CONVENOR: Sebrig Did

KEY POINTS:

- 15 people decided that "Daily Mail" should be banned (journalism)
- maybe: blacklist of "fake News" - sites
- there already are internal blacklists in Germany
- governmental takedowns of scientific resources contribute to link rot
- what happens to our reliable sources when journalism gets less reliable?
- people who ban information on climate change could feel threatened by Wikipedia
- prevent link rot: link to printed version and to social archived version
- a guideline: Does a publishing house have a guideline to apologize for mistakes/faults?

reliable sources

CONCLUSIONS/RECOMMENDATIONS/ACTIONS (IF ANY):

- What has the editor's guild have to say? (watch dogs watching themselves f.e. in India)
- In India: Fake News was already a problem before Trump
- Shaming companies publicly that advertise on fake-news-site ("Sleeping Giants")
