made of the recent "SAWYER incident", in which former Orlando Police Captain R. D. SAWYER had been subpoenaed to testify before a Special Federal Grand Jury probing organized crime and gambling at Orlando. (It is to be noted that SAWYER was subsequently fired from the Orlando Police Department as a result of his associations with known gamblers in the area).

Continuing, GOODE said that RODENBAUGH's conversation with JOHNSTONE then led into past corruption within the Orlando Police Department and RODENBAUGH explained "how bad things were when he, RODENBAUGH, was Chief of Detectives." (GOODE explained that this latter period covered part of 1951 and most of 1952).

GOODE stated that RODENBAUGH then advised Chief JOHNSTONE that sometime during that period he, RODENBAUGH, had a meeting in a parking lot by Orange Memorial Hospital, Orlando, with HARLAN BLACKBURN. At that time the two of them discussed arrests that had been made of lottery operators in the area and that BLACKBURN had asked him, RODENBAUGH, to go with him, BLACKBURN, to Tampa, Florida in order to meet BLACKBURN's boss. RODENBAUGH said that BLACKBURN named his boss as being "TRAFFICANTE", but did not state his first name. RODENBAUGH stated that he told BLACKBURN he would not ride with him to Tampa, but would meet him in Tampa.

Continuing, RODENBAUGH advised that he did meet BLACKBURN in Tampa and was taken to an office there and introduced to "TRAFFICANTE". He further advised that the purpose of this conference between BLACKBURN, TRAFFICANTE, and himself was for the the purpose of placing himself (RODENBAUGH) on TRAFFICANTE's payroll and that when they got around to that discussion, TRAFFICANTE told RODENBAUGH that a great number of the latter's detectives were on his payroll at that time. RODENBAUGH said he told TRAFFICANTE that he doubted that statement, however, TRAFFICANTE sent BLACKBURN into a room to bring him in a record book and RODENBAUGH was then shown a book containing a number of detectives' names and the amount of money they had been paid.

RODENBAUGH then explained to Chief JOHNSTONE and Lieutenant GOODE that he felt this evidence was "too weak" for him to take any official action upon, "because it would be my word against the words of the detectives involved, and I was unable to take possession of the record book." RODENBAUGH also informed
