Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript, written on aged, yellowed paper. The text is arranged in several lines across the length of the strip. There are two distinct holes or tears in the paper, one near the center and another towards the right side. The script is dense and difficult to decipher without specialized knowledge of the language.

Handwritten text in a cursive script on a palm leaf manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. The script is dense and appears to be a form of South Indian or Southeast Asian script, possibly Grantha or Tamil. The leaf shows signs of age, including discoloration and two distinct holes, one on the left side and one on the right side, which were likely made for binding multiple leaves together. The text is written in dark ink or a natural dye on the light-colored, fibrous surface of the leaf.

Handwritten text on a long, narrow strip of aged paper, likely a label or a piece of evidence. The text is written in a cursive script and is mostly illegible due to fading and the texture of the paper. Two distinct circular holes are visible, suggesting the strip was once part of a bound volume or a folder. The paper is heavily stained and discolored, particularly along the edges.
