai, but an ample grant of privileges and immunities, procuring also a confirmation of them from the Pope.^s

Wilfric is said to have died in 1065; when Archbishop Stigand assuming authority over numerous bishopricks and abbies, which he bestowed on whom he pleased, among others seized upon the monastery of Ely, the abbacy of which, upon the suggestion of King Harold, he bestowed, in 1066, upon one

THURSTAN, a native of Wycheford in the Isle of Ely, who had been bred in the monastery from his childhood. Stigand, however, appears to have made no ill application of the church revenues, since he is recorded rather as a benefactor. He is stated to have given a office by turns; so as the abbat of Ely, for the time being, or some monk appointed by him, was to perform the office from Candlemas, four months yearly; and the other two abbats, four months each, to complete the year. This custom, it is said, obtained from the time of the restoration of the abbey, (perhaps not confirmed to the church of Ely, before this grant of King Etheldred,) and continued till the kingdom was subdued by the Normans, when the church was deprived of this privilege, and all its former honours."

^f Bentham, p. 89. Bentham, p. 88, speaking of the time of this abbat, informs us, that "during the reign of Edward surnamed the Martyr, his brother Ethelred, then very young, came with his mother the queen and several of the nobility to visit the church of Ely, on the invitation of Ethelwold bishop of Winchester; at which time they went in procession to the tomb of St. Etheldreda; and there the young prince, who is said to have had a great love and affection for the saint, promised, in the presence of all those who were there assembled, from thenceforth to become her devoted servant. In consequence of which vow, when he afterwards came to be king, he on several occasions manifested his kindness and regard to the church; and, as a particular mark of his favour, was pleased to grant that the church of Ely should hold and enjoy the office and dignity of chancellor in the king's court; the like he also granted to two other churches, namely St. Augustin's in Canterbury, and Glastonbury; thus dividing the chancellorship between the abbats of those three monasteries, who were to exercise the chasuble or vestment of inestimable workmanship to the church, which was afterwards taken away by King William the Conqueror, and laid up in the royal treasury at Winchester. He also made a figure of the Rood with Mary and John, of a large size, covered with silver, which remained to the time of Bishop Nigell.^a

In Abbat Thurstan's time the conquest of England was effected by William duke of Normandy. Not long after the battle of Hastings, Archbishop Stigand, being obnoxious to the conqueror, fled to the Isle of Ely; and the abbat of St. Albans, the bishop of Durham, and a great number both of the clergy and laity, to the amount of many thousands, among whom were the earls of Leicester, Warwick, Hereford, Suffolk, and Northumberland, from time to time, followed their example. Among these was Hereward, or Herward, the younger son of Leofric earl of Mercia, who was chosen for their general, and fortified the isle against the king.^b With the long protracted siege of the isle we have no concern here. William, being incensed at the obstinate resistance which he met with, caused all the property of the church without the isle to be confiscated, and divided the estates and farms among his officers. The monks, grieved to see the ill disposal of their goods, and having consulted together, repaired to the king at Warwick (Thomas of Ely says in the seventh year of their rebellion), made their submission, and paid a fine of a thousand marks for the restitution of the lands and liberties of their monastery. For the raising of which, they were obliged to take all that was of gold or silver in their church. "Propter quod totum quod in ecclesia ex auro et argento erat, viz. cruces, altaria, scrinia, textus, calices, patenas, pelves, fistulas, civos, scutellas aureas et argenteas; insuper imaginem S. Mariæ cum puero suo sedentem in trono mirabiliter fabricatam, quam Alsinus abbas fecerat de auro et argento; similiter imagines sanctorum Virginum multo ornatu auri et argenti; Monachi spoliaverunt, ad solvendam prædictam summam pecuniæ."^c

Abbat Thurstan's death is placed by Thomas of Ely in 1071: but Malmesbury speaks of him as present at a council in 1072;^d in the latter end of which year his death is placed by Bentham. The king hearing of the abbat's death, sent to Ely, and caused the best of every thing that was there in ornaments and moveable goods to be carried to the royal treasury; as also a considerable weight of gold and silver that had been found at Wynteworde, with which the monks had hoped to restore the vessels taken from the altar, and to have repaired the damages of the place. He also took away, as has been said before, the famous chasuble or vestment which Archbishop Stigand had given them for St. Etheldred, and placed it in his treasury at Winchester.^e

THEODEWYNUS, or THEODEWYN, a monk of Jumièges, well known in the court of Normandy, was appointed successor to Thurstan, but refused to accept the abbey till the king had restored all he had taken from it. The spoils being restored, he took possession of his government; but appears never to have been consecrated. Thomas of Ely mentions him as a great benefactor to the renewed ornaments of the church;^f and places his death in 1074. Wharton, however, notices Abbat Theodwyn as present at the Council of London A.D.

GODFREY, a monk of the monastery, the inseparable companion of Theodwyn, appears to have acted as procurator of the church for near seven years; advancing its interests no less than if he had been abbat. He is said to have prevailed upon the king to have all the possessions of the abbey recorded upon oath. Accordingly, A.D. 1080, the Liberty of the abbey of Ely was taken into examination, which had been fourteen years neglected by King William's prohibition: at which inquisition were present four abbats, and the sheriffs, and many approved knights, both Normans and English, of the four counties of Essex, Hertford, Huntingdon, and Bedford. The decision of which liberty was, that St. Etheldreda should possess her own from the beginning as was approved in the Charters of the kings Edgar, Ethelred, and Edward: and that the privileges of the place had been restored by the endeavours of holy men, and particularly of Ethelwold, and fully resumed from any secular power interfering. This decision was secured by the king's favour,^g that it might not be disturbed by any claims. Godfrey, it is added, caused such things as he found in the treasures of the church to be committed to writing.^h

Bentham thinks it is to the time of Godfrey's administration, that what is recorded of certain knights and gentlemen quartered on the monastery, and whose arms were afterwards set up in the refectory or great hall there, is to be referred. They appear to have been most of them, he says, gentlemen of the best families in the kingdom, and officers in the king's army, sent down by the king to be maintained, during the vacancy, at the charge of the abbey, till he could otherwise provide for them, or that he had occasion for their immediate service; and they had their refectations constantly in the common hall with the monks; with whom they lived in such perfect harmony, that when they were called away to go into Normandy, on the insurrection of Robert, the king's son, in the year 1077 or 1078, the monks were so well pleased with their company, that they could not part with them without regret; and when they departed, conducted them as far as Hadenham with solemn procession and singing; and there respectfully took leave of them.ⁱ

Godfrey, in 1081, was removed by King William, though without consecration, to the government of the abbey of Malmesbury, in Wiltshire.^k

SYMBEON prior of Winchester, and brother to Walkelin the bishop of that church, was appointed abbat of Ely in 1082. Stevens, quoting Thomas of Ely's History, says, that contrary to custom and the dignity of the place, and the king's precept, without the knowledge of the sons of the church, he received benediction from Remigius bishop of Lincoln. King Edward had decreed, and it was confirmed by Pope Victor, that the abbats of Ely should be ordained by any bishop they would, without subjection of obedience; the which immunity the preceding abbats made use of till his time.^l At his ordination, however, he obtained this condition, that the bishop should not claim this right against the next succeeding abbat. On his being reproached by the monks, it is added, for having thus unduly received benediction,

^l Four precepts which were issued by the king on this occasion are preserved in the Appendix to Bentham's Hist. of Ely. Numb. V. 6, 7, 8, 9. he obtained leave of the king to bring ten monks from Winchester, whom he placed in the different offices of the monastery.^a

It was in the time of this abbat that the Domesday Survey was compiled: whence it appears that the possessions of the abbey in Hertfordshire, in 1086, consisted of forty hides at Hatfield, five hides at Cheleselle, and four at Hadam; in Cambridgeshire, of eight hides at Stovicesworde, three hides in Weslai, eight hides and a half at Waratinge, nine hides forming the manor of Belesham, half a hide in Saham, five hides in Suafam, three hides and three virgates in Coeia, four hides and a half in Fuleberne, one hide in Teversham, the manor of Horningesie consisting of seven hides, one hide and a half in Wicheham, a half hide in Bercheham, a half hide in Badburham, two hides three virgates and a half in Pampesworde, ten acres detached in the same vill, seven hides and a half and two acres in Trepeclau, the manor of Havocestun consisting of eight hides and a half, one hide and a half in Herlestone, the manor of Escelforde consisting of nine hides and twenty-four acres, with two hides and a half and nine acres in the same village held by one Harduinus, the manor of Stapleforde consisting of ten hides, two hides and a half in Wadone, one virgate in Melrede held by Harduinus beside two hides and three virgates in the hand of the abbat, two hides and a virgate in Melleburne, half a virgate in Esceprid, three hides one virgate and twelve acres in Harduic, beside ten acres detached, the manor of Gratedene consisting of five hides, the manor of Wivelingham consisting of seven hides, fifteen acres in Hochinton, the manor of Epintone consisting of six hides and a half, the manor of Coteham consisting of ten hides, one hide and three virgates in Histone, the manor of Witesie comprising two hides, five hides and the manor of Dondinton, two hides and a half virgate in Cetriz, the manor of Litelport consisting of two hides and a half, a hide and a half in Stuntenei, one hide in Liteltdford, the manor of Stradham consisting of five hides, five hides in Wilbertone, the manor of Lindone comprising nine hides, two hides in Helle, three hides in Hadreham, the manor consisting of ten hides in Wisbece, with two fisheries, the manor of Ely consisting of ten hides, four hides including the manor of Duneham, three hides with the manor of Wiceford, three hides and a half including the manor of Winteworde, four hides and one virgate with the manor of Wiceham, and the manor of Sudtone consisting of five hides; in Huntingdonshire, of the manor of Colne consisting of six hides, six hides and a half in Bluntesham, eight hides including the manor of Sumer-sham, the manor and fifteen hides at Spaldvice, with four hides forming the manor of Parva Cateuorde; and in Essex, of the manor of Brocheshevot comprising three hides, three hides at Rodinges, the manor of Ratenduna comprising twenty hides, two hides and the manor of Abbat Symeon laid the foundation of a new church at Ely soon after his coming to the monastery;^c and made great additions to the abbey offices.

It was in this abbat's time, also, that forty soldiers, the exact number of knights'-fees held by the abbey, were ordered by King William the Conqueror to be kept in the island, and to be in readiness for service, at the expence of the church. Symeon applied to the king to be eased from this burthen by the payment of a commutation, but was refused. The soldiers, who were principally the tenants and dependants of the monastery, at first received their daily allowance of victuals, and stipends, from the cellarer of the abbey:^d but, afterwards, this method of providing for them being found both inconvenient and chargeable, certain estates were granted to be held of the church, the tenure of which was the finding and equipping such a military force as was equivalent to the service required.

King William Rufus increased the demand from forty to eighty soldiers. This, with other oppressions from the king, appears to have been a great affliction on the abbat, already worn with age and infirmities. Having languished several years, he died November 20th, A.D. 1093, in the hundredth year of his age.^d

RICHARD, who succeeded him, and was the last Abbat, was not appointed till the accession of King Henry the First, A.D. 1100. He was by birth a Norman, and by Thomas of Ely is called the son of Gilbert earl of Ewe, but Bentham says he was Gilbert's grandson. For thirty years he lived as a monk in the abbey of Bec in Normandy; eminent for his learning in philosophy and divinity.

Robert bishop of Lincoln claimed the right of giving him the benediction at Ely, in consequence of the predecessor of Abbat Richard having received it from Remigius: but Richard resisting the claim, he fell under the king's displeasure during the contest. Thomas of Ely states that Bishop Robert brought three singular charges against Richard before the king; "sc. quòd nimis pompaticè ad curiam regis accessit; quòd per omnia præceptis regis noluit obedire: quòd quandam minimum ejus sibi conviciantem turpiter de domo suâ ejecit:" in consequence of which he was deprived of his office, the king demanding the surrender of the abbat's pastoral staff. The abbat, appealing against his sentence to the court of Rome, refused the delivery of his crozier, and with the consent of his monks deposited it in the abbey church. Having proceeded to Rome and had an interview with Pope Paschal, he was at last by apostolical authority restored; and a reconciliation having been effected before his return to England,^e the king not

^c The greatest part of the old conventual church, however, still exists, though filled up with prebendal houses. "This building," say the authors of the new Magna Britannia, "is undoubtedly of as early a date as the reign of King Edgar, in the tenth century; and indeed there is reason to suppose, that at least some parts of it are remains of the original edifice, erected by St. Etheldreda, the foundress of the monastery, in the latter part of the seventh century. This church was an oblong building consisting of a nave and choir, both of them with side aisles, from which they were separated by round and octagonal pillars alternately placed, and circular arches. The east end of the building is supposed to have been originally semicircular; but a chapel appears to have been afterwards added there, which is now converted into a house for one of the prebendaries." Magn. Brit. Cambridgeshire, pp. 48, 49.

minum suum cunctis oneri esse atque despectui, quandam ruris partem in victum sibi usurpavit de jure ecclesiæ. Multi etiam alii plura rapuerunt; quorum posteri usque in hunc diem attestantur se tenere de dono Symeonis abbatis. Tandem vero abbas secum excogitat suorum retundere superbiam. Convocavit ad se judices regni; ut ipsi loco suo res ecclesiæ protegerent adversus inimicos. Moxque ingressi thesauros inquirunt; multos contumeliis afficiunt; monachisque annonam licet brevem constituunt; unoquoque sc. anno dari ad opus fratrum ad vestimenta eorum lxx. libras, ad coquinam eorum lx. libras, ad sagimen ducentos porcios, qui in curiâ pascuntur, et totum caseum et butirum, excepto hoc, quod est in firmâ præpositorum; et unaquaque ebdomadâ vi. treyas frumenti, et x. treyas brasei, ad luminaria monasterii, præsentem æcclesiam cum sepulturâ villæ, et totum quicquid ad S. ^e "A.D. 1103. Anselmus archiepiscopus post multas injurias et contumelias quas passus est, rogatu regis perrexit Romam sicut ei et regi convenit, habens secum Willelmum Wintoniensem electum, et abbates depositos Richardum Elyensem et Aldwinum Ramesiensem. Quibus Romam venientibus, contigit Anselmum quædam ibi contra regem eloqui in quibus Ricardum sibi suffragaturum testimabat. Ricardus vero pro rege agens omnes archiepiscopi calumpnias refellebat. Cujus only received him kindly, but again gave him investiture.

Being now left at leisure, abbat Richard applied himself to the continuing the building of the new church begun by his predecessor. The authors of the new Magna Britannia attribute to him the two transepts of the cathedral, apparently the oldest parts now existing of that edifice.^a

In 1106, the eastern parts of the church being finished and made convenient for the performance of divine service, abbat Richard determined on the translation of the bodies of St. Etheldreda, St. Sexburga, St. Ermenilda, and St. Withburga, the former abbesses, from the old into the new church. The ceremony of the translation is minutely detailed by Thomas of Ely.^b

The bishop of Lincoln still using every means to bring the abbey of Ely under the jurisdiction of his see, abbat Richard privately obtained the king's consent that Ely might itself be converted into a bishoprick. Messengers were accordingly dispatched to Rome to obtain the consent of the pope: but Richard dying before their return, the change was left to be effected by his successor.

Abbat Richard died in the seventh year of his administration, June 16th, A.D. 1107.

After the death of Richard Hervey bishop of Bangor in Wales, at that time residing at the English court, was sent down by the king to take upon him the administration of the abbey till another abbat should be appointed. Whilst residing at Ely he ingratiated himself, by his courteous behaviour, with the monks; and revived the project of erecting the abbey into a bishoprick: entering at the same time into a negotiation with Robert bishop of Lincoln, respecting the giving up of that part of the Lincoln jurisdiction which belonged to the county of Cambridge; and for which the manor of Spaldwick in Huntingdonshire was to be the compensation. Soon after which the king ordered the affair of the new bishoprick to be laid before the Council assembled at London, in Whitsuntide, A.D. 1108. Henry, it is added, was in some degree influenced in countenancing the measure by political motives: the situation of the Isle of Ely being strongly fortified by nature, and capable of being turned to the disadvantage of the government; which danger he apprehended might in some degree be guarded against by dividing the revenues, and placing a bishop in the abbey.^c

Anselm's letter to Pope Paschal the Second, in consequence of the determination of the Council, with several other instruments relating to the erection of the bishoprick, will be found among the Charters subjoined to this account.^d Two or three more may be seen in the Appendix to Bentham's History.

the change of the abbey into a bishoprick, Bentham observes, the bishop's authority did not wholly cease; for though the immediate government of the monks devolved on the Prior, yet the bishop in all respects was still continued as their abbat or superior, as appears by the letter of Archbishop Lanfranc to the prior of Canterbury, which is prefixed to his Constitutions; his place in the church was the first stall on the right hand, the same that the abbats had previously used; he presided in the chapter-house, and in all their public assemblies, whenever he thought proper; he still retained the power of appointing and displacing several of the chief officers of the monastery, and the power of prescribing further rules and ordinances for their behaviour.^f

Bishop Hervey procured from the king a general charter, confirming the liberties and privileges of his church:^g he recovered the manor of Hadham in Hertfordshire from Ranulf bishop of Durham, who had dis-seised the church of it in the reign of King William Rufus: and procured a charter for a fair at Ely on St. Etheldreda's Anniversary.^h He also purchased an exemption for some of the lands of his church which were subject to the service of castle-guard in the king's castle at Norwich:ⁱ and obtained the patronage of the nunnery of Chateris.^k His charter whereby he divided the possessions of the bishop from those of the monks will be hereafter given.^l He died Aug. 30th, A.D. 1131.^m Bentham says, he discharged himself and his successors from any obligation to support, build, or repair the fabric of the church, or any part thereof; leaving it entirely to the care of the monks, to be supported and maintained; but gave up to it all the offerings and oblations made at the several altars in it.ⁿ

NIGELLUS was made bishop of Ely A.D. 1133: the king having kept the temporalities of the church in his possession nearly two years. Nigellus was at that time the king's treasurer, and even after the king's death, in 1135, he appears to have retained that office for a short time under King Stephen. In 1139, having built a castle at Ely, he espoused the cause of the empress Matilda. During the struggle between Stephen and the empress, he first lost, and afterwards recovered the Isle of Ely, finally making his peace with the king. In the reign of Henry II. he was appointed a baron of the Exchequer. He died May 30th, 1169.^o

GEOFFREY RIDEL was elected bishop, by the prior and convent, May 1st, 1173, after a vacancy of near four years. He was enthroned on the day of the Ascension that year, though not consecrated till the year following.^p In 1179 he became one of the king's justices itinerant: and in the same year procured a bull of confirmation for the church from Pope Alexander III. He repaired St. Etheldreda's shrine, added different vestments and ornaments to those in use, and carried on the new work and tower at the west end of the church almost to the top.^q He died August 21, 1189.

elected bishop A.D. 1190.^a Bentham says Sept. 15th, 1189.^b On the departure of King Richard I. for the Holy Land, he became chief-justice of the southern part of England, and Protector of the Realm. Meeting with great opposition from John earl of Moreton, the king's brother, he was at last necessitated to retire into Normandy, waiting the return of King Richard; and so far satisfied that monarch of his innocence that he was restored to favour. He died in 1197, while on an embassy to the pope, at Poitiers: his body being buried at the abbey of Pymy or Pinu, and his heart only brought to Ely.^c

EUSTACHIUS, dean of Sarum, succeeded Longchamp; being elected bishop at Walderoil in Normandy, whither the king had summoned the prior and convent of Ely for that purpose. He was consecrated March 8th, 1198.^d The monk of Ely, already quoted, enumerates the donations which he bestowed upon the church: and adds, that he built what is called the Galilee at the west end.^e He gave the church of Stencheworthe to the monks "in recompensationem tallagii consueti per prioratum;" and the church of Ympyngton, "ad augmentationem librorum."^f On the death of Eustachius, 2 non. Octob. 1215,^g Geoffrey de Burgh, archdeacon of Norwich, was elected bishop; but the monks revoking the election before they had published it, chose Robert of York to be the successor of Eustachius, who held the bishoprick without consecration near five years.^h

JOHN DE FONTIBUS or FOUNTAINS was, in fact, the real successor of Eustachius. He had been abbat of Fountains in Yorkshire, and was consecrated by Stephen archbishop of Canterbury March 8th, 1220, and enthroned in his cathedral church March 20th.ⁱ The king's assent to his election had been given on the 2d of January preceding.^k He died at Dounham May 6th; 1225, and was buried near the altar of St. Andrew in his cathedral. Among his donations of ornaments to the church was a pastoral staff. He gave the tithes of Hadham to the monks for the celebration of his anniversary: and he likewise gave the church of Wycheford to the monks, and confirmed that of Melrede which had been before given by Eustachius, for the maintenance of hospitality.^l

GEFFREY DE BURGO or BURGH, archdeacon of Norwich, and brother to Hubert the king's justiciary, was the next bishop.^m He was consecrated on the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul, 1225.ⁿ He held the bishoprick three years, six months, and two days, dying on the 16th of the kal. of January, 1228. He was buried on the north side of the choir. Beside different ornaments, he gave to the monks a hundred acres of land in Bluntesham,^o ordering his anniversary to be celebrated like that of Bishop William. He gave also two hundred acres of marsh land at Wysbech "ad augmentationem prioratus;" the church of St. Andrew at Cambridge to the sacrist's office; and gilded and added much to the ornaments of St. Etheldreda's shrine.^p

HUGH NORTHWOLDE, abbat of St. Edmunds, was consecrated bishop on the fourth of the ides of June, 1229.^q After he was made bishop he entered into public employments, and was sent ambassador to conclude the treaty of marriage between the king and Eleanor the second daughter of Raymond earl of Provence. He appears to have exceeded all his predecessors in munificence, in carrying on the building of the new church at Ely toward completion. In 1235 he began the foundation of that part of the cathedral at the east end called the Presbytery, which he was seventeen years in perfecting, and on which he expended 5400*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* "præter robas."^r He also finished the great western tower with a lofty spire of timber covered with lead:^s this spire was taken down in the reign of Henry the Sixth, when the tower was raised with stone work about sixty-four feet higher, and put into the present form.^t Bishop Northwolde also made large additions to the episcopal palace;^u and built manor houses in Dittoun, Schipdam, and other places belonging to the see.^x

On the 15th of the kalends of October, 1252, Bishop Northwolde having finished the presbytery, the whole church of Ely was dedicated with great solemnity to the honour of St. Mary, St. Peter, and St. Etheldreda, in the presence of the king, Prince Edward his son, and many of the nobility and prelates.^y

Bishop Northwolde died on the 8th of the ides of August, 1254;^z and was buried in the presbytery, to which he had, on its completion, transferred the reliques of St. Etheldreda, St. Withburga, St. Sexburga, St. Ermenilda, and St. Alban.^{aa} He appropriated the church of Wycheham to the monks for clothing; and land in Berkyng to the value of ten marks for the celebration of his anniversary.^{ab}

WILLIAM DE KILKENNY, or KIRKENNY, as he is elsewhere called, the king's chancellor, was elected bishop by the convent about the middle of October 1254, and was consecrated at Boloyses, or Beleyse, in Saxony, by Archbishop Boniface, on the 18th of the kal. of September 1255.^{ac} In the same year with his consecration he went on an embassy to Spain,^{ad} where he died, at Sugho, on the 11th of the kalends of October 1256: his heart only being brought to Ely, where it was interred near the altar of St. Andrew.^a

He appropriated to the monks the churches of Meldeburne and Swafham; and left two hundred marks to found a chantry in the cathedral for two priests.^b

HUGH DE BALSAM was the next bishop; consecrated by the pope October 14th, 1257.^c Upon the death of William de Kilkenny, the king issued his letters to the monks of Ely to make choice of Henry de Wengham, his chancellor, for their bishop; but they preferring Hugh de Balsam or Belesale their sub-prior, fixed their choice upon him: on which account the temporalities of the bishoprick were granted by the king to John Walerann, and great depredations were committed in consequence upon the revenues of the see. Hugh de Balsam made his appeal to Rome, where, upon a personal appearance, his election was confirmed by Pope Alexander IV.,^d and he took quiet possession of the see.

After his return from Rome in 1258 he is said to have sued the master of the Knights Templars for the right of hostillage in the New Temple, which had been enjoyed by his predecessors Hugh Northwolde, and William de Kilkenny: the right appears to have been extensive, inasmuch as the damages were laid at two hundred pounds, and was finally recovered.^e

He died at Dodyngton on the 16th of the kalends of July, 1286: his body being buried before the high altar of the cathedral, and his heart near the altar of St. Martin.

Bentham informs us that he purchased for himself and his successors bishops of Ely, the manor of Tyd, which he annexed to the see. He also purchased the patronage of the churches of Beckswell in Norfolk, and Hinton and Conington in his own diocese, which he likewise settled on his successors in recompence for three churches belonging to his see which he had appropriated; namely, Wisebech and Foxton to the use of the convent of Ely, and Triplow which he had assigned to his scholars residing at Cambridge.^f

JOHN DE KIRKEBY, archdeacon of Coventry, and the king's treasurer, was elected bishop on the 7th of the kalends of August 1286; the licence for proceeding to the election having been obtained from the king at Paris.^g Before his advancement to the see of Ely he had been elected bishop of Rochester A.D. 1283.^h By his will he left to his successors a messuage and nine cottages situated in the suburbs of London in Holbourn, which messuage became thenceforth the capital mansion of the bishops of Ely.ⁱ

WILLIAM DE LUDA was consecrated bishop A.D. 1290.^k He had previously held the deanery of St. Martin le Grand, and the archdeaconry of Durham; and had also the offices of chamberlain, treasurer, and keeper of the wardrobe to the king.^l He died, according to one account, on March 25th, but according to other authorities on March 27th, 1298, and was buried in the presbytery at Ely, nigh the entrance into the old chapel of St. Mary.^m

On the death of William de Luda, the king's officers seized not only the temporalities of the bishoprick, but also the revenues of the priory. On which occasion the prior and convent, rather than be subject to such inconvenience for the future, by a fine of a thousand marks, obtained a charter from the king, of such a total separation of the priory from the bishoprick, as should exempt it from such seizure in any future vacancy of the see.ⁿ

The monk of Ely, who has been so frequently quoted, gives the particulars of the election which was proceeded on by the convent on Luda's death. The greater part of the chapter fixed on John Saleman, the prior; but the remainder chose John de Langton, the king's treasurer. After an appeal to Rome, the convent refusing to nominate one of the exempt abbats recommended by the pope, his holiness translated

RALPH DE WALPOLE from the see of Norwich to Ely July 15th, 1299.^o He died March 20th, 1302: and was buried in his cathedral before the high altar.^p

ROBERT DE ORFORD, prior of the convent of Ely, was elected bishop, "per viam compromissi," on the 18th of the kalends of May, 1302.^q Archbishop Winchelsea refusing to confirm the election, the convent appealed to the court of Rome, when the election was confirmed by Pope Boniface, and the bishop consecrated. His good deeds to the convent were principally confined to vestments, ornaments, and books; though Bentham says he confirmed all the grants of his predecessors by a charter.^r He died Jan. 21st, 1310.

JOHN DE KETENE was elected bishop March 10th, 1310, but was not consecrated till Sept. 6th following.^s He died March 14th, 1316, and was buried in his cathedral near the high altar.

JOHN HOTHAM or HOTHUM, prebendary of York, and chancellor of the king's exchequer, was elected bishop 11 kal. August, 1316, "quasi per inspirationem Spiritus Sancti."^t

The chapel of St. Mary, now Trinity Church, was begun in the time of this bishop by John de Wisbech, one of the monks, at the charge of the convent, A.D. 1321. A short time after which, viz. in 1322, the old tower of the church falling suddenly down, the choir which was under it was ruined. The octagon tower which still exists arose upon its site, at the expence of 2406*l.* 6*s.* 11*d.*:^u the bishop at the same time taking upon himself to complete the presbytery at his own expence.

Bishop Hotham died Jan. 14th, 1337, and was buried behind the altar of the choir.^x

SIMON DE MONTACUTE was translated from the see of Worcester to Ely in the year of Bishop Hotham's death; the king and the pope over-ruling the convent, who had made choice of John de Crandene or Crauden their prior.^y Bentham says, that during his episcopate there were several magnificent works carrying on relating to the cathedral church, namely, St. Mary's chapel, which had been begun in 1321, but not finished till 1349. The dome and lantern begun in 1322, and completed in 1343; and the new choir, which was begun to be erected in 1338. He was a prelate liberal in his contribution to these works; but especially to the chapel of St. Mary, on which he expended very large sums of money, and intended to have finished it, but did not live to see that design completed.^z He died June 20, 1345, according to Bentham; but, according to Wharton's Anglia Sacra, in 1344.

THOMAS DE INSULA, or L'ISLE, prior of Winchester, was the next bishop; the pope superseding the choice of the convent, which had been fixed on Alan de Walsingham their prior. There is little in the history of this bishop immediately connected with the church of Ely. Wharton gives a long account of the difference between him and the Lady Blanch Wake; the substance of which is incorporated in the account of his life in ^x Mr. Cole, in his MSS. now in the British Museum, vol. xii. p. 234, has preserved an imperfect impression of this bishop's seal, appendant to an indulgence granted by him at Holeburn 5 id. Febr. 1322, to the benefactors to the gild of our Lady in Cambridge, now making a part of Corpus Christi College. In vol. xxvii. of the same manuscripts this seal is described to be of an oblong form, with the figure of the bishop mitred, and a crozier in his left hand, giving the benediction with his right. On each side of him a shield; on the right the see of Ely, and on the left the three lions of England, and under his feet his own arms, viz. Barry of ten, on a canton, a martlet; round the seal SIGILL DEI OPI . ELYENSIS.

Bentham's history of the cathedral.^a He died at Avignon June 23, 1361. Upon his death the pope, by provision, declared

REGINALD BRIAN bishop, who at that time held the see of Worcester: but he dying of the plague December 10th, 1361, before his translation was completed, the convent proceeded to the election of John Bockingham, keeper of the privy seal and dean of Litchfield; but the pope, paying no regard to their election, by another provision, appointed

SIMON LANGHAM bishop, then abbat of Westminster and treasurer of England; who was accordingly consecrated March 20th, 1362. During the time of this bishop, the parochial church of St. Cross, which the convent had lately built, was consecrated.^b In 1366 Bishop Langham was translated to the see of Canterbury.

JOHN BARNET was translated from the see of Bath and Wells to Ely by Pope Urban the Fifth, December the 15th, 1366.^c The monk of Ely, whose History is printed in Anglia Sacra, says he made five windows in the presbytery. He died at Hatfield June 7th, 1373.

On the death of Bishop Barnet the prior and convent elected Henry de Wakefeld, the treasurer of the king's household, to the see, although the king himself had written to them in favour of John Woderoue, his confessor. The pope, however, conferred the bishoprick, by provision, upon

THOMAS ARUNDEL, who was consecrated at Otford in Kent by the archbishop of Canterbury on the 5th of the ides of April 1374. He made several splendid gifts in ornaments and reliques to the church of Ely, whence, having presided fourteen years, five months, and eighteen days, he was translated, in 1388, to the see of York, and thence, in 1396, to Canterbury. He died Feb. 19th, 1414.^d He contributed much to the buildings of the episcopal palace in Holbourn.

JOHN DE FORDHAM was translated from the see of Durham to Ely by Pope Boniface on the 5th of the kalends of October 1388.^e He died at Downham Nov. 19th, 1425. On the death of Fordham the king recommended to the convent for election his confessor, William Alnwick or Aunewyke, doctor of laws; but the convent chose Peter Ely, their prior. The pope, however, translated PHILLIP MORGAN, LL.D., from the see of Worcester, by his bull dated Feb. 27, 1425, who accordingly took possession of the bishoprick. He died Oct. 25th, 1435.

LUDOWICK LUSCHBURG, or DE LUXEMBURGH, was elected bishop October 19th, 1436, after great clashing of interests between the convent and the king. He had united his fortunes in France, his native country, with those of King Henry the Sixth, where, in 1436, he had been appointed to the archbishoprick of Rouen. In 1439 he was advanced to the cardinalate by Pope Eugenius the Fourth; and died at Hatfield September 18th, 1443.^f

THOMAS BOURCHIER was translated from the see of Worcester to Ely March 12th, 1443, and in 1454 was removed to the see of Canterbury. At his death he is said to have given a hundred marks to the church of Ely toward the reparation of the campanile tower.^g In 1464 he was made a cardinal of the church of Rome; and died at Knole in Kent March 30th, 1486.

WILLIAM GREY, D.D., was appointed bishop by the pope's provisionary bull June 21, 1454. He was a benefactor to the repairs of the church, and ornamented the presbytery. He died August 4th, 1478.^h

JOHN MORTON, LL.D., was elected bishop by the convent on the 8th of August following. He was a man of great eminence for learning; and though one of the firmest and most faithful adherents of King Henry the Sixth, was afterwards so esteemed for his integrity by King Edward the Fourth, that he became one of the executors to that monarch's will. His promotions were numerous, almost beyond example. In 1486 he succeeded Cardinal Bouchier in the see of Canterbury. In 1487 was appointed lord chancellor of England; and was created a cardinal of the church of Rome in 1493. He died in the month of September 1500. Bentham informs us that while bishop of Ely he executed a work of very large expense and singular utility for draining the fens and extending navigation, by that cut of forty feet in breadth and four in depth from Wisbech to Peterborough, which is called New Leame, or Morton's Leame, being in course twelve miles long; he also continued the same through Wisbech, and by other cuts made a new outfall to the sea. He also rebuilt and beautified the bishop's palace at Hatfield, and rebuilt the castle of Wisbech. In his will, he left his episcopal mitre and a cross of silver weighing two hundred and twenty five ounces to the church of Ely.ⁱ

JOHN ALCOCK was translated from the see of Worcester to Ely in 1486. He was a great benefactor to the buildings, and erected a sumptuous chapel at the east end of the north aisle of the presbytery of his cathedral church: his rebus, which he appears to have placed on all the buildings he erected, may be also seen upon his tomb. He founded Jesus College in Cambridge; and died Oct. 1, 1500.^k

RICHARD REDMAN, D.D., was translated from the see of Exeter to Ely by papal provision; but had not the temporalities restored to him till September 26th, 1501.^l While bishop of St. Asaph, about 1490, he expended large sums in the repair of that cathedral, which might possibly have prevented him from displaying any great munificence at Ely. He died at his palace in Holbourn August 24th, 1505.

JAMES STANLEY, D.D., son of the earl of Derby, and archdeacon of Richmond, was the next bishop; appointed by the pope's bull of provision dated July 17th, 1506. He was a benefactor to Jesus College Cambridge, and to the collegiate church of Manchester, where he died March 22d, 1515.

NICHOLAS WEST, LL.D., was consecrated bishop of Ely Oct. 7th, 1515,^m being at that time in great favour with King Henry the Eighth. He was a great friend to Queen Katherine in the business of the divorce; the uneasiness attendant on which, in addition to bodily infirmities, is supposed to have hastened his end. He died in the month of April, 1533.

THOMAS GOODRICH, D.D., was elected bishop March 13th, 1533, and installed May 2d, 1534.ⁿ He was a zealous forwarder of the reformation. The particulars of his visitation of the convent of Ely in 1534 are preserved in the episcopal register.^o He died at Somersham May 10th, 1554.

THOMAS THIRLBY, LL.D., has been already spoken of as bishop of Westminster. He received the temporalities of the diocese of Ely Sept. 15th, 1554; and was afterwards sent ambassador to Rome. He is said to have shed tears when he performed the task imposed upon him of degrading Cranmer preparatory to his being burnt. Bentham says, "Bishop Thirlby must be reckoned one of the most considerable benefactors to his see of Ely; for having by his interest procured from the crown the best and most valuable part of the patronage it at present enjoys, namely, a grant of the nomination and advowson of the eight prebends in his cathedral church to himself and successors for ever." He was deprived soon after Queen Elizabeth's first parliament, and committed to the Tower; but was afterwards allowed to live in Lambeth palace under the care of Archbishop Parker. He died there August 26th, 1570.

RICHARD COX, D.D., the next bishop, has been before spoken of among the Deans of Westminster. He was elected bishop of Ely July 28th, and was consecrated Decemb. 21, 1559.^a He had been archdeacon of Ely in 1540, and was made the first prebendary on the new foundation of the cathedral by King Henry the Eighth, in 1541. His exile in Germany during the reign of Mary has been already noticed. Queen Elizabeth first intended him, and had even nominated him, for the see of Norwich. Although the coadjutor of Parker and Grindall, he afterwards did not entirely please the queen in matters of religion; since he opposed her retaining the crucifix and lights on the altar of the Chapel Royal, and defended the marriage of the clergy. Toward the middle of her reign he suffered much persecution from some of her courtiers. In 1574, Sir Christopher Hatton endeavoured to wrest Ely House in Holborn from him; to preserve which he was forced into a Chancery suit, which was not finished at the time of his death: and in 1575, the Lord North attempted to oblige him to part with Somersham, one of the best manors belonging to the see, with Downham park.^b Harassed and tormented, in 1577 he offered to resign his bishoprick, which the queen refused. Two years after, the lord treasurer Burleigh, at the bishop's earnest desire, obtained leave of the queen for him to resign; and in February 1579-80, upon the bishop's repeated desires, forms of resignation were actually drawn up.^c But the court could not find any divine of note who would take the bishoprick on their terms, of surrendering up the best manors belonging to it. The first offer of it was made to Freak bishop of Norwich; and on his refusal, it was proffered to several others; but the conditions appeared so ignominious that they all rejected it; by which means Bishop Cox enjoyed it till his death, July 22d, 1581.^d He was buried in the presbytery of his cathedral church.

MARTIN HETON, D.D., was elected bishop Dec. 28th, 1599, the bishoprick having remained vacant eighteen years; and the administration thereof having been supplied by commissioners. Bentham says, it appears by a deed indented, dated June 10th, 1600, 42 Eliz. and inrolled in Chancery, that divers ancient manors and estates, of the clear yearly value of 1132*l.* 3*s.* 9¼*d.* and half a farthing, were then alienated from the see of Ely, and by this bishop, with the consent of the dean and chapter, conveyed to the queen, her heirs and successors, for ever: and in recompence and satisfaction for the same, the queen granted and conveyed to the bishop and his successors certain other estates, consisting chiefly of parsonages impropriate and other hereditaments, to the amount of 1144*l.* 19*s.* 7½*d.* yearly value. The lands alienated were, the manor and soke of Somersham, with the demesne lands, the park, meadows, pastures, and free chases thereto belonging, the manors of Fenton, Bluntisham, Colne, Erith, and Pidley, in the county of Huntingdon; the manor of Fen-Ditton, the mill at Sturbridge, the water-mills in the town of Cambridge, Houell's

^c The original of the bishop's requests on this occasion is still preserved among the Lansdowne manuscripts in the British Museum, vol. xxviii. p. 82, signed with his own hand. The pension he is stated to have required was two hundred pounds.

Requests of the Bishoppe of Elye upon his resignacion of his Bishopricke.

LANCELOT ANDREWES, D.D., was elected bishop Sept. 22, 1609. Of him also an account has been already given among the deans of Westminster.^f He is said to have laid out 2000*l.* in the repairs of Ely House in Holborn, the palace at Ely, Downham manor, and Wisbech castle. In 1619 he was translated to the bishoprick of Winchester.

NICHOLAS FELTON, D.D., was translated from the see of Bristol to Ely March 2d, 1619:^g having been intermediately nominated to the see of Litchfield and Coventry. He died Oct. 5th, 1626.

JOHN BUCKERIDGE, D.D., was translated from the see of Rochester to Ely April 17, 1628. He died May 23, 1631.

FRANCIS WHITE, D.D., was translated from Norwich to Ely Nov. 15th, 1631: having previously been possessed of the bishoprick of Carlisle. He died in the beginning of 1638.

MATTHEW WREN, D.D., was also translated from Norwich to Ely April 24th following. At Ely he had been before chaplain to Bishop Andrewes. The best account of his life will be found in his descendant's Parentalia. He died April 24th, 1667.

BENJAMIN LANEY, D.D., was translated from the bishoprick of Lincoln to Ely June 12, 1667. Bentham informs us that he rebuilt a large portion of the episcopal palace at Ely. He died Jan. 24th, 1674-5.

PETER GUNNING, D.D., was translated from Chichester to Ely Feb. 13th, 1674-5. His life will be found at large in Bentham's History, with those of the other bishops: but it adds nothing to the particular illustration of Ely. He died July 6th, 1684, and was buried in the south aisle of the presbytery. Bentham says, that some time before his death he had an intention of making a new choir to his cathedral church of Ely at his own expense; but that design not taking effect, he left by his will 300*l.* for new paving the choir.

FRANCIS TURNER, D.D., was translated from the see of Rochester to Ely Aug. 23, 1684. He was one of the seven bishops who, in 1688, were committed to the Tower. He was deprived of his bishoprick in 1690, for refusing to take the oaths: and died Nov. 2, 1700.

SIMON PATRICK, D.D., bishop of Chichester, was nominated to the see of Ely April 23, 1691, and elected June 10th following. In his time the law-suit with the

the Third left unto yt. And yet the said Thirlby was bound by othe to leave yt to the sea. For the recoverye whercof the B. that now is spent a m. marks in sute, and obteyned nothing, by reason Byshopp Thirlby died in pryson.

"And because he never had any penny for dilapidacions of Bishoppe Thirlbye his predecessor, who in all the tyme of his bishopricke never bestowed any thinge upon his houses, banks, bridges, draines, or cawses, so that he was forced at his first entrey to bestow xliij^{xxv} upon Waldersey banke, for the preservation of the whole countrey besides other things left in great decay to his great cost: yet nevertheless he is content to allow his successor one hundred pounds in implements which he hath made needfull for every house.

"Item that the pencion may be payd quarterly in the mancion house at Donington.

JOHN MOORE, D.D., was translated from Norwich to Ely July 31, 1707. He sat bishop here exactly seven years, and died at Ely House in Holborn July 31, 1714. His library was purchased by King George the First, and presented to the university of Cambridge.

WILLIAM FLEETWOOD, D.D., was translated from the bishoprick of St. Asaph to Ely Dec. 18, 1714. He died Aug. 4th, 1723, at Tottenham in Middlesex: but was buried in the presbytery of his cathedral.

THOMAS GREENE, D.D., was translated from Norwich to Ely Sept. 24, 1723. He died at Ely House in Holborn May 18th, 1738.

ROBERT BUTTS, D.D., succeeded to the bishoprick in 1738: being likewise translated from Norwich. He died Jan. 26th, 1748.

SIR THOMAS GOOCH, Bart. D.D., another bishop of Norwich, was translated to Ely in 1748. He died at Ely House in Holborn Feb. 14th, 1754.

MATTHEW MAWSON, D.D., having held successively the bishopricks of Gloucester, Landaff, and Chichester, was finally translated to Ely, and confirmed bishop March 15th, 1754. His successors have been much indebted to him for his pains in draining the levels with which the city of Ely is environed. He contributed greatly also toward the charges of removing the choir to the east end of the cathedral, preparatory to the alterations made by Mr. Essex. He died at his house in Kensington Square Nov. 23, 1770.

EDMUND KEENE, D.D., was translated from the see of Chester to Ely in January 1771. He was the son of Mr. Charles Keene, a merchant of Lynn Regis in Norfolk, and brother to Sir Benjamin Keene, ambassador in Spain. He was admitted of Caius college Cambridge in 1730; made fellow of Peter House in 1739; master of Peter House, 1748; and bishop of Chester, 1752. He died July 6th, 1781.

JAMES YORKE, D.D., the youngest son of the chancellor who has been named the great Lord Hardwicke, was translated from the bishoprick of Gloucester to Ely in September 1781. He had previously been dean of Lincoln and bishop of St. David's. He died Aug. 26th, 1808.

THOMAS DAMPIER, D.D., was translated from the see of Rochester to Ely Sept. 13, 1808. He received his education at Eton, and King's college Cambridge; vicar of Bexley in Kent, 1771, and afterwards master of Sherborn hospital; prebendary of Durham, 1782; dean of Rochester, 1782; and bishop in 1802. He died May 13th, 1812.

BOWYER EDWARD SPARKE, D.D., was translated from the see of Chester to Ely in 1812. He is the present bishop, May 20th, 1816.

PRIORS OF ELY.

VINCENT, or VINCENTIUS, was the first prior of Ely. He died in the time of Hervey the first bishop.^b

HENRY was his successor. According to the Anglia Sacra, he died between the years 1131 and 1133:^c but Bentham says, he was a witness with his successor to an account taken of the treasures and ornaments of the church in 1134.^d

WILLIAM was appointed prior by Bishop Nigell in 1133.^e

TOMBERT, or COMBERTUS, is said to have presided between 1144 and 1154.^f Bentham calls him Tombert, or THEMBERT; and says he improved the buildings of the monastery, and added some ornaments to the church.^g

ALEXANDER became prior in 1154, and died before the year 1169.^h He assisted in the translation of the bones of different benefactors from the old church to the new cathedral.ⁱ

SOLOMON, who had been præcentor of the church, according to Bentham, occurs as prior in 1163: he was also present at the consecration of Geoffrey Ridel as bishop of Ely in 1174.^k In 1177 he became abbat of Thorney.^l His successor was

RICHARD, the sub-prior of the monastery; who, among other pieces, wrote a history of the church.^m Bale, who mentions him, appears to have mistaken the time in which he lived. Bentham assures us, from one of the Cotton manuscripts, that he was living after the feast of St. Andrew, 1189.ⁿ

ROBERT DE LONGCHAMP, or LONGFIELD, brother to William Longchamp bishop of Ely, occurs prior in 1194. In 1197 he became abbat of St. Mary York: and was succeeded as prior here by JOHN DE STRATFELD, or STRAGET,^o whom Bentham calls John de Strateshete. He appears to have been the first prior appointed by election: his predecessors having been named by the respective bishops.

HUGH occurs prior in the years 1200 and 1206.^p

ROGER, according to the Anglia Sacra, was elected prior in the time of Bishop John de Fontibus: though Bentham, who calls him ROGER DE BRIGHAM, says sometime before 1215, in the time of Bishop Eustace. He survived Bishop Geoffrey de Burgh but a few weeks only, in consequence of which, the bishoprick and priorate being both vacant together, the temporalities of both were seized by the king's officers: but the revenues of the latter were presently restored.^q

The Anglia Sacra mentions GEFFREY BRIGHAM as succeeding to the priorate after 1229: but Bentham names one

RALPH as being confirmed prior about March 25th that year:^r who is also said to occur in 1235.

WALTER is noticed as occurring in 1241. Wharton says he died on May 13th; but after the year 1254. Bentham conjectures in 1259.

ROBERT DE LEVERINGTON was his successor, who occurs in 1260. From this time, it appears, the bishop's licence was requisite for the election of a prior: from whom also the elected person now received confirmation. Leverington died Sept. 12th, 1271.

HENRY BANNIS appears to have held the priorate in 1272. Bentham calls him HENRY DE BANCCIS or BANKS. He died in 1273.^s

JOHN DE HEMINGSTON was elected in January, 1274. He died Nov. 9th, 1288.^t He gave to the convent forty shillings for an anniversary.^u

JOHN DE SHEPRED, SCHEPEREDE, or SHEPRETH, succeeded in the time of Bishop Kirkby.^x Bentham says he presided but a little time, and was succeeded by JOHN SALEMAN, DE MELRE, or DE ELY, who occurs in 1291. In 1298, on the death of Bishop Luda, he was in election for the bishoprick of Ely, as has been already mentioned,^y but did not succeed to it. In 1299, however, he was appointed bishop of Norwich. He was afterwards lord chancellor of England. He died at Folkstone in Kent July 6, 1325, after his return from an embassy in France.

ROBERT DE ORFORD, who was elected Prior on the promotion of Saleman to Norwich, has been already noticed among the bishops of Ely. His successor, in 1302, was

WILLIAM DE CLARE, who presided, according to Bentham, only seven weeks.^z

JOHN DE FRESINGFIELD occurs Prior in 1303. He augmented the revenues of the monastery by the purchase of considerable estates in Ely, Wicham, Sutton, and Downham, which he appropriated to the use of his successors.^a He resigned the priorate Feb. 16th, 1320 :^b retiring upon a pension.

JOHN DE CRAUDEN, CROUDEN, CROWDEN, or CRANDENE, was elected prior May 20th, 1321.^c He presided twenty years, adding considerably to the buildings of the monastery. He was in election for the bishoprick on the death of Bishop Hotham, as has been already noticed. He died Sept. 25th, 1341.^d His monumental brass had this epitaph :

“Hanc aram decorat de Crauden tuniba Johannis,
Qui fuit hic Prior ad bona pluria, pluribus annis.
Præsulis hunc sedes elegit pontificari ;
Præsulis ante pedes ideo meruit tumulari.”

ALAN DE WALSINGHAM from sacrist was made prior Oct. 25th, 1341 : a man skilled both in the mechanical and the liberal arts. He designed the octagon with the dome and lantern, in the place of the old tower ; and by his skill in architecture added much to the improvement both of the church and the offices of the monastery. In his time also Bells were first put up in the great western tower : the largest, which was named after him, weighed 6280 pounds.^e Bentham says, notwithstanding the great expenses in building during his administration, he made several considerable purchases of lands and estates ; particularly the manor of Brame near Ely, and the manor of Mepal in the Isle of Ely ; both which he added to the revenues of the monastery, and which are still in the possession of the church. In 1345, on Bishop Montacute's death, the convent elected him to the bishoprick of Ely : but Pope Clement VI. bestowed the see on Thomas L'Isle.^f His epitaph is given in the Anglia Sacra :

“Flos operatorum, dum vixit, corpore sanus,
Hic jacet ante chorum Prior hic tumulatus Alanus.
Annis bis denis vivens fuit ipse sacrista,
Plus tribus his plenis Prior ens perfecit et ista.
Sacristariam quasi funditus ædificavit ;
Mephale, Brame etiam, huic ecclesiæ cumulavit.
Pro veteri turre, quæ quadam nocte cadebat,
Hanc turrim, propriè quam cernitis, hic faciebat.
Et plures ædes quia fecerat ipse Prioris ;
Detur ei sedes cælo pro fine laboris.”^g

WILLIAM HATHFIELD was Walsingham's immediate successor.

JOHN BUCTON, or BOUGHTON, is noticed as prior in 1366. He held the office till his death, in 1397. In his time the gate called Ely Porta was begun.^h

WILLIAM WALPOLE, who succeeded Bucton, resigned the office in 1401.

WILLIAM POWCHER, who had been before abbat of Walden, was installed prior October 21st, 1401. He had been originally a monk of Ely. In 1413, he obtained the privilege of wearing the mitre, from Pope John XXIII. ; together with the use of the pastoral staff, and other pontifical ornaments, to himself and his successors. He built the hall of the Infirmary in 1417. The author of the “Successio Priorum Ecclesiæ Eliensis,” says, “eodem anno vetustam inter episcopum et monachos Elienses litem de jurisdictione ecclesiasticâ aliisque articulis compositione factâ terminavit. Inter alia convenit, ut sacrista Eliensis in perpetuum haberet jurisdictionem ecclesiasticam in hospitali S. Johannis Bapt. et in capellanos cantariæ super le Grene in civitate Eliensi, tanquam vicarius episcopi, item in duabus ecclesiis parochialibus infra civitatem Eliensem, officio sacristariæ olim appropriatis, item in maneriis ecclesiæ Eliensis, juxta Eliam, viz. Tyrbitsey, Brame, Stuntene, Thorney, Northney, Quaveney, et Shepey, exceptis duntaxat hæreseos causis.”ⁱ

EDMUND WALSINGHAM occurs in the years 1418 and 1424.

PETER DE ELY, Bentham apprehends, was elected in April 1425. Like some of his predecessors he was chosen bishop of the see by his convent ; but was superseded by papal provision, within a short time after his election as prior.^k He died about 1432.

WILLIAM WELLS was elected prior, according to Bentham, in 1430. Cole, in a manuscript note on Willis's Mitred Abbies, says, in 1432. He was cited as prior to a convocation as late as 1460.

HENRY PETERBOROUGH, who occurs prior in 1462, abdicated the priorate in 1478.^l Bentham says, he resigned it from incapacity, having been struck with the palsy. He received a pension on this occasion of 40*l.* and lived till 1480.

ROGER WESTMINSTER, from sacrist, was elected prior July 28th, 1478. He was concerned in the repairs of the western tower of the church. Mr. Cole, in one of the volumes of his manuscript collections, describes this prior's seal, which he found appendant to a deed in the archives of Corpus Christi college in Cambridge. The instrument was dated three days only after Westminster's election. The device was a figure of a Benedictine monk, holding his crosier staff in his right hand, with this inscription, IORIS . ET . CONVENTVS . ELYENSIVM.^m He certainly lived till 1499.

ROBERT COLVILLE was prior from 1500 to 1510.

WILLIAM WITTLESEY was elected prior in 1510. Wharton, in the Anglia Sacra, informs us that he continued to preside in 1515 : but Bentham suspects that

WILLIAM FOLIOTT was then prior ; the time of whose election does not appear.

JOHN COTTINGHAM, or COTTENHAM, was elected prior March 29th, 1516. Wharton says he died before 1522.

ROBERT WELLS, WELLYS, or STEWARDE, was the last prior. Bentham says, in the year 1536 he was nominated a master in Chancery ; and that when the king and parliament in the year 1539, had resolved on the suppression of monasteries in general, as one necessary step towards a reformation of religion, our prior readily complied with those measures ; and not only persuaded the monks of his own convent, but was very active in bringing over other abbats and priors to surrender their houses to the king. But however this might have been the case in the end, he seems to have made some opposition to the royal will in the outset. Richard Crumwell, one of King Henry's visitors, writing to Lord Crumwell, says, “I have me most humbly commendyd unto your Lordshipp I rode on sondaye to Cambrige to my bedd, and the next mornyng was upe betymes supposyng to have found at Elye Mr. Pollard and Mr. Williams, but they were departyd before my comyng. And so beyng at dynner at Somersham with the busshop of Elye I overtoke them. At which tyme I openyd your pleasure unto them in every thyng. Your Lordshipp I thynke shall shortelye apparseyve the Pryor of Elye to be of a frowarde sorte, by evydent tokens, as at our comyng home shalbe at large relatyde to you.”ⁿ On the 18th of November, 1539, Prior Wells, with the monks of the convent, surrendered the whole site of the monastery, with all the goods, chattels, estates, rents, profits, and revenues thereto belonging, into the hands of the king's commissioners. Dugdale says, the annual revenues of the priory were at this time computed at 1084*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.* : Speed says 1301*l.* 8*s.* 2*d.*

nice electum, et idcirco electionem annullavit. Tandem dictus prior sponte cessit, et submisit se dispositioni Domini Cant. qui statuit quod dictus prior ad terminum vitæ suæ haberet unum capellanum de conventu ibidem, et etiam manerium de Wudeley valens per annum xx. lib. pro cameraria sua, cum una camera honesta infra monasterium &c. et postea dictus Domini Cant. . . . a conventu electum præfecit in priorem ibidem dominum abbatem de Walden quondam monachum et sacristam loci prædicti.” &c. King Henry the Eighth, by his letters patent bearing date September 10th, 1541, in the thirty-third year of his reign, granted a charter for erecting the cathedral church of the late monastery of St. Peter and St. Etheldreda at Ely, into a cathedral church by the name and title of the Cathedral church of the holy and undivided Trinity of Ely; to consist of a Dean and eight Prebendaries, being priests, with other ministers necessary for the celebrating divine service therein. He also ordained the said cathedral church to be the episcopal see of the Bishop of Ely and his successors; and appointed ROBERT WELLS, the late prior, who, now assumed his family name of STYWARD, or STEWARDE, to be the first DEAN. The first Prebendaries were, Richard Cox, D.D., Matthew Parker, D.D., William Maye, LL.D., William Lyson, LL.D., Giles Agar, B.D., John Custons, Robert Hamond, and John Warde.^b

The cathedral of Ely has been long viewed as one of the most magnificent structures in the kingdom; exhibiting a rich display of all the varieties of architecture prevalent in England from the Norman Conquest to the Reformation. Its general form is that of the long or Latin cross. It is entered at the west end by a portico or galilee, beyond which is the western tower with its transept. The nave is separated from its ailes by twenty-two pillars, and leads to the great transept, the centre of which forms an octagon surmounted by a lantern.^d An ante-choir, or sermon-place, leads to the choir, at the end of the north and south ailes of which are the chapels of Bishops Alcock and West. A communication through the north-east corner of the north transept leads to what was anciently the chapel of St. Mary, but which, after the reformation of religion, was given to the parish of the Holy Trinity, and has since been called Trinity Church.

Miller, in his “ Description of the Cathedral Church of Ely, with some account of the Conventual Buildings,” 8vo. Lond. 1808, has given us the following dimensions:

NUM. I.

[Ex Historia Eliensis Ecclesiae in Bibliotheca Cottoniana, sub effigie Neronis A. 15.]

ANNO Domini DCXXVII. beatus Augustinus, xj. anno adventus sui in Angliam ecclesiam construxit in Ely in honore beatæ Mariæ virginis in loco qui Cradindene dicitur, id est, vallis crati, miliario ab urbe qui nunc est distans, cujus operis rex Ethelbertus fundator extitit, in quo ministros officium Dei complentes instituit, quos Pendæ regis exercitus inde postea fugavit, locumque in solitudinem commutavit, non erat in tota insula nisi tantum una ecclesia à beato Augustino facta.

Anno Domini DCLXXIII. virgo Etheldreda in Ely in loco eminentiori monasterium construxit prope fluentis alveum, et cœtum utriusque sexus sub monachili habitu congregavit, quibus ipsa prima facta fuit abbatissa à sancto Wlfrido antistite, et ita succedente tempore durabat sancta religio sub abbatissarum regimine CXCVII. annis usque dominicæ incarnationis DCCCLXX. in quo quidem anno ecclesia Elyensis à paganis combusta est. Ex ipsis autem clericis qui deprædati fuerant, post aliquot annos VIII. reversi sunt, verum ipsis alii succedendo porticus ecclesiae resarciens archipresbyterum et præpositum inter se constituerunt. Et ita sub ipsorum naufragosa gubernatione fluctuans vacillabat ecclesia Elyensis c. annis.

Anno incarnationis dominicæ nongentesimo LXX. regni gloriosi regis Edgari anno x. ex quo virgo Etheldreda fabricas illic incepit anno CCXCVI. à devastatione monasterii c. beatus Ethelwoldus, Wintoniæ episcopus, facta conventionem cum rege emit ab ipso ex integro totam adjacentem regionem prædictæ insulæ, et ipsam ecclesiam ab Inguar destructam innovavit, presbyteros inde expulit monachosque introduxit, et virum religiosum nomine Brythnodum eis ordinavit abbatem. Prædictus abbas Brithnodus anno x. regiminis sui à regina Elstritha martyrizatus est. Floruit autem sancta religio sub sanctorum abbatum regimine CXXXIX. annis, abbatibus x.

Anno Domini MCVIII. regni verò regis Henrici Primi anno IX. facta est transmutatio abbaciæ in episcopatum per Papam Paschalem anno pontificatus sui x. unde mansit et manet adhuc sub pastoralis cura.

Anno Domini MXX. tempore Canuti Regis qui quartus à Rege Edgardo regnabat, Alwynus episcopus Elmamensis, set prius monachus Elyensis, præcepto ipsius regis in Betrycheswrdæ primo monachorum catervam induxit, quosdam de Ely, quosdam de Holm ibi collocavit, anno Elsini abbatis Elyensis secundi xxxviii. et post introductionem monachorum in Ely per unum Ethelwoldum Episcopum annis xlix. cclxv.

abbatissæ, ex quibus geniti sunt duo filii Adulfus et Jurminus et quatuor filiae. Primogenita Sexburga, Ethelberga, Etheldreda, et Wythburga. Præfatus Anna occiditur à Penda rege Merciorum anno regni sui xix. ab incarnatione verò Domini DCLIV. et in loco qui Blydeburth nuncupatur sepelitur corpus ejus, ubi usque in præsentem diem pia devotione fidelium veneratur. Illic etiam sepultus est Jurminus filius ejus, sed apud Betrychesword, quod nunc sanctum Edwardum appellant, postea translatus est, et honorificè collocatus. Turbatis hujusmodi rebus, Hereswytha post interitum Annæ sponsi sui mundum despiciens apud Gallias peregrina in monasterium Cale secessit, illic regularibus subdita disciplinis coronam æternam expectabat. Prædicto igitur Anna mortuo, successit ei in regnum Adelherus frater ejus, in cujus tempore in loco qui dicitur Wenno monasterium construitur à sancto Botulpho. Præfatus rex interfectus est anno regni sui secundo ab exercitu Oswy regis Northanimbriorum, cui successit frater ejus tertius, nomine Edewoldus, homo bonus ac verus Dei cultor juxta quod frater ejus Anna fuerat. Quo defuncto, successit ei in regnum Adulfus nepos ejus, filius Annæ fratris sui, cujus filia Edburga abbatissa in Rependuna famulo Dei Guthlaco sarcophagum plumbeum lintheumque transmisit in quo idem vir Dei post obitum locaretur et circumdaretur. Sexburga nupsit Ercomberto regi Cantiae, anno quinto regni patris sui, quibus nati sunt duo reges Egbertus et Lotharius, et duæ filiae Ermenilda et Erkengota. Sexburga verò post obitum uiri sui, qui xxiv. annis imperium rexit, aliquandiu viriliter regno præfuit donec inpueres annos Egberti filii sui in robur virilis ætatis reformaverat. Commendato ei demum imperio, vestem jocunditatis deposuit habitumque mœroris suscepit. Tandem apud Schepeiam in Cancia votum suum dirigit, ubi novum habitaculum virginibus sanctis quas sibi associaverat construxit, quæ etiam ab Egberto filio suo precio redemptas possessiones ecclesiae adjecit, in qua lxxvij. discipularum sibi adjunxit collegium. Nocte autem quadam, cum sancta Sexburga sopori se dedisset, angelus Domini apparuit ei per visum, dicens, scias quod non post multos hos dies multis annis evolutis desertores Dei regnum hoc invadent diripiendum, invasumque oppriment et affligent. Quod tunc completa in se ferè tota Anglia est experta quando ab aquilone ruit tempestas super habitatores terræ; Inguar et Vbba navali certamini cum triumpho regnum ingressis et sæviente gladio cædem ecclesiae Dei intentibus generalem. Considerans itaque sancta Sexburga desolationem in regno futuram sicut ab angelo Dei acceperat, concepit affectum quod effectus prodidit, vitam videlicet pauperiorem arripere, et se sub alterius potestate redigere. Accessit ad filias suas eisque voluntatem suam ostendit, et Ermenildam filiam suam eis abbatissam præfecit.

Cum igitur cuncta quæ inchoaverat honestè compleret, et totius Canciæ terciam partem ad usus ecclesiæ emptam in manus earum collocasset, accepta licentia et datis benedictionibus beata Sexburga discessit, nec sine dolore et fletu facta est inter illas lamentanda divisio. In principatu igitur virgineo beata Ermenilda remanente, gloriosa Sexburga in insulam Eliensem proficiscitur, ubi à sancta Etheldreda sorore sua tunc ibidem abbatissa excipitur, et cum triumpho introducit, et post obitum beatæ Etheldredæ eidem in monasterii regimine successit, anno Domini DCLXXIX. ubi sago et cilicio contenta strata mollia recusabat, juges orationibus dies, juges etiam continuabat noctes, balnearum usus tanquam seminaria venenata refugit. Tandem cum bonum certamen certasset, spiritumque suum in manum creatoris pridie nonas Julii commendasset, sepulta est condecienti loco post beatam sororem suam, ubi virtutum suarum merita florere non desinunt, semperque ejus præconia accipiunt incrementa, ut in libro gestorum illius enarratur. Ermenilda filia sanctæ Sexburgæ nupsit Wlfero regi Merciorum filio Pendæ Regis, quibus nata est Werburga præfata Wlphero post xvij. annos ad æterna regna migranti. Ermenilda Regina apud Canciam in monasterio de Schepeya confugit, ubi genitrix sua Sexburga choris virginum præluxit, et sub ea habitum religionis suscepit. Tandem recedente beata Sexburga de Schepeia ipsam abbatissam ibidem præfecit, quæ successu temporis canonica electione Sexburgæ matri suæ apud Ely defunctæ in monasterium abbatissæ successit, ubi à cunctis dignè suscepta mater omnium est effecta. Quantæ verò sanctitatis et pietatis ipsa extiterit, vita ejus atque sua mors preciosa plenius attestantur. Transiit enim ab hoc seculo idus Februarii, et in Elyensi cœnobio cum beata genitrice sua et virginali matertera sua Etheldreda tumultata quiescit. Werburga filia sanctæ Ermenildæ post mortem patris sui intravit monasterium S. Etheldredæ apud Ely, sicut legitur in vita sua priusquam mater sua idem monasterium intravit. Cujus sanctitatem cum Rex Ethelredus pater suus comperisset, eam inde cepit, et principatum monasteriorum sanctimonialium quæ in regno suo pollebant ei tradidit. Sponsa igitur domini Werburga cum quibusdam ecclesiis præset, post dilectæ genitricis suæ obitum jure prælationis etiam monasterium Elye suscepit. Cum ergo omni familiæ et monasteriis sibi creditis præ nimia caritate optaret adesse, et e contra nulli tolerabile videretur sua dulci præsentia carere, elegit cum divina præscientia et voluntate Hehanburge monasterio corpore requiescere. Quamobrem præcepit Hehanburgensi familiæ, ut ubicumque migraret ex hac luce ipsi incunctanter venirent corpusque ejus ad monasterium suum portarent. Deposita itaque Werburga in cœnobio quod Tryttengeham appellatur, cujus depositio tercio nonas Februarii celebratur, nocte depositionis suæ supervenerunt Hehanburgenses, et corpus ipsius de ecclesia Tryttengeham rapiunt, et ad ecclesiam Hehanburgensium cum ingenti lætitia deducunt et sepeliunt, et post ix. annos corpus ejus integrum vestesque nitidissimæ apparuerunt. Tandem in Cestram ubi nunc requiescit translata est beata Werburga. In Anglico legitur quod Sexburga in ecclesia de Schepeia quam construxit, à Theodoro archiepiscopo velamen sanctitatis accepit, atque ibidem filia sua Ermenilda sub ea normam religionis spreto regni culmine postea sumpsit. Quæ dum iter apud Ely paravisset filiam suam Werburgam pro se in ministerio abbatissæ (sicut diu optaverat) constituit. Erkengota soror sanctæ Ermenildæ, ad exteras naticnes et ad loca transmarina demigrans, sacros monasteriorum conventus peregrina circuit, et ad quoddam cœnobium in regione Francorum constructum in loco qui dicitur Brige devenit, ubi sub abbatissa vocabulo Sara Deo servivit usque ad finem vitæ suæ, et post ejus decessum sepultum est corpus ejus in ecclesia prothomartyris Stephani. Ethelberga secunda filia Annæ et Hereswythæ, dilectam perpetuæ virginitatis gloriam in magna corporis continentia servavit. Nam eo tempore, necdum multis monasteriis in regione Anglorum constructis, multi de Britannia, monachicæ conversationis gratiâ, Francorum vel Galliarum monasteria adire solebant, sed et filias suas ab eisdem erudiendas ac sponso cœlesti copulandas mittebant. Inter quas erat Siderida filia uxoris Annæ regis Orientalium Anglorum ex alio viro procreata et filia naturalis ejusdem regis Ethelberga, quarum utraque cum esset peregrina, pro merito virtutum in monasterio Lingensi abbatissa est constituta. Cum igitur beata Ethelberga diem ibi clausisset extremum, post vij. annos obitus sui corpus ejus ita intemertum invenitur ut à carnalis concupiscentiæ corruptione erat immune, quod et à loco in quo prius erat sepultum in ecclesiam beati Stephani est translatum, cujus videlicet natalis ibi solet cum magna gloria celebrari, die nonarum Juliarum. Etheldreda tertia soror apud Orientales Anglos in loco famoso Ernyngge nuncupato orta, ut Beda testatur, libro iij. de gestis Anglorum, capitulo xvij. Annæ regis Orientalium Anglorum extitit filia de matre vocabulo Hereswyda, quæ à Tomberto principe Girviorum australium postulatur in conjugium, cui licet invita à parentibus est desponsata biennio ante interfectionem Annæ patris sui, ab incarnatione Domini anno DCLij. et ab eodem sponso suo cum quo firmè triennio sub jugo maritali vixit in virginali contubernio, insulam accepit in dotem secundum Bedam, ubi prius Elge à copia anguillarum quæ in eisdem paludibus capiuntur nomen accepit, quæ mutato nomine meliorando Ely nuncupatur, modo scilicet digna domus cui nomen convenit ejus, vel sicut quidam disserunt, Elge ex duobus verbis Ebraicis componitur, El enim dicitur Deus, ge terra, quod simul Dei terra sonat. Dignè quidem insula tali onomate signatur, quæ ab initio Christianitatis fidei in Anglia Dominum Jesum Christum mox credere cæpit et colere. Tomberto igitur defuncto, mox virgo Etheldreda ad propriam domum in Ely descendit, in sancta viduitate per quinquennium permanens, ubi vanos mundi honores fugiens, silentium semper et vitam prorsus ignobilem affectans (locus autem ille difficultate adeundi et arboribus hinc inde circumdatus, habens aquas de supercilio collis tenues sed irriguas) quasi in heremum habitare cæpit, et quos præcipuæ religionis noverat esse admodum in amicitiam sibi copulavit. Eodem verò tempore Egfridus in finibus aquilonis inter Anglos tenens imperium, inflammatur in virginis amorem, cui anno sexto post interfectionem patris sui unanimi voluntate parentum datur in conjugium. Cumque per duodecim annos matrimonii lege teneretur, noluit differre ulteriùs quod mente conceperat: vix à viro suo optenta licentia, virgo et regina intravit monasterium sanctæ Ebbæ abbatissæ, quæ fuit amita Regis Egfridi apud Coludi, accepto velamine sanctimonialis habitus ab antistite Wilfrido, ubi per anni spacium didicit, 'quia jugum Domini svave est et onus ejus lene.' Deinde Rex Egfridus in matrimonium eam concupivit resumere, et instinctu suorum illam de monasterio conabatur eripere. Nec mora, ad monasterium ubi sancta virgo degebat festinanter ascendit. Quo audito, mater congregationis Ebba ex sola fuga præsidium fore suggerit, nec quiescendum donec ad domum suam in Ely perveniat.

Ipsa ob hoc gemens et anxia exit et fugit, et digressa jam ambitum loci cum duabus Dei ancillis, Selbenna et Selbera, collem eminentem qui prope Coldeburchesheved, quod latinè caput Coldeburti dicitur, adiit et ascendit, ubi Deus aquas multiplices effudit, et locum in quo sacræ uirgines ascenderant aqua circumdedit, et sicut ab incolis loci illius accipitur, per vij. dies continuos sine cibo et potu in oratione consistentes eas occuluit, donec Rex Egfridus qui nullum locum ipsas aggredi invenit, in stuporem versus de loco recessit et Eboracum rediit, Ermenburgamque sibi matrimonio copulavit. Nec deinceps sanctum Wilfridum affectu ut antea coluit, sed diu iram sub pectore tacito gessit contra illum, et expectata hora ob istjusmodi causam eum de sede sui episcopatus expulit, qui apud Ely cum beata Etheldreda morabatur, ubi tunc et quotienscumque necessitas poposcerat jura officii episcopalis administravit. Pulsus ab episcopatu Wilfridus, Romamque iturus, ubi navem ascendit flante favonio Fresiam est appulsus, ubi primus opus evangelicum cepit, et multa millia barbarorum ad fidem convertit, hyememque ibidem cum nova Dei plebe feliciter exegit. Postea verò Fresiam reliquit, Romam adiit, ubi Benedicti papæ et plurimorum episcoporum judiciis absque crimine accusatus fuisse, episcopatuque dignus fuisse inventus est, Britanniam rediit, provinciam Suth-Saxonum Christo credere fecit.

Wilfridus sanctis meritis et nomine dignus
Quindecies ternos postquam egit episcopus annos

Attactus multis per tempora longa periculis.

Sanctimoniales autem in rupis vertice degentes, cum sitis ariditate nimum æstuantur gravarentur: Ebba venerabilis abbatissa Etheldredam commonet Deum Christum exorare ut gustum aquæ præstet illis in hac sitis necessitate, qui de petra potavit populum suum in deserto, et fusa intentius ad Deum oratione cum summa mentis devotione, fons aquæ juxta eam confestim erupit lucidissimæ, atque ad preces ejus quod per naturam non habuit per gratiam Dei arida rupes aquas perfudit quæ in usum ipsarum sufficeret, nec necessitati deesset, et usque in ævum manare non cessat, unde potum sumentes Deo gratias egerunt et infirmis adhuc saluberrima præstat. Insuper memorabile et præ cæteris mirabile est quod vestigia pedum illius ascendentis et descendentis in latere montis infusa tamquam in calida cera nunc usque ostenduntur, ad laudem domini nostri Jesu Christi. In hoc enim facto si diligenter attendimus iiij. memoranda satis admiratione digna perpendere possumus. Unum, quod misericorditer Deus illas ab oppressione regis protexit. Aliud, quod mare suas aquas ad earum munimentum tanquam pro muro effudit. Terciam, quod rupes aspera in siti earum aquas donavit. Quartum, quod duritia petræ velut suæ oblita naturæ more mutato ad tactum plantæ illius mollescere cœpit. Deinde beata Etheldreda, assumptis secum præfatis ancillis à loco atque provincia recessit, et ad flumen quod dicitur Humbria proveniens, cujus alveo lenis auræ pulsu transito, in portum Wyntringham prosperè est advecta, sed inde quasi stadiis decem ad viculum divertens in modum insulæ paludibus ferè circumdatum, Alfham nominatum, cum jam dictis puellis hospicium petiit et accepit. Ibi que paucis diebus mansitatis, domino ecclesiam construxit. Inde beata Etheldreda iter arripuit, sed ex insolito labore nimum fatigata in loco umbraculi se collocavit, atque dormivit. Cumque de sompno evigilata post paululum surrexisset, invenit baculum itineris sui, quem ad caput suum antea fixerat aridum et diu inveteratum, jam viridi cortice accinctum fronduisse ac folia produxisse. Crevit ergo lignum illud et facta est fraxinus maxima cunctarum arborum illius provinciæ, appellatusque est locus ille Etheldredestowe usque in hodiernum diem: id latinè sonat, pausatio Etheldredæ. Facta est etiam illic ecclesia in honore beatæ virginis ad laudem domini nostri Jesu Christi qui mirabilis est in sanctis suis.

Interea, beata Etheldreda per innumera itinerum discrimina et labores diversos ad suam possessionem rediit in Ely cum ancillis suis, illicque cum debito honore suscepta, insulam possedit, quam Huna sacerdos secutus fuit, ibique monasterium habere desideravit memorata Christi famula secundum Bedam; quoniam de eorundem Orientalium Anglorum ipsa originem duxit, sub qua nonnulli vivere decertabant et filias suas ab ea informandas tradiderunt. Inter quas Werburga filia Ermenildæ advenit et ab ea normam religionis accepit et didicit. Sed tunc temporis in insula non erat nisi una ecclesia à beato Augustino, Anglorum apostolo, facta apud Cradundene. In primitiva enim ecclesia nascentis fidei et Christianitatis beatus Augustinus ecclesiam ibi fabricavit in honore semper virginis Mariæ, anno ab incarnatione domini DCVII. adventus sui in Angliam anno xj. cujus operis rex Ethelbrithus primus fundator extitit. In quo ministros Dei officium complentes instituit, quos Pendæ regis exercitus inde postea fugavit, locumque in solitudinem commutavit, et præfatam ecclesiam ad solum destruxit LXVII. annis antequam sancta Etheldreda fabricas incepit in Ely. Sed beata Etheldreda postquam illic mansionem elegit, prope fluentis alveum in loco eminentiori habitacula posuit, prædictamque ecclesiam renovare ac reformare summo opere curavit, et dum reædificata ut primitus in honore sanctæ Dei genitricis Mariæ fuit, innumerabilibus virtutibus Deo operante refulsit. Sic-que solutis prioris fundamenti reliquiis nova omnia præparantur.

Ipsa siquidem beata Etheldreda post modicum, auxilio fratris sui Adulfi regis, majore inibi constructo monasterio, virginum Deo devotarum mater et virgo et exemplis vitæ cæpit esse et monitis, quarum usibus ex integro insulam constituit et per dilectum suum Wilfridum Romæ, nutu apostolico corroborandam destinavit. Qui ibidem à papa Benedicto privilegium super Elge monasterium accepit, quatenus auctoritate sancti Petri contra improborum irruptiones securius staret. Sed antequam de Roma rediit sancta Etheldreda de hoc seculo migravit. In chonicis verò Latinis et Anglicis habetur, quod anno ab incarnatione domini DCLXXXIII. virgo Etheldreda fabricas incepit in Ely atque in brevi cœtum utriusque sexus Deum timentium sub tramite vitæ regularis collegit, sicut Beda scripsit, dicens, 'In ejusdem Deo dicata virginis translatione omnem congregationem hinc fratrum illinc sororum psallentem circumstetisse sepulcrum ejus.' Unde intelligitur viros et mulieres in eodem simul monasterio cælibem actitare vitam atque in ecclesia diutius servatum ut ipsa statuerat, donec locum et patriam Dani vastaverunt, quod etiam apud Coludi et in multis Anglorum ecclesiis fuisse testatur historia Anglorum secundum Bedam. Post annum ex quo ipsa velamen sanctimonialis habitus apud Coludi suscepit facta est abbatissa in Ely. Nec diu post discessum sanctæ Etheldredæ de Coludi, monasterium virginum quod apud Coludi situm fuerat, in quo habitum religionis suscepit, per culpam incuriæ flammis consumptum est, quod tamen à malitia inhabitantium in eo, et præcipuè illorum qui majores esse videbantur, contigisse omnes qui noverunt facillè potuerunt advertere quod hic minimè præteritur. Sed non defuit puniendis ammonitio divinæ pietatis, qua correpti per jejunia fletus et preces iram à se ad instar Ninivitarum justi judicis averterent. Erat namque in eodem monasterio vir de genere Scotorum, Adam Nanus nomine, ducens vitam in continentia et orationibus multum Deo devotam. Hic occupatus noctu vigiliis et psalmis, vidit subito astare sibi quendam incogniti vultus, cujus præsentia cum esset exterritus, dixit illi ne timeret, et quasi familiari eum voce alloquens, bene facis inquit tempore nocturnæ quietis non sompno indulgere, sed vigiliis et orationibus insistere et sedulo Deum deprecari. Totum hoc monasterium ex ordine perlustrans modò singulorum lectos inspexi, et neminem præter te solum erga sanitatem animæ suæ occupatum reperi, sed prorsus omnes uiri et feminae, aut sompno torpent inertes, aut ad peccata vigilant. Virgines quoque Deo dicatæ contempta reverentia suæ professionis ad invicem sponsarum in periculum sui status adornant, aut externorum sibi uirorum amicitiam comparant, unde merito loco huic et habitatoribus ejus de cælo vindicta flammis sævientibus præparata est. Quod mox matri congregationis vocabulo Ebbæ quæ Deo dignam Etheldredam in religionem susceperat et in filiam adoptatam nutrierat atque docuerat, curavit indicare.

At illa de tali præsagio meritò turbata, dixit, 'Quare non citius hoc compertum mihi revelare voluisti?' Qui respondet. 'Timui propter reverentiam tuam ne fortè nimum conturbareris. Sed tamen hanc consolationem habebis quod in diebus tuis hæc plaga non superveniet.' Qua visione vulgata, loci illius accolæ aliquantulum paucis diebus timere et seipsos intermissis facinoribus castigare cæperunt: verum post obitum ipsius abbatissæ redierunt ad pristinas sordes, immo sceleratiora fecerunt. Et cum dicerent pax et securitas, extemplo præfata ultionis sunt pœna multati; proh dolor! concitè nimirum illis extiterat judicium eversionis quod non merebantur gratissimæ virginis suffragari consortio, cujus præsentia frustrati, impiè et perversè agentes incorrigibiles permanserant, ut nec divino conversi amonitu, nec venerabilis Etheldredæ compuncti devotione, ob scelerum enormitatem et se et locum prodidisse, sicut Beda meminit, agnoscitur. Postquam autem beata Etheldreda gradum abbatissæ in Ely suscepit, nunquam lineis sed laneis vestibus uti voluit, raroque, præter majora sollempnia vel artiore necessitatem, plusquam semel in die manducavit, semperque si non infirmitas gravior prohibuisset, ex tempore matutinæ sinaxeos usque ad ortum diei in ecclesia precibus intenta perstitit; et post vij. annos ex quo gradum abbatissæ susceperat, quodam tumore maxillæ pressa, rapta est ad dominum, et æquè ut ipsa jusserat non alibi quam in medio suorum juxta ordinem quo transierat in ligneo locello sepulta est; cui successit in ministerium abbatissæ soror sua Sexburga. Transiit autem sancta Etheldreda nono kal. Julii, anno domini DCLXXIX. sub regibus Anglorum, fratre ejusdem videlicet Adulpho Orientalium, et Lothario filio sanctæ Sexburgæ Cantuariensium; cujus exequias celebravit sanctus Huna sacerdos, qui de ordine monachorum et presbyter almæ Etheldredæ fuisse perhibetur. Qui insuper, sicut ab ipsa mandatum acceperat, in cimiterio ecclesiæ juxta suos sepelivit, et post venerandum illius obitum non in ecclesia constitit, sed in eadem palude prope Ely ad quandam modicam insulam secessit, quæ ejus nomine Huneya vocatur, solitariam ibidem eligens vitam, ubi quamdiu vixit gloriosam vitam duxit. Ad cujus tumbam multi, recuperandæ sanitatis gratia, accedentes, sospitatem ipsius recuperasse meritis plerique testantur. Quod quidam cognoscentes, secretè ejusdem reliquias, sarcophago postea fracto, apud Thorneyam portantes posuerunt, sperantes à domino ejus patrociniis gratiam et misericordiam. (&c.) Cumque beata Etheldreda sexdecim annis fuisset sepulta, placuit Sexburgæ abbatissæ ossa ejus de terra levare et in locello novo posita in ecclesiam transferri. Aperto igitur sepulcro, corpore ejus in lucem prolato, ita incorruptum inventum est ac si eodem die fuisset defuncta sive humo data; sed et lintheamina omnia quibus involutum erat corpus, integra et nova apparuerunt, quorum tactu variis passionibus afflicti curabantur. Necnon et loculum in quo primò sepulta est nonnullis oculos dolentibus saluti fuisse perhibent. Loto igitur sanctissimæ virginis corpore novisque vestibis induto, in ecclesiam beatæ virginis Mariæ quam ipsa à fundamentis construxerat defertur, et in sarcophago quod de Grantecestria fuerat allatum reponitur. In quo quidem sarcophago nulla reperitur junctura ubi lapis lapidi cemento connectitur, sic enim operculum unitum est suo vasculo ut nulla divisionis sit similitudo, nullatenus valet aperiri nec qualibet arte dissolvi. Secundùm Bedam prædictum sarcophagum juxta muros civitatis de Grantecestria fuit repertum, de marmore albo pulcherrime factum, operculo quoque similis lapidis aptissimè tectum. Facta est igitur hæc translatio, anno domini . . . sub die kal. Novembris xvj. De loco autem in quo primo corpus ejus fuerat sepultum fons aquæ oritur lucidissimæ qui huc usque manare non desinit. Post decessum verò sanctarum prædictarum ecclesia Elge minimè vacabat ab opere Dei, immò virtus divini cultus sub regimine beatarum fæminarum non tepescente, sed magis ac magis fervescente fervore disciplinæ regularis ac custodiæ monasticæ professionis, multis annorum evolventibus orbitis floruit usque ad annum incarnationis dominicæ DCCCLXX. In quo quidem anno ecclesia Elyensis à paganis, Inguar et Vbba igne combusta est, extinctis sanctimonialibus et omnibus qui intus erant. Et sic ipsa sancta religio quæ à beata Etheldreda in eadem ecclesia fuit instituta, quæ excvii. annis sanctissimè duraverat, est deleta. Inter ipsos erat vir ceteris crudelior, qui dum tumulum sanctæ Etheldredæ intueretur, thesaurum ibi positum arbitrabatur, propter quod bipenni quam manibus suis gestabat foramen fecit in tumulo marmoreo quod hucusque apparet. Quo facto, confestim oculis ejus à capite divinitus avulsis sacrilegam ibi finivit vitam, quod cernentes ceteri ulterius virginis glebam inquietare non præsumserunt. Ad ultimum verò flamma et ferro cuncta consumunt, totus pene clerus trucidatur, abducitur in captivitatem quisque residuus. Sicque locus miserè jacebat à cultu divini officii omnino desolatus, nullus qui ministerium implebat remanet.

Ex ipsis denique clericis qui deprædati fuerant, post aliquot annos viij. reversi sunt, qui prout poterant porticus ecclesiæ resarcientes divinum officium solvebant. Verùm ipsis alii succedendo clerici non canonicè immò irreligiosè vitam duxerunt; de quibus quoddam mirabile

contigit, videlicet quod unus eorum sub persona alterius de illo qui errori et facinori eorum consenserat asseruit et scripsit. Contigit quoque ut monasterium Elge sub eorum transiret dominio, quorum archipresbiter præpositus et magister instinctu diaboli ausus est sepulcrum sacræ virginis violare, hac ratione ut sciret an virgo Etheldreda tunc carne maneret integra. Dixit enim quod si virgo tam sancta ut olim in præsentem jaceret basilica, per eam plurima Deus fecisset miracula. Tunc unus ex sacerdotibus ei dixit. Iccirco didasculæ tales profers sermones quia noviter ad insulam istam ex alia provincia venisti, virtutum miracula minimè vidisti quæ conditor rerum peregit per hujus sacræ virginis merita, è quibus ex pluribus pauca tibi referam, quæ paulo antequam huc adventares sunt patrata. Quædam matrona quæ circiter vij. annos erat paralytica, quidam adolescens per vij. annos mutus, quædam puella à nativitate cæca, post transacta x. annorum spacia, quidam juvenis manum habens aridam, item manus servule cujusdam sacerdotis die dominico in orto olera colligentis, lignum quod manu tenebat et unde herbas evellere desiderabat illicitè, tam firmiter adhæsit quod nullus hominum eum per quinque annos potuit dirimere, per merita sanctæ Etheldredæ curati sunt. Quapropter te moneo magister ut ab illicitis inchoamentis cesses. Qui noluit à sceleratissimo conamine cessare. Sed convocavit quatuor juvenes ex clericali ordine quos conduxit in ruinam faciles et condemnationem perpetrato crimine. Qui accipientes surculos marathri unde compta fuit superficies pavimenti, quosque ponentes in sarcophagi foramine quod prius bipenni pagani in eodem fuerat factum, post dirum magistrum omnes ausi sunt corpus sanctæ virginis tangere, nec adhuc voluit quiescere, sed utrum vestes ejus integræ essent affectavit videre. Accipiens igitur candelam, adhæsit virgulæ et per foramen immisit tumuli, quæ cecidit super sacras vestes ejus ac mansit donec tota cremata, eas contingere flamma metuente. Qui nec adhuc cessavit, sed virgam in uno capite acuit et vestibis virginis infixit, quas usque foramen pertraxit, et quia nullam læsionem habebant cœpit mirari. Qui confestim ingentem macheram arripuit, et exiguam exinde particulam dæmonum suasionem incidit, ceteris sodalibus, quatuor videlicet prædictis juvenibus, ipsam vestem sursum trahentibus et omni virtute retinentibus. Quæ postquam sceleratorum contactu est violata, ita ab eorum immundis manibus est subtracta, sicut retulit presbyter qui hujus criminis fuit particeps, quasi eam infra tumbam duo fortissimi milites retraherent, et quasi ipsa adhuc virgo sancta vivens eis diceret: nec Dei nec meam habeatis gratiam quia ausi estis corrumpere sindonem meam.

Quid multa? mox ingens pestis arripuit domum illius sacerdotis quæ conjugem ejus ac liberos omnes cita morte percussit, totamque progeniem funditus extirpavit, ipsum quoque ad alterum commigrantem locum post paucos dies deduxit ad infernum: quoniam non purgavit per pœnitentiam scelus commissum: sed et de quatuor ipsius fautoribus divina ultio peremit duos ociùs: tertius cum esset institutus officiis litteralibus ecclesiasticis ac sacerdotalibus, ita protinus in amentiam versus, quicquid scivit est oblitus quasi nichil didicisset penitus, qui adhuc vivens luit pœnas de tam grandi facinore, quoniam per singulos menses perdit sensum mentis vigorem deficiente luna ætatem quam habebat repente. Quartus verò fuit prælibatus presbiter Alfelinus, qui et ipse gravi ægitudine correptus fermè per viij. menses mansit paralyticus, donec parentes sui mœsti ac dolentes quibus erat vinctus detulerunt eum cum plurimis muneribus ad corpus beatissimæ virginis. Qui dum ibidem ipsâ vigilarent nocte, promittentes per sacramenta satisfactionem, meruit eorum æger recipere sanitatem per virginis almæ Etheldredæ intercessionem. Et mane glorificantes cosni redemptorem, læti reversi sunt ad eorum mansionem. Ecce quod infideliter dubitantis temeraria generavit præsumptio, ecce quod injusta justè promeruit actio habeant ex hoc quilibet sacrarum virginum indigni attractatores reliquiarum, quia non nisi cum cordis munditia et humilitate id debent præsumere, sed nec quidem ecclesia sic ab iniquorum cessavit presbiterorum dominio, verum sub eorum naufragosa gubernatione usque ad decimum regni regis Eadgari annum fluctuabat. Hujus regis tempore, duo de magnatibus regis, Sigedwoldus episcopus natione Græcus, et Thurstanus genere Danus, visa loci altitudine magis eum cupiditate quam devotione à rege petierunt. Cumque pari ambitione decertarent, ne alter de alterius vel contemptu insultaret, vel optentu invideret, medium se interiecit quidam qui erat regi à secretis nomine Wlstanus de Delham, et hic divino magis instigatus nutu quam humano ductus affectu, ne alteri eorum cederet avaræ petitionis effectus, regem hac oratione convenit. ‘Domine rex cum tuæ salutis honori atque regno cuncti providere debemus, nemo nostrum consulit istorum petitioni esse adquiescendum, locus enim sanctus et celebris est talibusque indignus possessoribus cujus antiquam dignitatem, ne ignoranter peccare cogaris, paucis tibi si jusseris expedire non differram.’ Exposuitque regi per ordinem loci dignitatem, vitam et miracula gloriosæ virginis Etheldredæ et sororum suarum. Quo audito, sanctus Ethelwoldus Wyntoniensis episcopus, qui erat confessor domini regis et secretorum conscius, super auditis nimium delectatus emit à rege prædictam insulam integraliter ab omni jugo regalis exactionis liberam et quietam imperpetuum. Cujus regis auctoritate Ethelwoldus episcopus Wyntoniensis prædictos presbyteros inde expulit, et ecclesiam ipsam ab Inguar destructam et per c. annos desolatam atque regio fisco detentam diligenter innovavit, monachosque introduxit, et virum religiosum nomine Brythnotum, Wyntoniensis ecclesiæ præpositum eis ordinavit abbatem. Acta sunt hæc anno incarnationis dominicæ nongentesimo LXX. ex quo autem virgo Etheldreda fabricas incepit CCXCVII. à devastatione verò monasterii anno centesimo. Clericos quidem monachilem habitum suscipere consentientes in monachatum suscepit, renuentes de monasterio expulit: multas quoque terras tam per se emptas quam ab ipso rege gratis datas cum donis et ornamentis variis atque privilegio regis auctoritatis confirmatas Deo et sanctæ Etheldredæ totum commendavit, aliasque terras quamplurimas ab aliis emens ecclesiæ adjecit. Contulit etiam ecclesiæ nonnulla ornamenta, cappas videlicet plures, sed unam insignis operis.

Dedit etiam in auro et argento multa preciosa et magna quæ temporum vicissitudine infortunii ab ecclesia distracta penitus consumuntur. Ipse iterum post hæc accessit ad regem Edgarum, factaque conventionem ex integro emit ab eo totam adjacentem regionem prædictæ insulæ, scilicet xx. hydas terræ quas rex infra insulam habuit, sed et dignitatem et socam septem hundredorum et dimidii, duorum videlicet infra insulam, quinque verò et dimidii in provincia Orientalium Anglorum, et quinque hydas apud Meldeburne, et tres hydas cum dimidia apud Hernyngforde, et xij. hydas apud Northwolde, datis mutuo lx. hydibus, quas ipse de dono domini sui Edelstani regis apud Hertyngham habuerat, datoque insuper precio centum librarum cum aurea cruce mirifico opere polita reliquiisque referta, quam gloriosus rex in munimentum donorum suorum et loci libertatem cum textu mirifico super altare sanctæ Etheldredæ in Ely gratanter optulit. Has igitur terras à rege emptas, cum omnibus regis consuetudinibus et cum privilegio æternæ libertatis corroboratas, sanctus Ethelwoldus Deo et sanctæ Etheldredæ optulit: unde collectis omnibus terris quas ipse infra aquas et paludes et mariscum de Ely acquisivit Deoque et sanctæ Etheldredæ dedit inventæ sunt lx. hydæ. Item præfatus rex dedit sanctæ Etheldredæ xl. hydas terræ in pago qui dicitur Hatfelde. Ipse etiam dedit sancto Ethelwoldo manerium de Sudburne, eo pacto ut ipse transferret regulam sancti Benedicti de Latino in Anglicum, quod idem episcopus sanctæ Etheldredæ optulit. Idem rex clamidem suam de insigni purpura ad modum lorice auro undique contextam illuc contulit, de qua infula facta est. Dedit etiam de sua capella capsides et phylacteria cum nonnullorum sanctorum reliquiis indumentorum quæque insignia.

Privilegium Regis Edgari de Libertate Loci.

[Ex Historia Eliensis Ecclesiæ. MS. in Bibliotheca Bodleiana (inter codices Cantuar. l. 58.) lib. 2. fol. 2. b. et Pat. 1 R. II. p. 5. m. 34.]

OMNIPOTENTIS Dei cunctorum scepra regentis moderamine regum, immò totius seculi, creaturæque cunctæ indissolubili regimine æquè gubernantis habenas, ipsius nutu et gratia suffultus, ego Ædgarus basileus dilectæ insulæ Albionis, subditis nobis sceptris Scottorum, Cumbrorumque ac Britonum, et omnium circumcirca regionum quieta pace perfruens, studiosus sollicitè de laudibus creatoris omnium occupor addendis, ne nostra inertia nostrisque diebus plus æquo servitus ejus tepescere videatur, sed greges monachorum et sanctimonialium hac nostra tempestate, (ipso opitulante qui se nobiscum usque in finem seculi manere promittere dignatus est) ubique regno in nostro desertis monasteriis, antiquitus Dei famulatu deficiente nunc reviviscente, assurgere cupimus sub sancti Benedicti abbatis regula viventes, quatinus illorum precatu et vigente religione sancta servitus Dei nos ipsum rectorem placatum habere queamus. Vnde frequentes monitus venerabilis Ædelwoldi episcopi corde tenus pertractans, cupio honorare hoc privilegio rebusque copiosis monasterium quod in regione Ely situm dinoscitur antiquitus, ac sancti Petri apostolorum principis honori dedicatum, decoratumque reliquiis et miraculis almæ virginis Ætheldredæ, cujus vita venerabilis nobis modernis historiâ Anglorum promitur, quæ etiam incorruptibili corpore hactenus condita marmoreo albo perdurat.

Locus denique prædictus deficiente servicio Dei nostra ætate regali fisco deditus erat, sed à secretis nostris Ædhelwoldus dei que amator diocesi Wintoniensi civitatis fungens, datis nobis sexaginta cassatis in villa quæ ab accolis Hertingas nuncupatur, mutuavit locum prædictum cum appendiciis ejus, augmentavitque mutationi tres villas quas hiis nominibus vocitantur, Meldeburne, Aerningeforde, Northwolde, et ipse illico monachos meo consilio et auxilio Dei fideliter regulari norma servientes per plures inibi collocavit, quibus Brithnodum quendam sapientem ac bene morigeratum virum, Præpositi jure præfecit. Cui effectui admodum ego congaudens, lætabundus pro amore Christi et sancti Petri, quem sub Deo patronum michi elegi, et sanctæ virginis Ætheldredæ Deo dilectæ et ejus prosapiæ sanctæ illic quiescentis, et pro animabus patrum meorum Regum antiquorum augmentare largiter mutationem illam hiis donis, testibus consiliariis meis volo. Hoc est decem millia anguillarum, quæ omni anno in villa quæ Wellen dicitur pro expeditione reddantur fratribus ad victualia, modò et deinceps concedo, et inter paludes causas seculares duorum centuriatum in Wichelawe in provincia Orientalium Saxonum benigne ad fratrum necessaria sanciendo largior: quinetiam omnes causas seu correptiones transgressionum justæ legis in sermonibus secularibus omnium terrarum sive villarum ad monasterium prædictum ritè pertinentium, et quas in futurum ævum Dei providentia loco præfato largitura est, sive emptione sive donatione aut aliqua justa acquisitione, stent cause seculares emendatione tam clemente examine fratrum loco manencium victui vel vestitui necessaria ministrantes. Adhuc insuper omnem quartum nummum reipublicæ in provincia Grantecestriæ fratribus reddendum jure perpetuo censeo. Et sit hoc privilegium liberum, quasi munus nostrum Deo devotè oblatum et sanctis ejus prædictis ad remedium animarum nostrarum, sicuti præfati sumus, ut nullus regum vel principum aut ullius ordinis quislibet præpotens imposterum obstinata tyrannide aliquid horum infringere præsumat si non vult habere omnipotentis Dei maledictionem et sanctorum ejus et meam et patrum meorum, pro quibus ista omnia libera haberi volumus æterna libertate in æternum. Amen.

Hoc privilegium hujus donationis et libertatis fecimus scribi anno incarnationis Domini nostri Jesu Christi nongentesimo septuagesimo, indictione tertiadecima, anno regni mei æquè tertiodecimo, in villa regali quæ famoso vocabulo à solicolis Wlfamere nominatur; non clam in angulo sed sub divo palam evidentissimè, scientibus totius regni mei primatibus.

Hæc quoque constituta etiam nostra usitata sermone describi mandavimus, quo possint in auribus vulgi sonare, ne aliqua scrupulositate admisceri videantur, sed regia autoritate seu potestate nobis à Deo donata omnis contradictio funditus annulletur.

NUM. III.

Aliud Privilegium Ædgar Regis Abbatia de Ely concessum.

[Hist. Brit. et Angl. Script. vol. i. p. 519.]

UNIVERSA opum secularium patrimonia incertis nepotum hæredibus relinquuntur; et omnis mundi gloria, appropinquante vitæ mortis termino, ad nihilum reducta fatiscit. Idcirco terrenis caducarum [rerum] possessionibus semper mansura supernæ patriæ emolumenta adipiscentes domino patrocinate lucremur. Quamobrem ego Ædgarus totius Britannia Basileus, quandam ruris particulam, decem videlicet cassatos, in loco qui celebri et Lyntune nuncupatur vocabulo, domino ejusque generici Mariæ, nec non Ætheldrydæ perpetuæ virgini, ad monasterium quod in Elig situm est, ad usus monachorum ibi digentium perpetua largitus sum hæreditate, ut illo perpetualiter, cum omnibus utensilibus, pratis videlicet, pascuis, silvis pertineat. Ad hanc autem tellurem multa jugera ex diversis circumjacentibus villis pertinent, perpetua insignita libertate. Sit autem predictum rus omni terrenæ servitutis jugo liberum, tribus exceptis, rata videlicet expeditione, pontis arcisve restauratione. NUM. VII.

EDWARDUS Dei gratia rex Anglorum cunctis Christi fidelibus perpetuam in domino salutem. Cum rex et dominus rerum omnium Deus nullo indigens cuncta possideat, agit ineffabili qua hominem dilexit caritate, ut ex hiis quæ usui humano creata largitus ministrat, ipse aliqua quasi donaria gratanter recipiat, quo se colentes ad suæ servitutis intentionem devotiores reddat quos postmodum perpetua secum libertate regnare concedat. Quæ servitutis intentione antiqui patres succensi, sua primùm domino studuerunt impendere, postmodum se, mutuantes terrenis celestia, temporalibus sempiterna. Quorum vestigia Ædgarus avus meus ac prædecessor septrigeræ potestatis diligenter subsequens et exempla perfectius implens, Elyense cænobium et alia, illud tamen egregiè præter cætera restauravit, restaurans ditavit, ditans omnimoda libertate quietavit, consultus adjutusque sedula sancti Ædhwoldi summonitione vel copiosa prædiorum augmentatione, quod et sancto Dunstano alacriter colaudante, cunctisque primatibus regni privilegio firmatum est. Ædelredus quoque pater meus suæ gubernationis tempore quædam prædia eidem loco contulit, prioremque libertatem suæ suorumque concessionis privilegio solidavit.

Horum ego Edwardus Dei gratia successor licet indignus; cum in hiis devotam circa Dei ecclesiam religionem vel religiosæ devotionis operationem longè dispar conspicio, veneranda eorum statuta nequaquam infringere præsumo, sed fortiter quantum in mea efficacia est defensare et utcumque augere desidero: unde et præfato cænobio villam nomine Lakinghede firmè et hæreditariè subjicio, quo illorum aliquo modo jungar consortio, et sanctorum inibi multiplici meritorum laude quiescentium amplificer suffragio: libertatem ab eisdem ut diximus restitutam, ab ipsa autem regina virgine sanctissima prius habitatione possessam, possessione sanctificatam, sanctificatione venerabilem factam, inviolatam manere et omnimodò provehendam censeo; quod et privilegii attestatione meorumque consensu fidelium stabile presentibus et futuris pronuncio.

In comitatu Grantecestriæ ipsa insula cum duobus centuriatibus et omnibus appendiciis extra, Swafham, Horningeseye, Dictune, Havechestune, Neutone, Stapelford, Scelford, Tripelave, Meldeburne, Ereningeford, Grantedene, Stevecheworde, Belesham, Fuelburne, Theveresham, Westlai, Trumpintone, Wratinge, Snelwelle, Dittune, Herdwic, Middeltune, Impetune, Cotenham, Wivelingham, omnisque quartus nummus reipublicæ in provincia Grantecestriæ, et aliqua terræ in ipsa villa.

In comitatu Suthfolc, Hertherst, Glamesford, Hecham, Ratelesdene, Drenthestune, Neddinge, Berthinges, Bercham, Wederingsete, Liuremere, Acolt, Wichelave quinque et dimidium centuriatum, Sudburne, Meltune, Kingestune, Hoo, Stocche, Debham, Brithwell, Oddebruge, Brandune.

In comitatu Northfolc, Feltewelle, Brugeham, Medelwolde, Crochestune, Watinge, Mundeford, Berc, Westfled, Fingheam, Notwelle, Walepol cum appendiciis, Merham, Derham, Thorp, Pulham.

In comitatu Essex, Hatestok, Litelbirig, Stratlai, duæ Rodinges, Ratendune, Amerdene, Brocheseue, Estre, Fanbruge, Tirlinges.

In comitatu Hertford, Hadham, Hethfeld, Keleshelle.

In comitatu Huntendune, Spadlwic cum appendiciis, Somersham, Colne, Bluntesham.

Hæc et aliorum appendicia sive majora sive minora, insuper omnia à quocumque adjecta vel adjicienda bonorum testimonio possessa, cum omni sacha et socha sine aliqua exceptione secularis vel ecclesiasticæ justitiæ illi monasterio damus, data quietam clamamus eadem qua sancti viri illud glorificaverunt libertate, quo neque episcopus nec comes nec alicujus exactionis minister sine licentia vel advocacione abbatis et fratrum ullo modo se præsumant intromittere, vel rem sanctæ aliquo modo inquietare, sitque in eorum ut semper fuit arbitrio à quocumque potissimum elegerint ordinari vel sua sanctificari episcopo.

Conveniente equidem dispositione Regina hac utitur libertate, quæ regem et regnum mundumque florentem deserens, insulam pro dotalitio possedit, ubi sponso suo Christo integerrimè servivit, quod et caro florens in tumulo veste etiam incorrupta ostendit.

Hæc quemcumque voluit episcopum ascivit; sed sanctus Wilfridus Eboracensis archiepiscopus familiarior ei extitit, qui eam cum suo cœtu virginum consecravit. Cum autem multo posteriori tempore, servicio Dei plenè deficiente, Ædgarus restauraret cœnobium, posito ibi grege monachorum, quibus abbates præfecit quos sanctus Ethelwoldus et sanctus Dunstanus sanctusque Oswaldus ordinaverunt, et quamdiu vixerunt quasi suis consuluerunt. Post hos quosque meliores vinculo caritatis sibi adtrahebant, è quibus aliquos secum in monasterio retinebant.

Harum ergo consuetudinum cum non fuissem constitutor, malo esse testis et fidelis conservator quàm perfidus et detestabilis eversor, Deum summum servatorem invocans, ut qui hæc constituta sanctorum nostrumque infregerit testamentum, sanctorum et omnipotentis nisi pœniteat intra triduum, induens maledictionem sicut vestimentum, dum Judæ æmulatur, sustineat opprobrium.

Quàm sollicita fuerat pii regis in sua largitate benignitas, testatur sequens apostolici privilegium, quod individua societate sub eodem contentum signaculo regiam munificentiam Petri auctoritate confirmat. Voluit enim rex piissimus inde institutionis suæ habere firmamentum, unde totius ecclesiæ processit fundamentum, et tanquam in futuræ stabilitatis oraculum non alterum quàm Petri adhibere signaculum. Ut ergo fides vincat perfidiam, veritas falsitatem, et omnem de cætero justa possessio repellat calumpniam, Victor papa et nomine et auctoritate legitimæ donationi incurrit, significans invictum esse munus quod roborat.

VICTOR episcopus, servus servorum Dei, Eduuardo regi Anglorum filio dilectissimo cunctisque principibus regni salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Privilegium apostolica et Romanæ ecclesiæ auctoritate antiquitus conscriptum, et multorum sæpius attestacione auctorizatum super cœnobium Elyense, quod gloriosi sanctæ ecclesiæ patres pio affectu larga manu constituerunt, vestræ piæ petitioni succinctè renovamus, ac perpetua stabilitate firmamus, immò firmatum conclamamus.

Mandamus ergo et jure apostolico præcipimus liberam esse ecclesiam et omnia quæ ibi continentur vel adjacent vel adjicientur, cellis, terris, agris, pascuis, paludibus, silvis, venationibus, aquis, piscationibus, libertatibus, serviciis debitis, decimis, censu, capitationibus, legibus, consuetudinibus, causarum discussionibus, correctionibus, emendationibus, sive ecclesiasticis sive secularibus, et omnino quæcumque scriptis vel testamentis ipsius loci vel testimonio bonorum hominum rememorari possunt, quæ à regibus vel ab aliquo fidelium sanctis in illo monasterio collata vel concessa sunt, quo nemo ex hiis subtrahere vel diminuere aut disperdere aliqua occasione judicio vel potestate præsumat, nec episcopus vel alicujus ordinis minister se intromittat. Si quis verò malignitatis spiritu commotus hanc libertatem loci illius infringere, nostrumque privilegium contemnere vel abjicere voluerit, à Deo et ab omnibus sanctis ejus sit condemnatus, et à nobis in quantum licet excommunicatus, et a consortio omnium fidelium separatus nisi resipiscat.

Epistola Anselmi Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi ad Papam Paschalem II.

DOMINO et patri reverendo Paschali summo pontifici Anselmus ecclesiæ Cantuariensis, debitam obedientiam cum fidei obsequio et orationibus. Quoniam robor dispositionum quæ utiliter fiunt in ecclesia Dei, de vestra pendet auctoritate prudentiæ, quando fiunt, ad vestrum referendæ sunt notitiam et iudicium, ut, cum apostolico assensu fuerint confirmatæ, nulla præsumptione à posteris, quæ salubriter statuta sunt, queant violari, sed rata permaneant in perpetuum. In Anglia est quidam episcopatus, scilicet Lincolniensis, cujus diocesis tam ampla est ut ad ea quæ non nisi ab episcopali persona fieri queunt unus episcopus plene sufficere non possit. Quod cum consideraret rex, et episcopi, et principes, et alii rationabiles et religiosi viri regni Anglorum, ad utilitatem ecclesiæ visum consilium est episcopatum præfatum in duos dividere; ita ut sedes episcopalis in quadam abbacia quæ sita est in insula vocata Heli, et est intra præfata diocesim constituatur, monachis ibidem permanentibus sicut sunt multi episcopatus qui monachos in matre ecclesia habent, non canonicos. Quod libenter concedit ipse episcopus Lincolniensis Robertus nomine, quia pro iis quæ assumuntur de sua ecclesia ad instaurandum novum episcopatum in Heli, tantum ecclesiæ Lincolniensi restauratur, ut ipse sufficiens et gratum sibi esse fateatur. Cui rei mihi tum propter prædictam necessitatem, tum propter multitudinem prædictorum qui in hoc consentiunt, visum est, ut, salva vestra auctoritate, assensum præberem. Præcatur igitur suppliciter mea parvitas, quatenus hoc quod pro utilitate ecclesiæ sic dispositum est, vestra auctoritate in perpetuum roboretur, ne à posteris ulla præsumptione (quod bene statutum fuerit) violetur. Oramus Dominum omnipotentem ut Ecclesiæ suæ vos in diuturna prosperitate custodiat.

Privilegium Paschalis Papæ II.

[MS. Cotton. Brit. Mus. Tib. A. vi. fol. 125 b.]

PASCHALIS episcopus, servus servorum Dei, venerabili fratri Anselmo Cantuariensi archiepiscopo, et cæteris comprovincialibus episcopis, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Inter cætera regna terrarum ad apostolicæ sedis dilectionem atque obedientiam Anglorum regnum specialiter pertinere apostolicæ sedis scripta et Anglicarum hystoriarum series manifestant. Quæ nimirum causa sollicitudinem nostram propensius impellit illius regni ecclesias familiariter confovare, et earum dispositionibus sollicitus invigilare. Lincolniensem itaque episcopatum tantum tanquam spatiosum ex filii nostri regis nostrisque litteris agnovimus, ut ad ea quæ episcopalis sunt officii peragenda unus nullatenus sufficere possit episcopus. Quapropter ex voluntate Lincolniensis episcopi postulat a nobis idem karissimus noster filius et christianissimus rex Anglorum Henricus, quatinus in parte una episcopatus ipsius ex apostolicæ sedis permissione novus episcopatus constituatur, in loco videlicet qui Ely vocatur: cujus nos petitionibus quia religiose videbantur, assensum libenter præbuimus, et episcopatum in loco præfato constituendi ex apostolica auctoritate licentiam damus: statuentes ut sedes episcopalis in loco prædicto constituta omni deinceps tempore perseveret. Parrochiam quoque quam vestra fraternitas cum prædicto fratre Lincolniensi episcopo et regis providentia eidem episcopatu designaverit perpetuo possideat. Porro de monasterio in quo sedes episcopalis constituitur Anglicorum monasteriorum in quibus episcopi constituti sunt, consuetudo servabitur. Hujus constitutionis conservatores omnipotentis Dei et apostolorum suorum benedictionem perpetuo perfruantur. Amen. Ego Paschalis catholicæ ecclesiæ episcopus. Data apud Troiam per manum Leonis Romanæ ecclesiæ diaconus Cardinalis, xi. kal. Epistola Paschalis Papæ ad Henricum Regem.

[Ex Historia Eliensis Ecclesiæ MS. in Biblioth. Bodl. ut supr. lib. iii. fol. 1 a.]

PASCHALIS episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilecto in Christo filio Henrico glorioso regi Anglorum salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Omnipotenti Deo gratias agimus quod talem te nostris temporibus regem constituit, qui et terrenum regnum sapienter ad honorem Dei gubernas, et æterni regis sollicitudinem ante oculos mentis portas. Postulasti siquidem à nobis per literas, ut in loco qui Ely dicitur, novus ex apostolica auctoritate episcopatus constituatur, quia Lincolniensem episcopatum tantæ magnitudinis esse dixisti, ut ad peragenda ea quæ episcopalis sunt officii unus episcopus nullatenus sufficere possit. Pro quo et devotionem tuæ voluntatis laudamus, et dispositioni assensum præbemus, ita tamen ut in celebri loco constituatur, ne nomen episcopi, quod absit, vilescat. Ad hoc enim episcopus constituitur, ut populum Dei et verbo doceat et vita informet, et ad verum pastorem domini commissarum igitur animarum luera reportet. In aliis quoque de quibus rogasti, licet quædam ibi inordinata videantur, tuæ tamen voluntati refragari nequaquam valemus.

Novit præterea gloria vestra Dominum Herveum episcopum, quem vita et scientia commendat non modica, nimia barbarorum ferocia et persecutione de sede sua expulsum, et multa fidelium fratrumque suorum cede fuisse fugatum. Cujus ut scientia fructum qui non periit afferre, et vita bonum valeat Dei populo exemplum præbere, volumus et rogamus ut si quæ eum apud vos vacans ecclesia vocaverit, ibi ex auctoritate apostolica constituatur, ne infructuoso diu silentio torpeat, qui vitæ cœlestis documenta in scientia et moribus portat. Omnipotens Deus apostolorum suorum precibus et vos et prolem vestram custodiat, et cæleste post terrenum vobis regnum concedat. Dat. xj. kal. Decembris.

HERVEUS Dei gratia Elyensis episcopus primus, uniuersis ecclesiæ filiis, tam præsentibus quam futuris, salutem. Cum Deo disponente cœnobium Elyense regimini meo foret commissum, cœnobique nomine deleto, in episcopii dignitatem domini Papæ Paschalis auctoritate, et principis nostri Henrici concessu, procerumque suorum consilio commutatum fuisset, decrevi necessaria monachorum a rebus episcopalibus separare, monachorum quippe necessaria prius per omnem ejusdem cœnobii potestatem communiter capiebantur. Ego vero si eodem modo in posterum maneret, aliquam tali de causa seditonem timens pullulare, res monachorum a rebus episcopalibus separatim ordinavi, et ad ipsorum necessaria eisdem ad horam assentientibus. NUM. XXX.

Literæ archiepiscopi Cantuar. domino Regi, ut permittat Priorem et Capitulum Elien. gaudere libere suis possessionibus, vacante scil. Episcopatu; et quod revocet præsentationes factas ad quasdam ecclesias London.

EXCELLENTISSIMO principi domino Edwardo Dei gratia regi Angliæ illustri, domino Hibernæ, et duci Aquitaniæ, Robertus permissione divina, &c. salutem in eo, per quem reges regnant, et principes dominantur. Patroni benignitas eo semper debet affectu dirigi in suæ advocationis ecclesiis atque locis, ut eos in adversis ejus protectionis consolatio muniat, et tanto magis ab ipsis dispendium turbationis depellat, quanto eosdem extra sæculi tumultus sub religionis honestate conversantes, divino cultui perpetuo mancipatos decet uberiori tranquillitate potiri. Vacante siquidem nuper episcopatu Elien. nedum ipsius custodiam vobis ratione temporalium competentem, verum, ut intelleximus ipsum prioratum plenum, et suo priore consultum, in manus suas cepit regalis potestas, et ad ecclesias de Wisebeche, et de Foxton, per bonæ memoriæ Hugonem, quondam Elien. episcopum, monasterio Elien. et monachis Deo ibidem jugiter famulantibus, piæ devotionis affectu in proprios usus canonice assignatus, et per felicis recordationis fratres, Robertum de Killewardby, et Johannem de Peckham, dudum Cantuar. archiepiscopos, prædecessores nostros, de consensu Cantuar. capituli confirmatas prout in hujusmodi appropriationum et confirmationum literis originalibus vidimus plenius contineri, licet post varios sumptus et labores a multis retroactis temporibus per eosdem religiosos quiete possessas, nobis quosdam seculares clericos præsentavit; qualiter altera dictarum ecclesiarum, viz. de Wisebeche, ad refectorem omnium monachorum, simul duntaxat in refectorio servata unitatis forma, ubi prius vix octo de conventu in eodem loco propter exilitatem portionum assignatarum eidem, cæteris sparsim in diversis locis prioratus quotidianum cibum inconvenienter quærentibus, pasci valebant. Reliqua vero de Foxton ad augmentationem portionis elemosynariæ, ad quam prius pro alimonia pauperum ac senum, debilium, et infirmorum recreationem nihil præter fragmenta, quæ supererant de mensis monachorum, obvenerat, conferentis ordinatione salubri fuerat deputata, plene forsitan non advertens. E quibus nimirum dictis religiosis, et eorum monasterio timetur, quod Deus avertat, irrecuperabile detrimentum inferri, aliarumque ecclesiarum status et libertates, non sine gravi animarum periculo, eorum exemplo pernicioso in posterum perturbari, nisi regiæ celsitudinis pietas afflictis compatiens, et suorum jura conservans, debitæ recreationis remedio subveniat in hac parte. Cum igitur latere circumspectionem regiæ non credamus, quod per vacationem episcopatus nequaquam inducitur, priore superstite, vacatio prioratus, qui possessiones sibi separatas hactenus semper et divisas non communicant assignatas; dominationi vestræ humiliter supplicamus, quatenus dictum prioratum in statu debito confoventes religiosis prædictis liberam possessionum suarum dispositionem, et bonorum ipsius monasterii administrationem, remoto præfato impedimento, sicut convenit et tenemini, permittatis; ac regiæ clementiæ ocu-los ad eorum indigentiam dirigentes, jure suo pristino et possessione tranquilla in dictis ecclesiis ipsos gaudere, divini cultus intuitu, jubeatis; ut ex zelo, quem pro honore Dei, et ecclesiae, sanctaeque religionis geritis, vestrorum apud Deum augeatur cumulus meritorum. Valeat et crescat semper in Christo cum gaudio regia celsitudo. Dat. apud Cherring. 3 idus Martii, anno Dom. M.CC.XCVIII.

NUM. XXXI.

EXCELLENTISSIMO principi domino Edwardo Dei gratia, &c. Robertus, &c. Licet variis incommodis, quae prioratus Eliensis contra morem solitum jamdudum sustinuit, et adhuc patitur hiis diebus, paterno compatienter affectu super eo, quod maxime idem prioratus nondum vacans, sed plenus et suo priore consultus, in manus capiebatur regiae potestatis; et quod ad ecclesias de Wysebeche, et de Foxton eidem prioratui et monachis Deo famulantibus ibidem in usus probos, juxta piam ordinationem de ipsis factam, canonice assignatas, tanquam ad vacantes, nobis praesentati fuerunt clerici saeculares; per nostras literas vestrae supplicaverimus majestati, quod dicti prioratus vestrae advocacionis statum et jura debite conservantes, causasque appropriationis dictarum ecclesiarum tam pias, quam necessarias advertentes, super praemissis eidem subveniretis remedio competenti, sicut tenor hujusmodi literarum nostrarum plenius exprimebat. Idem tamen prioratus de gravaminibus hujusmodi nullum omnino, de quo miramur et dolemus, adhuc sentit relevamen, quin potius magis timetur oppressionum ejus continuatio minus justa, et plurium cumulatio tormentorum. Cum enim ex parte monachorum dicti prioratus ejusdem liberatio, et bonorum ipsius libera dispositio nuper a vestra clementia, sicut intelleximus, fuisset humiliter postulata, et a quibusdam de vestris ad quos dictorum monachorum nuncii in ea parte, pro remedio hujusmodi obtinendo a vobis, fuerant transmissi, extitisset responsum, quod nisi capitulum Elien. Johanni de Langeton, clerico vestro, in episcopum ejusdem loci quanquam in discordia electo, ad prosequendum electionis suae negotium sumptus et expensas de bonis ipsius monachis provideret, liberationem non consequeretur aliquid, quam optabat, molestiis gravioribus eidem nihilominus comminatis. Quia vero praefati religiosi, etsi forsitan alias ad sumptus hujusmodi teneantur, ad ministrandum tamen eosdem non debeant per alicujus metus, vel compulsione violentiam, et praecipue potestatis laicae coerceri; dominationem regiam affectuose rogamus, et iteratis precibus excitamus in Domino Jesu Christo, quatenus gravaminibus hujusmodi, prout convenit, revocatis, dicti prioratus vestri statum debitum et antiquum in pacis tranquillitate, et quietis dulcedine dignemini confovere, juxta seriem literarum nostrarum vobis prius directarum, et ipsius jura conservare integra et illaesa. Valeat etc. Dat. apud Cherring, 16 cal. Junii, Anno Dom. etc.

Quocirca discretioni vestrae committimus et mandamus, quatenus in ecclesia Elien. citationis edicto aliquo die festivo publice proposito, praefatum Johannem de Langeton nominatim et in specie, necnon et in genere omnes illos, quorum interest in hac parte se opponere contra electionem praedictam, citetis peremptorie, quod compareant sufficienter et legitime coram nobis, aut commissariis vel auditoribus deputandis a nobis, tertio die juridico post festum exaltationis S. EDWARDUS Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, et dux Aquitanniæ, omnibus ad quos litteræ præsentis pervenerint, salutem. Sciatis, quod per finem mill. marcarum quem Johannes prior sanctæ Etheldredæ Eliensis et ejusdem loci conventus fecerunt nobiscum, prioratum illum quem ratione episcopatus Eliensis, per mortem bonæ memoriæ Willielmi de Luda nuper episcopi ejusdem loci vacantis, et in manu nostra existentis, capi fecimus in manum nostram, eisdem priori et conventui, cum libertatibus, rebus, possessionibus, et omnibus aliis ad prioratum illum spectantibus, una cum exitibus inde medio tempore perceptis, reddidimus. Volentes et concedentes pro nobis et hæredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, quod iidem prior et conventus prioratum illum cum libertatibus et pertinentiis suis prædictis, separatum ab episcopatu prædicto, habeant et teneant imperpetuum absque impedimento nostri vel hæredum nostrorum, vicecomitum, escaetorum, et aliorum ballivorum nostrorum quorumcunque; ita quod nos seu hæredes nostri, prioratum illum, libertates aut possessiones ejusdem futuris temporibus, ratione vacationis ejusdem episcopatus seu prioratus prædicti, in manus nostras nullatenus seysiemus. Salvo semper jure nostro et hæredum nostrorum tempore vacationum episcopatus prædicti, quo ad collationem officiorum et aliorum, si quæ ad nos ratione vacationum illarum pertineat in hac parte. Ita tamen quod occasione illa nichil de bonis prædicti prioratus ad opus nostrum seu hæredum nostrorum per ministros quoscunque levetur seu etiam capiatur. ANNO regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis decimo mota fuit contentio inter dictum regem et Galfridum de Burgo quondam Elyens. episcopum super libertatibus Elyensis ecclesiae in comitatibus Suffolchiae et Norfolchiae, unde facta fuit Inquisitio per praeceptum domini regis sub hac forma subscripta. Jurata capta de consensu partium qualem seisinam ecclesia Elyens. habuit in initio guerrae motae inter dominum Johannem regem et barones suos de libertatibus suis, et qualem praedecessores G. tunc Elyens. episcopi habuerunt tempore regis Ricardi avunculi domini regis de retorno brevium, et de averiis captis, et de placitis infra hundr. et dim. de Mitford, infra quinque hundr. et dimid. de Wykelauhe, et de Trilling, et de Wyniston, et de amerciamentis colligendis tam de aliis feodis quam suis, exceptis thesauro et mурdro, de quibus Johannes quondam Elyens. episcopus nullam libertatem vel curiam habere potuit. Et sicut idem episcopus cognovit quod placita illa debent praesentari ad comitatum de omnibus hundredis praedictis, sicut de hundredo de Mitford; et capta fuit jurata per istos milites subscriptos, Thom. Buhurd, Johannem de Lodnes, Fraricum de Hakeford, Willielmum de White-well, Rogerum filium Osberti, Radulfum de Muncy, Hubertum Garnegan, Willielmum de Oyrisi, Thom. de Doddenesse, Galfridum de Gattestorp, qui jurati dicunt quod tempore Willielmi de Lunchampo episcopi Elyensis, idem episcopus tali usus fuit libertate quod vic. Norfolch et Suffolch misit retorna brevium clausorum ballivis episcopi de praedictis hundredis, et ipsi per retorna illa tenuerunt placita infra omnia praedicta hundreda, et similiter de averiis captis et de placitis quas vicecomes potuit tenere. Et ipsi ballivi infra eadem hundreda collegerunt amerciamenta et fines tam de aliis feodis quam suis, et semper fuit ecclesia illa in seisina de illis libertatibus usque ad initium guerrae motae inter dominum J. regem et barones suos et quæsiti quis habuit amerciamenta de illis feodis dixerunt quod nescierunt cui remanserunt. Quæsiti etiam in quali seisina fuit ecclesia ante tempus praedicti Willielmi episcopi Elyensis, dixerunt quod nescierunt. Et placita de thesauris et murdris remanent domino regi.

BISHOPRICK OF DURHAM.

WEREMOUTH and JARROW Monasteries were the most ancient of any within the limits of the county of Durham: Weremouth being dedicated to St. Peter, and Jarrow to St. Paul.

WEREMOUTH was founded in 674, in the fourth year of Egfrid king of Northumberland; and JARROW in 684: both having for their founder Benedict Biscop, or Biscopius, a monk, whose life was written, with those of the other abbats of the two monasteries, by the venerable Bede.

The two foundations of Weremouth and Jarrow were so singularly connected in their early history, that, to use the expression of Simeon of Durham, they seem to have been one monastery built upon two sites. They are several times mentioned, in the singular number, as the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul. Bede himself received his early education within their precincts.^a

Egfrid king of Northumberland appears to have been a considerable benefactor at the foundations of both monasteries.^b

^a Simeon of Durham, mentioning the birth and education of Bede, says, "Hujus sanctissimi patris [Cuthberti] solitariae vitae anno secundo, qui est incarnationis de.lxxvii. imperii vero regis Egfridi septimus, ex quo vero Theodorus archiepiscopus Britanniam venerat, nonus, Beda natus est in provincia Northanimbrorum in territorio MONASTERII APOSTOLORUM PETRI et PAULI quod est ad Wiramura et in Girvum. In quod monasterium cura propinquorum cum esset septem annorum, datus est educandus reverentissimo abbati Benedicto, ac deinde Ceolfrido, anno scilicet decimo postquam idem monasterium Sancti Petri apostoli fundatum est, ex quo autem Sancti Pauli monasterium fuerat inceptum anno tertio. Quæ utraque monasteria tanta pace et concordia, et eadem familiaritate et fraterna societate fuerant conjuncta, ut sicut ipse Beda postea describit, pro uno in duobus locis posito haberentur monasterio. Unde ipse in Historia Anglorum unius mentionem faciens, Monasterium, inquit, Petri et Pauli quod est ad hostium Wiri amnis, et juxta amnem Tina in loco qui vocatur in Girvum." Script. x. Twysd. col. 4. Compare also Bede, edit. Smith, pp. 295, 296. Sim. Dunelm. ut supr. col. 94. Jo. Brompt. col. 774.

^c Nec plusquam unius anni spatio post fundatum monasterium interjecto, Benedictus, oceano transmissio, Gallias petens, cæmentarios qui lapideam sibi ecclesiam juxta Romanorum quem semper amabat morem facerent, postulavit, accepit, attulit. Et tantum in operando studii præ amore beati Petri in cujus honorem faciebat exhibuit, ut intra unius anni circulum ex quo fundamenta sunt jacta, culminibus superpositis, missarum inibi solennia celebrari videres. Proximante autem ad perfectum opere, misit legatarios Galliam, qui vitri factores, artifices videlicet Britannis eatenus incognitos, ad cancellandas ecclesie porticumque et cœnaculorum ejus fenestras adducerent. Factumque est, et venerunt: nec solum opus postulatum compleverunt, sed et Anglorum ex eo gentem hujusmodi artificium nosse ac discere fecerunt: artificium nimirum vel lampadis ecclesie claustris, vel vasorum multifariis usibus non ignobiliter aptum. Sed et cuncta quæ ad altaris et

In constructing the church of WEREMOUTH, Benedict Biscop is expressly said to have brought workmen from France, to build it after the Roman manner; and he prosecuted his work with such extraordinary diligence, that, within the compass of a year after the foundations had been laid, the roof was put on, and divine service performed beneath it. Afterwards, when the building was nearly finished, he sent for artificers skilled in making glass, to glaze the windows both of the porticos and the principal parts of the church: an art, to which the inhabitants of Britain are said to have been previously strangers. He also introduced into it the choral service, after the manner in which it was performed at Rome:^c furnished his church with books, pictures, and other ornaments: and, finally,

BENEDICT BISCOP became himself the first abbat.

Bede informs us, that Benedict was descended of a noble family; and that he was in the court of Oswy, or Osuiu. His different journeys to Rome have been already mentioned in a note. The first appears to have been made in 653; the second, in 665; a third, in 667; the fourth, in 671; and the fifth and last journey, about 685.^d

Previous to the performance of the last journey, Benedict, by the bounty of Egfrid, was enabled to found JARROW Monastery:^e of which he constituted ecclesie ministerium competebant, vasa sancta, vel vestimenta, quia domi invenire non potuit, de transmarinis regionibus advehere religio- sus empor curabat."

"Et ut ea quosque quæ nec in Gallia quidem reperiri valebant, Romanis e finibus ecclesie suæ provisor impiger ornamenta vel munita conferret: quarta illo, post compositum juxta regulam monasterium, profectio completa, multipliciore quam prius spiritualium mercium fœnore cūmulatus rediit. Primo quod innumerabilem librorum omnis generis copiam apportavit: secundo quod reliquiarum beatorum apostolorum martyrumque Christi abundantem gratiam multis Anglorum ecclesiis profuturam advexit: tertio quod ordinem cantandi, psallendi, atque in ecclesia ministrandi juxta morem Romanæ institutionis suo Monasterio contradidit, postulato videlicet atque accepto ab Agathone papa, archicantore ecclesie beati apostoli Petri et abbate monasterii beati Martini Johanne, quem sui futurum magistrum monasterii Britannias, Romanum Anglis adduceret. Qui illo perveniens, non solum viva voce quæ Romæ didicit ecclesiastica discentibus tradidit; sed et non pauca etiam literis mandata reliquit, quæ hactenus in ejusdem monasterii bibliotheca memoriæ gratia servantur. Quartum, Benedictus non vile munus attulit, epistolam privilegii a venerabili papa Agathone cum licentia, consensu, desiderio, et hortatu Egfridi regis acceptam, qua monasterium quod fecit ab omni prorsus extrinseca irruptione tutum perpetuo redderetur ac liberum. Quintum, picturas imaginum sanctarum quas ad ornandum ecclesiam beati Petri apostoli quam construxerat detulit; imaginem videlicet beatæ Dei genitricis semperque virginis Mariæ, simul et duodecim apostolorum, quibus mediam ejusdem ecclesie testudinem, ducto a pariete ad parietem tabulato præingeret; imagines evangelicæ historiæ quibus australem ecclesie parietem decoraret; imagines visionum Apocalypsis beati Johannis, quibus septentrionalem æque parietem ornaret, quatinus intrantes ecclesiam omnes etiam literarum ignari, quaquaversum intenderent, vel semper amabilem Christi sanctorumque ejus, quamvis in imagine, contemplarentur aspectum; vel Dominicæ incarnationis gratiam vigilantiore mente recolerent; vel extremi discrimen examinis, quasi coram oculis habentes, districtius se ipsi examinare meminissent." Ven. Bedæ Vit. Abbat. edit. Smith, p. 295. In respect to the introduction of the choral service, compare also Bed. Hist. Eccles. lib. iv. c. 18.

^e "Igitur venerabilis Benedicti virtute, industria, ac religione, Rex Egfridus non minimum delectatus, terram quam ad construendum

About this time Benedict associated with himself EASTERUINUS in the abbacy of Weremouth:^a upon whose death, in 685, SIGFRID was appointed sub-abbat. Upon his death, in 689, the care of Weremouth remained entirely with Benedict. Benedict, however, dying of the palsy in the following year, CEOLFRID became sole abbat both of Weremouth and Jarrow.^b

The Charter of Privilege granted to Weremouth by Pope Agatho, which has been more than once hinted at in the notes, is again mentioned by Bede in his Ecclesiastical History;^c but, it is believed, is not now extant. Pope Sergius's letter to Ceolfrid will be found among the Charters appended to this account.^d

Bede, in his Lives of the Abbats of Weremouth and Jarrow, is minute upon the character and donations of Ceolfrid.^e In 716 he resigned his abbacy, and died soon after, on the 7th of the kalends of October, at Langres, while on a journey to Rome;^f having previously given his approval to the election of

HUAETBERHTUS as his successor.^g

Weremouth is stated to have suffered severely in the Danish wars;^h and is supposed to have been destroyed, about 867, in the irruption of Hinguar and Hubba. It was again destroyed, by fire, in the inroad made by Malcolm king of Scotland in 1070.ⁱ

Jarrow monastery is stated to have been destroyed by the Danes in the year 973:^k and again, in 1069, when William the Conqueror took his revenge upon the northern part of England.^l

The restoration of both monasteries, under the influence of Walcher, who was consecrated bishop of Durham in 1072, is detailed partly by Simeon of Durham, and partly by Dugdale in the account of St. Mary at York.^m monasterium ei donaverat, quia bene se ac fructuose donasse conspexit, quadraginta adhuc familiarum data possessione, augmentare curavit; ubi post annum missis Monachis numero ferme decem et septem, et præposito abbate ac presbytero Ceolfrido, Benedictus consultu immo etiam jussu præfati Egfridi regis Monasterium beati Pauli apostoli construxit, ea duntaxat ratione, ut una utriusque loci pax et concordia, eadem perpetua familiaritas conservaretur et gratia; ut sicut verbi gratia, corpus a capite per quod spirat non potest avelli, caput corporis sine quo non vivit nequit oblivisci, ita nullus hæc monasteria primorum apostolorum fraterna societate conjuncta aliquo ab invicem temptaret disturbare conatu." Bedæ Vit. Ab. edit. Smith, pp. 295, 296. Leland, Collect. edit. 1715, vol. 1. p. 102, ascribes the foundation of Jarrow entirely to Ceolfrid.

^c After the chapter "De Synodo facta in campo Haethfelda," Bede adds, Hist. Eccl. lib. iv. c. 18, "Intererat huic synodo, pariterque Catholicæ fidei decreta firmabat vir venerabilis Johannes archicantator ecclesiæ sancti apostoli Petri, et abbas monasterii beati Martini, qui nuper venerat a Roma per jussionem Papæ Agathonis, duce reverentissimo abbate Biscopo, cognomine Benedicto, cujus supra meminimus. Cum enim idem Benedictus construxisset monasterium Britannicæ, in honorem beatissimi apostolorum principis, juxta ostium fluminis Vuiri, venit Romam cum cooperatore ac socio ejusdem operis Ceolfrido, qui post ipsum ejusdem monasterii abbas fuit, quod et ante sæpius facere consueverat, atque honorifice a beatæ memoriæ Papa Agathone susceptus est: petiitque, et accepit ab eo in munimentum libertatis monasterii quod fecerat, epistolam privilegii ex auctoritate apostolica firmatam; juxta quod Egfridum regem voluisse, ac licentiam dedisse noverat, quo concedente et possessionem terræ largiente, ipsum monasterium fecerat."

^d Num. II.

ALDWINE, a monk of Winchcombe, with two associates, Elfwy and Renfrid, was first placed by the bishop at Jarrow:ⁿ within a few years from which, the inhabitants of the monastery growing too numerous, or from dissensions arising among them, they separated. Aldwine taking a few followers to Melros in Scotland; Renfrid removing to Whitby; and ELFWY remaining with the first settlers at Jarrow. Aldwine and his brethren suffering much from the persecutions of Malcolm king of Scotland, were, after many ineffectual letters and messages, recalled, under a threat of excommunication, by Walcher, who gave them for a residence the ruined monastery of St. Peter, Weremouth.

In 1083, Bishop William de Carlepho, the successor of Walcher, is stated to have carried an intention of his predecessor into effect. He removed the greater part of the monks from both monasteries to Durham, of which church Aldwine (who then presided over both Weremouth and Jarrow) became the first prior.^o

Weremouth and Jarrow becoming cells only, subordinate to the monastery of Durham, were now rarely inhabited by more than three or four monks each.

Prior Richard de Claxton, who resigned the government of Durham monastery in 1285, had assigned to him for a maintenance the cell of Weremouth, with the tithes of Sudwick; and Prior Galfrid de Burdon, in the year 1332, had that cell assigned him, with the tithes of Fulwell.^p

Hutchinson has preserved the names of two only of the "Magistri," or subordinate heads of the cell of Jarrow:

ALEXANDER DE LAMESLY, who occurs in 1333; and

JOHN DE NORTON, who occurs in 1353.^q

ⁿ Simeon of Durham states the bishop's endowment of the monastery in the first instance. "Cum enim eos ecclesiam ipsam reædificare et destructa monachorum habitacula videret velle restaurare, dedit eis ipsam villam Gyrvum, cum suis appenditiis, scilicet Preostun, Munnecatun, Heathewrthe, Heabyrun, Wivestou, Heortedun, ut et opera perficere, et sine indigentia ibi possent vivere." Script. x. Twysd. col. 43.

Leland, in his Collectanea, edit. 1770, p. 383, notices the donation of the relics of St. Oswin; together with the names of several benefactors to Jarrow who are not mentioned any where else.

"Waltherus comes Northumbr. dedit Tinemuth cum corpore S. Oswini monachis de Girwy. Quo tempore obtulit et Morkarum puerum monachi disciplina erudiendum.

The relics of St. Oswin, however, were afterwards restored to Tinemuth. See Lel. Collect. vol. i. p. 332. Simeon of Durham, mentioning the death of Walcher, who was murdered May 14, 1080, says, "Cujus occisione audita, fratres Gyrvensis monasterii ascendentes naviculam, ad locum navigarunt, et corpus patris sui et antistitis, vix propter vulnere frequentiam agnitum, et penitus omni tegmine spoliatum, cum gravi luctu impositum navi ad monasterium detulerunt. ^o Hutchinson, Hist. Durh. vol. ii. pp. 64, 65. Simeon of Durham, col. 50, 51, says, "Anno ab incarnatione Domini m.lxxxiiij. a transitu vero patris Cuthberti 397, ex quo autem ab Aldhmo episcopo incorruptum ejusdem patris corpus in Dunelmum est perlatum 89, qui est annus regni Willelmi 18, ex quo autem Aldwinus cum duobus sociis in provinciam Northanimbrorum venerat 10, episcopatus vero Willelmi tertio, 7 kal. ^p Hutchinson, ut supr. vol. ii. p. 505.

^q Ibid. p. 477.

He adds, that, long after this, in the time of Bishop Langley (who held the see of Durham from 1406 to 1437), the finances of Durham priory being at a low ebb, and not sufficient to maintain the burthens of its subordinate cells, and especially those of Weremouth and Jarrow, William Ebchester, one of the brethren of the monastery,^a was sent to the bishop to state the necessities of the convent, and to beg his assistance in applying a proper remedy. The issue of the application, however, is not recorded.^b

Weremouth and Jarrow continued as cells to Durham till the dissolution of religious houses: when Weremouth appears to have been valued, according to Dugdale, at 25*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* or, according to Speed, at 26*l.* per annum. Jarrow bore a higher estimation, being valued, according to Dugdale, at 38*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* or, according to Speed, at 40*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* per annum.^c

Weremouth was granted, in the 37th of Hen. VIII. to Thomas Whitehead: Jarrow, in the 36th of Hen. VIII. to William lord Eure; and afterwards, in the 7th Edw. VI. to Simon Welbury and Christopher Moreland.^d

Hutchinson informs us, that, when he wrote, there were at Monk Weremouth several remains of the monastic buildings, forming three sides of a square, with the church; but that none of the offices could be ascertained from what was then standing. The church, he says, consists of a nave and north aisle, the south aisle having been totally destroyed. The tower is most ancient, and probably has stood from the eleventh century, being supported on heavy and low arches; and the chancel is divided from the nave by a heavy circular arch, more lofty and extended than those by which the old church of Jarrow was distinguished.^e

The remains of Jarrow monastery, about half a mile south of the river Tyne, and two miles from South Shields, still occupy the summit of an elevated ridge. The church, which appears to have presented a mixture of the styles of different centuries,^f was rebuilt in 1783: when the remarkable inscription, given by Dugdale among the evidences relating to the two monasteries,^g was reinserted in the north wall. Dr. Pegge, who engraved it in his "Sylloge of the remaining authentic Inscriptions relative to the erection of our English Churches,"^h gives the following as a more correct transcript, having an apparent erasure between the third and fourth lines:

The ruins of the monastery lie to the south of the church. Grose, who visited Jarrow in 1773, says, that several pieces of short columns, with Saxon capitals, were then scattered among the rubbish of the remains.

In the vestry of the church, a large, double-armed, ancient chair, of carved oak, is still preserved; traditionally said, but hardly likely, to have belonged to the venerable Bede.ⁱ

Through Jarrow slake, or flat, a small rivulet, called by Leland the Done, runs into the Tyne: sometimes, at the ebb of tide, it is left dry.

NUM. I.

[Flores Hist. per. Math. Westm. in anno 703.]

ANNO gratiæ DCCij. sanctus Benedictus abbas Anglicus, post vitam laudabilem, glorioso fine in domino quievit. Hic vir Dei de stirpe nobili gentis Anglorum progenitus est, et in adolescentia militiæ rudimentis addictus. Denique cum esset minister Oswii regis, et possessionem non modicam, ipso donante percepisset, caduca mundi omnia pro Christo spernens, Romam adiit, ut ibidem ecclesiastica informatus disciplina militiam assumeret spiritualem, qua sibi prodesset et aliis, utilisque minister in dominicæ posset cultura vineæ reperiri. Inde verò rediens apud Lirinensem insulam, se monachorum cœtui conjunxit, tonsuram accepit, ubi per biennium regulariter institutus, ad limina sanctorum apostolorum Petri et Pauli iterum repedavit. Quo tempore, cum papa Vitalianus Theodorum Cantuariæ archiepisc. in Britanniam destinavit, ipse simul adveniens, multas secum reliquias sanctorum reportavit. Qui postea regi Northanhumborum Egfrido conjunctus, confestim rex ei terram lx. familiarum, ad construendum apostolorum principi Petro monasterium, contulit, ad ostium Wiræ fluminis, anno gratiæ DCLXXIII. indictione secunda. Sed et aliud monasterium, ad honorem doctoris gentium Pauli in Girwi non longè ab altero fabricatur, et à rege præfato, prædiis lx. familiarum acceptis, multipliciter illud ditare curavit. Hæc autem monasteria religiosis implens monachis, Ceolfridum in uno, Easterwinum in altero præpositos ordinavit. Hoc ideo fecit, ut tam in ejus absentia, quam in presentia, regularis semper custodia servaretur. Huic denique famulo Dei Benedicto Beda venerabilis, et doctor Anglorum, traditur nutriendus, sub quo etiam ad ordinem sacerdotis legitur fuisse promotus. Quinques Romam petisse asseritur, qui semper rediens divinorum locupletatus commodorum, subiectos instituere opere pariter et exemplo curavit. Tandem post vitam laudabilem, victor viciorum Benedictus, confessor Christi piissimus, carnis infirmitate victus, pridie idus Januarii spiritum reddidit creatori. Successit ei in onere et honore vir sanctus, et ejusdem discipulus, Ceolfridus, sub quo Beda Christi famulus, ad universalis utilitatem ecclesiæ, de scripturis sanctis, laborem inchoatum laudabiliter adimplevit.

SERGIUS episcopus servus servorum Dei, Ceolfrido religioso abbati presbyteroque salutem. Quibus verbis ac modis clementiam Dei nostri ac inenarrabilem providentiam possumus effari, et dignas gratiarum actiones pro immensis ejus circa nos beneficiis persolvere? Qui in tenebris et umbra mortis positos ad lumen suæ scientiæ perducit, errantes etiam in viam veritatis convertit, incipientes perficit rectum propositum gerere, atque circa commissorum sollicitudinem tribuit amoris dilectionem; ut tam ille, qui in eis est, quamque etiam ipse, qui pro eis excolitur, piæ sedulitatis consonantiam reddant, et ne iterum (quod absit) in labe sæculi devolvantur, custodit. Ut expedire salutis nostræ præscivit, miseratus dispensat; et quos nimirum in sæculo, ut subsisterent, condidit, ad vitam eos æternam possidendam invitat. Hac de re, religiosissime fili, Domini atque Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi doctrinam, qua beatos apostolos suos ad sæculi contemptum instituit puro corde assequere, inquietis: "Si quis diligit patrem aut matrem, fratres vel sorores, plus quam me, non est me dignus."^b Et iterum: "Si quis dereliquerit patrem aut matrem, fratres aut sorores, Quod et ex ipsius Bedæ verbis illis confirmat in ecclesiasticæ suæ Historiæ epilogo. "Cum essem annorum septem, cura propinquorum datus sum educandus reverentissimo abbati Benedicto, ac deinde Ceolfrido; cunctumque ex eo tempus vitæ in ejusdem monasterii habitatione peragens, omnem meditandis scripturis operam dedi." Quod Britannias perlatum et coram synodo patefactum, præsentium episcoporum simul et magnifici regis Aldfridi subscriptione confirmatum est; quomodo etiam prius illud sui temporis regem et episcopos in synodo publice confirmasse non latet." Monastery of Abingdon,

BERKSHIRE.

THE early history of the Monastery of ABINGDON is very diffusely told, not only by the Latin historian quoted from a Cotton Manuscript by Dugdale,^a but also in the tract "Ex Ad-ditamentis Chronici Floren-tii Wigornensis," printed in the Anglia Sacra.^b

It appears to have been founded in 675,^c either by Cysse, or Cyssa, one of the viceroys of Kinwine, or Centwin, king of the West Saxons, or by his nephew Heane; or, as the editors of the new Magna Britannia say, perhaps by both jointly. It was instituted in honour of the Virgin Mary, for twelve monks of the Benedictine order, of whom

HEANE was made the first abbat. It seems to be agreed that the original site of the abbey was somewhere in the neighbourhood of Bagley wood: either at Bayworth, in the parish of Sunningwell, or, as Hearne supposes, at Chilswell farm, in the parish of Cumnor.^d Abendon is stated to have been the name of the hill on which the abbey stood, and to have been so called from one Aben, a Briton, who escaped from the massacre of Hengist, and, retiring hither, led the life of an anchorite for many years. Ceadwall, however, the son and successor of Centwin, who added the town of Seovechesham to the possessions of the monks, is also said to have ordered their removal to it, and that then the name of Seovechesham, in consequence of its connection with the monastery, was changed to Abingdon.^e

Ina, who succeeded Ceadwall, at first robbed the church of Abingdon of its possessions, but afterwards

repenting, not only restored them, but added very considerably to their number. Heane died in the reign of Ina's successor Athelard,^f when CUMANUS, or CONANUS, had the abbacy,^g from whom Cumnor, as Cumani ora, is said to have taken its name. Bishop Kennett, from a Chronicle of Abingdon in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge, places his death in 784.

RETHUNUS was the next abbat. Bishop Kennett, in his manuscript "Diptycha Ecclesie Anglicanæ," places his death in the time of Kenulph, between the years 794 and 796. Other accounts say he was made bishop of Dorchester in 814. He was succeeded in his abbacy, according to the Chronicle of Abingdon just mentioned, by ALARDUS, who, in 835, gave the village of Mercham to the monks.

CINATUS, or CINATHUS, was the next abbat, who, Mr. Stevens says, presided over the convent A.D. 815. He is stated to have died in 830:^h and was succeeded by GODEASCULUS,ⁱ or GODESCALE. The name of this abbat does not occur in the ancient list of the abbats preserved in the Harleian manuscript, num. 209, apparently of the 14th century: but it is mentioned in the Chronicle at Trinity College, Cambridge. He is stated to have died in the time of King Edred.

Having flourished near two centuries, this abbey was destroyed by the Danes in the reign of Alfred; who, to complete the ruin of the monks, took away from them the town of Abingdon, and the whole of their estates, because they had not made a sufficient requital to him for vanquishing their enemies. Edred, his grandson, was its restorer.^k

Such parts of the Additions to Florence of Worcester's Chronicle as relate more immediately to the renewal of the monastery, will be found in the note.^l

^b Tom. i. p. 163-166.

^c Stevens, in his Additions to Dugdale, states, from Enderby's Cambria Triumphans, that this monastery is supposed to have been one of those founded by King Lucius, and afterwards destroyed by the emperor Dioclesian: that the emperor Constantine the Great had his education here in his younger days; that there belonged to it five hundred monks, who lived by the labour of their hands in the woods and deserts, and every Sunday and holiday resorted to the Monastery to perform their devotions: and that, besides these five hundred, there remained constantly sixty monks attending to the daily recital of psalms and holy Christian sacrifices. Cissa he would consider as the second founder. The whole of this is, however, fabulous. See also Cressy's Church History, p. 121.

^d See the Appendix to Hearne's Lib. Niger Scaccarii, edit. 1723, pp. 562, 563. Leland. Itin. edit. Oxon. 1711, vol. ii. p. 12, says, "The abbay was first begon at Bagley wood in Barkshir a two miles more upper on the Ise then Abbingdon now is: but the foundations and the workes there prosperid not; wherapon it was translatid to Seukesham, and ther finishid most by the costes of King Cissa, that there after was buried; but the very place and tumbe of liis burial was never knoweu syns the Danes defacid Abbingdon. I hard that ther was an holy heremite, kynne to King Cissa, that lyved yn the woodes and marisches about Seukesham, and that the abbay for liis sake, and by liis means was buildid there."

^e Appendix to Hearne's Lib. Niger Scaccarii, edit. 1723, p. 563. "Abbingdon—quasi Abbatie oppidum, or Abbey-town." Cissa, the sister of Cysse, built a house for nuns at no great distance from her brother's monastery, in a place called Helenstow, near the Thames, dedicating it to the Holy Cross and St. Helen. After her death the nuns were removed to Witham, and afterwards dispersed in the wars between Offa king of Mercia and Kynwulf king of the West Saxons.

Tum rex malorum præuentus consiliis, terras, quæcunque appendices essent, in suos suorumque usus redegit. At vero rex Edredus Elfredi nepos, loci miseratus solitudinem, simulque avi animæ consulens, cuncta restituit ablata per manum Ethelwoldi, quem ibi abbatem posuerat; tantumque amoris assumpsit in ecclesiam, ut per se loca ædificiorum metaretur, et fundamenta jactaret; meditans inibi celeberrimæ famæ monasterium construere; fecissetque voluntati satis, si non eum fata de medio properè repulissent." Script. post Bedam, edit. Sav. 1596, foll. 143 b, 144. See also Lel. Collect. vol. ii. p. 253.

St. Ethelwold, who was afterwards bishop of Winchester, was the person employed by Edred to superintend the new foundation, which was not completed till the time of Edgar. King Edgar, however, appears to have acquired undeservedly the credit of having restored the abbey;^a although his own Charter^b only confirms what had been before given to it by Edred.

ÆTHELWOLD was made abbat of Abingdon by Edred, according to one account, in the year 954: but, according to Ingulphus, he gave his signature as such to a Charter of Croiland abbey in 948.^c As the main instrument in the renewal of the establishment, he is particularly noticed by Malmesbury;^d who also mentions his promotion to the see of Winchester "antequam summum manum rebus imponeret."^e He is nevertheless stated to have attended the consecration of the building, with Dunstan and other bishops.^f

OSGAR, OSGARUS, or ORDGAR, succeeded Ethelwold as abbat in 963. Under him, the buildings of the monastery were completed.^g In his time, Sideman bishop of Crediton dying suddenly at the synod at Kyntlingtune, in 977, was buried at Abingdon.^h Osgar died in locum vocabulo Abbandoniam: in quo modicum antiquitas monasteriolum habebatur, sed erat tunc neglectum ac destitutum, vilibus ædificiis consistens, et xl. tantum mansas possidens; reliquam vero præfati loci terram, quæ centum cassatorum lustris hinc inde giratur, regali dominio subjectam rex ipse possidebat."

"Factumque est consentiente Dunstano abbate, secundum regis voluntatem, ut vir Dei Æthelwoldus prænotati loci suscipere curam; quatinus in eo monachos ordinaret regulariter Deo servientes. Venit ergo servus Dei ad locum sibi commissum; congregavitque sibi in brevi spatio gregem monachorum, quibus ipse abbas jubente rege ordinatus est. Dedit etiam Rex possessionem regalem, quam in Abandonia possederat, hoc est, centum cassatos cum optimis ædificiis, Abbati et fratribus ad augmentum cotidiani victus; et de regio thesauro suo multum eos in pecuniis juit. Sed mater ejus largius solatia munerum eis direxit.

"Venit ergo rex quadam die ad Monasterium, ut ædificiorum structuram per seipsum ordinaret; mensusque est omnia fundamenta propria manu, quemadmodum muros erigere decreverat: rogavitque eum abbas in hospitio cum suis prandere. Annuit Rex ilico; et contingit adesse sibi non paucos opimatum suorum venientes ex gente Northanhimbrorum, qui omnes cum rege adierunt convivium. Lætatusque est rex, et jussit abunde propinare hospitibus hydromellum. Quid multa? hauserunt ministri liquorem tota die ad omnem sufficientiam convivantibus; sed nequivit ipse liquor exlauriri de vase nisi ad mensuram palmi, gaudentibus Northanhimbris et vesperi cum lætitia recedentibus.

"Operariorum providere alimenta Ælfstanus monachus præcepto abbatis curam acceperat. Accidit namque quadam die, dum Abbas more solito peragraret monasterium; ut aspiceret illum fratrem stantem juxta fervens calendarium, in quo victualia præparabat artificibus. Et intrans vidit omnia vasa mundissima ac pavementum scopatum. Coxit enim carnes cotidie solus, et operariis ministrabat, focum accendens, et aquam apportans, et vasa denuo emundans. Dixitque ei Sanctus Æthelwoldus: 'O mi frater, si talis miles Christi es, qualem te ostendis; mitte manum tuam in bullientem aquam, et unum frustum de imis mihi impiger attrahe.' Quod sine mora fecit, non sentiens calorem ferventis aquæ. Quo viso abbas jussit deponi frustum, et nemini hoc indicare viventi. Qui cum postea ob vitæ meritum pontificatus culmen apud Wiltonam adeptus fuisset; adveniente sui ab hac vita evocatione Abbandoniam deportatus atque sepultus est anno ab incarnatione Christi DCCCLXXX.

"Erat et puer in eodem Monasterio puræ innocentiae studii, nomine Ædmerus, quem abbas ac fratres nimium diligebant. In tali itaque ætate et gratiâ constitutus, infirmitate correptus pervenit ad vitæ ultimam. Cumque exitus horam præstolaretur; subito in ecstasi factus, cœlesti se interesse curiæ atque ibi matrem Dei Mariam residere conspicatur. Ante eam itaque hic adolescens adducitur, atque ab eadem an eum assistentibus sibi amodo remanere, an in vitâ adhuc mortali degere velit, affabili ut semper est vultu seiscitatur. Ille nil tristitiæ, nil indigentiae his, quos intendebat, adesse considerans, malle se illic dixit quam alias, si mereretur, jam associari. Cujus delectioni cum effectus fore promitteretur; inter visionis illius gaudia ad se reversus, abbati suo quæ viderat quæque audierat pandit. Et ut vera esse quæ narrarat probarentur; spiritus ejus à corpore exiens mox illius, quam acceperat, promissionis in sanctorum cœtu compos efficitur.

"Ut [L. Ad] districtioris autem vitæ tramitem cum è diversis Angliæ partibus viri Dei Æthelwoldi auditâ sanctitate plurimi differenti more legendi canonicæ instituti ad eum convenirent atque reciperentur: volens eos in ecclesiâ consonâ Deo voce jubulare, ex Corbiensi cœnobio, quod in Francia situm est, ecclesiasticâ ea tempestate disciplinâ famosum, viros accersit solertissimos; ut illos in legendo psallendoque sui imitentur.

"Ad beati quoque Benedicti cœnobium Floriacum de suis monachis unum Osgarum nomine transmisit, normam vivendi, prout illic mos erat, discere ac in domum reversum socios horum quæ didicerat participes efficere: quibus rebus factum est; ut qui novitii in ecclesiastico instituebantur discipulatu, brevi aliis in Angliâ perfectiores doctioresque prædicarentur. Sanctus etiam Æthelwoldus trium regum sibi invicem

EDWIN, EADWINUS, or EDWIUS, was consecrated abbat.ⁱ The Saxon Chronicle places his death in 989. He was succeeded the same year by

WULFGAR, or WLGARUS. This abbat is complimented for his administration in the abbey registers. He obtained a Charter of Privileges for the monastery from King Ethelred, in 993.^k He died, according to the Saxon Chronicle, in 1016.^l The same authority names

ÆTHELSIGUS as his successor, who died in 1017:^m when

ÆTHELWIN, ADELWINUS, or ATHELWIN, was elected abbat. He died, according to Wharton, in 1030;ⁿ and was succeeded by

SIWARD, a monk of Glastonbury.^o Siward acted for some time as archbishop of Canterbury, the administration of affairs being committed to him by Eadsi, or Eadsin, the archbishop.^p Godwin says, that, in 1058, he was made bishop of Rochester; and William of Malmesbury notes, that he was made bishop of that see the castle of Walingford, was deposed, and afterwards committed to the custody of Walcheline bishop of Winchester, with whom he passed the remainder of his days. He was succeeded in the abbacy of Abingdon by

ADELELM, or ATHELEM, a monk of Jumieges, who is mentioned in the Instrument respecting the primacy in 1072.^a He died in 1084. His successor was

RAINALD, or REGINALDUS, also a monk of Jumieges, who had previously been the king's chaplain.^b During the time of Rainald the Domesday Survey was undertaken, whence it appears, that, in 1087, a very large and rich portion of the county of Berks was in the possession of the monks, including the whole Hundred of Horner: beside the manors of Levechanole, Codesdone, Sawford, Bereford, Gersedune, Tademertone, and Ernicote, in Oxfordshire; Dubentone, in Gloucestershire; and Hille, in the county of Warwick.^c Rainald was afterwards in great favour with King William Rufus. He died in 1097.^d On his demise, the king retained the abbey during the rest of his reign in his own hands; appointing one

MOTBERT, or MODABERTUS, to the government, and, as procurator, to take up the profits for the king's use.^e Bishop Kennett speaks of Modabert as the twentieth abbat. King Henry the First, four months after his accession, A.D. 1100, having promoted Motbert to the priory of Middleton, in Dorsetshire,^f bestowed the abbey of Abingdon on

FARICIUS, or FARITS, a monk of Malmesbury, though by birth an Italian: a man eminent in different branches of learning and science, but more particularly skilled in medicine.^g The services rendered by the power of his art to individuals, were in two instances rewarded to the church. Milo Crispin, in the seventh year of Henry the First, gave land at Colebroc to the Monastery "pro servitio quod abbas Faricius ei in sua infirmitate impenderat:"^h and the grant of the church of Kensington under similar circumstances by Geoffrey de Ver, is detailed at length in another part of the Monasticon.ⁱ The different Charters granted by King Henry the First during Faricius's abbacy, are convincing proofs of the high credit which the abbat maintained at court.^k In his time also, Robert de Oili restored to the monks their possessions at Tadmertone.^l That Faricius was himself a great benefactor to the monastery is clear: Willis and Stevens say he built the east part and transept of a new church, adorning it with small marble pillars: the old church having stood more northerly, where was afterwards the orchard.^m He died, according to the Saxon Chronicle, on the 11th of the kalends of March, A.D. 1117.ⁿ The Cotton Register, Claudius C. ix. states, that for four years after Faricius's death, the charge of the monastery was given to Werengerius, a monk of the house; at the end of which time, the King returning from Normandy, in 1121, VINCENTIUS, a monk of Jumieges, was made abbat.^o He died on the 4th kal. April, 1130, in the tenth year of his administration.^p He was succeeded by

INGULFUS, prior of Winchester, who ruled the abbey near twenty-nine years; and who died, according to Willis and Stevens, on the 13th kal. October, 1158; but, according to the Annals of Winchester, in 1159.^q

WALKELIN, a monk of Evesham, succeeded as abbat; of whom the Cotton Register of the Monastery, Claud. B. vi. gives this character: "Vir circa possessiones ecclesie sibi commissae fidelis et prudens, in revocandis quoque priorum Pastorum negligentia perditis studiosus."^r After his death, which happened on All Saints eve in 1164, GODFREY bishop of St. Asaph, by the favour of King Henry the Second, held this abbey in commendam with his bishoprick.^s He was removed from it in 1175.^t The Trinity College MS. says "secessit." Godwin calls this Godfrey, or Godefridus, Geffrey, and says he was the same person with Geffrey of Monmouth, who wrote the Chronicle. Our abbat was buried at Abingdon.

ROGER prior of Bermondsey became abbat, according to the Annals of Winton,^u in 1175: Cole, in one of his MSS. says July 8th, 1176.^x He presided nine years and a half: when, upon his death, Thomas de Husseborne, or Husselburn, received the procuratorship of the monastery.^y Some time after this the king bestowed the abbacy on

ALFRED, or ALUREDUS, prior of Rochester.^z He died in 1189, in the very month of King Richard the First's coronation.^{aa}

HUGH was the next abbat; who died in 1221: when, according to some writers,

WILLIAM prior of Colne, in Essex, became his successor;^{bb} but, according to others,

ROBERT DE HENRETH. William prior of Colne might possibly have held the procuratorship of the abbey for a short time only. He is entirely omitted in the ancient List of Abbats given in the Harleian manuscript honorifice gubernasset, et a memoria principum apostolorum ad sua remeasset; diutina coctus aegritudine, diem sortitur ultimum." Angl. Sacr. tom. i. p. 168.

During the administration of this abbat, Egelwine bishop of Durham was imprisoned at Abingdon, and famished to death. Bishop Kennett, from the Chronicle at Cambridge, says, "An. 1079. Adelelmus abbas Abendon misit in Normanniam pro cognatis suis quibus in uno anno lxx. hidas pro possessionibus ecclesie dedit, scil. Tadmerton, Ernicote, Whitechurche, pratium juxta Oxoniam et plura." Diptycha Eccl. Angl. MS. Lansd. 8vo. Cat. num. 478.

^d MS. Cotton. Claud. C. ix. foll. 141, 141 b. About two years after Rainald's appointment as abbat, a mansion, in the Strand, with a chapel annexed, appears to have been bestowed upon the monastery by Gilbert de Gant: probably intended as a town residence for the abbats of Abingdon. "Secundo hinc anno, per Gillebertum de Gant, mansio quaedam super flumen Tamisie, sita via qua Westmonasterium a Lundenia civitate itur, ecclesie Abbendonie donatur; cum capella memorie sanctorum Innocentium dicata, ejusdem mansionis pre foribus condita. Idem etiam donum antecessoris hujus abbatis tempore Adelelmi iste vir contulerat; sed ipsius obitu cognito sibi reusurpavit. At modo respiciens sub interminatione anathematis perpetuam possessionem retinendam eidem ecclesie devote idem restituit."

^g Will. of Malmesbury appears to have been proud of the mention of Faricius. In continuation of a passage already quoted respecting the monastery of Abingdon, he says, "Emicuit precipue nostris temporibus abbas FARICIUS in meliorandis rebus, Tuscus genus, arte medicus, Aretinus. noster profecto monachus." ^t Ibid. Benedictus Abbas, in his Account of the Council at Westminster in that year, states, that he resigned his bishoprick in hope of retaining the abbey of Abingdon, of which he seems, in fact, to have been the procurator rather than the abbat. He says, "In ipso autem Concilio clerici Sancti Asafi petierunt a Cantuariensi archiepiscopo, ut in vi obedientie præcipiet Godefrido, ecclesie Sancti Asafi episcopo, ad sedem ecclesie sue redire, cui præfuit pontificali potentia, vel ut prædictus archiepiscopus alium episcopum loco ipsius Godefridi institueret. Ipsi enim Godefridus episcopatum suum deseruit paupertate et Valensium infestatione compulsus; veniensque in Angliam, a christianissimo rege Henrico benigne et honorifice susceptus est. Et tradidit ei rex abbatiam Abbendonie vacantem in custodia, donec ad sedem propriam liberum haberet regressum. Itaque præfatus Cantuariensis archiepiscopus in ipso concilio, ad instantiam prænominatorum clericorum, et ammonitionem Alexandri summi pontificis, nec non et concilio venerabilium coepiscoporum suorum, convenit jam dictum Godefridum, ut in vi obedientie ad sedem propriam rediret, vel curam pastoralem, quæ sibi fuerat commissa, in manu ipsius libere et absolute resignaret. Ipse vero Godefridus, sperans quod abbatia de Abbendoniam, quæ tradita fuerat ei ad custodiendum, posset sibi remanere, episcopatum suum, nullo cogente, resignavit in manu Cantuariensis archiepiscopi, et tradidit ei anulum suum et baculum pastoralem: et ipse Cantuariensis archiepiscopus privavit eum concessi ordinis dignitate ac loco: et statuit loco ipsius et consecravit magistrum Adam ad episcopatum Sancti Asaf." No. 209. before quoted. Robert de Henreth died in 1234: on the 10th of September in which year a licence was granted for the election of a new abbat.^a

LUKE was elected Henreth's successor; during whose administration the abbey-church was again dedicated, on the 10th of the kalends of November, 1239. He died in 1241, and was succeeded by

JOHN DE BLOSMEVIL, to whose election the royal assent was given on Feb. 28th that year.^b The year after his election our abbat was made one of the king's justices itinerant. He died on the nones of June, 1256; and was succeeded by

WILLIAM DE NEUBIR, or NEWBIRI, a monk of the monastery, to whose election the king's assent was given July 24th.^c He resigned the abbacy about the middle of the year 1260: when, on Aug. 8th, a licence was granted for the election of another abbat.^d The annals in the Trinity College Manuscript say he was deposed at the bishop of Salisbury's visitation in 1259.^e

HENRY DE FRYLEFORD's election as abbat was assented to Aug. 15th, 1260, and the temporalities of the abbey restored five days afterward.^f He died in 1262, on the day of the Holy Trinity.

RICHARD DE HENDRED, or HANREDE, the sacrist of the monastery, was the next abbat. The king's consent was given to his election June 10th, 1262.^g He is mentioned in the annals of the church to have used the mitre and pontificals on the festival of the Trinity, A.D. 1268; whence Mr. Willis concludes that he was the first abbat who obtained that privilege. He attended the council at Lyons in 1272. Upon his death,

NICHOLAS DE COLEHAM, or CULHAM, the prior of the monastery, was elected abbat; and the choice was confirmed August the 31st, 1289. The temporalities of the monastery being restored Sept. 29th following.ⁱ He built the parish church of St. Nicholas without the west gate of the abbey, which is still remaining.^k He died on the feast of St. Nicholas 1307, and was succeeded in the February following by

RICHARD DE CLYVE, who is also called RICHARD DE CLYVE EPISCOPI. The election being confirmed and the temporalities restored March 31st, 1307.^l Willis says he was a bachelor of divinity, and had been previously a monk of Worcester.^m He adds, "he was deposed anno 1315." The Calendar of Patent Rolls however says, "nunciatur regi de morte Ricardi de Clive abbatis de Abyndon," 1 Aug. 1315.ⁿ His successor was

JOHN DE SUTTON, who had the temporalities of his abbey granted to him Sept. 21, 1315.^o Upon his death,

JOHN DE CANYNGES was elected abbat. He had been previously prior of the monastery. The king's assent to his election was given May 1st, and the temporalities of the monastery were restored June 23d, 1322.^p In his time, A.D. 1327, the abbey is said to have been destroyed by unruly persons of Oxford and Abingdon; for which fact twelve of them were hanged, and sixty more condemned.^q John de Canynges died in 1328.^r

ROBERT DE GAREFORD was the successor of Ca-

nynges, but had not the temporalities restored to him till Jan. 18th, 1330.^s Stevens and Willis call him Robert de Garfor, and probably place his death too early when they give 1331 as the year, since his death is not stated to have been announced to the king till the 6th of Edw. III. A.D. 1333;^t when, on August 20th, a licence was granted for the choice of a fresh abbat:^u on the 23d of which month the royal assent was given to the election of

WILLIAM DE COMENORE, to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored September the 31st. Willis, and Stevens after him, state Abbat Comenore to have died in 1333:^x but it was almost immediately upon his death that the king's assent was given to the election of

ROGER DE THAME, Dec. 23d, 1335.^y Stevens places his death in 1361: or it should be in 1362; in which year, July 24th, the royal assent was given to the election of

PETER DE HANNEYE, and the temporalities restored Aug. 2d.^z Willis and Stevens mention a second

VINCENT, as the successor of Peter de Hanneye; and there is a memorandum among the excerpts from the Patent Rolls among the Harleian Manuscripts,^a which in some degree seems to countenance a vacancy; "An. 39 Edw. III. Abb. Abendon vacat." But if this was really the case, Peter de Hanneye was probably restored; as, in 1399, RICHARD DE SALFORDE is expressly stated to have been elected, on the death of Peter de Hanneye, to the abbacy, March 6th, the temporalities being restored March 13th.^c He died, according to Willis and Stevens, in 1415.

JOHN DORSET, however, was not chosen to succeed him till 1417.^d

RICHARD DE BOXORE was elected abbat, on Dorset's death, in 1422:^e on whose death,

THOMAS DE SALFORD succeeded, in 1427; the royal assent being given to the election Feb. 4th, and the temporalities restored Feb. 13th. On his death, according to Willis, but the Patent Roll says on his resignation,^g

RALPH HAMME succeeded in the month of July, 1428. The Register of the bishop of Salisbury says 8 April, 1429.ⁱ On his resignation,

WILLIAM ASSHENDON was chosen abbat; to whom the temporalities were restored Jan. 25th, 1436. Willis says, "he and his successor, John Sante, with his two immediate predecessors, Hamme and Salford, built the tower in the middle of the church, all the body of the church, and the towers at the west end of it." The king's licence for the election of a new abbat, on Asshendon's resignation, is dated Nov. 26th, 1469, when

JOHN SANTE was elected, to whom the temporalities were restored Dec. 8th.^k He was D.D., and ambassador at the court of Rome in the reigns of King Edward IV. and King Henry VII.^l He died Jan. 6th, 1495, and was succeeded April 13th following by

^t Mr. Cole, in one of his manuscript volumes already referred to,

THOMAS ROWLAND, B.D., prior of Luffield, who dying Nov. 14th, 1504, was succeeded Dec. 10th in the same year by

ALEXANDER SHOTISBROOK.^a He died August 21st, 1508. Miles Salley, whom Godwin mentions as abbat about this time, was, in reality, only almoner of the monastery; whence he was first preferred to the abbacy of Eynesham, and afterwards to the bishoprick of Landaff.^b Abbat Shotisbrook's successor was

JOHN COVENTRY, who had previously been prior of the monastery. He was elected Sept. 13th, 1508. Anthony à Wood informs us that

THOMAS PENTECOST, alias ROWLAND, the last abbat, supplicated, in the university of Oxford, anno 1514, for his degree of bachelor of divinity; and was then, or soon after, lord abbat of Abingdon.^c He was among the first to acknowledge the king's supremacy, in 1534: and, Feb. 9th, 1538, with the rest of his convent, signed the surrender of the monastery.^d Mr. Lysons says, "for his ready compliance he was rewarded with the manor of Cumner, which had been his country seat as abbat, for life, or till he could have preferment to the value of 223*l.* per annum."^e Willis, in his Mitred Abbies, informs us, that the abbat and monks had respectively the following pensions assigned them by the king's letters patent, dated Feb. 23, 29 Hen. VIII. Their names, he adds, are entered in the Pension Book marked A. foll. 7, 8, &c. remaining in the Augmentation Office.

^g Willis adds, "I shall crave leave to present the reader with a transcript of the Letters Patents for assigning this abbat's pension," (See Num. XXVI.) "for as much as they, according to some persons' opinions, in a great measure vindicate him from the horrid crimes laid to his charge. To urge only one argument in defence of these religious, and confute their unreasonableness, I shall instance in the article of the largeness of their pensions, which may be pleaded in their behalf, particularly in answer to their most virulent accuser, especially since he allows, 'that where the Religious had pensions, it was a proof of their innocence,' the king and his visitors being willing on any pretence to discard them. And that the Religious of this and Battel abbey, which is likewise accused, had large pensions, will be evident enough to such as will compare the prices of things now with what they were formerly. In order to which, I think fit to observe, that in perusing the farmer of Ravenston's account, in the county of Buckingham, for the impropriation and vicarage of Ravenston, granted with that priory to Cardinal Wolsey, I find, that the Farmer, by way of discount to our College of Christ Church (then called Cardinal College) to which the said priory was then given, reckons but *1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d. for the vicar's diet for a whole

The revenues of the monastery, according to Dugdale, were valued, in the 26th of Hen. VIII., at the sum of 1876*l.* 10*s.* 9*d.* per annum, clear. According to Speed, the gross sum was 2042*l.* 2*s.* 8³/₄*d.* per annum.^h

The site was granted, in the first year of King Edward the Sixth, to Sir Thomas Seimor, or Seymour, and in the fifth of Edward the Sixth to Sir Thomas Wroth.ⁱ According to the authors of the new Magna Britannia, it is now in severalties: Mr. Child has that part where his brewery is carried on; Mr. Phillips, of Culham, is proprietor of that part which adjoins the mills.^k

William of Worcestre, who lived in the reign of King Edward the Fourth, gives the following as the dimensions of the abbey church:

"Longitudo navis ecclesie cum duabus alis continet 60 virgas.

Latitudo ecclesie cum duabus alis continet 24 virgas.

Longitudo capellae beatae Mariae continet 12 virgas.

Latitudo chori cum alis continet 24 virgas, sive 40 gressus.

Latitudo brachiorum duarum alarum super duplices columpnas cum capellis continet 23 virgas ex utraque parte.

Longitudo chori, praeter capellam sanctae Mariae, 85 gressus, sive 54 virgas.

Chori longitudo cum capella continet 64 virgas.

Latitudo brachiorum in principio chori continet 58 virgas sive 98 gressus.

Longitudo turris ecclesie in medio brachiorum ecclesie 12 virgas.

Latitudo dictae turris pro campanis continet 12 virgas.

Columpnæ rotunditas in circuitu continet 5 virgas in navi ecclesie.

Densitudo murorum ecclesie continet duas virgas.

Longitudo alae navis continet 6 virgas.

Longitudo alae longitudinis chori continet 5 virgas.

Columpnæ 12 et 12 archus in una parte navis ecclesie, et tot in altera parte.

Altitudo turris novae in occidentali parte ecclesie 100 pedes.

Latitudo dictae turris infra ex omni parte 14 pedes."^l

Leland, in the time of King Henry the Eighth, speaking of Ethelwold, says:

"The Chirche and Buildings that he made ther were after taken downe and new made by Norman ab-year; so that five pounds per annum then, which was the lowest of the pensions here mentioned, would maintain any one in great honour and credit." See Stevens's Supplem. to Mon. Angl. vol. i. pp. 510, 511.

In the Roll of Pensions, 2 & 3 Phil. and Mar. we find the following were then paid, appertaining to the monastery of Abingdon. "Annuil. et Corrod. Aliciae Edmaye, per annum iiii^{li}. Edmundi Ashefelde, per ann. xx^s. Willielmi Armorez, per ann. x^{li}. xiiij^s. iiij^d. Roberti Thomson, per ann. x^{li}. Penc. Ricardi Pamphilon, per ann. xx^{li}. Willielmi Buckelände, per ann. vij^{li}. Willielmi Perche, per ann. vj^{li}. Henrici Kyngeston, per ann. cvj^s. vij^d." The names, it will be seen, differ much from those in Willis's list.

The splendour of the abbat was great. On each of the principal feasts on which it was usual for him to dine in the refectory, he fed a hundred poor persons from his table. "Hæc sunt quindecim principalia festa in quibus abbas tenetur comedere in refectorio: videlicet, in die Natali Domini, in die Epiphaniae, Sancti Vincentii, Purificationis, Annunciationis, Paschæ, Ascensionis, Pentecostes, Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, Sancti Adewoldi, Assumptionis Sanctae Mariae, Nativitatis ejusdem, Omnium Sanctorum, Conceptionis, Sancti Johannis Evangelistae; et in quolibet festo pascet abbas centum pauperes."

Of the abbey-church there are now no remains. “Among the buildings occupied as a brewery by the proprietor, Mr. Child, are some ancient rooms belonging to the monastery, supported by vaults with groined roofs, resting on short pillars. Two of these rooms, each thirty-four feet by fourteen, have two large openings in the wall by which they are separated; the door-way has a pointed arch. In one of them there is a fire-place, which has had slender pillars on either side, with octagonal shafts, and capitals of foliage, in the style of Henry the Third’s reign. One of the shafts is gone. The windows of the room are of a more modern date.”^b

The abbey-gateway, still remaining near St. Nicholas’s church, has a large arch and a postern. Over the former is a canopied niche with a statue; and in the spandrils are the royal arms of England, and the arms of the abbey.^c It has been long occupied as a prison.

North of the abbey is a place still retaining the name of the Vineyard.

Of the Registers of the abbey now remaining, the two most important are the Cotton manuscripts Claud. B. vi^d. and C. ix. At fol. 184 of the latter is the Cereimonial of Abingdon at the profession of novitiates, in a hand totally different from the rest of the manuscript; apparently of the time of King Edward III.

Some of the particular customs of the monastery at Festivals are enumerated in the Harleian manuscript, num. 209, foll. 11 b, 12, 15 b.

NUM. I.

Ubi prima fundata est Abbatia.

[Ex Historia de primis Fundatoribus Abbendonis in Bibl. Cottoniana.]

Eo tempore quo nequissimus Hengistus Paganus apud Stanhengest tot nobiles consules et barones, id est, cccc et lx. seductoriâ calliditate peremit, filius cujusdam consulis qui ibidem occubuit vix evasit, cui nomen erat Aben. Hic maximo timore percussus, ad quandam silvam in australi parte Oxoniæ sitam pervenit, ibique cum feris, herbis et radicibus vitam ducens multo tempore delituit. Cum autem non haberet aquam unde biberet, oratione facta, dedit ei Deus fontem qui usque hodie ibidem cernitur. Cum audissent ergo homines provinciæ illius sanctitatem viri, confluebant ad eum, et ejus sermonibus multum proficiebant. Tunc construxerunt ei habitaculum et capellam in honore sanctæ Mariæ. Non ferens ergo vir ille sanctissimus hominum frequentiam, latenter recessit, et in Hiberniam profectus est, ibique bono fine in domino quievit. Mons verò ubi vir ille manebat et quem relinquebat, ex nomine ejus Abendun vocatur; hic est mons qui juxta Baiwrthe situs est juxta Pinnesgrave.

De primo Abbate Abbendonis.

REGNANTE Kinwino rege West-Saxonum erat quidam nobilis vir Cyssa nomine, et hic erat regulus, in cujus dominio erat Wiltesire, et pars maxima de Berksire. Et quia habebat in dominio suo episcopalem sedem in Malmesberia, regulus appellabatur. Metropolis verò urbs regni ipsius erat Bedeuinde. In australi etiam parte urbis illius construxit castellum, quod ex nomine suo Cysse vocabatur. Habebat regulus iste nepotem nomine Heane, virum valde divitem et potentem et religiosum, et erat ei soror nomine Cissa, et ipsa religiosa.

Cum quadam die audisset vir iste in ecclesia à quodam prædicatore quod facilius esset camelum intrare per foramen acus quam divitem in regnum celorum, cœpit repente omnia terrena parvipendere et ad cœlestia anelare. Venit ergo ad avunculum suum Cyssam, rogans ut in dominio suo aliquem locum sibi concederet in quo monasterium construere, et fratres congregare posset. Quod Cissa audiens libenter annuit, et ad construendum monasterium open promisit. Circuendo ergo Heano invenit in australi parte Oxoniæ locum quem Aben prædictus reliquit, et quia patria illa nemorosa erat, placuit ei ibidem monasterium construere, anno ab incarnatione Domini dclxxxv. Cissa verò avunculus ejus multa donaria et possessiones ad eundem locum dedit et confirmavit. Ipse etiam Heanus partem hæreditatis suæ eidem loco concessit. Cissa verò soror ejus ex portione hæreditatis suæ, consentiente Cissa avunculo suo, construxit monasterium sanctimonialium juxta Tamisiam in loco qui Helnestou vocatur, in quo plurimas congregavit sanctimoniales, quarum ipsa mater et abbatissa extitit. Ipsa etiam amicorum suorum auxilio parvulam punctam de clavis Domini adquisivit, quam cum alio ferro inserere jussit et inde crucem præparare, et post terminum vitæ suæ super pectus suum ponere, et propter reverentiam crucis illius, monasterium illud in honore S. Crucis et S. Helenæ fecit dedicare. Post mortem verò Cissæ translatae sunt sanctimoniales illæ usque ad Witteham et iterum de loco illo, propter bellum quod erat inter Offam regem Merciorum et Kenewlfum regem West-Saxonum, dispersæ sunt, et usque in hodiernum diem quo deveniunt ignoratur.

De Inventione nigræ Crucis.

SUCCEDENTIBUS multorum annorum curriculis, cum susciperet sanctus Adeluoldus cnram monasterii Abbendonis, fecit ductum aquæ quod est sub monasterio et molendinum sub curia. Cum verò fossores foderent circa monasterium sanctæ Helenæ, invenerunt in sabulo crucem ferream quam Cissa abbatissa fecit ponere super pectus suum in sepulcro suo. Tunc translata est crux illa in monasterium monachorum, et ibidem cum maximo honore et reverentia, usque in hodiernum diem conservatur et adoratur. Hæc est illa crux gloriosa quæ nigra appellatur.

De Obitu Cyssæ regis, et quomodo primò fundata est Abendonia.

IGITUR Heane, de quo supra diximus, cæpit ædificare monasterium in honore sanctæ Mariæ, et officinas monachorum super montem prædictum Abendoniæ, sed nichil profecit: quicquid enim uno die operabantur cementarii, alio die corrui: hoc sæpissime contigit. Dum hæc agerentur, venit quidam heremita, qui habitabat in silva de Comenora, dicens ei: 'O pater Heane, hac nocte vidi in visu quosdam homines cum quadrigis ligna et lapides a loco isto asportare.' Quibus ego: 'Malè facitis quod res istas hinc asportatis, qui ad honorem Dei et sanctæ Mariæ collectæ sunt.' Unus verò eorum michi dixit: Benè scimus bene, vade mane et dic Heane abbati quod non placet Deo hic ædificari ecclesiam, sed eat ad villam quæ vocatur Sevekesham, et ibi inveniet signum ubi ecclesiam ædificabit.' Quod audiens Heane lætus effectus est, et abierunt ipse et heremita ad prædictam villam, et invenerunt juxta Tamisiam fundamentum in modum sulci noviter arati. Jam transacti sunt v. anni ex quo cæpit super montem Abendoniæ ædificare. Illo tempore defunctus est avunculus Heane, gloriosus regulus Cysse, et super montem prædictum Abendoniæ sepultus, sed postea corpus ejus usque ad Sevekesham translatus est.

De Cedwalla et de obitu ejusdem.

REGE occidentalium Saxonum Kinewino mortuo, successit ei Cedwalla, ad quem accessit Heane, petens ab eo ut locum quem Cissa ad monasterium construendum concesserat, et ipse concederet. Quod libenter annuit, et villam etiam de Sevekesham illi dedit, et in perpetuum confirmavit, præcipiens ut à die illa usque in sempiternum Abendun vocaretur. Anno igitur ab incarnatione Domini dclxxxvii. et imperii sui anno v. reliquit gloriosus rex Cedwalla pro Deo regnum suum, et Romam profectus est, et à Sergio papa baptizatur, et in albis positus defunctus est, anno ætatis suæ xxix. et in ecclesia apostolorum sepultus est, xij. kal. Maij. In baptismo verò Petrus appellatur.

De Rege Ine.

GLORIOSO regi Cedwallæ successit Ine. Hic universas possessiones quas Cyssa et Cedwalla Abendoniæ contulerunt abstulit et diripuit; sed postea pænitens eadem quæ abstulit et multo plura eidem ecclesiæ reddidit et confirmavit. Nam ad construendam ecclesiam Abbendoniæ et Glastoniæ tria millia librarum et dcc. et l. libras argenti contulit. Anno igitur regni sui xxxix. regnum suum pro Deo reliquit, et cum regina sua Romam ivit, ibique sanctè vivendo vitam finivit, cui successit Athelardus, in cujus tempore defunctus est Heane abbas, cui successit Conanus.

Quomodo constructum est primò Monasterium Abendoniæ.

MONASTERIUM Abendoniæ quod construxit Heane primus abbas ejusdem loci tale erat. Habebat in longitudine c. et xx. pedes, et erat rotundum, tam in parte occidentali, quàm in parte orientali. Fundatum erat hoc monasterium in loco ubi nunc est cellarium monachorum, ita quod altare stetit ubi nunc est lavatorium. In circuitu hujus monasterii erant habitacula xij. et totidem capellæ, et in habitaculis xij. monachi ibidem manducantes et bibentes et dormientes, nec habebant clausum sicut nunc habent, sed erant circumdati muro alto qui erat eis pro claustro, nec licebat alicui eorum egredi portam nisi pro maxima necessitate vel monasterii utili-

tate, et hoc cum licentia abbatis: fæmina nunquam infra terminum illum intrabat, nec aliquis morabatur nisi tantum xij. monachi illi et abbas xij. Habebant nigros pannos, sed non utebantur stamineis; pellicias habebant; jacebant super cilicia; habebant coopertoria cattina; nunquam carnem manducabant nisi pro maxima infirmitate. Habebant juxta portam domum pro locutorio, in qua cum notis suis et amicis, si fortè venissent, loquebantur. Diebus dominicis et præcipuis festivitibus simul conveniebant et in ecclesia missam celebrabant, et simul manducabant. In præcipuis festiuitibus cucullis sericis utebantur. Eo tempore defunctus est abbas Conanus.

ERAT eo tempore in insula quæ dicitur Andreseia habitatio divitum qui monachilem habebant habitum, sed tamen possessiones suas quamdiu vivebant gubernabant, sed post obitum suum monasterium hæreditabant. Eo tempore Rethunus episcopus Merciorum, abbatiam Abendoniæ regebat et postea ejusdem loci abbas factus est. Veniens igitur rex Merciorum et Westsaxonum Offa, ut videret monasterium, et habitacula monachorum, venit ad insulam Andreseia, et quia vidit locum illum amænum, præcepit ut sibi eodem loco regiæ domus ædificarentur, et pro loco illo dedit monachis villam quæ dicitur Gosse, et non multò post defunctus est, et successit ei filius ejus Edbertus, et eodem anno in eadem insula defunctus est, cui successit Kenulfus.

Quod Villa de Suthuna data est pro Andreseia.

REGNANTE rege Kenulfo, soliti sunt venatores regis, et qui portabant accipitres, et cæteri aulici vassalli sæpissimè hospitari in domibus regiis in Andreseia, et multa incommoda et vexationes abbati et hominibus abbatiae inferre. Quod videns abbas Retunus dedit regi Kenulfo villam de Suthuna, et cxx. libras argenti, ut eum ab hac vexatione liberaret, et ne aliquis regum ibidem ampliùs hospitaretur. Accipiens igitur rex villam et pecuniam prænominatam, præcepit ne aliquis suorum, sive regum ampliùs ibidem hospitaretur, sed haberent monachi locum illum in perpetuum, et carta sua confirmavit.

NUM. II.

[Ex Registro de Abbendon, in Bibliotheca Cottoniana, sub effigie Claudii B. vi. fol. 5 b, cap. 11.]

VERUM ne sub silentio nobilitatem villæ Seovechesham prætereamus, quasi rei veritatis ignari, aliquid de ea probabili relatione, et fide digna, ad præsens in medium proferamus. Fuit itaque Seovechesham civitas famosa, aspectu desiderabilis, divitiis plena, agris circumdata uberrimis, vernantibus pratis, diffusis campis, et gregibus lactifluis. Hic sedes regia, huc, cum de regni præcipuis et arduis tractaretur negotiis, concursus fiebat populi, ubi etiam à primis Britonum temporibus locus fuit religionis, tam tempore religionis fanaticæ, quàm tempore religionis Christianæ. In hac etiam civitate plura fuerunt indicia Christianitatis et antiquorum conversionis Britonum, ut supradictum est. Cruces etenim et imagines quæ in villa ipsa nunc hîc, nunc illic, effossæ, reperiabantur hujus rei præbent experimentum.

Inter alias etiam cruces inventa fuit crux illa sancta, quæ nigra crux appellatur. Sancta enim adeo est ut nullus juramento super eam prestito, impunè et sine periculo vitæ suæ possit affirmare mendacium; creditur etenim ex clavis Domini, ex magna parte, conflata et facta. Nec tamen à Constantino magno, qui in ea regione imperator creatus fuit ibi reposita, ut quidam dicunt, sed credibilius quidem à benevolis suis Britannis, quos secum Romam profecturus deducerat, transmissa illuc, ut memoria sanctitatis et meriti utrorumque, scilicet matris et filii, insigniùs appareret, ubi et corporalis presentiae ipsorum conversatio habita magnificabatur, vel certè transmittente Cæsare ipso, vel matre ejus ad honorem et tuitionem patriæ, de qua ad imperium assumptus fuerat, ut prædiximus, à quibus, propter merita et sanctitatem eorum, crucem Domini constat fuisse inventam. Tempore Anglorum edificata ibi capellula ipsius sanctæ Helenæ, quæ aliquando ibi, tempore viri sive filii, conversata fuerat, crucem illam repertam fuisse asserunt, per quam multa signa indicans, sanctuarii illius virtutes monstratæ sunt. Quot rei perjuri super eam deprehensi sunt non est numerus. Unde cum tot virtutibus quas enumerare non possumus, mendacia et assertiones falsæ detegerentur, reverentia qua debebat honorabiliter tractabatur, et volentibus fratribus eam auro et argento ornare, quicquid ei in una die circa adaptabantur, totum altera decidisse et dissolutum esse videbant, nec potuit aliqua parte aliquando aurum vel argentum circa eam confirmari, sindone tantùm exteriùs per totum involuta est.

Fundatio Abbatiae Sanctimonialium de Helnestow.

VERUMPTAMEN Rex Cedwalla, cujus animæ propicietur Deus, non tantum bona supra enumerata Abben-doniæ contulit, verumetiam, de propria voluntate sua, Cillæ sorori Heanæ patricii dedit licentiam construendi monasterium in loco qui nunc dicitur Helnestoue juxta Thamisiæ, ubi virgo Deo sacrata et sacro velamine velata quamplurimas coadunavit sanctimoniales, quarum in posterum mater extitit et abbatissa. Post hujus decessum, succedente temporis intervallo quamplurimo, translatae sunt sanctimoniales præfatae ab illo loco ad villam quæ dicitur Witham. Succedentibus verò nonnullis annis, cum grave bellum, et a seculo inauditum, ortum fuisset inter Offam regem Merciorum, et Kine-wlfum regem West-Saxonum, tunc temporis factum est castellum super montem de Witham, ob cujus rei causam recesserunt sanctimoniales illæ à loco illo nec ulterius redire perhibentur.

Si verò omnipotentis Dei judicio, me vivente, vitæ suæ sortem disposuerit, jus ejusdem loci et dispensatio mihi cedat. Supradictæ verò quantitas terræ in Bradanfeld xlvij. cassatorum est. IN nomine domini Dei nostri Jesu Christi salvatoris. Ea quæ secundùm decretum canonum salubriter decernuntur, quamvis sermo tantùm ad testimonium sufficeret, tamen pro incerta futuri temporis ambiguitate firmissima literarum astipulatione roborentur. Quapropter ego Ina rex Saxonum, terram juxta Abbendune clxxiii. cassatorum, Hean abbati libenter reddidi, quam Cissa rex sibi ac Cillan sorori suæ atque abbatissæ aliquando dederat: sed Ina rex eandem terram postea, dum regno potiretur, diripiens ac reipublicæ restituit, nondum constructo monasterio in ea, nec ullo admodum oratorio erecto. Rursus autem ad ædificandum monasterium, eidem Heano patricio tunc temporis suo, eandem terram redonavit, dicens; Ego Ina monarc. Saxonie, regnante domino regale gubernans sceptrum, terram quam prædecessores mei, Cissa et cæteri, Heano patricio suæque germanæ Cillan, dedisse noscuntur, iterum, cum consilio plurimorum, reddo et relinquo. Deinde prædictus patricius Hean, se cum omni facultate sua et præfata terra, omnipotentis Dei servicio subdidit, meque ad construendum monasterium illud in loco supra nominato, id est juxta Abbendune, regulariterque regendum illud abbatem elegit, sponteque sua seipsum meo regimini commisit, votoque monachico constringens. At nunc nondum revoluta ad integrum quinquennio ex quo hæc vota vovit, solvenda immutare decreta cupiens iniquè, regem in suffragium sibi repetitæ hæreditatis assumpsit, quibus ego libenter cessi. Præfatamque terram et monasteria quæ construximus, ut dixi, in toto retribuam. Insuper et de orientali parte fluminis Tamisæ xx. cassatos, quos mihi Cuthredus regulus, et Merciorum rex Ethelredus, necnon et Ina rex Saxonum tradiderunt, adjiciam x. quoque cassatos secus vadum Bestlesford, et c. in Bradenfeld, ubi monasterium erexi, quos Ina et Cenred simul dederunt, pariter tribui, qui faciunt simul cclxxij. cassatos. Votum autem monachi quod mihi spondit relaxans ei clementer indulsi, præsentem venerando antistite Hedde, necnon Adelmo abbate, et Wintra, et omni familia nostra in ecclesia. Si quis verò contra hoc decretum abbatum venire temptaverit, vel has donationes regum religiosorum tyrannica fretus potestate violenter demere vel auferre satagerit, sciat se coram Christo rationem in ultimo vivorum et mortuorum examine redditurum. De Sancto Atheluuoldo.

Nunc verò restat ut de viro venerabili Atheluuoldo, tempore regis Eadgari istius loci abbate sanctissimo, mentionem faciamus, qualiter post amplas possessiones Eadgari regis Anglorum illustrissimi, domum istam venustissimè ordinaverit, utputa prudens ac vigilans Domini nostri Jesu Christi dispensator, videlicet quoad ordinis observantiam, et institutiones ordini admodum necessarias, similiter et consuetudines omni memoria dignas. Inprimis itaque beatus Atheluuoldus, regnante rege Eadgaro honorabili, templum in honore sanctæ Dei genitricis semperque virginis Mariæ in hoc loco construxit, pariter et ad votum consummavit. Quo consummato, cum jam beatus Atheluuoldus nonnullos fratres ibi coadunasset, de communi consensu et pari voluntate eorundem, misit quendam suum monachum nomine Osgarum in transmarinas partes ad abbatiam Floriacensem propter regulam beati Benedicti, sub qua fratres istius loci Deo dignè famulantes foeliciter militarent. Attendens etiam diligenter beatus Atheluuoldus illud propheticum quod dicitur, 'Domine dilexi decorem domus tuæ,' ut de domo exteriori ad præsens intelligatur, quoad decentiùs potuit, domum istam ornamentis ditavit pretiosissimis. Dedit autem, ut ex antiquorum librorum accepimus attestazione, calicem unum aureum immensi ponderis, ob honorem et reverentiam corporis et sanguinis domini nostri Jesu Christi. Dedit etiam tres cruces admodum decoras ex argento et auro puro, quæ tempore werræ regis Stephani sunt confractæ, attestantibus monachis nostris viam universæ carnis ingressis. Ornavit etiam ecclesiam textis, tam ex argento puro quàm ex auro obrizo, pariter et lapidibus pretiosissimis, thuribulis, et fialis, pelvibus fusilibus, et candelabris ex argento ductilibus, multisque bonis aliis tam usibus monachorum circa altare competentibus quàm decentie ecclesiasticæ competentibus. Opitulante etiam piissimo rege Eadgaro, memorandæ memoriæ abbas Atheluuoldus tabulam fecit argenteam pretio adpretiatum trecentarum librarum, cujus etiam materiam forma exsuperabat artificialis; quæ etiam usque ad tempus Vincentii abbatis illæsa permansit et inconfRACTA. Interim vir Dei mulieri forti consimilis sindonem fecit, vendidit et tradidit Chananeo, dum per sanctam conversationem et devotionem exemplum bonæ actionis præbuit discipulis suis, de bono in melius commutatus. Fecit etiam duas campanas propriis manibus, ut dicitur, quas in hac domo posuit cum aliis duabus majoribus, quas etiam beatus Dunstanus propriis manibus fecisse perhibetur. Præterea fecit vir venerabilis Atheluuoldus quandam rotam tintinnabulis plenam, quam auream nuncupavit, propter laminas ipsius deauratas, quam in festivis diebus ad majoris excitationem devotionis reducendo volvi constituit. Fuerunt autem ista super enumerata ornamenta, cum augmentatione bonorum aliorum in ecclesia ista usque ad adventum Normannorum in Angliam.

Isto enim tempore erant in hac domo quidam monachi et sacristæ de cœnobio Gemeticensi, qui ornamenta quamplurima à beato Atheluuoldo laboriosè acquisita, et huic domui collata, tam aurea quàm argentea, erudrato penitus argento à rota memorata, secum in Normanniam fraudulenter asportaverunt. Attendens etiam diligentius vir venerabilis Atheluuoldus illud autenticum quod dicitur, 'De altare vivunt qui altari serviunt:' similiter et illud evangelicum, 'Dignus est operarius mercede sua,' singulis diebus horis statutis filiis suis in vinea domini laborantibus annonam hujuscemodi sub certa astipulatione constituit. Monachis Abbendoniam ad mensam discumbentibus, unusquisque panem accipiat sibi deputatum de frumento puro quinque marcis parem in pondere; unde versus ille, 'Panis Abbendoniam par marcis pondere quinque.' Ad istum panem frustum casei ad talem et tantam magnitudinem singulis diebus apponi constituit, ut infra v. dies pondus Abbendonense quod tunc constabat ex xx. duabus petris, ut ex antiquorum accepimus attestazione, penitus expenderetur.

Constituit etiam monachis istius loci Deo et beatæ Mariæ in perpetuum servientibus, quæquæ die duo genera leguminum ante generale; et pulmentum post generale, unum etiam generale, et unam pitanciam eis constituit, quibus ad refectorem sine crapula vesci possent. In albis unam pitanciam plusquam in aliis diebus constituit. In cappis duas pitancias præter generale. In præcipuis festivitibus tres pitancias præter generale. Et in eisdem diebus artocreas, et ad cœnam oblata constituit. In quadragesimali verò tempore loco casei constituit unicuique fratrum unam anguillam grossam cotidie cum generale. In æstate verò constituit ad cœnam fratrum lac acidum in vasis pulcherrimis quæ Creches vulgari onomate dicuntur, à die quæ dicitur Hokedai usque ad festum sancti Michaelis qualibet die. A festo verò sancti Michaelis usque ad festum sancti Martini, lac dulce secunda die. Vas verò quod Creche nuncupatur vij. pollices continet, viz. ad profunditatem à summitate unius usque ad profundum lateris alterius. Constituit etiam placenta v. diebus ebdomade Paschæ. In ebdomada Pentecostes v. diebus. Et in die sancti Marchii evangelistæ. Tribus diebus Rogationum. Die Ascensionis dominicæ.

Ad mensuram potus monachorum vir venerabilis Atheluuoldus quandam assisam non ultra rationabilem sufficientiam progredientem nec citra deficientem constituendam perutile fore dijudicavit. Constituit itaque cifum quendam magnum, flasconem et dimidium, scilicet duas caritates et eo amplius in se plenarie continentem, quem cifum antiqui bollam Atheluuoldi vocabant. Hac verò mensurâ bis in die obbæ monachorum implebantur, scilicet ad prandium et ad cœnam. In festivis etiam diebus constituit eis, sive in albis sive in cappis, idromelum, videlicet ad prandium inter sex fratres sextarium, et ad cœnam inter xij. fratres sextarium. In præcipuis verò diebus quas apud nos principales observamus, scilicet, Natali domini, in Pascha, in Pentecoste, in Assumptione sanctæ Mariæ, et in Nativitate ejus, in Natali apostolorum Petri et Pauli, in festivitate omnium Sanctorum vinum illis constituit ad mensuram qua prius; de Idromelo ad prandium, et ad cœnam Idromelum. Hæc verò et his similia tam abundanter tamque circumspetè constituit, ut non solum monachi quoad usum victus sustentarentur, verumetiam pauperes ex eorum reliquiis propensius recrearentur.

Præterea videns vir venerabilis, quod in maxima parte diminutæ essent veritates à filiis hominum, et magis ac magis imposterum diminuendæ, timens sibi ac suis ne consuetudines inantea assignatæ, per processum temporis aut deteriorarentur aut in pejus mutarentur, vel etiam penitus adnullarentur, fecit quod potuit, et firmiter prohibuit sub anatematicis interminatione, ne quis successorum suorum in pejus mutare præsumeret aut variare, ni fortè, zelo caritatis succensus, easdem consuetudines de bono in melius augmentare decrevisset. Oravit etiam pro domo ista, antequam ad episcopatum Wintoniensem vocatus esset, orationem; cujus orationis tenor hic est.

Oratio Sancti Atheluuoldi.

DEUS eterne, ante cujus conspectum assistunt angeli, et cujus nutu reguntur universa, protege Domine quæso locum istum qui in nomine tuo et beatæ Mariæ constructum est, et per virtutem nominis tui recedat ab eo virtus inimicorum, umbraque fantasmatum et incursio turbinum, percussio fulminum, lesio tonitruum, calamitas tempestatuum omnisque spiritus procellarum. Præterea quæso Domine, ut non ignis domum istam consu-mat, nec homo inimicus per superbiam eam destruat; sed tu piissime Deus conserva eam et gubernata, multiplicique fructuum ubertate pinguescat, ut omnes habitantes in ea voce et corde te immizent, et sua modulatione nomen tuum magnificent, et super eos descendat benedictio tua, et super locum istum, maneatque semper per Dominum nostrum.

INTEREA, dum viri Dei Atheluuoldi abbatis vita et Deo acceptabilem et hominibus predicabilem indies se exhiberet, à prædicto rege Eadgardo eligitur Wintoniensi urbi antistes, anno à dominica incarnatione DCCCLXIII. Hujus vice Abbendoniam abbas constituitur Osgarus, ejusdem ecclesie monachus; et quamquam Patriarchatum conscenderit præsulatus, non tamen à monachicæ jugo disciplinæ aliquatenus se relaxavit: unde clerici, qui tunc temporis apud illius episcopatus sedem in ecclesia convivere canonicè debuerant, religionis rigorem in suo præsule negligentes, loco cedere quam districtius vivere maluerunt. Quapropter prædicti regis et beati Dunstani tunc archiepiscopi consiliis, et auctoritate, eos expulit, monachosque de Abbendoniam intromisit illuc, qui usque hodie Deo regulariter in eadem ecclesia deserviunt. Similiter et de ecclesia ubi abbatia est in eadem civitate fecit. Nam in ea monachos, et abbatem eis primus ipse instituit. Siquidem et apud Orientales-Anglos in insula Heliensi unum, in loco verò qui Burch appellatur aliud, et apud Torneiam tertium, monasteria cœnobarum constituit. Que cuncta ex Abbendonensium sumpsere collegio cultum et fundamina, ubi pietatis justiciæque cultor ille vineam plantaverat tam fertilem, de qua per loca plurima tot propagines propagaret. Sed quia ecclesiam Abbendonensem ante susceptum episcopatum dedicandam reliquerat, post sui consecrationem et ipsam, unà cum beato Dunstano, et aliis nonnullis coepiscopis suis in honorem Dei genitricis consecravit die v. kalendarum Ianuariarum.

NUM. XXII.

[Ibid. fol. 123 b.]

EJUSDEM temporibus, et temporibus duorum regum, scilicet Willielmi, qui Anglos devicerat, et filii ejus Willielmi, erat quidam constabularius Oxoniae, Robertus de Oili dictus, in cujus custodia erat illo tempore provincia illa in præceptis, et in factis, adeo ut de ore regis profere-retur illi actio: dives enim valdè erat, diviti nec pauperi parcebat exigere ab eis pecunias sibique gazas multiplicare, sicut qui brevi versiculo de similibus comprehendit dicens:

Ecclesias verò cupiditate pecuniarum infestabat ubique, maximè abbatiam Abbendonie, scilicet possessiones abstrahere et frequenter in placitis gravare quàm misericordiam regis ponere. Inter cætera mala, pratum quoddam extra muros Oxoniae situm, consentiente rege, à monasterio abstraxit, et in usum militum castelli deputavit, pro quo dampno contristati sunt fratres Abbendonenses magis quàm pro aliis malis. Tunc simul congregati ante altare sanctæ Mariæ quod dedicaverant sanctus Athelualdus, Dunstanus archiepiscopus, et sanctus Athelualdus episcopus, cum lachrimis prostrati in terram deprecantes de Roberto de Oili monasterii depredatore vindictam facere, aut illum ad satisfactionem convertere. Interea dum sic per dies et noctes beatam Mariam invocassent, decidit ipse Robertus in ægritudine valida, in qua laborabat multis diebus inpenitens, donec videbatur ei quadam nocte in palatio cujusdam regis magni insistere, et hinc inde multitudinem magnatum hominum assistere, et in medio illorum quandam gloriosam supra tronum sedere in muliebri habitu speciosam ualdè, et ante illam stare duos fratres ex congregatione prædicti cœnobii quorum nomina cognovit. Et cum ipsi duo vidissent illum in palatium intrare, flectebant genua ante illam dominam, dicentes cum magno suspirio: ‘Ecce domina, iste est qui possessiones ecclesie tuæ sibi usurpat, et pratum unde clamorem facimus nuper à monasterio tuo abstraxit.’ At illa commota adversus Robertum illum, jussit foràs ejicere, et ad pratum ducere, quod à monasterio abstraxit, ibique illum torqueri. Ad cujus preceptum surrexerunt duo juvenes ex circumstantibus et duxerunt eum in prædictum pratum ibique eum fecerunt sedere. Et statim convenerunt ibi turpissimi pueri portantes fœnum de ipso prato super humeros suos, irridentes, et ad invicem dicentes: ‘Ecce karissimus noster, ludamus cum eo.’ Tunc fasciculos de humeris suis deponentes, et desuper minge-bant igne subposito, et sic fumigaverunt eum. Quidam ex eis tortas de illo fœno faciebant, et in faciem ejus jactabant, alii barbam ejus inflammaverunt. Ille verò in tali angustia positus, clamare cepit, adhuc sopore detentus: ‘Sancta Maria indulge mihi, jam moriar.’ Uxor autem ejus juxta lectulum ejus jacebat, et evigilavit illum, dicens, ‘Domine evigela, gravè enim dormis.’ At ille expergefactus à sompno, dixit, verè gravèque nam in medio dæmonum erat. Illa respondit dicens: ‘Dominus custodiat te ab omni malo.’ Tunc ille narravit sompnum suum uxori suæ. Et illa, ‘Dominus flagellat omnem filium quem recipit.’ Post paucos verò dies, cogente eum uxore sua, ad Abbendoniam eum navigare fecit, et ibi ante altare coram abbate Reginaldo et omni congregatione fratrum et amicorum suorum circum astantium, Tadmertune decem librarum redditum, quas Athelelmi abbatis illuc usque dono exegerat, omnino remittens, contestatur suarum post se rerum possessiones, ne inde quicquam exactionis ultra queretur: simul et amplius quàm centum librarum summam, suorum pro emendatione præteritorum commissorum, hujusmodi quoque monasterii reedificatione quod nuper antea abbas Reginaldus ampliari inchoavit, super altare optulit tunc ad præsens. Qui adeo monasterii renovationi intendit tunc, ut illud toto illo anno sine penuria fabricare acceleraret. Post prædictam autem visionem, quum viderat jussu Dei genitricis se à satellitibus malis torqueri, non tantùm ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ de Abbendoniam cu-rabat erigere, verumetiam alias parochianas ecclesias dirutas, videlicet infra muros Oxenfordiæ, et extra, ex sumptu suo reparavit. Nam sicut ante visionem illam, depredator ecclesiarum, et pauperum erat, ita postea effectus est reparator ecclesiarum, et recreator pauperum, multorumque bonorum operum patrator. Inter cætera, pons magnus ad septentrionalem plagam Oxoniae per eum factus est. Qui, mense Septembrio obiens, in capitulo Abbendonensi in parte aquilonis sepulturam meruit; uxor autem ejus in sinistra ejus condita requiescit.

Obeunte autem te nunc ejusdem loci abbate, vel tuorum quolibet successorum, nullus ibidem qualibet surreptionis astutiâ vel violentiâ præponatur, nisi quem fratres communi consensu, vel fratrum pars consilii sanioris, secundùm Dei timorem, et beati Benedicti regulam, canonicè providerint eligendum. Prohibemus insuper ut nullus post factam ibidem professionem, absque abbatis et fratrum suorum licentia, de eodem monasterio audeat discedere, discedentem verò nullus audeat retinere.

Statuimus quoque, ut in monasterio vestro in quo fratres regularem vitam professi degunt, nulli omnino liceat secundum beati Benedicti regulam ibidem constitutam ordinem immutare, nullus etiam episcoporum futuris temporibus audeat ejusdem religionis fratres de monasterio vestro, abbate et fratribus minus consentientibus, expellere. Sepulturam quoque monasterii liberam esse concedimus; ut eorum qui se illic sepeliri deliberaverint devotioni et extremæ voluntati, nisi fortè excommunicati sint, nullus obsistat. Præterea, libertates omnes et rationabiles monasterii vestri consuetudines à regibus Angliæ et episcopis vestris vobis concessas, et scriptis eorum confirmatas, sicut eas hactenus in pace habuistis et tenuistis, vobis in perpetuum confirmamus. Decevimus ergo, ut nulli omnino hominum liceat præfatum monasterium temerè perturbare, aut ejus possessiones auferre, vel ablatas retinere, minuere, vel quibuslibet vexationibus fatigare. Sed omnia integra conserventur, eorum pro quorum gubernatione et sustentatione concessa sunt usibus omnimodis profutura, salva sedis apostolicæ auctoritate, et diocesanorum episcoporum canonica justitia et reverentia. Si quæ igitur in futurum ecclesiastica secularive persona hujus nostræ constitutionis paginam sciens contra eam temerè venire temptaverit, secundò tertiove commonita, si non reatum suum congrua satisfactione correxerit, potestatis honorisque sui dignitate careat, reamque se divino judicio existere de perpetrata iniquitate agnoscat, et à sacratissimo corpore et sanguine Dei et Domini redemptoris nostri Jhesu Christi aliena sit, atque in extremo examine districtæ ultioni subjaceat. Cunctis autem eidem loco sua jura servantibus, sit pax Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, quatinus et hic fructum bonæ actionis percipiant, et apud districtum judicem præmia æternæ pacis inveniant, Amen, Amen.

De Divisione Possessionum Abbatia inter Abbatem et Conventum sine assensu Regis.

[Claus. 14 Edw. II. Ryley, Pleadings in Parl. p. 387.]

MEMORAND. quod cum dominus noster rex nuper

dato sibi intelligi quod abbatia de Abyndon, quæ de patronatu suo, ac de progenitorum suorum et suis elemosinis fundata est, per dissensionem ibidem subortam, occasione cujusdam compositionis inter quendam abbatem et conventum loci illius super divisione bonorum et possessionum ejusdem domus, nuper initæ, ut dicebatur, et aliis occasionibus ære alieno graviter deprimebatur, facultatibus minorabatur, ac totaliter destrui verisimiliter formidabatur; per quod cessabant elemosinæ progenitorum suorum ibidem constitutæ, dissolvebatur religio, hospitalitates subtrahebantur, et cætera opera caritatis; dictus dominus noster rex depressioni et desolationi abbatia prædictæ prospicere cupiens, nono die Augusti anno regni sui xiiij. assignavit venerabilem patrem dominum R. episcopum Sarisburiensem et dominum Hugonem le Despenser seniore, ad inquirendum de statu abbatia prædictæ, ac super Compositione prædicta quoad divisionem dictorum bonorum et possessionum, utrum videlicet talis compositio facta esset necne, et si sic, tunc de modo et causa ejusdem, et qua auctoritate facta fuit, et utrum de assensu ipsius domini regis aut alicujus antecessorum suorum, et de omnibus aliis circumstantiis præmissa contingentibus, modis et viis, quibus melius informari possent plenius veritatem, et quod de eo quod inde invenirent ipsum dominum regem in proximo parlamento suo redderent distincte et aperte certiore. Postea in parlamento ipsius regis apud Westmonasterium in octabis S. Michaelis anno regni sui quarto decimo convocato, præfati episcopus et Hugo de facto suo in præmissis dicto domino nostro regi relationem fecerunt in hunc modum:

“Ceo est le Respouns le priour et le covent de Abyndon, done al honeurable piere Rogier par la grace de Dieu evesque de Salesbirs, et a monsieur Hugh le Despenser le piere, a queux nostre seigneur le roy nadgeres dona sa commission a enquere des pointz contenuz en la dite commission. Qua relatione sic facta, necnon et exhibitis ibi Compositione de qua fit mentio superius et Bulla confirmatoria ipsius Compositionis de tempore Alexandri papæ sub eo qui sequitur tenore:

missis inter partes amicabile Compositio intervenit, prout in literis inde confectis dicti abbatis et vestris sigillis munitis plenius continetur. Nos igitur vestris supplicationibus inclinati, compositionem ipsam sicut rite ac sine pravitate provide facta est et a partibus sponte recepta, et hactenus pacifice observata, auctoritate apostolica confirmamus, et præsentis scripti patrocinio communi-mus, tenorem literarum ipsarum præsentibus de verbo ad verbum inseri facientes qui talis est: 'Noverint universi et singuli sanctæ matris filii, præsens scriptum visuri vel audituri, quod cum inter me Johannem abbatem Abyndon. ex una parte, et ejusdem loci Conventum ex altera, orta esset contentio super quatuor articulis; videlicet, super defensionibus monachorum et bonorum ad obedientiariorum dicti monasterii pertinentium a me cum sumptibus meis expensis et omni onere faciendis. Et super exhibitione et restitutione cujusdam cartæ quam ego conventui confeceram de terra quæ fuit Benedicti de Lardar. et super anniversario Edgari regis fundatoris dictæ domus, et principali festo sancti Edwardi regis similiter faciendis. Et insuper cum ex quadam clausula cujusdam instrumenti ordinationis quam magister Robertus de Karevile, tunc domini Roberti bonæ memoriæ Sarisbiriensis episcopi officialis, inter me ex una parte et prædictum conventum ex altera, super quibusdam contentionibus sedandis confecerat, frequens et assidua adinveniri possit dissensionis materia et labor continuus corporum et incessans excrescere possit turbatio animorum, videlicet ex illa clausula sicut hactenus est usitatum super amerciamendis pro rebus et negotiis monachorum à me exsolvendis, ad amovendum omnem ambiguitatis scrupulum, et ad tollendum cujuslibet discordiæ materiam, plenissima super hoc mecum habita deliberatione, juris utriusque peritorum insuper communicato consilio, pacem et tranquillitatem interiorem et exteriorem desiderans, ego dictus Johannes abbas pro me et successoribus meis concedo et firmiter animo obligandi promitto, quod ego et successores mei imposterum et imperpetuum defensionem omnimodam et tuitionem terrarum, tene-mentorum, ecclesiarum, decimarum, reddituum, et rerum omnium, ubicumque et in quibuscumque consistant, et undecumque provenerint, ad conventum et obedientiariorum præfati monasterii pertinentium subibimus et sustinebimus in omnibus, nostris propriis scilicet meis et successorum meorum sumptibus et expensis, et omnimodis oneribus in utroque foro, ecclesiastico videlicet et sæculari. Et amerciamenta quæcumque occasione prædictorum quorumcumque, à quocumque vel quibuscumque, et ubicumque et quandocumque fuerint imposita vel exacta, ego et successores mei in solidum nulla prorsus a prædictis conventu et obedientiariorum contributione petenda, imploranda, vel exigenda, de bonis abbati Abyndonie assignatis exsolvemus, bonis conventus et obedientiariorum super hoc nullo modo molestandis. Si autem pro proprio personali facto vel delicto sive forisfacto alicujus obedientiariorum, vel alicujus servientis sui per ipsum obedientiariorum in aliquo servitio instituti, aliqua oriatur controversaria vel aliquod fiat vel suscitetur negotium, ego Johannes et successores mei tam monachos quam servientes suos, in omnibus et per omnia, in quolibet foro, coram quibuscumque et contra quoscumque, bona fide et cum omni diligentia, sumptibus nostris et expensis, et omni onere, plenissime tuebimur et defendemus imperpetuum. Ita tamen quod si pro proprio personali delicto vel forisfacto dictarum personarum aliquod fuerit impositum amerciamentum, ego et successores mei medietatem illius amerciamenti sine difficultate aliqua solvemus et obedientiariorum aliam medietatem, ut sic ego et successores mei cautiores et diligentiores simus in defendendo, et dicti obedientiariorum vel sui servientes circumspectores sint in non delinquendo remissis plene et expresse ex animo quibuscumque injuriis, gravaminibus, et aliis occasionibus litium materiam præstantibus, tam ex parte mea contra conventum meum, quam ex parte ipsius conventus et singulorum de conventu ex parte sua usque ad diem confectionis præsentis scripturæ. Super aliis vero inter nos omnino sopita est contentio in hunc modum, videlicet quod ego expresse confitebar, et concessi me teneri ad prædictæ cartæ restitutionem et exhibitionem, et me et successores meos ad ejus observationem firmiter esse obligatos. Onera tam dicti anniversarii quam præfacti principalis festi sancti Edwardi me et successores meos sustinere debere imperpetuum, et me et successores meos articulos Ordinationis quam prædictus magister R. de Karevile inter me ex una parte, et præfatum conventum ex altera confecerat, inviolabiliter observare debere imperpetuum in virtute juramenti quod coram eodem magistro R. super observatione prædictorum articulorum corporaliter præstiti.' Et ne dicta Ordinatio quemquam lateat, et ne ejusdem exhibitio aliàs sit necessaria vel alicui recitanda, articulos in eadem contentos et subscriptos dignum duxi exprimendos, et hoc scripto confirmandos, forma autem articulorum prædictæ Ordinationis talis est:

"Statuo quod abbas cum locus utilitatis ac promotionis se offerat nullos carnales seu familiares præponat utilitatibus ecclesiæ suæ quam præ omnibus personis præferre tenetur, et quod abbas suis maneat juribus contentus ne monachorum libertates aut consuetudines in aliquo decurtet. Præterea cum antiqui mores considerandi sunt, et consuetudines in dicto monasterio hactenus approbatæ, idem abbas circa qualitatem et quantitatem indumentorum contentus maneat a Camerario recipere sicut abbates prædecessores sui fecerant in hoc casu, nec ab ipso aliud vel aliter exigatur, et obedientiariorum ad quem hoc pertinet aliud aut aliter sibi facere non exigatur. Ad hæc, si quis Monachus super aliqua oppressionem vel gravamine in capitulo vel extra ad dominum episcopum Sarisbiriensem vocem appellationis miserit, et protestatus fuerit proprio juramento se velle prosequi cum effectu, ex tunc Abbas nullam sibi pœnam infligat, nec verbo aut facto ipsum impediatur quo minus sibi liceat appellationem prosequi interjectam, vel conquerendi alicui præbere obstaculum. Quod si Abbas culpabilis inveniatur super hoc rebellem et ingratum suo episcopo se ostendit. Sane cum negotia ecclesiæ non unius tantum consilio, sed vel omnium fratrum vel saltem partis sanioris assensu regi debeant et disponi, abbas cum super hiis tractandum sit, vel in capitulo in præsentia omnium vel coram senioribus et discretioribus tractet, provideat, et disponat. Et quamvis ipse Abbas cæteris sit prælatus, ipse tamen in negotiis ecclesiæ suo assensu tantummodo non regatur, sed prout magis expedit suis fratribus condescendat, nisi rationabilis et manifesta sit causa quare propria ducitur voluntate. Etsi quid provisum fuerit in tractatibus seorsum coram fratribus aliquibus, ut hoc quod provisum est ostendatur omnibus de conventu, non subvertatur vel mutetur consilium per abbatem, vel aliud, vel aliter magis aut minus prodatur in medio quam illud, et sicuti provisum fuerat inter fratres, ut tunc ab omnibus quid faciendum vel dimittendum sit melius appareat si veritas fuerit manifestata, quorum quidem consilio obligationes et cautiones monasterii de cætero procedant. Custodia sigilli conventus de assensu communi tribus committatur fratribus quorum fidelitas et discretio ab omnibus approbatur; quorum usus et officium hoc existit, quod quicquid consignari debeat prius in eorum præsentia aperte et distincte recitetur, et, cum recitatum fuerit, custodes sigilli illud diligenter inspiciant ut nichil aliud vel aliter interferatur quam prius fuerat recitatum. Et si qui fratres consignationi contradixerint, ipsorum benigne audiatur ratio. Quod si perseveraverint in sua contradictione, prius inter se discutiatur si ratio comitetur voluntatem, alioquin sanioris partis judicio non obstante reclamatione frivola, quod provisum est, suum consequatur effectum. Violentam autem extorsionem sigilli prohibeo sine clavis. Quod si quis, præter consensum partis sanioris, pro sigillo violentiam intulerit corporalem, in loco videlicet ubi residet vel personis illud custodientibus vel claves gestantibus, culpam et pœnam sacrilegii se noverit incursum. Item statuo quod abbas de cætero sua propria voluntate per receptionem plurium qui commode sustentari nequiverint Hospitale Sancti Johannis non gravet ne per suam importunam oppressionem potentes et sani stipendia recipiant ægrotorum, consilio et providentia elemosinarii sicut convenit non exclusis, cujus interest ut dictum Hospitale salubrius gubernetur. Administratio unius Obedientiariorum propter aliam administrationem, sive sit idem administrator sive non, nisi de fratrum consilio, et sanioris partis, non gravetur, nec unus obedientiarum alii necessitatem imponat solvendi ea quæ in alterius administratione gesta fuerunt. Abbas nova corpora sua auctoritate non instituat. De veteribus autem sic disponat sicut in dicto monasterio hactenus est obtentum, nec de hoc abbas statum antiquum immutet. Stipendia, et metecorn, ac cætera debita servientum in monasterio prædicto favorabiliter suis temporibus solvantur. Hospites quos ad monasterium declinare contingit per abbatem recipiantur, et recolligantur honeste sive sint ecclesiastica sive sæculares personæ, et secundum nobilitatem ipsorum, et gravitatem, ordinem, vel dignitatem honorentur. Abbates autem et Priores, vel cæteræ similes personæ religiosæ, quas ibidem hospitari contigerit, non in monachorum receptaculo hospitum jaceant aut descendant, sed per dispositionem abbatis in cameris suæ curiæ admittantur, nisi tanta sit necessitas propter plures forsitan hospites declinantes ibidem, quod eis exterius provideri nequiverit, tunc absque hujusmodi rei consequentia, ex causa interius admittantur. Abbas nullam permittat fieri subtractionem de præbendis equorum obedientiarum, sed portiones et mensuras quas consueverant recipere pro equis suis illas impendant cum integritate qualibet et favore. Et qui Obedientiarum absque extorsione vel coercione abbatis in pace maneant, nec eos sibi comodari faciat absque eorum assensu benivolo. Ad prioratum de Colum nullus, ex levi causa, monachus destinetur, nisi causa inter fratres prius fuerit cognita et rationabilis habeatur. Hoc proviso quod abbas pro rancore aliquo vel vindicta sumenda nullum ibi monachum destinet, et in omnibus amotionibus et mutationibus rerum et personarum, abbas magis ratione ducatur quam propria voluntate. Servientum officia cum vacare ea contigerit abbas pretio venalitatibus non exponat nec interventu pecuniæ seu alicujus familiaritatis, hujusmodi officia dehonestet, et cum hujusmodi deliquerint maxime quantum ad jura et consuetudines monachorum tunc in capitulo vel coram parte saniori corrigantur vel si incorrigibiles seu indisciplinati maneant a suis officiis seperarentur omnino, loco ipsorum competentibus subrogatis. Abbas a nullo obedientiarum pecuniam vel alias res ad suam obedientiam pertinentes sine consilio fratrum propria extorqueat voluntate. Monachus custos operis extra clausuram monachorum operari non cogatur. Et ne ista ordinatio et mea insuper prædicta obligatio alicui videatur personalis et temporalis, concessi bona fide pro me et successoribus meis, quod ipsa realis fit et perpetua, et in omnibus articulis præactis imperpetuum et inconcusse observanda. Et ut omnia prædicta futuris temporibus firmum et perpetuum robur contineant, præsens scriptum sigillo meo corroboravi. Et insuper ad majorem securitatem de communi assensu nostro et conventus, sigillum eorum huic scripto est appensum. Dat. in vigilia sancti Thomæ Apostoli anno Domini millesimo cclij. Hiis testibus magistro Egidio Decano Wellensi, Petro de Wileby canonico Eboracensi, fratre Hugone de Misterton, Nicholao de Preston et multis aliis. Nulli ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostræ confirmationis infringere vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attemptare præsumserit indignationem omnipotentis Dei, et beatorum Petri et Pauli apostolorum ejus, se noverit incursum. Dat. Viterbii vj. Id. Febr. pontificatus nostri anno quinto."

Super eodem negotio porrectæ fuerunt coram domino rege quædam Petitiones ex parte prioris de Abyndon et conventus ejusdem loci. Inter quas una continebat quod Johannes de Canynges, prior dicti loci de Abyndon perpetuus, ut asseruit, contra voluntatem suam in custodia Johannis de Sutton Abbatis de Abyndon, quasi in carcere, detinebatur extra domum suam de Abyndon. Propter quod supplicatum fuit quod idem prior posset venire coram domino rege et consilio suo pro statu suo et dictæ domus defendend. Et prædictus Abbas, ibi præsens, inde per dominum nostrum regem allocutus fatebatur dictum priorem esse in comitiva sua. Et injunctum fuit sibi per dictum dominum nostrum regem quod ipse adduceret dictum priorem coram domino rege et consilio in crastino, quo die existentibus coram præfato domino rege et consilio suo tam præfato abbate quam prædicto priore, dominus rex nominavit dominos Johannem episcopum Norwycensem, cancellarium suum, Stephanum Loudoniensem et Hamonem Roffensem episcopos, et prædictos episcopum Sarisbiriensem et Hugonem le Despenser, et dominos abbatem de sancto Albano et de Redynggs, dominum Hugonem le Courtney, dominos Walterum de Norwico baronem de Scaccario, Henricum le Scrop capitalem justiciarum suum, et Willielmum de Bereford, et magistrum Gilbertum de Middleton officialem curiæ Cantuariæ, ad examinandum totum negotium illud, et ad referendum inde domino nostro regi et suo consilio quod inde consulerent faciendum. Qui quidem episcopi et alii habita inde deliberatione diligenti retulerunt dicto domino nostro regi in parlamento prædicto quod in examinatione negotii illius invenerunt quod dominus noster rex nuper post electionem de ipso fratre Johanne de Sutton in abbatem dicti loci de Abyndon factam, idem dominus rex fidelitatem ipsius abbatis recepit, et temporalia abbatia ipsius nulla supposita divisione eorundem sibi restituit, quod compositio seu divisio bonorum dictæ domus de qua fit mentio superius, facta fuit sine assensu progenitorum domini nostri regis, et in diminutionem elemosinarum in dicta abbatia pro animabus progenitorum dicti domini regis et sua statutarum, necnon in dissolutionem religionis domus prædictæ. Propter quod videbatur eis dictam compositionem seu divisionem fore adnullandam. Qua relatione sic facta, consideratum est in eodem parlamento per dominum regem et consilium quod eadem compositio seu divisio adnulletur et pro nullo habeatur. Et dominus noster rex voluit deliberare de viris religiosis et aliis fide dignis mittendis ad abbatiam prædictam ad ordinandum et disponendum quod bona ejusdem domus honeste et debite expendantur. Et postea dominus noster rex nominavit præfatos episcopum Sarisbiriensem, abbatem de Redynggs, et Willielmum de Bereford ad præmissa facienda.

Monastery of St. Peter, Gloucester.

ULPHERE, the first Christian king of Mercia, is said to have begun, and Ethelred his brother and successor, who was afterwards a monk and abbat of Bardney, to have carried on and finished the abbey of St. Peter Gloucester, about the year 680;^a chiefly by the care of OSRIC the nephew of Ethelred, at that time vice-roy or sub-regulus of the Wiccii, but afterwards king of Northumberland. Osric having received from Ethelred the vill of Gloucester, with other lands, and a large sum of money, faithfully discharged the trust reposed in him, endowed the monastery,^b and placed in it his sister

KYNEBURGA, or KENBERG, wife of Aldred king of Northumberland, as the first abbess. Bishop Tanner thinks it probable that at this time the monastery was furnished with religious of both sexes.^c Kyneburga, who had been consecrated by Bosel bishop of Worcester, continued in her office twenty-nine years; and dying, was buried in the chapel of St. Petronilla, where her brother Osric, who died in 729, had been previously interred.^d

EDBURGA, who had been the wife of Wulphere king of the Mercians, was the next abbess, consecrated by Egwin, or Edwin, bishop of Worcester A.D. 710. Her administration is said to have lasted twenty-five years; when she was buried by Wilfrid bishop of Worcester, near her predecessor.

EVA, or GAFFE,^e who is also stated to have been of royal dignity in the time of Ethelred king of Mercia, was the third abbess: consecrated by Wilfrid bishop of Worcester in 735. Having increased the revenues of the monastery, and procured the confirmation of former donations in different synods, she died at the close of an administration of more than thirty years, A.D. 767.^f

After the death of Eva, the government by an abbess ceased. During the wars which followed, between Egbert king of Wessex and the king of Mercia, the nuns are represented to have left their monastery,^g which continued desolate till about A.D. 823, when paired it, and bestowed part of the possessions toward the maintenance of secular priests, whom he had here instituted. King Burgred, in 862, confirmed to these priests the lands which the kings Ethelred, Ethelbald, Offa of the East Saxons, Kenwolf, and other persons had given; and, by the consent of his great council, exempted the monastery, with its appurtenances and dependents, from all secular service. But in the year 1022, King Canute, at the instigation of Wolstan bishop of Worcester, having turned out the seculars, made them give place to monks of the order of St. Benedict.^h When

EDRIC was made the first abbat.

A certain nobleman named Wlfin le Rue, when the monks first inhabited Gloucester, is stated to have killed six of them between Chircham and that place: in atonement for which he afterwards gave Chircham and Hynham, with the meadows, plains, woods, and pastures extending to the river Severn, to the monastery, on condition that seven monks should be for ever maintained to pray to God in his behalf.ⁱ

In an instrument, which will be found in a subsequent page, Edric names himself abbat of Baldanham, or old place, probably alluding to the ancient monastery.^k He died in 1058.

After Edric's death, Aldred bishop of Worcester, afterwards archbishop of York, fully completed the establishment of the monks. He pulled down the old church which stood near the infirmary; built a new one at some distance from it, nearer the walls of the town; dedicated it, like the former church, to St. Peter; and gave to the monastery the Benedictine rule. Aldred, however, is stated to have taken from the church the manors of Lech, Odinton, Standish, and Berton, and to have appropriated them to the church of York.^l

WLSTAN, a monk of Worcester, and kinsman to Bishop Aldred, succeeded as abbat in 1058.^m He died in 1072, while journeying toward Jerusalem.ⁿ

SERLO, a monk of St. Michael's in Normandy, chaplain to, and a favourite of William the Conqueror, was the next abbat. He was promoted to the government of the monastery on the 4th of the kalends of September, 1072: at which time he found there but two monks of full age, and eight scholars or youths;^o though at his death he is said to have left no less than a hundred monks in it. The numerous donations which he procured for his monastery, or which were made in

ⁱ Rudder, from MS. Chron. Glouc. in Bibl. Bodl. says, he "was at length buried under the yew-tree in the plot in the midst of the cloisters, because he had wasted the goods and possessions of the monastery."

^j See Num. VIII. Leland, Collectanea, vol. ii. p. 262, says, "paucos ibi, et non plus quam tres monachos invenit abbas Serlo."

^a Compare Tann. Notit. Monast. Rudder, Hist. Glouc. p. 131, says, "In MS. Frouc. V. i. is King Ethelred's gift to Osric in 671." Ulpher, or Wolpherus, is elsewhere said to have laid the foundation of the monastery in 672.

^b Theodore archbishop of Canterbury and Bosel bishop of Worcester dedicated it to the honour of St. Peter. Among the documents relating to St. Peter's monastery, in the former edition of the Monasticon, Sir William Dugdale introduced two passages from William of Malmesbury's History, which in reality concerned the foundation not of St. Peter's but St. Oswald's monastery at Gloucester. In the present edition these have been transferred to their proper place.

^c Notit. Monast.

^d The body of Osric, who appears to have been considered by the monks as the real founder of their monastery, was afterwards removed to the chapel of Our Lady; and, in abbat Parker's time, was laid under a fair monument of free-stone, upon which were his arms, on the north side of the high altar; at the foot whereof, against the north wall, was his time, will be found recorded in the Appendix of Charters.^a In 1084, King William the Conqueror kept his Christmas in this monastery.^b It was in the time of this abbat also that the Domesday Survey was compiled: in which the following manors and rents were entered as the property of the Abbey. In Hampshire, Linchehov, given, with the consent of the king, by Ernulf de Heddinc. In Gloucestershire, Bertune, with the adjacent members of Berneuude, Tuffelege, and Mereuuent; Frowcestre; Boxewelle; Culne; Aldesorde; Bochelande; Hinetune; Hamme; Prestetune; Ledene; Hame; Mortune; Omenie; and Duntlesborne. The last given by the widow of Walter de Laci, for the soul of her husband. In Gloucester itself, in King Edward the Confessor's time, the abbey received a rent from certain burgesses in the city, of nineteen shillings and eight pence, and sixteen salmon. In King William's time, the same number of salmon, and fifty shillings. The monks had also a mill in Gloucester, which yielded twelve shillings; and four fisheries, which supplied their table; "ad victum monachorum." In Worcestershire, in the Hundred of Clent, the abbey held half a hide of land in Wich. In Herefordshire, six hides at Westvode, which Durandus gave for the soul of his brother Roger; two hides at Brunetune; and one hide at Lecc, given by Walter de Laci. The whole of the landed possessions consisted of a hundred and eleven hides and a half, all but a virgate. The value of these possessions being more than doubled between the time of the Confessor and the taking of the Domesday Survey: the revenue of the monastery at the former period, as far as can be calculated from the Survey, amounting to 44*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.* and at the latter period to the sum of 99*l.* 10*s.*^c

In 1087, the New Minster, as Aldred's building was termed, was burnt, with the greater part of the city, by the adherents of Robert duke of Normandy.^d The church, however, began to be rebuilt in 1089, the foundation-stone being laid by Robert bishop of Hereford, on the 29th of June.^e

In 1095, Thomas archbishop of York came to the chapter-house of the monastery on Palm Sunday, and, in the presence of Serlo, restored the manors which had been detained from the abbey by Archbishop Aldred, striking himself on the breast, and blaming himself that they had not been sooner returned.^f

On the ides of July, 1100, the new church was dedicated by Sampson bishop of Worcester, Gundulph bishop of Rochester, and Henry bishop of Bangor.^g

In the very next year the monastery was again burnt. "Anno mcj. Civitas Glaworna cum principali monasterio et aliis, viij. Idus Junij feria v. incendio conflagravit."^h

Abbat Serlo died on the 4th of the nones of March, A.D. 1104.ⁱ The verses which were written upon him by Godfrey prior of Winchester will be found in a subsequent page.^k His successor was

PETER, the prior of the monastery, who became abbat in the nones of August following.^l Bishop Kennett, in his Diptycha Eccl. Angl.^m says he succeeded in 1105: another account says in 1107. The Cotton Manuscript Domit. A. viii. says, he encompassed the abbey with a wall, and enriched the cloister "copia librorum." The same authority places his death on the 16th kal. of August, 1113.ⁿ

WILLIAM, surnamed GODEMON, was the next abbat;^o during whose administration the city of Gloucester, with the Abbey, was burnt a third time, in 1122, on the 8th of the ides of March.^p The Saxon Chronicle, which gives a particular account of this conflagration, ascribes it to lightning, and says, that with the exception of a few books, and three sacerdotal vestments, all the valuables belonging to the monastery were lost.^q

Having obtained considerable donations^r to the abbey, and a licence to appoint his successor, abbat William resigned in 1130: retiring to St. Paternum in Wales.^s Willis says he died on the 3d of the nones of March, but the Cotton manuscript and Wharton say on the 3d of the ides of July, 1131.

WALTER DE LACY, brother to the founder of Lanthony abbey, received the benediction from Simon bishop of Worcester, as abbat, on the 3d of the nones of August, A.D. 1130.^t During his administration, Robert Courtoys, duke of Normandy, was buried before the high altar of the abbey, A.D. 1134:^u and at his particular petition, King Stephen, A.D. 1138, confirmed the different donations made to the monastery.^x He died on the 6th of the ides of February, A.D. 1139;^y and was buried by Rainaldus abbat of Evesham and Roger abbat of Tewksbury.^z

In 1134, Hugh the son of William Norman, whose family afterwards assumed the surname of Kilpeck, gave to the abbey the priory of Kilpeck in Herefordshire, dedicated to St. David.

GILBERT FOLIOT, FOLIETH, or FOLIOTH, a monk of Cluny, and prebendary of Newington in the cathedral of St. Paul, received the benediction as abbat, on the 3d of the ides of June, A.D. 1139; having been recommended to King Stephen, who granted him the government of the abbey, by his kinsman Milo earl of Hereford.^a Many of his official letters, while abbat of Gloucester, all in Latin, are preserved in the Royal Manuscript in the British Museum, 8 A. XXI. art. 15. He was promoted to the bishoprick of Hereford in 1147;^b and, in 1163, was translated to the see of London.^c Upon Foliot's promotion to Hereford,

HAMELINE, the sub-prior of the monastery, was chosen abbat on the 6th of the kalends of October, A.D. 1148.^d During his administration, the manors of Leck, Oddington, Standish, and Barton, were again claimed as belonging to the archbishoprick of York; and Hameline was obliged to take a journey to Rome to defend the rights of his monastery. The bishops of Chichester and Lincoln, to whom the dispute was referred by Pope Eugenius, adjudged it in favour of the abbey, and King Stephen confirmed it: but in 1157, the abbey, to prevent future controversy, gave to the archbishoprick of York, Oddington, Condicote, and Shurdington, with certain lands; and the archbishop, with the assent of his chapter, and a general synod, renounced all claim to the other estates. Pope Alexander the Third, by his bull, dated 4th id. July, in or about the year 1164, confirmed this agreement, and says, the controversy about this matter was agitated before his predecessor Adrian, who appointed the bishops of Salisbury and Bath to act as his delegates in this matter.^a

In 1155 the canons of Bromfield gave their church to, and placed themselves under the protection of the church of Gloucester.^b

Abbat Hameline died on the 6th of the ides of March, 1179.^c

On the 5th of the ides of May in the same year the abbey was burnt a fourth time.

THOMAS CARBONEL, prior of Hereford, was chosen abbat in the month of October following.^d In his time the abbey was again endangered, the greater part of the offices being actually destroyed by fire. "Istius tempore incendium in civitate Glouc. v. idus Maij maximam partem villæ incineravit, et curiales officinas fere omnes abbatia, duasque pariter ecclesias sanctæ Mariæ ante portam abbatia, et sancti Oswaldi muro tenus, combussit. Anno Dom. mxcv."^e The "Annales Ecclesiæ Wigorn," as well as the catalogue of abbats in Sir Robert Atkyns's History, places his death in 1205;^f but the Cotton manuscript, more correctly, in 1212.

During the latter part of Abbat Carbonel's government the monastery is stated to have suffered much from the exactions of King John.^g

HENRY BLONT, or BLOND, who succeeded Carbonel, was elected abbat, according to the Cotton manuscript, on the 3d of the kalends of October, 1212: four years after which, in 1216, King Henry III. was crowned in the abbey.^h Willis states that Abbat Blont, in 1222, began to rebuild the tower of the abbey church, which had fallen down, and committed the management thereof to Helias the sacrist.ⁱ In the same year, he was appointed, with the abbat of St. Alban's, a president of the chapter of the Benedictines at Bermondsey.^k The "Memoriale Ecclesiæ Cathedralis Gloucestræ Compendiarium," printed by Dugdale,^l speaks of the abbey as having been twice destroyed by lightning during his government, in 1214 and in 1223; but it seems probable that the latter date at least is mistaken; the destruction of the monastery by lightning in eleven hundred and twenty-two having been already described on the authority of the Saxon Chronicle. No mention of any fire either in 1214 or 1223 occurs in the Cotton manuscript. Abbat Blont died on the 10th of the kalends of September, 1224.^m

THOMAS DE BREDONE was elected abbat on the 2d kal. of September the same year, and received the benediction at Worcester.ⁿ He died in 1228.^o

HENRY FOLIOT, FOLETH, or FOLET, prior of the cell at Bromfield, was the next abbat; elected very soon after his predecessor's death. He was a great benefactor to the abbey. He finished the tower which Abbat Blont had begun, in 1237, made an aqueduct to serve the convent with water, vaulted a part of the church, and began to build another tower at the west end a short time before his death.^p In 1231 he gave an annual rent of twenty marks out of the church at Newburgh "ad caritates conventus de vino Gallico:"^q that is for the members of the convent to drink in commemoration of their founders and benefactors. In 1239, and again in 1242, the bishop of Worcester visited the abbey. In the latter year correcting considerable abuses. "An. MCCXLII. Episcopus [Wigorn.] visitavit conventum Gloucestræ; et facta singulari examinatione, correxerat corrigenda: unde prior et quidam alii amoti fuere."^r Foliot died in 1243.

WALTER DE SAINT JOHN, his successor, who had previously been prior of the monastery, died on the intended day of his instalment as abbat.^s When

JOHN DE FELDA, or DE LA FELDE, the precentor of the abbey, was chosen. He was installed Dec. 12th, 1243. In his time the tower on the south part of the front at the west end of the church was completed.^t He also began the building of a new refectory in 1246.^u In 1251 the abbey is stated to have been in debt to the amount of 3000 marks: insomuch that the bishop of Worcester, to whom the monks applied for relief, was obliged to forbid the reception of strangers at the monastery, and to retrench its hospitality altogether. Abbat John de Felda died on the 6th of the kal. of April, 1263.^x

REGINALD DE HAMME, or HOMME, was installed the same year on the Sunday after the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul. At the time of his promotion he is said to have found the monastery fifteen hundred marks in debt.^y He appears to have been much patronized and assisted by King Edward the First, who in 1272 took the abbey under his particular protection. The same king rebuilt one of the gates on the south side of the abbey, previously called Lichgate, but which was afterwards called by his name.

Towards the close of this abbat's administration, in 1283, John Gyfforde, lord of Brimsfield, founded Gloucester Hall in Oxford for thirteen monks, whom he chose out of this monastery, to be improved in learning.^z Other monasteries of Benedictines afterwards partook of the benefit of this foundation: but the abbey of St. Peter Gloucester was obliged to maintain three or four of its monks here, and allowed each of them fifteen Reginald de Hamme appears to have been the first abbat of Gloucester who was summoned to parliament, in the 49th year of King Henry the Third.^b He died in 1284.

JOHN DE GAMAGES, whom Sir Robert Atkyns calls JOHN GAG, was the next abbat. The royal assent was given to his election Oct. 4th, 1284.^c

In 1298, a circumstance highly honourable to the convent occurred at Oxford: when William de Brok, one of the monks, and afterwards prior of the abbey, became an inceptor in divinity under the chancellor of that university: being the first monk of the Benedictine order in England who took the degree of doctor in that faculty. The ceremonial on this occasion is too curious to be omitted: it is here given in the words of the Cottonian manuscript.

“Anno Domini MCC.XCVI. in crastino sancti Barnabæ incepit in sacra theologia Oxon. frater Willielmus de Brok monachus hujus loci sub magistro Ricardo de Clyve universitatis cancellario, qui primus de ordine sancti Benedicti nigrorum monachorum in Anglia surrexit in scientia prædicta, ad cujus vesperias quæstioni respondebat ejus socius Laurentius Housom ejusdem scientiæ bacularius, monachus hujus loci. Cujus inceptio abbas hujus loci interfuit cum monachis suis, prioribus, obedientiariis, clericis, esqueriis, et aliis nobilibus viris ad c. equos. Interfuerunt abbates Westmon. Redinges, Abindon, Euysham, Malmesbury, priores multi, et alii monachi, qui omnes incipientem diversis muneribus et exeniis largiter respiciebant, necnon et omnes alii prælati fere totius provinciæ Cantuar. nostri ordinis, qui omnes absentes fuerunt, exennia diversa per suos transmiserunt, et sic ad honorem hujus domus et totius ordinis hujus inceptio est consummata.”^d

On the feast of the Epiphany, A.D. 1300, a very considerable portion of the abbey-buildings was again destroyed by fire: the small bell tower, the great chamber, and the cloister, falling a prey to the flames.^e

In 1303, abbat Gamages began the building of a new dormitory, the old one having been blown down. It was finished by his successor in 1313.

Of abbat Gamage's great hospitality, an instance is preserved in the account of the feast which he made in 1305, when the king's justices sat in the great hall of the abbey upon the inquisition of Traylebaston.^f

Abbat Gamage died on the 15th of the kalends of May, 1306.^g He was a pious frugal man. He is said to have found his monastery a thousand marks in debt; but left it enriched: and increased the stock of sheep belonging to the monastery to ten thousand. He was also a great donor of books and ornaments. The Cottonian manuscript says, “Fertur regem Edwardum de ipso dixisse apud Ambresburie, ad sepulturam matris suæ, ubi erant omnes prælati Angliæ, ‘Non apparet mihi tam venerabilis pater in regno meo sicut abbas Glouc.’”^h He lived sixty-two years a monk in this monastery, whereof he was abbat twenty-three. He was buried near the door of the cloister.ⁱ

JOHN THOKY, sub-prior of the monastery, was the next abbat. The royal assent was given to his election May 3d, and on May 16th, 1306, he had the temporalities restored.^k Sir Robert Atkyns calls him Thokey, or Chokey. In 1313 he was excommunicated, for resisting the prior of Worcester's visitation in the vacancy of the see; but an award being made concerning it, the bishop of Worcester, Sept. 2, 1314, absolved the abbey, and required the official of the archdeacon of Worcester to publish it.^l

It was in the time of this abbat, that King Edward the Second, having been murdered at Berkeley castle, was brought for burial at Gloucester. On this subject the Cotton manuscript, so often quoted, has the following passage: “Tempore istius abbatis, Edwardus rex secundus post conquestum, filius regis Edwardi primi, veniens in Glouc. abbas et conventus eum honorifice suscepit; qui sedens ad mensam in aula abbatis, et ibidem videns depictas figuras regum prædecessorum suorum, jocose sciscitabatur ab abbate utrum haberet eum depictum inter ipsos, an non; cui respondit magis prophanando quam fabulando quod speraret se ipsum habiturum in honestiori loco quam ibi, quod ita evenit. Nam post mortem ejus, venerabile ejus corpus quædam vicina monasteria, viz. Sancti Augustini Bristoll, Sanctæ Mariæ de Kyngeswode, Sancti Aldelmi de Malmesbury, ob terrorem Rogeri de Mortuo Mari et Isabellæ reginæ, aliorumque complicitum, accipere timuerunt. Iste tamen abbas suo curru honorifice ornato, cum armis ejusdem ecclesiæ depictis, eum a castello de Berkeley adduxit, et ad monasterium Glouc. est delatus, abbate cum toto conventu solempniter revestitus, cum processione totius civitatis est honorifice susceptus, et in ecclesia ibidem in parte boreali juxta magnum altare traditur tumulandum.”^m

Stevens, from Sir Robert Atkyns, says, “the memory of this unfortunate king was in few years in so great esteem among the people, that the town of Gloucester could not contain the numbers that came thither on account of his relics; and the south part of the church was built out of the alms given by those who resorted to his tomb”ⁿ

In 1318, abbat Thoky rebuilt the south aisle, and did several other benefactions; but growing aged and infirm, he resigned in 1329; soon after which he died.^o

Edward the Third, the king, with the consent of parliament, in consideration of the expences which the abbey had been at in celebrating his father's funeral, granted, that upon every vacancy of the abbey, the monks should compound with the king, at the rate of a hundred marks for the space of a year; but that all knights' fees holden of the abbey, escheats, and presentations to churches, which should fall in the time of the vacancy, should belong to the king. The prior, as president, and the convent, were to keep the abbey in safe custody, till another person was admitted thereto. The escheator, or the sheriff, upon a vacancy, to make only simple seisin within the abbey, and so to depart.^a

The licence for electing an abbat on Thoky's cession is dated Oct. 27th; and on the 11th of November following we find the royal assent given to the election of

JOHN WIGGEMORE,^b who had before been prior of the church.

Willis informs us that abbat Wiggemore gave to the church a rich embroidered garment to be worn on the festival of Pentecost.^c The Cotton manuscript says he built the infirmary while prior:^d but Willis, only "the great chamber of the abbat near the garden of the infirmary."^e He adds, that he was well skilled in all mechanick works, and delighted in other arts.

In the time of abbat Wiggemore the offerings to King Edward the Second's tomb were so great, that from their produce, within six years of his coming to the government of the monastery, he was enabled to build the aisle of St. Andrew, a grange at Hynham, the abbat's chamber near the great hall, and the smaller hall annexed called "Vampeyhalle."^f

This abbat obtained of the king, Oct. 3, 10 Edw. III. a grant to the abbey of the hundred of Dudston in Gloucestershire, with all its emoluments and appurtenances, at the fee-farm rent of 12*l.* per annum.^g

Rudder says he died on the 12th, but the Cotton manuscript, and Willis, on the 2d of the kal. of March, 1337. He was buried on the south side of the church, near the entrance of the choir, which he built, with a square stone pulpit over the west door, and which, in the year 1718, was demolished to make room for the organ.^h

ADAM DE STAUNTON, also prior of the monastery, was the next abbat: the royal assent being given to his election March 18th, and the temporalities of the monastery restored to him April 11th, 1337.ⁱ

He built the new vault of the choir, and the vineyard house at Over, out of the oblations made by King Edward III., Queen Philippa, the Black Prince, and the Queen of Scots, at King Edward the Second's tomb.^k

In 1338 he was one of the two presidents at the chapter of the Benedictines held at Northampton.^l

In the nineteenth of Edward III. he made an exchange with the king for the manor of Kings Barton, near Gloucester.^m

He died in 1351, and was buried before St. Thomas's altar, built by his brother John de Staunton; leaving a thousand marks in the abbey treasury.ⁿ In the same year

THOMAS DE HORTON, sacrist of the monastery, was elected, "per viam compromissi," to succeed him: the royal assent being given to the election November the 19th, the benediction bestowed at Cheltenham by the bishop of Worcester Dec. 4th, and the temporalities of the monastery restored Dec. 12th, 1351.^o He adorned the church with abundance of vestments, and caused the great altar to be made, and the presbytery, together with St. Paul's aisle, and the great hall whercin a parliament was afterwards held in 1378; during the session of which, King Richard the Second, with his whole court, were lodged in the monastery. After he had governed twenty-six years he resigned, being very aged, anno 1377: seventeen weeks and three days after which he died, and was buried under a flat stone in the north part of the transept or cross aisle.^p

JOHN BOYFIELD was elected abbat, also "per viam compromissi," toward the close of the year 1377,^q having previously been precentor of the church. He and his monks were unjustly accused of incontinence by the bishop of Worcester, who by that means got a bull from the pope for him and his successors to visit the monastery.^r Abbat Boyfield died on the 3d of the kalends of January, 1381, and was buried in St. Paul's aisle near Abbat Horton.^s Rudder says, that in 1380 there were fifty-four monks in this convent, with an abbat and two hundred officers or servants; the yearly income being then seventeen hundred marks. The revenue of the abbey having been much lessened by extraordinary inundations, pestilences, and other calamities, and being continually frequented by guests, as well poor foreigners as those of this kingdom, the expences were so very great as to require the appropriation of St. Mary de Lode to defray them.^t

WALTER FROUCESTER, FROUCESTRE, or FRONCESTER,^u the chamberlain of the monastery, was the next abbat. His election, made like that of his immediate predecessors, received the royal assent Jan 21st, 1381.^v He procured from the pope a grant of the mitre and use of the pontificals, by the interest of the Duke of Gloucester.^y He also built the great cloisters on the north side of the church; in one of the windows of which, till the civil wars, were certain verses written by him, detailing the history of the convent.^z He took great care and pains in transcribing the evidences and records of the abbey: and, dying in 1412, was buried in a chapel at the south-west part of the choir, under the arch of the tower, where his mutilated grave-stone still remains. An anniversary was kept for him in the church of Chipping-Norton in Oxfordshire.^a The royal assent was given to the election of

HUGH MORTON, as abbat, on the 10th; and the temporalities of the monastery were restored on the 27th of May, 1412.^b Upon his death, in 1420,

JOHN MAREWENT, or MORWENT, was elected abbat: the royal assent being given June 25th, and the temporalities of the monastery restored July 14th that year.^c He built the west part of the church, and made the porch and west frontispiece from the ground; designing, if he had lived, to have made the whole body of the church of like work.^d He died in 1437.

REGINALD BOULERS, or BUTLER, D.D., succeeded

bey were valued at 287*l.* 13*s.* 7*d.*: and the members of the convent, July 28, 1348, were thirty-six.

^m See Num. XIII. art. Bertona Regis. Rudder says, p. 136, that on Feb. 20th, 17 Edw. III. the moveables and immoveables of the abto the abbacy within a short time of Marewent's death: the royal assent being given to his election Oct. 29th, and the temporalities of the monastery restored Nov. 12th, 1437.^a In 1440, he refused the offer of the bishoprick of Llandaff: but ten years afterward accepted the see of Hereford; whence he was afterwards translated to Litchfield. In 1444, being appointed by the king to go to Rome, and other places, where his attendance might be required for a considerable time, the prior and convent granted him 400*l.* per annum, out of the profits of the abbey, during his absence.^b In 1450, previous to his advancement to the see of Hereford, Richard duke of York, then at variance with King Henry the Sixth, sent our abbat prisoner to Ludlow castle.^c Willis says, that, when bishop of Litchfield, by his last will, dated March 23d, 1458, and proved April 10th following, he gave his books to the library of this abbey.^d

THOMAS SEBROKE received the royal assent to his election as abbat Jan. 23d, and had the temporalities restored Feb. 16th, 1450.^e He began the building of the stately tower in the centre of the church,^f the finishing of which he committed to Robert Tully, one of the monks, afterwards bishop of St. David's. The fact is still perpetuated in the following lines, within the choir, over the great arch:

“Hoc quod digestum specularis opusque politum
Tullii hæc ex onere Seabroke abbate jubente.”

The name, motto, and arms of this abbat^g are still remaining on many of the bricks which formed the old pavement of the choir. He died in 1457, and was buried in a chapel at the south-west end of the choir, where his effigy in alabaster is placed at length in pontificalibus upon an altar tomb.^h

When Bishop Benson repaved the choir of Gloucester in 1741, abbat Sebroke's coffin was opened, with several others.ⁱ

RICHARD HAMLEY, HANLEY, or HAULEY, was the next abbat. The licence for electing was given January 18th, 1457: the assent to Hamley's election, February the 22d: and the restitution of the temporalities March 11th.^k He began the Lady chapel at the east end of the church.^l Dying in 1472, he was succeeded by

WILLIAM FARLEY, or FERLEY, a monk of the monastery, by whom the chapel just mentioned was completed.^m His election received the royal assent on the 16th of April, and the temporalities were restored May 1st, 1472.ⁿ

JOHN MALVERNE, or MULVERNE, was made abbat on Farley's death, in 1498; and had the temporalities of the monastery restored to him Dec. 7th.^o He died about August 13th, 15 Hen. VII.

THOMAS BRANCHE, another monk of the monastery, was elected abbat August 31, 1500. He received benediction Sept. 15th, and had the temporalities of the monastery restored to him on October 19th following. He died July 1, 1510. Upon his death, as upon his predecessor's, great variance and disorders are stated to have arisen among the monks; the care and regulation of whom was in both instances given by royal mandate to the prior.^p

JOHN NEWTON, alias BROWN, D.D., who had been prior of St. Guthlac's Hereford, was the next abbat, elected July 10th, 1510. In 1512, a division arose between the townsmen of Gloucester and the abbey, respecting right of common; which, although determined by an award in 1514, was not finally settled till the 9th of Henry VIII. Abbat Newton died January 15th, 1514,^q and was succeeded by

WILLIAM MALVERN, alias PARKER, who was elected on the 4th of May following; but had not the temporalities restored till August 6th, 1515. He occurs in the time of his predecessor as supervisor of the works of the monastery. In 1515, he was created doctor of divinity at Oxford. Among Stow's manuscript collections, is a short poem of twenty-two stanzas, written by him in 1524, intitled “The Fundacion of the Abbay of Glocester, and the changes of the same before the suppression.”^r In March, 1525, Cardinal Wolsey, by his commissary Dr. Allen, exercised a legantine visitation in the abbey, when the yearly revenues of the same, according to common account, amounted to 1022*l.* 15*s.* 1½*d.* and the abbey acknowledged themselves indebted to the cardinal in 40*l.* 17*s.* 6¼*d.* The proportion of the abbey of Gloucester, when the clergy of the kingdom, having incurred a premunire for acknowledging and receiving the cardinal's authority from Rome, 22 Hen. VIII. compounded with the king for a fine of 200,000*l.* was 500*l.* Willis says, “When he died I find not; but 'tis certain he survived the Dissolution a very little while; and that he withstood the same I have reason to suspect, because I cannot find any pension allotted him; also the instrument of surrender, dated Dec. 2d, 1539, being, as I am informed, signed by the prior, &c. and not by this abbat, seems furthermore to manifest it. During his government he adorned the south gate of the church, and enlarged the gate leading to those buildings which now constitute the episcopal palace;^s and lastly he erected a neat chapel on the north side of the choir, near the high altar, and made therein a stately tomb for himself, which yet remains. 'Tis an altar-like monument, and contains his effigies, being of white marble, lying at full length upon the same tomb, habited in his pontificalibus, with a mitre and crozier:” on it are these Arms, ‘Within a border engrailed, a Dog passant, inter 3 phæons.’^x The subscription of the religious of this monastery to the king's supremacy was signed anno 1534 by thirty-four of this house; which number, I presume, then constituted the whole convent.”^y their domestick servants, or counsellors. March 2d, 9 Hen. VI. the king, before he travelled beyond the seas, came to this abbey, and made an oblation.”

^t This gate was destroyed in 1722. See Rudder, p. 139, who adds, that he repaired or rebuilt great part of the palace, then the abbat's house; that he rebuilt or repaired the great house at Prinknersh; and built the tower at Barnwood. Leland, Itin. edit. 1711, fol. 172 b, says, “One Osberne ceelerer of Gloucester made of late a fayre new tower or gate house at the south west part of the abbey cemiterye.”

^u Cole, in one of his manuscripts, still preserved in the British Museum, vol. xxvii. p. 200, says, “I am told that abbat Parker retired, at the Dissolution, to some relations he had in Worcestershire, and dying soon after, was there buried, and not under his beautiful tomb in Gloucester cathedral.”

Although a mitred abbey, and endowed with great privileges, the monastery of Gloucester remained under the visitation of the bishops of Worcester till the Dissolution.^b From the registers of that bishoprick it appears that the last visitation that occurs was made by Bishop Latimer in 1537.

There were six CELLS subordinate to Gloucester abbey. 1. Ewias in Herefordshire, founded in the year 1100, by Harold lord of Ewias, and dedicated to St. Michael and St. Nicholas. 2. St. Guthlac's near Hereford, founded in 1101, by Hugh Lacy. 3. Kilpeck in Herefordshire, founded in 1134, by Henry de Kilpeck, dedicated to St. David. 4. Ewenny in Glamorganshire, founded in 1141, by Sir John de Loundres, lord of Ogmores castle. 5. Stanley St. Leonard's in Gloucestershire, founded in 1146, by Roger de Berkley, and dedicated to St. Leonard: valued at the Dissolution at 126*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.* yearly. 6. Bromfield in Shropshire, founded in 1105.^c These will be all separately treated of hereafter.

Beside Berkeley and Thornbury in Gloucestershire, Leland mentions no fewer than six other country residences of the abbats of Gloucester: which he calls "fayre villes or mannour placet:" viz. "Prinkenesse on an hill, where is a fayre parke, three miles from Gloucester by east. Vineyard, a goodly house on an hillet at the cawsey end at Gloucester by west. Hertlebury, four miles by north-west from Gloucester. Froncester, where sometimes was a colledge of prebendaries, suppressed and given to Gloucester abbey, distant from Gloucester eight miles, and standeth a mile beyond Standley priory: the king hath it nowe: it is an 100 marks by the yeare. Bromfield, where sometimes was a little colledge, since impropriate to the abbey of Gloucester, a two miles from Ludlow."

Leland, in another of his works,^d gives a list of the books which he saw in the monastery:

"Osberni monachi Glocestrensis Panormia instar vocabularii ad Hamelinum abbatem. Fuit hic impens eruditus, ut facile est videre in reliquis ejus operibus quæ sunt in bibliotheca regia. Floruit sub Stephano et Henrico primo.

AFTER the dissolution of the abbey, King Henry the Eighth obtained an act of parliament, under which he erected the city of Gloucester, and the county of that city, and all the county of Gloucester, into a bishoprick, with a dean and chapter, by the name of the Diocese of Gloucester; and ordained that such part of the then vill and county of Bristol as formerly was in the diocese of Worcester, should be from thenceforward in the diocese of Gloucester for ever.

In the letters of endowment,^e dated September 3d, 1541, it is ordered, that the abbat's lodgings, with the buildings, chapels, grounds, and other premises, his stable, and the garden at the end of the church-yard, all within the precincts of the abbey; the house called the Wood-Barton, two stables, two slaughter-houses, and a dog-kennel, in the parish of St. Mary de Lode, are to be called the palace of the bishop.

The following was the endowment of the bishoprick. The manors of Maismore, Brokethorp, Hosecomb, Preston, Longford, and Droiscorte in the county of the city of Gloucester; those of Rudge and Tuffeigh in the county of Gloucester, with their rights, &c.; the manors of Hope-Meleshall, Dewchurch, and Kilpeck, in the county of Hereford, with all their appurtenances; the site of a mansion-house called the Vineyard, with a close adjoining to it, called the Park, of fifteen acres; a meadow, called Importhams, or Porthame, of sixty-seven acres; that part of the manor of Lassington which had belonged to the monastery; half the wood of Wolridge, of fifty acres; the rectories and churches of Hartpury, Maismore, and Upton St. Leonard, all in the county of Gloucester; those of Cam, North Leach, Kempford, Whelford, South-Cerney, Standish, Dewchurch, Kilpeck, Glasbury, Devenocke, Cowern, and Ewias Harold, in the county of Hereford; that of Newport, in Wales; the chapels of Cam and Maismore, in the county of Gloucester; that of Piperton, in the county of Hereford, with all their appurtenances; all tithes, glebes, pensions, portions, oblations, and obventions belonging

In the years 1647, 1648, and 1649, several alienations took place; but such of those lands as were granted to this bishopric at its establishment reverted to the see at the restoration of King Charles the Second.

BISHOPS OF GLOUCESTER.

JOHN WAKEMAN, alias WICH, the last abbat of Tewksbury, was appointed the first bishop of Gloucester Sept. 3d, 1541, and consecrated, according to Le Neve, Sept. 20th. He died in 1549.

JOHN HOOPER, D.D. was consecrated bishop March 8th, 1550; a promoter of, and a sufferer for, the Reformation. In his younger years he had been a monk of Cleeve in Somersetshire. He was nominated on the 15th of May, appointed bishop on the 3d of July, 1550, consecrated on the 8th of March following, and installed by proxy by Archbishop Cranmer, assisted by the bishops of London and Rochester, on the 22d of the same month. With the consent of the dean and chapter, he surrendered the bishopric of Gloucester to the King April 26th, 1552, and on the 12th of May, made a deed of gift of all the lands and annuities which he enjoyed by means of his bishopric. Upon Dr. Heath's being deprived of the see of Worcester, by virtue of an act of parliament, by the king's letters patent, dated May 20th in the same year, the bishopric of Gloucester was dissolved, and converted into an archdeaconry, dependent on Worcester, as it had been formerly; but the dignities of the dean and chapter thereof continued. The King then gave Dr. Hooper the bishopric of Worcester, with power and authority to appoint all the prebendaries of both cathedrals. In September another patent was granted him for the discharge of his first fruits. This year a letter was sent him for the surrender of the bishopric of Worcester, in order that there might be a new collation, or presentation thereto: and, on the 8th of December following, the bishoprics of Worcester and Gloucester were united into one, and thenceforth to be one diocese: the bishop to be called the bishop of Gloucester and Worcester; to live one year in Worcester, and the next in Gloucestershire; and to have the power of appointing archdeacons and prebendaries as before. To this bishop, and his successors likewise, were given a few manors belonging to the bishopric of Worcester, and all the lands, &c. granted to the bishopric of Gloucester at its foundation, as fully as he had surrendered them to the king; which then extended to the clear yearly value of a hundred marks, beside tenths and yearly rents. The tenths of the bishopric had previously amounted to 136*l.* 10*s.* 5½*d.*; but he was to pay only 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in lieu of them, and to be discharged of first fruits; and he and his successors to be for ever discharged of 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to be paid to Mr. John Taylor for keeping the register of Gloucester. Some time after he was discharged of all his first fruits, and all persons were forbidden to demand a fee of him. The union, however, continued no longer than the life of King Edward the Sixth, by whom it was granted. As Bishop Hooper had strenuously opposed Gardiner and Bonner, they had a peculiar enmity against him; and when the king died, it was resolved to make him the first sacrifice. Accordingly, soon after Queen Mary's accession, he was sent to prison; and, on the 18th of March, 1553-4, his bishopric was declared void. On January the 28th, 1554-5, he was brought before Gardiner bishop of Winchester, and several others, at St. Mary Overy's church in Southwark, and there condemned as a heretic. In the beginning of February he was degraded of his priesthood in Newgate, and after a few days interval, was removed to Gloucester, where he was burnt near an elm tree, without the gate, on the north-west side of the lower church-yard, on February the 9th.^a

JAMES BROOKES, D.D., was elected bishop March 26th, 1554. Upon his death, September 7th, 1558, the custody of the temporalities was given to John Bowrsher, D.D., who was nominated to the bishopric; but the queen's death prevented his having it. After a vacancy of more than three years,

RICHARD CHEINEY was elected bishop March 9th, 1561. He was consecrated at Lambeth April 19th following, and in ten days after had the bishopric of Bristol given to him in commendam. He died April 25th, 1579; and was buried, as his predecessor had been, under Abbat Parker's monument. After a vacancy of two years,

JOHN BALLINGHAM, D.D., was elected bishop August 15th, 1581. He also held the bishopric of Bristol in commendam, from the time of his consecration till 1589. He died at Kensington May 20th, 1598, and was buried, without any memorial, in his cathedral.

GODFREY GOLDSBOROUGH, D.D., was elected bishop August 2d, and consecrated November 12th, 1598. He died May 26th, 1604. An inscription for him still remains at the side of the Lady-chapel in Gloucester cathedral. On his death, William Tooker, or Tucker, D.D., was nominated to the see by King James the First, but the congé d'elire for his election was afterwards revoked.

THOMAS RAVIS, D.D., was elected bishop Dec. 17th, 1604. On May 18th, 1607, he was translated to the bishopric of London: when

HENRY PARRY, D.D., dean of Chester, became his successor at Gloucester. He was translated to the bishopric of Worcester in the end of September, 1610.

GILES THOMPSON, D.D., dean of Windsor, was elected March 15th, 1611, but died, without ever entering his diocese, June 14th, 1612.

MILES SMITH, D.D., succeeded July 15th, 1612. He had had several preferments previously; and on May 8th, 1610, was appointed by King James the First one of the first fellows of Chelsea College. He died at Gloucester Oct. 19th, 1624.

GODFREY GOODMAN, D.D., was elected bishop Nov. 26th following. In 1640 he was sequestrated from his bishopric; and afterwards became reconciled to the church of Rome. He died January the 19th, 1655. On the Restoration, this bishopric is stated to have been offered to Dr. Hacket, who was afterwards bishop of Litchfield: on whose refusal,

WILLIAM NICHOLSON, D.D., was elected Nov. 26th, 1660. He died Feb. 5th, 1671; and was buried at Gloucester.

JOHN PRICHARD, or PRICHET, D.D., was elected bishop October 10th, 1672; being permitted to hold his previous preferments, viz. the vicarage of St. Giles Cripplegate, London, the rectory of Harlington in Middlesex, and the prebend of Mora in St. Paul's cathedral, in commendam with his bishoprick. He died January 1st, 1680, and was buried at Harlington.

JOHN FRAMPTON, D.D., dean of Gloucester, was elected bishop Jan. 28th, 1680. He was deprived for refusing the oaths in 1690. He died May 25th, 1708.

EDWARD FOWLER, D.D., was elected bishop June 8th, 1691. He died at Chelsea in Middlesex Aug. 26th, 1714, aged eighty-two years; and was buried in a vault on the north side of Hendon church-yard: in the chancel of which church a monument is erected to his memory.

RICHARD WILLIS, D.D., was elected bishop Dec. 10th, 1714; holding the deanery of Lincoln in commendam. He was translated to the see of Salisbury in 1721, and thence to Winchester in 1725. He died Aug. 10th, 1734, and was buried in Winchester cathedral.

JOHN WILCOCKS, D.D., was elected Nov. 25th, 1721. He was afterwards translated to the see of Rochester, with which he held the deanery of Westminster; when ELIAS SYDALL, D.D., was translated to Gloucester from the bishoprick of St. David's Nov. 4th, 1731, being then also dean of Canterbury. He held his deanery with his bishoprick till his death, Dec. 24th, 1733.

MARTIN BENSON, D.D., was consecrated bishop of Gloucester Jan. 19th, 1733-4, by the bishops of London, Oxford, and Carlisle, in Lambeth chapel, having been confirmed bishop the day before, January 18th. He was born at Cradley in Herefordshire April 23, 1689, and became prebendary of Sarum and Durham, archdeacon of Berks, and rector of Blecheley in Buckinghamshire. He died at the palace at Gloucester Aug. 30th, 1752. Bishop Benson new paved the choir of the cathedral in 1741, and new pinnacled the Lady-chapel with stone. He also refitted the episcopal palace at a very considerable expence.

JAMES JOHNSON, D.D., was Bishop Benson's successor; the congé d'elire for whose election was dated Oct. 24th, 1752.^a He was translated in 1759 to Worcester on the death of Bishop Madox.

WILLIAM WARBURTON, D.D., the friend of Pope, and the editor of his works, was the next bishop. The congé d'elire for his election passed Dec. 22, 1759. He owed his preferment to Mr. Pitt, afterwards Lord Chatham. He was born at Newark Dec. 24, 1698; and was originally clerk to an attorney of Great Markham in Nottinghamshire: but at length was ordained deacon Dec. 22, 1723. In 1728 he was presented to the rectory of Brand Broughton in the diocese of Lincoln. In 1746 he became preacher of Lincoln's Inn: and toward the end of 1757 was promoted to the deanery of Bristol. He died at Gloucester June 7th, 1779.

JAMES YORKE, D.D., was made bishop July 6th, 1779: whence, in 1781, he was translated to Ely.

SAMUEL HALLIFAX, D.D., was elected bishop Oct. 8th, 1781. He was born at Mansfield in Derbyshire in 1733; and was educated at Cambridge, where he afterwards became professor of civil law. He held, with his bishoprick, the rich rectory of Warsop in Nottinghamshire. He was translated in 1789 to the see of St. Asaph. He died of the stone March 4th, 1790.

RICHARD BEADON, D.D., the present bishop of Bath and Wells, succeeded Bishop Hallifax in the see of Gloucester May 30th, 1789. He became archdeacon of London Feb. 22d, 1775; and in 1781, master of Jesus college Cambridge. On his translation to the see of Bath and Wells in 1802, GEORGE ISAAC HUNTINGFORD, D.D., warden of Winchester, succeeded to the see of Gloucester: the congé d'elire for his election being dated June 5th. He was translated to Hereford June 23, 1815.

The Hon. HENY RYDER, D.D., brother of the earl of Harrowby, and dean of Wells, was made bishop of Gloucester July 8th, 1815.

The letters patent which founded the bishoprick of Gloucester established a dean and six prebendaries in the church, as successors to the abbat and monks. They were endowed with the manors of Tuffley, Ablode, and Sainthurste, Barnewood and Croneham, Matson, Wotton, Churcham, Rudford, Coln-Rogers, Ablington, Coln-Aldwyns, Eastlech-Martin otherwise called Burthroppe, Cotes, Tyberton, Tayneton, and Bulley, in the county of Gloucester; Willingiswike, and Monkhide, in the county of Hereford; Tragosse, and Pennon, in the county of Glamorgan; Linkynholt, Littleton, and Wallop, in the county of Southampton. ^a Rudder, p. 160, calls him William Johnson, D.D.

Beside a dean and six canons, or prebendaries, the statutes which were ordained for the government of the cathedral by King Henry the Eighth appointed six minor or petty canons, of whom one was to be precentor, another to be sacrist, another deacon, and another sub-deacon; six lay clerks; eight choristers; a master of the choristers; two school-masters; four poor persons to be maintained at the charges of the church; two under-sacrists, or vergers: one butler, or manciple; one cook; and one under-cook.

Five of the six prebends, or canonries, are in the gift of the king; and one is annexed to the mastership of Pembroke college, Oxford.

The six minor canons, at the Restoration, were reduced to four: who have each a house, and twenty pounds per annum. The lay clerks, or singing-men, have each a house, and ten pounds per annum. The choristers have five pounds per annum. The places of butler, cook, and under-cook, have been abolished: but, beside the other offices, those of auditor, chapter-clerk, and two sub-sacrists, have been instituted.

The College Library is on the east side of the cloisters, and was formerly the abbey chapter-house; where, Leland informs us, several persons of considerable eminence were buried.^a That which was the abbey library, on the foundation of the chapter was converted to the College School: the Master of which has twenty pounds a year, and the Usher ten pounds.

In Sir Robert Atkyns's time, the whole revenue belonging to the cathedral was estimated, one year with another, at 2000*l*.

Mr. Dallaway, in his "Observations on English Architecture," and Sir Henry Englefield, in the "Account of Gloucester Cathedral, published by the Society of Antiquaries," have been minute on the history of the fabric. The precise dates of many of the principal parts have been already given in the lives of the abbats.

At periods very remote from each other, Mr. Dallaway observes, this church has been made to have an appearance, on the outside, conformable to a prevailing style of pure Gothic. A few years only before the suppression of the abbey, the tower was completed, the ornamented members and perforated pinnacles of which are of the most delicate tabernacle work, very full, but preserving the air of chasteness and simplicity. Its peculiar perfection, which immediately strikes the eye, is an exact symmetry of component parts, and the judicious distribution of ornaments. The shaft of the tower is equally divided into two stories, correctly repeated in every particle; and the open parapet and pinnacles, so richly clustered, are an example of Gothic in its most improved state. The statues of tutelary saints and benefactors, which were dispersed in various parts of the external view, have suffered much, even in their pedestals and canopies, by the mutilation of fanatics.

The Anglo-Norman style, consisting of enormous circular pillars, having round arches with indented mouldings, distinguishes the nave, which is the chief part of the original structure, begun, according to Florence of Worcester, in 1057, by Aldred bishop of that see, but more generally attributed to abbat Serlo, in 1088.

The north aisle is of contemporary architecture. It is particularly observable in the round arches of the windows, and in the pilasters, which have very elaborate capitals. Two centuries later the opposite aisle was finished by abbat Thokey, in another manner; as the windows bear the nail-head moulding, which is repeated on either side, and the heads are of the obtuse lancet form.

In the western front and the additional arcade, a later style is observable; the nave having been considerably lengthened by abbat Horton.

It is scarcely possible, Mr. Dallaway observes, to enter the choir of Gloucester, which includes every perfection to which the Gothic had attained during the fifteenth century, without feeling the influence of veneration. At the termination of the nave, under the tower, is the approach to the choir, and above the great arch is a window between two vacant niches richly sculptured. On the north and south sides are the arches which support the vaulting of the transepts. Both of these are intersected at the springing by a flying arch with open spandrils, spanning the space of the tower. The brackets are figures of angels, with escocheons of the abbey, King Edward the Second, and the magnificent abbat Seabroke the founder. Upon the great point of these intersecting arches, is a pillar, forming an impost of the great vaulted roof, which is then divided into sharp lancet arcades, and has an air of incredible lightness. From this part there are five more arcades divided by clusters of semicolumns which reach from the base to the roof; and the ribs are infinitely intersected and variegated with the most elaborate trellis work, composed of orbs and rosettes, which, although they are so thickly studded, are not repeated in a single instance.

Over the high altar are angels in full choir, with every instrument of music practised in the fifteenth century.

The stalls, of rich tabernacle-work, carved in oak, are thirty-one in number on either side, little inferior in point of execution to the episcopal throne at Exeter, or to the stalls at Ely erected in the reign of King Edward the Third.

The choir was built in the grand æra of stained glass. At present, the naked transparent window destroys the intended harmony, and the primary idea is sadly impoverished.

The incredibly light roof bears analogy in its construction to that of King's college chapel, though in ornament each building has a style essentially differing from the other. The cross-springers at Gloucester are of very solid stone; the vault which they support of a petrification, called provincially the toph-stone, specifically lighter in a great degree than the other.

The two farthest arcades are splayed about a yard from the right line, instead of forming a section of a hexagon, and are connected with the great east window, which is embowed in a slight degree, and occupies the whole space of the end of the choir, almost to the floor. It is said to be of the largest dimensions in England. The arch having three divisions or mullions, terminating in pointed arches, the middle of which now includes seven tiers of stained glass, but so extremely decayed and mutilated, as to appear like the tissue of a carpet to any but the eye of an antiquary. Nothing like a regular Scripture history can be discovered, but a long series of portraits, larger than life, of saints, prophets, and Jewish kings. It was put up in King Edward the Third's time, when the price of stained glass was one shilling a square foot, so that it originally cost 139*l*. 18*s*.

Mr. Dallaway thinks there is reason to presume that this splendid work was prosecuted through many years in succession; not only on account of its elaborate difficulty, but of the vast expence which was necessary to its completion. During the abbacy of Adam de Staunton the plan of the choir was first suggested: his immediate successor, Thomas de Horton, who died in 1377, is stated to have been a great contributor to the fabric: but Mr. Dallaway attributes the stupendous vault of the choir to abbat Boyfield, who lived to see it finished before 1381. It must be owned that the internal evidence of the building confirms the supposition.

The Lady chapel, finished by abbat Farleigh, is the latest part of the church in date. In style, Sir Henry Englefield observes, it very nearly resembles the choir, both in its beauties and defects. Extreme ingenuity is displayed in the union of the chapel with the church. The light of the great eastern window is scarcely at all obscured by the building, though so close to it; and the line of junction, which is in one of its transverse mullions, is almost imperceptible from within the choir. A gallery of communication is also most artfully managed above, which connects the upper side ailes of the choir, passing between the great east window and the western window of the chapel, without touching either. This passage, which is a narrow stone gallery seventy-five feet long, about three feet broad, and eight feet high within, is commonly known by the name of the Whispering-gallery, and has the property of transmitting sound along its walls to a very extraordinary degree.

The passages and oratories by which the choir is surrounded, are all of Saxon, or at least of early Norman architecture. It is constructed within them; the side walls and low circular pillars having been reduced, and the whole lined with facings of elegant pannels. These are placed within arcades of semi-mullions, resembling windows, which are open to the choir from the galleries.

The pavement before the high altar is composed of painted bricks. These were prepared for the kiln by the more ingenious monks; who appear to have discovered accuracy in the pencilling of the armorial bearings, as well as fancy in the scrolls and rebuses. Most of the tiles repeat the devices of King Edward the Second, of the Clares and the De Spencers earls of Gloucester, and of abbat Seabroke. Mr. Carter, in the first volume of his work on Ancient Architecture and Sculpture, has given a coloured etching of it.

In respect to the cloister, the conventual edifice of Gloucester differs in a very essential point from almost every other in the kingdom: the whole of the claustral buildings being placed on the north side of the church; the windows of which were all anciently filled with stained glass.^a

The following are the dimensions of the church, as given in Mr. Dallaway's work:

Nave; 171 feet in length, 41 feet 2 inches in breadth, and 67 feet 7 inches in height.

Choir; 140 feet in length, 34 feet 6 inches in breadth, and 86 feet in height.

The Lady chapel; 92 feet 1 inch in length, 24 feet 4 inches in breadth, and 46 feet 6 inches in height.

The cloisters; 144 feet 19 inches on one side, and 148 feet on the other in length, and 18 feet 6 inches in height.

REX omnibus ad quos &c. salutem. Cum, per quendam actum in parlamento nostro inchoato apud Westmonasterium quarto die Novembris anno regni nostri primo, et ibidem tento, inter alia statuta pro republica nostra edita, ordinatum, inactitatum, et stabilitum fuerit quod nullum breve de licentia eligendi (vulgariter vocatum Conge d'eslier) deinceps concedendum foret, nec electio alicujus archiepiscopi seu episcopi per decanum et capitulum fieret, sed quod nos, per literas nostras patentes, quolibet tempore cum aliquis archiepiscopatus seu episcopatus vacaret, alicui personæ, quam nos idoneam existimarem, eundem conferre possemus et valeamus, et eadem collatio, sic, per literas nostras patentes hujusmodi personæ facta et deliberata, cui nos eundem conferremus archiepiscopatum seu episcopatum, vel ejus sufficienti procuratori aut attornato, staret et foret, ad omnes intentiones et constructiones, tanti et ejusdem effectus quanti et qualis foret, si breve de licentia eligendi concessum esset, electio ritè facta et eadem confirmata fuissent, et quod, post hujusmodi collationem, eadem persona, cui hujusmodi archiepiscopatus seu episcopatus sic foret collatus seu datus, posset consecrari, prosequi, et habere liberationem suam, seu "Breve de amoveas Manum," ac omnia alia agere prout si eadem ceremoniæ et electiones factæ et actæ fuissent, prout in eodem statuto inter alia plenius liquet et apparet.

Memoriale Ecclesiæ Cathedralis Gloucestræ Compendiarium.

MEMORIÆ proditum est episcopum et prædicatores statim post receptam Christi fidem à Lucio illo protochristiano Britonum rege Gloucestræ anno salutis humanæ clxxxix. fuisse constitutos. Eldadym anno cccclxxxix. et Dubricium anno dxxij. Gloucestræ extitisse episcopos testatur antiquitas. Imò Gloucestræ archiepiscopalem antiqui statuunt sedem eo tempore cum Lucius Fugacii et Damiani (quos Eleutherius huc miserat) consilio tres illos paganismi archiflames Londinensem scilicet, Eboracensem, Gloucestræ, in totidem archiepiscopos convertisset. Postea autem sedes illa primaria hic desiit et Meneviam, propter incertam et insulsam quandam opinionem singularis et insignis sanctimonie cujusdam Davidis qui ΑΓΙΟΣ cognominabatur invictissimi illius Arthuri Britannie principis consobrini episcopi Menevensis, translata est. Verum de his licet propter bella cum paganis funestissima in quibus annales incenduntur et propter universam Christiane fidei intra hujus regni fines ab ethnicis jam domitos et expugnatos defectionem, nulla potest certa et indubitata fieri narratio: proculdubio tamen anno ultimæ patientiæ sanctorum dclxxxix. stante adhuc heptarchia, Wolpherus Pendæ pagani filius rex Christianus Merciorum primus, quem Mercii à funesta et horrenda persecutionis strage, tanquam Mosen alterum occultarent, villam Gloucestræ plurimum auxit et adornavit, et (ut testatur Guilielmus Malmesburiensis) cœnobii Gloucestræ prima jecit fundamenta; quo mortuo, frater Ethelredus qui ei in regno successit, ædificium istius monasterii promovebat; quod ut perficeretur Ethelredus primo imperii sui anno Osricum provinciæ Huiciorum proregem constituit ut monasterium in villa Gloucestræ ædificandum curaret; atque eodem tempore circuitum quo situm erat monasterium, ipsam Gloucestræ villam et alias in agro Gloucestræ terras una cum ingenti pecuniarum vi eidem Osrico Ethelredus his legibus concessit, primò ut monasterium jam inchoatum perficeret protinus et consummaret, deinde ut quarundam personarum, quæ ibi indes divino cultui vacantes perpetuò manerent, ordinem et canonicam vivendi rationem præscriberet; postremò, ut sororem Kyneburgam primam abbatissam constitueret, et possessiones easdem eidem Kyneburgæ sanctissimæ confirmaret. Hoc ex antiquo istius donationis chirographo Ethelredi nomine concepto (quem ipsemet vidi) ac per Burgredi, qui postea Merciorum fuit rex, confirmationem liquidò apparet. Est etiam per idem manuscriptum in confesso, quod cum alias Theodorus Deusdedit archiepiscopus Cantuariensis et Sexwolphus Merciorum episcopus esset synodo coacta celebri, quæ ab Etheldredo mandata erant Osricus fideliter omnia præstitit et perfecit. Hoc cœnobium in villa Gloucestræ licentia et munificentia Ethelredi Merciorum regis fundatum ab Osrico Northumbriæ rege ædificatum et per Theodorum archiepiscopum Cantuariensem et Bosillum præulem Wigornensem consecratum honori sancti Petri apostoli dicatur et dedicatur. Kyneburga Pendæ regis filia uxor Aldredi Northumbriæ regis, et Osrici, qui monasterium hoc Gloucestræ ædificandum curavit, soror sanctimonie devota hujus monasterii prima facta abbatissa, septimo regni Ethelredi regis Merciorum anno, ejus suscepit regimen et per xxix. annos sustinuit. Mox verò postquam Kyneburga consecratur abbatissa, frater ejus Osricus tum Northumbriæ rex, ei abbatissæ jure dedit omnes terras quas Ethelredus ea lege illi prius concesserat, una cum dominio villæ Gloucestræ aliisque terris quas in agro Gloucestræ cœmerat. Syngraphum verò istius depositæ donationis super altare sancti Petri solenniter reposuit et fideliter reddidit. Osricus rex moritur et in ecclesia hac Gloucestræ quam prius condendam curaverat inhumatur; cujus monumentum in fine septentrionalis partis chori cernitur, et soror Kyneburga quam plurimis bonis ecclesiæ procuratis et donatis, vigesimo nono suæ præfecturæ anno vitam cum morte commutans prope Osricum fratrem jacet sepulta. Edburga regina Wolpheri Merciorum regis uxor, post obitum mariti sui omni dignitate terrestri deposita et contemptis deliciis ab Edwino episcopo Wigornensi abbatissa monasterii Gloucestræ consecrata Kyneburgæ successit, et xxv. suæ præfecturæ anno ex hac vita migrans Wilfrido Wigornensi antistite juxta sororem Kyneburgam in eodem monasterio Gloucestræ sepelitur. Eva tertia abbatissa regina prius tempore Ethelredi Merciorum regis monasterii Gloucestræ suscipiens regimen, à Wilfrido Wigornensi præule consecratur. Hujus abbatissæ præfecturæ annui ecclesiæ redditus augentur plurimum. Priores donationes in pluribus synodis confirmari procuravit, et trigesimo sui regiminis anno, regnante Offa Merciorum rege, obiit, et juxta sorores prædecessores in eodem monasterio Gloucestræ sepulta est. Post obitum Evæ ecclesia hæc rectrice et regimine destituta, à morte ejusdem Evæ usque ad regnum Bernulphi Merciorum regis quinquaginta nempe annorum spatio deserta manet et desolata. Bernulfus autem Merciorum princeps cœnobium Gloucestræ spoliatum et ruinosum inveniens, et ex singulari regalique cura promovere studens, monasterium Gloucestræ reædificavit et formam ejus mutavit. Canonicos seculares qui prædicatores et clerici fuerunt, legitimis uxoribus plerosque junctos et conjugatos victuque ac habitu ab aliis secularibus Christianis parum discrepantes ibidem collocandos curavit, et quantum se penes erat certis præscriptis vivendi institutis et legibus stabilivit, prioribus hæreditamentis in eandem ecclesiam monialium tempore collatis illos dotavit, atque illis inter cætera ipsemet quindecim coria, hidas uti vocant, terrarum in parochia de Standish concessit. A Bernulphi Merciorum regis regno hæc ecclesia sub clericis usque ad regnum Canuti Anglorum regis pacatissimè et felicissimè floruit, annis nempe mxcix. Canutus autem anno regni sui quinto, instigante Wolstano Wigornensi episcopo clericos et prædicatores ecclesiæ Gloucestræ ejecit monachosque regulares ordinis Benedictini in eorum loco suffecit, anno salutis mxxij. Edricus unus clericorum hujus monasterii primus constituitur abbas. Romana illa Canuti preregrinatio in superstitiosi cujusdam Achelnoti archiepiscopi Cantuariensis gratiam suscepta hoc effectum dedit.

Licet Canutus rex, clerus, et alii multi magnique, monachus promovendi studiosi essent, illique plus nimio dediti et addicti, adeo ut prædicatores ex ecclesiis cathedralibus in plurimis regni locis depellerentur et in eorum locos asciscerentur monachi; attamen cum hi Benedictini primò Gloucestræ essent adducti ut quinto Canuti regis anno ibi collocarentur, hanc religionis imposturam consules et incolæ Gloucestræ adeo detestabantur et devovebant, ut monachi per illos repellerentur, et septem eorum inter Churcham et Gloucestræ à quo-dam Wolpino le Rue tunc villæ Gloucestrensis consule interempti occumberent. Qui quidem Wolpinus le Rue, vir nobilis et opulentus valde in atrocis flagitii satisfactionem septem monachos in eodem monasterio ex decreto pontificis alebat de proprio. Postea vero cum monasterium Gloucestrese hos monachos Benedictinos nulla salvifica scientia nec salutari conscientia imbutos sed tenebris plus quam Cymmeriis obcæcatos et contra fidem et officium Christi tanquam insensatos desævientes recepisset, Deus gloriæ suæ zelotypus illos extirpare et monasterium quo stabulabant flammis devorari crudelissimis, ipsaque adeo ejus convelli fundamenta ac ædificia solo adæquari et penitus dirui permisit. Verùm Edwardi Confessoris tempore Aldredus Wigornensis episcopus ejusdem ecclesiæ novum inchoavit fundamentum à loco quo prius steterat paulo remotius et urbis lateri magis contiguum. Hoc ædificium mense Octobris consummatum septimo regni Edwardi Confessoris anno, non Christi gloriæ sed sancti Petri solenni consecratur, ibidem, monachis denuo restitutis, numerus vero illorum minuitur multum eo quod Aldredus non longe post ad archiepiscopalem Eboraci sedem translatus, quamplurimas ecclesiæ possessiones illi non multo ante propter expensas in eadem ecclesia reparanda et reedificanda factas oppignoratas retinuisset. Edwardus ille Confessor Gloucestriæ commoratur, et in antiquo hujus monasterii ædificio (nunc longa opificina appellato) tempore quo Dani expelluntur, senatum habuit saluberrimum. Gulielmus autem Conquestor xx. (hoc est ultimo sui regni anno) Christi natalem apparatu satis regio Gloucestriæ celebravit et monasterium hoc valde dirutum reparavit et adauxit. Serlonem sacellanum suum in abbatem extulit. Et hic abbas duos tantummodo monachos et alumnos octo inveniens suo tempore ad centenarium illorum numerum auxit. Conquestor hujus cœnobii monachis manerium de Barnwood prope Gloucestriam cum aliis libertatibus municipiis et donationibus est elargitus. Sherlo abbas, Conquestoris favore et munificentia omnes terras hujus monasterii Aldredo Eboracensi archiepiscopo ut ante oppignoratas, sibi et suis monachis restitui procuravit.

Aldredus obiit et in meridionali chori latere (quasi positus in præsepi) jacet sepultus, hujus monumentum ibi cernitur antiquissimum. Robertus ætate maximus, et Richardus natus minimus, Gulielmi Conquestoris filii, in hoc monasterio jacent sepulti. Richardus obiit anno MLXXX. Robertus verò MCXXXIIII. qui a crudeli et tyrannico fratre suo Henrico primo terris et libertatibus spoliatus et in ergastulo Cardiffensi conclusus, vigesimo sexto suæ incarcerationis anno, senio et doloribus animi fractus, vitam hanc nimis miseram cum expectata morte commutavit. Inde autem ad hanc advectus ecclesiam cui munificum sese exhibuerat Mæcenatem honorificè sepelitur in chori medio, ubi sepulturæ monumentum etiamnum conspicitur. Primum à Conquestu parlamentum per Henricum primum in alla antiquissima hujus monasterii structura celebratum; et in eodem loco Edwardus (primus qui portam illam hujus monasterii ejus nomine insignem construxit, senatum habuit satis regium. Hoc monasterium, non solum ante Conquestum, bellis nempe inter Saxones et Britannos, inter Merciarum reges et Saxones Occidentales, in funestissimis Danorum præliis et in dissensionibus Canuti et Edmundi Ferrei Lateris cognomento truculentis, multa tulit damna: verum etiam post Conquestum, cum superstitione et monachatus ubique ferè stabularent imò cum papatus diebus veluti halcyoniis caput extulisset serpentinum, incendio veluti celitus dimisso bis devastatur annis nempe MCCXIII. et MCCXXII. Regnante etiam Henrico tertio quam plurima fecit detrimenta, et Edwardi primi tempore damna non exigua. Sed facile reficiuntur hæ illarum tempestatum ruinæ devotionibus plurimis et illorum temporum munificentia in quibus tam opulentæ largitiones cæco quodam meriti et satisfactionis conceptu in ecclesiam indies conferuntur, ut regnante Edwardo primo, lex mortuæ manus ferretur, qua munificentiam istam nimis prodigam fatuam et rei publicæ satis periculosam reprimeret. Humphredus Bohun, Herefordiæ, Warwiciæ, et Arundeliæ comes, unus ex duodecim paribus qui tempore Henrici tertii regno præfuerunt, et vim et vitium quæ imperium tunc temporis nimis infestabant, vi et virtute repelleret, una cum lectissima conjuge in meridionali hujus ecclesiæ latere pone chorum jacet sepultus, et monumentum cum solido confectum lapide hodie apparet satis vetustum. Edwardus secundus post regnum susceptum cum Isabelæ reginæ suæ Philippi formosi regis Gallorum filia et nobilium suorum in se iram excitasset odiumque conflasset quod cuidam Petro Gavestono viro parum probe et Spenseris duobus pessimis regis consultoribus impensè nimium faveret et in eorum gratiam plurima majestate regia indigna subditis gravia et nobilibus intollerabilia faceret, ab exercitu reginæ suæ, principis Edwardi filii sui et nobilium in bello captus, in carcerem trusus, et demum ex dolo Rogeri de Mortuo Mari quem regina uti ferebatur, nimium adamabat, à duobus sicariis perditissimis in castello Barkleinsi quo inclusus tenebatur, candenti veru per anum intestinis intruso crudelissimè trucidatur, et hoc monasterio simplici funeris apparatu in sinistro chori latere sepultus est ubi adhuc ejus apparet monumentum. Richardus secundus in prædicto loco hujus monasterii parlamentum celebravit.

Cœnobium hoc Gloucestriæ absque ulla formæ mutatione etiamsi non sine ædificii amplificatione nec sine annuorum reddituum incremento, usque ad regnum Henrici octavi perduravit. Temporibus enim Henrici quinti et Henrici sexti turris illa, uti vocant, quadrangulatis pinnaculis nunc adeo spatiosa et conspicua, tempore Thomæ Seabrooke hujus monasterii abbatis, qui opere nondum peracto obiit, et monumento satis celebri et vetusto pone dextrum chori latus fuit sepultus, cum Robertum Tullium ejusdem monasterii monachum et postea episcopum Menevensensem, singulari prudentia et industria virum operi perficiendo præfecisset, fuit constructa. Clastrum illud magnificum et chorus una cum sacello illo spatioso deiparæ virgini dedicato, à Ricardo Haulaces hic etiam abbate fundato, navi ecclesiæ adjunguntur. Turris enim prior, in bosco, qui hodie, pomarium commune vulgariter appellatur, steterat pervetusto cuidam ædificio, quod infirmarium dicitur magis vicina, quæ pinu tantum procera procul conspicienda caput extulerat. Cujus ædificii facies una cum antiquissima illa, monialium tempore, structura, in vitreis fenestris, lateris orientalis claustrum illius majoris laqueati magnifici et undique valde speciosi graphicè depingitur. Plerique comitatus Gloucestriæ viri verè nobiles, ex antiquissima oriundi prosapia, Cliffordi nempe, Whittingtonii, Throckmortonii, Pauncefooti, et alii multi, quorum gentilitia insignia in duplici clipeorum serie, quorum altera sub oriente capellæ virginis beatæ fenestra: altera in sacello septentrionali post sinistram chori partem cerni possunt, in ædificio hujus monasterii ampliando et exornando munificos sese exhibuerunt Mæcenates. Butleri autem equestri ex ordine viri è familia Butleriorum, qui amplissimum illud castellum de Sudly construxerunt oriundi, in obscuro quodam sacello pone dextrum chori latus jacent sepulti. Occidentalem verò navis ecclesiæ partem (regnante Henrico septimo) duo abbates hujus monasterii ampliari curaverunt. Parkeri ultimi abbatis (qui portam illam hujus ecclesiæ meridionalem, Edwardi regis nomine, ut ante, insignitam et palatii episcopalis januam ampliavit et adornavit) monumentum in sacello sinistre chori partis cerni potest. Worcester Cathedral. The Choir.

Cathedral and Benedictine Priory of Worcester.

THE cathedral of Worcester owes its origin to the division of the over great bishoprick of the whole kingdom of Mercia, whence it appears to have been separated by King Ethelred and Archbishop Theodore about the year of our Lord 678 or 680, and established with a chapter of secular clerks in a church dedicated to St. Peter, which came in the next century to be more generally called St. Mary's.^a The division of the diocese of Mercia was decreed in the Council of Hatfield.^b

Numerous charters, or copies of charters, made in the eighth and ninth centuries, to the bishop and his family (as the secular clerks were called) at Wigornaceastre, are still extant, granted by royal or princely patrons. Among the kings of Mercia Æthelred, Ceowlf, Offa, Kenulph, Beornulph, and Burhred, are more especially noticed as benefactors: with Huctred or Othered, Wiferd, Aldred, and Æthelredus, dukes, or viceroys of the Wiccii.^c Many of the territories bestowed at this early period, being a part of royal demesne, were conveyed with great immunities.^d In these ages, moreover, Mr. Green observes in his History and Antiquities of Worcester, the bishops had the superintendance of all the monasteries in their respective dioceses; and when abuses were found in any of these religious societies, they could eject or transplant them, and appropriate their revenues to other monasteries, or to the colleges of their own cathedrals; or even could gratify rich laymen with a grant of the lands of the suppressed abbey. Such steps indeed were not taken without the consent of a provincial synod, wherein the king and his principal thanes, as well as the prelates and many abbats, were present. But in these assemblies the influence of the Bishops was very great: convents in favoured situations were augmented, while others were doomed to impropriation or suppression. Thus, in Gloucestershire, the monasteries of Clive, Withington, and Westbury; in Warwickshire, the monastery of Stratford upon Avon; in Worcestershire, that of Sture in Usmer, now Kidderminster; the abbies of Kemesey, Bredon, Blockley, Deylesford, Hanbury, and Fladbury, were dissolved, or rather swallowed up in the see and college of Worcester.^e Bishop Wilfrith obtained a synodal decree that the monastery of Wudiandun, now Withington, in Gloucestershire, should be annexed to his see.^f His successor, Bishop Milred, in whose time this monastery lapsed, made a fresh grant of it, A.D. 774, to Lady Æthelburga, abbess of a religious house at Worcester, on condition that both this, and also her own monastery at Worcester, should, upon her death, devolve to the church and choir of St. Peter in that city:^g and the bishop thought this no unreasonable provision, as it was the intention of her father, Ælfred, the founder most probably of her monastic establishment at Worcester, that the whole of that, with all appurtenances, should be hers for life only, and pass in reversion to this cathedral church.^h

The first mention of St. Mary's minster, Mr. Green observes, is in a charter of King Æthelbald, dated A.D. 743ⁱ. He considers that it was then probably a new foundation under the abbess Æthelburga already mentioned. It seems afterwards to have been inhabited by monks, to whom, upon the pretended reformation of the cathedral colleges by King Edgar, the keys of St. Peter's cathedral, with all its emoluments and territories, were surrendered A.D. 969; principally at the instigation of Bishop Oswald.^k

Dugdale gives the authority of Edgar's charter, dated at Gloucester December the 28th, A.D. 964, for the reform of the cathedral having then taken place.^l It speaks in strong terms of the expulsion of the clerks who had possessed it before. Doubts have been, however, entertained of its authenticity.^m The Epitome Juniana at the end of Heming's Chartulary gives another Instrument, in which the change is mentioned to have taken place five years afterward, A.D. 969:ⁿ and the same year is also mentioned for the reform by William of Malmesbury.^o Bishop Tanner makes no doubt that the placing the change in this church under the year DCCCLXXI. in the Monasticon, in the extracts from the Cotton manuscript Caligula A. x. is a false print for DCCCLXXI.^p Mr. Green, however, assures us that the Acts of Bishop Wulstan's synod may be depended on, which place the surrender of the cathedral and its endowments, as has been already mentioned, in 969. From that time the church of St. Mary became the cathedral of Worcester; though, being erected for the use of a private society, it must have been unsuitable for the purpose.

In 983 Oswald completed the building of a new and more stately cathedral in the church-yard of the then were consenting to a grant of Bishop Alhun in 849. A provost and fourteen clerks composed Bishop Werferth's family in 872 and 889. Thirteen sign with Bishop Koeuwald in 954. Bishop Oswald had at first eighteen: when two of these were dead, or expelled, the addition of St. Mary's society (who seem to have been but ten) augmented his number to twenty-six. This was his complement from 969 to 982, when, from the sudden reduction of his number, five or six of his clerks are suspected to have been expelled.

^k See the particulars of the change more minutely stated in Mr. Green's History, pp. 26, 27. The number of seculars, he remarks in a note, in the college of Worcester at different periods of time, is easily collected from the subscriptions to the charters of lease granted by the bishop and his family. One provost, seven presbyters, and a deacon, neglected St. Peter's, which he dedicated to St. Mary;^a and which he is stated to have furnished with no less than twenty-eight altars.^b The displacing of the secular canons, or married presbyters, from the cathedral, a measure which had been long in progression under the management of Oswald, was, on the opening of the new church, finally completed; and the new church of St. Mary, which from that time became the cathedral of Worcester, was filled with monks, to the utter exclusion of the secular clergy.^c From Heming's Chartulary we learn, that, during the building of the new cathedral, Bishop Oswald was frequently used to preach to crowded audiences in the open area by St. Peter's church, near the cross which had been erected over the tomb of Wiferd duke of the Wiccii.^d

Having thus far detailed the early history of the cathedral, it may be proper to notice the names of the BISHOPS by whom Oswald was preceded.

BOSEL was the first consecrated bishop of Worcester, after the partition of the diocese of Mercia.^e Tatfrith, or Tadfrid, one of Hilda's monks at Streanshall, had been elected to the see, but died before his consecration.^f Bosel was consecrated in the year 680. He died of age and infirmities, in the year 691.^g

OSTFOR, or OFTSOR, who succeeded him, by the appointment of King Ethelred, had also been a monk at Streanshall. He had visited Rome, before the time of his consecration by Wilfrid archbishop of York;^h and sat at Worcester scarcely more than eleven months. He was succeeded by

ST. EGWINE, or EGWINUS, A.D. 692, the founder of the monastery of Evesham;ⁱ who was not consecrated till the year after his election. In the very year that Egwine was made bishop, Æthelred king of Mercia gave ten manses to the monastery of Worcester, at a place called Wicbold, on the south side of the river Salwarp.^k Of Egwine more will be hereafter said in the account of Evesham abbey, where he retired on his secession from the labours of his bishoprick, and died December 30th, 717. In addition to the territory already mentioned, he obtained for the church of Worcester, from King Æthelred, the monastery of Flaudenburch, or Fladbury.^l Leland, in his Collectanea, and Alford, in his Annals, have reported his Latin epitaph.

WILFRID, or WILFRITH, who had been for a while coadjutor with Egwine, succeeded him in the bishoprick. The Annals of the Church of Worcester, printed in the Anglia Sacra, place his death in 742; Florence of Worcester, in 743; the Annals of Mailros and Simeon of Durham, in 745. He was succeeded by MILREDUS, or MILDREDUS, who was present at the great Synod of Cloveshoe, in the year 747.^m The time of his death is uncertain; being placed by the writer of the Saxon Chronicle in 772,ⁿ and by the Annals of Worcester in 775.

WERMUND, who succeeded him, died in 778.^o

TILHER, or THILHERUS, called in the Textus Roffensis GILHERE, was the next bishop; being promoted from the abbacy of Beorclea, or Berkley. During this bishop's time, A.D. 780, King Offa gave to the church Croppethorne, Netherton, Elmlege, Criddesho, Cherton, Hampton, and Bengeworthe, "et bibliothecam optimam, cum duabus armillis ex auro purissimo fabricatis."^p Several other grants from Offa, in or about the same year, will be found among the Charters in the Appendix.^q Tilher died, according to Florence of Worcester, A.D. 781, and was succeeded by

HEATHORED, or EATHORED, who presided over the see seventeen years. He is called by Malmesbury ETHELRED. The adjustment of the claims of King Offa from Bishop Heathored, upon lands of King Ethelbald alleged to have been detained by the bishop, will be found in Heming's Chartulary: as a composition for which, the monastery of Bath, with thirty cassates of land on the south side of the river Eafen there, were made over to the king.^r The settlement of this bishop's controversy with Wulfheard the son of Cussan, at the Synod of Celcyth, in 789, concerning the inheritance of Hemeles and Duda at Intanbeorg and Bradanley, now Inkbarrow and Bradley, will be hereafter given at length.^s The decision of this synod was confirmed by another, held at Cloveshoe, A.D. 803. Heathored, who is said to have added Ictacumbe to the possessions of the church, died in 798. His successor was

DENEBERTUS, who is also called KENEBERT, and TENEBERT. He was present at the Synod of Cloveshoe last mentioned, where Litchfield was declared to be no longer an archbishoprick: as well as at the Council of Celcyth, in 816. He died A.D. 822, having added, from his patrimony, to the lands of the cathedral, the manor of Herforton.^t

HEABERTUS, HEREBERTUS, or EADBERHT, was the next bishop, consecrated by Wilfrid archbishop of Canterbury. He was at the Synods of Clovesho, A.D. 824, and London, A.D. 833. His death is placed, by the Annals of Worcester, in the year 846; by Matthew of Westminster, in 847; and by Alford and Florence of Worcester, in 848.^u

ALHEUNUS, HALHUNUS, ALCHUN, or ALWIN, succeeded on the death of Heabertus: in whose time Berwlf or Bernulf, and Burhred, kings of Mercia, were benefactors to the church.^x He died in the year 872: when

WEREFRITH, or WEREFRID, succeeded to the bishoprick; one of the learned men of King Alfred's court; who is said to have translated, by that monarch's order, Pope Gregory's Treatise "de Cura Pastoralis," still extant in the Saxon tongue. William of Malmesbury calls him Henferdth; Matthew of Westminster Herefridus, and Werferthus; and Ralph de Diceto Averefredus. He was consecrated on the 7th of the ides of June, 873, by Æthelred archbishop of Canterbury. On the irruption of the Danes into Mercia, in 874, he fled to France; but afterwards returned. In 896, at a great meeting of the Mercna men at Gloucester, he recovered the right of the church to three cassates of land at Wuduceastre, which had been formerly given by King Ethelbald, but had been unjustly detained. In 897, also, he recovered five manses at Upton.^y The Obituary in the Cotton MS. Caligula A. x. places his death in the year 915.^z

ÆTHELHUNUS, or ADELHUNUS, abbat of Beorcla, or Berkley, was the next bishop. He was consecrated in the year his predecessor died; and sate till the year 922.^a He was succeeded by

WILFRITH, or WILFERTHUS, who, the same year, gave to the church two hides of land at Clifford near Stratford upon Avon.^b He died in the year 929.

KENEWOLD, or KYNEWOLDUS, called also CENWAL, or COENWALCH, was the next bishop: who was sent by King Athelstan, in the very year of his consecration, with a present to the monasteries of Germany. After his return, he purchased for, and gave to the church, twenty hides of land at Ælfrýþe cýpcan, now Alvechurch.^a In 941, he placed seculars at Evesham, which had been destroyed by the Danes:^b and, in 957, gave Oddingeley, and Lawerne to the church of Worcester.^c In the same year he died. He led a life of great humility and monastic strictness, and was claimed by the Benedictines as a monk of their order.^d He was succeeded by the famous

DUNSTAN, abbat of Glastonbury; who appears to have held the bishopricks of Worcester and London together, contrary to the canons of the church, but "summa necessitate," by absolute necessity.^e In 959, however, he was translated to the see of Canterbury. Dunstan has been already mentioned under the monasteries of Glastonbury and Christ Church Canterbury.^f His successor at Worcester was

OSWALD, several points of whose history, as it concerns the cathedral, have been already detailed. He was first a canon, and afterwards dean of Winchester; then a monk of Fleury in France; and finally the successor of Dunstan. He was no sooner preferred to this see, than he joined heartily with Dunstan, and Ethelwold bishop of Winchester, in displacing the seculars from the cathedral, and bringing in the monks: for the accomplishment of which he much impoverished the revenues of the church, by granting leases of land for lives. The articles of obligation, or tenure, imposed upon such of his friends or followers to whom the grants were made, are detailed in the Charter intitled "Indiculum Libertatis de Oswaldeslawes Hundred:"^g which appears to have made [Oswaldeslaw hundred a sort of palatinate, exempt from the jurisdiction of the civil magistrate.^h

Dr. Thomas has digested in chronological order the entries of Bishop Oswald's grants, from different parts of Heming's Chartulary, between the years 962 and 991. They were as follow:

A.D. 991. To his servant Ælstan, one manse at Ichington. To Æthelmær, his familiar artificer, two manses at Æshtun. To his true thain Eadric, three hides at Tætlington, and Newbold in the parish of Tredington.^d

The number of hides, says Dr. Thomas, which Oswald thus gave away, amounted to one hundred and ninety; whereas the whole hundred of Oswaldslowe, given him by King Edward, contained but three hundred. So that this must be looked upon by all impartial persons as a wilful impoverishing of the seculars, and a robbing of his successors to a high degree: and this he did with express leave from King Edgar, Dunstan, and Ethelwold,^e Earl of Brithnoth also joining with Oswald in persuading the king to consent thereto.^f

In the year 972 Oswald was promoted to the see of York, still holding Worcester in Commendam: this example was afterwards followed by his immediate successors Aldulph and Wolstan; the two sees remaining united till the year 1023. Archbishop Oswald died in the year 992,^g and was buried at Worcester.

ALDULPH, EALDULF, or ADULF, abbat of Peterborough, was the immediate successor of Oswald, whose bones he is said to have translated from their tomb to a shrine. He died in the year 1002.

WLSTAN, WULSTAN, or WOLSTAN, who succeeded Aldulph, was less in favour with the monks of Worcester than his predecessor. They called him "Reprobus," explaining the appellation by a rhyming verse,

"Nam nimis erravit, dum rebus nos spoliavit."

The truth was, as Dr. Thomas has stated, that during the continuance of the two Sees of York and Worcester in one, the lands of each became confused with those of the other; and, at the separation, York, being the more powerful See, retained several of the manors belonging to Worcester. It must be observed that there seems to have been no distinction between the lands of the bishop and the lands of the priory in any cathedral convent previous to the Norman Conquest. Malmesbury, and Wlstan's contemporary, Ælfrick, speak highly of him, not only as a religious prelate, but for his literary endowments.^h

In the same year with Wlstan's promotion, the massacre of the Danes, upon St. Brice's day, by the command of King Ethelred, took place; and in the purchase of peace in the subsequent ravages of the Danes, in return, under Swein, the wealth of the church of Worcester was nearly exhausted. In 1012, almost all the plate and ornaments of the church were taken away; the tables of the altars, both of gold and silver, the ornaments of books, chalices, and crucifixes were melted down, and the lands of the convent severely taxed, to raise a share of the tribute.ⁱ

In 1023, on the fifth of the kalends of June, Wlstan died at York, being carried for interment to Ely. At York his successor was Alfric Puttoc. In the see of Worcester he was succeeded by

LEOFFIUS, LEOFRICUS, or LEOFERTUS, abbat of Thorney:^k during whose rule, the ravages of the Danes continuing, under Cnut, the church lost the lands which it possessed at Loxley, Luddington, Draiton, and Milcote, in the county of Warwick, and Hethrop and Kidlington in Oxfordshire.^l Leoffius died at Kemsey, near Worcester, on the 14th of the kalends of September, 1033.^m

BRIHTEAGUS, BRIHTEH, or BRITHEGUS, abbat of Pershore, and nephew of Wlstan archbishop of York, was the next bishop; who alienated several lands from the see to his relations and servants; more especially the manses of Ælfinton, Sapien, Hymelton, Spechley, Wulfrinton, Ravenshill, Lappawurthin, and Elmleege; a hide at Whitinton, and five hides at Bengworth.ⁿ He died on the 13th of the kalends of January, 1038.

LIVING, LIVINGUS, or LIFINGUS, succeeded Brihteh. He had been originally a monk at Winchester; then abbat of Tavistock; and having accompanied King Cnut on his journey to Rome, on his return, was made bishop of Crediton in 1032; holding the bishoprick of Cornwall, and afterwards this bishoprick, in commendam with it. It was during his rule, in 1041, that the city of Worcester was abandoned to the ravages of Hardicnute's soldiers. The place was burnt, and, in all probability, the cathedral church, though not beyond the remedy of repair. The particulars are minutely detailed by Florence of Worcester.^o Living died March 23d, 1046, and was buried at the monastery of Tavistock, which he had repaired and endowed. William of Malmesbury gives him the character of being both arrogant and ambitious. The monks of Tavistock, however, considered him so much their benefactor, that they continued to chaunt a service for his soul to the time of the historian.^p

ALDRED, who has been already noticed in a former page as the rebuilder of St. Peter's church at Gloucester,^q succeeded to the bishoprick of Worcester immediately upon Living's death. In 1056 he obtained the vacant bishoprick of Hereford, in commendam, which he held till 1060; when the see of York becoming vacant by the death of Kinsi, he obtained a licence, at first, to hold that in the room of Hereford: but upon going to Rome, for the pall, Pope Nicholas the Second made it a condition that the see of Worcester should be resigned. Previous to his resignation he obtained a grant from King Edward the Confessor subjecting the bishoprick to the see of York; a copy of which is given in the Appendix to Dr. Thomas's Survey.^r He is charged, on leaving Worcester, with having robbed it of several of its lands: he was, nevertheless, a great patron of the monks; and, as we learn from a deed in Heming's Chaturary, gave ten cassates of land to them, at Heamtun in Gloucestershire, after he had become archbishop, to buy provisions for their table.^s He died on the 3d of the ides of September, feria sexta, A.D. 1069.^t

WLSTAN, or WOLSTAN II. called also SAINT WOLSTAN, who had been previously Prior of the church, succeeded to the bishoprick on Aldred's resignation: his election being confirmed by the king August the 29th, and himself consecrated Sept. 8th, 1062, by Aldred, at York. Simeon of Durham says that his canonical obedience was nevertheless sworn to Stigand. "Consecratus est igitur episcopus ab Aldredo Eboracensium archiepiscopo, eo quod Stigando Doroberniæ archiepiscopo officium episcopale tunc à domno apostolico interdictum erat, quia Roberto archiepiscopo vivente archiepiscopatum suscipere præsumpsit: canonica tamen professione præfato Dorobernensi archiepiscopo Stigando, non suo ordinatori Aldredo facta."^a

The Life of Wolstan has been written at considerable length by William of Malmesbury.^b He was a native of Long Itchington in Warwickshire, where his father held lands of the church of Worcester, under Bishop Oswald. About 1050, or between that and 1057, he became Prior of Worcester: and is said to have been chosen to the bishoprick against his will. He was present, with King Edward the Confessor, at the dedication of St. Peter Westminster; and was one of those, as Ralph de Diceto assures us, who, after the battle of Hastings, met the Conqueror at Berkhamstead, and made his submission.^c He also assisted at the Conqueror's coronation by Aldred. In return, we find a deed in Heming's Chartulary, dated in 1067, in which the Conqueror grants to the church of Worcester two hides of land at Cullaclife, "eo videlicet rationis tenore, ut hoc ejus donum quiete absque omni calumpnia possideant, atque pro remedio animæ illius illorumque, quos secum adjutores habuerat, cum dominatum terræ istius adquisierat, fideliter intercessores existant. Quatinus totius bonitatis remunerator gaudentis vitæ recompensationem illis retribuere, et ipsi piissimus indulgor, quicquid sceleris inde contraxerat, per hanc ejus concessionem clementer indulgeret."^d In the search and spoil of the monasteries, however, which afterwards took place, about 1069, Worcester was not spared. The plunder of the church is particularly recorded, in a Saxon passage, by Heming.^e

On the death of Archbishop Aldred, in the same year, Wolstan instituted a suit for the recovery of twelve manors, which had been taken from the see of Worcester, and annexed to that of York. He brought this business before the Council at Winchester in 1070; when the decision upon it was delayed in consequence of the vacancy in the archbishoprick. He pursued his point on the elevation of Thomas, a Norman, to York: and finally proved the pretence for the subjection of Worcester groundless; recovered the manors which had been taken from his see; and obtained a full confirmation of its ancient privileges in their largest extent.^f The exemption of Worcester from the jurisdiction of the see of York was finally confirmed at Windsor by the king in 1072, to whom it had been referred by the pope.

On the subject of the controversy which arose about 1077, when Bishop Wolstan sued the abbat of Evesham for the services of fifteen hides in Heamtone, and four hides in Benincwyrthe, as part of his hundred of Oswaldeslaw, sufficient information will be found among the Charters appended to this history.^g

In 1084, Bishop Wolstan laid the foundation of a new church,^h which was finished, together with the monastery, in 1089. On the occasion of opening the church, he offered upon the altar, for the better maintenance of the monks, the manor of Alveston in Warwickshire, consisting of fifteen hides, which he had recovered of the Conqueror at a great expence.ⁱ Malmesbury informs us, that on the completion of the new church, when Oswald's structure was to be pulled down, he wept. "Cum ecclesiæ majoris opus, quod ipse a fundamentis inceperat, ad hoc incrementi processisset, ut jam monachi migrarent in illam, jussum est veterem ecclesiam, quam et beatus Oswaldus fecerat, detegi et subrui. Ad hoc spectaculum stans sub Divo Wulstanus, lachrymas tenere nequivit. Super quo modestè a familiaribus redargutus, qui gaudere potiùs deberet, quòd se superstite tantus ecclesiæ honor accessit, ut ampliatus monachorum numerus ampliora exigeret habitacula, respondit: Ego longè aliter intelligo, quòd nos miseri sanctorum opera destruimus, ut nobis laudem comparemus. Non noverat illa fœlicium virorum ætas pompaticas ædes construere, sed sub qualicumque tecto seipsos Deo immolare, subjectosque ad exemplum attrahere: nos e contrà nitimur, ut animarum negligentes curam accumulamus lapides. Dixit plura in hunc modum, allegationibus suis occurrentes sententias infirmans."

In the interval between the foundation and completion of the new structure, the Domesday Survey was made, in which we find the monastery possessed of the following manors in Gloucestershire, viz. Hvesberie, with its berewicks, consisting of fifty hides; eight hides at Colesborne; one hide at Aicote; twenty-one hides at Becheberie; and thirty hides at Widindune. In Worcestershire, of the whole hundred of Oswaldeslow, comprising an enormous assemblage of manors, and amounting to no less than three hundred hides;^k beside Stocche and ⁱ See Num. XXIX. From this instrument we learn, that Wolstan had so managed the affairs of his church, that from the number of twelve, the monks during his time had increased to fifty.

^k The liberties, privileges, and immunities granted to the bishop in this hundred, have been already noticed. They "were confirmed by Henry I. and Henry II. and augmented by Henry III. upon account of his father John being buried with the monks. The bishop enjoyed them without molestation till the time of Walter de Cantilupe, who, in the year 1249, excommunicated William de Beauchamp, hereditary sheriff of this county, descended from Walter de Beauchamp, for infringing the liberties of his church; for holding assize of bread and beer at Aumeley (that is, his castle at Elmley), within the hundred of Oswaldeslowe; for taking view of frankpledge of all his manors within the said hundred; and for withdrawing the suits of his lands at Bengworth to the court of his own barony: but upon his submission, and giving bond of a thousand pound to do so no more, he absolved him, in the presence of the king and his nobles, on St. Edward's day, 1251. The same practice being carried on by his son William, the suit was renewed by Bishop Godfrey Giffard, and his father's bond put in execution against him; whereupon he also submitted, A.D. 1279, and paid cost of suit; and agreed that, for the future, the church of Worcester should enjoy all its liberties and privileges without any molestation from him.

"For the government of this hundred the bishop also chose his bailiff, and upon agreement made between him and his prior and convent, A.D. 1244, he was to be presented to them, and if within eight days they alleged reasonable cause why he should not be put into that office, the bishop was then to nominate another. This bailiff was to be responsible both to the bishop and monks for the rents, issues, and profits of the said hundred; and he was to depute two ministers, under him, to assist him in the execution of the said office." Nash's History

Alvievecherche, with their different berewicks, in the hundred of Came; Hverteberie, with its berewicks, and Vlwardelai, in the hundred of Cresselave; and Ardolvestone and Chistetone, in the hundred of Dodintret. In Warwickshire, of Hantone, Stradforde, Alvestone, Lochesham, and Spelesberie, in the hundred of Patelav; and Flechenoh, in the hundred of Mereton. The Warwickshire property appears, from the statements in the Survey, to have improved very considerably in Wolstan's time. The annual value of the possessions of the church in the different counties, in the time of Edward the Confessor, appears to have been 389*l.* 18*s.* At the formation of the Survey, it amounted to no less than 464*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*^a

Having made another offering of lands for the maintenance of the monks, upon the altar of his church, St. Wolstan, at the age of eighty-seven, died Jan. 19th, 1095. The acts of the Synod which he held at Worcester in 1092, will be hereafter given.^b

The character of Wolstan stands very high, and deservedly so, with our historians. Malmesbury says, the miracles which were wrought by him after his death were innumerable. He was canonized by Pope Innocent the IXth, on the 9th of the kalends of May, 1203.

SAMPSON, canon of Baieux, and brother to Thomas archbishop of York, succeeded Wolstan in 1096; being consecrated by Anselm at St. Paul's, according to Florence of Worcester, Simeon of Durham, and Hoveden, in the same year; but, according to Ralph de Diceto and Matthew Paris, in 1097. In this latter year, which is called the second of his pontificate, he gave to the use of the monks of Worcester the church of Heortlabiri, with the tithes, and one hide of land:^c and not long after, in the reign of William Rufus, the manor of Tibritton, or Teburtone.^d In 1100, he assisted at the dedication of the church of Gloucester. He also conferred on the prior and monks of Worcester his rich church of Wulfrunhampton, with all its territories: of which, however, after his death, Roger bishop of Salisbury dispossessed them. Nevertheless, his taking from them Westbury, and replacing there the secular canons, gave offence to the whole monastic order. He died on Sunday the 3d of the nones of May, 1112:^e and was buried in his cathedral.

Upon the death of Bishop Sampson, the see of Worcester was not immediately filled: and in the interval, before another bishop could be appointed, on the 13th of the kalends of July, 1113, the city, the cathedral, and, indeed, all the churches, with the castle, were burnt: one monk, with two servants of the monastery, and fifteen citizens, perishing in the flames.^f Such is the account given by the concurrent testimony of several historians: Malmesbury, however, in enumerating the miracles wrought by Wolstan after his death, speaks as if the fire on this occasion had destroyed the roof only of the church.^g

TEOLFUS, THEWOLDUS, THEOBALDUS, or TIDULF, was the next bishop; and, like his predecessor, had been one of the canons of Baieux. He received the tempo-

ralities of the bishoprick at Windsor Dec. 28, 1113, but was not consecrated till June 27th, 1115.^h His principal benefaction to the monks appears to have been made in 1117, when he gave his fishery at Beverey, and all that belonged thereto, with certain land in the suburbs of the city, to make a better provision for their table.ⁱ He died at his manor of Hampton, October 20th, 1123.^k

SIMON, chaplain or chancellor, or, as Dr. Thomas says, perhaps both, to Queen Adelais, received the bishoprick of Worcester from the king, in Normandy, in the beginning of the year 1125: not being ordained even priest till some months afterward. On the 11th of July following he was enthroned with great solemnity in his cathedral. William of Malmesbury speaks of his munificence.^l In 1133, the city of Worcester was again, in great part, burnt down by a casual fire, and the cathedral considerably damaged.^m

Bishop Simon made the priory of Little Malvern in Worcestershire a cell to Worcester. He restored to the monks the church of Westbury in Salso Marisco; together with Lawern, and other possessions of smaller consideration: confirming the possessions of the monastery by a deed of specification in the chapter-house.ⁿ Having sat in the see twenty-five years, he died March 20th, A.D. 1150.^o

JOHN DE PAGEHAM was consecrated bishop March 4th, 1151.^p Godwin says he gave the manor of Elme-Bishop, which Dr. Thomas thinks must have been Clive-Bishop, to his see.^q He died at Rome in the year 1158.^r

ALUREDUS, or ALFRED, chaplain to King Henry the First, was the next bishop. He was enthroned on Palm Sunday, April 13, 1158, and died in 1160. During his episcopate, King Henry the Second repeated the ceremony of his coronation at Worcester, for the third time. The words of Hoveden on this occasion are worth transcribing. "Anno gratiæ 1159. qui erat annus quintus regni regis Henrici filii Matildis imperatricis, idem rex Henricus tertio fecit se, et Alienor uxorem suam coronari, in solennitate Paschali apud Wirecestre; ubi cum ad oblationem venirent, deposuerunt coronas suas, et eas super altare obtulerunt; voventes Deo, quod nunquam in vita sua de cætero coronarentur."^s

ROGER, who succeeded Aluredus, was the son of Roger earl of Gloucester. He was elected bishop in the month of March, 1163; consecrated on the kalends of September, 1164; and enthroned on the nones of February, 1165.^t He gave to the monks of Worcester the church of Wlfard-eley. He was a great adherent of Thomas à Becket, and is frequently mentioned in the archbishop's letters: after whose death he was sent on an embassy to the pope by King Henry the Second, in 1171,^u to remove any suspicion in the pope's mind that the king either commanded or approved the murder. In 1178, he went again to Rome, to attend the Lateran Council; on his return from which, August 9th, 1179, he died at Tours, in France.^x He was succeeded by

from the time he first became a Cistercian to his death he carefully abstained from animal food.^a In 1184 he was promoted to the see of Canterbury: and accompanying King Richard to the Holy Land, died at the siege of Acon.^a

WILLIAM DE NORHALL, or NORHALLA, archdeacon of Gloucester, was elected bishop by the prior and monks of Worcester Sept. 21, 1186, and consecrated by Baldwin archbishop of Canterbury. He died, according to the Annals of Tewksbury, May 3d, 1190.^b

ROBERT, canon of Lincoln and archdeacon of Nottingham, was elected bishop in the month of July following; being the son of William seneschal of Normandy. He enjoyed this bishoprick but a short time, the Annals of St. David placing his death on June 14th, and those of Tewksbury and Winchcomb on June 30th, 1193. He was succeeded by

HENRY DE SOILI, or SOLIACO, who was enthroned Jan. 6th, 1194. He had been, first, prior of Bermundsey in Surrey, and afterwards in 1189, abbat of Glastonbury. He was removed to the see of Worcester, that Savaricus bishop of Bath and Wells might have the abbey.^c He died, according to the Annals of Tewksbury, Oct. 24th, 1195.^d

JOHN DE CONSTANCE, or CONSTANTIS, nephew to Walter archbishop of Roan, and dean of that cathedral, was consecrated bishop of Worcester on the 14th of the kalends of November, 1196, in the abbey of Stratford Langthorne, or West-Ham, near London.^e He obtained from King Richard the First, for his see, a grant of a weekly market, to be held on Thursdays, in the manor of Stratford upon Avon in Warwickshire.^f He died, according to the Annals of Tewksbury, Sept. 24th, 1198.^g He lies buried in the north aisle of the choir of Worcester cathedral.

MALGER, or MAUGERIUS, physician to King Richard the First, and archdeacon of Evreux, was the next bishop; elected in the month of August, 1199.^h Being rejected, as to consecration, by the archbishop of Canterbury, on account of illegitimacy, he appealed to the pope, and was finally consecrated at Rome June 4th, 1200.ⁱ

On the 15th of the kalends of May, 1202, the cathedral, together with the adjacent offices of the monastery and a large portion of the city of Worcester, were again burnt.^k

In 1204 Bishop Malger replaced the bones of St. Wulstan in their proper grave, whence they had been removed by his predecessor, John de Constance.^l

In 1208, after having laid the kingdom under an interdict, by command of the pope, he, with the bishops of London and Ely, fled to France, where he died, at Ponthieu, on the octaves of St. John Baptist, 1212.^m Upon his death, the monks unanimously chose

RANDULPH, prior of Worcester, to be their bishop; but, at the instance of Nicholas bishop of Tusculum, the pope's legate, he receded from the election and became prior of Evesham: ⁿ upon which

WALTER DE GREY, the king's chancellor, was elected bishop Jan. 20th, 1214: his election being confirmed by the king, upon his laying down the chancellorship, on the 5th of February following: and the interdict being taken off, after it had lasted six years and three months, he was consecrated on the 5th of October.

In 1215 he was translated to the archbishoprick of York. In 1216 he gave to the monks the church of Clive, near Evesham, for the better support of sick persons and strangers. He also recovered the lordships of Eston and Ablinton^o He died May 1st, 1255.^p

SILVESTER DE EVESHAM, who from a monk had become prior of Worcester, was the next bishop after Walter de Grey, being chosen by the convent April 3d, 1216, and consecrated July 3d, at Perugia in Italy, by Pope Innocent: soon after which the body of King John was buried before the high altar of the cathedral, between the bodies of St. Oswald and St. Wulstan. The grant, upon this occasion, of that part of the castle of Worcester which was of the king's fee to the convent, was afterwards confirmed to them by King Henry the Third in the thirteenth year of his reign.^q

In 1218, on the 7th of the ides of June, the cathedral of Worcester, which had been rebuilt, was dedicated with great solemnity; the young King Henry III.; the bishops of Winchester, Salisbury, Hereford, Chichester, London, Norwich, St. David's, Landaf, St. Asaph, and Bangor; the abbats of St. Edmund, St. Alban, Westminster, Reading, Abingdon, Ramsey, Peterborough, Gloucester, Shrewsbury, Bristol, Cirencester, Evesham, Tewksbury, Winchcombe, Pershore, Bardeney, and many other abbats and priors from different parts of the kingdom; the earls of Essex and Hereford; the barons Walter de Laci, Walter de Clifford, Hugh de Mortimer, Walter de Beauchamp, William Briwere, John Mareshall, Robert Corbet, John Strange; and an infinite number of nobility and gentry, being present. On the same day, after the dedication of the church, the body of St. Wulstan was translated to a new shrine;^r the old one having been melted down in 1216 for the payment of three hundred marks levied upon the convent by Lewis the dauphin of France.^s

Bishop Silvester de Evesham died at Ramsey on the 16th of July, and was buried at Worcester July 20th, 1218. Upon his death, the monks would have chosen for bishop a member of their own body; but, at the instigation of Guala, the pope's legate, they at last consented to the election of

WILLIAM DE BLEIS, archdeacon of Buckingham, who was enthroned on the 5th of the kalends of November, 1218. In 1220 this bishop visited the convent, and, examining its affairs strictly, gave rise to a controversy, which in the first place occasioned the deposition of the prior in 1222, but was finally settled in 1224 by a composition, which will be given hereafter.^t In the same year in which this controversy was settled, Bishop Walter de Bleis laid the foundation of a new front to his cathedral.^u From the Annals of the church of Worcester, it appears that he enlarged the revenues of his bishoprick considerably by purchases of land. He also built the chapel of the charnel-house, with its crypt. He died on the 15th of the kalends of September, 1236. On the 3d of the kalends of September in the same year the prior and monks chose

WALTER DE CANTILUPE for bishop, whose election was confirmed by the king on the 12th of the kalends of October. On the 3d of the ides of October in the following year he was enthroned. In 1238, by the pope's command, and with the assent of Bishop Walter, and Alexander bishop of Coventry and Litchfield, the limits of the two dioceses in the neighbourhood of Dudley were more accurately defined than they had been before; the town and churches being assigned to the bishoprick of Worcester, and the castle and monastery to the bishoprick of Coventry. In 1240 this bishop obtained the king's licence to hold a fair at Blockley for five days, another at Stratford for four, and a third at Alvinchurch for three days, with a weekly market there every Wednesday. In the same year he held a synod of his clergy in St. Mary's church, in which he made fifty-nine constitutions, to be observed in his diocese.^a In subsequent years we find his name frequently connected with public transactions. In 1255, when Rustand, the pope's legate, in a synod at London, demanded a large sum of the clergy, and no less than six hundred marks from the single monastery of St. Alban's, Bishop Cantilupe was one of those who led the way to an effectual opposition; although the king had himself engaged to be a partaker in the profit. Fulk bishop of London, after several days' debate, stood up and said, "before I will consent to such an intolerable oppression of the church, I will have my head cut off;" whereupon Bishop Cantilupe, seconding him, said, "before the church shall be subject to such unjust spoil, I will lose my life at the gallows." The rest, hearing this, took courage, and promised to stand by each other, following the steps of St. Thomas the Martyr, in defending unto death the liberty of the church.^b About 1263 Bishop Cantilupe began to fortify the manor house of Hartlebury, but left the work unfinished. He afterwards joined the barons against King Henry the Third, when that monarch refused to accept their terms: and at the battle of Lewes, in 1264, the bishop is stated to have given absolution to the barons, exhorting them to fight valiantly for the remission of their sins, and promising all such as might happen to be slain in so good a cause a speedy entrance into heaven.^c For his activity on this occasion he was afterwards excommunicated, with three other bishops, by the pope's legate: two years after which, falling sick, and being desirous of dying in the peace of the church, he was absolved from his excommunication by the same legate: dying at Blockley in the month of February, 1266. He was buried with great solemnity in his cathedral. The tomb supposed to be his is under the easternmost arch of the north wall in the choir.^d

NICHOLAS, archdeacon of Ely and chancellor of England, was chosen bishop on the 7th of the ides of May, 1266; and consecrated by Ottobon, the pope's legate. nals of Waverley, to have given sixty marks to the monks towards re-edifying the tower of their church, and thirty marks to the pittanciary, beside fifty marks which he had given them before.^f After the death of John bishop of Winchester, at Rome, in 1268, he was promoted to that see by Pope Clement.^g

GODFREY GIFFARD, brother to Walter Giffard archbishop of York, succeeded Bishop Nicholas about the middle of the year 1268: on the 8th of June in which year, he had a licence from the king to complete the fortification of Hartlebury begun by his predecessor Bishop Cantilupe: and he afterwards was allowed to fortify his palaces at Worcester and Wyndindon in Gloucestershire, in the same manner. The different acts of his episcopate are detailed at considerable length by Dr. Thomas.^h During his time, King Edward the First came frequently to Worcester, to pay his devotions and offerings at St. Wulstan's tomb: holding a parliament here, before his war with Lewellin prince of Wales, in 1282. The ceremony attending the king's visit to St. Wulstan's tomb in 1295, is given in a note.ⁱ

Bishop Giffard erected for himself a sumptuous tomb, during his life-time, near the shrine of St. Oswald; disturbing the bones of Bishop John de Constantiis to make room for his own. But Robert archbishop of Canterbury, offended at his thus disturbing the dead, by a mandate, dated Jan. 10th, 1302, commanded Bishop John's bones to be placed in their former grave; and ordered Bishop Giffard's grave to be made lower, on the south side of the same altar.^k

Bishop Giffard died Jan 26th, 1302.^l On the 15th of February following, the king granted his license to the monks to choose their bishop, when they proceeded to the election by the way of compromise, or compromise; giving power to Stephen de Wytton subprior, William de Grimley precentor, Gilbert de Madeley sacrist, Henry de Antioch, Nicholas Norton, John de St. German, and Richard de Bromwich, to make the choice, which unanimously fell upon

JOHN DE SANCTO GERMANO. The archbishop of Canterbury refusing the new bishop consecration, the merits of the election were carried before the pope. After a journey to Rome, John de Sancto Germano is stated to have failed in his appeal, for want of money. He was obliged to renounce his right to the bishoprick, in the Consistory; when the pope promoted

WILLIAM DE GAYNESBOROUGH to this see, a learned Franciscan, who had been Reader of Divinity in the monastery of the Minorites at Oxford, and who was then Reader of Divinity in the pope's palace.^m On his arrival in England in 1303, he was treated with some asperity by the king, who not only made him renounce the power of the pope to confer either the temporalities or spiritualities of the see upon him, but fined him in the sum of a thousand marks, to be paid whenever it should be demanded: which fine, in 1306, was remitted.^a Having received the temporalities of his see from the king at Windsor, he wrote to the prior and convent to announce his intention of being with them: when they are stated to have sent him twenty pounds to defray the expences of his journey down.^b He was enthroned on the 5th of the ides of June.^c In 1307, he was sent by King Edward the First to France, to treat of a marriage between Prince Edward, the king's son, and Isabella, the daughter of King Philip: which having accomplished, he died before he could return, at Beauvais in Picardy, on the 15th of the kalends of October.^d

WALTER REYNOLD, or REGINALD, the next bishop, was also elected by way of compromise; the convent delegating the power of nomination to their prior, John de Wyke, and he choosing the person recommended by King Edward II., who had just ascended the throne. He was elected Nov. 13th, 1307. He is said to have been a baker's son of Windsor, chaplain to King Edward I., and tutor to King Edward II. The pope receiving an application from the king to confirm the election, made a pretence to annul all that had passed, but at the same time preferred Reynold himself to the bishoprick, in apparent compliance with the king's wish. His apostolical mandate to the prior and convent to receive their new pastor was published in the cathedral on the 18th of the kalends of May, 1308.^e In 1313 this bishop appropriated to the monks of his convent the church of Doderhull, otherwise called the Hill Church in Wich, for the support of hospitality.^f He was translated in the same year to the archbishoprick of Canterbury.^g He died at his manor-house of Mortlake in Surrey, on the day of St. Edmund the Archbishop, A.D. 1327.^h

WALTER DE MAYDENSTON succeeded to the bishoprick of Worcester by papal provision. He had been engaged as one of the king's agents at the pope's court to solicit for the translation of Bishop Reynold to the see of Canterbury, and the rejection of Thomas Cobham, on whom the choice of the monks of that place had fallen. Cobham refusing to accept the bishoprick of Worcester on this occasion, Maydenston obtained it for himself, and was consecrated by the pope before the ides of October, 1313.ⁱ Dr. Thomas is minute upon the actions of his life, as they are to be found in his Register, endeavouring to vindicate him from the harsh character bestowed upon him by Adam de Murymuth. His death was made known to the prior and convent of Worcester

April 7th, 1317. Soon after which the king not only issued his congé d'elire, but wrote letters to the pope in favour of

THOMAS COBHAM, or DE COBHAM, a man of high reputation for learning, who, as has just been mentioned, was in election in 1313 for the archbishoprick of Canterbury. He was consecrated bishop of Worcester at Avignon, June 11th, 1317: having long before held numerous smaller preferments.^k In 1320, he was appointed, with other nobles, to treat of a peace with the Scots. To his credit it must be recorded, that he was the first person who projected the furnishing of the university of Oxford with a Public Library.^l He died Aug. 27th, 1327.^m Dr. Thomas has enumerated the bequests of his Will to the church of Worcester and his successor: they are transcribed in the note below.ⁿ He had before vaulted the roof of the north aisle of the nave of his cathedral.

Upon the death of Bishop Cobham, with leave from the king, the monks chose their prior

WOLSTAN DE BRANSFORD, or BRAUNSFORD, to be their bishop; whose election was confirmed by the king Sept. 8th, 1327:° but the pope having made a reservation of this bishoprick to himself, gave it, by his bull, dated Sept. 28th in the same year, to

ADAM DE ORLETON. To this choice the king demurred for a considerable time, but finally restored the temporalities the 2d of March following. Adam de Orleton had obtained the bishoprick of Hereford in 1317, by a similar authority from the pope, although opposed by the king. In the acts of administration recorded in his register, there is little that concerns the convent of Worcester. He afterwards became infamous from the part which he took in the deposition and murder of King Edward the Second. He was a violent adherent of Isabella and Mortimer; he demanded from the king, when prisoner at Hereford, his great seal; and finally communicated that memorable line to the king's keepers,

“Edwardum occidere nolite timere bonum est.”

By another application to the pope, after the king's accession, in 1333, he obtained a translation to the see of Winchester. This being done without the king's knowledge, was much resented, and the bishop caused to be publicly libelled against in the pope's court, as a man stained with many crimes, and unworthy of being promoted to so high a dignity. The charges on this occasion, together with the answers, are preserved at length in the Decem Scriptores, under the title of “Responsiones Adæ quondam Wigorniensis episcopi nunc Wyn-toniensis electi confirmati, ad Appellationem contra ipsum propositam anno Domini MCCCXXXIV.”^p Having,

Lond. 1810. vol. ii. p. 458, having stated, “that the first public library in Oxford is said to have been established in Durham (now Trinity) college, in the time of Edward the Third;” adds, “The next we read of was COBHAM's library, which would have been the first, had he lived to execute his purpose. About the year 1320, Thomas Cobham, bishop of Worcester, began to make some preparations for a library over the old Congregation-house, in the north church-yard of St. Mary's: but dying soon after, little progress was made in the work until 1367, when his books were deposited in it, and the scholars permitted to consult them on certain conditions. But the property of the site being contended between the University and Oriel college, the dispute was not finally determined until 1409, when the room was fitted up with desks, windows, &c. by the benefactions of Henry IV. his four sons, Henry, Thomas, John, and Humphrey; Thomas Arundel, archbishop of Canterbury; Philip Repindon, bishop of Lincoln; Edmund earl of March; and Richard Courtney, chancellor of the University, in whose time it was completed, about the year 1411. This appears to have been [really] the first PUBLIC LIBRARY, and continued in use until 1480, when the books were added to Duke Humphrey's collection.” Compare also Wood, *Hist. & Antiq. by craft, again obtained the king's favour, he got quiet possession of the bishoprick of Winchester: being the third English bishop who was translated from a second to a third bishoprick.^a Bishop Tanner mentions a tract of his, formerly existing in the Cotton library of manuscripts, Vitell. E. iv. 9. "Quædam ad Johannem P. de rebus quibusdam et controversiis ad ecclesiam suam spectantibus." The volume containing it was lost, with many others, in the fire of 1731. Adam de Orleton died July 18th, 1345.^b

SIMON DE MONTAGU, or MONTACUTE, to whom the king had thought to have given the bishoprick of Winchester, was, on the promotion of Adam de Orleton to that see, preferred by the pope to the bishoprick of Worcester, Dec. 3d, 1333.^c In 1336, this bishop restored to the prior and convent of Worcester the manor of Croule, which had long before been taken from them, and was then held of the bishop in capite; for which they made him partaker of all their prayers, and ordered that the day of his death should be inserted in their Martyrology, and his anniversary kept with Mass and Chant in their choir.^d In the next year, 1337, Bishop Montagu was translated to the see of Ely.^e

THOMAS HEMENHALE, or EMENHALE, a monk of Norwich, was preferred by the pope (on Montagu's translation) to the bishoprick of Worcester. The time of his episcopate was short. He died at his castle of Hartlebury, on St. Thomas's day, Dec. 21, 1338; and was buried in his cathedral, in Jesus chapel. His stone coffin has been since removed to Bishops chapel. As soon as his death was notified to the king, and the convent had leave to proceed to a fresh election, they once more chose

WOLSTAN DE BRANSFORD, their prior, to be the successor to the bishoprick. His election was confirmed by the vicar-general of the archbishop of Canterbury, then in remote parts, on the 13th of the kalends of April, 1339; and he was consecrated the next day. A few months afterward, being summoned to parliament, he wrote to the king to excuse his attendance, on account of his infirmities; when, by a brief dated June 21st, 1340, the king excused him from coming to parliament for life, on condition of his celebrating personally, as long as he was able, the anniversary of King Edward II. in the cathedral of Gloucester. He died at Hartlebury castle, Aug. 6th, 1349.^f

Upon the death of Bishop Wolstan, the monks chose

JOHN DE EVESHAM, their prior, to be bishop: but by virtue of the pope's bull, dated Sept. 4th, 1349,

JOHN DE THORESBY was removed hither from the bishoprick of St. David's; and the spiritualities committed to him, by the archbishop of Canterbury, January the 11th following.^g In 1350, he was made lord chancellor: and, in 1352, promoted to the archbishoprick of York. He was succeeded at Worcester by

REGINALD BRIAN, who had before been his successor in the see of St. David's: the provisory bull of whose appointment was dated at Avignon on the 11th of the kalends of November, 1352. In 1361, he was translated by Pope Innocent VI. to the see of Ely: but died at Alvechirche, Dec. 1st that year, before he had accepted of the translation.^h

JOHN BARNET succeeded by virtue of the pope's provisory bull, made at the same time that Bishop Brian was translated to Ely. In 1362, he became treasurer of England. In the next year he was translated to the bishoprick of Bath and Wells; and thence, in 1366, to Ely.

WILLIAM WITLESEY was translated by the pope's bull from Rochester to the see of Worcester, March 6th, 1364. He had been educated in the university of Cambridge, where he became Master of Peter House college in 1349. On October 11th, 1368, he was translated to the archbishoprick of Canterbury.ⁱ He died in 1374.^k

WILLIAM LYNNE, or DE LENNA, was translated from Chichester to the see of Worcester, by Pope Urban the Fifth, on the same day that Bishop Witlesey was translated to the see of Canterbury. He received the spiritualities of his see from the archbishop May 31st, 1369.^l He died of an apoplectic fit November the 18th, 1373, as he was mounting his horse to go to the parliament.

The monks, with the king's licence, proceeded to the choice of their prior WALTER LEIGH, to whose election the king also gave his consent: but Pope Gregory the Second, by his bull dated on the 2d of the ides of September, 1375, constituted

HENRY DE WAKEFIELD, or WAKEFELD, bishop. He was consecrated in the bishop of Ely's chapel at Hatfield on the 28th of October following; and introned in his cathedral March 30th, 1376. In 1377, he became high treasurer of England. In 1380, he finished his addition of two arches to the west end of the nave of his cathedral, with a stately window; and, in 1386, added the north porch. This bishop had a controversy with his Prior, John Green, respecting the use of the mitre, ring, gloves, pastoral-staff, and other episcopal ornaments: the settlement of which will be found among the instruments appended to this account.^m Bishop Wakefield died at Blokley, March 11th, 1395. He was buried near the stone pulpit, at the west end of the nave of the cathedral: ⁿ the flat stone which marked his grave, between the two lowermost arches of the middle aisle, is now gone.

Walsingham informs us,^o that the monks made choice of JOHN GRENE, their prior, as the successor to Wakefield, but in vain; as, on the 4th of the nones of June, 1395,

TYDEMAN DE WINCHCOMB was translated hither from the see of Landaff by the pope's provisory bull. Walsingham says he was the king's physician, and a Cistercian: but the continuator of the Polychronicon speaks of him as a monk of Hayles abbey.^p He died June 13th, 1401. He appears to have been a firm adherent to King Richard II. He was buried in his cathedral. He was the last prelate interred in this church before Queen Elizabeth's reign.^q

RICHARD CLIFFORD, who succeeded Winchcomb, was both elected by the monks and appointed by the pope's provisory bull. He had previously been appointed in the same manner to the bishoprick of Bath and Wells, but had been refused the restoration of the temporalities of that diocese by the king. He was translated from that see to Worcester, by the bull just mentioned, dated at St. Peter's in Rome, the 14th of the kalends of September, 1401. In 1402, he was sent to Germany, to treat of a marriage between the emperor's son and the Lady Blanch, the king's daughter. Before his appointment to the bishoprick of Bath and Wells, he had been chaplain to King Richard the Second, archdeacon of Canterbury, and, Mr. Green says, dean of York.^r of Landaff, was finally translated to Worcester by the pope's bull July 4th, 1407. The acts of his administration, as they relate either to the cathedral or the convent, were few. He repaired the manor houses of the bishoprick; and died at Hembury in Salso Marisco March 2d, 1418. He was buried in the church of the Carmelite friars at Oxford, to whom he had belonged.^a

PHILIP MORGAN, LL.D., was the next bishop: elected by the convent, and appointed by the pope's provisory bull dated June 19th, 1419. He was translated on the 3d of the kalends of March, 1425, to the see of Ely.

THOMAS POLTON was translated from Chichester to Worcester by the pope's bull at the time his predecessor was removed to Ely. He had before been translated from Hereford to Chichester. While prebend of Salisbury, in 1418, he assisted at the Council of Constance: and in 1432 he went to the Council of Basil, where he died August 23d, 1433.^b The king having sent his congé d'elire to the convent, on November the 29th following the monks assembled to the number of forty-five in their chapter-house, when they unanimously chose for bishop, "per viam Spiritus Sancti."

THOMAS BOURCHIER, son of William earl of Ewe, in Normandy, by Ann the daughter of Thomas of Woodstock, duke of Gloucester; a young man under the age which the canons required for episcopal election. Pope Eugenius had conferred the see by his provisory bull on Thomas Brown, dean of Salisbury, but afterwards, at the king's request, withdrew his nomination. Bishop Bouchier was not consecrated till May 15th, 1435. In 1443 he was translated to Ely; and thence to the archbishoprick of Canterbury.^c

JOHN CARPENTER, D.D., was promoted to the see of Worcester by a Bull from Pope Eugenius IV. on the same day that Bishop Bouchier was translated to the see of Ely, Dec. 20th, 1443. He had been a fellow, and was afterwards provost, of Oriel College Oxford, and in 1437 and 1438 was chancellor of the university. He was installed in his cathedral Dec. 24th, 1444. He built a gate to the episcopal palace at Hartlebury, which was demolished in the civil wars; and in 1461 erected a library in the chancel house belonging to his cathedral. He died at his palace at Northwyke in 1476.^d

JOHN ALCOCK, bishop of Rochester, was translated to this see September 18th, 1476;^e receiving from the king the temporalities on the 25th of the same month.^f He was, first, dean of St. Stephen's chapel Westminster, and, in 1462, master of the rolls. He was a great benefactor to the abbey of Pershore, and founded a chapel on the south side of the church of the Holy Trinity at Kingston upon Hull. He was translated from Worcester to the see of Ely about the end of the year 1486;^g and was afterwards lord chancellor of England.

Alexander Barclay is prolix in his Eclogues in praise of Bishop Alcock, of whose learning much will be found in Bishop Tanner.^h John Rosse, the historian, informs us that in 1483 he was the tutor to Prince Edward, afterwards King Edward V., but that he was removed and imprisoned by King Richard the Third.ⁱ Warton, in the History of English Poetry, has given an interesting account of his publications.^k He died, according to Wharton, Oct. 1st. 1500.^l

ROBERT MORTON, archdeacon of York, Gloucester, and Winchester, and nephew to Cardinal Morton, was preferred to the bishoprick of Worcester at the same time that Bishop Alcock was removed by the pope's pro-

visory bull to the see of Ely, on the 17th of the kalends of November, 1486. He had been master of the rolls in the time of King Edward the Fourth, and in 1497, probably fearing some attack as an old servant of the crown, obtained a charter of pardon from King Henry VII.: a few months after which he died. He was buried in the nave of St. Paul's church in London.^m

JOHN GIGLIS, or DE LILIIS, LL.D., a Luccese, collector of the apostolic chamber in England,ⁿ and canon of Wells, was appointed bishop by the pope's provisory bull Aug. 30th, 1497. He died Aug. 25th, 1498,^o and was buried in the English College at Rome.^p

SILVESTER GIGLIS, nephew to the preceding bishop, and likewise collector of the apostolic chamber in England, was appointed bishop by a provisory bull Dec. 24th, 1498. He was installed by proxy April 6th, 1499. He assisted at the Lateran Council in 1512: and died in 1521 at Rome.^q There is, or was, a monument to his memory in St. Michael's church at Lucca.^r

JULIUS DE MEDICIS, the nephew of Pope Leo X., who, from a knight of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, had been made a cardinal, and archbishop of Florence, received this bishoprick in commendam by a provisory bull, dated July 31st, 1521. On the death of Leo the Tenth, Pope Adrian succeeding, he resigned it, through fear of jealousy, on the 6th of the kalends of October, 1522; on which day Pope Adrian conferred the see on

JEROME DE GHINUCCHI, or DE NUGUTIIS. This prelate was extremely useful to King Henry the Eighth in procuring the judgments of the Spanish and Italian divines against the lawfulness of his marriage with Queen Catharine: and at the request of the English and French courts was afterwards made a cardinal by Pope Clement the Sixth in 1533. Two years after which he fell a sacrifice to the times, being deposed from his bishoprick by act of parliament for being a foreigner and non-resident.^s

HUGH LATIMER, the son of a husbandman of Thurcaston in Leicestershire, was the next bishop: one of the first reformers of the church of England. He had been long famed in Cambridge as a preacher; and having taken a lead in promoting the establishment of King Henry the Eighth's supremacy, Cromwell and Anne Boleyn, after his introduction at court, had little trouble in recommending him to a bishoprick. He received the temporalities of the bishoprick of Worcester from the king October the 4th, 1535. The passing of the act of the Six Articles, however, in 1539, occasioned Latimer to resign his bishoprick, and retire to a sequestered life. Upon the re-introduction of popery after the death of King Edward the Sixth, the prohibition of all preaching throughout the kingdom was one of the first steps taken by the court: and Latimer, who was one of the most favourite preachers, was cited before the council to give an account of his doctrines. He was imprisoned in the Tower of London, and afterwards conveyed to Oxford; where, having undergone the mock ceremony of a public dispute against the Papists, sentence was passed upon him, and he and Ridley, bishop of London, were burnt there, on a spot of ground on the north side of Baliol College, Oct. 16th, 1555.

JOHN BELL, LL.D., who had been vicar-general of the diocese, under the bishops Giglis, Julius de Medicis, and Ghinucii, was elected bishop by the prior and convent of Worcester on Latimer's resignation; the king confirming the election on the 2d, and delivering up the temporalities on the 4th of August, 1539. He, also, had been one of the counsellors of King Henry the Eighth, and had been of service in defending the divorce from Queen Katherine. From what cause is unknown, but he resigned the bishoprick of Worcester Nov. 17th, 1543. He afterwards lived retired at Clerkenwell in the suburbs of London, where he died August 11th, 1556.

During the time of Bishop Bell, Henry Holbech the prior, with his monks, had surrendered the convent of Worcester and its appurtenances to the king, Jan. 18th, 1540: the prior changing his title, and becoming the first dean of the cathedral.

NICHOLAS HEATH, bishop of Rochester, whom the king had recommended as the successor to Bishop Bell, was, in course, chosen by the dean and chapter December the 22d, 1543; the king delivering to him the temporalities on the 22d of March following. In 1549-50, having incurred the displeasure of King Edward the Sixth by refusing to subscribe the "Book for the making of Bishops and Priests," he was deprived by the royal authority; not by any court consisting of churchmen, but by secular delegates, of whom three were civilians and three common lawyers.^a Upon his deprivation, the king, by an act of parliament passed in 1546 which made the congé d'elire unnecessary, issued his letters patent for the election of JOHN HOOPER, bishop of Gloucester to this see, dated May 20th, 1552; an account of whom has been already given in the history of Gloucester monastery.^b The see of Gloucester was converted at the same time into an archdeaconry, as it had been formerly, dependent on Worcester. On the 8th of December, however, the same year, a new collation took place; the two sees were united into one; and the bishop was to be called the bishop of Gloucester and Worcester: to live one year in Worcestershire and the next in Gloucestershire. Bishop Hooper was deprived of his bishoprick March 18th, 1554; and, after a lingering persecution, was burnt at Gloucester as a heretic Feb. 9th, 1555.

NICHOLAS HEATH was again restored to the single bishoprick of Worcester by Queen Mary in the month of July, 1554. He was afterwards president of Wales, archbishop of York, and lord chancellor. He was succeeded by RICHARD PATES in 1555; who was not appointed till after Hooper had been burnt; the hope being entertained that he might recant and be restored to the bishoprick. Bishop Pates sate till the accession of Queen Elizabeth to the crown; when he was imprisoned for a short time, but afterwards retired abroad, and died at Lovain.

EDWIN SANDYS was consecrated bishop of Worcester December 21st, 1559; having the temporalities of the see restored to him in the month of March following: the queen, however, taking from them the manors of Bredon, Bishops Wyke, Henbury, Knightwyke, and Bishops Cleve, recompensing the see for them in the fourth year of her reign with the impropriations of Bishampton, Church Lench, and Elmley, and the tenths of the bishoprick and archdeaconry of Worcester.^c Bishop Sandys was translated to the see of London in 1570; and afterwards to the archbishoprick of York. The queen had intended Dr. James Calfhill, a canon of Christ-Church Oxford, to be Bishop Sandys's successor at Worcester, and had given him the nomination to the see, but he died in the month of August following, before he could be consecrated.

NICHOLAS BULLINGHAM, the next bishop of Worcester, was translated from the see of Lincoln in the month of January 1571. He died April 17th, 1576,

JOHN WHITGIFT, D.D., was nominated to this see March 24th, 1576; the temporalities being delivered to him May 10th following. He was translated to the see of Canterbury September 24th, 1583.

EDMUND FREAKE, D.D., was the next bishop: translated from the see of Norwich. He was nominated by the queen to Worcester October 26th, and elected by the chapter November the 2d, 1584. He had previously held the bishoprick of Rochester. He died in the month of April, 1590: when the see of Worcester remained vacant till the 24th of January, 1592-3:

RICHARD FLETCHER, D.D., bishop of Bristol, being elected to it on that day. Bishop Fletcher was educated at Cambridge. In 1583 he had been made dean of Peterborough; and in that capacity, in 1587, attended the Queen of Scots at her execution in the castle of Fotheringay. In 1595 he was translated to the bishoprick of London, where he died suddenly in 1596. The see of Worcester, after Fletcher's translation, again remained vacant for a time, till, on the 20th of April, 1596, THOMAS BILSON, D.D., was elected. He was translated May 13th, 1597, to the see of Winchester.

GERVASE BABINGTON, D.D., bishop of Exeter, was nominated to this bishoprick by the queen August 30th, elected September 15th, and confirmed October the 4th, 1597.^d He is said to have assisted the countess of Pembroke in her translation of the Psalms. He died at Worcester May 17th, 1610.^e

HENRY PARRY, D.D., was elected to this see from the bishoprick of Gloucester July 13th, and confirmed Oct. 4th, 1610.^f He had been dean of Chester. He died at Worcester of a palsy Dec. 12th, 1616;^g and was buried in what is called Bishop's Chapel, in his cathedral. He was a benefactor to the University of Oxford.^h

JOHN THORNBOROUGH, D.D., succeeded to the bishoprick of Worcester Jan. 25th, and was confirmed Feb. 17th, 1617.ⁱ In 1593 he was promoted to the see of Limerick in Ireland; and, in 1603, to the bishoprick of Bristol, with leave to hold the deanery of York in commendam. He was an adept in chemistry, and wrote upon the philosopher's stone. He died at the castle of Hartlebury July 9th, 1641; and was buried in his cathedral, near a monument which he had prepared for himself fourteen years before.^k

JOHN PRIDEAUX, D.D., was consecrated Dec. 19th, 1641, about a month before the bishops lost their seats in parliament. He died July 29th, 1650; when the see lay vacant till the Restoration of King Charles II.^l The bishoprick is said to have been designed for Dr. Hammond; but he dying before the king's return, it was conferred on

GEORGE MORLEY, D.D., who was elected on the 9th, and confirmed on the 23d of October, 1660;^m a man distinguished by his unshaken loyalty and attachment to King Charles I. He was translated to the see of Winchester in 1662. On the 23d of May in which year

JOHN GAUDEN, D.D., was translated from the see of Exeter to Worcester;ⁿ the supposed assistant of King Charles I. in the composition of the ΕΙΚΩΝ ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΗ. He held this see but four months; dying at the age of fifty-seven, Sept. 20th, 1662. He lies buried in the cathedral, in the middle aisle of our Lady Chapel.

JOHN EARLE, D.D., was consecrated bishop of Worcester Nov. 30th, 1662. He was a native of York; and became a fellow of Merton College Oxford in 1620. He was first patronized by Philip earl of Pembroke, and was afterwards in favour with King Charles I. In 1643 he became chancellor of the cathedral of Salisbury.

After the battle of Worcester, he followed the fortunes of King Charles the Second. On Sept. 28th, 1663, he was translated to the bishoprick of Salisbury.^a

ROBERT SKINNER, D.D., was translated from Oxford to the see of Worcester on Bishop Earle's death. He was first bishop of Bristol, in 1636; whence he was translated to Oxford in 1641. He died June 14th, 1670.^b

WALTER BLANDFORD, D.D., was also translated from the see of Oxford to Worcester June 14th, 1671.^c He had been warden of Wadham college Oxford, and chaplain to Lord Clarendon. He died at Worcester July 9th, 1675: and lies buried in the Lady chapel.

JAMES FLEETWOOD, D.D., provost of King's college Cambridge, was elected bishop of Worcester July 26th, and consecrated August 29th, 1675. While chaplain to one of the king's regiments, at the battle of Edgehill, he is said to have carried off the young princes to a place of safety. This appears to have been the first cause of his promotion. He died July 17th, 1683, at the age of eighty-one. He was buried in the same chapel with his predecessor.

WILLIAM THOMAS, D.D., was translated from the bishoprick of St. David's to Worcester; and confirmed in the latter Aug. 27th, 1683. He had previously held the deanery of the cathedral with St. David's. On refusing the oaths to King William, he was suspended; but died June 25th, 1689, before the deprivation which must otherwise have ensued. He lies buried in the nave of the church, near the cloister door.

EDWARD STILLINGFLEET, D.D., was the next bishop: consecrated Oct. 13th, 1689. He had been made dean of St. Paul's in 1678. He died March 27th, 1699: and was buried at Worcester, in the Lady chapel.

WILLIAM LLOYD, D.D., was translated to Worcester from the bishoprick of Litchfield and Coventry, in 1699. He had been made bishop of St. Asaph in 1680; and was one of the prelates committed to the Tower in 1688, by King James the Second, who were afterwards tried in Westminster-hall, and discharged. He was translated from St. Asaph to Litchfield and Coventry, in 1692. He died at Hartlebury Aug. 30th, 1717, at the age of ninety. He was buried in the church of Fladbury, of which his only son was rector.^d

JOHN HOUGH, the son of a citizen of London, was the next bishop. He was born in Middlesex April 12th, 1651, and was afterwards a fellow and president of Magdalen college Oxford; whence, in 1687, he was expelled by the commissioners of King James II. but was restored the following year. Soon after the Revolution, in April, 1690, Dr. Hough was nominated bishop of Oxford, with a licence to hold the headship of Magdalen college in commendam, which he did till he succeeded Dr. William Lloyd in the bishoprick of Litchfield and Coventry, in 1699: whom he also succeeded here in 1717. He died May 8th, 1743, in the ninety-third year of his age. He was buried in the north transept of the great cross-aisle of his cathedral.^e

ISAAC MADOX, D.D., was translated from St. Asaph to the see of Worcester in the month of November, 1743. He died at Hartlebury Sept. 27th, 1759; and was buried in the south transept of the great cross-aisle of his cathedral.

JAMES JOHNSON, D.D., was translated from the see of Gloucester to Worcester Nov. 9th, 1759. In 1748, he attended King George II. to Hanover: and again, in 1752. In this latter year he received his promotion to the see of Gloucester. Mr. Green says, he greatly improved and embellished the episcopal house at Hartlebury, and made some valuable additions to that of Worcester, at an expence exceeding 5000*l*. He also added to the patronage of his successors the rectory of Ricards

Castle, in the diocese of Hereford. He died at Bath, in consequence of a fall from his horse, in 1774; and was buried with his ancestors, at Laycock in Wiltshire. A monument, however, was erected to his memory in Worcester cathedral, by his sister.^f

BROWNLOW NORTH, LL.D., half-brother to the late earl of Guildford, was translated from the see of Litchfield and Coventry to Worcester December 30th, 1774: whence, in 1781, he was promoted to the see of Winchester.

RICHARD HURD, D.D., who had succeeded Dr. North in the see of Litchfield and Coventry, also succeeded him at Worcester, to which he was translated June 9th, 1781. His name is well known as the author of numerous publications; and more especially as the editor of the works of Bishop Warburton. He died May 28th, 1808.

FOLLIOT HERBERT WALKER, D.D., was translated to the see of Worcester from Hereford June 14th, 1808. He became bishop of Bristol in 1797; whence he was translated to the bishoprick of Hereford. He is the present bishop of Worcester, Jan. 26th, 1817.

Leland, in his Itinerary, enumerates the "Placis belongynge to the Bysshope of Wurcestar," in the time of King Henry the Eighth. They were,

1. "The Palace at Worcester.
2. "Herthilbery Castle, seven myles from Worcester, four myles to Ombresley on Severn longynge to Eovesham, and three to Herthilberi, and four to Kiderminster.
3. "Alechirch, two miles from Bordesley Abbey. Latimer repayred it.
4. "Northwike in dominio de Claynes, two miles from Worcester. This Northewike was one John of Wodds in hominum memoria, and bought of a Bishop for lake of a Howse in Claynes. It is motid and had a Parke.
5. "Whityngedon in Coteshold, in ruine.
6. "Hillyngdon the paroch church to Uxbridge, fifteen myles from London.
7. "Strond Place at London."^g

PRIORS OF WORCESTER.

WYNSIN, OR WYNSIUS, was appointed Prior in 971. He had been originally one of the secular canons of the church under the original foundation, and also priest of the adjacent parish church of St. Helen. By the persuasion of Bishop Oswald he became a monk in the year 969, when he was sent to the monastery of Ramsey for three years, to be instructed in monastic discipline. From Heming's Chartulary it appears he was occasionally distinguished by four several names, viz. of Prior, Præpositus, Primus, and Decanus or Dean. He died before the year 992.^h

ÆTHELSTAN, the next prior, succeeded before Oswald's death, which happened in the year just mentioned.ⁱ

ÆTHELSINUS, his successor, died on the 7th of July; the year not named.

ÆTHELSINUS II. the next prior, died on the 4th of December. The two priors of this name occur in the Worcester Obituary transcribed by Josceline, archbishop Parker's secretary. The latter Æthelsinus certainly lived in the time of King Æthelred, of whom he purchased for his church the town of Swinford in Staffordshire, for the sum of two hundred pounds.^k

GODWIN occurs in the Register of Worcester, from which Laurence Noell has given many extracts in his Collectanea, now preserved in the Cotton manuscript Vespasian A. v.^l

ÆTHELWIN, or AGELWIN, is another prior, the month of whose death only, April 26th, occurs in the Obituary already quoted.

ST. WULSTAN was promoted in the place of Æthelwin, as Florentius Wigornensis testifies; and therefore after the year 1046. Brompton and Ralph of Chester say he was made prior in the year 1058, confounding this Wulstan with another Wulstan, monk of Worcester, who, the Annals of Worcester, Florentius, and the Chronicle of Gloucester say, was that year made abbat of Glastonbury by Aldred. In the same manner Ingulphus, by mistake, writes, that this Wulstan being prior of Worcester was made abbat of Glastonbury, and was thence promoted to be bishop of Worcester. Wulstan was certainly made prior before the year 1058; for the ancient Register of the Church of Worcester informs us that Duke Leofric and his wife Godiva, Aldred being then bishop, restored Blackwell to the church, while St. Wulstan was prior: but Leofric died August 31st, 1057. Dr. Hopkins, canon of Worcester, informed Wharton that he had somewhere read that Wulstan was made prior in the year 1050. He was promoted to the bishoprick of Worcester in 1062.^a

ÆLFSTAN, brother to Wulstan, upon his promotion to the bishoprick, succeeded him, in the year 1062, as prior.^b He improved the revenues of the monastery by the purchase of the manors of Lenc, Dunham-stede, and Peceslea.^c After him,

ÆGELRED, who had been sub-prior and chanter in the church of Canterbury, was by St. Wulstan preferred to the priorship.^d Willis says his successor was

THOMAS prior of Westbiri, who occurs as witness to a grant of Bishop Wulstan, wherein he gave to the church of Worcester fifteen hides in Alfestan; and again to a grant made of Westbiri convent to the church, A.D. 1093. He died Oct. 4th, A.D. 1113.^e

NICHOLAS, constituted prior by Bishop Theobald, died June 24th, 1124.

GUARINUS, or WARIN, occurs prior of Worcester in a charter of King Henry I. dated in 1130. William of Malmesbury dedicated to him the Life of St. Wulstan, written by himself about the year 1140; in which year, as appears from a deed in another part of the Monasticon,^f Guarin still presided.^g

RALPH, prior of Worcester, died, according to the Annals of Winchcomb, in 1143.^h

DAVID was his successor, who was deposed in 1145.ⁱ

OSBERTUS, or OSBERN, succeeded: but died in 1146.^k

RALPH DE BEDEFORD was the next prior. He successively elected, and presented to the archbishop to be consecrated, five bishops, viz. John de Pageham in 1150, Alured, or Alfred, in 1158, Roger in 1163, Baldwin in 1180, and William de Norhale in 1186. He died in 1189.^l

SENATUS succeeded the same year; being Precentor when he was chosen prior. He was a man of considerable learning, and a deep theologian. Bishop Tanner enumerates his works, and gives references to the different libraries in which they may still be found in manuscript. Malmesbury's Life of St. Wulstan appears to have been sometimes wrongly ascribed to him.^m His Letters (to Bishop Roger) are noticed among the works which Leland saw in the library of Worcester cathedral.ⁿ His Exposition on the Canon of the Mass was his most valued performance. Senatus voluntarily resigned the priorship on the 20th of November, 1196; and died in 1207.^o

PETER, a monk of Worcester, succeeded to the priorship on Senatus's resignation.^p He was deposed Dec. 24th, 1203; and died in 1204.^q

RANDULPH, or RALPH DE EVESHAM, so named from the place of his birth, succeeded to the priorship on the day of Peter's deposition, in 1203. He was chosen bishop of Worcester Dec. 2d, 1213, but was obliged by Nicholas the pope's legate to exchange the bishoprick for the abbey of Evesham, to which he was elected the 22d of January, 1214. He died December 17th, 1229. The priory was vacant almost a whole year.^r

SILVESTER DE EVESHAM was chosen prior January 21st, 1215. He succeeded to the bishoprick April 3d, 1216.^s

SIMON, chamberlain of the monastery, succeeded in the month of October, 1216. Being deposed by Bishop William de Bleis in 1222, he appealed to the pope; but died while the controversy was depending, A.D. 1223.^t

WILLIAM NORMAN, prior of Malvern, upon the deposition of Simon, was appointed prior by the bishop, without the consent of the convent. After two years' debate, the matter was referred to arbitration; pursuant to which, William resigned his right on the 3d of October, 1224, having the manor of Clive assigned to him.^u

WILLIAM DE BEDEFORD, prior of Tynemouth, was by the bishop placed over the monks of Worcester October 4th, 1224. He died October 29th, 1242. Walsingham mentions a WILLIAM Prior of Worcester, who had been a monk of St. Alban's, whom Wharton considers as the same person, Tynemouth being a cell to that monastery.^x He built, in 1225, a new house, with offices adjacent, for the priors.^y

RICHARD DE GUNDICOTE, or, as he is called by Willis, CAUDICOTE, was nominated prior by the bishop Nov. 17th, 1242, and installed on the 19th of the same month. He died Sept. 29th, 1252.^z

THOMAS, sub-prior of the monastery, succeeded. He was installed Nov. 1st, 1252. He died toward the latter end of the year 1260.^a

RICHARD DE DUMBLETON, cellarer of the monastery, was installed Dec. 24th, 1260. He died in 1272. In his time, the chapter of Worcester compounded with Boniface archbishop of Canterbury concerning the exercise of the episcopal jurisdiction, when the see of Worcester was vacant, after this manner: that upon every vacancy the prior should acquaint the archbishop with the same, and the archbishop, without any delay, appoint the prior his official during the vacation: that the prior should be accountable to the archbishop for his officialship, and reserving one third to himself, pay to the archbishop the other two parts of the profits. This composition was made July 28th, 1268.^b

WILLIAM DE CIRENCESTRE, sacrist of the monastery, succeeded Dumbleton; being the person selected by the bishop, December 21st, 1272, from the seven presented to him by the monks, pursuant to the composition of 1224.^c

RICHARD DE FECKEHAM, or FECKENHAM, chamberlain of the monastery, was nominated by the bishop, in the same manner with his predecessor, Sept. 25th, 1274. He died December 29th, 1286.^d

PHILIP DE AUBIN, alias DE WORCESTER, from being sub-prior was preferred to be prior by the bishop, Jan. 6th, 1287: being installed on the 19th of the same month. He died July 7th, 1296. After his death, the chapter chose seven monks on the 11th of July; of whom, nominated by the bishop two days after. He resigned (compulsorily as Wharton supposes), July 13th, 1301.^a

JOHN DE LA WYKE, also sub-prior of the monastery, was nominated prior by the bishop July 18th, 1301; being installed on the 20th of the same month. He died Oct. 5th, 1317.^b

WOLSTAN DE BRAUNSFORD was nominated by the bishop Nov. 21st, 1317, and was afterwards himself chosen bishop of Worcester.^c While prior, A.D. 1320, he built the great hall adjoining to the prior's house, now the deanery, called Gueston or Guesten Hall; where the monks entertained their guests, and kept a monthly court called Gueston-Hall Court, where actions under 40s. were sued for. This court continued almost to the time of the civil wars. Prior Wolstan de Braunsford is also said to have built the bridge over Teme at Braunsford, the place of his nativity, two miles from Worcester.^d

SIMON LE BOTILER was nominated by the bishop, in the customary manner, April 12th, 1339; but dying the same year,

SIMON CROMPE was nominated November the 6th. He died April 10th, 1340.^e

JOHN DE EVESHAM was made prior, in the usual manner, by the bishop, April 22d, 1340. He obtained a bull from Pope Clement VI. dated Jan. 8th, 1351, for himself and his successors to be allowed the use of the mitre;^f together with another bull from Pope Urban V. to the same effect, dated Feb. 4th, 1363. He died March 27th, 1370;^g and was buried in the north aisle of the cathedral.^h

WALTER LEGH, almoner of the place, was nominated by the bishop April 4th, 1370. He died A.D. 1388.ⁱ

JOHN GREEN, D.D., infirmarer of the monastery, was nominated, in the usual manner, Aug. 22d, 1388. He died A.D. 1395.^k

JOHN DE MALVERN, sacrist of the church, was chosen by the bishop Sept. 19, 1395. Wharton says he died before the year 1423:^l Bishop Kennett, however, quotes the authority of an ancient charter for the occurrence of his successor,

JOHN DE FORDHAM, as prior, in the second year of King Henry the Fifth, A.D. 1415.^m In course, it must have been this John who was sent with others of the English clergy to the Council of Constance in 1416.ⁿ He married Richard Beauchamp earl of Worcester to the countess Isabella in 1423, and in the next year christened a child born of the marriage.^o It appears, otherwise, that he presided in 1434 and 1435. He died at the beginning of the year 1438.^p

THOMAS LEDBURY, one of the seven, as usual, was chosen prior by the bishop Feb. 14th, 1438. He died about the end of 1443 or the beginning of 1444.^q

JOHN HERTILBURY was nominated by the bishop Jan. 16th, 1444; and died December 16th, 1445.^r

THOMAS MUSARD succeeded. He died in 1469.^s

^{ab} The following is the return of the Pensions still payable in the 2d

ROBERT MULTON, cellarer of the house was elected with the others by the convent on the 14th, and chosen by the bishop on the 16th of August, 1469. He died A.D. 1492.^t

WILLIAM WENLOKE, sacrist of the monastery, was chosen in the seven, as usual, on June 24th, and nominated by the bishop July 2d, 1492. He died A.D. 1499.^u

THOMAS MILDENHAM, who had also been sacrist of the monastery, was elected by the monks on July 21st, but was not made prior by the bishop till Sept. 4th, 1499. He died in 1507.^x

JOHN WEDDESURY was made prior Sept. 16th, 1507. He died A.D. 1518.^y

WILLIAM MOORE, sub-prior, was presented with his confreres to the bishop Sept. 27th, and nominated by him Oct. 2d, 1518. He resigned the priorship at the beginning of the year 1536, and had the manors of Crowle and Grimley assigned to him, which he quietly possessed far in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Wharton thinks he was the same person with William More, LL.B., who was consecrated bishop of Colchester, as suffragan to the see of Ely, in 1536.^z Willis speaks of this as a mistake, the William More who was suffragan bishop of Colchester dying in 1540.^{aa}

HENRY HOLBECH,^b prior of the black monks who were students at Cambridge, succeeded, not according to the way of election till then practised, but by the way of compromise, on the 13th of March, 1536. The king by his letters to the convent enjoining his election, and confirming him, when elected, on the 22d of March the same year. On the 24th of March, 1538, at Lambeth, he was consecrated suffragan to the see of Worcester, by the title of bishop of Bristol, and held the priory together with that dignity.

At length, on the 18th of January, 1540, the monks being, by the king's command, turned out of the church of Worcester, which they had been possessed of five hundred and sixty-nine years, secular canons were put into their place; and this Henry, changing his title, presided over them as DEAN, till being made bishop of Rochester, about the middle of the year 1544, he gave up the deanery to John Barlos or Barlow.^c He was translated to the see of Lincoln in 1547, where he died, A.D. 1551.

The prior and monks, upon their surrender, had pensions allotted to them for life; but these were to be withdrawn whenever they should accept of preferment.^d

There is some variation of statement as to the actual income of this monastery. Its possessions, according to Speed, amounted to 1386*l.* 12*s.* 10³/₄*d.* per annum, or 1290*l.* 10*s.* 6³/₄*d.* clear: most of which were re-granted by King Henry the Eighth, in the 33d year of his reign, toward the endowment of the dean, ten prebendaries, ten minor canons, ten lay clerks, ten choristers, forty king's scholars, two schoolmasters, and the other members, whereof his new foundation in the church consisted.^e and 3d of Philip and Mary. "Wigorn. nuper Monasterium. Annu. Thomæ Welbie per annum viij^{li}. Thomæ Romney per annum iijij^{li}. Willielmi Blande per annum iijij^{li}. Roberti Peers et Johannis fil. s. per annum lx^s. Edwardi Proctor per annum viij^{li}. vj^s. viij^d. Rogeri Necham per annum viij^{li}. vj^s. viij^d. Willielmi Whittingdon per annum viij^{li}. Johannis Acton per annum c^s. Penc. Ricardi Coleman per annum viij^{li}. Ricardi Cleave per annum viij^{li}. Bartholomei Stoke per annum x^d. Thomæ Blakeley per annum viij^{li}. Johannis Blackewall per annum x^{li}."

^e There are now only eight minor canons, in the number of which are the chaunter, and sacrist, a head schoolmaster and under schoolmaster; two of the minor canonries, and likewise the offices of diaconus and sub-diaconus, or epistler and gospeller, have long been suppressed. Green, Hist. Worc. vol. i. p. 130. "To the dean," Mr. Green informs us, "at the time of the endowment, was allotted nearly the whole of the Prior's house: to the first prebendary, the Sacrist's, which was on the north side of the church. To the second prebendary was allotted the Tumbary's house; to the third the Sub-prior's; to the fourth, the Hospitalier's; to the fifth, the Infirmarer's; to the sixth, the Pittancer's and part of the Cellarer's; to the seventh, the Kitchener's; to the eighth and ninth, the house of Magister Capellæ, and the site of the Infirmary and its Chapel; to the tenth, the Almoner's, and a part of the Prior's house, on the site of which Dr. Byrch, about fifty years since, erected a new one, which is considered the best of the prebendal residences." Hist. of Worc. 4to. Lond. 1796, vol. i. p. 130.

Dugdale places the clear value at 1229*l.* 12*s.* 8½*d.*^a Stow at 1299*l.* 12*s.* 8¾*d.* :^b which last valuation is also to be found in Bacon's Liber Regis.

The temporalities and spiritualities of the bishoprick were valued, in the 26th of Hen. VIII. at 1106*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* per annum in the whole, and at 1049*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* clear after reprises ; but, since, they have been settled at 944*l.* 17*s.* 9*d.*^c

The church of Worcester was among those which enjoyed the privilege of Sanctuary in its fullest extent. The more ancient grant of this privilege was confirmed by a Charter from King Henry IVth, in the second year of his reign, A.D. 1400 : and again in the thirty-seventh year of King Henry the Sixth. Its limits are laid down from a document of the time of Charles I. in Mr. Green's History of Worcester, vol. i. p. 124.

Leland, in his Itinerary, enumerates the country residences which, in the time of King Henry the Eighth, belonged to the prior of Worcester.

Gryley, a three miles above Worcester prope Severn, agayne Ombresley in ripa dextra Sabrinæ.

III. The third manuscript to be noticed, is that in the Cottonian collection, marked Tiberius A. XIII. intitled, "Registrum, continens Chartas vetustas, tum Latine tum Saxonice, Regum Saxoniorum, præsertim Merciorum; quibus terræ, possessiones, privilegia et immunitates Monasterio S. Mariæ in Wigornia civitate donantur." It is the autograph of Heming's Chartulary, printed by Hearne: and from which Dugdale has made numerous extracts in the Charters appended to this account. Wanley also, in the Catalogue of Manuscripts illustrative of Northern Literature, added to Dr. Hickeys's Thesaurus, has described the Charters in it minutely. In the fire of the Cotton library, Oct. 22, 1731, this volume was materially injured, being in one instance at least mutilated, and rendered in many parts unintelligible. Excerpts from this manuscript, while in its former state, occur in the Cotton manuscripts Claud. A. VIII. and Vesp. A. v.

IV. Another manuscript in the same collection, marked Nero E. i. contains other copies of Charters granted by the Mercian kings, differing in many places from the readings of those in the manuscript Tiberius A. XIII. though of equal antiquity; both manuscripts having been written in the eleventh century. The Charters in the manuscript Nero E. i. are comprised between the folios 387 and 391: the rest of the volume being principally filled with the Lives of Saints.

V. In the Cotton manuscript Caligula A. x. a volume of an historical kind is preserved, which has the following title: "Chronicon Wigorniese, ab anno primo Incarnationis Dominicæ ad annum 1308. in quo quamplurima inseruntur de Episcopis, Antiquitatibus, et Statu Ecclesiæ Wigorniensis." It is of the fourteenth century; and the manuscript from which Wharton selected his "Monachi Wigorniensis Annales de rebus Ecclesiæ Wigorniensis," in the Anglia Sacra, tom. i. p. 469—530. Much, however, of general history was left uncopied from it by Wharton.^a

Among single Instruments may be mentioned, the "Conventio facta Anno 1116 in Capitulo Wigorniensis Ecclesiæ cum Alfgeto de Wiltonia, suscipiente fraternitatem Congregationis istius:" preserved in the Cotton manuscript Vesp. E. iv. fol. 207.

The Harleian manuscript No. 604. contains an imperfect inventory of the plate, vestments, utensils, &c. belonging to the priory of Worcester toward the latter part of the reign of King Henry VIIIth: together with an inventory made upon St. Dunstan's day, 1535, "of serten parcels of Yeren warke and hothers, beynge in a Coffe at the Priors Maners:" both printed in the Appendix to the first volume of Green's History of Worcester.

An enumeration of the revenues of the church as sold to different purchasers during the Great Rebellion is given in Abingdon's Antiquities of Worcester, p. xxv.—xxx. from a manuscript in the possession of Thomas Rawlinson, Esq., the total produce of the different manors, tenements, and other possessions, amounting to 23652*l.* 14*s.* 3¼*d.*

The cathedral church of Worcester, as a whole, is a fine specimen of the simple Gothic style; excepting its tower, less decorated with laboured ornaments than the generality of our cathedral structures. Its form is that of a double Cross: the eastern part of the church, erected in 1084 by St. Wulstan (and including what was afterwards converted into the Lady chapel), forming, with its transept, a Cross of itself. St. Wulstan's building includes the great cross-aisle at the top of the nave: the body of which latter was built in 1224, by Bishop Blois. At the lower end of the nave are the supposed remains of the church built in 983 by Bishop Oswald,^b united by Bishop Wakefield, in 1380, to the present cathedral. The tower of the church rises in the centre of the great cross-aisle, dividing the choir from the nave. It was finished in 1374. The choir was new vaulted in 1376:

as the nave had been in 1337. The rich window at the west end of the nave has been already spoken of. Beneath the choir is a crypt, or undercroft, seventy-two feet in length, eleven feet high, and as broad as the church; divided into aisles.

Adjoining the south side of the nave of the cathedral is the cloister, forming a square, a hundred and twenty-five feet in length on the east side, but a hundred and twenty only on the south, west, and north sides; beyond it the ancient refectory, now the king's school; and eastward of the cloister the chapter house, forming a decagon with a central pillar: all built in 1372. Opposite the middle of the choir, on the same side, stands the Gueston, or Guesten hall, erected in 1320.

The north porch of the cathedral was erected in 1386; below which, at a moderate distance from the structure, stands the charnel-house, built, with a chantry chapel over it, by Bishop Blois, to receive the bones disturbed by his work.

A clochier, or octagon bell-tower, which stood on the north of the Lady chapel, was taken down about the year 1647.

Near the lavatory, about the middle of the west cloister, is a door, which was formerly the entrance to the dormitory, built in 1375. Its site is now a garden inclosure. Westward, beyond the dormitory, was the infirmary.

The following are the dimensions of the church and convent buildings, as given by Willis and Stevens:

"The length of this church in the whole, from east to west, is three hundred and ninety-four feet, whereof the choir is a hundred and twenty feet.

"Breadth of the body and side aisles, seventy-eight feet. Breadth of the choir and the side-aisles, seventy-four feet. Height of the tower, a hundred and sixty-two feet. Height of the roof eastward, ninety feet; and of the same westward, eighty-seven feet. The height of the leaden steeple, built in an octagon fashion, which not long since was standing on the north side of the church, near the east end, was a hundred and seventy-seven feet. The length of the cloisters, heretofore embellished with the arms of the founders and benefactors, was a hundred and twenty-four feet, and the breadth sixteen. Length of the dormitory, a hundred and twenty feet; breadth, sixty-three."^d

Abingdon, pp. 31, 89, gives a full account of the arms which in his time ornamented the different windows of the cloister. The inscriptions were chiefly for persons by whom the respective windows were set up. "Orate pro bono statu—qui hanc fenestram fieri fecit." For other inscriptions in the windows of the church see Abingdon's Survey, p. 5-12.

Sir William Dugdale, in his Short View of the late Troubles in England, fol. Oxf. 1681, p. 557, speaking of the breaking out of the Civil war, and the Parliament's forces, in 1642, says, "When their whole Army, under the command of the Earl of Essex, came to Worcester (Sept. 24th), the first thing they there did, was the profanation of the cathedral; destroying the organ; breaking in pieces divers beautiful windows, wherein the foundation of that church was lively historified with painted glass, and barbarously defacing divers fair monuments of the dead. And as if this were not enough, they brought their horses into the body of the church, keeping fires and courts of guard therein, making the quire and side-aisles, with the font, the common-places, wherein they did their easements of nature. Also, to make their wickedness the more complete, they rifled the library, with the records and evidences of the church; tore in pieces the Bibles and service books pertaining to the quire; putting the surplices and other vestments upon their dragoons who rode about the streets with them."

LITTLE MALVERN has been already noticed as a cell to Worcester.

^a Dugdale quotes this MS. as Claud. A. x. and alters several of the dates which respect the bishops of Worcester. The MS. indeed appears to have been written over at an early period in many of the dates. Among the instruments appended to this account, Num. II. contains Dugdale's Excerpts collated with the original.

^b See Green, Hist. Wore. vol. i. pp. 45, 46, 47.

ancient lavatory, or cistern for washing being a small reservoir of water, placed near the door of the refectory, in which the monks were obliged to wash their hands when going in and coming out from their meals. It was supplied from a spring arising in Hilnwie hill. Among its ornaments were formerly the arms of the monastery as given in the initial letter of this account. Ideoque omnes firmas statutiones seriæ literarum adnotamus ne forte in posterum aliquis ignorantia avaritiæve ea decreta infringere præsumat quæ venerabilium virorum fiunt verbis confirmata. Anno dominicæ incarnationis DCCLXXXVIIIº. Indictione vero XII. qui est annus regni Offan strenuissimi Merc. regis factum est pontificale conciliabulum in loco famoso qui dicitur Celchýð præsentibus duobus archiepiscopis, Jamberhto scilicet et Hygberhto, mediante quoque Offan Rege, cum universis principibus suis. Ibi inter alia plura aliqua contentio facta est inter Heathoredum episcopum et Wulfheardum filium Cussan de hæreditate Hemeles et Dudæ quod post obitum suorum nominarent ad Weozorna cæꝛꝛne: hoc est Inꝛanbeoꝛꝛaꝛ et Bradanleꝛe. Voluisset ergo Wulfearus illum agellulum avertere ab ecclesia præfata in Weozorna cæꝛꝛe cum ignorantia et insipientia.....illum refutabat cum his testibus qui eorum nomina infra scripta liquescunt coram synodali testimonio. Et aiebat quod ei rectum non fieret ulli alio post se tradere, præter etctam civitatem hoc est Weoꝛꝛna cæꝛꝛoꝛ. Et propter eorum prece et amore qui illam terram..... ..esierunt et ad ecclesiam præfatum dedissent illi senatores familiæ consentientes fuerunt ut illud custodiret et haberet dicm suum. Tunc archiepiscopus simul cum universis provincialibus episcopis ita finem composuerunt et reconciliaverunt, ut Wulfearus terram possideret tandiu viveret et postquam viam patrum incederet sine aliqua contradictione.....Weogornense t..... terras, atque libellus cum semetipso redderet..... ..

✠ REGNUM Domini quærendum est super universa lucra terrena, Paulo testante apostolo: quæ enim videntur temporalia sunt, sed quæ non videntur æterna sunt. Quid prodest homini totum mundum lucrari, si anima ejus detrimentum patitur? Quapropter, ego Wiglaf rex Merciorum, cum meis episcopis, et ducibus, et magistratibus illud monasterium in Heanburg in circuitu, cum silva ad eam pertinente, et cum campis, et pratis, et cum omnibus utensilibus, et cum puteis salis, et fornacibus plumbis, villis, et omnia illuc pertinentia, in cœleste culmen generaliter per totam gentem Merciorum, et pro absolute criminum nostrorum, liberaliter liberavimus a modicis, et a magnis causis, a notis, et ignotis, præter valli et pontis constructionem. Facta est hæc donatio in Craest, anno dominicæ incarnationis dcccxxxiiij. indictione verò xiiij. regni hujus nostri à domino concessi quarto, pro redemptione animæ meæ: placabile atque delectabile mente prædicta loca libcrabo, cum universis cassatis qui ipsis locis universis sunt subditi. Hoc modo per ævum liberabo a pastu regis, et principum, et ab omni constructione regalis villæ, et a difficultate illa, quam nos Saxonice Feastingmen dicimus; hæc omnia mente concedo spontanea. Scitote ergo vos qui hoc labens regnum post me obtineatis, quare hoc munus, et hanc libertatem scripsi, et rescribere præcepi, quod in Deum meum desidero, et in ejus ineffabilem misericordiam confido, ut Dominus noster Jesus Christus meas iniquitates, quas per ignorantiam feci Deus delere faciat. Credo per hoc bonum a cunctis me emundare dignetur, quia scriptum est, peccatum ibi emenda ubi nascitur. Modo posteros meos per gloriosum, et præmirabile nomen Domini Jesu Christi humiliter supplico, ut elemosinam, quam in altitudinem cœli culminis in manus domini datum habeo, communitèr per me, et per totam gentem Merciorum, tam benignitèr stare permittetis, et multi-

AGIO et alto Domino Deo Zabaoth regnante in ævum. Siquidem humani generis prosapia de primo patre et matre oriundus in hoc seculum venit, et sic per longa vaga temporum spacia diversis nationibus dirimuntur, ut janitor cœlestis bibliothecæ et vas electionis, prædicator egregius, apostolus Paulus dixit, præterit enim figura hujus mundi, quomodo in velocitate dies et anni deficiunt: et iterum sagax sophista, qui quondam Solymis dives regnavit in arvis, katalectico versu cecinit dicens,

Et ideo sunt omnes nostræ series literarum apicibus confirmandæ, ne posteris ex memoria labere possit quicquid facta præcedentium patrum ac regum firmiter statuerunt. Qua de re ego Berhtuulf domino disponente rex Merciorum, mihi et omnibus Merciiis in æternam elemosinam, donans donabo Eanmundo venerabili abbati et ejus familiæ on Breodune, cum licentia et testimonio obtimatum gentis Merciorum, hanc libertatis gratiam, id est, ut sit liberatum et absolutum illud monasterium in æternitatem ab illis incommodis quæ nos Saxonica lingua Festingmen dicimus, Christo Domino teste et omnibus sanctis in cœlis tam diu fides catholica et baptismum Christi in Britannia servetur. Ob hujus rei gratiam, ipse verò supradictus Eanmund abbas et illius sancta congregatio Breodunensis monasterii dederunt mihi et omnibus Merciiis regaliter perfruendum et possidendum in famoso vico in Tomeworthie magnum discum argenteum valde bene operatum ac faleratum in magno pretio, et exc. mancasas in auro puro: similiter etiam decantaverunt duodecim vicibus c. psalteria et cxx. missas pro Berhtwulfo rege et pro illius caris amicis et pro omni gente Merciorum, ut eorum libertas firmior, ac stabilior permaneat in ævum, et ut illius regis memoria et amicorum ejus, qui hanc pietatem in elemosinam sempiternam omnibus Merciiis illis in congregatione on Breodune donaverat, in eorum sacris orationibus jugiter permaneat usque in ævum. Insuper, in Dei omnipotentis nomine et novem ordinum angelorum et omnium electorum Christi præceptum ponimus, ut nullus unquam regum vel principum, aut alicujus personis homo, magnus sive modicus, in aliquo tempore hanc præscriptam libertatis gratiam infringere ausus sit, sed semper stabilis et indiscussa firmiterque firmata illi congregationi on Breodune coram Deo et hominibus jugiter permaneat in ævum. Charta Offæ Regis, de Timbingetun, Monasterio æt Clife vocato concesso, quod Monasterium postea ad Ecclesiam Wigorniensem devenit.

IN nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi qui cuncta secula jugiter pio moderamine regit.

Constat ergo, et incunctanter verum esse patet, omnia quæ hîc humanis cernuntur visibus vana ac caduca transitoriaque fieri, atque ea quæ hominum oculis velantur semper mansura et sine fine stabiliter perdurare in secula. Unde et certissimè notum est, ex auctoritate testimoniorum sacrorum voluminum, quod cum istis fugitivis mundanis rebus sempiterna mercari possunt cœlestia regna. Quapropter ego Offa, gratiâ gratuitâ Dei patris concedente, Merciorum rex, majorum meorum imitatus exemplum, cogitavi in corde meo quatinus ex his sceptris regalibus mundanis regni perceptis à conditōre ac largitore omnium bonorum aliquid quamvis minus dignum, pro remedio animæ meæ, et pro adipiscendo præmia polorum, in usus monasticæ liberalitatis ecclesiis donarem. Ideoque ego, et Aldredus subregulus Huicciorum in commune pro domino omnipotenti et pro æterna salute animæ nostræ, terram ter quinas mansiones habentem, id est, vicum qui nominatur Timbingetun ad monasterium quod propriè nuncupatur æt Clife, et ad ecclesiam beati Michaelis archangeli quæ inibi fundata est, libenter in ecclesiasticam possessionem donantes concedimus. Est autem vicus ille situs sub montis rupe qui antiquo vocabulo vocitatur Wuendesclif in aquilonali parte rivuli qui dicitur Tyrl, et est conjunctus terræ ante nominati monasterii cum suis terminis. Ut ergo hæc munificentia nostra pro Christo concessa eo firmiore stabilimento perpetualiter permaneat, testium et consentientium episcoporum, abbatum, ac principum nostrorum signa et nomina in hac cartula testimonii infra perscripta adnotare curavimus.

✠ PLARGIENTE gratia salvatoris nostri Domini Jesu Christi, ego Wlstanus Uuigornensis ecclesiæ prælatus antistes, ecclesiam sitam in villa quæ vocatur Uuestburià, beato Osuualdo quondam constructam, et terris et opibus et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus honorificenter jam pridem ditatam, postea verò à piratis devastatam et vetustate et præpositorum negligentia destructam, ad laudem ipsius Domini et Redemptoris nostri Jesu Christi ejusque sanctæ genitricis Mariæ omniumque apostolorum studui reparare. Et quia terra quæ jure ad ecclesiam pertinebat impedita et direpta erat à laicis hominibus, inuito congruenti consilio, auxilio bonorum hominum, partem prædictæ terræ legali jure recuperatam, partem pecuniæ meæ redemptam precio, juri et ditioni ecclesiæ restitui, scilicet ij. hidam et dimidiam hidam et dimidiam virgam in Uuestbiria, partem etiam terræ quæ concluditur ambitu ipsius monasterii, partem quoque silvæ Aescgraf, et xij. acras prati liberas dedi ab omni tributo et vectigali omnique servicio regali et episcopali, pro remedio animæ meæ et redemptione animarum omnium episcoporum prædecessorum sive successorum meorum. Quicumque hanc nostram elemosynam illæsam servaverint, aut in aliqua re augendo emendaverint.....Hanc libertatem ideo dedi, quia, hac terra excepta et libera permanente, omne regale servicium quod de meis circumjacentibus terris jure debetur expleri potest et persolvendum locavi et statui. In Heanbiria etiam, et in Ceorlatune, et in Uuica ij. hidam et dimidiam hidam, et xxvij. acras terræ. Ecclesias

quoque in Henbiria et in Stoke, cum omnibus decimis tam de frugibus quam de pecudibus sive de armentis, similiter liberas ab omni servitute regali et episcopali concessi, sicut semper liberæ fuerunt ab antiquis temporibus. In Bereuuica etiam i. hidam et dimidiam hidam, et in Haseldene j. uirgam liberam præter regis servicium. Has terras cum omnibus sibi pertinentibus silvis et planis, pratis et pascuis, aquis et piscaturis, ad ipsam ecclesiam et ibi Deo servientibus dedi ad sustentationis necessaria, ipsumque monasterium cum omnibus rebus quibus illud ditavi, terris, ornamentis, et cunctis ecclesiasticis ministeriis, Deo et sanctæ Mariæ ad Uuigornensem ecclesiam, utilitatibus monachorum qui ibi Deo serviunt in sede episcopali deservendum dedi. Hujus donationis legitimam sponsionem consilio et testimonio meorum bonorum hominum et amicorum fidelium confirmavi, offerens illud super altare sanctæ Mariæ, die nativitatis ipsius sanctæ et intemeratæ Virginis et Dei genitricis, anno Dominicæ incarnationis mxciii. regni autem regis Williemi junioris v. ordinationis meæ xxxj. anno, eodem die completo, indictione j. desiderans et adjurans, ut hæc possessio et confirmatio firma et stabilis in æternum ad usus monachorum in Uuigornensi ecclesia Deo servientium permaneat, prohibens pontificali nostra et divina auctoritate, ne quis hoc violare præsumat. Si quis verò diabolicæ cupiditatis instinctu, hoc infringere præsumpserit, exterminatus ab æterna cœlesti hæreditate, consors factus proditoris Judæ, nisi in viam satisfactionis redierit, perpetualiter crucietur exitalibus flammis Gehennæ, anathematizatus cum angelis Satanæ, sine fine luiturus pœnas præsumptionis suæ.

✠ IN nomine Domini Dei summi regis regum, qui in altis habitat et prospicit omnia cœlestia et terrestria. Anno ab incarnatione Christi dccciii. indictione xij. Ego Æthelric, filius Æthelmundi, cum conscientia synodali invitatus ad synodum et in judicio stare in loco qui dicitur Clofeshoh, cum libris et ruris, id est, æt Westmynster, quod prius propinqui mei tradiderunt mihi et donaverunt, ubi Æthelheardus archiepiscopus mihi regebat atque judicaverat, cum testimonio Coenwulfi regis et optimatibus ejus, coram omni synodo, quando scripturas meas perscrutarent, ut liber essem terram meam atque libellos dare quocumque volui. Postea commendavi amicis meis ad servandum, quando quæsi sanctum Petrum et sanctum Paulum pro remedio animæ meæ. Et iterum, me revertente ad patriam, accepi terram meam et pretium reddidi quasi ante pacti sumus, et pacifici fuerimus adinvicem. Facta est autem post paucos annos alia synodus æt Aclea. Tunc in illa synodo, coram episcopis rege et principibus ejus memoravi pristinæ libertatis mei quæ mihi ante judicatum est, et cum licentia eorum testificavi in præsentis testimonio quemadmodum meam hæreditatem dare voluissem, et sic dixi. Hæc sunt nomina illarum terrarum quæ dabo ad locum qui dicitur Deorhyrst pro me et Æthelmundo patre meo, si mihi contingat ut illic corpus meum requiescat, Todanhom, et æt Sture, Srefleh, et Cohhanleh: ea conditione ut illa congregatio vota eorum faciat firma sicut mihi promiserunt. Iterum dabo Werferthæ xi. manentium, Bremer, Grefan, et Feccanhom, ut habeat suum diem, et postea reddat ad Wigornacestre. Verumetiam do xxx. manentium, Under Ofre ad Gleawecestre. Et quando mihi contingat exitus mei dies, tunc dabo Ciolburgæ matri meæ, si diutius vivit quam ego, terram illam æt Westminstre, et æt Stoce, ut habeat suam diem, et postea reddat ad Weogornensem ecclesiam. Pro qua re ea vivente ut ibi habeat protectionem et defensionem contra Berclinga contentione. Et si aliquis homo in aliqua contentione juramentum ei decreverit contra Berclingas, liberrima erit ad reddendum, cum recto consilio propinquorum meorum qui mihi donabant hæreditatem, et meo quò ei dabo. Et si non habeat patrimonium in civitate Weogornensi, postea primùm quærat ad archiepiscopum in Cantia, et si ibi non habeat, sit libera cum libris et ruris ad eligendum patrocinium ubi placitum sibi fuerit. Si aliter fiat, ut non opto, aliquis homo contendat contra libros meos vel hæreditatem indignè, tunc habet Aldwulfus episcopus in Licetfelda istius cartulæ comparem, et amici necessarii mei et fidelissimi alias, id est, Eadbyrht, Eadgaring, et Æthelheh, Esning, ad confirmationem hujus rei. Rogo etiam Æthelric, pro amore omnipotentis Dei, et præcipio, et obsecro per omnes virtutes cœlorum, ut nullus homo hanc positionem crucis Christi quæ tantorum virorum testimonio confirmata est non præsumat minuere. Si ausus est aliquis confirmationem istam infringere; deleatur de laude Dei, si non satisfactione emendaverit.

TEMPORA temporibus succedunt, atque ad finem tanquam decidens folium præceps transeunt. Ideo omnes firmas statutiones litterarum seriei commendamus, ne fortè in posterum aliquis ignorantia avaritiæ fraude inlectus infringere præsumat decretalia patrum fidelium, sicut Græcorum est consuetudo: quia quicquid firmiter scire volunt, litteris commendant, ne ex memoria labetur.

Hanc vero terram Coenwulf rex donans donat Balthuno abbati, et liberam conscripsit in omnibus tam in campo quàm in silva, tam etiam in flumine, et in omnibus utilitatibus ad eandem ritè terram pertinentibus, in monasterium quæ dicitur Kemesei xxx. manentium, sive ad habendum quam diu vivat, et post se suis hæredibus cuicumque voluerit liberam donandi habeat facultatem, et nulli homini nichil facere de eadem terra, exceptis tantùm in causis pontem facere et arcem et expeditionem. Hanc quoque libertatem præfato monasterio Balthun abbas comparavit à prædicto rege Coenwulfo, et illi dedit terram xij. manentium in loco qui vocatur Hereford, sive ad habendum suisque hæredibus perhenniter relinquendum, ut eo firmiùs et inmutabiliùs hoc decretum permaneat. De partibus verò et de causis singula res solvere pretium, et nihil aliud de hac terra. Et eandem libertatem ego Coenwulf rex donabo Balthuno abbati, sive ad habendum tam diu vivat, et post se suis hæredibus perhenniter ad perfruendum. Pax servantibus et consentientibus huic donationi; contradicentibus discordia semper sine fine, Amen. Hæc cartula scripta est anno dominicæ incarnationis dcccxcviii. indictione vij. Eod. anno facta est pax inter Merciones et Occidentales Saxones, et cum juramentis firmo fœdere roborata est, sub regibus Coenwulfo et Echerhto. NUM. XXVIII.

PLURIMAS terrarum possessiones quæ nunc ab aliis injustè possidentur, et villas quamplures ad hanc ecclesiam jam pridem justè pertinere, tam seniorum prædecessorum nostrorum relatu, quàm etiam litterarum et testatorum serie didicimus, quas postea, et regalium vectigalium importabilis exactio, et potentissimorum hominum impia direptio iniquè distraxit, et a monasterii possessione abstraxit, sicuti factum est temporibus Athelredi regis Anglorum, vastante et depopulante hanc patriam pagano rege Danorum Swein nomine, cum maximum et ferè importabile tributum tota Anglia reddere cogeretur. Ob hujus itaque tam gravis tributi exactionem, omnia ferè ornamenta hujus ecclesiæ distracta sunt, tabulæ altaris argento et auro paratæ spoliatæ sunt, textus exor-

nati, calices confracti, cruces conflatae, ad ultimum etiam terræ et villulæ pecuniis distractæ sunt. Simili modo etiam actum est regnante Cnut filio suo, et adhuc graviora vectigalia superaddita sunt temporibus regni filii Cnut, cujus nomen erat Hardecnut, qui etiam totam istam provinciam hostili exercitu ferro et igne depopulavit.

De eadem re.

De his autem terris et villulis quæ quondam ad hanc ecclesiam pertinere noscuntur, sed post potentum hominum rapina injustè ab hujus monasterii possessione direpta, ut prædiximus, habentur, succinctim narrare ordimur, prout seniorum nostrorum relatione didicimus, vel notariorum cartis inserta reperimus.

Item.

Primitus ultra fluvium Tamedæ narrationis nostræ exordium sumamus, sicque per Sabrinam ordinatè reverentes sermonis seriem pro posse nostro contexamus.

De Peonedoc.

De Peonedoc jam dicamus. Hanc villam Northmanus monasterio dedit cum filio suo, quem cum eadem terra ad altare obtulit, monasticis disciplinis Deo perpetualiter servire, terramque ipsam in usus tam ejus quàm cæterorum fratrum cum testamenti cyrographo, domino W. tunc decano, postea autem venerando episcopo devotus dedit. Extiterat quidem hæc terra et antea de possessione monasterii, sed vi, ut prædiximus, ablata ad ipsum N. hæredum successione pervenerat, quique eam sic restituit. Hanc villam Rawulfus vicecomes, adjutorio et fortitudine Willielmi comitis Herefordensis, cum pluribus aliis terris monasterio abstulit, nec multò post comes ipse justo Dei judicio exul interiit, et Rawulfus idem carceri mancipatus publico, terras, possessiones, et cuncta quæ habebat perdidit, hacque ex causa sancta ecclesia possessione ipsius villæ caruit.

De Actune.

Quidam quoque minister Orduuü nominatus, vir videlicet magna largitate et laudabili probitate extiterat, qui cum per multum tempus villam quandam vocabulo Actune, ad jus ecclesiæ Wigornensis ex antiqua temporum recordatione pertinentem tenuerat, ante finem vitæ ejus divino redactus instinctu, Wlstanò adhuc priore existenti, ad ecclesiasticam hæreditatem, sicut prius fuerat, concedendo perpetualiter permisit. Sed postea verò abbas Ægelwinus superveniens, vi magnæ iniquitatis illatâ, loco ritè hæreditario villam illam abstulit, à quo etiam non multò post Urso vicecomes eam arripuit, et ad dotem filiaæ suæ condonavit.

De Sceldeslaehge.

Sceldeslaehge verò, quidam nomine Simund, ex concessionem fratrum illo in tempore in Wigorna manentium, tam diu tenuit, et servitium statutum illis inde reddidit, quousque Franci supervenerunt, et eum illo bono et pluribus aliis privaverunt.

De Cliftune et Eastham.

Temporibus regis Athelredi Cliftun, et Homme, et Eastham, et Bufawuda, et Temedebyrig, et Cyr, cum omnibus eis subjacentibus et pertinentibus ecclesiæ nostræ Wigornæ subjacebant. Sed cum hæc provincia fuerat depredata et atrocissimè devastata, et Dani terras multorum hominum, nobilium et ignobilium, divitum et pauperum, et ferè istius provinciæ omnium rapientes caperent, et violenter possiderent, comes Hacun, et sui milites, has prædictas terras et alias perplures crudeli vi rapientes invaserunt, et raptas pro suis propriis possiderunt. Quod denique uxor ejus Gunnild injustè factum fuisse recognoscens, pro servicio terræ quandam imaginem sanctæ Mariæ nobis aurificè ornare fecit: sicque tamen terras usque huc loco sancto alienavit.

Item proemium.

His, ut credimus, veraci stilo exaratis, cunctisque qui legere voluerint pro posse notificatis, ad illas terras quæ inter Tamedam et Sabrinam sitæ sunt, vertimus eloquium nostræ pusillitatis. Illud tamen in nostræ præmittimus narrationis exordio, ut si quis ea quæ dicturi sumus meditatatus fuerit, scireque plenissimè studuerit, hunc libellum nostrum legere non renuat, sed omni mentis devotione legat. In quo proculdubio inveniatur quo gressus suæ, ut ita dixerim, meditationis figat, et quæ vera esse pro certo agnoscat, quibus etiam fidem adhibere debeat. Et si ea quæ in illo scripta fuerint subtiliter legendo perspexerit, nil falsitatis, verum ut se rei veritas habet reperire poterit.

De Lauuerna.

Inter alios rebus pollentes secularibus, erat vir quidam nimium opulentus, nomine Kinwardus, cujus parentes, priusquam mortis jura subiissent, ex hac nostra ecclesia diversas terrarum possessiones habuere, pro quibus, secundum factam conventionem quam fecerunt cum illis qui nos præcessere, fidele servitium exhibuere. Quibus defunctis, ipse factus illorum hæres non solum hæreditatem suscepit, verumetiam terras quas ipsi ante ex hoc monasterio possidebant recepit, ea scilicet ratione, ut dum rerum necessitas exposceret, conventionem quam ille jam fecerat sine dilatione persolveret. Quarum videlicet terrarum una est quæ ab incolis ejusdem loci Lauuern nominatur, quæ etiam non longè ultra amnem Sabrinam sita est. Hanc ille quoad vixit possidebat et pro ea fidele servitium nobis exhibebat. Morte verò sibi superveniente, illam nobis restituit, quam nos suscipientes ut propriam habere cœpimus; verum non diu sub nostra ditione tenere potuimus. Instigante enim diabolo, frater vicecomitis Ursonis, Robertus nomine, nobis abstraxit eam injustè, nec solum illam, sed et alias quamplures, de quibus nunc loqui omittimus, oportunis verò in locis de ipsis nullatenus tacebimus.

De Cloptune.

Alter quidam Ælfgeardus vocabulo, magnis pollens divitiis existebat, qui Ædithæ venerandæ reginæ camerariam, Mahtildam nomine, uxorem ducebat. Huic summissa prece nos roganti modicam villam quæ Cloptun dicitur concessimus, pro qua ipse tot annis quot eam habebat bene nobis et fideliter serviebat. Sed Urso vicecomes eandem postmodum sibimet adquisivit, tale servitium pro ea se exhibiturum promittens quale ille prius exhibuit. Jurejurando illud promisit, sed nondum persolvere voluit.

De Rydmarlege.

Pro alia similiter terra quæ ab indigenis est Rydmerleghe nominata, juxta Duddontreo sita, spondit se servitium esse, verum per omnia immemor factus est promissionis suæ.

De Coddarycge.

Quidam dives secularis præpositus, nomine Earnwi, loci hujus extitit. Hic fratrem sibi vehementer karum cui erat vocabulum Spiritus habuit, qui nimis diligebatur à duobus regibus istius patriæ, Haroldo scilicet et Hardecnut. Ipse autem à fratre suo supradicto terram Coddarycge, causa hospitalitatis suscepit, ea conditione, ut vel quando ad fratrem veniret, vel ab eo recederet ibi hospitari posset. Quo facto, ille denique ex tota Anglia fuit expulsus et in exilium ejectus; et Ricardus Scrob postea terram illam invasit, et per hoc Wigornensi monasterio usque adhuc subtracta et elongata persistit.

De Aelfintun, et de Sapien.

Brihtegus episcopus suo in tempore villas quæ vocantur Aelfintun et Sapien, cuidam viro qui sororem suam duxerat uxorem, licentia fratrum hujus loci post-posita, concessit. Quibus defunctis, Ricardus filius Scrob Sapien invasit, et eam quamdiu vixerat injustè tenuit, filioque suo in fine vitæ suæ dereliquit. Aelfintun verò Agelricus, ipsius episcopi germanus, sibi arripuit, ac brevi post tempore suo filio Godrico dedit: quam ab eo diu possessam injustè Rauulfus de Beornaco, domini sui, comitis scilicet Willielmi, roboratus fortitudine, sibi vi abstulit, sed ejus possessor diu non extitit. Pro re namque ignominiositate plena, ut ecclesiasticarum possessionum invasor, ipsius dominatum perdidit. Deinde verò Radulfus de Totaneia eandem ut potuit à rege adquisivit, ac non multo post sanctum Ebrulfum inde donavit. Tali utique modo harum dominatu villarum locus iste sanctus caruit et adhuc caret.

De Estlege.

Idem quoque Raulf quandam aliam villulam Estleh appellatam à quodam Dano, Occa nomine, injustè arreptam, et injustè possessam, similiter invasit, et ab ecclesiæ possessione et dominatione vi et fortitudine domini sui Willielmi comitis suffultus subtraxit. Sicque hæc sancta ecclesia jus dominationis ejusdem villæ injustè perdidit.

De Ribetforde.

Simili modo villam quæ Ribbetford dicitur, cujus villani captatorias sepes piscium et alias venatorias instaurare debita lege debebant, operaque nostra ubicumque eis præcipiebatur exercebant, prius Dani, post Turstanus Flandrensis monasterio vi abstulit, sicque ejus usque nunc dominatum perdidimus. Ipseque non multo post et ipsam et omnem terram suam perdidit, exilioque multatus est. Sic qui parum Deo injustè abstulit omnia sua justè perdidit.

De Witlaege.

Villam etiam quæ dicitur Witlaehge Aldredus episcopus et Wulstanus tunc temporis prior, obtentu Edrici cognomento Siluatici, presbytero ejus Earnwio præstiterunt, quam postea Rawulfus de Beornegia vi monasterio et sibi abstulit, sed parvo post tempore non solum illam, sed etiam omnem suam terram perdens, carcerali custodia multatus est, Deo sibi dignam ultionem reddente.

De Grimmanhylle et Earesbyrig.

Has equidem villas Grymmanhylle et Earesbyrig nuncupatas, temporibus regis Eadwardi monasterio subjacentes et per inedibile temporis spatium jure et propria dominatione monasterii habitas et possessas, Urso vicecomes invasit postquam vicecomitatum susceperat. Extitit enim tunc ex parte ambitiosus captor terrarum ferè ubicumque potuit, sed post modicum temporis per Dei misericordiam semetipsum justius aliquantulum optemperavit. Cui denique villæ supranominatæ (nec sine nimio timore) concessæ fuerunt, ab his videlicet qui tunc temporis res monasterii gubernandas habuerunt, nam illis et valere et nocere si vellet potuit; atque ex hoc plurimum ipsi metuentes concesserunt ei quæ ab illis habere voluit. His itaque ipse susceptis utens ut propriis, omne debitum servitium exinde tamen indeficienter persolvit regis. Nos autem hac de causa terris prænotatis et, ut premonstratur, à sancto loco alienatis, has etiam nunc terras quas diximus litteris supponere curavimus; quoniam minus servitium quam inde debetur nos jam habere sentimus.

Præfatio.

Hactenus, ut timidus nauclerus, erga litora remigium temptando locutionis nostræ cimbam circumduximus, nunc autem, ut ita dicam, latum pelagus intrantes, opus est, ut rationis veritati, quasi radio solari aciem mentis pervigili obtutu infigamus, ipsamque Dominam nostram quæ stella maris vocitatur, cujus sacratissimi monasterii possessioni hæc omnia iniquorum hominum rapinâ ablata sunt, indefessis precibus interpellemus, quatinus esse nobis dignetur in hoc cœpto itinere ductrix et tutrix, ne nos tempestas timoris potentissimorum hominum à recto deviare compellat, vel aura falsitatis interveniens navem frangendo in profundum demergat, seu procella minarum absorbeat, immò ipsa suffragante caribdim avaritiæ sirtisque favoris et falsæ gratia devitantes, studiosum lectorem ad littus destinatum cum tranquillitate sermocinatione nostra transvehere valeamus. Jam ergo incipiamus in orientali parte fluminis magni, Sabrinae scilicet, terras ad istam ecclesiam jure pertinentes describere, qualiterve quocumque modo ablatae sunt, prout seniorum nostrorum relatione didicimus, sive ipsimet scire potuimus.

Ac primò videndum quæ terræ trium hæredum temporibus accommodatae sint, post quorum decessum juri monasterii redderentur, quæve postea juxta hanc conventionem redditæ, quæve injustè sunt retentæ, sive ipsorum qui eas exigere deberent negligentia, sive denegatæ sint iniquorum hominum potentiâ.

De Salawarpe.

Terra quæ dicitur Salewarpe ad jus monasterii pertinere certissimum est; nam Godwinus quidam frater Leofrici comitis, ejusdem villulæ possessor infirmitate tactus, cum ad extrema ductus esset, à piæ memoriæ Wulstano, tunc temporis monacho et decano, postea verò episcopo, et à venerabili Wilstano qui postea abbas Gloecestre claruit, oleo unctus est, pœnitentiaque sibi injunctâ, de terra illa ab ipsis calumniatus est. Qui statim eam de jure ecclesiæ esse recognovit, eamque bono animo eis tradidit in jus ecclesiasticum possidendam, pœnitentiam agens quod tam diu eam retinuit. Post mortem autem ejus, filius ejus nomine Agelwinus, qui à Danis obses manibus truncatus est, testamentum patris sui irritum faciens, adjutorio patris sui, comitis videlicet, et jam dicti Leofrici, eandem terram monasterio auferens, suo juri addixit. Nec multùm postea justo Dei judicio ipsam et omnia quæ habebat cum vita sua perdidit, morteque ignominiosa in casa bovarii sui vitam finiens, vix duorum servorum ministerio sepulturæ traditus est.

De Heamtune.

Terra quæ dicitur Heamtun monasterio justè subdi debere nullus ambigere debet: nam Wulstanus episcopus eam ab Erngeato, filio Grim, justè per placita requisivit et proclamavit, sed eam minimè acquirere potuit, eo quod ipse Earngæatus adjutorio comitis Leofrici fulciretur, suaque vi eam retinuit. Unde et ipse W. episcopus filium ejus monachum facere recusavit, cum ab eo plurimùm rogaretur. Sed rogavit ut ipse primitus monasterio rectitudinem consentiret, terramque illam aut totam, aut saltem partem ejus quæ dicitur Thiccan-Apeltreo, monasterio cum filio donaret. Quo renuente, ac dicente quod filii ejus eam post se habere deberent, ac sic ad monasterium reverti deberet, discesserunt super hac re non concordati. Sicque post parvum tempus ne unus ex tota ejus progenie remansit qui ei in hæreditatem succederet, sicque hæc terra sicut et cætera ejus substantia in manus extraneorum venit, et monasterium nostrum adhuc eam expetit.

De Wearesleage.

Temporibus Alfstani prioris et Witherici præpositi, villa quæ dicitur Wearesleah nostræ fuerat propriæ dominationi subjecta, quam postea quidem episcopus Wulstanus, consilio et obtentu consiliariorum, optimatumque ejus, Alfwino filio Brithmari ut petiit concessit. Ipse itaque eam possidendo tenuit quamdiu vixit. Ac sic post mortem ejus Urso vicecomes omnes terras quas ipse habebat invadens, monasterii jus subtraxit; sicque ejus dominatum perdidimus.

De Ceaddeslaege, et de Broctune.

Nonnullarum verò terrarum possessiones comes Leofricus, defuncto patre suo Leofwino, ex hoc possidebat monasterio. Ex quibus duas, Wulfardilea, et Blakewelle nominatas, quas diu injustè tenuerat, nobis reddidit. Cæteras verò, Cedeslaeh videlicet, Beolne, Broctun, et Forfeld, in fine vitæ suæ se redditurum nobis spondit. Cujus sponsionis uxor illius, Godgiva nomine, non immemor, post mortem domini sui, præfati scilicet ducis ad nos venit, et pro remedio animæ ipsius et suæ tria pallia, cortinas duas, bancalia duo, candelabra duo, bene et honorificè parata, et bibliothecam in duabus partibus divisam, nobis obtulit, testemque se esse dicens promissionis quam vir suus dum adhuc viveret nobis promissit, pro eisdem terris pretium unoquoque anno dare, ut sibi licentiam concederemus, petivit, idque etiam quoad viveret ut licenter faceret postulavit, ea ratione ut post mortem ejus terras cum omnibus quæ in illis inveniremus sub nostra ditione haberemus. Cui quod devotis quæsivit petitionibus mente promptissima annuimus. Verùm non elapso longi temporis spacio, Eduuinus et Morkere duces, instinctu diabolico, easdem terras omnemque substantiam illius abstulerunt, ad sui, (ut postmodum patuit) non solum confusionem, verumetiam ad honoris in quo diu fuerant celerem amissionem. Nam alter eorum, Edwinus videlicet, à suis peremptus, alter verò in captivitate mortuus est.

De Headdes-ofre.

Villa quæ Headdes-ofre nominatur, ad orientem Wic sita, juri monasterii sanctæ Mariæ justè subdi deberet: nam Brihtwinus quidam prædives, qui eam hæreditate parentum suorum possidebat, liberaliter habens videlicet potestatem donandi sive vendendi eam cuicumque vellet, utpote paternam hæreditatem, nulli inde aliquod servitium nisi regi faciens, cum filio filii sui, Edwino nomine, eandem terram Deo et sanctæ Mariæ obtulit, eundemque nepotem suum monachum fecit. Filius ejus etiam, Brihtmarus nomine, pater ipsius jam dicti Edwini monachi, cum hæres patris extitisset, capitulum manachorum intravit, ipsamque villam monasterio dedit monachisque eam commendavit. Sed postquam Normanni hanc patriam devicerunt, Willielmus comes eam monasterio abstulit, eamque cuidam ministro suo dedit, Gilberto nomine, sicque dominium ipsius villæ perdidimus. Ipseque Willielmus comes, qui istam et plures alias terras Deo et sanctæ Mariæ injustè abstulit, justo Dei judicio non multò post exul à patria ignominiosa morte vitam finivit, et qui monasteria Dei exhæreditare non timuit, Deo sibi digna factis reddente, nullum in hac terra hæredem sui honoris ex omni sua cognatione habuit, quia filius ejus paternæ hæreditatis parvo tempore dominus, pro traditione quam regi facere voluit, publicæ custodiæ mancipatus, omne vitæ suæ explevit tempus ergastulo religatus, omnisque ejus progenies illa hæreditate lege publica privatus est.

De Odduncgalea.

Erat quidam clericus, Kinechegen vocatus, genere et sapientia clarissimus, et per totam hanc diocesim bonitatis scientiæque suæ fama nominatissimus. Hic sæpe veniens ad Godvinum virum venerabilem, et hujus monasterii tunc temporis decanum, terram unius cassati quæ ab incolis Odduncgalea dicitur, in usus proprios quæsivit; cui quod petebat minimè denegare volebat, nam illum strenuum magnæque prudentiæ virum esse sciebat, concessit sine dilatione, ea tamen ratione, ut v. solidos pro eadem terra persolveret anni cujusque revolutione; quam conventionem ipse quamdiu vivebat mente devotissima persolvebat. Verùm eodem subtracto ex hac luce, qui de ejus genere superstites fuere hanc eandem terram sibi usurpavere, nec postmodum servitium aliquod pro eo nobis exhibere uoluerunt. Tali modo hac terra caruimus et servitio quod pro illa habere debuimus.

De Crohlea.

Tempore illo quo Dani hujus patriæ possessores fuerant, villa quæ dicitur Crohlea à dominico victu monachorum hoc modo ablata est, licet servicio ecclesiæ adhuc Deo largiente mancipata. Nam Simund quidam, genere Danus, miles Leofrici comitis Merciorum, possessor existens alterius Crohlea prædictæ jam vicinæ, ut illius generis homines erant soliti, nostræ tunc propriæ villæ dominatum avarè cupiebat: quam cum adipisci nullo modo posset, vi et potentia sua et domini sui eam tot damnis et placitis pejoravit, ut ferè eam colonis destitueret; hinc facto placito, precibus domini sui prædicti comitis, Ægelwinus prior istius monasterii ei terram ipsam concessit possidendam vitæ suæ spatio, ea tamen conventionem, ut pro ea ipse ad expeditionem terra marique (quæ tunc crebrò agebatur) monasterio serviret, pecuniæque placabili sive caballo ipsum priorem unaquoque anno recognosceret.

De Bradicote.

De Hymeltune et Spoeplea et Wlfrintune.

Eo tempore quo Brihtegus episcopus hujus loci episcopatum tenebat, cognatos et parentes suos ex hujus ecclesiæ possessione hæreditare instituit, qui ipse de provincia Occidentalium Saxonum genus ducens, scilicet de Baerwicshire, parentelæ cognationem vel hæreditatem in hac provincia minimè habuit. Accepit autem membra capitalis villæ quæ Halhega dicitur, et dedit Agelrico fratri suo, eumque inde locupletavit; scilicet has villulas quæ sic appellantur, Hymeltun et Spoeplea et Wlfrintun, et unam hidam in villa quæ vocatur Hwitintun. Et postea comes Willielmus, ipso Ægelrico vivente, hæc omnia diripuit, et suæ potestati subiecit: sicque à sancti loci hujus possessione usque modò alienantur; servitium tamen inde ij qui habent se facere debere monasterio profitentur.

De Lappawurthin.

Idem verò episcopus Brihtegus quodam in tempore ad Saxoniam Gunnilde, Cnuti regis filie, ductor extitit, cum eam imperator Cono uxorem duceret, et quendam ministrum sibi valde carum, Hearlewinum nomine, socium itineris secum habuit. A quo episcopus prædictus quàm nimium est rogatus, ut aliquas locupletationes terrarum sibi tribueret. Quod libenter ipse episcopus concessit, et quandam villam quæ Lappawurthin appellatur, dimidium scilicet hidæ, sibi tradidit, ea tamen conditione, ut monasteriali juri ad festivitatem Assumptionis sanctæ Mariæ solidum unum daret, et sic hactenus hujus ruris possessione sancta ecclesia caret.

De Refnes hylle.

Villam etiam, Refnes hyl nomine, dedit idem episcopus cuidam cognato suo, vocabulo Brithwine, quam post eum vicecomes Urso invasit, taliterque hanc suam possessionem sancta ecclesia amisit.

De Emlaege.

Villam quæ dicitur Emlaege, Brihtegus episcopus cuidam ministro suo dedit; sed Livingus episcopus postea eam justè placitando monasterio restituit. Qui ta-men postea hominum suorum precibus devictus, cuidam militi suo Ægelrico, cognomento Kiu, suo die possidendam accommodavit, ea lege, ut post obitum suum ad monasterii dominationem redire deberet absque omni placito et contradictione, anathemate perpetuo ligans illum qui ampliùs eam à monasterii jure retineret. Post cujus obitum ad monasterium quidem rediit, et Withericus modò præpositus super eum fuit. Sed Rodbeartus, dispensator regis et frater vicecomitis, per potentiam regis monasterio abstulit. Sicque à nostra dominatione discessit.

De Ceorlatuna.

Villa quæ dicitur Ceorlatun ad jus ecclesiæ pertinere nulli dubium est, nam dimidia ejus pars adhuc monasterio subjacet: altera verò medietas, licet ab alienis possideatur, monasterio servire debere nemo contradicit. Hanc autem partem istius villæ quam Francigeni possident, scilicet vij. hidas, quidam dives homo trium hæredum temporibus possidendam pecunia sua adquisivit: quo defuncto, filius ejus ei in hæreditatem successit. Ipsoque mortuo, Godricus quidam, cognomento Fine, eam possedit. Hoc etiam vita subtracto, Wlstanus episcopus eam recepit, et quia ei quidam Francigeni qui hæreditates Anglorum invaserunt, contradicere nitebantur, regem adiit, eique calicem aureum magni pretii dedit, et accepto brevi ejus sigillato super hac re rediit, eamque suscepit et possedit. Postea verò Rodbertus regis dispensator, frater Ursonis vicecomitis, eam invasit, adjutorio suffultus reginæ, sicque eam perdidimus: servitium tamen inde ecclesiæ se facere debere profitebatur et velle.

De Benningwurthe.

Brihtegus episcopus dedit terram v. hidarum æt Benningwurthe Atsere cognato suo, qui etiam camerarius episcopi fuit; ipsoque adhuc vivente Urso vicecomes illam ab illo vi subtraxit, eamque possedit. Sicque monasterium injustè terram perdidit.

Item de Benningwyrth.

Alia autem pars ejus terræ à quodam alio, Ærngrim nomine, possidebatur, qui servitium ecclesiæ inde faciebat. Hic dum taliter fieri de vicino suo videret, Ægelwinum abbatem adiit, qui illis temporibus pro nimia sæculari prudentia judex ferè totius Angliæ erat, et à rege plurimum honorabatur, petiitque suffragium. Quod dum ad tempus invenisset, ei servire instituit pro eadem terra, ipsamque sic à nostra dominatione subtraxit. Sed sancta Dei genitrix non diu passa est fraudatorem suæ possessionis impunè gaudere, immò ut Scriptura dicit, 'incidit in foveam quam fecit.' Nam unde ad tempus habuit præsidium inde majus postea suscepit periculum. Circumventus siquidem dolis et ingeniis ipsius abbatis, post parvum tempus, de terra, scilicet Benningwurthe, expellitur, omnibus tamen vicinis injustè hoc fieri acclamantibus, quamvis nihil proficerent, quia potentiâ et ejus affluentia eloquentia quâ plurimum vigeat (unde etiam et ab ipsis Francigenis timebatur) mox pressi tacuerunt. Hoc igitur modo hanc terram perdidimus, et abbatum Eveshamii dominationi subdita fuit.

Postquam Ægelwii abbatis Eveshamii, terrarumque quas ipse vi vel fraude monasterio huic injustè subtraxit mentionem fecimus, plura de eo, et quis qualisve fuerit, et quomodo ipsæ terræ à domino nostro Wlstano episcopo innumeris et frequentibus placitis in manu ejus proclamata sint, scribere dignum duximus, ne fortè quis sequentium credat ipsum dominum episcopum eas silentio negligenter præterisse. Devicta namque patria hac à Normannis, perditisque cunctis melioribus baronibus istius provinciæ, cœpit ipse abbas multum crescere sæculari potentia, eo quod ingenio et calliditate et scientia sæcularium legum, quæ sola studebat, cunctos præcelleret, maximè quia dominus episcopus Wlstanus, qui solus

illo honorificentior ex omnibus in vicinio restabat, totum se Dei servitio mancipabat, nec ullo modo, cum plurimum quidem posset, sæcularibus negotiis implicare se vellet: immo, ne occasione aliqua honoris aut potentiae ejus implicaretur quasi mortem devitabat, apostolici memor præcepti, 'Nemo militans Deo implicet se negotiis sæcularibus,' &c. Hinc factum est, ut ipse jam dictus abbas, cum quasi sub obtentu suæ protectionis plurimos hujus provinciae divites homines sibi attraheret et paulatim subderet, tum etiam quosdam milites et homines episcopi cum terris suis hoc modo sibi conjungeret, nunc consanguinitatis occasione, nunc vicinitatis affinitate, suam eis protectionem contra Normannos spondet. Quos cum primò sic decepisset, non multo post astutiâ suâ illos circumveniens, terrâ omnibusque rebus suis defraudavit. Unde non minima altercatio inter ipsum et dominum episcopum excrevit hac de causa. Sed, ut Scriptura dicit, "Fili hujus sæculi prudentiores filiis lucis in generatione sua sunt," ipse astutia sua sanctum virum seducens, nunc servitium spondens, nunc aliarum terrarum damnum se illaturum minans, vsque dum vixit sermonem infinitum protraxit, servitium tamen ei pro eisdem terris demum fecit, et de suo dominio eas recognovit, licet, eas dimittere nollet. Hæ sunt terræ quas ipse de hoc monasterio et de vicin fratrū possidebat, Actun, Earesbyri, Beningwurthe, et in civitate domos quamplures, et in Warewicshire Mylecota, et Westun, et de episcopatu Eownilad et Doeiglesford. Cum autem in longum de his terris inter ipsos altercatio protraheretur, abbas ipse podagræ dolore corripitur et defungitur suo pontifici, nec pacatus nec absolutus ab ipso. Pro cujus anima cum ipse reverentissimus episcopus Wlstanus compassionis visceribus permotus, orationes peculiare instantissimè crebrè faceret, subitò et ipse podagræ dolore in crure et pedibus invaditur, in tantum, ut non solùm à medicis qui ad eum curandum conducebantur curari non posset, immò etiam desperaretur et à curatione cessaretur. Qui mox ut humana sibi suffragari non posse sensit auxilia, ad nota orationum confugit subsidia, et (ut ipse nobis referre sæpiùs solebat) nocte quadam sibi oranti divinitus revelatum est, quod hanc infirmitatem ideo incurrisset, quia pro ipsius abbatis anima preces peculiare faceret, dictumque est ei, ut si curari vellet, dimitteret. Quod cum suis primo mane narraret, et ut sibi præceptum fuerat, ab ejus memoria agenda cessaret, statim absque humanæ medicinæ adminiculo intra paucos dies sanus effectus est. Unde colligere possumus quante dampnationis sit terras et possessiones monasteriorum invadere, et monasteriis auferre, quando etiam pro ipsis raptoribus exorari Deus aversatur. Sed de his satis. Jam propositum persequamur. Successit igitur in abbatis regimine ipsi Egelwio abbas Walterius, qui cum omnes terras quas prædecessor ejus sic adquisitas possederat et ipse possideret, Odo quidam episcopus Bajocensis et comes Cantuariensis, frater scilicet Willelmi regis, omnes terras quas ipse abbas sæpedictus Egelwius possidebat, absque terris quæ justè ad abbatiam pertinerent, à rege, fratre videlicet suo, postulavit et accepit, nostrasque terras quas ipse sic possederat cum aliis invasit; sicque eas perdidimus: vix tamen dominus episcopus servitium de aliquibus eis adquisivit, ipseque qui eas primitus monasterio abstulit nihil præter peccatum inde habuit.

De Herefordshire.

Postquam rex Eadmundus, cui prænomen erat Latus ferreum, bellum contra Cnut ter in uno anno commiserat, et Angliam secum postremò partitus fuerat, provincia vicecomitatus de Herefordshire comiti Ronig cui sic vocabulum erat tradita fuit. Qui denique et sui quos habebat milites terras quascunque potuissent arripientes ecclesiae de Wireceastre, has etiam terras et villas cum omnibus eis subjacentibus abstulerunt, scilicet Pencofan, et Cogre, et Upledene, et Aclea, et Roecessford, quasdam propter debilitatem eorum qui eas servare debuissent, quasdam verò propter regis vectigalia sæpe supervenientia et importabilia, quasdam autem propter alia innumerabilia injuriarum incommoda. Super his igitur talibus et tantis amissionibus et sancti loci privationibus nos omnipotentem Dominum, et totius boni hæredem, ejusque piissimam genitricem sanctam Mariam, necnon beatum Oswaldum patronum Wigornensis ecclesiae atque advocatum inobliviscentibus precibus invocamus, quatinus sanctæ suæ misericordiae respectu has terras ablatas per aliquem bonum hominem juri ecclesiae cui debentur quandoque restituat, et eos qui consilium vel auxilium ad hoc impendere studuerint, indeficientem mercedem habere perpetualiter concedant.

De Scropshire.

Comes quidam, Swegen nomine, adeo deditus erat vanæ gloriae, adeo lætifera peste fatigabatur superbiae, ut filium se esse comitis Godwini omnimodo negaret. De stirpe verò Cnuti regis strenuissimi se esse profitebatur, illumque suum patrem et de nullo alio se genitum fore mentiendo testabatur. Quam nimiae arrogantiae vanitatem mater illius, conjux videlicet præfati ducis Godwini, exhorrescens, multis ex Occidentalium Saxonum parte adductis nobiles feminis, se matrem illius, et Godwinum patrem ejus esse, magnis juramentis et illarum probavit testimoniis. Obstitit ille et de eorum stirpe dixit se originem non duxisse. Iste idem de quo loquimur sanguine sanguinem tangens, iniquitati videlicet iniquitatem addens, ut superbiae et vanæ gloriae sic etiam carnis illecebris quadam animi devotione serviebat; scilicet abbatissam de monasterio, quod Leomynstre dicitur, vi abstractam, quod dici nefas est, suo per totius anni curriculum conjugio sociavit. Verùm hanc Deo et hominibus rem nimium detestabilem venerabiles viri, Edsius Cantuariæ archiepiscopus, et Lifingus hujus Wigornensis ecclesiae episcopus, nullatenus ferentes, illum pro tali facto vehementer increpare cœpere, et nisi ab hoc citiùs resipisceret opere, eum se velle excommunicare jurejurando dixere. Quorum increpationem ipse non modicum pertimescens, licet invitus, à tam Deo re perosa cœpit se abstinere. Verùm ad vindictam hujus talis increpationis, per illum et per alios suos amicos æque sibi potentes, his terris, Moerebroc videlicet, et Hopton et Uferecleobyrig, cum multis aliis in Scropshire sitis caruimus.

De Steffordshire.

Villa quæ dicitur Swinford, sita in Steffordshire, et alia villæ sitæ in Wigereceastre, quæ ita nominantur, Clent et Terdebiggan, ad jus monasterii quondam pertinere domini Wlstani episcopi didicimus relatione, qui pius pater quomodo adquisitæ et quomodo iterum ablatae fuerunt, hoc modo sæpiùs narrare solebat. Dixit enim quendam decanum loci istius exstitisse, Ægelsium nomine, nobilem valde et prudentem, tam in monasticis quàm in sæcularibus actionibus, in tantum ut etiam inter consiliarios regis connumeraretur, et esset inter eos satis conspicabilis. Hinc factum est, ut in divitiis et pecuniarum abundantia plurimos majoris ordinis præcelleret. Unde et ab ipso rege Athelredo has prædictas villas emit cc. libris argenti in jus perpetuum monasterii, ipseque quoad vixit tempore eas possedit. Mortuo autem rege Athelredo, facta est magna turbatio patriæ, certantibus de regno Eadmundo filio ejus, et Cnut rege Danorum. Manente verò regni, ut jam dixi, discidio, defunctus est ipse Ægelsinus decanus. Quo mortuo, quidam malignus homo, Eirc nomine, qui fuit vicecomes in Staeffordshire illis temporibus, easdem villas invasit, et quia non erat qui justitiam sanctæ ecclesiae faceret, regno ubique, ut sæpe dixi, turbato, nec adhuc sub uno rege stabilito, à possessione hujus monasterii ipse Dei inimicus eas villas alienavit. Unde hucusque sub manu vicecomitis de Staeffordshire sunt omnes eadem villæ, licet quædam in hoc vicecomitatu sint sitæ.

De Werewicsshire.

Tempore quo Cnut rex Danorum, hac patria devicta, vectigal inportabile toti Anglorum regno imposuerat, ablatæ sunt hæ villulæ in Warewicshire à monasterii possessione, vi et fraude malignorum Danorum, quorum potentia eo tempore terrori erat indigenis hujus patriæ.

Nomina autem terrarum hæc sunt, Ludingtun et Droei-tun, et iij. hidæ ad Lockeslea, et Lappawurthin, et dimidia Mylekote. Constituerunt enim, ut si quid vectigalis ad terminum constituti diei deesset, quisquis prius pecuniam pro ea solveret ejus possessioni subjaceret. Hac calliditate inventa, quisquis aliquam terram de monasterio concupierat, pecunia data vicecomiti, vectigali refutato etiamsi satis tempestivo, quod malè concupierat pro libitu injustè rapiebat. Sed Deus hanc sui rapinam absque ultione non dimisit. Nam unusquisque eorum qui huic fraudi operam dederunt digna ultione percussi, aut luminibus privati, aut paralisi dissoluti, aut in insaniam versi sunt, plurimi etiam semetipsos interfecerunt. Eo quoque tempore Edwinus, frater Leofrici comitis, isto modo invasit has villas quæ his nominibus appellantur: Bikemerc in Warewicscire, et Wicbald in hoc vicecomitatu et alias de quibus jam diximus in Scropscire. Sed ipse diu hac rapina gavisus non est. Nam ipse non multò post à Grifino rege Brittonum ignominiosa morte peremptus est. Ad cujus xxx. diem pius pater Wlstanus, tunc temporis prior hujus monasterii, et Wilstanus præpositus, qui postea fuit abbas Gloceastre, cum venissent ad Alritune expetentes terras monasterii, vix pratum solummodo ad Marnanlive acquirere potuerunt; villas verò nullo modo acquirere valuerunt, sed usque hodie injustè retentæ sunt, quod Deus emendet cum sibi placuerit. Oegeluuius quoque abbas Eoveshamii prosperis successibus in tantum accrescens in sæculo, ut sub rege Willelmo seniore judex factus esset provinciæ, cum dimidiam partem quæ ante a monasterio ablata fuerat; ipsius villæ quæ Mylekota dicitur, ab ipso qui eam possederat, suis ingeniis, ut solebat, adquisisset, instabat quantum poterat ut etiam medietatem ejus quæ adhuc monasterio subjacebat acquireret. Tandemque, acquisitis fautoribus quibusdam etiam ex consiliariis episcopi pecunia sua, spondens quoque se nominatam pecuniam unoquoque anno pro ea persolvere; insuper etiam et ejus terræ medietatem quæ ante ablata fuerat post certum annorum spatium se promisit velle monasterio reintegrare, suorum precibus et consiliis victus quievit episcopus. Acceptâ verò terrâ abbas vix anno uno conventionem tenuit. Fracta autem conventionem, et ipse morte multatus est. Post cujus obitum, ut jam diximus, Odo episcopus frater regis, eandem terram, sicuti et omnes alias quas tenebat præter abbatiam invasit, sicque à monasterii dominio deviauit.

De Oxanfordscire.

In vicecomitatu Oxenfordensi duæ villæ ditioni hujus monasterii adjacebant, quæ his nominibus vocantur, Hethrop et Kidigtun, quas rex gloriosissimus Offa Deo et sanctæ Dei genetrici ad usus servorum Dei qui in hoc monasterio Deo servire studuerint regali munificentia donavit. Has postea iniquissimi Dani, cum hanc patriam invasissent, suis dolis et fraudibus et sæculari potentia à monasterii possessione abstulerunt.

De Gloceastrescire.

Eo tempore quo Edric cognomento Streona, id est, adquisitor, sub rege primitus Athelredo, et postea aliquandiu sub Cnut omni Anglorum regno præerat, et quasi subregulus dominabatur, in tantum ut villulas villis et provincias provinciis pro libito adjungeret, nam vicecomitatum de Wincelcumb quæ per se tunc erat, vicecomitatui Gloceastre adjunxit. Hic tanta fretus potentia, ab hujus monasterii possessione, Leofsigo episcopo existente, vi et fortitudine sua iij. villas abstulit, quæ his nominibus appellantur, Boecceshofre, et Aesige, et Keingaham. Sed non multò post etiam ipse omnia sua cum vita perdidit, jubente namque Cnut rege occisus atque extra murum Londoniæ ignominiosè projectus, nec etiam sepulturæ judicatus est dignus. Deo sibi dignam ultionem reddente, ut qui multorum monasteriorum destructor, et cunctorum fere extiterat oppressor, à cunctis etiam ad sepulturam sperneretur. Simili modo tempore Williemi regis Rocgerius de Jvri invasit terram in Gloceastrescire quæ Hamtun nominatur, domino Wlstano episcopo existente in legatione regis apud Ce-astram. Et quia regnum erat adhuc turbatum, et de episcopatu etiam inter Thomam archiepiscopum et dominum nostrum altercatio, nulla hinc eo tempore poterat esse discussio. Hinc factum est ut usque hodie monasterium inde spoliatum est. Nec ipse impunè super rapina gavisus est. Nam vivens, cum esset ditissimus et pincerna regis carissimus, regalem incurrit iram, vixque fuga vitam ad modicum protexit, omnesque suas possessiones permaximas perdidit, et exul à patria ignominiosè post parvum tempus obiit.

Hunc libellum de possessionibus hujus nostri monasterii, ego Hemmingus monachus et sacerdos quamvis indignus, et conservus servorum Dei habitantium in monasterio sanctæ Dei genetricis Mariæ sito in urbe quæ Anglicè Wigornaceaster nominatur, multorum antiquorum hominum et maximè domini Wlstani episcopi piissimi patris nostri edoctus relatione, et corroboratus auctoritate, quædam etiam ex nostra memoria ipsemet quibus aut interfui aut quæ nostra ætate facta sunt intermiscui, utpote de terris quas Francigeni invaserunt, quæ omnia tanto certius dico quanto ea nostra memoria recolit facta, ea maximè intentione composui, ut posteris nostris claresceret quæ et quantæ possessiones terrarum ditioni hujus monasterii adjacere ad victum duntaxat servorum Dei, monachorum videlicet, jure deberent, quamque injustè vi et dolis spoliati his caremus. Quid verò utilitatis hoc meo labore exerceatur, Dei pietas meliùs novit, cui totum committo. Quantum tamen ad meam attinet dispositionem hæc est, ut si quando Dei gratia concedente cor regis justitia qua nunc marcescit consolidetur, lexque quæ nunc injustis principibus confusa est justitia fulciete stabilietur, sciat sive episcopus, sive decanus, vel aliquis prælatus, hujus monasterii, dum tempus aptum invenerit, quomodo eas proclamat, quomodo eas expetat, ne ignorantia nebulis absconsæ penitus ex memoria deleantur. Cognitis enim causis, personis, et temporibus quibus aut per quos quove modo ipsæ terræ vel possessiones à monasterii dominatione ablatae sint, satis meliùs et convenientiùs quilibet earum proclamator, et ad jus monasterii quo justè suppetere deberent strenuus et justus exactor, suam componet orationem, et compositam majori auctoritate, diligenter et nominatim singulis expressis causis, personis, temporibus, fulcire prævalet proclamationem. Noverit autem studiosus lector me hoc opus non mea præsumptione, sed plurimorum rogatu, maximè tamen ipsius reverentissimi patris nostri jam dicti et sæpe nominandi, domini videlicet Wlstani episcopi jussione incœpisse, cujus orationibus suffultus veraciter credo ad finem usque me perduxisse. Solebat namque inter jocunda ammonitionis suæ colloquia, quæ nobiscum ut pius pater frequenter habere delectabatur, non quidem me solum expresso nomine, sed cunctos fratres quos fortè casus sibi præsentaverat pigritiæ et desidiæ arguere, cur nos otio torpentes res præcedenti sive nostro tempore gestas de possessionibus duntaxat ecclesiæ nostræ nollemus litteris commendare, cum nos et plura oculis nostris facta vidissemus, et ipse utpote vir venerandæ senectutis et canitiei multa posset recollere quæ plurimorum non erant recondita memoriæ. Aiebat etiam non minimum posteritatis nostræ temporibus, si litterali memoriæ commendaretur, huic monasterio evenire posse Deo donante proficuum, sicut è contrario si negligeretur accideret damnum, dum nullus superesset qui memoria recollere posset, aut ei ætati rerum gestarum veritatem vel ordinem narrare nosset. His siquidem adhortationibus plurimum instigatus, ad postremum etiam ejus præcepto constrictus, et auctoritate corroboratus, hoc opus aggredi sum exorsus, in jubentis magis orationibus quàm in propriis viribus confisus. Erat namque idem reverentissimus pater noster, licèt sæcularium rerum minimè cupidus, hujus monasterii plurimum studens semper utilitatibus, et ne sua ut quorundam prædecessorum suorum negligentia, commissa sibi ecclesiæ damnum aliquod posteris temporibus pateretur, pro posse suo præcavebat providus. Unde et scrinium monasterii coram se reserari fecit, diligenterque omnia antiquorum privilegia et testamenta de possessionibus hujus ecclesiæ perscrutatus est, ne fortè custodum negligentia putrefacta aut iniquorum avaritia forent distracta. Cumque ex parte ut putaverat repperisset, curavit studiosè et putrescentia reparare, et quæ iniquè distracta fuerunt strenuè acquirere, adquisita verò insimul congregare, congregataque in duobus voluminibus studuit ordinare. In uno quidem ordinavit omnia primitiva testamenta et privilegia, in quibus manifestabatur quomodo vel per quos primò terrarum possessiones huic monasterio datæ sint. In altero verò cyrographa quibus beatus Oswaldus archiepiscopus, cum adiutorio regis Ædgari, terras injustè à viris potentibus aliquanto tempore possessas ditioni ecclesiæ attitulavit, easque regali auctoritate et senatorum consensu, et principum patriæ testimonio, data unicuique cyrographi cautione, post duorum vel trium hæredum tempora juri ecclesiæ absque contradictione reddendas, cyrographorum etiam exemplaribus in scrinio sanctæ ecclesiæ ob testmonum collocatis suis scriptis successoribus manifestavit. Quibus ordinatis, præcepit cuncta eodem ordine in bibliotheca sanctæ ecclesiæ scribi, quatinus etiamsi, ut assolet, contingeret quod aliqua negligentia testamentales scedulæ perderentur, earum exemplaria saltem inibi conscripta nullatenus oblivioni traderentur. Hoc quoque juxta velle et imperium suum patrato, præcepit adhuc omnia privilegia et cyrographa terrarum quæ propriè ad victum monachorum pertinent separatim ex his congregari, eaque similiter in duobus voluminibus eodem ordine adunari, quod in hoc codicello ejus, ut prædixi, imperio pro modulo meæ parvitatatis, studiosus lector fecisse me animadvertere potest. Deprecor ergo, ut si cui hic parvitatatis meæ labor cordi sedet, orationis mercedem mihi peccatori impendere non deneget: si cui verò displicet, aut superfluum judicat, sciat me non fastidiosus et desidiosus, sed strenuus et studiosus laborasse, eisque qui pro sanctæ matris ecclesiæ proficuo et augmentatione non solùm strenuè certare, verumetiam si necesse erit et semetipsos impendere non dubitant, hoc opus sacrasse. Annuat quæso omnipotens Deus, et sanctæ ecclesiæ honor et potestas jugiter crescat et augmentetur ad laudem Domini nostri Jesu Christi qui cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto vivit et regnat Deus in secula seculorum. Amen.

De Ealdestune.

Ego Wlstanus gratia Dei Wigorniensis ecclesiæ pontifex monasterium sanctæ Dei genitricis Mariæ à piæ memoriæ, beato scilicet Oswaldo, predecessore meo, in sede episcopali constructum, majori honore et dignitate amplificare cupiens, non solùm in ecclesiæ constructione, et oratione, verumetiam ex monachorum ibidem Deo famulantium illud locupletari studui augmentatione. Quod utrumque Dei omnipotentis miseratio per me servum suum adimplere ex parte dignata est. Nam cum à me paulò plus quàm duodecim inventi fuissent fratres, usque ad quinquaginta à me ibi congregati sunt in eodem monasterio Dei mancipati servitio, unde factum est ut sicut numerum fratrum, ita etiam ad eorum opus augere oportunitatem duximus possessiones terrarum. Consilio igitur inito cum optimatibus meis, terram quandam xv. hidarum, quæ Alfestun ab incolis nominatur, multo tempore à quibusdam potentibus hominibus injustè possessam, maximo labore et pecuniæ donatione à rege Willielmo seniore adquisivi, adquisitam verò ad victum eorundem fratrum in eodem monasterio Deo servientium dedi, eamque super altare sanctæ Dei genitricis Mariæ, pro remedio animæ meæ, atque ejusdem regis, filique sui Willielmi similiter regis, in testimonio tam optimatum ejus et meorum, quàm etiam totius populi devotè obtuli, anno Dominicæ incarnationis MLXXXVIIJ. Indict. xij. regni autem regis Willelmi junioris tertio, episcopatus verò mei xxvij. ingressionis nostræ in novum monasterium quod construxi in honore ejusdem Dei genitricis primo, die sancto Pentecostes. Adjuro igitur et obtestor per nomen terribile omnipotentis Dei, tam cunctos fratres et coepiscopos, meos suc-

cessores, quàm etiam omnes Christianæ fidei cultores, ut sicut sua statuta et decreta inconvulsa servari desiderant, sic hanc meam donationem et elemosinam subtrahere, vel minuere non audeant. Si quis autem, demoniaco instinctus spiritu, hanc meam donationem, quod absit, subtrahere, vel ab eorum, scilicet Dei servorum, possessione auferre, sive in aliquo minuere conatur, ex auctoritate Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, omnium sanctorum patrum prædecessorum meorum et mea excommunicatione, anathemate æternæ dampnationis perpetualiter constringatur, et cum Juliano apostata, ecclesiarum Dei raptore et destructore, in die judicii dampnetur, nisi à talibus conatibus desistat, et dignâ pœnitentiâ Deo, ipsisque Dei servis satisfaciat. Hæc verò servantibus vita et pax æterna prestetur in cœlestibus. Nomina enim testium qui huic meæ donationi, et interfuerunt et consenserunt, hæc sunt.

LARGIFLUA Dei gratia præordinante, &c. beata semperque Virgine Maria ut fas est credere suffragante; adjuncta simul beati Osuualdi intercessione. Aldredus archiepiscopus venerabilem virum Wulstanum nondum ad episcopatus apicem electum editum constituit Wigornensis ecclesiæ. Vidit enim in illo castitatem vigere aliasque diversas virtutes in eo mansionem habere. Illum laude dignis moribus præditum fore, nec suam vitam ceterorum ducere more: mundanam omnino pompam despiciere, et cœlestem duntaxat inhianter concupiscere. Unde non solum ab ipso Aldredo archiepiscopo, verum etiam ab omnibus regibus, videlicet ducibus et principibus, honorabatur et summo affectu diligebatur. Dignis eum quique attollebant honoribus, et ob religionis cultum diligebant præ omnibus quos ipse mutua caritate ut erat columbinæ simplicitatis in Christi complectebatur visceribus; de die vero in diem ad meliora proficiens, Deique adiutorio virtutes virtutibus addens prioratum Wigornensis ecclesiæ dispensatione divina coactus est suscipere. Quod tamen potius causa obedientiæ quam adipiscendæ suscepit gloriæ, venerabilis interea comitissa Godgiva, fama bonitatis ejus audita, totis illum cepit diligere visceribus, et in diversis hujus sæculi subvenire necessitatibus; cujus siquidem precibus comes Leofricus, conjunx videlicet suus, duas terras, Blaccauella et Uulfordilea vocatas, illi donavit quas antea Dani cæterique Dei adversarii vi abstulerant et ab ipsa Wigornensi ecclesia penitus alienaverant. Alteram quoque terram quam incolæ illius Ikacumb nuncupant, filius præfati comitis, Ælfgarus nomine, a quibusdam optinuit, et pro suæ remedio animæ prædicti viri Dei juri tradidit. Cernens autem venerandus archiepiscopus Aldredus hunc servum Dei bonis operibus insudare nichil de terrenis curare solummodo cœlestibus inhiare, in episcopatum Wigornensis ecclesiæ decrevit eum sullevare. Quod sicut disposuit mente licet multum reniteretur ille non multo post implevit opere. Suscepto itaque tanti honoris culmine, qualiter illud Deo se protegente, quam sanctis operibus decoraverit, nullus edicere poterit. Mansit autem in episcopatu xxxii. annis, mensibus iiii. et iii^{bis}. septimanis. Prioratum vero Wigornensis ecclesiæ suscepit pro ipso frater illius Ælfstanus nomine qui terras tres, Lenc videlicet, et Dunhamstede, et Pecceslea sua acquisivit strenuitate: ipse etiam servus Dei Wulstanus in hac qua manemus heremo adhuc manens omnibus omnia fiebat ut omnes Christo lucrari posset; ideoque qui nomen ejus vel facta audiebat illum summopere diligebat. A Willelmo quoque rege cæteris amplius amabatur, cæteris amplius majoris et minoris gloriæ viris pro vitæ suæ merito honorabatur. Cui poscenti dedit terram duorum cassatorum quæ Cullaclif dicitur, et alteram xv. cassatorum quæ Ælfestun nominatur. Has insuper terras, Myztun scilicet et Earzun, et duas Lindencizear et Penhülle, et Grimmanleah sibi reddidit quæ ille omnia Thomæ venerabili priori, qui prioratum post Ælfstanum optinuit, commisit. Molendinum quoque apud Northpican et quartam partem terræ ad usus fratrum donavit; et monasterium quod in Uestbyrig situm est ejusdem prioris Thomæ custodiæ mancipavit. Quod videlicet monasterium beatus Oswaldus prius extruxit, monachis stabilivit, et terris hominibusque illas excolentibus ditavit. Verum post mortem illius sic a perversis diaboli filiis scilicet a piratis vastatum est ut non remaneret in eo nisi unus solummodo presbiter qui divinæ servitutis officium raro explevit, at recordandæ memoriæ Wlstanus post susceptum episcopatus honorem illud reædificavit terris hominibus, et vestimentis ad Dei servitium pertinentibus nobilitavit, ibidemque secundum loci positionem monachos coadunavit et monasterium cum omnibus quæ ibi erant ecclesiæ Wigornensi subjugavit.

DOMINO meo karissimo regi Anglorum Edgardo, ego Oswaldus Uigornensis ecclesiæ episcopus, omnium quæ mihi, per ipsius clementiam, munerum tradita sunt, apud Deum et apud homines gratias ago. Igitur, si Dei misericordia suppeditet, coram Deo et hominibus perpetually ei fidelis permanebo, reminiscens, cum gratiarum actione, largifluæ benignitatis ejus, quia per meos illud, quod magnopere expetebam, mihi concessit inter nuntios, id est, reverentissimum Dunstanum archiepiscopum, et venerandum Athelwoldum Uintoniæ episcopum, et virum magnificum Brihtnothum comitem, quorum legatione et adjutorio meam et sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ quærelam suscepit, et secundum consilium sapientum et principum suorum juste emendavit, ad sustentamen ecclesiæ, quam mihi benigne et libens regendam commisit. Quare, quo modo fidos mihi subditos telluribus, quæ meæ traditæ sunt potestati per spatium temporis trium hominum, id est, duorum post se hæredum, condonarem, placuit tam mihi, quam ipsis fautoribus et consiliariis meis, cum ipsius domini mei regis licentia et attestacione, ut fratribus meis, successoribus scilicet episcopis, per cirographi cautionem apertius enuclearem, ut sciant, quid ab eis extorquere juste debeant, secundum conventionem cum eis factam et sponsionem suam, unde et hanc epistolam, ob cautelæ causam, componere studui, ne quis, malignæ cupiditatis instinctu, hoc sequenti tempore mutare volens, abjurare à servitio ecclesiæ queat. Hæc itaque conventio cum eis facta est, ipso domino meo rege annuente, et sua attestacione munificentia suæ largitatem roborante et confirmante, omnibusque ipsius regiminis sapientibus et principibus attestantibus et consentientibus. Hoc pacto eis terras sanctæ ecclesiæ sub me tenere concessi, hoc est, ut omnis equitandi lex ab eis impleatur, quæ ad equites pertinet, et ut pleniter persolvant omnia, quæ ad jus ipsius ecclesiæ juste competunt, scilicet ea quæ Anglice dicuntur c̅p̅ce þceott, 7 þol,^a 7 tacc,^b et cætera jura ecclesiæ, nisi episcopus quid alicui eorum perdonare voluerit, seseque quamdiu ipsas terras tenent, in mandatis pontificis humiliter cum omni subjectione perseverare etiam jure jurando affirmant. Super hæc etiam ad omnis industria episcopi indigentiam semetipsos præsto impendant, equos præstent, ipsi equitent, et ad totum piramiticum opus ecclesiæ calcis, atque ad pontis edificium, ultro inveniatur parati. Sed et venationis sepem, domini episcopi ultronei ad ædificandum reperiantur, suaque, quancumque domino episcopo libuerit, venabula destinent venatum, insuper, ad multas alias indigentia causas, quibus opus est domino antistiti sæpe frunisci, sive ad suum servitium, sive ad regale explendum, semper illius archiductoris dominatui et voluntati, qui episcopatu præsidet, propter beneficium, quod illis præstitum est, cum omni humilitate et subjectione subditi fiant, secundum ipsius voluntatem, et terrarum, quas quisque possidet, quantitatem. Decurso autem præfati temporis curriculo, videlicet duorum post eos, qui eas modo possident, hæredum vitæ spatio, in ipsius antistitis sit arbitrio, quid inde velit, et, quomodo sui velle sit, inde ita stet, sive ad suum opus eas retinere, si sic sibi utile judicaverit, sive eas alicui diutius præstare, si sic sibi placuerit, velit; ita dumtaxat, ut semper ecclesiæ servitia pleniter, ut præfati sumus, inde persolvantur. Ast si quid præfatorum, delicti prevaricantis causa, defuerit virum, prævaricationis delictum, secundum quod præsulis jus est, emendet, aut illo, quo antea potitus est, dono et terra careat. Si quis vero, diabolo instigante, quod minime optamus, extiterit, qui per nostrum beneficium ecclesiam Dei fraude, seu vi, sua possessione, aut servitio debito privare temptaverit, ipse nostra, omnique benedictione Dei, et sanctorum ejus privetur; nisi profundissima emendatione, illud corrigere studeat, et ad pristinum statum quod defrudavit^a redigat. Scriptum est enim, 'raptores et sacrilegi regnum Dei non consequentur.' Nunc autem, propter Deum et sanctam Mariam, in cujus nomine hoc monasterium dicatum est, moneo et præcipio, ut nullo modo quis hoc prævaricare audeat, sed, sicut a nobis statutum est, ut præfati sumus, perpetualiter maneat. Qui custodierit, omni benedictione repleatur, qui vero infringent, maledicetur a Domino et ab omnibus sanctis. Amen. Gratanter, reverentissime Domine, quo tantis tuæ donis clementiæ, secundum quod totius creatoris cosmi est velle prædictus sum meæ operam voluntatis, ut pro te tuisque Deum jugiter interpellem, devotus impendam, meosque successores ad hoc hortari studebo, ut Domini misericordiam pro te deprecari non desinant, ut Christus pace qui perhenni regnat ethrali in arce te consortio dignum haberi dignetur sanctorum omnium in aula cœlesti. Valeat in ævum, qui hoc studuerit servare decretum. Harum textus epistolarum tres sunt ad prætitulationem et ad signum, una in ipsa civitate quæ vocatur Uuigraceaster, altera cum venerabili Dunstano archiepiscopo in Cantuaria, tertia cum Atheluuoldo episcopo in Uuintonia civitate.

Conventio inter Wlstanum Episcopum et Walterium Abbatem de Eovesham.

HÆC est confirmatio conventionis factæ inter episcopum Wlstanum et Walterium abbatem de Eovesham, de xv. hidis in Heamtone et III. in Benincuyrthe. Hoc est quod ipse abbas recognovit, teste omni conventu Wigornensis ecclesiæ, et multis fratribus de Eovesham, et Remigio episcopo, et Henrico de Fereris, et Waltero Giffardo, et Adam regis principibus, qui venerant ad inquirendas terras comitatus, quod ille xv. hidæ juste pertinent ad Osuualdes lauue hundredum episcopi, et debent cum ipso episcopo censum regis solvere, et omnia alia servitia ad regem pertinentia, et inde idem requirere ad placitandum; et de III. hidis prædictis in Bennincuyrthe similiter. Sed episcopus ibi plus calumniabatur, quia reclamabat totam ipsam terram ad suum dominium; sed quia ipse abbas hoc humiliter recognovit, rogatu ipsorum qui affuerunt, ipse episcopus permisit illam terram ipsi abbati et fratribus tali pacto, ut ipse abbas faciat inde tam honorabilem recognitionem et servitium, sicut ipse ab ipso episcopo et quam diu requirere poterit. Hujus conventionis testes sunt prænominati barones regis, et alii quorum nomina hic habentur. † Serlo abbas de Glocestre. † Nigellus clericus Remigii episcopi. † Vlf monachus Remigii episcopi. † Wlsi presbiter. † Rannulfus monachus ejusdem. † Eðric de Hindelep. † Alfuinus monachus de sancto Remigio. † Godric de Piria. † Ailricus archidiaconus. † Ordric niger. † Frihtericus clericus. † Alfuinus filius Brihtneri.

HÆC commemoratio Placiti quod fuit inter W. episcopum et Walterum abbatem de Eovesham, hoc est, quod ipse episcopus reclamabat super ipsum abbatem sacam et socam, et sepulturam, et circsecat, et requisitiones, et omnes consuetudines faciendas ecclesiæ Wigornensi in hundredo de Oswaldeslawe, et geldum regis, et servitium, et expeditiones in terra et in mari, de xv. hidis in Hantona et de IIII^{or}. hidis de Benningewrde, quas debebat abbas tenere de episcopo, sicut alii feudati ecclesiæ ad omne debitum servitium regis et episcopi libere tenent. De hac re fuit magna contentio inter episcopum et abbatem, qui abbas diu resistens injuste hoc defendebat. Ad ultimum tamen hæc causa ventilata et discussa fuit per justitiam, et breve et præceptum regis Willelmi senioris, quod misit de Normannia, in præsentia Gosfridi Constantiensis episcopi, cui rex mandaverat, ut interesset prædicto Placito, et faceret decernere veritatem inter episcopum et abbatem, et fieri plenam rectitudinem. Ventum est in causam. Conventus magnus factus est in Wirecestra vicinorum comitatum et baronum ante Gosfridum episcopum. Discussa est res. Facta est supradicta reclamatio W. episcopi super abbatem. Abbas hanc defendit. Episcopus legitimos testes inde reclamavit, qui tempore regis Eduuardi hæc viderant, et prædicta servitia ad opus episcopi susceperant. Tandem, ex præcepto justitiæ regis, et decreto baronum, itum est ad iudicium. Et quia abbas dixit, se testes contra episcopum non habere, iudicatum est ab optimatibus, quod episcopus testes suos nominaret, et die constituta adduceret, et per sacramentum dicta episcopi probarent, et abbas quascumque vellet relliquias afferret. Concessum est ab utraque parte. Venit dies statuta. Venit episcopus W. et abbas Walterus, et, ex præcepto Gosfridi episcopi, affuerunt barones, qui interfuerant priori Placito et Iudicio. Attulit abbas relliquias, scilicet corpus sancti Eeguini. Ibi affuerunt ex parte episcopi probabiles personæ, paratæ facere prædictum sacramentum: quarum unus fuit Edricus qui fuit, tempore regis Eduuardi sternmannus navis episcopi, et ductor exercitus ejusdem episcopi ad servitium regis; et hic erat homo Rodberti Herefordensis episcopi, ea die, qua sacramentum optulit, et nichil de episcopo W. tenebat. Affuit etiam Kinewardus, qui fuit vicecomes Wirecestrescire, qui hæc vidit, et hoc testabatur. Affuit etiam Siwardus dives homo de Seropscyre, et Osbernus filius Ricardi, et Turchil de Warewicscyre, et multi alii seniores et nobiles, quorum major pars jam dormiunt. Multi autem adhuc superstites sunt qui illos audierunt, et adhuc multi de tempore regis Willelmi idem testificantes. Abbas autem videns, sacramentum et probationem totam paratam esse, et nullo modo remanere si vellet recipere, accepto ab amicis consilio, episcopo demisit sacramentum, et totam quærelam recognovit, et omnem rem sicut episcopus reclamaverat, et inde, concordiam se facturum cum episcopo, conventionem fecit. Et inde sunt legitimi testes apud nos, milites homines Sanctæ Mariæ et episcopi qui hoc viderunt et audierunt, parati hoc probare per sacramentum et bellum, contra Rannulfum fratrem ejusdem Walteri abbatis, quem ibi viderunt, qui cum fratre suo tenebat illud Placitum contra episcopum, si hanc conventionem negare voluerit factam inter episcopum et abbatem. Habemus etiam sacri ordinis viros, sacerdotes et diaconos, paratos illud affirmare iudicio Dei.

EGREGIO Merciorum regi Wlfario, qui regum totius Merciæ fidem Christi primus suscepit, germanus suus, gloriosus rex sanctus Æthelredus, in regnum successit: cui Huuiciorum subregulus Osherus, vir multum laudabilis, Huuiciam, cui dignitate præsidebat regiâ, proprii antistitis dignitate honorari sullimarique desiderans regimine, consilium dedit utile; rogavitque summopere, quatinus suum, quod tunc cæteris regnis præminebat Angliæ, pluribus antistitibus decoraret venustiùs, ac honoraret sullimiùs, sicut quosdam reges Angliæ noverat olim fecisse. Qui, cum priùs id idem faciendi magno flagraret desiderio, mox ejus suasionibus salubribusque consiliis acquievit; et archipræsule Doruberniæ Theodoro ad se accersito, rogavit ut, regno suo plures in parochias diviso, episcopos locis constitueret oportunis. Ille autem utile satis regis votum grantanter approbans, quod rogabatur sine dilatione maturabat explere. Itaque diocesim, cui tunc Saxuulfus pontificali regimine præfuit, cum consensu ejusdem regis ac principum illius, in quinque parochias divisit; anno ab incarnatione Domini dclxxviiiij. Et quia civitas Wigorna, tempore quo regnabant Brytones, vel Romani in Brytannia, et tunc et nunc totius Huuicciæ, vel Mage-setaniæ, metropolis extitit famosa, cathedram erexit pontificalem digniter in ea, parochiarum jam divisarum primam constituens Huuicciam: ad quam, de monasterio Hild abbatissæ, vir strenuissimus ac doctissimus, Tatfrithus electus est antistes; sed priusquam ordinari posset, morte præreptus est immaturâ. Uberius tamen et locupletius ipse ac prædictus Osherus ejus subregulus ecclesiam Wigornensem, et tunc et post, variis ac preciosis ornamentis decoravere; terrisque ab eis eidem ecclesiæ delegatis, partim ad antistitis, partim ad canonicorum victum vestitumque, secundum archipræsulis Theodori dispositionem distributis, non mediocriter locupletavere.

Carta S. Wulstani cum Synodali Testimonio. A.D. 1092.

[MS. Harl. 4660, p. 16.]

✠ Ego Wlstanus gratia Dei Wigornensis episcopus decrevi Synodum congregare in monasterio sanctae Mariae in criptis quas ego a fundamentis aedificavi, et per misericordiam Dei postea dedicavi. Hæc synodus habita est anno dominicae incarnationis M.XC.II. indictione xv. Ad hanc synodum invitati convenerunt omnes sapientissimae personae de tribus comitatibus nostrae dioceseos, Wigracestriae videlicet, Gloucestriae, Wareuicciae, eo quod ego longævus dierum imbecillitatem corporis mei sentiens et finem vitae meae instare intelligens cupiebam res ecclesiasticas nostrae curae commissas canonice tractare, et quæque emendanda forent illorum sapienti concilio corrigere et emendare. Nostra itaque humilitate in hac synodo præsidente orta est Quæstio inter duos presbiteros: Ælfnothum scilicet presbiterum sanctae Elenae et Alam presbiterum sancti Albani de parochiis et consuetudinibus ecclesiarum suarum. Horum presbiterorum altercatio sanctam synodum multum detinuit. Hanc litem ego canonice discindere cupiens, jussi seniores quosque et quibus notissimae essent antiquae institutiones ecclesiarum seu parrochiarum Wigracestriae veritatem edicere tam de supradictarum quam de omnium ecclesiarum urbis Wigrac. antiquissimis institutionibus et parochiis earum. Et quum inter supradictorum presbiterorum disceptationem auditus est a sancta synodo clamor filiorum ecclesiae monachorum videlicet quod ipsi dampna paterentur suorum reddituum quos juste habere debuissent de sua ecclesia sanctae Elenae scilicet propter tam diuturnam presbiterorum discordiam, jussi ut sicut de institutione dicerent. Ad harum rerum scrutinium ex nostro præcepto fuerunt Thomas prior, Alfere secretarius, Godric Pirl camerarius, Vhtrea cantor, Ægelric archidiaconus, Eduuine frater ejus, Frideric, Ægelmar presbiter, cum aliis quamplurimis, quos ad hoc elegi. Hi omnes igitur, communi habito consilio, reversi in sanctam synodum affirmaverunt nullam esse parochiam in tota urbe Wigrac. nisi tantum matris ecclesiae, ecclesiam vero sanctae Elenae vicariam hujus matris ecclesiae extitisse a temporibus Æthelredi regis et Theodori archiepiscopi qui locum hunc fundaverunt et ibi Boselum primum episcopum constituerunt, anno incarnationis Domini DCLXXX. indict. VII. Hæc institutio a tempore supradicti Boseli per tempora omnium episcoporum hujus sanctae ecclesiae per manus clericorum in hac sede servientium inconversa servata est usque ad tempora beati Oswaldi archiepiscopi qui opitulatione Ædgari regis et auctoritate pii Dunstani Cantuariensis archiepiscopi de irregulari conversatione clericorum in regularem conversationem et habitum monachorum transtulit et mutavit hujus ecclesiae congregationem, anno dominicae incarnationis dccccclxix. indict. XII. Hujus pij patris Oswaldi temporibus Wynsius, sanctae El. presbiter, vicarius hujus sanctae matris ecclesiae extitit. Hic idem monitis sancti Oswaldi cum cæteris qui in clericali habitu huic ecclesiae utcunque serviebant, mundo post habito monasticae religionis habitum suscepit et claves ecclesiae sanctae Elenae, quarum ipse sicut vicarius

custos extiterat cum terris, decimis, cæterisque redditibus ad communem usum monachorum reddidit. Wynsio proinde monacho facto cum cæteris qui secum sponte converti elegerunt, tam supradicta ecclesia quam ceteræ quæ nunc usque monachorum sunt, ecclesiæ, terræ, sepulturæ, vel quælibet aliæ consuetudines seu dignitates ecclesiasticæ quæ clericorum quasi propria hactenus extiterant in jus monachorum transierunt et in communem usum illorum redactæ sunt assensu regis Eadgari et beati Dunstani sanctique Oswaldi archiepiscoporum. Anno tertio conversionis Wynsij presbiteri beatus Oswaldus prioratum ei super monachos hujus ecclesiæ concessit assensu ejusdem regis. Concessit etiam illi, omnibusque suis successoribus prioribus hujus ecclesiæ, decanos esse super omnes ecclesias suas et presbiteros ita videlicet quod nullus decanus, nullus archidiaconus, de monachorum ecclesiis seu clericis se intromittat nisi per priorem ecclesiæ. Omnes ecclesiasticas consuetudines prior sicut summus decanus episcopi pro suis ecclesiis episcopo persolvat. Harum rerum sicut ab antecessoribus nostris didicimus, et his nostris temporibus sub antecessore vestro Aldredo et vobis hactenus servatas vidimus testes sumus. Hoc igitur testimonium ego Wlstanus verum comprobans litem presbiterorum sedavi, et veram probationem testimonio hujus sanctæ synodi, literis nostris et sigillo corroboravi, cavens ne a modo de his rebus in hac sancta et matre ecclesia inter monachos et alias quaslibet personas dissensio sive scandalum oriatur. Servantibus hæc vita æterna donetur in cœlestibus. Qui autem fregerit vel in pejus mutaverit cum diabolo, et angelis ejus perpetuis dampnetur cruciatibus. Amen.

Compositio inter Episcopum et Monachos Wigornenses anno M.CC.XXIV. inita de Electione Prioris.

NOVERINT universi præsentis literas inspecturi, quod cum inter dominum W. episcopum Wigorn. et conventum ejusdem ecclesiæ ex uno latere variæ quæstiones essent obortæ, tam super institutione cujusdam W. quondam prioris de Malvern, quem prædictus episcopus dicto conventui præfecerat in priorem, quàm super institutione et destitutione priorum alias pro tempore faciendæ: item pro custodia dicti prioratus prioratu vacante, et super provenientibus tumbæ et feretrorum beati Wulstani, super pensionibus et debitis conventui ad mundatum episcopi detentis, nec non super modo ingrediendi capitulum, et dampnis, et expensis, et quæstionibus, et aliis injuriis hinc inde vario modo sicut dicebatur illatis. Item cum ex alio latere inter dictum conventum et præfatum W. quem illis dederat in priorem, ob institutionem ejusdem W. aliis quæstionibus et injuriis hinc inde illatis, similiter orta esset nonnulla contentio; viris providis et discretis pluries inter eos de pace reformandâ convenientibus in capitulo Wigorn. dominis S. Cantuar. archiepiscopo et J. Bathon. et H. Lincoln. episcopis, necnon de Evesham et de Rading abbatibus, cum aliis discretis viris, dicti episcopus et conventus Wigorn. super omnibus quæstionibus similiter inter se motis in dictos dominos Cantuar. Bathon. et Lincoln. et memoratos abbates de Evesham et de Rading, et magistrum S. de Eketun clericum dicti domini Cantuar. quos compositores amicabilem elegerunt, spontaneâ voluntate compromiserunt, super sacrosancta jurantes, quod eorum starent ordinationi in omnibus quæstionibus inter ipsos obortis. Secedentibus igitur in partem dictis compositoribus, et nunc ad hanc partem nunc ad illam habentibus regressum, ut habitâ frequenti collatione eos facilius ad concordiam revocarent, tandem pensato statu ecclesiæ Wigorn. et considerato animarum periculo quod imminerebat, ponderatis etiam variis circumstantiis illud negotium tangentibus, magna super hoc cum viris discretis habitâ deliberatione, ita ad honorem Dei et ecclesiæ, ad pacem etiam et tranquillitatem partium concorditer ordinârunt. Imprimis ut dictus W. quondam prior Malvern. quicquid juris habuit vel sibi vendicavit in prioratu Wigorn. absolute et simpliciter resignaret; quod et in eorum præsentia sine dilatione fecit ibidem. Facta igitur

resignatione, providerunt quod idem W. ad honestam sustentationem suam manerium de Clive, quod est prioris Wigorn. omnibus diebus vitæ suæ in usus proprios retinebit in eadem integritate qua consuevit dictus conventus et prior eorum illud manerium retinere, salvâ conventui ecclesiâ ejusdem villæ cum decimis rusticorum et liberorum tenentium et aliis pertinentiis, præterquam de dominico manerii quod apud memoratum W. sicut dictum est, remanebit. Providerunt autem, quod idem W. nichil alienet vel aliquid tempore suo faciet, quo minùs dominium manerii cum pertinentiis post decessum ipsius ad conventum revertatur in eadem integritate quâ illud recepit. De debitis etiam a dicto W. pretextu hujus litis contractis, præmissa taxatione præmissorum, et dicti W. sacramento obsecuto, statuerunt, quod conventus Wigorn. vel eorum prior ipsi pro expensis illis centum marcas persolvat, ita ut in festo natalis Domini proximè venturo percipiet viginti quinque marcas, [et in sequenti festo annunciationis B. Virginis viginti et quinque marcas] et in sequenti festo nativitatis beati Joannis Bapt. viginti et quinque marcas, et residuas viginti et quinque marcas in sequenti festo beati Michaelis. De monachis etiam, qui fuerunt dicto episcopo vel memorato W. providerunt, quod ipsi ad conventum in bonâ pace et gratiâ revertantur; ita quod ad invicem omni injuriâ sepultâ, et rancore semoto, se fraterna caritate pertractent. Ordinârunt etiam, quod hac vice nullum habeant priorem de domo suâ; sed dictus dominus Wigorn. de extraneis monachum aliquem, quem secundum conscientiam suam idoneum reputaverit, excepto dicto W. jam amoto, eis hac vice præficiat in priorem. De cætero autem vacante prioratu sic providerunt ordinationem faciendam; ut conventus septem monachos quos voluerit, de gremio suo (injunctum est tamen, ut de melioribus hoc faciat) episcopo suo præsentet, qui necesse habebit unum ex illis septem, quem voluerit, illis præficere in priorem; quem quidem episcopus Wigorn. non poterit amovere, nec alium priorem deinceps nisi ex justâ causâ, sicut prædecessores sui facere consueverunt. Circa custodiam autem prioratus vacantis ordinatum est sub hac forma; ut dominus episcopus Wigorn. vacante prioratu ecclesias ad præsentationem prioris et conventus spectantes, quas interim vacare contigerit, libere conferat personis idoneis. Custodias etiam et eschaetas, nec non maritagia, liberum tenementum etiam, conferat, si acciderint hii casus prioratu vacante; toto residuo tam in capite prioratus et maneriis eorum quam in ecclesiis, quas habent in usu proprio, nec non in aliis beneficiis seu redditibus, ad solius conventûs custodiam pertinente; nec per collationem ecclesiarum, custodiarum, eschaetarum, maritagiorum, quæ fiet ab episcopo prioratu vacante, aliquid conventui vel priori præjudicium generetur; quin priore eis ordinato, ad ipsos alia vice spectet ordinatio seu præsentatio omnium præmissorum, cum iterum vacaverint vel acciderint prioratu non vacante. Propter præmissa non differatur ordinatio prioris vel protrahatur: sed quanto commodius fieri poterit, vacante prioratu destinabit conventus ad episcopum suum, ubicumque fuerit in Anglia, aliquos de gremio suo, qui ei septem monachos nominatos a conventu per literas patentes conventus præsentent; ut sic ordinatio sine difficultate procedat. Si vero episcopus exiturus sit regnum, ad quascunque partes iturus; statuât aliquem loco suo, qui unum de septem nominatis a conventu eis priorem præficiat vice suâ: sive jam prioratu vacante ipse regnum egredi statuerit, sive eo agente extra regnum contigerit prioratum vacare; ut undique provideatur ecclesiæ, ne per absentiam episcopi priore remaneat desolata. Et si nemine constituto loco sui, qui possit, sicut dictum est, præficere, contigerit episcopum egredi regnum: ne vel sic per negligentiam vel desidiam episcopi contingat ordinationem prioris impune differri; hoc in pœnam ipsius statuerunt, ut sive ante egressum ipsius vacaverit prioratus, sive postea, nichil interim per ipsum vel suos de dictis ecclesiis, custodiis, eschaetis, vel maritagiis conferatur, sed illa vacatione pertineant ad solum conventum. De proventibus autem tumbæ et feretrorum B. Wolstani ita statuerunt; ut medietas eorum de cætero spectet ad episcopum, medietas ad conventum; et ad custodiam illam episcopus pro parte sua, et conventus pro parte sua, quos voluerint custodes, honestos clericos vel monachos, deputabit. Circa ingressum vero episcopi sive modum ingrediendi capitulum ita providerunt; ut cum voluerit episcopus capitulum eorum intrare, præmuniat conventum, utrum tractare velit de spiritualibus seu ordinem tangentibus, vel potius de temporalibus; et si veniat de spiritualibus seu ordinem tangentibus tractaturus, solus sine clericis moretur, dum tractaverit de præmissis. Sive vero tractaturus veniat de temporalibus, libere cum clericis suis sæcularibus capitulum ingrediatur. Sed si inciderit aliquid tractandum de spiritualibus seu ordinem tangentibus; statim clerici sæculares sine difficultate recedent, episcopo solo interim sine clericis suis sæcularibus remanente. Provisum est etiam, quod omnes pensiones vel redditus seu beneficia, quæ consueverunt prior et conventus percipere in ecclesiis diœcesis Wigorn. et de novo sunt retenta, ipsis statim et sine difficultate restituantur; et episcopus eis pensiones seu redditus nomine perpetui beneficii confirmabit. Omnia autem alia debita, exceptis præmissis, dampna etiam et expensa, et alia hinc inde petita, ordinarunt dicti provisores ad invicem remittenda. Et quod dominus episcopus omnem cum suis eis offensam, rancorem, et indignationem remittat, ipsos ad pacis osculum benignius admittendo; et quod ipsi et alii monachi, qui fuerant domino episcopo vel memorato W. una cum eodem W. ad invicem sibi rancorem et indignationem remittant, pacis osculo mediante; quod et factum est ibidem in præsentia provisorum. Si vero viderit dictus episcopus ecclesiam Wigorn. reconciliandam, eo quod nuper sine auctoritate illius fuerit reconciliata; libere etiam reconciliet, dum tamen sine præjudicio monachorum. Injunxerunt etiam provisores partibus in virtute præstiti juramenti; ut in singulis capitulis fideliter ordinationem præmissam observent: statuente nichilominus ipsam futuris temporibus ab episcopis et monachis Wigorn. qui pro tempore fuerint, in perpetuum observandam. Si quid vero in quæstionibus jam motis forsitan fuerit hic omissum; iidem provisores hoc ordinationi suæ plenarie reservarunt. Huic igitur ordinationi in scriptis redactæ apposuerunt sigilla sua dicti provisores, injungentes dictis episcopo et conventui, ut et ipsi similiter sigilla sua apponant, et priorem cum creabitur inducent similiter ad consentiendum præmissas, et quod etiam sigillum suum apponat. Datum in capitulo Wigorn. anno Domini millesimo ducentesimo vicesimo quarto, die Jovis proximâ post festum beati Michaelis.

UNIVERSIS S. matris ecclesie filiis ad quorum notitiam præsentis literæ pervenerint, frater J. permissione divina Cantuar. ecclesie minister humilis, tocius Angliæ Primas salutem, et sinceram in Domino charitatem. Literam bonæ memoriæ domini Bonifacii prædecessoris nostri hæc Inspeximus continentem.

‘Omnibus S. matris ecclesie filiis, ad quos pervenerit hæc scriptura, Bonifacius miseratione divina archiepiscopus Cantuar. tocius Angliæ Primas salutem in Domino sempiternam. Inter pacis et discordiæ, tranquillitatis et dissensionis semitas, quamdiu laboramus in via positi, libenter advertimus, quam dulce sapiat in pacis pulchritudine delectari, quantumque amaritudinis afferat molesta dissensio. Charitatis enim, quam pax nutriverat, refrigerium abjicit, cogitationes malas immitit, cor impellit et elevat; ex hoc lites et jurgia suboriri contingit, expensæ fiunt inutiles, lites ex litibus oriuntur; bona pauperum, quæ præsertim ecclesiastici viri multo pretio deberent redimere, ut ipsis pauperibus, quæ sua sunt, redderent, consumuntur. His igitur animum nostrum pulsantibus, eum habentes præ oculis Jesum Christum, qui ut pacem emeret, sanguinem suum fudit, pacem amplectimur, ut ad pacis vinculum verbo pariter et exemplo dissidentium animos invitemus. Ea propter

HÆC est finalis concordia facta in curia domini regis apud Westmonasterium a die sancti Hilarij in tres septimanas, anno regni regis Henrici filij regis Johannis quadagesimo secundo, coram ipso domino rege, Roberto Walteraund, Willielmo de Erpe, et Imberto Pu-

geys senescallo, Henrico de Bathonia et Nicholao de Surr. justiciarijs, alijsque diversis fidelibus tunc ibi præsentibus, inter Walterum Wigorniensem episcopum quærentem, et Willielmum de Bellocampo vicecomitem Wigornia impedientem de placito vetiti Namij..... unde placitum fuit inter eos in eadem curia, scilicet quod dictus Willielmus recognovit et concessit pro se et hæredibus suis quantum ad ipsos pertinet quod prædictus episcopus et successores sui episcopi Wigornenses, et ecclesia sua Wigorniensis habeant decimas et impropriata vetiti Namij, et omnes exitus inde provenientes de omnibus terris, feudis, et libertatibus tam dicti episcopi quam prioratus Wigorniensis, quicumque terras illas vel feoda teneant in comitatu Wigornensi, præter placita de Namio vetito tangentia personam episcopi et successorum suorum, quæ remanent domino regi placitanda sicut patet inferius. Ita quidem quod quicumque in curia ipsius episcopi vel successorum suorum..... amerietur secundum quod continetur in carta domini regis de libertatibus, baronibus et alijs de regno Angliæ concessis. Et si contigerit quod præfatus episcopus et successores sui vel eorum ballivi negligentes extiterint ad Namia capta deliberanda ad querelam quærentis vel conquærentium per quod inde querela perveniat ad comitatum, tunc vicecomes vice regis præcipiet in pleno comitatu ballivo ejusdem episcopi vel successorum suorum qui pro tempore fuerit quod Namia sic capta deliberet. Ita quod si non sunt deliberata infra comitatum proximum sequentem, et iterato super hoc..... perveniat querela; tunc vicecomes per judicium comitatus vice domini regis per..... comitatus Namia sic capta deliberet et transgressorem attachiet quod veni..... proximum comitatum super illa transgressione responsurus. Et si senescallus vel ballivus ipsius episcopi vel successorum suorum alias quam juratus veniat ad comitatum petat inde curiam domini sui, tunc sibi libere et sine contradictione concedatur et terminetur illud placitum in curia ipsius episcopi vel successorum suorum; si vero aliquis super captione et detentione Namiorum suorum de persona prædicti episcopi vel successorum suorum conquærat, tunc ballivus episcopi in pleno comitatu per vicecomitem ex parte domini regis præcipiatur quod ea faciat deliberari. Et si prædictus ballivus ea non deliberaverit, vel si dictus episcopus vel successores sui ea non deliberari permiserint et inde querela ad comitatum postmodum perveniat, tunc vicecomes per judicium comitatus per ballivum suum vice regis ea deliberari faciat, et placitum illud ad comitatum attachiet et coram comitatu et coram coronatoribus, vel hijs qui sunt loco eorum, et vicecomite vice regis placitatum nisi dominus rex per mandatum suum illud faciat amoveri. Et si placitum illud in comitatu vel alibi placitetur misericordia inde proveniens tam de quærente si fuerit de feodo et libertate episcopi, quam de episcopo sit ipsius domini regis taxanda per comitatum et coronatores si in comitatu placitetur secundum gravitatem delicti sicut misericordia vicecomitis, si vicecomiti misericordia illa remaneret. Recognovit etiam et concessit prædictus Willielmus pro se et hæredibus suis quod episcopi de cætero faciant ballivo hundredi prædicti episcopi et successorum suorum jurato regi et præsentato in pleno comitatu per literas episcopi patentes, vel per ejus senescallum returnum de omnibus brevibus feoda, terras, et libertates episcopi et successorum suorum et prioris Wigornia et ecclesie Wigorniensis tangentibus, tam de placitis quam de summonitionibus scaccarij domini regis de verbo ad verbum plenarie sub sigillo suo, si præsens fuerit, vel sub sigillo sui subvicecomitis, si absens fuerit. Ita quod ballivus episcopi de debitis domini regis vicecomiti ad comitatum respondeat secundum formam summonitionis prædictæ, et de summonitionibus et attachiamentis placitorum respondebit ballivus episcopi secundum returnum ei inde factum. Ita quod occasione dicti returni nulla brevia ad prædictum vicecomitem pertinentia in curia episcopi placitentur occasione istius finis, nisi brevia de placito vetiti Namij, quæ idem episcopus et successores sui in curia sua placitabunt, exceptis brevibus placiti Namij vetiti tangentibus personas ipsius episcopi et successorum suorum quæ debent placitari sicut prædictum est. Quod si ballivi episcopi in executione returnorum brevium ad vicecomitem pertinentium negligentes extiterint, et de hoc sufficienter et manifeste constiterit, tunc vicecomes vice regis per considerationem com..... coronatorum propter defectum episcopi ea exequatur. Si autem in executione returnorum..... coram domino rege aut justiciarijs suis in banco vel justiciarijs suis itinerantibus..... tandorum, vel in executione summonitionum returnorum scaccarij regis negligentes extiterint, tunc per judicium eorum ad quos principale placitum pertinebit, vel judicium scaccarij et non aliter, dictus vicecomes hujusmodi mandata propter defectum episcopi et ballivorum suorum secundum consuetudinem regni ea exequatur. Et hæc concordia facta fuit ex assensu et voluntate ejusdem domini regis et eam concedentis.

Ecclesia Cathedralis Wigorniae.

[Cart. 9 Ed. III. n. 49; et Cart. 4 Ed. IV. memb. 3.]

ALTITONANTIS Dei largiflua clementia, qui est rex regum et dominus dominantium, ego Edgarus Anglorum basileus omniumque regum insularum oceani quæ Britanniam circumjacent cunctarumque nationum quæ infra eam includuntur, imperator et dominus, gratias ago ipsi Deo omnipotenti regi meo, qui meum imperium sic ampliavit et exaltavit super regnum patrum meorum, qui licet monarchiam totius Angliæ adepti sint à tempore Æthelstani, qui primus regum Anglorum omnes nationes quæ Britanniam incolunt sibi armis subegit, nullus tamen eorum ultra ejus fines imperium suum dilatare aggressus est: mihi autem concessit propitia divinitas cum Anglorum imperio omnia regna insularum oceani cum suis ferocissimis regibus, usque Norregiam, maximamque partem Hiberniæ cum sua nobilissima civitate Dublinia, Anglorum regno subjugare, quos etiam omnes meis imperiis colla subdere, Dei favente gratia, coëgi. Quapropter et ego Christi gloriam et laudem in regno meo exaltare et ejus servitium amplificare devotus disposui, et per meos fideles fautores, Dunstanum videlicet archiepiscopum, Æthelwoldum, ac Oswaldum episcopos, quos mihi patres spirituales et consiliatores elegi, magna ex parte secundum quod disposui perfeci. Siquidem temporibus antecessorum meorum regum Anglorum, monasteria tam monachorum quam virginum destructa et penitus neglecta in tota Anglia erant, quæ ego ad Dei laudem pro remedio animæ meæ reparare, et servorum et ancillarum Dei numerum multiplicare devovi, et ipsis supradictis meis cooperantibus strenuè annitentibus, jam quadraginta et septem monasteria cum monachis et sanctimonialibus constitui. Et si Christus mihi tam diu vitam concesserit, usque ad quinquagesimum remissionis numerum meæ devotæ Deo munificentiae oblationem protendere decrevi. Unde nunc in præsentis monasterium quod prædictus reverendus episcopus Oswaldus in sede episcopali Weogriceastriæ in honorem sanctæ Dei genitricis Mariæ amplificavit, et eliminatis clericorum neniis et spurcis lasciviis, religiosis Dei servis monachis, meo consensu et favore suffultus, locavit, ego ipsis monasticæ religionis viris regali auctoritate confirmo, et consilio et astipulatione principum et optimatum meorum corrobore et consigno. Ita ut jam amplius non sit fâs neque jus clericis reclamandi quicquam inde, quippe qui magis elegerunt cum sui ordinis periculo et ecclesiastici beneficii dispendio suis uxoribus adhærere quàm Deo castè et canonicè servire. Et ideo cuncta quæ illi de ecclesia possiderant cum ipsa ecclesia, sive ecclesiastica sive sæcularia, tam mobilia quàm immobilia, ipsis Dei servis monachis ab hac die perpetualiter regiæ munificentiae jure deinceps possidenda trado et consigno, ita firmiter, ut nulli principum nec etiam ulli episcopo succedenti fas sit aut licitum quicquam inde subtrahere aut pervadere, aut ab eorum potestate surripere, et in clericorum jus iterum traducere quamdiu fides Christiana in Anglia perduraverit. Sed etiam dimidium centuriatum quod Anglicè vocatur Cudburigelawes hundred, ad quod jacent L. hidæ in Croppothorne, quos Offa rex Merciorum quondam familiæ in Weogerieceastrie donavit, liberas ab omni regali exactione, ego ipsis Dei servis cum eadem libertate trado et conscribo. Insuper etiam ad supplendum ipsum centuriatum, id est, hun-dredum, ut ex meo dono illud plenum habeant, terras ipsius ecclesiæ quæ hactenus regiæ exactioni subjacebant ab hac die imperpetuum liberabo, et liberas esse concedo et præcipio, eas videlicet quæ sunt ultra Avenæ flumen; quæ istis vocabulis nominantur: Uueobreodun cum Peonedoc, Teotintune, cum Sutune, Setgesbearinge, et in monte Wibisca, Nordwica, Eowenland, Do-eightesforied, et Doriene, et Ictacumb, et in ripa Sture fluminis Scepwotcestun, et ibi juxta eam Blacwalle; et in occidentali parte Sabrinae, Grumanloege cum Ueclage et Cintawice, et Hallege cum sibi pertinentibus, et item Heriefordtun juxta Avene, pro supplendo, ut supradiximus, centuriatu, id est, hundred, Deo et sanctæ Dei genitrici Mariæ ad usus seruorum ejus, monachorum scilicet, liberas dono et quietas esse præcipio deinceps et imperpetuum ab omnibus secularium rerum oneribus, duris et levibus, et ab omni servitute et exactionibus fiscalibus magnis et modicis, notis et ignotis, tam regis quàm principis, et ministrorum atque exactorum eorum, exceptis pontis et arcis constructione et expeditione contra hostem. Habeatque Winsinus reverendus sacerdos, quem ipse episcopus Oswaldus, me favente et auctoritate regiam præstante, in sede episcopali monachis præposuit, quamdiu ipse vixerit, omnesque, post eum sui successores qui eidem congregationi præpositi fuerint, ipsum hundredum cum omnibus debitis quæ rex antea in eo habuit, et jus et potestatem earundem possessionum cum tolle et teame, sacca et socne, et infangenetheof, et proprii juris debitum transgressionis, et pœnam delicti quæ Anglicè dicitur Oferscewenes, et Giltwite, nec sit phas aut potestas cuique præpositorum seu exactorum vel ministrorum meorum, nec alicui principi, vel ex succedentium numero pontifici, hanc meæ munificentiae libertatem et concessionis firmitatem in aliquo minuere vel infringere, vel quoquo modo mutare aut pervadere, aut quocumque ingenio ipsos monachos Dei servos inquietando perturbare, ut aliqua fraudulenta occasione iterum in clericorum aut ipsius episcopi proprium transeant jus ab eorum potestate quorum usui ista concessi et donavi. Providi etiam cautelæ studio ut hæc libertas firmiter eis posset perdurare, ne cum regis ministris aut ejus centuriatus, id est, hundredi, exactoribus nauamachia expeditionem, quæ ex tota Anglia regi invenitur, faciant, sed cum suo archiductore videlicet episcopo qui eos defendere et protegere debet ab omni perturbatione et inquietudine. Et quia idem reverendus antistes Oswaldus per suos amicos et meos consiliarios, supra nominatos videlicet Dunstanum archiepiscopum et Athelwoldum Wintoniæ episcopum, et virum magnificum Brightnodum comitem, me requisivit et impetravit, ut ad confirmandam ecclesiasticarum possessionum libertatem sui episcopatus ad centuriatum qui Uulferieslay dicitur, quem ipsa ecclesia antiquitus liberè possidebat, ei concederem alterum hundredum facere libertate devota de terris ecclesiæ quæ adhuc hactenus regiis exactionibus subjacebant, videlicet Breodune, Bloctelea, Tyryduitune, quatinus posset ipse cum monachis suis unam navipletionem quod Anglicè Scypfyled dicitur per se habere: placuit mihi hoc ei annuere, tam pro ejus religiosa sanctitate, quàm pro ipsorum legatorum reverentia et dilectione.

Quapropter ego Eadgarus Anglorum rex et basileus, Deo et sanctæ Dei genitrici Mariæ ejusque ministro Oswaldo, meo fideli episcopo, libens annuo et dono hujus libertatis privilegium, sicut ab ipsis rogatus sum, scilicet ut ipse episcopus cum monachis suis de istis tri-

Privilegia concessa Priori Ecclesiæ Wigorn. per Sedem Apostolicam. A.D. 1386.

UNIVERSIS sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis, ad quos præsentis literæ pervenerint, Willelmus, etc. salutem in Domino sempiternam, et fidem credulam præsentibus adhibere. Noverit universitas vestra, quod pro parte dilecti filii prioris ecclesiæ Wigorniensis, ordinis sancti Benedicti, quædam literæ apostolicæ, una videlicet felicitis recordationis domini Clementis papæ sexti, alia vero domini Urbani papæ quinti, cum filis sericis more Romanæ curiæ bullatæ, sanæ et integræ, non vitiatæ, non corruptæ, sed omni prorsus vitio et suspicione sinistra carentes, coram nobis pro tribunali tunc sedentibus, extiterant præsentatæ, quarum tenores seriatim de verbo ad verbum sequuntur et sunt tales:

hac parte supplicationibus inclinati, et eisdem successoribus tuis, auctoritate apostolica, tenore præsentium indulgemus, ut tu et iidem successores tui in episcopi Wigorniensis, pro tempore existentis, præsentia, mitra aurificata gemmarum et perlarum ornamenta non habente, necnon annulo; in ejusdem vero episcopi absentia, mitra etiam perlarum et gemmarum ornatum habente, annulo, tunica, dalmatica, sandaliis, et chirothecis episcopalibus, ac bordono argenteo, botonum argenteum habente in capite, absque alio ornatu, uti, et benedictionem solennem in missa et mensa dare libere valeatis, dummodo in benedictionis datione hujusmodi legatus sedis apostolicæ vel antistes aliquis non sit præsens. Volumus autem quod hujusmodi bordonus, quo tu et successores tui utemini, ad modum pastoralis baculi non sit factus. Nulli ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostræ voluntatis et concessionis infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire; si quis autem hoc attemptare præsumserit, indignationem omnipotentis Dei et beatorum Petri et Pauli apostolorum ejus noverit incursurum. Dat. Avinione decimo sexto cal. Martii, pontificatus nostri anno tertio.

Sane prout nobis extitit pro parte dicti prioris ea vice suggestum, quod ipsas literas originales superius recitatas, pro diversis suis expediendis negotiis ad partes longinquas et remotas destinare et exhibere plurimum expediret; considerat nihilominus, quod semper propter viarum discrimina, malignantium incursus, ac alia diversa pericula, quæ plerumque solent imminere, ipsas literas originales ad loca tam distantia deferre, vel transmittere periculosum sibi existeret, pariter et damnosum; fuit nobis ipsius nomine cum instantia humiliter supplicatum, quatenus hiis et aliis justis causis per nos pie consideratis, et diligenter attentis, ipsas literas originales inspicere, et de eisdem copiam veram extrahi, transcribi, et exemplari facere, nostrumque decretum et auctoritatem eisdem literis exemplatis interponere, et præstare charitatis intuitu dignaremur. Nos vero archiepiscopus, primas, et legatus prædictus, attendentes pium et meritorium existere veritati testimonium perhibere, dictamque partitionem justam fore et consonam rationi, præfatas literas apostolicas primævas et sigilla earundem, ac omnia alia quæ in hac parte necessaria existant, diligenter perspeximus, ipsasque post investigationem solitam per nos factam, in scriptis, sigillis, et cæteris in hac parte necessariis veras, et omni suspicione carentes cognovimus et reputavimus, ac per magistrum Waltherum Gybbes, clericum Exoniensis dioec. notarium publicum, scribamque nostrum infrascriptum, subscribi, et de verbo ad verbum exemplari, publicari, ac in formam publicam redigi mandavimus, nostrique sigilli appensione jussimus communiri in testimonium veritatis omnium præmissorum; volentes ac discernentes, et declarantes, quod huic transumpto sive transcripto deinceps in omnibus et per omnia, quantum in nobis est, plena fides adhibeatur tam in judiciis quam extra, sicut originalibus literis antedictis, a quibus in nullo penitus invenimus discrepare, præsensque transumptum plenariam fidem faciat, in agendis; quibus omnibus et singulis nostram auctoritatem interponimus, pariter et decretum. Injunctions by Hugh Latymer, bishop of Worcester, to the Prior and Convent of St. Mary's House in Worcester, A.D. 1537.

[Burnet, Hist. Reformat. vol. ii. App. p. 293.]

HUGH, by the goodness of God bishop of Worcester, wisheth to his brethren, the prior and convent aforesaid, grace, mercy, peace, and true knowledge of God's word from God our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ. Forasmuch as in this my visitation I evidently perceive the ignorance and negligence of divers religious persons in this monastery to be intolerable, and not to be suffered, for that thereby doth reign idolatry, and many kinds of superstitions, and other enormities; and considering withall, that our sovereign lord the king, for some part of remedy of the same, hath granted by his most gracious licence that the Scripture of God may be read in English of all his obedient subjects; I therefore willing your reformation in most favourable manner to your least displeasure, do heartily require you all, and every one of you, and also in God's behalf command the same, according as your duty is, to obey me, as God's minister and the king's, in all my lawful and honest commandments, that you observe and keep inviolably all these Injunctions following, under pain of the law.

First, forasmuch as I perceive that some of you neither have observed the king's injunctions, nor yet have them with you, as willing to observe them; therefore ye shall from thenceforth both have and observe diligently and faithfully as well special commandments of preaching, as other injunctions given in his Grace's visitation.

Item, that the prior shall provide, of the monasteries' charge, a whole Bible in English, to be laid, fast chained, in some open place, either in their church or cloister.

Item, that every religious person have, at the least a New Testament in English, by the feast of the Nativity of our Lord next ensuing.

Item, whensoever there shall be any preaching in your monastery, that all manner of singing, and other ceremonies be utterly laid aside in his preaching time; and all other services shortened, as need shall be; and all religious persons quietly hearken to the preaching.

Item, that ye have a lecture of Scripture read every day in English amongst you, save holydays.

Item, that every religious person be at every lecture from the beginning to the ending, except they have a necessary let allowed them by the prior.

Item, that every religious house have a layman to their steward for all former businesses.

Item, that you have a continual schoolmaster sufficiently learned to teach you Grammar.

Item, that no religious person discourage any manner of layman, or woman, or any other from the reading of any good book either in Latin or English.

Item, that the prior have at his dinner or supper every day a chapter read from the beginning of the Scripture to the end, and that in English, wheresoever he be in any of his own places, and to have edifying communication of the same.

Item, that the convent sit together four to one mess, and to eat together in common, and to have Scripture read in like wise, and have communication thereof; and after their dinner or supper, their reliques and fragments to be distributed to the poor people.

Item, that the convent and prior provide distributions to be ministred in every parish, where there be parsons and proprietaries, and according to the king's Injunctions in that behalf.

Item, that all these my Injunctions be read every month once in the chapter-house before all the brethren.

Bardney Abbey,

LINCOLNSHIRE.

THE foundation of BARDNEY Abbey is fixed by Bishop Tanner before the year 697, because OSFRIDA, or OSTHRYDA, queen of Mercia, who caused King Oswald's bones to be brought to it, was murdered in that year.^a Her husband

ETHELRED, if not the original founder of the monastery, was certainly a great benefactor to it. Upon his resignation of the crown of Mercia, he became first a monk, and was afterwards abbat of this house till his death. Willis, on the alleged authority of Ingulphus, dates the foundation at a later period. He says, "Ethelred, husband of the said queen Ostryth, who resigned his kingdom anno 704, professed himself a monk, and at length, anno 712, founding this monastery, became the first abbat thereof." Bede certainly gives the year 704 as the date of Ethelred's profession:^b but Ingulphus says nothing of him as the founder.^c Florence of Worcester, however, noticing his death, in the year 716, expressly ascribes the building of the abbey to him.^d His signature as abbat of Bardney to the Foundation Charter of Croyland abbey, in the very year of his death, follows those of the bishops.^e

Deda, and Alwinus, or Aldevinus, mentioned as succeeding abbats by Willis, the first as occurring in the year 730,^f and the other, in fact, near a century earlier,^g were abbats of PEARTANEU, or PARTENEY, a cell only to Bardney, as will hereafter be explained.

KYNEWINUS, who subscribes as a witness to the Charter of Witlaf king of Mercia to Croyland abbey, in 833, is the only abbat on the first foundation, beside Ethelred, noticed by our historians.^h

In 870, the monastery was completely destroyed, and the monks slain, in the irruption of Inguar and Hubba.ⁱ

The abbat of Bardney, in early times, is stated to have been Lord of Lindsey: and here are said to have been, soon after its foundation, not fewer than three hundred monks.^k

It lay in ruins more than two hundred years; when, according to Ingulphus and the testimony of Charters still extant, the church and buildings were reedified,^l and the monastery replenished with monks by Gisbertus de Gaunt, or Gant, earl of Lincoln.^m William

^a Tann. Notit. Monast. Linc. m. The following is the passage in Bede's Ecclesiastical History, which details the translation of King Oswald's bones: "Inter quæ nequaquam silentio prætereundum reor, quid virtutis ac miraculi cœlestis fuerit ostensum, cum Ossa ejus inventa, atque ad ecclesiam in qua nunc servantur, translata sunt. Factum est autem hoc per industriam reginæ Merciorum Ostlhrydæ, quæ erat filia fratris ejus, id est Osuii qui post illum regni apicem tenebat, ut in sequentibus dicemus. Est monasterium nobile in provincia Lindissi, nomine Beardaneu, quod eadem regina cum viro suo Aedilredo multum diligebat, venerabatur, excolebat, in quo desiderabat honoranda patris sui ossa recondere: cumque venisset carrum in quo eadem ossa ducebantur, incumbente vespera, in monasterium præfatum, noluerunt ea qui erant in monasterio libenter excipere: quia etsi sanctum eum noverant, tamen quia de alia provincia ortus fuerat, et super eos regnum acceperat, veteranis eum odiis etiam mortuum insequabantur. Unde factum est ut ipsa nocte reliquiæ adlatæ foris permanent, tentorio tantum majore supra carrum in quo inerant, extenso. Sed miraculi cœlestis ostensio, quam reverenter eæ suscipiendæ a cunctis fidelibus essent, patefecit. Nam tota ea nocte columna lucis a carro illo ad cœlum usque correcta, omnibus pene ejusdem Lindissæ provinciæ locis conspicua stabat. Unde mane facto fratres monasterii illius, qui pridie abnuerant, diligenter ipsi petere cœperunt, ut apud se eadem sanctæ ac Deo dilectæ reliquiæ conderentur. Lota igitur ossa intulerunt in thecam, quam in hoc præparaverant, atque in ecclesia juxta honorem congruum possuerunt: et ut regia viri sancti persona memoriam haberet æternam, vexillum ejus super tumbam auro et purpura compositum adposuerunt, ipsamque aquam in qua laverunt ossa, in angulo sacrarii fuderunt. Ex quo tempore factum est, ut ipsa terra quæ lavacrum venerabile suscepit, ad abigendos ex obsessis corporibus dæmones gratiæ salutaris haberet effectum." Bedæ Hist. Eccl. edit. Smith, lib. iii. c. xi. p. 114. The succeeding chapter relates the particulars of a cure performed upon a child at Oswald's tomb. At the close of which we read:—"cum armis et hostibus circumseptus, jamjamque videret se esse perimendum, oravit pro animabus exercitus sui. Unde dicunt in proverbio: 'Dens miserere animabus, dixit Oswald cadens in terram.' Ossa igitur illius translata et condita sunt in monasterio quo diximus: porro caput et manus cum brachiis a corpore præcisas, jussit rex qui occiderat, in stipitibus suspendi. Quo post annum veniens cum exercitu successor regni ejus Osuii, abstulit ea, et caput quidem in cœmeterio Lindisfarnensis ecclesiæ: in regia vero civitate manus cum brachiis condidit." Ibid. p. 115. ^l Leland, who visited this Monastery before the dissolution of religious houses, leads us to suppose that the ancient structure of Bardney was placed in a different spot from the abbey which afterwards arose. He says, "The monks hold opinion that the old abbey of Bardenei was not in the very same place where the new ys, but at a grange or dayre of thers a myle of." Itin. edit. Oxf. 1769, vol. vii. p. 42.

^m Ingulphus, ut supr. p. 127, says, under the year 1107: "Restauravit hoc eodem temporis momento inelytus et devotus comes Lincolnæ Gilbertus de Gaunt monasterium antiquissimum, sed Danorum vesania quondam concrematum, et multis annorum cursibus omnino desertum, et feris ac pecudibus frequentatum, non longe a Lincolnia versus orientem super crepedinem fluvii quem Withnum dicimus, Bardenei nomine, situatum, cui cum multis possessionibus et redditibus decinas omnium maneriorum suorum ubicunque per Angliam con-

of Malmesbury, however, without the slightest authority, ascribes the renewal of the foundation to Remigius bishop of Lincoln,^a who was in reality a witness only to the Charter of Endowment.^b

Ingulphus, as has been already shown in a note, places the second foundation of this monastery in the year 1107. But there is ample testimony of its having been refounded earlier. Passing over the death of Remigius in 1092,^c the Saxon Chronicle places the death of Archbishop Lanfrank, another subscribing witness to the founder's Charter, in 1089:^d between which and the previous year 1086, the year in which the Domesday Survey was finished, the date must be placed; since no mention whatever occurs of the monastery in the Survey. The lands which afterwards formed the endowment, are entered in the Survey as the possessions in capite of Gilbert de Gant, or Gand.^e

The new monastery was dedicated to the honour of St. Peter and St. Paul, and St. Oswald the king and martyr.^f

The original endowment appears to have consisted of Bardney, and Angedby or Osgoteby, with their appurtenances; four carucates and two bovates of land in Steping and Friseby, together with the church; the church, with its lands and tithes, in Skendelby, together with the tithe of the demesne in Skendelby, Steping, and Parteney: the church of Parteney, with its appurtenances; the tithe of the demesne in Bamburg; two parts of the tithe in Edligton; the church, with its lands and tithes, in Scamton; two parts of the tithe of the demesne of Horstowe; the tithe of the demesne and hamlets of Holm; the tithes of the demesne of Thorp, Folkingham, Stanton, and Edlisburgh; with the church of the latter. The three sons of the Conqueror signed as witnesses to the Charter, as well as the prelates already named.

Gilbert de Gand, or Gant was the son of Baldwin earl of Flanders, and nephew to the Conqueror's queen, Matilda. He accompanied the Conqueror in his expedition against England in 1066; and was rewarded proportionably for his services. At the time of the General Survey he appears to have been possessed of one lordship in Berkshire; two in Oxfordshire; three in Yorkshire; six in Cambridgeshire; two in Buckinghamshire; one in Huntingdonshire; five in Northamptonshire; one in Rutland; one in Leicestershire; one in Warwickshire; eighteen in Nottinghamshire; and a hundred and thirteen in Lincolnshire, of which Folkingham was one, where he seated himself, that being the head of his barony.^g

He was at York in 1069, when the city was destroyed by the Danes; being one of the few Normans who escaped their fury. He was afterwards a benefactor to the abbey of St. Mary in that city.

He died in the time of William Rufus, probably about the year 1094; and was buried at Bardney.^h

Walter, the son of Gilbert de Gant, in 1115, confirmed his father's Charter of Foundation;ⁱ adding further and richer endowments to the monastery by another Charter pated in 1125.^k

From the confirmation by King Henry the First, it should seem that the re-endowment of the house by Gilbert de Gant was as a priory only; and that the place and church were changed to the condition of an abbey by the king's licence; Ralph, who had previously been prior, being ordered to assume the stile of abbat.^l

Gilbert de Gant, the grandson of Walter, and great-grandson of the founder, by a Charter granted to the monastery in the reign of Henry the Third, confirmed the donations of his ancestors still more extensively than Walter: including those of his uncle Gilbert and his father Robert de Gant in the reigns of Stephen and Henry the Second.^m

Bulls of confirmation were obtained by this monastery from Pope Eugenius the Third in 1147, and from Pope Adrian the Fourth in 1156. Pope Alexander the Third by another bull in 1178 recited and confirmed the different donations to it at still greater length. Other bulls are also extant from Pope Honorius the Third in 1226, and Pope Innocent.

The Register of Bardney preserved among the Cotton manuscripts notices other Charters of Confirmation from King Stephen, King Henry the Second, King Richard the First, and King John.ⁿ

Hugh bishop of Lincoln's Charter, in the reign of Richard the First, will be found among the Instruments appended to this Account.^o

From King Henry the Third the monks received the grant of a market at Bardney, together with free warren in Bardney, Osgoteby, Buteyate, and Surreie.^p

Among the more important donations to the monastery by individuals may be mentioned the churches of Hale, Hekington,^q and Kirkeby, by Earl Simon; the vill of Buteyate, adjoining to Bardney, by Robert Marmium;^r the church at Luceby, by Seer de Arceles;^s the church of Edelesberg, by Hugh de Beauchamp;^t and the churches of Sottebi and Wainflet, by Philip de Kyme, the "dapifer" of Earl Gilbert.^u

Stephens has copied, from Rymer's Foedera, King Edward the Third's receipt, with promise of restitution, for two basons, a chalice, and paten, taken from this abbey by way of loan, to be pawned towards the charge of his expedition into France in the year 1338, when he extorted similar loans from all the monasteries in England.^x

The possessions of the the monastery appear to have received their last Charter of royal confirmation in the 20th year of King Henry the Seventh. The following items of expence attending the procuring it are entered upon a spare leaf in the abbey Register: "In primis pro confirmatione cartæ, xx^s. iiij^d. Pro fine ejusdem, xx^s. Pro irrotulamento, xx^s. Pro scriptura ejusdem, xij^s. iiij^d."

For different particulars respecting the property of Bardney abbey in the rectory, tithes, &c. of Scampton, in Lincolnshire, the reader is referred to the Topographical Account of that Parish by the Rev. Cayley Illingworth, the present incumbent.^y

ABBATS OF BARDNEY

ON THE SECOND FOUNDATION.

RALPH, or RADULPHUS, who is called "Monachus Caroncensis," is noticed in the Register of Bardney as the first upon the list.^z He appears to have been at first called prior of the monastery, but was made abbat by the royal licence in 1116.^a

Ivo, who is termed "Galicus," is stated to have succeeded about 1133.^a He is noticed in the Bardney Register in the time of Alexander bishop of Lincoln.

JOHN DE GANT, according to Willis, was consecrated and confirmed in the year 1140. Bishop Kennett finds a notice of him in 1147.

WALTER occurs anno 1155, and 1163; about which last year he died.^b

JOHN occurs anno 1167.

RALPH DE STAYNFELD occurs in 1175. He was succeeded about 1187, by

ROBERT, who again occurs in 1191.^c After him,

RALPH DE RAND occurs: who being unjustly deposed, anno 1214,

PETER, Prior of Lenton, was intruded upon the convent.^d Willis says, "he held his new honour not long, for I find that in the same year the prior of Lanthony was elected abbat; his name I take to be

MATTHEW, for, anno 1217, one Matthew occurs abbat. He died in 1223."^e

ADAM DE ASCWARDY was confirmed abbat on the 6th of the ides of September, anno 1125. He resigned anno 1237, and was succeeded by

WILLIAM DE RIPTON. The Register of Lincoln says he was elected upon the resignation of Everard. He continued abbat not above five years, and was succeeded, anno 1241, by

WALTER DE BENINGWORTH.^f He resigned anno 1243: when

WILLIAM DE HATTON became abbat.

WILLIAM DE TORKESY was made abbat in 1258: upon whose death, in 1266, in the fifty-first year of King Henry the Third,

Peter DE BARTON was elected, on the 4th of the kalends of March. In 1277, he appears to have been deposed by an unjust sentence of the bishop of Lincoln, but was restored to his office by the archbishop of Canterbury.^g Willis says he resigned in 1280: and was succeeded, the same year, by

ROBERT DE WAYNFLET, who was confirmed on the second of the nones of May. He held the abbacy till the year 1318, though not without some interruption: for, anno 1303, having a mind to travel (which he did for some time), he was deposed, but was upon his return restored. The dilapidated condition of the monastery and its affairs, during his time, may be gathered from the king's letter to the pope in 1308.^h Upon his resignation, in 1318, the church and manor of Steping, and the vill of Friseby, together with the cells of Parteney and Skendleby, belonging to the monastery, were assigned for his support. The Instrument of Provision, dated in the octaves of the Epiphany, 1317, made by the bishop of Lincoln, will be found in the Appendix.ⁱ His successor was

RICHARD DE GAYNESBURGH, who was elected on the sixth of the kalends of June, 1318.^k He died in 1342; in which year, on the 4th of the kalends of December,

ROGER DE BAROWE was elected:^l on whose death,

THOMAS DE STAPULTON became abbat, on the 6th of the nones of October, 1355.^m

HUGH DE BRAUNSTON was elected on Stapulton's death, and was confirmed in the month of October, 1379.ⁿ

JOHN DE HAYNTON was elected abbat on the cession of Hugh; being confirmed June 3d, 1385.^o The election of

JOHN WOXBRIGG as abbat was confirmed on the 6th of March, 1404.^p During the time of his government, King Henry the Fourth, being in Lincolnshire, came to this abbey on the 12th of the kalends of September, 1406, with a large retinue; and was met by the abbat and convent at the lower gates, in procession. The account of the ceremony on this occasion is preserved in the Appendix to Leland's Collectanea.^q Abbat Woxbrigg died in 1413; in which year, on the 16th of November,

GEOFFREY HEMMINGBY was confirmed in the abbacy.^r Upon his death, in 1435, he was succeeded by

JOHN WAYNEFLETE. Willis says, "I presume he was a near relation to William Waynefleet bishop of Winchester, the magnificent founder of Magdalen college in Oxford, and that by his interest this convent presented the said William Waynefleet to the vicarage of Skendelby June 14th, 1430, in his predecessor's time, which Waynefleet very soon after quitted. This I mention, because it may perhaps intimate the rise of this great man, and what was probably his first preferment. As to John Wayneflete, I know not when he died."^s

The revenues were valued, in the 26th Hen. VIII., according to Dugdale, at 366*l.* 6*s.* 1*d.* per annum: according to Speed, at 429*l.* 7*s.*: according to Leland, in his Collectanea, at 432*l.* After the dissolution, the site of this monastery came into the hands of Sir Robert Tyrwhit.ⁱ

The abbat of Bardney was summoned to parliament as early as the 49th year of King Henry III.^k

The small remains of this abbey are situated about half a mile from the village of Bardney, in the northern corner of Wraghoe wapentake, in a marsh on the north bank of the Witham. Willis mentions a gate-house as remaining in his time.

The principal Register of Bardney now remaining is preserved among the Cotton manuscripts in the British Museum, marked Vesp. E. xx.^l

In a Roll containing the procession of the lords spiritual and temporal to parliament in the third year of King Henry the Eighth, A.D. 1512, copied in Cole's MSS. now preserved in the British Museum, vol. xviii. p. 6, the arms of the abbat of Bardney are thus emblazoned: Sa. a Crozier in pale between two Crowns towards the cheif, being run through an Annulet towards the top Or. and a Snake enwrapped at the bottom, Argent. See the initial Letter of this Account. Willis, in his Mitred Abbies, vol. i. App. p. 54, gives another Coat to this abbey. He says, "The Conventual Seal of this monastery being the only one of the Mitred Parliamentary Abbies not engraven in Dr. Tanner's 'Notitia Monastica,' I shall here give the blazoning of it, and inform the reader, that it is a Cross Patee inter four Lions, being the Arms of Oswald king of Northumberland, to whose honour this abbey was dedicated. The same Arms is also used by the see of Durham." Bardney, in fact, bore both the Coats here ascribed to it.

Among the ancient Charters formerly belonging to Lord Oxford, now preserved in the British Museum, are three different SEALS of Bardney Abbey.

The oldest, appendant to the Deed 44 A. 7, is small, and of a round form. On one side is the figure of a king seated on a throne, on a minuter scale, but not unsimilar in design to the Seals of the Norman sovereigns. The legend round is "SIGILLVM SANCTI OSWALDI REGIS ET" The reverse, or counter seal, is of the lozenge shape, the matrix evidently of a later date. It represents the façade of a church, in three arched compartments. In the centre compartment, the figure of the Virgin and Child. In the compartments on the right and left, two other figures, probably representing St. Peter and St. Paul. In the exergue, or space below, the half figure of a monk. Round the whole is this inscription, "SECRETVM PETRI ABBATIS DE BARDENIA." Peter de Barton was abbat from 1266 to 1280.

Attached to an Instrument of the 21st year of Edward the Third, marked 44 A. 8,^a is another, and one of the most beautiful of all our Monastic Seals. On the obverse, King Oswald is represented, seated on a throne, within a rich canopy of Gothic tracery: his right hand holding a sceptre. Beneath, on a plain shield, a Cross patée between four Lions rampant: the second of the Coats already mentioned as having been borne by this abbey, though perhaps the first in point of time. The legend: "s. SANCTI OSWALDI GLORIOSI REGIS ET MART. . . . DE BARDENEYA." On the reverse, beneath a double canopy of the same rich work, the figures of St. Paul and St. Peter, with their respective emblems; and below, the half figure of an abbat with his crozier. Round the circumference: "s. CŌMVNE ABBATIS ET CONVENTVS MON. AP'LORVM PETRI ET PAVLI." The area on each side of the Seal is diapered.

The third Seal is appendant to an Instrument dated in 1492, marked 44 A. 10:^b having the impress on one side only. In the area, King Oswald, crowned and sceptered, is represented standing beneath a Gothic canopy. St. Peter's key on one side of the canopy, and St. Paul's sword on the other. The inscription: "s. ABBAT. ET CŌVĒT DENEYA AD CAVSAS."

Leland, who visited Bardney but a short time previous to the Dissolution, found the following among other books in the library: "Beda super Actus Apostolorum: Vita Oswaldi, carmine; Isidorus super Vetus Testamentum; Anselmus super Epistolas Pauli; Pompeius super Donatum."^c

PAPÆ REX. Nuper vacante monasterio de Bardeneye Lincolnensis diocesis, de progenitorum nostrorum regum Angliæ elemosinis fundato, per privationis sententiam contra Robertum de Waynflet, tunc abbatem ejusdem monasterii, auctoritate loci ordinarii latam: ac monasterio prædicto in manu nostra, ratione vacationis hujusmodi prout moris est, existente. Nos igitur de præmissis, quatenus ad nos attinet, volentes plenius certiorari, super statu ejusdem monasterii inquiri facimus diligenter: per quam quidem inquisitionem comperimus quod jam per quatuor annos proximo præteritos, cultus divinus ibidem minuitur: elemosinæ progenitorum nostrorum et nostræ per idem tempus ibidem sunt subtractæ, et indies subtrahuntur: et quod bona ejusdem monasterii, tempore administrationis ejusdem Roberti, sunt exhausta; quodque prædictum monasterium dampnum irreparabile, in bonis temporalibus et spiritualibus ejusdem, in brevi patietur et jacturam, nisi citius congruum remedium apponatur: super quibus jam diu est, in regno nostro vox publica, fama laboravit et adhuc laborat in præsentem. Ea propter vestræ sanctitati supplicandum duximus pia prece, quatinus ad statum domûs de Bardeneye prædictæ compassionabilem et depressum, oculos vestræ clementiæ dirigentes, pro ejusdem reformatione dignemini apponere remedium opportunum. Si vero quisquam capellanus ad peragendum dictum officium usque ad certum tempus conductus infra terminum suum, ex quacumque evidenti causa, amotus fuerit, vel si sponte sua abcesserit aut forsan decesserit, vicem ipsius similiter per idoneum domus nostræ monachum, vel secularem capellanum, monitione nobis facta a dicto Roberto, vel suis, per omnia tenemur adimplere quousque de alio capellano seculari et idoneo mature fuerit ibi provisum quod infra quadraginta dies proximo sequentes, sine ulteriori dilatione debet fieri si comode infra tantum tempus possit invenire Capellano vero dicti Roberti in dicta capella posito et futuris temporibus per ipsum et suos in perpetuum ponendo dedimus, concessimus, et hac præsentis scriptura confirmavimus, totum jus unius monachi in esculentis et poculentis, scilicet unum panem majoris ponderis et unam lagenam melioris cervisiæ monachorum, tot et tanta fercula in coquina in quolibet die quot unus monachus habebit vel de jure habere debet, secundum ordinis regulam in omnibus et per omnia sine diminutione aliqua ubicumque noluerit deferenda, et unam robam de sectis clericorum nostrorum ad natale Domini annuatim pretio unius marcæ ad minus, et viginti solidos in villa de Bardney recipiendos ad duos anni terminos, scilicet ad festum sancti Botulphi decem solidos, et ad festum sancti Martini in Yeme decem solidos, ad sui sustentationem. nobis de suis excessibus debet corrigi, et per nos in omnibus tueri, et nobis per successores suos presentari. Et si hæredes et successores dicti Roberti ita fuerint negligentes et remissi quod dictam cantariam noluerint sustinere, hoc non debemus pati quod dicto Roberto bona fide promisimus; ut autem hæ donationes, concessionem, et confirmationem, indeficientem optineant firmitatem, in perpetuum obligamus nos et successores nostros sæpedito Roberto, et hæredibus suis vel assignatis. Quod si aliquando, quod absit, in dictis donationibus, concessionibus, et confirmationibus debuerimus, et hoc posset probari in foro ecclesiastico vel seculari, liceat eisdem per omnia bona nostra tam spiritualia quam temporalia pro voluntate sua absque strepitu judiciali, contradictione, vel impedimento, ordine juris non observato, unica mea admonitione præmissa, nos et successores nostros distringere qualicumque voluerint districtione, et retinere quousque dictas donationes concessionem et confirmationem ad debitum reduxerimus statum. Ad majorem hujus rei securitatem specialiter obligamus nos et omnes successores nostros jurisdictioni capituli Lincolnensis ecclesiæ prædictæ super dictarum donationum, concessionum, et confirmationum observatione, in verbo sacerdotali et virtute præstiti Sacramenti, quotienscumque et quandocumque dicto Roberto et hæredibus suis placuerit dictum capitulum diligenter inquiret, et si donationes, concessionem, et confirmationem, prædictas nequaquam, vel forsitan minus bene, in toto vel in parte invenerit fuisse observatas, volumus et concedimus quod dicto Roberto de Millay et hæredibus suis vel assignatis per sæpeditum capitulum Lincolnensis ecclesiæ nos et ecclesiam nostram per suspensionem, excommunicationem, et interdictionem sententias, ad omnia prædicta fideliter faciendæ et tenendæ legitime possit compellere, ut nos tanquam fidei transgressores pro tanto delicto, auctoritate dicti capituli Lincolnensis ecclesiæ canonice puniantur ad satisfaciendum. Et ne dictæ donationes, concessionem, et confirmationem, futuris temporibus oblivioni seu negligentiam tradentur, volumus quod coram parochianis die sancti Oswaldi in majori ecclesia de Bardney, inter matutinas et missam, publice annuatim legantur, cuncti autem successores nostri, qui præmissa in omnibus fideliter observabunt pacem, gratiam, et benedictionem optineant, et illi qui contra venerint, nisi præsumptionem suam digna satisfactione correxerint, iram, indignationem, et maledictionem Dei et nostram incurrant, et a communione fidelium alieni fiant. Fiat, fiat. Amen. In omnium autem præmissorum memoriam, robur, et testimonium, parti huic scripti cirographati penes dictum Robertum de Millay et hæredes suos remanendæ sigillum Capituli nostri apponi fecimus. Et idem dictus Robertus de Millay alteri parti penes nos et successores nostros remanendæ sigillum suum apposuit. Testibus Deo et domino Ricardo Lincolnensi episcopo, capitulo ejusdem, et capitulo nostro.
