P R E F A C E.

It was early in the reign of Charles the First that Mr. Roger Dodsworth, a gentleman of a good family in Yorkshire, following the taste of a knot of Antiquaries of his time, sought materials toward a History of his native County; and while engaged in this pursuit collected, concomitantly, whatever might illustrate the foundations and endowments of the Religious Houses of the North.

There was another person at this time, of good education, though less advanced in years, who, having engaged in similar pursuits, was collecting materials for a History of Warwickshire: this was Mr. William Dugdale of Blythe in that County: a person known to the best Antiquaries of his day, and among others to Sir Henry Spelman, who, perceiving how much might be done for our Monastic History by uniting these two Antiquaries, brought them together, encouraged them to join their labours, and thus laid the foundation of that extensive Work, a new and enlarged Edition of which is here presented to the Reader.

Much credit is unquestionably due to Roger Dodsworth, who not only projected the Work, but, as the long series of his Manuscripts still attests, continued to the end of his life to collect for it. He, unfortunately, died the year before the publication of the First Volume.

Several of our best Antiquaries have supposed that Dugdale's share in the two first Volumes of this Work was much smaller than it really was. Mr. Gough, in his British Topography, says, "The Two Volumes of the Monasticon, though published under Dodsworth's and Dugdale's names conjointly, were both collected and written totally by the former:" and Dr. Dunham Whitaker says, "as Dodsworth unfortunately died in August, 1654, before one tenth part of the impression was worked, an opportunity presented itself, which Dugdale had not the fortitude to resist, of associating his own name with that of the REAL COMPILER." Mr. Hamper, however, in his Appendix to Dugdale's Life, has endeavoured to vindicate his memory. "That able writer, Sir John Marsham," he observes, "in his PROPYLAION to the Work, whilst he justly gives the palm to Dodsworth as the chief collector of materials, and praises Somner for his renderings of the Saxon parts, and of those from Leland into Latin, allows to Dugdale a full proportion of the labour, merit, and honour of the undertaking—'qui tantam huic operi suppellectilem contulit, ut AUTHORIS ALTERIUS titulum optimè meritis sit.'" Those, too, who have been more intimate than either Mr. Gough or Dr. Whitaker with the numerous Registers and Leiger Books which passed through Dodsworth's and Dugdale's hands, can attest, from the Tables of Contents and Memoranda remaining in many, that Dugdale was neither less assiduous nor less laborious than his coadjutor.

The First Volume of the Monasticon appeared in 1655: "MONASTICON ANGLICANUM, sive Pandectæ Cœnobiorum Benedictinorum, Cluniacensium, Cistereiensium, Carthusianorum, a Primordiis ad eorum usque Dissolutionem, ex MSS. Codd. ad Monasteria olim pertinentibus; Archivis Turrium Londinensis, Eboracensis; Curiarum Scaccarii, Augmentationum; Bibliothecis Bodleianâ; Coll. Reg. Coll. Bened. Arundellianâ, Cottonianâ, Seldenianâ, Hattonianâ, aliisque digesti per { ROGERUM DODSWORTH, Eborac.

GULIELMUM DUGDALE, Warwic. Londini, Typis Richardi Hodgkinsonne. MDCLV."

The sale of this Volume was slow, so that it was not till 1661 that the Second Volume appeared: "MONASTICI ANGLICANI VOLUMEN ALTERUM, De Canonicis Regularibus Augustinianis, scilicet Hospitalariis, Templariis, Gilbertinis, Præmonstratensibus, et Maturinis sive Trinitarianis: cum Appendice ad Volumen Primum de Cœnobiis aliquot Gallieanis, Hibernicis, et Scoticis: neenon quibusdam Anglicanis antea omissis: a Primordiis ad eorum usque Dissolutionem, ex MSS. Codicibus ad Monasteria olim pertinentibus; Archivis Turrium Londinensis, Eboracensis; Curiarum Scaccarii, Augmentationum; Bibliothecis Bodleianâ, Arundellianâ, Cottonianâ, Seldenianâ, Hattonianâ, aliisque digestum per { ROGERUM DODSWORTH, Eboracensem, GULIELMUM DUGDALE, Warwicensem. Londini, Typis Alieie Warren, anno Domini MDCLXI."

The Third Volume came out in 1673:

"MONASTICI ANGLICANI VOLUMEN TERTIUM ET ULTIMUM: Additamenta quædam in Volumen Primum, ac Volumen Secundum, jampridem edita: neenon Fundationes, sive Dotationes diversarum Ecclesiarum Cathedralium ac Collegiatarum continens; Ex Archivis Regiis, ipsis Autographis, ac diversis Codicibus Manuscriptis decerpta, et hic congesta per WILL. DUGDALE Warwicensem, Norroy Regem Armorum. Savoy: exeudebat Tho. Newcomb, et prostant venales Ab. Roper, Joh. Martin, et Hen. Herringman ad Signa Solis in Fleet-street, Campanæ Cœmeterio Paulino, et Anchoræ Bursa Nova. MDCLXXIII."

For this Volume, as appears by an entry in his Diary, Dugdale received fifty pounds in money and twenty copies of the volume. He was assisted in it by Sir Thomas Herbert and Anthony a Wood.

The First Volume of the Monasticon was without a Dedication. The Second and Third were dedicated to King Charles the Second.

A new and improved Edition of the First Volume was published in 1682: "Editio Secunda auctior et emendatio: cum altero, ac elucidiori Indice. Londini. Impensis Christopheri Wilkinson, Thomæ Dring, et Caroli Harper, in vico vulgo vocato Fleet-street, 1682."

A few Copies of the Two first Volumes of the Monasticon appear to have been printed upon large paper: but no copies upon large paper of the Third Volume have, as yet, been discovered.

From an entry in his Diary, early in 1658, Dugdale appears to have feared that a Translation of the Monasticon would have been published by "Mr. King;" probably Gregory King, at that time his clerk. That such an one was prepared, as far as the First Volume was concerned, is evident, since Dugdale describes it as "erroneously Englished in a multitude of places." The Translation, however, or rather the Epitome which was subsequently printed, did not appear till 1692, six years after Sir William Dugdale's death; the dedication of which to "William Bromley, Esq. one of the Knights of the Shire for the County of Warwick," is signed J. W. It is ascribed to James Wright, a barrister of the Middle Temple, who, in 1684, published The History and Antiquities of the County of Rutland. As an Epitome it deserves no better character than that which Dugdale gave to King's.

In 1718, another Abridgement of the Monasticon appeared, generally believed to have been the work of Capt. John Stevens, whose Additional Volumes to Dugdale will be mentioned presently. This Epitome was executed in a better manner. In the Title-page, however, among the Libraries and other sources of information enumerated, "Coll. Bened." instead of Benet College Cambridge, is rendered "the Benedictine College of Doway."

In 1722 and 1723 appeared "The History of the ancient Abbeys, Monasteries, Hospitals, Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, being Two Additional Volumes to Sir William Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum; by John Stevens, Gent." These, beside an abundance of additional information in English, contained a very large assemblage of new Charters, together with the History of the Friaries, which had had no place assigned to them in the Volumes published by Dugdale.

From this time to the year 1812, in the choicer Libraries of England, Dugdale's original Work, the Epitome of 1718 as its abridged Translation, and Stevens's Volumes, formed but one Set of Books; usually acquired at an enormous price, but believed to contain all that was valuable as a Series in English Monastic History.

A new Edition of Dugdale therefore seemed wanting, which by comprising all that was valuable in Stevens's Work, and embracing an accession of materials from Leiger Books, Rolls, and other documents brought to light since Dugdale's time, might form a Complete History of all our Monastic Foundations: such an one as would not be likely at any time hereafter to be superseded. It was determined too that an Account of each Religious House, in English, should be prefixed to its respective series of Latin Charters: and the whole, by unsparing research, rendered equally useful to the General Reader, the Antiquary, and the Lawyer.

The Work so projected has here arrived at its completion. A period of eighteen years intervened between the publication of the first and last Volumes of Dugdale's edition. The new one, with all its additions, has been completed in one year less.

It was first undertaken by the REV. BULKELEY BANDINEL, D.D. Keeper of the Bodleian Library at Oxford, who was the sole Editor of the first Three Portions, as far as p. 264 of the First Volume: but great as were the stores of the Bodleian, a residence distant from the metropolis ill suited the researches which were of necessity to be made among the Offices of Record, and before the Fourth Portion of the Work appeared, two other gentlemen were called in as coadjutors, JOHN CALEY, Esq. Keeper of the Records in the Augmentation Office, and afterwards of those in the Chapter-House at Westminster, and HENRY ELLIS, Esq. then Keeper of the Manuscripts in the British Museum. To these latter gentlemen the Reader is indebted for the carrying on of the New Monasticon to its close.

With the exception of a few small Monasteries, descriptions of Monastic Seals, notices of Records, and some other occasional paragraphs, the English preliminary Accounts have been written, and the Work, since the Third Portion, entirely arranged by Mr. Ellis: Mr. Caley, in addition to the paragraphs already mentioned, communicating numerous copies of Records, Abstracts of the Ministers' Accompts, and the Abridgements of the Valors of Pope Nicholas and Henry the Eighth; assisting in the correction of the sheets; and aiding in continual suggestions. Dr. Bandinel, since the publication of the Third Portion, has contributed occasionally only: but the Reader is indebted to him for the Abstracts of the Godstow and Eynsham Chartularies: and here it may be stated, once for all, that the Abstracts of Monastic Registers, which fill some of the Notes in these Volumes, will be found, in point of utility, to form one of their most important features.

HUNDREDS of RELIGIOUS HOUSES which Dugdale knew nothing of have been introduced into the present Work, together with those of the different Orders of FRIARS, and Accounts, as far as they could be obtained, of very numerous DESTROYED MONASTERIES. Such CATHEDRALS also have been added of which Dugdale gives no description; but the CATHEDRAL of ST. PAUL LONDON it has been thought desirable to exclude; its History and Charters, greatly enlarged, and richly embellished, had been separately published in a style of uniformity with the Monasticon, by one of the Editors of that Work; so that to have reprinted them here, when nearly the whole of the same persons were subscribing for both Works, would have been materially enhancing the extent and cost of the Monasticon, without increasing its value to the Subscribers.

Among the Embellishments which the New Edition of the Monasticon presents, the chief of the Prints by Hollar have been re-engraved. Some of these represent objects not now in existence; as, the North View of Lincoln Cathedral showing the Spire, previous to its destruction, in 1547; and the Views of Salisbury, with its Chapter-House, since removed. King's Prints have been rejected as altogether worthless. The larger proportion of the Plates, it will be found, have been engraved in a better style of Art, from Drawings made exclusively for this Work, by Mr. John Coney, an artist whose execution possesses the freedom and delicacy of Piranesi, without his occasional obscurity and coarseness. His elaborate interior Views of the Cathedrals will amply illustrate this remark.

The difficulty of ascertaining whether Copies of the Old Edition of the Monasticon are perfect, has led to the insertion of an elaborate List of the Plates in the present Edition, which, including two Vignette Views printed with the Letter-press, extends to the unprecedented number of two hundred and forty-six, exclusive of numerous Wood-engravings of Arms, Seals, and initial Letters printed with the Letter-press.

The Treasures under Mr. CALEY'S care have supplied a rich engraved Series of SEALS of the BENEDICTINE MONASTERIES; the Arms of which have been introduced into the initial letters of the respective Accounts of each. The ARMS of the remaining Houses of religion, of the different Orders, have been arranged alphabetically upon two separate Plates, in order that, by condensation, the Letter-press might contain the greatest possible quantity of matter.

The Index has been compiled by MR. RICHARD TAYLOR, author of the Index Monasticus to the Diocese of Norwich.

JOHANNIS MARSHAMI.

INTER maxima Christianismi nascentis miracula merito habendum est ecclesiæ incrementum ; quæ nec veritatis odio, nec persecutionis rabie oppressa, in ultimas terrarum orbis oras, etiam in alterum hunc nostrum orbem propagata est.

^a Initium autem ab Hierosolymis. Illa ^b primum fundata ecclesia totius orbis ecclesias seminavit: illinc egressi sunt, qui ubique prædicaverunt, apostoli. Discessuris illis in præfectura rei familiaris (erant enim ^c κοινόβιοι) successerunt VII viri illi, qui mox ^d presbyteri appellati sunt; diaconi vero nusquam. His autem præerat Jacobus, frater domini, ^e episcopus apostolorum ex illorum collegio: coram quo cum Petro ^f disceptarunt Paulus et Barnabas: qui præses synodi sententiam ^g dixit, atque ecclesiis ^h denunciavit: cui denique Paulus (qui ab illo, Cepha et Johanne acceperat ⁱ δεξιὰς κοινωνίας εἰς τὰ ἔθνη) peragrationum suarum ^k rationem reddidit. Verum Jacobus non tam ^l episcopus dicendus est, quam residentiarius apostolus. ^m Omnes enim episcopi apostolorum successores sunt:

B. Paulus ⁿ prima peragratione ordinavit presbyteros; episcopos autem postrema, quum illis ultimum vale dicturus esset. Mileti ^o convocat presbyteros, non Ephesinos ^p solos, sed omnes illos, apud quos prædicaverat: quibus inquit, vinculorum Romanorum præscius, ^q scio vos faciem meam non amplius visuros: ^r ὑμᾶς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἔθετο Ἐπισκόπους. Sp. S. vos constituit episcopos. Convocavit presbyteros; dimisit episcopos.

Quos autem B. Paulus hic vocat presbyteros, eosdem in epistola ad Timotheum (qui ipse episcopus Ephesi celebratur) appellat ^s Διακόνες, ministros. Neque aliter, postquam constituerat in Macedonia ecclesias, ad exemplar Hierosolymitanæ, Philipensem epistolam inscripsit ^t Ἐπισκόποις, καὶ Διακόνοις episcopis et ministris. Sunt autem isti ^u Διάκονοι τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ Χριστοῦ: Ministri Dei, Christi; ^v Διάκονοι καινῆς Διαθήκης τοῦ Ευαγγελίου: Ministri Novi Testamenti, Evangelii; ^w Διάκονοι Δικαιοσύνης, τῆς Εκκλησίας: Ministri justitiæ, ecclesiæ; qualis fuit ipse Paulus. Eadem fuit etiam Cretensis ecclesiæ politia, in qua B. Paulus per Titum ordinari jussit ^x presbyteros et episcopum, talem omnino, qualis episcopus, de quo scripsit ad Timotheum. Nimirum ætate B. Pauli duo fuerunt ecclesiastici ordinis gradus: primus apostolorum, sive, post illorum discessum, episcoporum; alter presbyterorum, qui synonymice dicuntur ministri. Neque satis intellexissem quam ob causam Latina Hieronymi versio duobus istis, ad Phillipenses, et ad Timotheum, locis Græcam retinuerit vocem, quæ alibi per ministri vocabulum trigesies exprimitur, nisi perlegissem ista, quæ pater ille fervidius scripsit ad Evagrium, et in dictum Titi locum. An vero ad hanc episcoporum institutionem pertineat illa ^y VII virorum, itineris sociorum, designatio: an illæ VII a B. ^z Johanne celebratæ ecclesiæ, non est hic disquirendi locus.

Cæterum ecclesia Hierosolymitana diu non perstitit Hierosolymis; sed imminente urbis excidio ^z migravit Pellam, Decapoleos urbem, sub Jacobi successore Symeone. Neque rediisse unquam videtur: non sane ante Adrianum, quum a Tito excisa sit urbs, neque manserit ^a lapis super lapidem; non post conditam ab Adriano Æliam, quia ^b Judæis introeundi licentia ablata est.

Ex illo tempore duplex fuit Hierosolymitanorum episcoporum successio: altera Pellensis ^c τῶν ἐκ περιτομῆς ἐπισκόπων; qui ^d Christum Deum sub legis observatione credebant, et quia circumcisi erant, exulabant: altera Æliensis ^e τῆς αὐτόθι ἐκκλησίας ἐξ ἐθνῶν συνκροτηθείσης, quibus ^f christianis civitas permissa, quod ritus Judaicos non adhiberent. Urbem, terramque patriam ingredi, et ^g genitalia mutilare vetitum fuit Judæis; de Judæo autem cognoscebat procurator, inspiciendo ^h an circumsectus esset. Perperam Eusebius, quem sequuntur ⁱ plurimi, episcopos τοῦς ἐμπεριτόμους intra paucos Trajani Adrianique annos coarctat; cum series illa, ex XV constans, ultra Severi tempora durasse, nec nisi cum cessatione legalium (ut loquuntur in scholis) desiisse videatur. Neque tunc quidem desiit episcopatus ille. ^k Zebennus episcopus Pellensis concilio Chalcedonensi, ^l Paulus episcopus Pelliensis Constantinopolitano subscripsit. Interim Æliensis successionis, sicut origo a Marco quodam obscura, ita auctoritas non parum fuit imminuta. ^m Εἴχρη τῶν ἐπισκόπων ἐκ περιτομῆς ὄντων ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ καταπαθέντων τὸν πάντα κόσμον τούτοις συνέπεσθαι. Cum episcopi ex circumcissione fuerunt Hierosolymis, totus mundus illis obsequi debuit. Novi autem Æliæ præules non erant quidem universales: erant tamen ἀντοκέφαλοι, neque Cæsareæ, quod putarunt magni viri, neque Antiochiæ subditi. Firmilianus, Cæsariensis Cappadociæ episcopus, Stephano Romano crimini dedit ⁿ non observari Romæ omnia æqualiter, quæ Hierosolymis observantur. Constantinopolitani patres Hierosolymam agnoscunt ^o omnium ecclesiarum matrem: atque Hieronymus apostolicam. ^p Quid facient Orientis ecclesiæ, quid Ægypti, et sedis apostolicæ? Oriens est diœcesis Antiochena; sedes apostolica, ^p Hierosolymitana: neque aliam ob causam pater ille (post Eusebium) cumulavit utriusque generis episcopos, quam ut ab apostolo deduceretur series.

Ob antiquum sedis honorem, in concilio ^r Nicæno honoratur Macarius Hierosolymitanus; salva Eusebii dignitate; quia Cæsarea politica fuit Palæstinæ metropolis. Theodorus Balsamon Antiochenus ipse patriarcha, tunc statui putat κατὰ τὰ παλαιὰ ἔθη, Hierosolymitanum ^s præesse provinciis quæ in Palæstina, in Arabia, et in Phænice. Antiocheno postea litem de diœceseos limitibus movente, in Chalcedonensi concilio ^t post multam contentionem, ex consensu decretum est, ut sedes Antiochiensium habeat duas Phœnicias et Arabiam; sedes autem Hierosolymitana habeat tres Palæstinas. Nec quicquam fere, quod metropolitici subinde juris habebatur, non exercuerunt antistites Ælienses. Ista autem omnia jam convasare longum esset.

Dum imminebant persecutionum tempestates, uno episcopi nomine regebatur ecclesia: nulla fuit conservandi limitis cura, aut de primatu decertatio. Concessa tandem christianis tranquillitate, ad civilem plerumque composita fuit ecclesiæ politia; et diversi paulatim introducti sunt dignitatum ordines. Metropolitanæ nomen a provinciis Romanis in ecclesiam transiit. A primatu urbium primum episcoporum discrimen.

Archiepiscopi titulus Alexandriae ortus est. Unus enim in Ægypto episcopus fuit usque ad Demetrium, qui ^u tres episcopos instituisse dicitur; ejus autem successor Heraclas, viginti. Ut maneret metropolitanæ Alexandrino suus honor, inventum est archiepiscopi nomen. Petrus Alexandriae archiepiscopus nominatur ^x Epiphano: fuit is post Marcum decimus sextus. Alexander, qui decimus octavus, archiepiscopus dicitur ^y Athanasio; qui primus omnium illius vocis meminit. Anno demum 431, in concilio Ephesino, Cyrillus Hierosolymitanus sæpissime; etiam Cælestinus Romanus aliquoties archiepiscopi nomen obtinent.

Patriarchæ titulus Judæis proprius fuit quamdiu stetit illorum res inter Christianos. Postquam vero ab Honorio et Theodosio Augg. ^b codicilli honorariæ præfecturæ demti sunt Gamalielo, patriarcharum postremo, vox illa in ecclesia christiana ambitiose usurpari cœpit. Dignitatis institutionem sedulo quæsivi; frustra tamen. Mitto Anacleti Clementisque epistolas: mitto Arabicos concilii Nicæni canones, ab Alphonso Pisano et Francisco Turriano editos: mitto Cataphrygarum patriarchas: ipsum Socratem mitto, qui historiam ad annum 439 contextens, primus omnium patriarchatus inter dignitates ecclesiasticas retulit, illosque in concilio Constantinopolitano institutos asserit: quem errorem satis redarguit illustrissimus et doctissimus Cardinalis.^c Labente jam quinti sæculi dimidio, Leo Romanus patriarcha appellatur a Theodosio,^d in epistolis Chalcedonensi concilio præfixis; et in epistola ^e subnexa, Anatolius Constantinopolitanus patriarcha dicitur a Mæsiæ patribus. Fuerunt etiam ^f Πατριάρχαι διοικήσεως ἐκάστῃς: Patriarchæ uniuscujusque diœceseos; quæ deinceps enumerantur istæ: ^g Oriens, Pontica, Asiana, Thracica, Illyricum. Adeo ut non solum Anatolius, sed etiam Maximus Antiochiæ, Thalassius Cesariæ Cappadociæ, Stephanus Ephesi, Athanasius Thessalonicæ archiepiscopi, essent tunc patriarchæ. Daciæ, a barbaris oppressæ, nulla est ratio; nec Dioscuri Alexandrini, in illo concilio damnati. Anno 512,^h Flavianus vocatur Antiochiæ catholicus patriarcha. Et in concilio Constantinopolitano sub Menna, anno 536, Petrus ⁱ Hierosolymitanus, patriarcha vocatur. Eodem tempore, præter Romanum, Constantinopolitanum et Antiochenum, etiam Epiphanius Tyrius tum archiepiscopus salutatur, tum ^k patriarcha: quasi illa Phænicæ metropolis non esset Orientis diœcesi subjecta. Tandem Alexandrinus Apollinarius, anno 553, in Constantinopolitana synodo, semel atque iterum patriarcha ^l vocatur; archiepiscopi autem titulo, tanquam magis proprio, ubique designatur. Alexandriæ archiepiscopus etiam in edicto ^m Justiniani nuncupatur patriarcha.

Scilicet ætate illa episcopatus tres fuerunt gradus. I. Exarchi diœceseon, qui vel archiepiscopi, vel patriarchæ synonymice dicebantur. II. Metropolitanæ provinciarum. III. Episcopi civitatum. Frequens occurrit in Codice et in Novellis triplex ⁿ hæc antistitum distinctio: nec rara inibi mentio patriarcharum ^o uniuscujusque diœceseos. Quasi esset illo ævo cuilibet diœcesi suus patriarcha; cuilibet patriarchæ sua diœcesis.

Obtinuit autem id jam inter catholicos, quod S. Hieronymus non ita pridem exprobraverat Cataphrygis. ^p Apud nos (inquit) apostolorum locum episcopi tenent: apud eos episcopus tertius est. Habent enim primos de Pepusa Phrygiæ patriarchas: secundos, quos vocant Cenones: atque ita in tertium, id est pene ultimum locum episcopi devolvuntur: quasi exinde ambitiosior religio fiat, si quod apud nos primum est, apud illos novissimum sit.

In occidentali autem ecclesia patriarchæ nomen sub Theodorico rege primum usurpari videtur. Erat is quidem natione Gothus, sed Romanis imbutus moribus; Zenoni imperatori magister præsentis militiæ, filius adoptatus, et Cos. an. 484, sub cujus regno reffloruit admodum Italia. Præter Italiam, ille ^q Gallias suo acquisivit imperio, et victis Bulgaribus Sirmium recepit, Pannoniæ metropolim.

Illi tam in Italia, quam in ^r Dalmatiis et ^s Galliis (anno 526) successit Athalaricus filius. Cassiodorus Latinorum primus patriarcharum, tanquam soliti nominis, meminit in rescripto Athalarici ad Johannem II. P. ^t quod etiam ad universos patriarchas atque metropolitanas ecclesias voluit pertinere. Episcopum Romanum, MMM. solidorum: alios vero patriarchas, vel, qui patriarcharum honore reliquis præsident ecclesiis, quando in comitatu de eorum ordinatione tractatur, intra MM. solidorum jubet expendere. Vetat ultra onerari vel apostolicæ presulem ecclesiæ, vel patriarcharum episcopum, id est, tam Romanum, quam quemlibet alium patriarchalem episcopum sub sua ditione. De numero non constat. Intra Athalarici regnum fuerunt quinque Metropolitanæ ecclesiæ; quarum episcopi hic intelligi videntur. Italiæ, in XVII. divisæ regiones, duæ fuerunt diœceses: altera Italia dicta est, altera Romania. ^u Μητρόπολις ἡ Ρώμη τῆς Ρωμανίας ἐστίν: Roma Romaniae metropolis. ^v Μεδιόλανον μητρόπολις τῆς Ἰταλίας: Mediolanum metropolis Italiæ. Sub Roma X fuerunt regiones, quæ suburbicariæ dictæ sunt: sub Mediolano VII. distributio ista ante Constantinum facta est. Nam in Aureliani imperatoris edicto de Paulo Samosateno sunt: ^w Οἱ κατὰ τὴν Ἰταλίαν καὶ τὴν Ρωμίων πόλιν ἐπίσκοποι; id est, utriusque diœceseos. Constantinus etiam de Cæciliano scribit tum ^x Miltiadi Romæ, tum Merocli Mediolani episcopo. Sulp. Severus dicit Damasum et Ambrosium fuisse ^y duos episcopos, quorum ea tempestate summa auctoritas erat. Et in concilio Taurinensi utraque ponitur auctoritas ^z Ambrosii episcopi, vel Romanæ ecclesiæ sacerdotis.

Tertia Italiæ metropolis posterioris fuit sæculi. Ex quo Honorius Aug. Ravennæ sederat, urbs illa imperii sedes perpetua ac domicilium extitit. Inde reges Gothi, inde exarchi imperaverunt Romanis; adeo ut illo primariæ urbis jure, quo cum veteri Roma decertavit nova, ipsa Roma diu fuit Ravenna inferior. Verum Ravennas ἀυτοκεφαλίας contra Romanos impetus tuendæ satagebat; donec Pipinus rex Galliæ, cedentibus Longobardis, exarchatum Pentapolimque Pont. Romano in perpetuum concessit. ^a Tenuit autem Ravenna tres Italiæ provincias: Æmiliam, atque Flaminiam, sive Picenum annonarium, Mediolanensis ^b olim diœceseos; et Picenum suburbicarium, Romanæ.

Extra Italiam duæ fuerunt sub Athalarico metropoles: altera Illyrici, altera Galliarum. Aquileia prius ^c Dalmatiæ, dein ^d Italiæ urbs fuit: verum redacta intra Adduam Mediolanensi diœcesi, ^e Venetiæ etiam Histria connectitur, ut utræque pro una provincia habentur, cujus Aquileia civitas caput extitit.

Justinianus, ^f In antiquis, inquit, temporibus Sirmii præfectura fuit constituta, ibique omne Illyrici fastigium, tam in civilibus quam in episcopalibus causis; postea autem Attilanis temporibus, ejusdem locis devastatis, Apennius præfectus pr. de Sirmitana civitate Thessalonicam profugus venit, tunc ipsam præfecturam et sacerdotialis honor secutus est. Quod quidem de istis Illyrici provinciis intelligendum est, quas Notitia in partibus orientis recenset. In occidentis eadem ratio. Hisce enim provinciis, etiamsi neque Pr. Pr. neque vicarius; tamen in ecclesiæ primatum Aquileia successisse videtur, et more ævi, patriarchæ titulum induisse. Pacta autem est illa Illyrici partitio anno 437, cum Valentinianus III. Eudoxiam, ^g Theodosii filiam, in matrimonium accepit. ^h Placidia (inquit senator p. p.) nurum sibi amissione Illyrici comparavit; factaque est conjunctio regnantis, divisio dolenda provinciis. Circa idem tempus Notitiam fuisse scriptam, suadent tum ista Illyrici distributio, tum ⁱ Numeri Placidi Valentinianici felices, a Placidia dicti. Post quinquennium contigit devastatio Sirmii. An esset unquam Sirmiensis patriarcha, non liquet; neque quis primus Aquileiensium. Anno autem 568, quando Longobardi Italiam invaserunt, ^k Aquileiensi civitati B. Paulus patriarcha præerat, qui ex Aquileia ad Gradum insulam confugit. Circa annum 605, cum jam Longobardi christianam suscepissent religionem, ^l ordinatur Johannes patriarcha in Aquileia vetere cum consensu regis Agilulfi; in Grado quoque ordinatus est Romanis Candidianus. Et ex illo tempore cœperunt duo esse patriarchæ. Gregorius P. II. anno 729 (Paulo Diacono senior) ^m Donatum Gradensem patriarcham nuncupat, Serenum, Forojuliensem episcopum: patriarchum non appellat ecclesiæ Romanæ minus obsequentem. Forojuliensis autem dicitur non ab urbe, sed a territorio. Nam Serenus et ⁿ superiores patriarchæ, quia in Aquileia propter Romanorum incursionem habitare minime poterant, sedem non in Foro Julii, sed in Cormones habebant. Ejus autem successor ^o Calistus sedem in Forum Julii transtulit. Walafredus Strabo (sæculo nono) patriarchæ ^p Forojuliensis meminit. Hodie Aquileiensis patriarcha Utini residet, et suffraganeos habet omnes Venetiæ atque Istriæ episcopos, a Verona usque ad Polam; Gradensis autem, ante annos abhinc ducentos, ab Eugenio P. IV. in urbem Venetiarum translatus est.

Mediolanensis episcopus (tribus, quas diximus, amissis) quatuor retinuit provincias; Liguriam, Alpes Cottias, Rhætiam primam, et secundam; Æmiliæ etiam partem, quando XX episcopi suffraganei ^q synodicæ Eusebii ad Leonem epistolæ subscripserunt. Mediolano autem ab Attila incenso, postquam Theodoricus rex nobilem Ticini regiam construxerat, ^r in qua Longobardi dein sedem regni habuerunt, illius ecclesiæ splendor paulatim imminutus est; salvo interim suæ libertatis privilegio. Pelagius P. in causa trium capitulorum, Mediolanensem atque Aquileiensem præules, cum non possit sua, ^s potestate sæculari compescere voluit, Narsetem frustra postulans, ut illos ad Justinianum sub custodia dirigat. Et in Monothelitarum causa, ^t Mansuetus concilium habuit Mediolani, sicut Agatho Romæ. Sane Mediolanenses olim episcopi, a sua synodo ordinati, nemini subjecti erant; sed absque provocatione judicabant. Tandem autem exciso Longobardorum regno, tota Italia jurisdictioni Romanæ tributa est.

Galliarum metropolis ^u Treveris olim fuit sub Romanis: illius autem ^v regionis, inter Rhodanum et Alpes, quam Gothi obtinuerunt, metropolis Lugduni fuisse videtur; licet istis temporibus Romanus episcopus vices suas Arelatensi concesserit. Sub Theodorici atque Athalarici regnis episcopos Lugdunenses patriarchas dictos fuisse, illumque titulum, post ^w Gothorum decessionem, tenuisse verisimile est; cum non ita multo post, anno 567, Nicetius Lugdunensis a Gregorio ^x Turonensi; et Nicetii successor Priscus episcopus, anno 585, in concilio ^y Matisconensi II, patriarchæ dicti sint. At vero successio ista non fuit diuturna.

Nam post Cassiodori ætatem, patriarchæ vocabulum apud Latinos rarissime usurpatum est. In Italia, neque Mediolanensis, neque Ravennas, neque ipse præsul Romanus illo titulo insignitus est. Romanus quidem, licet inter primos patriarcha salutatus sit, nunquam tamen nomen illud assumsit, nec quemquam reperio, qui semetipsum patriarcham nuncupaverit. Cum Nicolao P. respondendum esset ad Bulgaros, ^z quot sint veraciter patriarchæ; ille non sibi dignitatem asserit, sed ecclesiæ Romanæ, quatenus apostolicæ. Omnium autem episcoporum sedes olim apostolicæ dicebantur. Romæ tamen Lateranense palatium ^a patriarchii nomen habet; et visuntur hodie unius urbis ^b quinque patriarchales ecclesiæ.

Aquileiensis autem patriarcha inter Græcos forsitan numerandus est: sane inter illos sessum ivit in Lugdunensi concilio, anno 1245. ^c Ex opposito tres patriarchæ ordinati fuerunt, videlicet Constantinopolitanus, ad dextram Antiochenus, et Aquileiensis; de quo tertio scandalum est exortum, cum non esset de quatuor patriarchis. Græcos intellige, præter Romanum, qui concilio præsidebat. Nam ex XCII illo Nicalai ^d responso ad Bulgaros, anno 861; ex ^e Canone XVII concilii Constantinopolitani IV, anno 870: ex Pseudanacleti Pseudoclementisque epistolis, post id tempus fabricatis, et in decretalia demum derivatis, innotuerat jurisconsultis celeberrimâ illa quinque principalium patriarcharum distinctio.

Antea Gregorius M. (cujus tempore ^f Severus in Grado fuit patriarcha Aquileiensis) ^g quatuor patriarcharum meminerat, qui fuerunt in ^h quatuor præcipuis sedibus antistites. Neque enim plures quam quatuor fuerunt in Oriente αυτοκέφαλοι καὶ ἀυτόνομοι, postquam Thracica, Macedonica, Asiana, Pontica diœceses Constantinopoli subjicerentur. Verum manebat tunc temporis in ecclesia triplex episcoporum gradus: adhuc dignitas archiepiscopalis patriarchali fuit æqualis. ⁱ Isidorus Hispalensis Gregorii discipulus, Archiepiscopus, inquit, Græce dicitur summus episcoporum: tenet enim vicem apostolicam, et præsidet tam metropolitanis, quam episcopis cæteris. In concilio ^k Trullano, anno 680, Romanus, Constantinopolitanus, Antiochenus et Ravennas; et in concilio Niceno II. anno 787, Adrianus Romanus, et Tarasius Constantinopolitanus archiepiscopi dicti sunt.

Nono etiam sæculo duravit triplex ordo: tituli autem quam plurimum immutati sunt. Archiepiscopus a primo delapsus loco metropolitæ æquiparatur; et patriarcha primatem parem habet. Rabanus Maurus abbas Fuldensis, ^l Ordo, inquit, episcoporum tripartitus est, id est in patriarchis, archiepiscopis, qui et metropolitani sunt, et in episcopis. Locus ille (ut obiter dicam) apud Isidorum, a recentiore manu interpolatus, ita legitur, ^m Ordo episcoporum quadripartitus est in patriarchis, archiepiscopis, metropolitanis et episcopis: quæ quidem nec Isidoro ipsi, nec illius ævo consentanea sunt. In concilio Constantinopolitano IV ⁿ archiepiscopus, aut metropolitanus præest episcopis, patriarchæ subditus. Atque inde est, quod ^o Nicholaus P. Ortensem archiepiscopum; et Paulus Diaconus ^p Angilramnum Metensem archiepiscopum vocat. Porro apud orientales evilescerat adeo archiepiscopi nomen, ut postponeretur metropolitæ. Ex dispositione Leonis Imp. cognomento Philosophi (imperavit is ultra annum 900) recensentur patriarchæ Constantinopolitano subditæ, ^q metropoles LXXXI, archiepiscopatus insuper XXXIX; quibus cum nulli subessent suffraganei, novus fit episcoporum ordo; ipsis episcopis, titulo tenus, major; metropolitæ vero jurisdictione minor. Subsédente archiepiscopo, emergit primas. Nicholaus P. qui epistolam ^r patriarchis, metropolitæ, et reliquis episcopis inscribit; ^s Rodulfum Bituricensem primatem et patriarcham appellat; et Hincmarum ^t primatem Belgicæ Galliæ confirmat, id est in primo gradu. Optimus sui temporis interpres ipse Hincmarus ^u archiepiscopos et metropolitanos conjungit secundo loco; primo autem collocat patriarchas vel primates, qui duobus his nominibus in unius prioratus funguntur officio: et Hierosolymitanum Constantinopolitanumque antistites inter patriarchas et primates computat.

Cæterum primatis titulus, minus sublimis olim, et vetustissimis temporibus in ecclesia Latina usitatus, a prima cathedra vel sede episcopi originem duxit. Anno 305, in Eliberitano Hispaniæ concilio, verba sunt de ^v eo loco, in quo prima cathedra constituta est episcopatus: vel primæ cathedræ episcopus.

Crebrius autem et clarius id nomen in Africa; in qua plures cum essent civiles provinciæ, unicus tamen erat metropolita Carthaginensis; sub quo ^w universa Africa provincia, sive diocesis; et ^x omnes episcopi cis mare positi. Reliqui singularum provinciarum episcopi suum habuerunt primatem, qui non alio nomine dictus est, quam ^y primæ sedis episcopus. Prima autem sedes non erat provinciæ ^z metropolis, sed quæcunque civitas, in qua prioris episcopi sedes contingeret, qui antiquiore ordinationis promotione, et ^a episcopatus ætate reliquis prælatus est. Hinc in rebus Africanis primates non raro senes vocantur: cautumque est, ordinatos ^b literas accipere ab ordinatoribus suis, continentem consulem et diem: ut nulla altercatio de posterioribus vel anterioribus oriatur. Et quidem vox illa proprie Afris attribui videtur. Quem Syriacus ad Afros, ^c primatem; Innocentius, rem ipsissimam ad episcopum Gallum scribens, ^d metropolitanum appellat. Primas itaque initio fuit episcoporum primus; et in Africa senior episcopus pro metropolita fuit provinciæ. Extra Africam metropolita provinciæ primatis honorem habuit. ^e Arelatensis et Viennensis episcopi in concilio Taurinensi decertarunt ^f de primatus honore: causa metropoli est adjudicata. miscue usus est. Apud Hispanos, ^h honor primatus, Toletanæ ecclesiæ concessus, est metropolitani nominis autoritas. Edixit rex Gundemarus, ⁱ ut sicut Bætica, Lusitania, vel Tarracensis provincia singulos habent metropolitanos, ita et Carthaginensis unum veneretur primatem, et inter omnes comprovinciales summum antistitem. De primatu etiam extra Africam, magna fuit episcopalis ætatis ratio. Metropolitana ordinandorum in aliena provincia episcoporum potestas Proculo Massiliensi adjudicata est, ^k ut non tam civitati ejus, quam ipsi deferretur, honore primatus, et ut in diebus vitæ ejus primatus habeat dignitatem. Hilarus P. ^l ordinandorum episcoporum potestatem pertinere censuit ad antistitem, qui ævo honoris primas esse dicitur, et quem repererit episcopalis ordo primatem. Neque aliter Gregorius M. ad Syagrium, ^m Cæteros, inquit, episcopos secundum ordinationis suæ tempus sua tenere loca decernimus: et de episcopis nostris, ad Augustinum, ⁿ Ipse prior habeatur, qui prius fuerit ordinatus. Quod et nostrates postea, ^o Ex concilio, inquit, Toletano IV, Milevitano, atque Bracarensi statutum est, ut singuli secundum ordinationis suæ tempora sedeant.

Primatum ergo intra secundum episcopatus ordinem diu contineri, et ^p metropolitanos primates esse singulos singularum provinciarum, satis constat. Tandem vero ambitiosa surrexit metropolitana προεδρία, fuitque ipsorum primatum primatus; cum ^q prælationem primas metropolitana habere debeat; quem, Hincmari ætate, æqualem patriarchæ fuisse diximus.

Verum diuturna non fuit ista paritas. Postquam enim patriarchis, ex definito illorum numero, major accesserat honor; primas, in medio derelictus gradu, metropolita quidem major fuit, sed patriarcha minor.

Sed nec patriarchæ principalitatem suam tueri potuerunt: gliscenti ambitioni succubuere; et summam hierarchiæ apicem occupavit papa; ^r vocabulum omnibus non ita pridem episcopis, etiam et abbatibus nonnullis commune. Octava synodus, anno 870, primo recenset loco papam senioris Romæ; deinceps autem Constantinopoleos, Alexandria, Antiochiæ atque Hierosolymorum patriarchas. Quod quidem, dictante Gregorio VII, ^s quod unicum est nomen in mundo, et compilante posthac decreta Gratiano, in jus transiit. Ad hunc itaque modum in ecclesia tandem isti numerabantur dignitatum gradus.

1 Papa.	2 Patriarcha.	3 Primas.
4 Metropolita.	5 Archiepiscopus.	6 Episcopus.

Sane non defuerunt inter veteres viri boni et cordati, qui Reip. Christianæ interesse existimarent, veræ fidei præsidium et ὁρμητήριον in sede Romana collocari. Concilium Ephesinum gratias egit Cælestino, ^t τῷ φουλακὶ τῆς πίστεως, custodi fidei. Leo magnus, magni in Oriente nominis, strenuus fuit fidei propugnator contra Nestorianos, Eutychianos, Dioscurum, alios. Qui nescit pontifices Romanos doctrinam christianam per aliquot sæcula sartam tectam conservasse, næ is rerum ecclesiæ parum peritus est. Quis Gregorii magni in restauranda re christiana solertiam pro merito celebrare potest? Quis nostratium non ingratus illius immensitatem beneficii non agnoscit?

At vero vetustioribus sæculis non incelebris fuit Britannorum religio. Nam ut omittamus Josephi Arimathæi adventum, et Lucii regis legationem, luculentus est Britannicæ fidei testis Tertullianus Afer. ^u Britannorum inaccessa Romanis loca, Christo vero subdita. Arelatensi concilio tres interfuerunt e Britannia episcopi; e singulis (ni fallor) provinciis: e maxima Cæsariensi, ^v Eborius episcopus de civitate Eboracensi; e Britannia prima, Restitutus episcopus de civitate Londinensi; e Britannia secunda, Adelfius episcopus de civitate Col. Legionensium, vel Car-leonensium, non Londinensium. ^w In ^x Sardicensi concilio ἐξ ἐπαρχιῶν Βρετανίων adfuerunt episcopi: et in Ariminensi, tres ^x ex Britannia, tam pauperes, ut nihil proprium haberent.

Sed quid ego spicilegium post uberrimam messem? ^y De Britannicarum ecclesiarum primordiis usque ad Augustini missionem non ita pridem summa cum laude scripsit Jacobus Usse-rius archiepiscopus Armachanus, vir ob eruditionis immensitatem, morumque sanctitatem toto orbi venerandissimus; ob benevolentiam mihi colendissimus.

Postquam ^z Saxones a mari usque ad mare devastantes, Christianitatem pene totam in In-sula delevisent; placuit tandem benignitati divinæ evangelium a patria nostra postliminio recipi: et ^a tunc cum sol ecclesiæ, incursu Saracenorum, occidit in Oriente, ortus est in Occi-dente. Audiamus Bedam. Gregorius P. ^b qui totus erga animarum lucra vacabat, divino monitus instinctu, anno circiter 150 ab adventu Anglorum, in Britanniam misit Augustinum, et alios ferme 40 cum eo Monachos, prædicare verbum Dei genti Anglorum. ^c Acceperunt autem de gente Francorum interpretes; quia lingua Teutonica utrique genti communis. Reg-nabat tunc in Cantio Ethelbertus, qui uxorem habebat Christianam, de gente Francorum, nomine Bertham. Baptizato tandem rege, crevit indies credentium multitudo. ^d Interea Augustinus Arelatum rediens, episcopus ordinatus est. Gregorius duas Britanniae dioceses instituit; Londinensem et Eboracensem; utrique ^e duodecim episcopos suffraganeos ordinari jussit, ut metropolitani honore perfruatur uterque: Eboracensem vero, omnesque Britanniae sacerdotes, Augustini, quoad vixerit, dispositioni subiecit: ita tamen, ut post ejus obitum, esset inter Londoniæ et Eboracæ civitatis episcopos in posterum honoris ista distinctio, ut ipse prior habeatur, qui prius fuit ordinatus. Pallium Augustino misit; Eboracensi quoque, Deo favente, missurus. Fuit itaque Augustinus metropolita Londinensis; ^f quia scilicet ad id tempus Dorobernensis obscuræ urbis notitia Romanos non attigisset.

Eventus autem Gregorianæ dispositioni non respondit. Augustinus enim duos tantum ordinavit episcopos; ^g Justum Roffensem, et Mellitum ad prædicandum ultra Thamesin; qui cum Londoniæ aliquot annis docuisset, pulsus est; et cum Justo, ^h ne inter barbaros sine fructu residerent, in Galliam secessit. Laurentius etiam (qui Augustino successerat) ⁱ Britanniam relicturus erat. Adeo conclamatum esset de ecclesia nostra, nisi Eadbaldus (qui post Ethel-bertum patrem regnavit in Cantio) idololatricam exuisset mentem. Redierunt itaque Mellitus, qui successit Laurentio; et qui Mellito, ^k Justus. Ad hunc Bonifacius V. ^l pallium misisse dicitur: sed vix quadrat chronologia. Eadbaldi regis sororem, Edelburgam Edwinus rex Nordanhumbrorum in uxorem petiit: nuptam comitatus est ^m Paulinus, episcopus a Justo or-dinatus, anno 625, qui foelicem initio operam navavit Eboraci, et Lincolnæ, ubi Honorium Justi successorem consecravit episcopum: ideo Honorius P. ⁿ duo pallia utrorumque metro-politanorum, id est Honorio et Paulino direxit; ut decedente altero, alter successorem statuat. Verum irrita istæc omnia. Nam anno 633 occiso in acie Edwino, ^o Paulinus fugatus Cantium rediit, et Roffensi ecclesiæ, post Romanum, præfuit. Ecclesia atque Anglicana intra Can-tianos limites iterum redacta est: neque ulla adhuc fuit episcoporum successio, præterquam Roffensium, et Cantuariorum.

Paulo post Sigebertus (filius Redwaldi, qui ^p jam dudum in Cantio sacramentis christianæ fidei imbutus est, sed frustra) ^q fratri Eorpwaldo (qui suasu Edwini fidem Christi susceperat, moxque occisus fuerat) in regno orientalium Anglorum successit. Hic, vivente fratre, cum exularet in Gallia, lavacrum baptismi suscepit: regnanti adfuit Fœlix Burgundus, episcopus ab Honorio ordinatus, ^r accepitque sedem episcopatus in civitate Dummock. Eodem fere tem-pore Honorius P. in Britanniam misit Byrinum episcopum, qui occidentalium Saxonum regem Cynigilsum ad fidem convertit. Ejus baptismo adfuit ^s Oswaldus gener, rex Northumbro-rum, qui a Scottis (apud quos exulans ipse Christianam fidem susceperat) impetraverat Aida-num, cui Lindisfarnensem insulam in episcopatus sedem concesserat. Byrino autem episco-palis sedes fuit Dorcestria.

Fœlix faustumque hoc sub duobus Honorii ecclesiæ Anglicanæ incrementum. De Roma Byrinus; de Burgundia Fœlix; de Scottia Aidan, Occidentem, Orientem, Septentrionem divino verbo illuminarunt. Ad Austrum etiam, anno 640, ^t Earcomburtus rex Cantii, primus regum Anglorum, idola destrui, et jejunium 40 dierum observari præcepit. Interim Mercii, qui mediterranea inter Thamesim et Humbrum, longe maximam insulæ partem, tenuerunt, rudes fuerunt evangelii. Ultra Sabrinam Britones, licet Christiani, ^u fidem religionemque Anglorum pro nihilo habebant, neque in aliquo eis magis communicabant, quam Paganis.

Anno 655, Honorio successit in ^v cathedra Dorovernensi sextus Deusdedit de gente Occidentalium Saxonum; quem ordinavit Ithamar Roffensis. Illo sedente, ad fidem conversi sunt Sigbertus ^w rex Orientalium Saxonum, et ^x Penda rex Merciorum: reges ambo a Finano Lindisfarnensi episcopo baptizati sunt in villa ^y regia, Ad murum, dicta. Cedd fuit aliquandiu episcopus Orientalium Saxonum: Merciorum autem primus episcopus fuit Diuma Scottus. Tandem, anno 668, Vitalianus P. ^z ecclesiis Anglorum archiepiscopum misit monachum Romanum Theodorum, natum ex Tharso Ciliciæ, virum Græce et Latine instructum.

Hic primus (quantum video) archiepiscopi titulum in Britanniam attulit. Ita appellatur Theodorus, in ^a Concilio Romano; et in epistola ^b Agathonis P. ad synodum Constantinopolitanam III; et ^c Pœnitentialis libri, quem scripsit ille, capitulum 65^{um} agit de ordinatione archiepiscopi. Beda quidem, et ^d Bonifacius nostras Moguntinus archiepiscopus Theodori decessores archiepiscopos appellant; et Normannici scriptores ab Eleutherii P. tempore archiepiscopos in Britannia statuunt. Verum ista ad morem ævi, in quo scripserunt, non ad fidem veterum monumentorum dicta sunt. Recte olim Guilielmus Neubrigensis notavit, ne ^e unum quidem archiepiscopum unquam habuisse Britonas. Nondum enim ætate Augustini apud Occidentales archiepiscopi vocabulum in usu fuit. Gregorius M. pallium concessit ^f Augustino nostro, ^g Virgilio Arelatensi, ^h Syagrio Augustodunensi, aliisque metropolitanis, sub episcopi titulo. Nec quenquam facile reperies inter Latinos, qui a scriptore illius temporis Latino archiepiscopus appelletur. Scio Gregorium non tantum ⁱ Eusebium Thessalonicensem et Johannem ^k Corinthium, sed etiam ^l Januarium Calaritanum, et ^m Marinianum Ravennatem, archiepiscopos appellare. Et paulo ante Gregorium, ⁿ Victor Tununensis Reparatum; ^o Liberatus Capreolum, Carthaginenses archiepiscopos nuncupant. Verum ista omnia ad Græcam scribendi formulam accommodata sunt. Istis enim temporibus tam Carthago, quam ^p Sardinia et Ravenna Constantinopolitano subjectæ imperio, Græcæ accencebantur ecclesiæ. Ac licet in concilio Matisconensi II. definitum sit, ^q ut archiepiscopus missas sine pallio non dicat: Isidorus tamen ejusdem ævi scriptor interpretationem vocis, tanquam novitiæ et peregrinæ, exhibet. Archiepiscopus, inquit, ^r Græce dicitur summus episcoporum.

Theodorus itaque ^s primus erat archiepiscopus; cui omnis Anglorum ecclesia manus dare consentiret. Ille anno 673 ^t concilium cogit episcoporum, in loco qui dicitur Herudford: convenerunt de singulis regnis, Bisi Orientalium Anglorum episcopus, Putta Rhofensis, Eleutherius Occidentalium Saxonum, Winfridus Merciorum episcopus; Wilfridus Nordenhumborum episcopus per legatarios affuit. Abfuit Wina, qui nuper a Vulfero rege Orientalium Saxonum precio emerat sedem Londoniæ. Quot regna, tot episcopi. Cantiani duos habuerunt episcopos; Australes Saxones adhuc nullum. Sancitum est hoc concilio ^u ut nullus episcoporum se præferat alteri per ambitionem, sed omnes agnoscant tempus et ordinem consecrationis suæ. Et, ut plures episcopi, crescente numero fidelium, augerentur. ^v Itaque Theodorus, perlustrans universa, ordinavit locis opportunis episcopos. ^w Apud Orientales Anglos præter

Æccam Dommocensem constituitur Bedwinus Helmhamensis: apud^x Mercios, pro uno Vinfrido, constituuntur Sexvulfus Lichfeldensis, Edherus Lindessensis, Boselus Wicciorum, sive Vigornensis, et Putta Herefordensis: apud Northanhymbros, pulso Wilfrido, præter Ætam Lindisfarnensem, sive Berniciorum, ordinati sunt a Theodoro^y Bosa Eboracensis, sive Deirorum episcopus, ex mox Tumbertus Hagustaldensis: Occidentalium Saxonum duo erant episcopus, Wintoniensis et Shirburniensis.

Ad hunc modum ecclesia Anglicana infantula adhuc a Theodoro archiepiscopo provecta est et stabilita; adultam vero^z Cantuariensem provinciam per parochias distribuisse perhibetur. Wilfridus interim, licet causam Romæ obtinuerit, restitutionem non adeptus est: divertens igitur ad Australes Saxones, evangelium ibi prædicavit, et ab Edilwalchio rege^a Sæleseensem insulam accepit; ubi episcopatum exercuit, ubi homines loci (quos cum agris rex ei donaverat) baptizando, servos et ancillas 250, libertatem donando, iugo servitutis absolvit. ^bHoc ergo ordine postquam omnes Britannorum provinciæ fidem Christi susceperant, suscepit et insula Vecta; post nonagesimum scilicet ab adventu Augustini annum. Tantæ molis erat doctrinam condere Christi.

Cæterum quanto lentior, tanto uberior fuit religionis Anglicanæ messis. Templorum extructiones, decimarum oblationes, monasteriorum foundationes ingentia sunt pietatis veteris monumenta: sane crebra fuerunt illorum temporum jejunia, orationes sedulæ, eleemosynæ insignes. Liceat mihi trita trans Alpes, religionis ergo, itinera commemorare; cum Romæ, inter diversarum nationum scholas, sive contubernia, illa quæ Saxonum, sive Anglorum fuit in Vaticano suburbio, omnium sit celeberrima; utpote quæ loco nomen indidit, teste^c Anastasio. Per quorundam, inquit, gentis Anglorum desidiam, omnis illorum habitatio, quæ in illorum lingua^d Burgus dicitur, combusta est. Ac licet Leo IV. suburbium illud muro circumdederit, et de suo nomine Leoninam civitatem nuncupaverit, obtinet tamen hodie Anglicanum^e Burgi vocabulum.

Quis non miratur XXX. ^freges et reginas Anglo-Saxones intra 200 annos, contemptis mundi illecebris, religiosam obiisse solitudinem? Quis magnificam in condendis monasteriis profusionem non suspicit?

Cum autem tanto monasticæ vitæ ardore flagraverit ætas illa, videamus quibus initiis, quibusque gradibus disciplina ista in ecclesiam recepta fuit.

Nugantur scriptores isti, qui monachismum Christianismo vetustiore statuunt: neque locum hic habent Ἀσκητὰὶ Θεραπευτὰὶ Ἰκετὰὶ illi apud Eusebium,^g qui ad Christianos transtulit id, quod^h Philo de Judæorum Essæis scripserat. Primum, Cœnobitæ in communi viventes: divisi per decurias atque centurias, ita ut novem hominibus decimus præsit; et rursus decem præpositos sub se centesimus habeat: manent separati, sed junctis cellulis. Secundum, Anachoretæ, qui soli habitant per deserta. Tertium est eorum, qui bini, vel trini, nec multo plures simul habitant, suo arbitrato ac ditione, quam plurimum in urbibus et castellis. ^oPrimus autem Syriæ monachus fuit Hilarion^p Basilius idem vivendi institutum suscepturus, et in Pontum illaturus^q multos invenit in Ægypto monachos: alios in Palæstina, et in Cœlosyria, et Mesopotamia; quorum admiratus est tum in diæta temperantiam, tum in laboribus tolerantiam. side, Æthiopia monachorum quotidie turmas suscepimus: tanta fuit instituti hujus in Oriente dilatatio. Verum uniformis non erat Orientalium monachorum disciplina. ^tIn mandris, monasteriis Mesopotamiæ, comas muliebrem in modum producunt, et sacco conspicuo incedunt; quod alibi nefas. De nimia vitæ austeritate Ponticorum monachorum, Gregorius Nazianzenus,^u partim, inquit, ferreis compedibus sese excruciant: alii, ferarum ritu, angustis domibus inclusi, neminem vident: totos 20 dies noctesque jejulant, silent. ^vO Christe, inquit, animis illis propitius esto, piis quidem fateor, cæterum non satis consultis. Prudenter itaque Basilius monachis præscripsit regulas, ab Orientalibus summo studio observatas.

In Occidente etiam sensim invaluit monasticum vivendi institutum: illius autem primordium est aliquanto obscurius. ^wMarcella ab Alexandrinis sacerdotibus, papaque Athanasio, et Petro, qui Romam confugerant, vitam B. Antonii adhuc tunc viventis, monasteriorumque in Thebaide Pachumii, et virginum ac viduarum didicit disciplinam. Verum non est quod idcirco putemus ^xAthanasium invexisse in urbem monachismum: quoniam ^ysuburbanus ager illis pro monasterio fuit, et rus electum pro solitudine. Augustinus, circa annum 388, ^zvidit diversorium sanctorum Mediolani non paucorum hominum, quibus unus presbyter præerat. Romæ etiam plura cognovit, in quibus singuli cæteris secum habitantibus præsent. Ipsi, Orientis more, manibus suis se transigunt: jejunia prorsus incredibilia non in viris tantum, sed etiam in fæminis: quibus item, multis viduis et virginibus simul habitantibus, et lana ac tela victum quæritantibus præsent singulæ gravissimæ. Atque alibi: ^aErat monasterium Mediolani plenum bonis fratribus, extra urbis mænia, sub Ambrosio nutritore.

Parum vero convenit vitæ monasticæ cum turbis civilibus. Hieronymus ad Paulinum, ^bsi cupis, inquit, esse, quod diceris monachus, id est, solus; quod facis in urbibus? Itaque Valentinianus II Aug. anno 390, ejecit ex urbibus monachos. ^cQuicumque sub professione monachi repperiuntur, deserta loca et vastas solitudines sequi, atque habitare jubeantur. Ac licet Theodosius biennio post, ^dsubmota hac lege, liberos in oppidis largitus sit eis ingressus; tamen in desertis et insulis ut plurimum primi degebant monachi.^e Insularum Dalmatiæ meminit in eam rem Hieronymus: et ^finsularum Etrusci maris, in quibus monachorum consistunt chori: ^gBonosi item cujusdam insularis monachi. ^hIn Gallinaria Etrusci maris insula B. Martinus solitariam aliquando vitam egit. De Caprariæ et Gorgoniæ insularum monachis eleganter quidem sed non Christiane cecinit Rutilius Numatianus,ⁱ A. V. C. MCLXIX.. qui est æræ Christianæ 416.

Processu pelagi jam se Capraria tollit,
Squallet lucifugis insula plena viris.
Ipsi se monachos Graio cognomine dicunt,
Quod soli nullo vivere teste volunt.
Munera Fortunæ metuunt, dum damna verentur:
Quisquam sponte miser, ne miser esse queat.
Quænam perversi rabies tam stulta cerebri,
Dum mala formides, nec bona posse pati?
Sive suas repetunt ex fato ergastula pœnas,
Tristia seu nigro viscera felle tument.
Sic nimix bilis morbum assignavit Homerus

E Caprariensi autem hoc cœnobio institutio monachorum in Africam manasse videtur, per Eustathium et Andream, ab Eudoxio abbate missos; quos S. Augustinus,¹ ad eundem insulæ abbatem, impense celebrat. Donatistæ istam monachorum inductionem oppugnabant,^m conatu irrito. Monasteria Carthagini, Tagaste, Hippone Regioⁿ fuisse testatur Paulinus ad Alypium. Gorgonia vero insula, in qua unicum erat eremitæ monasterium (agente iter Rutilio) plures deinceps recepit monachos: quos, cum Palmariæ, aliarumque insularum aliis, reformavit tandem^o Gregorius Magnus. Neque prætereunda est Lerina insula, Antipoli urbi, Galliæ Narbonensis ultimæ, objecta; in qua fuerunt,^p auctore Honorato, sancti senes, qui divisis cellulis Ægyptios patres Galliis intulerunt. Honoratus autem episcopus^q Arelatensis factus est anno 426. Fuit sane illud cœnobium Gallicorum episcoporum seminarium.

Monachismus itaque paulo ante quintum sæculum in Occidente receptus fuit. Illud, inquam, infœlix sæculum, in quo tota Romanorum Europa ferro Barbarorum flammaque fœdisime vastata fuit, et religio Christiana pœne obruta: quasi funestissima ista ætate comparatum fuisset hoc vivendi institutum, tutissimum adversus humanas miserias refugium. Verum ad patriam redeo.

Quo tempore vitæ solitariæ studium apud Latinos radices egit, Patricius Brito, natus ad Vallum,^r in extremis Valenciæ oris, ad Occidentale mare,^s Galliam, atque Italiam, et insulas quæ sunt in mari Tyrrheno peragravit. Vidit juvenis Martinum avunculum in Gallia, præceptoremque habuit Germanum Autissiodorensem, qui paulo post cum Lupo in Britanniam missus est. Post annos 30 in literarum studiis exercitiisque spiritualibus impensos, Patricius episcopus missus est ad convertendos Hibernos a Cœlestino P. qui superiore anno^t Palladium nullo successu miserat. Quam fœlicem illic navavit operam, quos episcopos, quas ecclesias, quæ cœnobio instituit, accurate tradit nunquam satis laudatus archiepiscopus Armachanus. Mortuus autem est grandævus ille Hibernorum apostolus anno 492. Circa idem tempus, dum religio Britannica in Transabrinianis partibus contra turbines Saxonicos sese tuebatur, David Meneviæ antistes nobile construxit monasterium, in quo fratres a^u populari frequentia in angulari quadam solitudine super Hibernicum mare longe remoti, quatuor his curis, manuum scilicet labore, lectione, oratione, et pauperum refectione vitam fœliciter exegere. Celebratur etiam septemplex^v illud monasterium de Bancor, in quo 2100 monachi de labore manuum suarum vivere solebant; de cujus primordio mihi non satis constat. Columbanus^w postquam in Hybernia Armachanum monasterium fecerat, anno 565, Britanniam venit, ad Pictos: australes autem Pictos Nynias Brito ad veritatem converterat anno 412, et Hii insulam episcopatus sedem fecerat. Istam insulam Columbanus a Pictis^x in possessionem monasterii faciendi accepit. Hyense hoc monasterium principatum tenuit in quam plurimis monasteriis a Columba ejusque discipulis in Britannia et Hybernia exinde propagatis. Ad hunc modum monachismus in Britanniis extra ditionem Anglo-Saxonicam constitutus fuit.

In Anglia etiam idem fuit monachismi atque Christianismi initium, idem incrementum. Augustinusⁿ monasterii regulis eruditus, ex præscripto Gregorii, instituit conversationem, quæ initio nascentis ecclesiæ fuit patribus nostris, quibus omnia erant communia. ° Monasterium fecit non longe a Dorovernensi civitate: primus ejusdem monasterii abbas Petrus presbyter fuit. Sicut Augustinus Cantianos, ita Aidanus Northanhumbros instituit, et in Lindisfarnensi insula cœnobium habuit: ille e Romana, hic e schola Columbani prodiit; ille Austrum, hic Septentrionem sua doctrina imbuit; quæ cum omnino eadem non esset, magna fuit et diuturna sententiarum decertatio. Præcipua quæstio fuit^p de Pascha, et de tonsura coronæ; quæ non nisi altero sæculo sedata est^q apud Pictos, circa annum 714: apud ^r Cambrenses autem non nisi post subactam ab Henrico primo regionem. Ista autem sententiarum discrepantia non aliunde fuit, quam ab ipsa Roma. Patricius, Romanis ritibus institutus, ab urbe in Hiberniam missus fuit; a quo tum Davidis, tum Columbani doctrina manavit: Augustinus itidem de Roma missus. Suam interim Romana ecclesia mutaverat sententiam. De Paschate res est manifesta. Nondum enim, ætate Patricii, Dionysius Exiguus decennovennalem Alexandrinorum Paschalem Cyclum explicuerat. Neque fuit eadem semper tonsura Romana: alia demum fuit clericorum, alia monachorum tonsura; illorum exiguus in vertice orbis; horum autem totum supra aures caput; neque tonsi utriusque, sed rasi: cum tamen, ætate Bedæ, unicus esset tonsuræ modus, et ^s attonderentur omnes in coronam ministri altaris, ac monachi.

In ecclesiæ nostræ incunabulis monachi non fuerunt a clericis disparati. ^t Siquidem a temporibus antiquis ibidem (in Lindisfarnensi monasterio) et episcopus cum clero, et abbas solebat manere cum monachis, qui tamen et ipsi ad curam episcopi familiariter pertinerent. Etiam hodie ecclesia cathedralis Anglice appellatur^u monasterium. Multa quidem in re monastica (ut solet in aliis) immutavit tempus. Olim indecorum non fuit fæminam præsidere viris. Whitbeiensis^w monasterii abbatissa Hilda tantum lectioni divinarum scripturarum suos vacare subditos faciebat, ut ecclesiasticum gradum, hoc est altaris officium aptæ subirent. Quinque ex eodem monasterio episcopi, omnes singularis meriti, ac sanctitatis viri prodierunt.

orum variis conventibus, pro diversitate morum atque ingeniorum, diversimodo præceperunt. Cassianus, circa annum 450, ^x Tot, inquit, propemodum typos et regulas vidimus usurpatas, quot etiam monasteria cellasque conspeximus. Cœnobia nostra vetustissima suas habuerunt leges, et constitutiones privatas, quibus sese obligabant monachi, quasque religiose observabant: verum non tam præfracte, ut nullum fieri posset disciplinæ veteris laxamentum. ^y Ceolwifo rege, cui Beda historiam inscripsit, jam monacho facto, data est Lindisfarnensis ecclesiæ monachis licentia bibendi vinum, vel cerevisiam: antea enim non nisi lac, vel aquam bibere solebant, secundum antiquam traditionem S. Aidani, primi ejusdem ecclesiæ antistitis, et monachorum cum illo de Scotia venientium. Extat hodie S. Columbani regula sæpius in lucem edita; quæ an Bedæ olim sit cognita, nescio. Sane illa ^z Columbæ regula, quam Colmannus in Whitbeiensi collatione contra Wilfridum urget, non alia fuit, quam Canon Paschalis. Cæterum ex antiqua illa constitutionum varietate enatæ sunt illæ monachorum regulares consuetudines, quæ in novissima usque tempora observatæ erant; quarum etiam in restauranda disciplina magna semper habebatur ratio. Majorum enim nostrorum pietas redintegrando vitæ monasticæ instituto non raro incubuit.

berto archiepiscopo, anno 747, in concilio Clovishoviæ, in quo nonnulla ^a de moribus et habitu monasteriali emendata sunt.

Altera sub Dunstano fuit, in concilio Wintoniensi, anno 965, regnante Edgardo, magnificentissimo cœnobiorum instauratore. Tunc primum monachis præscripta fuit constitutio generalis, tam ex Benedicti regula, quam ex veteribus consuetudinibus contexta, quæ dicta est Regularis Concordia Anglicæ nationis. Edidit illam, in spicilegio ad Eadmerum, V.CL. Johannes Seldenus, nuper cum publico literarum luctu defunctus. ^b Accitis Floriacensis monasterii monachis, quæque ex dignis eorum moribus honesta collegerunt. ^c Regulari itaque S. Patris Benedicti norma suscepta, tam abbates quamplurimi, quam abbatissæ, cum sibi subjectis fratrum sororumque collegiis, SS. sequi vestigia, una fide, non tamen uno consuetudinis usu studuerunt. Non erat ipsa Benedicti regula, sed plurima continebat Benedictinis præceptis accommodata. Vocabatur etiam ^d Oswaldes Lawe, id est, lex Oswaldi, episcopi Vigorniensis et Eboracensis; qui cum esset ipse quondam Floriacensis monachus, ^e Abbonem Floriacensem in Angliam vocavit. Hunc Floriacensium monachorum adventum intelligit Malmesburiensis. ^f A Floriaco Benedicti monasterio religionis hujuscemodi manavit exordium: licet paulo ante Wilfridum introduxerat jactantem ^g se primum fuisse, qui S. Benedicti regulam a monachis observandam jusserit.

Tertia monachorum regulatio sub Lanfranco fuit, qui quod ^h tempore regis Edgari inchoatum est, labifactari non permisit. In concilio itaque Londoniensi, anno 1075, ⁱ renovata sunt nonnulla, quæ antiquis etiam fuerunt canonibus definita. Post res episcopales, de monachis statutum est, ex Regula B. Benedicti, ^k Dialogo Gregorii, et ex antiqua regularium locorum consuetudine. Leges igitur cœnobiales etiam Normannicis temporibus fuerunt mixtæ; neque adeo admissa est Benedicti regula, ut abrogarentur veteres monachorum consuetudines.

Sane Normanni, licet in victos iniqui, in dotandis ecclesiis et fundandis cœnobiis fuerunt munifici. Ipse rex insigne construxit monasterium in ^{*} loco, ubi Angliam debellaverat. Nam in concilio Wintoniensi, anno 1070, [†] jubente, et præsentem rege Willelmo; Alexandro P. per legatos, Hermenfredum Sedunensem episcopum, et presbyteros Johannem et Petrum Cardinales, sedis apostolicæ auctoritatem exhibente: ita inter alia, statutum est; Qui in magno prælio scit se hominem occidisse, secundum numerum hominum, pro unoquoque uno anno pœniteat, etc. Vel ecclesiam faciendo, vel ecclesiæ largiendo perpetua eleemosyna redimat. Tanta fuit illis temporibus cædis hostilis conscientia! Canonem hunc, nondum inter editos, ex synodico olim Wigorniensis ecclesiæ codice, circa ipsa Willielmi regis tempora, literis Saxonice, per Vulfgeatum Scriptorum Wigorniensem exarato, communicavit mecum vir eruditissimus, D. Gerardus Langbainius S. T. P. Pr. Coll. Reg. Oxon. Hinc autem constat tam de causa celeberrimi monimenti, quam de tempore. Neque enim rex sua sponte ecclesiam struxisse videtur, sed ex sanctione concilii: neque redempta est pœnitentia pro defunctis suis; sed [‡] pro occisis in bello ab ipsis: neque inceptum est opus illud, [§] anno 1067; sed post synodi finem; ^{} anno 1076, cœpit ecclesiæ fabrica proficere.

Bellenses illi monachi instituti sunt ad Benedicti regulam; cujus maxima fuit apud nos, ab Edgardi tempore, reverentia. Verum quum omnino nulla sit in concilio Clovishoviæ Benedictinæ regulæ mentio; licet aptissima esset illius commemorandæ occasio; et altissimum sit ea de re apud Bedam silentium: videamus quo modo, quove tempore regula illa occidentali ecclesiæ increbuit.

chorum regulam. Quo anno obierit, incertum est. Fuit sane Gregorio Magno senior, qui in Dialogis profitetur se Benedicti res gestas didicisse, ^m discipulis illius referentibus. Neque hic audiendus est Cedrenus, * qui Gregorium, Dialogorum scriptorem, tempore Leonis Imp. vixisse tradit: cum Beda, † qui tunc scripsit, Gregorium Primum illorum auctorem celebret. Benedicto ⁿ Constantinus in monasterii regimine successit. Paulo post, ^o destructo a Longobardis monasterio, ^p fugientes fratres ex concessione Pelagii P. juxta Lateranense patriarchium monasterium construxerunt, ibique per 141 annos (quibus Cassinense monasterium destructum permansit) habitaverunt. Tandem Petronax quidam Brixianus ^q hortatu Gregorii P. III. Cassinense monasterium instauravit, et multorum monachorum pater effectus, sub S. Regulæ jugo, et B. Benedicti institutione vixit. Zacharias P. qui anno 742 ^r Gregorio successit, illis contulit codicem sanctæ regulæ, quam pater Benedictus manu propria scripserat; etiam privilegium, ut monasterium nullius episcopi juri subiaceat, nisi solius Rom. pontificis. ‡ In Liptinensi concilio (ad Liptinas locus est in Cameracensi Galliæ agro) sancitum est, ^s ut monachi et nonnæ juxta regulam S. Benedicti cœnobia sua ordinarent. Præsidebat concilio isto Bonifacius nostras archiepiscopus Moguntinus, qui Fuldense construxit monasterium ^t sub regula S. Benedicti; cui Zacharias P. prædictum contulit privilegium. Neque satis scio, an vetustius sit, extra Italiam, sub illa regula conditum monasterium. Anno 758, ^u Desiderius, ultimus Longobardorum rex, monasterium S. Benedicti construxit, in agro Brixiano. ^w Mirum dictu (verba sunt Baronii) quanta mox ex nova plantatione Petronacis fuerint propagata eo in loco germina monachorum, et aucta ipsorum examina, instar apum, quæ ex turgescensibus alveariis prodeuntes, in diversa loca ad fœtus multiplicationem volaverint. Neque enim a scripta per Benedictum regula, sed a restaurato Cassinensi monasterio putanda est illius regulæ propagatio.

Cum vero ita se res habeat; nihilominus non minor est de regula, quam de corpore Benedicti controversia: ^x cum in castro Cassino vasta solitudo existeret, corpus S. Benedicti ab Agilulfo monacho inde delatum est in cœnobium Floriacense, a Leopoldo abbate nuper fundatum in Aurelianensi territorio. Zacharias P. primus Benedictinæ regulæ fautor et propagator, ad episcopos Galliæ scripsit, rogatu Optati abbatis Cassinensis, ^y juxta petitionem monachorum, pro corpore B. Benedicti, quod furtive ablatum est a suo sepulchro, ut restituatur ad proprium locum: neque obtinuit. Quid autem restitutionis opus est? Desiderius abbas, anno 1066, dum nova Cassinensis ecclesiæ fundamenta struerentur, ^z Benedicti patris venerabilem tumulum reperit. Veritas rei diplomate ^a Alexandri II. confirmatur: et sub anathemate præcepit Urbanus II, anno 1088, ^b ne quis ulterius, falsam patris Benedicti translationem celebrare præsumat: sed bullam hanc imposturæ insimulat ^c Baronius. Neque una est Itolorum Gallorumque de Benedicti sepulcro sententia.

Sed nec satis convenit inter viros doctos de tempore, quo Benedicti regula in nostram patriam illata sit. Dissensioni facem prætulit recentiorum licentia monachorum, qui nimium faciles fuerunt in iis tradendis, quæ ad ecclesiarum suarum gloriam conferre putarunt; et in contexendis historiis, referendisque cœnobiorum monumentis audacem nimis navarunt operam: infœlici plerumque conatu, vel ex inepta vetustatis affectione, vel ex incogitantia, vel ex prætenui antiquorum temporum peritia: quod satis testantur ἀναχρονισμοὶ, ἀνισορησῆαι, aliæque ejusmodi ineptiæ, quæ cum mercibus istis non raro venditantur.

nullo veteri authore traditum est; et vivente adhuc Beda, omnino inauditum fuit. ^a Ingulfus, veluti ex Æthelbaldi carta, meminit Nigrorum monachorum sub norma S. Benedicti. At vero Benedictus ipse de colore vestium nihil præcepit. De colore (inquit Regula) aut grossitudine non causentur monachi. ^c In bulla Constantini P. et diplomate regum Kenre diet Offæ, de Evishamensis cœnobii fundatione, dicitur regula B. Benedicti instaurari, quæ minus in illis partibus adhuc habetur. Et Egwini carta habet regulam S. Benedicti. ^d W. Malmesburiensis olim miratus est Bedam, qui istam regum Romanam profectionem non siluit, tacuisse de Egwini cœnobio.

Illa Regum carta doctissimo * Spelmanno suspecta est, quod Offa se orientalium Anglorum gubernatorem denunciaret, cum esset orientalis Saxo: neque satis est decorum monachos, jam mundo emortuos, se regum titulis adornare. Egwini carta displicet, quod subscriptionis tempore testes partim Romæ fuerunt, partim in Anglia. Nonnullis minus arridet æra Christiana, quæ vix tandem a Caroli magni temporibus in usum venit. Mihi quidem præcox illa Benedictinæ regulæ mentio recentiore ætate olere videtur.

Neque nova est hæc fraudis suspicio. ^e Gervasius Dorobernensis notat schedulas, quas protulerunt monachi Augustinenses, suspectas fuisse et rasas. Cautè itaque intuendæ sunt istiusmodi cartæ; quæ fidem habent eo minorem, quo majorem præ se ferunt antiquitatem. Rudis olim et iners gens nostra absque scripto donationes conferre solebat. Ex Beda sane non constat, scripturam adhuc illius ætate, in transferendis prædiis, aut concedendis privilegiis usurpatam fuisse. Post Bedam contigit prima monachorum nostrorum reformatio; in qua nulla Benedictinæ regulæ memoria. Insecuta est Danica monasteriorum strages: illa demum instauravit rex Edgarus; ex cujus tempore celebris erat in cœnobiis Anglicanis Benedicti regula.

Gliscebant indies regulæ illius observantia; quæ initio Cassinatibus tantum monachis data, durante monasterii infortunio, sopita jacuit. Postea vero quam a Zacharia P. non modo in Italia instaurata, sed etiam ultra Alpes propagata fuit, tantam demum obtinuit perfectionis suæ existimationem, ut nullum fere non esset in Occidente cœnobium ad normam Benedicti vel primitus institutum, vel denuo formatum. Verum ^f Benedicti regulam, in primæva paupertate laudatissimam, rerum opulentia postmodum et copia corruperunt.

Discessum est itaque, vel innovandi studio, vel corrigendi, a vulgari monachorum instituto. Schisma monachatus fuit origo ordinum. Succrescentibus novorum monachorum sectis, qui Benedictinæ regulæ tenaciores fuerunt, distinctionis gratia, Benedictini nuncupari cœperunt. Antea enim quum non erant a quibus distinguerentur, non erat opus discretivi nominis: simplex monachi sufficebat vocabulum. Postquam vero nova disciplina pristinae cœpit esse opprobrium, pro veteri regula, tanquam pro aris et focis, decertatum est. Ab Universitate, ab antiquitate auctoritatem illi struunt, ne sit secessio inculpanda: ipsam regulam sanctam haberi volunt, ne sit violabilis: Benedictum patrem, et monachorum patriarcham celebrant: et honoris ergo, sibimetipsis Benedictinorum nomen vendicant.

Primus novi sodalitiis auctor fuit Odo quidam, qui circa initium decimi sæculi, abbas factus monasterii noviter exstructi apud Cluniacum, in Matisconensi Gallia agro, regulam Benedicti auctiorem atque emendatiorem monachis suis exhibuit; qui, ob novitatem rei, cæteris sanctiores habiti sunt.

Vergente undecimo sæculo, monachi quidam e Molismo, Lingonensis agri cœnobio, egressi monasterium Cistertii in Cabbillonensi agro constituerunt. Stephanus Hardingus Anglus abbas novam edidit regulam, quæ charitatis charta dicta, ab Urbano II. probata est.

Iisdem temporibus Bruno Coloniensis cum sex sociis in Carthusia (locus is est desertus in Gratianopolitanis montibus) cellulas sibi construxit, et rigidissimæ regulæ author fuit, quam confirmavit Alexander III, circa an. 1178. Isti autem a locis denominati, Cluniancences, Cistertienses et Carthusiani Benedictinæ omnes fuerunt professionis; sed reformatæ.

Infinita res est monachales ordines: omnes undique pro ingeniorum locorumque varietate pullulantes non est investigare. Desudarunt in illa palæstra viri docti. Neque de monasticis Anglorum institutis huic dissero: aptior erit ea de re disceptandi locus ad alterum, quod paratur volumen de Canonicis (uti vocant) regularibus. Sunt autem illi Canonici Augustiniani, Hospitalarii, Templarii, Gilbertini, Præmonstratenses, et Maturini, sive Trinitariani: etiam de secularibus quarundum ecclesiarum cathedralium et collegiatarum Canonicis. Quatuor autem isti monachorum ordines, cum ante undecimi sæculi finem radices in Gallia egissent, in Angliam non ita multo post traducti, tanto floruerunt incremento, ut illorum, qui hodie supersunt, commentarii in justum hoc, quod est præ manibus, volumen excreverint.

Equidem editioni huic omnino non interfui; absolutam tamen non potui non collaudare: neque difficilis opellam hanc, qualem qualem, amice rogatus præstiti. Interfuit autem vir eximius, Gulielmus Dugdalius Warwicencis, cujus jam sub prælo sudat locupletissima Warwicencis agri notitia; qui tantam huic operi supellectilem contulit, ut authoris alterius titulum optime meritis sit. Interfuit etiam vir nostrarum antiquitatum callentissimus, Gulielmus Somnerus Cantuariensis, qui Saxonica, quæ exhibentur, atque Lelandi Anglica reddidit Latina: ad cujus Glossarium, non ita pridem cum Historiæ Anglicanæ scriptoribus editum, amandandus est lector, siqua vox Latino-barbara moram injecerit; qui ad edendam copiosissimam vocabularii Saxonico-Latini congeriem nunc typos parat.

Palma vero hujus incepti tribuenda est viro egregio, Rogero Dodsworthio Eboracensi, nuper quidem defuncto, sed nunquam oblivione sepeliendo: qui vetustissimas pietatis memorias in latibulis dormitantes suscitavit, et ex laceris antiquitatis reliquiis, tanquam membris Absyrtianis, longe lateque dissipatis historicum hoc corpus orbi Christiano construxit. Opus mehercle ut arduum, ita pulcherrimum, usuque eximium. Non sane inter istiusmodi scripta censendum, quæ Plato olim ^ε τοῖς Ἀδωνικοῖς κήποις ἔκαζεν, οἱ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἐφήμερον ἔχοντες, ῥαδίως μαραινόνται comparabat cum hortis Adoniis, qui uno die nati, celerrime pereunt. Benefactum hoc, labore indefesso, et triginta annorum impendio comparatum, vires capiet a tempore; cum in omnes literarum studiosos, atque adeo in literas ipsas collatum sit.

Quanti autem intersit reipublicæ literariæ naufragas hasce collegisse tabulas, non judicabit nisi is, qui satis intelliget, quanta fuisset jactura, illas periisse. Qui iniquo feret animo civilem majorum nostrorum disciplinam, res pace belloque egregie gestas, urbes conditas, regiones descriptas, centurias divisas, aliaque ad politiam spectantia, vel prorsus ἄδηλα evanuisse, vel tenuibus incertisque rumusculis (qua penuria scriptorum, qua incuria) ad nos devenisse: is sane gratissimo suscipiet animo Christianam instaurari disciplinæ veteris historiam; et origines cœnobiales, in penitissimis olim larariis, tanquam sacra quædam anathemata, repositas, ab oblivione et interitu vindicari. Quemadmodum pii majores, reges, magnates, alii, templis construendis, monasteriis fundandis, dotandis, ditandis, immunitatibus concedendis ad miraculum usque magnifici fuerunt, eaque re in æternum honorandi: ita non defuit etiam monachis sua laus, quod pia cura et sedula gratitudine collata in ipsos beneficia mandarunt literis; adeoque de bene merentibus nominibus ipsi bene meruerunt: optime autem de utrisque noster Συναγωγὸς, qui pias illustrium virorum memorias e tenebris eruit, serisque nepotibus tradidit. Verum de familiis, quibus inde lux enata est, quot, et quænam illæ sunt, videndus est index nominum.

Neque tam privato, quam publico consulitur emolumento: uberrimum est hoc historiæ Anglicanæ auctarium: e quo quamplurima elicienda sunt, eaque non vulgaria, ad ecclesiam, remque publicam spectantia: quarum res (si modo diversæ) adeo solent esse intertextæ, ut pro dignitate seorsim dignosci non poterint. Prisca ecclesiæ nostræ fabrica et politia absque monasteriologia manca est. Monachus enim olim maxima fuit pars gentis ecclesiasticæ; et parietes cœnobiales diu sanctitatis et melioris literaturæ fuerunt sepes. Ex illo seminario prodierunt ingentia illa Christiani orbis lumina, Beda, Alcuinus, Willebrordus, Bonifacius, alii, ob doctrinam, et propagatam fidem impense colendi. Absque monachis, nos sane in historia patria semper essemus pueri. Sed se recipiat oratio.

Jamdudum diem fatalem obierunt monasteria nostra; nec præter semirutos parietes, et deploranda rudera, supersunt nobis avitæ pietatis indicia. Minus impendiosa hodie cordi est religio, et vetus dictum obtinet.

^h Religentem esse oportet, religiosum nefas.

Videmus nos, heu videmus, augustissima templa et stupenda æterno dicata Deo monumenta (quibus nihil hodie spoliatus) sub specioso eruendæ superstitionis obtentu, sordidissimo conspurcari vituperio, extremamque manere internecionem. ⁱ Ad altaria Christi stabulati equi, martyrum effossæ reliquiæ. Sunt quidam zelatores adeo religiose delirantes, ut religiosos veterum ordines ^k ἐκ τοῦ φρέατος τῆς ἀβύσσου prognatos aiant. Ita licenter sibi indulget προσπάθεια. Neque deerunt hac, qua vivimus, ætate homunciones, elephantina olfacientes promuscide, qui ista, quæ jam prodeunt, tanquam futilia, inutilia, et hodiernæ rerum conditioni minime congruentia damnabunt, et non tantum a Bibliothecis (ut Gregorius olim Titi Livii codices) eliminanda, sed et flammis tradenda judicabunt. Ea est novitiarum opinionum rigiditas, et ἀνθάδεια.

Etenim cordatis viris, et φιλαρχαίοις institutum est gratissimum, omnique laude dignissimum. Illi non modo calculos suos posuerunt, sed et impensas contulerunt, ut egregium hoc ἐκπόνημα publici juris fieret: tempestive admodum hisce temporibus, ut innotescat posteris, non esse epidemicam gentis nostræ ληρωδίαν.

Ad laudis cumulum accedat authoris nostri tum fides; tum industria. Fides in minimis maxime cernitur. Placuit illi set magis, quam sed; quoniam ita se habent codices: ejusmodi titivilitia ætatem rudem, editionem fidam indicant. Libuit tamen aliquando &c. imponere, ne tædio forent tritarum formularum repetitiones. Cœterum huc non veniant criticastris, delicatulas delibatum amœnitates: neque ad stribiliginem dictionis semibarbaræ cieatur nausea. Sane non est optandum monachos nostros Latinores fuisse, aut rebus suis digniores. Quicquid tulerunt sæcula, ferendum est nobis. Qui a rudiori ævo expectat elegantias, optat ille, ^m voce ut loquatur psittaci coturnix. Alia tempora alios scriptores habent: historia autem, cum sit universæ antiquitatis conservatrix, omnium ætatum auctores desiderat: nec minus a mediocri, quam a comptiore stilo suppetit nobis vera ac genuina rerum anteactarum cognitio. De monachorum autem fide non est quod ambigamus; cum illi res tantum suas tractent, sibi que notissimas: nisi forsitan uni aut alteri vitio demus, illos in illustrandis monasteriorum suorum natalibus antiquitati plus quam veritati incubuisse. Verum hoc illis facile condonemus; cum præstantissimos populos subobscuras rerum origines etiam a diis suis deduxisse videamus.

Industriæ (quam diximus) index est catalogus ille, ex archivis fiscalibus depromptus, qui fini hujus libri subnectitur: in illo plurima interseruntur (sub singulis literis) monasteriorum, in hac sylloge tractatorum, nomina, quorum nulla est in fisco ratio; absque valoribus tamen, qui parum dignoscuntur. Tanta est auctoris nostri in bibliothecarum (quæ non paucæ sunt, tam publicæ, tam privatæ) perscrutandis forulis solertia: tantum damni, ex vicissitudine temporum, et mutatione dominorum illati, resarciendi studium. Postquam enim terræ cœnobiales lege Parliamentaria (quæ apud nos summa est) in jus regium cesserant, instrumentorum veterum uti vis, ita et precium exoluit; neque fieri potuit, quin nonnulla vel casu, vel incuria interciderent. Verum quæ desiderantur neque multa sunt, neque majorum gentium; atque aliqua fortasse dabit dies. Interim his fruimini, et valete.

DE PRIMA INSTITUTIONE MONACHORUM.

[Ex quodam MS. Bibl. Cottoniana sub effigie Vitelli E. XII. fol. 85.]

“Vates cunctorum sunt antiqui monachorum
 Auctores dicti, vatum natique relictī.
 Et sunt auctores monachorum posteriores

QUIDAM minus intelligentes, non ratione sed nec auctoritate muniti, contra originem religionis monasticæ impugnant, utique minus discretè ipsam, cæteris religionibus matrem et auctricem, nequaquam aliarum religionum normas æstimant tempore præcessisse, sed beatum Benedictum primum patrem constituunt monachorum. Ad quod ponendum tales movere creditur quia et idem beatus Benedictus monachorum regulam salutarem composuit, quam etiam modernis temporibus monachi profitentes sequuntur, et secundum ipsam probationem singuli conversantur, et sic nec monachos in communi regulariter viventes ipsum beatum Benedictum arguunt præcessisse; et per consequens in antiquis patribus canonicatus potius quam monachatus exordium præfuisse, nam per centum fere annos ante tempora beati Benedicti Ordo Canonicorum per sanctum Augustinum fuit institutus, ut habetur in vita sua. Sed quod beatus Benedictus non fuit primus qui istam vitam communem instituit, patet in secundo libro Dialogorum beati Gregorii, ubi legitur, quod monachi cujusdam monasterii post mortem sui abbatis beatum Benedictum ab heremo vocaverunt et in abbatem suum præfecerunt. Similiter scribitur in quodam sermone beati Odonis abbatis Cluniacensis, quod plures sancti patres hujus sanctæ institutionis decretores, ante hunc beatum Benedictum regulæ monasticæ normam sanxerunt.

Ex quo igitur patet eum non fuisse vitæ monasticæ primum institutorem. Videndum est à quibus et à quo tempore hæc institutio et hæc cœlestis disciplina primum habuerit originem; secundum enim Magistrum in Historiis et Radulphum supra librum Regum, hujus plantationis fructiferæ et salutiferæ conversationis primus institutor fuit Samuel in Veteri Testamento, ut ait Chrisostymus in quadam omelia. Et Jeronimus in epistola ad Rusticum, ‘præcipui inventores et cultores monachatus fuerunt filii prophetarum in Veteri Testamento, qui ædificabant casulas prope fluentia Jordanis, et turbis et urbibus derelictis polentâ et herbis agrestibus victitabant.’ Et idem Jeronimus, in epistola ad Paulinum ‘Nos habemus,’ inquit, ‘propositi nostri principes, apostolos, Antonium, Hillarionem, et Macharium.’

Et ut ad Scripturarum auctoritatem redeam, noster princeps Helias, noster Heliseus, nostri duces filii prophetarum, qui habitabant in agris et solitudine, et faciebant sibi tabernacula prope fluentia Jordanis. De hiis fuerunt filii Rechab qui vinum et siceram non bibebant, qui morabantur in tentoriis et tabernaculis, qui etiam per Jeremiam Dei voce laudantur, et promittitur eis, quod non deficiet de stirpe eorum vir stans coram Domino; Jer. 35. hii namque ab exercitu Chaldeorum vastante Judæam, post solitudinis libertatem urbes introire compulsi sunt. Et Cassianus libro primo de institutis monachorum. ‘Hoc,’ inquit, ‘habitu monastico illos ambulasse qui in Veteri Testamento professionis fundavere primordia, Heliam scilicet et Heliseum, divinarum Scripturarum auctoritate monstratur.’ Ac deinde, ‘principes auctoresque Testamenti Novi, Johannem Baptistam videlicet cæterosque ejusdem ordinis viros, taliter recessisse cognoscimus.’ Et idem Cassianus in Collationibus patrum Collatione Piamonis capitulo 4, 5, et 6. In Helia quoque propheta monachatus exordium habuit in Veteri Testamento, quando super filios prophetarum qui de mundo ad ejus magisterium confugerant, juxta Jordanem Domino jubente secedens in torrente Carith, gubernationem et principatum tenuit, et super eos abbas et pater extitit. Narrat insuper Josephus libro Judaicæ captivitatis, et in historiis Antiquitatum 18 qualiter Essey de genere Judæorum ante incarnationem Domini vitam duxerunt quasi monasticam. Vide ibi processum. Et in Historia scholastica super evangelium, et in Speculo Historiali, et bene facit ad propositum, sed melius et plenius in Josephus, de quorum secta tunc temporis perfectissima erat ille sanctus Carioth abbas, qui sicut dicit Magister in Historiis, in quadam incidentia, ‘unus erat eorum qui cum Christo surrexerunt, quo mortuo, quidam monachi mortem ejus inconsolabiliter dolentes mortui sunt, et, adhuc compaginati videntur.’

Verum quia de origine monachatus et quemadmodum ejus tipus in patribus Veteris Testamenti præcesserit, ostensum est; qualiter in patribus Novi Testamenti, quod in antiquis præfiguratum est, compleatur, restat ut pariter videatur: lex enim et prophetæ usque ad Johannem Baptistam permanserunt, Johannes autem utriusque testamenti quasi mediator, prioris quidem ceremoniis finem imposuit, Novique Testamenti et baptismalis gratiæ præco fidelissimus fuit; qui necdum natus sed adhuc matris utero clausus, in adventu Domini sui jam concepti gestiens, sicut præco certissimus extitit humanæ redemptionis; sed puer adhuc et in teneris annis constitutus, turmas hominum fugiens, desertum petendo, primus institutor est Novo Testamento et auctor monasticæ religionis, prout testatur Cassianus libro primo et secundo de institutis monachorum. Istud etiam vitæ propositum, sacram videlicet religionem monachorum, Christus auctor omnium veraciter instituit, quando primum antiquis patribus Veteris Testamenti, revelante Spiritu Sancto, observandum et instituendum innotuit. Deinde tempore gratiæ, suis cum discipulis in terra conversando, ad abrenunciationem rerum secularium eos eorumque sequaces provocans ut relictis omnibus eum sequerentur, ait, Mathæi tertio, ‘Venite post me, faciam vos fieri pisces hominum,’ &c. Et Mathæi 19, ‘Si vis perfectus esse,’ &c. Item Lucæ nono, ‘Si quis vult post me venire,’ &c. vide glosam istorum pro monachis. Etiam in libro Prosperi secundo de vita activa et contemplativa, et in glosa super librum Numeri, cap. 18, et in epistola Cipriani ad Furnensem, et in Proverbiis, cap. 30, et in epistola ad Timotheum, cap. 6, et in glosa. Et in quadam omelia venerabilis Bedæ super Mathæum. Et in quodam sermone beati Leonis papæ super illud ‘Beati pauperes spiritu.’ Et in epistola ad Romanos, cap. 15. Et in glosa, et in Actibus Apostolorum, cap. 4. Et in libro Cassiani 10, de institutis monachorum. Istud quoque propositum vitæ in Evangelio primùm secutus ille Petrus, ad Dominum fiducialiter pro se suisque condiscipulis cœnobitis ait, Mathæi 19, ‘Ecce nos reliquimus omnia, &c. quid ergo erit nobis?’ Et Dominus ad hujusmodi homines. ‘Vos,’ inquit, ‘qui secuti estis me, centuplum accipietis et vitam eternam possidebitis.’ Audita igitur dominica promissione, non solum cœnobitæ sequaces patrum de Veteri Testamento et Johannis Baptistæ in Novo Testamento, verumetiam fideles quique per Christum conversi, omnia relinquentes quæ possidebant, Dominum tota mentis intentione sequebantur. Post ascensionem verò ejusdem, sicut habetur in Actibus Apostolorum, fideles quotquot per prædicationem apostolorum fidem Domini suscipiebant, venditis suis omnibus, pretium eorum ad pedes apostolorum ponebant; et sic rebus sæculi funditus expediti, in socialem vitam cum apostolis et cœnobitis transibant, et omnem curam apostolicæ diligentiæ et sollicitudini committebant. Dividebantur autem omnibus illis ab apostolis prout cuique opus erat. De quibus apostolus Paulus ad Romanos, 15, ait, ‘Nunc proficiscar Jerosolimam ministrare sanctis.’ Glosa, ‘Qui rerum suarum pretia ad pedes apostolorum posuerant,’ &c. Talem vitam et regulam duxerunt apostoli et cœnobitæ in primordio primitivæ ecclesiæ, videlicet in communi et sine proprio vivebant, et nullus eorum suum aliquid esse dicebat, sed erant illis omnia communia, nec quisquam egens erat inter illos ut scribitur Actuum 4, et 13 q. ‘ita dilectissimis.’ Ista consuetudo vivendi etiam in primitiva ecclesia non diu perduravit post ascensionem Domini. Nam apostolis per martyrium de medio sublatis, multi retrocedentes cœperunt rursus sæculi res ambire, easque non in communi, sicut priùs cum apostolis et cœnobitis, sed proprio jure possidere, et ita cœpit fervor communiter vivendi nimium tepescere. Quamplures tamen sancti patres et probatissimi monachi, quibus adhuc inerat fervor apostolicus, Sancti Spiritus aspirante gratia, nolentes apostotare, ad sæculi curas non redibant, sed congregati in unum, sicut prius communiter vivere satagentes, sub unius eorum, qui ad hoc electus fuerat, magisterio, ut eos apostolorum vice regeret, pristinam religionem restaurare cupiebant, et non solùm illa magnifica retinebant, quæ primitus ecclesia vel turbæ credentium in Actibus Apostolorum leguntur celebrasse; verumetiam multo hiis sublimiora cumulaverunt. Eusebius enim narrat in Historia Ecclesiastica, libro secundo, beatum Marcum Evangelistam primùm ad Ægyptum perrexisse et ibi Evangelium prædicasse, et ecclesiam apud Alexandriam primùm constituisse. Cujus sobrietatis exemplo, primo ingressu ejus, maxima multitudo virorum et mulierum credidit, et ab eo normam vivendi suscepit, quorum exemplis per universum mundum adolevit sancta institutio monachorum. Philo etiam Judæus, vir discretissimus tempore Neronis, conversationes eorum qui per beatum Marcum crediderant, et abstinentiam et vitam eorum qui vitæ monasticæ inserviebant, librorum memoriæ commendabat; in quibus evidentissime abstinentium vitas qui in monasteriis degunt describit ad liquidum, et specialiter in libello quem de vita theorica vel supplicum attitulavit. Dicit enim quod renuntiaverant omnibus facultatibus suis qui se ad hujusmodi vitam dederant; et omnes vitæ solitudines procul abiciebant, et secedentes in secretiora suburbiorum loca vel in agros solitarios summæ abstinentiæ vitam agebant; Ægypto namque per singula quæque territoria, in ortulis vel in exiguis quibusque agellulis habitabant copiosius. Fuit autem in singulis locis domus orationis consecrata, in qua sacerdotes castæ vitæ mysteria consecrabant. Illi patres antiqui in eruditionibus sapientiæ et in profundiore intelligentia sacrorum voluminum conversabantur, tanquam copiosis dapibus Scripturis inhiantes, expleri nequibant, ita ut nec quarto jam nec quinto sed sexto demum die necessarium corpori sumebant cibum, vinum quidem nec in gustu contingebant. Sed nec quamlibet carnem vel sanguinem, &c. Hæc Eusebius in Historia Ecclesiastica libro secundo. Hæc et multa alia scribit Eusebius in Historia Ecclesiastica, et Cassianus in libro de institutis monachorum, et Sozomenus in Historia Tripartita. De hiis etiam scribit beatus Jeronimus in epistola ad Eustochium, sic dicens, 'Cænobitarum in Ægypto commorantium,' &c.; vide in libro epistolarum Jeronimi. Item Cassianus in libro de institutis monachorum condiciones et observantias antiquorum patrum describit, quædam de Ægyptiorum, quædam de Tabenensio-natarum regulis admiscens quorum Thebaide fuit cænobium, in quo plusquam quinque millia fratrum ab uno regebantur abbate &c. vide ibi observantias. De moribus autem et conversatione monachorum in ecclesia primitiva si quis voluerit planius et exploratius edoceri, legat librum Cassiani de institutis monachorum, et collationes eorum 24, et librum Philonis de vita theorica de quo tractat Eusebius in Historia Ecclesiastica, et Epiphanius in Historia Tripartita, in quibus monasticæ institutionis principium et origo, apostolicæque et evangelicæ traditiones pleniùs continentur. Inter illos namque patres monasticæ religionis qui illam communem vitam ab apostolis traditam retinentes eo tempore rursus dedicaverunt, præcipui erant Antonius et Hillarion, Macharii duo, Pachomus, Aurelius, Johannes pater trium milium monachorum, Serapion pater decem milium monachorum, Dioscorus pater centum monachorum; Julianus pater decem milium monachorum, Amos trium milium monachorum, Theonas trium milium monachorum, Paulus quingentorum monachorum, Basilius, Fructuosus, Ferreolus, Ægyptius, Isidorus, Aurelianus, Johannes, Cassianus, Jeronimus, et quamplures alii sancti patres, qui vita et doctrina morum corruptionibus obviantes, non solum illa magnifica ab apostolis tradita restituerunt, verumetiam regulas artiores asperioresque, de quibus supradictum est pro devotione amplianda et perhenni gloria impetranda diversis locis et temporibus ediderunt. Legitur etiam, beatus Jeronimus post tempora apostolorum Ambrosium et Augustinum ætate præcessisse, peragratique priùs cænobitarum et hæremitarum per deserta cænobiis et cellulis, apud Bethalem monasterium instituisse, ibique ducens vitam monachicam omnia cum fratribus communia possidendo, primitivam ecclesiam et patres antiquos imitatus fuisse. Tandem evangelici præcepti strenuissimus auditor et executor beatus successit Benedictus, qui quasi quoddam sydus cœleste præclarus enituit. Et hic circa annum Domini quingentesimum sextumdecimum in cænobio monastico in Montem Cassinum in Christi militia dimicator erat strenuus, &c. regulamque scripsit laudabilem et ab universali ecclesia approbatam, ut testatur papa Innocencius secundus xvi. q. ij. capitulo 'perniciosam.' Ubi etiam approbatur regula beati Basili et regula beati Augustini, &c.

Ecce quod superiùs in patribus Veteris Testamenti de cœnobitis præsignatum fuisse dicitur, jam in Johanne Baptista, Christo, et apostolis inchoatum et institutum esse monstratur, et ab eorum sequacibus ferventer et devotè fore prosecutum. Quorum institutionem commendando sic scribit Jannensis in libro quæstionum de Antichristo dicens; ‘Ordo,’ inquit, ‘cœnobarum ymaginem habet Spiritus Sancti,’ &c.

Ex præmissis ergo sufficienter et plane patet, quod tempore apostolorum cœpit ordo monachorum pullulare, et, ut veriùs dicam, reviviscere, quem à beato Helia et Heliseo et filiis prophetarum, testante Jeronimo, novimus præcessisse. Cœnobarum ergo, ante legem, Abraham; sub lege, Moysen, Samuelem, Heliam, Heliseum, et prophetas: sub evangelio Johannem Baptistam, Christum et apostolos, Antonium, Hillarionem, Basillium, Jeronimum, et prophetas alios, et ad ultimum legislatorem et eorum institutionis beatum Benedictum præduces et advocatos in extremo examine habituri sunt.

Cum igitur constet apertè ordinem monasticum tantæ antiquitatis existere prout infra plenius elucebit, frustra canonici certant de prioritare, qui per mille annos post monachos et regulam sumpserunt et exordium sub sancto Augustino, vel ut dicamus veriùs regulam extorserunt, quam idem sanctus instituerat de vita et honestate clericorum, ut titulus manifeste declarat. Desistant ergo canonici se in antiquitate conferre monachis, quorum legislator et monachos habuit præcessores, et fuisse monachus prædicatur. Nempe ipse beatus Augustinus de seipso dicit in quodam sermone quem dictavit: ‘Aut,’ inquit, ‘monachus salvabor aut nunquam salvabor.’ Signum quoque satis evidens in seipso monachus prætulit cum indutus fuisse tunica et cuculla narratur juxta morem monachorum qui eum præcesserunt, Antonii scilicet Hillarionis et Macharii utriusque cæterorumque quos longum foret numerare. Et hæc quidem canonicorum calumpniæ sufficere satis putamus.

Jam restat ut Jacobitarum, qui fratres prædicatores dicuntur, præsumptionibus obviamus, qui se prædicant et eorum ordinem ante monachatum longo tempore institutos, ascribentes sibi nomen quod nec ex generis successione nec meritorum titulis quæsierunt. Volunt nempe à Jacob Patriarcha se vocari Jacobitas, tanquam ab ipso instituti primò fuissent vel de ejus genere processissent, cum neutrum horum queant ostendere vel probare. Nam quo tempore Jacob fuerit nullus ignorat qui Scripturas novit. Revolve librum Genesis, et tempora Jacob ibi cernes. Anno verò nativitatis Christi MC. nonagesimo octavo prædicti fratres, sub beato Dominico primo legislatore eorum, quod ipsi inficiari nequeunt, exordium habuerunt, et cito postea Jacobitæ vocati sunt, non à Jacob sed à Jacobo, ut ex chronicis illius temporis ostendemus. Narrat nempe Mathæus Parisiensis, quod hii fratres primitivi cum non haberent domum ubi post prædicationis laborem declinarent, longo tempore Parisiis perdurarunt. Quo tempore fuit in eadem civitate quidam famosus Anglicus, de villa S. Albani oriundus, magister Johannes dictus de sancto Albano, physicus præcipuus et regis Franciæ curam gerens. Hic cum ditatus fuisset auro Franciæ, sibi quoddam hospitium comparavit in civitate prædicta pene dilapsum et dirutum, in quod solebant ex longinquis partibus venientes causa peregrinationis versus sanctum Jacobum in Hispania divertere peregrini, et ibidem per dies aliquot exhibere. Sed deficientibus redditibus et elemosina subtracta, est et hospitium desolutum. Emit ergo magister Johannes dictum Zenodochium, et exinde fecit sibi hospitium correspondens fortunæ suæ. Qui cum videret dictos fratres quotidie missas celebrare, orationibus instare, et prædicationibus invigilare, motus tam devotione quam pietate contulit eis prædictum Zenodochium in habitaculum sempiternum. Ex cujus hospitalis vocabulo nomen traxerunt præfati fratres ut Jacobitæ vocarentur ab adjecto nomine hospitalis. Et ista sufficiunt ad refellendum opinionem Jacobitarum de prioritare, quam vendicant sui nominis ratione.

Superest ut Carmelitis respondeamus qui se ab Helya propheta jactitant institutos. Quod si ita est, dicant utrum Helyas verus zelator legis Judaicæ fuit an non. Si verus sectator Veteris Testamenti fuit, quod negare non possunt, quomodo dicunt eum ordinem instituisse Mendicantium, qui ex lege præceptum habuit, 'non sines quemquam de genere tuo publicæ mendicitati subjacere,' Quiescant ergo Carmelitæ mendacia inflectere in virum justum qui nichil dilexisse cognoscitur nisi justum.

Et ne legentes lateat origo fratrum de quibus nunc agitur, dicamus à quo tempore vel sumpserunt exordium vel nomen et habitum mutaverunt. Anno siquidem Christi MXLV. Albertus patriarcha fecit regulam fratribus qui stragulati, radiati, vel birrati vocabantur. Et ex post anno Christi MCC. septuagesimo nono Martinus papa ad instantiam dictorum fratrum et nomen eorum mutavit et habitum, convertens vestes stragulas in capas albas, dans eiis nomen novum, vocans eos videlicet Carmelitas. Et hæc ita tardè gesta sunt ut plures adhuc supersint qui viderint eos et birratis uti vestibus, et birratos fratres ab omnibus appellatos.

Hactenus Carmelitis respondimus. Restat ut Augustinensibus responsa demus, qui à beato Paulo primo heremita se dicunt principium habuisse. Quod si verum sit, in quonam loco latuerunt à tempore Pauli usque ad ostensionem omnium aliorum fratrum mendicantium, qui modernis temporibus, ut ostendimus, emergerunt? Vel, si volunt Paulum habere ducem, qui monachus, et heremita fuit, quare non sequuntur patronum et deserta colunt potius quam frequentiam populorum? Neque enim Paulus mendicavit nec mendicare docuit, sed labore manuum suarum vixit faciens sibi ex palma tegumenta, ex qua etiam sibi XX. et quinque annis collegit escas, donec a corvo sibi cibus subministraretur, Domino disponente, et victum misericorditer ampliante. Qua fronte ergo eum habuisse principem gloriantur cujus vitam in nullo vel regulam imitantur? Sed ne et istorum reticeamus originem, sciendum est hos post fratres predicatorum et minores surrepsisse, et sibi regulam sancti Augustini tanquam capite vel legislatore destituti sumpsisse. Et hæc quidem fratribus ordinum mendicantium responsa sufficiunt.

De diversis Regulis Monachorum et aliorum Religiosorum.

Sanctus Aurelius regulam monachorum composuit anno Christi 460.

Sanctus Ferreolus regulam monachorum composuit anno Christi 470.

Sanctus Aurelianus regulam monachorum edidit anno Christi 478.

S. Egippus abbas edidit regulam monachis, et Johannes Gerundinensis aliam, quas Ysidorus in libro de viris illustribus multum commendat et approbat. Vigilus diaconus et monachus scripsit juxta Genadium, regulam monachorum.

Enumeratis in parte qui regulas nigris monachis ediderunt, consequens est ut nec eos sileamus qui aliorum ordinum professoribus regulas conscripserunt. Quorum maximæ auctoritatis fuit sanctus Augustinus Ypponensis episcopus qui regulam composuit de vita et honestate clericorum quam regulares canonici profitentur, circa annum Domini 400.

Bruno ordinem Cartusiæ instituit anno Christi 1083.

Norbertus ordinem Premonstratensem instituit anno Christi 1120.

Hospitalarii et Templarii incepterunt anno Christi 1120.

S. Gilbertus ordinem de Sempryngham instituit anno Christi 1148.

In præcedentibus (prout credimus) rationabiliter ostendimus ordinem monachatus cæteros ordines et auctoritate et dignitate longe præcessisse. In sequentibus edocebimus magis plenè per quos initium habuit ordo noster.

PETROCUS rex Cambriæ monachus factus est. Constantinus rex Cornubiæ monachum induit spreto regno. Sebby rex Orientalium Saxonum. Offa rex Orientalium Saxonum. Sigibertus rex Orientalium Anglorum. Etheldredus rex Merceorum. Kynredus rex Merceorum. Ceolwulphus rex Northamhimbriorum. Edbrichtus rex Northamhimbriorum in hac insula spretis pompis sæculi monachatus conversationem et habitum susceperunt. Et non solùm in hac insula reges nostrum ordinem sua conversione commendaverunt, sed in remotis regionibus sponte conversi sunt reges amplissimarum facultatum, ut Karolomannus rex Francorum, et alii quamplures numero, quorum nomina hic inserere fortassis lectori foret tedio. De hiis et multis aliis ad religionem conversis monasticam quidam metricè ita scripsit :

“ Nomina Sanctorum rutilant cum laude priorum
Stemmata regali sub vestitu monachali,
Qui reges facti spreverunt culmina regni,
Electi monachi sunt coeli munere digni.”

UT autem nichil intactum remaneat quo minus nostris æmulis satisfiat qui putant monasteria nec ad honorem Dei nec commodum publicum fuisse fundata, non contendendo sed suggerendo quædam infra ponemus, quæ fortassis si ratione fruuntur, horum opinionem destruere meritò poterunt si à patientibus lectoribus admittantur. Nempe sæculares præsentis temporis et verè sæculares qui nichil nisi de sæculo præsentis cogitant, putant sua bona temporalia cunctis et in præsentis plus proficere et imposterum fore profutura quam bona Deo dicta et monasteriis assignata. Qui utique dati sunt in reprobum sensum ut non intelligant quod bona hæreditaria vicissim ad probos et reprobos, malos et bonos, justos et injustos, pios et impios, sapientes et fatuos devolvuntur. Et sic moltotiens consumuntur, disperduntur, et penitus dissipantur. Bona verò quæ piè conferuntur locis religiosis non uni personæ sed pluribus assignantur, ubi si fortè unus vel duo inveniantur qui minus apti sunt ad servandum bona communibus usibus deputata, reliqui accepta postestate et horum insipientiam coercere debeant et inhabilitatem resarcire. Hac occasione contigit, ut loca religiosa inter tot bella, tot pestes, tot fames, tot deprædationes, tot exactiones, ad elemosinas faciendas semper valeant atque crescant. Et revera videmus inter laicos, quod unus possessiones multorum olim nobilium occupat, elemosinas præcessorum subtrahit vel amputat, et tamen eget, ita quod nec suis dominiis neque regi conferre subsidium valeat. In monasteriis verò nec regi debitum nec pauperibus subtrahitur necessarium alimentum, quoniam et hospites omnis conditionis suscipiuntur et clericali in eisdem sustentantur, et per consequens ad diversos gradus ecclesiæ promoventur, vel ad regendam rempublicam educantur peramplius quam in curiis dominorum.

Ex Epistola Magistri Walteri Hilton, postea Canonici de Thurgarton, de Religionis Origine, Utilitate, et Ingredientium Religionem debita Intentione. Domino Adæ de Horsley, Monacho de Revale, Ordinis Carthusiensis tunc futuro.

[In Bibl. Bodl. MS. Digbean. n. 33, f. 32.]

Et non mirum si religioni faveat ecclesia, quia Christiana religio, introducta à Christo ejusque apostolis cæterisque fidelibus, in ecclesia primitiva perfectissime observata, in religionibus specialibus præcipuè præ aliis statibus in ecclesia Dei representatur. Nam in primitivâ ecclesiâ, calente in cordibus fidelium recenter sanguine Jesu Christi, in paucis Christianæ fidei cultoribus (quia tunc pauci erant ob metum persecutionis) magna erat et excellens conversatio vitæ cum omni virtute et Spiritus Sancti Charismatum plenitudine; nec tunc opus erat aliquibus aliquam singularem conversationem zelo majoris perfectionis assumere, cum omnes catholici erant tunc quasi perfecti, fide præclari, ferventes charitate, martyrio digni. Ista perfectio duravit quamdiu tyrannica persecutio contra fidem Christi se erexit; sed postea quando per gratiam Christi cessavit tyrannorum persecutio, et fidem recepit gentium multitudo, à tempore Constantini primi, et deinceps, tunc per piscationem Petri conclusa est in navem ecclesiæ tanta piscium multitudo, quod quasi scissum est rete; quia statim arridente prosperitate per adventum pacis, in ecclesiâ Christi succrevit magna multitudo hominum carnalium, qui cœperunt vitâ laxiori nimis obfuscare Christianum religionem, ab apostolis traditam et diu observatam. Unde, ne totus rigor Christianæ religionis à sua perfectione totaliter per carnalium conversationem evanesceret, totaliterque destrueretur, necesse erat jam aliquibus Dei electis vitæ propositum singularis fortitèr arripere, et perfectionem apostolicam in periculosa mundi prosperitate perseveranter continuare, quod et nutu divino factum est. Extunc enim incepit ordo et religio monachorum per heremitas, sanctosque patres Antonium, Macharium, cæterosque consimiles inventus, ab eisque strictissime observatus; qui non aliam religionem vel sectam, (sicut quidam errantes putant) Christianæ religioni contrariam cœpisse et tenuisse, suisque æmulis verbo et exemplo tradidisse credendi sunt; sed eandem religionem Christi veram et perfectam, vitamque apostolicam in singulari et perfecta conversatione, repræsentantes, sub regula et imperio superiorum, tanquam sub imperio Christi, omnes eorum sequaces vivere in communi, et imitari vitam apostolicam humilitèr, obedientèr, et devotè, cum magnâ providentiâ ordinaverunt; quorum exemplo quamplures inducti, propria relinquentes amore perfectionis, et voluntariæ paupertati mancipientes, se devotè servitio Christi obtulerunt. Ex quibus summi in vitâ, et miraculis præclari Benedictus, Maurus, Ægidius, Leonardus, alique monachorum patres, religionisque providi moderatores, temporibus suis claruerunt, ad laudem Dei, et magnam Christianæ fidei exaltationem.

CONCORDIA REGULARIS

S. DUNSTANI CANTUARIENSIS ARCHIEPISCOPI.

P R O Æ M I U M.

GLORIOSUS etenim Eadgar Christi opitulante gratiâ Anglorum cæterarumque gentium intra ambitum Britanniæ insulæ degentium Rex egregius, ab ineunte suæ pueritiæ ætate, licet, uti ipsa solet ætas, diversis uteretur moribus, attamen respectu divino attactus, abbate quodam assiduò monente, ac regiam catholicæ fidei viam demonstrante, cœpit magnopere Deum timere, diligere, ac venerari. Radiante paulatim fidei scintilla, ne otiositatis topore explosa delitesceret, quibus sanctorum operum meritis in fervidum perfectionis ardorem accendi valeret studiosè percunctari sollicitus cœpit. Comperto etenim, quod sacra cœnobia diversis sui regiminis locis diruta, ac penè Domini nostri Jesu Christi servitio destituta negligenter tabescerent, Domini compunctus gratia cum magna animi alacritate festinando, ubicunque locorum decentissime restauravit: ejectioneque negligentium clericorum spurcitiis, non solum monachos, verum sanctimoniales etiam, patribus matribusque constitutis ad Dei famulatum ubique per tantam sui regni amplitudinem devotissime constituit, bonisque omnibus locupletans gratulabundus ditavit. Regali itaque functus officio veluti pastorum pastor sollicitus, à rabidis perfidorum retibus uti hiantibus luporum faucibus oves, quas Domini largiente gratiâ studiosus collegerat, muniendo eripuit, conjugique Alphridæ sanctimonialium mandras, ut impavidi more custodis defenderet cautissimè præcepit; ut videlicet mas maribus, fœmina fœminis, sine ullo suspicionis scrupulo subveniret.

Regulari itaque sancti patris Benedicti normâ honestissime susceptâ, tam abbates quam plurimi quam abbatissæ cum sibi subjectis fratrum, sororumque collegiis sanctorum sequi vestigia unâ fide, non tamen uno consuetudinis usu, certatim cum magnâ studuerunt hilaritate. Tali igitur, ac tanto studio præfatus rex magnoperè delectatus, arcana quæque diligenti cura examinans, synodale Concilium Wintoniæ fieri decrevit: illucque verba exhortatoria, ac pacifica pitacio luculentissimè caraxata humillimus destinavit, cunctosque Christi compunctus gratiâ monuit, ut concordēs æquali consuetudinis usu, sanctos probatosque imitando patres regularia præcepta tenaci mentis anchorâ servantēs, nullo modo dissentiendo discordarent: ne impar, ac varius unius regulæ, ac unius patriæ usus probrose vituperium sanctæ conversationi irrogaret. Hujus præcellentissimi regis sagaci monitu spiritualiter compuncti, non tantum episcopi, verum etiam abbates ac abbatissæ, quod talem, ac tantum habere meruerunt doctorem, erectis ad æthera palmis immensas celsi throno grates, voti compotes referre non distulerunt.

Nam illicò ejus imperiis toto mentis conamine alacriter obtemperantes, sanctique patroni nostri Gregorii documenta, quibus B. Augustinum monere studuit, ut non solum Romanæ, verum etiam Galliarum honestos ecclesiarum usus rudi Anglorum ecclesiæ decorando constitueret recolentes: accitis Florentis beati Benedicti, nec non præcipui cœnobii, quod celebri Ghent^a nuncupatur vocabulo monachis, quæque ex dignis eorum moribus honesta colligentes, uti apes favum nectaris è diversis pratorum floribus in uno alveario; ita has morum consuetudines ad vitæ honestatem, et regularis observantiæ dulcedinem, ut ab hiis, qui viam

regiam mandatorum Domini absque jactantiæ vitio lactei adhuc humiliter incedunt, depulso nauseæ tædio sine querelâ legitimè haustu degustari libentissimo, ac avidè amabili possent impleri devotione, temperatâ cum magnâ atque subtili rationis discretione, Christi mundi Salvatoris opitulante gratiâ, hoc exiguo apposuerunt Catlicello.^a

Ne igitur singuli si suam, quod absit, ad inventionem suâpte præsumptuosi eligerent excellentissimum sanctæ obedientiæ fructum alicujus arrogantiae fastu inopinatè seducti miserabiliter amitterent, ac Sarabaitæ vel feræ potius, quam monachi aut homines viderentur: legitimum votum Domino nostro Jesu Christo unanimes voverunt, pactoque spirituali confirmaverunt, se vitâ comite jugo regulæ deditos, has adnotatas morum consuetudines communi palam custodire conversatione. Cæterum unusquisque secretis oratorii locis, in quantum Sancti Spiritus gratia clementer instigaverit peculiaribus teste Deo, cum bonorum operum vigilantia consulte utatur orationibus. Hoc enim Dunstanus egregius hujus patriæ archiepiscopus præago afflatus spiritu ad corroborandum præfati synodalis conventus conciliabulum, providè, ac sapienter addidit: ut videlicet nullus Monachorum vel alicujus altioris gradus vir, vel inferioris, secreta Sanctimonialium audax ingredi lustrando præsumeret: et hi, qui spiritualis imperii prioratum, ad disciplinæ utilitatem non ad sæcularis tyrannidem potentatus, super eas exercent, ita suum, ut beatus hortatur Isidorus secretorum temperatè prævideant accessum, ut earum regulari observantiæ minimè contradicant.

Id solummodo catholicis regulari jugo deditis attendendum censuimus, ne ea, quæ usu patrum, pro rege, ac benefactoribus, quorum beneficiis Christo largiente pascimur, intercessionis oramina consuetè canimus, nimia velocitate psallendo. Deum potius ad iracundiam inconsideratè, quod absit, provocent, quam providè ad peccaminum veniam invitent. Ita igitur hortante Patre nostro Benedicto omnia distinctè psallendo modificentur, ut mens nostra concordet voci nostræ, et impleatur illud Apostolicum 'Psallam spiritu, psallam et mente.' Si autem pro qualibet necessitate, quid extra communem regularis consuetudinis usum addendum fuerit; tamdiu agatur, quoad usque negotium, pro quo agitur, Christi opitulante gratiâ melioretur, et ut contempto arrogantiae fastu gratissimus obedientiæ acquiratur fructus, et gradus ille regularis, in quo præcipitur, ut nihil agat monachus, nisi quod communis monasterii regula, vel majorum cohortantur exempla, diligentissimè custodiatur: nequaquam ulterius præsumptosè usu teneatur temerario, nisi Concilio Synodali electum, traditumque cum discretione virtutum omnium matre ab universis fuerit catholicis.

Præfato equidem synodali conciliabulo hoc attendendum magnoperè cuncti decreverunt, ut Abbatum et Abbatissarum electio cum regis consensu, et concilio sanctæ regulæ ageretur documento, episcoporum quoque electio, uti Abbatum, ubicunque in sede episcopali monachi regulares conversantur, si Domini largiente gratiâ tanti profectus inibi monachus reperiri potuerit eodem modo agatur, nec alio quolibet modo dum ejusdem sunt conversationis, a quoquam præsumatur. Si autem imperitia impediente, vel peccatis promerentibus, talis, qui tanti gradus honore dignus sit, in eadem congregatione reperiri non potuerit, ex alio noto Monachorum Monasterio concordis Regis, et fratrum, quibus dedicari debet, consilio eligatur. Qui ordinatus videlicet Episcopus in omnibus eundem morem regularem cum monachis suis, quem Abbas tenet regularis, diligenti curâ, et magnoperè excellenti jugiter sine intermissione custodiat, nec episcopatus occasione regulæ præcepta tumidus, vel obliviosus temerè intermittat, sed quantum excellit honore, tantum et opere. Sæcularium vero Prioratum, ne ad magni ruinam detrimenti, uti olim acciderat, miserabiliter deveniret, magna animadversione, atque anathemate suscipi cœnobiis sacris sapienter prohibentes, regis tantummodo et reginæ dominium ad sacri loci munimen, et ad ecclesiasticæ possessionis augmentum, voto semper efflagitare optabili prudentissimè jusserunt.

Ad Regis vero obsequium et Reginæ, patres monasteriorum matresque, quotiens expedierit ad sacri cœnobii, cui præsunt, utilitatem cum Dei timore. et regulæ observantia humiliter accedant: potentibus vero, non causa convivendi, sed pro monasterii utilitate

atque etiam defensione quotiens expedierit obviandi, intra infrave monasterium licentiam habeant.

Equitando autem, vel pedites iter agendo non otiosis fabulis vacent, sed vel psalmodiis inserviant, vel de re necessariâ opportuno tempore loquantur. Hoc considerantes ut horas regulares non equitando, sed de equis desiliendo genu flectentes, nisi dies festiva fuerit, convenienter ut potuerint cum divina compunctione compleant. Itinerantes vero non juvenulos, sed adultos, quorum admonitione meliorentur, secum in comitatu ducant; domi verò degentes, non solum fratres, sed etiam abbates, adolescentes, vel puerulos non brachiis amplexando, vel labris leviter deosculando, sed charitativo animi affectu sine verbis adulatoriis reverenter cum magna cautelâ diligant. Nec ad obsequium privatum quempiam illorum, nec saltem sub spiritualis rei obtentu solum deducere præsumant: sed uti regula præcipit, sub sui custodis vigiliâ jugiter maneat, nec ipse custos cum singulo aliquo puerulo sine tertio, qui testis assistat, migrandi licentiam habeat, sed pro more solito cum tota schola, si res rationabilis ita exegerit, quo necesse est, sub silentio, vel psalmodiis inserviando cum benedictione eat.

Villarum autem circuitus, nisi neecessitas causa magna compulerit, et necessariæ rationis discretis hoc dictaverit, vagando nequaquam frequentent. Sæcularium vero convivia, nisi fortè itineris hospitalitas inopinatè supervenerit nullo modo ausu temerario nec prælati, nec subjecti, adire præsumant. Victum cum pondere, mensura, et numero, vestitum, jejunium, abstinentiam, vigiliam, taciturnitatem, obedientiæ bonum, et cætera quæque, quæ patroni nostri Benedicti traditione voluntariè suscepimus Domini nostri Jesu Christi annuente gratiâ totis viribus custodientes, de consuetis sanctæ regulæ moribus tam à prædicto patre Benedicto, quam à sanctis sequacibus et imitatoribus suis, palam cum magnâ examinis discussione jugi custoditis usu, prædicti regis monitu freti, ac patrum imperiis confisi, sollicitè, uti polliciti sumus, in quantum vires suppetent, et Spiritus Sancti gratia instruxerit ad charitatem fraternæ unitatis custodiam scribendo dilucidemus, ut ab ipso æternæ vitæ remunerationem, cuncta concorditer et gratulabundè conservantes, recipiamus, qui facit unanimes, id est, unius moris habitare in domo, ubi est rex Christus Dominus Virginis filius, qui cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto vivit, et regnat Deus in sæcula sæculorum. Amen.

A CALENDIS ENIM Octobris, religiosorum morum Domini opitulante gratiâ, exordium sumendo; omnia, quæ usu regulari, et sanctorum patrum imitatione, spiritualia sive corporalia, humili ac necessario agenda sunt officio, cum benedictione inchoentur.

Hic igitur maximi mûniminis mos pernecessarius, tam in modicis rebus quam magnis, legitimè à cunctis, jugo regulæ deditis, jugi teneatur custodiâ, etiamsi singuli quippiam inchoaverint minimè intermittatur: nihil proculdubiò firmum validunve permanebit, quod cuncti creantis, ac justo moderamine creata gubernantis, Christi benedictione carebit, ideoque omni tempore nocturnis horis, cum ad opus divinum de lectulo surrexerit frater, primum sibi signum crucis imprimat, per Sanctæ Trinitatis invocationem. Deinde dicat versum, 'Domine labia mea aperies:' dehinc psalmum, 'Deus in adjutorium meum intende,' totum, cum 'Gloria.' Tunc provideat sibi corpoream naturæ necessitatem, si ipsa hora indiguerit, et sic ad oratorium festinando psallat psalmum, 'Ad te Domine levavi animam meam,' cum summa reverentia et cautelâ intrans, ut alios orantes non impediatur, ac tunc, flexis genibus in loco congruo et consueto, in Domini conspectu effundat preces, magis corde quam ore, ita ut illius vox per magnam animi compunctionem, et peccaminum suorum recordationem, aures misericordis Domini efficaciter penetret, ac scelerum omnium, Christi annuente gratia, veniam obtineat.

In primâ itaque oratione, decantet tres primos pœnitentiæ psalmos, cum Oratione Dominica, uti in sequentibus, pro seipso primum intercedendo; post hos Orationem istam, ‘Gratias tibi ago omnipotens Pater, qui me dignatus es in hac nocte custodire: deprecor clementiam tuam, misericors Domine, ut concedas mihi diem venturum sic in tuo sancto servitio peragere, cum humilitate et discretione, ut tibi complaceat servitus nostra. Per Dominum,’ &c.

Inde veniat ad secundam orationem, ubi sequentes duos dicat psalmos pro rege et regina, atque familiaribus, cum Oratione ‘Deus qui charitatis dona per gratiam Sancti Spiritus tuorum cordibus fidelium infudisti, da famulis et famulabus tuis, pro quibus tuam deprecamur clementiam, salutem mentis et corporis, ut de tota virtute diligant, et quæ tibi placita sunt tota dilectione perficiant, per Dominum nostrum,’ &c.

Inde ad tertiam orationem veniens, duos posteriores psalmos pro fidelibus defunctis decantet, cum Oratione ‘Inveniant quæsumus Domine animæ famulorum famularumque tuarum lucis æternæ consortium, qui in hac luce positi tuum consecuti sunt sacramentum, per Dominum,’ &c. Et donec quidem pueri introeant ecclesiam unum continuatim pulsetur tintinnabulum, ipsi quoque pueri ingressi, ut Trinitatis reverentia ab omnibus legitime teneatur, trinâ utantur oratione.

Finitis vero trinis orationibus a pueris, sonetur secundum signum, residentibus cunctis in sedibus suis ordinatim, atque canentibus quindecim psalmos graduum singillatim, trina partitione, uti superiores septem flectentes genua post quinque psalmos facto signo a priore, iterum autem pulsatis reliquis signis, atque finitis eisdem psalmis incipiant nocturnam. Peractis nocturnis, dicant duos psalmos: ‘Domine ne in furore tuo,’ et ‘Exaudiat te Deus,’ unum videlicet, pro Rege specialiter, alterum vero pro rege et regina ac familiaribus, cum his collectis, ‘Quæsumus omnipotens Deus ut famulus tuus rex noster N. qui tua miseratione suscepit regni gubernacula, virtutum etiam omnium percipiat incrementa, quibus decenter ornatus, et vitiorum monstra devitare, et hostem superare, et ad te, quia via, veritas, et vita es, gratiosus valeat pervenire, per Dominum nostrum,’ &c. ‘Rege quæsumus Domine famulam tuam N. et gratiæ tuæ in ea dona multiplica, ut ab omnibus libera offensis, et temporalibus non destituatur auxiliis, et sempiternis gaudeat institutis, per Dominum nostrum,’ &c.

Pro rege et regina, ac benefactoribus, ‘Deus qui charitatis,’ &c. ut antea; et sic, finitis omnibus regularibus horis, semper agatur. Post hos psalmos, parvissimum, uti regula præcipit, et totâ æstate convenit, fiat intervallum. Egressâ scholâ cum magistro ad necessitudinis usum; cæteri, nisi qui indigent, in ecclesia orationibus dediti resideant.

Post hoc, sequantur diei laudes: post ‘Miserere mei Deus,’ &c. addant duos psalmos pro rege, reginâque, et familiaribus, ‘Beati quorum,’ &c. ‘Inclina Domine,’ &c. Quibus finitis, cantent antiphonam de cruce, inde, antiphonam de sanctâ Mariâ, et de sancto cujus veneratio in præsentem colitur ecclesiâ; aut si minus fuerit, de ipsius loci consecratione. Post quos, eundem est ad matutinales laudes de omnibus sanctis; decantando antiphonam ad venerationem sancti, cui porticus, ad quam itur, dedicata est. Post quos, laudes pro defunctis. Quod si luce diei ut oportet finitum fuerit officium, incipiant Primam, absque tintinnabuli signo: sin autem expectent lucem, et pulsato signo congregentur ad Primam. Deinde finitâ Prima duos psalmos, ‘Domine in furore tuo,’ &c. ii. Et, ‘Miserere mei Deus,’ &c. i. canant, primum pro carnis tentatione, cum precibus, ‘Proba nos Domine,’ et ‘Non inveniat nos pes superbiæ,’ &c. et collecta, ‘Ure igne;’ sequentem verò, pro defunctis fratribus, cum collecta, ‘Inveniant quæsumus Domine,’ &c. et prece ‘Animæ fratrum nostrorum,’ &c. et sic more solito, pœnitentiæ psalmos percurrant devotè interposito psalmo ‘Inclina Domine.’ His verò finitis subsequatur litania, quam universi, more solito, prostrati humiliter, nullo excepto, signo pulsato, compleant. Quâ expletâ, post Orationem Dominicam intercanitur psalmus ‘In te Domine speravi,’ ii. Consequentibus precibus et orationibus. Quibus finitis vacent fratres lectioni, usque ad horam secundam, secundum regulæ præceptum: tunc facto signo, eant, et se diurnalibus induant calceamentis, nullus enim hoc debet præsumere, antequam illud audiatur signum, exceptis ministris, neque tunc ab aliquo intermittatur sine licentiâ, ne præsumptione temerariâ obedientiæ meritum lugubriter obnubilent: dehinc psalmodiis dediti, facies suas, uti mos est, lavet schola universa cum magistro, et abbate: seniores vero, prout Deus unicuique in corda eorum divino immiserit instinctu, silenter, ac tota mentis intentione, opus suum in his obsequiis, sicut in omnibus convenit orationibus, decorando celebrent, horas canonicas, vel septem pœnitentiæ psalmos, vel aliud quippiam spirituale, ad tentationem diabolicam devincendam psallendo: sicque loti veniant ad ecclesiam. Infantibus autem ad ecclesiam intransibus, ædituus primum sonet signum: peractis tribus à pueris orationibus, uti prius à senioribus gestum fuerat, dispositi singuli in locis suis, campanâ pulsâtâ, incipiant, horam Tertiam, post cujus terminum dicant pro rege atque regina, et benefactoribus suis, psalmos 'Usquequo Domine' et 'Miserere mei Deus, miserere mei,' subsequentibus præscriptis collectis: deinde missam matutinalem celebrënt, ad quam secunda feriâ, dexter offerat chorus, sinister ad principalem missam. Tertiâ rursus feriâ, sinister offerat ad matutinalem dexter ad principalem, sicque alternati, in eo hebdomadam percurrent; eadem vero matutinalis missa, pro rege, vel quacunquē imminente necessitate celebretur: hoc expleto, facto signo à priore, convenientes ad Capitulum, ipso præcedente, versâ facie ad orientem salutent crucem, et cæteris undique fratribus se vultu inclinato humilient; cujus humiliationis ratio, et in omni Conventu custodienda est: tunc residentibus cunctis, legatur martyrologium. Quo dicto, surgentes omnes, dicant versum, 'Præciosa in conspectu Domini,' &c. cum oratione ac versu, 'Deus in adiutorium meum intende,' qui versus tertio repetatur ab omnibus, Priore incipiente, subjungentes 'Gloria,' et flectentes genua, si tempus ita dictaverit: dicente vero Priore, 'et ne nos inducas,' surgant omnes, erectoque vultu dicant, 'Respice in servos,' subjungentes 'Gloria,' humiliato capite. Sequitur oratio 'Dirigere et sanctificare,' et 'Adiutorium nostrum in nomine Domini, qui fecit cœlum et terram.' Iterum autem residentibus legatur regula, vel si dies festus fuerit, evangelium ipsius diei, de quâ lectione a priore prout Dominus dederit, dicatur. Post hoc quicumque se reum alicujus culpæ agnoscit, veniam humiliter postulans, petat indulgentiam. Omnis autem frater, pro quacunquē causâ increpatus ab abbate, vel a quolibet Priore, antequam verbum aliquod proferat, veniam petat. Et dum à Priore interrogatus fuerit, quæ sit causa pro qua veniam poscit, respondeat atque suam profiteatur culpam dicens, mea culpa Domine; dehinc jussus, erigat se: nam si aliter egerit culpabilis judicabitur. Quicumque enim increpatus, à quolibet Priore fuerit pro aliquo reatu, vel si quippiam in officiis excesserit, et non statim veniam uti regula præcipit postulaverit, majori subjaceat vindictæ. Quantò enim quis se humiliavit, seseque culpabilem reddiderit, tantò misericordius ac levius à Priore debet judicari, necesse est enim, ut in omnibus negligentis nostris, id est cogitationum, linguæ, vel operum, in præsentî vitâ, per veram confessionem, et humilem pœnitentiam judicemur, ne post istius vitæ decursum, reos nos ante tribunal Christi statuam. Finito hoc spiritualis purgaminis negotio quinque psalmos qui post notantur pro defunctis fratribus decantent. Ista vero omnia quæ diximus, post Tertiam his temporibus agenda; Dominicis diebus omni tempore ante Tertiam agantur; ita tamen ut fratrum unusquisque suæ conscientiæ reatum, patri spirituali vel ejus, si absens fuit, vicario, per humilem revelet confessionem. Si autem tanta fuerit multitudo, ut ea die omnes ad confessionem venire nequeant, sequenti die, secunda videlicet feria, hoc idem impleant. Schola verò nullo modo hoc quamquam puerilis intermittat, sed ut senes, licet nondum tentationibus impugnata, consuetè peragat. Qui autem aliis indigerit diebus, tentatione aliquâ animi vel corporis stimulatus, ad confessionis salubre remedium, devotus non eo minus venire differat.

In diebus autem festis, ab taciturnitatis studiique observantiam, ita protendatur Prima, ut Capitulo facto, matutinalique missa celebratâ, quæ die dominica, de Trinitate celebranda est nisi alia festiva dies fuerit, si dies Dominica fuerit, mox accedant ad consecrationem conspersinis, si alia quælibet solemnitas, mox ad Tertiam, interim enim cum ea missa agitur, sequentis missæ ministri se induant, et Tertia peracta, mox signorum motu fidelem advocantes plebem, missam inchoent. Post pacem, fratres quotidie (nisi qui crimine se aliquo, vel carnis fragilitate reos cognoverunt) regulari studio prorsus intenti, eucharistiam accipere non renuant, attendentes illud quod ait beatus Augustinus, in libro de verbis Domini, ‘Quod,’ videlicet, ‘in Oratione Dominica non annum, sed quotidianum deposcimus panem.’ Et ut ipse inibi testatur, tam facile Christianum posse carere, ne umquam vitæ pabulum corpus videlicet, ac sanguinem Christi accipiant, quam non crebrius, quam semel in anno degustet. ‘Sic,’ inquit, ‘vive, ut quotidie merearis accipere: qui quotidie non meretur accipere non meretur post annum accipere.’ Videant tamen ad cœnam invitati Dominicam, ne crimine aliquo turpiter infecti sine confessione et pœnitentia præsumant accedere, et vitæ alimenta sibi in damnationem convertant, ut ait beatus apostolus, ‘Non dijudicantes corpus Domini.’ Finita missa detur spatium, quo ministri fratres, propter communionem sanctam accipiant mixtum, cæteris omnibus interim in ecclesiâ residentibus, et facto signo, agant orationem, deinde Sextam: post Sextam, eant ad mensam, hoc semper attendendum ut sexta feriâ de cruce, Sabbato de sancta Mariâ, nisi festiva aliqua dies evenerit, missa celebretur principalis.

Omnibus namque diebus festivis, sive quotidianis missâ finitâ dicatur pro Rege psalmus, ‘Exaudiat te Dominus,’ et pro Regina, ‘Ad te levavi,’ &c. consequentibus precibus, et oratione congruâ videlicet ut post missam, eorum agatur memoria uti in missa, et in omnibus aliis agitur horis. Tota autem die solemne silentium teneatur in claustris.

Surgentes a Capitulo, canant quinque psalmos pro defunctis: ‘Verba mea, Domine ne in furore. i. Dilexi quoniam. Credidi. De profundis:’ post quos pulsetur tabula, et si opus non habuerint ad agendum, dicatur tantum à Priore ‘Benedicite,’ cæteris respondentibus ‘Dominus:’ si verò opus habuerint, pulsata tabulâ, Prior auxilium prius invocet divinum, dicens tertio, ‘Deus in adjutorium meum intende,’ fratribus hoc idem respondentibus, et ‘Gloria, Pater noster,’ et ‘Adjutorium nostrum.’ Tunc cum decantatione canonici cursus, et psalterii, operentur, quod eis injungitur, usque dum audiant signum ad induendum, quod cum audierint, disjungant se singuli ab operibus suis, festinantes ad opus Domini, devenientesque ante oratorium, benedicant Dominum, qui eis adjutorium præstitit, dicentes, ‘Benedictus es Domine quoniam adjuvisti me, et consolatus es me,’ ter, et ‘Gloria, Pater noster,’ et ‘Adjutorium,’ et ‘Propitius sit nobis omnipotens Dominus:’ ingredientes autem ecclesiam agant orationem: dehinc eant ad induendum se ministri; induti vero introeant chorum, et pulsatis signis, celebrent Sextam; finita Sexta, canant psalmum ‘Deus misereatur nostri,’ et ‘Domine exaudi,’ i. pro Rege, Reginâque, et familiaribus, cum præscriptis Collectis: sequitur Litania: quâ finitâ, cantor ad hos, more solito, indutus, missæ officium inchoet: finita missa, pulsetur primum signum Nonæ, et agatur Oratio: post Orationem, eant fratres hebdomadarii accipere mixtum, sedentibus interim cæteris fratribus, in ecclesia psalmodiæ deditis, donec iterum dato signo, Nonam agant: peracta Nona, dicant pro Rege Reginâque, et familiaribus, psalmos, ‘Qui regis Israel,’ et ‘De profundis;’ et cum prænotatis collectis: dehinc, pergant ad mensam. Surgentes à mensa, vacent lectioni aut psalmis, juxta præceptum regulæ: aut si aliquid fuerit agendum, pulsetur tabula, et cum benedictione, quod agendum est, incipiatur.

Temperius agatur Vespera, cujus signa dum sonant fratres post orationem in choro, juniores quidem, spiritualis lectionis studio singuli seriò occupati, seniores vero orationibus divinis intenti, cum Domini gratiâ nusquam vagantes sedeant: Vesperam vero canentes, duos, post ‘Miserere mei Deus,’ pro Rege Reginâque, et familiaribus addant psalmos, id est, ‘Benedixisti Domine,’ et ‘Domine exaudi,’ ii. Vesperis dictis sicut diximus superius agendum de Antiphonis, post matutinas, ita agatur post vespas, et vespas de omnibus sanctis, et mortuorum, et vigilia, usque ad calendas Novembris.

Quibus peractis eant fratres ad exuendos diurnales calceos, induentes nocturnales: si sabbatum fuerit, singuli pedes suos lavent, sintque vasa huic operi congrua singulis designata: post pedum lavationem, lavent etiam calceos, quibus expedierit: post hæc, tintinnabulo a Priore percusso, accedant cum gratiarum actione, ad haurienda pocula. Surgentes vero, Prior hunc versum dicat, ‘Adjutorium nostrum;’ cæteri respondeant, ‘Qui fecit cœlum et terram:’ inde pulsata tabula, eant ad mandatum secundum regulæ edictum, quo peracto facto signo in ecclesiam initiatur collatio, rursumque dato tintinnabuli signo refectorium introeant charitatis gratiâ, quotiescunque fratribus charitas interim dum collatio legitur, præbetur, lectione finita, omnibusque surgentibus, dicat Prior 'Sit nomen Domini benedictum:' et 'Benedicamus Domino;' cæteris ut mos est respondentibus; reliquis vero diebus, post mutationem calceamentorum, cum signo refectorium petant. Exhinc similiter cum signo collationem adeant, quæ prout tempus permiserit utque Priori visum legatur, et sic accedant ad Completorium.

Signo namque completorii pulsato, agatur oratio, quâ finitâ, facto signo à Priore invicem sibi dent confessionis salubre remedium; finito completorio, et ad ultimum, more solito, 'Miserere mei Deus' decantato, addantur duo psalmi, 'Deus in adjutorium meum,' et 'Levavi,' pro Rege et Regina, et benefactoribus. Finito completorio, ut in ultima horâ canonicâ, uti in exordio Sanctæ Trinitatis ac individuæ unitatis reverentiâ legitimè a servulis exhibeatur catholicis, agant primum pueri tres orationes, post pueros agant fratres.

In prima oratione canant psalmos, 'Usquequo Domine;' et 'Judica me Deus; Kyrie eleyson, Pater noster,' et preces 'Averte faciem tuam; Cor mundum; Ne projicias; Redde mihi lætitiâ; Gratias tibi ago Domine sancte Pater omnipotens æterne Deus, qui me dignatus es in hac die custodire per tuam sanctam clementiam, concede mihi hanc noctem mundo corde et casto corpore sic peragere, qualiter mane surgens gratum tibi servitium persolvere possim, per Dominum nostrum,' &c.

In secunda oratione: 'Deus misereatur nostri,' et 'Nisi Dominus:' 'Kyrie eleyson, Pater noster,' easdem preces quas supra, collectam 'Deus cui omne cor patet, et omnis voluntas loquitur, et quem nullum latet secretum, purifica per infusionem Sancti Spiritus, cogitationes cordis nostri, ut perfecte te diligere, et digne laudare mereamur, per Dominum nostrum,' &c.

In tertia oratione: 'De profundis; Kyrie eleyson; Pater noster,' easdem preces, collect. 'Omnipotens mitissime Deus, qui sitiendi populo fontem viventis aquæ de petrâ produxisti, educ de cordis nostri duritiâ compunctionis lachrymas, ut peccata nostra plangere valeamus, remissionemque te miscrante mereamur accipere, per Dominum nostrum,' &c. 'Omnipotens mitissime Deus respice propitius, ad preces nostras, et libera cor nostrum de malarum temptatione cogitationum, ut Spiritus Sancti dignum fieri habitaculum mereamur inveniri; per Dominum nostrum,' &c.

Quibus peractis, conspergantur à sacerdote hebdomadario, benedicta aqua, et sic pergant ad requiem suam, cum summæ tranquillitatis voce et reverentiâ: si quis vero, post hæc, devotionis suæ forte fervore, his diutius incumbere voluerit, agat quidem hæc sed audito signo æditui, quo resides ad egrediendum vocat, nil moretur: omni etiam nocte, post completorium, aspergatur domus quietionis eorum recumbentibus eis, propter illusiones diabolicas.

A CALENDIS Novembris, usque in caput quadragesimæ unus teneatur Ordo Hymnorum, scilicet ut in diebus brevioribus breviores dicantur Hymni, et in longioribus productiores etiam hymni psallantur; id est, ut Dominicâ, vespera, 'O lux beata:' ad completorium, 'Christe qui lux es:' ad nocturnas vero, 'Primo dierum:' et ad matutinas dicatur, 'Æterne rerum conditor.' Omni vero tempore ad nocturnam, ad matutinam, ad vesperam, exceptis Dominicis et festivitatibus sanctorum, feriales more solito teneantur: præclaris vero et festivis solempnitatibus, hymni competentes usu celebrentur consueto: Adventus autem Domini, quadragesimæ, ac Passionis tempore hymni ejusdem cultus legitimè decantentur, ita tamen ut non hymni de jejuniis, sed hi qui per totum annum currunt, Dominicis diebus sive noctibus, tempore quadragesimali celebrentur.

Ab eisdem calendis concedatur fratribus accessus ignis, dum necessitas compulerit, et frigoris nimietas incubuerit. Quod tamen sub silentio fiat, in refectorio verò hoc minime agatur. In hujus quoque hiemis tempore, propter nimiam imbrium asperitatem, locus aptus fratribus designetur, cujus refugio, hybernalis algoris, et intemperei adversitas, levigetur, si autem temperies tranquilla fuerit, claustro uti libuerit cum Christi benedictione utantur, quod si pro necessitate claustro egredientes domum uti duximus designatam ingressi fuerint, idem ibi mos in omnibus teneatur qui in claustro solito tenetur: nec quispiam ullo unquam tempore claustum deserens domum prædictam ad commorandum præsumptuosus adeat vel domum derelinquens claustum sine Prioris licentia: secundum vero regulæ edictum, temperius ad vigiliam surgatur, ut nocturnali peracto officio, et psalmis supradictis, ac vigilia pro defunctis cum laudibus suis, atque matutinis de omnibus sanctis expletis, fratribus psalmodiæ deditis, vel lectioni, secundum regulæ præceptum si qui indiguerint inservientibus, intervallum usquequo luceat, cum magna vigilantia custodiatur a lucis crepusculo, dum ædituus signum pulsaverit ad ecclesiam universi conveniant, factaque oratione, Laudes psallant matutinales, quibus finitis, dicant Antiphonas supradictas usque ad Adventum Domini, quas sequatur Prima, et speciales psalmi, et litania, post hæc egrediantur ecclesiam, atque in lectionem, sacræ animæ profectum meditentur, usque ad tempus supradictum.

A festivitate sancti Martini, reffectis fratribus, ecclesiam intransibus, agatur signum Nonæ, quod sequatur ipsa laus, quam Nonam non sequitur potus usque ad Purificationem sanctæ Mariæ, sic agitur omnibus solemnibus diebus; aliis vero diebus juxta supradictum ordinem faciant, ut videlicet facto signo calcient se, et reliqua omnia, sicut dictum est, impleant, in Adventu Domini, pinguedo interdicitur, scilicet lardi, nisi festivis diebus. Vespera quotidie more solito agatur, ut scilicet, suo tempore post mensam celebretur.

IN Vigiliâ Natalis Domini, dum ejusdem natalis mentio à lectore recitatur in Capitulo, omnes pariter surgentes genua flectent, gratias agentes propter ejus ineffabilem pietatem, quâ mundum a laqueis diaboli redempturus descendit. Sabbato quoquo sancto Paschæ, dum a puero Resurrectio Domini nostri Jesu Christi legitur, quanquam in martyrologio id non habetur, propter ejus gloriosissimi victoriam triumphi, quam destructis erebi claustris, secum fideles quosque in cœlos advexit, nobis etiam redivivis, spem ascendendi concessit uniformiter agatur, vespere canantur Antiphonæ congruæ de ipsa completionem temporis, ad psalmos, in cujus noctis vigiliâ, in quarto responsorio, ut honorificentius agatur, duo simul cantant illud, et evangelium, post 'Te Deum laudamus' ab abbate more solito legatur, dicta oratione, sub silentio egrediantur ministri, ut calcient se, lavent, et induant sub festinatione, omnibusque signis motis, agatur missa: post hæc, laudes matutinales, his finitis, incipiant laudes de omnibus sanctis more solito, si autem eluxerit missam celebrent matutinalem, quæ in lucis crepusculo celebranda est. Dehinc tempore opportuno, signo pulsato canant Primam, finita Prima, venientes ad Capitulum, post cætera spiritualis ædificationis colloquia petunt humili devotione omnes fratres ab abbate, qui vices Christi agit postulantes multiplicium indulgentiam excessuum dicentes 'Confiteor,' et abbas respondeat 'Misereatur:' demum ipse abbas solo tenus se prosternens eadem a fratribus petat, idem modus confessionis primâ Paschalis solemnitatis die ita agitur. Capitulo facto, et psalmis dictis, induant se omnes ut sint ornatissimi omnes ad Tertiam.

Ad vesperam ipsius diei dicantur Antiphonæ, 'Tecum principium,' et reliquæ; reliquis verò tribus diebus dicantur Antiphonæ de ipsis sanctis cum psalmis ipsi solemnitati competentibus. His peractis rursum repetatur 'Tecum principium,' usque octavas Domini, his

autem diebus inter Innocentium festivitatem, et octavas Domini, quia 'Gloria in excelsis Deo' ob tantæ festivitatis honorificentiam ad missam celebratur, ad nocturnam, et ad vesperam, uti ad missam, sicut in usum hujus patriæ indigenæ tenent, omnia signa pulsantur, nam honestos hujus patriæ mores ad Dominum pertinentes, quos veterum usu didicimus nullo modo abjicere sed undique uti diximus corroborare decrevimus, ad matutinas verò ob rem prædictam licet 'Te Deum laudamus' non canatur, et evangelium minimè festivo more legatur, cereus tamen accendatur, et signa pulsantur omnia, et thuribulum turificando deportetur, hinc usque Epiphaniam Domini psalmi ad vespas ad feriam pertinentes cum Antiphonâ dicantur. In vigilia Epiphaniæ Domini jejunium minime exsequitur. Ad psalmos ipsius vespere Antiphonæ dicantur de eâdem solemnitate. Cæteris diebus post octavas Domini, et Epiphaniarum primum diem, et post Primam agatur missa matutinalis, et tabula post capitulum pulsatur, et obedientia agitur, et signa simul non pulsantur nec 'Gloria in excelsis Deo' canitur, nisi alia festivitas inter- venerit, usque octavum diem, qui solemniter cum xij. lectionibus celebratur. Ab eâ die usque caput quadragesimæ suprascriptus ordo teneatur.

In Purificatione sanctæ Mariæ sint cerei ordinati in ecclesia, ad quam fratres ire debent, ut inde petant luminaria. Euntes autem silenter incedant psalmodiæ dediti, et omnes albis induti si fieri potest vel aeris permiserit temperies, et intrantes ecclesiam agant orationem cum Antiphonâ, et collectâ ad venerationem ipsius sancti cui ecclesia ipsa ad quam itur dedicata est. Deinde abbas stolâ et cappâ indutus benedicat candelas, et conspergat aquâ benedictâ, et thurificet, et sic accepto cereo ab ædituo psallentibus cunctis, accipiant singuli singulos, acceptosque accendant. Inde revertentes canant Antiphonas, quæ adsunt usquequo veniant ante portam, ubi decantata Antiphonâ 'Responsum accepit Simeon,' dicatur oratio 'Exaudi quæsumus Domine,' post quam ingrediantur ecclesiam canentes Responsorium 'Cum inducerent puerum.' Hoc decantato dicant Orationem Dominicam, dehinc sequatur Tertia, quâ finita si processionem induti non egerunt induant se, et missam celebrantes teneant luminaria in manibus donec post oblationem ea sacerdoti offerant, qui regularis ordo a septuagesimâ, tota quadragesima custodiatur.

In septuagesima verò pinguedo intermittatur, usque in quinquagesimam, à quinquagesimâ vero quadragesimalem teneant abstinentiam more solito. A septuagesimâ autem finitis tribus lectionibus sex nocturnæ posterioris psalmi uti priores cum tribus Antiphonis ex ipsorum psalmorum concentu editis usque ad cœnam Domini cum summâ diligentiam decantentur. A capite jejunii, quarta, et sextâ feriâ processionem custodiant usque in cœna Domini, et ab octavis Pentecostes usque ad calendas Octobris: cujus ordo processionis ita agatur: Quartâ feriâ capitis jejunii Nona decantata abbas stolâ ornatus benedicat cineres: quibus benedictis eat ipse abbas, et imponat capitibus singulorum, quia ejus est pœnitentiam illis imponere, canentes interim Antiphonam, 'Exaudi nos Domine: Salvum me fac Deus, ii. et Gloria: Kyrie eleyson: Pater noster: Deus misereatur nostri:' et preces et collectas: tunc vadant, quo ire habent canentes Antiphonas, quæ in Antiphonario continentur: venientes ad ecclesiam, quo eant, iterum agant orationem, et post Antiphonam de sancto, et psalmum 'Ad te levavi oculos,' et preces, et orationem ibi incipientes Litaniam revertantur ad matrem ecclesiam, et dehinc more solito agatur missa. Iste ordo processionis semper teneatur quotiens processio agitur. Sed aliis temporibus semper Antiphona 'Exurge Domine' dicatur prima cum psalmo et 'Gloria.'

mixtum, qui voluerint, qui verò noluerint licentiam habeant dimittendi, et quia regulæ tenemus ornamentum in his sanctis diebus quadragesimæ aliquid nobis augendi divinæ servituti ad solitum pensum nostræ servitutis, censuimus ut à capite quadragesimæ usque ad cœnam Domini festivis exceptis diebus quotidie post expletionem uniuscujusque horæ duos psalmos prostrati solo oratorii peroremus devoti, eo scilicet ordine ut matutinis finitis mox dicantur duo psalmi ‘Domine ne in furore i.’ et ‘Ad Dominum, Kyrie eleyson, Pater noster,’ et preces pro peccatis, et Oratio. Ad Primam, ‘Beati quorum’ et ‘Levavi,’ et reliqua ut supra. Ad Tertiam, ‘Domine ne in furore ii.’ et ‘Letatus sum.’ Ad Sextam, ‘Miserere mei Deus,’ et ‘Ad te levavi.’ Ad Nonam, ‘Domine exaudi,’ et ‘Nisi quia Dominus.’ Ad Vesperam ‘De profundis’ et ‘Qui confidunt.’ Ad Completorium ‘Domine exaudi, ii.’ et ‘In convertendo,’ ut videlicet per singulas horas unus dicatur psalmus pœnitentiæ, et alter graduum, quo et nos peccatorum nexibus expiati virtutum gradibus superna scandamus, in quibus diebus quadragesimæ per tres priores hebdomadas sint inrasi, mediante vero quadragesimali tempore, rasuræ officio pilorum evellant superfluitatem.

Dominicâ die palmarum, quia major restat processio agenda, illa quæ solet in claustro agi interim dum matutinalis missa canitur agatur à sacerdote tantum conspersionem, et benedictionem agente. Finitâ illa missâ agatur major processio, in quâ, sicut in priori diximus agendum, ita agatur, id est, ut ad illam ecclesiam ubi palmæ sunt sub silentio ordinatim eant dediti psalmodiæ omnes, si fieri potest, et aura permiserit, albis induti, quo cum pervenerint agant orationem ipsius sancti implorantes auxilii intercessionem, cui ecclesia dedicata est. Finitâ Oratione à diacono legatur Evangelium ‘Turba multa,’ usque ‘Mundus totus post ipsum abiit,’ quod sequatur benedictio palmarum, post benedictionem aspergantur benedictâ aquâ, et thus cremetur, dehinc pueris inchoantibus Antiphonas ‘Pueri Hebræorum,’ distribuantur ipsæ palmæ, et sic majoribus Antiphonis initiatis egrediantur, venientes ante ecclesiam subsistant, donec pueri qui præcesserunt decantent ‘Gloria laus,’ cum versibus omnibus, sicut mos est, ‘Laus,’ et ‘Gloria’ respondentibus: quibus finitis incipiente cantore responsorium ‘Ingrediente Domino,’ aperiantur portæ, ingressi, finito responsorio, agant sicut supradictum est, et teneant palmas in manibus usque dum offertorium canetur, et eas post oblationem offerant sacerdoti. Eâ die ad passionem dicitur, ‘Dominus vobiscum’ sed ‘Gloria tibi Domine,’ non respondetur: similiter et in reliquis passionibus exceptâ parasceux passionem ubi neutrum dicatur nec ‘Dominus vobiscum,’ nec ‘Gloria tibi Domine.’ Quinta feriâ quæ, et cœna Domini dicitur nocturnale officium agatur secundum quod in Antiphonario habetur, comperimus etiam in quorundam religiosorum ecclesiis quiddam fieri, quod ad animarum compunctionem spiritualis rei indicium exorsum est, videlicet ut peracto quicquid ad cantilenam illius noctis pertinet, evangelique Antiphonâ finitâ, nihilque jam cereorum luminis remanente, sint duo ad hoc idem destinati pueri in dextera parte chori, qui sonora psallant voce ‘Kyrie eleyson,’ duoque in sinistrâ parte similiter, qui respondeant ‘Christe eleyson,’ nec non et in occidentali parte duo, qui dicant ‘Domine miserere nobis,’ quibus peractis respondeat simul omnis chorus, ‘Christus Dominus factus est obediens usque ad mortem.’ Demum pueri dexterioris chori repetant quæ supra, eodem modo quo supra usquequo chorus finiat, quæ supra: idemque tertio repetant eodem ordine. Quibus tertio finitis, agant tacitas genu flexo more solito preces, qui ordo trium noctium uniformiter teneatur ab illis: qui ut reor ecclesiasticæ compunctionis usus à catholicis ideo repertus est, ut tenebrarum terror (qui tripartitum mundum Dominica passione timore perculit insolito) ac apostolicæ prædicationis consolatio (quæ universo mundo Christum patri usque ad mortem pro generis humani salute obedientem revelaverat) manifestissime designetur. Hæc ergò inserenda censuimus, ut si quibus devotionis gratia complacuerint, habeant in his unde hujus rei ignaros instruant, qui autem noluerint ad hoc agendum minime compellantur.

In quarum noctium sequentibus diebus ad nullam dicitur horam ‘Deus in adjutorium meum,’ sed in directum capitula canonici cursus dicantur: dehinc versus et sequentia. In quintâ vero feriâ eadem capitula altius dicuntur ut ab omnibus audiantur, et vespere, et completorium, cæteris diebus minimè. In supradictis noctibus si matutinæ ante lucem fuerint finiæ, fratres, qui voluerint ad suam redeant requiem, qui autem spiritualia exercitia maluerint cum summo vigilantes silentio (quod eorum animabus expedit) mane facto in cœnâ Domini conveniant ad Primam, quâ sonorè dictâ, et canonico more scilicet 'Deus in nomine tuo, beati immaculati' usque 'Legem pone.' Tunc dicto versu, genu flexo peragant cætera silenter, post 'Pater noster' dicitur silenter 'Vivet anima mea et laudabit te,' usque in finem psalmi, sed Priore perveniente ad confessionis locum facto signo agant confessionem. In cæteris horis similiter residua capitula ad Tertiam à 'Legem pone' usque 'Deficit' alta voce, et versus, et cætera silenter. Ad Sextam à 'Deficit' usque ad 'Mirabilia.' Ad Nonam à 'Mirabilia' usque in finem. Vesperæ similiter sonora voce, unusquisque psalmus cum Antiphonâ, et versus, et Evangelium, et cætera silenter. Completorium æquè sonorè et post primum psalmum canonico more, 'In te Domine speravi i.' et Evangelium, 'Nunc dimittis,' post, 'Pater noster in pace in id ipsum.' His tribus diebus primâ peractâ, psallant psalterium ex integro unanimiter in choro. Post quod Litaniam agant prostrati, deinde lectioni vacent, usque facto signo eant ad calciandum, et reliqua more regulari compleant, facto namque capitulo disalciant se fratres, et intrantes ecclesiam more obedientiæ lavent pavimenta ecclesiæ, sacerdotibus interim cum ministris altaris benedictâ aquâ sacra altaria lavantibus. Eâ enim die non fit celebratio missæ in aliquo altari, donec lavetur: quibus peractis lotis pedibus recalcient se. Sexta peractâ celebretur missa, pauperibus ante ad hoc collectis secundum numerum quem abbas præviderit: dehinc collectis in locum congruum, eant fratres ad agendum mandatum, ubi canentes Antiphonas eidem operi congruentes lavent, et extergant pedes pauperum, atque osculentur, et datâ aquâ manibus eorum, dentur eis etiam cibaria, fiatque secundum abbatis arbitrium in eis distributio nummorum.

Dehinc horâ congruâ agatur Nona. Quâ cantatâ ob arcanum cujusdam mysterii indicium, si ita placuerit, induant se fratres, et pergant ad ostium ecclesiæ ferentes hastam cum imagine serpentis, ibique ignis de silice excutiatur, illo benedicto ab abbate, candela, quæ more serpentis infixâ est, ab illo accendatur. Sicque ædituo hastam deportante cuncti fratres chorum ingrediuntur, unusque dehinc cereus ex illo illuminetur igne. Sextâ feriâ eodem ordine agatur ac à decano portetur. Sabbato similiter, à præpositoque deferatur. Et post hæc celebratio missæ. Ad quam, 'Dominus vobiscum' minimè dicatur, nisi ab episcopo tantummodo ubi chrisma conficitur. A quo etiam in Eucharistiæ acceptatione pacis osculum præbyteris, ter 'Agnus Dei' decantato, solummodo detur, ab aliis vero minime præsumatur: in quâ missâ, sicut et insequentium dierum communicatio præbetur tam fratribus quam cunctis fidelibus, reservatâ nihilominus eâ die Eucharistiâ quæ sufficit ad communicandum cunctis alterâ die: peractâ missæ celebratione omnes ad mixtum pergant: post mixtum quos voluerit abbas ex fratribus secum adsumens suum peragat mandatum, quo peracto vespere celebrent, dehinc refectionem fratrum agant: post quam tempore congruo eorundem agatur mandatum, qui tamen fratres prius pedes suos diligenter emundent, venientesque ad mandatum hebdomadarij ministri, secundum morem suum abbatem antecedentes, mandatum agant, quos sequitur in choncâ suâ singulorum pedes lavans, ministrantibus sibi quos voluerit ad hoc obsequium, quos extergat, et osculetur. Quo peracto resideat abbas in sede suâ, veniantque Priores, et ei eadem exhibeant, deinde surgens det aquam in manibus singulorum rursumque ei eadem servitus exhibeatur. Inde verò dum manus lavant, diaconus hebdomadarius, et reliqui ministri eant, et induant se, signoque collationis moto ingrediantur, diacono dalmaticâ induto cum textu evangelii, præcedentibus cereis, et turibulo, legaturque evangelium secundum Joannem 'Ante diem festum,' donec tintinnabulum pulsetur: tunc præcedente processione subsequatur omnis congregatio, cunctisque in refectorio residentibus idem diaconus stans prosequatur evangelii sequentia imposito super ambone evangelio. Interim abbas propinando circueat fratres cum singulis potibus singulorum osculans manus, quâ peractâ ministratione residente abbate dicatur, 'Tu autem Domine.' Tunc a Priore propinetur abbati, et reliquis ministris qui assistebant. Evangelioque finito potibusque haustis procedat processio, et exuant se fratres, sintque cum reliquis ad complendum.

Primam, discalciati omnes incedant quousque crux adoretur. Eâdem enim die horâ nonâ abbas cum fratribus accedat ad ecclesiam, qui dum peractâ oratione cum ministris altaris more solito indutus fuerit veniens de sacrario ante altaria orationis gratiâ inde cum silentio ad sedem accedat propriam, tunc subdiaconus ascendat ad legendum lectionem Oseæ prophetæ ‘In tribulatione sua,’ sequitur responsorium, ‘Domine audivi;’ cum quatuor versibus: postea dicitur Oratio ab Abbate cum genuflexione, ‘Deus a quo et Judas.’ Deinde legitur alia lectio, ‘Dixit Dominus ad Moysen,’ sequitur tractus, ‘Eripe me Domine.’ Postea legitur, ‘Passio Domini nostri Jesu Christi secundum Joannem.’ Ad illam Passionem diaconus non dicat, ‘Dominus vobiscum,’ sed ‘Passio Domini,’ et reliqua, nullo respondente, ‘Gloria tibi Domine;’ et quando legitur in evangelio ‘Partiti sunt vestimenta mea,’ et reliqua, statim duo diaconi nudent altare sindone, quæ prius fuerat sub evangelio posita in modum furantium: post hoc celebrentur orationes, et veniens abbas ante altare incipiat orationes solennes, quæ sequuntur, et dicat primam sine genuflexione, quasi legendo, ‘Oremus dilectissimi nobis,’ et reliqua.

Quibus expletis per ordinem, statim præparetur crux ante altare, interposito spatio inter ipsam et altare, sustentata hinc et inde à duobus diaconibus. Tunc cantent ‘Popule meus,’ respondententes autem duo subdiaconi stantes ante crucem canant Græcè ‘Agios o Theos, Agios Yschiros, Agios athanatos eleyson emas.’ Itemque schola id ipsum Latine, ‘Sanctus Deus.’ Deferatur tunc ab ipsis diaconibus ante altare, et eos accolitus cum pulvillo sequatur, super quem sancta crux ponatur. Antiphonâque finitâ quam schola respondet Latine canant ibidem sicut prius, ‘Quia eduxi vos per desertum.’ Idem verò respondeant subdiaconi Græcè sicut prius ‘Agios,’ ut supra; itemque schola Latine ut prius, ‘Sanctus Deus:’ itemque diaconi levantes crucem canant sicut prius, ‘Quid ultra.’ Item subdiaconi sicut prius, ‘Agios,’ ut supra; itemque schola Latine ‘Sanctus Deus,’ ut supra. Post hæc vertentes se ad clerum nudatâ cruce dicant Antiphonam, ‘Ecce lignum crucis:’ Antiphonam, ‘Crucem tuam adoramus:’ Antiphonam, ‘Dum fabricator mundi: Pange lingua.’ Illic eâ nudatâ veniat abbas ante crucem sanctam ac tribus vicibus se prosternat cum omnibus fratribus dexteris chori, scilicet senioribus ac junioribus, et cum magno cordis suspirio septem pœnitentiæ psalmos cum orationibus sanctæ cruci competentibus decantando peroret.

In primâ quidem oratione tres psalmos primos cum oratione, ‘Domine Jesu Christe, adoro te in crucem ascendentem, deprecor te, ut ipsa crux liberet me de diabolo percutiente: Domine Jesu Christe adoro te in ipsa vulneratum, deprecor te ut ipsa vulnera remedium sint animæ meæ: Domine Jesu Christe adoro te descendentem ad inferos liberare captivos, deprecor te ut non ibi me dimittas introire: Domine Jesu Christe adoro te resurgentem ab inferis ascendentem ad cœlos, deprecor te miserere mei: Domine Jesu Christe adoro te venturum judicaturum, deprecor te ut in tuo adventu non intres in iudicio cum me peccante, sed deprecor te, ut ante dimittas, quam iudices, qui vivas et regnas.’

In secundâ duos medios cum sequente oratione, ‘Domine Jesu Christe gloriosissime conditor mundi qui cum sis splendor gloriæ coæternus Patri, Sanctoque Spiritui, ideo dignatus es carnem ex immaculata Virgine sumere, et gloriosas palmas tuas in crucis patibulo permisisti configere ut claustra dissipares inferni, et humanum genus liberares de morte; respice, et miserere mihi misero oppresso facinorum pondere multarumque nequitiarum labe polluto, non me digneris derelinquere piissime Pater, sed indulge, quod impiè gessi. Exaudi me prostratum coram adoranda gloriosissima cruce tua ut mercar tibi mundus adsistere, et placere conspectui tuo, qui cum Patre.’

A tertiâ ultimos duos cum oratione, ‘Domine omnipotens Jesu Christe, qui tuas manus mundas propter nos in cruce posuisti, et de tuo sancto sanguine nos redemisti, mitte in me sensum, et intelligentiam quomodo habeam veram pœnitentiam, et habeam bonam perseverantiam omnibus diebus vitæ meæ, Amen.’ Et eam humiliter deosculans surgat. De hinc sinisteris chori omnes fratres eadem mente devota peragant, nam salutatâ ab abbate vel omnibus cruce redeat ipse abbas ad sedem suam usque dum omnis clerus ac populos hoc idem faciat, nam quia eâ die depositionem corporis salvatoris nostri celebramus usum quorundam religiosorum imitabilem ad fidem indocti vulgi, ac neophitorum corroborandam æquiparando, sequi si ita cui visum fuerit vel sibi taliter placuerit hoc modo decrevimus, sit autem in una parte altaris, quâ vacuum fuerit, quædam assimilatio sepulchri velamenque quoddam in giro tensum, in quod dum sancta crux adorata fuerit deponatur hoc ordine. Veniant diaconi, qui prius portaverunt eam, et involvant eam sindone in loco ubi adorata est, tunc reportent eam canentes Antiphonas: 'In pace in id ipsum: habitabit,' Item, 'Caro mea requiescet in spe:' donec veniant ad locum monumenti, depositâque cruce ac si Domini nostri Jesu Christi corpore sepulto dicant Antiphonam, 'Sepulto Domino signatum est monumentum ponentes milites, qui custodirent eum.' In eodem loco sancta crux cum omni reverentiâ custodiatur, usque Dominicam noctem resurrectionis: nocte vero ordinentur duo fratres aut tres aut plures si tanta fuerit congregatio, qui ibidem psalmos decantando excubias fideles exerceant, quibus peractis egrediantur diaconus ac subdiaconus de sacrario cum corpore Domini, quod pridie remansit, et calice cum vino non consecrato, et ponant super altare, tunc sacerdos veniat ante altare, et dicat voce sonora: 'Oremus; Præceptis salutaribus moniti, et Pater noster,' inde 'Liberanos quæsumus Domine,' usque 'Per omnia sæcula sæculorum:' et sumat Abbas de sancto sacrificio, et ponat in calicem nihil dicens, et communicent omnes cum silentio: hoc expleto vespertinum officium canat unusquisque privatim in loco suo, quo peracto refectorium petant. Surgentes autem a mensâ cætera more solito peragant, crucis vero veneratione peractâ, quibus vacuum fuerit ministri vel pueri se radant, ac balneent, si tanta fuerit cohors societatis, ut sabbati crastini ad hoc non sufficiat dies, completorium verò post collationem unusquisque in loco suo stans semotim, ac silenter more canonicorum, ut supra diximus, decantet, et consueto more cætera compleat, his verò tribus diebus in refectorio omnia cum benedictione, et in Capitulo more agantur solito.

Qualiter diurna, sive nocturna laus Paschali festivitate agatur.

SABBATO sancto, horâ nonâ veniente abbate in ecclesiam cum fratribus, novus, ut supra dictum est, afferatur ignis. Posito verò cereo ante altare ex illo accendatur igne. Quem diaconus more solito benedicens, hanc orationem quasi voce legentis proferens dicat: 'Exultet tam Angelica turba cœlorum.' Tunc voce sublimiore dicat, 'Sursum corda,' et reliqua. Finitâ benedictione accendatur alter cereus, et tunc illuminantur duo cerei tenentibus duobus accolitis, unus in dextro cornu altaris, et alter in sinistro. Benedictione peractâ ascendat subdiaconus ambonem, legat lectionem primam, 'In principio creavit,' sequitur oratio à Priore, 'Oremus: Deus qui mirabiliter.' Secunda lectio, 'Factum est in vigilia:' tractus, 'Cantemus Domino:' sequitur oratio, 'Oremus: Deus cujus antiqua miracula:' iij. lect. 'Hæc est hæreditas:' collecta, 'Deus qui ecclesiam tuam:' tractus, 'Sicut servus.' Sequitur oratio, 'Concede quæsumus omnipotens Deus.' Finitâ oratione inchoentur Litanie septenæ ad introitum ante altare. Postea descendat abbas cum scholâ canentes Litanias quinas ad fontes benedicendos. Sequitur, 'Omnipotens sempiterne Deus,' et præfatio: his expletis redeunt ad altare cum Litanîâ ternâ, et antequam cantatur, 'Gloria in excelsis Deo,' magister scholæ dicat altâ voce, 'Attendite.' Et tunc illuminentur omnia luminaria ecclesiæ, et abbate incipiente 'Gloria in excelsis Deo,' pulsantur omnia signa: sequitur collecta, 'Deus qui hanc sacratissimam noctem:' deinde legitur epistola, 'Si consurrexistis,' et cantatur Alleluia, 'Confitemini Domino,' et tractus, 'Laudate Dominum.' Ante evangelium non portantur luminaria in ipsâ nocte sed incensum tantum. Finito evangelio dicat abbas, 'Dominus vobiscum, Oremus:' in ipso die non cantatur 'Offertorium,' nec 'Agnus Dei,' nec 'Communio,' et pacem non debent dare nisi iis, qui communicant, sed interim dum communicantur Alleluia, et 'Laudate Dominum omnes gentes' cantatur, dehinc Antiphona, 'Vesperæ autem sabbati,' et 'Magnificat.' Sic sacerdos missam ac vespertinalem sinaxim unâ compleat oratione; eâdem verò die tempore mandati aquâ manibus tantum datâ a ministro fratribus charitatis officio præbeatur. Completorium sonoriter celebretur more canonicorum.

In die sancto Paschæ septem canonicæ horæ à monachis in ecclesiâ Dei more canonicorum propter auctoritatem beati Gregorii papæ sedis apostolicæ, quam ipse Antiphonario dictavit celebrandæ sunt. Eiusdem tempore noctis antequam matutinorum signa moveantur sumant æditui crucem, et ponant in loco sibi congruo: in primis ad nocturnam ab abbate, seu quolibet sacerdote, dum initur laus Dei in ecclesiâ, dicatur; ‘Domine labia mea aperies’ semel tantum: postea, ‘Deus in adiutorium meum intende,’ cum ‘Gloria.’ Psalmo autem ‘Domine, quid multiplicati sunt,’ dimisso, cantor incipiat Invitatorium: tunc tres Antiphonæ cum tribus psalmis, quibus finitis versus conveniens dicatur: deinde tot lectiones cum responsoriis ad hoc ritè pertinentibus, dum tertia recitatur lectio, quatuor fratres induant se, quorum unus albâ indutus ac si ad aliud agendum ingrediatur, atque latenter sepulchri locum adeat, ibique manu tenens palmam quietus sedeat, dumque tertium percelebratur Responsorium residui tres succedant, omnes quidem capis induti turibula cum incensu manibus gestantes, ac pedetentim ad similitudinem quærentium quid, veniant ad locum sepulchri: aguntur enim hæc ad imitationem angeli sedentis in monumento, atque mulierum cum aromatibus venientium ut ungerent corpus Jesu. Cum ergò ille residens tres velut erroneos, ac aliquid quærentes viderit sibi adproximare, incipiat mediocri voce dulcisonè cantare, ‘Quem quæritis?’ quo decantato fine tenus, respondeant hi tres uno ore; ‘Jesu Nazarenum:’ quibus ille, ‘Non est hic, surrexit sicut prædixerat. Ite nunciate, quia surrexit a mortuis.’ Cujus missionis voce vertant se illi tres ad chorum dicentes, ‘Alleluia, surrexit Dominus.’ Dicto hoc rursus ille residens veluti revocans illos dicat Antiphonam, ‘Venite, et videte locum.’ Hæc vero dicens surgat, et erigat velum, ostendatque eis locum cruce nudatum, sed tantum lintheamina posita, quibus crux involuta erat, quo viso deponant thuribula, quæ gestaverunt in eodem sepulchro, sumantque lintheum, et extendant contra clerum, ac veluti ostendentes, quod surrexerit Dominus et jam non sit illo involutus, hanc canant Antiphonam, ‘Surrexit Dominus de sepulchro,’ superponantque lintheum altari, finitâ Antiphonâ Prior congaudens pro triumpho regis nostri, quod devicta morte surrexit, incipiat hymnum ‘Te Deum laudamus,’ quo incepto una pulsantur omnia signa, post cuius finem dicat sacerdos versum: ‘In resurrectione tua Christe,’ verbo tenus, et iniciat matutinas, dicens, ‘Deus in adiutorium meum intende,’ et a cantore ilicò inchoetur Antiphona cum psalmo ‘Dominus regnavit,’ quia ‘Deus misereatur nostri;’ hoc non canitur in loco, sed cum, ‘Deus Deus meus ad te de luce,’ conjunctim canonicorum more. Quinque psalmis jure peractis cum Antiphonis sibi ritè pertinentibus capitulo etiam à presbytero, versuque ‘Surrexit Dominus de sepulchro,’ ut mos est à puero dicto, inicietur Antiphona in evangelia, qua peractâ dicatur collecta de omnibus sanctis more solito. His septem diebus non canimus.

Ad Primam iiij. psalmi, ‘Deus in nomine tuo,’ et ‘Confitemini Domino,’ prima tantum feria: ‘Beati, Retribue,’ cum ‘Alleluia,’ et capitulo, et versu, ‘Hæc dies’ directo à puero prolato, deinde, ‘Kyrie eleyson,’ et Oratio Dominica cum Symbolo, nec non et preces solito ritu, subsequente collectâ. Ad Tertiam, psalmum ‘Legem pone, Memor esto, Bonitatem,’ cum ‘Alleluia’ et Gra. ‘Hæc dies’ sine capitulo, et versu. Similiter ad Sextam. Ad Nonam. Ad Vesperam, ‘Dixit Dominus; Confitebor; Beatus vir;’ cum Antiphona sine capitulo, Gra. ‘Hæc dies’ sine versu, ‘Alleluia,’ cum versu, et sequentia. Postea inchoetur Antiphona in evangelio, et collecta: dehinc eatur ad fontes, psalmum ‘Laudate Pueri,’ cum Antiphonâ canentes, quem sequatur collecta. Inde vero revertentes chorum vel oratorium, quod eis competens videbitur adeant, psalmum ‘In exitu Israel’ decantantes, quem propria sequatur collecta. Completorium more peragatur canonicorum per omnia. Finitis enim psalmis subsequatur capitulum, et versus: exhinc ‘Nunc dimittis’ cum Antiphonâ concinitur consequentibus horæ precibus cum collectâ, et benedictione. Hic in reliquis sex diebus teneatur ordo.

VESPERA verò octavarum Paschæ ordo jam regularis pleniter inchoetur, et una tantum lectio memoriter ac breve Responsorium festivis diebus ad nocturnam uti regula præcipit tota æstate dicantur. In natalitiis tamen sanctorum, in quibus ab operis labore non cessatur tria responsoria, et tres lectiones ad ipsius sancti venerationem cujus memoriam recolimus pertinentes prolixè si ita tempus permiserit legantur. In aliis verò festivitibus ubi ab operis labore cessatur, xij. lectiones cum totidem responsoriis, et psalmis competentibus uti diebus Dominicis decentissimè æstivo sicut hiemali tempore legantur; quotidianis vero noctibus, in quibus xij. responsoria minimè canuntur, nocturnis finitis parvissimum uti regula præcipit fiat intervallum: dehinc facto signo canantur matutinæ, quod si luce diei ut oportet matutinæ fuerint finitæ egredientes ecclesiam fratres calcient se, lavent, peractisque in ecclesiâ tribus orationibus, sedentes in claustro vacent lectioni, usque dum signum Primæ auditum fuerit. Si vero necdum dies fuerit, sicque Priori visum fuerit, facto signo, qui voluerint lectulis suis pausent usque dum manè facto agant ut supra dictum est, totâ enim æstate exceptis Dominicis, et festivis diebus Primâ decantatâ, matutinalique missâ celebratâ, capitulo etiam peracto pulsetur tabula ut supra dictum est, et quicquid agendum est agatur, usque dum primum signum Tertie sonuerit. Tertiâ vero peractâ et missâ subsequente celebratâ uti regula præcipit, sedentes in claustro fratres vacent lectioni, usque dum mediante horâ quintâ primum signum Sextæ fuerit auditum; quo peracto canatur Sexta, dehinc manibus lotis adeant mensam: sicque refecti lectulis suis pausent usque dum mediante octavâ horâ, primum Nonæ auditum fuerit signum, quo audito surgant, et se lavent: sicque ecclesiam ingressi, Nonam cantent: Nona vero celebrata, poculisque haustis, dicatur versus 'Deus in adiutorium,' more solito, et quicquid necesse fuerit etiam tunc operentur, cæteris enim horis, secundum regulæ præceptum, quia tempus lectionis est, lectioni tantummodò vacantes, silentium diligenti curâ in claustro custodiant, nam et omni tempore à primo pulsu vespertinalis sinaxis silentium teneatur in claustro usquequo capitulum finiatur alterius diei, excepto auditorij loco: qui et ab hoc maximè eo censetur nomine, quod ibi audiendum sit, quid a præceptore jubeatur, non vero fabulis aut otiosis ibi, aut alicubi vacari loquelis oportet: nam cum regulæ auctoritas omni tempore silentio studendum dicat, opportuno tamen tempore de rebus necessariis pro taciturnitatis gravitate uti patronus noster beatus Benedictus non altâ sed submissâ voce loquendum permisimus: aliâs autem de Deo et animæ suæ salute cum silentio meditandum, uti ipse censuit, hortamur, tempus etiam lectionis tempus est taciturnitatis. Vesperæ verò et matutinæ de omnibus sanctis, ab octavis Paschæ unâ canantur Antiphonâ, usque octavam Pentecostes: vigiliaque pro defunctis, et psalmi pro benefactoribus non solent cani; et Litanie ante missam, quoniam a genuflectione ordo ecclesiasticus declinari ammonet, omni modo intermittantur.

JAM et secundum regulæ præceptum constitui debet aliquis frater, qui totius claustrum sub decano curam gerat, qui ab officio circuitus sui Circa vocatur. Est enim ejus officium sæpius circuire claustrum ne forte inveniatur frater accediosus aut alicui vanitati deditus. Quod si invenerit nullatenus illud debet reticere in capitulo venturi diei, nisi si pro levi quâlibet culpâ frater ille satisfactione humiliatus hoc impetraverit ab illo: qui etiam Circa post completorium circueat claustrum, et si qua invenerit ibi codicum aut vestimentorum asportet ea ad capitulum sequentis diei, nullus enim ea ullatenus tollere debet ab eo loco in quo ea posuerit absque ejus licentia: habeatque ille frater lanternam qua nocturnis horis quibus oportet hæc agere videndo consideret, quique, dum lectiones leguntur ad nocturnos, in tertiâ vel quartâ lectione prout viderit expedire circumeat chorum, et si fratrem invenerit somno oppressum anteponat ille laternam, et revertatur, qui mox excusso somno petat veniam genu flexo, et arreptâ eadem laternâ pergyret et ipse chorum, et si quem hujusmodi morbo somni affectum invenerit agat illi sicut et ipsi factum est, revertaturque in locum suum.

INCIPIUNT orationes cum lectionibus, atque canticis, quæ dicuntur in vigiliis Pentecostes, ante descensum fontis. Prima lectio, 'Tentavit Deus;' sequitur oratio, 'Deus qui in Abrahæ.' Secunda lectio, 'Apprehendent;' canticum, 'Attendent cœlum;' sequitur oratio, 'Deus qui nobis per prophetarum.' Tertia lectio, 'Apprehendent;' canticum, 'Vinea facta;' sequitur oratio, 'Deus qui nos ad celebrandum.' Quarta lectio, 'Audi Israel:' sequitur oratio, 'Deus qui incommutabilis;' canticum, 'Sicut cervus.' Sequitur oratio: 'Concede quæsumus;' finitâ oratione inchoantur Litanie septenæ ad introitum ante altare. Postea descendat abbas cum scholâ canente Litanias quinas ad fontes benedicendos: sequitur oratio et præfatio. His expletis redeunt ad altare cum Litania ternâ: quo finito dicat sacerdos, 'Gloria in excelsis Deo.' Sequitur oratio, 'Præsta quæsumus:' postea legitur epistola, 'Cum Apollo;' et cantatur, 'Alleluia, Confitemini Domino;' et tractus, 'Laudate.' Deinde missa secundum ordinem. Post refectionem verò, tempore congruo vesperæ cæteraque celebrantur more solito. Illâ Dominicâ nocte tribus psalmis totidemque lectionibus cum responsorio agitur nocturna laus, uti in Antiphonario titulatur: cæteris vero horis diei, et hebdomadæ sequentis regularis ordo teneatur. Sed et vesperæ sabbati, et ipsius diei sancti normaliter psallantur. Illa hebdomada Pentecostes solemniter celebratur sicut Paschalis, excepto quod jejuniis diebus, 'Gloriæ in excelsis Deo' non canitur, et 'Alleluia,' pro gradualibus canitur, et vesperæ de omnibus sanctis dicuntur. Rursus in octavis Dominicâ non repetitur 'Spiritus Domini,' eo quod septem tantum colimus dona Spiritus Sancti, sed agitur illâ hebdomadâ de sanctâ Trinitate.

Sabbato Dominicalis vesperæ canatur hymnus, 'Deus creator omnium:' ad Completorium, 'Te lucis ante terminum:' ad Nocturnas, 'Nocte surgentes:' ad Matutinas, 'Ecce jam noctis.' Iste ordo totâ æstate teneatur usque calend. Novembris, ad ipsas vero calend. longiores ut supra dictum est hymni dicantur, et finitis duobus psalmis, qui post nocturnas dicuntur, agatur vigilia, quæ pro brevitate dierum vespere non poterat agi nisi his tantum diebus festis, quibus cœnaturi sunt fratres: tunc enim cœnâ factâ agant vigiliam ministris interim cœnantibus ut postmodum juxta regulæ dictum omnes occurrant ad collationem. Hic ordo vigiliæ, usque ad caput quadragesimæ ita teneatur. In quadragesimâ verò post cœnam, et sic demum in totius longitudine æstatis vespere custodiatur post cœnam aut post vespertinalem laudem si cœna defuerit.

Quatuor temporibus, quæ ecclesiasticè custodiuntur ad missæ celebrationem dicitur a diacono, 'Flectamus genua,' quadragesimali more, et eorundem, quorum in quadragesimâ fit abstinencia ciborum cum magnâ custodiatur diligentia, excepto dum in Pentecostes hebdomadâ evenerit, tum enim aliquantulum remissius pro tantæ solemnitatis reverentiâ agi opportunum duximus.

Qualiter mandatum quotidianis diebus à fratribus exhibeatur pauperibus, et quo ordine Abbas erga peregrinos agat.

MANDATUM, quod ex Dominico tenemus exemplo, sacræ etiam regulæ monitu, eo excepto, quod sibi invicem exhibent fratres, pauperibus summâ cum diligentia præbeatur, in quibus Christus adoretur, qui et suscipitur. Sint igitur in unoquoque monasterio singula loca ad hoc constituta ubi pauperum fiat susceptio: omnique die sine intermissione tres ex his, qui continuò in monasterio pascuntur eligantur pauperes, quibus ejusdem mandati exhibeatur obsequium, quique eisdem pascantur victualibus quibus fratres utuntur; hoc ergò modo illuc eundi ordinem prosequantur; scilicet sabbato pueri dextri chori cum uno custode illud peragant: sequenti die Dominicâ residui pueri sinistri cum altero custode: deindi singulis diebus hebdomadæ ad unamquamque feriam tot constituentur fratres ad hoc agendum, ut extra abbatem nullus ab hoc debito servitutis excusetur, qui tamen abbas non unâ tantum feriâ sed sæpius dum ei vacuum fuerit, utque opportunitas dictaverit, sese ad hoc agendum impendat: de cætero supervenientibus peregrinis pauperibus, abbas cum fratribus, quos elegerit secundum regulæ præceptum mandati exhibeat obsequium: omnia igitur humanitatis officia in hospitio pater ipse si quomodò potuerit, vel fratrum quilibet devotissimè præbeat, ne aliquid in eorum obsequio quod regula præcipit, timore seductus vel oblivione nemo deceptus insipienter prætermittat, hoc solummodò, quod sancti patres ob animæ salutem virtutumque potius custodiam quam ad regulæ contemptum synodali statuerant concilio, magnopere custodito ut videlicet in monasterio degens extra refectorium nec ipse abbas nec fratrum quispiam nisi causâ infirmitatis manducet, vel bibat; cætera omnia uti diximus cum magnâ animi alacritate devotissimus impleat: nec pauperibus æterni Christi vicarius in hospitio competenti tardus ac tepidus ministrare differendo desistat, qui celer ac fervidus divitibus caducis ministrando occurrere desiderat. Proficiscentibus verò peregrinis secundum quod loci suppetit facultas eis impendatur victualium solatium.

SABBATO, secundum regulæ præceptum, mandatum, et munditias diligenti curâ exerceant, et qualiter fieri debeant, qui adhuc nesciunt solliciti discant, solito more studiosi compleant: nullus quippiam quamvis parum suâ ac quasi propriâ adinventione agere præsumat, nec in ecclesiâ horas celebrando constitutas, nec claustro uti regula præcipit egredi, nec parum quid sine Prioris licentiâ superbiæ timore inflatus audeat. Calceamentorum unctio, vestimentorumque ablutio, et aquæ administratio, non aspernetur, sed ab universis, si Domini gratia vires concesserit, tempore opportuno consuetè peragatur. Coquinæ, ac pistrinæ, cæterarumque rerum officia, uti sancta regula præcipit, unusquisque prout vires suppetunt gratulabundus exhibeat, ne regulæ præceptorum minima parvipendendo prætereat, ac sic dicente apostolo omnium mandatorum, quod absit, reus existat.

CUM ad debitum communis fragilitatis exsolvendum, quis vocatus fuerit dum senserit se nimiâ invalidudine pergravari ita ut jam non possit portari, veniat frater ille ante abbatem vel cunctam congregationem, et infirmitatis suæ causas exponat, et sic omnium acceptâ benedictione ingrediatur domum infirmorum omnibus pro eo sollicitis in suis interventionibus, in eâ itaque domo servitores sint Dei timore fraternoque amore ferventes, qui ei in quibuscumque indiguerit suppeditent, aut si necesse fuerit cum sollicito fratre famulorum adhibeatur obsequium: frater autem ille infirmus si senserit suam crevisse imbecillitatem, indicetur hoc conventui à fratre illius custode, ex eo ergò quotidie post matutinalem missam sacerdos casulâ exutus cum reliquis illius ministris missæ eucharistiam ferentes præcedentibus cereis, et turibulo cum omni congregatione eant ad visitandum infirmum canentes psalmos pœnitentiales

CONSTITUTIONES CAPITULI GENERALIS,

Celebrati a Monachis Ordinis Sancti Benedicti Provinciæ Cantuariensis in Monasterio Sancti Andreae Apostoli apud Northampton, Anno Incarnationis Dominicæ, M.CC.XXV.

[Ex pervetusto Codice Manuscripto,^a qui inscribitur, Matricula de Camerâ Abbatis Sancti Augustini Cantuariensis, fideliter
exscriptæ.]

DE Evesham et de Abindon Dei gratia abbates universis prælati, et subditis communis Capituli monachorum in provincia Cantuariensi constitutis salutem. Anno incarnationis Dominicæ M.CC.XXV. in die sancti Mathæi apostoli, in monasterio sancti Andreae apostoli apud Northampton, celebratum fuit Capitulum, præsentibus^b nobis in eodem Capitulo, de abbatibus et prioribus ibidem præsentibus, communi consensu ad hoc propositis. Quia igitur statuta Capituli jampridem apud sanctum Albanum celebrati, propter decessum bonæ memoriæ abbatis sancti Augustini Cantuariensis, qui eidem Capitulo cum me abbate de Evesham præsidebat, debitum non fuerunt sortita effectum: a nobis, et a præscriptis patribus in hoc Capitulo apud Northampton congregatis, fuit provisum, ut statuta prædicti Capituli sancti Albani plenissimè tradantur executioni, quibusdam tamen additis, quibusdam autem declaratis, nullo verò subtracto. Fuit forma Capituli taliter.

De Evesham et de Sancto Augustino Dei gratia abbates, universis collegis nigri ordinis per Cantuariensem provinciam constitutis, pacem, prosperitatem, salutem perpetuam. Ad hoc ex suscepti regiminis officio obligatos nos esse reputamus, ut superiorum mandata devote suscipere, suscepta humiliter adimplere, quantum nobis datum est desuper, affectuosissimè teneamur: cum igitur, ut ferè omnibus innotuit, apud Oxoniam convenissent venerabiles patres ordinis nostri, ad providentiam et reformationem eorum, quæ ad salutem omnium nostrorum observanda forent, ex magnâ deliberatione actum est, ut iterato apud sanctum Albanum reverendi patres præscripti convenirent in proximè sequenti exaltatione sanctæ crucis, statuta, quæ ibidem essent, observaturi, sub hac formâ, ut si quid offensionis, vel perturbationis ex præmissis apud aliquos emersisset, communicato concilio mutaretur in melius, si quid minus actum in bonum, augmentum reciperet, si quid superfluum, resecaretur, ea propter præfato termino, apud sanctum Albanum, in generali Capitulo, ad honorem Dei et sanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ, juxta statuta concilii Lateranensis secundi, anno Domini Honorii papæ quarto nobis præsentibus, invocatâ Spiritus Sancti gratiâ, diligenti et diutino tractatu habito, ad pacis et unitatis observantiam firmissime roborandam statuta primi Capituli nostri, quæ quibusdam infirmioribus videbantur onerosa, et importabilia, communi et consonâ voluntate abbatum et priorum nobis assidentium, cum moderatione declarata sunt.

De Abbatibus.

Imprimis, dictante Spiritu Sancto, unanimi consensu statuerunt ut ipsi abbates habitu et gestu regulariter se habentes, in Capitulo, in claustro, pro audiendis confessionibus et fratribus exemplariter instruendis, in choro etiam, et pro divinis officiis, studeant opportunè interesse, quoties nec corporalis infirmitas, seu debilitas, nec ecclesiæ necessitas, sive utilitas, vel alia rationabilis causa fuerit impedimento.

De non alienandis.

Deinde placuit universis ne prælati in terris vel redditibus monasterii, ad manifestam lesionem, perpetuam alienationem facere præsumant: vel terras consuetudinarias in libertatem alicujus concedere vel donare, vel novas consuetudines facere, sine assensu Capituli; nec alicui hæreditarie^a vel liberationes aliquo titulo concedere.

De Familia.

Sed quia prælati ipsi per quasdam superfluitates notari dicuntur, et monasteria gravari: communi deliberatione providerunt, ne aliquis prælatorum servientes habeat numero, vel apparatu honestum modum excedentes, unde Ordo Monachalis in aliquo possit argui levitatis.

De Stipendiis.

Et ne post decessum prælatorum per servientium exactionem pro impensis obsequiis contingat monasteria, vel conventus^b vexari: à prælatis, quibus serviunt, annua, et certa stipendia percipiant servientes.

De Vecturis.

Similiter etiam provisum est de vecturis, ut nullus numerum excedat^c nisi rationabilis causa aliud inducat: sed studeat quilibet pro Deo et sanctæ religionis reverentiâ dictum numerum, quantum poterit, coarctare.

De Proprietate.

Inhærentes etiam vestigiis concilii Lateranensis primi, decreverunt ne monachi pretio recipiantur, nec peculium habere permittantur, nisi pro injunctâ sibi administratione, sub pœna dicti concilii contra venientibus infligenda: in quo de proprietariis ita cautum est; viventes à communione altaris removeantur, et qui in extremo cum peculio inventi fuerint, nec oblatio pro eis fiat, nec inter fratres recipiant sepulturam. Prioratus autem, vel^d obedientiæ pretii donatione nulli tradantur. Monachi singuli in locis suis morentur. Infra vigesimum annum monachi non recipiantur nisi commendabilis utilitas aliud induxerit.

De Silentio.

Adhuc salubriter provisum est, ut silentium debitis locis, horis, et temporibus ab omnibus firmiter observetur: et in promissis colloquiis, in claustro, et alibi, a turpiloquiis, et vaniloquiis, et scurrilitatibus^e abstinenceatur, contra facientes regulari subiaceant disciplinæ. Lecti etiam monachorum ita sint ordinati ut videri possint dormientes.

De Hospitalitate.

Hospitalitas omnibus modis, juxta facultates loci, observetur; signa vero non necessària, in choro, in refectorio, et aliis locis indebitis non fiant: et quia sacrâ attestante scripturâ, tam animæ, quam corpori salutifera est abstinentia, de jejunio monachorum nihil aliud volumus esse statutum, nisi quod in regula beati Benedicti continetur; salvâ pro loco, et pro tempore piâ consideratione circa juniores, debiles, et infirmos, secundum diversorum monasteriorum regularem consuetudinem. Ut pauperes debitis eleemosinis non fraudentur, firmiter præceperunt, ut omnia apponenda sine diminutione apponantur in conventu, et alibi, ubi monachi reficiuntur, et de omnibus appositis totum residuum sine diminutione in eleemosynam cedat per eleemosynarium indigentibus fideliter erogandum: qui contrafecerit in Capitulo^a graviori disciplinæ subjaceat; præidentem verò ab hac necessitate exceperunt.

De Vestimentis.

De vestimentis et calciamentis monachorum statuerunt, ut ordinata sint omnino; coopertoria sint de albo vel nigro panno, vel de russeto, cum pellibus agninis albis vel nigris, vel pellibus murileginis, vel lupinis; cappæ monachorum nigræ sint, et hæc prædicta congruis temporibus sine difficultate dentur, et accipientur. Camerarius, qui aliter fecerit, vel Monachus contra faciens graviori disciplinæ subjaceat. Camerarius vero denarios, vel quidlibet aliud pro prædictis, vel aliis ad usus monachorum pertinentibus, dare non audeat; sed nec monachus aliquam permutationem recipere præsumat. Immò secundum institutionem regulæ, recipiens nova det vetera, pauperibus fideliter eroganda. Cellas, et omnia ad cubiculum pertinentia^b habeant ordinata.

De Evagationibus.

Evagationes monachorum penitus inhibeantur, et si pro necessitate ecclesiæ,^c vel pro aliqua justâ causâ ex permissione prælati proficiscantur; provideatur ut cum maturis servientibus et vecturis sufficientibus, et apparatu honesto secundum facultatem ecclesiæ procedant, et die præfixo à prælato revertantur, nisi de justâ causâ ulterioris moræ prælatos suos certificent. Omnes superfluitates tam in cibis quam in potibus, et aliis secundum quod decet prælatus amputet: salvis bonis et approbatis consuetudinibus in singulis monasteriis.

De Cibis.

Omnes etiam singularitates in cibis et potibus, in refectoriis prohibeantur, et ut competentius^d fratres, qui pondus diei, et æstus portant, ex permissione prælati^e recreationem accipiant, provideatur locus honestus, juxta refectorium, si fieri potest, vel alius competens, à quo monachi, cum recreati fuerint, ad claustrum, ad horas canonicas, cum maturitate festinent: ita quod ipsi, qui post completorium moram faciunt, reprehensione dignam notabili, graviori per prælatos suos in crastino subjaceant disciplinæ, et etiam ipsi simul compleant, illi autem qui recreationem recipiunt, nullis omninò admisceantur monachis vel laicis, ante prandium vel post, (nisi custodes ordinis servientes ad hoc deputati) nisi de permissione prælati,^f et hoc pro necessitate, sed quilibet servientibus ad hoc deputatis contentus sit.

De Rationibus reddendis.

Nullus monachus det vel accipiat aliquid absque superioris sui licentiâ, et licet hoc claustrales necesse habeant observare: omnes obedientiarii hoc maxime observent, sub pœna excommunicationis; præcaventes ne bona sibi commissa distrahant aut consumant: sed ea in utilitatibus ecclesiæ fideliter expendant, et secundum exceptas et expensas, eo modo et ordine quo factæ fuerint, fideles prælato reddant rationes, adhibitis ei de discretioribus secundum^a factum. Quod ut melius et firmiter observent, omnes qui impias^b fraudes fecerint, et omnes conspiratores, et omnes proprietarii, omnes fures, omnes qui aliis crimen falsò imponunt, ab omnibus prælatis in generali Capitulo constitutis denunciati sunt excommunicati.

De Excommunicatione.

Et statutum est ab eisdem, ut quolibet anno, in secundâ feriâ primæ hebdomadæ quadragesimæ, a singulis prælatis in suis Capitulis publicè denuncientur excommunicati.

Qui sunt Conspiratores.

Conspiratores autem vocantur,^c qui inter se confœderantur ad subversionem ordinis, vel statutorum salubriter à majoribus, vel ad persecutionem alicujus prælati, vel fratris ex odio, vel ambitione, vel qui alios maliciôsè defendunt.

Qui sunt Proprietarii.

Proprietarios autem omnes vocant illos, qui præter conscientiam abbatis vel prioris abbatem proprium non habentis, aliquid sibi possident, quod abbas aut non dedit, aut per miserit.

De Deposito recipiendo.

Nullius depositum in monasterio ab aliquo, nisi de conscientia prælati recipiatur, nec prælatus hoc faciat nisi cum trium fratrum laudabilium testimonio.

De Reversione Fugitivorum.

Ad reprimendam etiam temeritatem exeuntium providè statuerunt ut post exitum redeuntes in loco ultimo recipiantur, et in gradu et ordine quo tunc recipientur, perpetuò permaneant, et omni voce in Capitulo careant: donec prælatus suus, visâ eorum condignâ satisfactione, cum eis duxerit dispensandum.

Quod Statuta Concilii Lateranensis secundi observentur.

Ad hæc, omnia statuta Lateranensis Concilii secundi ordinem nostrum contingentia volumus et præcipimus ab omnibus firmiter et inviolabiliter observari.

De Inobedientibus.

Si qui verò scienter inobedientes deprehensi fuerint mandatis concilii pœnæ gravissimæ subjaceant de prudentia prælati infligendæ: et secundum quantitatem satisfactionis mitigandæ.

Quoniam etiam Capitulum medio tempore inter Capitulum de sancto Albano, et Capitulum Northamptonum apud Bermondseyam convocatum, propter absentiam piæ recordationis abbatis Gloucest. qui eidem Capitulo, cum abbate de sancto Albano debuit præsidere, prout debuit, non processit, ideo^d provisum fuit ab abbatibus tunc ibidem præsentibus, quod in Capitulo Northamptono de Westmon. et Radingia abbates debent^a præsiderere, vel priores monasteriorum suorum, qui vices illorum supplerent illuc pro se mitterent, si in propriis personis venire non possent: et verò si nec ipsi nec priores sui ad idem Capitulum occurrerent, cum summa deliberatione fuit provisum, quod amodò propter absentiam illorum, qui provisib^b sunt ut in Capitulo præsint, nequaquam celebratio Capituli commutetur, sed loco absentium de ibidem præsentiibus alii subrogentur, à patribus ibidem congregatis, sicut in hoc Capitulo provisum est de nobis de Evesham et de Abindon abbatibus.

Provisum insuper fuit in eodem Capitulo apud Northampton, quod si aliquis visitatorum ante completum officium visitationis rationabiliter fuerit præpeditus, quo minus idem officium possit complere: ab abbatibus, qui prædicto Capitulo præfuerunt, alius loco ejus subrogetur, ne pro alicujus defectu visitatio impediatur.

Ad hoc statuerunt ut,^c si quid quæstionis, quod per Capitulum corrigi non posset, vel inter prælatos monasteriorum aliqua controversia orta fuerit: ad illos, qui ultimo Capitulo præfuerunt, deferatur, ut per illorum industriam, et cautelam corrigatur. Et si aliquod negotium in regno ortum fuerit, quod omnes monasteriorum prælatos contingat; cum hoc ad notitiam prædictorum abbatum, qui Capitulo ultimo præfuerunt pervenerit; sicut in Concilio Generali legitur, quod ipsi compescant illos per censuram ecclesiasticam, qui monasteria præsumunt offendere: ita ne monasteria offendantur, convocent omnes prælatos Capituli si fieri potest, sin autem illos, quos pro negotii qualitate viderint convocandos, et pro temporis brevitate possint convocare, ut quod omnes tangit, per omnes, vel per eorum partem saniozem agatur: Quod si aliquid, quod absit, tam difficile emerit in casibus prædictis, quod per ipsos terminari non possit, usque ad Generale Capitulum ejusdem difficultatis definitio differatur. Et hoc idem circa visitatores decreverunt.

Piâ insuper consideratione fuit provisum, quod si aliquod monasterium, quod absit, vel incendio vel alio quocumque casu ad tantam pervenerit paupertatem, quod nec ex se vel per se poterit reformari: ut omnes prælati, vel fratres Capituli, sic studeant ejus defectui succurrere, ut per eorum consilium et auxilium in statum debitum restituatur.

Salubri etiam providentiâ fuit constitutum, ut in quolibet Capitulo celebrando ita tempestivè primo die Capituli conveniant prælati, quod absque impedimento celebrationis Capituli, missa de Spiritu Sancto solemniter in communi ad invocandum auxilium, et gratiam ejusdem, et pro fratribus Capituli possit celebrari: et in eodem Capitulo devotè petentes fraternitatem Capituli in societatem beneficiorum, monasteriorum per participationem admittantur, ad quod defuncti, amicis eorum pro ipsis humiliter intervenientibus, recipiantur. In fine verò Capituli simul omnibus in unum congregatis fiat communis confessio, et tam præsentiũ quam absentium vivorum ac defunctorum fiat fratrum Capituli absolutio, et datâ et acceptâ benedictione cum pace corporaliter ab invicem discedant, per charitatem semper in Christo manentes conjuncti.

Constituti sunt ibi etiam visitatores mittendi, ita quod iter arripiant circiter octo dies post Pascha primum post Capitulum de Northampton, ita quod nulli eorum excedant in equitaturis duodenarium numerum: ut monasteria tam monachorum quam monialium, secundum formam scriptam in Concilio Lateranensi secundo visitent: provideant etiam attentissimè quod statuta Capituli integerrimè in monasteriis observentur: et ut nullus per ignorantiam in adventu Visitorum se possit excusare, constitutum est quod nos qui tunc præsidebamus, mitteremus prædicta Statuta sub sigillis nostris viris discretis per diversos episcopatus, qui ea vicinis prælatis, et subditis sigillis suis signata infra festum sancti Andreae promulganda transmittant.

Et quia multi prælati rationabiliter se excusarunt,^d quidam minus sufficienter, alii vero non venerunt, nec se excusarunt,^d firmiter injunctum est visitoribus ut de causis quare ad Capitulum non venerunt diligentem faciant inquisitionem, et minus sufficienter excusatis firmiter injungant, ut ad Capitulum proximum veniant, vel canonicâ præpeditioe impediti nuntios mittant, ut super his quæ Capitulum dictaverit recipiant. Et ut visitatores melius instruantur in quales^a debeant facere inquisitionem, nomina prælatorum ad Capitulum venientium iis transmisimus.

Ibidem insuper provisum fuit quod à die illo scilicet a die sancti Matthæi, quo celebratum fuit hoc Capitulum apud Northampton infra tres annos in Monasterio de Radingia iterum celebratur Capitulum, et præsidebunt tunc de Westmonasterio et de Burgo Abbates, qui invocata Spiritus Sancti gratiâ, tam in hiis statutis, quam in aliis ordinem nostrum contingentibus, corrigenda corrigant, et statuenda statuunt.

Hæc ergo fratres charissimi, quæ ad salutem animarum et reformationem Ordinis, et regularem observantiam secundum Dominum provisæ sunt, et constituta, exhortamur in Domino ut humiliter, et devotè suscipiantur, affectuose, et fideliter adimpleantur. Visitatores insuper, cum advenerint, auctoritate Concilii cum omni benignitate recipiatis, providentes (ut verbis utamur Concilii) quod cum ad vos accesserint, plus apud vos inveniant, quod commendatione quam correctione sit dignum. Valeat universitas vestra semper in Domino.

MONASTICON ANGLICANUM.

Glastonbury Monastery,

IN

SOMERSETSHIRE.

ABOUT sixty-three years after the Incarnation of our Lord, St. Joseph of Arimathea, accompanied by eleven other disciples of St. Philip,^a was despatched by that apostle into Britain, to introduce in the place of barbarous and bloody rites, long exercised by the bigotted and besotted druids, the meek and gentle system of christianity.^b They succeeded in obtaining from

Arviragus, the British king, permission to settle in a small island, then rude and uncultivated, and to each of the twelve was assigned for his subsistence, a certain portion of land called a hide, comprising a district, denominated to this day, THE TWELVE HIDES OF GLASTON. Their boundaries, as well as the names of the principal places contained in them, will be found in the Appendix, (nos. i. and ii.) They enjoyed all the immunities of regal dignity, from ancient times and the first establishment of christianity in this land. One peculiar privilege which this church possessed by the grant of king Canute, (App. num. lxxvi.) was that no subject could enter this district without the permission of the abbot and convent. It now includes the following parishes: Glastonbury St. Benedict, Glastonbury St. John, Baltonsbury, Bradley, Mere, West-Pennard, and North-Wotton.^c

The name by which the island was distinguished by the Britons, was Ynswytryn, or the Glassy Island, from the colour of the stream which surrounded it. Afterwards it obtained the name of Avallon, either from Aval, an apple, in which fruit it abounded; or from Avallon, a British chief, to whom it formerly belonged.^d The Saxons finally called it Glæsting-byrig.

Here ST. JOSEPH, who is considered by the monkish historians as the first abbot, erected, to the honour of the Virgin Mary, of wreathed twigs, the first christian oratory in England.^e About a century afterwards, ST. PHAGANUS and DIRUVIANUS, two legates of pope Eleutherius, after they had baptized Lucius, the king of the country, prevailed upon him to confirm the grant of the aforementioned district to them and their successors. They then rebuilt the oratory, adding another of stone, which they dedicated to the honour of our Lord and his apostles St. Peter and St. Paul. They likewise built on the top of the hill called the Torr, another oratory to St. Michael the Archangel, "That he might have there honour on earth of men, who at the command of God, should bring men to eternal honours in heaven."^f

ST. PATRICK, the apostle of Ireland, A.D. 433,^g retired to this island, (now become a noted school of sanctity) where he found twelve successors of the disciples of St. Phaganus, and Diruvianus, whose names are enumerated in his charter, (num. v.) and who elected him for their superior. He reduced them to a more regular monastic order, and rebuilt the two dilapidated chapels of St. Michael and the Virgin Mary.

ST. BENIGNUS, who succeeded St. Patrick in the see of Armagh,^h followed the example of his predecessor, and retired to Avallon, as it was then named, and, after St. Patrick's death, succeeded him in his abbotship. About the year 530, St. David, archbishop of Menevia, having put an end to his provincial synod, called the Synod of Victory, took a journey to Avallon, accompanied by seven of his suffragan bishops, and added a chapel to the east side of the church, which he consecrated to the honour of the blessed virgin, and adorned the altar with a sapphire of inestimable value.ⁱ About twelve years afterwards the renowned king Arthur, who was nephew to St. David, having been mortally wounded in the rebellion of his cousin Mordred, at the battle of Camlam, was carried to this abbey, that he might prepare himself more perfectly for his departure out of life, in the society and by the assistance of the holy monks then living there, and might be buried among such a world of saints, as reposed there from the beginning of christianity. Before his death he gave to the monastery Brent-Marsh and Pouldon, and many other lands to the value of 500 marks, (a vast benefaction in those days) which the Anglo-Saxons seized, but afterwards restored. King Arthur was accordingly buried here, and his bones remained unmolested in the monks' cemetery for six hundred and forty years,^k when being found in digging a sepulchre, the relics were removed into the presbytery of the church, and reinterred with the following inscription by abbot Swansey,

"Hic jacet Arthurus, flos Regum, gloria regni, Quem mores, probitas, commendant laude perenni."

The common tradition was, that he suffered only a temporary kind of death, and that he would come again to reassume the sceptre:

*"But for he skaped y^t batell y^e wys, Bretons and Cornysch seyeth thus,
That he levyth yet perde
And schall come and be a kyng aye.
At Glastynbury on the queer,
They made Arter's tombe ther,
And wrote with Latyn vers thus
Hic jacet Arthurus, rex quondam, rexque futurus."*^a

In the year 1278, king Edward the First and his queen Eleanor, partly out of devotion, and partly out of curiosity, came to Glastonbury with a great retinue, and on the 19th of April king Arthur's tomb was again opened, and both the shrines of him and his queen exposed to view for some time; after which they were again deposited in the old mausoleum with an additional inscription,^b commemorative of the event.

The next abbot after St. Benignus, that we meet with, was named WORGRET. In the year 601, Domp, the king of Devonshire, granted or restored to him five hides of land in Ynswitryn.^c During his abbaey, namely, in the year 605, the church of Glastonbury was instituted into a more regular society by St. Augustine the monk, who was sent into England by pope Gregory the Great, to preach the faith to the English Saxons. The names of only two more abbots of the British nation have been preserved,

LALEMUND, and BREGORETD.^d

St. Paulinus, the first archbishop of York in the Saxon's time, resided, about the year 630, in this monastery, and appears to have been a great benefactor, particularly in rebuilding the old church from bottom to top with timber, and covering it with lead.^e

To Bregoretd succeeded BERTHWALD, who was the first Saxon abbot, and obtained from King Kenewalch, or Cenwalla,^f a grant of land in the island of Ferramere, in the year 670; having continued ten years in the government of Glastonbury, he was made abbot of Reever,^g and thence, about the year 690, promoted to the archbishopric of Canterbury.

HEMGISEL was made abbot in the year 678, and king Kentwine granted him the same year Glaston six hides, free from all service, but upon condition that the brethren of that place should have the right of choosing and appointing their governor, according to the rule of St. Benedict.^h In the year 681, king Baldred, besides other lands, granted this abbot the manor of Pennard, (num. xc.) In this grant the abbot's name is spelt both Hanigestus and Hengislus, which has induced bishop Tanner, and through him Mr. Eyton, to suppose them different persons. Many other kings, as may be seen in William of Malmesbury, and John, monk of Glastonbury, were great benefactors to the abbey, and enriched it with valuable lands and possessions, but when Ina came to the throne, he excelled all his predecessors in his munificence. For in the year of our Lord 708,ⁱ he pulled down the old ruinous buildings of the monastery, and rebuilt them in the most sumptuous and magnificent manner. The old abbey church, which he had new built, he caused to be consecrated again, and dedicated it to God, in honour of Christ and the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul. "One of the chapels (which Mr. Eyton supposes to be St. Joseph's) he garnished over with gold and silver, and gave to it ornaments and vessels likewise of gold and silver.^k For the gold plate thereupon bestowed amounted to three hundred and thirty-three pound weight, and the silver plate to two thousand and eight hundred thirty-five, besides the precious gems embroidered in the celebrating vestments, according to the account that Speed gives us of this benefaction; but, according to the relation that Stow and the English martirologe give of it, it came to a great deal more." A description of it from a MS. chronicle in the Bodleian Library, will be found in the Appendix, (num. iii.) But this was by no means the extent of his munificence and liberality; he first granted the monks a charter of privileges, and bestowed upon the abbey the manors of Brente, Doultong, Pilton, and Sowi, and other possessions, (see num. vi.) all of which he farther confirmed to them by his charter, granted A.D. 725, together with whatever had at any time been given them by any of his predecessors; and, among other immunities, he exempted from episcopal authority the church of Glastonbury, and the following churches subject thereto: viz. Sowey, Brent, Moorlinch, Shapwick, Street, Butleigh, and Pilton, (num. vii.) The jurisdiction, however, over these seven parishes was the subject of a four hundred and fifty years' controversy between the monks of this monastery and the bishops of the diocese. They afterwards composed the archdeaconry, and are still called the Jurisdiction of Glastonbury.^l Hemgisel was abbot during the early part of king Ina's reign. He was succeeded in the year 705, by

BERWALD, who died in 712, and was succeeded by ALDBERT, to whom Fortere, the successor of St. Aldelm, gave Bledeneye. (num. lxxxiii.)

The next abbot was ECHFRID or ÆTHFRID, to whom king Ina gave one hide, with the fishery, at Axe. During his time the great church was finished, in the upper part of which were inscribed the following Latin verses:

Siderei montes, speciosa cacumina Syon,
A Libano geminæ, flore comante, cedri:
Cælorum portæ, lati duo lumina mundi:
Ore tonat Paulus, fulgurat arce Petrus.
Inter Apostolicas radianti luce coronas,

CENGILLUS, called also CINGISLUS, succeeded Echfrid in 729. Edeldard, successor to king Ina, is said to have granted him sixty hides at Polenholt, and ten at Torrie.ⁿ In 744 Cuthred, king of the West Saxons, granted his charter to Glastonbury, confirming all former grants made to the same, which is in the Appendix, (num. lxi.)

CUMBERTUS, or as he is otherwise called TUMBERTUS, was the next abbot, and is said to have presided nine years. Lulla "Christi ancilla," gave to him and the abbey certain lands in Baltoneshorpe, A.D. 744, for which grant see Appendix, (num. lxxxv.) The next abbot that occurs is

TICAN or TICTAN,^o who, in the year 760, was succeeded by

GUBAN, upon whose death

WALDREN^a was elected abbot, and governed thirty-two years.

His successor BEADWLF, continued six years, and was succeeded by

MUCAN^c was the next abbot in 811, after whom

GUTHLAC^d occurs as abbot in 824. He presided sixteen years, and was succeeded by

ELMUND or EDMUND,^e after whom Mr. Willis places

HEREFERTH,

STYWARD,

ÆLFRIC.

During the depredations of the Danes, both the monastery and town of Glastonbury began to drop their splendour, and exhibit the appearance of ruin and distress. To restore it to its ancient dignity was the business of king Edmund, who appointed ST. DUNSTAN^f abbot over it, and permitted him to make free use of his regal treasury, to enable him to rebuild it. A new foundation was laid in the year 942, and the offices were built after a model brought from France, whence also he is said to have introduced a new congregation of Benedictine monks, and aided by the liberality of his monarch, restored the abbey to its former lustre.

To add thereto, and to render the religious respectable in the eyes of the laity, king Edmund, in the year 944, granted to St. Dunstan and his monks, a charter, (num. viii.) confirming all former ones, and discharging them from divers burdens, duties, contributions, and subjections; and giving them a right and power to receive fines, punish malefactors, and to enjoy all their lands and possessions as free from all claims as he enjoyed his own. He likewise gave them Christemalforde, twenty hides; Wottone, five hides; and many other lands, the grants of which are added to this history, (num. lxiii, lxxxviii. xcii, xcix, cxi, cxiii, cxxviii, cxxix, cxxxi, cxxxiii.) After the death of Edmund, who was buried^g at Glastonbury, St. Dunstan was banished by king Edwin, and one Elsius, who is called Pseudo-abbas, was placed in his stead; to whom Edwin, in 956, granted Netelingtone twenty hides: the following year, however, upon the death of Edwin, Edgar succeeded to the throne, and having recalled St. Dunstan, he displaced Elsius, and not only restored St. Dunstan to the monastery, but promoted him first to the bishopric of Worcester, then of London, and lastly, made him archbishop of Canterbury. He was succeeded by EGELWARDUS, who, flourishing in the happy days of king Edgar, had many possessions and immunities granted and confirmed to the monastery by that king, which were further strengthened by an apostolical bull of John the Eighth. (See num. lxiv, lxxv, xci, xcvii, cxv.) Among the privileges granted by king Edgar, was the liberty of determining pleas, and correcting delinquents; sanctuary within the limits of the hundred; the appropriating hidden treasure to their own use; that the monks should always be electors of their own abbot, and that all controversies whatever, within their jurisdiction, should be determined in the abbot's court.

ÆLFSTAN occurs as abbot in 972,^h and was succeeded by

SEGEBARUS, or SEGEGAR according to William of Malmesbury, who makes him abbot in 984. He was, according to some authors, bishop of Bath and Wells, and died A.D. 995. He was succeeded as abbot of Glastonbury by

BERRED, or BEORTHRED, who, according to Mr. Willis, enjoyed this office sixteen years, and was succeeded by queathing Neweton-Kastel seventeen hides, with his body, to the monastery of Glastonbury, was buried there before the high altar; king Cnut coming thither on his progress, on St. Andrew's day, granted his charter to the monastery. Num. lxvi.

EGELWARD, or AYKWARD,ⁱ occurs next as abbot, in 1027, and

AILNOTHUS, or EGELNOTH, in 1053, who was the last Saxon abbot, and is said to have governed twenty-nine years, though the Saxon Chronicle, p. 179, mentions his being deposed in 1077, and says nothing of his being again restored. This abbot, according to Mr. Eyton, in his History of Glastonbury, was esteemed one of the principal men in the nation at the time of the Norman conquest; and therefore the Conqueror, through jealousy, carried him, among others, over into Normandy, and having deposed him from his abbotship, placed one

TURSTINE, or THURSTAN, a Cluniack monk of Caen in Normandy, in his room. He was reckoned, by the brethren of the convent, a weak, but withal a busy, prodigal man, having shamefully wasted the revenues of the abbey, and perverted several of its ancient statutes. He so tyrannised over the poor monks, that they, on a certain occasion, refused to submit to his authority: whereupon he introduced a party of soldiers to subdue them, who, on a sudden, breaking into the chapter-house, drove the affrighted religious into the great church, where, disregarding the images and shrines, they killed two monks at the altar, and wounded fourteen more.^k It being found, upon inquiry into this unhappy fray, that the abbot alone was to blame, the Conqueror removed him and sent him back to Caen into banishment; and to make the abbey some amends, he confirmed to them some lands which they had at Middilton, Fulebroc, Berwes, Burnington, Lyme, Blakeford, and Witon.^l However, this unworthy abbot, after the Conqueror's death, obtained his abbey again from William Rufus, on the payment of 500 pound of silver;^m but many of the monks left the monastery, and did not return till the death of Turstine, which happened in 1101, when the abbey began to revive under the prudent management of HERLEWIN, who was made abbot in the year 1102. The lands which the monastery of Glastonbury possessed previous to the Norman conquest, by the grants of different kings and others, were immense, if we may credit the account given us by John of Glastonbury.ⁿ Arthur, king of the Britons, gave Brent-Marsh and Polden, with many other lands, which the Anglo-Saxons seized, but afterwards restored. Kenewalch gave Ferramere, with the two islands on each side the lake, viz. Westhay and Godney; as also the islands of Beokery, Martinsey, and Andredsey. King Kentwine gave Monckton, consisting of twenty hides, with the same number of hides in Cary, and three in Crewkerne. Baldred gave Pennard six hides, Logaresburgh (afterwards called Montacute) sixteen hides, and Westmere, with the fishery of the Parret. Bishop Hedda gave Leigh upon Mendip six hides, confirmed by king Cedwalla. King Ina gave the twenty hides of Brent, Sowey or Middlezoy of twelve hides, Pilton twenty hides, Doulling twenty hides, in Livig juxta Tamer twenty hides, and the same in Roalt. St. Wulfrid, archbishop of York, gave Wedmore sixty hides, and one hide in Clewer. Bishop Forther gave Bledanhead one hide. Abbess Buggu, with the consent of king Ina, gave Oar three hides. King Athelard gave Poholt sixty hides, and in Toric ten hides. Fridogida, his queen, gave Brumpton five hides. King Cuthred, Ure three hides. Lulla, a maiden, gave Baltonsbury and Shapwick ten hides. King Ethelbald, Gassick and Bradley four hides. Kinelwulph, Wotton five hides, Compton five hides, and Houndsborough. Ethelard

King Athelwulph gave Uffecolum twenty-four hides, Bucland five, Pennard nine, and confirmed the grant of earl Ethelstan of Clutton ten hides; and of Enulph, Ditchet, Lottisham, and Hornblotton. He confirmed also the grant of Elfleda, king Edward's queen, of Aford, Buckland, and Plais, consisting of twenty-seven hides; Hannington fifteen hides; of the gift of Wulfrid, Kington thirty hides, Grittleton ten hides, Turnworth five, and Tintinhull five hides; of the gift of Elsi, Batcombe twenty hides; of the gift of earl Ethelstan, Mells twenty hides; of the gift of Segewulph, Abbotsbury five hides; of the gift of Wulfec, Langford two hides. King Edred gave Badbury twenty-five hides; two hides in Christchurch, Turnock, and Staplewell; two in Nunney, and one in Ellenborough. He granted likewise the large manor of Ashbury, consisting of forty hides. King Alfred gave Camerton five hides. Ælfgitha, a nun, gave Pennard-Minster ten hides. King Edwin gave Pamborough two hides, and Blackford six. He confirmed also Elphegus's grant of Cranmore, containing twelve hides; Esericus's, of Widcombe six; Alwin's, of eight hides in Stourton; Brithric's, of Yeovilton five hides; Brithere's, of Wyneat. King Edgar gave Stour thirty hides, Milton-Puddimore two, Luccombe two, Blackford five, Ham seven, Dunden five, and Wheathill three. He confirmed duke Alfar's grant of Westbury forty hides, and of Otheri five; Alwin's, of Grittleton twenty-five hides, Nettleton twenty, and Horton ten; as also alderman Alfar's grant of twenty hides in Badcombe; Ealdred's of Clifton; Elflem's, of Durborough; Athelflede's, of Hannington; queen Ælswith's, of Winscombe fifteen hides, Idmiston ten, Streaton six, and Andredsey half a hide; of the grant of Edred, Middlehall fifteen hides; of Brithsige, Hilton five hides. King Egelred gave Austcliff six hides, Sidborough one, Fishwere, and a house in Wilton. And king Edmund Ironside gave Newton-Castle in Dorsetshire, consisting of seventeen hides. But at the Conquest the abbey was deprived of many of these possessions; in Domesday the following is the survey of the manors and lands, which it then possessed in the county of Somerset.

"The church of GLASTONBERY has in that town twelve hides that were never taxed: the arable is thirty carucates; of which there are in demesne ten hides wanting one virgate. And there are five carucates and seventeen servants, and twenty-one villanes, and twenty-three cottagers with five ploughs. There are eight smiths and three arpents of vineyard, and sixty acres of meadow, and two hundred acres of pasture, and twenty acres of wood, and three hundred acres of coppice wood: It is worth twenty pounds.

"To this manor adjoins an island which is called Mere, where are sixty acres of land. The arable is one carucate; and ten fishermen and three fisheries, which pay twenty pence; and six acres of meadow, and six acres of wood, and two arpents of vineyard. It is worth twenty shillings.

"Another island belongs to it, which is called^a Wadeneberie. There are six acres of land, and three arpents of vineyard, and one cottager. It is worth four shillings.

"A third island adjoins thereto, which is called Edere-sige, in which are two hides which never were taxed. There is one carucate with one cottager, and two acres of meadow, and one acre of coppice wood. It is worth fifteen shillings. Godwin holds it of the abbot.

"The same church has Winescome, which was taxed at the rate of twenty hides; Mideltone, Lidelford, Sapeswich, Sowi, Cosintone, Dereberge, Blacheford, Stawelle, Waltone, Aissecote and Pedewelle, Bodeslege, Dondeme, Graintone, Lega, Hame, Boduchelei, Lodreford, Piltone with lands in Sepetone, Coristone, Utone and Pille, Penarminstre, Baltunesberge, Doltin, Cerletone, Batecumbe with lands in Westcumbe, Mulle, Watelei, Weritone, Monechetone, Mercesberie, Dicesget with lands in Horblawetone, Alentone and Lamieta, Camelertone, Crene-melle, Brentemerse, Lodenwrde, Dunehefde."^b

To the improvement of these valuable possessions, and the recovery of other lands, of which the abbey had been deprived, as well as the buildings and internal management, abbot Herlewin appears to have paid constant attention. The church, which was begun by his predecessor, being pulled down as not answering to the dignity or possessions of the abbey,^c he expended the sum of four hundred and eighty pounds on the foundation of a new fabric, which he moreover enriched with a cross of exquisite workmanship, nine palls, nine copes, and an altar, which was estimated at an hundred marks. He died in 1120, and was buried near abbot Turstine.^d

SIGFRID,^e a monk of St. Martin de Seez, and brother to Ralph, archbishop of Canterbury, became the next abbot, and obtained a bull of privileges from pope Calixtus (num. xxxviii.) After he had governed the monastery about six years,^f he was promoted to the see of Chichester, and succeeded at Glastonbury by

HENRY DE BLOIS, brother to Theobald, earl of Blois, nephew of king Henry the First, a man universally esteemed for his learning, affability, and most exemplary conduct.^g Three years afterwards, he was promoted to the bishopric of Winchester, and executed the office of pope's legate throughout England,^h but was allowed to retain the government of this monastery, to which he was a great benefactor. He succeeded in recovering many of the possessions of the abbey, particularly the manors of Milles, Uffaculum, Camelarton, and Domerham; and, in the year 1136, procured from king Stephen a confirmation of the manor of Offcolme, (num. xi.) which had been taken from the monks in the time of the conqueror.ⁱ He likewise built from the foundation a magnificent palace in the monastery, which was called the castle, as also the belfry, the chapter-house, the cloister, the lavatory, the refectory, the dormitory, the infirmary with its chapel, the outer-gate of hewn stone, the great brewhouse, and several stables for horses, all constructed with an air of grandeur bespeaking the spirit of the donor. To their manors also and other possessions he extended his liberality, in erecting such buildings as were necessary. He likewise bestowed several very handsome ornaments on the church, consisting of veils, some of which were of satin, copes, and other sacerdotal vestments, richly ornamented; a silver crucifix gilt and adorned with precious stones, and an ivory shrine containing a great variety of sacred relics.^k He likewise procured a confirmation of the possessions and privileges of the abbey, from kings Henry the First, Stephen, and Henry the Second, and from the popes Innocent II. Lucius II. and Alexander IV.^l (see num. xxxix. xli. xlii. xliii. lxvii. lxviii. cxxxiv. cxxxv. cxxxvi.) When he had continued forty-five^m years in the pastoral charge of the church of Glastonbury, this pious prelate died in the year 1171, and was buried according to Adam de Domerham, at Winchester. Mr. Willis, in his History of the Mitred Parliamentary Abbies, vol. i. p. 103, says, that he was buried in Ivingho church, in the county of Bucks, in which parish he founded a nunnery, the manor thereof belonging to the see of Winchester. He was succeeded the same year by virtues, very charitable to the poor, and a considerable benefactor to the abbey, over which he presided seven years, and dying in 1178, was buried in the south part of the chapter-house. "In this abbot's time, the churches of Pelton and South-Brent, which had been of the patronage of the Monastery of Glastonbury, devolved into the hands of the church of Wells; for Robert having been appointed a canon of Wells, received the aforesaid churches as his demesnes, on account of his prebend; and upon his soon after quitting his canonry, these churches remained to Wells, by means of a transaction made about the jurisdiction of the archdeaconry and the pensions, for which the monks of Glastonbury were then impleaded by the bishop."^a Upon his death, the church of Glastonbury being deprived of its pastor fell into the hands of king Henry the Second, who retained possession of it some years. Having occasion afterwards (according to John of Glastonbury^b) to proceed to the court of Rome, he committed the care of this abbey to Peter de Marci, a monk of Cluni, whose interest he hoped to gain by such a bribe. Peter repaired to Glastonbury; the monks of which, however, could not be prevailed upon to elect him their abbot, in consequence of his great irregularity of life. "In the following summer all the monastery, except part of the abbot's lodgings and the steeple, were consumed by fire. Not long after Peter de Marci died, and the king taking compassion on the monks under this great calamity, sent Ralph Fitz-Stephen, one of his chamberlains, to inspect and take care of their revenues, and, after distributing a competency to the monks, to apply the remainder towards rebuilding the abbey. To this effect he granted his charter, confirming all former donations and immunities, (num. cxxxvii.) But though Fitz-Stephen endeavoured with the greatest zeal to perform what was enjoined him by the king, and had proceeded with such expedition, that the new church of St. Mary was dedicated by Reginald, bishop of Bath, on the feast of St. Barnabas, A.D. 1186, he was not able to finish the whole buildings before the death of his master: and king Richard, who succeeded to the throne, applying his mind more to warlike affairs, the repairs of Glastonbury met with an unexpected stop, "and the work was given over, there being no one to pay the workmen."^d However the same king, with consent of the convent, appointed

HENRY DE SWANSEY,^e prior of Bermundsey, of the blood royal, abbot of this place, in the year 1189, being the same year in which he was crowned. In his time the tomb of king Arthur was found in the cemetery, an account of which has been already given. This abbot obtained from Pope Celestine the privilege of using the mitre and ring, gloves, dalmatic, tunic, and sandals, and of blessing the sacerdotal vestments,^f which privilege was further confirmed to his successors by Honorius III. Gregory IX. and Alexander IV. In his time king Richard the First, on his return from the Holy Land, was craftily taken prisoner in his way through the duke of Austria's dominions, at the instigation of Henry IV. the then emperor of Germany.^g In order to his release, the following condition was among others insisted on, that Savaricus, chancellor and kinsman of the emperor, should be immediately appointed bishop of Bath and Wells, and the abbacy of Glastonbury annexed thereto, for its aggrandisement and improvement. A curious account of this transaction will be found in the History of John of Glastonbury,^h who attributes to Henry Swansey all the subsequent calamities that happened to the monastery. "We to this day feel," says he, "the dismal effects of his ambition to obtain the bishopric of Worcester, and his imprudence in the concessions he made for that purpose, our house having on that account been exposed even to this time to the violence and injustice of the bishops of Bath, and their adherents the canons of Wells. For ever since it has been their constant custom to do us all the harm they can, and when they cannot prevail in actions, they endeavour at least to accomplish their perverse designs by detraction and railing."ⁱ Upon Henry de Swansey's promotion to the see of Worcester,^k then vacant by the death of bishop Robert Fitz-Ralph, Savaricus was promoted to that of Wells, to which he immediately annexed the abbey, and assumed the title of bishop of Glastonbury. This violent proceeding produced, as might well have been expected, great confusion among the monks, who, in the year 1199, elected William Pike for their abbot; this election, however, was very strenuously opposed, for abbot Pike was excommunicated, and several of the monks were committed to prison for contempt. William Pike then repaired to Rome, whence an apostolic mandate was obtained,^l directed to the bishop of Ely, the abbot of St. Edmunds, and the prior of Christchurch, Canterbury, for regulating the priory, and dividing the possessions of Glastonbury between the bishop and the monks; a long, and, as might be supposed, tedious account of this controversy may be seen in John of Glastonbury's History, vol. i. p. 197, and in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, vol. i. p. 578. In the end, the aforesaid delegates, after some debate, having summoned the parties concerned, assigned to the bishop a fourth part of the estates, viz. the manors of Meere, Pucklechurch, Winscombe, Badbury, Ashbury, Buckland, Lyme, Blackford, Cranmore, Kington, and Christian-Malford; and also the lodgings in the abbey, which had till then been appropriated to the abbots and prior of Kilcummin, in Ireland.^m But just at this period abbot Pike died at Rome, not without suspicion of poison; and, indeed, Savaricusⁿ was suspected to have been the chief actor in this tragical event; but he did not long survive, dying in 1205; neither did the controversy terminate with their deaths, for Joceline, who succeeded Savaricus in the see of Wells, found these possessions far too valuable to part with, without better arguments than the monks were able to produce in behalf of their cause, now grown quite desperate.^o For twelve years he continued his claim to the abbey, and it was not until after a number of applications and petitions to the court of Rome from both parties, that this unfortunate controversy was finally adjusted by the mediation of Richard, bishop of Sarum, and Pandulphus, elect bishop of Norwich, who received a mandate to that effect from pope Honorius, by virtue of which the said bishop of Sarum, and the abbot of Reading, whom Pandulphus had appointed as his substitute, summoned both parties to appear before them at Shaftsbury;^p where, on the eighth day after the feast of St. John the Evangelist, A.D. 1218, they came to an agreement, that there should remain to the bishop and his successors for ever, the manors of Winscombe, Pucklechurch, Blackford, and Cranmore, with all their appertinances; but that there be restored to the monks the other remaining manors of the bishop's portion, viz. Mere, Buckland, Hinton, Christian-Malford, Badbury, and Ashbury, and the advowson of the church of Mere; the right of presentation to the other churches remaining still with the bishop.^q Two of the monks immediately proceeded with this agreement to the court of Rome, where they obtained the entire dissolution of the monastery from the bishopric, and free liberty to elect an abbot, according to their own regular observances. They also obtained the renewing of their privilege concerning the use of the pontifical ornaments,^r and a permission to retain to their own uses for one year, the revenues of all vacant benefices, (see num. lv. lix.) Immediately after the return of these monks from Rome, with a confirmation of the aforesaid agreement, the convent proceeded to the choice of a pastor, and been extremely active in the debates before recited, was installed abbot. He is very highly spoken of by their annalists for his mild and generous conduct not only to the poor in general, but particularly to the monks, whom he cherished, says John of Glastonbury, with fatherly care as his children, bestowing much on them freely for their corporal recreation.^a He presided over the monastery five years, and dying September 18th, 1223, was buried on the north side of the chapter-house, and was succeeded by

ROBERT, prior of Bath, a courteous, modest, pious, and good man, but as he was elected much against the will of the monks in general,^b there was a want of harmony between them during the whole of his abbacy; thus it became in a short time needy in necessaries, and oppressed with debt: whereupon he voluntarily resigned his situation, and returned to Bath (after having governed the monastery, certainly with discretion, eleven years) with a pension allowed him of sixty pounds yearly. On his resignation,

MICHAEL OF AMBRESBURY was elected abbot, on the Tuesday following, and received the benediction on the 25th of April, 1235. Before his promotion he had been found provident and modest, circumspect in business, well experienced by many trials in secular affairs, and had employed all his endeavours for a long time towards retrieving the affairs of the monastery, which had suffered so much under Savaricus, as well as by the mismanagement of some of his immediate predecessors.^c After having presided with great reputation almost eighteen years, bestowed liberal sums on the buildings of the abbey, restored to it many of its former possessions, and cleared it entirely of all its debts and incumbrances, he, on account of old age, resigned his office in the year 1252, and the pension and allowance granted him fully shew the high estimation in which he was held. He had lodgings, with double allowance from the kitchen, &c. assigned to him within the monastery; also the manor of Mere, with a residence and a similar allowance there also, and one hundred and sixty pounds a-year for the support of himself and attendants.^d He died the year following, and was buried in the abbey church, with this epitaph,^e

“ Qui serpentinas fraudes et vincla resolvit,
Restituitque ovibus debita rura suis:
Postquam turbida tranquillasset tempora, saxo
Ecce sub hoc abbas integritur Michael.”

ROGER FORDE,^f a native of Glastonbury, and a man of great learning and eloquence succeeded. The church of Glastonbury had by no means yet regained its tranquillity, and it was the misfortune of this good man to embroil himself in its troubles. He was promoted with contention, and in strife he continually lived.^g He was opposed in all his measures by the bishop of Bath and Wells, who at one time deposed him, and by his monks, who elected in his room Robert Pederton; but this proceeding, on account of Forde's probity of life and behaviour, met with no encouragement, and he was by mutual consent reinstated, in the year 1259. About two years afterwards, whilst on a journey, which he had undertaken to defend the rights of his church, he died suddenly^h at the bishop of Rochester's palace, at Bromley, in Kent, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

ROBERT DE PEDERTON, a native of North-Petherton, and of a very ancient family, was again unanimously elected, in November 1261. He was of a middle age, tall of stature, of competent learning, of eminent wit, mild, humble, and conspicuous for probity of behaviour, and was particularly attentive to the internal regulations of the abbey, which, during the time of his predecessor, became encumbered with very considerable debts, all of which he paid off.ⁱ He appropriated to the use of the monastery the churches of Soway, Murlinche, Schapwick, Domerham, and Sturminster, and obtained from pope Gregory X. a confirmation of privileges, all which, with other grants during his time, will be found in the Appendix, (num. xxiii. xxiv. xxvi. xxxi. xxxii. xxxv. xxxvi. xxxvii. liii. cxii.) He died in 1274, and upon his tomb, in the abbey church, was placed the following epitaph,^k

Demum hæc composita pace quiescit humo.”

JOHN DE TAUNTON, monk of Glastonbury, was elected abbot on Thursday after the feast of St. Barnabas, an. 1274. In the year following, on the eleventh of September, the chapel of St. Michael upon the Torr, was thrown down by an earthquake.^l In the year 1278, king Edward visited Glastonbury with a large retinue (as has been before noticed respecting king Arthur's tomb,) where he was magnificently entertained:^m he afterwards confirmed the liberties of the monastery, (num. lxxvi.) The churches of Doultong, Estbrente, Dichesate, and Buddeleigh, (see num. xxvii, xxviii, and xxix,) were appropriated to the use of the monastery by this abbot, who likewise gave a large collection of books to the library, and several ornaments and vestments to the church.ⁿ He died in 1290, at the manor-house of Domerham, in Wiltshire; and being brought to Glastonbury, was there buried with this epitaph:

Ut multo tandem sumptu multoque labore
Fit pastor, jamjam comoda multa parat.
Rura colit Christi, docet et præcepta Johannes,
Mox animi exuvias condit in hoc tumulo.^o

JOHN DE CANCIA, or JOHN KENT, succeeded, of whom nothing is recorded but his gifts of crosses, images, &c. to the church: he died in the thirteenth year of his prelacy, A.D. 1303, and was buried in a sumptuous tomb, which he had built for himself on the north side of the high altar.^p He was succeeded by

JEFFRY TROMUND, a great benefactor to the abbey, who enriched the church, which he caused to be newly dedicated, with much costly furniture.^q He expended upwards of a thousand pounds on the buildings of the abbey, the great hall of which he began, and laid the foundation of that noble chapter-house, which stood till the dissolution of the abbey:^r he died in 1322, and was buried in the conventual church. After his death

WALTER DE TAUNTON (alias HEC,^s) prior of Glastonbury, succeeded to the abbacy. He died on the eleventh day after his benediction; but, during the short period he presided here, he made the front of the choir, with the curious stone images, where the crucifix stood, and otherwise adorned the abbey-church.^t He was succeeded by

ADAM DE SODBURY,^u who adorned the high altar with a large image of the Virgin Mary, and a tabernacle of most excellent workmanship. He built the altar of St. Silvester and St. George, adding a number of images, vestments, and other ornaments; he vaulted the greatest part of the body of the church, and very curiously embellished it with paintings of saints, martyrs, kings, and benefactors.^x He employed one Peter Lightfoot, a monk of the abbey, to erect an astronomical clock with a variety of machinery, part of which was calculated to move certain figures of knights, as it were, in tilts and tournaments. After the dissolution of the abbey, this clock was removed to the cathedral church of Wells, where it still remains a monument of antiquity, neither common nor incurious.^y He also gave an organ to the church, and cast eleven bells, six of which he caused to be hung in the church-tower, and the other five in the clock tower. He caused the ancient immunities of the church to be confirmed by royal charter, see num. lxxviii. and obtained a papal bull and a royal charter for appropriating the churches of Dichesate, Buddecligh, Strete, and Mere. See num. xii and xiii. He died in 1335, when

JOHN DE BREYNTON,^a or BREINKTON,^b monk of this abbey, and afterwards prior, succeeded. He finished, at the expense of a thousand pounds, the abbot's great hall, which two of his predecessors had begun, and carried up to the closing of the windows;^c he likewise built the kitchen, the long gallery, the abbot's chapel, and a long range of offices. He died in the year 1341, and was succeeded by

WALTER DE MONYTON,^d who was a very considerable benefactor to this abbey. He made the vault^e of the choir and of the presbytery, and to the latter he added a couple of arches. He also procured a fair transcript to be made of all the charters, grants, bulls, and other documents relating to the privileges or possessions of the monastery, which transcript was called the SECRETUM ABBATIS, and was always to be under the immediate care and inspection of the abbot. It is from this manuscript now deposited in the Bodleian Library at Oxford,^f and in the finest preservation, that many of the charters in the Appendix are copied. He died in the year 1374; his successor

JOHN CHINNOCK,^g finished what had been begun by his predecessor Monyton; he likewise rebuilt the ruined cloister, the dormitory, and fraternity; and finished the buildings of the great hall and chapter-house, the foundation of which had been laid by abbot Fromund. He continued abbot near fifty years, and, dying in 1420, was buried in the chapter-house; and was succeeded by

NICHOLAS FROME,^h so called from the place of his nativity, who presided over the abbey thirty-five years, and died in 1456.

WALTER MOREⁱ was elected on the 7th of May of the same year; there were present at his election fifty-three monks, as appears from the account of his election printed by Hearne from a manuscript in Trinity College, Cambridge. As it is the only perfect history of the election of an abbot extant, it has been thought sufficiently curious to be inserted at the end of the charters of this monastery. He lived only a few months; and was succeeded by

JOHN DE SELLWODE,^k who was elected Nov. 15, 1457, at which time there were forty-eight monks resident in the monastery. He was of East-Woodlands, near Frome, in the forest of Selwood, where his progenitors, (who were of the name of Edmonds), had considerable possessions. He died in 1493, when a monk of this monastery, of the name of THOMAS WASYN,^l was elected abbot; but some contention ensuing thereupon, he was displaced Nov. 12, 1492, by Richard Fox, bishop of Bath and Wells, and

RICHARD BEERE^m succeeded him, and was installed on the 20th January following. He built at a great expense a suit of apartments called the king's lodgings, as also the "lodgings for secular priests and clerks of our lady." He likewise built the greatest part of king Edgar's chapel at the east end of the church, vaulted the east part of the nave of the abbey-church,ⁿ and adorned the high altar with an antependium of silver gilt; and on his return from Italy, where he had been sent as ambassador, (22 Henry VII.^o) he constructed a chapel of our Lady of Loretto, adjoining the north side of the nave, and in the south end he made the chapel of the Sepulchre. He built, A. D. 1512, a small almshouse for ten poor women, in the north precincts of the abbey, and the manor-house of Sharpham-Park, (two miles west from Glastonbury,) which before his time was only a poor lodge. He died on the 20th of January, 1524, and was buried in the south isle of the body of the church, under a plain marble. On his death, forty-seven monks devolved the election of their abbot to cardinal Wolsey, who declared

RICHARD WHITING, then chamberlain of the house, their abbot. He presided over this abbey in those unpropitious days to monks and religious societies, as they then existed. He had governed his monastery with great prudence and judgment; but unwilling to surrender his abbey to the king, or to lend an ear to any of the solicitations which were offered him, he continued a firm opposer of the reformation; whereupon he was soon after seized at his manor-house of Sharpham, A. D. 1539, upon the pretence^p of embezzling the plate belonging to the convent, and without much formal process as to law or equity, was drawn from Wells,^q where he had been condemned at the assizes, to Glastonbury on a hurdle, and hanged with two of his monks, viz. Roger Jacob and John Thorne, on the hill called the Torr, (where St. Michael's church now stands,) being, as a learned author speaks,^r hurried out of the world, without the least regard had to his age, and not so much as suffered to take leave of his convent; after his execution his head was set upon the Abbey-gate, and his quarters sent to Wells, Bath, Ilchester, and Bridgwater.

He was head of the most ancient abbey in England, the governor of which had precedence of all the abbots in England, till the year 1154, when pope Adrian IV. (the only Englishman that ever sat in the papal chair), gave that honour to the abbot of St. Albans, in Hertfordshire, in consideration of his having received his education in that monastery, and because our proto-martyr suffered there.^s He was always a member of the upper house of convocation, and a parliamentary baron, being summoned by a particular writ to sit "inter pares, proceres et barones regni."^t His apartment in the abbey was a kind of well-disciplined court, where the sons of noblemen and gentlemen were sent for virtuous education, and returned thence excellently accomplished.^u Abbot Whiting had bred up near three hundred after this manner, besides others of a meaner rank, whom he fitted for the universities. At home his table, attendance, and officers, were an honour to the nation; sometimes he even entertained five hundred persons of fashion at a time, and

^p He was accused of treason and embezzling the conventual plate; and concerning his execution, the following letter is still extant. (Collinson's Somerset.)

"Right Honourable and my very good Lorde,

"Pleaseth youre Lordeshipp to be advertysed, that I have receyved youre letters dated the 12th daye of this preasant; and understond by the same youre Lordeshipp's great goodnes towardes my friende the Abbott of Peterborough, for whome I have been ofte bold to wryte unto youre good Lordship, moste hartely thankyng your Lordeshipp for that and all other youre goodnes that I have founde at youre good Lordeshipp's handes, even so desiering you my Lord, longe to contynew in the same.

"My Lorde thies shalbe to asserteyne that on Thursdaye the 14th daye of this present moneth the Abbott of Glastonburye was arrayned, and the next daye putt to execucion wyth 2 other of his monkes for every week, on Wednesdays and Fridays, all the poor of the neighbourhood were relieved by his particular charity; and when he went abroad, which he seldom did, except to national synods, general chapters, and to parliament, he was attended by upwards of one hundred persons.^a

The fate of the abbot being thus decided, the buildings and revenues of this house, which had flourished for such a length of time, became the objects of depredation. Those riches which had flowed from the treasury of monarchs, and those structures, which had out-braved the shock of time and the inclemency of ages, sunk together. The foundation plot of ground, on which the abbey and its offices were erected, comprised no less than sixty acres within the walls. The nave of the great church, from St. Joseph's chapel to the cross, was two hundred and twenty feet in length: the tower was forty-five feet in breadth; each transept was also forty-five feet in length, and the choir one hundred and fifty feet; so that its entire length from east to west was four hundred and twenty feet.^b The chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea, which was contiguous to the west end of the great church, was one hundred and ten feet long, and twenty-four feet broad; under the floor was a large and handsome sepulchral vault, having at the south-east corner an arched passage leading to the Tor, which has been traced a considerable way.^c Under the body of the church were three large vaults, supported by two rows of strong massive pillars, in which lay entombed many corpses of the most illustrious personages. The cloisters adjoined the church on the south side, and formed a square of two hundred and twenty feet. Thus the whole church, including the chapel of St. Joseph, was five hundred and thirty feet in length.^d It contained five chapels; St. Edgar's, which stood just behind the choir; St. Mary's, in the north aisle; St. Andrew's, in the south aisle; the chapel of our Lady of Loretto, on the north side of the nave; and at the south angle, the chapel of the holy sepulchre. The floors were inlaid with Norman tile, inscribed with scripture sentences, and the names of kings and benefactors.

But to give the reader a competent idea of the whole of the buildings of this stupendous abbey, it will be necessary to recur to^e

still standing, as are also some pieces of St. Edgar's, St. Andrew's, and the Loretto chapel, with the two east pillars of the tower, and a west arch leading into St. Joseph's chapel. This last-mentioned chapel, except the roof and floor, is pretty entire. It was a most elegant structure, having on each side six windows, under which were very rich compartments of zig-zag arches of five pillars, and their spandrils adorned with roses, crescents, and painted stars. The south door has ornaments of flower-work and history; and the north, which is very rich, is decorated with flourishes, foliage and figures.^a

The abbot's kitchen, which was built by Whiting the last abbot, is octagonal, having in the angles four fire-places sixteen feet long. In the flat part of the roof rises an arched octagonal pyramid, crowned with a double lanthorn one within another.^b

Of the library (and the scriptorium^c adjoining it, where the monks were constantly employed in composing or transcribing books for the use of the library,) not a vestige remains. How richly it was stored, may be conceived from what the learned antiquary Leland reports of it, who visited the place but a few years before it was dissolved. "It was scarcely equalled, he says, by any other library in all Britain. He had scarcely passed the threshold, when the very sight of so many sacred remains of antiquity struck him with an awe of astonishment, that for a moment he hesitated." He afterwards spent some days in examining it, (by the permission of abbot Whiting,^d) and has, in his Comment. de Scriptoribus Britannicis, given an account of some of the more curious manuscripts he found there.

Of the fall of this noble monastery, Michael Drayton, in his Polyolbion, thus writes,

*O who thy ruine sees, whom wonder doth not fill
With our great fathers pompe, devotion and their skill?
Thou more than mortall power (this judgement rightly waid)
Then present to assist, at that foundation laid;
On whom for this sad waste, should Justice lay the crime?
Is there a power in Fate, or doth it yield to Time?
Or was their error such, that thou could'st not protect
Those buildings which thy hand did with their zeale erect?
To whom didst thou commit that monument to keepe,
That suff'reth with the dead, their memory to sleepe?
When not great Arthur's tombe, nor holy Joseph's grave,
From sacrilege had power their sacred bones to save;
He who that God in man to his sepulchre brought,
Or he which for the faith twelve famous battels fought.
What? did so many kings do honour to that place,
For Avarice at last so vilely to deface?

The monastery being thus seized by the crown, and the abbot executed, a pension was allotted to each of the monks. In the first year of queen Mary, viz. an. 1553, the following pensions remained in charge to twenty-five monks of this convent, which number amounted to about half the religious before the dissolution, as may be conjectured from the subscription to the king's supremacy, an. 1534, attested by the abbot and forty-nine others of this monastery.

But six of these, viz. John Tanner, Will. Gryce, Will. Bysshope, Simon Outerdon, Tho. Nicholas, and John Shepherd, being returned as deceased, their pensions expired after this payment, as almost all the fees and annuities of this monastery had already done, there remaining only 22*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.* on that article.^f

^a Collinson's Somerset, vol. ii. p. 261. Willis, from a communication of Mr. Samuel Gale, adds, "It is an oblong, curiously wrought and painted after the Gothic stile; at each angle was a tower, terminating in a lofty pyramid of stone having a staircase within. One of them is fallen down as far as the roof of the chapel."

^b Ibid. 33 Edw. I. William Pasturel held twelve ox-gangs of land in Glastonbury, of the abbot thereof, by the service of finding a cook in the kitchen of the said abbot, and a baker in the bake-house. Esc.

Queen Mary having restored several religious orders to their ancient mansions, appears to have given the remaining monks of Glastonbury some hopes of raising again their abbey. They petitioned the lord Chamberlain to remind the queen of her promise, for erecting the great monastery of Glastonbury: noticing also, that by her majesty's and cardinal Pole's encouragement, Dr. John Fecknam, abbot of Westminster, had procured a warrant from the lord treasurer; that upon the strength of this favour, their friends had began to build and repair at Glastonbury to a considerable expense; but now this project was stopped, they desire the grant of nothing but the house and site. The following is a copy of their letter, which does not appear to have had any success; "but whether," Mr. Collier says, "the shortness of the queen's reign, or the impracticableness of the project made it miscarry, is uncertain."^g

The revenues of the monastery devolving to the crown, were either granted or sold away: in 1444, they were thus valued, abbas Glaston. cum officariis ibidem et cum ecclesia de Strete mdccxxvii marks, xs. i. e. 1151*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and in 1534, 26th Hen. The manor of Glastonbury, together with the house and site of the monastery, church, cloisters, and churchyard belonging to the same, was granted by king Edward VI. in the first year of his reign, to Edward duke of Somerset.^b In the first of Elizabeth, the house, site of the monastery, Wearyall-park, a messuage called Le Galley, site of the manor of Bride, a messuage called the New Dairie, and other lands, tenements, and hereditaments, with all their rights and appertenances in Glastonbury, were granted to Sir Peter Carew, knt.^c 14 Eliz. the same premises were granted to Thomas earl of Sussex, and his heirs male.^d 38 Eliz. the earl of Sussex sold the manor, and site of the monastery to William Stone, who, 41 Eliz. sold the same to William Cavendish, esq.^e The manor was afterwards purchased by Mr. Bleadon, from whom it came to the Strodes of Dorsetshire. William Strode, esq. in the beginning of the last century, left it in partition betwixt seven daughters, coheireses, who afterwards disposed of their several shares, reserving to them and their heirs a fee-farm, or chief-rent of 240*l.* payable yearly out of the said manor. Of the seven shares, Peter Berry, esq. became possessed of four, and sold the same to William Reeves, esq. merchant of Bristol, from whom they came by successive purchases to Henry Burgum and George Miller, esqrs. Miller's estates being sold in August, 1785, the four shares above mentioned were bought by Mr. Brook of Bath; the Tor part of the estate was purchased by sir Richard Colt Hoare; two parts of the seven are inherited by John Moss of the city of Wells, esq. and the last single share is now the property of Lucas Pulsford, esq. Courts baron and leet are held yearly in succession by the respective lords. The manor house is situated in the north-west part of the town, and belongs to Mr. Brooke abovementioned.^f

A regular survey of the possessions of the abbey was made by Richard Pollard and Thomas Moyle, general surveyors of the king's lands: previous to which they were sent to Glastonbury to examine the abbot. The following letter to the lord Privy Seal gives an account of their proceedings; after which will be subjoined a copy of the survey from the original now in the Bodleian Library. (Arch. Bodl. A. inter Rotulos.)

"Please hyt your lordship to be advertised, that we came to Glastenbury on Fryday last past, about tenn of the clock in the forenoone: and for that the abbot was then at Sharpham, a place of hys, a myle and somewhat more from thabbey, we, without any delay went unto the same place; and there, after certain communication, declaring unto him theeffect of our coming, examined him upon certain articles. And for that his answer was not then to our purpose, we advised him to call to his remembrance that which he had as then forgotten, and so declare the truth. And then came with him the same day to the abbey; and there of new proceeded that night to search his study for letters and books: and found in his study secretly laid, as well a written book of arguments, against the divorce of his king's majestie, and the lady dowager: which we take to be a great matter. As also divers pardons, copies of bulls, and the counterfit lyfe of Thomas Bequet in print. But we could not find any letter that was materiall. And so we proceeded again to his examination, concerning the articles we received from your lordship, in the answers whereof, as we take it, shall appear his canker'd and traitorous heart and mind against the king's majestie and his succession; as by the same answers, syned with his hand, and sent to your lordship by this bearer, more plainly shall appear. And so, with as fair words as we could, we have conveyed him from hence into the tower, being but a very weak man, and sickly. And as yet we have neither discharged servant nor monk; but now the abbot being gone, we will with as much celerity as we may, proceed to the dispatching of them. We have in money, 300*l.* and above; but the certainty of plate, and other stuffe there, as yet we know not, for we have not had opportunity for the same, but shortly we intend (God willing) to proceed to the same; whereof we shall ascertain your lordship, so shortly as we may. This is also to advertise your lordship, that we have found a fair chalice of gold, and divers other parcels of plate, which the abbot had hid secretly from all such commissioners, as have bine there in times past; and as yet he knoweth not that we have found the same: whereby we think, that he thought to make his hand, by his untruth to his king's majesty. It may please your lordship, to advertise us of the king's pleasure, by this bearer, to whom we shall deliver the custody and keeping of the house, with such stuff as we intend to leave there, convenient to the king's use. We assure your lordship, it is the goodliest house of that sort, that ever we have seen. We wold that your lordship did know it, as we do; then we doubt not, but your lordship would judge it a house mete for the king's majesty, and for no man else, which is to our great comfort; and we trust verily, that there shall never come any double hood within that house again. Also this is to advertise your lordship, that there is never a one doctor within that house; but there be three batchelors of divinity, which be but meanly learned, as we can perceive. And thus our Lord preserve your good lordship.

Yours to command,

EX HISTORIA ECCLESIAE GLASTONIENSIS MS.

[Cat. MSS. Angl. 7429.]

sita, et quomodo fuit inhabitata, fol. 6. b.*

HEC itaque insula primo a Britonibus dicta est YNSWYTRYN, id est, insula vitrea, propter ampnem scilicet quasi vitrei coloris in marisco circumfluentem. Insula vero dicta est, quoniam marisco profundo est undique clausa: mediampnis magis proprie diceretur, quoniam mediis ampnis sita est, sicut melius insule dicuntur, que in mari site noscuntur. Avallonia dicta est, vel ab Aval Britannico quod pomum sonat, quia solet locus ille pomis et pomeriis habundare; vel ab Avallone quodam territorii illius quondam dominatore. Demum a Saxonibus terram sibi subjugantibus interpretato priore vocabulo, id est YNSWYTRYN, sua lingua dicta est GLASTYNBURY, id est, Glastonia. Glas enim Anglice vel Saxonice vitrum sonat; BURY, Civitas. In hujus insule laudem quidam metricus sic cecinit,

Insula pomorum que fortunata vocatur,
Ex re nomen habet; quia per se singula profert.
Non opus est illi sulcantibus arva colonis,
Omnis abest cultus nisi quem natura ministrat,
Ultero fecundas segetes producit, et uvas,
Nataque poma suis precioso germine silvis.
Omnia gignit humus vice graminis ultro redundans:
Annis centenis et ultra vivitur illic.
Hec nova Jerusalem fuit, hec fidei quoque lima,
Hec tumulus sanctus, hec scala poli celebratur:
Vix luit inferni penas hic qui tumulatur.

Habet quoque hec insula circumjacentes insulas sibi subjectas, quarum hec sunt vocabula, BEKERY que parva Hibernia dicitur, ubi olim sancta Brigida perhendinavit: FERRAMERE, ubi sanctus BENIGNUS hereticam quondam duxit vitam, cum insula de WESTHEY in parte occidentali; [et Godeney in parte orientali:] dicta est autem GODENEY, id est, insula Dei, eo quod sit ibidem ecclesiola de sancta Trinitate. PADNEBEORGE, que est terra vinifera. ANDREDESEY sive YLOND, ceteras insulas loci situ et amenitate antecellens. Dicta est enim ANDREDESEY propter ecclesiolam sancti Andree que ibi habetur.

* Uncis inclusa desunt in MS. Ashmol.

MARTINESEY alia est insula, sic dicta propter ecclesiolam sancti Martini ibidem. Hec itaque insule cum pluribus aliis locis, ut infra melius patebit, eadem privilegii dignitate a principio congaudent. Que simul juncte, duodecim hide nuncupantur.

Etenim citra conquestum Willelmi ducis Normannici, anno Domini millesimo sexagesimo sexto, de regno Angliæ factum, qui Glastoniensem ecclesiam enormiter de suis possessionibus mutilavit, et quamplures ex suis militibus inde feudavit, nec ante ab anno Domini millesimo tricesimo usque in presentem diem nulla facta eidem domui de aliquo manerio sive possessione aliqua donatio, set potius per Bathonienses episcopos multarum earundem possessionum violenta ablacio. Primo namque rex Britonum, Arviragus licet paganus, contulit sancto Joseph, qui Dominum sepelivit, et sociis suis hanc insulam in qua monasterium situm est, tunc silvis rubis atque paludibus circumdatam, ab incolis YNSWITRYN nominatam, quam postea Lucius rex Britannorum, qui primus de Britannis regibus sacrum baptismum suscepit, Phagano et Diriviano monachis cardinalibus, qui mittente papa Eleutherio eum baptizarunt, et eorum discipulis, benignissime confirmavit.

Inclitus Arthurus rex Britonum dedit BRENTMARIS et POULDON cum multis aliis terris in confinio sitis, quas Angli-Saxones pagani supervenientes abstulerunt. Ista et multa alia a diversis regibus et eorum familiaribus collata, ad Glastoniensem ecclesiam deveniunt, sicut per ejusdem ecclesie cartulas veteres apparet. Que tum mutacionibus regum et regnorum, tum incuria prelatorum quedam sepius auferebantur et alienabantur, et postea multa per alios restituebantur, quedam vero usque in presens nullatenus restituuntur. Et licet incredibilem numerum ac quantitatem terrarum uni loco spectancium hic posuerim, omnes tamen has, et multo plures, quas pro ambiguitate numerare nolo, Glastoniensi monasterio datas fuisse non dubito. Nec est admirandum si quedam maneria, aut realiter, aut nomine tenus, a diversis legantur collata, tum quia nomina equivocata sunt, tum quia multa, a prioribus data, deinde ablata demum restituebantur; tum etiam quia quidam partem unam manerii, alter vero partem aliam ejusdem, contulit, et totum utrique fortassis ascribitur.

NUM. V.

CARTA SANCTI PATRICII. Ibid. fol. 39, b.

IN nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi. Ego Patricius humilis serviunculus Dei, anno incarnationis ejusdem quadringentesimo vicesimo quinto, in Hiberniam a sanctissimo papa Celestino legatus, Dei gratia Hibernicos ad viam veritatis converti. Et cum eos in fide catholica solidassem; tandem in Britanniam sum reversus, ac ut credo, duce Deo, qui vita est et via, incidi in Insulam YNSWITRYN. In qua inveni locum sanctum ac vetustum, a Deo electum et sanctificatum, in honore intemerate virginis Dei genetricis Marie. Ibique repperi quosdam fratres rudimentis catholice fidei imbutos, et pie conversationis, qui successerunt discipulis sanctorum Phagani et Deruviani, quorum nomina pro vite meritis veraciter credo scripta in celis. Et quia in memoria eterna erunt justus, cum eosdem fratres tenere dilexissem, eorum nomina scripto meo redigere volui. Que sunt Brumban, Hiregaan, Bremwal, Wencreth, Banthomeweng, Adelwolred, Loyor, Wellias, Breden, Swelwes, Hinloernus, et alius Hyn. Hii cum essent nobilibus orti natalibus, nobilitatem suam fidei operibus ornare cupientes, heremiticam vitam ducere elegerunt; et quoniam inveni eos humiles ac quietos, elegi potius cum illis abjectus esse, magis quam in regalibus curiis habitare. Sed quia omnium nostrum erat cor unum et anima una, eligimus omnes simul habitare, comedere et bibere pariter, et in eadem domo dormire. Sicque me licet invitum sibi pretulerunt. Non enim dignus eram soluere corrigiam calciamentorum eorum. Et cum vitam monasticam ita duceremus juxta normam probabiliu[m] patrum, ostenderunt michi prefati fratres, scripta sanctorum Phagani et Deruviani. In quibus continebatur, quod duodecim discipuli sanctorum Philippi et Jacobi ipsam vetustam ecclesiam [construxerunt in honore prelibate advocatricis nostre, per doctrinamentum beati arch-angeli Gabrielis. Insuper et quod Dominus eandem ecclesiam^a] celitus in honore sue matris dedicaverat, et quod tres reges pagani, ipsis duodecim ad eorum sustentementum, duodecim porciones terre dederunt; necnon et in scriptis recencioribus inveni quod sancti Phaganus et Deruvianus perquisierant ab Elutherio papa, qui eos miserat, triginta annos indulgentie. Et ego frater Patricius a pie memorie Celestino papa, duodecim annos tempore meo adquisivi. Post multum vero temporis, assumpto mecum Wellia confratre meo, per condensitatem silve, cum magna difficultate, conscendimus cacumen montis qui eminet in eadem insula. Quo cum pervenissemus, aperuit oratorium unum vetustum, et fere dirutum, habile tamen devocioni Christiane, et, prout michi videbatur, a Deo electum. Quod cum ingressi essemus, tanta odoris suavitate replebamur, ut in paradisi amenitate positos nos crederemus. Egredientes igitur et reingredientes, locumque diligentius perscrutantes, invenimus volumen unum in quo scripti erant Actus Apostolorum, pariter cum actis, et gestis sanctorum Phagani et Deruviani, ex magna parte consumptum. In cujus tamen fine voluminis invenimus scripturam que dicebat, quod predicti Phaganus et Deruvianus, per revelationem Domini nostri Jesu Christi, idem oratorium edificaverunt, in honore sancti Michaelis arch-angeli, quatinus ibi ab hominibus haberet honorem, qui homines in perpetuos honores, jubente Deo, est introducturus. Et, cum delectaret nos illa scriptura, nitebamur eam ad finem legere. Dicebat enim eadem scriptura, quod venerandi Phaganus et Deruvianus moram ibi fecerunt per novem annos, et quod ipsi etiam perquisierant triginta annorum indulgentiam omnibus Christianis locum ipsum ob honorem beati Michaelis pia voluntate visitantibus. Invenio ergo tanto divine bonitatis thesauro, ego et frater Wellias tribus mensibus jejunavimus, orationibus vacantes et vigiliis, demonibusque et beluis multiformiter apparentibus impetrantes. Quadam autem nocte cum me sopori dedissem, apparuit michi Dominus Jesus in visu, dicens, Patrici serve meus, scias me elegisse locum istum ad honorem nominis mei, et ut hic honoranter invocent adjutorium arch-angeli mei Michaelis. Et hoc tibi signum et fratribus tuis, quatinus et ipsi credant; brachium tuum sinistrum arescet, donec que vidisti annunciaveris fratribus qui in cella sunt inferiori, et denuo huc redieris; et factum est ita. Ab illo die statuimus duos fratres inperpetuum ibi, nisi pastores futuri ob justam causam aliter decreverint. Arnulpho autem et Ogmar Hibernicis fratribus qui mecum venerant de Hibernia, pro eo quod ad exortacionem meam apud dictum humiliter oratorium manere ceperunt, presentem paginam commisi; aliam similem in archa sancte Marie retinens, in monumentum posteris. Et ego frater Patricius per consilium fratrum meorum, omnibus, qui silvam ex omni parte prefati montis in securi et ascia pia intentione dejecerint, ut facilius paretur aditus Christianis, ecclesiam beate perpetueque virginis pie visitaturis, et oratorium predictum, centum dies venie concedo.

CARTA INE REGIS. Ibid. fol. 60, b.

IN nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi. Ego Ine rex decreto et consilio presulis nostri Aldelmi, simulque cunctorum Dei sacerdotum suggestio, et monachorum petitione qui in perochia West-saxonum conversantur, hanc libertatem monachis, qui in ecclesia beate Dei genetricis Marie, et beati Patricii, omnipotenti Deo, sub Abbate Hemgislo famulantur, in pristina urbe que dicitur GLASTINGAY impendo et hanc privilegii dignitatem super altare pono, ut sine impedimento secularium rerum, et absque tributo fiscalium negociorum, liberis mentibus, soli Deo serviant, et monasticam disciplinam, Christo suffragium largiente, regulariter exercent, et pro statu et prosperitate regni nostri, et indulgentia commissorum criminum, ante conspectum divine majestatis preces fundere dignentur: et orationum officia frequentantes, in ecclesiis pro nostra fragilitate interpellare nitantur. Si quis vero contra hujus decreti singrapham venire temptaverit, sciat se coram Christo, novemque angelorum ordinibus, in tremendo examine rationem redditurum. Pro ampliori firmitatis testamento, principes et senatores, judices, et patricos subscribere fecimus; actum publice, et confirmatum in lignea basilica, anno ab incarnationis Domini septingentesimo quarto.

NUM. VII.

CARTA INE REGIS. Ibid. fol. 63.

ADJUVA nos Deus salutaris noster. Quecunque secundum decreta canonum, atque ecclesiastica instituta, salubri consilio diffiniuntur, quamquam sermo tantum absque textu sufficeret, tamen quoniam plerumque nostris temporibus, tempestates, et turbines secularium rerum, etiam portas ecclesie pulsant, iccirco opere precium censuimus, ob cautelam futurorum, ea que diffinita sunt, paginis scripturarum annectere, ne in posterum oblivioni tradita ignorentur. Qua propter ego Ina, regali fretus dignitate a Domino, cum consilio Sexburge regine et licencia Beorthwaldi Dorobernensis ecclesie pontificis, et omnium suffraganeum suorum, necnon etiam hortatu Baldredi et Athelardi subregulorum, ecclesie vetuste, que est in loco qui dicitur GLASTEIE, quam magnus sacerdos, et pontifex summus angelorum obsequio sibi ac perpetue virgini Marie, beato David, multis et inauditis miraculis, olim se sanctificasse innotuit, ex hiis que paterna hereditate possideo, et in dominium peculiare teneo, locis continuis et congruentibus concedo, ad supplementum vite regularis, et ad usum monachorum: BRENTA decem hidas, SOWY duodecim hidas, POULTON viginti hidas, DULTING viginti hidas, BLEDENEIE unam hidam, cum hiis omnibus, que antecessores mei eidem ecclesie contulerunt. Kenewalchius, qui sancto Theodoro archiepiscopo interveniente, FERLINGMERE, BEOKERY, GODENEI, MARTINESEIE, EDREDESEIE; Kentwinus rex qui GLASTINGIE matrem sanctorum vocare solitus fuerat, et eam ab omni seculari, et ecclesiastico obsequio immunem statuit, et hanc privilegii dignitatem concessit, ut habeant fratres ejusdem loci potestatem elegendi, et constituendi sibi rectorem juxta regulam sancti Benedicti. Hecde episcopus qui, Cedwalla annuente et propria manu, licet paganus, confirmante, LANTOCAL. Baldred qui PENNARD, sex hidas. Athelward, qui POHOLT, sexaginta hidas, me annuente et confirmante, dederunt. Quorum ego devocioni, et benigne petitioni assencio, et contra malignancium, hominum, et oblatrancium canum insidias, regalium munimine invigilo literarum, quatinus ecclesia Domini nostri Jesu Christi, et perpetue virginis Marie, sicut in regno Britannie est prima, et fons et origo tocius religionis, ita et ipsa supereminentem privilegii obtineat dignitatem, nec ulli omnino homini ancillare obsequium faciat in terris, que super choros angelorum dominatur in celis. Igitur, summo pontifice Gregorio annuente, et ut matrem Domini sui in sinum et protectionem sancte Romane ecclesie, me, licet indignum, cum ipsa suscipiente, consencientibus etiam omnibus Britannie regibus, archiepiscopis, episcopis, ducibus, atque abbatibus, statuo ego atque confirmo, quatinus omnes terre et loca, et possessiones beate Marie GLASTEIE sint quiete, et ab omnibus regiis exactionibus, et operibus que indici solent, videlicet expeditione, pontis arcis-ve constructione, et ab omni archiepiscoporum et episcoporum promulgacionibus, et perturbacionibus, sicut in antiquis ejusdem ecclesie cartis ratum esse invenitur, et a predecessoribus meis, Kenevalchio, Kentwino, Cedwalla, et Baldredo confirmatum esse dinoscitur, inconcussa et illibata permaneant. Et quecumque immerserint cause, in homicidiis, sacrilegiis, veneficiis, furtis, rapinis, in dispositione ecclesiarum, et descriptione, et ordinacione clericorum, in conventiculis sinodalibus, et in omnibus judiciariis examinacionibus, absque ullius hominis prejudicio, abbatis et conventus dispositione diffiniantur; set et omnibus regni mei regibus, archiepiscopis, episcopis, ducibus, et principibus, super honorem suum, et amorem meum precipio, et omnibus, tam meis quam eorum ministris, super salutem corporis sui precipio, ne ullus eorum in insulam Domini nostri Jesu Christi, et perpetue virginis Marie GLASTEIE, nec ejusdem ecclesie possessiones, causa placitandi, perscrutandi, rapiendi, percipiendi, interdicendi, vel aliquid faciendi, quod ibidem Deo famulantibus possit esse in scandalum, audeat intrare. Illud autem omnipotentis Dei et perpetue virginis Marie, et beatorum Petri et Pauli et omnium intercessione sanctorum, interdictione interdico, ne in ipsa Glastoniensi ecclesia, nec in ecclesiis sibi subditis, videlicet SOWY, BRENTE, MERLINGE, SCHAPEWIK, STRETE, BUDCALETH, PILTON, nec in earum capellis, sed nec in insulis, aliqua interveniente occasione, episcopus cathedram sibi episcopalem statuere, nec missas solempnes celebrare, nec altaria consecrare, nec ecclesias dedicare, nec ordines facere, nec aliquid omnino disponere presumat, nisi ab abbate, vel a fratribus invitatus fuerit; quod si ad hec invitatus fuerit, nichil de rebus ecclesie set nec de ipsis oblacionibus ipse sibi aliquid usurpet. Duobus in locis ex ipsius ecclesie possessionibus duas ei delegamus mansiones, unam in POHELT, alteram in villa que Piltona dicitur, ut habeat ubi adveniens hospitetur, vel inde veniens sese recipiat. Neque enim eum ibi nisi importunitate temporis aut molestia corporis detentus fuerit, aut ab abbate, vel a fratribus rogatus fuerit; nec amplius quam cum tribus aut cum quatuor clericis pernoctare licet. Hoc etiam provideat idem episcopus, ut singulis annis cum clericis suis qui Fontanetum sunt, ipsam matrem suam Glastoniensem videlicet ecclesiam, feria secunda post ascencionem Domini, cum Letania recognoscat. Quod si superbia inflatus eam distulerit, et que superius dicta et confirmata sunt, prevaricaverit, mansiones sibi superius delegatas amittat. Abbas vel monachi a quocumque voluerint episcopo, qui pascha canonicum celebret, ecclesiastica sacramenta in Glastoniensi ecclesia, aut in ecclesiis sibi subjectis, aut in earum capellis, percipiant. Quisquis autem hujus mee munificencie, et libertatis testamentum, quovis deinceps tempore, aliqua occasione, cujuslibet etiam dignitatis vel professionis, vel gradus, pervertere, vel in irritum deducere temptaverit, sciat se cum Juda proditore eterna confusione edacibus ineffabilium tormentorum periturum flammis. Scripta est autem hujus donacionis, et privilegii pagina, anno dominice incarnationis septingentesimo vicesimo quinto, indictione quarta, sub presencia Ine regis, et Beorthwaldi Dorobernensis pontificis, venerandorumque antistitum Danielis, atque Fordredis, et aliorum quorum nomina inferius annotantur. IN nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi. Quamvis decreta pontificum et verba sacerdotum inconvulsis ligaminibus, velud fundamenta moncium, fixa sunt, tamen plerumque tempestatibus et turbinationibus secularium rerum religio sancte ecclesie, maculis reprobiorum, dissipatur ac rumpitur. tiquo, principalem in regno meo obtinet dignitatem, ita speciali quadam et singulari privilegii libertate per nos honoretur. Si autem abbas vel quilibet monachus loci illius, latronem qui ad suspendium, vel quodlibet mortis periculum, ducitur, in itinere obviam habuerit, potestatem habeant eripiendi eum ab imminente periculo in toto regno meo. Dedicaciones vero ecclesiarum, si ab abbate rogatus fuerit, Fontanensi episcopo permittimus. In pascha quoque crisma sanctificationis, et oleum a Fontanensi episcopo ex more accipiat, et per prefatas ecclesias suas distribuat. Verum illud precipue ex omnipotentis Patris et Filii et Spiritus sancti auctoritate et perpetuæ virginis interdictione prohibeo, et universis regni mei præpositis et primatibus super suam salutem precipio, ut nullus omnino illam insulam intrare audeat cujuscumque ordinis sit aut dignitatis: set omnia, tam in ecclesiasticis quam in secularibus causis tantummodo abbatis judicium et conventus expectent, sicuti prædecessores mei sanxerunt et privilegiis confirmaverunt, Kentwines, Ines, Cuthredus, Elfredus, Edwardus, Edmundus et incomparabilis Edgarus. Si quis autem quovis deinceps tempore sub aliqua occasione interrumpere aut irritum facere hujus privilegii testimonium nisus fuerit, sit a consorcio piorum ultimi examinis ventilabro dispertitus. Si quis vero benevola intencione hæc facere, probare, et defendere statuerit, beatissime Dei genitricis, Mariæ et omnium Sanctorum intercessione amplifiet Deus porcionem ejus in terra vivencium. Scripta est hujus privilegii donacio et promulgata in lignea basilica sub presencia regis Cnutonis anno ab incarnatione Domini mxxxii.

Privilegium Leonis Pape. Will. Malm. edit. Hearn.

LEO apostolicæ sedis papa, servus servorum Dei, Kinelmo regi, et ejus ministris, et cognatis, et successoribus ejus, optat et mittit pacem et salutem perpetuam. Bonæ voluntatis et laudabilis optationis cogitacio, tum apostolicis scriptis est confirmanda et corroboranda, ut quod bene fuerit factum, et per rationabilia exempla confirmatum, nulla deinceps possit corrupcione vel turbari vel frangi, imo potius inviolabili rectitudine, et divina auctoritate, debeat inconcussum permanere. Et ideo egregie apostolica sententia præcipitur, ut incunctanter confirmari debeat, quod recte inchoatum fuisse constat: quapropter quia notum est quod tua illustris fides petiit a nobis, ut tibi scripto confirmarem monasterium Domini nostri Jesu Christi, in Glastonia Westsaxonum regni, in quo monasterio servorum Dei congregatio est, cujus terræ ad octingentas hidas numerantur in multis provinciis et locis positæ, sicut Egfridus rex omnem illam terram descripsit, cum judicio et licentia Brihtrici regis, et cum licencia et testimonio Merciorum episcoporum et principum, et sicut postea Kenwlfo regi Merciorum omnes illæ terræ scripto confirmatæ sunt. Ideo concessionem illam regum, et episcoporum, et principum cum corroboracione regis Merciorum Kenwlfi, cum apostolico robore et auctoritate confirmamus tibi, Kenelme, et successoribus tuis; monasterium scilicet libere in perpetuum habendi, cum omnibus villis et agris in multis regionibus divisus, cum omnibus rebus ad hoc pertinentibus, sylvis, et pratis, et pasturis, et piscium capturis, hac condicione, ut frequentarent ibi luminaria coram Deo, et spirituales cantus, et psalmi, et missæ cantentur, et concordia sine simultacione: hinc enim scriptum est in Evangelio, domus mea domus oracionis vocabitur. Quocirca servi Dei qui in hac vita laborant, debent diatim cum timore divino totum spirituale officium implere, ut possint Domino nostro Jesu Christo placere. Preterea constituimus cum apostolico precepto, et sub timore divini judicii, et sub excommunicationis interminacione, ne ullus rex, aut archiepiscopus aut episcopus aut princeps, aut alicujus potestatis homo exaltatus, sive in majori ordine, sive in minori, ista nostra apostolica decreta violenter infringat, aut minuat: sed magis decernimus, ut prefatum monasterium firmum et stabile in omnia tempora perseveret. Quare si quislibet, quod non optamus, ista precepta nostra debilitaverit, sciat se ipsum per auctoritatem domini Petri apostolorum principis excommunicationis vinculo irretitum, et a regno Dei extorem: quicumque vero tenuerit, et servarit ista nostra apostolica decreta, sciat se promeruisse benedictionem apostolicam, et æternam vitam, a misericorde creatore nostro. Data per manus Eustachii primicerii notariorum, mense Martio, indictione tertia, octava die Martii, confirmata per manus Paschalis senioris, et consilarii apostolicæ sedis, regnante Domino nostro Jesu Christo cum Deo patre per infinita secula, tertio anno per misericordiam Dei papatus domini nostri Leonis, in sancta et apostolica sede sancti Petri, et etiam per licenciam Domini Karoli Francorum regis et Longobardorum, et Patricii Romanorum, anno regni ejus xxv°.

Sciatis, quod, intuitu Dei, et pro salute animæ meæ, et antecessorum et heredum nostrorum, concessimus, et presenti carta nostra confirmavimus, venerabili patri, Joscelino Bathon. episcopo, et successoribus suis in perpetuum, quod Robertus, abbas suus Glastoniæ, et omnes successores sui, habeant per omnes terras suas Toll et Theam, Infangenetheof et Utfangenetheof, et quod ipsi, et omnes homines eorum, et omnes homines de feudis suis, sint quieti in perpetuum erga nos, et heredes nostros, vicecomites, constabularios nostros, præpositos, et omnes ballivos nostros, de passagio, pontagio, lestagio, stallagio, de operationibus castellorum, domorum, murorum, fossatorum, pontium, calcetorum, vivariorum, stagnorum, et clausuris parcorum, et aruris, et omnibus aliis operationibus, de sectis schirarum et hundredorum, misericordiis, murdris, auxiliis vicecomitum, et escapiis latronum et aliorum malefactorum, et de bobus, de saisina, placitis, querelis, et omnibus exactionibus, ad vicecomites, constabularios, et alios ballivos nostros, pertinentibus. Concessimus etiam eidem episcopo, et successoribus suis, quod nullus vicecomes, constabularius, vel alius ballivus noster, ingressum vel posse habeat in predictis terris, feudis, vel hominibus, sed totum ad predictum episcopum, et successores suos, et eorum ballivos, pertineat, præter attachiamenta de placitis corone. Omnes autem prædictas libertates concessimus, ita quod Robertus abbas, et omnes successores sui, predictæ terre et feuda, et omnes homines de terris et feudis illis, subsint et respondeant et satisfaciant predicto episcopo, et successoribus suis, et nulli alii, nisi de voluntate ejusdem episcopi vel successorum suorum, de omnibus prædictis, sicut nobis, aut heredibus nostris, aut vicecomitibus, aut constabulariis, aut aliis ballivis nostris, subessent et responderent de eisdem, si ad nos illa pertinerent. Concessimus etiam quod idem episcopus, et successores sui distringere possint prædictum abbatem et successores suos, omnes terras et feuda, et homines de terra et feudis illorum omnibus, ad omnia prædicta, sicut nos ad eadem eos distringere possemus, aut heredes nostri, vel vicecomites, aut constabularii, vel aliqui alii ballivi nostri, si prædictas libertates, aut quietantias non dedissemus. Si vero prædictus episcopus aliquas libertates, aut quietantias, ex his, quæ continentur in carta ista, concesserit ecclesiæ suæ Glaston. nos illas eidem ecclesiæ confirmamus. Concessimus etiam eidem episcopo et successoribus suis, quod, si aliquis hominum de terris, vel feudis suis, sive ecclesiæ Glaston. vel Wellen. aut Bathon. pro delicto suo vitam vel membrum debeat amittere, vel fugeret, et iudicio stare noluerit, vel aliud delictum fecerit, pro quo debeat, sive in curia nostra, sive in alia curia, omnia catalla illa sint prædicti episcopi et successorum suorum, et liceat eis, sine disturbance vicecomitum, aut quorumcumque ballivorum nostrorum, et aliorum, ponere se in saisinam de prædictis catallis in prædictis casibus et aliis, quando ballivi nostri, si ad nos pertinerent catalla illa, in manu nostra ea saisire possent et deberent. Concessimus etiam sæpe dicto episcopo, et successoribus suis, quod habeant in perpetuum omnia amerciamenta et fines pro misericordiis, et fines pro transgressionibus, et fines pro licentia concordandi de omnibus hominibus, de terris et feudis suis, et de abbate et monachis Glaston. decano et canonicis Wellen. priore et monachis Bathon. et eorum successoribus, et de omnibus hominibus, de terris et feudis omnibus eorumdem, quæ amerciamenta vel fines ad nos, vel heredes nostros, vel vicecomites, aut constabularios, vel aliquos alios ballivos nostros, pertinerent, si ipsa amerciamenta et fines prædictis episcopo et successoribus suis concessa non fuissent. Et quod idem episcopus, et successores sui, habeant potestatem ad distringendum omnes prædictos, ad amerciamenta eis reddenda et fines. Prohibemus insuper, super forisfacturam nostram, ne quis de prædictis amerciamentis vel finibus colligendis vel recipiendis, sive districtione inde facienda, nisi per voluntatem ipsius episcopi, aut successorum suorum, se intromittat. Concessimus insuper eidem episcopo, et successoribus suis, quod licet aliqua libertatum, per nos eis concessarum, processu temporis, quocumque casu contingente, usi non fuerint, nihilominus tamen postea utantur libertates eadem, sine aliqua contradictione, non obstante eo, quod aliquo casu ea usi non fuerint. Omnes autem prædictas libertates et quietantias concessimus, pro nobis et heredibus nostris, sæpe dicto episcopo, et successoribus suis, in liberam, puram et perpetuam eleemosynam. Quare volumus et firmiter precipimus, quod ipsi eas ita habeant et teneant in perpetuum, et quod prædictus abbas Glaston. et successores sui, et omnes homines eorum, et terræ et feuda, et omnes homines de feudis illis, habeant prædictas libertates et quietantias, bene et in pace, integre et plenarie, in omnibus rebus et locis, in perpetuum, sicut predictum est. His testibus, venerabilibus patribus Edmundo Cantuar. archiepiscopo, R. Dunelmen. &c. Datum per manum venerabilis patris, Radulphi Cicester. episcopi, cancellarii nostri, apud Westmonast. xiiii. die Octobris, anno regni nostri decimo octavo.

Confirmatio Regis Henrici II. de donacionibus eccles. de Pilton et Suthbrent, a Roberto Abbate Glaston factis anno 1173. Ibid. (ex Reg. Well. I. fol. 25.)

HENRICUS, Dei gratia, etc. Sciatis, me concessisse et presenti carta mea confirmasse, pro salute animæ meæ, et patris mei, et antecessorum meorum, donationem, quam Robertus, abbas Glaston, assensu et voluntate sui conventus fecit Deo et ecclesiæ beati Andreae de Well. de ecclesia sua de Pilton, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, in perpetuam eleemosynam, ita quod de eadem ecclesia duæ fiant prebendæ in ecclesia Wellen. una decem marcarum, et altera de residuo, et abbas de ecclesia illa de Pilton reddat canonico Wellen. annuatim decem marcas, nomine prebendæ Wellen. cui episcopus præbendam illam decem marcarum assignaverit, et perpetuo vicario tres marcas annuatim, qui pro ipso abbate in ecclesia Wellen. serviet: reliquam vero ecclesiam de Pilton, portionem totam abbas et omnes successores ejus in perpetuum, nomine Wellensis præbendæ, sibi retineant. Si vero abbas decesserit, vel discesserit, ecclesia de Pilton, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, in manum canonici Wellen. cui præbenda decem marcarum supradicta in eadem ecclesia fuerit assignata, deveniet, qui deductis inde decem marcis suis, quas habet in illa ecclesia nomine præbendæ, et tribus marcis, quæ vicario abbatis in perpetuum sunt assignatæ, totius residui unam medietatem capitulo Wellen. reliquum vero conventui Glaston. exolvat. In hoc autem statu erit ecclesia de Pilton, donec aliquis in ecclesia Glaston. canonicè fuit electus, et episcopo Bathon. de ejus benedictione loco et tempore requisitus opportuno. Concedo etiam et confirmo quod Reginaldus, Bathon. episcopus, assensu capituli Wellen. et conventus Bathon. statuit super decem ecclesiis, scilicet, ecclesia Sti. Johannis in Glaston. ecclesia de Mere, et Stret, et Budekeleg, Shapewica, Sowi, Marilingch, Pilton, Pennard et Dichesjeta, ut abbas Glaston. (Robertus videlicet) et omnes successores sui in perpetuum de eisdem ecclesiis archidiaconi fiant, et episcopo Bathoniensi in omnibus, secundum consuetudinem aliorum archidiaconorum suorum, respondeant: excepta consuetudine paschali, de qua non tenebuntur^a quantum ad septem ecclesias, sicut ab antiquo non tenebantur; eo etiam excepto, quod de causis ecclesiasticis abbas plene diffinit, quæ præter conscientiam episcopi de jure potuerunt terminari. Decedente vero abbate, vel discedente, archidiaconatus ille in custodiam prioris et conventus Glaston. devolvitur, cum ea integritate et libertate, qua in manu abbatis extiterat. Quia vero Thomas, Well. archidiaconus, illarum decem ecclesiarum septem, ad suum archidiaconatum pertinentes, ut asserebat, ex toto quietas clamabat, et tres ecclesias, quæ, sine dubitatione aliqua, vel contentione, ad archidiaconatum suum pertinebant, ad illius archidiaconatus abbatis incrementum concessit, ut inter Well. et Glaston. ecclesias omnis de cetero controversia sopiretur; assignavit Robertus abbas, assensu et voluntate totius conventus sui Thomæ, archidiacono Well. et successoribus suis in perpetuum, ecclesiam de Suthbrente, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, in præbendam Wellen. ecclesiæ; ita quod ipse archidiaconus, et successores sui de præbenda illa nominatim per manum episcopi fiant canonici, præstiti fidelitate ecclesiæ Glaston. ab ipsis archidiaconis. Cum vero abbas canonicè fuerit electus, et episcopo de ejus benedictione loco congruo et tempore requisitus, recipiet abbas archidiaconatum et præbendam de manu episcopi, facta ei fidelitate, et ecclesiæ Wellen. secundum consuetudinem aliorum archidiaconorum et canonicorum Wellen. Quare volo et firmiter præcipio, quod ecclesia Wellen. prædictas ecclesias, de Piltun scilicet et Suthbrente, habeat et teneat libere et quiete, honorifice et integre, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, et ecclesia Glaston. habeat et teneat archidiaconatum et præbendam in ecclesia Wellen. sicut superius assignatum est, et cum libertate prædicta. Charta Regis Henrici II. super restauratione ecclesiæ Glastonburiensis, totius Angliæ et orbis christiani antiquissimæ, cum in manibus ejusdem regis existens in cineres fuisset redacta. Wilkins. Concilia. vol. 1. p. 489.

HENRICUS Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dux Normaniæ, Aquitaniæ, et comes Andegaviæ, archiepiscopis, episcopis,

^a Quantum ad Septem ecclesias. There had been a controversy of above four hundred and fifty years standing, between the monks of Glastonbury and the bishops of the diocese, about the jurisdiction over those parishes, which afterwards made up the archdeaconry of Glastonbury, and are to this day called the jurisdiction of Glastonbury.

The seven parishes named in king Ina's charter of exemption, anno 725, are Sow, Brent, Merling, Schapewick, Strete, Budcaeth, and Pilton; the charter of king Edgar, anno 971, mentions but five of these parishes, and leaves out Brent and Pilton. Henry the Second's charter, 1185, printed in the History of Glastonbury, p. 129, mentions seven churches, as in king Ina's charter, and the same, except Brent, which is omitted, and instead of that Dichseat is inserted.

But in truth, the seven churches claimed by the archdeacon of Wells on one side, and the abbat and monks on the other, were those mentioned in this charter of king Henry, and the other three, of Pilton, Pennard, and Ditchet, never did belong to the monks, but were given up at this time in exchange for the prebend of Southbrent: though they did not continue long under the jurisdiction of the archdeacons of Glastonbury; for Pilton being made the corps of the chantership in the cathedral of Wells, became an exempt jurisdiction of itself, and Pennard and Ditchet returned to the archdeacon of Wells, and the archdeaconry of Glastonbury was continued within the seven parishes mentioned in this charter. Notwithstanding this, both Pilton and Ditchet are mentioned in the prohibition sent to the bishop, 1319, as belonging to the jurisdiction of the abbat and convent, when it is most evident, by the registers, that Pilton was then a peculiar jurisdiction, belonging to the precentor of Wells, as it is now; and Ditchet was then in the jurisdiction of the bishop and archdeacon of Wells, as it is still.—Archer.

abbatibus, comitibus, justitiariis, baronibus, vicecomitibus, et omnibus fidelibus suis Francis et Anglis totius Angliæ. Quod quisque seminaverit homo, hoc et metet. Ecclesiæ Glastoniensis fundamentum jaciens, quæ, dum in manu mea fuerat incendio consumpta, in cinerem recidit, eam, Domino volente, persuadentibus Heraclio patriarcha Hierosolymitano, Baldewino archiepiscopo Cantuariæ, Richardo Wintoniensi episcopo, Bartholomæo Exoniensi episcopo, Randulpho de Glanvill, cum multis aliis, per me aut per hæredes meos consummandam, magnificentius reparare decrevi. Quæcunque eciam a predecessoribus meis, Willielmo primo, et Willielmo secundo et Henrico avo meo, sed ab antiquioribus, videlicet ab Edgardo patre sancti Edwardi, ab Edmundo et patre ipsius Edwardo, et Elfredo, avo ejusdem Kinemricho, Kentwino, Baldredo, Ina, inlyto Arthuro, Cuthredo, et multis aliis regibus christianis, sed et a Kenewalla quodam rege pagano, quorum privilegia et chartas feci diligenter inquiri, et coram me præsentari et legi, confirmata sunt predictæ ecclesiæ, quæ olim a quibusdam Mater Sanctorum dicta est, ab aliis Tumulus Sanctorum, quam ab ipsis discipulis Domini edificatam, et ab ipso Domino dedicatam primo fuisse, venerabilis habet antiquorum autoritas. Ego quoque in honorem Dei, et beatissimæ Virginis matris suæ, quæ locum illum sibi specialiter et primum in hoc regno elegit, et omnium sanctorum ibidem quiescentium, pro salute animæ meæ, et antecessorum et hæredum meorum, concedo et hac mea charta confirmo omnes libertates et dignitates, privilegia et liberas consuetudines, quæ a prædictis nobilibus viris collata sunt præfatæ ecclesiæ, et apostolicis sanctionibus sunt munita, et a beatis Elphego et Dunstano archiepiscopis, et quondam loci illius monachis, et a predecessoribus eorum et posteris roborata. Habeat igitur et possideat sæpedita ecclesia omnes possessiones suas et terras, et omnes forefacturas earundem, feuda, servitia militum, ubicunque fuerint in toto regno meo, in pace, et quiete, libere et inconcusse, sicut ege res meas dominicas liberius habeo. Fugitivos suos, ubicunque inventi fuerint, absque omni calumnia et impedimento habeant. Et sint abbas et monachi, et familia eorum quieti per totum regnum meum de tolneto et passagio; habeat quoque eadem ecclesia et omnes terræ suæ jocam, et jacam, on rþronde, on rþreme, on rþode, et on rþelbe, rþuthþrich, on burþþrich, hundþeþetene, aþar, et oþdelar, ealle horþar buþan eorþham et benetham, inþangenetheoþ et flemþþrime, hamþocne, rþudþriche, rþoþeþeall, toll et team; sed præcipue villa Glastoniæ, in quæ vetusta ecclesia genetricis Dei sita est, quæ fons et origo totius religionis Angliæ pro certo habetur, præ cæteris sit liberior, cum suis insulis, scil. Bekeria, quæ parva Hibernia dicitur, Godeneia, Martineseia, Feramere, Patenebergia, Andredeseia, ut nullus hominum, rex, archiepiscopus, episcopus, justitiarius, vicecomes, forestarius, vel alius ballivus, sive minister, vel alius aliquis hominum, audeat intrare prædicta loca, causa placitandi, aut perscrutandi, aut capiendi, aut aliud faciendi, quod ecclesiæ dignitati, vel inibi Deo servientibus contrarium esse possit, aut molestiæ: sed abbati tantum, et conventui sit potestas in causis tam notis quam ignotis, in modicis et in magnis, et in omnibus omnino negotiis tractandis et terminandis. Concedo etiam eisdem eandem auctoritatem et potestatem puniendi et dimittendi commissi delinquentium in locis prædictis, quam mea dominica curia habet, et quantum ad regiam majestatem pertinet, volo et præcipio sicut prædecessores mei statuerunt, et summi pontifices sanxerunt, nec non et ecclesiæ Cantuariensis prælati confirmaverunt, sed et episcopi diæcesani assensum præstantes roboraverunt, quod eadem ecclesia, cum præfatis insulis, et cum septem ecclesiis ei subjectis, scilicet de Strete, Piltona, Dichsgata, Budekeleia, Schapewica, Merelinge, Sowi cum capellis earum, presbyteris, clericis, et servientibus, libera sit omnino ab omni jurisdictione episcopi Bathonensis, sicut mea propria corona. Benedictionem quoque abbatis, ordines et omnia sacramenta ab episcopo celebranda, a quocunque voluerint episcopo faciant fieri. Habeant quoque monachi libertatem, potestatem et dignitatem eligendi et constituendi sibi rectorem juxta regulam beati Benedicti, sine omni contradictione et impedimento. Sed nec aliquis omnino hominum in ecclesia Glastoniæ, aut in prædictis insulis, vel ecclesiis aut capellis suis, quacunque ex causa præsumat cathedram episcopalem statuere. Si quid tandem amplius regum vel pontificum privilegiis ecclesiæ sæpius memoratæ, quod ad dignitatem vel libertatem faciat, collatum fuerit, ratum et inconvulsum esse volo in perpetuum, et firmiter observari ab universis præcipio. Valde namque verendum, et omnibus modis cavendum est, tot sanctorum regum et pontificum contraire privilegiis, quibus ecclesia illa hactenus insignita est, ne tot sanctorum maledictiones in renitentes datæ vel alio modo statuere præsumentes, incurrantur. Testibus Heraclio patriarcha Hierosolymitano, Willielmo Remensi archiepiscopo, Baldewino archiepiscopo Cantuariensi, Richardo Wintoniensi episcopo, Bartholomæo Exoniensi episcopo, Reginaldo Bathoniensi episcopo, Willielmo comite de Mandevill, Randulpho de Glanvill, et multis aliis apud Westmonasterium.

Epistola Joannis 15. Pape ad Ælfricum ducem de plurimis malis et injuriis ab illo illatis ecclesie Sancte Marie Glastoniensis [Glastingaburneg.] Bibl. Cotton. Vitell. D. VII. 67. fol. 161.

JOHANNES episcopus servus servorum Dei Ælfrico inelyto duci amantissimo filio nostro spirituali salutem continuam et apostolicam benedictionem. Relacione quorundam fidelium comperimus te plurima agere mala in ecclesia sancte Dei genetricis Marie que nuncupatur Glastingaburneg, et predia et villas ab ejus jure tua avida cupiditate diripuisse, et propter quod eodem loco propinque inheres habitacione illi semper nocuus esse. Oportunum enim erat ut tuo suffragio sancta Dei ecclesia, cui propinquus habitando effectus es, per plurimum accresceret et copia tui adjutorii proprietatibus ditaretur. Sed quod nefas est tuo decrescit impedimento, tuaque humiliatur oppressione. Et quia licet indigni non dubitamus nos in beato Petro apostolo omnium ecclesiarum curam omniumque fidelium suscepisse sollicitudinem: Ideoque tuam monemus dilectionem, ut pro amore apostolorum Petri et Pauli, nostraque veneracione, ab ipsius loci cesses direpcione, nil ab eis proprietatibus, villis et possessionibus invadens. Quod si hec non feceris, scias te vice apostolorum principis nostra auctoritate excommunicandum, et a cetu fidelium remotum perpetuoque anathemati submissum, et eterno igni cum Juda traditore perenniter mancipatum.

CANTERBURY.

POPE Gregory, having, under the direction of his predecessor Benedict, attempted in person to convert the Saxons, sent, immediately after his election to the papal chair, AUGUSTINE and some others of his monastery in hopes of completing so desirable an undertaking; now indeed rendered more easy by the marriage of Ethelbert king of Kent with a daughter of France, named Bertha, who was expressly permitted the free exercise of the christian religion, and was on that account accompanied by one Luidhard, a French bishop, and to them was allotted the church of St. Martin's^a in the suburbs of Canterbury. The king, although he became not himself immediately a convert, permitted Augustine and his followers to remain and make proselytes of such of his subjects as were willing to embrace the christian faith; at length he was baptized, and assigned to them his palace and retired to Reculver.

Augustine, having been so successful in his mission, crossed the seas and was consecrated archbishop of the English by Etherius bishop of Arles, by the direction of pope Gregory, from whom he received the pall accompanied with a letter cautioning him not to be puffed up with pride on account of the miracles he had wrought, which, according to ^banother letter from pope Gregory to Eulogius an eastern bishop, had so won upon the English, that, on the Christmas day after St. Augustine's arrival, no less than 10,000 were baptized. St. Augustine endeavoured to settle a correspondence with the Welsh bishops, but they were unwilling to acknowledge either the pope's or the archbishop's metropolitanical power. Having appointed Lawrence to succeed him, he died 7 cal. Jun. 604. and was buried near the church of St. Peter and St. Paul, because at the time of his decease that church was not finished; but as soon as it was dedicated, his body was removed and decently buried in the north porch of the said church, from whence it was afterwards taken by Thomas Fyndon the abbot, in the year 1300, and placed near the high altar in a sumptuous monument with this inscription:

^c Inclytus Anglorum Præsul, pius, et decus altum,
Hic Augustinus requiescit corpore sanctus;
Ad tumulum laudis Patris almi ductus amore
Abbas hunc tumulum Thomas dictavit honore.

LAWRENCE, a native of Rome and priest with Augustine, was nominated, ^d as before mentioned, his successor during his life-time, lest upon his death the church might be unsettled. He firmly trod in the steps of his predecessor, endeavouring to extend the knowledge of the christian faith to the Scots and the Irish: but king Ethelbert dying soon afterwards, in the year 616, his son and successor Eadbald revolted to Paganism, and Lawrence meditated following the example of Mellitus and Justus, bishops of London and Rochester, who had quitted the island on account of the opposition they had met with in their ministry. However by a pretended miracle alluded to in his epitaph, he is said to have recovered the king from his wicked courses, who, to shew his sincerity in his return to the duties of christianity, gave to Christ-Church, and to the family in that church serving God,^e Edesham, or Adesham, for their table. The archbishop did not survive long; and dying on the 3d of February, 619,^f was buried in the north porch near his predecessor, with this epitaph:

Hic sacra, Laurenti, sunt signa tui monumenti,
Tu quoque jocundus Pater, Antistesque secundus,
Pro populo Christi scapulas dorsumque dedisti,
Artubus hac laceris multa vibice mederis.

MELLITUS, a Roman of noble extraction, and of singular merit, succeeded: he had been consecrated bishop of London by St. Augustine, and, according to Bede, had received letters from pope Boniface for the regulating of the English church. He was archbishop only five years, dying on the 24th of April, 624; he was buried near his predecessor, with the following epitaph:^g

Summus Pontificum, flos tertius, et mel apricum;
Hic titulis clara refoles, Mellite, sub arca.
Laudibus ^h æternis te prædicat urbs Dorovernis,
Cui simul ardenti restas virtute potenti.

JUSTUS, who had been consecrated bishop of Rochester by Augustine, was then preferred to the archbishoprick. Upon his translation hither, pope Boniface the fifth sent him the pall, with letters requiring obedience to the papal see; ⁱ he having gained the better of the emperor Phocas, and set up an universal church power. He governed very wisely and religiously, and died, according to Bede, in the year 630,^k and was buried in St. Augustine's abbey, with this epitaph:

Istud habet bustum meritis cognomine Justum,
Quarto jure datus cui cessit Pontificatus;
Pro meritis Justi, sancta gravitate venusti,
Gratia divinam divina dat his medicinam.

HONORIUS, a venerable and learned Roman, who had been disciple to pope Gregory the great, after the see had been vacant eighteen months was consecrated, upon a privilege granted lately by the pope,^l at Lincoln. Upon his election he undertook the controversy with the Scots concerning Pelagianism, which began to spread among them. christianity made paganism penal. Honorius is said to have sat about 26 years. He was likewise buried at St. Augustine's, with the following epitaph :

Quintus honor memori versu memoratus Honori,
Digna sepultura quam non teret ulla litura.
Ardet in obscuro tua lux vibramine puro ;
Hæc scelus omne premit, fugat umbras, nubila demit.

FRITHONA, or TRITHONA, who, upon his consecration, changed his name to DEUS DEDIT, succeeded, after the see had been vacant about one year and an half. He was the first English prelate.^a Willis states that he was the last archbishop buried in the church-porch, and that his epitaph was as follows :

Alme Deus-dedit, cui sexta vacatio cedit,
Signas hunc lapidem, lapidi signatus eidem.
Prodit ab hac urna virtute salus diuturna,
Qua melioratur quicunque dolore gravatur.

After the see had been vacant four years, DAMIANUS,^b a South-Saxon, was nominated, and consecrated by Ithamar bishop of Rochester. Upon his consecration he went to Rome with letters and presents from the kings of Kent and Northumberland (who, since the Whitby conference, were much bigotted to that community), and there died of the plague;^c whereupon pope Vitalian pressed the place upon Adrian, a Carthaginian and abbot, and Andrew, a monk, who both declined it : at length he pitched upon one THEODORE, a Greek, born at Tarsus, and aged 66 years. He governed the church with great authority; in 673 he convened a famous synod at Herutford, and, having drawn up a book of canons, obtained the assent of the bishops and clergy present : the first relates to the observation of Easter; the last to the unlawfulness of marriage; and the rest relate chiefly to the regulation of the church and duty of bishops. In the year 680 he held another synod at Haethfield, to inquire into the faith of the church concerning the Monothelites. He was a man of very great learning (thence called Magnus) and indefatigable in promoting it; for which purpose he drew together a large number of disciples to Cricklade,^d near Oxford, where they read divinity, philosophy, arithmetic, astronomy, and music, that part particularly of church-singing; and at that time, says Bede, many of their scholars spake Greek as familiar as their mother tongue. He lived to be 88 years old, and died in the year 690, and was buried, according to Willis and Weever, in the body of the church, and the following verses were engraven on the wall in the church to the memory of him and his six predecessors :

Septem sunt Angli Primates et Protopatres ;
Septem rectores, septem cœloque triones ;
Septem cisternæ vitæ, septemque lucernæ ;
Et septem palmæ regni, septemque coronæ ;
Septem sunt stellæ, quas hæc tenet area cellæ.

Dart, however, in his account of this cathedral, from whom the principal part of this history is compiled, states that Theodore was buried in St. Augustine's porch, over whom was a Latin epitaph, of which thus much is extant in Bede, lib. v. cap. 7.

Hic sacer in tumba pausat cum corpore præsul,
Quem tunc Theodorum lingua pelasga vocat,
Princeps Pontificum, fœlix summusque sacerdos
Limpida discipulis dogmata disseruit ;
Ultimi autem hi :

Namque diem nonam decimam September habebat,
Cum carnis claustra spiritus egreditur ;
Alma novæ scandens fœlix consortia vitæ
Civibus angelicis junctus in arce poli.

Two years after his death BRIGHTWALD, an Englishman, abbot of Reculver, succeeded to the archbishoprick. He bears the character of a man very learned in scripture,^e and well versed in church and monastic affairs. He lived to a very great age, having governed 37 years, and was buried in the abbey church of St. Augustine, and this epitaph was engraven on his monument :^f

TATWINE, a Mercian, who succeeded, was consecrated on the 10th of June, 731. Godwin gives him the highest character, as a man well read in divinity and qualified for his high station. He wrote one book of poems and another of enigmas. He died in the year 734 (in which also died the venerable Bede), and was buried at St. Augustine's, with this epitaph :

Pontificis glebæ Tatwini Cantia præbe
Thura, decus, laudes, et ejus dogmate gaudes
Hujus doctrina caruisti mente farina,
Et per eum Christi portare jugum didicisti.

His successor was NOTHELMUS, a native of London, and supposed to be the monk whom Bede states to have been of so great assistance to him^g in furnishing such materials for his history, as related to St. Austin's mission and the conversion of Kent; for which purpose he travelled to Rome, and collected from the archives there the epistles of pope Gregory and his successors. He died October 17, 739, and was buried in the abbey church of St. Augustine.

Hæc scrobe Nothelmus jacet archiepiscopus almus,
Cujus vita bono non est indigna patrono.
Cunctis iste bonus par in bonitate patronus :
Protegit hic justos vigili munimine custos.

The next archbishop was CUTHBERT, bishop of Hereford. He was a man, says Stevens, of severe manners and made up of goodness itself. In the year 747 he convened the famous synod at Cloveshoe,^h in which Cuthbert and the other bishops opposed many encroachments of the pope, who was then aiming at universal dominion over the church. Havingⁱ procured from the pope permission for himself and successors to be interred in this church, and having obtained the king's confirmation of the grant, he gave orders, towards the close of his life, that no notice whatever of his death should be given until after his burial, lest, it is supposed, the monks of St. Augustine's should claim his body to be interred in their church with the archbishops his predecessors, the shewing of whose monuments had already become a source of great riches to them.

Upon Cuthbert's death, the convent, in regard of the singular modesty and piety of BREGWINE, elected him almost by force his successor. He died in the year 762, and was succeeded by

IANEBERT, called likewise LAMBRIETHUS,^k and EDELRED.^l During this archbishop's time a very heavy storm fell upon this church and convent; Offa, king of Mercia, a great and powerful prince, having conceived great displeasure against this prelate, persuaded pope Adrian to confer the honour of a pall upon Adulphus the bishop of Litchfield, and subject six bishops to be his suffragans, (which was agreed upon at the synod of Calcuith,) viz. Worcester, Leicester, Sidnacester, Hereford, Helmham, and Dunwich. This prelate, although his election was owing to the opposition which he had made to the archbishops being buried out of their own church, finding himself very ill, gave orders to be removed to St. Augustine's and buried there, which was accordingly performed, and this epitaph engraven to his memory :

Gemma sacerdotum, decus a tellure remotum,
Clauditur hæc fossa Ianebertus pulvis et ossa.
Sub hac mole cinis, sed laus tua nescia finis ;
Incola nunc cœli populo succurre fideli.

ATHELARD, or ETHELARD, formerly abbot of Malmesbury, and bishop of Winchester, was consecrated in the year 793. He influenced pope Leo to restore the full power and extent of authority to his see, which had been taken from it in his predecessor's time through the influence of king Offa: he also not only recovered some lands^m of which the Abby had been deprived, but suc-

WULFRED, or WILFRED, was elected archbishop in the place of Athelard, in 803. He held this see 28 years, and exceeded any of his predecessors in their benefactions to it, as appears by Mr. Somner's Appendix, the Evidences of this Church in Thorn's Chronicles, and the Obituary of the Bishops. Previous to this prelate's time, the monks seem to have lived scattered about, dieting only at one common^b table, and having only one general resort to religious worship, but now being enriched by the donations of king Offa, Kenulf, and the present archbishop, they began to build themselves a cloister, dormitory, and refectory. About this time we first read of a dean whose name was Ceolnoth, who was afterwards elected to the archbishoprick.^c A few months previous to the death of Wilfred, the monks were afflicted with a dreadful pestilence, which in the year 829 swept away, together with most of the citizens of Canterbury, all the convent, five only excepted.

THEOLOGILD succeeded Wilfred, but sat only three months; his sudden death was not improbably occasioned by the pestilence. He was succeeded by

SYRED, or SIRIC, who dying shortly after, is not numbered among the archbishops. The monks then elected

CEOLNOTH, the dean of this church, who, finding so small a number of monks in this church, thought fit to introduce secular priests, who continued in it for the space of one hundred and fifty years after. About the 20th year of this archbishop the Danes began those ravages, which continued for many years, when the city of Canterbury was depopulated, and this church plundered and neglected till the peaceable times of Alfred. He gave the village of Chert to this church.

ATHELRED succeeded Ceolnoth about the year 870, and died in 893.

PLEGMUND, the next archbishop, had in his youth sequestered himself from the world, and led an hermit's life in that part of Chester, anciently called from him Plegmunsham. He was brought from this obscurity into notice by king Alfred, upon whose recommendation he was elected archbishop about the year 890 or 891. He has the character of a very happy and glorious head of the church, eminent for his wisdom, justice, prudence, temperance and fortitude. Great confusion in church discipline having unfortunately occurred among the West Saxons from the various inroads of the Danes, Plegmund called a synod, and with the approbation of the pope divided that province into seven bishopricks. He died in 923 or 924, and was succeeded by ATHELMUS, bishop of Wells, who sat not quite four years.

WLFHELME, who succeeded, was also translated from Wells. In his time several synods were held, at which Wlfhelme presided, where the payment of tythes, trial by ordeal, &c. were settled. He governed his church with great applause for the space of thirteen years, and died in the year 941.

ODO^d was of Danish extraction, his parents being among those ravagers, who came over with Ingvar and

Hubba. "While he was young he applied himself to some christian assemblies, and being much affected with the excellent precepts learned there, he gladly repeated them to his parents, who being Pagans were highly incensed, and having endeavoured in vain to prevent his adhering to christianity, disinherited him, and turned him, unprovided into the world; thus exposed, he applied himself for shelter to Athelm, a nobleman and christian in the court of Alfred, who pleased with the lad's appearance, sent him to school and educated him well both in the Greek and Latin tongues, &c." He was afterwards appointed bishop of Wilton; and when the see of Canterbury became vacant, was pressed by Alfred to remove hither, which he for a long time refused. Two years after his consecration he published the Constitutions, which now bear his name, relating to the duties of the clergy, marriage, and tythes. He is said by the monkish writers to have been a strict disciplinarian, and was thence called Severus. He repaired the church of Canterbury, and did much good to the convent,^e but all his good qualities are more than overbalanced by his falsehoods, and the blasphemous miracles which he pretended were wrought by him to convince some men, who even in those days denied transubstantiation. He died in the year 958, and was buried on the south side of our Saviour's altar in Canterbury: the following is said to have been his epitaph:

Stemmate serenus jacet hic sacer Odo Severus,
Moribus excellens, acriter peccata refellens,
Presul et indulgens, omni pietate refulgens.
Ecclesie et Christi pugil invictissimus iste.
O bone nunc Christe, quia sic tibi servit iste, Celi solamen sibi des te, deprecor. Amen.

Upon the death of Odo, Edwy, who had been much persecuted by the monks, determined to bestow the see of Canterbury on a secular, and therefore named to it ELSINE, a delared enemy to the monks, bishop of Winchester, of the blood royal by affinity, and a prelate of very extraordinary learning: he enjoyed his dignities for a very short period; for in journeying over the Alps on his way to Rome for his pall, he perished from cold; and being brought over by his servants, was, in 959, buried at Winchester.

BRITHELM, who, upon Elsin's death, was promoted to Canterbury from the see of Wells, was not able to withstand the storm which was raised against him by the monks, who now, upon Edgar's accession to the throne, became possessed of almost absolute power. Upon the ground of ignorance and insufficiency, he was persuaded to retrace his steps to Wells, which he enjoyed twelve years, and was succeeded at Canterbury by

DUNSTAN. Of this prelate, previous to his elevation to the see of Canterbury, an account has been already given in page 3 of this work, in the history of Glastonbury Abbey, for the government of which he had been selected by king Edmund; he was afterwards, with many other monks, banished by king Edwin; but restored and promoted by king Edgar. He died according to the Textus Roffensis, and the obituary of this church, on the Sunday after Ascension-day, 988, and was succeeded by

ETHELGAR, who was removed hither from the see of Selsey, now Chichester. He sat only one year and three months. To him succeeded

SIRICIUS, translated from Wilton to this place in the year 989. He is said to have turned out all the seculars

^e From the time of Odo, the church became possessed of Peckings given by Wlfrie, the monastery of Raculure given by king Eldred, the village of Iecam by Athelwald, the villages of Meptham, Coalings, Osterland, Leanham, Peccham, Farnleghe, Monketon, and Aldirtone, were given by queen Ediva. Dunstan gave them Fengg and seven hides of land; king Egelred gave Sandwich and Estrean; Aleinus bishop of Dorehester gave Risburg. Elfgiva the queen gave Newinton and Brote-well, and presented to the church a golden chalice and eup, two silken dorsels or frontels for the altar, and two silken copes with gold tassels. Athelstane son of Athelred gave Hollingborne, and Prestane and Ele-vastane were given by king Edmund to the monks for their table. Laling, Isley, and Hadley were given by duke Brithnot, in the year 991, in the presence of Siricius. Duke Ethelred gave them land in Canterbury, in 1003. About the year 1006 the archbishop Elfric, or more properly Elpgege, gained the privilege to himself and his successors of fishing, hunting, hawking, &c. of king Ethelred, who at the same time granted a general confirmation of all the gifts to the church. Ethelric and Leafwine gave Bocking and Mersey, for the monks' table; and archbishop Elfegc, in the year 1010, gave them Werepolm, Freming-ham, and Wodeton, for clothing. Num. i. et seq.

whom he found remaining in the church, and filled up the number of monks; though this is by other authors attributed to his successor

ALFRIC, who was elected to this see on Easter-day, the 21st of April, 995. He was a laborious compiler of sermons and homilies, and translated great part of the Scriptures into Saxon, of which a part is preserved in the Bodleian library.

ELPHEGE, the next archbishop, a pious and good man, had presided about seven years, when, in 1011, the Danes with a very large fleet and army came to Sandwich, and thence marched to Canterbury, besieged and took it, and in it the archbishop, whom they carried bound to London, in hopes he would purchase his ransom; finding him however immovable, they brought him forth and stoned him at Greenwich, on Sunday 13 cal. May, 1012. He was succeeded by

LIVING, who appears to have fled the country upon the first apprehension of danger from Swane's invasion, and not to have returned till Cnute's quieter reign; after which he became a great benefactor to this church, both in land and ornaments, and repaired the roof, which the Danes had burned, and procured Cnute to contribute towards it. He sat about seven years, and dying in 1020, was succeeded by ETHELNOTH, who had been dean of this church. The interest he had over Cnute, which, if we may credit Osborne, was very great, is said to have restrained that prince's actions, and turned them to piety and munificence, particularly to this church. In 1038 king Cnute restored to them Folkeston, on condition that Edsine his chaplain should be entered a monk here. (See num. xxx.) He also presented to them the arms of St. Bartholomew with a large pall, which grant is preserved in the Textus Roffensis, and is given among the charters of this church, num. iv. Ethelnoth imitating his predecessor's public spirit, is said by Gervaise to have completely finished and repaired the church; which from the incursions of the Danes was found in a most ruinous state. He governed the church about 17 or 18 years, and dying in 1038, was buried before the altar of St. Benedict in the crypt.

EADSIUS, who was admitted a monk of this church, as mentioned above, was promoted to this see upon the death of Ethelnoth. On account of illness he was obliged to resign the archbishoprick to Siward, but upon his death was restored; but he survived only one year, and was succeeded in 1050 by ROBERT, who had been a monk in the monastery of Gemetica in Normandy, where he ingratiated himself with Edward the Confessor, then an exile in that country: but being afterwards accused of fomenting divisions in this country he was outlawed, and after appealing in vain to the pope, returned to Gemetica, where he died in 1052.

STIGAND, his successor, saw perhaps as great a variety of fortune, and shared as great sufferings, as any ever did. He is reported by the monkish historians to have been covetous, proud, and ambitious. Of the former charge against him, his keeping the bishoprick of Winchester, together with the archbishoprick of Canterbury, is a strong proof. Upon the invasion of William the Conqueror, he was for some time retained in his post, and indeed caressed by William; but afterwards he felt severely the weight of his anger. Stigand had used his predecessor's pall contrary to the canon, and received his own from the antipope Benedict, who had been excommunicated; for this he was first suspended by the pope, and at last deprived in a council held at Winchester in 1070, and cast into prison, where he died.

LANFRANC succeeded upon the deposition of Stigand; and being thus fixed in the highest station next the king, assumed almost equal authority, even turning out bishops who were too honest to come into the Norman's^a measures. Through his influence William restored to this church many valuable possessions of which it had at different times been deprived, for which see num. xxxi. Lanfranc died in 1089, and, after a vacancy of three years, was succeeded by

ANSELM, whose life was full of troubles. Two years after his consecration began the division of the papacy, by the joint pretensions of Urban and Clement, the latter of whom was espoused by the king, and the former by Anselm, notwithstanding the king's express prohibition. After various changes, banishment, loss of temporalities, and other persecutions, Anselm was restored to the king's favour, and allowed to return to Canterbury, where he lay a long time suffering under a lingering consumption, which carried him off in 1107. Anselm had, with the assistance of Ernulfus the prior, began to build a most magnificent choir in the place of that of Lanfranc's, which he had been obliged to pull down;^b a work so extravagant and expensive that it became the admiration and envy of all people, insomuch that some complained of it to the king. "Upon Ernulfus' removal to the abbey of Burgh, he was succeeded by Conrad the same year that Anselm died, and notwithstanding the troublesomeness of those times, and the vacancy of the archbishoprick, which Henry 1st had seized in his hands, he carried on and completed this work, a work so magnificent and beautiful, that William of Malmesbury^c says it was so glorious that nothing comparable to it was to be seen in England, whether we make our observations on the transparency of the glass windows, the brightness of the marble pavement below, or the admirable beauty and elegance of the paintings which drew the eyes of all beholders to the roof above." Of the three next archbishops,

RADULPHUS, translated from Rochester,

WILLIAM CORBOIL, a secular elected by the bishops at a convention or parliament called at Gloucester, and

THEOBALD, very little information, connected with the interests or possessions of the church, is to be found, except the unfortunate divisions between this latter prelate and his convent; he died in 1161, and was succeeded by

THOMAS BECKET, then chancellor to the king, Henry II. He had long been a favourite of his predecessor's, and by him strongly recommended to the royal favour. But Becket had no sooner received the pall, than he resigned his place of chancellor, sent the great seal to the king into Normandy, and forsaking all his former gaiety and liveliness of manner, put on all the gravity and austerity of a monk: encouraged by pope Alexander III, whom he met at a general council at Tours, in April 1163, Becket formed the design of becoming the champion for the liberties of the church and the immunities of the clergy: this he prosecuted with such zeal, that the king and he very soon came to an open rupture; this continued for a long time, and was only suspended for a short time by Becket's agreeing to the constitutions of Clarendon as they are called, by which ecclesiastics of all denominations were reduced to a due subjection to the laws of their country. Becket soon repented of his having sworn to obey these constitutions, and even received from the pope a bull releasing him from the obligations of this oath; but though this bull reconciled his conscience to the breach of his oath, it did not dispel his fears of the royal indignation, to avoid which he determined to quit the kingdom; but before he could reach the coast of France, the wind shifted, and the ship, in which he sailed, was driven back again to England. Conscious that he had done amiss, he waited upon the king at Woodstock, who received him without any other expression of displeasure, than asking him if he had left England because he thought it too little to contain both? Notwithstanding the mildness of this rebuke, Becket was determined to set the clergy above the laws, and therefore the king summoned a parliament at Northampton 1165, where the archbishop, having been accused of failure of duty and allegiance to the king, was sentenced to forfeit all his goods and chattels: Becket then retired into France, and the king seized upon the revenues of the archbishoprick. In 1167 Becket had an interview with Henry and the French king, but his pride prevented any reconciliation; a second attempt in 1169 was more successful, when the king held the bridle of the archbishop's horse while he mounted and dismounted. Becket now returned to England, but soon after refusing to absolve the suspended and excommunicated bishops at the young king's order, Henry, when he heard of it in Normandy, let drop certain expressions which induced some of his attendants immediately to proceed to the archbishop, whom, when they found they could not prevail upon by threats, they murdered near the altar of St. Benedict on the 29th of December 1170.^a During Becket's time, Wibert, who had been prior, and died in 1167, gave to this church the great wood of Chartham, containing forty acres; a great bell, which required thirty-two men to ring it; and he left seventy-one shillings rent to be expended on his anniversary, whereof forty shillings was for the refectory, twenty shillings for the poor, and the rest for the almonry; but his most remarkable undertaking, was the aqueduct which he made to serve all the offices of this monastery.

Upon the death of Becket the chair of Canterbury remained vacant two years; but, after an attempt on the part of the king to introduce the bishop of Meaux, and an endeavour on that of the monks to have the election free, the latter proposed to the king three persons, of whom Robert, abbot of Beck in Normandy, was selected, and chosen at Lambeth; but he, fearful of the danger of that high station, refused to accept it, whereupon, at the king's request, the suffragans and the senior monks met a second time, and chose

RICHARD, first monk and then prior of Dover, and chancellor of Lincoln; against him the king even appealed, but was afterwards obliged to acquiesce at the expense of some very considerable concessions to the clergy. Although he is stated to have steered through the troublesome parts of this reign with extreme caution, yet was he never afraid to exert his authority, when a dangerous juncture required it. Upon his death, BALDWIN, bishop of Worcester, was elected to succeed him. During the greater part of his prelacy,^b there existed a great animosity between him and the monks, who had at first opposed his election; and he had almost succeeded in depriving them of all power of interference in future elections, by erecting a college of secular canons at Hackington near Canterbury, and removing the elections to that place, when he was suddenly carried off by a flux in 1199, at the siege of Acon in the Holy Land, whither he had accompanied the king.

REGINALD FITZ-JOCELINE was elected in his room, by main force, and contrary even to his own will; he was enthroned on the 27th of Nov. 1191; and dying on the 26th of Dec. following, was succeeded by HUBERT WALTER, first dean of York, then bishop of Salisbury. During the king's confinement, this prelate was appointed^c lord chief justiciary of England, and lord chancellor; and, during the time he held these offices, he performed the part of an excellent statesman. He gave the church of Halgast to find books for the library, and very much improved his see with buildings, and his convent with privileges. He died in 1205.

There was a great disagreement between the pope, the suffragan bishops, and the monks, respecting the election of a successor; at last

STEPHEN LANGTON was elected, and consecrated by pope Innocent III; but this by no means met with the king's assent; abusing the pope and bishops, banishing the monks, and confiscating their goods, he for many years prosecuted his opposition;^d and it was not till after the pope had excommunicated, and, by sentence, deposed him, that any reconciliation could be effected: but Stephen did not survive it many years, dying in 1228, and was succeeded by RICHARD MAGNUS, who appears to have enjoyed his dignities but for a very short period; for his election was in June 1229, and he died early in 1231.

St. EDMUND, canon of Salisbury, was consecrated in 1234; and, in the next year, successfully exerted his influence in reconciling the differences, which unfortunately then existed between the king and his nobles; but these breaking out afresh, in 1239 he quitted England, and in the following year died at Soissy, in Pontiniac.

BONIFACE was uncle to the duke of Savoy and the queen Eleanor, at whose request the monks elected him. Upon his promotion, he prevailed upon the pope to grant him one year's profit of all vacant benefices in his province, under pretence of discharging the debts, with which he asserted his predecessors had incumbered his see. He finished the archbishop's palace at Canterbury, and the great hall, in which he was wont to sit with great vanity, boasting that his predecessors had built it, but that he had paid the expense. At last, by his pride, exactions, and oppressions, he rendered himself so obnoxious to the English, that he was obliged to return to his own country, Savoy, where he died in 1270.

ROBERT KILDWARDY was named to this see the latter end of the year 1272, and consecrated the year following. He is stated to have been a man of great piety and wisdom. About the year 1278, pope Nicholas III. made him cardinal bishop of Portua, inferior to Canterbury in point of wealth, but superior in dignity: but he, preferring the latter, resigned his archbishoprick. Upon his resignation, the monks, at the instance of the king and queen, made choice of Robert Farnel, bishop of Bath and Wells: but to this the pope upon no consideration could be induced to assent, and he accordingly nominated to the see

JOHN PECKHAM,^e who was a great benefactor to his church, and behaved himself to his clergy with great mildness; in one respect only he is stated to have been severe, towards those who held pluralities or were non-residents. He died in 1292, and was succeeded by

ROBERT WINCHELSEY.^f Soon after he was settled in his see, Edward the 1st, in order to carry on his expedition against the Scots, demanded a subsidy of the college: this being refused by the archbishop, the king seized upon all his goods and possessions, and those of his clergy, until they redeemed them: shortly after, the king, upon a new displeasure, caused him to be cited to Rome, whither he went, and after two years' suspension was allowed to return again to his see. His charity, if we may credit the monkish writers, appears to have been unbounded. He died in 1314, and after two other nominations,^g which were set aside by the pope, was succeeded by

WALTER REYNOLDS, who sat thirteen years: a prelate of mild manners, and tenacious of his episcopal rights, as his controversy with the archbishop of York, concerning the bearing of the cross, fully evinces; but his firmness is much questioned from his so readily embracing the queen's interest immediately she had gained the upper hand. He is said to have died of a broken heart, upon being threatened by the pope for consecrating, at the queen's request, James Barley, bishop of Exeter.

SIMON MEFHAM, his successor, in 1327, framed many statutes for the church's liberties and privileges, and began a visitation of his province; but, upon his coming to Exeter, he was opposed by the bishop, John de Grandison, with an armed power. Soon after, crowning Edward III, he was excommunicated by the pope, which sentence continued in force till his death, which happened in 1333; when, at the king's request, the convent elected

JOHN STRATFORD archbishop in his room. He was made sole justiciary of the kingdom during the king's absence in Flanders, and was thrice appointed chancellor. He, however,^h afterwards was much persecuted by the king and court faction, at the instigation, or, as it is termed, owing to the treachery of the bishop of Winchester: he is much famed for his charity. He died in 1348.

JOHN UFFORD, or DE OFFORD, succeeded, but died before consecration.

THOMAS BRADWARDYN, who succeeded, is said to have been the only archbishop properly elected; for, at the same time that the king, with whom he had long been a favourite, recommended him to the pope and the convent, the former had fixed upon him as the most proper person to fill the vacant chair. He has the character of the most famous^a divine at that time in the world. He died very shortly after his election, and was succeeded by

SIMON ISLIP. Upon his advancement, in 1350, he found his see so impoverished, and his palaces in such a lamentable state of decay, that he was obliged to sue the executors of archbishop Ufford, from whom he recovered for dilapidations, notwithstanding his short stay here, and Bradwardyn's succession. He is blamed for his severity and austerity of temper towards his clergy in his visitations; but the disorders, that had crept into that body, by reason of the late frequent vacancies in this see, had arisen to so alarming a height, that a more mild behaviour might not perhaps have succeeded in preventing them. He gave to the convent the churches of Eastry and Monkton: he likewise founded Canterbury Hall (now part of Christ-Church)^b in Oxford. He died in April, 1366.

SIMON LANGHAM, successively prior and abbot of Westminster, and afterwards bishop of Ely, was by pope Urban's provision translated to Canterbury in 1366. About two years after he was made a cardinal, which preferment he instantly published; this so displeased the king, that he immediately seized upon his temporalities as in the case of a vacancy. The archbishop afterwards^c delivered up his archiepiscopal cross; and was succeeded by WILLIAM WITTLESEY, bishop of Worcester, a man of singular learning and an excellent preacher. He did not enjoy his dignities quite six years, dying in 1374. His successor, SIMON SUDBURY, was translated hither from London. He crowned Richard the second; and on his return from France, whither he had been sent as ambassador, was appointed chancellor. He was afterwards beheaded on Tower-hill,^d in the disturbances of Straw and Wat Tyler.

WILLIAM COURTNEY, the next archbishop, was son of Hugh, earl of Devon, and Margaret granddaughter of Edward I. He was a strenuous vindicator of the rights of the church. He obtained a grant from the king to have four fairs at Canterbury yearly, viz. on Innocent-day, Whitsun-eve, on the eve of Becket's translation, and on Michaelmas-eve,^e each to continue nine days, and to be kept within the site of the priory. He repaired the church of Mepham for the use of the infirmary. He died on the 31st of July, 1396. Upon his death

THOMAS ARUNDEL, first bishop of Ely, then archbishop of York, was translated to the metropolitan chair. As a churchman, says Dart, he was of great learning, of ready genius, and very circumspect and indefatigable in the exercise of his archiepiscopal functions; and at the same time he was a prudent and vigilant statesman, in which his error was greatly owing to the unhappiness of the times. Upon a charge of high-treason all his goods were confiscated, and he was^f banished the kingdom; upon the deposition of Richard the second, however, he returned and crowned Henry IV. He was a considerable benefactor to this church, building chiefly the lantern-tower and great part of the nave; and besides many ornaments, &c. with which he enriched it, he gave the church of Godmersham. He died 19th Feb. 1413, and was succeeded by

HENRY CHICHELEY. This excellent prelate was educated at New-college, in the university of Oxford; he was first preferred to the chancellorship of Salisbury, then to the bishoprick of St. David's, from whence he was translated to this see. He founded and endowed a collegiate church and an hospital at Higham-Ferrars, the place of his birth. He likewise built two colleges at Oxford, viz. Bernard's college, dissolved by Henry VIII., and afterwards restored by sir Thomas White, and now called St. John's college; and All Souls college. He likewise built the library of this church, and furnished it with books, and was a zealous and general promoter of learning.^g He died on the 12th of April, 1443, and was buried on the north side of the choir, under a magnificent and beautiful monument.

JOHN STAFFORD, translated to this see from that of Bath and Wells, had been before strongly recommended to the pope for this chair by archbishop Chicheley, who, from age and infirmities, expressed an intention of resigning his archbishoprick. Stafford sat in the chair nine years, and was succeeded by JOHN KEMP, first bishop of Rochester, next of Chichester, then of London, afterwards archbishop of York, and thence translated to Canterbury in 1452. Stevens states that he was made a cardinal. He lived only two years after his promotion.

THOMAS BOUCHIER, first bishop of Worcester, then of Ely, was elected to this see upon the death of archbishop Kemp. He lived fifty-two years in episcopal dignity, fourteen of which he sat in this metropolitan chair; but during times of such confusion, that he had not the opportunity of doing much good. He was succeeded by

JOHN MORTON, who was translated from Ely by a bull of pope Innocent the eighth, 1486. On the eighth of August in the next year he was made lord chancellor, which place he held till his death. He was in great favour with king Henry the seventh, in return for his watchful care against the protector, when he endeavoured to usurp the crown. He was a great benefactor to this church in copes and other ornaments, and was also at great expense in partly building the lanthorn-tower in the middle of the church; he died at Knoll, in the year 1500, and was succeeded by HENRY DEAN,^h bishop of Salisbury, who, according to the king's directions, was elected by the monks on the 26th of April, 1501; he was never installed, living only two years after his election; he is said to have been so poor as not to have left sufficient for his requiem; yet another account states, that he ordered 500 pounds to be expended on his funeral, which took place in February 1503.

WILLIAM WARHAM, his successor, was translated to this chair from the see of London. Previous to his elevation he had been employed as ambassador to the Duke of Burgundy, and made keeper of the great seal, and was in great favour with Henry VII.; and in the time of Henry VIII. conducted himself with so much discretion, particularly in the matter of the king's divorce, that he was taken into favour by him. It is stated that he expended thirty thousand pounds in the repairs of the different archiepiscopal seats. The expenses of his inthronization will be found in num. xliii: he was an especial patron and friend of Erasmus, who has given him a very high character. He died on the 23rd of August, 1532.

THOMAS CRANMER was appointed archbishop on the death of Warham, in return for the services he had rendered the king in the delicate affair of his divorce. He sat in the archiepiscopal chair about eight years before the priory was dissolved. Thomas Goldwell was the prior at that time, which post he had held for twenty-three years, and had a pension of 80 pounds per annum assigned him; and upon the new foundation of the church, and placing for their maintenance the church of Pageham and Maghfield, and intended further, but died soon after.

^e He came afterwards, in 1374, to England as pope's nuncio, and being at Canterbury, distributed gold to the monks, with the hope of being again elected, Wittlesey the archbishop being then in a very precarious state of health; nor was he deceived, for, upon Wittlesey's death, they elected him; but the king would by no means give his consent to this election, and indeed threatened to outlaw all the monks. ^a He was a man of deep learning, and so great a divine, at least so well versed in the drift reading of that time called school-divinity, that he had the title of 'Doctor Profundus' applied to him; and as such Chaucer casts his eyes, perhaps jocously, upon him in the 'Nun's Priest's Tale of the Cock and the Fox.'

^b This college he founded with licence from king Edward the 3rd, dated Oct. 20, an. reg. 25.; and by his charter, given at Maghfield, dated id. April, 1363, erected in it a college and nursery for Christ-Church monastery, and appointed twelve scholars, four of which to be monks of Canterbury, and the other eight scholars; and appropriated therein of a dean and prebendaries, he being reputed a man of exemplary virtue, was nominated to some very considerable post therein; but this he declined, and passed the remainder of his days in retirement.

The following Account of the Dissolution of this Priory is given us by Mr. Battely.^a

“The dissolution of this priory was not wholly and entirely executed at one blow, but by degrees; otherwise the fall of it would have made too great a noise, and might have seemed even rash and unadvised. The first thing that appears to have been done in this matter, and which was a forerunner of the fall of this priory, was the abrogating of certain festivals, or holy-days, that happened to fall in harvest time, which was to be accounted from the first day of July to the 29th day of September. After a respite of two years there was a second attack made upon this priory, more fierce and daring than the former, for the blow was directly aimed at the reputed glory of this church, the honour and veneration paid to the relicks of St. Thomas; for not only the observation of the festivals in memory of him was specially prohibited, but the commemoration of him was to be clean omitted; the festival service of his days was to be laid aside, and instead thereof the ferial or ordinary service for the day of the week was to be used. Now it became no less criminal for any one to keep these holy-days in commemoration of archbishop Becket, than formerly it had been esteemed meritorious to pay their humblest devotions at the shrine of St. Thomas. And archbishop Cranmer gave a fair president of disowning all regard to this feast, by not fasting on the eve, as was the custom, but supping upon flesh in his parlour, with his domesticks. This was in the year 1538. And in the following year a third assault was made, for the king sent forth a new injunction, in the preamble whereof archbishop Becket was declared to have been a stubborn rebel and traitor to his prince, and that he was not to be esteemed or called a saint; that his images and pictures throughout the whole realm should be pulled down and cast out of all churches; that his name should be erased out all books, and the festival service of his days, the collects, antiphons, &c. should for ever remain in disuse, upon pain of his majesty’s indignation, and imprisonment at his grace’s pleasure. As the saint was stript of the name, honour, and adoration which had been paid to him; so the church was spoiled of all the riches, the jewels of inestimable value, the vast quantity of gold and silver, wherewith the shrine was splendidly adorned, &c. This edict was unbloody, but it shook the very foundation of the priory, and portended its sudden dissolution, which happened in the year following.

For a commission, dated at Westminster on March 20, anno 31, Hen. VIII. for the dissolution of Christ-Church in Canterbury, was directed to the archbishop of Canterbury, &c. that they nine, or any three of them, should repair to Christ-Church, and draw up a surrender in form, and the same being signed and sealed by the prior and convent, to receive and take possession thereof; and then take an inventory of all the goods, chattels, plate, jewels and lead belonging to the monastery; and to convey to the master of the jewel-house at the tower of London, all the plate, precious ornaments, and money which they shall receive.

The archiepiscopal throne had been adorned with a succession of great and good men for many years; some of them were of an honourable and noble descent, all of them were men of a public spirit, of competent learning, of good conversation, and of an unspotted reputation. These worthy prelates had often, and at due times, visited the monastery, and had strictly examined the manners and behaviour of the monks. These also had a right, which they never failed to exercise, of placing over the convent their chief officers, supervisors, and governours. The prior, who at the time of the dissolution had presided over this convent three and twenty years, was a learned, grave, and religious man, as his predecessors in that dignity for many years before him had been. The convent was a society of grave persons. The aged were diligent to train up the novices, as in the rules of their institution, so also in gravity and sobriety; and the younger were placed in the cells of the dormitory among the elder, so as they were continually under a kind of guard, to prevent their doing any thing unseemly. Are they charged with covetousness? They had indeed many arts and tricks to get monecy, and did abound in wealth; but they neither enriched their families, nor consumed their wealth upon their lusts. All they had was spent either in alms and hospitality, or else in stately and magnificent buildings, of which the present fabrick of the church is a fair monument; or else in decking and beautifying the church with the richest ornaments, wherein they abounded and exceeded even to profuseness. Are they accused of idleness? Their life indeed was not much spent in bodily labours, but much of it in bodily exercises, in fastings, penances, devout meditations, night and day, and in some other superstitious formalities, wherein they placed too much merit, and which they mistook for godliness itself. Their life was chiefly contemplative, and silence was one of the rules of their order. Are they censured as illiterate? In those times there was but little learning in the world. That age is commonly stiled the dark or illiterate age; but most of the learning that then was, was to be found in the cloisters of the monks, where some did attain to such a proficiency of knowledge, as in those times was to be esteemed high and great. Are they condemned as guilty of intemperance and luxury? They had their daily allowance of food and wine in their common refectory; and I do not conceive that this daily allowance did administer to excess, even in their extraordinaries, upon their festival commemorations. Are they represented as lewd and filthy? I will not undertake to vindicate the reputation of all monasteries from this shameful scandal; that is impossible, for some of them were wretchedly scandalous in this respect. But I cannot think that the priory of Christ-Church can be represented justly under this black character; for besides that Dr. Goldwell had been, as I said before, a long time prior, archbishop Cranmer had filled the patriarchal chair in this church, about seven years before the dissolution of this priory. He was their visitor, and had been so much with them, as to know them and the manner of their behaviour. And when this church was new founded and modelled, archbishop Cranmer, being employed therein by the king, took into this new foundation, as we are told, (by Harmer) twelve monks, as members of this new collegiate church. The computation had been much truer, if that author had named more than twice twelve; for there were eight prebendaries, ten peti-cansons, nine scholars, and two choristers, being in all twenty-nine, admitted into this college, who had been members of the dissolved priory; besides several others, as Dr. Goldwell, and William Wynchepe, who were marked out and assigned for prebends of this new church, but did not accept thereof. Others were preferred in other churches; all of them had pensions and rewards. If lewdness and immorality had been scandalously practised in this house, good archbishop Cranmer would neither have suffered them to have been admitted in this college, or new foundation of his cathedral church, nor have loaded them with pensions^b and gratuities. Hereupon let us lay aside all such reports concerning immoralities practised in the monasteries, and let us build upon surer grounds, and more Christian principles, the reasons whereby we justify the dissolution of popish monasteries in this nation.”

The Dimensions of this Cathedral are thus given us by Mr. Willis.^c

Length from east to west of the whole building, is 514 foot, whereof from the west door to the entrance into the choir, is about 214 foot.

Length of the choir, viz. from the entrance into it to the high altar, is 150 foot (the breadth of it is 40 foot.) Length from thence to the extremity of the east end, is about 150 foot more.

Breadth of the body and side isles is about 74 foot.

Length of the lower cross isle, from north to south, is 124 foot, and of the upper 154 foot.

^c Mitred Abbies, p. 247.

Height of the great tower in the middle, called Angell or Bell-Harry steeple, in which hangs only one bell, called Harry, is 235 foot.

Height of the south-west tower, called the Oxford, or Dunstan steeple, where hangs a deep peal of six large bells, besides a single great bell, called Dunstan, is 130 foot.

Height of the north-west steeple, wherein are likewise six bells, but four of them are cracked, as it now stands is 100 foot; though when the spire of lead, taken down in August 1705, was standing on the same, it was 200 foot.

Height of the lantern, at the entrance into the choir, is 130 foot.

Height of the vaulting of the church is 80 foot, viz. from the area of the pavement to the top within-side.

The square of the cloysters is 134 feet by 134 feet.

The augustness of this church is very remarkable, by reason of the noble ascent at the entrance into the choir to the upper part behind the high altar, by 42 steps.

The following roll of the possessions of this monastery will, doubtless, be acceptable to all curious persons.^a

Item custos Tumbæ sancti Thomæ qualibet septimana dicet tres missas de reliquiis in communi: videlicet de sanctis Elphago, Blasio, atque Dunstano, et de omnibus sanctis. Et custos corporum sanctorum qualibet septimana quatuor missas dicet de eisdem sanctis. Et erit collecta talis, "Propitiare q̄s domine nobis famulis tuis per sanctorum tuorum Elphagi, Blasii, atque Dunstani, et omnium sanctorum merita gloriosa ut eorum piis," &c. Et de secreto et post'co eodem modo fiet.

Et quia prius cotidie dicebatur ad altare sancte Marie in criptis una missa de eadem virgine, ordinatum est quod alter magistrorum infirmarie cotidie dicet ad majus altare infirmar' unam missam de beato virgine. Et similiter quod in albis et aliis majoribus festis, jejuniis quatuor temporum, et sollempnibus vigiliis sanctorum, alter Magister Infirmarie, aliam missam de sollempnitate diei dicet ad idem altare pro hiis qui infirmi sunt, ut servitium suum plenarie audiant.

✠ Scimus autem quod multis in Deum fideliter confidentibus notum et manifestum est, et nihil tamen illis placabile in eo visum est, qui in gentibus Anglorum commorantur, quod Offa rex Merciorum in diebus Iænberhti archiepiscopi cum maxima fraude honorem et unitatem sedis sancti Augustini patris nostri in Dorovernensi civitate dividere et discindere presumpsit, et quo modo post obitum predicti pontificis aedelheardus archiepiscopus dei gratia donanti illius successor post curricula annorum erga plurima Dei ecclesiarum jura limina apostolorum et apostolice sedis beatissimum Papam Leonem visitare contigit. Inter alias necessarias legationes discissionem injuste factam archiepiscopalis sedis narravit. Et ipse apostolicus Papa ut audivit et intellexit quod injuste fuisset factum, statim sui privilegii auctoritatis preceptum posuit, et in Britanniam misit, et precipit ut honor sancti Augustini sedis, cum omnibus suis parrohhiis integerrime redintegraretur, juxta quod sanctus Gregorius nostre gentis apostolus et magister composuit; et honorabili archiepiscopo aedelheardo in patriam pervenienti per omnia redderetur, et Coenuulfus rex pius Merciorum ita complevit cum senatoribus suis. Anno vero dominice incarnationis dcccº. iiiiº. Indictione xi. die iiiiª. idus Octobris, ego Aethelheardus archiepiscopus, cum omnibus xii. episco. scð sede beati Augustini subjectis, per apostolica precepta domini Pape Leonis in Synodo qui factus est in loco celebri qui vocatur Cloveshoas unanimo consilio totius scí synodo, in nomine Dei omnipotentis precipientes et omnium sanctorum illius, et per ejus tremendum judicium, ut numquam reges, neque episcopi, neque principes, neque ullius tyrannice potestatis homines honorem sancti Augustini et sue sancte sedis diminuere vel in aliquantula particula dividere presumpserit, sed meo per omnia dignitatis honore plenissime semper permaneat quo utique in constitutione beati Gregorii et in privilegiis apostolicorum suorum successorum habeatur, nec non etiam et in sanctorum canonum rectum haberi sanctionibus videatur: Hunc etiam Deo cooperanti et domino apostolico Pape Leoni Ego Aethelheardus archiepiscopus, et alii coepiscopi nostri, et nobiscum omnes dignitates nostri synodi, cum vexillis crucis Xþi unanimiter primatum sancte sedis firmantes, hoc quoque precipientes, et signo sancte Crucis scribentes, ut archiepiscopalis sedes in Liccidfeldensi monasterio numquam habeatur ex hoc tempore, neque in alio loco aliquo nisi tantum modo in Dorobernensi civitate ubi Xþi ecclesia est, et ubi primus in hac insula catholica fides penituit, et a sancto Augustino sacrum baptismum celebretur. Insuper etiam Cartam a Romana sede missam per Hadrianum papam de pallo et de archiepiscopatus sede in Liccedfeldensi monasterio cum consensu et licentia domini apostolici Leonis Pape prescribimus aliquid valere, quia per subreptionem et male blandam suggestionem adipiscebatur, et idcirco manifestissimis signis celestis Regis primatum monarchie archiprincipatus permanere canonicis et apostolicis munitionibus statuimus ubi sanctum evangelium Xpi per beatum patrem Augustinum in provincia Anglorum primum predicatur et deinde per gratiam sancti spiritus late diffusum est. Si quis vero contraapostolicis preceptis et nostrorum omnium ausus sit tunicam Xpi scindere et unitatem sancte Dei ecclesie dividere. Sciat se nisi digne emendaverit quod inique contra sacras canones fecit eternaliter esse damnatum.

Hic sunt nomina sanctorum episcoporum et abbatum qui prescriptum Cyrographi cartulam in Synodo qui factus est æt Clofeshoum, anno adventus Domini DCCC.III. cum signo sancte Crucis Xpi firmaverunt.

Monastery of St. Augustine

IN

CANTERBURY.

THIS monastery was founded by king Ethelbert and St. Augustine in the year 605,^a who commended it to the patronage of St. Peter and St. Paul; it was afterwards called St. Augustine's Abbey. It was appointed by St. Augustine to be a burial place for him and his successors, and the kings of Kent. Of the latter some account is to be collected from Weever,^b who states that king Ethelbert, who died in the year 616, thirteen years after he had received the Christian faith, was buried on the north side of the church with this inscription engraven on his monument :

Rex Ethelbertus hic clauditur en poliandro
Fana plans certe Christo meat absque meandro.

near whom was likewise interred Berta, his queen, daughter of Chilperick, king of France, with this distich :

Moribus ornata jacet hic regina beata :
Berta Deo grata fuit ac homini peramata.

To Ethelbert succeeded Edbald his son, who built a chapel here in honour of the Virgin Mary, wherein he was buried anno 640, as was likewise his wife Emma, the daughter of Theodebert, king of Loraine.^c Of the archbishops who were buried here a full account is given in the history of the cathedral church of Christ, page 81 of this work. This monastery in succeeding times rose to such great eminence, that its privileges were equal if not superior to any in England, the abbot having allowance of a coinage or mint by the grant of king Athelstan,^d and a place in the general council at Rome, by the gift of pope Leo, and exemption from episcopal jurisdiction, being under the immediate protection of the pope, and presiding over a whole lath of 13 hundreds, the names of which will be given at the end of this history. The first abbot was

PETER.^e In the year 607, on his return to England from France, whither he had been sent on an embassy by king Ethelbert, he was drowned in a creek of the sea near Bolougne. He was succeeded by

JOHN, a monk of this house. In the year 609 Mellitus,^f bishop of London, was sent to Rome to obtain pope Boniface the fourth's confirmation for this monastery; a copy of this grant, which is of the same tenor as all other papal documents of this nature, is to be found in Sprot; and Steven's translation will be inserted in the appendix. John died in 618, and was buried in our Lady's chapel with the following epitaph :^g

Omnibus est annis pietas recitanda Johannis,
Culmine celsa nimis patribusque simillima primis.
Vir probus et mitis fuit hic, si fare velitis,
Integer et mundus, sapiens, abbasque secundus.

^a Tanner Notitia Monastica. Willis Mitred Abbies. See Append. num. i. ^b Weever's Funeral Monuments, p. 241. ^c Weever mentions a few more, and Lambard, in his Perambulation of Kent, notices four omitted by Weever. ^d Weever. ^e Cron. Thornii apud x script. col. 1761. Chron. Sprot. inter MSS. Cotton (as quoted by Stevens). Weever, Battely, Willis.

RUFFINIAN^h succeeded John, and dying in 626, was buried near his predecessor with this epitaph :

Pausa patris sani patet isthæc Ruffiniani
Abbatis terni, quo frenditur hostis Avernæ.

GRATIOSUS,ⁱ a Roman, succeeded him. He presided over this monastery fourteen years. The following epitaph on him is recorded by Weever :

Hic abbas quartus Gratosus contulit artus,
Cujus adest pausa miti spiramine clausa.

PETRONIUS, the next abbot, was also a Roman : he was elected, according to some authors, in 640 ; though others place his election two years earlier. He died in 654, and was buried here with the following epitaph :

Abbas Petronius, bonitatis odore refertus,
Subjectos docuit, vitiorum sorde piavit.

NATHANIEL,^k another Roman, who had accompanied Mellitus, the bishop of London, was consecrated on the death of Petronius in the year 654. After he had governed the monastery thirteen years he died, (in 667) and was buried near the former abbots with this distich :^l

Spiritus in coelis abbatis Nathanielis
Nos faciat memores, patres memorare velitis.

The place of Abbot now remained vacant two years, when, by the particular injunction of the pope Vitalian to Theodore, archbishop of Canterbury, ADRIAN was appointed, in the year 669. He was by birth an African, and had filled the office of abbot of the monastery of Niridia near Naples. He was very expert in the liberal sciences^m of astronomy and music, and was the first that with Theodoreⁿ brought into fashion the tunes and notes of singing in the church. He is much extolled by all the monkish writers ; he died in 708, and was buried in our Lady's Chapel with this epitaph :

Qui legis has apices, Adriani, pignora, dices
Hoc sita sarcophago sua nostro gloria pago ;
Hic decus abbatum, patriæ lux, vir prohibitum
Subven' a coelo si corde rogetur anhelò.

ALBINUS^o a disciple of Adrian, was the first Englishman promoted to the government of this monastery. He is most highly spoken of for his great proficiency in the Greek and Latin tongues, and is said to have been of great assistance to Bede in the compilation of his history. He died in 732, and was buried near his master with this epitaph :

Laus patris Albini non est obnoxia fini,
Gloria debetur sibi quam sua vita meretur.
Multa quippe bonos faciens virtute patronos
Abbas efficitur bonus hic et honore^p petitur.

NORTHBALD,^q a monk of this house, was elected soon after the death of Albinus : he continued abbot about sixteen years, and dying in 748 was buried with the following epitaph :

ALDHUMUS, or ALDHUNUS^a succeeded him the same year, in whose time the burial of the archbishops was taken from this church, as was before mentioned in the history of the cathedral church of Christ. His brethren imputed it to his supineness, and much obloquy is thrown on him by the monkish writers. He died in the year 760.^b

LAMBERT,^c or JANIBERT, or JAMBERT, succeeded. In the year 761 Eadbert, king of Kent, gave to this monastery six plough lands in Mudlingham or Little Mongham. This abbot was chosen archbishop of Canterbury in 762 (though he did not receive the pall from the pope till 764), and was succeeded by

ETHELNOTH.^d On this abbot Offa, king of the Mercians, bestowed two plough lands at Bewesfelde, with the privilege of feeding cattle in the royal woods for ever: he died in 787. His successor was

GUTARD,^e who died in 803, and was succeeded by

CUNRED,^f related to Kenulph, king of Kent. Upon his death, in the year 823, WERNOD,^g of the family also of the kings of Kent, succeeded to the government of this monastery, and obtained grants of several plough lands to this house, according to Thorne. He died in 844, and was succeeded by DIERNOD,^h or DRYTHNOD. Several portions of land were also given to the monastery during the time of this abbot, but, as Sprot says, "the vicissitude of times has so changed the names of places," that it is now impossible to trace their exact situation. He died in 864.

Of the succeeding abbots for upwards of a century there is nothing recorded excepting their names and the time of their deaths, which is to be found in Thorneⁱ as before quoted.

WYNHERUS died in the year 866.

BEWMUNDUS died in 874.

KYNEBERTUS died in 879.

ETANS died in 883.

DEGMUNDUS died in 886.

ALFRID died in 894.

CEOLBERT died in 902.

BECTANE died in 907.

ATHELWOOD died in 910.

TILBERT died in 917.

EADRED died in 920.

ALCHERIND, ALCHERUND, or ALCHMUND, died in 928.

GUTTULFE died in 935.

EADRED died in 937.

LULLING died in 939.

BEORNHELM died in 942. The Cotton MS. before mentioned under the life of this abbot, enumerates many portions of lands and privileges which had been previously, and as it is allowed at uncertain times, granted to this monastery; but as there is not one authentic document preserved, it would be equally tedious as useless to particularize them here.

SIGERIC died in 956.

ALFRIC died in 971. This abbot in Thorne's Chronicle is confounded with his predecessor. King Edgar granted him four plough lands in Plumstede. See Num. LVIII.

ELFNOTH died in 980. In the year 974, according to the Cotton MS. one Wyngfled gave to the monastery an hundred acres of land in Great Mongham.

SIRICIUS, or SIRICUS, a monk of Glastonbury, was the next abbot. In the year 986 he was made^k bishop of Wilton, and in 989 translated to the see of Canterbury. He was succeeded by

WULFRIC ELMER, who was from hence advanced to the bishopric of Shirburne, and after some years,^l losing his eye-sight, returned hither. He was made abbot in the year 989, and died in 1006, and was succeeded the same year by

ELMER, who, in 1022, was also elected bishop of Shirburne, and was succeeded by

ELSTAN, during whose time king Cnut gave great possessions to the monastery in the Isle of Thanet. (See Num. xxxvi.) Upon his death in 1047, WULFRIC, the second, was elected, and governed this monastery twelve years.

EGELSINE was elected to succeed him in the year 1059; but did not enjoy his preferment many years in peace; for in the year king William became secure in his possession of this country, to use the words of the Cotton manuscript, he broke the promises he had made to the church and its ministers in many points. He caused all the monasteries in England to be searched, and the money, as also charters, in the privileges whereof the nobles of England confided, and which the king, when reduced to streights, had sworn he would observe, to be forcibly taken away from the churches where they lay securely deposited and conveyed to his exchequer. The same year a council or synod of the English church was held at Winchester, in which, by the king's procurement, archbishop Stigand was shamefully degraded, and condemned to perpetual imprisonment, and several other bishops and abbots at the instigation of the same king were deposed.

In the year of our Lord 1070, it being known, that Egelsine, the abbot of St. Augustine's, had fled into Denmark, and abandoned his church, without having obtained permission of the king, William the Conqueror aforesaid confiscated the monastery of Augustine, with all its appurtenances both within and without, and placed over the monastery as abbot, one SCOTLAND, a Norman monk; the monks of St. Augustin's bearing with the same, as well by reason of the king's tyrannical power, as of the extraordinary depression of their monastery on all hands, yet not without much grief of mind. This Scotland is said to have done many great things worthy of praise in his time; being supported by the king's favour, he recovered many lands and possessions of the monastery, which had been unjustly taken away, though not all; some he purchased anew, but others he alienated, without the consent of the convent.

In the year 1070 king William, besides restoring many lands of which the monastery had been unjustly deprived, conferred on it the churches of Faversham and Middleton. (See num. LXI.) He gave the monks also eight prebends in Newenton, (see num. LX.) and some lands in Plumstede. (see num. LIX.) Abbot Scotland^m thinking the church of his monastery too small, pulled it down, as also the chapel of the Virgin Mary, with an intention of enlarging it, so as to cover the space before occupied by both the former; but he was prevented the completion of his design by his death, which happened in 1087; but his successor,

WYDO, finished it, and also repaired the shrine of St. Augustine. He died in 1091. Upon his death the monks attended the king, William Rufus, to request permission to choose an abbot. This the king refused, declaring "that he would have all the pastoral staves in England in his own hands, and dispose of them at his pleasure." They were, therefore, obliged to elect

HUGH FLORIC.ⁿ He, however, governed them with great credit, and procured from king Henry a confirmation of all their former, as also many additional, privileges; he died in 1124, and was succeeded by

HUGH DE TROTTISCLEVE,^o a monk of Rochester. This abbot founded the hospital of St. Laurence in Canterbury. He was the first abbot of this monastery, according to the Cotton manuscript, that distinguished the several offices, and assigned certain lands and revenues to each of them. He assigned to the sacrist the mill of

This land is thus bounded: from Quenegate to the southward it extends three perches, and thence to the westward, an exact straight line divides the king's land from this for 23 perches, as far as the dry wall which is adjacent to the wall on the north side of the city. Abbotismelle, which he had acquired himself, upon condition that all the corn of St. Augustine's court be ground there toll free, and the tithe of the mill paid to the almonry of St. Augustin. He also assigned to the sacrist the church of Menstre in the Isle of Thanet, with the chapel of St. John, St. Peter and St. Laurence, with all the revenues belonging to the same, which grant was confirmed by Theobald, the archbishop. He farther assigned the church of Chisselet to the infirmary, that of Northburne to the almonry, and for cloathing of the monks the manors of Ryppele, Langedone, Sellynge and Swalclyve, with the tithes of Graveshende, Wybert, Sores, Hopelonde, Lambert de Shoveldone, &c. and ordered two monks to take charge of the said manors, and to distribute necessary cloathing among the brethren. Upon the death of Hugh in 1151,

SILVESTER,^a then prior of the monastery, was elected to succeed him: he lived only ten years in his office, and, upon his death, the king obtruded upon the monks

CLAREMBALD,^b a secular priest. In this abbot's time, pope Alexander III. granted the monks the power of presenting to the parish churches, which belonged to them, and forbade the abbot or prior alienating any possessions without the consent of the chapter. In the year 1168, on the day of St. John Baptist, this church and monastery were for the most part burnt; in which conflagration many ancient manuscripts were destroyed, and St. Augustine's shrine, and those of many other saints miserably spoiled. Pope Alexander, in commiseration of this misfortune, confirmed the church of Faversham, and those of Menstre and Middleton, to be applied for the repairing of the same. He also prohibited taking any boys under fifteen years of age into the habit, whereas before some were taken as soon as weaned.

As Clarembald had been thrust upon the monastery, as was before mentioned, the monks opposed him to the utmost of their power, and would never permit him to sit in their chapter, or to say mass, or perform any other solemnity in the church. Great disturbance ensuing in England on account of the difference between the king and Thomas archbishop of Canterbury, the monks lay still for a time, permitting the said Clarembald to manage their temporalities at his will. He, having by fair and foul means gained some of the monks, committed the keeping of their common seal to one of them, by which means the possessions of the church were squandered, and many prejudicial contracts made; hereupon the monks at length complained to the pope of him, upon which the said pope Alexander wrote to the bishops of Exeter and Worcester, and the abbot of Feversham, empowering them to enquire into that affair, and in case they found Clarembald guilty of those enormities, to remove him from the management of the revenues of the monastery, without allowing of any appeal, which they accordingly did, and the same pope confirmed it. Upon his deposition the monks chose for their abbot,

ROGER, a monk of Christ-Church, who, being a favourite of the king's, procured a restoration to them of all their lands which Clarembald had unjustly wrested from the monastery or shamefully squandered away. He also obtained from the popes Alexander and Celestin III. a confirmation of all their privileges. He died in 1212, and was buried in the chapter house, with this inscription:

Antistes jacet hic Rogerus in ordine primus,
Pastor devotus quondam, nunc nil nisi fimus.
Mortuus in cista requiescit nunc semel ista;
Qui vivus mundo parum requievit eundo.

ALEXANDER,^c a monk of this monastery, succeeded. He is called, in the Cotton MS. a famous professor of divinity, and a person of singular eloquence. He was a foster-brother of king John, and firmly adhered to him, when he was forsaken by most of the prelates and barons of England. Upon his death, in 1220,

HUGH,^d chamberlain of this house was elected by the monks: he presided over them only four years, and was succeeded by

ROBERT DE BELLO, or DE BATAIL,^e monk and treasurer of this monastery. In the year 1237, a composition was entered into between the archbishop of Canterbury and the abbot, concerning their respective rights and privileges, which had, almost ever since the foundation of the monastery, been the cause of disputes and appeals to the papal chair.—See num. xviii. In the year 1242, he alienated the church of Littleburn to the monastery of St. Mary de Monte Mirteto in Italy, reserving to the convent the ordering of the vicarage, and paying yearly, for the rectory, to the said monastery the sum of 30 marks, as appears by the charter sanctioned by the aforesaid monks de Monte Mirteto.—See num. v. xxxi. and xxxii. He died in 1252: the next abbot was

ROGER of CHICHESTER,^f then chamberlain. Pope Urban, in 1258, granted that the abbot might absolve from excommunication any persons who professed in his monastery, or such as desired to be admitted to the same: see his bull, num. vi.

Till the days of this abbot, says Thorne, the monks shaved each other in the cloister; but he, because they were wont often from their unskilfulness to cut and hurt one another, with the consent of the convent, ordained that the shaving should be performed by laymen, in a room near the bathing place, as often as there was occasion.

He built the new refectory, and founded the chapel of Kinsdowne in the county of Kent, and sumptuously enshrined the reliques of St. Mildred: he died in 1272.

NICHOLAS DE SPINA, or THORN,^g succeeded in the following year. In 1274 this abbot attended a general council at Lyons, at the expense of 200 pounds; and afterwards (which will show the great possessions and riches of this monastery in those days) obtained a subsidy of his tenants, by the name of his Palfrey, viz.

In the year 1283 he resigned his situation, and recommended as his successor

THOMAS FYNDONE,^h who was thereupon appointed by the pope. He began the new kitchen in 1287, which cost 414*l.* 10*s.* He leaded the dormitory, and made stalls in the choir in the year 1293. He made a great feast, at which were present all the prelates and sixty-six knights, besides a great number of other persons of note, the whole company amounting to 4500 men. In consequence of archbishop Winchelsey's continual incroachments upon the privileges of this monastery, and the monks appealing to the see of Rome, pope Boniface VIII. granted a bull, confirming all their privileges.—See num. viii.; but this was in a great measure rendered nugatory by a subsequent explanatory bull in 1302, in which he decides very much in favour of the archbishop. He died in 1309.

RALPH BOURNE,ⁱ succeeded him. He made a most sumptuous and magnificent feast at his installation, a full account of which is in Thorne, and as it has been considered by antiquaries a great curiosity, expressive of the extravagance of these times, will be given at the end of the charters of this monastery. He died in 1334, and was succeeded, on the first of March in the same year, by

THOMAS POUCCYN, or PONCY,^a D.D. Among the charters (num. ix.) will be found the king's receipt to this abbot for the loan of 50 marks towards his expedition to France. He died in 1343.

WILLIAM DEULEGH,^b his successor, only enjoyed his dignities three years, and was succeeded by

JOHN DEVENISSE,^c a monk of Winchester, who was elected by the pope contrary to the declared wishes of the convent, whose choice fell on William Kennington. He died two years after, when

THOMAS COLWELLE^d was elected his successor, and continued in the government of the monastery till the year 1375, when, upon his death, he was succeeded by

MICHAEL PECKHAM, or PECHAM.^e After having governed the monastery almost eleven years in much labour, toil, tribulation, and trouble, particularly from the continued incroachments of the archbishop, he departed this life on the 11th of February, 1386. On the last day of the same month

WILLIAM WELDE^f was chosen abbot, but met with so many delays that this church was destitute of a pastor till 11th of April, 1389. In his time died Thomas Icham, sacrist of this monastery, who expended no less than 3251 marks in repairing the church, chapel, and chapter house. With this abbot Thorne ends his chronicle: he died in 1405, and we have scarce any thing but the names of the abbots who came after him. Recept. recognit. et deliberat. coram me Ricardo Layton cancellarie domini nostri regis magistrorum uno, anno et die predictis.

Irrotulatur in dorso clausarum cancellarie regis infra scripte, mense et anno supra scriptis.

"From this record," says Mr. Willis, "it may be remarked how many different officers these monasteries had, as 2d, 3d, and 4th prior; a keeper of the infirmary; a treasurer, precentor; a sacrist, celerar, and subcelerar; keeper of the refectory, and lord abbot's chaplain; the keepers of the vestry, of the door, and of the chapel of the Virgin Mary; a chamberlain and subsacrist; an account of whom and their respective posts may be seen in Fuller's Church History; to enumerate the respective pensions every one of these members had might be too tedious; I shall only therefore note, that John Essex the abbot had 200 marks, and that the lowest of the other pensions was an hundred shillings; anno 1553, there were only sixteen of these monks on the pension roll, whereof four of them were returned to be dead, as was, I presume, the abbot, &c. some time before; the names in the pension book are very unlike from what they themselves subscribed; being, I suppose, mistaken in the copy, or that the monks had changed their names, or wrote them differently, as they oftentimes did, sometimes by the name of the place of their birth, and at other times by that of their family."

The liberty of this monastery which has been referred to in the preceding pages, and which was so extensive, must not be omitted.

EX CHRON. MS. THOME SPROT MONACHI ST. AUGUSTINI CANT. in BIBLIOTHECA COTTONIANA [SUB EFFIGIE VITELIJ D. 11.]

LUX vera que illuminat omnem hominem venientem in hunc mundum, etsi novo lucis sue radio, totam illustret ecclesiam, dum beatum Gregorium sue ecclesie summum prefecit pastorem et pontificem; specialius cum gentem visitavit Anglicam; cum eam de tenebris, et umbra mortis dignatus est evocare ad lucis sue fidei notitiam. Gregorius namque in summum Pontificem ordinatus, quarto nonas Septembris sub anno domini dxcij. verbum Dei quod ipse et in persona propria genti Anglorum predicare disposuerat, divino admonitus instinctu, per suum alumnum Dei servum Augustinum explere curavit. Gregorius igitur quinto ordinationis sui anno, videlicet sub anno domini dxcvij. misit beatum Augustinum et alios cum eo quam plures monachos ac verbi Dei ministros quasi numero quadraginta genti Anglorum fidem predicare catholicam, qui Dei ministri qualiter se gerebant in itinere versus Angliam qualiterque Angliam venientes in Thaneto applicuerunt: qualiterve a rege Athelberto suscepti fuerant, qualiterque Cantuariam pervenerant pertractare omitto; cum hec omnia in textu vite Augustini pertractentur. Augustinus igitur cum suis sociis, locum in civitate Cantuarie adeptus, vitam cepit imitari apostolicam. Interea rex Athelbertus servorum Dei vita mundissima delectatus, et promissis eorum suavissimis, que miraculorum ostentione vera esse perspexerat, in fide roboratus catholica cum suis commilitonibus baptizatus est in die Pentecostes sub anno domini dxcvii. rege itaq; baptizato et in fide confirmato Augustinus ad civitatem Galliarum Arelatensem progreditur, et ab ejusdem urbis episcopo Etherio in episcopum ordinatur, sub die xvj. calendas Decembris, ordinatusque Augustinus Angliam rediit, et cum gloria et omni qua decuit solemnitate a rege et populo susceptus, atque in civitate Cantuarie sedem episcopalem adeptus, continuo Laurencium presbyterum, et Petrum monachum Romam misit, qui beato pontifici Gregorio referrent regem cum regno fidem Christi suscepisse, et se ipsi genti Anglorum episcopum fore ordinatum, simul et de iis que necessaria videbantur questionibus ejus consulta efflagitans. Que si quis plenius scire desiderat Bedam de gestis Anglorum legat, et ibi desiderata reperiet. Interea Augustino sedem episcopalem, ut supra diximus, in civitate Cantuarie adepto, recuperavit in ea ecclesiam regio fultus auxilio, quam ibidem antiquo fidelium Romanorum opere factam fuisse didicerat, et eam in nomine sancti Salvatoris Dei, et domini nostri Jesu Christi consecravit; atque ibidem habitationem sibi statuit, et cunctis successoribus suis, que usque in hodiernum diem vocatur ecclesia Christi Cantuariensis tocius Anglie nutrix et metropolis. Erat autem non longe ab ipsa civitate, ad orientalem, quasi medio itinere inter ecclesiam sancti Martini, et muros civitatis situm, phanum, sive ydolum, in quo idem rex Athelbertus, secundum ritum gentis sue solebat orare, et una cum plebe sua, demoniis magis quam Deo, immolare: quod phanum statim ut ab Etherio Arelatensi Augustinus episcopus ordinatus, ut subscribitur, Angliam est regressus, ab inquinamentis, et sordibus gentilium purgavit, et simulacro quod in ea erat confracto, synagogam mutavit in ecclesiam, et eam in nomine sancti Pancratii martyris dedicavit: et hec est prima ecclesia ab Augustino dedicata. Extat adhuc altare in porticu ejusdem ecclesie australi, in quo idem Augustinus solebat celebrare, ubi prius steterat simulachrum regis. His itaque gestis Augustinus, predictam sancti Pancratii ecclesiam, una cum terra adjacente a rege obtinuit. In cujus fundo predictus rex Athelbertus, hortatu beati patris Augustini, ecclesiam in honore sanctorum apostolorum Petri et Pauli a fundamentis construxit, et monachos inibi perpetuis temporibus deservituros in eadem ecclesia instituens, donis variis et possessionibus dotavit eandem, et in eadem ecclesia prefatus rex sibi et successoribus Cantuariorum regibus sepulturam elegit. In hac etiam ecclesia Augustinus se et suos successores, Cantuarienses pontifices, statuit sepeliri.

EDWARDUS, Dei gratia, rex Anglie &c. archiepiscopis &c. salutem. Inspeximus cartam bone memorie Athelberti, quondam regis Anglie, in hec verba. In nomine domini Jesu Christi. Omnem hominem qui secundum Deum vivit, et remunerari a Deo sperat et optat, oportet ut piis precibus consensum hilariter, et ex animo prebeat, quoniam certum est tanto facilius ea que ipse a Deo poposcerit consequi posse, quanto, et ipse libencius Deo aliquid concesserit. Quocirca ego Athelbertus rex Kancie, cum consensu venerabilis archiepiscopi Augustini, ac principum meorum, do, et concedo Deo in honore sancti Petri, aliquam partem terre juris mei, que jacet in oriente civitatis Dorobernie, ita duntaxat ut monasterium construatur, et res que supra memoravi, in potestate abbatis sit, qui ibi fuerit ordinatus. Igitur adjuro et precipio in nomine domini Dei omnipotentis, qui est omnium rerum judex justus, ut prefata terra subscripta donacione sempiternaliter sit confirmata, ita ut nec mihi, nec alicui successorum meorum, regum aut principum, sive cujuslibet condicionis, dignitatibus et ecclesiasticis gradibus, de aliquid fraudare liceat.

Si quis vero de hac donacione nostra aliquid minuerit, aut irritum facere temptaverit, sit in presenti separatus a sancta communione corporis et sanguinis Christi, et in die judicii, ob meritum malitie sue a consorcio sanctorum omnium segregatus. Circumcincta est hec terra hiis terminis; in oriente ecclesie sancti Martini, in meridie via de Burgate, in occidente, et in aquilone Drutingestrete. Acta in civitate Dorobernie, anno ab incarnatione Christi dc. v. Indictione vj. ✠ Ego Ethelbertus rex Kancie, sana mente, integroque concilio, donacionem meam signo sancte crucis propria manu roboravi confirmaviq;. Ego Augustinus gratia Dei archiepiscopus testis consenciens libenter subscripsi. Edbaldus, Hanngisilus, Angemundus Referendarius, Hocta, Gracys, Thougyl, Pinca, Geddy.

[Ex Registro S. Augustini Cantuar. in Bibl. Cottoniana sub effigie Claudii D. 10. f. 9 a.]

In nomine domini nostri Jesu Christi. Notum sit omnibus tam presentibus quam posteris, quod ego Athelbertus Dei gratia rex Anglorum per evangelicum genitorem meum Augustini de idolatra factus Christicola, tradidi Deo per ipsum antistitem aliquam partem terre juris mei sub orientali muro civitatis Dorobernie, ubi scilicet per eundem in Christo institutorem, monasterium in honore principum apostolorum Petri et Pauli condidi, et cum ipsa terra, et cum omnibus que ad ipsum monasterium pertinent perpetua libertate donavi, adeo ut nec mihi, nec alicui successorum meorum regum, nec ulli unquam potestati sive ecclesiaticae, sive seculari, quicquam inde liceat usurpare, sed in ipsius abbatis sint omnia libera ditione. Si quis vero de hac donacione nostra, aliquid minuerit, aut irritum facere temptaverit, auctoritate beati pape Gregorii, nostrique apostoli Augustini simul et nostra imprecacione, sit hic segregatus ab omni sancte ecclesie communionem, et in die iudicii, ab omni electorum societate. Circumcingitur hæc terra his terminis. In oriente ecclesia sancti Martini, et inde ab oriente, be rypenne dime, et sic ad aquilonem be pkenze meapche, iterumque ad orientem et ad austrum be Bupnpape meapche. Item ad austrum et occidentem be kynze meapche; item ad aquilonem be kynze meapche, sicque ad occidentem to Richepe cheape, et ita ad aquilonem to Ðputting rþete. Actum est hoc in civitate Dorobernie, anno ab incarnatione Christi DC.V. indictione vj.

Ego Athelburtus rex Anglorum hanc donacionem meam, signo sancte crucis, propria manu confirmavi. Ego Augustinus gratia Dei archiepiscopus libenter subscripsi. Ego Edbaldus, regis filius favi. Ego Hamigisilus dux laudavi. Ego Hocca comes consensi. Ego Angemundus referendarius approbavi. Ego Graphio comes benedixi. Ego Tangisilus, regis optimas confirmavi. Ego Pinca consensi. Ego Geddy corrobora-

Rex Anglorum Athelbertus misericordia omnipotentis Dei catholicus, omnibus sue gentis fidelibus, et adventum glorie magni Dei et salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi, beata spe expectantibus, salutem viteque eterne beatitudinem. Largiente summi regis clementia. Ego Athelbertus in solio paterno confirmatus, paceque divinitus concessa, eo jam per decem quinquennia sceptrigera potestate potitus, et per venerabiles sacre fidei doctores spiritus sancti gratia irradiatus, ab errore falsorum deorum, ad unius veri Dei cultum toto corde conversus, ne ingratus beneficiorum appaream illa a cujus sancta sede nobis in regione umbre mortis sedentibus lux veritatis emicuit, inter alias quas fabricavi ecclesias monitu et hortatu beatissimi pape Gregorii et sancti patris nostri Augustini, ipsi beatissimo apostolorum principi Petro et doctori gentium Paulo monasterium a fundamentis construxi, illudque terris variisque possessionum donariis decorare studui, inibique monachos Deum timentes aggregari feci, et cum consilio ejusdem reverentissimi archipresulis Augustini, ex suo sancto sanctorum collegio venerabilem virum secum ab apostolica sede directum Petrum monachum elegi, eisque ut ecclesiasticus ordo exposcit abbatem preposui. Hoc igitur monasterium ad propectum debiti culminis promovere desiderans, suarumque possessionum terminis dilatare gestiens, sana mente integroque consilio, cum Edbaldi filii mei aliorumque nobilium optimatumque meorum consensu, ob redemptionem anime mee et spem retributionis eterne, optuli ei etiam villam nomine Sturigao alio nomine dictam Cistelei cum omnibus redditibus ei jure competentibus, cum mancipiis, silvis cultis vel incultis, pratis, pascuis, paludibus, fluminibus, et contiguis ei maritimis terminis eam ex una parte cingentibus, omnia mobilia vel immobilia in usus fratrum sub regulari tramite et monastica religione inibi Deo serviendum: missurum etiam argenteum, scapton aureum, iterum sellam cum freno aureo, et gemmis exornatam, speculum argenteum, armilcaisia oloserica, camisiam ornatam quod mihi xenium de domino papa Gregorio sedis apostolicæ directum fuerat, que omnia supredicto monasterio gratanter optuli. Quod etiam monasterium ipse servus Dei Augustinus sanctorum apostolorum ac martyrum reliquiis variisque ecclesiasticis ornamentis ab apostolica sede sibi transmissis copiose ditavit, seseque in ea et cunctos successores suos ex auctoritate apostolica sepeliri precepit, scriptura dicente "non esse civitatem mortuorum sed vivorum." Ubi etiam mihi et successoribus meis sepulturam providi, sperans me quandoque ab ipso apostolici ordinis principe cui dominus potestatem ligandi atque solvendi dedit et claves regni celorum tradidit, a peccatorum nexibus solui, et eterne beatitudinis Januam introduci.

Quod monasterium nullus episcoporum, nullus successorum meorum regum in aliquo ledere aut inquietare presumat, nullam omnino subjectionem in ea sibi usurpare audeat, sed abbas ipse qui ibi fuerit ordinatus, intus et foris cum consilio fratrum secundum timorem Dei libere eam regat et ordinet, ita ut in die domini dulcem illam piissimi redemptoris nostri vocem mereatur audire dicentis. "Euge serue bone et fidelis, quia super pauca fuisti fidelis, super multa te constituam, intra in gaudium domini tui." Hanc donacionem meam in nomine patris, et filii, et spiritus sancti largitate divina ut mihi tribuatur peccatorum remissio, per omnia cum consilio reverentissimi patris Augustini condidi, idque ad scribendum Augemundum presbyterum ordinavi. De his ergo omnibus que hic scripta sunt, si quis aliquid inde minuere presumpserit, sciat se equissimo judici Deo et beatis apostolis Petro et Paulo rationem esse redditurum. Confirmata est hec donacio presentibus testibus reverentissimo patre Augustino Dorovernensis ecclesie archiepiscopo primo, Melito quoque et Justo Londonie, et Rofensis ecclesie presulibus, et religioso famulo Christi Laurentio presbytero, Edbaldo filio meo, Hamigisilo duce, Augemundo referendario, Hocca et Graphione comitibus, Tangisilo et Pinca et Geddi et Aldhuno regis optimatibus, aliisque plurimis diversarum dignitatum personis. Actum sane quadragesimo quinto anno regni nostri, sub die v. idus Januarii.

NUM. III.

Privilegium almi Augustini, Anglie Apostoli.

AUGUSTINUS episcopus Dorobernie sedis famulus, quem superna inspirante clementia, beatissimus papa Gregorius Anglice genti Deo acquirende legatarium misit amministrum; omnibus successoribus suis episcopis, cunctisque Anglie regibus cum suis posteris, atque omnibus Dei fidelibus et in fide et gratia pacem et salutem. Patet omnibus quod Deo amabilis rex Athelbertus, primus Anglorum regum Christi regno sacratus, nostra instantia et sua prodiga benevolentia inter ceteras ecclesias quas fecit et episcopia, monasterium extra metropolim suam Doroberniam, in honore principum apostolorum Petri et Pauli regaliter condidit et regalibus opibus amplisq; possessionibus ditavit, dilatavit, magnificavit, perpetuaque libertate, et omni jure regio cum omnibus rebus et judiciis, intus et foris illi pertinentibus, munivit, suoque regio privilegio et superni iudicii imprecacione, atque apostolica sancti pape Gregorii interminacione excommunicatoria, contra omnem injuriam confirmavit. Ego quoque ejusdem libertatis adjutor et patrocinator omnes successores meos archiepiscopos, omnesque ecclesiasticas vel seculares potestates per dominum Jesum Christum et apostolorum ejus reverentiam obtestor, atque apostolica memorati patris nostri pape Gregorii interminacione interdico, ne quisquam unquam ullum potentatum, aut dominatum, aut imperium in hoc dominicum vel apostolicum monasterium vel terras vel ecclesias ad illud pertinentes usurpare presumat, nec ulla prorsus subjugacionis aut servitutis, aut tributi condicionem, vel in magno vel in minimo, Dei ministros inquietet aut opprimat. Abbatem a suis fratribus electum in eodem monasterio non ad suum famulatum sed ad dominicum ministerium ordinet, nec sibi hunc obaudire sed Deo suadeat. Nec vero sibi subjectum, sed fratrem, sed consortem, sed collegam et co-ministrum in opus dominicum eum reputet. Non ibi missas quasi ad sue dicionis altare nec ordinationes vel benedictiones usurpative sine abbatis vel fratrum petitione exerceat, nullum sibi jus consuetudinarium vel in vilissima re exigat quatinus pacis concordia unum sint in domino utrimque, nec quisquam, quod absit, dominandi dissidio in iudicium incidat diaboli, qui superbie tyrannide corrui de celo. Reges gentium (inquit dominus) dominatur eorum, vos autem non sic. Cumque ab alienis non a filiis accipiantur tributa, sic ipse dominus concludit, ergo liberi sunt filii. Qua ergo irreverentia patres ecclesiarum in filios regni Dei sibi vendicant dominationem, maxime autem in hanc ecclesiam sanctorum thesaurarium, in cujus materno utero tot pontificum Dorobernie, regumque ac principum corpora speramus alma refovenda sepulture requie, ex auctoritate scilicet apostolica, et hinc ad eternam gloriam resuscitanda. Tales supremi iudicis amicos si quis offendere non metuens hujus privilegii statuta violaverit, vel violatorem imitando vim suam tenuerit, sciat se apostolico beati Petri gladio per suum vicarium Gregorium puniendum nisi emendaverit. Hec ergo omnia, uti hic sunt scripta, apostolica ipsius institutoris nostri Gregorii comprobatione et auctoritate servanda sancimus, suoque ore confirmamus, presente glorioso rege Athelberto cum filio suo Ethelbaldo, et collaudantibus cum ipso omnibus optimatibus regiis, atque ultro volentibus reverentissimis fratribus nostris a sancta Rome ecclesie huc mecum vel ad me in evangelium Domini destinatis, scilicet Laurentio, quem nobis Deo favente successorem constituimus, et Mellito Lundonie episcopo, et Justo Rofensi episcopo, et Petro venerabili ejusdem monasterii principum apostolorum abbate primo, cum ceteris in domino adjutoribus meis obnixè postulantibus, simulque in eos qui hec fideliter servaverint benedictionem, aut in impenitentes, quod nolimus, transgressores damnationem exercentibus.

NUM. IV.

[Ex MS. quodam in Collegio Corp. Christi Cantabrigiæ. Miscellanea G. p. 307.]

De Ecclesiis fundatis ante adventum Normannorum in Angliam.

PREDICANTE Augustino, cum sociis suis in Britannia verbum Dei genti Anglorum, anno ab incarnatione domini quingentesimo nonagesimo septimo; Athelbertus rex Cantuar. credit et baptismi gratiam suscepit. Qui Dei ac salvatoris sui amore, beato Augustino et omnibus successoribus suis palatium et curiam suam, omnemque civitatem cum suburbanis suis jure perpetuo habere concessit. Ipse vero ad Raculfum qd. secus mare situm est, transivit, ibique sibi ac success. suis regalem sedem paravit. Augustinus igitur civitate potitus, et iis qui in ejus suburbio erant exceptis, principio alodiis ad orientalem plagam, cimiterium civitatis extra muros fecit, ubi Ethelbertus rex, rogatu Augustini, Monasterium, in honore beatorum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli fabricavit, in quo ipsius Augustini et successorum ejus corpora, monachorum quoque et aliorum fidelium Dorobernie possent sepeliri; duravit itaque mos iste per plurima annorum curricula. Cum autem venerabilis vir Cuthbertus ad archiepiscopatum venisset, qui ab beato Augustino undecimus fuerat, ex more, propter dignitatis sue pallium, Romam ivit: et peracto negotio consideravit infra civitatem Laterani plures sepultos fuisse, accedensque ad papam rogavit ut sibi in Anglia infra civitates liceret cimiteria facere. Annuat, rediit, et per Angliam passim cimiteria fieri constituit; a tempore illo presules ac monachi, ceterique ut ratio posebat, Cant. sunt tumultati. Sed licet cimiterium in civitate sit factum, illud tamen qd. extra civitatem prius fuerat nihilominus in dominio et potestate archiepiscopi manebat, quam quidem ecclesiam illam beatorum apostolorum, ubi corpus beati Augustini sociorumque tumultata sunt, libere archiepis. tenebant, utpote eam que in propria terra archiepiscoporum sita est, unde etiam aulas suas ceterasque domos necessarias infra habitum curie S. Augustini ipsi habebant; ibique frequentius commanebant propter aerem liberiolem et locum metropolin salubriorem quam in alia curia sua que juxta metropolin basilicam infra civitatem habetur, nempe que archiepis. adeo propria erat, ut illam cui voluissent darent, quodque inde decrevissent facere potuissent: omniaque itaque ad eam pertinentia disponebant, sic, ecclesiam Dorobornensem ubi sedes episcopalis erat; nec differentia aliqua inter monachos Cantuariensis ecclesie et fratres sancti Augustini erat, sed utrique congregationi unum capitulum, refectorium ceteraque loca erant communia: in hoc tamen differebant, quod monachi sancti Augustini nunquam extra suum claustrum processionem faciebant, nisi quando Dorobornenses prodibant, tuncque illi omnes conjuncti coibant ad portam ecclesie Christi; de sancto Augustino venientes, cum suis sanctuariis, Dorobornensibus sociebantur, unum continentes et ad nutum cantoris Dorobernie pari modo in hiis que sui officii erant parentes. Revertentes ad portam dividebantur, illi, ad episc. illi ad sanctum Augustinum; campanis minime horas designabant antequam in episcopali sede signarentur, propter hoc nonnulla a presulibus sunt abbatibus instituta, utpote hiis qui ab archiepiscopis habebant quicquam honoris tenebant. Siquidem in cena domini annatim edituus sancti Augustini l. sol. denariorum secretario sancti salvatoris Dorobernie reddebat pro omnibus capellis ad ecclesiam beati Augustini pertinentibus, et vij. denarios pro cognitione subjectionis de altari beatorum apostolorum Petri et Pauli, super altare Christi Dorobernie propria manu ponebat; vel si ipse non poterat, unus de ecclesie senioribus. Preterea ipsa ecclesia xxij panes monachiles eidem prebet, duas amphoras de mellito potu qui eum medonem vocant, refertas, et duos arietes, trinos juvencos, cornubus et non mutilatos. Hac die in sede episcopali ad majoris campane sonitum pontifex absolutionem facit; sabbato vero mane ad sanctum Augustinum vadit, ibi fratres absque signi sonitu absolvit, et lavacro ibidem sibi parato lavantur, radantur; ubi vero de lavacro exierit habebit sibi abbas indumenta nova parata, scilicet, staminam et foemoralia, cucullam, et frocum, crurum quoque et pedum tegumenta. Quibus indutis equitaturam sibi decentem ascendet, quam abbas honeste constratam prebebit. Sicque abbate eum ducente cum suis honestioribus ad sedem suam redibit. Cum vero ad suas mansiones archiepiscopus ire decreverit et abbas domi fuerit, ad curiam archiepiscopi abbas veniet, equitaturum operiet, et equitatem ad unum vel duo millaria conducat. Cum vero redierit, ei obviam abbas procedet et cum honore ad suam sedem perducet. Hec et hiis similia sunt Cantuariensium monachorum scripta. Inter hec, conventus religiosorum multis in locis aguntur cenobia fabricantur, abbacie construuntur, apud Raculfe, quo in loco sibi rex Ethelbertus sedem regni preparaverat, cenobium construitur, cujus abbas ultimus fuit Wenredus. In australi parte civitatis infra muros, abbatia in honore beate Mildrithe statuitur, cujus ultimus abbas Alfwicus. Extra civitatem in parte orientali, est ecclesia beati Martini, ubi sedes episcopalis erat. Qui episcopus domi vel in comitatu semper manebat, et vices archiepiscopi qui regis curiam frequentabat per omnia gerebat. Monachos sibi de ecclesia Dorobornensi, et ipse monachus in obsequium accipiebat, solemnitates in sede metropoli celebrabat, sicque ad sua redibat, archidiaconatus officium agebat, similiter clericos qui ad archiepiscopum pertinebant; clericos vero qui in terris monachorum erant, prior ecclesie quem decanum vocant, curabat, corripiebat, emendabat. In ipsis suis ecclesiis ponendos ponebat, deponendos deponebat, sua per se capitula tenebat.

In synodis ipse et episcopus pari ornatu consedebant, pariter audita decernebant. Cum autem quivis pro recto faciendo pignus porrigeret, is ad quem pertinebat illud et emendationem accipiebat. Moris istius series usque ad tempora Normannorum perduravit. Hujus episcopatus presul extremus extitit Godwynus. Anno ab incarnatione Domini MLXvj. Willielmus dux Normannorum Angliam bellando superavit, et in ea, quanto tempore vixit, imperavit. Quarto anno ejusdem principis, Lanfrancus, Cadomensis abbas, invitante eodem rege, et papa Alexandro precipiente, Britanniam venit, et Dorobornensem ecclesiam regendam suscepit, que est totius Britannie metropolis. In illo tempore Godwynus episcopus ecclesie beati Martini que sita est in suburbio civitatis parte orientali, ex hac vita migravit; cui successorem Lanfrancus subrogare noluit, dicens quod in una civitate duo episcopi minime esse deberent, minus caute considerans quod ille in civitate sedem episcopalem non habebat. Novus enim homo et nec dum consuetudinem patrie vel dignitatem Doroborniensis ecclesie edoctus, antiquum antecessorum suorum morem, in hac parte sequi supersedit; ipsum igitur non subrogavit, sed loco episcopi quendam clericum suum archidiaconum ordinavit, quod se fecisse ante mortem suam vehementer indoluit. Archidiaconus ergo constitutus curam super clericos archiepiscopi intendebat, et prior ecclesie Christi illis qui ad monachos pertinebant in choro, sive aliis in locis diversis, prestabat. Sed post monachos, locum stationis digniorem tenebat, unde cum in capella archiepiscopi pro monachis starct, et archiepiscopo nonnullis inde verbum fieret, clericos inquit debet erudire eisque prestare, sed monachis obedire, atque subesse, minister enim eorum est. Synodos ipse et prior ecclesie tenebant concordiam sermocinatione, nisi dispari veneratione. Cum ergo Lanfrancus sue ecclesie terras a principibus esse direptas sensisset, magno cum labore eas attrahere operam dabat : abbatiam quoque beati Augustini, antecessorum suorum Dorobernie pontificum more, in suo dominio tenere, cui et abbatem providere et etiam virgam pastorem volebat prebere. Sed rex novus id abnuit, dicens se solum omnes in regno suo baculos pastores velle tenere, nec potestatem hanc cuiquam concedere. Ea inquit que ad abbatis, ejusque monachorum christianitatem attinet exerce, neque in hiis que ad exteriora pertinent abbatem servire permitte. Lanfrancus itaque, ne majora sue ecclesie negotia prepedirentur, ad tempus desistere coepit utile judicavit. Multa enim per regis gratiam acquisivit, multa fecit, et regias vices in regni negotiis opportune exercuit.

BONIFACIUS episcopus servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis abbati et conventui Sancti Augustini Cantuarie ad Romanam ecclesiam nullo medio pertinentis ordinis Sancti Benedicti salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Circumspecta sedis apostolice providentia qualitates agendorum cum summa deliberatione discuciens fidelium statui libenter prosperitatis incrementa procurat, noxia subtrahit, et molestiis viam precludit eventibus, prout negotii qualitas exigit, personarum et locorum exquirat conditio, et instantia equitatis exposcit. Et id circo quamvis universas orbis ecclesias apostolice sedi que disponente Domino super illas principatum obtinet ordinarie potestatis subesse noscantur, aliquas tamen interdum sedes ipsa de sue auctoritatis plenitudine specialius sibi subdidit, sic eas a cujuslibet jurisdictione prorsus eripiens, ut nullum sibi nisi Romanum pontificem superiorem et Dominum recognoscant, constituendo ipsas quodam singulari privilegio liberas penitus et exemptas ut earum vitatis noxiis votivis successibus et quietis plenitudine prosperentur. Nos quidem ad apostolice dignitatis apicem superna dispositione vocati, ex incumbente nobis pastoralis officii debito circa omnium ecclesiarum statum solertem considerationem habentes, ad vos et monasterium vestrum instantia propensioris sollicitudinis excitamur, et tanto libentius et favorabilius quietis vestre commoda vestrorumque incrementa profectum promovemus, quanto peramplius beatorum patrum Benedicti et Augustini recolendas memorias reveremur, quantoque benignius vos et monasterium prelibatum, de quorum fama laudabili et virtutum exercitio fragrantiam suavitatis accepimus, paterne sinceritatis amplectibus complexamur. Sane petitio vestra nobis exhibita continebat quod licet monasterium vestrum a principio foundationis ipsius, a tempore cujus memoria non extitit, cum omnibus membris suis existentibus ubicunque fuerit exemptum per specialia privilegia sedis apostolice a jurisdictione qualibet ordinaria, prout in ipsis privilegiis continetur : vobis tamen postmodum nunc hinc nunc inde vexationibus et angustiis fatigatis super hujusmodi exemptionibus et libertatibus contentis in ipsis inter bone memorie Richardum archiepiscopum Cantuariensem, cum sui consensu capituli ex parte una, et quondam Rogerum tunc abbatem cum consensu dicti monasterii ex altera primo ; et postmodum inter quondam Symonem de Langedona archidiaconum Cantuariensem cum consensu sancte memorie beati Edmundi archiepiscopi Cant' successores dicti Ricardi et capituli ecclesie Christi Cant' et quondam Robertum abbatem ipsius monasterii cum consensu dicti sui conventus, ac deinde inter prefatos Edmundum archiepiscopum et archidiaconum, ac eosdem Robertum abbatem et conventum quedam compositionis inite, facte seu habite fuisse noscuntur, quarum una scilicet cum eodem Edmundo habita et fuit per sedem apostolicam confirmata ex certa scientia ; verum cum per hujusmodi compositiones predictis vestris privilegiis et libertatibus non modicum derogeretur, nobis humiliter supplicastis ut providere vobis et ipsi monasterio super hiis paterna sollicitudine dignaremur, vos et illud ad quietis, immunitatis, libertatis et exemptionis plenitudinem reducendo. Nos igitur monasterium ipsum condignis efferre honoribus et communire libertatibus cupientes, ut quo minus aliorum molestiis turbatum fuerit, eo amplius divina favente gratia prosperetur, vestris supplicationibus inclinati hujusmodi privilegia exemptiones et libertates eidem monasterio et vobis a predicta sede concessa in suo volumus et decernimus robore permanere, ac nichilominus ut in dicte sedis sinu plenius quiescentes vos et monasterium vestrum cum omnibus membris suis et ecclesiis, capellis et cinodochiis, hospitalibus, cantariis, necnon castris, villis, maneriis, domibus, grangiis et possessionibus, terris, redditibus, et quibuscunque bonis ad vos et prefatum monasterium in presentiarum spectantibus, ac hiisque ex largitione principum, collatione fidelium, et aliis justis modis et titulis imposterum dante Domino potitis adipisci in quibuscunque fuerint dioc' constituta, et omnibus personis vestri ordinis et aliis subjectis vobis degentibus in eisdem ab omni potestate, jurisdictione, subjectione atque dominio tam venerabilis fratris nostri archiepiscopi et dilectorum filiorum capituli Cant' qui nunc sunt et qui pro tempore fuerint, quam quorumlibet archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, capitulorum, abbatum et prelatorum, et officialium suorum, et aliarum quarumlibet ecclesiasticarum personarum absolvimus, eximimus et perpetuo liberamus de apostolice plenitudine potestatis, ac ea omnia totaliter et immediate soli dumtaxat Romano pontifici et prefate sedi decernimus subjacere, ita quod nec archiepiscopus Cant' jure metropolitico seu diocesano aut legationis seu tuitionis pretexto, quas in provincia Cantuar' habere se asserit, nec prior et capitulum dicte ecclesie Christi pretexto tuitionis quam in dicta provincia sibi vindicare dicuntur, nec quivis—alius jurisdictionem quamlibet ordinariam in dioc' seu provincia Cant' hujusmodi tempore vacationis exercens, neve idem archiepiscopus vel quivis ex eisdem archiepiscopis, episcopis seu prelatibus, officialibus seu ministris, nec quevis alia persona in vos abbatem et conventum et predictum monasterium, aut quevis membra vel loca seu bona ad vos et monasterium vestrum spectantia, seu que spectabunt in posterum, quoquomodo vel in vestros et ejusdem monasterium subditos et personas prefatas cujuscunque status vel conditionis existant, utpote omnia libera et exempta et prefate sedi apostolice dumtaxat immediate subjecta possint ullatenus ex quacunque occasione vel causa jurisdictionem aliquam vel potestatem sive dominium sibi vindicare, exactiones facere, collectas imponere, obedientias vel procuraciones exigere, visitationes vel correctiones facere, aut censuram ecclesiasticam quomodolibet exercere sine mandato predicte sedi apostolice speciali. Nos enim excommunicationum, suspensionum et interdicti sententias quas contra tenorem exemptionis hujusmodi, et processus quoslibet quos contra premissa fieri contigerit et haberi et nunc irritos decernimus et inanes ac nullius penitus existere firmitatis. Preterea crisma, oleum et consecrationes altarium, ordinationes monachorum et clericorum qui ad sacros ordines fuerint promovend' a Cant' suscipiatis archiepiscopo, si gratiam et communionem prefate sedi habuerit, et ea gratis et absque pravitare aliqua vobis voluerit impartiri, alioquin quemcumque malueritis adeatis antistitem catholicum, qui nostra fretus auctoritate quod postulatur indulgeat, nec id vobis audeat aliquatenus denegare, non obstantibus predictis et quibuscunque aliis compositionibus, ordinationibus, constitutionibus et consuetudinibus seu factis super hoc in contrarium quocunque modo vel tempore hactenus habitis, editis vel optentis, aut quod in compositione superius nominata, que fuit per sedem apostolicam ut predicatur confirmata, inter alia continetur, quod si qua partium predictarum contra ipsam compositionem aliquid impetrasset vel impetraret imposterum, illud inane et irritum haberetur et confirmatio ipsa firmum robur nichilominus optineret, aut appellationibus interjectis seu quibuscunque processibus habitis et specialiter causis nunc motis inter venerabilem fratrem nostrum Robertum archiepiscopum Cant' ex parte una, et vos ex altera super ecclesiis de Leanham, Plumsted, Tenderdene, Sellynggs, Preston, Latheburne, Sancti Pauli Cant' hospitale, Sancti Laurentii ac cantaria pro magistri Hamonis Doge anima ordinata, seu super aliis quibuscunque ecclesiis vobis a sede appropriatis, eadem etiamsi causa pendeat super premissis in quocunque foro vel coram quocunque iudice aut quibuscunque literis et indulgentiis apostolicis in quacunque forma verborum optentis, de quibus quorumque totis tenoribus deberet in nostris literis fieri mentio specialis, ad indicium autem hujusmodi percepte a sede apostolica libertatis volumus ut prefatum monasterium unam marcham sterlingorum nomine census in festo resurrectionis Dominice persolvat nobis nostrisque successoribus annuatim. Nulli ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostre absolutionis, exemptionis liberationis, irritationis, voluntatis et constitutionis infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attemptare presumpserit, indignationem Dei omnipotentis et beatorum Petri et Pauli apostolorum ejus se noverit incursum. Declaratio Bonifacii Papæ Octavi super privilegio monasterii Sancti Augustini Cantuariæ. Ibid.

BONIFACIUS episcopus servus servorum Dei, ad perpetuam rei memoriam. Dudum pro parte dilectorum filiorum abbatis et conventus monasterii sancti Augustini Cant' ordinis sancti Benedicti fuit expositum coram nobis, quod licet eorum monasterium a principio foundationis ipsius, seu a tempore cujus memoria non exstabat, cum omnibus membris suis existentibus, ubicunque fuisset exemptum per specialia privilegia sedis apostolice a jurisdictione qualicunque ordinaria, prout evidentius in privilegiis contineri dicebatur, eisdem eis tamen postmodum per nonnullos archiepiscopos Cant' qui pro tempore fuerant, nunc hinc nunc inde vexationibus et angustiis fatigatis, quedam compositiones super exemptionibus et libertatibus contentis in dictis privilegiis intervenerant inter partes, verum cum iidem abbas et conventus asserebant per hujusmodi compositiones predictis eorum privilegiis et libertatibus non modicum derogari. Nos eorum supplicationibus inclinati, hujusmodi privilegia, exemptiones et libertates ipsis et dicto monasterio a prefata sede concessa in suo volumus et decrevimus robore permanere, ac nichilominus ipsos abbatem et conventum dictumque monasterium, cum omnibus membris, ecclesiis, capellis, cinodochiis, hospitalibus, cantariis, necnon castris, villis, maneriis, domibus, grangiis, terris, possessionibus, redditibus et quibuscunque bonis suis in quibuscunque forent dioc' constituta, et omnibus personis sui ordinis, et aliis eis subjectis degentibus in eisdem, ab omni potestate, jurisdictione, subjectione atque dominio tam venerabilis fratris nostri archiepiscopi et dilectorum filiorum capituli Cant' qui tunc erant et pro tempore forent, quam quorumlibet archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, capitulorum, prelatorum et officialium suorum, aliarum quarumlibet ecclesiasticarum personarum, duximus per nostras sub certa forma literas eximendos, et eis super hujusmodi exemptionis nostre privilegio, dilectos filios Westmonaster' et de Waltham' ac de sancto Edmundo Londonien' et Norwicen' dioc' monaster' abbates per alias nostras sub certa forma literas conservatores nichilominus deputandos. Postmodum autem venerabili fratri nostro Roberto archiepiscopo Cant' pretendente quod prefati Westmonaster' et de Waltham' abbates in hujusmodi conservationis negotio procedentes fines mandati nostri in hac parte super certis articulis patenter excesserant, et quod memorati abbas et conventus ejusdem monasterii sancti Augustini predictas exemptiones et vires earum contra justiciam excedentes jurisdictionem ordinariam, nedum in ecclesiis quas ipsi abbas et conventus appropriatas sibi esse dicebant et vicariis, clericis, parochiis et parochianis et earundem ecclesiarum, sed etiam in ecclesiis in quibus iidem abbas et conventus asserebant jus patronatus dumtaxat habere, ac in rectoribus, clericis, parochiis et parochianis ipsarum sibi temere usurpare, ac jurisdictionem ipsam in civitatem et dioc' Cantuarien' diversis modis exercere, sollennes insuper processiones que a clero et populo dictarum ecclesiarum, sicut a ceteris clericis ac populis dictarum Cantuarien' civitatis et dioc' singulis annis certis diebus ad ecclesiam Christi Cant' publice fieri consueverunt impedire, pulsationem quoque campanarum que in transitu ipsius archiepiscopi per predictas civitatem et dioc' Cant' ob ejus reverentiam et honorem fieri consueverat ab antiquo subtrahere, seu subtrahi facere in ecclesiis predictis presumpserant, fuerunt tam pro parte memorati archiepiscopi et predicte Cant' ecclesie, quam sibi adherentium et adherere volentium diverse appellationes ad sedem apostolicam interjecte, cumque negotium appellationum hujusmodi pro parte ipsius archiepiscopi per ejus procuratorem presente procuratore ipsorum abbatis et conventus fuisset propositum coram nobis, Nos volentes de ipsius qualitate negotii plenius informari, ac per viam provisionis et ordinationis negotium ipsum ex officio nostro sub compedio diffinire, procuratoribus ipsis duximus injungendum, ut tam super exemptione predicta, quam super appellationibus memoratis, nos de iuribus partium earundem verbotenus et in scriptis plenius informarent. Qui pro partibus ipsis super earum iuribus, nos juxta hujusmodi mandatum nostrum informare curarunt, Nos hujusmodi informatione recepta volentes super premissis ipsarum partium cavillationibus obviare, ac amputare litigiorum et jurgiorum amfractus et dispendia inter eas providendo et ordinando declaramus, et declarando decernimus, quod prefati abbas et conventus monasterii sancti Augustini Cant' in ecclesiis Cantuar' civitat' et dioc' in quibus ipsi jus patronatus dumtaxat obtinent, et futuris temporibus obtinebunt, habeant presentationem rectorum et clericorum, et alia que jura continent patronatus. Archiepiscopus vero Cantuarien' qui nunc est, et qui pro tempore fuerit, habeat in eisdem ecclesiis institutionem et destitutionem, et tam in eis, quam in rectoribus, clericis et parochianis ipsarum etiam alia spiritualia, prout hinc et inde communia jura permittunt. In ecclesiis quoque ipsarum civitatis et dioc' quas iidem abbas et conventus in proprios usus optinere noscuntur, et quas eos optinere infuturum contigerit, et rectoribus seu vicariis, clericis et parochianis earum ipsi abbas et conventus habeant temporalia sua, idem autem archiepiscopus habeat spiritualia in eisdem, nec alias quam eis ex presenti nostra declaratione permittitur, memorati abbas et conventus in predictis ecclesiis, in quibus ipsi ut dictum est jus patronatus dumtaxat habent vel habebunt, et rectoribus, clericis et parochianis earum, et in ecclesiis quas in proprios usus optinent vel optinebunt, aut in rectoribus seu vicariis, clericis, parochiis et parochianis earum jurisdictionem sibi vendicent, aut in eos exercere quoquomodo presumant. Declaramus insuper quod clausula de personis degentibus in ecclesiis, capellis, et ceteris locis eorumdem ad monachos et perpetuo conversos referatur insuper autem per rectores et alios clericos, necnon parochianos predictarum et aliarum quarumcunque ecclesiarum Cantuarien' civitat' et dioc' in quibus ipsi abbas et conventus qualemcumque jurisdictionem habere noscuntur debitum honorem et reverentiam in pulsando campanas, in processionibus faciendis, et in omnibus aliis in quibus consueverunt et debent, volumus et precipimus exhiberi archiepiscopo memorato debitis et consuetis temporibus, atque locis prefato exemptionis nostre privilegio in ceteris contentis in eo pleno robore duraturo. Nulli ergo omnino homini liceat hanc paginam nostre declarationis, constitutionis et precepti infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attemptare presumpserit, indignationem omnipotentis Dei et beatorum Petri et Pauli apostolorum ejus se noverit incursum. Prefato igitur domino Symone archiepiscopo vocante domino ab hac luce substracto et venerabili patre domino Johanne Dei gratia nunc' Cant' archiepiscopo sicut domino placuit eidem canonice substituto, placuit tam dicto domino Johanni archiepiscopo per ipsos religiosos diligenter et humiliter requisito quam religiosis predictis pro gravaminibus hujusmodi et alijs dispendijs evitandis per viam amicabilis compositionis lites et discordias dirimere supradictas. OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus presens scriptum visuris vel audituris, H. Dei gratia abbas de Waltham, R. magister ordinis de Sempingeham et.... prior Sancte Trinitatis London salutem in domino sempiternam. Anno ab incarnatione Domini millesimo ducentesimo tricesimo tertio, pontificatus domini Gregorii pape noni anno septimo, cum ex relegatione sedis apostolice in monasterio Sancti Augustini Cantuarie visitationis officio fungeremur, concessa nobis plenaria potestate corrigendi et reformandi ibidem, tam in capite quam in membris, ea que correctionis et reformationis officio videremus indigere, inter cetera Infirmitorio dicti loci quod magnis expensis indigebat inveniendes nihil certi redditus esse assignatum, sed in omnibus habere defectum, duximus auctoritate apostolica providendum, certis ex causis attendentes quod torpor ordinis et dissolutio caritatis ex hoc traheret originem, si afflictis per aegritudinem victus penuria superadd' et afflictionem, unde nos sancte religionis ingens pulsabat aculeus dicto loco provisione congrua subvenire. Cum igitur inspectis diversorum Romanorum pontificum scriptis authenticis, inveniremus ecclesiam de Cistelet cum pertinentiis usibus loci memorati specialiter fuisse deputatam, inhibitionibus factis in eisdem ne dicta ecclesia in alios usus convertetur quam non sine divina ut credimus provisione abbas et conventus Sancti Augustini q'dam W. nomine clericum Cantuariensis dyocesis judicialiter optinuerant ea vice quem ad vicariam dicte ecclesie tantummodo presentatum bone memorie Ricardus Cantuariensis archiepiscopus, cum de jure non posset, de facto rectorem instituerat in eadem post appellationem ab eisdem propter hoc ad sedem apostolicam legitime interpositam sicut ex processu de Waltham et Westmonasterii priorum qui de mandato sedis apostolice dictam ecclesiam eis sententialiter adjudicaverant evidenter inspeximus, Nos auctoritate apostolica qua fungebamur ea vice ad usus infirmantium ejusdem congregationis dictam ecclesiam ordinavimus. Et ne per factum aliquorum querentium que sua sunt non que Jesu Christi sicut antea contigisse intelleximus, rarus aut nullus usus de dicta ecclesia dictis fratribus proveniret, auctoritate predicta de ecclesia memorata sic duximus statuendum, ut custos Infirmatorii qui pro tempore fuerit fructus dicte ecclesie cum omni integritate percipiat salva vicaria canonice in eadem si voluerint facienda. Et ut proventus dicte ecclesie cum omni maturitate et sollicitudine diligenti in dictos usus erogentur, semper de claustro aliquem ex fratribus quem conventus ad hoc duxerit eligendum, dicto custodi dedimus adiutorem qui semper in fine anni ratiocinia plene reddent de eadem. Et quia in commissionis nostre litteris illud continebatur quod statuta a nobis per censuram ecclesiasticam firmiter, faceremus observari, sub divini interminatione anathematis, auctoritate apostolica, prohibuimus ne abbas dicti loci vel quivis alius bona dicte ecclesie aliquo titulo, vel pensionem inde solvendo, vel ad firmam eam dando, vel eam pro altera permutando, seu quocunque alienationis genere, in aliquam transferre presumat ecclesiasticam vel personam secularem. Et ut hec nostra Ordinatio futuris temporibus observetur, ad instantiam dictorum abbatis et conventus sigilla nostra uno cum sigillo abbatis et sigillo capituli sui in testimonium presenti scripto duximus apponenda. Fatigati et reliqua. Paci et tranquillitati vestre paterna solitudine providere volentes, auctoritate apostolica prohibemus, ne Cantuarie archiepiscopus aut archidiaconus sive officialis ejus, vel aliquis legatus optentu legacionis monasterium vestrum, vel monachos ejus aliquatenus gravare, semina vel ecclesias, clericos aut homines vestros contra privilegia sedis apostolice interdiceret vel excommunicare presumat, nisi fuerit a Romani pontificis latere destinatus, vel mandatum ab eo suscepit speciale. Ad hec adicientes, de consilio eorundem fratrum nostrorum statuimus, ut monasterium vestrum cum omnibus pertinenciis suis intus et foris in ea semper stabilitate permaneat in qua a centum annis retro usque in hodiernum diem noscitur permansisse. Nulli igitur, &c.

GREGORIUS IX.

Et si ex munitione et reliqua. Quum igitur ecclesiam vestri monasterii de Chist usibus domus vestre congregacionis infirmancium, que multis experimentis dicitur indigere, pie ac provide, sicut accepimus, ascripseritis, eamque felicis memorie Celestinus Papa predecessor noster in usus domus ejus duxerit confirmandam; Nos devocionis vestre precibus annuentes, ad exemplar ipsius predictam ecclesiam vobis ad usus domus ejus auctoritate apostolica confirmamus, et presentis scripti patrocinio communimus, auctoritate vobis presencium inhibentes, ne ipsam ecclesiam vel ^a pertinentes suas in alios usus convertere, vel in aliam presumatis transferre personam. Nulli, &c.

Religionis vestre et reliqua. Ea propter dilecti in domino filii vestris supplicibus annuentes ad exemplar felicis memorie Urbani Pape predecessoris nostri, auctoritate presencium inhibemus, ne tibi fili abbas vel alicui successorum tuorum liceat ad instanciam alicujus ecclesiastice secularisve persone ecclesias de Menstre, de Nordbourne, de Sellynge, de Faver., de Midd., ad vos pleno jure spectantes, et prebendam de G. quam habetis in ecclesia sancti Martini de Dovoriam, deputatas vestris usibus, et vobis a sede apostolica confirmatas, alicui concedere, set eadem ecclesie et eorum beneficia vobis et successoribus vestris in perpetuum conserventur. Prohibemus insuper, ne quis episcopus, archidiaconus vel officialis eorum, aut alia qualiscunque persona vos ad dandum vel faciendum quod presenti pagina prohibetur aliqua distinctione compellat. Nulli, &c.

INNOCENTIUS III.

Venerabilibus fratribus archiepiscopo Cant. et ejus suffraganeis, et dilectis filiis abbatibus, prioribus, decanis, archidiaconis, prepositis, archipresbiteris et aliis ecclesie prelatis per Cantuarie provinciam constitutis, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Non absque dolore cordis et plurima tribulacione didicimus, quod ita in plerisque partibus ecclesiastica censura dissolvitur et canonicis sententie severitas enervatur, ut viri religiosi, et hii maxime qui per sedis apostolice privilegia majori donati sunt libertate, passim a malefactoribus suis minas sustineant et rapinas dum vix invenitur qui congrua illis protectione subveniat, et pro fovenda pauperum innocencia se murum ^b defensionis apponat. Specialiter autem dilecti filii abbas et fratres monasterii sancti Augustini Cantuarie ordinis sancti Benedicti tam de frequentibus injuriis quam de ipso cotidiano defectu justicie conquerentes, universitatem vestram litteris pecierunt apostolicis exorari, ut ita videlicet eis in tribulacionibus suis contra malefactores eorum prompta debeatis magnanimitate consurgere, quod ab angustiis quas sustinent et pressuris vestro possunt presidio respirare. Ideoque universitati vestre per apostolica scripta mandamus atque precipimus, quatinus illos, qui possessiones vel res seu domos predictorum fratrum vel hominum suorum irreverenter invaserunt, aut ea injuste detinuerunt que predictis fratribus ex testamento decedencium relinquuntur, seu in ipsos fratres vel ipsorum aliquem contra apostolice sedis indulta sentenciam excommunicacionis aut interdicti presumpserint promulgare, vel decimas nutrimentorum suorum animalium sprete apostolice sedis privilegiis extorquere, monicione premissa si laici fuerunt publice candelis accensis singuli vestrum in diocesibus et ecclesiis vestris excommunicacionis sentenciam percullatis; si vero clerici vel canonici regulares seu monachi fuerint eos appellacione remota ab officio et beneficio suspendatis, neutram relaxantes sentenciam donec predictis fratribus plenarie satisfaciat, et tam laici quam clerici seculares, qui pro violenta manuum iniectione in fratres eosdem vel ipsorum aliquem anathematis vinculo fuerint innodati, cum diocesanorum litteris ad sedem apostolicam venientes ab eodem vinculo mereantur absolvi.

Principalem causam et reliqua. Ecclesie igitur vestre sedis apostolice immediate subjecte a futuris gravaminibus, quibus tales impellentes plerosque ad hoc zelo invidie interdum solent affici, providere volentes, auctoritate presencium districtius inhibemus, ne quis, pretextu ecclesiarum que sunt vobis in usus proprios per sedem apostolicam deputate, procuraciones racione visitacionis a vobis exigere vel extorquere, seu alia vobis aut ecclesiis ipsis imponere onera contra justiciam quoquomodo presumat, de quarum proventibus est congrua porcio pro consuetis oneribus sustinendis earundem ecclesiarum vicariis assignata.

Verba Willelmi Regis et Conquestoris de libertate monasterii Sancti Augustini Cantuarie.

Ante omnia autem auctentica prothodictoris hujus regni nostri Augustini ecclesia mea meorumque heredum et optimatum sanctione sua semper regnancium prerogativa, adeo ut quicunque dampnatus huc confugerit mox ut hoc sanctum asilum de longinquo conspexerit impunitatem et libertatem optineat, hujusque juris transgressor rei judicium subeat.

KENT.

GOVERNED solely by a wish to promote the interests of the Christian faith, king Ethelbert, immediately after he had founded the metropolitan seat at Canterbury, determined to form in other parts of his kingdom similar establishments; for this purpose he fixed upon Rochester, or as it was called by the Romans Durobrovis, Durobrovæ, and Durobrovum;

and by the Britons Dowrbryf, which signifies "a swift stream," in allusion to the rapidity of the river Medway, which runs by it.^a By the Saxons it was denominated Hroffe, and Hroffe-ceaster, that is, Roffe's city; Bede says it took its name from one Roffe who first built here.

The first church at Rochester was begun about the year of our Lord 600, and finished four years afterwards, and was dedicated to the honour of God, and the apostle St. Andrew. The king made it a bishop's see, by which he raised the city from obscurity, and gave it a distinguished place in ecclesiastical and civil history. A chapter of secular priests was first established here, which was endowed by Ethelbert with a portion of land called Priestfield, to the south of the city; he afterwards gave other parcels of land within and without the walls of the city for its support. The other benefactors whom we shall have occasion to mention are very few, and many of their donations even trivial, so that it is not surprising that before the conquest the revenues of this see were not sufficient for the proper maintenance of even a very few seculars; their number being at that period reduced to five. Indeed now, by the straitness of its income, as well as the narrow limits of its districts, this diocese is unluckily distinguished from almost every other see in the kingdom. Another great cause of the smallness of its revenues, which must not be omitted, was the frequent inroads of, and devastations committed by, the Danes; and had not this see been favoured with prelates as strenuous in protecting its rights, and promoting its welfare, as they were eminent for their learning, piety, and splendid virtues, it would never have been able to have existed until the days of the reformation; that it withstood that shock without any diminution of its revenue, has been attributed to its poverty rather than the forbearance of the commissioners appointed to superintend those eventful changes.

But small as have been, and still are, the revenues of this see,^b (to quote the words of the author before mentioned,) and confined as is the extent of its district, the ensuing catalogue will shew that many of the prelates, who have presided over this diocese, have been inferior to few of their brethren, in respect of ability, learning, and every commendable virtue, and the reader will likewise perceive that near a third part of the bishops of Rochester have, for their merits, been translated to sees more amply endowed; and that some of them have enjoyed and adorned the highest posts in the church and state.

When St. Augustine was sent by pope Gregory to this country, he was accompanied among many others by JUSTUS, a person eminent for his piety and strict integrity of life, which deservedly called him to one of the highest stations in the church. He was therefore in the year 604 appointed the first bishop of this place.

On the death of king Ethelbert, and the return of his son Eadbald to idolatry, a great change naturally occurred in the affairs of the church, particularly from the great defection which was thereby occasioned among the new converts. Justus, (as was briefly hinted under the history of Laurence archbishop of Canterbury,) was unable to stem this torrent, and abdicating his see fled into France. It is not known precisely how long he was detained abroad; but Eadbald being reclaimed from his apostacy by a pretended miracle of Laurence, Justus returned to Rochester and exercised his pastoral office until the year 624, when he was promoted to the archbishoprick of Canterbury. He was succeeded in this see by

ROMANUS, who enjoyed it barely three years; for in the year 627, on his journey to Rome with a letter from Justus the archbishop, he was unfortunately drowned. His successor was

PAULINUS, the saint, who had accompanied St. Augustine and Justus into England. From his appointment to the see of York in the year 624, that he might attend Ethelburga, the daughter of king Edbald, who was then married to Edwin king of Northumberland, he must have been much respected for his abilities; neither do they appear to have been over-rated; for about two years after his residence in the north, he converted and baptized king Edwin, and most of the attendants at his court. But upon the death of Edwin, who was slain in a battle with Penda king of Mercia, Paulinus was obliged to quit his see; and fortunately arriving at Rochester about the time of Romanus' death, he was elected bishop in his room; though some annalists place his election at the latter end of the year 633. He presided in this see eleven years, and dying on the 10th of October, 644, was buried in the vestry of his own church, with the following epitaph:^d

Siste gradum, clama, qui perlegis hoc epigramma,
Paulinum plora quem substraxit brevis hora
Nobis per funus: de presulibus fuit unus
Prudens, veridicus, constans, et firmus amicus;
Anni sunt rati Domini super astra regentis,
Quadragesima dati quatuor cum sex quoque centis.

ITHAMAR, a native of Canterbury, and the first Englishman who presided in this chair, was appointed to succeed Paulinus in 644; and equalled his predecessor in piety and learning; he died in 655, and was buried, according to Weever,^e in the body of this church, but was removed afterwards by bishop Gundulph.

DAMIANUS, a south Saxon, succeeded Ithamar in

656, on whose death, about eight years after, this see continued for some time vacant.

PUTTA was consecrated, about five years after the death of Damianus, by archbishop Theobald. He was eminent for his private virtues, and a peculiar mildness of disposition, and therefore ill calculated to stem the torrent which threatened and almost destroyed the see. He himself indeed felt the too great weight of this charge, and wished to resign his bishoprick; he was soon however obliged to quit it from more unfortunate causes. Lotharius, who had usurped the throne of his brother king Egbert, committed the greatest excesses, laying the whole country waste, without any respect to churches or religious houses; the city of Rochester particularly suffered from his fury. The country had scarcely recovered itself from the rapine of this and other invaders, when this city was compelled again "to drink deep," as Mr. Philpot says, "of the bitter cup, the churches and monasteries of this see being destroyed in an horrible manner." For Ethelred king of Mercia in the year 676, (though others attribute these atrocious and cruel acts to Ceadwalla king of Wessex,) entering Kent with a powerful army pillaged and burnt this city, destroyed great part if not the whole of the church, and laid waste all the country round. It is said that bishop Putta had retired from his see, previous to this last calamity; if this was not the case, about this time he accepted the charge of a parish in Mercia, under Saxulf the bishop, in which retirement he continued the remainder of his days, and could never be prevailed upon to return to his bishoprick.

In this wretched and ruined state of the see, its church much injured, at least, by fire, its territories pillaged and laid waste, and its bishop flown,^a it is not to be wondered that

JUICHELM, or GULIELMUS, (as Bede calls him,) who was consecrated by Theodore, would not remain long in this chair; but having appointed Gebmund to succeed him, betook himself to a retired life.

GEBMUND accepted the bishoprick in the year 681, and continued bishop about eleven years. He was succeeded in the year 693, by

TOBIAS, an Englishman, well versed in the Greek, Latin, and Saxon languages. He built the portico of St. Paul's within this church, where, according to his own order, he was buried in the year 726.^b

ALDULPH was consecrated in the room of bishop Tobias in the following year. Egbert, king of Kent, gave to this church, during his prelacy, the manor of Stoke, which it continued possessed of for many years, till it was taken from them by the Danes; at the Conquest however it was restored to them. Aldulph dying in 741, was succeeded by

DUN, or DUINA, who was present at a provincial council held at Cliff, near Rochester, in September A.D. 747, in which year

EARDULPH appears to have succeeded him in this see, which seems during his time to have recovered a little from the deplorable state in which it had long been. Many grants were made to it, though much confusion, either owing to the distance of time, or troubles of that particular age, appears in the enumeration of them. Offa king of Mercia, who had invaded Kent, and disposed of things at his pleasure, gave, jointly with Sigered king of Kent, A. D. 747, Frindsbury and Wickham to this church, to which was soon after added the manor of Bromley, (see Appendix.) Sigered also, in the year 762, gave to the church some land north of the monastery, and near the north wall of the city.

DIORAN succeeded to this see in the year 778. In

^a "That the church was exceedingly damaged, and entirely plundered, is generally allowed; and some writers have supposed, that the whole fabric was consumed by fire; but if this last had been the case, it is rather extraordinary, that no notice is taken of a rebuilders, till the time of Gundulph, that is, for four hundred years: we read only of the new erection and of the repairs of some parts by different bishops and benefactors, as for instance, St. Paul's portico was raised by bishop Tobias, as a burying place for himself." Hist. of Roch. p. 112, note.

^b Bede, lib: v. cap. 24. "It is not certain what part of the fabric the portico of St. Paul was in, but it was supposed to have been near the west door, and of course was pulled down when Gundulf built the present church." Hist. of Rochester, p. 113, note.

this bishop's time Halling was annexed to this church; and Ethelbert king of Wessex gave some land north of the city.

WEDMUND, or WEREMUND, his successor in 788, obtained from Offa king of Mercia Trottescliffe and some lands near Rochester; he died about the year 800; soon after BEORNMOD was consecrated by archbishop Athelard. In the year 838, Kenwulf king of the Mercians, gave to this bishop Borstall, and in 841, Ethelwolf, king of the West-Saxons, gave him Snodland and Holeberg.

From this period, for nearly two centuries the succession of the bishops of this see is much broken; scarcely the names can be traced with sufficient accuracy, and to mark the particular year of their election or death, is in many instances impossible.

TADNOTH succeeded to this see in 841.

BEDENOTH is mentioned as the next bishop; to him succeeded

GODWYN I. He was at the council held at Kingsbury, in the year 851.

CUTHWOLF is the next bishop on record, to whom, in the year 868, Ethelred gave land north of the city, in the marshes and meadows by the river Medway. To him succeeded, (but in what year is not known)

SWITHULF. In 880 Cuckston was given to the bishop and church of Rochester. Swithulf was one of the persons who were appointed to guard the kingdom against the incursions of the Danes, who then infested the coast, and at one time, indeed, besieged the city of Rochester; he died about the year 897, of the plague.

BURIC was the next bishop of this see.

CHEOLMUND succeeded, and was followed by

CHINEFERTH, or KYNEFERDE, to whom King Athelstane gave 'incudem monete,' the privilege of a mint; he was succeeded, in the year 945, by

BURRIC, to whom, and the church of Rochester, king Edmund gave East and West Maling: during his episcopacy the revenues of the monastery were augmented by king Eldred, who gave to it Frekenham. But this church was deprived of many of its possessions by the Danes during the time of his successor

ALFSTANE, whose name is recorded in only one grant, by which he obtained from king Edgar the manor of Bromley; he died in 984.

GODWIN II. succeeded, who seems to have been the same that Ethelred besieged in the city of Rochester; nor would he depart till he had extorted from the bishop one hundred pounds. He also deprived this church, in the first part of his reign, of some of its possessions. But he afterwards atoned for these sacrilegious dilapidations, as appears from his charter, dated A. D. 998, (see num. XLVII.) in which he makes restitution to the church and bishop Godwyn of what he had taken away, and in very strong terms laments his juvenile impieties, which he ascribes to the advice of evil counsellors, but principally of one Ethelsin, whom he calls "an unhappy enemy to God and the whole people." ^c Of the next bishop,

GODWYN III. very little mention is made. If he is the same as is mentioned in a letter of Edward the Confessor, he must have presided in this chair at least thirty-three years. In the year 1011 he was, upon the surrender of Canterbury to the Danes, taken prisoner, with archbishop Alphege. It is uncertain in what year he died, for his successor,

SIWARD, abbot of Abingdon, and (according to Wharton) of Chertsey, was not consecrated bishop of Rochester till the year 1058, so that the see must have been vacant some years. He had been a candidate for the metropolitan chair upon the death of Eldsin, for whom he had, on account of that archbishop's infirmities, acted as vicar; but he was so strongly suspected of having misapplied the revenues, that the king refused to promote him to that dignity, and sent him to this place, where he, unfortunately, continued his system of speculation to such a degree, that he completely ruined the see; and at the conquest, which was nearly ten years before he is said to have died, there were remaining in the monastery only four or five canons, who were reduced to the necessity of existing chiefly upon the alms of well-disposed people. Upon his death archbishop Lanfranc consecrated to this see

^c Hist. of Rochester, p. 115, to which is subjoined this note: "The year 1014 is marked on one of the beams of the roof in the nave of the church; it is not easy to account for this date, it being sixty years before the time when Gundulph is said to have rebuilt it, and brings us back to the reign of this prince: the date agrees with the time of his repentance, it being about two years before his death. It may, therefore, be conjectured, that he repaired this church in atonement for his former injuries to it; and that this beam was either laid in his time, or, if it was afterwards replaced, the new beam might be marked with the same date."

ERNOST, or ERNOSTUS, a monk of great abilities and integrity, in the hope that he might be able to recover the see from the deplorable state under which it now laboured; but he was snatched off by a sudden death shortly after his consecration, and was succeeded, on March 19, 1077, by

GUNDULPH, a monk, and, consequently, strongly prejudiced, as was Lanfranc, in favour of his own fraternity; he, therefore, began his reform by ejecting the secular canons from the priory of Rochester, and introducing monks of the Benedictine order; their number, at first, was limited to twenty, but before his death he increased it to sixty. Throughout the whole period of his prelacy, he was distinguished by his remarkable industry and unwearied zeal in promoting the interests of the church; he raised money sufficient to rebuild the church and enlarge the priory; and he succeeded in recovering from Odo, bishop of Bayeux, in Normandy, and half-brother to the conqueror, many manors and parcels of land, which had been most unjustly seized upon by that rapacious prelate. Odo afterwards gave to the monks some land in the vineyard of Rochester; which is supposed, by the author of the history of that place, to have been the same spot that is now called the Vines-Field. By several charters, which will be found in the appendix, it will be seen that the monks had a vineyard in that quarter. When king Rufus ascended the throne, Gundulph succeeded in obtaining many grants in favour of this church, as he did also from Henry I. who confirmed to them the grant of a fishery called "Nieuve Uvere;" and, among other privileges, gave them a fourth of the toll of Rochester bridge, and liberty to establish a fair to last two days on the feast of St. Paulinus. Even this brief sketch of bishop Gundulph's life will prove that there is a great deal of truth in what Mr. Lambard remarks of him, that he "never rested from building and begging, tricking and garnishing, until he had erected his idol building, to the wealth, beauty, and estimation of a popish priory." He enjoyed this see thirty-two years, under three sovereigns, William I. and II. and Henry I. He died on the seventh of March, 1107, and was buried in his own cathedral before the high altar.^a

RODOLPHUS, or RALPH, a Norman monk, succeeded to the bishoprick on the 11th of August, 1108. In the year 1114, he was promoted to the see of Canterbury; and was succeeded by

EARNULPH, a native of France, formerly a monk of Canterbury, and afterwards prior there; from whence, by the interest of Lanfranc, with whom he was in great favour, he was promoted to be abbot of Peterborough, and thence, in the year 1115, to this see. He was a great benefactor to this church; for he not only gave to the monks the church of Hedenden, in Buckinghamshire, but he built a dormitory, refectory, and chapter-house, for their use: many of his other gifts are enumerated in the Registrum Roffense, p. 120, and will be found among the charters. The Textus Roffensis is also said to have been compiled chiefly by him. He died in the year 1194, and was succeeded in the following year by JOHN, archdeacon of Canterbury. He built the church of Frinsbury, and chapel of Strood, of stone, from the treasury of Rochester church, and gave both church and chapel to the cathedral, to supply wax tapers to burn continually on the altar. He had the honour of dedicating the cathedral, which appears to have been finished in his time, in the presence of the king and many of the nobility and dignitaries of the church; but, in the midst of this solemnity, a dreadful fire broke out in the city, by which the new church was much damaged; and the convent so much injured, as to render it necessary for the monks to disperse to the different neighbouring abbies.^b The time of this bishop's death is uncertain; about the middle of the year 1137,

JOHN, bishop of Seez, in Normandy, was consecrated; but notwithstanding the great distress under which the church was then suffering, he is stated to have behaved more like a plunderer than a pastor. He died^c about the year 1142, when

ASCELIN, prior of Dover, was appointed^d bishop, and the priory being now repaired the monks returned to it. Unlike his immediate predecessor, he was indefatigable in preserving and recovering the rights of the church. He even undertook a journey to Rome to plead their cause before the pope, who ordered all the churches which the monks had been deprived of to be returned to them. He died January 24, 1147. Till this period the bishops of Rochester had been all nominated by the archbishop of Canterbury:^e this privilege Theobald resigned in favour of the monks, who thereupon elected

WALTER, archdeacon of Canterbury, and brother to archbishop Theobald. He was consecrated on the 14th of March, 1147, and held this see thirty-five years. The following account of his election is given by Harris, in his History of Kent: "Archbishop Theobald, his brother, who was present, nominated and presented him to the monks of Rochester, assembled in the chapter-house at Canterbury, to be by them elected bishop, according to ancient custom, by which the new bishop was likewise obliged, before his consecration, to swear fealty to the church and archbishop of Canterbury, and that he would not endeavour, or consent, that they should be deprived of their rights over this church, and that the pastoral staff of the deceased bishop ought to be brought to the altar of Christ-church by the monks of Rochester: and that during the vacancy of the see of Canterbury, or absence of the archbishop, the bishop of Rochester ought to perform the episcopal services in the church of Canterbury, as the right and peculiar chaplain to the said church, whenever he should be called upon by the convent for that purpose." "He was much addicted to hunting, and when he was in his eightieth year, Peter Blesensis^f wrote his 56th epistle to him, to persuade him to leave it off." He was excommunicated by Becket for assisting at the coronation of Henry, eldest son of king Henry II. Bishop Walter lived very peaceably with the monks 'till within seven years of his death,^g when there happened a dispute betwixt them concerning the presentation of a vicar to Dartford, but this was soon adjusted. He died on the 26th of July, 1182.^h

GUALERAN, or WALERAN, archdeacon of Baieux, and domestic chaplain to Richard, archbishop of Canterbury, was elected bishop of Rochester on the 9th of November, 1182, in the presence of the archbishop, who, holding the gospel in his hands, first committed the care of this bishoprick in spirituals to the bishop elect, and then put him in possession of the temporalities by the delivery of a ring to him, the chief justice of England being present, and making no objection to it on the king's behalf. While this bishop was preparing for a journey to Rome for the purpose of prevailing upon the pope to eject the regulars from his priory, and to introduce the seculars again, he was seized with an illness, which proved fatal to him on the 29th of August, 1184.

¹ In the year 1177, five years before this bishop's death, the whole city and church of Rochester is said to have been consumed by fire; (Gervas. col. 1456) but notwithstanding the general report of this dreadful accident by many respectable authors, yet no trace of it is to be found in any ancient charter or writing in the Registrum Roffense which contains many that were made about this time; however calamitous, therefore, it was to the city, the church and convent seem to have had but a small share in this dreadful visitation. GILBERT DE GLANVILL, archdeacon of Lisieux, in Normandy, was thereupon elected,^a and consecrated the 29th of September following. Soon after his coming to this see, he demanded from the monks many of the manors and possessions which bishop Gundulph had formerly given to them; this occasioned a dispute, which was carried on for some years with great heat and virulence on both sides; but the monks were obliged, at last, to give way, and, from the very heavy charges they had been put to during the litigation, they were obliged to coin the silver shrine of St. Paulinus into money. The bishoprick was, however, much benefited by this prelate; and he afterwards behaved more gracious towards the monks; he built a new cloister for them at his own expense, furnished their church with an organ, and gave them several utensils, ornaments, and books. He died June 24, 1214, to the great joy of the monks, who, notwithstanding his subsequent kindness, could not forgive the injuries he had formerly done them.^b He was buried without any pomp or funeral ceremony, the nation being, at that time, under an interdict, on the north side of the altar, where his tomb may be seen within the rails, with his effigies, in his robes and mitre, lying at length upon it.

BENEDICT, precentor of St. Paul's, London, was elected in his room on February 22, 1214. The following year king John besieged the castle of Rochester, held by his barons; and notwithstanding the bishop had joined with Pandulph, the pope's legate, in anathematizing the barons, he rifled the church, destroyed the manuscripts, carried off the plate and money, and, in short, left not so much as one crucifix standing on the altar.^c He died, according to Godwin, in 1226, and was buried in his own cathedral.

HENRY DE SANDFORD,^d archdeacon of Canterbury, stiled The Great Philosopher, succeeded. He was employed by the king at the court of Rome to set aside the election of Walter de Hempsham, archbishop of Canterbury, in which he succeeded, and on his return consecrated Richard Wetherside. He died^e in 1234.

RICHARD DE WENDOVER, rector of Bromley, in Kent, was elected by the convent March 26, 1235, and presented to Edmund, archbishop of Canterbury, who rejected him on pretence of his want of learning, but, more probably, because he was not nominated by him. The monks appealed to Rome, and after a contest of three years, obtained their suit, and a bull for his consecration. He died in October 1250, and from a regard to his piety and holiness of life, was buried in the abbey church of Westminster, by the king's especial command.^f He was succeeded by

LAURENCE DE ST. MARTIN, chaplain and counselor to king Henry III. and archdeacon of Coventry and Lichfield. In 1264, in the contests between king Henry and his barons, this city was besieged by Montfort, earl of Leicester, when the church was plundered of all its valuables, the monuments defaced, many of the monks murdered, and afterwards the church was converted into a stable. Bishop Laurence died on the third of June, 1274, and was buried in his own cathedral.^g His successor was

WALTER DE MERTON. He was a person of great abilities, and was lord chancellor at the time of his election. He was a munificent patron of the church, but the convent was not at all enriched by him; for the former he obtained grants of the manors of Cobhambery and Middleton. He founded in the university of Oxford a college, which bears his name to this day. The Rochester annalist blames him, as is natural, for not extending his favours to the priory.^h He died 27th October, 1277, and was buried in this cathedral, where an elegant monument was erected to his memory by the warden and fellows of Merton college in 1598.

JOHN DE BRADFIELD, a monk, precentor, and celle-rer, of Rochester church, was next promoted to this see.ⁱ He died in 1283, and was succeeded by THOMAS DE INGLETHORP, dean of St. Paul's, London, and archdeacon of Middlesex. He has the character of "a praise-worthy man, mild and affable, of a chearful disposition, and given to hospitality, and may be ranked among the blessed." He died 12th of May, 1291.

THOMAS DE WOLDHAM, prior of Rochester, was next elected by the monks. From his last will it may be concluded, that he was very charitably disposed.^k He died in 1316. Within eighteen days after his death the monks having obtained leave from the archbishop, proceeded to a new choice, and of thirty-five present on the occasion twenty-six voted for

HAMO DE HETHE; it was some time, however, before he could obtain leave to be consecrated, in consequence of the pope, John XXII. having appointed to this see John de Puteoli, a native of France, and confessor to the queen. Hamo, at last, after the see had been vacant rather more than two years, was consecrated at Avignon; but the costs of the suit almost ruined him. He recovered in the court of king's bench the right of advowson to the rectory of Mixbury, in Oxfordshire, which will be given in the appendix. The parochial clergy were also greatly indebted to him for endowing and augmenting several vicarages, all of which may be found among the charters at the end of this short history of the church. ^l He died on May 4, 1352, and may be considered as one of the greatest benefactors to the church and priory, and diocese at large. He was succeeded by JOHN DE SHEPEY, prior of Rochester, appointed by papal provision. The character drawn of this bishop, by William de Dene, is very favourable as to his disposition and morals, and he celebrates his excellency in various branches of science and literature. There are some discourses remaining which pass under his name, by which, however, he appears rather to have been a collector than an author. ^m By his will, dated September 21, 1360, he bequeathed one hundred marks for defraying his funeral expenses; the same sum towards the repairs of the church, and one hundred pounds to the cellarer's office for providing necessaries. He died the 19th of October following.

WILLIAM WETTLESEY, archdeacon of Huntingdon, succeeded, and was translated to the see of Worcester in 1363.

THOMAS TRILLECK, dean of St. Paul's, London, succeeded; he presided over this diocese about nine years, and was succeeded by

THOMAS BRINTON, or BRANTONE. Whilst at Rome he had preached several Latin sermons before the pope; in which, and other exercises, he had discovered great abilities, and was therefore promoted to this see. On his death, in 1389, the monks elected John Barnet, but the pope rejected him, and in his room appointed, by his bull of provision,

WILLIAM DE BOTTLESHAM, much esteemed for his learning, but more for his eloquence in the pulpit, which procured him the favour of Richard II. who had advanced him to the bishoprick of Llandaff, from whence he was translated to this see. He died in 1400, and was succeeded by JOHN DE BOTTLESHAM, who died on the 17th of April, 1404.

RICHARD YOUNG was next translated to this see from Bangor. This bishop was detained some time in Wales, upon which the archbishop of Canterbury seized on the revenues of the bishoprick, and would not deliver them up until after application to the court of Rome. He died 28th of October, 1418.

JOHN KEMP was next elected by the monks, but was soon afterwards, in 1421, translated to Chichester, and succeeded here by JOHN LANGDON, sub-prior of Christ-church, Canterbury. He was celebrated for his great learning, especially in history and antiquities; he wrote a chronicle of England: he is accused of having committed great waste on the estates of the see, but was a great benefactor towards a new bridge at Rochester. Upon his death in 1434, at Basle, whither he had gone to attend the council,^a

THOMAS BROWN was elected, and sent to the same council, to supply the place of his predecessor, where he greatly exerted himself. He augmented the vicarages of Kingsdown and Wilmington;^b for which see the appendix of charters. He was, by a bull of pope Eugenius in 1436, declared bishop of Norwich, and succeeded here by

WILLIAM WELLYS, or WELLS, abbot of York. The acts recorded, during the administration of this bishop, in the register which passes under his name, are a proof of his having paid great attention to the business of this diocese; but a perusal of them must, at the same time, convince us, that his mind was strongly tinctured with the prevailing superstitions of the age. For a monk to retain to his separate use any worldly goods was, in his opinion, a species of idolatry; and, therefore, when he visited his priory, in order to deter the members of it from being again guilty of so heinous a crime, he enjoined, that whoever should be found, in his last moments, possessed of any personal property, should be denied the privilege of burial among his brethren, and not be entitled to their oblations or their prayers.^c The day of his death is a matter of doubt.

JOHN LOWE was translated from St. Asaph. He was a great friend to literature, and, by his diligence, preserved several copies of the fathers from perishing. He died in 1467.

THOMAS SCOTT, surnamed ROTHERHAM, from a town in Yorkshire, where he was born, was the next bishop, but he continued only three years, being translated in 1471 to Lincoln.

JOHN ALCOCK, a very temperate and pious man, succeeded; but in 1476 was translated to Worcester, and was succeeded by

JOHN RUSSEL, archdeacon of Berkshire, who continued here only four years, being promoted to Lincoln in 1480.^d

EDMUND AUDLEY, canon of York, and of the ancient and noble family of Lord Audley, was consecrated Oct. 1st, the same year. He augmented the vicarage of St. Margaret, near Rochester, in 1483, and was translated to Hereford about the middle of the year 1492.

THOMAS SAVAGE, the next bishop, was canon of York, and dean of the king's chapel, Westminster. He is said to have shewn more of the courtier than the bishop in his conduct. He was translated to London in 1496, and succeeded by RICHARD FITZJAMES, warden of Merton college, in Oxford; but he remained here a very short time, being preferred to Chichester in 1504.

JOHN FISHER, D.D. master of Queen's college, Cambridge, and chancellor of that university, was appointed by Henry VII., next bishop of Rochester in the same year. He was a learned and pious man, but a bigot to the church of Rome. He assisted Henry VIII. in his book against Martin Luther, which book procured to the king, from the pope, the title of "Defender of the Faith." Henry VIII. being determined to shake off the papal yoke, bishop Fisher obstinately refused to acknowledge the king's supremacy in ecclesiastical affairs, for which he was imprisoned in the tower of London, April 21, 1534, and afterwards beheaded.

Of the priors the following account is given by Stevens, collected chiefly from Wharton's Anglia Sacra:

"ORDOUVINUS, often mentioned in the Textus Roffensis. He subscribed to bishop Gundulfus's Letter for instituting the Priory, dated September 20, 1089. Ordouvin seems to have quitted the priorship before his death, and to have taken it upon him again. He resigned between the years 1089 and 1096. His successor was ARNULPH. There is still extant in the archives of the church of Canterbury an original letter written by this prior Arnulfus; Letard, the porter, and his son Henry, subscribe to it. He being appointed prior of the church of Canterbury, in the year 1096, became abbat of Peterburgh, anno 1107, and bishop of Rochester in 1114. Concerning him Mr. Willis, in his Mitred Abbies, p. 291, adds what follows: "Arnulph, originally a monk of Christ-church, Canterbury, was constituted in his (Ordowine's) stead, and governed here till his election to the priorship of Canterbury, from whence he was preferred to the abbey of Peterborough, anno 1107, and from thence, anno 1115, to the see of Rochester. During the time he presided here, he gave to this convent Hadenham, Kinsey, and Codinton churches, Co. Bucks, &c. and built the dormitory, chapter-house, and refectory, and caused to be made the principal vestment, embroidered with a tree in gold, and the best cope, and a covering inlaid with precious stones, two silver candlesticks curiously wrought and gilt, and likewise a gilt flaggon. He also provided the best vest, and two others of white silk, and many other ornaments." These are the words of that learned gentleman, and he quotes Wharton's Anglia Sacra, p. 342, 392. From the first of which places I must take the liberty to make some little addition and alteration, as I find it in the said place, where it is said, that this prior, besides the abovementioned churches, gave half an hide of land and an house. The cope abovementioned had silver bells; and that which is there next to it called a covering inlaid with precious stones, is an albe with the amice adorned with precious stones. Instead of the best vest, it should be the best Dalmatick, and two others of white silk. To these gifts are to be added, a book of the gospels and lessons for great days, a missal, a benedictional, being a book of blessings upon all occasions, a capitular, or book for the chapter-house, and two silver gilt candlesticks of curious workmanship, and a wine cruet for mass of silver gilt.

RALPH, monk of Caen, came into England with Lanfranc, and seems to have succeeded Arnulphus in the priory of Rochester in the year 1096. He having been chosen abbat of Battel abbey in the year 1107, is said in the ancient history of Battel, at the time when he was chosen abbat, to have governed the priory of the church of Rochester under the bishop Gundulfus, commendably. He was present at the death of the said Gundulphus in 1108, and in vain desired by the monks for their bishop.

ORDOUVINUS. After the translation of Ralph, he again became prior in the year 1107. In the Textus Roffensis bishop Gundulphus's charters granted to the church of Malling are subscribed by prior Ordowin and Ralph, abbat of Battel abbey. He is, in the same place, said to have held the priory under the bishop Ernulfus, and therefore he was living in the year 1115.

LETARD, porter of the church of Rochester before the year 1096, was prior when Ernulfus was bishop.

BRIAN presided in the year 1145. He obtained the confirmation of the possessions of his church from pope Eugenius III. in 1146. He died on the 5th of December.

REGINALD obtained the confirmation of the privileges of his church of pope Adrian IV. in the year 1154. He is said to have died on the 29th of April, in the obituary of St. Augustine's, Canterbury.

ERNULFUS the Second was prior in the time of bishop Walter, and in this place as I take it.

WILLIAM BORSTALLE being cellarer was made prior before Silvester, is mentioned in the old register of the church of Rochester. Bib. Cotton. Vespasian, A. 22.

SILVESTER, being cellarer, was made prior, obtained the confirmation of the possessions of his church from pope Alexander the third. He built the refectory and dormitory, and three windows on the east side of the chapter-house.

RICHARD, being prior of Rochester, was chosen abbat of Burton in the year 1162, died the 19th of April, 1188.

ALFRED was created here abbat of Abingdon, by king Henry II. between the years 1185 and 1189.

OSBORN, of Shepey, being sacrist, was chosen prior; whilst he was sacrist he finished the history of St. Peter, and the breviary of the chapel of the infirmary, and bishop Ascelin's Commentary on Isaias, and the book De Claustro Anime and the great psalter that is chained in the choir, and the window at St. Peter's altar, and many other things, as is related in the abovementioned register of Rochester.

RALPH DE ROSS presided in the year 1199, as appears by the additions to the Textus Roffensis. Whilst sacrist he built the brewhouse, and the greater and lesser chambers of the prior, and the stone-house in the churchyard, and hostelry, and the grange in the vineyard and the stable, and caused the great church to be covered, and most of it leaded; and did many other things, as is related in the abovementioned register of Rochester.

ELIAS, being prior, leaded the great church, and built a stable of stone for himself and successors; and leaded a part of the cloister towards the dormitory; and made the washhouse and the door of the refectory. The aforesaid register has this account of him.

WILLIAM the Second is mentioned in a register of the church of Rochester in the Cotton library, Domitian A. 10. to have been prior in the year 1222.

RICHARD the Second de DERENTE was elected prior of Rochester in the year 1225, after the octave of Pentecost, the day after the synod, as is said in the short chronicle of Rochester. Vespasian, A. 22. That he was prior in the years 1228, 1236, and 1238, appears by the annals of Rochester, the register of Rochester above quoted, and Florilegus.

WILLIAM the Third de Hoo, being sacrist, was chosen prior the 25th of June, in the year 1293. Whilst sacrist, he built all the choir of the church of Rochester from the north and south wings, with the offerings made at St. William's shrine. Having been afterwards prior two years, because he would not consent to sell the wood of Chetindone, he suffered much persecution, and changing his habit, died a monk at Wobourn. This is related in the ancient register of the church of Rochester, Vespasian, A. 22.

ALEXANDER DE GLANVILLE elected anno 1242, Died of a sudden grief on the 5th of March, 1252.

SIMON CLYVE, sacrist of the church, succeeded in the year 1252; growing infirm he resigned in 1272.

JOHN RENHAM, alias RENSHAM, chosen in 1262, resigned in December, 1283; for so Edmund and Benedict monks of Rochester, authors of the annals and chronicle of Rochester, relate it; but, in truth, he was deposed about Christmas, 1283, by John, archbishop of Canterbury, then visiting the church of Rochester, as metropolitan. "We found," says the archbishop, in the Register of Peckham, "that the prior was suspected of unfair procuring the election of John, the late bishop, and that he wasted many moveables in that affair; and he is said to have alienated some other things for ever, not without suspicion of symony; of which particulars he no way reasonably excused himself." This decree was dated the 24th of October, 1283, and it declares that John was wholly discharged of the office of prior about the nativity of our Lord.

THOMAS WOLDEHAM, elected December 24th, 1283, was promoted to the bishoprick of Rochester, at the latter end of the year 1291.

JOHN the Second, de RENHAM, or REYNEHAM, was again chosen prior on the 7th of January, 1292, died in the year 1294.

THOMAS the Second, de SCHULFORD, or SHELFORD, succeeded in the year 1294, resigned in 1301.

JOHN the Third, de GREENSTREET, chosen in February, 1301, resigned in 1314.

HAMO de HETHE, chosen prior May 8, 1314, elected bishop of Rochester in 1317, consecrated in 1319.

JOHN the Fourth, de WESTERHAM, promoted to be prior by the bishop Hamo, on the 14th of June, 1320; died in 1321, and was buried on the 30th of January.

JOHN the Fifth, de SPELDHERST, being cellarer of the monastery, was chosen prior by the monks, and confirmed by the bishop then present, on the 20th of January, 1321; resigned the 12th of August, 1333.

JOHN the Sixth, of SHEPEY, professor of Divinity, succeeded, promoted to the bishoprick of Rochester about the end of the year 1352.

To this Mr. Willis adds as follows:

"He built in the year 1336, the new refectory, and received towards the expence of the same an hundred marks. In his time also, viz. anno 1344, the shrines of St. Michael, St. Paul, and St. Ythamar were new made with marble and alabaster, which cost two hundred marks, and the year before he caused the tower to be raised higher with wood and stone, and covered it with lead, and placed four new bells in the same, calling them Dunstan, Paulin, Ythamar, and Lanfranc. On December 27, he was elected bishop of Rochester, by papal bull, dated 22d October preceding. He was also constituted lord treasurer, anno 1356, and held the same about two or three years. He died 19th October, 1360, in his manor called the Place, at Lambeth, in Surry."

ROBERT DE SUTHFLETE, warden of the cell of Filchestowe, was promoted in the place of John, anno 1352; died in the year 1361.

JOHN the Seventh, de HERTLEYE, or HERTLEY, warden of the same cell, was chosen on the 6th of August, 1361; resigned on the 6th of November, 1380.

JOHN the Eighth, of Shepey, superior of the place, chosen the 14th of December, 1380; governed the priory thirty-nine years; died the 2d of August, 1419.

WILLIAM the Fourth, of TUNBRIGG, chosen by the monks, was confirmed by the archbishop of Canterbury, (the see of Rochester being then vacant) on the 21st of August, 1419. We read in the register of the church of Rochester, Faustina c. 5. that one William presided in the year 1443. Whilst he was prior, the church of Rochester was visited by the archbishop in March, 1444.

JOHN the Ninth is found prior, anno 1445, in the register of Rochester last quoted.

WILLIAM the Fifth of WOLD. We find his name in Reynerus. He seems to have been prior about this time.

WILLIAM the Sixth, bishop, anno 1496.

WILLIAM the Seventh, FRYSELL, made prior on the 11th of September, 1509.

WALTER PHILIPS, the last prior, resigned up the monastery into the king's hands in March, 1540. The king the same year turning out the monks, introduced secular canons in their stead, and appointed this Walter the first dean of this church so modelled.

Mr. Willis, from Rymer's Fœdera, vol. xiv. p. 497, places, before this last Walter Philips, one Lawrence Mereworth, who occurs prior, anno 1533, and again, anno 1534, when he, with eighteen monks, subscribed to the king's supremacy; but finds not when he died.

The ancient Form of electing the Prior of Rochester, as described by William Dene, Monk of Rochester, in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, vol. i. p. 371.

All the monks being assembled in the chapter-house, and summoned especially by the bishop for this purpose, excepting the monks in the cell at Filchestowe, who are not to be called to it; the bishop takes the votes of them all singly, saying, "Whom do you name to be prior?" Having made this scrutiny, and conferred with the clergy about the merits, zeal, and number of the persons naming, the bishop pitching upon one of those named, whom in his judgment and reputation he thinks the fittest, he commits to him the administration of the spiritualities and temporalities. Then the prior is by them all immediately conducted to his stall, the bishop following and giving the benediction to him install'd. Afterwards the bishop being in the chapter before them all, commands all to obey their prior.

A Particular of the Valuation of the Temporalities of the Bishop of Rochester, and of all the Churches in that Diocese; as also of those which the several Monasteries within it, and many others without it have in the same. Taken from Mr. Hearne's Fragmenta Sprottiana, p. 153.

The Description of the Church. From Mr. Willis's Mitr. Abb. p. 286.

Rochester cathedral consists of a body and two isles. It extends from the west door to the choir steps 50 yards, and from thence to the east windows 52 yards more, which is in all 306 feet. At the entrance into the choir is a great cross isle, in the middle of which stands the steeple, containing six bells, which is in height 156 feet; see the print in the Monasticon, vol. i. p. 27. Length of this cross isle from north to south is 122 feet.

At the upper end of the choir, between the bishop's throne and the high altar, is another cross isle about 30 yards, or 90 feet over. Between these two isles, on the south side, without the church, stands an old ruined tower, no higher than the roof of the church. I was informed that bells formerly hung here, and that it was called the five bell tower. But I rather believe by the strength of it, 'twas built by Gundulfus, the 30th bishop of this church, as a repository for records or treasury. On the opposite side is an handsome chapel, in no good repair, covered on the top with tile, though all the rest of the church is well leaded.

The roof of the nave, or body of the cathedral, from the west end to the great cross isle, is flat at top like a parish church, as 'tis likewise under the great steeple; but all the other parts, viz. the four cross isles, and those on each side of the choir, except the lower south one, which was never finished, are handsomely vaulted with stone.

The body and side isles of this church are about 22 yards, or 65 feet in breadth, and the west front about 27 yards. Over the door, at the entrance into the choir, stands a sightly organ; and at the upper end is lately erected an altar-piece of Norway oak. Near the great west door, on the south side, is a partition made for the bishop's court. The entrance whereof, together with most of the wainscot of the church, and other ornaments, were made since the restoration, anno 1650; this church having been miserably defaced during the time of the great rebellion, as were the greatest part of the monuments therein."

Nobilissimus rex Henricus primus multa bona contulit, scilicet ecclesias de Boxele, de Kynggesdoune, et ecclesias de Chiselherst, et de Wolewich, et Carte libertatum et Warrenie et aliarum terrarum per diversos episcopos adquisitarum, et placita itineracionum, et omnia alia memoranda, evidencie, et scripture de statu Roffen. ecclesie, necnon et omnia alia superscripta, patent per infrascripta in hoc registro ac in registris capituli. Notandum quod licet superius scribatur quod tempore regis Willelmi primi facta fuerit separacio bonorum ecclesie, non fuit tamen hujusmodi separacio ratificata et confirmata per regem, usque ad tempora novissima regis Henrici primi. Deficient siquidem multe scripture codicellorum et cartarum vetustate consumpte, alie per negligenciam, malam custodiam, et combustionem tempore gwerre, sublate. Nam nunquam fuit locus certus nec securus deputatus ad reponenda munimenta, set quando in ecclesia cathedrali, vel in manerio de Hallynges, erant derelicta; et ideo si hoc registrum sit insufficientis, non imputetur compilantibus peccatum.

Iccirco necessarium duxi ut pro intercessionibus plurimorum, pro venia delictorum, et requie perpetua adipiscenda anime mee, aliquid ex his que mihi largitor bonorum omnium Christus Dominus donare dignatus est, id est, terram aratorum viginti in loco cujus vocabulum est Aeslingaham, que etiam jacet ad occidentalem partem fluminis Meduuveian, contigua ipso fluvio, cum universis terminis suis ad eam rite competentibus, cum campis, silvis, pratis, pascuis, paludibus, et aquis, sicut olim habuerunt comites et principes regum Cantie et cum omni tributo, quod regibus jure competit, tibi venerabili Earduulfo sancte Hrofensis ecclesie episcopo libenter imperpetuum per dono, et hoc cum consensu et licentia archiepiscopi nostri Bregouvini atque Heaberhti regis Cantie et principum nostrorum, ut possedendi vel vendendi vel etiam tradendi cuicumque voluerit liberam per omnia habeat potestatem; et quia pro ipsius terre recompensatione aliquam partem pecunie nobis fideliter, libenter optulit, ad promerendam, non solum specialiter, michi a domino pietatem, scilicet indulgentiam delictorum totius gentis nostre, humiliter dominicam exorantes, clemenciam ut liberet nos a malignis spiritibus, et importunis, et malis hominibus. Item de Aeslingeham.

In nomine Domini Dei salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi. Quamvis parva et exigua sint que pro amissis offerimus, tamen pius omnipotens Deus non quantitatem muneris sed devotionem offerencium semper inquirat. Qua de re Ego Sigcredus rex, dimidie partis provincie Cantuariorum, tam pro anime mee remedio, quam pro amore omnipotentis Dei, terram aratorum viginti quæ appellatur Eslingaham tibi reverentissimo episcopo Earduulfo sancte Hrofensis ecclesie, cum universis ad se pertinentibus, campis, silvis, pratis, pascuis, paludibus et aquis, et cum omni tributo quod regibus inde dabatur in potestatem, cum consilio et consensu principum meorum libenter in perpetuum per dono, ut possidendi vel habendi sive vendendi vel etiam tradendi cuicumque voluerit liberam per omnia habeat potestatem. Sane quia cavendum est ne hodiernam donationem nostram futuri temporis abnegare valeat, et in ambiguum devocare presumptio placuit mihi hanc paginam condere, et una cum cespite terre predictæ tradere tibi per quam non solum omnibus meis successoribus, regum sive principum, sed etiam michi ipsi penitus

Quod si qui forte observare neglexerint, et absque digna satisfactione, presentis vitæ impleverint infelices dies, audiant vocem eterni judicis sub fine mundi dicentis ad impios, discedite a me maledicti in ignem eternum qui preparatus est diabolo et angelis ejus. Qui vero curaverint custodire, nichilque irrogarint adversi, audiant vocem clementissimi arbitri inquentis ad pios. Venite benedicti patris mei percipite regnum quod vobis paratum est ab origine mundi.

Et ego concessi eidem Radulfo ecclesiam de Hedenham cum una hida et dimidia terre et duobus pratis, Coiea, et Cetemora et concessi ei pasturam decem boum, et omnes consuetudines que ad eandem ecclesiam pertinent, insuper quicquid Gislebertus tenuit in Hedenham, exceptis illis tribus supradictis hidis terre. Et de ipsa ecclesia non faciet ullum servicium nisi quod ad ecclesiam pertinet tantum.

NUM. XXIII.

De Eastuna.

POSTEA vero non multo tempore contigit ipsum Gislebertum mutasse habitum et vitam secularem in vitam et habitum monachi apud Rofecestriam. Iisdem diebus remansit manerium Estuna quod situm est in comitatu de Glocestra; in manu prefati Radulfi filii Gisleberti et Osmundi generis Gisleberti, qui ambo regis exactionibus tantum fuerunt gravati, ut vix amplius hoc possent pati. Erant enim illis diebus consuetudines regis gravissime, atque durissime per totum regnum Anglie. Itaque venientes pariter uterque ad dominum episcopum Gundulfum, rogaverunt illum, quatinus, propter Deum et honorem suum, manerium ipsum a rege requiret: quod si obtinere posset, de illo ulterius manerium ipsum tenerent. Quo audito episc. quamcitius potuit, regem impigre adiit; amicorum itaque apud regem usus auxilio, tandem obtinuit quod petiit; dedit ergo episcopus Willielmo regi, magni regis Will. filio, xv. libras denariorum et unam mulam que bene valebat centum solidos. Isto tali ordine obtinuit Gundulfus episc. predictum manerium Estunam, quod postquam ita factum est statim Radulfus et Osmundus devenerunt homines episcopi, et ita tenuerunt ipsum manerium de episcopo; veruntamen non multo tempore post, iterum pariter requisiverunt episcopum, rogantes illum, ut propter Deum illas quatuor hidas terre de Eastuna, cambiret illis pro duabus hidis terre infra Hedenham. Non enim ullatenus pati poterant amplius, et malas consuetudines predicti comitatus, et viam longinquam ab Hedenham et laborem magnum quem propterea sepissime sustinebant; accepto ergo consilio, episcopus fecit illis partim juxta petitionem eorum, sed non in omnibus; dedit namque Radulfo unam hidam terre, Osmundo vero non nisi dimidiam; debebat enim Osmundus episcopo quinquaginta solidos denariorum pro multis placitis que super eum episcopum habuerat, et quia episc. clamavit Osmundum quietum de ipsis quinquaginta solidis, et querelis multis, ideo, e contra, non recepit ab episc. nisi dimidiam hidam terre. Et isto modo habuit ipse episc. ipsum predictum manerium, ita liberum et quietum ab omni calumnia sicut Goda Comitissa illud habuit umquam melius in suo dominico tempore regis Eduvardi. Dum hoc ita fuit, precepit episc. domino Willielmo monacho Rofensi preposito de Hedenham curam accipere ejusdem manerii, et monachis ecclesie sancti Andree singulis annis firmam octo dierum inde reddere. Et quidem juste, quoniam terre ille, que data fuerunt pro ipsius manerii cambitione, fuerant primum de Hedenham, quod penitus erat, et est, ad victum ipsorum monachorum.

Ego Ecgbertus, gracia Dei rex Anglorum, cum consensu episcoporum ac principum meorum, hanc libertatem donabi ecclesie, que sita est in civitate Hrobi et omnibus agellis que ad ecclesiam sancti Andree apostoli pertinent, pro remedio anime mee et filii nostri Aethelnulfi, quem regem constituimus in Cantia, ut omnes agros sint libera ab omni regali servitio, a pastu regum et principum, ducum et prefectum exactorumque, ab equorum et falionum accipitrumque et canum acceptione et illorum hominum refectione, quod nos Festingmen nominamus, a parafrithis et ab omnibus difficultatibus regalis vel secularis servitutis notis et ignotis, cum furis comprehensione intus et foris majoris minorisve, preter pontis constructione et expeditione eternaliter liberata permaneat. Hanc libertatem predictae ecclesie donabi pro humili obedientia venerabilis episcopi Beornmodi et pro amore apostoli sancti Andree et beati Paulini archiepiscopi, cujus corpus in predicta ecclesia requiescit. Sic etiam omnibus successoribus vel heredibus meis, necnon cuicunque gradu regibus seu principibus in nomine sancte trinitatis et per tremendum dei judicium precipio, ut hec donatio mea firma et illibata inconcussa permaneat. Si quis vero hoc benivola mente observare voluerit, servetur ei benedictio sempiterna hic et in eternum. Si autem, quod absit, aliquis insurrexerit, tyrannica potestate fretus, seu diabolica temeritate instigatus, qui hanc libertatem infringere aut minuere, vel maluit convertere temptaverit quam a nobis constitutum est, sciat se separatam a communione sancte dei ecclesie, et a participatione omnium sanctorum dei, et eternis ignibus esse nodatum, nisi prius digne et perfecte hic in seculo emendare voluerit. Scripta est hec cartula anno dominice incarnationis DCCCXXIII, indictione VI, his testibus consentientibus et signo sancte crucis Christi confirmantibus, quorum nomina infra tenentur ascripta. † Ego Ecgbertus, rex Anglorum, hanc donationem meam hujus libertatis signo sancte crucis Christi confirmavi et subscripsi. † Ego Aetheluulf rex consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Uulfred archiepiscopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Wigthegn episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Elkstan episcopus consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Beormod consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Wulfhard Dux consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Monuede Dux consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Osmod Dux consensi et subscripsi. † Ego Dudda Dux consensi et subscripsi. † Aldred. † Oshere. † Aetheluulf. † Duduc. † Boba. † Ealhhere. † Sigesseb. † Aethelhard.

IN nomine Dei summi et salvatoris nostri Ihesu Christi, ipso quoque inperpetuo regnante, disponente que suaviter omnia. Quapropter ego Eadmundus, rex Anglorum necnon et Merciorum, meo amabili episcopo, nomine Burhric, concedo aliquantulum mei telluris, ubi dicitur Meallingas, trium videlicet aratrum, pro remedio anime mee, in sempiternam hereditatem, ad augmentum monasterii ejus que est dedicata in honore sancti Andree apostoli, germanus Petri et socius in passione, cum omnibus rebus ad eam pertinentibus, cum campis, silvis, pratis, pascuis necne et aucupiis, et hoc quoque cum consilio optimatum et principum meorum quorum nomina infra scripta reperiuntur. Unde adjuro, in nomine Domini Dei nostri Ihesu Christi, qui est omnium justus iudex, ut terra hec sit libera ab omni regali servitio inperpetuum. Si quis vero minuere vel fraudare presumpserit hanc donationem, sit separatus a consortio sanctorum. Ita ut vivens benedictione Dei sit privatus, et sit damnatus in inferno inferiori, nisi satisfactione ante ejus obitum emendaverit quod inique gessit, manente tamen hac cartula nichilominus in sua firmitate. Testamentum Brihtrici et Ælfuithæ uxoris ejus de Danituna, et de Langafelda et de Dærente et de Falcheham et de Snodilande et de Bromlega. Ibid. p. 112.

† HEC est ultima commendatio sive rerum suarum pro Deo distributio, quam fecerunt simul Brihtricus et Ælfuitha uxor ejus, appropinquante die mortis eorum, in villa que vocatur Meapeham, testibus hiis presentibus de propriis parentibus suis, videlicet Uulfstano cognomine Ucca, et Wulfio fratre ejus et Siredo filio Ælfredi et Wulfio cognomine Blaca et Wine presbytero, et Ælfgaro in Meapahan, et Wulfeg filio Ordegi, et Ælfego fratre ejus, et Brihtwara Ælfrici relicta, et Bryhtrico ejus consanguineo et Ælfstano episcopo. Primum naturali domino suo regi armillam auream, que habebat octoginta mancas auri et unum handseax tantundem auri habentem, et quattuor equos, duos ex eis optime faleratos, et duos gladios optime adornatos, et duos accipitres et omnes canes suos venaticos, et domine sue regine armillam unam, que habebat triginta mancas auri, et unum equum emissarium, eo pacto ut adjuvaret eum apud regem, quatinus ista commendatio sive distributio rerum suarum firma et stabilis esset post mortem suam. Et pro anima sua, et omnium antiquorum suorum, dedit ecclesie sancti Andree duas Sullingas terre in Danituna. Et ipsa Ælfuitha similiter dedit eidem ecclesie sancti Andree, pro anima sua et omnium parentum suorum, duas Sullingas terre, que vocantur Langafelda. Et preter hec dedit eidem ecclesie xxx mancas auri et unam torquem auream de xl mancis auri, et unam cupam argenteam, et dimidiam vittam capitis auream. Et omni anno in diebus anniversariorum suorum ordinaverunt servitoribus ecclesie sancte Andree firmam duorum dierum de terra illa que vocatur Hæsholt, et duorum dierum de Uuotringeberia, et duorum dierum de Bærlinges et duorum dierum de Herigetesham. Et ecclesie Christi Cantuarie dederunt sexaginta mancas auri, xxx archiepiscopo, xxx conventui fratrum, et unam torquem auream que habebat octoginta mancas auri, et duas cuppas argenteas, et terram illam que vocatur Meapeham. Et ecclesie sancti Augustini dederunt xxx mancas auri, et duas cuppas argenteas et dimidiam vittam auream. Et terram illam que vocatur Dærente dederunt Brihtuara in diebus vite ejus tantum, et post mortem ejus ecclesie sancte Andree pro se et antecessoribus suis. Et Bærlinges dederunt cuidam nomine Wulfego tali pacto, ut ipse daret inde omni anno decies centum denarios pro se et pro antecessoribus suis ecclesie sancte Andree. Et cuidam Wulfsigo dederunt Wotringebyri, sibi et sue progeniei in hereditatem futuram, et Siredo Hæsel holt, et Wulfego et Ælfego fratri suo Hergetesham, in hereditatem futuram et cuidam Wulfstano cognomine Ucca terram que vocatur Wolcnestede et illas x hydas terre que sunt in Strættuna dederunt monasterio de Wolcnesteda. Et post mortem Bryhtware terram de Falcheham dederunt ecclesie sancte Andree et Bromlegam similiter post mortem ejus, sicut Ælfricus dominus ejus dederat eam eidem ecclesie. Similiter dederunt et Snodilande eidem ecclesie post mortem Brihtware, sicut Ælferus filius Ælfrici eam prius dederat ipsi ecclesie, et ipse postea per testimonium Eadgyue regine, et Odonis archiepiscopi et Ælfegi filii Ælfstani et Æfrici fratris ejus et Ælfnoði cognomine Pilia, et Goduini de Fecham, et Eadrici de Ho, et Ælfsi presbyteri de Croindene. Et cuidam Wulfstano dederunt lx mancas auri dividere pauperibus pro animabus suis, et cuidam Wulfio tantundem dividere pro animabus eorum, et cum Deo agant judicium nisi fideliter fecerint. Ego Brihtricus pro Dei amore rogo dominum meum dulcissimum, ut ista nostra donatio inviolabilis permaneat, nec eam a quoquam violari permittat. Similiter rogamus et petimus omnes amicos Dei, quatinus nobis adjuutores in hac re existant. Et quicumque eam aliquatenus violare presumpserit, ab ipso Domino Christo judice eternum recipiat judicium. Et qui eam inviolabilem conservaverint, Deum sibi sentiant affore propiciam.

NUM. XXXVII.

Isto tali ordine fuerunt ille VI Sulingæ que vocantur Uuldeham, primum venditæ Ecclesie Sancti Andree apostoli de Hrofecestra, et postea extractæ, et iterum emptæ ipsi Ecclesie, ac tandem per beatum Dunstanum Archiepiscopum juramento mille virorum eidem Ecclesie acquisitæ, et jure hereditario in æternum relictæ. Ibid. p. 117.

REX Aethelberhtus primum hereditaverat de Uuldeham apostolum sanctum Andream et ecclesiam suam in Hrofecestra eterno jure, et commisit illud manerium Eardulfo episcopo Hrofensi ad custodiendum et ejus successoribus. Igitur in manibus sucesorum ablatum est iterum apostolo et ecclesie sue in manibus regum, ita quod plures reges unus post alterum habuerunt illud postea, usque ad tempus regis Eadmundi. Tunc quidam probus homo, nomine Ælfstanus Heahstaninc emit illud a rege Eadmundo, et dedit ei pro illo centum duodecim mancas auri et xxx libras denariorum. Hujus pecunie majorem partem dedit postea ipsi regi Ælfegus, filius ipsius Ælfstani. Postea, mortuo rege Eadmundo, Eadredus rex hereditavit inde predictum Ælfstanum in eternam hereditatem. Itaque post mortem hujus Ælfstani, prefatus Ælfegus, qui regi Eadmundo dederat majorem partem pecunie pro patre suo propter Uuldeham, successit huic Ælfstano in hereditatem. Qui statim conclusit et omnino confirmavit totum quod pater suus in vita sua fecerat. Hic autem fratri suo Ælfrico et terras atque pecunias patris sui ita plene subtraxit, quod ipse Ælfricus nichil omnino inde poterat habere nisi servitio illud ab eo promerisset quemadmodum quilibet extraneus. Tamen precogitatus tandem Ælfegus, propter consanguinitatis fraternitatem, concessit illi Earhetham, et Cræiam et Æinesfordam et Uuldeham in diebus vite sue tantum, in prestito solummodo. Itaque mortuo Ælfrico, Ælfegus statim accepit omnia prestita sua, que fratri suo viventi prestiterat. Ælfricus autem habuit filium, nomine Eadricum. Ælfegus vero non habuit. Et ideo Ælfegus concessit illi Eadrico Earhetham et Cræiam et Uuldeham, et retinuit in manu sua Æinesford. Mortuus autem ipse Eadricus absque commendatione vel distributione rerum suarum, tunc iterum Ælfegus accepit prestita sua omnia. Habebat etiam ipse Eadricus uxorem, et non liberos. Hac de causa concessit Ælfegus illi vidue donum dotis sue, tantum quod ei dederat Eadricus, quando eam primum accepit uxorem in Cræia. Et tunc remansit Litelbroc et Uuldeham in prestito suo. Postea quando ei visum, et placitum fuit, accepit firmam suam in Uuldeham, et in aliis volebat similiter facere, sed iterum infirmatus est. Et quia infirmatus valde, misit ilico ad archiepiscopum Dunstanum, ut veniret ad eum. Qui absque mora venit ad eum, et locutus est ei in loco illo, qui vocatur Scelfa. Ibi coram archiepiscopo fecit Ælfegus commendationem sive distributionem omnium rerum suarum, et constituit unam partem ecclesie Cantuarie, et alteram partem ecclesie sancti Andree, et terciam partem uxori sue. Postea fuit quidam Leofsunu, qui uxorem Eadrici nepotis Ælfegi relictam accepit sibi in uxorem. Et per ipsam mulierem incepit frangere constitutiones Ælfegi, quas fecerat coram archiepiscopo, et vituperare archiepiscopum, et testimonium ejus irritum facere. Tandem multa stimulatus cupidine, cum illa muliere sua, quasi quadam securitate illius uxoris sue inductus, intravit in terras illas absque consilio et judicio sapientum viro- rum. Quod ubi archiepiscopus audivit, sine omni mora induxit statim calumniam proprietatis in omnem distri- bitionem Ælfegi cui ipsemet affuit et que per eum facta fuerunt. Diem ergo placiti hujus rei constituit archiepis- copus apud Erhetham, per testimonium Ælfstani episcopi Londonie et Ælfstani episcopi Hrofecestrie, et totius con- ventus canonicorum Lundonie et totius conventus ecclesie Christi Cantuarie, et omnium orientalium et occidenta- lium Cantie, et Uulfsii presbyteri, qui tunc vocatus Scir- man, id est, judex comitatus et Brihtuualdi de Mæreurt- tha. Ad ultimum ita notificatum in Suðeaxa et in Westseaxa et in Middleseaxa et in Eastseaxa, quod archiepiscopus Dunstanus cum libris ecclesiastici juris et signo crucis Christi quam suis manibus tenebat, sui solius juramento acquisivit in eternam hereditatem Deo et sancto Andree apostolo omnes terras illas, quas Leofsunu sibi usurpabat. Ipsum vero juramentum archiepiscopi accepit Uulfsi Scirman, id est, judex provincie, ad opus regis, quando quidem ipse Leofsunu illud suscipere nole- bat. Insuper ad hoc perficiendum fuit hoc quoque maxi- mum adjumentum, temporibusque futuris maximum secu- ritatis probamentum, quod decies centum viri electissimi ex omnibus illis supradictis comitatibus juraverunt post archiepiscopum in ipsa cruce Christi ratum et eterne memorie stabile fore sacramentum, quod archiepiscopus juraverat.

NUM. XXXVIII.

Quomodo Lanfrancus (Archiepiscopus Cantuariensis) terras extractas Ecclesie Sancti Andree, et alias acquisitas monachis contradidit ; et de Gundulfo Episcopo. Ibid. p. 141.

PRETEREA notandum, ac fidelibus omnibus futuris maxime temporibus, quante valentie, quanteve ecclesie Christi Cantuarie, necnon et ecclesie sancti Andree Hrouecestrie, hic pie memorie Lanfrancus archiepiscopus utilitati et honori, dum vixit, extiterit, sciendum est. Hic namque non solum illas, que superius nominate sunt, terras ecclesie Christi, verum etiam ex diversorum domi- natione tyrannorum ecclesie Hrofensi sue ratione pru- dentie ac sapientie acquisivit; acquisitas vero ecclesie, unde antiquorum negligentia fuerant extracte atque dis- perse contradidit. Videlicet Dænitanam, Stoches, Fal- cenham, et Fracenam, de manibus predicti Baiocensis episcopi, et hominum suorum, et aliorum hominum, quasi quadam placitorum violentia extorsit. Et hec non solum, sed et alia bona ad opus monachorum, quos eidem ec- clesie ipse primum instituit, quoad vixit impendit, insti- tutis vero servitio Dei et sancti apostoli Andree omnia, que illorum victui vel vestitui necessaria fore videbantur, certo apparatu preparare procuravit. Annitente tamen, ac per omnia suffragante beate memorie Gundulfo epis- copo, quem ipse monachum et sacristam sancte Marie Beccensis ecclesie, dum ipse quoque prior ejusdem fuit ecclesie, merito sanctitatis, ac beate religionis pre ceteris omnibus adamavit; adamatum vero post se in Angliam quoque quam citius potuit venire fecit, et eum omni do- mui sue, immo rebus omnibus suis, quas in archiepiscopio habuit, solum post sese pre omnibus aliis preposuit. Prepositum autem, atque in omni sapientie et prudentie sensu diu probatum, tandem divino admonitus instinctu, a sese devote consecratum, predictae ecclesie prefecit an- tistitem. Qui xxx^{ti} et uno annis inibi superstes existens, ecclesiam sancti Andree, pene vetustate dirutam, novam ex integro, ut hodie apparet, edificavit; officinas quoque monachis necessarias, prout loci capacitas pati potuit, omnes construxit. Ipsos quoque monachos xxii susce- pit; susceptos vero sancte religionis habitu induit; in- dutos postmodum sacris ordinibus aptos, vel sancte reli-gionis benedictione dignos ipsemet benedixit, consecravit et quantacunque diligentia, et per se et per alios in Dei timore et amore semper instruxit; instructos quidem post Deum super omnia amavit, honoravit, atque in eo quod potuit omnibus diebus vite sue beneficiis multimodis aug- mentare non cessavit. Et cum non amplius in introitu episcopatus sui quam quinque invenisset in ecclesia sancti Andree canonicos, die, qua seculo presenti decessit, plus quam sexaginta monachos, bene legentes et optime can- tantes in servitio Dei et apostoli sui Deum timentes et super omnia amantes reliquit. Sed inter cetera, que illis beneficia nonnulla contulit, unum illis dignum me- moria fecit. Fracenam, quod, ut supradictum, ab alie- norum injusta potestate archiepiscopus prudentie sue ratione Lanfrancus extorsit, et ad victum monachorum eternaliter fore constituit, Gundulfus episcopus, quia ipsum manerium longinquis regionibus a Hrouecestra nimis erat remotum, ipsum manerium in sua ac suorum omnium retinuit manu successorum, atque pro illo, licen- tia et consilio sepepredicti archiepiscopi Lanfranci Wlde- ham monachis eternaliter dedit, malens quidem sese ac suos successores annuis laboribus equitando victum tam longe queritare, quam monachos vel ejusdem ville pau- peres homines singulis annis in annonam deportando fatigare.

NUM. XXXIX.

Alia Beneficia Episcopi Gundulfi Monachis Roffensibus collata. Ibid. p. 145.

ALIUD quoque beate memorie Gundulfus episcopus non minus memorabile illis contulit beneficium, sed omni potius omnibus seculis venturis dignum veneratione. Cas- trum etenim, quod situm est in pulchriori parte civitatis Hrouecestre, pro regia concessione illius doni, quod sepe- dictus archiepiscopus predictae ecclesie ad victum mona- chorum disposuerat dare, manerium videlicet quod situm est in comitatu de Bucingeham, nomine Hedenham. Non enim aliter ut ratum permaneret ipsi ecclesie illud absque regis concessione potuit dare, quia pater regis illud dede- rat archiepiscopo in vita sua tantum, ut sublimatus fuit in archiepiscopo. Unde Willelmo filio ejus ipsum patrem succedente in regno, ab archiepiscopo et episcopo de ejusdem manerii concessione requisitus, respondit centum libras denariorum habere se velle pro illa concessione. Quod postquam archiepiscopus et episcopus simul audie- runt, consternati pariter valde, responderunt, illam tan- tam pecuniam neque tunc in promptu sese habere, nec etiam unde eam acquirere potuissent sese scire. Duobus autem amicis utrique parti faventibus, Rodberto videlicet filio Haimonis et Henrico comite de Uuaruic, hinc re- gium honorem et integram ejus observantibus voluntatem, hinc vero amicitie favorem et pro Dei amore ecclesie pre- dicte magnificum ac profuturum honorem, regi consu- luerunt, quatinus pro pecunia, quam pro concessione manerii exigebat, episcopus Gundulfus, quia in opere cementarii plurimum sciens et efficax erat, castrum sibi Hrofense lapideum de suo construeret. Quod ubi archi- episcopo et episcopo innotuit, tunc proculdubio magis consternati dixerunt, et regie concessioni ex toto sese abnuere, etiam et ipsum manerium in profundo maris potius situm iri malle, quam predictam ecclesiam sancti Andree futuris temporibus regis exactionibus mancipari debere. Nam quotienscunque quilibet ex infortunio ali- quo casu in castro illo contingeret, aut infractione muri aut fissura maceriei, id protinus ab episcopo vel ecclesia exigeretur usu reficiendum assiduo. Sicque episcopus et ecclesia futuri seculi temporibus omnibus summa dis- trictione regie summitteretur exactioni. Isto itaque metu perterritus uterque, absit hoc a me, inquit archiepiscopus; absit quoque a me, inquit et episcopus. Responsum hoc audiens Comes Henricus, quasi modeste stimulis ire com- motus; honestatis dans concito fremitus, inquit, Hactenus mea estimatione ratus sum archiepiscopum Lanfrancum unum ex viris universi orbis extitisse sapientissimis, nunc autem nec insipientem, quod absit, esse dico, neque illa quidem, qua dudum sapientia callebat, impresentiarum vi- gere ullatenus asserere audeo. Quid enim gravedinis, in- quit, hoc est, castrum ad ultimum majus pro XL libris ad voluntatem regis facere, factum vero comiti vel vicecomiti civitatis, seu alijs etiam quibus regi placuerit monstrare, monstratum et ex omni parte integrum liberare, semel vero liberato sese penitus expedire, nec unquam ulterius inde se intromittere, nec etiam eo respicere. Ad hoc regem adversus episcopum vel ecclesiam future servitutis occasionem nullatenus querere, immo potius eos ab omni servitute liberare, atque sicut regem decebat pro Dei timore et seculi honore in summa eos libertate conservare velle. His ergo et alijs nonnullis hujuscemodi rationibus tandem acquievit archiepiscopus. Igitur hoc pacto coram rege inito, fecit castrum Gundulfus episcopus de suo ex integro totum, constamine, ut reor, LX librarum. Quod quam diu in seculo consistere poterit, pro Gundulfo episcopo manifesto indicio quasi loquens erit, eternum quidem illi ferens testimonium, quod manerium Hedenham ecclesie et monachis sancti Andree ab omni exactione et calumnia regis et omnium hominum permanebit liberrimum et quietissimum in secula seculorum.

Et ego Anselmus non meis meritis, sed gracia Dei Cantuariensis archiepiscopus, hanc donationem regia auctoritate confirmatam, confirmo, ut et ipsi predictae ecclesie, et monachis predictis, atque post illos inperpetuum victuris, firmiter stabilis et stabiliter firma et illibata permaneat sancio, et sancitam signo dominice crucis Christi consigno, et auctoritate Dei omnipotentis patris et filii et spiritus sancti, et omnium sanctorum ejus excommunico omnes illos, qui de predicta ecclesia aliquid horum omnium, que hactenus ei sunt concessa et donata, et a rege Henrico et a me nunc confirmata, abstulerint vel auferre temptaverint, vel ab aliis ablatum cognita veritate receperint, vel retinuerint. Carta Gundulfi Roffensis episcopi, de Monachorum institutione, loco Clericorum, in Ecclesiam Roffensem S. Andreae apostoli; et de ampla dotatione ejusdem Ecclesie. Ex ipso autogr. in Bibl. Cottoniana.

GUNDULFUS Roffensis episcopus, omnibus Christi fidelibus salutem. Ad perpetuam rei memoriam futurorum, vobis omnibus notum facio; quod, cum non meis meritis, sed gratia Dei, et vocatione domini Lanfranci archiepiscopi Cantuariensis, ad curam episcopatus Roffensis sui vocatus, ecclesiam beati Andree, apostolorum mitissimi, a rege Ethelberto olim fundatam, debito cultu divino, per quinque clericos male degentes et famulantes in fea, destitutam inveni: ideo auctoritate, voluntate et mandato domini regis Willielmi, ipsius ecclesie patroni; ac etiam consilio, auxilio, assensu, et ordinatione domini Lanfranci archiepiscopi Cantuariensis, eisdem clericis, ex voto consentientibus, et habitum religionis devote suscipientibus, tandem sexaginta monachos congregavi, introduxi, et institui, ad famulandum Deo digne, et sancto Andree in ecclesia sua, amodo et usque in sempiternum. De possessionibus autem et donationibus, a regibus et aliis Christi fidelibus datis et concessis, quas undique districtas et dispersas reperii, de regis benevolentia, cum magno labore recollegi, congregavi, et acquisivi; victum eorum a victu meo discrevi.

Dedi preterea et addidi ad eorum sustentationem, et advenientium hospitem et pauperum, ac Serjantorum quos constitui ad serviendum eis, secundum dispositionem monachorum, sicut in ecclesia Cantuariensi dominus Lanfrancus archiepiscopus Serjantos ordinavit et constituit; scilicet ecclesias de Wolewic, et de Darenteford, et de Suthuna, et de Wilmintuna, et de Chiselhersta, et de Aeilesford, et de Retheresfelde, et de Fernet, et de Sturmutha; et altare sancti Nicholai, quod est parochiale in ecclesia beati Andree apostoli, cum ecclesia sancte Margarete que appendet.

Sic quoque pro monachorum quiete et pace perpetua, terras, decimas, et possessiones, cum suis libertatibus, et rectitudinibus, separatim ab episcopo, assensu regio, et confirmatione discernere decrevi. Constituo etiam de possessionibus, que ad victum ipsorum monachorum ordinavi singulis annis, mihi et successoribus meis, festivitatem sancti Andree apostoli, apud Roffam personaliter celebrantibus, exennium deferendum hujusmodi; hoc est Wuldeham, et Frenesbiri, et de Denitune, et de Sutlflite, et de Stocche xvi frecingas, xxx ancas, ccc gallinas, et millenarium de Lampridis, et millenarium de ovis, et quatuor salmone; et saxaginta fasciculos de farra; et de Stoches unum hopum avene: et de piscibus et de ovis medietas sit eorum.

Et de Lamhetha similiter dimidium millenarium de Lampridis, ad opus eorum. De Hadenham vero valentem xx solidos de pisce, in cellis eorum deferatur, et ibi equaliter partitum, medietas eis remaneat, et medietas michi deferatur. Si vero fortuito (quod absit) ego vel aliquis successorum meorum, ad festum aliqua causa defuerit, ex parte Dei et mea precipio, ut totum illud exennium ad curiam beati apostoli deferatur, et consilio prioris et fratrum ecclesie, ad honorem festivitatis, in usus advenientium hospitem et pauperum dispensetur. Si quis igitur in episcopali sede post me sessurus: vel quicumque alius, quocumque colore, ecclesias, res, vel possessiones, alias a me datas et concessas, vel a quocumque alio christiano auferre; vel hanc meam ordinationem, extra rectam intentionem meam, pervertere in aliqua ipsius parte voluerit; ex tunc licitum sit monachis meis exennium non solvere, et serjantos ab eis omnino repellere, et ad libitum suum alios disponere in futurum, ad serviendum eis. Et ut hec ordinatio mea, regia auctoritate facta, et domini Lanfranci Cantuariensis episcopi consilio, auxilio, et assensu statuta, ipsis monachis meis, atque post illos in perpetuum victuris, firmiter stabilis et stabiliter firma, integra, et inviolata permaneat, vice mitissimi sanctorum Andree apostoli, propria manu mea eam consigno et corrobore; Quicumque ergo audaci temeritate, aut temeraria presumptione illam alterius scienter violaverint; apponat, ac preponderet dominus illam eorum sacrilegii iniquitatem, super omnes alias iniquitates eorum. Et nisi ad satisfactionem venerint, deleantur de libro viventium, et cum justis non scribantur; et in die juste et eterne retributionis, cum in sinistra parte positae, subeant sententiam districtae ultionis Amen, Amen, Amen.

Et volo quod ecclesia sancti Andree Roffe, et episcopus Gundulfus, ac successores sui ista teneant, ita libere sicut, sicut tempore Willielmi, Willielmi, et Henrici, et Lanfranci archiepiscopi ecclesia Roffensis melius et plenius tenuit et habuit, et ecclesia Christi Cantuariensis sua maneria tenet, cum Soka et Saka, Tola and Theam, Girthbreche, Hamsokne, Forstall, Infangenethel, Fremenesferme; et de Toln de terra et de aqua in civitate Roffe; et de transitu aque, fracto ponte; et de hundredo quartum denarium; et de omnibus exitibus que pertinent ad preposituram civitatis, quartam partem, excepto gablo regis. UNIVERSIS sancte matris ecclesie filiis presentes literas visuris vel audituris, Galfridus de Gaspernasse capellanus, rector primus ecclesie de Betbergh, salutem in domino sempiternam. Volens testimonium perhibere veritati, et inter partes imposterum litis amputare materiam, ad futuram rei memoriam, compositionem ecclesie de Betbergh predictae in scriptis cum processu redigere procuravi in hec verba. Quia parochiani de Lega manentes in hameletto de Retbergh predict. multociens erant laborati et gravitati per longitudinem et profunditatem itineris versus Legh et de Legha, eundo et redeundo, et inundatione aquarum que sepius contingebat, impediti, cupientes exonerari et alleviari a predictis laboribus, gravaminibus, et impedimentis, consilio peritorum accesserunt ad patronum et ad rectorem de Lega predicta, petentes ab eis si loci diocesanus consentiret, habere cantariam in capella sua, in dicto hameletto de Retbergh, et capellanum celebrantem in eadem diebus dominicis et festivis, et aliis diebus quibus solebant adire ecclesiam de Legh. Hiis concessis accesserunt ad dominum episcopum predict. petentes, quibus respondebat, quod si dominus patronus et parochiani vellent conferre terram dicte capelle, et rector concedere, consensu patroni sua jura ad sustentationem capellani, et se submittere ejus compositioni, graciosae consentiret et componeret. Hiis concessis et redactis, salvo domino tamen jure patronatus, submitterunt se dicti parochiani pro omnibus temporibus compositioni dicti domini episcopi, qui composuit quod unum capellanum tanquam rectorem, qui divina celebraret in eadem capella, diebus dominicis et festivis, et aliis diebus cum necessitas de novo emergeret, ut pro funere presenti et casibus, et quod dictus capellanus presentaretur semper per dominum, et perciperet omnes decimas majores et minores oblaciones, et subvenciones provenientes de dicto hameletto de Retbergh, que estimantur ad xl^s. et dictus capellanus faceret canonicam obedienciam domino episcopo et archidiacono, et solvendum dicto archidiacono pro visitacione xii^d. Et quia dicta capella simplex erat, et carebat ornamentis, libris, et aliis incumbentibus necessariis, composuit dictus dominus episcopus, quod dicti parochiani pro suo tempore, et successores sui pro omnibus temporibus futuris, cum necessitas fuerit, providerent dicte capelle, de libris ornamentis, et aliis incumbentibus et necessariis, et nisi moniti fecerunt, fulminarentur anathemate, et carerent cantaria donec ad emendacionem venerint. UNIVERSIS sancte matris ecclesie filiis ad quorum noticiam presentes litere pervenerint, frater Hamo, permissione divina Roffen. episcopus, salutem in domino sempiternam. Licet bone memorie Laurentius quondam Roffen. episcopus predecessor noster, vicariam ecclesie de Frekenham nostre jurisdictionis immediate, vacantem cuidam Edmundo de Chipenham presbitero contulisset suo jure, ac vicariam ipsam in certis porcionibus ad dictam ecclesiam pertinentibus consistere debere successivis temporibus, auctoritate pontificali ordinasset et statuisset, prout in registro ipsius episcopi in ecclesia nostra Roffen. dimisso, comperimus dilucide contineri. Et deinceps tam prefatus Edmundo vicarius pro toto tempore quo vicarius ibidem extitit, quam omnes successores ejusdem hucusque, presertim quidam Thomas, cujus cognomen ad presens sub recenti memoria non recolitur, nec non Willielmus de Sydyngbourne, et Johannes de Castre vicarii perpetui in dicta ecclesia per predecessores nostros, et nos successive instituti, juxta ordinationem prefati Laurentii, porcionem hujusmodi veluti congruam pro sustentatione eorum, et incumbentibus oneribus sibi supportandis integre perceperint et quiete, prout per inquisitionem fide dignorum super hoc juratorum, auctoritate nostra factam, et alia documenta legitima nobis constat evidenter. Quia tamen magister Johannes Noble, nuper rector ecclesie predictae, prefatum Johannem de Castre, vicarium ejusdem dum vixerat, super jure percipiendi porcionem memoratam, extrajudicialiter et verbaliter duntaxat impetivit coram nobis, pro eo videlicet, quod prefatus vicarius ordinationem predicti Laurentii episcopi, aut aliam sufficientem ut dicebatur, non exhibuit sigillo autentico consignatam. Nos dissensiones hujusmodi inter rectores et vicarios dicti loci presentes et futuros sedare, ne unquam de cetero pululent, ac tranquillitati et quieti parcium earundem, ex officii nostri debito providere volentes in hac parte, vocatis ac legitime premunitis magistro Ricardo de Middeltone, nunc rectore, et domino Johanne Aylbarn, perpetuo vicario ecclesie memorate, super omnibus et singulis porcionibus fructuum, reddituum, oblacionum, et proventuum ad dictam ecclesiam pertinentium, et estimacione quarumlibet earundem, nec non super omnibus et singulis oneribus consuetis eidem ecclesie incumbentibus, et eorum estimacione per duodecim viros fide dignos, clericos et laicos, juratos noticiam in premissis versimiliter obtinentes inquiri fecimus diligenter. Tandem vero tam per inquisitionem hujusmodi, et alia documenta, quam per ordinationem prefati Laurentii predecessoris nostri predictam, sufficienter informati, ad ordinationem, assignacionem et diffinicionem porcionum et onerum predictorum, tam videlicet eorum que ad rectorem, quam eorum que ad vicarium perpetuum ecclesie predictae, debeant futuris et perpetuis temporibus pertinere, de concessu parcium earundem providemus in hunc modum. In primis, ordinamus et ordinando diffinimus, quod rector ecclesie prelibate qui pro tempore fuerit, habeat mansam rectorie, et quadraginta acras terre arabilis, et unam acram et dimidiam prati, ac redditum annum quinque solidorum et octo denariorum ad ipsam ecclesiam pertinentes. Habeat etiam et percipiat omnes decimas frugum sive bladum, tam de terris domini et parochianorum pede fossis quam aratro cultis, nec non decimam tocus feni in parochia dicte ecclesie provenientes; quam quidem rectoris porcionem ad septem decim libras sterlingorum, juxta taxam antiquam estimamus; pro qua porcione sustinebit idem rector onera subscripta; videlicet, cancellum ecclesie in omnibus suis necessariis sustinebit, et reparabit quociens opus fuerit, libros, vestimenta, mallas, et alia ornamenta que ad exhibicionem vicarii seu parochianorum non pertinent, stramenta per totum annum pro cancello et ecclesia, preterquam in festis Pentecostes, et apostolorum Petri et Pauli, exhibebit et inveniet. Edificia et clausuras rectorie in statu debito conservabit. Decimas et alia onera extraordinaria omnia predictae ecclesie incumbencia, pro rata porcionis sue, juxta taxam supradictam, ac etiam omnia alia onera ordinaria, que vicario juxta nostram ordinationem presentem non incumbunt in solidum subibit et agnoscet. Ordinamus insuper et ordinando diffinimus, quod prefatus vicarius, et successores sui habeant viginti acras terre arabilis ad dictam ecclesiam pertinentes, illas videlicet viginti acras quas prefati Edmundo de Chipenham, Thomas, Willielmus, et Johannes, ac alii quondam vicarii perpetui ecclesie predictae tenuerunt et habuerunt in parte porcionis sue sibi assignatas. De quibus quidem viginti acris terre vicarii predicti nullam decimam solvere teneantur. Habeant etiam et percipiant prefatus vicarius, et successores sui, herbagium cimiterii, ac decimas herbagii in parochia, nec non decimas piscariarum, molendinorum, silvarum, cedurarum, fructuum, arborum, curtilagiorum, lini, canabi, lane, lactis, casei, butiri, vitulorum, agnorum, porcellorum, cignorum, aucarum, apum columbarum, aucupacionum, venacionum, negociacionum, et omnium minutarum decimarum ecclesie predictae debitarum, omniaque legata ipsi ecclesie, que non specificantur rectori ejusdem applicanda, ac omnes oblaciones et obventiones ad alteragium ipsius ecclesie provenientes et spectantes, una cum duabus partibus oblacionum ad capellam beate Marie de Frakenham proveniencium sibi, juxta formam ordinationis domini Thome de Woldeham predecessoris nostri, inde factam, per capellanum dicte capelle liberandis. In quibus rebus porcionem predicti vicarii, et successorum suorum consistere volumus, ac perpetuo consistere debere ordinamus et diffinimus. Sustinebit autem et subibit vicarius, qui processu temporis inibi institutus extiterit, onera infrascripta. Officiabit siquidem ecclesiam predictam sufficienter et congrue per seipsum vel alium capellanum idoneum, una cum uno clerico sumptibus suis; libros ad exhibicionem rectoris spectantes ligari, vestimenta, linea, et tuallas lavari et reparari faciet quociens fuerit oportunitas, panem, vinum, insensum, cereos, processiones, ac cetera luminaria in cancello necessaria seu consueta, unum rochetum ad minus, duo superpellicia, pro se et clerico suo, nec non stramenta pro cancello, et ecclesia, in festis Pentecostes, et apostolorum Petri et Pauli inveniet. Ad decimas vero et alia onera extraordinaria dictam ecclesiam concernencia, quandoque contingerint, pro rata porcionis sue supradicte, quam juxta taxam ab olim consuetam ad sex marcas et dimidiam sterlingorum estimamus, contribuet et solvet. Hanc autem ordinationem et diffinicionem nostram, subducta ordinatione Laurentii predicti in porcionibus et oneribus sic ut premittitur ordinatis, diffinitis, assignatis, et distinctis, tam a rectoribus quam a vicariis perpetuis supradictis, volumus et decernimus, futuris et perpetuis temporibus inviolabiliter observari. Carta Ethilbaldi Regis Ecclesie Sancti Andree concessa de unius navis libertate. Hearnii Text. Roff. p. 66.

✠ In nomine domini Dei salvatoris nostri Ihesu Christi. Si ea que quisque precipienda a deo mercede hominibus verbo suo largitur et donat, stabilio jugiter potuissent durare, supervacaneum videretur ut litteris narrarentur ac fulcirentur. Sed dum ad probanda donata ad convincendumque volentem donata infringere, nichil prorsus robustius esse videretur quam donationis manibus auctorum ac testium roboratae, non inmerito plurimi petunt, ut que eis conlata dinoscuntur, paginaliter confirmentur. Quorum postulationibus tanto libentius tantoque promptius consensus prebendus est, quanto et illis, qui precatore sunt, utilior res secundum hoc visibile seculum nunc impertitur; et illis, qui concessores existunt, pro impertito opere pietatis uberius fructus secundum invisibile postmodum tribuetur. Quam ob rem ego Ethilbaldus, rex Merciorum, presentibus litteris indico, me dedisse pro anima mea Aldulfo episcopo, ecclesiæque beati Andreae apostoli quam gubernat, unius navis, sive illa proprie ipsius, sive cujuslibet alterius hominis sit, incensum, id est, vectigal, michi et antecessoribus meis jure regio in portu Lundoniæ usque hactenus competentem, quemadmodum mansuetudinem nostram rogavit. Quæ donatio ut inperpetuum firma et stabilis sit, ita ut nullus eam regum vel optimatum, vel teloniariorum, vel etiam juniorum, quilibet ipsorum in parte, aut in toto in irritum præsumat, aut possit adducere, manu proprio signo sanctæ crucis subter in hac pagina faciam, testesque ut subscribant petam. Quisquis igitur id, quod pro anima mea donavi, aut donatum est, illibatum permanere permiserit, habeat communionem beatam cum præsentem Christi ecclesia atque futura. Si quis autem non permiserit, separetur, a societate non solum sanctorum hominum, sed etiam Angelorum, manente hac donatione nostra nichilominus in sua firmitate. Winchester Cathedral and Monastery of St. Swithin,

HAMPSHIRE.

HISTORIANS have differed so widely respecting the first foundation of this monastery, that it will be more satisfactory to begin with the account given by Mr. Stevens, in his "Continuation," who, quoting Archbishop Usher and several ancient historians, states king Lucius to have first built a church in Winchester, above four hundred years earlier than the period (of the Saxons) mentioned by Sir William Dugdale in his extracts from the Chronicle of this Church. (See Num. I.) The following are the remarks of Mr. Stevens.

"The glorious and most christian king Lucius (for this bishop Usher^a quotes the ancient author, Thomas Radburn, bishop of St. David's) perceiving how by the two holy men, Fugatius and Duvianus, his kingdom did wonderfully increase in the worship of God taught by true faith, and being therefore replenished with great joy, he converted to a better use the possessions and territories formerly possessed by the temples of the Flamens, transferring them to the churches of the faithful; and he not only added more and larger manors and lands, but advanced them likewise with all sorts of privileges. And particularly touching the church of Winchester, which in his affection he in a special manner preferred before others; he raised it from the very foundations, and before he had perfected the whole work, he built a little habitation, an oratory, dormitory, and a refectory for the monks designed to dwell there. Having finished the entire building in the fifth year after his conversion, the aforesaid prelates and monks, Fugatius and Duvianus, dedicated it to the honour of our blessed Saviour, on the 4th of the calends of November, in the year of Grace 169, and filled it with monks, who devoutly served our Lord there; constituting the abbat of the place a certain monk called Denotus. The same excellent prince likewise resolved to confer on the bishop and monks of that church of Winchester all the possessions and farms which anciently belonged to the Flamens of the same city, together with all their privileges and immunities.

"A little after, this same author adds, The aforesaid most christian king Lucius bestowed on the said church newly founded by him, the suburbs of the city of Winchester, together with the privileges of Dunwallo Molmutius; which Dunwallo, as Moratius, Gildas, and Geffry of Monmouth also testify, was the sixteenth king of the Britons, and being extremely zealous in his heathenish superstition, he enacted laws, famous till the days of king William the Conqueror, under the title of Molmutian Laws, by which he ordained, that the cities and temples of their idol gods, as likewise the highways leading to them, together with the farms of their tenants and husbandmen, should enjoy the immunity of sanctuary; inso-much, that if any malefactor should seek sanctuary there, he might safely depart, though his adversary were present. Now, by means of such endowments and privileges, the church of Winchester enjoyed its possessions in all tranquillity, daily singing the praises of God the space of 102 years, to wit, from the first year of the conversion of the most christian king Lucius, to the second year of the tyrant Dioclesian.

"The measure of the church^b founded by king Lucius, according to Moratius, in his first book, and second chapter, was in length 209 paces, in breadth 80 paces, and in height 92 paces; from one corner cross the church to the opposite corner were 130 paces: the situation of the monastery on the east side of the church, towards the temple of Concord, was 100 paces in length, and in breadth towards the new temple of Apollo, 40: on the north part it was 160 paces in length, and 98 in breadth: on the west side of the church there were in length 190, in breadth 100: on the south-east there were in length 450 paces, and in breadth 580. On this side was seated the episcopal palace, as likewise the habitation of the monks. All this bishop Usher took from the History of Winchester, written by Thomas Radborne, monk of Winchester, who collected it from other much more ancient writers, then extant, but since lost.

"The limits of their possessions were extended twelve miles round about the city of Winchester, (says Harpsfield^c from the above-mentioned Moratius) reaching so far on every side; in which space there were on each quarter seated eight wealthy villages.

"Thomas Radburn,^d above quoted, informs us, as to the order or rule professed by those monks, that St. Fugatius and Duvianus filled that church with monks, devoutly serving and praising God, and professed according to the rule delivered by St. Mark the Evangelist.

"Cassianus,^e an ancient writer of the church, gives us the following account of the order and rule prescribed by St. Mark. In the beginning of the christian faith, says he, a very few, and those of approved sanctity, were dignified with the title of monks; which men, as they received their rule of living from St. Mark the Evangelist, first bishop of Alexandria, of blessed memory, they did not content themselves with retaining the order of living practised by the primitive christians, concerning which we read in the Acts of the Apostles, that all the multitude of believers were of one soul; neither did any of an order anterior to the ages both of St. Benedict and St. Anthony, namely, those instituted by St. Mark at Alexandria. It would be a loss of time to confute an account so glaringly improbable. Milner's Winchester, vol. ii. p. 3.

one esteem that which he possessed to be his own, but they had all things common. For those who were possessors of lands and houses sold them, and brought the price, laying it at the apostle's feet; which was divided to every one, according to their need. But besides this, the ancient monks aspired to other practices more sublime; for retiring themselves into the most secret places of the suburbs, there they led a life so austere, and with such rigorous abstinence, that even those who were strangers to christian religion were astonished at it; for with such wonderful fervour they attended, day and night, to the reading of the holy scripture, prayer, and labouring with their hands, that neither the appetite, nor so much as thought of meat, did interrupt their abstinence, except every second or third day, and then they received food, not to satisfy their desire, but mere necessity; and neither did they this till after sun-set; so dividing their time as to make the light accompany the exercise of their spiritual meditations, and darkness the care of their bodies. These, and beside these, many other more perfect and sublime were the practices of the ancient monks.

"Such were the monks^a who first possessed the church of Winchester, and in such holy exercises they continued, till the tempest of the persecution raised by the tyrant Dioclesian dissipated them. After which, in a short time, they were restored, and the church consecrated by Constantius, Bishop of Winchester, in the year of grace 309, taking its new name from St. Amphibalus, who, together with St. Alban, was crowned with martyrdom; at which time the abbat was named Deodatus. Hence it is that Gildas, the most ancient of all our historians, mentions it under that title, where he relates how the sons of Mordred, to avoid the cruelty of Constantine, fled thither; but in vain, for the tyrant, not regarding the sanctity and privilege of the place, took the sons of Mordred, and murdered one of them before the altar of the church of St. Amphibalus, at Winchester, whither he had fled for sanctuary.

"This same church afterwards suffered another eclipse, when the barbarous infidel Saxons profaned and laid waste all the sacred places of this island. But not long after, the same Saxons, having by God's mercy embraced that faith, which they formerly persecuted, repaired with advantage, all the ruins they had made; and particularly this church and monastery of Winchester, called afterwards de Hida, was restored, with far greater splendor and magnificence than ever before.

"Bishop Godwin,^b out of ancient monuments, testifies, that the Emperor Constantine the Great favouring Christians, this monastery, which, as has been said, had been destroyed under the Emperor Dioclesian, was began and perfected with such admirable devotion and zeal, that within the space of one year, and thirty days, both the church, the lodgings of the monks, and all other offices and buildings for their several uses, were entirely finished. And at the request of Deodatus, the first abbat, it was by Constans, Bishop of Winchester, consecrated to the memory of St. Amphibalus, martyr; In which state it continued more than the space of 200 years, till Cerdic, the first king of the West Saxons, driving away, and killing some of the monks, turned it into an idol temple."

It is from about this period that Dugdale begins his history, which will be given in the words of his translator, after which will be added an account of the several bishops, in which will be interwoven every more interesting and important event relating to the history of this church.

KINEGILSUS, the son of Celric, king of the West Saxons, having been baptized by St. Birinus, with his believing Saxons, designed to build a church in Winchester, and had gathered the materials for the same, and resolved to endow it with all the lands seven miles about that city from the center thereof; but being prevented by death, caused his son Kinewalc to swear, that he would perform the same.

Kinewalc accordingly built a most beautiful church, and confirmed the grant of all the land given by his father. Agilbert, who had succeeded Birinus, refusing to remove from Dorchester, where the episcopal see had been plac'd, King Kinewalc, appointed one Wine, Bishop of Winchester, and so the diocese was divided into two; and the said king, of his own gift, granted to the said church the three manors of Dunton, Alresford, and Wordiam.

Ina, king of the West Saxons, built the monastery of Glastonbury, and gave to the church of Winchester 30 hides of land, in the place called Ewerland, in the Isle of Wight, and 50 hides in Breeding. Ethelard, king of the West Saxons, gave seven manses, his Queen Frithwith gave Tantonam; his kinsman Cutred 40 hides at Muleburn, in the Isle of Wight, 25 at Banewad, and 32 at Wippengeham.

King Egbert having subdued all this island, ordained, that for the future, it should be called England, and all the inhabitants Englishmen. Then he gave to the church of Winchester 30 hides at Cawelburn, in the Isle of Wight, 42 at Scaldeflete, and four villages, which were, Drokeireford, Wordiam, Awelton, and Beddintun.

King Ethelwulf returning from Rome, gave every tenth hide of land in his dominions to the conventual churches.

King Alured translated the British laws into English, and many other books, and divided the country into hundreds and tithings, for the better apprehending of robbers. He built a monastery for monks at Etheligeny, and another for nuns at Seftibery; as also a new monastery in the church-yard of Winchester, which he endowed with many possessions.

His son, king Edward, gave to the church of Winchester, the four manors of Husseburne, Witchurch, Ower-ton, and Stoke.

His son, king Athelstan, in one battle slew one king of the Scots, five kings of the Danes, and twelve earls, and kept such good order in England, that if a gold chain were hung out on the road, it would sooner drop in pieces than be stolen. He gave to the church of Winchester the three manors of Chiveldinton, Evedford, and Eismeresworthy.

King Edgar, because the canons of the church of Winchester led disorderly lives, turned them all out, and placed monks in their stead, and gave to that church the manor of Awinton, three hides of land at Madaley, 13 at Breondun, two at Aderingefeld, and seven at Drucon.

King Cnute gave to the church of Winchester three hides of land, called Hille, as did Queen Emma the two manors of Westwode, and Patimparmustier. This queen being falsely accused of incontinency with Elwin, Bishop of Winchester, performed the trial of ordeal, walking over nine plough-shares made red hot barefoot, and unhurt; in thanksgiving for which, she gave to St. Swithin, nine manors, as did her son, King Edward the Confessor, the two manors of Meones and Poreland, and five hides at Wrocheshall; Githa, wife to Earl Godwin, the two manors of Bleodon and Craukumbam.

Bishop Wakelin began to rebuild the church of Winchester from the foundation; and it is reported, that the king granted him, towards that work, as much timber of his forest of Hanepinges, as could be cut down in three days and nights: whereupon such a number of hewers was brought together, that in the time appointed, they cut down the whole wood, and conveyed it to Winchester.

King Edward's grant confirming all the above donations, may be seen among the charters.

It is to be observed, that the see of Winchester was never removed since its first foundation, as most or all in the south-west parts have been. The church now standing, was begun by Bishop Walkin, or Wakelin, as above, and carried on by his successors, but never finished till the time of William of Wickham, who built most of the west end. It was first dedicated to St. Amphibalus, then to St. Peter, next to St. Swithin, and lastly to the blessed Trinity. These bishops are chancellors to the see of Canterbury, and prelates of the most noble order of the garter.

This diocese of old, contained the counties of Surrey and Southampton, and the Isle of Wight, to which Queen Elizabeth added the Isles of Jersey and Guernsey, Sark and Alderney. The English isle and counties contain 362 parishes; the Isle of Jersey 131; and that of Guernsey and the other two, as many more.

We have already, in the earlier part of this work,^a given an account of the conversion of the Saxons who inhabited the south-east and northern parts of this island; still, however, the southern and western kingdoms, together with the great nation which occupied most of the midland provinces, namely the Mercians, had not yet been released from the yoke of idolatry; and "as no such favourable circumstances," remarks^b the indefatigable researcher into the antiquities of Winchester, "appeared in their regard as had smoothed the way for the conversion of their countrymen, it required an apostolic spirit of the most ardent kind in the preacher, who should first venture to disabuse them of their error; such was that of

ST. BIRINUS, who, having received the permission of Pope Honorius, zealously undertook this arduous task, and in the year 635^c arrived at a most fortunate period, when Oswald, the powerful king of the Northumbrians, who had previously been converted, was at the court of Kinegils, king of the West Saxons, for the purpose of demanding his daughter in marriage. Having, with the assistance of Oswald, succeeded in converting Kinegils, whom he baptized, he was desirous of spreading the knowledge of the Gospel in the very interior parts of the island, for which reason it was that Dorchester, then a considerable city near Oxford, was assigned to him as the most eligible situation, in which he might establish an episcopal see. Here St. Birinus converted and baptized Quilchilm^d the son of and partner in the kingdom with Kinegils.

The establishment of the see at Dorchester was intended by Kinegils only as a temporary measure, in order to satisfy the zeal of Birinus, and give greater facility to his labours in a general conversion of his subjects; for he always cherished the hope of removing the episcopal establishment to Winchester, where it had always existed before the Saxon invasion; in furtherance of which design he had been, ever since his conversion,^e collecting materials for building a magnificent cathedral, which unfortunately he never lived to see completed. He died in the year 643, and was buried in this cathedral, where his bones are still preserved.^f The young king Kenewalk, notwithstanding his solemn promise with an oath to attend to the dying injunctions of his father with respect to the completion of his pious design, very soon after he had obtained the reins of government was hurried into all the extremes of idolatry, whereby this building was interrupted and neglected for some years. Having been dispossessed of his kingdom by Penda, king of Mercia, whose daughter he had espoused and afterwards repudiated, he sought refuge in the court of the Christian king, Anna, of the East Angles; here he was converted, and being restored to his kingdom by the exertions of his nephew Cuthred, he instantly and seriously set about finishing the cathedral^g which his father had begun, and which he completed in the most magnificent stile. Together with the church, Kenewalk erected suitable offices for the monks or regular canons, who performed the divine office and ministry in it, and he endowed the new establishment with all the lands which his father had left for that purpose, to which he added the manors of Downton, Alresford and Worthy.^h When it was completed St. Birinus dedicated it in the name of the Holy Trinity and of St. Peter and St. Paulⁱ in the year 648. He afterwards returned to Dorchester, where he died in 650 and was buried, but his body was afterwards translated to this place. Upon his death

AGILBERT a native of France, who had spent some time in Ireland in the study of the Holy Scriptures, and had since been a fellow labourer with St. Birinus, was appointed by king Kenewalk to succeed him. Bede mentions that it was not without the most earnest entreaties that he could be prevailed upon to accept the dignity. Rudborne calls him "prædicator egregius et doctor"^k but he unfortunately, according to Bede, laboured under the defect of a certain foreign pronunciation of the Saxon Tongue, which sounded uncouth and barbarous in the ears of the king,^l and which determined him to remove Agilbert from this place; he therefore privately procured one Wina a monk of this cathedral, of great talents, but of an intriguing and ambitious turn, to be consecrated in France; and, in the year 660, dividing the see into two parts, he placed Agilbert at Dorchester to superintend the northern districts, and established in his place at Winchester his favourite Wina, assigning to him the southern counties;^m but Agilbert could not brook this indignity, and, resigning his see, retired to France, where he was soon after made bishop of Paris. The king however very soon discovered the real character and principles of Wina, whom, after he had held the pastoral staff only three years,ⁿ he expelled out of the diocese; but he suffered the see to remain vacant four years, when attributing his misfortunes and the defeats he suffered from the Mercians to this neglect of religion, he sent an embassy to Agilbert with a request to him to return to his former see. This was explained to Kenewalk as utterly impossible under the existing circumstances, but Agilbert strongly recommended his nephew Eleutherius, who then bore an extraordinary character for his learning and piety,^o to succeed to the care of the diocese; accordingly in the year 670 Theodore archbishop of Canterbury consecrated ELEUTHERIUS, who presided here about seven years, during which time he was most assiduous in the discharge of his various duties; and particular praise is given him for having patronized and supported St. Aldhelm, thereby enabling him to complete the famous abbey of Malmesbury, which had been begun by his master Maydulph an Irish hermit.^p Eleutherius died in the year 676, and was succeeded by

ST. HEDDA, who had been first a monk, and then abbot of the monastery of Streneschal; he was consecrated at London by archbishop Theodore.^q As the kingdom of the Mercians was now entirely brought over to the true faith, and the jurisdiction of it divided, by the authority of the metropolitan, between four several bishops, St. Hedda removed the episcopal see entirely from Dorches-

The monk of this cathedral Rudborne, however, says that being struck with remorse he retired to his ancient monastery at Winchester, and spent the three last years of his life in acts of penance, constantly repeating this sentence, "Erravimus juvenes, emendemus senes—if we have erred in our youth, let us repent in our old age." The probability of this account rests chiefly on the circumstance of Wina being buried in this cathedral, as the inscription on his monument, or rather the third chest on the north side of the altar which formerly contained his bones, seems to testify; viz. Hic jacent Ossa Winae Episcopi. Rudb. Hist. Maj. l. ii. c. 3. Milner. l. 98.

ter to this city. Upon his removal he brought with him from Dorchester the remains of the first Saxon bishop St. Birinus. Here also was buried St. Hedda himself, who died about the year 703, and Bede mentions that many remarkable prodigies were wrought at his tomb.

"The Diocese of the West-Saxons,^a thus restrained within its proper bounds, and fixed at its capital city, Winchester, was still found too extensive to be governed by one bishop, now that the great body of the inhabitants were converted to Christianity in every part. Accordingly upon the death of St. Hedda, the diocese was divided not by royal authority^b as had been done in a former instance, and which had been productive of so much confusion, but by an episcopal synod, as we are positively assured.^c To the see of Winchester were assigned the counties of Hampshire, Surry, Sussex, and the Isle of Wight; to the other see, which was first established at Shirburn, were given the other provinces. To both of them were appointed bishops of the greatest character in the kingdom for learning and piety, who were also both of them monks of the new monastery and school of Malmesbury. Our bishop, who was a native of these parts, and by name

"DANIEL, had such a reputation for sacred literature, that he was frequently consulted by the great apostle of Germany, St. Boniface, in preference to all the learned men on the continent. Venerable Bede, also, in the preface to his invaluable Ecclesiastical History of the English Nation, owns his literary obligations to bishop Daniel.^d The chief of the writings which he left behind him were, a History of the Kingdoms of the South Saxons, a History of the Isle of Wight, and the Life of St. Chad.^e In a subsequent synod to that already mentioned, it was thought advisable that the province of the South Saxons, which was last of all converted to the faith by the zeal of St. Wilfrid,^f should have a separate bishopric established in it. Daniel, far from regretting the diminution of his diocese, which this measure would occasion, was the most forward to promote it; accordingly a new see was erected for Sussex,^g which was fixed at the monastery of Selsea, and afterwards removed to Chichester." Daniel presided over this diocese for the long period of forty and two years, with zeal and piety; when finding himself, from his encreasing years, unequal to the discharge of its great and sacred duties, he resigned it in the year 744,^h and retired to his favourite monastery of Malmesbury, where, in the condition of a private monk, he ended his days very shortly afterwards.ⁱ Upon his resignation

HUMFRED was appointed to this see, which he filled for ten years,^k and was succeeded by

KINEBARD, who governed here six and twenty years. His death, which happened in the year 780, afforded an opportunity for raising to the episcopal dignity of this see another monk, and abbot of Malmsbury, who was celebrated for learning and virtues, by name

ATHELARD.^l About ten years afterwards, or, according to cardinal Beaufort's^m register, in the year 794, his great merits elevated him to the metropolitanical chair of Canterbury,ⁿ when he was succeeded at this place by

DUDDA, who filled the episcopal chair only two years, and dying in 797, made room for

KINEBERT, who about two years after his election accompanied Athelardus archbishop of Canterbury to Rome. He was succeeded by

ALMUND, whom we find sitting in the council^o of Clives-Ho in the capacity of bishop of Winchester; though Stevens in his list of bishops places his election so late as the year 808. The next bishop was

WIGHTEN, or WIGHTHEN, a monk of Glastonbury, who had the honour of placing the undivided crown of all England on the head of the first of her monarchs, Egbert.^p He was succeeded, about the year 827, by

HEREFRITH; who in one of Egbert's most desperate battles with the Danes, that of Charmouth, was slain with Sigilm, bishop of Sherburn, in the year 833.^q His death made room for

EDMUND,^r who governed this diocese for a very short time; for in the year 834, we find as his successor

HELINSTAN, or HELMSTAN, who was tutor to Ethelwolf, the youngest son of king Egbert. He was one of the monks, rather, says Dr. Milner, regular canons of this cathedral, and recommended his royal pupil to St. Swithun, then prior here; from whom he received the habit of a monk, and was afterwards admitted by him into the order of sub-deacons. Helmstan died in the year 837, and was succeeded by

ST. SWITHUN,^s of a noble stock and a native of this city, or its suburbs.^t He was indefatigable in the discharge of his several and numerous duties, for he appears to have had great influence over his royal pupil in the administration of the public affairs, which has induced some authors to state him to have filled the office of Lord Chancellor of England. He was, according to William of Malmesbury, a treasury of virtues; but he was most distinguished for his mildness and humility. He had such a rooted antipathy to every thing even bordering upon outward pomp, that he was accustomed to perform all his journeys when visiting different parts of his diocese, not only during the night but on foot; and during his last illness, he gave particular directions that his remains should not be deposited in the cathedral with any marks of honour and distinction, but buried amongst the common people in the church-yard, where indeed they remained for more than a century, until St. Ethelwold removed them into a magnificent shrine which had been prepared for them by king Edgar; at which time it is conjectured that a small chapel^u was erected over the spot in which St. Swithun was originally buried; the foundation stones of which may still be discovered. St. Swithun was succeeded in his bishopric, in the year 862, by one

ADFERTH or ALFRITH, a prelate of great learning, who was afterwards about 870 translated to Canterbury.^x It was during this bishop's time that the Pagans, who had so often ravaged this city, entered it again, with the most unforgiving and intolerant spirit; and from a hatred to Christianity, beset the cathedral on a sudden and killed all the religious clergy belonging to it; insomuch, that not an individual amongst them^y was spared or escaped. The next bishop we meet with is

^s Gale, in his list of the bishops, says that Ethelwold succeeded his tutor here in the year 837, for about seven years: that he was a great benefactor to the church and monastery; and by a dispensation of Pope Leo was taken hence to be crowned king of England. Dr. Milner, however states this to be a mistake of some ancient as well as modern writers, for he advanced no farther than the order of subdeaconship. "Patre defuncto, quia alius legitimus hæres non extaret, ex gradu subdiaconi Wintoniensis in regem translatus est concedente Leone 3^{mo}." Gul. Malms. de Pontif. l. ii. Joan. Wallingford in Chron. Ranulph. Higden ad an. 836. Rudborne, Hist. Mag. l. iii. c. 2. Dr. Milner adds, it is not improbable that, upon the death of bishop Helmstan, which happened about the same time with that of Egbert, he might indeed have been elected to the episcopal dignity; but, so far from being consecrated to it, he was dispensed with from his former obligation, being called by the voice of the nation, and in some sort obliged to mount the throne.

DUNBERT or DUMBERT; who dying in 879, left the manor of Stuskelyng to the building and repairs of this church, of which, after the Danish invasion, it must have stood greatly in need. After the expulsion of the Danes and the recovery and settlement of the distracted state of his kingdom, the great Alfred lost no time in nominating a proper successor to this See. His choice fell upon DENEWULPHUS, concerning whom some of the ancient historians relate not as a fact, but as a report prevalent in their times, a most extraordinary circumstance, namely, that he was the very herdsman, in whose cottage in the Isle of Athelmy the king had been concealed; be this as it may, Denewulf brought no discredit upon this choice of his royal master, to whom he proved himself an able counsellor and upright statesman; at the same time with great vigilance watching over the interests of his diocese. Upon the death of Denewulf, towards the close of the ninth century, this see is said to have remained vacant seven years,^b until the Pope, offended at the irregularity, threatened the king with the sentence of excommunication, unless a bishop was appointed. At the recommendation of the great Turketul, to whom this see was offered,

ST. FRITHSTAN was appointed to it. He is said to have been a person of great learning and piety, a scholar of St. Grimbald, and one of the regular canons of this monastery: He was consecrated at Canterbury, together with six other bishops, by archbishop Plegmund.^c Having filled the episcopal chair, with as great credit to himself as benefit to his diocese, for nearly twenty-two years, he resigned it in the year 931, in order to give himself up at the close of his life to contemplation and devotion; which however he did not long enjoy; his death happening the following year. St. Frithstan had, upon his resignation, consecrated bishop in his place

ST. BRITHSTAN, a prelate who is still more renowned for his sanctity, and who had also been a disciple of St. Grimbald, and subsequently a religious in the new minster. He is chiefly praised for his unbounded charity, not only setting apart a great portion of each day for attending to the wants of the poor, but even serving them himself in the most humble manner.^d It appears probable that he founded an hospital in this city; for Leland in his Itinerary says, "Hard by is a fair hospital of St. John, where pore syke people be kept. Ther is yn the chapelle an ymege of St. Bristane, sumtyme bishop of Wynchestre, and I have redde that St. Brinstane founded an hospitale yn Wynchestre." It was afterwards^e destroyed by the Danes, but refounded upon a different plan^f by John Devenish, a rich and charitable citizen and magistrate of Winchester; at the reformation it shared the fate of the other religious and charitable establishments, and now forms the city chambers. St. Brinstan governed this see not quite three years; having one day retired to his oratory,^g he continued at his devotions the whole day; on the ensuing day, his attendants, on entering his apartments, found, that he had breathed his last. On his death, which event happened on the feast of All Saints, in the year 934,^h

ST. ELPHEGE, surnamed the Bald, a monk of Glastonbury, and uncle to the celebrated St. Dunstan, succeeded, to the great satisfaction of the clergy, the king, and the people. He is described by all the historians as excelling in every Christian virtue. Upon his death, which happened in 951,ⁱ a very different fate awaited this see, from what it had so long enjoyed. Almost all the preceding prelates had done honour to their sacred character, and reflected the greatest credit upon the diocese, at the same time that they promoted its real interests, both by their zealous efforts and example; but upon the refusal of St. Dunstan, then abbot of Glastonbury,^k to accept of this see, it fell a prey to

ELFINUS, or ALFINUS, a man indeed of royal blood, and famed for his great learning, but of such an insatiable ambition, as to render him a disgrace to the ecclesiastical character. He was not content with this see, honourable as it was in point of rank, and advantageous in point of income, but he aspired to the metropolitanical chair of Canterbury,^l and by bribes and other disgraceful artifices, succeeded in securing his election; but impatient to obtain the sanction of the Pope, he hastened to Rome at the most unseasonable time of the year: in his passage over the Alps he experienced such intense cold, that he was obliged to have the bodies of his horses cut open, in order to preserve his own vital heat, by plunging his feet into them.^m But it was all in vain; he perished in the snow before he could complete his journey; and his body was brought home and interred in this cathedral. Upon the promotion of Elsinus to the see of Canterbury, the election to this place fell upon

BRITHELM, who presided over this diocese only five years: upon his death, in 963,

ST. ETHELWOLD, who, next to St. Swithun, is the most celebrated of the bishops of Winchester, was appointed to succeed him. He was a native of this place. After he had received holy orders at the hands of St. Elphege the Bald, he retired to Glastonbury, where he became a monk and dean of that monastery. He was afterwards selected by king Edred, and his mother Elgiva, to superintend the founding of the monastery of Abingdon,ⁿ of which he was the first abbot: from hence, but not without great reluctance on his part, he was selected to the pastoral government of his native city. He was consecrated on St. Andrew's eve, 963, by St. Dunstan, then Archbishop of Canterbury,^o under whom he had studied at Glastonbury. St. Ethelwold was most assiduous in the discharge of his sacred duties, and in an unexampled charity, one memorable instance of which still remains upon record.^p During a severe famine, he caused all the church plate to be sold, in order to purchase provisions for the poor, remarking that the church, if reduced to poverty, might again be enriched; but that if the poor were starved, it was not in the power of man to recall them to life. In the exercise of his various duties, he shewed his talents for sacred architecture; besides the churches and monasteries which he built and founded in other parts of the kingdom, as at Ely, Peterborough, and Thorney, he rebuilt this cathedral, which he lived to finish and dedicate, enriching it with the magnificent shrines of St. Swithun, Birinus, Brinstan, and other saints, whose relics he solemnly translated!^q On this occasion he built the crypts or vaults under the east end of the church, which still remain as he left them.^r Neither did he confine his good deeds to the ecclesiastical establishment of this place. The city having suffered the greatest inconveniences from the want of water, which then flowed in one current only at the eastern end, St. Ethelwold at a great expense caused different canals to be cut, and thus distributed water throughout the greater part of it.^s

^b There are many chronological difficulties and discordant opinions respecting the vacancy in question, and the different bishops about this period. The former are discussed at length by H. With regard to the latter, the bishops, Helyn names one St. Athelm, alias Bartulf, in 888; but Le Neve makes two bishops of them, whom Gale follows with a most singular confusion of dates.

Finding that great irregularities had crept into his church, and that the lives of the married secular canons were by no means conformable to the rules and principles which, he thought, should be their guide, he determined upon expelling them, and introducing Benedictine monks in their stead. Convinced how impossible it was to reform them, he ordered a proper number of cowl to be brought into the choir in the midst of the canons, and after addressing them left it to their choice, either to put on those religious habits and embrace the monastic life, or quit the cathedral;^a three only were willing to remain on those conditions: the remainder were dismissed with a suitable provision, and replaced by monks from Abingdon; and it is stated that they afterwards attempted the life of the bishop by administering poison. St. Ethelwold died August 1st, 984, and was buried in this cathedral.^b Upon his death

ST. ELPHEGE the second, or the Martyr, was in his place consecrated bishop of Winchester by St. Dunstan, in the month of November of the same year. In his earlier days he had been a monk of Deerhurst in Gloucestershire, from whence he removed to Bath, where so many persons followed him, that forming them into a monastery, he laid the foundation for what afterwards became the cathedral of that city.^c There he introduced the most austere mode of life, which was still practised during the whole time he presided over this see, which having governed in the most exemplary manner during the space of twenty-two years, he was on the death of Alfric,^d the archbishop, much against his own inclinations removed to the see of Canterbury in 1006, whither he took with him part of the relics of St. Swithun. Upon his translation

KENULPHUS, otherwise called ELSIUS, who had been a monk of this cathedral, and afterwards abbot of Peterborough, was elected bishop of Winchester. He presided here but a very short time, dying the same year in which he was consecrated; he was buried in this cathedral, and was succeeded by

St. BRITHWOLD, alias ETHELWOLD, who died in 1015. The next bishop was

ALSINUS, or ELSINUS, chaplain to king Harold, by whom he was advanced to this see, where he sat seventeen years; and was translated to Canterbury,^e and succeeded here by

ALWYN, whose history has made such a figure in

stan, in the epistle quoted above, speaking of the advantage of that part of the river called the Lock Pond, which St. Ethelwold brought into the monastery of St. Swithun, and which still runs through the close, says, ^f For the whole of this account of Alwyn, as well as for all the more valuable part of the history of this cathedral, I am indebted to the researches of Dr. Milner. It is much to be wished that all our cathedrals could meet with such an indefatigable and accurate antiquary to elucidate their history, and rescue from oblivion the traces which may remain of their original architecture.

^l It is proper to state the historic evidence for and against this extraordinary event. It is not mentioned by the more ancient writers, Ailred Rievallensis, Henry of Huntingdon, William of Malmesbury, Roger Hoveden, or Symeon Dunelmensis. But it is related at length by Ranulphus Higden, in his Polychronicon, who wrote in the middle of the fourteenth century. About the same time, viz. in 1338, it was sung amongst other popular songs, relating to the history of Winchester, in the Prior's hall here, at the translation of Orleton to this see. MSS. Wolcsey, cited by Warton, Hist. of Eng. Poetry, vol. i. p. 89. The other evidences are rather of a later date, viz. Brompton, Knighton, Rudborne, Annal. Wint. and Harpsfield. Milner, i. p. 182.

^m It will be gratifying the taste or curiosity of some readers to mention other particulars of this singular history, contained in the accounts of our native authors, Rudborne and the annalist. See Ang. Sac. vol. i. p. 233, 290. They tell us, that Emma, having succeeded in her request to clear herself and bishop Alwyn by the fiery ordeal, came from the abbey of Wherwell to the cathedral church, and there spent the night preceding her trial in fervent prayer. The morning being come, the king, the bishops, and an immense multitude of persons of all descriptions assembled in the cathedral to be spectators of the event. The pavement of the nave being swept, nine ploughshares, red with heat, are placed in a line upon it; whilst Emma, having invoked the Almighty to deal with her accordingly as she is innocent or guilty of the crimes laid to her charge, prepares herself for the trial, by laying aside her robes, and baring her feet. She is then conducted to the glowing metal by two bishops, one having hold of each of her hands. In the mean time the vaults of the church thunder with the voices of the assembled multitude, who, in loud shouts, call upon the Almighty to save the royal sufferer, and their cries are echoed through the whole city by the crowds who were unable to gain admittance into the church. She herself, raising up her eyes to heaven, and slowly walking on, thus makes her prayer; 'O God, who didst save Susannah from the malice of the wicked elders, and the three children from the furnace of fire; save me, for the sake of thy holy servant Swithun, from the fire prepared for me.' In a word, she is seen to tread upon each of the burning irons, and is not even sensible that she had touched them, but addressing herself to the bishops, who had now led her almost to the end of the church, she exclaims, 'When shall I come to the ploughshares? They turn round and shew her that she has already passed them. The lamentations of the multitude then ceasing, the air resounds with acclamations of joy and thanksgiving still louder than their former prayers had been. The king alone is found overwhelmed with grief and bathed in tears, lying upon the ground in the choir; to whom Emma being conducted, he begs her forgiveness, in terms of the utmost humility and sorrow, for the injurious suspicions he had entertained concerning her, and the rigour with which he had treated her. Not content with this, he requires of her and the bishops then present, to strike him with a wand which he presents to them. She accordingly gave her son three blows, when, having embraced him, both she and bishop Alwyn were put into full possession of their former rights and property, and ever after enjoyed the royal favour and respect in the degree they merited. Such is the substance of what is related at length by the two ancient historians of Winchester quoted above. Note by Milner, p. 188.

ⁿ The names of Emma's nine manors were, Brandesburg, Bergefield, Fyffhyde, Hoghtone. Mychelmeryshe, Iyngheho, Wycombe,

Portland, Waymouth, and Wyke. Alwyn was a zealous partizan of Harold; and was so forward in promoting his service and interests, that he even accompanied him with twelve of his monks to the fatal battle of Hastings, which afterwards nearly proved the ruin of the abbey, when the Norman dominion was soon after established. Alwyn died in 1047, and was succeeded by

STIGAND, who is suspected of having caused himself to be nominated to this see, as he did five years afterwards to that of Canterbury, by sinister means, and he contrived to hold them both together.^a This, with other charges that were proved against him in the council, held at Winchester in 1070,^b under Ermenfred, bishop of Sion, the pope's legate, caused him to be then solemnly deposed; he was, by order of the king, soon after committed to the castle at Winchester, where he remained a close prisoner for life.^c

WALKELIN, chaplain^d and related to William the Conqueror, and by birth a Norman, was, upon the deprivation of Stigand, nominated to this see on Whitsunday 1070, and consecrated the Sunday following, by Ermenfred the pope's legate. On his first appointment he formed the intention of ejecting the monks of this cathedral, and restoring the secular canons: but from this he was dissuaded by Lanfranc, then archbishop of Canterbury; with whom he joined in the arduous task of reforming the monks, whom he obliged to conform strictly to the rule of St. Benedict. He succeeded in getting his brother Simeon elected prior, and, with his assistance, had the satisfaction of seeing his design completed to the utmost of his wishes. In the year 1079, he undertook to rebuild entirely the cathedral and adjoining monastery at his own expence, and in a magnificent style of architecture. The following anecdote, connected with this arduous undertaking, is related by the annalist before mentioned. The bishop, in the course of the building, found himself much distressed for timber, and requested the king to grant him a supply of that article from some of the royal forests. The king immediately granted him as much timber as he could cut and carry away in three days from his wood of Hanepinges, now called Hempage, about three miles from Winchester, on the road to Alresford. The bishop, fearing that the fabric would scarcely be ever finished from the great consumption and scarcity of timber, resolved to make the most of this royal grant. Accordingly he collected all the assistance in his power, and within the period allowed him cut down and carried away every tree that the said wood contained,^e to the no small surprise and displeasure of the king, who, in passing that road shortly after, found the whole laid waste. The work was carried on with such application, that we find the monks, in the presence of almost all the bishops and abbots of England, came in great joy and triumph from the old monastery to the new one, in the year 1093,^f and at the feast of St. Swithun, the shrine of that Saint was in solemn procession translated from the old to the new church, and there placed with much devotion. The next day the bishop's workmen began to demolish the old monastery, which was all pulled down that year, except one porch and the great altar, which seems, says Dr. Milner, to have been the corresponding part or eastern end of the cathedral church. When he had completed this wonderful undertaking, which, for ever withstanding the ravages of time,^g must render his fame immortal, he devoted the remainder of his days to devotion and acts of mortification, living constantly with his monks. He died in the year 1098, just after William Rufus, who was in Normandy, had sent to him a peremptory demand for an instant supply of an enormous sum of money. He was buried in the nave of the cathedral, at the bottom of the steps which lead into the choir. Rufus immediately seized upon the bishopric, and kept possession of it until his death, which happened two years afterwards.

Henry, the younger brother of Rufus, immediately upon his accession to the throne, named to this vacant see his chancellor,

WILLIAM GIFFORD, a man of great learning and merit; but on account of the celebrated controversy^h concerning the receiving of ecclesiastical investitures from lay persons by the pastoral staff and the ring, he was not consecrated till seven years afterwards, viz. in 1107, by St. Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury. Towards the close of his government, a dispute arose between him and his monks respecting an alleged misapplication, or rather alienation, of some of their revenues. Through the interference of the king, this contest was happily settled, and Gifford appears afterwards to have lived upon the best terms with them, receiving the religious habitⁱ amongst them in the cathedral church, as the epitaph^k engraved on his tomb-stone testified. He died in the year 1129, and was succeeded the same year by

HENRY DE BLOIS, the king's nephew, being son of the Conqueror's daughter Adela, and brother of king Stephen. He had been abbot of Bermondsey, and was then abbot of Glastonbury, in the history of which abbey an account has been given of him previous to his election to this see.^l He was appointed in October 1129, and consecrated here by William archbishop of Canterbury on November 17 following. He was a firm friend to his brother during those troublesome times, and in 1141 made use of the church's thunder against the empress Maud; and by some writers the burning of the city, monastery, and twenty other churches is laid to his charge, the spoils of which he is said to have put in his own pocket; but, from having taken the unpopular side in the civil war, his virtues, of which he possessed a great number, have been too much underrated; and his failings and vices, of which he was not entirely free, too much magnified. He was certainly a watchful guardian^m of his cathedral church and monastery, having recovered much property that had been unjustly alienated from it, and increasing it by many presents of his own, particularly in his later days, by which and his other charities he reduced himself so low as scarcely to be able to procure for himself and his servants one slender meal in the day.ⁿ He much improved the building of the cathedral, and collected together the remains of the illustrious personages who had been interred in it, into mortuary chests, which he disposed round the sanctuary.^o He died in the year 1171, and was buried before the high altar in the cathedral. King Henry kept the see vacant three years, in order that he might enrich himself by receiving the profits of it. At length he permitted the monks to proceed to an election, whose choice fell upon

RICHARD TOCLIVE, or OF ILCHESTER, archdeacon of Poitiers: who, although he was almost immediately installed, was not consecrated till the following year 1174. He had taken in the civil wars a decidedly opposite line of conduct to that of his predecessor, for which indeed at one time he was excommunicated. After his election he conducted himself with great moderation, and attention to his several duties, and was appointed chief justice of the kingdom. He died 1189, and was buried on the north side of the presbytery in this cathedral, where his tomb is still to be seen with the following epitaph:

GODFREY DE LUCY, son of Richard de Lucy, then chief justice, succeeded to the government of this see. He rebuilt, in the Gothic style, the eastern end of the church, which was of Saxon workmanship, and had been permitted by bishop Walkelin to remain.^a In benefitting the city, he enlarged the revenues of the see; for he restored "the navigation of the river Itchen, not only from the port of Northam (the old Southampton) as far as Winchester; but also to the very head of that river^b in the neighbourhood of Alresford; where, by raising a vast mole or head, he formed a great lake, now called Alresford Pond, by which means a vast quantity of marshy land in that neighbourhood was drained, and a reservoir of water was provided for supplying the navigation. This vast and expensive work, which shews the greatness of bishop Lucy's genius as well as of his beneficence, was not finished until the beginning of the following reign, when he obtained for himself and his successors the royalty of the said river from the lake of Alresford down to the see; which his successors still enjoy, as likewise a charter for collecting certain duties upon this navigation."^c Godfrey died in 1204, and was interred here in our Lady's chapel.

PETER DE RUPIBUS, through the favour of the king, succeeded to this see, and was consecrated at Rome in 1204. He had before served under king Richard in his wars with great credit, and received the honour of knighthood.^d Upon the death of William earl of Pembroke, who was guardian of the king's person and protector of the realm during his minority, this bishop, with the approbation of the nobility, succeeded to that charge. It cannot be wondered that in this eminent station he should be beset with rivals and enemies; the most active of whom was the famous Roger Bacon,^e by whom and Hugo de Burg, then chief justice, he was at last supplanted in the young king's favour in 1227, and obliged to retire from the kingdom. On his return home from the Holy Land, where by his prudent advice he had much assisted the Christian cause, he was received by his monks in solemn procession, and succeeded soon afterwards in reinstating himself in the king's favour; which, however, he did not retain long, for about two years afterwards he was obliged even to fly to the cathedral^f for safety from Henry's indignation. He was then induced, at the earnest solicitations of the pope, to go abroad and assist him in his distresses, in which his talents and dexterity were most conspicuous and successful. Finding his health decline, he returned home; and died^g in 1233, at his palace at Farnham, and was, according to his own request, buried with the utmost privacy in the cathedral.

Upon his death a violent and disastrous contention ensued between the king and the succeeding bishop. Henry was desirous of having William de Valentia, the uncle of his queen, elected to this see. The monks, who dreaded his appointment from his known ambitious and indeed sanguinary disposition,^h refused to elect him; but in the hope of soothing the king's anger, they successively chose two of the king's favourites, William de Raley bishop of Norwich, and Ralph Nevill bishop of Chichester. They were in consequence of this dismissed from the king's favour; and although William de Valentia died during the first year of this dispute, it was not until five years afterwards that peace was restored. The monks, however, still remained firm, notwithstanding the king had seized their temporalities, and continued inflicting various punishments upon them. They again elected shut against him by order of the king. Fulminating therefore an interdict upon the cathedral with the other churches of the city, and an excommunication against the mayor and bailiffs, with those monks and clerks who opposed his entry, he retired to France.ⁱ The following year the king was reconciled to him, dining with him, and giving him the kiss of peace. Having occasion to go abroad in 1250, he died at Tours,^k and was buried there in the cathedral of St. Martin.

ETHELMARUS, son of Hugh earl of March, and Isabella relict of the late king, was at the earnest recommendation, or rather owing to the violent threats of the king, elected bishop by the monks, who had not yet forgotten the fatal effects of the royal displeasure in their former election. His conduct was so oppressive and tyrannical, that most of the monks left the cathedral and fled to other monasteries.^l He displaced William of Taunton the prior, who fled to Rome for redress, which he obtained from the pope, being restored by him and invested with the ensigns of a prelate, the mitre, the ring, and the crosier: a privilege, which was to descend to his successors, the priors of St. Swithun in this city, and which was very rarely granted to any religious under the rank of an abbot.^m At last, in the year 1258, at an assembly of the nobility at Winchester, Ethelmar and his two brothers were for their oppressions and general injustice expelled the kingdom.ⁿ Hereupon the monks chose Henry Wengham, then chancellor of England: but he declined accepting the dignity under the existing circumstances. Ethelmar died at Paris in 1260, and was buried in the church of St. Genevieve; but his heart, according to his own directions, was conveyed to this cathedral, where it was buried with the following inscription:^o

Saxum Parisiis morte datur tumulo. Ob. anno 1261.

A contention now ensued between the electors themselves respecting a successor, some of the monks electing their late prior William of Taunton, others Andrew of London, then prior.^p Both these candidates were rejected by the pope, who, by way of provision, as it was called, appointed and consecrated bishop of this see

JOHN DE GERVAISE, OF OF EXON, who had been chancellor of York. Siding with the barons in their rebellion against the king, he was suspended from his ecclesiastical functions by Ottobone the pope's legate;^q upon which he went to Rome, where he died in 1268, and was buried at Viterbo. "This bishop having died 'in curia,' or at the court of Rome, the appointment of his successor by the ancient ordinances of the canon law, belonged of right to the pope, who seems to have made a proper use of his prerogative on this occasion, by translating from the see of Worcester to this important diocese, a prelate who deserved a great character, both for his public and private virtues,"^r namely,

NICHOLAS OF ELY. He met with so much opposition in the discharge of his duties, from the deposed prior Andrew, who made an attack upon the cathedral and monastery with an armed force, that the king was necessitated to send two of his judges with a special commission to protect the bishop, and to preserve the peace of the city.^s He died in the year 1280, and by his own directions his body was buried at Waverley,^t and his heart deposited in this church, in the south side of the presbytery, with the following inscription:^u

refused to confirm his appointment, upon which they proceeded to a new election, when their choice fell upon Richard de la More, one of their archdeacons, and also sub-dean of Lincoln. He was admitted to the temporalities by the king; but the archbishop of Canterbury, John Peckham, refused his assent, on the ground of his being a pluralist. Robert thereupon went to Rome, where he succeeded in obtaining a dispensation from the pope, but the archbishop was so firm, that the bishop elect was set aside, and

JOHN DE PONTOYS, or DE PONTISSARA, who had been chancellor of Oxford, and archdeacon of Exeter, but who at that time was professor of the civil law in the city of Modena, was appointed bishop of Winchester by the pope, who caused him to be consecrated at Rome in 1282. He was a man of great learning and experience, and succeeded in terminating those dissensions which had so often arisen between the bishops and monks. The convent gave up to him certain advowsons, and he resigned to them certain manors.^a He died at Wolvesey in 1304, and was buried on the north side of the presbytery, under the chest containing the bones of Egbert, in a table monument half let into the partition wall, with the following epitaph:^b

Defuncti corpus tumulus tenet iste Joannis

HENRY WOODLOCK, alias DE MEREWELL, from the place of his birth, was unanimously elected bishop in the beginning of February 1305. He was prior of the monastery, and the first who had been elected from that situation to fill the episcopal chair.^c He was a most upright and conscientious prelate; and his behaviour towards his metropolitan when suffering under a severe persecution from the king, Edward the first, shewed how little he regarded either the favour or displeasure of the court, when his judgment marked out to him the line of conduct he ought to adopt; so that when he, with more zeal than caution, interposed to appease the royal indignation against the archbishop, Robert de Winchelsea,^d he was himself outlawed, and his effects were seized. Upon the death of the king however, his son, upon coming to the throne, restored them both, and was indeed crowned by our prelate. He died at Farnham in 1316, and was buried at the entrance of the choir of this cathedral.

JOHN DE SANDALL succeeded; he was a canon of York, and had been successively treasurer and chancellor of the kingdom. "This prelate," says Dr. Milner, "is not recorded for any thing that he performed in his diocese, but only for what he neglected to perform. Being taken up with his employment of treasurer, which required him to furnish the king with money for the war of Scotland, he contracted many debts on his own account, and suffered the episcopal houses to get out of repair." He died Nov. 2, 1319, at his palace in Southwark; but was not buried, as all his predecessors had been, in his own cathedral, but in the church of St. Mary Overy.^e Upon his death the monks proceeded to elect one of their own body, by name Adam, a man of extraordinary learning, contrary to the wishes of the king, who warmly recommended to them Henry de Burgwash. The pope, to whose decision it was referred, appointed by way of provision, his own legate in England,^f

REGINALD DE ASSERIO, who was accordingly consecrated by the bishops of London, Ely, and Rochester; the archbishop Walter refusing to perform the ceremony, because he considered this nomination of the pope as a stretch of his authority.^g He however held this dignity but for a very short period; and dying at Avignon, where the pope's court was, in 1323, John XXII, who was then pontiff, exercised the privilege of nominating as his successor, at the recommendation of Walter, archbishop of Canterbury,

JOHN DE STRATFORD, archdeacon of Lincoln, and canon of York. As the king had endeavoured to get his chancellor, Robert Baldock, archdeacon of Middlesex, appointed bishop, he ceased not to harass Stratford, outlawing him, and seizing upon the temporalities of his see.^h After his reconciliation Stratford proved himself a diligent and faithful minister; for which he was so persecuted by Mortimer, that he was obliged to fly from place to place for concealment, lest he should share the fate of the loyal bishop of Exeter, who had been beheaded for his fidelity to the late king. But upon the subsequent disgrace and punishment of his adversary, his loyalty was amply rewarded with different preferments, and at last, in 1333, by his promotion to the vacant see of Canterbury.ⁱ

ADAM DE ORLETON, upon the promotion of Stratford, was translated hither from Worcester. Whilst bishop of Hereford, he had been tried and found guilty of being one of the most active agents of the barons in the first war they raised against the king, for which he was deprived of all his property and banished.^k He afterwards joined the standard of queen Isabella against her husband, for which she procured him the bishopric of Worcester. He fortunately escaped punishment, when Mortimer and his adherents were condemned, and was even afterwards employed by Edward III. on an embassy to the court of France, where he induced king Philip to use his interest with the pope to nominate him to this see,^l which he did contrary to the wishes of the king, who recommended Simon Montague, and at the same time exposed all the crimes of Orleton, who wrote a long and artful defence, which is still extant.^m Edward at first refused to admit himⁿ to the possession of the temporalities, but he surmounted every objection at last, and took possession of the see in triumph. He lost his eye-sight some years before his death, which happened on the 18th July, 1345.

WILLIAM DE EDYNGTON was, at the request of the king, appointed bishop by the pope by way of provision; for the monks had elected one of their own community John le Devenish, (of whom some mention was made in the history of the life of St. Brithstan, a bishop of this see in the beginning of the tenth century,) who by way of compromise was constituted abbot of Canterbury.^o Upon the institution of the order of the garter in this reign, the king appointed his favourite, Edington, prelate of the order, which honour was to descend to his successors. He refused the see of Canterbury in 1366; shortly after which he died,^p and was succeeded here by one who has been "considered as by far the most renowned of all the bishops of Winchester, and is regarded in the city with a kind of religious veneration;

WILLIAM DE WYKEHAM; "his public works and beneficial institutions having," says Dr. Milner, "reached our own times, and extended to a class of men who hold in their hands the keys of the temple of fame."^q He is supposed to have derived his name from a neighbouring town where he was born, his father being either too mean to claim a surname, or too obscure to have it recorded. Our young clerk, however, proved the truth of his motto before he adopted it, that Manners (mores) or merit, makyth man. He was endowed from nature with transcendent talents, and began from his early youth to cultivate them with unrivalled diligence. His parents being in narrow circumstances, he was chiefly indebted for his education to the liberality of Nicholas Uvedale, lord of

The crime, which was objected to him was, his having joined in a league with other prelates and the nobility to oblige the king to keep the charters, which had been so often confirmed by him; for which he was interdicted the use of fire and water; and the king really expelled from their monastery all the monks of the cathedral of Canterbury, to the number of eighty, because they had, without his permission, conveyed to their prelate the means of subsistence.

^q The Editor hopes that in quoting this and other passages in praise of Wykeham, he shall be pardoned for expressing his gratitude to his pious and most munificent founder, and for acknowledging the pleasure he derives from the recollection of having been educated at Winchester college with so many ornaments in public as well as private life. He would willingly enlarge upon the praise of such a man, but Dr. Milner has done such ample justice to him, that he shall copy his account, and thus avoid all imputation of partiality.

the manor of Wickham, and constable of Winchester castle. This was conducted first at the place of his birth, and afterwards at a school in this city, which stood on the very spot where he afterwards founded his college. In the character of a student he was distinguished, not less by his piety than his diligence. He was accustomed every morning to frequent the cathedral church, and to dedicate the day by hearing the mass, which a good monk, by name Pekis, regularly performed there, in a certain chapel of the blessed Virgin. The pious sentiments which he had experienced upon this spot in his youth, seem to have determined him afterwards in the choice which he made of it for a sepulchre. The studies which he cultivated were arithmetic, mathematics, logic, divinity, and, above all, the canon and civil laws. It was chiefly, however, to his superior skill in mathematics, that he owed his fame and rise in the world. He was first taken into the service of his patron, Uvedale, as his secretary; in which situation he seems to have given the first specimen of his talents in the mathematical science, by repairing and altering the castle, of which Uvedale was at that time governor. It is certain, also, that he was for some time in the employment of his predecessor, bishop Edington; by whom he was ordained priest, and recommended to the notice of Edward III. His first office at court, which was that of surveyor of the king's works, points out the talents for which he was then most celebrated; and the buildings or repairs which he executed at Dover, Queenborough, Windsor, and other castles, gave ample scope for the exercise of them. His abilities were afterwards found to be equally calculated for the management of more important business; and he became successively secretary of state, keeper of the privy seal, chancellor, and, in short, the king's chief and confidential counsellor in the management of all public matters. In reward for his services, the king heaped ecclesiastical benefices in such profusion upon him, that we should condemn any other clergyman, except Wykeham, for accepting them; and we are only induced to excuse him, in consequence of the proofs we have still remaining, that he only received the revenues of the church with one hand to expend them in her service with the other. But the benefice, which the king seems long to have had in his eye for his favourite architect, was the see of Winchester, whenever it should become vacant. Accordingly, upon the death of Edington, he recommended Wykeham, in such strong terms to the monks, as a proper person to fill it, that they were unanimous in their election of him. The elect was no less acceptable to the pope than he was to the king; but the former having, in Edington's life time, reserved, as the canon law expresses it, the next appointment to this see, he refused to confirm the election of Wykeham; though, on the other hand, he appointed him, by a provisory bull, to the selfsame dignity. Being now one of the chief prelates of the English church, we are assured that he set about, with zeal and diligence, to fulfil the duties of his station; exciting himself to a religious fervor, practising an abstemious and mortified life, visiting the sick, relieving the wants of the poor, solving intricate cases of conscience, and propagating the morality of the gospel, not less by his example than by his discourses. Wykeham continued nine years after his consecration in high favour with his sovereign, and was employed by him in the principal affairs of state; when, in 1376, the old king being sunk into a voluptuous indolence and stupidity, he was undermined by the duke of Lancaster, who laid numberless misdemeanours to his charge, but principally that of having embezzled the public money which had been paid into his hands. In vain did he petition to be heard in his own defence, and to be allowed to explain in what manner all the sums in question had been spent in the public service. The revenues of this see were sequestered, and he continued under disgrace till nearly the death of Edward. Wykeham, having at length recovered his temporalities, returned to Winchester, where he was received in solemn procession. He then set about executing those great designs which he had planned for the permanent advantage of his diocese. These were, in the first place, the two famous colleges, which he built and endowed, one at Winchester and the other at Oxford, for furnishing his diocese with a constant supply of learned and pious clergy;^a which colleges were admirably adapted to combine their respective studies and discipline to the same important end, and mutually to relieve and support each other.^b In the second place, we must mention, not only his rebuilding the grand nave of the cathedral, which is generally known, but also his zealous efforts for reviving the strict discipline and edifying devotion of the monks and other clergy who served it; for which purpose he drew up a body of statutes, every way worthy of his prudence and zeal. His pastoral solicitude, however, extended not to them alone, but also to the other numerous clergy and religious of his diocese, whom he visited in person; and, in particular, he gathered together and supported a great number of monks, who in consequence of the dissolution of alien priories during the war with France, were left destitute and nearly in a starving condition.^c In a word, he rebuilt churches, repaired high roads, paid the debts of the insolvent prisoners, and performed so many great actions, that we are at a loss whether to admire him most as a statesman, a bishop, or a christian. He died in 1404, and was buried in a beautiful chantry, which he had prepared for himself in the cathedral; to the preservation and decoration of which due attention has at all times been paid by his grateful sons, the Wykehamists.^d To Wykeham succeeded

HENRY BEAUFORT, son of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster. He was translated hence from Lincoln, into which bishopric he had been thrust by pope Boniface IX. in a very arbitrary and irregular manner.^e Soon after his election to this see he was made a cardinal, of St. Eusebius, by pope Martin, June 23, 1426. He finished the cathedral, which was not completed by his predecessor; and however inattentive he might have been to the welfare and interests of his diocese in the earlier part of his government, towards the latter end of his life his whole thoughts seemed bent towards that end; and the collected, judicious, and pious dispositions made in his will,^f the codicil of which was signed but two days before his dissolution, may justly bring into discredit the opinion that he died in despair. He died April 11, 1447, and was buried in this cathedral, in the most elegant and finished chantry in the kingdom.^g kept in repair at the joint expence of Wykeham's two foundations, New College, Oxford, and Winchester College. virtues of such a man to preserve from plunder and destruction this opulent see, during the unfortunate civil wars which so distracted the nation at this period. Waynflete had been educated at Winchester College and New College in Oxford; he afterwards was head master of the former, from which he was taken by Henry III. to establish his new foundation of Eton upon the same plan. Immediately almost after his consecration, he began the foundation of that illustrious seminary of learning, which has hardly its equal in Europe for magnificence, Magdalen College in Oxford. He continued a firm partisan and supporter of his much injured friend and patron Henry VI. through all his troubles, from loyalty, gratitude, and every commendable motive; and he lived to witness the line of Lancaster restored in the person of Henry VII. to his great joy; and died at his palace at Waltham near this city in 1486, whence his body was brought to this cathedral, and buried in a sumptuous chantry,^a in the preserving of which his sons at Magdalen College are as gratefully careful, as the Wykehamists are of that of their munificent founder.

PETER COURTNEY, bishop of Exeter, and of an illustrious family of that name in Devonshire, was, at the request of the king appointed to succeed Waynflete, by means of the pope's provision. He had followed the fortunes of the now triumphant party, to join whom he had, with part of his family, emigrated to France. It does not appear that he was individually a benefactor in the least degree to this cathedral. He died the 2d of September, 1492,^b and was succeeded by

THOMAS LANGTON, bishop of Salisbury. He was famed for the fostering hand he always afforded to literature and learned men, for which Wood, in his Athenæ Oxonienses, calls him a second Macænas. Upon the death of Morton, archbishop of Canterbury, he was selected as the most fit person to fill that chair, to which he was actually elected;^c but a few days afterwards he was carried off by the plague, in the year 1500. He was buried in the chapel he had erected for this purpose, at the eastern end of the cathedral, which was once no less curious for its elegant workmanship, than it is still for its quaint devices.^d

RICHARD FOX, D.D., the chief of all the king's confidential friends and counsellors, was the next bishop. He had been bishop of Exeter, then of Bath and Wells; afterwards of Durham, from whence he was translated to this see. Upon finding himself, as some suppose, supplanted in the king's favour by Wolsey, he retired from public business to his diocese, devoting his whole time to the promotion of its welfare,^e and the performance of those acts which have rendered his name so memorable, of which the first to be named is the foundation and endowment of Corpus Christi College, in Oxford; though the great and beautiful works which he perfected, both within this cathedral and on the outside of it, will ever embalm his memory in this place. For ten years previous to his death, which happened in 1528, he was unfortunately deprived of his sight. He was buried in this cathedral, immediately behind the high altar in a chantry of the most exquisite workmanship, which he had prepared for that purpose. Upon his death

THOMAS WOLSEY, archbishop of York and a cardinal, held this see in commendam, to which he was installed 1529. He however soon afterwards lost the royal favour, and was stripped of all his offices and property, and he died in the following year on his journey to London, whither he had been sent for by the king as a prisoner. As he was so short a time bishop of this place, his history more properly belongs to the cathedral of York, where a particular account of him will be found. The last bishop to be mentioned, who presided here at the period of the reformation, and the dissolution of the monastery, was the celebrated null and void, was passed by Cranmer, May 22, 1533. The same year he went ambassador to the French king at Marseilles, to discover the designs of the pope and that monarch in their interview, of which king Henry was very suspicious; and upon his return home, being called, as other bishops were, to acknowledge and defend the king's supremacy, he readily complied and published his defence for it under this title "De vera obedientia."

STEPHEN GARDINER, L.L.D., who was appointed after the see had remained vacant almost four years. In consequence of his election, he assisted in the court, when the sentence declaring queen Catharine's marriage

The following description of this Cathedral is given by Stevens from Gale's History, page 21.

"This is one of the largest cathedrals in England, and very regular, though of that which is called the Gothic manner. The arches are all angled and supported by several small columns set together, being of the same diameter at the base as at the capital. In the whole, the structure is most magnificent, and much adorned by the beautiful painted windows, which suffered much by the outrageous pretended zeal of the grand rebellion against King Charles I.

"The whole length of this church, from east to west, is 545 feet, whereof our Lady's chapel at the east end, behind the choir, is 54 feet; from that chapel to the iron door above the steps, at the entrance into the choir, is 160 feet; from that iron door to the porch at the west end, 351 feet. The whole breadth of the church is 87 feet. The length of the choir 136 feet, the breadth 40.

"The font, which is of great antiquity, stands on the north side of the nave of the church, being a large square stone, of black marble, three feet three inches over, with a circular bason cut in it, supported by a plain stone pedestal. The sides of the square font are adorned with bass relieves, representing some miracles, as is supposed.

"There is an handsome ascent of steps up to the choir, which is separated from the body of the church by a beautiful frontispiece of stone, built between the two great pillars of the arch of the tower. The seats or stalls of the dean and prebendaries are very neat and ancient, adorned with gilded spire-work, and in the middle of the choir is an eagle on an high pedestal, whose back is used to lay the book on to read the lessons at divine service.

"On each side of the altar is a fine partition stone wall, curiously wrought, separating the presbytery from the north and south isles; and on the top of each of those walls are placed three shrines, or chests, curiously carved, painted and gilded, with a crown upon each, wherein are the bones of some Saxon and Danish kings, and some bishops. The first chest on the south side, with this inscription,

Edredus Rex, obiit anno 955.
Hic pius in tumulo Rex Edredus requiescit,
Qui has Britonum terras rexerat egregie.

That is,
King Edred died in the year 955.
Here rests the pious King Edred in his tomb,
Who notably governed these lands of the Britons.

The second chest has this inscription:

Edmundus Rex, obiit—
Quem Theca haec retinet Edmundum, suscipe, Christe, Qui vivente Petro Regia scepra tulit.

That is,
King Edmund died—
Receive, O Christ, Edmund, whom this chest contains,
Who swayed the Regal Scepter whilst Peter was living.

"The third chest did formerly contain the bones of the Danish king Canutus, and of the Norman, William Rufus. The tomb for the latter, of grey marble, is raised about two feet above the pavement, in the middle of the upper part of the choir, before the high altar, and his bones being chested were set up over the door on the top of the wall on the south side, as you come into the choir. On that chest was formerly this inscription:

Hic jacent ossa Cnutonis, & Willielmi Rufi.

Here lie the bones of Canute and William Rufus.

In the tomb above mentioned of king William Rufus, which was broken open by the rebels against king Charles I. was found the dust of that king, some relics of cloth of gold, a large gold ring, and a small silver chalice.

The first chest from the altar on the north side has this inscription upon it.

On the third chest was formerly this inscription :

That is,

Here lie the bones of Bishop Wina.

And on the north side of the coffin,

Hic jacet Stigandus Archiepiscopus.

But now the inscription upon it is,

That is,

In this chest, in the year of our Lord 1661, were promiscuously laid up the bones of Princes and Prelates, which had been scattered about with sacrilegious barbarity, in the year of our Lord 1642."

^a The reason of this inscription is, that in the aforesaid year, 1642, the rebels getting into this church, in their enthusiastic zeal took the bones of kings and bishops out of these chests, and made use of them to throw at, and break the fine painted windows. These royal remains have been here mentioned as such, but to descend to other monuments of persons of a lower rank, is what cannot be expected here, because the same might be expected in other churches, which would swell this work to several more volumes than are proposed, and be tiresome to the readers.

It must be added, that this cathedral was originally dedicated to St. Peter. Afterwards St. Swithin, bishop of this see, being in great veneration, it came by degrees to be called by his name; but king Henry VIII. gave it the title of the Holy Trinity.

A Catalogue of bishops of this see having been already given, we will now give the Catalogue of the Priors thereof, as being the heads of the Convent, mostly taken from the manuscripts of a gentleman, who, though he has a curious and valuable collection, and much learning, will not permit us to publish his name, yet is so much a friend to the public, as to grant the use of his study, and will be therefore often mentioned as Anonymous.

PRIORS OF THE MONASTERY OF WINCHESTER.

1. BRITHNOTH is the first prior of this place we meet with; for king Edgar being a religious prince, and perceiving, as the annals of the church of Winchester, in the Cotton Library, Domitian, A 13. inform us, that the secular clergy of that church were only canons by name, and neglected their duty of frequenting the choir, watching, and ministering at the altar; leaving the same to their vicars, who had but a wretched maintenance; the said canons scarce seeing their church once in seven years, by which means it was left naked within, and ruinous without, the poor vicars being destitute of means to support the same; king Edgar, I say, taking this into his consideration, after having in vain endeavoured to reclaim those wicked canons, turned them all out, and gave the church to the monks of St. Benedict, which Mr. Browne Willis calls introducing of monks by bishop Ethelwold, without mentioning the reason why the same was done, or taking notice of king Edgar, who was the prime agent, whereas the bishop was no otherwise concerned than as counsellors are in all matters of moment, wherein their sovereigns advise with them. In what year this prior Brithnoth came to this church does not appear; but about the year 970 he was appointed abbot of Ely, and succeeded in this priory by

2. BRITHWOLD, who about the year 1006, was preferred to the see of Winchester. His successor was

3. ELFRIC, a monk of the same monastery of Winchester, who in the year 1023, was promoted to the archiepiscopal see of York, and is there mentioned by the name of Alfric Puttoc, and said to have been a great benefactor to St. John of Beverley.

4. WULFSIG, is the next prior we find mentioned; but whether he was immediate successor to Elfric, or whether there was one between them, does not appear; but the time of his death is set down in 1065, which being 42 years after the translation of the other, there is reason to believe that he could not be so long prior, and that therefore the names of one or more that were between them have been lost.

5. SIMON, or SIMEON, was appointed successor to Wulfsig. He was brother to the famous bishop Walkelin, who built the present cathedral of Winchester, or at least so much of it, as rendered the same capable of having divine service performed in it. This prior was originally a monk of the great monastery of St. Ouen, at Roan in Normandy, and afterwards proved a considerable benefactor to this monastery of Winchester. He was in the year 1080 promoted to be abbot of Ely, and succeeded by

6. GODFREY, born at Cambay, in the Netherlands, but bred a monk in this house, famous for learning, and particularly for poetry, as still appears by some of his Epigrams, which may be seen in the Cotton Library under the title of Vitellius, A 12, besides which, he writ in praise of the then English prelates, epistles and other works, which have perished. He died in the year 1107. His successor was

7. GEFTRY, monk of the same house, of whom we have no more, than that he was deposed in the year 1111, by bishop William Gifford, and that dignity conferred on

8. GEFTRY II. But that this man was promoted by the bishop above-mentioned, does not appear, though modern authors affirm it, because it neither is, nor was then customary for bishops to appoint priors of monasteries, the election of such belonging to the community. However chosen, he continued here but till the year 1114, when he was preferred to the abbacy of Burton, in Staffordshire, and then

9. EUSTACE took his place, ruling the monastery till the year 1120, when he died.

10. HUGH was the next, who, it is likely, enjoyed it not long, for

11. GEFFRY III. his successor, died in 1126; after whom,

12. INGULPHUS, who was chosen abbot of Abington in 1130.

13. ROBERT held it till 1135, or 1136, when he was made bishop of Bath and Wells; but whether

14. ROBERT II. immediately succeeded the first is uncertain, because we find this second advanced to be abbot of Glastonbury in the year 1171; and for him to continue prior till that time, from the year 1136, is a great length of time.

15. WALTER, in 1175, or 1176, was made abbot of Westminster. I have not found him among the learned writers of this order, though he is said to have written the lives of William and Henry, bishops of Winchester.

16. JOHN lived no longer than till the year 1187. The next was

17. ROBERT III. surnamed Fitzhenry. He was elected abbot of Burton, and confirmed by the king in the year 1214.

18. ROGER, a Norman, succeeded him, the time of his death not known.

19. WALTER II. died in 1239.

20. ANDREW, a Briton, said by some to have been forced upon the convent by the king, but upon what ancient authority I know not, and that it was done to favour the election of William Valentine, says one, of the bishop of Valentia, says another; and there being no such bishop at that time, there seems to be no ground for such an assertion.

21. WALTER III. who not being regularly chosen, was excommunicated by the bishop, and thereupon voluntarily resigned his office in 1247.

22. JOHN de CAUZ, or CHAUCE, removed hence to be abbat of Peterborough in 1249.

23. WILLIAM TANTON, elected prior the same year, and in 1256 made abbot of Middleton in Dorsetshire, and in 1261 chosen bishop of Winchester by this convent; but the pope refusing to confirm him, he desisted from that right. When he removed to Middleton, he was succeeded by

24. ANDREW of LONDON, said by some modern authors, upon no better authority than that of Prynne, which is very inconsiderable, to have been forced upon the monks by bishop Ethelmar, assisted by the pope's authority, and yet afterwards to have been compelled by the monks, who would before have rejected him, to continue prior, and then again to have been turned out by Boniface archbishop of Canterbury. Such a contradictory account, and no better grounded, seems to have very little weight. All the certainty we can find, is, that he was prior till the year 1261, or 1262, when

25. RALPH BUSSEL, in whose time, that is, in the year 1264, the citizens of Winchester in a mutiny burnt the priory gate, and King's-gate, over which was a church of St. Swithin, as there is at this time. This prior died the next year after, being 1265. His successor was

26. VALENTIN, who having governed two years, resigned the dignity in 1267, but was restored to it, and would have resigned again, but was compelled to hold it till 1276. Whether he then died or resigned, does not appear, but he was succeeded by

27. JOHN de DUREVILLE, a Norman by birth, but monk of this house, died in December 1278.

28. ADAM de FARNHAM. The bishopric of Winchester being vacant in his time, and John archbishop of Canterbury visiting the diocese, this prior refused to submit to him; whereupon he was excommunicated; but submitting was again absolved, and continued in his dignity to his death, which happened in 1284.

29. WILLIAM de BASYNGE, the second of the name of William, resigned in 1284.

30. WILLIAM de BASYNGE, the second of the surname, and the third of the Christian name, ruled till 1295, when he died.

31. HENRY WODELOCK, alias MEREWILLE, having been prior till the year 1305, was then chosen bishop of the see of Winchester, and crowned king Edward II. the archbishop of Canterbury being then in exile.

32. NICHOLAS de TARENTE, was the next prior, who died in 1309.

33. RICHARD de ENFORD, succeeded Nicholas, and was prior in 1326; but when he died does not appear, nor when his successor was elected; but he was

34. ALEXANDER HERIARD, of whom we hear as presiding in 1332, and that he died in March 1349.

35. JOHN MERLAW, or MERLOW, governed from the same year till 1361, when the convent chose into his place

36. WILLIAM THUDDEN, the fourth of the name of William; but the bishop not consenting to his election, which had been without his knowledge, he was laid aside, and

37. HUGH BASYNG was preferred instead of him, and held it to his death, which happened in the year 1384.

38. ROBERT RUDBORN, doctor of divinity, confirmed the same year by bishop Wickham, and died in 1394.

39. THOMAS NEVIL, professor of divinity, and monk of this monastery, was confirmed the same year, but how long he presided does not appear, nor when

40. THOMAS SHYREBOURN was elected, or died; nor is there more certainty about his successor,

41. WILLIAM AULTON, the fifth of this Christian name, as to his election, but he died in 1450.

42. RICHARD MARLBURGH, confirmed the same year, and died in 1457.

43. ROBERT WESTGATE, presided from the afore-said year till 1470.

44. THOMAS HUNTON, succeeded and governed till 1498.

45. THOMAS SILKESTED, in whose time both the sees of Canterbury and Winchester being vacant, the convent of Canterbury made a visitation of this place, and found 35 monks, and the yearly revenue of the monastery was valued at 1000*l*. This prior was much in favour with bishop Fox, and assisted him in founding Corpus Christi College in Oxford, and in arching over the choir, presbytery, and side isles of this cathedral with stone, and adding many ornaments to the same. He also built the chapel, which still goes by his name, in the south isle, and his body is said to be there interred. He died in the year 1524, and was succeeded by

46. HENRY BROOK, professor of divinity, elected and confirmed the year above-mentioned, and was in possession in 1535, but when he died, or when his successor was chosen, I have not found. All that appears is that

47. WILLIAM BASYNG, the sixth of this Christian name, and the fourth of the surname, being also called Kingsmill, was the next prior of this monastery, and the last of them; for he was one of those that surrendered up their monasteries to king Henry VIII. in the year 1539, partly through fear, and partly through covetousness, being severely threatened on the one hand, and inveigled with fair promises on the other. That king, in the year 1540, instituting a new chapter to this church, consisting of a dean and 12 prebendaries, this same goodly prior became the first dean, and died in 1548.

The church, which was, as has been before said, at first under the invocation of St. Peter, and next of St. Swithin, was by this new charter entitled of the Holy and Undivided Trinity.

The following inventory will shew what wealth was sacrilegiously taken from this church, and by this may be guessed what was so taken throughout all England.

It is visible that there are in this inventory many errors, which it is likely are not in the original manuscript, and therefore must have been the transcriber's. I shall not enter into the particulars, because they are too obvious, and have only said thus much to clear myself from that imputation, having taken care to copy exactly from the author above-quoted.

Istum baptizavit sanctus Birinus episcopus. Baptizatur, ab eodem Birino, filius Kinegilst; Kinewalchus et omnes Saxones, ejusdem regni credentes, baptizati sunt. Iste dedit sancto Birino civitatem Dorocestram, ut sederet interim in ea donec conderet ecclesiam tanto sacerdote dignam, in regia civitate. In votis enim ejus erat in Wintonia edificare templum precipuum; et collectis jam plurimis ad opus edifici, terram totam ambientem Wintoniam, a centro Wintonie usque ad circumferentiam, ab omni parte linea exeunte, septem leucas habentem, edificande ecclesie in dotem dare disposuit; que quia letifera preventus egritudine per se complere non potuit, vicario usus est, vocatumque ad se filium suum Kinewalchum fecit jurare, coram sancto Birino, in animam suam, quod ipse ecclesiam, sede episcopali dignam, construeret in Wintonia, et terram, quam circumiverat, eidem ecclesie ad opus magistrorum ejus ex parte sua Deo offerret, et in jus perpetuum confirmaret.

Kinewalchus filius Kinegelsi rex Britonum. Iste post vexationes quas pertulit a Penda rege Merciorum propter repudium filie sue ecclesiam pulcherrimam construxit in Wintonia, et totam terram quam pater voverat ecclesie contulit et confirmavit.

Agilberto vero episcopo Dircacestrie, successore Birini, diffugiante ad votum regis sedem transferre Wintoniam, rex, qui linguam Agilberti, quia Gallus erat, parum noverat, fecit sibi nacta occasione sacrari in episcopum nove sedis quendam Saxonem nomine Wine, et divisa est una diocesis in duas. Apposuit Kinewalchus rex, post oblationem patris factam de Chiltecumba, de suo proprio dono ditare Wintonie ecclesiam, cui tria maneria scilicet Duntum, Alresford, et Wordiam contulit, et in illa humatus est.

Anno DCLXX. Escuinus cognatus Kinegelsi rex West-Saxonum. Iste humatus est Wintonie.

Anno DCLXXII. Centuinus Kinegelsi filius, de acquisito rex West-saxonum, Wintonie quiescit.

Ina rex West-saxonum postquam construxerat cenobium Glastonie, per manum sancti Aldelmi monachos imposuit. Iste cum Regina sua Ethelburga Romam petiit, ubi in plebeio habitu nulli hominum noti, labore manuum Deo viventes, post transitum suum qui fuerint, et cujus meriti miraculis ostenderunt; dicitur enim quod ad transitum utriusque, signa urbis intracta ab homine et intacta sonuerunt. Dederat iste rex Ina, dum esset in regno Westsaxie rex et omnia potens, ecclesie Wintoniensi in Vecta insula que nunc dicitur Wicht, in loco qui vocatur Ewerland xxx hidas terre et in Breedinga l. hidas.

Ethelardus rex Westsaxie. Hujus conjux Frithe-witha regina dedit Wintoniensi ecclesie Tantonam de suo patrimonio. Et ipse Ethelardus de sua parte addidit ad predictum manerium, ad opus ejusdem ecclesie, vij mansas.

Cutredus cognatus Ethelardi rex Westsaxie dedit in Vecta insula Wintoniensi ecclesie apud Muleburnam xl. hidas, et apud Banewadam xxv hidas, et apud Wippingeham xxii hidas, et terram que vocatur Drucam et manerium quod vocatur Clera.

Bernulfus rex Merciorum, regis Egberti deridens studia, experiri primus voluit, doctus plus valeat an indoctus dum luditur alea martis. Invitat et irritat exercitatum feriatum ad prelium vel ad faciendum sibi homagium. Consulti proceres Egberti quid decernerent eligendum, consultum ferro propulsare pudorem. Honestius esse decollari quam libera colla jugo submittere. Placet tempus in estate, locus apud Ellendone manerium nunc prioris Wintoniensis. Conveniunt reges ad pugnam cum dispari cultu et numero pugnatorum. Contra, quippe, centum milites Egberti pallidos et macilentos, Bernulfus habuit m. refectos et rubicundos, quales decet esse milites sancte Marie. Congrediuntur fortiter salutantes se de bene bonis. Mulctantur Mercii sine misericordia, tantoque vincendi vincuntur velocius, quanto qui minus noverant inconsultius se ingerunt periculo. Cadunt uberius quam grando vel pluvia, et tamen plures ex delicatis suffocantur sudore quam sanguine. Tota tellus tegitur cadaveribus hominum et equorum. Bernulfus ipse non jam rex Merciorum, sed mortuorum, qui nec superesse videt de tot modo millibus unum, fuga sibi consulens, pro iij. obolis nollet amisisse calcaria triumphato Bernulpho. Rex Egbertus regno Westsaxonum regnum Merciorum univit, in quo xvj pagi fuerant, scilicet Glocestresire, Wincestresire, Warwickshire, Cestresire, Derbesire, Staffordsire, Herefordsire, Drenefordsire, Buckingehamsire, Hartfordsire, Huntindunsire, Bedefordsire, Norhamtesire, Leicestresire, Lincolnsire, Snotingehamesire. Accepto homagio ac fidelitate sibi jurata ab omnibus. Mercii libere-tenentibus, rex Egbertus misit Ethulfum, filium suum, clericum, cum exercitu super Cantianos et Orientales Anglos, qui in brevi tempore, sine multo sanguine, utrumque regnum sibi subjugavit patri suo, et rediens duo illi diademata presentavit. Rex Egbertus, ultra progrediens, Eboracum cessit, super Norhumbros, et civitatem legionum super Britones, et utrumque regnum sibi subjiciens, ad ingressum Scotie restitit, ut heredibus suis aliquid relinqueret acquirendum. Revertens inde Wintoniam, mandavit omnibus majoribus regnorum que conquisierat, ut convenirent ad illum die certo Wintoniam; veniunt Wintoniam clerus et populus, et assensu omnium partium coronatus est Egbertus in regem totius Britannie. Edixit, illa die rex Egbertus ut insula in posterum vocaretur Anglia, et qui Tuti vel Saxones dicebantur, omnes communi nomine Angli vocarentur. Post cetera non est oblitus pro collato sibi honore Deo gratias reddere, qui dedit Deo et Wintoniensi ecclesie in Vecta insula apud Cawelburnam xxx hidas, apud Scaldefletam xlij hidas et iij villas, scilicet, Drokeireford, Wordiam, Aweltonam et Beddintunam.

Egbertus plenus dierum mundo valefaciens, Ethulfum filium suum, non jam Westsaxonum, sed totius Anglie regem, testatus est; sepultusque est in ecclesia Wintonie.

Rex Ethulfus, a Roma reversus, totam terram de dominico suo decimavit, et decimam quamque hidam contulit conventualibus ecclesiis, per regionem. Et hoc factum est, ut totam ex integro terram de Childecomba nomine decime pro una sola hida Wintoniensi ecclesie restituerit, quam Kinegilsus et Kinewalchus reges prius dederant, sed inter istius et illorum tempora alienata fuerat ab ecclesia; dedit etiam idem rex Ethulfus, eidem Wintoniensi ecclesie ad augmentum Tantonie C. et xlij hidas terre, et ij maneria, scilicet Brichtwellam et Wembergum eidem contulit ecclesie, in qua et sepultus est.

Leges Britonum rex Elvredus transtulit in Anglicum, que tunc dicebantur leges Regis Elvredi, et multos libros transtulit eodem modo. Iste instituit Hundredos et Tithingas ad latrones investigandos. Iste condidit duo monasteria, unum in Etheligenie, ad opus monachorum, et alia in Seftheria, ad opus sanctimonialium. Iste fecit in Wintonia, in cimiterio episcopalis ecclesie, novum monasterium, quod, multis ditatum possessionibus, sancto Grimbaldo dedit, ut sic illum retineret in Anglia. Iste regnum Anglorum, ante dies suos rude et incompositum, totum erudit et informavit ad regulam. In proverbii ita enituit ut nemo post illum amplius. Rex Elvredus sepultus est in novo monasterio apud Wintoniam. Iste Elvredus dedit ad augmentum Tantonie villam, que dicitur Rinctune ad opus Wintoniensis ecclesie.

Edwardus filius Elvredi rex Anglie. Hujus filia fuit sancta Edburga, cujus sacrum corpus in Wintonia requiescit apud Nunnemestre sine fallacia, licet Monachi de Malverna se falso jactitent illud habere. Tres filios habuit, successores reges, Ethelstanum, Edmundum et Edredum. Iste dedit ecclesie Wintoniensi iij maneria, scilicet, Hussebunam, Witchurche, Owertonam et unam Stokam, dedit et novo monasterio, quod pater suus erexit in Wintonia, predia multa, in quo quiescit humatus.

Edredus frater Edmundi rex Anglie. Iste pre omnibus antecessoribus suis Deum timuit, et ideo omni qua voluit sorte beatus erat. Pacem voluit et pacem habuit. Tantam illi Deus gloriam contulerat ut cum nullum hominum suorum terreret, ab omnibus solo amore timeretur. Iste ad extrema veniens, sanctum Dunstanum abbatem Glastonie mandavit adesse. Ad quem vir Dei properans audivit vocem de celo dicentem sibi in cundo: "Rex Edredus modo migravit ad dominum." Jumentum cui Dunstanus insidebat ad hanc vocem cecidit exanimatum, corpus ejus in Wintoniensi ecclesia sepultum est, cui adhuc vivens dno maneria dudum amissa restituerat, scilicet Duntonam et Hesseburnam.

Edgarus frater Edvii filius Edmundi rex Anglie. Sicut eadem terra malas herbas et bonas nutrit, et urtica proxima sepe rosa est, sic ex uno patre Edmundo duo filii Edvius pessimus et Edgarus optimus processerunt. In ortu Edgari sanctus Dunstanus angelicam vocem audivit in hec verba, Pax Anglie non deerit quamdiu puer iste regnaverit. Non fuit in Anglia monasterium sive ecclesia cujus non emendaret cultum vel edificia. In Wintoniensi ecclesia et novo monasterio quod nunc ab eventu dicitur de Hida, monachos posuit loco clericorum, quia clerici illi nomine tenus canonici, frequentationem chori, labores vigiliarum et ministerium altaris vicariis suis utcumque sustentatis relinquentes, et ab ecclesie conspectu, ne dicam Dei, plerumque absentes septennio, quicquid de prebendis percipiebant locis et modis sibi placitis absumebant. Nuda fuit ecclesia intus et extra, quia vicarii non habebant unde eam vestirent et tegerent, nec prebendarii, qui persone dicebantur, talibus poterant intendere: vix inveniretur unus et is sorte coactus qui vel pauperem pallam aut calicem quinque solidorum conferret altari. Rex Edgarus ista considerans et dolens tam divites eleemosynas collatas ecclesie, non in ecclesia, non in ministris ecclesie, non in pauperibus expendi, mandavit trasonibus et sepe consuluit, per episcopum eorum Ethelwoldum et per Dunstanum archiepiscopum, ut bona ecclesie non sine causa percipientes, in ecclesia cujus se personas confitebantur, in propria persona Deo servituri perpetuo facerent stationem. Canonicis mandata Regis et monita surda aure transeuntibus, et nolentibus singulis pro annuo canone mille librarum auri vel per annum esse claustralibus, rex instans proposito, et malens per canonicos quam per aliud genus artioris religionis administrari negocium, ablatas quibusdam eorum prebendas, contulit vicariis quos viderat in ecclesia perstantes assiduo, sed et illi promoti in personatum vicarios sibi facientes, facti sunt similes vel vagaciores et seculariores prioribus. Rex itaque circa correptionem canonicorum nichil proficiens postquam jejuniu fregit in illis, de ecclesia et de novo monasterio illos ejiciens, monachos in locis illorum constituens, illorum dispersionem istorum congregationem a Papa Johanne xij. ratam haberi meruit et confirmari. Hiis ita factis, rex Edgarus novum monasterium ampliavit possessionibus, et Wintoniensi ecclesie dedit manerium quod dicitur Awintonia, et apud Itinstokam x. hidas, et apud Madanlegam iij. hidas, et apud Breoudunam xij. hidas, et apud Aderingefeldam ij. hidas, et apud Drucan vij. hidas.

tima sua regina, et Ethelredum ex relicta Athelwoldi comitis filia. Qui Athelwoldus Wintoniensi ecclesie villam que Wili dicitur dederat, quem rex pulcre uxoris gracia in foresta de Werewll telo transiecerat. Non fuit ille primus nec erit novissimus qui doluit aut dolebit sue uxoris pulcritudinem. Vidimus et nos aliquem pro pulcra uxore sua aliquid pertulisse.

Edwardus filius Edgari rex Anglie. Istum casu a venatione reversum ut erat in equo, noverca sua illa Athelwoldi ducis relicta et necis occasio, inter amplexus et oscula dato sitiendi poculo per satellitem sica transfodit. Qui cum quantis poterat anime reliquiis mortis auctricem fugiens et sonipedem calcaribus urgens, uno pede lapsus altero tractus, defluente sanguine, se querentibus ubi mortem exceperat et quo eum equus traxerat dedit indicia. Equus cui insederat cum sella cruentata currens ad locum qui dicitur Edwardestowe, ibi restitit, ubi usque hodie in memoriam martyris eadem sella servatur. Corpus vero occisi primo apud Waram, et postea apud Sefteberi conditum, multis frequentatum est et honoratum miraculis.

Etheldredus frater Edwardi martyris rex Anglie. Hujus mater Elfrida, tacta tandem dolore cordis intrinsecus quod rex Edwardus per illam, et dux Ethelwoldus pro illa occubuerant, construxit monasterium monachorum in Werewlla, et ibi mirabiliter penitens consummata est.

Rex Cnutus dedit Wintoniensi ecclesie terram trium hidarum que vocatur Hille, et feretrum ad reliquias sancti Birini magnum et magni, et candelabrum argenteum cum vj. brachiis qualia modo videmus in ecclesiis preciosissima de auricalco, et ij. signa, et in eadem ecclesia sepultus est.

Hiis temporibus Emma regina morabatur Wintonie multum familiaris Elwino Wentane tunc civitatis episcopo. Omnia in regno potens plurimis referta divitiis, solo contenta filio qui regnabat, et soli intenta pontifici quem colebat; Eluredi casum scire nolebat, et Edwardo exuli nichil penitus boni faciebat. Non deerant qui in Neustriam nunciarent Edwardo fratris interitum, Godwini maliciam, matris cum episcopo suspectam familiaritatem, episcopum esse in causa precipuum, quod mater filiorum suorum alterum non fleret, alterum non exhiberet.

Emma regina, mater Hardecnuti, pro anima ejus, dedit Wintoniensi ecclesie, plurima ornamenta in auro et argento, in gemmis et vestibus preciosis, et duo maneria, scilicet, Westwde et Parimparmustier.

Habebat enim regina illa multa maneria que Ethelredus rex illi in dotem dederat, et Cnutus, et Hardecnutus reges, in jus hereditarium confirmaverant, quibuscunque vellet assignanda locis vel conferenda personis.

Rege defuncto, regni cura, regine assensu, et magnatum consilio, comiti Godwino committitur donec qui dignus esset, eligeretur in regem.

Edwardus, filius Emme, diuturno confusus exilio et tribus ducibus consanguineis suis, Ricardo et Ricardo et Roberto jam defunctis, nullum habebat amicum in Neustria, Willielmo filio Roberti ducis juvenculo, morante cum rege Francorum in Galliis. De matris eciam nichil audens sperare misericordia, inter desperandum, tutius credebat manifesto supplicare inimico, quam fictum amicum sine causa sollicitare, unde relicta Neustria, navigans Angliam, cum appulsus esset in portam Hamonis, divertit a matre sua que tunc erat Wintonie, et ad emulum suum et fratris interfectorem Godwinum pertendit Londonias. Ubi, matutina cujusdam hora diei, quesito ad cubile illius ingressu prostravit se solo in modum crucis coram Godwino jam vigilante, cui Godwinus; Quis et cujas miser es et quid hic queris? Surge ut te inspiciam. Ad hec Edwardus: Ego (inquit) quidam pauper sum servus tuus sine meritis meis exul ab adolescentia, da michi obsecro capud, et patriam, et fletu multo commendavit orationem. Godwinus tunc semel ad instanciam et flentis et supplicantis factus misericors, cum juramento quod semper servare solebat inviolabile, dixit ei, surge, surge, securus esto, per vultum de Lukes, non morieris: Quisquis es fateri non verearis. Et ille, ego sum, inquit, Edwardus Ethelred, novissimus filiorum. Inveniam oro gratiam in oculis tuis. Cui Godwinus: Prevenisti me bono tuo, quod juravi non erit irritum. Ego ero tibi in patrem, et tu eris michi in filium, jura michi in deum et in animam tuam te filiam meam accepturum in conjugem et me primum semper moraturum in regno, et ego dabo tibi regnum Anglie. Juravit, et receptus in osculum, jussus est preire illum Wintoniam, nulli hominum nec ipsi matri sue se notum facere. Venit Edwardus, plebeio amictus habitu, Wintoniam, quandoque in curia matris, quandoque in domo episcopi comedens, sed ignotus, affectus eorum sedulus explorabat. Mandatur a Godwino in regione omnes majores regni ad reginam convenire Wintonie, de rege constituendo consilium habiturus.

Godwinus juxta reginam ad levam ejus residens, propter archiepiscopos qui tenebant dextram, et ante pedes suos Edwardum habens velatum faciem, post plurimas allegationes protensa manu capud Edwardi, nesciente regina mysterium, discooperuit, et erigens illum coram omnibus supra modum stupentibus, Ecce, inquit, rex vester. Iste est Edwardus filius hujus Emme regine et Ethelred regis Anglorum. Hunc ego in regem eligo, huic ego omnium primus homagium facio.

Post disceptaciones aliquas consentitur in electionem, quia etsi aliquibus displiceret, nemo tunc temporis, quod Godwinus volebat fieri, presumebat contradicere.

Edwardus filius Ethelredi, rex Anglie. Iste ut electus et consecratus est Wintonie. Iste accepit in conjugem Weditham filiam Godwini, ab utroque perpetua virginitate servata. Godwinum ante omnes homines honorabat, matrem suam nec colebat nec publice confundebat. De Neustria accersivit quosdam qui sibi benefecerant exultanti, inter quos et Robertum quem prius episcopum Londoniensem, et postea fecit archiepiscopum Cantuariensem. Hujus archiepiscopi crebras suggestiones rex Edwardus mente revolvens, ad tantum acerbitatis perductus est, vir mali nescius, ut Godwinum comitem, qui illum regem fecerat, cujus filiam desponderat, de regno conciliis suis expelleret, et honores eorum inimicis eorum tribueret; matri sue Emme regine, quicquid in hoc mundo possederat, usque ad precium quadrantis auferret, et illam in abbacia de Warewlla retrusam cum summa parcitate faceret exhiberi; Alwinum Wentanum episcopum, matris, ut dicebatur, amasium, omnibus patrimonii sui prediis spoliatum, extra terminos civitatis Wentane proferre pedem sub capitis periculo prohiberet.

Godwinus cum filiis suis regnum egreditur. Alwino episcopo sedes sua mutatur in carcerem. Regina apud Warewllam custodie tradita, sed minus artam quam filius dictaverat habens custodiam, permissa est scribere omnibus episcopis quos sibi fidos crediderat et dolores suos exponere. Forma scriptorum talis erat, "Sede pontificis dedecore plus torqueri et erubescere quam de proprio, paratam se Dei probare judicio pontificem injuste diffamatum nunquam carnem suam tetigisse, nunquam se vel illum contra regem aliquid egisse vel agere voluisse. Accederent ad regem episcopi; et intercederent pro coepiscopo, inducerent modis omnibus illum, ut matris pro se et episcopo purgationem reciperet. Bonam conscientiam publice impetitam de crimine non debere nisi publica satisfactione purgari. Placere sibi candentis ferri examen. Tantum apponant ut rex jubeat examen fieri in ecclesia sancti Swithuni Wintonie, securam se esse de sancti suffragio pro consciencie testimonio. Si in exequendo negotio moram fecerint se morituram, ne paupertas sua rideatur diutius, quia

Quam quod ridiculos homines facit.

Regem filium suum si plus eligat nec convictam nec confessam matrem punire quam purgationem ejus admittere, ab omnibus hominibus infamandum;

Omne etenim vicium tanto conspectius in se

Filius matrem persequitur, rex reginam qui et manum misit in Christum Domini."

Singuli episcoporum ad quos regina scripserat, rescriptis se invicem consuluerunt, et die condicto convenientes ad regem, convenerunt eum super querelis sue matris et precibus.

Rex Edwardus ut erat mire simplicitatis et innocencie qui nichil umquam egit perperam nisi ex alterius suggestionem, allegationibus episcoporum se sustinisset facillime superari, et quicquid in matrem aut episcopum falsa seductus credulitate crudelitatis admiserat, non solum sine recipienda satisfactione purgatoria temperasset, immo ipse veniam petiturus ad arbitrium episcoporum de presumptione satisfecisset, nisi Robertus archiepiscopus quem rex adsciverat obstitisset. Tanti fuit homo ille in oculis regis ut si diceret nigram cornicem esse candidam, rex citius ori illius quam oculis suis crederet. Consummatum fuisset ipsa die negotium ad honorem matris et filii, nisi cum assisterent filii Dei coram domino, affuisset inter illos etiam ille Satan.

"Convenistis fratres dominum meum regem pro matre sua fera non femina, et ut vobis parcam, non vestris sed illius verbis retorquetis crimen matris in filium.

En scelus ecce Jovem placidum nimis, hanc nimis ausam, Que sceleris tractat coram Jove de Jove causam.

Ausa est impudentissima mulierum in regem minas diffamationis evomere, et illum frequentatorem suum qui scit simulare sanctitatem, qui de virtute locutus clunem agitat, illum cujus ad effigiem non tantum meiere fas est; ut regem reum sacrilegii faceret, ausa est Christum domini nominare. Notate maliciam mulieris, ad hoc tantum Edwinum suum Christum Domini nominavit, ut rex qui manum misit in illum pro sacrilegio plecteretur. Sed accedamus ad causam. Femina vult purgare pontificem, et quis purgabit eam que dicitur consensisse in necem filii sui Eluredi et procurasse venenum Edwardi? Sed esto, quod auctoritatem habeat supra sexus conditionem quia regina est, si vultis ut consenciam in inauditam a seculis purgacionem, et vos consentietis ut ego disponam genus examinis, quod si penitus illesa pertulerit, me in Deum et regem reum condempnabit, honore privandum, et purgatis honores pristinos restituetis. Totam culpam regis quam nullam esse presumo in me recipio. Non vos suspendam diutius. Femina illa infamis pro se ipsa iv. pro episcopo v. scilicet ix. continuos passus super ix. ignitos vomeres faciat nudatis pedibus. Si titubaverit, si singulos vomeres pleno pede non presserit, si quantumcumque lesa fuerit, sententia proferatur in mecum et fornicariam, uterque religionis artissime perpetuo claustrum recludatur in carcerem. Noveritis etiam quod plus de indulgentia quam de rigore procedit sententia, que non dicam decernit sed sustinet pedali examine crimen capitale purgari."

Placere videbatur et regi et episcopis quod archiepiscopus decreverat, et die nominato statuitur convenire Wintoniam.

Regina de mandato regis reducta est Wintoniam de Warewlla, et tota nocte proxima precedente diem agonis sui pervigilavit ad sepulchrum sancti Swithuni. Non est opus ut dicam quod toto corde oraverit, quod parum nocte illa dormierit, quot vota fecerit ut in tanto meretur salvari discrimine. Et tamen dormire nolens dormitavit paululum, et vidit beatum Swithunum sibi assistentem et hec audivit dicentem sibi: Constans esto filia. Ego sum Swithunus quem invocas: ego tecum sum, ne paveas. Confundentur qui te persequuntur quia cum transieris per ignem flamma non nocebit te. Tu autem remittes hanc noxam filio tuo.

Die facto, convenit ad ecclesiam clerus et populus, et rex ipse sedebat pro tribunali; regina producitur ante filium, et an velit prosequi quod promiserat convenitur; que,

Postquam femineo rediit mens mota stupore,
Gracia verborum tenero distillat ab ore.

Domine (inquit) et fili. Ego illa Emma que te genui, pro te de tuis impetita de crimine in te et Eluredum filios meos, et de consensu turpitudinis et proditiōnis cum hujus sedis episcopo, invoco hodie Deum testem in corpus meum ut peream si quid horum que michi imposita sunt vel mente commiserim.

In pavimento ecclesie scopato ix. vomeres, igne candentes, ponuntur in ordine. Quibus breviter benedictis, subtrahuntur regine calcei et posito peplo et rejecto clammine, succincta a duobus hinc inde episcopis ducebatur ad tormentum. Flebant qui eam ducebant episcopi, et qui multo plus timebant quam illa, animabant illam ut non timeret. Fit per ecclesiam fletus intolerabilis, et fuit omnium vox una dicentium, sancte Swithune sancte Swithune tu illam adjuva; si interim reboassent tonitrua non audirentur a populo, tantis viribus, tantis vocibus clamabatur in celum, ut sanctus Swithunus vel tunc vel nunquam festinanter accederet. Deus inde patitur et servus suus Swithunus extrahitur violenter e celo. Regina sine clamore hanc in eundo faciebat orationem:

Videte miraculum. Episcopis pedes illius dirigentibus, super novem vomeres ix. passus faciens, et singulos eorum tocios corporis pleno premens pondere, sic omnes supergressa vomeres nec ferrum vidit nec sensit incendium. Unde et dixit episcopis: “Nunquid quod maxime petieram non optinebo? Quare me ducitis extra ecclesiam que in ecclesia deberem examinari.” Erat enim procedens ulterius, et nondum sciebat quod consummasset examen. Ad quod episcopi sicut singultiendo poterant responderunt. Domina nostra respice, jam fecisti, jam res facta est quam faciendam existimas. Respexit, et aperti sunt oculi ejus, et tunc primo vidit ferrum et intellexit miraculum. Ducite me inquit ad filium meum ut videat pedes meos, et sciat quia nichil mali passa sum. Reversi episcopi cum regina invenerunt illum operto capite prostratum in terra, jamque ei pre miseracione verba defecerant quia erumpebant uberius lacrimae et non poterat se continere.

Qui cum elevatus rem cognovisset ex integro, proci-dit ille sanctissimus ad pedes matris dicens, Mater peccavi in celum et in te, jam non sum dignus vocari filius tuus. Ad quem mater. Vocetur ad te Elwinus episcopus, et cum illi satisfeceris de me citius veniam consequeris. Vocato ad regem episcopo qui non sederat in ordine episcoporum, rex veniam cum lacrimis postulat et meretur, et virgis cesus a singulis episcoporum, et per manum flentis matris tres ictus accepit. Et sic datis osculis et receptis rex illos in gratiam et illi regem in veneracionem receperunt. Et redditum est regine et episcopo quicquid illis sublatum fuerat.

Elwinus episcopus de suo patrimonio dedit sancto Swithuno alia novem maneria.

Anno MXLVII. Elwinus episcopus mortuus est, et Stigandus illi successit, qui de donis Emme regine condidit magnam crucem cum duabus imaginibus, scilicet Marie et Johannis, et illas cum trabe vestitas auro et argento copiose dedit Wintoniensi ecclesie.

Anno MLII. Emma regina migravit a seculo, et sepulta est in ecclesia sancti Swithuni Wintonie.

Anno MLXXIX. Walkelinus episcopus a fundamentis Wintoniensem cepit reedificare ecclesiam.

Fertur regem concessisse episcopo Walkelino, ad perficiendam ecclesiam quam inchoaverat Wintonie, tantum lignorum de Hanepinges, quantum iij. diebus et noctibus per carpentarios acquirere poterat. Carpentariis igitur innumerabilibus congregatis, totum nemus in prefixo termino solo dejectum est, et ad Wintoniam deductum. Post hec venit rex per Hanepinges, et postquam respexit illuc, admirans, quasi in extasi factus, nunquid fascinatus sum, aut amens effectus, ubi (inquit) sum? Nonne hic juxta Wintoniam nemus habui valde delectabile? Agnita denique re gesta in furorem versus est. Walkelinus itaque, sumpta circa se vetusta capa, impetravit ab hostiariis regis ingressum usque in regis cameram. Ad pedes autem ejus proci-dit, Domine, inquit, novi quod multos habeas clericos et capellanos promovendos, et ob hoc contra me queris occasionem. Accipe ergo si placet quem michi dedisti episcopatum, reservato michi cum amicitia tua officium quod dudum in capella tua habui. Quid multa? Postremo rex; Certe (inquit) Walkeline, ego nimis prodigus largitor, et tu nimis avidus extitisti acceptor. Pacificatus itaque regi cum amoris redintegracione ad episcopatum suum rediit.

✠ CUM presentis vite series mutabilium varietur discursu, et preterita oblivione tradantur, nisi literarum apicibus elucubrata posteris clarescunt. Ego Eadueardus, divina largiente clemencia Angul-Saxonum rex, tempore quo diucesim Uuentane ecclesie in duas divisi parrochias, obnixè rogatus fui a Hithestano, quem tunc predicte ecclesie episcopum constitueram, ut novarum astipulacione literarum S. Ecclesie testamenta, uti olim ab antecessoribus meis Cynegislo, atque Ernewalho, multisque eorum successoribus devote tradita, atque re staurata fuerant, confirmans renovarem, ob eterne beatitudinis premium, et prosperum hujus vite excursum, terram que undique adjacet civitati, que in exordio Christiane religionis Birino venerabili episcopo, predicante beato Petro, ejusque copostolo Paulo concessa fuerat, consilio optimatum meorum usus, cum territoriis antiquis cartulis insertis, C. videlicet mansas, licet speciosior ab incolis estimari valeat, ita quod in ipsius terre quantitate quod episcopo aratur, et quod coloni inhabitant, pro uno tantummodo cassato reputetur, qui Ciltancumb ab hujus patrie peritis vocatur, avos, atavos, proavos, atavosque spiritus sancti igne succensus devotissime imitans itidem corroborando eterna largior hereditate. Quamobrem tam ego scepra Anglorum patrio more regens, quam Plegmund Drobernensis ecclesie archiepiscopus, ceterique utriusque ordinis suffraganei quorum inferius vocabula litterarum notulis designantur, in nomine Alme Trinitatis, atque Individue Unitatis precipimus tam Hithestano ejusdem Uuentane sedis episcopo, quam cunctis ejus successoribus, ut nulli secularium militum nec ipsum rus, nec aliud quodlibet ad ecclesiam Dei pertinens, pro munere quolibet dare presumant. Seculares igitur episcoporum ditone subjecti intra ambitum hujus spaciose telluris, diversis in villis degentes, censum episcopali sedi persolvant, et expeditiōnem, pontis, arcisve restaurationem, dum necessitas incubuerit, incuntanter peragant. Et has C. mansas omni obsequio defendant, ita ut Ciltancumb cum suis appendiciis pro una tantummodo mansa, ut olim constitutum fuerat, reputetur. Moderno tempore ut antiquitus constitutum fuerat, Pnut-Scillinge, et Ceolboldintun, in quantitate horum C. cassatorum, persistent. Hoc quoque in nomine Alme Trinitatis, et Individue Unitatis obnixè flagitamus, et beati Petri apostolorum principis auctoritate precipimus; ut rura que ab antecessoribus suis maxime Adenewlfo, ad anime sue periculum diversis secularium personis accommodata fuerant, dum oportunum fuerit, statuto a predecessoribus episcopis tempore, sine ullo controversiōnis obstaculo in qualicumque sint provincia vel episcopatu, Uuentane cathedre restituantur. Si autem redditum accelerare voluerit eorum, in ipsis consistat arbitrio, precipue dum beate memorie Theodorus hoc olim interdixerat nefas, ne scilicet episcoporum quispiam Christo collatum a catholicis possessionem pro quolibet munere temerarium dare vel accommodare presumeret, presumentem equidem anathematis vinculo inretitum Sinodali damnavit concilio, et tam illicitum ac inconueniens datum successores nullatenus stare permitterent iussit, ne pravo antecessorum consilio successores ad hanc deducerentur inopiam ut Christi pauperibus quid erogarent non haberent. C. manse in Duntun et in Eblesburnan quas mihi prefatus accommodavit episcopus. Et lxx. in Beaddingtune quas mihi Denuulf accommodaverat presul, si hoc illi placuerit, ut his, vita comite, fruari, post obitum meum Uventane ecclesie libere restituantur, nostris salubribus obtemperantes preceptis presenti prosperitate, et futura beatitudine jocundi perfruantur. Si autem temerarium quispiam nefas superius interdictum ullo modo presumerit, Anathema sit, et auctoritate beati Petri Apostolorum principis Paulique, quorum sub alme Trinitatis possessio est, quod a nobis modo renovatur damnatus intereat, nisi cum eulatu magno qd. contra nostrum decretum minuendo presumens abstulit, penitendo ante obitum suum satisfaciens restituerit.

Hec cartula scripta est anno dominice incarnationis DCCCCVIII. Indict. xii. His limitibus hoc rus undique circumdatur, et intra ambitum suum multas villas complectitur, quarum nomina incolis liquido clarescunt. Hnutsillinc tamen et Ceolboldington, quia Edue ville contingue non sunt, C. manentium quantitatem perficientes, indumentis cleri deservientes, non his limitibus sed propriis et ratis terminis ambiuntur.

 Ex historia de primis fundatoribus Abandoniensis Cenobii in Bibliotheca Cottoniana, sub effigie Claudii, B. vi. fol. 85 a.

INTEREA dum vir Dei Ætheluuoldi abbatis vita et Deo acceptabilem et hominibus predicabilem indies se exhiberet, a predicto rege Eadgardo eligitur Wintoniensi urbi antistes, anno a dominica incarnatione DCCCCLXIII. Hujus vice Abbendonie abbas constituitur Osgarus, ejusdem ecclesie monachus: et quanquam patriarchatum conscenderit presulatus, non tamen a monachice jugo discipline aliquatenus se relaxavit, unde clerici qui tunc temporis apud illius episcopatus sedem in ecclesia convivere canonicè debuerant, religionis rigorem in suo presule negligentes, loco cedere, quam districtius vivere maluerunt. Qua propter predicti regis et beati Dunstani, tunc archiepiscopi, consiliis et auctoritate, eos expulit, monachosque de Abbendoniam intromisit illuc, qui usque hodie Deo regulariter in eadem ecclesia deserviunt. Similiter et de ecclesia ubi abbatia est in eadem civitate fecit. Nam in ea monachos et abbatem eis primus ipse instituit. Siquidem et apud orientales Anglos in insula Heliensi unum; in loco vero qui Burch appellatur aliud; et apud Cerneium tertium, monasteria Cenobitarum, constituit. Que cuncta ex Abbendonensium sumpsere collegio cultum et fundamina, ubi pietatis justitieque cultor ille vineam plantaverat tam fertilem; de qua per loca plurima tot propagines propagaret. Sed quia ecclesiam Abendonensem ante susceptum episcopatum dedicandam reliquerat; post sui consecrationem et ipsam, una cum beato Dunstano et aliis nonnullis coepiscopis suis, in honorem Dei genetricis consecravit: die quinto kalendarum Januariarum.

suscipietis episcopo, si quis catholicus fuerit, et gratiam et communionem habuerit sancte Romane sedis et ea vobis voluerit sine privitate exhibere. Prohibemus insuper ut infra fines parochie vestre nullus sine assensu episcopi Winton. et vestro, capellam seu oratorium de novo construere audeat, salvis privilegiis pontificum Romanorum. Ad hec novas et indebitas exactiones, ab archiepiscopis, episcopis, archidiaconis, seu diaconis, aliisque omnibus ecclesiasticis, secularibusque personis a vobis fieri omnino prohibemus; sepulturam quoque ipsius loci liberam esse decrevimus ut eorum testamento, et extreme voluntati qui se illuc sepiliri desideraverint, nisi forte excommunicati, interdicti aut publice usurarii, nullus obstat, salva tamen justitia illarum ecclesiarum a quibus mortuorum corpora assumuntur. Decimas preterea et possessiones ad jus vestrarum ecclesiarum spectantes, que a laicis detinentur, redimendi et legitime liberandi de manibus eorundem et ad ecclesias ad quas pertinent revocandi, libera sit vobis de nostra autoritate facultas. Obeunte vero te, nunc ejusdem loci Priore vel tuorum quibuslibet successorum, nullus ibi qualibet surrepcionis astutia, seu violentia, preponatur, nisi quem fratres communi consensu vel fratrum major pars consilii sanioris secundum domini et beati Benedicti regulam previderint eligendum. Paci quoque et tranquillitati vestre paterna imposterum sollicitudine providere volentes, autoritate apostolica prohibemus, ut infra clausuras locorum seu grangearum vestrarum nullus rapinam seu furtum facere, ignem apponere, sanguinem effundere, hominem temere capere, vel interficere, seu violentiam audeat exercere. Preterea omnes libertates et immunitates a predecessoribus nostris Romanis pontificibus ecclesie vestre concessas, necnon libertates et executiones secularium exactionum a regibus et principibus vel aliis fidelibus rationabiliter vobis indultas, autoritate apostolica confirmamus, et presentis scripti privilegio communimus. Decernimus ergo ut nulli omnino hominum liceat prefatam ecclesiam temere perturbare, ac ejus possessiones auferre, vel ablatis retinere, minuere vel quibuslibet vexacionibus fatigare, sed omnia integra conserventur eorum pro quorum gubernacione, ac sustentacione concessa sunt usibus omnimodis profutura, salva sedis apostolice autoritate et Winton. episcopi canonica justitia. Si que igitur in futurum ecclesiastica secularisve persona hanc constitutionis paginam sciens, contra eam temere venire temptaverit, secundo, tertiove commonita, nisi reatum suum congrua satisfactione correxerit, potestatis honorisque sui careat dignitate, reamque se divino judicio existere de perpetrata iniquitate cognoscat, et a sacratissimo corpore et sanguine Dei et Domini redemptoris nostri Jesu Christi aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine districte subjaceat ulcioni. Cunctis autem eidem loco jura sua servantibus sit pax domini nostri Jesu Christi quatinus et hic fructum bone actionis percipiant et apud districtum judicem premia eterne pacis inveniant. Amen.

bum Dei predicante concesserunt ejusdem juris possessionem ad prefatum sancti loci monasterium; deinde Egberthus rex, Athulfus rex, Alfredus rex, Edgarus rex, ideoque precipio in nomine domini nostri Jesu Christi, ut nullus episcopus ejusdem loci illam terram de ipso monasterio trahere audeat, nec alicui secularium pro munere quolibet eam dare presumat. Hoc quoque provida consideratione superaddidi, et mandavi, ut nullus filiorum vel nepotum meorum nec aliquis successorum meorum ad predictum sedis episcopalis cenobium, clericos unquam introducat, sed electis eisdem monachis Christo ibidem Deo servientibus deputetur, sicut ego ipse cooperante omnipotentis Dei auxilio constitui, quando superbos clericos qui Deo servire contempserunt, pro nefandis suis actibus, et detestandis servitiis inde eliminatos expuli, ibique sacram cenobitarum congregacionem, qui in hymnis et laudibus domino voluntarie servirent, congregavi. Quicumque hanc libertatem custodire voluerit, custodiat eum Deus et hic et in evum. Si quis autem diabolica suggestione deceptus, hanc libertatem minuere vel infringere presumpserit, veniant super eum omnium maledictionum genera que scripta sunt in novo et in veteri testamento, sitque celum ferreum super caput ejus, et tellus ahenea sub pedibus ejus, et sit ipse eterno anathemate seperatus a Deo et omnibus sanctis ejus, et apostolica beatorum Petri et Pauli autoritate ligatus sit quamdiu vixerit, et post maledictum obitum suum, gehennalibus flammis cum diabolo et angelis suis sine fine damnatus et cruciatus intereat, nisi prius emendaverit, quod Deum omnipotentem et sanctos apostolos ejus pro nihil sperare non timuit.

Acta contra Confirmationem electi Winton. Episcopi. Ibid. vol. ii. p. 62. Ex Reg. Peckham, fol. 13, b.

ANNO eodem (scil. 1281) apud Slyndone emanavit litera sub hac forma idibus Julii. Reverendo in Christo fratri ac domino Mattheo Dei gratia S. Marie in porticu diaconi cardinali, suus devotus frater Johannes sacerdos Cant. subjectionis debitum cum omni reverentia ac honore. In causis Domini Jesu Christi contra laicorum et clericorum proterviam die noctuque pariter decertantes, nullum certaminis nostris effectum utilem poterimus reportare, nisi S. Romana ecclesia, pro cujus juribus sub torculari premimur angustie, velit nobis manum porrigere misericorditer adjutricem. Cujus benevolentia et gratia sublimati sic allidimur, sic gravamur miserie nostre meritis, ut vita nostra morti continue sit similis, novit Dominus. Sane de facto electi Wynton. suspiramus attoniti, quod tante ecclesie desolatio, et tam evidentis justitie decisio tanti tractu temporis suspenduntur. Et quia multi filii Belial, contemptores canonum, usurpatores sacrilegi beneficiorum, que usque ad adventum nostrum in Angliam libere occupabant, cum ingenti desiderio prestolantur confirmationem dicte electionis, ut sic ipsi in suis sacrilegiis consolentur, sperantes se per viam consimilem ad episcopale solium ascensuros, et a vita latronum ad apostolorum repente fastigium sublimandos; supplicamus pro gratia Jesu Christi, quatenus non tam pro nobis quam

REVERENDO in Christo patri ac domino Hugoni, etc. frater J. etc. cum omni reverentia paratam ejus beneplacitis voluntatem. Vere charitatis incendio constat igniri lampades, quarum flammæ ventus majestatis ardue non extinguit. Proinde, reverendissime domine, ut de dilectionis vestre perseverantibus indiciis eo vehementius exultamus, quo Christi gratiam rarissimam in munimentum nostri et ecclesie nostre a pectore vestro cernimus radiare, qui intendimus curru nostro fragili voluntatis vestre beneplacitum semper perficere, quantum secundum Dominum possumus, ut aurigam. Ceterum mandati vestri inspectio per latorem presentium amicabiliter destinati simplicitati nostre stuporis cujusdam prestitit incentivum, in quo familiariter hortamini, ut postquam electionis Wynton. negotium est per appellationem ad sedem apostolicam devolutum, ab impedimento confirmationis ejusdem, utpote nostro functi officio, de cetero desistamus; si tamen deliberationi nostre videbitur expedire. O clementissime domine! quid impedimentum ei prestitimus in hac parte, nisi quod electione affata utpote contraria S. Romane ecclesie juribus, summo pontifici, ac vobis, ceterisque dominis cardinalibus scripsimus veritatem negotii quam sentimus, et periculum quod imminere credimus, si tanta juris injuria prosperetur? Quare non possumus veritatem, quam novimus, sola promovere petitione justitie a S. Romana ecclesia, que in jure non errat, cum pars adversa juris injuriam non cesset factis et verbis, circuitu incessabili, prejudicialiter commendare. Quid mali facimus, si ministerium nostrum honorificare nitimur, quod non cessant adversarii in Romana curia falso, ut credimus, per omnia depravare? Vere, sincerissime domine, personam electi semper intime dileximus, et omni tempore diligemus, cujus electionem confirmare non potuimus, nisi totum clerum Anglie infirmo, quem quantum inficiat beneficiorum danuabilis usurpatio, vos non latet; sed scimus dextrum eruendum esse oculum, ne scandalum oriatur; nec audemus verum bonum reipublice extinguere pro bono unius hominis apparente. Fatemur, quod scripsimus, quod conscientiam nostram expedivimus; Deo negotium committimus, cujus causam agere nos putamus. Scimus sedem apostolicam dominari juribus, et posse omnia, que edificant populum Christianum. Cui sedi non minori affectu quam quivis Christianus a pueritia fideliter adhesimus et intendimus omni tempore adherere. Advertat insuper vestra reverentia non esse ipsum negotium in curia per appellationis meritum, ut vobis suggeritur, cum nullam pars illa appellationem interposuerit, nisi fundatam in veritatis injuria, aut aquilonis vacuo fundamento. Sed per statutum S. memorie domini Alexandri pape quinti posse cessare electiones concessit archiepiscopis, ne nil agerent, sibi tamen provisione talium reservata; a cujus tempore nullus electus Cant. provincie repulsam sustinuit, nisi iste contra quem nihil unquam ex odio fecimus, novit Deus. Non intendimus igitur S. Romanam curiam pro hoc negotio amplius literis molestare, nisi nove cause cogat occasio; nec intendebamus priusquam istam vestrarum recepimus gratiam literarum, in eodem permanentes proposito, quia si totum quod, in hac parte fecimus, facere haberemus, nihil minus quam fecimus, faceremus, etiamsi sciremus nos facto negotio morituros. Obsecramus insuper, domine precharissime, ut si mala vestris auribus de nostris persona vel prosessionibus instillentur, dignemini nobis ea specialiter scribere; ut possimus nos apud vestram reverentiam excusare; scientes, quod non est intentionis nos-

* Monachi quos hic introduxit rex Edgarus e monasterio Abingtoniensi, regulares erant ordinis S. Benedicti, ejectis scil. secularibus conjugatis, quales fuisse dicuntur alii omnes per totam Angliam, cum mutre, anime nostre periculis jam senescentibus artibus indulgere. Scimus Flemingum contra nos publica in curia scandala seminare. Scimus Yvonem et quosdam alios, nobis occultis susurris derogare. Parcat eis altissimus, quod non credebamus talia meruisse, nec eorum rictus in aliquo formidamus. Conservet Dominus sublimitatem vestram ecclesie sue sancte per tempora longiora. Archiepiscopi Cantuar. processus contra episcopum Winton.

Ibid. vol. ii. p. 88, ex Reg. Peck. fol. 16, a.

REVERENDO in Christo patri ac domino Hieronymo, episcopo Penestrino frater Johannes, etc. cum filiali reverentia paratam in omnibus ejus beneplacitis voluntatem. De sante paternitatis vestre benevolentia dudum experientia fiduciam concepimus, quam licet immeriti speramus firmam in sanctitatis vestre pectore remanere; nec plus in hac vita esse credimus vere aut valentis amicitie, nisi quam producit sancte soliditas charitatis, quam nobis dudum inter multos meliores filios liberaliter ostendistis. Proinde, pater amantissime, ac pro misso nobis vestrarum solatio literarum, in quibus ad piam cautelam simplicitatis nostre animum excitastis, scribentes nobis quod in rigore excessimus contra Winton. electum, post appellationem ad cassationem negotii procedendo, quia cause in appellatione posite non erant frivole, licet false; vobis regratiamur ex intimo cordis nostri, significantes nihilominus vestre clementie, quod secundum jurisperitos in preclaro et electo numero, quorum consilio processimus in Winton. negotio, cause appellationum evidenter false, quas nulla potest tergiversatio in dubium revocare, inter causas frivolas computantur; nihil enim est magis frivolum, quam candorem niveum oculis conspicuum denegare; quia igitur appellationis cause in illo negotio obiecte omnes vel erant frivole, vel evidenter obnoxie falsitati, nostris videbatur consiliariis Gregoriani statuti vim quam verba potius ponderantibus, non fuisse pro dolo appellationis subterfugio desistendum; presertim quia vidimus partem illam tam immense oblatione pecunie, quam in aliis plurimis fraudibus adherere. Et vere, pater sanctissime, si pro objectis in appellationibus manifeste falsis debeant dimitti negotia, dissolvetur plurimum nervus ecclesiastice discipline. Ex talibus enim accidit pluries appellari a pastore, et impetrari a sede apostolica ad illum, qui magis predicto pastori dignoscitur indevotus, et sic frequentissime lupus pastoris facta judicat et retractat. Hanc, reverende pater, magnam credimus esse plagam universalis ecclesie, ac refugium omnium impiorum, qui in talibus apostolica sollicitudine abutuntur. Veruntamen, pater piissime, in nostris futuris processibus, vestram proponimus retinere memoriter disciplinam; hoc fideliter profitentes, quod, qui appellationibus legitimis ad sedem apostolicam interpositis non deferunt, non debent inter catholicos, sed inter ethnicos et publicanos potius computari. Appellationum autem frequentiam esse apostolico moderamine temperandam docent non solum legum imperialium sanctiones, verum etiam evangelicum videtur innuere oraculum prius dicens; "Quodcunque ligaveris," singulariter, subjungens postea toto collegio generaliter, "quecunque alligaveritis super terram, etc." Petrus insuper confirmandi fratres suos generale suscepit imperium, qui frequenter per appellatoria certamina infirmantur. Sanctas vidimus Gregorii epistolae decretales, in quibus, quantum meminimus de appellatoriis negotiis, in suis tamen casibus omni catholico pernecessariis pauca in registri sui serie credimus contineri. Custodiat Dominus sanctitatem vestram ecclesie sue sancte per tempora longiora. Dat. apud Suthmallyng cal. Julii, a. d. 1282. Consecrationis nostre quarto.

AFTERWARDS REMOVED TO DURHAM.

ONALD the fourth, king of Scotland, who had embraced the Christian faith, having afforded an asylum to Acca the widow of Ethelfrith king of Northumberland, and to her seven sons,^a who fled into Scotland from the wrath of their uncle Edwine, who had seized the throne, first instilled into the minds of these youths the principles of the Christian religion. Upon the death of Edwine, Eanfrid, the eldest son, succeeded to the government of the province of Bernicia, as Osric the rightful heir did to that of Deira, of which two provinces the kingdom of Northumberland was composed. They indeed relapsed into their former errors, renouncing the Christian religion, persecuting its professors, and consecrating altars to the idols of the Saxons. But their reign, as well as the idolatry thus re-introduced, was of a very short duration. Osric was slain in battle, and his whole kingdom ransacked by Cedwell, king of Cumberland. Eanfred submitted to the same monarch, but was inhumanly murdered by him; and the whole kingdom was in a most deplorable state, when Oswald, the second son of Ethelfrith, left his retirement in Scotland, and placed himself at the head of the distracted Northumbrians; he was not however able to collect a sufficient number to stand against the numerous army which Cedwell flushed with success brought against him. He placed his dependance therefore on a superior Power for aid; and erecting a Cross^b as a standard in the front of his army, in the field wherein he encamped, and sustaining it with his own hands, until the soldiers had piled the earth up around to support it, he then fell on his knees before it, imploring the assistance of the only true God. "Let us," said he (as the venerable Bede^c writes), "fall down on our knees and beseech the Almighty, the living and true God, to defend us against this proud and cruel enemy." He then led on his little army to the fight, and obtained a complete victory.^d "No sign," remarks Bede upon this event, "do we find of the Christian faith; no church, no altar throughout the whole kingdom of Northumberland, to have been erected before this noble leader and conductor of an army directed thereto by faithful devotion, did raise the ensign of the Cross, when he was preparing to fight a savage and bloody enemy. When Oswald perceived in this battle the divine aid, which he had so earnestly implored, he became a professed Christian." Nor did Oswald stop here, but laboured anxiously to convert his subjects also to Christianity. For this purpose he applied to Donald king of Scotland, for the assistance of some holy man in this blessed undertaking. The first person who was sent him, was according to Bede of an austere disposition; who, meeting with not so much reverence and attention as he expected, returned home in disgust. It was proposed then to send in his place some man of a more mild disposition, who by more gentle manners and persuasive language might gain the affections of the people.^e This advice was approved; and the synod immediately appointed to this task the person, with whom it originated, namely

AIDAN, a monk of the monastery of Hii or Jona, one of the islands called the Hebrides. He is supposed to have arrived at the court of Oswald about the year 635,^f where, by his strict rules of life, his moderation and persuasive eloquence, he succeeded in converting the nobles and chiefs of the kingdom, and in a short time the whole, it may be said, of this powerful people. The king granted him permission to fix his residence in any part of his kingdom, and Aidan selected the island of Lindisfarne,^g which was thence called afterwards the Holy Island. The character given of this bishop, by Bede, is most excellent; who after enumerating and dwelling on his virtues adds, that his doctrines were recommended to the world by his conduct, which strictly corresponded with his precepts. Aidan died in the year 651, the 17th of his episcopacy.^h It is said, by Godwin,ⁱ that he died of grief for Oswald, who a few days before had been killed in a battle with Penda, king of the Mercians; but it must have been for Oswald's successor Oswine, whom it is said the bishop had led into schemes of ambition which proved so fatal to him.^k His successor

FINAN,^l who came from the same monastery of Hii, began, immediately upon his appointment to this see, to build a church of timber, and thatched it with reed, which was afterwards dedicated to St. Peter, by Theodore archbishop of Canterbury. He had the happiness of seeing many converts to the Christian faith, himself baptizing^m two powerful monarchs, Penda prince of the Mercians,

(with whom he sent four priests to instruct his people) and Sigebert, king of the East Angles. He presided over this see ten years, and appears the whole time to have been assiduous in the promotion of religion and virtue.^a

COLMAN, who also came from Scotland,^b succeeded to this church and monastery. About the third year of his episcopacy a controversy about Easter and the mode of tonsure, which began indeed in the time of the first bishop, was revived with more warmth than ever. A synod was holden in 664, at Whitby, before the abbess Hilda, to determine these points. It was determined against the Scots in favour of the Romish usage, which so disgusted the bishop, that he determined upon quitting the place and returning home, with about thirty English priests and all his own countrymen, who persevered with him in the usages of the Scottish church.^c Upon the abdication of Colman

TUDA succeeded to this see;^d he had been educated among the southern Scottish clergy, and by them ordained bishop. He was a good and religious man, but presided over this see but a few months, being carried off by a pestilence which raged violently this year. He was the last of the Scottish bishops, as they are termed, who had the government of this see; and Bede's remarks upon them, says Mr. Hutchinson, are too honourable to be omitted. Their frugality and simplicity of life and parsimony appeared in the place of their residence, in which there was nothing superfluous, or unnecessary for the humblest life. In the church only, magnificence was permitted. Their possessions consisted chiefly in cattle, for money was only retained till a fit opportunity offered to distribute it to the poor. Places of entertainment, and reception of princes, were unnecessary; for the religious were visited solely for their doctrines, and the holy offices of the church. When the king came thither, he was attended only by five or six persons, and had no other object in view than to partake of the rites of religion, departing immediately after the service; if perchance they took refreshment, it was of the common fare of the monks. The attention of those pastors was confined to spiritual matters only; temporal affairs were deemed derogatory to their holy appointment, and thence proceeded the profound veneration, which was paid by all ranks of people to the religious habit. When any ecclesiastic went from his monastery, it was to preach the word of salvation, and he was every where received with joy, as a messenger of the Divinity; on the road, the passengers bowed the head to receive the holy benediction and sign of the cross, with pious reverence treasuring up the good man's precepts as documents of the most salutary import. The churches were crowded with a most devout audience; and when a monk was seen entering a village in his travels, the inhabitants flocked about him, entreating him for his admonitions and prayers. On their visitations, donations and riches were not their pursuit; and, when any religious society received an augmentation to the revenues of the house, as an offering of charity by the donor, they accepted it as an additional store, with which they were entrusted for the benefit of the poor.^e Upon the death of Tuda, according to some authors,^f

EATA was appointed to the government of this see united with that of Hexham; he had been abbot of Mailros, and had been recommended by Colman, on his departure, as a proper person to be placed at the head of this monastery. Other authors^g affirm that Lindisfarne for fourteen years wanted its proper bishop; as Cedda on his consecration made York the bishop's residence, and assumed the dignity of metropolitan. In the year 684 however the two sees were again divided, and Tambert was appointed to Hexham, from which he was afterwards dismissed; and Cuthbert appointed his successor. Godwin states that Eata, understanding that the see of Lindisfarne would be more acceptable to Cuthbert than that of Hexham, voluntarily resigned it in his favour.^h

ST. CUTHBERT was appointed to this see in the year 685. He was originally, it is said, a shepherd near Melros, where he had a vision, and beheld the spirit of Aidan ascending to heaven; which made such an impression on him, that he determined to lead a religious life,ⁱ and immediately applied to the abbey of Mailros, where in 651 he gained admittance and initiation under Eata, who upon his own removal hither persuaded Cuthbert to accompany him, and made him prior.^k Being exalted to the episcopal dignity, St. Cuthbert, says Mr. Stevens quoting from Symeon Dunelmensis, led a life altogether evangelical, continually either praying for his flock, or putting them in the way of salvation, and himself practising what he taught; he was altogether inflamed with the fire of divine love, patient and modest, most diligently intent upon prayer, affable to all that sought comfort of him, remarkable for his abstinence. Having been bishop but two years, he returned to his monastery, knowing that the time of his death drew near, and accordingly there he died and ordered his body to be buried.^l

EADBERT was consecrated bishop of Lindisfarne in 688. He was a learned man, of exemplary life and piety, and a most humane and charitable disposition.^m He began and lived to complete the cathedral of Lindisfarne, which he built of stone and covered with lead. After he had finished this pious work he caused the body of St. Cuthbert to be removedⁿ into a magnificent tomb prepared for it on the right side of the high altar.^o Eadbert presided over this see about ten years. He died in 698, and

^o In the first volume of Hutchinson's History of Durham, p. 29, is a plate of the ruins of this cathedral as they now are; and in a note is the following description. "The cathedral is in the form of a cross, the east and west limbs of which are yet standing, the other parts totally in ruins, and almost level with the ground. The order of the building in this structure is rude and heavy, and most of it in the worst mode of the early Saxon architecture. Mr. Grose says, Probably it was the work of different periods; great part of it seems very ancient, the arches being circular, and the columns very massy, and much like those at Durham but richer. On the north and south walls there are pointed arches, which proves, that part of it at least was built since the reign of Henry II. The destruction made by the Danes occasioned much of this variety to take place. The pillars on which the arches rise in the centre of the cross are clustered and plain capitalled, being the corner supporters of the great tower. These arches are of few members. The chancel seems to be of more modern architecture, with painted windows and no side ailes, and perhaps took date, as Mr. Grose observes, after the reign of king Henry II., when this church became a cell of monks, subordinate to Durham. The nave of the church consists of a wide centre and two side ailes, the columns of which are heavy, and the arches circular. In the superstructure of the north and south walls, pointed arches appear. The windows are narrow, ornamented with a corner pilaster, and a moulding of a few members. The walls are very thick and every part wears a gloomy countenance. The south wall of the middle tower is standing, about fifty feet high, and one corner tower, on the west end of the church, remains perfect. These ruins still retain one most singular beauty; under the tower was a fine canopy arch, a vault or dome, with ribs or bows springing from the angles, and crossing each other diagonally. One of the arches yet stands, unloaded with any superstructure, supported by the south-east and north-west corner pillars and ornamented with the dancette or zigzag moulding, much used in old Saxon architecture, stretching a fine bow over the chasm and ruins occasioned by the falling in of the Isles. The chief parts of the structure are composed of a soft red freestone, which yields much to time, and renders the aspect of the building dark and melancholy. Mr. Grose's account comprehends the following particulars—"Various fragments of the offices of this monastery are still standing, and foundations of buildings are scattered over a close of near four acres. The main walls of the church, on the north and south sides, are still standing, though much out of the perpendicular, inclining outwards so considerably, as to make the horizontal distance between them at the top exceed by near two feet that at the bottom. Another winter or two seems to be the utmost they can stand. This building consists of a body and two side ailes, into which it is divided by a double row of very solid columns, whose shafts are richly ornamented. Each row has five columns, of four different constructions, and two pilasters in the walls on the east and west ends" (this he speaks of the nave). "The shafts of these columns are about twelve feet high, their diameter about five: their capitals and pedestals are plain: they support circular arches, having over each arch two ranges of windows; the lowest large and in pairs, separated only by a short column; the upper small and single. The length of the building is about 138 feet, the breadth of the body 18 feet, and that of the two side ailes, about 9 feet each."

was buried in the spot where St. Cuthbert's remains had been first deposited.^a To him succeeded

EADFRID,^b or EADFERTH,^c or EGBERTUS,^d or EGFRITH,^e for he is differently called by different authors. He was a monk of Lindisfarne, and, having received a good education, is praised as being one of the most learned men of his age. Bede, who was contemporary with him, found him negligent however in his sacred duties, and warmly remonstrated with him on such conduct. Eadfrid therefore transcribed for the use of the common people the Gospels in Latin, which work after his death was highly decorated by his successor with gold and jewels. Bilfrid an hermit illuminated it with various paintings and rich devices, and Aldred a priest interlined it with a Saxon version. This curious work is now deposited in the British Museum, in the Cottonian Collection.^f Having presided over this see twenty four years, he departed this life A.D. 721^g and was buried at Lindisfarne.

ETHELWOLD abbot of Melros succeeded to this bishopric after it had been vacant about three years.^h During his time Ceolwlf king of Northumberland, when he found Ethelbald king of Mercia ravaging his kingdom, in a frenzy of zeal abdicated the throne and offered his crown at the high altar in the church of Lindisfarne, where he assumed the cowl in 738.ⁱ Before his abdication, he granted an exemption and immunity to all the churches and religious houses within his realm, from all public taxes, works, and burthens, except only (as was always usual) the building of castles and bridges. He brought great revenues to the church, and granted in perpetuity a large territory of land, the express boundaries of which some of the monastic writers have preserved.^k Ethelwold died according to Bede in 740, and was succeeded by

CYNEWOLF (KENULFUS). He was imprisoned by king Edbert in Bebbanburg, upon suspicion of being accessory to the death of Offa, a person of the royal line, who had taken refuge in the church of Lindisfarne. It is not stated when he regained the royal favour and his liberty. He filled the see nearly forty years, when finding himself worn out with age and the troubles which he had suffered from the distracted state of the kingdom, and from persecution, he resigned the bishopric, and about three years afterwards died in retirement in the year 783.^l

HIGBALD succeeded him, and held the see thirteen years. During his episcopacy, and in the fifth year of Ethelred's reign, the Danes and other barbarians from the north made a descent upon the English coast, and entering Lindisfarne, not only pillaged it but also destroyed the monastery, murdering the ecclesiastics as well as the other inhabitants. "Most dreadful lightning," says Symeon Dunelmensis,^m "and other prodigies are said to have portended the impending ruin of this place. In the year 793, a fleet of pagans from the northern parts, arriving in Britain, and ranging along the coasts, plundering the same, and killing not only the cattle, but also the priests, the Levites, and numbers of the monks and nuns. On the 7th of the Ides of June they came to the church of Lindisfarne, miserably plundered all places, overthrew the altars, and carried away all the treasures of the church. Some of the monks they slew, some carried away captives, some they drowned in the sea, and others much afflicted and abused they turned away naked: But, adds the indignant historian, they went not unpunished, God avenging the injuries done to St. Cuthbert; for, the following year, as they continued their depredations, their commander was slain, and soon after their whole fleet perished by storms; many died in the sea, and such of them as reached the shore, died by the swords of the natives. Thus was the church of Lindisfarne spoiled, and stript of all its ornaments; however the episcopal see continued there, and such monks as had escaped the cruelty of these barbarians returned with religious zeal, and instantly set about repairing the damage the sacred edifice had sustained."

EGBERT his successor was consecrated 11th of June, 802, and died in the year 821, and was succeeded by HEATHUREDⁿ who presided over this see nine years.

EGFRID his successor was a person of noble birth and abounding in good works; he brought great possessions to the church. He built and gave to this see the church of Norham; also Sedworth, and the church and village which he had built at Gainford, besides many other portions of land.^o He presided over this see sixteen years, and dying in 845 was succeeded by EANBERT,^p whose episcopacy continued eight years.

EARDULFUS who succeeded in the year 854, was the last bishop of Lindisfarne and first bishop of Cunecestre^q (CHESTER UPON THE STREET) to which place the see was removed previous to its being fixed (viz. in the year 995) at Durham. The cause of this removal, and the great dangers this pious bishop and his followers encountered are thus given us by Mr. Stevens from Symeon Dunelmensis.

"In the year 687, an infinite multitude of Danes, and other northern nations, after having ravaged all the southern parts, proceeded into the north, took York, and having spent two years in the utmost barbarities, at length advanced towards the island of Lindisfarne. Eandulfus being then bishop, with the advice of the monks, took up the body of St. Cuthbert, which they carried about with other relics for several years, till at last it rested at Durham. In the mean time, the barbarous Danes coming to the island of Lindisfarne, again burned down the church and monastery there, and left that place a desolate wilderness. The place continued many ages after in great veneration, tho' the monastery was never restored, by reason of its being exposed to the ravages of all barbarous nations. The early destruction of the same is the cause why so small memorials of it remain. The body of St. Cuthbert being conveyed away by the bishop Eandulf, and the monks, as has been said above, for a long time could find no place of rest, the Danes still infesting all these northern parts, and utterly destroying all that was sacred, so that those monks, with their treasure, were continually flying before them. At length bishop Eandulf, and the abbot Eadrel having ranged throughout all that country to escape falling into the hands of that savage enemy, and being quite spent with the fatigue, they resolved to pass over into Ireland. Accordingly they proceeded with all the people that followed them, to the mouth of the river Derwent, where going aboard a ship, no sooner were they out at sea, but a prodigious storm forced them back to the place from whence they came. Looking upon this as a token of God's will, that they should not quit England, they consulted what to do next, all the other people forsaking them for want of food and other necessaries, so that none were left with the body, but the bishop, the abbot and seven persons that had devoted themselves to the service of the Saint. In this distress

The prospect from the island is beautiful; to the northward you command the town of Berwick, over an arm of the sea, about seven miles in breadth. At near the same distance, to the south you view Bambrough Castle, on a bold promontory. On the one hand you have a view of the open sea, at the time of our observation, calm and resplendent, scattered over with vessels; and on the other hand a narrow channel, by which this land is insulated about two miles in width. The distant shore exhibits a beautiful hanging landscape of cultivated country, graced with a multitude of hamlets, villages, and woodlands.

one of the aforesaid seven, whose name was Hunred, had a vision, wherein he was told, that they should repair to the sea, where they would find a book of the Gospels adorned with gold and precious stones, which had been lost out of the ship, when they were in the storm; and that after that he should see a bridle hanging on a tree, which he should take down, and put upon a horse, that would come to him, which horse he should put to a cart he would also find to carry the holy body, which would be an ease to them. All these things happening accordingly, they travelled with more comfort, following the horse, which way soever he would lead. The book above mentioned was no ways damaged by the water, and is still preserved in the library at Durham.^a When they had thus travelled seven years, it pleased God, that the Danish tyrant Haldene, who had destroyed all religious places, fell into a most tormenting distemper, attended with an intolerable stench, whereupon being become loathsome to all men, he fled out of the Tine with only three ships, which all perished at sea. Hereupon the pious travellers repaired with the holy body to the monastery of Crec, where they were lovingly entertained, and resided four months. Here St. Cuthbert is said to have appeared to the abbot Eadred, ordering him to repair to the Danish camp, and there to inquire out a youth, called Guthred the son of Hardecnut, sold into slavery, to redeem him and proclaim him king. The abbot obeyed, and both the Danes and Northumbrians received him for their king at Oswiesdune. He being peaceably seated on the throne, the episcopal see, which had been at Lindisfarne, was translated to Cunecastestre, and the body of St. Cuthbert conveyed thither, the bishop Eandulf, who had never forsaken St. Cuthbert, being the first prelate there. King Guthred also in gratitude for the crown received, bestowed on St. Cuthbert all the land between Weor and Tyne, and made his church a sanctuary; ordaining, that none for the future should ever claim any right or sovereignty over whatsoever should be given to the saint; and by the general consent of all the people they anathematized to hell-fire, unless they repented, all such as should infringe any of these decrees."

In the same year Alfred and Eardulph, the bishop, departed this life A.D. 900; Eardulph having presided as bishop 46 years, of which 18 were after the see was removed to Chester. His piety and patience under the persecution of the church was distinguished; his veneration of St. Cuthbert's name and character, and his perseverance in the labours and distresses which he suffered in the cause of religion and the church of Lindisfarne, were extraordinary. He was succeeded by

CUTHEARD, whose attention was directed chiefly to the augmentation of the possessions of the church. With the treasures of St. Cuthbert, says Mr. Hutchinson,^b quoting from Leland, he purchased or redeemed Sedgefield, with its appurtenances, which was then held by three persons not distinguished in history, but named, by the monastic writers, Aculf, Ethelbrith, and Frithlak. He also purchased Bedlington, with its appendages, Neder-ton, Gurb, Batbise, Lebbington, Shieburn, and Cambois, lying in that district, now called the county of Northumberland. There were other benefactors in his time, who contributed to encrease the possessions of St. Cuthbert by their donations. Tilred, an abbot, repurchased or redeemed South-Eden, one moiety of which he gave to St. Cuthbert, that he might become a brother in his monastery; and the other moiety to Norton, that he might be abbot there. Barnard, a priest, about the same time gave to St. Cuthbert his villa of Willington, that he might be admitted one of the fraternity of his monastery. Cuthheard presided over this see (Chester on the Street) fifteen years, and was succeeded in the year 915 by

TILRED, or, according to William of Malmesbury, MILRED. Of this prelate the historians give us no account but that he presided here thirteen years and four months.^c

WIGRED succeeded to this see in the year 928. About ten years afterwards, king Athelstan, on his way to Scotland with a British army, visited the sepulchre of St. Cuthbert, and besought his assistance; on which occasion he gave to the church several rich gifts and ornaments, which, in the time of Symeon Dunelmensis, were preserved in the church at Durham, but which that writer forbears to mention, as he does also the names of twelve villages which the king gave, because they are enumerated in the common cartulary of that religious house.^d Leland, however, has preserved, at least, their names: "The delightful village of South-Weremouth with its appendages; Weston, Offerton, and Selksworth; the two Ryhopes, Burden, Seaham, Seaton, Dalton, Dalden, and Heseldene;"^e and he states, that the king bequeathed these to this church by his will, which he made on his journey towards Scotland, and deposited at the tomb of St. Cuthbert. Wigred having filled this see about seventeen years, departed this life and was succeeded by UTHRED,^f of whom we know no more than that he presided here the short space of three years. His successor,

SEXHELM,^g filled the see for a much shorter period. He was a man of a very depraved, avaricious turn of mind; about three years after his appointment he lost his senses, and quitted this episcopal chair, which was next filled by ALDRED,^h who died in the year 968.

ELFSIG was immediately appointed to succeed him, and was consecrated at York by archbishop Oscekill;ⁱ he held this see about twenty-two years, and was succeeded by

ALDUNE, or ALDWINE, the last of the bishops of Chester on the Street, and first of the bishops of Durham. He was consecrated about the year 990. About five years afterwards Sweyn, king of Denmark, and Olaus, king of Norway, hearing of the riches of the English, (who, instead of opposing some piratical invaders by force, had given them an immense sum of money to cease from their depredations and quit the country,) and learning also the total relaxation of military spirit which pervaded the whole nation, entered the Thames with a powerful fleet, which spread into diverse other parts. At the same time a party of the invaders infested the northern coasts, which induced Bishop Aldune, with the whole body of religious, settled at Chester, together with every person who had the least dependance on them, to quit the place, and go to Ripon, taking with them also the remains of St. Cuthbert, other holy relics, and the riches of the church of every description. Thus the see which had been settled at Chester for one hundred and thirteen years was for ever removed from thence. Symeon says, that Aldune was forewarned by revelation that the place would be destroyed by pirates, and therefore transported the body of St. Cuthbert, with all the people, &c. of the monastery to Ripon. "Peace," continues the same historian, "being restored after three or four months, as they were carrying back the entire body to the former place, being come to a place called Werdelan, on the east of and near Durham, the hearse it was carried on could not be moved, though many put their strength to help it forward. By this it appeared, that the body was not to be carried to its former place; but whither to go they knew not, being then in the middle of a field not inhabited. After three days' fasting and prayer it was revealed, that they should carry it to Durham, and there find a place for it to rest. Accordingly it was taken up with the greatest ease, and conveyed to the appointed place at Durham, where they immediately made an oratory of wattles, and laid it therein for a time. All the people that accompanied St. Cuthbert's body to Durham found the place very strong by nature, but not easy to be made habitable, because it was every way most thickly wooded. Only in the midst was a small plain, which they used to plow and sow, where Bishop Aldune afterwards erected a moderate church of stone; the aforesaid bishop, with the assistance of all the people and of Uhtred, Earl of Northumberland, cut down all the wood and rendered the place habitable. In short, all the multitude of the people from the river Coqued to the Teise, came readily to forward that work, and to build the church, and never desisted till it was finished. The wood being grubbed up, and every man assigned his dwelling, the aforesaid prelate then applied himself to build a decent church. In the mean time the holy body was translated from the abovementioned little oratory to another which was called the White Church, where it rested three years, till the greater church was finished. The church being then consecrated by Bishop Aldune, the body of St. Cuthbert was with due honour brought to it, and laid in the place prepared for it. Thus the holy body and the episcopal see have continued in the same place to this day, the latter having been first established in the island of Lindisfarne, by king Oswald and the bishop Aydan three hundred and sixty-one years before, and it was three hundred and nine years after the death of the holy father Cuthbert. At the same time many bestowed gifts for adorning the church, and for the subsistence of the persons that were to serve the same. Among them Styer, the son of Ulfi, obtained leave of king Ethelred to bestow Derrington and its appurtenances, with other lands, on St. Cuthbert. Snaculf, the son of Cyhell, gave the lands of Bridling, Mordun, Soueburg, and Griseby, with Sac and Soc." Bishop Aldune died in the year 1018; Symeon states that he died from grief at the immense slaughter of chieftains and people of the lands of St. Cuthbert in a battle between the Scots and Northumbrians at Carrum, in which the former were victorious. He is much praised for his sanctity and humility,^a beloved of all good men both for his wisdom and the excellence of his life. After Aldune's death the see remained vacant for three years, the ecclesiastics of this church not agreeing respecting a successor. It is said, that whilst they were in chapter consulting upon this important subject, a priest named Eadmund, descended of noble progenitors, but of a facetious character, entered the church, and learning the subject of their discussions, in a jest exclaimed, "Why cannot you make me a bishop?" The assembly supposing that he had been instigated to act thus by some divine impulse, immediately elected him.

EADMUND was thereupon consecrated bishop at Winchester by Wulstan, archbishop of York, in the year 1021.^b During this bishop's time, king Canute visited the shrine of St. Cuthbert, to which he walked the distance of five miles with bare feet. He afterwards enriched the church with various lands, which are enumerated by Leland. Eadmund finished the western tower of the new church at Durham begun by Aldune, and consecrated it. In the 23d year of his episcopacy, when at Gloucester, in attendance upon the king, he was seized with a mortal disease, and died there; but he was buried at Durham.

EADRED, the next bishop, obtained, in 1041, his nomination to this see from the king by an immoderate gift: he was a secular priest, and in no ways calculated to fill this see, and was guilty of many infamous transactions: he was shortly after smitten with a lingering and painful disease, in which he became bedridden for ten months; and without enjoying the least fruit of his sinful purchase, departed this life in 1042, detested and despised.^c

EGELRIC, who had accompanied bishop Eadmund from Peterborough, was next made bishop of this see, through the influence of Earl Godwin. He rebuilt the church of Chester, which was in a most dilapidated state; in digging the foundations of which, a very great treasure was discovered, which the bishop sent off to Peterborough, then conceiving an idea of retiring thither himself, as he had never lived cordially with his clergy. He did shortly after in 1056 withdraw himself from the see, but not to enjoy any peace; for it seems the wrath of his foes pursued him to the grave; he was accused to William the Conqueror of having robbed the church of its treasures, for which he was commanded to appear before the king in London, when he was committed to prison, where he continued till his death in 1072.^d

EGELWINE, his brother, succeeded upon his abdication. He was also a monk of Peterborough, and was appointed to this see by the influence and arbitrary power of Fosti, one of the sons of Earl Godwin, and who had been made Earl of Northumberland. This bishop appears to have taken a very great share in the events of those times, and to have busied himself too much in secular affairs, which has brought upon him the epithet of seditious. Indeed, his history is so interwoven with the general history of this part of the kingdom, and of these particularly troublesome times, that it would exceed the limits of this work to trace it very minutely. On the approach of king William to Durham to revenge the murder of the Normans, and particularly of Earl Cumin, the city was evacuated; and the bishop determined to fly thence with the sacred remains of St. Cuthbert. "The holy fugitives took their way towards Lindisfarne; they rested the first night at the monastery of Jarrow, the second at Bedlington, the third at Tughil, and on the fourth day, in the evening, the bishop, with a vast concourse of people, arrived on the shore opposite to the holy island, when they found the sea at high water. The severity of the winter rendered the night air intolerable to the aged and infirm, as well as those of tender years; and much lamentation was heard among the people; when, by a particular interposition, the sea retired, and left a dry passage for the wanderers, who, with loud thanksgiving and holy joy, passed over to the island. Peace being restored, and the king having withdrawn his troops, the bishop, with his brethren and people, set forward on their return, with steps of melancholy and many tears, beholding the fertile plains laid waste, the villages desolated, and the whole country depopulated, and become a dreadful solitude. After an absence of four months, they entered the city on the 8th of the kalends of April, A. D. 1070, and replaced the sacred remains of St. Cuthbert in his shrine."^e The severities, which however still continued to be practised by the king, particularly against the clergy, determined Egelwine to abdicate his see, and seek for safety in some foreign country. He, therefore, collected all the treasure he could, even from the coffers of the see; and leaving Durham in the fifteenth year of his episcopacy, embarked for Cologne; but he was driven by contrary winds to Scotland, whence he escaped to the Isle of Ely; where, with other malcontents, he defended himself for some time; but the island being treacherously surrendered by the abbot of a monastery there, he was carried to Abingdon, and there kept a close prisoner, where, from famine and a broken heart, he died a miserable death. Some authors state,^f that he refused all sustenance, others that it was denied him.^g

The see remained vacant about a year, when

WALCHER was appointed to it by the king. He was of noble birth in Lorrain.^h In the year 1075, he purchased of the king the earldom of Northumberland; this is the first instance of the civil power being united in one person with the ecclesiastic in this see; and from this is dated the palatine jurisdiction, which is to this day exercised by the bishops of this see.^a Though this extension of power encreased the dignity, it was far from securing the peace and safety of the bishop. The veneration in which the people were accustomed to hold their bishop was dreadfully shaken when they saw the holy prelate taking on him the exercise of legal severities; and at last (on the 14th of May, 1080,) whilst the bishop was holding a public assembly of his council and ministers at Gatishead, in exercise of his civil jurisdiction, the rage of the populace was inflamed to such an height, that nothing but the life of the bishop could satisfy them. On a watchword being given, short red, good red, slea ye the bishoppe, they discovered their arms, which hitherto were concealed under their garments; others set fire to the church. The bishop seeing no possibility of escaping, veiled his face with his robe, and rushed towards the clamorous mob; when he was instantly pierced to the heart with a lance. During Walcher's episcopacy, the king gave many rich gifts to the church: he caused the crucifix presented by Fosti to be adorned anew with gold and gems.^b He gave a mark of gold and a precious robe to the service of the church. He restored Bellingham,^c which had forcibly been withheld many years, and gave to St. Cuthbert for ever, Hovedon, and also Waltham, with its noble monastery and church. In this reign one Scott gave Aclam, Aceam, or Acey, to the church, with its appendages.

The see remained vacant six months and nine days, when the king nominated

WILLIAM DE CARILEPHO, abbot of St. Vincent the martyr in Normandy. He was consecrated shortly after by Thomas, archbishop of York, in the presence of the king and all the bishops of the realm.^d He was in very high favour with the king, by whose assistance he restored peace to his see, calmed the distractions of the populace, and regulated the disorders which had crept into the administration of his province. "Pope Gregory, by his bull directed to the king, commanded an establishment of the see of Durham, with all its possessions, by royal charter; and that the bishop should therein enjoy, within his territories, all similar royal liberties and dignities, as the king held by his crown in other parts of this realm; freed, exempted, and acquitted of all services and other impositions; and thereupon the king, by his charter made in council A. D. 1082, confirmed to the bishop the laws and rights of St. Cuthbert, and granted all such things as were commanded by the precept of the holy see."^e In the following year the bishop proceeded to accomplish what his predecessor attempted, to dispossess the secular clergy and place monks in his episcopal church. For this purpose, according to Mr. Stevens, he applied himself to king William, queen Maud and archbishop Lanfranc. The king approving of his design, sent him with commendatory letters to pope Gregory, who ordered that the monks of Weremuth and Jarrow should be translated to the church of St. Cuthbert, the bishopric being too small to contain three monasteries. King William authorised the bishop to perform what the pope had ordained. Accordingly, in the year 1083, the said bishop William, having brought together the monks of the aforesaid two monasteries of the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul at Weremuth and Jarrow, conducted them to Durham, and bringing them on Whitsunday into St. Cuthbert's church, signified to the people the commands of the pope and of king William, and so commending them to the holy mother of God and their patron St. Cuthbert, he delivered the church to them and them to the church. Then he declared to those who had been before possessed of the church by the name of canons, yet living under no canonical rule, that if they would stay in the said church, they must conform to the monastical rule: but they all chose rather to depart, except only the dean, who was with much difficulty persuaded by his son, a monk, to take on him the monastical habit. Three days after the bishop prudently distributed among the eldest and most discreet of their number the several offices of the monastery, and beginning at the altar he appointed Leofwin, a sober man and fearing God, to be sacrist, that is to have the peculiar charge of the church and of St. Cuthbert's body. Next, knowing Aldwin to be a person of great wisdom, moderation, and conduct, he committed to him the care of the monastery both within and without, ordering that nothing should be done without his advice and direction. Lastly, he so separated the possessions of the monks from his own, that theirs might always remain to their use exempt from any claim of his successors. The bishop then granted to the monks Rennington, the two Pittingtons, Haselton, Dalton, Merrington, Shincliff, and Elvet; and that they might have forty merchants there free from all duties to the bishop. This grant, as well as other documents relating to these transactions, will be found among the charters at the end of the history of this monastery. The secular clergy who were dismissed, were not sent away without a suitable provision; one historian^f states, that by the pope's command the colleges of Auckland, Darlington, and Norton, were instituted by this bishop for their reception, and others add Lanchester, Chester, and Esington. On the death of king William the First, our bishop, with others, declared for his eldest son Robert in opposition to William Rufus; the latter however prevailing, and with a large army besieging the castle of Durham, the bishop was obliged to fly into Normandy,^g leaving his see to the care of the prior of Durham; the king, however, seized upon the temporalities. Whilst in Normandy, the bishop was enabled to save from the sword a garrison of the king's, which was besieged by Robert's army; by this act he regained the royal favour, and on the 11th of September, 1091, was restored to his see.^h The whole account of this quarrel between the king and the bishop, will be found at the end of the charters of this monastery, printed from a very valuable and beautiful manuscript preserved in the Bodleian Library. On our bishop's restoration, the lands severed from the see by the king were restored; and the bishop granted to his monastery of Durham the churches of Elvet, Acliff, Haseldin and Dalton, Hoveden and Welton, Walkington and Brantingham in Yorkshire, with the tythes thereto belonging; and also confirmed to them what his predecessor had granted to them when belonging to the monasteries of Weremuth and Jarrow. (This grant will be found among the charters.) But the bishop was not content with such acts of munificence; he had brought over with him from Normandy the plan of a new church, according to the style and magnificence used on the continent, and in the year 1093, he began the erectionⁱ of that stately edifice yet remaining at Durham. But he did not live to see much of it finished; for having incurred a second time the king's displeasure, the cause of which is not known, he was summoned to appear before the king, and answer to the charges which should be adduced against him. The bishop in vain pleaded illness; he was forced to comply;^k and having with the greatest difficulty reached Windsor, his disorder encreased so rapidly, that in a very few days he departed this life, namely, on 6th of January, 1095, having held this see fifteen years and two months. The political portrait of this prelate is not handed down to us in the most favourable light: but says Mr. Hutchinson, "we must add truths unsullied by his errors; that he had a most munificent heart; his works of piety were truly great, his charity unbounded, and liberality towards his brethren most exalted; these cast a veil over the shades which are thrown into his political portrait, and leave his memory dear to his successors."^a The see remained vacant three years and four months, when the king appointed

RALPH FLAMBARD to this see. He was a person of low birth,^b but endowed with great subtilty of genius, ready wit, and eloquence.^c He was consecrated in St. Paul's, London, by Thomas archbishop of York, on the 5th of June, 1099, at which time he filled the office of procurator-general to the king. He had in his several employments under the crown conducted himself so unjustly, and been guilty of such oppression,^d that upon the death of the king, he was particularly marked out by the whole nation as the most odious of the ministers; and by the advice of the great council of the kingdom, king Henry, directly he mounted the throne, committed him a close prisoner to the tower of London. From thence he made his escape about the fourth of February, 1101,^e and fled into Normandy, where he was cordially received by duke Robert, who immediately put him in possession of the vacant bishopric of Luxenburg. The king, as was natural, seized his temporalities; and severed from this see the bishopric of Hexham, as likewise Carlisle and Tiviotdale; the former he gave to the archbishop of York, Tiviotdale to the see of Glasgow, and Carlisle he erected into a new bishopric.^f The return of Geoffrey Escolland, who had the care of the temporalities of this see, is printed by Hutchinson, and contains some curious particulars. In consequence of a treaty between the king and duke Robert, our bishop was restored to his see, where he endeavoured by rich presents and all other means to gain the king's favour, but in vain. He built the strong Castle of Norham, to check the inroads of the Scots, and founded the hospital of Kepier near Durham, and Motisfont Priory in Hampshire; but he was particularly solicitous about the work begun by his predecessor, and carried up the walls of the church to the roof: he also fortified the castle with a moat, and at the foot of the castle built over Durham river an arched bridge of stone, now called Framwellgate bridge. He died ^g September, 1128, having held the see twenty-nine years, three months and seven days, and was buried in the chapter-house near his predecessor. After his death the see continued vacant for near five years, during which time the monks finished their church at Durham; but during all this time the temporalities of the see were in the custody of two of the king's officers. In the year 1133,^h the king appointed his chancellor GALFRID RUFUS, who was consecrated by archbishop Thurstan at York, on the 6th of August. He built the present chapter-house; and during his episcopacy it is supposed that the grant of a mint was made to him and his successors. He died May 6, 1140, having possessed the see eight years, and was buried in the chapter-house.

After his death the see was usurped for the space of three years by one William Cumin,ⁱ who was chaplain to the last bishop, and had attended him in his last sickness, and had so ingratiated himself with those who had the care of the castle, that immediately upon the demise of the bishop it was secured for him. He got the king of Scotland and his queen to interest themselves in his favour, but the prior and archdeacon were determined not to elect him; recourse was had to the legate, who decidedly gave his judgment against him; still he persisted, and at last forged a letter from the pope in his favour, which was detected by the abbot of Mailros. In the third year after bishop Galfrid's death, the messengers sent to Rome by the prior and convent, returned with letters from the pope, commanding them within forty days to elect their bishop; and if Cumin's possession of the castle, &c. prevented their holding their election in the church at Durham, they were to go to York or any other adjacent church. Notwithstanding all the precaution of Cumin to the contrary, some of the monks escaped to York, and there in the chapel of St. Andrew, on the 14th of March, 1143, elected

WILLIAM DE ST. BARBARA,^k dean of York, to the see of Durham. Many persons flocked to him on his way to Durham, whither he was forced to be escorted by an armed force; for Cumin still resisted, even to the sword. Several negotiations were set on foot, which were as abruptly broken: at last, when the bishop with several attendants resorted to Durham, Cumin most unexpectedly prostrated himself at the bishop's feet, expressed the greatest contrition for his offences, voluntarily delivered up the castle, together with the whole territories of the palatinate, without any provision in his own favour; and he took an oath to make good the damages which the see had suffered by his intrusion, as far as lay in his power. Thus our bishop was at last enthroned on the 18th of October, 1144, about one year and four months after his consecration. He presided over this see about ten years, remarked for his hospitality and liberality to the poor, his exemplary manner, true piety, wisdom, and great perspicuity of judgment. The see of Durham having become vacant by his death, a dissention arose in the monastery, touching precedency and authority, which for some time delayed the election of a prelate. In the month of February, A. D. 1153, the prior and convent unanimously elected

HUGH DE PUTEACO, PUSAR, OR DE PUDSEY,^l a secular priest, nephew to king Stephen, and Henry le Blois, bishop of Winchester. At the time of his election, although treasurer of York and archdeacon of Winchester, he was not above twenty-five years of age. He met with great opposition from his metropolitan the archbishop of York,^m who was a rigid Cistercian, and principally objected to the bishop's age. The monks would not revoke the act of their chapter, and were excommunicated. The bishop proceeded to Rome, where he succeeded in obtaining the pope's sanction, and was consecrated, and on the 2d of May, 1154, was enthroned at Durham. He did not live long on good terms with his convent: he was too open to flattery, too ready to hear and believe every invidious tale, and advancing to different offices (to some of which he had no pretence,) those minions who were thus ever poisoning his ear. When Richard Coeur de Lion was making his preparations for a crusade, the bishop of Durham inflamed with the zeal of the times, after the example of many other prelates and abbots, also took upon him the vow and cross, and on his part levied money for the expedition,ⁿ making the most sumptuous preparations, that he might exceed all the other prelates in magnificence and show. The king more desirous of his gold than his personal services, proposed to dispense with his vow, and appoint him regent during his absence; his vanity instantly caught at the offer, and upon the king's application for a loan of his treasures, a bargain was entered into for a purchase of the earldom, wapentake, and manor of Sadberge, to be annexed to the see of Durham for ever, together with the earldom of Northumberland for life, for which the prelate was to pay eleven thousand pounds.^o In consequence of this grant, the bi-of the people, and a daring contempt of the resentments of the nobles. He had scarce any learning, and not so much as an external show of religion; but a more agreeable, a more skilful courtier, a more subtle lawyer, a more magnificent prelate, was not in the kingdom. Under the power of this man, the commons of England, instead of being relieved from their grievances, agreeable to the promises made by the king, were harassed with more exactions than they had borne, even under the ministry of the bishop of Bayeux."

^g Lord Lyttleton in his History of Henry II. vol. i. p. 60, draws the following character of this prelate: "Ralph Flambard, a Norman, from the dregs of the people, had been advanced by William to be one of his vassals. He became such a favourite with king William Rufus, that he was set at the head of his administration, and, to the great scandal of the English church, made bishop of Durham. The merit that recommended him to these great promotions, was a forward and enterprising spirit, an eloquent tongue, a taste for those pleasures his master loved, but, above all, a very fertile invention of ways and means for raising of money, with a remorseless insensibility to the complaints shop and his successors graced the mitre of Durham with the earl's coronet, and displayed the sword with the pastoral staff.^a For one thousand pounds more, he obtained from the king the office of chief justiciary of all England, and governor of Windsor Castle; and on the departure of the king soon after, Longchamp, bishop of Ely, and chancellor of England, was appointed regent over the southern parts of England; and the bishop of Durham over the district north of the Humber. But an open rupture soon happening between the two regents, the bishop of Durham was committed prisoner to the tower; neither upon the king's return, could he regain the royal favour. Full of years, he was at last prevailed on by his friends to make his will and think of his future state. He made then restitution to those in his palatinate whom he had oppressed and defrauded; he restored to the monks all he had deprived them of, and added moreover the vill of Newton, and he bequeathed to the king 2000 marks. He died at Houlden, the 3d of March, 1194,^b and was, according to his desire, buried in the chapter-house at Durham.

This bishop caused a survey to be made of all the ancient demesne lands and possessions of this bishopric, in the form and manner of Domesday-book, which is called BOLDON BUKE. There is one copy in the bishop's auditor's office at Durham, and there are two more in the Bodleian Library. It was the editor's original intention to have published it among the charters, but that has been rendered useless by a very accurate collation of them by Dr. Adam Clarke, one of the Sub-Commissioners on the Public Records of the kingdom, in order to insert it in the first volume of Rymer's Fœdera, a new edition of which is in the Press by order of the above-mentioned commissioners, and under the superintendance of Dr. Clarke. Hugh de Pudsey built divers houses belonging to the see, and the church at Darlington; he founded the priory of Einchale, purchased and gave to this see the valuable manor of Ledburgh; and by several other donations to the monastery, he regained the good will of his monks, and lived latterly on very good terms with them. The see remained vacant near two years, when the monks elected

PHILIP DE POICTOU, a native of Aquitaine, one of the king's privy counsellors and chief favourite. His election took place in 1195: he obtained leave to set up a mint at Durham. A dreadful quarrel arose between him and the monks, the cause of which is not stated, but was carried to so melancholy a pitch, that one author^c says, such infamous transactions (he means the cruelties exercised by the bishop) had not been known in the annals of the church, except the assassination of Becket. Taking part with king John against the pope, he was on that account excommunicated; and so is said to have been buried in an obscure grave out of the church by laymen, without any religious ceremony; though Browne Willis says he was interred in the chapter-house. He died April 22, 1207, or, according to others, in the beginning of the year 1208, and was succeeded, after a vacancy of almost ten years, by

RICHARD DE MARISCO, dean of Salisbury, and archdeacon of Northumberland, consecrated at Gloucester, 1217. The whole of the intermediate period is involved in great obscurity, and scarcely any two historians agree in a single date. Richard died, in 1226, at variance, as he had been during almost all the time he presided here, with his monks. He is said to have dreadfully wasted the revenues of his church, and to have left it incumbered with a debt of 40,000^d marks. He was buried in the chapter-house, and the following epitaph was written to his memory by one of the monks.^e

Culmina qui cup- Est sedata sit- Qui populo reg- Quod mors imm- Vobis praepos- Quod sum vos er-	}	itis,	{ laudes pompasque sit- si me pensare vel- memores super omnia s- non pareit honore pot- similis fueram bene se- ad me eurrendo ven-	}	itis.

After the death of Richard de Marisco, the see remained vacant upwards of two years. The monks indeed did elect WILLIAM STICHILL, alias SCOT, archdeacon of Worcester, but the king opposed it (wishing for the appointment of one Luke, his chaplain,) and as the pope refused his sanction, they proceeded to another election, when their choice fell upon

RICHARD POOR, bishop of Salisbury, a man of great learning and integrity.^f He discharged the enormous debt with which his predecessor had left the see encumbered, and lived in great cordiality with his monks, with whom he entered into an agreement or convention for securing their possessions, and preventing disputes with their prelates. He departed this life at Tarrant Monastery, in Dorsetshire, which he had founded, on the 15th of April, 1237, in the ninth year of his episcopacy; Godwin says that he was buried there; though in Anglia Sacra it is expressly stated that he was buried in the chapter-house at Durham, as may be collected also from part of an inscription to his memory, which was extant in Leland's time.^g After a long contest between the king and the monks concerning a successor, they elected on the 2d of January, 1241,

NICHOLAS DE FARNHAM, the queen's physician,^h a man unexceptionable at court, and to whose election the king was instantly reconciled. He was a man of most exemplary sanctity; and a great benefactor to his cathedral, which he covered with a new roof and arched with stone. It was with great difficulty he could be prevailed upon to accept the government of this see; nor did he retain it long; for in the year 1249, he resigned it, and retiring to Stockton, died there in 1257. Upon his resignation, the convent elected

WALTER DE KIRKHAM, dean of York. "The bishop, soon after coming to the see, confirmed to the convent the grants and donations of his predecessor; he gave the church of Brankston for the support of two monks at Warkworth, supposed to be appointed to do duty at the beautiful hermitage near that place, one of the sweetest retirements in the north of England, and perhaps the most elegant cavern in the known world, hewn out of the bosom of a rock; he appropriated the church of Heighington to the convent, after the death or cession of William de Kirkenny, then vicar thereof, for the better support of their hospitality, and the entertainment of pilgrims and poor persons; he also granted to them Horsely-hope, near Muggleswic, containing 216 acres of wood-land and waste, with license to inclose the same."ⁱ He died at Hoveden on the 9th of August, 1260, and was buried in the chapter-house at Durham, and was succeeded by

ROBERT STITCHELL, prior of Finchale; one of his first acts was to join with the prior and convent in making the church of Hoveden collegiate. He founded Greatham Hospital, the manor of which place was forfeited by the rebellion of the Earl of Leicester: the king first seized it, but the bishop put in his claim to it, as possessing "jura regalia" in his palatinate, which claim was acquiesced in by the king. This bishop died in 1274, and was buried in the chapter-house, and was succeeded by

ROBERT DE INSULA, also prior of Finchale. On the day before his confirmation, the archbishop of York commenced the duty of visitor of the convent of Durham, which afterwards occasioned so much controversy; to which succeeded various acts of authority, which he was studious of usurping, and with great assiduity attempted to establish. The bishop appropriated to the priory of Finchale, the church of Middleham; he gave the advowson of the church of Meldon to the prior and convent of Durham, receiving in exchange the entire presentation to Waldeneston church, in Lincoln diocese, to which the bishop and priors used to present by turns, and he granted to them moreover free warren and woods in Bellinghamshire. He died at his castle of Middleham, in 1283; his successor was

ANTHONY BEK, or BEAK, archdeacon of Durham. He was a man of vast power and wealth, and by that means obtained of the pope the Patriarchate of Jerusalem, and of the king the Principality of Man. With the monks of Durham he was in constant dispute; complaining to the pope against the prior as an unfit man, he seized upon all their revenues; they then appealed to the king, who applied in their behalf to the pope, who ultimately restored the prior; but the bishop, during the dispute, was excommunicated, lost his temporalities, and with them entirely several estates belonging to the see. At the conclusion of these contentions the bishop applied himself to the erection of many noble edifices, which have rendered his memory famous. He not only repaired many castles belonging to the see, but built a noble Hall and Chapel at Auckland, in which he placed Prebendaries, and founded the Priory of Alvingham, co. Lincoln, and a College of seven prebendaries at Chester on the Street. Stow says, that so great was this bishop's authority and power, that in the battle of Falkirk, fought by king Edward I. against the Scots, there were no less than thirty two of his banners in the army; and in an ancient heraldic poem, entitled, The Siege of Harlaverock in Scotland, preserved in the Cotton Library (Caligula A. XVIII) enumerating the barons, knights, and gentlemen, who attended Edward I to that siege in 1300, we find among others, bishop Beck and his forces described as follows.

“With them were joined both in company and affection, the forces of the noble bishop of Durham, the most valiant clerk in the kingdom, and truly a good christian: by which I would be understood that he was wise, temperate, just, and chaste, unequalled by any rich man in his regular manner of living. He had neither pride, avarice nor envy; not that he wanted a proper spirit to defend his rights, when he could not work on his enemies by gentle measures, for he was so guided by his conscience as to make every one marvel. In all the king's wars he used to appear in noble array, attended by a numerous and honourable retinue. But he had, I know not in what disturbance, received a wound, which detained him in England, and prevented his coming into Scotland; he, nevertheless, knowing the king's expedition, sent him one hundred and sixty of his men at arms, possessed of more accomplishments than Arthur received from Merlin. He sent also his ensign, which was gules with a fer de moulin of ermine.” The bishop died March 28, 1311,^a and was buried in the cathedral behind the high altar, near the ferretory of St. Cuthbert, contrary to the custom of his predecessors, who, out of respect to St. Cuthbert, never suffered a corpse to come within the edifice; and so superstitious were they then, that they durst not bring his remains in at the doors, but broke a hole in the wall at the end of the church, which is yet visible. Over his grave was a large marble placed, which had this inscription upon it.

Presul magnanimus Antonius hic jacet imus
Jerusalem strenuus patriarcha fuit quod opimus
Annis viceenis regnabat sex et i plenis
Mille trecentinis Christo moritur quoque denis.

RICHARD KELLOW a monk of Durham was elected to succeed him. He lived on terms of the greatest harmony with his monks, and indeed with the whole of his palatinate. The first year after his consecration he revoked those acts of his predecessor, which were prejudicial to the convent, and restored their ancient privileges. He died on the 9th of October, 1316, greatly lamented by the members of his convent, with whom his memory was held in great reverence. He bestowed much on building at Middleham and Stockton, and in his will bequeathed a hundred marks to be given to the poor on the day of his burial. Upon his death there was a great contention respecting a successor; at length

LEWIS BEAUMONT, related to the queen and treasurer of Salisbury, received the pope's bull for his collation, and was consecrated March 26th, 1318. His interest certainly was very powerful, but throughout the whole of his life, remarks Mr. Hutchinson, (who with the lives of the bishops has interwoven the general history of the palatinate, and indeed of the kingdom,) he appears to be in himself a very insignificant character, both in church and state. He had a dispute with the archbishop of York concerning the right of visitation in the jurisdiction of Allertonshire; and whenever the metropolitan came there to visit, the bishop opposed him with an armed force. After much litigation, a compromise was entered into, and the archbishop appropriated the church of Leke for the maintenance of the bishop's table, reserving an annual pension to himself and another to the chapter of York. He built a hall, kitchen, and chapel at Middleham, and is said to have rebuilt the walls of Durham, and recovered several lands to his see after a long process, in the course of which he was obliged to appeal to parliament. He died in 1333, and was buried before the high altar, under the steps, in his own cathedral, and had laid over him^b a large marble, whereon was his effigies engraven in brass, in his episcopal habit, and round him the portraiture of the twelve apostles, and in several parts of the stone these inscriptions; the first of which was his epitaph:

————— In Gallia natus
De Bello-Monte, jacet hic Lodovicus humatus;
Nobilis ex fonte regum comitumque creatus,
Presul in hac sede celi letetur in ede;
Preteriens siste memorans quantus fuit iste
Celo quam dignus juxtus pius atque benignus,
Dapsilis ac habilis inimicus semper avaris.

Credo quod Redemptor meus vivit, qui in novissimo die me resuscitabit ad vitam eternam; et in carne mea videbo Deum salvatorem meum;

and this on his breast:

Spiritus ad Christum qui sanguine liberat istum.

On the death of Lewis Beaumont, the prior and monks elected

ROBERT DE GRAYSTANES, sub-prior of Durham: he was consecrated bishop on the 14th of November, by the archbishop of York, but was denied the temporalities by the king; at whose request the pope granted a bull in favour of

RICHARD DE BURY,^c archdeacon of Northampton, prebendary of Lincoln, Salisbury, and Lichfield, and dean of Wells; and the year after his consecration to this see, he was appointed high chancellor, and in 1336 treasurer of England. He was not only one of the most learned men of his time, but a great patron and encourager of learning; he frequently corresponded with Petrarch, who calls him "virum ardentis ingenii." He founded a library at Oxford (which he furnished with the best collection of books in England) on the scite where Durham, now Trinity College, was afterwards built, and wrote a treatise, entitled "Philobiblos," containing rules for the management of the library, how the books were to be preserved, and upon what conditions lent out to scholars.^a He employed most of his time in works of charity and munificence, scrupulously attentive to his episcopal duties; and died greatly lamented on the 24th of April, 1345, and was buried in the south part of the cross aisle of his cathedral. Upon his death the pope, at the particular request of the king, sent a provision in favour of

THOMAS HATFIELD, prebendary of Lincoln and York. At the famous battle of Nevil's Cross, this bishop displayed the provincial standard, the banner of St. Cuthbert. The throne for the prelates in this cathedral was erected by this bishop, under the arch of which he prepared his own tomb, and gave lands near Auckland called Enknoll, for the maintenance of a priest to say mass there. He founded Durham college in Oxford, an account of which will be given in a subsequent part of this work. At his death he gave to the convent the stock which he had at Weredale, valued at upwards of 400 marks, his jewels and insignia, together with 300 marks in silver, and several valuable ornaments. After a tedious illness, he died May 1381, and was succeeded by JOHN FORDHAM, dean of Wells, prebendary of Lincoln, York, and Chichester; and one of the principal advisers and ministers of the king, which so occupied his attention in secular affairs, that he was able to give very little time to his episcopal duties; yet, though he did so little for his see by his own acts of benevolence, and was an obnoxious character in the state, his interest with the king procured several beneficial instruments to his palatinate; in the seventh year of the reign, he obtained confirmatory grants of privilege and royal jurisdiction, and also a charter, declaratory that merchants might ply on the bishop's side of the river of Tyne, and load and unload coals unmolested by the burgesses of Newcastle. Willis states that bishop Fordham was translated to Ely in 1388; but Hutchinson besides asserts the vacancy here to have been caused by his removal, at the instigation of the barons, who, in a conference with the king upon the distracted and unfortunate state of affairs, insisted upon the banishment of his favourites, of which number was our bishop. In his room, by the same influence, was appointed

WALTER SKIRLAW, LL.D. treasurer of Lincoln, archdeacon of East-Riding, canon of York and Lincoln, dean of St. Martin's, London; first bishop of Lichfield, and afterwards of Wells, from whence he was translated hither by the pope's bull, dated April 3, 1388. He never meddled in state affairs, but employed his whole time in works of munificence, not limited to his own province only, but extended to other parts of the kingdom. He gave and spent 600*l.* on the cloisters of this cathedral, and bestowed 220*l.* on building the dormitory; he built the bridges of Shinkley, Yarrow, and Auckland; the steeples of Hulme and Hovedon, and the chapel of Swine, (co. York) where Godwin says he was born, and a great part of the Lantiri in York minster; and he gave 150*l.* to Wells cathedral to buy ornaments. In his will, dated March 5, 1404, he bequeathed 100 marks to the dormitory of Durham monastery, 20*l.* to Durham college, and the manor of Rothing to University college, Oxford, (for three scholarships) to which he was a principal benefactor. He died March 24, 1405, and was buried in the cathedral with this inscription:

"Credo quod redemptor meus vivit, et in novissimo die de terra resurrecturus sum et in carne mea videbo Deum Salvatorem meum. Hic jacet bone memorie Walterus Skirlaw, primum episcopus Coventr. et Lichfield, deinde Bathon. et Wellen. et postea ad hanc sanctam sedem Dunelmens. translatus, qui obiit xxiv die mensis Martii A.D. mccccv. Deum pro anima ejus."

and lord chancellor of England, which he thereupon resigned, succeeded, being elected May 17, 1406, and consecrated the 8th of August following. On the 6th of June, 1411, pope John xxiii. presented our prelate with a cardinal's hat, but for what services this distinction was conferred is not known. In the year 1414 Cardinal Langley was sent ambassador to France, and in 1417 he accepted again the office of lord high chancellor, which he held till the accession of Henry II. in 1422, when he resigned it; but, at the request of parliament, re-assumed the seals in November 1423, and in 1425 he finally resigned them. By the interest the cardinal possessed he obtained from the crown the royal charter by letters patent, dated in the eighth year of Henry IV.^b (by way of exemplification or inspeximus of preceding grants) in confirmation of the liberties and privileges granted to the bishops by the several potentates from the establishment of this see. This will be found among the charters relating to this church. He bestowed 499*l.* 6*s.* 7*d.* in finishing the Galilee in the west part of the cathedral church and cloister; and founded for the use of his church two schools, one for grammar and another for music. The cardinal died November 1437, and was buried agreeably to the directions in his will, in a chantry founded by him in the Galilee.

ROBERT NEVILL, bishop of Salisbury, was translated to this see by papal provision on the 27th day of January, 1437. He built the Exchequer at Durham, over the door of which his arms are placed; and dying in 1457, in the twentieth year of his pontificate, was interred in the family vault in the cathedral, and not near St. Bede's shrine as he had appointed in his will.

LAWRENCE BOOTH, master of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and chancellor of that university, was, at the intercession of queen Margaret, appointed to this see. Hutchinson says he was also dean of St. Paul's. During these troublesome times, our bishop seems to have sided with queen Margaret, and thereby incurred the displeasure of the king, who, in the year 1462, seized the temporalities, which he retained two years; and upon their restoration, bishop Booth appears to have deserted those from whom he had derived all his preferment and such a chain of benefits; and for his services to his new master, as he may be called, he was appointed in 1473 lord high chancellor of England. Three years afterwards he was translated to York, previous to which he built the gate of the college of Auckland, and the edifices adjoining, which is the only act of the kind recorded of him. Upon his promotion,

WILLIAM DUDLEY, dean of Windsor, was nominated, by provision of the see of Rome, to this bishopric. The short time he held this see, only about six years, and the troubles which prevailed in the state during that period, will account for the want of public works within this province, and the barrenness of records in his time. He died 29th of November, 1483, and was buried in St. Nicholas' chapel in Westminster Abbey, where yet remains his monument, having his effigies on a plate of brass, and this inscription round it:^c

"Hic jacet Gulielmus de Dudley, e familia baronum de Dudley, Dunelm. episcopus, obiit A. D. mccccclxxxiii."

JOHN SHERWOOD, D.D. succeeded, but did not receive restitution of the temporalities till August 6, 1485. Nothing is recorded of this prelate. In the year 1493 he died at Rome; though no cause is assigned for his leaving the kingdom. The see remained vacant till the 7th December, 1494, when

RICHARD FOX was translated hither from Bath and Wells. He had been educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he greatly distinguished himself for his genius and close application. After he had presided here about eight years, and whilst he was on a mission to Scotland, for the purpose of negotiating an alliance between king James of Scotland and princess Margaret, he was translated to Winchester, and succeeded here by

WILLIAM LEVIR, bishop of Carlisle; but he held this see for a very short period, dying in 1505, and was buried in St. Mary's abbey at York, of which he had been abbot.

CHRISTOPHER BAINBRIGGE, dean of Windsor, and master of the rolls, was next elected, after a vacancy of two years; but he held this see only one year, being translated to York, in the history of which cathedral in a subsequent part of this work, will be given the life of this prelate. The see continued vacant till the 22d of April, 1509, the day of the accession of king Henry VIII. when

THOMAS RUTHALL, or ROWTHALL, canon of Lincoln and York, and dean of Salisbury, was nominated to it, and soon after received consecration. Hutchinson,^a who quotes Chambre, says, "that on account of his singular wisdom, he was constantly retained at court; so that he had it not in his power to pay much attention to his bishopric. According to the manners of the times, he was a necessary instrument in those reigns; for which he neglected the spiritual capacity of his episcopacy, so that very few records of note appear during his time. The only public works within the province, attributed to him, were the reparation of the south part of Tynebridge, and building the great dining-hall in the palace at Auckland; which latter not being finished in his life time, he left a sum of money to perfect the plan, and a workman of skill to see it executed.

"In all the public transactions, of which our prelate had a part, or the palatinate was particularly interested, a second character seems so interwoven, that it appears impossible, with any degree of perspicuity, and without running into dull repetitions, to avoid carrying on an account of both persons, in the series of events to be related: This was Thomas Wolsey, the cotemporary and colleague of our prelate in state matters, and his successor in the bishopric."

In the beginning of the year 1522, upon the war breaking out between France and England, king Henry VIII. ordered bishop Ruthall to make out and deliver to him a state of the kingdom in general, but more especially of the revenues of the crown. The bishop obeyed his command, and at the same time compiled an account of his own fortune and effects, which appeared to amount to no less a sum than one hundred thousand pounds; and both accounts were bound alike. The king sent Wolsey to the bishop for the royal estimate, when, by a fatal mistake, the other was delivered to him. Wolsey discovered the mistake instantly, but nevertheless carried it to the king, sarcastically remarking, at the same time, that if the king wanted money, he knew now where to apply for it. Ruthall, when he found what he had done, was so overpowered with grief and vexation, that he was seized with a mortal disease, which carried him off on the 4th of February, 1522. He was buried in St. John's Chapel, Westminster Abbey. Within a fortnight after his death,

THOMAS WOLSEY was nominated guardian of the temporalities of this see, and before the end of the month appointed to succeed to it. At the time of his appointment to this see he held the archbishopric of York and bishopric of Bath and Wells, (the latter of which he thereupon resigned,) and some years before had received from the pope a cardinal's hat, and had been appointed his legate in this country. As Wolsey presided over this see only seven years, and those, remarkable as they were, yet certainly not constituting the most eventful period of his life and of our church history, the more general account of him must be reserved to a future part of this work, when we come to the history of the cathedral church of York, the government of which, in conjunction with many other valuable pieces of church preferment, such as the bishopric of Winchester and abbotship of St. Alban's, he held for sixteen years. On the translation of cardinal Wolsey to Winchester, the see was kept unprovided with a prelate for one year, and all the profits and revenues given to Anne Boleyn. In December, 1529, CUTHBERT TUNSTALL was translated to the see from that of London. He had been educated at Baliol College, Oxford. He was in high favour with the king, who employed his shining abilities not only in the church, but also in many important negociations abroad; and in the year 1719 was one of his majesty's ambassadors at the celebrated treaty of Cambray; on his return from which he was appointed to the vacant see of Durham. His character for learning, for an exquisite judgment, and every amiable virtue, is recorded by every historian. Whilst he was abroad, he became acquainted with the great Erasmus, who is more lavish than all others in praise of him; so that on Tunstall's return to England Erasmus writes: "I seem now scarce to live, Tunstall being torn from me; I know not where I shall fly to." The bishop is said first to have approved of the divorce of Henry and Catharine of Spain; but that he afterwards repented of his decision, and indeed wrote a very learned treatise in defence of the queen's marriage. Upon Wolsey's death, which happened in November 1630, the king pressed more eagerly his divorce; and dreading the opposition of the church of Rome, whilst she retained that sway over his subjects, he determined to shake that authority to the root, and began by forbidding the procuration of dispensations, &c. from the church of Rome. Tunstall at first solemnly protested against it, and particularly against the king's assumption of the title "Supreme head of the church." At length, however, he acquiesced in it, and recommended it from the pulpit. Tunstall subscribed to the articles of alterations in religious doctrines which the king exhibited in the year 1536. In the same year an act of parliament was passed which stripped the bishops of this see of their greatest palatine honours; the "jura regalia" were in most, if not in all, instances taken from them. In the year 1537 the king, with a view of a general dissolution of religious houses, sent visitors throughout the kingdom, to inquire into the loyalty and behaviour of the monks, and to mark out any irregularities, and even tenets, which might need to be reformed, "being strongly disposed," as bishop Godwin remarks, "to promote any reformation which might turn a penny, and furnish his exchequer." Consequently, in 1548, most of the larger monasteries were surrendered to the king; and the priory of Durham was surrendered by Hugh Whitehead, then prior, on the last day of December of that year. "An act was passed to vest all the religious houses, with their lands, rights, and possessions, in the crown, by force of which the king, on the 4th of May, 1541, founded the cathedral church here, and appointed a dean and twelve prebendaries therein for ever, dedicating the church to the glory of Christ and the honour of the blessed virgin, by the name of 'The Cathedral Church of Christ, and blessed Mary the Virgin;' ordaining, that it should be the cathedral church and episcopal seat of the reverend father in Christ, Cuthbert, then bishop, and his successors bishops of Durham for ever. The king, by this foundation charter, appointing the surrendering prior the first dean, and twelve of the most eminent of the fraternity prebendaries, whom he incorporated by the appellation of 'The Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Christ and blessed Mary the Virgin,' and granted them a common seal, with power to the dean, for the time being, to appoint inferior officers and ministers of the church. By letters patent, dated the 16th of May, 1541, the king endowed the church with all its former possessions, having previously dissolved the inferior monasteries or cells which were dependant thereon; we find the manor and cell of Finchale, with the church and all things appertaining thereto, and the cell of Holy Island specified."^c

Of the PRIORS OF THIS MONASTERY, the following Catalogue is given by Mr. Stevens in his Additions to the Monasticon, collected chiefly from Browne Willis.

1. ALDWIN, being the first prior appointed by the bishop, William de Carilepho, upon his bringing the monks to this church of Durham, governed the same almost four years, and died in 1087, on the day before the Ides of April, and the 14th year after, he came into the province of the Northumbrians. He was much lamented by the bishop and the monks, by reason he was a good and modest man, very necessary for the church, and ever most solicitous not to offend God in any thing. He very well deserved to be remembered in their prayers by the monks of Durham, as having led them into that country, and brought them to the service of God by his example and instructions.

2. TURGOT, disciple to Aldwin, was with the unanimous consent of all the monks, appointed by the bishop to succeed him. In his time the aforesaid bishop William, caused the church, which had been built by the bishop Aldun, to be quite taken down, and the next year began to build a new one. This work was begun in the year 1093, on the 3d of the Ides of August, being Friday, for then the aforesaid bishop, the prior Turgot, who was next in dignity to him, and the other monks, laid the first stones in the foundation. The monks built their own offices, and the bishop was at the charge of building the church. At the same time, the bishop appointed the prior Turgot his archdeacon throughout the diocese, leaving that dignity annexed to all succeeding priors of the monastery. Thus far the aforesaid Simeon monk of Durham.

Not being able to attain any fuller account of this or the succeeding priors, than what is given by our curious antiquary, Mr. Willis, in his history of the Mitred Parliamentary Abbies, I shall copy the same and some other particulars relating to this monastery from him, as follows:^a

Turgot, during his government, much improved the privileges and buildings of this convent; after he had presided twenty years and twelve days, he was translated to the bishoprick of St. Andrews in Scotland, and consecrated at York, by Thomas archbishop of that province, the first of August, 1109, but a difference happening between him and the Scottish king, he obtained leave to return to Durham, where he arrived on St. Peter and Paul's day, 1115, and died within two months and four days after, and was buried in the chapter-house among the bishops of Durham. On his preferment to St. Andrews

3. ALGAR succeeded the same year in the priorship, an. 1109. In his time bishop Ranulph gave to this convent Fynchale. He died an. 1137, and was succeeded by

4. ROGER, a person of great sanctity, loving from his youth a retired life. He died an. 1149, and was succeeded by

5. LAWRENCE, elected the same year, a man of singular prudence and learning, as the many books he writ manifest. Bale erroneously says, he was promoted to the abby of Westminster. He died in France on his return from Rome, at the latter end of the year 1157; however, his bones were afterwards brought hither, and deposited in the priory cemetery. His successor was

6. ABSALON, an. 1154. He died in 1156, after four years government, and was succeeded by

7. THOMAS, whom bishop Hugh obliged to resign, an. 1162, on which, retiring to the Holy Island, he there died, an. 1163, having been first succeeded here by

8. GERMAN, a monk of this convent, an. 1162. He died an. 1186, as Mr. Wharton says, who also informs us that after his death this priorship was vacant till the year 1188, when

9. BERTRAM succeeded; though in another account which I have seen, he was not instituted prior, till the year 1189, when German is said to have died. Upon Bertram's death, which happened an. 1212,

10. WILLIAM, a native of the city of Durham, was chosen prior by the convent. He died an. 1214, and had for his successor

11. RALPH KERNECK. He governed nineteen years, and dying an. 1233, was succeeded by

12. THOMAS DE MALSAMBY, alias WELSCOMB, elected an. 1233. In the year 1277, he was nominated by his convent to the bishoprick; but the king opposing it, his election was set aside. He began the new fabrick of the church, about Michaelmas 1242, the bishop and church of Redlington contributing thereto. He resigned, according to Mr. Wharton, an. 1244, and retired to Holy Island, and there ended his days; though other accounts say, he did not resign till the next year, and that the admission of his successor was not till the year 1244, at which time

13. BERTRAM DE MIDDLETON was admitted prior. He desired leave to resign, which he accordingly did, 15th Aug. 1258, and had the churches of Pynnington, Heynton, &c. assigned him for life. He was a religious person, and took great care of the revenues of his convent, and left 11000 marks in the treasury. He wrote with his own hand several books, as may be seen in Mr. Wharton.

14. HUGH DE DERLINGTON, sub-prior, was, on his predecessor's resignation, elected 16th Aug. 1258, being grown, as he alledged, so infirm for his office, he resigned the same Jan. 8, 1272, and was succeeded by

15. RICHARD DE CLAXTON, prior of Holy Island, Jan. 26, 1273. He resigned December 27, 1285; but when he died, or where he was buried, my author informs me not. On his resignation

16. HUGH DE DERLINGTON was re-chosen prior, Jan. 11, 1285, and confirmed the 31st of the same month, by Antony bishop of Durham, at Bagworth, near Leicester, and installed Feb. 7, 1286. After four years government, he resigned the second time on March 11, 1289, upon account of his age, and was succeeded by

17. RICHARD DE HOTOUN, prior of the Cell at Lynche, elected the 24th of March following, confirmed the 28th at Cudington, and installed the 9th of April following. He was removed by Antony de Beke, bishop of this see, May 20, 1300, for opposing his visiting the convent without permission of the cloister, for which he was also excommunicated, suspended, and interdicted. But the king at length appearing in his behalf, it was agreed, that he should be prior for life. However the bishop again suspended him, and within three months ordered the convent to elect another in his stead, and sent his servants to drive out prior Hotoun, which they put in execution, by violently pulling him out of his stall, and installing in his place

18. H. DE LUCEBY, prior of Holy Island; but this action being condemned by the pope

19. RICHARD DE HOTOUN was reinstated again, by decree dated 29th Nov. 1301. After which he kept quiet possession of this priory till his death, which happened in Jan. 1309.

20. WILLIAM DE TANFEILD, prior of Wetheral, by papal provision, dated Feb. 24 following, succeeded, and was accordingly installed Sept. 4 following. He resigned about the feast of St. Barnabas, 1313, and had assigned him for his maintenance, the cell of Jarrow and manor of Wardle. He died in Feb. 1342, having been long before, on his resignation, succeeded by

21. GEFTRY DE BURDON, sub-prior, about the 29th of the said month of June, 1313. He resigned 25th Jan. 1322, and had assigned him for his maintenance Wermouth cell, &c. On his resignation

22. WILLIAM DE CONTOUN, or CONTON was constituted prior, May 3d, 1322. After he had presided here full twenty years, he died at Pittington, in the beginning of Lent, 1342, and was succeeded by

23. JOHN FOSSOR, prior of Wermouth, formerly a monk of this convent, elected 16th March, and confirmed the 31st of the said month, an. 1342. During his government he made near the altar of St. Nicholas and St. Giles, on the north side of the church, a great window, and three lesser, and gave lands, and revenues, and vestments to this convent. He also made, near the said altar, another large and sumptuous window of six lights, which cost him 152*l.* and another in the south part of the prior's hall, which cost 40*l.*; and farthermore erected and repaired divers edifices, as well within as without the convent, and particularly the dormitory, granary, and kitchen. In his time were also divers other good deeds done to this church, whereon was expended 2076*l.* 8*s.* 10½*d.* as may be seen in Mr. Wharton, who particularizes them. However, to instance in some of them, the making the great west window consisting of seven lights, and three others in the north side of the nave of the church, and two on the north side of the choir, were owing to his procurement; as was also the new work of marble and alabaster, made about Midsummer, an. 1372, at the cost of 400*l.* by John de Nevil, son of Ralph and Alice his wife, who were the first seculars buried in this convent, to which the prior and convent contributed 200 marks. But before this work was finished, this good prior died, Nov. 12, 1374, at Bearpare, in the 90th year of his age, and in the 33d of his government, whence his body was removed to Durham, and there buried on the north side of the church, before the altar of St. Nicholas and St. Giles, under a curious and sumptuous marble stone, prepared by him in his life time, whereon were the following verses, fixed by a monk of this house, who well knew his life and actions.

Hic centenorum fuit, effector monachorum
Ac vicenorum numerus fit tantus eorum,
Corpore tam mundus non vixit in orbe secundus.

He was the first prior, as already observed, that was buried in this church, his predecessors having been interred in the cemetery garth, that is, in the church-yard. On his death

24. ROBERT BENINGTON, alias WALWORTH, was elected prior, 11th Dec. 1374, and confirmed the 24th of the said month. He much enriched his convent, and was the first that obtained the use of the mitre and pastoral staff. He was a great benefactor to his church, by finishing the aforesaid work, begun in his predecessor's time, which was made at London, and brought by sea to Newcastle, and thence conveyed to this church and set up. He died in 1391, after he had presided seventeen years, and was buried on the north side of the church, before the altar of St. Bennet, under a marble stone, on which was his effigies in brass.

25. JOHN DE HEMINGBURGH succeeded, and presided twenty-five years. He died an. 1416, and was buried on the south side of the church, under a sumptuous marble, adorned with images, and the following epitaph:

Ecce marmoreus lapis hic tegit ossa Johannis
Quem residere Deus, coelis eunetis det in annis Hemmingbrough, natus fuit hic et honorificatus
Sede prioratus virtute probus monachatus
Qui legis haec, pro me Pater unum supplica pro me
Un' dirigas et Ave Deus ut me liberet Ave.

His successor was

26. JOHN WESSINGTON, elected an. 1416. He writ a book of the Rights and Privileges of this Church of Durham, now extant in the Cotton Library, marked Vitellius, A. 9. He presided thirty years, and dying in 1446, was succeeded by

27. WILLIAM EBCHESTER, professor of divinity, elected June 30, 1446. He presided ten years and three months, and resigned an. 1456; and dying soon after, was buried in the south part of the church, before the lady Boulton's altar, under a marble, with this epitaph:

En tegit haec petra venerabilis ossa Willhelmi
Ingenio praegnans fuerat, coelestia pandens
Oeconomus verbi fidelis dogmata sacri
Egenti largus sitienti pocula praebens

Rexerat ecclesiam prudenter jure prioris
Accumulans praemiis eandem valde decoris
Naturae cessit post partum virginis anno

Corpore defuncto, ejus in saecula virtus

Australi ecclesiae sub marmore parte sepultus
Cum Christo dormit, vivit, regnatque beatus,
Pro quo metra legis haec qui ora mente fideli
Ut sit semper ovans cum sanctis culmine coeli.

28. JOHN BURNBIE, or BURNLEY, professor of divinity, was elected prior Nov. 9, 1456. He presided eight years, and died in 1464, and was buried in the middle of the nave of the church, before the west door, under a marble, whereon was his effigies in brass.

29. RICHARD BELL, batchelor of divinity, succeeded an. 1464. After he had presided thirteen years and twenty weeks, he was consecrated bishop of Carlisle, March 6, 1478, succeeded in this priory the same year by

30. ROBERT EBCHESTER. He presided six years, and dying, an. 1484, was buried on the south part of the church, under a marble stone, whereon was his portraiture in brass, and the following epitaph:

Marmore Robertus jacet hic sub jure misertus
Ebchester certus sibi sit Deus ipse misertus
Exstiterat castus corpus prior hic probitatis
Doctus non factus studio fungens veritatis
Largus amans hilaris subtilia dogmata pandens

Die Pater infer Ave cum credo postulo pro se

Mille C. D. quaterno L. ter deno quoque quarto.

31. JOHN AUKLAND, professor of divinity, succeeded an. 1484, and governed this convent ten years. He died an. 1494, and was buried in this church, and succeeded by

32. THOMAS CASTELL, professor of divinity, elected prior May 6, 1494. He repaired the east gates of the abbey, with the porter's lodge, and built upon the same a neat chapel of stone, to the honour of St. Helen, and covered it with lead, and made an apartment there for a priest. He also repaired the north window in the middle angle of the church, with stone and glass, in which were depicted the portraitures of the four Evangelists, and the images of the Virgin Mary, and St. Cuthbert, with the following inscription under her,

That is, Virgin render thy Son propitious to us.

He died an. 1519, and was buried near the west end of this cathedral, under a marble, whereon was his portraiture in brass, and the following epitaph likewise engraven:

Mortuus hoc tumulo Thomas sub marmore duro
Castellus recubat, pietatis turris athena
In literis doctor divinis, munere prior Moribus excomptis et miti pectore charus
Statura medioeris erat virtute procerus
Dapsilis hospitibus, structuris tum probe notus,
Pauperibus laxo praebebat munera sinu
Nulli clausa bono sua janua, mensa, crumena,
Suppliciter pro se dicas Credo, Pater, Ave
Qui legas haec quo sit coelesti civis in aede.

His successor was

33. HUGH WHITEHEAD, professor of divinity, the last prior, elected Jan. 3, 1519, who surrendering this monastery to king Henry VIII. was, on the conversion of the monks, an. 1540, into a dean and twelve secular canons, nominated the first dean (what Mr. Wharton says, of the bishop's assuming the priory revenues, before the election of prior Hugh, is, as I am informed by my honoured friend Mr. Thomas Baker, B.D. a mistake.) He died an. 1548, and was buried in the Minories church, near the Tower of London.]

The revenues of this convent at the dissolution, were rated at 1366*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* according to Dugdale; but according to Speed, 1615*l.* 14*s.* 10*d.* Out of which Henry VIII. established the present endowment, by charter, bearing date May 16, an reg. 33, and therein appointed as follows, to this new chapter (whose valuation not being specified in the Valor Beneficiorum, I shall here insert,) viz. Deanry 284*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* Twelve prebendaries each 32*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.* Twelve minor canons, each 10*l.* Deacon 6*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* Sub-deacon 6*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* Sixteen lay singing men, each 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* School-master 11*l.* Usher 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* Master of the choristers 9*l.* 15*s.* Divinity reader 20*l.* Eight alms-men 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* Eighteen scholars 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* Ten choristers 3*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.* Two vergers 6*l.* Two porters 6*l.* Two cooks 5*l.* Two butlers 5*l.* Two sacristaries 6*l.* each.

This cathedral is a magnificent pile of building, extending from east to west 137 yards, or 411 feet, in breadth 26 yards and an half, that is about 80 feet. In the middle is a spacious cross isle, in length from north to south, 56 yards and an half, that is, 170 feet. At the extremity of each end, are two smaller ones; in that at the west end was the chapel of our lady, called the Galilee, where was the shrine of venerable Bede. The outside form of this part was adorned with two handsome leaden spire steeples, whose towers still remain; in the northern of which were four large bells, serving to the use of this part of the church, before the reformation; soon after which, three of them were hung up in the great tower in the middle, and added to three other bells, formerly belonging to that steeple, to prevent their alienation, at the cost of Dr. Thomas Sharp, Suffragan Bishop of Berwick, formerly a monk of this convent, who made to them a good chime, which was in being, I presume, till very lately, when the said bells were, about twenty years ago, cast into eight.

The length of the lowest cross isle is about 33 yards, or 100 feet; and that at the east end is 44 yards, or 130 feet; and the height of the middle tower 70 yards and an half, or 212 feet; the whole building is strongly vaulted, and supported by large pillars, and has several large windows in it. The wainscot of this choir is well wrought. The organ is large and good. The font of marble, and an handsome skreen at the entrance into the choir, which is 117 feet in length, and 33 in breadth. It is remarkable in this church, that no other cathedral has a cross isle at the extremity thereof.

The east end was formerly called the nine altars, for that in the front, facing the church, were so many erected, viz. four on the north part, and as many on the south, and one in the middle, which was no doubt the most beautiful of all, because dedicated to St. Cuthbert, and the vicinity of his rich shrine. In the middle of this building was a most curious east window, called the Katherine Wheel, or St. Katherine's Window, comprehending all the breadth of the choir, composed of 24 lights; and at the south end was painted, in another window, called St. Cuthbert's, the life and miracles of that saint; and opposite, on the north side, was a third fair window, called Joseph's window, having in it all the history of Joseph painted on the glass.

This cathedral church now in being, was begun anno 1093, by William de Carilepho, and finished by his next successor, Ranulph Flambard; but it was not brought to perfection till Nich. Farnham was bishop, and Thomas Welscome, alias Malsamb, prior, about the year 1244. Before the reformation the style of it was, the church of St. Mary and St. Cuthbert; but, by king Henry VIII. it was called the cathedral church of Christ and St. Mary.

According to which sum, viz. 2821*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.* it was rated in the ancient payment of First-fruits; but it is now lessened 1000*l.* it paying at this time 1821*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* which abatement was made with very good reason in queen Elizabeth's time; who, for the best part of her reign, notwithstanding what she took away, made all the bishops of this see (who were every one of them married men) pay and refund (as some authors tell us) 100*l.* per annum out of their revenue towards keeping a garrison in these parts, at Berwick, to awe the Scots.

In king Edward the Sixth's time, this bishopric was, by act of parliament, dissolved and annihilated in the last year of his reign; but his death happening soon after, queen Mary restored it again, with the whole revenues of the church.

What it suffered in queen Elizabeth's reign I shall give at length, as I took it from the patents.

April 24, an. 5. Edw. VI. 1551. The king granted to his sister, the lady Elizabeth, for her life, Durham Place, in Westminster, in St. Martin's parish, in the Strand.

[N.B. This was restored, anno 4, Marie, 1557, and the reversion, after her sister's, the said lady Elizabeth's life, granted to Cuthbert Tunstall, bishop of Durham, and his successors; and so it falling, anno 1602, to the see of Durham again, was, in 1661, as I have heard, granted by bishop Cosin on a building lease, reserving to himself and successors, a fee-farm rent of about 200*l.* which is now paid.]

Anno 1561. The letters patent recite, that queen Elizabeth had taken from this bishopric, anno 1559, or 1560, the manors of Norham, Norhamshire, Allerton, Allertonshire, Sadbergh, Middleham, Easington ward and coronator, Cotton-Monville, Gateside, and so had exempted them all out of the restitution of the temporalities to bishop Pilkington. Teste March 25; but

Anno 1566, teste June 13, other patents specify, that on a new restitution of the temporalities, all were restored, except Norham and Norhamshire; so that hitherto the see lost little except paying its pension of 1000*l.* per ann. till bishop Barnes,

Anno 1582, leased out Gateside lordship and borough; as he did, anno 1587, the manor and advowson of Crayke, co. York, to Sir Francis Walsingham, as he had done Hovedon and Hovedonshire for ninety-nine years. He also leased his mills at Darlington for forty years, and his franchises of Norham and Norhamshire; making some grant almost every year during the eleven years he continued bishop: but I shall give the words of the patents as I took them.

Anno 1577, the queen recites, that Barnes, bishop of Durham, May 31, ann. regni 19, granted her his fisheries in Tweed water, and franchises of Norham and Norhamshire: she grants the same to Thos. Leighton, Esq.

Anno 1578, Elizabeth the queen recites, that Richard Barnes, bishop of Durham, anno regni 20, demised to her his mills in Darlington and Blackwall for forty years; and she grants them to William Appleton. Teste June 19.

Anno 1581. The queen recites, that Richard Barnes, bishop of Durham, granted to her the manor of Midridge for eighty years. Now the queen grants the said manor and her interest to Richard Franklin. Teste Nov. 23, anno regni 24.

Anno 1582, Nov. 12. The queen recites, that Richard Barnes, bishop of Durham, anno regni 23, June 20, granted her for seventy-nine years, the lordship and borough of Gateside, near Newcastle; the queen gives her interest to Henry Andrews, and William Selby, aldermen of Newcastle.

Anno 1585, 27 Eliz. The queen recites, that Barnes, bishop of Durham, July 13, anno regni 27, granted her his manor, &c. of Hovedon for ninety-nine years. Now she grants the premises to John Gate, of Houlden, Esq. Teste May 20.

Anno 1587. The queen recites, that Richard Barnes, bishop of Durham, Sept. 29, anno regni 28, devised to her the manor and advowson of Crayke for eighty years. Now she grants the same to Sir Francis Walsingham. Teste March 22, anno regni 30.

In Gardiner's account of Newcastle, he mentions bishop Barnes' lease of Gateside collieries to queen Elizabeth for ninety-nine years, which she assigned to the corporation of Newcastle, to whom it yields an immense profit; as would this bishopric have been worth, perhaps, five times as much as it is, but for the alienations; however, it may still be accounted one of the richest in England by this account of Ex Historia Dunelmensis Ecclesie in Bibliotheca Bodleiana inter codices Laudianos. G. 89. f. 18, b.

ANNO dominice incarnationis DCXXXV. qui est adventus Anglorum in Britanniam LXXXVIII. adventus vero sancti Augustini XXXIX. piissimus rex Oswaldus, secundo imperii suo anno, veniente ad se Aydano, sedem episcopalem in insula Lindisfernensi constituit, ubi et ipse antistes, jubente et suffragante et cooperante rege, monachorum qui secum venerant habitationem instituit, etc.

NUM. II.

Ex Chronicis Dunelmensis Ecclesie in Bibliotheca Bodleiana inter Codices Laud. H. 52. fol. 3. b.

ISTE igitur reverendissimus episcopus, inter cetera doctrine sacre operum illustrium insignia preconia etiam

XII. pueros de natione Anglorum in Christo erudiendos primo sibi episcopatus tempore suscepit, ex quibus unus extitit Eata postea Lindisfarnensis episcopus.

ANNO gracie DCCXLII. pontificatus Aydani anno VII. Christianissimus rex Oswaldus anno etatis sue XXXVIII. regni suo nono annumerato illo anno quem feralis impietas regis Britonum, et apostasia demens regum Anglorum detestabilem fecerat, occisus quinto die mensis Augusti, commisso gravi prelio ab eadem pagana gente, paganoque rege Merciorum a quo et predecessor ejus Edwinus preceptus fuerat in loco qui lingua Anglorum appellatur Maserfeld. Est locus ille conterminus finibus Armonice Wallie, quia Wallie quondam pars maxima dicta est Armonica; a civitate eciam Schrowesbery, septem ferme milibus versus eandem Walliam distat, territoriumque ipsum abbatis illius urbis dicioni cedit, in cujus campi fundo ecclesia que Candida ecclesia dicitur in sancti Oswaldi honore fundatur; in loco non longe ab isto fons perhennis exoritur, qui sancti Oswaldi fons ab incolis illius gentis nominatur, etc.

Finanus autem successit Aydano ab eadem gente et monasterio, unde et predecessor ejus fuerat missus, qui in insula Lindisfarnensi fecit Ecclesiam sedi episcopali congruam, quam tamen more Scotorum, non de lapide sed de robore secto totam composuit, atque arundine textit, quam tempore sequente reverendissimus archiepiscopus Theodorus in honore beati Petri apostoli dedicavit. Sed episcopus loci ipsius Eadbertus, ablata arundine, plumbi laminis eam totam cooperire curavit.

Ecclesia quoque Lindisfarnensis episcopum proprium non habuit, reverso jam patriam Colmanno, et Tuda defuncto; jubente autem rege Oswio, erant sub cura abbatis Mailrosensis Eate fratres ejusdem loci, unde ipse abbas Eata monachum suum sanctum Cuthbertum de monasterio suo de Mailros, ubi stetit prepositus annis tresdecem, post mortem Boysili magistri sui & prepositi ejusdem monasterii, transtulit in Lindisfarnense monasterium, ut ibi regulam monastice perfectionis prepositi auctoritate doceret (&c.)

Cuthbertus consecratus est episcopus Lindisfarnensis Eboraci VII. kalendas Aprilis, in ipso die sancto pasche, sub presencia regis Egfridi, convenientibus ad consecracionem ejus septem episcopis, inter quos beate memorie Theodorus ordinator ejus primatum tenebat. an. Dom. incar. DCLXXXV. regni autem Egfridi XII. Cui rex prefatus villam de Creke et tria in circuitu ejus miliaria ei dedit, ut haberet Eboracum iens vel inde rediens, mansionem ubi requiescere posset, ubi monachorum habitationem instituit. Et quia illa minus sufficiens erat, Lugubaliam que Luel quondam (modo Kaerleil) vocatur, in circuitu xv miliaria habentem, in augmentum suscepit, ubi etiam, sanctimonialium congregatione stabilita, reginam Ermenburgam post mortem Egfridi regis, dato habitu religionis, consecravit, et in profectum divine servitutis scholas instituit. Dicte donationis carta sequitur sub hac forma.

“IN nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Amen. Anno Dominice incarnationis DCLXXXV. congregata sinodo juxta fluvium Alne, in loco qui dicitur Twidford, cui Theodorus archiepiscopus Dorovernensis presidebat, cum Cuthbertis multis Legatariis ad se premissis, nequaquam suo loco posset erui; tandem ego Egfridus, rex Northumbrorum, cum antistite Trurawino, et aliis religiosi viris insulam navigavi, et invitum ad sinodum pertraxi, ubi omnium jussione episcopatus officium suscipere compellitur, cui et omnibus successoribus suis, cum concilio Theodori archiepiscopi, et Trumwini, et tocus consilii, pro salute anime mee et successorum meorum donavi villam que vocatur Creec, et tria miliaria in circuitu ipsius ville. Donavi etiam civitatem que vocatur Lugubalia, et in circuitu ejus xv. miliaria, ut hec, tam ipse quam successores sui, ad Dei servicium in perpetuum habeant ita sicut ego habui, libera et quieta, et secundum suam voluntatem disponenda.

“Ego Cedde Orientalium-Saxonum episcopus subscripsi.

“Ego Sexuli Merciorum episcopus subscripsi.

Venerabilis autem pater Cuthbertus, susceptum episcopatus gradum, commissam sibi plebem, orationibus protegebat assiduis et admonitionibus saluberimis ad celestia vocabat (&c.) Animam ad gaudia regni celestis emisit XIII. kalendas Aprilis, anno Dominice incarnationis DCLXXXVII. episcopatus sui tercio.

Pontificatum tenente Ethelwoldo cepit regnare in Northumbria Ceolwlfus anno Dominice incarnationis DCCXXIX; intravit autem Lindisfarnense monasterium sancto Cuthberto secum conferens thesauros regios et terras, id est, Brigesne et Werceword, cum suis appendiciis, simul et ecclesiam quam ibidem edificaverat, alias quoque quatuor villas Undecestre, Hwyttingham, Eadulfingham et Ecgrolsingham; accepta itaque tonsura in prefato monasterio monachicam cum monachis vitam ducere, et post imperium regni terrestris celesti regno gaudebat militare. Et hii sunt termini donacionis predicte. Ab aqua que vocatur Lina, usque ad Cocwuuda, et inde usque ad civitatem, que vocatur Brincewele. Et a Cocwuuda, usque ad Hafodscheffe versus orientem, et ab Alna usque ad dimidiam viam inter Cocwuuda et Alna.

Mortuo Eardulpho successit in episcopatu Gutheardus, qui redemit de pecunia sancti Cuthberti villam que vocatur Seggesfeld et quicquid ad eam pertinet, preter quod tenebant tres homines Aculfe, Ethetbryth, Frythlake; super hoc tamen habuit episcopus Sacam et Socnam; emit etiam idem episcopus de pecunia sancti Cuthberti villam que vocatur Bedlyngton cum suis appendentiis Nedirton, Grubbatbyse, Cebbengton, Sliceburne, Cambes. Tempore ejusdem Edwardi regis Tilhed abbas Heffresham villam que vocatur Joden australem redemit, cujus dimidiam partem dedit sancto Cuthberto ut esset frater in ejus monasterio, alteram apud Northam ut ibi esset abbas.

Hiis diebus Aelfredus filius Byrttulfuici fugiens piratas, venit ultra montes versus occidentem et quesivit misericordiam sancti Cuthberti et episcopi Gutheardi, ut prestaret sibi aliquas terras. Tunc episcopus Gutheardus, pro caritate Dei et amore sancti Cuthberti, prestitit illi has villas Esyngton, Siletun, Thorep, Horedon, Jodenc, duas Ceatton, Yoden australem, Holmu, Hotun, Tumlington, Billingham cum suis appendiciis, Scrafatun. Has omnes villas sicut dixi prestitit episcopus Aelfredo ut sibi et congregationi fidelis esset, et de hiis plenum servicium redderet, quod et fideliter fecit.

Anno Dominice incarnationis DCCCXXV. Tilredus, cum jam in Episcopatu xii. annos et iv menses egisset, defunctus est. Et in ejus locum Wygredus eligitur episcopus et consecratur.

Predictus autem monarcha Ethelstanus, Ludwallum regem omnium Wallanorum et Constantium regem Scottorum cedere regnis compulit, quos tamen non multo post misericordia motus secundum antiquum statum, sub se constituit regnatos, gloriosius esse regem pronuncians facere quam regem esse, sed non multo post Constantino Scotorum rege rebellante, rex Ethelstanus congregavit exercitum; Scotiam tendens beatum Johannem Beuerlacum visitavit, super cujus altare cultellum pro vadio posuit, promittens quod si victor rediret cultellum digno precio redimeret, quod ei implevit; nam et dimicando contra Scotos dum rogavit ut prece Johannes Beuerlacensis aliquod signum evidens ostenderet quo presentes et futuri cognoscere possent Scotos de jure debere Anglis subjungi, unde rex cum gladio suo percussit scopulum quendam lapideum juxta castrum de Dunbar, quod usque hodie ad mensuram ulne ex ictu cavatur. In redeundo quoque peracta victoria, rex territorium sancti Johannis possessionibus et libertatibus ditavit. In dicto etiam itinere versus Scotiam ad oratorium et sepulcrum sancti Cuthberti divertit, anno scilicet pontificatus Vigredi 10. ejusdem sancti suffragia devotissime postulavit, eique regia munera dedit, et inde hoc testamentum composuit et ad capud sancti Cuthberti posuit.

“IN nomine Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, Ego Ethelstanus rex do S. Cuthberto hunc textum evangeliorum, ij. casulas et j. albam et j. stolam cum manipulo et j. cingulum et ij. altaris cooperimenta, et j. calicem argenteum. et ij. patenas, alteram auro paratam, alteram Greco opere fabrifactam et j. thuribulum argenteum, et j. crucem auro et ebore artificiose paratam, et j. regium pilleum auro textum, et ij. tabulas auro et argento fabricatas, et ij. candelabra argentea auro parata, missale unum et ij. evangeliorum textus auro et argento ornatos, et j. sancti Cuthberti vitam metrica et prosaice scriptam, et septem pallia et ij. cortinas, et ij. tapecia et ij. coppas argenteas cum cooperculis et quatuor magnas campanas et ij. cornua auro et argento fabrifacta, et ij. vexilla, et j. lanceam et duas armillas aureas, et meam villam dilectam Weremuthl australem, cum suis appendiciis, id est, Westun. Wlfer-

Leges quoque et consuetudines ipsius sancti quas avus ejus rex Elfredus et Guthredus rex instituerant, ipse approbavit et inviolabili firmitate servandas imperpetuum censuit; implevit etiam predictas coppas pecunia optima, et jussu ipsius optulit totus exercitus ejus sancto Cuthberto duodecim hundredas et eo amplius. Fratrem vero suum Edmundum de sanctitate et fideli patrocinio sancti Confessoris diligenter prius edoctum fraterne commovit, ut si quid sinistri sibi in hac expeditione eveniret corpus suum sancto Cuthberto referret, et ei illud in die iudicii Deo representandum commendaret.

Post hec abiit, feliciter pugnavit, Scotiam usque Dunsteder et Wertsmor terrestri exercitu vastavit, navali vero usque Catenesse depopulatus est, unde vi compulsus rex Constantinus filium suum obsidem cum dignis muneribus ei dedit, et fidelitatem juravit, paceque sic redintegrata rex Ethelstanus prospere rediit.

Anno ab incarnatione DCCCCL pro infidelitate Northumbrensium egregius rex Anglorum Edredus totam Northumbriam devastat; in qua devastatione monasterium quod dicitur in Rypon, a sancto Wilfrido episcopo quondam constructum, igne est combustum. Redeunte vero domum rege, exercitus multum de Eboraca erumpens civitate, in loco qui dicitur Cesterford, de externa parte exercitus regis multam stragem dedit, unde rex nimis offensus, voluit illico redire, et totam illam terram penitus delere. Verum hoc cognito Northumbrenses timore perterriti Ciricum quem sibi regem prefecerant abjecerunt, regis injurias honoribus, detrimenta muneribus expleverunt, ejusque offensam pecunia non modica placaverunt. Sic deficientibus Northumbrorum regibus sine regulis dicti regis Edredi tempore Anglie monarche, et circa annum Domini DCCCCLIII. commissa est cura dicte provincie per dictum regem Edredum Osulpho Comiti, qui, regnante postmodum Edgardo, socium accepit Oslacum. Deinde Osulphus ad aquilonem plagam Tyne, Oslac vero super Eboracum et ejus fines administrabat, qui fines pro tunc versus aquilonem ad flumen Tese terminabantur; nam ut supradictum est tota terra inter Tynam et Tesam sancto Cuthberto data erat, et ex tunc regimini episcopi sancti Cuthberti subjacebat, licet postmodum per violentiam Danorum magna pars dicte terre ab ecclesia sancti Cuthberti per certum spacium temporis occupata erat minus juste, donec per Ethelstanum regem, et alios de jure sancti Cuthberti plenius informatos dicta terra cum suis libertatibus predicto sancto Cuthberto et ecclesie sue reddita extitit et restituta. Nec invenitur quod ante predictum Osulphum comitem aliquis fuerat comes Northumbrie, et per consequens nec ibidem comitatus, quia comitatus a comite dicitur, id est, dignitas comitis, vel tantum spacium terre quantum ad comitem pertinet. Ex quo sequitur quod nulla pars terre sancti Cuthberti inter Tesam et Tynam aliquid regimini comitis Northumbrie subjacebat, ut de jure comitatus predicti, licet quidam comites Northumbrie quasdam terras sancti Cuthberti inter dicta duo flumina scilicet Tesam et Tynam tenebant ex accomodacione Alduni Dunelmensis episcopi.

Dictus comitatus commissus erat a rege Edwardo (Confessore) et postmodum a rege Willielmo cuidam Morkaro, qui gravibus negotiis impeditus comitatum ultra Tyne tradidit Osulpho adolescenti, filio comitis Eadulphi. Capto postmodum et custodie mancipato Morkaro, rex Willielmus comitatum Osulphi commisit Copsio, qui erat pater Tosti comitis, viro consilario et prudenti. Iste sancto Cuthberto devotus donavit servientibus in sua ecclesia, scilicet, Dunelmensi, has terras in Merstun, decem carrucatas terre et dimidium, et ejusdem ville ecclesiam sancti Germani, et in Thorntuna duas carrucatas, et in Theoftuna decem bovatas terre, et in Readlive dimidiam carucatum, et in Gisburham unam carucatum terre. Pulsus est postea ab Osulpho de comitatu Cop-

sus, et ipse Osulphus anno sequenti, cum in sibi latrones obviabant, lanceam preceps irrueret, illico confossus interiit.

Iste Cospatricius, est pater Dolphini, Waltevi, et Cospatrici. Post Cospatricum datus est comitatus Waltevo Siwardi comitis filio. Capto postmodum Waltevo, commissa est cura comitatus Walchero episcopo usque ad diem occisionis sue. Inde, rex dedit illum honorem Albrio, quo in rebus difficilibus parum valente, patriamque reverso, idem rex Robertum de Moubreio prefecit comitem Northumbrie; sed eo postmodum capto, rex Willielmus junior, et post eum rex Henricus Northumbriam in manu sua tenuerunt.

Rex Anglorum Willielmus Scotiam intravit, cui rex Malcolmus, in loco qui dicitur Abernuthy, occurrit, et homo suus devenit. Rex autem inde Willielmus Cospatricum comitatus honore privavit, imponens illi quod consilio et auxilio affuisset eis qui comitem in Dunelmo peremerant; et quia in parte hostium fuisset cum Normanni apud Eboracum necarentur. Quo dejecto Walcherus in comitatum sustollitur, ei ex patris atque matris prosapia debitum; fuerat enim Siwardi comitis filius ex filia Aldredi, quondam comitis, Elfreda.

Eodem scilicet tempore quo rex reversus de Scotia fuerat, in Dunelmo castellum condidit, ubi se cum suis episcopis tute ab incursantibus habere potuisset.

Hiis temporibus, scilicet, circa annum dominice incarnationis MLXXIII. quidam, in provincia Merciorum, presbyter, ac prior in monasterio quod in Winchlescumbe situm est, habitu et actione monachus, vocabulo Aldwinus, habitabat; qui voluntariam paupertatem et mundi contemptum, cunctis seculi honoribus ac divitiis pretulerat; didicerat enim, ex historia Angl. Northumb. crebris quondam choris monachorum ac multis constipatis agminibus S.S. qui in carne, non secundum carnem viventes, celestem in terris conversationem ducere gaudebant quorum loco (viz.) Monasteria licet jam in solitudinem sciret redacta, desideravit invisere, ibique ad junctionem illorum pauperem vitam ducere gaudebant. Perveniens ergo ad Eoveshamense monasterium, desiderium suum quibusdam ex fratribus patefecit, e quibus duos mox in sui prepositi societatem sibi adduxit, quorum alter, diaconus, postea presbyter, Elfvius; alter ignarus literarum vocabatur Remfridus, quibus abbas eorum non aliter abeundi licentiam dari voluit, nisi prius Aldewinum eis preponeret et curam animarum illorum ipsi commendaret. Perrexerunt itaque simul pedibus incedentes, tres monachi, unum tantummodo secum ducentes asellum, quo libri, necessaria, et vestimenta sacerdotalia ad divinum celebrandum ministerium ferebantur. Ac tandem venerunt Eboracum petentes ab Hugone filio Baldrici qui tunc vicecomitatum gerebat, ut eis duces itineris inveniret usque locum qui Monchester, id est, monachorum civitas appellatur, qui nunc Novum Castellum nominatur, quo perductum venientes, ad tempus ibidem sunt morati ubi nullum antiquum suorum Christi reperiunt vestigium. Ad quos venerandus pontifex Walcherus mittens, rogavit, ut ad se venirent, et sub ejus et ecclesie sue potestate locum manendi reciperent. Quos advenientes, magno cum honore et gaudio suscepit, magnasque Deo gratias, ac communes, retulit, quod in hac provincia Northumbrana monachice professionis viros ad habitandum suscipere et sub suo regimine meruisset habere. Dedit ergo eis monasterium beati Pauli apostoli a benedicto quondam abbate constructum in Giruum, quod, stantibus adhuc solis sine culmine parietibus, vix aliquod antique nobilitatis servaverat signum.

Quibus, culmen de lignis informibus et feno superponentes, divine fervitutis officia ibidem celebrare ceperunt; factaque est, sub ipsis parietibus, casula ubi dormirent. Religiosorum elemosynis pauperem vitam susten-

tarunt, ubi pariter, in frigore et fame pro Christo residentes, degebant, qui a monasteriis que reliquerant omnium rerum affluentiam habere poterant. Interea multi, exemplo eorum provocati, seculo abrenunciantes, monachicum ab eis habitum susceperunt, et sub discipline regularis institutione Christo militare didicerunt. Quorum pauci de ipsa Norhanhumborum provincia, plures vero de Australibus Anglorum partibus fuerant.

Erat namque Aldwinus mundi contemptor egregius, habitu et mente humillimus, patiens in adversis, modestus in prosperis, ingenio acutus, consilio providus, sermone et actione gravis, humilibus socius, contra contumaces justitie zelo feruidus.

Igitur episcopus, videns numerum Deo ibidem servientium cotidie augeri, et jam per multa annorum volumina in illis partibus, extinctam monachice conversationis reviviscere lucernam, gratias Deo vehementer exultavit, et pastorem illis sollicitudinem et paternam, cum omni affectu, impendebat benignitatem.

Cum enim eos ecclesiam ipsam reedificare et destructa monachorum habitacula videret velle restaurare, dedit eis ipsam villam Giruum cum suis appendiciis scilicet Preston, Munecoctun, Henworth, Heabern, Wyneston, Heortedun, et ut opera perficere, et sine indigentia ipsi possent vivere. Taliter illi, ex adversis locis, Christo pastore congregante in unum ovile adducti, didicerunt quam bonum sit et quam jocundum habitare fratres in unum.

Ex his tribus monachis, tria in regione Northanhumborum instaurata sunt monasteria. Unum Dunelmie, in honore beate Marie virginis et sancti Cuthberti presulis, aliud in Lestingham, de quo monasterio, processu temporis, venerunt monachi sancte Marie Eboraci; tertium in loco qui quondam Streneshalgh, id est, sinus fari, nunc Qwythy appellatur.

Insuper Waltheof comes Northumbrie donavit dictis monachis in Giruum, Tynemuth sub hac forma.

“IN nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, Amen. Ego Waltheofus comes tocius Northumbrie, in presentia domini Walcheri episcopi et tocius sancti synodi episcopatus Dunelmie, multociens predicti episcopi exortatione commonitus, et zelo fidei christiane succensus, do, concedo, et presenti scripto confirmo Aldwino priori et fratribus cum eo apud Girve in Dei servicio congregandis, tam in presenti quam in posterum regularem vitam ibidem professuris, et sub Dei et beati Cuthberti patrocinio undecunque terrarum, ad ipsos exercendum, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, ecclesiam sancte Marie in Tynemuth, una cum corpore sancti Oswini regis et martyris, qui in eadem ecclesia requiescit, una cum omnibus terris et locis et ceteris quibuscunque recte ad eum pertinentibus, liberam et quietam imperpetuum. Et, cum prescripta elemosina, offero puerum istum Morekarum nomine sub monachica disciplina in Dei servicio instituendum. Et quia locus ille nimis videtur religiosus horridus et incultus, et dominus episcopus Walcherus et nos ceteri quique prohi hujus episcopatus viri, competentionem quietis sedis circa sanctum beati Cuthberti corpus, Deo annuente, eis preparare proposuimus, prescriptam ecclesiam, cum omnibus que modo Deo et sancte Marie et sancto Oswino data sunt vel imposterum donanda sunt, Deo et sancto Cuthberto glorioso confessori, cui fratres predicti deservituri sunt, dono et concedo, et scripto presenti, signo sancte crucis, ✠ in nomine Sancte Trinitatis, confirmo. Si quis vero imposterum Deo et sancto Cuthberto vel predictis fratribus in Girve conversantibus, sed postea in ecclesia predicti confessoris, sicut constituimus, transferendis, eam vel aliqua ipsius pertinentia, auferre, subtrahere, seu aliquo modo diminuere presumpserit, domini Walcheri episcopi, et totius synodi hujus Dunelmensis ecclesie, et mea, atque omnium christianorum auctoritate perpetuo anathemate condempnetur, et cum diabolo, et angelis ejus eternis ignibus in eternum crucietur. Amen, Amen.

tris Morkari. Signum Leofwini ✠ decani Dunelmensis. Signum Gileberti ✠ nepotis episcopi. Signum Heremingi ✠ presbyteri” (&c.)

Dicti pontificis Walcheri strenuitas non solum nullum rerum ecclesiasticorum passa est detrimentum, verum etiam in eorum augmentum dante sibi rege locum egregium, scilicet Waltham cum ipsius nobili ecclesia, que canonicorum congregatione pollet, adquisivit.

Comitatum autem Northumbrie, capto a rege comite Waltheof, et pro infidelitate et conjuratione versus dictum regem Willielmum apud Wintoniam decapitato, susciperat disponendum.

Anno domini M.LXXX. Rex Willielmus autumpnali tempore Robertum filium suum Scotiam contra Malcolmum misit, sed cum pervenisset ad Eggesbreth, nullo confecto negotio, reversus, castellum novum super flumen Tyne condidit.

Ego Willielmus sedem episcopatus sancti Cuthberti gratia Dei adeptus, terram illius pene desolatam inveni, locumque quem sacri corporis sui presentia illustrat negligentiori quam ejus deceret servitio sanctitatem despiciabiliter destitutum conspexi; Nam neque sui ordinis ibi Monachos, neque regulares reperivi canonicos, unde gravi merore confectus dominum et sanctum Cuthbertum sedulo, et suppliciter rogavi, ut mihi, ad emendandum que minus convenientia videram consulendo, succurreret, et succurrendo perficeret. Igitur senes et prudentiores totius episcopii homines qualiter in mi.....apud sanctum ageretur Cuthbertum a me exquisiti, sedem illius episcopalem in insula Lindisfarnensi fuisse (&c.) prout a venerabili Beda sunt conscripta (&c.)—Longo de hinc tempore transacto crudelis barbarorum manus, non hunc solum, sed et alia circumquaque loca vastantes, nobilem illius cenobii cetum, ausu sacrilego, neci tradiderunt, sed non impune. Nam omnes in brevi, justa Dei vindicta terribiliter percussi, a temporalibus, ad eterna cruciandi tormenta sunt precepti. Hiis ergo preceptis, pristinum ad illius sacrum corpus restaurare pertractans servicium, ne quis que mei solius molimine fecisset irritanda putaret, domini mei regis Willielmi et conjugis sue Matildis regine, et Lanfranci Cantuar. Archiepiscopi consilium petivi. Rex statim, ut ex omni parte tam utilis consilii roboretur consensus, ad papam Gregorium, tam de hiis eum consulturum, quam de aliis que mandaverat sibi locuturum, me misit. Cui, dum de beati patris Cuthberti quedam, licet pauca, dixissem, nostrum per omnia sibi placuit consilium, ut videlicet monachos quos in duobus episcopatus mei locis Weremuthe et Girve inveneram, in unum, coram sancto illius corpore servituros, congregarem, quia episcopatus paritas ad tria non sufficeret Monachorum cenobia.

Igitur beatus papa Gregorius ecclesiam beati Cuthberti sub beati Petri et apostolica protectione suspiciens, episcopalem sedem, una cum beati Cuthberti sacratissimo corpore, cum omni episcopatus integritate et ceterarum omnium possessionum libertate, perpetuis temporibus inviolabiliter conservari precepit, videlicet cum ecclesiis Halgustadensi, et Lindisfarnensi in quibus antiquitus episcopatus extiterant, cum omni parochia que est inter Tese et flumen Tweodam, et insuper cum Carleolo et omni circumjacenti, et Thevidale et omni parochia pertinente. Waltham vero cum suis omnibus appendiciis et Hoveden cum ceteris omnibus episcopi maneriis, et terris aliis omnibus sive redditibus sancto Cuthberto, et omnibus successoribus ipsius episcopis, auctoritate apostolica concessit, et roborando munivit. In quibus omnibus sanctus Cuthbertus et ejus episcopus omnes dignitates et libertates que ad regis coronam pertinent ab omni servicio et inquietudine imperpetuum liberas, immunitas, et quietas, cum omnibus ejusdem pertinentibus, possideret. Ex nostra ceterum petitione et concessione omnes priores, una cum fratribus ceteris, imposterum in ecclesia beati Cuthberti futuris, sub manu sua, auctoritate apostolica suscepit, et prioribus sedem abbatis in choro sinistro concessit, quatenus episcopis absentibus ipsi synoda celebrent, et cetera omnia christianitatis officia persolvant, et omnes liber-tates, dignitates, potestates, et honores que decani Eboracenses sub archiepiscopis obtinuerunt, ipsi sub episcopis Dunelmensibus liberas et quietas teneant. Ecclesias autem quascunque me in subsequentibus donante vel acquirente, seu ceteris fidelibus largientibus adquisierint, in sua manu et donatione liberas habeant, et honestis clericis deservendas committant, qui episcopis de cura animarum tantum in quacunque diocesi fuerint intendant; priori autem et fratribus de beneficiis et redditibus omnibus ceteris, semper attendentes existant. Preterea decrevit atque constituit ut prior communi fratrum consensu et voluntate eligatur, et nisi conventu omni volente, et tunc pro certa et rationabili causa, minime deponatur. Qui primus post episcopum in omni loco sedeat, episcopi dextram habeat et ejus collateralis existat, et primam vocem in episcopi electione ipse et capitulum ejusdem ecclesie habeat. Priores vero et fratres liberam dispositionem in omnibus, tam ecclesiis quam ceteris possessionibus, vel facultatibus, et fratribus officialibus interius et exterius ponendis vel removendis, absque ullius prejudicio imperpetuum semper obtineant.

Hec quoque omnia apostolica, et sua devotissime confirmando auctoritate, suas per me literas regi et Lanfranco archiepiscopi direxit, suam ex parte domini et sancti Petri et Pauli apostolorum benedictionem illis omnibusque hujusmodi propositum adjuvare conantibus largiens; eos vero si qui nisu contrario talia debilitare presumerent, perpetuo eorundem ex parte anathemate, nisi digna satisfactione resipiscerent, feriens.

Insuper etiam leges S. Cuthberti quas ipse coram sancto illius corpore, sicut unquam meliores sub aliquo regum priorum fuerunt, fide sua sancierat denuò tunc renovando confirmavit, et omnia que dominus papa ei suisque literis precepit, sicut superius diximus, concessit, et in consilio pleno coram omnibus roborando, consencientibus prelatibus Anglie tocius, constituit, et Billingham cum omnibus suis appendiciis, quod mali homines prius inde abstulerant, ad nutrimentum inibi servientium restituit.

Sub hac quoque conditione Scot, Elstani filius, pro anime sue redemptione, consencientibus sibi filiis, omnibusque amicis, Acleam cum suis appendiciis tribuit, quod ego, addita quadam villa nomine Cattun, amplicavi; unam illius partem a Meldredo data sibi villa Winleoctun cambicndo, aliam vero ab Edmundo Elstani filio pecunia emendo.

Et ego Girwm et equilonem Wermutham cum suis appendiciis, monachis statim in primis tradidi congregatis. Nec non et Renyngton, duo Lyttingdunas, Hesildene, Daltun, Meringtun, Syneclive, Elvet, ut ibi xl. mercatorum domus monachi ad usum proprium habeant qui prorsus ab omni episcopi servitio liberi semper existant. Ultra ampnem Lynam duas villas Wyflyingtun et Walteshend cum suis appendiciis. Duas quoque ecclesias Lindisfarnensem, scilicet, que sedes primitus fuit episcopalis, cum villa sibi adjacente nomine Fennam et Northam, quam ipse ibi corpore quiescendo illustraverat, cum sua etiam villa nomine Schorewurth.

Ad hoc etiam rex idem Willielmus in Snotinghamshire in Normantuna duorum aratorum et dimidii terram, et unum molendinum, cum Saca et Socne dedit. In Bruncington x. bonatas terre cum Saca et Socne.

In Kivestan quatuor aratorum terram cum Saca et Socne; in Gatham, duorum aratorum terram, cum Saca et Socne dedit. Et in Lincolnshire, ego Willielmus episcopus rege eodem hoc laudante, in Bliburgh duorum terram aratorum quam Regdher prius habuit, et in civitate Eboraca ecclesiam Sancte Trinitatis, cum domorum trium possessionibus, tribuo.

Hec cum suis appendiciis rex idem, litteris sigillo suo signatis confirmavit.

Hec ego Willielmus episcopus, pro salute tam corporis quam anime ejusdem domini mei Willielmi regis et sue conjugis Matildis regine, et filiorum filiarumque sua-

rum, pariterque mei omniumque antecessorum successorumque meorum episcoporum, sancto Cuthberto suisque servitoribus, secundum quod supra scribitur, eternaliter tribuo, et ordino cunctos istius ordinacionis fautores, perpetua Dei omnipotentis patris et filii et spiritus sancti benedictione, benedicendo benedicens.

Omnes autem si qui hanc prophanare vel quicquam inde, nisi forte in melius mutare presumpserint, ex auctoritate principis apostolorum et domini Pape prefati Gregorii, a sancte consorcio ecclesie anathematizando sequestro, et Dei judicio perhennibus cum diabolo et angelis ejus puniendos ignibus reservo. Amen.

Facta sunt hec omnia in consilio Londoniensi coram domino Willielmo rege, anno ab incarnatione Domini m.lxxxij. Huius testibus, Lanfranco primate tocius Anglie Dorobernensis ecclesie archiepiscopi, et Thoma Eboracense archiepiscopi, et Odone fratre regis, Baiocensi episcopo, et Gosfrido episcopo Constanciensi, et Willielmo Londoniensi episcopo, et Walkelino Wintoniensi episcopo, et Hermanno Syraburnensi episcopo, et Wlstan Wirecestrensi episcopo, et Waltero Herefordensi episcopo, et Gisone Wellensi episcopo, Rimigio Dorcensi vel Lincolnensi episcopo, et Herfasto Hemeanensi episcopo vel Norwicensi, et Stigando Seleingensi episcopo, et Osberno Exoniensi episcopo, et Petro Lichefeldensi episcopo, anno episcopatus Willielmi quarto. Diploma W. Regis de mutando Canonicorum Dunelmensium in monachos. Hec etiam in Cart. Antiq. littera D. numero 4, et MSS. Dodworth, Bib. Bod. Vol. xv. p. 63.

IN nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, Amen. Ego Willielmus Dei gracia rex Anglorum hereditario jure factus, ex precepto domini Gregorii pape septimi et ex petitione et concessione domini Willielmi Dunelmensis episcopi, consulentibus et in mea presencia assidentibus et assentiencibus Lanfranco et Thoma archiepiscopis, concedo et constituo ut canonici seculares de ecclesia beati Cuthberti amoveantur, et monachi in ipsam introducantur, qui ibi Deo et presencie sacre corporis beati Cuthberti honorifice imperpetuum deserviant, quos de duobus episcopatus sui locis Weremuthe scilicet et Girwe episcopus ipse accipiat, et omnes possessiones, quas canonici in terris vel ecclesiis habere dinoscuntur, monachis adjiciat cum omnibus prediis ecclesiis et redditibus quos prius habuerant. Volo etiam et precipio ut omnes priores Dunelmensis ecclesie, qui futuri sunt, omnes libertates, consuetudines, dignitates, et honores abbatis optineant, et sedem abbatis in choro sinistro habeant et omnes fratres officiales libere statuunt et removeant, et jure decani primum locum et vocem post episcopum, et in episcopi sui electione cum capitulo suo teneant. Et quascunque dignitates seu honores decani Eboracenses sub archiepiscopis Eboracensibus et super archidiaconos ipsius ecclesie libere possederint, priores Dunelmenses sub episcopo, et super archidiaconos ipsius ecclesie, libere et quiete imperpetuum habeant. Concedo etiam eis et confirmo quicquid Willielmus episcopus de episcopatu suo illis dedit, et quod habeant omnes terras et ecclesias in libera dispositione sua, ita ut nullus se de ipsis intromittat nisi per consensum et licentiam eorum. Et omnes ecclesias suas in manu sua omni tempore habeant, ut de eis quantum poterint redditus suos semper accrescant. Et insuper omnes alias dignitates et libertates quas episcopus Willielmus eis concessit. Et suscipio eos et omnes posses-siones et res eorum in proteccionem meam et custodia. Priores libera fratrum voluntate eligantur, qui cunctis diebus suis sua dignitate libere et quiete perfruantur; hec et omnia alia, que in presenti possident vel in posterum acquirere juste potuerint, sive de pecunia sancti Cuthberti emerint ad honorem et ob amorem predicti sancti, in ecclesiis, terris, et aquis, villis, planis, et pascuis, molendinis cum Sac et Socne, Tel et Team et Infangenthef, et ut curiam suam plenariam et Wrech in terra sua libere et quiete imperpetuum habeant, concedo, et confirmo. Precipio etiam ut liberi et quieti imperpetuum cum hominibus suis penitus sint ab omnibus exitibus, exactacionibus, redditibus, theloneis, et omnibus consuetudinibus ceteris regniis, que ad coronam meam in regno meo pertinent. Omnes prescriptas libertates et dignitates Deo et sancto Cuthberto pro salute anime mee et filiorum meorum, ex precepto et autoritate pape predicti, inviolabiliter imperpetuum conservari precipio. libere in perpetuum possidendas. Precepitque ut monachis in ecclesia sancti Cuthberti Deo imperpetuum servituris, et pro anima sua et successorum ejus oraturis, idem Willielmus episcopus daret in puram et perpetuam elemosinam omnes ecclesias de eisdem terris quas ei ipse donaverat. Unde dictus Willielmus episcopus, in primordio quo terras sibi donatis accepit, ecclesias eorum statim monachis donavit, viz. ecclesiam de Hoveden, cum omnibus capellis et terris et pertinenciis suis, ecclesiam de Brethingham, cum omnibus capellis, terris et pertinenciis suis, ecclesiam de Welletuna, cum capellis et terris et omnibus ejus pertinenciis, ecclesiam de Walkyntuna, cum capellis et terris et omnibus pertinenciis suis. Et ecclesiam de Skypwith, cum omnibus terris, (&c.)

Idem etiam rex Willielmus dedit, (&c.) regium manerium suum, viz. villam de Hemyngbrugh, cum omni terra de Brakenholme, cum omnibus adjacentibus, cum ecclesia ville predictae, et cunctis rebus eidem pertinentibus, in bosco et plano (&c.) ita bene et quiete (&c.) sicut unquam sanctus Cuthbertus alias terras melius ac quietius habuit, cum omnibus consuetudinibus regniis et libertatibus, quas ipse habuit in ipso, dum illud post victoriam Anglie in manu propria tenuit, per easdem divisas quibus ipse seu, ante eum, comites Tostius vel Siwardus, ipsum Manerium tenuit, (&c.) Item Byllingham, cum omnibus suis appendiciis, quam rex Elle, S. Cuthberto prius abstulit, idem rex Willielmus primus sancto Cuthberto restituit, et priori et monachis concessit, (&c.)

In tempore dictorum dicti regis Willielmi primi, et Willielmi Dunelmensis episcopi, Edgarus rex Scotorum dedit sancto Cuthberto et ecclesie Dunelmensi Coldyng-hamschyr, sub eo, qui sequitur, tenore.

In nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, Amen. Notum sit omnibus Christi fidelibus presentibus et futuris, quod ego Edgarus, filius Malcolmi regis Scotorum, totam terram de Lodeneis, et regnum Scotie, dono domini mei Willielmi Anglorum regis, et paterna hereditate, possidens, consilio predicti domini mei regis Willielmi et fidelium meorum, pro animabus patris mei et matris mee, necnon et fratrum meorum Duncani et Edwardi, et pro salute corporis mei et anime mee, et pro omnibus antecessoribus sive successoribus meis, do Deo omnipotenti, et ecclesie Dunelmensi, et sancto Cuthberto glorioso pontifici, et Willielmo episcopo et monachis in eadem ecclesia Deo servientibus et imperpetuum servituris, mansionem de Berwic, et cum ista mansione has subscriptas mansiones, scilicet, Greidene, Lemhale, Clistehale, Bricgham, Ederham, Cirnesie, Hilton, Blacedre, Cynebrytham, Hotun, Ravynton, Paxton, Fulgelden, Mordernton, Lamberton, aliam Lamberton, Hedrynton, Fysewic, Horford, Upsetyntun; et mansionem de Coldingham, et cum ista mansione has subscriptas mansiones, scilicet Aldcamby, Lumesdene, Ristun, Suineston, Farndun, Eitun, aliam Eitun, Prenegest Crammesmer, Heddyngton. Has suprascriptas mansiones do Deo et sancto Cuthberto, cum omnibus terris, et silvis, et aquis, et theloniis, et fracturis navium, et omnibus consuetudinibus que pertinent ad predictas mansiones, et quas pater meus in eis habuit, quietas et solidas, secundum voluntatem Dunelmensis episcopi, imperpetuum libere disponendas.

Hec carta firmata est quarto kl. Septembris, in cimiterio sancti Cuthberti apud Norham, presente Willielmo episcopo, et Turgoto priore, et Ausketello preposito de Norham, et Agero de Cornford.

Deinde dictus Willielmus, Dunelm. episcopus, monachorum possessiones ab episcopi possessionibus segregavit, et liberas et quietas monachis ad suum victum et vestitum concessit.

Post mortem Walcheri episcopi Dunelm. rex Willielmus primus dedit comitatum Northumbrie Albrio, qui donum Waltheofi de Ecclesia de Tynemuth, monachis in Girve dudum factum, eisdem monachis Dunelmum translatis, revocavit, ecclesiamque ipsam eidem sancto Cuthberto perpetuo possidendam adjecit, que cum per xv. annos, velut deserta sine tecto durasset, eam monachi culmine imposito, renovaverunt, et per tres annos possederunt, Sed, Albrio comite Northumbrie in rebus difficilibus parum valente, patriamque reverso, dictus rex Willielmus primus Robertum de Moulbreio prefecit comitem Northumbrie; qui Robertus propter inimicitias que inter ipsum et episcopum agitabantur sancti Cuthberti monachos de ipsa ecclesia expulit, eamque Paulo abbati sancti Albani martyris tradidit. Qui viz. abbas a Dunelmensibus monachis frequenter admonitus, rogatus et prohibitus ne aliena invaderet, audire noluit, quin potius suos illuc ad habitandum misit, quos, non multo post, ipse secutus repente ibi infirmitate corripitur, et dum domum redire temptaret moritur. Ipse quoque comes postea in eadem ecclesia quam sancto Cuthberto abstulit, tempore regis Willielmi secundi, res omnes et honorem, cum sui corporis libertate, amisit.

Hic Willielmus (viz. Conquestor), omnibus inimicis insurgentibus expulsis, provincialibus autem ad nutum subactis, monasteria totius Anglie perscrutari fecit, et pecuniam quam diciores Anglie, propter illius austeritatem et depopulationem, in eis deposuerant, jusserat asportari, censum omnium capitum primus egerat, omnium prediorum redditus in tota Anglia descripserat, et omnes homines libere sue fidei subjugaverat: monasteria Cadomis et de Bello construxerat.

Nunc jam vix aliquis princeps de progenie Anglorum esset in Anglia, sed omnes ad servitutem et ad merorem redacti essent, ita ut etiam Anglicum vocari esset opprobrio.

In Anglia igitur injusta telonea et pessime consuetudines huius temporibus pullulaverunt. Principes omnes, auri at argenti cupiditate cecati adeo erant, ut illud de eis vere dici posset, unde habeat nemo querit sed oportet habere. Quanto magis loquebatur de recto, tanto major fiebat injuria. Qui iusticiarii vocabantur capud erant omnis injustitie. Vice-comites et prepositi quorum erat officium justitia et iudicium, furibus et raptoribus atrociores erant, et omnibus sevissimis seiores. Rex ipse cum ad firmam terras suas quanto carius poterat dedisset, alii magis offerenti et demum, alii semper pactum negligens et ad majora studens dabat. Nec erat cura quanta injuria pauperibus a prepositis fieret.

Hujus Willielmi regis secundi, sicut et antea patris amicitias, prefatus Willielmus Dunelm. episcopus adjunctus familiariter adherebat, unde etiam Alvertonam cum suis appendiciis rex illi donabat, excepto quod comes Alanus habuit in sua castellaria ex alia parte Visca; ita sicut comes Siwardus in vita sua predictum manerium melius et quociens tenuit. In Alvertona xij. carrucata terre (&c.)

Anno Domini MLXXXV. Willielmi regis secundi nono, comes Northumbrie Robertus de Moubrei et Willielmus de Owe Normannus et sediciosus, cum multis aliis, regem Willielmum regno vitaeque privare, et filium amice illius, Stephanum de Albemarle regem constituere sunt conati. Quo cognito rex Robertum comitem ad suam citavit curiam; qui, quia regem Scotorum cum suis copiis deleverat, curam regis adire contempsit. Tunc rex, exercitu de tota Anglia congregato, castellum predicti comitis Roberti ad ostium Tyne fluminis scitum, per duos menses obsedit, et interim quadam municioncula expugnata, fere omnes meliores comitis cepit milites, et in custodia posuit. Dein obsessum castellum expugnavit, et fratrem comitis et equites, quos intus invenit, custodie tradidit. Post hec autem Bebbanbrugh, id est, urbem Bebbe regine, in quam comes fugerat, castellum firmavit, idque Malveisin nominavit et in illo militibus positus ad Suthumbriam rediit. Post cujus decessum comiti Roberto vigiles Novi Castellii promissere, in id se promissuros illum intrare si veniret occulte. Ille autem letus effectus, quadam nocte cum xxx. militibus, ut id perageret, exivit. Quo cognito equites qui castellum custodiebant illum insequentes, ejus exitum custodibus Novi Castellii per nuncios intimaverunt. Quod ille nesciens die quadam dominica temptavit peragere cepta, sed nequivit, deprehensus enim erat. Ea propter ad monasterium sancti Oswini regis et martiris fugit, ubi sexto die obsidionis sue graviter in crure est vulneratus dum suis adversariis repugnasset, quorum multi sauciati, multi vero sunt preempti; de suis quoque nonnulli vulnerati, omnes sunt capti; ille vero in ecclesiam fugit, de qua extractus in custodiam apud Windesoram est positus. Sicque idem ipse comes Robertus in eadem ecclesia quam sancto Cuthberto abstulit, ut predictum est, res omnes et honorem cum sui corporis libertate amisit. Et extunc rex Willielmus, et post eum rex Henricus primus, comitatum Northumbrie in manu sua tenuerunt.

NUM. XV.

De Rege Ricardo primo, et Hugone Dunelmensi Episcopo.

HUGO Dunelmensis episcopus interfuit coronacioni regis Ricardi primi; quem rex in tante familiaritatis et dilectionis gloriam ascivit, ut patrem nomine veneretur, et filiali coleret affectu; nec aliquid in regno suo, sine ipsius arbitrio, statui vel disponi permetteret: curamque

regni ejus prudencie et fidei, donec a peregrinacione reverteretur, committeret. Deditque ei comitatum Northumbrie; et Sadbergiam, cum pertinenciis suis; et carta sua confirmavit, pro undecim mille libris; ita tamen quod Northumbriam in vita sua teneret; Sadbergiam autem jure perpetuo possidendam, tam in suos quam in succedentium usus, perseveraret. Versumque omnibus in miraculum videre episcopum gladio militari accinctum, de veteri episcopo novum comitem factum.

Rex autem Ricardus, circa Jerosolomytanam profectionem, quam voverat studiosius satagens, sumptus parat, et Willielmum regem Scotie pro castellis sibi ablatis tristitia laborante, Berwicum et Rokesburgh, numeratis decem milibus marcarum, sibi restituit. Plurima etiam in Anglia vendidit, quasi nunquam ad Angliam esset reversurus.

Rex Ricardus de terra Syrie revertens, a duce Austrie captus, et imperatori venditus, legatoriis in Angliam directis, mandavit sue liberationi celerius, et ubique ab omnibus subveniri; aurumque et argentum ecclesiarum, et vasa sancta, vel eorum redemptionem, ad se transmitti. Episcopus autem Hugo Dunelmensis, ecclesiam suam nullam volens sustinere diminutionem, quam novis semper decoris optabat incrementis proficere, thesaurum datis centum marcis redemit, et illibatum, loco muneris, ecclesie restituit: misitque regi duo milia librarum argenti, que ille minus gratanter accepit, eo quod censeret modicum prestittisse, quem sub optentu liberationis sue immanes copias didicerat adunasse: amisso igitur comitatus officio, Sadbergiam revocare satagebat.

Iste Hugo Dunelm. episcopus, obiit apud Hovedene anno D. m. c. xliii. corpore ejus Dunelmum delato, et nondum sepulto, Hugo Bardolin saisivit castellum in manum regis domini sui.

De Antonio Beek Dunelm. Episcopo.

ANTONIUS Beek electus est episc. Dunelmensis A. D. 1283, vir magnanimus, post regem nulli in regno in apparatu gestu et potentia militari secundus; in guerra regi potenter assistens, et in consiliis providus. Aliquando in guerra Scotie habuit de sua familia xxvi. vexillarios, et communiter de sua secta cxi. milites.

Provocatus rex contra Antonium episc. Dunelm. eo quod pactum inter ipsum et priorem Dunelm. Ricardum, rege mediante initum non observaret, et ex aliis causis castrum Bernardi cum pertinenciis ab eo abstulit, et comiti de Warwyke contulit; Hert, et Hertnesse Roberto de Clifford; Kewerston Galfrido de Hertipole, que episcopus habuit ex forisfactura Johannis de Baliolo, Roberti de Brus, et Christopheri de Seton. Abstulit ei etiam rex Werke in Tyndale, Penreth, et ecclesiam de Symondburne, quam appropriavit mense sue.

Iste Anthonius appropriavit ecclesie Dunelmensi manerium de Evenwood, data summa pecunie Johanni Haunsard. Manerium de Aucland cum capella et cameris sumptuosissime construxit. Castrum de Somerton juxta Lincolniam, et manerium de Eltham, juxta London, curiosissime edificavit, sed primum regi et secundum regine postea contulit. Insulam de Man, ex dono domini regis, usque ad terminum vite habuit.

Mortuus est Anthonius episcopus Dunelmensis apud Waltham, et sepultus est in ecclesia Dunelmensi anno Domini 1310, contra morem predecessorum suorum in fronte ecclesie ad aquilonalem partem. Ante illum enim, ob reverentiam corporis S. Cuthberti, non est permissum corpus mortuum ingredi ecclesiam Dunelmensem.

Epistola Gregorii undecimi Pape ad regem Edwardum tertium, de non appropriando ecclesiam de Hemyngburgh conventui Dunolmensi, propter excessus monachorum. Foed. et Convent. Vol. vi. p. 759. A. D. 1372. A. 46. E. 3. Ex. Autogr.

GREGORIUS episcopus, servus servorum Dei, carissimo in Christo filio, Edwardo, regi Anglie illustri, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem.

Clare devocionis titulis insignitus, more devotissimi filii, Romanam ecclesiam revereris ut matrem, ac personarum ecclesiasticarum profectibus desideranter intendens, studio sollicitudinis operose intento prosequeris quecunque personis ipsis profutura cognoscis, aut credis; propter quod apostolice sedis, et nostram gratiam et favorem multipliciter promereris.

Verum (fili carissime) a multis fide dignis accepimus, quod, in eadem Dunolmensi ecclesia, que dudum secularis erat, dum ad religiosos translata fuit, tam seculares canonici, quam alii beneficiati, usque ad numerum centum quinquaginta erant, quorum proventus et emolumenta eisdem priori et capitulo fuerunt applicata; et, ultra hoc, quatuor abbatie religiosorum, in quibus modo instituuntur priores, et in quarum qualibet viginti quatuor monachi, quamvis nunc in predictis quatuor abbatibus ultra quindecim non morentur, eisdem priori et capitulo unite extiterunt; et, insuper, duo monasteria, in quorum quolibet quindecim persone morabantur, et in ambobus decem de presenti non morantur; et ultra hec tredecim parochiales ecclesie unite, et multa alia collata eis fuerunt.

Propter quod firmiter credimus, si ita est, unionem ipsam nullatenus fieri eadem sinceritas tua vellet, cum etiam, prout fertur, in dicta ecclesia duntaxat sint quinquaginta sex monachi residentes; qui, cum extra proficiscuntur, cum tribus vel quatuor equitaturis, non sicut decet eorum religionis modestiam incedunt, et in expensis, tam in victu et vestitu, quam in aliis, multum excedunt.

Quocirca, regalem excellentiam, nobis caram, rogamus et hortamur attente, quatinus, etiam tue salutis intuitu, quam sincere diligimus, que scribimus diligenter considerans, super eis, dilecto filio nostro, Symoni titulo sexti, presbytero cardinali, apostolice sedis nuncio (cui etiam de hoc scribimus) in hiis quo tibi dixerit credas indubie.

Et, si ita cordi tibi sit dicta unio, sicut eadem tue littere continebant, nobis, qui tantum cum Deo poterimus votis tuis annuemus, super hoc rescribas.

Nostre tamen intencionis existit, quod, si dicta unio per nos fiat, tot persone in eadem ecclesia, ultra numerum ibidem statutum, ponantur, quot ex super excrescentibus fructibus poterunt sustentari.

Dat. Avinion, duodecimo kal. Januarii, pontificatus nostri anno secundo.

Annandus
Sub filis canabaceis.
