WHAT OF THE DAY?

The following lines were sent to the Autograph Committee of the Great Western Sanitary Fair, by John G. Whittier:

A sound of tumult troubles all the air,
Like the low thunder of a sultry sky.
Far-rolling ere the downright lightnings glare,
The hill blaze red with warnings; foes draw nigh,
Treading the dark with challenge and reply;
Behold the burden of the Prophet's vision—
The gathering hosts, the Valley of Decision,
Dark with the wings of eagles hovering o'er!
Day of the Lord, of darkness and not light,
It breaks in thunder, and the whirlwind roar!
Even so Father, let Thy will be done
In mercy or in judgment. As for me,
If the least and frailest, let me be
Evermore numbered with the truly free,
Who find thy service perfect liberty.
I fain would thank Thee that my mortal life
Has reached the hour (albeit through care and pain)

When Good and Evil, as for final strife,
Close dim and vast on Armageddon's plain,
And Michael and his angels once again
Drive howling back the spirits of the Night!
O for the faith to read the signs aright,
And from the angel of Thy perfect sight
See Truth's white banner floating on before;
And the good cause, despite its venal friends
And base expedients, move to noble ends;
See Peace and Freedom make to Time amends
And through its cloud of dust, Thy thrashing floor,
Flailed by Thy thunders, heaped with chaff-
less grain!

A Thrilling Incident of the War.

We find in the Courier des Etats Unis the following touching narrative of an incident in the siege of Charleston, taken from the Mercury of that city:

The Yankees from time to time throw a shell into the city, and nobody seems to mind it. But misfortune willed that yesterday a shell should throw the entire community into mourning.

Miss Anna Pickens, the daughter of our former Governor, never consented to leave the city. Despite the representations of General Beauregard, she remained, braving shells and Greek fire, tending the wounded, and cheering all with her presence. Among the wounded officers under her care was Mr. Andrew de Rochelle, a descendant of one of the noblest Huguenot families of this city.—This young man was full of the liveliest gratitude for his fair nurse; gratitude gave birth to a more tender sentiment; his suit was listened to; Governor Pickens gave his consent, and the marriage was fixed for yesterday, the 23d of April.

Lieutenant de Rochelle was on duty at Fort Sumpter in the morning, and it was determined that the ceremony should take place at the residence of General Bonham in the evening at seven o'clock. At the moment when the Episcopal clergyman was asking the bride if she was ready, a shell fell upon the roof of the building, penetrated to the room where the company were assembled, burst and wounded nine persons, and among the rest Miss Anna Pickens. We cannot describe the scene that followed. Order was at last re-established, and the wounded were removed, all except the bride, who lay motionless upon the carpet. Her betrothed, kneeling and bending over her, was weeping bitterly, and trying to stanch the blood that welled from a terrible wound under her left breast. A surgeon came, and declared that Miss Pickens had not longer than two hours to live. We will not paint the general despair.

When the wounded girl recovered her consciousness she asked to know her fate, and when they hesitated to tell her—"Andrew," she said, "I beg you to tell me the truth. If I must die, I can die worthy of you." The young soldier's tears were his answer, and Miss Anna, summoning all her strength, attempted to smile. Nothing could be more heart-rending than to see the agony of this brave girl, struggling in the embrace of death and against a terrible mortal pang. Governor Pickens, whose courage is well known, was almost without consciousness, and Mrs. Pickens looked upon her child with the dry and haggard eye of one whose reason totters.

Lieutenant De Rochelle was the first to speak.

"Anna," he cried, "I will die soon, too, but I would have you die my wife. There is yet time to unite us."

The young girl did not reply; she was too weak. A slight flush rose for an instant to her pale cheeks; it could be seen that joy and pain were struggling in her spirit for the mastery. Lying upon a sofa, her bridal dress all covered with blood, her hair disheveled, she had never been more beautiful. Helpless as she was, Lieut. De Rochelle took her hand and requested the Rev. Mr. Dickinson to proceed with the ceremony. When it was time for the dying girl to say Yes, her lips parted several times, but she could not articulate. At last the word was spoken, and a slight foam rested upon her lips. The dying agony was near.—The minister sobbed as he proceeded with the ceremony. An hour afterward all was over, and the bridal chamber was the chamber of death. Lieut. De Rochelle has sworn to perish in battle against the Yankees, and we are sure he will keep his oath. He has now a double motive to hate them and his own existence.

Our entire community share the grief that afflicts the family of Governor Pickens. The obsequies of Miss Pickens will occur to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock. Gov. Pickens and Lieut. De Rochelle will be chief mourners. Our ex-Governor desires that there shall be no military parade. The funeral cortege will be composed of all our ladies, all our magistrates, all our generals, and the wounded soldiers, many of whom owe their lives to the devotion of the deceased. Never has woman been followed to the grave by so many regrets—never has one left sadder remembrances in the hearts of Charlestonians.

THE WINANS "CIGAR" STEAMER.—The latest innovation in naval construction which has been introduced from American yards, is the "cigar ship," upon which model Mr. Winans is having built, in a yard on the Thames, a very fine yacht of about 500 tons. She differs both from the original "cigar ship," and her Rubian imitation in having two screws, one at each end; but her shape is the same, exactly resembling a well made cigar, being perfectly round and tapering at each extremity. Such a bold and singular innovation upon the ordinary form of a ship naturally excites much interest and curiosity, and of course criticism. The critics are, however, far from unanimous; some say that she will roll terribly; others that she will not roll at all, owing to all her dead weight being below the water line. Thus far the professional and nautical critics; the non-professional scientific men point out that a billiard ball rolls because it is on a hard surface, and that a ball does not roll in water. The nautical critics further express doubts, as to the effects of the taper ends of this singular vessel, which certainly look as if they would be in the sea continually under water. Mr. Winans is confident of her success, however, and when ready for sea, which will be in July or August, she is to be taken round to Dover, and thence across to Calais, which it is considered will be a good test of her capabilities. It is also said that she will be kept some time at Dover, in order that in the event of very rough weather preventing the mail steamers for Calais and Ostend proceeding, she may be further tested by taking the place of one of them.—London Cor. Bulletin.

A WASHINGTON correspondent says the official records of the military authorities in that city show that upwards of one hundred and fifty female recruits have been discovered and made to resume the garments of their sex. It is supposed that nearly all of these were in collusion with men who were examined by the surgeons and accepted, after which the fair ones substituted themselves and came on to the war. Curiously enough, over seventy of these martial demoiselles, were acting as officers' servants. In one regiment there were seventeen officers' servants in blue blouses and pants, who had to be clothed in calico and orinoline.—Even a General, who has won many laurels in the war, had a handsome fresh-looking "detailed man," acting as his clerk, whose real name turned out to be Mary Jane G—, and who has parents in Trenton, who are estimable members of society. She said in excuse that she "wanted to see the world."

WAR.—A correspondent, speaking of the poor in the counties of Spottsylvania, Stafford and Caroline, says:

I stopped near a village to feed my horse and to refresh myself, and here I discovered, for the first time, the state of the poor in the vicinity. Where my horse had eaten his corn from a blanket, several grains lay scattered on the ground. Three little half clad children came and gathered them up and ate them. I was interested in one of them, a little girl, and called her to me, and, upon questioning her, she said they had not eaten a piece of bread for three days, their only food having been wild greens gathered from the fields. She said her father was killed in the first battle of Fredricksburg and there was no one in the neighborhood to whom they could apply for help. I gave them what I had in my haversack, and left them enjoying themselves. Yesterday, while the wounded were being transferred from the steamers at Washington wharf, to the ambulances which were to convey to the hospitals, a prominent lady from Michigan was observed looking anxiously about to ascertain if either of her sons were among the number. She soon espied one of them, with his arm shot off above the wrist, and the blood still trickling down from it, sitting upon a coffin. "Where is Charles?" said she. "In this!" said the undaunted hero, pointing to his seat. The lady could not refrain from weeping, and many of those present were much affected by the grief of the weeping mother. She had another son upon the battlefield, from whom she received no tidings.—This is but one of the many affecting incidents that daily come under observation.

HEAT FROM THE STARS.—It is a startling fact, that if the earth were dependent alone upon the sun for heat, it would not get heat enough to keep existence in animal and vegetable life upon its surface. It results from the researches of Pouillet that the stars furnish heat enough in the course of the year to melt a crust of ice seventy-five feet thick—almost as much as is supplied by the sun. This may appear strange when we consider how immeasurably small must be the amount of heat from any one of those distant bodies. But the surprise vanishes when we remember that the whole firmament is so thickly sown with stars that in some places thousands are crowded together in a space no greater than that occupied by the full moon. The eye cannot see more than a thousand at the same time in the clearest heaven, yet the number is probably infinite. From the first to the sixth magnitude inclusive, the total number of visible stars is $3,128.—Dr. Lardner.

WITHOUT even attaching any thoughts to religion, to the sight of the heavens, there is something inexpressibly exciting to the mind in thus losing one's self in the infinity of space; it at once takes away from life its little cares and desires, and from reality its otherwise oppressive weight. As surely as the knowledge of man is the first and weightiest concern in the affairs of men, so surely, on the other hand, is there nothing more harrowing to the mind than the perpetually keeping our eyes fixed on the small circle of human beings by whom we are hemmed in. We must return often to the contemplation and feeling of a higher Power ruling in human affairs, as we see it in nature, ere we can safely come back to the fetters of society.—Rev. skin.

SHAVING METAPHYSICALLY CONSIDERED.—Metaphysically, shaving realizes the abstract theory of intuitive impulses. The agglomeration of irritative capillary particles protruding from the facial epidermis, institutes a reaction in the moral sentiments which eliminates a desire for their removal, synchronous with the first perception, and thus establishes a proof of the electrical connection subsisting between mind and matter. Besides, if a man thinks that he wants shaving, it is evident he cannot shave without thinking, and this involves a constant exercise of the ratiocinative faculty, which we at once perceive renders the abstraction of a beard an employment truly intellectual.

A FREAK OF NATURE.—We were shown yesterday by Dr. Chase the body of an infant that a lady of this city gave birth to recently, which deserves to be classed among the wonders of the age.—The head is partly deformed, as is also the left ear; the right arm is only developed to the elbow, and the left is exactly the shape and about the size of a medium-sized chicken's wing, picked, with the exception that there was a finely formed nail on the end of it; the feet are very much deformed and the legs very short, and what is most remarkable of all it was born at full time. It is something that ought to deeply interest the medical fraternity. Taken altogether it is a wonderful curiosity in its way, and an extraordinary freak of nature. We understand that Dr. Chase has obtained the consent of the parents to keep it, and he has it in his office well preserved, where the curious and inquisitive, if they wish to be further informed, can have their curiosity gratified.—Reese River Revivell.

LONG AND SHORT HAIR.—Many customs have prevailed among the fair sex respecting the mode of arranging the hair, and they have a right to adopt a variety of changes; but cutting the hair short, and wearing it like boys, is not commendable. Men have, at different times, worn the hair long. This has been condemned as an unscriptural custom.—In the days of Charles the First of England, the cavaliers, who despised close religious forms, wore long hair, while Puritans cut theirs short, and were called "roundheads." It has been calculated that by continual cutting and shaving of the hair about seven feet in length is removed from a man in twenty-five years. Some writers assert that the practice of close cutting and shaving tends to weaken the body. Such writers draw a powerful argument from old Samson, who, when all unshorn, slew several thousand Philistines with the jawbone of an ass.

OF A SCIENTIFIC TURN OF MIND.—A little girl who is bedridden, having read a recent story ("Peter Hust") published in the Sun, prevailed upon her mother to buy her half a dozen fresh eggs. These she placed in her bed, and for some three weeks kept them constantly warmed by the heat of her body.—Yesterday morning the patience of the child was rewarded by hearing a pecking noise inside of one of the shells; before dark, the head of a little chicken was visible. Appearance indicates that chickens will be hatched from two of the other eggs. The delight of the child at the result of her hatching operation is extensive. She tells her mother confidentially, that she means to continue the operation, and she wishes her mother to buy her some Canary-bird eggs, and then if they hatched, she would take care of the little family herself.—N. Y. Sun.

LIGHTING GAS WITH THE FINGER.—Any person of a highly electrical temperament (?) may astonish a parlor full of company, by brushing his feet briskly along the carpet for a moment, and then applying his finger to a jet of gas. An electric spark is given off, and the gas is instantly lighted by it. If he should touch a heap of powder it would explode. And is there any mystery about the explosion of powder-mills, when we know that every man carries with him a spark that may blow up a magazine.

IN LOWELL, Mass., there is an apple tree which never blossoms, and yet is loaded every year with fruit. Grafts from it blossom. The seeds are frequently partially or wholly to view at the put side of the "blow" end of the fruit, while the center of the fruit is as compact as that of a turnip.

A HERRING BED.—"Some seed was given me the other day," said a gentleman to his friend, "and as I know you take an interest in such things you can have it if you like; it is herring seed, and I am told that with proper care it will grow, if placed in the garden!"

A WASHINGTON correspondent tells the following story: "I noticed in an ambulance, as the regiment was parting, a soldier who was lying down and resting one arm, with a Zouave cap in his hand, which he waved repeatedly, and cheered as loud as his faint voice would permit."

A "CRINOLINE" CATASTROPHE.—Our lady readers should take warning, says the Ledger, from the subjoined awful ball room catastrophe so thrillingly described below.
