ADDRESS ON COMPLETION.

THE Author regrets the length of time elapsed since the first part of this work was laid before the public. His leisure for the undertaking was limited, and hurry was a thing to be avoided. The delay has, however, been the means of more fully procuring aid from kind correspondents, the object anticipated in the Preface, and the reason for publishing at all before completion.

When, some years ago, the Author, feeling the want of information in forming his own collection, was planning these volumes, a very dear friend, one endowed with refined and true perception in Art, and of great experience and judgment, said to him, "If you publish, everyone can know as much about the subject as you do yourself." But this the Author desired, for he conceives it to be almost a duty that those who have had the opportunity of acquiring any special knowledge should liberally communicate it, and not permit it to perish with themselves. So it has much pleased him to perceive, from the intelligence exhibited by his correspondents, that his friend's advice was correct; indeed, Mr. Horne and Mr. Warwick have gone further, for they not only gave new information, but each have detected instances in which the Author's own judgment had been at fault.

Amongst others who have assisted are Messrs. S. Addington, R. B. Bennett, S. Compton, J. B. C. (Hong-Kong), W. M. Eaton, Mrs. A. L. Fenton, Dr. Frazer, Col. T. G. Gardiner, C. H. Hart (Philadelphia), J. R. Joly, LL.D., W. Miot, Dr. Thornley Stoker, Walter F. Tiffin (author of "Gossip about Portraits"), Wm. H. Whitmore, (Boston).

Mr. George W. Reid, keeper of the Print Room at the British Museum, has given for many years valuable encouragement and help. Professor Sidney Colvin forwarded a collation of all the prints in the Fitzwilliam Collection, in which variations from the descriptions printed appeared. As mentioned in the Preface, every attention was afforded at the Bodleian, Hope Collection, Williams' Library, Eton, Windsor Castle, and Paris, and since then at Dresden, and by the custodians of the collections belonging to the Duke of Buccleugh and to the Marquess of Bute.

Yet there still are a few blanks to fill up, and doubtless new discoveries are to be made. If favoured with accounts of such the Author will gladly circulate them, and he believes that others would be found to continue this duty, should the event alluded to at page xlvi. or other contingency, occur.

Collectors will find interleaved copies useful for registering these notes, as well as for recording later prices and other memoranda, so that they shall be easy of reference.

The Rev. James Granger, in 1769, concluded the first issue of his volumes with the following, which, as it has been suppressed in every subsequent edition, may be given here: "The author, who exposes this his first work to the eye of the public, with the same diffidence and awe with which he first ascended the pulpit, is, however, not without hope that it may meet with approbation. If it should, he may be thereby encouraged to exceed the usual period of our histories, and carry it down to the present reign."

The Author of these volumes does not, for reasons which will be found at pages xxvi. and xli., make a similar promise; but, should it become desirable to catalogue and describe the works of the more modern engravers in this method, and should there be anyone willing to undertake the task, he will be most happy to give every assistance in his power.

EXTRAORDINARY NARRATIVE.

ONE evening, in the summer of 1882, the Author was engaged in selecting from his prints those which should be forwarded to the Autotype Company, to be produced by them as illustrations to his work. This was a task of some difficulty, for as the number of illustrations was necessarily limited, many special favourites had to be excluded. So having laid aside some, and then becoming rather perplexed, the Author leaned back in his chair to think, having his face towards the table on which the prints were lying.

Shortly afterwards he began to fancy that the prints were actually commencing to move, and he observed that they regarded him with a decided expression of displeasure, very much opposed to their usual kind glances which seemed to tell that they were grateful for the care taken of them. Then the commotion became more violent, other portraits came fluttering down from shelves and cases around, and all were evidently animated by the feelings and ideas of the personages whom they represented. Soon, amid the excitement, some purpose became manifest, for they marshalled themselves into troops and classes, somewhat according to the arrangement of the excellent and worthy Granger; then one of these bodies, consisting of military and naval officers, amongst them Marlborough, Prince Eugene, Wolfe, Rooke, Shovel, Anson, and Nelson, advanced to the Author, and with a curious out-of-the-world voice, somewhat like that of a telephone, addressed him thus:—"We have rendered services to England, but for which she would not have attained to or held the position she occupies, and from which all the generations of her people derive benefit. During life we caused our likenesses to be painted and engraved, so that all might then know our appearance, and that after death it might not be forgotten what manner of men we were. You have now the opportunity of carrying out our wishes by making public the copies of the likenesses which you possess. We admit that you have pleased us by the eagerness with which you sought for our effigies, and the trouble you took to describe them. But no description can possibly convey the clear idea which the actual image does, and we think that many might enjoy beholding the latter who would not care about reading the former. There now appears to be no difficulty in making our features familiar to all, and we think that this ought to be done."

These, when they passed on, were succeeded by groups of divines, amongst them Sancroft, Tillotson, Baxter, Sacheverell, and Burnet; of lawyers, amongst them, Hale, Camden, Mansfield, Thurlow, and Erskine; of authors and philosophers, amongst them Milton, Dryden, Prior, Newton, Locke, Halley, and Swift, and all spoke much to the same effect as the first.

Then slowly and gently stepped forward a number of ladies, many very handsome, their looks soft, their manner languid, their personal charms very partially veiled by thin and loose robes, and, as if it was too much trouble for them to speak, they murmured, "Surely the people of Queen Victoria's reign would wish to see us." Suddenly from amongst the portraits laid aside there darted to the front an exquisitely bright and sunny girl, all life and animation, and she, in a quick, decided way, said to the Author: "In the days of the merry monarch, as you must be well aware, nobody paid much attention to any of these ladies when I was present and since that time my fame and celebrity have gone on continually increasing; now, without objecting in the slightest degree to a single one of these beauties being made better known to your generation, I cannot but think it perfectly monstrous that you should only have given a single one of my portraits, when you might have published several; also, as they are all valuable and scarce they would be certain to be prized by the collectors for whom you are writing."

Next came up a curiously mixed assemblage, which turned out to be artists, musicians, and actors; amongst them were Lely, Hogarth, and Reynolds; Corelli, Senesino, Farinelli, Buononcini, Beard, Leveridge, Arne, and Pepusch; Betterton, Barry, Shuter, Quin, Kemble, Miss Farren, Mrs. Hartley, Mrs. Siddons, and Nan Catley. Again, from the portraits laid aside, a lady separated herself, and walking gracefully to the head of the group, said: "Mr. Author, it happens to be well known to us that at no time in the history of the country have painting, music, and the drama been more popular or more highly esteemed than in yours, and yet you have omitted to reproduce the likenesses of most of the celebrated professors of these arts, and you surely might have given several theatrical illustrations showing how we looked and how we acted, sometimes in plays still holding a place on the boards; and these would have taken well, for there are a great number of collectors who eagerly treasure up every scrap and vestige connected with the stage. Perhaps, too, people might have liked to see other portraits of myself; yet about this I think little, for self was not my object in life; but really you might have pleased the public by giving several of the likenesses of those charming Gunnings, whom I befriended in their young days, and (with a winning glance, which completely finished the susceptible author), remember, sir, we are your own countrywomen."

Another set of ladies next came forward: at first glance they seemed to be of the present day, but closer examination showed that they belonged to times of a hundred years ago. They said: "We, like all our sex, are pleased by being looked at and admired by everyone, and we are informed that our portraits deserve especial attention, as having been painted by the greatest masters that England has ever produced, yet you have only published two or three. More, surely, might have been given, if only for the information of the milliners of your time, who try to copy every detail of our dress."

All these proceedings were watched, evidently with approval, by numerous kings, queens, and other exalted personages, whose dignity, it was clear, was the only obstacle to their directly joining in them.

Then the Author rose, bowed profoundly, and placing his hand on his heart, said: "May it please your Majesties, your Excellencies, your Graces, your Lordships, your Ladyships, Mistress Gwin, dear Mistress Woffington, Ladies, Reverend Sirs, and Gentlemen, you will not, I trust, be still further displeased with me for frankly stating that my only object in the selection you refer to was to interest those who kindly purchased my book, and to give some idea of Mezzotinto Portraits of different periods and in different styles. As a general rule, people who have passed away from this world are not supposed again to take a part in its affairs, and it did not occur to me that you would interfere, or, indeed, that you had a voice in the matter at all. But, as you have spoken, we may calmly discuss the question, and it does seem to me that there is considerable force in your arguments, only about one in fifty were selected, and personally I should have liked to extend at least to one in ten, and to have gratified those who wished for several different portraits of the same person. The power, however, really does not rest with me, but with the great educated public; for it would be useless and foolish to prepare for them what they would not buy or care about. As you know, the vast mass of the people are wholly absorbed in the cares and pleasures of their present existence, few of them have either the leisure or the inclination for contemplating the wonderful works of the Creator or for studying the history, the literature, the art of their fellow-men. Of these few, too, but a very small number, possess or cultivate the true feeling for portraits: as an instance of this, when the Daniel prints were on view, a gentleman who considered himself and was considered by all who knew him a consummate judge of art, took up the portrait of Joe Miller (Autotype No. 66), and after looking at it for a while placed it back, deliberately observing, 'Well, I can see nothing in that.' Yet, to a sympathetic mind what a train of thought it would suggest, what memories of quaint jokes, more often repeated than acknowledged, it would recall, under the mask of the actors' part what a benevolence would appear in the face, what an expression of facetious, kindly humour would disclose itself in the corners of the eyes, what drollery would be perceived to lurk in the lips, what force in the expanded nostril; and then one would go on to think of the part he was acting, and if he could have been an Irishman in reality, for undoubtedly the face is Irish (none the less so, because a certain slight melancholy pervades it), and the picture was painted by an Irish artist; then one might consider whose fault is it that thorough union has not yet taken place between the kingdoms, and how it is that Teagues' successors still echo his cry of 'give,' and still, like him, hold out their hand for more.

"Some allusion has elsewhere been made (Preface, page xi.) to the bearing which the character expressed in a portrait might possibly have on the sifting of truth from falsehood in biography and history; as instances, no one who contemplated their portraits could for a moment think Judge Jefferies to have been the monster of cruelty and injustice that party prejudice has represented him, or that Mary Godwin was a vicious and depraved woman; again, the powerful sagacity in Walpole's portrait, and the keen intellect struggling with a sickly body in that of Pope, confirm the characters we have received of them.

“ Now if discoveries are to be made in this direction, it must be by those who have the true feeling alluded to ; there is not any reason for supposing it to be limited to those only who have taste and opportunity for collecting scarce and expensive original prints, but it is clear that it never can be elicited in any others, if they cannot see and examine the portraits. This difficulty is now removed through the amazing discoveries of photogravure and auto-type, by which the illustrations of these volumes are taken. These, and kindred processes reproduce the originals with an accuracy which bears the closest scrutiny of the magnifying-glass, and indeed improves on the most minute examination. These reproductions, too, can be had in any required number, and at comparatively small cost, and so portraits may be brought within reach of all, affording means to everyone for cultivating and developing their faculty for physiognomical research.*

“ To the ladies who spoke last I would observe that it is quite true that their portraits are now universally admired and coveted, and command high prices. With those who are not connoisseurs, this, however, may be to some extent a temporary following of an existing fashion ; with real connoisseurs the prints must ever be esteemed, but not so as to undervalue works of other periods, or other works

* Although sets of engraved portraits (the most remarkable of which was that known as Houbraken's Heads) had been previously published in this country from time to time, it was not until after the Granger enthusiasm had well set in that it seems to have occurred to anyone that reproductions or copies of highly valued prints would be desirable. Then, in 1793, Richardson the printseller, commenced the issue of copies of scarce Granger portraits in numbers (4 plates in each) to accompany a then intended republication of the Biographical History. There were 308 prints of the series published, octavo size, price £18 18s. The stock remaining at his sale in 1814 (consisting of the plates and nearly 30,000 prints) brought £700. When Baynes of Paternoster-row, did publish the new edition of Granger's Biographical History in 1824, these prints were reissued as illustrations thereto at a reduced price.

It is believed that both publishers made well of their ventures, but neither their prints nor those of a supplement afterwards published by Rodd can be truly considered reproductions. The inscriptions, the style of engraving, the expression of character, are often quite different—in some cases, indeed, they are mere sketches of the original prints.

Contrast, then, with these the true and faithful photographic copies, with every detail accurately brought out. Indeed in the case of some old line engravings, when the paper has been precisely imitated and when the size is the same, it is said, and the author can well believe it, to be absolutely necessary to place a mark upon the copy lest it should be, even to connoisseurs, entirely undistinguishable from the original. In the case of mezzotinto prints it is the early ones which are most successfully photographed, arising probably from the fact that the grounds are less worked upon.

of this period; indeed it is not improbable that future collectors will regard a proof of one of Reynolds' or Romney's ladies as compared with a Von Siegen, or a Sherwin, much in the way a booklover now regards a Baskerville, as compared with a Caxton.

"It was not, however, for any reason of this kind that so few of these prints were selected for autotyping, but because the great reduction of scale which would be necessary to fit them for illustrations to this work, detracts from their artistic effect, except when examined through a glass. Compare for instance Nos. 112, 118, 122, which are nearly as large as the originals, with No. 8, which is much reduced, and the superiority of the first in the rendering of the originals will be evident. Even making them the double size does not quite get rid of the difficulty, and these too have to be creased in the middle, which is not desirable.

"But manifestly the best and most effectual way for you all to obtain your wish, is, that, as you can do so, you will address yourselves to others as you have done to me; you will certainly at once gain attention, and perhaps enlist in your service those who have ample power to accomplish what you desire. It seems, too, as if the present were an appropriate time for making such an effort; the public are now well supporting the Arundel and other associations of the kind; although when, forty years ago, the late G. P. Harding started his Granger Society, his attempt was scarcely known beyond his immediate circle, and proved an utter failure. If only the public demand it, there seems no insuperable obstacle to their obtaining the reproduction of a considerable number of your portraits: at this very time M. Eugène Dutuit has nearly completed, by the heliogravure mode, fac-similes of the entire number of Rembrandt's etchings, at a price less than the average cost of a single one of the originals, and only a small fraction of the amount which his great rarities have lately realised. The public may also bear in mind that although the effect of an increase of demand for your original portraits would be to raise the price, because the supply is limited, yet the reverse holds good in the case of the reproduction, for the greater the number required the lower the price will be.

"These reproductions are satisfactory in an artistic sense also. No photographic process is capable of truly representing the variations of colours in nature or in paintings, nor can it faithfully image the proportions of solid bodies at different distances from the camera. But the case is wholly altered when the photographic process is applied to engravings, all the varieties of light and shade, the delicate touches of the etching needle, the finest lines or other mode of work can every one be then beautifully brought out and exhibited.

“It is peculiarly valuable from the point of view now under consideration, that the veritable expression of the portraits can thus be caught and fixed. In pictures how often we see this very essence of the artist’s genius obliterated by ignorant cleaning, or destroyed by the still worse and more deceitful practice of repainting. In engravings, in just a parallel manner, the plate becomes worn out or is retouched, and so in most instances, its value as a portrait is lost. But the photographic reproduction of an engraving in its early state gives the precise and accurate rendering which the engraver took from the picture, after such an examination as it would receive at no other hands.

“Thus it may be that this venture of Illustrations to British Mezzotinto Portraits might prove the first step of a distinct advance to a fuller knowledge of Portrait Art. For a long series of years those engaged in the publishing business have been in the habit of producing books with, as they often phrase it, ‘illustrations beautifully engraved on steel.’ It need scarcely be observed that there is not the slightest wish to disparage this class of prints; on the contrary, it is most satisfactory to see that a demand for them exists, and that memoirs of Walpole, Selwyn, and many others are the more enjoyed by their readers when the likenesses of persons referred to are placed amongst the pages; neither is there any desire to curtail the profits of the publishers; on the contrary, there is probably no class in the community so deserving of ample and substantial reward as those who aid in the grand work of diffusing information and knowledge. Least of all is it intended to convey the idea that there is any falling off in talent amongst the engravers of the present time from that amongst those of the past; take engravings on wood for example, and it will be apparent that recent productions more than hold their own and even compare advantageously with earlier ones, so it may be fairly inferred that such would have been the case with engravers on metal, had not, owing to the fact that publishers required such large numbers of impressions from the plate, the metals themselves been changed, and steel substituted for copper.

“But if, on full examination of these ideas by those most competent to judge of them, it should turn out that their adoption would not be detrimental to engravers or publishers, and would be of vast advantage in elevating public taste, why should any practice be persisted in, if it be possible to replace it by something clearly better?

“Perhaps, therefore, at some not very distant period, Engraving may break through and discard for ever her fetters of steel, and revert to that nobler material, by the use of which she has achieved so much in days gone by; will again supply the somewhat attenuated portfolios of the collector of really choice specimens, with works, each limited in number, but each, like their predecessors of the same description, full of tone and warmth, and life and beauty, and increasing in value year by year; and will then, as an elder would a younger sister, take by the hand that lately born and wonderful Photography, who, if left unguided, may so easily go wrong, as the millions of distorted images of humanity so universally met with sufficiently attest, but who, if led in the right direction, can multiply by thousands and thousands exquisite images, which, but for her could only be known to a few, and so disperse everywhere, and carry on to future times a development of human art fulfilling its highest function—the embodiment and representation of Truth, which is Divine.”

The Author then sat down, and, looking towards the prints again, found them in a state of perfect quietude, and without the slightest sign of ever having been disturbed. It then occurred to him that he might have dropped asleep and dreamt all the foregoing, but as this can only be a supposition, not perhaps resting on any sound basis, he cannot adopt it, but conceives himself bound to the departed great ones, respectfully to lay the account of the circumstance before his readers, fully trusting to their discretion and judgment for bringing them to the right conclusion in the matter.

P R E F A C E .

MORE than two centuries have elapsed since the introduction into this country of the then newly-invented method of Mezzotinto Engraving. From that time it was rapidly developed here, and was practised to an extent and with a skill and success not attained to elsewhere, so that it may justly be denominated our National Art.

In accordance with the decided English taste in painting, its productions are for the most part portraits, to which, indeed, no other style of engraving is so well suited; for, although not rendering outlines with the accuracy of the line method, it is unequalled in its power of giving softness to the carnations, delicate distinctions of textures, the very touches of the painter's brush, and general richness and brilliancy of tone with consequent life-like effect.

Portraits, whether paintings or engravings, call forth the utmost resources of the ablest Artists, and portraiture is even considered by many to be the highest branch of Art. It has been preferred to landscape, because the latter may leave not a trace in the memory; and to so-called historical painting, as this is generally false in costume, grouping, or attitudes (which the painter, if not present, cannot possibly delineate as they actually were), and would therefore be more justly entitled fabulous painting; but a real portrait is truth itself. Those about to be described can be thus commended, for they are almost always contemporary, and have had the greatest care bestowed upon them by both painter and engraver, in order to produce the most striking resemblance of their patrons.

British Mezzotinto Portraits, therefore, when early in impression and well preserved, are deservedly valued by competent judges, and appreciated by judicious collectors, and not the less that, from the comparatively slight work on the copper yielding so few good impressions, they are, as a class of prints, probably the rarest of all.

The system of their arrangement should be that most suitable for studying them in their two aspects, which may be called Historical and Artistic. Three different modes suggest themselves, viz., by the Painters; by the Personages; by the Engravers.

Portrait Painters have been numerous, and their names, with few exceptions, are not generally familiar; an arrangement, by them, therefore, would be confusing; and, indeed, although sometimes adopted by Continental collectors, it may be said not to have been attempted here except in the case of prints after Reynolds: these are, comparatively, but a small portion of the number about to be described, and a collection limited to them may, doubtless, include some choice specimens, but would exclude very many excellent and desirable works, nor would it be capable of illustrating the progress of the Art.

Arrangement by the Personages has been adopted by Granger, in his well-known work; and, until lately, generally followed here. Portraits, without doubt, excite a desire to know about the lives and actions of those whom they represent; and, therefore, there was reason for Granger's stating in his Preface that "a methodical collection of engraved heads will serve as a visible representation of past events, and become a kind of speaking chronicle, will delight the eye, recreate the mind, impress the imagination, fix the memory, and thereby yield no small assistance to the judgment." He divided the portraits into periods and classes, having probably taken the idea from the Pepysian collection of heads at Magdalen College, Cambridge, which are placed by "Soldiers" "Sailors," and so forth. It may be noted that these are truly called "heads," for whoever pasted them into the volumes, clipped off the inscriptions and outer portion of the engraving, leaving them practically valueless, and this, when Mariette and other true connoisseurs were proving that prints kept with care would retain, better and longer than any other production of the Fine Arts, their pristine brilliancy and freshness.

One defect of this plan is, that most of the portraits may be placed in more than one period, and many in more than one class; therefore, history is rather confused than clearly taught, and it is besides almost always necessary to consult the Index to find any particular person; even at the time, in 1771, Baron Heineken wrote, "Les amateurs feront bien, suivant mon sentiment de ranger les estampes Angloises d'après les graveurs" (Idée générale, p. 209).

Let all lovers of Art, however, respect the worthy Granger's memory, who, without having any conception himself of what Art was, yet rendered it a most essential service; for, by his novel and interesting book, he roused the attention of those educated and intelligent persons, called in his day "the curious," many of them became collectors, and preserved thousands of prints which would otherwise have been totally lost.

The direction taken by the taste thus called forth was that of illustrating Granger's own and other works with engraved portraits; it was carried to too great lengths, rare books being often made imperfect by having portraits cut out to paste in the blank leaves of unwieldy volumes, and the endeavour of rival collectors to outdo and outbid each other at last degenerating into a kind of mania, the reaction from which caused the next generation to overlook the real utility of the taste, and to unduly neglect this class of prints.

Most of these collections have been since cut up and dispersed, whereby the cost of mounting and binding, which was often done at great expense, was wholly thrown away; and the valuable prints might probably have sold at higher prices if not mixed up with uninteresting and worthless ones.

The most splendid collection of this kind ever made will probably long so remain—it is the illustrated Clarendon and Burnet, formed by Mr. Sutherland, extended by his widow (who is said to have objected during his life to the pursuit), and now preserved in the Bodleian. Of this a carefully compiled and finely printed catalogue was published, and a noted copy, which is with the collection, serves as an Index to it.

In 1793, appeared the work of Bromley, which adheres to Granger's principle of periods and classes, but makes several alterations in them. It was probably written in the main by Horace Walpole, who often lamented the diffuseness of Granger, and, doubtless, thought he could do it much better himself. It is a useful catalogue of names of portraits, but gives scarcely any detailed information about the prints.

Ten years afterwards Bartsch commenced the publication of his Peintre-Graveur: he minutely described the prints, and classed them by their Engravers.

This method has been followed by Dumesnil, and all similarly accurate writers, and is now generally accepted as the best. It is obviously the natural one, and is analogous to pictures by their painters, and books by their authors.

Collections thus arranged avoid the incongruous jumbling together of prints as different as possible in style and period of art, as also in authenticity and value; they quickly and surely educate the eye, and form and direct the judgment and taste, especially if so complete as to contain impressions from the plate in ALL THE STATES.

Except Mr. Sutherland, collectors have rested satisfied with the best impression they could obtain, and did not endeavour to procure these variations; but as an instance of the use of a knowledge of them, at Palmer's sale, in 1868, a "first state" of Rembrandt's "Hundred Guilder Piece" brought £1,100; a "second state," £270; another, less brilliant, "second state," £150; a "third state," 28 shillings.

Equally remarkable, and for the most part hitherto wholly unnoticed, are those of the Mezzotinto Portraits about to be treated of. As an example, a photo-engraving of impressions from two different "states" of the same plate has been prefixed to this work.

It may be objected to the arrangement of portraits by their engravers, that prints of the same person, by different engravers, would not be placed together; this is so, and consequently a reference to the general Index to be placed at the end of this work, will sometimes be required; on the other hand, having usually the name of the engraver and personage upon them, prints under this, but under no other method, carry their own direct reference to the text.

Bartsch arranged the Engravers in his work by the schools of Holland, Germany and Italy; Dumesnil, who described only the French school, has placed the Engravers chronologically. No method of this kind is practicable without certain fixed rules; for instance, whether the date of an Engraver is to be the time of his birth, or of his death. Dumesnil adopts the former, Granger the latter; much may be said on both sides, yet the arrangement by one rule is quite different from that by the other. Even if rules were settled, making chronology the basis of classification, causes much confusion in referring to the work for information, and it would be impossible to carry it on to the prints themselves, simply for the reason that a great number of them bear no date at all. The alphabetical system is, therefore, much to be preferred, and, for the prints, the arrangement by Engravers will be found at least as chronological as Granger's periods.

The relative Art merits of Painting and Engraving need not be discussed here, and the question may be left as it was when Evelyn wrote to Pepys that "some Effigies are so well done to the life that they may be put in competition with the best paintings." Art may be appreciated and enjoyed equally well, either by looking at the pictures displayed on the walls of spacious galleries, or by examination of portfolios of prints in the quiet retirement of the private room.

Engravings too, are an aid to the study of Pictures, and the descriptions will often be found highly useful for identification. In catalogues of portrait exhibitions, and in collections, many instances occur of personages or painters being unknown to or misnamed by the owner of the engraved picture, which might have been correctly ascertained from the print.

Horace Walpole accuses Granger of "drowning his taste for prints in the ocean of biography;" and the truth of the statement must be admitted. It is hoped that the Notes will, nevertheless, not be deemed superfluous: they are intended merely as aids to recollection, are as concise as possible, and the temptation to launch into anecdote has been almost completely resisted. Dates are plentifully given, for they cannot be carried at one's fingers ends, and they are important, often throwing light on the history of the print, and are also the best guide for obtaining further information about the personage from amongst contemporary records.

It is scarcely probable that Physiognomy will ever come to be an exact science to such an extent as to enable the truth of History to be determined by the character of the face of a portrait; yet it is very interesting, and may be not a little instructive to compare the appearance and expression of such with the idea formed in the mind by studying particulars related of the conduct of the individuals, the events of their lives, and the opinions of others about them. In many instances, too, contemporary writers allude to special traits of features or person which may be found again recorded by the portraits, thus proving their authenticity.

The prices will be found to indicate the number and enthusiasm of the collectors of the time. Of late, after a lengthened period of dulness, attention has been directed, as shown by a marked increase of value, to the prints after Reynolds, who had procured his works to be extensively and well engraved, sagaciously foreseeing, as he is stated to have said, that these mezzotinto prints would preserve his fame when his pictures had faded from their canvas. It can hardly, too, be doubted but that this revival of good taste will be extended to the works of his contemporaries, engraved by the same hands, and often of exquisite beauty, and also to those earlier and still scarcer prints, of such interest to the connoisseur, which were so eagerly sought for and so highly prized by the great collectors of bygone days.

Prints contained in the British Museum are marked "Brit: Mus.;" in the Sutherland Collection "Suth: Coll.;" for the information of those who may desire to inspect them. The number in the Museum is continually increasing, and as yet no catalogue of them has been published—a print, therefore may, possibly, be there, although not so marked.

The author begs to acknowledge the great attention and assistance which he has received from the authorities and custodians at the British Museum, and at South Kensington, the Bodleian, Hope Collection, Williams' Library, Eton, Bibliothèque (Paris), Windsor Castle, also from many private collectors. He defers more particular mention to the conclusion, anticipating that the number of those to whom he shall have been indebted will then be still larger.

This work, which is in some sort, perhaps, a record of England's title to a special position of honour in the practice of the Fine Arts, ought to be as complete and accurate as possible. Communications of additions and corrections will therefore much gratify the author; some ascertained during the printing of the present Part, are appended to it, and references to all will be given in the Index.

NOTES FOR THE READER.

THIS work is intended to describe all Mezzotinto Portraits published in England, Ireland, and Scotland, down to the early part of the present century; not including those by Engravers, such as S. W. Reynolds, and Charles Turner, whose principal works were produced at a more modern date.

Its scope is different to that of Bromley, who professes to catalogue the portraits of all persons who have resided in, or visited England, down to the date of his book, in whatever style or by whatever hands they may have been engraved.

A few prints, within the plan of this work, have not been met with by the author, and cannot consequently be described; in such cases references are given to the page in Bromley, or any other book in which they may be named. Bromley may have inserted some of them in error, and he gives several as different plates, which are in reality only different "states" of the same plate, and will be thus described.

A few prints, presumably not known to Bromley, have been met with; these, if coming within the scope and period of his work, are noted as "not mentioned by Bromley." There may be discoveries even yet of prints not hitherto known, and it is probable that prints have existed of which every impression taken has since perished.

Fine, scarce, and similar epithets, constantly applied to these prints in sales, catalogues, and elsewhere, are not used in this work; not that the prints are not so, but because the terms are indefinite. "Fine," for instance, may allude to the subject, the workmanship, the impression, or the preservation of a print; to the last it is properly applicable, but each connoisseur should have his own opinion on the two first, and the "state," if given, would decide the third point. "Scarce," too, conveys no idea of the number in existence, and the word “ unique ” sometimes met with is simply absurd ; for unless it can be proved that only one was taken, or that all taken except one were destroyed, it cannot be certain that there are not other impressions : to give some notion of rarity, however, in a few cases the number met with in examining collections and catalogues for this work is given as “ known.” A vivid idea as to this could be practically arrived at by any one who would make a list of such prints as he may fancy to have, and then try how many of them can be obtained in the print-shops.

Arrangement is, in the first instance, by the names of the Engravers ; these are usually stated on the print ; if without this statement, those bearing the address or “ excudit ” of, or which may be reasonably attributed to a known engraver, are placed in his works, others at the end of the known engravers under the head of “ Engraver not ascertained.” Prints with the names A : Browne, H : Gascar, I : Lloyd, D : Loggan, P : Tempest, R : Tompson, are placed by them, although it be not certain that they were engravers at all.

In the second instance, by the distinctive title, name, or surname of the personage represented, as given on the first finished “ state ; ” if not so given, the personage, if known, is placed accordingly, the name being within brackets, if not known, at the end of the engravers works in the order of the painters or designers.

Both classes of names are placed in alphabetical order ; compound names by the first letter of the prefix, in this differing from many writers on art, but in accordance with Redgrave and the Post Office Directory.

The names of the engravers are placed at the head of each page, and for further facility of reference, a number is placed, before each portrait or set of portraits of each engraver ; these numbers, with the name by which the personage is alphabetically classed, are printed in heavy letter. Names of the painters follow in small capitals ; these, when known, but not expressed on the print, have brackets.

When after “ states,” bear different names of engravers, or if otherwise thought necessary, cross references are given in the text ; when they bear different names or titles of the same personage, references thereto are given in the Index only,

Biographical Notes are omitted or very brief in the case of well-known persons ; particulars already given in the inscription on the print are not repeated ; less known persons are noted with more detail, as information about them may not readily be found. Different prints of the same persons being sometimes arranged in different places, the note is usually given to the first original print, and subsequent ones have a reference to its page ; copies have references to the engraver of the original. In variations to a different personage, the biography of the after state is not given except the person is mentioned nowhere else in the work.

A short article is placed at the commencement of each engraver's works containing a few observations on them, and stating what has been ascertained of the artist's life. These biographical details are, in most cases, but meagre ; even the date of death is often not known. This scantiness of information may have been the result of the fancy that engraving was merely mechanical, and that engravers were very unimportant people and should not, indeed, be ranked with Artists at all : their exclusion for nearly a century from the full honours of our own Royal Academy being an instance of the prevalence of such an idea in this country.

Copy is a term correctly applied to an engraving imitated from another engraving, or to a painting imitated from another painting ; but it is not correct, as justly argued by Joubert and others, to state that an engraving from a picture is a copy of that picture (probably the expression most nearly suitable would be a translation) ; still, inaccurate writers frequently so designate engravings, although it might just as well be said that the pictures were copies of the sitters, or models, or landscapes imitated by them. A picture may be engraved from by different hands, and the prints would then be similar to, but not copies of, each other ; prints which are copies are generally in reverse of the originals, as the engraver makes no drawing, which is necessary when engraving from a picture.

Description gives the length ; W.L. standing for whole length, when the entire person is seen ; T.Q.L. for three-quarters length ; H.L. for half length (if short or full it is so stated) ; position whether sitting or standing ; direction of the body, face, and eyes to or towards the side of the print or the front ; costume and any salient points by which the portrait may be readily recognised ; “inscription ;” “dimensions ;” “states ;” and “note.”

Dimensions of platemark and subject are given in inches and eighths, measured thus :—

H. Height ; Sub. Subheight ; W. Width ; Sub. Subwidth ; O. D. H. Oval Diameter Height ; (O. D.) W. Oval Diameter Width ; I. B. H. Inside Border Height ; (I. B.) W. Inside Border Width ; D. Diameter of Circle.

When a separate plate is used, as is sometimes the case, for the inscription, the H. only is given unless the W. differs from that of the subject platemark.

From the contraction of the paper, the platemark generally measures somewhat less than the plate itself, and occasionally one impression may slightly vary in size from another from the same plate in consequence of having been strained or laid down.

Handing will be most readily understood by looking in a glass, when every portion of the image will be “handed” in the direction opposite to that of the real person ; so when a spectator looks at a portrait, the terms right and left applied to the print mean the right and left hand of the spectator, but if the terms be applied to the person represented in the print, they will be the opposite, thus the “right hand of the personage holding a sword,” would be on the spectator's left of the print. Or let a print be turned towards a light, and looked through from the back, it will appear a "reverse," and vice versa.

The copper-plates were generally handed the same way as the picture from which they were taken, but the prints from these would be the other way, consequently, when hands are introduced, their action in the print is sometimes inappropriate. The earlier engravers used to take "reverses" to remedy this, the later ones to make their drawings not directly from the picture but from its reflection.

Inscriptions, or the lettering engraved on the plate, usually give the names of the painter, engraver, personage, and publisher, and sometimes curious and authentic information about History, Biography, or Genealogy; they are in various kinds, sizes, and shapes of letter, sometimes contracted, sometimes with words disjoined, sometimes with mistakes of spelling, all which could not be imitated except by facsimiles; they are, therefore, given in a uniform italic type, being letter for letter, mistakes and all, as on the prints, and at full length; in a very few instances, however, of long, uninteresting verses and matter, the first and last words only are given with a line between them.

Margin is the blank paper outside the "platemark;" curiously enough Dumesnil, in the "Avertissement" to his work, defines "marge" as being at the bottom between the subject and the platemark, but this should be termed the "inscription space." Some collectors consider that broad margins enhance the value of prints, and certainly they are not often met with. One reason of this was, that the English collectors were accustomed to cut off the margins to prevent the print from the creasing caused by contraction of the outside paper from drying after the printing; one of them, Mr. Gulston, is said to have given his young children the privilege of crawling under his table to pick up the trimmings of the Mezzotinto prints.

When the margin has been cut off close along the platemark, the print is still perfect, but if the cutting goes within that mark the print is styled "clipped." The copper-plates themselves were often cut down in consequence of wearing at the edge, or other reasons; these are styled "cut plates," and mark a variation of "state." The utility of giving measurements, instead of describing prints as folio, quarto, sheet, &c., is thus apparent. In a few instances no impression of a print has hitherto been met with showing the platemark perfect all round, the dimensions, thus uncertain, are then left blank.

Modern impressions are those taken from plates which were not broken up or destroyed, but were kept in stock by printsellers and furnished up to give impressions to supply the indiscriminate demand for portraits which set in after the publication of Granger's book.

Many of the plates after Reynolds and others are thus in existence at the present time ; the impressions from them in most cases vary from pale shadows to black daubs, and are almost entirely devoid of artistic beauty or value ; they are usually on thick, bad paper, although sometimes old paper has been procured, it is to be feared, for the purpose of deceiving the unwary collector ; and it is this deception which is so highly reprehensible, for there is nothing wrong in selling modern impressions, as such, and, as such too, buyers of them will be found ; but palming them off as original impressions is simple cheating, and the practice is calculated to destroy the confidence which should exist between collectors and dealers, and which many of the latter so thoroughly deserve.

Plate means the metal wrought upon by the engraver, and from which impressions or prints are struck off ; platemark is the depression in the paper of the prints at edges of plate, caused by the force of the press when striking off. Copper, which allows of the utmost freedom of handling and delicacy of execution, was used for all the plates about to be described ; but, of later years, steel, which yields a much greater number of impressions without wearing down, was introduced, and has now almost entirely supplanted the copper ; machines too have been brought into use for working the grounds on the harder surface. It will be at once apparent, however, on comparing the old prints from copper with the new ones from steel, that the latter are immeasurably inferior in high and true artistic quality.

Plates, not having any address or publication line, are sometimes called "private," being presumed to have been engraved not for sale, but for presentation, and to be therefore particularly scarce ; this distinction, however, is not to be depended upon, and the term has therefore not been used in this work.

Prints and Proofs being words often somewhat vaguely used, it may be well to explain that the engraver was accustomed, when working at the plate, to take impressions from time to time which are called "progress proofs," and are of interest as showing his method of work. When the plate was completed, the lettered inscription was engraved generally by another hand ; impressions taken before this are called "finished proofs," those after it "prints," the latter word, being, of course, in one sense, applicable to all impressions. There can, evidently, be little difference as to earliness of impression between the last proofs and the first prints, but there is a difference in value, because, the lettering marking a change of "state" of the plate, the earliness of the former is assured. When this became a test of value, as it did generally towards the end of the first half of the last century, tricks were used to counterfeit proofs, as by erasing the lettering from the plate, or by "stopping it out," that is placing paper over it when going through the press; such are termed "false" proofs. To check this dishonesty, engravers, towards the end of the century, were in the habit of scratching, sometimes called etching, lettering on their plates, which, when the desired number of proofs was taken, was burnished off, and the finished lettering engraved upon the plate; intending by this means, tantamount to the "remark" of the engravers of recent times, that the genuine proofs might be readily discriminated.

When the work on the plate became worn down, which soon occurred with mezzotinto engraving, it was "retouched," that is, reworked in the parts giving too faint impressions, to try to restore their original brilliancy; the result is sometimes tolerable if done by a master hand, but in most instances it destroys the harmony of the lights and shades and the general effect. Portions of the work and inscriptions were often erased and others substituted, in some instances being altered to such an extent that it is very difficult to recognise the original plate at all, especially when the personage is different; in other cases the inscription is merely varied to denote some change of title of personage; or alteration of address of the publisher; or transfer of the plate, perhaps, from the engraver to a printseller solicitous for gain not art; some of the latter, too, seeing that this told tales too plainly, made no alteration, but, when a plate came into their hands, struck off, in the most unscrupulous manner, worn-out impressions bearing the original inscription.

Instead, therefore, of describing them as "prints and proofs," all these changes, so far as have been met with, are noted as variations of "state."

Reverses, or counterproofs, are impressions taken not directly from the plate but from other impressions struck off on non-absorbent paper, being "handed," therefore, the same way as the plate but the opposite to the prints; they have no platemark.

The practice of taking these was very general with the school of Rubens, and extended from them to the earlier English Mezzotinto engravers ; great variation of effect is sometimes produced by it ; but these reverses are always fainter and of less mercantile value than the prints direct from the copper.

State of the plate is denoted by successive Roman numerals to each variation. Connoisseurs will, no doubt, from time to time, meet with variations not described ; but the rank as to earliness of impression, may, in nearly all cases, be readily known from comparing with the analogous alterations of other plates by the same engraver.

As the differences of "state" in this class of prints are generally considerable and well defined, it is not likely that later states would be altered by dishonest hands to counterfeit earlier ones ; there are instances, however, of this having been done, with wonderful ingenuity too, in slight changes of other classes of prints, especially painter's etchings.

Much of the foregoing will, to the experienced collector, appear unnecessary detail ; but, if he remembers that several of these matters used to puzzle himself when he began to collect, he will excuse the author for endeavouring to make them clear to those commencing the pursuit. Some further hints will be found in the "Print Collector," a small volume written by the eminent connoisseur, Joseph Maberly, and published in 1844.

INTRODUCTION.

ON ENGRAVING IN MEZZOTINTO.

SECTION I.—PRACTICE OF THE ART.

THE instruments used in mezzotinto engraving consist of the cradle or rocking-tool, the scraper, the roulette and the burnisher.

The plates intended for engraving should be of the best copper, very malleable and ductile, yet firm and capable of resisting to some degree of hardness if without shortness of grain or brittleness; free from veins, specks, or dissimilar parts, and of equal texture throughout. They must be well forged and hammered when cold, then ground, polished, and burnished.

Mezzotinto is executed by covering the surface of the plate with lines, sunk in it close to each other, in different directions; so that, if printed from, it would give a black impression or ground from the whole; and then taking away or diminishing the effect of this ground by scraping off, according to the necessary expression of any given design, parts of these lines so as to bring the plate to a condition similar to that which would have resulted from the lines being cut, in the usual manner of other engraving, in those places where they were wanting to express the shades or darker parts of the design. In effect, line engraving is the production of the shades on a ground uniformly light; mezzotinto engraving is the production of the lights on a ground uniformly dark. Earlom (and in this most succeeding engravers have followed him) laid in the outline of the subject with a strong, bold etching, somewhat resembling chalk engraving, and then laid in the ground; but the earlier artists laid in the ground first and finished the entire in pure mezzotinto.

To lay the ground, the plate is divided equally by lines parallel to each other, traced out in very soft chalk, at a distance of about one-third of the length of the face of the cradle which is to be used, as only that proportion of the instrument, by reason of its form and the rounding of its corners, will take at the same time upon the copper. These lines should be marked by capital letters or strokes of the chalk. The cradle is then to be placed exactly between the first two lines and passed forward in the same direction with them, leaning upon it with steady moderate force, and rocking it from side to side, until every part of the plate between the lines is covered with a burr. This process must be then continued between the other lines, and then again between lines drawn from the other sides at right angles to these, and then again between diagonal lines drawn cornerwise at right angles to each other. The plate having undergone the action of the cradle according to the disposition of this first order of lines, a second set is to be formed having the same distances from each other as the first, but so placed as that each space will divide those already made into alternate two-thirds and one-third: these lines of the second order may be marked with small letters or lesser strokes, and the same treatment of the plate repeated, extending also to the cross and diagonal lines. When this is done a third order of lines is to be made, dividing the first spaces into alternate one-third and two-thirds, and the cradle employed as before.

These operations constitute what is called one turn; but in order to produce a very dark and uniform ground, the plate should undergo repetitions of them all, until the ground will print perfectly black, and this should be without spots or inequalities, and have in every part a soft and velvet-like look; this uniformity being of so much consequence that it should be examined and tried with the greatest care before the scraping is begun, since, if it prove bad, there is no remedy, but all the labour bestowed must be given up, or, even in the hands of the most skilful, a defective work produced.

When the plate is grounded, and the subject traced on to it, the work is commenced by scraping and then burnishing the highest lights, after which the next lighted parts are scraped away, and so on, proceeding gradually from light to dark, leaving for the deepest shades the ground untouched. The greatest caution should be taken not to pare away the grain too fast, in hopes of having sooner finished; for it is not easy to replace it when taken away, and except on very shining parts, there ought everywhere to remain a slight cast of it. As, however, even with the utmost attention, the grain will be taken off in some places more than is proper, cradles of smaller sizes, or roulettes, may be used to restore it.

The foregoing is taken from the Art of Engraving by T. H. Fielding, London, 1844, and from the source used by him, the "Handmaid to the Arts, London, 1764." Compare therewith A. Browne's Instructions of 1669, given at page 107.

The greater number of artists finished their plates entirely in this manner; some, however, slightly touched up with the burin or dry point, and also etched the outline of the design before the ground was laid. Examples will be found in the works of George White (page 1572), and soft ground etchings of Earlom (No. 37, page 257) are to be met with.

In Vertue's manuscripts (see page 1423) occur the following observations: "Mezzotinto is done in one-fourth of the time of the burinator, nay, upon strict demonstration, I have seen, observed, and experimented, may be done six plates to one, in the same space of time." "May be called Rasurator." It does not appear whether Vertue included in this space of time the preparation of the plate, which takes much longer for a print in mezzotinto than one in line; probably he did not. However, what is easily won is easily lost, and Gilpin says that the spirit of a mezzotinto quickly evaporates, and that the effect is wholly lost in a worn plate. He also says that more than one hundred good impressions cannot well be cast off from a plate; but this, except in the case of very delicate work, is too low an estimate. But, undoubtedly, the number which can be taken from copperplates, prepared as just stated, is too small to pay; and therefore, for many years past, both material and mode of preparation have been altered; steel, and mixed, or even mechanical methods of engraving being adopted instead. This will fully explain the poor, cold, inartistic appearance of modern prints, when compared with the older ones; for it is not reasonable to suppose that the modern engravers would not be as skilful as their predecessors, if instead of steel they could work upon what one of the last of the grand old school (see page 1439) so fondly calls "the copper."

SECTION II.—DISCOVERY OF THE ART.

Descriptions of the prints alluded to in this Section will be found in Appendix of Earliest Specimens, page 1765.

The work of Leon de Laborde, published in Paris in 1839,* founded on researches made by him with great care in the years 1834 and 1835, amongst the historical collections of Germany and Holland, and on a tolerably extensive collection of mezzotinto prints in his own possession, may be considered to have finally settled many questions as to this matter previously open to some doubt, and to have satisfactorily proved the following facts:

* Before this date Dr. Hugh W. Diamond had drawn attention to the subject in London, by exhibiting at meetings of the Society of Antiquaries a series of early mezzotinto engravings, then in his possession, and he pointed out that Prince Rupert was not the Inventor, and also gave a list of these early specimens in a letter to Sir Henry Ellis, published in Archæologia, vol. 27, and separately. Laborde frequently cites this list in his work. Dr. Diamond published a letter in N. & Q., 4th ser. II., p. 3 (July, 1868), calling attention to these matters; and in 1881, the Author had the pleasure of meeting him, and of hearing from his own lips, how he saw a portfolio with a printseller whom he knew, and on looking over the contents thought them most curious, and purchased the lot for £40, then a large sum to him; after exhibiting them as above mentioned, some inquiries came about them from Vienna, and the same printseller offered a profit of £200, which was accepted and the prints passed into the British Museum. Even now they would bring more than ten times the price the Museum gave; and what the ultimate value may rise to cannot be foreseen.

Ludwig von Siegen (who was born in 1609, educated in Holland and at Cassel, entered on a military career, and was appointed in 1639 "Kammerjunker" to the young Landgrave of Hesse Cassel) had displayed great taste for art, and was thoroughly familiar with all the then known modes of engraving. In 1642, he was residing at Amsterdam, and in the month of August of that year he had completed, in a new mode, invented by himself, an engraved portrait of Amelia Elizabeth, dowager Landgravine of Hesse; the drawing for which he had probably made from life a few months previously, when residing at Cassel. This print Von Siegen dedicated to the young Landgrave, and Laborde gives a fac simile of a most interesting letter of his, still preserved at Cassel, which was forwarded with some impressions of the print, and may be translated into English, thus:—

"Serene, Highborn Prince and Gracious Sir, My humble services are ever at the disposal of your princely grace.

"Since my affection as a subject, rather than the hope of reward, has ever urged me to your service, I therefore (without regard to the fact that my services in themselves small enough, have by some been still further depreciated) have not wished to relax my diligence in devoting work and time to your service, as the present piece which I herewith humbly submit to your princely favour sufficiently shows.

"This is the print from copper, gracious Prince and Lord, which I promised to prepare for the ever praiseworthy memory of your Grace's mother, in order that many illustrious persons, acquainted with the actions of so widely famed a princess, might be enabled to possess the likeness of her person.

"But since I have discovered a new or singular invention of a kind never hitherto beheld, I have, on account of the nicety of the work, been able only to have few copies struck off, not thousands, as in the case of ordinary engravings, and therefore can with them only oblige a few persons. Accordingly, I have, as was just, made a beginning with your Princely Grace, and especially have thought it my duty and pleasure to dedicate it humbly to you, as the inscription placed underneath indicates, for these reasons; because to you, as eldest, and indeed, only son of the reigning prince, the representation of your Grace's mother could not but be welcome; for the rest, because I could not neglect to dedicate to your Grace as an extraordinary amateur of Art, such a rare and hitherto unseen work of Art.

“How this work has been done, no copperplate engraver or artist can explain or imagine, for, as your Grace is aware, only three methods of engraving on copper have hitherto been seen, 1°. Engraving or cutting in line (stechen oder schneider). 2°. Etching or touching with the point (ætzen oder gradiren). 3°.* A method hitherto very uncommon called puncturing, also executed entirely with points, but in a different manner, and with great labour, and therefore unusual (letzlich ein noch gar ungewœnliche arth, so man puntzeniren heist, auch mit eitel stiplein jdoch anders und gar mûhlich derwegen ungebrauchlich). The present method is, however, none of these, although here also are merely little points and not a single line or stroke; though in some places it appears like a line, yet it is all merely dots, which information I did not wish to conceal from your Grace as well skilled in art.

“I herewith commend your Grace to the Divine protection for all princely wellbeing, and myself humbly to Him and to your Grace’s favour.

“L. DE SIEGEN.

“Amsterdam, $\frac{1}{2}$ ⁹ August, 1642.

(Addressed) “A Son Altesse, “Monseigneur Le Landgrave de Hessen Cassel.

The print was then somewhat altered, and Von Siegen published it together with another large portrait, after Hondthorst, in which mezzotinto work is still more apparent, in the following year. In 1644, he produced large portraits of Prince William of Orange and his consort, and then appears to have ceased from the occupation for several years; strictly, however, preserving the secret of his process; and he even seems to have obliterated every trace of the means by which he arrived at and improved it; although, as remarked by Laborde (p. 71), there must have been a number of trials and early attempts.

In 1654, Von Siegen executed two fine plates; and in that year an event took place, but for which it is highly probable that this beautiful invention might have perished with its author. For, at Brussels,

* This appears to mean the style practised by J. Morin and others, said to have arisen from imitation of Vandyke’s etching, and practised shortly after this time by Lutma, when it was called “opus mallei.” It bears some resemblance in effect to the modern stipple.

Von Siegen met with a kindred spirit, also a soldier, and a brave one, of energetic and capacious intellect, and, closest tie of all, attached to, and skilled in, as evidenced by etchings executed years before, the art of engraving. This was Prince Rupert, and to him Von Siegen displayed his works, and disclosed his secret.

Tradition hands down that Von Siegen bound the prince still to preserve the secret. What exactly took place between them can now never be discovered; but it is not consistent with his making an absolute promise never to reveal the process, that Prince Rupert should afterwards have engaged Wallerant Vaillant to assist him in the practice of the art, and should have fully disclosed it in England to Evelyn and to Sherwin, all during the lifetime of Von Siegen. It is, however, most probable that it was agreed that the secret should not be indiscriminately published, but only made known to those who would properly appreciate it, and keep it from common use.

In this view of the matter there is no necessity for the story of Decamps, that Theodore Caspar a Furstenbergh obtained the secret by bribing a son of Vaillant, and it was probably invented to reconcile the fancied promise of the prince with the fact of Furstenbergh's knowledge. It is far more reasonable to suppose that Furstenbergh, holding a high position in a city which must have been frequently visited by Von Siegen and Prince Rupert, was personally well known to them, and learned the process of the art directly from Von Siegen; possibly even before Prince Rupert did, one of his plates being dated 1656.

The next who acquired the art was John Thomas, called Thomas of Ypres. He was a painter, and worked for the Bishop of Metz and the Elector of Mayence, and thus must almost certainly have become acquainted with Furstenbergh, who himself also painted. Thomas was appointed court-painter at Vienna, in 1652, and in that capacity accompanied, in 1658, the young Emperor Leopold to his coronation at Francfort. Here he is stated to have acquired the art, and his earliest print in mezzotinto bears the date of 1658.

It may well have happened that the three possessors of the secret, all of whom were men, more or less, of rank, position, and influence, also attended this coronation; and it is pleasant to imagine them, withdrawn from pompous ceremonies and noisy revellings, initiating their artist friend in the mystery, discussing, comparing, and studying its improvement.

But whether or not such meetings ever took place, it is certain that at this very place, and in this very year, Prince Rupert produced his superb print of the "Great Executioner," the artistic power and grand effect of which has always commanded the admiration of those who have seen it, and must at the time have strongly attracted attention to, and won respect for, the new art.

Laborde, from his remarks at p. 72 of his work, evidently intended to publish an elaborate dissertation on the early methods of manipulation, and the exact instruments employed. It is to be regretted that he did not do so, for his scattered remarks are very difficult to follow, and some of them do not seem to be accurate. It would be especially satisfactory to know the precise improvement found out by Blooteling, which has been conjectured, and perhaps rightly, to have been the cradle and the peculiar rocking motion which its shape (see page xxiii) allowed. Yet Laborde states that the "berceau" was used by the earlier artists; it, however, may have been an instrument rounded at the corners only, which would not have allowed of the rocking motion, and consequently should not be termed "berceau."

After all, the only source of information open to Laborde, is still open to any qualified person, and this is the close and attentive study of the prints themselves.

Some idea of the modifications of the processes of the art may be obtained by the examination with a magnifying glass of the "photogravure" illustrations prefixed for this purpose to each of the Parts of this Work.

SECTION III.—HISTORY OF THE ART IN EUROPE.

As mentioned in the last Section, Prince Rupert communicated the secret to, and employed Wallerant Vaillant (born, 1623; died, 1677), who had practised as a painter, and had executed some etchings, the last one with a date bearing that of 1658. It is, therefore, probable that his engagement with Prince Rupert took place after this; for, when he had acquired the new mode, he practised it only, and to a great extent, chiefly working at Amsterdam. A catalogue of his works was published by Wessely in 1865, which describes 206 pieces in mezzotinto, and probably additions thereto might be made by examining the Beringhen collection preserved in the Paris National Library, and other sources. Unfortunately, Vaillant did not place his address on these prints, and only four dated ones are known, viz., Wessely, Nos. 45 and 47, 1673, and Nos. 43 and 58, 1675; but No. 56 was probably engraved as early as 1660. Many of his works are fine, but they have a peculiar black appearance, which must have caused the title of "Schabkunst" to be applied to mezzotinto. Two of his brothers, B. Vaillant and J. Vaillant, also scraped.

The next remarkable artist was Johann Friedrich Leonart (b. 1633; d. 1687); he practised at Brussels, Nuremberg, Prague, and Berlin. The earliest date known on a print of his is 1669. Many of his portraits are small and highly finished. In a much more masculine style are the prints of John Van Somer (b. 1641; d. 1724, see page 1415), one of which bears date, 1668; amongst them are several capital portraits from his own paintings, and many Dutch interiors with groups of figures full of life and spirit. It is uncertain if this artist ever resided in England; but it is known that his brother Paul Van Somer, who is accordingly mentioned in the body of this work, did so, as also did A. Blooteling, G. Valck, A. de Blois, and J. Verkolje. These latter returned to Holland, continued to practise there, and produced (Blooteling especially) many works of merit.

Jodocus Bickart and other pupils of Furstenbergh and Thomas are mentioned at pages 1771, 1780. There is a portrait by E. Luederitz, dated 1668, and Benjamin Block (b. 1631; d. 1690) certainly worked as early as 1671. J. and M. Fennitzer, H. Popp, M. Dichtl, and P. Multz, all natives of Nuremberg, very shortly afterwards produced some curious prints.

Several well known and esteemed Dutch painters practised mezzotinto. Cornelius Du Sart (b. 1665; d. 1704) executed several spirited prints; the principal one of them, "Le tabac présenté," is dated 1685. Nicolas Van Haeften has left us a fine print of three men at an open window, and his own portrait. Michael Van Musscher (b. 1645; d. 1705) executed his own portrait, with figures of Time, and boy blowing bubbles, which is dated, 1685. Carel de Moor (b. 1656; d. 1738) also scraped his own portrait, a charming little work, dated 1690, and others, mentioned by Laborde. There are also prints by J. Van Huchtenburg (b. 1646; d. 1733), his pupil, D. Maas (b. 1656; d. 1726), Melchior Hondekoeter (d. 1695), J. Toornvliet (b. 1641; d. 1719), A. Van Halen, A. Houbraken (b. 1660; d. 1719),

G. de Lairese (b. 1640; d. 1711), J. B. Monnoyer (b. 1635; d. 1699), A. Schoonebeck, A Van Westerhout (b. 1666; d. 1725), and of more recent date, J. Stolker, D. Koedyck, and Cornelius Troost (b. 1697; d. 1750). Laborde includes also, L. Backhuisen, G. Netscher, A. Van Ostade, D. Teniers, and G. Kneller; he is certainly mistaken as to the last, and the others are very doubtful. It has also been supposed that Rembrandt practised mezzotinto, but this has not been proved, although nothing can be more likely than that he attentively studied the contemporary specimens; and it is almost certain that Von Siegen was well acquainted with Rembrandt's works, and very probably with that master himself. Laborde (at p. 358) mentions, in a cursory manner, a very curious and interesting print, also catalogued by Rudolph Weigel, No. 18,570, and attributed by him to Jan Van de Velde, jun. It is a large portrait of Oliver Cromwell, with the letters, "P. R. O. C." at the corners, and is inscribed, "Rombout Vanden Hoeye Excudit. Velde Sculp." It is worked with the burin and point, and appears to the Author to have been done in imitation of mezzotinto by one not acquainted with the secret, but who must have been a most skilful and painstaking engraver, and therefore he attributes it to Jan Vande Velde, sen. (b. at Leyden, 1598; d., circa, 1670), at the head of whose works it is placed by Nagler, but who expresses some doubts on the point. The imitation is very apparent when one first examines the groundwork with a magnifying-glass, and then glances at the effect from a little distance; and the print was probably executed during the life of the original, about the time of the discovery of the secret to Prince Rupert. There is an after state of it, with the address of "Carelse." A similar, but especially about the nose, not so characteristic a portrait, was executed in line, in substitution of one of the head of the set of Counts of Nassau, by Suyderhoof and Van Sompel. J. Vande Velde, jun., may have executed the print of Owen (page 1668); but this is mezzotinto, and entirely different in style from the Cromwell.

Jacobus Gole (b. circa 1660) and Peter Schenck (b. 1645; d. circa 1715) produced many prints; some have merit, but a great number are copies of English productions; others of these are found with the address of C. Allard, and several were engraved by H. H. Quiter. Amongst the engravers of Germany and the Low Countries, are P. van den Berge, Nicolas Verkolje (d. 1746), J. G. Seiller, B. Vogel, G. P. Rugendas, E. C. Heiss, and subsequently, the family of Haid, V. D. Preisler, and others; but nothing of remarkable quality was produced amongst them until Jacobe returned from London to Vienna, in 1780, and introduced there the improved manner of work ; amongst those who followed it was that excellent artist, Pichler. Townley also practised for some time at Berlin.

In France, the art was practised by J. Vander Bruggen (b. at Brussels, 1649), some of whose prints at Paris are dated, 1681, Sebastian Barras (b. at Aix, circa, 1680; d. 1710), Andrew Bouys, Bernard whose print of the Dauphin is dated in MS. 1692), Isaac Sarrabat (b. 1670), on whose prints are dates, 1695-1701, Meheux, B. Picart (b. 1673; d. 1733), H. Coussin, L. Lombart, and a few others. It is not surprising that so little attention was paid to this art in France, when we consider the great extent to which line engraving was practised there, and the pre-eminent excellence to which it had attained. Towards the end of the eighteenth century some capital and very interesting portraits were produced at Paris by Brookshaw.

As in France, so in Italy, the same effect followed the same cause, and the mezzotinto specimens are very few. They are by Ant. Taddei, J. M. Mitelli, F. Nassi, F. A. Lorenzini, and at a later period, by D. Cunego, on one of whose prints, dated 1790, is engraved, "Premiere gravure en ce genre faite a Rome."

Laborde is probably mistaken about the art having been practised in Spain ; but he gives correctly the name of Alexis Zuboz as practising at St. Petersburg, about 1729, where in the latter part of the eighteenth century Walker produced a number of plates.

The facts of Townley, Brookshaw, and Walker thus leaving their native country, and of Jacobe learning the art in England, prove what is very evident too from an examination of extensive collections, and is indeed generally acknowledged by continental art writers, that mezzotinto engraving in Europe, had, during the course of the eighteenth century fallen into complete decay and disuse ; and also, that the admirable works produced in this manner in England attracted attention in various countries, and led to a desire that this art should be understood and practised in them.

SECTION IV.—HISTORY OF THE ART IN ENGLAND.
SEVENTEENTH CENTURY.

At the Restoration of Charles II., in 1660, Prince Rupert returned to England, and nine years afterwards, in the hands of William Sherwin (see page 1052), the development of the new art, in the country in which it was destined to achieve so much, commenced.

Three prints are extant for which the claim has been, or may be made, that they were executed in England before Sherwin's print of 1669. The first is the small head of the Executioner (page 1773, No. 7), by Prince Rupert, published in Evelyn's book, and undoubtedly printed off then. But Evelyn does not assert that he saw the prince engrave that plate; what he does assert is, that the prince "was pleased to cause the instruments to be expressly fitted, to show me, with his own hands, how to manage and conduct them on the plate, that it might produce the effects I have so much magnified." Evidently, therefore, the prince had brought over his apparatus, and, surely, it is most probable that with the apparatus was this plate, which the prince then gave to Evelyn, but which was actually executed on the continent three or four years before. The second is the head of a Moor (page 1780), attributed to the celebrated Dr. (afterwards Sir) Christopher Wren (b. 1632; d. 1723). The foundation of this is a sentence quoted in "Parentalia" (London, 1750), p. 214, from Hooke's "Micrographia" (London, 1667). "He" (Dr. Wren) "was the first Inventor of the Art of Graving in Mezzotinto; which was after prosecuted and improv'd by his Royal Highness Prince Rupert, in a method somewhat different upon the Suggestion (as is said) of the learned and ingenious John Evelyn, Esq: Of this Art some original Essays are extant: viz., the Head of a Moor, &c., by the Inventor; The Executioner of John the Baptist, by the Prince; on the sword is the mark R. P. f. (i.e. Rupertus Princeps fecit), over it, an Electoral Coronet." This claim is disproved by Chelsum, at pp. 16 and 18 of his book, and his reasoning has since been completely confirmed. Laborde, however, p. 273, classes Wren as an engraver in mezzotinto in consequence of the discovery by R. Weigel of this single print of a Moor's head of which Laborde gives a fac simile in his work. Now, there is absolutely nothing to connect this print, which is undoubtedly a very curious and early specimen, with Wren, or to lead one to suppose that it is an English print, nor, except the foregoing sentence from Hooke, is there any proof whatever that Wren engraved any Moor's head at all. Now, what is this sentence worth? Hooke undoubtedly knew much about the microscope and other matters, but he knew nothing of engraving, and evidently inserted, in order to pay compliment to Wren, a piece of gossip which he had heard from some one else, and which gossip, in its first and principal assertion, was entirely wrong; however, the description of the Executioner in it is based on fact, and it is probable that the Moor's head print also was seen, and even that it may have been done with others (note the "&c.") by the inventor; but the inventor was not Wren.

Laborde (p. 272) places Evelyn at the head of English mezzotinto engravers, because he thinks he may have engraved a portrait of a Lady Abbess of which he gives a lithograph, and which is the third of the prints under discussion. In Laborde's description the date on this print is given as 1672, in the lithograph as 1678, either date, both being subsequent to Sherwin's "1669," deposes Evelyn. But there is no proof that the print was ever done by Evelyn, and there is every reason to suppose that the "E. L. delineavit," especially if the date be 1678, proves it to be a very early work of E. Luttrell.

It is strange that Laborde, to whose industry and accuracy of research so much is owing, should have permitted his enthusiasm to run away with his reason in these instances, and as thenceforward but little allusion will be made to his work, it may here be remarked, that his habit of ranging engravers according to the countries in which they may happen to have been born, instead of those in which they have entirely acquired and practised the art, is very misleading; for instance, surely the two Fabers do not belong to the Dutch school, or Simon to the French?

During the ten years succeeding Sherwin's print of 1669, others were engraved by him, by Place and Gascar, by Blooteling and his pupil, Valck; and several were published by R. Tompson, and D. Loggan. About Blooteling there are two questions, of considerable interest, not yet satisfactorily solved: the first, as to what the precise improvement in grounding introduced by him was, has been alluded to (page xxx); the second is, whether he acquired the art of engraving in mezzotinto in Holland, or after his arrival in England. His earliest works in this kind with a date are small portraits of Erasmus and Frobenius (Wessely, Nos. 14, 16), dated 1671; but, unfortunately, none which have a date (the last being Wessely, Nos. 8 and 28, h and d of this catalogue, see pages 66, 67) have any indication of the country in which they were engraved; the inscriptions, too, are all in Latin. Of course, the above would be decisive in favour of Holland, if Blooteling can be proved not to have come to England until 1673. His works in line do not clear up this matter; but No. 12 fixes the date, 1669, for one of the Furstenbergh prints; painted, too, by Th. Caspar de Furstenbergh in 1668. The mezzotinto portraits which may be considered certainly executed in England are given in this work; those which may be considered certainly executed in Holland, after Blooteling's return from England, are Wessely, Nos. 4, 5, 12, 15, 18, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 31, 37, 42, 48, 49, and more or less uncertainty exists about the remainder.

The next ten years witnessed a remarkable expansion of the art; in the earlier portion of that period we have the prints published by A. Browne, those by Verkolje, P. van Somer, Vandervaart, and others; but most of the Dutch-born engravers then appear to have discontinued practice, or returned to Holland, thus leaving the field clear for the English-born artists. These comprised E. Luttrell, J. Beckett, R. Williams, Rixon, Man, Oliver, Robinson, Clarke, Vincent, R. White; prints published by Lloyd and Tempest, and the earliest works of J. Smith. Amongst these Beckett and Williams are pre-eminent, their clearness and purity of style marking distinct progress in the art.

The Revolution caused no interruption to engraving; the love of art so prominent in Charles I. did not quit his descendants; Charles II. and James II. gave patronage and encouragement to painters and engravers, and this was continued by William and Mary, and afterwards by Anne.

For the years up to the close of the seventeenth century, J. Smith may be regarded as the principal mezzotinto engraver; many of his most interesting works being produced at that time; some of those already mentioned occasionally engraved within this period, and amongst the new engravers were Faithorne, jun., Leader, W. Wilson, Lens, Lumley, and Emmett.

SECTION V.—HISTORY OF THE ART IN ENGLAND.
EARLIER PORTION EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

The commencement of the eighteenth century found J. Smith the foremost artist in mezzotinto engraving, which was fast becoming concentrated in England, the works produced elsewhere being then few and of no great consequence. It is, therefore, not to be thought strange that England attracted to herself those desirous of cultivating the art. Thus, from France came J. Simon, and his taste, skill in line engraving, and abilities quickly enabled him to master technical details and to assume a leading position: indeed, he may be considered the successful rival of Smith during the latter years of that engraver's practice. The elder Faber, who had previously come over from Holland, commenced to work in mezzotinto about the same time as Simon; but his style is completely different. About the close of Queen Anne's reign were produced the earlier prints of the younger Faber, of G. White, who also had altered his style from line to mezzotinto, and subsequently we have T. Johnson, Kyte, and Pelham, who went to America and there introduced his art. Soon after the close of the first George's reign appear Robins, Beard, Van Bleeck, Van Haecken; some time afterwards, A. Miller, Preston, Heins, Bockman, Burford, and Carwitham. In Scotland, a few prints were produced at this time by Esplens, and R. Cooper, the master of Strange, afterwards so celebrated as a line engraver, who himself made an essay in mezzotinto.

M. Rouquet, member of the French Academy of Painting, who had been long resident in England, has observed in a work on the state of the arts there, published in 1755, that, at the close of the half century, "mezzotinto engraving was very much upon the decline in England;" that "although Mr. Smith had previously done admirable things this way, the work was then" so incorrect, that bad painters had a very good opportunity of imputing their own inabilities to the ignorance of the engraver.

That there is some truth in this must be at once admitted; for instance, a print by Bockman or Burford will not bear critical comparison with one by Beckett or Smith; but this inferiority was shared by the other arts: sculpture and architecture were at a low ebb, and the painters seem to have neglected the artistic finish of draperies and accessories, and to have aimed at face-likenesses only, in which, however, it must be allowed that they were very successful.

The progress of any art towards perfection is seldom, it should be remembered, regular; it now advances, now stops, perhaps even retrogrades, and then bounds forward again. Something, too, should be attributed to the singular deficiency of any taste for art, characteristic of George I. and George II.; yet, although the latter hated "bainting," his eldest son patronised Mercier, many of whose charming works have been preserved by contemporary engravings.

The accurate student of art history should, however, inform himself about everything connected with his subject, and should trace it out in its darker as well as its brighter days. He will find much in this period, so very little known to superficial critics, to reward his researches, and will recognise the genuine merit of such painters as Vanderbank, Jervas, Seeman, and Hudson, whose works have been so unduly, perhaps through ignorance of them, depreciated.

The prints of the younger Faber most completely illustrate the art of this time; they are satisfactory in themselves, many very interesting, all showing rare talent in manipulation, vast industry, and unceasing effort to improve; yet, compared with those of some who preceded, and of one, at least, of his contemporaries, there is felt to be a want, difficult clearly to explain in words, but which may, perhaps, be defined as deficiency in spirit and that artistic enthusiasm which always accompanies, and generally indicates, the quality which we designate as Genius.

However all this be, the time of indubitable recovery was fast drawing near, and the history of it is not a little curious. About 1728, Beard had removed from London to Dublin, and had there executed a few mezzotinto prints which, though the earliest engraved in Ireland, did not appear to produce much effect in extending the art there. Far different was the result when, some twelve years afterwards, Andrew Miller went over. He, in conjunction with the Irish artist, Brooks, founded a distinctive Irish school, which not only produced in Dublin a series of prints of remarkable merit, but which so instructed its young pupils, that when they sought a larger field in London, they quickly took the lead and gave the art that impulse which carried it to the point of excellence it immediately afterwards reached.

It would almost seem as if there were some subtle secret of the craft, which, when yielded by Simon, had, like the fabled Promethean fire, been seized and brought away by Miller, and then, in renovated vigour, restored by Mac Ardell.

SECTION VI.—HISTORY OF THE ART IN ENGLAND.
LATTER PORTION 18TH CENTURY.

The revival of the art, consequent on the introduction of the new blood of the Irish school, commenced almost exactly in the middle of the century. There exist a pair of interesting companion prints, produced in 1753-4 (see Faber, 174; Mac Ardell, 48), of about equal merit, which may be taken to illustrate the marking of the point at which equality ceased. The old school engraver was then over sixty, the new school engraver not five-and-twenty, and within four years Faber had passed away, and Mac Ardell had attained to an excellence not since surpassed, and which may therefore claim to be perfection. (See as examples, finished proofs of his Nos. 1, 168, 174.)

Other engravers of the Irish school were Houston, Ford, Jackson, Purcell, Spooner, and subsequently Dixon, Fisher, and J. Watson. Frye, also, was an Irishman.

In painting, too, a new school was arising, Ramsay, Reynolds,* and then Gainsborough, were coming to the front, and full mutual comprehension and appreciation existed between them and Mac Ardell. A few more years roll over, and then he too is gone. Yet his art did not perish with him, but was carried on by many hands to its most extensive development; still, however, it does appear as if it divided itself into two distinct streams, its masterly boldness and vigorous power being characteristic of the works of J. R. Smith, T. Watson, and Dickinson; its delicate grace and refined accuracy of those of V. Green, Dean, and Walker.

George III. was honourably distinguished from his predecessors of the name by his patronage of British Art; he favoured Ramsay and Gainsborough, he founded and took great interest in the Royal Academy, and he collected engravings. It has been alleged that he exhibited want of taste in only once having sat to Reynolds, and in encouraging such a painter as West, when such a painter as Romney existed. But the cause of this seems clear enough: the most intimate friends of Reynolds were in political opposition to the party in power at court, who would therefore prevent, as much as possible, such intercourse as takes place between a painter and his sitter, lest the latter should thereby be influenced; and West, from his straightforward, unaffected, and sensible manners, and from his strict rectitude of conduct, was personally adapted to win his Sovereign's regard; whilst Romney was shy, eccentric, almost morose, perhaps never had the opportunity of being presented, or refused it if he had. It is to be remembered, also, that West, when introduced to the king in 1767, had already achieved a very high reputation, both on the Continent and in England: his pictures were admired, and purchased at great prices by many up to and for some years after his death: he was highly eulogised by his brother artists, and was long their elected President.

* What Horace Walpole, early in 1759, says of these painters should be remembered: "Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Ramsay can scarce be rivals, their manners are so different. The former is bold, and has a kind of tempestuous colouring, yet with dignity and grace; the latter is all delicacy. Mr. Reynolds seldom succeeds in women: Mr. Ramsay is formed to paint them." This, of course, only applies to earlier pictures; yet it may be doubted if (with some brilliant exceptions, such as Ladies Waldegrave and Mrs. Pelham) Reynolds afterwards was as successful in this particular as either Gainsborough or Romney. But the right of Reynolds to be placed at the head of English painters cannot be questioned when it rests on his literary portraits, such as the grand heads of Goldsmith and Johnson (Marchi, 7; Doughty, 2; J. Watson, 82), apparently so simple, yet in reality the product of the combination of extraordinary intellect with the highest art.

A superb series of beautiful mezzotinto engravings illustrate the works of all these painters, as well as those of their less well-known contemporaries, who would in any other era have been in the foremost rank. Amongst these may be especially mentioned, Cotes, Peters, Zoffany, Cosway, Read, Wheatley, and Wright of Derby, after whose pictures (which are now attracting well-deserved attention) Earlom and Pether scraped remarkably brilliant and effective prints.

The following engravers bear to those already-named a somewhat analogous position to that between the last named painters and Gainsborough, Reynolds, and Romney, viz., Brookshaw, P. Dawe, Dunkarton, Greenwood, Grozer, Hodges, Hudson, Jehner, Jones, Judkins, Kingsbury, Laurie, Martin, Murphy, Park, Saunders, and Townley. The prints of Dupont, the nephew of Gainsborough, of Haward, and of Spilsbury, are deserving of special study.

The close of the century found Hoppner (who himself had scraped) and Lawrence in highest favour as portrait painters in London, with Abbott, Beechey, Copley, Opie, and Stuart, all in fair practice, following; found Ræburn, whose bold, manly style deserves appreciation, at full work in Edinburgh; and found poor George Morland, a greater genius perhaps, than any of these, drawing near the end of his dissipated life. None of these painters suffered discredit from any inferiority of the newer engravers who worked after them, amongst whom were Barney, J. Ward, W. Ward, and Young.

Although many prints of these engravers, and of some others, as G. Dawe, who rendered Ræburn with remarkable spirit, were produced in the early part of the present century, they have been described in the following pages, for these artists worked in the genuine method by which such honour had been obtained for the English school, and it was desirable to record all their works together. Other engravers, almost contemporary, also, in the early part of their career, executed good work; but afterwards changed copper for steel, and used mixed methods. The works of these, and of some still more modern, probably deserve a catalogue, for they include the names of H. Meyer, C. Turner, G. Clint, S. W. Reynolds, H. Dawe, W. Say, T. Lupton, and T. Hodgetts; but, as a whole, they cannot, and should not, be placed on the same footing, or rank on equal terms with the prints of the artists described in these volumes.

SECTION VII.—COLOUR IN ENGRAVINGS.

Paintings owe much of their effect to a variety of colours, which represent the image of the object from which the painting is taken, and a copy of a painting must therefore reproduce its colours.

Engravers work with black and white only, consequently the colours of the painting from which they engrave cannot be reproduced by them: but they exhibit their skill in giving, with one colour only, the artistic effect of the painting with many colours.

This constitutes engraving an original and distinct craft, and not an imitation of painting; and from its power of producing a number of impressions, and so disseminating knowledge, it may claim to have done for Art, what printing has done for Literature.

The most obvious mode of producing colour in engravings (indeed it frequently suggests itself to children, who often do mischief in carrying it out), is to tint them by hand with a brush and water-colours. This has been occasionally done with admirable effect, as some of the engravings after Reynolds and Romney, coloured at the time, and probably directly from the pictures, abundantly prove. But the skill and time of the artist who could do this really well, would not, as a general rule, be compensated by the increased value of the engraving, and if not really well done, the colouring would much depreciate the print.

In Jackson's work on wood engraving (London, 1839), allusion is made to various methods of printing in colours. One, (p. 481) presumably as early as 1543, others (pp. 711-715) at a recent date. Kirkall (see page 788) tried it on copper; and he used also to print from his plates in green or other coloured ink; and there are a few instances of this practice being adopted by other engravers. The most remarkable attempt by far, however, in this direction, was that of James Christopher Le Blon (born, 1670; died, 1741), who resided in England from about 1720 to 1732, and there published a work, in both English and French, dedicated to Robert Walpole, Esq., Chancellor of the Exchequer (which fixes the date of publication, not otherwise given, between 1721 and 1725). The title of the work is, "L'Harmonie du Coloris dans la Peinture, reduite en pratique mecanique," &c. He states in the dedication that in his pursuit of the "Coloritto," he "fell upon my invention of printing objects in their natural colours, for which His Majesty was graciously pleas'd to grant me his Letters Patent;" and he illustrates it with six curious prints, engraved in mezzotinto, one being a female head printed in the usual mode, and three others, the same head in the three stages of his process. The abstract of his invention is that there being three primitive colours, red, blue, and yellow, these can be laid separately or upon each other, by three plates, engraved correspondently on his principles to the colouring of the design, and thus the whole variety of tints necessary may be produced, the print being taken from the plates successively. The pigments should be transparent, pure, or bright, and agreeing in their tone or force of colour; Prussian blue and red lake of the best sort afford two of them, but the yellow is a hitherto unobtained requisite for carrying on this art to the first degree of perfection, and the only substitute is brown pink.

M. Cochin has remarked at the end of an account given by him of Le Blon's invention, that should it ever be again taken up and cultivated, there would be more probability of success in using a greater variety than three colours, and that different colours might, by separate printing-balls, be laid on and printed from a single plate.

Le Blon produced a number of engravings by his process, several being of very large size, and a list of them is given by Laborde (pp. 373-9), also some of those of his pupils, who were named Jean L'admiral, J. Robert, and Fabian Gautier.

It is scarcely necessary to add that, as Cochin had anticipated, the invention, after many years, was again cultivated, and that parts of its principle were adopted in the process of modern Chromo-lithography.

SECTION VIII.—COLLECTORS AND COLLECTIONS.

The race of past collectors of Mezzotinto and other portraits may be divided into two great classes, viz., those who pursued their object before, and those who pursued it after the publication of Granger's book. The pre-Grangerites include Prince Rupert himself; Prosper Henry Lanckrink (who marked his prints with P. L., sometimes taken for Lely's initials); Samuel Pepys (whose prints, now in the Library of Magdalen College, Cambridge, have been so sadly damaged. See page viii.); Prince Eugene (whose collection remains at Vienna); Edward Harley, Earl of Oxford (who placed his prints in volumes which were all lotted together at the sale after his death); John Nickolls, F.A.S., 1740, died æt. 34, Jan. 11th, 1745 (for his collection, see page 553); Hugh Howard (see page 320); George Vertue (who made a MS. list of Heads up to 1723, marking those with a square which he found "easy to be got," those with a triangle which he found "not so easy," and those with a circle which he found "very scarce." His prints were sold by Ford in 1757); Duchess of Portland (whose collection was sold in 1785); James West (whose collection was sold by Langford in 1773); Horace Walpole (whose collection was sold by George Robins in 1842, 900 lots of portraits, fetching under £1,700); Sir William Musgrave (see page 1289); these last three collections being those from which Granger states that he chiefly compiled his work; and the prince of English collectors, Joseph Gulston (see page 557).

Amongst those who amassed well-chosen collections, of which portraits only formed a part, were John Barnard (collection sold in 1798); Alexander Mangin (collection sold by Carpenter in 1810, see page 834); Sir John St. Aubyn (collection sold by Phillips in 1840); Edward King, F.R.S. (collection sold by Leigh and Sotheby in 1808).

The more remarkable Granger collectors were Richard Bull* (see pages 1289, 1351); Arthur, first Marquis of Donegal (who purchased a collection commenced by Mr. Gulston, which was sold in 1800 for £505, to Mr. Tyssen); Dampier, Bishop of Ely (see Dibdin's "Bibliographical Decameron," Vol. III., p. 345, &c.); Anthony Morris Storer (whose collection was bequeathed to, and is preserved at Eton); Samuel Tyssen, F.A.S. (whose collection was sold in 1802, and brought £1,030, exclusive of the Donegal Granger, which was purchased for £478 by dealers, who broke it up and resold at a profit, according to the "Chalcographimania," of 600 guineas); Sterne Tighe (1st sale, 1799, brought £2,216; 2nd sale, 1815, brought £548); Sir James Winter Lake (who formed a collection of 4 volumes, which, according to his manuscript preface, he closed in consequence of "the shameful Impositions practised by the modern Vendors of Portraits; and, also, the gross impositions of many of the Engravers themselves." See Introduction to Sale Catalogue. These volumes were offered entire at a valuation, up to 1st March, 1808; but no one purchasing, they were broken up and sold by Stewart in the April and May following, and brought £3,930); General Dowdeswell (who lost one collection by fire, but formed another which was sold by Dodd in 1809, for £2,377); Henry Ibbot (collection sold in 1818 for £2,237); Elizabeth, Marchioness of Bath (she was daughter of the Duchess of Portland, and grand-daughter of Harley, Earl of Oxford, both famous collectors; and her Granger, consisting of 3,300 portraits, was sold in 1826, bringing £1,553); James Bindley (who writing in 1775 to Mr. Granger about the collection purchased from Mr. Bull, by Lord Mountstuart, says: "You will ask me if I am not discouraged by the sight of so great a work: I am not; and I hope to be able in time to say with Corregio, 'Ed io anch' fon' Pittore.' — 'I, too, will have my collection of portraits.'" There spoke the true collector, and he acted accordingly. His portraits which were sold shortly after his death, at the ripe age of 81, in 1818, bringing close on £5,000); and in 1815, Woodburn issued a catalogue of another uncommonly fine Granger collection which he had purchased, marking prices to prints over a guinea value, but leaving blanks opposite some very great rarities, which are sometimes met with filled in by written prices. It does not appear to whom the collection had belonged; but Woodburn states that it was the “study of a gentleman of refined taste for many years.”

* Having disposed of his Granger, this indefatigable collector appears to have set to work again, and some volumes illustrated by him came to sale at Sotheby's in 1880; one of these, containing many drawings, portraits, and prints, brought £1,800; it was broken up and its contents catalogued and sold again at the same place in 1881.

The most extensive collection of portraits up to that time brought into the market, except that of Mr. Gulston, was that of Sir Mark Masterman Sykes, who died in 1823; they were sold in the following year, those down to reign of William III. bringing £6,718; those from Anne to George III. only £959. Then set in what may be called the dark ages, when no one appeared to know about, or to care about, or to set any value on engraved portraits; the Granger formed by John Townley (who was so very highly esteemed by his contemporaries, and who died in 1813), was sold in 1828, and only brought £1,640; a fourth part, perhaps of what it would have sold for fifteen years before; and the “Stowe” Granger, formed at great expense by Richard, second Duke of Buckingham, and containing nearly all the cream of the before-mentioned collections, only brought, in 1849, £2,560, and the continuation £1,440.

The following collections should also be named: that of H. P. Standly, sold in 1845, containing very full sets of prints after Reynolds, Lawrence, and Hogarth, and a vast quantity of illustrations, &c., relating to the English School of Art, all which were dispersed at very low prices; that of Edward Wenman Martin, who had obtained an extraordinary number of the very great rarities amongst the English portraits; but who, unfortunately, did not preserve all his prints with proper care; indeed, he is said to have permitted a favourite monkey to handle them (N.B.—There are, even now, several human beings who, if they get the opportunity, claw prints just as much as the animal would do); so it is not surprising that the prices, even for those uninjured in what the catalogue calls their “unadorned state,” were not very high; that of George Daniel, whose theatrical rarities and literary portraits were in the choicest condition, and whose sale, in 1864, appears to mark the revival of the taste for, and interest in British Portraits.

As might be anticipated, this class of prints did not engage the attention of the great foreign collectors as much as those of their own countries; there is a catalogue, however, of the collection of Mons. Brandes, private secretary to the Hanoverian Chancellerie, by Huber, published at Leipsic in 1794, which contains a large number of them, as also does that of M. Paignon Dijonval, by Benard, published at Paris, 1810. A collection of J. Smith’s works, and a few others, were disposed of at the sale of P. J. Mariette, in 1775; at that of the Grave von Fries, at Amsterdam, in 1824, were eight portfolios of English mezzotinto prints, one of which, containing sixty-one large prints after Reynolds, including Mrs. Pelham, Ladies Waldegrave, Duchesses of Devonshire and Rutland, Ladies Bunbury and Keppel, and so forth, brought 300 florins; and at that of Baron Verstolk, at Amsterdam, in 1847, were three portfolios, one containing the works of Earlom.

There have also been very extensive sales in London of the stocks of printsellers, amongst which may be mentioned those of Richardson, 1813-4; Boydell, 1818; Wilkinson, 1825-6-7; W. & G. Smith, 1849-51; Tiffin, 1860; and soon after, Messrs. Evans privately disposed of their stock through various channels.

The sales which have taken place since that time have been chiefly of prints from some of the foregoing sources, supplemented by a considerable importation from the Continent, where the productions of the English school were largely purchased in years long gone by, and preserved with the most scrupulous care, thus forming a kind of reservoir to supply the demand lately arisen for them in their own country. There does not exist, however, the least danger of an overflow or excessive supply, for many prints are absorbed into permanent collections, and many are taken out of the country altogether, especially to America; and, indeed, it seems reasonable that illustrations of the art, genealogy, history, and literature of the time of an ancestry common to both nations, should be as highly prized by the present Americans as by the present English.

Existing collections may be classed under two heads: public, or those preserved in some Institution from which they are not likely again to come into the market; and private, or those which are the property of individuals, and may be disposed of at the pleasure of the owners.

Amongst those in which British Mezzotinto Portraits are most numerous are:

The British Museum. This great repository contains the result of the labours of several individuals, obtained by bequest or purchase, amongst them the Rev. C. M. Cracherode and Dr. C. Burney, author of the "History of Music." Under the administration of the present Keeper of the Print-room, great advances have been made in classifying and cataloguing; and arrangements are in progress which will permit of the treasures being exhibited to the public in greater numbers than hitherto; increased

- knowledge and more extended cultivation of taste may be surely expected to result from this.
- The Williams Library contains a copy of "Wilson's History of Dissenting Churches, with Lives of their Ministers," illustrated with a large number of curious and scarce portraits, by Mr. John Simco, formerly a book and printseller in Air-street, Piccadilly, who bequeathed the volumes to this Library at his death, in 1824.
- The South Kensington. This is merely commenced: but it is to be hoped that it will be extensively developed, as great facility for the study of portraits would be afforded by having both the painted and engraved ones as nearly together as possible.
- The Sutherland Collection. See Preface, page ix.
- The Hope Collection, also at Oxford.
- The Pepysian Collection at Cambridge. See Preface, page viii.
- The Fitzwilliam Collection, also at Cambridge.
- The Storer Collection, Eton College.
- The Joly Collection, at the Royal Dublin Society's House in Dublin, presented by J. R. Joly, LL.D., very rich in Irish books and prints.
- The Bibliotheque Nationale, at Paris, contains a large number of English portraits; most noteworthy are those in the collection presented to the king, in 1734, by M. Beringhen. Other collections, wisely acquired by the French nation, were those of the Abbé Marolles (containing 155,000 prints, purchased in 1667, for 26,000 francs), Gaignieres, Clement, Begon, and Uxelles.
- The Collection at Amsterdam contains the works of J. Smith, Mac Ardell, Watson, and others.
- The Collection at Dresden is very extensive and interesting, containing, for instance, 30 pieces by J. C. le Blon; and at the same place is a private collection called the "Queen of Saxony's."
- The Collection at Munich* is stated to contain 84 portfolios of portraits; that at Vienna, 232 boxes of portraits, of which 217 came from the collection of Prince Eugene; and in the Emperor's collection at the same place, are 80,000 portraits, contained in 800 portfolios.
- The Collection of Her Majesty at Windsor Castle.
- The Collection of the Duke of Buccleugh.
- The Collection of the Marquis of Bute (see page 1289),

* Unfortunately, the Author has not had an opportunity of examining these.

The Collection of Samuel Addington, Esq.
 The Collection of Henry Percy Horne, Esq.
 The Collection of John Warwick, Esq.

There are also, without doubt, many rich and interesting collections preserved in various old family mansions through England (of some of which the present owners are perhaps hardly aware). The Duke of Devonshire possesses a very choice collection of the works of J. Smith; and the Earls of Hardwicke and Stamford are said to possess great treasures of this kind. There are also new collectors coming forward, such as Baron Rothschild of Paris.

The Author, however, can only name the more important of the collections which he has had the opportunity of inspecting, and may close this section with a mention of the collection formed by himself, which contains about ninety per cent. of the portraits described down to page 1753, and about forty-five per cent. of their variations, a number of subject pieces of the engravers of these portraits, a quantity of the prints mentioned at pages 1754 to 1764, several of the earliest specimens (pages 1765-80), and a series illustrative of Section III. of this Introduction.

The object for which this collection was brought together having been now accomplished by the completion of these volumes, the Author does not desire longer to retain it. But as he believes it to be the most nearly complete collection of this class of prints ever made; and as it seems in the highest degree improbable that almost any amount of time or money could now accumulate one equally extensive, it surely ought to change owners en bloc, and not be broken up and dispersed.

SECTION IX.—PUBLISHERS AND PRINTSELLERS.

Although the engravers whose works are detailed in the following pages were frequently themselves the publishers of their prints, yet their plates, after their death or retirement, for the most part passed into the hands of those who were publishers and printers only, and not engravers; in some cases, also, the engravers worked directly for the printseller, and the plates, as soon as finished, became his property.

It is therefore clearly desirable for collectors to understand something about these publishers, especially the order of their succession to one another, as this knowledge will be found most useful in discriminating variations of state, not only of mezzotinto portraits but of other classes of engravings.

The following list, in which, for convenience of reference, the names are placed in alphabetical order, will be found to contain some hints on the subject. It does not profess to give every publisher, and does not include the more modern ones.

It will be observed that the vast majority of them, as well as of the engravers, resided in London, and in a limited area of it, the boundaries of which do not very much differ from those of the present West Central Postal District, which even still includes most of the present dealers, as well as the great national collection of the British Museum.

Bowles, John. Established as a printseller at the Stocks' Market, opposite the Royal Exchange, and at Mercer's Hall, Cheapside, about 1727, a catalogue of an extensive stock being issued from the latter address in 1731. He afterwards removed to the Black Horse in Cornhill, and there published a great number of prints and new catalogues. About 1760, he took his son into partnership, and the name of the firm was consequently altered to "Bowles and Son;" but the young man died in December, 1762, after which the words "and Son" were erased from the plates on which they had been engraved; and also "Black Horse," "No. 13" being substituted, from which address a catalogue was issued in 1768. Soon afterwards John Bowles died, and he was succeeded by Robert Wilkinson, who had previously carried on business at 125 Fenchurch-street (page 767), and who continued at Cornhill until his death, after which, in 1825-27, the entire stock was dispersed, as stated in Section VIII.

Bowles, Thomas, was probably a brother or some near relation of the foregoing, and was established "next to the Chapter House in St. Paul's Church Yard." He carried on a large trade, purchasing and re-issuing many plates originally published by E. Cooper and others. He died, 8th April, 1767 (an entry given by Noble, Vol. III., pp. 429, 30; but, with his usual inaccuracy, he makes it apply to John Bowles, whom he imagines to have removed from Cornhill, and gives the date as 1757), and was succeeded by his son, Carington, who altered the address to "No. 69 in St. Paul's Church Yard." He was in partnership with Carver for some years, during which the name of the firm was "Bowles and Carver." As numbers are attached to many prints issued from this house, it is probable that they also published catalogues. Carington Bowles died at Kensington Gore, 20th June, 1793.

These two firms of Bowles appear always to have had a good mutual understanding; they were partners in many prints, and no instance has been met with to indicate any rivalry or opposition between them.

Boydell, John and Joseph. (See pages 81, 538.) The first address of John, about 1752, was at the "Unicorn, the corner of Queen Street in Cheapside" (page 1402), afterwards, "No. 90 Cheapside," was the address; and, when embarking on the illustration of Shakespeare, additional premises were taken in Pall Mall, and styled the "Shakespeare Gallery." A number of catalogues of their large stock were published by this firm, amongst them one in French, dated 1779. The stock, when dispersed, in 1818, as stated in last Section, brought over £40,000 (see page 1133).

- Jackson, M. See Smith, Joseph.
- Jefferys, Thomas, at the corner of St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross, whence many after states of plates by Brooks, Bockman, and Van Haecken were published in conjunction with W. Herbert, at the Golden Globe, on London Bridge. The latter ceased to carry on the business of a printseller, after the houses on the bridge were taken down; but distinguished himself as an antiquarian, by editing Ames's History of Printing, and as of practical ability by his proposition for floating fire-engines. He died, 15th March, 1795, aged 76. Jeffryes took into partnership William Faden, who afterwards succeeded him at Charing Cross (pages 173, 1430).
- Jefferyes. See Bull.
- Jordan, Timothy. See Taylor.
- King, John, at the Globe in the Poultry (page 1095*), put his name on a few after states of mezzotinto prints, but purchased several plates by Lens, Simon, and others. His principal business was connected with other styles of engraving. Noble states, Vol. III.,
p. 429, that John King, sen., died, 7th Sept., 1738, leaving £10,000; whether there were two of the name, or whether the

- statement is another of Noble's errors, is not clear ; but it is certain that a John King, printseller in the Poultry, died 26th July, 1759.
- Kitchin, Thomas, No. 59 Holborn-hill (page 530) ; at the Star, Holborn-hill (page 1325). His plates appear to have afterwards come into the possession of Sayer.

- Pulley, G. See Smith, Joseph.
- Richardson, William, at 68 High Holborn, 1779 ; at 174 Strand, 1786 ; at York House, 31 Strand, 1791. Stock sold in 1813.
- Ryall, John, in partnership with Robert Withy, opposite Salisbury-court in Fleet-street, 1755 (page 402) ; at Hogarth's Head in Fleet-street ; afterwards alone (page 1721). Withy, in Sweeting's Alley, when the fire of 10th November, 1759, destroyed his place ; afterwards at the Dunciad, opposite Jerusalem Coffee-house in Cornhill (page 1021).
- Ryland and Bryer. See pages 123-4. Their bankruptcy occurred in 1771. Bryer's address only in Cornhill, 1770 (page 586), 1776 (page 1030). Ryland's address only, 1771 (page 578).
- Savage, I. Successor to Beckett.
- Sayer, Robert, succeeded Philip Overton at the Golden Buck in Fleet-street, sometimes described as "near St. Dunstan's Church," or "near Serjeant's Inn," 1766 (page 680) ; opposite Fetter-lane in Fleet-street (page 428) ; No. 53 Fleet-street, 1771 ; was in partnership with J. Bennett, 1775-80. Sayer, who used to reside at Richmond, died at Bath, 29th Jan., 1794, aged 69, and he was succeeded by Laurie (see page 796) in partnership with Whittle. They published a catalogue of their large stock, in 1795.
- Between Sayer and Bowles great rivalry existed, and a large number of copies of prints, originally published by the one house, was issued by the other.

Shropshire, Walter, in partnership with William Shropshire in New Bond-street (page 1509); afterwards alone at 102, subsequently 158 of same street, where he was succeeded, about 1779, by Dickinson and Watson. He died at Hendon, Middlesex, 17th Oct., 1785. Dodd says that his stock came into the hands of Boydell.

Griffin, next ye Globe Tavern, in Fleet-street (see pages 718, 1019); succeeded by M. Jackson, at Rembrandt's Head, the corner of Brides-court Fleet-street; succeeded by George Pulley, at same address (page 1019).

Stockdale, J., opposite Burlington House, 1782 (page 568).

Taylor, Thomas, at the Golden Lion, over against Serjeants' Inn in Fleet-street (page 297); was succeeded by Timothy Jordan (page 1689), who took into partnership Thomas Bakewell, who afterwards obtained the entire business, first carried on "next the Horn Tavern in Fleet-street," then removed to "against Birchin Lane in Cornhill," at which place a great fire occurred on 10th Nov., 1759. He was succeeded by Eliza Bakewell, who took into partnership Henry Parker, who succeeded to the entire about 1767, and altered the address to "82 Cornhill."

Thane, John, Gerrard-street, Soho, 1774 (pages 1321, 1751). He was a good judge, and used to write his name backwards, thus, "Enaht," on the back of his prints. His stock was sold in 1818-9, after his death.

Allen, William, Dame-street (page 1045). His descendants still reside near Dublin, and carried on a similar business to about seven years ago.

Hanbury, Michael, at the Bear, George's-lane (page 1018). He was an engraver, and produced a very curious print, in the line manner, of St. Patrick; there is also extant a mezzotinto of a Holy Family after Maratti, inscribed M Hanbury fecit 1748.

Lyons, Edward, on Essex Bridge (page 1740).

Monaghan, Patrick, in Bride-street (page 1024).

Napper, Charles, George's-lane; probably successor to Hanbury.

Wilkinson, William, in Chequer-lane (page 1021). His plates appear to have been acquired by Allen.

BRITISH MEZZOTINTO PORTRAITS.

FRANCIS EDWARD ADAMS received a premium from the Society of Arts in 1760; the time of his death is not known. There is a clever caricature by him of a girl in a high head-dress, whose old mother scarcely knows her, and exclaims: "Heyday! Is this my daughter Anne?" published by J. Bowles, Decr. 6, 1773: F. E. Adams, invt. et fecit.

Probably intended as a companion to "Earth" and "Water," by Spooner, after Pyle, which were published by J. Bowles, 1768.

W. T. ANNIS is not mentioned by Redgrave, nor have the particulars of his life been discovered. He was one of the engravers of that remarkable work, the "Liber Studiorum" of J. M. W. Turner. There is a large plate by him of tigers fighting, after Northcote, published, May 1, 1806, at Church Row, Hampstead: also a portrait of Count Bruhl, after Northcote, engraved in conjunction with S. W. Reynolds, and published by the latter in 1803.

I. Inscription in open letters.

II. As described.

Born in London, Aug. 29, 1768, son of an actor, engaged in the York Company, where he married Mrs. Mills who died 1797, appeared in London 1791, and a few years afterwards made a great hit as Dr. Pangloss; his characters were not very numerous, but were highly-finished delineations, particularly Antolycus, Touchstone, and other Shakesperian parts; retired from the stage in 1830, died at his house, near Botley, Hants, March 13, 1837.

4. Edward Fitz-Gerald. NUGENT.

H. L., directed towards right, looking to front, hair low on forehead, coat buttoned across chest, in grounded border, with interval of white space between. Under, Drawn by T. Nugent. Engrav'd by W. T. Annis. Edward Fitz-Gerald, Esqr. New Park, Wexford. H. 15; Sub. $11\frac{1}{8}$; W. 11; Sub. $8\frac{5}{8}$.

I. At bottom Proof.

Born at Newpark, in parish of Killisk, about 1770; of considerable property and position; became one of the popular leaders in the county and held command in the insurgent forces in 1798, when his place was demolished by a detachment of General Needham's troops; on failure of the movement he surrendered himself, and having been some time imprisoned in Dublin and England, he was pardoned on condition of his residing out of the country; he is stated to have died at Hamburg, in 1807.

5. Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin. OPIE.

Full H. L., sitting, directed towards right, facing and looking towards left, hair bound up with veil, plain white dress, open at throat; in grounded border. Under, J. Opie, R. A. pinxt. London: Published June 1 1802 by W. T. Annis 30 Norfolk-street. W. T. Annis, sculpt. Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin. Author of a Vindication of the Rights of Woman. H. 15; Sub. $10\frac{1}{8}$; W. 11; Sub. 8.

Born 1759; in her 24th year set up a school at Islington; adopted several of the ideas let loose by the French Revolution, and wrote an answer to Mr. Burke's essay; became violently attached to Fuseli the painter; afterwards to a Mr. Imlay; advocated woman's rights, free love, and so forth, theories not quite unheard of at the present time; married William Godwin the novelist, but died soon after, on 10th Sept., 1797, having given birth to a daughter, who afterwards became the wife of Percy Bysshe Shelley.

PHILIP AUDINET; born in Soho 1766, apprenticed to John Hall the line engraver and worked in that manner, the following being his only known essay in mezzotinto; died in Great Russell St, Decr. 18, 1837, buried in St. Giles's Church.

S. Audinet.

Short H. L., directed to front, facing and looking towards left, plain dress. Under, P. Audinet, Scu. S. Audinet. H. $6\frac{1}{3}$; Sub. $5\frac{1}{2}$; W. $4\frac{1}{2}$.

One known, and it is stated that only this impression was taken from the plate, which Bromley says was done for improvement when the artist was a boy: Mr. Townley has written under it that the personage was a watchmaker, and brother of the artist; Bromley says he was a teacher of the French language. Samuel Audinet, Minister of the French Protestant Chapel in Crown St. Soho, died in Bloomsbury, aged 75, on 11th March, 1813; he may possibly have been the father.

E. W. A.: Were it not that the initials of the Christian names are different, it would be considered that this print was by Adams, and possibly it is so, and a mistake may have been made about the initials.

Richard Ford. LAWRENSON.

Nearly W. L., sitting, directed to front, facing and looking towards right, wig, neckcloth, bunch of flowers in buttonhole of coat, hands clasped over handkerchief in lap, riding-whip, &c., on table to right. Under, Lawrenson Pinxt. E. W. A. Fecit. Mr. Richard Ford late of Chertsey in Surry. Publish'd Novr. 1st 1774. H. $16\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. $14\frac{3}{4}$; W. $12\frac{1}{4}$.

WILLIAM BAILLIE was born at Kilbride, Co. Carlow, June 5th, 1723; he entered the army and served at Culloden; was made a commissioner of stamps, from which office he retired after 20 years' service in 1795, and died at Paddington, Decr. 22, 1810.

His taste for engraving was very great, and his powers of manipulation equally so, having practised nearly all the different methods of the art; his most important works are his etchings, and his retouch of Rembrandt's Hundred Guilder print is considered by Joubert so perfect that it may well be taken for the first state from Rembrandt's own hand.

Nearly all his prints were published in a collected form by Boydell, and there were several issues of them; the plates and remaining impressions were disposed of in Boydell's sale, June 6th, 1818, for £640 10s. od.

The following portraits come within the plan of this work. Mention has been made by Redgrave and others (though not by Ottley) of Baillie's having scraped a portrait of himself after Hone, but the print has not been met with; he etched a small head of himself, and there is a print of him in stipple, one of which may have been mistaken for a scraping.

1. Sophonisba Anguisciola. IPSA.

T. Q. L. sitting, directed towards left, facing and looking to front, painting a Virgin and Child, the canvas on easel to left, carved arch at top of print. Under, *Ipsa pinxit. I. As described.

II. Modern.

Born at Dordrecht 15 June, 1623; with his brother John rose to the highest power in Holland; was Commissary of the Navy when the Dutch in 1667 burnt the English ships in the Thames; early in 1672 was accused of conspiring against the life of William of Orange, and was condemned to exile on very slight evidence, the people, however, murdered both the brothers shortly after.

3. (Camillus Hone.) HONE.

H. L., directed towards right, holding and playing on pipe, skin of an animal round his shoulders. Under, Painted by Mr. Hone. Engrav'd by Captn. Baillie 1771. The Piping Boy Publish'd 1st May 1771. H. $12\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. $11\frac{1}{2}$; W. 9.

Younger son of Nathaniel Hone, R. A., portrait painter; went to the East Indies about 1780 where he practised for several years, on his return settled in Dublin, and was appointed to a situation in the Stamp Office there; he died in 1837.

4. James Duke of Monmouth. WYCK. & NETSCHER.

W. L., on horseback, directed to left, facing and looking to front, castle and houses in background to left, village in flames in distance to right, troops of cavalry fighting, gunners firing from ramparts. From a Painting by Netcher and Wyke in the Collection of Wm. Baillie Esqr. 30 Sept. 1774.

I. As described.

II. "meseranter" in first Latin verse altered to meserantur.

III. Same again altered to miserantur.

IV. Without separate plate.

Son of Charles II., by Lucy, eldest daughter of Richard Walter of Haverford west, Co. Pembroke. Grammont says that his face was extremely handsome, and yet manly, neither inanimate nor effeminate; displayed great valour at Mæstricht in the war against the Dutch, and again in 1678 with the Dutch against the French; in the insurrection in 1679 in Scotland, defeated the covenanters at Bothwell-bridge, but was ordered to leave the kingdom on the rumour of a marriage having taken place between his father and mother, which Charles disproved by a solemn declaration enrolled in Chancery. On Charles's death he landed in England on 11th June, 1685, and raised the standard of rebellion against James, but though largely supported, was defeated at Sedgemoor on 5th July, taken prisoner, and having been attainted by an act passed on 15th June, was executed without a trial on Tower-hill on 15th July, 1685.

For the last four years of his life he had been estranged from his Duchess, and violently attached to Lady Henrietta Wentworth, but there was a reconciliation with his wife before his execution.

WILLIAM BARNARD commenced the practice of the art towards the close of the last century, some of his works bearing date of 1798; he probably died about 1819, as he is mentioned in the Annals of the Fine Arts for that year, but not subsequently.

His works are executed in a solid and bold manner.

There is a portrait of the Rev. Francis Crossman after W. Salter, published in 1838, engraved by William Barnard, but the style is much more modern, and does not resemble that of the portraits about to be described; the following in Evans' Catalogue are also probably by the same more modern hand:—

- No. 19, 851, Richard Oastler, after Illidge.
- „ 20, 252, John Pering, 4to. after do.
- „ 20, 427, George Lord Poltimore, after Middleton.
- „ 21,263, John Shore, æt 82, 1824, after Illidge.

As described. Brit: Mus.

Evans' Catalogue, No. 12,834, seems to allude to a lettered impression.

Born Janr. 1755, pupil of Penny, R. A. Elected A. R. A. 1787, R. A. 1814, died in Great Russell Street, 6th February, 1828.

2. Walter Hussey Burgh. HAMILTON.

H. L., in oval, in square frame, directed to right, facing towards and looking to front, own hair, frill, plain coat. Under, Painted by Hamilton. Engrav'd by Barnard. Lord Chief Baron Burgh. "This acknowledged Light." "The noblest work of God." This print is with the utmost Esteem dedicated to the Right Honble. John Foster, by Sir Jerome FitzPatrick. From an Original in his possession. H. 15; Sub. 12 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 11; O. D. H. 9 $\frac{3}{8}$, W. 7 $\frac{3}{4}$.

Born about 1743, of an ancient family in the Co. Kildare; through the extravagance of his father obliged to go to the bar, where his eloquence soon distinguished him; brought into parliament by the Duke of Leinster; became associated with Grattan, and resigned the office of Prime Serjeant when he considered it inconsistent with his duty to his country; on a change of measures appointed Chief Baron of the Exchequer, which he held for little more than a year, dying at Armagh 24th of September, 1783. The print was engraved some years after this.

Of Sydling St. Nicholas, Co. Dorset. Born 10th April, 1744, created a baronet 1774, died 13th Novr. 1807.

WILLIAM WHISTON BARNEY was the son of a flower painter, who was drawing-master at the Royal Military Academy. He was a pupil according to Redgrave, of S. W. Reynolds, and practised at the commencement of the present century, but quitted his profession, entered the army, and rose to some distinction in the Peninsular War. Redgrave says this took place about 1805, but from the dates on his prints it was probably four or five years later.

His works are executed with intelligence and taste.

A pair of large mezzotinto prints, "Morning" and "Evening," after Wheatley, were engraved by J. Barney, and published by him from Tottenham-Court Road, Feb. 1793. The father and brother of W. W. B. were both named Joseph.

Surry Side of Westminster Bridge. H. $28\frac{1}{8}$; Sub $26\frac{1}{2}$; W. $17\frac{1}{2}$; Sub.. 17.

Eldest daughter of 1st Earl Spencer. Born 7th June, 1757; married 5th June, 1774, to William 5th Duke of Devonshire; died 30th March, 1806.

Fulcher mentions a portrait by Gainsborough as exhibited in the Royal Academy in 1778 (which may have been the now celebrated stolen picture, if that represented this Duchess of Devonshire), but this portrait appears to have been taken when the Duchess was older than at that date; the engraver seems not to have known the year in which the picture, which is now in the possession of Earl Spencer, was painted.

7. John Hookham Frere. HOPPNER.

Lieutenant-General 1814, died at Kew Green, 10th July, 1819.

THOMAS BEARD is stated by Strutt to have been a native of Ireland; in this he is followed by Redgrave. There does not appear, however, any evidence of it, as was remarked in a letter from a Dublin correspondent (who was probably Alexander Mangin), in Gentleman's Magazine, Vol. LVI., p. 418; and it is likely that he came from London to Ireland, from the fact that he had no means of learning his art in the latter place, his own being the first mezzotintos executed there: No. 2 also is referable to an earlier date than the others. There is a print by Beard of Liberality and Modesty after Guido (the same subject as afterwards engraved by Strange), of a later date than any of the portraits, being published by John Bowles and Son, at the Black Horse in Cornhill, so he probably returned to London.

1. Hugh Boulter. ASHTON.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed towards left, facing and looking to front, robes, bands, long wig, right hand holding a closed book on knee, left hand on arm of chair, to left a table on which is a trencher cap, behind it a bookcase. Under, Mat Ashton Pinx: Th: Beard Fecit. Reverendiss: Dom̃ Hugo Archiepiscopus Armæchanus Totius Hiberniæ Primas & Metropolitanus, Unus é primarijs ejusdem Regni Justitiaris. Anno Dom: 1728. H. 13 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{1}{8}$; W. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$.

I. As described. Two known.

II. Plate slightly reduced at top and sides, retouched and background made lighter, artists' names erased, inscription strengthened; at bottom, Sold by John Orpin in Crane Lane.

This portrait appears much younger than Boulter's age in 1728, it may therefore have been painted when he was Bishop of Bristol.

Born in London, Jan. 4, 1671, educated at Merchant Taylor's school and Ch. Ch. Oxford, attended George I. as his chaplain when going to Hanover in 1719, and was appointed tutor to Prince Frederic: consecrated Bishop of Bristol, 15th of Novr. 1719, Archbishop of Armagh 1724; the latter appointment he showed much reluctance to take, but was commanded to do so by the King. He was very charitable and anxious to promote useful works, and was the author of several charges and sermons, and of interesting letters. He embarked for England in June, 1742, and after two days' illness died at St. James's Place, Sept. 27 of that year. He left the bulk of his property to improve the condition of the Irish clergy, but is considered to have advocated the filling of high appointments in the church by natives of England.

2. Jane Countess Clarendon. KNELLER.

H. L., in oval, directed and looking to front, flowing hair, lock over left shoulder, loose dress, right hand to breast. Under, Sr. Godfrey Kneller pinx. Tho: Beard fecit. The Right Honourable the Countess Clarendon. Printed & Sold by John Bowles Print & Mapseller at Mercers Hall in Cheapside. H. 13 $\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{3}{8}$; W. 10.

I. As described.

II. Retouched, "Right" corrected to Right, "Mercers Hall in Cheapside" erased; instead, the Black horse in Cornhill.

Daughter of Sir William Leveson Gower, married Henry, last Earl of Clarendon and Rochester of the Hyde family, and died May 24, 1725. She was the object of general admiration, yet conducted herself with the utmost propriety. Lord Lansdowne addressed a poem to her, and she was Swift's "principal goddess." One of her daughters married William Earl of Essex, the other Charles Duke of Queensberry, the latter was the famous "Prior's Kitty," who unfortunately does not "bloom" in mezzotinto.

3. William Conolly.

Gulston Catalogue, p. 71, Lot 91 (purchased by Mr. Willett).

Bromley (page 265) gives the same reference, so the print was not known to him.

Elected Speaker of the Irish House of Commons, 1715, and held that position until shortly before his death, which occurred on 30th October, 1729, he was buried at Celbridge, Co. Kildare: it is said that linen scarves were adopted for the first time at his funeral.

There is a portrait of him in the line manner by Fourdrinier after Jarvis.

4. John Hoadly.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed towards right, facing and looking to front; robes, bands, wig, hands on arm of chair, the left one holding gloves, cap on table to right. Under, The most Reverend Father in God John Lord Arch Bishop of Dublin, Primate of Ireland. H. 14 $\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{3}{8}$; W. 10.

One known. Not mentioned by Bromley.

It is so similar in style and period to Beard's prints that it is placed with them; it might, however, be a plate altered by him.

Born at Tottenham 1678; appointed Bishop of Ferns 1727, Archbishop of Dublin 1729, and Archbishop of Armagh 1742; died at Rathfarnham, 19th July, 1746. He was the younger brother of Benjamin Bishop of Winchester, and their father is said to have prophesied that Benjamin would be an archbishop and John a bishop, but these titles were transposed by the event.

5. William King. DAHL.

T. Q. L., standing, directed slightly to left, looking to front, wig with cap at back, robes, bands, right hand holding gloves, left raised and touching gown, curtain to left. Under, M. Dahl P. T. Beard Fe. His Grace William Lord Arch Bishop of Dublin. H. 13½; Sub. 11¾; W. 9¾.

Two known. Not mentioned by Bromley.

Born at Antrim, May 1st, 1650; educated at Dungannon and Trinity College, Dublin; in 1679 appointed to the parish of St. Werburgh there; entered into a controversy with Manby, dean of Londonderry, and thereby incurred the enmity of the adherents of James II. Preached a thanksgiving sermon after the battle of the Boyne, and in January, 1691, was appointed Bishop of Derry. Soon afterwards published the "State of the Protestants in Ireland" (a work commended by Burnet, but controverted by Charles Leslie), and also other books; translated to archbishopric of Dublin 1702, and died at his palace there, May 8, 1729.

6. John Sterne. CARLTON.

H. L., in oval frame, directed and facing towards right, looking to front, robes, bands, close cap, from under which long hair appears. Under, The Right Reverend John Lord Bishop of Clogher. Thomas Carlton Dublini Pinx. T. Beard fe. H. 13½; Sub. 11½; W. 10.

Born in Dublin, 1660; became Dean of St. Patrick's, and was made Bishop of Dromore, 1713, being succeeded in the Deanery by the celebrated Swift, with whose affairs he was afterwards much mixed up; translated to Clogher 1717, and died, June, 1745. He laid out large sums on his palaces, and on the college of Dublin, where he, built the printing house and founded exhibitions. His father, who was nephew of Archbishop Ussher, had been a fellow of this college and was buried there.

7. Thomas Wyndham.

Stowe Granger continuation, p. 14, Lot 115.

Not mentioned by Bromley.

An eminent lawyer, Lord Chancellor of Ireland 1726, which office he filled until 1739, created Baron Wyndham of Finglas 1731, died 24th Nov. 1745.

ISAAC BECKETT was born in Kent in 1653 and apprenticed to a calico printer in London; when visiting Luttrell he was seized with admiration of mezzotinto engraving, and was instructed therein by Lloyd. He must have been associated with these and others, for his name appears as printer on the Duchess of Cleveland by Luttrell, as engraver on second state of Wetenhall by Vandervart, and 9, 43, and 57 of the following were published by A. Browne (it being possible that, as they are much in the style of Browne's other prints, he may have engraved some of the latter to which he did not put his name), these were probably his earliest attempts; his subsequent plates are improved in style, exhibiting careful preparation of the ground, high finish, and artistic effect, equalling at least the best productions of Blooteling. He is said to have been noted for his gallantries, and to have married a woman of fortune, which enabled him to set up as publisher of his prints. It is certain that he did publish most of the remainder at the Golden Head in the Old Bailey, one piece by him (not a portrait) bearing address, "under ye Stares on ye north side of ye Royal Exchange."

Le Blanc states that he died in 1715, and Redgrave in 1719, but his plates are all referable to dates between 1681 and 1688.

He was succeeded at the "Golden Head" by G. Beckett, I. Savage, and by his celebrated pupil John Smith, who finally appears to have obtained many of Beckett's plates and to have placed his own name on them, not only as publisher, but on some even as engraver.

William Beckett was a publisher of prints in mezzotinto by Clarke, the younger Faithorne, and others, "at his shop ye backside of ye Royal Exchange," but was not, apparently, an engraver.

Bromley mentions (pp. 93, 119) Oliver Cromwell and Prince Rupert as engraved or published by J. Beckett, and Nell Gwyn by Beckett, and in Weigel's Catalogue Delmont after Vandyck by Beckett is named; these, if existing at all as described, should probably be attributed to the others already mentioned of the same name, as publishers.

Beckett executed many scriptural and allegorical subjects also.

Isaac Beckett and Williams are entitled to be considered as the first native Englishmen who extensively practised and in a measure founded the school; the earlier works being chiefly executed by engravers not of English birth, and those who were so, as Place and Sherwin, having worked to a limited extent, so far as known without pupils, and rather as amateurs than anything else.

Born at Northampton; Sept. 1, 1634; entered Oxford and received some small preferments from the Puritans. After the Restoration his professions of loyalty secured him further advancement, became in 1677 Dean of Ripon, and in 1686 Bishop of Chester. When James attempted to force a president upon Magdalen College, Oxford, he was one of the Commissioners; at the Revolution he fled to France, and was minister to part of James's household, who created him Bishop of Salisbury, on the death of Seth Ward; a mere title, as Gilbert Burnet, whom William appointed to that see, has been always held Wards' successor. He accompanied James to Ireland, but died of dysentery in Dublin, April 15, 1689, and was interred there in the choir of Christ Church.

The print, No. 7, under "A Browne excudit," of this lady is similar to this.

Born at Kilkenny, 29th June, 1640, eldest daughter of the first Duke of Ormond; married about 1660, Philip Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield (his second wife); was one of the most admired beauties of Charles's court, and is very frequently mentioned by Grammont, who relates that her husband removed her to his country seat in 1662, where she died in 1665. There was a story current afterwards that he had caused her to be poisoned.

The portrait of this lady engraved in "Mrs. Jameson's Beauties," does not resemble this print, and were it not that the name "Butler" is on the similar print by Browne, it might be that the portrait was that of Lady Elizabeth Dormer, the third wife of the same Earl, who died in 1679.

Only child of Sir William Villiers (second Lord Grandison, who was a gallant cavalier, and was killed at the siege of Bristol at age of 30). Married at 18, Roger Palmer, and accompanied him to Holland in 1659, where her acquaintance with Charles commenced. She became his avowed mistress at the Restoration, and exercised a power, or rather tyranny, over him greater than even her beauty would seem possible to obtain. Her husband was created Earl of Castlemaine in 1660, and she herself Duchess of Cleveland in 1670, after which her influence rapidly declined. On the death of her husband, in 1703, she foolishly married Beau Fielding, and was barbarously ill-treated by him; but, fortunately for her, a former wife of his was discovered to be alive, and he was prosecuted for bigamy. She died of dropsy at Chiswick, Oct. 9, 1709, and was succeeded in her titles by her eldest son; her second being Henry Fitzroy Duke of Grafton; her third, George Fitzroy Earl and Duke of Northumberland; her eldest daughter married Lord Dacre; her second the Earl of Litchfield; and her third became a nun.

Of the ancient family of Maitland, Lords of Thirlestane; born at Leithington, 24th May, 1616; joined the Covenanters, and was one of the Commissioners from the Church of Scotland to the Assembly at Westminster, in 1643; succeeded his father as second Earl in 1645, and the next year opposed the resolution of the Commons in England that the disposal of the King's person belonged to them, asserting the right of the Scots to a share; he then promoted the raising of forces for the rescue of the King, and when Charles II. came to Scotland in 1650, joined him, was taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester, and suffered a confinement of nine years in the Tower, until set free by Monk; he was then advanced, made Secretary of State, and the entire government of Scotland placed in his hands. In 1672 he was created Duke; and Earl of Guilford in England in 1674; was one of the famous Cabal. On the Duke of York's arrival in Scotland in 1680 he was dispossessed of his offices in consequence of voting for the condemnation of the Earl of Stafford; and died at Tunbridge, 24th August, 1682, leaving one child, Mary, married to the Marquis of Tweeddale. Burnet says his tongue was too big for his mouth, and that he bedewed every one he spoke to, and the portrait exactly gives the idea of this.

Noble (Vol. II. p. 379) mentions the print as being dated 1701, but it does not appear to be of later date than Beckett's other works; he also supposes the print to represent the wife of Sir Wilfrid Lawson, the 3rd Bart. In this he is wrong; and it is the portrait either of Elizabeth, daughter and heir of George Preston, Esq., of Holker, Lancashire, who married Sir Wilfrid Lawson, of Isell in Cumberland, the 2nd Bart. (he succeeded his father in 1689, and died in 1704); or, of his mother Milcha, daughter of Sir William Strickland, Bart., of Boynton, Yorkshire.

Born at Soest, in Westphalia, in 1617; arrived in England after the death of Van Dyck, in 1641; knighted in 1680, and died 30th November of that year. He is considered to have been a mannerist, from the languishing air and half-closed eyes of his female sitters; but much of this may have been of their own choosing. It cannot be denied that the portraits of this painter were both delicate and graceful, and the colouring brilliant. The charming little landscapes and other accessories show how much he studied the suitable finish of his works.

Sykes' catalogue mentions a proof before letters; impression in Suth: Coll., with the last two words cut off.

Born at Hunstanton Hall, Norfolk, December 17th, 1616; became a Royalist, and was sentenced to death, his plan for surprising the town of Lynn being discovered; but after four years he escaped, and ultimately on application to Cromwell himself, was discharged on giving security. There appears to have been some distrust of him after the Restoration, as for some time he got no appointment, but was at length made licenser of the press, which he continued to be until the eve of the revolution; wrote many pamphlets, and published newspapers, and was knighted by James II. Queen Mary appears to have had a bad opinion of him, as she made out an anagram of his name, "Lying-Strange-Roger." He died September 11th, 1704, and was buried at St. Giles's in the Fields.

Noble states that this portrait is very uncommon, but that no particulars of the person have come down to us. A note, probably by Granger, queries whether this may not be a son of Edward Low, of whom Wood gives many anecdotes; and this seems a very probable conjecture, as he was married to Alice, daughter of Sir Robert Peyton, of Dodington, in the Isle of Ely, and died in 1682, both being buried in the divinity chapel, adjoining Christ Church, Oxford. He had been organist of that church, and published a work on the Cathedral Service, with his portrait, in 1644. Wood calls him a proud man, who could not endure any common musician to play with him.

John, second son of James Drummond, third Earl of Perth, was appointed General of the Ordnance, and Deputy-Governor of Edinburgh Castle in 1680; principal Secretary of State in 1684; created Viscount of Melfort, &c., in 1685, and Earl of same in the following year; became a Roman Catholic, and attached himself to James II., who created him Duke in 1690. He was outlawed and attainted; had chief administration at St. Germain, and died there January, 1714. Macky describes him as very handsome, a fine dancer, very proud, tall, black, and thin, with a stoop in the shoulders (observable in the print); married first, 1670, Sophia Maitland, heiress of Margaret Lundin (their great grandson James obtained possession of the estate of Perth in 1785, and was created a British peer); second, Eupheme Wallace, of Craigie (who lived to the age of 90, and was supported by keeping a faro table), by whom he had several children.

Two plates of this personage, with the same face as the foregoing, but in robes not armour, have been engraved by J. Smith.

Born 1649; succeeded his father, Edmund Sheffield, in 1658, as third Earl Mulgrave; served against the Dutch with Prince Rupert and Lord Ossory; sent to the relief of Tangier in 1680; made Lord Chamberlain at the accession of James; acquiesced in the Revolution, but appears to have distrusted William III., although created Marquis of Normanby by him in 1694. Anne, on her accession, loaded him with dignities (it was said that he had aspired to her hand before her marriage); in 1703, created Duke of Normanby, and Duke of Buckingham; died 24th February, 1720, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. He was married thrice, each time to a widow, the last being the daughter of the Countess of Dorchester and James II., and on the death of his only legitimate son by that lady (who survived him, and died 1742) the title became extinct. He was author of many pieces, of which his duchess published a splendid edition in 1723, and he was friend to Dryden and other literary celebrities.

A brilliant impression has been met with, having inscription space cut off; it is probably an earlier state.

Emilie, eldest daughter of Louis de Nassau, Lord of Beverwaert (the acknowledged but not legitimate son of Maurice Prince of Orange), who received at his house at the Hague amongst other English Royalists the Earl of Ossory, eldest son of the great Duke of Ormond, just set at liberty by Cromwell and escaped to Holland, who became attached to this lady. They were married 17th November, 1659. She was naturalised by Act of Parliament the next year, and appears to have been worthy of her husband (whose father said to one condoling with him after the Earl's death, "I would not exchange my dead son for any living son in Christendom"). She outlived him three years, and died Jan. 1684, having been the mother of twelve children, five of whom survived her.

II. As described. Three known.

Daughter of John Fowler, a merchant in London, and born there Jan. 1, 1631; she married at an early age James Philips of Cardigan, and visited Ireland with the Viscountess Dungannon; died of the small-pox in London, 22nd June, 1664. She translated some of Corneille's tragedies for the stage, and wrote many poems which were extravagantly admired at the time; she assumed the name of Orinda, and called her husband Antenor, and Sir Charles Cottrell Poliarchus. Her portrait in line by the elder Faithorne is prefixed to her poems, published in 1667, resembling the above as to the position of the head, but inferior in every way to it as a portrait.

III. With E. Cooper's address, retouched.

Louise Renée de Penencovet de Quéroualle, of a noble family in Brittany, was appointed maid of honour to the Duchess of Orleans in 1669, when about 19 years of age; she attracted the attention of Charles II. at the celebrated interview with his sister at Dover in 1670, after whose death she was brought to Whitehall (with the connivance of the Duke of Buckingham and others, who wished to supplant the Duchess of Cleveland), and appointed maid of honour to the Queen; in 1672 she had a son by Charles, and in 1673 was created Duchess of Portsmouth, &c., and by Louis XIV. Duchess of Aubigny, as a mark of his friendship for his good brother the King of England. Her power over Charles only ceased with his life; her extravagance was boundless, and she engaged in deep and complicated state intrigues; but, unlike others of his mistresses, does appear to have been really attached to her royal lover. On his death she retired to France, but revisited England in 1699, and again in 1715, when she was presented to the Princess of Wales (afterwards Queen Caroline); she spent the remainder of her life in retirement, and died at Paris in 1734. Voltaire, who saw her at the age of 70, describes her as still surprisingly beautiful.

Only son of the Duchess of Portsmouth by Charles II.; born July 29th, 1672. At his baptism Charles gave him the surname of Lennox, and in 1675 the title of Duke of Richmond and Lennox, with the estates; married, 1692, Anne, second daughter of Francis Lord Brudenell, and widow of Henry, son of John Lord Belasyse of Worlabey. Died at Goodwood, May 27th, 1723. He was created a Knight of the Garter in 1681, and was introduced by the Duchess to the King with his ribbon over the left shoulder and the George appendant on the right side, instead of round the neck with the George on the breast, the previous mode. It is stated that the King commanded the alteration to be adopted, but the previous mode is more frequently met with.

Daughter of Walter Stewart, third son of Lord Blantyre, who was connected with the court of Henrietta Maria; appointed maid of honour to Queen Catharine in 1663. Her wonderful loveliness seriously captivated Charles II., and many others, as detailed by Grammont; amongst them Rotier the medallist, who came over to cut the die for the new coinage, and exhibited her head on the reverse as Britannia. She, however, in March 1667, eloped with and was married next day to Charles Stuart, 6th Duke of Lennox and 3rd Duke of Richmond (who died at Elsinore in 1672, having been appointed ambassador to Denmark). About two years after her marriage she was attacked by small-pox, and recovered with difficulty. The King frequently visited her after her marriage, but merely in courtesy; at the time however, he was, deeply enraged, and the great Lord Clarendon was deprived of the Seals and banished, and those consequences followed which paved the way for the Revolution. The Duchess appears to have divided the latter part of her life between cards and cats, and died in 1702.

III. Slightly retouched. "I Riley pinx." erased; at bottom, I Smith ex.

Bromley mentions two plates, but they are most probably these two different states of the same plate.

Dorothy, third daughter of Robert, second Earl of Cardigan, married first (his second wife), Charles Fane, third Earl of Westmoreland (who died 1691); secondly, Robert Constable Viscount Dunbar in Scotland. Died Jan 26th, 1739, aged 91, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Edward Wetenhall. See under Vander Vaart.

97. Lady Williams. WISSING.

W. L., standing, directed and looking towards front, hair in short curls, loose dress showing left breast, right hand holding end of long veil, elbow leaning on pedestal to left, on lower step of which right foot is placed, left hand holds end of mantle, above a curtain, to right a balustrade on panel of which is a cupid, behind a large vase and trees, at bottom to left a plant of the thistle kind. Under, The Lady Williams W Wissing pinx: I Beckett fe: E Cooper ex. H. 16 $\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. 15 $\frac{3}{8}$, W. 9 $\frac{7}{8}$.

I. Before inscription. One known. Brit: Mus.

II. As described. Two known.

III. After painter's name, Cum Privilegio Regis.

IV Plate cut $1\frac{1}{4}$ at top, 2 at bottom, subject then scraped away 1 at bottom, thereon The Lady Williams. W Wifsing pinx. Sold by John Bowles at Mercers Hall in Cheapside, London. I Becket fecit.

Granger says she was mistress to the Duke of York. Walpole, in a MS. note on the print, supposes her wife of Sir W. Williams, who was Solicitor-General at the trial of the Seven Bishops, in 1688; possibly she may have been Frances, second wife of Sir Robert Williams, Bart. (who died in 1678).

98. Ann Windham. WISSING.

W. L., a girl sitting, directed slightly to right, facing to front, dress covering legs, a large vase of flowers beside her towards right, one of which she holds in left hand, right elbow leans on arm of large chair partly seen beside her, hand holding wreath, gardens and statue in distance to right. Under, Madam Ann Windham. W. Wifsing pinxit. I Beckett fecit. E Cooper excudit. H. $13\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. $12\frac{3}{8}$, W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

I. Before inscription. One known. Brit: Mus.

II. As described. Four known.

Probably a daughter of Sir William Windham of Trent, Somersetshire, who was created a baronet in 1673.

99. Thomas Worsley. KNELLER.

H. L., directed towards left, facing to front, long wig, lace cravat, white sleeves, cloak, right hand to breast. Under Tho: Worsley Esq. G Kneller pinx: I Beckett ex. H. $7\frac{1}{2}$; Sub. $6\frac{3}{4}$; W. $5\frac{1}{2}$.

I. As described. Two known. Brit: Mus.

II. "I Beckett ex" erased.

Probably of Hovingham, Co. York, who married Mary, daughter and heiress of Henry Arthington, by Mary daughter of Ferdinando Lord Fairfax, and died 3d May, 1715, leaving issue from whom the present family (to whom a baronetcy was granted in 1838) are descended.

100. Henrietta Maria Yarborough. KNELLER.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed and looking towards front, facing slightly to right, low dress, right hand holding long curl over shoulder, left hand fondling greyhound crouched with forepaws on her lap, landscape in distance on right. Under, Mrs Yarborough G Kneller Pinxit. I Becket fecit & excudit. H. $12\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 12; W. $9\frac{3}{4}$.

I. As described. Not known to Bromley.

II. Retouched; "I Becket fecit & excudit" erased; instead, I Smith ex.

Eldest daughter of Sir Thomas Yarborough, of Snaith Hall, Co. York, Maid-of-Honour to Queens Catharine and Mary; married Sir Marmaduke Wyvill; and died August, 1738, leaving issue.

Noble considers the portrait to represent Alice the youngest sister of this lady, who died at New Windsor, March 12, 1786, aged 97, but she could scarcely have been born when this portrait was painted.

York, see No. 50.

101. Lady (Personage not ascertained). KNELLER.

H. L., in oval, directed to left, facing and looking to front, low dress, curls falling over right shoulder, scarf. Under, at bottom, G Kneller pinx: I Becket fec: Sold by I Beckett at ye golden head in ye Old baily. H. $9\frac{1}{2}$; W. $7\frac{3}{8}$; O. D. H. $8\frac{1}{4}$; W. $6\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described.

II. Engraver's name and address erased; instead of the latter, Sold by I Smith at ye Lyon & Crown in Russell street.

This print is sometimes named in MS. the Countess of Roxburghe, (died 1753, in her 96th year): sometimes Mrs. Morgan.

102. Id. LARON.

W. L. s., a lady sitting, directed to right, facing to front, feathers in hair, low dress, playing a violin, table to right on which is music, behind a gentleman playing a guitar. Under, M-L pinx: Sold by I Beckett at the golden head in the Old Baily. H. 10; Sub. $9\frac{1}{2}$; W. $7\frac{1}{2}$.

Probably belonging to the court of Charles II: resembles the Duchess of Portsmouth. In "Gilling's Engravings by Celebrated Masters" there is a somewhat similar plate, H. $5\frac{1}{2}$, W. $4\frac{1}{2}$, probably of Beckett's time, in modern state, in which the lady plays the violoncello; the male is attired as a footman; pipe, &c. on the table.

103. Id.

W. L., a lady, sitting playing violoncello, which she holds with her knees, music books on table to right. Under, I B ex. H. $9\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. $8\frac{1}{4}$; W. $6\frac{3}{4}$.

Perhaps a portrait of Miss Davis.

A. BELL appears to have practised chiefly as a line engraver, as there are a few Scottish portraits in that manner with his name. The following is his only known mezzotinto ; it is in a stiff style, and probably may not be so early as the date of the painting.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards right, facing and looking towards front, wig, robe, right hand on hip, left holding staff, large hospital seen in distance through window to right. Under, Æ Alexander Pinxit 1752. A Bell Fecit Edinri. George Drummond Esqr Late Lord Provost of the City of Edinburgh and one of the Honourable Commissioners of His Majestys Revenues of Excise in Scotland. H. 12 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 8 $\frac{3}{4}$.

EDWARD BELL was nephew of John Bell, the publisher of the British Theatre, &c ; according to Sandby, was the teacher of George Clint. The following prints bear date from 1794 to 1807, except No. 19, which is dated 1819 ; it is probable, therefore, that he followed other occupations, and in his later years only devoted a comparatively small portion of his time to engraving. Several of his portraits are of persons connected with the town of Norwich.

1. John Bannister. DE WILDE.

W. L., standing, facing and looking towards left, wig, black suit, both hands holding hat. Under, Painted by Saml De Wilde. Engraved by Edwd Bell. Mr Bannister Junr in the Character of Gradus in Who's the Dupe. Pafsage. Ah! —sons &c. London Publish'd April 1, 1794 by E Bell No 119 Gt Portland Street, and S De Wilde British Library Strand. H. 23 $\frac{1}{2}$; Sub. 21 ; W. 16.

I. Open letters. Brit: Mus :

II. As described.

Son of Charles Bannister, and encouraged by his father's success, became an actor ; Horace Walpole, in 1793, calls him " his favourite " (" Correspondence," Vol. IX., p. 424), and his subsequent career justified this opinion, for " Jack " Bannister was the pet of all who knew and all who saw him ; he died in Gower-street, Bedford-square, Nov. 8, 1837, aged 76, and is buried at St. Martins in the Fields.

2. Baron Bennigsen. STROEHLING.

H. L., in oval, directed to front, facing and looking to left, uniform star, collars, and orders. Under, Painted by P. E. Stroehling when at St Petersburg. Engraved by Ed Bell. Baron Bennigsen a Hanoverian, Commander in Chief of the Imperial Russian Army in Poland. London Published April 3 1807 by P. E. Stroehling 13 Henrietta Street Cavendish Square. H. 9; Sub. $7\frac{1}{4}$; W. 7; Sub. $6\frac{1}{8}$; O. D. H. $6\frac{5}{8}$; W. $5\frac{3}{8}$.

Born 1745; married, in 1768, the daughter of Baron Steinberg; on her death, in 1773, entered the Russian service, and was Commander in Chief against Napoleon at Eylau; on 18th October, 1811, defeated Murat, and caused the evacuation of Moscow; died 2nd October, 1826.

3. James Boaden. OPIE.

H. L., in oval, directed to front, facing and looking towards left, frill, coat buttoned across chest. Under, J Opie R. A. pinxit. E Bell sculpsit. James Boaden Esqr Author of Fontainville Forest the Secret Tribunal &c &c London Published April 1801 by J H Green Wells Street, Oxford Street. H. 15; Sub. $11\frac{1}{2}$; W. 11; Sub. $9\frac{1}{2}$.

I. Before inscription, scratched, J Opie R A pinxit E Bell sculpt.

II. As described.

Born at Whitehaven, 1762; author of "Lives of Kemble, Mrs. Siddons," &c.

4. John Charles Brooke. MAYNARD.

H. L., directed towards right, facing and looking towards front, herald's coat, collar, paper in right hand. Under, in centre arms, Painted by T. Maynard. Engraved by E Bell John Charles Brooke Esqr F. S. A. Somerset Herald Nat. 27 Augt 1748. Ob. 3 Feb 1794 Publish'd Mar 20 1794 by G Nayler Coll Arm: London. H. 11; Sub. $9\frac{7}{8}$; W. 8.

I. As described.

II. Plate cut $1\frac{1}{8}$ at top, $\frac{1}{4}$ on left, $\frac{1}{8}$ on right side, "London" erased, instead, & Printed for Robert Wilkinson No 125 Fenchurch Street.

His death, and that of several other persons, was caused by suffocation in a crowd when endeavouring to get into the pit of the Haymarket Theatre; his monument, by Ashton, is in St. Benets' Church.

5. Philip, Earl of Chesterfield. (GAINSBOROUGH).

H. L., in oval frame, directed towards left, facing and looking towards front, wig, light-coloured coat, star on breast, sash under, right hand on book. H. 13; Sub. $11\frac{1}{2}$; W. 10.

Richardson describes this print as by these artists in "Coehoorn" catalogue, April, 1802.

See page ; the picture is not mentioned by Fulcher, but it strongly resembles other portraits of him, and the style is that of the engraver. It is stated in catalogue of Taylor sale (Sotheby, 6th April, 1876), that only 24 impressions were taken from the plate.

6. Mrs. Donaldson.

H. L., in oval frame, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, white hood, black dress, at bottom to right, scraped, E Bell sculp 1796. Under, Mrs Donaldson of Dunkeld 1792. Eta 84. H. 14; Sub. 12; W. 10; O. D. H. $9\frac{1}{4}$; W. $7\frac{1}{4}$.

In Evans' Catalogue, this Mrs. Donaldson is supposed to be Anna Maria Falkner; but the age appears to be greater than hers would have been at the date.

7. Samuel Forster. OPIE.

W. L., standing, directed to front, facing and looking towards left, bands, black gown, right arm on pedestal to left, left hand holding gown, grove in distance under archway to right. Under, Painted by John Opie R A. Engraved by Edward Bell. Samuel Forster S. T. P. Regiæ Scholæ apud Norwicences Magister Informator. Norwich Published 1805 by the Engraver. H. $25\frac{1}{2}$; Sub. 24; W. $15\frac{1}{4}$.

8. Prince William of Gloucester. CHANDLER.

H. L., directed and facing towards left, looking to front, uniform, sash, star. Under, Painted by J W Chandler. Engraved by E Bell His Royal Highness Prince William of Gloucester. H. ; Sub. $11\frac{1}{8}$; W. ; Sub. $9\frac{1}{4}$.

I. As described, open letters.

II. "Of Gloucester" erased, instead, Frederick; at bottom, Published & Sold Jan'y 1 1799 by E Orme Printfeller to the King, corner of George Street and Conduit Street, where may be had all Naval & Military Portraits

Born at Rome, 15th Jan., 1776; became Duke of Gloucester on death of his father, in 1805; married, in 1816, his cousin, the Princess Mary, 4th daughter of George III.; died, 30th Novr., 1834.

9. Henry Hobart. OPIE.

Attorney and Deputy Philaser of Court of King's Bench for upwards of 40 years; died in Surrey-street, Strand, 12th June, 1827, aged 62.

HENRY BIRCHE is stated by Weigel (Kunst. Catalog. II. 12,696) to have been a name placed by R. Earlom on prints engraved by him for B. B. Evans, in consequence of his engagement to Boydell, not to work for any other publisher. Redgrave does not mention this, but gives Henry Birch as an engraver practising towards latter part of 18th century, distinct from William Birch, enamel painter and engraver (of whom we have several works in stipple and line, and who went to America in 1794), both authorities quote a pair of prints by Henry—the "Gamekeepers" and "Labourers" after Stubbs.

The truth of Weigel's statement, therefore, cannot be absolutely accepted, but the probabilities are strongly in favour of it; the prints with this name, so far as known, are all published by Evans, and the style of work strongly resembles that of Earlom.

There is an interesting pair of prints after Gainsborough, published by B. B. Evans, Sept. 1, 1791. Henry Birche, sculpt., size, H. 23 W. 15½, viz. :—

“Cottage Children” (a girl holding a child on a donkey), from the picture in the collection of the Earl of Gainsborough.

“Boys and Dogs” (one shepherd lad trying to prevent another from interfering in a fight between their dogs), from the picture in the collection of the Hon. Mr. Tollemache.

George Cranfield Berkeley. GAINSBOROUGH.

W. Under, in centre arms, motto, DIEU AVEC NOUS T Gainsborough pinxt R A. Birché sculpt. The Honble George Cranfield Berkeley Knight of the Shire for the County of Gloucester Captain in his Majesty's Royal Navy And Surveyor General of the Ordnance London Published April 21. 1793 by B: B: Evans. Corner of the Old Jewry Poultry. H. 25¾; Sub. 23¾; W. 17¾.

I. Name and titles of personage in open letters.

II. As described.

Born 1753; son of the 4th Earl of Berkeley; became Admiral of the White and G. C. B.; was some time Lord High Admiral of Portugal; died in South Audley Street, 25th February, 1818.

THOMAS BLACKMORE, called “John” by Redgrave, was, according to him, born in London, about 1740, and died 1780. He appears to have practised for only a short period, his prints being referable to about 1769 to 1771.

1. Henry Bunbury. REYNOLDS.

H. L., a youth standing, directed and facing to front, looking towards left, plain coat, spotted vest, portfolio under left arm, right hand holding it, trees in background, waterfall in distance to left. T. Q. L., standing, directed and looking towards left, long hair, mustaches, large black cloak, from its folds left hand covered with a gauntlet is thrust out, pillar in background. Under, scratched, Ant Van Dyck Eques pinxt. R Sayer Excudit. T Blackmore fecit. H. 17; Sub. 15 $\frac{1}{4}$; W. 12 $\frac{1}{2}$.

7. "Innocence."

H. L., a little girl, directed to right, facing and looking to front, her right arm on neck of a lamb, her left on a basket of flowers, to which the animal is looking. Under, Blackmore Fecit. Innocence Sold by Ryland and Bryer at the Kings Arms in Cornhill. H. 19 $\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 18 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 14.

This may be the "Miss Triquet with a lamb," mentioned by Bromley, page 446.

C. S. BLAKE is said to have been a niece of Sir Francis Blake Delaval, of whom she etched a portrait, dated 2nd Feb. 1775. There is a portrait by J. R. Smith, of Sibbald, a gardener, from a painting by this young lady, and we have the following, probably a portrait of herself.

(C. S. Blake). IPSA.

Short H. L., directed to front, facing and looking towards left, hair high, lace across it, joining under throat, towards top to right, painted & engraved C. S. Blake, 1775. H. 6; W. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$. Corners at top of plate rounded off.

BLAND is mentioned by Bromley as engraver of the following portrait and also of another of the same personage after Hone, 4to size: there is under "Engraver not ascertained" a portrait of J. L. Dussek, with address: J. Bland, 45, Holborn, 15th April, 1793, but the plates are not similar in style.

John Wesley. RUSSELL.

T. Q. L., standing, directed and looking towards right, long hair, bands, black gown, hands raised as preaching, left hand holding Bible, landscape in distance to right. Under, Rufsel Pinx. Bland sculp John Wesley M. A. Ætatis 70. Publish'd according to Act of Parliament 10 July 1773. H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{7}{8}$; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

Born June 17, 1703, at Epworth, Lincolnshire; the celebrated founder of the Society of Methodists; died at his house, near the chapel in the City Road, March 2nd, 1791.

The engraver of the following may be the J. F. BLONDEL mentioned by Strutt, Vol. I., p. 107, and by Nagler, Vol. I., p. 541; the print appears to be English, and to be engraved by one having but a slight knowledge of the mezzotinto method.

Charles Lyttleton. COTES.

One known. Brit: Mus. where it is marked first state. The print is similar in reverse to that engraved by James Watson, but is on a larger scale, and shows less of the figure.

Born 1714, third son of Sir Thomas Lyttleton, of Hagley, in Worcestershire (his eldest brother was created a peer in 1757); educated for the Bar, but entered the Church; appointed Dean of Exeter, 1748, and Bishop of Carlisle, 1762; his ardent love of antiquarian pursuits led to his election as P. S. A. in 1765. He died, unmarried, 22nd Dec., 1768.

ABRAHAM BLOOTELING was born in Amsterdam, in 1634, and was a scholar of the great master, Cornelius Visscher.

He distinguished himself both in line engraving and mezzotinto; the latter he may have acquired from Fürstenberg, as he engraved in line three portraits of that family. He came over to England in 1673, and is said to have returned in 1676. It may, however, be open to doubt, whether he did not remain in England for a longer period; at any rate, he must have been in communication with English publishers, and have sent his plates over to them from Holland.

The date of his death is believed to have been about 1695.

A detailed catalogue of his works has been written by M. J. E. Wessely, and published at Leipsic, in 1867; it describes 141 plates in the line, and 128 in the mezzotinto manner.

The following, many of which are not mentioned by Wessely, if not all engraved, were with every probability published in England, and consequently should be included in this work; and it is possible that some others catalogued by him were so also.

Wessely has the Countess of Bedford (No. 1), Earl of Bridgewater (No. 6), Countess of Grafton (No. 17), Madame Gwynn and her sons (No. 19), as being by this artist; but although in his style, the proof is not conclusive, and the three first plates will be found under "Engraver not ascertained," the fourth under "R. Tompson, excudit."

The Earl of Sandwich, under "Engraver not ascertained," and P. Lely, under "A Browne excudit," are most probably by Blooteling.

During his stay in England, Blooteling contributed much to the improvement of the art by additional working of the ground, thus making its texture closer, and giving a much more finished and brilliant effect to the print. As numbers to the following might create confusion with those adopted by Wessely, letters are used instead.

a. Princess Ann. LELY.

Educated at Ch. Ch., Oxford; wrote several pieces of poetry; accompanied Charles II. in his exile, and on the Restoration received many honours; created Baron, 1663, and Earl, 1672, and took a leading part in the political intrigues of the time; married Isabella of Nassau; died 28th July, 1685, aged 67.

Grammont speaks of his character and of the remarkable scar across his nose, so conspicuous in this print.

d. Catharine, Queen of Charles II. LELY.

(Wessely, No. 28.)

H. L., in oval, directed towards right, facing and looking to front hair in curls, necklace, earrings, low dress with pearls. Under, *Catharina D. G. Magnæ Britan. II. As described. Suth: Coll.

This appears to be from the great picture of Charles I., his Queen, and Sons, which has been finely engraved in line by Massard; the face and attitude are exactly similar, the cushion being substituted for the King's knee, beside which the young prince stands in the large picture.

Bromley mentions a small mezzotinto by A. Blooteling from a fine medal; but does not mention the foregoing, which has been copied in reverse by Vaillant.

k. Charles Earl of Derby.

H. L., in oval, directed towards right, facing to front, long dark wig, cravat, armour. Under, The Right Honorable Charles Earle of Derby Lord Stanley and Strange of Knockin, Baron of weeton, Viscount Kinton, Lord Mohun Burnell, Bafsett and Lacy Lord Leiuetenant of the Countyes Pallatyne of Lancaster and Chester and the City and County of Chester, Chamberlaine of Chester, vice Admirall of the aforesaid Countyes Lord of Man and the Isles &c. I. As described. Suth: Coll.

II. After "fecit," et exc (Wessely).

Became eighth earl on the execution of his father (who had been taken prisoner in the battle of Worcester, and beheaded by Cromwell's orders at Bolton, 15th Oct., 1651); joined Sir George Booth's rising in Cheshire in 1659, and was taken prisoner, but on the Restoration received additional honours; died 21st Dec., 1672, and was buried at Ormskirk.

1. Queen Henrietta Maria.

(Wessely, No. 23.)

Short H. L., directed towards right, looking to front, hair in curls, with pearl spray at back of head; necklace, low dress, pearl brooch: at top to right, crown with monogram of M R under it; lower, on same side, A. B. f. H. 5 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 4 $\frac{3}{4}$.

I. Before crown and monogram (Wessely.)

II. As described. Suth: Coll.

Daughter of Henri Quatre; born 29th Nov. 1609; married Charles I. 1st May, 1625; died at the castle of Colombe in France, 10th Sept. 1669, and was buried in the abbey of St. Denis.

m. Duke of Monmouth. LELY.

(Wessely, No. 38.)

Life size in oval, directed towards right, looking to front, border of laurel leaves. Under, James Duke of Monmouth P Lely Pinxit A Blooteling fecit. H. 25; W. 19 $\frac{3}{8}$. Suth: Coll.

There are similar large plates of Charles II., and James Duke of York (Wessely, Nos. 9 and 127), but it is somewhat doubtful if any of the three were done in England, one of the states of the Charles II. having the "privilege" of Holland.

The plates of Mary and William of Orange (Wessely, 34, 35, 46, 47) are also doubtful in this respect, an impression, not described by Wessely, and probably first state of No. 34, has been met with, having "Cum Privilegio Ordinum Hollandiæ et West-Frisiæ" at bottom.

See page 42. This print has been copied in reverse by Quiter.

BOCKMAN is mentioned by Redgrave as a portrait painter and mezzotinto engraver, but the initial of his Christian name given there is R, although G is very distinct on the prints; it is also stated that his widow applied to the Society of Artists for relief in 1769, but unless, which is not likely, there were two artists of the name; this does not agree with the following extract from the London Magazine, "April 2nd, 1773: At his house in Tash-street, Gray's Inn Lane, Mr. Gerhard Bockman, limner, aged 87. He was the last surviving disciple of Sir Godfrey Kneller, and followed his business to the last year of his life."

His style is peculiar, the touching somewhat coarse, but in early impressions the effect is clear and good; he also executed some subject pieces after Watteau, and others.

II. As described.

Of Nassau Dietz. Married, 14th March, 1734, Ann, Princess Royal of England ; in 1747 the title of stadtholder was revived and conferred upon him ; died 11th October, 1751, Walpole says he was a monster of ugliness (which, judging from the prints of him, must be a very exaggerated statement), but that the princess was immoderately fond of him.

16. Henry Pelham.

H. L., in oval, directed towards right, facing to front; wig, end thrown back over right shoulder, lace cravat, robes. Under, G Bockman del et fecit The Right Honble Henry Pelham Esqr first Lord Commisioner of ye Treasury, Chancellor and Under Treasurer of the Exchequer, and one of his Majesties most Honble Privy Council. H. $13\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. $11\frac{5}{8}$; W. $9\frac{3}{4}$.

Born 1694; youngest son of Thomas, first Lord Pelham; served at the battle of Preston; M. P. for Seaford, 1718; held various offices under Sir R. Walpole; became first Lord of the Treasury and Chancellor of the Exchequer, 25th August, 1743, which offices he filled up to his death on 6th March, 1764.

17. Charles Earl of Peterborough. KNELLER.

Two known. Suth: Coll. damaged.

Son of Lord Mordaunt; born 1658; entered the navy, and distinguished himself at Tangier in 1680; attached himself to William of Orange, who appointed him First Lord of the Treasury in 1689, and afterwards created him Earl of Monmouth; succeeded his uncle as 3rd Earl of Peterborough, 1697; commanded the English expedition to Spain, in favour of Charles against Philip V.; was afterwards ambassador to Italy; died on his passage at Lisbon, 25th Oct., 1735; married, first, a daughter of Sir Alexander Fraser, who died 1720; second, the celebrated singer, Anastatia Robinson.

He was an intimate of Pope, Swift, Gay, and other wits, but his courage and talents were so little accompanied by prudence and virtue, that it is most charitable to him to believe that he was not perfectly sane in mind.

18. William Pitt.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed to left, facing to front; wig, right elbow on table to left, on which are papers, &c, paper in hand, left hand on knee. Under, G. B. f. The Right Honourable William Pitt Esqr One of his Majesty's Principal Secretarys of State And one of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council. H. 14; Sub. 12 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 9 $\frac{7}{8}$.

Similar to the plate by R. Houston, after Hoare, and probably from the same painting, or a replica of it. Not mentioned by Bromley.

Born at Westminster, 17th Nov. 1708; educated at Eton and Oxford; M. P. for Oldham, 1735, and signalised himself in opposition to Walpole; entered the ministry in 1746, and although obnoxious to the King, became principal minister in 1757; soon after the French lost Quebec, and their chief settlements in Africa and the East Indies, their armies were defeated in Europe and their navies almost destroyed; he resigned in 1761, but again took office as Lord Privy Seal in 1766, and was created Earl of Chatham; resigned in 1768, but continued to take part in the debates, especially those relating to America; while addressing the house on 7th April, 1778, he was seized with illness, and died on the 11th of the following month; buried in Westminster Abbey.

19. Sir Thomas Reeve.

H. L., in oval, directed and facing towards front, wig, collar, robes. Under, *The Right Honble Sr Thomas Reeve Kt Lord Chief Justice of His Maj's Court of Common Pleas. I. As described.

II. At bottom, Printed and Sold by Henry Overton, at the White Horse without Newgate, London.

An impression has been met, with "G. Hanson pinx." on it, perhaps in MS.

Born at Westminster, 12th Nov. 1684; educated under Dr. Busby; went to sea, and was promoted in the service; entered Parliament in 1722, and by his virulence rendered himself obnoxious to government; in 1739 declared that Porto Bello might be reduced with six sail of the line; was taken at his word, made an admiral, put in command of an expedition, and within four months captured the place; he afterwards failed in other undertakings, continued his opposition to the ministry, and having replied with much asperity to a remonstrance concerning a petty appointment, was struck off the list of admirals by the king's express command; died suddenly, 30th October, 1747, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

23. William Walker. SLACK.

II. "Slack pinxt" erased; instead, John Slack pinxt. After "Walker," Aged 123.

24. Sir Robert Walpole. GIBSON.

T. Q. L., standing, directed to right, facing and looking to front, wig, coat, sash, and jewel of the Garter, right hand on table to left, left hand pointing before him. Under, T. Gibson pinx G Bockman fecit. The Right Honble Sr Robert Walpole, First Lord Commissioner of the Treasury, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Knight of the most Noble Order of the Garter and one of his Majesty's most Honble Privy Council. H. 14½; Sub. 13½; W. 10¾.

The great Whig minister; third, but eldest surviving son of Robert Walpole, M.P.; born at Houghton, Norfolk, 26th August, 1676; entered Parliament in 1700; held various offices, and made many enemies, who were often successful against him; First Lord of the Treasury and Chancellor of the Exchequer 1715 to 1717, and again 1721 to 1742, when he found his government in a minority, and resigned; created Earl of Orford; died March 18th, 1745; married, first, Catherine Shorter (who died 1737); second, Maria Skerrett.

25. John Wilkes.

H. L., in oval frame, directed and facing towards right, alderman's gown. H. 12¾; W. 10; O. D. H. 11; W. 8½. Under, on separate plate, H. 1¼. G. Bock—fecit John Wilkes, Esqr. Member of Parliament for the County of Middlesex, Alderman of the Ward of Farrington Without Friend to Liberty, a Lover of his King, Opposer of Ministerial Tyranny, and Defender of his Country. Published as the Act directs April 14, 1769.

The style of the work of this plate is rough and hurried, and shows that the engraver had lost much of his power through age and want of practice.

This celebrated demagogue was born 1727; M. P. for Aylesbury 1757; attacked the Government on failing to obtain place, and on being arrested became outrageously popular; his cause was warmly taken up by the City of London; made alderman; in 1774 Lord Mayor; in 1779 chamberlain, when he called himself an "extinguished volcano;" died in Grosvenor-square, 26th Dec., 1797.

JAMES BOLTON was apprenticed to B. Clowes, who engraved his portrait; according to Redgrave, he became known in the north of England as a skilful painter of flowers in water colours; and died near Halifax, Jan. 24, 1799.

Isaac Polack. BURGESS.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed and facing towards front, cocked hat, wig, bands, cloak held open by hands on lap. Under, *Burgefs delint. Bolton Sculpt. II. As described.

In the list of bankrupts for June, 1781, are Isaac Polack, Lyon Polack, and Lazarus Myers, Bury Street, London, Merchants.

GODFREY BOY is stated by Nagler to have been the son of Peter Boy, and English court painter at Hanover; from the manuscript under his portrait he would appear to have visited England; but the style of the work is entirely German, and does not resemble that of English artists of the period.

Godfrey Boy.

H. L., in oval frame, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, curled hair, open collar. H. $10\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $8\frac{3}{4}$; W. $7\frac{3}{8}$; O. D. H. $6\frac{7}{8}$; W. $5\frac{1}{2}$.

Under the only impression met with is written "Godfridus Boy Pictor Germ: Hanc Suam effigiem fecit, Londini, 1726."

JOSIAH BOYDELL was son of Samuel Boydell, Esq., born at the Manor House, near Hawarden, in Flintshire, 18th January, 1752. At an early age he displayed great capacity and love for the fine arts, and on his arrival in London was patronised and brought up by his uncle, the celebrated Alderman John Boydell, to whose business he was subsequently admitted as a partner. He married Miss North, about 1776, and had several children. On the death of his uncle, in 1804, he was elected in his place as alderman of the ward of Cheap, but had to resign through ill health from a pulmonic affection, during which time the business was carried on by his partner and relative, Mr. Josiah Harrison. He died at his seat at Haliford, near Shepperton, in Middlesex, 27th March, 1817.

He painted a number of pictures, of which some have been engraved, and made a number of drawings for the Houghton Gallery, &c.

In mezzotinto engraving he was a pupil of Richard Earlom, and, although he probably would never have equalled his teacher, his performances are creditable (especially considering that he only devoted a portion of his time to the art), but he somewhat fails in harmonizing the lights: besides the following, he executed a few subject pieces.

1. Charles I. VANDYKE.

W. L., standing, directed towards right, looking to front; armour, boots and spurs, right hand holding truncheon, left hand on hilt of sword, crown and helmet on table to right. Under arms, motto, FARI QUÆ SENTIAT, *Van Dyke pinxit. Josiah Boydell delt & sculpsit King Charles the First. In the Drawing Room at Houghton. Size of the Picture 4 F 3 1 by 7 F 3 1 high. No. 48 of Vol. I. of the Houghton Gallery, published by Boydell, the prints of which used to be sold separate from the work, if desired.

2. Claude Lorraine.

H. L., in oval, directed towards left, looking to front, own hair, slight beard, turned down collar. Under, Josiah Boydell fecit Claude Le Lorrain Published March 25th 1777 by John Boydell Engraver in Cheapside London. H. 7; Sub. $6\frac{1}{4}$; W. $4\frac{7}{8}$; O. D. H. $5\frac{3}{4}$; W. $4\frac{5}{8}$.

Frontispiece to Liber Veritatis, Vol. II.

Claude Gelée, born at Chamagne, in Lorraine, 1600; hence, his usual title. Excelled as a landscape painter, and also executed some beautiful etchings; died 21st Novr. 1682. The sketches by him, which were sold by his nephew for 200 scudi, and came into the possession of the Duke of Devonshire, were imitated in mezzotinto by Richard Earlom, and called the "Liber Veritatis." Smith's "Catalogue Raisonné," Part VIII., gives an elaborate account of this painter and his works.

3. Regnier Hansloe and wife. REMBRANDT.

T. Q. Ls., sitting, the minister wearing his hat, facing to front, with right hand outstretched speaking earnestly to his wife, who is sitting on left, looking towards right, hands in her lap, his left hand on table to right, on which are large books, candlestick, &c. Under, arms, motto *ESSAYEZ, Rembrandt pinxit. John Boydell excudit 1781. Josiah Boydell delint & Sculpsit. Regnier Hansloe an Anabaptist Minister, and his Wife. I. Before inscription and motto, scratched, Rembrandt Pinxit. Josiah Boydell delint & Sculpsit Published May 1st 1781 by John Boydell Engraver in Cheapside London.

II. As described.

Smith (Cat. Rai., Part VII., p. 103) says that this splendid production of portraiture was painted in 1641, and that it represents an eminent burgomaster, of about 40 years of age, speaking to his mother. It was sold in 1794 for £540. There is a fine etching by Rembrandt of the same personage, dated 1641 also; who is, therefore, not Reinier Anso, the Dutch Poet (born 1622, and died 1669), as sometimes stated, for he would have been only 19 in 1641.

4. Hugh Kelly. HAMILTON.

H. L., in oval frame, directed to right, facing to front, wig with long hair at back, holding up piece of music in left hand. Under, Hugh Hamilton Pinxit Mr. Hugh Kelly Barister at Law Published July 1st 1778 by Thos Cadell in the Strand. H. $6\frac{1}{2}$; Sub. 6; W. 5.

I. Before inscription. One known, on which in MS. "9th, 1777, a present to Mrs. Kelly as frontispiece to his works."

II. As described. Frontispiece to his dramatic works, published by Cadell, 1778. 4to.

Born on the banks of the lakes of Killarney, in 1739; went to London in 1760, and after struggling for some years, established his reputation as a dramatic writer, in 1768, by his comedy of "False Delicacy;" he also wrote other pieces. Not wishing to depend on writing for the stage, he studied for the bar, and was called in 1774; but the sedentary labour injured his health, and he died in Gough Square, Feb. 3, 1777, leaving a wife and five children, for whose benefit, Dr. Johnson and other literary celebrities made great exertions.

5. Jane Wenman. VANDYCK.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards right, looking to front, hair in curls at back, earrings, low dress, necklace, scarf, right hand holding a tulip, left hand on dress, plants in background to right. Under arms, motto FARI QUÆ SENTIAT, Van Dyke pinxit. Josh Boydell delint & sculpsit. Jane, daughter of Lord Wenman In the Drawing Room at Houghton Size of the Picture 3 F 5 I by 4 F 4 I high Published May 1st 1779 by John Boydell Engraver in Cheapside London. H. $15\frac{1}{2}$; Sub. 14; W. 11.

No. 12 of Vol. II. of the Houghton Gallery.

Lord Wenman had not a daughter Jane, though Bromley follows the inscription on the print. Sir Richard Wenman served the office of Sheriff for Oxfordshire in 1568; married Jane, daughter of William Lord Delawar, by whom he had Richard (created, 1628, Baron Wenman of Kilmainham, and Viscount Wenman of Tuam), Philip, Thomas, Penelope, Jane, Elizabeth, and Agnes, all of whom are mentioned in the will of their uncle, Sir Thomas Wenman, of Dublin, who died in 1637.

This daughter Jane was married to Arthur Goodwin, Esq.; and if, as is most probable, the portrait represents her, the inscription should be, "Daughter of Sir Richard, and sister to Lord Wenman."

JOHN BROOKS was a native of Ireland. He at first engraved in the line manner; his earliest print probably being the frontispiece to an edition of the "Odes and Satyrs of Horace," published by "Samuel Fuller, at the Globe and Scales in Meath Street," Dublin, 1730. The Obelisk at the Boyne, dated 1736, several views near Dublin, and a portrait of Margaret Woffington,* dated "June ye 1st, 1740," have also been met with. He then went to London, and there learned engraving in mezzotinto, and soon returning (not improbably bringing with him Andrew Miller, who came over at this time), established himself as engraver and printseller at Cork Hill, taking Sir Isaac Newton's head as a sign. At this address most of the following were published; the plates then appear to have been sent to London, and reissued by Jefferys and Herbert.

Brooks finally quitted Dublin about 1747, and, having discovered a means of enamelling on china, was placed by Stephen Theodore Janssen in charge of a manufactory of it at Battersea, but through the dissipation and bad management of Brooks, the speculation failed, and bankruptcy followed in 1756. Janssen, who was much beloved and held in high esteem for his honourable conduct, was elected Chamberlain of London, in 1765; but Brooks, with all his gifts, sunk still more, lived in complete seclusion, and died in utter obscurity.

It has been stated (Gentleman's Magazine, Vol. LVI., p. 420) that Brooks did not himself engrave in mezzotinto; but there does not appear sufficient reason to doubt that the prints having the word "Fecit" were from his own hand; the others were probably by Andrew Miller, or by some of Brooks' scholars, Houston, Spooner, Purcell, Ford, who all afterwards highly distinguished themselves in the art, and M'Ardell, who became one of its most eminent masters.

Most of the first states of Brooks' plates are seldom to be met with, especially in tolerable condition.

Gilbert (History of Dublin, Vol. II., app. 3) gives Captain Thomas Coram w. l. after Nebot, and William Parsons w. l. after Jonson, amongst the works of this artist: the former is signed "Brooke," the latter "J. Brooke." Both of these were published in London in 1751, and engraved in the line manner, in a style different from Brooks's works.

Gilbert also mentions Sara Malcolm and Margaret Plunket, but appears to have taken the names from Bromley.

Born 1680; became an eminent dissenting minister in the north of Ireland, but refusing to subscribe to the Westminster Confession, was ejected in 1726; in 1730, was appointed pastor to the Wood Street congregation in Dublin, where he died Dec. 1740, leaving many sermons and other works. It is said that Dr. Johnson expressed great admiration of some of them, but being informed that they were by a Dissenter, closed the book, and never again opened it.

One of his grandsons was the famous Surgeon Abernethy.

Born 1715; claimed to be the legitimate son of Arthur, fourth Lord Altham; brought an ejectment against Richard Earl of Anglesey, in 1743, and obtained a verdict; but the Court permitting a writ of error to be received, and the proceedings having been removed to the Court of Chancery, the plaintiff died before they were decided, on 5 Jan., 1760. He married the daughter of a soi-disant baronet in the weald of Kent, who was gentleman porter at the Tower of London.

The plot of "Guy Mannering" is supposed to have been taken by Scott from this story.

4. George Berkeley. LATHAM.

H. Third son of William Berkeley, of Thomastown, Co. Kilkenny; born there 1684; fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, 1707; dean of Derry, 1724; married, 1st August, 1728, Anne, daughter of John Forster, Esq., Speaker of the Irish House of Commons, 1710-13 (she died 1786); visited America on a generous, but perhaps visionary expedition, but where he did much good; Bishop of Cloyne 1733; retired in 1747 to Oxford, having tendered his resignation, which was not accepted; died suddenly, January 14th, 1753, and buried at Christ Church, Oxford. His philosophical works are still well known; and his character must have been great indeed, when Atterbury said of him, that he did not think so much understanding, so much knowledge, so much innocence, and so much humility had been the portion of any but angels.

5. Hugh Boulter. BINDON.

Married, 1st, Catherine, daughter of Chidley Coote, Esq.; 2nd, Lady Henrietta, daughter of Charles, 3rd Earl of Cork. Died at his house in Henrietta-street, Dublin, 27th September, 1764.

8. Cornelius Callaghan.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards right, facing to front, wig, bands, pleader's gown, right hand to breast, paper in left hand, bag on table to right. Under, in centre arms, and 12 verses. Rostri dulce Decus—Quid nomen referam Scis tamqd Callaghan ille est—ad Clogheen Cætera Marmor habet. H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{3}{8}$; W. 10.

I. As described.

II. At bottom, Sold by T. Jefferys at the Corner of St. Martin's Lane Charing Cross and W. Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

Bromley mentions two prints of this personage, one by Brooks and one with twelve verses as above; there can scarcely be a doubt that this is the print by Brooks, but perhaps Bromley may have met with an intermediate state with Brooks's name or address.

Member of Irish House of Commons for Fethard, conspicuous for his great abilities at the bar, died about 1740. Inscription as above taken from his tomb at Shanbally, Co. Tipperary; his grandson Cornelius was created Viscount Lismore in 1785.

9. Thomas Carter. JERVIS.

behind which are other rolls on shelves, left hand on hip. Under, C Fervis Pinxit Jno Brooks Fecit The Right Honble. Thomas Carter Esqr. H. 13 $\frac{5}{8}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 9 $\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described.

II. At bottom, Sold by T. Jefferys at the Corner of St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross, and W. Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

10. Philip Earl of Chesterfield. HOARE.

W. L., standing, directed towards left, looking to front, wig, robes of the Garter, collar and George, right hand on hip, left on table to right, bust of Cicero in niche behind. Under, in centre arms, motto, A DEO ET REGE. Hoar Pinxt I Brooks Fecit The most Noble and Puisant Lord Philip, Dormer, Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield, Baron Stanhope of Shelford, Embafsador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the States General of ye United Provinces, One of the Lords of the Regency, One of His Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, Lord Lieutenant General and General Governor of the Kingdom of Ireland. This plate is most humbly Dedicated to His Excellency By His Excellency's Most Dutifull and Most Obedient servant John Brooks. H. 19 $\frac{5}{8}$; Sub. 18 $\frac{1}{8}$; W. 13 $\frac{3}{4}$.

I. As described. Three known. Brit. Mus.

II. Dedication erased; at bottom, Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St. Martins Lane in the Strand, and W. Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

Born 22nd Sept. 1694, educated at Cambridge, succeeded in 1726 as fourth Earl of Chesterfield, eminent as a speaker and intimate with Pope and all the wits of his time, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland 1745-6, also ambassador to Holland. Died 24th March, 1773, leaving no issue by his wife, the Countess of Walsingham. His celebrated letters are addressed to a natural son who died before his father; he wrote other works, some in French, of which he was a complete master.

11. William Duke of Devonshire. WORDSDALE.

W. L., standing, directed towards left, facing to front, wig, robes of the Garter, collar and George, plumed hat in right hand, left hand on hip, coronet on table to left. Under, in centre arms, motto, CAVENDO TUTUS. Jas Worsdale Pinxit. Jno. Brooks Fecit. The most High Puisant and most Noble Prince William Cavendish

Duke of Devonshire, Marquiss of Hartington; Earl of Devonshire, and Baron Cavendish of Hardwick: Lord Lieutenant of the County of Derby, Keeper of the Rolls of the said County: One of the Lords of His Majesty's Most Honble. Privy Council; and Knight of the most Noble Order of the Garter: Lord Lieutenant General and General Governor of the Kingdom of Ireland. Sold by T. Jefferys at the Corner of St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross and by W. Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge. H. 20 $\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. 18 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 14 $\frac{1}{4}$.

There is probably a state previous to Jefferys' and Herbert's address.

Born 1698, succeeded his father as third duke in 1729, having married in 1718 Catherine, daughter of John Hoskins, Esq. Lord Lieutenant of Ireland 1737 to 1744; died 5th Dec. 1755.

12. Luke Gardiner. JERVIS.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards right, facing to front, wig, plain coat, hat in right hand, left hand in pocket, buildings at foot of a mountain in distance to right. Under, C. Jervis pinxt I Brooks fecit The Right Honble. Luke Gardiner Esqr. H. 13 $\frac{5}{8}$; Sub. 11 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$.

I. As described. One known.

II. At bottom. Sold by T. Jefferys at the Corner of St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross and W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

Member of the Irish Parliament and Privy Council. Married 1711, Anne, daughter and heiress of Hon. Alexander Stewart (second son of first Viscount Mountjoy), died, according to Bromley, in 1755; his grandson of the same name was created Lord Mountjoy (the title being extinct in the Stewart family), and killed at New Ross, in 1798, in an action with the rebels; the painting was probably done several years before the print, which represents rather a young man.

George II. by Brooks is mentioned by Gilbert (History of Dublin Vol. II. app. 3), and the print may have been done, but it has not been met with, nor is it mentioned by Bromley.

13. Samuel Grey. WORSDALE.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed towards left, facing to front, wig, plain dress, right hand open on table to left, left hand on hip. Under, Ias. Worsdale pinxt. I Brooks fecit. Samuel Grey Esqr. one of the Honble the Commissioners of his Majesty's Revencue of Ireland. H. 13 $\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. 12; W. 9 $\frac{5}{8}$.

I. As described.

II. Eyes altered. At bottom, Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St Martins Lane, Charing Cross and W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

His patent of office is dated 15th July, 1736; he died in 1747.

14. Thomas How.

T. Q. L. sitting, directed towards right, looking to front, wig, robes, collar, right hand holding wand, left hand on table to right, on which are mace and sword, and a paper headed, 1745 Association T. H. £10,000. Under, J Brooks Fecit. The Rt Honble Thomas How Esqr Lord Mayor of the City of Dublin, 1733. H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{2}{8}$; W. 10.

I. As described.

II. At bottom, Sold by T Jeffreys at the Corner of St Martins Lane Charing Cross, and W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

III. Retouched in eyes, &c., address erased.

This plate is very similar to that of Sir Samuel Cooke by Faber, jun.

15. Robert Howard. DAHL.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed towards left, facing and looking to front; wig, robes, large book on knee held by left hand, right hand on arm of chair. Under, in centre arms, M Dahl Pinxit J Brooks Excudit The Right Revd Doctr Robert Howard Ld Bishop of Elphin. H. $14\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $12\frac{1}{4}$; W. 10.

I. Before artists' names.

II. As described.

III. Face and wig altered to same as No. 5, pillar and ceiling similar to that in No. 5 introduced in background: inscription erased, instead The most Revd Father in God his Grace Doctor Hugh Boulter Lord Archbishop of Armagh Primate & Metropolitan of all Ireland, and one of the Lords Justices of the said Kingdom. Sold by Ino Brooks at Sr Isaac Newton's head on Cork Hill Dublin. H. $14\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $12\frac{1}{4}$; W. $10\frac{1}{8}$.

IV. Address erased; book &c. retouched.

Attitude similar to that of Sir George Fleming by Faber, jun.

Born 24th Sept. 1683, educated at Trinity College, Dublin; entered the church; married, 1724, Patience (daughter of Godfrey Boleyn of Fennor, Co. Meath, and niece of Henry Singleton (No. 31); Bishop of Killala 1726, and of Elphin 1729; succeeded in 1738 his elder brother, Hugh [see under Faber, jun.] in the manor of Shelton, Co. Wicklow, and died April 1740; his eldest son was created Viscount Wicklow, 1785.

16. Nathaniel Kane. SLAUGHTER.

Two known. Worked with a crisp and brilliant touch.

Lord Mayor in 1734; in 1748 there was a dispute between him and the celebrated Charles Lucas relative to the purchase of mills at Island Bridge by the City of Dublin, in order to procure a supply of water thereto: in the correspondence the alderman alludes to his forty years' service to the city, and also to his son-in-law, Matthew Weld, nephew of Isaac Weld.

17. Humphrey Lord Lanesborough. BROWN.

W. L., standing, directed slightly to right, looking to front, wig, robes, right hand on hip, left holding paper, coronet on table to left, balustrade and trees in background to right. Under, C Brown Dublin Pinxit. Jno Brooks Dublin Fecit. The Rt Honble Humphry Butler Viscount Lanesborough Baron Newtown Butler, Governor and Custos Rotulorum of ye county of Cavan. Sold by W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge. H. 19 $\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. 17 $\frac{7}{8}$; W. 13 $\frac{5}{8}$.

I. As described; but there are marks of an erasure indicating a still earlier state, probably a dedication similar to that on first state of Nos. 10 and 31.

II. "Sold by" erased; prefixed to remainder of address, Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St Martin's Lane Charing Crofs &

Succeeded his father as second Viscount Lanesborough 1735, being one of a family of twenty-three children, he had married in 1726 Mary, daughter of Richard Berry, Esq. of Wardenstown, Co. Westmeath; created Earl of Lanesborough 1756; died 11th April, 1768.

18. John Leland. LEE.

H. L., in oval frame, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, wig, bands, coat buttoned. Under, Ant Lee Pinxit. Jno Brooks Fecit. The Revd John Leland DD Published & Sold by Abraham Bradley at the Two Bibles in Dames Street Bookseller (an erasure on plate). H. 13 $\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 10.

One known.

Born at Wigan in Lancashire, 1671. His parents having settled in Dublin, he was, when qualified by years and study, called to be a pastor of a congregation of Protestant Dissenters in New Row there, in 1716; an able defender of Christianity, in opposition to deistical opinions; and was called, from his learning and tenacious memory, the "Walking Library." Died January 16th, 1766.

19. Sir John Ligonier. LATHEM.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards right, facing towards front, short wig, military coat, sash, star, breastplate, right hand on hip, left on helmet, attack on a castle with cavalry in background to right. Under, Fas Lathem Pinxit. Jno Brooks Fecit Sr John Lewis Ligonier Knt of the Bath Lievt Genl of His Majesty King George Ye 2ds Forces. H. 13½; Sub. 11¾; W. 9¾.

I. As described. Three known.

II. At bottom, London Printed and sold by John Tinney at the Golden Lion in Fleet street.

III. "Tinney" erased; instead, Ryall.

20. William Lingen. LEE.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed to right, facing towards front, wig, plain coat, right hand on hip, left on table to right, holding a letter addressed to himself, behind it inkstand and book. Under, in centre arms, A Lee Pinxit. J Brooks Excudit William Lingen Esqr one of the Secretarys to their Excies the Lords Justices of Ireland &c. Prov Ch 22. V 29. Seest thou a Man diligent in his businefs, he shall stand before Kings, he shall not stand before mean Men. H. 14; Sub. 12¾; W. 10.

There is a family of this name in Co. Hereford; and R. R. W. Lingen, Esq., is now (1876) Secretary to the Treasury in Downing-street.

21. Daniel MacKercher, STEVENS.

T. Q. L., standing, directed and facing to left, as pleading, short wig, embroidered vest, hat under right arm, scroll in hand, left hand on hip. Under, J Stevens Pinxit. Jno Brooks Fecit Daniel MacKercher Esqr. Nihil humani a me alienum Puto. H. 13¾; Sub. 12¾; W. 10.

I. As described. One known.

II. After "Esqr.," Dublin, 1744.

Solicitor to James Annesley (No. 3) in the peerage case, and he is said to have spent an estate therein. Died in Margaret-street, Cavendish Square, London, 2nd March, 1772.

22. Samuel Madden.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards right, facing to front, dark wig, bands, gown, right hand resting on two large volumes on table to left, left hand pointing to bookcase on right. Under, in centre arms, motto, FORTIOR QUI SE QUAM QUI FORTISSIMA VINCIT MÆNIA. In Brooks Excudit. The Reverend Samuel Madden D.D. Quique sui memores—Præmia Laudi, Virgil. Published & Sold by Jno Brooks at Sr Isaac Newton's Head on Cork Hill, Dublin, H. 14¼; Sub. 12¾; W. 10.

I. As described. One known.

II. Address erased; at bottom, Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St Martin's Lane Charing Cross, & W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

Born 1687; educated in Dublin; in 1731 founded the Madden prizes in the College there; in the next year published his "Memoirs of the Twentieth Century;" instituted the Dublin Society, and was eminent for encouraging useful arts. Johnson says that his was "a name which Ireland ought to honour." Died 30th December, 1765.

Sarah Malcolm is mentioned by Bromley, p. 315, as by Brooks after Hogarth. It is not named by Nichols, nor has it been met with. Under "Engraver not ascertained," there will be found one of her, but there is not sufficient similarity of style to class it with Brooks's works.

23. Richard Lord Molesworth. LEE.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards front, looking towards left; hat, uniform, pointing with right hand across breast, left hand next sword-hilt holding gloves, battery and troops in distance to right. Under, A Lee Pinxit Jno Brooks Fecit The Rt Honble Richard Viscount Molesworth Lieut General of his Majesty's Forces and Master General of the Ordnance of Ireland. Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St Martin's Lane and W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge. H. 14; Sub. 12¾; W. 10.

There is probably a state before this address.

Born 1680; entered the army and saved the Duke of Marlborough from being taken prisoner at the battle of Ramilies; succeeded in 1725 his elder brother as third Viscount Molesworth; Master-General of the Ordnance 1740; Commander-in-chief in Ireland 1751, and in 1757 Field Marshal. Died 12th October, 1758, having married, 1st, Jane, daughter to Mr. Lucas of Dublin; 2nd, Mary, daughter of Rev. William Usher, who, with two of her daughters, her brother, and six servants, were burnt to death by a fire at her house in Upper Brook-street, London, 6th May, 1763.

24. Cornelius Nary.

Full H. L., in oval frame, standing, directed towards left, looking to front, curly wig, plain dress, right hand holding open book lettered on edge, A New History of the World, shelves with books behind. Under, Cornelius Nary C.F.P.Dr. H. $14\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $11\frac{5}{8}$; W. 10.

I. As described. One known.

II. At bottom, Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St Martin's Lane Charing Cross and W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

This is probably the print mentioned by Bromley as an "Irish Mez." of this personage.

Born 1660; educated at Naas, Co. Kildare; entered the Roman Catholic Church; was parish priest of St. Michan's, Dublin; author of a "History of the World" and other works, of which some were controversial, but his politeness and moderation were acknowledged by his adversaries. Died March 3rd, 1738.

25. Clement Nevill. HOAR.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards left, facing to front, wig, uniform, truncheon in right hand, left on swordbelt, tents in background to right. Under, Hoar Pinxit. Jno Brooks Fecit. Clement Nevill Esqr Lieutenant General of His Majesty King George the 2nd. Forces. H. $13\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. $12\frac{1}{8}$; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

Three known. Worked in manner similar to No. 17.

26. Robert Lord Newport.

W. L., standing, directed and looking towards front, wig, robes, right hand holding purse on table to left, paper in left hand, figure of Justice in background to right. Under, in centre arms, motto, Fare Mon Devoir. His Excellency Robert Lord Baron Newport of Newport, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, One of his Majesty's most Honble Privy Council and one of the Lords Justices of ye said Kingdom Sold by I Brooks on Cork Hill, Price 5s 5d. H. $20\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. $18\frac{1}{8}$; W. $14\frac{1}{4}$.

I. As described.

II. Address and price erased; at bottom, Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St Martin's Lane Near Charing Cross, and by W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

This plate is a copy, with a few slight alterations, of that of Sir Robert Walpole by Faber, jun., after Vanloo.

Grandson of Sir Robert Jocelyn, Bart., of Hide Hall, Co. Hertford; attained the highest honours at the Irish bar ; Attorney-General 1730, Lord Chancellor 1739 to his death ; created Baron Newport 1743, Viscount Jocelyn 1755 ; died in London, 3rd December, 1756 ; married, 1st, Charlotte, daughter of — Anderson, Esq., of Co. Worcester ; 2nd, Frances, daughter of Thomas Claxton, Esq., of Dublin, and widow of the first Earl of Ross ; his eldest son by the first wife was created Earl of Roden in 1771.

Margaret Plunket is mentioned by Bromley, p. 443, as being by Brooks. The personage can hardly be any other than "Peg," so well known in Dublin, and who, in 1794, published, as Mrs. Margaret Leeson, her Memoirs in 3 vols. ; from these it appears that she died in 1797, after forty years of loosely spent life. This would make her an infant when Brooks practised in Dublin, so there is probably no such print.

27. Mrs. (Jane) Ponsonby. WORSDALE.

H. L., in oval, directed and facing towards front, hair brushed back, low dress. Under, Was Worsdale Pinxt Jno Brooks Fecit The Honble Mrs Ponsonby H. 13½ ; Sub. 11½ ; W. 9¾ ; O. D. H. 10½ ; W. 8¾.

I. As described.

II. At bottom, Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St Martin's Lane Charing Cross, & W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

Jane, daughter of Captain Taylor of Cork ; married, 1737, Hon. Folliott Ponsonby, third son of first Viscount Duncannon (who died 1746, and is, with his two children, buried in Anne's Church, Dublin) ; died 1787.

28. Lady Helena Rawdon. LATHEM.

I. Before address.

II. As described.

Born 14th February, 1717 ; married, 1741, Sir John Rawdon, afterwards created Earl of Moira ; died 11 June, 1746.

I. As described.

II. At bottom, Sold by T Jefferys at the Corner of St Martin's Lane Charing Crofs and W Herbert at the Golden Globe on London Bridge.

Entered the navy, distinguished himself greatly in the engagement off Toulon, 1744; Lord of the Admiralty 1751; Admiral of the Fleet 1762; married Arabella, daughter of Captain Dawson; both his son Sir Joshua, and his grandson Sir Josias, afterwards became eminent in the naval service. He died at his seat, Ravenswell, near Bray, Ireland Jan. 1st 1768, leaving £160,000 to be divided amongst his relations and friends.

30. Richard St. George. BINDON.

T. Q. L., standing, directed and facing slightly to right, wig, breastplate, with braided coat over, right elbow leaning on rock to left, hand holding three-cornered hat, left hand on hip, in distance to right a mounted groom with a led horse. Under in centre arms, motto, FIRMITAS IN COELO FRAGILITAS IN TERRA. Fran Bindon Armiger Pinxt. John Brooks Fecit Richd St George Esqr Brigr Genl in his Majesty King George the II ds Forces. H. $13\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. 12; W. 10.

Son of Henry St. George (an officer in the Irish army of Charles II. to whom the estate of Woodsgift, Co. Kilkenny, was granted in 1666) by Anne, daughter of Alderman Hatfield of Dublin; entered the army, and rose in 1747 to the rank of Lieutenant-General. Died 1755.

31. Henry Singleton.

W. L., standing, directed and facing towards right, looking to front, long wig, robes, scroll in right hand, left hand on table to right. Under, in centre arms, *I Brooks delin et fecit. At bottom Ino Brooks Excudit. H. 6; W. 4.; O. D. H. $3\frac{1}{2}$; W. $3\frac{3}{8}$.

Frontispiece to his Poems, published in Dublin, 1742.

RICHARD BROOKSHAW was born in 1736, according to Nagler and Redgrave; the time of his death is not known.

He practised in London for several years, chiefly as a copyist, in small size, of popular prints, and not meeting with much encouragement, about 1772 went to Paris, where he produced many admirable works, and was deservedly patronised and well remunerated.

He had his earlier Parisian works published in London also, which are consequently described; and it may be of interest to mention the following, which do not appear to have been so published.

Charles Comte d'Artois. H. 15; W. 11.

Marie Comtesse d'Artois. H. 8; W. $4\frac{3}{4}$; also H. 15; W. 11.

Similar to but not a copy of the print by James Watson.

Born 11th July, 1751 ; youngest and posthumous child of Frederick Prince of Wales ; married, 8th November, 1766, to Christian VII. king of Denmark, who treated her with neglect ; and being accused by his mother and brother of intimacy with his physician and minister, Struensee, the unfortunate Princess was suddenly, on the 16th January, 1772, consigned to prison, but retired from Denmark (under the protection of a British fleet, commanded by Sir Robert Keith), to Zell, where she died, 10th March, 1775.

This print is thus named in manuscript in the Burney Collection (Brit. Mus.) ; the face bears considerable resemblance to the second state of No. 11, but appears rather young for the lady's age at this date ; it may, however, have been done from a painting of earlier date, and is, at any rate, a very charming print of a very pretty woman.

Born 1720 ; the celebrated maid of honour to the Princess of Wales, who, privately, on 5th August, 1744, married Augustus John Hervey, afterwards third Earl of Bristol ; and, publicly, on 8th March, 1769, married Evelyn Pierrepont, Duke of Kingston. She was impeached before the House of Lords, and tried for bigamy in 1776 ; her second marriage was declared invalid, but she escaped the consequences by pleading the privilege of the peerage ; she went abroad, and died at Fontainebleau, 28th August, 1788.

Walpole frequently alludes to her, from the time of her appearance in 1746, as Iphigenia at the masquerade, to the trial.

Thus named in manuscript in the Burney collection (Brit. Mus.); and on comparison with the prints by Blackmore after Reynolds, and by Godfrey after Colson, there appears every probability that it is correctly so named; he is younger and better looking in this than in the others.

Born at Truro, 1721; nephew to Sir S. Goodere, who murdered his elder brother, and was executed therefor in 1741; educated at Oxford, but adopted the stage and opened the Haymarket theatre in 1747; he became celebrated as a writer and mimic, broke his leg in 1766 and suffered amputation; in 1766, had disgraceful imputations brought forward against him in consequence of his intention to represent the Duchess of Kingston on his stage; although acquitted, the matter broke him down and he died at Dover, Oct. 21st, 1777. Boswell calls his wit and humour in private conversation "irresistible;" it is clear, however, that sometimes he degenerated into too great license.

The question whether the important and interesting series of prints inscribed ALEXANDER BROWNE EXCUDIT were engraved, or merely published by him, has naturally excited attention; Redgrave classes him as the engraver, but the general, and probably correct opinion seems to be that he was not.

Granger, Vol. V., p 322, states in a note that "Alexander Browne fecit is inscribed on a mezzotinto of Charles II.; this is probably the second state of No. 5, of which an impression exists in the Storer Collection at Eton ; if so, it proves nothing, for the inscription is comparatively quite modern, and evidently long subsequent to the time at which the print was engraved.

The first known record of Browne is his work published in 1669, entitled, "Ars Pictoria." On the title-page he calls himself, "Practitioner of the Art of Limning." The book is printed "for the Author, and are to be sold by him at his Lodging, at the sign of the Angel, the Corner of James's-street and Long Acre, and Richard Thompson, at the Sun in Bedford-street, and Arthur Tooker, at the Globe in the Strand, near the New Exchange."

The art of limning means what is usually called miniature painting ; and he is named amongst these artists in the list of them in the Catalogue of the South Kensington Exhibition in 1865, although there was no specimen by him in that collection.

The elder Faber was a miniaturist, who adopted the mezzotinto manner of engraving, but his prints were mostly executed exactly in the manner of miniatures ; whereas Browne's prints have so bold and free a touch, that it is incredible that they should have been done by an artist habituated to work in small.

Walpole tells us, that in 1683 Browne obtained a patent to publish one hundred mezzotinto prints from Vandyck and Lely, for fourteen years.

It is worthy of remark, as a fact, hitherto unnoticed, which might possibly lead to further discoveries, that the first states of Nos. 19 and 21 have as painter "P. Lely"; the second states of them, and all the others after him have "P. Lely, Eques": now as knighthood was conferred on this painter, January 11th, 1679-80, it would seem to follow that, except these two, all the other prints after Lely were engraved after this date. In the somewhat similar series of prints, inscribed "R Tompson, excudit" the converse of this occurs, "Sr" being added before this painter's name, in the second state of the Earl of Derby, all the others being without the title.

It therefore appears evident that Tompson's series preceded that of Browne, the former referable to the latter part of the eighth, the latter to the earlier part of the ninth decade of the century.

It is not probable that any of Browne's prints were executed after the death of Charles II., in February, 1685 ; his name is attached as publisher to prints of James II., Mary Beatrix and others by John Smith, but the date of his death, or departure from England, is not known.

In his work, already alluded to, there is not any mention of mezzotinto until the last page, where the following occurs, appended as a kind of note, and printed in Italics.

“The Manner or Way of Mezo Tinto:—First take a very well polished plate of Copper, and ruffen it all over with your Engin one way, then cross it over with the Engin again, and if you find occasion then cross it over the third time, untill it be ruffened all over alike (that is to say) if it were to be printed, it would print black all over; this done, take Charcole or black Chalk to rub over the plate, and then draw your design with white Chalk upon the plate, then take a sharp stift, and trace out the outlines of the design you drew with the white Chalk, and where you would have the light strike strongest, take a burnisher, and burnish that part of the plate where you would have the light strike as clean as it was when it was first polished; where you would have the fainter light, you must not polish it so much, and this way you may make it either fainter or stronger, according to your fancy. As for the manner or shape of the Engin, they are divers, and if any ingenious person have a desire to have any made, the Author will give them farther directions.”

This announcement must have put an end to the mystery with which, up to that time, the art was surrounded, and this agrees with Walpole's statement that Browne encouraged all the artists as the new manner grew into vogue.

It yet remains to ascertain who engraved the plates if Browne did not. Walpole says “that the engravers were known to be ‘R. Tomson,’ (a publisher likewise), Abraham Blooteling, Gerard Valk, J. Verkoljé,” &c. Van Somer and Vandervaart undoubtedly worked for Tompson; possibly for Browne also; and some of the following bear a strong resemblance in style of handling to the earlier prints by Isaac Beckett.

Browne appears to have been in the habit of taking several reverses from his prints; this proves his connection and acquaintance with the Dutch and Flemish engravers, for there seems to be considerable reason for supposing that this practice, if not introduced by, was first largely patronised by Rubens.

Bromley calls this portrait that of Thomas Lord Grey, the Parliamentarian, who died in 1657. Granger calls it that of his son, Thomas, who succeeded his grandfather as 2nd Earl of Stamford in 1673. Richardson, in a note, states his belief that the portrait was of Ralph, 2nd Lord
Grey of Werke, who succeeded his father in 1674, and died in 1675.

But there does not appear to be any valid reason why the portrait should not represent a personage entitled "Lord Grey" at the time the plate was engraved ; if this be so, it is not one of these three, nor is it Charles North, who was summoned to parliament as Baron Grey of Rolleston, 17th October, 1673, and died in 1690, as he succeeded his father in 1677, as fifth Baron North, which title consequently would be mentioned on the print ; it, therefore, can only represent Forde, and it also appears a companion print in every way to the following portrait about the identity of which there appears to be no dispute.

Forde succeeded his father in 1675 as 3rd Lord Grey of Werke. He is mentioned by Burnet as passing a Bill in the Lords by counting on a division, for which he was one of the tellers, a very fat lord as ten which was not observed by Lord Norris, the other teller ; he married as stated under following number, the fourth daughter of Lord Berkeley, but made use of his intimacy in the family to seduce, at an early age, his sister-in-law, Lady Henrietta, the fifth daughter, whose beauty and attractions proved her ruin ; on the discovery of the intrigue by the Earl her father, he indicted Lord Grey, and the trial came on in November, 1682, but Lord Grey escaped by the declaration of the lady that she was married to a Mr. Turner, and was under no restraint ; he afterwards joined the Duke of Monmouth's rebellion, and is stated to have behaved with cowardice and treachery ; he was pardoned by William III., who renewed the title of Earl of Tankerville for him in 1695, and made him Lord Privy Seal in 1700; he died in the following year.

His only daughter was married in 1695 to Charles Bennet, 2nd Lord Ossulston, in whose favour the Earldom of Tankerville was revived in 1774.

12. (Mary) Lady Grey. LELY.

Similar in attitude to the print of Nell Gwynn engraved in line by Valck.

Daughter of George Kirk, groom of the chamber to Charles II., and sister to Diana, Countess of Oxford; she was maid of honour to Queen Catharine, and married Sir Richard Vernon. Granger says that she is alluded to by Grammont, under the name of Warmestre, and scandalous stories related of her.

18. Sir Peter Lely. IPSE.

II. Inscription altered to P Lelij Eques pinxit Sold by Alex: Browne at the blew ballcony in little Queen street.

Attitude similar to the Duchess of Somerset by Vandervaaert.

Daughter and heiress of Adam Loftus, of Rathfarnham (created Viscount Lisburne, 1685); married Thomas, who succeeded his father in 1696 as 5th Baron Wharton (created Marquis of Wharton, 1715); and carried the estates of Rathfarnham, &c., into that family; these were sold in 1723 by her son Philip, Duke of Wharton, to William Connolly, Speaker, for £62,000; Swift speaks of the gallantries of this lady.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed and looking to front, low dress, right hand holding flowers in lap, left hand plucking blossom from orange tree in vase to right, wooded background. Attitude similar to Lady Elizabeth Jones, under Tompson.

Daughter of Sir Lionel Talmash by Elizabeth, Duchess of Lauderdale, his wife; married Archibald Lord Lorne (who, when his father was beheaded in 1685, became 10th Earl of Argyle, created in 1701, 1st Duke of Argyle, died 1703); died at Campbelltown, 9th May, 1735, having lived separated from her husband for several years before his death; was the mother of the 2nd and 3rd Dukes of Argyle.

21. Sir John Lowther. LELY.

T. Q. L., sitting at base of fluted pillar to left, directed to right, facing and looking to front, wig, lace cravat, scarf across right arm, hand pointing, paper in left hand, sea-view and harbour in distance to right. Under, Sr John Lowther Bart. Sr P. Lelij Pinxit. Alex: Browne excudit. H. 14 $\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. 13 $\frac{1}{4}$; W. 11.

I. Before name of personage, and "Sr" before Painter.

II. As described.

III. Address altered to Sold by Alex: Browne at ye blew Ballcony in little Queen street.

Granger calls this Sir John Lowther, who died 1675, aged 70; but as the print does not represent an old man, it is probably that of his grandson, born 1655, who succeeded on his death as second baronet to the great estates in Westmoreland and Cumberland, including the Whitehaven collieries; was M. P. for the former county from that time to his being created in 1696 Viscount Lonsdale; married Catherine, daughter of Sir Frederick Thynne, and died, 6th July, 1700.

W. L., standing, directed and looking towards front, loose dress; right hand on pedestal to left, on which is vase of flowers with sculptured figures, left forefinger pointing downwards, scarf under right hand and over left arm, balustrade, pillar, and trees in background to right. Under, Madam Jane Middleton P Lelij Eques pinxit Sold by Alexander Brown at ye blew ballcony in little Queen street. H. 18 $\frac{5}{8}$; Sub. 18; W. 11 $\frac{3}{8}$. Brit: Mus.

Daughter of Sir Roger Needham, married to Mr. Middleton, a gentleman of small fortune. Evelyn, a relative of her father's, calls her "a famous and indeed incomparable beauty." She is mentioned in most of the memoirs of the time, generally as being not less frail than fair, and is supposed to have died about 1690.

23. Mrs. Anne Montague. LELY.

W. L., a child, sitting on a cloak, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, cap, loose dress, legs bare, flowers between hands, vase with orange tree behind, landscape in distance on right. Under, Mrs Anne Montague. P Lelij Eques pinxit. Sold by Alex Brown at ye blew ballcony in little Queen street. H. $13\frac{3}{8}$; Sub, $12\frac{1}{2}$; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described, Brit: Mus.

II. Plate worn, rework in shadows.

Somewhat similar in age and attitude to Madame Anne Windham by Beckett.

Granger calls this lady the third daughter of the 1st Earl of Sandwich, who married, 1st, Sir Richard Edgecumbe, 2nd, Christopher Montagu, and died 14th March, 1729. This is doubtful, for the print is inscribed "Mrs." not "The Lady Anne," and this lady must have been married about 1671, her eldest daughter having been baptized 16th April, 1672; but the print represents a child, which is, therefore, most probably her niece Anne, daughter of the Hon. Sidney Montague (2nd son of 1st Earl of Sandwich, who died, November 11th, 1727), by Anne, daughter and heir to Sir Frances Worley; she died unmarried.

24. Madam Katharine Nevill. LELY.

T. Q. II. As described. Brit: Mus.

III. "Ant Van Dyck" erased; instead, P Lelij Brit: Mus.

This portrait is so entirely in Lely's style that Van Dyck's name was evidently an error when engraving the inscription.

Granger and Bromley call her Catharine, daughter of Henry Lord Abergavenny, married in 1660 to Sir Robert Howard, and afterwards to Robert Berry, Esq.; but query, as costume is of period subsequent to 1660, and she must then have been Lady Howard.

25. Elizabeth Countess of Northumberland. LELY.

Born July 4th, 1644, and succeeded in 1668 as eleventh earl; a young nobleman of great promise, but died at Turin, 21st May, 1670, leaving a daughter; the famous house of Percy thus becoming extinct in the male line.

28. William Prince of Orange. LELY.

Youngest daughter of Esme Stuart, third Duke of Lenox, and Earl of March (died July, 1624); married at Putney, June, 1632, to Jerome Weston, second Earl of Portland.

30. Lady Price. LELY.

T. Q. Granger calls her Mrs. Price, the lady so frequently mentioned by Grammont, who was maid of honour to Anne, Duchess of York, but if so, whence the title? there was a Lady Price (daughter of Sir Edmund Warcup, who had the vanity to think that Charles II. could marry his daughter), mentioned as a fine woman, whom, perhaps, the print may represent.

31. Frances, Duchess of Richmond. LELY.

Daughter of Sir Robert Lee, of Billesly, Co. Warwick, second wife of Francis (created Lord Seymour of Troubridge, who died, 1664). Granger calls her grandmother to the 5th and 6th Dukes of Somerset; but Collins says she had no issue, these noblemen being descended from Frances Prinne, the first wife of Lord Seymour.

35. Honble. Henry Sidney. LELY.

Children of Philip, 3rd Earl (elder brother of preceding), by Lady Catherine Cecil, daughter of William, Earl of Salisbury. Robert was created Baron Sydney in 1689, and succeeded as 4th Earl of Leicester in 1697. He died in 1702, leaving issue by Lady Elizabeth Egerton, daughter of John, Earl of Bridgewater. Dorothy married Thomas Cheeke, Esq.

37. Elizabeth, Duchess of Somerset. LELY.

W. Granger appears doubtful of the identity of this lady; but there is nearly a certainty that Bromley is right, and that it is Elizabeth, who could not, however, have been thus entitled when the picture was painted although she was so when the print was engraved. She was only child of Josceline, Earl of Northumberland (No. 27); was married first in 1679, at the age of fourteen, to Henry, Earl of Ogle, who died, 1st Nov. 1680; then contracted to Thomas Thynne (No. 40); after his murder, married, 30th May, 1682, to Charles, sixth Duke of Somerset, commonly called the proud Duke, and had a numerous issue. She died, 23rd November, 1722.

Granger supposes this to be the Lady Stanhope, created Countess of Chesterfield in 1660, and who died in 1667; but this is very properly queried by Bromley, who suggests the real personage, viz., Elizabeth daughter of Philip, and Earl of Chesterfield, by Lady Elizabeth Butler (No. 7); born 1663; married John Lyon, who succeeded his father in 1695, as fourth Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorn; she was mother to the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th Earls of Strathmore.

Son of Sir Thomas Thynne, friend of the Duke of Monmouth, contracted in marriage to the daughter of the Earl of Northumberland (No. 37), but assassinated in Pall Mall, on Sunday evening, 12th February, 1681-2, by the emissaries of Count Koningsmark. His vast estate devolved on his cousin, ancestor of the Marquis of Bath. The epitaph by a "wit" of the day:

"Here lies long Tom, of Longleat Hall,
"Who would not have miscarried;
"Had he married the woman he lay withal,
"Or lain with the woman he married,"

had an application probably to passages in his life, not publicly known. He is buried in Westminster Abbey.

HENRY BRYER is stated by Redgrave to have been a pupil of William Wynne Ryland (who, however, only practised in the line and stipple methods), they were certainly partners as printsellers, and carried on business for some years opposite the Royal Exchange, in Cornhill; their trading ended in bankruptcy, which Bryer seems not to have long survived, being alluded to as "deceased" in the proclamation dated 2nd April, 1783, for the apprehension of Ryland for forgery, an offence of which he was found guilty, and he was hung on 29th August, 1783, an extraordinary thunderstorm occurring just before his execution.

There is a print of "Cupid Disarmed," published by Bryer at the same address as the second of the following. A print of Dunckerly, by J. Jones, has the address of Ann Bryer, 1789; she may have been the widow of the engraver.

1. Anne, Duchess of Cumberland.

W. L., standing, directed towards front, facing slightly and looking towards left, hair high, with two sets of pearls, right elbow on pedestal to left, on which are a vase and pair of doves, an ermine robe hangs beside it, her left hand holds her dress, landscape in distance to right; on the upper step on which she stands, Her Royal Highness the Dutcheſs of Cumberland H: Bryer ad Vivum del. fecit et Excudit. H. 24; W. 15.

I. Before any inscription or alteration of face, border of drapery, fur of robe, and before the doves were introduced and much reworking of the plate. One known. Brit: Mus.

In this state, Bromley (p. 417) considers the personage to be Mary, daughter of Benedict Conquest, of Irnham, Co. Lincoln; married, 31st May, 1763, Henry, 8th Lord Arundell, of Wardour; and died at Irnham, 21st June, 1813, aged 70. The picture is supposed to have been painted by Reynolds, who notes Lady Arundel as a sitter, 1766-8, and Cotton states that whole lengths of her and her husband were at Wardour Castle. Taylor appears to confuse these with the Earl of Arundell, afterwards 11th Duke of Norfolk, and one of his wives.

II. As described.

III. Hair and face altered, additional pearls and earring added, eyes looking downwards, "Cumberland" erased, instead Gloucester. Brit: Mus.

Bromley states on authority of the Gulston Catalogue, that this plate was first altered to Duchess of Gloucester, and afterwards to that of Cumberland; in this he is mistaken, as the Cumberland state is clearly prior to the other.

Eldest daughter of Simon Luttrell (who was created Baron Irnham, in 1768, and Earl of Carhampton, in 1785) married, 1st, Christopher Horton, of Catton, in Derbyshire; 2nd, in 1771, H. R. H. the Duke of Cumberland, younger brother of George III., who was much displeased at the alliance. She died in 1803.

2. Diana. NIXON.

THOMAS BURFORD is stated by Redgrave to have been born about 1710, and to have died in London about 1770 (the dates on his prints range from 1741-65); he was a member of the Incorporated Society of Artists; his style is clear and finished.

2. Charles Churchill. SCHAAK.

Head in oval, frame in corners, directed to front, looking towards left, short hair, plain coat. Under, J. S. C. Schaak pinxt. T Burford fecit Mr Charles Churchill. publish'd as the Act Directs January 1st 1765 by Thos Burford. H. 20; Sub. $18\frac{3}{8}$; W. 14.

Son of a clergyman, born in Westminster, 1731, entered the Church and was ordained by Dr. Sherlock, in 1756. Although married early in life, he became dissipated, displaying great abilities in his poems and various writings: these are chiefly satirical, but at the time were highly popular, and had considerable influence; he was a friend of Wilkes, and his quarrel with Hogarth gave rise to the celebrated caricature of him by that painter; he died at Boulogne, Novr. 4th, 1764.

MICHAEL BURGHERS, a native of Holland, came to England on the taking of Utrecht by the French, and settled at Oxford, where he engraved the almanacs, commencing in 1676, and a number of portraits; but, except the following, all known are in the line manner.

Anthony Wood.

H. L., in oval, directed and looking to right, long hair, bands, round oval in corners, Antonius Wood Antiquarius Ob. 28 Novr Ao 1695, Æt 64, at bottom, Done and Sold by M Burg in St Peter the East at Oxford. H. $3\frac{3}{4}$; W. $3\frac{3}{8}$. Brit: Mus.

Born at Oxford, 17th December, 1632; became a famous antiquarian, and was author of the "Athenæ Oxonienses." He died at Oxford, 29th November, 1695.

THOMAS BURKE was born in Dublin, in 1749, and was pupil to John Dixon; but, following the example of some other engravers of that period, gave up the mezzotinto for the chalk method.

He executed a number of works after Angelica Kauffman, with whom he was a special favourite, and bore a high artistic reputation in his day.

He died in London, in December, 1815.

1. Queen Charlotte. KAUFFMAN.

T. Q. L., standing on left, facing to front, high head-dress, necklace, in right hand a wreath, left on arm of sleeping boy towards right, around him books, globe, compasses, music, and various instruments. II. As described.

Second daughter of the Duke of Mecklenburgh-Strelitz; born, 16th May, 1744; married, 8th September, 1761, to George III., being accompanied to England by the Duchesses of Ancaster and Hamilton. Died at Kew, 17th November, 1818.

2. Chevalier D'Eon. HUQUIER.

H. L., in oval frame, directed and looking towards right, wig, right hand in breast of coat, on which is a small star. Under, Huquier Pinxt. Burke Fect. The Chevalier D'Eon. Publish'd as the Act Directs Augt 7, 1771, by I Wefson in Litchfield Street St Anns Soho. H. 14; Sub. 12 $\frac{5}{8}$; W. 9 $\frac{7}{8}$; O. D. H. 10; W. 9 $\frac{1}{8}$.

Born at Tonnerre, in Burgundy, Oct. 17th, 1727; in 1761, came to London as Secretary of Embassy to the Duc de Nivernois; was appointed minister plenipotentiary; but Count de Guerchy having become ambassador in 1763, D'Eon was much offended, and published a pamphlet, for which he was prosecuted by the Count, and found guilty. A curious trial took place in 1777, before Lord Mansfield, as to his sex, from which time he wore female attire. He died in Millman street, Foundling Hospital, 22nd May, 1810, and was buried at St. Pancras' Church. Surgical examination after decease proved him to have been male.

3. (Thomas Dimsdale.)

H. L., in oval frame, directed and facing towards right, looking to front, wig, plain dress. H. 15; Sub. 13 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 11; O. D. H. 11 $\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. 10.

Bromley, page 385, gives this plate as by this engraver, ad vivum; he is probably correct, but no lettered impression has been met with.

Son of John Dimsdale, of Theydon Gernon, near Epping; became a surgeon at Hertford; published works on inoculation, and was selected, in 1768, to inoculate the Empress Catherine of Russia, this he successfully performed, and was created a Baron, received £10,000 and an annuity of £500; afterwards opened a banking house in Cornhill, in partnership with his sons and the Barnards; was M.P. for Hertford, where he died, December 30th, 1800; was interred in the Quakers' burying-ground, at Bishop Stortford.

4. (John Henry Hampe.) KAUFFMAN.

H. L., in oval frame, directed and facing towards right, wig, at bottom serpent and rod, and branch, on scroll, ΓΑΣΤΡΟΣ ΚΡΑΤΕΡ, scratched, Angelica Kauffman pinx T Burke fecit. H. 4 $\frac{3}{8}$; W. 5 $\frac{1}{8}$; O. D. H. 4; W. 3 $\frac{3}{8}$.

Bromley, page 387, mentions that there is a long inscription, but this must be printed separately from the plate; it is not attached to the impression in Brit. Mus.

Metallurgist, &c. Died 1777.

5. Richard, Earl Howe. DE KOSTER.

by S De Koster. Engraved by T Burke The Right Honble Richd Earl Howe. Dedicated by Permission To Sir Charles Saxton Baronet, Proprietor of the Original Picture. London Publish'd Decr 1 1794 by J Brydon Charing Cross. H. 19 $\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. 17 $\frac{1}{4}$; W. 14; Sub. 13 $\frac{3}{8}$; HIB. 14 $\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. 11.

Born 19th March, 1722; entered the navy, and distinguished himself on many occasions, but principally by his being in command at the defeat of the French fleet, on first of June, 1794. He succeeded, in 1758, as third Viscount Howe, and was raised to an earldom, in August, 1788; K. G., 1795; He was afterwards the means of inducing the mutineers at the Nore to return to their duty. He died 5th August, 1799.

A mezzotinto portrait of him was taken by a foreign artist, without his knowledge, he was amazed when it was presented to him, but hung it up in his cabin, and for a long time this caused him to be known in the navy as "Black Dick."

6. Frederick, Lord North. DANCE.

An architect of considerable repute in his time, and author of several works; amongst others, "Design for a new Bridge at Westminster, 1736," and the "Builder's Price Book." Died, 3rd March, 1751.

3. Thomas Pingo. R. A. HOLLAND.

Bromley, page 471 (æ 46, 1738), dated 1741, engraver's name given as R. Carwitham, but in Evans' Catalogue, No. 20346, it is "J," where, also, a proof before inscription is mentioned, probably that described in Strawberry Hill Catalogue, page 126.

Medallist; born in Italy; came to England; executed some good works about 1745; was appointed engraver to the Royal Mint at the commencement of the reign of George III. Died December, 1776.

WILLIAM CLARKE practised a few years after the introduction of the Art; his style resembles that of Isaac Beckett, by whom he may most probably have been taught.

It is likely that some of the prints of this period without engraver's name, published by W. Beckett and others, were executed by Clarke.

1. John Shower.

Bromley, p. 227. Ames., p. 160, not mentioned as mezzotinto. oval frame, bands, quarto size.

Sykes' sale, 25th June, 1824. Lot 120 mentions Proof and letters.

Born at Exeter, May, 1657; ordained by some Dissenting ministers; travelled on the Continent with nephew of Sir S. Barnardiston, finally settled in London in 1690, as minister in Silver-street; afterwards, in the Old Jewry. Died June 28th, 1715; buried at Highgate; was author of several works.

Born 12th August, 1662; succeeded his brother, Francis, in 1678, as sixth Duke of Somerset; married, in 1682, to Lady Elizabeth Percy (see next); died 2nd December, 1748. He is best known as the "Proud Duke of Somerset."

3. Elizabeth, Duchess of Somerset.

H. L., in oval, directed slightly to left, facing slightly to right, looking to front, hair curled high over forehead, low dress, curl on left shoulder, on which robe is fastened; edging of jewels to bodice: next her right shoulder, W Clarke fecit. Under, Her Grace The Dutcheffs of Somerset. Sold by W Beckett at the back side of the Royal Exchange. H. $13\frac{1}{2}$; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$; O. D. H. $11\frac{5}{8}$; W. $9\frac{1}{2}$.

I. Before engraver's name or any inscription. One known.

II. As described. Four known.

See page 120.

She was one of the principal ornaments of the Court of Queen Anne, and succeeded Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, as Groom of the Stole. Her baronial titles passed to her eldest son, and on his death, devolved on his daughter, the wife of Sir Hugh Smithson, created Duke of Northumberland, 1766.

Swift lampooned the Duchess, who had red hair, as "Carrots," and consequently made her an enemy to his advancement.

BUTLER CLOWES, according to Bromley, "amused himself with scraping the heads of his family and acquaintance from the life, without previous drawings. Few of them have any resemblance, and most of the plates were destroyed, almost as soon as finished." This criticism is too severe, for his works show considerable artistic ability; he also scraped several large caricatures after Collett, amongst them:—

A Rescue, or the Tars triumphant.

The Henpeck'd Husband.

The Dying Usurer.

Grown Gentleman taught to Dance.

The Female Bruisers.

His address appears on several prints by James Watson and others. According to the foregoing authority, he died in 1782.

1. Frances Attwood.

Bromley, page 440, dated 1771; afterwards Mrs. Manniok.

2. (John Attwood.)

I. As described. Three known.

II. Plate cut $\frac{3}{4}$ at top, $\frac{1}{2}$ at bottom, re-touched, publication and inscription after "B Clowes fecit" erased, but the latter re-engraved, with, at bottom, London: Publish'd as the Act directs Jany 1st 1769. Printed for Carington Bowles Map & Printfeller No 69 in St Paul's Church Yard.

Born at Southampton, about 1747; early became a musician; was for a time on the stage; composed several operas, one of which was the "Padlock," brought out by Garrick, at Drury Lane, in which he acted "Mungo" with the greatest success; his collection of nautical songs are still popular, and they produced great effect at the time. Died in Arlington-street, Camden Town, 25th July, 1814.

This print is not mentioned by Bromley.

8. Henry Dickenson.

Bromley, page 385, date, 1771.

Son of Stephen Elmer, of Farnham, A.R.A.; was an artist; exhibited at the Academy, 1783, &c.; practised in Dublin and other parts of Ireland.

13. (John Glas.)

H. L., oval frame at corners and on top, directed towards left, facing and looking to front, dark wig and coat, white cravat. H. $4\frac{5}{8}$; W. $3\frac{3}{4}$.

Not mentioned by Bromley.

Born at Dundee, 1698; became minister of a country church; in 1727, published a work to prove that the civil establishment of religion was inconsistent with Christianity, for which he was deposed, and became the founder of a sect called Glassites, and afterwards Sandemanians. Died at Dundee, in 1773.

14. Elizabeth B. Gulston.

H. L., in oval frame, directed and looking to front, hat with double band and feathers, dress close to throat. On bottom of frame, Mrs Gulston Ealing Grove Midx. At bottom, on space partly cleared, B Clowes ad Vivum fecit. As the Act Directs Dec 1 1771. H. 8; W. $6\frac{1}{2}$; O. D. H. $5\frac{1}{4}$; W. $4\frac{7}{8}$.

Elizabeth Bridgetta, second daughter of Sir Thomas Stepney, Bart., and a descendant of Vandyck; born, 1749; married, 1768, Joseph Gulston, of Ealing Grove, the famous collector; was beautiful and accomplished, and executed some very fair etchings. She unfortunately wanted good sense in money matters, a defect shared in by her husband, and which ultimately brought ruin on the family. Died of water on the brain, at Knowle Cottage, March, 1779.

15. (Thomas Lediard.)

H. L., in circular frame at top and bottom, directed and looking towards left, wig, plain dress. H. 6; W. $4\frac{1}{2}$; D. 4.

I. COLE is probably the same as James Cole, who engraved in line many book and other plates; his principal works are, the illustrations to Dart's Westminster Abbey and Canterbury Cathedral, where he is stated to live at the Crown, in Great Kirby-street, Hatton Garden.

It is possible that the expression, "Engraved by," on the following print, may refer to the inscription only; no other work in mezzotinto by this engraver has been met with, so as to compare the style.

John, Duke of Marlborough.

H. L., in oval, directed towards left, facing and looking towards front, wig (which is entirely engraved in the line manner), armour, sash, laurel and palm branches in corners at top, crown overhead. Under, in centre arms, with motto of the Garter:

*No Monument of Brags or Stone

Engraved by I Cole. The Words by Mr Puckle. H. $8\frac{1}{2}$; Sub. $7\frac{1}{8}$; W. 6; O. D. H. $6\frac{1}{8}$; W. $5\frac{3}{4}$.

John Churchill, the famous general, born 24th May, 1650; created Baron Churchill, 1685; Earl of Marlborough, 1689; Duke of Marlborough, 1702. Died 16th June, 1722.

SIR RALPH COLE, of Brancepeth, Co. Durham, second baronet; was an amateur painter, having studied under Van Dyck, and was an intimate friend of Francis Place, who scraped his portrait. He is stated in Burke's Baronetage to have died in 1660; but this date appears somewhat too early for the following portrait; and Redgrave speaks of his painting a portrait of T. Windham (see under Tompson) in 1677.

Charles II.

H. L., directed to right, facing and looking to front, long wig, lace cravat, armour, crown before him to right, as if held in his hand.

Two known. Brit: Mus. Suth: Coll.

PETER COOMBES is known chiefly by the following print; Heinecken (who is the authority for his Christian name) states that he engraved also after Guido.

It is not unlikely that some of the prints published by E. Cooper, without any engraver's name, were by this artist.

The inscription places the date of this print between 1707 and 1714. See Bishop Moore, by Faithorne.

W. L., a boy standing, directed and looking to front, loose dress, sandals, left hand taking grapes from a basket of fruit on stone to left, right hand holding one to a parrot on perch above basket, dog on right barking, garden and terraces in background. Under, Mr Charles Moore Son to the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Ely I Kerseboom Pinx. E Cooper ex. P Coombes fec: H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{1}{4}$; W. 10.

The name I., or J. COOPER, as publisher, and, in one case, as engraver, are attached to the following; but no particulars are known of him, except that his address is also on some of Faber Junior's earlier prints.

He is not to be confused with Edward Cooper, who was the extensive publisher of prints, at end of 17th and commencement of 18th centuries.

1. Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam. JANSEN.

H. L., in oval frame, ornamented at top, mace and purse in angles at bottom, directed towards left, looking to front, hat, ruff, medal and George. Under, *The Right Honble Francis Bacon, Baron Verulam and Viscount St Albans, Lord High Chancellor of England, Obijt 9 April 1626 Ætat 66. Cornelius Johnson pinxit. II. Scratches and damages on bottom of inscription space.

Born at York House, in the Strand, 22nd Jany., 1561, and having every advantage of education, became one of the leaders of the human mind; he was a lawyer, and rose to the office of Chancellor, 7th March, 1616-7; in July of the next year, created Baron Verulam, but was obliged to resign in four years after, in consequence of accusations of corruption admitted by himself to be true; he was pardoned by the King in 1622, but died at the Earl of Arundel's house, in Highgate, on date as given on print.

2. Sir Edward Coke.

H. L., in oval frame, scroll at top, directed slightly to left, looking to front, cap, ruff, robes, and collar. Under, in centre arms, and *Ƴ Cooper Exc. The Right Honourable Sr Edwd Coke Kt & Bart. Under, 1726 The Right Honble Peter Lord King, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain &c. Ƴ Cooper Excudt. H. 14; Sub. $13\frac{1}{4}$; W. $9\frac{1}{2}$.

I. As described.

II. With retouch, scratches, and damage on plate.

Born at Exeter, 1769; son of a grocer; but went to the bar at the suggestion of his uncle, the celebrated John Locke; published many legal works; Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, 1714, and Chancellor, 1725, when he was created Lord King, of Ockham; retired from office in 1733; and died 22nd July, 1734, leaving a character for integrity, knowledge, and diligence, that has seldom been equalled.

5. Margaret Patten.

^ Full H. L., directed and looking slightly to right, hood, kerchief, right hand on crutch. Under, *Margaret Patten Born in the Parish of Loghnuigh near Pairsley in Scotland now Liveing in the Work House of St Margts Westminster Aged 136. I Cooper ad vivum Pinxt et fecit. I. As described. Brit: Mus.

II. Age altered, from "136" to 138; date, from "1737" to 1739. Maiden name was Gibson. In Caulfield's "Remarkable Characters" (Vol. IV., p. 143), the name on the illustration is Potter; in that book the story is told of some one asking her, at what time of her life she felt herself too old to be married; to which she replied, that an older woman than she was should be consulted on that point. She was buried in the Broadway chapel burying ground, Westminster, June 29th, 1739.

6. Sir Robert Walpole.

H. L., in oval, directed slightly to right, facing and looking towards left, wig, robes, collar, and George. Under, The Right Honble Sr Robert Walpole, First Lord Commifsioner of the Treasury, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Knight of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and one of His Majesty's most Honble Privy Council J. Cooper Excudit H. $13\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 12; W. 10; O. D. H. $11\frac{3}{4}$.

See page 79.

RICHARD COOPER is stated by Redgrave to have been born in Yorkshire, and to have settled at Edinburgh, where he died in 1764, and was buried in the Canongate Cathedral.

Besides the following, he engraved several portraits in the line manner, and was the master of the afterwards celebrated Sir Robert Strange.

Bromley (p. 470,) mentions a small mezzotinto likeness of himself; but it has not been identified. The one he mentions at p. 298, after Schroider, will be found under "Engraver not ascertained."

1. Archibald, Duke of Argyle. AIKMAN.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, robes, long wig, left end falling behind shoulder, belt buckled round waist, right hand on hip, left holding a coronet. Three known. Brit. Mus.

Born at Ham, in Surrey, June, 1682; served under the Duke of Marlborough, but afterwards quitted the army and entered political life; was a zealous supporter of the House of Hanover, and was wounded at Sheriffmuir. Sir Robert Walpole entirely confided in him for the management of Scottish affairs, which he conducted with great ability and prudence, and with so much real authority as to be called the "King of Scotland;" succeeded his brother as 3rd Duke of Argyle, 1743; and died, without a moment's pain, while sitting in his chair at dinner, in London, on 15th April, 1761, at 5 p.m.

2. John, Earl of Stair. KNELLER.

3. Lady Wallace.

Bromley, page 308. Query if the following, in Brit. Mus., be an impression before letters?

T. Q. L., sitting, looking to front, right hand in lap, left elbow leaning on table supported by bracket, curtain in background. H. 13 $\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{1}{4}$; W. 9 $\frac{7}{8}$.

Probably Eleanor, daughter of Colonel Agnew, of Lochryan; married Sir Thomas Wallace, Bart, of Craigie, Co. Ayr; their daughter and heiress married John Dunlop, Esq.

CORBUTT. See R. Purcell, who adopted this name as an alias; see also pp. 46 and 112.

E. D. C. are the initials of the engraver of a portrait of Benjamin Calamy, D.D. (Bromley, page 179). It does not appear certain that the print, which is in Suth. Coll., is a British one.

GEORGE DAWE, son of the following; born in Brewer-street, Golden-square, London, 8th February, 1781; brought up to his father's profession, is said to have engraved in mezzotinto, when only fourteen years old. Redgrave and Sandby state that he abandoned this art for painting, when he was twenty-one; but most of the following were executed at a somewhat later period than this. He appears, however, to have commenced painting about 1803, and became distinguished for his portraits, being patronised by Prince Leopold, Princess Charlotte, Emperor Alexander, and others of high position. He practised at St. Petersburg from 1819 to 1828, during which time he is said to have painted 400 portraits of Russian officers, besides other sitters; he afterwards visited Berlin, but returned to England in August, 1829, and died at the house of his brother-in-law, Mr. Wright, the engraver, the 15th of October following. He was buried in St. Paul's.

His prints are not highly finished, but are in a broad, manly, and effective style, and, therefore, especially successful in the rendering of Ræburn's pictures.

1. Alexander Abercromby.

Engraved as the portrait of another person, but preserved & highly valued by the late Mr Thomas Martin as a striking likeness of the Norfolk Topographer. Published June 1 1805 by William Miller Albemarle Street London, H. ; Sub. 6½; W. ; Sub. 4½.

This portrait forms the frontispiece to the edition of Bloomefield's Topographical History of the county of Norfolk, published in eleven volumes, in 1805; the portrait is a fac-simile of that of John Flamsteed, (see under J. Simon), the great astronomer, and the evidence should be very clear, whatever Mr Martin's opinion may be, before that name is displaced.

3. George Duff. RÆBURN.

H. L., directed to front, facing and looking towards right, naval uniform, left hand holding hat. Under, *Painted by Mr Reaburn. Engraved by G Dawe Captain George Duff. of the Royal Navy who Commanded His Majesty's Ship Mars of 74 Guns, and fell in the Glorious Battle of Trafalgar on the 21st October 1805. May 1 1806. I. Inscription in open letters.

II. As described.

Born in Pennsylvania, Octbr. 30th, 1738; after visiting Italy, arrived in London in 1763; was one of the first members of the R.A., and elected its President on the death of Reynolds in 1792. Died in Newman-street, 11th March, 1820, and buried in St. Paul's Cathedral.

PHILIP DAWE was the natural son of a city merchant. He is said to have worked under Hogarth, and was the pupil, and probably the connection by marriage, of Henry Morland, after whom he executed several plates.

Both had sons named George, and it was George Dawe, and not Philip, as stated by Redgrave, who was the biographer of George Morland.

There is a print by Philip Dawe of a "Victory of the British Troops over the French Army of Egypt, on the 21st March, 1801," so that 1780, usually given as the date of his death, is clearly not correct, and it has been questioned by Redgrave also.

His finish is able, and many of his prints very pleasing; he worked after Collett and other imitators of Hogarth, and produced several works designed and painted by himself, some of them being severely satirical on the style of dress and manners of the period.

1. John Cennick. BRANDT.

Full H. L., standing, directed to right, facing towards and looking to front, long hair divided in centre, hands holding Bible open on table to right, with text, We preach Christ crucified, behind it a pillar. I. Name and titles of personage in open letters.

II. As described.

Grandson of Sir Thomas Hardy (whose portrait was engraved by Faber, jun.); his father was also an admiral. Born about 1713; in 1741 in command of the Rye of 40 guns; 1755 knighted and appointed Governor of New York; rear-admiral of the white; acted under Boscawen at the reduction of Louisberg in 1758; married to Miss Stanyan, 1759; commanded under Hawke in the victory off Belleisle, 1764; M.P. for Rochester and for Plymouth, 1771; admiral of the white in command of the grand fleet in 1779. Died at the Fountain Tavern in Portsmouth of inflammation of the bowels, 19th May, 1780.

5. Cuthbert Lambert. POLLARD.

This curious print represents him having just caught with both hands the branch of a tree, and thereby saved himself from the fate of his horse, shown falling into an abyss, having leaped the parapet of a bridge in background, over which the head of a woman is seen, water foaming at bottom. Under, Drawn by R Pollard. Engraved by P Dawe. Lambert's Leap. The Accident above represented happened some time ago to Mr Cuthbert Lambert of Newcastle upon Tyne whose Horse, as he was endeavouring to turn him, at full speed, across Sandiford Stone Bridge, leaped the Battlement & fell about 20 Feet to the Bed of the Water. The Horse died in consequence of the Fall, but the young Gentleman was providentially caught in the Branches of an old Ash, where he hung by the Hands, till some Passengers got him down in Safety. The Place has been ever since call'd Lambert's Leap and the name engraven on the Battlement to commemorate the Fact. London, Publish'd Feby 21, 1786 by R Pollard Engraver No 15 Brayne's Row Spa Fields. H. 25 $\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 24; W. 18.

6. (Thomas Maxfield and family.)

This print represents a series of miniatures in black oval frames in centre on left Maxfield, nearly similar to that by Houston, on right his wife, the rings of the frames joined by a scroll, on it Pro Deo Pro Regi et Pro Patria, at top a row of five, on each side two, and at bottom five frames (the last one being blank), containing likenesses of their children; on each date of birth, the first Natus 1751, the last Natus 1771, the third marked Nata 1754 obiit 1756, the last but two marked Nata 1765 obiit 1766. Under, P Dawe fecit. H. 13; Sub. 11 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 12.

Calvinistic Methodist; about 1763 withdrew from Wesley's connexion, and caused him a loss of 600 members; minister of Snow's Fields, 1763 to 1767; thence of Prince's-street, Moorfields. Died 18th March, 1784.

II. As described.

On an impression, formerly Mr. Gulston's, is written, "son of Mr. Thos. Townsend, since dead."

Bromley, page 351, calls the print "Charles Townshend;" but this is clearly an error.

12. Miss Woolls. COSWAY.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed and facing nearly to right, reading a letter open in her right hand, low dress, miniature hung from neck, left hand in lap holding a dove, another dove on back of seat to right. II. Inscription erased; instead, Dawe fecit. Cosway pinxt. Miss Woolls Publish'd Jany 10: 1774 by Wm Humphrey St Martin's Lane.

Bromley says this lady was afterwards Mrs. Bullock, of Christ Church, Hants. The picture has been ignorantly called that of "Kitty Fisher," by Reynolds (see Leslie, VOL. I. p. 165). If compared with a genuine "Kitty," the nose will be found the only point of resemblance.

13. Mrs. Yates. S. COTES.

T. Q. L., standing, directed and looking towards right, hair high, falling over left shoulder, left hand holding urn, chain from wrist, right hand raised, tree, and stone monument in background to left. Under, *Saml Cotes pinxt. Carington Bowles excudit. Dawe fecit Mrs Yates in the Character of Electra. Tragedy of Orestes. Mary Graham, born at Birmingham in 1728, by one account; in London, nine years later, by another; attempted the stage in Dublin and London; but was not successful until after her marriage with Mr. Yates, who instructed her, and she took some leading tragic parts during the illness of Mrs. Cibber, on whose death, in 1766, she became the favourite actress of the day, and is said to have performed with success 90 different characters. She retired from the stage in 1785, and died at her house in Pimlico, 3rd May, 1787.

14. "Theodosius." P. DAWE.

H. L., in oval, directed to left, letter in hand. Published by R. Wilkinson, 1780. H. 10; Sub. 8 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 7 $\frac{3}{4}$; O. D. H. 5 $\frac{5}{8}$; W. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$.

15. "Constantia." ID.

Companion to last; black veil, reading a letter.

16. "Letter-woman." H. MORLAND.

Full H. L., a girl with large bell, on right a lantern, on left a boy presenting a letter. Published by C. Bowles, 1769. H. 20; Sub. 18½; W. 14.

17. "Oyster-woman." ID.

Companion; a girl standing behind a barrel, on which, towards left, is a lantern. She is opening oysters.

This and the preceding are said to be portraits of Miss Morland.

18. "Connoisseur." ID.

An elderly man, inspecting and throwing the full light of his candle upon a landscape, held up for the purpose by a boy, who takes advantage of his master being so engrossed, by indulging in a hearty yawn. Published by Sayer, 1773. H. 19½; Sub. 18; W. 13¾.

19. "Unlucky Boy." ID.

Companion; a girl asleep, sitting at a small table, on which is a lighted candle; on the opposite side a boy, who tickles her nose with a thread paper.

20. "Laundry Maid." ID.

A girl leaning out of a window, looking downwards, wringing linen, which she holds before her. Published by Sayer and Bennett, 1774. H. 19¾; Sub. 18; W. 13¾.

21. "Soaping Linen." ID.

Companion; a girl washing linen in basin before her.

The respective publishers of the six foregoing prints, have also issued them in smaller size, H. 14; Sub. 12½; W. 10; and these also are probably by the same engraver; some being so inscribed.

22. "Ironing." ID.

A girl sitting before a board, low, flowered dress, ironing cambric slips. Published by Carington Bowles. H. 13¾; Sub. 12¼; W. 10.

The pictures from which Nos. 21 & 22 were engraved, were exhibited at South Kensington in 1867 (Nos. 433 and 441 in Catalogue), as the Gunnings (Duchess of Hamilton and Countess of Coventry), to whom, even putting anachronisms out of the question, they do not bear the slightest resemblance. Bromley calls No. 21 "Miss Dawe, sister of the painter." Query if it should not have been Mrs. Dawe.

23. "Reading." ID.

A girl sitting, leaning chin on right hand, candle with paper bell shade to right. Published by C. Bowles, 1768. H. $13\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. $12\frac{3}{4}$; W. 10.

24. "Fishing." G. MORLAND.

Companion; a girl holding a cornucopia.

29. "Summer." ID.

Companion; a girl holding basket of fruit and flowers.

JOHN DEAN is stated to have been born about 1750; to have been a pupil of Valentine Green; and to have died in London in 1798.

His prints are dated from 1776 to 1789, from three successive addresses in Soho; in the last of these a fire occurred which destroyed nearly all his plates and stock of prints.

The character of his work is delicacy of execution, carried to such an extent that, to a superficial observer, his prints seem faint. They are, however, most clear and artistic; there is nothing in them to corroborate his being a pupil of Green's; but they show a connection with J. Walker, and it is worthy of remark, that Dean and Walker have been most successful in their renderings of the exquisite paintings of Romney.

Dean engraved many subject pieces after Reynolds, Hoppner, Morland, and others; but they cannot be distinctly characterised as portraits, although some may possibly be so.

There is a print of "Miriam," from a design by Dean, engraved by Dickinson, published by J. Dean, Berwick-street, Soho, 25th August, 1805. Query, therefore, above date of his death.

1. James, Earl of Abercorn. GAINSBOROUGH.

W. L., standing, directed slightly to left, facing and looking to front, robes, right elbow on pedestal to left, hand holding coronet, left hand on hilt of sword, right leg crossed over left. Under, Gainsborough R.A. Pinxit. 1778. Dean sculpsit. James Hamilton Earl of Abercorn. H. $24\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. $22\frac{5}{8}$; W. $14\frac{7}{8}$.

Eldest son of James, 7th Earl; summoned to House of Lords in Ireland, during his father's life, as Lord Mountcastle; succeeded as 8th Earl, 1744; created Viscount Hamilton in Great Britain. Died unmarried, 9th Octr., 1789.

2. Richard Burnham. SMITH.

T. Q. L., in oval frame, sitting, directed slightly to right, facing and looking to front, powdered wig, overcoat, right hand holding book in lap, left hand over back of chair. Under, Painted by W Smith. Engraved by J Dean. Richard Burnham. H. $12\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $11\frac{3}{8}$; W. 10; O. D. H. 10; W. $7\frac{5}{8}$.

Born about 1749; at first led a vain life, but afterwards became a preacher of the Particular Baptist sect; meeting with considerable success, had congregations at Staines, and various places in London; and for the last 15 years of his life, in Grafton-street, Soho. Died, Octr. 30th, 1810; buried in Tottenham Court Chapel.

3. Mary, Lady Cadogan. REYNOLDS.

H. L., in square border, sitting, looking towards left, hands in lap, broad belt, veil at back of head. Under, Painted by Sr Joshua Reynolds. Engraved by J Dean. Lady Cadogan 1787. Published March 1st 1787 by J Dean Bentinck Street Soho. H. 18; Sub. $14\frac{3}{8}$; W. 13; Sub. $11\frac{1}{2}$.

I. Before inscription, scratched, Painted by Sr Joshua Reynolds. Engraved by John Dean. Published Febry 1st 1787 by J Dean Bentinck Street Soho.

II. As described. Brit. Mus.

Eldest daughter of Charles Churchill, Esq., by Mary, daughter of Sir Robert Walpole; married, 10th August 1777, Charles Sloane, 3rd Baron Cadogan (which marriage was dissolved by Act of Parliament, April, 1797).

4. (William) Caulfield. RUSSELL.

H. L., a youth, directed to right, facing and looking to front, curly hair, right hand raised, a parrot upon forefinger, left hand holding a string from its leg. I. Before inscription, scratched, I Russell Pinxit. John Dean Fecit Publish'd Jany 1st 1777 by Ino Dean Church Street Soho.

On this proof are indications of an earlier publication line, with date 1776.

II. As described.

III. Address erased; instead, Published by J Harris Sweetings Alley Cornhill as the act directs Decr 20th 1780. Brit. Mus.

According to Bromley, son of Captain James Caulfield, and died about 1780. In Musgrave Catalogue he is called nephew of Lord Bute.

5. James, Earl of Charlemont. LIVESAY.

W. L., sitting, directed slightly to left, facing and looking towards right, powdered hair, uniform, star and epaulette on right shoulder, right hand on table to left, on which are books and papers on Ulster Volunteers. To General Earl of Charlemont Dublin Thanks of Parliament to the Volunteers, left arm leaning on arm of chair, medallions with mottoes relating to Ireland on wall in background, troops reviewing in distance to right. Under, in centre arms, motto, DEO DUCE FERRO COMITANTE Painted by R Livesay. Engraved by J Dean The Right Honble the Earl of Charlemont. Published Decr 20 1785 by the Proprietor. H. $25\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $22\frac{3}{8}$; W. 15.

On some impressions the lettering is very lightly inked, so as to appear indistinct, perhaps intended to be taken for proofs.

Born 18th August, 1728, and when six years old succeeded his father as 4th Viscount; created Earl, 1763; married, 1768, Mary, daughter of Thomas Hickman, Esq.; and died, 4th August, 1799. He resided for a long time in Italy, and was distinguished for his taste in the fine arts and literature, as well as for the conspicuous part he took in political life as leader of the Irish country party.

6. (Miss Crockatt.) HOPPNER.

Full H. L., sitting, directed and facing towards right, reading book held on lap, right hand turning a leaf, hair full, close dress, curtain behind, trees in distance to right. Under, Painted by Jno Hoppner. Engrav'd by Jno Dean. Julia de Roubigné. Publish'd Jany 2d 1786, by J Dean, No 12 Bentinck Street Soho. H. $15\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. $13\frac{1}{2}$; W. $10\frac{7}{8}$.

Under (in skeleton letters), Painted by G. Romney. Engraved by J Dean Elizabeth Countess of Derby Publish'd May 24th 1780 by J Dean Berwick Street Soho, London. H. $19\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. $17\frac{5}{8}$; W. $13\frac{7}{8}$.

Only daughter of James, 6th Duke of Hamilton and the beautiful Elizabeth Gunning; born, 26th January, 1753; married, 23rd June, 1774, to Edward, 12th Earl of Derby (was thus grandmother to the late Prime Minister). She died at the house of G. J. Hamilton, Esq., Gloucester-street, Portman-square, 14th March, 1797; and was buried at Bromley, Kent, on the 2nd April following. The notices add, "her own family paying her debts, which amounted to £5,000."

8. Edward Easton. HURLSTONE.

Full H. L., sitting, directed and looking towards right, wig, plain dress, right hand on arm of chair. Under, Hurlstone Pinxit. Dean Fecit Edward Easton Bookseller of Salisbury Ætat: 60-1780 Pub by J Easton Salisbury 1797. H. $13\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. $12\frac{1}{8}$; W. $9\frac{3}{8}$.

I. Before inscription, scratched, Hurlstone Pinxit. Dean Fecit.

II. As described; artist's names scratched.

Many years an eminent and respectable bookseller in Salisbury; an alderman of that city and mayor in 1780, when he presented a loyal address on the occasion of the London riots. Died suddenly at Bradford, Wilts, 7th Febr., 1795, aged 75 years.

9. Mrs. Elliot. GAINSBOROUGH.

W. L., standing, directed towards front, facing and looking to right hair dressed high, curl on left shoulder, low dress, narrow riband round neck, right hand hanging beside her, end of robe in fingers, left hand holding it to breast, high-heeled shoes, trees in distance to left. Under, Painted by T Gainsborough R A. Published June 4th 1779 by J Dean, No 27 Berwick Street, Soho. Engraved by John Dean. Mrs Elliot. H. $24\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. $22\frac{5}{8}$; W. 15.

I. Before inscription, scratched, Painted by T Gainsborough R A. Engraved by John Dean Published June 4th by J Dean Berwick Street 1779.

II. As described.

According to Bromley, the wife of John Elliot, M.D. Fulcher does not mention the whereabouts of the picture, which was painted at the artist's best time, and judging from the splendid touching of the print, must have been a truly masterly performance.

10. Lady Gertrude Fitzpatrick. REYNOLDS.

W. L., a child, standing on top of hillock, directed and looking towards front, hands clasped before her. Under, scratched, Painted by Sr Joshua Reynolds. Engraved by J Dean The Right Honorable Lady Gertrude Fitz Patrick Published Novr 8th 1780 by J Dean H. 17 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 16 $\frac{1}{4}$; W. 12 $\frac{3}{8}$.

Daughter of Mrs. Wright of Pall Mall, who was a modeller of portraits in wax, and a woman of great taste and talent. Hoppner, the painter, was frequently a guest there, and in 1782 married this daughter, of whom he painted several charming portraits; probably his success in painting elegant women was due to these friends.

14. (Id.) ID.

II. As described.

26. "Journey to the Watch-House." DEAN.

T. Q. L's., a handsome girl, hair dressed high, her right hand holding wide black hat with feathers, dragged along by a watchman, another, having a lantern fastened to his waist, and springing his rattle, holding her right arm, houses in background, black border about subject. Under, Painted & Engraved by J Dean A Journey to the Watch-House. Publish'd Sepr 1 1790 by J Dean Bentinck Street, Soho. H. 15¾; Sub. 13¾; W. 14¾; Sub. 13¾.

These are apparently portraits, representing some incident of the time; the date and costume are subsequent to the period of the celebrated Soho masquerades of Mrs. Cornelys; but, probably she had successors, through whose means this girl met with the misfortune.

27. The "Widow." G. MORLAND.

I. Before inscription, scratched, Painted by J Opie Engraved by J Dean Publish'd May 1st 1786 by J Dean Bentinck Street Soho.

II. As described.

Probably the first Mrs. Opie and her brother and sister. She married the painter in Decr. 1782, but proving unfaithful, she was divorced in 1796. Possibly an attachment to cards may have led her into worse habits.

DE BRÉA is not mentioned by Nagler, Redgrave, or Bryan. The following portrait is in too finished a style to be considered the only work of the engraver, although no other has been met with.

Charles Alexander de Calonne. MDE. LE BRUN.

I. Before inscription : names scratched.

II. As described.

The plate does not appear in Richardson's sale in 1814, although some duplicate impressions were sold there.

Born at Douai, 1734; became Minister of Finance, 1783; planned the Assembly of Notables, but had to leave his country in the latter end of 1787; he lived in London, but frequently went abroad in the interests of the Royal Family of France up to 1795; he then gave himself up to the study of the Fine Arts, for which he had great taste; revisited Paris, and died there a few weeks after, on 29th October, 1802.

DE KÖNING is also unmentioned, and there is no engraver with the initial G. under Coninck or Koninck.

.(Countess of Yarmouth.) VAN HOOGH,

Such Helen was & who can blame the Boy

That in so bright a flame consum'd his Troy,

But had like Virtue shin'd in the fair Greek

The Amorous Shepherd had not dar'd to seek

Or hope for Pity : but with silent moan

And better fate had perished alone.

H. 12 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 8 $\frac{7}{8}$.

Amelia Sophia de Walmoden, wife of a German baron, became acquainted with George II., at Hanover, and was brought over to London by him; after the death of his queen, created a countess, as above, 1739. Died, 1765, aged 56.

One cannot well explain the third verse, her relations with the King being notorious.

DE KOSTER was a portrait painter, but is not mentioned by Nagler or Redgrave.

Frederick, Duke of York. SHROEDER.

WILLIAM DICKINSON was born in London in 1746, and was awarded a premium at the Society of Arts in 1767. He had then commenced engraving in mezzotinto, mostly caricatures, and portraits after R. E. Pine, published chiefly by Carington Bowles; in 1773 he commenced to publish his own works from Litchfield-street, Soho, afterwards, 180, Strand, and between 1774 and 1778, from Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, many of his productions then being amongst the most brilliant specimens of the art—powerful, full of colour, excellent in drawing, and rendering of the touches of the painters, amongst whom were Reynolds, Romney, and Peters; about 1776 he connected himself with Thomas Watson, and they became partners at 158, New Bond-street, in 1778, and produced many capital works, some being in the stipple method, which was much the fashion at the time; Dickinson remained there after Watson's death for some years, but then appears rather to have applied himself to the business of a printseller than to his improvement as an artist; the address, 24, Old Bond-street, appears in 1791. He afterwards removed to Paris, where he engraved a large picture of the King of Saxony, dated 1811, and others after Gerard, which do not appear to have been published in England, although some dated subsequently were; he died at Paris in the summer of 1823.

Anna Maria Appolonia, born, 1747. Macaulay, in his well-known essay, says that Warren Hastings, in 1769, went out to India in the same ship with Imhoff, a German painter, in poor circumstances, who called himself a baron, and his accomplished wife, who, Macaulay had somewhere read, was a native of Archangel; she and Hastings became attached, and a divorce from Imhoff having been obtained, they were married. She survived her husband many years, dying in 1837. The child may probably be her son, afterwards Lieut.-Gen. Sir Charles Imhoff, who was heir to Hastings; and died in 1853, aged 86. He and his mother are buried at Daylesford.

Ellis, second daughter of James Smith, of Tinney Park, Co. Wicklow; called by Walpole (Cor. Vol. III., p. 433) "a most perfect beauty, an Irish Miss Smith;" probably the lady of whom Spooner engraved a portrait; married, 1764, to Francis Mathew (created Lord Llandaff, 1783). Died of dropsy, in August, 1781, and was buried with great pomp at Thomastown, Co. Tipperary.

Hamilton, p. 88, makes this a different personage; but Bromley is very clear, calling her of "Tipperary, Ireland," p. 440, and must be taken as correct, without strong proof to the contrary. The spelling of the name on the print is also different to that given by Hamilton.

49. Master Montague. KNELLER.

JOHN DIXON was born in Ireland about 1740; was originally a silver engraver in Dublin; studied under F. West at the Dublin Academy; removed to London about 1765, and soon distinguished himself by his portrait of Garrick, after Dance, and other works. He married a young lady of fortune, and thenceforward only followed his profession as an amusement, residing at Ranelagh, afterwards at Kensington, where he died (as stated by Redgrave), about 1780.

His works are powerful, well-drawn, rich in tone, and so deeply scraped that they generally bear an unusual number of impressions before requiring retouch.

Nos. 10 and 32 appear to have been done by him before leaving Ireland.

II. As described.

Plate sold at Richardson's sale, in 1814.

A very celebrated lady of the demi-monde, apparently a special favourite with Sir Joshua. Died in Park-street, Grosvenor-square, 1768. See Walpole (Cor. VOL. IV., p. 59), and Leslie and Taylor (VOL. I., pp. 188, &c.)

The date of her death appears correct; but it is remarkable that this print, if it represents her, should have been engraved six years afterwards; the picture, also (No. 580 of Portrait Exhibition of 1867), is dated 1773 on frame. Bromley, however (p. 431), clearly names the portrait as hers; the well-known print of her too, by Phillips, is dated, 1770.

III. As described.

Plate sold at Boydell's sale, 1818.

Born, 29th August, 1725; 2nd son of 3rd Viscount Townshend; M.P. for Yarmouth, 1747, afterwards for Harwich; held various high political offices; Burke called him "the delight and ornament of the House, and the charm of every private society;" married, 1755, Caroline, eldest daughter of the Duke of Argyle, and widow of Francis, Earl of Dalkeith. Died, 4th Sept., 1767. He is frequently mentioned by Walpole.

35. John Wilkes.

Bromley, p. 352, wh. len., sitting, with "Magna Charta." ad vivum. 1770.

36. "The Arrest."

T. Q. L., a young beau standing, directed to front, hat, frill, ruffles and edging to coat and vest, right hand holding glass to eye, left hand in pocket, on right a bailiff touches his left arm, holding a writ, theatre and street in background to left, sign of Shakespeare from one of the houses. Under, Dixon ad vivum delineavit et fecit. Sir Fopling Arrested. Drawn from a late real Scene

Sir Fopling Flutter through his Glafs

Inspects the Ladies as they pass,

Yet still the Coxcomb lacks the Wit

To guard against the Bailiffs Writ.

Published according to Act in 1769 by John Bowles at No 13 in Cornhill London. H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{5}{8}$; W. 10.

It is very doubtful whether this represents (as is generally thought, although not so mentioned by Bromley) Charles Fleetwood, the manager of Drury Lane, who had sold his patent, and gone to the Continent long previous to the date of the print. His eldest son appeared as Romeo in 1759, but retired in a short time; his person was remarkably elegant and fascinating, and he had the same extravagant taste as his father.

37. The "Arrest."

Similar, in same direction. Under, Dixon ad Vivum del et fecit. The Arrest Drawn from a late real Scene (verses as in last) Publish'd according to Act of Parliament in 1768 by John Bowles at No 13 in Cornhill. H. 6; Sub. $5\frac{1}{2}$; W. $4\frac{1}{2}$.

38. The Oracle.

An allegorical piece; one or two of the female figures might be portraits. Under, scratched, Drawn & Engraved by J Dixon. Publish'd according to Act of Parliamt March 30, 1774. W. $23\frac{1}{2}$; H. $20\frac{1}{2}$; Sub. $20\frac{1}{8}$.

WILLIAM DOUGHTY was a native of Yorkshire, and executed some portrait etchings there in 1773. Northcote, in his life of that master, states that in 1775, he was placed by Mr. Mason under the tuition of Reynolds, and remained in his house about three years; he then went to Ireland as a portrait painter, but not succeeding, returned to London, much depressed; in 1780, he married Margaret Joy, a servant in Sir Joshua's house, and with her started for Bengal; but the ship, being captured by the French and Spanish squadron, was taken to Lisbon; there he died, and his widow continuing her voyage to India, where she had friends, also died just after her arrival.

His mezzotinto prints being dated mostly 1779, he appears to have practised this art in the interval between his return from Ireland and his departure for Bengal, and he succeeded in producing works of the highest artistic excellence, nearly all after Reynolds.

1. (William Doughty.)

H. L., directed to left, facing and looking to front, long hair, Vandyke collar, scarf across right shoulder and left arm. H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{1}{2}$; W. 10.

Apparently not quite finished, and the authority for thus naming the print is somewhat slender. Not mentioned by Bromley.

Portrait of Samuel Johnson, Esq. Painted by Sir J. Naysmith

2. Samuel Johnson. REYNOLDS.

V. Modern. Plate sold at Richardson's sale, 1814.

Born, 18th Sept., 1709, at Lichfield. Died, 13th Dec., 1784. He has been termed, not inaptly, the Colossus of English Literature; and this superb portrait is the realisation of that idea.

3. Augustus Keppel. REYNOLDS.

H. L., directed to right, facing to front, and looking towards left, uniform. Under, *Painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds Engraved by W-Doughty The Honble Augustus Keppel Admiral of the Blue. Born, 1725; friend and biographer of Gray; entered the Church, 1754, and obtained the living of Aston, in Yorkshire, where he died, 7th of April, 1797, from mortification in the leg, in consequence of a hurt received two days before in getting out of his carriage. He was the author of many poetical and dramatic pieces, a distinguished musician, and a friend and correspondent of Walpole and most of the eminent literary personages of his time.

5. (Mary Palmer.) REYNOLDS.

H. L., in oval, directed, facing, and looking towards front, turban, thin double necklace, muslin dress, brooch at breast. Under, Painted by Sir Josh: Reynolds. Engrav'd by Willm Doughty London Publish'd as the Act directs Feb 13th 1779 by W Doughty No 24 Little Titchfield Street Cavendish Square. H. 15; Sub. 13 $\frac{1}{4}$; W. 11.

II. Reworked slightly by engraver, obscuring scratched letters.

III. As described.

Daughter of John Palmer, of Torrington, and niece of Sir Joshua, with whom she resided, and the bulk of whose property she inherited; married, 21st July, 1792, Murrough O'Bryen, Earl of Inchiquin (who was created Marquis of Thomond in 1800, and was killed by a fall from his horse in 1808). Died of apoplexy, at Baylis, Bucks, in her 70th year, Sept. 6, 1820.

6. (Martha) Swinburne. GARDINER.

H. L., in oval frame, directed, facing, and looking towards left, hair dressed high with cap on top, ribbon round neck, black mantle close to throat. Under, Drawn by D Gardiner. Engraved by W Doughty. Mrs Swinburne. (scratched in corner to right) No. 7. H. 14 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{7}{8}$; W. 10 $\frac{7}{8}$; O. D. H. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Daughter of John Baker, Esq., of Chichester, Sussex, who was solicitor-general to the Leeward Islands; married, 1774, Henry, son of Sir John Swinburne, Bart. (author of Travels in Spain, &c.: died in Trinidad, April, 1803), she accompanied him in his travels, and was much noticed by the Queens of France and Naples.

ROBERT DUNKARTON is stated by Redgrave to have been born in London, in 1744, and to have been a pupil of Pether. He practised as a portrait painter at first, but discontinued exhibiting after 1779. His works in mezzotinto are in a clear, finished style; they bear dates from 1770 to 1811, and many of the book illustrations were probably subsequent; it is, therefore, incorrect to place, as Redgrave does, his death towards the close of the last century. As his name is not mentioned in the Annals of the Fine Arts for 1817, he had probably died before that year.

1. Henry Addington. COPLEY.

W. 6. Miss Bamfylde. PETERS.

Bromley, p. 430. "Belinda" (see No. 41) would answer the description, except for the date, which is 1777, instead of 1771 in Bromley; but it is possible that the "1" might have been a misprint for "7." Nagler, however, and Le Blanc give them as distinct plates.

7. William, Earl of Besborough. COPLEY.

T. Q. L., sitting, profile directed to left, contemplating vase which stands on two large books, on which his left hand is placed, on table before him, his right forefinger to his chin, curtain in background to right.  Henry IV. lying in state.

GAINSBOROUGH DUPONT was born in 1767, being the maternal nephew and pupil of Thomas Gainsborough; and, although he lost this advantage when only one-and-twenty, his paintings are not quite unworthy of his teaching. He died at his house in Fitzroy-square, Jan. 20th, 1797.

The writers on English Art do not mention him as an engraver.

Nagler attributes two of the following pieces to Peter Dupont (who knew nothing of Gainsborough's art, and nothing of mezzotinto engraving), and the error has actually been followed by Redgrave.

It is not enough to say that Dupont rendered Gainsborough's manner well in these engravings; they show that he was imbued with his very spirit, from the touching of the hair to the exquisite details of the costume; indeed, were it not that some of them are dated after T. Gainsborough's death, one might suppose them touched by his hand.

Had Dupont lived longer, and produced numerous engravings after his uncle's pictures, and brought them forward to public notice, it might have been that general opinion would not have given to Reynolds the first place as painter of graceful and elegant English women.

1. Lord Frederick Campbell. GAINSBOROUGH.

H. L., in oval frame, directed, facing, and looking towards left, own hair, collar and tassels, robe, which he holds with right hand across breast. Under, Thos Gainsborough pinxt. G Dupont sculpt Lord Frederick Campbell, Lord Register of Scotland, And One of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council. H. 10 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 9 $\frac{5}{8}$; W. 7 $\frac{3}{4}$; O. D. H. 9 $\frac{1}{8}$; W. 7 $\frac{3}{8}$.

Third son of John Campbell, afterwards 4th Duke of Argyll, and the beautiful Mary Bellenden; became a lawyer; was M.P. for Glasgow and Ayrshire; chief secretary to Lord Townshend, when Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in 1767; M.P. in that kingdom for St. Canice; also held the above and other appointments. Died in Queen-street, Mayfair, June 8, 1816, aged 87.

2. Queen Charlotte. ID.

3. Henry Seymour Conway. ID.

W. L., standing, directed slightly to left, facing and looking towards right, powdered hair, military uniform, riding boots, right hand against hip holding end of long walking-stick, left hand holding hat, to right the broken trunk of a tree, in distance to left a large castle on a rock with sea before it, subject scraped away, at bottom, in centre, W. $5\frac{5}{8}$, H. $\frac{1}{8}$, in this space and under, The Right Honourable Henry Seymour Conway, One of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, Colonel of His Majesty's Royal Regiment of Horse Guards, General of His Majesty's Forces & Governor of the Island of Jersey &c Thomas Gainsborough RA pinxit. Gainsborough Dupont sculpsit. London Printed for R Sayer and J Bennett, Map and Printfellers No 53 Fleet Street as the Act directs 26 July 1780. H. 24; Sub $23\frac{5}{8}$; W. $15\frac{1}{8}$.

I. Before name and titles of personage, and before portion of subject was scraped away.

II. As described.

Second son of Francis Seymour, Lord Conway, by his third wife, Charlotte, daughter of Sir John Shorter; born, 1720; entered the army, in which he was quickly promoted; was also M.P.; married, 1747, Caroline, only sister of Lord Frederick Campbell (see No. 1), and widow of Charles, 1st Earl of Ailesbury; general, 1772; field marshal, 1793. Died at Park Place, Oxfordshire, July 19th, 1795. He was the intimate friend and correspondent of his first cousin, Horace Walpole, who bequeathed to his only child, the Hon. Anne Damer, his most precious possession, Strawberry Hill.

4. (Rev. Sir Henry Bate Dudley.) ID.

W. L., standing, directed towards front, facing and looking towards left, coat buttoned over fur vest, right hand on stick, left hand holding hat, to right a spaniel, trees in background to right. H. $24\frac{5}{8}$; Sub. $23\frac{1}{2}$; W. $15\frac{1}{4}$. Unfinished.

Born, 25th Aug., 1745; son of the Rev. Henry Bate; was nominated at his death to his living, and had many other transactions with regard to purchase of presentations; friend of Garrick and Sheridan; wrote some plays; contributed to the "Morning Post;" in 1780, established the "Morning Herald," which rapidly attained a large circulation; in 1784, assumed the name of Dudley, at the instance of a relation; resided in Ireland, 1804-12, in the latter year created a baronet; afterwards Canon of Ely. Died at Cheltenham, 1st Feb. 1824.

5. Eldest Princesses.

W. L.'s., the Princess Royal sitting, on right, directed and looking towards left, Princesses Augusta and Elizabeth standing, the first leans her right arm over her elder sister's shoulders, is directed towards front, and looking slightly to left, within her left arm is placed her younger sister's right hand, who is directed and facing towards right, and looking to front, left arm with short sleeve hanging beside her; the costumes of the sisters are similar, hair high, large curls on shoulders, dresses low on neck, in background a fluted pillar with curtain to right, trees in distance to left. Under, Thos Gainsborough Esqr R A Pinxt. Gainsborough Dupont sculpt Eldest Princesses Pub Sepr 2 1793 by Gainsborough Dupont, Grafton Street, Fitzroy Square. H. 26 $\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. 24 $\frac{7}{8}$; W. 18.

I. Inscription in skeleton and open letters, bottom edge not cleared.

II. As described.

Daughters of George III. Charlotte Augusta Matilda, Princess Royal; born, 29th Sept., 1766; married Charles, Prince of Wurtemberg; died, 6th Oct., 1828. Princess Augusta Sophia, born, 8th Nov., 1768; died, 22nd Sept., 1840. Princess Elizabeth, born, 22nd May, 1770; married to Frederick Louis, Landgrave of Hesse; died, 10th Jan., 1840.

The picture was painted for a panel of the Prince of Wales's state room, at Carlton House, and was sent with others to the Exhibition of the Royal Academy in 1784, Gainsborough requesting that it should be hung at the height which it was intended to be permanently fixed at; it was, however, placed much higher, and the effect of the tender and delicate colouring almost destroyed; in consequence, the painter withdrew his performances, and never again sent a picture to the Academy.

In more recent times this exquisite work has unfortunately been cut down, so that the painter can be now better appreciated from the print than from what remains of his own work.

One known. Brit: Mus.

Born, 21st August, 1765; third son of George III., generally known as the Duke of Clarence, until his accession to the throne as William IV., 26th June, 1830. He died at Windsor, 20th June, 1837.

RICHARD EARLOM was born in 1743; his father was parish clerk of St. Sepulchre; he became a pupil of Cipriani, but soon devoted himself to mezzotinto engraving, in which art he is said to have been self-taught. He died in Exmouth-street, Clerkenwell, Oct. 9th, 1822.

His talents were not, as in the instances of nearly all the other mezzotinto engravers, principally devoted to portraits after the painters of his own time, for he laboured most assiduously to reproduce the works of the older masters in this style of engraving. Although he overcame many difficulties (some of his prints, such as his fruit and flower pieces, after Van Huysum, being very much admired); he cannot, on the whole, be considered to have been successful in proving mezzotinto the best style of engraving for all descriptions of painting. He also produced a few works in the stipple manner.

Joubert and Nagler have very confused and erroneous accounts of this artist, supposing him to have been born in 1728, and to have died in 1794; and that there was a Robert Earlom, who engraved the "Liber Veritatis."

II. As described.

King was born, 1730; joined a provincial company, at first taking tragic characters; but was not successful until he discovered the real bent towards humour of his genius, when he became one of the greatest actors of his day. In private, he excelled in story-telling and powers of mimicry; but was unfortunately addicted to play. He died, Dec. 11th 1805, and was buried at St. Paul's, Covent Garden.

Mrs. Baddeley was born, 1745; daughter of Mr. Snow, sergeant-trumpeter to George II., celebrated for her beauty, her intrigues, and her profusion; she also possessed a good voice, and was a pleasing actress. The picture of this print was painted by special command of George III., from having seen her performance in the play. She died at Edinburgh, in deep poverty, 1st July, 1801.

In fifteen Portraits of Royal Personages, Fol., 1816 :

Charles V. on horseback.

JOHN ECKSTEIN is mentioned by Nagler as a painter of Mecklenberg, who lived in Berlin about 1775, and executed a plate of the King of Prussia on horseback ; also mentioned by Le Blanc. Redgrave gives the particulars of apparently a different artist of the same name, as having been a pupil of the Royal Academy, and exhibited between 1770 and 1796 ; and in N. & Q. 4th Ser. VOL. XI., p. 429, he is said to have practised in Birmingham. The undermentioned is undoubtedly by the latter, if there were two different painters of the same name at the same time.

To the free and easy Counsellors under the Cauliflower, this portrait of Mr Brown their worthy Secretary, is respectfully dedicated by their very humble Servant Johannes Eckstein.* H. 15¼ ; Sub. 13⅞ ; W. 10.

Apprentice to Baldwin, the London bookseller, subsequently in the service of Longmans (in which house his son afterwards became a partner). Died, 6th Jan., 1807. The society alluded to was one of respectable London tradesmen, chiefly booksellers, who met at the "Three Pigeons," in Butcher Hall Lane, near Newgate-street, and took their name from a large cauliflower painted on the ceiling of their room. See above reference in N & Q.

S. EINSLIE is not mentioned by Redgrave or Nagler ; the latter names Joseph Einslie as a miniature painter at Augsburg, but he is too recent to have engraved the following.

1. Ann, Countess of Aldborough. HOPPNER.

H. L., standing, directed, facing, and looking towards left, powdered hair, wide hat looped up and feathers, throat uncovered, upright frill round neck, ribbons at breast, curtain behind head, landscape in background. Bromley dates the print, 1789.

Only daughter of Sir John (afterwards 1st Lord) Henniker; married, 1st, 14th March, 1787 (his second wife) Edward, 2nd Earl of Aldborough; 2nd, Dec., 1801, George Powell, Esq., barrister-at-law. She died at Aldborough House, Dublin, 14th July, 1802.

2. Edward, Earl of Aldborough. GAINSBOROUGH.

Not mentioned by Bromley. Musgrave sale, p. 16, lot 84, engraver misnamed S. Pinfle. Purchased by Bindley, at whose sale Part II., lot 103, it is described thus: "Edward Augustus, Earl of Aldborough, in his Robes. Gainsborough pinx. S. Einsle sculp. half sheet, private plate."

Succeeded his father as 2nd earl, July, 1777. Died in Dublin, 2nd Jan., 1801, leaving no issue by either of his wives.

WILLIAM EMMETT is mentioned by Redgrave, as succeeding his uncle as sculptor to the Crown, in the reign of Charles II., and as having engraved a portrait of himself; and another of the name is spoken of as an engraver, at the beginning of the 18th century; it is possible that both references are to the same person; there are line engravings by him also, amongst them a rude portrait of Queen Anne, and views of St. Paul's Cathedral, mentioned by Le Blanc.

The style of inscription on some of the undermentioned is similar to that on some of Beckett's and the earlier of Smith's plates.

CHARLES EXSHAW was a native of Dublin; he studied at Rome and Amsterdam, and probably at Paris also. He practised as a painter in London, and also endeavoured to establish a drawing-school, but without the success which his talents, as exhibited in his engravings, entitled him to. He died early in 1771, and his pictures and studies were sold by auction in the April of that year.

Nagler (T. 4, p. 172) and Bryan (Stanley's ed., p. 231) mention this artist as a Dutchman, in consequence, perhaps, of his working after Rembrandt. The print of St. Peter's Bark in the Storm, which measures, H. $25\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. $23\frac{5}{8}$; W. $20\frac{1}{4}$, is inscribed, "Exshaw deliniavit et sculpt. Amsterdam, 1760." The picture is described in Smith's Catalogue Raisonné, Part VII., p. 35, where the etching by Exshaw is mentioned: the description does not allude to the taste displayed in representing one of the disciples sea-sick over the side of the boat.

As Charles Vanloo lived at Paris (his elder brother being an eminent portrait painter in London), the following may have been executed there; they are evidently portraits of the young members of the painter's family.

1. Anne Vanloo. VANLOO.

Short H. L., a young girl, directed towards right, facing towards and looking to front, hood tied under chin. Under, scratched letters, C: Vanloo deliniavit: C: Exshaw fecit Ann Vanloo. H. $13\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $11\frac{3}{8}$; W. 10.

This rather resembles an etching over mezzotinto.

2. Charles Vanloo. ID.

Short H. L., in profile, directed to right. Under, Designed by Carlo Vanloo done in Metzotinto by his Pupil Charles Exshaw. Carlo Vanloo le Fils. H. 13; Sub. $11\frac{1}{4}$; W. 10.

3. James Vanloo. ID.

Bromley, p. 301. "1757" given as date.

4. Isabel Vanloo. ID.

Short H. L., a child sleeping, head leaning on pillow. Under, C: Vanloo deliniavit C: Exshaw fecit. Isabel Vanloo. H. $13\frac{3}{8}$; Sub. $11\frac{5}{8}$; W. 10.

A few lines are engraved down the curls of the hair, otherwise entirely mezzotinto.

JOHN FABER was a native of Holland, and came to England with his little son, according to some accounts, as early as 1687; ac-ording to others, as late as 1695. He was then, and for long afterwards, a miniature painter. Some of his works in this manner are extant, and possess great merit, especially those in black, on vellum.

In 1707, he was established at a shop near the Savoy, in the Strand, and producing portraits in mezzotinto; except No. 15, they are small, chiefly of dissenting clergy, or the class usually termed remarkable; these, as might be expected, are cramped and stiff in handling, but have the merit of being now very uncommon. About four years afterwards he appears to have been in Oxford, where he scraped the Founders and some other pieces, and afterwards, those of Cambridge, which are mostly dated 1714. His manner after this period became considerably more free and bold, and his address is again marked in London, at the Golden Eagle, next the Fountain Tavern, in the Strand, and at the 2 Golden Balls, near the Savoy (No. 52), an address found on one of his son's prints also.

He died at Bristol, May, 1721; the greater portion of his plates ultimately came into the possession of Thos. Bakewell, the printseller, who succeeded Thos. Taylor, being then in partnership with Timothy Jordan.

Probably not first state, and were it not that the plate-mark shows greater height, this might be an after state of foregoing. It is also possible that Faber, jun., may have scraped, or assisted his father in this plate; and he did another nearly similar to it, which will be found described in its proper place.

After-states of one of these plates have been met having the altered addresses of "London: Printed for John Ryall, at Hogarth's Head, Fleet-street," and "Sold by S. Hooper, No 25, Ludgate Hill, London."

Bakewell's address is evidently an after-state of this plate.

Rev. John Davies is mentioned by Bromley, p. 276, and Noble, VOL. III., p. 112, as 4to mez. by Faber. "æt 39, 1717. Jur. et. Theol. Doct. Cantab." (In Noble "Sac. Theol.") He was prebendary of Ely, author of several classical and philosophical works, and died at Queen's College, Cambridge, of which he was president, 7th March, 1731-2. An impression sold at Musgrave sale. Cat. p. 123.

No distinction is made by Bromley or Noble between the works of the two Fabers. It may be that this print is by Faber, jun.

29. John Dryden. KNELLER.

Granger, VOL. V., p. 239; Bromley, p. 189, 4to. This print is probably a companion to Nos. 17, 27, & 49.

30. John Duns Scotus.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards facing and looking to left at a book open on a shelf, pen in right hand, holding paper with left on table in front towards right. Under, Iohannes Duns Scotus Doctor Subtilis done from the painting in ye publick Library in Oxford J Faber Fecit & Excudit. H. $13\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. $13\frac{1}{8}$; W. 10.

I. As described.

II. Under subject, to right, Printed & Sold by Tho Bakewell Next ye Horn Tavern in Fleet Street.

III. "Next — Street" erased; instead, against Birch Lane in Cornhil.

Died, 1308. His manuscripts remain in Merton College, Oxford.

31. Edward VI.

Granger, VOL. I., p. 162; Bromley, p. 5, 8vo. "J Faber exc."

32. Erasmus. HOLBEIN.

H. L., in oval, directed and facing towards right, cap, fur-edged gown. Under, H Holbein pinxit. J Faber fecit Desiderius Erasmus Roterodamus Natus Ao 1461. Obijt Ao 1536. Sold by Tho: Bakewell Next ye Horn Tavern in Fleet street London. H. $7\frac{5}{8}$; Sub. $6\frac{5}{8}$; W. $5\frac{5}{8}$.

Above not the first address ; "Next — Street," was subsequently altered to against Birchin Lane Cornhill.

33. Henry Evans.

H. L., in narrow oval frame, directed and looking to front, wide hat, white beard, end of cravat through buttonhole. Under, Henry Evans liveth in the parish of St Saviour's Southwark aged 104 years, and in good health this Nouember 1710. Born in the parish of Haberdarn in Carnarvanshire in Wales in March, Ano : Dom : 1606. H. $7\frac{3}{8}$; W $\frac{5}{8}$; O. D. H. $6\frac{3}{8}$.

I. As described.

II. Scratches in corners of plate ; under inscription, in Gravel Lane.

See Noble, VOL. II., p. 391 ; and in Caulfield's "Remarkable Persons," VOL. I, p. 92, remarks on Noble's extraordinary confusion of dates and ages.

34. The Founders of Oxford and Cambridge Colleges, Royal Exchange, and Charterhouse. Forty-five Plates.

T. Q. L.'s., shield of arms under each (except the two Chancellors) in centre ; nearly all H. $10\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. 9 ; W. $7\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As issued by the engraver, before border or number ; a set of the Oxford and Cambridge portraits in this state is in the Library of the British Museum, and the arrangement which follows is taken from it.

II. As issued by Taylor, numbers attached, in the Oxford series at bottom to right, in the Cambridge series under subject to right.

III. As issued by Bakewell ; most of these sets were struck off with an engraved border, H. 13, W. 10, outside the plate ; the numbers, which appear in this issue also, are sometimes erased to counterfeit the first state.

IV. Much retouched and altered, numbers erased, "J. Faber" altered to H Parker, who has placed at bottom of some, Printed for H Parker Print & Bookseller at No 82 in Cornhill, in some cases the entire inscriptions have been erased and re-engraved.

Parker was the partner of Elizabeth Bakewell, the successor of Thomas Bakewell, and thus obtained these and others of Faber's plates.

James, Duke of Ormond, Chancellor of Oxford University.

Born, Jan. 28, 1611; visited England about 1632, and in a few years afterwards applied himself entirely to astronomy at his observatory in Dantzic. He died, Jan. 28, 1687.

Chalmers says that a handsome mezzotinto of himself in his 36th year, by Falk, is prefixed to his "Selenographia," published in 1647; but it is probable that the copy of the book he saw had an impression of this portrait inserted, or that it was the portrait by Falck, which is not mezzotinto.

43. Captain Hooke.

H. L., in oval, directed rather to left, looking to front, wide hat, pipe in mouth. In corners, Captain Hooke alias Fibb. H. $3\frac{5}{8}$; W. $3\frac{1}{8}$.

Under, Mrs Priscilla Marten. 11. Printed for Bowles & Carver. No 69 in St Pauls Church Yard. London. ƒ Faber Fecit & Excudit. H. 14; Sub. 12; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

This address must denote an after-state of the plate.

54. John Nesbitt.

H. L., in moulded oval frame, directed towards right, facing to front, wig, bands, gown, at bottom of oval, I Faber fecit. Under John Nesbitt Minister of ye Gospell Ao 1709. done and Sold by I: Faber near the Savoy in ye Strand. H. $7\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. $6\frac{1}{2}$; W. $5\frac{3}{4}$.

Native of Northumberland; born, 1661; was a dissenting minister in London; became palsied in 1723; and died, 22nd October, 1727.

55. Philip, Duke of Orleans.

H. L., in oval, directed to left, looking to front, wig, robes, star, collar of golden fleece. Under, Philippe Duc d'Orleans Regent de France. Done from the Original Picture. F Faber Fecit & Excudit Ao 1715. H. $14\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $11\frac{1}{2}$; W. 10. Suth: Coll.

Born at St. Cloud, 1674; succeeded, in 1701, his father, who was the only brother of Louis XIV., and whose first wife had been the daughter of Charles I. and Henrietta Maria; was Regent of France from the death of Louis XIV., in 1715 to 1723, when Louis XV. assumed power. Died, worn out with debauchery, 25th December of that year.

56. Thomas Parr.

H. L., in oval frame, directed towards left, looking to front, cap, beard. Under, Thomas Parr Born in Shropshire, Ao 1483 Dyed Novemb ye 15th 1635 Aged 152 years. buried in west Minster Abby &c Sold by Tho: Taylor at ye Golden Lyon in Fleet Street. H. $7\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. $6\frac{5}{8}$; W. $5\frac{5}{8}$.

There may probably be an earlier state, with Faber's name; mentioned by Bromley, p. 114.

57. Samuel Pomfret,

H. L., in oval, directed and looking to front, own hair, bands, gown, at bottom of oval, Ætatis LV Ao 1707, to left, I Faber ad vivum Delint & Fecit. Under, Samuel Pomfret Minister of the Gospel. H. $7\frac{5}{8}$; W. $5\frac{5}{8}$; O. D. H. $6\frac{1}{8}$.

At bottom an address, probably similar to that on No. 54, has been almost entirely obliterated from plate.

A dissenting minister; was imprisoned, in 1687, for preaching at Sandwich, in Kent; escaped, and fled the country in disguise; soon afterwards minister of the congregation in Gravel-lane, Houndsditch. Died, Jan. 11, 1721.

58. The Reformers.

Twenty-one Plates,

Each in oval frame, H. $10\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. $8\frac{7}{8}$; W. $7\frac{7}{8}$; O. D. H. $7\frac{3}{8}$; W. $6\frac{1}{4}$.

Under, in Latin, the name of the personage, date of his death ; in some instances, of his birth, and of the localities of these events ; at bottom, F Faber Fecit & Excudit Ao 1715: on some the date is 1714 ; on that of Luther, " Londni " is mentioned, so they were probably done after his return from Oxford.

These plates having come into the possession of the Bakewells, after many years were retouched by Houston, the inscriptions erased ; Faber's name entirely suppressed ; R Houston Fecit and the address, H Parker and E Bakewell in Cornhill London engraved on each, and alterations made in other parts of the inscription.

In this state the plates were used to illustrate the " Lives of the Reformers," by Mr. Rolt, published in London for Bakewell, Parker, and others, in 1759, small folio.

The entire set has not been met with in the state published by Faber, but so many of them have been, and then compared with those in Rolt, on all which retouching is plainly visible, that there can hardly be a doubt that Faber engraved them all ; they are :—

59. John Richmond, alias Webb. DAHL.

H. L., in oval, directed towards left, facing and looking to front, wig, armour, cloak over right shoulder. Under, Lt General John Richmond alias Webb, Governour and Captain General of the Isle of Wight. M Dahl Pinxit. I Faber Fecit & Excudit. H. $13\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. $11\frac{3}{4}$; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described. Suth: Coll.

II. At bottom, Sold by Tim: Jordan & Tho: Bakewell at ye Golden Lyon in Fleet street.

Died in 1724, according to Bromley. He appears to be the officer mentioned as General Webb, by Burnet, who, under the Duke of Marlborough's orders, defeated the French at Wynandal, near Bruges. It is said that Webb used to talk so much of this and four wounds which he had received, that the Duke of Argyle told him he wished one had been in his tongue.

60. Samuel Rosewell. WOOLASTON.

H. L., in oval, directed towards right, looking to front, long hair, bands, gown; at bottom of oval, Ao 1707. Under, in centre arms Wooluston Pinxit. I Faber Fecit Samuel Rosewell S.S. Evangelij Minister. Sold by I Lawrence att ye Angel in the Poultry. H. $7\frac{5}{8}$; W. 6; O. D. H. $6\frac{3}{8}$; W. $5\frac{5}{8}$. Suth: Coll.

Born, 1679; became minister to the Presbyterian congregation in Silver-street, 1705; friend of Dr. Watts. Died, 7th April, 1722; buried in Bunhill Fields. Mr. Sutherland appears to have mistaken him for Roswell, who is mentioned by Burnet, as having been tried by Jeffreys.

61. Nicholas Rowe.

T. Q. L., standing, directed slightly to left, facing towards and looking to front, wig, open collar, loose gown, right arm leaning on pedestal to left, left hand on gown, wall with niche in distance through archway to right. Under, Nicholas Rowe Esqr P.L. J. Faber Fecit & Excudit Ao 1715. H. $14\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $12\frac{3}{8}$; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described. One known.

At bottom, Printed & Sold by Tho Bakewell next ye Horn Tavern in Fleet Street. Brit: Mus.

Born at Little Beckford, in Bedfordshire, 1673; wrote many plays and poems, and edited Shakespeare; made poet-laureate, on the accession of George I. Died, 6th Dec., 1718.

62. Henry Sacheverell.

H. L., in oval, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, wig, gown. Under, Henricus Sacheverell S T P. Done from ye Life by In Faber near ye Savoy in ye Strand 1710. H. $7\frac{5}{8}$; Sub. $6\frac{6}{8}$; W. 6.

Not mentioned by Bromley.

Born, 1622; educated at Oxford; in 1709, was impeached by the House of Commons for sermons preached at St. Saviour's, Southwark, and at St. Paul's, and the two sermons sentenced to be burnt; but the prosecution was so unpopular that it overthrew the ministry; presented to the rectory of St. Andrew's, Holborn, 1713. Died, 5th June, 1724; left £500 by his will to Bishop Atterbury.

63. Id. with F. Higgins and P. Stubbs.

Three ovals, at top between scrolls, Sacheverell, directed towards right, facing to front, wig, bands, gown, at right of oval, in peril of False Brethern; at bottom to left, in similar attitude, round oval, Francis Higgins A.M. ye Church is in Danger; to right, in similar attitude, own hair, round oval, Philippus Stubbs A.M. for God or for Baal. Under, the 3 Pillars of ye Church ∫ : F excudt 1710. H. $7\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. $6\frac{5}{8}$; W. 6; each oval, H. $3\frac{5}{8}$; W. 3.

The text over Sacheverell is that of his sermon at St. Paul's, and the others are probably those of similar productions. See Higgins under Luttrell, and Stubbs, page 296.

64. Jane Scrimshaw.

H. L., in narrow oval frame, directed slightly to left, facing and looking to front, high peaked black hat, white cap and pinders, black gown and cape, at bottom of oval, Ætat CXXVI. 1710. Under, Jane Scrimshaw ye Daughter of Thoms Scrimshaw Wool Stapler, born in London in ye Parish of St Mary le Bow Ao 1584 April ye 3d is alive and very Healthy this present year 1710 att ye Merchant Taylers Alms House in Little Tower Hill. done from ye Life and Sold; by I. Faber near ye Savoy in ye Strand. H. 8; W. $6\frac{1}{8}$; O. D. H. $6\frac{3}{8}$ W. $5\frac{1}{2}$.

I. As described. Brit: Mus.

II. Date at bottom of oval erased; instead, Age Hundred Twenty six April ye 3td 1710; inscription altered, "Thos" to Thomas, "Merchant" to Marchant "year" to Iune; "done — Strand" to done by ye life.

It is possible that this may be another plate.

Caulfield says that she resided nearly eighty years in this almshouse, having entered it when a little more than thirty years old, and that she died soon after being removed to Rosemary-lane workhouse.

65. Id.

H. L., in oval, directed towards right, facing and looking to front,

D. H. $6\frac{3}{8}$.

I. As described.

II. Between "present" and "1711," Apl, at bottom, Dyed December 25 1711.

66. James Sheppard.

H. L., in oval, sitting on right, directed to left, facing and looking to front, cap, striped gown, open collar, elbows on table before him right hand open on parcel lettered, For Mr Leak These, under it a paper lettered (partially seen), Hymn to the Holy and Undivided Trinity. Under, James Sheppard. That was Executed March ye 17th 1713 at Tyburn in ye 18th year of his Age. Sold by IFaber at the Picture Shop near Essex Street. H. 8; Sub. 7; W. $5\frac{7}{8}$; O. D. H. $6\frac{3}{4}$; W. $5\frac{5}{8}$.

Bromley, p. 250, quoting from Ames (p. 154), mentions another print, with a query whether it may not have been the same as next above, he never having seen it; as the description in Ames agrees with the foregoing, it is not likely that there is a second print.

This poor lad was a Roman Catholic, and apprentice to a coachmaker; he became an enthusiast in the cause of the Pretender, probably from some romantic feeling caused by the events of 1715, and left a letter for a Mr. Leak, offering to assassinate King George; this gentleman, considering that it might be some malicious attempt to fix an odium on him, reported the matter to one of the aldermen, and on Sheppard's coming for an answer, he was seized, indicted at the Old Bailey for high treason, on 6th March, found guilty, and executed on above date.

He was a wholly different person from John (or Jack) Sheppard, whose portrait was engraved by G. White.

67. Jane Shore.

H. L., directed and facing towards right, looking to front, hair dressed with jewels, double string of pearls, and heavy necklace of large jewels, gauze dress over shoulders and partly covering bosom, which is seen through it. Under, Mrs Jane Shore. done from the Original Picture in Eaton Coll: by J Faber. H. 8; Sub. $7\frac{1}{4}$; W. $6\frac{1}{2}$. Two known.

The celebrated mistress of Edward IV.

Lecturer of St. Mary's Church, Whitechapel, having previously been a chaplain in the army; treasurer to the Society for propagating Christian Knowledge. Died, 3rd November, 1722.

70. Andrew Snape.

H. L., in oval, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, wig, bands, black gown. Under, Andreas Snape S.T.P. ƒ Faber Fecit & Excudit. H. $7\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 7; W. $5\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described. Two known.

II. Inscription erased; instead, The Famous Mr Henly of ye Oratory in Newport Markett London Printed & Sold by Tim: Jordan & Tho: Bakewell at ye Golden Lion in Fleet street.

III. Face altered.

Born at Hampton Court; educated at Cambridge; entered the Church; admired as a preacher; D.D., 1705; opponent of Hoadley in the Bangorian controversy; many years head master of Eton; canon of Windsor, 1713; provost of King's College. Died at Windsor Castle, 30th Dec., 1742.

71. Philip Stubbs.

H. L., in oval, directed towards right, looking to front, own hair, bands, black gown. Under, arms, motto, DOMINUS EXALTATIO MEA and to right, I: Faber, Delin: & Fecit. Beneath, a tablet, engraved in line on it, *Philippus Stubbs. A. M. Eccles: Anglic: Presbyter. 77. Wilhelmina Charlotte, afterwards Queen Caroline.

H. L., in oval, directed and looking to front, high hair with pearls, robes, low dress. Under, Her Royal Highness Wilhelmina Charlotte Princess of Wales. Done from ye Original Picture in the Possession of his Excell Count Bothmer. Done & Sold by J Faber att the Golden Eagle near the Fountain Tavern in the Strand Ao 1716. H. 14; Sub. 12; W. $9\frac{3}{8}$.

Wilhelmina Dorothea Carolina, eldest daughter of John Frederick, Margrave of Brandenburg Anspach; married, 1705, George Augustus (eldest son of the Elector of Hanover), who was created Prince of Wales, 1714, and ascended the throne as George II., 1727; his consort, whilst Princess of Wales, is generally styled Wilhelmina Charlotte, but on ascending the throne, Queen Caroline. Died, 20th November, 1737; buried in Westminster Abbey.

Bromley, p. 252, mentions after the foregoing another in 4to. It is probable that there was such a print, as Faber engraved the others of the House of Brunswick in the two sizes.

78. John Worley.

H. L., in oval, directed and looking towards front, cap, white beard. Under, John Worley Pentioner in her Majties Royll Hospital for Seamen att Greenwich Born in Wales Ao 16-24 done from ye Life and Sold by In Faber near ye Savoy in ye Strand 1708. H. $7\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. $6\frac{1}{2}$; W. $5\frac{1}{2}$. Brit: Mus.

Ames, p. 173, mentions this print as being dated 1709; Bromley, p. 250, mentions it with date 1708, and "æt 85;" Noble, VOL. III., p. 391, repeats this, and states his belief that they are the same print, and vary only in the inscription, in which he is probably correct.

JOHN FABER, son of the foregoing, was born in Holland, and accompanied his father to England when three years of age; he appears to have entirely devoted himself to mezzotinto engraving. His prints date from 1712 to 1756, and are very numerous.

Up to the death of his father, he engraves his name with "Junior;" after it; it has not been ascertained how far he may have been instructed by his father, but they appear to have worked almost quite independently of each other, so far as the addresses on the prints prove anything, only one print of each being issued from the same address; that on No. 255 shows that the younger Faber had some connection with J. Smith, who would no doubt have been an excellent instructor, and this might explain his advance in the art. Redgrave says that he studied also at Vanderbank's academy.

Some of his works are published by printsellers and others, but the greater part by himself, at the following addresses: "over against Essex Street Strand;" "at the Blew Ball in Catherine Street Strand;" "at the 2 Golden Balls near the Savoy in the Strand" (these are previus to his father's death); "at Fountain Court in the Strand," about 1722 to 1725; "at the Green Door in Great Piazza Covent Garden," about 1727 to 1729; "at the Green Door in Craven Buildings Drury Lane," about 1731 to 1733; "at the Golden Head in Bloomsbury Square," from 1734 to end of his life. On the first prints with this address "South side" is mentioned.

Most of the earlier prints are very seldom met with. He does not appear to have issued proofs before letters, as those met with in this state are usually not quite finished. He frequently also cut down his plates, and probably introduced that practice.

It proves the talents and industry of this artist that his style of engraving improved up to his death (which took place on 2nd May, 1756); his prints, always clear and careful, becoming more bold and finished in manner towards the end of his career.

But his works are specially important, as so extensively illustrating the portrait art of England, between the time of Kneller and that of Reynolds, about which comparatively nothing is known at the present day; this in part arises from our public collections being almost wholly deficient in examples of that period, and in part from the pertinacity with which those writing up Reynolds have written down his predecessors; so that one cannot but wonder whether or not these critics ever saw a work by Vanderbank, or Seeman, or Mercier, or even by Hudson, whom they so copiously abuse; indeed, by such writing they defeat their object, for it would be small praise for Reynolds to have surpassed painters of, according to them, so little merit.

There are several masonic portraits by Faber, jun., who was, as stated on No. 143, a member of the craft.

1. John Abernethy. LATHAM.

Bred a printer, and acquainted with Swift, Bolingbroke, Pope, and others; acquired great wealth by the South-Sea scheme, from which he prudently retired in time; strongly opposed the proposition for a general excise, in 1733, which procured him great popularity. Died, Jan. 2nd, 1741; buried at Mortlake.

22. William Barker.

Full H. L., in oval, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, long wig, plain coat, embroidered vest, hat under left arm. Under, in centre arms scraped, motto, VINCERE AVT MORI, rising in semi-circle into subject, ƒ Faber ad Vivum Fecit Ano 1726 Mr William Barker. H. 10½; Sub. 9; W. 7½.

I. As described. One known.

II. Retouched, wig shortened, bag at back, hilt of sword under left arm, "William" altered to Wm, arms erased and engraved in line manner.

Noble, VOL. III., p. 254, supposes this to have been Sir William Barker, Bart., of Bocking Hall, Essex (engraved before his father's death), he was the ancestor of Mr. Ponsonby-Barker, of Kilcooley Abbey, Co. Tipperary, and died 5th May, 1746. Noble says he never saw the print, but that the arms will explain if his conjecture be right; the arms, however, are not those given of the family he mentions, but are nearly those of the Barkers of Berkshire.

23. William Barlow. TUCKER.

Richard Jones, the only Earl of Ranelagh, married, 1st, Elizabeth, daughter of Lord Willoughby, of Parham; 2nd, Margaret, daughter of James Cecil, 3rd Earl of Salisbury, and widow of John, Lord Stawell. Bromley, p. 198, appears uncertain which of these ladies is represented; but it most probably was the latter, who died in 1727, aged 54, as the former would have been much older, if represented by Kneller, than either this or the print by J. Smith indicate.

"J Cooper ex" subsequently erased.

Neither Bromley (p. 197) nor Noble (VOL. I., p. 337) can identify this lady, beyond distinguishing her from Mrs. Jane Middleton and the Countess of Middleton. Query if she was Anne, daughter of Sir John Trevor, who married, 1st, Michael Hill; 2nd, on 1st Dec., 1716, Alan Brodrick (who had been created Viscount Midelton in 1710), and died, 5th Jan., 1747; she was thus Lady Midelton when the print was engraved; but Miss Trevor, when the picture was painted.

Sir John Trevor, according to Burnet, was the channel through whom the Tory party was managed by William III., and would therefore have been likely to have placed his daughter with Mary II.

Standing, directed to left, facing and looking to front, right hand on robe, left hand under water of fountain of lion's head to left, trees in background to right. Under, Mrs Scroop. G Kneller Baronets pinx. F Faber fec. F Cooper ex.

"J Cooper ex" subsequently erased.

Miss Pitt, supposed to have been maid of honour to Queen Mary, afterwards married to Mr. Scroop; considered the greatest beauty of the court.

Usual impressions are printed in a pale, rather yellowish tint

Daughter of Richard, Earl of Burlington; married, 1741, George, Earl of Euston, eldest son of the Duke of Grafton, who was a very bad character, and treated her scandalously. She died as above; and he died at Bath, July 7th, 1747.

Walpole (Cor. VOL. I., p. 316) calls this "a very extraordinary print, which my Lady Burlington gives away, of her daughter Euston, with this inscription." A slightly incorrect copy of the foregoing inscription follows, and in a note a reference is made to p. 253 for a more correct copy; but this latter refers to the inscription under the picture.

Bromley calls this personage the brother of the late Countess of Buckinghamshire, and says that he died in 1770. John, 1st Earl of Buckinghamshire, married, 1727, Elizabeth (his second wife) sister of Robert Bristowe, Esq., one of the clerks comptrollers of his Majesty's household; on the 14th June, 1770, died Wm. Bristow, one of the sixty clerks in chancery; so, possibly, "Jack" was a nickname. Henry Hobart (see p. 58) married a daughter of John Bristow, Esq., who died in 1788, and although not so mentioned, may have been a brother of the Countess and the personage represented in the print.

47. Charles Brown.

See page 302.

Bromley, p. 254, mentions this as W. L., but he probably mistakes, as the print is evidently a companion to her elder sister's, Nos. 8 and 253, and he does not mention the latter as W. L. (see p. 253), or the former at all. The print of Caroline and Amelia mentioned at p. 254. of Bromley, has not been identified as being by Faber.

67. George, Lord Carpenter. VAN DIEST.

T. Q. L., standing, directed and looking to front, facing slightly to right, wig, lace cravat, coat buttoned at waist only, right hand grasping baton, left hand with gloves on hip, to left a plan of a fort, in background engagement of cavalry, in distance to right fort on a hill, horseman at base. Founder of the London house so celebrated for its improvements in the art of type-making. Died, 1766, in his 74th year.

Born about 1686; entered the army, and served under the Earl of Stair; had a principal hand in gaining the victory over the rebels at Sherriffmuir; succeeded his father as 8th Lord Cathcart, 1732; appointed to command the British forces in attacking Spain in her American dominions, and sailed from Spithead, but died at sea, 20th Dec., 1740, and was buried on the beach of Prince Rupert's Bay, Dominica.

72. Mr. Caveller. CRANK.

T. Q. L., standing, directed towards left, facing and looking towards right, wig, plain coat, right hand on hip, left on table to right, on which are leaves of music. Under, Crank Pinxt. Faber Fecit. Mr Caveller, Dancing Master. H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{1}{4}$; W. $9\frac{3}{8}$.

I. As described.

II. Retouched, plate damaged, mark at right side of mouth, scratch across fingers of left hand, several marks about inscription.

Bromley identifies him with Mr. Cavillier, Master of the boarding school in Queen's-square, near Ormond-street, who died, October, 1745, aged 104. He does appear an old man in the print.

73. (Master Chardin.) CHARDIN.

T. Q. L., sitting on right, directed to left, leaning on left elbow at a table on which is portfolio with drawing of a head, hat, long hair, sharpening with knife held in right hand a crayon held in left. Under, Chardin pinxt 1737. J. Faber Fecit 1740.

*The happy Youth whom Strength of Genius fires,
Who, smit with Science, to fair Fame aspires,

Nor quit the Nymph till he Obtain the Clue.*

Lockman. Sold by I Faber at the Golden Head Bloomsbury Square. H. $12\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. $10\frac{1}{8}$; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

74. Charles I.

H. L., directed to front, looking upwards, hands raised, similar to print by W. Faithorne, in corner at top to left, a hand with crown from which rays issue on head, to right a cherub. Under, Corruptibilem pro incorruptibile

*Looking to Iesus so our Sovereigne stood Praying for those who Thirsted for his Blood:
But high in Blifs with his Celestial Crowne
Now with an Eye of Pity hee Looks Downe
While some Attaque his other life his Fame,
Ludlow reviv'd to blott the Royal Name
On Sacred Majesty Profanely treads,
Madd to sett up ye Beast with many Heads
New Regicides bad as the Old dare call
The Martyr's blood on their own heads to Fall;
And black as those who Frocks and Vizors Wore
These barefac'd Hangmen trample on his Gore
Can it bee Silent, can it cease to cry
Such Feinds forbid it in repose to Lye!
Tis well the blood of God speaks better Things Than that of Abell or a Murder'd King's.*

I Faber Junr fec 1717. Sold by E Cooper at ye 3 pigeons in Bedford Street. H. 13 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 10; W. 9 $\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described.

II. Address erased; instead, Sold by John Bowles at the Black Horse in Cornill.

In Suth. Cat. an impression is mentioned with address of T. Bowles, and date, 1721; but there is probably a misdescription in this, its base, I Highmore Pinx. I Faber Fecit, terrace and gardens in background to left. H. 20; W. 14.

75. Id.

Bromley says she was a courtesan, known also as Miss Stewart, but there is no corroboration of this assertion.

A Miss Collier was the first wife of the Honble James Murray (son of the 4th Lord Elibank, and brigadier-general who commanded under Wolfe and Monckton at Quebec, also at Minorca, and died at Beauport House, near Battel, in Sussex, 1794). She died at Beauport, 26th June, 1779, and may possibly have been the personage represented.

Born in obscurity, and unknown as an actress, she obtained the part of "Polly," in Gay's "Beggar's Opera," produced in 1728, in Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre (it having been refused at Drury Lane), and immediately became the rage. She left the stage with Charles third Duke of Bolton, who engaged to marry her on the death of his wife from whom he was separated. When this event occurred, he performed his promise, and made her a duchess. She died 24th Jan. 1760. Warton says that he knew her, and that he could testify to her wit, good manners, taste, and intelligence.

I. As described.

II. After "J. Bowles" erased; instead, at ye Black Horse in Cornhill.

III. Address erased, at bottom, 5. London Printed & Sold by C Bowles in St Pauls Church yard.

Bromley states that this personage died in 1767; but the lady who died in this year would have been described as the Honble Mrs. Anne Granville (who was youngest daughter of Lord Lansdowne). Her cousin, Mary Granville, afterwards Mrs. Delany, first changed her name in 1718 (before the print was engraved); nor is there any allusion in her memoirs to a Mary Anne in that family.

168. Sophia, Countess Granville. WENTWORTH.

H. L., in frame carved with flowers, directed and looking to front, facing slightly to left, necklace, white lace on breast, dark dress, beneath frame a tablet on which—

*Oft in the Workman's labour'd Peice we trace
The well turn'd Brow, the Lip, the Cheek, the Face,
But it eludes the Reach of Vulgar Art
To give the Air exprefive of the Heart
When in a Form divine, the Parts, the Whole,
Are one bright Emanation of the Soul:
To paint your Friend, by heavenly Graces drest,
Wentworth, you drew the Image from your Breaft.*

Under, The Right Honourable Lady Sophia Fermor, Married the 14th of April 1744 to John Lord Carteret, Principal Secretary of State, since Earl of Granville. Lady Anne Wentworth since Countess Fitzwilliams Pinxt. John Faber fecit 1747. H. $12\frac{2}{3}$; Sub. $11\frac{1}{8}$; W. 9; H. I. B. $6\frac{5}{8}$; W. $5\frac{1}{8}$.

Sold by I Faber in fountain Court near ye Fountain Tavern in the Strand.* H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{1}{8}$; W. $9\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described. One known.

II. Address erased; instead, Sold by John Bowles opposite to Stocks Market & at Marcers Hall in Cheapside. Brit: Mus.

III. Retouched, remarkable expression of countenance in first state lost thereby, address altered to Sold by John Bowles at the Black Horse in Cornhill.

Born at Shoreditch, October 29th, 1656; educated at Oxford; devoted himself to astronomy, going to St. Helena to make observations; Savilian professor, 1703; succeeded Flamsteed at Greenwich, in 1719. Died, Jan. 14th, 1742. He was author of many remarkable works, and made many curious discoveries. He is said to have held strange opinions in religious matters, a not uncommon aberration of those philosophical intellects which will not stoop to believe as a little child.

174. Elizabeth, Duchess of Hamilton. G. HAMILTON.

W. L., standing on terrace, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, long hair, low dress, veil loosely tied across chest, right hand on dress, left hand on head of greyhound to right, which fawns upon her with forepaws, seat to left, trees in background. Under, Ga: Hamilton Pinxt. J: Faber Fecit. Elizabeth Dutcheffs of Hamilton

& Brandon &c. Publish'd according to Act of Parliament. 1753. H. $19\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 19; W. $13\frac{3}{4}$.

I. As described. Three known.

II. Plate cut $2\frac{1}{2}$ at top, $\frac{5}{8}$ at left, $3\frac{1}{4}$ at right side, $3\frac{5}{8}$ at bottom, subject scraped away at bottom $1\frac{1}{4}$, on which Elizabeth Dutchess of Hamilton &c London Printed for Jno Smith, Map & Printseller at Hogarth's Head in Cheapside.

Not mentioned by Bromley; he speaks of a mez. after Hamilton by Finlayson of this lady (p. 417), and one of her sister, the Countess of Coventry, W. L., with a greyhound, by M'Ardell, after the same painter (p.,305); so it is probable that he confused his notes of the different prints, for there is no greyhound in the M'Ardell print, nor has a print by Finlayson, after Hamilton, been met with.

Second daughter of John Gunning, Esq., of Co. Roscommon; married, 1st, 14th Feb., 1752, James, 6th Duke of Hamilton (who died 17th Jan., 1758); 2nd, 3rd March, 1759, Colonel John Campbell (who became 5th Duke of Argyll, 1770); created, 1776, Baroness Hamilton, of Hambleton, Co. Leicester, and died, 20th Dec., 1790.

175. George Frederick Handel. HUDSON.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed slightly to left, facing and looking towards right, wig, edged coat, right hand planted on leg, left hand holding papers, on music on table to right. Under, T. Hudson pinxt. I. Faber fecit 1749. George Frederick Handel. Price 2 Shill. Sold by J. Faber at the Golden Head in Bloomsbury Square. H. 14; Sub. $12\frac{3}{8}$; W. 10.

This great composer was born at Halle, 24th Feb., 1684; came to England, 1710, but returned to Hanover, which he again left, and finally settled in England two years afterwards; was superintendent of the Royal Academy of Music, which was broken up by the rivalry of Faustina and Senesino, and Handel had to give up the contest. Soon afterwards (about 1740) he ceased the production of operas, and composed his great oratorios. Died, 13th April, 1759.

lamb on bank to right, trees in background. Under, I Peters pinx. I Faber fecit; Mrs Howard Sold by Tho: Bowles next the Chapter House in St Pauls Church Yard London. H. 13 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{1}{8}$; W. 9 $\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described. Not mentioned by Bromley.

II. Much retouched, strengthening effect; "I Faber fecit" erased, instead, Bockman fecit; "London" erased, instead, & John Bowles in Cornhill.

This personage is probably Henrietta Hobart; married, 1st, Charles Howard (who became 9th Earl of Suffolk, in 1731, and died in 1733); 2nd, the Hon. George Berkeley; she was a favourite of George II., whose court she left in 1735; she is frequently mentioned by Walpole, who was her neighbour at Twickenham, where she died, 27th Oct., 1767.

Margaret Skreen, of Edinburgh, who married at Limerick, in 1732, Philip Howard, (he died in 1741, and his son became 15th Earl of Suffolk): or his sister Mary, who might have been styled "Mrs." before her marriage, and who was maid-of-honour to Queen Caroline, when Princess of Wales, and married, 1st, Henry, Earl of Deloraine; 2nd, William Wyndham, of Earsham, in Norfolk, and died in London, 12th Nov., 1744: could, so far as the period goes, have been the original of the portrait; or she might have been some one not connected with the Suffolk and Berkshire family at all.

As an instance of the way in which genealogical authorities may confuse pedigrees, Collins makes this Countess of Deloraine the great-granddaughter of the 1st Earl of Berkshire; whilst Douglas makes her his granddaughter, in which he is most likely incorrect.

195. (Howard), Abbess of English Nuns. MATHYAS.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed towards right, facing and looking to front, nun's costume, right hand to hood, beads tied to cord round waist, left hand on book on table to right, behind a skull and crucifix. 208. Kitcat Club. KNELLER.

Set of Forty-seven Plates, with Title and Dedication.

Full H. L., or short T. Q. L. (from these this particular length was called Kitcat). H. 13 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 9 $\frac{7}{8}$; with a number, as given to each of the following, at bottom to right.

Several of the pictures appear to be "replicas" of original portraits, engraved long before this collection was made; to these references are given. Some were left unfinished by Kneller, and were thus scraped by Faber.

Proofs before letters of most of the plates have been met with, and there were several issues of them; the first by Tonson and Faber, the subsequent ones by Boydell & Co., No. 90, Cheapside, London; but without alteration of the original title or plates.

The set of copper-plates were sold at the Boydell sale in 1818, to Gale for £108 3s.

Dedication.—At top arms, supporters a bull and unicorn, motto, FOY POVR DEVOIR. Under, To the most Noble Prince Charles Seymour Duke of Somersset, Marquis & Earl of Hertford, Viscount & Baron Beauchampe de Hache and Lord Seymour of Trowbridge, of Cockermouth & Petworth, Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, Lord High Steward of the City of Chichester, One of the Governors of the Charter-House, Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter, & One of the Lords of His Majesties most honble Privy Council &c. May it please your Grace. As this Collection of Prints owes its very Being to Your Grace's Liberality, in setting the Example to the other Members of the Kit-Cat Club, of honouring Mr Tonson with their Pictures; and as your Grace has ever been Eminently Distinguish'd by that Noble Principle, for the Support of which that Association was known to have been form'd, the Love of your Country, and the Constitutional Liberty thereof; But more especially as the Arts and Sciences have always found in Your Grace a Most Illustrious and Indulgent Patron, This Work is humbly Inscrib'd to Your Grace by Your Grace's most Obedient and most devoted humble Servant John Faber.

Bromley, page 435, mentions a W. L. engraved in 1747; this might be, therefore, a cut down plate.

Stepdaughter of Macdonald of Armadale, in Skye; famous for having assisted in the escape of Prince Charles Edward (who was disguised as a woman) in 1746, and on their parting was presented by him with his portrait. She was apprehended and sent to London, but was, after a year's imprisonment, discharged through the influence of Frederick, Prince of Wales; she subsequently married and went to America, but returned, and is mentioned by Boswell as a mild, well-bred little woman.

The "Gent's. Mag." for 1832, p. 86, speaking of the death of her only son, states that she died, 4th March, 1790 (aged about 68). Another account states that she died at Lewes, West Highlands, early in 1810.

231. Owen MacSwiny. VANLOO.

Born at Milan, 1715; first appeared at Rome, in 1730, in female characters; brought over to England by Lord Middlesex after Handel had given up the operas; besides singing he acted well, but found it difficult to gain appreciation from an English audience who remembered Farinelli and Senesino. He is frequently mentioned by Walpole, in 1741-2. Burney says that the season of 1746 was the last in which he appeared on our stage; but Walpole, in Dec., 1748, speaks of a trial in which he recovered arrears of salary from Lord Middlesex. He died in 1766.

248. Lady Christian Moray. DAVISON.

250. William Stewart, Lord Mountjoy. CURRY.

Bromley, p. 324. Painted 1738, engraved 1741, as grand master of the masons.

Succeeded his father as 2nd Viscount, Lieutenant-General in the army, master general of the ordnance. He died 1741.

John Murphy.

Bromley, p. 279. Noble VOL. III., p. 174, gives reasons to prove that Bromley had altogether mistaken this personage, the existence, therefore, of the print is doubtful.

According to the "Apology for her conduct" (which she published in three volumes, from her house in Craig's Court, Charing Cross, London, 1748-9), she was born, Jan. 2nd, 1709, her parents being of good family; her adventures are detailed in these volumes, also her marriage with Henry Muilman, Esq., an eminent Dutch merchant. Another account of this transaction being, that they got tired of each other when three months 'married, and she proposed to put him in a way of dissolving the bond, if he settled £500 a year upon her. On his agreeing, she produced a certificate of her previous marriage with a pastry cook in Maiden-lane, Covent Garden. As, however, Muilman did not keep his word, she threatened to take a step to render his marriage with her legal; he derided her, but she produced a register, showing that the pastry cook had married another woman (previous to his marriage with her) who was still alive; and, ultimately, Muilman sent her to Jamaica, where she died, early in 1765.

It has been stated that the W. L. plate was destroyed when a few impressions of it were taken off; and Bromley appears not to have seen it, as he (p. 312) refers to Gulston Catalogue, p. 118, where it is called "Rariss;" it would follow then that this second state was in reality the first state of a second plate, and the impressions are so good that it gives weight to the conjecture; on comparison, it does not, however, seem to be an exception to Faber's usual custom of cutting down his whole to three quarter lengths.

400. House of Yvery.

Set of Eighteen Plates, exclusive of the "Rawdons." See Page 453.

These portraits are illustrations to the "Genealogical History of the House of Yvery," composed by J. Anderson and W. Whiston, and dedicated to John, Earl of Egmont. 2 Vols., 8vo. London, 1742.

In the address to the reader, at commencement of Second Volume, it is stated that a third will be shortly published, containing all the Records at full length, "for the Ease of the Curious, and to avoid all possibility of Cavil;" but this was not done.

The portraits, as shown by the dates, were published subsequently to the volumes, which are therefore sometimes deficient of them, and in that case lose nearly all their value.

Horace Walpole (who was a political opponent), states (Cor. VOL. II., p. 145) that this work cost three thousand pounds, and that it was so ridiculous that Lord Perceval tried to suppress all the copies; Lord Dover, too (quoted in VOL. I., p. 107), calls it "a most remarkable monument of human vanity."

It should not, however, be held especially reprehensible that one should wish to preserve particulars of his own ancestry; and the book is very interesting, containing a great deal of curious biographical information and details of the lives of the following personages.

The portraits are H. L., in oval frames, with arms and inscriptions under. H. 6; Sub. $4\frac{3}{4}$; W. 4; O. D. H. $3\frac{3}{4}$; W. 3.

401. The Rawdons.

Lowndes ("Bibliographer's Manual," Ed. 1857, p 41) states that there are four portraits of the Rawdons, which were engraved for an intended history of that family, which are sometimes inserted in the "House of Yvery," but form no part of that work.

Bromley (p. 129) states that a "Genealogy of the Family" was prepared in MS. by Marmaduke Rawdon, who died in 1688, and for that work Robert White engraved in the line manner several plates, "which being lost, the prints are in few hands."

Now, it does not appear unlikely, that Lowndes mistook the following prints by Faber for those engraved by White, and that he is incorrect in asserting that the former did not form part of the "House of Yvery," to the other portraits of which work they precisely correspond, and should be inserted at VOL. II., p. 454. At this page there is an error in the eighth line, stating that Sir John Rawdon, Baronet, of Rawdon Hall, in Yorkshire, and Moira, in Ireland, was "Grandson of Sir John Rawdon," for these words should be read, "Son of Sir John Rawdon, 3rd Bart. (who married Dorothy, born Levinge); grandson of Sir Arthur Rawdon, 2nd Bart. (who married Helena, born Graham); great-grandson of Sir George Rawdon, 1st Bart. (who married Dorothy, daughter of Lord Conway).

No copy of the book has been yet met with having these "Rawdon" plates, nor are they mentioned by Bromley.

The "Gulston Catalogue" (p. 80), mentions five small mezzotintos by Faber, of the Rawdon Family, viz., Lady Helen Rawdon; Lady Dorothy; Lady Helen, wife of Sir John; Sir Arthur; and Sir John.

The following three have been met with in the modern state, similar to the "Perceval" series.

Sir John Rawdon.

Directed towards right, facing towards and looking to front, wig, frill, embroidered vest. Under, arms, motto, NISI DOMINUS FRUSTRA G. Knapton Pinxit. I. Faber Fecit 1745 Sr John Rawdon of Rawdon Hall In the County of York Bart (6th of that Name) Born Mar 18th 1720. Married Lady Helena youngest Daughter to Jno Percival Earl of Egmont.

Created Earl of Moira, 1761. Died, 20th June, 1793.

Lady Helena Rawdon (born Perceval), his Wife.

Directed towards left, facing towards and looking to front, band of pearls round hair, earring, low dress. Under, arms and motto as in last, J. Wills pinxit. I. Faber Fecit 1745 The Rt Honble Lady Helena Wife to Sr John Rawdon of Rawdon Hall in the County of York Bart, and Youngest Daugr to Jno Percival Earl of Egmont Born Feb 14th 1718, & Married Novr 10th 1741.

See page 96.

Lady Dorothea Rawdon.

Directed slightly to right, facing slightly to left, looking to front, hair in curls, one on forehead, necklace, loose dress. Under, arms with slightly different quarterings, and motto as in last, I. Faber Fecit 1745 The Honble Dorothea Wife to Sr Geo. Rawdon of Rawdon Hall in ye County of York Bart & Daughter to Edward Ld Viscount Conway.

402. Christian Frederick Zincke and Wife. HYSING.

T. Q. L.'s., Zincke standing, on left, directed to right, facing and looking to front, cap, right hand holding crayon, left arm leaning on portfolio, his wife sitting on right, directed to front, facing and looking towards left, loose dress, holding miniature in right hand, left hand on seat beside her, pillar behind. Under, H. Hysing pinx. I. Faber fecit Christian Frederick Zincke Painter in Enamel & Elizabeth his Wife. W. $13\frac{1}{2}$; H. 12; Sub. $11\frac{1}{2}$.

I. The point of the crayon in painter's right hand projects below bottom of subject, and a shadow is cast from it over the "st" of the word Christian.

II. Slightly retouched, point of crayon projecting below subject, and shadow erased.

Born at Dresden, 1684; came to England, 1706; studied for a short time under Boit, but soon obtained a large patronage for his beautiful miniatures. Died at Lambeth, 24th March, 1767, having ceased painting twenty years before in consequence of failing sight.

His wife, Elizabeth, died 24th July, 1772.

403. Guitar-player. HALS.

Full H. L., standing, directed towards left, looking to front, wide hat, Spanish costume, playing on cittern to accompany his voice; on balustrade in front, Frans Hals Pinxt. J. Faber Fecit 1754. H. $13\frac{1}{2}$; W. $9\frac{1}{4}$.

404. Lady in Meditation. KNELLER.

H. L., in oval frame, directed and looking towards left, long hair, earring, right elbow on table to left, head leaning on hand, cloak across left shoulder. Under, G Kneller Bart Pinxt. J: Faber Fecit 1753. Sold at the Golden Head near the Church Bloomsbury. H. 13; Sub. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 9.

405. Rural Life. MERCIER.

Set of Six Plates.

Youth shearing a sheep

Youth sitting, right hand holding can, scythe resting on lap.

Girl resting from haymaking, rake held upright by right hand.

Youth playing bagpipes.

Girl spinning.

Girl churning.

Under each, Ph. Mercier Pinxt. J. Faber fecit. Rural Life. H. 13; Sub. 11 $\frac{3}{8}$; W. 8 $\frac{7}{8}$.

I. As described.

II. At bottom, Printed for John Bowles at No 13 in Cornhill; on last plate, London Printed for Robt Sayer John Ryall & Robt Withy in Fleet Street.

Le Blanc mentions five only of this set.

406. Bacchus and Cupid. ID.

Two plates.

A boy attended by a tiger, pointing to a heart transfixed by an arrow. Under, Phi Mercier pinxt. J. Faber fecit 1739 Bacchus in the Character of Cupid (4 verses) Bacchus—Heart.

A boy with wings, pouring from bottle into glass, cask to left. Under, Phi Mercier Invt et Pinxt. J. Faber fecit 1739 Cupid in the Character of Bacchus (6 verses) Smile—Lafs.

At bottom of each, Publish'd according to Act of Parliament 1739. H. 12 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 8 $\frac{7}{8}$.

407. Swain, Dairymaid. ID.

Two plates.

A youth with drum, blowing a whistle. Under, Ph. Mercier pinxt. J. Faber fecit The Swain's Amusement.

A girl with basket of pats of butter. Under, Ph. Mercier pinxt J. Faber fecit The Dairymaid's Occupation.

Under each, London Printed for Robt Sayer Map and Printfeller near Serjeants Inn Fleet Street. H 13; Sub. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 9.

Foregoing is probably not the first address. Le Blanc mentions (No. 169) "The Housewife's Employment," which is probably a companion, and there may be another to make up a set of four plates.

408. Venetian. ID.

Girl standing at a window, beckoning with her left hand. Under, Ph Mercier invt et pinxt. I. Faber fecit 1739 A Venetian Courtezan (6 verses) How—invite. Publish'd according to Act of Parliament. H. 13; Sub. 11 $\frac{5}{8}$; W. 8 $\frac{3}{4}$.

409. Lady with Glass ID.

Girl looking at herself in glass to left, and making her toilet. Under, Ph Mercier invt et pinxt I Faber fecit 1739. (6 verses). Ammon's—these. Publish'd according to Act of Parliament. H. 12 $\frac{3}{4}$; Sub. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 9.

410. Musician. ID.

Girl playing on violincello. Under, P Mercier pinxt ¶ Faber fecit (5 verses) If Musick—Odour Printed for Robt Sayer, Jno Ryall and Robt Withy in Fleet Street 1756. H. 12 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 11 $\frac{3}{8}$; W. 8 $\frac{7}{8}$.

Probably not the first address; as the year is that of Faber's death; it is likely that these publishers had only just got the plate.

411. Schools. ID.

Two plates.

Master sitting on right, birch in right hand, pulling boy's ear, seven other boys standing round. Under, Ph Mercier invt et pinxt I. Faber fecit 1739 (8 verses). This—Disgrace.

Master sitting on left, chucking a girl under the chin, five other girls, one of them tying her garter. Under, Ph Mercier invt et pinxt I Faber fecit (8 verses) See—got.

At bottom of each, Publish'd according to Act of Parliament 1739. W. 12 $\frac{7}{8}$; H. 10 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$.

412. The Choice. ID.

In centre a girl pushing aside with her right hand an elderly man who points to money on a table, towards right a stout fellow exhibiting the muscle of his arm. Under (8 verses) By Pray'r—Heart. P Mercier Pictor Principis Pinxt 1739. I. Faber fecit. Sold by I Faber at the Golden Head in Bloomsbury Square. W. 13 $\frac{7}{8}$; H. 10; Sub. 9 $\frac{1}{4}$.

Probably the print called by Le Blanc (No. 180) "The Usurer."

413. The Concert. ID.

A girl singing and playing a harpsichord on left, behind her another playing the flute, at back another playing the violin, before her an old lady playing the violincello. Under, P Mercier pinxt I Faber fecit. W. 14 $\frac{3}{4}$; H. ; Sub. 10 $\frac{5}{8}$.

Le Blanc mentions The Reading (La Lecture, No. 172) with verses, "Children like tender oziers," which is probably a companion to the foregoing.

It is probable that many of the figures in the foregoing (Nos. 405 to 413) are portraits of members of Mercier's family.

414. Careless Husband. ID.

T. Q. L.'s., towards right a woman asleep in a chair, towards left a man, also asleep, with bare head, on which a female behind him is laying a handkerchief. Under, P Mercier Pinxt. I Faber fecit 1739 A Scene in the Careless Husband Publish'd according to Act of Parliament. W. 13; H. 11; Sub. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$.

See the Play, Act V., Scene IV. Characters, Mrs. Edging, Sir Charles Easy, Lady Easy behind; the last is supposed by some to be a portrait of Mrs. Clive.

415. Recruiting Officer. ID.

T. Q. L.'s., in centre, a girl with large basket, to right a man holding her dress with his right hand, stick in his left, to left of her another man, one hand in her basket, the other pushing the first man away from her, in background to left a man sitting at a table with bottle and glasses. Under, Ph Mercier Invit et pinxit. I Faber fecit A Scene in the Recruiting Officer Publish'd according to Act of Parliament 1739. W. 13; H. 11; Sub. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$.

See the Play, Act III., Scene I. Characters; Worthy, Plume, Rose, and Kite.

416. Boy and Girl. ID.

W. L.'s., boy with fan on left, girl with hat and sword on right, doll at her feet, vase in background. Under, P. Mercier Pinx. I Faber fecit 1744.

*Free as their thoughts and Wanton as the Air
Thro' Life's bright Morning Sports this Infant Pair
Smiles in their Looks, and Whimseys in their Heart
Tir'd of their own they act each other's part
Miss proves the Joys which Tommy's Cloathes afford Struts in his Hat, and Hectors with his Sword.
Whilst Tommy drest with Mifses Cap and Coat on Courtseys & prims as if he'd learnt with Haughton*

*Th' observing Eye your Little Pastime teach
 What grave Fools Dictate and what pedants preach
 The Lust of Change (Disguise it as we can) Dawns in the Child and Rages in the Man.*

Publish'd according to Act of Parliament March 25th 1744.

Companion to No. 148 (page 355). There is no allusion in these verses, as there is in those of that print, to indicate that the children are those of Frederick, Prince of Wales.

417. Ladies. PICKERING.

Two Plates.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed towards left, facing and looking to front, rose in hair, low dress, holding garland of flowers in hands, crook across lap and left arm, lamb to left.

T. Q. L., sitting, directed towards right, facing and looking towards left, crook across lap and right arm, dog to left.

Under each, Henry Pickering pinxt. John Faber fecit. Price 2 Shills Sold by I Faber at the Golden Head in Bloomsbury Square. H. 14; Sub. 12 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$.

I. As described.

II. Price and address erased; instead, London Printed for R Sayer, 1 Ryal & R Withy in Fleet Street Price 2s.

Copied by Houston, as "Shepherdess," and "Chloe in the Country."

418. Sleepy Eye. R. WILSON.

T. Q. L., sitting behind table on which are books, hands folded, veil thrown over head. Under, Richard Wilson Pinxt. I Faber Fecit. The Sleepy Eye that Spoke the Melting Soul. Pope. Printed for Tho Bowles in St Pauls Church Yard & John Bowles & Son at the Black Horse in Cornhill H. 14; Sub. 11 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Copied by Houston as "Night."

Lady in Riding-Dress. WHOOD.

This portrait is said by Bromley, p. 311, to be Mrs. Rudge, and this name is written on the Strawberry Hill impression. The plate is not by Faber, but by Simon, under whom it will be described; Faber, however, repaired it most cleverly, and, except closely compared, the reworked would be taken for the original plate.

419. Lady with Rose.

T. Q. L., standing, cap, necklace, muslin over bosom, dark dress,

*When Beauty pleads her own resistless cause,
She not sollicit, but commands applause,
Thro' ev'ry Eye convinces ev'ry mind,
And in one Language conquers all Mankind,
A Language o'er the Globe, like Day reveal'd,
And only from the Blind, like Day conceal'd.*

Printed for Tho: Bowles in St Pauls Church Yard & John Bowles in Cornhill. H. 13 $\frac{7}{8}$; Sub. 12 $\frac{1}{2}$; W. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$.

See page 349.

I. As described.

II. Eyes and face more worked upon, "Faber fecit" erased.

Faber also executed several scriptural and genre pieces, amongst them are the Daughter of Herodias after "Carlo Dulci Done from the Painting in his Majties Royal Pallace at Kensington and Dedicated to Henry Lowman Esqr Housekeeper of the said Pallace;" and, Boy blowing lighted stick, after Schalcken, from the "painting at Altrop, in the Collection of John Spencer Esqr."

It may be mentioned, as proving that English portraits are still comparatively unknown on the Continent, that of the foregoing prints by Faber, jun., Nagler gives the names of less than 100; Le Blanc gives 181, but then he counts 28, 208, and 405, as sixty-two, instead of three numbers.

There are, probably, very few readers of these works who do not regret that Nagler mixed painters and engravers together; and that Le Blanc's, by whom this was not done, is amongst those elaborate books of reference on engravings, which from want of patronage, or some other cause, have been left incomplete by their authors.

APPENDIX OF PRICES.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THIS selection from a considerable number of priced catalogues has been made in order to convey a general idea of what has hitherto been given for these prints at Public Sale, which is, on the whole, a more satisfactory criterion than the catalogues of printsellers. It is by private sale, however, that the greater number of prints change owners, and generally at prices somewhat higher than those of the public ones, for the printseller, as in any other commercial transaction, is fairly entitled to a recompense for his labour and skill.

These prices cannot, of course, indicate in any way the future values, which will depend on the ordinary law of supply and demand. But the supply cannot increase, indeed is likely to diminish, from absorption in public collections and other causes; if, therefore, the number of those who appreciate and desire to possess these prints increases, an advance in price, to which it is impossible to assign a limit, must take place.

At our public sales it has been the custom to set up a number of different prints together in one lot; on the Continent, where time may not be so great an object, they are usually set up separately (and now, as values increase, this is becoming more general here too); in these lots the price of each print cannot be discriminated, or quoted, but in some cases, when the lot consisted of rubbish, or "stuffing," with one good print, the price of it has been given with "&c." after the number and state.

APPENDIX OF PRICES.

Some prints are so scarce that they have not been met with in any catalogues, some have been sold in these lots, or otherwise, for insignificant sums, often, indeed, owing to their being damaged, and this fact is too many times suppressed, whereby the reader of a catalogue, who cannot see the print itself, may be altogether misled. These low prices particularly occur at the sales between the "Townley" in 1828, when it was evident that the old race of collectors had vanished, and the "Daniel" in 1864, when it was equally evident that some were beginning to suspect that Rembrandt and Marc Antonio did not monopolise all the merit in the art of engraving, and that there were productions of our English School (such as the glorious prints of Reynolds' literary portraits at that sale) which had also reached perfection and were worthy of being esteemed accordingly. The collector would, therefore, do well, in estimating value, to bear in mind the points which constitute it, viz. : earliness of impression, excellence of preservation, beauty of the artist's work, authenticity and interest attaching to the personage, rarity.

Prints possessing all these points will be likely to command extreme prices ; but a large number may be met with which have some of them in the higher or all in the lesser degree, and which can be had for more moderate sums. It will, however, often happen that a particular print may be much wanted by more than one buyer, perhaps from the personage being connected with their family, or to complete a series of portraits, or some other special reason, and will bring an extraordinary high price ; indeed, unlimited commissions for prints are not uncommon, which are absolute instructions to buy whatever the price may go to.

It is also to be remembered that it does not follow that the prints at public sales could always have been obtained at a trifle beyond the price which they brought, as very often a buyer has a print sold to him at much less than he was willing to give ; in such cases an opponent would only have raised the price without securing the print.

It may be truly said in favour of collecting generally, that those who enter upon such a pursuit get something tangible for their money (and something, too, which will bring a profit if the investment has been judicious), whilst others may squander large sums without having anything whatever to show for them afterwards. And when the object of the collector is still more worthy, and that he adopts a line such as will aid in the cultivation of his understanding and provide for his mind a healthy and rational enjoyment, and pursues it with due regard to the time and means at his disposal, the result is likely to add considerably to his happiness. It appears, too, as if the time had passed away when ignorance was able to attach ridicule to such tastes; probably the last instance was the "Gooseberry Hall" squib on the Strawberry Hill sale in 1842, and those who did not mind this small wit have no reason now to be sorry, as the increase in the value of their purchases has been in some cases fiftyfold, and it is at least as likely that this increase will go on as that there will be a diminution.

It has been stated that Walpole, in forming that collection, never went beyond five shillings for a print; his name, however, appears in the Gulston sale as having paid much larger sums, although it is likely enough that he and other collectors obtained the prints nearly of their own time at the publication prices, which generally did not exceed shillings; this, of course, has nothing to say to the present values, for no one would expect, say an "Albert Durer" now worth fifty guineas, for the few pence at which it was published. This increase of value, too, is only the reward fairly due to a series of collectors, for their care in selecting and preserving the prints.

Sales of celebrated collections are designated by the names of the collectors, as "Bindley," "Sykes;" others by the auctioneers, as "Christie's," "Sotheby's;" in each case with year of sale.

Catalogues of the London Print Sales are usually forwarded to those who apply for them, at the mere cost of postage, and collectors can have the prices inserted after the sales for a moderate sum; the more remarkable ones are generally published in the newspapers.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

Additional prints, or additional states of prints, coming between numbers already given, are numbered by adding letters "a" "b" &c., to the numbers of the next preceding print or state, as 3a, IIa. Should these additions come in before the first number or state, the a is prefixed, as a1, aI.

After 5 add—

6. Robert Orchard. GOWERS.

W. L., standing, directed to front, facing and looking towards left, coat, vest with high collar, breeches and fob, shoes and long stockings, right hand on cane, left hand holding hat, to left table with writing materials and letter addressed, Mr R Orchard, Grocer, 34 Greek Street Soho London; in background chairs against wall of room, and window. Under, in centre arms, motto, IN GOD IS MY TRUST D Gowers pinxt W. T. Annis sculpt Robert Orchard, No 34 Greek Street, corner of Church Street, Soho, London. Grocer and Tea Dealer: And at Sawbridgeworth Herts, Manufacturer of Chocolate & Cocoa, on a new and improved Principle Wholesale, Retail, & for Exportation. Published by Robert Orchard Octr 1. 1803. H. 22; Sub. 20 $\frac{3}{4}$; W. 15 $\frac{1}{4}$. Three known.

The following allusion in Chalcographimania (p. 89) is probably to this portrait:—

“A grocer who hangs out the sugarloaf in Dean-street, has actually caused three plates of himself to be engraved, one, a whole length, from which he has only struck off half a dozen impressions, and then destroyed the plates, in order to confer the title of ‘extra rare’ upon these delineations of his sugarplumb countenance.”

See also page 11.

Audinet, line 3. For “essay” read “essays.”

„ line 5. Prefix “1.”

After Audinet 1. add—

2. (Matthew Liart.)

Short H. L., directed and facing nearly in profile to right, looking upwards, hair tied at back, frill, plain coat. Under, P. Audinet. H. $6\frac{1}{8}$; Sub. $5\frac{5}{8}$; W. $4\frac{1}{2}$. Three known. Brit: Mus.

Born in Compton-street, London, about 1736; became pupil to Ravenet, and practised as an engraver in the line manner. He died, about 1782. Audinet was his pupil for some time.

PAGE 5. 1. Heading. For "Anguisciola." read "Angusciola."

2. After II. add, "In Boydell's Illustrious Heads, 1811."

After 3. add—

It is owing to the foregoing error in transcription of date that W. W. Barney appears in this work at all, for in reality none of his known prints were engraved before the close of the eighteenth century, as would have been the case had the date, 1800, been correct. His merit, however, entitles his works to full notice somewhere; so the error may not be amiss after all.

ABRAHAM DE BLOIS is stated to have been the servant of Blooteling, whilst in England, and to have been employed by him to lay the grounds for his plates, and to have been the person who communicated when returning to Holland, the improved mode of doing this to Lloyd. See page 821.

The following prints have his name, and they are certainly of the school of Blooteling; it is possible that the first states of them may have been engraved in England.

1. Mary Davis.

Short H. L., in oval, looking to front, cloak over left shoulder, lace over right, hair falling behind. Under, Madam Davits. P. Lely pinx. A. De Blois fecit. N. Visscher exc. H. 8 $\frac{1}{4}$; Sub. 7 $\frac{1}{8}$; W. 6 $\frac{1}{4}$; O. D. H. 6; W. 5 $\frac{1}{4}$.

I. Before inscription.

II. As described.

Not mentioned by Bromley.

Blooteling engraved a similar print in the line method (No. 30 of Wessely, and which Bromley does name); but in it the curl of the wig does not project across cheek.

Only surviving son of Sir Sidney Montague; born, 27th July, 1625; served with great reputation in the parliamentary army; was one of Cromwell's privy council; afterwards admiral, in which capacity he escorted Charles II. back to Dover, who soon afterwards created him as above. He took part in the great victory over the Dutch, under Opdam, on 3rd June 1665, but was killed in the engagement with them, under De Ruyter, in Southwold Bay, 28th May, 1672.

Grace Dalrymple, born in Scotland about 1765 ; was the youngest of the three daughters of Hew Dalrymple, who is said to have been related to the Stair family, and was one of the barristers in the Douglas and Hamilton case (see page 550) ; afterwards attorney-general to the Grenadas. She was educated at a convent in France, and when fifteen returned to her father's house, where, at a supper, Dr. Elliot (a man older than her father, and who was created a baronet in 1778, and died at Lord Melbourne's seat, Brockett Hall, 7th Nov., 1786) saw, and so admired her, that he offered marriage, and was accepted. When brought into society, this young and lovely woman, unsuitably married, and ignorant of the world, yielded to temptation, and her husband procured a divorce and obtained large damages from her seducer. She was then brought to France by her brother, but came back to England with Lord Cholmondeley (in possession of whose family the original picture remains), and met the Prince of Wales, who became much attached to her, and she had a daughter who was married, in 1808, to Lord Charles Bentinck, and died in 1813. About 1786, she again went to France, and was acquainted with the Duke of Orleans ; the Revolution soon afterwards commencing, she kept a most interesting diary of events, which was published in London by Bentley, in 1859. She died at Ville d'Avray, before 1830.
