INTRODUCTION.

T is a part of the Divine Providence of the World, that the Strong shall influence the Weak; not only on the Battlefield and in Diplomacy; but also in Learning and Literature. Thus the Nations of Modern Europe have been influenced by the Writings of Greece and Rome: and they have influenced each other, in turn, with their own Power and Beauty in Thought and Expression. Thus, Modern English has been subject in succession to the influence of Classical Literature in the time of Ascham; to the literary fascination of Italy, in the age of Elizabeth; of France, at the Restoration; and of Germany, in more recent times: without at all ceasing in the natural progression of its innate capabilities, for all the fashions and forms which, for a time, it pleased to adopt. In like manner, English Literature has allured the German, the Frenchman, and the Italian: thereby restoring benefit for benefit in the commerce and free trade of the Mind.

2. The stream of Ancient Literature and Cultivation, which, after the fall of Constantinople, advanced from East to West; at length reached our shores in the reign of Henry the Eighth. In the planting and engraftment of Classical learning in England at that time, St. John's College, Cambridge,—founded on 9th April 1511—had a most distinguished share. Its Master and Fellows—whether they adhered to the older or the newer 'faith'—strove alike most earnestly to promote the new 'learning.'

THOMAS NASHE, writing—twenty years after Ascham's death—some-what severely on 'our triuall translators,' in his address To the Gentlemen Students, prefixed to R. Greene's Menaphon, 1589: bears honourable testimony to the worthiness of this College. . . . "I will propound to your learned imitation, those men of import, that haue laboured with credit in this laudable kinde of Translation; In the forefront of whom, I cannot but place that aged Father Erasmus, that inuested most of our Greeke Writers, in the robes of the auncient Romaines; in whose traces, Philipp Melancthon, Sadolet, Plantine, and manie other reuerent Germaines insisting, haue reedified the ruines of our decayed Libraries, and merueilouslie enriched the Latine tongue with the expence of their toyle. Not long after, their emulation being transported into England, euerie priuate Scholler, William Turner, and who not, beganne to vaunt the smattering of Latine, in English Impressions. But amongst others in that age, Sir Thomas Eliots elegance did seuer it selfe from all equalls, although Sir Thomas Moore with his Comicall wit, at that instant was not altogether idle: yet was not Knowledge fullie confirmed in hir Monarchie amongst vs, till that most famous and fortunate Nurse of all learning, Saint Iohns in Cambridge, that at that time was as an Vniuersitie within it selfe; shining so farre about all other Houses, Halls, and Hospitalls whatsoever, that no Colledge in the Towne, was able to compare with the tythe of her Students; hauing (as I haue hearde graue men of credite report) more candles light in it, euerie Winter Morning before fowre of the clocke, than the fowre of clocke bell gaue strokes; till Shee (I saie) as a pittying Mother, put too her helping hande, and sent from her fruitfull wombe, sufficient Schollers, both to support her owne weale, as also to supplie all other inferiour foundations defects, and namelie that royall erection of Trinitie Colledge, which the Vniuersitie Orator, in an Epistle to the Duke of Somerset, aptlie tearmed Colonia diducta from the Suburbes of Saint Iohns. In which extraordinarie conception, vno partu in rempublicam prodiere, the Exchequer of eloquence Sir Ihon Cheeke, a man of men, supernaturally traded in al tongues, Sir Iohn Mason, Doctor Watson, Redman, Aschame, Grindall, Leuer, Pilkington: all which, haue either by their priuate readings, or publike workes, repurged the errors of Artes, expelde from their puritie, and set before our eyes, a more perfect Methode of Studie.

3. THOMAS BAKER in his History of the College of St. John the Evangelist, Ed. by J. E. B., Mayor, 1869; tells us that about 1520-30, "12d per week was allowed in commons to a fellow, and only 7d to a scholar. These were times when £120 was sufficient to found a fellowship [for the private foundations usually run thereabouts], and when £6 per an. was enough to maintain a fellow," p. 81, "as £3 per annum was enough to found a scholar," p. 99.

Baker also gives us a Statement of the finances of the College when Doctor Metcalfe became its third master, about Dec. 1518, which fully corroborates Ascham's account at p. 133: which Statement may be thus summarized:—

Total revenues from lands	234	14	4
Less value of private foundations	48	0	0
	186	14	4
Less the ordinary charges incident to these revenues	125	9	9
Remaining to the sustentation of all such as be to be found of the said lands, i.e. , for their only commons, stipend, and livery yearly	61	4	6
The charges of these viz. of the master, twenty-eight fellows, six scholars and of several servants, is yearly	162	8	0
Excess of Outgoings over Receipts	£101	3	5

Yet Doctor Metcalfe in ways like those described by Ascham, as well as by obtaining the property of the suppressed Nunneries of Higham and Brome-hall, raised the finances of the College to a flourishing condition, until it was spending £1000 a year (equal to £15,000 now) in the spread of knowledge.

4. But the College was not more fortunate in wealth than in learning when, in 1530, Roger Ascham, a Yorkshire lad of 15, entered it. John Cheke had been elected Fellow on the 30th of March in that year: and John Redman became a fellow on 3d of November following. Ascham thus distinctly attributes the race of Scholars that were bred up in St. John's College to the unwearied efforts of these two men. "At Cambridge also, in S. Johns Colledge, in my tyme, I do know, that, not so much the good statutes, as two Gentlemen, of worthie memorie, Syr John Cheke, and Doctour Readman, by their onely example of excellency in learning, of godnes in liuyng, of diligence in studying, of counsell in exhorting, of good order in all thyng, did breed vp so many learned men in that one College of S. Johns, at one time, as I beleue, the whole Vniuersitie of Louaine, in many yeares was neuer able to affourd," p. 67.

As Redman became Master of King's College in 1542, and Cheke went to Court on 10 July 1544 to be Tutor to Prince Edward; the period of Study to which Ascham so gladly and so often reverts in this his last work, 'my swete tyme spent at Cambridge,' would not exceed fifteen years, at the longest; so far at least as the time during which Cheke and Redman gave so mighty an impulse to classical Learning.

5. These Planters of the ancient Literature in England hoped well of their Mother Tongue. The more they learnt of the subtilty of Greek eloquence or the cunning elegance of Roman prose: the more they desired that English might be kept pure, the more they believed it to be capable of a worthy literature.

ROGER ASCHAM while a Fellow of St. John's, deliberately wrote his Taxophilus, published in 1545, in plain and pure English; thus, how strangely to us, defends himself. "If any man woulde blame me, eyther for takyng such a matter in hande, or els for writing it in the Englyshe tongue, this answeyre I may make hym, that when the beste of the realme thinke it honest for them to vse, I one of the neanest sorte, ought not to suppose it vile for me to write: And though to haue written it in an other tonge, had bene bothe more profitable for my study, and also more honest for my name, yet I can thinke my labour wel bestowed, yf with a little hynderaunce of my profyt and name, maye come any fourtheraunce, to the pleasure or commoditie, of the gentlemen and yeomen of Englande, for whose sake I tooke this matter in hande. And as for ye Latin or greke tonge, euery thing is so excellently done in them, that none can do better: In the Englysh tonge contrary, euery thinge in a maner so meanly, bothe for the matter and handelynge, that no man can do worse. For therein the least learned for the moste parte, haue ben alwayes moost redye to wryte. And they whiche had leaste hope in latin, haue bene moste bould in englyshe: when surelye euery man that is moste ready to taulke, is not moost able to wryte. He that wyll wryte well in any tongue, muste folowe thys counsel of Aristotle, to speake as the common people do, to thinke as wise men do; and so shoulde euery man vnderstande hym, and the iudgement of wyse men alowe him. Many English writers haue not done so, but vsing straunge wordes as latin, french and Italian, do make all thinges darke and harde," p. 18. Ed. 1868.

THOMAS HOBY, afterwards knighted, having, after many delays, finished his translation of Baldassare Castiglione's work, spoken of so highly by Ascham at p. 66: in his Epistle, has the following. "As I therefore haue to my smal skil bestowed some labour about this piece of woorke, euen so coulde I wishe with al my hart, profounde learned men in the Greeke and Latin shoulde make the lyke prooffe, and euerye manne store the tunge accordinge to hys knowledge and delite aboue other men, in some piece of learnynge, that we alone of the worlde may not bee styll counted barbarous in oure tunge, as in time out of minde we haue bene in our maners. And so shall we perchance in time become as famous in Englande, as the learned men of other nations haue ben and presently are."

While the work was yet in MS., Hoby sent it to Sir JOHN CHEKE to look over. Cheke wrote the following letter in reply; which is important as coming from one who, Sir T. Wilson says, had 'better skill in our English speache to iudge of the Phrases and properties of wordes and to diuide sentences: than any one else had that I haue knowne.' It is also interesting as showing that uniform spelling had nothing to do with clean English.

This letter was written while Sir John was fading out of life; for shame at his recantation of the Protestant faith at his pardon, for having acted—out of zeal for that faith—as Secretary of State to Lady Jane Grey. He died in the Sept. following of that year, 1557, at the house of his friend Peter Osborne, in Woodstreet. The letter is printed verbatim at the end of the first edition of The Courtier, 1561.

¶ To his louing frind Mayster Thomas Hoby.

FOR your opinion of my gud will vnto you as you writ, you can not be deceiued: for submitting your doinges to mi iudgement, I thanke you: for taking this pain of your translation, you worthilie deseru great thankes of all sortes. I haue taken sum pain at your request cheslie in your preface, not in the reading of it for that was pleasaunt vnto me boath for the roundnes of your saienges and welspeakinges of the saam, but in changing certain wordes which might verie well be let aloan, but that I am verie curious in mi freendes matters, not to determijn, but to debaat what is best. Whearin, I seek not the bestnes haplie bi truth, but bi mijn own phansie, and shew of goodnes.

I am of this opinion that our own tung shold be written cleane and pure, vnmixt and vnmangeled with borowing of other tungen, wherein if we take not heed bi tijm, euer borowing and neuer payeng, she shall be fain to keep her house as bankrupt. For then doth our tung naturallie and praisable vtter her meaning, when she bouroweth no conterfeitnes of other tungen to attire her self withall, but vseth plainlie her own with such shift, as nature craft, experiens, and folowing of other excellent doth lead her vnto, and if she want at ani tijm (as being vnperflight she must) yet let her borow with suche bashfulnes, that it mai appeer, that if either the mould of our own tung could serue us to fasion a word of our own, or if the old denisoned wordes could content and ease this neede we wold not boldly venture of vnknown wordes This I say not for reproof of you, who haue scarslie and necessarily vsed whear occasion serueth a strange word so, as it seemeth to grow out of the matter and not to be sought for: but for mijn own defens, who might be counted ouerstraight a deemer of thinges, if I gaue not thys accompt to you, mi freend and wijs, of mi marring this your handiwork. But I am called awai, I prai you pardon mi shortnes, the rest of mi saienges should be but praise and exhortacion in this your doinges, which at moar leisor I shold do better. From my house in Woodstreeete the 16 of Iuly, 1557.

Yours assured IOAN CHEKE.

These three instances may suffice to show the close connection between their study of the ancient Literature and their care over their native speech. Some of these Classical Students were the best Prose Writers of their time: just as the best Poets then, were those who drew their inspiration from Italy. The two literary influences prepared a way, by creating a favourable literary atmosphere, for our Master Writers in Elizabeth's reign, Spenser and Shakespeare; Bacon and Hooker.

6. Of these Classical Pioneers, Sir JOHN CHEKE was the chief. His influence on the English Literature of that and the next age has hardly been adequately recognized: partly because his principal work was Oral Teaching: and partly because only three or four of his thirty to forty known writings (many now lost) are in English. Sir Richard Sackville calls him 'the best Master . . . in our tyme,' at p. 21. Ascham quotes him ever and anon in this work as an authority from whom there was hardly any appeal, and in particular, relates at pp. 154-159, with a fresh memory, Cheke's criticism of Sallust, made to him about twenty-five years before. Cheke was a Teacher of Teachers. The influence of simply Oral Teachers rests chiefly in the hearts and minds of the Taught, and it shows itself most in their after Lives and Works. Cheke taught Edward VI.; Sir W. Cecil; W. Bill, 7th Master of St Johns; R. Ascham; Sir T. Wilson; and many more celebrities of that time: and their characters and careers reflect his teaching.

T, afterwards Sir T. WILSON, in his Epistle, dated 10 June 1570, to Sir W. Cecil [It would be an interesting list, if English books were grouped according to their dedicatees: as showing the influence of the Nobility and Gentry on Literature], prefixed to his translation of the Olynthiacs of Demosthenes into English: thus ably conveys to us a conception of the surpassing abilities and character of Sir John Cheke.

"Great is the force of vertue (Right Honorable Counsellor) to wynne loue and good will vniuersally, in whose minde soeuer it is perfetelye knowne, to haue once gotte a dwelling. I speake it for this ende, that being solitarie of late time from my other studies, and musinge on this world, in the midst of my bookes: I did then (as I haue oftentimes else done) deepelye thinke of Sir Iohn Cheeke Knyght, that rare learned man, and singular ornament of this lande. And as the remembrance of him was deare vnto me, for his manifolde great gifts and wonderfull vertues: so did I thinke of his most gentle nature and godly disposed minde, to helpe all those with his knowledge and vnderstanding, that any waye made meanes vnto him, and sought his fauour. And to say for my selfe amongst others, I founde him such a friende to me, for communicating the skill and giftes of hys minde, as I cannot but during my life speake reuerentlye of so worthie a man, and honor in my hart the heavenly remembrance of him. And thinking of my being with him in Italie in that famous Vniuersitie of Padua: I did cal to minde his care that he had ouer all the Englishe men there, to go to their bokes: and how gladly he did reade to me and others, certaine Orations of Demosthenes in Greeke, the interpretation wherof, I and they had then from his mouth. And so remembering the rather this world by the very argument of those actions: I did then seeke out amongst my other writings for the translation of them, and happily finding some, although not all: I was caried streightways (I trust by Gods good motion) to make certaine of them to be acquainted so nigh as I coulde with our Englishe tongue, aswell for the aptnesse of the matter, and needefull knowledge now at this time to be had: as also for the right notable, and mo-t excellent handling of the same. And here must I saye, confessing mine owne weakenesse and imperfection, that I neuer founde in my life any thing so harde for me to doe.

Maister Cheeke (whome I dare match with any one before named for his knowledge in the Greeke tongue,) hauing traueyled in Demosthenes as much as any one of them all, and famous for his learning throughout Europe: yet was he neuer so passing in his translations that no exception coulde be made against him. And then what shall I thinke of my selfe, after the naming of so many excellent learned men, but onely submit my doings to the fauour of others, and desire men to beare with my weaknesse. For this must I needes confesse, that I am altogether vnable to doe so in Englishe, as the excellencie of this Orator deserueth in Greeke. And yet the cunning is no lesse, and the prayse as great in my iudgement, to translate any thing excellently into Englishe, as into any other language. And I thinke (although there be many doers) yet scant one is to be found worthie amongst vs, for translating into our Countrie speach. Such a hard thing it is to bring matter out of any one language into another. And perhaps it may be that euen those who take themselues to bee much better learned than I am (as what is he that is not, hauing any name for learning at all?) will finde it an harder peece of worke than they thinke, euen to make Greeke speake Englishe, if they will make prooffe thereof as I haue done. Whose labor and trauallye I woulde as gladly see, as they are lyke now to see mine, that such an Orator as this, might bee so framed to speake our tongue, as none were able to amende him, and that he might be founde to be most like himselfe. The which enterprise if any might haue bene moste bolde to haue taken vpon him, Sir Iohn Cheeke was the man, of all that euer I knew, or doe yet know in Englande. Such acquaintance had he with this notable Orator, so gladly did he reade him, and so often: that I thinke there was neuer olde Priest more perfite in his Portreise, nor superstitious Monke in our Ladies Psalter as they call it, nor yet good Preacher in the Bible or testament, than this man was in Demosthenes. And great cause moued him so to be, for that he sawe him to be the perfitest Orator that euer wrate for these two thousand yeares almost by past (for so long it is since he was) and also for that he perceyued him to haue before his eyes in all his Orations the aduancement of vertue as a thing chiefly to be sought for, together with the honor and welfare of his countrie. Besides this, maister Cheekes iudgement was great in translating out of one tongue into an other, and better skill he had in our English speach to iudge of the Phrases and properties of wordes, and to diuidesentences: than any else had that I haue knowne. And often he woulde englyshe his matters out of the Latine or Greeke vpon the sodeyne, by looking of the booke onely without reading or construing any thing at all: An vsage right worthie and verie profitable for all men, aswell for the vnderstanding of the booke, as also for the aptnesse of framing the Authors meaning and bettering thereby their iudgement, and therewithall perfiting their tongue and vtterance of speach. Moreouer he was moued greatly to like Demosthenes about all others, for that he sawe him so familiarly applying himselfe to the sense and vnderstanding of the common people, that he sticked not to say, that none euer was more fitte to make an English man tell his tale praise worthily in an open hearing, either in Parliament or in Pulpit, or otherwise, than this onely Orator was. . . .

And although your honour hath no neede of these my doinges, for that the Greeke is so familiar vnto you, and that you also, as well as I, haue hearde Sir Iohn Cheeke read the same Orations at other times: yet I thinke for diuers causes I shoulde in right present vnto your honour this my traueyle the rather to haue it through your good liking and allowance, to be made common to many. First the sayd Sir Iohn Cheeke (whome I doe often name, for the honour and reuerence due of so worthie a man) was your brother in lawe [Sir W. Cecil's first wife was Cheeke's sister], your deare friende, your good admonisher, and teacher in your yonger yeares, to take that way of vertue, the fruite whereof you do feele and taste to your great ioy at this day, and shall for euer be remembered therefore" . . . Ed. 1570.

We may not wonder then; if Ascham so affectionately refers to Cheke in this work; as 'that gentleman of worthie memorie, my dearest frend and teacher of all the poore learning I haue," p. 138.

[We would here add, out of the same Epistle, by way of parenthesis, Wilson's defence of Translations, which was possibly provoked by Ascham's remarks, at p. 127. "But such as are grieved with translated bokes, are lyke to them that eating fine Manchet, are angry with others that feede on Cheate breade. And yet God knoweth men would as gladly eate Manchet as they, if they had it. But all can not weare Veluet, or feede with the best, and therefore such are contented for necessities sake to weare our Countrie cloth, and to take themselues to hard fare, that can haue no better."]

7. We have noticed a few of the influences on Ascham in his earlier life: in order to understand his outlook on the Literature of his day; while—as he was growing from 48 to 53 years of age—he wrote this book. The Italian influence had come in like a flood after the publication of Tottel's Miscellany in June 1557. In his rejection of this influence, while he kept up with the classical learning of the time, we judge him to be a Scholar of Henry's time, surviving into the reign of Elizabeth. We do not allude to his Invective against Italianated Englishmen, for which he had doubtless adequate grounds: but to his shunning the airy lightsomeness of Italian poesy, which so much characterizes English Verse for the next forty years. Every one is entitled to a preference in such matters, and Ascham with others. Though he contended for English Iambics, he confessed he never had a "poetical head." He owned to loving the Italian language next after Greek and Latin: but Fiction and Rhyme he could not abide. So we realize him as the strong plain Englishman of Henry's day, with his love for all field sports and for cock-fighting, his warm generous heart, his tolerant spirit, his thorough scholarship, his beautiful penmanship: a man to be loved and honoured.

8. Ascham's special craft was teaching the young, Latin and Greek. He had taught the Queen, as he tells us at p. 96: and now read Greek with her, as she desired. Being thus about the Court, and the Court resting at Windsor on the 10th Dec. 1563; the officers in attendance dined together under the presidency of the Secretary of State. Of the Table Talk on that occasion and its results: Ascham's own account is the best: and need not be repeated here.

9. Looking within the book; we see that begun in December 1563, it was prosecuted off and on for two years and a half, until Sir Richard Sackville's death in July 1566. It was then, for sorrow's sake, flung aside. 'Almost two yeares together, this booke lay scattered, and neglected,' and then finished, so far as we now possess it, by the encouragement of Cecil, in the last six or eight months of Ascham's life. Ascham died 30 Dec: 1568.

If a guess might be hazarded: it would seem that the Author had but gathered the materials together, up to Sir Richard Sackville's death: and that he wove them together in their present form, after he resumed the book again. The allusion at p. 137, to the Queen's visit to Cambridge, in August 1564, as 'late being there,' would show that that part was written about 1565: while the phrase at p. 71, 'Syr Richard Sackuille, that worthy Gentleman, of wortheie memorie, as I sayd in the begynnyng,' would proue that at least The Preface and the Invective against Italianated Englishmen were written after the resumption of the book in 1568: and consequently that it was after then, that the work was finally planned. The first book was then completed, and the second far proceeded with, when Death parted for euer, the busy worker from his Book. This is also confirmed by Ascham's last letter to Sturm: which proves him to haue been intent on the work just before his decease.

10. Thanks to the editions of Upton and Bennet, The Scholemaster (which, like so many of the books of Elizabeth's time, had been quite forgotten in the previous sixteenth century) has obtained, for a hundred years or more, the reputation of an historic English work of general as well as of professional interest. With it, more than with any other of his works, is Ascham's name usually associated. As Toxophilus was the gift of his manhood towards the cultivation of the Body: so in this work—the legacy almost of his last hours—we inherit his ripest, his most anxious thought upon the Education of the Mind and Heart.

11. Among that first race of modern learned Englishmen, who fed and carried aloft the Lamp of Knowledge through all those changing and tempestuous times into the peaceful days of Elizabeth: none has become more famous than Roger Ascham: who, taught by the greatest English Teacher of his youth-tide, Sir John Cheeke: in due time became, to his undying delight, the Instructor of the most noble Scholar within the realm:—the Virgin Queen herself.

ROGER ASCHAM'S METHOD OF TEACHING LATIN.

1. That part of The Scholemaster which describes English life and manners of that age, is for us an heritage of authentic information : his Criticism of Ancient and Contemporary Latin writers, establishes a test of the Classical acumen of his time : but his system of teaching Latin—and mutatis mutandis other languages—deserves our study as a contribution in aid of Education, for all time.

2. We would wish to associate with this Reprint, an excellent book, Essays on Educational Reformers, by the Rev. R. H. QUICK, M.A., London, 1868 : 7s. 6d., but worthy of being perpetually sold at a shilling as a companion volume to this reprint ; inasmuch as it is in some measure a continuation and completion of The Scholemaster. For in these Essays, Mr. Quick ably analyses and compares the successive systems of Instruction adopted by THE JESUITS, ASCHAM, MONTAIGNE, RATICH, MILTON, COMENIUS, LOCKE, ROUSSEAU, BASEDOW, PESTALOZZI, JACOTOT, and HERBERT SPENCER. We cannot therefore too strongly recommend the work to the attention of all those who desire to acquaint themselves with Modern Thought and Experiment in the Science and Art of Teaching.

3. Ascham's Method is avowedly based upon B. I. c. 34 of Cicero's De Oratore, of which the following is a translation : and more especially upon the latter portion of it. "But in my daily exercises I used, when a youth, to adopt chiefly that method which I knew that Caius Carbo, my adversary, generally practised ; which was, that, having selected some nervous piece of poetry, or read over such a portion of a speech as I could retain in my memory, I used to declaim upon what I had been reading in other words, chosen with all the judgment that I possessed. But at length I perceived that in that method there was this inconvenience, that Ennius, if I exercised myself on his verses, or Gracchus, if I laid one of his orations before me, had forestalled such words as were peculiarly appropriate to the subject, and such as were the most elegant and altogether the best ; so that, if I used the same words, it profited nothing ; if others, it was even prejudicial to me, as I habituated myself to use such as were less eligible. Afterwards I thought proper, and continued the practice at a rather more advanced age, to translate the orations of the best Greek orators ; by fixing upon which I gained this advantage, that while I rendered into Latin what I had read in Greek, I not only used the best words, and yet such as were of common occurrence, but also formed some words by imitation, which would be new to our countrymen, taking care, however, that they were unobjectionable." Ed. 1855.

4. Upon these hints, Ascham—after considering all possible means of teaching languages, which he there discusses in the second book—insisted upon the exhaustive study of one or two books, each to be of the highest excellence in its way.

In fact his system might be labelled as

THE DOUBLE TRANSLATION OF A MODEL BOOK.

Mr. Quick remarks, "There are three ways in which the model-book may be studied. 1st, It may be read through rapidly again and again, which was Ratich's plan and Hamilton's ; or, 2nd, each lesson may be thoroughly mastered, read in various ways a dozen times at the least, which was Ascham's plan ; or, 3rd, the pupil may begin always at the beginning, and advance a little further each time, which was Jacotot's plan," p. 215.

5. Ascham, at p. 94, quotes Pliny and Dionysius Halicarnassus in support of his Method, in a passage we have not space to quote, but which is the key to his system. In the brief space that remains to us, we can but outline the process of study he laid down, commending the method to the careful consideration of all teachers.

PREPARATORY.

LEARNER. After the child hath learned perfectly the eight parts of speech : let him then learn the right joining together of substantives with adjectives, the noun with the verb, the relative with the antecedent, p. 25.

A. DOUBLE TRANSLATION.

The Model Book, to begin with, which Ascham recommended in his time was John Sturm's selection of Cicero's letters, for the capacity of children.

This work was first published at Strasburg in 1539, under the title of Ciceronis Epistolæ Libri iv, puerili educationi confecti; and again in 1572.

I. MASTER. a. Let him teach the child, cheerfully and plainly, the cause and matter of the letter, p. 26.

b. Then let him construe it into English, so often, as the child may easily carry away the understanding of it, p. 26.

c. Let him parse it over perfectly, p. 26.

II. LEARNER. a. Let the child, by and bye, both conspire [i.e. combine] and parse it over again. So that it may appear, that the child doubteth in nothing that his master taught him before, p. 26.

. . . So far it is the Mind and Memory comprehending and reproducing the Oral Teaching.

b. Then the child must take a paper book, and sitting in some place where no one shall prompt him, by himself, let him translate into English his former lesson, p. 26.

MASTER. c. Then shewing it to his master: let his master take from him his Latin book.

LEARNER. d. Then, pausing an hour at the least: let the child translate his own English into Latin, in another Paper Book.

III. MASTER. a. When the child bringeth it, turned into Latin; let the Master, at the first, lead and teach his Scholer, to join the Rules of his Grammar Book, with the examples of his present lesson, until the Scholer, by himself, be able to fetch out of his Grammar, every Rule for every Example. So, as the Grammar book be ever in the Scholars hand, and also used of him as a Dictionary, for every present use, p. 26.

b. The Master must compare the child's Retranslation with Cicero's book, and lay them both together, p. 26.

Praising him where he doth well, either in choosing or true placing of Cicero's words.

But if the child miss, either in forgetting a word, or in changing a good for a worse, or misordering the sentence . . . the master shall have good occasion to say. "N. [like M. or N. in the Catechism] Tully would have used such a word, not this. Tully would have placed this word here, not there: would have used this case, this number, this person, this degree, the gender: he would have used this mood, this tense, this simple rather than that compound; this adverb here not there; he would have ended the sentence with this verb, not with that noun or participle, &c.

In these few lines, I have wrapped up the most tedious part of Grammar and also the ground of almost all the Rules . . . Which after this sort, the master shall teach without all error, and the scholar shall learn without great pain: the Master being lead by so sure a guide and the Scholer being brought into so plain and easy a way, p. 27.

Axiom. A child shall take more profit of two faults, gently warned of, then of four things rightly hit, p. 27.

. . . All this while, the child shall use to speak no Latin, p. 28.

With this way of good understanding the matter, plain construing, diligent parsing, daily translating, cheerfull admonishing, and heedfull amending of faults; never leaving behind just praise for well doing: I would have the Scholer brought up: while he had read and translated over the first book of Cicero's Epistles chosen out by Sturm; with a good piece of a Comedy of Terence [Terence at that time held a position in Latin Education, which has not since been maintained], p. 28.

B. ANALYSIS.

As you perceive your scholar to go better and better on away: first, with understanding his lesson more quickly, with passing more readily, with translating more speedily and perfectly than he was wont.

IV. MASTER. a. After, give him longer lessons to translate.

b. Begin to teach him, both in NOUNS and VERBS; what is Proper or Literal? what is Figurative? what is Synonymous, what is Diverse, which be Opposites: and which be the most notable Phrases in all his reading.

V. LEARNER. a. Your scholar, after he hath done his Double translating, let him write in a third Paper Book four of the fore-named six, diligently marked out of every lesson. As

Four or else three or two if there be no more.	{	Proper.	If there be none	{	Differents.	None.
		Figures.	of these all		Opposites.	None.
		Synonymes.	in some reading			&c.
		Differents.	yet omit not
		Oposites.	the order
		Phrases.	but write.

This diligent translating, joined with this heedful marking, in the foresaid Epistles: and afterward in some plain Oration of Tully, as pro Lege Manilia pro Archaia Poeta, or in those three Ad Catum Cæsarem shall work such a right choice of words, so straight a framing of sentences, such a true judgement, both to write skilfully and speak witty, as wise men shall both praise and marvel at, pp. 29-31.

C. READING AND A SECOND KIND OF TRANSLATION.

After that your Scholar shall come indeed: first to a ready perfectness in translating, then to a ripe and skilful choice in marking out his six points, p. 87.

VI. LEARNER. a. I would have him read now, a good deal now at every lecture, these books, p. 88.

- [1.] Some book of Cicero, as the Third Book of Epistles chosen out by Sturm, de Amicit., de Senect.: or the first book Ad Quint. frat.
- [2.] Some Comedy of Terence or Plautus (But in Plautus, skilful choice must be used by the Master to train his scholar to a judgement, in perfecting, and cutting out over old and improper words).
- [3.] Cæsar's Commentaries, in which is seen the unspotted propriety of the Latin tongue; even when it was at its acme.
- [4.] Some Orations of Livy, such as be both longest and plainest.

b. He shall not now daily use translation: but only construe again and parse where ye suspect is any need. Yet let him not omit in these books, marking diligently and writing out orderly his six points.

VII. MASTER. a. For translating, use you yourself, every second and third day, to choose out some Epistle Ad Atticum, some notable commonplace out of Cicero's Orations, or some other part of Tully, by your discretion: which your Scholar may not know where to find.

Translate it you yourself into plain natural English, and then give it him to translate into Latin again: allowing him good space and time to do it: both with diligent heed and good advisement.

Here his wit will be new set on work; his judgment for right choice, truly tried; his memory for sure retaining, better exercised than by learning anything without the book. And here, how much he hath profited, shall plainly appear.

VIII. MASTER. a. When he bringeth it translated unto you, bring you forth the place of Cicero. Lay them together. Compare the one with the other. Commend his good choice and right placing of words. Show his faults gently, but blame them not over sharply. For of such missings gently admonished of, proceedeth Glad and Good Heed-taking. Of Good Heed-taking, springeth chiefly Knowledge, which after growth to perfectness: if this Order be diligently used by the Scholar and gently handled by the Master, p. 88.

D. A THIRD KIND OF TRANSLATION.

When, by this diligent and speedy reading over those forenamed good books of Cicero, Terence, Cæsar, and Livy: and by the second kind of translating out of your English, time shall breed skill, and use shall bring perfection: then you may try, if you will, your scholar, with the third kind of translation. Although the two first ways, by mine opinion, be not only sufficient of themselves, but also surer both for the Master's teaching and Scholar's learning, than this third way is. Which is this.

IX. MASTER. Write you in English, some letter, as it were from him to his father or to some other friend; naturally, according to the disposition of the child: or some tale or fable, or plain narration. But yet use you yourself such discretion for choice therein as the matter may be within the compass, both for words and sentences, of his former learning.

X. LEARNER. Let him translate it into Latin again, abiding in such place where no other scholar may prompt him.

And now take heed, lest your Scholar do not better in some point than you yourself: except you have been diligently exercised in these kinds of translating before, pp. 89, 90.

Or plaine and perfite way of teaching children, to vnderstand, write, and speake, in Latin tong, but specially purposed for the priuate brynging vp of youth in Ientlemen and Noble mens houses, and commodious also for all such, as haue forgot the Latin tonge, and would, by themselues, without a Scholemaster, in short tyme, and with small paines, recouer a sufficient habilitie, to vnderstand, write, and speake Latin.

¶ Cum Gratia et Priuilegio Regiæ Maiestatis, per Decennium.

To the honorable Sir William Cecill Knight, principall Secretarie to the Quenes most excellent Maiestie.

Ondry and reasonable be the causes why learned men haue vsed to offer and dedicate such workes as they put abrode, to some such personage as they thinke fittest, either in respect of abilitie of defense, or skill for iugement, or priuate regard of kindenesse and dutie. Euery one of those considerations, Syr, moue me of right to offer this my late husbands M. Aschams worke vnto you. For well remembryng how much all good learnyng oweth vnto you for defense therof, as the Vniuersitie of Cambridge, of which my said late husband was a member, haue in chosing you their worthy Chaunceller acknowledged, and how happily you haue spent your time in such studies and caried the vse therof to the right ende, to the good seruice of the Quenes Maiestie and your contrey to all our benefites, thyrdly how much my sayd husband was many wayes bound vnto you, and how gladly and comfortably he vsed in hys lyfe to recognise and report your goodnesse toward hym, leauyng with me then hys poore widow and a great sort of orphanes a good comfort in the hope of your good continuance, which I haue truly found to me and myne, and therefore do duely and dayly pray for you and yours: I could not finde any man for whose name this booke was more agre able for hope [of] protection, more mete for submission to iudgement, nor more due for respect of worthynesse of your part and thankfulnessse of my husbandes and myne. Good I trust it shall do, as I am put in great hope by many very well learned that can well iudge therof. Mete therefore I compt it that such good as my husband was able to doe and leaue to the common weale, it should be receiued vnder your name, and that the world should owe thanke therof to you, to whom my husband the authour of it was for good receyued of you, most dutiefully bounden. And so besechyng you, to take on you the defense of this booke, to auaunce the good that may come of it by your allowance and furtherance to publike vse and benefite, and to accept the thankfull recognition of me and my poore children, trustyng of the continuance of your good memorie of M. Afcham and his, and dayly commendyng the prosperous estate of you and yours to God whom you serue and whoes you are, I rest to trouble you.

Your humble Margaret

120 A Præface to the Reader.

When the great plage was at London, the yeare 1563. the Quenes Maiestie Queene Elizabeth, lay at her Castle of Windfore: Where, vpon the 10. day of December, it fortun-ed, that in Sir William Cicells chamber, hir Highnesse Principall Secretarie, there dined together these person-ages, M. Secretarie him selfe, Syr William Peter, Syr J. Mafon, D. Wotton, Syr Richard Sackuille Treasurer of the Exchecker, Syr Walter Mildmaye Chauncellor of the Exchecker, M. Haddon Master of Requestes, M. John Astley Master of the Iewell house, M. Bernard Hampton, M. Nicasius, and J. Of which number, the most part were of hir Maiesties most honourable priuie Counsell, and the reast seruing hir in verie good place. I was glad than, and do reioice yet to remember, that my chance was so happie, to be there that day, in the companie of so manie wise and good men together, as hardly than could haue bene pi[c]ked out againe, out of all England beside.

M. Secretarie hath this accustomed maner, though his head be neuer so full of most weightie affaires of the Realme, yet, at diner time he doth seeme to lay them alwaies aside: and findeth euer fitte occasion to taulke pleasantlie of other matters, but most gladlie of some matter of learning: wherein, he will curteslie heare the minde of the meanest at his Table.

Not long after our sitting doune, I haue strange newes brought me, sayth M. Secretarie, this morning, that diuerse Scholers of Eaton, be runne awaie from the Schole, for feare of beating. Whereupon, M. Secretarie tooke occasion, to wishe, that some more discretion were in many Scholemasters, in vsing correction, than commonlie there is. Who many times, punishe rather, the weakenes of nature, than the fault of the Scholer. Whereby, many Scholers, that might else proue well, be driuen to hate learning, before they knowe, what learning meaneth: and so, are made willing to forsake their booke, and be glad to be put to any other kinde of liuing.

M. Peter. M. Peter, as one somewhat seuerer of nature, said plainlie, that the Rodde onelie, was the sworde, that must keepe, the Schole in obedience, and the Scholer in good order. M. Wotton, a man milde of nature, with soft voice, and fewe wordes, inclined to M. Secretaries iudgement, and said, in mine

terarum. opinion, the Scholehouse should be in deede, as it is called by name, the house of playe and pleasure, and not of feare and bondage:

Plato de
Rep. 7. and as I do remember, so saith Socrates in one place of Plato. And therefore, if a Rodde carie the feare of a Sworde, it is no maruell, if those that be fearefull of nature, chose rather to forsake the Plaie, than to stand alwaies within the feare of a Sworde in a fonde mans handling. M.

M. Mason. Mason, after his maner, was verie merie with both parties, pleasantlie playing, both, with the shrewde touches of many courste boyes, and with the small discretion of many leude Scholemasters. M.

M. Haddon. Haddon was fullie of M. Peters opinion, and said, that the best Scholemaster of our time, was the greatest beater, and named the Person. Though,

this booke. quoth I, it was his good fortune, to send from his Schole, vnto the Vniuersitie, one of the best Scholers in deede of all our time, yet wise men do thinke, that that came so to passe, rather, by the great towardnes of the Scholer, than by the great beating of the Master: and whether this be true or no, you your selfe are best witnes. I said somewhat farder in the matter, how, and whie, yong children, were soner allured by loue, than driuen by beating, to atteyne good learning: wherein I was the bolder to say my minde, bicause M. Secretarie curteslie prouoked me thereunto: or else, in such a companie, and namelie in his præsence, my wonte is, to be more willing, to vse mine eares, than to occupie my tonge.

Syr Walter Mildmaye, M. Astley, and the rest, said verie litle: onelie Syr Rich. Sackuill, said nothing at all. After dinner I went vp to read with the Queenes Maiestie. We red than together in the Greke tonge, as I well remember, that noble Oration of Demosthenes against Æschines, for his false dealing in his Ambassage to king

Philip of Macedonie. Syr Rich. Sackuile came vp sone after: and finding me in hir Maiesties priuie chamber, he tooke me by the hand, and carying me to a windoe, said, M. Afcham, I would not for a good deale of monie, haue bene, this daie, absent from diner. Where, though I said nothing, yet I gaue as good eare, and do consider as well the taulke, that passed, as any one did there. M. Secretarie said very wisely, and most truely, that many yong wittes be driuen to hate learninge, before they know what learninge is. I can be good witnes to this my selfe: For a fond Scholemaster, before I was fullie fourtene yeare olde, draue me so, with feare of beating, from all loue of learninge, as nowe, when I know, what difference it is, to haue learninge, and to haue litle, or none at all, I feele it my greatest greife, and finde it my greatest hurte, that euer came to me, that it was my so ill chance, to light vpon so lewde a Scholemaster. But seing it is but in vain, to lament thinges paste, and also wisdome to looke to thinges to cum, surely, God willinge, if God lend me life, I will make this my mishap, some occasion of good hap, to litle Robert Sackuile my sonnes sonne. For whose bringinge vp, I would gladlie, if it so please you, vse speciallie your good aduice. I heare saie, you haue a sonne, moch of his age: we wil deale thus together. Point you out a Scholemaster, who by your order, shall teache my sonne and yours, and for all the rest, I will prouide, yea though they three do cost me a couple of hundred poundes by yeare: and beside, you shall finde me as fast a Frend to you and yours, as perchance any you haue. Which promise, the worthie Ientleman surelie kept with me, vntill his dying daye.

The cheife
this booke.

We had than farther taulke together, of bringing vp of children: of the nature, of quicke, and hard wittes: of the right choice of a good witte: of Feare, and loue in teachinge children. We passed from children and came to yonge men, namely, Ientlemen: we taulked of their to moch libertie, to liue as they lust: of their letting louse to sone, to ouermoch experience of ill, contrarie to the good order of many good olde common welthes of the Persians and Grekes: of witte gathered, and good fortune gotten, by some, onely by experience, without learning. And lastlie, he required of me verie earnestlie, to shewe, what I thought of the common goinge of Englishe men into Italie. But, sayth he, bicause this place, and this tyme, will not suffer so long taulke, as these good matters require, therefore I pray you, at my request, and at your leysure, put in some order of writing, the cheife pointes of this our taulke, concerning, the right order of teachinge, and honestie of liuing, for the good bringing vp of children and yong men. And surelie, beside contentinge me, you shall both please and profit verie many others. I made some excuse by lacke of habilitie, and weakenes of bodie: well, sayth he, I am not now to learne, what you can do. Our deare frende, good M. Goodricke, whose iudgement I could well beleue, did once for all, satiffye me fullie therein. Againe, I heard you say, not long agoe, that you may thanke Syr John Cheke, for all the learninge you haue : And I know verie well my selfe, that you did teach the Quene. And therefore feing God did so bleffe you, to make you the Scholer of the best Master, and also the Schole-master of the best Scholer, that euer were in our tyme, furelie, you should please God, benefite your countrie, and honest your owne name, if you would take the paines, to impart to others, what you learned of soch a Master, and how ye taught such a scholer. And, in vttering the stufte ye receiued of the one, in declaring the order ye tooke with the other, ye shall neuer lacke, neither matter, nor maner, what to write, nor how to write in this kinde of Argument.

I beginning some farther excuse, sodeinlie was called to cum to the Queene. The night following, I slept litle, my head was so full of this our former taulke, and I so mindefull, somewhat to satisfie the honest request of so deare a frend. I thought to præpare some litle treatise for a New yeares gift that Christmas. But, as it chanceth to busie builders, so, in building thys my poore Scholehouse (the rather bicause the forme of it is somewhat new, and differing from others) the worke rose dailie higher and wider, than I thought it would at the beginninge.

And though it appeare now, and be in verie deede, but a small cotage, poore for the stufte, and rude for the workemanship, yet in going forward, I found the site so good, as I was lothe to giue it ouer, but the making so costlie, outreaching my habilitie, as many tymes I wished, that some one of those three, my deare frendes, with full purffes, Syr Tho. Smithe, M. Haddon, or M. Watson, had had the doing of it. Yet, neuerthelesse, I my selfe, spending gladlie that litle, that I gatte at home by good Syr John Cheke, and that that I borrowed abroad of my frend Sturmius, beside somewhat that was left me in Reuerfion by my olde Masters, Plato, Aristotle, and Cicero,

M. { Smith.

I haue at last patched it vp, as I could, and as you see. If the matter be meane, and meanly handled, I pray you beare, both with me, and it: for neuer worke went vp in worfe wether, with mo lettes and stoppes, than this poore Scholehouse of mine. Westminster Hall can beare some witnesse, beside moch weakenes of bodie, but more trouble of minde, by some souch fores, as greue me to toche them my selfe, and therefore I purpose not to open them to others. And, in middes of outward iniuries, and inward cares, to en-crease them withall, good Syr Rich. Sackuile dieth, that worthie Ientleman: That earnest fauorer and furtherer of Gods true Religion: That faithfull Seruitor to his Prince and Countrie: A louer of learning, and all learned men: Wise in all doinges: Curteffe to all persons: shewing spite to none: doing good to many: and as I well found, to me so fast a frend, as I neuer lost the like before. Whan he was gone, my hart was dead. There was not one, that woare a blacke gowne for him, who caried a heuier hart for him, than I. Whan he was gone, I cast this booke awaie: I could not looke vpon it, but with weping eyes, in remembring him, who was the onelie setter on, to do it, and would haue bene, not onelie a glad commender of it, but also a fure and certaine comfort, to me and mine, for it. Almost two yeares together, this booke lay scattered, and neglected, and had bene quite giuen ouer of me, if the goodnesse of one had not giuen me some life and spirite againe. God, the mouer of goodnesse, prosper alwaies him and his, as he hath many times comforted me and mine, and, I trust to God, shall comfort more and more. Of whom, most iustlie I may saie, and verie oft, and alwaies gladlie, I am wont to say, that sweete verse of Sophocles, spoken by Oedipus to worthie Theseus.

Soph. in

ἔχω, [γὰρ αἴ] χω διὰ σε, κούκ ἄλλον βροτῶν.

Thys hope hath helped me to end this booke: which, if he allowe, I shall thinke my labours well imployed, and shall not moch æsteme the misliking of any others. And I trust, he shall thinke the better of it, bicause he shall finde the best part thereof, to cum out of his Schole, whom he, of all men loued and liked best.

Yet some men, frendly enough of nature, but of small iudgement in learninge, do thinke, I take to moch paines, and spend to moch time, in settinge forth these childrens affaires. But those good men were neuer brought vp in Socrates Schole, who saith plainlie, that no man goeth about a more godlie purpose, than he that is mindfull of the good bringing vp, both of hys owne, and other mens children.

Therefore, I trust, good and wise men, will thinke well of this my doing. And of other, that thinke otherwise, I will thinke my selfe, they are but men, to be pardoned for their follie, and pitied for their ignoraunce.

In writing this booke, I haue had earnest respecte to three speciall pointes, trothe of Religion, honestie in liuing, right order in learning. In which three waies, I praie God, my poore children may diligently waulke: for whose sake, as nature would, and reason required, and necessitie also somewhat compelled, I was the willinger to take these paines.

For, seing at my death, I am not like to leaue them any great store of liuing, therefore in my life time, I thought good to bequeath vnto them, in this litle booke, as in my Will and Testament, the right waie to good learning: which if they followe, with the feare of God, they shall verie well cum to sufficiencie of liuinge.

I wishe also, with all my hart, that yong M. Rob. Sackuille, may take that fructe of this labor, that his worthie Grauntfather purposed he should haue done: And if any other do take, either proffet, or pleasure hereby, they haue cause to thanke M. Robert Sackuille, for whom speciallie this my Scholemaster was prouided.

A Præface to the Reader.

And one thing I would haue the Reader consider in readinge this booke, that bicaufe, no Scholemaster hath charge of any childe, before he enter into hys Schole, therefore I leauing all former care, of their good bringing vp, to wise and good Parentes, as a matter not belonging to the Scholemaster, I do appoynt thys my Scholemaster, than, and there to begin, where his office and charge beginneth. Which charge lasteth not long, but vntill the Scholer be made hable to go to the Vniuersitie, to procede in Logike, Rhetoricke, and other kindes of learning.

Yet if my Scholemaster, for loue he beareth to hys Scholer, shall teach hym somewhat for hys furtherance, and better iudgement in learning, that may serue him seuen yeare after in the Vniuersitie, he doth hys Scholer no more wrong, nor deserueth no worse name thereby, than he doth in London, who sellinge filke or cloth vnto his frend, doth giue him better measure, than either hys promise or bargaine was.

Farewell in Christ.

The first booke for the youth.

After the childe hath learned perfitlie the eight partes of speach, let him then learne the right ioyning together of substantiues with adiectiues, the nowne with the verbe, the relatiue with the antecedent. And in learninge farther hys Syntaxis, by mine aduice, he shall not vse the common order in common scholes, for making of latines: wherby, the childe commonlie learneth, first, an euill choice of wordes, (and right choice of wordes, saith Cæsar, is the foundation of eloquence) than, a wrong placing of wordes: and lastlie, an ill framing of the sentence, with a peruerse iudgement, both of wordes and sentences. These faultes, taking once roote in yougthe, be neuer, or hardlie, pluckt away in age. Moreouer, there is no one thing, that hath more, either dulled the wittes, or taken awaye the will of children from learning, then the care they haue, to satisfie their masters, in making of latines.

Cla. or.*

*Making of Latines
Children.*

For, the scholer, is commonlie beat for the making, when the master were more worthie to be beat for the mending, or rather, marring of the same: The master many times, being as ignorant as the childe, what to saie properlie and fitlie to the matter.

Two scholemasters haue set forth in print, either of them a booke, of soch kinde of latines, Horman and Whittington.

Horman Whittington.

A childe shall learne of the better of them, that, which an other daie, if he be wise, and cum to iudgement, he must be faine to vnlearne againe.

There is a waie, touched in the first booke of 1 De Or. Cicero De Oratore, which, wiselie brought into scholes, truely taught, and constantly vsed, would not onely take wholly away this butcherlie feare in making of latines, but would also, with ease and pleasure, and in short time, as I know by good experience, worke a true choice and placing of wordes, a right ordering of sentences, an easie vnderstandyng of the tonge, a readines to speake, a facultie to write, a true iudgement, both of his owne, and other mens doinges, what tonge so euer he doth vse.

The waie is this. After the three Concordances learned, as I touched before, let the master read vnto hym the Epistles of Cicero, gathered together and chofen out by Sturmius, for the capacitie of children.

First, let him teach the childe, cherefullie and plainlie, the cause, and matter of the letter: then, let
The order of teaching. him construe it into Englishe, so oft, as the childe may easilie carie awaie the vnderstanding of it:
 Lastlie, parse it ouer perfitlie. This done thus, let the childe, by and by, both construe and parse it ouer againe: so, that it may appeare, that the childe douteth in nothing, that his master taught him before. After this, the childe must take a paper booke, and sitting in some place, where no man shall prompe him, by him self, let him translate into Englishe his Two paper bokes. former lesson. Then shewing it to his master, let the master take from him his latin booke, and pausing an houre, at the least, than let the childe translate his owne Englishe into latin againe, in an other paper booke. When the childe bringeth it, turned into latin, the master must compare it with Tullies booke, and laie them both together: and where the childe doth well, either in chosing, or true placing of Tullies wordes, let the master Children learne by prayse. praise him, and saie here ye do well. For I assure you, there is no such whetstone, to sharpen a good witte and encourage a will to learninge, as is praise.

But if the childe misse, either in forgetting a worde, or in chaunging a good with a worse, or misordering the sentence, I would not haue the master, either froune, or chide with him, if the childe haue done his diligence, and vsed no trewandship therein. For I know by good experience, that a childe shall take more profit of two fautes, ientlie warned of, then Ientleness in teaching. of foure thinges, rightly hitt. For than, the master shall haue good occasion to saie vnto him. N. Tullie would haue vsed such a worde, not this: Tullie would haue placed this word here, not there: would haue vsed this case, this number, this person, this degree, this gender: he would haue vsed this moode, this tens, this simple, rather than this compound: this aduerbe here, not there: he would haue ended the sentence with this verbe, not with that nowne or participle. etc.

In these fewe lines, I haue wrapped vp, the most tedious part of Grammer: and also the ground of almost all the Rewles, that are so busilie taught by the Master, and so hardlie learned by the Scholer, in all common Scholes: which after this fort, the master shall teach without all error, and the scholer shall learne without great paine: the master being led by so sure a guide, and the scholer being brought into so plaine and easie a waie. And therefore, we do not contemne Rewles, but we gladlie teach Rewles: and teach them, more plainlie, sensiblie, and orderlie, than they be commonlie taught in common Scholes. For whan the Master shall compare Tullies booke with his [the] Scholers translation, let the Master, at the first, lead and teach his Scholer, to ioyn the Rewles of his Grammer booke, with the examples of his present lesson, vntill the Scholer, by him selfe, be hable to fetch out of his Grammer, euerie Rewle, for euerie Example: So, as the Grammer booke be euer in the Scholers hand, and also vsed of him, as a Dictionarie, for euerie present vse. This is a liuely and perfit waie of teaching of Rewles: where the common waie, vsed in common Scholes, to read the Grammer alone by it selfe, is tedious for the Master, hard for the Scholer, colde and vncumfortable for them bothe.

Let your Scholer be neuer afraide, to aske you any dou[b]t, but vse discretlie the best allurements ye can, to encorage him to the same: lest, his ouermoch hearinge of you, driue him to seeke some misorderlie shifte: as, to seeke to be helped by some other booke, or to be prompted by some other Scholer, and so goe aboute to beg[u]ile you moch, and him selfe more.

With this waie, of good vnderstanding the ma[t]ter, plaine construinge, diligent parfinge, dailie translatinge, cherefull admonishinge, and heedefull amendinge of faultes: neuer leauinge behinde iuste praise for well doinge, I would haue the Scholer brought vp withall, till he had red, and translated ouer ye first booke of Epistles chosen out by Sturmius, with a good peece of a Comedie of Terence also.

All this while, by mine aduise, the childe shall vse to speake no latine: For, as Cicero faith in like matter, with like wordes, loquendo, male loqui discunt. And, that excellent learned man, G. Budæus, in his Greeke Commentaries, fore complaineth, that whan he began to learne the latin tonge, vse of speaking latin at the table, and else-where, vnaduisedlie, did bring him to foch an euill choice of wordes, to foch a crooked framing of sentences, that no one thing did hurt or hinder him more, all the daies of his life afterward, both for redinesse in speaking, and also good iudgement in writinge.

In very deede, if children were brought vp, in foch a house, or foch a Schole, where the latin tonge were properlie and persitlie spoken, as Tib. and Ca. Gracci were brought vp, in their mother Cornelias house, surelie, than the dailie vse of speaking, were the best and readiest waie, to learne the latin tong. But now, commonlie, in the best Scholes in England, for wordes, right choice is smallie regarded, true proprietrie whollie neglected, confusion is brought in, barbariousnesse is bred up so in yong wittes, as afterward they be, not onelie marde for speaking, but also corrupted in iudge-ment: as with moch adoe, or neuer at all, they be brought to right frame againe.

Yet all men couet to haue their children speake latin: and so do I verie earnestlie too. We bothe, haue one purpose: we agree in desire, we wish one end: but we differ somewhat in order and waie, that leadeth rightlie to that end. Other would haue them speake at all aduentures: and, so they be speakinge, to speake, the Master careth not, the Scholer knoweth not, what. ✓

This is, to seeme, and not to bee: except it be, to be bolde without shame, rashe without skill, full of wordes without witte. I wish to haue them speake so, as it may well appeare, that the braine doth gouerne the tonge, and that reason leadeth forth the taulke. ✓ Socrates doctrine is true in Plato, and well Plato marked, and truely by Horace in Arte Horat.

Poetica, that, where so euer knowledge doth accompanie the witte, there best vtterance doth alwaies awaite vpon the tonge: For, good vnderstanding must first be bred in the childe, which, being nurished with skill, and vse of writing (as I will teach more largelie hereafter) is the onelie waie to bring him to iudgement and readinesse in speakinge: and that in farre shorter time (if he followe constantlie the trade of this lit[t]le lesson) then he shall do, by common teachinge of the common scholes in England.

Much writyng breedeth ready speakyng.

But, to go forward, as you perceiue, your scholer to goe better and better on awaie, first, with vnderstanding his lesson more quicklie, with parsing more readelie, with translating more spedelie and perfitlie then he was wonte, after, giue him longer lessons to translate: and withall, begin to teach him, both in nownes, and verbes, what is Proprium, and what is Translatum, what Synonymum, what Diuersum, which be Contraria, and which be most notable Phrases in all his lecture.

This diligent tranſlating, ioyned with this heedfull marking, in the foreſaid Epiftles, and afterwarde in some plaine Oration of Tullie, as, pro lege Manil: pro Archia Poeta, or in those three ad. C. Cæs: shall worke such a right choise of wordes, so streight a framing of sentences, such a true iudgement, both to write skilfullie, and speake wittlelie, as wise men shall both praise, and maruell at.

If your scholer do misse sometimes, in marking rightlie these foresaid fixe thinges, chide not hastelie: for that shall, both dull his witte, and discourage his diligence: but monish him gently: which shall make him, both willing to amende, and glad to go forward in loue and hope of learning.

I haue now wished, twise or thrise, this gentle nature, to be in a Scholemaster: And, that I haue done so, neither by chance, nor without some reason, I will now declare at large, why, in mine opinion, Loue. loue is fitter then feare, ientlenes better Feare. then beating, to bring vp a childe rightlie in learninge.

With the common vse of teaching and beating in common scholes of England, I will not greatlie contend: which if I did, it were but a small grammaticall controuersie, neither belonging to heresie nor treason, nor greatly touching God nor the Prince: although in very deede, in the end, the good or ill bringing vp of children, doth as much serue to the good or ill seruice, of God, our Prince, and our whole countrie, as any one thing doth beside.

I do gladlie agree with all good Scholemasters in these pointes: to haue children brought to good perfines in learning: to all honestie in maners: to haue all fau[il]tes rightlie amended: to haue euerie vice seuerlie corrected: but for the order and waie that leadeth rightlie to these pointes, we somewhat differ. For commonlie, many scholemasters, some, as I haue seen, moe, as I haue heard tell, be of so crooked a nature, as, when they meete with a hard witted scholer, they rather breake him, than bowe him, rather marre him, then mend him. For whan the scholemaster is angrie with some other matter, then will he soneft faul to beate his scholer: and though he him selfe should be punished for his folie, yet must he beate some scholer for his pleasure: though there be no cause for him to do so, nor yet fault in the scholer to deserue so. These ye will say, be fond scholemasters, and fewe they be, that be found to be soch. They be fond in deede, but surelie ouer-many soch be found euerie where. But this will I Nature punished. say, that euen the wisest of your great beaters, do as oft punish the nature, as they do correcte faultes. Yea, many times, the better nature, is forer punished: For, if one, by quicknes of witte, take his lesson readelie, an other, by hardnes of witte, taketh it not so speedelie: the first is alwaies commended, the other is commonlie punished: whan a wise scholemaster, should rather discretelie consider the right disposition of both their natures, and not so moch wey what either of them is able to do now, as what either of them is likelie to do hereafter. For this I know, not onelie by reading of bookes in my studie, but also by experience of life, abroad in the world, that those, which be commonlie the wisest, the best learned, and best men also, when they be olde, were neuer commonlie the quickest of witte, when they were yonge. The causes why, amongest other, which be many, that moue me thus to thinke, be these fewe, which I will reckon. Quicke wittes commonlie, be apte to take, vnapt to keepe: soone hote and desirous of this and that: as colde and sone wery of the same againe: more quicke to enter speedelie, than hable to pearse farre: euen like ouer sharpe tooles, whose edges be verie soone turned. Soch wittes delite them selues in easie and pleasant studies, and neuer passe farre forward in hie and hard sciences. And therefore the quickest wittes commonlie may proue the best Poetes, but not the wisest Orators: readie of tonge to speak bold- Quicke wittes, for maners and lyfe. lie, not deepe of iudgement, either for good counsell or wise writing. Also, for maners and life, quicke wittes commonlie, be, in desire, newfangle[d], in purpose, vnconstant, light to promise any thing, readie to forget euery thing: both benefite and iniurie: and therby neither fast to frend, nor fearefull to foe: inquisitiue of euery trifle, not secret in greatestt affaires: bolde, with any person: busie, in euery matter: fo[o]thing, soch as be present: nipping any that is absent: of nature also, alwaies, flattering their betters, enuying their equals, despising their inferiors: and, by quicknes of witte, verie quicke and readie, to like none so well as them selues.

Moreouer commonlie, men, very quicke of witte, be also, verie light of conditions: and thereby, very readie of disposition, to be caried ouer quicklie, by any light cumpanie, to any riot and vnthriftines when they be yonge: and therefore seldome, either honest of life, or riche in liuing, when they be olde. For, quicke in witte, and light in maners, be, either seldome troubled, or verie sone we[e]ry, in carying a verie heuie purse. Quicke wittes also be, in most part of all their doinges, ouer quicke, hastie, rashe, headie, and brainsicke. These two last wordes, Headie, and Brainsicke, be fitte and proper wordes, rising naturallie of the matter, and tearmed aptlie by the condition, of ouer moch quickenes of witte. In yougthe also they be, readie scoffers, priuie mockers, and euer ouer light and mer[r]y. In aige, sone testie, very waspishe, and alwaies ouer miserable: and yet fewe of them cum to any great aige, by reason of their misordered life when they were yong: but a greate deale fewer of them cum to shewe any great countenance, or beare any great authoritie abrode in the world, but either liue obscurelie, men know not how, or dye obscurelie, men marke not whan. They be like trees, that shewe forth, faire blossoms and broad leaues in spring time, but bring out small and not long lasting fruite in haruest time: and that onelie soch, as fall, and rotte, before they be ripe, and so, neuer, or seldome, cum to any good at all. For this ye shall finde most true by experience, that amongst a number of quicke wittes in youthe, fewe be found, in the end, either verie fortunate for them felues, or verie profitable to ferue the common wealth, but decay and vanish, men know not which way: except a very fewe, to whom peradventure blood and happie parentage, may perchance purchase a long standing vpon the stage. The which felicitie, because it commeth by others procuring, not by their owne deseruinge, and stand by other mens feete, and not by their own, what owtward brag so euer is borne by them, is in deed, of it selfe, and in wise mens eyes, of no great estimation.

Some wittes, moderate enough by nature, be many tymes marde by ouer moch studie and vse of some sciences, namelie, Musicke, Arithmetick, and Geometrie. Thies sciences, as they sharpen mens wittes ouer moch, so they change mens maners ouer fore, if they be not moderatlie mingled, and wiselie applied to som good vse of life.

Marke all Mathematicall heades, which be onely and wholly bent to those sciences, how solitarie they be themselues, how vnfit to liue with others, and how vnapte to ferue in the world. This is not onelie knowen now by common experience, but vttered long before by wise mens Iudgement and sentence. Galene faith, moch Musick marreth mens maners: and Plato hath a notable place of the same thing in his bookes de Rep. well marked also, and excellentlie translated by Tullie himself. Of this matter, I wrote once more at large, xx. yeare a go, in my booke of shoting: now I thought but to touch it, to proue, that ouer moch quicknes of witte, either giuen by nature, or sharpened by studie, doth not commonlie bring forth, eyther greatest learning, best maners, or happiest life in the end.

Contrariewise, a witte in youth, that is not ouer dulle, heauie, knottie and lumpishe, but hard, rough, and though somewhat staffishe, as Tullie wisheth otium, quietum, non languidum: and negotium cum labore, non cum periculo, such a witte I say, if it be, at the first well handled by the mother, and rightlie sm[o]thed and wrought as it should, not ouer[t]whartlie, and against the wood, by the scholemaster, both for learning, and hole course of liuing, proueth alwaies the best. In woode and stone, not the softest, but hardest, be alwaies aptest, for portraiture, both fairest for pleasure, and most durable for proffit. Hard wittes be hard to receiue, but sure to keepe: painefull without werinesse, hedefull without wauering, constant without newfangelnes: bearing heauie things, though not lightlie, yet willinglie; entring hard things, though not easelie, yet depelie; and so cum to that perfitnes of learning in the ende, that quicke wittes, seeme in hope, but do not in deede, or else verie seldome, euer attaine vnto.

Also, for maners and life, hard wittes commonlie, ar[e] hardlie caried, either to desire euerie new thing, or else to maruell at every strange thinge: and therefore they be carefull and diligent in their own matters, not curious and busy in other mens affaires: and so, they becom wise them selues, and also ar[e] counted honest by others. They be graue, stedfast, silent of tong, secret of hart. Not hastie in making, but constant in ke[e]ping any promise. Not rashe in vttering, but war[y]e in considering euerie matter: and therby, not quicke in speaking, but deepe of iudgement, whether they write, or giue counsell in all waightie affaires. And theis be the men, that becom in the end, both most happie for themselues, and alwaise best esteemed abroad in the world.

I haue bene longer in describing, the nature, the good or ill successe, of the quicke and hard witte, than perchance som will thinke, this place and matter doth require. But my purpose was hereby, plainlie to vtter, what iniurie is offered to all learninge, and to the common welthe also, first, by the fond father in chosing, but chieflie by the lewd scholemaster in beating and driuing away the best natures from learning. A childe that is still, silent, constant, and fomwhat hard of witte, is either neuer chofen by the father to be made a fcholer, or elfe, when he commeth to the fchole, he is fmally regarded, little looked vnto, he lacketh teaching, he lacketh coraging, he lacketh all thinges, onelie he neuer lacketh beating, nor any word, that may moue him to hate learninge, nor any deed that may driue him from learning, to any other kinde of liuing.

And when this fadde natured, and hard witted child, is bette from his booke, and becumeth after eyther ftudent of the common lawe, or page in the Court, or feruingman, or bound prentice to a merchant, or to fom handie-crafte, he proueth in the ende, wifer, happier and many tymes honefter too, than many of theis quick wittes do, by their learninge.

Learning is, both hindred and iniured to[o], by the ill choice of them, that fend yong fcholers to the vniuerfities. Of whom must nedes cum all oure Diuines, Lawyers, and Phyficians.

Thies yong fcholers be chofen commonlie, as yong apples be chofen by children, in a faire garden about S. James tyde: a childe will chofe aweeting, becaufe it is presentlie faire and pleafant, and refufe a Runnet, becaufe it is than grene, hard, and fowre, whan the one, if it be eaten, doth breed, both wormes and ill humors: the other if it ftand his tyme, be ordered and kepte as it fhould, is holfom of it felf, and helpeth to the good digeftion of other meates: Sweetinges, wiil receyue wormes, rotte, and dye on the tree, and neuer or feldom cum to the gathering for good and lafting ftore.

For verie greafe of hearte I will not applie the fimilitude: but hereby, is plainlie feen, how learning is robbed of hir beft wittes, firft by the greate beating, and after by the ill chofing of fcholers, to go to the vniuerfities. Whereof cummeth partelie, that lewde and fpitefull prouerbe, founding to the greate hurte of learning, and shame of learned men, that, the greatest Clerkes be not the wisest men.

And though I, in all this discourse, seem plainlie to prefer, hard and roughe wittes, before quicke and light wittes, both for learnyng and maners, yet am I not ignorant that som quicknes of witte, is a singuler gifte of God, and so most rare emonges men, and nanelie such a witte, as is quicke without lightnes, sharpe without brittlenes, desirous of good thinges without newfanglenes, diligent in painfull thinges without werisomnes, and constant in good will to do all thinges well, as I know was in Syr John Cheke, and is in som, that yet liue, in whome all theis faire qualities of witte ar[e] fullie mette togher.

But it is notable and trewe, that Socrates saith in Plato to his frende Crito. That, that Plato. in Critone. number of men is fewest, which far excede, either in good or ill, in wisdom or folie, but the meane betwixt both, be the greatest number: which he proueth trewe in diuerse other thinges: as in greyhoundes, emonges which fewe are found, exceding greate, or exceding litle, exceding swift, or exceding slowe: And therefore, I speaking of quick and hard wittes, I ment, the common number of quicke and hard wittes, emonges the which, for the most parte, the hard witte, proueth manie times, the better learned, wiser and honeste man: and therefore, do I the more lament, that such wittes commonlie be either kepte from learning, by fond fathers, or be[a]t[e] from learning by lewde scholemasters.

And speaking thus moche of the wittes of children for learning, the opportunitie of the place, and goodnes of the matter might require to haue here declared the most speciall notes of a good witte for learning in a childe, after the maner and custume of a good horsman, who is skilfull, to know, and hable to tell others, how by certain sure signes, a

They say nay in worde, but they do so in dede. For, to the one, they will gladlie giue a stipend of 200. Crounes by [the] yeare, and loth to offer to the other, 200. shillings. God, that sitteth in heauen laugheth their choice to skorne, and

Horse well broken, children ill taught. rewardeth their liberalitie as it should: for he suffereth them, to haue, tame and well ordered horse, but wilde and vnfortunate Children: and therefore in the ende they finde more pleasure in their horse, than comforte in their children.

But concerning the trewe notes of the best wittes for learning in a childe, I will reporte, not myne own opinion, but the very iudgement of him, that was counted the best teacher and wisest man that learning maketh mention of, and that is Socrates in Plato, who expresseth orderlie thies seuen plaine notes to choise a good witte in a child for learninge.

Trewe notes of a good witte.

And bicause I write English, and to Englishemen, I will plainlie declare in English both, what thies wordes of Plato meane, and how aptlie they be linked, and how orderlie they fol[1]ow one an other.

1. Εὐφύης.

Witte. Is he, that is apte by goodnes of witte, will. and applicable by readines of will, to learning, hauing all other qualities of the minde and partes of the bodie, that must an other day serue learning, not tro[u]bled, mangled, and halfed, but sounde, whole, full, and hable to do their office: as, a tong, The tong. not stamering, or ouer hardlie drawing forth wordes, but plaine, and redie to deliuer the meaning of the minde: a voice, not softe, weake, piping, The voice. womannishe, but audible, stronge, and manlike: a countenance, not werishe and crabbed, but Face. faire and cumlie: a personage, not wretched and deformed, but taule and goodlie: for Stature. surelie a cumlie countenance, with a goodlie stature, geueth credit to learning, and authoritie Learnynge ioyned with a cumlie personage. to the person: otherwise commonlie, either open contempte, or priuie diffauour doth hurte, or hinder, both person and learning. And, euen as a faire stone requireth to be sette in the finest gold, with the best workmanshyps, or else it leseth moch of the Grace and price, euen so, excellencye in learning, and namely Diuinitie, ioyned with a cumlie personage, is a meruelous Iewell in the world. And how can a cumlie bodie be better employed, than to serue the fairest exercise of Goddes greatest gifte, and that is learning. But commonlie, the fairest bodies, ar[e] bestowed on the foulest purposes. I would it were not so: and with examples herein I will not medle: yet I wishe, that those shold, both mynde it, and medle with it, which haue most occasion to looke to it, as good and wise fathers shold do, and greatest authoritie to amend it, as good and wise magistrates ought to do: And yet I will not let, openlie to lament the vnfortunate case of learning herein.

For, if a father haue foure sonnes, three faire and well formed both mynde and bodie, the fourth, wretched, lame, and deformed, his choice shalbe, to put the worst to learning, as one good enoughe to becum a scholer.

I haue spent the most parte of my life in the Vniuersitie, and therefore I can beare good witnes that many fathers commonlie do thus: wherof, I haue hard many wise, learned, and as good men as euer I knew, make great, and oft complainte: a good horsfeman will choise no foch colte, neither for his own, nor yet for his masters fadle. And thus moch of the first note.

Deformed creatures commonlie set to learnynge.

2. Μνήμων.

Memorie. Good of memorie, a speciall parte of the first note ἐμφυής, and a mere benefite of nature: yet it is so necessarie for learning: as Plato maketh it a separate and perfite note of it selfe, and that so principall a note, as without it, all other giftes of nature do small seruice to learning, Afranius, that olde Latine Poete maketh Memorie the mother of learning and wisedome, faying thus.

Vfus me genuit, Mater peperit memoria, and though it be the mere gifte of nature, yet is memorie well preferued by vse, and moch encreased by order, as our scholer must learne an other day in the Vniuersitie: but in a childe, a good memorie is well known, by three properties: that is, if it be, quicke in receyuing, sure in keping, and redie in deliuering forthe againe.

3 Φιλομαθής.

Giuen to loue learning: for though a child haue all the giftes of nature at wishe, and perfection of memorie at will, yet if he haue not a speciall loue to learning, he shall neuer attaine to moch learning. And therefore Ifocrates, one of the noblest scholemasters, that is in memorie of learning, who taught Kinges and Princes, as Halicarnassæus writeth, and out of whose schole, as Tullie saith, came forth, mo noble Capitanes, mo wise Councelors, than did out of Epeiuss horse at Troie. This Ifocrates, I say, did cause to be written, at the entrie of his schole, in golden letters, this golden sentence, ἐὰν ᾗς φιλομαθής, ἔση πολυμαθής which excellentlie said in Greeke, is thus rudelie in Englishe, if thou louest learning, thou shalt attayne to moch learning.

4 Φιλόπονος.

Is he, that hath a lust to labor, and a will to take paines. For, if a childe haue all the benefites of nature, with perfection of memorie, loue, like, and praise learning neuer so moch, yet if he be not of him selfe painfull, he shall neuer attayne vnto it. And yet where loue is present, labor is feldom absent, and namelie in studie of learning, and matters of the mynde: and therefore id Ifocrates rightlie iudge, that if his scholer were φιλομαθής he cared for no more. Aristotle, varying from Ifocrates in priuate affaires of life, but agreing with Ifocrates in common iudgement of learning, for loue and labor in learning, is of the same opinion, vttered in these wordes, in his Rhetorike ad Theodecten. Li-² Rhet. ad bertie kindleth loue: Loue refuseth no labor: ^{Theod.}
and labor obteyneth what so euer it seeketh. And yet neuerthelesse, Goodnes of nature may do little good: Perfection of memorie, may serue to small vse: All loue may be employed in vayne: Any labor may be sone graualed, if a man trust alwaies to his own singuler witte, and will not be glad somtyme to heare, take aduise, and learne of an other: And therefore doth Socrates very notable adde the fift note.

5 Φιλήκοος.

He, that is glad to heare and learne of an other. For otherwise, he shall slicke with great trouble, where he might go easelie forward: and also catche hardlie a verie litle by his owne toyle, whan he might gather quicklie a good deale, by an others mans teaching. But now there be some, that haue great loue to learning, good lust to labor, be willing to learne of others, yet, either of a fonde shamefastnes, or else of a proud folie, they dare not, or will not, go to learne of an other: And therefore doth Socrates wiselie adde the fixte note of a good witte in a childe for learning, and that is.

6 Ζητητικός.

He, that is naturallie bold to aske any question, deūrous to searche out any dou[b]te, not affraide to learne of the meanest, not affraide to go to the greatest, vntill he be perfitelie taught, and fullie satiffiede. The seuenth and last poynte is.

7 Φιλέπαινος.

He, that loueth to be praised for well doing, at his father, or masters hand. A childe of this nature, will earnestlie loue learnyng, gladlie labor for learning, willinglie learne of other, boldlie aske any dou[b]te. And thus, by Socrates iudgement, a good father, and a wise scholemaster, shold chose a childe to make a scholer of, that hath by nature, the foresayd perfite qualities, and cumlie furniture, both of mynde and bodie, hath memorie, quicke to receyue, sure to keape, and readie to deliuer: hath loue to learning: hath lust to labor: hath desire to learne of others: hath boldnes to aske any question: hath mynde holie bent, to wyne praise by well doing.

The two firste poyntes be speciall benefites of nature: which neuerthelesse, be well preferued, and moch encreased by good order. But as for the fise laste, loue, labor, gladnes to learne of others, boldnes to aske dou[b]tes, and will to wyne praise, be wonne and maintained by the onelie wisedome and discretion of the scholemaster. Which fise poyntes, whether a scholemaster shall work so[o]ner in a childe, by fearefull beating, or curtese handling, you that be wise, iudge.

Yet some men, wise in deede, but in this matter, more by feueritie of nature, than any wisedome at all, do laugh at vs, when we thus wishe and reason, that yong children should rather be allured to learning by ientilnes and loue, than compelled to learning, by beating and feare: They say, our reasons serue onelie to breede forth talke, and passe a waie tyme, but we neuer saw good scholemaster do so, nor neuer red of wise man that thought so.

Yes forsothe : as wise as they be, either in other mens opinion, or in their owne conceite, I will bring the contrarie iudgement of him, who, they them selues shall confesse, was as wise as they are, or else they may be iustlie thought to haue small witte at all : and that is Socrates, whose iudgement in Plato is plainlie this in these wordes : which, bicause they be verie notable,

Plato in 7.
de Rep.

I will recite them in his owne tonge, οὐδὲν μάθημα μετὰ δουλείας χρὴ μαθάνειν: οἱ μὲν γὰρ τοῦ σώματος πόνοι βία πονούμενοι χεῖρον οὐδὲν τὸ σῶμα ἀπερνάξονται; ψυχῆ δὲ, βίαιον οὐδὲν ἔμμονον μάθημα: in English thus, No learning ought to be learned with bondage: For, bodelie labors, wrought by compulsion, hurt not the bodie: but any learning learned by compulsion, tarieth not long in the mynde: And why? For what soeuer the mynde doth learne vnwillinglie with feare, the same it doth quicklie forget without care. And lest proude wittes, that loue not to be contraryed, but haue lust to wrangle or trifle away troth, will say, that Socrates meaneth not this of childrens teaching, but of som other higher learning, heare, what Socrates in the same place doth more plainlie say: μὴ τοίνυν βία; ὦ ἄριστε, τοὺς παῖδας ἐν τοῖς μαθήμασιν, ἀλλὰ παίξοντας τρέφε, that is to say, and therefore, my deare friend, bring not vp your children in learning by compulsion and feare, but by playing and pleasure. And you, that do read Plato, as ye shold, do well perceiue, that these be no Questions asked by Socrates, as doutes, but they be Sentences, first affirmed by Socrates, as mere trothes, and after, giuen forth by Socrates, as right Rules, most necessarie to be marked, and fitte to be folowed of all them, that would haue children taughte, as they should. And in this counsell, iudgement, and authoritie of Socrates I will repose my selfe, vntill I meete with a man of the contrarie mynde, whom I may iustlie take to be wiser, than I thinke Socrates was. Fonde scholemasters, neither can vnderstand, nor will folow this good counsell of Socrates, but wise ryders, in their office, can and will do both: which is the onelie cause, that commonly, the yong ientlemen of England, go so vnwillinglie to schole, and run so fast to the stable: For in verie deede fond scholemasters, by feare, do beate into them, the hatred of learning, and wise riders, by ientle allurementes, do breed vp in them, the loue of riding. They finde feare, and bondage in scholes, They seele libertie and freedom in stables: which causeth them, vtterlie to abhor[r]e the one, and most gladlie to haunt the other. And I do not write this, that in exhorting to the one, I would diffuade yong ientlemen from the other: yea I am sorie, with all my harte, that they be giuen no Ryding.

more to riding, then they be: For, of all outward qualities, to ride faire, is most cumelie for him selfe, most necessarie for his contrey, and the greater he is in blood, the greater is his praise, the more he doth exce[e]de all other therein. It was one of the three excellent praifes, amongest the noble ientlemen the old Persians, Alwaife to say troth, to ride faire, and shote well: and so it was engrauen vpon Darius tumb, as Strabo. 15.

Strabo beareth witnesse.

Darius the king, lieth buried here,

Who in riding and shooting had neuer peare.

But, to our purpose, yong men, by any meanes, leeing the loue of learning, whan by tyme they cum to their owne rule, they carie commonlie, from the schole with them, a perpetuall hatred of their master, and a continuall contempt of learning. If ten Ientlemen be asked, why they forget so sone in Court, that which they were learning so long in schole, eight of them, or let me be blamed, will laie the fault on their ill handling, by their scholemasters.

Cuspinian doth report, that, that noble Emperor Maximilian, would lament verie oft, his misfortune herein.

Pastime.

Learnyng.

Yet, some will say, that children of nature, loue pastime, and mislike learning:

bicaufe, in their kinde, the one is easie and pleasant, the other hard and werifon : which is an opinion not fo trewe, as some men weene : For, the matter lieth not fo much in the difpofition of them that be yong, as in the order and maner of bringing vp, by them that be old, nor yet in the difference of learnyng and pafstime. For, beate a child, if he daunce not well, and cherifh him, though he learne not well, ye fhall haue him, vn-willing to go to daunce, and glad to go to his booke. Knocke him alwaies, when he draweth his fhafth ill, and fauo[u]r him againe, though he fau[l]t at his booke, ye fhall haue hym verie loth to be in the field, and verie willing to be in the fchole. Yea, I faie more, and not of my felfe, but by the iudgement of thofe, from whom few wifemen will gladlie diffent, that if euer the nature of man be giuen at any tyme, more than other, to receiue goodnes, it is, in innocencie of yong yeares, before, that experience of euill, haue taken roote in hym. For, the pure cleane witte of a sweete yong babe, is like the neweft wax, moft hable to receiue the beft and fayreft printing : and like a new bright filuer difhe neuer occupied, to receiue and kepe cleane, anie good thyng that is put into it.

And thus, will in children, wifelie wrought withall, maie eafelie be won to be verie well willing to learne. And witte in children, by nature, namelie memorie, the onely keie and keper of all learning, is readieft to receiue, and fureft to kepe anie maner of thing, that is learned in youghth : This, lewde and learned, by common experience, know to be moft trewe. For we remember nothyng fo well when we be olde, as thofe things which we learned when we were yong : And this is not ftraunge, but common in all natures workes. Euery man fees, (as I fayd before) new wax is beft for printyng : new claie, fitteft for working : new fhorne wo[o]ll, apteft for fone and fureft dying : new fresh flesh, for good and durable falting. And this fimilitude is not rude, nor borrowed of the larder house, but out of his schoose, of whom, the wisest of England, neede not be ashamed to learne. Yong Graftes grow not onelie sonest, but also fairest, and bring alwayes forth the best and sweetest frute: yong whelpes learne easelie to carie: yong Popingeis learne quicklie to speake: And so, to be short, if in all other thinges, though they lacke reason, sens, and life, the similitude of youth is fittest to all goodnesse, surelie nature, in mankinde, is most beneficiall and effectuall in this behalfe.

Witte.

Therefore, if to the goodnes of nature, be ioyned the wisdome of the teacher, in leading yong wittes into a right and plaine waie of learnyng, surelie, children, kept vp in Gods feare, and gouerned by his grace, maie most easelie be brought well to serue God, and contrey both by vertue and wisdome.

But if will, and witte, by farder age, be once allured from innocencie, delited in vaine fightes, fil[l]ed with foull taulke, crooked with wilfulnesse, hardned with stubburnesse, and let louse to disobediencie, surelie it is hard with ientlenesse, but vnpossible with seure crueltie, to call them backe to good frame againe. For, where the one, perchance maie bend it, the other shall surelie breake it: and so in stead of some hope, leaue an assured desperation, and shamelesse contempt of all goodnesse, the fardest pointe in all mischief, as Xenophon doth most trewlie and most wittelie marke.

Therefore, to loue or to hate, to like or contemne, to plie this waie or that waie to good or to bad, ye shall haue as ye vse a child in his youth.

And one example, whether loue or feare doth worke more in a child, for vertue and learning, I will gladlie report: which maie be h[e]ard with some pleasure, and folowed with more profit. Before I went into Germanie, I came to Brodegate in Le[i]cestershire, to take my leaue of that noble Ladie Iane Grey, to whom I was exceding moch beholdinge. Hir parentes, the Duke and Duches, with all the houſhold, Gentlemen and Gentlewomen, were hunting in the Parke: I founde her, in her Chamber, readinge Phædon Platonis in Greeke, and that with as moch delite, as ſom ientlemen wold read a merie tale in Bocace. After ſalutation, and dewtie done, with ſom other taulke, I aſked hir, whie ſhe wold leeſe ſoch paſtime in the Parke? ſmiling ſhe answered me: I wiſſe, all their ſporté in the Parke is but a ſhadoe to that pleaſure, that I find in Plato: Alas good folke, they neuer felt, what trewe pleaſure ment. And howe came you Madame, quoth I, to this deepe knowledge of pleaſure, and what did chieffie allure you vnto it: ſeing, not many women, but verie fewe men haue attained thereunto. I will tell you, quoth ſhe, and tell you a troth, which perchance ye will meruell at. One of the greateſt benefites, that euer God gaue me, is, that he ſent me ſo ſharpe and ſeuere Parentes, and ſo ientle a ſcholemaſter. For when I am in preſence either of father or mother, whether I ſpeake, kepe ſilence, ſit, ſtand, or go, eate, drinke, be merie, or ſad, be ſowyng, plaiyng, dauncing, or doing anie thing els, I muſt do it, as it were, in ſoch weight, meſure, and number, euen ſo perfitelie, as God made the world, or elſe I am ſo ſharplie taunted, ſo cruellie threatened, yea preſentlie ſome tymes, with pinches, nippes, and bobbes, and other waies, which I will not name, for the honor I beare them, ſo without meaſure miſordered, that I thinke my ſelfe in hell, till tyme cum, that I muſt go to M. Elmer, who teacheth me ſo ientlie, ſo pleaſantlie, with ſoch faire allurements to learning, that I thinke all the tyme nothing, whiles I am with him. And when I am called from him, I fall on weeping, becauſe, what ſoeuer I do els, but learning, is ful of grief, trouble, feare, and whole miſliking vnto me: And thus my booke, hath bene ſo moch my pleaſure, and bringeth dayly to me more pleaſure and more, that in reſpect of it, all other pleaſures, in very deede, be but trifles and troubles vnto me. I remember this talke gladly, both bicauſe it is ſo worthy of memorie, and bicaufe also, it was the last talke that euer I had, and the last tyme, that euer I saw that noble and worthie Ladie.

I could be ouer long, both in shewing iust causes, and in recitinge trewe examples, why learning shold be taught, rather by loue than feare. He that wold see a perfite discourse of it, let him read that learned Sturmius, de Inst. Princ. treatese, which my frende Ioan. Sturmius wrote de institutione Principis, to the Duke of Cleues.

Qui parcit
 virgæ, odit
 filium.

The godlie counsels of Salomon and Iesus the sonne of Sirach, for sharpe kepinge in, and bridleinge of youth, are ment rather, for fatherlie correction, then masterlie beating, rather for maners, than for learninge: for other places, than for scholes. For God forbid, but all euill touches, wantonnes, lyinge, pickinge, slouth, will, stubburnesse, and disobedience, shold be with sharpe chastisement, daily cut away.

This discipline was well knowen, and diligentlie vsed, among the Græcians, and old Romanes, as doth appeare in Aristophanes, Isocrates, and Plato, and also in the Comedies of Plautus: where we see that children were vnder the rule of three persones: Præceptor, Pædagogus, Parente: the scholemaster
 1. Scholemaster. taught him learnyng withall ientlenes: the
 2. Gouvernour. Gouvernour corrected his maners, with
 3. Father. moch sharpnesse: The father, held the sterne of his whole obedience: And so, he that vsed to teache, did not commonlie vse to beate, but remitted that ouer to an other mans charge. But what shall we saie, when now in our dayes, the scholemaster is vsed, both for Præceptor in learnyng, and Pædagogus in maners. Surelie, I wold he shold not confound their offices, but discretelie vse the dewtie of both so, that neither ill touches shold be left vnpunished, nor ientle[n]esse in teaching anie wise omitted. And he shall well do both, if wiselie he do appointe diuersitie of tyme, and separate place, for either purpose: vsing alwaife foch discrete moderation, as the fcholehoufe should be counted a fanctuarie againft feare: and verie well learning, a common perdon for ill doing, if the fault, of it felfe be not ouer heinous.

The fchole-
houfe.

And thus the children, kept vp in Gods feare, and preferued by his grace, finding paine in ill doing, and pleafure in well fludying, fhould eafelie be brought to honeftie of life, and perfitenes of learning, the onelie marke, that good and wife fathers do wifhe and labour, that their children, fhould moft bufelie, and carefullie fhut at.

There is an other difcommoditie, befides crueltie in fcholemafters in beating away the loue of learning from children, which hindreth learning and vertue, and good bringing vp of youth, and namelie yong ientlemen, verie moch in England.

Youth of England
brought vp with to much libertie.

This fault is cleane contrary to the firft. I wifhed before, to haue loue of learning bred vp in children: I wifhe as moch now, to haue yong men brought vp in good order of liuing, and in fome more feure difcipline, then commonlie they be. We haue lacke in England of foch good order, as the old noble Perfians fo carfullie vfed: whose children, to the age of xxi. yeare, were brought vp in learnyng, and exercifes of labor, and that in foch place, where they fhould, neither fee that was vncumlie, nor heare that was vnhoneft. Yea, a yong ientlemen was neuer free, to go where he would, and do what he lifte him felf, but vnder the kepe, and by the counfell, of fome graue gouernour, vntill he was, either maryed, or cal[le]d to beare fome office in the common wealth.

Xen. 7 Cyri
Ped.

And fee the great obedience, that was vfed in old tyme to fathers and gouernours. No fonne, were he neuer fo old of yeares, neuer fo great of birth, though he were a kynges fonne, might not mary, [might marry] but by his father and mothers alfo consent. Cyrus the great, after he had conquered Babylon, and fubdewed

Riche king Craesus with whole Asia minor, cummyng tryumphantlie home, his vnclē Cyaxeris offered him his daughter to wife. Cyrus thanked his vnclē, and praised the maide, but for mariage he answered him with thies wife and sweete wordes, as they be vttered Xen. 8. Cyri by Xenophon, ὦ κυαξάρη, τό τε γένος Ped. ἐπαινῶ καὶ τὴν παῖδα καὶ τὰ δῶρα· βούλομαι δέ, ἔφη, σὺν τῇ τοῦ πατρὸς γνώμῃ καὶ τῇ τῆς μητρὸς ταῦτά σοι συναινέσαι, &c., that is to say: Vnclē Cyaxeris, I commend the stocke, I like the maide, and I allow well the dowrie, but (sayth he) by the counsell and consent of my father and mother, I will determine farther of thies matters.

Strong Samson also in Scripture saw a maide that liked him, but he spake not to hir, but went home to his father, and his mother, and desired both father and mother to make the mariage for him. Doth this modestie, doth this obedience, that was in great kyng Cyrus, and floute Samson, remaine in our yongmen at this daie? no surelie: For we liue not longer after them by tyme, than we liue farre different from them by good order. Our tyme is so farre from that old discipline and obedience, as now, not onelie yong ientlemen, but euen verie girles dare without all feare, though not without open shame, where they list, and how they list, marie them selues in spite of father, mother, God, good order, and all. The cause of this euill is, that youth is least looked vnto, when they stand [in] most neede of good kepe and regard. It auail-eth not, to see them well taught in yong yeares, and after whan they cum to lust and youthfull dayes, to giue them licence to liue as they lust them selues. For, if ye suffer the eye of a yong Ientleman, once to be entangled with vaine sightes, and the eare to be corrupted with fond or filthie taulke, the mynde shall quicklie fall feick, and sone vomet and cast vp, all the holfome doctrine, that he receiued in childhoode, though he were neuer so well brought vp before. And being ons [once] ingluttred with vanitie, he will streight way loth all learning, and all good counsell to the fame. And the parentes for all their great cost and charge, reape onelie in the end, the fru[i]te of grief and care.

This euill, is not common to poore men, as God will haue it, but proper to riche and great mens children, as they deserue it. In deede from seuen, to seuentene, yong ientlemen commonlie be carefullie enough brought vp: But from seuentene to seuen and twentie (the most dangerous tyme of all a mans life, and most slipperie to stay well in) they haue commonlie the reigne of all licens in their owne hand, and speciallie soch as do liue in the Court. And that which is most to be merueled at, commonlie, the wisest and also best men, be found the fondest fathers in this behalfe. And if som good father wold seick some remedie herein, yet the mother (if the house hold of our Lady) had rather, yea, and will to, haue her sonne cunning and bold, in making him to lyue trimlie when he is yong, than by learning and trauell, to be able to serue his Prince and his contrie, both wiselie in peace, and stoutelie in warre, whan he is old.

Great mens
sonnes worst
brought vp.

Wise men fond fathers.

The fault is in your selues, ye noble men[s] sonnes, and therefore ye deserue the greater blame, that commonlie, the meaner mens children, cum to be, the wisest councellours, and greatest doers, in the weightie affaires of this Realme. And why? for God will haue it so, of his prouidence: bicause ye will haue it no otherwise, by your negligence.

Meane mens sonnes come to great authoritie.

And God is a good God, and wisest in all his doinges, that will place vertue, and displace vice, in those kingdomes, where he doth gouerne. For he knoweth, that Nobilitie, without vertue and wisedome, is bloud in deede, but bloud trewelie, without bones and sinewes: and so of it selfe, without the other, verie weeke to beare the burden of weightie affaires.

Nobilitie without wisedome.

The greatest shippe in deede commonlie carieth the greatest burden, but yet alwayes with the greatest ieoperdie, not onelie for the persons and goodes committed vnto it, but euen for the shippe it selfe, except it be gouerned, with the greater wisedome.

But Nobilitie, gouerned by learning and wisedome, is in deede, most like a faire shippe, hauyng tide and winde at will, vnder the reule of a skilfull master: whan contrarie wise, a shippe, carried, yea with the hiest tide and greatest winde, lacking a skilfull master, most commonlie, doth either, sinck it selfe vpon sandes, or breake it selfe vpon rockes. And euen so, how manie haue bene, either drowned in vaine pleasure, or ouerwhelmed by stout wilfulnesse, the histories of England be able to affourde ouer many examples vnto vs. Therefore, ye great and noble mens children, if ye will haue rightfullie that praise, and enioie surelie that place, which your fathers haue, and elders had, and left vnto you, ye must kepe it, as they gat it, and that is, by the onelie waie, of vertue, wisedome and worthinesse.

For wisedom, and vertue, there be manie faire examples in this Court, for yong Ientlemen to fo[low]. But they be, like faire markes in the feild, out of a mans reach, to far of, to shote at well. The best and worthiest men, in deede, be somtimes seen, but seldom taulked withall: A yong Ientleman, may somtime knele to their person, smallie vse their companie, for their better instruction.

But yong Ientlemen are faine commonlie to do in the Court, as yong Archers do in the feild: that is to take soch markes, as be nie them, although they be neuer so foule to shote at. I meene, they be driuen to kepe companie with the worste: and what force ill companie hath, to corrupt good wittes, the wisest men know best.

Ill companie
marreth youth.

And not ill companie onelie, but the ill opinion also of the most part, doth moch harme, and namelie of those, which shold be wise in the trewe decyphring, of the good disposition of nature, of cumlineffe in Courtlie maners, and all right doinges of men.

The Court iudgeth worst of the best natures in youth.

But error and phantastie, do commonlie occupie, the place of troth and iudgement. For, if a yong ientleman, be demoure and still of nature, they say, he is simple and lacketh witte: if he be bashfull, and will soone blufhe, they call him a babishe and ill brought vp thyng, when Xenophon doth preciselie note in Cyrus, that his bashfulnes in youth, was ye verie trewe signe of his vertue and stoutnes after: If he be innocent and ignorant of ill, they say, he is rude, and hath no grace, so vngraciously do som gracelesse men, misuse the faire and godlie word G R A C E.

Xen. in 1. Cyr. Pæd.

The Grace in Courte.

But if ye would know, what grace they meene, go, and looke, and learne emonges them, and ye shall see that it is: First, to blush at nothing. And blufhyng in youth, sayth Aristotle is nothyng els, but feare to do ill: which feare beyng once lustely fraid away from youth, then foloweth, to dare do any mischief, to contemne stoutly any goodnesse, to be busie in euery matter, to be skilfull in euery thyng, to acknowledge no ignorance at all. To do thus in Court, is counted of some, the chief and greatest grace of all: and termed by the name of a vertue, called Corage and boldnesse, whan Crassus in Cic. 3. de Or. Cicero teacheth the cleane contrarie, and that most wittelie, saying thus: Audere, cum bonis etiam rebus coniunctum, per seipsum est magnopere fugiendum. Which is to say, to be bold, yea in a good matter, is for it self, greatlie to be exchewed.

Yet praised be God, England hath at this time, manie worthie Capitaines and good fouldiours, which be in deede, so honest of behaiour, so cumlie of conditions, so milde of maners, as they may be examples of good order, to a good sort of others, which neuer came in warre. But I meruell the lesse, that thies misorders be emonges som in the Court, for commonlie in the contrie also euerie where, innocencie is gone : Bashtfulnesse is banished : moch presumption in yougthe : small authoritie in aige : Reuerence is neglected : dewties be confounded : and to be shorte, disobedience doth ouerflowe the bankes of good order, almoſte in euerie place, almoſte in euerie degree of man.

Misorders in the countrey.

Meane men haue eies to see, and cause to lament, and occasion to complaine of thies miseries : but other haue authoritie to remedie them, and will do so to, whan God shall think time fitte. For, all thies misorders, be Goddes iuste plages, by his sufferance, brought iustelie vpon vs, for our sinnes, which be infinite in number, and horrible in deede, but namelie, for the greate abhominable sin of vnkindnesse : but what vnkindnesse? euen such vnkindnesse as was in the Iewes, in contemninge Goddes voice, in shrinking from his woorde, in wishing backe againe for Aegypt, in committing aduoultrie and hordom, not with the women, but with the doctrine of Babylon, did bring all the plages, destructions, and Captiuities, that fell so ofte and horriblie, vpon Israell.

We haue cause also in England to beware of vnkindnesse, who haue had, in so fewe yeares, the Candel of Goddes worde, so oft lightned, so oft put out, and yet will venture by our vnthankfulnesse in doctrine and sinfull life, to leese againe, lighte, Candle, Candlesticke and all.

God kepe vs in his feare, God grafte in vs the trewe knowledge of his woorde, with a forward will to folowe it, and so to bring forth the sweete frutes of it, and then shall he preferue vs by his Grace, from all maner of terrible dayes.

The remedie of this, doth not stand onelie, in making good common lawes for the hole Realme, but also, (and perchance cheiffie) in obseruing priuate discipline euerie man carefullie in his own house: and namelie, if speciall regard be had to youghth: and that, not so much, in teaching them what is good, as in keeping them from that, that is ill.

Therefore, if wise fathers, be not as well ware in weeding from their Children ill thinges, and ill companie, as they were before, in graftinge in them learninge, and prouiding for them good scholemaisters, what frute, they shall reape of all their coste and care, common experience doth tell.

Here is the place, in yougthe is the time whan som ignorance is as necessarie, as moch knowledge: and not in matters of our dewtie towardes God, as som wilful wittes willinglie against their owne knowledge, perniciouslie againste their owne conscience, haue of late openlie taught. In deede S. Chrysofome, that noble and eloquent Doctor, in a fermon contra fatum, and the curious serching of natiuities, doth wiselie saie, that ignorance therein, is better than knowledge: But to wring this sentence, to wreste thereby out of mens handes, the knowledge of Goddes doctrine, is without all reason, against common sence, contrarie to the iudgement also of them, which be the discretest men, and best learned, on their own fide. I know, Iulianus Apostata did so, but I neuer hard or red, that any auntyent father of the primitiue chirch, either thought or wrote so.

But this ignorance in yougthe, which I spake on, or rather this simplicitie, or most trewlie, this innocencie, is that, which the noble Perfians, as wise Xenophon doth testifie, were so carefull, to breede vp their yougth in. But Christian fathers commonlie do not so. And I will tell you a tale, as moch to be misliked, as the Perfians example is to be folowed.

This last fomer, I was in a Ientlemans house: where a yong childe, somewhat past fower yeare olde, cold in no wise frame his tonge, to saie, a litle shorte grace: and yet he could roundlie rap out, so manie vgle othes, and those of the newest facion, as som good man of fourescore yeare olde hath neuer hard named before: and that which was most detestable of all, his father and mother wold laughe at it. I moche doubtte, what comforte, an other daie, this childe shall bring vnto them. This Childe vsing moche the companie of seruinge men, and geuing good eare to their taulke, did easelie learne, which he shall hardlie forget, all [the] daies of his life hereafter: So likewise, in the Courte, if a yong Ientleman will ventur[e] him self into the companie of Ruffians, it is ouer greate a ieopardie, lest, their facions, maners, thoughtes, taulke, and deedes, will verie sone, be euer like. And it maie be a great wonder, but a greater shame, to vs Christian men, to vnderstand, what a heithen Isocrates. writer, Ifocrates, doth leaue in memorie of writing, concerning the care, that the noble Citie of Athens had, to bring vp their yougthe, in honest companie, and vertuous discipline, whose taulke in Greke, is, to this effect, in Englishe.

"The Citie, was not more carefull, to see their Children well taughte, than to see their yong men well gouerned: which they brought to passe, not so much by common lawe, as by priuate discipline. For, they had more regard, that their yougthe, by good order shold not offend, than how, by lawe, they might be punished: And if offense were committed, there was, neither waie to hide it, neither hope of pardon for it. Good natures, were not so moche openlie praised as they were secretlie marked, and watchfullie regarded, lest they should leaue the goodnes they had. Therefore in scholes of singing and dauncing, and other honest exercises, gouernours were appointed, more diligent to ouersee their good maners, than their masters were, to teach them anie learning. It was som shame to a yong man, to be seene in the open market: and if for businesse, he passed throughe it, he did it, with a meruelous modestie, and bashefull facion. To eate, or drinke in a Tauerne, was not onelie a shame, but also punishfable, in a yong man. To contrarie, or to stand in termes with an old man, was more heinous, than in som place, to rebuke and scolde with his owne father: with manie other mo good orders, and faire disciplines, which I referre to their reading, that haue lust to looke vpon the description of such a worthie common welthe.

And to know, what worthie frute, did spring of soch worthie seade, I will tell yow the most meruell of all, and yet soch a trothe, as no man shall denie it, except such as be ignorant in knowledge of the best stories.

Athens, by this discipline and good ordering of yougthe, did breede vp, within the circu[i]te Athenes. of that one Citie, within the compas of one hundred yeare, within the memorie of one mans life, so manie notable Capitaines in warre, for worthinesse, wifdome and learning, as be scarfe matchable no Roma. not in the state of Rome, in the compas of those seauen hundred yeares, whan it florished moſte.

And bicause, I will not onelie saie it, but also proue it, the names of them be these. Miltiades, The noble Cap. taines of Athens. Themistocles, Xantippus, Pericles, Cymon, Alcybiades, Thraſybulus, Conon, Iphicrates, Xenophon, Timotheus, Theopompus, Demetrius, and diuers other mo: of which euerie one, maie iustelie be spoken that worthie praife, which was geuen to Scipio Africanus, who, Cicero douteth, whether he were, more noble Capitaine in warre, or more eloquent and wise councelor in peace. And if ye beleue not me, read diligentlie, Æmilius Probus in Latin, and Æmil. Probus. Plutarche in Greke, which two, had no Plutarchus. cause either to flatter or lie vpon anie of those which I haue recited.

And beside nobilitie in warre, for excellent and matchles masters in all maner of learninge, The learned of Athens. in that one Citie, in memorie of one aige, were mo learned men, and that in a maner altogether, than all tyme doth remember, than all place doth affourde, than all other tonges do containe. And I do not meene of those Authors, which, by iniurie of tyme, by negligence of men, by crueltie of fier and sworde, be lost, but euen of those, which by Goddes grace, are left yet vnto us: of which I thank God, euen my poor studie lacketh not one. As, in Philosophie, Plato, Aristotle, Xenophon, Eudide, and Theophrast: In eloquens and Ciuill lawe, Demosthenes, Æschines, Lycurgus, Dinarchus, Demades, Isocrates, Isæus, Lyſias, Antisthenes, Andocides: In histories, He- rodotus, Thucydides, Xenophon: and which we lacke, to our great losse, Theopompus and Eph[orus]: In Poetrie, Æschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, Aristophanes, and somewhat of Menander, Demosthenes sifter[s] fonne.

Now, let Italian, and Latin it self, Spanishe, French, Learnynge, chiefly contained in the Greke, and in no other tong. Douch, and Englishe bring forth their lernynge, and recite their Authors, Cicero onelie excepted, and in one or two moe in Latin, they be all patched cloutes and ragges, in comparison of faire wouen broade cloathes. And trewelie, if there be any good in them, it is either lerned, borrowed, or stolne, from some one of those worthie wittes of Athens.

The remembrance of soch a common welthe, vsing soch discipline and order for yougthe, and thereby bringing forth to their praise, and leauing to vs for our example, such Capitaines for warre, soch Councelors for peace, and matcheles masters, for all kinde of learninge, is pleasant for me to recite, and not irksom, I trust, for other to heare, except it be soch, as make neither counte of vertue nor learninge.

And whether, there be anie soch or no, I can not Contemners of learnynge. well tell: yet I heare saie, some yong Ientlemen of oures, count it their shame to be counted learned: and perchance, they count it their shame, to be counted honest also, for I heare saie, they medle as litle with the one, as with the other. A meruelous case, that Ientlemen shold so be ashamed of good learning, and neuer a whit ashamed of ill maners: Ientlemen of France. soch do laie for them, that the Ientlemen of France do so: which is a lie, as God will haue it. Langæus, and Bellæus that be dead, and the noble Vidam of Chartes, that is aliue, and infinite mo in France, which I heare tell of, proue this to be most false. And though som, in France, which will nedes be Ientlemen, whether men will or no, and haue more ientleshipe in their hat, than in their hed, be at deedlie feude, with both learning and honestie, yet I beleue, if that noble Prince, king Francis the first were aliue, they shold haue, neither place in his Courte, nor pension in his warres, if he had knowledg of them. This opinion is not French, but plaine Turckishe: from whens, som French fetche moe faultes, than this: which, I praie God, kepe out of England, and send also those of oures better mindes, which bend them selues againste vertue and learninge, to the contempte of God, dishonor of their contrie, to the hurt of manie others, and at length, to the greatest harme, and vtter destruction of themselves.

Some other, hauing better nature, but lesse witte, (for ill commonlie, haue ouer moch witte) do not vtterlie dispraise learning, but they saie, that without learning, common experience, knowledge of all facions, and haunting all companies, shall worke in yougthe, both wisdome, and habilitie, to execute anie weightie affaire. Surelie long experience doth proffet moch, but moeste, and almost onelie to him (if we meene honest affaires) that is diligentlie before instructed with preceptes of well doinge. For good precepts of learning, be the eyes of the minde, to looke wiselie before a man, which waie to go right, and which not.

Experience
learnynge.

Learning teacheth more in one yeare than experience in twentie: And learning teacheth safelie, when experience maketh mo miserable then wise. He hafardeth fore, that waxeth wise by experience. An vnhappie Master he is, that is made cunning by manie shippe wrakes: A miserable merchant, that is neither riche or wise, but after som bankroutes. It is costlie wisdom, that is bought by experience. We know by experience it selfe, that it is a meruelous paine, to finde oute but a short waie, by long wandering. And surelie, he that wold proue wise by experience, he maie be wittie in deede, but euen like a swift runner, that runneth fast out of his waie, and vpon the night, he knoweth not whither. And verilie they be fewest of number, that be happie or wife by vnlearned experience. And looke well vpon the former life of those fewe, whether your example be old or yonge, who without learning haue gathered, by long experience, a litle wisdom, and som happines: and whan you do consider, what mischeife they haue committed, what dangers they haue escaped (and yet xx. for one, do perishe in the aduenture) than thinke well with your selfe, whether ye wold, that your owne son, should cum to wisdom and happines, by the waie of foch experience or no.

Syr Roger Chamloe.

It is a notable tale, that old Syr Roger Chamloe, sometime cheife Iustice, wold tell of him selfe. When he was Auncient in Inne of Courte, certaine yong Ientlemen were brought before him, to be corrected for certaine misorders: And one of the lustiest saide: Syr, we be yong ientlemen, and wise men before vs, haue proued all facions, and yet those haue done full well: this they said, because it was well knowen, that Syr Roger had bene a good feloe in his yough. But he aunswered them verie wifelie. In deede faith he, in yougthe, I was, as you ar[e] now: and I had twelue feloes like vnto my self, but not one of them came to a good ende. And therefore, folow not my example in yough, but folow my councell in aige, if euer ye thinke to cum to this place, or to thies yeares, that I am cum vnto, lesse ye meete either with pouertie or Tiburn in the way.

Experience.

Thus, experience of all facions in yougthe, beinge, in prose, alwaife daungerous, in isshue, feldom lucklie, is a waie, in deede, to ouermoch knowledge, yet vsed commonlie of foch men, which be either caried by som curious affection of mynde, or driuen by som hard necessitie of life, to hafard the triall of ouer manie perilous aduentures.

Erasmus.

Erasmus the honour of learning of all oure time, saide wifelie that experience is the common scholehouse of foles, and ill men: Men, of witte and honestie, be otherwise instructed. For there be, that kepe them out of fier, and yet was neuer burned : That beware of water, and yet was neuer nie drowninge : That hate harlottes, and was neuer at the flewes : That abhorre falshode, and neuer brake promis themfelues.

But will ye see, a fit Similitude of this aduentured experience. A Father, that doth let louse his son, to all experiences, is most like a fond Hunter, that letteth slippe a whelp to the hole herde. Twentie to one, he shall fall vpon a rascall, and let go the faire game. Men that hunt so, be either ignorant perfones, preuie stealers, or night walkers.

Learning therefore, ye wise fathers, and good bringing vp, and not blinde and dangerous experience, is the next and readiest waie, that must leede your Children, first, to wisdom, and than to worthinesse, if euer ye purpose they shall cum there.

And to saie all in shorte, though I lacke How experience may profet. Authoritie to giue counsell, yet I lacke not good will to wisse, that the yougthe in England, speciallie Ientlemen, and namelie nobilitie, shold be by good bringing vp, so grounded in iudgement of learninge, so founded in loue of honestie, as, when they sho[u]ld be called forthe to the execution of great affaires, in seruice of their Prince and co[un]trie, they might be hable, to vse and to order, all experiences, were they good were they bad, and that, according to the square, rule, and line, of wisdom, learning, and vertue.

And, I do not meene, by all this my taulke, that yong Ientlemen, shold alwaies be poring on a booke, and by vsing good studies, shold leafe honest pleasure, and haunt no good pastime, I meene nothing lesse : For it is well knowne, that I both like and loue, and haue alwaies, and do yet still vse, all exercises and pastimes, that be fitte for my nature and habilitie. And beside naturall disposition, in iudgement, also, I was neuer, either Stoick in doctrine, or Anabaptif in Religion to mislike a merie, pleasant, Diligente learningeought to be ioynd with pleasant pastimes, namelie in a Ientleman.

and plaifull nature, if no outrage be committed, against lawe, me[a]sure, and good order.

Therefore, I wo[u]ld wishe, that, beside some good time, fitlie appointed, and constantlie kepte, to encrease by readinge, the knowledge of the tonges and learning, yong ientlemen shold vse, and delite in all Courtelie exercifes, and ientlemanlike pastimes.

Learning

pastimes.

And good cause whie : For the self same noble Citie of Athenes, iustlie commended of me before, did wiselie and vpon great consideration, appoint, the Muses, Apollo, and Pallas, to be patrones of learninge to their yougthe. For the warres. Wherbie was nothing else ment, but that learninge shold be alwaife mingled, with honest mirthe, and cumlie exercifes : and that warre also shold be gouerned by learning, and moderated by wisdom, as did well appeare in those Capitaines of Athenes named by me before, and also in Scipio and Cæsar the two Diamondes of Rome.

And Pallas, was no more feared, in weering Ægida,

But, of all kinde of pastimes, fitte for a Ientleman, I will, godwilling, in fitter place, more at large, declare fullie, in my booke of the Cockpitte: which The Cockpitte. And som also will nedes busie them selues in merueling, and adding thereunto vnfrendlie taulke, why I, a man of good yeares, and of no ill place, I thanke God and my Prince, do make choise to spend soch tyme in writyng of trifles, as the schole of shoting, the Cockpitte, and this booke of the first Principles of Grammer, rather, than to take some weightie matter in hand, either of Religion, or Ciuill discipline.

Argument.

Meening Homer, who, within the compasse of a smal Argument, of one harlot, and of one good wife, did vtter so much learning in all kinde of sciences, as, by the iudgement of Quintilian, he deserueth so hie a praise, that no man yet deserued to sit in the second degree beneth him. And thus moch out of my way, concerning my purpose in spending penne, and paper, and tyme, vpon trifles, and namelie to aunswere some, that haue neither witte nor learning, to do any thyng them selues, neither will nor honestie, to fay well of other.

To ioyne learnyng with cumlie exercises, Conto
The Cortegian, Baldesær Castiglione in his booke, Cortegiane, doth trimlie teache: which booke, an excellent booke for a ientleman. aduisedlie read, and diligentlie folowed, but one yeare at home in England, would do a yong ientleman more good, I wisse, then three yeares trauell abroad spent in Italie. And I meruell this booke, is no more read in the Court, than it is, feyng it is so well translated into English by a worthie Ientleman Syr Tho. Hobbie.

Syr Th. Hobbie, who was many wayes well furnished with learnyng, and very expert in knowledge of diuers tonges.

And beside good preceptes in bookes, in all kinde of tonges, this Court also neuer lacked many faire examples, for yong ientlemen to folow: And surelie, one example, is more valiable, both to good and ill, than xx. preceptes written in bookes: and so Plato, not in one or two, but diuerse places, doth plainlie teach.

Examples better than preceptes.
King Ed. 6. If kyng Edward had liued a litle longer, his onely example had breed foch a rafe of worthie learned ientlemen, as this Realme neuer yet did afourde.

And, in the second degree, two noble Primeroses of Nobilitie, the yong Duke of Suffolke, and Lord H. Matreuers, were foch two examples to the Court for learnyng, as our tyme may rather wishe than looke for agayne
L. H. Martrauers.

At Cambrige also, in S. Iohns Colledge, in my tyme, I do know, that, not so much the good statutes, as two Ientlemen, of worthie memorie Syr Syr Iohn John Cheke, and Doctour Readman, by Cheke. their onely example of excellency in learnyng, of godnes in liuyng, of diligence in studying, of counceyl in exhorting, of [by] good order in all thyng, D. Readman.
 did breed vp, so many learned men, in that one College of S. Iohns, at one time, as I beleue, the whole Vniuersitie of Louaine, in many yeares, was neuer able to affourd.

Present examples of this present tyme, I list not to the touch : yet there is one example, for all Queene Ientlemen of this Court to fol[l]ow, that Elisabeth.
 may well satisfie them, or nothing will ferue them, nor no example moue them, to goodnes and learning.

It is your shame, (I speake to you all, you yong Ientlemen of England) that one mayd[e] should go beyond you all, in excellencie of learnyng, and knowledge of diuers tonges. Pointe forth six of the best giuen Ientlemen of this Court, and all they together, shew not so much good will, spend not so much tyme, bestow not so many houres, dayly, orderly, and constantly, for the increase of learning and knowledge, as doth the Queenes Maiestie her selfe. Yea I beleue, that beside her perfit readines, in Latin, Italian, French, and Spanish, she readeth here now at Windsore more Greeke every day, than some Prebendarie of this Chirch doth read Latin in a whole weeke. And that which is most praise worthie of all, within the wailes of her priuie chamber, she hath obteyned that excellencie of learnyng, to vnderstand, speake, and write, both wittely with head, and faire with hand, as scarce one or two rare wittes in both the Vniuersities haue in many yeares reached vnto. Amongest all the benefites yat God hath blessed me with all, next the knowledge of Christes true Religion, I counte this the greatest, that it pleased God to call me, to be one poore minister in setting for ward these excellent giftes of learnyng in this most excellent Prince. Whose onely example, if the rest of our nobilitie would folow, than might England be, for learnyng and wisedome in nobilitie, a spectacle to all the world beside. But see the mishap of men: The best examples haue neuer such forse to moue to any goodnes, as the bad, vaine, light and fond, haue to all ilnes.

And one example, though out of the compas of learning, yet not out of the order of good maners, was notable in this Courte, not fullie xxiiij. yeares a go, when all the actes of Parliament, many good Proclamations, diuerse strait commaundementes, fore punishment openlie, speciall regarde priuatelie, cold not do so moch to take away one misorder, as the example of one big one of this Courte did, still to kepe vp the fame: The memorie whereof, doth yet remaine, in a common prouerbe of Birching lane.

Take hede therefore, ye great ones in ye Court, yea though ye be ye greatest of all, take hede, what ye do, take hede how ye liue. For as you great ones vse to do, so all meane men loue to do. You be in deed, makers or marrers, of all mens maners within the Realme. For though God hath placed yow, to be cheife in making of lawes, to beare greatest authoritie, to commaund all others: yet God doth order, that all your lawes, all your authoritie, all your commaundementes, do not halfe so moch with meane men, as doth your example and maner of liuinge. And for example euen in the greatest matter, if yow your selues do serue God gladlie and orderlie for conscience sake, not coldlie, and somtyme for maner sake, you carie all the Courte with yow, and the whole Realme beside, earnestlie and orderlie to do the same. If yow do otherwise, yow be the onelie authors, of all misorders in Religion, not onelie to the Courte, but to all England beside. Infinite shall be made cold in Religion by your example, that neuer were hurt by reading of bookes.

And in meaner matters, if three or foure great ones in Courte, will nedes outrage in apparell, Example in apparell. in huge hose, in monst[e]rous hattes, in gaurishe colers, let the Prince Proclame, make Lawes, order, punishe, commaunde euerie gate in London dailie to be watched, let all good men beside do euerie where what they can, surelie the misorder of apparell in mean men abrode, shall neuer be amended, except the greatest in Courte will order and mend them selues first. I know, som greate and good ones in Courte, were authors, that honest Citizens in London, shoulde watche at euerie gate, to take misordered persones in apparell. I know, that honest Londoners did so: And I sawe, which I sawe than, and reporte now with some greife, that som Courtlie men were offended with these good men of London. And that, which greued me most of all, I sawe the verie same tyme, for all this good orders, commaunded from the Courte and executed in London, I sawe I say, cum out Masters, Vshers, and Scholers of fense. of London, euen vnto the presence of the Prince, a great rable of meane and light persons, in apparell, for matter, against lawe, for making, against order, for facion, namelie hose, so without all order, as he thought himselfe most braue, that durst do most in breaking order and was most monstrous in misorder. And for all the great commaundementes, that came out of the Courte, yet this bold misorder, was winked at, and borne withall, in the Courte. I thought, it was not well, that som great ones of the Court, durst declare themselues offended, with good men of London, for doinge their dewtie, and the good ones of the Courte, would not shew themselues offended, with the ill men of London, for breaking good order. I fownde thereby a sayinge of Socrates to be most trewe that ill men be more hastie, than good men be forward, to profecute their purposes, euen as Christ himselfe saith, of the Children of light and darknes.

Beside apparell, in all other thinges to, not so moch, good lawes and strait commaundementes as the example and maner of liuing of great men, doth carie all meane men euerie where, to like, and loue, and do, as they do. For if but two or three noble men in the Court, would but beginne to shoote, all yong gentlemen, the whole Court, all London, the whole Realme, would straight waie exercise shooting.

What praise shold they wyne to themselues, what commoditie shold they bring to their contrey, that would thus deserue to be pointed at: Beholde, there goeth, the author of good order, the guide of good men. I cold say more, and yet not ouermoch. But perchance, som will say, I haue stepte to farre, out of my schole, into the common welthe, from teaching a yong scholer, to monishe greate and noble men: yet I trust good and wise men will thinke and iudge of me, that my minde was, not so moch, to be busie and bold with them, that be great now, as to giue trewe aduise to them, that may be great hereafter. Who, if they do, as I wishe them to do, how great so euer they be now, by blood and other mens meanes, they shall becum a greate deale greater hereafter, by learninge, vertue, and their owne desertes: which is trewe praise, right worthines, and verie Nobilitie in deede. Yet, if som will needes presse me, that I am to bold with great men, and stray to farre from my matter, I will answere them with S. Paul, siue per contentionem, siue quocunq̄ modo, modò Christus prædicetnr, etc. euen so, whether in place, or out of place, with my matter, or beside my matter, if I can hereby either prouoke the good, or staye the ill, I shall thinke my writing herein well employed.

Ad Philip.

But, to cum downe, from greate men, and hier matters, to my litle children, and poore schoolehouse againe, I will, God willing, go forwarde orderlie, as I purposed, to instructe Children and yong men, both for learninge and maners.

Hitherto, I haue shewed, what harme, ouermoch feare bringeth to children: and what hurte, ill companie, and ouermoch libertie breedeth in yougthe: meening thereby, that from seauen yeare olde, to seauentene, loue is the best allurement to learninge: from seauentene to seauen and twentie, that wise men shold carefullie see the steppes of yougthe surelie staide by good order, in that most slipperie tyme: and specially in the Courte, a place most dangerous for yougthe to liue in, without great grace, good regarde, and diligent looking to.

Syr Richard Sackuile, that worthy Ientleman of worthy memorie, as I sayd in the begynnyng, in the Queenes priuie Chamber at Windesore, ^{Trauelling} after he had talked with me, for the right ^{into Italie.} choice of a good witte in a child for learnyng, and of the trewe difference betwixt quicke and hard wittes, of alluring yong children by ientlenes to loue learnyng, and of the speciall care that was to be had, to keepe yong men from licencious liuyng, he was most earnest with me, to haue me say my mynde also, what I thought, concernyng the fanisie that many yong Ientlemen of England haue to trauell abroad, and namely to lead a long lyfe in Italie. His request, both for his authoritie, and good will toward me, was a sufficient commaundement vnto me, to satisfie his pleasure, with vtterynge plainlie my opinion in that matter. Syr quoth I, I take goyng thither, and liuing there, for a yonge ientleman, that doth not goe vnder the ke[e]pe and garde of such a man, as both, by wisedome can, and authoritie dare rewle him, to be meruelous dangerous. And whie I said so than, I will declare at large now: which I said than priuatelie, and write now openlie, not bicause I do contemne, either the knowledge of strange and diuerse tonges, and namelie the Italian ^{Tl.e Italian} tonge, which next the Greeke and Latin ^{tong.} tonge, I like and loue aboue all other: or else bicause I do despise, the learning that is gotten, or the experience that is gathered in strange contries: or for any priuate malice that beare to Italie: which ^{Italia.}

Roma. contrie, and in it, namelie Rome, I haue alwayes speciallie honored: bicause, tyme was, whan Italie and Rome, haue bene, to the greate good of vs that now liue, the best breeders and bringers vp, of the worthiest men, not onelie for wise speakinge, but also for well doing, in all Ciuill affaires, that euer was in the worlde. But now, that tyme is gone, and though the place remayne, yet the olde and present maners, do differ as farre, as blacke and white, as vertue and vice. Vertue once made that contrie Mistres ouer all the worlde. Vice now maketh that contrie slaue to them, that before, were glad to serue it. All man seeth it: They themselues confesse it, namelie soch, as be best and wisest amongest them. For sinne, by lust and vanitie, hath and doth breed vp euery where, common contempt of Gods word, priuate contention in many families, open factions in euery Citie: and so, makyng them selues bonde, to vanitie and vice at home, they are content to beare the yoke of feruyng straungers abroad. Italie now, is not that Italie, that it was wont to be: and therefore now, not so fitte a place, as some do counte it, for yong men to fetch either wisedome or honestie from thence. For surelie, they will make other but bad Scholers, that be so ill Masters to them selues. Yet, if a ientleman will nedes trauell into Italie, he shall do well, to looke on the life, of the wisest traueler, that euer traueled thether, set out by the wisest writer, that euer spake with tong, Gods doctrine onelie excepted: and that is Vlysses in Vlysses. Homere. Vlysses, and his trauell, I wishe Homere. our trauelers to looke vpon, not so much to feare them, with the great daungers, that he many tymes suffered, as to instruct them, with his excellent wisedome, which he alwayes and euerywhere vsed. Yea euen those, that be learned and wittie trauelers, when they be disposed to prayse traueling, as a great commendacion, and the best Scripture they haue for it, they gladlie recite the third verse of Homere, in his first booke of Odyseea, conteinyng a great prayse of dome he vsed in traouelling.

Which verse, bicause, in mine opinion, it was not made at the first, more naturallie in Greke by Homere, nor after turned more aptelie into Latin by Horace, than it was a good while ago, in Cambrige, translated into English, both plainlie for the sence, and roundlie for the verse, by one of the best Scholers, that euer S. Iohns Colledge bred, M. Watson, myne old frend, somtime Bishop of Lincolne, therefore, for their sake, that haue lust to see, how our English tong, in avoidyng barbarous ryming, may as well receiue, right quantitie of sillables, and trewe order of versifyng (of which matter more at large hereafter) as either Greke or Latin, if a cunning man haue it in [the] handling, I will set forth that one verse in all three tonges, for an Example to good wittes, that shall delite in like learned exercise.

Homerus.

πολλῶν δ' ἀνθρώπων ἶδεν ἄστεα καὶ νόον ἔγνω.

Horatius.

Qui mores hominum multorum vidit et vrbes.

*All traouellers do gladly report great prayse of Vlyffes,
For that he knew many mens maners, and saw many Cities.*

And yet is not Vlyffes commended, so much, nor so oft, in Homere, bicause he was πολύτροπος, that is, skilfull in many mens manners and facions, as bicause he was πολύμητις, that is, wise in all purposes, and war[y]e in all places: which wisdome and warenes will not serue neither a traueller, except Pallas be alwayes at his elbow, that is Gods speciall grace from heauen, to kepe him in Gods feare, in all his doynge, in all his iorneye.

Homer ment couertlie (as wise and Godly men do iudge)
 that loue of honestie, and hatred of ill, which Dauid Psal. 33. more plainly doth call the feare of God :
 the onely remedie agaynst all inchantementes of sinne.

I know diuerse noble personages, and many worthie

Ientlemen of England, whom all the Siren songes of Italie, could neuer vntwyne from the maste of Gods word: nor no inchantment of vanitie, ouerturne them, from the feare of God, and loue of honestie.

But I know as many, or mo, and some, sometyme my deare frendes, for whose sake I hate going into that countrey the more, who, partyng out of England feruent in the loue of Christes doctrine, and well furnished with the feare of God, returned out of Italie worse transformed, than euer were any in Circes Court. I know diuerse, that went out of England, men of innocent life, men of excellent learnyng, who returned out of Italie, not onely with worse manners, but also with lesse learnyng: neither so willing to liue orderly, nor yet so hable to speake learnedlie, as they were at home, before they went abroad. And why? Plato, yat wise writer, and worthy traueler him selfe, telleth the cause why. He went into Sicilia, a countrey, no nigher Italy by site of place, than Italie that is now, is like Sicilia that was then, in all corrupt maners and licenciousnes of life. Plato found in Sicilia, euery Citie full of vanitie, full of factions, euen as Italie is now. And as Homere, like a learned Poete, doth feyne, that Circes, by pleasant inchantmentes, did turne men into beastes, some into Swine, som in Affes, some into Foxes, some into Wolues etc. euen so, Plato, like a wise Philosopher, doth plainelie declare, that pleasure, by licentious vanitie, that sweet and perilous poyson of all youth, doth ingender in all those that yeld vp themselues to her, foure notorious properties.

trewe difference betwixt good and ill, betwixt troth, and vanitie, the fourth, a proude disdainfulnes of other good men, in all honest matters. Homere and Plato ioyned and expounded. and Plato, haue both one meanyng, looke both to one end. For, if a man inglutte himself with ἀφροσύνη, always glad to commend the worfe partie, Quid, et vnde. and euer ready to defend the falser opinion.

And why? For, where will is giuen from goodnes to vanitie, the mynde is sone caryed from right iudgement to any fond opinion, in Religion, in Philosophie, or any other kynde of learning. The fourth fruite of ὑβρις. vaine pleasure, by Homere and Platos iudgement, is pride in them selues, contempt of others, the very badge of all those that serue in Circes Court.

The true meenyng of both Homere and Plato, is plainlie declared in one short sentence of the holy Prophet of

The true medecine against the inchantmentes of Circes, the vanitie of licencious pleasure, the inticementes of all sinne, is, in Homere, the herbe Moly, with the blacke roote, and white floore, sower at the man, but giuen and taught by God. And for some [ones] fake, that will haue delite to read that sweete and Godlie

In English thus.

*No mortall man, with sweate of browe, or toile of minde,

Plato also, that diuine Philosopher, hath many Godly medicines agaynst the poyson of vayne pleasure, in many places, but specially in his Epistles to Dionisius the tyrant of Sicilie: yet agaynst those, Plat. ad. Dio. that will nedes becum beastes, with seruyng of Circes, the Prophet Dauid, crieth most loude, Nolite fieri sicut eques et mulus: and by and by Psal. 32.

cine, but in these plainer wordes, Diuerte à malo et fac bonum. But I am affraide, that ouer many of our trauelers into Italie, do not exchewe the way to Circes Court: but go, and ryde, and runne, and flie thether, they make great hast to cum to her: they make great fute to serue her: yea, I could point out some with my finger, that neuer had gone out of England, but onelie to serue Circes, in Italie. Vanitie and vice, and any licence to ill liuyng in England was counted stale and rude vnto them. And so, beyng Mules and Horses before they went, returned verie Swyne and Affes home agayne: yet euerie where verie Foxes with as futtle and busie heades; and where they may, verie Woolues, with cruell malicious hartes. marre mens maners in England; much, by example of ill life, but more by preceptes of fonde bookes, of late translated out of Italian Italian bokes translated into English. into English, sold in euery shop in London, commended by honest titles the so[o]ner to corrupt honest maners: dedicated ouer boldlie to vertuous and honourable personages, the easielier to beg[u]ile simple and innocent wittes. It is pitie, that those, which haue authoritie and charge, to allow and disallow bookes to be printed, be no more circumspect herein, than they are. Ten Sermons at Paules Crosse do not so moch good for mouyng men to trewe doctrine, as one of those bookes do harme, with inticing men to ill liuing. Yea, I say farder, those bookes, tend not so moch to corrupt honest liuing, as they do, to subuert trewe Religion. Mo Papistes be made, by yourmer[r]ybookes of Italie, than by your earnest bookes of Louain. And bicause our great Phisicians, do winke at the matter, and make no counte of this fore, I, though not admitted one of their felowshyp, yet hauyng bene many yeares a prentice to Gods trewe Religion, and trust to continewe a poore iorney man therein all dayes of my life, for the dewtie I owe, and loue I beare, both to trewe doctrine, and honest liuing, though I haue no authoritie to amend the fore my selfe, yet I will declare my good will, to discouer the fore to others.

S. Paul faith, that fectes and ill opinions, Ad Gal. 5. be the workes of the flesh, and frutes of sinne, this is spoken, no more trewlie for the doctrine, than sensible for the reason. And why? For, ill doinges, breed ill thinkinges. And of corrupted maners, spryng peruered iudgementes. And how? there be in man two speciall thinges: Mans will, mans mynde. Where will inclineth to goodnes, the mynde is bent to troth: Where will is caried from goodnes to vanitie, the mynde is sone drawne from troth to false opinion. And so, the readiest way to entangle the mynde with false doctrine, is first to intice the will to wanton liuyng. Therefore, when the busie and open Papistes abroad, could not, by their contentious bookes, turne men in England fast enough,

 fute and secrete Papistes at home, procured bawdie bookes to be translated out of the Italian tonge, whereby ouer many yong willes and wittes allured to wantonnes, do now boldly contemne

 all feure bookes that founde to honestie and godlines.
 In our forefathers tyme, whan Papistrie, as a standyng poole, couered and ouerflowed all England, fewe
 bookes were read in our tong, sauynge certaine bookes Cheualrie, as they sayd, for pastime and pleasure, which,
 as some say, were made in Monasteries, by idle Monkes, or wanton Chanons: as one for example, Morte Ar- Morte Arthur. thure: the whole pleasure of which booke standeth in two speciall poyntes, in open mans slaughter, and bold bawdrye: In which booke those be counted the noblest Knightes, that do kill most men without any quarrell, and commit fowlest aduoulter[i]es by sutlest shiftes: as Sir Launcelote, with the wife of king Arthure his master: Syr Tristram with the wife of king Marke his vncl: Syr Lamerocke with the wife of king Lote, that was his own aunte. This is good stuffe, for wise men to laughe at, or honest men to take pleasure at. Yet I know, when Gods Bible was banished the Court, and Morte Arthure re-ceiued into the Princes chamber. What toyes, the dayly readyng of such a booke, may worke in the will of a yong ientleman, or a yong mayde, that liueth welthelie and iddelie, wise men can iudge, and honest men do pitie. And yet ten Morte Arthures do not the tenth part so much harme, as one of these bookes, made in Italie, and translated in England.

 They open, not fond and common wayes to vice, but such subtile, cunningg, new, and diuerse shiftes, to cary yong willes to vanitie, and yong wittes to mischief, to teach old bawdes new schole poyntes, as the simple head of an Englishman is not hable to inuent, nor neuer was hard of in England before, yea when Papistrie ouerflowed all. Suffer these bookes to be read, and they shall soone displace all bookes of godly learnyng. For they, caryng the will to vanitie and marryng good maners, shall easly corrupt the mynde with ill opinions, and false iudgement in doctrine: first, to thinke nothyng of God hym selfe, one speciall pointe that is to be learned in Italie, and Italian bookes. And that which is most to be lamented, and therefore more nedefull to be looked to, there be moe of these vngratious bookes set out in Printe within these fewe monethes, than haue bene sene in England many score yeare[s] before. And bicause our English men made Italians can not hurt, but certaine persons, and in certaine places, therefore these Italian bookes are made English, to bryng mischief enough openly and boldly, to all states great and meane, yong and old, euery where.

And thus yow see, how will intised to wantonnes, doth easlie allure the mynde to false opinions: and how corrupt maners in liuinge, breede false iudgement in doctrine: how sinne and fleshlines, bring forth sectes and heresies: And therefore suffer not vaine bookes to breede vanitie in mens willes, if yow would haue Goddes trothe take roote in mens myndes.

That Italian, that first inuented the Italian Prouerbe against our English men Italianated, ment no more their vanitie in liuing, than their lewd opinion in Religion. For, in calling them Deuiles, he carieth them cleane from God: and yet he carieth them no farder, than they wil-linglie go themselues, that is, where they may freely say their mindes, to the open contempte of God and all godlines, both in liuing and doctrine.

The Italian

And how? I will expresse how, not by a Fable of Homere, nor by the Philosophie of Plato, but by a plaine troth of Goddes word, sensible vttered by Dauid thus. Thies men, abominabiles facti in studijs suis, thinke verily, and singe gladlie the verse before, Dixit insipiens in Corde suo, non est Deus: that is Psalm. 14. to say, they geuing themselues vp to vanitie, shakinge of the motions of Grace, driuing from them the feare of God, and running headlong into all sinne, first, lustelie contemne God, than icornefullie mocke his worde, and also spitefullie hate and hurte all well willers thereof. Than they haue in more reuerence, the triumphes of Petrarche: than the Genesis of Moses: They make more account of Tullies offices, than S. Paules epistles: of a tale in Bocace, than a storie of the Bible. Than they counte as Fables, the holie misteries of Christian Religion. They make Christ and his Gospell, onelie serue Ciuill pollicie: Than neyther Religion cummeth amisse to them: In tyme they be Promoters of both openlie: in place againe mockers of both priuile, as I wrote oncein a rude ryme.

Now new, now olde, now both, now neither,

To serue the worldes course, they care not with whether.

For where they dare, in cumpanie where they like, they boldlie laughe to scorne both protestant and Papist. They care for no scripture: They make no counte of generall counceles: they contemne the consent of the Chirch: They passe for no Doctores: They mocke the Pope: They raile on Luther: They allow neyther side: They like none, but onelie themselues: The marke they shote at, the ende they looke for, the heauen they desire, is onelie, their owne present pleasure, and priuate proffit: whereby, they plainlie declare, of whose schole, of what Religion they be: that is, Epicures in liuing, and ἀθεοι in doctrine: this last worde, is no more vnknowne now to plaine Englishe men, than the Person was vnknown somtyme in England, vntill som[e] Englishe man tooke peines to fetch that deuclish opinion out of Italie. Thies men, thus Italianated abroad, can not abide our Godlie Italian Chirch at home: they be not of that Parish, they be not of that fellowship: they like not yat preacher: they heare not his sermons: Excepte sometymes for companie, they cum thither, to heare the Italian tongue naturally spoken, not to hear Gods doctrine trewly preached.

And yet, thies men, in matters of Diuinitie, openlie pretend a great knowledge, and haue priuately to them selues, a verie compendious vnderstanding of all, which neuertheles they will vtter when and where they list:

And that is this: All the misteries of Moses, the whole lawe and Cerimonies, the Psalmes and Prophetes, Christ and his Gospell, G O D and the Deuill, Heauen and Hell, Faith, Conscience, Sinne, Death, and all they shortlie wrap vp, they quickly expounde with this one halfe verſe of Horace.

Credat Iudæus Appella.

Yet though in Italie they may freely be of no Religion, as they are in Englande in verie deede to, neuertheleſſe returning home into England they muſt countenance the profeſſion of the one or the other, howſoeuer inwardlie, they laugh to ſcorne both. And though, for their priuate matters they can follow, fawne, and flatter noble Perſonages, contrarie to them in all reſpectes, yet commonlie they allie themſelues with the worſt Papiſtes, to whom they be wedded, and do well agree together in three proper opinions: In open contempte of Goddes worde: in a ſecret ſecuritie of finne: and in a bloodie deſire to haue all taken away, by ſword and burning, that be not of their faction. They that do read, with indifferent iudgement, Pygius and Pygius. Machiauel, two indifferent Patriarches of Machiauelus. thies two Religions, do know full well what I ſay trewe.

Papistris and impietie agree in three opinions.

Ye ſee, what manners and doctrine, our Engliſhe men fetch out of Italie: For finding no other there, they can bring no other hither. And therefore, manie godlie and excellent learned Engliſhe men, not manie yeares ago, did make a better choice, whan open crueltie draue them out of this contrie, to place themſelues there, where Chriſtes doctrine, the feare of God, puniſhment of finne, and discipline of honeſtie, were had in ſpeciall regarde.

Wise and honest trauelers.

I was once in Italie my ſelfe: but I thanke God, my abode there, was but ix. dayes: And yet I ſawe in that lit[t]le tyme, in one Citie, more libertie to finne, than euer I h[e]ard tell of in our noble Citie of London in ix. yeare. I ſawe, it was there, as free to finne, not onelie without all puniſhment, but alſo without any mans marking, as it is free in the Citie of London, to chofe, without all blame, whether a man luft to weare Shoo or Pantocle. And good caufe why: For being vnlike in troth of Religion, they must nedes be vnlike in honeftie of liuing. For blessed be Chrift, in our Citie of London, commonlie the commandementes of God, be more diligentlie taught, and the feruice of God more reuerentlie vfed, and that daylie in many priuate mens houfes, than they be in Italie once a weeke in their common Chirches. where, masking Ceremonies, to delite the eye, and vaine foundes, to please the eare, do quite thruft out of the Chirches, all feruice of God in fpirit and troth. Yea, the Lord Maior of London, being but a Ciuill officer, is commonlie for his tyme, more diligent, in punishing finne, the bent enemy againft God and good order, than all the bloodie Inquifitors in Italie be in feauen yeare. For, their care and charge is, not to punish finne, not to amend manners, not to purge doctrine, but onelie to watch and ouerfee that Chriftes trewe Religion fet no fure footing, where the Pope hath any Iurifdiction. I learned, when I was at Venice, that there it is counted good pollicie, when there be foure or fие brethren of one familie, one, onelie to marie: and all the reft, to waulter, with as litle fhame, in open lecherie, as Swyne do here in the common myre. Yea, there be as fayre houfes of Religion, as great prouifion, as diligent officers, to kepe vp this miforder, as Bridewell is, and all the Mafters there, to kepe downe miforder. And therefore, if the Pope himfelfe, do not onelie graunt pardons to furder thies wicked purpofes abroad in Italie, but alfo (although this prefent Pope, in the beginning, made fom fhewe of mifliking thereof) affigne both meede and merite to the maintenance of ftewes and brothelhoufes at home in Rome, than let wife men thinke Italie a fafe place for holfom doctrine, and godlie manners, and a fitte fchole for yong ientlemen of England to be brought vp in.

Our Italians bring home with them other faultes

from Italie, though not so great as this of Religion, yet a great deale greater, than many good men well beare. For commonlie they cum home, common contempters of mariage and readie persuaders of all other to the same: not because they loue virginitie, nor yet because they hate prettie yong virgines, but, being free in Italie, to go whither so euer lust will cary them, they do not like, that lawe and honestie should be soch a barre to their like libertie at home in England. And yet they be, the greatest makers of loue, the daylie daliers, with such pleasant wordes, with such smilyng and secret countenances, with such signes, tokens, wagers, purposed to be lost, before they were purposed to be made, with bargaines of wearing colours, floures, and herbes, to breede occasion of offer meeting of him and her, and bolder talking of this and that, etc. And although I haue seene some, innocent of ill, and stayde in all honestie, that haue vsed these thinges without all harme, without all suspition of harme, yet these knackes were brought first into England by them, that learned them before in Italie in Circes Court: and how Courtlie curteses so euer they be counted now, yet, if the meaning and maners of some that do vse them, were somewhat amended, it were no great hurt, neither to them selues, nor to others.

An other propertie of this our English Italians is, to be meruelous singular in all their matters: Singular in knowledge, ignorant of nothyng: So singular in wisdom (in their owne opinion) as scarce they counte the best Counsellor the Prince hath, comparable with them: Common discourfers of all matters: busie searchers of most secret affaires: open flatterers of great men: priuie mislikers of good men: Faire speakers, with smiling countenances, and much curtesie openlie to all men. Ready ba[c]kbiters, fore nippers, and spitefull reporters priuile of good men. And beyng brought vp in Italie, in some free Citie, as all Cities be there: where a man may freelie discourse against what he will, against whom he lust: against any Prince, agaynst any gouernement, yea against God him felfe, and his whole Religion: where he muſt be, either Guelphe or Gibiline, either French or Spaniſh: and alwayes compelled to be of ſome partie, of ſome faction, he ſhall neuer be compelled to be of any Religion: And if he medle not ouer much with Chriſtes true Religion, he ſhall haue free libertie to embrace all Religions, and becum, if he luſt at once, without any let or puniſhment, Iewiſh, Turkiſh, Papiſh, and Deuilliſh.

A yong Ientleman, thus bred vp in this goodly ſchole, to learne the next and readie way to finne, to haue a buſie head, a factious Mart, a talkatiue tonge, fed with diſcourſing of factions: led to contemne God and his Religion, ſhall cum home into England, but verie ill taught, either to be an honeſt man him ſelf, a quiet ſubiect to his Prince, or willyng to ſerue God, vnder the obedience of trewe doctrine, or with in the order of honeſt liuing.

I know, none will be offended with this my generall writing, but onelie ſuch, as finde them ſelues giltye priuatelie therin: who ſhall haue a good leaue to be offended with me, vntill they begin to amende them ſelues. I touch not them that be good: and I ſay to litle of them that be nought. And ſo, though not enough for their deſeruing, yet ſufficientlie for this time, and more els when, if occaſion ſo require.

And thus farre haue I wandred from my firſt purpoſe of teaching a child, yet not altogether out of the way, bicauſe this whole taulke hath tended to the onelie aduancement of trothe in Religion, an honeſtie of liuing: and hath bene wholie within the compaſſe of learning and good maners, the ſpeciall pointes belonging in the right bringing vp of youth.

But to my matter, as I began, plainlie and ſimplie with my yong Scholer, ſo will I not leaue him, God willing, vntill I haue brought him a perſite Scholer out of the Schole, and placed him in the Vniuerſitie, to becum a fitte ſtudent, for Logicke and Rhetoricke: and ſo after to Phicke, Law, or Diuinitie, as aptnes of nature, aduife of frendes, and Gods diſpoſition ſhall lead him.

The ende of the firſt booke.

2 The second booke.

After that your scholer, as I sayd before, shall cum in deede, first, to a readie perfitnes in translating, than, to a ripe and skilfull choice in markyng out hys fixe pointes, as

1. Proprium.

Than take this order with him: Read dayly vnto him, some booke of Tullie, as the third Cicero. booke of Epistles chofen out by Sturmius, de Amicitia, de Senectute, or that excellent Epistle conteinyng almost the whole first booke ad Q. fra: some Comedie of Terence or Plautus: but in Plautus, skilfull Terentius. choice must be vsed by the master, to traine Plautus. his Scholler to a iudgement, in cutting out perfitelie ouer old and vnproper wordes: Cæf. Iul. Cæsar. Commentaries are to be read with all curiositie, in specially without all exception to be made either by frende or foe, is seene, the vnspotted proprietie of the Latin tong, euen whan it was, as the Grecians say, in ἀκμή, that is, at the hiest pitch of all perfiteneffe: or some Orations of T. Liuius, such as be both longest and T. Liuius. plainest.

These bookes, I would haue him read now, a good deale at euery lecture: for he shall not now vse da[i]llie translation, but onely construe againe, and parse, where ye suspect is any nede : yet, let him not omitte in these bookes, his former exercise, in marking diligently, and wrytyng orderlie out his six pointes. And for translating, vse you your selfe, euery second or thyrd day, to chose out, some Epistle ad Atticum, some notable common place out of his Orations, or some other part of Tullie, by your discretion, which your scholer may not know where to finde : and translate it you your selfe, into plaine naturall English, and than giue it him to translate into Latin againe : allowyng him good space and tyme to do it, both with diligent heede, and good aduifement. Here his witte shalbe new set on worke : his iudgement, for right choice, trewlie tried : his memorie, for sure reteyning, better exercised, than by learning, any thing without the booke : and here, how much he hath proffited, shall plainly appeare. Whan he bringeth it translated vnto you, bring you forth the place of Tullie : lay them together : compare the one with the other : commend his good choice, and right placing of wordes : Shew his faultes iently, but blame them not ouer sharply : for, of such missings, ientlie admonished of, proceedeth glad and good heed taking : of good heed taking, springeth chiefly knowledge, which after, groweth to perfitnesse, if this order, be diligentlie vsed by the scholer and iently handled by the master : for here, shall all the hard pointes of Grammer, both easely and surelie be learned vp : which, scholers in common scholes, by making of Latines, be groping at, with care and feare, and yet in many yeares, they scarce can reach vnto them. I remember, whan I was yong, in the North, they went to the Grammer schole, litle children : they came from thence great lubbers : alwayes learning, and litle profiting : learning without booke, euery thing, vnderstandyng with in the booke, little or nothing. Their whole knowledge, by learning without the booke, was tied onely to their tong and lips, and neuer ascended vp to the braine and head, and therefore was sone spitte out of the mouth againe : They were, as men, alwayes goyng, but euer out of the way: and why? For their whole labor, or rather great toyle without order, was euen vaine idleneffe without proffit. In deed, they tooke great paynes about learning: but employed small labour in learning: Whan by this way prescribed in this booke, being streight, plaine, and easie, the scholer is alwayes laboring with pleasure, and euer going right on forward with proffit: Alwayes laboring I say, for, or he haue construed, parced, twise translated ouer by good aduifement, marked out his six pointes by skilfull iudgement, he shall haue necessarie occasion, to read ouer euery lecture, a dosen tymes, at the least. Which, bicause he shall do alwayes in order, he shall do it alwayes with pleasure: And pleasure allureth loue: loue hath lust to labor: labour alwayes obtaineth his purpose, as most trewly, both Aristotle in his Rhetoricke and Oedipus in Sophocles do teach, saying, πᾶν γὰρ ἐκπονόμενον ἄλισκε. et cet. Rhet. 2 and this oft reading, is the verie right In Oedip. Tyr. following, of that good Counsell, which Epist. lib. 7. Plinie doth geue to his frende Fuscus, saying, Multum, non multa. But to my purpose againe:

Whan, by this diligent and spedie reading ouer, those forenamed good bokes of Tullie, Terence, Cæsar and Linie, and by this second kinde of translating out of your English, tyme shall breed skill, and vse shall bring perfection, than ye may trie, if you will, your scholer, with the third kinde of translation: although the two first wayes, by myne opinion, be, not onelie sufficient of them selues, but also surer, both for the Masters teaching, and scholers learnyng, than this third way is: Which is thus. Write you in English, some letter, as it were from him to his father, or to some other frende, naturallie, according to the disposition of the child, or some tale, or fable, or plaine narration, according as Aphthonius beginneth his exercises of learning, and let him translate it into Latin againe, abiding in such place, where no other scholer may prompe him. But yet, vse you your selfe such discretion for choice therein, as the matter may be within the compas, both for wordes and sentences, of his former learning and reading. And now take heede, lest your scholer do not better in some point, than you your selfe, except ye haue bene diligentlie exercised in these kindes of translating before :

I had once a profe hereof, tried by good experience, by a deare frende of myne, whan I came first from Cambrige, to serue the Queenes Maiestie, than Ladie Elizabeth, lying at worthie Sir Ant. Denys in Cheston. John Whitneye, a yong ientleman, was my bedfeloe, who willyng by good nature and prouoked by mine aduise, began to learne the Latin tong, after the order declared in this booke. We began after Christmas : I read vnto him Tullie de Amicitia, which he did euerie day twise translate, out of Latin into English, and out of English into Latin agayne. About S. Laurence tyde after, to proue how he proffited, I did chose out Torquatus taulke de Amicitia, in the lat[t]er end of the first booke de finib. because that place was, the same in matter, like in wordes and phrafes, nigh to the forme and facion of sentences, as he had learned before in de Amicitia. I did translate it my selfe into plaine English, and gaue it him to turne into Latin : Which he did, so choisslie, so orderlie, so without any great misse in the hardest pointes of Grammer, that some, in feuen yeare in Grammer scholes, yea, and some in the Vniuersities to, can not do halfe so well. This worthie yong Ientleman, to my greatest grief, to the great lamentation of that whole house, and speciallie to that most noble Ladie, now Queene Elizabeth her selfe, departed within few dayes, out of this world.

And if in any cause a man may without offence of God speake somewhat vngodlie, surely, it was some grief vnto me, to see him hie so hastlie to God, as he did. A Court, full of soch yong Ientlemen, were rather a Paradise than a Court vpon earth. And though I had neuer Poeticall head, to make any verse, in any tong, yet either loue, or sor[r]ow, or both, did wring out of me than, certaine carefull thoughtes of my good will towards him, which in my m[o]urning for him, fell forth, more by chance, than either by skill or vse, into this kinde of misorderlie meter.

In this place, or I procede farder, I will now declare, by whose authoritie I am led, and by what reason I am moued, to thinke, that this way of d[o]uble translation out of one tong into an other, in either onelie, or at least chiefly, to be exercifed, speciallie of youth, for the ready and fure obtaining of any tong.

There be fix wayes appointed by the best learned men, for the learning of tonges, and encrease of eloquence, as

All theis be vsed, and commended, but in order, and for respectes: as person, habilitie, place, and tyme shall require. The five last, be fitter, for the Master, than the scholer: for men, than for children: for the vniuersities, rather than for Grammer scholes: yet neuerthelesse, which is, fittest in mine opinion, for our schole, and which is, either wholie to be refused, or partlie to be vsed for our purpose, I will, by good authoritie, and some reason, I trust perticularlie of euerie one, and largelie enough of them all, declare orderlie vnto you.

Translation, is easie in the beginning for the scholer, and bringeth all[so]moch learning and great iudgement to the Master. It is most common, and most commendable of all other exercifes for youth: most common, for all your constructions in Grammer scholes, be nothing els but translations: but because they be not double translations, as I do require, they bring forth but simple and single commoditie, and bicause also they lacke the daily vse of writing, which is the onely thing that breedeth deepe roote, both in ye witte, for good vnderstanding, and in ye memorie, for fure keeping of all that is learned. Most commendable also, and that by ye iudgement of all authors, which intreate of this exercifes. Tullie in the person of x. de Or.

L. Crassus, whom he maketh his example of eloquence and trewe iudgement in learning, doth, not onely praise specially, and chose this way of translation for a yong man, but doth also discommend and refuse his owne former wont, in exercising Paraphrasin et Metaphrasin.

Paraphrasis is, to take some eloquent Oration, or some notable common place in Latin, and expresse it with other wordes: Metaphrasis is, to take some notable place out of a good Poete, and turn the same sence into meter, or into other wordes in Prose. Crassus, or rather Tullie, doth mislike both these wayes, bicause the Author, either Orator or Poete, had chosen out before, the fittest wordes and aptest composition for that matter, and so he, in seeking other, was driuen to vse the worfe.

Quintilian also preferreth translation before all other exercifes: yet hauing a lust, to dissent, from Quint. x.

Tullie (as he doth in very many places, if a man read his Rhetoricke ouer aduisedlie, and that rather of an enuious minde, than of any iust cause) doth greatlie commend Paraphrasis, crossing spitefullie Tullies iudgement in refusing the same: and so do Ramus and Talæus euen at this day in France to. But such singularity, in dissenting from the best mens iudgements, in liking onelie their owne opinions, is moch misliked of all them, that ioyned with learning, discretion, and wisdom. For he, that can neither like Aristotle in Logicke and Philosophie, nor Tullie in Rhetoricke and Eloquence, will, from these steppes, likelie enough presume, by like pride, to mount hier, to the misliking of greater matters: that is either in Religion, to haue a dissentious head, or in the common wealth, to haue a factious hart: as I knew one a student in Cambridge, who, for a singularity, began first to dissent, in the scholes, from Aristotle, and sone after became a peruerse Arian, against Christ and all true Religion: and studied diligentlie Origene, Basileus, and S. Hierome, onelie to gleane out of their workes, the pernicious heresies of Celfus, Eunomius, and Heluidius, whereby the Church of Christ, was so poysoned withall.

But to leaue these hie pointes of diuinitie, furelie, in this quiet and harmeles controuerfie, for the liking, or misliking of Paraphrasis for a yong scholer, euen as far, as Tullie goeth beyond Quintilian, Ramus and Talæus, in perfite Eloquence, euen so moch, by myne opinion, cum they behinde Tullie, for trew iudgement in teaching the same.

* Plinius Secundus. Plinius dedit Quintiliano præceptori suo, in matrimonium filia, 50000 [60000] numum. * Plinius Secundus, a wise Senator, of great experience, excellentlie learned him selfe, a liberall Patrone of learned men, and the purest writer, in myne opinion, of all his age, I except not Suctonius, his two schole-masters Quintilian and Tacitus, nor yet his most excellent learned Vncle, the Elder Plinius, doth expresse in an Epistle to his frende Fuscus, many good wayes for order in studie: but he beginneth with translation, and preferreth it to all the rest: and because his wordes be notable, I will recite them.

Vtile in primis, vt multi præcipiunt, ex Græco in Latinum, et ex Latino vertere in Græcum: Quo genere exercitationis, proprietates splendorque verborum, apta structura sententiarum, figurarum copia et explicandi vis colligitur. Præterea, imitatione optimorum, facultas similia inueniendi paratur: et quæ legentem, fefellissent, transferentem fugere non possunt. Intelligentia ex hoc, et iudicium acquiritur.

Ye perceiue, how Plinie teacheth, that by his exercise of double translating, is learned, easely, sensible, by litle and litle, not onelie all the hard congruities of Grammer, the choice of aptest wordes, the right framing of wordes and sentences, cumlines of figures and formes, fitte for euerie matter, and proper for euerie tong, but that which is greater also, in marking dayly, and folowing diligentlie thus, the steppes of the best Aut[h]ors, like inuention of Argumentes, like order in disposition, like vtterance in Elocution, is easelie gathered vp: whereby your scholer shall be brought not onelie to like eloquence, but also, to all trewe vnderstanding and right iudgement, both for writing and speaking. And where Dionys. Halicarnassæus hath written two excellent bookes, the one, de delectu optimorum verborum, the which, I feare, is lost, the other, of the right framing of wordes and sentences, which doth remaine yet in Greeke, to the great proffet of all them, that trewlie studie for eloquence, yet this waie of double translating, shall bring the whole proffet of both these bookes to a diligent scholer, and that easelie and pleasantlie, both for fitte choice of wordes, and apt composition of sentences. And by theis authorities and reasons am I moued to thinke, this waie of double translating, either onelie or chieflie, to be fittest, for the spedy and perfit atteyning of any tong. And for spedy atteyning, I durst venture a good wager, if a scholer, in whom is aptnes, loue, diligence, and constancie, would but translate, after this sorte, one litle booke in Tullie, as de senectute, with two Epistles, the first ad Q. fra: the other ad Lentulum, the last saue one, in the first booke, that scholer, I say, should cum to a better knowledge in the Latin tong, than the most part do, that spend four or fise yeares, in tossing all the rules of Grammer in common scholes. In deede this one booke with these two Epistles, is not sufficient to affourde all Latin wordes (which is not necessarie for a yong scholer to know) but it is able to furnishe him fully, for all pointes of Grammer, with the right placing, ordering, and vse of wordes in all kinde of matter. And why not? for it is read, that Dion. Prussæus, that wise Philosopher, and excellent orator of all his tyme, did cum to the great learning and vtterance that was in him, by reading and folowing onelie two bookes, Phædon Platonis, and Demosthenes most notable oration περί παραπροσβείας. And a better, and nerer example herein, may be, our most noble Queene Elizabeth, who neuer toke yet, Greeke nor Latin Grammer in her hand, after the first declining of a nowne and a verbe, but onely by this double translating of Demosthenes and Isocrates dailie without missing euerie forenone, for the space of a yeare or two, hath atteyned to soch a perfite vnderstanding in both the tonges, and to soch a readie vtterance of the latin, and that wyth soch a iudgement, as they be fewe in number in both the vniuersities, or els where in England, that be, in both tonges, comparable with her Maiestie. And to conclude in a short rowne, the commodities of double translation, surelie the mynde by dailie marking, first, the cause and matter: than, the wordes and phrases: next, the order and composition: after, the reason and argumentes: than the formes and figures of both the tonges: lastelie, the measure and compas of euerie sentence, must nedes, by litle and litle drawe vnto it the like shape of eloquence, as the author doth vse, which is re[a]d.

And thus much for double translation.

Paraphrasys.

Lib. x. Paraphrasys, the second point, is not onelie to expresse at large with moe wordes, but to striue and contend (as Quintilian saith) to translate the best latin authors, into other latin wordes, as many or thereaboutes.

This waie of exercise was vsed first by C. Crabo, and taken vp for a while, by L. Crassus, but sone after, vpon dewe profe thereof, reiected iustlie by Crassus and Cicero: yet allowed and made sterling agayne by M. Quintilian: neuerthelesse, shortly after, by better affaye, disallowed of his owne scholer Plinius Secundus, who termeth it rightlie thus Audax contentio. It is a bold comparison in deede, to thinke to say better, than that is best. Soch turning of the best into worse, is much like the turning of good wine, out of a faire sweete flagon of filuer, into a foule mustie bottell of ledder: or, to turne pure gold and filuer, into foule brasse and copper.

Soch kinde of Paraphrasis, in turning, chopping, and changing, the best to worfe, either in the mynte or scholes, (though M. Brokke and Quintilian both say the contrary) is moch misliked of the best and wisest men. I can better allow an other kinde of Paraphrasis, to turne rude and barbarus, into proper and eloquent: which neuerthelesse is an exercife, not fitte for a scholer, but for a perfite master, who in plentie hath good choife, in copie hath right iudgement, and grounded skill, as did appeare to be in Sebastian Castalio, in translating Kemppes booke de Imitando Christo.

But to folow Quintilianus aduise to Paraphrasis, were euen to take paine, to seeke the worfe and fowler way, whan the plaine and fairer is occupied before your eyes.

The olde and best authors that euer wrote, were content if occasion required to speake twife of one matter, not to change the wordes, but ῥητῶς, that is, worde for worde to expresse it againe. For they thought, that a matter, well expresseed with fitte wordes and apt composition, was not to be altered, but liking it well their selues, they thought it would also be well allowed of others.

A scholemaster (soch one as I require) knoweth that I fay trewe.

He readeth in Homer, almost in euerie Homerus. booke, and speciallie in Secundo et nono Iliados, not onelie som verses, but whole leaues, not to be altered with new, but to be vttered with [I]λ { ^{2.} _{9.} the old selfe same wordes.

He knoweth, that Xenophon, writing Xenophon. twife of Agésilauis, once in his life, againe in the historie of the Greekes, in one matter, kepeth alwayes the selfe same wordes. He doth the like, speaking of Socrates, both in the beginning of his Apologie and in the last ende of ἀπομνημονευμάτων.

Demosthenes. Demosthenes also in 4. Philippica, doth borow his owne wordes vttered before in his oration de Chersonefo. He doth the like, and that more at large, in his orations, against Andration and Timocrates.

Cicero. In latin also, Cicero in som places, and Virgilius. Virgil in mo, do repeate one matter, with the selfe same wordes. Thies excellent authors, did thus, not for lacke of wordes, but by iudgement and skill: whatfoeuer, other, more curious, and lesse skilfull, do thinke, write, and do.

Paraphrasis neuerthelesse hath good place in learning, but not, but myne opinion, for any scholer, but is onelie to be left to a perfite Master, eyther to expound openlie a good author withall, or to compare priuatelie, for his owne exercise, how some notable place of an excellent author, may be vttered with other fitte wordes: But if ye alter also, the composition, forme, and order than that is not Paraphrasis, but Imitatio, as I will fullie declare in fitter place.

The scholer shall winne nothing by Paraphrasis, but onelie, if we may beleue Tullie, to choose worse wordes, to place them out of order, to feare ouermoch the iudgement of the master, to mislike ouermoch the hardnes of learning, and by vse, to gather vp faultes, which hardlie will be left of againe.

The master in teaching it, shall rather encrease hys owne labo[u]r, than his scholers proffet: for when the scholer shall bring vnto his master a peece of Tullie or Cæsar turned into other latin, then must the master cum to Quintilians goodlie lesson de Emendatione, which, (as he faith) is the most profitable part of teaching, but not in myne opinion, and namelie for youthe in Grammer scholes. For the master nowe taketh double paynes: first, to marke what is amisse: againe, to inuent what may be sayd better. And here perchance, a verie good master may easelie both deceiue himselfe, and lead his schol[er] into error.

It requireth greater learning, and deeper iudgement, than is to be hoped for at any scholemasters hand: that is, to be able alwaies learnedlie and perfitelie.

- Mutare quod ineptum est:*
- Transmutare quod peruersum est:*
- Replere quod deest;*

- Expungere quod inane est.*

And that, which requireth more skill, and deaper consideracion.

- Premere tumentia:*
- Extollere humilia:*
- Astringere luxuriantia:*
- Componere dissoluta.*

The master may here onelie stumble, and perchance faull in teaching, to the marring and mayning of the Scholer in learning, whan it is a matter, of moch readyng, of great learning, and tried iudgement, to make trewe difference betwixt.

- Sublime, et Tumidum:*
- Grande, et immodicum:*
- Decorum, et ineptum:*
- Perfectum, et nimium.*

Some men of our time, counted perfite Maisters of eloquence, in their owne opinion the best, in other mens iudgements very good, as Omphalius euerie where, Sadoletus in many places, yea also my frende Oforius, namelie in his Epistle to the Queene and in his whole booke de Iusticia, haue so ouer reached them selues, in making trew difference in the poyntes afore rehearsed, as though they had bene brought vp in some schole in Asia, to learne to decline rather then in Athens with Plato, Aristotle, and Demosthenes, (from whence Tullie fetched his eloquence) to vnderstand, what in euerie matter, to be spoken or written on, is, in verie deede, Nimum, Satis, Parum, that is for to say, to all considerations, Decorum, which, as it is the hardest point, in all learning, so is it the fairest and onelie marke, that scholers, in all their studie, must alwayes shote at, if they purpose an other day to be, either founde in Religion, or wise and discrete in any vocation of the common wealth.

Agayne, in the lowest degree, it is no low point of learning and iudgement for a Scholemaster, to make trewe difference betwixt.

In these poyntes, some, louing Melancthon well, as he was well worthie, but yet not considering well nor wiselie, how he of nature, and all his life and studie by iudgement was wholly spent in genere Disciplinabili, that is, in teaching, reading, and expounding plainlie and aptlie schole matters, and therefore imployed thereunto a fitte, sensible, and caulme kinde of speaking and writing, some I say, with very well liuyng [likyng?], but not with verie well weying Melancthones doinges, do frame them selues a style, cold, leane, and weake, though the matter be neuer so warme and earnest, not moch vnlike vnto one, that had a pleasure, in a roughe, raynie, winter day, to clothe him selfe with nothing els, but a demie bukram cassok, plaine without pl[a]ites, and single without lyning: which will neither beare of winde nor wether, nor yet kepe out the sunne, in any hote day.

Some suppose, and that by good reason, that Melancthon him selfe came to this low kinde of writing, by vsing ouer moch Paraphrasis in reading: For studying therbie to make euerie thing streight and easie, in smothing and playning all things to much, neuer leaueth, whiles the sence it selfe be left, both lowse and lasie. And some of those Paraphrasis of Melancthon be set out in Printe, as, Pro Archia Poeta, et Marco Marcello: But a scholer, by myne opinion, is better occupied in playing or sleping, than in spendyng time, not onelie vainlie but also harmefullie, in soch a kinde of exercise.

If a Master woulde haue a perfite example to folow, how, in Genere sublimi, to auoide Nimum, or in Mediocri, to atteyne Satis, or in Humili, to exchew Parum, let him read diligently for the first, Secundam Cicero.

Philippicam, for the meane, De Natura Deorum, and for the lowest, Partitiones. Or, if in an other tong, ye looke for like example, in like perfection, for all those three degrees, read Pro Ctesiphonte, Ad Demosthenes, Leptinem, et Contra Olympiodorum, and, what witte, Arte, and diligence is hable to affourde, ye shall plainly see.

For our tyme, the odde man to performe all three perfittie, whatsoeuer he doth, and to know the way to do them skilfullie, whan so euer he list, is, in my poore opinion, Iohannes Sturmius.

Ioan. Stur.

He also councelleth all scholers to beware of Paraphrasis, except it be, from worse to better, from rude and barbarous, to proper and pure latin, and yet no man to exercise that neyther, except soch one, as is alreadie furnished with plentie of learning, and grounded with stedfast iudgement before.

All theis faultes, that thus manie wise men do finde with the exercise of Paraphrasis, in turning the best latin, into other, as good as they can, that is, ye may be sure, into a great deale worse, than it was, both in right choice for proprietie, and trewe placing, for good order is committed also commonlie in all common scholes, by the scholemasters, in tossing and trobling yong wittes (as I sayd in the beginning) with that boocherlie feare in making of Latins.

Therefore, in place of Latines for yong scholers, and Paraphrasis for the masters, I wold haue double translation specially vsed. For, in double translating a perfite peece of Tullie or Cæsar, neyther the scholer in learning, nor ye Master in teaching can erre. A true tochtstone, a sure metwand lieth before both their eyes. For, all right congruitie : proprietie of wordes : order in sentences : the right imitation, to inuent good matter, to dispose it in good order, to confirme it with good reason, to expresse any purpose fitlie and orderlie, is learned thus, both easelie and perfitlie: Yea, to misse somtyme in this kinde of translation, bringeth more proffet, than to hit right, either in Paraphrasi or making of Latins. For though ye say well, in a latin making, or in a Paraphrasis, yet you being but in do[u]bte, and vncertayne whether ye saie well or no, ye gather and lay vp in memorie, no fure frute of learning thereby: But if ye fault in translation, ye ar[e] easelie taught, how perfitlie to amende it, and so well warned, how after to exchew, all foch faultes againe.

Paraphrasis therefore, by myne opinion, is not meete for Grammer scholes: nor yet verie fitte for yong men in the vniuersitie, vntill studie and tyme, haue bred in them, perfite learning, and stedfast iudgement.

There is a kinde of Paraphrasis, which may be vsed, without all hurt, to moch proffet: but it serueth onely the Greke and not the latin, nor no other tong, as to alter linguam Ionicam aut Doricam into meram Atticam: A notable example there is left vnto vs by a notable learned man Diony: Halicarn: who, in his booke, περὶ συντάξεως, doth translate the goodlie storie of Candaulus and Gyges in 1 Herodoti, out of Ionica lingua, into Atticam. Read the place, and ye shall take, both pleasure and proffet, in conference of it. A man, that is exercised in reading, Thucydides, Xenophon, Plato, and Demosthenes, in vsing to turne, like places of Herodotus, after like forte, shold shortlie cum to such a knowledge, in vnderstanding, speaking, and writing the Greeke tong, as fewe or none hath yet atteyned in England. The like exercise out of Dorica lingua may be also vsed, if a man take that litle booke of Plato, Timæus Locrus, de Animo et natura, which is written Dorice, and turne it into foch Greeke, as Plato vseth in other workes. The booke, is but two leaues: and the labor wold be, but two weekes: but surelie the proffet, for easie vnderstanding, and trewe writing the Greeke tonge, wold conteruaile wyth the toile, that som men taketh, in otherwise coldliereading that tonge, two yeares.

And yet, for the latin tonge, and for the exercise of Paraphrasis, in those places of latin, that can not be bettered, if some yong man, excellent of witte, couragious in will, lustie of nature, and desirous to contend euen with the best latin, to better it, if he can, surelie I commend his forwardnesse, and for his better instruction therein, I will set before him, as notable an example of Paraphrasis, as is in Record of learning. Cicero himselfe, doth contend, in two sondrie places, to expresse one matter, with diuerse wordes: and that is Paraphrasis, saith Quintillian. The matter I suppose, is taken out of Panætius: and therefore being translated out of Greeke at diuers times, is vttered for his purpose, with diuers wordes and formes: which kind of exercife, for perfite learned men, is verie profitable.

2. De Finib.

a. Homo enim Rationem habet à natura menti datam quæ, et causas rerum et consecutiones videt, et similitudines, transfert, et disiuncta coniungit, et cum præsentibus futura copulat, omnemque complectitur vitæ consequentis statum.

b. Eademque ratio facit hominem hominum appetendum, cumque his, natura, et sermone in vsu congruentem: vt profectus à caritate domesticorum ac suorum, currat longius, et se implicet, primo Ciuium, deinde omnium mortalium societati: vtque non sibi soli se natum meminerit, sed patriæ, sed suis, vt exigua pars ipsi relinquatur. c. Et quoniam eadem natura cupiditatem ingenuit homini veri inueniendi, quod facillimè apparet, cum vacui curis, etiam quid in cælo fiat, scire auemus, etc.

1. Officiorum.

a. Homo autem, qui rationis est particeps, per quam consequentia cernit, et causas rerum videt, earumque progressus, et quasi antecessiones non ignorat, similitudines, comparat, rebusque præsentibus adiungit, atque annectit futuras, facile totius vitæ cursum videt, ad eamque degendam præparat res necessarias. b. Eademque natura vi rationis hominem conciliat homini, et ad Orationis et ad vitæ societatem: ingeneratque imprimis præcipuum quendam amorem in eos, qui procreati sunt, impellitque ut hominum cœtus et celebrari inter se, et sibi obediri [a se obiri] velit, ob easque causas studeat parere ea, quæ suppeditent ad cultum et ad victum, nec sibi soli, sed coniugi, liberis, cæterisque quos charos habeat, tuerique debeat. r. Quæ cura exfuscat etiam animos, et maiores ad rem gerendam facit: imprimisque hominis est propria veri inquisitio atque inuestigatio: ita cum fumus necessarijs negocijs curisque vacui, tum auemus aliquid videre, audire, addiscere, cognitionemque rerum mirabilium, etc.

The conference of these two places, conteinyng so excellent a peece of learning, as this is, expressed by so worthy a witte, as Tullies was, must needes bring great pleasure and proffit to him, that maketh trew counte, of learning and honestie. But if we had the Greke Author, the first Patterne of all, and therby to see, how Tullies witte did worke at diuerse tymes, how, out of one excellent Image, might be framed two other, one in face and fauor, but somwhat differing in forme, figure, and color, furelie, such a peece of workmanship compared with the Paterne it selfe, would better please the ease of honest, wise, and learned myndes, than two of the fairest Venusses, that euer Apelles made.

And thus moch, for all kinde of Paraphrasis, fitte or vnfit, for Scholers or other, as I am led to thinke, not onelie, by mine owne experience, but chiefly by the authoritie and iudgement of those, whom I my selfe would gladliest folow, and do counsell all myne to do the same: not contendyng with any other, that will otherwise either thinke or do.

Metaphrasis.

This kinde of exercise is all one with Paraphrasis, saue it is out of verse, either into prose, or into some other kinde of meter: or els, out of prose into verse, which was Socrates exercise and pastime (as Plato reporteth) when he was in prison,

Plato in

to translate Æsopes Fabules into verse. Quintilian doth greatlie praise also this exercise: but bicause Tullie doth disalow it in young men, by myne opinion, it were not well to vse it [in] Grammer Scholes, euen for the selfe same causes, that be recited against Paraphrasis. And therefore, for the vse or misuse of it, the same is to be thought, that is spoken of Paraphrasis before. This was Sulpitius exercise: and he gathering vp thereby, a Poeticall kinde of talke, is iustlie named of Cicero, grandis et Tragicus Orator: which I think is spoken, not for his praise, but for other mens warning, to exchew the like faulte. Yet neuertheles, if our Scholemaster for his owne instruction, is desirous, to see a perfite example hereof, I will recite one, which I thinke, no man is so bold, will say, that he can amend it: and that is Chryses the Priestes Oration to the Grekes, in the beginnyng of Homers Ilias, Hom. 1. 11. turned excellentlie into prose by Socrates Pla. 3. Rep. him selfe, and that aduisedlie and purposelie for other to folow: and therefore he calleth this exercise, in the same place, μίμησις, that is, Imitatio, which is most trew: but, in this booke, for teachyng sake, I will name it Metaphrasis, reteinyng the word, that all teachers, in this case, do vse.

To compare Homer and Plato together, two wonders of nature and arte for witte and eloquence, is most pleafant and profitable, for a man of ripe iudgement. Platos turning of Homer in this place, doth not ride a loft in Poeticall termes, but goeth low and foft on foote, as profe and Pedestris oratio should do. If Sulpitius had had Platos confideration, in right vsing this exercife, he had not deserued the name of Tragicus Orator, who should rather haue studied to expresse vim Demosthenes, than furorem Poetae, how good fo euer he was, whom he did follow.

And therefore would I haue our Scholemaster wey well together Homer and Plato, and marke diligentlie these foure pointes, what is kept; what is added; what is left out: what is changed, either, in choife of wordes, or forme of sentences; which foure pointes, be the right tooles, to handle like a workeman, this kinde of worke: as our Scholer shall better vnderstand, when he hath be[e]ne a good while in the Vniuerfitie: to which tyme and place, I chiefly remitte this kind of exercife.

And bicaufe I euer thought examples to be the best kinde of teaching, I will recite a golden sentence out of that Poete, which is next vnto Homer, not onelie in tyme, but also in worthines: which hath beene a paterne for many worthie wittes to follow, by this kind of Metaphrasis, but I will content my felfe, with foure workemen, two in Greke, and two in Latin, soch, as in both the tonges, wiser and worthier, can not be looked for. Surelie, no stone fet in gold by most cunning workemen, is in deed, if right counte be made, more worthie the looking on, than this golden sentence, diuerslie wrought upon, by soch foure excellent Masters.

Hesiodus. 2.

1. οὗτος μὲν πανάριστος, ὃς αὐτῷ τάντα νοήσῃ, φρασσάμενος τά κ' ἔπειτα καὶ ἐς τέλος ἦσιν ἀμείνω
2. ἐσθλὸς δ' αὖ κάκεινος, ὃς εὖ εἰπόντι πίθηται.
3. ὃς δέ κε μήτ' αὐτὸς νοέῃ, μήτ' ἄλλου ἀκούων
ἐν θυμῷ βάλλεται, ὃ δ' αὐτ' ἀχρήϊος ἀνὴρ.

¶ Thus rudelie turned into base English.

1. *That man in wisedome passeth all,
to know the best who hath a head:*
2. *And meetlie wise eeke counted shall,
who yeildes him selfe to wise mens read.*
3. Who hath no witte, nor none will heare, amongest all fooles the belles may beare.

Sophocles in Antigone.

1. Φήμ' ἔγωγε πρεσβεύειν πολὺ,
Φῦναι τὸν ἄνδρα πάντ' ἐπιστήμης πλέων :
2. Εἰ δ' οὖν (φιλεῖ γὰρ τοῦτο μὴ ταύτη ῥέπειν),
Καὶ τῶν λεγόντων εὖ καλὸν τὸ μανθάνειν.

Marke the wisedome of Sophocles, in leauyng out the last sentence, because it was not cumlie for the sonne to vse it to his father.

¶ D. Basileus in his Exhortation to youth.

Μέμνησθε τοῦ Ἡσιόδου, ὃς φησι, ἀριστον μὲν εἶναι τὸν παρ' ἑαυτοῦ τὰ δέοντα ξυνορῶντα. 2. Ἐσθλὸν δὲ κακεῖνον, τὸν τοῖς, παρ' ἐτέρων ὑποδειχθεῖσιν ἐπόμενον. 3. τὸν δὲ πρὸς οὐδέτερον ἐπιτήδειον ἀχρεῖον εἶναι πρὸς ἅπαντα.

¶ M. Cic. Pro. A. Cluentio.

1. Sapientissimum esse dicunt eum, cui, quod opus sit, ipsi veniat in mentem: 2. Proxime accedere illum, qui alterius bene inuentis obtemperet. 3. In stulticia contra est: minus enim stultus est is, cui nihil in mentem venit, quam ille, qui, quod stultè alteri venit in mentem comprobatur.

Cicero doth not plainlie expresse the last sentence, but doth inuent it fitlie for his purpose, to taunt the folie and simplicitie in his aduersarie Aetius, not weying ing wiselie, the subtile doynge of Chryfogonus and Stalenus.

1. Sæpe ego audiui milites; eum primum esse virum, qui ipse consulat, quid in rem sit: 2. Secundum eum, qui bene monenti obediat: 3. Qui, nec ipse consulere, nec alieri parere sci[a]t, eum extremi esse ingenij.

Now, which of all these foure, Sophocles, S. Basil, Cicero, or Liuius, hath expressed Hesiodus best, the iudgement is as hard, as the workmanship of euerie one is most excellent in deede. An other example out of the Latin tong also I will recite, for the worthines of the workeman therof, and that is Horace, who hath so turned the begynning of Terence Eunuchus, as doth worke in me, a pleasant admiration, as oft so euer, as I compare those two places together. And though euerie Master, and euerie good Scholer to, do know the places, both in Terence and Horace, yet I will set them heare, in one place together, that with more pleasure, they may be compared together.

This exercise may bring moch profite to ripe heads, and stayd iudgementes: bicause in traueling in it, the mynde must nedes be verie attentiuē, and busilie occupied, in turning and tossing it selfe many wayes: and conferryng with great pleasure, the varietie of worthie wittes and iudgementes together: But this harme may sone cum therby, and namelie to yong Scholers, lesse, in seeking other wordes, and new forme of sentences, they chance vpon the worfe: for the which onelie cause, Cicero thinketh this exercife not to be fit for yong men.

Epitome.

This is a way of studie, belonging, rather to matter, than to wordes: to memorie, than to vtterance: to those that be learned already, and hath small place at all amonges yong scholers in Grammer scholes. It may proffet priuately some learned men, but it hath hurt generallie learning it selfe, very moch. For by it haue we lost whole Trogus, the best part of T. Liuius, the goodlie Dictionarie of Pompeius festus, a great deale of the Ciuill lawe, and other many notable bookes, for the which cause, I do the more mislike this exercife, both in old and yong.

Epitome, is good priuatelie for himselfe that doth worke it, but ill commonlie for all other that vse other mens labor therein: a filie poore kinde of studie, not vnlike to the doing of those poore folke, which neyther till, nor sowe, nor reape themselues, but gleane by stelh, vpon other mens growndes. Soch haue emptie barnes, for deare yeares.

Grammar scholes haue fewe Epitomes to hurt them, except Epitheta Textoris, and such beggarlie gatheringes, as Horman, Whittington, and other like vulgares for making of latines: yea I do wishe, that all rules for yong scholers, were shorter than they be. For without doute, Grammatica it selfe, is sooner and surer learned by examples of good authors, than by the naked rewles of Grammarians. Epitome hurteth more, in the vniuersities and studie of Philosophie: but most of all, in diuinitie it selfe.

In deede bookes of common places be verie necessarie, to induce a man, into an orderlie generall knowledge, how to referre orderlie all that he readeth, ad certa rerum Capita, and not wander in studie. And to that end did P. Lombardus the master of sentences and Ph. Melancthon in our daies, write two notable bookes of common places.

But to dwell in Epitomes and bookes of common places, and not to binde himselfe dailie by orderlie studie, to reade with all diligence, principallie the holyest scripture and withall, the best Doctors, and so to learne to make trewe difference betwixt, the authoritie of the one, and the Counsell of the other, maketh so many seeming, and sonburnt ministers as we haue, whose learning is gotten in a fommer heat, and washed away, with a Christmas snow againe: who neuertheless, are lesse to be blamed, than those blind buffardes, who in late yeares, of wilfull malicioufnes, would neyther learne themselues, nor could teach others, any thing at all.

Paraphrasis hath done lesse hurt to learning, than Epitome: for no Paraphrasis, though there be many, shall neuer take away Dauids Psalter. Erasmus Paraphrasis being neuer so good, shall neuer banishe the New Testament. And in an other schole, the Paraphrasis of Brocardus, or Sambucus, shal neuer take Aristotles Rhetoricke, nor Horace de Arte Poetica, out of learned mens handes.

But, as concerning a schole Epitome, he that wo[u]ld haue an example of it, let him read Lucian περὶ κάλλους which is the verie Epitome of Isocrates oration de laudibus Helenæ, whereby he may learne, at the least, this wise lesson, that a man ought to beware, to be ouer bold, in altering an excellent mans worke.

Neuertheles, some kinde of Epitome may be vsed, by men of skilful iudgement, to the great proffet also of others. As if a wise man would take Halles C[h]ronicle, where moch good matter is quite marde with Indenture Englishe, and first change, strange and inkhorne tearmes into proper, and commonlie vsed wordes: next, specially to wede out that, that is superfluous and idle, not onelie where wordes be vainlie heaped one vpon an other, but also where many sentences, of one meaning, be so clowted vp together as though M. Hall had bene, not writing the storie of England, but varying a sentence in Hitching schole: furelie a wise learned man, by this way of Epitome, in cutting away wordes and sentences, and diminishing nothing at all of the matter, shold leaue to mens vse, a storie, halfe as moch as it was in quantitie, but twise as good as it was, both for pleasure and also commoditie.

An other kinde of Epitome may be vsed likewise very well, to moch proffet. Som man either by lustines of nature, or brought by ill teaching, to a wrong iudgement, is ouer full of words, [and] sentences, and matter, and yet all his words be proper, apt and well chofen: all his sentences be rownd and trimlie framed: his whole matter grownded vpon good reason, and stuffed with full arguments, for this intent and purpose. Yet when his talke shalbe heard, or his writing be re[a]d, of soch one, as is, either of my two dearest friendes, M. Haddon at home, or John Sturmius in Germanie, that Nimum in him, which fooles and vnlearned will most commend, shall eyther of thies two, bite his lippe, or shake his heade at it.

This fulnes as it is not to be misliked in a yong man, so in farder aige, in greater skill, and weightier affaires, it is to be temperated, or else discretion and iudgement shall seeme to be wanting in him. But if his stile be still ouer rancke and lustie, as some men being neuer so old and spent by yeares, will still be full of youthfull conditions as was Syr F. Bryan, and euermore wold haue bene, soch a rancke and full writer, must vse, if he will do wiselie the exercise of a verie good kinde of Epitome, and do, as certaine wise men do, that be ouer fat and fleshie: who leauing their owne full and plentiful table, go to soierne abrode from home for a while, at the temperate diet of some sober man, and so by litle and litle, cut away the grofneffe that is in them. As for an example: If Oforius would leaue of his luftines in ftriuing againft S. Auften, and his ouer rancke rayling againft poore Luther, and the troth of Gods doctrine, and giue his whole studie, not to write any thing of his owne for a while, but to translate Demofthenes, with fo ftraite, faft, and temperate a ftyle in latine, as he is in Greeke, he would become fo perfit and pure a writer, I beleue, as hath be[e]ne fewe or none fince Ciceroes dayes: And fo, by doing himfelf and all learned moch good, do others leffe harme, and Chriftes doctrine leffe iniury, than he doth: and with all, wyn vnto himfelfe many worthy friends, who agreing with him gladly, in ye loue and liking of excellent learning, are forie to fee fo worthie a witte, fo rare eloquence, wholie fpent and confumed, in ftriuing with God and good men.

Emonges the reft, no man doth lament him more than I, not onelie for the excellent learning that I fee in him, but alfo bicaufe there hath passed priuatelie betwixt him and me, fure tokens of moch good will, and frendlie opinion, the one toward the other. And furelie the diftance betwixt London and Lyfbon, fhould not ftoppe, any kinde of frendlie dewtie, that I could, eyther fhew to him, or do to his, if the greateft matter of all did not in certeyne pointes, separate our myndes.

And yet for my parte, both toward him, and diuerfe others here at home, for like caufe of excellent learning, great wifdome, and gentle humanitie, which I haue feene in them, and felt at their handes my felfe, where the matter of difference is mere confcience in a quiet minde inwardlie, and not contentious malice with fpitefull rayling openlie, I can be content to followe this rewle, in miliking fome one thing, not to hate for anie thing els.

But as for all the bloodie beaftes, as that Pfal. 80. fat Boore of the wood: or thofe brauling Bulles of Bafan: or any lurking Dorm[us], blinde, not by nature, but by malice, and as may be gathered of their owne testimonie, giuen ouer to blindnes, for giuing ouer God and his word; or soch as be so lustie runnegates, as first, runne from God and his trew doctrine, than, from their Lordes, Masters, and all dewtie, next, from them felues and out of their wittes, lastly from their Prince, contrey, and all dew allegeance, whether they ought rather to be pitied of good men, for their miserie, or contemned of wise men, for their malicious folie, let good and wise men determine.

And to returne to Epitome agayne, some will iudge moch boldnes in me, thus to iudge of Oforius style: but wise men do know, that meane lookers on, may trowelie say, for a well made Picture: This face had bene more cumlie, if that hie redde in the cheeke, were fomwhat more pure sanguin than it is: and yet the stander by, can not amend it himselfe by any way.

And this is not written to the dispraise but to the great commendation of Oforius, because Tullie himselfe had the same fulnes in him: and therefore went to Rodes to cut it away: and saith himselfe, recepti me domum prope mutatus, nam quasi referuerat iam oratio. Which was brought to passe I beleue, not onelie by the teaching of Molo Appollomius but also by a good way of Epitome, in binding him selfe to translate meros Atticos Oratores, and so to bring his style, from all lowse grosnesse, to soch firme fastnes in latin, as is in Demosthenes in Greeke. And this to be most trew, may easelie be gathered, not onelie of L. Craffus talke in 1. de Or. but speciallie of Ciceroes owne deede in translating Demosthenes and Æschines orations περί στεφ. to that verie ende and purpose.

And although a man growndlie learned all readie, may take moch proffet him selfe in vsing, by Epitome, to draw other mens workes for his owne memorie sake, into shorter rowme, as Conterus hath done verie well the whole Metamorphosis of Ouid, and Dauid Cythraeus a great deale better, the. ix. Muses of Herodotus, and Melancthon in myne opinion, far best of all, the whole storie of Time, not onelie to his own vse, but to other mens proffet and hys great prayse, yet, Epitome is most necessarie of all in a mans owne writing, as we learne of that noble Poet Virgill, who, if Donatus say trewe, in writing that perfitte worke of the Georgickes, vsed dailie, when he had written 40. or 50. verses, not to cease cutting, paring, and pollishing of them, till he had brought them to the number of x. or xij.

And this exercise, is not more nedefullie done in a great worke, than wiselie done, in your common dailie writing, either of letter, or other thing else, that is to say, to peruse diligentlie, and see and spie wiselie, what is alwaies more then nedeth: For, twenty to one, offend more, in writing to moch, than to litle: euen as twentie to one, fall into sicknesse, rather by ouer mochfulnes, than by anie lacke or emptinesse. And therefore is he alwaies the best English Physition, that best can geue a purgation, that is, by way of Epitome, to cut all ouer much away. And surelie mens bodies, be not more full of ill humors, than commonlie mens myndes (if they be yong, lustie, proude, like and loue them selues well, as most men do) be full of fan[tas]ies, opinions, errors, and faultes, not onelie in inward inuention, but also in all their vtterance, either by pen or taulke.

And of all other men, euen those that haue ye inuentiuest heades, for all purposes, and roundest tonges in all matters and places (except they learne and vse this good lesson of Epitome) commit commonlie greater faultes, than dull, staying silent men do. For, quicke inuentors, and faire readie speakers, being boldned with their present habilitie to say more, and perchance better to, at the foden for that present, than any other can do, vse lesse helpe of diligence and studie than they ought to do: and so haue in them commonlie, lesse learning, and weaker iudgement, for all deepe considerations, than some duller heades, and slower tonges haue.

And therefore, readie speakers, generallie be not the best, playnest, and wisest writers, nor yet the deepest iudgers in weightie affaires, bicause they do not tarry to weye and iudge all thinges, as they should: but hauing their heades ouer full of matter, be like pennes ouer full of incke, which will foner blotte, than make any faire letter at all. Tyme was, whan I had experience of two Ambaffadors in one place, the one of a hote head to inuent, and of a hastie hand to write, the other, colde and stayd in both: but what difference of their doinges was made by wise men, is not vnknowne to some persons. The Bishop of Winchester Steph. Gardiner had a quicke head, and a readie tong, and yet was not the best writer in England. Cicero in Brutus doth wiselie note the same in Serg: Galbo, and Q. Hortentius, who were both, hote, lustie, and plaine speakers, but colde, lowfe, and rough writers: And Tullie telleth the cause why, sayng, whan they spake, their tong was naturally caried with full tyde and wynde of their witte: whan they wrote their head was solitarie, dull, and caulme, and so their style was blonte, and their writing colde: Quod vitium, sayth Cicero, peringeniosis hominibus neque fatis doctis plerumque accidit.

And therefore all quick inuentors, and readie faire speakers, must be carefull, that, to their goodnes of nature, they adde also in any wise, studie, labor, leasure, learning, and iudgement, and than they shall in deede, passe all other, as I know some do, in whome all those qualities are fullie planted, or else if they giue ouer moch to their witte, and ouer litle to their labor and learning, they will fonest ouer reach in taulke, and fardest cum behinde in writing whatfoeuer they take in hand. The methode of Epitome is most necessarrie for soch kinde of men. And thus much concerning the vse or misfufe of all kinde of Epitome in matters of learning.

Imitation, is a facultie to expresse liuelie and perfitelie that example: which ye go about to fol[l]ow. And of it selfe, it is large and wide: for all the workes of nature, in a maner be examples for arte to folow.

But to our purpose, all languages, both learned and mother tonges, be gotten, and gotten onelie by Imitation. For as ye vse to heare, so ye learne to speake: if ye heare no other, ye speake not your selfe: and whome ye onelie heare, of them ye onelie learne.

And therefore, if ye would speake as the best and wisest do, ye must be conuersant, where the best and wisest are: but if yow be borne or brought vp in a rude co[u]ntrie, ye shall not chose but speake rudelie: the rudest man of all knoweth this to be trewe.

Yet neuerthelesse, the rudenes of common and mother tonges, is no bar for wise speaking. For in the rudest contrie, and most barbarous mother language, many be found [yat] can speake verie wiselie: but in the Greeke and latin tong, the two onelie learned tonges, which be kept, not in common taulke, but in priuate bookes, we finde alwayes, wisdomè and eloquence, good matter and good vtterance, neuer or seldom a fonder. For all soch Authors, as be fullest of good matter and right iudgement in doctrine, be likewise alwayes, most proper in wordes, most apte in sentence, most plaine and pure in vttering the same.

And contrariwise, in those two tonges, all writers, either in Religion, or any sect of Philosophie, who so euer be founde fonde in iudgement of matter, be commonlie found as rude in vttering their mynde. For Stoickes, Anabaptistes, and Friers: with Epicures, Libertines and Monkes, being most like in learning and life, are no fonder and pernicious in their opinions, than they be rude and barbarous in their writings. They be not wise, therefore that say, what care I for a mans wordes and vtterance, if his matter and reasons be good. Soch men, say so, not so moch of ignorance, as eyther of some singular pride in themselues, or some speciall malice or other, or for some priuate and parciall matter, either in Religion or other kinde of learning. For good and choicè meates, be no more requisite for helthie bodies, than proper and apte wordes be for good matters, and also plaine and sensible vtterance for the best and de[e]peft reasons: in which two pointes standeth perfite eloquence, one of the fairest and rarest giftes that God doth geue to man.

Ye know not, what hurt ye do to learning, that care not for wordes, but for matter, and so make a deuorse betwixt the tong and the hart. For marke all aiges: looke vpon the whole course of both the Greeke and Latin tonge, and ye shall surelie finde, that, whan apte and good wordes began to be neglected, and properties of those two tonges to be confounded, than also began, ill deedes to spring: strange maners to oppresse good orders, newe and fond opinions to striue with olde and trewe doctrine, first in Philosophie: and after in Religion: right iudgement of all things to be peruerted, and so vertue with learning is contemned, and studie left of: of ill thoughtes cummeth peruerse iudgement: of ill deedes springeth lewde taulke. Which fower misorders, as they mar mans life, so destroy they good learning withall.

But behold the goodnesse of Gods prouidence for learning: all olde authors and sectes of Philosophy, which were fondest in opinion, and rudest in vtterance, as Stoickes and Epicures, first contemned of wise men, and after forgotten of all men, be so consumed by tymes, as they be now, not onelie out of vse, but also out of memorie of man: which thing, I surelie thinke, will shortlie chance, to the whole doctrine and all the bookes of phantasticall Anabaptistes and Friers, and of the beastlie Libertines and Monkes.

Againe behold on the other side, how Gods wisdome hath wrought, that of Academici and Peripatetici, those that were wisest in iudgement of matters, and purest in vttering their myndes, the first and chieft, that wrote most and best, in either tong, as Plato and Aristotle in Greeke, Tullie in Latin, be so either wholie, or sufficiently left vnto vs, as I neuer knew yet scholer, that gaue himselfe to like, and loue, and folowe chieflie those three Authors but he proued, both learned, wise, and also an honest man, if he ioyned with all the trewe doctrine of Gods holie Bible, without the which, the other three, be but fine edge tooles in a sole or mad mans hand.

But to returne to Imitation agayne: There be three kindes of it in matters of learning.

The whole doctrine of Comedies and Tragedies, is a perfite imitation, or faire liuelie painted picture of the life of euerie degree of man. Of this Imitation writeth Plato at large in 3. de Rep. but it doth not moch belong at this time to our purpose.

The second kind of Imitation, is to folow for learning of tonges and sciences, the best authors. Here riseth, emonges proude and enuious wittes, a great controuersie, whether, one or many are to be folowed: and if one, who is that one: Seneca, or Cicero: Salust or Cæsar, and so forth in Greeke and Latin.

The third kinde of Imitation, belongeth to the second: as when you be determined, whether ye will folow one or mo, to know perfitlie, and which way to folow that one: in what place: by what meane and order: by what tooles and instrumentes ye shall do it, by what skill and iudgement, ye shall trowelie discern, whether ye folow rightlie or no.

This Imitatio, is dissimilis materiei similis tractatio: and also, similis materiei dissimilis tractatio, as Virgill folowed Homer: but the Argument to the one was Vlysses, to the other Æneas. Tullie persecuted Antonie with the same wepons of eloquence, that Demosthenes vsed before against Philippe.

Horace foloweth Pindar, but either of them his owne Argument and Person: as the one, Hiero king of Sicilie, the other Augustus the Emperour: and yet both for like respectes, that is, for their coragious stoutnes in warre, and iust gouernment in peace.

One of the best examples, for right Imitation we lacke, and that is Menander, whom our Terence, (as the matter required) in like argument, in the same Persons, with equall eloquence, foote by foote did folow.

Som peeces remaine, like broken Iewelless, whereby men may rightlie esteeme, and iustlie lament, the losse of the whole.

Erasmus, the ornament of learning, in our tyme, doth wish that som man of learning and diligence, would take the like paines in Demosthenes and Tullie, that Macrobius hath done in Homer and Virgill, that is, to write out and ioyn together, where the one doth imitate the other. Erasmus wishe is good, but furelie, it is not good enough: for Macrobius gatherings for the Aeneidos out of Homer, and Eobanus Hessus more diligent gatherings for the Bucolikes out of Theocritus, as they be not fullie taken out of the whole heape, as they should be, but euen as though they had not sought for them of purpose, but fownd them scatered here and there by chance in their way, euen so, onelie to point out, and nakedlie to ioyn together their sentences, with no farder declaring the maner and way, how the one doth folow the other, were but a colde helpe, to the encrease of learning.

But if a man would take his paine also, whan he hath layd two places, of Homer and Virgill, or of Demosthenes and Tullie together, to teach plainlie withall, after this fort.

1. Tullie reteyneth thus moch of the matter, thies sentences, thies wordes :

2. This and that he leaueth out, which he doth wittellie to this end and purpose.

3. This he addeth here.

4. This he diminisheth there.

5. This he ordereth thus, with placing that here, not there.

6. This he altereth, and changeth, either, in proper tie of wordes, in forme of sentence, in substance of the matter, or in one, or other conuenient circumstance of the authors present purpose. In thies fewe rude English wordes, are wrapt vp all the necessarrie tooles and instrumentes, where with trewe Imitation is rightlie wrought withall in any tonge. Which tooles, I openlie confesse, be not of myne owne forging, but partlie left vnto me by the cunni[n]gest Master, and one of the worthiest Ientlemen that euer England bred, Syr John Cheke: partelie borrowed by me out of the shoppe of the dearest frende I haue out of England, Io. St. And therefore I am the bolder to borow of him, and here to leaue them to other, and namelie to my Children: which tooles, if it please God, that an other day, they may be able to vse rightlie, as I do wish and daylie pray, they may do, I shal be more glad, than if I were able to leaue them a great quantitie of land.

This foresaide order and doctrine of Imitation, would bring forth more learning, and breed vp trewer iudgement, than any other exercise that can be vsed, but not for yong beginners, bicause they shall not be able to consider dylie therof. And trowelie, it may be a shame to good studentes who hauing so faire examples to follow, as Plato and Tullie, do not vse so wise wayes in folowing them for the obteyning of wisdome and learning, as rude ignorant Artificers do, for gayning a small commoditie. For surelie the meanest painter vseth more witte, better arte, greater diligence, in hys shoppe, in folowing the Picture of any meane mans face, than commonlie the best studentes do, euen in the vniuersitie, for the attaining of learning it selfe.

Some ignorant, vnlearned, and idle student: or some busie looker vpon this litle poore booke, that hath neither will to do good him selfe, nor skill to iudge right of others, but can lustelie contemne, by pride and ignorance, all painfull diligence and right order in study, will perchance say, that I am to precise, to curious, in marking and piteling [pidling] thus about the imitation of others: and that the olde worthie Authors did neuer busie their heades and wittes, in folowyng so preciselie, either the matter what other men wrote, or els the maner how other men wrote. They will say, it were a plaine flauerie, and iniurie to, to shackle and tye a good witte, and hinder the course of a mans good nature with such bondes of seruitude, in folowyng other.

Except soch men thinke them selues wiser then

Cicero for teaching of eloquence, they must be content to turne a new leafe.

The best booke that euer Tullie wrote, by all mens iudgement, and by his owne testimonie to, in wrytyng wherof, he employed most care, studie, learnyng and iudgement, is his booke de Orat. ad Q. F. Now let vs see, what he did for the matter, and also for the maner of writing therof. For the whole booke consisteth in these two pointes onelie: In good matter, and good handling of the matter. And first, for the matter, it is whole Aristotles, what so euer Antonie in the second, and Crassus in the third doth teach. Trust not me, but beleue Tullie him selfe, who writeth so, first, in that goodlie long Epistle ad P. Lentulum, and after in diuerse places ad Atticum. And in the verie booke it selfe, Tullie will not haue it hidden, but both Catulus and Crassus do oft and pleasantly lay that stelth to Antonius charge. Now, for the handling of the matter, was Tullie so precise and curious rather to follow an other mans Paterne, than to inuent some newe shape him selfe, namelie in that booke, wherein he purposed, to leaue to posteritie, the glorie of his witte? yea forsooth, that he did. And this is not my geffing and gathering, nor onelie performed by Tullie in verie deed, but vttered also by Tullie in plaine wordes: to teach other men thereby, what they should do, in taking like matter in hand.

And that which is especially to be marked, Tullie doth vtter plainlie his conceit and purpose therein, by the mouth of the wisest man in all that companie: for fayth Scæuola him selfe, Cur non imitamur, Crasse, Socratem illum, qui est in Phædro Platonis etc.

And furder to vnderstand, that Tullie did not obiter and bichance, but purposelie and mindfullie bend him selfe to a precise and curious Imitation of Plato, concerning the shape and forme of those bookes, marke I pray you, how curious Tullie is to vtter his purpose and doying therein, writing thus to Atticus.

Quod in his Oratorijs libris, quos tantopere laudas, personam desideras Scæuolæ, non eam temerè dimoui: Sed feci idem, quod in πολυτεία Deus ille noster Plato, cum in Piræum Socrates uenisset ad Cephalum locupletem et festiuum Senem, quoad primus ille sermo haberetur, adest in disputando senex: Deinde, cum ipse quoque commodissimè locutus esset, ad rem diuinam dicit se uelle discedere, neque postea reuertitur. Credo Platonem uix putasse satis consonum fore, si hominem id ætatis in tam longo sermone diutius retinuisset: Multo ego satius hoc mihi cauendum putauit in Scæuola, qui et ætate et ualitudine erat ea qua meministi, et his honoribus, ut uix satis decorum uideretur eum plures dies esse in Crassi Tusculano. Et erat primi libri sermo non alienus à Scæuolæ studijs: reliqui libri τεχνολοσίαν habent, ut scis. Huic ioculatoriæ disputationi senem illum ut noras, interesse sanè nolui.

If Cicero had not opened him selfe, and declared hys owne thought and doynge herein, men that be idle, and ignorant, and enuious of other mens diligence and well doinges, would haue sworne that Tullie had neuer mynded any souch thing, but that of a precise curiositie, we fayne and forge and father souch thinges of Tullie, as he neuer ment in deed. I write this, not for nought: for I haue heard some both well learned, and otherwayes verie wise, that by their lustie misliking of souch diligence, haue drawen back the forwardnes of verie good wittes. But euen as such men them selues, do sometymes stumble vpon doynge well by chance and benefite of good witte, so would I haue our scholer alwayes able to do well by order of learnyng and right skill of iudgement.

Concernyng Imitation, many learned men haue written, with moch diuersitie for the matter, and therefore with great contrarietie and some stomacke amongst them selues. I haue read as many as I could get diligentlie, and what I thinke of euerie one of them, I will freelie say my mynde. With which freedome I trust good men will beare, bicause it shall tend to neither spitefull nor harmefull controuersie.

Cicero. In Tullie, it is well touched, shortly taught, not fullie declared by Ant. in 2. de Orat: and afterward in Orat. ad Brutum, for the liking and misliking of Ifocrates: and the contrarie iudgement of Tullie agaynst Caluus, Brutus, and Calidius, de genere dicendi Attico et Asiatico.

Dio Halicar. Dionis. Halic. περὶ μνησσεως. I feare is lost: which Author next Aristotle, Plato, and Tullie, of all other, that write of eloquence, by the iudgement of them that be best learned, deserueth the next prayse and place.

Quintil. Quintilian writeth of it, shortly and coldlie for the matter, yet hotelie and spitefullie enough, agaynst the Imitation of Tullie.

Erasmus. Erasmus, beyng more occupied in spyng other mens faultes, than declaryng his owne aduise, is mistaken of many, to the great hurt of studie, for his authoritie sake. For he writeth rightlie, rightlie vnderstanded: he and Longolius onelie differing in this, that the one seemeth to giue ouermoch, the other ouer litle, to him, whom they both, best loued, and chiefly allowed of all other.

Budæus. Budæus in his Commentaries roughlie and obscurelie, after his kinde of wrytyng: and for the matter, caryed somewhat out of the way in ouermuch misliking the Imitation of Tullie.

Ph. Melanch. Phil. Melancthon, learnedlie and trewlie.

Ioa. Camer. Camerarius largely with a learned iudgement, but sumewhat confusedly, and with ouer rough a stile.

Sambucus. Sambucus, largely, with a right iudgement but somewhat a crooked stile.

Cortesi. Other haue written also, as Cortesi to P. Bemus. Politian, and that verie well: Bemus ad Ioan. Sturmius. Picum a great deale better, but Ioan. Sturmius de Nobilitate literata, et de Amiffa dicendi ratione, farre best of all, in myne opinion, that euer tooke this matter in hand. For all the rest, declare chiefly this point, whether one, or many, or all, are to be followed: but Sturmius onelie hath most learnedlie declared, who is to be followed, what is to be followed, and the best point of all, by what way and order, trew Imitation is rightlie to be exercised. And although Sturmius herein doth farre passe all other, yet hath he not so fullie and perfitelie done it, as I do wⁱthe he had, and as I know he could. For though he hath done it perfitelie for precept, yet hath he not done it perfitelie enough for example: which he did, neither for lacke of skill, nor by negligence, but of purpose, contented with one or two examples, bicause he was mynded in those two bookes, to write of it both shortlie, and also had to touch other matters.

Barthol. Riccius Ferrariensis also hath written learnedlie, diligentlie and verie largelie of this matter euen as hee did before verie well de Apparatu linguæ Lat. He writeth the better in myne opinion, bicause his whole doctrine, iudgement, and order, semeth to be borrowed out of Io. Stur. bookes. He addeth also examples, the best kinde of teaching: wherein he doth well, but not well enough: in deede, he committeth no faulte, but yet, deserueth small praise. He is content with the meane, and followeth not the best: as a man, that would feede vpon Acornes, whan he may eate, as good cheape, the finest wheat bread. He teacheth for example, where and how, two or three late Italian Poetes do follow Virgil: and how Virgil him selfe in the storie of Dido, doth wholie Imitate Catullus in the like matter of Ariadna: Wherein I like better his diligence and order of teaching, than his iudgement in choice of examples for Imitation. But, if he had done thus: if he had declared where and how, how oft and how many wayes Virgil doth folow Homer, as for example the comming of Vlysses to Alcynous and Calypso, with the comming of Æneas to Cart[h]age and Dido: Likewise the games running, wrestling, and shoting, that Achilles maketh in Homer, with the selfe same games, that Æneas maketh in Virgil: The harnesse of Achilles, with the harnesse of Aeneas, and the maner of making of them both by Vulcane: The notable combate betwixt Achilles and Hector, with as notable a combate betwixt Aeneas and Turmis. The going downe to hell of Vlyffes in Homer, with the going downe to hell of Aeneas in Virgil: and other places infinite mo, as similitudes, narrations, messages, discriptions of persons, places, battels, tempestes, shipwrackes, and common places for diuerse purposes, which be as precisly taken out of Homer, as euer did Painter in London follow the picture of any faire personage. And when thies places had bene gathered together by this way of diligence than to haue conferred them together by this order of teaching, as, diligently to marke what is kept and vsed in either author, in wordes, in sentences, in matter: what is added: what is left out: what ordered otherwise, either praeponendo, interponendo, or postponendo: And what is altered for any respect, in word, phrase, sentence, figure, reason, argument, or by any way of circumstance: If Riccus had done this, he had not onely bene well liked, for his diligence in teaching, but also iustlie commended for his right iudgement in right choice of examples for the best Imitation.

Riccus also for Imitation of prose declareth where and how Longolius doth folow Tullie, but as for Longolius, I would not haue him the patern of our Imitation. In deede: in Longolius shoppe, be proper and faire shewing colers, but as for shape, figure, and naturall cumlines, by the iudgement of best iudging artificers, he is rather allowed as one to be borne withall, than especially commended, as one chieffie to be folowed.

If Riccus had taken for his examples, where Tullie him selfe foloweth either Plato or Demosthenes, he had shot than at the right marke. But to excuse Riccus, fomwhat, though I can not fullie defend him, it may be sayd, his purpose was, to teach onelie the Latin tong, when thys way that I do wish, to ioyn Virgii with Homer, to read Tullie with Demosthenes and Plato, requireth a cunning and perfite Master in both the tonges. It is my wish in deede, and that by good reason: For who so euer will write well of any matter, must labor to expresse that, that is perfite, and not to stay and content himselfe with the meane: yea, I say farder, though it not be vnpossible, yet it is verie rare, and maruelous hard, to proue excellent in the Latin tong, for him that is not also well seene in the Greeke tong. Tullie him selfe, most excellent of nature, most diligent in labor, brought vp from his cradle, in that place, and in that tyme, where and whan the Latin tong most florished naturallie in euery mans mouth, yet was not his owne tong able it selfe to make him so cunning in his owne tong, as he was in deede: but the knowledge and Imitation of the Greeke tong withall.

This he confesseth himselfe: this he vttereth in many places, as those can tell best, that vse to read him most.

Therefore thou, that shotest at perfection in the Latin tong, think not thy selfe wiser than Tullie was, in choice of the way, that leadeth rightlie to the fame: thinke not thy witte better than Tullies was, as though that may serue thee that was not sufficient for him. For euen as a hauke flieth not hie with one wing: euen so a man reacheth not to excellency with one tong.

I haue bene a looker on in the Cockpit of learning thies many yeares: And one Cock onelie haue I knowne, which with one wing, euen at this day, doth passe all other, in myne opinion, that euer I saw in any pitte in England, though they had two winges. Yet neuerthelesse, to flie well with one wing, to runne fast with one leg, be rather, rare Maistreis moch to be merueled at, than sure examples safelie to be folowed. A Bushop that now liueth, a good man, whose iudgement in Religion I better like, than his opinion in perfities in other learning, said once vnto me: we haue no nede now of the Greeke tong, when all thinges be translated into Latin. But the good man vnderstood not, that euen the best translation, is, for mere necessitie, but an euill impeded wing to flie withall, or a heuie stompe leg of wood to go withall: foch, the hier they flie, the sooner they falter and fail: the faster they runne, the ofter they stumble, and forer they fall. Soch as will nedes so flie, may flie at a Pye, and catch a Dawe: And soch runners, as commonlie, they shoue and sholder to stand formost, yet in the end they cum behind others and deserue but the hopshakles, if the Masters of the game be right iudgers.

Therefore in perusing thus, so many diuerse bookes
 Optima ratio for Imitation, it came into my head that a Imitationis. verie profitable booke might be made de Imitatione, after an other sort, than euer yet was attempted of that matter, conteyning a certaine fewe fitte preceptes, vnto the which shoulde be gathered and applied plentie of examples, out of the choifest authors of both the tonges. This worke would stand rather in good diligence, for the gathering, and right iudgement for the apte applying of those examples: than any great learning or vtterance at all.

The doing thereof, would be more pleasant, than painfull, and would bring also moch proffet to all that should read it, and great praise to him would take it in hand, with iust desert of thankes.

Erasmus order Erasmus, giuyng him selfe to read ouer in his studie. all Authors Greke and Latin, seemeth to haue prescribed to him selfe this order of readyng: that is, to note out by the way, three speciall pointes: All Adagies, all similitudes, and all wittie sayinges of most notable personages: And so, by one labour, he left to posteritie, three notable bookes, and namelie two his Chiliades, Apophthegmata, and Similia. Likewise, if a good student would bend him selfe to read diligently ouer Tullie, and with him also at the same tyme, Cicero { Plato. as diligently Plato, and Xenophon, with Xenophon. his bookes of Philosophie, Ifocrates, Isocrates. and Demosthenes with his orations, and Demosth.
 Aristotles. Aristotle with his Rhetorickes: which sūe of all other, be those, whom Tullie best loued, and specially followed: and would marke diligently in Tullie, where he doth exprimere or effingere (which be the verie proper wordes of Imitation) either, Copiam Platonis or venustatem Xenophontis, suauitatem Isocratis, or vim Demosthenes, propriam et puram subtilitatem Aristotelis, and not onelie write out the places diligentlie, and lay them together orderlie, but also to conferre them with skilfull iudgement by those few rules, which I haue expressed now twise before: if that diligence were taken, if that order were vsed, what perfite knowledge of both the tonges, what readie and pithie vtterance in all matters, what right and deepe iudgement in all kinde of learnyng would follow, is scarce credible to be beleued.

These bookes, be not many, nor long, nor rude in speach, nor meane in matter, but next the Maiestie of Gods holie word, most worthie for a man, the louer of learning and honestie, to spend his life in. Yea, I haue heard worthie M. Cheke many tymes say: I would haue a good student passe and iorney through all Authors both Greke and Latin: but he that will dwell in these few bookes onelie: first, in Gods holie Bible, and than ioyne with it, Tullie in Latin, Plato, Aristotle: Xenophon: Isocrates: and Demosthenes in Greke: must nedes proue an excellent man.

Some men alreadie in our dayes, haue put to their helping handes, to this worke of Imitation. Perionus. As Perionius, Henr. Stephanus in dictionary H. Steph. Ciceroniano, and P. Victorius most praise- P. Victorius. worthelie of all, in that his learned worke conteyning xxv. bookes de varia lectione: in which bookes be ioyned diligentlie together the best Authors of both the tonges where one doth seeme to imitate an other.

But all these, with Macrobius, Heffus, and other, be no more but common porters, caryers, and bringers of matter and stufte together. They order nothing: They laye before you, what is done: they do not teach you, how it is done: They busie not them selues with forme of buildyng: They do not declare, this stufte is thus framed by Demosthenes, and thus and thus by Tullie, and so likewise in Xenophon, Plato and Isocrates and Aristotle. For ioyning Virgil with Homer I haue sufficientlie declared before.

Pindarus. The like diligence I would wish to be taken in Pindar and Horace an equall match for all respectes.

In Tragedies, (the goodliest Argument of all, and for the vse, either of a learned preacher, or a Ciuill Ientleman, more profitable than Homer, Pindar, Virgill, and Horace: yea comparable in myne opinion, with the doctrine of Aristotle, Plato, and Xenophon;) the Sophocles, Euripides, Grecians, Sophocles and Euripides far ouer match our Seneca in Latin, namely in οἰκονομικῆ et Decoro, although Senacaes elocution and verse be verie commendable for his tyme. And for the matters of Hercules, Thebes, Hippolytus, and Troie, his Imitation is to be gathered into the same booke, and to be tryed by the same touchstone, as is spoken before.

In histories, and namelie in Liuius, the like diligence of Imitation, could bring excellent learning, and breede stayde iudgement, in taking any like matter in hand.

Tit. Liuius. Onely Liuius were a sufficient taske for one mans studie, to compare him, first with his fellow for all respectes, Dion. Halicarnassæus: who both, liued in one tyme: toke both one historie in hande to write: deserued both like prayse of learnynge and eloquence. Than with

Polybius. that wise writer, whom Liuius professeth to follow: and if he would denie it, yet it is plaine, that the best part of the thyrd Decade in Liuius, is in a maner translated out of the thyrd and rest of Polybius: Lastlie with Thucydides, to whose Imitation Liuius is curiouflike bent, as may well appeare by that one Oration of those of Campania, asking aide of the Romanes agaynst the Samnites, which is wholie taken, Sentence, Reason, Argument, and order, out of the Oration of Corcyra, Thucid. 10. asking like aide of the Athenienses agaynst them of Corinth. If some diligent student would take paynes to compare them together, he should easelie perceiue, that I do fay trew. A booke, thus wholie filled with examples of Imitation, first out of Tullie, compared with Plato, Xenophon, Isocrates, Demosthenes and Aristotle: than out of Virgil and Horace, with Homer and Pindar: next out of Seneca with Sophocles and Euripides: Lastlie out of Liuius, with Thucydides, Polibius and Halicarnassæus, gathered with good diligence, and compared with right order, as I haue expressed before, were an other maner of worke for all kinde of learning, and namely for eloquence, than be those cold gatheringes of Macrobius, Hessus, Perionius, Stephanus, and Victorius, which may be vsed, as I sayd before, in this case, as porters and caryers, deseruing like prayse, as soch men do wages; but onely Sturmius is he, out of whom, the trew suruey and whole workemanship is speciallie to be learned.

I trust, this my writyng shall giue some good student occasion, to take some peece in hand of this worke of Imitation. And as I had rather haue any do it, than my selfe, yet surelie my selfe rather than none at all. And by Gods grace, if God do lend me life, with health, free layfure and libertie, with good likyng and a merie heart, I will turne the best part of my studie and tyme, to toyle in one or other peece of this worke of Imitation.

Opus de
ratione.

This diligence to gather examples, to giue light and vnderstandyng to good preceptes, is no new inuention, but speciallie vsed of the best Authors and oldest writers. For Aristotle him selfe, (as Diog. Aristoteles. Laertijs declareth) when he had written that goodlie booke of the Topickes, did gather out of stories and Orators, so many examples as filled xv. bookes, onelie to expresse the rules of his Topickes. These were the Commentaries, that Aristotle thought fit for hys Topickes: And therefore to speake as I thinke, I neuer saw yet any Commentarie vpon Aristotles Logicke, either in Greke or Latin, that euer I lyked, bicause they be rather spent in declaryng scholepoynt rules, than in gathering fit examples for vse and vtterance, either by pen or talke. For preceptes in all Authors, and namelie in Aristotle, without applying vnto them, the Imitation of examples, be hard, drie, and cold, and therefore barrayn, vnfruitfull and vnpleasant. But Aristotle, namelie in his Topickes and Elenches, should be, not onelie fruitfull, but also pleasant to, if examples out of Plato, and other good Authors, were diligentlie gathered, and aptlie applied vnto his most perfit preceptes there. And it is notable, that my frende Sturmius writeth herein, that there is no precept in Aristotles Topickes, wherof plentie of examples be not manifest in Platos workes. And I heare say, that an excellent learned man, Tomitanus in Italie, hath exprest euerie fallacion in Aristotle, with diuerse examples out of Plato. Would to God, I might once see, some worthie student of Aristotle and Plato in Cambridge, that would ioyne in one booke the preceptes of the one, with the examples of the other. For such a labor, were one speciall peece of that worke of Imitation, which I do wishe were gathered together in one Volume.

Cambrige, at my first comming thither, but not at my going away, committed this fault in reading the preceptes of Aristotle without the examples of other Authors: But herein, in my time thies men of worthie memorie, M. Redman, M. Cheke, M. Smith, M. Haddon, M. Watson, put so to their helping handes, as that vniuersitie, and all students there, as long as learning shall last, shall be bounde vnto them, if that trade in studie be trewlie folowed, which those men left behinde them there.

By this small mention of Cambridge, I am caryed into three imaginations: first, into a sweete remembrance of my tyme spent there: than, into som carefull thoughts, for the greuous alteration that folowed sone after: lastlie, into much ioy to heare tell, of the good recouerie and earnest forwardnes in all good learning there agayne.

To vtter theis my thoughts fomwhat more largelie, were fomwhat beside my matter, yet not very farre out of the way, bycause it shall wholly tend to the good encoragement and right confideration of learning, which is my full purpose in writing this litle booke: whereby also shall well appeare this sentence to be most trewe, that onelie good men, by their gouernment and example, make happie times, in euery degree and state.

Doctor Nico. Medcalfe, that honorable D. Nic. father, was Master of S. Iohnes Colledge, Medcalfe: when I came thether: A man meanelie learned himselfe, but not meanely affectioned to fet forward learning in others. He found that Colledge spending scarce two hundred markes by [the] yeare: he left it spending a thousand markes and more. Which he procured, not with his mony, but by his wisdome; not chargeable bought by him, but liberallie geuen by others by his meane, for the zeale and honor they bare to learning. And that which is worthy of memorie, all thies giuers were almost Northrenmen: who being liberallie rewarded in the seruice of their Prince, bestowed it as liberallie for the good of their Contrie. Som men thought therefore, that D. Medcalfe was parciall to Northrenmen, but sure I am of this, that Northrenmen were parciall, in doing more good, and geuing more landes to ye forderance of learning, than any other contrie men, in those dayes, did: which deede should haue beene, rather an example of goodnes, for other to folowe, than matter of malice, for any to enuie, as some there were that did. Trewly, D. Medcalfe was parciall to none: but indifferent to all: a master for the whole, a father to euery one, in that Colledge. There was none so poore, if he had, either wil in goodnes, or wit to learning, that could lacke being there, or should depart from thence, for any need. I am witnes my selfe, that mony many times was brought into yong mens studies by strangers whom they knew not. In which doing, this worthy Nicolaus folowed the steppes of good olde S. Nicolaus, that learned Bishop. He was a Papist in deede, but would to God, amonges all vs Protestants I might once see but one, that would winne like praise, in doing like good, for the aduancement of learning and vertue. And yet, though he were a Papist, if any yong man, geuen to new learning (as they termed it) went beyond his fellowes, in witte, labor, and towardnes, euen the fame, neyther lacked, open praise to encorage him, nor priuate exhibition to mainteyne hym, as worthy Syr I. Cheke, if he were aliue would beare good witnes and so can many mo. I my selfe one of the meanest of a great number, in that Colledge, because there appeared in me som small shew of towardnes and diligence, lacked not his fauor to forder me in learning.

And being a boy, newe Bachelor of arte, I chanced amonges my companions to speake against the Pope: which matter was than in eury mans mouth, bycause D. Haines and D. Skippe were cum from the Court, to debate the same matter, by preaching and disputation in the vniuersitie. This hapned the same tyme, when I stode to be felow there: my taulke came to D. Medcalfes eare: I was called before him and the Seniores: and after greuous rebuke, and some punishment, open warning was geuen to all the felowes, none to be so hardie to geue me his voice at that election. And yet for all those open threates, the good father himselfe priuilege procured, that I should euen than be chosen felow. But, the election being done, he made countenance of great discontentation thereat. This good mans goodnes, and fatherlie discretion, vsed towardes me that one day, shall neuer out of my remembrance all the dayes of my life. And for the same cause, haue I put it here, in this small record of learning. For next Gods prouidence, surely that day, was by that good fathers meanes, Dies natalis, to me, for the whole foundation of the poore learning I haue, and of all the funderance, that hetherto else where I haue obteyned.

This his goodnes flood not still in one or two, but flowed abundantlie ouer all that Colledge, and brake out also to norishe good wittes in euery part of that vniuersitie: whereby, at this departing thence, he left soch a companie of fellowes and scholers in S. Iohnes Colledge, as can scarce be found now in some whole vniuersitie: which, either for diuinitie, on the one side or other, or for Ciuill seruice to their Prince and contrie, haue bene, and are yet to this day, notable ornaments to this whole Realme: Yea S. Iohnes did then so flourish, as Trinitie college, that Princelie house now, at the first erection, was but Colonia deducta out of S. Iohnes, not onelie for their Master, fellowes, and scholers, but also, which is more, for their whole, both order of learning, and discipline of maners: and yet to this day, it neuer tooke Master but such as was bred vp before in S. Iohnes: doing the dewtie of a good Colonia to her Metropolis, as the auncient Cities of Grece and some yet in Italie, at this day, are accustomed to do.

S. Iohnes stode in this state, vntill those heuie tymes, and that greuous change that chanced. An. 1553. whan mo perfite scholers were dispersed from thence in one moneth, than many yeares can reare vp againe. For, whan Aper de Sylua had Psal. 80. passed the seas, and fastned his foote againe in England, not onely the two faire groues of learning in England were eyther cut vp, by the roote, or troden downe to the ground and wholie went to wracke, but the yong spring there, and euerie where else, was pitifullie nipt and ouertroden by very beastes, and also the fairest standers of all, were rooted vp, and cast into the fire, to the great weakening euen at this day of Christes Chirch in England, both for Religion and learning.

And what good could chance than to the vniuersities, whan som of the greatest, though not of the wisest nor best learned, nor best men neither of that side, did labor to perswade, that ignorance was better than knowledge, which they ment, nor for the laitie onelie, but also for the greatest rable of their spiritualitie, what other pretense openlie fo euer they made: and therefore did som of them at Cambrige (whom I will not name openlie,) cause hedge priestes fette oute of the contrie, to be made fellows in the vniuersitie: saying, in their talke priuile, and declaring by their deedes openlie, that he was, fellow good enough for their tyme, if he could were a gowne and a tipet cumlie, and haue hys crowne shorne faire and roundlie, and could turne his Portresse and pie readilie: whiche I speake not to reprove any order either of apparell, or other dewtie, that may be well and indifferentlie vsed, but to note the miserie of that time, whan the benefites prouided for learning were so fowlie misused. And what was the frute of this feade? Verely, iudgement in doctrine was wholly altered: order in discipline very fore changed: the loue of good learning, began sodenly to wax cold: the knowledge of the tonges (in spite of some that therein had florished) was manifestly contemned: and so, ye way of right studie purposely peruerted: the choice of good authors of mallice confownded. Olde sophistrie (I say not well) not olde, but that new rotten sophistrie began to beard and sholder logicke in her owne tong: yea, I know, that heades were cast together, and counsell deuised, that Duns, with all the rable of barbarous questionistes, should haue dispossessed of their place and rowmes, Aristotle, Plato, Tullie, and Demosthenes, when good M. Redman, and those two worthy starres of that vniuersitie, M. Cheke, and M. Smith, with their scholers, had brought to florishe as notable in Cambrige, as euer they did in Grece and in

Plato. Italie: and for the doctrine of those fowre, Demost. than geuing place to no vniuersitie, neither in France, Spaine, Germanie, nor Italie. Also in outward behauiour, than began simplicitie in apparell, to be layd aside. Courtlie galantnes to be taken vp: frugalitie in diet was priuately misliked: Towe going times, ioyned with labor, left of in the fieldes: vnthrifty and idle games haunted corners, and occupied the nightes: contention in youth, no where for learning: factions in the elders euery where for trifles: All which miseries at length, by Gods prouidence, had their end 16. Nouemb. 1558. Since which tyme, the yong spring hath shot vp so faire, as now there be in Cambrige againe, many goodly plantes (as did well appeare at the Queenes Maiesties late being there) which are like to grow to mightie great timber, to the honor of learning, and great good of their contrie, if they may stand their tyme, as the best plantes there were wont to do: and if som old dotterell trees, with standing ouer nie them, and dropping vpon them, do not either hinder, or crooke their growing, wherein my feare is ye lesse, seing so worthie a Iustice of an Oyre hath the present ouersight of that whole chace, who was himselfe fomtym, in the fairest spring that euer was there of learning, one of the forwardest yong plantes, in all that worthy College of S. Iohnes: who now by grace is growne to soch greatnesse, as, in the temperate and quiet shade of his wisdome, next the prouidence of God, and goodnes of one, in theis our daies, Religio for sinceritie, literæ for order and aduauncement, Respub. for happie and quiet gouernment, haue to great rejoyfing of all good men, speciallie reposed them selues.

Now to returne to that Question, whether one, a few, many or all, are to be followed, my aunswere shalbe short: All, for him that is desirous to know all: yea, the worst of all, as Questionistes, and all the barbarous nation of scholemen, helpe for one or other consideration: But in euerie separate kinde of learning and studie, by it selfe, ye must follow, chofelie a few, and chieflie some one, and that namelie in our schole of eloquence, either for penne or talke. And as in portrature and paintyng wise men chose not that workman, that can onelie make a faire hand, or a well facioned legge, but soch [a] one, as can furnish vp fullie, all the fetures of the whole body, of a man, woman and child: and with all is able to, by good skill, to giue to euerie one of these three, in their proper kinde, the right forme, the trew figure, the naturall color, that is fit and dew, to the dignitie of a man, to the bewtie of a woman, to the sweetnes of a yong babe: euen likewise, do we seeke foch one in our schole to folow, who is able alwayes, in all matters, to teach plainlie, to delite pleasantlie, and to cary away by force of wise talke, all that shall heare or reade him: and is so excellent in deed, as witte is able, or wishe can hope, to attaine vnto: And this not onelie to serue in the Latin or Greke tong, but also in our own English language. But yet, bicause the prouidence of God hath left vnto vs in no other tong, faue onelie in the Greke and Latin tong, the trew preceptes, and perfite examples of eloquence, therefore must we seeke in the Authors onelie of those two tonges, the trewe Paterne of Eloquence, if in any other mother tongue we looke to attaine, either to perfit vtterance of it our selues, or skilfull iudgement of it in others.

And now to know, what Author doth medle onelie with some one peece and member of eloquence, and who doth perfitelie make vp the whole bodie, I wil declare, as I can call to remembrance the goodlie talke, that I haue had oftentimes, of the trew difference of Authors, with that Ientleman of worthie memorie, my dearest frend, and teacher of all the litle poore learning I haue, Syr John Cheke.

The trew difference of Authors is best knowne, per diuersa genera dicendi, that euerie one vsed. And therefore here I will deuide genus dicendi, not into these three, Tenuè, mediocrè, et grande, but as the matter of euerie Author requireth, as

And here, who soeuer hath bene diligent to read aduisedlie ouer, Terence, Seneca, Virgil, Horace, or els Aristophanus, Sophocles, Homer, and Pindar, and shall diligently marke the difference they vse, in proprietie of wordes, in forme of sentence, in handlyng of their matter, he shall easelie perceiue, what is fitte and decorum in euerie one, to the trew vse of perfitte Imitation. Whan M. Watson in S. Iohns College at Cambrige wrote his excellent Tragedie of Abfalon, M. Cheke, he and I, for that part of trew Imitation, had many pleafant talkes together, in comparing the preceptes of Aristotle and Horace de Arte Poetica, with the examples of Euripides, Sophocles, and Seneca. Few men, in writyng of Tragedies in our dayes, haue shot at this marke. Some in England, moe in France, Germanie, and Italie, also haue written Tragedies in our tyme: of the which, not one I am sure is able to abyde the trew touch of Aristotles preceptes, and Euripides examples, saue onely two, that euer I saw, M. Watsons Abfalon, and Georgius Buckananus Iephthe. One man in Cambrige, well liked of many, but best liked of him selfe, was many tymes bold and busie, to bryng matters vpon stages, which he called Tragedies. In one, wherby he looked to wyne his spurres, and whereat many ignorant felowes fast clapped their handes, he began the Protasis with Trochæijs Octonarijs: which kinde of verse, as it is but feldome and rare in Tragedies, so is it neuer vsed, saue onelie in Epitafi: whan the Tragedie is hiest and hottest, and full of greatest troubles. I remember full well what M. Watſon merelie ſayd vnto me of his blindneſſe and boldnes in that behalfe although otherwiſe, there paſſed much frendſhip betwene them. M. Watſon had an other maner [of] care of perfection, with a feare and reuerence of the iudgement of the beſt learned: Who to this day would neuer ſuffer, yet his Abſalon to go abroad, and that onelie, bicauſe, in locis paribus, Anapeſtus is twiſe or thrife uſed in ſtede of Iambus. A ſmal faulte, and ſuch [a] one, as perchance would neuer be marked, no neither in Italie nor France. This I write, not ſo much, to note the firſt, or praife the laſt, as to leaue in memorie of writing, for good example to poſteritie, what perfection, in any tyme, was, moſt diligentlie fought for in like maner, in all kinde of learnyng, in that moſt worthie Colledge of S. Iohns in Cambrige.

And trew it is, that Hermogenes writeth of Demosthenes, that all formes of Eloquence be perfite in him. In Ciceroes Orations, Medium et sublime be most excellentlie handled, but Humile in his Orations is feldome sene. Yet neuerthelesse in other bookes, as in some part of his offices, and specially in Partitionibus, he is comparable in hoc humili et disciplinabili genere, euen with the best that euer wrote in Greke. But of Cicero more fullie in fitter place. And thus, the trew difference of stiles, in euerie Author, and euerie kinde of learnyng may easelie be knowne by this diuision.

Which I thought in this place to touch onelie, not to profecute at large, bicause, God willyng, in the Latin tong, I will fullie handle it, in my booke de Imitatione.

Now, to touch more particularlie, which of those Authors, that be now most commonlie in mens handes, will sone affourd you some peece of Eloquence, and what maner a peece of eloquence, and what is to be liked and folowed, and what to be misliked and eschewed in them: and how some agayne will furnish you fully withall, rightly, and wisely considered, somewhat I will write as I haue heard Syr John Cheke many tymes fay.

The Latin tong, concerning any part of purenesse of it, from the spring, to the decay of the same, did not endure moch longer, than is the life of a well aged man, scarfe one hundred yeares from the tyme of the last Scipio Africanus and Laelius, to the Empire of Augustus. And it is notable, that Vellius Paterculus writeth of Tullie, how that the perfection of eloquence did fo remayne onelie in him and in his time, as before him, were few, which might moch delight a man, or after him any, worthy admiration, but soch as Tullie might haue seene, and such as might haue seene Tullie. And good cause why: for no perfection is durable. Encrease hath a time, and decay likewise, but all perfit ripenesse remaineth but a moment: as is plainly seen in fruits, plummes and cherries: but more sensibly in flowers, as Roses and such like, and yet as trewlie in all greater matters. For what naturallie, can go no hier, must naturallie yeld and stoupe againe.

Of this short tyme of any purenesse of the Latin tong, for the first fortie yeare of it, and all the tyme before, we haue no peece of learning left, saue Plautus and Terence, with a litle rude vnperfit pamflet of the elder Cato. And as for Plautus, except the scholemaster be able to make wise and ware choice, first in proprietie of wordes, than in framing of Phrases and sentences, and chieflie in choice of honestie of matter, your scholer were better to play, then learne all that is in him. But surelie, if iudgement for the tong, and direction for the maners, be wisely ioyned with the diligent reading of Plautus, than trewlie Plautus, for that purenesse of the Latin tong in Rome, whan Rome did most flourish in wel doing, and so thereby, in well speaking also, is soch a plentifull storeho[u]se, for common eloquence, in meane matters, and all priuate mens affaires, as the Latin tong, for that respect, hath not the like agayne. Whan I remember the worthy tyme of Rome, wherein Plautus did liue, I must nedes honor the talke of that tyme, which we see Plautus doth vse.

Terence is also a storehouse of the same tong, for an other tyme, following soone after, and although he be not so full and plentiful as Plautus is, for multitude of matters, and diuersitie of wordes, yet his wordes, be chosen so purelie, placed so orderly, and all his stuffe so neetlie packed vp, and wittely compassed in euerie place, as, by all wise mens iudgement, he is counted the cunninger workeman, and to haue his shop, for the rowme that is in it, more finely appointed, and trimlier ordered, than Plautus is.

Three thinges chiefly, both in Plautus and Terence, are to be specially considered The matter, the vtterance, the words, the meter. The matter in both, is altogether within the compasse of the meanest mens maners, and doth not stretch to any thing of any great weight at all, but standeth chiefly in vtterying the thoughtes and conditions of hard fathers, foolish mothers, vnthrifty yong men, craftie seruantes, sottle bawdes, and wilie harlots, and so, is moch spent, in finding out fine fetches, and packing vp pelting matters, such as in London commonlie cum to the hearing of the Masters of Bridewell. Here is bate stuffe for that scholer, that should be cum hereafter, either a good minister in Religion, or a Ciuill Ientleman in seruice of his Prince and contrie: except the preacher do know such matters to confute them, whan ignorance surelie in all such thinges were better for a Ciuill Ientleman, than knowledge. And thus, for matter, both Plautus and Terence, be like meane painters, that worke by halfes, and be cunning onelie, in making the worst part of the picture, as if one were skilfull in painting the bodie of a naked person, from the nauell downward, but nothing else.

For word and speach, Plautus is more plentifull, and Terence more pure and proper: And for one respect, Terence is to be embraced aboue all that euer wrote in hys kinde of argument: Bicause it is well known, by good recorde of learning, and that by Ciceroes owne witnes that some Comedies bearyng Terence name, were written by worthy Scipio, and wise Laelius, and namely Heauton: and Adelphi. And therefore as oft as I reade those Comedies, so oft doth found in myne eare, the pure fine talke of Rome, which was vsed by the floure of the worthiest nobilitie that euer Rome bred. Let the wisest man, and best learned that lieth, read aduisedlie ouer, the first scene of Heauton, and the first scene of Adelphi, and let him consideratlie iudge, whether it is the talke of a seruile stranger borne, or rather euen that milde eloquent wise speach, which Cicero in Brutus doth so liuely expresse in Laelius. And yet neuerthelesse, in all this good proprietie of wordes, and purenesse of phrascs which be in Terence, ye must not follow him alwayes in placing of them, bicause for the meter sake, some wordes in him, somtyme, be driuen awrie, which require a straighter placing in plaine prose, if ye will forme, as I would ye should do, your speach and writing, to that excellent perfitnesse, which was onely in Tullie, or onelie in Tullies tyme.

The meter and verse of Plautus and Terence be verie meane, and not to be followed: which is not their reproch, but the fault of the tyme, wherein they wrote, whan no kinde of Poetrie, in the Latin tong, was brought to perfection, as doth well appeare in the fragmentes of Ennius, Cerilius, and others, and euiden[t]lie in Plautus and Terence, if thies in Latin be compared with right skil, with Homer, Euripides, Aristophanes, and other in Greeke of like fort. Cicero him selfe doth complaine of this vnperfitnes, but more plainly Quintilian, saying, in Comœdia maximè claudicamus, et vix leuem consequimur umbram: and most earnestly of all Horace in Arte Poetica, which he doth namely propter carmen Iambicum, and referreth all good studentes herein to the Imitation of the Greeke tong, saying.

This matter maketh me gladly remember, my sweete tyme spent at Cambrige, and the pleasant talke which I had oft with M. Cheke, and M. Watson, of this fault, not onely in the olde Latin Poets, but also in our new English Rymers at this day. They wished as Virgil and Horace were not wedded to follow the faultes of former fathers (a shrewd mariage in greater matters) but by right Imitation of the perfit Grecians, had brought Poetrie to perfitnesse also in the Latin tong, that we Englishmen likewise would acknowledge and vnderstand rightfully our rude beggerly ryming, brought first into Italie by Gothes and Hunnes, whan all good verses and all good learning to, were destroyed by them: and after caryed into France and Germanie: and at last receyued into England by men of excellent wit in deede, but of small learning, and lesse iudgement in that behalfe.

But now, when men know the difference, and haue the examples, both of the best, and of the worst, surelie, to follow rather the Gothes in Ryming, than the Greekes in trew versifying, were euen to eate ackornes with swyne, when we may freely eate wheate bread emonges men. In deede, Chauser, Th. Norton, of Bristow, my L. of Surrey, M. Wiat, Th. Phaer, and other Ientleman, in translating Ouide, Palingenius and Seneca, haue gonne as farre to their great praise, as the copie they followed could cary them, but, if soch good wittes, and forward diligence, had bene directed to follow the best examples, and not haue bene caryed by tyme and custome, to content themselues with that barbarous and rude Ryming, emonges their other worthy praises, which they haue iustly deserued, this had not bene the least, to be counted emonges men of learning and skill, more like vnto the Grecians, than vnto the Gothians, in handling of their verse.

In deed, our English tong, hauing in vse chiefly, wordes of one syllable which commonly be long, doth not well receiue the nature of Carmen Heroicum, bicause dactylus, the aptest foote for that verse, conteining one long and two short, is seldom therefore found in English: and doth also rather stumble than stand vpon Monasyllabis. Quintilian in hys learned Chapter de Compositione, geueth this lesson  de Monasyllabis, before me: and in the same place doth iustlie inuey against all Ryming, if there be any, who be angrie with me, for misliking of Ryming, may be angry for company to, with Quintilian also, for the same thing: And yet Quintilian had not so iust cause to mislike of it than, as men haue at this day.

And although Carmen Exametrum doth rather trotte and hoble, than runne smothly in our English tong, yet I am sure, our English tong will receiue carmen Iambicum as naturallie, as either Greke or Latin. But for ignorance, men can not like, and for idlenes, men will not labor, to cum to any perfines at all. For, as the worthie Poetes in Athens and Rome, were more carefull to satisfie the iudgement of one learned, than rashe in pleasing the humor of a rude multitude, euen so if men in England now, had the like reuerend regard to learning skill and iudgement, and durst not perfume to write, except they came with the like learnyng, and also did vse like diligence, in searchyng out, not onelie iust measure in euerie meter, as euerie ignorant person may easely do, but also trew quantitie in euery foote and fillable, as onelie the learned shalbe able to do, and as the Grekes and Romanes were wont to do, surelie than rash ignorant heads, which now can easely reckon vp fourteen fillabes, and easelie stumble on euery Ryme, either durst not, for lacke of such learnyng: or els would not, in auoyding such labor, be so busie, as euerie where they be: and shoppes in London should not be so full of lewd and rude rymes, as commonlie they are. But now, the ripest of tonge, be readiest to write: And many dayly in setting out bookes and bal[l]ettes make great shew of blossomes and buddes, in whom is neither, roote of learning, nor frute of wisedome at all. Some that make Chaucer in English and Petrarch in Italian, their Gods in verses, and yet be not able to make trew difference, what is a fault, and what is a iust prayse, in those two worthie wittes, will moch mislike this my writyng. But such men be euen like followers of Chaucer and Petrarke, as one here in England did folow Syr Tho. More: who, being most vnlike vnto him, in wit and learnyng, neuertheles in wearing his gowne awrye vpon the one shoulder, as Syr Tho. More was wont to do, would nedes be counted lyke vnto him.

This mislikyng of Ryming, beginneth not now of any newfangle singularitie, but hath bene long misliked of many, and that of men, of greateft learnyng, and deepeft iudgement. And foch, that defend it, do fo, either for lacke of knowledge what is beft, or els of verie enuie, that any should performe that in learnyng, whereunto they, as I fayd before, either for ignorance, can not, or for idlenes will not, labor to attaine vnto.

And you that prayfe this Ryming, bicaufe ye neither haue reason, why to like it, nor can shew learning to defend it, yet I will helpe you, with the authoritie of the oldeft and learnedft tyme. In Grece, whan Poetrie was euen as the hieft pitch of perfittnes, one Simmius Rhodius of a certaine singularitie wrote a booke in ryming Greke verses, naming it $\omega\delta\nu$, conteyning the fable, how Iupiter in likenes of a swan, gat that egge vpon Leda, whereof came Castor, Pollux and faire [H]elena. This booke was fo liked, that it had few to read it, but none to folow it: But was presentlie contemned: and fone after, both Author and booke, fo forgotten by men, and confumed by tyme, as scarce the name of either is kept in memorie of learnyng: And the like folie was neuer folowed of any, many hondred yeares after vntill ye Hunnes and Gothians, and other barbarous nations, of ignorance and rude singularitie, did reuiue the same folie agayne.

The noble Lord Th. Earle of Surrey, The Earle of Surrey. first of all English men, in translating the fourth booke of Virgill: and Gonsaluo Gonsaluo Periz. Periz that excellent learned man, and Secretarie to kyng Philip of Spaine, in translating the Vliffes of Homer out of Greke into Spanish, haue both, by good iudgement, auoyded the fault of Ryming, yet neither of them hath fullie hit[t]e perfite and trew versifying. In deed, they obserue iust number, and euen feete: but here is the fault, that their feete: be feete without ioyntes, that is to say, not distinct by trew quantitie of fillabes: And so, soch feete, be but numme [benumbed] feete: and be, euen as vnfitte for a verse to turne and runne roundly withall, as feete of brasse or wood be vnweeldie to go well withall. And as a foote of wood, is a plaine shew of a manifest maime, euen so feete, in our English versifying, without quantitie and ioyntes, be sure signes, that the verse is either, borne deformed, vnnaturall and lame, and so verie vnseemlie to looke vpon, except to men that be gogle eyed them selues.

The spying of this fault now is not the curiositie of English eyes, but euen the good iudgement also of the best that write in these dayes in Italie: and namelie Senese Felice Figlincci. of that worthie Senese Felice Figlincci, who, writyng vpon Aristotles Ethickes so excellentlie in Italian, as neuer did yet any one in myne opinion either in Greke or Latin, amongst other thynges doth most earnestlie inuey agaynst the rude ryming of verses in that tong: And whan soeuer he expressed Aristotles preceptes, with any example, out of Homer or Euripides, he translateth them, not after the Rymes of Petrarke, but into soch kinde of perfite verse, with like feete and quantitie of fillabes, as he found them before in the Greke tonge: exhortyng earnestlie all the Italian nation, to leaue of their rude barbariounesse in ryming, and folow diligently the excellent Greke and Latin examples, in trew versifyng.

And you, that be able to vnderstand no more, then ye finde in the Italian tong: and neuer went farder than the schole of Petrarke and Ariostus abroad, or els of Chaucer at home, though you haue pleasure to wander blindlie still in your foule wrong way, enuie not others, that seeke, as wise men haue done before them, the fairest and rightest way: or els, beside the iust reproch of malice, wisemen shall trewlie iudge, that you do so, as I haue sayd and say yet agayne vnto you, bicause, either, for idlenes ye will not, or for ignorance ye can not, cum by no better your selfe.

And therefore euen as Virgill and Horace deserue most worthie prayfe, that they spying the vnperfites in Ennius and Plautus, by trew Imitation of Homer and Euripides, brought Poetrie to the same perfitnes in Latin, as it was in Greke, euen so those, that by the same way would benefite their tong and contrey, deserue rather thanks than disprayse in that behalfe.

And I reioyce, that euen poore England preuented Italie, first in spying out, than in seekyng to amend this fault in learnyng.

And here, for my pleasure I purpose a litle, by the way, to play and sporte with my Master Tully: from whom commonlie I am neuer wont to dissent. He him selfe, for this point of learnyng, in his verses doth halt a litle by his leaue. He could not denie it, if he were aliue, nor those defend hym now that loue him best. This fault I lay to his charge: bicause once it pleased him, though fomwhat merelie, yet oueruncurtellie, to rayle vpon poore England, obiecing both, extreme beggerie, and mere barbariounes vnto it, wrytyng thus vnto his frend Atticus: There is not one scruple of siluer in that whole Isle, or any one that knoweth either learnyng or letter.

But now master Cicero, blessed be God, and his sonne Iesus Christ, whom you neuer knew, except it were as it pleased him to lighten you by some shadow, as couertlie in one place ye confesse saying: Veritatis tantum vmbram consecramur, as your Master

Offic.

Plato did before you: blessed be God, I say, that fixten hundred yeare after you were dead and gone, it may trewly be sayd, that for siluer, there is more cumlie plate, in one Citie of England, than is in foure of the proudest Cities in all Italie, and take Rome for one of them. And for learnyng, beside the knowledge of all learned tongs and liberall sciences, euen your owne bookes Cicero, be as well read, and your excellent eloquence is as well liked and loued, and as trewlie folowed in England at this day, as it is now, or euer was, fence your owne tyme, in any place of Italie either at Arpinum, where ye were borne, or els at Rome where ye were brought vp. And a litle to brag with you Cicero, where you your selfe, by your leaue, halted in some point of learnyng in your owne tong, many in England at this day go streight vp, both in trewe skill, and right doing therein.

This I write, not to reprehend Tullie, whom, aboue all other, I like and loue best, but to excuse Terence, because in his tyme, and a good while after, Poetrie was neuer perfited in Latin, vntill by trew Imitation of the Grecians, it was at length brought to perfection: And also thereby to exhorte the goodlie wittes of England, which apte by nature, and willing by desire, geue them selues to Poetrie, that they, rightly vnderstanding the barbarous bringing in of Rymes, would labor, as Virgil and Horace did in Latin, to make perfite also this point of learning, in our English tong.

And thus much for Plautus and Terence, for matter, tong, and meter, what is to be followed, and what to be exchewed in them.

After Plautus and Terence, no writing remayneth vntill Tullies tyme, except a fewe short fragmentes of L. Craffus excellent wit, here and there recited of Cicero for example sake, whereby the louers of learnyng may the more lament the losse of soch a worthie witte.

And although the Latin tong did faire blome and blossome in L. Craffus, and M. Antonius, yet in Tullies tyme onely, and in Tullie himselfe chieflie, was the Latin tong fullie ripe, and growne to the hiest pitch of all perfection.

And yet in the same tyme, it began to fade and stoupe, Tullie him selfe, in Brutus de Claris Oratoribus, with weeping wordes doth witnesse.

And bicause, emong[e]st them of that tyme, there was some difference, good reason is, that of them of that tyme, should be made right choice also. And yet let the best Ciceronian in Italie read Tullies familiar epistles aduisedly ouer, and I beleue he shall finde small difference, for the Latin tong, either in propriety of wordes or framing of the stile, betwixt Tullie, and those that write vnto him. As Ser. Sulpitius, A. Cecinna,

M. Cælis, M. et D. Bruti, A. Pollia, L. Plancus, and diuerse other: read the epistles of L. Plancus Epi. Planci x. lib. Epist. 8. in x. Lib. and for an assay, that Epistle namely to the Co[n]ff. and whole Senate, the eight Epistle in number, and what could be, eyther more eloquentlie, or more wiselie written, yea by Tullie himselve, a man may iustly doubt. Thies men and Tullie, liued all in one tyme, were like in authoritie, not vnlike in learning and studie, which might be iust causes of this their equalitie in writing: And yet surely, they neyther were in deed, nor yet were counted in mens opinions, equall with Tullie in that facultie. And how is the difference hid in his Epistles? verelie, as the cunning of an expert Seaman, in a faire calme fresh Ryuer, doth litle differ from the doing of a meaner workman therein, euen so, in the short cut of a priuate letter, where, matter is common, wordes easie, and order not moch diuerse, small shew of difference can appeare. But where Tullie doth set vp his faile of eloquence, in some broad deep Argument, caried with full tyde and winde, of his witte and learnyng, all other may rather stand and looke after him, than hope to ouertake him, what course so euer he hold, either in faire or foule. Foure men onely whan the Latin tong was full ripe, be left vnto vs, who in that tyme did flourish, and did leaue to posteritie, the fruite of their witte and learning: Varro, Salust, Cæsar, and Cicero. Whan I say, these foure onely, I am not ignorant, that euen in the same tyme, most excellent Poetes, deseruing well of the Latin tong, as Lucretius, Catullus, Virgill, and Horace, did write: But, bicause, in this litle booke, I purpose to teach a yong scholer, to go, not to daunce: to speake, not to sing, (whan Poetes in deed, namelie Epici and Lyrici, as these be, are fine dauncers, and trime fingers,) but Oratores and Historici, be those cumlie goers, and faire and wise speakers, of whom I wishe my scholer to wayte vpon first, and after in good order, and dew tyme, to be brought forth, to the singing and dauncing schole: And for this consideration, do I name these foure, to be the onelie writers of that tyme.

Varro. Varro, in his bookes de lingua Latina, et Analogia as these be left mangled and patched vnto vs, doth not enter there in to any great depth of eloquence, but as one caried in a small low vessell him selfe verie nie the common shore, not much vnlike the fisher men of Rye, and Hering men of Yarmouth. Who deserue by common mens opinion, small commendacion, for any cunning sa[y]ling at all, yet neuertheles in those bookes of Varro good and necessarie stufte, for that meane kinde of Argument, be verie well and learnedlie gathered together.

De Rep.
Rustica.

His bookes of Husbandrie, are moch to be regarded, and diligentlie to be read, not onelie for the proprietie, but also for the plentie of good wordes, in all contrey and husbandmens affaires: which can not be had, by so good authoritie, out of any other Author, either of so good a tyme, or of so great learnyng, as out of Varro. And yet bicause, he was fourscore yeare old, whan he wrote those bookes, the forme of his style there compared with Tullies writyng, is but euen the talke of a spent old man: whose wordes commonlie fall out of his mouth, though verie wiselie, yet hardly and coldie, and more heauelie also, than some eares can well beare, except onelie for age, and authorities sake. And perchance, in a rude contrey argument, of purpose and iudgement, he rather vsed, the speach of the contrey, than talke of the Citie.

And so, for matter sake, his wordes sometyme, be somewhat rude: and by the imitation of the elder Cato, old and out of vse: And beyng depe stept in age, by negligence some wordes do so [e]scape and fall from him in those bookes, as be not worth the taking vp, by him, that is carefull to speak or write trew Latin, as that Lib. 3. Cap. 1. sentence in him, Romani, in pace à rusticis alebantur, et in bello ab his tuebantur. A good student must be therefore carefull and diligent, to read with iudgement ouer euen those Authors, which did write in the most perfite tyme: and let him not be affrayd to trie them, both in proprietie of wordes, and forme of style, by the touch stone of Cæsar and Cicero, whose puritie was neuer foiled, no not by the sentence of those; that loued them worst.

All louers of learnyng may fore lament the losse of those bookes of Varro, which he wrote in his yong and lustie yeares, with good leysure, and great learnyng of all partes of Philosophie: of the goodliest argumentes, perteyning both to the common wealth, and priuate life of man, as, de Ratione studij, et educandis liberis, which booke, is oft recited, and moch praysed, in the fragmentes of Nonius, euen for authoritie sake. He wrote most diligentlie and largelie, also the whole historie of the state of Rome: the mysteries of their whole Religion: their lawes, customes, and gouernement in peace: their maners, and whole discipline in warre: And this is not my gessing, as one in deed that neuer saw those bookes, but euen, the verie iudgement, and playne testimonie of Tullie him selfe, who knew and read those bookes, in these wordes: Tu ætatem Patriæ: Tu descriptiones temporum: Tu sacrorum, tu sacerdotum Iura: Tu domesticam, tu bellicam disciplinam: Tu sedem Regionum, locorum, tu omnium diuinarum humanarumque rerum nomina, genera, officia, causas aperuisti. etc.

In Acad.
Quest.

But this great losse of Varro, is a litle recompensed by the happy comming of Dionysius Halicarnassæus to Rome in Augustus dayes: who getting the possession of Varros librarie, out of that treasure house of learning, did leaue vnto vs some frute of Varros witte and diligence, I meane, his goodlie bookes de Antiquitatibus Romanorum. Varro was so esteemed for his excellent learnyng, as Tullie him selfe had a reuerence to his iudgement in all dou[b]tes of learnyng. And Antonius Triumuir, his enemy, and of a contrarie Cic. ad Att. faction, who had power to kill and bannith whom he listed, whan Varros name amongst others was brought in a schedule vnto him, to be noted to death, he tooke his penne and wrote his warrant of fauegard with these most goodlie wordes, Viuat Varro vir doctissimus. In later tyme, no man knew better: nor liked and loued more Varros learnyng, than did S. Augustine, as they do well vnderstand, that haue diligentlie read ouer his learned bookes de Ciuitate Dei: Where he hath this most notable sentence: Whan I see, how much Varro wrote, I meruell much, that euer he had any leasure to read: and whan I perceiue how many thinges he read, I meruell more, that euer he had any leasure to write. etc.

And surelie, if Varros bookes had remained to posteritie, as by Gods prouidence, the most part of Tullies did, than trewlië the Latin tong might haue made good comparifon with the Greke.

Saluste.

Salust. Salust, is a wife and worthy writer: but he requireth a learned Reader, and a right considerer of him. My dearest friend, and best master that euer I had or heard in learning, Syr I. Cheke, soch a man, as if I should liue to see England breed the like againe, I feare, I should liue ouer long, did once giue me a lesson for Salust, which, as I shall neuer forget my selfe, so is it worthy to be remembred of all those, that would cum to perfite iudgement of the Latin tong. He said, that Salust was not verie fitte for yong men, to learne out of him, the puritie of the Latin tong: because, he was not the purest in proprietie of wordes, nor choifest in aptnes of phrascs, nor the best in framing of sentences: and therefore is his writing, sayd he neyther plaine for the matter, nor sensible for mens vnderstanding. And what is the cause thereof, Syr, quoth I. Verilie said he, bicause in Salust writing, is more Arte than nature, and more labor than Arte: and in his labor also, to moch toyle, as it were, with an vncontented care to write better than he could, a fault common to very many men. And therefore he doth not expresse the matter liuely and naturally with common speach as ye see Xenophon doth in Greeke, but it is caried and driuen forth artificiallie, after to learned a sorte, as Thucydides, doth in his orations. And how cummeth it to passe, sayd I, that Cæsar and Ciceroes talke, is so naturall and plaine, and Salust writing so artificiall and darke, whan all they three liued in one tyme? I will freelie tell you my fanfie herein, said he: surely, Cæsar and Cicero, beside a singular prerogatiue of naturall eloquence geuen vnto them by God, both two, by vse of life, were daylie orators emonges the common people, and greatest councellers in the Senate house: and therefore gaue themselues to vse soch speach as the meanest should well vnderstand, and the wisest best allow: folowing carefullie that good councell of Aristotle, loquendum vt multi, sapiendum vt pauci. Salust was no soch man, neyther for will to goodnes, nor skill by learning: but ill geuen by nature, and made worse by bringing vp, spent the most part of his youth very misorderly in ryot and lechery. In the company of soch, who, neuer geuing theyr mynde to honest doying, could neuer inure their tong to wise speaking. But at [ye] last cummyng to better yeares, and b[u]ying witte at the dearest hand, that is, by long experience of the hurt and shame that commeth of mischeif, moued, by the councell of them that were wise, and caried by the example of soch as were good, first fell to honestie of life, and after to the loue to studie and learning: and so became so new a man, that Cæsar being dictator, made him Pretor in Numidia where he absent from his contrie, and not inured with the common talke of Rome, but shut vp in his studie, and bent wholly to reading, did write the storie of the Romanes. And for the better accomplishing of the same, he re[a]d Cato and Piso in Latin for gathering of matter and troth: and Thucydides in Greeke for the order of his storie, and furnishing of his style. Cato (as his tyme required) had more troth for the matter, than eloquence for the style. And so Salust, by gathering troth out of Cato, smelleth moch of the roughnes of his style: euen as a man that eateth garlike for helth, shall cary away with him the fauor of it also, whether he will or not. And yet the vse of old wordes is not the greatestt cause of Salustes [his] roughnes and darknesse: There be in Salust some old wordes in deed as patrare bellum, ductare exercitum, well noted by Quintilian, and verie much misliked of him: and supplicium for supplicatio, a word smellyng of an older store, than the other two so misliked by Quint: And yet is that word also in Varro, speaking of Oxen thus, boues ad victimas faciunt, atque ad Deorum supplicia: and a few old wordes mo. Read Saluste and Tullie aduisedly together: and in wordes ye shall finde small difference: yea Salust is more geuen to new wordes, than to olde, though som olde writers fay the contrarie: as Claritudo for Gloria: exactè for perfectè: Facundia for eloquentia. Thies two last wordes exactè and facundia now in euery mans mouth, be neuer (as I do remember) vsed of Tullie, and therefore I thinke they be not good: For surely Tullie speaking euery where so moch of the matter of eloquence, would not so precisely haue absteyned from the word Facundia, if it had bene good: that is proper for the tong, and common for mens vse. I could be long, in reciting many souch like, both olde and new wordes in Salust: but in very dede neyther oldnes nor newnesse of wordes maketh the greatestt difference betwixt Salust and Tullie, but first strange phrased made of good Latin wordes, but framed after the Greeke tonge, which be neyther choisly borowed of them, nor properly vsed by him: than, a hard composition and crooked framing of his wordes and sentences, as a man would say, English talke placed and framed outlandish like. As for example first in phrased, nimius et animus be two vsed wordes, yet homo nimius animi, is an vnused phrase.

Lib. 8. Cap. 3.
De Ornata.

The cause why Salust is not like Tully.

Vulgus, et amat, et fieri, be as common and well known wordes as may be in the Latin tong, yet id quod vulgè amat fieri, for solet fieri, is but a strange and grekysh kind of writing. Ingens et vires be proper wordes, yet vir ingens virium is an vnproper kinde of speaking and so be likewise,

and many souch like phrasēs in Salust, borrowed as I sayd not choisly out of Greeke, and vsed therefore vnproperly in Latin. Againe, in whole sentences, where the matter is good, the wordes proper and plaine, yet the sense is hard and darke, and namely in his prefaces and oration[s], wherein he vsed most labor, which fault is likewise in Thucydides in Greeke, of whom Salust hath taken the greatest part of his darkeness. For Thucydides likewise wrote his storie, not at home in Gre[e]ce, but abroad in Italie, and therefore smelleth of a certaine outlandish kinde of talke, strange to them of Athens, and diuerse from their writing, that liued in Athens and Gre[e]ce, and wrote the same tyme that Thucydides did, as Lysias, Xenophon, Plato, and Isocrates, the purest and playnest writers, that euer wrote in any tong, and best examples for any man to follow whether he write, Latin, Italian, French, or English. Thucydides also semeth in his writing, not so much benefited by nature, as holpen by Arte, and caried forth by desire, studie, labor, toyle and ouer great curiositie: who spent xxvii. yeares in writing his eight bookes of his history. Salust likewise wrote out of his contrie, and followed the faultes of Thuc. to moch: and boroweth of him some kinde of writing, which the Latin tong can not well beare, as Casus nominatiuus in diuerse places absolutè positus, as in that place of Iugurth, speaking de Leptitanis, itaque ab imperatore facillè quæ petebant adepti, misæ sunt è cohortes Ligurum quatuor. This thing in participes, vsed so oft in Thucyd[ides] and other Greeke authors to, may better be borne with all, but Salust vseth the same more strangelie and boldlie, as in thies wordes, Multis sibi quisque imperium petentibus. I beleue, the best Grammerien in England can scarfe giue a good reule, why quisque the nominatiue case, without any verbe, is so thrust vp amongest so many oblique cases. Some man perchance will smile, and laugh to scorne this my writyng, and call it idle curiositie, thus to busie my selfe in pickling about these small pointes of Grammer, not fitte for my age, place and calling, to trifle in: I trust that man, be he neuer so great in authoritie, neuer so wise and learned, either, by other mens iudgement, or his owne opinion, will yet thinke, that he is not greater in England, than Tullie was at Rome, not yet wiser, nor better learned than Tullie was him selfe, who, at the pitch of three score yeares, in the middes[t] of the broyle betwixt Cæsar and Pompeie, whan he knew not, whether to send wife and children, which way to go, where to hide him selfe, yet, in an earnest letter, amongest his earnest counnelles for those heuie tymes

Ad. Att. Lib. 7.

concerning both the common state of his contrey, and his owne priuate great affaires he was neither vnmyndfull nor ashamed to reason at large, and learne gladlie of Atticus, a lesse point of Grammer than these be, noted of me in Salust, as, whether he would write, ad Piræea, in Piræea, or in Piræeum, or Piræeum sine præpositione: And in those heuie tymes, he was so carefull to know this small point of Grammer, that he addeth these wordes Si hoc mihi ζήτημα persolueris, magna me molestia liberaris. If Tullie, at that age, in that authoritie, in that care for his contrey, in that ieopardie for him selfe, and extreme necessitie of hys dearest frendes, beyng also the Prince of Eloquence hym selfe, was not ashamed to descend to these low pointes of Grammer, in his owne naturall tong, what should scholers do, yea what should any man do, if he do thinke well doyng, better than ill doyng: And had rather be, perfite than meane, sure than doubtfull, to be what he should be, in deed, not seeme what he is not, in opinion. He that maketh perfines in the Latin tong his marke, must come to it by choice and certaine knowledge, not stumble vpon it by chance and doubtfull ignorance. And the right steppes to reach vnto it, be these, linked thus orderlie together, aptnes of nature, loue of learnyng, diligence in right order, constancie with pleasant moderation, and alwayes to learne of them that be best, and so shall you iudge as they that be wisest. And these be those reules, which worthie Master Cheke dyd impart vnto me concernyng Salust, and the right iudgement of the Latin tong.

Cæsar for that tittle of him, that is left vnto vs, is like the halfe face of a Venus, the other part of the head beyng hidden, the bodie and the rest of the members vnbegon, yet so excellentlie done by Apelles, as all men may stand still to mase and muse vpon it, and no man step forth with any hope to performe the like.

His feuen bookes de bello Gallico, and three de bello Ciuili be written, so wiselie for the matter, so eloquentlie for the tong, that neither his greatest enemies could euer finde the least note of parcialitie in him (a meruelous wisdome of a man, namely writyng of his owne doynge) nor yet the best iudgers of the Latin tong, nor the most enuious lookers vpon other mens writynges, can say any other, but all things be most perfitelie done by him.

Brutus, Caluus, and Calidius, who found fault with Tullies fulnes in woordes and matter, and that rightlie, for Tullie did both, confesse it, and mend it, yet in Cæsar, they neither did, nor could finde the like, or any other fault.

And therefore thus iustlie I may conclude of Cæsar.

that where, in all other, the best that euer wrote, in any tyme, or in any tong, in Greke and Latin, I except neither Plato, Demosthenes, nor Tullie, some fault is iustlie noted, in Cæsar onelie, could neuer yet fault be found.

Yet neuertheles, for all this perfite excellencie in him, yet it is but in one member of eloquence, and that but of one side neither, whan we must looke for that example to fol[low], which hath a perfite head, a whole bodie, forward and backward, armes and legges and all.
