SYNOPSIS

OF THE

CONTENTS OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

---

THE FOUNDATION of the BRITISH MUSEUM originated with the will of Sir HANS SLOANE, who, during a long period of practice as a physician, had accumulated, in addition to a considerable Library of Books and Manuscripts, the largest collection of objects of Natural History and Works of Art of his time. These he directed should be offered after his death, which took place in 1753, to Parliament. The offer was accepted; and the Act of 26 Geo. II., which directed the purchase, also directed the purchase of the Harleian Library of Manuscripts; and enacted that the Cottonian Library, which had been given to the Government for public use in the reign of Will. III., should, with these, form one General Collection.

In the spring of 1754 the mansion in Great Russell Street, then known as Montagu House, was bought as a repository for the whole. Between 1755 and 1759 the different Collections were removed into it, and it was determined that the new Institution should bear the name of the BRITISH MUSEUM.

Till the arrival of the Egyptian Antiquities from Alexandria, in 1801, Montagu House was competent to the reception of all its acquisitions. The Egyptian Monuments, most of them of too massive a character for the floors of a private dwelling, first suggested the necessity of an additional building, rendered still more indispensable by the purchase of the Townley Marbles in 1805. A Gallery adequate to the reception of both was completed in 1807; after which, although the Trustees meditated, and had plans drawn for new buildings, none were undertaken till 1823, when, upon the donation from his Majesty King George IV. of the Library collected by King George III., the Government ordered drawings to be prepared for the erection of an entirely new Museum, a portion of one wing of which was to be occupied by the recently-acquired Library.

This wing, on the Eastern side of the Museum Garden, was finished in 1828; the Northern, Southern, and Western sides of the Quadrangle have since been progressively added. The last remain of the original building was removed in 1845; and the Gallery, built in 1807, as already stated, for the Townley and Egyptian antiquities, was removed during the winter of 1846, to admit of the completion of the Western side.

The order of architecture adopted throughout the exterior of the Building is the Grecian Ionic. The Southern Façade consists of the great entrance portico, eight columns in width, and two intercolumniations in projection. On either side is an advancing wing, giving to the entire front an extent of three hundred and seventy feet; the whole surrounded by a colonnade, of forty-four columns, raised upon a stylobate five feet and a half high. The columns are five feet at their lower diameter, and forty-five feet high; the height from the pavement of the front courtyard to the top of the entablature of the colonnade, sixty-six feet and a half.

The level of the principal floor of the building is reached by a flight of twelve stone steps at the foot of the Portico one hundred and twenty-five feet in width, terminating on either side with pedestals intended to receive colossal groups of sculpture.

The Tympanum of the Portico has recently been enriched with allegorical sculpture, by Sir Richard Westmacott, descriptive of "The Progress of Civilization."*

* The following is Sir Richard Westmacott's explanation of the Allegory:—“Commencing at the Western end or angle of the Pediment, Man is represented emerging from a rude savage state through the influence of

The Principal Entrance to the Museum under this Portico is by a carved oak door, hung to a door-frame of stone, nine feet six inches wide, and twenty-four feet high. The Entrance Hall is sixty-two feet by fifty-one feet, and thirty feet high.

The Order here is Grecian Doric. The ceiling, trabeated and deeply coffered, is enriched with Greek frets and other ornaments in various colours, painted in encaustic. On the East side are the apartments devoted to the MS. department. On the West the Principal Staircase, and a Gallery which forms the approach to the Collection of Antiquities. The centre flight of stairs is seventeen feet wide, flanked by two pedestals of grey Aberdeen granite, intended to receive sculpture. The walls on either side of this centre flight are cased with red Aberdeen granite. On the first landing are pedestals and carved vases of Huddleston stone. The balustrades are of the same. The ceiling and walls are painted partly in oil and partly in encaustic colours, the former being trabeated and coffered to correspond with the Entrance Hall, and similarly decorated.

At the top of this Staircase commences the suite of rooms appropriated to Natural History, which occupy, on the upper floor, the Eastern portion of the South front, and the whole of the Eastern and Northern sides of the Quadrangle. The remainder of the Upper Floor of the Museum is devoted to the smaller Egyptian Antiquities, to the Greek Religion. He is next personified as a Hunter and a Tiller of the Earth, and labouring for his subsistence. Patriarchal simplicity then becomes invaded, and the worship of the true God defiled. Paganism prevails, and becomes diffused by means of the Arts.

“The worship of the heavenly bodies and their supposed influence led the Egyptians, Chaldæans, and other nations to study Astronomy, typified by the centre statues: the key-stone to the composition.

“Civilization is now presumed to have made considerable progress. Descending towards the Eastern angle of the Pediment is Mathematics; in allusion to Science being now pursued on known sound principles. The Drama, Poetry, and Music balance the group of the Fine Arts on the Western side, the whole composition terminating with Natural History, in which such objects or specimens only are represented as could be made most effective in Sculpture.”

Vases, and the Bronzes, to the Ethnographical Collection, and to the Cabinet of Coins and Medals. On the Lower Floor, the Eastern portion of the South front, and part of the East Wing, are devoted to the Library of Manuscripts. The remainder of the East side, and the whole of the Northern side of the Quadrangle, are occupied by the Library of Printed Books. The Ground Floor of all the buildings to the west of the Quadrangle is appropriated to the more massive Egyptian Antiquities, and to the Greek and Roman Marbles, including the Townley, Elgin, and Phigaleian Collections, the Lycian Antiquities, and the Canning Marbles. The basement of a projecting building at the North-West corner contains the general Collection of Insects; the apartments above which, are devoted to Prints and Drawings.

Three Marble Statues, of modern sculpture, ornament the Hall. To the left, as the visitor enters, near the door which leads to the Gallery of Antiquities, stands a Statue of the late Hon. Mrs. Damer, holding in her hands a small figure of the Genius of the Thames; and on the Eastern side, at the sides of the door of entrance to the Manuscript Department, Statues of Shakspeare by Roubilliac, and of the late Right Hon. Sir Joseph Banks, Bart., by Chantrey. The statue of Shakspeare was bequeathed by Garrick to the Museum after the death of his widow; the statue of Sir Joseph Banks was presented by the personal friends at whose expense it was made.

The building has been erected from the designs of Sir Robert Smirke. In 1846, declining health induced him to relinquish the charge, and his brother, Mr. Sydney Smirke, is now the Museum architect.

SYNOPSIS,

ETC.

---

THE VISITOR to the Museum, having passed the Entrance in Great Russell Street, enters a spacious Court, with the main building of the New Museum fronting him. Upon entering the Hall he can either turn to the left to the Gallery of Antiquities hereafter described, or, in the more regular course of his Circuit, ascend by the Great Staircase to

THE ZOOLOGICAL COLLECTIONS.*

The collection of ANIMALS is contained in three Galleries, and for the convenience of exhibition is arranged in two series. The BEASTS, BIRDS, REPTILES, and FISHES, are exhibited in the Wall Cases. The hard parts of the Radiated, Molluscous, and Annulose animals, as SHELLS, CORALS, SEA EGGS, STAR FISH, CRUSTACEA, and INSECTS, and the EGGS of BIRDS, are arranged in a series in the Table Cases of the several Rooms.

CENTRAL SALOON.

Cases 70—72. The Porcupines, as the Hystrix, from India and Europe; the Cercolabes, Spiggurus, and Chætomyis, from the Brazils; Dasyprocta, Dolichotis, Kerodon, and Hydrochærus, from South America.

Cases 73—75. The Hares, from different parts of the world; and the Rock Hares (Lagomys) of India.

Case 76. The family of Jerboas, as the Lagotis, from Chili; the Chinchilla, from Peru; the Pelamys of South Africa; and the different species of Jerboa, from Egypt, Siberia, and South Africa; also the Dormice, Myoxina, Graphiurus, and Glis.

Cases 77—80. The family of Squirrels, as the Anomolurus of West Africa, and Flying Squirrels (Pteromys) of India, and the different species of squirrels; also the Marmots (Arctomys) of Europe, North America, and India.

Case 81. The family of Mole-Rats, as the Slepez (Spalax); Zoker (Siphneus) of Europe; Georychus and Sand Mole (Bathyrchus) of South Africa; the Fur-country Pouched-rat (Saccophorus) of North America, and Tucan of Mexico; the Golden-mole-rat (Chrysomys) of Abyssinia; the Sewellel (Aplodontia) of North America, and the different species of Rhizomys.

ON THE TOP OF THE CASES are arranged the different kinds of porpoises, dolphins, and seals; as the flat-haired seal; the leonine seal, or maned-eared seal, from the Southern Ocean. The manatee from Jamaica and Western Africa. The Cape porpoise, and the Cape dolphin; and the platanista, or long-beaked dolphin of the Ganges.

THE GENERAL COLLECTIONS OF CORALS are contained in the TABLE CASES; they are in progress of arrangement.

In Tables 1—20. The various kinds of Star Corals or Madrepores, as the Sea Mushroom, the Brain Stone, Clove-Corals, the Millepore.

Tables 20—31. The Barked Corals, which generally assume the form of trees, as the Tree Coral, the Gorgonia, or Sea Fans. Sea Pens.

EASTERN ZOOLOGICAL GALLERY.

The Wall Cases contain the collection of BIRDS; the larger Table Cases, in the centre of the Room, contain the collection of SHELLS of MOLLUSCOUS ANIMALS; and on the top of the Wall Cases is a series of HORNS of different kinds of Deer and Rhinoceri.

GENERAL COLLECTIONS OF BIRDS are placed in the Wall Cases.

WALL CASES 1—35. THE RAPTORIAL BIRDS.

They are subdivided into the following great divisions. The DIURNAL BIRDS of PREY are contained in Cases 1—30.

Case 1. The Bearded Vulture of the Alps and Himalayan Mountains. These birds live chiefly on carrion.

Cases 2—7. Various species of Vultures, as the Alpine vulture, from North Africa; the black, carrion, and king vultures, from North and South America; the Californian, and condor, or great vulture of the Andes; the fulvous vulture, from Europe and Africa; cinereous vulture, from Northern Africa; sociable vulture, from South Africa; and the Angola vulture, from Congo.

Cases 8—30. The Falcons, which are further divided:

Cases 8—17. The different Eagles which prey on living quadrupeds, birds, and fish, as the golden eagle of Europe, &c.; booted eagle of Egypt; crested goshawk, of South America; Brazilian eagle; laughing falcon, from British Guiana; harpy eagle of South America; bacha eagle of India and Africa; Jean le Blanc eagle of Europe, Java, &c.; marine eagle, from the Indian Archipelago; osprey, from various parts of the world; short-tailed falcon, from the Cape of Good Hope; and the Pondicherry eagle, from the continent of India, which bird is worshipped by the Brahmins.

Case 18. The different species of Caracaras, which are peculiar to South America, as the red-throated falcon, chimachima, and the Brazilian kite.

Cases 19—24. Specimens of Buzzards: they are sluggish, and pounce on their prey on the ground, as the craxirex, from Galapagos; Buzzard; and the rough-legged falcon of Europe.

Cases 22, 23. Various species of Kites: the weakness of their bill occasions some of them to feed principally on insects; as the cohy falcon of India; honey buzzard, from various parts of the world; swallow-tailed falcon of North America; kite of Europe; and the spotted-tailed hobby of North America.

Cases 24—26. The true Falcons, which are the most courageous in proportion to their size of all the birds of prey; as the jer-falcon, peregrine falcon; hobby, and kestrels, &c., of Europe, &c.

Case 27. The Sparrow-hawks: these birds skim the earth with a rapid flight, seizing their prey upon the wing; as the goshawk and sparrow-hawk of Europe, and others.

Cases 28—30. The Harriers: these birds generally fly very low over the marshes, and strike their prey on the ground; as the chanting falcon of the Cape of Good Hope; Madagascar falcon; secretary, of the Cape of Good Hope; hen harrier, ash-coloured falcon, and moor buzzard, of Europe, &c.

WALL CASES 31—35. The NOCTURNAL RAPTorial BIRDS,

Which are subdivided thus:

Case 31. Hawk Owls, as the Canada owl; snowy owl of Orkney and North America.

Cases 32, 33. Eagle Owls, as the scops-eared owl of Europe, &c.; ketupu owl of the Indian Archipelago; great-eared owl, from various parts of the Old World; and the Virginian eared owl, of North America, &c.

Case 40. The Curucuis: they live in low damp woods in the tropical parts of America and Asia, and feed on insects and berries; as the red-bellied curucui of South America; Narina curucui of Africa, &c.

Cases 41, 42. The Kingfishers: they are generally of a brilliant colour, and live on fish, which they catch by diving, also on crustacea and insects; as the spotted-bellied barbet, and great pied barbet, of South America; great brown kingfisher, of Australia; ternate kingfisher of the Philippine Islands; and common kingfisher of Europe, &c. ; green jacamar and great jacamar of South America ; common bee-eater of Europe ; Javan night bird, &c.

WALL CASES 43—47. The TENUIROSTRAL BIRDS,

Which are divided into several families: as

Case 43. The Hoopoes and Sun Birds, which feed principally on the nectar of flowers ; as the common hoopoes of Africa and Europe ; twelve-wired paradise birds of Molucca ; rifle-bird of Australia ; red-billed promerops of Africa ; and grand promerops of New Guinea ; hook-billed red honey-eater of the Sandwich Islands ; and numerous species of sun birds of Africa and South America.

Case 44. The Humming Birds of South and North America and the West Indies ; their food consists of insects and spiders ; as the topaz humming bird ; garnet-throated humming-bird ; tufted-necked humming-bird, &c.

Case 45. Honey-eaters, which are peculiar to Australia ; as the New Holland creeper ; Poë honey-eater of New Zealand ; wattled honey-eater ; black and yellow honey-eater, and black-headed honey-eater of Australia, &c.

Cases 46, 47. The Creepers, Nuthatches and Wrens, which live on insects, chiefly obtained by striking the bark of trees ; as the Patagonian warbler ; Guiana red warbler ; climbing grakle, and the picoid grakle of South America ; common creeper of Europe ; thorn-tailed warbler of South America ; wall creeper of Great Britain ; nuthatch of Europe and North America ; also various species of wrens, &c.

CASES 48—61. The TOOTH-BILLED PASSERINE BIRDS.

They live generally on insects, worms, &c. These birds embrace several families.

Cases 48—52. The Warblers, which are solitary in their habits, feeding on insects, worms and berries.

Case 48. Tailor birds ; they live on insects, and mostly form very beautiful and artfully dome-shaped nests ; as the bush warbler of India ; Dartford warbler of Europe ; superb warbler of New Holland, &c. ; and the superb menura, of Australia.

Cases 49—52. Warblers ; which are small birds that have an agreeable song, and are continually flitting about in search of insects and their caterpillars, &c.

Case 49. The true Warblers, as the black cap warbler, lesser pettichaps, grasshopper warbler, fire-crested wren, &c., of Europe, &c.

Case 50. The Wheatears. These inhabit barren places in various parts of the Old World, and are lively birds, which subsist on insects ; as the wheatear warbler, redstart warbler, red-tailed warbler, blue-throated warbler, redbreast warbler, whinchat warbler, sedge warbler, &c. ; and the Titmice, which are very active in flitting from branch to branch and suspending themselves in all kinds of attitudes whilst seeking for insects on the trees ; as the great titmouse, blue titmouse, and the long-tailed titmouse of Europe, &c.

Case 51. Wood Warblers, which mostly inhabit North America, where they are seen in the low bushes flying from branch to branch in search of caterpillars, &c. ; as the red-headed warbler, spotted yellow warbler, yellow-throated warbler, and numerous other species ; and various specimens of Wagtails, which are found on the banks of rivers or marshes, feeding on insects and small seeds ; as the white and yellow wagtail of Europe, &c.

Cases 53—55. The Thrushes, which family of birds inhabit various parts of the world, and feed on insects and worms ; they are divided into several subdivisions: viz.

Case 53. The Ant-thrushes: these birds inhabit the tropical parts of the world, where they all feed principally on ants and insects ; as the white-faced manakin ; grisly warbler of South America, &c. ; mountain warbler of Java ; rufous-naped thrush, alarum thrush, and others of South America ; king thrush of Brazil ; short-tailed crow of various parts of the Old World ; and several species of rock thrushes of Europe and India.

Case 54. Various species of true Thrushes. These are solitary in their habits, feeding on fruits, worms, and snails ; some are well known for their song, and others for their imitating almost any sound, as the lunulated thrush of Australia ; missel thrush, song thrush, fieldfare, red-winged thrush, and blackbird of Europe ; and others from various parts of the world ; mimic thrush of North America, &c.

Case 55. Babbling Thrushes of the warmer parts of the world, where they are peculiar for their chattering noise ; they feed on insects, &c. ; as the black-headed thrush of South America ; Chinese thrush ; spectacle thrush of China, &c. ; grey thrush, mountain creeper, and pileated thrush of India ; the orioles are invariably of a bright yellow colour, and found in the warmer parts of the world, feeding on caterpillars and insects, and also frequent orchards during the fruit season ; as the golden oriole of Europe ; Cochin China oriole, and other species. Short-legged thrushes are also in this Case : they are peculiar to Asia and Africa, where they are found generally in the woods, feeding on caterpillars, insects, and fruits ; as the Cape thrush, goldenvented thrush, importunate thrush of Africa.

Cases 56, 57. The Fly-catchers, which are peculiar to the warmer parts of the world, and feed solely on insects captured during flight. They form several subdivisions: viz.

Case 56. The pikas, which are peculiar to South America, where they pursue insects in flocks in the forests ; as the red-necked fly-catcher. The water-chats are inhabitants of South America, and are generally found in the vicinity of water, where they pursue insects on the ground ; as the grey shrike, spectacle warbler, white-headed tody, cock-tailed fly-catcher. The Tyrants are also peculiar to South and North America ; insects and even small birds sometimes form their food ; as the tyrant shrike, whiskered fly-catcher, and fork-tailed fly-catcher ; the black caps are found only in South America, where they are seen perched on the high branches of trees, ready to plunge at the passing insects ; as the Cayenne shrike, &c.

Case 57. The true Fly-catchers, which are mostly found in the Old World ; their food consists principally of insects ; as the collared fly-catcher

Africa ; broad-billed tody, white-eared thrush, king tody of South America ; fan-tailed fly-catcher of Australia ; spotted fly-catcher, cold-finch fly-catcher of Europe ; black-headed fly-catcher of North America, &c. The fly-catching warblers, which are peculiar to America, where they feed on insects and fruits; as the solitary fly-catcher, &c.

Cases 58, 59. The Chatterers: they are divided into several families: viz.

Case 58. The thick-heads, which are found in the forests of Asia, Australia, and South America; they generally live in pairs, seeking insects and fruits; as the guttural thrush of Australia, &c. The manakins are remarkable for their small size and showy colour; they feed on fruits and insects; as the red chatterer, red and black manakin, white-capped manakin of South America, and speckled manakin of Australia, &c. The chatterers are found in most parts of the world; they inhabit the low grounds or forests, generally in flocks, feeding on the berries of various plants, sometimes upon insects. Most of them are remarkable for the beauty of their plumage during the breeding season; as the purple-breasted chatterer, purple-throated chatterer, carunculated chatterer, variegated chatterer, and rock manakin of South America, &c.

Case 59. The Caterpillar-Eaters are found in South America, India, and Africa, where they feed upon caterpillars, which they collect upon the highest trees; as the grey caterpillar thrush of Africa, Javan thrush, ash-backed thrush of India, &c. The drongos are inhabitants of India, Asia, and Australia, and live on insects. Some species are remarkable for their power of song, which is as sweet as the nightingale's; as the Malabar shrike, fork-tailed shrike, crested shrike, and drongri shrike of Africa.

Case 60. Shrikes, or the true Butcher Birds. They are found in most parts of the world, pursuing grasshoppers, insects, young frogs, and small birds, which they impale on thorns, pull to pieces, and devour at their leisure; as the cinereous shrike, red-backed shrike of Europe, frontal shrike of Australia, Ceylon thrush of the Cape, and the grey-headed shrike of South America.

Case 61. The Bush Shrikes, which are inhabitants of Australia, Asia, and especially South America; as pied shrike, lineated shrike of South America; hook-billed shrike of Madagascar; and the Hot-niqua shrike of Africa, &c.

WALL CASES 62—73. The CONIROSTRAL BIRDS.

These feed chiefly on grain and fruit. They form several families: viz.

Cases 62, 63. The Crows, which are divided into the following divisions: the Phonygaminæ, which inhabit Australia, New Guinea, &c., where they pursue small birds, and are very noisy and clamorous; as the piping roller, noisy roller of Australia; the jays, which generally live in forests of various parts of the world, as the jay of Europe; blue jay and cinereous jay of North America, &c. The true Crows, which are inhabitants of various parts of the world, and are generally seen on the ground, searching for carrion, worms, &c., as the raven, carrion crow, rook, hooded crow, and jackdaw of Europe, &c.

Case 63. The Callæatinæ are inhabitants of Africa, Asia, and Australia; as the changeable crow of Africa, rufous crow of India, cinereous wattle bird of New Zealand, &c.

Case 64. The Gymnoderinæ are very singular birds of South America; they feed on fruits; as the bare-necked grakle, fetid grakle, &c. The Choughs are found in the elevated mountains of the Old World, and prey on insects and berries; as the red-legged crow and Alpine crow. These are occasionally found in Europe, &c. The Birds of Paradise are natives of New Guinea; their habits are perfectly those of the crow, as the greater paradise bird, king paradise bird, magnificent paradise bird, &c.

Case 65. The Shining Thrushes are found in Africa, Asia, and Australia, and they feed on fruits and insects; as the satin bower bird: these birds form artificial arbours of twigs, which they decorate with shells, bones, stones, and other articles, and through which they run in playful chase after each other; also the splendid thrush, brilliant thrush, &c., of Africa and India. The Grakles live in troops in the islands of the Indian Archipelago, searching for insects and fruits among the banana; as the minor grakle and bald grakle. The beef-eaters are inhabitants of Africa, where they live on the larvæ of a parasitical insect which they compress out of the skin of the rhinoceros by means of their bill; as the African beef-eater.

Case 66. The Starlings are found in both hemispheres, and they feed on the larvæ which attack cattle; they fly in large and crowded flocks; as the rose-coloured thrush of Europe; and Malabar grakle, pagoda grakle of India, &c.; cockscomb grakle of South Africa; common stare of Europe; Sardinian stare of Europe, &c., and the Louisiana stare of North America, &c. The Quiscalinæ inhabit New Guinea, but especially North and South America; as the gorget paradise bird of New Guinea, purple grakle and boat-tailed grakle of South America, &c.

Case 67. The Icteric Orioles are also peculiar to America, and live in flocks, feeding on grain and insects; as the black and yellow oriole, crested oriole, icteric oriole, and banana oriole, &c. The Agelaiinæ, like the preceding series, are also found in North and South America, generally in flocks among the cattle. Some of the species have a peculiar habit of laying their eggs in other birds' nests, as the cowpen oriole, red-winged oriole, &c.

Case 68. The Weavers, which inhabit Africa and India, and feed on grain. They form their nest of interwoven blades of grass; as the Philippine grosbeak, weaver oriole of Africa, &c. The hawfinches have a powerful bill, which enables them to feed on hard fruits, &c.; as the haw grosbeak of Europe, blue grosbeak of North America, crimson-breasted grosbeak of Africa, ground sparrows of Galapagos, and widow birds of Africa, &c.

Cases 68, 69. The Tanagers, which are peculiar to the New World, are remarkable for their beauty of plumage, and feed on grain, berries, and insects; as the red tanager and summer tanager of North America; red-breasted tanager, bishop tanager, golden tanager of South America, &c.

Cases 69, 70. The true Finches, which generally live in small flocks, feed on grain, and sometimes on insects; as the house sparrow, tree-finch, goldfinch, linnet, siskin, greenfinch, chaffinch, &c., of Europe; wax-billed grosbeak, fasciated grosbeak of Africa; cowry grosbeak, white-headed grosbeak of India, &c.; sea-side finch, yellow-winged finch, song-finch of North America, &c.; the buntings are found in the world generally, and feed on seeds; as the yellow bunting, foolish bunting, ortolan bunting, snow bunting, &c., of Europe.

Case 71. The Larks have the power of singing while rising from the ground perpendicularly in the air; as the skylark, woodlark, &c., of Europe; the bullfinches have very thick bills, which enable them to feed on hard grains and seeds; as the bull-finch, rosy-finch of Europe, pine grosbeak of North America, &c. The crossbeaks have the points of their bill crossing each other; as the common crossbill, greater crossbill of Europe, and parrot-billed grosbeak of the South Sea islands, &c. The plant-cutters are inhabitants of South America, and are said to feed on vegetables; as the Chili plant-cutter. The colies are peculiar to Africa and India, and live in flocks, feeding on fruits, and are remarkable for sleeping in companies, suspended by one foot, with the head downwards; as the Cape coly, white-backed coly, &c. The plantain-eaters inhabit Africa, and live in pairs, feeding generally on fruits; as the violet plantain-eater, Touraco plantain-eater, &c. In South America the crested pheasant is found.

Cases 72, 73. The Hornbills, which are peculiar to the Old World. They feed on fruits, mice, small birds, and reptiles, which they swallow whole, throwing them in the air and catching them in the throat; as the rhinoceros hornbill of Africa, helmet hornbill, Pannayan hornbill of India, &c.

WALL CASES 74—83. The SCANSORIAL BIRDS.

They are divided into several subdivisions: viz.

Cases 74—76. The Parrots, which are inhabitants of all parts of the world except Europe. They live chiefly on fruits, and build in the hollow trees; as the racket-tailed parrot of the Philippine Islands; Pennantian parrot, ground parrot, &c., of Australia; horned parrot of New Caledonia; Alexandrine parrakeet, &c., of India; blue and yellow maccaw; hyacinthine maccaw of South America; Papuan lory; purple-capped lory of the Indian Archipelago; hawk-headed parrot, yellow-headed amazon's parrot, passerine parrot of South America; great white cockatoo, &c., of the Indian Archipelago; red-crowned parrot, and Banksian cockatoo of Australia, &c.

Case 77. The Toucans, which belong to the New World, are similar to the hornbill in habits and also in food; as the yellow-breasted toucan, Aracari toucan, Janeiro toucan, &c.

Cases 78—80. The Woodpeckers, which inhabit various parts of the world, and are divided into several subdivisions: viz.

Case 78. The Barbets are inhabitants of India and its isles, South America, and Africa. Their food consists of insects, fruits, and small birds; as the groove-billed barbican of Africa, &c.; Cayenne barbet; grand barbet of India. The Picumninæ are found in South America and India; as the minute woodpecker, &c. The true woodpeckers inhabit North America, India, and Europe; they traverse the bark of trees in every direction, and insinuate their long tongue into chinks and crevices to draw out the larvæ of insects, on which they feed; they also subsist on soft fruits; as the northern three-toed woodpecker, white-billed woodpecker of North America, &c., and greater spotted woodpecker of Europe, &c.

Case 79. Dryocopinæ principally live in South America, and feed chiefly on fruits and eggs of small birds; as the great black woodpecker of Europe; Cayenne woodpecker; red-headed woodpecker of North America, &c. The Celeinæ, which feed chiefly on insects and ants; as the green woodpecker of Europe; yellow-crested woodpecker of South America; Carolina woodpecker, &c.

Case 80. The ground woodpeckers are peculiar to America and Africa, live principally on the ground, and feed on ants, &c.; as the gold-winged woodpecker of North America, and crimson-breasted woodpecker of Africa. The wrynecks are inhabitants of Europe, India, and Africa, feeding chiefly on ants, which they secure by means of their long tongue; as the wryneck of Europe.

Cases 81—83. The Cuckows, which are migratory birds, and are divided into several divisions: viz.

Case 81. The Honey Cuckows are found in Africa, where they are celebrated for guiding the natives to the nests of wild bees, enticing them to the spot by fluttering before them, and reiterating a peculiar cry; as the honey cuckow, and lesser honey cuckow, &c. The rain cuckows are peculiar to South America, where they live on snakes, fruits, and insects, which they search for on the ground, as the long-billed rain cuckow, &c.

Cases 81, 82. The Coucals are inhabitants of the warmer parts of the world, and are generally searching among reeds and grass for grasshoppers, lizards, and fruits; as the giant coucal, variegated coucal, &c., of Australia; bubut coucal of Java, &c., and the straight-heeled coucal of Africa; Cayenne cuckow; spotted cuckow of South America.

Case 82. The Anis inhabit South America, the West Indies, Asia, &c., where they are found on the ground seeking for insects, and others feed on fruits; as the greater ani and lesser ani, &c., red-headed malkoha, and tricoloured malkoha of India.

Cases 82, 83. The true Cuckows are only found in the warmer parts of the world; their food consists of insects and fruits; the European bird deposits its eggs in the nests of other birds, as the great spotted cuckow, and white-crested cuckow of Africa, &c.

Case 83. Common cuckow of Europe, Dunnun cuckow of Africa, gilded cuckow, cupreous cuckow of Africa, &c.

WALL CASES 84—106. The GALLINACEOUS BIRDS.

Case 84. The Tree Pigeons are found in Asia, Africa, Islands of the South Sea, and Australia, where they reside in the woods, feeding on fruits and berries; as the parrot pigeon, aromatic pigeon of India, &c., black-capped pigeon of Java, &c.

Cases 85, 86. The true Pigeons and Turtles: these inhabit most parts of the world; their food consists of grains and seeds, as the antarctic pigeon of Australia; nutmeg pigeon of the Indian Isles; ring pigeon of Europe.

Case 87. The Migratory Pigeon of North America, and common turtle of Europe.

Case 88. The Ground Doves, which are mostly found on the ground, seeking for grains and seeds, in most parts of both hemispheres; as the bronze-winged pigeon of Australia, &c.; the ground turtle;

Talpacoti pigeon of America; partridge pigeon of the West Indies; Nicobar pigeon; and great crowned pigeon of the Indian Isles.

Cases 89, 90. The Curassows, which are peculiar to South America, where they live in small flocks, searching the ground for worms and insects, also feeding on fruits; as (Case 89) the marail guan, motmot guan; (Case 90) crested curassow, razor-billed curassow, cushew curassow.

Cases 91—103 embrace the series of Pheasants: viz.

Cases 91—93. The Peacocks, which are inhabitants of India and its isles, where they are found in the woods and jungles, feed on grains. The crested peacock of India, Japan peacock; Iris peacock, &c., argus pheasant, &c., and the crossoptilon, from Thibet.

Cases 94, 95. The true Pheasants: these are found wild in various parts of Asia, but some of them have become naturalized in Europe; they feed on grain, roots, and insects; as the common pheasant, painted pheasant, and the Reeves's pheasant of China.

Cases 96—99. The fowls which are inhabitants of the jungles and woods of the continent and isles of India; their food consists of grain and fruits, &c., as (Case 96) the pencilled pheasant of China, coloured pheasant of Himalayan Mountains, &c. Case 98. Rufous-tailed pheasant, and fire-backed pheasant of Sumatra, &c.; Sonnerat's wild cock, superb pheasant, Javan cock, &c. Case 99. Horned pheasant, black-headed horned pheasant of India, &c.

Cases 99, 100. The Turkeys and pintados are found in America and Africa; they feed on grain and other vegetable substances; as (Case 99) the Guinea pintado, crested pintado of Africa; (Case 100) American turkey, &c.

Case 100. The Impeyan pheasants are peculiar to the northern parts of Asia, where they feed on bulbous roots, which they dig up by means of their bills; as the Impeyan pheasant, Pucras pheasants, &c.

Cases 101—103. The Partridges are found in both the New and Old World, where they generally inhabit the plains; their food consists of grain and other vegetable substances; as (Case 101) the sanguine pheasant, currie partridge of Nepal, &c., cape partridge, bare-necked partridge of Africa, francolin partridge of Europe and India. Case 102. Red partridge of Europe, olive partridge of India, common partridge and quail of Europe, Andalusian quail of Spain, &c. Case 103. Crowned partridge of India, Californian quail, and crested quail, &c.

Cases 104, 105. The Grouse, which are peculiar to the northern parts of Europe and America: viz. the true Grouse, which are natives of the forests of the high northern latitudes of both hemispheres, and of the highest mountains of central Europe; they feed on grain, buds, and fruits; as the wood grouse, which is sometimes taken in the North of Britain, as well as the ptarmigan grouse and willow grouse; sharp-tailed grouse, ruffed grouse, both of America. Case 105. Sand grouse are only found in the deserts of the hottest parts of the Old World, as the pin-tailed grouse and sand grouse, &c.

Case 106. The Sheathbills have all the appearances of grouse: some inhabit the plains of South America, and others are generally seen on the sea-shore, or far out at sea; as the white sheathbill and black-billed sheathbill, &c. The Tinamous are inhabitants of the warmer parts of the New World, where they are seen among the low brushwood or tall grass; their food consists of fruits and insects; as the great tinamou, variegated tinamou, &c. The Megapodius is peculiar to the Asiatic Islands and Australia, as the megapodius, and the New Holland vulture, &c.

WALL CASES 107—134. The WADING BIRDS.

Cases 107—109. The Ostriches, which are in flocks, and subsist on grain, fruits, and herbage; as the ostrich of Africa; American emu, New Holland cassowary, and galeated cassowary.

Case 108. The DODO, which is only known by remains, as, for example, the foot in this Case (presented by the Royal Society), and a head (of which a cast is in this Case) and foot, said to have belonged to a specimen which was formerly in Tradescant's Museum, now forming part of the Ashmolean Museum of Oxford. The bird represented in the painting, in the shortness of the wings and colour, has much analogy to the ostrich, but its foot greatly resembles that of the common fowl; and the head, from the cere and the position of the nostrils, is most nearly allied to the vultures; so that if these remains really belonged to one species, and that the one here represented, its true place in the series of birds is not as yet satisfactorily determined. An original painting of this bird, presented to the Museum by George Edwards, (and copied in his works, plate 294,) who says it was drawn in Holland, from a living bird brought from St. Maurice's Island, in the East Indies, is placed on the back of the Case. The Apteryx is peculiar to New Zealand, where they are nocturnal birds, and feed on worms and insects.

Cases 110, 111. The true Bustards, which are peculiar to the Eastern Hemisphere and Australia; they feed equally on grain, herbage, worms, and insects; as the great bustard, of Europe, but occasionally found in England; Arabian bustard; white-eared bustard of Africa; ruffed bustard of North Africa.

Case 112. Coursers that live in the sandy deserts, where they run with surprising speed if disturbed; they feed on worms, &c.; as the cream-coloured courser of Northern Africa, which has occasionally been found in Britain; double-collared courser of Africa, &c.; the thick-knees are found in the uncultivated open country and dry deserts, searching for worms, slugs, and insects, &c., as the thick-kneed bustard of Europe, &c.

Case 113. The Plovers inhabit Europe and various parts of the world; their food consists of worms, insects, &c.; as the golden plover, dotterel plover of Europe; spur-winged plover, wreathed plover of Africa, &c.; ringed plover of Europe; noisy plover of North America, &c.

Case 114. The Turnstones obtained their name from the habit of turning stones over to seek for the small shells and crustacea that are hid under them; as the turnstone sandpiper of the English shores and of other parts of the world. The Oyster-catchers seek their food on the sea-shores; it consists of shell-fish, which they are enabled to wrench out by inserting their bill between the valves, also of other marine productions; as the pied oyster-catcher, black oyster-catcher of Australia, &c.

Case 114. The Trumpeters, which are peculiar to South America: as the gold-breasted trumpeter, and Brazilian cariamã.

Cases 115—117. The true Cranes, which are found in most parts of the world, on the borders of rivers and inundated places, seeking for small fish and reptiles: as the common crane of Europe; Siberian crane; Indian crane; crowned heron; demoiselle heron of Africa; caudate snipe of South America. Cases 117 and 118. Common and purple-crested heron of Europe; great heron of North America; pacific heron of Australia. Case 120. Great egret, little egret, &c. Case 121. Demi egret, and blue heron of America, &c. Case 122. Bittern of Europe, &c.; lined bittern of America; squacco heron of Europe; and little bittern of Europe, &c. Case 123. Night heron of Europe and America, &c.; tufted umbre of Africa; cinereous boat-bill of South America, and the spoonbill of Europe, &c.

Cases 124, 125. The Storks, which frequent the retired marshes and borders of pools in various parts of the world, where they prey on reptiles and small fish. Case 124. The white and black stork of Europe; American stork, &c. Case 125. Gigantic crane of India, &c.; American jabiru; Senegal jabiru, &c.

Cases 125, 126. The Ibises, which are inhabitants of the inundated places of various parts of the world, seeking for frogs, snails, and worms, &c. Case 125. The wood ibis of North America, &c. Case 126. Ethiopian ibis; black-headed ibis of India; New Holland ibis, &c.

Case 127. The Godwits: these birds migrate according to the season to various parts of the world; their food is composed of small molluscous animals, worms, &c.; as the common godwit, red godwit of England, terek snipe of Australia, &c.

Case 128. The Totaniæ: these birds search among the gravel and stones of the banks of lakes and rivers for worms, insects, and molluscous animals, as the stagnile snipe of Europe; greenshank snipe, common sandpiper of Europe, and Bartram's sandpiper; semipalmated snipe of North America. The Avocets are remarkable for the extreme length of their legs, which enables them to search the muddy shores or mouths of the rivers for small insects and spawn of fish, &c.: as the scooping avocet, long-legged plover, &c.

Case 129. The Sandpipers are inhabitants of most parts of the world, seeking their food on the sea-shore and in marine marshes; as the knot sandpiper, ruff sandpiper, purre sandpiper, lesser grey sandpiper, of Europe, &c. The Phalaropes are found on the sea-shores of the Arctic regions; their food consists of crustacea, &c.; as the red phalarope, grey phalarope, &c.

Case 130. The true Snipes inhabit the thickest underwood, others seek the marshy districts; their food consists of worms and insects; as the woodcock, great snipe, common snipe, jack snipe of Britain, Cape snipe of India, &c.

Case 131. The Jacanas, which inhabit the marshes of the warmer parts of the world, where they walk with facility on the floating leaves of aquatic plants, as the chestnut jacana of South America, Chinese jacana, &c. The Screamers are inhabitants of the inundated ground of South America; as the horned screamer and Chaja screamer.

Case 132. The Rails live among the reeds on the borders of lakes, and in marshes, feeding on worms, &c. ; as the water rail, crake gallinule, olivaceous gallinule of Britain, clapper rail of North America, &c.

Cases 133, 134. The Gallinules are found on the rivers and lakes, among the reeds, seeking their food, which consists of worms and larvæ of insects, as the purple gallinule of Europe, black-backed gallinule of Australia, &c. ; Martinico gallinule of South America; common gallinule of Europe, &c.

Case 134. The Finfoots are peculiar to South America and Western Africa ; as the American finfoot, &c.

WALL CASES 135—166. The WEB-FOOTED BIRDS.

Case 135. The Flamingos, which are found in the warmer parts of Europe, &c., on the banks of rivers and lakes, feeding on small shell-fish, which they seize by inverting the head, to employ with advantage the crook of the upper mandible ; as the red flamingo, &c.

Cases 136, 137. The Spur-winged Geese inhabit Asia, Africa, and Australia ; as the spur-winged goose, black-backed goose, &c.

Cases 137—139. The Geese are found in various parts of the world, during their periodical flight ; their food consists of grain and grass ; as the New Holland cereopsis, Magellanic goose, Canada goose, barred headed goose of India, grey-legged goose, and white-fronted goose of Europe, &c.

Cases 140—142. The Swans are remarkable for their graceful appearance upon the water, and are found in most parts of the world ; they feed on roots of aquatic plants, &c. ; as the whistling swans, black-necked swan, &c.

Cases 143—146. The true Ducks : these birds are inhabitants of the lakes and rivers of the interior, but occasionally resort to the seashore of various parts of the world ; their food consists of vegetables, insects, and shell-fish, as the red-billed whistling duck of South America ; shieldrake, widgeon, pintail duck, common teal, &c., of Europe ; Chinese teal, and others.

Cases 147—149. The Sea Ducks are principally inhabitants of the ocean or saline lakes, and are sometimes found on rivers of the interior, seeking for small crabs, shell-fish, &c. ; as the scoter duck, eider duck, tufted duck, nyroca duck, red-crested duck of Europe, &c.

Case 149. The Spinous-tailed Ducks are found in the warmer parts of the world, as the lobated duck of Australia, Ural duck, &c.

Case 150. The Mergansers inhabit the Arctic regions ; their food consists principally of fish, &c. ; as the goosander merganser, red-breasted merganser, hooded merganser, &c.

Cases 151, 152 contain the Divers : they form two divisions.

Case 151. The true Divers are found in northern regions, and are rapid divers, feeding on fish ; as the northern diver, black-throated diver, &c.

Case 152. The Grebes inhabit most parts of the world, feeding on small fish, crabs, &c. ; as the eared grebe, crested grebe, &c., of Europe.

Cases 153, 154 contain the Auks ; these are oceanic birds, inhabiting the Arctic circles, feeding on fish and other marine productions, and are thus divided :

Case 153. The true Auks ; as the great auk of Orkney, puffin auk, razor-billed auk of the British shores, &c.

Case 154. The Sea Parrots; as the parroquet auk, crested auk, Cape penguin, crested penguin, &c.: the Guillemots; as the foolish guillemot, black guillemot of Europe.

Cases 155—160 contain the Gulls: these birds are divided as follows:

Case 155. The Petrels, which are found in the high latitudes of both hemispheres, feed on fish, &c.; as the diving petrel, stormy petrel, Manks petrel, Fulmar petrel, and broad-billed petrel, &c.; giant petrel, wandering albatross, &c.

Cases 157—159. The true Gulls: they are found in every part of the world, feeding on all kinds of animal matter, fish, &c., as the Arctic gull, glaucous gull, black-backed gull, little gull, &c., of Europe; fork-tailed gull, kittiwake gull, &c.

Case 160. The Terns are met with on every coast in the world, and occasionally inland, on the lakes, feeding on marine productions; as the Caspian tern, roseate tern, gull-billed tern, minute tern, &c., of Europe; white-winged tern, &c. The Skimmers have remarkably formed bills, that enable them to skim the surface of the sea, in which they dip the lower mandible, the upper being elevated out of the water, until the prey is felt by the lower; as in the black skimmer.

Case 161. The Tropic Birds are peculiar to tropical climates, where they catch the flying-fish, &c., as the common tropic bird, red-tailed tropic bird, &c. The Darters live in small flocks, on the trees that overhang the rivers, &c., from whence they plunge into the water, and catch fish by darting at them with their sharp bill and long vibrating neck; as the white-bellied darter, &c.

Cases 162—166. The Pelicans that inhabit the marshes and sea-coasts, feeding on fish, &c.; as the gannet of Europe, &c. Cases 162 and 163. White pelican, red-backed pelican, &c. Case 161. Common cormorant, shag of Europe, &c.; and Case 166. Greater frigate bird, and lesser frigate bird.

THE SHELLS OF MOLLUSCOUS ANIMALS

are placed in the larger Table Cases across the sides of the room, (in progress of arrangement).

Tables 1 to 20. The shells of Gasteropods with comb-like gills (Ptenobranchiata).

Table 1 to 2. The shells of the Venomous Mollusca (Toxifera), which have elongated teeth implanted in the flesh of the retractile proboscis, which are supposed to be venomous, and by which they are said to kill their food, as the cone shells (Conus), among which is the celebrated "Glory of the Sea" (C. gloria maris) from the Philippine Islands. The Needle Shells (Terebra), and the Slit-mouth Shells (Pleurotoma), with a notch or slit on the hinder part of the outer lip.

Table 3 to 13. The shells of the Trunkbearing Mollusca (Proboscidi-fera) which have an elongated retractile proboscis, and are furnished with a lingual membrane armed with one, three, or seven rows of hard teeth, by which they make perforations in other shells, and so extract the animals which form them. They feed almost exclusively on living or recently dead mollusca or fish. They are divided according to the position of the eyes, and subdivided by the number of rows of teeth on the lingual membrane. The greater part have the eyes on a tubercle on the outer side of the base of the tentacles.

Table 3 to 7. The families which have three rows of teeth on the tongue, and the outer teeth versatile, as the Cassidulidæ, Muricidæ, Buccinidæ, Pusionellidæ, Turrisidæ, which have a shell like the Mitres, but have a very different animal with more carnivorous habits. The Olives (Olividæ), the Harps (Harpidæ), and the Lamellariæ, which have the thin shell enclosed in the thick expanded mantle of the animal.

Table 8. The families Fasciolaridæ, Persian Carpets, and Turbinellidæ, or Turnip Shells, and Mitres (Mitridæ), which have three rows of teeth, but the outer teeth are fixed like the centre ones. The shells have plaits on their pillar lip.

Tables 9 to 10. The family Volutidæ or Volutes; Date Shells (Margarella), and Volutomitra, which have only a single series of teeth on the centre of the tongue, and the pillar lip of the shell strongly plaited.

Tables 11 to 13 contain the families which have seven rows of teeth on the tongue, like the Rostrum-bearing Molluscs, but they have a well-developed, often very long, retractile proboscis, like all the foregoing, and are equally carnivorous. Some have an elongated siphon to the mantle to conduct the water to the gill-cavity, and have a canal in the front of the mouth of the shell to protect it. The Helmet Shells (Cassididæ), the Tun Shells (Dolidæ), the Tritons and Frogs (Tritoniadæ), the Fig Shells (Sycotypidæ); the latter differ from all the others in the shell being partly covered by the expanded mantle of the animal.

Table 13 contains the families which are without any siphons on the mantle, the water entering in a slight fold on its swollen margin, and the mouth of the shell is entire without any notch or canal in front, like the shells of the herbivorous molluscs, and for this reason they have been arranged with them, but their animals are carnivorous and exceedingly voracious, even more so than in many of the preceding families, as the Velvet Shells (Velutinidæ), and the Nipple Shells (Naticidæ). The Venus-ear (Stomatia) only differs from the Nipple Shell in having a small operculum and a very large animal compared with the size of the shell, as is often the case with shells having large apertures compared with the size of the spire. The genus Neritopsis has a shell somewhat like the Naticæ, but the animal and the operculum are unknown.

The families Ianthinidæ or Violet Shells, and Scalariadæ, the Wentle-traps or Stair-case Shells, have many series of similar teeth on the tongue. These shells have been generally placed with the Herb-eating Molluscs, but they are very carnivorous, and have a retractile proboscis, like the Murices, and they emit, like them, a purple fluid which has been used as a dye.

The remainder of the Probosciferæ have the eyes on the surface of the head, between and behind the base of the tentacles.

The Tornatelles (Acteonidæ) have many rows of similar teeth on the tongue, in this respect as in many other points of their organisation resembling the Bullæ or Bubble Shells, but they differ from them in having a well-developed horny operculum and more regularly-formed gills.

The family of Cerithiopsidæ have seven rows of teeth on the tongue, and a turreted shell like the Cerithia or Marsh Shells, but the animal has an elongated proboscis and is carnivorous, and in its habit and appearance resembles the species of the next family.

The family of Pyramid Shells (Pyramidellidæ) have an elongated tongue-membrane, which is destitute of any teeth. The tentacles are often doubled or folded like the ears of a hare, and the first whorl of the young shell, which forms the top of the full-grown one, is placed across the others or bent in a different direction to them. They are generally small turreted shells.

The Stair-case Shells (Architectona) have an animal very like the former, but the shell is depressed with a large central cavity like a spiral stair-case, or nearly flat.

Table 14 to 20 contain the shells of the Rostrum-bearing Molluscs (Rostrifera), which have an elongated corrugated muzzle bearing the tentacles on the sides. They have seven rows of teeth on the tongue-membrane. They are divided according to the form of the foot and the position of the eyes.

Table 14 to 18. The shells of those families which have a broad expanded foot by which the animal crawls from place to place.

Table 14. The Apple Snails (Ampullariadæ), which have peduncled eyes on the outer side of the base of the elongated tapering tentacles, and the front of the forehead deeply bifid, and divided into two elongated subulate lobes like the tentacles. They live in ponds in warm climates; the operculum is annular. In all the other families the eyes are sessile at the base of the outer side of the tentacles.

Tables 14 and 15 contain the Egg Shells (Amphiperacidæ), the Cowries (Cypræadæ), the Coral or Bug Shells (Pedicularidæ), and the Pelican's Foot Shells (Aporrhaidæ), which have a distinct siphon on the front of the mantle, a canal for its protection in the front of the shell, and the mantle of the shell more or less produced, so as to cover the shell, or form an expanded outer lip to the shell.

Table 15 contains the families of Terrestrial Mollusca belonging to this group which have the gills in the form of vessels spread over the inner surface of the open gill-cavity. They have been confounded with the Pneumobranchous Mollusca, but they differ from them in being unisexual, in the structure of the tongue, and in the respiratory cavity not being a close cavity, as the families Cyclophoridæ, Helicinidæ, and Proserpinidæ.

Tables 16—18. The shells of the families which have an external spiral shell with a contracted mouth, an enclosed mantle without any distinct siphon for conducting the water to the gill-cavity, and a moderate-sized foot, as Littorinidæ, Rissoadæ, Melanidæ, Viviparidæ, Valvatidæ.

Table 18. The families which have an exposed expanded shell with a large aperture, the mantle of the shell enclosed. They have a large expanded foot and no operculum. These animals live a sedentary life, seldom changing their place. The eggs are usually attached to the under side of the foot, and the under side of the foot sometimes secretes a shelly plate, which has been compared to the second valve of bivalves; as Calyptæadæ, Capulidæ, Vanicoroidæ.

Table 20. The family Vermetidæ, which have a cylindrical truncated clavate foot not fitted for crawling. They have a horny circular operculum. The shell is tubular, irregular, attached by its outer surface to marine bodies, or twisted together in masses.

Tables 19, 20. The two families which have the foot compressed for leaping and unfit for crawling; they are furnished with an operculum, as the Strombs (Strombidæ), which have an elongated shell with an elongated mouth and an expanded outer lip, and the Carrier Shells (Phoridæ), which have a top-shaped shell, with a square aperture. These shells often have the peculiarity of attaching to the outer surface, as it enlarges in size, stones, fragments of other shells, coral, and other marine substances, from whence it has been called respectively the "Conchologist," and the "Mineralogist," as shell or mineral preponderated. Some of the species have this habit only in an early stage, others retain it during the whole period of their existence; some have the margin of the whorls expanded into a broad disk, others have this part furnished with a series of long tubular processes like the rays of the sun—hence the name of Sun Carriers. The shells of the Atlantidæ and Pterotracheidæ, which are peculiar for having an erect compressed fin on the under side of the body in place of a foot, with a small orbicular disk for attaching themselves to floating objects on its back edge. They live on the surface of the ocean.

Tables 21—24. The shells of the Scutibranchous Mollusca, the gills of which consist of lamellæ, forming one or two series on the back of the neck or on the under edge of the mantle round the foot. They are hermaphrodite.

Tables 21, 22 contain those which have the eye on a pedicle separate from the tentacles, the shells and operculum spiral; the teeth in numerous series on the lingual band, the lateral teeth being uniform and very numerous and crowded, as the family Turbinidæ, Liotidæ, Trochidæ, Stomatellidæ, Haliotidæ, Fissurellidæ, which have the sides of the body, above the foot, ornamented with a continuous fringe with some beards on its surface, and the shell almost always pearly within. The Neritidæ have no lateral fringe or beards, and a porcelainous shell.

Tables 23, 24. The other families of this Order which have sessile eyes, the teeth in a moderate number of series, the outer teeth being flat and uniform, as Dentaliadæ, Tecturidæ, Lepetidæ, Gadinidæ, Patellidæ, which have simple conical symmetrical shells, and Chitonidæ, which have a series of eight shelly valves placed in a longitudinal series down the back of the animal.

Tables 25—30 contain the shells of the Heterobranchous Gasteropods, which have variously formed respiratory organs. They are hermaphrodite, and furnished with spiral or sub-spiral shells.

Table 25. The shells of the Pleurobranchous Mollusca, where the gills form a tuft on the side, under a fold in the mantle, as the families Philinidæ, Bullinidæ, Bulladæ, Amplustradæ or Bubble shells, Aplysiadæ or Sea Hares, Lophicercidæ, Pleurobranchidæ, and some dried specimens of the Gymnobranchous Mollusca, the gills of which are exposed or contracted into the cavities in the surface of the mantle of these animals. The young animals are furnished with a deciduous shell, but the adults are without any.

Tables 26—30. The shells of the Pneumobranchous Mollusca, which respire free air, admitted into a closed chamber, lined with pulmonic vessels having a lateral aperture, closed with a valve, generally placed on the back near the head. The shells are spiral or sub-spiral, as the families Testacellidæ, Arionidæ, Janellidæ, Helicidæ, Veronicellidæ, which live on land, and have cylindrical retractile tentacles.

The families Auriculidæ, Lymneadæ, which live in the water, and have contractile tentacles, and Siphonariadæ and Amphibolidæ, living on the sea-shores within the reach of the tide, but breathing free air like the land mollusca. They have the tentacles expanded into a broad frontal disk.

Tables 31—48. The Bivalve shells or Conchifera. The animal is enclosed between the two leaves of a mantle which encloses all the organs with the laminar gills on each side of the compressed body, which is generally furnished with a compressed central foot. The mouth is in the front of the base of the foot, furnished with two laminar lips. The whole is enclosed between two shelly valves united together by a ligament on the hinder part of the dorsal edge.

Tables 31—38, contain Conchifera, Siphonophora, which have the mantle closed behind, and furnished with two apertures, the lower for the admission, and the upper for the emission, of the water from the mantle cavity.

Tables 31—36. The Veneracea, which have two more or less elongated siphonal apertures, and the gills not produced into the lower or inhalent siphons.

Tables 31—36, contain the shells of the families which have a compressed foot for crawling, as Veneridæ, Cyprinidæ, Glauconomidæ, Corbiculadæ, Cyrenellidæ, Petricolidæ, Tellinidæ, Paphiadæ, Glottidæ, Anatinidæ, Mysiadæ, Mactradæ, Anatinellidæ, Chamadæ, Muteladæ.

Cardiadæ, which have an elongated acute conical foot angularly bent in the middle fitted for leaping; the families which have a truncated foot dilated at the end for anchoring or crawling, as Ledadæ, Modiolaridæ; the Dreissenidæ, and Galeommidæ, which have an elongated slender strap-like foot, spinning a beard or byssus for anchoring the animal; and lastly, the family Tridacnadæ, which have a very small rudimentary byssiferous foot. They are also peculiar among all bivalve shells for having the very large hinder adductor muscle placed far forward near the centre of the lower edge of the shell. The pedal opening is small in front near the umbo, and the anal siphon is behind and above the adductor muscle as in other bivalves, though it appears in front, being displaced by the position of the adductor muscle.

Tables 37, 38. The Pholadacea, or Conchifera, with the mantle closed in front, more or less elongated, united siphons. The gills large, produced into the lower or inhalent siphon. Those families (Orthoconchæ) which have a symmetrical body, equal valves gaping at each end; the mantle partly exposed: they live perpendicularly in holes in rocks or sunk in sand, as the Pholadidæ, which have no cartilage, Gastrochænidæ, Saxicavidæ, Pholadomyadæ, Solenidæ, with the valves united by a ligament.

Table 38. The Heteroconchæ, with a non-symmetrical body enclosed in unequal valves, with the cartilage in an internal pit, as Myadæ, Corbiculidæ, Pandoridæ.

The second sub-class, or Conchifera Asiphonophora, which have the mantle-leaves free, bearded behind or on the whole edge, and sometimes with a separate single siphonal opening for the emission of the water.

The Lasiacea, which have the mantle-lobes united with a single anal siphon and a large pedal aperture; Solenomyadæ, Lasiadæ, Peradæ.

Tables 39—41. The Unionacea, which have the mantle-lobes free, only slightly united behind so as to form a single separate siphonal opening, close under the hinder adductor muscle. The families Lucinidæ, Ungulinidæ, which have a cylindrical elongated inferior foot, and generally an elongated anterior adductor muscle. The families which have a large compressed foot for crawling, as Astartidæ, Carditidæ, Crassatellidæ, which are marine. Unionidæ, Etheriadæ, which are fluviatile and covered with a hard olive periostraca.

Table 42. The family Mytilidæ, which has a small ligulate byssus-bearing foot, and a small anterior adductor muscle.

Tables 43—48. The Pectinacea, with the mantle-leaf free all round, without any separate opening for the outgoing current and vent.

Table 43. The Arcacea, with an oblong or roundish shell, equal rigid adductor muscles, and the hinge teeth deeply grooved or divided into interlocking plates, as the family Trigoniadæ, with a lanceolate, subulate, angularly bent foot for leaping. Arcadæ, with a truncated foot often dilated at the end, and frequently furnished with a byssus for anchoring.

Tables 44, 45. The Malleacea, with a sub-trigonal shell, with a large posterior sub-central adductor muscle, and a byssiferous foot, as the families Pinnidæ, Pteriadæ, Vulsellidæ.

The Ostracea, with orbicular valves, a large central adductor muscle, and the mantle bearded round its entire edge.

Tables 46, 47. The families Spondylidæ, Pectinidæ, Limadæ, with a distinct byssiferous or appendigerous foot, and the lip separate from the gills.

Tables 47, 48. The families Ostreidæ, Plicatulidæ, without any foot, the body forming a single central mass, and the vent free and medial, as in most other Conchifera.

Table 48. The families Anomiadæ, Placunadæ, which have a small distinct foot, truncated at the end; the ovaries separated from the mass of the body and attached to the inner surface of the right leaf of the mantle, the vent on the right side.

Table 49. The shells of the Mollusca which have no distinct foot on the under side of the body, which either live attached to marine bodies, float on the surface of the sea, or walk on their head, as the shells of the Brachiopodous Mollusca, which live constantly attached to marine bodies by a ligament passing through a notch in one of the valves or by the surface of the valve itself. They are furnished with two spiral arms, one on each side of the mouth, enclosed between two leaves of a mantle, protected by two symmetrical shelly valves, as Terebratulidæ, Lingulidæ, Discinidæ, and Craniadæ.

The shells of Pteropodous Mollusca. The animals are furnished with an expanded fin on each side of the very small, sometimes scarcely visible foot, on the under side of the more or less developed head. They float on the surface of the sea, especially in the evening, as the families Cavolinidæ, Cymbuliadæ, and Limacinidæ.

Table 50. The shells of Cephalopods (Cephalopoda). These animals are furnished with eight, ten, or many strong elongated arms round the mouth of their large and distinct head, on which they crawl with their head downward, and catch objects which they bring within reach of their mouth, which is armed with large jaws. They have large eyes, and the back is generally strengthened with a calcareous blade, sometimes strengthened with a shelly coat as the cuttle-bone, or with a chambered shell like the Nautilus.

The Cuttle-fish (Antipedia) are naked, often furnished with an internal dorsal blade; the head separate, with eight or ten arms and only two gills, as the Sea Spiders with only eight arms; they have no shells. The Cuttle or Sleeve fish with ten arms, two being longer than the rest. Some of these have only an internal dorsal blade, as the Sea Sleeve (Loligo), with a horny blade; the Cuttle-fish (Sepia), with a calcareous spongy dorsal shell: others have a chambered shell, which is partly visible in the front and back of the hinder portion of the body, as the Spirula or Post-horn shell: these differ from the Nautili in the small size of the terminal chambers.

The Nautilus is the only recent representative of the other groups, which are abundant in the fossil state. The animal is without fins, enclosed in the last chambers of a many-chambered external shell, with an indistinct head furnished with very numerous cylindrical annulated arms. They have four gills.

HENRY ELLIS.

Feb. 19, 1855.

THE NORTHERN ZOOLOGICAL GALLERY. FIRST ROOM.

This room may be for the present considered as an appendage to the two foregoing.

The WALL CASES on the side of the room contain a collection of Nests of Birds and Insects, exhibiting the architecture of these animals.

The TABLE CASES. The tubes of ANNULOSE ANIMALS, the casts of the interior cavities of SHELLS, and various specimens of shells, illustrative of the diseases and malformation of those animals.

Tables 1, 2 contain the shelly tube formed by the Serpulæ, which have often been confounded with shells. The tubes of sand, agglutinated together by the juices of the animal, formed by the Amphitrite.

Tables 3, 4 contain specimens of shells, exhibiting the different sizes of different specimens in their adult age, the changes of form which occur in the shell during the growth of the animal, the changes which take place in the cavity of shells, the manner in which shells are mended by the animal after any injury, and also how the animal covers any excrescence which attaches itself to a shell, or removes any part which is in the way of its enlargement.

Tables 5, 6 contain a series of plaster casts of the interior cavities of different shells of living mollusca, to assist in determining the casts of fossil species often found in rocks.

Tables 7, 8 contain a series of models on an enlarged scale, and some specimens of minute bodies, formerly called Nautili, but now formed into a group under the name of Foraminifera.

In one of the Cases are the shells used for cutting cameos, showing the places where they are cut from.

SECOND ROOM.

THE WALL CASES 1—10. The LIZARDS.

The Cases 1—5. The Monitors of Africa and India. In both countries they are venerated by the natives, who assert that they give notice of the approach of crocodiles, by hissing when they perceive one of those animals; hence their name.

Case 5. At the bottom are the Heloderms from Mexico, which, unlike any other lizard, have a groove in the back of the teeth like serpents. They are said to be poisonous; but this may be a mistake, for ignorant persons are inclined to believe that all reptiles are dangerous.

Case 6. At the upper part, the Safeguards of the tropical parts of America. They grow to a large size. The Crocodylurus has two keels in the tail like the crocodiles.

Case 7. The Scincs and other allied genera, which are generally small and polished. They come from the warmer parts of both hemispheres. Some have distinct and strong legs, and others rudimentary ones; as the blind worms, which have the bones of the legs hid under the skin; they are all quite innocent.

Cases 8, 9. The Geckos, or night lizards, which have the power of walking up glass, or even to run with facility back downwards on the ceiling of a room, like a fly. They come from the warm parts of both hemispheres, and differ greatly in the form of their toes; some have the skin of the sides spread out to assist them when jumping from tree to tree. In the lower part are the various lizards allied to the Guanas. They are only found in America, and live on trees; are very quarrelsome, and often fight with great ardour when they meet; they have the faculty of changing their colour with great quickness. The Anoles have the end of their toes dilated, which enables them to walk on smooth and perpendicular surfaces, like the Geckos.

Case 10. The different genera allied to Agama. They are only found in the warmer parts of the Old World and Australia; as the Molochs, which are almost entirely covered with large spines; the Dragons of India, which have the skin of their sides spread out into the form of wings, held up by the ends of the ribs; when at rest these wings are folded together on the sides, but when it leaps from branch to branch they are spread out and act as a parachute; the frilled agama (Chlamydosaurus), which has a large folded frill round its neck like a Queen Elizabeth's ruff, which it can elevate when excited. The lower shelves contain the different kinds of chameleons, which are found in Africa and India, and the islands near them; they have been long celebrated on account of the rapidity with which they change their colours; and they are remarkable for the distance to which they can protrude the tongue in order to catch insects, which form their principal food.

Wall Cases 11—17. The SNAKES or SERPENTS.

They differ from the lizard in always swallowing their food entire.

Wall Case 11. The POISONOUS SERPENTS.

In the upper shelves are placed the Rattle-snakes peculiar to America, which have a rattle at the end of the tail; this rattle is formed of a series of horny joints, fitting one into the other, which the animal can shake at pleasure; there are several detached rattles, to show their structure; the fer de lance of the French colonists in South America, and the different kinds of poisonous snakes allied to the rattle-snake which come from India. The Vipers; as the adders of Europe, the long-nosed viper (Ammodytes) of Southern Europe; the crested or double-horned viper of Egypt and North Africa; the nosehorn viper of Guinea, and the puff adder or short-tailed viper of the Cape of Good Hope and Western Africa. The viper is the only reptile found in Great Britain possessed of dangerous poisonous qualities.

Wall Cases 11—16. The COLUBRINE SNAKES.

Case 11. On the lower shelves. The Sea Snakes, which are peculiar to the seas of Asia and New Holland, and are in some degree dangerous, as many of the species have small fangs dispersed amongst the true teeth; some of them grow to a very large size; they sleep on the shores coiled up, and are sometimes found asleep on the surface of the calm tropical seas; and the Acrochorde, found in the ditches of the rice-fields of India.

Cases 12—15. The genera allied to the Boa; they are the only snakes furnished with the rudiments of legs; they are not venomous, and kill their prey by crushing it between the folds of the body, generally at the same time twisting the end of their prehensile tail round a tree or some other fixed point, in order to increase their power; some come from America, some from India, and a few from Africa.

Cases 16, 17. The genera allied to Coluber; as the water snakes (Tropidonotus) and the common ring snake of England; the coral snake (Elaps), which is marked with alternate black and red rings; the flat-tailed coral snake, which lives in the sea and has a flattened tail; the juggler snakes (Naja), which have the faculty of dilating the skin of the neck so as to form a kind of hood over the head; they are found in Africa and India, and are used by the native jugglers in their exhibitions; the Indian species have usually a yellow spot on the back of the neck, somewhat resembling a pair of spectacles. These snakes have their hinder teeth larger than the rest; are furnished with a poison tube, like the fang of the rattle-snake and vipers. The tree snakes, or coach-whip snakes, have very long bodies; they live chiefly on trees; one of these is peculiar for its nose being much produced.

Wall Cases 18—23. The TORTOISES and TURTLES.

Cases 18, 19. The LAND TORTOISES, which live on vegetable substances. They are used for food; as the gigantic Indian tortoise, naturalized at Galapagos, from whence they are procured in large numbers for food by the sailors; and the different species from India, Africa, and America, many of which are beautifully varied with yellow.

Cases 20—22. The FRESH-WATER TORTOISES, or Terrapins, which live on animal food; they are found in the warmer parts of both hemispheres, and are eaten by the North Americans and the natives of India. Some grow to a large size, as the crocodile or snapping tortoise of America, and the thurgi tortoise of India. On the lower shelves of Case 22 are the Chelydæ, which differ from the other terrapins in bending their head back under the margin of the shell when at rest, and cannot withdraw it into the cavity of the shell like the other tortoises. These animals will only take their food while in the water when in confinement.

Case 23. The three-clawed terrapins, which live in the rivers of Africa and Asia, and North America; they are strictly carnivorous, and eat their food in water; they are to be seen in the Ganges preying on the human bodies that float down that river. The lower shelves of this Case contain the Marine Turtles, which live principally on fuci, sea-weeds, shells, and crustaceous animals : as the Luth of the Mediterranean ; the green turtle, and the imbricated turtle, or tortoise-shell turtle of Arabia, which furnishes the best sort of tortoise-shell.

Wall Cases 24—26. The CROCODILES and AMPHISBÆNAS.

The Crocodiles inhabit both the Old and New World ; the alligators, only found in America ; and the garials, which are peculiar to India. The upper shelves of this Case contain the double-headed snakes (Amphisbæna), so called because both ends are nearly equally blunt, which has led to the idea that they could walk backwards and forwards with the same facility.

Wall Case 26. The BATRACHIAN ANIMALS.

The lower part of this case contains the toads, frogs, and efts: the most remarkable are the tree frogs, which have the power of walking on polished surfaces, and of attaching themselves by their feet to, and walking with their bodies suspended on the under side of the smoothest leaves ; they fix themselves directly they alight on any body, and, like many reptiles, they have the faculty of changing the colour of their skins, which often enables them to elude the vigilance of their enemies. The bull frogs of America ; the horned toads of Brazil ; the paradoxical frog from Surinam, the young or tadpole of which, when in its fish-like form, is larger than its parent, and has been described as a fish ; and Pipa of Brazil, which deposits its eggs on the back of the male, who carries them a certain period, when the young are emitted from the cells ; the siren of Carolina, which looks like an eel with front legs ; the proteus of the dark subterraneous lakes of Southern Europe, which is of a pale pink colour, and blushes when exposed to the light ; of this here is a very accurate wax model, to exhibit its appearance when alive.

The TABLE CASES contain the Sea Eggs, Star Fish, and Encrinites.

Tables 1—9. SEA EGGS.

Tables 1—6. The globular sea eggs. The club-spined echinus (Case 3), which has very large club-shaped spines ; the tessellated echinus, which has short, broad, flat-topped spines like tessellated pavement. The spines easily fall off when the animal is dead, which makes specimens with spines on them rare in collections.

Tables 7, 8. The Sea Pancakes, which are so depressed that there scarcely appears to be any room for their internal viscera ; some of them are lobed or fingered on the margin, and others pierced with slits.

Table 9. The Galerites, which are most abundant in a fossil state, and some of the Sea Hearts, the species of which are continued into and occupy Case 10.

Tables 11—18. The STAR-FISH.

Some have five and others many rays ; some have the surface scattered with tubercles placed on the junction of a net-like skeleton, and others are formed of flat-topped pieces, like a tessellated pavement, each separate stem being fringed with an edge of minuter pieces; some of them bear on the top of each of the flat pieces a solid tubercle, which often falls off when the animal is dead.

Tables 19—23. The LIZARD-TAILED STAR-FISH, so called because they often throw off the end of their rays when they are handled or put into fresh water, as lizards do when they are caught and cannot escape.

Table 23. The GORGON'S HEAD, the arms of which are repeated branches, so as to end in innumerable flexible filaments, by which the animal attaches itself to marine bodies, and strains its food from the surrounding water.

Table 24. The Comatula, or SEA WIGS, which are the recent representatives of encrinites, found so abundantly in certain rocks.

On the side of the door is a small Case containing the Encrinite from the West Indies.

THIRD ROOM.

The BRITISH ZOOLOGICAL COLLECTION is contained in this Room.

The Wall Cases are occupied with the collection of British Vertebrated Animals, the larger species being suspended on the Walls or placed on the tops of the Cases. The Table Cases contain the Eggs of the Birds; a series of British Annulose Animals, to illustrate the arrangement of the British Insects; Spiders and Crabs; the Collections of the shells and external skeletons of British Molluscous and Radiated Animals.

BRITISH MAMMALIA. Wall Cases 1—9.

Case 1. The upper part is occupied with the British Bats.

Cases 1—5. The Carnivorous Beasts, as the cats, foxes, marten, stoat, seals.

Case 5. The lower part contains the Insectivorous Beasts, as the shrewmice, mole, hedgehog.

Cases 5, 6. The Glirine Beasts, as the rats, mice, squirrels, rabbits, hares.

Cases 7—9. The Ungulated Beasts, as the stag, roebuck, and fallow deer.

BRITISH BIRDS. Wall Cases 10—30.

Cases 10—13. The Raptorial Birds. (Cases 10—12.) The eagles, the hawks, the owls.

Cases 14—16. The Perching Birds, the goatsuckers, swallows, rollers, kingfisher, bee-eater, warblers, wagtails, thrushes, flycatchers, chatterers, butcher-birds.

Cases 17, 18. The Gallinaceous Birds, pigeons, peacock, pheasant, fowls, turkey, guinea-fowls, partridge, quails.

Cases 19—22. The Wading Birds, as the courser, heron, night-heron, storks, sandpipers, snipes, woodcock.

Cases 23—30. The Web-Footed Birds.

Case 24. The ducks.

Case 25. The swans. Case 26. Sea-ducks.

Case 27. Merganser, grebes, divers.

Case 28. Auks, guillemots, petrels, skua gulls.

BRITISH REPTILES. Wall Case 31.

BRITISH FISH. Wall Cases 31—43.

Case 31. The gurnards and perches.

Case 32. The weavers, bullheads, and breams.

Case 33. The magils, john dory, and wolf-fish.

Case 34. The angler, rockfish, or labri.

Case 35. The carps, barbels.

Case 36. The pikes and salmons.

Case 37. The salmons and trout.

Case 38. The cod, haddock, ling.

Case 39. The turbot, plaice, flounders, soles, and the lump-fish, and pipe-fish.

Case 40. The sturgeon, and the sharks.

BIRDS' EGGS. Table Case 1.

Table 1. The Eggs are arranged in the same order as the Birds in the Wall Cases.

BRITISH ANNULOSE ANIMALS. Table Cases 2—4.

Table 2. The Insects with Jaws, as the beetles (Coleoptera), earwigs, cockroaches, crickets and grasshoppers (Orthoptera), dragon-flies, caddis-flies, &c. (Neuroptera), ichneumons, ants, bees, wasps (Hymenoptera).

Table 3. The Insect with a haustellum, or proboscis, as the Homoptera, bugs (Hemiptera), the butterflies, hawkmoths and moths (Lepidoptera), the flies with two wings (Diptera), as gnats, craneflies, &c.

Table 4. A selection of British spiders, centipedes, and crustacea, such as crabs, lobsters, shrimps, and woodlice.

SHELLS OF BRITISH MOLLUSCA. Table Cases 5, 6.

Tables 5, 6. Shells of Gasteropodes, as snails.

Table 7. Shells of Conchiferous Mollusca or Bivalves, such as oysters, cockles, mussels, &c.

HARD PARTS OF RADIATED ANIMALS. Table Case 8.

Table 8. The first division of this Table contains the Sea Eggs and Starfish, and Holothurians.

The three other divisions contain the Corals, Corallines, Gorgonias, and Sea Pens.

Catalogues of each of these collections are being prepared; the Catalogues of the Birds, Crustacea, and Radiata are now to be procured.

FOURTH ROOM.

The WALL CASES round the Room contain the stuffed collection of exotic Bony Fish, at present under course of arrangement.

The TABLE CASES, a few specimens of Annulose Animals, to exhibit their systematic arrangement.

The general collection of insects and crustacea are preserved in cabinets. They may be seen by persons wishing to consult them for the purpose of study (by application to the Keeper of the Zoological Collection) every Tuesday and Thursday. To prevent disappointment, it is requested that persons wishing to see those collections will apply two days previous to their intended visit.

WALL CASES 1—13. SPINY-RAYED FISH.

Cases 1—4. The perches, gurnards, the flying gurnards with their large pectoral fins, the bull-heads, the hog-fish, sea scorpions, the flying sea scorpions or sea butterflies, paradise fish, and fingered perches.

Cases 5—7. The Scienoid fish, maigres, ombres.

Case 6. The bristle-toothed fish or Chatodons.

Case 8. The Holacanthi, the scombers, mackarel, tunny, the sword fish with its long pike-like nose: some of these afford a most important article of food.

Case 9. Pilot fish, horse mackarel, john dories, pomfrets.

Cases 10, 11. Dolphins, which change colour so rapidly when they are caught; the sea garters and lophotes, which are very thin and compressed; the surgeons, which have a lancet-like spine on the side of their tail.

Case 12. The sea mullets, wolf fish.

Case 12. The Lophius or fishing frog or angler, with their very large head and mouth; hand fish, so called because its pectoral fins are elongate, as if placed on an arm; the rock fish or Labri.

Cases 13. Various kinds of rock fish (Labri). At the bottom the tobacco-pipe fish and trumpeter fish.

WALL CASES 14—19. SOFT-RAYED FISH.

Cases 14, 15. Carp, and other fresh water fish of different countries.

Case 15. The pikes: the bony pikes, from America; the garpike, which has green bones; and different kinds of flying fish.

Case 16. Siluroid fish: the callichthes, which are covered with rows of imbricate plates like scale armour; and the loricaria, which has the body entirely covered with a hard coat formed of angular scales; the salmon, trouts, &c.

Cases 17, 18. Different kinds of salmon and herrings.

Case 19. Various kinds of Bony Pike.

Case 20. Cod, ling, whiting.

Case 21. Flat fish: turbot, flounders; their bodies are compressed, and they lie on the white side at the bottom of the sea.

WALL CASES. ANOMALOUS FISH.

Cases 23, 24. Sea horses, so called because they bear a grotesque resemblance to a horse in miniature when dry. Spiny globe fish, which have a beak like a parrot; they have the faculty of dilating their stomach with air, hence their name.

Cases 25, 26. The balistes or file fish, which have small teeth, and are covered with a hard skin; leather jackets, with a more flexible, less armed skin.

Case 26. The coffin fishes, covered with a hard horny skin formed of six or eight-sided plates, forming an even coat; the sturgeons, from Europe and America.

ON THE TOPS OF THE CASES,

different kinds of fish which are too large to be arranged in the proper places in the Cases.

Large shad with a long dorsal ray, from Mexico; a flying sword-fish, from the Indian Ocean, with two other pikes; and, belonging to the same kind of fish, one which has been forced through the oak timber of a ship. These fish swim so rapidly, that if they come against a ship they pierce it.

The TABLES 1—12. INSECTS.

Tables 1—8. The Coleopterous Insects or Beetles; the leaf-beetle or Mormolyce, from Java; the burying beetle (Necrophorus); the stag-beetle, with its long jaws like the horns of deer; the scarabæus, which incloses its eggs in balls of dung, and was esteemed sacred by the Egyptians; the rhinoceros, elephant, and bubaline beetles, which have the front of the head or the front of the thorax produced into variously-shaped horns or humps.

Table 2. The buprestidæ, with their metallic colours, the hard wings of which are often used to ornament dresses in the place of spangles; the lantern spring-jack (Elater noctilucus), with a spot on each side of the thorax, luminous when living; the various kinds of glow-worms, curculians, or long-nosed beetles, as the diamond beetle, from the Brazils; the prionii, which have very long jaws, and live chiefly in old wood; the harlequin beetle with its very long fore legs.

Table 3. The false kangaroo beetles (Sagra), with their very large hinder legs; and the different kinds of tortoise beetles, and lady-birds, some of which are very brilliant.

The earwigs, with their beautiful fan-like wings; the cockroaches, which have been introduced into England; the praying insects (Mantis) and some of their eggs, which are formed into different shaped masses; the walking-sticks, some of which are provided with large fan-like wings, but the greater part are destitute of them and look like fragments of stick.

Table 4. The rest of the Orthopterous Insects. The house, field, and mole crickets of England; the monstrous cricket, with its extraordinary toes and curled wings, from China; the different kinds of locusts; grasshoppers. The Neuropterous Insects, as dragon-flies, ant-lions, with their curious larva, which form a pit to catch insects; the scorpion-fly (Panorpa); the white ants (Termes), so destructive in the tropics; and the cases of different kinds of caddis flies. The Hymenopterous Insects, as saw-flies, wasps, hornets, ichneumons, sand wasps; bees, as the wood-cutting bee.

Tables 5—8. Lepidopterous Insects.

Tables 5—7. Butterflies, exhibiting the different forms of their wings and the peculiarities of their colouring.

Table 8. The hawk-moths, as the privet hawk-moths, the death's-head moth, the clear wings, the humming-bird, and the Burnets. The different kinds of moths, as the ghost, found in and so destructive to hop grounds; the leopard and goat moths, which feed on wood in their larva state. The Tusseh silk-worm moth, and some of the silk worked; the Kentish glory; the drinkers; the silk-worm moth, and cocoon on birch twigs, as they are kept in Siberia.

Table 9. Different kinds of moths, as the large owl moth, from Brazil.

Table 10. The Dipterous Insects, as the different kinds of flies, gnats, breeze flies. The Hemipterous Insects, bugs of all kinds: the wing-legged bug; the water scorpion; the boat fly; the cicadæ; and the lantern flies from China.

Table 11. SPIDERS. The tarantula; the nest of a spider with a moveable lid which closes the hole by its own weight when the animal leaves it; one has a door at each end, the nest having been in a clod of earth which was turned over, the animal formed a second lid at the opposite end. The scorpions of different countries: bristle-tailed scorpion (Thelyphonus); the tailless scorpion (Phrynus), which has very long claws.

Table 12. The whale lice; sand spider; galeodes; acari; shepherd spiders; the scarlet tick, from Africa. The iuli, scolopendræ or centipedes, so called from the number of their legs.

TABLES 13—24. CRUSTACEA.

Table 13. Spider crabs, with long legs and small bodies.

Table 14. Rough crabs; the common crab; two have a number of oysters growing on their backs, showing that the crabs do not change their skin every year, or that the oyster grows to a large size in a very short space of time.

Table 15. Oval-bodied crabs.

Table 16. The fin-footed or swimming crabs, from different parts of the ocean.

Table 17. The telescope or long-eyed crab; the land crabs.

Table 18. The square-bodied crabs; the crested crab; and the Chinese fin-footed crab.

Table 19. The porcelain crabs; the corystes; the back-footed crabs; and the death's-head crabs, which usually form for themselves a case from pieces of sponge or shell.

Table 20. The Bernhard or hermit crabs, which live in shells; the tree lobster, which is said to climb cocoa trees to get at the nuts.

Table 21. The sea locusts or scyllarus; the sea craw-fish.

Table 22. The scorpion lobster, which lives a great part of its life on land, and destroys new made roads in India by the excavations it forms under them. The lobster; one of the specimens exhibited was pale red, nearly of its present colour, when alive. The mantis crabs; the different species of shrimps; the glass-like alima and phyllosoma, which are scarcely thicker than a piece of paper, and nearly as transparent as glass; they are found in the ocean near the equator; the king crab, with its long stile-like tail and large head.

Tables 23, 24. The sea acorn; whale lice; barnacles, or goose shells, as they are called, from the extraordinary belief that they were the origin of barnacle geese.

FIFTH ROOM.

The WALL CASES contain the collections of exotic stuffed Cartilaginous Fish, as the sharks, torpedos, rays, string-ray, &c.

On the TOP OF THE WALL CASES are some Rays and other Cartilaginous Fish, too large to be placed in the Cases.

TABLE CASES. Sponges of different kinds, showing their various forms and structure, and some preserved in flint, showing the same structure.

JOHN EDWARD GRAY.

NORTH GALLERY.

THE Rooms on the North side of the North Wing are appropriated to the Collections of Minerals and Fossils. Of the latter see p. 68.

MINERALS.

In accordance with the plan laid down for their distribution, the Table Cases containing the General Collection of Minerals form two rows, or series, extending through four rooms or compartments of the gallery, as follows :—

In Room I. *, being the N. E. corner room, the first series of Table Cases begins and the second terminates: it contains Cases 1 to 6 and 55 to 60, with six supplemental Cases. Room II. contains the Cases 7 to 13 and 48 to 54. Room III. the Cases 14 to 23 and 38 to 47, with two supplemental Cases; and in Room IV. are placed the Cases 24 to 30 and 31 to 37, the arrangement of which is nearly completed.

The system adopted for the arrangement of the Minerals, with occasional deviations, is that of Berzelius, founded upon the electro-chemical theory and the doctrine of definite proportions, as developed by him in several memoirs read before the Royal Academy of Sciences of Stockholm. The detail of this arrangement cannot here be entered into: it is, however, partly supplied by the running titles at the out-sides of the Table Cases, and by the labels within them †.

The first two Cases, and part of the third, contain the electro-positive native metals: iron, copper, bismuth, lead, silver, mercury, palladium, platinum, osmium and gold.

CASES 1 and 1A. Native iron of undoubtedly terrestrial origin is of very rare occurrence, almost all the insulated masses of this metal hitherto found having proved to be meteoric, and of these the following specimens are deposited nearly in the order of their discovery, or of the first mention made of them :—

1751. A portion of the mass of iron of the descent of which, at Agram, in Croatia, on the 26th of May, detailed official accounts were drawn up by the authorities of that place, who presented it to the Roman Emperor, Francis I., and to the Empress Maria Theresa.

* It may here be observed that among the objects separately placed in Room I. are—near the window opposite to the Table Case containing the native silver, a branched variety of that metal from Kongsberg, presented by H. Heuland, Esq.;—in the centre window of the east side, a large portion of the trunk of a coniferous tree converted into semi-opal, presented by Lady Chantrey;—in the window near the Table Cases containing the sulphates, a very large mass of Websterite, from Newhaven, Sussex, presented by Dr. Mantell;—a large specimen of the brown coal of Iceland, called Surturbrand. The sculptured tortoise near the centre of this room, placed on a round table inlaid with various antique marbles and other mineral substances, is wrought out of nephrite or jade: it was found on the banks of the Jumna, near the city of Allahabad, in Hindostan, brought to England by Lieutenant-General Kyd, and presented to the Museum by Thomas Wilkinson, Esq.

† An electro-chemical arrangement, in accordance with the principles laid down by the great Swedish chemist himself not long before his death, in a memoir on this subject, has been given by Prof. Rammelsberg, in his "J. J. Berzelius' Neues Mineral System, Nürnberg, 1847," and will, if circumstances allow it, be hereafter adopted for the collection contained in the Table Cases; the present arrangement remaining nearly as we find it in the 4th ed. of Berzelius' work on the Use of the Blowpipe, published in 1824.

- 1760—1770. Iron from the right shore of the Upper Senegal, in Africa, noticed by Golberry, and other travellers about that period.
1772. A piece detached from the mass which was discovered in that year by Pallas, on the summit of a mountain between Abakansk and Belskoi Ostrog, on the banks of the Jenisey, where it was considered by the Tartars as a sacred relic: original weight about 1680 pounds; (presented by the Museum of the Imperial Academy of Sciences of St. Petersburg.)
1783. Iron from Otumpa, in the Gran Chaco Gualamba, in South America, found by Don Rubin de Celis, who estimated the weight of the mass to be about 300 quintals, or 15 tons*.
1784. Do. found in that year at the Bemdegó rivulet, Capitanía of Bahia, described in Philos. Trans. for 1816, (weight of the remaining mass calculated by Martius to be upwards of 17,300 lbs.)
 — Meteoric iron from Xiquipilco, in Mexico, first brought into notice in 1784.
1792. A large piece of the iron from Zacatecas, Mexico; first described in that year; (presented by John Parkinson, Esq.)
 — A small one of that found in the province of Durango, described by Baron A. Humboldt; (it has by some been confounded with that of the preceding locality.)
1793. Iron, from the Cape of Good Hope, found in that year, and first made known in Barrow's Travels in Southern Africa, 1801: (the mass is now in the cabinet of Haarlem.)
1805. A small portion of the mass, originally weighing upwards of 3300 lbs., dug up at Bitburg, in the Eifel, near Treves, but which, from ignorance, was committed to the smelting furnace.
 — A large piece of the same having been thus exposed to the action of the fire.
1808. Iron from Texas (Red River), described 1845. For an account of this, and of most of the American meteorites, see several numbers of Silliman's American Journal, between 1845 and 1850.
1810. Three specimens of the iron from Rasgata, N. E. of Santa Fé de Bogota, S. America; described about 24 years after its discovery.
1811. A piece from the mass (originally weighing 191 lbs., of which upwards of two-thirds came to the Imperial Collection at Vienna) of the iron of Elbogen, near Carlsbad in Bohemia, where from time immemorial it had been known by the popular and legendary appellation of the Enchanted Burgrave (der verwünschte Burggraf).
1814. In December. Two specimens of the iron found at Lenarto in the Serosh Comitate, Hungary, one of which, being polished and treated with acid, exhibits the outlines of imperfect crystals†.
1818. Part of the mass of iron found in that year at Lockport, New York, and described in 1845.
1819. Part of that found at Burlington, in the Otsego County, New York; described in 1844.

*. The large mass of iron placed against the wall under the window, was sent from Buenos Ayres, in 1826, by Mr. (since Sir Woodbine) Parish; it is supposed to be part of that of Otumpa, described by Rubin de Celis in the Philos. Trans. for 1783: its weight 1400 lbs. Presented by Sir Humphry Davy and Sir Woodbine Parish.

† The delineations thus produced are known by the appellation of Widmannsted figures; they are observable in various polished specimens here deposited.

1819. An Esquimaux knife and harpoon (from Davis's Straits, Lat.  $76^{\circ} 12'$  N., Long.  $53^{\circ}$ ) the iron of which is meteoric; (mentioned in Captain Ross's voyage, 1819, and presented by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.)
1820. Small portions of the iron from Guildford County, North Carolina, discovered in that year; described 1841.
1827. A mass from the province of Atacama, republic of Bolivia, containing much of an olivine-like substance within its cells; (presented by Sir Woodbine Parish.)
- Another large specimen of the same, polished.
1832. A mass discovered in Walker County, Alabama, in that year; described in 1841.
1835. July 31st. A specimen of the iron which was then seen to fall in Dickson County, Tennessee; described 1845.
1839. A portion of that of Ashville, Buncombe County, N. Carolina, described in that year.
- A ponderous mass of iron from Cosby's Creek in the S. W. part of Cocks County, Tennessee, described 1840 (with which is placed a mass of graphite found in it, weighing 830 grains).
1840. The greater part of another large mass of iron found in the Sivier County, of the same State, and nearly at the same time.
1842. A portion of that of Babb's Mill, Green Co., in the same State, described in 1845.
1843. Iron from Arva, in Hungary (three characteristic specimens, one containing much graphite), discovered in that year.
1845. A portion of that from Hommoney Creek, near the base of Pisgah Mountain, Buncombe Co., N. Carolina; described 1846 (resembling the Atacama iron).
1846. Mass of iron from Smithland, Livingston County, Kentucky, described in the same year.
- A considerable portion of the mass, weighing 280 lbs., found in the same year at Carthage, Smith Co., Tenn.; described 1846.
1847. July 14th. Specimen of the iron which was then seen to fall, at Braunau, in Bohemia.
- A portion of that discovered near Lake Læsgen, in Brandenburg; described in the same year.
- A great portion of the mass discovered at the close of the same year near Murfreesboro', Rutherford Co., Tennessee.
1849. A portion of the iron ploughed up in that year about seven miles from Chesterville, Chester County, S. Carolina.
1850. A portion of the mass found on Ruff's Mountain, Newberry district, S. Carolina, described in the same year.
- To these are added the following specimens of Iron, the origin of which is still problematical, viz., that from La Buiche, Department of the Allier, called pseudo-volcanic steel; that of Gross-Kamsdorf, in Saxony; that of Collina di Brianza, in the Milanese; also, the iron discovered at Magdeburg, and which, according to Stromeyer's analysis, contains (besides nickel and cobalt) copper, molybdenum, and arsenic; and a specimen detached from the large mass of iron found and still preserved at Aix-la-Chapelle.

Case 1*. Of meteoric stones or meteorites, (classed with native iron, because they all contain this metal, chiefly alloyed with nickel,) the following are placed in chronological order with regard to their descent:—

1492. Ensisheim, in Alsace, Nov. 7th, when Emperor Maximilian, then king of the Romans, was on the point of engaging with the French army; this mass, which weighed 270 lbs., was preserved in the cathedral of that place, till the beginning of the French Revolution, when it was conveyed to the public library of Colmar.
1723. June 22nd. Plaskowitz, near Reichstadt, in Bohemia.
1753. July 3rd. Simultaneously at Plann, Stokow, and some other places in the circle of Tabor or Bechin, Bohemia; (contains a great proportion of attractable iron.)
1768. Nov. 20th. Maurkirchen, Inn circle, Austria.
1787. Oct. 1st. Bobric, government of Charkow, Ukraine.
1790. July 24th. Stones from Barbotan, Roquefort, and Juliac, in the Landes of Gascony, in which places they fell simultaneously.
1794. June 16th. One of a dozen stones, of various weights and dimensions, that fell at Sienna, in Tuscany.
1795. Dec. 13th. The celebrated Yorkshire stone, weighing 56 lbs., which fell near Wold Cottage, in the parish of Thwing, East Riding of that county.
1798. March 12th. Commune of Sales, near Villefranche, in the department of the Rhône; (the stone weighed about 20 lbs.)
- Dec. 19th. Stones fallen near the city of Benares, in the East Indies; (presented by Sir Joseph Banks and W. Marsden, Esq.)
1803. April 26th. Entire and broken specimens of the stones of which a shower descended at Aigle, in the department of the Orne.
1804. April 5th. Fragment of a stone which fell at Possil, near Glasgow.
1807. June 27th. Do. of that of Timochin, in the government of Smolensk, Russia.
- Dec. 14. Do. of that of Weston, in Connecticut, United States; (original weight about 300 lbs.)
1808. April 19th. Casignano, near Borgo St. Domino, in the Duchy of Parma.
- May 22nd. Two of the numerous stones with shining black surface, that fell at Stannern, in Moravia; (one of them presented by H. I. M. the Emperor of Austria.)
1810. In the month of August. Tipperary, Ireland; (it contains quartz globules of a greenish colour, owing to oxide of nickel.)
1811. July 8th. Berlanguillas, in Old Castile, Spain; a fragment from one of the three or four stones fallen there.
1812. August 5th. Chantonay, between Nantes and La Rochelle, Department of the Vendée; a fragment of one weighing 66 lbs.
1813. September 10th. Adare, in the county of Limerick, Ireland.
1814. In the month of March. In the vicinity of Wiburg, in Russian Finland.
- September 5th. Agen, in the Pyrenees (Dep. de Lot-et-Garonne).
1815. Oct. 3rd. Chassigny, near Langres, Dep. of the Upper Marne.
1819. June 13th. Jonsac, in the Department of the Lower Charente.
1821. June 15th. Juvénas, Dep. of the Ardèche.
1825. February 10th. Nanjemoy, in Maryland.
1825. Sept. 15th. Honolulu, Owhehee, Sandwich Islands.
1827. May 9th. Drake's Creek, Nashville, Tennessee.

1828. June 4th. Richmond, Chesterfield County, Virginia.
 1834. June 12th. Charvallas, India.
 1835. August 4th. Aldsworth, 12 miles E. of Cirencester.
 1838. April 18th. A meteorite, which fell at the village of Akbur-poor, in the district of Saharanpore; presented by Major Cautley, Bengal Artillery; (weight about 4 lbs.)
 — June 6th. A fragment detached from one of the three stones which simultaneously fell at three villages, about a mile distant from each other, in the valley of Berar (situated Lat. 21° N., Long. 77° 20' E.), in the East Indies.
 — October 13th. Old Bokkeveld, at the Cape of Good Hope; (two whole stones: the larger presented by Sir John Herschel, Bart., the smaller by E. Charlesworth, Esq.)
 1839. February 13th. Do. of Little Piney, Missouri.
 1841. June 12th. Triguierre, Canton of Chateau-Rénard, department of the Loire. Two large portions of the stone.
 1847. March 3rd. Meteorite of Bishopville, S. Carolina.
 — Feb. 25th. Do. of Marion, in Linn County, State of Iowa, North America; two fragments.
 1849. Oct. 31st. Do. of Cabarras County, N. Carolina.

CASE 1 continued. Native copper: among the specimens of this which present a great variety of forms besides the crystallized, such as dendritic, filiform, &c., may be particularized the mass from Hudson's Bay (found by Mr. Hearne, and described by him in his Journal), and that from the mountains separating the Quanager and Alten Fiords in the north of Norway.—Native lead, in lava: to which is added a medal cast in that metal as ejected by Vesuvius in 1631.—Native bismuth, massive, disseminated, and dendritic, in jasper, &c.: to which are added, specimens exhibiting the artificial crystallization of the same, produced by the sudden cooling of the melted metal. (In this case is also placed a specimen of artificially produced titanium, crystallized in cubes, from the smelting furnace of the great iron works at Merthyr Tydvil in Wales.)

CASE 2. Native silver: among its varieties may be particularized those exhibiting the various forms in which it most frequently occurs, such as moss-like, wire-shaped, filiform, dendritical, branched, denticular, massive, &c., particularly from Kongsberg, Saxony, and the Hartz (the latter presented by His Majesty George IV.), many of which are aggregations of minute crystals.—Native mercury, and hydrarguret of silver or native amalgam; the former chiefly as globules, disseminated in cinnabar, sparry limestone, &c.; the latter crystallized in perfect and modified rhombic dodecahedrons, globular, &c., chiefly from Mörsfeld and Moschellandsberg in the ancient Palatinate; (to which are added some figures and ornaments moulded and modelled in amalgam, by the miners of Mexico.)—Native platinum, massive and as grains: rock specimens of the formation in which it occurs in the Ural, Siberia, &c. (a coin of the Siberian platina, struck at Petersburg).—Palladium and osm-iridium in a wrought state.—The irite of Hermann, found as minute scales in hollows of large lumps of platina and in the platina sand of the Ural Mountains.

CASE 3. Native gold, subdivided into pure and alloyed gold; the former (though scarcely ever in absolute purity) is chiefly found massive, in detached crystals and as grains (in the alluvial deposits of Guinea, Sumatra, Bengal, Brazil, Leadhills in Scotland, &c.), also in brown iron-stone, in quartz, with needle-ore, &c., in Siberia;—the alloyed gold (principally from Transylvania) crystallized in minute cubes and octahedrons variously aggregated, in reticular plates, &c. Of the native alloys known by the names of electrum, that of Smeof or Schlangenberg, in Siberia, is best known: it is said to contain one-third of silver; but in general the two metals do not unite in definite proportions.

In this Table Case begin (continued to Case 12) the electro-negative metallic substances called metalloids by Berzelius, and their non-oxidized combinations.—Tellurium and tellurets: the scarce native tellurium, which element (like sulphur and selenium) has the property of mineralizing several metals, combining with them as electro-negative substance, viz.—with bismuth (a compound formerly called molybdena-silver) from Bastnaes: to which also belongs the tetradymite;—with silver (tellur-silber of G. Rose), from the Savodinsky mine, Altai, Siberia;—with lead (foliated tellurium, or nagyagite);—with silver and lead (white and partly yellow tellurium, müllerine of Beudant);—with silver and gold (graphic tellurium or schrift-ertz of authors; sylvanite, Haid.); all from Transylvania, where they occur in veins traversing greywacke and porphyry.—Native antimony from Allemont, Dauphiny, and the scarce antimonial silver or stibiuret of silver from the Hartz, &c.

CASE 4. Native arsenic (formerly called testaceous cobalt and scherben-cobalt), in reniform and botryoidal shapes, from Andreasberg, &c.; and its chemical combinations (arseniurets)—with nickel (a variety of which is commonly called red or copper-nickel on account of its colour);—with cobalt (arsenical cobalt of authors partly), comprising the grey and part of the white cobalt of some mineralogists (to which probably belongs the bismuth-cobalt or herstenite of some authors).

In the opposite half of this Case are contained the substances belonging to the orders of Carbon and of Selenium. To the former element are referred the diamond, anthracite, and graphite; to the latter the selenium metals or seleniurets. Among the specimens selected to illustrate the crystalline forms of the diamond are:—the primitive regular octahedron; the same with solid angles truncated; with edges truncated, forming the passage into the rhomb-dodecahedron; varieties of the latter, giving rise to the six-sided prismatic and the tetrahedral forms; cubes with truncated and bevelled edges; various hemitropic crystals or macles of diamonds; an octahedral diamond, attached to alluvial gold; two others in a siliceous breccia with cement of hydrous oxide of iron, and one in compact brown iron stone, from Brazil; models of large diamonds, &c. (with these are placed specimens of the alluvial rock in which this precious substance occurs in the East Indies and also in Brazil, where it is known by the name of cascalhao;)—varieties of anthracite or kohlenblende (to which may be referred the Kilkenny coal), from various localities, with native silver from Kongsberg, &c.;—graphite (commonly called black-lead), massive (the purest and most compact variety of which is that from Cumberland), disseminated in porcelain earth, &c.

Selenium: found in chemical combination with several metals; the seleniurets here deposited are: lead-seleniuret (clausthalite, Beud.);—copper-lead-seleniuret;—mercury-seleniuret (onofrite, Haid.) from San Onofre, Mexico;—mercury-lead-seleniuret;—cobalt-lead-seleniuret (thilkerodite, Beud.), most of them from the Hartz;—copper-seleniuret (berzelins, Beud.), and copper-silver-seleniuret (eukairite, Berz.), both from Strickerum, Sweden;—to which are added specimens of sulphur, from the Lippiari island of Volcano, incrustated and coloured by reddish-brown or orange red particles, which are a combination of selenium with sulphur, to which the name of volcanite has been given; (also a medallion, in selenium, of its discoverer, Berzelius.)

CASE 5. The suite of specimens of sulphur (among which may be specified the splendid crystallizations from La Catolica in Sicily, and from Conilla in Spain, the stalactic, and other varieties, accompanied by selenite, sulphate of strontia, &c.; and the massive and pulverulent sulphur found sublimed near the craters of volcanos, &c.) is succeeded by the Sulphurets, which occupy half of this and seven of the next following Table Cases. They begin with sulphuret of manganese or manganese-blende (alabandine of Del Rio), from Nagyag in Transylvania and from Peru; to which has been added the hauerite of Haidinger, lately found in beautiful crystals, belonging to the tessular system, at Kalinka, near Neusohl, in Hungary.—Among the numerous varieties of sulphuret of zinc, or zinc-blende, may be particularized those relative to colour, viz., the yellow, the brown, and the black blende of Werner, the first of which is generally most pure, while the others contain a portion of iron; the radiated, fibrous and testaceous blende, the most characteristic specimens of which are from Przbram in Bohemia, and from Geroldseck in the Brisgau.

CASE 6. Sulphurets of iron, or iron pyrites:—one of the most widely diffused metallic ores, and belonging to all geological formations; it is divided into common pyrites, or marcasite, crystallized in cubes smooth and striated, variously modified, as octahedral and pentagono-dodecahedral forms, or these forms combined: from several localities, among which Traversella, in Piedmont, the isle of Elba, St. Gothard, Arendahl, Cornwall, yield the finest specimens;—radiated pyrites, a substance very subject to decomposition, and to which belong most of the varieties of what is commonly called lenticular or coxcomb-pyrites, spear-pyrites, as also the globular pyrites of a radiated texture, and the hepatic or liver-pyrites of Werner (distinct from the fer sulfuré hépatique of some French mineralogists, which is both radiated and common iron pyrites converted into brown iron stone);—magnetic pyrites, which is nearly allied to the preceding species, from Bodenmais, Bavaria, &c.; massive and crystallized in six-sided prisms;—the kausimkies or lonchidite of Breithaupt, also called spürkies.—Sulphuret of cobalt, linnéite, from Bastnaes in Sweden.—Sulphuret of nickel or nickel-blende (millerite, Haid.), formerly called capillary iron-pyrites (haarkies W.), and afterwards considered as native nickel, till its real composition was determined by Arfvedson, from Joachimsthal and Mertyr Tydvil;—the gersdorffite, a sulph-arseniuret of nickel.—Sulphuret of cadmium, from Bishoptown in Renfrewshire to which the name of greenockite has been given, after Lord Greenock, its discoverer: one of the crystals here deposited well exhibits the peculiar adamantine lustre of this substance.

CASE 7. Sulphuret of copper, copper glance, or vitreous copper, compact, foliated, and variously crystallized, &c., chiefly from Redruth, Cornwall, and from Bristol in Connecticut, in which two localities the finest crystals have hitherto been found; to which are also commonly referred the vegetable fossil remains (CUPRESSITES Ullmanni, Room I. Wall Case 6) known by the name of Frankenberg corn-ears, from the bituminous marl-slate of Frankenberg in HESSIA, which are principally composed of vitreous and grey copper:—the sulphurets called kupfer-indigo, and the digenite of Breithaupt, are by some considered as varieties only of copper glance.—The silver-copper glance of Stromeier, called stromeyerite by Beudant.

Sulphuret of copper and iron, to which belongs the chalcopyrite, copper pyrites or yellow copper, including the pale-yellow fine-grained variety called hematitiform, or blistered copper-pyrites; and the variegated copper ore (bunthupfererz and bornite), differing from the former in the proportions of its constituent parts, and easily known by the reddish colour of its fractural surfaces: crystallized, massive and foliated.—Tennantite, by some referred to fahl ore, or grey-copper ore, from Cornwall.

CASE 8 contains a suite of specimens of sulphuret of lead or galena, which include a great variety of modifications of crystals, detached and grouped together, (the more remarkable modifications, besides those of Great Britain, from the Hartz and from Saxony,) in combination with blende, pyrites, and many other substances; galena of various grain, massive and disseminated; galena of corroded appearance, decomposed and regenerated; the compact and specular variety, called slickenside by the Derbyshire miners, &c.—steinmannite, probably a distinct antimonial sulphur salt, is placed here, because several compact varieties of sulphuret of lead appear to be a mixture of it and common galena.

CASE 9. Sulphuret of bismuth, or bismuth-glance (bismuthine of Beudant), in acicular crystals, from Riddarhyttan, &c.—Sulphuret of copper and bismuth, called copper-bismuth, from Wittichen, in the Black Forest.—The needle-ore of Werner, a triple sulphuret of bismuth, lead, and copper, only found near Ekatherineburg, in Siberia, accompanied by native gold, &c.—Sulphuret of copper and tin, or tin-pyrites, only found in Cornwall: it is called bell metal ore on account of its colour, which is frequently that of bronze. The remainder of this case is taken up by a considerable suite of specimens of sulphuret of mercury or cinnabar, (chiefly from Almaden, in Spain, and from the Palatinate,) divided by Werner into the dark-red (by far the most common variety), and the bright-red cinnabar (native vermilion, much esteemed by painters); the idrialine-cinnabar, or brand-erz, a mixture of cinnabar with the bituminous substance called idrialine, and earthy particles, from Idria, in Carniola, compact and slaty: the same with globular bodies composed of concentric testaceous laminæ, being the korallenerz (coral ore) of Werner.

CASE 10. Sulphuret of silver, common silver glance, or henkelite, massive, crystallized, and in other external forms, among which are the laminar and capillary: the black silver, which is often seen coating other ores of silver, appears to be a pulverulent variety of this species;—flexible silver glance, or sternbergite;—the scarce donacargyrite, or schilfertz of German mineralogists, which, however, is considered as a combination of several sulph-antimoniurets of silver and lead.—Sulphuret of antimony (antimonite, Haid.), also called grey antimony, compact, foliated, radiated, and capillary: the more remarkable among these are the specimens of crystallized antimony in splendid groups, especially from Transylvania; radiated grey antimony with baroselenite, realgar, &c.; plumose antimony (plumosite of Haidinger), some varieties of which, appearing like delicate wool or down, display a fine iridescent blue, yellow, and red tarnish: the chemical composition of some of them is uncertain.

CASE 11. This and part of the next Case contain the simple and double sulphur-salts formed by the sulphurets of antimony or arsenic, with basic sulphurets of electro-positive metals; among these may be specified (besides some varieties of the plumose antimony or feather-ore)—the jamesonite or axotomous antimony glance;—the geocronite of Swanberg;—the kobelite;—the boulangerite and embrithite;—the zinckenite, nearly related to plumose antimony;—the silver-blende, red or ruby silver, divided into the dark and the light red, both of the same crystalline forms, but in the latter of which sulphuret of arsenic takes the place of the sulphuret of antimony of the former;—the miargyrite of H. Rose, first separated by Mohs from red silver under the name of hemiprismatic ruby-blende;—to these is related the melan-glance, as are some varieties of the sulphur-salt commonly called brittle silver-glance or stephanite (the röschgewächs of the Hungarian miners), which appears to be composed of the same constituent elements as the dark and the bright red ruby silver ores, but in different proportions;—bournonite, a sulphur salt known also by the names of endellion, and triple sulphuret of lead, antimony, and copper, chiefly from Hungary and the Hartz:—the scarce polybasite. There are some other substances belonging to this order, such as, in CASE 12, the fahl-ore or grey copper (a double sulphur-salt, on the chemical constitution of which much light has been thrown by the researches of H. Rose), crystallized, massive, and disseminated in various substances: the more remarkable specimens here deposited are those from Hungary. The remaining space in this Case is occupied by the following sulphurets:—sulphuret of arsenic, viz. the yellow orpiment, massive and in striated, separable laminæ; and the red orpiment or realgar, massive and perfectly crystallized, but decomposing by the action of light into an orange-coloured powder;—several of the arsenio-sulphurets, such as the arsenic-pyrites or mispickel (some varieties of which, containing accidentally admixed silver, constitute Werner's weiss-ertz);—the cobalt-glance, massive and crystallized in the form of the cube and its modifications, &c., chiefly from Tunaberg in Sweden;—the sulphuret of molybdenum or molybdenite (which has sometimes been confounded with scaly varieties of graphites), chiefly from Saxony.

In the six following Cases the Oxides of the electro-positive metals are deposited.

CASE 13 contains the oxides and hydrous oxides of manganese formerly distinguished as foliated, compact, and earthy grey manganese, but now, from chemical and crystallographical distinctive characters, divided into better defined species, such as the manganite, from Ilfeld, Hartz, where it occurs in beautiful fascicularly aggregated crystals; the pyrolusite, often seen as pseudomorphous crystals after calcareous spar, from Ilfeld; the psilomelane, mostly in botryoidal, reniform, and stalactitical masses; the braunite; the hausmannite, &c.; to some of which, but particularly the first two, may be referred the earthy manganese or wad, (a name also frequently given to earthy cobalt and to other metallic substances in a state of decomposition,) some varieties of which exhibit spontaneous combustion when mixed with linseed oil.

CASE 14. In this and the two following Table Cases are deposited most of the oxides of iron:—magnetic iron-ore or magnetite (magnet-eisenstein of Werner), a compound of protoxide and peroxide of iron, most of the varieties of which are strongly attracted by the magnet, while some of them possess polarity in a high degree (natural magnets), of which several specimens are here deposited:—among the more interesting crystallized varieties may be particularized those from Traversella in Piedmont: among the granular varieties that from the East Indies, which yields the wootz, or salam-steel, remarkable for its hardness;—magnetic iron-sand.

CASE 15. Iron-glance or specular oxide, among the specimens of which those from Elba are much admired for their beautiful iridescence and play of colours; the variety in large laminar crystals appearing like polished steel, from Stromboli and Vesuvius;—the micaceous iron-ore of Werner, belonging partly to this species, partly to hydrous oxide of iron;—also the red iron-ore, generally divided into compact red iron-stone and red hematite, are now considered as a variety only of this species.

CASE 16. Hydrous oxide of iron or brown iron-stone, among the most remarkable varieties of which species are, the micaceous, called göthite, in delicate transparent tables of a blood-red colour; that in fine scales coating the cells of lava; a shining brownish-black variety used as hair powder by the Bootchuana natives beyond the Great River in South Africa; the fibrous brown iron-stone or brown hematite; the compact and the ochrey brown iron-stone. With these are placed specimens of several sub-species of argillaceous or clay iron-stone, such as the columnar, the reniform, the pisiform (pea-ore): among the varieties here deposited of this latter, is a sample of the rounded and angular grains from the size of a millet-seed to that of a small hazel nut, which, on the 10th of August, 1841, descended as a shower at Iwan, in the Comitatus of Oedenburg in Hungary, and were considered as a new species of real meteorites, until their terrestrial origin was fully ascertained by microscopic observation and analysis.

CASE 17. Oxide of copper:—red or ruby-copper (cuprite, Haid.), compact and foliated, of which the finest crystallized varieties occur in the Bank mines, Siberia, and in Cornwall: one of the more remarkable varieties is the bright-red capillary cuprite called chalcotrichite, (in which selenium has been found by Kersten,) from Rheinbreitenbach;—the tile-ore, most varieties of which are intimate mixtures of red copper and brown iron-ochre, from Hungary, Siberia, &c.;—the tenorite of Semmola, a pure oxide of copper occurring in six-sided filmy plates, on the rifts of some Vesuvian lavas;—the black oxide or melanoconite, generally found mixed with the oxides of iron and manganese. Oxide of bismuth or bismuth-ochre, from Saxony and Bohemia.—Red oxide of zinc (zincite of Haidinger, also called spartalite and sterlin gite), from Sparta in New Jersey; to which is added, from the same locality, the franklinite, a mineral composed of the oxides of zinc and manganese.—Black and yellow earthy cobalt, both called cobalt-ochre, which seem to be hydrates of the oxides of cobalt and manganese, frequently mixed with oxide of iron.—Oxide of uranium, or uran-ochre, occurring at Johanngeorgenstadt and Joachimsthal; together with what is called pitch-ore, considered, when in its pure state, as a hydrous protoxide of the same metal; which, however, requires further confirmation.

CASE 18. Oxide of lead:—the native minium from Hessa (first described by Mr. Smithson), from Siberia, &c., probably produced by the decomposition of galena.—Oxide of tin or tin-stone (cassiterite, Beud.), divided by Werner into common tin-stone and wood-tin: among the specimens of the former (chiefly from Cornwall, Saxony, and Bohemia) may be specified the greyish-white crystals resembling scheel-ore or tungstate of lime, the regular and mackled crystals, the pebble-like and granular tin-stone (shoad-tin, stream-tin, grain-tin, &c.);—among the varieties of wood-tin, are some composed of radiated-fibrous small globules, others marked with concentrically disposed brown and yellow colours, and called toad's eye wood-tin, fortification wood-tin, &c., also in supposititious crystals after feldspar, at St. Agnes, Cornwall. (To which are added some specimens of metallic tin, the result of smelting of which the more remarkable, on account of its locality, is that cast in the form of thick wires, brought by Capt. Clapperton from Soudan in Africa, and mentioned in the Appendix to his Journal.)

In the next Case begin the oxides of electro-negative bodies, and their various combinations.

CASE 19. Alumina and Aluminates. To the former belongs the corundum or corundite, divided into noble and common corundite, the former comprehending the precious stones commonly called oriental gems (the sapphire, ruby, oriental amethyst, oriental topaz, oriental emerald), of the crystallized forms of which the principal modifications are here deposited;—the latter, to which the name of corundum is more especially applied, affords one of the hardest and best polishing materials to the lapidary: from Bengal, Mysore, China, the Carnatic (Werner's diamond spar), New Jersey, Lapland, Piedmont, &c. As appendix to these are added, the emery, a compound substance which derives its hardness and consequent usefulness for polishing to blue or grey corundum; and the indianite of Bournon, which sometimes occurs as matrix of the common corundum of the Carnatic. As hydrates of alumina are to be particularized, the diaspore from the Ural, and the hydrargillite of G. Rose: the latter a mineral from Shimshimskaja Gora, which is to be considered as crystallized gibbsite, if Torrey's analysis of the latter be correct; but as, according to Hermann, the gibbsite contains upwards of 37 p. c. of phosphoric acid, it is at present placed with the phosphates (Tab. 57): the mineral called wavellite of Villaricca, being no phosphate, is now referred to the hydrargillite, with which it agrees in its chemical composition.

The aluminates of magnesia:—the spinel, among the principal varieties of which, besides the red and violet, may be specified the blue spinel of Aker in Südermannia, to which is related the sapphirine; the brown, often found in crystals of considerable dimension, from New Jersey; and the chlorospinel of Rose, in which a portion of the alumina is replaced by oxide of iron, from Slatoust, Siberia;—the sapphirine, &c.:

—the ceylonite or pleonaste, and the automolite (also called gahnite), from Fahlun in Sweden and from Franklin in New Jersey, are, the former an aluminate of protoxide of iron and magnesia, the latter an aluminate of zinc.—The chrysoberyl or cymophane, considered as an aluminate of glucine and of iron, among the specimens of which deserve particular mention the large crystals from Brazil and from the Ural (the latter green variety, but of a columbine red by transmitted light, has been called alexandrite); those in a matrix of quartz and feldspar with garnets, from Haddam in Connecticut, and also those from Saratoga and New York.—The mineral called gum-lead (plomb gomme), which occurs at Huelgoet in Brittany only, is essentially a hydrous aluminate of lead.

The five following Cases contain the acid or oxide of silicium (silica), the numerous varieties of which, formerly considered as so many distinct species, are mostly indebted for their generally very striking external characters to the admixture of matter foreign to the species, or to other casual circumstances that prevailed at their formation.

CASE 20. Amethyst quartz of various tints, in grouped crystals, &c.—Rock crystal: various modifications of crystalline forms: small dodecahedral and other crystals, known by the names of Gibraltar diamonds, Bristol diamonds, &c.; varieties of colour, according to which this substance obtains the familiar denominations of smoky topaz or morion, cairngorm, citrine, &c.; specimens of rock crystal enclosing various substances, such as rutile, brown iron-stone, micaceous iron, acicular antimony, actinolite, asbest, chlorite, &c.; groups of rock crystal; some specimens of rock crystal in a wrought state are added.

CASE 21. Common quartz: among the specimens of this widely-diffused substance, which offers such a great variety in its external aspect, the more remarkable are the hacked, corroded, and cellular quartz from Schemnitz, as also the pseudomorphous or supposititious crystals, principally derived from modifications of calcareous and fluor spars; and, with regard to colour, the blue quartz (called siderite quartz), from Salzburg, and the rose or milk quartz*, which are both used as ornamental stones;—fibrous quartz;—flexible sandstone (itacolumite) from Brazil†, China and the East Indies;—fetid quartz, from Nantes;—iron-flint. In this Case is also placed a suite of varieties of stalagmitic quartz (quartz-sinter, pearl-sinter, geyserite, fiorite), the more remarkable of which siliceous concretions are those deposited by the hot springs of the Geyser of Iceland, those of Santa-Fiora in Tuscany, and particularly those of Luzon, one of the Philippine Islands. To these are added specimens of the ceraunian sinter or those enigmatical siliceous tubes which were discovered in the sands of the Senner Heath in the County of Lippe (where, on account of their probable origin, they are called blitz-röhren, or lightning tubes, from which name those of fulgurite, ceraunian sinter, astraphyalite, are derived), at Drigg on the coast of Cumberland, and lastly, by the late Capt. Clapperton (see Append. to his Journal), near Dibbla in the Tuarick country, Africa, from which localities specimens are here deposited.—The † Large specimens of flexible sandstone are placed in a table in the middle of the room, opposite Case 21: they are from the mountains of Itacolumi, near Villa Rica, in Brazil, and were presented by His Excellency Viscount Strangford.

* The rose quartz is now removed to Case 20.

hyalite, a mineral related equally to stalagmitic quartz and opal;—the avanturino quartz, &c.

CASE 22 contains some more of the varieties of common quartz: prase, which appears to be an intimate mixture of that substance and actinolite;—as also some varieties of the cat's eye (mostly from Ceylon), in which the chatoyant lustre is generally produced by nearly invisible fibres of amianth lodged in the quartz mass.—Part of this Case is occupied by the siliceous substance called hornstone, divided into the conchoidal and splintery varieties, or chert; among these are the remarkable pseudomorphous crystals from Schneeberg in Saxony, derived from various modifications of calcareous spar; also beautiful specimens of wood converted into hornstone, being the wood-stone of Werner; hornstone balls from Haunstadt in Bavaria.—Of flint, a well-known mineral substance, some interesting varieties are deposited; fine groups of stalactitical flint passing into calcedony; flint nodules containing water, &c. The haytorite, a pseudomorphous substance, being purely siliceous, but presenting the form of datolite.

The remainder of the contents of this and the whole of those of the following Case relate to calcedonic substances. Among the specimens of common calcedony the most remarkable are, the smalt-blue variety from Felsobanya in Transylvania, crystallized in obtuse rhombohedrons; the branched and stalactical calcedony from Iceland; the splendid specimens from Cornwall, especially from Trevascus mine, &c.; the botryoidal, from Ferroe; the large hollow geodes from Oberstein; nodules, enclosing water (enhydrites), from Monte Berico, near Vicenza, where they occur in volcanic rocks, &c.

CASE 23. Calcedonic substances continued: cut and polished pieces of calcedony with red and black dendritic and other figures, called mocha-stones; varieties with white, brown, and black, straight or curved lines, some of which were probably among the substances of which the costly vasa murrhina of the ancients were made; red and yellowish varieties of calcedony called carnelian.—Plasma.—Heliotrope, an intimate mixture of calcedony and green earth, which, when containing disseminated particles of red jasper, is commonly termed blood-stone.—The beautiful and much esteemed variety of calcedony called chrysoprase, hitherto only found at Kosemütz in Silesia, and which owes its colour to oxide of nickel, as does the green siliceous earthy substance, named pimelite, which accompanies it. To these are added specimens of some varieties of the siliceous compounds called agates, in which calcedony, carnelian, amethyst, and heliotrope generally form the predominant ingredients, combined in straight, or more or less curved and concentric or zigzag delicate lines, imitating coloured designs of fortifications, &c.: among these may be particularized the beautiful agate-nodule from the trap formation of Central Asia, presented by C. Fraser, Esq.

CASE 24. One half of this Case is occupied by the different varieties of jasper, such as they are enumerated by Werner, viz. the globular or Egyptian jasper, found chiefly near Cairo, in rounded pieces, which do not owe their form to rolling, but are probably of organic origin: when cut and polished they exhibit various fanciful delineations (one of the specimens in the table represents on its fractural surface the likeness of Chaucer the poet);—the riband-jasper or striped jasper, the finest varieties of which are found in Siberia;—the variously-tinted common jasper;—the agate jasper*, found only in agate veins, and the porcelain jasper, produced by the action of subterraneous fire on clay-slate. The other half of this Case contains opaline substances (some of them hydrates of silica), viz., specimens of the noble opal, which owes its beautiful play of colours to a multiplicity of otherwise imperceptible fissures in its interior;—the sun-opal, or fire-opal, exhibiting a suite of colours, from deep orange yellow to nearly untinged; found in the trachytic porphyry of Zimapan, in Mexico;—the common opal, a translucent white variety of which, appearing yellow or red when held between the eye and the light, is called girasol;—the semi-opal, agreeing in its principal characters with the common;—specimens of a variety both of common and noble opal, which, having the property of becoming transparent when immersed in water, is called hydrophane, or oculus mundi;—wood-opal, or opalized wood, chiefly from Hungary;—jasp-opal, referred by some authors to jasper;—the menilite, or liver opal, found at Menil-le-Montant, near Paris, in a bed of adhesive slate, a specimen of which is added;—the red opaline substance called quincite, from St. Quintin and from Méhun in the Département de Chèr, is common opal tinted, as it is supposed, by organic colouring matter, in the same manner as the magnesite occurring with it in the fresh water limestone of that part of France.

In the two next Cases are placed the Silicates with one base.

CASE 25 contains the silicates of lime and some of the silicates of magnesia and of alumina. To the former belong the table spar or wollastonite from Mount Vesuvius, Nagyag, &c., and the ohenite; perhaps also the alumocalcite of Breithaupt, before considered as decomposed opal, from Eibenstock, Saxony.

The silicates of magnesia comprehend several of the minerals placed by Werner in his talc genus:—steatite, or soapstone, the more interesting varieties of which are, that of yellowish green colour from Greenland, and that from Göpfersgrün in Franconia, with small crystals of other mineral substances, especially quartz, converted into, and forming part of the massive steatite; variety called chalk of Briançon;—keffekil, or meerschäum, from Natolia, of which the well-known pipe-bowls are made, and that from Valecas in Spain;—also a related substance, called keffekillite by Dr. Fischer, who discovered it in the Crimea;—the lithomarge, or steinmark, has been associated with steatite, although most of its varieties are silicates of alumina: the more remarkable of which are, that of a reddish-yellow colour in porphyry, from Rochlitz, and the fine purplish-blue variety from Planitz (teratolite, formerly called terra miraculosa Saxonica), &c.—serpentine, the purer varieties of which (generally hydrates) are called noble serpentine: they constitute, in combination with primitive lime-stone, the verde antico and some other fine green marbles; crystallized serpentine, from Snarum, in Norway;—among the varieties of the common serpentine, those best known are from Baireuth and from Züblitz in Saxony, where they are manufactured into vases and various other articles: serpentine with embedded garnets, magnetic iron-stone, asbest, &c.—Of other substances nearly related to serpentine in this Table Case we have, the hydrophite of Svanberg; the picrolite; the antigorite; the villarsite, &c.—With these are also placed the metalloid diallage or diallagite, more commonly called schiller-spar, from the Hartz, &c. ; and some varieties of what is called bronzite and xanthophyllite.—To the silicates of magnesia is also referred the olivine, a green granular substance, occurring chiefly in trapp rocks, as also in the cells of the meteoric iron of Siberia and Atacama (see CASE 1): when in a pure state and crystallized it is denominated chrysolite or peridot, classed with gems; hyalosiderite, batrachite and monticellite are also olivine-like substances.

CASE 26. Silicate of zinc, called smithsonite (after the distinguished English chemist who first explained its nature, and that of silicates in general), and also electric or siliceous calamine, the finest specimens of which are those from Siberia and Hungary; the variety called willemite, from Aix-la-Chapelle, &c.—Silicate of manganese, of which there are several varieties (some of them nothing but mechanical mixtures of this silicate with carbonate of manganese, and quartz), which have received particular names, such as allagite, rhodonite, &c.—tephroite, —troostite.—Silicate of cerium or cerite, found only at Bastnäs, in Sweden.—Silicate of iron, to which belong the chlorophaite, chloropal, stilpnomelane, hisingerite, gillingite, polyhydrite, sideroschizolite, fayalite, anthosiderite, and some other newly-discovered mineral substances.—Silicate of copper, or siliceous malachite, also called chrysocolla and copper-green: to which may be referred the diop-tase or copper-emerald, a scarce mineral from the Kirguise country in Siberia.—Silicate of bismuth, also called bismuth-blende and eulytine, found in the form of hair-brown globules and indistinct crystals, at Schneeberg, Saxony.—Silicate of zirconia, to which belong Werner's zircon and some hyacinths of jewellers, from Ceylon, Auvergne, Chili, the Lake Ilmen in Siberia; also the blue zircon from Vesuvius; the variety called zirconite from Friedrichsvärn in Norway, the ostranite from the same locality, but which appears to differ from zircon only by its inferior hardness;—the malacon, or hydrous zircon.—To these is added the thorite of Berzelius, from Brevig in Norway, a mineral in which the metal thorium was first discovered.—Silicate of alumina: of these we have the andalusite; (with which is placed the chiastolite or hollow spar, hohlspath W., one of the several minerals called cross-stones: the structure of its crystals is but little understood), the kyanite or disthène, and the related mineral substances called sillimanite; xanthite, wörthite, bucholzite, and fibrolite (one of the concomitant substances of the corundum of the Carnatic);—the allophane, the halloysite, lenzinite, scarbroite, collyrite, bole, and some minerals of similar aspect are also referred to the silicates of alumina. Among them may be particularized the catlinite or Indian pipe-stone from the quarry of Côteau des Prairies, brought from thence by Mr. Catlin, the first white man allowed by the Indians to visit it, and after whom the substance was named by Dr. Jackson;—agalmatolite (Werner's bildstein, with which various steatitic substances have been confounded), employed by the Chinese for carving images, vessels, &c.

The Silicates with several bases are under arrangement in a series of Cases, nearly in the following order:

CASES 27 to 29 contain zeolitic substances: apophyllite, or ichthyophthalmite, in fine crystals, from Hesloe in Faroë; with stilbite; with tessellite of Brewster; with poonalite of Brooke, &c. ; a variety of apophyllite, called albine by some mineralogists;—chabasite or chabasie, in groups of primitive rhomboidal and modified crystals;—the variety called haidenite from Baltimore;—mesotype from Auvergne, Faroë, &c., to which are also referred the natrolite of Klaproth, the needle-stone of Werner, the scolicite, the mesolite, krokalite, &c.;—anal-cime, among the crystallized varieties of which are remarkably large specimens of the trapezoidal and other modifications from Fassa and the Seiser Alpe in Tyrol;—stilbite and heulandite, or foliated zeolite in splendid specimens from Iceland, Faroë, and Scotland;—brewsterite;—laumontite or lomonite, also called efflorescent zeolite, because most of its varieties are subject to decomposition by exposure to the air;—a suite of specimens of comptonite from Vesuvius, lining the cavities of a pyroxenic lava, &c., accompanied by gismondine and other crystallized substances; together with thomsonite, which is supposed to be only a variety of comptonite;—gmelinite or hydrolite;—lévine, and several other scarce zeolitic substances.

CASE 29. To the same family of minerals belongs the prehnite, the grass-green variety of which, discovered in South Africa by the Abbé Rochon, has been mistaken for chrysolite, chrysoprase, and even emerald;—to this also belongs the koupholite of Vauquelin. The substance known by the name of Chinese jade or you-stone (kyonk tsein of the Burmese) is likewise placed with prehnite, to which it has been referred by Count Bournon, but no chemical analysis has as yet been given of it: (among the vessels wrought out of Chinese jade in this Case is a cup, the gift of the king of Ava to the late Lieut.-Col. Burney, when British Resident at that court, and by him presented to the British Museum;)—some varieties of nephrite appear, from external characters, to be nearly related to this substance. In this Case also is placed the harmotome or cross stone, (formerly called andreolite, after Andreasberg, in the Hartz, where it was first discovered,) divided into baryte-harmotome and lime- or potassa-harmotome, to which latter are to be referred the Vesuvian minerals called zeagonite, gismondine, or abrazite, and the philipsite. Of andreolite, a magnificent specimen is deposited, (presented by King George IV.)—the herschelite, from Aei Reale in Sicily.—The remaining space in this Case and the greater part of CASES 30 and 31 are occupied chiefly by feldspathic substances and minerals more or less nearly related to feldspar. The most remarkable and important species is the common feldspar (orthoclase of Breithaupt), among the crystallized varieties of which may be particularized—the fine green variety from the Ural, called amazon stone; the suites of variously-modified crystals from Baveno in Piedmont, from lake Ilmen in the Ural, and from Somnitz, &c., in Silesia; feldspar with embedded crystals and fragments of quartz (graphic stone, graphic granite), from Siberia, &c.;—the adularia or naker feldspar, principally found on mount St. Gothard, but not in the valley of Adula from which its name is derived: the fine variety from Ceylon, when cut en cabochon, is called moon-stone; and a yellow naker feldspar with reddish dots has obtained the name of sun-stone, which is also sometimes given to the beautiful avanturino variety of common feldspar placed in this glass-case;—ice-spar and sanidine or glassy feldspar, both nearly allied to orthoclase;—the albite or cleavelandite, the finest specimens of which are those from Dauphiné and Siberia; the pericline, united by some mineralogists with the preceding species, from St. Gothard, Tyrol, &c. ;—the anorthite from Vesuvius ;—the oligoclase, also called natron-spodumen, to which may be referred the crystals occurring in several varieties of porphyry ;—the labradorite feldspar (also called opalescent feldspar, from its often exhibiting a beautiful play of colours in cut and polished specimens, of which a pretty complete suite is added), chiefly from the coast of Labrador and from the transition syenite of Laurwig in Norway* ;—together with some other species separated from orthoclase. To these is added the leucite or amphigène, chiefly from Vesuvius, in separate crystals of various sizes and degrees of transparency, massive, embedded in pyroxenic and other lavas.

CASE 31. Among other mineral substances here deposited, and partly belonging to the preceding section, are, the triphane or spodumen and the petalite: in which latter substance lithia was first discovered by Arfvedson ;—the davyne of Monticelli ;—the nepheline, from Mount Vesuvius, with which are now combined several varieties of the elæolite or fettstein of Werner ;—the wernerite, under which name, formerly confined to some varieties of common and compact scapolite, are now by most mineralogical writers united the meionite of Vesuvius, and the greater part of the scapolite, the paranthine, the dipyre, the nuttallite, the bergmannite, the rosellite, and the amphodelite; substances which, together with several others provisionally placed in this Case, stand in need of further investigation as to their chemical and crystallographical characters.

The cordierite, also known by the names of pehoma, iolite, and dichroite, massive and crystallized, from Cabo de Gata, from Greenland, Bodenmais in Bavaria, and Orayervi in Finland (steinheilite) ;—the sordawalite from Finland ;—the staurolite, called also grenatite and cross-stone, among the specimens of which may be specified the fine mackled crystals from Brittany, and the modifications of the simple crystals from St. Gothard, accompanied by prisms of disthène, perfectly similar to those of the staurolite, and sometimes longitudinally grown together with them.

CASE 32 contains chiefly micaceous and talcose substances. Our imperfect knowledge of the optical properties and chemical constitution of many varieties of the former, does not admit of their being arranged according to those distinctive characters ; such varieties as have been more closely examined in this respect, may be divided into potassa-mica (by far the most common), which has two axes ; magnesia-mica (biotite of Hausmann), which has but one axis : in characteristic specimens from various localities, particularly from Vesuvius, where it occurs in small, but brilliant and transparent six-sided prismatic crystals ; and lithia-mica, which besides the beautiful peach-blossom, red, violet, greenish-grey, and white scaly varieties known by the name of lepidolite, (some varieties of which, however, are referable to the silicates combined with fluorides, in Case 58 A,) from Ròzna in Moravia, also comprises several large-foliated varieties of what was formerly considered as common mica, such as that from Zinnwald in Bohemia and Altenberg, accompanied by apatite, tinstone, and topaz.

The species and varieties of the talc-like substances are likewise very imperfectly understood. Among the specimens of talc in this Table

* The top of the small octagonal table, standing near Case 30, is a slab of opalescent feldspar from Finland.

Case, some varieties of which are chemically related to steatite, may be particularized the common or Venetian (which enters into the composition of cosmetics), and the indurated talc; to the former of which was also formerly referred the green radiated talc from Siberia, composed of distinct groups of small diverging laminæ, and which is known under the name of pyrophyllite;—potstone, ollite, or lavezzo (the lapis comensis of Pliny), which appears to be an intimate mixture of talc and asbest, chiefly from Chiavenna, near Como, where it is manufactured into culinary vessels;—chlorite, crystallized in aggregated, small, modified rhombic prisms: the earthy and foliated varieties, coating crystals of octahedral magnetic iron-stone, &c. Other related mineral substances are—the pennine;—the scarce leuchtenbergite from the Ural, the composition of which appears to approach very near to that of chlorite, or ripidolite;—the gieseckite, from Greenland;—the oosite, fahlunite or triclasite, from Fahlun in Sweden: this latter mineral substance, however, together with the weissite, also chlorophyllite, the praseolite, the aspasiolite, the bonsdorffite, as the several varieties of the pinite in this Table Case, are now by some mineralogical writers considered as only metamorphoses of cordierite or iolite (Case 36).

CASE 33. This and part of the following Case chiefly contain amphibolic and pyroxenic and related minerals, among which may be specified the basaltic and common hornblende, including the pargasite;—the actinolite or strahlstein (divided by Werner into the glassy, common, and fibrous varieties, and to which also belongs the karinthine of this author);—the grammatite or tremolite (so called from Val Tremola, where, however, it is not found), among the specimens of which are the fine fibrous varieties, resembling asbest; the glassy tremolite, in dolomite and granular limestone, &c.—Arfvedsonite, and agryrine, a variety of it;—raphilite, &c.

CASE 34. Part of this Case is occupied by the mineral substances called asbestine, many of which pass into some of the varieties of hornblende; others, both asbest and amianth, are modifications of the state of aggregation of different amphibolic substances; and to these Breithaupt also refers his kymatine, metaxite, peponite, and pycnotrope. Among them may be observed specimens illustrative of the transition from a very close to a loose fibrous structure;—several varieties of the flexible asbest or amianth, with some antique incombustible cloth, paper, &c., made of it;—the varieties called common and schiller-asbest, mountain wood, mountain cork, or nectic asbest, &c., separate, and in combination with other substances;—the blue and yellow asbest from the Orange River, South Africa, for the former of which the name of krokydolite has been proposed, while the other appears to be a silicate of iron. The remainder of this Case and part of the next contain pyroxenic minerals:—augite, in separate crystals, and embedded in lava from Vesuvius, together with groups of well-defined crystals from Arendal in Norway, where this substance occurs in primitive rocks;—the jeffersonite;—the granular variety called coccolite;—the hypersthene and paulite (Labrador hornblende of Werner);—the lievrite, also called ilvaite and yenite, in particularly perfect crystals, chiefly from Elba: the wehrlite appears to be a variety of this species;—the varieties of diopside, at first considered as distinct species, including the mussite and alalite from Piedmont;—the sahlite or malacolite, to which also belongs the baikalite, of which a few fine specimens are here deposited; the pyrgome or fassaite, and the achmite.

CASE 35. Among its contents may be particularized the mineral substances which have been described under the appellations of thallite, arendalite, acanticonc, delphinite, &c.; most of these are Werner's pis-tacite, and are now more generally designated by the name of epidote, given to them by Haüy. To this also belongs the manganesiferous epi-dote, considered by some as an ore of manganese.—Cumingtonite.—Zoisite.—Among the specimens of idocrase (vesuvian of Werner), the more conspicuous are the large beautiful crystals (the unibinaire of Haüy), discovered by Laxmann on the banks of the Vilui in Kamschatka, embedded in a steatitic rock; those from Vesuvius, where this substance occurs accompanied by other volcanic ejections, have, in Italy, obtained the name of Vesuvian gems, hyacinths, and chrysolites; the varieties called egerane, loboite; that from Tellemarken in Norway, coloured blue by oxide of copper (cyprine), and the rose-coloured variety, the thulite, from the same locality.

CASE 36. The greater part of this Case is appropriated to the various species and varieties of the garnet tribe, formerly divided into noble and common garnets. Among the more distinct chemical species now established are:—the chrome-garnets, to which belongs the pyrope;—the beautiful chrome and lime-garnet, called uwarowite;—the lime-garnets, comprising chiefly the melanite from the vicinity of Frascati, and some brownish-black varieties; the colophonite, bearing a distant resemblance to rosin, from Arendal, in Norway; the grossular or Wilui garnet, a fine light-green species from Kamschatka, so called from the fancied resemblance which its separate crystals bear to a gooseberry; the allo-chroite, also called splintery garnet, from Norway; the romanzovite; Haüy's essonite (hessonite) or cinnamon-stone, chiefly from Ceylon, which was supposed to contain zirconia, till a more accurate analysis proved it to be nearly allied to vesuvian and garnet (most of the hyacinths of commerce are cinnamon-stone). In this Case are also deposited—the gehlenite, from the Monzoni in Tyrol, to which species the melilite from Capo di Bove, near Rome, is now generally referred;—the kar-pholite from Bohemia, &c.

CASE 37. One half of this Table Case is set apart for the silicates containing glucina and alumina, the principal species of which is the beryl, including the emerald, a gem which owes its beautiful green colour to oxide of chromium: the most remarkable specimens of emerald are those from Santa Fé, from the Ural, from Heubachthal in Bavaria, and from Mount Zahara in Egypt;—among those of the beryl or aquamarine, may be specified the fine blue and yellow varieties from Mursinsk in the Ural, the colourless limpid crystals, and those half blue and transparent, half white and opaque, from Odontchelong near Nerchinsk;—the bluish and greenish opaque beryls from Acworth in New Hampshire, where massy crystals have been found (the two imperfect prisms placed on the shelf near this Table Case weigh, the one 83, the other nearly 43 lbs.);—the euclase, a rare mineral, discovered by Dombey in Peru, but since only found as loose crystals, at Capao, near Villaricca, in Brazil, and in the chlorite slate of that territory;—the phenacite or phenakite of Norden-sköld (which as a bisilicate of glucine, might be referred to the silicates with one base in Table 26) occurs, together with emerald, in the Ural, and in brown iron-stone at Framont in Alsace;—the helvine from Schwarzenberg, considered as a triple silicate of glucina, iron, and manganese.—Silicates containing yttria and protoxide of cerium*; to these belong the gadolinite, the allanite or cerine, the orthite and pyrrorthite, as likewise the tshefkinite of Rose. The rest of this Table Case is occupied by the oxide of titanium and the titanates, to the former of which belong—the rutile, also called titan-shorl, massive and crystallized, the reticulated variety, generally with golden tarnish, from Moutier, near the Mont Blanc;—the capillary rutile in rock crystal from Brazil, in beryl from the East Indies, &c.;—the anatase (oisanite or octahedrite), which occurs only crystallized, chiefly at Bourg d'Oisans, in Dauphiny. Among the titanates the more remarkable are—the silico-titanate of lime, called sphene (titanite of Klaproth), and its varieties formerly designated by the names of brown and yellow menakanite, in large crystals, from Arendal in Norway; the variety from St. Gothard, called rayonnante en gouttière by Saussure, on feldspar with chlorite, &c.;—the greenovite (sphene coloured by manganese), from St. Marcel, Piedmont;—the perowskite;—the polymignite, found in the zircon-syenite of Fredriksvärn in Norway, and composed chiefly of the titanates of zirconia and yttria; also the æschynite from the lake Ilmen near Miask, being a titanate of zirconia and oxide of cerium;—the ærstedtite, a titanate of zirconia with lime, magnesia and protoxide of iron, from Arendal;—the mosandrite, from the same locality, being a silico-titanate of lantane, manganese, &c.; the yttrotitanite or keilhavite;—and lastly the iron titanites, variously combined with the protoxide of that metal, in many of those varieties of volcanic and other specular iron which exhibit a perfect conchoidal fracture, as likewise in the minerals known by the names of axotomous iron or kibdelophane, crightonite, menacanite, nigrine, iserine, ilmenite, &c.

CASE 38. In this Table Case (besides the silicates containing yttria and protoxide of cerium, mentioned in the description of Case 37) are placed the following orders of minerals.

Combinations of columbic or tantallic acid with protoxides of iron, manganese, lime, yttria, zirconia, &c.: among the columbates or tantalates here deposited, may be pointed out the specimen of tantalite (columbite) sent by Gov. Winthrop, from North America, to Sir Hans Sloane, in which Mr. Hatchett, in 1801, discovered the metal denominated by him columbium, but which, eight or nine years later, was supposed by Dr. Wollaston to be identical with the metal found nearly about the same time, by Eckeberg, who had called it tantalum: a name that had become familiar to continental chemists and mineralogists, and was therefore retained by them;—the same from Rabenstein in Bavaria, accompanied by crystallized beryl and uranite †;—the Finbo- and the Brodbo-tantalites of Berzelius;—the yttrotantalite, from Ytterby, the uranotantalite of G. Rose, from Miask, Siberia;—the microlite of Shepard, the wöhlerite of Scheerer, and some other new mineral substances related to them, but which all stand in need of ulterior chemical examination.

* These are at present placed in the next Table Case.

† Since H. Rose's discovery of the niobic (which had been taken for tantallic) acid, the name of columbite has been restored to the above American and Bavarian minerals.

Oxides of antimony:—antimony-ochre on native and grey antimony;—several varieties of the scarce white antimony, from Przibram in Bohemia, on galena, quartz, &c.;—red antimony, also called antimony-blende and kermes, (a combination of oxide and sulphuret of this metal,) mostly in fine capillary crystals, from Bräunsdorf in Saxony, Malazka in Hungary; a so-called argentiferous variety from the Hartz, in fibrous flakes resembling tinder (zunderertz, tinder ore), is a mixture of this with other sulphurets.

Tungstates:—tungstate of lime (schéelin calcaire of Haiiy), also called scheelite and tungsten (heavy stone), among the more interesting specimens of which are the primitive acute octahedron from Allemont in Dauphiny, and the group of very large crystals from Schlackenwald in Bohemia;—tungstate of iron and manganese or wolfram, massive and crystallized, from Schlackenwald and other localities; also as octahedral superstititious crystals, derived from tungstate of lime;—tungstate of lead, or scheel-lead (stolzite of Haidinger), from Zinnwald in Bohemia, often confounded with the molybdate of this metal.

Vanadic acid and vanadates:—(Vanadium was discovered in some ores of iron from Taberg in Småland, by Sefström: by Del Rio the acid of this metal, which he called erythronium, had been found combined with oxide of lead, in the brown lead ore of Zimapan in Mexico). Vanadate of lead (johnstonite) from Wanlockhead, and from Beresof, Siberia;—the volborthite of Hess, a vanadate of copper.

CASE 39. Molybdic acid and molybdates;—molybdenum ochre or molybdic acid, as a yellow powder on the sulphuret of this metal, from Sweden, &c.;—molybdate of lead, yellow lead ore or carinthite (also called wulfenite), massive, lamelliform, and crystallized in splendid groups on compact limestone, &c.; chiefly from Bleiberg in Carinthia.

Oxide of chromium and chromates:—chrome-ochre, from several localities;—a suite of specimens of chromate of lead, red lead ore, or crocoisite, from the gold mines of Beresof in Siberia, where it chiefly occurs in a kind of micaceous rock, mixed with particles of quartz and brown iron-stone, and from Brazil;—chromate of lead and copper, called vauquelinite, a concomitant of the Siberian red lead ore;—chrome-iron or chromite, from the department of Var in France, and from Baltimore in Maryland, intermixed with talc stained purple by chromic acid.

Boracic acid, or sassoline (chiefly from Vulcano, one of the Lipari isles), and borates:—borate of soda, the salt known by the names of borax and tinkal, from Tibet, Monte-rotondo, Tuscany, &c.;—hayesine, also called boronatrocalsite, a newly-discovered substance, occurring, accompanied by glauberite and other salts, in the province of Tarapaca, Peru;—borate of magnesia or boracite in separate crystals, and the same embedded in gypsum;—datholite, being a borate with a tri-silicate of lime, from Arendal in Norway; the variety from Sonthofen (supposed to be a distinct species, called humboldtite by Lévy); and the globular-fibrous variety (which has received the name of botryolite), likewise from Arendal.

CASE 40 is set apart for such silicates as contain one or more borates, of which, however, in some cases, it is uncertain how far these may be considered as essential component parts.—To this order belong the species tourmaline and axinite. Among the red-coloured varieties of the former, some of which are called rubellite, the most remarkable deposited here is a specimen of uncommon form and dimensions, which was presented by the king of Ava to the late Colonel Symes, when on an embassy to that country; blue varieties of the same, some of them known by the name of indicolite; a suite of modifications of tourmaline crystals of those colours, as well as of others, such as green of various shades, among which those from Brazil, Elba, and from Campolongo deserve more particular notice. Of the axinite, Werner's Thumerstein, very characteristic specimens from Bourg d'Oisans, Norway, &c., will be found in this Table Case.

CASE 41. In this Case begins the order of the Carbonates.—Carbonate of soda, from various localities.—Carbonate of baryta or witherite, among the specimens of which may be particularized the beautiful groups of double six-sided pyramids, and those of six-sided prismatic crystals.—Barytocalcite, from Alston Moor in Cumberland.—Carbonate of strontia, called strontianite, chiefly from Strontian in Argyleshire, in prismatic and acicular crystals, which latter have sometimes been mistaken for aragonite. The remaining part of this Case is occupied by such specimens of the mineral species called aragonite as have partly been found to contain a few per cent. of carbonate of strontia: they are, however, essentially carbonates of lime, though of a different crystal system;—the tarnowitzite is said to be a plumbiferous variety. Among the more interesting of the regular forms of aragonite here deposited are the loose and variously-grouped simple and hemitrope crystals from Aragon, and from Herrengrund, in Hungary, Kosel, Bohemia, &c., and the fine acicularly-crystallized varieties, in brown iron-stone, from Ilefeld, in volcanic ejections of Vesuvius, &c.: they are continued in CASE 42, in which are also placed several very perfect specimens of the coralloidal variety of aragonite from Eisenertz in Stiria, and Hüttenberg in Carinthia, formerly called flos ferri, &c.: to the massive varieties of this species some of the calcareous deposits of Carlsbad in Bohemia may be referred. The remainder of the Case contains several striking varieties of common carbonate of lime or calcite, some of which have been mistaken for aragonite.

CASES 43 to 45 contain crystallized varieties of calcite or calcspar. Among the specimens placed in the first of these Table Cases may be particularized those illustrative of double refraction, cleavage, supernumerary joints, colour, &c.; likewise the various secondary obtuse and acute rhombohedrons; among the former of which the most common, but not the least striking, is the inverse variety of Haiüy, so called from its being as it were an inversion of the primitive rhombohedron of calcareous spar; and the same with a considerable admixture of quartz, commonly called crystallized sandstone of Fontainebleau, &c.; also many interesting and beautiful specimens, from the Hartz, Derbyshire, &c., of prismatic and pyramidal modifications of the same substance.

CASE 45. Besides additional chiefly prismatic modifications of crystallized calcite, this Table Case contains several belonging to the stalactic and fibrous varieties of that substance, the most characteristic of which latter are those from Cumberland and Sweden, with pearly lustre (which has obtained for the former the appellation of satin-spar), and that in coloured layers from Africa.

CASE 46 contains the remaining varieties of calcite, among which may be specified the well-known depositions from the hot springs of Carlsbad in Bohemia, particularly the pisiform limestone, or pea-stone, as also the globular variety (considered by some as magnesian limestone) found in the bed of a small river near Tivoli, and known by the name of Confetti di Tivoli;—roestone;—the tufaceous limestone, in porous, spongy, cellular, tubular, and other imitative forms, as incrustation on various objects, such as on the human skull here deposited, which was found in the Tiber at Rome; calcareous deposition formed in a square pipe in a coal mine in Somersetshire*; casts made at the baths of San Felippe, where moulds of medals, gems, &c., are placed in suitable situations to receive the spray impregnated with calcareous particles.—Chalk.—Anthraconite or madrepomite.—Marle, &c. Among the varieties of shell limestone the most esteemed for ornamental purposes is the Carinthian lumachella, or fire marble. Polished specimens of such granular, compact, and fibrous varieties of calcite as are familiarly known by the appellation of marbles, and of those that bear the name of alabaster in common with the finer varieties of sulphate of lime.

CASE 47. In this Case, besides some specimens of carbonate of magnesia, or magnesite, from Baudissero and from New Jersey, are placed those substances which, being chiefly composed of carbonate of lime and carbonate of magnesia, are called magnesian limestone, comprising Werner's rhomb-spar, dolomite, and brown spar. Among the varieties of the first of these sub-species are those called miemite, tharandite, and some modifications of pearl spar; among those of dolomite, a remarkable one is that from Pittsfield, Massachusetts, North America, which exhibits a considerable degree of flexibility: and another having the same property will be found among the singular varieties of magnesian limestone from the vicinity of Sunderland.

CASE 48 contains Werner's brown-spar, some of the varieties of which are with difficulty distinguishable from rhomb-spar and from iron-spar; several interesting specimens for figure, colour, and lustre, chiefly from Schemnitz and Kremnitz in Hungary, are deposited in this case.—Carbonate of iron, or siderite and iron-spar, crystallized, fibrous, massive, and botryoidal (sphaerosiderite of Hausmann).—Carbonate of manganese, or manganese spar, crystallized and in globular and botryoidal shapes of various shades of rose colour, on sulphuret of manganese, &c.

CASE 49. One-half of this Glass Case is occupied by the several varieties of carbonate of zinc, or zink-spar (also called calamine in common with the silicate of zinc or smithsonite in Case 26): crystallized, botryoidal, and in other forms, among which are the pseudomorphous crystals, derived from modifications of carbonate of lime (zinc-bloom).—With this is placed the aurichalcite of Bötticher, one of the substances to which the name of kupfer-schaum has been given; it is a carbonate of zinc and of copper, and nearly related to some chemically unexamined varieties of what has been called scaly green calamine of Siberia, &c. (in this table), and to which also the buratite of Delesse appears to belong.—The other half chiefly contains the carbonates of lead, or lead-spar (cerussite of Haid.), among which are the delicately acicular varieties from the Hartz, and from Cornwall, accompanied and partly coloured by green carbonate of copper; the crystallized varieties from Siberia, Mies in Bohemia, &c.;—the pulverulent variety, &c.—Carbonate of bismuth, from the principality of Reuss.—Parisite, from the emerald mines of Muzo, New Granada. To which are added some specimens of the rare carbonates of cerium, as coating on cerite, from Bastnäs;—of yttria on orthite, from Ytterby, Sweden, &c.

* The slab of the table in the middle of the room is composed of a stalagmitic calcareous deposition, which was found investing the interior of a square wooden pipe in Blythe Lead Mine, Derbyshire: the legs of the table are of black marble, from Bakewell. This table was presented by his Grace the Duke of Rutland.

CASE 50. In this and the following Case are deposited the carbonates of copper, viz. the blue copper, or copper-azure, the more remarkable varieties of which are those from Chessy, and from the Bannat, combined with various substances;—the earthy varieties, some of which have been used as pigment sold under the name of mountain-blue;—those crystallized varieties which, passing from the state of blue into that of green carbonate, have, by Haüy, been called cuivre carbonaté épigène.

CASE 51. The green carbonates of copper, among which may be specified the fine and rare varieties of fibrous malachite, in acicular crystals, and massive, with fibrous structure and velvety appearance, accompanied by carbonate of lead, &c.; and, among the specimens of compact malachite, those very characteristic and splendid ones from the Gumashevsk and Turja mines, in the Uralian mountains.

CASE 52. Besides the nitrates, (such as the nitrate of potassa, native nitre or saltpetre, found as efflorescence, mixed with other salts, and as crystalline crusts, from Pulo di Molfetta in Apulia, from near Burgos in Spain, &c.; nitrate of soda, &c. ;) this case contains part of the sulphates:—sulphate of soda, or glauber salt;—thenardite, an anhydrous sulphate of soda, found in crystalline crusts, at the bottom of the briny waters of Espartines in Spain, five leagues from Madrid;—glauberite, a mineral composed of the anhydrous sulphates of soda and of lime, from the salt mines of Villarubia and Aranjuez in Spain, embedded in salt and clay. The rest of this, with half of the next case, is occupied by sulphates of baryta or baroselenite (heavy-spar), among which may be particularized the splendid groups of crystal from Schemnitz in Hungary, and Clausthal in the Hartz, Traversella in Piedmont, the large very perfect crystals from Dufton, Cumberland, &c., the curved-lamella varieties; the columnar, resembling carbonate of lead; the radiated, to which belongs the Bolognese spar, from Monte Paterno, near Bologna, from Bavaria, &c.; the beautiful variety called ketten-spath, or chain-spar, from the Hartz; the fibrous and the granular varieties; the compact, called barytic or ponderous marble, &c.; the cawk of Derbyshire and Staffordshire; fetid baroselenite or hepatite, an intimate mixture of sulphate of baryta with bituminous matter; earthy baroselenite:—also the wolnyne from Muzsay in Hungary is only a variety of sulphate of baryta.

CASE 53. Sulphate of baryta continued, and sulphate of strontia:—among the specimens of the latter salt, to which has been given the name of celestine, on account of the sky-blue tint of some of its varieties, the most remarkable are, the splendid groups of limpid prismatic crystals from La Catolica in Sicily, accompanied by sulphur; those from the vicinity of Bristol, from St. Beat in the Dép. des Landes; those from Falkenstein in Tyrol; from the salt mines of Aranjuez; the acicular variety in the hollows of compact sulphate of strontia from Montmartre; in the fissures of flint and in chalk, from Meudon; the radiated and fibrous celestine from Pennsylvania, &c.

CASE 54 contains the sulphates of lime, the principal varieties of which are,—the selenite* or sparry gypsum, in detached crystals and splendid groups, from Bex in Switzerland, Montmartre near Paris, Oxford, &c. ; from St. Jago di Compostella, stained by red iron ochre ; the fibrous gypsum with silky lustre, from Derbyshire, Switzerland, Montserrat ; the granular gypsum or alabaster ; the compact variety, to which belongs the stalagmitical gypsum from Guadaloupe ; the scaly gypsum (chaux sulphatée niviforme of Haüy) from Montmartre, common earthy gypsum, &c.—Anhydrous sulphate of lime, or anhydrite, (also called cube-spar and muriacite,) crystalline, fibrous, granular, and compact ; to the last of which belong some of the Italian varieties known by the name of bardiglio and bardiglione, as also the singular fibrous-compact variety, familiarly called tripe-stone (pierre des trippes), from the salt mines of Wieliczka.

CASE 55. Sulphates continued :—sulphate of magnesia, or epsomite, generally occurring in crystalline fibres : the fine variety from Calatayud in Aragon ; also the halotrichite (haar-salz) of Idria belongs to this species, and the stalactic cobalt-vitriol, as it is called, from Herrengrund in Hungary, which is only sulphate of magnesia, coloured red by oxide of cobalt.—Polyhalite, a chemical compound of several sulphates, formerly mistaken for anhydrous sulphate of lime : compact and fibrous, from the salt formation of Berchtesgaden in Bavaria, and Ischel in Austria.—Sulphate of zinc, white vitriol or goslarite.—Sulphate of iron, green vitriol, or melantherite, (a salt mostly produced by the decomposition of iron pyrites,) in beautiful large rhombohedral crystals, from Bodenmais in Bavaria, and massive, and in stalactic-fibrous forms, such as the specimens from the Rammelsberg, in the Hartz, where it also occurs in the form of yellow scales, known by the name of misy ; and as concretions of a red colour, called vitriol-roth or botryogene : the plumose vitriol (federsalz), and a botryoidal-reniform substance called bergbutter, are nothing but casual mixtures of sulphate of iron and hydrous sulphate of alumina.—Sulphate of copper, or copper vitriol (cyanose, Beud.) :—the finest sky-blue specimens here deposited, together with the stalactic, fibrous, and crystallized varieties, (the large group of crystals is artificially prepared,) are from Herrengrund in Hungary. There are also two or three scarce Siberian mineral substances placed in this Case (one of them, the brochantite), which appear to be subsulphates of copper, but stand in need of more accurate chemical examination.—Sulphate of uranium oxide or johannite, a very rare mineral substance, from Joachimsthal, Bohemia.—Sulphate of lead, lead-vitriol, or anglesite, of which we have a suite of specimens with brilliant and well-defined crystals from Badenweiler in Suabia, from the Parys mine in Anglesea, &c. ; the sulphato-carbonate (lanarkite), and *sulphato-tricarbonat*e (suzannite), the cupreous sulphato-carbonate (caledonite) of lead, &c., from Leadhills, &c.—Sulphates of alumina :—common alum, crystallized, fibrous, &c., from various places ; and the hydrous sub-sulphate of alumina, called aluminite, or websterite, from Sussex and from Halle in the territory of Magdeburg, which was by some mistaken for pure alumina, and by others for hydrate of alumina with mechanically admixed sulphate of lime : it must not be confounded with another substance, also called aluminite or alum-stone, (alunite of some mineralogists,) from Tolfa, &c., which is a basic sulphate of alumina and potassa.

In the small Table opposite Table Case 54 are placed some specimens of lazurite (lasurstein, or lapis lazuli), which furnishes the valuable pigment called ultra-marine ;—the haiÿne, and a few other of the imperfectly known silicates of soda, lime, and alumina combined with sulphates.

CASE 56. Arsenious acid and arseniates : the former (also called arsenic-bloom, or octahedral oxide of arsenic) is frequently confounded with arseniate of lime, and the white octahedral crystals of it, often seen in collections on realgar and orpiment, are generally artificially produced in the interior of mines.—The arseniates in this Glass Case are :—arseniate of lime, called pharmacolite, chiefly in white acicular crystals, from Wittichen in Suabia, and Riegelsdorf in Hessia.—Arseniate of iron or pharmacosiderite, which occurs only crystallized, chiefly in cubes (whence Werner's name of Würfel-ertz), from Cornwall, from San-Antonio-Pereira, Brazil, on hydrous oxide of iron, &c. ;—skorodite, a substance which appears to be closely allied to Bournon's cupreous arseniate of iron—also the beudantite of Livy, a mineral from Horhausen or the Rhine, is said to be pharmacosiderite.—Arseniates of copper, chiefly from Cornwall, consisting of the foliated arseniate or copper-mica, the lenticular arseniate or lironite, and the olivenite, or olive-ore of Werner, which are formed into five species by Bournon, but their exact composition remains still to be ascertained by exact chemical analyses. The euchroite also belongs to these, and the kupferschaum of Werner, at least that from Falkenstein in Tyrol: some other varieties bearing that name appearing to be referable to carbonates of copper and of zinc.—Arseniate of cobalt, or red cobalt (erythrine, Beud.), comprising the earthy (cobalt crust) and the radiated (cobalt-bloom) varieties, from Salfeld, Allemont, &c.—Arseniate of nickel.

CASE 57. Among the various phosphates deposited in this Case may be particularized—phosphate of iron, Werner's vivianite, in variously-grouped crystals (from Bodenmais in Bavaria, from Cornwall, from Fernando Po, &c.), massive and pulverulent: among the specimens of the latter are the massive variety of New Jersey, and several earthy blue varieties in clay, peat, wood, &c. : the chalcosiderite of Ullmann, the pittiate of Hausmann, to which also appears to belong Breithaupt's diadochite, Werner's green iron earth, and Thomson's mullicite, are likewise phosphates of iron.—Phosphate of manganese or triphite, from Chanteloube, near Limoges, in the department of Haute Vienne in France, where several other mineral substances have lately been found, the essential component parts of which are iron, manganese, and phosphoric acid.—Triphylite, a phosphate of iron, manganese, and lithia ;—delvauxite, &c.—Phosphate of copper, of which the best characterized species are—the octahedral, or libetheniet, from Libethen in Hungary ; and the prismatic, or rhenite, from Rheinbreitenbach, where it occurs with quartz which sometimes passes into calcedony.—The lagilite of Hermann, a hydrous phosphate of copper, from the Ural.—Phosphate of oxide of uranium :—the yellow uranite or uran-mica from Autin, Limoges, Bodenmais; and the green uranite, or chalcolite, chiefly from Cornwall and Saxony: both of them phosphates of oxide of uranium, but distinct by containing, the former a small portion of phosphate of lime, and the latter an equivalent portion of phosphate of copper.—Phosphate of yttria, or phosphyttrite, a very scarce mineral substance, first found in the granite of Lindenäs in Norway, and subsequently, in equally small quantities, at Ytterby in Sweden.—Phosphates of alumina, to which belong—the wavellite, a substance which was originally mistaken for a hydrate of pure alumina, and therefore called hydrargillite, from Devonshire, Ireland, Greenland, from Amberg, in Bavaria (called lasionite), from Aussig in Bohemia, on sandstone, &c.—the gibbsite (see Table 19), the varieties of which contain phosphoric acid in varying proportions;—the klaprothite, called also blue spar, and azurite, and is therefore sometimes confounded with the lapis lazuli;—together with some other substances of which no exact analyses have as yet been published, though they are known to be chiefly composed of alumina in combination with phosphoric acid, such as—the calcite, or real turquois (firúzah in Persian), an opaque gem found chiefly at Nishapur, in the province of Khorasan, Persia, in nodules or as small veins traversing a ferrugino-argillaceous rock, and greatly esteemed on account of its beautiful blue colour, which will in most cases be sufficient to distinguish it both from the blue silicate of copper and from fossil bones (particularly teeth) impregnated with blue phosphate of iron or carbonate of copper, some of which substances are vulgarly called occidental turquoises.—The kakoxene, a rare substance of a crystalline diverging-fibrous structure and yellow colour, found in the fissures of argillaceous iron-stone, near Zbirow in Bohemia;—and the childrenite from Tavistock, in Devonshire: both which mineral substances contain alumina and oxide of iron combined with phosphoric acid, but require to be subjected to closer chemical examination.—Phosphate of magnesia: the very scarce wagnerite, from the valley of Holgraben, near Werfen, in Salzburg.—The mengite and edwardsite are placed in the Table Case, they being by some considered as phosphates of lanthan and cerium oxides.

In two of the supplemental Table Cases (57 A and B) in this room are deposited such phosphates as are combined with chlorides; as likewise the rare combinations of the latter with carbonates and silicates.

CASE 57 A. Pyromorphite, a combination of phosphate of lead and chloride of lead, generally divided into brown lead ore and green lead ore: among the varieties of the former, the more remarkable are the large six-sided prisms from Huelgoet in Brittany; of the latter we have the massive botryoidal (traubenertz), the spicular, and crystallized varieties, of various shades of green passing into greenish-white, into yellow, and orange. To these are added phosph-arseniates and also some arseniates of lead, from Siberia, Cumberland, Saxony, &c., whose chemical constitution is not yet perfectly understood; in CASE 57 B. Phosphate of lime combined with chloride of calcium, in some varieties of which this latter constituent is replaced by fluoride of calcium: among the specimens may be particularized several very scarce and interesting crystallizations of Werner's apatite, such as the large violet-coloured crystals from St. Petersburg; the groups from Ehrenfriedersdorf, Maggia on St. Gothard, Traversella in Piedmont, &c.; the variety called asparagus-stone, from the Greiner in Tyrol, and particularly the specimens from Jumilla in Murcia; the Norwegian apatite called moroxite; also the phosphorite or fibrous and compact phosphate of lime, and the pulverulent variety, known by the name of earth of Marmorosh, which was formerly considered as a variety of fluoride of calcium (fluat talcapatite of lime).—The only carbonate found combined with a chloride is the horn-lead, or chloro-carbonate of lead: the unique suite of crystals deposited in this Table Case is from Cromford Level, near Matlock.

To the silicates with chlorides are referred the sodalite, of which, however, some varieties stand in need of more accurate chemical examination;—the eudialyte, which occurs in West Greenland, accompanied by the preceding mineral substances;—the pyrosmalite, from the iron mines of Nordmark, in Wermeland, massive and in perfect crystals.

CASE 58 contains the fluorides, of which by far the most important species is the fluoride of calcium, generally called fluat of lime and fluor-spar: among its numerous varieties may be particularized, the rose-coloured crystals from Chamouni; the phosphorescent massive fluor-spar, called chlorophane, from Siberia; the varieties called fortification-fluor; earthy and compact fluor, &c., chiefly from Derbyshire and Saxony, are arranged in Case 59.—The very scarce fluoride of aluminum, from Cornwall, called fuellite.—Fluoride of calcium, yttrium, and cerium;—ytrocerite; and some related minerals from Finbo and Brodbo near Fahlun in Sweden.—Fluoride of sodium and aluminum, called cryolite, found in West Greenland: pure and mixed with brown iron-stone, galena, &c.;—the chiolite, from the Ural.

CASE 58 A, is appropriated to some of the silicates containing fluorides:—to these belongs the topaz, here illustrated by a considerable series of crystals of Saxon, Brazilian, and Siberian varieties, among which there are several new modifications; Saxon varieties embedded in the topaz rock, an aggregate of topaz, shorl, quartz, and sometimes mica; Brazilian topazes, yellow and pink, embedded in rock crystal, &c.—Also the pyrophyssalite from Fahlun in Sweden, and the pycnite, formerly considered as a variety of beryl, are referable to topaz;—the chondrodite (maclurite, brucite) from New Jersey, and from Pargas in Finland; and some varieties of mica and lepidolite, (Case 32,) likewise contain fluoric acid.

CASE 59 contains the chlorides.—Chloride of sodium (muriate of soda), or rock salt: the most interesting specimens here deposited of this important mineral substance are, the crystallized varieties; the massive and fibrous coloured varieties, the red, chiefly from Hallein in Tyrol, the blue and violet from Ischel in Upper Austria; the stalactical rock salt from Mexico, &c.—Chloride of ammonium or sal-ammoniac, from Vesuvius, Saint Etienne en Forez, &c.—Chlorides of lead: to these belong—the cotunnite from Vesuvius; the mendipite or basic muriate of lead from Mendip; and the murio-carbonate of lead (phosgenite) from Matlock in Derbyshire, of which most rare substance a very perfect suite of specimens will be found in Case 57 B.—Chloride of copper or atacamite, in crystallized splendid groups, chiefly from Remolinos, Solidad and Veta negra della Pampa larga, in Chili;—what was originally termed Peruvian green sand, or atacamite, (being obtained from the desert of Atacama between Chili and Peru,) is now known to be artificially produced by pounding the crystallized and laminar varieties for the purpose of using the sand (arenilla) in lieu of blotting paper.—Chloride of silver, called also horn-silver and corneous silver: amorphous, botryoidal, in laminae and crystallized in minute cubes and octahedrons, from Veta Negra in Chili, the Saxon Erzgebirge, &c.—Chloride of mercury, or horn-quick-silver, with native mercury from Moschel-Landsberg, Almaden, &c.

CASES 60 and 60 A contain a small collection of organico-chemical, or such mineralized substances as are composed after the manner of organic bodies, from which they derive their origin. They are divided into salts, resins, bitumen, and coal. To the salts belong—the mellate of alumina, also called mellite or honey-stone, found in beds of brown coal at Artern in Thuringia; and the oxalate of iron, formerly known by the name of resinous iron, but to which that of humboldtite or oxalite is now generally given.—With these is also placed the struvite, a recently-formed phosphate of magnesia and ammonia, discovered in innumerable crystals on laying the foundation of St. Nicholas's church, at Hamburg, in 1845.—To the resins are referred—the amber, of the varieties of which a considerable suite is deposited, many of them inclosing insects, &c.; to which, for the sake of comparison, are added, specimens of recent copal, likewise containing insects;—fossil copal or Highgate resin;—retinite or retinasphalt, found at Bovey; together with some other related resinous substances;—the idrialite, to which the bituminous cinabar or brand-ertz is partly referable. To the bitumina belong the varieties of mineral pitch of all degrees of consistence, from the fluid naphtha and mineral oil or petroleum, to the solid and hard asphalt and jet or pitch coal;—the elaterite or elastic bitumen of Derbyshire (a suite of specimens exhibiting all degrees of solidity, from that of honey to that of a compact ligneous substance). With these is also placed the dapèche, an inflammable fossil substance found by Humboldt in South America, having several properties of the common caoutchouc or Indian rubber;—the hatchettine, a bituminous substance from Merthyr Tydvil in South Wales; the scheererite; the hartite, and the ixolyte of Haidinger, &c.—Coal: black coal, and brown coal—of these a few specimens only are deposited, their different varieties being rather objects for a geological collection.

FOSSILS.

Room I.

The collections of Organic Remains begin, in Room I. with that of the Fossil Vegetables, at present deposited chiefly in the Wall Cases of the S. and W. sides of the room. A systematic botanical arrangement has been adopted, so far as the limited space and the as yet doubtful nature of many of those fossil remains admitted of it.

CASE I is set apart for the small number of fossils apparently of the class of submerged ALGÆ, such as Fucoïdes, Confervites, &c. In the same Case are provisionally placed those impressions on coal slate, of plants with verticillated leaves, known by the generic names of Asterophyllites, Annularia, &c., and supposed by some to be referable to the NAIADES; as also a few that appear to bear affinity to the MARSILEACEÆ, such as Pilularites, Solenites, &c. ; together with some other vegetable remains, the nature of which is not yet determined.

The upper division of Case 2 is occupied by the EQUISETACEÆ, most of which may be united under the generic name of Calamites, the absence of the sheaths, by which the latter are said to be distinguishable from real Equiseta, being a character not to be depended upon. The species of Calamites, almost all from the rocks of the most ancient coal formation, are far from being satisfactorily determined, their internal structure being entirely unknown. The species of Calamitea of Cotta, (Case E.,) which exhibit a peculiar organic structure, can scarcely be said to belong to the same natural order. The genus Phyllothea of Brongniart, from the coal sand-stone of Port Jackson, in which the sheaths are prolonged into leaves, is a distinct genus of this order ; as is likewise the Equisetum Lyellii from Pounceford.

The lower division of Case 2, and part of 3, contain the Ferns (FILICES), most of them as impressions in coal-shale. Many of them bear a strong resemblance to existing, especially tropical, species ; and fructification, distinctly exhibiting the sporangia variously disposed in sori, &c., has latterly been observed in several species ; but the classification founded on characters derived from them and the distribution and ramifications of the nerves, though of great importance in the classification of recent ferns, is obviously, at least in the present state of our knowledge, inapplicable to those in a fossil state. The arrangement and the generic names here adopted, with occasional deviation, are those proposed in the concluding numbers of the late Count Sternberg's work. The species, as far as determined, are all named ; the synonymy being added in most cases where it appeared requisite.

In the upper division of Case 3, and part of 4 and 5, are placed those genera which are generally supposed to belong to the family of LYCOPODIACEÆ, of which Lepidodendron of Sternberg (Sagenaria of Presl.) is the principal one. Much uncertainty still prevails in the determination of the genera and species of this family. Some of them appear to exhibit an internal structure intermediate between that of the Lycopodiaceæ and the Coniferæ ; but Lepidodendron punctatum of Sternberg, (of the unique specimen of which, in Mr. Cotta's collection, a portion is seen in Case 3,) presents the organization of a real arborescent fern. Nearly allied to the Lepidodendra are several vegetable fossils, considered as distinct genera, among which may be specified Lepidophyllum and Lepidostrobis (Case 4) of Brongniart, (the former perhaps only the leaves, the latter the fruits of species of Lepidodendron or Lycopodites,) the Ulodendron (Lepidod. ornatisimum, Sternb.), the Bothrodendron of Lindley, the Rhytidolepis of Sternb., &c.

In the upper division of Case 5 are placed the species of Sigillaria, (including Favularia,) Brong., which are very distinct in their structure from arborescent Ferns, with which they have by some been arranged. To these also belongs the Megaphyton Nöhd. ; of which the original specimen figured and described by Artis is deposited here. In the lower division of the same Case are seen some very interesting vegetable remains, some of which undoubtedly are referable to the family of ASPHODELEÆ, such as the Dracena Benstedii, (from the Iguanodon quarry near Maidstone,) so called after the discoverer of the fine specimens presented to the Museum. To these are added very perfect specimens, from Dr. Mantell's collection, of the Clathraria Lyellii from the Wealden: the generic name, formerly synonymous with Sigillaria, is now exclusively given to this remarkable vegetable. Sternbergia transversa of Artis, (Artisia of Sternberg,) hitherto described and figured from very imperfect specimens, also probably belongs to this natural order. Another interesting vegetable of Dr. Mantell's discovery is the Endogenites erosa, of which many specimens from Hastings, &c., are deposited, exhibiting its structure: it seems related to the Palmæ, and is no doubt a congener of Cotta's Porosus marginatus, of which a specimen is added; but neither of those generic appellations appear to be admissible. There are also remains of real PALMÆ in this Case, such as the fruits from Sheppey, the cut and polished specimens of wood from Antigua, &c. Whether or not Nöggerathia flabelliformis and a related species are referable to them, remains doubtful.

The upper division of Case 6 contains only specimens of Stigmaria, a genus totally distinct from any other known of the natural orders of Lycopodiaceæ or Filices, to both of which its species have been referred by authors. Below these, in the same Case, are placed various interesting specimens belonging to species of genera of CONIFERÆ, such as Pinus, Araucaria, Thuyses, Volzia, Brachyphyllum, &c. In another part of the same Case are deposited interesting remains of the natural order of CYCADEÆ, (among which may be specified the fine specimens from the oolitic formation at Whitby,) of various species of Pterophyllum, Zamia, Ctenis, and (on the top of the Case) the globular trunks (two of them cut and polished) of Mantellia nidiformis of Brongniart, from the oolite of Portland.— Various other vegetable remains, especially of Dicotyledonous plants, such as those from the freshwater formation of Oeningen, &c., will hereafter be arranged in Table Cases to be made for their reception.

On the lower shelves of the Cases 3, 4, and 5, is placed a very extensive series of cut and polished specimens of fossil wood, most of them from the red sandstone formation of Chemnitz in Saxony, and New Paka in Bohemia, and many of them described and figured in Cotta's work: Die Dendrolithen, Dresden, 1832. The genera Tubicaulis, Psaronius (Staar-stein), and Porosus, no doubt belong to the Filices; many of the remainder are referable to the Palms, and a still greater portion of them to the Coniferæ; in the vicinity of which natural orders they are respectively placed in the Wall Cases.

The slabs of sandstone on the north wall of this Room, with the tracks of an unknown animal called Chirotherium, are, that on the left, from the quarries of Hildburghausen in Saxony, and that in the centre, from those of Storton Hill, near Liverpool (the latter presented by J. Tomkinson, Esq.). On the right hand are placed slabs from the same new red sandstone formation, with equally remarkable imprints of various dimensions, called Ornithichnites, being very like foot-marks of birds: they occur in the sandstone beds near Greenfield, Massachusetts, at a cataract in the Connecticut River known by the name of Turner's Falls.

In this room are also placed two geological models, by the late Mr. Elias Hull; one representing part of the High Peak of Derbyshire; the other, the lake district of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Lancashire.

Room II.

In this room are arranged the Fossil Fishes; and, with regard to the classification adopted, it may be observed that it does not differ very materially from the system of M. Agassiz, as developed in the "Recherches sur les Poissons Fossiles," yet modifications have been made, and in these modifications the views of Professors Müller and Owen have chiefly been consulted. The four great divisions of Placoids, Ganoids, Ctenoids, and Cycloids, established by M. Agassiz,—divisions founded upon differences observable in the form and structure of the scales,—if they are not all of them strictly natural, may still be referred to, the definitions applying, in a general way, to the groups as here arranged.

The first division of the Fishes (the Placoids) comprises the Sharks and Rays, and allied groups. Having a more or less cartilaginous skeleton, this part is rarely preserved in a fossil state, hence our knowledge of the extinct species is derived chiefly from such hard and durable parts as the teeth and spines,—small objects which are more conveniently arranged in horizontal cases, and will be found in the small tables under the windows. The first Table is entirely occupied by teeth of various species of sharks, found, for the most part, in the lower tertiary and chalk formations. The second Case contains—on one side, numerous vertebræ of the shark tribe, some of which indicate animals of very large dimensions; on the other side is a series of "palates" of the Ray and Skate tribe; they consist of the masses of teeth with which the jaws were furnished, viz. a central row of teeth, in the form of flat, transverse, enamelled plates, with angular margins dovetailing with smaller, and equally flat-crowned teeth. The plates in question, being implanted on jaws in which the bone has but a small proportion of earthy matter (being chiefly cartilaginous), are most frequently found detached. Near the "palates" are placed some scales and barbed spines, belonging to the same tribe of fishes. The scales are composed of a rounded, hard disc (originally attached to the skin), from the centre of which springs a tooth-like prickle. Similar scales are seen in the Thornback, a common kind of skate found on the British coast.* The barbed spines were attached to the upper surface of the long slender tails of the "Sting Rays" (Myliobatis). The visitor will see similar spines upon examining the recent fishes of this tribe which are arranged in the adjoining gallery; and his attention may at the same time be directed to the species of Sharks placed in Room V. of the same gallery. The Port Jackson Shark, and several other sharks deposited in the same Case with it, have, it will be seen, two back fins, and each of these supported in front by a strong spine: the teeth of the fish mentioned, moreover, present very remarkable forms. It is here that the visitor will find the nearest representatives of the teeth and spines arranged in the remaining Table Cases of fossil specimens.

* The skin in the Placoid fishes is protected by hardened bodies which are extremely variable in size and structure, but never assume the appearance of true scales, comparable to those of ordinary fishes. Commonly, they are of a star-like form, with a central projecting point; and often (as in the true Sharks) they are extremely minute and crowded together, and it is the skin of such fishes which forms the article of commerce termed shagreen.

The second order, Ganoids, has derived its name from the lustre of the scales by which the fishes are protected, and is further distinguished by the nature of the substances of which the scales are composed, each scale consisting of a bony layer next the skin, and an enamelled external portion. The most common form of scale here is rhomboidal. Ganoid fishes range from some of the oldest fossiliferous rocks upwards; are most abundant in the lowest jurassic formations and the Trias, and but feebly represented at the present time. In a large portion of the species of this division the vertebral column passes into the upper lobe of the tail; it is bent upwards at a slight angle, and has the fin, or ray portion, springing entirely from the under side: this form of tail is termed Heterocercal. Others have the tail of the ordinary structure (Homocercal), where the rays which support the fin spring from the terminal part of the vertebral column, and diverge vertically from that centre. In the Heterocercal fishes, the two lobes of the tail (the upper one formed, as it were, by a portion of the body of the fish, and the lower consisting of a more or less pointed fin) are unequal; whilst in the Homocercal the lobes of the tail are generally equal.

The order of Ganoids is commenced in the Wall Cases 1 and 2 by the Cephalaspides, a family peculiar to the Devonian period. One of the most perfectly-preserved specimens of this family is the Cephalaspis Lyellii, so named after its discoverer, by whom the specimen in Case 1 was presented. It is from the old red sandstone of Scotland, from which formation and locality the remaining specimens of the family here exhibited have been derived. In the same Case are numerous specimens of Pterichthys; they are more or less crushed and imperfect, but in the examination of the entire series it will be seen that they were fishes in which the body was protected by large bony plates, was convex above, and flat beneath; that the pectoral fins were represented by large bony appendages, situated close to the head; and that the tail was tolerably long and tapering, and furnished only with very small scales: traces of fins have been observed on this part. For a detailed account of the structure of these fishes the visitor may be referred to "The Old Red Sandstone," by Mr. Hugh Miller, and to a paper by Sir Philip Grey Egerton, in the Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society, Vol. IV. p. 302. The genus Coccosteus, of which there are several examples in Case 2, contains nearly-allied fishes.

The second division of the Ganoid fishes—the Cœlacanthi, is illustrated by numerous remarkable species contained in Cases 3 to 6. The name was suggested by the circumstance that the spines, or rather the rays of the fins, are hollow. The fishes of this family are found in the Devonian rocks, and in succeeding strata, up to the chalk. From the chalk of Sussex is a fine series of specimens, originally forming part of the Mantellian collection. They form the genus Macropoma. Among the species from the older formations attention may be particularly directed to the remains of a gigantic fish (Asterolepis Asmusii) found in the old red sandstone of Riga, and presented by Sir Roderick I. Murchison. The remains in question are placed on the top of Case 3. Another very large species is the Holoptychius Hibberti, from the carboniferous formation at Burdie House, near Edinburgh; and the specimen of Holoptychius Nobilissimus (in Case 3) discovered in the old red sandstone of Clashbinnie, near Perth, by the Rev. James Noble, is a very instructive example of the family, being one of the most perfectly preserved specimens.

Case 7 is devoted to the species of the third family of the order, viz., the Dipterines—fishes with a heterocercal tail; with tolerably large rhomboidal scales, and provided with two dorsal as well as two anal, fins. They are from the old red sandstone and coal measures, and the specimens exhibited are chiefly from Scotland.

The small family which follows—the Acanthodians, forms a group, the species of which, like the preceding, are from the Devonian rocks. It is represented in Case 8 by the genera Acanthodes, Diplacanthus, Cheiracanthus, and Cheirolepis. The species have all of them remarkably minute scales; the head is large, the body rather short and tapering, and terminating by a heterocercal tail. In three of the genera there is but one dorsal fin, but in Diplacanthus there are two of these fins. Most of the species have the fins in question supported in front by a spine.

In the lower part of the Case are arranged the genera Pygopterus and Acrolepis, from the copper-slate of Mansfeld, Thuringia. They form part of the great family of the Sauroids, which occupies Cases 9 to 12 inclusive.

The Sauroid division contains species which exhibit both the heterocercal and the homocercal structure of tail, and are divided accordingly into two minor groups: they have conical teeth mixed with minute prickly teeth. The scales vary considerably in form. This family presents living examples in the Bony Pikes (Lepidosteus) of the rivers and lakes of North America, and a nearly allied fish (Polypterus) found in the Nile; and, in fossil species, it is represented in nearly all geological strata down to the Devonian period.

The Lepidoids occupy the Cases 13 to 20. They have the same rhomboidal, enamelled scales as the Bony Pikes, but in general form they are usually shorter, and have a greater vertical diameter than the Sauroids: their jaws are provided with numerous teeth, which are more or less conical, but somewhat blunt. Very well-preserved specimens of the family will be seen in Cases 18 and 19 among the species of Lepidotus, Dapedius, and Tetragonolepis, which are from the lias and oolitic formations. Some of the members of this division are found in the Devonian rocks, whilst, on the other hand, they are known to occur also in the lower tertiary beds, but no living species has been discovered.

As in the preceding family, the Lepidoidei are some of them heterocercal, and some homocercal.

The last family of the fishes with ganoid scales is the Pycnodonts, of which all the principal genera will be found in Cases 21 and 22; and, arranged with the more or less perfect specimens of the fishes, will be found the isolated teeth, which, in their form and structure, are very remarkable in this division. They are often rounded, and implanted in the jaw like the paving stones of the road, the crowns being but moderately convex: usually there are several rows in each jaw. The oblong and somewhat wedge-shaped masses containing several rows of teeth (a central row of larger, and lateral rows of smaller teeth), and these arranged symmetrically, form the palatal portion of the upper jaw. These teeth are admirably adapted for crushing shell fish, and, no doubt, such was the food of the Pycnodonts. They were of a short form, and the body was high and compressed; a large proportion of the species are from the Jurassic rocks; they occur also in the chalk, and in the tertiary formations, but none exist in the present seas.

On the lower shelves of Case 22 are placed the genera of the small family of Scleroderms, a group which is very isolated in its characters. The remarkable genus Blochius is here represented by a fine specimen of B. longirostris, from the Eocene of Monte Bolca; and there is a fine series of the Dercetis from the chalk of Lewes.

In the preceding two great divisions of fossil fishes, many of the families of which they are composed are extinct, and a very large proportion of the species are confined to the geological strata beneath the chalk, whilst those which now come under consideration belong entirely to the chalk and tertiary formations, and the families have living representatives. They constitute several important sections, though somewhat arbitrarily divided into Ctenoids and Cycloids. The species arranged in Cases 23 to 27 inclusive have the Ctenoid structure of scale, namely, a horny scale with the free edge serrated; of this division the Perches may be regarded as typical. In Case 24 a fine fossil species, the Perca lepidota, from Eningen, may be noticed as forming a good example of the group.

Among specimens of other genera belonging to the Percoids may be mentioned the fine series from the Sussex chalk, of Beryx ornatus (Case 23, upper shelves), which formed part of Dr. Mantell's rich collection.

Of the few fossil Sparoids, or Breams (Case 25, lower shelves), the Sparnodus macrophthalmus, from Monte Bolca, and the Sciænurus Bowerbankii, from Sheppey, may be mentioned: all the fishes of this family are from more recent formations than the chalk, as is also the case with the species of the Cottoids or Bullheads (Case 26), the Goboids or Gobies, and the Teuthies of Cuvier, most of the fossil representatives of which families are from Monte Bolca. The Mugilidæ (Case 26) is here represented by the Mugil princeps, from the tertiary formation of Aix, in Provence.

Among the fossil species belonging to the family of the Chatodons (Case 26, middle), all from Monte Bolca, and more recent tertiary formations, may be particularized the very perfect specimen (with counterpart) of that most singular fish, the Semiophorus velifer, from the above locality.

The principal genus of the family of Aulostomes (Case 26, lower shelves) is Fistularia, one species of which occurs at Monte Bolca; the other, Fistularia Konigii, Agass., in the slate of Engi, Canton Glaris.

The fourth Order, the CYCLOID FISHES, (so denominated from the circular form of the scales, consisting of corneous layers and having their posterior margin entire,) is represented by the fishes contained in the remaining Cases, 27 to 35 inclusive; commencing with the Scomberoids, which occupy Cases 27 and 28, and the upper shelves of Case 29.

Among the most ancient of the family of Scomberoids, Cuv., are the species of the genera Palæorhynchum, Palimphyes, Archæus, Isurus, and Anenchelum, in the slate of Glaris, of which a suite of characteristic specimens is here deposited; the chalk of Lewes has furnished instructive specimens exhibiting the dentition of Enchodus halocyon. Among those from Monte Bolca, the more prominent are the Carangopsis dorsalis, the Gasteronemus rhombus, &c.; the heads, &c., of a species of Cybium, from Sheppey, from which latter locality are also some species of Tetrapterus, a genus of the family of Xiphoids. (Case 29, lower shelves.)

The family of Pleuronects (Case 29, upper shelves) is represented by one genus only, namely Rhombus, having one fossil species, the elegant R. minimus, smaller than any of the recent species, from Monte Bolca: the specimen here preserved was presented, together with specimens of the Semiophorus, by Chambers Hall, Esq.

In Case 30 (lower shelves) will be found the few remains of Siluroid fishes. They consist of some portions of a species referred to the genus Pimelodus, from the Sewalik Hills, presented by Major Cautley, and the specimens upon which Mr. Dixon founded his species, Silurus Egertoni, from the Eocene of Bracklesham.

Of the family of Sphyrænoïds (Case 32, upper shelves), the genera deposited are mostly known only by portions of the jaws and teeth, such as those of the different species of Saurocephalus described and figured in M. Agassiz' great work, where also are to be found several delineations from specimens forming part of the series of Hypsodon Lewesiensis; these latter placed on the lower shelves.

All species belonging to the family of the Cyprinoids or Carps (Cases 33) are fresh-water fishes. The most interesting of those here deposited are the large and most perfect specimens of Tinca furcata and T. leptosoma, from Oeningen—the locality from which one of the smaller species of Leuciscus derives its name; the largest species of the latter genus, L. Hartmanni, is from the tertiary formation of Steinheim, in Würtemberg; the small L. papyraceus, from the lignite called paper coal, of Bonn and Bareuth, to which species also the impressions in semiopal, from Bohemia, appear to belong.

Among the Esocids or pikes (Case 34), the fine suite of specimens of Esox lepidota from Oeningen deserve particular notice, as likewise the large Sphenolepis squamosseus, from Aix, in Provence, and the Sphenolepis Cuvieri, of very rare occurrence in the gypsum of Montmartre, and named after its illustrious discoverer, by whom it was first noticed in his Recherches sur les Ossemens fossiles.

The Halecoids (Cases 35 and 36), or Herrings, begin with the chalk, and are frequent in more recent formations: of those from the chalk, may be mentioned the Clupea Scheuchzeri, megaptera, &c., from the so-called slate of Glaris; and, above all, the considerable suite of specimens (many of them figured in Agassiz' work) of Osmeroides, first described as Salmo Lewesiensis by Dr. Mantell, by whom they were obtained from the quarries in the immediate vicinity of Lewes, and most successfully extricated from the chalk;—from the same locality, and likewise from the Mantellian collection, are the almost unique specimens of Acrognathus Boops and Aulolepis typus, figured, and provisionally placed with the Halecoids, in the same work. To these are added specimens of the singularly-preserved angmarset, (Salmo Grœnlandicus of Bloch, Mallotus villosus of Cuvier,) which occur in the shape of elongated nodules or hard argillaceous mummies, at the Sukkertop, on the West Coast of Greenland.

The few remains referable to the Eel family (Murænoids) will be found in the lower shelves of Case 36.

The specimens in Cases 37 to 40 belong to the Order of Placoid fishes, consisting of spines of Asteracanthus, Oracanthus, which were too large to be arranged with the remains of allied genera in the small Table Cases, and which have already been noticed.

ROOM III.

Excepting the two Cases 7 and 11, the whole of the Wall Cases in this Room are devoted to Reptilian remains; and amongst them may be first noticed the Dinosauria, which group contains the largest terrestrial species, such as the Iguanodon and Megalosaurus. In the Middle Case (No. 9), on the north side of the Room, are arranged the remains of the gigantic Iguanodon; firstly, and in the centre, the large slab of Kentish rag from Mr. Bensted's quarry near Maidstone, containing a great portion of the skeleton of a young individual; to the right of this will be found portions of the skull and lower jaw, and the teeth of different specimens of the same species; and to the left, extending into Case 8, are nearly all the more characteristic parts of various Iguanodons, chiefly from the wealden formation at Tilgate, and in the Isle of Wight. These specimens are mostly from the collection of the late Dr. Mantell. The remainder of the Case to the left (No. 8) is occupied by the remains of other gigantic reptiles from the wealden and upper oolitic formations, including the Megalosaurus and Cetiosaurus. On the right of the centre (Case No. 10) are the Crocodilian remains, among the specimens may be noticed the slender snouted Crocodilians, in which the vertebræ are biconcave, including the Teleosaurus Chapmanni from the lias of Whitby, and the other Teleosauri from the lias of Germany. The beautiful specimen contained in a slab of white lias from Monheim, in Franconia, is well worthy of particular notice; it was originally figured and described by Soemmering in the Memoirs of the Academy of Munich, under the name of Crocodylus priscus, this is on the upper shelves of the Case; on the lower shelves will be found the remains of the Hylæosaurus, including the large block from Tilgate Forest, discovered by Dr. Mantell, which contains a considerable series of vertebræ, dermal spines and other parts of this singular reptile. Among the Crocodilians with the ordinary form of vertebræ, the body, or central part, being concave in front and convex behind, attention may be directed to the skull of the Crocodylus Toliapicus, mentioned by Cuvier, as the "Crocodile de Sheppey," and a smaller crocodile skull, which, like the last, is from the London clay of Sheppey, has received the name Crocodylus Spencersi from Professor Owen. The most gigantic Crocodilian remains hitherto found are those from the Sewalik Hills, which are here arranged in the three divisions at the right-hand of the Case, they include both examples of the true Crocodiles, and of the long and slender snouted Gavials (or rather gharials). Cases 1 and 2 are under arrangement. In the first are the remains of the well-known Swanage Crocodile (Goniophilus crassidens, Owen) from the wealden strata of Swanage and Tilgate. They are included in the large flat slab against the wall, and on the small shelves beneath, in the corner, may be noticed the gigantic Fossil Salamander from Oeningen (Cryptobranchus diluvii-testis), the subject of Scheuchzer's dissertation, "Homo diluvii testis et thescopos." The most important specimen in Case 2 is the cast of the head of the Mosasaurus, the large reptile from Maestricht, presented by Baron Cuvier. Case 3 is occupied by the Fossil Chelonian reptiles, including the Tortoises and Turtles, the remaining Cases, 4, 5, and 6, as well as the Wall Cases on the south side of Room IV, contain the ENALIOSAURIA, or Sea Lizards. In Room III, are the long-necked species, the Plesiosaurs, and in Room IV, are the short-necked species (Ichthyosaurs). Among the former may be particularised the Plesiosaurus Hawkinsii, chiefly from the lias quarries of Street, a species named by Professor Owen, after the author of the work entitled "The Book of the Great Sea Dragons," in which are figured the greater portion of the specimens here arranged:—the species from Lyme Regis, first described by Mr. Conybeare, and named P. dolichodeirus, its neck being nearly equal in length to the body and tail united;—the P. rugosus from the lias near Belvoir Castle, presented by H. G. the Duke of Rutland, being a unique and nearly complete specimen of this species;—the specimen of a Plesiosaure, of which an account and figure have been given in the Philosophical Transactions for 1719, by Mr. Stukeley.

Before quitting this room, should be noticed the contents of Cases 7 and 11. These are occupied by the Mammalian remains, which form a continuous series, in the corresponding Cases in Rooms IV. and V. In Case 11 are nearly all the most characteristic parts of the skeleton of the Sivatherium, a large four-horned Ruminant, forming part of the great Sewalik-Hill collection presented by Captain Cautley. Some remains of a Fossil Giraffe, and also of a Camel, from the same collection, are also here deposited. Case 7 contains the remains of various species of Bos (the Ox tribe), chiefly from the Pleistocene formation of England—one of the most remarkable specimens is in the corner case, and consists of the upper portion of the skull, with the horns attached, of an unusually large Ox; it was discovered by Mr. J. Brown, of Stanway, in a mass of drift sand overlying the London Clay at Clacton, on the Essex Coast, and presented by that gentleman, together with numerous other Mammalian remains, to the Museum.

ROOM IV.

In and on the Wall Cases 1 to 5, inclusive, are placed the larger specimens of the various species of Ichthyosaurus, or the fish-lizard. The most striking specimens are the I. Platyodon in the central Case, and various bones of its gigantic variety on the top of the same Case and in Case 2, such as the head cut transversely to show the internal structure of the jaws; the carpal bones of one of the extremities, &c.: all from the lias of Lyme Regis;—a new small species, I. latifrons, in which the spiracle on the top of the head, between the eyes, claims particular notice, from Balderton in the county of Nottingham, presented by Dr. Bland;—the splendid specimens of I. intermedius, I. lonchiodon, I. communis, all from Lyme Regis; the I. longipinnis and I. longirostris from Whitby, &c.

The remaining Wall Cases are under arrangement.

The Table Cases under the windows are also devoted to fossil remains. One large Table is occupied by Fossil Sponges (Amorphozoa), from the oolite (“Spongitenkalk”) of Germany, and the greensand and chalk of England: the latter chiefly from the Mantellian Collection.

Of the small Table Cases, one is occupied, for the present, by Crocodilian remains from the Eocene formation of Hordle, on the coast of Hampshire, presented by Searles Wood, Esq.; besides which, there are some Turtle remains from the same locality, and others from Bracklesham and Sheppey.

The remaining Tables contain a series of Bird bones from New Zealand, found in a deposit, which there are good grounds for regarding as of very recent origin. Part of the series was collected by Mr. Percy Earl, in the Middle Island, and the remainder by Mr. Walter Mantell, in the North Island. They are referred to several species, and, indeed, distinct genera of Birds, by Prof. Owen, some of which are still living in New Zealand, whilst others, it would appear, are extinct. Amongst the living species may be noticed the Notornis Mantellii (a gigantic species of the Rail family). This bird was originally only known to us through some portions of the skull and skeleton, found with the other fossil bones procured by Mr. W. Mantell,* but was subsequently discovered by the same gentleman to be still living in the Southern Island.† The greater portion of the fossil bones, as determined by Prof. Owen, belong to a genus of birds to which the Professor gives the name of Dinornis: they were wingless birds, and all of them of large size, whilst one, the D. giganteus, was (as its name implies) of gigantic dimensions—probably 12 feet in height.

ROOM V.

In the Table Cases of this Room are the fossil remains of various invertebrate animals. Cases 1 to 5 contain a series of Ammonites, arranged in the order of the strata from which they were derived. Cases 9 and 10 contain an extensive suite of Ammonites and allied shells (Scaphites, Crioceras, Ancyloceras, &c.), from the South of * The specimens are figured and described by Prof. Owen in the Zoological Transactions, vols. iii. and iv., together with the other bones above referred to.

† Up to this time but a single specimen has been seen—the specimen procured by Mr. Mantell, which is now in the British Museum. The visitor will find a detailed account of this bird, as well as of the fossil bones contained in the Cases, in Dr. Mantell's work, entitled “Fossils and their Teachings,” chapter ii.

France. The fossil Nautili occupy one of the Cases beneath the windows. Case 4 contains shells related to the Ammonite and Nautilus (Hamites, Baculites, Turrilites, Goniatites, Orthoceras, &c.) and the Trigonellites, supposed to be opercula of Ammonites. In Case 11 are the fossilised remains of extinct Cuttle-fishes and Calamaries; these consist not only of the shell, but of the soft parts of the animals;—the muscular arms and fins; the ink-bag with the ink (sepia), &c. The most remarkable examples are those of the Acanthoteuthis antiquus, and Belemnites Oweni, from the Oxford-clay of Chippenham. The remaining Tables are occupied by shells from the Crag of the Eastern Counties, oolitic shells, &c. The Wall Cases are devoted to mammalian remains; one Case (at the East end of the Room) to the remains of ruminant mammalia; and the Case opposite to those of the different species of Rhinoceros. The remaining Wall Cases are under arrangement. Cases 1 to 13 are occupied by the carnivorous mammalia of the upper tertiary formations, including those of the caverns of England, Germany, and France. The fine suite of Bear skulls, the Hyæna remains, and those of the Cave Lion may be noticed as the most conspicuous.

In the Cases to the right of the entrance doorway (Nos. 14 to 27, inclusive) will be arranged the mammalian remains from the lower tertiary formations, the greater portion of which are from Auvergne, and from Vacluse in the South of France.

ROOM VI.

Room VI. is occupied chiefly by the osseous remains of the Pachydermata and Edentata, which are at present under arrangement.

Among the specimens, the following may be particularized. A cast of the skull and lower jaw of the Dinotherium, the originals of which were found at Eppelsheim, forty miles N. W. of Darmstadt; a portion of a lower jaw from Perim Island in the Gulf of Cambay, which is regarded by Dr. Falconer as belonging to a second species of Dinotherium (the D. Indicum of that author): it was presented, together with other mammalian remains, by Miss Pepper; the skeleton of the North American mastodon (M. Ohioticus), together with numerous parts of other individuals of the same species; and a nearly perfect cranium, and other portions of the South American mastodon (M. Andium). Of the European mastodons, the collection contains remains which have been referred to the M. angustidens, M. Arvernensis, and M. longirostris. Three species of Indian mastodons have been founded, in the "Fauna Antiqua Sivalensis" of Falconer and Cautley, upon remains in the collection: they are the M. Perimensis, M. Sivalensis, and M. latidens of that work, in which, it may be observed; are figured the greater portion of the specimens here noticed. The elephant remains, in Room VI., are referred by Dr. Falconer to the following species, viz.:—Elephas priscus (?), E. meridionalis, E. primigenius, from the European tertiary formations; and E. bombifrons, E. Ganesa, E. insignis, E. planifrons, E. Hydricus, and E. Namadicus, from India. A large portion of the Indian specimens form part of the highly valuable collection presented by Major Cautley, Bengal Artillery, to whose indefatigable exertions science is indebted for the formation of a rich assemblage of fossil remains obtained in the Sewalik, or Sub-Himalayan range, situated between the Jumna and Sutlej rivers. For many valuable specimens in the series the Museum is also indebted to Dr. Falconer. Casts of several very interesting specimens presented by the Honourable Court of Directors of the India Company, numerous specimens (including the skull of the Elephas Namadicus) presented by Charles Frazer, Esq., and others presented by Colonel Burney and by Major Baker, Bengal Engineers, have contributed to perfect the extensive series of mammalian remains here exhibited. The most striking specimen—the skull of the Elephas Ganesa—which is placed in the middle of the room, is the gift of the last-mentioned gentleman.

A very interesting object is the cast of the skeleton of the Megatherium, a genus of Edentata established by Cuvier from the only species known, the Megatherium Americanum of Blumenbach (Megath. Cuvieri or Cuverii of later writers): the bones from which the casts of the several parts were taken are preserved partly in the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, and partly in cases near the skeleton.

At the west end of the Room is the fossil human skeleton, embedded in limestone, brought from Guadaloupe, by Admiral the Hon. Sir Alexander Cochrane, and presented to the British Museum by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

The Table Cases in this Room are appropriated to the remains of invertebrate animals.

Case 1 contains the shells of bivalves (lamellibranchiata), belonging to the families Chamidae, Hippuritidae, Ostreidae, &c.

Cases 2 and 3 contain fossil "lamp-shells" (Brachiopoda), arranged according to the geological systems in which they are found, from the tertiary to the silurian.

Case 4 contains the fossil Sea-Urchins (Echinidae).

Case 5 contains Corals (Zoophytæ), from the oolitic, Devonian, and silurian strata, including some fine examples of "Chain-coral," collected in Arctic America by Capt. Kellett's Expedition.

Cases 6 and 7 contain a series of fossils from the Eocene tertiary strata of France, or "Paris-basin fossils."

Case 8 contains the original specimens figured in Brander's Fossilia Hantoniensia, and other London clay shells. The Window Cases contain Trilobites, Crustaceans, and insects, and shells from the carboniferous limestone, Sicilian and American tertiaries, &c.

The various portions of the collection of invertebrate fossils will be arranged (as they approach completion) in zoological and stratigraphical order, like the Brachiopoda, Echinidae, Ammonites, &c.

DEPARTMENT OF ANTIQUITIES.

THE collections in this Department are divided into two series. The first, consisting of sculpture, including inscriptions and architectural remains, occupies the Ground Floor of the south-western and western portions of the building; and to this division are now being added some rooms in the basement, not originally designed for exhibition, but which, owing to the extensive acquisitions recently made from Assyria and other countries, furnish the only space at present available for that use. The second series, placed in a suite of rooms on the Upper Floor, comprehends all the smaller remains, of whatever nation or period, such as vases and terracottas, bronzes, coins and medals, and articles of personal or domestic use. To the latter division is attached the collection of ethnographical specimens.

The arrangement of the series of sculptures is still incomplete, a considerable part of the galleries designed for their reception having only lately been erected. So far, however, as that arrangement has been carried, the collections are being so disposed as to admit of being visited, with few exceptions, in chronological order, from the earliest monuments of the Egyptian Pharaohs down to the latest memorials of the Roman dominion in this country. The structure of the Galleries has made it necessary to place the most ancient remains at the north-western extremity, which is remotest from the Entrance Hall: so that a visitor, wishing to pursue the more natural historical course, is recommended to descend the staircase which adjoins the Gallery of Fossils, described in the preceding pages, and enter the Ground Floor series with the Egyptian Vestibule, proceeding through each saloon in the reverse order to that adopted in the ensuing description, which commences with the latest or Roman monuments, and ascends, through the Lycian, Greek, and Assyrian, up to those of Egypt. The arrangement of the four principal series of sculptures may be stated generally as follows: the Roman, including the mixed class termed Græco-Roman, occupies the south side, running east and west: the Greek, strictly so called, the Assyrian, and the Egyptian, form, roughly speaking, three parallel lines, running north and south, at right angles to the Roman. To the left of the Hall, on entering the building, is the

ROMAN GALLERY.

On the south side, under the windows, are miscellaneous Roman antiquities discovered in this country. On the opposite side is the series of Roman Iconographical sculptures, or portraits of individuals, whether statues or busts. Each wall is divided by pilasters into six compartments.*

ANGLO-ROMAN ANTIQUITIES.

COMPARTMENT I.

On the wall: a portion of a tessellated pavement, discovered at Withington, Gloucestershire, representing the head of Neptune. Presented by H. Brooke, Esq., 1812.

* At the two ends of this gallery are at present remaining some Greek sepulchral monuments, and on one or two of the shelves some miscellaneous Roman and other antiquities; but these, as they will shortly be removed, are not here described.

Underneath: ancient sarcophagus of cylindrical shape, with base and cover of rude unhewn stone, having in the centre a small hole; discovered in 1831, at Harpenden, near St. Alban's. In this sarcophagus were found a glass vase, and four small vases of red Roman ware, which are incorporated in the collection of smaller Anglo-Roman Antiquities in the British and Medieval Room. Presented by C. W. Packe, Esq., M.P., 1843.

Front of First Pilaster.—A Roman altar to Æsculapius and Fortuna Redux, erected by some freedmen and slaves on the restoration of their master to health. On one side are the rod and snake of Æsculapius and sacrificial instruments. On the other are the cornucopiæ and rudder of Fortune, a patera and jug. Found near the Watergate, Chester, in 1779; presented by Sir Ph. de Malpas Grey Egerton, Bart., 1836.

COMPARTMENT II.

On the wall: four other portions of the Withington pavement, representing birds and animals.

Underneath: three Roman altars, with bas-reliefs in front, one representing Ceres, the other two Mars or Romulus. Found at King Stanley, in Gloucestershire; presented by the Rev. P. Hawker, 1812.

Two other altars very similar.

Plain Roman altar. Found by Dr. Ormerod in a tumulus, Ledbury Park, Monmouthshire. Presented by the Archæological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland, 1851.

Front of Second Pilaster.—An altar with a Greek inscription, dedicated by Diodora, a high priestess, to the Tyrian Hercules; on one side is a bull's head, on the other a sacrificing knife, and crown. Found at Corbridge, Northumberland. Presented by the Duke of Northumberland, in 1774.

COMPARTMENT III.

On the wall: two more portions of the Withington pavement, and a fragment of the border of a tessellated pavement discovered at Woodchester, Gloucestershire. Presented by Samuel Lysons, Esq., 1808.

Underneath: Roman sarcophagus, discovered at Binstead, in Hampshire. It contained, when found, several very small earthen vessels. Presented by Henry Long, Esq., 1851.

A stone sarcophagus found at Southfleet, in Kent, within the site of a building fifty feet square, in the year 1831; in the sarcophagus were two glass vessels, each containing burnt bones, and much liquid; between them two pairs of shoes of purple leather embroidered with gold. Near the sarcophagus were found the remains of a wooden box, with the brass clamps and round-headed brass nails by which it was held together, and with them two bottles of red pottery, and two pans of the same, on which were some ashes and two small rib bones. At some little distance was found a globular earthen vessel, which contained some burnt bones, and the remains of a small glass bottle, and is capable of holding about six gallons. All these objects are preserved in the British Room up-stairs. Presented by the Rev. J. Rashleigh, in 1836.

Front of Third Pilaster.—Six Roman pigs of lead, viz. :—

A pig of lead, inscribed with the name of the Emperor Domitian when he was consul for the eighth time, A.D. 82, weighing 154 lbs. It was discovered in 1731 under ground, on Hayshaw Moor, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, half-way between an ancient lead mine, north of Pateley Bridge, and the Roman road from Ilkley, Olicana, to Aldborough, Isurium. Bequeathed by Sir J. Ingleby, Bart., and presented by his Executors, 1772.

A pig of lead, inscribed with the name of the Emperor Hadrian, weighing 191 lbs.; found in 1796 or 1797, at Snailbeach Farm, Parish of Westbury, 10 miles south-west of Shrewsbury. Presented by J. Lloyd, Esq., 1798.

A pig of lead, inscribed with the name of the Emperor Hadrian, weighing 125 lbs. Found on Cromford Moor, in Derbyshire. Presented by A. Woolley and P. Nightingale, Esqs., 1797.

A pig of lead, inscribed with the name of L. Aruconius Verecundus, and the letters METAL. LVTVD, probably the mine of Lutudæ. Found near Matlock Bank, in Derbyshire. Presented by A. Woolley and P. Nightingale, Esqs., 1797.

A pig of lead, inscribed CL . TR . LVT . BR . EX . ARG, found with three other pigs, and some broken Roman pottery, at Broomer's Hill, in the parish of Pulborough, Sussex, January 31, 1824, close to the Roman road, Stone Street, from London to Chichester. (For a pig of lead with a similar inscription, found on Matlock Moor, Derbyshire, see Archæologia, ix. p. 45.) Presented by the Earl of Egremont, July 10, 1824.

A pig of lead, inscribed with the name of Britannicus, the son of the Emperor Claudius; found on the Mendip Hills, Somersetshire. Presented by James Williams, Esq., 1854.

COMPARTMENT IV.

On the wall: portion of tessellated pavement, discovered under the south-west angle of the Bank of England, 1805. Presented by the Governor of the Bank of England, 1806.

Underneath: A large stone vessel in form of half an octagon; on four of the sides are sculptured busts in high relief, viz., Venus holding a mirror; Jupiter; Mercury with a caduceus; and Mars with a spear. It was first noticed by Horsley lying neglected in the mill at Chesterford, Essex. It was afterwards procured by Dr. Foote Gower from a blacksmith who had used it as a cistern for cooling his irons; from whose widow it was received and presented by T. Brand Hollis, Esq., in 1803.

A Roman Sarcophagus, discovered in Haydon Square, near the Minories, in 1853. In it was found a leaden coffin, the lid of which is exhibited above the Sarcophagus. Presented by the Rev. T. Hill, Incumbent, and the Churchwardens of the parish.

COMPARTMENT V.

On the wall: portion of a tessellated pavement discovered in Threadneedle Street, London. Presented by Mr. Mozhay, 1841.

Underneath: portion of a sepulchral inscription to Fabius Alpinus Classicianus; scroll termination, probably the end of the lid of a large sarcophagus, of which the inscription may have formed part; sepulchral inscription, much worn, to A. Alfidius Rombo(?); portion of the upper stone of a Roman mill. These objects were discovered at the foot of London Wall, behind Trinity House Square, and presented by W. J. Hall, Esq., 1852. Roman sepulchral inscription to Gaius Valerius, of Lyons, standardbearer of the Second Legion. Discovered on the bank of the river Uşk, near Caerleon, in Monmouthshire. Sloane Collection.

COMPARTMENT VI.

ROMAN ICONOGRAPHY.

This Series is arranged chronologically. The figures within brackets, in the ensuing description, indicate the dates, wherever known, of the birth and death of the person represented; the intermediate date, added in the case of an Emperor, is that of his accession. The periods under which the unascertained portraits are classed can only be regarded as approximate.*

COMPARTMENT I.

Unascertained Persons.

Draped bust of a boy. Bequeathed by R. P. Knight, Esq., 1824.

Bust of a middle-aged man, with a belt crossing his right shoulder. Bequeathed by R. P. Knight, Esq., 1824.

Colossal terminal bust of a young person with dishevelled hair, perhaps a barbarian captive. Presented by the Hon. Mrs. Damer.

Bust of a child, undraped.

In front of the Pilaster.—Statue of heroic size, representing a Roman personage draped in the toga, and wearing a peculiar kind of buskin. The head, which, though antique, did not originally belong to this figure, resembles the portraits of Pompey the Great on the coins of his sons. Formerly in the Arundel collection, and presented by W. P. Williams Freeman, Esq., 1854.

COMPARTMENT II.

Head supposed to represent Julius Cæsar (B.C. 101—44).

Head of Augustus (B.C. 63, Imp. B.C. 31—A.D. 14). Purchased in 1812, at the sale of the collection of the Rt. Hon. Edmund Burke.

Head of Nero (A.D. 37, Imp. 54—68.) Brought from Athens, 1740. Pt. 10. Pl. VI.

* All the sculptures in this, and in the ensuing Græco-Roman Series, of which the former proprietors are not specified, belonged to the collection of the late Charles Townley, Esq., purchased after his decease, in 1805. More ample descriptions, with plates, of a considerable portion of these sculptures, have been published in Parts. References to the Parts, and to the Plates, are here annexed to the notices of the objects themselves.

Bust of Domitia, wife of the Emperor Domitian (called by Mr. Townley Messalina). Found in the Villa Casali, at Rome, 1775. Pt. 10. Pl. vii.

In front of the Pilaster.—Draped male figure, without a head, and much mutilated; of uncertain period and character.

COMPARTMENT III.

Bust of Trajan, undraped (A.D. 56, Imp. 98—117). Found in the Campagna of Rome, 1776. Pt. 3. Pl. i.

Head of a barbarian chieftain, variously attributed to Arminius, Caractacus, Thumelicus, and Decebalus. Found in the Forum of Trajan, at Rome. Pt. 3. Pl. vi.

Bust of Hadrian in military costume (A.D. 76, Imp. 117—138). Found in Hadrian's Villa, at Tivoli. Pt. 10. Pl. viii.

Head of Antinous, the favourite of Hadrian, in the character of Bacchus (died A.D. 132?). Found near the Villa Pamfili, at Rome, 1770.

Bust of Hadrian, undraped. Formerly in the Villa Montalto. Pt. 3. Pl. xv.

COMPARTMENT IV.

Bust of Ælius Cæsar, the adopted heir of Hadrian, in military costume (died A.D. 138). Bequeathed by R. P. Knight, Esq., 1824.

Bust supposed to represent Julia Sabina, the wife of Hadrian (died A.D. 137?), though sometimes attributed to her mother Matidia, the niece of Trajan: the head-dress, elaborately arranged in the form of an ampyx, is characteristic of the period. Pt. 10. Pl. ix.

Unascertained female bust, of which the condition, at least, is not antique. Presented by Peter Ducane, Esq., 1838.

Bust of a lady, named Olympias, in a rich head-dress, inscribed with a dedication from her freedman Epithymetus. Purchased in 1812, at the sale of the collection of the Rt. Hon. Edmund Burke.

Bust of Antoninus Pius, in military costume (A.D. 86, Imp. 138—161). Formerly in the Grimani collection at Venice, and purchased of Mr. R. C. Lucas, 1850.

In front of the Pilaster.—Statue of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, in civil costume (A.D. 121, Imp. 161—180). Obtained from the French Expedition to Egypt, at the Capitulation of Alexandria, 1801.

COMPARTMENT V.

Bust of Marcus Aurelius, veiled and crowned with a wreath of corn, as one of the Fratres Arvales. Formerly in the Mattei collection. Pt. 3. Pl. ix.

Bust of Annia Faustina the younger, wife of Marcus Aurelius (A.D. 140—175). From Pozzuolo. Pt. 10. Pl. x.

Bust of Lucius Verus, the colleague of Marcus Aurelius, in military costume (A.D. 130, Imp. 161—169). Formerly in the Mattei collection. Pt. 3. Pl. x.

Bust of Septimius Severus, wearing the paludamentum (A.D. 145, Imp. 193—211). Found on the Palatine Hill at Rome, 1776. Pt. 10. Pl. xi.

In front of the Pilaster.—Statue of a person in military costume, about the time of Septimius Severus. Obtained from the French Expedition in Egypt; at the Capitulation of Alexandria, 1801.

COMPARTMENT VI.

Bust of Caracalla, in military costume (A.D. 188, Imp. 211—217). Found on the Esquiline Hill at Rome, 1776. Pt. 10, Pl. xii.

Bust of a young man draped in the toga, inscribed on the pedestal—DECEMVIRI. STLTITIBVS. IVDICANDIS. Found near Rome, 1776. Pt. 10. Pl. xvi.

Bust of Gordianus Africanus the elder (A.D. 157, Imp. 27 May—6 July, 237); he wears the toga, and above it a peculiar vestment supposed to be the læna. Pt. 10. Pl. xiii.

Bust, formerly described as Plautilla, the wife of Caracalla, but more probably Otacilia Severa, wife of the Emperor Philip the elder. Pt. 10. Pl. xiv.

FIRST GRÆCO-ROMAN SALOON.

This and the two succeeding Rooms are appropriated to statues, busts, and bas-reliefs, of the mixed class termed Græco-Roman, consisting of works discovered (so far as is known) in Italy, but owing their origin and character, either directly or mediately, to the Greek schools of sculpture. Some few of these may, perhaps, be original monuments of the autonomous or ante-Roman period of Greece, afterwards transported by the conquerors to their own country, but the majority were certainly executed in Italy during the Imperial times, though generally by Greek artists, and in many instances copied, or but slightly varied, from earlier Greek models. The relative age of such works being too uncertain to admit of carrying out satisfactorily a chronological arrangement, they are classified entirely according to their subjects, all the representations of each personage, mythic or real, being placed in juxtaposition.

The present room contains the first portion of the mythological series, consisting of all the examples of the Twelve Olympic Deities, with their several modifications in the Greek and Roman Pantheon. The description commences from the northern, or right-hand side of the western door, which faces the entrance. The Greek names of the divinities, where differing from the Roman, are added within brackets.

Head of Jupiter (Zeus), of the type termed Meilichios, or Mild. Formerly in the collection of the Duke of St. Albans. Pt. 10. Pl. i.

Bust of Jupiter, undraped, heroic size. Found at Hadrian's Villa Tiburtina, and presented by J. T. Barber Beaumont, Esq., 1836.

Small statue of Jupiter, draped and enthroned, combining with his Olympic attributes the figure of Cerberus, a symbol of Pluto (Hades); the arms are modern. From Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. XLIII. fig. 2.

Bust of Jupiter Serapis, draped; on his head a modius decorated with olive branches; the face anciently painted red. Pt. 10. Pl. II.

Head of a youth, probably Mercury (Hermes). Found near Rome.

Terminus of a boy, in the character and under the tutelage of Mercury; he wears the petasus and chlamys; and on the lateral faces of the termæ are the caduceus and cock. Found near Frascati, 1772. Pt. 10. Pl. XLII.

Terminal bust of Mercury. Purchased at the sale of W. Chinnery, Esq., 1812. Pt. 2. Pl. XXI.

Bust of Minerva (Athene), with the helmet and drapery restored in bronze; the eyes originally inlaid with some coloured material. Found in the Villa Casali at Rome, 1784.

Head of Minerva, helmeted. Found near Rome.

Colossal head of Minerva; on her helmet a serpent. Pt. 1. Pl. I.

Colossal head of Minerva, apparently copied from an archaic bronze; the eyes originally inlaid. Found near Rome. Pt. 1. Pl. XVI.

Head of Apollo. Formerly in the Grimani collection at Venice, and purchased of Mr. R. C. Lucas, 1847.

East Wall.—Bas-relief of Apollo Musagetes, playing on the lyre, and receiving a libation from Victory, within a distyle Corinthian colonnade. From the collection of Sir W. Hamilton. Pt. 2. Pl. XIII.

South Wall.—Votive tablet; within a porch is Apollo seated on the cortina, beside him Latona (Leto) and Diana (Artemis); a father and two sons, in Roman military costume, appear consulting the oracle; underneath are the remains of a Greek hexameter and pentameter verse, containing an invocation to Apollo. Pt. 2. Pl. v.

Bust of Diana (Artemis). Bequeathed by R. P. Knight, Esq., 1824.

Small statue of Diana Triformis, or Hecate, a combination of Diana with Luna and Proserpina, called also Trivia, from being worshipped at the convergence of three roads; the arms and attributes are modern; the plinth is inscribed—"AELIVS. BARBARVS. AVGVSTORV. LIBERTVS. VILICVS. HVIVS. LOCI. DD. P." Formerly in the Giustiniani Palace at Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. XLI. fig. 1.

Mutilated small statue of Diana Ventrix; by her side a hound. Found at Pozzuolo, and presented by W. R. Hamilton, Esq., 1840.

Statue of Diana, life-size, draped in a diploidion, or long double tunic, and advancing against the wind; restored as though hurling a javelin. Found near La Storta, in the neighbourhood of Rome, 1772. Pt. 3. Pl. XIV.

Head of Diana. From Rome.

Torso of Venus (Aphrodite), life-size, part of a statue broken in the fire at Richmond House, Whitehall, December 21, 1791. Purchased in 1821.

Statue of Venus or Dione, half-draped, heroic size; the right hand and left arm modern. Found in the Maritime Baths of Claudius, at Ostia, 1776. Pt. 1. Pl. VIII.

Statue of Ceres (Demeter), small life-size, with the attributes of Isis; she wears a long tunic and pallium; on her head is a disc between two serpents, surmounted by ears of corn, and in her left hand a situla, or sacred bucket; the right is a restoration. Formerly in the Macarani Palace, at Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. XIX.

The West door leads to the ## SECOND GRÆCO-ROMAN SALOON.

This small apartment is appropriated to the representations of human personages.

Statue of a Discobolus, of Pentelic marble, life-size, in the attitude of throwing the discus, or quoit; supposed to be a copy of the celebrated bronze statue of Myro, of which two other antique repetitions in marble, slightly varied, exist at Rome: upon the plinth appear the remains of a defaced inscription. Found, in 1791, in the ruins of the supposed pinacotheca, or picture-gallery, of Hadrian's Villa Tiburtina.

Mutilated group of two boys, quarrelling over the game of astragali, or osselets, life-size; of one figure the right hand and part of the arm alone remain; the plinth is modern. Found in the Baths of Titus, at Rome, where Pliny says that a bronze of the same subject, by Polyclethus, was preserved. Pt. 2. Pl. XXXI.

Small statue of a comic actor, seated, wearing a mask and socci, or comic shoes. Found, in 1773, in the Villa Fonseca, Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. XLIII, fig. 1.

Small statue of an Egyptian or Nubian tumbler, practising his art upon the back of a tame crocodile. Brought from Rome by the first Lord Cawdor. Pt. 10. Pl. XXVII.

The individual representations, or portraits, are as follows :

Terminal bust of Periander, the sage, who was tyrant of Corinth in the 7th century B.C. Formerly in the Villa Montalto, at Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. XLII.

Terminal bust of Epicurus, the Philosopher (B.C. 342—271). Found near Santa Maria Maggiore, at Rome, in 1775. Pt. 2. Pl. XXXIV.

Bust supposed to represent Diogenes, the Cynic Philosopher (B.C. 412—324). Bequeathed by R. P. Knight, Esq., 1824.

Bust of an old man, believed to be Hippocrates, the Physician (B.C. 460—375?). Found near Albano, in the ruins of the supposed Villa of Marcus Varro. Pt. 2. Pl. XX.

Terminal bust of Pericles (B.C. 497?—429), helmeted, and inscribed with his name. Found near Tivoli, in 1781. Pt. 2. Pl. XXXII.

Bust of Demosthenes (B.C. 384—322). Purchased in 1818.

Bust, supposed to be that of Aratus, the Poet and Astronomer, who flourished about B.C. 275: the pedestal is erroneously inscribed with the name of Heraclitus. Found among the ruins of the supposed Villa of Marcus Varro, in 1770.

Bust of Sophocles, the Tragedian (B.C. 495—406). Found, about 1775, near Gensano, 17 miles from Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. XXVI.

Terminal bust of Homer, in advanced age, wearing a fillet, or diadem. Found, in 1780, among some ruins at Baiæ. Pt. 2. Pl. XXV.

Terminal bust, probably of a Greek Poet, with a diadem similar to the preceding. Found, in 1770, with the bust of Hippocrates, already described. Pt. 2. Pl. XLIV.

West Wall.—Large medallion, with the bust, in relief, of an unknown male personage. Pt. 10. Pl. LVII. fig. 2.

East Wall.—Similar medallion, representing apparently the same person. Pt. 10. Pl. LVII. fig. 1.

THIRD GRÆCO-ROMAN SALOON.

This Room contains the remainder of the mythological series, consisting of the representations of divinities of inferior rank to the Olympic cycle, demigods, heroes, and personages associated with religion, poetry, or mysticism, in the Greek and Roman creed. The description commences from the north-west door, leading to the Lycian Saloon.

Terminal statue of an Hermaphrodite, feeding a bird with a bunch of grapes. Found, in 1774, near the Lake of Nemi. Pt. 10. Pl. XXX.

Small statue of Actæon, defending himself from his two dogs, Melampus and Ichnobates; he wears merely a lion's skin; on his head appear the stag's horns, which sprung up at the command of Diana. Found in the Villa of Antoninus Pius, near Civita Lavinia, on the site of the ancient Lanuvium. Pt. 2. Pl. XLV.

Small terminal statue of a female, closely veiled in a species of peplus; it has been thought to represent the Venus Architis of the Phœnicians. Found near Tivoli, 1775. Pt. 2. Pl. XXXVII.

The five succeeding sculptures represent mythic personages of Asiatic origin.

On a bracket over the Actæon: Bust of Atys, in the cap commonly known as "Phrygian." Found in the Villa Palombara, at Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. iv.

Group, of small-life-size, representing the rites of Mithras, the Persian deity of the Sun, whose worship was introduced into Rome after the conquest of the Cilician pirates by Pompey. A youthful priest of the god, wearing a Phrygian cap, or perhaps the cidaris, the candys (or Persian tunic), the chlamys, anaxyrides (or trowsers), and shoes, is immolating a bull, attacked at the same time by a dog, a serpent, and a scorpion, all probably astronomical symbols. Brought from Rome by Charles Stanāish, Esq., and purchased of him in 1826.

Statue of a youth, small-life-size, attired as the preceding; it has been restored with the attributes of Paris, but is more probably a priest or attendant of Mithras. Found, with a similar figure now in the Vatican, in 1785, on the banks of the Tiber, five miles from the Porta Portese of Rome, and purchased in 1846.

Small Mithraic group, of coarse material and execution: the subject treated as before, with the addition of two small attendant figures of priests, or genii, one with an inverted torch, the other holding up the bull's tail, and beside the latter, the feet of a raven; on the plinth in front, and on the body of the bull behind, are dedicatory inscriptions to Mithras, from Alcimus, a farm-servant of T. Cl. Livianus.

On the central bracket: Bust of a youth, of androgynous or feminine character, wearing a Phrygian cap, and a veil enveloping the chin and neck, probably Adonis, or Atys. Formerly in the Villa Montalto.

Over the large Mithraic group: Small bas-relief, of coarse workmanship, representing four men engaged in cooking, probably for a sacrifice.

Over the small Mithraic group: Bas-relief, much restored, of inferior execution, and uncertain meaning and use; it represents, in three tiers, a Bacchic procession, Venus and Cupid with marine monsters, and a group of huntsmen returning from a boar-hunt. Formerly in the Villa Montalto. Pt. 2. Pl. ix.

Male bust, of heroic type, undraped, formerly described as Achilles. Bequeathed by R. P. Knight, Esq., 1824.

Bust of an Homeric hero, sometimes called Diomede, looking upwards, with an expression of pain. Found in Hadrian's Villa, 1771. Pt. 2. Pl. xxiii.

Between these busts: Bas-relief representing the Apotheosis of Homer: the scene is Mount Parnassus, on the summit of which Jupiter (Zeus) is seated; below him appear the Muses; half way down is the Corycian Cave, with Apollo Musagetes, and the Pythoness, within; adjoining is an uncertain figure on a pedestal, in front of a tripod; at the foot of the mountain Homer sits enthroned, crowned by the World (Oikoumene), and receiving sacrifices and adoration from various allegorical personages, typical of his universal genius. The figures in the lowest range are all distinguished by their names inscribed in Greek below: while that of the artist, Archelaus, the son of Apollonius, of Priene, is placed beneath the figure of Jupiter. Found in the middle of the 17th century, at Frattocchi, the ancient

Small statue of a Muse, seated on a rock, and draped in the tunic and peplus, the arms and attributes modern; the plinth is inscribed (probably in late times) ΕΥΜΟΥΣΙΑ. Pt. 10. Pl. XLI. fig. 2.

Head of a Muse; the breast wrongly restored as an Apollo; the type resembles that of the Niobides. Brought from Rome by Mr. Lyde Browne. Pt. 10. Pl. III.

Statue of Thalia, the Pastoral and Comic Muse, life-size, in the tunic and peplus, and crowned with a chaplet of ivy; the right hand is restored with a pedum, or pastoral crook. Found in the Maritime baths of Claudius, at Ostia, in 1776. Pt. 3. Pl. v.

Small statue of a Muse, probably Erato, wearing the tunic and peplus, and on her head a fillet; she is seated on a rock, playing the lyre. Pt. 10. Pl. XXII.

Over the Muse inscribed Eumousia: Bas-relief, much restored, representing the Centaur Nessus, carrying off Deianira; he wears a panther's skin; behind are a tree and a vase on a column. Formerly in the Verospi Palace, at Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. xv.

Over the other seated Muse: Bas-relief, of two youthful horsemen, clothed in short tunics; perhaps the Dioscuri, Castor and Pollux; the bridles of the horses have been painted red. Formerly in the collection of Sir Wm. Hamilton. Pt. 2. Pl. xi.

Further on, in the same Wall: Bas-relief, of archaic (or pseudo-archaic) style, representing a young man, probably Castor, leading a horse by a rein (which, having originally been of metal, has now perished), and striking him with a stick; they are followed by a dog. Found in Hadrian's Villa Tiburtina, 1769. Pt. 2. Pl. vi.

Between these bas-reliefs, on a bracket: Head, believed to be that of a wounded Amazon. Brought from Rome by Mr. Lyde Browne. Pt. 10. Pl. v.

Underneath: Female bust, heroic size, of uncertain subject; commonly known as Dione. Pt. 3. Pl. XIII.

Mutilated statue of a youth, small-life-size, commonly described as Hymen; on the head is a wreath of flowers. Found on the Via Appia, near Rome, in 1817, and purchased of the Chevalier Bröndsted, 1831.

Bust of a young and beautiful woman, in a tunic fastened with studs, and placed amidst leaves, or petals of a flower; it is variously designated as Clytie rising from the sun-flower, Isis resting on the lotus, and Daphne transformed into a laurel. Formerly in the Laurenziano collection, at Naples.

Recumbent statue of a youth, small-life-size, sometimes called Mercury, but more probably Endymion, sleeping upon a rock, and wearing a chlamys and petasus, or broad-brimmed hat, tied beneath his chin. Found near Roma Vecchia, in the supposed Villa of Domitian's nurse, 1776.

Statue of Cupid (Eros) bending his bow, life-size, the limbs and accessories restored; supposed to be one of the many imitations of the celebrated marble of Praxiteles. Purchased, in 1812, at the sale of the collection of the Rt. Hon. Edmund Burke.

On a bracket adjoining: Small statue of the same subject and type as the preceding, but with a quiver on the ground, covered with a lion's skin. Found, in 1776, inside a large amphora, at Castello di Guido, 8 miles from Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. XXI.

Recumbent statue of the infant Cupid in the character of Somnus, life-size; he sleeps upon a lion's skin, and beside him is the club of Hercules: two lizards are seen on the ground. Found near the Flaminian Gate, at Rome.

On the bracket above: Small statue of Hercules (Herakles), seated upon a rock, on which is the lion's skin, and holding his club; the arms are modern. Pt. 10. Pl. XLI. fig. 3.

Above this: Bas-relief, of archaic (or pseudo-archaic) style, representing Hercules seizing by the horns the stag of Mount Mænalus, which he had been commanded to capture by Eurystheus. From Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. VII.

Colossal bust of Hercules, a variety of the same type as the statue attributed to Glycon, in the Farnese Palace at Naples. Found at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, and presented by Sir William Hamilton. Pt. 1. Pl. XI.

Colossal bust of Hercules, apparently copied from an archaic bronze; the hair similarly treated to that of the bas-relief last described. Found in Hadrian's Villa, 1769. Pt. 1. Pl. XII.

Bust of Hercules, younger than any of the preceding representations; a type similar to that on the coins of Philip of Macedon, and supposed to have resembled that monarch himself. Formerly in the Barberini Palace. Pt. 3. Pl. XII.

On a bracket: Terminal bust of the youthful Hercules, crowned with leaves of the poplar. Found near Gensano, in 1777. Pt. 2. Pl. XLVI.

On the next bracket: Female head, wearing a turreted crown, probably Cybele (Rhea); the eyes are hollowed to receive precious stones, or coloured composition.

Above these: Bas-relief, of coarse workmanship, an ex voto to the rural nymphs, three of whom are represented with shells, standing between Jupiter and Pan.

Underneath: Statue of a nymph, small-life-size, resting after the chase; she is draped in the tunic, and beside her lies her bow; the head and extremities are modern. Found, in 1766, near the Salarian Gate, at Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. XXVIII.

Statue of a recumbent female, small-life-size, half-draped, and wearing a stephanos, or crown, of embossed metal, and an armilla; it has been restored as a water-nymph, with an urn overturned.

On the first bracket above: Unknown head, formerly described as androgynous, but more probably representing a female, her hair bound with a mitra, or broad band, wound two or three times round the head; it is apparently copied from a bronze. Found near Gensano, about 1784. Pt. 10. Pl. XVII.

The remaining sculptures on this side of the room are all of personages belonging to the Dionysiac, or Bacchic, cycle.

Statue of Libera, the female Bacchus, or perhaps Ariadne, life-size; she is draped in a long tunic and peplus, and crowned with ivy leaves; in her right hand she bears a thyrsus, in her left a bunch of grapes, and beside her is a small panther. Found in 1776, at Roma Vecchia. Pt. 10. Pl. XXIII.

Bas-relief representing an old Satyr seizing the robe of a nymph, under a tree. Pt. 2. Pl. I.

Terminus of the bearded or Indian Bacchus, wearing a diadem, the execution of the hair resembling bronze; the whole is in unusually good preservation. Found, in 1771, at Baiæ. Pt. 2. Pl. XXIX.

Statue of Bacchus as a boy, life-size, crowned with an ivy wreath, and wearing a goat's skin; the arms are modern. Found in the Villa of Antoninus Pius, near the ancient Lanuvium.

On a bracket above: Head of effeminate type, bound with a diadem; formerly attributed to Apollo, but more probably Bacchus.

Terminal bust of the bearded Bacchus, of similar type to the terminus just described. Found on the same spot, at the same time. Pt. 2. Pl. XXX.

Small statuè of a beardless Satyr, with goat's ears and horns, entirely naked; the arms are modern: on the trunk of a tree, which supports it, is a Greek inscription, recording that the figure is the work of Marcus Cossutius Cerdo, the freedman of Marcus. Found in the Villa of Antoninus Pius, near Civita Lavinia, 1775. Pt. 2. Pl. XLIII.

Group of Bacchus and Ampelus, small-life-size; Bacchus, crowned with an ivy chaplet, and wearing only a panther's skin, leans upon Ampelus, who is represented at the moment of transformation into a vine-tree, and is offering his patron some grapes: a small panther, wearing a collar of ivy leaves, is furtively snatching a bunch from the tree, upon which also a lizard is climbing. Found, in 1772, near La Storta, 8 miles from Rome. Pt. 3. Pl. XI.

Small statue of a Satyr, slightly varied from that just described, and somewhat more restored; in the Greek inscription the words "Freedman of Marcus" are omitted. Found with the companion figure. Pt. 2. Pl. XXXIII.

Terminal bust of the bearded Bacchus, wearing a diadem, and long formally arranged hair. Brought from Rome by Mr. Lyde Browne. Pt. 2. Pl. XXVII.

Terminal heads of the bearded Bacchus and Libera, placed back to back, the hair of each formally and similarly arranged, and bound with a common diadem; a type of the dimorphous or androgynous character of this deity. Found near Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. XVII.

Terminal bust of the bearded Bacchus, wearing a diadem, of archaic or pseudo-archaic style. Found in the supposed Pinacotheca of Hadrian's Villa Tiburtina, 1790. Pt. 2. Pl. XIX.

Small terminal statue of Pan, in his pastoral character, playing on a tibia or pipe: the head, which is of an archaic type, is bound with a diadem, and the figure draped in a tunic and chlamys. Found in the Villa of Antoninus Pius, near Civita Lavinia, 1779. Pt. 2. Pl. XXXV.

Statue of a youthful Satyr, life-size, entirely undraped, with a chaplet of ivy on his head. Found at Antium, and obtained, by exchange, from the Museum of Dresden, 1838.

Small statue of a beardless Satyr, wearing the nebris, or hind's skin, and laughing; the extremities restored by Algardi, but without due observation of the muscular action of the knees, which is that of a figure on tip-toe. Formerly in the Macarani Palace, at Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. XXIV.

Head of a beardless Satyr, laughing. Found, in 1772, four miles from the Porta Maggiore of Rome.

Terminal statue of a Satyr, life-size, the head somewhat resembling the preceding.

On the bracket above: Bust of a youthful Satyr. Bequeathed by R. Payne Knight, Esq., 1824.

Head of a Mænad, or Bacchante, the hair tied in fantastic knots. Found outside the Porta San Pancrazio of Rome, 1776.

Bas-relief of a Bacchic procession or dance: a Bacchante, loosely draped, and playing the tambourin, is followed by a Satyr blowing a double pipe; the muscles of his cheek are aided by a capistrum, or bandage, and he wears a panther's skin, and has a horse's tail; a third Satyr, brandishing a similar skin and a thyrsus, and accompanied by a panther, follows in a state of intoxication. Found, in 1776, on the supposed site of the ancient Gabii. Pt. 2. Pl. XII.

Below this: Statue of a Satyr or Silenus, small-life-size, naked, and falling on the ground; it seems originally to have formed part of a struggling group, but has been restored as a single figure, intoxicated.

Statue of a Satyr, commonly known as the "Rondinini Faun;" it is life-size, entirely undraped, and in a dancing attitude; but the head and extremities are modern. Formerly in the Rondinini Palace, at Rome, and purchased in 1826.

Bas-relief of Bacchus visiting Icarius, king of Attica,—a subject of which several antique repetitions remain. The god is represented under his Indian type, attended by a train of Satyrs and Sileni: Icarius receives him, reclining on his couch, beside which is a table with viands, and on the ground some masks; behind appears the house, exhibiting several curious details of architecture and decoration; the entrance to it is screened by a curtain. Formerly in the Villa Montalto. Pt. 2. Pl. IV.

Below this: Small statue of a recumbent Pan, with goat's legs, ("semicaper"), wearing a goat's skin, and holding the remains of a pedum.

Small statue of a Pan, of the usual grotesque type, holding a pedum; the right hand restored. Brought from Rome by Lord Cawdor. Pt. 2. Pl. XXIV.

At the Western extremity of the Room: Caryatid statue, heroic size, representing a female bearing on her head a modius, which originally supported part of the entablature of a portico; she is draped in a diploidion, or double tunic, with a species of peplus attached by fibulæ to each shoulder, and is richly adorned with necklaces, bracelets, and ear-rings. Found, with four similar figures, one of which is inscribed with the names of the sculptors Criton and Nicolaus, on the site of a supposed temple of Bacchus, near the Via Appia, a few miles south-east of Rome. Pt. 1. Pl. IV.

Near the Staircase: Small statue of Fortuna (Tuche), draped in a tunic and peplus; on her head a modius, in her right hand a rudder resting on a globe, in her left a cornucopia. Found near the Via Latina, a few miles from Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. XVIII.

Above this: Bas-relief, probably an ex voto, symbolical of the rites of the god of Lampsacus; representing a terminus of that deity, with a syrinx and pedum, a funereal column, a stork (the symbol of piety), and three geese. Pt. 2. Pl. III.

The adjoining staircase leads to the

GRÆCO-ROMAN BASEMENT ROOM.

This apartment is appropriated to miscellaneous monuments of the Græco-Roman series, of subordinate rank to the ideal or historical sculptures, such as representations of animals, architectural or decorative fragments, and articles of actual use, religious or secular. They are arranged in classes, to illustrate their original application or employment.

I. VASES, and fragments of vases.

At the foot of the Staircase: Large vase, or Tazza, with handles formed of swans' necks intertwined; the stem restored. Presented by Lord Western, 1839.

On the North, or left-hand side, of the Room: Ovoid two-handled vase; the body encircled with a continuous bas-relief, representing Dionysiac orgies; several Satyrs, Bacchantes, and a goat-legged Pan, performing, or exciting to, the inspired dance; below which, in lower relief, is a frieze of chimæra. Found in the Villa of Antoninus Pius, at Lanuvium. Pt. 1. Pl. VII.

Ovoid vase, much restored, with handles springing from the necks of swans; in front, a bas-relief of a Bacchic dance, performed by three Satyrs, and a Bacchante; round the neck of the vase, branches of ivy. Pt. 1. Pl. IX.

Between these: Fragment of the body of a vase, with figures, in relief, of Apollo, and a Muse playing on the lyre.

In the first window:

II. PATERA, or bowl, used for libations; in the interior, a bas-relief of a Bacchante dancing, encircled by a wreath of ivy; probably sacred to Bacchus. Found in Hadrian's Villa.

III. LABRA, CISTERNs, or BASINS.

In the middle of the Room: Cistern of green basalt, perforated at the bottom, for a bath; on each side two rings carved, in imitation of handles. Formerly in the collection of Queen Christina of Sweden, afterwards in the Odescalchi Museum; purchased in 1776.

Between the first and second windows: Oblong granite basin, decorated at the sides with sculptured mouldings, and supported by two ornamental standards; perhaps originally a perirrhaterion, or font, at the entrance of a temple, for the purification of those who sought admission to a sacrifice. Purchased, with the preceding, from the Odescalchi collection.

IV. CANDELABRA, and fragments of Candelabra.

In the second recess: Seated sphinx, from the base of a magnificent candelabrum: it combines the head of a woman, the body and legs of a greyhound, the wings of a bird, and the tail of a lion; between the shoulders is a columnar block, which supported probably one angle of the candelabrum. Found, in 1780, in the Villa of Antoninus Pius, near Civita Lavinia, on the site of the ancient Lanuvium. Pt. 10. Pl. XXXI.

Against the adjoining pier: Bas-relief representing, on a sunk panel, a candelabrum surmounted by a lighted lamp, and decorated with lemnisci, or fillets, which terminate in poppy-heads, perhaps in honour of Ceres: it is probably from the interior wall of a temple. Formerly in the Mattei Collection. Pt. 2. Pl. II.

Underneath: Panel supposed to have ornamented the triangular base of a candelabrum: upon it, a Bacchante in bas-relief, wearing a linen cap, and thin floating drapery, and brandishing, as she dances, a knife, and the hind part of a kid: supposed to be copied from the Βάκχη χιμαιροφόρος of Scopas, who flourished about B.C. 360. Pt. 10. Pl. XXXV.

Triangular base of a candelabrum, resting on three lions' feet, and the sides decorated, in bas-relief, with a tripod, a raven beside a laurel-tree, and a gryphon, all sacred to the Hyperborean Apollo. Formerly in a Palace in the Strada Condotta, at Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. LIV. fig. 1.

Triangular base of a candelabrum, of which three other repetitions exist in foreign Museums; the upper angles are decorated with rams' heads, and the lower with the fore-parts of sphinxes; on the panels are infant Cupids bearing armour; perhaps sacred to Mars (Ares). Pt. 1. Pl. VI.

Between these: Base of a small candelabrum, ornamented, in low relief, with festoons of fruit and flowers, with a stork on one side, and a vase on another. Pt. 10. Pl. LVI. fig. 1.

In the third recess: Candelabrum with a modern base, which is decorated with three bas-reliefs originally belonging to another candelabrum, and representing the frantic Agave dancing with the head of her son Pentheus, a Victory pouring a libation, and a Satyr bearing a wine-skin. The upper part found in the Villa of Antoninus Pius. Pt. 1. Pl. V.

V. ANIMALS.

On the first bracket: Butterfly, held in the left hand of a female, life-size; perhaps belonging to a statue of Psyche.

On the second bracket: Small ram's head, in the right hand of a child.

Between these: Fragment of a bas-relief, with four horses' heads, and the hand of a man leading the foremost; part of a quadriga.

In the second window: Group of two greyhounds, life-size, seated, and fondling each other. Found, in 1774, with several other sculptures of dogs, on Monte Cagnuolo, within the precincts of the Villa of Anto-

ninus Pius, near Civita Lavinia, on the site of the ancient Lanuvium.
Pt. 10. Vignette.

On the third bracket: Head of a goat, life-size.

On the fourth bracket: Small eagle, with wings displayed.

Between these: Bas-relief of a cow suckling her calf, and drinking out of a round vessel. Pt. 2. Pl. XVI.

Between the two middle windows: Eagle, small-life-size, with wings closed. From Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. LVIII. fig. 2.

Swan, in red marble, small-life-size. Found near the Villa Pin-ciana, at Rome. Pt. 10. Pl. LVIII. fig. 1.

VI. HUMAN FEET.

Between the second and third windows: Colossal left foot, perfectly bare, probably a votive offering to Jupiter Serapis, or Fortuna Redux.

Smaller foot, with a sandal, and a serpent twined round the ankle; apparently an offering to Æsculapius in gratitude for a cure. Brought from Rome by the Duke of St. Albans. Pt. 10. Pl. XL. fig. 5.

Similar foot. Acquired with the preceding. Pt. 10. Pl. XL. fig. 6.

VII. TRAPEZOPHORA, or supports for tripodial and other tables (here all inserted in modern pedestals).

Between the middle windows: Trapezophoron, formed of a lion's head and leg, of which the lower part is restored; the junction of the two members is covered with foliage. Pt. 1. Pl. III.

Upper part of a trapezophoron, considerably restored; a lion's head, surmounted by goat's horns, and encircled by large leaves. Found in Hadrian's Villa, near Tivoli, 1769. Pt. 1. Pl. XIII.

Against the opposite pier: Trapezophoron, formed of a panther's head and leg, covered at the junction by foliage, and supporting a truss similarly decorated. Pt. 3. Pl. III.

Porphyry trapezophoron, consisting of the head and leg of a panther; the eyes and teeth, originally of some other material, have perished. Found in the Forum, under the Palatine Hill, at Rome, 1772. Pt. 3. Pl. VIII.

Between these:

VIII. A semicircular SUN-DIAL, the base of which is ornamented with lions' heads and feet, united similarly to those of the trapezophora; the lion was an emblem of the Sun. Purchased in 1821.

IX. DOMESTIC FOUNTAINS.

In the fourth recess: Fountain in the form of a shaft, decorated with foliage, in three divisions, each springing from a kind of calyx with broad petals; the lowest division is encircled with olive branches, the next with ivy, and the highest with small unknown leaves; round the second is entwined a serpent, in whose mouth is the remnant of a leaden pipe, from which the water issued. Found, in 1776, near the road from Tivoli to Præneste. Pt. 1. Pl. X.

In the third window: Small fountain, consisting of a square basin with an octagonal elevation in the centre, each face of which is decorated, in relief, with shells and heads of animals. Presented by Charles Towneley, Esq. (the founder of this collection), in 1786.

In the fourth window: Small circular fountain; ornamented, diagonally, with four small gradines, and between them, four bas-reliefs of Bacchic figures. Presented with the preceding.

X. MASKS.

Over the sun-dial are arranged the following: Mask of the youthful Bacchus, crowned with ivy-berries bound into a diadem; it was originally suspended by a loop of metal still remaining, either as an ornament in a theatre, or perhaps from the branch of a tree in a vineyard, to produce fertility, like the "oscilla" of Virgil. From the collection of Sir William Hamilton. Pt. 10. Pl. XL. fig. 7.

Below: Mask of a bearded satyr, or Silenus, also originally suspended in one of the modes referred to.

Between these: Small Mosaic, representing a mask of a satyr, Silenus, or perhaps a Pan, expressing in his own features the wild terror attributed to his influence.

The masks at the sides of this are distinctly scenic (personæ).

Bas-relief of a comic and a tragic mask, the former crowned with the ferula, a plant sacred to Bacchus. Pt. 2, vignette.

Small female tragic mask, the hair in formal plaits.

Below, on a pedestal: Similar mask, of larger dimensions. Formerly in the collection of Sir W. Hamilton.

On the other pedestal: Female mask, such as was placed on the face of a corpse. From the same collection.

Against the next pier: Representations of masks, such as were used in the satyric drama of the Greeks.

Above: Marble panel, revolving on a pivot, sculptured on one side with a thyrsus and four masks, representing a bearded Bacchus, a Satyr, and two Bacchantes; on the other side, in lower relief, the mask of a Bacchante. Such panels, fixed in this manner, were used in Roman houses for windows or ventilators. Purchased in 1818.

Underneath: Bas-relief of a mask of Pan, with a syrix.

XI. ORNAMENTAL DISCS (clypea), sculptured in relief on both sides; originally suspended by chains in the intercolumniations of colonnades, in Pompeian and Roman houses, and also probably in theatres.

Between the fourth and fifth windows, on a bracket: Disc, having on one side the full face of a bearded Satyr, or Pan, crowned with ivy, and encircled by an oak-wreath; on the other, in low relief, the head of a Silenus, a branch of ivy, and a lighted altar. Pt. 2. Pl. XL.

On the adjoining bracket: Disc, having on one side an eagle seizing a hare, encircled by an ivy-wreath; on the other, Cupid sacrificing to the god of Lampsacus. Found near Rome. Pt. 2. Pl. XXXVIII.

Between the fifth and sixth windows, on a bracket: Disc, probably from a theatre; on one side, a bearded mask, with the legend NEVIVS . POETA . CAP., intended apparently as a memorial of the early Roman dramatist; on the other, a panther, with a thyrsus. From the collection of Sir W. Hamilton.

On the remaining bracket: Disc, having on one side a Pan, holding in his right hand a mask of Silenus, and in his left a pedum; on the other, a Silenus, bearing a basket and a thyrsus, before an altar. From the same collection.

XII. ALTARS.

On the North side of the Room: Altar sacred to Bacchus; in front, a bas-relief of Silenus riding on a panther, and holding a thyrsus; above, a pair of cymbals suspended; on one side of the altar, a præfericulum, or ewer; on the other a patera, both emblems of the libations offered upon it. Purchased at Rome from Piranesi, 1771. Pt. 10. Pl. LV. fig. 1.

Altar, profusely decorated on the front and sides with masks, festoons of fruit and flowers, and birds; at the back are ears of corn: probably dedicated to Ceres.

Altar, having in front two birds drinking from a vase, under a festoon suspended from bucrania, and at the sides the præfericulum and patera. Pt. 10. Pl. LIV. fig. 2.

Altar, of which the angles are decorated with sphinxes, both at the top and bottom; in front, a bas-relief of Apollo holding a lyre at a table, on which are a raven, a tripod, and three rolls of manuscripts; on one side is a preparation for sacrifice; on the opposite side the upper part of the original bas-relief has been replaced by an unfinished block; at the back is Diana Lucifera feeding a deer. Presented by Sir W. Hamilton, 1775.

Altar, adorned at the front angles with heads of Jupiter Ammon, at the back, with those of rams; on the principal face is an ibis contending with a serpent; above this, and at the sides of the altar, festoons, birds, and instruments of libation. Formerly in the Villa Burioni, at Rome.

Between the fourth and fifth windows: Altar, of Romano-Egyptian design; in front, a priest kneeling, with a shrine and various emblems; on one side, Harpocrates, in a car drawn by two hippopotami, amidst the reeds of the Nile; on the other, the bull Apis; at the back, a personification of Autumn. Formerly in the Odescalchi collection. Pt. 10. Pl. LII.

Small altar, inscribed in front with a dedication to Diana from Aurlius Timotheus; the sides have rude allegorical bas-reliefs.

Altar resembling the companion altar, but having on the right side two priests, with a roll and a torch, and at the back, a figure of Spring; partly sculptured in cavo-relievo, in imitation of the Egyptian style. Formerly in the Odescalchi collection. Pt. 10. Pl. LI.

Between the fifth and sixth windows: Altar sacred to Silvanus: in front, a bas-relief of the god, with various attributes, and a dedicatory inscription from Callistus, farm-servant of Caius Cælius Heliodorus(?); on one side, a boar and a patera; on the other, a ram and a præfericulum;—all symbols of sacrifice. Formerly in the Villa Burioni, at Rome.

Small altar, dedicated by C. Tullius Hesper and Tullia Restituta to the Bona Dea Annianensis, or guardian goddess worshipped near the river Anio: the sides decorated with the præfericulum and patera. Found on the banks of the Anio, near Tivoli. Pt. 10. Pl. LIII. fig. 1.

Front face of an altar, inserted in a modern frame, with a dedicatory inscription to Fortuna Redux from Antonius, a freedman, for the safe return from some expedition of the Emperor Septimius Severus, his sons Caracalla and Geta, and his wife Julia Domna; the name of Geta has been subsequently erased in pursuance of the edict of Caracalla. Purchased at the sale of Topham Beauclerk, Esq.

XIII. CIPPI, or low columns, erected by the Romans for various purposes, chiefly monumental.

In the fifth window: Capital of a cippus, perhaps originally used as the boundary of a vineyard; the bas-reliefs, chiefly of Bacchic symbols, represent, in front, two birds drinking beside a terminus; on one side, two masks of Satyrs, each placed on a cista, or mystic basket; on the other, masks of a Satyr and Pan, similarly placed, with a terminus between them; and at the back, two geese pecking at a festoon of fruit. From Rome. Pt. 1. Pl. XIV.

In the fifth recess: Large monumental cippus, or perhaps pedestal of a statue, having in front a dedicatory inscription from some colonial municipalities to Caius Antonius (supposed to be the brother of Marcus Antonius, the Triumvir), and on the side, a trophy in bas-relief. Found on the plain of Troy, and purchased of Mr. Patterson, in 1853.

In the sixth window:

XIV. CHAIR of pavonazzo marble, apparently a sella balnearis, used for the vapour-bath; perforated in the centre for the ascent of steam, and having wheels sculptured in relief on the sides, in imitation of a wheel-chair. Found in the Baths of Caracalla at Rome, and brought over by Mr. Lyde Browne.

XV. ARCHITECTURAL FRAGMENTS and DECORATIONS.

On the North side of the Room: Slab, which appears to have ornamented a triumphal arch or column; upon it, in bas-relief, armour captured from the Dacians or Sarmatians, similar to that represented upon the base of Trajan's Column, at Rome.

Against the Eastern Wall of the Room: Ornamental console, which originally fronted the key-stone of a triumphal arch: a double volute, elegantly enriched by foliage, supports a small figure of Victory, nearly detached. Found near Frascati. Pt. 1. Pl. xv.

On each side of the preceding: Small group, representing Victory alighting on the back of a bull, which she is about to immolate, her hair and slight drapery still inflated by the breeze; the back portions unfinished, the pair having probably formed ornaments of a triumphal arch. Found on the Monte Cagnuolo, within the precincts of the Villa of Antoninus Pius near Lanuvium, in 1773. Pt. 10. Pl. xxv. xxvi.

Over the left-hand group: Convex slab, apparently part of the external frieze of a circular edifice, ornamented, in low relief, with foliage and birds. Formerly in the Cavaceppi Collection. Pt. 2. Pl. xiv.

Over the right-hand group. Concave slab, from the interior of a circular building, with a bas-relief of vine-branches suspended from bucrania, and, above them, a mask of a laughing Satyr, crowned with ivy. From the same collection. Pt. 2. Pl. x.

On each side of the two preceding slabs: Capital of a pilaster, originally engaged in the wall of a building, decorated with acanthus leaves; amidst these is an eagle grasping in his talons a thunderbolt,— a symbol of Jupiter. They are sculptured in the volcanic stone which abounds in the neighbourhood of Rome.

Below these : Two small shafts of columns, in granite.

On the floor : Part of a Mosaic pavement, representing the head of Neptune (Poseidon), the hair of the head and beard terminating in sea-weed. Found in the ruins of Carthage, and presented by Hudson Gurney, Esq., 1843.

Near these are placed two architectural models :

In the Centre of the Room : A model, in cork, of the Flavian Amphitheatre at Rome, commonly known as the Coliseum. Presented by Philip Hardwick, Esq., R.A., 1852.

In the sixth recess : Model of the Temple of Vesta, at Tivoli. Presented by the Marquis of Exeter.

XVI. A PIG of lead, inscribed M. P. ROSCIEIS. M. F. MAIC. Found at Carthage, in Spain, and presented by Viscount Palmerston, M.P., 1849.

Returning to the head of the staircase, the door on the left leads to the

LYCIAN SALOON.

The Sculptures in this Room consist of the remains of ancient cities in Lycia, one of the south-west provinces of Asia Minor, inhabited by a mixed population of an aboriginal race called Solymi and Termilæ, and by the Greeks, who had colonised it at an early period before the epoch of the Trojan war. These monuments were removed from that country by two expeditions undertaken by Her Majesty's Government in the years 1842—1846, under the directions of Sir C. Fellows, by whom the greater part of them were discovered. They consist of sculptured remains, ranging in date from the subjugation of the country by the Persians, B.C. 545, to the period of the Byzantine Empire. With them are exhibited some plaster casts of certain other sculptures, of which the removal was not found practicable, but of which facsimiles were necessary as illustrations of the history of art, and as documents for the study of a language and written character found in Lycia, and apparently peculiar to that part of Asia Minor. These objects are all from the city of Xanthus, except when otherwise specified.

No. 1. Bas-reliefs from the Harpy tomb, which stood on the Acropolis, close to the Theatre. The sculptures, as will be seen by the model placed near it, decorated the four sides of a rectangular solid shaft, about seventeen feet high, weighing eighty tons, and supported a roof with a moulding, inclosing a chamber seven feet six inches square, entered by a small low door on the west side. This monument was never finished, the projection for raising the shaft still remaining, and the shaft having been polished only half way up. Its base was shaken, probably, by one of those earthquakes by which the country is known to have been visited, and two of the slabs on the western side were found thrown on the ground. Various conjectural explanations of the sculptures have been proposed. The scene on the west side [b] has been supposed to represent Hera or Juno seated, and holding a cup before the sacred cow of Io and Epaphus, Aphrodite, and the three Charites or Graces; others consider that the two seated figures represent Demeter (Ceres), and Kora (Proserpine), and the group between them the Three Horæ or Seasons, or the Erinnyes or Furies. Three different explanations have been proposed for the scene on the east side [a]. 1. Tantalus bringing to Pandarus in Lycia the golden dog stolen from Crete. 2. Asclepius (Æsculapius), the seated figure, in front Telesphorus, or Ganymedes and Artemis, behind him Charis and Pitho, two of the Graces. 3. Neptune seated, before him a boy offering a cock, and a man leaning on a staff; behind, Amphitrite and Amymone. On the north side [c], at the corners, are two Harpies flying away with two of the daughters of Pandarus, having been sent for that purpose by Zeus, to avenge the theft and perjury of their father; a third daughter, Aedon, who was saved from destruction, is represented fallen on her knees and deploring the fate of her sisters. On this side also is a seated divinity, conjectured to be Zeus, or Pluto, under whose chair is an animal, either a bear or boar; before him stands an armed man; they hold a helmet between them. On the south side [d], at the corners, are two Harpies bearing off two of the daughters of Pandarus. In the centre is a seated divinity, supposed to be Zeus, and a female offering a dove, perhaps Aphrodite.

Nos. 2—8. Sculptured slabs representing satyrs, a lion devouring a deer, panther, dog, bull, and boar. These form a kind of frieze; they are executed in the stone of the country. Acropolis.

Nos. 9—16. Narrow frieze of cocks and hens, executed in the same style. Acropolis.

Nos. 17—21. Frieze, perhaps from a tomb; a procession of two chariots, with old men and youthful charioteers, a led horse, a horseman, five figures of priests and priestesses with wands and torches, an armed female and a youth standing at the side of a column and chair. Acropolis.

No. 21*. Fragment, apparently part of a chair.

No. 22. Bas-relief, part of two draped females wearing sandals, one raises with her left hand the border of her talaric tunic.

No. 23. Triangular fragment, probably the gable end of a tomb; a male and female figure seated, one on each side of an Ionic column, on the top of which is a Harpy. Traces of colour remain on this slab. Acropolis.

Nos. 24—27. Fragments, apparently gable ends of a tomb with recesses, having on them the Sphinx, represented with the face of a female, the body of a lion, and the wings of a bird, as the daughter of the Chimæra, the indigenous monster of Lycia. Acropolis.

Nos. 28—30. Draped torsos of three architectural figures, in diploid talaric tunics, one edge of which they seem to have been raising.

No. 30 a. Fragment, apparently of a similar figure.

No. 31. Chest, or soros, found on the top of one of the stèles or pillar tombs. At the end, in bas-relief, is a lion fondling its cubs; and on one side a man standing and stabbing with a sword a lion standing on its hind paws; at the other side, a man mounted on horseback, followed by another on foot, and a hoplite holding a large Argolic buckler.

No. 32. Fragment, apparently from the other end of the same or a similar sarcophagus; on it a lioness fondling two cubs, one of which she holds in her mouth.

No. 33. Square block, from the sides of which issue the fore parts of two lions. It was found at the foot of the inscribed monument, of which it was probably the epistema or crowning decoration. Compare the representation of a building surmounted by a sphinx and two lions in No. 61.

Nos. 34—140. These sculptures and architectural members formed part of the building, of which a restored model, with a ground plan of the remains as they were found in situ, and a picture of the scene of the discovery, are placed in this room. The model, made under the direction of Sir C. Fellows, and presented by him, exhibits an Ionic peristyle building, with fourteen columns running round a solid cella, and the statues in the intercolumniations, placed on a base, which stands upon two steps. The general dimensions are as follows:—Height from top of the pediment to base, 35 ft. 9 in.; 12 ft. 9 in. height of base; 3 ft. 4 in. breadth of broad frieze; 2 ft. breadth of narrow frieze; 10 ft. 5 in. height of columns; 1 ft. 6 in. breadth of frieze of cella; 1 ft. 6 in. breadth of external frieze; 3 ft. 1½ in. height of pediment; 20 ft. breadth of base; 28 ft. length of base; 9 ft. breadth of cella; 15 ft. length of ditto.

The object of this building has not yet been clearly ascertained; by some it has been considered as a trophy in memory of the conquest of Lycia by the Persians under Harpagus, in the 3rd year of the 58th Olympiad, B.C. 545, and probably erected about the 76th Olympiad, B.C. 476; by others the sculptures have been placed as late as the 83rd or even 96th Olympiad, B.C. 450—395. Another conjecture is that their subject represents the suppression, by the Persian satrap of Lycia, of the revolt of the Cilicians against the Persians, B.C. 387, Olymp. 98, 2.

Nos. 34—49. Sculptures of the broader frieze which is supposed to have been placed round the base: they represent a series of contests of warriors armed in the Greek manner with helmets, crests, and Argolic bucklers, thoraces and greaves, and more lightly armed antagonists, some being only in tunics, or naked, and wearing only helmets; horsemen, &c. On Nos. 39 and 46 will be seen Asiatics wearing the pointed cap called cidaris, and long tunics, fighting against Greeks. On No. 45 is a warrior to whose shield is attached the object called by Homer λασιθήριον, and used as a protection for the legs against missiles.

Nos. 50—68. The narrow frieze which ran round the upper part of the base. On Nos. 50, 51, 52, 53, is seen the attack of the town and main gate of a city, supposed to be Xanthus; this gate is defended by a low flanking tower with windows; the besiegers have planted a scaling ladder, which two warriors are supposed to be holding on securely by ropes. Three hoplites, having taken off their sandals, are seen mounting the ladder; a fourth has already marched into the tower; the other troops, called on by their officers, advance rapidly to the attack. Nos. 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, represent a general combat between Greeks, some armed as hoplites, against others wearing long tunics. Nos. 60, 61, a walled city with its buildings, within which are tombs and temples, and the heads of the besieged looking over the battlements. On No. 62, a Persian satrap or monarch seated, supposed to be Harpagus, attended by his guards, and a slave holding over his head an umbrella—the emblem of sovereignty—receiving a deputation of two elders from the besieged city. Nos. 65, 66, sally from the town; the garrison appear on the walls, while the women throw up their arms shrieking in despair. No. 67 is supposed to be the retreat of the defeated Lycians into the city.

No. 69. Capping stones of the east front of the base, which was decorated with a double band of egg-and-tongue ornament: on the corner ones are sculptured the antefixal ornament.

Nos. 70—74. Columns and portions of columns from the peristyle of the building.

Nos. 75—84. Statues which were placed in the intercolumniations: they represent females having at their feet marine emblems, such as a dolphin, crab, eel, and the sea bird halcyon, and passing through the air rapidly, as we see by the action of the drapery. These figures are supposed to have reference to the arrival of Latona, with her children, Artemis and Apollo, at Xanthus, or to the naval victory over Evagoras, or to represent the Ionian and Æolian cities, which assisted Harpagus in the taking of Xanthus.

Nos. 85—91. Fragments of similar figures.

Nos. 92, 94. The capitals of the two pilasters of the east front of the building, with capitals of leaves and fleurons.

Nos. 95—105. The narrow frieze which was disposed round the cella of the building: the subject is an entertainment, the guests reclining upon couches, served with wine and attended by female singers and musicians, and a sacrifice of rams, bulls, and goats.

Nos. 106—109. Six of the lacunaria or coffers of the ceiling, which are supposed to have come from the eastern front; the details of architectural ornaments, consisting of an egg-and-tongue moulding, antefixal ornaments, &c., were painted on them.

Nos. 110—123. The narrow frieze which is supposed to have gone round the exterior of the building; it represents presents of dresses, horses, &c., brought to a satrap; the hunt of the bear and of the wild boar, and a battle of horsemen and foot-soldiers.

No. 124. Moulding from the north corner of the eastern pediment.

No. 125. Eastern pediment with sculptures executed in relief, representing male and female figures, probably divinities, seated, and others standing.

No. 126. Half of the western pediment—six warriors on foot, the first fallen, sustaining the charge of a horseman.

Nos. 127, 128, 129, 130. Upper corner stone of the eastern pediment. No. 127 is the keystone of the pediment, and shows the manner in which it was tenoned into the roof.

No. 131 a.—f. Six lions' heads which decorated one of the sides of the roof.

No. 132. Draped figure of a female in rapid motion, from the south acroterium, like those previously described, 75—84.

Nos. 133, 134. Figures of youths bearing females, conjecturally placed on the apex of the pediment.

No. 135. Draped female figure, similar to No. 132, from the north acroterium of the pediment.

Nos. 136, 137. Lower portion of two figures in rapid motion, from the north and south ends of the west pediment.

Nos. 138 a.—d. Roof tiles from the building.

Nos. 139, 140. Two crouching lions, found at the base of the monument, and conjecturally placed in the intercolumniation in the model.

No. 140*. Fore and hind foot of a similar lion.

No. 140**. Fragment of sculpture from an angle of a building, crouching warrior and bull, found between the Harpy tomb and the Acropolis.

No. 141 a. Cast of the stèle or pillar, a portion of the monument called the Inscribed Monument; it is covered on the four sides with a long inscription in the language of the ancient Lycians, in which there is mention of the son of Harpagus, and several Lycian towns and states; on the north side is a Greek inscription of twelve hexameter lines, which, commencing with the first line of one of the epigrams of the poet Simonides, who flourished B.C. 556, records the warlike exploits of the son of Harpagus, and that this column was erected in consequence in the agora, or market-place of the twelve gods.

No. 141 b. Fragment of a bas-relief representing two figures, one armed and advancing, the other fallen; found at the base of the inscribed stèle.

No. 142. Tomb of a satrap of Lycia named Paiafa, resembling a wooden coffer or roofed house, with beams issuing forth at the sides; the upper part roofed with an arch resembling the early Gothic. The groove in the ridge surmounting the arch was probably for the insertion of a bull's head of some other material, these tombs being represented so decorated in the Lycian rock sculptures. On each side of the roof is an armed figure, perhaps Glaucus or Sarpedon, in a chariot of four horses, and along the ridge a combat of warriors on horseback, and a Lycian inscription recording that the tomb was made by Paiafa, a satrap; at the east side are two naked figures and sphinxes, at the west two sphinxes and a small door for introducing the corpse. On the north side below is a combat of warriors on foot and horseback, and the satrap Paiafa seated, attended by four figures. On the east side other figures of men or gods, and an inscription recording that the tomb was made by Paiafa. On each side of the roof are two water-spouts in the form of a lion's head, and the name of another person, Itime, who made that part of the tomb.

No. 143. Roof of a tomb, similar to No. 142, apparently of a person named Merewe; on the ridge, south side, is an entertainment, the crowning an athlete, a scene of reception; on the north side, combat of warriors on foot; in the panels are sphinxes and divinities. On each side below is Bellerophon in a chariot attacking the Chimæra.

No. 143*. Fragment of lion's head.

No. 144. Part of the cornice from the entrance of a rock tomb, representing blocks of wood.

Nos. 145—149. Casts from a tomb excavated in the solid rock at Pinara. No. 145 is a portion of the pediment. No. 146 is one of the Gorgons' heads with which the ends of the dentals were decorated. No. 147 is the frieze, representing warriors on horse and foot escorting captives, and Nos. 148, 149, casts from the walls of the tomb within the portico, representing an ancient walled city.

Nos. 150—152. Three plaster casts taken from the sculptures of a rock tomb at Cadyanda, exceedingly interesting from bilingual inscriptions in the Greek and Lycian languages, which accompany the figures. No. 150, from the panel of the door, represents Salas standing, holding an anochoe. No. 151, females conversing, one of whom is named Mesos; and the nursing of a child. No. 152, an entertainment; on the first couch to the right recline Endys and Seskos; in the next, Molos or Molas and Kparmos, and two seated children, one named Hecatmnas; under these couches are dogs; in the next couch reclines a female named Siphos, to whom a child, Porlaps, stretches out its arms from the next couch, in which are Salas and the female named Mesos; beyond these is Eidas, the son of Salas, and two persons, one playing the double flute; on the extreme right is a naked figure named Hecatmnas.

No. 153. Cast of the inscription of the name of Hector, over a fighting warrior; Cadyanda.

No. 154. Cast of an inscription in the language of the ancient Lycians, from a sarcophagus at Antiphellus.

No. 155. Cast of a bilingual inscription in the ancient Lycian and Greek languages, from Lavisse, near Telmessus; it records that Apollonides and Laparas, son of Apollonides, have made a tomb for themselves and their family.

No. 156. Cast of a bilingual inscription, from a tomb at Antiphellus, in the ancient Lycian and Greek languages, recording that Iktasla, a native of Antiphellus, had made the monument for himself and his family.

No. 156*. Fragment of an ancient Lycian inscription, being part of a sepulchral formula threatening a fine upon any one who shall violate the monument.

No. 157. Casts from a portion of a monolithic pedestal at Tlos, decorated with sculptures representing combats and athletic sports; a view of the attack of a city, probably Tlos. The principal hero bears the Lycian name Esrasa.

No. 158. Cast taken from the interior of the portico of the rock tomb at Tlos; it represents Bellerophon mounted on Pegasus, hurling a lance at the Chimæra.

No. 159. Bilingual inscription in the Greek and Lycian languages, in honour of Pixodarus, King of Caria, B.C. 340. Found near the Horse-Tomb. (No. 142.)

No. 160. Cast from the gable end of a tomb; it represents two females, probably Naiad nymphs, dressed in short tunics, dancing.

No. 161. Cast from a tomb; it represents a gable end, on which are two lions devouring a bull, above, a Lycian inscription; from a rock tomb near the Chimæra tomb.

No. 162. Fragment of the corner of a building, with return of egg moulding.

Nos. 163, 164. Fragments of egg moulding from a tomb.

No. 165. Inscription, containing part of a decree of the city and archons of Xanthus, dated in the month Lous, the 9th year of Ptolemy Philadelphus.

No. 166. Casts of the sculptures of a rock tomb at Myra, coloured to represent its present condition; on the exterior [a] is a standing male figure, apparently a divinity, and on the right hand of it [b] a young man, attended by a boy, leaning on a staff, offering a fruit or flower to a veiled female attended by two females, one of whom holds a pyxis; on one of the interior walls is a reposing bearded figure, probably Dionysos, or Pluto, holding a rhyton in the right and a cup in the left hand, on whom attends a boy with wine [d]; on the other interior wall a seated veiled female [c], probably Proserpine or Aphrodite, draped by a female attendant, Pitho, and having before her a naked youth, Eros (?) holding a lecythus and strigil.

No. 167. Two feet sandalled, from statues.

No. 168. Remains of a Roman sarcophagus, found in a mausoleum containing four sarcophagi; on the cover have been a male and female figure reclining, the man holding in his hand a roll; one end only remains of the chest, representing a combat of warriors on horse and on foot; at the back a torch, placed vertically, towards which on each side a gryphon advances.

No. 169. Portion of a sarcophagus with its roof cover, in the pediment of which is a shield; on it boys or cupids trundling hoops and playing at ball, and a horseman.

No. 170. Part of the base of another sarcophagus; on it are lower parts of the figures of a hunt.

No. 171. Portion of another sarcophagus; on it are the lower portions of figures in a vestibule of twisted columns.

No. 172. Two metopés with the head of Artemis, or Diana, full face, and triglyphs from the Roman arch at Xanthus, erected in the reign of Vespasian.

No. 173. Monument found in a Roman bath; on one side are Plutus and Tyche standing, full face; on the other is a Persian shooting arrows in a cave, in which are an ox, a stork, a dog, a boar, a lizard, grasshopper, and fox.

No. 174. Torso of a male warrior.

No. 175. Part of the interior frieze of a tomb at Antiphellus, probably representing nymphs.

No. 176. Inscription recording that Aurelius Jason, son of Alaimis, and Chryson, daughter of Eleutherus, have purchased a tomb for themselves, in the 13th of the month Artemisios, during the priesthood of Callistratus; found at Uslann, near the mouth of the river Xanthus.

Presented by Lieut. Harvey, R.N. •

No. 176*. Cippus, in shape of an altar, having in front, in bas-relief, a man reclining upon a couch, on which is seated his wife; at the foot of the couch a slave standing: on one pillar is a wreath voted by the city. Below, the name of Hellanion of Tarsus. Presented by J. Scott Tucker, Esq., 1851.

Bas-relief, representing six soldiers dragged as prisoners, their hands and arms tied behind them. Presented by J. Scott Tucker, Esq., 1851.

Nos. 177—183. Fragments of Byzantine architecture which appear to have decorated a church; they were found amidst the remains of a Christian village under the Greek monument (No. 34 and following), and seem to have been buried by the earthquake which overthrew it.

In a glass case, at the end of the room, are the following smaller objects, found in the Acropolis:—

Two stone fragments, apparently ornaments; found inserted in the walls of the Acropolis.

Left elbow of a female statue. This and the preceding, which are both of small-life-size, in Parian marble, of archaic but good workmanship, were found, with numbers 28 and 29, built into the walls of the Acropolis.

Portions of leaden and iron cramps; found inserted in the earlier sculptures of the Acropolis.

Three small vases, a broad-rimmed cup, and four small lamps, in terracotta.

Twenty-five small fragments of glass vessels.

Lower portion of a small bowl of embossed red ware.

Small fragment of a vase of so-called Samian ware, stamped with a cross, of the Byzantine period.

Fragment from the bottom of a cup, of the same ware.

Two fragments from the side of a painted cup.

Six fragments of vases, with fine black glazing, in the style of Nola.

Fragment of the lip of a large crater, red, with an ivy wreath painted in black.

Small bronze tripod vessel, one foot resembling a duck's head.

Bronze handle of a jug.

Leaden grating for the drain pipe numbered 184.

Fragment of a leaden pipe.

Handle of a terracotta amphora, stamped with a circular band, inscribed, in the Doric dialect, with the name of Hippocrates (an eponymous magistrate of Rhodes), and inclosing a rose, in low relief.

Similar handle, with an oblong stamp, exhibiting a small caduceus, and the name of the magistrate Himas.

Small votive human foot, and part of the leg, in marble, of rude workmanship.

Various fragments of painted cement; from the walls of early Christian edifices.

The preceding objects were all found in excavating the base of the monument numbered 34 et seq.

The following were found in the houses overwhelmed by the fall of the monument:—

Five round flat pieces of terracotta, each perforated with two holes, and apparently intended for weights.

Two sickles, and several hooks, nails, and staples, of iron.

Small leaden weight.

Eight small fragments of glass windows.

Small pyramidal block of terracotta, of the kind supposed to have been hung round the necks of cattle.

The following were found at Pinara:—

A mass comprising fragments of human bones, tiles, and cement, conglomerated by the deposit of lime filtering from the rock of a tomb.

Fragment of stucco, with marks of sculpture, used to fill up the fissures of the rock of the tombs.

Fragment of cement, used for the lining of a water cistern.

The door on the north side of this Saloon leads to the ### GREEK GALLERIES.

The small ante-room, and large Saloon adjoining it, which unite the Lycian with the Elgin Saloon, and are at present unoccupied, are intended for the reception of a portion of the Greek Sculptures, now preserved in the Elgin and Phigaleian Saloons, where the deficiency of space precludes the possibility of arranging them upon the desired system.

ELGIN SALOON.*

As many of the sculptures in this Room have been referred to, in various publications, by the numbers with which they were marked in their former situation, those numbers have been retained; but, to facilitate a reference from the Synopsis to the marbles, a fresh set of numbers, adapted to their present disposition, has been added in red. The original numbers are subjoined to the descriptions. Those which have the letter A prefixed refer to such articles as were originally placed in the room then denominated the Fourteenth.

The objects themselves are described in the following order:—

1. The Metopes.
2. The Frieze.
3. The Pedimental Sculptures.
4. Miscellaneous objects, statues, inscriptions, &c.

1. THE METOPES.

Nos. 1—16. Sixteen of the metopes belonging to the Parthenon, (of which No. 9 is a cast in plaster, from the original in the Royal Museum at Paris,) which, alternately with the triglyphs, ornament the frieze of the entablature surmounting the colonnade: they represent the battle between the Centaurs and Lapithæ, or rather between the Centaurs and Athenians, who under Theseus joined the Lapithæ (a people of Thessaly) in this contest. In some of these sculptures the Centaurs are victorious, in others the Athenians have the advantage, while in others, again, the victory seems doubtful. These magnificent specimens of ancient art are executed with great spirit in alto-rilievo; they were seen originally at a height of nearly forty-four feet from the ground. (11, 2, 8, 12, 15, 6, 4, 5, 13, 7, 1, 3, 9, 14, 10.)

No. 16a. Metope of the right angle of the north side of the temple, representing two females, one seated on a rock, the other standing.

No. 16b. Metope from the left corner of the west façade, representing a horseman.

* All the articles in this room, except a few which are particularly specified, belonged to the Earl of Elgin.

In this room are placed two models of the Parthenon at Athens, made by R. C. Lucas; one exhibits the condition in which this temple appeared after the bombardment by the Venetian general, Morosini, in A.D. 1687; the other the same edifice restored.

No. 16c. Cast of a metope; Centaur bearing off a female. Recently discovered at Athens.

The sculptures from 17 to 90 (inclusive) compose the exterior frieze of the cella of the Parthenon, which embellished the upper part of the walls within the colonnade, at the height of the frieze of the pronaos, and which was continued in an uninterrupted series of sculpture entirely round the temple. It is in very low relief. The subject represents the sacred procession which took place at the great Panathenæa, a festival which was celebrated every fifth year, at Athens, in honour of Minerva, the patroness of the city. The bas-reliefs which compose this frieze are arranged, as nearly as can be ascertained, in the order in which they were originally placed in the Parthenon, several alterations having been made on their removal to their present situation, in consequence of a more careful examination and minute comparison of them with drawings made before their removal from the temple. Those on the principal front of the temple, namely the east, commence on the left hand of the visitor as he enters the room, then follow those of the north, and lastly those of the west and south.

2. THE FRIEZE.

Nos. 17—24. That portion of the above-mentioned frieze which occupied the east end of the temple. On two of the slabs which compose this part of the frieze are represented divinities and deified heroes, seated; namely, Castor and Pollux, Ceres and Triptolemus, Jupiter and Juno, Æsculapius and Hygeia. A third slab, which represented four other divinities, also seated, has been destroyed. On the right and left of these sacred characters are trains of females with their faces directed to the gods, to whom they are carrying gifts: we see also directors or regulators of the procession, among whom are the officers whose duty it was to receive the presents that were offered. These females appear to have headed the procession, and to have been followed by the victims, charioteers, horsemen, &c., both on the north and south sides of the temple, which together formed a procession up to the same point in two separate columns. Nos. 20 and 23 are casts in plaster, presented by Sir Francis Chantrey. The original of the latter is in the Royal Museum at Paris. The upper parts of two of the figures in No. 21, the legs and right arm of the youthful figure in No. 22, and the two figures placed under the latter number, are also of plaster, from moulds made before the destruction of these figures, which took place before the marbles came into the possession of Lord Elgin. (16, 17, 18, 18*, 19, 20, A 100, 21.)

Nos. 25—46. A portion of the same frieze, taken from the north side of the temple. No. 25 is a fragment of a much larger slab; it represents two of the Metæci, or strangers, who settled at Athens, and were allowed to take part in the procession. They carry on their shoulders a kind of tray filled with cakes and other articles. The remainder of this part of the frieze represents charioteers and horsemen. Among the latter are seven slabs, (Nos. 37—43,) which, whether we consider the elegance of the compositions, or the spirit with which the figures of the men and horses are executed, present us with the highest effort of the art of sculpture in the class of low relief. No. 46 having been placed at the south-west corner of the temple, the figure sculptured at the end of it belongs to that part of the procession which decorated the west end of the cella. It is repeated in plaster, that the whole of the western frieze may be seen by the spectator at one view. (22, 24, 23, 34, 98, 177*, 35, 35*, 37, 178*, 36, 35**, 38, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 38*, 32, 33.) The portions No. 25a, No. 25e, No. 26a, No. 26e, No. 61*, No. 62*, are casts from portions recently discovered at Athens. A fragment of slab (38) has been presented by J. H. Smith Barry, Esq., 1850.

No. 47. A single slab of the frieze from the west end of the temple. It represents two horsemen, one of whom is riding before the other, and seems to be in the act of urging his companion to quicken his pace. The direction of these figures is the same as that on the north side, namely, from right to left. (39.)

There is a peculiarity in the frieze of the west end, which distinguishes it from that on the north and south sides of the temple. The subjects represented on the slabs of those two sides run one into another, that is, what was left imperfect in one slab is completed in the next; whereas in the west end the subjects are nearly complete on each piece of marble. The western frieze is likewise distinguished from those of the two sides of the temple, by the comparatively few figures introduced into it.

Nos. 48—61. Fourteen plaster casts, composing the remainder of the frieze at the west end of the temple. (A. 75—88.)

Nos. 62—90. That portion of the same frieze which enriched the south side of the temple. It represents a procession of victims, charioteers, and horsemen, and is very similar, in its general character and appearance, to the frieze on the opposite or north side. With respect to the victims, none are represented on the part of the frieze from the north side of the temple yet remaining to us; but that they formed a part of the procession on that side, as well as on the south, cannot be doubted, since Stuart, in his celebrated work on Athens, has engraved a fragment of one of them. The figure sculptured at the end of No. 90, (on the right of the entrance,) belongs to the eastern portion of the frieze. No. 62 was presented by C. R. Cockerell, Esq., R.A. (40*, 41, 41*, 38**, 46, 50, 47, 52, 40, 42, 49, 45, 48, 43, 44, 51, 38***, 53, 54, 56, 55, 15*, 57, 59, 61, 60, 58, 96, 62.)

At the south side of the room above the frieze are casts of the metope at the left angle of the western façade of the Parthenon, representing a horseman, and of the metope of the right angle of the north side, representing a female, probably a divinity, seated, on a rock, and another standing before her. Between them are casts of the portions of the frieze recently discovered. At the north end of the room is a cast of the twelfth metope of the south façade of the Parthenon, representing a centaur bearing off a female, and some additional casts of that part of the frieze which exhibits the victors in their cars.

3. THE PEDIMENTAL SCULPTURES.

Nos. 91—106. Of these Nos. 91 to 98 are from the Eastern Pediment, on which was represented the birth of Minerva: Nos. 99 to 106 are from the Western Pediment, on which was represented the contest between Minerva and Neptune for the honour of giving name to the city of Athens. These sculptures are placed in the order in which they originally stood in the building.

No. 91. The upper part of the figure of Hyperion, or Helios, rising out of the sea. His arms are stretched forward, in the act of holding out the reins of his coursers. This figure, which represents the approach of Day, occupied the angle of the pediment on the left of the spectator. (65.)

No. 92. The heads of two of the horses belonging to the car of Hyperion or Helios. They are just emerging from the waves, and seem impatient to run their course. (66.)

No. 93. A statue of Theseus, the Athenian hero; he is represented half reclined on a rock, which is covered with the skin of a lion. Theseus, it is well known, professedly imitated the character of Hercules: and it is worthy of remark, that the attitude here given to Theseus is very similar to that of Hercules on some of the coins of Crotona. (71.)

No. 94. A group of two goddesses, probably intended to represent Ceres and her daughter Proserpine; the latter is leaning on the right shoulder of her mother. They are sitting on low seats, which are nearly alike in their construction, both of them being furnished with cushions, and ornamented with mouldings of a similar style. (77.)

No. 95. A statue of Iris, one of the daughters of Oceanus, and the messenger of the celestial deities, particularly of Juno. Iris is represented in quick motion, with her veil inflated and fluttering behind her; and she appears evidently in haste to execute the mission on which she is sent, that of communicating to the distant regions of the earth the important intelligence of the birth of Minerva. (74.)

No. 96. A torso of Victory. The wings of this figure were probably of bronze: the holes in which they were fastened to the marble may still be seen. (72, 262.)

No. 97. A group of the three Fates. (67, 63.)

No. 98. The head of one of the horses belonging to the chariot of Night, Selene, or the Moon, which was represented plunging into the ocean on the right angle of the east pediment, that is to say, the right angle in reference to the spectator. The car of Day has been already described, (Nos. 91, 92,) as it was represented rising out of the waters on the opposite angle of the same pediment. (68.)

No. 99. A recumbent statue, supposed to be of the river-god Ilissus. The Ilissus was a small stream that ran along the south side of the plain of Athens. This figure, which, with the exception of the Theseus, is the finest in the collection, occupied the left angle of the west pediment. (70.)

Cast of the mutilated group supposed to represent Hercules and Hebe.

No. 100. The torso of a male figure, supposed to be that of Cecrops, the founder of Athens. (76.)

No. 101. The upper part of the head of Minerva. (See the following No.) This head was originally covered with a bronze helmet, as appears from the holes by which it was fastened to the marble: and the sockets of the eyes, which were originally filled with metal or coloured stones, are now hollow. (118.)

No. 102. A fragment of the statue of Minerva, one of the principal figures in the west pediment, and of nearly the same proportions as the torso of Neptune, from the same pediment. (No. 103.) This fragment consists of a portion only of the chest of the goddess, which is covered, as usual, with the ægis. The angles of the ægis appear to have been ornamented with bronze serpents, and the centre of it to have been studded with the head of Medusa, of the same metal; the holes in which these ornaments were fastened to the marble are plainly visible. The upper part of the head of this statue, the feet, and a portion of the Erichthonian serpent, are preserved in the collection. See Nos. 101, 256, and 104. (75.)

No. 103. The upper part of the torso of Neptune, one of the principal figures in the west pediment. (64.)

No. 104. See No. 102. (271.)

No. 104*. Cast of a head in the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris, supposed to have belonged to one of the statues of this pediment, and presented by M. Charles Lenormant, 1846.

No. 105. The torso of Niké Apteros, or Victory without wings, who was represented in this manner by the Athenians to intimate that they held their gifts in perpetuity, and that she could not desert them. This goddess was represented driving the car of Minerva, on the west pediment; the car approached Minerva, as if to receive her into it, after her successful contest with Neptune. (69.)

No. 105*. Cast of the head of the Victory without wings in the car of Minerva, in the western pediment of the Parthenon. Presented by the Count de Laborde, 1846.

No. 106. A fragment of a group which originally consisted of Latona with her two children, Apollo and Diana. This group was placed on the right side of the west pediment. All that remains in the fragment before us, is the lap of Latona, with a small portion of the figure of the infant Apollo. (73.)

4. MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTS, STATUES, INSCRIPTIONS, &c.

No. 106*. Cast of the head of a female in fine workmanship, found in excavating for a building in Mercury Street, Athens, between the temple of Theseus and the ancient gate of the Peloponnesus.

No. 107. The celebrated Sigeon inscription, first published by Chishull, in his "Antiquitates Asiaticæ," and afterwards more correctly by Chandler in his "Inscriptiones Antiquæ." It is written in the most ancient Greek characters, and in the boustrophedon manner, that is to say, the lines follow each other in the same direction as the ox passes from one furrow to another in ploughing. The purport of the inscription is to record the presentation of three vessels, namely, a cup, a saucer or stand, and a strainer, for the use of the Prytaneum, or hall of justice, at Sigeum. The name of the donor was Phanodicus, the son of Hermocrates, and a native of Proconnesus. (199.)

No. 108. A piece of the ceiling of the temple of Erechtheus at Athens. (299.)

No. 109. The lower part of a female statue covered with drapery. (299*.)

No. 110. A piece of the shaft of an Ionic column, belonging to the temple of Erechtheus at Athens. (312.)

No. 111. A colossal statue of Bacchus, from the choragic monument of Thrasylus, at Athens, B.C. 320. It is a sitting figure covered with the skin of a lion, and with a broad belt round the waist; it was originally placed on the summit of the edifice, at a height rather exceeding twenty-seven feet. (205.)

No. 112. The capital, and a piece of the shaft of one of the Doric columns of the Parthenon. (207.)

No. 113. An imperfect statue of a youth; of the size of life, and of the most exquisite workmanship. (306.)

No. 114. A piece of the shaft of a column, belonging to the temple of Erechtheus at Athens. (304.)

No. 115. Part of the jamb of a door, from the eastern side of the same temple.

No. 116. Fragment of a leaf moulding, from the north side of the same temple.

No. 117. Part of one of the coffers of the same temple.

No. 118. Egg and tongue moulding, from the portico under the ceiling. These fragments are from the collection of the late J. Inwood, Esq. For other fragments from the same temple, see Nos. 125—127, 219—228.

No. 119 is now 113.

Nos. 120, 121, are now 187*, 187**.

No. 122. A sepulchral solid urn, having three figures in bas-relief on the front. The first of these is a warrior with a helmet and a shield, who is joining hands with an elderly man dressed in a long tunic; the third figure is a female. The inscription underneath these figures probably contained the names of the parties, but is too mutilated to admit of being deciphered. (167.)

No. 123. A sepulchral column, inscribed with the name of Anaxicrates, an Athenian, the son of Dexiochus; beneath the inscription is the representation of a sepulchral urn, executed in very low relief. (240.)

No. 124. Another monumental urn, of the same kind, inscribed with the name of Phædimus of Naucratis. (A. 51.)

No. 125. The capital of an Ionic column, from the portico of the Erechtheum, at Athens. The building to which this singularly beautiful piece of architecture belonged, was a double temple dedicated to Minerva Polias and Pandrosus. (A. 47.)

Nos. 126, 127. A portion of the shaft, and the base, of the same column. (A. 48, 49.)

No. 128. An architectural statue; it was one of the Caryatides which supported the roof under which the olive-tree of Minerva was sheltered in the temple of Pandrosus at Athens. (A. 42.)

No. 129. A piece of the shaft of an Ionic column. (A. 43.)

No. 130. A capital of a Doric column, from the Propylæa at Athens. (206.)

No. 131. A part of a Doric entablature, from the Propylæa at Athens. (308.)

No. 132. A solid monumental urn, or cenotaph, with a bas-relief in front, not inscribed. (A. 50.)

No. 133. The capital of an Ionic column belonging to a temple of Diana at Daphne, on the road from Athens to Eleusis. (A. 44.)

No. 134. A piece of the shaft of an Ionic column, belonging to the same temple. (A. 45.)

No. 135. The base of an Ionic column, likewise belonging to the same temple. (A. 46.) See also No. 231.

Nos. 136—149. Casts in plaster from the frieze of the pronaos of the temple of Theseus. The subject of this frieze is a battle fought in the presence of six divinities, who are represented sitting in the midst of the combatants. (A. 55—68.)

Nos. 150—154. Casts in plaster from the frieze of the posticus of the same temple. The subject of these sculptures is the battle of the Centaurs and Lapithæ. (A. 69—73.)

Nos. 155—157. Casts in plaster of three of the metopes of the north side of the temple of Theseus at Athens. The first represents Theseus killing Creon, king of Thebes; the second, Theseus overcoming Cercyon, king of Eleusis, in a wrestling match; and the third, Theseus killing the Crommyonian sow. (A. 52—54.)

Nos. 158, 158*, 159. Two bas-reliefs, and plaster cast of a third, which formed part of the frieze of a temple of the Ionic order (near the Propylæa at Athens), and dedicated to the Wingless Victory. The subject represented on them is a combat between the Greeks and Persians. (258, 257.)

Nos. 159*, 160*, 161*. Three slabs from bas-reliefs of the frieze, which decorated the substructure of the same temple; they represent two females leading a bull, a third standing, and the fourth adjusting her sandal.

Nos. 160, 161. Two bas-reliefs, from the same temple: the combatants appear to be all Greeks. (259, 260.)

No. 162. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (182.)

No. 163. Ditto. (183.)

No. 164. A bas-relief, representing a narrow upright vase with one handle: the form of this vase very much resembles that of the solid urns, so often used by the Greeks as sepulchral monuments. (276.)

No. 165. A Greek inscription from Athens, signifying that certain gifts, which are specified, had been consecrated to some goddess, probably Venus, by a female who held the office of lighter of the lamps, and interpreter of dreams, in the temple of the goddess. The name of this female, which was no doubt inserted at the beginning of the inscription, is now lost. (88.)

No. 166. An agonistic inscription, in Greek, consisting of the names of those who had conquered in the foot-race of the stadium, and double stadium; in wrestling; in boxing; in the pancratium; and pentathlon. (93.)

No. 167. A fragment of a Greek inscription: it consists of twenty lines of very ancient characters, and seems to be a part of a treaty. (286.)

No. 167*. A very ancient Greek inscription, known by the title of the "Marmor Atheniense." It relates to a survey of some temple at Athens, supposed to be the Erechtheum. Brought to England by Dr.

Chandler, and presented to the British Museum, in 1785, by the Dilettanti Society.

No. 168. A Greek inscription, imperfect, and very much defaced. It seems to be an inventory of valuable articles contained in some temple. (277.)

No. 169. A fleuron, from the temple of Ceres at Eleusis. (173.)

No. 170. A capital of a pilaster. (174.)

No. 171. A fragment of a very ancient Greek inscription from the Acropolis: it contains an account of certain expenses defrayed by those to whom the care of the public games was confided. The name of the Archon, under whom the stone was engraved, is effaced. (159.)

No. 172. A fragment of a decree; the beginning is wanting, and what remains is much mutilated. At the conclusion of the decree it is ordained that the people of Hierapytna in Crete shall affix to it the public seal. (157.)

No. 173. A Greek inscription written in two columns; it contains a list of names arranged in the order of the tribes to which they respectively belonged. (92.)

No. 174. A votive Greek inscription, dedicated by some sailors, as a mark of their gratitude, to the Apollo of Tarsus. (223.)

No. 175. A sepulchral column, of large dimensions; it is inscribed with the name of Aristides, who was the son of Lysimachus, and a native of Histiaæ. (305*.)

No. 176. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing a figure standing upright in a dignified attitude; it is probably intended for Bacchus. (107.)

No. 177. A piece of a frieze, or architectural ornament, from the tomb of Agamemnon at Mycenæ. The sculpture is exceedingly ancient, and consists of two kinds of scroll-work, one of which represents the curling of the waves, and the other a series of pateræ, which are perfectly flat and plain. This stone is of a brilliant green colour. (220.)

No. 177*. Bas-relief representing a bearded man, named Xanthippus, seated on a chair, and holding in his right hand a votive foot, his left hand presses to him a child, whose looks are directed towards the foot; another girl looks towards him. Brought from Athens, by Dr. Antony Askew, A.D. 1775, and purchased by Mr. Townley.

No. 178. A fragment of a colossal female statue, from one of the pediments of the Parthenon; it has belonged to a sitting figure, of which the only remaining part is the left thigh, covered with drapery. (156.)

No. 179. A circular altar, from the island of Delos; it is ornamented with the heads of bulls and festoons in very bold relief. (106.)

No. 180. A piece of frieze, or architectural ornament, from the same place as No. 177. It consists of three rows of scroll-work, all of which are similar representations of the revolving of the waves. The colour of the stone is bright red. (221.)

Under No. 180 are—

Two fragments from the pillars of the tomb of Agamemnon, at Mycenæ. Presented in 1843, by the Institute of British Architects.

No. 181. A sepulchral column with an inscription to the memory of Theodotus, who was the son of Diodorus, and a native of Antioch. (225.)

No. 182. A sepulchral solid urn, with a bas-relief representing three figures, one of which is seated. The inscription presents us with the following names: Archagoras, Pythyllis, and Polystrasus. (274.)

No. 183. A sepulchral column inscribed with the name of Socrates, son of Socrates, and a native of Ancyra, a city of Galatia. (164.)

No. 184. A sepulchral column of Menestratus, the son of Thoracides, and a native of Corinth. (168.)

No. 185. A Greek inscription, imperfect, containing an account of the treasures of some temple, probably those of the Parthenon. The characters which we see on this marble are of a much more modern form than in the inscription of the same kind, No. 379. (216.)

No. 186. A sun-dial, with four different dials represented on as many faces. The inscription imports that it is the work of Phædrus, the son of Zoilus, of the deme Pæania. From the form of the letters of this inscription, the sun-dial cannot have been made much earlier than the time of the Emperor Severus. It was found at Athens. (285.)

No. 187. A fragment of a Greek inscription: it is a decree of the people of Athens in honour of Hosacharus, a Macedonian. This decree was passed in the Archonship of Nicodorus, in the 3rd year of the 116th Olympiad. (280.)

No. 187*. Part of the capital of an Ionic column. (306*.)

No. 187**. A circular altar, brought from the island of Delos. It is ornamented with the heads of bulls, from which festoons of fruit and flowers are suspended. (307.)

No. 188. A solid urn, or cenotaph, in the front of which two figures, a man, and a woman named Ada, are represented joining hands. The former is standing, the latter is seated. (110.)

No. 189. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing a procession of three figures, the last of which carries a large basket on his head: they are accompanied by two children. (284.)

No. 190. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing two of the goddesses, Latona and Diana, in procession. Similar bas-reliefs, in a more perfect state, are preserved in the Albani Collection. The temple which is here introduced is probably that of Apollo, which stood in the street at Athens, called "The Tripods." (103.)

No. 191. A fragment of the upper part of a sepulchral stèle. (95.)

No. 192. A solid funeral urn, of large dimensions. It has a bas-relief in front, representing Pamphilus, son of Mixiades, of the deme Ægilia, standing and joining hands with Archippe, his sister, who is seated. (237.)

No. 193. A bas-relief, representing a Bacchanalian group, found among the ruins of the theatre of Bacchus, on the south-west of the Acropolis. It consists of four figures, each carrying a thyrsus; viz., Bacchus, dressed in the Indian costume, who with his right hand is holding out a cantharus, into which a female Bacchante is pouring wine from an oinochoe. On each side of these figures is Silenus, in a dancing attitude, and one of them is glancing his eye at the contents of a large crater of wine placed on the ground. (235.)

No. 194. The upper part of the head of the goddess Pasht; it is remarkable for being ornamented with a crown of serpents, similar to that which is mentioned in the Rosetta inscription. (105.)

No. 195. A very large funeral urn, solid, and without any inscription. It has three figures in bas-relief; the first of these is clothed in a tunic and is seated; the second is a warrior standing up and joining hands with the former; and the third is a boy carrying a large circular shield. (228.)

No. 196. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing a female figure seated in a chair, with a child standing by her side; the upper part of the woman is wanting. This fragment is probably part of a sepulchral monument. (162.)

No. 197. A bas-relief, imperfect, representing a charioteer driving four horses at full speed; a figure of Victory is flying towards him with a crown. (236.)

No. 198. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing part of the body and legs of a boy. (109.)

No. 199. A cinerary urn, ornamented in front with four standing figures; two of these in the centre, are joining hands, the other two are in a pensive attitude. The names of all the figures were originally inscribed on the urn; the first name is not legible; the others are Philia, Metrodora, and Meles. (148.)

No. 199*. A bronze urn, very richly wrought. It was found inclosed within the marble vase in which it now stands, in a tumulus on the road that leads from Port Piræus to the Salaminian ferry and Eleusis. At the time of its discovery, this beautiful urn contained a quantity of burnt bones, a small vase of alabaster, and a wreath of myrtle in gold. (300.)

No. 199**. A large marble vase; it is of an oval form, and within it was found the bronze urn described in the preceding number. (301.)

No. 199***. A circular votive altar, ornamented with the heads of bulls, from which festoons are suspended. The inscription, in Greek, near the bottom, is a prayer for the prosperity and health of a person named Casiniax. (91.)

No. 200. A small female figure, covered with drapery; it is without a head. (90.)

No. 201. A sepulchral column of Thalia, the daughter of Callistratus, of Aexone. (149.)

No. 202. A votive Greek inscription, dedicated by Gorgias the gymnasiarch. (224.)

No. 203. A decree of the people of Tenos, in honour of Ammonius, their benefactor: this decree is directed to be engraved on marble, and affixed in the temple of Neptune and Amphitrite. Strabo and Tacitus mention a celebrated temple that was dedicated to Neptune in this island, and it is highly probable that the same temple was dedicated to Amphitrite, as well as to Neptune. Neptune and his symbols frequently occur on the coins of Tenos. (231.)

No. 204. A fragment of a bas-relief, on which are represented part of the skin of an animal and the branch of a tree. (158.)

No. 205. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (178.)

No. 206. A fragment of a Greek inscription, engraved in very ancient characters. It seems to be a treaty between the Athenians and the people of Rhegium, a town of the Bruttii, in Italy. (282.)

No. 207. Small statue of Ganymede; part only of the eagle's claw remains upon the left thigh. (293.)

No. 208. A sepulchral column of Mysteria, a native of Miletus, daughter of Dionysius, and wife of Rhaton, who was a native of Thria, a town belonging to the tribe of Ceneis. (111.)

Nos. 209—218. Ten small votive tablets: they represent (with two exceptions) various parts of the human body, and have been offered up to Jupiter Hypsistos, praying for the cure of diseases in those parts, or in gratitude for cures already received. The part of the body which had received a cure has been broken off from No. 212; but the inscription implies, that Syntrophus presents it as a mark of his gratitude to Jupiter Hypsistos. No. 213 is a prayer in behalf of Euphrosynus. (247, 245, 249, 252, 241, 251, 248, 246, 253, 250.)

Nos. 219, 220. Two pieces of the architrave belonging to the temple of Erechtheus at Athens. (291, 85.)

No. 221. A fragment of a boy, holding a bird under his arm, and feeding it. (81.)

No. 222. A sepulchral column, inscribed with the name of Botrychus, son of Euphanus, and a native of Heraclea. (278.)

No. 223. A Greek inscription, imperfect, engraved in very small characters: it is an enumeration of the sacred dresses which belonged to some temple. (283.)

No. 224. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing the fore legs and part of the body of a bull. (160.)

No. 225. Fragment of a Greek inscription; very imperfect. (180.)

No. 226. A fragment of a Greek inscription; it is the latter part of a decree in honour of a person who had deserved well of some particular city. It is directed, as in the inscription No. 203, that the decree shall be engraved on marble, and placed in the temple of Neptune and Amphitrite. (230.)

No. 227. A small figure of Telesphorus, completely enveloped in a cloak; it wants the head. (78.)

No. 228. A sepulchral column, with an inscription to the memory of Biottus, who was the son of Philoxenus, and a native of Diradium. (275.)

No. 229. A sepulchral stèle, with a bas-relief, representing Erasippus, the son of Callinicus, of the deme Oe, in Attica, clothed in a tunic. (212.)

No. 230. A solid sepulchral urn, with a bas-relief, representing five figures, executed in a singularly rude style. The first of these figures is a boy carrying a large circular shield, the second is a warrior, named Sosippus, joining hands with a third person, who is seated before him: the group is completed by the introduction of a child, and of a female whose attitude evinces a dejected state of mind. (239.)

No. 231. The capital of an Ionic column, from the temple of Diana, at Daphne. (80.) Cf. Nos. 133, 134, 135.

No. 232. The upper part of the shaft of a small Ionic column. (310.)

No. 233. The capital of a Corinthian column. (308*.)

No. 234. A fragment of a Greek inscription; it is too imperfect to admit of a full explanation, but it seems to have been in honour of a person who had distinguished himself on some occasion by great humanity. (170.)

No. 235. A fragment of a decree made by a society which is distinguished by a number of epithets, among which are two derived from the names of Hadrian and Antoninus. The Society appears to have been formed of musicians, and the decree to have been passed in honour of Bacchus and the Emperor Antoninus Pius. A patera is represented on the upper part of this marble. (161.)

No. 236. A sepulchral inscription, in six elegiac verses, to a young man of the name of Plutarchus, who died in Ausonia, at a distance from his native country. (242.)

No. 237. A Greek inscription, imperfect. (287.)

No. 238. An amphora. (215.)

No. 239. An unknown female head, the hair of which is concealed within a close head-dress. (122.)

No. 240. A fragment of an unknown female head. (255.)

No. 241. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing an unknown female head: from the style of the hair, which is curiously plaited, we may fix the sculpture to about the time of Antoninus Pius. (123.)

No. 242. A head of the bearded Hercules. (120.)

No. 243. A head of the bearded Hercules, similar to the last, but of larger dimensions. (117.)

No. 244. A large head. (266.)

No. 245. A female torso, covered with drapery. (296.)

No. 246. A large head. (263.)

No. 247. An unknown bearded head, very much mutilated: it is larger than life, and is crowned with a very thick cord-shaped diadem. (119.)

No. 248. The head of a middle-aged man, with a conical bonnet; it appears to have had very little beard, and is most probably the head of a mariner. (116.)

No. 249. A fragment of a head, crowned with vine leaves; it appears to have been executed at a declining period of the arts. (121.)

No. 250. An unknown female head, the hair of which is confined within a close elegantly-formed cap. The same style of head-dress is observable on some of the silver coins of Corinth. (114.)

No. 251. The head of a laughing figure, executed in the early hard Æginetan style of sculpture. (115.)

No. 252—255. Four pieces of the frieze from the temple of Erechtheus at Athens; they are enriched with flowers and other ornaments, which are designed with the most perfect taste, and are chiselled with a degree of sharpness and precision truly admirable. (127—130.)

No. 256. The base on which a statue has stood; the feet, which still remain, are very wide apart, and shew that the figure must have been in powerful action; they are presumed to be the feet of Minerva, from the west pediment of the Parthenon. See No. 102. (201.)

- No. 257. An amphora. (171.)
- No. 258. The upper part of a sepulchral stèle, having the inscription, as well as the arabesque ornament on the summit, perfect. The inscription is to the memory of Asclepiodorus the son of Thraso, and Epicycles the son of Asclepiodorus; both the deceased were natives of Olynthus, a city in Macedonia. (169.)
- No. 259. The upper part of a sepulchral stèle, inscribed with the name of Euphrosynus. (155.)
- No. 260. A piece of Doric entablature, originally painted. (154.)
- No. 261. A Greek inscription, imperfect at the end, being a contract respecting the letting of some lands and salt pits by the people of Piræus. Presented, in 1785, by the Dilettanti Society. (289.)
- No. 262. An unknown bust. (100.)
- No. 263. A sepulchral solid urn, ornamented with reeds, and inscribed with the name of Timophon, the son of Timostratus, and a native of Anagyrus, whose inhabitants were of the tribe of Erechtheis. (163.)
- No. 264. The capital of an Ionic column belonging to a temple of Diana, at Daphne, in the road to Eleusis. (295.) Cf. Nos. 133, 134, 135.
- No. 265. A piece of the shaft of a small Ionic column, the lower part of which is fluted and reeded. (297.)
- No. 266. A sepulchral stèle, with a very ancient inscription to the memory of Aristophosa and others. A peculiarity occurs in this inscription, namely, that the letters vo are twice used for uio. (214.)
- No. 267. A Greek inscription, engraved on two sides of a thick slab of marble. It is an inventory of the valuable articles which were kept in the Opisthodomos of the Parthenon at Athens. (305.)
- No. 268. A fragment of the capital of a Corinthian column: it is ornamented with the leaves of the laurel and acanthus. (102.)
- Shelf 6:—
- No. 269. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (193.)
- No. 270. Ditto. (190.)
- No. 271. Ditto. (197.)
- No. 272. Ditto. (189.)
- No. 273. Fragment of a Greek inscription. (179.)
- No. 274. A sepulchral Greek inscription, engraved on a piece of entablature. It consists of two lines in prose, and sixteen in pentameter verse. The name of the deceased was Publius Phædrus, a native of Sunium, son of Theophilus and Cecropia, and grandson of Pistoteles. The inscription states that he was of noble family, and that his death was followed by the universal regret of the Athenians; on account of his youth, learning, wisdom, and personal accomplishments. (153.)
- No. 275. A fragment of a cinerary urn, on which are represented four figures in bas-relief. The two central figures consist of a young man and woman who are joining hands, and whose names are inscribed above in Greek characters, Demostrata and Callistus. Two other figures are standing by the side of these, in a pensive attitude. (104.)
- No. 276. A Greek inscription, engraved on two sides of a large piece of marble. It is an inventory of the sacred treasures belonging to the Parthenon. (298.)
- No. 277. Fragment of a figure. (147.)
- No. 278. A bas-relief, representing Hygieia feeding a serpent out of a patera. She is seated on a throne which is covered with a cushion, and her feet are placed upon a footstool. She wears a high ornament, or tutulus, on her head, and she has a fan, in the shape of an ivy leaf, in her left hand. (238.)

No. 279. A bas-relief, imperfect, representing a goddess seated on a chair or throne, behind whom are seven figures, four of which are children; one of the latter is leading a ram to an altar, the rest are in the attitude of devotion. (94.)

No. 280. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing a female sitting. (279.)

No. 281. Fragment of a figure. (146.)

No. 282. A Greek inscription, engraved on two surfaces of a tablet of marble. It is an inventory of articles of gold and silver belonging to the Parthenon, and which the quæstors of the temple acknowledge that they have received from their predecessors. (311.)

No. 283. The upper part of a sepulchral stèle, inscribed with the name of Eumachus, who was the son of Eumachus, and of the city of Alopece. Presented, in 1785, by the Dilettanti Society. (292*.)

No. 284. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (184.)

No. 285. A fragment of a Greek inscription, containing a list of Athenians, with twelve different townships to which they respectively belonged; namely, according to the order in which they occur, Sunium, Ionidai, Alopece, Pallene, Halæ, Ericea, Colonus, Sphettus, Ceriadæ, Thoricus, Hephæstia, and Bate. (222.)

No. 286. The upper part of a sepulchral column, with an inscription to the memory of a person named Simon, who was the son of Aristus, and a native of Halæ in Attica. (217.)

No. 287. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (185.)

No. 288. Ditto. (187.)

No. 289. A portion of the cornice from the portico of the Erechtheum at Athens. (165.)

No. 290. The upper part of a sepulchral stèle, ornamented with leaves and flowers; the inscription is to the memory of Chabrias. (226.)

No. 291. A Greek inscription, engraved on three sides of a piece of marble. The characters are extremely ancient; but unfortunately the marble has been very much mutilated, and the letters defaced. (309.)

No. 292. An amphora. (211.)

No. 293. A bas-relief, representing a votive figure of Cybele, seated in a kind of small temple. (97.)

No. 294. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (192.)

No. 295. A fragment of a sepulchral stèle from which the bas-relief has been almost entirely broken away; the inscription is to the memory of Hieroclea, the daughter of Leucius. (218.)

No. 296. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (188.)

No. 297. A small tile, in terracotta, which has been used to cover the joints of the larger tiles. The front is enriched with a fleuron and is also inscribed with the name of the maker, Athenæus. (113.)

No. 298. A votive monument with two Greek verses, signifying that Horarius had dedicated some lamps, which he won in the games, to Mercury and Hercules. The bas-relief above, which probably represented the two deities here mentioned, is almost entirely broken away; only the feet of one figure remain. (219.)

- No. 299. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (198.)
- No. 300. A small bas-relief, imperfect, representing Cybele seated. Presented, in 1820, by John P. Gandy Deering, Esq. (103*.)
- Nos. 301—309. Fragments of figures, many of which have belonged to the metopes of the Parthenon. (131—134, 136—140.)
- Nos. 310—315. Fragments of colossal statues, some of which have probably belonged to figures which stood in the pediments of the Parthenon. (261, 264, 267, 270, 272, 271*.)
- No. 316. A small statue of a Muse, without a head; it was probably intended to represent Polyhymnia. (208.)
- No. 317. A sepulchral column, inscribed with the name of Callimachus, who was a native of the deme of Aexone, and the son of Callistratus. (209.)
- No. 318. A base of a column brought from the plains of Troy. (210.)
- No. 319. Fragment of a figure. (143.)
- No. 320. Fragment of No. 327. (141.)
- No. 321. The chest of a female figure, covered with drapery; it has probably belonged to one of the metopes of the Parthenon. (79.)
- No. 322. Fragment of No. 327. (142.)
- No. 323. A fragment of a metope of the Parthenon; it is the torso of one of the Lapithæ. (294.)
- No. 324. An oblong shallow vessel for containing holy water. The front is ornamented with a bas-relief representing five figures, one of which, probably Juno, is seated on a throne; of the remaining figures, three females are imploring the benediction of the goddess in behalf of their children, whom they are carrying in their arms, and a fourth is bringing oblations. From Cape Sigeum, near the plain of Troy. (99.)
- No. 325. A colossal head, much mutilated; it was found in the temple of Nemesis, at Rhamnus, in Attica, and is supposed to be the head of Nemesis. Presented, in 1820, by John P. Gandy Deering, Esq. (273.)
- No. 325*. A female statue without head and arms, found in the temple of Themis at Rhamnus in Attica. Presented, in 1820, by John P. Gandy Deering, Esq. (307*.)
- No. 326. The feet of a male statue, on the plinth. Presented, in 1820, by John P. Gandy Deering, Esq. (107*.)
- No. 327. A torso of a male figure, probably that of Æsculapius. (202, 135, 151.)
- No. 328. A sepulchral column to the memory of Callis, who was the daughter of Strato, and a native of the city of Gargettus. (203.)
- No. 329. A base of a column, brought from the plains of Troy. (204.)
- No. 330. A fragment of a square altar, which has probably been dedicated to Bacchus. The ornaments on two of the sides only have been preserved; these represent female Bacchantes in dancing attitudes. One of the figures holds a shawl or veil in her hands, the other brandishes a thyrsus. (112.)
- No. 331. A fragment of a sepulchral stèle; the inscription is very

- imperfect, but records the name of Musonia. The summit is ornamented with the figure of a butterfly on some fruit. (150.)
- No. 332. A fragment of a statue of Hygieia. (125.)
- No. 333. A small fragment of a very ancient Greek inscription, written in the boustrophedon manner. Presented, in 1785, by the Dilettanti Society. (81*.)
- No. 334. An imperfect Greek inscription, engraved on three sides of a piece of marble, in very ancient letters. Presented, in 1785, by the Dilettanti Society. (87.)
- No. 335. A fragment of a bas-relief, with part of an inscription. (126.)
- No. 336. A bas-relief, imperfect, inscribed with the names of Aristodice, Aristarchus, and Athenais, natives of Sestus. Presented, in 1785, by the Dilettanti Society. (236*.)
- No. 337. Part of the stem of a candelabrum ornamented with four female figures, one of which is playing on the lyre, and the others, with joined hands, are leading the dance. (124.)
- Nos. 338, 339. Fragments of colossal statues. (265, 269.)
- No. 340. A part of a colossal foot, probably belonging to a figure in one of the pediments of the Parthenon. (244.)
- No. 341. The left knee of a colossal statue of very fine work: it has probably belonged to a figure in one of the pediments of the Parthenon. (256.)
- No. 342. Fragment of a statue. (268.)
- No. 343. Ditto. (144.)
- No. 344. An amphora. (176.)
- No. 345. A funeral inscription to the memory of Polyllus; it consists of one line in prose, and two in verse. The line in prose gives us only the name and titles of Polyllus, and the verses intimate that Polystratus had erected a statue to the deceased, and had placed it under the protection of Minerva; the marble on which this inscription is cut formed a part of the base on which the statue stood. (292.)
- No. 346. A Greek inscription, relating to the Erythræans: the characters are very ancient. (288.)
- No. 347. A fragment of a decree of the Athenians, engraved on a very large piece of marble. So much has been broken away from this inscription, that the precise object of it is not easily collected: it is ordained, however, that the decree shall be fixed up in the Acropolis. (281.)
- No. 348. A very ancient Greek inscription, which has served as an epitaph on the tomb of the Athenian warriors killed at Potidæa. This inscription, which originally consisted of twelve elegiac verses, has suffered from the injuries of time. (290.)
- No. 349. Fragment of a figure. (145.)
- No. 350. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (195.)
- No. 351. A sepulchral stèle, with an ornament of flowers on the summit. It is inscribed with the names of Hippocrates and Baucis. (175.)
- Nos. 352—360. Casts in plaster of the frieze of the Choragic Monument of Lysicrates, commonly called the Lanthorn of Demosthenes, erected in honour of a victory in a musical contest, B.C. 334.

The subject of this frieze is the story of Bacchus and the Tyrrhenian pirates. (A. 89, 97, 96, 95, 94, 93, 92, 91, 90.)

No. 360*. Cast in plaster of the capital of a column from the same monument.

No. 361. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing an elderly man before one of the gods, probably Bacchus, who appears to hold a vase in his right hand. (84.)

No. 362. A fragment of a decree of the people of Tenos, in honour of some benefactor, whose name is not preserved on the marble. (232.)

No. 363. A fragment of a public act relating to the people of Athens and Myrina. (234.)

No. 364. A fragment of a public act of the Athenians; it consists of twenty-one imperfect lines, and seems to relate to the repair of the pavements and roads in the neighbourhood of Athens. (233.)

No. 365. An architectural fragment, which has formed one of the ornaments of a roof. (243.)

No. 366. A sepulchral Greek inscription in ten verses, of which the first two and the last two are in the elegiac measure, and the rest are hexameters. The inscription is in memory of a young lady of extraordinary beauty, named Tryphera, who died at the early age of 25 years. (152.)

No. 367. An architectural fragment, similar to No. 365. (254.)

No. 368. A Greek inscription relating to Oropus. Presented, in 1820, by John P. Gandy Deering, Esq. (106*.)

Nos. 369, 370. Fragments of Greek inscriptions, very imperfect. (191, 196.)

No. 371. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing Minerva placing a crown upon a person's head. (89.)

No. 372. A sepulchral stèle with a Greek inscription, consisting of four lines and a half, part of which is written in prose and part in verse. The inscription informs us that the monument was erected by a mother to the memory of her two sons, Diitrephes and Pericles, the former of whom was a soldier of Parium; and also to the memory of her daughter, whose name was Agnes, and that of her brother, Demophoon, who was a soldier of Parium. (172.)

No. 373. A sepulchral stèle. The bas-relief in front, the lower part of which is broken away, represents two females joining hands, one of whom is seated and veiled, the other standing. Between these appears an old man, clothed in a tunic, and standing in a pensive attitude. (229.)

No. 374. A votive Greek inscription of Antisthenes, the priest of Pandion: he was the son of Antiphates, and belonged to the tribe of Pandionis. (86.)

No. 375. A bas-relief, representing a young man standing between two goddesses, Vesta and Minerva, who are crowning him. (82.)

No. 376. A bas-relief, representing two divinities, namely, Jupiter seated on a throne, and Juno standing before him; the latter is removing the veil from her face, as if to address the king of the gods. (227.)

No. 377. A Greek inscription, imperfect, but of which fifty-five lines remain. It is written in the Bœotian Æolic dialect, and is a treaty between the cities of Orchomenus in Bœotia and Elataea in Phocis, respecting some payments due from the Orchomenians to the Elataeans. These payments were for the rent of certain pastures which the people of Elataea had let out to the Orchomenians. The treaty confirms the payment of the stipulated sums, and renews the letting of pasturage for four years. (177.)

No. 378. A Greek inscription, engraved on two sides of a tablet of marble. It is a decree of the council of the Bœotians, ordaining the election of three extraordinary magistrates, who, in concert with the ordinary magistrates, were to take charge of the re-casting of some articles of gold and silver, belonging to the temple of Amphiaras, and which had been injured by the effects of time. (302.)

No. 379. A Greek inscription, imperfect, engraved in very ancient characters: it seems to be an inventory of some treasures, probably those contained in the Parthenon, and which the Quæstors acknowledge to have received from their predecessors in the same office. The inscription not only fills one side of the marble, but also the right edge. (200.)

No. 380. A fragment of a bas-relief, representing three figures sacrificing before an altar. (101.)

No. 381. A Greek inscription in the Doric dialect; it is a dedication to Bacchus, by Aleuas the son of Nicon, and Cephisodorus the son of Aglaophædas, who had both been victorious in the choruses of men. (83.)

No. 382. Fragment of a Greek inscription, very imperfect. (186.)

No. 383. A bas-relief, imperfect; it represents three goddesses, one of whom is seated on a throne. (108.)

No. 384. A sepulchral stèle, in which an equestrian figure, with an attendant on foot, is represented in bas-relief. Above the figures is an inscription, consisting of three verses, of which the second is a pentameter, and the two others hexameters; they record the name of the deceased, Aristocles, who was the son of Menon, and a native of Piræus. (213.)

Nos. 385, 386. Fragments<sup>1</sup> of Greek inscriptions, very imperfect. (194, 181.)

No. 387. A Greek inscription, being a decree of the people of Athens, and of the Piræus, in honour of Callidamas. Brought from Athens to England by Dr. Chandler, and presented to the British Museum in 1785 by the Dilettanti Society.

No. 388. Inscription, found at Halicarnassus, offering the sale of the priesthood of Diana Pergaia, and reciting the emoluments of that office. It is dated in the month of Heraclius, under the ædileship of Charmylus; Meneclæ, son of Phormio, being the prytanis, and Diodotus, son of Hedonicus, the scribe. Presented by J. Taylor, Esq.

No. 389. Part of one of the antefixal ornaments of the Parthenon.

No. 390. Antefixal ornament from the Parthenon, cast in plaster.

No. 393. Lion's head, from the roof of the Parthenon.

No. 397. Fragment of a small female figure, from the plains of Marathon. Formerly in Dr. Gideon Mantell's collection.

No. 398. Capital of an Ionic column, supposed to have anciently formed part of the temple of Artemis Eucleia at Athens.

No. 399. Part of the painted Mæander, ornament from the inside of the peristyle of the Parthenon.

No. 400. Part of the volute of a Corinthian capital, from the interior of the Parthenon.

No. 401. Fragment of a tablet, found near the Acropolis of Athens; on it is a crown and the word Ο ΔΗΜΟΣ, showing that the person for whom it had been erected had a crown voted from the state.

No. 403. Astragal, egg, and dental moulding.

No. 404. Volute of one of the capitals of a column, from the temple of Nike Apteros.

No. 405. Fragment of a stèle, with an elegant acroterium.

No. 406. Fragment of a sepulchral tablet, inscribed with the word Eucleia.

No. 407. Part of an elegant moulding.

No. 410. Volute found near the north front of the Acropolis of Athens.

No. 411. Elegant antefixal ornament, from the temple of Aphrodite, in the Gardens at Athens.

No. 412. Antefixal ornament, from Athens.

No. 413. Antefixal ornament, from Athens.

No. 414. Antefixal ornament, from Athens.

No. 415. Plain sepulchral tablet; on it the name of a person, the son or daughter of Chærippe. From Athens.

No. 417. Antefixal ornament or roof-tile, from Athens.

No. 418. Elegant fleuron, from Athens. From Mr. Inwood's collection.

No. 419. Fragment of a large bas-relief, representing the upper part of a draped female figure, from Athens.

No. 420. Fragment of a small tablet; on it, in bas-relief, the lower part of the figure of Pallas Athene, standing, holding a patera in her right, and a spear in her left hand.

No. 421. Fragment of an inscription.

No. 422. Fragment of the head of a warrior, from a bas-relief.

No. 423. Fragment of a tablet; youth and elderly man bidding adieu.

No. 424. Fragment of a sepulchral tablet, in red marble, with commencement of a name—Dein. . . such as Deinarchus, or Deinomachus; from Laconia. From Mr. Inwood's collection.

No. 425. Fragment of an honorary inscription of citizenship, in favour of a benefactor . . . in red marble; from the Acropolis of Cythera.

No. 426. Fragment of a tablet, in red marble, portion of a name.

No. 427. Fragment of a sepulchral stèle, in red marble; on it part of a female figure; from Mycenæ. From Mr. Inwood's collection.

No. 428. Fragment of a sepulchral stèle, in red marble; on it the word farewell; from Mycenæ. From Mr. Inwood's collection.

No. 429. Part of a tablet, above feet of two human figures, lion and three balls; from Mycenæ.

No. 429*. Small tablet, representing a votive offering to Eilithyia, by two females and a child; from Laconia.

No. 430. A small bas-relief, representing two females and a child offering crown and palms; from Laconia.

No. 431. Part of a bas-relief, upper part of a recumbent male and female figure; from Laconia.

No. 432. Bas-relief; upper part of a half-draped youth, standing, and elevating his left hand, in which he holds a lantern (?); before him is a boy or slave, and a column on which is a cat; from Athens.

No. 433. Cast of a small tablet, on which, in bas-relief, is Pan, seated on a rock, having before him a nymph enveloped in drapery, probably Echo; from Athens.

No. 434. Cast of a tablet, on which, in bas-relief, is a bearded man holding a patera, reclining on a couch, under which is a dog; at the foot of the couch is a female seated on a chair, and a youth ministering wine; at the head a draped bearded man; from Athens.

No. 435. Cast of the tablet of Euthydea, daughter of Diogenes, who is represented bidding adieu to her parents, or other members of her family; from Athens.

No. 436. Tablet, surmounted with an elegant fleuron, and inscribed with the name of Epicrates, son of Cephisus, and of the demos of the Ionidai; from Athens.

No. 437. Plaster cast of a fleuron, from the top of a sepulchral tablet; from Athens.

No. 438. Cast of a sepulchral tablet; a youth holding his horses by the bridle, making an offering to a serpent twined round a tree, on the top of which is a crow; a slave boy brings him his helmet, his thorax and shield lying at the side of the tree; from Athens.

No. 439. Cast of the tablet of Niké, daughter of Dositheos, a native of Thasos, seated and bidding adieu to her husband; a child looks towards her.

No. 440. Tablet inscribed with the name of Timon, a native of Sinope.

No. 441. Tablet of Smichyilion, son of Eualcides, one of the corporation of potters. From Athens. Presented by A. Robinson, Esq. R.N.

No. 442. Bas-relief representing a shield, on which are inscribed the names of the ephebi of Athens, under Alcamenes, when he held the office of cosmetes. Removed from a church at Athens by Dr. Antony Askew, and said to have formerly belonged to the Parthenon.

PHIGALEIAN SALOON.

In the middle of the Room is placed:—

No. 2*. A statue of Apollo, of very early Greek work. Purchased in 1818, at the sale of the Comte de Choiseul-Gouffier's Antiquities.

Around the sides of the Room are temporarily deposited the following sculptures:—

On the floor, eleven bas-reliefs, formerly part of the celebrated mausoleum at Halicarnassus, a tomb erected in honour of Mausolus, King of Caria, by his wife Artemisia, in the 4th year of the 106th Olympiad, B.C. 353. This monument, one of the seven wonders of the world, was built by the architects Phiteus and Satyrus, and adorned with sculptures by five sculptors, viz.: Pythis, who made a quadriga for the top; Scopas, or Praxiteles, who sculptured the eastern; Bryaxis, the northern; Timotheus, the southern; and Leochares, the western side; all artists of the later Athenian school. The subject of the frieze is the battle of the Greeks and Amazons, and Hercules appears among the combatants. The style of at least two artists can be traced in these sculptures; and apparently more sculptures from different parts of the building have been preserved. In A.D. 1522, these sculptures were discovered amidst a heap of ruins, and employed by the Knights of Rhodes in the construction of the castle of St. Peter at Halicarnassus, the present fortress at Boudroum, in the walls of which they remained encased till their removal in 1846, when they were presented by the Sultan Abd-al-Mehjid to Sir Stratford Canning, H.M. Ambassador at Constantinople, and by him to the British Museum. In this room are also placed a circular altar, with a subject in bas-relief, which formerly stood on the sea-shore of Halicarnassus, and a draped female statue without a head, supposed to represent a Roman Empress in the character of Isis, which was also inserted into the walls of the fortress of Boudroum; and two bas-reliefs representing gladiatorial combats; and two others, votive offerings to Pluto or Æsculapius; from Boudroum; also presented by Sir Stratford Canning.

Above the preceding, and attached to the Wall, are—

Nos. 1—23. Bas-reliefs, representing the battle of the Centaurs and Lapithæ, and the combat between the Greeks and Amazons; they were found in the ruins of the temple of Apollo Epicurius (or the deliverer) built on Mount Coty lion, at a little distance from the ancient city of Phigalia in Arcadia. These bas-reliefs composed the frieze in the interior of the Cella. The battle of the Centaurs and Lapithæ is sculptured on eleven slabs of marble (1—11). That of the Greeks and Amazons occupies twelve (12—23). The direction of the slabs belonging to the former subject was from right to left; that of the latter from left to right.

A circumstance which adds very much to the interest of these marbles is our knowledge of the precise time when they were executed; for Pausanias, in his description of this temple, informs us that it was built by Ictinus, an architect contemporary with Pericles, and who built the Parthenon at Athens. These marbles are all engraved and fully described in the fourth part of the description of the Museum Marbles.

Underneath the Phigaleian frieze are—

No. 24. A fragment of a Doric capital of one of the columns of the peristyle. From the same temple.

No. 25. A fragment of an Ionic capital of one of the columns of the cella. From the same temple.

Nos. 26, 27. Two fragments of the tiles which surmounted the pediments, and formed the superior moulding. From the same temple.

Nos. 28—38. Fragments of the Metopes, found in the porticos of the pronaos and posticus, which were enriched with triglyphs. From the same temple.

No. 39. A small tile, which was used for the purpose of covering the joints of the greater tiles; the ornament in front surmounted the cornice. From the same temple.

No. 40. Another tile used for the same purpose, but on the point of the ridge. From the same temple.

No. 41. Large fragment of a bas-relief, No. 166, belongs to the Elgin collection: it represents Hercules preparing to strike Diomed, king of Thrace, whom he has already knocked down, and is holding by the hair of his head.

No. 42. Small statue of Hercules, wanting the head, arms, and feet; the paws of the lion's skin, and part of a child, probably Telephus, are seen below. From the coast of Laconia. Presented by Colonel Leake, 1838.

No. 44. Hermaic stèle of Demeter; dedicated by Cheionis. From Mantinea, in Arcadia. Presented by Colonel Leake, 1838.

No. 45. Torso of a naked statue of Apollo. From Luku, probably the ancient Thyrea, in the Peloponnese. Presented by Colonel Leake, 1838.

No. 46. Small inscriptions dedicated to the Favourable Winds.

No. 47. Head of Jupiter, the Thunderer, of coarse workmanship, dedicated by a person named Agesilaus. From Dorylæum in Phrygia.

No. 48. Sepulchral inscription of the tomb of Hermes and Thoiodote, children of Apollodorus, forbidding, under the direst curses, any one except members of the family to be placed in the sepulchre or the monument to be removed. From Halicarnassus.

No. 49. Votive tablet by soldiers on the march from Nacaleia to the Chersonesus.

No. 51. Bas-relief, representing a dedication of hair to Poseidon by Philombrotus and Aphthonetus, children of Deinomachus. Found in the ruins of Phthiotic Thebes in Thessaly. Presented by Col. Leake.

No. 54. Part of a sepulchral tablet of Theophila, a lady.

No. 55. Pedestal of the statue of Jupiter Urius, which stood within the temple of that god at the mouth of the Euxine. The statue was dedicated by Philon, son of Antipator, to the god, and was subsequently removed by Verres.

No. 56. Torso of Triton, in alto-rilievo, from Delos. The lower part of the body has been ornamented with metal work.

Several other sculptures and inscriptions, all from different parts of Greece and the Greek colonies, are deposited round the sides of the room and against the pilasters; but being as yet unarranged, and likely to be shortly removed, they are not here particularly described.

At the sides of the Room, over the Phigaleian frieze, are two pediments, of precisely the same form and dimensions as those which decorated the eastern and western ends of a Temple, perhaps that of Jupiter Panhellenius, in the island of Ægina. The ruins of this temple were visited in 1811 by Mr. Cockerell and other gentlemen, and extensive and careful excavations were carried on, by which all the members and details of the cornice and mouldings have been ascertained; and the minute and accurate measurements then made have been the authorities from which these imitations have been constructed. The greater part of the statues which adorned these pediments were at the same time discovered, and every circumstance illustrative of their original position, with relation to the architecture of the temple, was noted with as much accuracy as the case would admit. From the notes then made, and from long and careful study of the sculptures themselves, and the place which they occupied, Mr. Cockerell composed the groups very much in the mode in which they are now exhibited. From the violence with which the temple had been destroyed, probably by an earthquake, all the statues had been in some degree mutilated, and some so entirely destroyed that it was in vain to attempt their restoration. Those which were capable of repair were committed to the hands of Mr. Thorwaldsen, and in uniting the broken fragments, and restoring the parts of them that were deficient, that eminent artist has shown the greatest care and sagacity.

The pediment at the north side of the room is taken from the western end of the temple; it contains ten figures, and it is supposed that there was originally one more, who was stooping down to assist the fallen warrior, who is wounded, at the feet of Minerva. The subject is supposed to be the contest between the Greeks and Trojans for the body of Patroclus; Ajax, assisted by Teucer and Diomed, endeavouring to recover the body, Hector, Paris, and Æneas to seize it.

Of the figures which adorned the other pediment only five now remain, and the loss of the rest is the more to be lamented, as the sculptures of this eastern end are of a much higher character than those of the western. From the few figures which are still spared to us, it appears that the subject of this picture was similar to that of the other pediment, modified only by the taste and skill of the artist, perhaps the expedition of Hercules and Telamon against Troy.

At the ends of the room are casts of the metopes of the old temple at Selinus, which are considered some of the earliest specimens of Greek art; they represent Hercules and the Cercopes, or two thieves of Ephesus; Perseus, assisted by Pallas Athene, killing the Gorgon Medusa, out of whom leaps Pegasus; a female divinity who has killed one of the giants; and a figure in a biga attended by two others on horseback. Presented by Samuel Angell, Esq.

The East side of this Room opens into the

ASSYRIAN GALLERIES.

A suite of three long and narrow apartments, running North and South to a length exceeding 300 feet, with an additional room, or transept, crossing from their Southern extremity, contains the collection of sculptures excavated, chiefly by A. H. Layard, Esq., M.P., on the site, or in the vicinity, of ancient Nineveh. The discoveries were for the most part made in extensive mounds, formed by the natural accumulation of the soil over the débris of ruined edifices, in the three following localities:—Nimroud, on the Tigris, about twenty miles below the modern Mosul; Khorsabad, a site about ten miles to the North-east of Mosul, which was excavated for the French Government by M. Botta, and from which a few specimens have been obtained for the British Museum; and Kouyunjik, on the Tigris, nearly opposite Mosul. This classification of localities, which correspond broadly with three successive periods in Assyrian history, forms the basis of the arrangement under which the sculptures are here exhibited. The requirements of space, however, have compelled, in one instance, a deviation from the chronological order in which the collections are now generally disposed; the monuments of Khorsabad being unavoidably placed in the transept at the Southern extremity, although in age they intervene between those of Nimroud and Kouyunjik. The visitor, entering from the Greek Galleries, finds himself in the Nimroud Central Saloon; but in accordance with the system here pursued, of ascending continuously, as far as possible, from the later monuments to the earliest, he should turn to the left, and pass through the North door of this room into the

KOUYUNJIK SIDE-GALLERY.

The collection of bas-reliefs in this room was procured by Mr. Layard, in 1849 and 1850, from the remains of a very extensive Assyrian edifice excavated by him in the great mound of Kouyunjik. This edifice appears, from the inscriptions remaining on many of its sculptures, to have been the palace of Sennacherib, who is supposed to have reigned from about B.C. 716 to B.C. 698. It was subsequently occupied by his grandson Ashurakhbal, or Sardanapalus the younger, who reigned towards the middle of the seventh century, B.C. Monuments of both these kings are included in the collection. Those of Sennacherib are sculptured generally in gypsum or alabaster, those of Ashurakhbal in a harder limestone. Most of the sculptures were split and shattered by the action of fire, the palace having apparently been ruined by a conflagration, probably at the destruction of Nineveh: indeed, many single slabs reached this country in 300 or 400 pieces. These have been simply rejoined without attempt at restoration. Immediately to the left on entering is

1. A cast from a bas-relief cut in the rock, at the mouth of the Nahr-el-Kelb River, near Beyrout, in Syria, placed here in illustration of the Kouyunjik series, which succeeds it. It represents Sennacherib, standing in the conventional attitude of worship, with sacred or symbolical objects above him, and is covered with a cuneiform inscription. In the rock, adjoining the original relief, are six similar Assyrian tablets, and three Egyptian bas-reliefs, with hieroglyphic inscriptions, bearing the name of Rameses II., who at an earlier period is supposed to have passed through Palestine. Presented by the Duke of Northumberland, K. G.

The sculptures on the left, or West side of the Gallery, are all of the period of Sennacherib, and illustrate the wars he carried on, and the tributes he received. They are, for the most part, fragments of more extensive works. The subjects represented are as follows:—

2. A galley, with a long straight rostrum, or beak, propelled by two banks of rowers; on the upper deck are warriors, whose shields are arranged along the side of the galley. In the water appears a crab devouring a fish.

3. Part of a river, in which are seen fish of various kinds. The bank is overgrown with reeds. Beside these is an unarmed horseman attacked by an Assyrian warrior on foot, and raising his hand for quarter.

3*. Fragment of a head from a colossal figure of an eunuch.

4—8. A series of Slabs, mutilated in the upper part, from a chamber marked XXVIII. in Mr. Layard's ground-plan of the Palace of Kouyunjik; they commemorate apparently the expedition of Sennacherib into Southern Babylonia against Merodach Baladan, who is called in some of the Assyrian inscriptions the king of Kar-Duniyas.

The first portion represents a piece of water, probably part of the Tigris or Euphrates, on which are seen seven boats, among islands overgrown with marsh plants. To the left (4), on a reed-covered bank, are figures escaping from a boat boarded by the invaders; one of the latter has landed, and is spearing a fugitive; another holds up a head in triumph; a third is slaying a captive in the boat; and a fourth warrior stands making a signal, whilst a prisoner kneels and holds up his hands for quarter. Beyond, in the water, is a dead man, and another boat, in which apparently a combat is still going on; two of the slain are falling over the side. Next (5), beside a small island, is a raft buried amidst the reeds, upon it five figures are crouching for concealment. Beyond are two more boats, the upper conveys Assyrian archers; the lower, belonging to the enemy, has been boarded by the invaders, who have slain one of the crew, whilst three others, unarmed, are escaping or imploring quarter. Adjoining is a small boat, with three of the vanquished raising their hands in supplication. Above appears a raft, sheltered as before by reeds, in which are archers shooting, with other figures seated. Another raft, with three crouching fugitives, is seen in the foreground; beside it is a headless body in the water. Further on is a boat with some Assyrians returning in triumph; one rows, two others apparently hold up heads of the slain, and five prisoners accompany them. Beyond, in another boat, which is dragged to the shore by a soldier, are two Assyrians, with two prisoners manacled. In the water, between the islands, are numerous fish and crabs. Slabs 6, 7, 8, represent the shore, with a procession of captives and of booty, in two tiers. The upper exhibits prisoners handcuffed, with oxen; the lower has male and female prisoners bearing wine-skins and vases, attended by archers of the guard, and spearmen, and warriors carrying heads or driving oxen. At the right extremity of No. 8, stand two officers registering the amount of the spoil. Behind is a row of date palm-trees; and along the bottom of the slabs is a tributary stream of water, with fish.

9. Fragment of a battle scene; slingers in double file advance, discharging their slings, and holding in their left hands stones. The back-ground is curiously sculptured to represent (apparently) mountain-scenery, or perhaps jungle; parts of two trees are introduced.

10. Fragment of a similar scene; three archers are shooting, each accompanied by a comrade, who supports in front a screen of wattling. The back-ground is similar to the preceding.

11. Fragment, with two foot soldiers in full armour, each leading a horse, through the same country as before. In the back-ground is a tree much resembling the Banana.

12. Similar subject to the preceding.

13. Fragment from a procession, commencing with part of the wheel of a chariot, which belonged to a slab now lost; behind it are two warriors bearing (apparently) maces, followed by two spearmen, leading horses; all are in full armour.

14. Fragment representing three led horses, the last attended by an eunuch, holding in his right hand a whip.

15, 16, 17. A series, of which the upper portion is lost, representing the return from battle.

To the extreme left (15) are two officers registering the spoils brought in. In front of them are laid arms, couches, vessels, &c. Two warriors are piling the heads of the slain, others follow, bringing up prisoners in couples, fastened together by the wrist. Behind these (16) are women carrying wine-skins, driven by a soldier on foot, then a chariot drawn by two bulls, in which are three women or eunuchs, and lastly, three male captives, driven by a soldier. In the background of these slabs are palm-trees in full fruit, and beyond them some water with fish. The sculpture is continued on the edge of slab 17, which originally stood at a projecting angle in the wall of the chamber to which it belonged.

15*. Cast of a mutilated inscription at the back of No. 15.

18. 19. Fragment of a military procession; first come warriors armed with spears, swords, large round shields, and peaked helmets; then two, who are apparently royal mace-bearers; afterwards, two horses attached to a chariot, probably of the king, which was represented on the adjoining slab, now lost. On the upper part of No. 18 are the legs and feet of three men, belonging to a tier above.

20—29. Part of a series of bas-reliefs, from the chamber marked xiv. in Mr. Layard's plan, representing the siege of a fortified city, which occupies the centre of the composition, and is assailed by the Assyrians on both sides. The whole series is blackened by fire, and the sculptures are much mutilated, particularly in their upper portions. 20, 21, 22, are consecutive slabs. First, to the left, appear two warriors leading horses, and armed with spears, and bows carried in cases at their backs; next is a long file of advancing troops with spears, shields, and peaked helmets; then (22) two, perhaps chiefs, with crested helmets, and shields, of which the inner side is seen, and which appear formed of wickerwork; then four slingers, discharging stones, and holding in their left hands other stones; and then an archer, shooting. Above the figures is a row of trees, amongst which appears the vine, loaded with grapes, thus indicating the season of the year. On the upper part of No. 22 may be discerned the feet of another body of troops, belonging to a tier above, now lost. Between 22 and 23 occurs a break, from a slab having perished. Next (23) are seen three fully-armed warriors, shooting from behind screens, held by attendant warriors; then three light-armed archers, the two foremost (24) kneeling, and all directing their arrows at the town represented on the next slab. Behind them are seen three towers, perhaps belonging to an outwork, which has been carried by the besiegers: on the highest tower is an Assyrian chieftain, bending on one knee for the fight. Beyond these, running across slabs 23, 24, the row of trees is continued. On No. 25, planted on a high dome-shaped hill, is the besieged city. The upper part of the slab is mutilated, but a portion remains of an inner fortress or keep, within the outer wall; above which is a fragment of an inscription, intended probably to record the name of the place. In the outer wall is a round-arched gate; and at the foot of the hill appears to have been a river; water being introduced, which is continued along the whole series of slabs. All the walls and towers of the city are embattled, and lined with defenders, discharging arrows, or throwing down stones. Upon the acclivity of the hill, to the left, is an Assyrian preparing to scale the walls. In front of it appears to be an artificial mound, thrown up by the invaders, on which are planted five warriors, fully armed, all kneeling, and two of them shooting up at the walls from behind screens. Below these are trees, similar to the preceding. To the right (26), the attack is carried on upon the other side of the city. On the ground are archers, kneeling, and shooting from behind their screens; above them are others, mounted apparently on an outwork like that on No. 24, and likewise shooting at the walls; whilst above these again is a higher tier, in which other archers, some with screens, others without, are similarly engaged. Immediately behind these are trees, extending into the distance, where the ruggedness of a mountain-side seems conventionally indicated by angular lines. The two upper rows of archers are each headed by a warrior, advancing with spear and shield to an esplanade. After No. 26 occurs another break, the connecting slabs of the series being lost. On 27—29 are seen the results of the contest. Five warriors (28) are carrying in triumph the heads of the slain, followed by three male captives manacled, one of whom is being struck by an attendant; then (27) two women, bearing wineskins and vessels, and accompanied by a child. The warriors are met by others, armed with peaked helmets, spears, and shields. The connecting portion of No. 29 is lost; on what remains are two soldiers leading horses. Above the figures, along slabs 27—29, the row of vines and other trees is continued; and higher up are the remains of an upper frieze, in which the collection of the heads is again represented, before two scribes with writing materials, who register the number brought in.

30. Fragment from the siege of a city. A Bowman, shooting from behind a screen held by an attendant soldier; behind them, two slingers discharging stones. Underneath are the legs and feet of five combatants, the remains of a bas-relief, of which the upper portion has been removed to make room for the present sculpture, thus forming a species of palimpsest.

31. Plaster cast of a horseman, unarmed, in full flight.

32. Cast of an Assyrian horseman, pursuing, and discharging an arrow. The sculptures from which these two casts were taken were not brought home for the Museum.

33. A slab from Chamber VI. in Mr. Layard's plan; it represents a male figure, with hair falling over his shoulders in large flowing curls, and armed only with a dagger in his belt; his left hand is raised; his right, which is destroyed, appears to have grasped an object of uncertain character, planted upon the earth before him, apparently a staff surmounted by a fir-cone, or spear-head.

34—43. Part of a series of sculptures which originally lined the two walls of a long narrow gallery leading, by an inclined plane, from Kouyunjik towards the Tigris. On the one side, descending the slope, were fourteen horses, led by grooms; on the other, ascending into the palace, were servitors bearing food for a banquet. The figures are somewhat smaller than life, designed with much freedom and truth; and by comparison with the Panathenaic frieze in the Elgin Saloon, they may furnish a good point of view for estimating the capabilities and defects of Assyrian art.

The first two groups of consecutive slabs (34, 35) and (36, 37, 38) present grooms, wearing short tunics fringed with fur, and embroidered belts, leading each a horse by a halter twisted round his lower jaw.

39. Slab returned at a projection in the wall, and bearing on it a figure similarly attired to the grooms, but with a small staff in his hand,—perhaps a marshal or chamberlain.

39*. Cast of an inscription at the back of No. 39.

40. Slab which originally, as here, adjoined No. 39, presenting another horse and groom.

41. Slab from the opposite side of the gallery to the preceding, representing three attendants or servitors; the first (to the left) bearing in each hand a rod fringed with two rows of dried locusts, which are even yet consumed as food by the Arabs; the next, carrying two birds; and the foremost, two wine-skins.

42, 43. Two consecutive slabs, with five similar figures, forming two couples, and half of a third; each couple bearing between them, on their shoulders, trays laden with pomegranates, grapes, apples, and other articles of food.

44. A semicircular-headed slab, with a small mutilated figure standing, apparently in adoration, before a table of offerings, near which are various astrological symbols. Beside, and beneath him, is a long inscription, divided in the middle by a broad band.

At this end of the Room, on the floor, is a fragment from a pavement slab, with flowers, and an ornamental fringe, sculptured in relief.

On the South side of the door is a highly-interesting series of sculptures on six consecutive slabs, which formed the only remaining decorations of Chamber XXXIII. in Mr. Layard's plan. This Chamber was erected by Sennacherib, whose name occurs in the inscriptions at the back of the slabs, but the bas-reliefs were only sculptured in the time of his grandson, Ashurakhbal, whose victories they represent. Although broken into hundreds of minute fragments by fire, yet, from the greater hardness of the material, which is a fossiliferous limestone, the surface appears in better preservation than that of the alabaster remains, and the outlines of the sculpture are more sharply displayed.

45—47 represent a battle, which appears, from the inscriptions inserted in various parts of the scene, to have taken place in Elam, or Susiana. The troops of Ashurakhbal are armed with spears, bows, daggers, peaked, and sometimes crested, helmets, coats of mail, and large shields, generally square at the bottom; in a few instances they wield the battle-axe and mace, weapons not found in the earlier bas-reliefs. The enemy use merely the bow: many, however, are in chariots, which are drawn sometimes by mules, animals for which modern Susiana is still famous. They have no defensive armour; their hair is worn long, and bound with fillets. According to the uniform practice in all these monuments, the Assyrians appear not merely victorious, but even exempt from individual injury. The number of figures is so great, and the composition so involved, that it is impossible to distinguish more than the principal incidents in the ensuing description.

45. To the left is seen the side of a high arched mound, down which the invaders are driving the Elamites in confused rout. To the right the figures are disposed in four horizontal tiers. The highest, which is greatly mutilated, represents some of the victors torturing or slaying their prisoners. In the next tier below is a chariot, apparently taken from the enemy, as it differs in construction from the Assyrian; four of the conquering party, seated within it, are galloping from the field. Above this is a mutilated inscription, containing originally the name of the vanquished king; but this is now lost. Behind the chariot is a tent, the sides of which are supported by cords, but the covering is lost: within it are three captives, and two Assyrians receiving the heads of the slain. Other battle scenes occupy the two lower tiers, with the usual incidents of rout and slaughter.

46. The tiers of sculpture are continued, but the uppermost is entirely lost. In the highest which remains, amongst heaps of the slain, is a chariot, from which the occupants have fallen, and with which the horses are entangled. Around and below appear trees, amongst which the slaughter is continued. In the middle of the slab is a mutilated inscription.

47. Portions here remain of two upper tiers, presenting trains of captives, driven by soldiers; amongst them are women and children, the latter generally naked. Below, the same battle-scene is continued, in a mass of confusion, up to the banks of a river, probably the Eulæus, which bounds the sculpture to the right, washing down men, horses, bows and quivers, amidst shoals of fish and crabs. The plain is strewn throughout with the dead and dying; on the upper part of the slab birds of prey are fastening on their remains. In the middle are two inscriptions.

The next three slabs are a continuation of the series, which, in the original chamber, was interrupted by a doorway between 47 and 48. The bas-reliefs represent the reception of prisoners and spoils by the victors. Each slab was divided horizontally into six tiers, of which the highest is now considerably mutilated, but the remainder are generally well preserved.

48. At the top is part of a procession of warriors returning from the battle. In the second tier, in front of another procession, are two prisoners, fastened by the hands and feet to pegs fixed in the ground, and flayed by the victors. Above this is an inscription. In the next tier, two led horses, two prisoners wearing caps, with two Assyrian attendants, are ushered by an eunuch: before them are seen two of the vanquished, put to tortures. In the next tier a file of warriors is advancing, behind whom are fir-trees. In the fifth tier appears an Assyrian war-chariot, with two warriors behind it, on foot, raising their shields as if in exultation, and, in front, two led horses, with attendants. In the lowest tier is a mixed procession of troops;—to the left a horseman, with a spear; then a car, taken, apparently, from the enemy, with two heavily-armed soldiers beside it; then an Assyrian chariot, bearing two warriors; then attendants on foot.

48*. Cast of an inscription at the back of No. 48.

49. A continuation of the preceding bas-relief.—In the highest tier only the feet of some Assyrian soldiers are preserved. In the second, to the left, are the remains of a group, collecting heads of the slain; behind them, several figures are approaching, amongst whom is one of smaller proportions and marked Hebrew physiognomy, wearing a cap and pointed shoes, which appear to have been the national costume of the Israelites; behind these again are nine other figures, marching in the opposite direction. In the tier below is another group of victors, with captives; one of the latter, wearing a cap, and fettered at the ankles, appears to have a human head slung round his neck, and to be expostulating with an Assyrian, who is spitting in his face and striking him: the latter is followed by five figures similar to those immediately above them: then appears a procession advancing in the opposite direction, preceded by two bowmen, two captives in the Israelitish costume, and two attendant eunuchs. The fourth tier presents two lines of light-armed figures meeting in a grove of firs. The fifth and sixth exhibit the submission of the Elamites. Above, six figures prostrate their faces to the ground, whilst ten others kneel, with their hands raised in obeisance or supplication. Below, in the sixth tier, stands an eunuch chieftain, or Tartan, grasping by the wrist a captive who follows him. Over their heads is an inscription, recording (as interpreted by Mr. Layard) that the prisoner was a son of the King of Susiana, who fell in battle near the city of Shushan, or Susa, and that an Assyrian general had been nominated by the conqueror to succeed him. Before the chieftain is a crowd of figures, making obeisance, like those above; behind these is a car drawn by a mule, and a led horse. The seventh or lowest tier, represents a warrior leading a horse, and heading the procession represented on No. 48: before him are eight of the vanquished, making obeisance. These are followed by a band of musicians, the three foremost of whom, harpers, are dancing as they play, whilst a fourth blows the double pipe.

50. The last slab of the series is much mutilated on the right side. In the highest tier are trees: immediately below is the king, Ashur-akhbal, receiving the prisoners represented on the preceding slab: the royal chariot, which was richly decorated, is preceded by two guards, and two eunuchs bearing whips, and one of them a small box, or perhaps an inscribed tablet. The figure of the king seems to have been purposely mutilated, perhaps by the subsequent captors of Nineveh: he is accompanied by a charioteer, and an attendant, who holds the parasol, both also much defaced. Above the chariot is an inscription. In the third tier is a continuation of the light-armed men, and led horses, marching through a wood. Beneath is the representation of a city, standing at the confluence of a large and small river, perhaps Susa, between the Eulæus and Shahpûr. A continuous wall encircles several detached flat-roofed houses, with square doors, but no windows: without the wall are fortified towers, and trees: in the middle is inscribed a name not yet satisfactorily deciphered. Below the city is a continuation of the band of musicians, who are here all females; the majority are performing on the harp, but one on a double pipe, and another on a species of small drum; they are followed by other women and children, clapping their hands to the measure. To the extreme right appears a wood, in which is a piece of water. Along the bottom of the three slabs flows a stream, bearing down men, horses, cars, bows and quivers.

The remaining bas-reliefs in this room belong all to the period of Sennacherib. The next six formed part of a series in the great hall marked vi. in Mr. Layard's plan, and illustrate the architectural works of the Assyrian king. They are all considerably defaced.

51, 52. The monarch superintending the movement of a colossal human-headed bull. On the summit of a high mound to the left is the royal chariot, drawn by two attendants. The king is within it, alone; before him stands his mace-bearer; behind, an attendant supporting his parasol. On the brow of the mound kneels an officer turning to receive the orders of the king. Four lines of workmen succeed, lashed to as many cables, and toiling up the acclivity. The two lowest lines are headed by overseers; and beside the highest and lowest are drivers, plying their sticks on the shoulders of the men. The bull (52) is laid sideways on a sledge, to which the cables are attached, its front facing the spectator: the head is defaced, but the outline of the body is distinctly preserved: upon it stand four officers, the first clapping his hands to time the movement, or call attention; the second speaking through a trumpet, the case for which he bears on his back; the third, also a trumpet-bearer, addressing some one in front; whilst the fourth, kneeling, gives directions to the workmen behind. Immediately before the sledge is a man placing rollers, to assist its progress. The weight behind is relieved by a lever, pulled downwards by men with ropes, whilst another inserts a wedge-shaped block as a fulcrum below. Behind this is represented another gang of labourers constructing a mound, by carrying up earth and stones to the summit on their shoulders. Above these is a tier of soldiers, probably the body-guard, consisting alternately of bowmen and heavily-armed troops. Beyond, crowning both slabs, is a range of rugged mountains, covered with vines, firs, and fig trees. Along the bottom runs a stream, probably the Tigris, in which is an island: upon the latter are three men, raising water, by means of poles and buckets,—a contrivance still used in the south of Europe for irrigation, and called in Egypt the shadoof. Slab 52 having originally stood at a projecting angle in the hall, the edge is sculptured with a continuation of the subject: a further portion of the artificial mound is seen, with labourers depositing earth and stones on its summit; and the remainder was doubtless represented on the adjoining, or return slab.

53. A slab from the same hall as the preceding, representing a portion of a similar subject. Along the top is a range of mountains, covered, as before, with trees. Below them, a row of guards, like those on slabs 51, 52. Beneath these, to the left, part of a mound constructed by labourers, probably prisoners of war, as they all wear caps, and some have their ankles fettered; they ascend the mound in three rows, with loaded baskets, which they empty upon the summit; whilst a fourth row descends with baskets empty. In the centre of the slab is an inscription, recording the building of the palace by Sennacherib. Below this is a representation, now much defaced, of a quadrangular plot of ground covered with workmen, either a stone-quarry or clay-pit, where the materials of construction are being prepared; on the upper side are men bearing loaded baskets, below are others seated at their work. Along the base of the slab appears a line of guards, like those above.

54. Fragment of a series from another part of the same hall, representing the moving of some weighty piece of sculpture. The lower portion, and part of the right side, have perished. At the top is seen a piece of water, abounding with fish; two small boats, and a raft formed of four timbers, each bear men with blocks of wood, or other objects required for the operations. To the extreme right is a shore overgrown with reeds, and along the middle of the slab a row of fir-trees. Below these are men drawing probably a colossal bull, represented on the lost portion of the slab. Four rows of them are seen, each dragging a thick cable, to which they are lashed by ropes. Above the highest row is the driver plying his stick; and immediately behind, three overseers with their right hands extended, and in their left truncheons. Below these are five men placing rollers before the sledge.

55. Fragment from a series in the same chamber, representing the removal of a colossal bull. Along the upper part runs a river or lake, in which are three boats, bearing each four men, with objects probably required for the erection of the bull. In the water appear two fishermen, seated astride on inflated skins, each drawing up a fish with hook and line; abundance of other fish surround them, one of which is devoured by a crab. On the shore below this is a row of fir-trees. Below them are seen a line of porters, carrying various articles in their hands,—weapons, vessels, blocks of wood, saws, picks, spades, &c. Behind are two carts, each drawn by two eunuchs, and bearing ropes and wooden spars. To the left, below the row of porters, are four overseers with hands extended; behind them is the bull on a sledge. Standing on the top of it are three superintendents, the first extending his arms, apparently giving directions, the second clapping his hands, and the third holding his speaking-trumpet at his side. In front are seen the upper portions of three men, placing rollers, the bottom of the slab, on which the rest was sculptured, having been lost. The progress of the sledge is assisted by a large lever, worked like that on No. 52. Over the lever appear five porters, one bearing a saw and two axes, two others carrying forked props for supporting the scaffolding on the sides of the bull, when raised; a fourth with a long spar, and a fifth with ropes. At the right extremity of the slab are three more carts, with ropes and spars; and beneath them, two men supporting the forepart of an enormous pole, probably a spare lever.

56. Another slab from the same chamber, belonging to another similar series. In the upper part is a dense jungle of reeds, disposed in two horizontal lines; in the higher appear two does; in the lower, a wild sow with her young, and a stag. Below, near the centre of the slab, is the king, Sennacherib, in a richly-ornamented chariot, drawn by two eunuchs, supporting the pole, which terminates in a carved horse's head. Behind him walk two other eunuchs, bearing his parasol and fly-flapper, and followed by three attendants with maces. Six attendants, also with maces, precede the chariot. The lower part of the slab has perished; but the upper portion of several men carrying forked props, ropes and spars, and amongst them, a cart with cables and poles, still remain. In the middle of the slab is an inscription, partly effaced.

57—59. Three slabs from the great central hall of the palace, marked XIX. in Mr. Layard's plan; they represent the siege and capture of a city, situate on the further bank of a broad river. Round the back of the city (57), and nearly insulating it, flows a stream, or moat, whose banks are fringed with weeds. The invading army, having crossed this stream near its confluence with the river, occupy some open ground before the city. To the left is a horseman, armed with mail and helmet, and discharging an arrow at the walls; before him are two archers on foot, two warriors with spear and shield preparing for the assault, and another archer shooting from behind a screen held by a comrade. Next is seen the city, constructed, as usual, with embattled walls and towers, but with square-headed, instead of arched, gates. The upper portion is mutilated, but from a remaining tower a wounded man is falling: on the walls further on (58) appear two of the besieged, raising their hands in despair, or imploring mercy. The rest of this, and the succeeding slab, are occupied by a procession of prisoners and spoil, without the city walls. The rear is brought up by a warrior on foot, with spear, shield, and crested helmet, apparently striking a manacled prisoner; before these is another such prisoner, with a driver; then a cart drawn by an ox, and containing vessels and articles of furniture; next, four women bearing skins and vestures, one of them carrying a child, and all preceded by a soldier. Then (59) appear some oxen, executed with much spirit and truth; and before them, another soldier, driving four male captives, with wine-skins on their shoulders. Beyond the figures is seen a row of date-palms, in full fruit. Below this scene, the river is carried across the whole in a broad band; it is, as usual, stocked with fish and crabs. Along the bottom of the slabs is represented the nearer bank, upon which the king and his army are returning from the contest, beside another avenue of palms. To the left (57) are two horses led by warriors in peaked helmets; then three eunuch warriors in similar helmets; then the king in a sumptuous chariot drawn by two richly-caparisoned horses; he is accompanied by a charioteer, and an eunuch bearing the parasol and fly-flapper, and is followed on foot by an armed attendant with the mace: the yoke over the horses' shoulders is surmounted by a kind of tablet, with a figure carved in relief, probably representing the ferouher, or attendant deity. In front of the royal group are two attendants; then a file of soldiers (58) variously armed, and advancing to the spot where the spoil is collected (59). Here are seen captured spears and bows, couches, vases, goblets, &c. Below them is a pile of human heads, which two officers on the left (58) are registering, whilst on the right (59), a warrior is bringing in another with animated movements. Behind the latter a prisoner approaches, raising his hands for quarter, followed by six others in couples, attached together by the wrist, and bearing on their shoulders wine-skins; amongst these is a soldier conducting them.

60. The last slab is from the long gallery marked XLIX. in Mr. Layard's plan. It represents a figure of uncertain meaning, whether a mythical personage, or simply a mime or harlequin. The form is human, but with a lion's head, and feathers on the neck. He is undraped above the waist, but wears over his shoulder a sword-belt. His right hand raises a dagger; the left, as well as the legs and feet, are lost.

NIMROUD CENTRAL SALOON.

With this room commences the series of sculptures excavated by Mr. Layard, in 1847 and 1850, in different parts of the great mound at Nimroud. They are, with a few exceptions, executed in a species of alabaster, abounding in Mesopotamia, which is easily decomposed either by moisture or fire.

To the left of the door, on entering from the Kouyunjik Gallery, is a group of sculptures found in a ruin termed by Mr. Layard, with reference to its position on the mound, the South-West Palace. This edifice was erected by Essarhaddon, the son and successor of Sennacherib, with materials obtained, in great measure, from the spoliation of the palaces erected by the earlier Assyrian dynasty on the North-West side, and in the centre of the mound.

Against the North wall, by the door, are two slabs; on the upper is a horseman, wearing a crested helmet, pursued by two Assyrian horsemen, who are wounding his horse with their spears.

Below this is a fragment of a subject representing the siege of a city; a bucket, lowered by a pulley, is seen through the walls; one of the besiegers is cutting its rope.

Over the slabs is a head from a small statue, apparently of an eunuch; the nose, which was originally a separate piece let in, has been lost.

On the adjoining wall is a large bas-relief, divided horizontally into two tiers, the upper of which bears a representation of a strong city on a mound or hill, having walls with battlements and towers, and from which sheep, and captives bearing spoil, are being driven by Assyrian warriors. The lower scene represents a king in his chariot moving in procession, part of another chariot appearing before him. The king is attended by a parasol-bearer and a charioteer, and his horses are led by two ushers. Between the tiers is part of an inscription, originally extending over several adjoining slabs, upon one of which is mentioned the receipt of tribute from Menahem, King of Israel. This sculpture must therefore have been executed either for Pul, who invaded Samaria about 769 B.C., and is stated, in 2 Kings xv. 19, to have levied tribute from Menahem; or perhaps for his successor, Tiglathpileser, with whose history, in the opinion of Dr. Hincks, the account more nearly tallies.

Above this slab is another, on which are two horsemen in conical helmets pursuing a third, and thrusting him from his horse with their spears. Behind is a vulture, bearing off the intestines of a fallen warrior.

In front of these is a colossal head, in a triple-horned tiara, of a winged and human-headed bull, on a larger scale than any yet brought to Europe, and executed in a style which seems to prove that, unlike the slabs just described, it belongs to the time of Essarhaddon himself.

The remaining sculptures in this room, together with those of the succeeding gallery, belong to the period of the earlier dynasty of Nineveh. Of these, the bas-reliefs on the West wall of the room, which were discovered in the central ruin of the mound of Nimroud, are supposed to be the latest in date.

Commencing on the Southern, or left-hand side of the passage to the Phigaleian Saloon, the lowest bas-relief represents the evacuation of a captured city. Beneath the walls stand two battering engines, unemployed. Two carts, each containing two females and a child, and drawn by a pair of bullocks, are leaving the city. In the distance are eunuchs driving away the captured cattle, and scribes making an inventory of the spoil.

To the right of this is a slab, having sculptured upon it a flock of sheep and goats, and a driver, whose figure is nearly effaced.

Over these is a slab, having on it two horsemen with spears pursuing a flying figure on a camel. Beneath their feet are three dead men.

Continuing along the Western Wall, on the other side of the entrance to the Phigaleian Saloon, the lowest slabs bear representations of two sieges.

That to the left, which has an inscription underneath, has portrayed upon it the walls of a city, against which a battering engine is brought to work upon an artificial mound. Two archers behind screens are discharging arrows at the besieged, one of whom appears on the walls, begging quarter; in the distance are three impaled persons, and at the foot of the mound lie two of the slain.

The right-hand slab represents a similar attack of a city on the banks of some water, beside which are trees.

Above this bas-relief is a third siege. The city is defended by a triple tier of walls, with battlements, from which archers are shooting; the besiegers are working a battering engine, with three archers on the top, running upon an inclined plane; in the field are several warriors fighting, falling from the walls, or lying wounded: a date palm-tree is introduced, torn up by the roots.

To the left of this bas-relief is another, representing a female leading three camels, and carrying a vase, originally belonging to the same frieze as the corresponding slab on the other side (with the flock of sheep), but separated, as here, by an intervening space.

Over these is the head of a human-headed and winged bull in bas-relief, with double horns, and a richly-decorated tiara.

In the centre of the room stands the most important historical monument as yet recovered from Assyria. It is an Obelisk of black marble, with the top truncated, and divided into three gradines. Each of its sides has five oblong panels, sculptured in bas-relief, separated horizontally by single lines of cuneiform inscription; and the remaining surface, both above and below the bas-reliefs, is covered with similar inscription. On the eastern, or principal face, the highest panel represents a king holding two arrows and a bow, attended by two armour-bearers, and receiving homage from a captive or tributary, who prostrates himself at his feet; behind the latter figure are two royal attendants, standing with clasped hands; above are representations of the sun and of a ferouher. The side-panels on the same level show the tribute brought to the king; that on the northern face has a horse, with three Assyrian figures; the remaining two exhibit foreigners, attired like the two large figures on slab No. 19, in the Side-Gallery, and leading camels, or bearing miscellaneous offerings on their shoulders. The four panels next below these are similar in subject; upon the principal one the king is represented standing with a cup in his hand, and attended by four eunuchs, one of whom screens him with a parasol, another fans him with a fly-flapper; above appear the ferouher, and the sun. On the return panels are two royal attendants, followed by tributaries bearing wine-skins, vessels, &c. The third row of panels has men in Assyrian costume leading or driving animals, two camels, an elephant, three monkeys, and two large apes. In the fourth row are two lions and a stag, and Assyrians bearing vestures, tusks, &c. In the fifth, foreigners and Assyrians intermixed, with wine-skins, fruits, vessels, &c. The inscription on this monument records the conquests of Divanubara, son of Sardanapalus the Great, who is thought to have reigned about 902-860 B. C. Amongst those who brought him tribute are mentioned Jehu, "of the house of Omri," the Israelite king, and Hazael, the contemporary king of Syria; and according to Colonel Rawlinson, Misraim, or Egypt, is included in the list of tributary lands. The obelisk was found near the centre of the Great Mound.

The remainder of the Nimroud collection belongs altogether to the period of Ashurakhbal I., or Sardanapalus the Great, the earliest Assyrian king whose monuments have been brought to Europe, and who is supposed to have reigned about 930-902 B. C. The sculptures were found partly in the ruins of an extensive edifice erected under this monarch, and termed by Mr. Layard the North-West Palace, and partly in two small adjacent temples, of the same date, one of which was dedicated to the Assyrian "God of War."

To the West of the door leading from the Kouyunjik Gallery is a colossal lion, standing with open jaws, sculptured in front and on one side, and, like all the figures found in similar situations, provided with five legs, so as to appear perfect from both points of view; the whole surface is covered with cuneiform inscriptions, and at the back is also an inscription. This, with a companion figure, too much injured for removal, formed the sides of the principal entrance to one of the small temples just mentioned.

Against the nearest pilaster, on the East side of this room, is a small statue in hard stone, on its original pedestal; it represents Ashurakhbal I. standing, with his head bare, and a fringed robe wound round his body, in his right hand an instrument shaped like a sickle, and in his left a mace; on his breast is an inscription, delicately engraved. This figure is from an inner chamber of the same small temple as the preceding.

The remaining sculptures in this room were all found in the ruins of the North-West Edifice of Nimroud.

a winged and human-headed bull, wearing a horned cap; the neck and shoulders are restored.

Against the southern wall of the room, on either side of the door, are two colossal figures of a lion and a bull, not originally forming a pair, but each united with a figure similar to itself, at two of the entrances of chambers in the North-West Edifice. They are sculptured in mezzo-rilievo in front and on the side, and have each human heads with triple-horned caps, wings, and cuneiform inscriptions covering the unsculptured surfaces of the slabs.

Adjoining these, on either side, are two pairs of small human figures in bas-relief, each of which has wings and double-horned caps, and holds, in a sacrificial attitude, a fir-cone and basket, or a branch of pomegranate. They have all cuneiform inscriptions.

The South door leads into the

NIMROUD SIDE-GALLERY.

This room contains a continuation of the same series with the monuments last described.

The bas-reliefs on the West side were all found in a chamber of the North-West Edifice marked B in Mr. Layard's ground plan of this ruin, and formed part of the frieze. Those on the opposite side are partly from other chambers of the same edifice, partly from the small adjacent Temple of the God of War.

The slabs with large figures bear inscriptions running horizontally across the middle; those with small figures have had inscriptions generally on the border above and below.

The following are the slabs from Chamber B, commencing from the West, or right-hand side of the South door:—

1. A human figure with four wings, and triple-horned cap, sumptuously attired in embroidered and fringed robes; his right hand is raised in the attitude of worship, and in his left is a mace.

2. Large bas-relief, sunk within a border or framework, representing two kings in richly-ornamented attire, apparently engaged in sacrifice, and each followed by a winged triple-horned figure holding in one hand the fir-cone, in the other the basket, employed in religious rites: between the kings is a mystic tree, and above this, a ferouher, or Divine image in a wined circle. In front of this bas-relief, in its original site, was a large slab, serving as a throne or altar.

The four next slabs, both in the upper and lower tier, formed originally, as here, a continuous series.

3 b. Return from the bull-hunt. The king stands over a prostrate bull, with a cup in his hand; one of his attendants fans him with a fly-flapper; another shades him with a parasol; a third figure approaches with his hands clasped, in the Oriental attitude of respect; two others play, with plectra, upon stringed musical instruments.

4 a. Lion-hunt. The king draws his bow upon a lion which has planted his forepaws on the royal chariot; two attendants prepare to despatch the animal with daggers from behind; on the ground lies a lion pierced with arrows. The fighting lion, a figure sculptured with remarkable spirit, shows a claw at the end of his tail.

4 b. Return from the lion-hunt. A composition similar to No. 3 b, but in place of the parasol-bearer four archers stand behind the king.

5 a. This slab is unconnected in subject with those to which it was united. A city is represented, besieged by the Assyrian king; a battering-ram, worked from within a machine, assaults the walls, and is dislodging the stones; the machine, which is constructed of wicker-work, and runs upon six wheels, is surmounted by a tower, from which an archer, defended by a shield-bearer, is shooting on the besieged; behind the machine is the king, also shooting, and attended by two armour-bearers and an eunuch. The besieged, in return, discharge their arrows upon the assailants, whilst one raises his hand for a parley. The battlements of the city are serrated, and the gate is crowned by a semicircular arch.

5 b. This slab forms one subject with No. 6 b. The king, attended by his parasol-bearer, with his chariot waiting behind, receives the homage of the vanquished. With two arrows in his right hand, and a bow in his left, he stands in conference with a chieftain, followed by four attendants in the conventional attitude of attention. One of the captives bows to the ground at the king's feet; a soldier urges on a second, seizing his head by the hair; others follow, with arms fastened behind. Above appear vessels, elephants' tusks, and other spoils of war.

6 a, another isolated subject, represents the attack of a city or fortress, defended in front by a river. The architecture is similar to that on the preceding slab: a warrior and two women appear on the battlements, with gestures of supplication; whilst archers are shooting at them from the opposite shore. Three fugitives are swimming towards the walls, two of them supported by inflated skins, strapped beneath their bodies; the third is pierced by an arrow; on the shore beside the assailants are a date-palm, and two other trees.

Next follows a second series of nine consecutive slabs in each tier, one of those in the lower being supplied by a restoration in chiaroscuro.

7 a, 8 a, 9 a, 10 a, form together one subject, a battle and victory of the Assyrians. The king, in his chariot, drives upon the flying enemy, discharging his arrows; above him appears a guardian ferouher, drawing a bow in his behalf; the fugitives, who are all on foot, turn to shoot on their pursuer; an eagle, attacking one of the bodies of the slain, is inserted, without regard to perspective, in the space above. In the next group (8 a) are two chariots, with standards and archers, preceding the king; on them also the enemy turns to shoot. Further on (9 a), two Assyrian footsoldiers, with conical helmets, advance amidst the dead and wounded; above, an eagle is awaiting his prey. In front of these are horsemen, shooting as they charge; two of the enemy (10 a) meet them, shooting in return. In the van, another chariot, bearing an eunuch discharging an arrow, presses on the fugitives: on a mound in front is an Assyrian footsoldier, assailing a disarmed opponent; another, beneath, is slaughtering one of the vanquished; an eagle flies over the foremost chariot, and dead bodies are scattered about.

7 b, 8 b, 9 b, represent the passage of a river by the Assyrian army. To the left are warriors preparing for embarkation, or for swimming; one man is inflating a skin, another is trying whether a skin is sufficiently filled with air; a third is assisting to lift a chariot on board a boat. In the water appear, scattered wherever space will admit, men swimming upon skins, fishes, and small round-bottomed boats bearing chariots, with the horses swimming behind, and the boatmen guiding them by halters. On the third slab (9 b) is the royal galley, with three rowers and a steersman, aided by two men towing it from the shore; on board is the king standing in his chariot, holding two arrows in his hand, and attended by two eunuchs bearing his arms.

10 b, 11 b, are part of a subject originally comprising 3 slabs, and part of a fourth (13 b); but the third slab was discovered in so shattered a condition, that Mr. Layard did not attempt its removal. It is here supplied by a painting in chiaroscuro, after a copy made by Mr. Layard on the spot. The left-hand portion (10 b) represents the capitulation of a city; women appear on the battlements, which are, as usual, serrated: three Assyrian chariots are seen in procession below. In front of them, attended by a parasol-bearer, stands the victorious king, holding in his right hand two arrows, in his left a bow; above appears the ferouher; a chieftain addresses the king, presenting to him captives and spoils of war,—a subject treated very similarly to No. 6 b. The last portion of the composition extends over part of the slab No. 13 b, where females, tearing their hair, and accompanied by a child, terminate the train of prisoners; in the space above these are captured cattle.

11 a, 12 a, 13 a, represent the return to camp. To the left is a ground-plan of a circular building, flanked by bastions, and divided into four symmetrical apartments; within each is a composition of one or more figures preparing food. Adjoining is a tent, within which a groom is cleaning a horse with a curry-comb; in front three other horses are feeding at a trough. To the right, an eunuch receives four male prisoners, brought in by a soldier. In the space above these are two men, apparently mimes, wearing lions' skins; one of them is dancing, with a whip or thong in his hand; beside them is a minstrel playing a guitar. Next (12 a) are two men bearing heads of the slain, and three musicians with lyres and cymbals; below these, a group of figures counting the heads of the decapitated. Then follows the triumphal procession of royal chariots; over the first flies an eagle, with a human head in his claws. The chariot of the king (13 a) is preceded by a conductor, and a footsoldier; within it is the king, holding up two arrows, and accompanied by his parasol-bearer; above, the ferouher. A mounted warrior follows, leading a spare horse; in the field above are two footsoldiers, and two dead bodies.

14 a, 15 a. A battle before the walls of a city or fortress. Two Assyrian chariots, bearing archers and standard-bearers, are pursuing one belonging to the enemy, which is flying towards the city; its charioteer, pierced with an arrow, turns to ask quarter, whilst one of his horses is falling, and the other two are plunging desperately. In the area above are three headless bodies, and small trees, apparently vines. Further on, the king, in his chariot with an armour-bearer and a charioteer, attended by the ferouher, is driving upon a chariot of the enemy; its occupant has been struck down, and one of the horses is falling, drawing the charioteer violently forwards by the reins. Assyrian footsoldiers are seen beyond, one of whom is assailing a disarmed opponent, whilst a comrade of the latter is endeavouring to draw him out of danger. The city, on the extreme right, is defended by a moat or river, beside which are vines with clusters of grapes, and other fruit-trees: from the walls warriors are discharging arrows and stones, and one is inviting a parley: below are two Assyrian footsoldiers, each killing an opponent.

13 b, 14 b, 15 b, the remaining slabs in this series, represent a siege. A portion of No. 13 b, belonging to a preceding subject, has been already described. On the remaining portion is the king, accompanied by his shield-bearer, his parasol-bearer, and another attendant with a quiver full of arrows, who shoots towards the besieged city. The city itself, which occupies the centre of the entire composition, exhibits (generally) the usual style of architecture, but the arched gateway has a remarkable ornamental moulding. Some of the Assyrians are scaling the wall with ladders; whilst the enemy hurl stones, and shoot arrows, upon them from above; others, with instruments resembling square-headed spears, or mounted celts, are making a breach below, and others again mining or cutting out the walls. Behind the battlements appear women tearing their hair; wounded and dead bodies are falling over. On the right the city is attacked by a battering-ram, worked from within a machine such as already described, but with no wheels visible. From the nearest turret or bastion (the upper part of which is lost) the besieged are lowering chains, or grappling irons, to catch the ram, and draw it upwards; two of the assailants, however, with hooks thrown over the engine, are keeping it down by their weight. The besieged, again, are hurling firebrands on the machine, to ignite it; but the Assyrians, through pipes carried in the tower of their machine, are playing water on the flames. Within this tower are two warriors assailing the besieged with arrows and stones. On the side of the battering machine is a carved representation of a ferouher shooting at the enemy. Behind it, archers standing, or kneeling, are discharging arrows towards the city. A war-chariot, and two footsoldiers, are waiting, further to the right; and above are two eagles, one attacking a fallen body.

16 a. Fragment of a male figure, with remains of colour on the hair and eyes, apparently engaged in a sacrificial rite; in his right hand is a flower, and on his head a garland, or band of rosettes.

16 b. A battle-scene, in which an Assyrian warrior in his chariot is pursuing some fugitive horsemen, and discharging at them an arrow. One of the enemy turns, and extends his hand for quarter; another shoots, after the manner of the Parthians. A wounded man has fallen under one of the horses; another lies dead in the distance. A river, or stream, appears beneath the fugitives; in it is seen a fish. This slab is much dilapidated from the action of water.

17. The last slab from Chamber B. A winged male figure, richly attired, is bringing offerings for sacrifice; on his right arm is a fallow deer, in his left hand a branch with five flowers. A similar subject was represented on the slab originally adjoining this on the left side, the two figures standing back to back; and a portion of the wing of the companion figure appears on this slab.

Immediately on the other side of the North door are bas-reliefs from other chambers of the North-West Edifice.

18. Winged male figure, in fringed and embroidered robes, with an ibex on his left arm, and in his right hand an ear of wheat.

19. Two foreigners, paying tribute to some personage represented on a lost slab. Both these figures have shoes with high pointed toes, and one wears a cap not very unlike the Phrygian. The foremost is raising his two hands in an attitude symbolical of deference or pacification; the other has on his head and shoulders a monkey, retained by a noose, and is leading another monkey, similarly secured. Remains of black and white paint may be observed in their eyes.

20. A king standing with a staff or sceptre in his right hand, and his left resting on his sword; his robes are richly fringed, and their embroidery is represented by very delicate incised lines; on his eyes and his sandals are remains of colour.

Next follow six slabs from a chamber marked G in Mr. Layard's Plan of the North-West Palace, which, from their superior dimensions, elaborate execution, and almost perfect preservation, may be reckoned among the finest examples of Assyrian bas-relief. They represent the King amongst his attendants, supernatural and human, apparently returned from battle, or the chase. All the figures are sumptuously attired, their robes fringed, and embroidered with sacred or mystical ornaments; their sandals are painted in black and red, and remains of colour are discernible in the eyes.

21, 22, 23. Three slabs, forming one subject, and originally occupying the North End of the Chamber. In the middle is the king, seated on a throne, with his feet on a footstool, and in his right hand a shallow cup. Before him is an eunuch, holding out a patera, or vessel with a curved handle, and fanning the king with a fly-flapper; he is followed by a winged and double-horned figure, with the sacrificial fir-cone and basket. Behind the king are two eunuchs bearing his arms, and the foremost fanning him with the fly-flapper; after them follows another winged personage, similar to that on the other side.

24, 25, 26, are all from the East Side of Chamber G. The entire wall was covered with repetitions of the same two groups of figures, each repetition occupying in the whole three slabs. The specimens selected by Mr. Layard present portions of different groups, which are here arranged in correspondence, though not in actual juxtaposition, with each other. They are as follows:

24. Winged, double-horned figure, with fir-cone and basket, and king with his bow, and two arrows held up a symbolical position.

25. Winged, double-horned figure, with fir-cone and basket, completing a group with another slab similar to the preceding. Eunuch bearing the king's arms, belonging to a slab similar to the following.

26. King with a cup and bow, an eunuch fanning him with a fly-flapper. The bows on this slab and No. 24 have each been painted red.

The slabs next succeeding are from the small Temple at the North-West extremity of the Great Mound, dedicated to the God of War. Nos. 27-29 stood originally, as here, at right angles to each other, No. 27 being on the external wall of the building, and Nos. 28 and 29 on the side of a doorway leading to one of the chambers. On the opposite side was a similar group, of which the return slab on the external wall (No. 32) was alone removed by Mr. Layard.

27. Figure, apparently of a priest, richly attired, with flowers on his head, and in his right hand a branch with three blossoms.

28, 29. A four-winged male figure, wearing the triple-horned cap, and brandishing thunderbolts, pursues at full speed a monster with the head and body of a lion, but with horns, wings, and the feet and tail of an eagle, who is represented with remarkable spirit, ramping, and angrily snarling. In the original position of this bas-relief, at the entrance of the temple, it would obviously typify the extrusion of the Evil Spirit. At the back of the two slabs is the standard inscription of the monuments of Ashurakbal, which was hidden, anciently, against the wall. Both slabs were found shattered into fragments, and their surface dilapidated by the action of the fire, in which the building perished.

29*. A restoration, painted in chiaroscuro, of the figure upon the slab which originally occupied the position corresponding to this: part of the fir-cone, the basket, and right foot, remain on the edge of No. 29. The subject is the same as that of No. 30, turned in the opposite direction.

30. Slab found immediately adjoining the Good and Evil Spirit on the opposite side of the same doorway, and within the chamber. It represents a Fish-God, perhaps a form of Dagon; his cap is shaped behind into the head of a fish, whose body descends to his waist; in his left hand is the mystic basket, and his right held the fir-cone, sculptured on the return of the slab flanking the doorway. The back of this bas-relief has also an inscription, running across the middle; a cast of it (30*) is placed at the side. The slab itself has suffered like the two preceding.

31. Winged male figure, with a garland on his head, and in his left hand a branch with blossoms, as if for sacrifice. From the North-West Edifice.

32. A similar figure, but on a larger scale, and without wings, from the exterior wall of the Temple, originally the return slab on the opposite side of the doorway to the group already described, the counterpart of No. 27.

The remaining sculptures in this room are all from the North-West Edifice.

33. Winged male figure, with the head of an eagle, holding the fir-cone and basket, sumptuously attired in embroidered and fringed robes, and elaborately finished. It has been supposed to represent the Assyrian God, Nisroch.

34. Similar figure, turned in the opposite direction.

35. Female figure, with four wings, a double-horned cap, and a profusion of ornaments round her neck, holding in her left hand a necklace, probably as a sacrificial offering. On the eyes may be observed remains of colour.

36. A slab belonging originally to the North-West Edifice, but found in an isolated quarter, where it had been left in ancient times, in the course of removal to another situation. It is here placed opposite some similar subjects from Chamber B. It represents a lion-hunt: an armed personage in a chariot, accompanied by a charioteer, is drawing his bow on some object in front, upon a lost slab; beneath the horses' feet lies a lion pierced with arrows. The sculpture is highly elaborated, and of considerable merit. At the back is an inscription, of which a cast (36*) is placed above.

The next three slabs are from a chamber marked I in Mr. Layard's plan.

37 a. Two winged male figures, in double-horned caps, kneeling beside a mystic tree, apparently in the act of adoration. The feet of the figures, both in this and the other two slabs, are bare.

37 b. Two winged female figures, in double-horned caps, and with richly-decorated collars, standing beside a similar tree, and holding necklaces. This slab stood originally under No. 37 a.

38. Two eagle-headed and winged figures standing beside the tree, with sacrificial fir-cones and baskets. Above this was a slab similar to No. 37 a, and the pair thus formed was repeated all round the remainder of the chamber.

39, 40. Two large slabs, forming one subject with a third, which has not been recovered. To the left is the symbolical tree, and part of the wing of a figure on the missing slab; to the right is the king, wearing a collar of mystical ornaments, and standing between two winged and eagle-headed figures, each holding the fir-cone and basket.

41. A winged figure, with double-horned cap, and richly-embroidered dress, standing with the fir-cone and basket in the usual posture of adoration.

The South door leads to the

ASSYRIAN TRANSEPT.

The first, or Western compartment of this Room, contains the remainder of the monuments of Ashurakhbal I.

Facing the visitor, on entering, is a high insulated slab of limestone, arched at the head, and sculptured or engraved all round. In front, within a raised border, is a mezzo-rilievo figure of the king, standing apparently in a religious attitude, his right hand raised, and in his left a mace: he is attired in the sacrificial robe, and has a collar decorated with mystical ornaments: above him are various sacred symbols. The unsculptured area of the panel, and the sides and back of the slab, are covered with a long and finely-cut inscription, comprising an invocation to the Assyrian gods, and a chronicle of the King's conquests. The lower part of the stone has suffered both from fire in ancient times, and more recently from water. Immediately in front stands a triangular altar, which was originally so placed before the high slab. These objects were found outside one of the entrances to the small Temple of the God of War.

Against the pilasters, on either side of the room, are two colossal human-headed, winged, and triple-horned lions, which originally flanked the portal of a chamber in the North-West Edifice; the backgrounds of the slabs are covered with cuneiform inscriptions. This concludes the series from Nimroud.

On the opposite, or East side of this room, is the Khorsabád compartment, containing monuments from the Palace of Sargina, the founder of the later Assyrian dynasty, and also (it is believed) the same person as Shalmenaser, who carried the ten tribes into captivity in the reign of Hoshea, B.C. 721.

Two colossal human-headed and winged bulls, each sculptured in mezzo-rilievo both in front and on one side, are placed, agreeably to their original arrangement, as on the two sides of the entrance of an inner chamber. Under the body of each bull is an Assyrian inscription, but that on the left-hand figure has been purposely effaced in ancient times.

Beside each bull is a colossal human figure, in mezzo-rilievo, winged, and double-horned, having in one hand the fir-cone, and in the other the basket, employed in sacrificial rites. These, with the two bulls, were obtained from Khorsabád in 1849 by Lieutenant-Colonel H. C. Rawlinson, C.B., H.M. Consul-General at Baghdád.

Within the chamber thus formed is the collection of bas-reliefs procured from Khorsabád in 1847 by Mr. Hector, a merchant at Mosul.

On the East Wall, facing the entrance, are two colossal figures, of a king, and a chief, in conference; behind the latter, an eunuch with his hands clasped; and on either side, several other heads, originally belonging to similar figures.

At the back of the bull, near the window, are two smaller figures, in a sacrificial attitude, with the right hand raised, and in the left, a pomegranate branch; two colossal heads of eunuchs; and a small bearded human head.

At the back of the other bull are two figures, of an archer, and a tributary bearing a wine-skin, three small fragments with horses' heads richly accoutred, and a third fragment, inscribed, and having on it the feet of two men and a horse.

On the Wall facing the window is a slab with two horses' heads, richly caparisoned, and the upper part of the figure of a foreign tributary, the size of life.

Beneath this is the only slab obtained by Mr. Layard from Khorsabád, in black stone, and representing, in bas-relief, three Assyrian sportsmen in a wood, with bows and arrows, killing deer, hares, and birds.

In a detached position, in the middle, is a mutilated statue, in basalt, of a male figure of the size of life, seated on a square throne: it is covered with inscriptions, which prove it to be of the time of Divanubara. Found by Mr. Layard, at Kalah Sherghát, on the Tigris, below Nimroud, in 1847.

The North side of the Assyrian Transept opens into the ## EGYPTIAN GALLERIES.

The monuments in this collection, the last to be seen on the Ground Floor of the Museum, may be regarded on the whole as the earliest within the range of antiquity: for though, on the one hand, they descend to the times of the Roman Empire, they ascend, on the other, to a period probably not less than 2000 years before the Christian era. The two great Galleries, with the connecting or Central Saloon, in which these monuments are contained, form, together, the third, or most Eastern, of the parallel suites running North and South, respectively appropriated to the Greek, the Assyrian, and the Egyptian collections. The larger sculptures have been arranged, as far as possible, in chronological order, the dynastic divisions of Manetho forming the historical basis of the system during the period of the Pharaohs, or native kings: but the tablets, and other smaller sculptures, are as yet only partially reduced to a corresponding order, as the chronological classification of these objects presents greater difficulties.

Entering the Southern Gallery, the visitor first finds the monuments of the Roman dominion in Egypt, commencing with the capture of Alexandria by Augustus, B.C. 30, and extending till the Mohammedan invasion, A.D. 640. Next follow the remains of the Greek period, introduced by the conquests of Alexander the Great, and the succession of Ptolemy Soter to the kingdom, B.C. 323. Afterwards commence the series of sculptures belonging to the thirty dynasties of Manetho; the Southern Gallery comprehending the latest portion, as far back as the Nineteenth Dynasty.

The Central Egyptian Saloon is appropriated to the monuments of the greatest monarch of that dynasty, Rameses II., who appears to have been the original represented by the Greeks in their legends of Sesostris.

In the Northern Gallery are the large sculptures of the Eighteenth Dynasty, which comprehends the most splendid epoch of Egyptian history, and has left the grandest memorials of the arts of the Egyptian people: with these are also included some sepulchral tablets of the antecedent period, and a few likewise of later date, intended to be hereafter removed.

The Vestibule, at the Northern extremity of these galleries, contains chiefly the archaic remains of Egypt, prior to the Eighteenth Dynasty; the oldest of which may reasonably be regarded as the most ancient productions of the art of sculpture now existing in Europe.

In the ensuing description the objects are mentioned in the order of the numbers attached to them before the recent arrangement was made, and, in most instances, still remaining upon them*.

No. 1. A lion couchant, whose mane in front is inscribed with the prenomens and name of Amen-asro, supposed to be an Æthiopian monarch. The base is also inscribed with a dedication from Amenophis III. (Memnon), in whose reign it must have been sculptured. His name has been anciently erased by the disk worshippers and subsequently re-inserted. This lion, with its companion, No. 34, stood before one of the gates of a temple at Mount Barkal. Red granite. Presented by Lord Prudhoe, (now Duke of Northumberland,) 1835.

No. 2. A sarcophagus of Petenesi, a bard, in form of a mummy

* The articles contained in these Rooms, to which the mark (†) is prefixed in this catalogue, were collected by the French in different parts of Egypt, and came into the possession of the English army in consequence of the capitulation of Alexandria, in the month of September, 1801. They were brought to England in February, 1802, under the care of General Sir Hilgrove Turner, and were sent, by order of HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE THE THIRD, to the British Museum.

case, with five lines of hieroglyphics down the front, the 77th chapter of the sepulchral ritual; the face has been gilt; probably about the period of the 26th dynasty. Arragonite. Thebes. From Mr. Sams's collection.

No. 3. Sarcophagus of Sa-atu, or Nesa-tu, a scribe and priest of the temples of the acropolis of Memphis; covered with inscriptions and figures of various divinities who address the deceased; from the side excavation of a tomb made in the age of the 26th dynasty at Gizeh, commonly called Campbell's tomb. Presented by Col. Howard Vyse, 1839.

No. 4. Colossal head of a divinity or king wearing the tesher, or possibly the pschent, discovered with No. 6, in an excavation made by Mr. Salt in a line with the vocal Memnon and its companion at Gournah, and possibly from a Colossus placed before a door of the palace of Amenophis III., whose features it much resembles, in that quarter. Brownish breccia. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 5. A group, representing the monarch Har-em-hebi (Horus), of the 18th dynasty, standing under the protection of Amen-ra. Dark granite.

No. 6. Colossal head, exactly resembling No. 4, and probably from a similar statue; many of these statues stood facing the great colossi in the intervals of the front column of the Propylon; from Gournah. Brownish breccia. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 7. † A colossal head of a ram, emblem of the divinity Amen-ra, in his form as Chnumis. This is from one of the colossal rams which were placed as a dromos to the Pylon of Harem-hebi (Horus), of the 18th dynasty, at Karnak, and were sculptured in the reign of that monarch. Sandstone.

No. 8. Statue of the god Hapi, or Nile, bearing an altar of libations, from which hang down water-fowl and plants. At the side is a figure dressed as a priest, and on the back a dedication from Sheshank I. (Shishak), of the 22nd dynasty, to Amen-ra. Karnak. Sandstone. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 9. † Colossal fist from the ruins of Memphis; it is supposed to have formerly belonged to one of the statues which, according to Herodotus, stood before the Hephæsteum, or temple of Phtha, at Memphis. Red granite.

No. 10. † The chest of the sarcophagus of the monarch Nechter-hebi, or Her-necht-hebi (Amyrtæus, of the 28th dynasty, or Nectabes, of the 30th). The subject of the Sun, attended by various divinities passing through the hours of the day, is represented on the exterior, while inside are various usual sepulchral deities. From the mosque of Saint Athanasius, at Alexandria. Breccia.

No. 11. A figure of a gryphon or hawk-headed sphinx, the emblem of the divinity Munt-ra, found by Belzoni, in the great temple of Ibsamboul or Aboosimbel, built by Rameses II. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 12. Monument found amidst the ruins of Karnak; it was placed on a pedestal of white stone, in a small temple, in the north-east angle of the wall inclosing the great temple, probably close to the granite sanctuary; on each of the broad sides is the monarch Thothmes III., of the 18th dynasty, standing, and holding with one hand the deity Munt-ra, and with the other the goddess Athor, who is placed at the short side; from the much lower bas-relief of the deities, it appears that they have been sculptured in the place of some others originally there. Syenite. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 13. Hawk-headed gryphon or sphinx, emblem of the god Munt-ra, the companion of No. 11, found by Belzoni in the great temple of Ibsamboul or Aboosimbel, built by Rameses II. Sandstone.

No. 14. Fractured Colossus, apparently, from the features, of the monarch Amenophis III., and probably from the edifice erected by that monarch in the Gournah quarter of Thebes. Black granite.

No. 15. Colossal head of a king wearing the pschent, found with the arm, No. 55, detached from a colossus lying in the sand in the Karnak quarter of Thebes; the features resemble those of Thothmes III. Discovered by Belzoni in 1818. Red granite. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 16. Lower part of a seated colossal figure of the goddess Pasht, or Bubastis, bearing the names and titles of the king Amenophis III., and which has formerly been one of the statues from the edifice of that monarch at Karnak. Black granite.

No. 17. Coffin in the shape of a mummy of Seveksi, a person of the sacerdotal caste, in the time of one of the later dynasties. Basalt. From the collection of Signor Anastasi.

No. 18. Sarcophagus of Pa-neter-hent, a standard-bearer. Syenite. From the collection of Signor Anastasi.

No. 19. Head and upper part of a statue of Rameses II. (Sesostris), wearing a cylindrical diadem of uræi, of fine execution; traces of colour still remain on this bust. The hieroglyphics down the back are part of the address of Amen-ra, and of the name and titles of Rameses. Brought from the edifice at Gournah, formerly called the Memnonium of Thebes, and hence popularly called "the young Memnon." Presented by Henry Salt, Esq., and Louis Burchhardt, Esq., 1817.

No. 20. Slab, which has been placed between two columns of a temple, sculptured on both sides, and surmounted on one by a cornice of uræi serpents, and on the other of vultures. On it the monarch Psammetichus I. is represented kneeling and offering cakes of bread to a serpent, a cow-headed, and another divinity, all seated on square pedestals, the door-keepers of the mystical gates of the Aahru, or Elysium. The hieroglyphics contain the names and titles of the king, and the speeches of the divinities; from Alexandria. Basalt. Presented by KING GEORGE THE THIRD, 1766.

No. 21. Colossal statue of Amenophis III., monarch of the 18th dynasty, the same king who is represented by the vocal statue, seated on a throne. His names and titles are inscribed on the front of his throne and on the back of the statue, having the name of Amen inserted in place of another name erased throughout. Found, in 1818, in the Memnonium at Thebes. Black granite. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 22. Slab which has been placed between two columns of a temple, surmounted on one side by a cornice of uræi, and of vultures on the other; on it the monarch Nectanebo, of the 30th dynasty, B.C.

387—377, is represented kneeling, and offering a conical cake of bread. The other side is much injured, having been used at a late epoch in the restoration of a temple; on it, however, may be traced the monarch kneeling and offering to a deity, &c. The hieroglyphics are the names and titles of the kings, addresses of divinities, and the dedication of the temple to which it belonged; from Alexandria. Green basalt.

No. 23. † Chest of a large sarcophagus of Hapimen, a royal scribe, &c.; on the exterior are the four genii of the Amenti, Anubis, the symbolic eyes of the Sun, Isis, and Nephthys; the hieroglyphics are the names and titles of the deceased, the addresses of the deities, and the 77th chapter of the Ritual; round the interior are the deities to whom the various parts of the body were sacred [chapter 42]. It was brought from Grand Cairo, where it was used by the Turks as a cistern, which they called "The Lovers' Fountain." Black granite.

No. 24. † The Rosetta stone, containing three inscriptions of the same import, namely, one in hieroglyphics, another in a written character, called demotic or enchorial, and a third in the Greek language. These inscriptions record the services which Ptolemy the Fifth had rendered his country, and were engraved by order of the Synod of Priests, when they were assembled at Memphis for the purpose of investing him with the royal prerogative. It is the key to the deciphering of the hieroglyphical and demotic characters of Egypt. This stone was found near Rosetta, and it appears to have been placed in a temple dedicated to Atum by the monarch Nechao. Basalt.

No. 25. † Mutilated statue, without its head, of a high officer of state, kneeling upon a square plinth. Thebes. Black granite.

No. 26. Statue of Seti (Sethos) II., monarch of the 19th dynasty, seated on a throne, and holding a ram's head, placed on a small altar, by both hands on his knees; his names and titles are inscribed round the pedestal and on the plinth behind. The name of Set has been erased, and that of Osiris substituted for it throughout these inscriptions. Found by Mrs. Belzoni at Karnak. Sandstone. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 27. Lower part of a statue of Rameses II., the Great, kneeling, and holding a shrine, on which is a scarabæus. The hieroglyphics in front express the names and titles of the king, and that the scarabæus god, Kheper, the creator, "gives the breath of life to his nostrils." Dark granite. Presented by Earl Spencer, 1805.

No. 28. A circular vessel, decorated with the head of Athor; on it is a dedication from several legal functionaries of Thebes to Ta-ur, or Thoueris, another form of the goddess Athor. Sandstone.

No. 28*. Circular bason, probably to hold holy water, having at each handle, in cavo-rilievo, a head of the cow-eared terrestrial Athor, full face, surmounted by the pylon or gateway. These basons (see Nos. 28, 465) were dedicated to this goddess on account of her presiding over the waters. Basalt. Presented by R. Goff, Esq., 1848.

No. 29. Ari-nefru, guardian of the temple of Amen-ra, and his wife A-pu, seated on a throne, on the sides of which are dedications to Amen-ra, Osiris, Mut. The upper part of this group is restored. Age of the 18th dynasty. Calcareous stone.

No. 30. Colossal bust from a statue of Amenophis III., much mutilated. Nummulite limestone. Gournah. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 31. A group of Atu, a sacerdotal functionary, seated on a throne or chair by the side of his sister Han-ur, a priestess of Amen, holding a nosegay of lotus flowers; between them, of smaller proportions, is his son Neferhebf, second priest of the monarch Amenophis II., of the 18th dynasty. Found in a tomb near Thebes. Sandstone. From Mr. Salt's collection.

No. 32. Sarcophagus with its cover, on which, in bas-relief, is the goddess Athor: in the interior is the Sun, and the Heaven represented as a female, and at the bottom the goddess Athor. The inscriptions with which this is covered are the addresses of various deities, in which is mentioned the Queen of Amasis, of the 26th dynasty, who is called the daughter of the king Psammetichus and his wife Nitocris, and mother of the Queen Tachaut. It was discovered in an excavation, 130 feet deep, behind the palace of Rameses II. (Sesostris), near Thebes.

No. 33. A sarcophagus of a female named Ankh, in the form of a mummy, which appears to have been originally intended to hold a male figure; on it are the four genii of the Amenti, and a prayer for the deceased. Green basalt.

No. 34. A lion couchant, companion of No. 1; on the mane are the names and titles of Amen-asro, an Ethiopian monarch, and round the pedestal is a dedication from the monarch Amen-tuanch or Amenanchut, supposed to be the son of Amenophis III., of the 18th dynasty; the end of his name has been anciently erased, probably to substitute some other. From Mount Barkal. Syenite. Presented by Lord Prudhoe (now Duke of Northumberland), 1835.

No. 35. Statue, without a head, of a divinity or king, the flesh coloured red; found in a sepulchre near the Pyramids of Gizeh. Calcareous stone. Presented by Captain Cavighia, 1817.

No. 117. Tablet of Abydos. This celebrated monument, discovered by Mr. Banks in a chamber of the temple of Abydos, in 1818, published by M. Cailliaud in 1823, by Mr. Salt in 1825, and subsequently by different authors who have written on Egyptian chronology, originally represented an offering made by Rameses II., of the 19th dynasty, to his predecessors on the throne of Egypt; uncertain whether in genealogical or chronological order. It originally contained the names of fifty-two kings disposed in the two upper lines, twenty-six in each line, and a third or lower line, with the name and prenomens of Rameses II. or III. repeated twenty-six times. At the time of the visits of Messrs. Banks and Cailliaud, the first twelve names of the first line, and the first eight of the second, had been destroyed. It was removed to France in 1837, and obtained at M. Mimaut's sale by the British Museum. On the upper line, beginning from the right hand, are the names of monarchs anterior to the 12th dynasty, viz., Ra-nefer-ka, or Nepercheres I.; Ra-nefer-ka, or Nepercheres II., named Nebi; Ra-tet-ka, named Ma; Nepercheres III., named Khen-tu; Meren-her, Snefer-ka I., Ka-en-ra, Nepercheres IV., named Reru; Nepercheres V. and Nepercheres VI., named Pepi-sneb; and Snefer-ka II., named An-nu. The names in the second line are, Amen-em-ha II., User-te-sen II., User-te-sen III., Amen-em-ha III., and Amen-em-ha IV., of the 12th dynasty; and Aahmes I., Amenophis I., Thothmes I., II., and III., Amenophis II., Thothmes IV., Amenophis III., and Horus, of the 18th dynasty. Rameses I., Sethos I., and Rameses II., of the 18th or 19th. The king, Rameses II. or III., probably stood on the right hand of the tablet, and on the other is the lower part of a figure of Osiris. The lateral inscription is the speech of the deceased kings to "their son," Rameses II. Abydos.

Nos. 608-732. Sepulchral vases. These objects, when complete in sets of four, with heads in shape of the four genii of the dead, viz., of Amset (human-headed), Hapi (baboon-headed), Tuautmutf (jackal-headed), and Kebhsnuf (hawk-headed), were employed to hold the viscera of the dead, which were embalmed separately, and deposited in them. Amset appears to have had the stomach and large intestines; Hapi the small intestines; Tuautmutf the lungs and heart; and Kebhsnuf the liver and gall bladder. Each vase, of the most finished kind, is inscribed with hieroglyphics, containing a formula appropriate to it. That on the vase of Amset is the speech of Isis to the dead, considered as Amset; that of Hapi, a similar speech from Nephthys; that of Tuautmutf, one from Neith; that on Kebhsnuf from Selk. Each addresses the genius as under her protection, and "beside her;" occasionally the formula varies, and the genius tells the dead that he has come to his side, or that they respectively bring him wax clothes, incense and water. The most elegant vases of this class are of arragonite; others are of calcareous stone, pottery, or wood; and many from being solid, or from the smallness of their hollowed part, must be regarded as mere models. They were often inclosed in large wooden boxes, and are said to be found more frequently in the tombs of Memphis than those of Thebes or of Abydos. Their use seems to have prevailed from the earliest time; but towards the close of the Egyptian monarchy, and under the Ptolemies, the entrails appear to have been embalmed in separate packets, which were wrapped up with the dead, and had each attached to them a small wax figure of its respective genius.—No. 608, with the usual inscription of the address of the goddess Selk to the deceased Haneb, as personified by Kebhsnuf, the 4th genius (hawk-headed).—No. 609, with cover, in shape of a human head, and part of an erased inscription, traced in waxy paint of the time of the 19th dynasty: arragonite.—No. 610, with speech of Nephthys and Hapi for Apui, a deceased royal scribe and chamberlain: arragonite.—No. 611, with a human head for Menkheper, a prince, and speech of Selk to Kebhsnuf: arragonite.—No. 612, with the head of a baboon, dedicated to Selk and Kebhsnuf for the deceased Net-a-tapii: arragonite.—No. 613, with human head and one line of inscription, dedicated to Amset.—No. 614, with human-headed cover on it, the address of Nephthys for Hapi, and the deceased for Amen-em-api, eldest son of Rameses II.: arragonite. From Mr. Salt's collection.—No. 615, with the speech of Isis, relative to Nephthys, for the same.—No. 616, with speech of Selk addressing the deceased as Kebhsnuf, for the same prince.—No. 617, with speech of Amset addressing the prince as Tuautmutf. From Mr. Salt's collection.—No. 618, human-headed, with speech of Neith and Selk for deceased Nebi: arragonite. Sr. Athanasi's collection.—No. 619, jackal-headed, speech of Nephthys and Hapi for a deceased, whose name is left blank.—No. 620, hawk-headed.—No. 621, speech of Selk to Kebhsnuf for Satimes, a deceased chamberlain.—No. 621*, human-headed, plain: arragonite.—No. 622, human-headed, plain: arragonite.—Nos. 623, 624, 625, 626, with human heads and no inscription, faces coloured yellow and red.—No. 627, body of a vase, with an inscription

NORTH-WEST STAIRCASE.

The visitor next ascends to the collections of smaller Antiquities, preserved in cases in the Western Galleries of the upper floor. Against the walls of the staircase are several Egyptian papyri, framed and glazed, some written in the hieroglyphic, others in the hieratic, and others in the demotic or enchorial character. The upper floor is entered by the

EGYPTIAN ANTEROOM.

On the North, or left-hand side, is—

The plaster cast, from the end of the North Wall of the great edifice, of Rameses II. at Karnak, representing Rameses vanquishing the Tahennu, one of the most northern enemies of Egypt. The monarch, wearing a casque upon his head, stands in his chariot, and has caught one of the chiefs of his enemies by a bow-string round the neck, while he stoops down and is about to decapitate him with his falchion. The enemy are in flight, and many lie about dying or wounded. These people wear on their heads two feathers, and a cloak made of the skins of animals, or a sash round the loins; in some sculptures their eyes are blue, and their hair red. Their arms are bows and spears. Behind the monarch is a royal standard-bearer.

On the left hand side of the door leading to the Northern Zoological Gallery is placed—

A plaster cast of a subject on the tomb of Seti, or Sethos I., king of the 18th or 19th dynasty, commonly called Belzoni's tomb, in the Biban el-Molook, at Thebes. It represents the monarch Sethos I., holding a crook and whip, introduced by the god Horus, into the presence of Osiris, seated upon his throne. Behind Osiris is the Land of the West, the abode of blessed souls, typified as a goddess, having on her head the hieroglyphic for "West," standing, and regarding the king.

On the right side of the door is placed—

A cast taken from the side wall of the entrance of the tomb of Merien-phtha, of the 19th dynasty; the monarch, draped in a transparent garment, and wearing on his head the atf, stands addressing Ra, who grants him life, endurance, and the crown of the sun: above, in the cornice, is the Hut or celestial sun as a globe with uræi serpents and wings; below are emblems of life and endurance. The hieroglyphics in this cast contain the names and titles of the deity and king, and the speeches of the former. From the Biban el-Molook, or valley of the tombs of the kings, at Thebes.

On the southern wall of the vestibule, in a frame-work, are the following—

1. Cast of the Apex of the fallen obelisk at Karnak; the original, which was the companion of the great obelisk standing in the advance of the granite sanctuary, was erected by the queen-regent, Ha-asu, the sister of Thothmes II. and III., monarchs of the 18th dynasty, in whose minority she reigned, in honour of her father, Thothmes I., to the divinity Amen-ra. She is represented on the triangular part of the Apex, crowned by Amen-ra, who addresses her. The large hieroglyphics below are part of her names and titles. Coloured in imitation of red granite.

2. Cast taken from one of the side lines of the great inscription; Thothmes III., a monarch of the 18th dynasty, offering oil to the god Amen-ra.

3. Cast from one of the side lines of the same obelisk, representing the queen regent Hat-asu, and Amen-ra.

4. Cast from another part of the same obelisk, representing the same regent offering to Amen-ra.

5. Cast from a monument at El-Assasif; on it the monarch Thothmes II. standing, wearing the teshet, holding a sceptre in his left hand, and in his right a mace, and emblem of life. Behind is a symbolical figure, having on its head the standard of the king: above the head of the king soars a vulture, emblem of victory. The hieroglyphics contain the names and titles of the king.

6, 7. Two casts taken from a part of the tomb of Thothmes III. in the valley of the Biban el-Molook. They represent an inferior divinity called Pet-mut-f.

8. Cast taken from the wall of the entrance passage of the tomb of Sethos II. in the Biban el-Molook. The monarch, wearing the tall plumes, uræi serpents, solar disk, and goats' horns, and draped in a transparent garment with a royal apron, stands offering two vases of wine to some divinity, probably Ra, but the hand and the tam or kukufa sceptre of the god are only visible. The hieroglyphics are names and titles of the king, and part of an address to the god.

The above were casts, made in Egypt by Mr. Bonomi, under the direction of Mr. Hay, and coloured by the former gentleman after originals.

FIRST EGYPTIAN ROOM.

UP STAIRS.

The wooden figures in Cases 1—4 are generally found in tombs; the bronze are offerings, or objects of private worship; the porcelain and small figures of stone are all perforated, to attach to the network or the necklaces of mummies.

CASES 22, 23. VASES.

The relation of the various forms of vases to their uses is not easy to determine; some appear in the hieroglyphical texts to have been appropriated to particular substances,—as wax, wine, liquids, &c. The smaller and more elegant are supposed to have held unguents, perfumes, &c., for the toilet; the larger and coarser, domestic objects, as wine, eatables, &c.; others again contain varnish, bitumen, &c. The following appear most worthy of remark:—

Div. 1. Two vases, one having in front the prenomen Merenra, standard, and titles of a king prior to the 12th dynasty; the other, those of Re-Nofrekah, or Nepercheres, of an old dynasty, assumed by Sabaco, first king of the 25th dynasty. Arragonite. 8 to  $5\frac{3}{4}$  in. h.

Tablets; of a deceased named Tes led by Thoht before Socharis, Isis, and four genii of the dead; of a deceased Theban; of Her-ru, adoring the four genii of the dead; of Naspert, adoring Osiris, Anubis, Mau, Au, and Ra; of Amenartas adoring Osiris, Socharis, and the four genii of the dead; of Iru-ru-u, adoring Ra, Anubis, and four genii of the dead; of Sensao, a Theban officer; of Pramentu, adoring Osiris, Isis, Nephthys, and four genii. Wood.

Case 100. Sepulchral scarabæi, generally engraved with a prayer or formula, being the 30th chapter of the ritual, relative to the heart or soul, being the emblem of the mystical transformations which the deceased had to make in the Hades before he had a heart given him. The inscribed ones are found between the folds of the interior bandages and on the chest of the mummies. The inscription is on the base; but the names and titles of the deceased, figures of deities, &c., are found on the elytra and corslet. From the difference observable in the elytra, different species of the insect seem to be represented. Among these are a small green jasper scarabæus, No. 7876, set in a semi-oval plinth of gold, said to have been found in the coffin of king Enantef, but bearing the name of the king Savakemsaf; several bear the names of different functionaries; one has a heart-shaped vein, in which is engraved a bennou, or the bird nycitorax, and at its sides "the heart of the sun."

Case 101. Uninscribed scarabæi, amulets, in form of a vase, human heart, two fingers of the hand, &c. Basalt, serpentine, marble, hematite, steatite, leather, &c.

Case 102. Ornaments taken from the bodies of mummies; one has stamped upon it the figure of Osiris Pethempantes. Plates from flank incisions of mummies, representing mystical eye, plate with name of Seneferka and Kaenra two early kings, vultures, uræi, hearts, emblems of stability, and other stamped ornaments from mummies. Gold, silver, tin, iron.

Over Case I. Chnough or Kneph, the ram-headed type of Amoun, seated, wearing the shenti: the head attire of diminished proportion, and the statue of a very late era. Bronze. 2 ft. h.

Over Cases 2, 3. Outer coffin of Penamoun, a priest. (See Case 6. for the inner coffin, and 65. for the body.) Below is a dedication to Osiris, and the goddess Athor. Wood. 6 ft. 8½ in. h., 2 ft. ½ in. l.

Over Case 3. Statue of a queen or of a goddess, of the period of the 22nd dynasty. Bronze.

Over Case 4. Osiris Pethempamentes standing. Bronze.

Over Case 6. Female, probably a deity, standing, her right hand clasped, her left flat and open. Bronze. 2 ft. 6½ in. h.

Over Cases 8 to 25. Casts of the sculptures from the entrance of the small temple of Beit-oually, near Kalabshe. This side is in two compartments, and in the first is Rameses II. in his war-chariot, attended by his two sons, attacking the black and copper-coloured races of Kush or Æthiopia. In the second portion is Rameses II. seated on his throne, investing with a gold chain Amenemape or Amounemopt, prince of Kush or Æthiopia, introduced to him by his eldest son Amenherpefbour or Amounhippefbour. Behind the prince are tusks of elephants, skins of panthers, gold chains, gold dust and gems, rings of gold, bucklers, chairs, feathers, and eggs of the ostrich; these are followed by Æthiopians bringing various live animals, the most remarkable of which are oxen with their horns in the shape of human hands, and a head with a tuft of hair. In the lower division the same prince is introduced by two high officers of state to the monarch, having across his shoulders a tray of valuable plants, skins of panthers, and chains of gold. He is followed by Æthiopians bringing various animals, among which are a giraffe, green monkeys, gazelles, and lions, females carrying their children, and prisoners manacled.

Over Cases 30, 32. Four sepulchral vases, representing the four genii of the Amenti for Senmut, a military officer during the reign of Psammetichus.

Over Case 31. Mummy case, scooped out of a single tree; the head in a feathered cleft, the face black, the body covered by the wings and tail of a bird; on the chest a vulture; on the soles of the feet, Isis and Nephthys kneeling on altars; down the body is a dedication to Osiris. No name remains, but the case is apparently of the style and period of the coffin of king Nentef, of the 11th dynasty, in Case 70. Wood. 6 ft. 1 in. h.

Over Cases 32, 33. Two bronze female figures, representing queens or goddesses, in the style of the 19th and 22nd dynasties.

Over Case 34. Coffin of Mauteneimas, or Mouteneimōs, female musician of the goddess Maut; on it Netpe, a door with bolts, a ram and vase, and the usual scenes. Wood. 5 ft. 11 in. h.

Over Cases 40 to 57. Casts of sculptures from the entrance of the small temple at Beit-oually near Kalabshe. In the first division on the left hand, the monarch Rameses II. seated on his throne receives the principal officers of his court, who bring before his feet captives of the chief nations of Asia. In the second division, the king, attended by his dog Anathemnisht, is about to decapitate an Asiatic. In the third, crowned in the teshr or red cap, having ascended his chariot, he attacks an Asiatic nation, who are represented in full rout.

The next compartment shows the monarch attacking a fortress of Central Asia; the nation is personified by a larger figure, while the scenes going on at the fortress are a female throwing a child over the battlements, and a man supplicating with a lighted censer, while the son or brother of the king attacks the door of the fortress with a hatchet; in the last compartment he is represented bringing before the monarch a file of Asiatic prisoners. The nations mentioned in the hieroglyphics are the Taken and the Sharu.

These casts, made in Nubia under the direction of Mr. Hay and by Mr. Bonomi, have been coloured in imitation of originals by the latter gentleman.

Over Case 59. Glass case containing the bones of a mummied ibis, with insects and other contents of the stomach, prepared by Sir Anthony Carlisle, in 1805. Presented by Sir Joseph Banks.

Over Case 61. Osiris Onnophris; the eyes have been inlaid with some other material. Bronze. 2 ft. 10 in. h.

Over Case 64. Osiris Pethempamentes, standing. Bronze.

On the marble tables in the centre of this Room are models, in plaster, of the great standing obelisk at Karnak, and of that at Heliopolis. Presented by Joseph Bonomi, Esq., 1840.

SECOND EGYPTIAN ROOM.

EGYPTIAN ANTIQUITIES.

Cases 1—3. Shelf 1. Sepulchral tablets of wood; of a person not named; adorations to Ra, Osiris, and other deities; of Hesi-chebi, an assistant priestess of Amen-ra, adorations to Ra; of Iri-a-haru, a priest, adorations to Ra and to Isis; of Petas, a priest, adoring Ra and Atum; and another, much effaced, deceased adoring Ra and other deities. Wood.

Shelf 2. Small models of sarcophagi and mummies, found deposited with the dead, and supposed at one time to be embalmers models. In terracotta and wood.

Boxes used for holding the small figures of the dead, similar to those placed in cases 6, 7. No. 8522—23. Contains two figures. No. 8524 Karennu, a deceased, adoring Amset, and Kebhsnauf. Presented by Joseph Gwilt, Esq. No. 8525. Made for Bakenmut, a priest of Mut, who, attended by his sister, Mut-em-ua, a priestess of Amoun-Ra, is adoring Isis. No. 8526. For Anchhar, is inscribed with a chapter out of the ritual. No. 8527. Made for Mutenpennu, priestess of the Theban Triad, Amoun-Ra, Mut, and Chuns, represents her adoring Osiris and Isis.

Shelf 3. Boxes for holding sepulchral figures. No. 8529. Of a deceased, adorations to Ra and Isis. No. 8530. Of Chons-af-anch, a Theban scribe. No. 8531 32. Of Hesicheb, with a chapter of the ritual. No. 8533. Of Petamen, a priest of Amoun, having on each side a representation of Anubis. No. 8534. Of the Roman period, decorated with gryphons, &c.

Shelf 4. No. 8535. Box, with representations of Osiris, lord of Tettu, and part of the litanies of the god Thoth. No. 8536. Box decorated with stripes. No. 8537-38. Boxes of Sensao, surnamed Paa-ani, and of Thothertas, decorated with prayers and inscriptions in yellow. No. 8539. Box of Naasnarut, a daughter of Usarkan, on which Neith, Selk, Sati, and Anubis are represented purifying the genii of the dead.

Cases 4, 5. Shelf 1. No. 8540. Box of Amenasanch, a priestess of Amoun-Ra. No. 8541. Box, plain; front of a box or sarcophagus, Isis and Horus erecting the standard of Osiris. No. 8543. Similar box, inscribed with the name of Hesi, a priestess of Amoun-Ra, and who adores the genii of the dead.

Shelf 2. No. 8544. Plain box, with dedication to Ra. No. 8550 has name of Hui.

Shelves 3, 4. Sepulchral figures in wood, representing the dead equipped for that portion of his ordeal in the future state where he ploughs and sows the Auru, surrounded by the great waters and canals of the mystical Nile; holding a hoe in each hand, and a cord, attached to a basket of seed with which he sows the fields, slung on his left shoulder; they all contain a similar formula, with the name and titles of the dead, and a prayer, the 6th chapter of the ritual, relative to their destiny in the future state. From the great numbers deposited with the dead, it has been conjectured that they were offered by the relatives of the deceased. Among them are several of Seti I., and of priests, scribes, military and civil functionaries.

Cases 6, 7. Sepulchral figures in arragonite and calcareous stones. Nos. 8689-92, are portions of those of Amenophis III. (Memnon), of the 18th dynasty; Nos. 8693-94, of monarchs of the 18th dynasty; No. 8695, of Rameses III.; and Nos. 8696-8700, of Rameses V., all from the tombs of the kings in the Biban-el-Molook. No. 8904, of Panehsi, a scribe of the treasury; is inscribed with a memorandum at the side, of the number of figures made in one month.

Cases 10, 11. Shelf 1. Sepulchral figures in terracotta.

Shelf 2. Model of a funeral boat, rowers, and portions of models of boats. Wood. Model of a boat; in the centre a canopy, priests kneeling, dogs, &c.; at the side, a lion devouring a goat. Found at Thebes. Calcareous stone. Model of boat: Wood. Another model: Calcareous stone.

Shelf 3. Models of sepulchral boats conveying the dead to the sepulchres; in one, priest reading the ritual, and a lighted altar. From tombs at Thebes. Wood.

Shelf 4. Three sepulchral vases, all with human heads, from a set; deceased Aahmes. From a tomb in Upper Egypt. Terracotta. Presented by Mr. Andrews.

Small sepulchral vase, in shape of the genius Tuautmutf, jackal-headed. Green porcelain.

Two models of vases, one in shape of a bottle, the other of a goblet, with an inscription for a deceased Pai, a judicial scribe; coloured to imitate glass.

Two model vases, deposited in the place of those of more valuable materials, bearing the name of Amenhept, a judge, and Hurnane, a female. Wood.

Set of sepulchral vases for Nekhtmutf, a functionary; white, with black outline. Terracotta.

Basket and bag, containing matters used in absorbing the moisture of the viscera. Presented by Sir J. Gardner Wilkinson, 1839.

Cases 12, 13. Models of a set of four vases, for holding the internal parts when embalmed separately, in the shape of Amset, human-headed; Hapi, baboon-headed; Tuautmutf, jackal-headed; and Kebhsnuf, hawk-headed. Painted wood.

Similar set, which have been deposited with the mummy of a person named Hapi . . . . Wood.

Three vases, coarsely painted, with figures of genii, probably of the Roman period, and vaulted covers, on which are seated jackals, and square orifices. Terracotta. From the Earl of Belmore's collection.

Two vases of the genius Hapi.

Cases 14--19. Inner coffin of Pesbes, door-opener of the temple of the Sun; on it is Netpe; the judgment of the dead before Osiris; symbolical eyes, and other ornaments. Wood. From the Earl of Belmore's collection.

Inner coffin of Ameniriu, auditor of the palace of the queen Amenartas, daughter of the king Kashta, 26th dynasty; on it are the rams representing the soul—the judgment and embalmment scenes of the dead. From the collection of Sr. Anastasi.

Coffin and mummy of Chons-thoth, a singing boy of the Græco-Egyptian period: the face gilded, and body covered with various divinities. From the collection of Sr. Anastasi.

Inner coffin of Anchsennefer, or Onkhsennofre, a female; the face coloured pink, the body covered with hieroglyphics and scenes, on a yellow ground. Wood. From the collection of Sr. Anastasi.

An inner coffin of a mummy, much mutilated, but which has been of the very finest style, elaborately decorated with paintings, and varnished. From the collection of Sr. Anastasi.

In this case are several figures of Phtah-Socharis-Osiris, standing on pedestals, some with small cavities in the shape of boxes and covers, in which were deposited small detached portions of the body. Chiefly from Mr. Salt's collection.

Figures of Osiris Pethempamentes, used as cases for papyri. These, which are always portions or copies of the great funeral ritual of the Egyptians, in hieroglyphic or hieratic characters, were either contained in the bodies of these figures, or else in small cells, with a lid fitting to the body. Wood, covered with bitumen. 2 ft. 2 in. to 1 ft. 8½ in. h.

Cases 20, 21. Shelf 1. Sepulchral vases, of a similar use to those in Cases 12, 13. Pottery.

Heads from sepulchral vases of the genius Amset, human-headed. Some coloured. Stone, pottery, and wood.

Shelf 2. Cynocephalus heads of the genius Hapi, from sepulchral vases. Stone arragonite.

Jackal heads of the genius Tuautmutf.

Hawk heads of the genius Kebhsnauf, from sepulchral vases. ¶

Shelf 3. Heads from sepulchral vases. Arragonite, calcareous stone, wood and pottery.

Cases 22, 23. Shelves 1, 2. Sepulchral cones of brick, stamped with inscriptions, in bas-relief. They contain the names and titles of the functionaries in whose times they were deposited. These have been supposed to be stamps or seals—but appear to be rather votive objects deposited with the dead.

Shelf 3. Inscriptions in enchorial and the Greek language, on fragments of pottery, chiefly receipts, under the early emperors. From Elephantina.

Fragments of pottery, with inscriptions in hieratic and Coptic.

Shelf 4. Inscriptions in Greek and Coptic on fragments of calcareous stone and pottery. They are principally religious, and of the Christian period.

Case 27. Large Egyptian vases, in terracotta; one remarkable for being covered with a demotic inscription.

The objects in Table Cases on this side of the room will shortly be removed; it has not therefore been considered necessary to describe them.

Within this Room are, for the present, arranged, in the Wall Cases Nos. 33-64, and Table Cases Nos. 89-112, a large collection of smaller objects in metal, glass, ivory, and terracotta, together with gems and seals engraved on different kinds of agate, which have been, for the most part, procured from Assyria and Babylonia during the recent excavations of Mr. Layard, Colonel Rawlinson, C. B., and Mr. Loftus. As it is not intended that these objects should remain permanently in this room, it has been deemed sufficient to place them together in groups according to the nature of their subjects.

In Cases 33-37 are placed a set of 15 bronze weights in the form of lions, found in a chamber of the North-West Edifice at Nimroud; and a number of bowls and earthenware vessels, chiefly from tombs over the centre of that mound, and from the south-west edifice. The lions bear the names of Shalmanubar, Tiglath-Pileser, and Sennacherib, kings of Assyria, and have in many instances the value of their weights inscribed upon them in cuneiform and Phœnician letters.

Case 38 contains one large bronze salver, and a number of small bronze objects, probably portions of horse furniture, which were discovered in a chamber at the north-west corner of the north-west edifice, Nimroud.

Nos. 39-45 contain a miscellaneous collection of objects, the result of the excavations at Nimroud. Among them are, in 39-41, the ivory objects found during Mr. Layard's first visit to Assyria. In 42-43, some curious objects in iron, as a double-handed saw and pick, resembling those on the sculptures from Sennacherib's palace at Kouyunjik; two skulls, found in an inner chamber at Nimroud, from which there was no outlet; and the bronze socket and hinges of a gateway at Nimroud. In 44-45 is a collection of bronze bells, feet of tripods, footstools, &c., found with the other bronze fragments noticed in 38.

In 47-51 are two large coffins in earthenware, covered with a light greenish blue glaze, found by Mr. Loftus on his first visit to Warka (Erech), in Southern Babylonia; beneath these, on the ground-floor, the remains of four shields, and a portion of the tire of a wheel, procured by Mr. Layard from the bronze-chamber at Nimroud. The handles of the shields are in iron, and are riveted to the front by bronze nails, the bases of which thus serve as an ornament.

In 52-53 are small lamps in terracotta, covered with a pale glaze, glass vessels, and other objects procured by Mr. Layard during a recent visit to Babylon; a small coffin (probably that of a child) from Mr. Loftus's excavations at Warka; and some handles (variously ornamented), with other fragments of bronze dishes from Nimroud.

In 54-57, on the second and third shelves, is a large collection of cylinders, gems, and seals, procured at various periods from Assyria and Babylonia. They are grouped under the respective heads of Assyrian, Babylonian, Persian, Phœnician, and Sassanian. Among these, some of the finest specimens were procured by the late J. R. Steuart, Esq. On the ground-floor are fragments of the bronze ornaments which were once attached to the royal throne at Nimroud. The throne itself was of wood.

In 58-59, on the second shelf, are some miscellaneous objects found by Mr. Layard during his excavations at Kouyunjik. There can be little doubt that these are all referable to the Greek period of the Seleucidæ, if they are not even later. On the third shelf (58) are three remarkable hexagonal cylinders, covered with cuneiform inscriptions. (1) was found by Mr. Layard at Kalah Sherghat, and contains portions of the annals of Tiglath-Pileser. Another, much more perfect, has been lately procured at the same place by Colonel Rawlinson, C.B., but has not yet reached England. (2) was found many years ago in the Nebbi Yunas at Kouyunjik, and contains the annals of two years of the reign of Sennacherib. It is known by the name of the Bellino cylinder, from Mr. Bellino (Mr. Rich's private secretary), who procured it. (3) was obtained by Mr. Layard from a Kurd. It contains the annals of four years of the reign of Esarhadon. The three cylinders are all in terracotta.

Nos. 60-61 contain, on the second shelf, fragments of painted bricks from Nimroud; and on the third shelf and ground-floor, fragments of earthenware, apparently the covers of vessels, with the guilloche and the honey-suckle alternating with the cone and tulip, painted on them in black on a pale yellow ground. These were found at Baashiekhah.

In 62-64 are the smaller objects procured during Mr. Loftus's first visit to Warka. They consist of vessels in terracotta and earthenware of various shapes—some covered with a bright green glaze resembling that on the coffins; a collection of clay tablets, covered with cuneiform inscriptions, and of glass-vessels, incrustated with a beautiful iridescence; and some objects in terracotta of uncertain character, presumed to have been used in the ancient Assyrian potteries. Besides these are, in the top shelf and on the ground-floor, some large amphoræ of earthenware from the same excavations.

In the Table Cases 89-91 are the results of Mr. Layard's most recent excavations. In 89 are nodules of clay found at Kouyunjik, and impressed with the stamp of Assyrian seals—one of these may be remarked as bearing the seals of Sennacherib, king of Assyria, and of Sabaco, king of Egypt, probably in reference to some treaty. In 90 are a collection of earthenware bowls, bearing inscriptions written with ink, in the ancient Chaldee and Palmyrene character. Of these, five were procured by Mr. Layard in the mound of Amram, at Babylon; the rest by Colonel Rawlinson, C. B., and Mr. J. R. Stuart. The inscriptions have been deciphered by Thomas Ellis, Esq., of the Department of Manuscripts; and appear to be charms and exorcisms against the devil. The earliest may be as old as the 2nd or 3rd century, B. C., the latest as late as the 5th century, A. D.

In 91, and along the upper shelves of 95-97, are a few small terracotta vessels procured by Mr. Layard from Arbán on the Khabúr, the country to which a portion of the Ten Tribes was carried by Shalmaneser.

No. 92 contains a considerable number of small clay seal impressions, similar to those in 89-90; and 93-94, some very beautiful fragments of glass from Kouyunjik. Among these is one very perfect glass vessel, covered with a bright green iridescence.

In 95-97, along two upper shelves, are several specimens of highly-ornamented bronze bowls and dishes, in some cases inlaid with silver studs. The same series is continued along the upper shelves of 101-103. The ornaments on these bowls, which have been cleaned so far as their decayed state admitted, are generally men and animals, interspersed with fancy patterns of the lotus and other plants. They have been embossed, in most instances, by a blunt instrument, and the graving tool has been seldom, if at all used.

In 98-100 are less perfect specimens of the same bowls, which were too much decayed to admit of their being cleaned.

In 107-109, on the second shelf, are a large number of miscellaneous objects, the majority procured forty years ago by Mr. Rich, and consisting chiefly of small figures of animals in bronze, carnelian, and agate. The exact localities whence they came is not known; but they may be attributed, for the most part, to Assyria and Babylonia.

Below is a collection of terracotta tablets; some from Babylon, but the majority from Warka. They are placed here as specimens of many hundreds which have been found all over Assyria, and as bearing the names of well-known monarchs, such as Nabopolassar, Cyrus, Darius, Artaxerxes, &c. &c.

Nos. 110-112 contain a miscellaneous collection of objects, chiefly from Babylonia, procured by Mr. Rich and Sir Robert Ker Porter. Among them are, a brick from Babylon (110), and some of the reeds (111) which were placed between the layers of bricks in the ruins of that ancient capital. These were presented by Sir R. K. Porter.

Art of the Egyptians.—From the specimens of the architecture and sculpture of the Egyptians which remain to us, we see that their art was of a peculiar character, remarkable for its colossal proportions and magnificence. The earliest known architecture, the pyramids of the 4th dynasty, exhibits simple forms of vast magnitude, and of the minutest finish. In the more complicated structure of the tombs of Benyhassan, under the 12th dynasty, the elements of Doric architecture may be traced in the columns and triglyphs. Under the 18th dynasty, the columns have capitals, representing lotus buds and flowers of the lotus, papyrus, and other plants. The temples are rectangular, with heavy advanced gateways tapering to their summits, and doors of the same kind. The courts are hypæthral, the walls externally and internally covered with sculptures, and the approach generally by a dromos, or avenue of sphinxes or divinities. There is seldom any statue in the adytum, a living animal being in place of this. Other temples were hewn into the solid rock, and the tombs consist of galleries cut in the same material, having their sides covered with paintings and sculptures, referring to religious, historical, or domestic events. (See Specimens, Nos. 169-181.) In sculpture, the artists worked in full relief, bas-relief very slightly raised, the projecting parts being kept as much as possible in one plane, and in a peculiar relief cut below the original surface, called cavo-rilievo, or intaglio rilievato; in the full relief of stone, composition, and porcelain, the standing figures have a mass of stone between the legs reserved to support the figure, and the arms were not detached, but pendent at the sides, or raised to the breast; a plinth, resembling the side of an obelisk, was often placed behind, destined to contain the inscriptions. In metal and wood the arms and legs were detached. The hair is disposed in very regular masses of vertical curls, falling from the crown of the head; the eyes, eyelashes, and brows were represented prolonged to the ears, with shelly or acute lids; the hole of the ear was on a level with the pupil, the lips strongly marked, but expanding like the Nubian, the expression smiling, as in the early art of Ægina; the beard not spread along the cheek, but platted into a narrow mass of square or recurved form, with ribands passing to the cap. In bas-relief and cavo-rilievo, profile was generally used as more distinct and simple, the eyes were elongated, with a full pupil, a peculiarity also of the earliest Greek art. The form is on the whole slender, the features calm and smiling, not betraying emotion; the inner markings of the figure were not given, and indications of muscular movement never fully developed. Great regularity, squareness, and repose, well adapted for architecture, characterize their art, which occasionally exhibits the delicacy of a cameo. Portraiture was early known, and a conventional character of feature assigned to different divinities, who, however, are often made to resemble the reigning monarch. Three canons of Egyptian proportions are known: 1. The canon of the time of the Pyramids; the height was reckoned at six feet from the sole of the foot to the crown of the head, and subdivisions obtain by one-half or one-third of a foot. 2. The canon from the 12th to the 22nd dynasty is only an extension of the first. The whole figure was contained in a number of squares of half a foot; and the whole height divided into eighteen parts. In these two canons the height above the sixth foot is not reckoned. Tablet, No. 579, has a scale of some human figures, under the 12th dynasty; and a board, probably the working drawing of a sculptor or painter, may be seen in Case No. 38, representing a figure of Thothmes III. 3. The canon of the age of the Psammetici, which is mentioned by Diodorus, reckoning the entire height at twenty-one parts and a quarter from the sole to the crown of the head, taken to the upper part. The proportions are different, but without any introduction of the Greek canon. (See the bust, No. 2279; and stone figure of a lion, No. 1462.) The canon and the leading lines were originally traced in red, subsequently corrected by the principal artist in black, and the design then executed. (See tablet, Eg. Sal., No. 579.) All objects were painted, both of architecture and sculpture, and gilding was occasionally employed. In their paintings the simplest colours, such as white, black, an ochrous red, blue, and yellow, were only used, green and purple being the introduction of a later age. The entire figure was surrounded with a black outline. The Egyptians worked in dark and red granites, porphyry, basalts, breccias, serpentines, arragonite, limestones, sandstones, jaspers, feldspar, carnelian, glass, gold, silver, bronze, lead, iron, the hard woods, fir or cedar, sycamore, ebony, acacia, porcelain, and ivory and terracotta. All objects are found decorated with hieroglyphics, from the most gigantic obelisk to the minute articles of private life. In connection with the history of the nation, three great periods of art may be distinctly traced in Egypt.

I. The archaic style, reaching from the date of the earliest known monuments of the country till the close of the 12th dynasty; in which the hair is in rude vertical curls and heavy masses, the face is broad and coarse, the nose long, and forehead receding, hands and feet large and disproportionate; the execution rude, even when details are introduced; the bas-reliefs depressed. This style continued improving till the 12th dynasty, at which period many of the monuments are finished with a purity and delicacy rivalling cameos. (See the false doors from the tomb of Teta, Nos. 157, 157*; the small statue from the Pyramids, No. 70; and Tablets, No. 197 and following.)

II. The art from the restoration of the 18th dynasty till the 20th:—the hair is disposed in more elegant and vertical curls, a greater harmony is observable in the proportion of the limbs, the details are finished with greater breadth and care; bas-relief becomes rare, and disappears after Rameses II.; under the 19th dynasty, however, the arts rapidly declined. (See the colossal head of Thothmes III., No. 15, Egyptian Saloon; the statues of Amenophis III., Nos. 14, 17; the statues and busts of Horus, No. 6; Rameses II., Nos. 14—96; Site-Menephtah II., No. 26; and the casts in the Vestibule; and, in the Egyptian Room, the alabaster sepuchral figures.)

III. The epoch of the revival of art, commencing with the 20th dynasty, distinguished for an imitation of the archaic art. The portraiture is more distinct, the limbs freer and rounded. (See statues, Nos. 83, 134, under Apries; sarcophagus, No. 86; and figure, No. 34, of a person living under Amasis;) the muscles more developed—the details executed with great care and accuracy, (see obelisk of Amyrteus, 523—24; his sarcophagus, No. 10; and the intercolumnar slabs of Psammetichus II. and Nectanebo, Nos. 20, 22,) and the general effect rather dependent on the minute finish than general scope and breadth. Under the Ptolemies and Romans a feeble attempt is made to engraft Greek art on Egyptian. (See tablets, No. 147; sides of temples, Cases 1—11.) But a rapid decay took place both in the knowledge, finish, and all the details. (See tablets, Nos. 189, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, of Tiberius; and the coffins of Soter and his family, under Hadrian, Egyptian Room, No. 6706—6714.)

Hieroglyphics.—In connection with the arts of the Egyptians are the Hieroglyphics, which are natural objects used to express language. They are divided into phonetics.

I. Alphabetic, or those representing simple vowel or consonant sounds; thus an arm is used for A; an owl for M.

II. Syllabic, or those used to represent syllables, either with alphabets after and before them or not; thus, a chisel is used for ab, a mat for men, a loop for ua or va.

III. Ideophonetics, or those representing one syllable in the same way as No. II., but only when the syllable conveys one idea; thus a lute (nebel), for nefer, good, &c.

IV. Symbolics, or objects used to represent one idea, as the ibis to express an ibis; an ape to express anger. They often have their pronunciation written before them in Alphabetic (No. I.) or Syllabic (No. II.) hieroglyphics.

V. Determinative, or those which determine the sense of words written in Alphabetic and Syllabic hieroglyphics, and are used in more senses than one; thus, a pair of legs after all sorts of motion with legs, after the Alphabetic or Syllabic, as ha, aka, un, shows that they mean to stand, go, appear, &c.

Hieratic is the written hand, of which hieroglyphics are the finished characters employed on monuments.

Demotic, or Enchorial, is a writing more abridged than Hieratic, introduced about the age of Cambyses, for the purposes of law documents, letters, and accounts.

FIRST VASE ROOM.

This room and part of the next contain the collection of Vases discovered in Italy and Greece. known by the names of Etruscan, Græco-Italian, or Painted Vases. They are of various epochs and styles.

I. VASES FOUND IN ITALY.

Cases 1—5. Shelves 1—3. Vases of the style frequently called Nolan-Egyptian or Phœnician, distinguished by brown figures painted on a pale ground with maroon ornaments and incised lines. They are chiefly decorated with animals, and are found in the earliest sepulchres of Etruria. The principal vases are, an Amphora, in Case 1, representing friezes of animals and centaurs, found at Cervetri. In Case 3, No. 421, an oinochoe or wine-jug, ornamented with a combat of heroes and horsemen. In Case 5, No. 420, a lebes or cup on a tall stand, from Vulci.

Shelf 4. Very early Italian ware, of a brownish black colour. In Case 3 is a vessel, No. 1, in the form of the tugurium or rustic cottage of the early inhabitants of Italy. It contains burnt bones, and was found at Monte Albano, near Rome. Presented by W. R. Hamilton, Esq.

Cases 6—11. Shelves 1 and 4. Etruscan ware, black throughout; in some cases, as in Nos. 181—185, ornamented with friezes of figures, which have been impressed from a cylinder.

Shelf 2. Archaic vases of early Greek style, with brownish black figures relieved by incised lines. On No. 429 are represented games; one of the wrestlers bears the name of Hipposthenes.

Shelf 3. Hydriæ, or water-vases, in a more advanced style of painting, exhibiting black figures on a bright red ground, and subjects chiefly relating to heroic personages, such as Jason, Achilles, and Hercules.

Cases 12—19. Shelves 1 and 4. Black Etruscan ware.

Shelves 2 and 3. Hydriæ. The upper ones are ornamented with subjects principally relating to the Hydrophoria, or water-drawing. The lower ones exhibit scenes from the life and labours of Hercules.

Cases 20—25. Shelves 1—3. Small vases, similar in style to the last, consisting of shallow and deep cups; lekythi, or oil-bottles; masti, in the shape of human breasts, and vessels in the form of heads, legs, &c. In Case 24 is a remarkable vase, No. 641*, bearing the name of the maker, Amasis.

Cases 26—29 contain smaller vases, with black figures on a red ground. Among them may be noticed three with a lighter ground than usual.

Case 30. Italian imitations of the Græco-Etruscan vases, chiefly from Vulci.

Cases 31—41. We find in these Cases a more advanced style of art, with red figures on a black and highly-glazed ground. The paintings are carefully executed, and may be considered to belong to the finest period of Greek art. They have been chiefly found in the cemeteries of Nola.

Cases 42—49. These vases contain the larger vases of the kind just mentioned. On Shelf 1 are lekythi, or oil-jars.

Shelf 2. Crateres and Amphoræ: among these should be noticed No. 727, Hercules Musagetes. No. 740 and 740*, the entertainment of Nicomachus.

Shelf 3. Hydriæ or water-jars. Of these the most remarkable are—No. 717, Medea boiling the ram before Jason; No. 741, the birth of Minerva; 749, the birth of Erichthonius; 755, a vase painted by Polygnotus.

II. VASES FOUND IN GREECE.

In Cases 50—60 are placed a collection of vases presenting similar varieties to those which have been already described, but all found in Greece or the Greek islands. They are arranged in an inverse order, so as to bring the earliest of them in juxtaposition to those of similar workmanship found in Italy, and the more finished specimens next to those which have just been described.

Cases 50, 51. Shelf 1. Plain black vases.

Shelf 2. Vases with red figures on a black ground; among which should be noticed a pyxis, No. 2923, decorated with cupids and other figures in white and blue; and a small ænoché, No. 2933, on which is a crawling boy. Both these are from Mr. Burgon's collection.

Cases 52, 53. Shelf 1. Vases, with black ornaments on a white ground.

Shelves 2 and 3. Polychrome vases of the finest period of Greek art; with figures traced in various colours on a white ground. Some of them have the draperies in blue, crimson, purple, and green. The subjects of these vases are principally taken from the Oresteid of the Athenian tragic writers, representing Orestes and Electra at the tomb of Agamemnon.

Cases 54, 55. Shelves 1, 2. Vases, principally lekythi, with black subjects on red ground.

Shelf 3. Vases of a more ancient style from Athens and Corinth, ornamented with birds, &c., in a reddish-brown colour on a fawn-coloured ground.

Cases 56—60. Vases of the most ancient style, ornamented with meanders and geometrical patterns. In Case 60 are eight vases from Corfu (Corcyra), found in an excavation at Castrades, near the ancient sepulchres of Menecrates and Tlasias, of the fifth century B.C. These are probably some of the celebrated amphoræ which contained the wines exported by Corcyra from the Adriatic. Presented by the Ionian University, 1846.

Vases with representations on both sides, chiefly with black figures, are exhibited in glass cases in the centre of the room.

Over Cases 36—55 are painted fac-similes, by S. Campanari, of the walls of an Etruscan tomb at Tarquinii, in two divisions; in the lower are represented dances and entertainments, and in the upper athletic games, as leaping, running, chariot races, hurling the discus, boxing, and the armed course; above is a large vase and two persons at an entertainment. The entrance of this tomb, decorated with two panthers, is above the Cases 18—29, 32—33.

Over Cases 6—26, a painting in fac-simile of another tomb at Tarquinii, representing an entertainment. In the centre, one of the pages holds in his hand a percolated vase or wine-strainer. At the sides are male and female dancers surrounded by trees and animals; above is the chequered ceiling of the same tomb.

Over Cases 1—4, 57—59, are paintings from another tomb at Corneto; that above 1—4, represents a female paying the last offices to an old man stretched out on a bier; that above 57—60, two men drinking and dancing. Close to these are the ends of the same tomb, with men drinking and playing on the double flute.

SECOND VASE ROOM.

The Painted Vases in this Room are of a later style of Greek art (about 350—200 B.C.), chiefly found in Apulia and Lucania and the province of the Basilicata, to the south of Rome. They are ornamented with red figures on a black ground. The latter is dull and often lead-coloured. The ornaments are florid, and the forms of the vases less simple than those hitherto described. The subjects represented mostly relate to the Dionysiac festivals, Eros, Venus, and funeral offerings.

The other side of the room is occupied with the collection of Greek and Roman terracottas, not yet sufficiently arranged for exhibition.

A detailed catalogue of the collection of vases is in progress of publication; the first volume, comprising Nos. 1—1241, may be had in the Secretary's office.

BRONZE ROOM.

In this room are placed figures of divinities, furniture, vases, armour, personal ornaments, &c., chiefly made of bronze.

On the central shelf, in Cases 1—30, are arranged the statues of Greek and Roman divinities and other personages, classified according to the subjects they represent.

Cases 1—11. The twelve Olympian Gods. 12—19. The minor Gods. 20—22. Early Italian and Foreign Divinities. 23—26. Heroes. 27—30. Miscellaneous personages.

On the upper and lower shelves are placed vases and furniture of various kinds.

BRITISH AND MEDIÆVAL ROOM.

This Room contains the Antiquities found in Great Britain and Ireland, and extending from the earliest period to the Norman Conquest, and Mediæval objects, both English and Foreign.

BRITISH COLLECTION.

The British Antiquities are arranged according to their Periods, under which they are grouped in the order of the materials of which they are composed.

In Cases 1—33 are arranged the various remains belonging to the ages previous to the Roman Invasion, embracing the Stone and the Bronze Periods of the Northern Antiquaries. These periods are considered to be characterized by the material of which implements and weapons were formed during their continuance: as, however, stone weapons do not appear to have been discontinued entirely on the introduction of metal, it has been thought best to place together all objects of the same material, without regard to which of these two periods they belong.

Cases 1—4. Stone implements, known as "celts;" found in England, Ireland, and the Hebrides.

Cases 5—12. Various stone weapons and implements, consisting of knives, arrow-heads, hammers, &c. ; among these may be noticed a stone hammer, found at Stanwick, and presented by the Duke of Northumberland.

On the lower shelf are models of the stone cromlechs or sepulchres of the ancient Celtic tribes, viz., the Chun Quoit, Cornwall; the Treveithy Stone, near St. Cleer; the Lanyan Quoit, near Penzance; one at Duffrin, S. Wales; the Double Cromlech, at Plas Newydd, Anglesea; and the Cromlech at Mofra. All made and presented by R. Tongue, Esq.

Over the Cases in this part of the Room may be seen two pictures by Mr. Tongue, viz., the Cromlech, at Plas Newydd, Anglesea; and Stonehenge on Salisbury Plain.

Cases 17—20. Bronze implements, known as celts or palstaves; among these may be noticed three bronze moulds for casting them; one of them found on the Quantock Hills, Somersetshire.

Cases 21, 22. Bronze swords and daggers.

Cases 23, 24. Bronze spear-heads.

Case 26. A bronze buckler and dagger-sheath; found in the river Isis, near Dorchester, Oxfordshire.

Case 27. A collection of bronze subjects, consisting of a sword-blade, spear-head, celt, and pin, found in the river Wandle, Surrey. Presented by R. Mylne, Esq.

Cases 28—33. The rude half-baked pottery which is found in the barrows of the early Britons; among these are two urns found at Porth Dafarch, Anglesea. Presented by the Hon. W. Owen Stanley, 1851. And an urn found on the banks of the Alaw, Anglesea, supposed to have contained the bones of Bronwen, the aunt of Caractacus, who died about A.D. 50. Presented by Rich. Llwyd, Esq., 1834.

The following Cases, 38—75, contain antiquities belonging to the period of the Roman occupation of Britain.

Cases 39—42. In the middle shelf various collections of fragments found in Roman stations, &c., among them a collection of fragments from a villa at Wakefield Forest. Presented by the Duchess of Grafton, 1851. Another collection, found in caves at Settle, in Yorkshire, and some fragments, found in the camp at Catterick, Yorkshire. Presented by the Earl of Tyrconnel. On the lower shelf are various specimens of flue-tiles, bricks, drain-tiles, &c., from Roman buildings.

Cases 47—50. Coarse ware, consisting of amphoræ, mortaria, &c., the latter have the names of the makers stamped on the rims.

Case 51. Light red ware, coated with white.

Cases 52, 53. Light red ware, of a finer description, coated with red.

Cases 54, 55. Grey ware.

Cases 56, 57. Black ware.

Case 58. Fine red ware, with embossed ornaments, made at Arezzo, in Italy. Several of the fragments have been found in London.

Cases 59—63. Red glazed ware, made in Gaul and Germany, and imported into England. A collection of potters' marks on this ware, chiefly from London. In Case 63 is part of a mould for making the wares with raised figures, found at Rheinzabern; as well as a typus for impressing the mould, from Mayence. Both presented by B. Hertz, Esq., 1851.

Case 64. Circular pieces of Kimmeridge coal, commonly called "Kimmeridge Coal Money," they appear to be chucks from a turning lathe. Three stamps of greenish stone, with which oculists stamped their drugs. A bronze helmet, found at Tring, Herts. Presented by Rich. Clutterbuck, Esq., 1813. The umbo of a shield; found at Garstang, Lancashire, from the Towneley Collection. A figure of Osiris Pethempamentes, found in a Roman Camp, Swanscombe, Kent. Presented by C. Carlin, Esq., 1841.

Case 68. "Tabulæ honestæ missionis;" found at Malpas, Cheshire. Presented by Lord Kenyon, 1813. Portions of similar bronze tables, found at Sydenham, Kent. Presented by Mr. Kerval, 1813. Mirror, found in Deveril Street. Presented by Mr. Martin. Another, found at Coddendam, Suffolk. Presented by Sir W. Middleton, Bart.

Case 70. Part of a Roman service of plate; found on the estate of Sir John Swinburne, Bart., in Northumberland. Knight collection.

Cases 72—75. Roman glass, found in tombs, two from Hemel Hempstead, Herts. One from Melford, Suffolk. Presented by Sir W. Parker, 1825. One found at Harpenden, Herts. Presented by C. W. Pache, Esq., M.P. Two found in a stone sarcophagus, at Southfleet, Kent. Presented by the Rev. G. Rashleigh.

Cases 76—78. Horse trappings and other ornaments of bronze; found at Polden Hill, Somersetshire.

Cases 79—81. A collection of antiquities very similar to the last; found in the encampment at Stanwick. Presented by the Duke of Northumberland. Two bronze armillæ; found near Drummond Castle, Perthshire. Presented by Lord Willoughby d'Eresby.

Cases 82, 83. Saxon brooches; found in Lincolnshire. Presented by Sir Joseph Banks. An iron sword, and other weapons; found at Battle Edge, Burford, Oxfordshire.

Case 84. A wooden bucket bound with bronze, and other objects; found at Streetway Hill, Wilbraham, Cambridgeshire. Presented by Mr. Isaiah Deck, 1851. Saxon brooch found near Abingdon, Berks.

Case 85. Bronze vessel, found at Hexham, filled with coins of Kings of Northumberland, from A. D. 794-867.

MEDIÆVAL COLLECTION.

This Collection is generally arranged with regard to the material and workmanship of the objects.

Cases 88—93. A collection of personal ornaments, weapons, and other objects; found in graves at Ascheraden, Segevold, Setzen, and other places in Livonia and Kourland, by Professor Bähr, of Dresden; chiefly belonging to the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth centuries.

Cases 94, 95. Sixty-four chessmen and fourteen draughtsmen made of walrus tusk; found in the Isle of Lewis, Scotland.

Cases 96, 97. Carvings in various materials.

Cases 98—101. Paintings from St. Stephen's Chapel, Westminster, of the time of Edward III. They represent scenes from the book of Job and the history of Tobit.

Case 103. A crystal ball and wax cakes, used by Dr. Dee in his magical experiments.

Cases 104, 105. Cups of crystal, bloodstone, and other materials, mounted in silver.

Case 108, 109. Byzantine church lamp. Irish crozier. Presented by the Rev. J. Bulwer, 1839. Reliquary of St. Eustace; from Basle Cathedral. Weights of towns, such as Toulouse, Nismes, &c.

Cases 110, 111. Purse-stretchers, keys, and other objects of domestic use.

Cases 112, 113. The tenure sword of Hugh, Earl of Chester; it is uncertain whether this is Hugh Lupus, 1st Earl of Chester, or Hugh de Meschines, surnamed Keveliok, 5th earl. State sword of the earldom of Chester made for King Edward V., when Prince of Wales.

Cases 114, 115. Various pieces of armour, spurs, &c.

Cases 138, 139. Two vases of porcelain, made at Chelsea, under the direction of M. Spremont, in 1762. Two Wedgewood vases, one copied from the Portland Vase, and the other from one of the Etruscan Vases in the Museum. Presented by Josiah Wedgewood, Esq.

ETHNOGRAPHICAL ROOM.

In the centre of the Room are placed—

Model of the Thugs, made by a native artist at Madras. Presented by Mrs. B. W. Horne.

A model of a movable temple, called in the Carnatic, Therup, or Rhudum. Presented by Charles Marsh, Esq., 1793.

A Chinese bell, from a Buddhist temple near Ningpo. On the top is the Imperial dragon, the national emblem of China, crouching, and forming the handle. Beneath this is the orifice where the clapper has been placed. The upper part is decorated with figures of Buddh, cast in salient relief, and covered with an inscription, also in relief, separated by four broad bands, of large characters, being eight lines of poetry relative to the Buddhist religion, out of one of the religious books of this sect. The smaller inscriptions, in Chinese and a Sanscrit character, are entitled the Prayer of Füh (Buddh); with a list of names of believing doctors and faithful ladies. The inscriptions at the lower part contain a similar list of names, and the names and titles of the makers, of the authorities of the Teen-pe-ling temple, and of the civil and military officers of the city of Ningpo under whom the bell was cast, in the 19th regnal year of Taou Kwang, the late emperor, the 36th cyclary year, on a morning of the eighth moon (A.D. 1839-40). Presented by HER MAJESTY, 1844.

Model in cork, of the Temple of the Sibyl at Tivoli.

A plaster cast of the shield of Achilles. Modelled by Flaxman.

An inlaid Indian Cabinet.

Cases 1, 2. CHINA.—Shelf 1. Mock spears, placed on the walls of Woosung to intimidate the British forces, found there in 1842. Three soldiers' hats; bow and arrows, one to give a signal by whistling; an arrow, with a rocket attached, from Woosung. *Presented by Capt. ### MEDAL ROOM.

In this Room are preserved a large collection of Coins and Medals, the basis of which was formed by the cabinets of Sir Hans Sloane and Sir Robert Cotton, and which has been from time to time enlarged by many valuable purchases and donations, especially by the munificent donation of HIS MAJESTY, KING GEORGE IV., by the bequests of the Rev. C. M. Cracherode, R. P. Knight, Esq., and Miss Banks, and the donation of W. Marsden, Esq. It is comprehended under the three following heads:

1. Ancient Coins.
2. Modern Coins.
3. Medals.

The first of these heads consists of Greek and Roman coins.

The Greek coins are arranged in geographical order, and include all those struck with Greek characters, in Greece, or elsewhere, by kings, states, or cities, which were independent of the Romans. With this class are placed likewise the coins of free states and cities, which made use of either the Etruscan, Roman, Punic, Spanish, or other characters.

The Roman coins are placed, as far as it can be ascertained, in chronological order. They consist of the As and its divisions; Family or Consular coins; Imperial coins struck in Rome; Imperial coins struck in Egypt; Imperial coins struck with Greek characters, in different states and cities subject to the Romans; Imperial coins struck in the Roman colonies; Imperial coins struck with Punic characters; and Contorniates.

The second head, comprising modern coins, consists of Anglo-Saxon, English, Anglo-Gallic, Scotch, and Irish coins, and likewise the coins of foreign nations. This class is arranged according to the respective countries to which the coins belong, those of each country being kept separate.

The third head consists of medals struck in our own and foreign countries.

PRINT ROOM.

This Room, at the north end of the west wing upon the ascent of the staircase to the Egyptian Room, contains an extensive and valuable collection of Prints and Drawings, an important part of which were bequeathed by the Rev. C. M. CRACHERODE and RICHARD PAYNE KNIGHT, Esq.

Several of the Egyptian Papyri written in the hieroglyphical, hieratical, enchorial, or demotic character, which have been framed and glazed, are arranged on the walls of the passage leading to this Room.

The contents of the MEDAL and PRINT ROOMS can be seen only by very few persons at a time, and by particular permission.
